man, however humble, is less than a brother. Equality therefore is another of our principles, but it is equality in the right sense of the word. We do not attempt to make equal that which the G.A.O.T.U. has made unequal, and he has not made all men equal. No two men are born with exactly equal strength of body or mind, or equal capabilities of any kind. We have no Quixotic notions of equality; we ignore the distinction of rank and wealth of the outside world; but we have many and very marked distinctions of our own; offices of greater or less dignity, and commanding, according to their degree, greater or less reverence from the other brethren. Difference of rank is more marked amongst Masons than elsewhere, but it is rank which is, or ought to be, founded on merit alone.

One word on the privileges of Masonry--It gives us a claim on the sympathy, and help of all our Brethren, and inasmuch as these are to be found in all parts of the world, this is no slight privilege. Every Masonic Lodge is bound to give us not only admission, but a warm and brotherly welcome, and such help as our circumstances may require. Further it gives a claim on the good word of our Brother Masons, as far as is consistent with the interests of truth and justice—for truth must never be sacrificed, even to brotherly love—but when, through our own fault, we have forfeited this claim on our brothers' good word, we still have a claim on his reticence. But privileges imply reciprocal duties. If we have a claim on others, they have the same claim on us, a claim which we are bound to recognise.

Some Masons seem to think that concealment of our mysteries and secrets from the outside world is the extent of their obligations. What a miserable and mistaken view of Masonry! The obligation extends to the most minute particulars of every day life. We are bound to be the sacred repository of our brothers' secrets when delivered to us as such—to be jealous of his good name, not only not revile him, but not suffering others to do so, and boldly repelling the slanderer of his good name. We are taught to free our souls from the dominion of pride and prejudice, to view in every son of Adam a brother of the dust—to bend with humility and resignation to the will of the G. A. O. T. U., and to dedicate our heart, thus purified and prepared for the reception of truth and wisdom, to his glory and the good of our fellow-creatures.

Let us live up to our profession, so shall we vindicate Masonry from the scoffs of the coward and the ignorant, so shall we be living witnesses to the power, and beauty, and excellence of the principles of Masonry. No bad man is, or can be in any sense a good Mason.

In conclusion, a word to the officers of lodges who are present, and especially the officers of the Commercial Lodge. Do not look upon Masonry merely as an amusement, or as a relaxation, still less as an opportunity for harmless convivial enjoyment. Office in a Masonic lodge should be undertaken as a duty, as a work to be done for the good of others, and as a work having its own responsibilities, and as involving a considerable amount of care, attention, perseverance, and in some instances, diligent study. And though the spirit of Masonry is the principal subject of our attention, and of our cultivation, the latter must not, cannot be neglected, without detriment to the interests and welfare of the order. Where the peculiar work of a lodge is done in a loose, slovenly, and inaccurate manner the spirit of Masonry suffers also, and ere long dissensions or some source of weakness is sure to appear.

Having the interests of Freemasonry at heart, I should like to see a generous emulation between the lodges of the Province in all that concerns Freemasonry. Let every lodge, and every officer of every lodge, yes, and every member, be proud of his lodge, be jealous of its honour, and do all that in him lies to contribute to its prestige, and advancement, and usefulness.

One word to correct a mistake which I fear is prevalent, viz. with regard to the relationship existing between Freemasonry and Christianity. It is often said that Masonry knows nothing of Christianity, and that it ignores religion—This is a great calumny. The prominent position which the Volume of the Sacred Law occupies in all our lodges proves the contrary. True it is that Masonry knows nothing of sectarian religion still less of sectarian bitterness. She is catholic in the true sense of the word. But in Christian countries our venerable institution assumes that the Brethren are Christians, though it is not absolutely required. Nevertheless Masonry expects every Brother to live up to the religion which he professes.

Lastly let us be proud of the traditions of our lodges, and let us seek to add to them, and to adorn them, and may the G. A. O. T. U. bless the work for which we have met this day. May this lodge, which dates its existence from this hour, be an honour and a credit to Freemasonry, may its members be endowed with and reflect in their lives every Masonic Virtue. May its Master now, and in successive years preside over it with firmness, courtesy, and zeal—then it will not only be honourable to Freemasonry, but useful to this town, and will contribute to the Glory of God, and the good of men—the purposes for which it is founded and to which it is dedicated.

Masonic Tidings.

BRITISH, FOREIGN, AND COLONIAL.

The brethren of the Fidelity Lodge of Instruction work will the fifteen sections at the Burgoyne Lodge of Instruction, on Friday, May 3rd instead of on April 26th, as previously announced.

The inaugural meeting of the Provincial Grand Chapter of Middlesex, will take place at the Grotto Hotel, Twickenham, this day (Saturday) at half past four.

The St. Hubert Lodge (No. 1373), will be constituted and consecrated by the Right Worshipful Grand Master of the Province of Hampshire and the Isle of Wight on Saturday, the 20th April, 1872, at 12 o'clock at the Foresters' Hall, Andover. Bro. J. Rankin Stebbing is the W. Master Designate.

BREAKFAST.—EPPS'S COCOA.—GRATEFUL AND COMFORTING.—“By a thorough knowledge of the natural laws which govern the operations of digestion and nutrition, and by a careful application of the fine properties of well-selected cocoa, Mr. Epps has provided our breakfast tables with a delicately-flavoured beverage which may save us many heavy doctors' bills.”—Civil Service Gazette. Made simply with Boiling Water or Milk. Each packet is labelled—“JAMES EPPS & Co., Homœopathic Chemists, London.”

REPORTS OF MASONIC MEETINGS.

Craft Masonry.

METROPOLITAN.

PANMURE LODGE OF INSTRUCTION (No. 720).—This Lodge of Instruction held its first annual meeting at the Balham Hotel, Balham, on Thursday last, when the ceremony of installation was performed. The able Preceptor, Bro. John Thomas, P.M. 720, and P.Z. 720, being Installing Master, and Bro. H. F. Huntley, W.M. 720, being the W.M. The ceremony was attended by a good number of brethren, and the W.M. appointed as his officers. Bros. G. Lilley, S.W. and Treasurer; C. Pulman, J.W. and Secretary; John Thomas, I.P.M. and Preceptor; G. Lindner, S.D.; J. Trussler, J.D.; M. Larham, I.G.; and as visiting brethren, Bros. Taylor, P.M. 22, and 217; B. Wolpert, 720; Lovatt, and Rose. The labours of the evening being concluded, the brethren adjourned to banquet, and the remainder of the evening was spent in perfect harmony. The lodge meets every Thursday evening, and the members will be glad to receive the visits of brethren in search of instruction.

CAMBRIDGESHIRE.

CAMBRIDGE.—Lodge of the Three Grand Principles (No. 441).—On Monday, the 1st inst., the brethren of the above lodge, which is held at the Red Lion Hotel, Petty Cury, held their usual monthly meeting, at which Bro. J. Massey, P. Prov. G.S.W., and Bro. Martin Page, P.M., P. Prov. G. Sect., were, by unanimous vote of the lodge, elected Life Members in consideration of the high esteem in which they are held, and for the unwearied services they have performed to the interest of the Craft, during the long period of thirty-six years. Several visiting brethren honoured the lodge with their presence, including Bro. R. K. Miller, W.M. of the Isaac Newton University Lodge; Bro. the Rev. J. King, Prov. G. Chaplain for Cambridgeshire; and Bro. the Rev. Carter Browne, Prov. G. Chaplain for Lincolnshire. Bro. A. F. Donagan, I.P.M., gave the lecture in the second degree, followed by Bro. J. Massey, P.M., who worked the fourth section. Two candidates were proposed for initiation. The W.M., Bro. Robinson, presided with his usual ability, over this flourishing lodge, and at the conclusion of business, forty brethren sat down to an excellent banquet, served by the respected host, Bro. A. Moyes. The usual loyal and Masonic toasts followed, and a most agreeable evening was spent.

ESSEX.

UPTON.—Upton Lodge (No. 1227).—If our ancient brethren were obliged to meet on “High hills, in low vales, and in other secret places,” because they had not the advantages of the conveniences we now enjoy, the Upton Lodge, although provided with all necessary modern appliances, holds its meetings in a place quite as secret as our ancient predecessors need to have done; for the Spotted Dog, at Upton, in Essex, at which the lodge is held, is a delightful retreat, surrounded on every side with foliage of all kinds, and nestles in a nook, seemingly miles removed from the great world of London, whose busy hum is just dimly audible in these suburban groves. The Upton is what is technically known as a summer lodge, and their first meeting took place on Thursday, the 11th inst., at which Bro. Richard Bolton, the W.M., presided, assisted by Bros. English, S.W.; Bratten, J.W.; Mather, I.P.M.; Wayland, Treasurer; Goddard, P.M., Secretary; Posner (in the absence of Bro. Chidley) as S.D.; Levick, J.D.; Dee, I.G.; Sly, W.S.; Pickering, P.M., D.C.; and Woodstock, Tyler. The business before the lodge comprised the conferring of the second degree on Bros. Brown, Farnham, Taylor and Morris, and the third degree on Bros. Harlow and Anderson. The W.M. performed his duties most creditably, and among the minor officers, Bro. Posner, who is but a very young Mason, distinguished himself by a correctness and efficiency of working, rarely attained to by some brethren, even after many years experience. It is needless to describe the enjoyments of the banqueting-table, as the great care with which Bro. Vase, the worthy host, looks after the comfort of his guests is well-known and acknowledged; the various toasts were briefly given and responded to, and the speech of Bro. Mather, the I.P.M., was frequently applauded. Several visitors was present, some of whom did their best to enliven the evening with a variety of songs and recitations.

KENT.

ROCHESTER.—Gundulph Lodge (No. 1048).—The installation of Bro. George Watson, as Worshipful Master of Lodge Gundulph took place at the King's Head Hotel, Rochester, on Wednesday, the 10th inst. The proceedings were not restricted to the usual privacy of the Order. By the kind permission of the Mayor, the Gundulph flag floated from the Gundulph tower of the castle during the day, and this conspicuous object did much to render the event of the occasion more universally known in the neighbourhood than would otherwise have been the case. The formalities of the installation itself were conducted with a spirit that older lodges would do well to imitate. Formed in 1865, the career of Gundulph Lodge has been one of great prosperity, rapidly approaching a reputation highly complimentary to the Order. The ceremony of installing the Master was most ably and efficiently performed by Bro. G. Ashdown, P. Prov. G.P.S., Bro. Ransom, P.M., assisting. There has never been such a numerous gathering of Provincial Grand Officers and Past Masters since the formation of the lodge. Bro. George Watson was the first initiated in Gundulph Lodge at its consecration, and we most heartily wish him a successful year of office, for by the officers selected there can be no doubt all will go on well for the prosperity of the lodge. The following are the officers appointed for the ensuing year: Bros. Ransom, I.P.M.; Nicholls, S.W.; Newton, J.W.; Moore, Treas.; T. Watson, Secretary; G. H. Curel, S.D.; Colson, J.D.; Bryant, Organist; Griffin, I.G.; W. R. Curel, D.C.; Abbott, and Herbert, Stewards. Bro. Ransom, P.M. then presented the brethren of the lodge with a most exquisite gavel, with a suitable mahogany box to keep it in, bearing a silver plate with inscription. Bro. Ashdown, P.M., then handed to the W.M. a morocco case containing a Past Master's jewel of exquisite workmanship, to be presented to Bro. Ransom, I.P.M., for the zealous manner in which he had discharged his duties to the lodge. The jewel had been subscribed for by the members of the lodge generally. The W.M., Bro. Watson, in affixing the jewel to the breast of Bro. Ransom, passed some very high and flattering remarks as to the efficient way in which the duties had been carried out during the past year. Afterwards there was a grand banquet, at which fifty sat down to do honour to the newly-installed Worshipful Master, who it is but just to add spared no pains to carry out the proceedings with an éclat, that was truly satisfactory. The banquet was exceedingly well served, and reflected the highest credit on Mr. Fisher, the host of the King's Head Hotel.

LANCASHIRE (WEST).

LANCASTER.—Lodge of Fortitude (No. 281).—The regular meeting of this lodge was held on Wednesday, the 10th inst., at the Masonic-rooms, Athenæum. The W.M., Bro. William Hall, presided, there were also present:—Bros. Dr. Moore, G.S.B., I.P.M.; W. Fleming, S.W.; Edward Airey, J.W.; E. Simpson, P.S. and Sec.; W. J. Sly, S.D.; J. Harrison, J.D.; R. Taylor, I.G.; J. Taylor, Organist; with several Past Masters, and a goodly number of members and visitors. The usual business having been transacted, a reply which had been received in answer to the address of congratulation to the Queen on the recovery of H.R.H. the Prince of Wales, was read. The ballot was taken for Mr. Duff, gas manager, who was declared to be unanimously elected, and who was duly initiated into the mysteries of Freemasonry, in an efficient manner by the W.M., the working tools being presented by the S.W. Bro. Moore, G.S.B., stated that he was about to represent the lodge at the coming Festival of the Royal Masonic Institution for Girls, and asked donations and subscriptions to that excellent charity from the lodge and its members. The sum of five pounds was voted from the lodge funds to the Aged Freemasons' Charity, on the proposition of Bro. E. Simpson, P.M. and Sec., seconded by Bro. Dr. Moore, P.M. Heartly good wishes were given in reply to the proclamations, from several lodges, and there being no other business to be transacted, the lodge was closed in due form.

ULVERSTON.—Lodge of Furness (No. 995).—The usual monthly meeting of this lodge took place in the Masonic Temple, Theatre-street. There were present the following officers:—Bros. R. Pearson, W.M.; R. Dodgson, S.W.; Wm. Harrison, J.W.; Paxton, Sec.; Brocklebank, Treas.; Postlethwaite, S.D.; Gelderd, J.D.; Whiteside, I.G.; Bell, S.S.; Lockett, J.S.; T. Dodgson, I.P.M.; J. Case, P.M.; and a number of brethren. The lodge was opened in the first degree, when Bros. Grieve and Postlethwaite, candidates for the second degree, were entrusted and retired. The lodge was then opened in the second degree, when the W.M. passed both candidates to the degree of Fellow Craft, the ceremony being performed in an impressive manner. The lodge was shortly afterwards closed. The business being concluded at a much earlier hour than usual, there was a large muster of the brethren in the club-rooms attached to the lodge, where an hour or two's pleasant conversation, enlivened with the pipe, brought the evening to a pleasant termination.

LEICESTERSHIRE AND RUTLAND.

LEICESTER.—St. John's Lodge (No. 279).—The monthly communication of this lodge was held in the Freemasons' Hall, on Wednesday evening the 3rd inst., Bro. E. J. Crow, W.M., presiding. Among those present were:—Bros. Stretton, I.P.M.; G. Toller, P.M., Prov. G.S.; W. Sculthorpe, W.M. 523; J. B. Hall, W.M. 1391; S. S. Partridge, Secretary 523; R. W. Widdowson, J.W.; Dr. Clifton, Secretary 1391; W. Wear, P.M. Treasurer; J. M. M'Allister, Secretary; A. Palmer, J. Halford, J.W. 1391; R. A. Barber, I.G.; C. E. Stretton, J. L. Atwood, Rev. J. H. Smith, G. N. Statham. The working ability of the W.M. was severely taxed on this occasion, as the business before the lodge comprised the passing of Bro. Rev. J. H. Smith, B.A., and the raising of Bros. Lewis, Scampton and Ellis. The ceremonies were amply rendered in that able manner which at all times characterises the working of the W.M., and cannot fail to impress the candidates with imposing solemnities of the sublime degree. The second degree was further amplified by the explanation of the tracing-board by Bro. Toller, P.M., P.G.S. and Preceptor to the Lodge of Instruction, established by the esteemed Provincial Grand Master, nearly thirty years ago. The names of two neophytes were submitted as candidates for initiation, and the lodge was closed in due form.

OAKHAM.—Val of Catmas Lodge (No. 1265).—The usual monthly meeting was held at the Agricultural Hall, on the 27th ult. The lodge was opened by Bro. Duncombe, P.G.A.D.C., Northants and Hunts, P.G.J.D., Leicestershire and Rutland, W.M.; T. G. Bennett, S.W.; Wm. Hardy, J.W.; Jos. Bennett, Secretary; J. M. Kew, S.D.; H. Tewson, as J.D.; Bailey, Treas., as I.G.; and other brethren. Visitors, Bros. Orford, P.M. 466, P. Prov. G.S.W., Northants and Hunts; Bloodworth and North, 466. The minutes of the last meeting having been read and confirmed, the lodge was opened in the second degree, and Bro. Keep, who was a candidate for the third degree, answered the necessary questions and was entrusted and retired, the lodge was then opened in the third degree, and Bro. Keep was raised to the sublime degree of Master Mason, the ceremony being performed and the lecture on the tracing board given in an impressive and exemplary manner by the W.M. The lodge was then closed down in due form, the brethren and visitors retired to refreshment, after which the usual loyal and Masonic toasts were given and responded to. After spending a pleasant evening the brethren separated at an early hour.

MIDDLESEX.

TWICKENHAM.—Villiers Lodge (No. 1194).—The first meeting of this lodge for the season, was held at the Grotto Hotel, on Saturday, the 6th inst. The lodge was opened punctually at 4 by the I.P.M., Bro. Dodd. The minutes of the last meeting having been read and confirmed, ballots were taken for Messrs. T. Cross, and Frank Arliss, for initiation, and also for Bro. Hy. Parker, of Lodge 435, as a joining member—and proved unanimous in each case. Messrs. Cross and Arliss, being in attendance, were initiated into the mysteries of the Craft. The chair was then taken by Bro. Little, Prov. G. Secretary, and Bros. Lawson, and Plimsaul were raised. The lodge being then resumed, several subjects were discussed, and the lodge duly closed by Bro. Clark, P.M. and Treasurer, in brotherly love and harmony. The brethren adjourned to banquet, under the presidency of the I.P.M., and spent a few hours at the social board. The usual toasts were drunk, and duly responded to, interspersed by the harmony of the brethren, although the absence of a pianoforte in the banquetting room of the Grotto is always felt to be a want, and is especially so now, the lodge having received into its rank Bro. Hy. Parker, the well-known brilliant pianist, and Bro. Cross, the musical instructor at the Royal Masonic Institution for Boys. Amongst the brethren present, were noticed, Bros. Osbaldeston, S.W.; Lancaster, J.W.; Smale, S.D.; Steel, J.D.; Harvey, I.G.; Dalby, D.C.; E. Clark, P.M. and Treasurer; Little, Prov. G. Secretary; S. Verity, Woodbridge, Ridge, Jones, and Green. Visitors, Bros. F. Lancaster, 1044; Peterkin, 704; and Bro. Fisher of the lodge at Derry, under the Irish Constitution, who in returning thanks remarked that he had not enjoyed a visit to a lodge so much since he had been in England.

SUFFOLK.

IPSWICH.—British Union Lodge (No. 114).—A lodge of Emergency was held at the Masonic Hall, Ipswich, on the 5th inst., for the purpose of passing Lord Mahon, M.P. for East Suffolk, to the second degree. Amongst those present were Bros. C. F. Long, W.M.; the Revd. E. I. Lockwood, D.P.G.M.; the Revd. R. N. Sanderson, P.Prov.G.C.; P. Cornell, P.G. J.D.; C. Boby, P.M.; J. Spalding, P.M. Sect., Acting J.W.; Emra Holmes, P.G.A.D.C. Acting I.G. A.D. George, S.D. &c. The ceremony was performed by the D.P.G.M. with his usual ability, and Lord Mahon was duly passed to the degree of Fellow Craft. His lordship expressed himself as deeply sensible of the kindness of the brethren in having a special lodge for his convenience. He would, however, not trouble them to call another emergency meeting, as he intended coming to the first regular lodge after he was eligible to take the third degree. No other business being on the summons the lodge was closed in the usual form, with solemn prayer.

BURY ST. EDMUND'S.—St. Edmund's Lodge (No. 1,008).—The eighth anniversary of this lodge took place on Friday last, (in the new and spacious room which it has been found necessary to erect, to accommodate their increasing numbers) at the Angel Hotel, Bury St. Edmund's. Bro. J. N. York was reinstated as W.M. for the ensuing year. There was a large gathering of the members of the lodge, who were joined by a number of brethren from Ipswich, Stowmarket, and Sudbury. Among the brethren present were Bros. Capt. Huddleston, P.Prov. S.G.W.; N. Tracey, P.Prov. S.G.W.; S. Wright, P.Prov. J.G.W.; G. S. Golding, P.G.S.B.; W. H. Lucia, P.Prov. J.G.W., and Prov.G. Sec.; W. E. Bailey, P.G.A. Sec.; W. Armstrong, and J. E. Hills, Prov.G. Stewards (all of the Province of Suffolk); J. D. Percott, P.Prov. S.G.W. (South Wales); Warner, W.M. of the Stowmarket Lodge, &c. The re-installation was impressively performed by Bro. the Rev. J. Martyn, P.G. Chaplain of England. The officers appointed by the W.M. for the ensuing year were Bros. W. E. Bailey, S.W.; Capt. C. J. T. Oakes, J.W.; J. Hedley Bevan, S.D.; A. Last; J.D.; R. Postle, I.G.; the Rev. Dr. Bennett, Chaplain; J. B. Fitch, D.C.; W. H. Lucia, Sec.; F. Fearnside, Organist. The brethren re-elected Bro. T.

W. Cooper as Treasurer. At the conclusion of the business of the lodge the brethren sat down to a recherché banquet, prepared by Bro. W. G. Guy. It was exactly 100 years since the old St. Edmund's Lodge was instituted. After banquet the Charity Box, as usual, was passed round, and sufficient was subscribed to purchase for the lodge a Life Guardianship of the Masonic Boys' School.

YORKSHIRE (WEST.)

BRADFORD.—Shakespeare Lodge (No. 1018).—The installation meeting of this young but prosperous lodge (consecrated in 1864) was held at its hall, Salem-street, on the 10th inst. Bro. E. Clifton, I.P.M., presided, and went through the ceremony of installing his successor, Bro. A. Nicholson, into the chair of K.S., in a most impressive and eloquent style, alike creditable to himself and the Shakespeare Lodge, and we wish that other W.M.'s would frequently follow the example of Bro. Clifton in the installation of their successors. The W.M. then invested his officers for the ensuing year, namely:—Bros. G. Althorpe, S.W.; Chas. E. Taylor, J.W.; Rev. Thos. Miller, Chaplain; Jos. W. Monckman, Treas.; W. Wroe, P.M. Sec.; Wm. Longley, S.D.; Jos. W. Monckman, J.D.; W. Morgan, I.G.; R. F. Harrison, Tyler; Hen. R. C. Latimer and G. H. Swithenbank, Stewards; S. W. Whaley, Supt. of Works; Thos. B. Thugworth, Organist; and W. Wroe, P.M., M.C. The brethren afterwards adjourned to a banquet served up in excellent style in their refreshment room, by Bro. Spink, the menu giving the greatest satisfaction to all present, amongst whom we noticed the following and many other visitors, namely:—Bros. W. W. Barlow, W.M. Hope, 302; J. W. Wright, W.M. Harmony, 600; Robert Richardson, W.M. Pentalpha, 974; Ed. Smith, W.M. Eccleshill 1034; W. Pratt, P.M. 1034, P. Prov. G.S.D.; W. Beanland, P.M. 1034; and J. A. Unna, P.M. 600, P. Prov. G.R. Bro. A. Nicholson, W.M., presided, and was supported in the vice-chair by his S.W. and J.W. The usual loyal and Masonic toasts were given. Bro. C. J. Bannister, P.M. 1018, P.G.S.B., in proposing the toast of "The W. Past Masters" took occasion to say how much pleasure it would afford him to meet any of the brethren entitled to be in Grand Lodge whenever they might be able to attend. Bro. J. A. Unna, P.M., P. Prov. G.R., proposed "The W.M.'s and P.M.'s of the Visiting Lodges," in an able and eulogistic speech, which met with a warm reception from the brethren. Bro. W. W. Barlow, W.M. Hope, 302, was called upon by the W.M. to respond, as representing the oldest lodge. In doing so, he made allusion to the fact that one of the youngest lodges had probably installed that evening the youngest W.M. in the Craft, he having been initiated as a Lewis, at the age of eighteen, in 1865, by dispensation from Grand Lodge, of which the following is a copy:—

"Provincial Grand Lodge of West Yorkshire of Antient Free and Accepted Masons.

"I George Frederick Samuel, Earl de Grey and Earl of Ripon, &c., &c., Provincial Grand Master of West Yorkshire.

"Send greeting,

"Whereas, it having been notified to me by the Worshipful Master of the Shakespeare Lodge, No. 1018, holden at Bradford, that an application had been made unto him to initiate into Freemasonry Mr. Alfred Nicholson, of Bradford, the son of a brother of the said lodge, namely Bro. John Nicholson, and it being the desire of the brethren of the said lodge that the said Mr. Alfred Nicholson should be admitted a member of, and initiated into Freemasonry in the said lodge, he not being full age of twenty-one years, namely, only eighteen years of age, that being the son of a brother Mason, and claiming therefore the privilege of a Lewis to be admitted at that age.

"Now know ye, that being desirous of promoting the practice of our Antient Art, and by virtue of the power delegated to me, I do hereby grant license and dispensation to the Worshipful Master of the said Shakespeare Lodge, No. 1018, to initiate the said Mr. Alfred Nicholson into Freemasonry, in accordance with the Antient Rites and Ceremonies of our Order.

"Given at London, under my hand and seal this third day of March, A.L. 5865, A.D. 1865."

"Signed,

"DE GREY AND RIPON.

"Seal."

That their lodge (consecrated in 1865) had set a good example worthy of being followed by their I.P.M., installing his successor. These remarks were received with much applause, as well as the complimentary ones on the great hospitality shown the visitors. The other W.M.'s were also called on to say a few words. Other toasts were given and responded to, interspersed by good harmony from the musical brethren, and a most agreeable evening was spent, when the Tyler's toast was given, and the brethren separated.

Scotland.

ROXBURGH.

HAWICK.—St. John's Lodge (No. 111).—

An emergency meeting of this lodge was held on Friday, the 12th inst., in order to overtake the rapidly accumulating business which has so unexpectedly arisen, and to pass the numerous candidates who have so patiently waited, for some time, their last degrees. The R.W.M., Bro. Noble, presiding, there were present: Bros. Kyle, Thomas, P.M.'s, &c., with all the officers, and about sixty of the brethren. Amongst the visitors we observed, the R.W.M. of 216, Stow, and several of the brethren from St. James's, 424. Bro. Kyle, P.M., officiated, and in his usually happy and masterly manner, gave more light unto fourteen expectant candidates. The scene was certainly impressive in the highest degree, and we may safely say unparalleled in provincial labours, affording a rare treat to those brethren who were so fortunate as to be present. The representatives of H.A.B. were like a field of slain, though not with "martial cloaks around them," yet having palpable evidences of the trying scenes they had undergone, in their search after Masonic knowledge. The "test membership" motion of the M.W.G.M., Earl Rosslyn, was again brought before the lodge, when a resolution was passed against it, expressing in strongest terms, their disapproval of contributing to Grand Lodge debt, when said debt and expenses might be put within reasonable bounds by the means at present within their power. This is quite in accordance, with the status, the brethren of Scotland hold, which the nominal fee has admitted, and the laxity of our laws induced. The Grand Lodge will herein reap as they have sown, much discussion ensued over this resolution, and very general dissatisfaction was expressed with Grand Lodge, that copies of the annual circular and abstract should not have been sent to this lodge for years, although specially stated to be done in Book of Constitutions. The brethren argue and reasonably so, that they will not contribute to a cause, the result of which is kept hidden from them. Depute Master, Bro. Peden, moved that a lodge of instruction be held every alternate fortnight, during the summer, which was unanimously agreed to, the brethren look forward to D. M. Bro. Peden's promised night, with the utmost pleasure, his great zeal for the Craft, his original productions, and well-known eloquence, demand more than ordinary notice; and though our much loved bard is gone, (late Henry Scott Riddell, Bard of Lodge St. John's, No. 111), our romantic border land rich, in poetic lore, bids fair to raise another son of song, to sing in endless strains, "Scotland's Hills and Scotland's Dales." The lodge then took into serious consideration the projected hall, and it was determined to take steps towards its erection. The R. W. M. in his lively and felicitous manner gave a resumé of the Committee's labours, and the brethren may look forward with confidence to their future temple, and with some degree of certainty, to a completion of this great work. The lodge was then closed by the R.W.M. in due and antient form, when the Hall Committee met, to forward the work, details of which we expect soon.

Mark Masonry.

METROPOLITAN.

MACDONALD MARK LODGE (No. 104).—The regular meeting of this lodge was held on Saturday last, at the head-quarters of the First Surrey Rifle Volunteers, Brunswick Road, Camberwell, Bro. Eugene Cronin, M.D., W.M. presiding. There was a good attendance of brethren, and among them were, Bros. Thomas Meggy, P.M.; Jas. Stevens, P.M.; Arthur Wolton, M.O.; W. Worrell, S.O.; Robert Berridge, J.O.; Thos. W. White, Reg. of Marks; E. H. Finney, jun. D.C.; E. H. Finney, John Strachan, C. Hammerton, Alf. Williams, L. L. Atwood, 19; Thos. Homfray, Keystone; and H. Massey. Bros. Vallance and Binnie were advanced to this antient degree, at the commencement of the evening, by Bro. Jas. Stevens; after which Dr. Cronin resumed the chair, and the brethren proceeded with the election of W.M. for the ensuing year. At the declaration of the ballot, Bro. Charles Hammerton was found to have been duly elected. It was announced in open lodge, Bros. Meggy, and Stevens, P.M.'s, both being present, that in future it would not be a necessary qualification for the office of Master that a brother should be an installed Master in a Craft lodge. Bro. Hammerton, on his election being communicated to him, acknowledged the compliment the brethren had conferred on him, but that it had taken him by surprise. Bro. T. Meggy, was then elected Treasurer, and Bro. Grant, T. The Audit Committee was appointed, Bros. Alf. Williams, and Thos. W. White, being chosen the lay members of the lodge upon it. Bro. Alf. Williams moved, that in future, no money be voted out of the lodge funds without notice of the proposition being first entered on the lodge summons, and confirmed at the next regular lodge meeting. The motion was seconded by Bro. Jas. Stevens, and carried. Bro. Jas. Stevens, moved, Bro. W. Worrell seconded, and the lodge carried unanimously, the vote of a P.M. jewel to Bro. Cronin. A candidate for advancement was proposed by Bro. W. Worrell at next meeting, and the lodge was thereupon closed. The brethren afterwards sat down to supper, and when the toasts were proposed Bro. Meggy responded for the Deputy Grand Master, and W.M. elect, and the rest of the Grand Officers. In doing so, he said the Grand Officers were very energetic and by a close attention to their duties in committee were seeking to advance the prosperity and well being of the order. The ritual, and the installation ceremony came under their observation, and it was after grave consideration and deliberation, that they adjudicated on those questions. Bro. James Stevens fully endorsed what Bro. Meggy had said, and he believed that the ritual and the installation ceremony, as altered, would meet with the approval of the Mark brethren. Bro. Jas. Stevens proposed "the health of the W.M.," and referred to his year of office as one in which the lodge had steadily progressed. To the discharge of his duties, the W.M. had brought to bear, kindness and good feeling towards the brethren, and had the satisfaction of finding that his efforts to uphold the honour of the lodge and the dignity of the order were appreciated. The W.M. in reply said, his year of office had begun in a very pleasant meeting, which was honoured by the presence of many Grand Officers, past and present. Since then too, the meetings of the lodge had been graced by Masters, and I.P.M.'s, of standing in the Mark Degree. Both these circumstances he felt as a great compliment to himself, and he should not forget the invariable kindness which had been manifested towards him. The W.M. next proposed "The Advancers," Bro. Binnie responded, and the brethren shortly afterwards separated.

GROSVENOR MARK LODGE (No. 144).—The first meeting since the consecration of this lodge was held on the 11th inst., at the Caledonian Hotel, Adelphi, under the presidency of Bro. Charles Hammerton, Prov. G. Sec. for Middlesex, and Past Grand Steward, W.M. Among the brethren present were, the V.W.F. Davison, Dep. G. M., Middlesex and Surrey; Bros. Jas. Stevens, P.G.O.; Ward, S.W.; Parker, J.W.;

Loewenstark, Brighton, Org.; and several others. Brethren were advanced to this degree with full ceremony, and musical accompaniment, and after some other Masonic business had been conducted a supper well-provided by Bro. G. S. States, was partaken of. Prior to the lodge meeting, a lodge of instruction was held under the direction of Bro. Jas. Stevens, to perfect the officers in their work.

DURHAM.

SUNDERLAND.—United Lodge of Mark Masters (No. 124, E.C.)—The first annual meeting of this lodge was held in the Masonic Hall, Sunderland, on Tuesday, the 2nd inst., for the purpose of installing the W.M.-elect, Bro. R. Dixon, J.W., and appointing the officers for the ensuing twelve months. Bro. T. Y. Strachan, Prov. G.S. for the Province of Northumberland and Durham, ably officiated as Installing Master. The following is a complete list of the officers appointed, viz.:—Bros. R. Dixon, W.M.; B. Levy, I.P.M.; J. J. Clay, S.W.; P. Hvestendahl, J.W.; W. Liddell, M.O.; R. Humphrey, S.O.; Jas. H. Coates, J.O.; J. Riseborough, Treasurer; J. Davidson, Secretary; F. Maddison, Registrar of Works; R. Hudson, S.D.; R. Giesecke, J.D.; and J. S. Pearson, I.G. The annual festival was held the same evening, in the banqueting-room of the hall, the newly installed W.M. (Bro. R. Dixon) in the chair, supported by Bros. A. Clapham, D.P.G.M.; B. Levy, Prov. S.G.W.; T. Y. Strachan, Prov. G.J.; &c.

LANCASHIRE (EAST).

HASLINGDEN.—Stamford Lodge (No. 148).—On Wednesday the 10th of April, the Stamford Lodge of Mark Master Masons, No. 148, held a preliminary meeting, previous to consecration, (by virtue of a dispensation from the R. W. Prov. Grand Master,) at the Unicorn Hotel, Altrincham. Bro. Thomas Hargreaves, P.M.M. 113, P.Prov. G.D.L., occupied the chair, assisted by the following brethren. Bros. John Chadwick, Prov. G. Sec.; J. Gibb Smith, P.G.S.O., as S.W.; James A. Birch, the W.M. elect, as J.W.; R. McDowell Smith, the S.W. elect, as W.O.; Captain Watson, as S.O.; and other officers. The lodge was opened at 4 o'clock. After reading the dispensation, the ballot was taken for two brethren to be affiliated, and twenty-two, to be advanced, which proved to be unanimous in favour of their election. Seven of the brethren being in attendance, they were introduced and advanced to the degree of M.W.M. At five o'clock the brethren were called off from labour to refreshments, and sat down to a most excellent tea. At six o'clock the lodge business was resumed, and eight other brethren having made their appearance, they were accordingly advanced to the degree of M.M.M., making a total number of eighteen members at the first meeting. At the close of the business the proposition of the W.M. elect, seconded by the S.W. elect, a vote of thanks was accorded to Bro. Thomas Hargreaves, for the trouble he had taken in coming to work the lodge, and the admirable manner in which he had performed the ceremony, the resolution to be entered on the minutes of the lodge. Bro. Thos. Hargreaves suitably responded, and the lodge was closed in peace and harmony at 7.20.

HASLINGDEN.—Blair Lodge (No. 113).—On Thursday the 11th inst., the Blair Mark Lodge, No. 113, held their usual quarterly meeting. Bro. Thomas Hargreaves, P.M.M. acting as W.M. in the absence of Bro. Thos. Nuttall, the W.M. The lodge was opened at 7.30. The minutes of last lodge were read and confirmed and several candidates balloted for. Afterwards Bro. John Duckworth, of Sheep-Hey, and Bro. Miles Aernley, of Shipton, were advanced to the degree of M.M.M. in ancient form. The special feature, however, of the evening, was the attendance of Bro. R. J. C. Duckworth, and the other four brethren from Blackburn, to be affiliated as members, previous to their applying for a warrant, to work in lodge in Blackburn. Business being finished, the lodge was closed at nine o'clock.

Ancient and Accepted Rite.

SUFFOLK.

IPSWICH.—Victoria Sovereign Rose Croix Chapter.—The usual meeting of this Chapter was held at the Masonic Hall, Ipswich, on Monday the 8th inst. Present, Ill. Bros. Revd. R. N. Sanderson, 30°, M.W.S.; and Emra Holmes, 31°, 1st Gen., Act. Recorder; Ex. Bros. W. P. Mills, M.D. 2nd Genl.; C. T. Townsend, P.M.W.S.; Dr. Beamont, R.N.; P. Cornell, W. T. Westgate, W. Cuckord, G. Cresswell. The minutes having been read and confirmed, the Act. Recorder reported that he had received letters from the M.P.S.G.C., the L.G.C., and the S.G. of the Supreme Grand Council, regretting the inability to attend. The resignation of Ill. Bro. Capt. Terry, 30°, 60th Rifles, and Ex. Bros. Capt. Hales and Herring, 27th Inniskillins, were given in and accepted. Ill. Bro. Sanderson, then proceeded with the installation of Ex. Bro. W. T. Westgate, who had been duly elected M.W.S. for the ensuing year, and the following brethren were appointed as officers Ex. W. P. Mills, M.D. 1st Genl.; E. Robertson, 2nd Genl.; G. Cresswell, Grand Marshal; P. Cornell, Raphael; C. T. Townsend, Recorder; J. Pettit, Capt. of the Guard. Ill. Bro. Emra Holmes then rose to propose that in consideration of the distinguished services of Ill. Bro. Sanderson, who had done so much for the high degrees in Ipswich, he should be presented with a gold jewel of P.M.W.S. as a token of esteem and regard. Ex. Brother Cresswell seconded the motion, which was supported by Dr. Mills, who spoke also in eulogistic terms of Bro. Sanderson's services, and it was carried unanimously. Bro. Townsend was instructed to procure the jewel. Bro. Sanderson replied in grateful and modest terms, and thanked the E. and P. Princes for their appreciation of his labours in the higher degrees. The brethren afterwards retired for refreshments.

Red Cross of Constantine.

LEICESTERSHIRE AND RUTLAND.

LEICESTER.—Byzantine Conclave (No. 44).—The annual assembly of this conclave for the installation of the M.P.S. and Viceroy, was held at Freemasons' Hall, Leicester, on Thursday, the 11th inst., under the presidency of the Ill. Sir Knt. William Kelly, M.P.S., and Intendent-General for Leicestershire and Rutland, when there was a good attendance of officers and members. The minutes of the previous meeting, relating to the election of M. P. S. and Viceroy, having been read and confirmed, the V. Em. Sir Knight the Rev. Nathaniel Hayeroft, D.D., K.G.C., and H.P. was presented and inducted into the chair of Eusebius, after which the V.Em. Sir Knight George Toller, junr. K.G.C., and S.G., was regularly enthroned as M.P.S. for the ensuing year, and he appointed and invested his officers as follows:—Sir Knts. S. S. Partridge, S.G.; Clement Stretton, J.G.; W. Weare, and J. C. Duncombe, Aides to Generals; F. J. Bains, Recorder; J. T. Thorp, Pref., and J. Hunt, S.B. The ballot having been taken for Bros. E. J. Crow, W.M., 279, and Alfred Palmer, they were unanimously elected, and being present, were installed and proclaimed as Knights of the Order, the ceremonial being conducted in a most able and impressive manner by the newly-enthroned M.P.S., assisted by his Viceroy. The Treasurer's report showing a small balance in hand, was received and adopted. A discussion ensued respecting a proposed change in the clothing worn by members of this Conclave, the tunic being that now worn, and being considered less convenient than the apron, a resolution was passed adopting the latter as the clothing in future. The Conclave was then closed, and the Sir Knights proceeded to the refectory, where an excellent banquet was served. The usual loyal and chivalric toasts were given, and a most enjoyable evening spent.

NOVA SCOTIA.

The following addresses have been forwarded from the Freemasons of Nova Scotia to the Queen and Prince of Wales:—

To HER MOST GRACIOUS MAJESTY THE QUEEN.

May it please your Majesty,—

We, the Freemasons of the Province of Nova Scotia, in the Dominion of Canada, desire most respectfully to offer to your Majesty our warmest congratulations on the recovery of our illustrious brother, His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales, from his late dangerous illness.

We desire to assure your Majesty of the very deep sympathy felt for their Sovereign, not only by the members of the loyal Craft, but by all classes of your Majesty's faithful subjects in this Province, during that trying period of gloom and sorrow when the life of our illustrious Brother was despaired of, and of our thankfulness to Almighty God that he has been pleased to hear the united prayers of the nation in his behalf.

We take this opportunity of assuring your Majesty that it is our earnest wish and fervent prayer that the Great Architect of the Universe may long spare your Majesty to rule over us, and His Royal Highness to be an ornament and a blessing to the nation and the Craft to which we, the Freemasons of the Province of Nova Scotia, have the honour and the great privilege to belong.

ALEXANDER KEITH

Grand Master.

On behalf of the Craft.

To HIS ROYAL HIGHNESS ALBERT EDWARD, PRINCE OF WALES, Past Grand Master of the Grand Lodge of England.

May it please your Royal Highness:

We, the Freemasons of the Province of Nova Scotia, in the Dominion of Canada, beg leave to offer to your Royal Highness our warmest congratulations upon your recovery from the dangerous illness by which your Royal Highness was so long prostrated, and from which, by the blessing of the Most High, in answer to the fervent supplications of the whole nation, the life of your Royal Highness has been mercifully spared to us.

We desire to assure your Royal Highness that the gratifying expression of deep sympathy for you in your sufferings, and attachment to your person, so heartily exhibited by the people of Great Britain, was quite as cheering to your brethren on this side of the Atlantic as it must have been to the members of the Craft in the Mother Country.

That the recent illness by which, in the wise dispensation of Providence, your Royal Highness was afflicted, may be sanctified to your temporal and eternal welfare, and that your Royal Highness may be long spared to adorn the exalted position to which, in the providence of God, you have been called, is the fervent prayer of the members of the Fraternity in this Province.

ALEXANDER KEITH,

Grand Master,

On behalf of the Craft.

Obituary.

BRO. THOMAS SCOTCHER, P.M. 55, SECRETARY 902.

In the death of Bro. Thomas Scotcher, P.M. 55, Secretary 902, the Craft in general, and two lodges in particular, have sustained a loss sufficiently heavy to warrant the promulgation of a few words, expressive of the general sense entertained by the Fraternity of the merits of the late departed brother, and a brief retrospect of his Masonic career.

The philosophical proposition that "happy is the nation whose annals are dull," is not altogether inapplicable to individual history, and in this respect, if Bro. Scotcher's biography supplies no materials for adorning a tale, it may yet point the moral of the value that is always attached by mankind, and especially by Masons, to quiet, unobtrusive, persevering enthusiasm; nor does his phrase involve, as at first sight it would appear, a contradiction in terms. Enthusiasm may be quiet, equal, and enduring, as well as startling, evanescent, and impulsive; nor can it, we think, be open to question which description is most productive of beneficial effects to the object of its zeal.

Bro. Scotcher's love for Masonry, and an ardent, never flagging affection which remained to the end of his long life, was of the former character. Initiated into the Constitutional Lodge, under its old number of 63, (now 55), the 16th April, 1846, the neophyte rose by rapid steps, and in 1849 we find him installed as W.M. The following year, while still I.P.M., he began to re-mount by occupying the J.W.'s chair, from which, in due course ascending, in 1852 he again ascended the throne of K.S. On both occasions he discharged the duties of this exalted office, as indeed he performed whatever Masonic duties he undertook, with a conscientious fidelity and rare intelligence. This was the last time Bro. Scotcher filled the Master's chair, although he continued a subscribing member of the Constitutional Lodge until the last moments of his life.

Towards the end of 1861, Bro. Scotcher took great interest in the establishment, by Bro. Wigginton, P. Prov. G.D. Worcestershire, in conjunction with several other distinguished brethren, of the Tower Hamlets Engineers (now the Burgoyne) Lodge No. 902 (then 1204). Of this lodge, which sprung from the now able and famous corps of East End Volunteer Engineers, Bro. Scotcher was the first Secretary, and retained that appointment until his lamented decease. The able manner in which Bro. Scotcher up to a very late period, when the illness which ultimately resulted in his dissolution incapacitated him, discharged the duties of this appointment, won for him the cordial esteem and affection of all the brethren, who in 1867 testified their regard by the present of a testimonial, consisting of a handsome silver teapot, to their highly respected officer—to whom in their opinion no slight amount of the success which had then attended and still continues to attend this prosperous and energetic lodge was to be attributed. This piece of plate however, was but a small part of the many handsome and valuable testimonials from his two lodges, and the various lodges of instruction with which Bro. Scotcher was connected, that he received during his protracted Masonic labours.

The Constitutional, 55, and the Burgoyne, 902, both of which are now plunged in mourning by the sad event, it is our duty to report were the only two mother lodges with which Bro. Scotcher was ever connected, and of both he remained a member from his initiation and joining until his death.

Of the various lodges of instruction that profited by his labours, as Secretary and Preceptor, it is sufficient to record that the East End of the Metropolis scarcely had one of these schools of mystic lore, that did not number Bro. Scotcher as a member, and rely upon him usually as an energetic officer and instructor. His attendance was assiduous, his labours indefatigable, and he will long be remembered as a most zealous propagator of light in the East.

For some time past the health of this esteemed brother has been failing, and of late his accustomed place has often missed his familiar and welcome presence. At length on Sunday, the 7th inst., it pleased the G. A. O. T. U. to call him to his well-earned reward after having trod life's chequered pavement for the long period of 72 years, the last 26 of which had been passed in the constant service of the Craft. His remains will be interred at the Tower Hamlets Cemetery, Bow, E., this day, Saturday, 20th April, 1872, at 3 p.m. when a numerous assemblage of the brethren may be expected to be present to pay the last sad tribute of respect to departed merit.

METROPOLITAN MASONIC MEETINGS.

For the Week ending Friday, April 26, 1872.

The Editor will be glad to have notice from Secretaries of Lodges and Chapters of any change in place or time of meeting.

SATURDAY, APRIL 20.

Audit Committee, Boys' School.
Provincial Grand Chapter of Middlesex (See Advertisement).
Lodge 715, Panmure, City Terminus Hotel, Cannon-st.
" 1364, Earl of Zetland, St. Thomas's Hall, Hackney.
Chapter 1194, Royal Middlesex, Grotto Hotel, Twickenham, at 3.30.
Star Lodge of Instruction (1275), Marquis of Granby, New Cross-road, at 7; Bro. C. S. Dilley, Preceptor.
Sphinx Lodge of Instruction (1329), Stirling Castle, Camberwell, at 7.30; Bros. Thomas and Worthington, Preceptors.
Mount Sinai Chapter of Instruction, Union Tavern, Air-street, at 8; Comp. Brett, Preceptor.

MONDAY, APRIL 22.

Lodge 4, Royal Somerset House and Inverness, Freemasons' Hall, St. James's.
" 26, Castle Lodge of Harmony, Willis's Rooms.
" 28, Old King's Arms, Freemasons' Hall.
" 905, De Grey and Ripon, Angel Hotel, Great Ilford.
Chap. 188, Joppa, Albion Tavern, Aldersgate-street.
Sincerity Lodge of Instruction (174), Railway Tavern, Fenchurch-street Station, at 7.
Strong Man Lodge of Instruction (45), Old Jerusalem Tavern, St. John's Gate, Clerkenwell, at 8; Bro. James Terry, Preceptor.
Camden Lodge of Instruction (704), Adelaide Tavern, Haverstock-hill, at 8; Bro. T. A. Adams, Preceptor.
Eastern Star Lodge of Instruction (95), Royal Hotel, Mile-end-road, at 7.30; Bro. E. Gottneil, Preceptor.
British Oak Lodge of Instruction, Bank of Friendship Tavern, Mile End, at 7 for 8.
St. James's Union Lodge of Instruction (180), Horse and Groom Tavern, Winsley-street, (opposite the Pantheon), Oxford-street, at 8; Bro. J. R. Stacey, Preceptor.
Wellington Lodge of Instruction, White Swan Tavern, Deptford, at 8; Bro. C. G. Willey, P.M. 1155, Preceptor.
St. John of Wapping Lodge of Instruction (1306), Gun Tavern, High-street, Wapping, at 7; Bro. T. Mortlock, Preceptor.

TUESDAY, APRIL 23.

Lodge 14, Tuscan, Freemasons' Hall.
" 92, Moria, London Tavern, Bishopsgate-street.
" 145, Prudent Brethren, Freemasons' Hall.
" 186, Industry, Freemasons' Hall, Cannon-street.
" 205, Israel, Terminus Hotel.
" 259, Prince of Wales, Willis's Rooms, St. James's.
" 1196, Urban, Old Jerusalem Tavern, St. John's Gate, Clerkenwell.
" 1348, Ebury, Moipeth Arms Tavern, Millbank.
C. ap. 7, Royal York Chapter of Perseverance, Freemasons' Hall.
" 29, St Alban's, Albion Tavern, Aldersgate-st.
Metropolitan Chapter of Instruction, Portugal Hotel Fleet-street, at 7; Comp. Brett, Preceptor.
Domestic Lodge of Instruction, Palmerston Tav., Grosvenor-park, Camberwell, at 7.30. Bro. John Thomas, Preceptor.
Faith Lodge of Instruction, Refreshment Rooms, Victoria-st. (opposite Westminster Palace Hotel) at 8; Bro. C. A. Cottebrune, Preceptor.
Yarborough Lodge of Instruction, Green Dragon, Stepney, at 8; Bro. Isaac Saqui, Preceptor.
Prince Fredk. William Lodge of Instruction (753), Knights of St. John Tavern, St. John's Wood Bro. F. G. Baker, Preceptor.

Dalhousie Lodge of Instruction, King Edward, Triangle, Hackney, at 7.30. Bro. J. Saunders, Preceptor.
Sydney Lodge of Instruction (829), Cambridge Hotel, Upper Norwood, at 7.30.
Ben Johnson Lodge of Instruction, Ben Johnson, Goodman's-yard, at 8.
Florence Nightingale Lodge of Instruction, Masonic Hall, William-street, Woolwich, at 7.30.
Prosperity Lodge of Instruction, Gladstone Tavern, Bishopsgate-st. Within, at 7.30; Bro. Bolton, (W.M. 1227), Preceptor.
St. Marybone Lodge of Instruction (1305), British Stores Tavern, New-street, St. John's Wood, at 8; Bro. T. A. Adams, Preceptor.
West Kent Lodge of Improvement (1297), St. Saviour's College, Stansted-road, Forest-hill, at 7.30; Bro. H. W. Lindus, Preceptor.

WEDNESDAY, APRIL 24.

Grand Festival (See Advertisement).
Pythagorean Lodge of Instruction (79), Prince of Orange, Greenwich, at 8; Bro. J. Robt. Nash, Preceptor.
United Strength Lodge of Instruction (228), the Grafton Arms, Prince of Wales' Road, Kentish Town, at 8; Bro. J. N. Frost, Preceptor.
Israel Lodge of Instruction, Rising Sun Tavern, Globe-road, at 7.30; Bro. Isaac Saqui, Preceptor.
New Concord Lodge of Instruction, Rosemary Branch Tavern, Hoxton, at 8.
Confidence Lodge of Instruction, Railway Tav., London street, City, at 7.30.
Royal Union Lodge of Instruction, Horse and Groom Tavern, Winsley-street, Oxford-street, at 8. Bro. T. A. Adams, Preceptor.
Peckham Lodge of Instruction, Maismore Arms, Park-road, Peckham; Bro. David Rose, Preceptor.
Temperance in the East Lodge of Instruction, George the Fourth, Catherine-street, Poplar.
Stanhope Lodge of Instruction, Thicker Hotel, Anerly at 7.30 p.m.; Bro. H. W. Lindus, Preceptor.

THURSDAY, APRIL 25.

General Committee Girls' School, Freemasons' Hall, at 4.
" 66, Grenadiers, Freemasons' Hall.
" 99, Shakspeare, Albion Tavern, Aldersgate-st.
" 858, South Middlesex, Beaufort House, North End, Fulham.
" 1056, Victoria, Anderton's Hotel, Fleet-st.
Chap. 73, Mount Lebanon, Bridge House Hotel, Southwark.
" 534, Polish National, Freemasons' Hall.
The R.A. Chapter of Improvement, Freemasons' Hall, at 7; Comp. Brett, Preceptor. Ceremony, explanation of R.A. Jewel and Solids, past sections.
Fidelity Lodge of Instruction (3), Yorkshire Grey, London-st., Tottenham Court-road, at 8; Bro. T. A. Adams, Preceptor.
Panmure Lodge of Instruction (720), Balham Hotel, Balham, at 7.30; Bro. John Thomas, Preceptor.
Finsbury Lodge of Instruction, Jolly Anglers' Tavern, Bath-street, City-road; Bro. Stean, Preceptor.
United Mariners' Lodge of Instruction, Three Cranes, Mile-end-road, at 8; Bro. T. J. Barnes, Preceptor.
St. George's Lodge of Instruction (140), Globe Tavern, Royal Hill, Greenwich, at 8.
Whittington Lodge of Instruction (862), Crown Tavern, Holborn, at 8; Bro. Lewis Alexander, P.M. 188, Preceptor.
Chigwell Lodge of Instruction, Bald-faced Stag Hotel, Buckhurst Hill, at 7.30.

FRIDAY, APRIL 26.

Anniversary of Stability Lodge of Instruction. (See Advt.)
Lodge 197, Jerusalem, Freemasons' Hall.
" 509, Fitzroy, Head Quarters Hon. Artillery Company, City-road.
" 861, Finsbury, Jolly Anglers, Bath-st., St. Lukes.
Unions Emulation Lodge of Improvement for M.M.'s, Freemasons' Hall, at 7.
Metropolitan Lodge of Instruction, Portugal Hotel, Fleet-street, at 7; Bro. Brett, Preceptor.
Belgrave Lodge of Instruction, Duke of Wellington Hotel, Spring-gardens, Charing-cross; Bro. Pulsford, Preceptor.
Doric Lodge of Instruction, Three Cranes Tavern, Mile-end-road, at 8; Bro. Isaac Saqui, Preceptor.
Robert Burns Lodge of Instruction, Union Tavern, Air-street, Regent-st., at 8; Bro. W. Watson, Preceptor.
Burgoyne Lodge of Instruction, Grafton Arms, Prince of Wales'-road, N.W., at 8.
St. Luke's Lodge of Instruction (144), Gladstone Tavern, Brompton-road, S.W.
United Pilgrims Lodge of Instruction, Duke of Edinburgh, Shepherd's-lane, Brixton, at 7; Bro. J. Thomas, P.M., Preceptor.
Duke of Edinburgh Lodge of Instruction, Silver Lion, Penny-fields, Poplar, at 7; Br. D. S. Potts, Preceptor.
St. James' Lodge of Instruction, Gregorian Arms Tavern, Jamaica-road, Bermondsey, at 8. Bro. Howes, P.M., Preceptor.
Temperance Lodge of Instruction, Victoria Tav., Victoria road, Deptford, at 8.
Burdett Courts Lodge of Instruction (1278), Approach Tavern, Approach-road, Victoria-park, at 8; Bro. Geo. W. Verry, Preceptor.
Clapton Lodge of Instruction, White Hart, Clapton, at 7.30; Bro. John Saunders, Preceptor.
Royal Standard Lodge of Instruction (1298), The Castle Tavern, Holloway, at 8; Bro. R. Lee, (I.M. 193, W.M. 1298), Preceptor.
Pythagorean Chapter of Instruction (No. 79), Prince of Orange, Greenwich-road, at 8; Comp. W. West Smith, Preceptor.

Advertisements.

ROYAL MASONIC INSTITUTION FOR BOYS,

WOOD GREEN, LONDON, N.
Office:—6, Freemasons' Hall, W.C.

PATRON:
HER MAJESTY THE QUEEN.
PRESIDENT:
THE MOST HON. THE MARQUESS OF RIPON, K.G., M.W.G.M.

At a Quarterly General Court of the Governors and Subscribers, held at Freemasons' Hall, Great Queen-street, Lincoln's Inn Fields, London, on Monday, the 15th day of April, 1872, John Symonds, Esq., Vice Patron, in the Chair, a Ballot took place for the election of 19 Boys, from an approved List of 60 Candidates, with the following result:—
SUCCESSFUL.

13	Uwins, C. M. H.	1212
22	Alder, W. H.	1202
39	Warr, C. W.	1176
29	Nutman, Joseph	1097
42	Clemence, Thomas R.	1089
53	Neville, Walter	1072
49	Bryant, Alfred A.	1018
22	Ellis, Walter	1015
15	Barrett, W.P.	970
19	Parker, W. R.	967
52	Cheetham, Walter	954
51	Pinson, H. E. K.	942
50	Baylis, Harry	863
28	Fenemore, H. M.	859
16	Furley, F. A.	821
41	Holland, J. L.	811
36	Mules, J. F. R.	805
48	Gates, F. C.	800
23	White, J. B.	789

UNSUCCESSFUL.

1	Nicholas, T. F.	151
2	M'Dowell, Wm.	17
3	Parsons, George	13
4	Campbell, F. G.	38
5	Travers, J. H. H.	136
6	Chase, J. H.	92
7	Fox, H. L.	23
8	Wright, W. G. C.	76
9	Tate, W. F.	228
10	Kitchen, J. H.	12
11	Kitchen, J. George	2
12	Edwards, W. A.	120
14	Madeley, G. C.	20
17	West, J. A.	69
18	Grinstead, A.	63
20	Christie, J. E.	297
21	Sawtell, W. E.	336
24	Eastland, Henry	251
25	Woodgate, T. E. N.	2
26	Thearle, St. Aubyn M.	9
27	Booser, W. A.	480
30	Perris, W. H.	118
31	Warwick, C. E.	610
32	Clayton, H. L.	78
34	Catt, J. L.	655
35	Roberts, J. L. E. J.	611
37	Heaviside, P. K. B.	563
38	Martin, S. J.	784
40	Hart, A. E.	355
43	Hodge, Frederick	222
44	Murrant, E.	65
45	Hazeland, J. J.	524
46	Sessions, J. G.	6
47	Hutchinson, George	—
54	Prentice, J. E.	246
55	Moon, J. H.	190
56	Coulthurst, J. E.	1
57	Woodbine, J. H.	7
58	Marks, J. T.	—
59	Steddy, F. E.	92
60	Hill, Harry	9

The numbers prefixed to the names refer to the numbers of the case on the voting paper. The Votes of the Unsuccessful Candidates will be carried forward to the Election in October next.

By order,
FREDERICK BINCKES, Secretary.
April 15th, 1872.

MASONIC ASSURANCE OFFICE,

9, NEW BRIDGE-STREET,
Chairman, London Board - J. Rankin Stebbing, Esq.
" Portsmouth " - Ald. Ford.
" Leeds " - Ald. Addyman.
" Plymouth " - Major Studdy.
" Manchester " - W. R. Callender, Esq., Jr.
This Company invites the attention of the Craft to its entirely novel and original instrument of POSITIVE LIFE POLICY.
FREDK. BIGG, P.M., Manager and Actuary LOANS GRANTED.

ROYAL MASONIC INSTITUTION
FOR GIRLS.

St. JOHN'S HILL, BATTERSEA RISE, S.W.

AT a Quarterly General Court of this Institution, held at Freemasons' Hall, Great Queen-street, Lincoln's Inn Fields, on Thursday, the Eleventh Day of April, 1872, Bro. John Symonds, V.P., in the chair, after the general business was disposed of, the Governors and Subscribers proceeded to the Election by Ballot of Eleven Children into the Institution, from a list of Twenty-two approved Candidates, when the following were declared duly elected.

No. on List.		Votes.
9	Chesterton, Jessie	1306
21	Earle, Annie G.	1056
19	Harryman, Frances	990
15	Hartness, Mary A.	937
8	Mackay, Kate	907
17	Mills, Lilian M.	907
18	Wiseman, Alice A.	889
12	Meacock, Helena	881
4	Cook, Alexandra E.	862
11	Wray, Beatrice M.	773
2	Hollis, Emily	769

The Votes of the following unsuccessful Candidates will be carried forward to the Election in October next:

No. on List.		Votes.
1	Chapman, Ada G.	510
3	Greene, Harriet M.	148
5	Tippett, Ann G.	282
6	Bindon, Beatrice A.	158
7	Crisp, Lizzie E.	375
10	Batcheler, Rosa	12
13	Senger, Ellen A.	268
14	Gardner, Frances E.	338
16	Durant, Pauline L. C.	182
20	Simpson, Frances E.	516
22	Nash, Edith M.	407

W. LANE, for
EDWARD HENRY PATTEN, P.G.S.B.,
Secretary.

Office, 5, Freemasons' Hall, Great Queen-st., W.C.
11th April, 1872.

FREDERICK ADLARD,
MERCHANT TAILOR AND OUTFITTER,
225, HIGH HOLBORN, W.C.

Superior Tourist Suits from £2 15 0
Black Dress Suits from 3 13 6
Trousers in every variety, all wool, ... 0 16 0

FREDERICK ADLARD,
MANUFACTURER OF MASONIC CLOTHING,
Inventor of the Masonic Jewel Attacher,
(Registered 5 and 6 Victoria, cap. 100.)
225, HIGH HOLBORN, W.C.

"MASONIC JEWEL ATTACHER.—Bro. Adlard, of 225, High Holborn, W.C., has invented an attacher, which, from its simplicity and convenience, has only to be universally known to be universally adopted. It has long been a subject of complaint that the wearing of the honourable insignia of rank and merit which grace the breasts of so many of our Brethren, plays sad havoc with the fabric and material of the coat to which they are attached. Bro. Adlard's invention entirely obviates this, in addition to saving much time and difficulty in the proper arrangement of the jewels, and we have very great pleasure in recommending it, warranted as we are in doing so by our personal experience. The price (7s. 6d.) places it within the reach of all."—Masonic Magazine.

Bro. Adlard's superior fitting Collars are also well worthy of the attention of the Craft.

"We have much pleasure in recommending Bro. Adlard's Jewel Attacher for its convenience and usefulness."—Freemason.

Guildhall Tavern, Gresham-st., E.C.

SPACIOUS Dining-rooms, Chop and Steak-rooms, Luncheon-bars, and Smoking Rooms. Rooms of all sizes, suitable for Auction Sales, Consultations, Arbitrations, Building Societies, &c.; also for Freemasons' Lodges and Banquets, Private Dinners, &c.
Guildhall Tavern Company (Limited), 32 and 33, Gresham-street,
GEORGE CRAWFORD, Manager and Secretary.

ROSE CROIX TRACING BOARDS,
Five Guineas the Pair.

MASONIC DEPOTS, 2, 3, & 4, LITTLE BRITAIN,
AND 198, FLEET-STREET.

SIX PER CENT. would be paid by a Brother for the LOAN OF £60, to enable him to extend an established business. Repayment by instalments. Address, in the first instance, D.S., 59, Edgware-road, W.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT AND PILLS.—Gratifying Results.—No phase of external ailments can present itself which is irremediable by the early and diligent use of the above-named remedies. The merest blotch upon the skin, and the deepest ulcerations of the flesh, yield with the same certainty to the detergent and healing properties of this celebrated Ointment. Bad legs, burns, eruptions of the skin, and scrofulous sores, can be cured with facility by the use of this Ointment, aided by Holloway's purifying Pills. Under this treatment the foulest ulcers become clean, and in a few days florid granulations appear, which gradually grow and fill up the cavity with firm and healthy flesh. No drawback nor relapse need be feared.—ADVT.

Bro. ELTON GLOVER,
VOCALIST (BASS) AND PIANIST
is open to engagements for Concerts, Banquets, or Pupils.
For terms, apply at 3, New North-road, Hoxton.

Bro. GEORGE KENNING,
GOLDSMITH,
JEWELLER & WATCHMAKER,

LONDON:—2, 3, and 4, Little Britain;
and 198, Fleet-street.
LIVERPOOL:—2, Monument-place.

TESSELATED CARPETING,
FOR
Lodges, Chapters, Encampments, &c.
Four Feet wide, 3/9 per Yard.

MASONIC DEPOTS, 2, 3 & 4, LITTLE BRITAIN,
AND 198, FLEET STREET, E.C.

J. E. PETERS,
ORNAMENTAL ENGRAVER AND FANCY
ENAMELLER,
41, Clerkenwell Close.
Writing, Engraving of every description, Masonic Emblems
Engraved or Enamelled; old enamelled Work repaired;
Country Orders attended to with despatch.

Established 1798.
"MESSRS. CHARLES WATSON and Co., of 30, Cornhill, forwarded us samples of their 'Cornhill Sherry.' We have taken the opinion of competent judges and veteran wine consumers upon its merits, and pronounce it decidedly the best of the wines at a similar cost which we have tasted, and a great many came before us during the process of our analysis."—Medical Press.

CHARLES WATSON and Co., 30, Cornhill,
opposite the Royal Exchange, invite attention to the CORNHILL SHERRY, as their speciality, pure elegant and recherche, and worthy of a place on any gentleman's table.

THE CORNHILL SHERRY, elegant, pale and dry, 30s. per dozen. Carriage paid.
CLARET..... 10s. 22s. 28s. 36s. 42s. to Five Guineas.
SHERRY 22s. 26s. 30s. 36s. 42s. 48s. to 84s.
PORT..... 28s. 34s. 42s. 48s. 54s. to 120s.
CHAMPAGNE ... 30s. 42s. 54s. 60s. to 84s.
WHISKY—the Ben Nevis—CHARLES WATSON and Co.'s Speciality, 20s. per gallon; the softest and most fascinating Whisky for Toddy in the market.—30, Cornhill. Carriage free within 50 miles. Sample Bottles may be had.

THE CORNHILL SHERRY, rich gold, 30s. per dozen, carriage paid. 30, Cornhill. Sample bottles may be had

Established 1798.
CORNHILL SHERRY.—CHARLES WATSON and Co., 30, Cornhill (opposite Royal Exchange), requests the favour of a visit to these old-established cellars, containing a large stock of the finest old Wines of every country, some curious and rare, to please the most critical connoisseurs. Descriptive list free. C. W. and Co. appoint Agents, with first-class references, in towns where not represented

Dr. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE.
THE ORIGINAL AND ONLY GENUINE.

CHLORODYNE is admitted by the Profession to be the most wonderful and valuable remedy ever discovered. CHLORODYNE is the best remedy known for Coughs, Consumption, Bronchitis, Asthma. CHLORODYNE effectually checks and arrests those too often fatal diseases—Diphtheria, Fever, Croup, Ague. CHLORODYNE acts like a charm in Diarrhoea, and is the only specific in Cholera and Dysentery. CHLORODYNE effectually cuts short all attacks of Epilepsy, Hysteria, Palpitation and Spasms. CHLORODYNE is the only palliative in Neuralgia, Rheumatism, Gout, Cancer, Toothache, Meningitis, &c.

From Lord FRANCIS CONYNNGHAM, Mount Charles, Donegal, 11th December, 1868.

"Lord Francis Conyngham, who this time last year bought some of Dr. J. Collis Browne's Chlorodyne from Mr. Devonport, and has found it a most wonderful medicine, will be glad to have half a dozen bottles sent at once to the above address.

"Earl Russel communicated to the College of Physicians that he had received a dispatch from her Majesty's Consul at Manila, to the effect that Cholera had been raging fearfully, and that the ONLY remedy of any service was CHLORODYNE."—See Lancet, Dec. 1, 1864.

From W. VESALIUS PETTIGREW, M.D. Hon F.R.C.S. England;

Formerly Lecturer on Anatomy and Physiology, at St. George's School of Medicine.

"I have no hesitation in stating, after a fair trial of Chlorodyne, that I have never met with any medicine so efficacious as an Anti-spasmodic and Sedative. I have used it in Consumption, Asthma, Diarrhoea, and other diseases, and am most perfectly satisfied with the results."

From Dr. THOMAS SANDIFORD, Passage West, Cork,

"I will thank you to send me a further supply of Chlorodyne. It was the most efficacious remedy I ever used, affording relief in violent attacks of Spasms within a minute after being taken. One patient in particular, who has suffered for years with periodical attacks of Spasms of a most painful nature, and unable to obtain relief from other remedies, such as Opium, &c., finds nothing so prompt and efficacious as Chlorodyne."

From J. McGRIGOR CROFT, M.D., M.R.C.P. London, late Staff Surgeon to H.M.F.

"Sir,—After prescribing Dr. J. Collis Browne's Chlorodyne for the last three years in severe cases of Neuralgia and Tic-Doloureux, I feel that I am in a position to testify to its valuable effects. Really, in some cases it acts like a charm, when all other means had failed. Without being asked for this report, I must come forward and state my candid opinion that it is a most valuable medicine, and I have recommended several Chemists in this neighbourhood not to be without it for prescriptions."

From JNO. E. GOULSTONE, M.D., late Principal Surgeon to the Steamship "Great Eastern."

"I can confidently state that Chlorodyne is an admirable Sedative and Anti-Spasmodic, having used it in Neuralgia, Hysteria, Asthma, and Consumption, with remarkably favourable results. It relieved a fit of Asthma in four minutes, where the patient had suffered eleven years in a most distressing manner, no previous remedy having had so immediate and beneficial an effect."

From Dr. B. J. BOULTON and Co., Horncastle.

"We have made pretty extensive use of Chlorodyne in our practice lately, and look upon it as an excellent direct Sedative and anti-Spasmodic. It seems to allay pain and irritation, in whatever organ and from whatever cause. It induces a feeling of comfort and quietude not obtainable by any other remedy, and it seems to possess this great advantage over all other sedatives, that it leaves no unpleasant after effects."

J. C. BAKER, Esq., M.D., Bideford.

"It is, without doubt, the most valuable and certain Anodyne we have."

CAUTION.—BEWARE OF PIRACY AND IMITATIONS.

CAUTION.—Vice-Chancellor, Sir W. Page Wood stated that Dr. J. Collis Browne was undoubtedly the inventor of CHLORODYNE; that the story of the defendant, Freeman, was deliberately untrue, which, he regretted to say, had been sworn to.—See Times, 13th July, 1864.

Sold in Bottles at 1/1 1/2, 2/9, 4/6, and 11/0 each. None is genuine without the words "Dr. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE" on the Government Stamp. Overwhelming Medical Testimony accompanies each Bottle.

SOLE MANUFACTURER—J. T. DAVENPORT, 33, Great Russell-street, Bloomsbury, London.

TABLE OF CONTENTS

The Future of Freemasonry in Ireland 255
 Representation of the Grand Mark Lodge of England in American Chapters 256
 Centenary of Royal Gloucester Lodge, Southampton 257
 Masonic Notes and Queries 259
 CORRESPONDENCE :—
 Oration by Bro. J. Halford 259
 Masonic Tidings—British, Colonial and Foreign..... 259
 Grand Festival 260
 CRAFT MASONRY :—
 Metropolitan 263
 Provincial 263
 Presentation to Bro Baird, St. Johns Lodge, Glasgow 263
 Consecration of the Bective Lodge of Mark Masters at Keswick 263
 The A. P. U. C. and Freemasonry 263
 Laying the Foundation Stone of the new Infirmary of the Royal Masonic Institution for Girls 264
 Masonic Meetings for next week... 265
 Advertisements..... 253, 254, 265, 266, 267, 268

THE FUTURE OF FREEMASONRY IN IRELAND.

(Continued from page 121.)

FOURTH ARTICLE.

When we approach the consideration in detail, of the proposed new Masonic Laws, as published by the Committee appointed to arrange them, we find a great many points worthy of examination, and open to discussion, as to their advisability, and the effect of their working, if carried, upon the future of the Order. Many of those points may safely be left for settlement during the debates incidental to the progress of the new Laws through Grand Lodge, but some of them, introduce, or interfere with principles to such an extent, as to require more than a passing allusion. In completing the present series of articles, I therefore purpose to consider somewhat in detail, the following subjects :—

- The Prayers sanctioned by Grand Lodge.
- The Appointment of the Grand Officers.
- The Privileges of Grand Master's Lodge.
- The Proposed Construction and Powers of the Board of General Purposes.
- The "Charities" of the Order.
- The Compact with the so-called "High Degrees."

In addition to the above, there are two proposed alterations in the practical working of the lodges, which require a short allusion, namely, the change from monthly to quarterly meetings of the Grand Lodge, and the election of Officers in subordinate lodges annually, in place of half-yearly, as heretofore. Those changes I propose to consider in the first instance.

It is urged, and very fairly, that in making our Grand Lodge Communications quarterly, we would be coming more into unison with the practice of other Grand Lodges, and, would also afford opportunities to our country brethren of being present at the meetings of all the governing bodies, which could be so arranged as to come within the same week as the meetings of the Grand Lodge. The principal objection, as far as I can at present see, to quarterly communications is, that the average amount of business to be disposed of at our Grand Lodge meetings could not be fairly dealt with once in three months, and I think that regular monthly meetings as at present, are preferable to emergency meetings, which I am disposed to think, would be often required, if the quarterly communications should be adopted.

As regards the proposed change in the election of officers of subordinate lodges, there is something to be said on both sides of the question. A common complaint of the junior brethren at present is, the length of time during which they have to wait for the honour of the chair, of course, if the elections take place annually, that time would be doubled. Whether that is a good Masonic objection or not is a matter of opinion. But if the change be made, there is one reform in the practice of the lodges, which I think is imperative. At present the "usage" is, for brethren to take office by seniority, unless there be some good reason for passing them over, but if the Master is to hold his position for a year, in place of for six months, I think this must be at least considerably modified. I would suggest that the elections of junior officers of the subordinate lodges, namely, the Inner Guard (in some lodges this office is filled by the junior P.M.), and Junior and Senior Deacons, should be half-yearly as at present, and that the three principal officers should be elected annually by ballot from the list of Past Senior Deacons. By this means an inducement would be held out to brethren to take more interest in the working of the lodges, and if in addition, the rule, pretty general in theory but ignored in practice, of requiring the J.W. to be able to initiate, the S.W. to craft, and the W.M. to raise, before taking office, were adopted, a standard of "merit," in lieu of seniority, would be after a time established. Such a rule as to election would not clash with the annual election of officers proposed in the new laws, as the officers recognised by Grand Lodge are the Wardens and Master.

The Secretary, Treasurer, and some other officers are at present elected for the year.

Coming now to the subjects more immediately indicated by the headings I have already given, we have to look at, in the first instance, THE PRAYERS SANCTIONED BY GRAND LODGE.

In the proposed new laws as published, we find not only prayers to be used in lodges, but also those for the use of Royal Arch Chapters, High Knights Templar Encampments, and Prince Masons Chapters. This I assume must be an oversight, as Grand Lodge has nothing to do with the prayers of those degrees, and the several Orders alluded to are quite competent to arrange their own official prayers. But in the prayers put forward for use in Craft Masonry, we find not only such prayers as are consistent and suitable by reason of their universality, but also "alternative" prayers of a Christian character, and as such, out of place in an Institution, one of whose fundamental principles is its unlimited universality as to the creeds of its members.

It is true, that it is not compulsory on the lodges to use those Christian prayers, but I contend that Grand Lodge has no right officially to sanction them, when the only religious test applied to initiates, is their belief in a Supreme Being, and the more especially that I have heard it stated, that Christian prayers were selected for use purposely in a lodge where Jewish brethren were present, after the attention of the members was called to the fact of their presence; such a proceeding ought not to be possible in Freemasonry. One of the first proceedings of the Grand Lodge of England in arranging the Constitutions after its establishment in 1717, appears to have been the elimination from the rules and charges of certain matter which might have offended the religious feelings of some of the members of the Order, and there can be no doubt that the high position which Freemasonry holds at the present day, is in a large degree, owing to the scrupulous care with which it keeps aloof from polemics and politics, and regards the creed of its members as a matter between each man's conscience and his God.

I trust Grand Lodge will see the wisdom of sanctioning only such prayers as can be joined in by all Masons.

The next subject indicated is one on which a very strong feeling exists in many quarters, and I believe the objectionable usages in connection with it are by no means confined to Irish Freemasonry. It is,

THE APPOINTMENT OF THE GRAND OFFICERS

It has long been felt and often expressed that there is too much of monopoly in the arrangement of the official positions of Grand Lodge. All the offices, except that of D.G.M. are elective; but it is felt that some steps should be taken to throw at least some of them open more generally to the brethren at large, duly qualified to fill them. It is of course admitted that it is desirable that the Grand Master and some few of the higher dignitaries, should be men of high social standing and position, so as to give a tangible guarantee to outsiders, that the society is a good and proper one, and is not the conspiracy against law and order, that some of its audacious maligners attempt to paint it. But there are several junior offices in the Grand Lodge, that could and should be filled by worthy brethren, as a reward for their Masonic worth, and as an incentive to others to imitate their zeal and efficiency, and it is very generally acknowledged that it is now a fitting time to put an end to monopoly in that direction, by passing a law rendering those who have held office for say three years, ineligible for re-election, until after the expiration of a like, or some other period.

The order is not so poor in worthy brethren, as to render it necessary to stereotype its officers, or to wait till the removal, by death, of a Grand Officer, opens an appointment for another brother, from among a number, in honouring whom Grand Lodge would be also honouring itself, by showing in practice its recognition of the spirit of one of its first principles, the perfect equality of its members.

It was distinctly understood that some such rule as that above alluded to, should be embodied in the new laws, but as such has not been done, it will of course be easy, by an amendment, to rectify the omission.

We come now to the consideration of a subject, second in importance only to the connection of the "High Grades" with Craft Masonry, namely, THE PRIVILEGES OF GRAND MASTER'S LODGE.

Briefly stated these privileges are principally, the wearing of special "clothing," almost identical with that of the Grand Officers; Precedence over all other lodges, Exemption from the rules by which all the other Dublin lodges are bound to make certain returns, pay certain fees, and submit their candidates for the approval of the Board of Charity, and Inspection before they can be initiated.

As far as the money portion of the exemption is concerned, I believe the funds of the order do not suffer, as the usage of Grand Master's lodge is to pay in a sum equivalent to what would be the fees, if any other lodge were in question. This sum is given in as a donation, not as a matter of dues to the order.

To find the origin of those special privileges, we have to look back in the history of the order in Ireland. We cannot trace its annals here, further back than the year 1730, when the first Irish Grand Lodge was established in Dublin, and Lord Kingstōn, who one year previously had been made Grand Master of England, was elected to the same position over the Irish Freemasons. Matters went on smoothly for some years, till after the death of Viscount Allen, the Grand Master, in 1745, when great difficulty was experienced in endeavouring to get brethren of standing and title to preside over the Fraternity.

In 1749 the Grand Master, Lord Kingsborough, the Past Grand Master, Wyvill, and several other brethren of distinction, met in a lodge, and as a reward for their efforts to revive and consolidate Freemasonry, received the name of "the Grand Master's Lodge," and the privileges since appended to that particular body. The origin of their privileges is clearly shewn, the only question is should those privileges be made, so to speak, hereditary, and should a principle opposed to the rudiments of Freemasonry be continued in the working of the Craft. The effect has been, and is to create jealousy and disunion in the order, to raise up in its midst an aristocratic element, totally opposed to the ideas of which Freemasonry is the embodiment, to create class distinctions in the place where they should have no footing, and to give a practical denial to the boast of the order, that its members "meet on the level."

Somewhat analogous distinctions were conferred, under the English Constitution, on the English "Grand Stewards' Lodge," in the year 1735, and I need not dwell on the bickerings and dissensions which those distinctions subsequently gave rise to. The only privileges now retained by that body, I am instructed, are the right of not being numbered, and of being placed, in the books of Grand Lodge, &c., at the head of all other lodges, and ranking accordingly. There is one element in the constitution of Grand Stewards' Lodge, distinguishing it completely from our Grand Masters' Lodge. It is constituted as a Master Mason's Lodge, and consequently has no power of making, passing, or raising Masons."

Now there can be no objection to the Grand Master's Lodge retaining its name, instead of a number, and taking the precedence over other lodges. Some lodge must stand first on the list, and as there is already a No. 1 Lodge, it would be difficult to adjust the question of precedence in any other way. But if the integrity of Masonic principles is to be maintained, if our much vaunted platform of equality is to be a reality and not a sham, if we would exclude from our future dissension and discord, arising from a positive nurturing of the aristocratic element in our midst, all the other privileges of Grand Master's Lodge must be either surrendered or swept away. Granted, as they originally were, as a reward for special Masonic services, their continuance now is not only unmasonic, but injurious. The members of Grand Master's Lodge are not now pre-eminently distinguished, as such, for Masonic zeal or Masonic ability, and the conferring on a mere novice, who, by virtue of his social position or connections, is considered suitable to them as a member, and who has not been submitted to the scrutiny to which all the other Dublin candidates have to be subjected, of distinctions superior to those possessed by any but the Grand Officers, is subversive of the principles of the Order, and opposed to its best interests. It is not the first time that this question has been agitated; it has long been felt that the distinctions conferred on this particular lodge are unmasonic and unjust to other lodges, but on former occasions expediency carried the day, and principle was left, as often happens, in the back ground. Now however we are about to settle our Constitutions for, I hope, some considerable time, to come and consequently now is the time to correct existing abuses. If the members of Grand Master's Lodge would but look at the subject from a proper Masonic standpoint, they ought to be the first to propose to follow the example of our Most Worshipful Grand Master, who, in the proposed new laws, seems to have waived and surrendered certain privileges, secured to him under the Constitution at present existing. Such a course of conduct on their part would entitle them to the respect and esteem of all their brethren, but if on the contrary, they cling to those old privileges, merely because they are old, and ignore their inconsistency with the progressive spirit of the age, which tells on Freemasonry, as on all other organisations. If they, the members of a "subordinate lodge," insist on privileges that distinguish them from all other subordinate lodges, and places them, so to speak, on a pedestal above those whom they profess to "meet on the level," it rests with the Craft at large to decide, whether those privileges shall or shall not be continued. Grand Lodge conferred them, and undoubtedly Grand Lodge can, if it so wills, rescind them. I find that the fact is not generally known, that, in the Royal Arch Degree, a Warrant was obtained for a "Grand Master's Chapter," and in the Order of High Knights Templar, one for a "Grand Commander's Encampment," to which warrants all the privileges enjoyed in Craft Masonry by "The Grand Master's Lodge" are attached; the members, for instance, not being subject to the approval of the Royal Arch Committee of Inspection, nor to the ballot in Grand Conclave, which all other candidates for the degree of Knight Templar have to submit to. Whatever show of reason the members of Grand Master's Lodge have for their privileges, based as they undoubtedly are, on a vote of Grand Lodge for special services to Masonry by the original lodge, no such reason can be urged for either the "Grand Master's Chapter," or the "Grand Commander's Encampment;" and if the Grand Lodge should in its wisdom remove those privileges, or if, which I fear is very unlikely, "Grand Master's Lodge" should think fit to surrender them, it is a question for the members of those other degrees, how far the exceptional privileges of those brethren could be permitted to continue.

JOSEPH H. WOODWORTH,
P.M. Commercial Lodge, No. 245.
Dublin, April 15th, 1872.

THE REPRESENTATION OF THE GRAND MARK LODGE OF ENGLAND IN AMERICAN CHAPTERS.

The following introduction and foot notes are by Bro. T. S. Tisdall, 33°, the talented Editor of the Masonic department of Pomeroy's Democrat, New York, and the letter is by our well-known and valued contributor to the Freemason, Bro. W. J. Hughan.

It refers especially to the representation of the Mark Grand Lodge in American Grand Chapters, and will be read with great interest by the many who are anxious to see the action of the Grand Chapters of Pennsylvania and Iowa, followed by all the Grand Chapters in the United States. We may state Bro. Hughan denies that even the Mark Masters, degree was given to a Fellow Craft, although he admits the "Mark Man" was.

THE MARK DEGREE REPRESENTATION.—LETTER OF BRO. HUGHAN, OF ENGLAND.

On the 17th of February last we made some remarks relative to the recognition of the Grand Mark Lodge of England, and affiliation with it by representation of the Grand Chapter of Iowa. We expressed our doubts as to the possibility of a body of higher degree, as is a Grand Chapter, affiliating with one of inferior grade, upon equal terms, as is a Grand Mark Lodge. The Grand Chapters in America are merely legislative and appellate bodies. They are not workshops where degrees are conferred. Every matter brought before them for legislation must emanate from a Subordinate Chapter, or a member of one; for a G. Chapter is composed solely of R.A. Chapters, and Companions of the highest grade conferred in such bodies. We have no objection at all to the Mark Masters of England being recognised and fraternised with by the Mark Masters of America; on the contrary, we should rejoice at it.

The troublous question is, how is it to be done under the Present American organisation? Desirous of arriving at a solution of the subject, we present our readers with a letter of date, March 6th, from Bro. W. J. Hughan, of Truro, England, who has devoted much time, and successfully, to the study of old Masonic manuscripts and ancient history of the Craft. We should like to have from some of our American Companions suggestions as to meeting in a proper manner the desires of our English brethren.

DEAR BRO. TISDALL, 33°,—

From what I have seen of your able management of the Masonic Department of Pomeroy's Democrat, there will be no need for me to apologise in troubling you with a few remarks relative to the Grand Chapter of Iowa and Grand Mark Lodge of England, about which you wrote February 17th, 1872. The fact that we may differ slightly will not alter your desire to hear the English view of the subject, and I feel sure that you are ready at all times to grant space in your columns to all those who write to elucidate truth.

"To make a long story short, I must say a good deal without stopping to offer proof, but if you will send me a copy of the paper containing this letter of mine, with your editorial notice, and will kindly point out any portion you desire proof for, I will gladly proceed by return post to present it to you and your numerous readers of 'The Mystic Tie.' This will be better than for me to waste time to prove historically what you are already most familiar with.

"The regular Grand Lodge of England, until A.D. 1813, recognised no degrees but the first three, pre-eminently designated the Craft. The 'Ancients,' so called (or the 'Seceders'), however, acknowledged the Royal Arch, as the fourth degree, and made the Grand Lodge virtually the governing body for both departments. The Mark degree was worked by the members of both Grand Lodges, from about 1760, but in no sense was it recognised by either body. Many lodges gave the degree to its members in the Craft meetings, and altogether much irregularity prevailed with respect to the 'Regulations,' until the union of 1813, when the two rival Grand Lodges united, and adopted the R. Arch as the complement of the Master Mason, and expressly declared it a part of the Third degree, and not a fourth.

"The Mark Degree was omitted, and an anomaly was at once apparent, as the Mark degree was entitled to consideration as much as any above the Third.* We have in Great Britain the Mark books of lodges from the sixteenth century, and I have myself copies of many Marks from 1670, when the Tutor of Airth was Master of the Aberdeen Lodge, and several Earls, Clergymen, and doctors were members, and had regularly 'chosen their Marks.'

"Several attempts have since been made to secure recognition of Mark Masonry, both privately and publicly, but with no success to mention. We all must acknowledge the 'United Grand Lodge of England' is bound by its treaty of A.D. 1813, and dare not break any of its clauses; so that I have always opposed recognition, and do so, I think consistently, as the Craft Grand Lodge is bound only to conserve the first three degrees, including the R. Arch.

"Finding there were so many Mark Lodges, as a body without a head, a number of representatives met in London and formed a central authority, and Grand Lodge, A.D. 1856. A successful career has been the experience of this body. It has now some 140 lodges under its banner, several thousands of members, and many of the best workers in England are proud to belong to its ranks. The D. G. Grand Master of England, the Earl of Carnarvon, has been Grand Master of the G. Mark Lodge, Lord Leigh, and others well-known for their Masonic zeal and ability, have also been elected G. Masters, and the majority of the Prov. G. Masters are also Prov. G. Masters in the Craft. The Mark Grand Lodge is recognised by all the Masonic bodies above the Arch in England, who like the Mark, are unrecognised by the G. Lodge of England—viz.: The Grand Conclave of Knights Templars, the General Grand Conclave of the Red Cross of Rome and Constantine, and the Ancient and Accepted Rite of 33°.

"Its certificates are also recognised (and the G. Lodge) by the Grand Chapters of Ireland and Canada. Scotland, however, has so far refused to extend the right hand of fellowship, but there the Mark degree is more regarded by the Craft authorities than the R. Arch, as it is expressly recognised, and permitted to be worked in a Craft Lodge, and R. Arch is not recognised by the G. Lodge. We hope, however, that the G. Chapter of Scotland will soon reciprocate our offers of union, and practice towards England those sublime principles which it exemplifies so well, with respect to its own jurisdiction, to foreign bodies.

"The G. Chapter of Pennsylvania and Iowa have recognised the G. Mark Lodge, and we hope that these acts of good fellowship herald the action of the Grand Chapters of the United States. We are brethren, and should not be cold toward one another. But it has been said, 'we do not object to you as Masons, but we object to you as a Mark G. Lodge, which is an anomaly.' Suppose we grant the Mark Grand Lodge is an anomaly, what then? That does not constitute it either an evil or an irregular body. Why not, it is asked; I answer because the interests of Masonry in England require it, and the history of Masonry allows it. In 1717 the first Grand Lodge was formed in London. Before then no such body existed with a G. Master anywhere in the world, although of course for centuries the 'Annual Assembly' had been held, but no G. Master or G. Wardens, &c., were ever appointed, notwithstanding would-be historians say they were. In or about A.D. 1756 the Grand Lodge of the 'Ancients' was formed, partly (and expressly in fact) to work the R. Arch. In 1817, the United G. Chapter was formed in London, and farther still back, no separate meetings were held to confer the R. Arch, until after the seceders had gained ground. Hence, we see Grand Lodges, Chapters, and G. Chapters, were originally anomalies. What then? Who will say they had not been useful and desirable institutions? But another will say, why should we, and how can we, as G. Chapters in the United States, recognise and exchange representatives with the Mark Grand Lodge, which is an inferior body in point of grade? Must we open a Mark Grand Lodge? I answer, let all the Representatives be Royal Arch Masons, † and entitled to seats in your Grand Chapters, without such representative capacity. Then, the representatives, being otherwise qualified, will simply be as ambassadors from our own body to your G. Chapters, on Mark Masonry, and our Mark Masters when joining your Chapters need not be advanced as Mark Masters afresh. As to forming Mark Grand Lodges in the United States, it is quite out of the question. It is an evil anywhere, if it can be avoided, but as it cannot be avoided in this country, it has proved itself a benefit.

"In the United States you receive Ambassadors from small countries, much inferior to your own in every sense, and why? Is it not because they are authorities with respect to their own habits, wants, manufactures, &c. So with Mark Masonry, receive our representatives on a similar footing, and send us representatives here, and give us a word of encouragement, like noble-hearted brethren, as you have many times proved yourselves.

"With hearty good wishes to you and your Masonic readers.

"Your friend and Brother,"

"WILLIAM JAMES HUGHAN."

*We consider the Mark degree below and not above the Third. It certainly is nothing more than the perfection of the F. C. degree; for without the working tools of what is designated the Mark degree, no Fellow Craft could cut his Mark on the perfect ashlar he prepared by their use, so as to enable him to receive his wages. The Mark is but a section of the Second Degree lopped off, and ought to be restored where it belongs.

† This is the sticking point. If all the representatives are R. A. Masons, they take their seats in our Grand Chapters as such, and not as Mark Masons. If the credentials they bear as representatives emanate from a body of Mark Masons, then can they only come as such, and cannot be received, unless it can be proved that the Grand Mark Lodge of England confers its degrees on R. A. Masons only, having some control over that degree also, as well as of the Mark.

The G. Mark Lodge of England certainly possesses no such power, hence the difficulty of its exchanging representatives with a body of superior grade. As well might a G. Lodge of Entered Apprentices (could there be such a thing) ask of a G. Lodge of Master Masons for an exchange of representatives on an equality.—(ED. POMEROY'S DEMOCRAT, NEW YORK.)

CENTENARY OF THE ROYAL GLOUCESTER LODGE, SOUTHAMPTON.

Bro. John Neat Pocock, the Worshipful Master, and the members of the Royal Gloucester Lodge of Free and Accepted Masons, Southampton, had great honour conferred upon them on Tuesday, the 24th inst. The Most Worshipful, the Grand Master of England, the Marquis of Ripon, accompanied by a goodly number of Past and Present Grand Officers, left London by special train in the morning, and after spending the whole day at Southampton dined there in the evening. It would be difficult to exaggerate the importance of this compliment from a Masonic point of view. Lodges, that is to say voluntary associations of Freemasons who meet and "work" together under the same charter, always endeavour to make much of their Centenary Festival, and that at Southampton has been honoured far beyond its fellows. It is only when a lodge is able to produce proof that it has been in existence for one hundred years, without falling into even temporary abeyance during that period, that its right to celebrate its centenary is admitted by the constituted authorities. Returns from all the lodges in England are preserved at the Freemasons' Hall, London, and if these verify the claims put forward to an unbroken existence of one hundred years, official sanction is given to a centenary festival, after which all members of the lodge holding it are permitted to wear a distinctive badge, emblematical of the antiquity of their particular branch of the Order. Formerly this badge was left in a great measure to the tastes of the brethren composing the different lodges. A design was submitted to and approved of by a central authority; but this last rarely interfered with the expressed wishes of those who were to be henceforth distinguished by the jewel or badge which it was asked to sanction. This rule was changed a few years since. It was well enough when there were but a few lodges which could claim the right of wearing a centenary jewel, to permit the fancy of the brethren to have play, but as time wore on, and a lodge with a hundredth anniversary became less uncommon, it was decided for convenience sake that one form of ornament should be approved by the Grand Master, and the right of wearing that, and that only, should be given at the centenary festivals of the future. The inference is plain. Centenary festivals of one lodge or the other are taking place every year; and as the great revival of Speculative Freemasonry in England, which occurred about and after the middle of the last century, continues to bear fruit, the number of brethren wearing the jewel conferred upon the members of the Royal Gloucester Lodge on Tuesday will become more and more numerous, and the objections to permitting each set of them to wear a distinctive ornament would have increased.

But for the memories it has inspired, and the interest it will rouse throughout the entire Craft in English speaking countries, there has been no such celebration in a private lodge as that of yesterday, since the members of "the Jerusalem" put Brother Charles Hutton Gregory, P.G.D., in the W.M.'s chair for the second time, filled the other chairs and offices of their lodge with Past Masters for the year, and entertained the Prince of Wales, Past Grand Master, the Earl of Carnarvon, Deputy Grand Master, the Duke of Manchester, the Duke of St. Albans, Lord Fife, and a brilliant throng of Grand Officers, past and present. The brethren who were privileged to attend the Jerusalem Lodge on that occasion always speak of it as one of the most successful evenings known in the annals of modern Freemasonry—a centenary festival to be referred to, as marked permanently with a white stone, and a ceremonial and hospitality to be quoted by and to all interested in upholding the best social traditions of the Craft. The Southampton Freemasons may hope to be similarly remembered by their guests of yesterday, and they had one advantage which the engineers, artists, and architects composing the Jerusalem Lodge did not enjoy. The Marquis of Ripon was in the United States when the festival of the latter was held, and though the Earl of Carnarvon spoke with full authority as his deputy, the Grand Masters' presence yesterday was a crowning triumph for the brethren of Hampshire.

If there be any readers so benighted as to regard Freemasonry as a mere amusement, involving little trouble and enforcing few onerous duties, he would do well to consider yesterday's programme as carried out by the Marquis of Ripon and the brethren who are his Grand Officers, or have been Grand Officers under him or his predecessor, the Earl of Zetland.

Let the reader accompany in spirit the party which left Waterloo yesterday at half-past nine a.m., and note the labours they underwent.

First, a railway ride of two hours and a quarter. Upon the arrival of the train at Southampton, the Marquis of Ripon, the Provincial Grand Master of Hampshire, W. W. B. Beach, M.P., and the Grand Officers of England, with whom were now joined the Provincial Grand Officers of Hampshire and the Isle of Wight, were conducted by the Reception Committee of the Corporation of Southampton to the drawing-room of the South Western Hotel. Here the Mayor and Corporation, who promptly fired off a complimentary address, at the Marquis, welcoming him to Southampton.

This important ceremony over, the Mayor invites the illustrious party to lunch with him—an offer which was accepted at once. Immediately after luncheon, and just when some of the weaker spirits might, perhaps, be disposed to regard a cigar in the holiday sunshine without absolute disfavour, stern duty makes another call.

The Masonic guests, with their Grand Master in the place of honour, and accompanied by their host, the Mayor and the Corporation, next proceed to the Deanery, where they find a considerable number of Freemasons of less exalted dignity already assembled and clothed.

Up to this time the London party had appeared as one composed of private gentleman, and without showing so much as an inch of purple ribbon to speak of the glories which were to come. At the Deanery they all "clothe."

It is rarely indeed that the outside world is permitted to gaze upon Freemasons in the paraphernalia of the Order. To wear an apron or collar in public, save under most exceptional circumstances, and by a special dispensation from the Grand Master or his representative, would be a grave Masonic offence, and one certain to be punished if brought before the recognised authorities. The appearance of a Grand Lodge when the ruler of the ruler of the Craft is surrounded by his advisers, all wearing the purple, and supported by the Masters and Wardens of lodges wearing the insignia of their rank, can in consequence be but partially appreciated by the outer world. It is not often, however, that public ceremonial take place in England which are more full of pomp than the procession which made its way on Tuesday from the Southampton Deanery to the Church of St. Mary's. The Marquis of Ripon's state apron, collar, clothing, and jewels as Grand Master, are magnificent; and the rich dark purple of the Grand Officers' dress contrasts bravely with the gold lace and embroidery with which they are plentifully adorned. The chests of many of these distinguished brethren were so covered with handsome jewels that they resembled breast-plates of party-coloured chain armour composed of fine metals and rare stones.

When all were seated the interior of St. Mary's Church recalled a mediæval celebration, and when the Special Service, which had been authorised by the Bishop of the diocese, commenced with a hymn, and the congregation stood up, the jingling of ornaments, and the successive waves of varying colour, materially added to the scenic effect. The first verse of the hymn ran as follows:

When the Almighty Architect
Had planned the heavens and earth,
The hosts on high in concert joined,
To sing aloud its birth.

And after some intermediate verses, which contained few allusions or similes which can be called Masonic, it concluded thus:

Great Master Builder, prais'd be thou,
The God whom we adore;
Be glory as it was, is now,
And shall be evermore. Amen.

The lessons were from the 1st Kings, 28th to 33rd verses inclusive; the 1st St. Peter ii., 11th to 17th verses inclusive; and the 133rd Psalm; and the prayers of this special service included some of the most expressive in our ritual. The anthem was from 12th Isaiah, 6th verse. The prayer offered before the sermon, which was preached by the Rev. J. S. Brownrigg, M.A., one of the Grand Chaplains of England, ran as follows:

"O Almighty God, Great and Grand Architect of the universe, at whose word the Pillars of the Sky were raised, and its beauteous arches formed; we are assembled in thy great name to acknowledge thy power, thy wisdom, and thy goodness, and to implore thy blessing.

Endue us with a competence of Thy Most Holy Spirit, that we may be enabled to trace Thee out in all Thy wonderful works, that Thy praise may resound with the fervent love of Thy creatures from pole to pole, grant this O God. Amen."

There was an extremely brief interval between the conclusion of the service and the hour fixed for the opening of the lodge at the Philharmonic-hall. Upon the proceedings which took place within that sacred arcana it is, of course, necessary to draw a veil; but this may be safely assumed—both the Grand Master and the Grand Officers were kept "at attention" during the whole time the lodge was open. There was again but a brief interval between the conclusion of the ceremonies and the commencement of the banquet, which was given at the Royal Victoria Rooms, at which ladies were present, and where the after-dinner speaking was far above the average of that which the English public are unhappily familiar. The present Deputy Grand Master of Hampshire, Bro. J. R. Stebbing, was celebrated among Freemasons as an effective orator, long before "the purple" was conferred upon him, and when he was an able leader of "the Grand Master's (Lord Zetland's) opposition." Quieter times have come, but the speech of more than one of the Grand Officers on Tuesday showed that the Craft fully maintains its reputation for eloquence, and that its boast that some of the best speakers on social subjects in England are to be found in its ranks is by no means without foundation in fact.

At 10.30 p.m. the Grand Master and his Grand Officers left by special train for London, where the Marquis of Ripon, after attending the Cabinet Council, will preside at the Grand Festival to be held in Freemasons' Hall.

The following was the Mayor's address to the Marquis of Ripon;—My Lord, "The Corporation have unanimously agreed to present your lordship with an address congratulating you on your high position in connection with the Masonic brethren, and in recognition of your valuable public services to your country. Although not a Mason, I have had great pleasure, both in my personal as well as in my social position as chief magistrate, in hearing of the great good done in a charitable point of view, in the way of educating the orphans of your Fraternity, and the benefit derived by decayed Masons. Under these circumstances it is a great pleasure to me, and a great gratification, to receive your lordship, and to take part, as far as I can do, in this centenary festival. Southampton's hospitality is well-known, and given at all times to every illustrious personage who visits our shores, but in no case can it be more highly gratifying than to receive your lordship this day. Your services entitle you to every acknowledgement from the citizens of Southampton. It would, however, be presumption on my part to allude to any of your eminent services in particular, and I have only to express a hope that England may long continue to be on friendly terms with all the world, and that your lordship after the agreeable meeting of to-day, may return to London impressed with the usefulness of the day's proceedings. Allow me to introduce to your lordship the Worshipful Master of the Royal Gloucester Lodge (Mr. Pocock), a member of the Corporation, and a gentleman esteemed by his fellow townsmen." (Cheers.)

Mr. Pearce, the Town Clerk, then read the following address to his lordship:—

"To the Most Hon. the Marquis of Ripon K.G., Lord President of Her Majesty's Council, &c.—"May it please your Lordship,—We, the Mayor, Aldermen, and Burgesses of the Borough of Southampton in Council assembled, beg leave to offer to your Lordship a hearty welcome on your visit to the town, for the purpose of taking part in the celebration of an event connected with our local history, and of much interest to a large number of the inhabitants, who are members of the Masonic Institution. The valuable public service which your Lordship has rendered to your country during the past twenty years, the distinguished position which you occupy in the councils of our gracious and much beloved Queen, and the valuable assistance which you have ever given to the cause of education and our most useful and benevolent institutions, entitle you to the respect and gratitude of your countrymen of all ranks and parties. We trust that your visit to Southampton will be in every respect agreeable to your Lordship, that you will have reason to be gratified with your reception by the members of the Ancient Order over which you so worthily preside, and we earnestly pray that your life may long be spared to enable you to realise to a still greater extent the noble objects you have always had in view—the promotion of the happiness and prosperity of the people of England, and of peace and unity among the different nations of the earth."

The Marquis of Ripon said—Mr. Mayor and gentlemen, allow me to express to you sincerely, and to thank you most cordially for, the honour you have done me by your reception upon this occasion—and I can assure you that I appreciate highly the honour I have received in this ancient and distinguished borough—and also for your appreciation of the Order of Freemasonry, over which I have the honour to preside. I thank you, sir, for the manner in which you have spoken of Freemasonry, for anything contrary to it would be at variance with the principles of our order; and from experience of various lodges, I can say that I have always found them good citizens, good neighbours, and loyal and devoted subjects of our Sovereign; and I hope and trust that these principles will ever be found amongst those who belong to the order of Freemasonry. I heard with pleasure the allusion you, sir, were pleased to make with regard to the subject of education, in which I feel a deep interest, and I can say that it is an interest I have always felt, from the first moment when I took part in public affairs, for I consider that a sound education throughout the country is of the greatest national importance. As a member of the Government charged with this question, they believed that it was their duty not to cast aside any of the means which exist for their object, or reject any voluntary aid which may be offered, but to gather in all, and so be enabled to effect one great system of national education. In conclusion, I may say that I shall carry back the most grateful feelings for the kindness you have shown me. The noble Marquis then resumed his seat amidst loud cheering.

At a banquet in the evening, when upwards of two hundred were present, the Marquis of Ripon, in responding to the toast of his health, spoke of the influence of Masonry on Provincial lodges and their spirit, and said this centenary afforded an exceptional opportunity to one like himself of testifying his sympathy with Masonry in the South as well as the North of England, where he was better known. The recognition by the Mayor and Corporation of his visit, he interpreted as their sense of the respect to which they thought the event was entitled. They were much mistaken who supposed the principal objects of the Craft to be gold and purple clothing, or that their main interests were centred in banquets; for without presuming to place it too high, or to the detriment of other institutions, he claimed the honour of its being one of those institutions which if rightly used made men better servants of their Queen and more devoted to their God.—Daily News.

"More than a year ago one of my children was attacked with bronchitis, and, after a long illness, was given up by all physicians as 'past cure.' I was then induced to try your Vegetable Pain Killer, and from the time I began the use of it the child rapidly got better, and it is now strong and healthy.—JOHN WINSTANLEY, 10, Whittle-st., L'pool, 1869.—To P. D. & Son."

Multum in Parvo, or Masonic Notes and Queries.

MASONIC NOTES AND EXCERPTA.

By Bro. A. F. A. WOODFORD, P.G.C.

The following MS. collection of Bye-Laws of 1731, is made still more so by the names of the brethren attached to them.

Orders, Rules, and Ordinances. To be observed and kept by the Lodge of Free & Accepted Masons, held at ye House of Brother Francis Papworth, known by ye signe of the Three Tuns, in West Smithfield, London. Began on Thursday, Decr. 2d., 1731. Continued on the 15th, and Constituted the 17th.

The Rt. Honble. Lord Lovel, Grand Master.
Thomas Batson, Esq., D.G.M.
George Douglass, M.D. } Grand Wardens.
James Chambers, Esq. }

Impr.—That a Lodge be held every first and third Wednesday in the Month, the Brothers to meet at the Hour of Six in the Evening from Michaelmas to Lady Day, and at the Hour of Seven from Lady Day to Michaelmas, and that no Brother presume to call for Wine, &c., until the Master of the Lodge, or, his Deputy assume the Chair.

2nd.

That no Brother (Member or Visitor), Do enter ye Lodge Room Disguised in liquor, or behave indecently towards the Master, Wardens, or any Brethren in the Lodge, on pain to be admonished by the Master for the first offence; and if after being twice admonished, he or they do not mend, or return to his or their Duty, the Master for the time being, is hereby empowered and Authorized to dismiss and exclude any such Member or Members from belonging to ye said Lodge, & Entirely deprive him of any benefit or privilege therein.

3rd.

That every Brother who is, or shall become a Member of this Lodge, shall pay Twelve Shillings on ye first Lodge night of the ensuing Half Year, into the Hands of the Master for the time being, towards the necessary Expenses of the Lodge for Wine, &c. And also to Contribute to all and every other just Expenses of the Lodge, so long as he or they shall Continue members thereof.

4th.

That no Person be Suffered, or admitted to be made a Free and Accepted Mason in this Lodge; or if a Mason to be a Member thereof; unless well known to one Member, or more, to be a Man of Virtuous Principles, and known Integrity, and not a bond Man, but Such as by their own Consent are desirous to become a Brother (it being Contrary to our Established Constitutions to persuade or Engage any Person thereto.) And it is hereby recommended to every Good Mason, and particularly to the Brethren of this Lodge, that they be Careful who they recommend to be made Masons that they may not bring any Scandal or Disreputation on the Craft.

5th.

That all & every Person or Persons recommended as above be first proposed in a regular Lodge, & Ballotted for the next Succeeding Lodge night by ye Brors. then present, and if accepted by Ballot then to be Registered in the Book kept for yt purpose; but if (on Ballotting) two Negatives doth appear, ye Person so Ballotted for shall be Dismiss'd & not accepted as a Brother or Member of this Lodge.

6th.

That all & every Person, or Persons recommended & accepted as above, shall pay for his or their making the Sum of Three pounds three Shillings, And for their admittance the Sum of five Shillings, and every Brother who shall pass the Degrees of F.C. & M. shall pay the further sum of Seven Shillings and Six pence, and every regular Brother who desire to become a Member of this Lodge, shall pay the Sum of One pound One Shilling on his being so admitted; and both new made Brethren and admitted Members shall be subject to all & every of these Rules, &c, and to any other By-Laws that shall be made by the Majority of the Brethren of this Lodge, for the better Regulation of the same.

7th.

That A Master & two Wardens be Chosen once in half a Year, Vizt., on the next Succeeding Lodge Night after Christmas & Midsummer, & that Especial Care be taken that the Brother who is Chosen Master be Rt. Worthy & Capable of Exercising & Discharging that High Office, and that it shall be in the power of the Master only, to Nominate & Chuse his Wardens.

8th.

That the Master shall be Chosen by Ballott, & that no Brother be put up for Master or Warden unless he hath serv'd One of those Offices in A regular Lodge, or have been an Accepted Member of a Lodge Six months, to the end that the Brother Chosen as above may be duly Qualified according to the Strict Rules of Masonry.

9th.

That ye Master Wardens & ye Brethren of this Lodge do Consult the Good and Benefit of this Lodge whilst in ye lodge before any private Interest, & if any Brother thereof hath any matter or thing to propose for ye good of Masonry in General or for ye Benefit of this Lodge in particular, that then he apply himself to the Master, who shall proclaim silence so that Brothers proposing may be heard & understood, & if agreed to & comply'd with, ye Secretary shall Minute it Down in ye Lodge Book.

10th.

That all Presents made to the Lodge shall be entred in ye Lodge Book with the Brother's name who gave it, in token of his or their Esteem of Masonry in General & of his Love to this Lodge in particular, & also that ye Master for the time being or his Secretary for him, take care to engross the same accordingly.

11th.

That it shall be in ye power of the Master by ye Consent of his Wardens, & the Brethren at any time present, or by a Majority of the Brethren present to make any Such other by-laws as for ye better regulating the Lodge or the affairs thereof shall seem most necessary and convenient.

12th.

That these Orders Rules &c. after having been read & agreed to by ye Master and Wardens, & Brethren of this Lodge be fairly Transcribed in the Lodge Book for any of the Brethren to peruse any time in Lodge Hours, & that they be subscribed by all & every of the Members of this Lodge; & that they be read to, and Subscribed by every new made Brother or admitted member of this Lodge, to ye end that no Brother may be unacquainted therewith.

13th.

That if any Brother or member of this Lodge do propose any Gentleman to be made a Free & Accepted Mason therein & ye said Gentleman do afterwards Decline and refuse to be so made, then that Brother who did propose any such gentleman shall pay the same sum of money to ye Master of ye Lodge (for the use of ye Lodge) as was to have been paid by ye gentleman so refusing to be made to the Intent that ye Lodge be not Impos'd on or ye Master put to any Extraordinary Trouble or Expence.

Amen So Mote it be.

January 5th 1731.

Memorandum,

These Orders were Accepted to by the Master, Wardens, & Brethren of this Lodge & Subscribed by ye Members present, & Order'd to be Ingressed.

January 5th, 1731. Subscribed By

- Edward Haines, Mr.
- Edwd. Elliot, } Wardens.
- Jno. Bristow, }
- Jos. Howard.
- Thos. Stagg.
- John Field.
- Patt. Routh.
- Richard Flatter.
- Zach. Cave.
- Jno. Grasing.
- E. Kneesha.
- W. Evans.
- Danl. Delvalle.
- John Bradley.
- John Cromptor.
- Fra. Papworth.

Original Correspondence.

ORATION BY BRO. REV. J. HALFORD.

(To the Editor of the Freemason.)

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—

Allow me to take the earliest opportunity of adding my testimony to the many who will congratulate the worthy Prov. Grand Chaplain of Leicestershire, on delivering so excellent a "Consecrating Oration."

I have not the pleasure of our Rev. Brother's acquaintance, so I must thank him for his model Masonic Oration, through the organ of the British Craft.

I do so most sincerely, because it appears to me that a more suitable and appropriate discourse on Freemasonry has not been delivered for a long time, and if we as Masons take rightly to heart, the suggestions and recommendations of the oration, we shall certainly learn all the better "to subdue our passions, and make further progress in Masonry," as our "lectures" informs us we should.

W. JAMES HUGHAN.

P.S. The members of the "Commercial Lodge" would do well to insert the excellent Oration as a preface to their By-laws.

(To the Editor of the Freemason.)

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—

Herewith I send you an extract from a letter written under date 19th April, 1872, by a Lancashire brother Mason who has recently been called to Scotland by his professional employment.

He says, If I am to continue a practical Mason I must join some good lodge, and I write to ask if you can by any possibility obtain letters of introduction whereby my entrance into a good Masonic society may be facilitated. I say good Masonic society, because, I have already found average Masonry in Scotland to be a farce. It is made a trade of in many lodges. This is easily explainable by reason of the low entrance fees, and the absence of subscriptions. Lodges have to get as many new members as they can, in order to meet their working expenses. The consequence is that any ruffian stands a chance of initiation into the mystic art.

I want to avoid this class, and knowing your love of Masonry, and your acquaintance with so many brethren, I ask you, for the sake of the art to do me the favour, if it be in your power.

Dear Sir, I have no intention or desire, if I had time, to interfere in the affairs of, or try to remedy the evils in, our Brothers' system of working Masonry across the Tweed, and therefore content myself by sending you the extract, and asking, can it be true in a country that lays claim to such an ancient ancestry in Masonry, the brethren can be so lost to the true principles of the Craft or the Masonic usages or method of working out the principles of the order.

For the sake of ventilating this matter, and in the hope that some brother will give your readers some account of the working in Scotland, I shall be glad if you will publish this in your next.

I am,

A SUBSCRIBER.

Masonic Tidings.

BRITISH, FOREIGN, AND COLONIAL.

The Committee of the Masonic Ball, held at Rochdale on the 27th December last, on behalf of the "Royal Masonic Institution for Boys," report that the sum of forty guineas was realised on the occasion, and the Committee feel that but for the unfortunate illness of His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales, which affected the whole country, and the death of General the Hon. Sir J. Yorke-Scarlett, K.C.B. which had its effect on this neighbourhood in particular, the proceeds would have been much larger; they however, are thankful for the result, and for the patronage bestowed, and look forward to the Ball becoming a great annual event on behalf of the charities.

NOTICE.

The Subscription to THE FREEMASON is now 10s. per annum, post-free, payable in advance.

Vol. I., bound in cloth	4s.	6d.
Vol. II., ditto	7s.	6d.
Vol. III., ditto	15s.	0d.
Vol. IV., ditto	15s.	0d.
Reading Cases to hold 52 numbers ...	2s.	6d.

United States of America.

THE FREEMASON is delivered free in any part of the United States for 12s. per annum, payable in advance.

NOTICE TO SUBSCRIBERS.

The Office of THE FREEMASON is now transferred to 198, FLEET-STREET, E.C. All communications for the Editor or Publisher should therefore be forwarded to that address.

Answers to Correspondents.

All communications for The Freemason should be written legibly on one side of the paper only, and, if intended for insertion in the current number, must be received not later than 10 o'clock a.m. on Thursdays, unless in very special cases. The name and address of every writer must be sent to us in confidence.

A SUBSCRIBER.—Received to late for that number.
The following Communications will appear next week:—
Reports of Provincial Grand Conclave of Bengal; Calpe Encampment, Gibraltar; Provincial Grand Chapter of Middlesex; Lodge No. 699.

Births, Marriages and Deaths.

DEATHS.

SAMBROKE, W.—On the 18th inst., at his residence, High Holborn, Bro. Thos. Sambroke, aged 54, of the Egyptian Lodge, No. 27.
MESCOE, W.—At Heywood, Lancashire, on the 12th inst., Bro. Wm. Mescoe, I.P.M. of Naphthala Lodge, No. 166.
CLAYTON, T. J.—At Omaha, Nebraska, U.S., Bro. T. J. Clayton, of Kilwinning Lodge, Montreal.

The Freemason,

SATURDAY, APRIL 27, 1872.

The Freemason is published on Saturday Mornings in time for the early trains.
The price of the Freemason is Twopence per week; annual subscription, 10s. (payable in advance.)
All communications, letters, &c., to be addressed to the Editor, 198, Fleet-street, E.C.
The Editor will pay careful attention to all MSS. entrusted to him, but cannot undertake to return them unless accompanied by postage stamps.

GRAND FESTIVAL.

The annual Grand Lodge for the installation of Grand Master, and the appointment and investment of officers, was held on Wednesday last, at Freemasons' Hall. The Grand Master, the Marquis of Ripon, K.G., presided, and was supported by a large number of the brethren and his Grand Officers. Among those who attended we observed:—

Bro. John Huyshe, Prov. G.M. Devonshire; Lord Lindsay, G.S.W.; Col. Whitwell, M.P., G.J.W.; the Persian Ambassador; A. McIntyre, G.R.; S. Tomkins, G.T.; John Hervey, G.S.; Wilhelm Ganz, G. Org.; Rev. J. S. Brownrigg, G.C.; Sir Albert W. Woods, Garter, G.D.C.; Dr. Moore, G.S.B.; J. C. Parkinson, P.M. 181; Raynham W. Stewart, G.J.W.; J. Cooper Foster; Ll. Evans, Pres. Bd. of General Purposes; W. Locock Webb, Rev. Sir J. Warren Hayes, Col. Cole, C. Hutton Gregory, Benj. Head, H. Browse, Geo. Cox, Major Creaton, R. J. Spiers, James Mason, John Symonds, Joshua Nunn, W. Ough, Joseph Smith, Brackstone Baker,

John Savage, W. Famfield, James Terry, H. G. Buss, besides many Provincial brethren and the Masters, Past Masters, and Wardens of numerous London private lodges.

Grand Lodge having been formally opened, the Grand Secretary, by direction of the Grand Master, read the minutes of last Grand Lodge, as far as related to the election of Grand Master, and the Grand Master was then proclaimed by Sir Albert Woods, Garter, and saluted according to ancient custom.

The Grand Master thereupon appointed the Earl of Carnarvon, Deputy Grand Master, and apologised for his absence, which was occasioned by his ill health. The customary salute having been given, the following officers were invested for the year:

- Lord Tenterden S.G.W.
- Capt. John C. W. Vivian... J.G.W.
- Rev. J. S. Brownrigg } Grand Chaplains.
- Rev. A. Bruce Fraser }
- Samuel Tomkins Grand Treasurer.
- John Hervey Grand Secretary.
- Emil E. Wendt } G. Sec. for German
- John B. Monkton } Correspondence.
- John P. Bell } G.S. Deacons.
- Charles A. Murton } G.J. Deacons.
- John Dumas }
- Frederick P. Cockerell G. Supt. of Works.
- Sir Albert W. Woods (Garter) G. Dir. of Cer.
- Thos. Coombs Asst. G. D. of Cer.
- Alex. J. Duff Filer G. Swd. Bearer.
- Wilhelm Ganz G. Organist.
- John Boyd G. Pursuivant.
- Chas. A. Cottebrune Asst. G. Pur.
- Charles B. Payne G.T.

The following brethren were invested as Grand Stewards:—Bros. W. H. Wilkie, No. 1; C. A. Swinburne, No. 2; E. K. King, No. 4; F. Morgan, No. 5; Lord Cremorne, No. 6; F. Smith, No. 21; J. Brandon, No. 23; Thos. S. Soden, No. 26; E. M. Haig, No. 29; F. H. Root, No. 56; G. F. Finch, No. 58; T. Young, No. 60; H. Radcliffe, No. 91; G. T. Stebbard; No. 99; H. Browning, No. 197; and J. A. Rucker, No. 259.

Grand Lodge was thereupon closed, and the brethren adjourned to banquet.

At the conclusion of the banquet, which was admirably served by Mr. Francatelli, the manager of the Freemasons' Tavern Company, grace "For these and all thy mercies," was well rendered by the vocalists, under the direction of Bro. Wilhelm Ganz, Grand Organist, and the toasts of the evening were proceeded with. In giving "The Queen,"

The Grand Master said: Brethren, the first toast which I rise to give you on this occasion, is, that which is always first drunk in every assembly of Englishmen, and especially at every Masonic gathering. I rise to give you "The Health of Her Majesty the Queen," and if ever there was a time in which that toast is sure to be received with the warmest, and the most heartfelt enthusiasm, that time is the present, when there is still so fresh in our recollection the great trial and anxiety through which, in common with the whole nation, Her Majesty has recently passed. We Freemasons are accustomed to boast, and to boast as I venture to think justly, that we yield to none of Her Majesty's subjects in the deepest and the warmest loyalty, and the reception which this Grand Lodge gave to the address which I had to move upon a recent occasion, is in itself a sufficient proof that we were not behind hand in feeling deeply, and heartily, with Her Majesty the Queen in that sorrow in which the heart of this great people beats, as the heart of one man, with their grieving sovereign. Brethren, I give you "The Health of Her Majesty the Queen."

The toast having been duly honoured and followed by the National Anthem,

The Grand Master, continued—Brethren, I now rise to ask you to drink a toast, which although it is one of those which have in past times been classed as non-Masonic toasts, has for us at the present time, in one aspect, a strictly Masonic character. I ask you to drink "the Health of the Prince and Princess of Wales, and the rest of the Royal Family." We should have felt it, brethren, a great distinction for our order if His Royal Highness had consented to join the Ancient Craft, and to accept office in Grand Lodge, and if we had found that he was only willing to occupy a strictly honorary position in the Craft. The Prince of Wales has shown that it is not in this manner that he understands the duties of a Freemason, and since he joined the Craft, (and especially since he became a member of this Grand Lodge) he has lost no opportunity of proving that his interest in Freemasonry is a real, active, and hearty interest. He has lately become the patron of one of our great Masonic Charities, and has shown himself ever ready to listen, as far as his other engagements rendered possible, to any Masonic call, and he has thereby won for himself a place in the hearts of Freemasons, greater even than that which his eminent qualities and his illustrious position, have won for him in the hearts of all his countrymen. I rejoice to be able to state that His Royal Highness's recovery is progressing favourably, that he is I trust deriving benefit from change of air and scene, and that although it will be wise in him to remember for a considerable time to come, that he has but recently risen from such a period of suffering and of weakness, as that through which he has passed, yet we may venture to hope that with proper care and reasonable abstinence from public duties he may ere long be found once more fully able to discharge all the duties of his high position. Brethren, I give you "the Health of His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales, the Princess of Wales and the rest of the Royal Family."

This toast, like its predecessor, was enthusiastically received.

The Rev. John Huyshe, Prov. G. Master, Devon: Brethren, it must be a matter of sincere regret, I have no doubt to all of you here present, as well as it has been to myself, to hear of the indisposition of my right worshipful brother, the Lord Carnarvon, the Deputy Grand Master of England, preventing him from being present on this occasion, when he would have occupied the position I have the honour now to hold, and when, no doubt, he would have proposed that health, which it now falls to me to lay before you, with far greater eloquence than I can, though I will not say with greater zeal, greater fervency, or greater love. In looking at the list of toasts, I find that I am to propose "The Health of the Most Worshipful the Grand Master of England." My brethren, we do not want new Grand Masters; we have one who lives in the hearts of all his brethren. We do not want to have another, as long as it will please him to occupy the high position in which we, by our unanimous votes, have this day placed him again. It is a very great thing for us as Freemasons—it is a great thing for the benefit of our Order—that we should have a nobleman holding the high and honourable position which he does, occupied as he is with many onerous official duties, nevertheless coming to these, which are to us the most important of all duties, and presiding here, and in Grand Lodge, as our Most Worshipful Grand Master. It may not be known to many, though it is no doubt to some here, that our Most Worshipful Grand Master was absent on Tuesday at Southampton. He started I believe, at 9 o'clock on Tuesday morning, was engaged the whole of the day in very onerous duties there in Freemasonry, and came back again to this city at one o'clock this morning. He then appeared in Grand Lodge, after going through his daily official duties, and has come to preside over us. I need not say more than assure you that it is my opinion, and I am sure it must be the opinion of all of you, that any brother who performs the duties he performs in the same distinguished way he always does, deserves that love, honour, and esteem, which, it is my firm belief, he gains from you, and every Mason in the kingdom. (Applause.) I will not detain you longer, but I shall simply implore you to rise and drink with all your heart, "The Health of the Right Worshipful the Grand Master."

The toast was received with every demonstration of gratification.

The Grand Master: Brethren, I beg to thank you for the manner in which you have received the toast which has just been proposed to you by my right worshipful friend on my right. I can assure you that it affords me great satisfaction to be present at this Grand Festival, when I recollect that I have been unable, since my election to the high office which by your choice I have now the honour to fill, to attend as I should have wished, upon this annual occasion. But you are aware, brethren, of the various circumstances which have prevented me from being here, and I am well aware, by the many proofs that I have received, that you have been pleased to pardon my unavoidable absence. Now, I rejoice to be able to congratulate you, to-night, upon the flourishing condition of Masonry in this country. When, two years ago, I received at your hands the high office that I have entered upon again to-day for a third period, I had the good fortune to succeed to one who, through a long Masonic reign, had raised the Craft to the highest state of efficiency and prosperity, and who could look back upon the quarter of a century during which he had ruled over the Masons of England, and feel that that lengthened period had been one of ever-increasing progress of Masonry in this country, and that he resigned the chief position in the Craft at a time when Masonry had attained to a position in this land unknown before. Brethren, I could not hope to do more than feebly to tread in the steps of my distinguished predecessor; but I am glad to be able to point, as I think, to satisfactory proofs that during the last two years the Craft has not gone back in its position in this country or in the estimation of our fellow-countrymen, but that that progress which was commenced before has since been steadily maintained. (Hear, hear.) Brethren, I find that during the last two years there have been added to the Craft no less a number than eighty-eight lodges. Now, I do not mean to say that the real prosperity of the Craft is to be measured by the number of new lodges which are added to it every year. (Hear, hear.) The prosperity of the Craft to be worth anything must be a real and sound prosperity. The new lodges and new members are of no value if they be not good lodges and good Freemasons. It is not numbers, it is character, which makes the strength of the Craft, and therefore it is only because I have the utmost confidence that a judicious control over the increase of lodges has been exercised by my right worshipful friends the Provincial Grand Masters throughout the country, as I, so far as falls to my province, have endeavoured constantly to exercise it myself—it is only because I have that conviction that I point with satisfaction to the fact that not far short of 100 lodges have been added to our Masonic roll in the course of so short a period. My right worshipful friend, who proposed this toast in terms so flattering to me, made allusion to the fact that I was engaged yesterday in a visit to the important town of Southampton. I rejoice to be able to tell you, brethren, that I found there the most satisfactory proofs of the sound and flourishing condition of Masonry in the important province of Hampshire and the Isle of Wight, so ably presided over as that province is by my Right Worshipful friend, Bro. Beach, on my right. Now, I doubt not that the majority of those whom I address, to-night are connected with London lodges, yet I am sure that none of you will differ from me when I say that the Craft could not flourish, could not hold the position that it does in public estimation, if it were not that its condition was most prosperous and sound, in all the various provinces of the country; and I rejoice to find that in the south of England, of which hitherto I have personally known little, Masonry was no less successfully cultivated than in those more northern parts, with which I am more immediately connected. Therefore, brethren, I feel myself, to-night, in a position in which I am able heartily to congratulate you upon the condition of the Craft at the present time. I trust that you will all feel with me that the existence of that condition of prosperity, while it affords us doubtless a subject of congratulation, imposes upon us also fresh duties. The wider we spread, the more numerous are our lodges, the greater is the strength of our members, the more it behoves every one of us to see that we uphold in the eyes of our neighbours the reputation of this ancient fraternity. If I, brethren, can do anything, in the position to which you have again called me, to promote that important end, it will be to me a subject of the heartiest satisfaction. I am well aware how much other occupations necessarily engross my time, and take away perhaps from that which I ought to devote to the interests of the Craft, but this at least I can truly say, that so long as I feel that I can discharge the duties of this office; and so long as it may please you to call me to it, I shall devote myself to those duties with the utmost zeal. I shall not continue to hold this great position one hour after the time that I find that, from any circumstances, I am conscious that I am unable to devote to it as much of my time and attention as I am bound to give. Brethren, I heartily thank you for the honour that you have done me. And now, brethren, I beg to ask you to drink a toast which I am confident you will receive with hearty enthusiasm, when I tell you that it refer to two persons so eminent as H. R. H. the Prince of Wales, and our Bro. the Earl of Zetland. I ask you to drink "the Health of the Past Grand Masters of England." I have spoken to you already of the Prince of Wales's interest in Masonic matters, and of his zeal for the Craft. It is almost impertinent that I should say anything in recommendation of the Masonic career of my noble brother Lord Zetland. You who accorded to him for so lengthened a period your confidence, are the best judges of the spirit in which he acted, and I know well that those addresses which you voted to him with so much unanimity, when he quitted the throne of the Craft, were no temporary expressions of the feeling of the moment, but that they embodied the deep and heartfelt gratitude of every true Mason for one who, during the whole of his Masonic career, had at heart, and deeply at heart, the best interests of the Craft. I rejoice to be able to tell you that I have good accounts at the present time of the state of our noble brother's health. I trust that he is now better than he was during the year which has passed away, and I am sure that you will all unite with me in an humble prayer to the Great Architect of the Universe, that his valuable life may long be spared to us. (Hear, hear.) I give you "the Health of the Past Grand Masters of England."

The toast having been drunk,

The Grand Master said: I rise now to ask you to drink "The Health of the Deputy Grand Master, and the rest of the Grand Officers." I regret extremely the absence on this occasion of our right Worshipful Bro. the Earl of Carnarvon. Many of you, doubtless, are aware that he has, during the past spring, been suffering from illness; but I am glad to tell you, having seen him a few days ago, that I find he is now far on his way towards recovery. At the same time, it is necessary, to secure and complete that recovery, that he should abstain from taking part in public proceedings. Consequently, he is unable to come here to-night, which otherwise I know well would have given him the greatest pleasure. I have then to couple with this toast the health of my noble friend and Bro. the Senior Warden, Lord Tenterden. My noble brother has now for a lengthened period devoted himself zealously to the duties of the lodge to which he belongs, and I believe that I am correct when I say that he has held office in that lodge for no less a period than fifteen years. Now, when you recollect that gentlemen connected with the Foreign office in this country, have not, in these modern times, enjoyed a sinecure, you will, perhaps, understand what is the zeal for Masonry which must have prompted our brother to have devoted so much of his time as is implied in the zealous fulfilment of Masonic offices for a period of fifteen years. Well, now I think that is about as good a recommendation as can be given to any brother in the Craft—three times Master of his Lodge, an officer for the period I have named. I am confident that you will to-night give to him, and to the rest of the Grand Officers, that cordial reception which you have always given to the officers of this Grand Lodge at Grand Festival.

Lord Tenterden in reply, said: No one can regret more than I do the absence of the able and practised orator, who would, had his health permitted, have returned thanks for the toast which has just been proposed. I am sure it must be a satisfaction to you all, as it is a satisfaction to us, the Grand Officers, who are his colleagues, to hear from our Most Worshipful Grand Master that the Earl of Carnarvon's health is progressing rapidly to recovery. (Hear, hear.) Our Most Worshipful Grand Master has just said, speaking of myself, that which is eminently true of himself, and eminently true of my hon friend, the Junior Grand Warden, this evening, that very few of us can enjoy those charms of leisure which we have just heard so sweetly sung. (Mendelssohn's glee, "Oh hills, oh vales of pleasure," had just been sung). We have most of us duties to perform. I believe there is scarcely a Grand Officer who is coming up with me this evening who is not a busy man, one way or the other. We have many anxious duties, but we think we have a paramount duty to our Craft. Why are we here, and why are you here this evening, and why are we celebrating this great annual Festival of our Fraternity. It is not, I am sure, because we wish to to enjoy together the passing pleasures of the banquet—to be knife-and-fork Masons—it is not merely for the sake of keeping up, however well they may be organised, certain excellent charities; it is because we feel—I feel, and I am sure all those around me feel—that Freemasonry is something more than a mere name; it is something more than being addressed by splendid titles, and being dressed in a gorgeous uniform; it is what we, in these happy days, scarcely appreciate. We live now, thank God! in a country which enjoys the greatest blessings of civil and religious liberty; but it was not always so; it is not so now, unhappily, throughout the whole world; and I say, that it is something for our Institution to be able to boast that in past centuries, and at this present time it affords a neutral ground, in which polemics and politics can be forgotten, in which the east and west can shake the hand of friendship. Brethren, it is that which has induced me for many years to take an active participation in the working of the Craft, and that not merely in attendance at the meetings, but an anxious wish to keep up and preserve the most interesting and imposing ritual of our Order. It is that which is the real strength and backbone of Freemasonry; it is for that which we rejoice this evening. We have heard from our Most Worshipful Grand Master how Freemasonry is thriving in England. I am happy to say it is everywhere so. On the other side of the Atlantic, indeed, there is scarcely a country in which it is not thriving, whether on the Continent of Europe, or in the East. We have had this evening, though he is not here now, the Representative of the far distant Empire of Persia, and it may be interesting to some of you to know that I believe I had the honour of receiving and initiating his predecessor in the lodge to which I had the pleasure of belonging. I will not detain you further. I think I have given, what at all events to us appears, and I trust to the world, will be considered a sufficient reason why we meet here this evening. We see the Craft prosperous in Scotland; it is the same in Canada, in Australia. I can tell you from my own personal experience, it is the same in all foreign countries. We see the same increasing prosperity of the Craft throughout the world, and it is because we feel that there is one institution, permeating throughout the whole world, in which we can meet on the level, and part on the square.

The Grand Master: I rise now to ask you to drink to "The Health of the sister Grand Lodges of Scotland and Ireland." Brotherly Love is one of the first principles of Masonry, and it is right, indeed, that we should hold out the hand of fellowship to the Grand Lodges of the other portions of the United Kingdom. We are today honoured by the presence of the Right Worshipful the Provincial Grand Master of East Aberdeenshire. I rejoice to think that a brother holding high office in so distant a part of the country, should have done us the honour to come amongst us on this occasion. I am sure that I rightly interpret your feelings, when I heartily wish him a welcome to this Grand Lodge. I am confident you all feel that the closer we can draw those bonds of fraternity which should unite us to the Grand Lodges of Scotland and Ireland the better for the interests of the Craft; and I ask you, therefore, the representatives of English Masonry, heartily to greet the Provincial Grand Master of East Aberdeenshire.

The Grand Master for East Aberdeenshire: It is extremely gratifying for one of a sister Grand Lodge to hear the very kind and fraternal terms in which you have expressed your feelings, to the Grand Lodges of Scotland and Ireland. I suppose I may say Ireland, as I see no other representative of a sister Grand Lodge. I can assure you all, the fraternal feeling, affection, and regard which you extend toward towards us is reciprocated by the Grand Lodge of Scotland, and I am sure it is by the Grand Lodge of Ireland. It is extremely gratifying to me to come here to-night, and receive the very fraternal greeting with which you have honoured me. At all times it is our wish and endeavour to extend that friendship and fellowship, which has always been extended by Freemasons to Freemasons. I thank you most sincerely for the very kind way in which you have expressed yourself, Most Worshipful Grand Master.

The Grand Master: I now ask you to join with me in drinking "The Health of the Provincial Grand Masters of England." I am indeed happy to propose that toast, because I should be ungrateful if I did not avail myself of the opportunity which it afford me to return my sincere thanks to the Prov. Grand Masters, throughout the country, for the zealous and effectual assistance which they afford to me in the government of the Craft. As I said a short time ago, the prosperity of Masonry is only to be measured by its general prosperity throughout the country, and that prosperity depends not so much upon central action as upon the prevalence in each locality of a truly Masonic spirit. That spirit is nourished in the first place, by those foundation stones of our Masonic building, the private lodges, and it is cemented and bound together by the influence of the Provincial Grand Lodges, and by those who preside over the brethren. I ask you to drink to "The Health of Prov. Grand Masters of England," and I couple with it the name of my right worshipful friend upon my left, Bro. Beach, the Prov. Grand Master of Hampshire and the Isle of Wight, to whom I am bound to-night, in the presence of this Grand Lodge, to return my most sincere and heartfelt thanks for the very warm and hearty reception which he afforded to myself and other members of Grand Lodge on Tuesday at our visit to Southampton.

Bro. W. W. B. Beach: Accept my warm and earnest thanks for the very kind manner in which you, Most Worshipful Grand Master, have proposed, and you, brethren, have received this toast. I can assure the Grand Master that it is our pride, as it is our duty, to represent him to the extent of our ability in the provinces which he has assigned to us: and probably no Provincial Grand Master has such cause as I have to congratulate himself upon the visit of the Grand Master in person, to encourage Freemasonry in his province, and to animate the Masons by his example, and by his presence. Lodges have increased in the provinces, as the Grand Master has said, but they have increased only because the members of the present lodges have swelled beyond the fair proportions of its numbers, and I feel certain that the brethren who have established and formed the constituent parts of the new lodges are solely impelled by the desire to extend the blessings of Freemasonry (hear, hear). I will only say that it will be our duty to do our best to see that those principles are carried out, and I trust, in conclusion, thanking you most sincerely, that the Grand Master will be encouraged by his reception in the south to think that among the lessons inculcated and practised by the brethren, loyalty to our Masonic chief is not neglected.

The Grand Master:—I am almost afraid that you must by this time be pretty well tired of the sound of my voice ("No, no."), but I am quite sure that you will, at all events, accord to me your approval, when you know that the toast that I am now about to submit to you is "Prosperity to the Masonic Charities." We boast of the support which those great institutions receive from our ancient Craft. No doubt much has been done, especially of late years, to increase the efficiency of those great charitable institutions; but we must all remember this, that the very fact that we are accustomed, when we are talking to those who are not Masons, to point to those Charities as the proof of the value of Freemasonry, imposes upon us an ever-increasing obligation to maintain those Charities in the utmost efficiency. Every such institution in this land is now submitted to searching examination on the part of the public. If we boast of our Charities, we may be sure that the outer world will look occasionally at their real condition, and weigh well the support which they receive at our hands; and it therefore becomes us not merely to toast them upon occasions like this, but to back up the sentiments that we are ever ready to cheer by the substantial support which comes out of our pockets. I know well that you are ready to listen to appeals of that kind, and therefore it is without fear that this toast will prove a happy one, that I ask you to drink "Prosperity to the Masonic Charities." I couple with it the name of Bro. M'Intyre.

Bro. A. E. J. M'Intyre, Q.C.: I assure you it is a very pleasing act to return thanks for the toast which has just been proposed. The Masonic Charities have commended themselves to every brother of our Order, and every one knows that every sixpence that is advanced for the good of the Charities is expended well in the education of the younger members, and for the relief, of suffering old members of the Craft. I do not know why my name has been coupled with this toast, because I have done very little indeed for the advancement of the Charities of our Order. Perhaps it was meant as a hint that I ought to do more. Whether that be so or not I shall take the hint, and I shall do as much as I can; but I am quite certain of this, that there is no exordium, no peoration, and nothing needed to tell the fraternal Order to which we belong, that we are bound to support the Masonic Charities. They have been supported well, they will be supported, and I am quite certain that while we have a Grand Master who gives his great name to the support of our Charities, they will—what has been done before—go on prospering, and that we shall be able to keep up the old name that we have, and that the Masonic Charities shall never be neglected.

The Grand Master then proposed "the Health of the Stewards," to which Bro. Nettleship, responded.

The Grand Master having given the last toast "The Ladies," the party then repaired to the Temple, where a superb concert was given under the direction of Bro. Wilhelm Ganz, Grand Org.; and in which Mdle. Carole, Miss Banks, Miss Alice Fairman, Bros. Geo. Perren, Carl Stepan, Caravoglia, and Miss Nannie E. Praeger, took part. Herr Hugo Heermann performed on the violin.

The arrangements of the evening were perfect, and reflected the greatest credit on the Grand Stewards, of whom the following is a list:—Bros. Wm. Henry Trego, President, 1; Wm. Fras. Nettleship, Treasurer, 14; Edward Lewis, Secretary, 8; George Scharf, F.S.A., 2; W. Fredk. Teevan, 4; Robert Percy Middlemist, 5; Hy. Enderby Paton, 6; Thos. Davies Sewell, 21; Fredk. Chas. Wm. Brandt, 23; Thos. Threlfall, 26; Frederick Clark, 29; William Whitley, 46; Geo. Hy. Ogston, 58; Fras. Kerridge Munton, 60; Lorenz Johannes Frost, 91; Thomas Walls Stephens, 99; Wm. Cunningham Glen, 197; Thomas Dolling Bolton, 259.

Bro. T. H. Edmonds also gave valuable assistance in looking after the comfort of the Visitors.

Mr. Goodchild was an able Toast Master.

REPORTS OF MASONIC MEETINGS.

Craft Masonry.

METROPOLITAN.

MOUNT LEBANON LODGE (No. 73).—On Tuesday, the 16th inst., the final meeting of the season of this prosperous old lodge was held at the Bridge House Hotel, Wellington-street, Southwark. There were present Bros. George Free, W.M.; G. J. Grace, S.W.; A. L. Dussek, J.W.; E. Harris, P.M., Treasurer; S. Harman, S.D.; J. S. Gomme, J.D.; I. J. H. Wilkins, I.G.; C. Raydon, W.S.; F. Walters, P.M.; D. Rose, P.M.; F. H. Ebsworth, P.M.; T. J. Sabine, P.M.; Elliott, Phillips, J. H. Spencer, H. Keeble, R. G. Chipperfield, R. Boyle, H. Stephens, W. Gregory, W. Charlesworth, A. J. Treton, T. S. Hill, Gingham, A. P. Stedman, T. E. Baker, J. Crawley, &c. The minutes of the March meeting were read, and unanimously confirmed. The ballots taken for Messrs. Austin and Eggesfield, were unanimous in favour of their admission. The work, done in an admirable manner, was initiating into Freemasonry, Messrs. Austin and Muskett. Notice of motion was given to revise the by-laws. Other business having been done, the lodge was closed. The visitors were Bros. T. Robinson, P.M., 3, 753; J. Chynoweth, J.W. 4, S.D. 33; R. P. Hooton, P.M., 765; H. Cutress, 1326; M. D. Loewenstark, D.C. 1360; &c. The banquet was served up under the personal superintendance of Bro. J. H. Spencer, who exerted himself in a successful manner to please all. The wines gave universal satisfaction. The usual toasts were given, songs and recitations brought a pleasant evening to an agreeable close. The lodge was adjourned until Tuesday, October 15th.

LANCASHIRE (WEST.)

PRESTON.—Concord Lodge No. 343.—The regular monthly meeting of the above lodge was held on Thursday last at the King's Arms Hotel. The chair was occupied by Bro. Wm. Heaps, W.M., supported and assisted by Bro. James Porter, P.M., P.G.S. Cumberland and Westmoreland; Richard Robinson, P.M., P.G.S.; H. Steib, P.M.; Rev. Jas. Taylor, S.W., and Chaplain; F. P. Poole, J.W.; R. B. Pearson, Sec.; W. Welbourne, S.D.; R. Robinson, J.; J. D. R. Hall, Organist; Jno. Cockshott, I.G.; T. Nevett, W.M., 113; B. Haldon, 314; W. Smith, M.D., P.M. 314; and about thirty brethren belonging to the lodge. The lodge was opened at 6.45, and after the minutes of the previous meeting had been read and confirmed, Bros. Hall and Bradshaw, being candidates for the second degree, were examined, entrusted and retired. The lodge being opened in the second degree they were admitted, and passed to the degree of Fellow Craft by the W.M., in a very praiseworthy manner. Bro. James Porter, P.M., then at the request of the W.M., assumed the chair, when Bros. McVitie, and Byron, being candidates for the third degree, were examined, and entrusted, and having retired, the lodge was opened in the sublime degree. They were again admitted and in a most efficient manner raised to the sublime degree of M.M., Bro. Hall ably officiating at the harmonium. The lodge having been resumed in the second and first degrees respectively, and hearty good wishes having been tendered from several visiting brethren, it was solemnly closed with prayer according to ancient custom at 9.45. The brethren then adjourned to supper, and after the usual loyal and Masonic toasts had been given, and suitably responded to, the happy gathering broke up at 11.15.

The friends and supporters of Frederick Charles Gates, a successful candidate at the late election for admission to the Royal Masonic Institution for Boys, desire to convey their best thanks for the assistance rendered towards effecting the desired result on first application. At the October election it will be necessary to repay a few votes borrowed to secure the above result, and for that purpose proxies will be thankfully received on their behalf by Bro. James Stevens, Clapham Common, S.W.

THE A. P. U. C. AND FREEMASONRY.

We copy the following letter from the Church Times of last week, and cordially endorse the sentiments of the writer.

Sir,—It was with deep regret that I read the brief account in last week's number of the Church Times, respecting the election of Lord Eliot to the Presidency of the A. P. U. C. It appears that some foolish persons objected to his lordship holding that position, because he also belonged to the ancient and honourable order of Freemasons.

By attacking Freemasonry the A. P. U. C. will not advance an inch. Indeed, such a policy will, more effectually, retard its action, for in all the national Churches of Christendom Freemasonry obtains no inconsiderable footing, and many of the foremost ecclesiastical dignitaries, in every part of Europe and Asia, are members of Masonic organisations. In our own Communion, especially in the more Catholic section of it, there are, and have been, numerous members of the mystic order. Surely, when Masons can boast of such men as Dr. Neale, and Bishop Hamilton, objectors to Lord Eliot ought to hide their diminished heads. What Archbishop Wake, backed by several of the non-jurors, failed to effect, is hardly, is hardly liked to be attained by the small body of gentlemen who, in the present instance, led the opposition against the noble lord, who is highly esteemed by Churchmen as he is by his brethren in Freemasonry. There are many other brethren of position, too, in England, who take very active parts in Church matters. Many the writer knows personally who are constant readers of your paper; and it is to be deplored that our order—"the hand-maid of religion"—should have been so causelessly assailed by those who have evinced such ignorance on the subject.

A PAST MASTER.

We could open a long list of names of eminent churchmen both Divines and Laymen who are members of our ancient and honourable fraternity in England—and would ask these persons who object to his lordship's connection with the Craft, to obtain a copy of our Book of Constitutions, before they pronounce sentence on the principles of our institution.

Reviews.

We beg to call the attention of our musical brethren and friends to a very sweet melody:—"Gone up on high," which is published by Bro. Hollon, for the benefit of the Girls' School. A professional brother of high attainments has given a most favourable opinion of the song, and has predicted a large sale for it. We understand it will be sung at the Festival of the Institution on the 3rd of May.

"A VISIT TO EPPS'S COCOA MANUFACTORY.—Through the kindness of Messrs. Epps, I recently had an opportunity of seeing the many complicated and varied processes the Cacao bean passes through ere it is sold for public use, and, being both interested and highly pleased with what I saw during my visit to the manufactory, I thought a brief account of the Cacao, and the way it is manufactured by Messrs. Epps, to fit it for a wholesome and nutritious beverage, might be of interest to the readers of Land and Water.—See Article in Land and Water, October 14.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT AND PILLS.—Visible or Invisible Ailments.—In all outward diseases this fine Ointment will be found soothing, cooling, and curative. It speedily allays all inflammation, and reduces to a healthy condition all wounds, sores, ulcers, and sprains. It discharges all irritating matters, and stimulates the vessels to wholesome action. When this Ointment is rubbed on the skin over any organ afflicted by disease, it exercises a corresponding recuperative power, and in conjunction with Holloway's Pills rarely fails to banish any internal disorder, be its origin when or where it may. Whilst using these purifying preparations, the tongue cleans, the appetite improves, chills and flushes depart, and the complexion becomes clear.—ADVT.

CONSECRATION OF THE BECTIVE MARK LODGE (No. 147), AND INSTALLATION OF THE W.M.

On Wednesday the 17th inst. a Lodge of Mark Masons was opened at the Keswick Hotel, Keswick, at high twelve.

The ceremony of consecration was most effectively performed by Bros. F. W. Hayward, No. 60, P.G.S.D. and P.G.T.; Thomas Blacklock, P.M., P.G.S.B.; G. Hayward, P.M., P.G.I.G.; and other brethren of the Cumberland Lodge, No. 60.

The Installation of Bro. Samuel Gerrard Fairclough as, W.M. succeeded, and the newly installed W.M. appointed and invested his officers as follows:—Bros. Edwin Hinks, S.W.; John Wood, J.W.; Robert Rutherford, M.O.; Y. D. Ingham, S.O.; G. P. Abraham, J.O.; Rev. R. Rutherford, Chaplain; John Harrison, Treas. Daniel Chrosthwaite, Registrar of Marks; W. Thornton, Sec.; Abraham, Org.; Thomas Usher, S.D.; William Banks, J.D.; William Lamonby, I.G.; Matthew Cooper, Tyler.

The proceedings closed with a banquet, and after the usual loyal and Masonic toasts, the brethren separated at 5 p.m.

PRESENTATION TO BRO. BAIRD, ST. JOHN'S LODGE, GLASGOW.

On Friday, the 19th inst., the brethren of the Glasgow Saints John, No. 3 bis., met together in the Crow Hotel, for the purpose of making a presentation to Bro. John Baird, in acknowledgement of his services as R.W.M. of the lodge for the three years ending 27th December, 1871. There was a large attendance of members of the lodge, the chair being occupied by Bro. Ramsay, P.M. of St. Johns, who was supported by Bros. Baird, P.M., and Cruickshank, P.M. The duties of croupier were discharged by Bro. McMillan, R.W.M., beside whom were seated Bros. White, S.M.; Kyle, D.M.; Samuels, Treasurer; and Bell, S.W. After an excellent and well-served supper had been partaken of, the ordinary loyal and constitutional toasts were given from the chair, and cordially responded to. In afterwards proposing the toast of the evening, the Chairman referred to the valuable services, on behalf of the lodge, rendered by Bro. Baird during the three years in which he held the office of R.W.M. During that time he made more new members than any of his predecessors, and at present, thanks in a great measure to his exertions, the lodge possessed one of the most elegant and best ventilated halls in Scotland. (Applause.) The Chairman afterwards proceeded formally to make the presentation to Bro. Baird, which consisted of a salver, tea kettle, and cake basket, all of solid silver, and an elegant drawing-room clock. On the salver was the following inscription:—"Presented by members of the Lodge Glasgow Saints John, No. 3, bis., to Bro. John Baird, along with a silver kettle, cake basket, and drawing-room clock, in recognition of his services as R.W.M. during the previous three years.—December 27, 1871." Bro. Baird in the course of his reply said:—"It would be paying but a poor compliment to the brethren of St. Johns Lodge who have subscribed to the magnificent testimonial you have put into my hands were I to say that it is quite undeserved. Whether my services were of value during the three years I had the honour to fill the chair, you best can judge; but this I may be permitted to say, that, to the best of my ability, I endeavoured conscientiously and impartially to discharge the duties of the office for the good of the lodge and the interests of the Craft. (Applause.) In afterwards noticing some of the more important matters connected with the lodge during his period of office as R.W.M., Bro. Baird said:—"Another subject I would notice was the collision which took place between the Lodge of Edinburgh Journeymen, No. 8, and St. John's in the Cathedral, on the occasion of the ceremonial of laying the foundation-stone of the Albert Bridge. As your Master at that time, I dared not allow the prerogative you had possessed in the province from time immemorial to be wrested from you. The protest I then tendered, I followed up in Grand Lodge, and, from the hearty support of the brethren, both in our own and other provinces, a law was enacted at the meeting in February last, conferring the right to carry the working tools and paraphernalia to the Senior Lodge of the Province present, except the Metropolitan, No. 8, is to have the privilege continued to them. The last topic to which I will refer is the acquisition by us of a lodge room for our own use. That it is commodious, comfortable, and elegant, as well as creditable to the liberality of the members, is generally admitted. Should our present prosperity continue—as I fondly hope it may—we may confidently look forward at no distant date to the extinction of the remaining debt. (Applause.) Amongst the other toasts proposed were, “The Absent Brethren,” by Bro. Smellie, and “The Chairman” and “Croupier.” Several capital songs were given by the brethren, the evening altogether being happily spent.

ROYAL MASONIC INSTITUTION FOR GIRLS.

LAYING THE FOUNDATION STONE OF THE NEW INFIRMARY.

The Royal Masonic Institution for Girls, situate at St. John's Hill, Battersea Rise, has been singularly free from epidemics, and its sanitary condition has been such as to leave the minds of the executive free from alarm. Unfortunately, however, the pupils were last year subject to an outbreak of scarlet fever amongst them. Of their number, 38 were placed upon the sick list, all of whom, by the blessing of the G.A.O.T.U., and the able zeal and persevering attention of the Medical Officer, Bro. Howell, were restored to health, and their places in the school-room.

This naturally created a feeling of apprehension on the part of the House Committee, lest a second visitation should unhappily occur, and a less favourable issue be the result. In the face of a contemplated increase in the number of the inmates, they at once resolved upon forthwith erecting, within the grounds of the Institution, a detached infirmary, for the reception of such as might thereafter be similarly stricken or require the care and attention of the Medical Officer.

This resolution being arrived at, steps were immediately taken to carry it into effect. Designs were solicited from architects of eminence, those of Bro. Massa being eventually selected. The construction was submitted to tender, and that of Bro. C. Fish being the lowest, was accepted, and the foundations having been pushed forward, preparation was made for the interesting ceremony of laying what is technically termed the foundation stone, but which, in reality is the chief corner stone, and the 18th inst. being the usual monthly meeting of the House Committee, advantage was taken of the opportunity to place it in its position, the privilege of doing so being, on the invitation of the House Committee, entrusted to Bro. William Winn, a munificent contributor to the funds of the Institution, a Vice-Patron, and a Past Master of the Canonbury Lodge, No 657.

The business transactions of the House Committee having been concluded, a procession was formed, in the following order:—

Porter.

The Women Servants.

First division of the Girls, headed by a Pupil Governess, with the two smallest children.

The Assistant Governess.

Monitors.

Second division of the Girls (tallest leading).

The Governess and the Matron.

The Secretary.

The Chaplain and the Medical Officer.

First division of the House Committee.

The Master to lay the Stone.

The Chairman of the day.

Second division of the Committee.

On arriving at the Stone, the procession was met by the Architect, Contractor and Operatives.

The Chairman and Committee having taken their places on the Dais,

The Architect asked if the position selected for laying the Stone met with approval, which being signified—

The Chairman requested the Secretary to read the document to be deposited in the Stone.

The Secretary having read it, delivered it to the Chairman, who placed it in the bottle and gave it to the Solicitor, who deposited it in the cavity of the understone, and the Senior Member of the Committee (Bro. Head) covered it with the engraved plate.

The Chairman of the day then requested the Master to perform the work.

The Master rose and advanced to the stone; the Trowel was then presented to him, with which he spread the cement, and said, “Let the blessing of Heaven be invoked on the present work.”

The Chaplain then offered up the following Opening Prayer:—

“O Almighty God, the Great Architect and Ruler of the Universe, who art glorious in Holiness, fearful in Praise, doing wonders: We, the frail creatures of Thy Providence, encouraged by Thy goodness and mercy, humbly and devoutly approach Thy throne in prayer and supplication. Grant, O Lord, that the desire of our hearts to raise a building for the reception and care of our youthful charges, under sickness and suffering, may be accepted and crowned with Thy special blessing. Grant, that as the issues of life and death are in Thy hands, mercy and love may be manifested in healing the sick, and restoring them to health that their lives may be spent uprightly to Thy service and to Thy glory. Grant us, gracious Father, a continuance of Thy providential care which Thou hast vouchsafed to this Institution in time past. May the Governors and supporters, the teachers, the children and household now and at all times be under Thy Divine guidance and protection. Prosper the work of our hands upon us, O prosper Thou our handy work.”

“So mote it be.”

Immediately on the conclusion of the prayer the children sang the following anthem:—

“To Heaven's high Architect, all praise,
All praise, all gratitude be given,
Who deign'd the human soul to raise
By mystic secrets sprung from Heaven.”

CHORUS.

“Sound aloud Jehovah's praise,
To him our works, our buildings raise.”

During the singing of the Chorus the stone was lowered with three distinct motions, the Master guiding it to its proper base with the handle of the Trowel, which he then presented to the Builder.

The Square was then presented to the Master by an operative and The Architect asked “Is it square, Master?”

The Master proved it, and answered, “It is square, Brother,” and handed the square to the Builder.

The Level was next presented. The Architect asking “Is it level, Master?”

The Master proved it, and answered “It is level, Brother,” and handed the Level to the Builder.

The Plumb Rule was likewise presented. The Architect asking “Is it plumb, Master?”

The Master proved it and answered “It is plumb, Brother,” and handed the Plumb Rule to the Builder.

The Setting Maul was then similarly presented, the Architect saying: “The stone being square, level, and just, I pray you Master to sanction the work, and declare it good.”

The Master gave three knocks on the stone, and said: “By the power in me vested I declare this stone well and truly laid,” and handed the Setting Maul to the Builder.

The Drawings were then presented by the Architect, who said: “Deign, Master, to inspect and sanction the whole design.”

The Master in reply, said: “I will do so with pleasure, Brother,” and after inspecting them, handed the drawings to the Builder, saying: “With the tools you have already received and these instructions, may you raise a superstructure perfect in its parts and honourable to the Builder.”

“So mote it be.”

The Master then briefly addressed the Committee and the children in the following terms:—
“I cannot allow the present opportunity to pass without expressing the pleasure I feel at having been invited to participate in this day's ceremony, the laying the foundation-stone of a building intended for the sick and convalescent pupils at this Institution, the prosperity of which I am at all times anxious to promote, and in the welfare of its pupils feel the greatest interest. I take it as an evidence of the wisdom and forethought of the Committee that such a building should have been designed, although I am sure you will all unite with me in expressing a fervent hope, that it may never be required as an infirmary, but be utilised in such a manner as to enable the Committee to increase the number of pupils at this Institution. I congratulate those to whom its arrangement is delegated, on the judiciousness of this day's proceedings, for should the pupils, in the inscrutable decree of T.G.A.O.T.U., be again sufferers from a similar outbreak to that of a few months back, their restoration to health and convalescence may fairly and confidently be anticipated through the medium of the building, the object of our meeting, with a minimum of suffering to the patients, and with fuller expectations and more confident hope that success will attend the ministrations of the Medical Officer. I hold it good to bear in remembrance the latin motto, “Mens sana in corpore sano,” and in such a state do I sincerely trust the girls now before me, and those hereafter to be elected, may long continue to be. I feel that my expression of thanks is due also to the House Committee for the care, anxiety and watchfulness, in addition to a large portion of their valuable time, bestowed by them in the interest of this Institution, and I heartily wish them and you, my dear girls, continued health and happiness, and the work God speed.”

The “Corn, Wine and Oil,” were then sprinkled on the stone by three members of the Committee, the Corn by Bro. Sheen, who said: “May this building be blessed with prosperity;” the Wine by Bro. Pass, who said: “May its future inmates be restored to health;” and the Oil by Bro. Edward Cox, who said: “And grant them cheerfulness and peace.”

The Master then rose and said: “Let the blessing of Heaven be invoked on the future operations.”

The children then sang the following Anthem:

Hail universal Lord!
By Heaven and earth ador'd:
All hail! Great God!
Before thy name we bend,
To us thy grace extend,
And to our prayer attend.
All hail! Great God!

And the proceedings were brought to a close by the Chaplain offering up the following prayer:—

“Prevent us, O Lord, in all our doings with thy most gracious favour, and further us with thy continual help, that in this and every good work, begun, continued, and ended in Thee, we may glorify Thy Holy Name, and finally, by Thy mercy, obtain everlasting life.

O God of Abraham, God of Isaac, and God of Jacob, preserve and keep us, that we, obeying Thy will, and always being in safety under Thy protection, may abide in Thy Love unto our lives' end, and may arise from the tomb of transgressions to shine as the stars for ever and ever.”
“So mote it be.”

In addition to the usual donations to the workmen, cheques for various amounts were placed upon the stone, on the completion of the erection, including one for one hundred guineas from the Master laying the stone; ten guineas from the Chairman; fifty guineas from the Medical Officer; forty guineas from Bro. Sheen, and fifty guineas from Bro. Fish.

A massive silver trowel, handsomely chased, from the atelier of Messrs. Brook and Son, of the Pall Mall, was presented by the Architect to the Master laying the stone, by whom it was received with evident marks of gratification. It bore upon its surface the following inscription:—

This trowel was presented to Bro. WILLIAM WINN, V. Patron, P.M. 657, by Bro. MASSA, P.M. 59, Architect, on the occasion of laying the

TABLE OF CONTENTS

Freemasonry and Israelitism 271
 Conversations for Freemasons 272
 Consecration of the St. Hubert Lodge at Andover ... 274
 Laying the Memorial Stone of the New Municipal Buildings at Renfrew 274
 CORRESPONDENCE :—
 The New Grand Officers 275
 Teetotal Freemasons..... 275
 Masonic Tidings—British, Colonial and Foreign..... 275
 The New Grand Officers 276
 Grand Chapter 276
 Masonic Notes and Queries..... 277
 CRAFT MASONRY :—
 Provincial 278
 ROYAL ARCH :—
 Provincial 278
 Scotland 279
 MARK MASONRY :—
 Provincial 279
 KNIGHTS TEMPLAR :—
 Provincial 279
 Gibraltar 279
 Scotland 279
 RED CROSS OF CONSTANTINE :—
 Scotland 279
 Freemasonry, its Wisdom, Strength and Beauty 280
 REVIEW :—
 Albion's Church 281
 Obituary 281
 Masonic Meetings for next week... 282
 Advertisements..... 269, 270, 282, 283, 284

FREEMASONRY AND ISRAELITISM.
 XXVIII.

BY BRO. WILLIAM CARPENTER, P.M., P.Z., & C.
 (Third supplementary paper.)

As we advance with the history of the Hebrew race, the children of the promises made to Abraham and his descendants, we find the form of government under which they were to live more fully developed. Having reached the foot of Mount Horeb, after they had passed the confines of Egypt, now hateful to them, on account of the oppression to which they had been for good part of a century subjected, and had discomfited Amalek and his army; who had made an unprovoked attack upon the sick and fatigued in the rear of thier march. (Moses then being king in Jeshurun, as Israel was called, Deut. xxxiii. 4, 5), the law was solemnly promulgated by Jehovah, through the ministrations of angels (Acts ix. 53, Gal. iii. 19, and Heb. ii. 2), and the people entered into a peculiar relation with God, upon which their whole civil constitution was unalterably grounded, the fundamental principle being that of a monarchy.

The people, during their residence in Egypt, had become so infected with the idolatry then prevalent, that all the miracles they had witnessed there, at the Red Sea, and at Mount Sinai, were insufficient to cure them of their superstition, and bring them back to the constant worship of the true God, to whom they acknowledged they were to be attributed. That they might fulfil their high destiny, therefore, through succeeding ages, civil institutions were necessary, by which the knowledge and worship of Him should be connected with the political structure of the nation so intimately as to be imperishable, so long as the nation remained a nation, and could be annihilated only by the annihilation of the political existence of the people. Jehovah condescended to become, in accordance with the prevalent notions of those ages, their titular deity. Through the intervention of Moses, he suffered himself to be elected their king (See Ex. xix. 4, 8; Judg. viii., 23; 1st. Sam., viii. 7; x., 18; xi., 1; and 1 Chron. xxix., 23). The Land of Canaan was regarded as the royal possession, of which the Israelites were to be hereditary occupants, and from which they were to render to Jehovah a double tithe, as the Egyptians did to their king. And that they might have their peculiar relation to God kept constantly before their eyes, He, as their king, caused a tent to be erected, in the centre of the encampment, (where the pavilions of Eastern kings were usually erected), and fitted up with royal splendour, as a movable palace. It was divided into three apartments, in the innermost of which was the royal throne, supported by golden cherubs; and as the footstool of the throne, a gilded ark containing the tables of the law, the Magna Charta of Church and State. In the ante-room, a gilded table was spread with bread and wine, as the royal table; and precious incense was burned. The exterior room, or court, might be considered the royal culinary apartment, and there music was performed, as at the festive tables of the Eastern monarchs. The divine king made choice of the Levites for his courtiers, state-officers, and palace guards; and Aaron for the chief officer of the court, the first minister of state. For the maintenance of these officers, he assigned one of the tithes which the Hebrews were to pay as rent, for the use of the land. He finally required all the Hebrew males, of a suitable age, to repair to his palace every year, on the three great annual festivals, with presents, to render homage to their king; and as those days of renewing their homage were to be celebrated with festivity and joy, the second tithe was expended in providing the entertainments necessary for the occasions. In short, every religious duty was made a matter of political obligation, and all the civil regulations, even the most minute, were so founded upon the relation of the people to God, and so interwoven with their religious duties, that the Hebrew could not separate his God and his king. In every law he was reminded of both. Hence, as already stated, the nation, as long as it had a national existence, could not entirely lose the knowledge or discontinue the worship of the true God. It is on this ground that we perceive the reason of some of the laws and punishments, which in themselves appear to be excessive in severity. As God was the King of the Hebrews, says Jahn, a defection from God, was a defection from their rightful sovereign. Whoever, in the Hebrew nation over which Jehovah was king, worshipped another God, or practised any superstitions, by this very act renounced his allegiance to his king, and deserted to another. He committed high treason, and was properly regarded as a public criminal. Whoever incited others to idolatry, incited them to rebellion, and was a promoter of sedition. Therefore death was justly awarded as the punishment of idolatry, and of its kindred arts, magic, necromancy, and soothsaying. Nor was this fundamental principle of the government changed when a visible king was granted at the people's desire. The theocratic principle was still religiously preserved. The invisible king, Jehovah, was in reality the only Chief Magistrate of the State. The sacred tabernacle, and afterwards the Holy Temple, was His palace, and by it the people were made sensible of His presence. The visible king was the representative of the Invisible King, and was bound to administer the laws as he found them, they being unalterable by any human power or authority. The high priest was the prime minister of the Invisible King, and decided all cases of difficulty or importance. The principles of the theocracy were, as I have said, so interwoven with the fundamental and unchangeable laws of the state, that the elected king must act as the viceroy and vassal of Jehovah. Those only were to occupy the throne who were designated by Jehovah himself. As monarchs called "king of kings," were accustomed to appoint sub-kings, in the several provinces of their kingdoms, so were the kings of the Israelites to be called to the throne by King Jehovah, and to receive the kingdom from Him and were in all respects, to view themselves as His representatives or viceroys. Hence we find, in following the history of the people, who, upon the death of Solomon, became divided into two kingdoms, that Jehovah always governed them on this fundamental principle of theocracy. If they revolted from Him, their lawful king, he brought them, by suitable chastisements, to repentance and reformation, until they had become so utterly corrupt and incorrigible, that after having borne with them for about 250 years, the kingdom of Israel was extinguished, and the people carried into captivity. These are now spoken of as the ten tribes, or the lost tribes. About 130 years afterwards, Judah, for the like cause, was visited with the like punishment; but their captivity was limited to 70 years.

In their captivity, Judah formed, as it were, a nation within a nation, not amalgamating with the Babylonians, and, although some of them took wives from the daughters of the land, they were compelled, upon their return to Judea, to put them away, lest they should be the means, as had been the case in the earlier periods of their history, of seducing them to idolatry. Under Zerubbabel, of the royal house of David, they restored the temple and worship; and under the ministration of Ezra and Nehemiah, the walls of Jerusalem were rebuilt, and the nation in some measure restored. Neither temple nor nation, however, was restored in its integrity. Both exhibited a greatly inferior aspect to that which they wore before the captivity. The temple, which had been the glory of the former kingdom, was destitute of its great characteristics under Solomon; that is, the fire from heaven to consume the sacrifices; the Urim and Thummim, through which the Divine answers were given, in critical or difficult cases, to the high priest; the ark of the covenant; the shechinah or manifestations of the Divine presence; and the spirit of prophesy. So inferior, indeed, was this second temple to that of Solomon, that the prophet Haggai, though rejoicing with the people over the completion of the work, was so impressed with a sense of its comparative littleness and deficiencies, that he appealed to the people, saying, "Who is left among you that saw this house in her first glory? And, how do you see it now? Is it not in your eyes, in comparison of it, as nothing?" (Haggai, ii. 3), and although there were subsequent migrations of the Jews from Babylon to their own land, it was in a very poor and troubled condition. After the departure, probably by death, of Ezra, and the termination of Nehemiah's first mission, which had endured for twelve years, great disorders crept in; so that on his return, he found much to deplore. The detention of the tithes, defective offerings, and heathen marriages had become general. There was increasing bitterness between the Jews and the Samaritans, who had built a rival temple on Mount Gerizim; there was a growing alienation between the Jews who had returned from captivity, and those who had remained in the land, and whom the former treated with derision and contempt; and there were the evils to which they were all exposed, by the frequent invasion of the armies of the Macedonians, Syrians, Egyptians, &c.,—all forming a combination of circumstances which depressed the nation, and gave rise to many social and moral evils. They passed under the dominion of the great foreign states; and although their independence was partly achieved by the valour of the Maccabees, who united in their own persons the office of high priest and king, and the Idumean Herod, who had married into the Maccabean family, occupied the throne at the time of Christ's birth; his power was limited, and a few years after his death the dissensions among his sons, and the commotions arising therefrom, brought the partially-restored, but dilapidated kingdom to an end, and it was annexed, as a Province, to the great Roman Empire.

The promised Shiloh, or he whose right the sceptre was (Gen. xlix, 10), had come, and when a sufficient time had been given to publish his gospel throughout the cities of Israel, and from the chosen, but now condemned, city of God's prescribed ceremonial worship, to send it forth into all nations, then came the end, and the children of Judah were scattered throughout the nations of the earth.

The Children of Israel were to "abide many days without a king, and without a prince, and without a sacrifice," (Hosea iii. 4). But though "lost" to their own name and country—cast out, trodden down, and called by another name—a monarchy was still dear to their hearts, and was the subject of their constant aspirations. They were not satisfied, as some of the northern "barbarians" were, with leaders to command in the time of war—they must have kings to lead and govern them. As soon as circumstances favoured it, Alaric was proclaimed king, upon the shields of his soldiers. We know little of their history, for some centuries afterwards, except as the conquering race of the western world, but we know that the Saxon branch brought with them into Britain, that monarchical institution in which the supreme power is limited by the subjects themselves, by due course of law. It is no despotic power which the Anglo-Saxon sovereign wields. At his coronation, he swears to rule in accordance with the statutes of parliament and the laws and customs of the realm; to maintain right and justice; and to uphold the Established Church. Once since the establishment of the Anglo-Saxon monarchy it has been set aside; but this, so far from having been legally recognised, has been erased from the national records, and the Monarchy survives, surrounded by republican institutions. The Lia-Phail, or Stone of Destiny, or Jacob's Pillow, which is part of the Coronation Throne, in Westminster Abbey, has attached to it an old Celtic rune, which still exercises its influence over many minds—

"Unless the Fates are faithless grown,
And Prophet's voice be vain,
Where'er is found this Sacred Stone
The Wanderers' race shall reign."

Whether, as the Rev. F. R. A. Glover ("England the remnant of Judah, and the Israel of Ephraim") believes, and seeks, by a large collection of facts and traditions, and much plausible reasoning, to prove, the ancient stone which was used on the Hill of Tara, at the inauguration of Eocaid, the king pentarch of Ulster, about seven centuries before the Christian era, carried thence to Scotland by Fergus I., who, with the succeeding Scottish kings, was crowned on it, until, about A.D. 300, when Edward I. brought it here with the rest of the royal regalia, and on which, from the time of James I., all our monarchs have been crowned, be the veritable Jacob's pillow; and whether England is, in her royal family, of the stem of Jesse, descended from Eocaid, by one of the seed royal of David, (one of "the king's daughters," who accompanied Jeremiah when he escaped from Judea), and is, therefore, as the hereditary holder of the perpetual sceptre, and the inheritor of the standard of Judah (the lion) the fostered remnant of Judah; while the Angle-land, is, in her origin and descent, the reality of Joseph in her own position; and the Ephraim of Jacob or the Israel of Ephraim, in that of her colonies, I do not pretend to determine. To Mr. Glover, we are greatly indebted for the research and labour he has brought to bear on the investigation of this question. If his theory be well-founded, he has opened up a subject, not only full of interest and importance in itself, but one in which is exhibited a most impressive view of the wonderful workings of God's providence, for the fulfilment of his gracious purposes through Israel, and of the many predictions relating to both her and her sister, Judah; for, as he observes, "in this combination of the two families (Jerem. xxxiii. 24) has commenced the fulfilment of the prophecy which foretells the union of these two elements of the world's approaching future (Isa. xi. 13); the prediction that Judah shall not vex Ephraim, nor Ephraim envy Judah—by which combination, also, England is qualified to be Standard-Bearer of all Israel—and that herein is involved the responsibility of action which is clearly pointed out as the privilege of the Israel of blessing in Isaiah xix.—that pleasant instrument of a happy future to Egypt (the Mohammedan) God's people, and Assyria (the Hindu and Buddhist) the work of God's hand; as the third (Isa. xix. 24) of sanctification to the other two-thirds; and the incipient development of the accomplished promises of God to Israel, his inheritance, viz. England: the now living reality and representative of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob."

"More than a year ago one of my children was attacked with bronchitis, and, after a long illness, was given up by all physicians as 'past cure.' I was then induced to try your Vegetable Pain Killer, and from the time I began the use of it the child rapidly got better, and it is now strong and healthy.—JOHN WINSTANLEY, 10, Whittle-st., L'pool, 1869.—To P. B. & Son."

ERNEST AND FALK.

CONVERSATIONS FOR FREEMASONS.

BY BRO. GOTTHOLD EPHRAIM LESSING.

TRANSLATED BY

BRO. KENNETH R. H. MACKENZIE, F.S.A.,
KNOWN AS CRYPTONYMUS.

CONVERSATION.—IV.

FALK. Ernest! Welcome! Again I see you. My stay at the baths has long since closed.

ERNEST. And you are well? I am pleased.

FALK. What say you: Never did I hear "I am pleased" pronounced more angrily.

ERNEST. And I am angry, and little is wanting not to make me angry with you.

FALK. With me?

ERNEST. You have misled me into a foolish act. Look here! Give me your hand! What say you? You shrug your shoulders! That was the only thing yet wanting.

FALK. Misled you?

ERNEST. May be without your own absolute desire.

FALK. And yet should be in fault?

ERNEST. The man of God tells the people of a land flowing with milk and honey; and should not the people long for it? and should not the people murmur at the man of God when he leads them into desert wildernesses, instead of this promised land?

FALK. Well, well! The damage can scarcely be so great. And I likewise see that you have been labouring by the tombs of our ancestors.

ERNEST. But they were not surrounded by flames, but smoke.

FALK. Endure, then, till the smoke disperses, and the flame will enlighten and warm.

ERNEST. The smoke will choke me, ere the flame enlightens me, and others will warm themselves, I well perceive, who are better able to endure the smoke.

FALK. You are not speaking of people who allow themselves willingly to be bitten by smoke, even if it be only the smoke of a strange and well furnished kitchen?

ERNEST. Then you know them?

FALK. I have heard of them.

ERNEST. All the greater reason that you should not have led me on to this ice, and moreover, picture things to me, the fallacy of which you knew too well.

FALK. Your annoyance renders you very unjust. I should not have spoken with you concerning Freemasonry without indicating in more than one way how useless it is that every honest man should become a Freemason. How useless, do I say?—even how dangerous!

ERNEST. That may be so, indeed.

FALK. Did I not say to you that the highest duties of Masonry may be fulfilled, without being called Freemason?

ERNEST. In fact, I well remember it. But you know very well, when my fancy once outspreads its pinions—once begins its flight—whether I can restrain it; I do not blame you, except for holding out such a bait to it.

FALK. Which you have soon become too tired to attain. Nor did you say a word to me of your intentions.

ERNEST. Would you have dissuaded me?

FALK. Most certainly. Who would counsel the go-cart to a headlong boy because now and then he stumbles. I do not compliment you; you had gone too far to recede. At the same time no exception could be made with you. By this road all have to pass.

ERNEST. Nor should I regret having entered upon it, dare I but promise myself more on the rest of the journey. But re-assurances, and again re-assurances, and nothing but re-assurances.

FALK. So re-assurances are already at hand! And what may you receive by the way of re-assurances?

ERNEST. You know very well in Scottish Masonry—the Knights Ecosais.

FALK. Yes—quite true. But what have the Knights Ecosais to expect by way of reassurance?

ERNEST. If any one only knew!

FALK. Do your equals, the other noviciates of the Order, do they also know nothing?

ERNEST. O they! they know a vast deal! One desires to make gold, the second would invoke spirits, the third would restore the Knights Templar—you smile—and only smile?

FALK. What can I do otherwise?

ERNEST. Show some disgust at such ninnies!

FALK. Were there not one thing which reconciled me with them.

ERNEST. And that is—?

FALK. That in all these dreams I perceive evidences of an aspiration towards reality—that by all these cross paths it may yet be seen whither the true way leads.

ERNEST. Also from the art of gold-making?

FALK. Also from the art of gold-making. Whether gold can really be made or no—is all the same to me. But I am very certain that reasonable men could only wish to make it in a Masonic sense. And the very first—whosoever he be—who attains the philosopher's stone, becomes in the same moment a Freemason. It is strange also, that this fact is confirmed by all the accounts we have of real or supposed alchemists.

ERNEST. And the conjurors?

FALK. The same may well be said of them. Spirits could never hearken to the voice of any man—not a Freemason.

ERNEST. How seriously you say such things!

FALK. By everything sacred! not more seriously than they are in fact.

ERNEST. Were it only true! But finally the new Templars, in God's name!

FALK. Most truly these!

ERNEST. Do you see! of these you can say nothing. For Templars once really there were—gold-makers and conjurors perhaps never. And it is more reasonable to say that the Masons were better adapted to such beings of imagination, than of realities.

FALK. I can certainly only express myself by a dilemma here—either, or—

ERNEST. Good! Were it only known that of two expressions one is true. Therefore, either these Templars would be—

FALK. Ernest! Before you utter such a mockery at length! On my conscience! These—actually these are either certainly on the right way, or they are so far out of it that they have not even the hope remaining ever to reach it again.

ERNEST. Am I to listen to such words? For to ask you for any more definite explanation—

FALK. Why not? Mysteries have been made into a secret long enough.

ERNEST. What do you mean?

FALK. The secret of Freemasonry, as I have already told you, is that which the Mason can not breathe, were it even possible that he desired to breathe it. But mysteries are things easily spoken of, things concealed only at certain times in certain countries, partly concealed from envy—partly suppressed from fear, partly secreted from prudence.

ERNEST. For instance?

FALK. For instance. Exactly, this connection between Templars and Freemasons. It is very possible, that at one time, it was necessary and right nothing should have been allowed to be seen of it—but now—now, on the other hand, it might be highly hurtful to make a secret of this relation any longer. It should rather be loudly proclaimed, and the only point for decision is in what the Templars were the Freemasons of their time.

ERNEST. May I know in what this point consists?

FALK. Read the history of the Templars with care! You must guess this. And you will certainly guess it, and that is the very reason why you should never have become a Freemason.

ERNEST. Ah! were I only now among my books! And if I do guess it, will you confess, that I have guessed it?

FALK. At the same moment you will find that such an admission is unnecessary—but to return to my dilemma. It is just this point whence the decision may be gathered. If all Freemasons, now pregnant with the Templars, see and feel this real point, well be it with them! well be it with the world! Blessings on all they do! Blessings on all they leave undone! But if they do not see and feel this point; if a mere synonym has misled them; if a Freemason working in the * * has only brought them as far as the Templars, if they have only been staring at ——— on the ———; if they only desire to bring in considerable fat tithes for selves and friends: then may Heaven lend us sufficient mercy—to keep us from laughter!

ERNEST. Look you! You can still be warm and bitter!

FALK. Alas! Thanks for your remark, and I am as cold as ice again.

ERNEST. And what think you is the case with these gentlemen under these two trains of circumstances?

FALK. I am afraid the latter! May I deceive myself! For were it the first—how could they entertain so singular a design, as to desire to re-establish the Templars. The great point in which the Templars were Masons no longer exists. Europe at any rate is far beyond it, and in that requires no extraordinary assistance. What then do they desire? Do they desire to become a sponge to be squeezed by the great of the earth? But to whom do I address this question? And against whom? Have you told me—could you tell me that these fancies of gold-making, conjuring and Templars, are dragged about by others than the noviciates of the Order? But children grow into men—leave them alone! Enough, as I have said, that I already see in the playthings, the weapons which once again will be borne by men with unwavering hands!

ERNEST. In reality, my friend! it is not this child's play which renders me uneasy. Without supposing that anything serious existed beyond them, I looked far beyond them—tubs, I thought, thrown to young whales! But that which gnaws at my soul, is everywhere I see, everywhere I hear, nothing but these inanities, and that of that, of which you raise such anticipations in me, no one will hear a word. Often as I strike this chord—no matter to whom—no one will harmonise with it, and ever in all directions I find the utmost silence.

FALK. You mean—?

ERNEST. That equality you designated to me as the fundamental principle of the Order—that equality which filled my soul with such unexpected hope: that I might at last breathe it in the society of men who could soar in thought above all social modifications, without sinning to the disadvantage of others—

FALK. Well?

ERNEST. Were it still so? Had it ever been so? If an enlightened Jew approaches and announces himself. "Yes," say they, "a Jew? The Freemason must at least be a Christian. No matter what kind of a Christian. Without distinction of religion, only means, without distinction of the three religions tolerated in the Holy Roman Empire." Are you of that opinion?

FALK. Not I, exactly.

ERNEST. If an honest shoemaker—who has enough leisure over his last to have a thought or two (were it a Jacob Boehme, or a Hans Sachs) comes, and announces himself, "Yes," they say—"certainly, but still a shoemaker!" If a faithful, experienced, tried serving man comes and announces himself—"Yes, certainly, such sort of people, who cannot even choose the colour of their coats; we are such excellent company among ourselves."

FALK. And are they such good company then?

ERNEST. Well! I have nothing particular to say against it, except that it is such good company, rather tiring in society—Princes—Counts—My lords—Officers—Councillors—Merchants—Artists, all these swarm through the lodge in wild confusion, still in truth we are all but of one rank, and that surely is—

FALK. In my time, it was not so—yet so it was! I do not know, I can only counsel. I am for so long a time out of connection with lodges, of whatever description. In the Lodge of a foretime not to be admitted for a time, and to be excluded from Freemasonry are two distinct things.

ERNEST. How so?

FALK. Because the lodge stands in that relation to Freemasonry, as Church does to Faith. From the outward flourishing condition of the Church, there is nothing, absolutely nothing, to be drawn respecting the faith of the members. Rather, indeed is it a matter of wonder that such a certain outward prosperity could prevail at the same time with true Faith. Nor has there ever been any treaty between them—but the one, as history teaches, has ever sapped the foundations of the other. And this also—I fear—I fear—

ERNEST. What?

FALK. In short the lodge management, as now conducted, will not at all conform with my thoughts. To have a treasury, to lay it out at interest; to use the interest to the uttermost farthing; to purchase property; to allow the confuence of privileges from kings and princes; to use the esteem and the power thereby contained for the oppression of the Brethren of another observance than that in which it is so desired to rest the whole essence of the matter. Should this endure in the long run, how willingly should I be found a false prophet!

ERNEST. Well then! How is it to be? The state does not now proceed in the same way. And to that be it added that among the persons ordaining the laws, or are its executive, even now are many Freemasons.

FALK. Good! If therefore they have nothing to fear from the State, what think you that such a constitution may have of influence on themselves? Do they not plainly get back to the very issue whence they wish to emerge? Would they not cease to be what they wish to be? I know not, if you quite understand me—

ERNEST. Proceed with your argument.

FALK. Certainly! It is time—nothing is eternal! Perhaps this is the very way that prudence has foreseen—to put an end to the whole present scheme of Masonry.

ERNEST. Scheme of Masonry? What do you mean by that? Scheme?

FALK. Well—scheme—revelation—clothing.

ERNEST. I do not as yet know—

FALK. You surely do not believe that Freemasons have always played at Freemasonry?

ERNEST. What is that? Freemasons have not always played at Freemasonry?

FALK. In other words! Do you conceive that that which is now Freemasonry—has always been Freemasonry? But see, it is past dinner time. My guests are already arrived. You will remain?

ERNEST. I did not intend to do so—but now I must. For I long for a double refreshment.

FALK. But at table, I beg of you, not a word.

CONSECRATION of ST. HUBERT LODGE, No. 1373, AT ANDOVER, HANTS.

The Right Worshipful Bro. W. W. B. Beach, M.P., Provincial Grand Master of the Province of Hampshire and the Isle of Wight, assisted by Bro. Thomas Best, as Acting Deputy Prov. Grand Master, on Saturday, the 26th ult., consecrated and constituted at Andover the St. Hubert Lodge, No. 1373, under the Constitution of the Grand Lodge of England, with Bro. J. Rankin Stebbing, Deputy Prov. Grand Master of Hampshire and the Isle of Wight, and Past Grand Deacon of England, as the first Worshipful Master. Between fifty and sixty brethren were present from Andover, Portsmouth, Southampton, and Winchester.

In the course of the ceremony, which was of the most impressive character, the Prov. Grand Master addressed the brethren, drawing attention to the purposes for which Freemasonry was designed, and the important objects it has fulfilled. Having alluded to the antiquity of the science, to its perpetuation through many ages, and to the works of the Craft still left to us in the principal civil and ecclesiastical buildings of Europe, the Prov. Grand Master said the brethren must have maintained order, or they could not have brought these buildings to the perfection they exhibited. In modern times, whilst their principles were cherished, there had been introduced a system of morality, founded upon the spirit displayed in these works of our forefathers, and of all the countries now practising Freemasonry he thought it might safely be said that in the estimation of the world none had attained greater success than we in England, nor had the art suffered decadence during the thousand years it was known to have existed amongst us. He proceeded to show that princes, kings, and scions of the most noble houses had joined with the lowest members in the social scale for mutual edification and instruction, and in propagating the art; and to comment upon its universality and the assistance it had rendered in peopling continents and civilising peoples. Then having spoken in commendation of its great principle of charity, and alluded to its exemplification in England by the magnificent foundations reared and sustained by the Craft for charitable purposes, he concluded by some appropriate advice to the brethren who had led to the formation of the lodge.

To the Rev. Bro. E. Y. Nepean, Vicar of Appleshaw, fell the duty of delivering the oration, founded on the nature and purpose of the Institution. He said that Freemasonry probably originated at the building of the Temple, when the number of artificers and workmen rendered it necessary that some means should be adopted to classify and arrange the different orders of skilled and unskilled workmen, though Preston, in his illustrations of Masonry tells us that we may trace its foundation from the beginning of the world. At present it was a system of morality of the highest kind—founded on the Volume of the Sacred Law, whence all its allegorical teaching was derived, and though to the outer world, and to those who had never considered its working, it might seem foolishness, yet carried out in its fullness and integrity, there was embraced in it every virtue that could adorn the outer man and make him acceptable and esteemed amongst his fellow-men, and every grace calculated to train up the inner man and make it accounted worthy of regard by the Great Architect of the Universe. Whether we looked upon Masonry in a social or a moral light, the same degree of order and protection seemed to pervade it. When within its mystic circle all differences of rank and position taken in the outer world are lost sight of, all differences of creed and thought are forgotten, and they felt themselves in an atmosphere of calm deliberation, earnest study, Brotherly Love, Concord, and Harmony. Not that rank and position were left outside. On the contrary, one of the great beauties of the Order was its perfectness and subordination of government. From the moment of light being thrown upon their darkened mind and senses, to the time when they were admitted to the higher secrets of Craft Masonry, they were taught that none could hope to become really good and looked up to unless they first learned obedience to the powers that be, and it was only by diligent study of the science that they could aspire to be advanced in their lodges. In a word, to quote the words of one of the best Masons that ever lived, and one of the most respected in his profession, "Freemasonry is a society of enlightened men, inculcating pure and active virtue on the sacred principles of gospel truth, and its design is to instil into the minds of its members a series of useful and interesting precepts, and to promote benevolence, philanthropy, and Brotherly Love." Now, if this were but carried out, what a wonderful cluster of christian graces and virtues should we ever have hovering over our homes, and when employed in every day life, how should we endear ourselves to all with whom we come in contact! To show that Freemasonry carries out in its practice, what it inculcates in its teaching, he appealed to the charities it supports, and having passed on to explain some of its symbols and their lessons, he asked what ought to be the result of such a system as Freemasonry is. Here let us not deceive ourselves. There are Freemasons, and Freemasons. That all do not act up to the perfect code of morality the Order inculcates is no reason why men should not belong to it. Let us remember that however good its theory may be, after all it is but a human institution, and as such subject to the failings of each of its several members. It does not follow that entrance into the Order is to work a charm for us, and as a consequence give us those graces and virtues we may be careless or unwilling to cultivate. Let us regard it more as a help, and assistance to lead us on to better things, and remember that however we may strive to do our duty here, we are only mortal, and as long as we are in the lodge below, but representatives of the rough ashlar, waiting for the impress of the master hand of the Great Architect of the Universe to mould us into perfect ashlar into the lodge above. He concluded by congratulating the lodge upon its good fortune in the election of its Master designate, by an expression of regret at the untimely death of Brother Alfred Coles, of Southampton, who was originally nominated to the position, and by some remarks of a purely Masonic nature.

The Provincial Grand Master subsequently proceeded to instal Bro. Stebbing in the Chair of the lodge, and he appointed his officers as follows:—Bros. the Rev. E. Y. Nepean, S.W. and Chaplain; Pern, J.W.; T. Lamb, Sec.; Norwood, S.D.; Elsdale, J.D.; and Martin, Tyler. In the business which followed, a vote of condolence was passed to the widow and family of the late Bro. Alfred Coles, upon his unexpected death, and also a vote of thanks to the Prov. Grand Master and his officers accompanying him for their attendance.

LAYING THE MEMORIAL STONE OF THE MUNICIPAL BUILDINGS, AT RENFREW.

On Saturday, 13th ult., the memorial stone of the new Municipal Buildings at Renfrew was laid with full Masonic honours and éclat, by Colonel Campbell of Blythwood, Provincial Grand Master of Renfrewshire East.

The Masonic lodges mustered in the Blythwood policies, where they were marshalled by Bro. John Carswell, P.G. Marshal of P.G. Lodge, Renfrewshire East, assisted by Bro. T. R. Cameron, A.P.G.M.

Lodge Royal Arch, Rutherglen, 116, was honoured with being allowed to carry the working tools of the P.G. Lodge. There was a large number of instrumental bands accompanying the procession, and their performances, together with the magnificent display of banners, decorations, &c., made the whole affair a most interesting and imposing pageant. On the north side of the new buildings was erected a large stand which accommodated a great number of ladies and gentlemen, and around the building on either side were stands well filled. In the procession there would be about 2000 persons, and on arrival at the Cross of the Grand Lodge the scene from the top of the buildings was exceedingly picturesque and novel, there being no fewer than 10,000 persons present, stretching in every line as far as the eye could see. The memorial stone was at the eastern angle of the tower, and was about thirty feet from the ground. A platform was erected there for the ceremonial to be performed. The gallant Provincial Grand Master, Colonel Campbell, was accompanied thither by Brothers Captain Hodgart, Acting-Substitute Master; W. Robertson, Depute S.M.; D. Macalpine, P.G.S. Warden; James Gilmour, R.W.M. 129, P.G.J. Warden; Rev. Mr. Stephen, Renfrew, P.G. Chaplain; James J. Lamb, P.G. Architect; Jas. Caldwell, P.G. Bible Bearer; J. Brown, P.G. Treasurer; J. Jack, P.G. Secretary; H. S. Edmonds, Assistant P.G.S.; W. Sim, P.G.D.; and W. Gemmell, Assistant P.G.D.; also by the Provost and Magistrates of Renfrew and Paisley.

Provost Gallacher stepped to the front of the building, and was loudly cheered. He said—R.W.G. Master, as you have, with your usual kindness and courtesy, complied with the request of the authorities of this royal burgh to favour us with your very valuable services on this very interesting occasion, I, as Provost and Chief Magistrate, have the honour to present to you this trowel to be used by you in the solemn ceremony of laying the foundation stone of our new Municipal Buildings. (Loud Cheers).

The trowel, which was of silver and very chaste, bore the following inscription:—"Presented by the Provost, Magistrates, and Town Council of the Royal burgh of Renfrew, to Colonel Campbell of Blythswood, P.G.M. of Renfrewshire East, on the occasion of his laying the memorial stone of the Municipal Buildings, 13th April, 1872." The inscription was surmounted by the coat of arms of the burgh.

Bro. Colonel Campbell replied—I accept this trowel, and consider it a very great mark of honour that you have done me, because I feel that there are others in a far higher scale of Masonry whom you might have applied to to perform this ceremony, and who, I feel, would only have been proud to have had the honour conferred on them. (Cheers). But you have conferred it on me, and I think I am not wrong in saying that in conferring it on a near neighbour of your own, you have done so as a mark of your friendship to myself, which I shall never forget, and when I look on this trowel in after times, it will remind me of this happy day in Renfrew. (Loud cheers).

The Rev. Mr. Stephens then offered up an appropriate prayer.

The stone was then laid in the usual Masonic form, with all honours.

The P.G. Master then said—It is now my pleasing duty to inform you that this stone has been laid with Masonic honours, and though it can hardly be called a foundation stone, I think it may be looked on as the chief stone of the corner. (Cheers.) It is a long time since the royal Burgh of Renfrew has had such an opportunity as this, and I think it must be a proud moment for all the Magistrates and Council when they see what an amount of interest this ceremony has occasioned among so many of their fellow-creatures, who have come to grace this occasion with their presence. (Cheers). I can assure you that I look on this as a scene which I think you will all remember with gratification, because of memories that it must bring up to numbers now standing around. Who has been an inhabitant of this ancient place and cannot remember the old steeple and clock of marvellous and wonderful construction—a laugh—which used to keep time its own natural way and after its own fashion. (Loud cheers). I feel that, although the clock is gone, and although the tower is departed, it yet lives in the memory of many, and although time has, as it were, ruthlessly carried off its own mentor, it will remain in the memories of some in far distant lands who may hope to return to their native country. How many hours has the old clock noted since it was erected? How many of our friends and relatives have passed away?

Does it not teach us that time will pass away with us, too, and that all of us standing here will pass away; but we may hope to meet them in that country from which no traveller returns. (Cheers). You have now seen raised a building which I hope will last for many ages, and will stand as a memorial of the energy and determination of the inhabitants of this burgh, headed by men who are capable of appreciating that energy, such as your Provost and Bailies here. (Loud cheers.) A suggestion was thrown out by myself a little time ago, that not only should we have a memorial in this building of what had been done, but that we should be able to hand down some good to the future generations who will inhabit this town of Renfrew. The scheme proposed was that we should contribute certain sums of money which should be placed in a bursary founded in the University of Glasgow, to be gained by those who might win it in three years. I hope this scheme will be brought about, and if so, I look forward to the time when some men will rise up as inhabitants of this burgh who may look back to the assistance they received from the bursary as one of the foundations of their fortunes. (Loud and prolonged cheers).

Provost Gallacher then said—Right Worshipful Grand Master,—It is my pleasing duty, and I esteem it a great privilege to have to tender you the best thanks of this community for the important work you have so successfully performed. We have also to express our gratitude to the brethren of the various lodges throughout Scotland for having come here in such large numbers to assist in this interesting ceremony.

I will again thank you, R.W. Prov. G. Master, for your kind services which add another to the many valuable favours which you and your family have conferred on the ancient town, and, brethren all I most sincerely thank you for your attendance.

Original Correspondence.

THE GRAND OFFICERS OF 1872.

(To the Editor of the Freemason.)

SIR,—Permit me in your columns to congratulate the London Daily Press generally on the glorious uncertainty which, until your own paper appeared, must needs have existed with reference to the identity of these important officials.

Like the rest of the Masonic world, I desired to know on Thursday morning the "ins and the outs" of the "Grand" appointments, and repairing to my club, I did the most natural thing in the world, and turned to the morning papers for the information I was in search of. To say I was "obfuscated" is to say the least of it.

From the Times I learnt that "Eneas J. McIntyre" was Grand Registrar, and between this and the "J. Alneas McIntyre" of the Daily News I was able to recognise an old and valued servant of the Craft, at whose well merited honours I rejoiced when, in the Morning Advertiser, I found him knighted as "Sir J. McIntyre." I pass by the respected Grand Secretary, who was variously described as "Hervey" and "Harvey," and come to the Grand Treasurer, Bro. Samuel Tompkins, who was announced in the Advertiser as "S. Tompkins, Grand Tyler!" The Junior Grand Deacons I learnt from the Daily News, were Brothers "Munton" and "Dunas." The Times called the first of these, Bro. "Martin," in which the Advertiser coincided; the Standard however boldly dissented from all, and informed the expectant world of Masonry that the appointment in question was conferred on "Brother Thurton." The real names I now find of the J.G.D.'s are "Murton" and "Dumas," both tolerably well-known in the Craft. I do not personally know Bro. Thos. Coombs, who received, no doubt very worthily, the collar of Assistant Grand Director of Ceremonies, but I sympathise with that brother in being dubbed by the Times, "T. S. Coombs, G.D. Ceremonies," because the whole thing is made to appear nonsensical thereby. As to Brother Cottebrune, who I am better acquainted with, and who I am pleased to see was appointed Assistant Grand Pursuivant, he appears variously as "Cottelmore," "Cotterbone," and "Collerbrown." To add that "Wendt," becomes "Wandt," that "Coutts" is turned into "Cootes," that the well-known name of "Huyshe" is disguised as "Huysel," that one paper mentions both "J. B. Monkton," and "W. B. Monckton," as Senior Grand Deacons, and that in short scarce any name, in scarce any paper, is spelt correctly in all particulars, is to sum up a tale, the moral of which is, either that the Grand Festival was too much for the amiable brethren of the daily press who attended it, or that press-correction in the present day is not what it has been wont to be. Surely, Sir, there is truth in the old saying, "what is worth doing, is worth doing well."

I am your faithful servant,

A PAST GRAND STEWARD.

London, 27th April.

TEETOTAL FREEMASONS.

(To the Editor of the Freemason.)

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—

As you are doubtless aware, there are many Masons in the Metropolis who, from principle, are "total abstainers" in the general acceptance of the term. It has long been felt that there ought to be a closer union of those brethren, by the formation of one or more Temperance lodges, in connection with which there should be no service of intoxicating liquors; and it has also been felt that the establishment of such lodges would tend to the advancement of the Craft generally, by the enrolment of many worthy gentlemen whose sole objection to our organisation is the much feared "conviviality" which rumour ascribes to our after-lodge gatherings. At present we have special Hebrew, dramatic, musical, and military, lodges; and surely there can be no harm in adding to the list a Temperance lodge.

It has frequently been suggested to me that I—as not only a member of the Craft, but also the official head of the Order of Sons of Temperance in Great Britain and Ireland—should take steps to call together the Teetotal Masons of London, with the view of forming such a lodge as I have alluded to. May I, therefore, so far trespass upon your kindness as to request that all brethren who feel an interest in this subject will communicate with me at an early date; and I shall, after ascertaining their sentiments, call them together for action in the matter.

I may say that I have already received numerous promises of co-operation; but I do not desire to take any action until there has been some opportunity for ascertaining the general opinion as to whether there should be one central or several district lodges.

Yours fraternally,

JOHN STRACHAN (1319),

34, Vaughan Road,
Camberwell, S.E.

April, 29th 1872.

Masonic Tidings.

BRITISH, FOREIGN, AND COLONIAL.

We have received the Spanish Masonic journal, Boletín oficial del Oriente de España, by which we see the steady progress Freemasonry is making in that country. There are four Masonic bodies namely, the Supreme Council of the Grand Orient of Spain, a Grand Chapter of Royal Arch, one of Rose Croix, a Grand Lodge for the Symbolical degrees, with seventy-two regular lodges, scattered over all Spain; and many committees are in several places of the country for the purpose of forming new lodges. As we have printed in our number 146, of the 23rd of December last, Bro. Manuel de Zorrilla the Grand Master of the Grand Lodge, is the eminent Spanish statesman. We wish good progress to our Spanish Brothers and we shall inform our readers of every step they make in the right direction.

The fifteen sections will be worked in the Pannure Lodge of Instruction, No. 720, Balham Hotel, Balham, on Thursday, the 9th inst. Bro. Jno. Thomas, W.M. and Hon. Preceptor, will preside on the occasion, and open the lodge at 6.30 p.m. Brethren will please to appear in Masonic clothing.

NOTICE.

The Subscription to THE FREEMASON is now 10s. per annum, post-free, payable in advance.

Vol. I., bound in cloth	...	4s.	6d.
Vol. II., ditto	...	7s.	6d.
Vol. III., ditto	...	15s.	od.
Vol. IV., ditto	...	15s.	od.
Reading Cases to hold 52 numbers	...	2s.	6d.

United States of America.

THE FREEMASON is delivered free in any part of the United States for 12s. per annum, payable in advance.

NOTICE TO SUBSCRIBERS.

The Office of THE FREEMASON is now transferred to 198, FLEET-STREET, E.C. All communications for the Editor or Publisher should therefore be forwarded to that address.

Answers to Correspondents.

All communications for The Freemason should be written legibly on one side of the paper only, and, if intended for insertion in the current number, must be received not later than 10 o'clock a.m. on Thursdays, unless in very special cases. The name and address of every writer must be sent to us in confidence.

ERRATA.—In the Report of the Grand Festival the name "John Dumas," Junior Grand Deacon, should have been "Henry John Philip Dumas, P.M. 99, P.Z. 167, W.M. 410, P.G.S., and P. Prov. J.G.W. Surrey."—The G. Steward representing the Jerusalem Lodge, No. 197, is Bro. Henry Gruning, P.M. 187, and P.G. Reg. Bristol, the present S.W. of No. 197. The Grand Steward representing Lodge No. 21, is Bro. Griffiths Smith. The report of Bute Lodge, No. 960, will appear next week.

The Freemason,

SATURDAY, MAY 4, 1872.

The Freemason is published on Saturday Mornings in time for the early trains.

The price of the Freemason is Twopence per week; annual subscription, 10s. (payable in advance.)

All communications, letters, &c., to be addressed to the Editor, 198, Fleet-street, E.C.

The Editor will pay careful attention to all MSS. entrusted to him, but cannot undertake to return them unless accompanied by postage stamps.

THE NEW GRAND OFFICERS.

We believe that the appointments made by the M.W. Grand Master for the current year have given general satisfaction to the Craft, inasmuch as several hard-working brethren have been promoted to the dais, and an earnest is thus given that "merit and ability" will not be overlooked during Lord Ripon's regime.

We have a conspicuous example of this in the selection of Lord Tenterden for the post of Senior Grand Warden. His lordship is emphatically a working Mason, and one who has fairly earned his laurels. The members of the Lodge of Harmony at Richmond, of which the new Grand Warden is a Past Master, and those of the Iris Chapter, of which he is a Past Principal, can bear witness to the zeal and efficiency ever displayed by Bro. Abbott, now Lord Tenterden, in the discharge of his duties, both in lodge and chapter. His lordship's connection with the Foreign Office, and the part he has more recently played as Secretary to the Alabama Commission are well-known to our readers, and we are convinced that the experience of American Freemasonry which he, in common with his chief, attained, whilst in the States, will not be lost upon the future relations of the Craft in England and America.

The Junior Grand Warden is also a government official, and in his appointment, we conceive, the London Lodge, No. 198, may justly take pride, the hon. brother being a Past Master of that distinguished lodge. Captain Vivian's name may not be so familiar to the Craft, but we are assured that he is a good and worthy Mason, and one in every way deserving of the high Masonic station to which he has been preferred.

The Rev. Arthur Bruce Frazer, the new Grand Chaplain, has been, and we believe still is, an active Mason. He has taken a prominent part in the lodges of Cambridge and Oxford, and is held in equal esteem by the members of both Universities.

The S.G. Deacons are Bros. John B. Monckton, P.M., 197, and Vice-President of the Board of General Purposes, and John P. Bell, M.D., Deputy Provincial Grand Master for the North and East Divisions of Yorkshire. Bro. Monckton has for some years past performed the onerous duties of our Masonic Boards and Committees with unflinching zeal and genuine courtesy. He has won the respect of all who know him, by the display of those qualities which essentially appertain to the gentleman, and when in addition to these claims to our esteem, he is also found to be a talented exponent of Freemasonry, no voice can deny his peculiar fitness for the honourable post of a Grand Officer. Nor can we lightly pass over the services of his colleague, Dr. Bell, whose literary abilities are so rare, and whose labours in the cause of Masonic enlightenment are equally assiduous and valuable. We congratulate our Yorkshire friends upon the selection of Dr. Bell, and we believe that a poll of his province would endorse the Grand Master's action, if such a procedure were in accordance with Masonic usage.

The elevation of Brother Charles A. Murton to the rank of Junior Grand Deacon, is a recognition of the great benefits which the "Emulation Lodge of Improvement" has conferred, and is still conferring upon the Craft. Bro. Murton who is a P.M. of No. 7, has been the Secretary of the "Emulation" for many years—in itself by no means a sinecure—he is also an accomplished ritualist—a supporter of the Charities, and—but need we say more. Bro. Henry J. P. Dumas, P.M. 99, is associated with Bro. Murton in the Joint Deaconship. He is likewise a well-tried and excellent Mason, and will wear his honours bravely.

A provincial brother, Thomas Coombs, Provincial Grand Secretary for Dorset, wields the baton of Assistant Grand Director of Ceremonies. He is, we learn, a most energetic officer in his Province, and his promotion is, beyond question, justly merited.

The new Sword Bearer, Bro. Alexander I. Duff Filer, P.M. 657, is an old Mason, and although not very widely known—he is recognised as a very useful member of the Order—and one who has not forgotten the second "Grand Principle" of Freemasonry.

By the advancement of Bro. John Boyd, a vacancy for "Assistant Grand Pursuivant" was created. This is a post usually given to metropolitan brethren, who have laboured long and ably in the cause; and we are bound to say that in nominating Bro. Charles A. Cottebrune to the position, the Grand Master has strictly adhered to ancient precedent. Bro. Cottebrune has been instrumental in forming several lodges. He has passed the chair more than once. He is an acknowledged teacher of Masonic ceremonies and lectures, and he is undoubtedly appreciated and esteemed by a large Masonic circle.

Thus ends our brief and hasty sketch of the Grand Officers of 1872, and we are pleased to add our fraternal meed of congratulation to each and all, upon the attainment of those dignities which mark superiority in the Craft.

GRAND CHAPTER.

The Quarterly Convocation of Grand Chapter was held on Wednesday evening, at Freemasons' Hall. Lord de Tabley presided as Z.; the Rev. John Huyshe as H.; and Dr. Hamilton as J. Comp. S. Rawson acted as P.Z.; Comp. John Hervey was S.E.; Comp. W. Pulteney Scott, N.; Comp. John Savage, P.S.; Comp. E. S. Snell, 1st A.; Comp. H. Browse, 2nd A.; Comp. Æ. J. M'Intyre, Q.C., Reg.; and Comp. Payne, Jan. The following Comps. were also present:—Lord Tenterden; F. Pattison, P.Z.; J. Bradford, P.A.G.D.; Benj. Head, P.G.S.B.; W. Ough, P.Z., 657 and 749; Joseph Smith, P.G.D.C.; A. H. Tattershall, J., 206; W. Noak, Z., 206; W. West Smith, Z., 799; Jas. Self, M.E.Z., P.Z., 1051; M. Bagge, P.Z. 7; F. Richardson, Z., 8; A. Holmes, P.G.S.P.; H. Pullen, P.G.D.C.; H. Muggeridge, P.G.S.B.; H. Massey, Z., 619; Joshua Nunn, P.G.D.C.; James Stevens, P.Z., and S.E., 720; John B. Monckton, P.Z., 8; H. G. Buss, P.Z., 177; C. Murton; Col. Whitwell; Sam. May, P.Z., 657; John Coutts, P.Z., 177; and F. Walters, P.Z., 73.

The Grand Chapter having been opened with the customary solemnities, the Grand S.E. read the minutes of the former Quarterly Convocation, which were put and confirmed.

The Grand S.E. then read a letter apologising for non-attendance, from the Grand 1st A.S., caused by his being obliged to attend the Birmingham Festival to be held the next day.

This being the night for the appointment of Grand Officers,

The Grand Z. said he regretted the absence of the Marquis of Ripon, whose manifold official duties detained him elsewhere. He also regretted the absence of the Earl of Carnarvon, Grand H., whose ill health precluded his taking a very active part in the duties of his high position. He (Lord De Tabley) was present to take the place of the Grand Z., and to invest the Grand Officers of the year; and he was proud to say that the Marquis of Ripon had expressed his full concurrence in the selection of officers that had been made. The three Grand Principals would be the same as at present. Comp. John Hervey would be S.E., and he would now invest him.

Comp. Hervey was then invested S.E., and Lord De Tabley afterwards invested the following Comps. with the insignia of their respective offices:—

Lord Tenterden	N.
John B. Monckton	P.S.
Lewis Crombie	1st A.
Chas. A. Murton	2nd A.
S. Tomkins	Treasurer.
Æ. J. M'Intyre, Q.C.	Reg.
H. J. P. Dumas	Sword Bearer.
Dr. J. Daniel Moore	Standard Bearer.
W. Ough	D.C.
C. B. Payne	Janitor.

Comp. W. Pulteney Scott moved, and Comp. Joseph Smith seconded, "That the following report be taken as read and received, and entered on the minutes," which motion was carried.

"The Committee of General Purposes beg to report that they have examined the accounts from the 16th January, to 16th April, 1872, both inclusive, which they find to be as follows:—

To Balance 16th January	£420	0	3
.. Subsequent Receipts	336	9	6

£756 9 9

By Disbursements during the Quarter	£142	18	10
„ Purchase of £200 Consols, 92 $\frac{3}{8}$, Bank Fee and Commission	185	12	6
„ Balance	427	18	5
	£756	9	9

which balance is in the hands of Messrs. Willis, Percival and Co., Bankers of the Grand Treasurer.

“The Committee have likewise to report that they have received the following petitions:—

“1st. From Comps. Joshua Nunn as Z., Henry Johnson as H., William Johnson as J., and seven others; for a chapter to be attached to the Caledonian Lodge, No. 134, London, to be called ‘The Caledonian Chapter,’ and to meet at the Ship and Turtle Tavern, Leadenhall-street, in the City of London.

2nd. From Comps. Elias Gottheil as Z.; Alfred Ellis Harris as H.; Charles Challis Taylor as J.; and seven others, for a Chapter to be attached to the Lodge of Faith, No. 141, London, to be called ‘The Faith Chapter,’ and to meet at Anderton’s Hotel, Fleet Street, in the City of London.

“3rd. From Comps. the Rev. Jno. Wm. Newell Tanner as Z.; Charles Dutton as H.; Samuel Gilbert as J.; and eleven others, for a chapter to be attached to the Lodge of Unity, No. 321, Crewe, to be called ‘The Chapter of Faith,’ and to meet at the Crewe Arms Hotel, Crewe, in the County of Chester.

4th. From Comps. Thomas Pibble Payne as Z.; James Ricketts Weston as H.; Henry Dusautoy as J.; and ten others, for a chapter to be attached to the Lodge of Peace and Harmony, No. 359, Southampton, to be called ‘The Chapter of Peace,’ and to meet at the Freemasons’ Hall, Southampton.

5th. From Companions Mark Scott as Z.; Frederick Dickinson as H.; John Brook Bray as J.; and six others, for a chapter to be attached to the St. Germain’s Lodge, No. 566, Selby, Yorkshire, to be called ‘The St. Germain’s Chapter,’ and to meet at the Crescent, Selby, in the County of York.”

“6th. From Comps. The Right Honourable Spencer Compton Cavendish, M.P., Marquis of Hartington as Z.; Haughton Charles Okeover as H.; Charles Robert Colville as J.; and eleven others, for a chapter to be attached to the Arboretum Lodge, No. 731, Derby, to be called ‘The Chapter of Truth,’ and to meet at the Arboretum Hotel, in the Township of Litchurch, in the County of Derby.

“7th. From Comps. William Henry Porritt as Z.; George Fox as H.; David Richard Wright Porritt as J.; and six others, for a chapter to be attached to the Londesborough Lodge, No. 734, Bridlington Quay, to be called ‘The Londesborough Chapter,’ and to meet at the Masonic Hall, Bridlington Quay, in the County of York.

“8th. From Comps. Samuel Geo. Homfray as Z.; Hy. John Higginson as H.; Wm. Williams junr., as J.; and nineteen others, for a chapter to be attached to the Philanthropic Lodge, No. 818, Abergavenny, to be called ‘The Philanthropic Chapter,’ and to meet at the Masonic Hall, Abergavenny, in the County of Monmouth.

“9th. From Comps. George Arthur Brown as Z.; John Lewis as H.; James Phillips as J.; and seven others, for a chapter to be attached to the St. George’s Lodge, No. 1098, Tredegar, to be called ‘The Prince of Wales Chapter,’ and to meet at the Temperance Hall, Tredegar, in the County of Monmouth.

“10th. From Companions John Millward as Z., Robert Rippon Duke as H., Frederick Turner as J., and twelve others, for a Chapter to be attached to the Phoenix Lodge of St. Ann, No. 1,235, Buxton, to be called ‘The Phoenix Chapter of St. Ann,’ and to meet at the Court House, Buxton, in the county of Derby.

“The foregoing Petitions being in all respects regular, the Committee recommend that the prayers thereof be respectively granted.

“The Committee have also received a Memorial from the St. George’s Chapter, No. 440, Montreal, praying for a Charter of Confirmation, the original Charter having been surreptitiously removed at the same time that the Warrant of the Lodge (for which a Warrant of Confirmation has since been granted) was also removed. The Committee being fully satisfied of the truth of the allegation set forth in the Memorial, recommend the prayer of the Memorial to be granted.

All the above were separately moved, seconded, and passed, without any discussion.

Comp. Scott then read the following item in the report:—

“The Committee have also to report that they have received a petition from the principals and other members of the Chapter of Hope, meeting at the Globe Tavern, Royal Hill, Greenwich, Kent, which is at present attached to the Lodge of Friendship, No. 206, meeting at the Ship and Turtle, Leadenhall-street, praying that the Chapter may be detached from the aforesaid Lodge, No. 206, and be henceforth attached to the St. George’s Lodge, No. 140, Greenwich, Kent, and be called ‘The St. George’s Chapter.’

“This petition is regular in form, and is accompanied with resolutions from both the lodges signifying their assent to the proposed arrangement. The Committee recommend that the prayer thereof be granted.”

Comp. Scott moved that the prayer be granted.

Comp. Joshua Nunn seconded the motion.

Comp. Bradford opposed it. It seemed to him a most extraordinary announcement to make to Grand Chapter. He had known Grand Chapter for the last twenty years, and had never known such a petition granted. What had been done ever since he had been a Mason ought to be done now. The present was an extraordinary course to adopt, and yet the Committee reported that the petition was “regular in form.” He did not say that he objected to the petition being granted, but he should call on Grand Chapter, if it granted this petition, to grant a similar favour to his own Chapter attached to St. John’s Lodge, which met at the Hollybush, Hampstead.

Comp. Scott said he could not allow these irregular observations to be made. Grand Chapter was not considering the St. John’s Chapter, and the bringing forward that subject was not relevant to the case under discussion.

Comp. Bradford replied that he thought St. John’s Lodge had been ill-used by being sat upon for the last twenty years.

The Acting Grand Z. reminded Comp. Bradford that the Chapter was now debating the contents of the report of the Committee which concerned the Chapter of Hope.

Comp. Scott added that Comp. Bradford referred to another Chapter—the St. John’s—which was not before Grand Chapter, and if he wished the case of St. John’s to be considered he must bring it in regular form before the Committee.

Comp. Bradford again said that St. John’s Chapter had been ill-treated for the last 20 years. (Cries of No, no.)

Comp. Scott inquired if Comp. Bradford wished to move an amendment.

Comp. Bradford replied that he would move, “That the petition under consideration be not granted until that of St. John’s Chapter were granted.”

The Acting G.Z. informed Comp. Bradford that if he liked to bring his case before the Committee of General Purposes he could do so, but he had no right to introduce an extraneous subject, which this was, into the discussion on the matters concerning the Chapter of Hope.

Comp. F. Walters said, there was nothing in the steps taken by the Chapter of Hope at all extraordinary. It had originally been attached to the Lodge of Friendship, but was afterwards separated from that lodge. It was well-known that the Lodge of Prudent Brethren parted with their Chapter Warrant some years ago to the Neptune Lodge. Separation of a chapter from one lodge, and attachment to another was nothing new.

The motion of Comp. Scott was then put and carried.

Comp. Scott said the last paragraph of the report was one of finance, but it had been well considered by the Committee before its adoption had been recommended to Grand Chapter. It was as follows:—

“The attention of the Committee having been directed to the very great increase in the number of chapters (nearly one-hundred), and the consequent increase of expenses in the office, since the arrangement was made in 1866, “that one sixth of the salaries paid by Grand Lodge should be paid by Grand Chapter, the Committee recommend the following resolution for the adoption of Grand Chapter.

“That in future Grand Chapter shall pay one-fifth, instead of one-sixth, of the salaries fixed by Grand Chapter to be hereafter paid to the Grand Secretary and his Clerks and the Grand Tyler, and that the sum of £50 per annum be contributed towards the general expenses, instead of £20 per annum as at present.”

He begged to move its adoption.

Comp. John Savage seconded the motion, and corroborated the statement that the increase in the number of chapters had greatly increased the work of the Grand S.E.’s office, and its expenses. It was but fair therefore that Grand Chapter should make an additional contribution towards those expenses. Some years ago it had been decided, that a sixth of the salaries of Grand Secretary’s office should be borne by Grand Chapter, and £20 paid towards the general expenses of the office, and at that time it was considered that the proportion was just. Now, however, when the work was so much increased, one-fifth of the said salaries, and £50 towards the expenses, seemed to him a proper proportion. If the Grand Chapter did not do this, probably we should hear before long that Grand Chapter was poaching on Grand Lodge. It seemed to him that the proposition was equitable, and he would second Comp. Scott’s motion.

The motion was carried unanimously. The Acting Grand Z. announced that the Grand Z. had appointed Comps. Scott, Head, and Fraser, members of the Committee of General Purposes for the year, and called on the Companions to elect the remaining six.

The election was then proceeded with, and of eight members who were proposed, Comps. J. Savage, Joseph Smith, Joshua Nunn, H. Browse, James Brett, and F. Adlard were chosen.

The formalities for closing Grand Chapter were thereupon observed, and the Companions separated.

Multum in Parvo, or Masonic Notes and Queries.

In Bro. Laurie’s history of Freemasonry (Ed. 1859, p. 163) it is stated that John McGowan, Esq., presented to Grand Lodge of Scotland a book “containing the minutes of a lodge of Freemasons, held at Rome in 1735, under the auspices of the Earl of Winton . . . this is the lodge over which Prince Charles Edward presided as Right Worshipful Master.”

We should be glad if any of the Scottish fratres would kindly inform us as to the character and contents of this minute-book, and the year in which the Prince was Master of the lodge.

W. JAMES HUGHAN.

What are the earliest records of the Mark Degree in this country? We shall be glad to correspond with any brethren who can furnish us with authentic extracts from the minute-book of any ancient lodge, or chapter, which worked the Mark degree anterior to the year 1770, in either England or Scotland.

It would appear from the Records we already possess that the “Mark-man” was given to Fellow Crafts, and the Mark Master, to Master Masons, during the latter part of the last century, and although it is often stated that Mark Master’s degree, (as now worked under the flourishing Mark Grand Lodge) was formerly a part of the Fellow Craft, we have never yet seen a minute of any lodge meeting, at which the Mark Masters degree was conferred on Fellow Crafts during last century. On the contrary, however, we have a code of By-laws transcribed for us from the Banff Lodge Records expressly providing for the restriction of the Mark Master’s degree to Master Masons, dated A.D. 1778.

W. JAMES HUGHAN.

REPORTS OF MASONIC MEETINGS.

Craft Masonry.

CORNWALL.

CHACEWATER.—Boscawen Lodge (No. 699).—The regular monthly meeting of this flourishing lodge was held on Monday, the 22nd ult., Bro. the Rev. G. L. Church, in the chair. There were a large number of the members of the lodge present. The business of the lodge was to initiate Mr. Frederick Davey, to raise Bros. Abraham and Bunney, and to present Bros. Past Masters Paull and Hall with P.M. jewels. After the candidate had been initiated and the brethren raised to the third degree, the W.M. informed the brethren that he felt highly gratified that evening, in having a special duty to perform, in the first place, he had the honour of proposing, Bro. the Hon. and Rev. J. T. Boscawen, as a joining member of this lodge, the gentleman from whom the lodge took its name, and secondly, to present Bros. Paull and Hall with Past Masters' jewels, this being done, the lodge was duly closed, when the brethren adjourned to Bro. Host Paull's for refreshment. After the cloth was removed, and the healths of "The Queen," "The Duke of Cornwall," and "The Grand Master of England," were proposed and heartily drank to. Bro. P.M. Ninness, by permission of the chairman, proposed "The Health of the Provincial Grand Master of Cornwall, Bro. Augustus Smith," and coupled with that toast "The Health of our W.M., Bro. the Rev. G. L. Church, P.G. Chaplain." Bro. Church briefly replied, thanking them for the honour they had done him, and assuring them that he felt proud of his position, believing that he was serving under one of the best Masons that had ever lived. The W.M. then said that he would come to the toast of the evening, asking the brethren to fill their glasses and drink a bumper to "The Healths of Bros. Past Masters John Paull and John Hall," this was received with applause. He felt in proposing this toast highly honoured by the fact, that he was the Master of the largest lodge in the Province of Cornwall. This was highly gratifying to himself, and to the other brethren of the lodge, and he felt assured that the present prosperity of the lodge must be attributed to their P.M.'s, who have been regular in their attendance, and always-willing to assist in the working of the lodge. The W.M. spoke at some length, urging on the young members of the lodge to look towards the east, and concluded by expressing a hope that he might on some future day have a similar honour conferred on him. Bro. Hall briefly replied, thanking the W.M. and brethren for the honour they had done him in presenting him with this handsome jewel, and assuring them that as long as his health should last he would continue to render his assistance for the welfare of the lodge. Bro. Paull in acknowledging the compliment paid him said, that the pleasure which he felt on the present occasion had almost overpowered him, he felt proud for the kind, though flattering remarks that had been made on himself and Bro. Hall by the W.M. and others, and promised to continue his services for the welfare of the lodge. He was one of the first who was initiated into the lodge, had served in every office within the door of the lodge, and had been their Secretary for six years, and that through the goodness of the Great Architect of the Universe in preserving his health, he had not during that time been absent but one lodge night. He thanked them for the handsome jewel they had presented him with that night, and that whenever he should look on it he should feel delighted, not for its intrinsic value, but it would have a tendency to recall to his mind the many happy hours he had spent with the brethren of the Boscawen. "The Health of the W.M. and others" followed, and the evening was spent in a manner long to be remembered by the members of the Boscawen. I might add that the jewels which were very chaste, and much admired, were purchased from Bro. Kenning, of London.

DEVONSHIRE.

TOTNES.—Pleiades Lodge (No. 710).—The monthly meeting was held on Thursday, the 18th ult., at the Masonic Rooms. The lodge was opened by Bro. Niner, W.M., assisted by Bros. Rev. J. Powning, Chaplain; Watson, as I.P.M.; Stafford, S.W.; Presswell, J.W.; Maye, Secretary; Westhead, S.D.; Fowle, J.D.; Taylor, Organist; and Cuming P.M., as I.G. There were also present Bros. Marks, P.M.; Dr. Hopkins, P.M., and P. Prov. G.S.W.; and other members, also as visitors, Bros. Haswell, 1358, and Michaelmore, 223. The minutes of the previous meeting were read and confirmed. The lodge having been opened in the second degree, Bro. David was examined, and having answered most satisfactorily, was approved, entrusted, and dismissed for preparation. The lodge was opened in the third degree, when Bro. David was re-admitted, and raised to the degree of M.M. by the W.M., the charge being given by Bro. Dr. Hopkins. The lodge was subsequently closed down to the first degree, when a lengthy discussion took place on matters of much importance to the members, but not of public interest. The lodge was finally closed at 8.30.

LEICESTERSHIRE AND RUTLAND.

OAKHAM.—Vale of Catmos Lodge (No. 1265).—The regular meeting of this lodge was held at the Agricultural Hall, on the 17th ult. Present:—Bros. J. C. Duncombe, P.G.A.D.C. Northants and Hunts, P.G. J.D. Leicestershire and Rutland, W.M.; Carter, P.M., as S.W.; Newcome, J.D., as J.W.; Jos. L. Bennett, Sec., Keep, as S.D.; Read, as J.D.; Tewson, as I.G.; and Hibbet, Tyler. The lodge was opened in due form, and the minutes of the last lodge were read and confirmed. Bro. Bennett, Secretary, proposed that the votes of the lodge for the Royal Masonic Benevolent Institution for Aged Freemasons, and the Royal Masonic Benevolent Institution for Widows of Freemasons, be left at the disposal of the W.M., seconded by Bro. Read, and carried unanimously. The lodge being closed in due form, the brethren adjourned to refreshment, after which the usual Masonic toasts were given, the visitors being responded to by Bro. Carter, P.M., No. 141.

Royal Arch.

PROVINCIAL GRAND CHAPTER OF MIDDLESEX.

The installation meeting of the Royal Middlesex Chapter, No. 1194, and the Inauguration of the Provincial Grand Chapter of Middlesex, took place on Saturday, the 20th ult.

The members of the Royal Middlesex Chapter met at the Grotto Hotel, Twickenham, under the sceptre of the M.E.Z., Colonel Burdett, who duly opened the chapter, assisted by his H. and J. and a large number of Past Principles, who attended to assist or to witness the ceremonies of the day. After ballots had been taken for several joining members, Comp. R. Wentworth Little, P.Z., took the first chair, and having opened a Conclave of Principals, proceeded to instal Comp. W. Roebuck, C.E., as M.E.Z. Comp. W. Smeed, P.Z., then installed Comp. G. Cattell, as H., after which Comp. Little installed the J.-elect., Comp. W. Dodd. The officers invested were Comps. Little, E.; Kenning, N.; Horsley, Treas.; and Parker, Organist; and in consequence of the resignation of the P.S.-elect, the other offices remained vacant. Several propositions were then made and the chapter was called off, in order that the important ceremonies of inaugurating the first Grand Chapter for the Province, and of installing its first chiefs, might be carried out in due form. The chair was accordingly taken by Comp. John Hervey, Grand Scribe E. of England, who nominated Comps. John Boyd, P.Z., 145 and 534, as H., and Dr. Woodman, P.Z. 33, as J. A deputation of four Past First Principals, Comps. J. Stevens, A. J. Codner, H. G. Buss, and R. W. Little, then, after the usual formalities introduced the Provincial Grand Superintendent, Colonel Burdett, P.Z., and the gallant Companion was obligated and installed as the First Chief of Royal Arch

Masonry in Middlesex. He then nominated Comps. W. Roebuck, Z. 1194, as Prov. G.H., and J. M. Stedwell, P.Z. 946, as Prov. G.J., and they were duly obligated and installed by Comp. Hervey. The election of a P.G. Treasurer resulted in favour of Comp. H. G. Buss, P.Z., who holds a similar rank in Provincial Grand Lodge, and the remainder of the Officers were then appointed and invested in the following order:—

R. Wentworth Little, P.Z.	Prov. G.S.E.
Antonio J. Codner, P.Z. ...	Prov. G.S.W.
John Coutts, P.Z.	Prov. G.P.S.
William Smeed, P.Z.	Prov. G. 1st A.S.
T. R. McIlwham, Z. 946	Prov. G. 2nd A.S.
Charles Horsley	Prov. G. Reg.
Geo. Motion, H. 946	Prov. G. St. B.
William Platt, P.Z.	Prov. G.S.B.
G. Kenning, (Z. 192) N. 1194	Prov. G.D.C.
Henry Parker	Prov. G. Org.

Comp. Gilbert was elected Prov. G. Janitor.

A Committee, consisting of the P.G. Supt. H. J. E. Treas., and Registrar, was appointed to prepare a code of by-laws for the government of the province. The Provincial Grand Superintendent then moved that the cordial thanks of Provincial Grand Chapter be tendered to Ex. Comp. John Hervey, G.S.E., for the kindness with which he had consented to perform the various ceremonies of inauguration, and installation, as well as for the dignity and solemnity which had characterised his efficient conduct of the work. The proposition was seconded by Comp. Roebuck, P.G.H. and carried by acclamation.

Comp. Hervey briefly acknowledged the compliment, after which the Provincial Grand Chapter, and the private chapter were successively closed. A sumptuous banquet was then served, the chair being taken by Colonel Burdett, supported by Comp. Hervey, as H. (a domestic affliction having caused Comp. Roebuck to retire). Comps. Eedwell, J.; Little, E.; Codner, N.; and the other newly appointed officers, together with Comps. Raynham, W. Stewart, Past Grand Standard Bearer of England; J. Boyd, W.; R. Woodman, M.D.; H. Carter, Z. 382; Major E. H. Finney, W. Dodd, G. Cattell, H. W. Hunt, T. W. White, D. M. Dewar, E. Baxter, P.Z. 8; J. W. Barrett, and several other Companions. During the evening Comp. Little, acting for Comp. Roebuck, M.E.Z. and on behalf of the Royal Middlesex Chapter, presented to Colonel Burdett a handsome P.Z.'s jewel, beautifully mounted, and adorned with the arms of the county. The presentation was greeted with loud cheers, which were renewed when the worthy President rose to return thanks. Several most effective speeches were made in proposing and responding to the various toasts, and the meeting altogether may be summed up as a great success. The musical arrangements were confided to Comp. Parker, Prov. G. Organist, and gave unqualified satisfaction, while the catering of Mrs. Bendy, the hostess, left nothing to be desired.

DEVONSHIRE.

TOTNES.—Pleiades Chapter (No. 710).—The quarterly meeting was held on Thursday, April 25th. The Chapter was opened at noon by Ex. Comps. J. Marks, M.E.Z.; Pridham, H.; G. Heath, J.; Dr. Hopkins, P.Z.; J. Heath, P.Z. After the admission of the companions, the minutes of the previous meeting were read and confirmed. The Treasurer gave a brief report of the finances. A board of 1st Principals was constituted after the withdrawal of the other companions, and Ex. Comp. Pridham was installed as Z. for the ensuing year. A board of 2nd Principals was then constituted, and Comp. G. Heath was obligated and placed in the chair of H. Lastly, a board of 3rd Principals was formed, and Comp. A. B. Niner was installed as J. In each case, the ceremony was performed by Ex. Comp. Dr. Hopkins, P.Z. The companions having been re-admitted, Comp. Beechey was installed as Principal Sojourner, and Comp. Croker as Janitor. Three brethren were proposed for installation at the next meeting, namely, Bros. Westhead, Stockwell, and Michaelmore. The Chapter was closed at half past one.

LEICESTERSHIRE.

LEICESTER.—Chapter of Fortitude (No. 279).—A regular convocation of this chapter was held at Freemasons' Hall on the 24th ult. The principal chairs were occupied by Comps. Toller, M.E.Z.; Stretton, H.; and Crow, J. There were also present Comps. Kelly, Prov. G. Supt.; Partridge, S.E.; Sculthorpe, S.N.; and other companions. Visitor—Comp. J. M. Moore, S.E. Rowley Chapter, Lancaster (No. 1,051). After the Chapter had been opened, and the minutes read and confirmed, the ballot was taken for Bro. G. B. Atkins, of John of Gaunt Lodge (No. 523), who was declared to be unanimously elected, and being present was exalted to this supreme degree by the M.E.Z., who also delivered the Mystical Lecture, the Symbolical, being given by the Prov. G. Supt., and the Historical by Comp. Crow, J. Three candidates were proposed for exaltation at the next meeting, after which the Chapter was closed, and the Companions retired for refreshment.

SCOTLAND.

GLASGOW.—The Caledonian Chapter of Unity (No. 73).—The companions of this chapter met on Tuesday last, at their hall, 170 Buchanan-street. D. Gilchrist, Z.; G. M. Donald, H.; G. W. Wheeler, J.; T. Findler, E. The Comps. of this chapter for correct work, had brought seven candidates, five of them being from the oldest lodge in Scotland, Mother Kilwinning No. 6. A lodge of Mark Masters was opened, W. Donaldson, acting as J.W. and G. Wheeler as Conductor. The lecture was delivered by Comp. D. Gilchrist. A lodge of Chair Masters was then opened, and the same gentleman received that degree. After labour, the brethren retired to refreshment, when after the usual loyal and Masonic toasts had been given, that of the candidates was proposed and responded to by Bro. Ferguson. That of Comp. Tweed was then given as the proposer of these seven candidates, and an energetic worker in Masonry. Comp. Tweed replied, pledging himself to do all that he could to assist the Caledonian Unity, his mother chapter, as well as Mother Kilwinning his mother lodge. The health of Comp. Wheeler was then drunk with all the honours, and he suitably acknowledged the kindness done him. Comps. Wheeler, and Park, replied on behalf of the Z's of other chapters. Happy to meet, and sorry to part, brought to a close this highly successful meeting.

Mark Masonry.

DEVONSHIRE.

TORRES.—Pleiades Lodge (No. 26).—At the quarterly meeting held on the 25th ult., under the presidency of Bro. A. B. Niner, W.M., the lodge was opened soon after six p.m., with Bros. Rev. R. Bowden, P.M., in the chair of S.W.; Dr. Hopkins, Past Grand J.W., in that of I.P.M.; Lidstone, acting as J.W.; Taylor, Org. The Overseers were unavoidably absent, and therefore the posts of the ceremony in which they are engaged were at the proper time explained by the J.P.M. The minutes of the previous meeting were read and confirmed. A ballot was taken for Bros. Oliver, Ferin, Pescott, and David, as candidates for advancement, which proving unanimously favourable, they were admitted, and received the benefit of this degree at the hands of the W.M. The lecture was given by Bro. Dr. Hopkins, P.M., and during his occupation of the chair, the W.M. having withdrawn, Bro. Niner was unanimously re-elected to preside over the lodge during the ensuing year. The W.M. re-entered, again assumed his chair, thanked the brethren for the compliment paid to him, and finally closed the lodge at 8 p.m.

Knights Templar.

LANCASHIRE.

PRESTON.—Prince of Peace Encampment.—The installation meeting of this encampment was held at the Assembly Rooms of the Bull Hotel, Preston, on Monday, the 15th ult. The E.C., Sir Knight J. Walker presided, and was supported by Sir Knight W. H. Wright, Deputy Grand Commander of the Province, and a goodly assemblage of Knights of the Order. The encampment was opened in due form, and the general business transacted. Comp. Edward Airey, of the Rowley Chapter, Lancaster, and Comp. John Worsley, of the Chapter of Unanimity, Preston, were duly elected, and the baton of command having been entrusted to Sir Knight Wright, they were regularly installed and proclaimed as Knights Companions of the Order—the symbols being explained by Sir Knight Moore. The choice of the members in their election of an E.C. for the ensuing year having unanimously fallen upon Sir Knight J. Daniel Moore, M.D., that energetic member of our fraternity, was regularly installed into the position of Eminent Commander of the Encampment by Sir Knight W. H. Wright, whose eminent services to the Prince of Peace Encampment both now, and at previous meetings, deserve especial acknowledgment. The officers were appointed as follows:—Sir Knights John Walker, P.E.C. and Registrar; Col. Birchall, Prelate; Robinson, 1st Captain; Capt. A. H. H. Whitehead, 2nd Captain; Galloway, Treasurer; Robt. Walker, Hospitaller; Major Wilson, Almoner; James Worsley, Expert; W. J. Sly, Capt. of Lines; Capt. Lockhart and Parkinson, Standard Bearers; E. Airey and John Worsley, Heralds. After the close of the encampment, the Knights sat down to a banquet, in every respect worthy of the occasion, the usual loyal, Masonic, and chivalric toasts being duly honoured.

GIBRALTAR.

CALPE ENCAMPMENT.—The regular meeting of this encampment was held on Tuesday evening, the 9th ult., at the Masonic Hall. The business of the evening was mainly the installation of the Eminent Commander elect, but it having been reported immediately on the opening of the encampment, that several illustrious pilgrims had arrived at the outposts, and were seeking admission, the Eminent Commander, Sir Kt. Balfour Cockburn, ruled that they should at once be examined, and if found worthy, admitted. On the return of the Captain of the Lines, he reported that the supplicants consisted of Companion Matthews, Colonel in the American Army, and Minister of the American Government at the Court of Morocco. Companion Wall, Lieutenant Royal Artillery, and Companion Herr Von Relle, late 83rd regiment. These companions were forthwith admitted, and installed as Knights Templar in a most solemn and impressive manner, Sir Kt. Price, acting as Expert, and carrying out the details of the ceremony in a manner worthy of the highest praise. When his newly created Knights had been placed in their respective stalls; E.C. Sir Kt. Balfour Cockburn, with the assistance of P.E.C. Sir Kt. Dautez and others, proceeded at once to instal Sir Kt. Carver, as Eminent Commander for the ensuing year. Sir Kt. Carver selected Sir Kt. Price, as 1st Captain, and Sir Kt. Wortman as 2nd Captain, Sir Kt. Henry being placed in the chair of Prelate. Before the encampment was closed P.E.C. Sir Kt. Balfour Cockburn begged to be permitted to say a few words in recognition of the untiring energy and zeal displayed by Sir Kt. Marn, who had been Registrar for the past year. The flourishing condition in which the encampment was handed over to Sir Kt. Carver, was in a great measure due to the exertions of the Registrar, and Sir Kt. Balfour Cockburn earnestly hoped that the present E.C. would be enabled to retain the services of so valuable an officer, more especially in so important a post as that of Registrar.

GLASGOW.

GLASGOW.—The Glasgow Girvan Encampment (No. 32).—This encampment met on Tuesday, the 2nd ult., to confer the degree of Knights of Malta on the following gentlemen:—John Tweed, James Crabb, Wm. Dubboe, Hugh Mathison, Wm. King, and R. W. Smith. The ceremony was conducted by Sir Kt. Bell, M.N.C., assisted by Sir Knts. J. Parks, J. E. Speirs, M. Clanachan, and G. W. Wheeler, Recorders. A letter was read from the Sir Knights of the Alleghany Commandery, conveying their thanks to this encampment for the banquet given to them on their visit to Glasgow. This letter as well as a copy of the reply sent to them was ordered to be sent to the *Freemason for publication. A letter was then read from the widow of the Equerry, and assistance voted from the funds, which was supplemented by a subscription from the Fraters present.

Red Cross of Constantine.

SCOTLAND.

EDINBURGH.—Edinburgh Conclave (No. 4).—The first anniversary assembly of this conclave for the installation of M.P.S. and Viceroy, was held in the Rooms, 79, George-street, on Tuesday evening, the 23rd ult., V.E., Sir Knt. J. B. Mercer, K.G.C., M.P.S. presiding; there was a full attendance of officers and members. The minutes of the meetings having been read and confirmed, Em. Sir Knt. Wm. Grant, (P.M. No. 349), (Hon. V.), Past Sen. Gen. V.-elect, was presented and regularly inducted into the chair of Eusebius. Sir Knt. C. G. C. Christie, (R.W.M. No. 36), M.P.S.-elect, was then presented, and having signified his assent to the prescribed rules and ordinances, was in a College of Viceroy's, solemnly consecrated, and afterwards in a Senate of Sovereigns, regularly enthroned as M.P.S. for the ensuing year. He then invested his officers as follows:—viz., Em. Sir Knt. J.A. Butti, I.P.M. No. 349, (Hon. V.) Past Junr. Genl., Senr. Gen.; Sir Knt. Geo. Watson, Junr. Gen.; Em. Sir Knt. John Taylor, P.M. 145 349) (Hon. Sov.) High Prelate, Sir Knt. A. M. Bruce, Treas.; Em. Sir Knt. R. S. Brown, Past Viceroy, Recorder; Sir Knt. T. S. Baird, Prefect; Robert Irlam, S.B.; Peter Lothian Herald, and William Grieg, Sentinel, with Em. Sir Knt. Alex. Henry, R.W.M. No. 349, Hon. Sov.; Sir Knts. Robert Smart, and James Clark as members of Council. The business ended, and the conclave closed, the Sir Knts. adjourned to the refectory, where an excellent banquet, presided over by the M.P.S., supported by the E.V.E., was provided and partaken of. The usual loyal and chivalric toasts were given, and duly responded to, and a most agreeable evening was enjoyed by all present.

Scotland.

GLASGOW.—Lodge St. Mark (No. 102).—The hundred and sixth annual festival of this lodge was celebrated on the 24th ult., at the North British Imperial Hotel. A goodly number of the brethren sat down to dinner, Bro. John Cuninghame, R.W.M., presiding, supported by Bros. Capt. Neill, of Swindrigemuir, Depute Master of Mother Kilwinning, and S.P.G.M. for Ayrshire; Charles A. Cuninghame, Waterside; Thomas Halket, P.M.; James F. Mitchell, D.M.; George Sinclair, R.W.M. 27; I. C. Noscript, W. C. Hotson, and Thomas Halket, jun. The duties of Croupier was discharged by Bro. Robt. Jamieson, S.W., supported by Bros. D. Douglas, J.W.; James B. Hardie, I.G.; Daniel Watson, P.J.W.; Hugh Campbell, Sec.; and Alexander Gladstone, jun., Dir. of Music. After dinner "The Queen and the Craft," and "The Army, Navy, and Volunteers," were proposed from the chair. Capt. Neill replied to the latter toast. The R.W.M. then gave "The Grand Lodges of England, Ireland, and Scotland." Bro. J. F. Mitchell, in proposing "The Prov. G. Lodge of Glasgow," said that under the régime of Bro. W. Montgomerie Neilson, Prov. G.M., the system of visiting the lodges in the province yearly had been carried out with great advantage, many irregularities had been corrected, and improvements made in conducting the business of the lodges that cannot fail to be of the greatest benefit to the Craft. Bro. George Sinclair, R.W.M. 27, proposed "Lodge St. Mark, No. 102," and in doing so alluded to the excellent manner in which the work of the lodge had been conducted by the

* Will be given next week.

P.M., and he had no doubt that under the present R.W.M. the lodge would continue to prosper, and maintain that high position in the Craft that it had so long occupied. The R.W. Master gave a very suitable reply. In the course of the evening Bro. John Cuninghame, R.W.M., presented Bro. Thomas Halket, P.M., with a gold watch and appendages for himself, and a brooch and a pair of earrings for Mrs. Halket. The watch bore the following inscription:—"Presented to Bro. Thomas Halket, P.M. Lodge St. Mark, No. 102, by the brethren of the lodge, in recognition of his many services as R.W.M. 1872." The R.W.M. observed that Bro. Halket had held almost every office in the lodge, and discharged his duties admirably. Bro. Halket, in acknowledging the testimonial said:—"I will carefully preserve your gift, and highly value it as a memorial of your respect—an evidence of the position which I have occupied in the lodge, and also as a proof that my labours have been approved of by the brethren. It will also constantly remind me of many endearing friendships which have been formed amongst the brethren, and of that social and fraternal intercourse which I have so long enjoyed amongst them, and which, I trust, will long continue. I would also thank you R.W.M. for the very kind manner in which you have presented the testimonial. I have considered it not only a duty, but a privilege, to do all in my power to advance the interest of the lodge, and promote the principles of the Order. My connection with the lodge has been of a very pleasant character. The duties of office were rendered simple and pleasant by the hearty and efficient assistance which I received from the Office Bearers, and the members generally, for which I would now render them my sincere thanks; and I will endeavour to manifest my gratitude by rendering all the assistance I can to those in office. I trust that the lodge will continue to prosper in all its interests. I feel that I cannot express my sentiments respecting it better than in the words of our national poet, when addressing his mother lodge—

May freedom, harmony, and love,
Unite you in the grand design;
Beneath the Omnicient eye above
The glorious Architect divine.

The eye may keep the unerring line,
Still rising by the plummet's law;
Till order bright completely shine,
Shall be my prayer when far awa'.

Other toasts followed, some excellent songs were sung, and the evening was spent in a very pleasant and harmonious manner.

FREEMASONRY:

ITS WISDOM, STRENGTH AND BEAUTY; ITS ANTIQUITY, CHARACTER, STABILITY, AND USES.

An Address delivered by the Rev. W. V. TUDOR, at the Laying of the Corner Stone of the Masonic Temple at New Orleans, on Thursday, Feb. 15, 1872.

Most Worshipful Sir, Brethren, and Friends: An institution as old as Masonry needs no apology for its presuming still to exist. Its venerable age, to lay claim to no mythical antiquity, is simply an acknowledged fact. Its history has a weird fascination and charm, as though it were a sublime example. If we were to take up its origin, we should have to fumble into musty archives, whose dust, the accumulation of centuries, would bury us so deep, in a mould so dry and shifting, as not to sustain even a sprig of acacia to mark the spot where we went down. We could not be satisfied with any search into the record of Masonry that should stop short of the great King Solomon, and even arriving at this epoch, we should worry ourselves for want of facilities of pushing our excursion of inquiry yet deeper into the recesses of the dim past, shrewdly suspecting that in China, whose wig is the grayest of all the nations, if not her age; in India, where Sir William Jones thought he discovered writings of four thousand years ago; in Egypt, in the mysteries of Isis and Eleusis; among the colonies that Cecrops founded in Greece—all these traces might be detected of the distinct peculiarities of the idiosyncratic order that innocently yields its antiquity to Adam alone. By the time however, that we had gotten as far back as Babel, we should have become vain babblers indeed, if not long before, and so the assertion of our interesting age for Masonry is a matter merely of humour, or of curiosity, that may be indulged for a moment, and a matter about which Masons have scarcely that moment's concern. When we should condescend to take notice of the past thousand years, we should find the Masonry of to-day such a familiar denizen in lodges on the face of the earth, of that entire period, an institution of the Saxon Heptarchy, of York and London, an institution whose roll still show the names of historic bishops, and dukes, and kings, and philosophers, and statesmen—such a fixture in England, and subsequently in America, that we agree at once that the order is at least one thousand years old; and that admission is of importance, from the single consideration alone that the grand temple of Freemasonry is built upon the foundations of great and good men, truth itself being the chief corner-stone. But it is Masonry as a thing of the living present that is in our thoughts to-day. Behold in these United States 5,000 lodges, with an aggregate of 500,000 members; in this city thirty-two lodges, with an aggregate of three thousand members.

A due respect to the numbers who have honored us with their presence to-day, who, it is fair to presume, are not Masons, and particularly the respect due to the fair and better part, by far, of this audience, who not only honour but grace the occasion, and who we know are not Masons, although we should not be afraid to trust them if the law would permit, who have ever been distinguished for their love for the brotherhood, and as the daughters of a more than Masonic charity, such respect demands that we shall not speak in the cabalistic language of the craft, but in terms of general import and interest.

From the beginning men have organized themselves into associations, societies, communities, corporations, orders, etc. In that fact there is the expression of a law deeply impressed upon the nature of man, and this law, stated simply, disposes at once of all objections to the Masonic order, regarded as an association or companionship. The law of perfection, illustrated by the vice of imperfection, which inevitably attaches to all constitutions of organic bodies framed by man, and which so seriously impairs the efficiency of execution in detail of even the best constitutions, has but to be stated to dispose of all objections to Masonry, arising from the fact of unworthy members, half realized aims, defective co-operation, and inadequate practical results.

The law of the natural right of private judgment, illustrated by differences of opinion among peers in goodness and reason, with regard to causes and evidence, has but to be stated to dispose of all objections to Masonry, growing out of certain few unfortunate controversies in which it has participated in its history, and that have started questions of its general expediency, its indirect influence, its most pronounced historic tendency for good or bad, and in some minds, even its morality.

The only question then remaining is that which concerns the principles that have organized, the characters that have illustrated, and the works that have signalized its records; their testimony as to the general effect of the system and its moral status, and that must determine the attitude towards it of all men who have pureness of heart. To this last chief question the Mason is ready with his answer, albeit, indeed, he is not so anxious to multiply proselytes, or to undertake any anxious advocacy of his position.

Masonry would have died out long ago if it had depended for its perpetuity upon the active industry of its adherents, through the usual special methods of canvassing for supporters, directed to the specific end of increasing its numbers.

Masonry may allow encouragement, but never has addressed solicitations of applicants for admission. In this fact, in part, lies the reason which removes it as far from the nature of a religion, as it is also removed essentially from the spirit of hatred and evil. Believing that I am right as a Christian, I try to help make every man I meet a Christian. I have never tried to induce any one to become a Mason. A religious man may devote himself to Masonry, as an auxiliary to his own or others' good, but always, of course, under the strict regulation of the law of his religion, which enacts "redeeming the time." It is foreign to the very genius of Masonry therefore to put forth any apology. It is sublimely dignified, reserved and self-contained. It is an example of free individual segregation from the mass, an association of individuals, an illustration of the law of association operating among beings of one blood, an incident of the social state—a close communion, an institution whose teachings, sentiments, and aim are as pure and good, as truth, love, and happiness; whose doors, now closed for strength's sake, fly open again for love's sake to every brother man, worthy and well qualified, who knocks for admittance, an institution, whose prayer is that all were thus worthy and well qualified, and that will therefore bless even the unworthy with its benefits, with relief in trouble and guidance in ignorance, in the shape of their exaltation; and so contemplate expressly in its familiar inculcations, and in its beneficent and charitable designs, the whole world of mankind. It stands upon its dignity, survives with the world, does alone in secret what cheers many a heart, treads the sick room softly, yet the tread, though light, may be distinctly heard by the ear, day and night together, as long as there is need. It buries the dead with a gentle courtesy that starts from the widow's eyes tears of blessing and consolation with the tears of bereaved grief; and returns from the garlanded grave to be to the widow a husband, to the orphan a father. God willing, it will build a Temple on this spot, in precious memory of saints of old, and in the faith of good men yet to come, as long as earth shall have a future.

Masonry, in the bare right to exist as long as men will, holds its belief and doctrines for itself, for ever settled beyond all amendment or change. The Bible is its great light. God, and his Book of the Law, revelation and redemption, death and destruction, holiness and love, life and immortality, retribution and heaven, through the blood of atonement, are ideas fundamental to its identity. It conceives itself welcome to Christian truth, and so has adopted it. For the truth to be held in unrighteousness is, alas, too sadly human, and so brethren are warned to take due notice of the admonitions to that effect of the Great Master of Assemblies, and govern themselves accordingly. If the virtues of Masonry were, in their perfection, the virtues of any one Mason, it could be said of him:

Behold a man all o'er consummate, absolute,
Full orb'd, in his whole round of rays complete.
"Are Masons gadder than udher men?" is a question that King Henry VI. of England, asks in an ancient manuscript found by the distinguished metaphysician, John Locke, in the celebrated Bodleian library. This manuscript is a matter of great curiosity and much interest to Masons. It contains certain questions and answers concerning the mysteries of Masonry, written by the hand of King Henry VI. and copied by one John Leylaude, antiquarian. I have quoted one of the questions, "Are Masons gadder than udher men?" The answer is, "Some Masons are not so virtuous as some udher men, but in the most part they be more good than they would be if they were not Masons." It is said that Locke, the scholar and metaphysician, was so struck with the reading of this manuscript that he sent it to the Right Honorable Thomas, Earl of Pembroke, with a letter signifying his intention to enter the fraternity, if he might be admitted, the next time he went to London.

If faith, hope, and charity; if silence, caution, and discretion; if industry, economy, temperance, and truth; if justice, fortitude, and piety be virtues—combined in one character, they would surely make the perfect man better than another destitute of them, and I have named the Masonic virtues.

If the square and level, plumb and rule, and hammer and mallet, and chisel, in the hands of the operative mason can guide into stability, beauty and proportion the rising edifice, their symbolic use in moral or speculative Masonry should train in delicate adjustment the growth of character into the stature of a perfect man, the lines of geometry, and angles of correct vision, (seeing things as they are, discriminating between shams and realities, looking at things not seen,) and curves of beauty, and solids of genuine attainments in goodness and grace, (as distinguished from the superficial boasts of vanity,) are to be considered in the formations of character;—and geometry is the Mason's favourite science.

If to tread the path of duty and benevolence bare-foot or shod, to prefer labour to refreshment, and death to dishonour, be noble elements of character, they are lessons which a Mason cannot enter his lodge without learning.

If you inquire what are the jewels of a lodge, I would answer, brotherly love, relief and truth.

If you inquire what are the Masons' secret signs, I would answer, all the signals of distress, from the infant's cry to the "union down" of a sinking ship.

If you ask the Masons' password, I would answer for the entire brotherhood. Let our words here, in the lodge, or in secret communion, be what they may, nevertheless. "Not every one that saith unto me Lord, Lord, shall enter into kingdom of Heaven, but he that doeth the will of my Father who art in heaven."

Secrecy is a peculiar feature of Masonry, and the meaning and power of a Mason's secrecy lies in another word, and that is silence. To illustrate: God is silent. A boy's rocket shot into the air makes more noise than all God's constellations. In what dignified, sublime, awful reserve does the great Architect contain himself—reserve of thought large as space and deep and solemn as the sea; of holiness, stern as the mountains and pure as the breeze that sighs around them; of mercy quick as the light, and gentle as the tints that make it. "The heavens declare the glory of God. Day unto day uttereth speech of Him," but in tones that do not break an infant's fevered slumber. Could we stand in the focus of those tones, we should hear the soliloquy of God.

The secret of a Mason's secrecy is in the words: "When thou doest alms, let not thy left hand know what thy right hand doeth;" or these: "He shall not cry, nor lift up, nor cause his voice to be heard in the streets."

The Masons' great quest is light. If we look up at night, we see shining upon us with a distinct brightness orbs and worlds, far beyond the point where our sun can lend them any radiance. They are not lit up by his beams and yet they shine. How is this? Science explains it. It has discovered a luminous element, which it calls ether, which encompasses all the worlds that our eyes behold. The element is invisible, impalpable, imponderable, immeasurable. It is a sea of light, irradiating every sun, and bathing in splendour every star. Destroy or dissipate it, and our sun would go out in stygian darkness, and not a star would beam in the firmament. Suns and stars drink deep of the invisible glory, and then themselves become fountains of light, which rolls in waves, that in swift succession and with immense rapidity traverse in all directions the unfathomable sea. In the ethereal elements of truth which God has poured like a flood upon our intelligent being, Masonry would bathe itself that it may become itself a fountain and source of light to those that sit in darkness.

As the light of the sun gives unity to the works of God and kindles them into beauty, clothes every landscape with its rich and varied loveliness, imparts to every gem its lustre, to every star its blazing radiance, so is it the light of truth alone that gives unity, beauty, and excellence to the Masons' lodge.

Truth, like light, is stainless, pure. The ray that discovers the mote in the air is not infected by it, nor defiled by the stain that it reveals, only that it may be removed.

Light shines and creation rejoices. Verdure clothes the earth and flowers adorn it; lakes and rivers become polished mirrors under its delicate touch, and ocean laughs to its very depths under the sweet and powerful influence, as day mounts the heavens. Life in a thousand forms renews its activity, the groves become vocal with innumerable songs, the petals of the flowers unfold to Aurora's roscate fingers and cast forth their perfume, the beast of the field rises from his grassy couch, and the monarch of all goes forth to his labor. Such animation, beauty and joy is truth, received in the love of it to the soul of man.

The virtues taught in Masonry are the white light of truth refracted into the colours of the rainbow.

The light of truth in Masonry is the light of life and immortality. "Death is an eternal sleep:" they wrote it on their tombstones and cemeteries in ancient times. Truth with pencil of light, has written on our graves "resting in hope."

"Who follows truth carries his star in his brain."

The corner stone will now be laid with ample ceremony. It will receive at the hands of the Grand Officers a tribute of corn, and wine, and oil: symbols, respectively, the corn of nourishment, the wine of refreshment, and the oil of the joy which the fraternity wishes this community, in the midst of which it is planted.

The foundation stone placed in position, let the Temple rise if the work be of God; if not, let the confusion of Babel seize the builders, and the work itself come to nought.

Let the temple rise; the expression in union of its parts and the solidity of its structure, of concord, harmony and brotherly love yet abiding on earth, though the nations be embroiled in strife; just as the institution which it shall cover has often been a refuge and comfort for enemies in war!

Let the temple rise; let it real the firmer to its base for every earthquake, and shine the brighter for every tongue of fire that licks it; and whenever time or judgment, as one or the other must, shall reveal the contents of the box now to be enclosed in the corner-stone, may documents and papers discover by contrast a better, purer, happier state of society than now, then existing: the murder and fraud, and corruptions in public life, of which the journals to-day tell the story, passed away forever, and the race well advanced toward perfect goodness and happiness!

Let the temple rise!

It is the quaint conceit of a wild modern poet, that the precious stones of our earth are the remains of a temple built by angels in Eden, to the worship of God. The foundations of the temple were bright and beaten gold, tower and roof and pinnacle without were solid diamond, and the dome was eye-blue sapphire, studded with golden stars; the floor was emerald, veined with gold and silver, marble and mineral of every hue were in its walls, the columns were of alabaster, the altar was one ruby, heart-like, and where all things were magnificent the meanest thing was gold, and the plainest. Man fell and joined the hosts of hell, black-bannered, on the very day when he should have met God and his angels there, and immediately also fell that bright fane. No death-dimmed eye gazed on its glory. Earthquakes gulped it down. The Temple of the Angels lay in its grave; till at the Flood it burst like a shell and scattered east and west, and far and wide, its fragments, that are the diamonds and rubies, and emeralds and sapphires of this world's costly merchandise.

The temple of a perfect human nature has been wrecked. Yet benevolence, truth, justice, mercy, love, are scattered like fragmentary jewels in separate human characters.

Let it be our nobler Masonry to rebuild the Temple of the Lord in the perfect man, until he shall stand forth himself again, the jewels one again in combination, love beating in the heart, truth ever speaking from the tongue, justice ever reigning in the mind, benevolence ever giving from the hand, righteousness ever in the path of the feet, kindness ever beaming from the eye, gentleness curving every limb, honour crowning the head, and goodness unqualified the description of the life.

Let the Temple rise, the constant admonition to us particularly, brethren, of that fairer, nobler edifice of character in godliness and grace that can only be built upon the foundation of the apostles and prophets, Jesus Christ himself being the chief corner-stone!

BREAKFAST.—EPPS'S COCOA.—GRATEFUL AND COMFORTING.—"By a thorough knowledge of the natural laws which govern the operations of digestion and nutrition, and by a careful application of the fine properties of well-selected cocoa, Mr. Epps has provided our breakfast tables with a delicately-flavoured beverage which may save us many heavy doctors' bills."—Civil Service Gazette. Made simply with Boiling Water or Milk. Each packet is labelled—"JAMES EPPS & Co., Homœopathic Chemists, London."

Reviews.

"ALBION'S CHURCH."

Among the many imitators of the anonymous author of the well-known brochure "The Row in Dame Europa's School," Mr. S. E. Thomas stands forth conspicuously as the writer of a little pamphlet entitled, "The Row in Dame Albion's Church School," which, in a dramatic form, supplies an exposition of the varying shades of thought and doctrine entertained and taught within the pale of the Established Church by its most eminent professors. On this dialogue's first appearance, the vigour with which it was written, and the command of the subject displayed, evinced that its author was no mere tyro in the study of divinity, while the easily penetrated disguises of the dramatis personæ, and the felicitous turns of expression attributed to each, denoted the well-read student and the keen observer. It at once became highly popular, and now the invariable sequel to popularity, a people's edition, under the crisper title of "Albion's Church" has been issued by Messrs. Houlston and Son, the original publishers, at an almost nominal price. Denominational effusions must ex necessitate rei be but seldom noticed in these columns, but the little squib before us, characterised as it is throughout, by a pervading spirit of charity, and a truly catholic breadth of observation and comprehensive toleration, may fairly plead as an excuse for our departure from the rule. The presence in the work under notice of these qualities must commend it to the favourable notice of Freemasons, as a body of men whose creed is unsectarian and cosmopolitan.

We have received "A Masonic Galop," by Bro. W. Hemingway, and can safely recommend it, feeling assured it will give satisfaction to all lovers of music, whether they are connected with the Fraternity or not.

THE GLOUCESTER LODGE CENTENARY.—Whilst the Grand Master and the other high officers engaged with him in this festival were assembled at the Deanery, advantage was taken of the opportunity to signalise the event by taking a photograph of them in a group, the operators being Messrs. Adams and Stilliard, who have produced a real work of art, all the portraits being most distinct and expressive. The "group" may be obtained of the above firm, and a most interesting memorial of the grand celebration it may be considered.

Obituary.

BRO. W. WESCOE, I.P.M. 266.

With profound sorrow we record the death of our respected Bro. William Wescoe, I.P.M., of Naphtali Lodge, No. 266, Heywood, Lancashire, which occurred near his residence on the 12th ult. His remains were interred at the Heywood Cemetery on the 18th ult., the funeral being numerously attended by the brethren, amongst whom were several Provincial Officers. The deceased was highly esteemed, and general sympathy was evinced by the whole town.

BRO. THOMAS SAMBROOKE.

At the Brompton Cemetery on Tuesday, the 23rd ult., were interred the mortal remains of Brother Thomas Sambrooke, who expired at his place of business in High Holborn on Thursday the 18th, somewhat suddenly, after a short illness of three or four days only, aged 54. Bro. Sambrooke was initiated in the Egyptian Lodge, No. 27, on the 4th October, 1860. His career in Masonry was not marked by any notable event, as he never aspired to hold office in his lodge, but a kinder or more genial soul never breathed. He was well known to, and highly esteemed by his neighbours and fellow-tradesmen, as a man of strict honour and integrity. His remains were followed to the grave by many of his Masonic friends and neighbours, as mourners, or otherwise, amongst whom were noticed: Bros. Todd, Buss, Berri, Hoare, J. May, C. Burnett of No. 27; Burry, No. 172; Messrs. Easton, Burden, Baker, Battson, and others.

METROPOLITAN MASONIC MEETINGS.

For the Week ending Friday, May 10, 1872.

The Editor will be glad to have notices from Secretaries of Lodges and Chapters of any change in place or time of meeting.

SATURDAY, MAY 4.

General Committee Boys' School, Freemasons' Hall, at 4. Lodge 142, St. Thomas's, Caledonian Hotel, Adelphi. Star Lodge of Instruction (1275), Marquis of Granby, New Cross-road, at 7; Bro. C. S. Dilley, Preceptor. Sphinx Lodge of Instruction (1329), Stirling Castle, Camberwell, at 7.30; Bros. Thomas and Worthington, Preceptors. Mount Sinia Chapter of Instruction, Union Tavern, Air-street, at 8; Comp. Brett, Preceptor. Manchester Lodge of Instruction, Yorkshire Grey, London Street, Fitzroy-Square, at 8.

MONDAY, MAY 6.

Lodge 16, Royal Alpha, Willis's Rooms, St. James's. " 25, Robert Burns, Freemasons' Hall. " 171, Amity, Ship Hotel, Greenwich. " 188, Joppa, Albion Tavern, Aldersgate-street. " 256, Unions, Freemasons' Hall. " 1319, Asaph, Freemasons' Hall. Chap. 174, Sincerity, Cheshire Cheese Tavern, Crutched Friars. Mark Lodge, No. 11, St. Mark's, Masons' Hall, Masons' Avenue, Basinghall-st. Sincerity Lodge of Instruction (174), Railway Tavern, Fenchurch-street Station, at 7. Strong Man Lodge of Instruction (45), Old Jerusalem Tavern, St. John's Gate, Clerkenwell, at 8; Bro. James Terry, Preceptor. Camden Lodge of Instruction (704), Adelaide Tavern, Haverstock-hill, at 8; Bro. T. A. Adams, Preceptor. Eastern Star Lodge of Instruction (95), Royal Hotel, Mile-end-road, at 7.30; Bro. E. Gottheil, Preceptor. British Oak Lodge of Instruction, Bank of Friendship Tavern, Mile End, at 7 for 8. St. James's Union Lodge of Instruction (180), Horse and Groom Tavern, Winsley-street, (opposite the Pantheon), Oxford-street, at 8; Bro. J. R. Stacey, Preceptor. Wellington Lodge of Instruction, White Swan Tavern, Deptford, at 8; Bro. C. G. Willey, P.M. 11.55, Preceptor. St. John of Wapping Lodge of Instruction (1306), Gun Tavern, High-street, Wapping, at 7; Bro. T. Mortlock, Preceptor.

TUESDAY, MAY 7.

Colonial Board at 3 o'clock. Lodge 9, Albion, Freemasons' Hall. " 18, Old Dundee, London Tavern, Bishopsgate-st. " 167, St. John's, Holly Bush Tavern, Hampstead. " 1257, Grosvenor, Victoria Station, Metropolitan Dist. Railway, Pimlico. " 1259, Duke of Edinburgh, New Globe Tavern, Bow-road. " 1261, Golden Rule, Masons' Hall, Masons'-avenue. " 1298, Royal Standard, Marquess Tavern, Canonbury. Chap. 169, Temperance, White Swan Tavern, Deptford. " 507, United Pilgrims, Horns Tavern, Kennington-park. Metropolitan Chapter of Instruction, Portugal Hotel Fleet-street, at 7; Comp. Brett, Preceptor. Domestic Lodge of Instruction, Palmerston Tav., Grosvenor-park, Camberwell, at 8. Bro. John Thomas, Preceptor. Faith Lodge of Instruction, Refreshment Rooms, Victoria-st. (opposite Westminster Palace Hotel) at 8; Bro. C. A. Cotterburne, Preceptor. Yarborough Lodge of Instruction, Green Dragon, Stepney, at 8; Bro. Isaac Saqui, Preceptor. Prince Fredk. William Lodge of Instruction (753), Knights of St. John Tavern, St. John's Wood Bro. F. G. Baker, Preceptor. Dalhousie Lodge of Instruction, King Edward, Triangle, Hackney, at 7.30. Bro. J. Saunders, Preceptor. Sydney Lodge of Instruction (829), Cambridge Hotel, Upper Norwood, at 7.30. Ben Johnson Lodge of Instruction, Ben Johnson, Goodman's-yard, at 8. Florence Nightingale Lodge of Instruction, Masonic Hall, William-street, Woolwich, at 7.30. Prosperity Lodge of Instruction, Gladstone Tavern, Bishopsgate-st. Within, at 7.30; Bro. Bolton, (W.M. 1227), Preceptor. St. Marybone Lodge of Instruction (1305), British Stores Tavern, New-street, St. John's Wood, at 8; Bro. T. A. Adams, Preceptor. West Kent Lodge of Improvement (1297), St. Saviour's College, Stansted-road, Forest-hill, at 7.30; Bro. H. W. Lindus, Preceptor.

WEDNESDAY, MAY 8.

Festival of the Royal Masonic Institution for Girls. Committee of Royal Masonic Benevolent Institution, at 3. Consecration of the New Masonic Hall, 33, Golden-square, at 3 o'clock. Lodge 3, Fidelity, Freemasons' Hall. " 13, Union of Waterloo, Masonic Hall, William-st., Woolwich. " 15, Kent, Guildhall Coffee House, Gresham-st. " 87, Vitruvian, White Hart, College-st, Lambeth. " 147, Justice, White Swan, High-st, Deptford.

" 238, Pilgrim, Ship and Turtle, Leadenhall-st. " 781, Merchant Navy, Silver Tavern, Burdett-rd, Lime-house. " 820, Lily of Richmond, Greyhound, Richmond. " 1017, Montefiore, Freemasons' Hall. " 1216, Macdonald, Brunswick-st., Camberwell. " 1228, Beacontree, Private Rooms, Leytonstone. " 1306, St. John of Wapping, Gun Tavern, High-st. Wapping. Pythagorean Lodge of Instruction (79), Prince of Orange, Greenwich, at 8; Bro. J. Robt. Nash, Preceptor. United Strength Lodge of Instruction (228), the Grafton Arms, Prince of Wales' Road, Kentish Town, at 8; Bro. J. N. Frost, Preceptor. Israel Lodge of Instruction, Rising Sun Tavern, Globe-road, at 7.30; Bro. Isaac Saqui, Preceptor. New Concord Lodge of Instruction, Rosemary Branch Tavern, Hoxton, at 8. Confidence Lodge of Instruction, Railway Tav., London-street, City, at 7.30. Royal Union Lodge of Instruction, Horse and Groom Tavern, Winsley-street, Oxford-street, at 8. Bro. T. A. Adams, Preceptor. Peckham Lodge of Instruction, Maismore Arms, Park-road, Peckham at 8; Bro. David Rose, Preceptor. Temperance in the East Lodge of Instruction, George the Fourth, Catherine-street, Poplar. Stanhope Lodge of Instruction, Thicket Hotel, Anerly at 7.30 p.m.; Bro. H. W. Lindus, Preceptor.

THURSDAY, MAY 9.

Grand Council of Illustrious Knights, K.H. 30°, Masonic Hall, 33, Golden Square. Temple Crossing K.T. Encampment, Horns Tavern, Kennington. Lodge 91, Regularity, Freemasons' Hall. " 206, Friendship, Ship and Turtle Tavern, Leadenhall-st. " 263, Bank of England, Albion Tav., Aldersgate-st. " 1076, Capper, Marine Hotel, Victoria Dock, West Ham. " 1227, Upton, Spotted Dog, Upton, Essex. " 1288, Finsbury Park, Finsbury Park Tavern, Holloway. " 1321, Emblematic, Tulse Hill Hotel, Tulse Hill. The R.A. Chapter of Improvement, Freemasons' Hall, at 7; Comp. Brett, Preceptor. Ceremony, explanation of R.A. Jewel and Solids, part sections. Fidelity Lodge of Instruction (3), Yorkshire Grey, London-st., Tottenham Court-road, at 8; Bro. T. A. Adams, Preceptor. Panmure Lodge of Instruction (720), Balham Hotel, Balham, at 7.30; Bro. John Thomas, Preceptor. Finsbury Lodge of Instruction, Jolly Anglers' Tavern, Bath-street, City-road; Bro. Stean, Preceptor.

United Mariners' Lodge of Instruction, Three Cranes, Mile-end-road, at 8; Bro. T. J. Barnes, Preceptor. St. George's Lodge of Instruction (140), Globe Tavern, Royal Hill, Greenwich, at 8. Whittington Lodge of Instruction (862), Crown Tavern, Holborn, at 8; Bro. Lewis Alexander, P.M. 188. Preceptor. Chigwell Lodge of Instruction, Bald-faced Stag Hotel, Buckhurst Hill, at 7.30.

FRIDAY, MAY 10.

Grand Conelave Knights Templar, Freemasons' Tavern, Lodge 33, Britannic, Freemasons' Hall. " 134, Caledonian, Ship and Turtle, Leadenhall-street. " 157, Bedford, Freemasons' Hall. Chapter 6, Friendship, Willis's Rooms, St. James's. Unions Emulation Lodge of Improvement for M.M.'s, Freemasons' Hall, at 7. Metropolitan Lodge of Instruction, Portugal Hotel, Fleet-street, at 7; Bro. Brett, Preceptor. Belgrave Lodge of Instruction, Duke of Wellington Hotel, Spring-gardens, Charing-cross; Bro. Pulsford, Preceptor. Doric Lodge of Instruction, Three Cranes Tavern, Mile-end-road, at 8; Bro. Isaac Saqui, Preceptor. Robert Burns Lodge of Instruction, Union Tavern, Air-street, Regent-st., at 8; Bro. W. Watson, Preceptor. Burgoyne Lodge of Instruction, Grafton Arms, Prince of Wales'-road, N.W., at 8. St. Luke's Lodge of Instruction (144), Gladstone Tavern, Brompton-road, S.W. United Pilgrims Lodge of Instruction, Duke of Edinburgh, Shepherd's-lane, Brixton, at 7; Bro. J. Thomas, P.M., Preceptor. Duke of Edinburgh Lodge of Instruction, Silver Lion, Penny-fields, Poplar, at 7; Br. D. S. Potts, Preceptor. St. James' Lodge of Instruction, Gregorian Arms Tavern, Jamaica-road, Bermondsey, at 8. Bro. Howes, P.M., Preceptor. Temperance Lodge of Instruction, Victoria Tav., Victoria road, Deptford, at 8. Burdett Counts Lodge of Instruction (1278), Approach Tavern, Approach-road, Victoria-park, at 8; Bro. Geo. W. Verry, Preceptor. Clapton Lodge of Instruction, White Hart, Clapton, at 7.30; Bro. John Saunders, Preceptor. Royal Standard Lodge of Instruction (1298), The Castle Tavern, Holloway, at 8; Bro. R. Lee, (P.M. 193, W.M. 1298,) Preceptor. Pythagorean Chapter of Instruction (No. 79), Prince of Orange, Greenwich-road, at 8; Comp. W. West Smith, Preceptor.

Dr. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE.

THE ORIGINAL AND ONLY GENUINE.

CHLORODYNE is admitted by the Profession to be the most wonderful and valuable remedy ever discovered. CHLORODYNE is the best remedy known for Coughs, Consumption, Bronchitis, Asthma. CHLORODYNE effectually checks and arrests those too often fatal diseases—Diphtheria, Fever, Croup, Ague. CHLORODYNE acts like a charm in Diarrhoea, and is the only specific in Cholera and Dysentery. CHLORODYNE effectually cuts short all attacks of Epilepsy, Hysteria, Palpitation and Spasms. CHLORODYNE is the only palliative in Neuralgia, Rheumatism, Gout, Cancer, Toothache, Meningitis, &c.

From Lord FRANCIS CONYNNGHAM, Mount Charles, Donegal, 11th December, 1868.

"Lord Francis Conyngham, who this time last year bought some of Dr. J. Collis Browne's Chlorodyne from Mr. Devonport, and has found it a most wonderful medicine, will be glad to have half a dozen bottles sent at once to the above address.

"Earl RUSSEL communicated to the College of Physicians that he had received a dispatch from her Majesty's Consul at Manila, to the effect that Cholera had been raging fearfully, and that the ONLY remedy of any service was CHLORODYNE."—See Lancet, Dec. 1, 1864.

From W. VESALIUS PETTIGREW, M.D. Hon F.R.C.S. England;

Formerly Lecturer on Anatomy and Physiology, at St. George's School of Medicine.

"I have no hesitation in stating, after a fair trial of Chlorodyne, that I have never met with any medicine so efficacious as an Anti-spasmodic and Sedative. I have used it in Consumption, Asthma, Diarrhoea, and other diseases, and am most perfectly satisfied with the results."

From Dr. THOMAS SANDIFORD, Passage West, Cork.

"I will thank you to send me a further supply of Chlorodyne. It was the most efficacious remedy I ever used, affording relief in violent attacks of Spasms within a minute after being taken. One patient in particular, who has suffered for years with periodical attacks of Spasms of a most painful nature, and unable to obtain relief from other remedies, such as Opium, &c., finds nothing so prompt and efficacious as Chlorodyne."

From J. M'GILGOUR CROFT, M.D., M.R.C.P. London, late Staff Surgeon to H.M.F.

"Sir,—After prescribing Dr. J. Collis Browne's Chlorodyne for the last three years in severe cases of Neuralgia and Tic-Doloureux, I feel that I am in a position to testify to its valuable effects. Really, in some cases it acts like a charm, when all other means had failed. Without being asked for this report, I must come forward and state my candid opinion that it is a most valuable medicine, and I have recommended several Chemists in this neighbourhood not to be without it for prescriptions."

From JNO. E. GOULSTONE, M.D., late Principal Surgeon to the Steamship "Great Eastern."

"I can confidently state that Chlorodyne is an admirable Sedative and Anti-Spasmodic, having used it in Neuralgia, Hysteria, Asthma, and Consumption, with remarkably favourable results. It relieved a fit of Asthma in four minutes, where the patient had suffered eleven years in a most distressing manner, no previous remedy having had so immediate and beneficial an effect."

From Dr. B. J. BOUTON and Co., Horncastle.

"We have made pretty extensive use of Chlorodyne in our practice lately, and look upon it as an excellent direct Sedative and anti-Spasmodic. It seems to allay pain and irritation, in whatever organ and from whatever cause. It induces a feeling of comfort and quietude not obtainable by any other remedy, and it seems to possess this great advantage over all other sedatives, that it leaves no unpleasant after effects."

J. C. BARER, Esq., M.D., Bideford.

"It is, without doubt, the most valuable and certain Anodyne we have."

CAUTION.—BEWARE OF PIRACY AND IMITATIONS.

CAUTION.—Vice-Chancellor, Sir W. Page Wood stated that Dr. J. Collis Browne was undoubtedly the Inventor of CHLORODYNE; that the story of the defendant, Freeman, was deliberately untrue, which, he regretted to say, had been sworn to.—See Times, 13th July, 1864.

Sold in Bottles at 1/1 1/2, 2/9, 4/6, and 11/0 each. None is genuine without the words "Dr. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE" on the Government Stamp. Overwhelming Medical Testimony accompanies each Bottle.

SOLE MANUFACTURER—J. T. DAVENPORT, 33, Great Russell-street, Bloomsbury, London.

TABLE OF CONTENTS

Freemasonry and Israelitism 287
 Aids to Study..... 288
 Conversations for Freemasons 289
 Obituary 288
 Visit of the Festival Stewards to the Girls' School ... 290
 Freemasonry in Constantinople 291
 The American Knights Templar..... 291
 Annual Festival of the Royal Masonic Institution for Girls 292
CRAFT MASONRY:—
 Metropolitan 294
 Instruction 295
 Provincial 295
MARK MASONRY:—
 Provincial 296
KNIGHTS TEMPLAR:—
 Provincial Grand Conclave of Bengal..... 296
 Masonic Tidings—British, Colonial and Foreign..... 297
POETRY:—
 Masonic Ode 297
 Ode on the Dedication of St. Alban's Lodge 297
 Masonic Meetings for next week..... 298
 Advertisements..... 285, 286, 298, 299, 300

FREEMASONRY AND ISRAELITISM.
 AN EPITOME OF BRO. CARPENTER'S ARTICLES
 ON THIS SUBJECT.

By W. E. N., No. 766.

(Continued from Page 212.)

No. XVIII. Sept 23, 1871.—In the Anglo-Saxon Race the very opposite qualities are united in the same person. You will find a hero of indubitable courage, with the sympathy and tenderness of a woman. A people who unite in themselves these qualities are not formed to be subdued or conquered.

It was predicted that Israel, after the dissolution of the kingdom, was to become a powerful people overcoming all who should rise up against them; compelling all to acknowledge their superiority; while they evinced an all-embracing sympathy and benevolence. These predictions are fulfilled in the progress of the Getæ, or Goths, from the Euxine westward, their conquests in the Roman Empire, and their settlement in these islands. The Getæ were to be terrible in their anger when attacked. They were to be exposed to vicissitudes of success and loss, but not to be finally conquered. Israel was not only to be invincible, but he was to subdue peoples, and bring them into subjugation to him. (Isa. xli. 15, 16.)

It was foretold that Israel was to possess the gate of his enemies, and that nations should bow down to him. Long after, (when they were in captivity) it was declared of the Israelites, that they should trample on princes, like the mortar, even as the potter treadeth out the clay. (Isa. xli. 25.) Jeremiah says (li. 29-23) "Thou art my battle-axe and weapons of war, for with thee will I overthrow kingdoms," &c.

In the rise and fall of the Roman Empire and in the history of India, these prophecies and promises have been fulfilled in the Anglo-Saxon race. Again, with the progress and issue of the late terrible war between the Germans and French, these same people, the Getæ, (Israel) against whom the Romans so long fought in vain and were ultimately broken in pieces, "thrust down their enemies and trampled on those who rose up against them."

The Romans subdued all peoples and nations except the Goths, or Germans, who extorted the fear and respect of the Romans by their valour and independence. For ages the power of this race was dreaded; nations bowed down to them, and kings submitted to them.

The Gothic race of Norway and Denmark vexed all Western Christendom, and a large province of Northern France was ceded to them, and they became the civilised chivalry of Normandy. This is the people that was carried captive by the Assyrians to those regions in Asia and Europe, whence their westward progress had been traced by the marks left by them, and which exist at this day. They have subdued many nations, but they are not to be subdued. The prophetic promises in Jer. xxx. 16, and elsewhere refer to Israel and not to Judah, and have been fulfilled in the history of the Saxon race. The Norman conquest of England presents no difficulty, as both were of the same Saxon race, and ultimately they amalgamated. But England, to maintain her position, must be mistress of the seas. She is situated "in the midst of the nations" and has to guard her shores, and while promoting and maintaining peace among other nations, she has to be on the alert to protect herself.

It is a remarkable fact that Israel, to the exclusion of Judah, was educated in maritime affairs, and there is no doubt that they were trained with the Phœnicians, and some of them sailed with Hiram's servants to Ophir, to fetch gold in the time of Solomon.

It is obvious from the prophecies that Israel, after their captivity, was to become a maritime people, and to have possession of the islands, and also colonies in both hemispheres. It is said of Charlemagne, that seeing a fleet of Northmen cruising in the Mediterranean, he was filled with forebodings of the evils they would bring on his posterity. The Anglo-Saxons took after their kindred Norsemen. Emerson says, as soon as this land (England) got a hardy people settled in it, they became the sailors and factors of the globe.

It has been remarked, in explanation of the wealth of England, that as early as the conquest "its merchants traded to all countries."

No. XIX., Sept. 30th, 1871.—Notwithstanding the small extent of their home territories, and the inferiority of their military strength, the Anglo-Saxon race have achieved great conquests and hold extensive possessions. What they have lacked in numerical strength, they have made up in pluck and endurance. Their kindred in Germany and America exhibit the same qualities. One of the desires of Napoleon was to secure the alliance of England, believing that France and England united, might rule the world. But his pre-eminence was reserved for the Saxon race. England, Germany and America, now rule the world.

Israel was selected to diffuse and preserve the truth, for which purpose, power and independence were indispensable, and England has acted this part. The Abbé Milot, a French Roman Catholic, in his "Elements of the History of England," sets forth the occasions in which the English nation has triumphed over social and political difficulties, and has waxed stronger and stronger.

During the last, and the beginning of the present century, political corruption and rottenness arrived at such a pitch as threatened to decompose the State, but through all political and religious corruption, through wars, conspiracies and insurrections, the nation has been preserved; one by one, all the buttresses which have been raised to preserve misrule and corruption are being removed, and the foundations of that edifice (the Constitution) are being enlarged and strengthened (See Isa. liv., 11, 17.)

No. XX., Oct. 14th, 1871.—The money power of the Saxon race is a noticeable trait in their character. The creation of wealth in England during the last century is a main fact in modern history, and the wealth of England determines prices all over the globe. A great part of England's wealth is spent in philanthropic objects but having dispensed largely in this way, so much remains that she can supply the world with all the money it requires. This wealth is derived chiefly from manufacturing and mercantile industry, and amounts to between seven and eight hundred millions sterling per annum. The exports in our foreign commerce alone amount to £220,000,000 per annum. The accumulated savings of England, Germany, America, and the other Saxon nations, total up to amounts absolutely bewildering. Foreign Stocks, that is money lent to foreigners, amount to no less a sum than £2,800,000,000, and they are continually coming for more.

The Saxons never go to the Celts or Franks to borrow money, although they sometimes borrow among themselves. Germany and England are large creditors of America, and sometimes England lends to Germany. Although considerable amounts of British Stocks are held by foreigners, it is because they have such great confidence in British honesty and rectitude. Any slipperiness or crookedness on the part of the Government in matters of finance, would bring down the whole nation on the delinquents. Emerson (the American) says of the English, they hate shuffling and equivocation. The French feel the superiority of this probity.

In the ancient prophecies we have intimations of the wealth and monetary power of the Israelitish race, and we have found this to be characteristic of the descendants of the Getæ, and of no other people on the face of the earth. The prophet Hosea, after exhorting Israel in their calamities to return to the Lord in prayer, that he would take away their iniquities, pronounces (Hosea xiv. 11—16) the divine promise of spiritual and temporal blessing. In (Isaiah lx), we find a long description of Israel's future prosperity and restoration, uttered while they were yet in captivity. Many of these promises have yet to receive their fulfilment, as the description stretches onwards to the restorations of the tribes and their re-establishment in their own country.

The history of the world shows that all things are brought about by human agency and in a gradual manner. There are few sudden changes in the history of nations; they rise and fall by degrees. The chosen people are destined to advance gradually, and their growth in numbers, power, and wealth, will furnish the means for effecting the divine purpose in their final exaltation. The wonderful progress of the Gothic race, its mighty achievements, and its advancing position in the world, indicate that it is destined for some great purpose in the divine economy.

Israel, with his wealth, was to unloose the bonds of oppression, to give slaves their freedom, to clothe, feed, and house the destitute poor, in a word, to help the cast down, and comfort the distressed; and with his superfluous wealth he was to lend to others. In (Deut. xv. 6, xxviii. 12) we learn that Jacob's descendants (if obedient) should be largely blessed in their storehouses, the fruit of their body, in their cattle, &c., and that they should lend to many nations, and borrow of none.

This extraordinary prophetic blessing related to a people not yet formed into a nation. It implies that the people to whom it was spoken (though poor and despised, and just then escaping from slavery), should exceed all others in accumulated wealth. Other nations would require monetary aid, but this people never, but would of their superfluity lend to others. What has been said about foreign debts owing to England, shows the literal fulfilment, in a most remarkable manner, of this prophecy, and identifies the Anglo-Saxons with the people of whom it was spoken.

No. XXI. October 28th, 1871.—There are other points of identity of the Saxon branch of the Gothic race, with the ten tribes of Israel. It is incredible that ten-twelfths of that people, who were chosen by God to preserve the knowledge of His being and worship, (when all the world had plunged in darkness, idolatry, and licentiousness) should be destined to be "lost" and in no way employed in bringing about the important events predicted of them. The other two tribes (the Jews) are not lost, but have been witnesses of the truth of more terrible prophecies, which foretold the punishment, dispersion, and affliction which should follow their violation of the laws and the rejection of the Divine promises.

While Judah is thus testifying to the truth that was written many years ago, it is, inconceivable that Israel was to be as a light under a bushel for 2500 years, and then suddenly and miraculously to emerge as a mighty people, possessing the islands; a people unto whom kings shall bow down and do homage, and nations shall pour in riches. Under Divine guidance, men and nations do the work appointed for them, and it is but reasonable to believe that the ten tribes have been instrumental in effecting the great changes that have taken place during the last 1500 years. In (Isa. lxi, 9-11) we read. "Their seed shall be known (or illustrious) among the nations and their offspring among the people," &c.

The meaning of the prophecy is that they are to be distinguished among nations as a superior people. They are to be pre-eminently prosperous and religious, and to appear thus as a nation. They are not to spring forth suddenly as a people, but to grow gradually and become distinguished. The captivity of the ten tribes was an instrument of benefit to the world; it brought them into contact with the western races. At the time of the Babylonish captivity, when the Indo-Germanic (Japhetic) race of Persia came to the front Grecian influence began to be felt in Egypt, and there was a great intellectual awakening in Greece by Pythagoras; in Bactria, by Buddha, and in China by Confucius.

"MORE than a year ago one of my children was attacked with bronchitis, and, after a long illness, was given up by all physicians as 'past cure.' I was then induced to try your Vegetable Pain Killer, and from the time I began the use of it the child rapidly got better, and it is now strong and healthy.—JOHN WINSTANLEY, 10, Whittle-st., L'pool, 1869.—To P. D. & Son."

AIDS TO STUDY.

BY BRO. WM. CARPENTER, P.M. & P.Z., 177.
III.

In a former communication, under this title, I placed ancient history amongst the foremost of those subjects which should command the attention of a Freemason. It is as interesting as it is important, and no one can be excused for neglecting to make it an object of study, as far as his means will permit him to do so. He will not be permitted to proceed far in this study, however, before he is met by sundry questions relative to the different families of the human race. The first question thus suggesting itself will probably be that concerning the unity of the race—whether all the races of men scattered over the surface of the earth, distinguished as they are from each other, in structure of body, in features, and in colour, and differing in languages and manners, are the offspring of a single stock, or have descended, respectively, from several original families. The problem has engaged the thoughts and inquiries of many great minds, in both ancient and modern times. The ancient philosophers dealt with it loosely and erroneously. The ignorance of the whole existing races of mankind—the prejudices of their mythology—and their general want of appreciation of scientific evidence—these and other difficulties, which, in their totality, even the genius of Aristotle could not surmount, may readily be admitted in justification of those who aver that the natural, or physical history of mankind has only in modern times taken its place as a definite branch of science.

It is generally admitted, I believe, that the true foundation of this science was laid by Blumenbach, of Gottingen, who, by unwearied perseverance, gathered the materials of his investigation from every part of the globe; while the researches and writings of Cuvier, Humboldt, Lawrence, Owen, Tiedeman, Rudolphi, and other physiologists, though differing in certain conclusions, have continually enlarged the scope of the science, and concentrated the results obtained by travellers and naturalists, and thus augmented the means upon which the removal of these differences, and the certainty of all conclusions, must eventually depend.

This is called the physiological branch of the inquiry. It examines the stature and proportions of the body, the complexion of the skin, the colour and set of the hair, and, above all, the size and shape of the skull.

But there is another branch of the inquiry, for physiology has come largely to its aid; and the study and classification of languages, indicated more, remotely by Scaliger, Bacon, and Leibnitz, has resulted in a vast body of authentic knowledge, ministering, thorough, new, and unexpected contributions to the history of the races and community of mankind.

The names of Adelung, Schlegel, Wilhelm Humboldt, Remusat, Grimms, Klaproth, Rash, Mayer Bunsen, and Max Muller, are the most eminent among those who have advanced this science abroad; while there may be mentioned Harris, Horne Took, Sir William Jones, Wilkins, Marsden, Young, Pritchard, and Latham, among our countrymen, as worthy associates in the same learned career.

Of the several races of mankind who peopled the ancient world; the first movement from their primitive seats; their successive displacements by conquest or voluntary emigration; and the positions they occupied at each period, our information depends, then, upon the science of ethnology, and on the comparison of languages, aided by tradition. But of the first steps in this movement, we have one trustworthy record, clear in many points, though difficult in some, and which is more and more confirmed by every conclusion to which science comes. As Dr. Pritchard, whose works* on the Natural and Physical History of Mankind form the most ample and complete text-book we have on the subject, observes, "The conclusions of reason and science, unaided by Scripture, concur mainly with those derived from the latter source," and he shews that these furnish sufficient grounds, without reference to the sacred writings, for arriving at the conclusion, that all races and diversities of mankind are really derived from a single pair; placed on the earth for the peopling of its surface, both in the times before us, and during the ages which it may please the Creator yet to assign to the present order of existence here.

A recent writer on this subject (Philip Smith, Anc. His. of the East) adverting to the affirmation of the unity of the human race in the Book of Genesis, observes that it not only distinguishes the three families which sprang from the three sons of Noah, and describes their first diffusion from their primeval centre (Gen. x.), but distinguishes also the four principles of classification, which, to this day, are constantly confounded. The component members of the three races are described "after their families, after their tongues, in their lands, and in their nations;" and he justly observes, that all sound research must still have regard to race, and language, geographical position, and political nationality; though each of these elements is more or less mixed up with the other.

* "Researches into the Physical History of Mankind. By James C. Pritchard, M.D., F.R.S., corresponding member of the National Institute of France." Third Edition. 5 vols. 8vo.

"The Natural History of Man; comprising inquiries into the modifying influences of physical and moral agencies in different tribes of the human family." By the same.

Obituary.

BRO. J. P. BROWN, D. G.M., TURKEY.

We deeply regret having to announce the sudden decease of Bro. R.W. John Porter Brown, District Grand Master for Turkey—which melancholy event occurred at Constantinople on the 26th inst. Bro. Brown was greatly beloved and respected not only by the Craft within his District, but by all with whom he had business or other relations—and as Secretary of Legation and Consul General for the United States at Constantinople, he displayed marked ability in the execution of very arduous duties. His loss is one which will be deeply felt and deplored throughout the East, and we personally have to lament the loss of a distinguished contributor, whose opinions upon Freemasonry in the Ottoman Empire were at all times characterised by profound judgment—the result of a well applied experience.

The magnificent oration, which Bro. Brown delivered at one of the meetings of his District Grand Lodge, remains as a specimen of his mental powers, and we trust that the sentiments therein enunciated will ever find an echo in the hearts of the brethren who may be selected hereafter to govern the Craft in the Turkish empire.

ERNEST AND FALK.

CONVERSATIONS FOR FREEMASONS.

BY BRO. GOTTHOLD EPHRAIM LESSING.

TRANSLATED BY

BRO. KENNETH R. H. MACKENZIE, F.S.A.,

KNOWN AS CRYPTONYMUS.

CONVERSATION.—V.

ERNEST. At last they are gone. What twaddlers! And did you not remark, or would you not remark, that the one with the wart on his chin, be his name what it will, is a Freemason. His knocks were so frequent.

FALK. I heard him well. Even in his speech I noticed what perhaps you did not so well remark. He is one of those who fight in Europe for the Americans.

ERNEST. Not his worst trait.

FALK. And is beset with the fancy that Congress is a lodge—that there, with armed hands, the Freemasons have founded their Empire.

ERNEST. Are there also dreamers of this kind?

FALK. They must exist.

ERNEST. How do you discover this?

FALK. From one peculiarity—one day to become familiar to you.

ERNEST. By God! if I knew that I had thus been deceived by the Freemasons!

FALK. Be without care. The Freemason patiently awaits the rising of the sun—and leaves the lights to burn as long as they will and can. To put out the lights, and when they are out, to notice that the ends can be lighted once more, or that other lights shall be set up—is not the business of the Freemason.

ERNEST. I think so likewise. That which costs blood, can certainly be worth no blood.

FALK. Excellent! Now ask—what you will! I am bound to answer.

ERNEST. In that case my questions will be endless.

FALK. But you cannot find the beginning.

ERNEST. Did I understand you, or not understand you when we were interrupted? Did you contradict yourself, or did you not? For certainly, when you say Freemasonry has existed from Eternity, I understood you to mean—thus—that not alone its Essence, also its present constitution had existed from time immemorial.

FALK. Were there only any relation between them! In its Essence, Freemasonry is as ancient as social arrangements. It was impossible that they could not be co-existent—even if society is not an efflorescence of Freemasonry. For the flame created by the burning glass still is derived from the Sun.

ERNEST. It seems even to dazzle me in that way—

FALK. But whether they are mother and daughter, or sister and sister; their relative fates have ever correspondingly reacted on each other. Wherever social polity existed, there in all places has also existed Freemasonry, and vice-versa. It has ever been the surest symbol of a strong, healthy, political constitution, when Freemasonry has shown herself side by side with it; just as it is the infallible mark of a weak and timorous state, when it will not openly tolerate that which in secret it is obliged to tolerate, whether willingly or no.

ERNEST. By which I am to understand, Freemasonry!

FALK. Certainly! For fundamentally She does not depend upon outward combinations, so easily degenerated into civil institutions; but upon the sentiment of minds having sympathies in common.

ERNEST. And who can dare to command these!

FALK. At the same time Freemasonry has ever, and in all places, been obliged to submit and bend according to civil authorities; the latter being ever the stronger. According to the forms of politics, so also has Freemasonry been forced to assume various forms; but each new form naturally received its new name. How can you imagine that the name of Freemasonry could be older than that predominant mode of State idea, according to which it has been accurately modelled?

ERNEST. And in what consists this predominant idea?

FALK. That is left for your own investigation—enough that I tell you that the name of Freemason, a limb of our secret brotherhood, was never heard before the beginning of the current century.* It certainly appears in no anterior printed book, and I should like to see the man who could show it me in any written and more ancient document.

ERNEST. You mean—the German name.

FALK. No! no! also the original Freemason, as also all the translations modelled upon it—in whatever language it may occur.

ERNEST. Nay!—only reflect—in no printed book before the beginning of the current century? In none?

FALK. In none.

ERNEST. Yet I have myself—

FALK. Indeed? Has some of the dust, which is continually thrown about, got into your eyes, then?

ERNEST. But the passage in—

FALK. In the Londinopolis? Eh? Dust!

ERNEST. And the Act of Parliament of Henry VI?

FALK. Dust!

ERNEST. And the great privilege granted by Charles XI., King of Sweden, to the Lodge of Gothenborg?

FALK. Dust!

ERNEST. And Locke?

FALK. What Locke do you mean?

ERNEST. The philosopher—his letter to the Earl of Pembroke—his remarks upon an inquiry, written in the very own handwriting of Henry VI?

FALK. That must be a very recent discovery—I do not know it. But Henry VI. again! Dust! and nothing but Dust!

ERNEST. Impossible!

FALK. Do you know any milder term for twisted words, for supposititious forgeries.

ERNEST. Could they have dared to flaunt these undisturbedly in the eyes of the world?

FALK. Why not? the wise are too few—that they are able to confute each folly—immediately on their promulgation. Enough that there was no prescription respecting them. Certainly it would be better if no follies were enacted before the public; for the most contemptible part of the matter consists in the fact—that no one takes the trouble of contradicting them—whereby, in course of time they attain the reputation of being a very serious and sacred thing. For a thousand years men will say, “could such things have been published to the world, had they not been true? These credible men were not confuted in those days, and would you presume to doubt them now?”

ERNEST. Oh! History! History! What art thou!

FALK. The bald rhapsody of Anderson, in which the history of architecture is foisted in as the history of the Order—might pass! For once in a way, might serve—and the jugglery would only be too apparent at the same time. But that we should continue to build on this marshy foundation—that people should not hesitate to affirm in print, what they would be ashamed to state to a serious man by word of mouth—that they should be content to allow a jest to continue, which should long since have been dropped—should have tolerated a forgery—upon which, if an ignoble social interest is concerned—the pillory stands—

ERNEST. Yet if it were true, that there was more than a play upon words in this? If it were true, that the secret of the Order has endured from antiquity under the homogeneous mechanical art?

FALK. If it were only true?

ERNEST. And is it not true? For how otherwise would the Order have selected the symbols of this art? Precisely this one? Why not some other.

FALK. And so it has.

ERNEST. It has? Yet another cause—than the one assigned?

FALK. Quite another.

FALK. The question is certainly grave.

ERNEST. Such a fact must have a reason for its existence.

ERNEST. Am I to guess, or may I enquire?

FALK. Had you asked me another question, long expected by me—the solution would not be very difficult.

ERNEST. Another question—you had long expected?

FALK. For when I said to you that that which is called Freemasonry—was not always called Freemasonry, what question would be more natural and immediate?

ERNEST. Than to ask what it was formerly called—very true—then I ask that question now.

FALK. What was Freemasonry called—before it was called Freemasonry, you say? Masoney.

ERNEST. Certainly, Masonry in English.

FALK. In English not Masonry, but Masoney. Not from Mason, the builder—but from Mase, the table.

ERNEST. Mase, the table? In what language?

FALK. In the language of the Anglo-Saxons, and not in that alone, but also in the language of the Goths and Franks, hence originally a Teutonic word, from which there are still some derivatives existing, or recently existing, such as Mas-kopie, Masleidig, Masgenosse (table companion). Masoney itself was even common in Luther's time; although its really good meaning had then become somewhat corrupted.

ERNEST. I know nothing either of its proper, or corrupted meaning.

FALK. Yet you know the custom of our ancestors of debating the most important matters at the board. Mase, therefore, the table, and Masoney, a closed assemblage. And when the closed assemblage degenerated into a drinking boose, the meaning in which the word Masoney is used by Agricola is easily understood.

ERNEST. Would the word lodge have fared better some time since?

FALK. But before the Masoneys partly so degenerated, and fell in the public esteem—they stood in higher credit. There was no court in Germany, small or great, without its Masoney. The old song-books, and chronicles testify to this. Special buildings, either adjoining to or in the neighbourhood of the castles and palaces of the sovereign, were thus designated—and in more recent times have given rise to so many groundless speculations. What can I quote more in their honour—than to say that the society of the Round Table was the oldest and original Masoney—their common origin?

ERNEST. The Round Table? That ascends into very fabulous times.

FALK. Be the history of King Arthur as fabulous as it may—the Round Table is not fabulous.

ERNEST. Arthur is said to be its founder.

FALK. By no means! Not even according to tradition. Arthur, or his father, had adopted it from the Anglo-Saxons—as the term Masoney shows. What is more easily to be understood than that the Anglo-Saxons imported no custom into England, which they did not leave behind them in their native country. It is also seen in several German peoples of that era, that there was a tendency to form small confidential circles, in and beside the great social institution.

ERNEST. By this you would infer—?

FALK. All this which I now so hastily say, perhaps without necessary precision, I will undertake, the next time I am in town with you among my books, to demonstrate to you in black and white. Only listen to me now—as people listen to the first rumour of some great event. It raises the curiosity more than it satisfies it.

ERNEST. Where did you leave off?

FALK. Masoney therefore was a German custom transplanted by the Anglo-Saxons into England. The learned are undecided who the Mase-Thonas were—in all probability the nobles of Masoney—which struck such deep root in this new soil, that it endured throughout all succeeding changes of Government, and from time to time appears in the most flourishing condition. The Masoneys of the Templars in the twelfth and thirteenth centuries stood in great repute. And such a Templar Masoney existed in London, to the end of the seventeenth century, despite of the annihilation of the Order. Here also the time arrives at which the index of written history is wanting—but a carefully preserved tradition, possessing many signs of truth, is at hand to supplement this want.

ERNEST. And what hinders this tradition from being finally committed to writing and raised into history?

FALK. Hinders! Nothing hinders! Indeed, everything prompts to such a course. At least I feel justified, nay bound, to make no secret of it longer to you, and all those who are in your position.

ERNEST. Well then! I am in the utmost anxiety.

FALK. This Templar Masonry then, which existed in London at the end of the last century, but existed in the utmost secrecy, had its place of meeting not far from St. Paul's Cathedral, then newly erected. The architect of this second church in the whole world was—

ERNEST. Sir Christopher Wren.

FALK. You have named the founder of the whole modern system of Freemasonry.

ERNEST. He?

FALK. In short, Wren, the architect of St. Paul's, in the neighbourhood of which there assembled an excellent Masonry, from time immemorial, was a member of this Masonry, which he was in the habit of frequenting during the thirty years that the building lasted, and he frequently visited it.

ERNEST. I begin to perceive an error.

FALK. Nothing else! The true meaning of the word Masonry had been lost among the English people. A Masonry situated so close to an important structure, where the master of the building was continually present, what could it be, except a Masonry, a society of Builders, with whom Wren consulted on the difficulties in the construction?

ERNEST. Very naturally so!

FALK. The continuation of the building of such a church interested all London. To obtain information of its progress at first hand, everyone who deemed himself experienced in architecture attempted admission to this supposed Masonry, and in vain. At length—you know Christopher Wren, not alone by name—you know what an inventive active mind he possessed. He had already assisted in planning a Society of Sciences—for the purpose of utilising speculative truths for the common good of society.* Suddenly he hit upon the thought of a reflex of that society which should rise from practical social life to speculative wisdom. "There," thought he, "might be examined what was useful among the true, and here what was true among the useful, supposing I make some of the principles of Masonry exoteric? Supposing I symbolise under the hieroglyphics and emblems of the architectural art, those principles of Masonry which can only be esoteric—and thus widen that which is now understood under the word Masonry to a Freemasonry in which a great number could share." Thus thought Wren, and Freemasonry existed. Ernest, what is the matter with you?

ERNEST. I am blinded!

FALK. Now do you see some light?

ERNEST. Some? Too much for once!

FALK. Do you now understand?

ERNEST. I pray you, friend, no more! Are you not however soon coming to town?

FALK. Do you wish for me?

ERNEST. Wish! After what you have promised!

FALK. Then I have plenty to do—once more—I may have expressed myself indistinctly, unsatisfactorily on some points, from trusting to memory. You shall be better satisfied among my books. The sun is setting—you must return to the city. Farewell.

ERNEST. Another has arisen to me. Farewell.

[N.B.—On these Conversations Cryptonymus proposes to offer certain comments from time to time, and draw more water from the Well of Truth. As a translator, he bids his readers farewell for the present.—CRYPTONYMUS.—

* The Royal Society.—CRYPTONYMUS.

"A VISIT TO EPPS'S COCOA MANUFACTORY.—Through the kindness of Messrs. Epps, I recently had an opportunity of seeing the many complicated and varied processes the Cacao bean passes through ere it is sold for public use, and, being both interested and highly pleased with what I saw during my visit to the manufactory, I thought a brief account of the Cacao, and the way it is manufactured by Messrs. Epps, to fit it for a wholesome and nutritious beverage, might be of interest to the readers of Land and Water.—See Article in Land and Water, October 14.

ROYAL MASONIC INSTITUTION FOR GIRLS.

STEWARDS' VISIT TO THE SCHOOL AND PRESENTATION OF PRIZES TO THE PUPILS.

The customary visit of the Stewards conducting the Annual Festival took place, by the invitation of the House Committee on Friday, the 3rd instant.

The guests began to assemble at an early hour of the afternoon, the performances of the pupils being appointed to commence at four precisely. At the fixed time the accomplished governess gave the signal for the first of the entertainments provided for the recreation of the visitors, and an immediate response was given thereto by the children selected for the primary musical performances, they acquitting themselves most creditably by their chanting of the 24th psalm. This was followed in succession by Mozart's Gloria in Excelsis Deo, sixteen hands on four pianos! God is a Spirit, Sterndale Bennett. Quartett; Ah; vous dirai je, Hess, by eight hands on four pianos; Rule Britannia, by twenty-four hands on four pianos; Plough Boy, sixteen hands on four pianos; Quant'E Piu Bella, Beethoven, eight hands on four pianos; Harmonious Blacksmith, Handel, by sixteen hands on four pianos; The Wreath, Glee; The Surprise Symphony, Haydn, by sixteen hands on four pianos; We're a' noddin, Thalberg, by eight hands on four pianos; Il Barbiere di Seviglia, Rossini, by twenty-four hands on four pianos; God bless the Prince of Wales.

The company then adjourned to the school room to listen to a selection of recitations, by a pupil from each class, the winners of the prizes in that especial sphere of their education. These were very carefully given, especially the Wreck of the Hesperus, by Josephine B. Mackay, a juvenile, but very spirited, executante; the pronunciation of the German language by Elizabeth Hutchinson being especially commended.

These were followed by the distribution of prizes by Bro. Joshua Nunn, P.G.S.B. who, on the invitation of the House Committee, undertook that duty, the chair being occupied by Bro. A. J. Rucker, the Chairman of the month, supported by Bros. G. Cox, Sheen, Rolls, Paas, Edwd. Cox, Simpson, Chancellor, Dr. Brette, &c. The prizes were not only numerous, but some of them of a costly description, the gold medal, the gift of Bro. Paas, being supplemented by the sum of three guineas, part of a sum annually given by Bro. W. Winn, and called the Canonbury prize; that of the silver medal, given by the institution, being made more acceptable by the addition of two guineas, the remainder of Bro. Winn's prize of five guineas. No small excitement was current amongst the pupils by the Chairman's announcement that Bro. Winn's annual prize would next year be increased by a further sum of five guineas, to be awarded to the Girl who attained the highest position in the school at the annual public examination.

The prizes having been distributed, the visitors were most kindly offered refreshments, of a light and varied character, this being succeeded by the children going through their calisthenic exercises, to the great gratification of all present, the precision of the performances and the methodical exactness of their evolutions exciting the greatest admiration of the numerous array of friends of both sexes.

The remainder of the evening was devoted to a series of terpsichorean efforts, in which the pupils of every age appear to excel, although we are given to understand that this does not form any part of their scholastic education, proficiency being only acquired by practice during playhours.

We subjoin a list of the pieces recited, and by whom—also an enumeration of the prizes given, with the names of the recipients:—

Recitations of Poetry:—Josephine B. Mackay, "The Wreck of the Hesperus," Longfellow; Leila Lucy Caparn, "Cœur-de-Lion at the Bier of his Father," Mrs. Hemans; Elizabeth J. Baxter, "Le Meunier, son fils, et leur âne," La Fontaine, Annie Gorton Winter, "The most Honourable (Sartor Resartus)," Carlyle; and "A Gleam of Sunshine," Longfellow; Elizabeth Hutchinson, "Die Burgschaft," Schiller; each of which drew from the auditors repeated expressions of approbation and well-merited applause.

Prizes given annually by the Institution:—Elizabeth Hutchinson, Elizabeth M. Lumley, Mary Louisa Warner, Eliza Alice Gillard, and Eliza Caroline Clark, for passing Cambridge Examination; Elizabeth Hutchinson for German; Emily Blair for Music; Annie Gorton Winter for Calisthenics and Deportment; Clara Annie Holiday and Florence Sewell for General Usefulness; Kate Isabella Barratt and Maria S. Osborne for Needlework; Mary Eliza Earle for Machine Work; Maria Louisa Flintoft for Writing; Leila Lucy Caparn for General Proficiency, 2nd class; Caroline E. Holland for General Proficiency, 3rd class; Florence S. Groves for Music.

Prizes given by individual donors:—

Elizabeth Hutchinson, the gold medal for general proficiency, given annually by Bro. William Paas. Also three guineas, given annually by Brother W. Winn, as part of five guineas, the Canonbury prize.

Eliza Alice Gillard, the silver medal, for good conduct, given annually by the Institution, also two guineas given annually by Brother W. Winn, as part of five guineas, the Canonbury prize.

By Bro. Joshua Nunn, for fancy work, Zillah Haskins.

By Bro. Raynham Stewart, for Dictation:—Helena J. Thorpe, 1st class; Mary Theresa Claisen, 2nd class; Blanche E. Morris, 3rd class; Ernestine E. Dietrich, 4th class.

By Henry F. Bowker, Esq., for good conduct, Annie Gorton Winter.

By Bro. Rev. P. H. E. Brette, D.D., for French, Elizabeth Jane Baxter.

By Bro. John M. Clabon, for good conduct, Mary Cornwall Palmer.

By Mrs. Crick, for Elocution:—Annie Gorton Winter, 1st class; Leila Lucy Caparn, 2nd class; Josephine B. Mackay, 3rd class.

By Mrs. Godding, for music, Elizabeth Minnie Lumley.

By Mrs. Brette, for music, Mary Theresa Claisen.

By Bro. Joseph Starkey, for Drawing, Mary Louisa Warner, Ada Janet Depree.

By Bro. Collard Moutrie, for music, Annie Gorton Winter.

By Bro. G. J. Palmer, for Arithmetic, Elizabeth Hutchinson.

We heartily congratulate the House Committee, the Governess (Miss Davis), and the highly respected Matron (Miss Jarwood) on the fact that they have, by extreme care and judicious management, elicited a maximum of obedience and docility from the inmates of the institution with a minimum of restraint.

The company departed shortly after nine o'clock, well pleased with their visit, and with fervent aspirations that the Author of all Good would deign to continue his blessing over an institution producing such excellent results.

FREEMASONRY IN CONSTANTINOPLE.

The following is the address delivered by the late R.W. Bro. J. P. Brown, Dis. Grand Master, at the Annual Communication of the District Grand Lodge of Turkey, held on the 18th ult., in the Masonic Temple, Pera:—

Brethren of the District Grand Lodge. On the occasion of our present Communication, I had not designed to address you on any particular subject concerning the District Grand Lodge. I am, however, very happy to be able to state that all of the lodges within its jurisdiction have prospered since our last semi-annual meeting, and that each one, in its particular sphere, has fully responded to the purposes in view on its foundation. Their members have considerably increased in number; their means of doing good and benefiting suffering humanity have been extended; and the principles which form the basis of our widely-spread Fraternity have been carried out by them in a laudable manner.

I take this occasion to thank the lodges and each one of their officers and members for the very prompt manner in which they responded to my fraternal suggestions during the prevalence of the cholera in some portions of the capital, and for their efforts, in connection with lodges of other jurisdictions established here, to benefit our fellow-creatures; and, also, to express my profound acknowledgments for the assistance which they have so kindly rendered me in the performance of my duties.

I have felt it my duty, on each and all of the occasions which have brought us together, to impress upon the brethren of all the lodges within the jurisdiction of this District Grand Lodge, the necessity of individual examples of conduct in the exercise of those moral and social virtues which recommend us as Freemasons to the respect and consideration of the outer world. In this view, I would, also, add that the lodges cannot be too careful in the acceptance of individuals desirous of joining our Fraternity. Simple curiosity and even, perhaps, worse motives induce some applicants to solicit admission amongst us. Whenever immoral or dishonest men are known to have been received in any Masonic lodges, the fact does us all much harm in the eyes of the public, among whom ignorance and prejudice still exist regarding the real principles of our Order. I need not more than add that neither Freemasonry nor any other institution existing for good purposes can improve, reform, or perfect men who do not sincerely intend to become acquainted with and conform to its principles. I have heard with much regret and pain that one or two individuals have, without taking the trouble to learn the real character and objects of Freemasonry, been so lost to probity and self-respect as to express themselves in an unbecoming manner of a fraternal association to which they had, unfortunately, been admitted. We are all fully aware that we may not solicit any one to become one of us, and that no one is required to remain a member of a lodge after he has been received into it. No one, however, can cease to be regarded by us as a brother until by his conduct he shall have rendered himself unworthy of that cherished name. Our "mysteries"—if I may indeed, so call them—are all intimately connected with the cause of humanity and the promotion of its welfare; and as such, certainly, if the initiate investigates their signification, merits his respect and confidence. Whenever these and our principles are not properly appreciated by him, no greater evidence is needed to establish the fact that humanity and the welfare of his fellow-men have no place in his heart. Speaking from my own personal experience, whenever I have been requested to explain the history and the great principles of Freemasonry in all parts of the globe, where religion, morality, and virtue exist, I have been able to remove misapprehensions and have even been thanked by my hearers, who admitted their existing prejudices against them. My constant assurances that these have no connection whatever with the individual religious or political sentiments of any one—that they strongly inculcate feelings of loyalty and patriotism, and the exercise of all the moral and social virtues of life, and, especially, of human benevolence, have been received with favour; and I cannot too warmly call upon all of my brethren to sustain my declaration by their own conduct and language. By such a course, we cannot fail to carry conviction into the minds of even the most prejudiced and misinformed, and render the word "brother" sacred among men of all faiths and positions. To use our own Masonic language, we shall thus efface the rough angles of that human architecture of which Man is himself the loftiest and the noblest, and by uniting mankind in a common fraternity obey the commands of the great Architect of the Universe and the Creator of all mankind. Without presuming to possess any legal or religious authority, I yet believe that it is my duty, at all times and under all circumstances to appeal to the hearts of my brethren, in behalf of the principles of our Order, namely, those of fraternal harmony and charity, together with a sincere desire to correct the conflicting passions of human nature.

The formation of a permanent Central Committee for good and benevolent purposes, of all the various lodges in this city, has been a source of much satisfaction to me, inasmuch as it will extend and increase the sphere of our usefulness. I feel very sensibly the honour conferred upon me by my selection to preside over it, and, with the assistance of the brethren composing it, shall be most happy to promote all its proper and legal purposes.

Permit me, again, to invite your attention, and, through you that of all the lodges represented here, to the formation of a Lodge of Instruction, authorised by the special favour of the M.W. Grand Master of England, the Marquis of Ripon.

THE AMERICAN KNIGHTS TEMPLAR.

It will be remembered that last summer an excursion party of Masonic Knights Templar from Pennsylvania, U. S. A., visited Europe, and had a lengthened and most agreeable tour over not Britain alone, but the leading cities of the Continent. Among other places visited by them was Glasgow, and during their stay there they had pleasant and fraternal converse with the Girvan Encampment of the same order. Soon after their return to America they resolved to transmit, through Sir Knight A. M. Rambo, editor of the Weekly Courant, Columbia, Pa., an address to the Girvan brethren, expressing the gratification they had received from their reception at the hands of the former, and from their trip to the Old World generally. That address was duly drawn up and forwarded to Glasgow, but from some cause it never reached the brother to whom it was addressed, and was returned to America. However, it was resolved by the American brethren to make another attempt, and accordingly it was again dispatched, on 4th ultimo, addressed this time to care of Mr Forsyth, of the Cobden Hotel, Argyle Street, where the Knights Templar of Columbia had put up during their stay here. In this manner it has now come to hand, and we have been requested to publish it, as also the reply to be forwarded from the Girvan Encampment. The address is as follows:—

"Office of the Weekly Courant,
Columbia, Pa., Feb. 27, 1872.

"Sir Knight Robert Bell, Glasgow, Scotland.—This is to thank you, and, through you, the members of the Girvan Encampment of Knights Templar, for the very cordial and hospitable manner in which you welcomed us during our sojourn in your ancient and beautiful city last June. I feel also grateful for the very handsome diploma which you and the Sir Knights were pleased to present me with. I prize it very highly as one of the best souvenirs of our 'crusade.' I have had it nicely framed and hung up in my office. It will sacredly remain in my keeping as long as I am permitted to mingle with Templars here below, and when I pass out of life into the 'Summer Land' it will be handed down, I trust, to my children and my children's children as a relic of true Scottish benevolence. After we left old Scotland, with its magnificent cities, dreamy old castles, beautiful and picturesque mountains, green valleys, and charming lakes, we went to England, and were entertained at Alton Towers by the Earl of Shrewsbury, on the 4th of July; after which we proceeded to London, under the guidance of the gentlemanly and courteous Messrs. Thomas and John M. Cook. At the hands of our noble-hearted English brethren we received a hearty welcome and a most glorious banquet, which our Sir Knights will long remember as one of the most pleasing episodes of our trip. After spending some time in London, we went to Antwerp, passed through Belgium into Germany, then Switzerland, and over the Alps, into sunny Italy, Venice, Florence, Rome, Naples, Pompeii, Vesuvius, with a trip on the Mediterranean. Then back by Leghorn, Pisa, Turin, Genoa, and Mount Cenis, on to Geneva, and through France to Paris, on to London and Liverpool, were we took the splendid steamship Oceanic, of the White Star Line, and reached New York the latter part of September, all well and happy. Altogether, it was one of the greatest and most successful excursions the world ever witnessed. A similar excursion should be gotten up by you for a pilgrimage to the United States. If you do conclude to come at any time, only give us warning, and we will give you a welcome that will astonish the world. I speak for every one of the Sir Knights of Allegheny Commandery when I say you are remembered, and that we thank you for the manner in which you received us in Glasgow.—I am faithfully and fraternally yours, in the bonds of Christian knighthood,

"A. M. RAMBO."

The following is the reply:—

"220, Castle Street, Glasgow.

"To Sir Knight A. M. Rambo,

"Sir,—We the Knights Templar of the Girvan Encampment, received your much esteemed letter with the very greatest pleasure, and with true Masonic greeting. It also gave us unqualified gratification to learn from the pages of the Freemason that you had all reached home, your native Jerusalem, in safety, after so long and so extraordinary a pilgrimage—a pilgrimage which will never be forgotten. It will remain a brilliant page in the book of Masonic history, and will doubtless continue to be a distinguished and lasting memorial of what can be accomplished by fraternal combination. It will tower and continue to unfurl its glorious banner of universal fraternal love, which will flutter in the breeze of ages to come, and manifest to the world that Masonic union is significant of more than the name. It will ever be remembered as the honourable and illustrious accepted landmark of the nineteenth century. Your unprecedented pilgrimage breathes a spirit of conciliation and reconciliation which all the nations and orders of the earth would do well to imitate. We trust your praiseworthy example will be followed by others; that all ends of the earth may soon echo the words of our poet—'We are brethren all.' We hail with satisfaction and delight your warm invitation to visit you. Should fortune ever favour us we will assuredly pitch our camp in Allegheny, where we will be made welcome not to bread and water alone, but to the hearty congratulations and hospitality of brothers indeed. We regret that your letter did not reach us with your first transmission. Nevertheless we feel all the more honoured, and, I trust, all the more grateful, for your perseverance and loving kindness in transmitting it again. We are in due respect of the richness of your unmerited gratitude.—Believe us dear Sir Knights, yours fraternally in the bond of Christian Knighthood,

"ROBERT BELL, M. N. C."

CITY OF LONDON MASONIC LIFEBOAT.—At the last meeting of the committee, the accounts of the entertainment given at the City Terminus Hotel were made up, and the addition made by it to the Life-boat Fund was found to be £81. It will be remembered that the large hall at the Hotel was given for the occasion, as were also, the efficient services of Bro. W. Ganz, G.O.; who directed, and of all the artistes, twenty-seven in number, including the Chevalier de Kontski, whose grand duo, with Bro. Ganz, on two of Kirkman's pianofortes, kindly lent by that firm, afforded great delight to the audience.

NOTICE.

The Subscription to THE FREEMASON is now 10s. per annum, post-free, payable in advance.

Vol. I., bound in cloth	4s. 6d.
Vol. II., ditto	7s. 6d.
Vol. III., ditto	15s. od.
Vol. IV., ditto	15s. od.
Reading Cases to hold 52 numbers ...	2s. 6d.

United States of America.

THE FREEMASON is delivered free in any part of the United States for 12s. per annum, payable in advance.

NOTICE TO SUBSCRIBERS.

The Office of THE FREEMASON is now transferred to 198, FLEET-STREET, E.C. All communications for the Editor or Publisher should therefore be forwarded to that address.

Answers to Correspondents.

All communications for The Freemason should be written legibly on one side of the paper only, and, if intended for insertion in the current number, must be received not later than 10 o'clock a.m. on Thursdays, unless in very special cases. The name and address of every writer must be sent to us in confidence.

Births, Marriages and Deaths.

MARRIAGE.

LANC—SALTER.—On the 7th inst., at the Baptist Chapel, Commercial-street, Newport, Monmouthshire, by the Rev. A. G. Fuller, the Rev. J. W. Lince, to Eliza, daughter of Mr. James Salter.

The Freemason,

SATURDAY, MAY 11, 1872.

The Freemason is published on Saturday Mornings in time for the early trains.

The price of the Freemason is Twopence per week; annual subscription, 10s. (payable in advance.)

All communications, letters, &c., to be addressed to the Editor, 198, Fleet-street, E.C.

The Editor will pay careful attention to all MSS. entrusted to him, but cannot undertake to return them unless accompanied by postage stamps.

ROYAL MASONIC INSTITUTION FOR GIRLS.

The eighty-fourth anniversary of this excellent Institution was celebrated on Wednesday evening at Freemasons' Tavern, when about 200 brethren sat down to an excellent banquet, and more than that number of ladies assisted by their presence to make the festival successful. The Grand Master, the Marquis of Ripon, had promised to preside; but, owing to his detention at the Cabinet Council, he was unable to be present at the banquet. His place was there supplied by Bro. Samuel Tomkins, Grand Treasurer; but before the toasts were given, his lordship took his seat at the head of the table, and was greeted with a succession of hearty cheers. His absence in the early part of the evening was much regretted; but his known faithfulness to his duties as a Craftsman assured every brother that his promise to be Chairman of the evening would be kept.

Among the brethren who supported him we observed:—Bros. J. Huyshe, P.G.C.; S. Tomkins, G.T.; John Hervev, G.S.; A. J. D. Filer, G.S.B.; Maxwell Close, Geo. Cox, H. Browse, W. E. Gumbleton, R. J. Spiers, W. Paas, Hyde Pullen, Dr. J. Daniel Moore, W. Farnfield, J. A. Rucker, Dudley Rolls, Rev. C. Woodward, Joshua Nunn, Sir B. M. Seton, Francis Knollys, A. Bridge, T. S. Barringer, Peter Matthews, Col. Burdett, Rev. A. B. Fraser, G.C.; Rev. C. J. Martyn, P.G.C.; A. E. J. McIntyre, G.R.; Dr. Jabez Hogg, Sir Albert W. Woods, (Garter), Thos. Fenn, Bentley Shaw, N. Bradford, F.

Binckes, C. C. Dumas, Joseph Smith, Joseph J. Starkey, Geo. Kenning, Capt. G. A. Smith, Harman, H. Muggeridge, W. Lane, R. Wentworth Little, Raynham W. Stewart, Gutierrey, David M. Jacobs, Reynolds, Black, W. Noak, G. J. Palmer, Richd. Spencer, John. T. Moss, W. H. Green, and T. H. Edmands.

On the removal of the cloth, the beautiful grace "For these" &c., was sung, and the toasts were proposed in due order. In giving the first,

The Chairman said—Brethren, the first toast that I have to give you to-night is "The Health of Her Majesty the Queen." That is a toast which I well know needs no words from me to recommend it to your enthusiastic reception. We have especial reason to drink the health of Her Majesty the Queen, in the assemblies of the Craft, because of that patronage which she has now for so many years extended to various of our Masonic charities. The laws of our Craft which would not permit Her Majesty to display greater interest in that which concerns this ancient fraternity, have yet enabled us happily to appeal to her gracious sympathy in the cause of those charities which form one of the leading features of our Masonic Institutions, and which received for so lengthened a period the support and patronage of the Royal Family of the country. I give you "The Health of Her Majesty the Queen."

The toast was drunk with enthusiasm, and was followed by the National Anthem.

The Chairman again rose and said—brethren I have now to ask you to drink "The Health of H.R.H. the Prince of Wales, the Princess of Wales, and the rest of the Royal Family." In drinking the health of the Prince of Wales, it is our high privilege to feel that we are drinking the health of an honoured member of the fraternity, (cheers), and I am sure that there is no one in this room whose heart did not beat quick and fervent during the anxious period in which, last winter, the nation was waiting from hour to hour for the bulletins of H.R.H.'s health. I rejoice to be able to tell you to-day from the latest information that has reached me, no further off than this morning, that we have the best ground for believing that His Royal Highness's recovery is steadily proceeding, and that it will not be long before we may hope to see him once more in this country, if not restored to full strength, yet, as I trust, under God's blessing, on the road to attain to it. To-night we have to drink the health of the Prince and Princess of Wales as the Patron and Patroness of the Institution, in whose honour we are assembled this evening. His Royal Highness has proved himself a true Mason by the deep interest which he has displayed, ever since he joined the Craft, in the great charities of our order, and therefore upon this occasion, we ought especially to drink, with loyal and fraternal enthusiasm, "The Health of the Prince and Princess of Wales and the rest of the Royal Family."

This toast was drunk with great fervour, and was then followed by "God Bless the Prince of Wales."

Bro. the Rev. John Huyshe proposed the next toast, and in doing so said: Brethren, for the second time within the last fourteen days I have had the honour conferred upon me of having to propose to you the health, always drunk with enthusiasm in the Grand Lodge of England, and never more enthusiastically than there. I am going to give you "the health," which of course you know is "of the Grand Master of England" himself. (Cheers.) The great motto of Englishmen is "England expects every man to do his duty." If ever there was a man who discharged that duty to the very utmost of his power, it is the Most Honourable the Marquis of Ripon." (Cheers.) We have not had the pleasure of his company here this day at dinner; but we all know that he was working in the public service during the whole of that period. Since that time he has taken a hasty repast in his own home, and now he has come here to do that duty which Masons require of him, which he most cordially gives to every one of us. It will be useless for me to expatiate on the many virtues which exist in the heart of our Grand Master, he lives in the hearts of all of us; and that is the most important point for every Grand Master of the Craft to hold. I give you, with all honour, and I hope you will drink with all honour, "The Health of the Grand Master of England." (Cheers.)

The Grand Master, in reply, said,—Brother Huyshe, and Brethren—I thank you most heartily, you sir, for the very kind manner in which you have proposed this toast, and you brethren for the manner in which you have been good enough to receive it. I can assure you, that if there ever was a moment at which I felt how very little I deserved the reception which you have been good enough to accord to me this evening, it is the present time; because I have been very painfully reminded within the course of the last week how difficult it is for me with my other avocations, properly to discharge the duties which belong to the great office that I have at present the high honour to fill in the Craft. No further back than last Thursday, I was obliged to do that which has all my life been most repugnant to me, namely, to fail to keep an engagement. I was unable to go down into Warwickshire for a Masonic ceremony, at which I had promised to be present, and at which many of my brethren had been good enough to assemble in great numbers. To-night I have failed in part of my duty, because although, as our Brother Huyshe says, "England expects every man to do his duty," there is one thing which if England expects she, at all events, will never obtain, and that is that any man so long as he is mortal should do his duty in two places at the same time. (Laughter). Now, brethren, that has been my unfortunate position, and it raises a very serious question in my mind as to how long I ought to seek for such indulgence at your hands and to make such demands upon your good nature. (No, no.) However, brethren, I can assure you that I am deeply grateful to you for the manner in which you have been pleased to receive me to-night. I readily acceded to the request that I should occupy this chair upon this Anniversary, because I felt that it was one of the first duties of my present office, that I should, by every means in my power, aid to promote the advantage of the great charities of our order; and although there is no rivalry between those charities, except a rivalry as to which can confer the greatest benefits on those for whom they are designed, yet I am sure that we all feel that there is none of those charities, which has a larger claim on our support than that, in whose honour we are assembled to-night. I feel therefore that it was my duty, in my position, that I should accept this charge; I am glad that I have been able even partially to discharge the duties of this chair this evening; and I return thanks for the honour you have done me. (Applause.)

The Chairman: Brethren the next toast that I find upon this list, placed in my hands, is one which I trust will for many years still be drunk with respect and honour, on every occasion when the Craft assembles; it is "The Health of the Right Hon. the Earl of Zetland, the M.W. Past Grand Master, and Patron of this Institution." Now, Brethren, it would be impertinent in me to enlarge before any masonic assembly upon the benefits which the has craft derived from the 25 years of my noble friend's reign. All who are in this room know well how greatly the craft advanced in every description of prosperity during the last quarter of a century. We all know how its Charities increased in power, in influence, and in utility, we all know how the Craft was raised in public estimation throughout the country; and although no one would be justified in attributing the whole of such prosperity to the single action of any man, however eminent—because the prosperity of the Craft depends upon the mutual action of every member—nevertheless no one who watched the history of Masonry during that period can doubt that that prosperity was greatly due to the firm, the impartial, the respected authority of him who enjoyed, for that lengthened period, the love and the devotion of his brethren. I give you "the Health of the Earl of Zetland."

The Chairman: I now rise to ask you to drink "The Health of the Earl of Carnarvon, the Right Worshipful the Deputy Grand Master, and the rest of the Grand Officers, present and past." I am happy to be able to tell you that our noble brother Lord Carnarvon is gradually recovering from the serious illness under which he has lately been suffering. (Applause.) I need not dilate upon the zeal which he displays, for all that concerns the interest of the Craft. I shall always feel a debt of much gratitude to my noble friend for the mode in which he filled my place during my prolonged absence in the course of last year, and I am confident that in discharging, as he did, for me, the duties of the great office that I have the honour to fill, he discharged them in a manner which received the most complete approbation of every member of the Craft. (Cheers.) I trust that it may not be long before our noble brother may be able to come amongst us again, and to take his place in the Grand Lodge. (Hear, hear.) I therefore give you his Health and that of the rest of the Grand Officers, and I beg to couple with it The Health of our Right Worshipful friend Brother Colonel Burdett, the Provincial Grand Master for Middlesex.

Colonel Burdett briefly responded.

The Chairman: Brethren, we are assembled here to-night in honour of one of the foremost Institutions of this ancient Craft; we are assembled here to celebrate the Anniversary Festival of the Freemasons' Girls' School, which has existed now for a period not far short of a century, and which, during that lengthened time has been, as I believe, year by year increasing in utility, and extending wider and wider the benefits which it confers upon the Craft. And surely, brethren, there can be no Institution more important than the one which has for its object to receive within its walls, and thoroughly, and wisely, to educate the daughters of those amongst our brethren who, without such aid, would be unable to afford them the proper means of education. We live, brethren, in days in which all men are alive to the importance of education. Men, may differ as to what is to be included within the meaning of the term; they may differ as to the mode by which education is to be promoted; but those who would tell us that education is not in itself a benefit, I think, I may say, exist no longer in this country—(hear, hear.)—at least if there be any who cherish that exploded notion they are forced by the public conviction of the present day to keep their obnoxious opinions to themselves—(hear, hear.)—and although we may be upon some points undecided as to what education should be, and how it should be extended and maintained, we are united I believe, as one man, in our conviction that it is the duty of all those who have the means at their command to aid in the spread of knowledge, and of instruction, in the widest and most extended meaning of those terms throughout the length and breadth of our country. Now, if that be the general conviction of the day, it would be strange indeed if we, who profess that at the very root of our ancient Order lies the great principle of brotherly affection, were to be insensible to the claims which lie upon us to promote the education of the children of our poorer brethren. (Cheers.)

And surely, although the claims of the boys are great indeed, and the public as well as the private motives which make their education in these days a necessity of the State as well as a claim of charity irresistible, there is perhaps a yet tenderer claim, at all events, which may be urged upon us on behalf of the education of girls. (Hear, hear.) And this at least is true, that we in England have hitherto been but too neglectful of the education of girls. We have large means of various descriptions for the education of boys, means which are being rendered every day more and more available for their purpose; but the means for the education of girls in this country, fall far short of those which ought to be supplied. And yet I venture to say that the future of this country depends even more upon the education of the women of England than it does upon the education of the men. (Hear, hear.) And when I say that, I do not point to any such education as would forget that those with whom it is concerned are, as we hope, to be the wives and the mothers of the coming generation. We hear a great deal these days about women's rights. (Laughter.) Well, that is a political question, upon which I must not touch to-night. (Laughter.) But at least this I hope, that whatever may be the woman's rights in the future, they will be rights which are not inconsistent with the maintenance of that true womanhood which renders woman, the blessing of the life of man

(Hear, hear, and applause.) I trust at least that whatever may be the theories prevalent elsewhere, we shall always find in the Freemasons' Girls' School, that the education given is a true womanly education, sound and extended though it may be. I am not the least inclined to say that women are inferior to men; but on the other hand, I am yet to be convinced that women and men are the same thing. (Laughter.) The poet was right when he said:

"Not like in like, but like in difference."

and I trust that that will be the motto of this valuable Institution. I rejoice to find that such appears to be the principle by which this Institution is guided. If you look on this paper which has been laid upon the table to night, you will perceive in it that the objects of the Freemasons, Girls' School are distinctly laid down as being those which secure, that the education given to the girls there brought up, is a sound, practical, education. It is, I trust to believe a good literary education, but it embraces also other subjects of no less importance, which will tend to make those who have the benefit of the Institution valuable members of society in after life. Now, brethren nothing is easier than that, those who are interested in an institution of any kind, should enter into a conspiracy to deceive the public by praising their own Institution; and if an Institution is never brought to any practical test, it is extremely possible that by dint of successive public dinners, you may praise an Institution till you have praised it to death. But I am happy to believe that we can appeal to something in regard to this Institution, more searching and more convincing than the praise of any Chairman of a public dinner; because we can appeal to the fact that the managers of the Girls' School have not been afraid to stand the test of public and impartial examination. That the girls of this Institution have passed through the searching ordeal—and searching it is—of the Cambridge Local Examination, and that several of them within the last few years have taken honours at that examination, and many of them have carried off certificates. Now that is a test which cannot be gainsaid; that is a proof of the real condition of this Institution, to which there is as I venture to submit no answer to be made. Now brethren, I find that it is the intention of those who are entrusted with the great responsibilities of managing this important Institution, to take measures as speedily as your generosity will enable them to adopt them, in the first place, to increase the sanitary appliances of the school, and at the same time to enable themselves to extend the benefits of it to even larger numbers of the daughters of the Craft. Now, brethren, we all know that in these days, that which is considered to be necessary in regard to sanitary arrangements, is very different from what was thought to be required but, few years ago. We have made in that respect happily very great progress within the last few years, and I am glad to see that this Institution is keeping up with that progress, that it is awake to the necessity of making arrangements of a thoroughly sanitary description; and if at the same time you should enable them to extend the benefits of the charity yet more widely, you will then even—for the difference as I read it here, is only to be a difference of accommodation for eight children—you have done nothing scarcely which will bring up this Charity, as compared with past times in proportion to the general extension of the Craft—in proportion therefore on the one hand to the number of brethren who may be expected to require its aid; in proportion on the other hand to the number of brethren who may be able to aid it with their funds. Now, brethren, it is not long ago since in this hall I had the pleasure of congratulating you upon the large increase of lodges, and of Masons, during the last few years. Well, but if our lodges increase in number; and if our members increase in number too; if the wealth of the order is going on increasing; if we see Masonic halls springing up in every part of the country; if we have before our eyes proofs that the wealth of individual members is increasing from day to day, then I say we should give practical proof that we have not forgotten the principles of our Order by shewing a corresponding increase in the power and extent of our Charities. (Hear, hear). Those charities are the chief proof, to the outward world, that we are animated by the principles which we profess to observe. (Hear, hear). I have often said that those charities ought not to be the only proofs that we are animated by those principles. I have often had occasion to remark that it is our bounden duty to see that those noble principles are shown forth in our lives (hear hear); but those principles are not matter of profession—are not things to be spoken of with the lips, and forgotten in the heart. We have to show, if we value the Craft, that we are prepared to act upon those principles and to admit the pressure of the obligations which they cast upon us. We are bound to shew that if we profess that we believe in the principle of brotherly affection, and are ready to put our hands into our pockets and to give to those professions proof more substantial than is to be found in annual festivals—proofs which will stand the test of public examination—proofs which show that when we boast of our numbers, and congratulate ourselves upon our wealth, we are ready to admit the claims of those who look to us—and who are entitled to look to us for brotherly assistance, to receive at the hands of this great and wealthy community a large share of their superfluities. It is, then, in the name of this ancient charity, of which we are so justly proud, that I venture to appeal to you to-night; that I ask you to-night to uphold, and to praise on high the Standard of Masonic charity, and to shew to those who doubt our professions, and question, the reality of our principles, that this ancient Order is not a thing of gold and of purple, but that its principles are impressed deeply in the heart of a Freemason, and he feels that he has upon him a peculiar claim, which at the same time is a peculiar honour to aid, to cherish and to uphold the great charities of our order (Cheers.) Brethren, I give you "Prosperity to the Girls' School," and I couple with it the name of Brother Samuel Tomkins.

Brother Tomkins, Grand Treasurer, said:—M.W.G.M., and Brethren, as Treasurer of this noble Institution, I thank you, and very cordially, for the feeling and eloquent address with which you have enforced the claims of the Charity upon the Craft generally, and I thank the brethren for the kindness with which they have received your address, and the enthusiasm which they have expressed on this toast being proposed. You sir, have so touched upon the various claims of the Institution, that it would be altogether superfluous if I were to go over the same ground. I can only say that to myself, and to every brother who feels an interest in the Charity, a festival like this so well supported, is a matter of very great gratification; and I am sure that when you come to hear the amount which has been raised on the present occasion read out, you will be highly satisfied with the exertions of the Stewards; and be assured that this year the claims of the Charity have been appreciated. All I would impress upon you is, that if we should flourish in future years as we ought to do, we ought not to relax our exertions. As our Chairman has told us, our Craft is increasing in wealth, in numbers, and in claims upon it; and we hold it is our duty to endeavour to provide funds for the necessities of future years, or they will not be adequately met. Hitherto, they have been provided for by the Craft, and I do not doubt that the same right and noble feeling which now exists through our lodges will be handed down by the present members and brethren of those lodges, to those who succeed them; and I trust that those who in this hall, ninety or a hundred years hence, who may meet for these Anniversary Festivals, will find these charities—tenfold or a hundredfold more than they are now—with larger funds invested, and larger annual subscriptions; and that this great prosperity may be attained in future years, it is necessary that we, one and all of us, should exert ourselves during our present time, and endeavour to keep up the subscriptions of this year and stimulate those who succeed us as Stewards and Provincial members of the Craft to do the same. After the eloquent way in which his Lordship has put before you the claims of the Girls' School, it would be superfluous for me to say more. I leave the matter, with great confidence, in your hands, brethren, knowing you will do what is right. (Cheers.)

Bro. H. Muggerridge here read the Stewards' Lists, which amounted in the total to £4,100.

The Chairman: I rise now to ask you to drink "The Health of the Vice-President, Trustees, various Committees, and Medical Officers, of this Institution;" and well may you drink their health. If we have reason to be proud of this Institution, it is because it has been well and zealously managed by those who have been at the head of it. (Hear, hear.) If it be, as we hope and trust, a credit to the Craft, it is due to them that it is so. Therefore, I need say no more, but will heartily propose to you this toast, with which I have very great pleasure in coupling the name of Bro. Huyshe, one of the Vice-Presidents.

Bro. Huyshe in responding, said it had always been his opinion that the female character of a nation tended to raise that nation in the scale of humanity. Females had more to do with humanising the world, and especially with humanising men, than any others being alive. Therefore he believed that this school had more to do with the high character England had maintained throughout the whole world, than even the Boys'

School, or any other school whatever. He could point with singular satisfaction to this School, because he was present a few years ago when the late Grand Master said what had never escaped his (Brother Huyshe's) recollection, because he deemed it the proudest thing that could be said for a female school, that, for all the lengthened period it had existed no girl who had been brought up in it had ever disgraced herself in her after life. If there was any fact which showed the value of the education given in this school, it was that fact. To the Governess and her assistants, the Matron and her assistants, this was due, and the thanks of the Craft at large should be given to them, rather than to the subject of this toast. Still, as it had been proposed, he, as one of the Vice-presidents, begged to return thanks.

The toast of "The other Masonic Charitable Institutions" was responded to by Brothers Binckes and Farnfield, and that of "The Stewards" by Brother Sir Bruce Seton. "The Ladies" were represented by the Grand Chaplain, the Rev. A. Bruce Fraser.

The company then adjourned to the Temple where a grand concert was given, under the able direction of Bro. Frank Elmore. The artistes who took part in the performance were—Vocalists, Mdle. Liebhart, Miss Alice Fairman, and Madame Florence Lancia, Brother Frank Elmore, and Brother Carl Stephan. The Instrumentalists were:—on the harp, Brother Oberthur; on the flute, Mr. Churchfield Arldige; and on the Pianoforte, Madame Strindberg-Elmore. The accompanists were Brother Richard Limpus, and Brother Henry Parker.

Mr. Goodchild acted as toastmaster, after the banquet, which was admirably served by Brother C. E. Francatelli.

REPORTS OF MASONIC MEETINGS.

Craft Masonry.

METROPOLITAN.

ACACIA LODGE (No. 1309).—The first regular meeting for the season of this prosperous lodge was held at Railway Hotel, Potter's Bar, Middlesex, on Wednesday 8th inst. The lodge was opened at eleven o'clock in the morning by Bro. Frederick Walters, J.P.M., who was supported by Bros. J. H. Batten, S.W.; W. Richardson, J.W.; E. Sillifant, P.M., Treasurer; G. Cattel, P.Prov. G.S.D. Northamptonshire, P.M., Sec.; R. Limpus, Hughes, Scholland, Ferrer, &c. The minutes of the last regular meeting and several emergencies were read and confirmed. The ballots were unanimous in favour of Bros. J. H. Batten, S.W. as W.M.; and of E. Sillifant, P.M. as Treasurer; Bro. J. Bawin, P.M., Tyler was re-elected. It was arranged to hold the audit meeting in the City. Bros. E. Sillifant, P.M.; G. Cattel, P.M.; E. Horsley, P.M.; were elect honorary Past Masters of the lodge. The lodge was duly closed, and the members hastened back to town to attend the Girls' School Festival.

HARROW LODGE (No. 1310).—The installation meeting of this well-established lodge was held at the Railway Hotel, Harrow, on Tuesday, the 7th inst. Bro. G. Pymm, W.M., assisted by his officers opened the lodge. The minutes of the last meeting were read and confirmed unanimously. By desire of the members, and the kindness of the W.M., Bro. Alfred Avery, P.G.D. Cer. Middlesex, and P.M., took the chair, and in a most able and impressive manner installed Bro. W. H. Green, S.W., as the W.M., who appointed as his officers, Bros. S. Home-wood, S.W.; J. Harrison, J.W.; J. Coutts, P.G.P., P.M., Treas.; Frederick Walters, P.M., Sec.; G. A. Smith, S.D.; F. Harrison, J.D.; J. Cox, I.G.; T. Harrison, D.C.; J. Smith, P.M., W.S.; and J. Bavin, P.M., Tyler. A five guinea Past Master's jewel was given to the retiring W.M., Bro. J. Pymm. The lodge was then closed. Visitors:—Bros. Dr. Pope, P.M. (Royal Artillery), and others. A banquet followed.

LODGE OF ASAPH (No. 1319)—Held its usual monthly meeting at the Freemasons' Hall, W.C. on the 6th inst. Present: Bros. C. Coote, P.M., W.M.; E. Stanton Jones, P.M., I.P.M.; J. M. Chamberlain, P.M., S.W.; J. Weaver, P.M., P.G.O. Middlesex, J.W.; Edward Frewin, S.D.; Charles S. Jekyll, J.D.; William A. Tinney, I.G.; John Boatwright, Thomas Edgar, William Maby, Charles Harper, junr., George Horton, John M. Ball, Henry Snyders, Edward Terry, John Strachan, Leopold Silberberg, Joseph Horton, Edmund H. Reynolds, Lazarus, Hutchings, Hodges, J. Egerton, Svensden, and John Gilbert, Tyler. The business consisted in initiating Mr. J. Radcliffe, and raising Bros. Lazarus, J. Egerton, and Hutchings to the degree of M.M. both ceremonies of which were beautifully rendered by the W.M. Mr. M.aycock, Prof. of Music, was proposed for initiation, and the lodge was closed and adjourned.

INSTRUCTION.

BURGOYNE LODGE (No. 902).—The ordinary weekly meeting of this progressive and energetic Lodge of Instruction, held at Bro. Green's, the Grafton Arms Tavern, Kentish-town, N.W., on Friday evening, the 3rd instant, was distinguished by a visit of the illustrious Bro. T. A. Adams, P.M., P.Z., P.G.P., &c., &c., and a number of brethren (we believe thirteen) of the Fidelity Lodge of Instruction, No. 3, for the purpose of working the fifteen sections. The brethren were all called to labour by the W.M., the before mentioned Bro. Adams, who honoured the Burgoyne Lodge by presiding on the occasion, punctually at the appointed time, 7 p.m., and the business of the meeting commenced with Bro. Swallow, S.D., No. 2, who in a very able manner worked the first section. In like manner Bro. Cox, J.D., 742, and Bros. Portway, Guyton, and Stabon, of the young and energetic Great Northern Lodge, No. 1278; Bros. Tyrell, P.M. 144 and 704, (the able S.W. of the evening), and Moody, the present able W.M. of the said Great Northern Lodge, No. 1287, worked the remaining sections of the first lecture. The second lecture found an able exponent of its first section in Bro. Lambie, in the place of Bro. Wheeler, J.W. 574, unavoidably absent. Bros. Mander, Eclectic 1201, Ferguson, W.M. 177, and Cater, Albion, 9, respectively worked in a very able manner the second, third, and fourth sections of this lecture, while Bro. Tyrell (the able S.W. of the evening) again came to the front, and admirably instructed the brethren by his efficient rendering of the fifth section. The third lecture found able professors in Bro. Reed 197, also of the conspicuously rising Great Northern 1287, and in Bro. Rogers, S.W. of the Burgoyne (Mother) Lodge, 902, who, in the regretted absence of Bro. Sedgwick, P.M. 180, admirably, and even faultlessly, came forward at a moment's notice to work the second section, while the third was with a grace and elocution beyond praise, expounded by Bro. Lancaster, of the irrepressible Great Northern, 1287, who thus most eloquently and triumphantly brought a most instructive evening to its close. The brethren who attended, to the number of about forty, were all in full Masonic costume and regalia, and the various mystic forms and ceremonies not only passed off without hitch or impediment, but with a glibness and easiness of "go," as much to be desiderated as infrequently to be found in ordinary instruction meetings. Perhaps a great deal of this was due to the able presidency of the veteran Bro. Adams, who bears his sixteen lustres upon him far less like eight than like six decades. To this patriarch in the Craft may be truly applied the words of the poet, and we may heartily congratulate him upon his — lusty winter

Frosty but kindly!

and heartily wish that it may long continue. The sentiment we have thus endeavoured to convey was eloquently expressed by Bro. Poynter, P.M. and Treas., No. 902, in proposing a vote of thanks to the W.M. of the evening, Bro. Adams, and the brethren of the Lodge of Fidelity who had honoured the Burgoyne Lodge of Instruction with their attendance, and instructed them with the brilliant display of their erudition on this auspicious evening. The proposition of Bro. Poynter found a cordial seconder in Bro. Frost, P.M., United Strength, 228, the efficient J.W. of the evening, and was carried unanimously. A vote of thanks was also proposed, seconded, and carried unanimously to Bro. Rogers, S.W. 902, for his untiring zeal and assiduity in carrying out the successful evening, the labours of which had just been so satisfactorily consummated. Bro. Moody, W.M. 1287, having announced that the brethren of the Fidelity Lodge of Instruction would be happy to receive a return visit from the brethren of the Burgoyne Lodge of Instruction in a month's time, and some of the brethren of the latter lodge having pledged themselves to avail the lodge of the invitation, the brethren separated, after a most agreeable and instructive evening. Besides the brethren we have already enumerated as present, we observed:—Bros. Simmons, W.M. 902; Binner, Koester, Amor, Staton, Baker, Poupard, Emery, Reed, Slyman, Glefowski, Wuest, P.M. Cox, Driver, Pinder, Peever, Jackson, Byng, 902, Bundy, 902, Goodchild, Alexander, Williams, Bareham, Jeffries, 902, Green, Cowdray and Pedroletti. During the evening, by the unanimous votes of the brethren, a considerable number of the brethren in attendance were affiliated to the very able and energetic Burgoyne Lodge of Instruction.

STABILITY LODGE (No. 217).—The fifty-fifth anniversary of this well-known and flourishing Lodge of Instruction, of which Bro. Henry Muggeridge is the Preceptor, was held on the 26th ult., at the City Terminus Hotel, Cannon-street, under the able chairman of the evening Bro. Aeneas J. McIntyre, Q.C., Grand Registrar. There were between two and three hundred brethren present. The work of the evening was most ably performed by Bros. Strickland Muggeridge, Henry Birdseye, Hyde Pullen, Scriven, Jonas, and Bryant, after which the brethren sat down to a very récherché banquet under the personal superintendence of the proprietor, Bro. Sydney Spencer, to whom the brethren were much indebted for the admirable arrangements made for their comfort, both in lodge and banqueting hall. A selection of music was sung by Bros. T. Young, Wilford Morgan, (a most able tenor), and Ransford. Suitable and effective speeches were made by the chairman, Bro. Sir John Bennett, and others. Above fifty new members were enrolled. We are sorry we can give no fuller details of the proceedings of this very interesting gathering, not having received the promised report.

HAMPSHIRE.

ALDERSHOT.—Aldershot Camp Lodge (No. 1331).—On Thursday, the 2nd inst., the usual monthly meeting of this lodge was held at the Royal Hotel, a goodly number of the brethren being present. Bro. Carnegie, I.P.M., Grand Purst., Hants, presided. (the W.M. being detained at Woolwich, on duty), and was supported by the following officers:—Bros. Capt. Richardson, R.E., S.W.; A. McKenzie, J.W.; R. White, Sec.; J. Laverty, S.D.; R. Bennett, J.D.; F. Anderson, I.G.; and U. Lucas, O.G. Among the visitors were Bros. Israel, Tranquility Lodge, who acted as P.M.; Capt. Coates, P.M., 99th Regt.; and Warne and Gold, Pannure 723. The lodge was opened in form in the first degree, and the minutes of the last communication confirmed. Bro. Moore, a candidate for the F.C. degree, was question respecting his knowledge of the former degree, which proving satisfactory, he was entrusted with a test of merit, and retired. The lodge was opened in the second degree, and Bro. Moore presented ing the working tools. Bro. Fitter, a candidate for the M.M. degree, was questioned respecting his knowledge of the F.C. degree, and being found worthy, was entrusted, and then retired. The lodge was opened in the third degree, and Bro. Fitter was raised to the sublime degree, Bro. Capt. Richardson explaining the working tools. The questions appertaining to the degree were put by the W.M., pro tem., and were answered by the brethren for Bro. Fitter's information. The lodge was closed down to the second and first degrees. Some other business having been transacted, the lodge was closed in Peace, Harmony, and Brotherly Love.

LANCASHIRE (WEST.)

WARRINGTON.—Lodge of Lights (No. 148).—The regular monthly meeting of this ancient and flourishing lodge was held at the Masonic Rooms, Sankey Street, on Monday evening, April 29th. The W.M., Bro. James Jackson, was supported by Bros. John Harding, S.W.; Joseph Cassidy, J.W.; W. Richardson, I.P.M.; John Wild Thorp, J.D.; John Bowes, Ph. D., F.R.G.S. and P.Prov. G. Reg. Cumberland and Westmorland, Hon. Sec.; W. Smith, P.M.; D. W. Finney, P.M.; W. Mossop, P.M. 1250; Rev. J. D. Massingham, D.D. Chap.; William Sharp, P.M.; Robert Richardson, John Leigh, William Dr. Gornall, Thos. Grime, W. H. Robinson, John Dimmelson, Horatio Syred, P.M.; James Hannah, Tyler. Visitors:—Bros. John N. Sharp, No. 33; Adam Webster, 1250. The lodge was opened in form with solemn prayer, when the minutes of the previous meeting were read and declared to be correctly recorded. The ballot was then taken for Mr. Geo. Alfred Clark, and afterwards for Mr. Charles Crosier, and in each case it proved unanimously in favour, and both candidates being present, they were duly initiated, according to ancient custom, by the W.M., assisted by the I.P.M., Bro. William Richardson. Bro. Sec. reported that Bro. J. D. Moore, M.D., P.G. Sword Bearer of England, was Steward for the Girl's School at the forthcoming festival, and moved that ten guineas be voted from the lodge funds for his list. This proposition was seconded by Bro. W. Richardson, and met with the unanimous approval of the brethren. Bro. William Sharp presented to the lodge a handsome embroidered sword, a "sharp instrument," and a heavy setting maul, which gifts were highly appreciated. There being no further business, the lodge was closed with the usual solemnities.

LEICESTERSHIRE AND RUTLAND.

LEICESTER.—St. John's Lodge (No. 279).—A meeting of this lodge was held in the Masonic Hall, on Wednesday evening, the 1st inst. under the presidency of Bro. Edwin J. Crow, Mus. Bac., Cantab. There were present the R.W. Provincial Grand Master, Bro. W. Kelly; Bros. C. Stretton, I.P.M.; G. Toller, P.M., P.G.S.; W. Sculthorpe, W.M. 523; S. S. Partridge, P.Prov. G.R., as S.W.; R. W. Widdowson, J.W., P.A.G.P.; F. J. Baines, P.S.P.; W. Weuse, P.M., Treasurer; J. M. M'Allister, Sec.; J. W. Smith, S.D.; J. Halford, J.D.; C. E. Stretton, I.G.; S. P. Ekin, P.M. 607; I. H. Johnston, P.M. 129; E. Wilkinson, S.W. 1391; Dr. Clifton, Sec. 1391; &c. The most important business of the meeting being the initiation of Messrs. Samuel Tebbutt, W. H. Marshall, and J. Edmonds, the ceremony was ably performed by the Worshipful Master, assisted by the R.W. Provincial Grand Master, and Bro. Ekin, P.M., from whom collectively the initiates received an able, and impressive exposition of the signs, secrets, and mysteries, which are essential to the preservation, and recognition of the brotherhood over the universal world, and also of those instruments which have a broad and catholic meaning, bearing on the welfare of humanity at large, one being the measure of a man's duty upon earth, another the symbol of his honest industry, and the third the type of his earnest perseverance. The lodge was closed in due form, and the brethren adjourned to refreshment. Bro. Stretton, I.P.M., Steward for the Girls School, intimated that a very handsome subscription had been raised by the local lodges for the benefit of that institution.

SOUTH WALES.

CARDIFF.—Bute Lodge (No. 960).—On Friday, the 26th ult., the members of this lodge assembled at their lodge room, for the purpose of presenting a Past Master's jewel, and an illuminated address to Bro. Jno. Willans, P.M., P. Prov. G.J.D., on the occasion of his leaving Cardiff for London. The lodge was opened in due form by the W.M., Bro. S. Weichert, P. Prov. G.D.C., who in presenting the address spoke as follows:—Brethren: We meet here this evening for the purpose of presenting one of our much esteemed and distinguished Past Masters with a jewel and address, and it is worth noticing as a matter of great credit to the Bute Lodge, as well as agreeable to Bro. P.M. Jno. Williams, that at our last meeting, when he told us of his intention to leave Cardiff, the brethren then decided upon doing that, which it is now my very agreeable duty to perform. Bro. P.M. Willans: I had the honour of having been initiated into Masonry in this lodge on the night your installation took place, since then we have frequently met, indeed it would be difficult for either of us to point to any lodge meetings when we have not had the pleasure of seeing one another, and I can therefore say, that though the brethren of the Bute Lodge may look with extreme pride on the muster roll of our Past Masters, who, ever mindful of their obligation, have at all times performed their duties well, still it must be admitted by all of us with sincere pleasure, that your constant attendance and readiness at all times to assist every W.M. has been of an exceptional merit. In asking you kindly to accept this address and P.M. jewel, as a token of our fraternal respect and esteem, I beg to accompany the same, in the name of the brethren, as well as for myself, with hearty good wishes for your personal good health and success in all your undertakings, and finally to assure you that we shall never cease to remember that by your untiring zeal in the interest of Freemasonry in general, and this lodge in particular, you have greatly contributed towards the prosperity and the reputation of the Bute Lodge, No. 960. Bro. Jno. Willans responded in suitable terms, thanking the brethren for their unexpected kindness, and at the same time begged to state that if by his exertions Freemasonry or the Bute Lodge had been benefitted, the knowledge was to him a sufficient and ample reward. The jewel was of the best gold, of chaste and elegant pattern, the address, which was beautifully illuminated in gold and colours, by Mr. R. F. Banfill, of Cardiff, was placed in a splendid frame, designed and executed by Bro. F. W. Lane, of Cardiff. The lodge was then closed, and the brethren adjourned to the Royal Hotel, where the much esteemed manager, Bro. Tissot, had awaiting them a supper served in his best style. The chair was taken by Bro. S. Weichert, P.M., supported by Bros. Past Masters, J. Harman, P. Prov. G.S.D.; P. Bird, P. Prov. G. Reg.; W. Willans, P. Prov. G.D.C.; J. Willans, P. Prov. G.J.D.; W. H. Martin, P. Prov. G.S.D.; and T. B. Bell, P. Prov. J.G.W., of the Bute Lodge; Bro. Coaffee, W.M. Clarence Lodge, No. 68, Bristol; and Bro. Hall, W.M., Commercial Lodge, No. 1391, Leicester, the vice-chair being ably filled by the Senior Warden, Bro. Thos. C. Shelper. After supper the usual Masonic toasts were given and heartily responded to, and the remainder of the evening enlivened with appropriate songs and recitations. Bro. F. Atkins, M.B., Prov. G. Org., and Org. of Bute Lodge, presided at the piano. Bros. T. B. Bell, P.M.; J. Harman, L.P.M.; Jno. Williams, H. Smith, R. Jones, F. W. Lane, E. W. Shackell, D. W. Thomas, H. Forsdike, and others, contributed greatly by their kindness towards one of the most agreeable Masonic reunions ever remembered here.

Mark Masonry.

DORSETSHIRE.

WINCANTON.—Lodge of Science (No. 128).—On Thursday, the 25th ult., this lodge held a meeting for the election of W.M., and the advancement of brethren. The brethren unanimously re-elected Bro. W. S. Gillard, of Sherborne, as the W.M. for the ensuing year, after which five brethren were advanced to the honourable degree of Mark Master by the W.M. This young lodge now numbers upwards of thirty members, and is still progressing, several brethren being proposed for advancement.

Knights Templar.

BENGAL.

PROVINCIAL GRAND CONCLAVE.

A meeting of the Provincial Grand Conclave of the Royal, Exalted, Religious, and Military Order of Grand Elected Masonic Knights Templar, in the Province of Bengal, was held at the Freemasons' Hall, Calcutta, on the 9th of March, at 8.30 p.m.

There were present:—V.E. Sir Knt. Hugh Sandeman, Prov. G. Commander; E. Sir Knts. F. Powell, M.D., Past Prov. G. Commander; G. H. Daly, M.D., Prov. G. 1st Captain; I. L. Taylor, Prov. G. 2nd Captain; W. B. Collins, Past Prov. G. 1st Captain; Capt. W. G. Murray, Prov. G. Chancellor; John Mackintosh, Prov. G. Registrar; I. J. Witty, 1st Prov. G. Standard-Bearer; D. MacGregor, Prov. G. Sword-Bearer; C. H. Compton, Prov. G. Organist; and Frater Alexander, Prov. G. Equerry.

The visitors were:—Sir Knts. W. McGowan, Capt. A. J. Filgate, R.E., F. W. Robertson, 107th Regt., Lieut.-Col. G. A. Searle, H. G. Newcome, R.A., W. Girling, and W. B. MacTavish.

The Provincial Grand Conclave having been opened in due form, apologies were read from Sir Knts. Col. Ford, Major G. H. Basevi, Major C. T. Hitchens, Rev. F. W. Robberds, S. Delpratt, M.D., W. B. Farr, H. H. Locke, and W. Bourne, C.E.

The minutes of the meeting held on Thursday, the 2nd of March, 1871, were read and confirmed.

The Provincial Grand Commander, in addressing the Sir Knights stated that from an examination of the Muster Roll, he found that of the three encampments working in the Province there was only one (Sepulchre) which had apparently done any work during the past year, as St. Augustine had had no addition to its members, and the Royal Kent only one, but he should be sorry if the Sir Knights were to think, from that, that these two encampments had been slothful, or that their Commanders had been wanting in their duty. He was, and had ever been of opinion, that in all degrees of Masonry good men, and only good men were wanted and should be admitted, and he thought Commanders of Encampments deserved the highest praise if they were able to look this matter fairly in the face, and have the moral courage to refuse applications from Companions whom they were not well assured would do honour to the ranks of the Order. Since 1859 he had been intimately connected with two out of the three encampments; as also with the Royal Kent, since its opening in 1862, and it was his hearty wish to keep up the high tone of the encampments, and to see them flourishing, even more than they were at present doing. He thought that the result of the elections for Commanders during the ensuing year, Sir Knts. Mackintosh in the Sepulchre, W. Adlard in the St. Augustine, and D. MacGregor in the Royal Kent, gave every prospect of success, to bring about which he was sure every Knight Templar in the Province would gladly put his shoulder to the wheel and help as far as lay in his power. He had to bring to the notice of the Provincial Grand Conclave that a Treaty of Alliance had been made between the Supreme Grand Council of the 33rd, the United Orders of the Temple and Hospital, and the Grand Lodge of Mark Master Masons, and he recommended the perusal of the treaty to every companion of the Order. He felt sure that a great deal of good would result from this intimate and close alliance between these different governing bodies, and he would point out that offences committed against one of them would be taken equally serious notice of by the others, should the offending brother be subject to their jurisdiction. This Treaty of Alliance, together with the provisions thereof, had been duly incorporated into the Statutes of the Order, and it was henceforth of the same force and effect as the other Statutes of the Order, notwithstanding anything therein contained to the contrary. There had been an addition made to the statutes which he would give at length, and he trusted all Commanders of Encampments would have it carried out to the letter, all the more so that the above Treaty of Alliance obliged them to exercise a very strict scrutiny as to the antecedents of all companions, candidates for installation as Knights of the Order. The addition was:—"That the Registrars of all Encampments do send a copy of the usual Summons to the Provincial Grand Commander of the District, or, in his absence, to his Deputy, at least seven days before such meeting, and that no candidate be proposed for ballot who who shall have been disapproved by the Provincial Grand Commander or his Deputy."

The Provincial Grand Commander stated that he had received the report of General Meeting of Subscribers to the Bengal Masonic Association for Educating Children of Indigent Freemasons, held on Wednesday, the 6th December, 1871; and that inasmuch as it had been printed in the several proceedings of the District Grand Lodge and District Grand Chapter, and had been circulated to all subscribers, it would be unnecessary to reprint it in the body of these proceedings.

The Provincial Grand Commander, in making the following appointments for the ensuing year, took the opportunity of thanking the present Provincial Grand Officers for their services during their year of office.

G. H. Daly, M.D.	D. Prov. G. Com.
Major G. H. Basevi.....	1st Prov. G. Capt.
J. Mackintosh.....	2nd Prov. G. Capt.
Rev. F. W. Robberds, B.A.	Prov. G. Prelate.
Capt. W. G. Murray	Prov. G. Chancel.
W. Adlard	Prov. G. Reg.
W. Bourne, C.E.....	Prov. G. Expert.
Major G. C. Roweroft ...	1st Prov. G. St. B.
D. MacGregor.....	2nd Prov. G. St. B.
Major C. T. Hitchens	Prov. G. Almoner.
W. H. MacGowan	Prov. G. Capt. of I.
Capt. G. G. Nelson.....	Prov. G. Sword B.
W. Girling	1st Prov. G. Herald.
Capt. R. G. Smyth.....	2nd Prov. G. Herald.
Frater Alexander.....	Prov. G. Equerry.

It was proposed by V.E. Sir Knt. H. D. Sandeman, and seconded by E. Sir Knt. G. H. Daly, that E. Sir Knt. I. L. Taylor be re-elected Provincial Grand Treasurer for the ensuing year, and that the thanks of the Provincial Grand Conclave be tendered to him for his past services. Carried unanimously.

The cash account of the Provincial Grand Conclave for the past year was read by the Provincial Grand Chancellor, and on being put to the vote was passed.

The Provincial Grand Commander announced that the next meeting of Provincial Grand Conclave would be held on Saturday, the 8th day of March, 1873.

The Provincial Grand Commander intimated that as the Sandeman Priory was not going to meet that evening, and there was no work of any sort to be done, there would be no meeting of the Grand Priory of Knights of Malta. He would therefore intimate that all those Knights Templar who had been appointed members of the Provincial Grand Conclave would also hold corresponding rank in the Grand Priory of Knights of Malta, viz:—

G. H. Daly, M.D.	D. Prov. G. Prior.
Major G. H. Basevi.....	Prov. G. Capt.-Gen.
J. Mackintosh.....	Prov. G. Lt.-Gen.
Rev. F. W. Robberds.....	Prov. Prelate.
Capt. W. G. Murray	Prov. G. Chan.
W. Adlard	Prov. G. Reg.
I. L. Taylor.....	Prov. G. Treas.
W. Bourne, C.E.....	Prov. G. Marshall.
D. MacGregor.....	Prov. G. St. Bearer.
Major C. T. Hitchens	Prov. G. Almoner.
W. H. MacGowan	Prov. G. First. Lt.
W. Girling	Prov. G. Heralds.
Capt. R. G. Smyth.....	Prov. G. Guard.
Frater Alexander.....

There being no other work before Provincial Grand Conclave, it was closed according to due and ancient form.

Scotland.

WISHAW.

ST. MARY COLTNESS LODGE (No. 31).—On the evening of Friday the 18th ult., the grand annual Assembly, under the auspices of the Right Worshipful Master, office-bearers, and brethren of the St. Mary Coltness Lodge (No. 31, S.C.) which has been looked forward to with considerable interest for some time past—was held with the greatest “pomp and circumstance” in the Public School, Wishaw, and resulted in a success the most complete of all previous efforts. The school-room was tastefully and artistically adorned with a profusion of evergreens and variegated lamps; the insignia of the various lodges represented on the occasion were displayed to considerable advantage upon the walls. Conspicuous at one end of the hall was a portrait of the Earl of Dalhousie, Past Grand Master Mason of Scotland—the whole combined having a very novel but pleasing effect—and called forth the admiration of all present. The paintings were by Bro. Shaw, and the other decorations were the handiwork of Bro. James Martin. Carriages began to arrive about nine o'clock, and dancing was soon thereafter commenced to the inspiring strains of the Wishaw Quadrille Band, under the able direction of Mr. Miller, and continued till an early hour next morning. The arrangements were on the most complete and elaborate scale; and whilst the thanks of all good Masons are due to Bros. Forrest and Nelson for their unwearied exertions on behalf of the Lodge. It may be here stated that the Lodge continues to prosper, and that its membership is steadily increasing. We may add that there was a large attendance of the élite of the district, and every one seemed to enjoy themselves in the most harmonious manner, all the office-bearers seeming determined that nothing should be wanting on their part to give an air of homeliness and freedom to the whole proceedings. Refreshments were served in one of the wings by Bro. Ferguson, in the course of which the greatest good humour and order prevailed. Before separating, Bro. Forrest explained the object of these assemblies, namely, the raising of a small sum annually to enable the Lodge to hand over the proceeds to charitable objects in Wishaw, an object which cannot be too much commended.

Masonic Tidings.

BRITISH, FOREIGN, AND COLONIAL.

The following obituary notice appears in the Montreal Herald of April 4th.

“A few days ago, we noticed the death of a fellow-citizen, who for many years had had business transactions in this city, namely, Mr. Joseph T. Clayton, but who had lately been engaged extending his business in the neighbouring Republic. In doing so, he had to travel over a very large tract of country, and in his tour he reached Omaha, where he was seized with a sickness which proved fatal. Though a stranger he was not uncared for, having long been a member of a Masonic lodge in this city; in travelling he made himself known as such wherever he met with members of the fraternity, and at his death was buried with Masonic honours, as the following resolutions will show:—

“Omaha, Nebraska, March 16th, 1872.

“To the W.M., Wardens, and Brethren of Kilwinning Lodge, No. 124, R.C., and No. 14, R.Q., Montreal.

“At a regular communication of this lodge, held on the 13th March, the following resolutions of sympathy and respect were unanimously passed, relative to the death of Bro. Joseph T. Clayton, late a member of your lodge, who was buried with Masonic honours by Capital Lodge, No. 3, and Covert Lodge, No. 11, in the city, on Sunday, February 25th, 1872.

“Whereas—It has pleased an all-wise Providence to summon from his labours to the eternal rest, our late Brother, Joseph T. Clayton, of Kilwinning Lodge, No. 124, R.C., and No. 14, R.Q., located at Montreal,—Therefore be it, “Resolved—That, while we deplore the loss entailed on the fraternity in the removal of our brother, yet we bow in humble submission to the will of Him ‘who doeth all things well,’ consoling ourselves with the hope that our loss is our brother's gain.

“Resolved—That we tender the immediate friends and relatives of our deceased brother our deepest, sincerest, and most heartfelt sympathy in this their hour of bereavement, praying that He who has promised to be a ‘Father to the fatherless, and a husband to the widow,’ may extend to them his power of love, protection, and condolence in this their deep affliction.

“Resolved—that the Secretary, in the name of Capital Lodge, No. 3, and Covert Lodge, No. 11, furnish the widow of our deceased brother, and the lodge of which he was a member, a copy of these resolutions.

“Signed—A. Atkinson, Capital Lodge, No. 3, J. Greentree, Covert Lodge, No. 11, Committee.

By order of the lodge,

A. M. TILTON, Secretary.

At a meeting of Kilwinning Lodge, A. F., and A. M., No. 14, R.Q., held in this city on Thursday evening last, the above resolutions were received, and the following resolution was unanimously adopted in reply:—

“Moved by Bro. William H. Hall, Secretary, seconded by Bro. R. Cuthbert, Treasurer, and

“Resolved—That while we deplore the death of our late Brother, Joseph T. Clayton, we have sincerely to thank our Brethren of Covert and Capital Lodges, of Omaha, Nebraska, for their Brotherly Love, in having given to the remains of Brother Joseph T. Clayton, the last respect which it was possible to show to a departed brother: and that the Secretary be instructed to convey to the foregoing lodges the sincere thanks of this lodge for the kind and brotherly love shown to the remains of our brother, far from home, in a strange city—but not among strangers—although thousands of miles from his family circle.”

NEW MASONIC HALL AT BERWICK-ON-TWEED.—The brethren of St. David's Lodge of Freemasons, No. 393, E.C., have now secured a site for the better convenience and comfort of the Craft. The members have recently had plans of the proposed building under consideration, and have now definitely resolved to proceed with the erection of the building. The design of the proposed building is French Gothic. The entire length from wall to wall internally will be 55 feet by 25 feet. The principal entrance, which will face the Parade, is ornate in the most artistic degree. Highly decorated shafts are to flank the doorway; these ornamental columns terminating in a beautiful masonic emblem carved out on the keystone—a pair of compasses, a square, and five stars, with the motto, “Audi, Vide Tace.” Two highly-ornamented niches are to be placed on either side of the doorway, and a large tracery window will be erected in the centre of the gable, over the entrance, to aid in lighting up the main hall. A second beautiful emblem peculiar to the fraternity will adorn the gable in proximity to this window. The gable will finish with a neat gilded terminal. Five windows are to be ranged on either side of the building, and at the foot of these windows there is to be placed a carved string with a grotesque at each end. To complete the external appearance of the building, four carved terminals resting upon skew blocks are to be placed at the four corners of the building. The interior will be in keeping with the exterior as to richness of design. The Masonic Hall proper is on the first floor. This hall will be 44½ feet by 25 feet, and 21 feet in height, with an open timbered roof resting on carved stone corbals. There is to be a commodious ante-room on the same floor. On the ground floor will be a spacious coffee-room, 20 feet by 19 feet, and 11 feet high; also a library, 19 feet by 12½ feet. There are in addition commodious cloak rooms, &c. A corridor, 3½ feet in width, will extend from the front entrance up the right side of the entire building to the stair leading to the main hall; and the lobby, we may mention, is 17 feet by 8½ feet. The whole building is to be enclosed by a low parapet wall and railing. To meet the probable expense several of the more influential brethren, headed by the Worshipful Master (Bro. Chalmers I. Paton) have given handsome donations, and it is expected that the foundation-stone of the new building will be laid with masonic pomp and honours early in the summer.

Poetry.

ODE ON THE DEDICATION OF THE ST.

ALBAN'S LODGE, No. 1294.

[The St. Alban's Lodge, No. 1294, Great Grimsby, was dedicated by His Grace the Duke of St. Albans, Prov. Grand Master of Lincolnshire, and the following Ode was written on the occasion by one of the members of the Lodge, and read before His Grace, at the banquet following the ceremony. The brother has been prevailed upon to send it to the Freemason.]

Hail! thou first of Christian Martyrs on Britain's roll;

Hail! thou first of Masters on the British Mason's scroll—

St. Alban. Thou who, in they great love and intellectual might,

To this, our Isle, first showed the Masonic light.

What thou then diffused, still in worthy Masons shine,

Though fifteen centuries have passed to time.

All hail thou great prototype! Here thou hast a noble Son,

Continuing the work by thee so gloriously begun

So brotherly and good—St. Alban's—for he has to-day,

In dedicating the St. Alban's, thrown forth another ray,

Which will lighten the dark depths of the Widow's grief,

The Orphans' sorrow soften, and to misfortune afford relief.

As thou, Albanus, in thy day cherished Masons well,

And for a Christian's secret under cruel Diocletian fell;

So we, thy antitype, St. Alban's, love: to him we dedicate

This, our lodge, that therein his virtues we may imitate.

The world may sneer, and at us throw the jeering shaft,

What matter, when truth and noble patrons protect the Craft.

Let Roman Pontiff's fulminate their bulls and allocutions

Against us, we laugh at such ink-and-paper executions.

As Citizens and Brethren, no fear we shall perform our duty,

Whilst supported by the pillars of Wisdom, Strength, and Beauty.

MASONIC ODE.

Composed expressly for the Centenary Festival of the Royal Gloucester Lodge Southampton, by Bro. R. Sharpe, Prov.G.O.; words by Bro. G. M. Passenger, P. Prov. G.S.W.

In days of old, the Mason's hand
Did high on Mount Moriah raise
A temple, solemn, vast, and grand,
To echo forth his Master's praise
So let each hand and heart unite,
To raise a superstructure here,
Of goodness, till the sons of light
Shall everlasting wisdom share.

Great Architect and God divine,
Rend thou the veil of passion's night
In truth and love each heart enshrine,
And robe in universal light
Each child of earth, till Adam's seed,
From strife shall cease, and fruitful toil
To every colour, clime, and creed,
Yield peace and plenty, wine and oil.

And when this temple formed by Thee
Shall fling its portals open wide,
And this poor erring spirit flee,
To seek what Thou dost wisely hide.
Free and accepted may we prove,
When we new supplication make,
And stand in thy Grand Lodge above
Our last sublime degree to take.

METROPOLITAN MASONIC MEETINGS.

For the Week ending Friday, May 17, 1872.

The Editor will be glad to have notice from Secretaries of Lodges and Chapters of any change in place or time of meeting.

SATURDAY, MAY 11.

- Lodge 108, London, Ship and Turtle, Leadenhall-st.
 " 173, Phoenix, Freemasons' Hall.
 " 176, Caveac.
 " 1328, Granite, Freemasons Hall.
 " 1361, United Service, Swan Hotel, Wimbledon.
 Mark Lodge, 104, Macdonald, Head Quarters First Surrey Rifles, Brunswick-road, Camberwell.
 Star Lodge of Instruction (1275), Marquis of Granby, New Cross-road, at 7; Bro. C. S. Dilley, Preceptor
 Sphinx Lodge of Instruction (1329), Stirling Castle, Camberwell, at 7.30; Bros. Thomas and Worthington, Preceptors.
 Mount Sinia Chapter of Instruction, Union Tavern, Air-street, at 8; Comp. Brett, Preceptor.
 Manchester Lodge of Instruction, Yorkshire Grey, London Street, Fitzroy-Square, at 8.

MONDAY, MAY 13.

- Lodge 5, St. George's and Corner Stone, Freemasons' Hall.
 " 29, St. Alban's, Albion Tavern, Aldersgate-st.
 " 193, Confidence, Anderson's Hotel, Fleet-st.
 " 879, Peckham, Maismore Arms Tavern, Park-road, Peckham.
 " 957, Leigh, Freemasons' Hall.
 " 1366, Highgate, Gate House Hotel, Highgate.
 Chapter 720, Panmure, Horns Tavern, Kennington.
 Sincerity Lodge of Instruction (174), Railway Tavern, Fenchurch-street Station, at 7.
 Strong Man Lodge of Instruction (45), Old Jerusalem Tavern, St. John's Gate, Clerkenwell, at 8; Bro. James Terry, Preceptor.
 Camden Lodge of Instruction (704), Adelaide Tavern, Haverstock-hill, at 8; Bro. T. A. Adams, Preceptor.
 Eastern Star Lodge of Instruction (95), Royal Hotel, Mile-end-road, at 7.30; Bro. E. Gotheil, Preceptor.
 British Oak Lodge of Instruction, Bank of Friendship Tavern, Mile End, at 7 for 8.
 St. James's Union Lodge of Instruction (180), Horse and Groom Tavern, Winsley-street, (opposite the Pantheon), Oxford-street, at 8; Bro. J. R. Stacey, Preceptor.
 Wellington Lodge of Instruction, White Swan Tavern, Deptford, at 8; Bro. C. G. Willey, P.M. 1155, Preceptor.
 St. John of Wapping Lodge of Instruction (1306), Gun Tavern, High-street, Wapping, at 7; Bro. T. Mortlock, Preceptor.
 West Kent Lodge of Improvement (1297), St. Saviour's College, Stansted-road, Forest-hill, at 7.30; Bro. H. W. Lindus, Preceptor.

TUESDAY, MAY 14.

- Lodge 46, Old Union, City Terminus Hotel, Cannon-st.
 " 211, St. Michael's, Albion Tavern, Aldersgate-st.
 " 235, Nine Muses, Clarendon Hotel, Bond-st.
 " 548, Wellington, White Swan Tavern, Deptford.
 " 1269, Stanhope, Thicket Hotel, Anerley, Surrey.
 Mark Lodge, Kent, Masons' Hall, Masons' Avenue, Basinghall-st.
 Metropolitan Chapter of Instruction, Portugal Hotel Fleet-street, at 7; Comp. Brett, Preceptor.
 Domestic Lodge of Instruction, Palmerston Tav., Grosvenor-park, Camberwell, at 8. Bro. John Thomas, Preceptor.
 Faith Lodge of Instruction, Refreshment Rooms, Victoria-st. (opposite Westminster Palace Hotel) at 8; Bro. C. A. Cottebrune, Preceptor.
 Yarborough Lodge of Instruction, Green Dragon, Stepney, at 8; Bro. Isaac Saqui, Preceptor.
 Prince Fredk. William Lodge of Instruction (753), Knights of St. John Tavern, St. John's Wood Bro. F. G. Baker, Preceptor.
 Dalhousie Lodge of Instruction, King Edward, Triangle, Hackney, at 7.30. Bro. J. Saunders, Preceptor.
 Sydney Lodge of Instruction (829), Cambridge Hotel, Upper Norwood, at 7.30.
 Ben Johnson Lodge of Instruction, Ben Johnson, Good-man's-yard, at 8.
 Florence Nightingale Lodge of Instruction, Masonic Hall, William-street, Woolwich, at 7.30.
 Prosperity Lodge of Instruction, Gladstone Tavern, Bishopsgate-st. Within, at 7.30; Bro. Bolton, (W.M. 1227), Preceptor.
 St. Marylebone Lodge of Instruction (1305), British Stores Tavern, New-street, St. John's Wood, at 8; Bro. T. A. Adams, Preceptor.

WEDNESDAY, MAY 15.

- Lodge 174, Sincerity, Guildhall Hotel, Gresham-st.
 " 619, Beadon, Greyhound Hotel, Dulwich.
 " 700, Nelson, Masonic Hall, William-st., Woolwich.
 " 969, Maybury, Freemasons' Hall.
 " 1320, Blackheath, Crown Hotel, Blackheath.
 " 1349, Friars, Cheshire Cheese, Crutched Friars.
 " 1365, Clapton, White Hart Hotel, Upper Clapton.
 Pythagorean Lodge of Instruction (79), Prince of Orange, Greenwich, at 8; Bro. J. Robt. Nash, Preceptor.
 United Strength Lodge of Instruction (228), the Grafton Arms, Prince of Wales' Road, Kentish Town, at 8; Bro. J. N. Frost, Preceptor.
 Israel Lodge of Instruction, Rising Sun Tavern, Globe-road, at 7.30; Bro. Isaac Saqui, Preceptor.

- New Concord Lodge of Instruction, Rosemary Branch Tavern, Hoxton, at 8.
 Confidence Lodge of Instruction, Railway Tav., London street, City, at 7.30.
 Royal Union Lodge of Instruction, Horse and Groom Tavern, Winsley-street, Oxford-street, at 8. Bro. T. A. Adams, Preceptor.
 Peckham Lodge of Instruction, Maismore Arms, Park-road, Peckham at 8; Bro. David Rose, Preceptor.
 Temperance in the East Lodge of Instruction, George the Fourth, Catherine-street, Poplar.
 Stanhope Lodge of Instruction, Thicket Hotel, Anerly at 7.30 p.m.; Bro. H. W. Lindus, Preceptor.

THURSDAY, MAY 16.

- Lodge 55, Constitutional, City Terminus Hotel, Cannon-st.
 " 63, St. Mary's, Freemasons' Hall.
 " 169, Temperance, White Swan, High-st, Deptford.
 " 1278, Burdett Coutts, Approach Tavern, Victoria Park.
 " 1339, Stockwell, Duke of Edinburgh Tavern, Stockwell.
 Chapter 733, Westbourne, Lord's Hotel, St. John's Wood.
 " 742, Crystal Palace, Clarendon Hotel, Anerley.
 The R.A. Chapter of Improvement, Freemasons' Hall, at 7; Comp. Brett, Preceptor. Ceremony, explanation of R.A. Jewel and Solids, part sections.
 Fidelity Lodge of Instruction (3), Yorkshire Grey, London-st., Tottenham Court-road, at 8; Bro. T. A. Adams, Preceptor.
 Panmure Lodge of Instruction (720), Balham Hotel, Balham, at 7.30; Bro. John Thomas, Preceptor.
 Finsbury Lodge of Instruction, Jolly Anglers' Tavern, Bath-street, City-road; Bro. Stean, Preceptor.
 United Mariners' Lodge of Instruction, Three Cranes Mile-end-road, at 8; Bro. T. J. Barnes, Preceptor.
 St. George's Lodge of Instruction (140), Globe Tavern, Royal Hill, Greenwich, at 8.
 Whittington Lodge of Instruction (862), Crown Tavern, Holborn, at 8; Bro. Lewis Alexander, P.M. 188, Preceptor.
 Chigwell Lodge of Instruction, Bald-faced Stag Hotel, Buckhurst Hill, at 7.30.

FRIDAY, MAY 17.

- Annual General Meeting of the Royal Masonic Benevolent Institution, Freemasons' Hall, at 12.
 Lodge 6, Friendship, Willis's Rooms, St. James's.
 " 143, Middlesex, Albion Tavern, Aldersgate-st.
 " 813, New Concord, Rosemary Branch, Hoxton.
 Unions Emulation Lodge of Improvement for M.M.'s, Freemasons' Hall, at 7.
 Metropolitan Lodge of Instruction, Portugal Hotel, Fleet-street, at 7; Bro. Brett, Preceptor.
 Belgrave Lodge of Instruction, Duke of Wellington Hotel, Spring-gardens, Charing-cross; Bro. Pulsford, Preceptor.
 Doric Lodge of Instruction, Three Cranes Tavern, Mile-end-road, at 8; Bro. Isaac Saqui, Preceptor.
 Robert Burns Lodge of Instruction, Union Tavern, Air-street, Regent-st., at 8; Bro. W. Watson, Preceptor.
 Burgoyne Lodge of Instruction, Grafton Arms, Prince of Wales'-road, N.W., at 8.
 St. Luke's Lodge of Instruction (144), Gladstone Tavern, Brompton-road, S.W.
 United Pilgrims Lodge of Instruction, Duke of Edinburgh, Shepherd's-lane, Brixton, at 7; Bro. J. Thomas, P.M., Preceptor.
 Duke of Edinburgh Lodge of Instruction, Silver Lion, Penny-fields, Poplar, at 7; Br. D. S. Potts, Preceptor.
 St. James' Lodge of Instruction, Gregorian Arms Tavern, Jamaica-road, Bermondsey, at 8. Bro. Howes, P.M., Preceptor.
 Temperance Lodge of Instruction, Victoria Tav., Victoria road, Deptford, at 8.
 Burdett Coutts Lodge of Instruction (1278), Approach Tavern, Approach-road, Victoria-park, at 8; Bro. Geo. W. Verry, Preceptor.
 Clapton Lodge of Instruction, White Hart, Clapton, at 7.30; Bro. John Saunders, Preceptor.
 Royal Standard Lodge of Instruction (1298), The Castle Tavern, Holloway, at 8; Bro. R. Lee, (P.M. 193, W.M. 1298), Preceptor.
 Pythagorean Chapter of Instruction (No. 79), Prince of Orange, Greenwich-road, at 8; Comp. W. West Smith, Preceptor.
 Westbourne Lodge of Instruction (733) Horse and Groom, Winsley-street, Oxford-street, at 8.

Advertisements.

ROYAL MASONIC BENEVOLENT INSTITUTION FOR WIDOWS OF FREEMASONS.

TO THE GOVERNORS AND SUBSCRIBERS.

A worthy case of urgent need
 For "waifs and strays" of Votes doth plead.
 If any such are unapplied,
 Let not the Widow be denied.
 One Brother, if he acquiesce.
 May turn the scale and bring success.
 7th May, 1872. E.P.

COPY OF CASE FROM OFFICIAL LIST.

"ELECTION, 17th MAY, 1872.—No. 7: Collard, Jane, of No. 10, Westbourne-street, Eaton-square, widow of Robert Collard, late coach wheelwright, born May 13th, 1804. Married 31st May, 1830. Husband died 1st January, 1871. He was initiated in No. 192, London, 1st April, 1852, paid to June, 1854. Joined No. 144, Chelsea, 6th March, 1854, paid to September, 1870; one of the founders of No. 946, Twickenham, in 1863, paid to 1866. He was a Life Governor of the Institution. Her only means of support is 6s. per wee' left by the will of her late husband.—12th July, 1871. Number of years paid as by Lodge Returns, 19."

Pressing need, even when the sufferer is inured to penury, is hard to be borne; how immeasurably greater is the distress when contrasted with former affluence and surroundings of refinement.

Proxies will be thankfully received by:—

- Bro. Capt. Josh. Eglese, V.C., H.A.C., Burgoyne House, Ladbroke Road, Kensington Park, S.W.
 Bro. C. E. Hollingsworth, (P.G.S.) P.M., and Sec. of 197, 1, Delahay Street, Westminster.
 Bro. W. Jones, P.M. London Lodge, 27, Castle Street, Leicester Square, W.C.
 Bro. W. D. Rawlings, P.M., Charles Street, and Nassau Street, Portland Place, W.
 Bro. Raynham W. Stewart, J.G.D. 11, Abchurch Lane, City, E.C.
 Bro. J. M. Taylor, P.M., 100, New Church Road, Camberwell, S.E.
 Bro. W. E. Walbuncke, P.M., 144, Jubilee Cottages, King's Road, Chelsea, S.W.
 Who will be glad to exchange about 200 votes for Aged Freemasons.

In the Press.

MUSIC FOR THE CEREMONY OF INITIATION.
 Composed by Bro. EDWIN J. CROW, Mus: Bac: Cantab: ;
 W.M. & J., 279, P. Prov. G.O. Leicestershire and Rutland.
 NOVELLO & Co. Price Sixpence.

A M. M., through unavoidable circumstances wishes to borrow £100. The immediate advance of this sum will enable him to carry on his business. Will any brother kindly assist? Ample security given. Full particulars by letter. Address, M.M., Mr. Abbott's, 7, Little Tower-street.

WANTED.—To take charge of Offices or Chambers by a Man and Wife, where the Man is not required in the day, highest references. Address, M.M., 20, Fish-street-hill, E.C.

Bro. GEORGE KENNING,
 GOLDSMITH,
 JEWELLER & WATCHMAKER,

LONDON:—2, 3, and 4, Little Britain;
 and 198, Fleet-street.
 LIVERPOOL:—2, Monument-place.

Bro. CHARLES HEDGELONG,
 NEW AND SECOND-HAND BOOKSELLER,
 26, GRAFTON STREET, DUBLIN.
 AGENT FOR "THE FREEMASON."

M. A. VERKRÜZEN, (Growers' Agent),

Invites attention to his Fine and Extensive Stock of

PURE AND SELECTED GERMAN WINES,

Including the

LIGHT REFRESHING DINNER SORTS, and all Grades up to the Greatest Growths.

Certain of these Wines have acquired celebrity for their curative effects in cases of stone and gravel, they act beneficially on the liver and kidneys, counteract constipation, promote skin action, are invaluable in cases of dropsy, rheumatism and gout, tone and purify the blood, greatly assist digestion, and diffuse throughout the system, even in the coldest weather, an agreeable sense of gentle warmth.

Nothing is so refreshing, nothing gives such zest to a meal.

DELICIOUS DINNER SORTS.	DESSERT CLASS.	SPARKLING.
From 17s. 6d. to 36s. per doz.	VERY FINE. 40s. to 72s. doz.	GRANDEST. 78s. to 150s. doz.
		HOCK. 30s. to 78s. doz.
		MOSELLE. 30s. to 60s. doz.

Packing and delivery within three miles radius free.

Wholesale Depot: 3, Fell-street, Wood-street, London, E.C.

Can also be ordered through the Trade.

Each bottle bears the name of M. A. VERKRÜZEN as a guarantee.

"VERY FINE CHAMPAGNES," (by special contract) 34s., 40s., 46s., 58s., 70s. per dozen;
 SHERRIES 20s. to 96s. | PORTS. 30s. to 72s. | CLARETS. 12s. to 36s.

Other Wines of Superior Quality, at lowest prices (the Wines may be tasted at the Depot).
 Detailed Price Current forwarded on application. Terms Cash. Cheques crossed "Bank of England."
 Wines for Invalids, specially selected according to the case.

TABLE OF CONTENTS

The Antiquity and Utility of Masonry 303
 Footsteps of Freemasonry..... 304
 Bro. Lessing and his Conversations..... 306
 Hull and the Masonic Charities..... 307
 Obituary..... 307
 The Grand Lodge of Ireland 308
 Consecration of the New Masonic Hall in Golden-square 308
 Address of General Clerk, Grand Chancellor 309
 CORRESPONDENCE:—
 Practical Freemasonry 310
 Lodge of Perseverance, No. 164 310
 CRAFT MASONRY:—
 Metropolitan 311
 Instruction 311
 Provincial 311
 ROYAL ARCH:—
 Provincial 312
 ANCIENT AND ACCEPTED RITE:—
 Grand Tribunal of the 31st 312
 Grand Lodge of Hungary 313
 Consecration of a Lodge at Bala, North Wales..... 313
 Consecration of a Lodge at Jamaica 313
 Tranquility and Confidence Charitable Association 313
 Scotland 313
 Masonic Tidings 314
 Masonic Meetings for next week..... 314
 Advertisements..... 301, 302, 315, 316

ANTIQUITY and UTILITY of MASONRY.
 BY BRO. ROBERT BELL.

Mysteries and Secret Societies, have existed from the mystic union of Adam and Eve till the present day. They have engaged the attention, and called forth the warmest sympathies of the purest and best of men.

They have responded in a great measure, to the urgent wants of our social nature, by mollifying with their ointment, the sorrow, and the suffering, that sin has entailed. They have atoned for the oppression of imperfect political institutions. They are of the antidotes for the selfishness outward life of the world. They are ever widening the pathway to human exaltation, by silently diffusing the principles of morality, and by their example of fraternal Brotherhood. Their object is the elevation and social regeneration of our race. And who can measure their success in this glorious work. They are an auxiliary to the church—handmaids to the Gospel of peace. They penetrate into the thickest darkness of human degradation, dispelling ignorance, and paving the way for the light that shall never end.

Their influence and value in moralising the world is great. They are, I might say, the mother of civilisation, and the nursery of national prosperity. Some microscopic critic may have discovered a dark spot, but it disappears in the brilliant rays of the fraternal Sun, that shines with true benevolent, and regenerating influence, on the isolated condition of man. The multiplication of Secret Societies, leads us to believe that the organisations of the outer world, do not respond to the social elements of our common nature. Hence their antiquity, and increase.

Egypt owes her ancient greatness and palmy days to the agency and influence of her secret mysteries. The first of which we have any account, is Osiris and Isis, with whom the history of Egypt commences. They are now two grand and imposing figures in her mythology. An account of their ceremony in initiating the neophytes, or candidates, would have been very interesting, had time permitted.

Then followed the Isianic mystery, improved but founded on Osiris and Isis, the influence of which on the Egyptian life is, according to the historian, as follows:—"In these secret retreats were laid the foundation of that strange, and to us incomprehensible civilisation, whose remembrance is perpetuated by the pyramids, and whose history is dimly and obscurely preserved by hieroglyphical signs. It was chiefly their influence that gave unity to the Egyptian character, consistency to their religious establishments, stability to their political institutions, vigour and directness in the pursuits of philosophy, science, and art. It was through them that Egypt first began to live, and through them that ancient people attained to that high intellectual, social, and moral development, which for so many ages, raised them so far above the rest of the nations of the earth."

Again, fourteen centuries before the Christian era, we have the secret institution of Orpheus, the founder of Grecian civilisation. He travelled to Egypt in search of wisdom, and finding that her sacred mysteries were the sources of her greatness, was initiated therein. After which, he returned to Greece, where his sacred mysteries were first celebrated in forests, and on high hills. The ordeal of initiation was sufficient to tax the patience and endurance of a Job, and the courage of a David. Still it made immense progress, and exercised a powerful influence over Grecian life and manners, so much so, that kings and princes were ambitious of the honour of wearing the mystic badge of the Order.

Then we have the Cabiria of Samothrace, which prevailed very extensively, at an early period, in every quarter of the world. Their ceremony was so frightful, that many of the candidates were overcome with fear, and fell senseless to the ground. The candidates who overcame the initiation, were baptized, as in the Christian Church now, and received a new name. Their diploma was a small white stone, and on this stone was engraven their new name, together with their mark or sign.

We may therefore infer that the apostle John, was an initiate of this order. He evidently alludes to this Mystic Stone, in Rev. 2 and 17, where he says, "to him that overcometh," mark it was hard to overcome. "To Him that overcometh, will I give to eat of the hidden manna, and will give him a white stone, and in the stone a new name written, which no man knoweth, saving He that receiveth it." This double figure of the manna and stone is beautifully explicit, of the new name and nature of a true believer in Jesus. John must therefore have known, and appreciated this order, also Hiram, King of Tyre, was a high priest of the order. It existed in Judea, in the time of Christ, who you know condemned the Pharisees and Sadducees, but not the Cabirian, or Essenes, as they were then called. They were the Freemasons of that age. Their principles were Liberty, Fraternity, Equality. They were admired for their amiability, and gentleness of manner. Would that we could say this of all Masons, now, near the close of the nineteenth century.

Then in the sixth century before Christ, we have the secret order of Pythagoras. He was initiated into the Cabirian, Isianic, and Greek mysteries. He taught his doctrines in a symbolical form, and veiled them with obscurity, which attracted great numbers of influential disciples.

and which exercised a mighty influence for good, on subsequent ages. From this period some Freemasons date the origin of our order, but with them I differ. Doubtless his mode of teaching Divine truth, though more obscure, was somewhat similar to our own, this however, is no conclusive argument, that our present Masonic organisation then existed.

Then about fifty years before the Christian era, we find secret societies flourishing in ancient Scandinavia, originated by Odin, the great mystagogue of the north of Europe. His life and death were alike wonderful, and would repay a careful perusal; his beneficial influence on the world, cannot be measured, his shadow reaches down through centuries, to the present time, the whole of Europe felt, and still feels, the power of his mighty life, which clearly demonstrates the utility of fraternal combination.

Next we have the Westphalian Brotherhood of Germany, in the middle of the thirteenth century, originated to defend themselves against despotic oppression. The great power of this fraternity, like the rays of the sun, radiated in all directions, and penetrated all places; was powerful in repressing evil, in restoring liberty, freedom, and social equality, and gave to those words their present grand significance. This Order gave rise to another in Spain, at the close of the thirteenth century, called the Hermandad, who, like their Westphalian brethren, had to combat with anarchy and violence, and like them, they succeeded, with the aid of their King, in restoring liberty. The utility of the Spanish Brotherhood at that time was so great, that its effects were manifest to all.

We come next to sunny Italy, with its secret order called Carbonari, based on civil liberty and religious freedom. It has been inactive, but is still looking forward, and expects to accomplish much.

We come now to the Knights Templar, who organised themselves in the beginning of the twelfth century. But as it would form a subject of itself, I prefer passing it over till a future occasion. Also to pass over the middle ages, and bring you to Freemasonry, where we will find ourselves more at home.

I agree with those who hold that our present organization of Freemasonry originated in 1717. Had time permitted, it would be easy to shew, how the Corporations of operative Masonry gradually expanded into our present accepted form. have not only retained the name, the customs, and the ceremonies of the ancient fraternity; but also the very words, by which their principles were made known, namely: Fraternity, Integrity, Equality.

At this period she began to embrace all trades, all mankind, and all creeds, the atheist and the profligate only excepted. And now we have Freemasonry, free from the trammels and bondage of the past, looking outward on the world as her home, to be regenerated, and upward to heaven as her final place of abode, where her social element will flow on for ever uninterrupted. The ancient mysteries and secret societies disappear under the universal glory of the Masonic sun. She shines with complacency on her contemporaries, the Foresters, the Oddfellows, the Rechabites, the Orangemen, the Good Templars, and all other institutions, regarding them as tributaries in the great and necessary work of social reform.

In her speculative theory her name and nature is known by the words, Fraternity, Friendship, Brotherly Love, Relief, Truth, Equality, Integrity, Virtue, Faith, Hope, Charity, Wisdom, Strength and Beauty. Are these graces from the earth? Verily they are not. They are the essence of the Eternal God and breathe good to man.

The skillful mechanism of our order is wonderful in itself. The wisdom of which is surely from above. It is founded on Solomon's Temple, the only Masonic structure that ever had a divine architect. The position, length and breadth, exterior and interior, floor and ceiling, lights and furniture, sacrifices and worship, altar and offerings, mercy seat and cherubims, the Skekinah, God are all symbolical figures of the sublimest truths in the word of God. Christ recognises the temple as figurative of himself, when he says, "destroy this temple, and in three days I will raise it up again." He also recognises it as figurative of the heavenly Temple. Though Masons had no other foundation than this, with its antitype, it is in itself a body of divinity, perfect, complete, with which to redeem the world. Did Christ destroy our foundation when he said, that there would not be left one stone upon another that would not be thrown down? Not so, he broke down the middle wall of partition, and raised the last stone, that he might give us the world for our foundation, and its regeneration for superstructure, charging us faithfully not to confine it to any particular tribe, city, or hill. The work has been progressing ever since. Now gird on your white aprons, of pure innocent gentleness, and continue with your mallet and chisel in polishing the stones thereof, till it becomes a lodge, worthy of its originator and Great Grand Master, God Immanuel.

As already hinted, Masonry is an auxiliary to the Church, and in some respects her organisations, and modes of teaching are superior. Their principles are alike in opening the door of communion to the worthy only, alike in the end they have in view, and the compassion they bear for all. But the Church is divided and subdivided, till you are lost amid the multiplicity of creeds. Not so with Freemasonry, she is the same, pole to pole, and though she has no creed, she has the whole Bible, and is the only fraternal centre-point around which all goodness can meet, thus she is not sectarian and therefore more Christ-like. If Masons were true to their great light, the Bible, how refreshing would be their influence.

The Church chiefly teaches Divine Truth abstractly, but Freemasons teach them veiled in allegory, and illustrated by symbols, and herein they follow the footsteps of the Master, the Great Divine teacher. Yes, symbols are the speech of God, which leave a more indelible impression on the mind and memory of man, and are productive of more good, when administered with becoming propriety. Though comparatively young, her moral and social progress is marvellous indeed, She is found everywhere on our Globe, silently, and secretly sowing her seeds of goodwill to all. Her utility does not rest here, we find her, with railway speed, building her engines of charity, with which to convey her munificence to the homes of the needy, carrying into practice her heaven-born virtue, and how remarkable the ready, spontaneous, happy manner, with which she makes the greatest strangers the greatest friends. She is an asylum of peace and love, a place of respite from the incongruity of the outer world.

We have now seen how high and divine the mission of Freemasonry is, and it should fill us with gladness, that all the aspects of the times are so encouraging, and give us room to hope that vast and beneficent as that mission is, it will yet be triumphantly achieved. It is doing much to redeem the world from the thralldom of selfishness. The principles of union and love which we wish to diffuse are already slumbering in the bosom of the age. Love is not dead. These great Christian ideas, Union and Love, ideas so sweet and gentle, yet so lofty, sublime, and poetical, which, if actualised in life, would elevate us to the rank of seraphs. No, love cannot die, even in this age, saturated, as it is, with the unchristian morality of absolute selfishness, a doctrine which is armed against all that is purest, and loveliest in the human heart. Still there are disinterested spirits, who worship at the shrine of virtue, and assert that truth and right are from everlasting to everlasting.

Love still lives, the world's heart still throbs with its heavenly pulsations. It is the high office of Freemasonry to retune the mystic harp of life to the slumbering melodies of love, to breath upon the smouldering spark of everlasting charity, to cement the broken links of harmony, and re-establish the unity of man.

Be faithful, then, brethren, to the idea of your Order. See that ye live the principles that ye teach. See that ye labour to extend the mystic tie of sympathy, till as a chain of light, it shall encircle the entire of humanity. Labour at your exalted work. Be valiant in your holy warfare, and when the great ideal of Masonry shall be realised, and Christ's Divine heart beating in the bosom of humanity, then shall be fulfilled the prophetic dream of a golden age. Then shall the human race march forward and upward, engirdled with celestial sunshine, and baptised in the chorus of a heavenly psalm of love. Rally around your Order. Uphold the standard of Peace, Love, and Unity, till the world feels the power and the blessedness of your holy secret brotherly communion. Cease not your efforts, for the secret principle is spreading its branches like a green bay tree. It is majestically, though silently, working the regeneration of the world. The reformations of the past owe much to its instrumentality, and the time will arrive, when the world will become one Brotherhood, one family of peace, and may not the gentle, protecting shield of our Order surround them all. Already it is Christlike, caring for the widows and the orphans. Continue in the Divine work of charity, till pauperism, and the consequent evils of selfishness, be for ever fled away. The glory of Accepted Masonry will yet overshadow the cope stones of regeneration. Then let us live as becometh our great Order. To you who are members of the Grand Lodge of Scotland, I would say, use all your influence to prune the unbecoming branches, which tend only to retard the growth, and to destroy the beauty and symmetry of our favourite mystic tree. Encourage all her benevolent schemes, and fight for her more, for in this respect, our own wealthy, peaceful Scotland is lamentably behind.

FOOTSTEPS OF FREEMASONRY;

OR,

FREEMASONRY IN RELATION TO AUTHENTIC HISTORY.

By W. VIKER BEDOLFE, M.D., J.W. 1329., Hon. Secretary Sphinx Lodge of Instruction.

(Continued from page 132.)

Many wonderful things are supposed of Freemasonry and its presumed historians seem to have but one object in common, to render its philology ridiculous. Even some of the more rational describe it as impersonate, and coeval with the origin of man, and that its solemn pledge of mutual faith, is only a primeval greeting supposed to have been introduced by Adam.

But assertions of this kind prove nothing, and is an argument duly provided for by Cervantes, who makes Sancho Panza, demand of the Scholar of Salamanca, "can your Reverence who knows everything, tell us, who was the first thief." His Reverence hesitating, he answered it himself, "Perhaps it was the Devil, for he it, was who first went out (of Heaven) on the fly (or tramp.)" Has the knight of the sorrowful countenance really lived, fought, and died in vain?

The proverb, however, that there is "nothing new," is nevertheless not destitute of a certain degree of truth, for most things may be said to have had their prototypes, even American claims were not unknown in the good old times when the doctrine was,

"That they should take who had the power.
And they should keep who can."

Our object, however, has not been to assert truisms, but to endeavour to point out by the argument of cumulative evidence, that Freemasonry has an authentic paternity, and is connected in its origin with those systems which have dominated, and even still (not less energetically) rule the world.

To talk of Institutions dying out seems trite, but who can point out any existence, however humble, in the moral or physical world which can be said to be wholly lost. The sparrow falls not without an emotion of the Deity, the mere polypus has left an impression on creation that can never cease.

So it is with the political, polemical, and philosophical world, and the contests of ancient types of civilisation and philosophy are still as active as ever. Even races of beings have not ceased in the sense sometimes indicated; Nature is not careless of its own, and is not continually shrieking "I care for nothing—all shall go." It is the merest materialism to think so,

"Whatever fickle tongues may tell," and at which even Lucretius would have blushed.

Even when least expected, ancient types may be traced, for we have already pointed out, in allusion to our own distinctive garb, that the Surplice and its accompanying vestments, the cope and alb were derived from Rome, and still express Roman policy, Roman power, and Roman pretensions, however subdued.

The Geneva Gown is the representative of the Grecian pallum or cloak, and, as such, asserts a Grecian style of philosophizing, whilst it appeals to man himself, his passions and his sentiments, too often in vain words. Down trodden it re-arises, and like the scotched snake still wriggles on, hoping again to breast some rising tide of popular favour, which may bear it to its destined task, and strangle, spite of Cassandra's, the son of the priestly Laocoon, whilst already it is exclaimed “Proximus ardet uecalegon.”

“Sanguinæ exsuperant undas,”

In like manner the breeched garment of the frockless Baptist (I take it only as the type) represents in the attire of old Gaul, the Vercingetorix of our day, ever warring against Roman tyranny, and power, or, like Diogenes, scorning the pride of Plato, with a pride which Plato never knew.

Let us not, then, talk of Institutions dying out, they still live as ever, with as fierce passions, and the strifes of ancient civilization are there represented in “This fight for Empire once begun,

Bequeathed from bleeding sire to son.”

Our own distinctive garb is but an additional member of this family of vestments, and has its own history, its own peculiar type of civilization, and its own distinctive future.

But to return to our offices, we will now take the

W. MASTER, MAGISTER, MAJOR, &c.

The Master or Magister was, with the Romans, as with us, the chief of the Tribunes, or chief ruler of the Collegium or Lodge, and the word itself, with that signification, was in common use amongst them.

Thus Cæsar speaks of the Magister Operum, Master of Works, we find also Magister Collegii Augurum, Master of the Lodge of Augurs, Magister Curie, Master of the Municipal College, Master of the Arval Brethren, whose badge was a crown of wheat ears, with a white band.

The Society or Collegium of Publicans (farmers of the revenue) was held in high esteem at Rome, and their chief was called the Magister.

It was the Master only who could legally take the omens, so essential in all Roman affairs, and invoke the Deity at opening and closing, thus acting as priests of the lodge, and his general duties were clearly defined and handed down to his successors.

The Master was essentially different from the Prefectus, the former appellation being confined to the Colleges, or municipal offices, the latter denoting military command, or the civil administration of a province, as the Prefect of a Legion, the Prefect of the Fleet, the Prefect of a town or province, as prefect of Egypt, &c.

The W.M., in our Ritual, carries the Square, as emblem of his office, but the P.M., perfect or past M. is decorated with the symbolical Triangle, as it is demonstrated in Euclid, Book 1, Problem 47.

This problem was discovered by Pythagoras, who, we are told by Diogenes Laertius, sacrificed a hetacomb of oxen as burnt offering to the most High, in gratitude for his having so inspired him

“When the great Samian Sage, his noble problem found,

“A hundred oxen dyed with their life blood the ground.”

OF THE DIFFERENT GRADES OR DEGREES IN FREEMASONRY.

In treating of the fragments, we have endeavoured to point out the structure and character of the Collegium, for it was on this type all Roman institutions were founded, and on this type our own is based.

There are characteristics to every action or institution which proves its origin, thus the Buddhist religion of China is proved to be Hindoo in its origin, because its terms and conditions are Hindoo. The protomartyr, Stephen, was martyred by Hebrew rite, our Saviour by the Roman rite in all its details, and in like manner every characteristic of Freemasonry points out its essentially Roman origin.

Let us take another example. Authentic authors inform us that the College of Augurs, instituted by Numa, still exists under another name, viz., the Pontifical College at Rome, of which the Pontifex Maximus or Pope is Magister, or W.M.

Now in this college there are three separate grades, viz., Cardinal Deacon, Cardinal Priest, Cardinal Bishop, and this organisation, still existing, cannot but be considered as throwing a light upon the ancient one.

As further proof of identity, we may mention that they were virtually continuous.

Secondly that both have claimed and exercised the right of regulating the calendar.

Thirdly the ancient as well as modern pontiffs have claimed the right of canonisation, that is to insert the names of eminent men in the calendar.

Here then is an example of a lodge, descended from Roman times, retaining its three degrees, and its ancient traditions and customs.

The internal economy of a Freemasons' lodge is also founded on the triple division, the superior partaking with the inferior, although not scientifically so, the inferior with the superior, in that he was a Mason, although not a man of Science.

“Science, O man, thou hast with higher powers,
But art thou hast alone.”

These remarks are founded on the acknowledged principles of the Craft, for in the lower degree were received the initiates; there, it would seem, the operatives remained permanently; those of a higher social rank or education only a stipulated time, or until found worthy.

The control exercised over this class, as stated in the ritual, was probably chiefly of a moral character.

This triple division is evidently founded on or adapted to the three degrees adopted in his teaching by that great master, who may justly be called the founder of Roman philosophy, I mean Pythagoras, the illustrious originator of the Mathematical School, and the expounder of the Mathematical system of the universe, and of whom it is said that by a series of experiments reducing it to a demonstrative science.

“He first made music malleable.”

The Romans could not comprehend the Grecian philosophy, and when at last it was forced upon them, like a captive bird, it died in their clumsy grasp. They, in fact, never worked or warred for an idea. Hence the Romans only valued philosophy as a means to attain some personal or political end, betraying by that their want of a genuine philosophical spirit, for their system and teaching, both in its faults and in its perfections, is embodied in our own.

It is to Pythagoras we are indebted for the first attempt, however rude, for an analysis of the operations and faculties of the mind, and when a Mason would “shield his secrets” he adopts a Pythagorean emblem.

In his Ethics moral good was by him identified with unity, or friendship, with the object of cultivating and practising it, he distributed his disciples into companies or lodges, for once received as disciples, they were, says Aulus Gellius (lib. I. ix.) formed into an indissoluble society, or consortium, sworn to aid and support each other.

His disciples were divided into three classes, thus they remained as “probationers,” or to be “physiognomised,” until by his study of their character, he had satisfied himself of their fitness to become his followers. If accepted, they were admitted,

1st. As silent learners, “akoustikoi,” or Initiates, and had to guard silence, and listen for two years, during which time they were forbidden to ask any question, even for explanation, so strictly were they disciplined.

2nd. As students, “mathematikoi,” (equivalent to our second degree), they studied the mathematics, viz.: Geometry, music, and astronomy, and might inquire, and dispute.

3rd. Masters or physicians, “Phusikoi,” when they proceeded to investigate the system of the Universe, in its most extended sense, and the grand principles of Nature.

Further we may add, that of all his teachings he gave under vows of secrecy, and Iamblichus, in his Life of Pythagorus, informs us, that the penalty of drowning on the sea-shore was actually enforced on a violator of his secrets or symbols.

Thus we see that, in organisation and teaching, our system is evidently of Roman origin, for there is no doubt that in all Roman associations whether laic or cleric, a similar organisation prevailed.

This triple division, as applied to the Craft Lodges, which so extensively existed at Rome, may, supposing it to have been applied to the practical Craft of Masonry, and that we are really the may descendants of the Craft have had some influence on the Roman style of building, by giving less scope for individual exertion, and is possibly one cause why it never attained the same elevation as the Greek.

A structure being required in any part of the world, a plan was sent down from Rome, a multitude of workmen, representing the first degree (but probably not affiliated), were collected together, some superintendants, with a chief architect at their head, were sent down, the original plan having been most probably designed at Rome in the office of the Grand Master.

It is in evidence that the Craft Lodges of Publicans in the provinces obeyed the commands of the Grand Master at Rome.

I would now hereby emphatically call the attention of Freemasons to the fact, that up to a certain point all the three degrees resemble each other, and each sign seems but the analogue or continuation of the preceding one. Beyond this certain point however, viz., the middle portion of the third degree, a new system begins, the signs change in kind, and the ideas developed are entirely different. Upon this subject we shall speak in our next.

The Romans seem to have had an idea that the umbel, or navel, formed the completion of the human body. In like manner when a book was finished, the button, or bulla, with which it was sealed, was also called the umbel, or navel of a book, to mark that it was finished.

Therefore, when they desired to express strongly and forcibly that anything was finished, they pointed to that part of their person and said, according to Horace and many other writers, "ad umbilicum ducitur," that is to say we have come to the navel or boss (end) of the affair, emphatically to say, it is finished, it is finished, and so do we desire emphatically to express that at this same point, Ancient Roman Freemasonry ends.

In our next we propose to illustrate the second, or philosophical portion.

BRO. LESSING AND HIS MASONIC CONVERSATIONS.

BY WAY OF COMMENTARY.—PART THE FIRST.

BY BRO. CRYPTONYMUS.

It has been a question of some doubt whether Bro. Lessing, the erudite student, and noble scholar, designedly or accidentally left these papers as they exist. I am disposed to incline to the latter opinion. Yet as a magnificent fragment, a broken column, they claim the attention of thoughtful minds. Indirectly, likewise, they illustrate a period of Masonic history very useful to be borne in mind in our days. The slow growth of human institutions are depicted by Lessing in the interlocutory part of Falk in such vivid characters, that although we are nearly a century from the author, the picture is as perfect as when it left the master's hand. The polity is in a similar state at the present time. It is not, as a Freemason, necessary to speak of the great events of the last years, yet a passing allusion may be permitted, in order to account for the republication of Lessing's Conversations.

The world has ever been prone to apotheosise its representative men—these men—when fairly examined in the biographical, or auto-biographical way, have generally been found to be affiliated to the Masonic Fraternity. In the rare instances where they have not been so affiliated, they have usually exhibited virtues and qualities rendering them worthy of affiliation. But how rare are these instances!

One instance will surely suffice. The late noble-minded Prince Consort was never absolutely a member of the Order, but no Freemason would dispute the fact that his life and deeds, his motives and their results, were eminently Masonic, in the sense that our illustrious Brother Lessing desires to convey to the minds of others. And a further illustration of the truth of the slow growth of really enduring institutions is to be seen in all that the late Prince either mediately or immediately inaugurated. The fruits of years of patient thought, and of continual perseverance now bless a later generation. And thus it is with the works of the Freemasons. Taking not the political aspect of life, but the purely human and social side, they have been labouring to elevate a true Temple of Humanity—in emulation—and no unworthy emulation of the Great Giver of Life; as the G.A.O.T.U. gave the whole of his blessings to man, so the Freemasons only ask that those associated with them should be pure and true—no man is excluded. "You are already half a Freemason," exclaims Falk to Ernest, nor is it an idle phrase.

Taken in this light, every man of lofty aspirations, every man whose heart bids him look beyond class and nature, is already half a Freemason. Hence also arises the fact of the enduring nature of the Institution itself; hence exist its deep roots in all social existences. It is not in ceremonial Masonry, in elegant delivery, or in accurate memory that the true sources of Masonic enthusiasm are to be found, but really in the practice of the three Grand Principles, rendered more immediate and impressive by the constant practice of the rituals. In this sense, Freemasonry becomes a religion—in the true acceptance of the word—and though it may be that some put it aside as an empty piece of mummery, the real Freemason must perceive it in a truer light.

Kingdoms may rise and fall, dynasties may be overturned, all the political machinery of the world may get out of gear, but it is finally true, that to the Masonic Fraternity and certain other bodies, we must turn for real aid. No Mason, as such, would interfere with the State and its Institutions, and here we have the key note of Bro. Lessing's theme. Yet—in another way—a Mason may truly be interested in the State. As a member of the body politic, he has an interest at stake, and may properly exercise his political rights; but, if a true Mason, he will never resort to violent or frivolous means. There cannot be with him dark conspiracies, or planting of banners on city walls. Freemasonry, to my mind, is instinct with the doctrine of Forbearance.

It is not the first time that I have had occasion to treat of this most obvious of all purposes, this mutual succour. Prepared in Masonic Lodges, this binds us, and yet we have rights as individuals, and by individualism alone can mutual security be secured.

The Legend of our Order touches much upon the building of a Temple. There is the legend. Those who have honoured me by reading the Conversations may be likely to come to the conclusion that this is not all.

The work to be done must be substantial, as well as accurate.

We now, having cleared a portion of the ground, should look to the reality and truth of the transaction. No consolidation of the Jews occurred until the election of Saul. He was defeated by David, as we are told, and after a period of degradation on the part of the latter, a son was born to him, who, we are again told, was possessed of the greatest wisdom in the world.

Nor is it untrue. The father in the legend had erred; the son, King Solomon, had to expiate; the wisdom conveyed was that of contrition.

Here we begin to arrive at the key of much connected with Freemasonry. To Freemasons there exists a Temple, but it is raised—where not? Not confined to one spot, not amidst the mazy hazes of theology. Is it not instinct in the hearts of humanity collectively and individually?

The true Temple is the Conscience of Man, and directly connected with his reciprocal rights with his fellow-men. How readily do men assert their individual rights! How readily do they combine against any form of social wrong!

But in the calm of their passions, Freemasonry comes in, with its silent voice, and bids all this strife of classes and of races, cease. And although it is certain that the Order exists, and has existed, in the emphatic words of Bro. Lessing, "at all times," yet I may be permitted to say, that in his day, and following out his own argument, it was not, and cannot be universal. There appears to be, not only an ORDER OF EXPIATION, but an ORDER OF RECONCILIATION. These two united, as was the meeting of the wily Jacob with the honest Esau, would perfect society. Reconciliation between individuals is the true stability of the State.

In the contributions I have before been kindly permitted to make in these pages, I have spoken of such an Order of Reconciliation. It exists, but only in Holy Russia, where our Masonic Order does not run as it might. The reason is plain, the pages of Herodotus illustrate it. Wherever the Scythians are, they are moveable; they were cast out and can not return. They seize therefore a vast continent to move in. It has been presumed that their aim is Constantinople. Khef and rest. This is not so, it is the everlasting collision occurring between the Occident and the Orient.

God's is the Orient,
God's is the Occident;
True that your countenance
In common Ordinance
Might turn it here or there,
For God is everywhere.
But that no precept fail,
And that no doubter rail,
And that mild peace prevail,
With humble pious bow
Turn to the Kaaba now.

And what is the Kaaba, but the Conscience: what is Freemasonry, but an adequate outward expression of the Divine powers given us, untrammelled by other adventitious aids?

May I again add a few lines? Surely,
What is that, being just to God?
Not that you turn you east,
Not that you turn you west,
It is the Faith in Him, the only One;
And in his messengers who leave
His throne for every world, and in his prophets,
Through whose mild voice he speaks, and in his Holy Book:
The doom—and in the great and final day
Of general judgment, ending all.

This general judgment, what is it, save the verdict of the conscience? and when we speak of the Grand Lodge above—may not the concluding lines I have to offer best describe the hopes and belief of the races.

It is a love unto the God of Grace,
The God that ever upon all of his Pours out Eternal Mercy.
The love that's still so kindly active,
That willingly unbinds the precious bonds;
Sharing betwixt the needy wanting,
Giving the lonely and the parentless,
The pilgrim, and the poor, all His possessions:
It is the true and good fulfilment,
Of compact, treaty, and engagement—
Patient endurance in misfortune
And courage always in the sacred cause.

I have sincere hopes that my brethren either born Unitarians—in the sense of Parsees or Mohammedans—will give me the credit of sincerity. If Freemasonry does not include a belief in the unity of the G.A.O.T.U. where can it be?

We have observed Falk running after a butterfly. There is a profound meaning in that.

What is man's mission here? Say, spirit, say?
Tell me the reason of this strife below,
Why should eternal souls each day
Strive without hope in pity and in woe?
Is it then meant we should for ever thus;
Labour in vain to stay fast-fleeting joy?
Nay, rather, by the power Heaven derived
Be our's the task to make each man long lived
And independent, and his homely cot
A little palace—though it's all he's got.

And Falk got no butterfly. But he caught a firmer principle, in which his friend Ernest assisted him—that of associative force. It is idle for communities to be formed without a real understanding; hence Ernest draws Falk's attention to the ants.

How strange was that butterfly, and stranger still the non-capture. "He enticed me from bush to bush down to the rivulet, and suddenly he fluttered over it?" Such, sadly to be said, is much of human life; there is no dependence to be placed upon anything, in consequence of a wrong state of society. The bees, the ants, under T.G.A.O.T.U. are well placed. They are not dependent upon factitious aids. Why should not men, honourably associated, violating no right statutorily accepted, do as the bees and ants do?

There is a rivalry, which no process of law, which no establishment even, say, of lunacy, can arrest. They will do as they please.

Yet there are never-dying inducements for men to follow the butterfly, to reap the results of its "fluttering over." Nature and God, according to this mode of looking at it, are identical.

The old proverb that "Man proposes but God disposes," simply becomes more and more verified. Well, then, this band of patriots of the planet, not of any country, simply become more and more in the right. The temple gets a new and noiseless stone with every gallant heart which pledges itself to social and moral advancement. It is found that Ernest urges the instance of the ants. But what are they in human interpretation?

The bees have their drones, and it is likely that the ants, though I cannot aver it, have some corresponding co-relatives. In the ranks of humanity we have millions of poorer creatures. We desire to be friends to them. In that sense Ernest was not wrong.

Order, therefore, the interlocutor argues, must exist without government. "Get up and let us go," he urges—"for the ants will be crawling us." In this Bro. Lessing tells us a truth, not to be doubted of any man. There are human ants more dissatisfied than those created. If we choose to seek them in their haunts, we may be crawled over and perhaps stung.

Hence Society has an indefeasible title to extirpate such creatures, if they should prove noxious; but on the other hand, to extend to them the greatest of mercy, in so far as they prove useful to society.

Falk talks about "veiled tyranny," but in verity there can exist no tyranny save that of Nature itself, and Nature has been prepared by T.G.A.O.T.U., and under that preparation we, without appeal, should prepare ourselves here for admission into the Grand Lodge of Heaven.

How is this to be accomplished? Only, in my humble opinion, by an implicit submission to the rules of common sense, imposed and rendered eternal by T.G.A.O.T.U. Revolutionary Freemasonry never can exist in any coherence; but Masons, as such, can exercise, and ever will exercise their civil rights. Still the Masonic Fraternity binds nations together in the best of senses. It matters not whence we are derived, if we can come to a common understanding, be we of any faith acknowledging the existence and power of a Supreme Ruler, and we can enter with truth and faith into the contract we make, most solemnly, on our admission.

A word about classes, and I think my comments upon Conversation the Second may come to an end.

This division of classes is mainly, in my opinion, caused by a misunderstanding, only to be healed by frank confessions of fault on all sides. It is a question of money, and I do not know anybody of men so universally charitable as the Freemasons. Yet these privileges being, necessarily, restricted, it is held by those outside the pale, that they are valueless. This is not so, as I shall proceed to show at a future time.

BREAKFAST.—EPPS'S COCOA.—GRATEFUL AND COMFORTING.—"By a thorough knowledge of the natural laws which govern the operations of digestion and nutrition, and by a careful application of the fine properties of well-selected cocoa, Mr. Epps has provided our breakfast tables with a delicately-flavoured beverage which may save us many heavy doctors' bills."—Civil Service Gazette. Made simply with Boiling Water or Milk. Each packet is labelled—"JAMES EPPS & Co., Homœopathic Chemists, London."

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS.—Dismiss Your Doubts.—Let no one be longer oppressed with the notion that his malady is incurable till these pills have had a fair trial. Where ordinary preparations have failed, these Pills have been used with the most marked success. A course of this admirable medicine clears the blood from all impurities, and improves its quality. The whole system is thus benefited, through the usual channels, without reduction of strength, shock to the nerves, or any other inconvenience. The weakest woman and most delicate child may fearlessly resort to this cooling, corrective, and withal strengthening medicine, which works the most beneficial changes where health seemed hopelessly lost.—ADVT.

"Yesterday I was suffering excruciating pain from rheumatism in my limbs. I applied your Vegetable Pain Killer for it, and one small bottle of which in twelve hours effected a completed cure. This is the third time I have used your well-named medicine, and in each case it has produced the most satisfactory results.—J. R. BURCHARD, Dundee, April 20, 1871.—To Perry Davis & Son, London, W.C."

HULL AND THE MASONIC CHARITIES.
By Bro. WILLIAM BERNARD.

We have often heard our non-masonic friends, if we may so call our uninitiated brethren, express surprise at the magnitude and prosperity of our Charitable Institutions, and wonder how it is that these large and costly undertakings can be so ably maintained by the voluntary contributions of those of whom the outer world really "knows so little, although of whose goodness it has seen and heard so much," and we must admit that we have often occasionally ourselves, been somewhat at a loss how to understand how all the success which has blessed the efforts of the philanthropic supporters of the various Masonic Charitable Institutions has been obtained.

We know that these matters require many potent auxiliaries before they begin to look anything like promising. That wealth, talent, and perseverance, must all be brought into harmonious co-operation, that difficulties beyond number and past description have to be overcome, and that all the purest elements of Christian faith can call into being, Love and Charity, must be exercised to the fullest extent before the Samaritan like ideals of compassion and benevolence are realised for a permanent and substantial good. We know the difficulties that always beset success, for it is scarcely worth the name of success, without something has been accomplished or overcome, and we always honour success the more, when in the achievement of a charitable and Christian purpose it has crushed many opposers under its feet, and in a success of this nature Masonry may, without egotism, indeed be proud. Its charity is no fictitious scheme, or artificial sentiment, but an incomprehensible and important part of its fundamental principles. Faith, Hope, and Charity, are the three great pillars of the Masonic Temple, and the greatest of these, is unquestionably, Charity—Charity in the heart, Charity upon the tongue, and Charity in the hand, and a good brother should be able to say with Job, that "the blessing of Him that was ready to perish came upon me, and I caused the widows heart to sing for joy. I was eyes to the blind, and feet to the lame. I was a Father to the poor, and the cause which I knew not, I searched out. The stranger did not lodge in the street, but I opened my doors to the traveller. When the ear heard me, it then it blessed me, and when the eye saw me, it beamed with delight, because I delivered the poor that cried, and the fatherless, and him that had none to help him. "It is," says the late Brother Inwood, "the leading principle and the great end of Masonry, to propagate the exercise of charity in all its various operations, and he who does it not is yet destitute of the true Masonic heart, which is the heart of Charity, of Benevolence, and of Love.

The Masonic Charities speak in many ways in favour of the fraternity of Freemasons—they speak of the unselfishness of the body in alluding to the wants and studying the interests of others. They show how much a body of generous men acting in unity and in accordance with well-regulated measures, can help those who are unable to help themselves; and they shew in more ways than we at present can explain, how indefatigable is the body in the discharge of those duties imperative upon all right thinking and liberal minds. There are many gentlemen of wealth and influence among us, who subscribe munificently to these institutions, and there are others of limited means who do their best, and we regret to say, that while admiring these beautiful results of Masonic thoughtfulness, there are many who do nothing at all. Let these who may be included in this catalogue remember the widows mite, and that every little helps. We may not all be able to give our guineas, but certainly most of us can occasionally spare our mites. In Hull there are three lodges, the Humber, the Minerva, and the Kingston, and we believe the calls of our Charitable Institution are never unheeded by any of them. The Humber is one of the largest and wealthiest lodges in the kingdom, having a list of members numbering nearly 300, and in a most flourishing condition, having a pension fund attached to it, for the benefit of its own members. The Minerva though not so large a lodge is for its size and resources, equally as prosperous, and in all respects as commendable as its larger sister. The Kingston, the smallest lodge of the three, being more exclusive in the admission of members than the other two, we believe dispenses all its surplus funds, in Masonic Charity. To each of these lodges belong, gentlemen particularly active in furthering the interests of our charities, and when we consider that in most cases they have, in so doing, to disregard to a certain extent their business or professional requirements besides sustaining many other inconveniences—we think they are discharging a duty which, at all times, merits a kindly recognition. Whoever belongs to the Masonic Fraternity in this locality, must know how zealously P.M. John Walker has laboured in the good cause. For many years, no case of deserving charity has ever been brought before the brethren, in which he has not taken a prominent part. A thorough and a consistent Mason, the orphan and the destitute never appeal to his time, purse, and energies in vain; and in matters connected with the Masonic schools, his exertions deserve a praise, which his modesty would make him unwilling to receive, and our knowledge of them, render it unnecessary for us to bestow. At the last election of candidates for the Girls' School, it was through his exertions alone, both in this neighbourhood and in the metropolis, that the candidate, selected by the province, was elected, and there are many, both boys and girls, who will ever have cause to remember with gratitude, the name of P.M. John Walker. There is also Bro. W. Tesseyman, I.P.M., of the Humber Lodge, who never seems to think of "time and trouble," in following the example of his old friend Bro. Walker, and who is now, and has been for some days, in London, attending the Meeting of the Directors, and chief supporters, of the Masonic Schools. We may not all be able to do as much as some of our more favoured brethren in these respects, but the least of us may certainly do something, and if it be little, it will not be unacceptable, for if we only do our best—the best can do no more—for in the words of an eloquent and thoughtful writer:

They who bearing heavy burdens over life's most hilly road, strive to cheer a weaker brother bowed beneath another load;
Who, with young ones round about them, where full plenty never smiled,
Yet can stretch their heart, and table, to let in an orphan child.
They who half-fed, feed the breadless, in the travail of distress,
They who, taking from a little, give to those who have still less;
They, who needy yet can pity when they look on greater need,
These are charity's disciples—These are mercy's sons indeed!

Obituary.

The funeral of Lieut. Col. Macdonald took place at Harrow Cemetery on Saturday last; when in addition to the private friends and personal acquaintances of the late gallant officer, about 250 members of the First Surrey Rifle Corps attended, in plain civilian mourning, and amongst them were conspicuous the members of both the Macdonald Craft and Macdonald Mark Lodges. A more impressive burial we have never yet attended. Col. Macdonald had, it appeared, expressed a wish that military honours should not be paid to his remains, but display was, it would seem, not needed to enhance the expression of sorrow and regret with which those who surrounded his last resting place evinced their respect for the gallant gentleman, worthy friend, and firm but kind and courteous Commander. Scarce a dry eye was to be observed when the last solemn rite was performed and the members of his Corps filed past the grave to take their final farewell of one who had made himself universally beloved throughout many years of agreeable association.

NOTICE.

The Subscription to THE FREEMASON is now 10s. per annum, post-free, payable in advance.

Vol. I., bound in cloth	4s. 6d.
Vol. II., ditto	7s. 6d.
Vol. III., ditto	15s. od.
Vol. IV., ditto	15s. od.
Reading Cases to hold 52 numbers ...	2s. 6d.

United States of America.

THE FREEMASON is delivered free in any part of the United States for 12s. per annum, payable in advance.

NOTICE TO SUBSCRIBERS.

The Office of THE FREEMASON is now transferred to 198, FLEET-STREET, E.C. All communications for the Editor or Publisher should therefore be forwarded to that address.

Answers to Correspondents.

The following Articles and Communications have been received, but want of space compels us to defer their insertion:—"Aids to Study," by Bro. Carpenter; "Illustrations of the History of the Craft," By a Masonic Student; Reports of District Grand Lodge of Bengal; Lodge No. 1289; Prov. Grand Conclave of Cambridgeshire; Girvan Encampment, Glasgow; Glasgow Council Red Cross; and Glasgow Royal Ark Mariners, No. 73.

The Freemason,

SATURDAY, MAY 18, 1872.

The Freemason is published on Saturday Mornings in time for the early trains.

The price of the Freemason is Twopence per week; annual subscription, 10s. (payable in advance.)

All communications, letters, &c., to be addressed to the Editor, 198, Fleet-street, E.C.

The Editor will pay careful attention to all MSS. entrusted to him, but cannot undertake to return them unless accompanied by postage stamps.

THE GRAND LODGE OF IRELAND.

(COMMUNICATED.)

On Monday, the 2nd inst., a large meeting of brethren (Past Masters) took place at the Gresham Hotel, Sackville-street, to discuss the proposed changes in "Ahiman Rezon" (Laws or Constitutions). Most of the Prov. Grand Lodges were represented.

Bro. Commander Charles Scott, R.N., J.P., W.M. 350, was elected as Chairman, and Bro. Hilton, Prov. Grand Sec. of Antrim, kindly acted as Secretary, who read a correspondence from many of the Provincial Grand Lodges, stating the decisions they arrived at, and copies of proposed amendments.

The views of the Prov. Grand Lodge of Antrim were adopted, with very slight alterations. It was unanimously resolved to oppose many of the new laws at the Grand Lodge, and as most of the brethren from Ulster attended, at considerable expense and inconvenience, to have the question decided, inasmuch as the matter was postponed from November to May, by vote of Grand Lodge, the importance of united action was acknowledged by all.

At 8.30 the Grand Lodge was opened in ample form, by Right Worshipful R.W. Shekleton, D.G.M., on the Throne. The Masonic Hall was crowded, admission being by ticket, on production of Irish Past Masters' certificates from Grand Secretary's office.

The minutes of the previous meeting were read, and a recommendation from the Board of General Purposes to defer the granting of a Past Master's certificate for six months to a Master of a lodge for alleged un-masonic conduct. The Grand Lodge, having heard the correspondence read, refused to adopt the Board's views on the subject by a large majority.

Bros. Lord Athlumney was re-elected as S.G.W., and General Dunne, elected as Grand Sec. and the Rev. J. J. MacSorley, as Grand Chaplain; all these brethren received a hearty ovation from the Grand Lodge, as their names were called to fill their respective posts.

The offices of Supt. of Works, Grand Sword Bearer, and Grand Organist, were elected by scrip, the voting papers deposited in a box, and scrutineers appointed for next day at four o'clock.

There was some dissatisfaction expressed as to the manner of taking the votes by calling over the roll of the Dublin lodges first, Provincial Grand Lodge next, and then the Subordinate Lodges.

The proposed changes were then considered.

Rule 3 created a sharp discussion about the clause enabling a brother to be a member of Grand Lodge by paying £2 annually, without his being a subscribing member to a lodge. This was objected to. Some trifling change as to rank in Nos. 4 and 6, was cancelled on a division, and it was decided that the Grand Lodge should meet monthly as heretofore.

A brother from Derry proposed, as an addenda, that one meeting of Grand Lodge each year should take place in Derry, Belfast and Cork.

Another brother from Dublin district seconded this motion, as agricultural shows were held in these places periodically.

Sir John M. Stewart, Bart., Prov. G. Master, Tyrone and Fermanagh, objected to a peripatetic Grand Lodge, and finally the motion was rejected.

Rules 7 and 8 were carried, when the D.G.M. addressed the Grand Lodge, stating he could not spare any more time, on this occasion, to discuss the proposed changes, and would postpone them to next meeting of Grand Lodge.

Bro. Geo. Hazlett, S.G.W., representing Grand Lodge of Armagh, Monaghan, and Louth, very respectfully requested that another hour-and-a-half, or at least one hour, might be devoted to the discussion, as there were some very important rules, which if allowed to pass, would seriously affect the Masonic order of the Grand Lodge.

The D.G.M. stated he really could not devote any more time, as he had professional duties to attend to before he went to bed, and that the proposed General Laws Rules and Regulations were freely discussed by the Committee who framed them, before submitting them for approval to Grand Lodge.

Several brethren respectfully represented the hardship of coming from distant parts of Ireland, to attend Grand Lodge on this occasion, and implored the Right Worshipful Brother to adjourn Grand Lodge to Friday at ten o'clock, and proceed with the discussion.

The D.G.M. stated, in reply, he had no power to adjourn the Grand Lodge, nor would it suit his professional duties to do so, he complimented the Northren brethren on having no doubt made suitable business arrangements to enable them to stop in town.

A very desultory discussion arose as to several propositions of assembling Grand Lodge at an early date, to get through the work, at last it was proposed that the suggested laws should be again discussed in May 1873.

This was seconded by Bro. John Hilton, Prov. Grand Secretary, Antrim, and, on a division, was carried by a large majority.

I grieve to add that some hissing took place on the discussion of Rule No. 6, when two of the Ulster Past Masters attempted to state their views; the Right Worshipful D.G.M. alluded to it from the throne, and said that such conduct was un-masonic, and if again repeated he would be obliged to request the offenders to leave the Grand Lodge.

After the division on Rule No. 6, a good many of the Dublin brethren retired, seeing the strong muster of brethren from the North, who were prepared to discuss each new law, before adoption by the Grand Lodge of Ireland.

It is hoped this opposition will have a salutary effect, for any attempts at jockeyism, by endeavouring to foist new laws on the Masonic order by a very small section will be promptly met, else we fear that if undue influences are manifested, and allowed to be unchecked the result will be a schism and a new Grand Lodge formed North of the Boyne; at least the feeling is strong against dictation, coercion, or persecution by any section.

It was felt by those who came from distant parts of the country that the meeting was held at too late an hour, especially as each Prov. Grand Lodge had expressed its views on the new laws, which were never brought before Grand Lodge, and too much time was wasted at an early part of the evening. I hope however the adjourned meeting will be successful, in a Masonic point of view, and worthy of the noble order of Freemasonry of which the Grand Lodge of Ireland should be one of the brightest representatives.

ANCIENT AND ACCEPTED RITE.

CONSECRATION OF THE NEW MASONIC HALL.

A great day in the annals of the A. and A. Rite was Wednesday 8th May, 1872, and one long to be remembered by the members of that important and truly catholic rite.

The occasion was the consecration of the new Masonic Hall, 33, Golden-square, which was solemnly dedicated and set apart for the mystic purposes of Freemasonry, exemplified in the higher degrees.

The new hall forms the third of a series of handsome apartments which make the lower story of 33 Golden-square—the upper chambers being used for the library, reception-rooms, and offices in connection with the Supreme Council 33°—whose head quarters are here. The division of the lower story into separate apartments divided from each other by rich hangings and handsomely decorated folding doors—whilst detracting somewhat from the tout ensemble and tending to dwarf the proportions of a noble chamber, was no doubt necessitated by the peculiar construction of the premises—a yard at the back, and we believe an adjacent house, having to be taken in as a site for the hall. So far as convenience is concerned nothing could be better, in the event of the temple being used (as no doubt it will be) for the various London Rose Croix Chapters, as the brethren of the higher degrees will readily understand.

The new hall only wants height to give it a very fine appearance. It is well proportioned, beautifully decorated, principally in white and gold, with the arms of the members of the S. C. emblazoned on the roof, and with the seats, &c.; handsomely upholstered. The furniture and appointments are thoroughly in accord, and the various regalia and vessels, used on the occasion of the consecration, from the magnificent collar of gold worn by the Most Puissant Sovereign Grand Commander, to the large and handsome silver gilt epergne, or salver, charged with the double-headed eagle of Prussia, presented by Ill. Bro. Geo. Lambert, were all of the costliest description. We ought not to omit mention of the new organ, built under the direction of Sir Michael Costa, and which is a noble instrument.

The ceremony was of a very imposing character, and as it was witnessed by some of the most distinguished Masons and zealous members of the higher degrees, it will long live in the memory of the illustrious brethren who were then and there assembled.

The following are the names of those present:—
 Illustrious Bros. Chas. Jn. Vigne, 33°, M.P.S.G.C.; Capt. N. G. Philips, 33°, M. Ill. Leut. G. Com.; Col. A. W. Adair, M.A., 33°, Ill. G. Treas.; Genl. H. Clerk, F.R.S., 33°, Ill. G. Chan.; I. P. M. Montagu, 33°, Ill. G. Sec.; Revd. E. H. H. Vernon, 33°, Ill. G. Chap.; Sir Michael Costa, 33°, Ill. S.G.I.G.; Dr. R. Hamilton, 33°, Ill. S.G.I.G.; H. C. Vernon, 33°, Past M. Ill. Lieut. G. Com.; Col. G. Vernon, 33°, Past M. Ill. Lt. G. Com.; Hyde Pullen, 33°, Ill. S.G.I.G.; Sir P. McC. de Colquhoun, Q.C., LL.D. 32°; T. Goddard, 32°; R. Costa, 32°; J. Glaisher, F.R.S. 32°; S. Rawson, 32°; Major S. H. Clarke, 32°; C. A. Newnham, 31°; C. Fendelow, 31°; W. Portlock Dadson, 31°; C. Chandos Pole, 31°; F. Woodforde, 31°; The Earl of Limerick, 31°; Gen. Doherty, 31°; Rev. C. Davy, 31°; T. W. Boord, 31°; H. S. Alpas, 31°; T. Birchall, 31°; Emra Holmes, 31°; R. Woof, 31°; J. A. Hall, 30°; Rev. P. H. Newnham, 30°; Genl. Munbee, 30°; Capt. I. R. Molineux, 30°; T. S. Sim, 30°; Capt. G. A. Playre, 30°; Vivian Webber, 30°; H. Dubose, 30°; J. Forrester, 30°; F. C. Hughes Hallett, 30°; C. Hutton Gregory, 30°; Rev. A. Bruce Frazer, 30°; Geo. Lambert, 30°; I. Oxley Oxland, 30°; W. Oswald Thompson, 30°; R. Loveland Loveland, 30°; Chas. Horsley, 30°; Samuel White, 30°; Richd. Spencer, 30°; Geo. Brockbank, 30°; F. Binckes, 30°; A. F. Godson, 30°; Dr. B. J. Hodge, 30°; Willet E. Adye, 30°; Joseph Starkey, 30°; R. de M. Lawson, 30°; E. G. Whitney Griffiths, 30°; Excellent Brothers Chas. Burgess, 18°; S. G. Homfray, 18°; Major Gen. A. Flemyng, 18°; W. Hickman, 18°; W. Prince, 18°; Rob. Butterworth, 18°; F. Philbrick, 18°; E. T. Payne, 18°; B. H. Galland, 18°.

The brethren having taken their places, as directed by the Grand Marshal, the members of the 33° and Supreme Council entered in procession, the brethren standing to order, and the organ playing. The members of the Building Committee were thereupon called forward, and the Chairman briefly addressed the M.P.S.G.C., who replied and congratulated the Committee on the happy termination of their arduous labours. The M.P.S.G.C. then addressed a few words to the brethren, explaining the object of the meeting, and asked them to join him in solemn prayer. The Rev. E. H. H. Vernon, Ill. Grand Chaplain, offered up a very beautiful prayer, and the brethren chanted the Amen. On its conclusion, the M.P.S.G.C., and Supreme Council, and the illustrious brethren especially told off to assist in the consecration, then left the Hall. After a brief interval a procession, in the following order, entered and proceeded three times round the hall, the brethren standing to order, and the organ playing:—

- Assistant Director of Ceremonies carrying K.H. dagger.
- Member of 31° carrying silver candelabra of two lights.
- Member of 32° carrying five light silver candelabra.
- Member of 30° carrying the Banner of the Order.
- Member of 31° carrying silver candelabra of one light.
- Member of 32° carrying three light silver candelabra.
- Ill. Bro. the Rev. H. Vernon, 33° Grand Chaplain, carrying Silver Thurible containing incense.

Ill. Bro. Dr. Hamilton, 33°, bearing the gilded Cornucopia with rich Gothic cover containing Corn.

Ill. Bro. H. C. Vernon, 33°, bearing the richly-chased flagon containing Wine.

Ill. Bro. Sir Michael Costa, 33°, bearing the vessel with Oil.

The Grand Secretary General, Ill. Bro. I. M. P. Montagu, 33°, bearing the antique cubic stone, on which is engraven the mystical symbols of the Order.

Ill. Bro. Major-General Clerk, 33°, Grand Chancellor, F.R.S., bearing the Book of Constitutions and Seal of the Order.

Ill. Bro. Col. Adair, 33°, Grand Treasurer, bearing the Golden Book.

A Member of the 32° carrying the Holy Bible. The Lieut. Grand Commander, Ill. Bro. Capt. Philips, 33°.

The Grand Marshal, Ill. Bro. Hyde Pullen, 33°, carrying the Sword of Supreme Council.

The Most Puissant Sovereign Grand Commander, Ill. Bro. C. J. Vigne, 33°, Member of the Supreme Councils of the Northern and Southern Jurisdiction of the United States, and of the Supreme Council of Brazil, wearing the Golden Collar of the Order.

A Member of the 30° carrying the Banner of the Supreme Council.

Ill. Bro. Col. G. Vernon 33°, Past M. Ill. Lieut. G. Commanders.

After the whole of the brethren had taken their seats, the M.P.S.G.C. addressed the Grand Secretary General briefly as to the object of their meeting, and after he had replied, a portion of the Sacred Volume was read by the Ill. Grand Chaplain.

The M.P.S.G.C. then proceeded round the hall, scattering Corn from the Golden Horn of Plenty. On returning to his seat, the Lieutenant Grand Commander, Capt. Philips, proceeded to light the five branched candelabra, at the same time saying, "I light these to the glory of the Great Architect of the Universe," and an Invocation was given by the Grand Chaplain.

The M.P.S.G.C. again left the Throne, and taking the cup of Wine presented to him by the Grand Marshal, proceeded slowly round the hall, sprinkling the wine (the organ continuing to play) and saying, "I pour out Wine as a symbol of joy and cheerfulness."

The Lieutenant Grand Commander then lit the three branched candelabra to the three Principles of Faith, Hope, and Charity, and the Grand Chaplain gave the Invocation.

The M.P.S.G.C. again left the Throne, and taking the Cruse of Oil presented to him by the Grand Marshal, proceeded to sprinkle the same upon the Hall, saying, "I sprinkle this Hall with Oil as a symbol of peace and unanimity." The organ continued to play solemn music, and the Grand Chaplain pronounced the following invocation:—

"May He whose name is love, grant that the brethren meeting in this Temple may be ever of one heart and mind, and may they ever do to others as they would it should be done unto them."

The Lieutenant Grand Commander then lit the single light saying, "I light this to the principles of universal toleration." Then whilst beautiful music was being played on the organ by Bro. Reid, who performed with great skill on the splendid instrument, the Grand Chaplain proceeded round the hall, swinging the silver Thurible containing incense, which filled the Temple with its sweet perfume.

The Lieutenant Grand Commander then lit the two branched candelabra to the symbolical meaning, "the cultivation of the Liberal Arts and Sciences," and the Illustrious Grand Chaplain offered up the following beautiful prayer:—

"Take us we beseech Thee, Oh Heavenly Father, into Thy most sacred keeping and protection. Accept these, our offerings of Frankincense, of Corn, of Wine, and Oil, the choicest products of the Earth. We scatter them before Thee, first fruits, as it were, of Thy creatures, and emblems of our grateful and devout hearts. By Divine favour, long may we continue to flourish, happy, united, free, a living Temple not made with hands, devoted to Thy service, built up to Thy glory, and protected by Thy Almighty favour. Amen."

The dim religious light which had pervaded the handsome chamber now gave place to a blaze of glory, as the sunlights were illuminated to the full, on the M.P.S.G.C. pronouncing the dedication as follows:—

"In the name and by the authority of the Supreme Council of Sovereign Grand Inspectors General of the 33° of the Ancient and Accepted Rite for England and Wales, and the dependencies of the British Crown, I do declare this Temple, for the occupation of the Ancient and Accepted Rite, to be inaugurated and consecrated in due form: and I do hereby dedicate it to the God of infinite Beneficence and Love, and to the Cause of Humanity, now and henceforward invoking for it His protection and favour.

The brethren all chanted "All glory to the Most High."

The Grand Chaplain then proceeded to pronounce the following Benediction:—

"May the Almighty Architect of the Universe, who has disposed all things in order, according to the excellency of His will, who made the Heavens for His Majesty, the Sun and Stars for His glory, and our comfort, and the Earth as a place for the exercise of our obedience to His laws, look down upon us Masons, who have endeavoured to erect this edifice according to the rule of Charity, in the bond of Love. May this Hall be a place for worthy men to meet together to do good. May their secret assemblies be convened in law, proceed in honour, and end in charity.

"May all Masons who enter under the shadow of its roof, remember that the secret of the Lord is with them that fear Him. May the work done here prosper. May the workmen be blessed. May there be no mourning nor sorrow of heart, and may each needy and deserving Mason here find comfort and relief.

"Oh! Lord, prosper thou our handywork, and teach us at all times, to build up, in the beauty of holiness, that temple of our souls which Thou hast given us to adorn with all good works, till we arrive at that glorious mansion in the skies, where all things are perfect, and there is no more labour, but peace and happiness for evermore. Amen."

At the conclusion of the Benediction, the Grand Marshal called upon the brethren to salute seven times, which was done in the manner peculiar to the Rite.

The M.P.S.G.C. then called upon the Grand Chancellor, General Clerk, to deliver an address on the state of the Order. *

The magnificently chased Loving Cup was then passed round in order, and the chapter was closed in ample and solemn form.

Such is a brief outline of the interesting ceremony of Wednesday, the 8th May, and we not only recommend it to the perusal of our brethren in the Craft, but also to those cavillers outside Masonry—who say we are Atheists, and deny our Christianity.

* The address will be found below.

SUPREME GRAND COUNCIL.

ADDRESS DELIVERED BY THE GRAND CHANCELLOR, GENERAL CLERK,

At the Meeting held for the purpose of Consecrating the New Hall, 33, Golden Square, on the 8th. May, 1872.

Illustrious Brethren,—

It is with feelings of no ordinary gratification that the Supreme Council meet you on the present occasion, one which will form an important epoch in the history of the A. & A. Rite in this country, and we feel well assured, that the interesting ceremony just completed, will bear a lasting impression on the minds of every one here present.

We have now consecrated to the glory of the G.A.O.T.U. this Hall, with suitable ante-rooms, in which to perform the solemn ceremonies of our Order.

We have no longer, on each occasion of meeting, to engage rooms (not always very suitable), but for the future, we shall meet in our own home, free and independent, with all the conveniences of good office-accommodation, and a Masonic library of no ordinary excellence, to which all members of our Order are at all times most heartily welcome. The work of this day may be considered as the completion of that commenced on the 8th May, 1868, on which occasion a general Chapter Rose \times was held for the first time.

Our Most Illustrious Brother, Dr. Beaumont Leeson, P.M.P.S.G.C., then detailed to you the history of the A. and A. Rite in this country, from its commencement, and we all acknowledge the great zeal and ability with which he had managed its concerns, and that it was owing to the fostering care with which he had nurtured it through its infancy, that it had been enabled to survive all the perils of childhood, and arrive at its then flourishing condition.

The Supreme Council have thought that this is a most appropriate occasion on which to offer to their Illustrious brother, a testimony of their high appreciation of his long services, by presenting him with an address engrossed on vellum.

At the meeting in 1868, the Council were able to inform the brethren that they had, through careful nursing of the funds, a sum of money in hand, which it was resolved should be invested in the Funds, and it was further resolved, that in order to provide an income, the annual subscriptions of the several degrees should be increased.

In order to meet the growing requirements of the Order, it was agreed, that suitable accommodation for office, library, and a general room for meeting of the members, be obtained in London, and that an Assistant Secretary, with adequate salary, should be appointed. Acting upon the above resolutions, the Council found suitable rooms at 33, Golden Square, and, in the first instance, merely took the first floor, which they furnished, and commenced accumulating books for the formation of a Masonic library. Ill. Bro. Hyde Pullen, 33^o, was appointed Assistant Secretary.

This small beginning, however, soon led to such an extension of the Order, that it became necessary to take the second floor, and, eventually the whole of the house, which is now held by the Council on a long lease. Last year it was considered desirable to convert a yard, at the back of the house, into a Hall, in which to perform our various ceremonies, and, in order to obtain as much space as possible, a house, No. 2, Upper John Street, was purchased on a lease of 712 years.

A Building Committee was appointed to superintend the work of erecting and furnishing the Hall, and we are this day witnesses how well they have discharged their duty. To meet this expenditure, as well as that of the erection of the Hall, you last year approved of the Council selling out of the Funds the money invested in 1868, as well as a further sum, which had been invested subsequently.

As many members prefer to compound in place of paying an annual subscription, their compositions will be invested, and form part of the capital of the Order, in place of being considered an annual income.

In order to ensure legal control over the funds of the Order, the Supreme Council were last year formed into a corporate society, under the Board of Trade Acts of 1872 and 1867. The articles of agreement are known to most of you, it is not, therefore, necessary to refer further to them, and we trust that the above financial statement will be found satisfactory to the members of the A. and A. Rite. The increase of the Order at home has been most satisfactory. In the year 1868 there were twenty-seven chapters, and about 1,250 members of all degrees, under our banners. At the present time there are forty-nine chapters, and 2,136 members. Of these, thirty-two chapters are at home, and seventeen in the colonies and dependencies. In the Dominion of Canada we have established a Consistory of the 32^o, with seven members of the 33^o as Deputy Grand Inspectors. In British India we have five of the 33^o, and a Council of K.H. 30^o. All are in a flourishing condition.

It afforded great pleasure to the Supreme Council to inaugurate the Huyshe Rose \times Chapter at Plymouth, in the month of February last. The fact of the chapter being named after so illustrious a Mason, one, who though not belonging to our Order, yet has always evinced a friendly feeling towards it, and also that many of its members had taken the Rose Croix degree under a Knight Templar Warrant; but have now joined the A. and A. Rite, was an evidence of that love of harmony and good feeling which should always distinguish Masons, to whatever system they may belong. We may add, that the Rougemont Chapter at Exeter, has also joined us in a similar manner, and is in a most prosperous condition, and we have no doubt that others will follow their good example.

During the last few years the Supreme Council have frequently visited the Rose Croix Chapters under their jurisdiction, and have in all cases been highly satisfied with the manner in which the chapters have been conducted, and with the cordial welcome they received. They have also held two Councils of G.E.K.K.H. 30^o, one in Manchester, the other in Liverpool. Both were well attended, and the Council believe that this plan of holding occasional meetings of the 30^o at other places than in London is satisfactory to the members of the Order.

A treaty of union has been entered into between this Council, the G.M. of the Templars, and the G.M. of Mark Masters. With its terms you are all well acquainted, and we entertain no doubt but that it will be found to work well and preserve union amongst the different orders of Masonry. Since our last meeting we have to deplore the deaths of two of our most eminent brethren, Bro. Col. Bowyer, and his brother the Rev. W. Bowyer. The former, as the M.P.S.G.C., presided at our general meeting in May 1868. And all who had the pleasure of his acquaintance can testify to his urbanity of manner, as well as zeal for Freemasonry.

The Rev. W. Bowyer, was Chaplain to our Council, and also P.G. Chap. of the Grand Lodge of England, and was deeply interested in all that concerned the welfare of the order. By the death of both of these brethren the order has lost two great supporters, and we all mourn the loss of two dear friends and brothers.

The happy recovery of His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales from his dangerous illness has given the Supreme Council an opportunity, in common with all other bodies of Freemasons, of testifying their loyalty and affection to the Queen and Royal Family. Congratulatory addresses have therefore been prepared in the name of the whole order, as well as in that of the Supreme Council, one to Her Majesty the Queen, the other to their Royal Highnesses the Prince and Princess of Wales.

We are happy to be able to inform the meeting that we are on most friendly terms with all the recognised Supreme Councils in the world, and are in constant communication with them, and have recently had the pleasure of establishing a Supreme Council, 33^o, in Chile, under Ill. Bro. Benevente, who took all the degrees of the A. and A. Rite under us. The Supreme Council of Chile has been recognised by all our sister councils.

Last year we had the pleasure of receiving as visitors Illustrious Brothers Goodall, Sickle, Chase, and Thompson, members of the 33^o of the Northern jurisdiction, U.S., and E.H. Shaw, 33^o of the Southern jurisdiction, U.S. Ill. Bro. Goodall has on several previous occasions visited us, and as our representative at the Supreme Council, N.J., has frequently afforded us most useful information.

There being Supreme Councils of the 33^o in Scotland and Ireland, as well as England, it became necessary, to prevent any confusion arising in the Colonies from degrees of the A. and A. Rite being administered under different jurisdictions, to come to some agreement with our sister councils on the subject. We therefore proposed that whenever one of the three Councils had established the A. and A. Rite in any one of the colonies or dependencies of the British Crown, that Council should have exclusive jurisdiction in that colony or dependency so long as the Chapters or Councils established by it continued in active existence. The Supreme Council of Ireland at once acceded to this proposal; that of Scotland has asked for further information, and we regret to say has established a Rose \times Chapter and Council of 30^o, K.H. in St. John's, New Brunswick where we already had a Rose Croix Chapter in full work. We trust that the Supreme Council of Scotland will see the propriety of our proposal, and desist from establishing chapters of its own where there are already chapters under the banner of this Council.

Such, Illustrious Brethren, is a brief statement of the progress of our Order since our meeting in 1868, as well of its present condition, by which you will see that the A. & A. Rite in this country is on a firm and satisfactory footing, and we feel that we cannot conclude without expressing that in which you will all most heartily concur, namely, the great debt of gratitude we owe to our Illustrious Brother, Capt. N. G. Philips, the Lieutenant Grand Commander of the Order, to whose untiring exertions our prosperity is mainly due.

We have also to thank the whole of the brethren for the unvarying support we have at all times received from them, and to assure them that no exertions shall be spared on our part to merit a continuance of their confidence, as well as to ensure the welfare and prosperity of the A. & A. Rite.

The address was listened to with great interest by the brethren, and the General was warmly applauded as he took his seat.

Original Correspondence.

PRACTICAL FREEMASONRY.

(To the Editor of the Freemason.)

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—

As a Mason, truly loving our Ancient Order, allow me to point out the great fault of Metropolitan (and indeed English) Masonry generally. I mean the utter want of active sympathy for brethren, who though not actually in starvation, are in a fair way to that condition from want of employment.

It is true that there are several noble Benevolent Institutions connected with the Order, but they do not in any way meet the pressing necessity for some organisation to assist brethren, not pecuniarily (which always has the effect of lowering the recipient's self-respect) but by a little exertion on the part of the members of the Craft towards procuring suitable employment for worthy brethren.

How often have I met with brethren, who, like myself, have to complain bitterly of the coldness of men, who seem altogether to forget that true Masonry demands much more than merely subscribing to a lodge or chapter, or even acting as an official at a charity dinner.

Hoping that some prominent brethren may devise a plan to remove this shameful slur, and prevent brethren in difficulty from being exposed to the taunts of those outside the Order,

I am, yours fraternally,
An Unemployed P.M., M.M., R.A.

LODGE OF PERSEVERANCE (No. 164),
SIDMOUTH.

(To the Editor of The Freemason.)

Sidmouth, Devon, May 8th, 1872.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—

I must apologise for trespassing on your valuable space, but having seen by your issue of June 11th, 1870, that honourable mention is made of two very handsome and valuable presents, in the form of W.M.'s and S.W.'s chairs to Lodge Perseverance, No. 164, Sidmouth, I thought it might interest your readers to learn that a similar present, in the shape of a very handsomely carved oak J.W.'s chair, to match the others, has just been made to the same lodge by the W.M., Capt. J. W. Keyworth, a zealous and generous-hearted Mason, and an officer of the P.G.E. of K.T. A short time since a magnificent parian bust of H.R.H. the Prince of Wales was also presented to this lodge through Bro. B. J. Hodge, P.M., P. Prov. G.S.D., 30^o, by a friend to Masonry. I need scarcely add that the brethren are justly proud of their recent acquisitions.

I am, Dear Sir and Brother,

Yours obediently and fraternally,
S.W.

REPORTS OF MASONIC MEETINGS.

Craft Masonry.

BRITANNIC LODGE (No. 33).—A meeting of this lodge was held at Freemasons' Hall, on Friday, the 10th inst. There were present Bros. Lewis Crombie, P.S.G.D., P. Prov. G.M. Aberdeen, P.G.S.; Henry Bridges, P.M., P.G.S.B., D.P.G.M. Somerset; Thomas Alfred Chubb, P.G.S.; Augustus George Church, P.M.; John Strapp, P.M., P.G.S.; John Sampson Peirce, P.M., P.G.S.; Francis Webb Shields, P.M.; William Smith, P.M., P.G.S.; Magnus Ohren, S.W.; James Glaisher, W.M.; Jabez James E. C. Healey, George Nelson Strawbridge, Charles Horsley, Edmund Burke, Chas. Wills Turner, John Davis, William Clouston, John Chynoweth, Charles Pawley, Thomas Spencer, David Hodge, William Thomas Sugg, John Dixon, George Eedes Eachus, Frederick George Finch, Henry Rowland, Thomas Didymus Parker, M.D., John Nuegeli Sharp, Ricardo Cope, M.D., Theodore Anthony Rochussen, Frederick Authur Paget; Francis Pendered, Joseph Wm. Wright, James Ricks, John Urlwin, William Perkins Boddy, William Bloore, Arthur Ewind Hodge, Francis William Wilcox, and several other brethren. Letters of apology for absence were sent to the W.M. from Lord Richard Grosvenor, Sir Wm. A. Rose Alderman, and Sir F. Wyatt Truscott. The visitors were:—Bros. Marwood, P.M. 291, P.G.W. for Somerset; Capt. King, P.M. 591; Taylor, P.M. 18, P.G.W. for Middlesex; Woodman, P.M. 66; Baine, 4; Horwood, 28; Gadsden, 35; Williams, 49; Hogg, 58; Milne, 1173; Long, 1150; Percy, 690; Hallows, 709; Levick, 1227; and Beckingsale, 151. The lodge was opened at five o'clock. Bros. Romans and Goodall were passed to the second degree. Bro. Magnus Ohren, was very ably installed as W.M. of the Britannic by the retiring Past Master, Bro. Glaisher, Prov. S.G. Warden for Middlesex. The installation having been very ably performed, the W.M. appointed and invested his officers as follows:—Bros. Fredk. George Finch, S.W.; George Eedes Eachus, J.W.; John Chynoweth, S.D.; Fras. Pendered, J.D.; John Davis, I.G.; John Sampson Peirce, M. of Cers.; Lewis Crombie, Treas.; Thomas Alford Chubb, Sec.; and Bro. Speight was re-elected Tyler for the ensuing year.

ROYAL OAK LODGE (No. 871.)—An emergency meeting of this lodge was held on Wednesday, the 15th inst., at the White Swan Tavern, 217, High-street, Deptford, Bro. J. W. Reed, W.M., opened the lodge. There were present:—Bros. W. Myatt, S.W.; G. Andrews, J.W.; W. Andrews, P.M., Treas.; F. Walters, P.M., Sec.; S. C. Lewin, S.D.; H. J. Tuson, J.D.; J. J. Pakes, I.G.; R. Harman, D.C.; F. G. Skinner, W.S.; P. C. H. Wilkie, W. J. Sievey, R. Killick, J. G. Volman, H. J. Wells, H. J. Dawe, R. James, G. J. Linn, G. Harvey, F. R. Hood, W. Shaw, &c. The visitors were:—Bros. W. Herbert, 73; G. Chapman, P.M., Sec. 147; F. H. Thomas, 481; J. J. West, P.M., 548; J. A. Smith, 548; H. Nell, 1326; R. R. Millington, 1326; and W. F. Payne, 1326. The ballot taken for a candidate for initiation was unanimous in favour of his admission. In consequence of the W.M. having to attend to some urgent private business, he was compelled to leave early. Bro. W. Andrews, P.M., Treas., took the chair, and in an able manner, initiated Mr. W. A. R. Harris in Freemasonry, and passed Bros. W. J. Sievey, P. C. H. Wilkie, and H. Nell, 1326, to the second degree. Some other business being disposed of, the lodge was closed. A banquet was served.

MACDONALD LODGE, (No. 1216).—The fourth anniversary meeting of this lodge was held at the Head Quarters of the First Surrey Rifles, Camberwell, on the 8th inst., under very melancholy circumstances. On the previous day the highly respected Commander of the Corps, whose name the lodge bears, Lieut.-Col. Macdonald, had been called away after a short but severe illness, and the sad event cast a gloom, as well over the countenances of the brethren, as over the entire proceedings of the evening. Although the intimation of the loss the corps and the members of the lodge had sustained, had but a few hours previously been made, the brethren attended in full Masonic mourning, the furniture of the lodge was draped, the preparations for the annual banquet were stayed, and, with the Regimental Flag at "half-mast" in its immediate neighbourhood, the Macdonald Lodge carried out the necessary business of the evening with saddened spirit and feelings of respectful reverence for the memory of their beloved and gallant Commander. There were present on this occasion Bros. S. H. Wagstaff, W.M.; James Stevens, I.P.M.; G. Waterall, S.W.; G. H. N. Bridges, J.W.; Dr. Cronin, Treas.; J. J. Curtis, Sec.; Messenger, S.D.; Haskie, J.D.; Larham, I.G.; Carrell and Hammond, Stewards; John Thomas, P.M.; Schott, Cachett, Harper, Haggart, A. Williams, Allen, Cozens, Hale, Gray, Garland, Walton, Fountain, Ross, Fletcher, Grant, and other members, and visiting brethren C. Swan, Prov. Grand D.; W. Gompertz, Prov. Grand D.C.; Fox, P.M. 19; Chard, P.M. 907; Russell, S.W. 22; Cushing, J.W. 284; H. Puckle, 176; J. J. Wilkinson, 176; J. Webster, 174, &c., &c. The sad event above recorded occasioned the absence of several other members, in order that they might make arrangements connected specially with the corps, and amongst them were several candidates for the respective degrees. However, other candidates being present, the degree of Master Mason was first conferred on Bro. Harper, and subsequently Bro. F. H. Cozens was passed to the degree of Fellow-Craft. The well established working of the lodge was never better displayed than in the ceremony of raising on this occasion, the associations of the moment, rendering the solemn character of the ritual more than ordinarily impressive. The lodge, having been resumed to the first degree, was called off for a brief period for refreshment, as on ordinary occasions, at the conclusion of which, the W.M. proposed the usual loyal and masonic toasts, which were drunk in silence, and the lodge was then called on. Bro. George Waterall, S.W., was presented by the I.P.M., as W.M. elect, and the W.M., Bro. Wagstaff, in most admirable manner, installed him as his successor in the chair of K.S., the whole of this beautiful ceremony and the several addresses in conclusion, being rendered in perfect style. This newly installed Master invested his officers as follows, viz.:—Bros. Wagstaff, I.P.M.; Bridges, S.W.; Messenger, J.W.; Dr. Cronin, (unanimously re-elected) Treas.; J. J. Curtis, Sec.; Haskie, S.D.; Larham, J.D.; Connell, I.G.; Hammond and Fletcher, Stewards; J. Stevens, P.M., for Dioker, D.C.; Cozens, Org.; Grant, Tyler. Mr. Edward Eldridge was introduced after ballot, and duly initiated into the order. The report of the Audit Committee was received and adopted, and great satisfaction was expressed in reference to the nature of the accounts, by which it appeared, that the lodge was entirely free from liability of any kind, and that after having secured its valuable furniture, estimated to be of the value of £250 at least, and having also subscribed liberally to the Masonic Charities, its current and future subscriptions would be subject only to the ordinary expenses of management and the promotion of good Masonic works. The business of the lodge was concluded by the presentation to the retiring W.M., Bro. Wagstaff, of the customary elegant P.M. Jewel of the lodge, which had been well and worthily earned by that brother, and was received by him with expressions of gratification and assurances of further good offices on his part, in promoting the welfare of the lodge and the happiness of its members. The lodge was then closed, and the "closing hymn" having been sung, the brethren separated, to meet again, as private members of the First Surrey Rifle Corps, around the grave of him whose honoured name will ever remain associated with their lodge and its proceedings.

INSTRUCTION.

BELGRAVE LODGE OF INSTRUCTION (No. 749.)—This well-known Lodge of Instruction, held at the Wellington Hotel, Spring-gardens, S.W., met on Friday, the 10th inst., for the purpose of working the Fifteen Sections. Bro. Pulsford, P.M. 1158, W.M.; John Thomas, P.M. 507, S.W., Pymm, P.M. 749, 1310, and S.D. 1275, J.W.; and Scott, 749, Hon. Sec. The following brethren were also present, viz.:—Bros. Ough, P.G.P.; Gardiner, Burrell, Low, Perryman, Koch, Collart, Poupard, Waghorne, Bladon, Binnie, Wright, Wheeler, &c., &c. The questions were put by the W.M., and answered by the following brethren:—Bros. Ough, Pymm, Swallow, Bentley, Salmon, John Thomas, Sedgwick, Welsford, Larham, Cates, Huddleston, Manders, Noke, and Watts. After which it was unanimously resolved, that a vote of thanks be recorded on the minutes of the lodge to Bro. Preceptor Pulsford, for the masterly manner in which he put the questions, and likewise to the fifteen brethren, for the admirable manner in which they were answered. The lodge was closed in the usual manner, and the brethren parted soon after ten o'clock, well satisfied with the progress made in Freemasonry.

CAMBRIDGESHIRE.

CAMBRIDGE.—Scientific Lodge (No. 88).—The usual monthly meeting of this lodge was held at the Red Lion Hotel, Cambridge, on Monday evening last, under the presidency of the W.M. Bro. J. A. Dimmock. The lodge having been duly opened, Bro. Past Master Dimmock, proceeded to give the lecture on the Tracing Board in the second degree, in an efficient manner. The Secretary reported a communication from the Grand Lodge, stating that the sanction of the Grand Lodge had been granted to a request from this lodge to wear the centenary jewel, it having been in existence since 1754. The other business being of a routine nature the lodge was closed in the three degrees, and the brethren proceeded to the banquet, and the evening was spent in a most harmonious manner.

DURHAM.

SUNDERLAND.—Williamson Lodge (No. 949).—The annual meeting of the members of this lodge was held at the Royal Hotel, Monkwearmouth, on the afternoon of Monday, the 6th inst., for the installation of the W.M., and the appointment of the officers for ensuing twelve months. There was an unusually large attendance of the brethren, among whom were the W. Masters of the other lodges in Sunderland, and a numerous body of Past Masters, the Board of Installed Masters, numbering seventeen. After the transaction of the ordinary routine business, Bro. Jas. H. Coates was duly installed in the chair by the outgoing W.M. (Bro. Liddell) who officiated as Installing Master in a very impressive and able manner. The newly-installed W.M. then invested the following officers, viz.:—Bros. W. Liddell, I.P.M.; W. Bryans, S.W.; J. Forster, J.W.; R. W. Halfknight, P.M., Treas.; J. Barlow, Sec.; R. Hudson, P.M., M. of C.; E. Gardner, S.D.; R. Shadforth, J.D.; J. Harrison, I.G.; J. H. Foster, O.; J. Thompson, Tyler; J. Taylor and E. Beckwith, Stewards; and J. Egglestone and C. Bell, Auditors. The annual festival was held the same evening, the W.M., (Bro. J. H. Coates) in the chair. At this also there was a large attendance of the brethren, among whom were:—Bros. R. W. Halfknight, P.M. and P. Prov. G.P.; R. Hudson, P.M. and P.G.D. of Cers.; W. Liddell, P.M.; the W.M. of St. John's Lodge, No. 80, (Bro. Wilson), and Past Masters Crookes, P.G.S.; Hyistendahl, P. Prov. G.P.; Wade, P. Prov. D. of C.; Dixon, P.G.P.; and Bro. G. Young, I.G.; the W.M. (Bro. Wandless) of the Phoenix Lodge, No. 94; Past Master Riseborough, Bros. Lutert, S.W. and Pearson, P.S.W. and D.C.; and the W.M. (Bro. J. J. Clay) of the Palatine Lodge, No. 97, and Past Masters Allison and Skelton, P.G.S.B., and Bros. R. Humphrey, S.W.; H. Fryer, J.D.; and J. Humphrey, I.G.; Bro. Fitzgerald, P.M., Marquis of Granby Lodge, No. 124 (Durham); the W.M. (Bro. Forster) of the Fawcett Lodge, No. 661, (Seaham); and Bros. Armstrong, S.W., and Wells S.D.; Bro. Bowey of Alnwick Lodge, No. 1167, (Alnwick); &c., &c. The usual loyal and Masonic toasts having been given and duly honoured, the I.P.M., (Bro. Liddell), proposed the toast of the W.M., speaking in flattering terms of his ability and rapid progress in Masonry. The W.M., in responding, thanked the brethren for the very kind and cordial reception he had always met with amongst them, and asked the Past Masters to extend to him their very valuable advice—from the officers and members of the lodge, a prompt and regular attendance, and from the Worshipful Masters and members of the sister lodges in Sunderland, the moral support of frequent visits, and asked them all to look with a lenient eye upon whatever deficiencies and shortcomings they might notice during his year of office. Bro. P.M. Halfknight proposed the toast of the I.P.M., "Bro. Liddell," speaking highly of his services in the various offices he had filled in the lodge. The "Visitors," and the "Masonic Charities," having been done ample justice to, the W.M. stated that as the worthy host, Bro. Richardson, who had catered for their bodily wants so well from the formation of the lodge, would in a week leave the hotel to retire into private life, he asked the brethren, before parting, to wish him and his worthy wife many years of health and happiness in their retirement. Bro. Richardson cordially thanked the brethren, and expressed the pleasure it had always given himself and his wife to provide for the members of the lodge and the visitors. The whole proceedings were marked with the utmost enthusiasm and the greatest harmony. The dinner was excellent, the wines good and everything went well. Bro. Foster, Org., presided at the piano, and to that Brother, and to Bros. Barstow, Taylor, Fryer, R. Humphrey, Beatie, and others, the brethren were indebted for a great musical treat.

ESSEX.

LEYTONSTONE.—Beacontree Lodge (No. 1228).—The first meeting of this excellent lodge for the Summer season, was held on the 1st inst., in the new rooms adjoining the Red Lion, Leytonstone. Bro. R. J. Chillingworth, W.M. opened the lodge, and initiated Mr. W. J. Dobbs and Mr. Joseph Pigé, the ceremony being performed in an impressive manner, and the W.M. was highly complimented for his admirable working. The business of the evening having been concluded, the brethren adjourned to a most elegant and recherche banquet, served up in a splendid manner. The usual loyal and Masonic toasts having been duly honoured, the W.M. proposed the health of Bro. Barford, P.M., and in an excellent speech thanked him, on behalf of the members, for his kindness in having erected suitable rooms expressly for the lodge. It appeared that through the sale of the house where they have been in the habit of meeting, they were compelled to seek fresh quarters, and there had been considerable difficulty in finding a habitation, but when all hope seemed to have left them, and they had begun to despair of success, Bro. Barford came forward and volunteered to build rooms for them at his own expense, and those rooms were being used for the first time; he expressed a hope that they might all spend many pleasant hours under the hospitable roof. Bro. Barford suitably responded, and gave a most humorous account of the wanderings of the committee appointed to look for accommodation, upon one occasion, being nearly benighted in Wanstead Flats. The brethren having been regaled with choice viands, delighted with beautiful reading and singing, separated at an early hour. Among those present we noticed, Bros. S. Alcock, S.W.; Chappell, J.W., (and W.M. of No. 7); Vile, Treas.; Munday, S.D.; Fisher, D.C.; (who performed his share of the duties admirably); Richards, Price, Wilson, &c. The visitors were so numerous and distinguished that it would be invidious to mention names.

URTON.—Upton Lodge, (No. 1227).—The members of this lodge held their second regular meeting of the season at the "Spotted Dog," Upton, on Thursday the 9th inst., Bro. Richard Bolton, W.M., presided, he was ably assisted in the performance of his varied duties by Bros. S. English, S.W.; G. Bratten, J.W.; T. Wayland, Treasurer; R. W. Goddard, P.M. Sec.; J. Childley, S.D.; G. Levick, J.D.; J. Dee, J.G.; E. Lee, W.S.; R. Picking, P.M. D.C.; and Woodstock, Tyler. There were also present Bros.

Kerby, D. Poseuer, Holtham, Smith, Harlow, sen., Harlow, jun., and Shortlander. After the usual preliminaries the minutes of the last meeting were read and confirmed. In due course, Bros. Brown, Farna, Owen, and Morris, were formally introduced, and after giving satisfactory proofs of some proficiency in the degrees they had already passed, had the honour of receiving the Master's degree. The rather onerous duties devolving upon the W.M. were performed with rare ability, and an evident desire to impress upon the candidates the grand principles, inculcated in this sublime ceremony. The brethren of this lodge have resolved to hold a summer banquet at the "Royal Crown Hotel," Sevenoaks, Kent, on Thursday, July 4th., which cannot fail to be highly successful, seeing that ladies will be permitted to enliven the festival by their graceful presence. After the conclusion of the lodge business, refreshments were served, to which the brethren applied themselves with considerable vigour, and upon the removal of the cloth, the usual mode of proceedings was observed, undistinguished by any novel feature deserving to be recorded. At an early hour the brethren separated with mutual hearty good wishes.

GLOUCESTERSHIRE.

BERKELEY.—Royal Lodge of Faith and Friendship (No. 270).—The regular monthly meeting of this old lodge was held at the Berkeley Arms Hotel, on Monday, the 6th inst. The brethren present were Bros. William Pinnell, W.M.; Joseph Bennett, P.M. as S.W.; John Davies, J.W.; Dr. E. Long, as S.D.; John Gamble, J.D.; James Oliver, I.G.; Charles Partridge, Treas. and Sec.; Octavius Long, I.P.M.; John Carey, James Michael, E. Luce, &c., and James Miles, of the Neyland Lodge, as a visitor. The minutes of the last meeting having been read and unanimously confirmed, and the usual proclamations given, the W.M. called upon Bro. Gamble to fulfil a promise made to the lodge at the last meeting, which was to give a lecture on the tracing board, in the first degree, and which, we are pleased to say, he described at length in a very able and impressive manner. The brethren appreciated Bro. Gamble's description in the usual Masonic way. The Worshipful Master, after exhorting the brethren to put in a good appearance at the Provincial Grand Lodge, which is to be held at Berkeley Town Hall, on the 24th inst., to do honour to their R.W. Prov. G.M., Lord Sherborne, the lodge was then closed. The brethren adjourned to another room for refreshment, and the evening was spent in harmony and brotherly love.

YORKSHIRE (WEST).

BRADFORD.—Lodge of Hope (No. 302).—On the evening of Friday, the 26th ult., the brethren of this large and influential lodge gave, (on the suggestion of their W.M., who is thus doing what he can for the amusement and instruction of the friends of the lodge), an Amateur Concert, under the direction of their Organist, Bro. F. B. Atkinson, Mus. Bac. Cantab. The concert proved a great success, several of the songs being encored, the only regret expressed was that the concert was not longer, a pretty sure evidence that it was appreciated. The W.M. at the conclusion, invited the brethren and their lady friends to the lodgeroom—which for the nonce had been transformed into a very elegant refreshment-room—whilst the inner man was there being attended to, the chairs, &c. were removed from the concert-room, where an impromptu carpet dance was enjoyed exceedingly, the more so perhaps from being unexpected, the brethren and their fair friends keeping terpsichorean pleasures until the wee hours in the morning.

Royal Arch.

CUMBERLAND AND WESTMORELAND.

WIGTON.—St. John's Chapter (No. 327).—The annual convocation of the companions of the above Chapter was held on Thursday, the 9th inst., at the Lion and Lamb. The chapter having been opened, and the minutes of previous convocation read and confirmed, the following companions were duly installed Principal, Officers, as under: John Lemon, Z.; James Porter H.; John Gate, J.; Henry Bewes, Scribe E.; George Shannon, M.D., Scribe N.; Jno. Hewitson, P.S.; Hy. Dand, A.S.; J. Martin, Janitor. Brother George Carrick, Solicitor, being a candidate for exaltation, was balloted for and unanimously accepted, and was exalted by Comp. T. Routledge, P.Z.; There being no other business, the chapter was closed, according to ancient custom, at 7.30. There was a very numerous gathering of companions and amongst many others were Comps. G.G. Hayward, P.Z. 310; F. W. Hayward P.Z. 310; T. Richardson, P.Z.; Johnson, 310; Gardiner, &c.

Ancient and Accepted Rite.

GRAND TRIBUNAL OF THE 31°.

On Friday, the 10th inst., a sublime convocation of S.P's. R.S. 32°, was formed, in which Illustrious Bro. C. C. Poole was advanced to the 32°, and a Grand Tribunal of the Grand Inspector Inquisitor Commanders, 31°, was held at the new Masonic Hall, Golden-square, for the reception of Bro. Charles Hutton Gregory, into that illustrious degree. Afterwards a Grand Chapter of Grand Elected Knights K.H., 30°, was held, when the following Illustrious Brethren were present:—Chas. Jno. Vigne, 33°, M.P.S.G. Commander; Capt. N. G. Philips, 33°, M. Ill. Lieut. G. Commander; Col. A. W. Adair, 33°, Ill. G. Treas. Genl; Genl. H. Clerk, 33°, Ill. G. Chancellor; I. M. P. Montague, 33°, Ill. G. Sec. General; Rev. E. H. H. Vernon, 33°, Ill. G. Chaplain; Sir M. Costa, 33°, Ill. S.G.I.G.; Dr. R. Hamilton, 33°, Ill. S.G.I.G.; Hyde Pullen, 33°, Ill. S.G.I.G.; H. C. Vervon, 33°, Past M. Ill. Lieut. G. Com.; Raphael Costa, 32°; S. H. Clark, 32°; S. Rawson, 32°; Sir P. Mc C. De Colquhoun, 32°; C. Chandos Pole, 32°; Genl. Doherty, 31°; S. W. Boord, 31°; C. A. Newnham, 31°; C. Fendelow, 31°; H. S. Alpass, 31°; Rev. C. R. Davy, 31°; Lord Limerick, 31°; F. H. Woodford, 31°; Emma Holmes, 31°; C. H. Gregory, 31°; H. Dubosc, 30°; Frederick Binckes, 30°; S. Rosenthal, 33°; G. R. Brockbank, 30°; J. L. Line, 30°; Dr. B. J. Hodge, 30°; Genl. Munbee, 30°; John Fletcher, 30°; P. H. Newnham, 30°; Vivian Webber, 30°; Capt. Astley Terry, 30°; G. A. Phayre, 30°; R. De M. Lawson, 30°; Willett L. Adye, 30°; Thos. B. Hamham, 30°; C. Whitney Griffiths, 30°; R. Loveland Loveland, 30°; Geo. Lambert, 30°; Thos. Wilson, 30°; J. Arelano Hall, 30°; John R. Molineux, 30°; T. Oxley Oxland, (32° Portugal.) 30°; W. Roebuck, 30°; Chas. Horsley, 30°; Jos. S. Starkey, 30°; and Samuel White 30°; &c., &c.

The following brethren were then introduced, and after having been fully instructed by Ill. Bro. Hyde Pullen, 33°, and with the usual ceremonies, which were performed with great solemnity, by Ill. Bro. Genl. Clerk, admitted to the degree of G.E.K.K.H. 30°.

Bros. Rev. B. A. Galland, Major G. A. Fleming, C. J. Burgess, and F. A. Philbrick, of the Metropolitan Chapter Rose ✠; Bro. E. A. H. Castleman, of the Weymouth Chapter Rose ✠; Bro. Jabez S. Gower, of the Mount Calvary Chapter Rose ✠; Bros. John Chandler, and George Homfray, of St. Peter and St. Paul Chapter Rose ✠; Bro. G. R. Irvine, of the Royal Naval Chapter Rose ✠; Bros. George Kenning, J. Moxon Clabon, and John Read, of the Invicta Chapter Rose ✠; Bro. John Baker, of the Talbot Chapter Rose ✠; Bro. William Hickman, of the Vigne Chapter Rose ✠; Bros. W. H. Prince, and Robert Butterworth, of the Huyshe Chapter Rose ✠.

An interesting circumstance in connection with this meeting was the installation of two distinguished Knights Rosa Crucis, who were affiliated to the A. and A. Rite, on the previous day, and who were now exalted to the 30°.

The Supreme Grand Council show great wisdom in recognising the old knight Templar degrees in this way, and affiliating the members of the Immemorial Encampments, where the degree of Knight Rosa Crucis has been constantly conferred.

By so doing all jealousy on the part of the old encampments must be overcome, and we hope we may see the day when all the old encampments will have Rose Croix Chapters, under the A. and A. Rite, attached to and working in concert with them.

Masonry in the higher degrees will be benefited, and the generous concessions which have been made by the Supreme Council, are worthy of imitation elsewhere.

A vote of thanks was passed to the auditors, Ill. Bros. S. Rawson, 32°; G. Lambert, 30°; and Chas. Hutton Gregory, 30°; for their trouble in going over the accounts (the property in the hands of the Council amounting now to between £5,000 and £6,000, in consequence of the careful husbanding of the fund), and Ill. Bro. Rawson, in replying took occasion to compliment the Supreme Council on the admirable way in which he found the accounts were kept. At the conclusion of the other business, the Grand Chapter was closed, and the brethren afterwards banquetted together at the Pall Mall Hotel.

Scotland.

SOCIAL MEETING OF THE "BAIRNS" OF MOTHER KILWINNING, No. 0:—The "Bairns" held their first meeting within the Glasgow St John's Hall, 213, Buchanan Street, on Friday evening last. The chair was ably filled by Br. Conn, P. M., supported on the right by Bros. Wyllie, P. G. S., Tweed, &c.; on the left by Bros. Jas. M. Millan, R. W. M. St John's 3 bis, and Adams. The croupier's chair was occupied by Br. J. A. Ferguson, supported right and left by Bros. J. Park, P. M. 3 bis; Dr Andrews, S. W. No. 0; Granger, 3 bis, &c. On the cloth being removed the following toasts were given from the chair and duly responded to:—"The Queen and the Craft," "The Army, Navy, and Volunteers," "H.R.H. the Prince of Wales, Patron of Scottish Freemasonry," "The Grand Lodges of England, Ireland, and Scotland," "The Provincial Grand Lodge of Glasgow, and Success to the St John's 3 bis, acknowledged by R.W.M. Millan; "The Provincial Grand Lodge of Ayrshire," replied to by Br. Conn, P. M. An eloquent oration was delivered by Bro. Bell on "Masonry: Its antiquity and Present Utility." The evening was enlivened by the singing of Bros. R. B. Thomson, Park, and Granger. It was proposed, as this was the first meeting of the kind, that similar re-unions of the sons of Mother Kilwinning, residing in Glasgow and vicinity should be held annually. The toast of "Happy to meet but sorry to part, and happy to meet again," concluded the proceedings of the evening.

CONSECRATION OF THE BALA LODGE (No. 1369.)

On Friday, May 3rd., the Right Worshipful Bro. Sir Watkin Williams Wynn, Bart, Provincial Grand Master of North Wales and Shropshire, held a Provincial Grand Lodge at Bala, for the purpose of consecrating the new Bala Lodge, 1369, at the Plascoch Hotel. Amongst the brethren who assembled were the following:—

Bros. Sir W. W. Wynn, Bart., M.P., Prov. G.M.; the Rev. E. H. Dymock, 1124, D. Prov. G.M.; R. Vaughan Williams, St. Asaph, Prov. G.S.W.; J. C. Wynn Edwards, Prov. G.J.W.; George Owen, P.M., 1124, Prov. G.D.C.; Robert Humphreys, W.M. 606, Prov. G.S.B.; D. P. Owen, Welchpool, P.M. 998, Prov. G.P.; Askew Roberts, Croeswylan Oswestry, 1124, Prov. G.S.

Visitors.—Bros. Charles Dutton, P. Prov. G.S.W., Cheshire; Edward Breese, 206, Prov. G.R., Herefordshire; Walter Theobalds, W.M. 605; Edward Jones, Sec. 605; Hugh Roberts, 605; Radcliffe, J.W. 605; Charles Stuley, S.D. 605; Sharpe, Sec. 823; Chapman, 823; Cottrell, S.D. 823; Holland, S.W. 823; W. Withy, W.M. 998; (Welchpool); Edward Davies, 477; Charles Leedham, P.M. 220; Bewley, 220; T. J. Hughes, 216; Joel Baxton, 1013; Welch, 1013; Busfield, 1299; J. C. Baker, 241; James

Williams, 292; Martin, P.M. 477; Edward Jones, 1072; and Morrow, 606.

From the Lodge of St. Oswald, Oswestry, 1124, (in addition to three of the Provincial Grand Officers previously mentioned, there were present Bros. W. H. Spaul, P.M. and Hon. Sec.; Alexandra Walker, S.D.; John Thomas, J.D. John Morris, I.G.; Dr. Burton, Steward; H. G. Weaver, W. Fletcher Rogers, W. Owen, J. Phillips, Walter Eddy, J. C. Edwards, and Robert Gressier.

The members of the new Bala Lodge included:—Bros. A. J. Ll. Price, 1167; W. Owen, 292; A. A. Passingham, R. O. Anwyl, C. R. W. Tottenham, W. Owen, John Jackson, P.M. 823; R. Woodcock, J. Harwood, Joseph T. Taylor, Charles John Walker, T. Jones, &c.

The Provincial Grand Master only arrived in London from the Continent on Thursday, but with his usual heartiness in the cause of Masonry, and good nature to his neighbours, the popular baronet at once made arrangements, for a special train from Bala to Ruabon on Friday evening, after the proceedings. Doubtless had this been more generally known, and had the opening of the Bala Lodge been more extensively advertised, there would have been a larger attendance of brethren of the Province. As it was, with the exception of the Lodge of St. Oswald, which was largely represented, there was a very scanty attendance, indeed, of North Wales and Shropshire Masons, the preponderance being from Cheshire and Lancashire.

Before the proceedings commenced the R.W. P. Grand Master, Sir Watkin, in thanking the brethren for their attendance, observed that the Bala was not a maritime or mercantile place; it contained no large manufactories; and they could never expect to see lodges there to the extent of other parts of the province; and he congratulated them on being so well represented at their consecration. He had fixed the day as late as he could, without seriously inconveniencing them—not out of any disrespect to their wishes, but because the chance of fine weather would be greater, and he was anxious to have a day when brethren from the busy centres of trade could the better enjoy their beautiful Welsh scenery. He was glad to see so many present, and trusted that Masonry would flourish in Bala—which was almost the very centre of North Wales—and extend, as it had done in other parts of the province.

The ceremony of consecration was then most impressively performed by Bro. Dr. Goldbro', of London, who is a P.M. of the Welshpool Lodge, 998, and P. Prov. G.S.W. of the Province of North Wales and Shropshire.

The musical portion of the ceremony was under the direction of Bro. J. C. Baker, of 341; Bro. T. Welsh, 241, and 1013, presided at the harmonium.

At the close of the consecration the W.M. (Bro. John Jackson, P.M. 823) was installed first Master of the new lodge; and the following officers were installed:—Bros. John Houlding, S.W.; Capt. C. R. W. Tottenham, J.W.; William Owen, Treasurer, and J.D.; Henry Harwood, Secretary; Francis Parmeter, S.D.; Thomas Seaton, I.G.; Samuel Maccawley, Tyler.

CONSECRATION OF A NEW LODGE AT JAMAICA.

On Monday, 1st April, the Westmoreland Lodge, No. 1377, was duly consecrated and dedicated.

The petitioners assembled at Morgan's Bridge, at the residence of Bro. Edmund Goodin, where they received the W. Master and Officers of the Friendly Lodge of Montego Bay, No. 383.

They moved in procession to Lincoln Penn, the new Lodge Room, where the usual ceremonial services were performed. The Consecration Prayer was delivered by the Rev. Bro. N. Lechmere Ellis, Chaplain. The warrant of Constitution was read by Bro. W. G. McLellan, Secretary. The elements of Consecration were severally strewed over the building, with the usual invocations, by the Wor. Bro. S. S. O. Jacobs. Suitable anthems were sung, and an oration closed this portion of the day's proceedings.

Soon after, the Lodge being duly tyled, the business of installing the W. Bro. Z. Mennell, M. D., in the Oriental Chair followed, and the Lodge was closed in ample form at 3 o'clock.

The Brethren then returned to Bro. Goodin's where, at 5 p.m. they sat down (in number two-score-and-one) to a splendid Banquet, which was presided over by the W. Master of the New Lodge. On his right, the Master, and on his left, the Chaplain of the sister Lodge. The Vice-Chair was ably filled by Bro. Geo. Ffrench, Sen. Warden elect. Bro. Bovill's truncheon being in proper position, pointed him out as pro. tem "Junior."

The Stewards were unremitting in their attention to visitors, the Brethren of the West coming up in every particular to their Seniors of 383.

The usual toasts were duly proposed and responded to.

On the whole the day's proceedings passed off very pleasantly—harmony prevailed throughout. The Brethren separated about 9 p.m. and closed the memorable 1st April, 1872.

The TRANQUILITY and CONFIDENCE MASONIC CHARITABLE ASSOCIATION.

A desire of becoming Life Subscribers to one or more of the Masonic Charities has of late manifested itself amongst brethren, whose hearts are in the right place, but whose circumstances in life will not permit them to disburse the necessary amount in bulk, which would qualify them to become entitled to that enviable distinction. To meet this want, associations have sprung up in various directions, with the object of assisting in the attainment of these laudable aspirations. By the payment of a trifling weekly subscription, each member must in the course of a comparatively short space of time become Life Subscribers of any of the Institutions he may select.

Under the above name, a new society for a similar purpose is now in the course of formation by brethren of the Tranquility Lodge of Instruction, No. 185, and Confidence Lodge of Instruction, No. 193, under the able and energetic guidance of Bro. John Constable, the J.D. of the first named lodge.

A meeting will take place at the Railway Tavern, London-street, E.C., on the 22nd inst., at 8 p.m., at which brethren who may wish to become members will do well to attend. It is proposed to limit the number, so that each member should obtain his appropriation in rather less than five years. A movement of this kind cannot be too widely spread, and is well deserving encouragement and co-operation from every member of the Craft.

THE GRAND LODGE OF HUNGARY.

The Grand Lodge of France has seven lodges in Hungary, namely, Lodge Fraternitas, held at Arad; Lo. Haladas, or Progress, held at Kassa; Lo. Kosmos, held at Oravieza; Lo. Hunyadi, held at Temesvar; and three lodges, Humboldt, Mathias, Corvinus, and zur Arbeit, held at Pesth.

These lodges, having expressed their desire to be formed and constituted an independent Masonic national power, the Grand Lodge of France, more regardful of the general interests of the Craft, than of those of its own peculiar jurisdiction, has taken a favourable view of this desire, which has resulted in the definite constitution of the Grand Lodge of Hungary.

On the 10th of October last, the executive committee of the Hungarian lodges, addressed to the Grand Lodge of France a letter, from which we quote the following lines:—

"Very Dear and Venerable Brethren,

"We have much pleasure in announcing to you that, having obtained from the Government the authorisation and recognition of the Grand Lodge of Hungary, we have summoned our lodges to meet in a constituent assembly on the 25th of November.

"In strict accordance with the instructions with which you have favoured us, we shall take the earliest opportunity to lay before you the articles of constitution, the result of the elections, and all the decisions which have been arrived at, after due consideration, on the part of the constituent assembly. At the same time we shall submit to you our petition for the recognition of the Grand Lodge of Hungary, with a legally certified copy of the act of authorisation granted by the government. We feel assured that by acting thus strictly according to your instructions we shall obtain from the Grand Lodge of France the favourable reception of which you have already kindly given us an assurance and promise.

This constituent assembly, in point of fact, took place on the 25th of November last, and thus a definite existence and constitution was given to the Grand Lodge of Hungary. The following are the terms in which this New Masonic Body notifies its formation to the Grand Orient de France.

"Pesth, the 28th day of the 9th month, A.L. 000871, (A.D. 28th November, 1871.

I.T.N.O.T.G.A.O.T.U.

The Grand Lodge of Hungary, to the Grand Lodge of France. Greeting:—
Very Dear and Venerable Brethren,

"Acting fully and conscientiously on your fraternal and prudent advice, for which we beg you to accept our warmest and most cordial thanks, the Executive Committee of the Hungarian lodges called a meeting of the constituent assembly of the Grand Lodge of Hungary for the 25th of this month. At this meeting the following lodges were represented:—The Grand Council of the 33°; The Council of the 30°, Corvin Matyas, held at Pesth; The Chapter of the 18°, Corvin Matyas, held at Pesth; The Chapter of the 18°, Haladas, held at Kassa; The Lodge Corvin Matyas, held at Pesth; the Lodge Humboldt, held at Pesth; the Lodge Zur Arbeit, held at Pesth; the Lodge Haladas, held at Kassa; the Lodge Hunyady, held at Temisvar; the Lodge Fraternitas, held at Arad; the Lodge Egalitas, held at Verseiz; the Lodge Cosmos, held at Oravieza; the Lodge Concordia, held at Ersekujvar; the Lodge Vilagossag, held at Bereghszasz.

"Having stated that the government has given its consent for the creation of the Grand Lodge of Hungary, and that the Grand Lodge of France, by its circular of the 1st of July, 1871, induced the Hungarian lodges definitely to constitute the Grand Lodge of Hungary, by establishing a constitution, and by holding the requisite elections, the constituent assembly accepted The constitution of the Grand Lodge of France, of June 8th, 1865, as well as its "General Laws and Regulations," of the 14th June, 1867, and its internal arrangements of the 5th of June, 1868, with the exception of some slight matters, involving changes insignificant in character, necessitated by local circumstances, but without any alteration in principles: after which Brother Georges Joannovics, 33°, Secretary of State to the Minister of Public Worship and Instruction, Member of Parliament, has been unanimously appointed Grand Master. Afterwards the Executive Council, composed of 21 elected members, after having been constituted, proceeded to the election of its President, Vice-President, and Secretary."

The Executive Council is composed of the following:—

President: Bro. Count Theodore Csaky, 33°, Member of Parliament; Vice-President: Bro. Ernest de Simony, 18°, Member of Parliament; Secretary: Bro. Baron Sigismund Perenyi, 18°, Member of Parliament; Members: Bros. Peter d'Aerdt, 3°, Prefect; John de Bessé, 3°, President of the Financial Department; W. Besselheim, 18°, Librarian; Edmond d'Eder, 18°, Advocate; George Klapska, 33°, General, Member of Parliament; Augustus Kulbinyi, 33°, Ex-Director of the Museum; Alexander Kultay, 33°, M.D.; Louis de Maderspach, 33°, C.E.; V. Mandello, 33°, M.D.; Lucie de Németh, 18°, Chief Secretary to the Ministry of Commerce and Agriculture; Michael de Némény, 30°, Advocate; Aloja Oppodj, 30°, Merchant; Ignace de Paulina, 33°, Advocate; Jules Reiner, 30°, Advocate; Richard Treaday, 30°, Cashier of the Danube Steam Boat Company; Charles Thoma, 18°, Cashier to the Bude-Pesth Saving Bank; Stephan Turr, 33°, General; Jules Zador, 18°, Chief Secretary at the Ministry of Justice.

The Grand Lodge of Hungary, thus duly and regularly constituted, by the above mentioned Lodges, its regulations arranged, and its elections of officers effected, it only remains, for us to beg you to recognise the Grand Lodge of Hungary, and to afford it an introduction into the Masonic family, obtaining its recognition by the Masonic authorities, with which you are in communication. At the same time, we request you to inform us for our government, which are those powers? Considering that by your Circular of the 1st of July, you have conferred upon us the honour of recognition and authorisation, we request you to receive Bro. Bécourt, member of your Executive Council, as our representative to your body, and by a similar nomination, to confer the same favour on General Georges Klapske, 33°, member of our Executive Council.

Very dear and Venerable Brethren,—

It is impossible for us to relinquish our dependence on the Grand Lodge of France, henceforth to occupy the independent position to which Hungarian Masonry is justly entitled, without once more expressing to you, in the name of all our brethren, our fraternal and respectful thanks for your effective and kind protection, to which we owe the accomplishment of our long-cherished hope: that is to say, the constitution of the Grand Lodge of Hungary, the realization of which we are most delighted now to be able to announce to you. The prompt recognition of the Grand Lodge of Hungary, far from having the effect of causing a separation between us, will serve only to strengthen the bonds of fraternal sympathy which exist between the two branches of Freemasonry, as between the two nations to which they respectively belong.

Believe, dear brethren, in the assurance of our lasting gratitude, as well as in the expression of our fraternal and devoted sentiments.

Geo. JOANNOVIC, 33°,

The Grand Master.

Count THEODORE CSAKY, 33°,

President of the Executive Council.

Baron SIGISMOND PERENYI, 18°,

Secretary of the Executive Council.

The Grand Orient of France has received this communication with the greatest satisfaction, and at its sitting of 23rd December last, declared that it recognised the Grand Lodge of Hungary as a regular and independent power. Bro. Bécourt was admitted as the official representative of this body in the Grand Lodge of France, and Bro. Genl. Klapka was appointed to represent French Masonry at the Grand Lodge of Hungary. Lastly it was decided to recommend the new Masonic Body to all authorised powers with which the Grand Lodge of France is in communication and alliance.

All Masons will rejoice at this result, which establishes in Europe a new Masonic centre, regular in its origin, and composed generally of men who have already given proofs of sincere attachment to our Institution.

CABLET.

Masonic Coins.

BRITISH, FOREIGN, AND COLONIAL.

The Provincial Grand Lodge of Lincolnshire will be held at the Corn Exchange, Sleaford, under the auspices of St. Botolph's Lodge, No. 588, on Thursday, 30th inst.

The establishment of a Masonic Lodge, conducted upon Temperance principles, is contemplated. A meeting of brethren favourable to the movement, will be held at "Dorley's Hotel, Queen's Square, Bloomsbury, on Friday next, 24th inst.

At a congregation held in at Cambridge, on the 10th inst., the degree of Bachelor of Music was conferred on Bro. Edwin J. Crow, W.M. 279; Third Principal of the Chapter of Fortitude; and P. Prov. G.O. of Lincolnshire and Rutland.

The installation of the Oriental Lodge, at Brindisi, under warrant from the G.L. of Italy, took place on Friday, the 4th May, in the Capitular Lodge Maric Pagano, at Lecce, by the very Venl. Bro. G. Libertini, 33°, delegate Inspector for the Masonic Province of Otranto, for the G.L. of Italy. The following brethren were invested as follows:—Bro. Alfred Hall, 18° "Royal Gloucester," 130, Southampton, "Zetland" 1157, Alexandria, under G.L. of England, and "Mario Pagano," Lecce under Grand Lodge of Italy, W.M.; E. Dionisi, "Guistizia a Ragione," Brindisi, G.L.L., S.W.; S. G. Cocoto, "Pythagoras," 417, Corfu, E.C., J.W.; I. M. Kirkman, "Union Lodge," 38, Chichester, E.C., Treas.; Edward Weston, "Mario Pagnano," G.L.L., Sect.: F. F. Archer, "St. John's," 919, Alexandria, E.C., S.D.; W. Harcourt, "St. Georges," 370, Chertsey, and "Truth," 944, Bombay, E.C., J.D.; Herbert Evans, "Balmain," 868, Australia, E.C., I.G.; H. W. White, 18°, "St. John's and St. Paul's," 349, Malta, E.C., I.G. The Oriental Lodge will commence active work in their new lodge room at Brindisi, early in June, on each Sunday evening, in English. The working will be precisely the same as in Lodges under the G.L. of England.

The St. Andrew's Lodge of Mark Masters, Manchester, have received the following reply to an address of congratulation presented to H.R.H. the Prince of Wales. "General Sir William Knollys is desired by the Prince of Wales to acknowledge the receipt of an address from the Right Worshipful Master, Wardens, and brethren, of the St. Andrew's Lodge of Mark Masters, Manchester, and to return His Royal Highness's sincere thanks for their kind congratulations on his recovery from his severe illness. To C. FITZGERALD MYRDER, Esq., Deputy Prov. G.M.M. and P.M."

22nd April, 1872.

"The Supreme Council of the 33° degree, Grand Orient of Spain," has summoned a congress of all the Spanish Masonic bodies, to be held at Madrid, on the 6th of July next, to have read and if approved to promulgate the new constitutions which are to rule the Spanish Freemasons, under only one authority as agreed before hand.

The consecration of the "Whitwell," Lodge of Mark Masters, No. 151, will take place at Maryport, on Thursday the 23rd inst., at high twelve. The ceremony of consecration will be performed by V.W. Bro. Fred. Binckes, Grand Secretary, and others. We are glad to see this degree making such steady and rapid progress in this province.

METROPOLITAN MASONIC MEETINGS.

For the Week ending Friday, May 24, 1872.

The Editor will be glad to have notice from Secretaries of Lodges and Chapters of any change in place or time of meeting.

SAURDAY, MAY 18.

Lodge 1185, Lewis, Nightingale Tavern, Wood Green.
Stu. Lodge of Instruction (1275), Marquis of Granby, New Cross-road, at 7; Bro. C. S. Dille, Preceptor.
Sphinx Lodge of Instruction (1329), Stirling Castle, Cumberwell, at 7.30; Bros. Thomas and Worthington, Preceptors.
Mount Sinai Chapter of Instruction, Union Tavern, Air-street, at 8; Comp. Brett, Preceptor.
Manchester Lodge of Instruction, Yorkshire Grey, London Street, Fitzroy-Square, at 8. Bro. Ash, P.M., Preceptor.

MONDAY, MAY 10.

Lodge 1. Grand Master's, Freemasons' Hall.
" 8, British, Freemasons' Hall.
" 21, Emulation, Albion Tavern, Aldersgate-st.
" 23, Felicity, London Tavern, Bishopsgate-st.
" 720, Panmure, Balham Hotel, Balham.
" 1159, Marquis of Dalhousie, Freemasons' Hall.
" 1201, Eclectic, Freemasons' Hall.
Chapter 12, Prudence, Ship and Turtle Leadenhall-st.

Sincerity Lodge of Instruction (174), Railway Tavern, Fenchurch-street Station, at 7.
 Strong Man Lodge of Instruction (45), Old Jerusalem Tavern, St. John's Gate, Clerkenwell, at 8; Bro. James Terry, Preceptor.
 Camden Lodge of Instruction (704), Adelaide Tavern, Haverstock-hill, at 8; Bro. T. A. Adams, Preceptor.
 Eastern Star Lodge of Instruction (95), Royal Hotel, Mile-end-road, at 7.30; Bro. E. Gotthel, Preceptor.
 British Oak Lodge of Instruction, Bank of Friendship Tavern, Mile End, at 7 for 8.
 St. James's Union Lodge of Instruction (180), Horse and Groom Tavern, Winsley-street, (opposite the Pantheon), Oxford-street, at 8; Bro. J. R. Stacey, Preceptor.
 Wellington Lodge of Instruction, White Swan Tavern, Deptford, at 8; Bro. C. G. Willey, P.M. 1155, Preceptor.
 St. John of Wapping Lodge of Instruction (1306), Gun Tavern, High-street, Wapping, at 7; Bro. T. Mottlock, Preceptor.
 West Kent Lodge of Improvement (1297), St. Saviour's College, Stansted-road, Forest-hill, at 7.30; Bro. H. W. Lindus, Preceptor.

TUESDAY, MAY 21.

Board of General Purposes, at 3.
 Lodge 73, Mount Lebanon, Bridge House Hotel, Southwark.
 " 95, Eastern Star, Ship and Turtle Tavern, Leadenhall-st.
 " 195, Honour and Generosity, London Tavern, Bishopsgate-st.
 " 194, St. Paul's, City Terminus Hotel, Cannon-st.
 " 435, Salisbury, 71, Dean-st., Soho.
 " 704, Camden, York and Albany, Gloucester-gate, Regents-park.
 " 857, St. Mark's, Duke of Edinburgh Tavern, Brixton.
 Chapter 19, Mount Sinai, Anderson's Hotel, Fleet-st.
 " 167, St. John's, City Terminus Hotel, Cannon-st.
 " 186, Industry, Freemasons' Hall.
 Metropolitan Chapter of Instruction, Portugal Hotel Fleet-street, at 7; Comp. Brett, Preceptor.
 Domestic Lodge of Instruction, Palmerston Tav., Grosvenor-park, Camberwell, at 8. Bro. John Thomas, Preceptor.
 Faith Lodge of Instruction, Refreshment Rooms, Victoria-st. (opposite Westminster Palace Hotel) at 8; Bro. C. A. Cotiebrune, Preceptor.
 Yarborough Lodge of Instruction, Green Dragon, Stepney, at 8; Bro. Isaac Saqui, Preceptor.
 Prince Fredk. William Lodge of Instruction (753), Knights of St. John Tavern, St. John's Wood Bro. F. G. Baker, Preceptor.
 Dalhousie Lodge of Instruction, King Edward, Triangle, Hackney, at 7.30. Bro. J. Saunders, Preceptor.
 Sydney Lodge of Instruction (829), Cambridge Hotel, Upper Norwood, at 7.30.
 Ben Johnson Lodge of Instruction, Ben Johnson, Goodman's-yard, at 8.
 Florence Nightingale Lodge of Instruction, Masonic Hall, William-street, Woolwich, at 7.30.
 Prosperity Lodge of Instruction, Gladstone Tavern, Bishopsgate-st. Within, at 7.30; Bro. Bolton, (W.M. 1227), Preceptor.
 St. Marylebone Lodge of Instruction (1305), British Stores Tavern, New-street, St. John's Wood, at 8; Bro. T. A. Adams, Preceptor.

WEDNESDAY, MAY 22.

General Committee Grand Lodge and Lodge of Benevolence, at 6.
 Lodge 2, Antiquity, Freemasons' Hall.
 " 212, Euphates, Masons' Hall, Basinghall-street.
 " 507, United Pilgrims, Horns Tavern, Kennington-park.
 " 753, Prince Frederick William, Knights of St. John Tavern, St. John's Wood.
 " 754, High Cross, Seven Sisters Tavern, Page-green, Tottenham.
 Pythagorean Lodge of Instruction (79), Prince of Orange Greenwich, at 8; Bro. J. Robt. Nash, Preceptor.
 United Strength Lodge of Instruction (228), the Grafton Arms, Prince of Wales' Road, Kentish Town, at 8; Bro. J. N. Frost, Preceptor.
 Israel Lodge of Instruction, Rising Sun Tavern, Globe-road, at 7.30; Bro. Isaac Saqui, Preceptor.
 New Concord Lodge of Instruction, Rosemary Branch Tavern, Hoxton, at 8.
 Confidence Lodge of Instruction, Railway Tav., London-street, City, at 7.30.
 Royal Union Lodge of Instruction, Horse and Groom Tavern, Winsley-street, Oxford-street, at 8. Bro. T. A. Adams, Preceptor.
 Peckham Lodge of Instruction, Maismore Arms, Park-road, Peckham at 8; Bro. David Rose, Preceptor.
 Temperance in the East Lodge of Instruction, George the Fourth, Catherine-street, Poplar.
 Stanhope Lodge of Instruction, Thicket Hotel, Anerly, at 7.30 p.m.; Bro. H. W. Lindus, Preceptor.

THURSDAY, MAY 23.

House Committee Girls' School, at 4.
 Lodge 34, Mount Moriah, Freemasons' Hall.
 " 99, Shakespeare, Albion Tavern, Aldergate-st.
 Chapter 5, St George's, Freemasons' Hall.
 " 657, Canonbury, Malene's Hall Tavern, Basinghall-st.
 " 834, Andrew, Royal Sussex Hotel, Hammeismith.
 The R.A. Chapter of Improvement, Freemasons' Hall, at 7; Comp. Brett, Preceptor. Ceremony, explanation of R.A. Jewel and Solids, part sections.

Fidelity Lodge of Instruction (3), Yorkshire Grey, London-st., Tottenham Court-road, at 8; Bro. T. A. Adams, Preceptor.
 Panmure Lodge of Instruction (720), Balham Hotel, Balham, at 7.30; Bro. John Thomas, Preceptor.
 Finsbury Lodge of Instruction, Jolly Anglers' Tavern, Bath-street, City-road; Bro. Stean, Preceptor.
 United Mariners' Lodge of Instruction, Three Cranes Mile-end-road, at 8; Bro. T. J. Barnes, Preceptor.
 St. George's Lodge of Instruction (140), Globe Tavern, Royal Hill, Greenwich, at 8.
 Whittington Lodge of Instruction (862), Crown Tavern, Holborn, at 8; Bro. Lewis Alexander, P.M. 188, Preceptor.
 Chigwell Lodge of Instruction, Bald-faced Stag Hotel, Buckhurst Hill, at 7.30.

FRIDAY, MAY 24.

House Committee, Boys' School.
 Lodge 197, Jerusalem, Freemasons' Hall.
 " 861, Finsbury, Jolly Anglers, Bath-st., St. Lukes.
 " 780, Royal Alfred, Star and Garter, Kew Bridge.
 House Committee Boys' School, Freemason's Hall, at 4.
 Unions Emulation Lodge of Improvement for M.M.'s, Freemasons' Hall, at 7.
 Metropolitan Lodge of Instruction, Portugal Hotel, Fleet-street, at 7; Bro. Brett, Preceptor.
 Belgrave Lodge of Instruction, Duke of Wellington Hotel, Spring-gardens, Charing-cross; Bro. Pulsford, Preceptor.

Doric Lodge of Instruction, Three Cranes Tavern, Mile-end-road, at 8; Bro. Isaac Saqui, Preceptor.
 Robert Burns Lodge of Instruction, Union Tavern, Air-street, Regent-st., at 8; Bro. W. Watson, Preceptor.
 Burgoyne Lodge of Instruction, Grafton Arms, Prince of Wales'-road, N.W., at 8.
 St. Luke's Lodge of Instruction (144), Gladstone Tavern, Brompton-road, S.W.
 United Pilgrims Lodge of Instruction, Duke of Edinburgh, Shepherd's-lane, Brixton, at 7; Bro. J. Thomas, P.M., Preceptor.
 Duke of Edinburgh Lodge of Instruction, Silver Lion, Penny-fields, Poplar, at 7; Br. D. S. Potts, Preceptor.
 St. James' Lodge of Instruction, Gregorian Arms Tavern, Jamaica-road, Bermondsey, at 8. Bro. Howes, P.M., Preceptor.
 Temperance Lodge of Instruction, Victoria Tav., Victoria road, Deptford, at 8.
 Burdett Courts Lodge of Instruction (1278), Approach Tavern, Approach-road, Victoria-park, at 8; Bro. Geo. W. Verry, Preceptor.
 Clapton Lodge of Instruction, White Hart, Clapton, at 7.30; Bro. John Saunders, Preceptor.
 Royal Standard Lodge of Instruction (1298), The Castle Tavern, Holloway, at 8; Bro. R. Lee, (P.M. 193, W.M. 1298.) Preceptor.
 Pythagorean Chapter of Instruction (No. 79), Prince of Orange, Greenwich-road, at 8; Comp. W. West Smith, Preceptor.
 Westbourne Lodge of Instruction (733) Horse and Groom, Winsley-street, Oxford-Street, at 8.

CHARLES WATSON and Co., 30, Cornhill, opposite the Royal Exchange, invite attention to the CORNHILL SHERRY, as their speciality, pure elegant and recherché, and worthy of a place on any gentleman's table.
 THE CORNHILL SHERRY, elegant, pale and dry, 30s. per dozen. Carriage paid.
 CLARET..... 16s. 22s. 28s. 30s. 42s. to Five Guineas.
 SHERRY..... 22s. 26s. 30s. 30s. 42s. 48s. to 84s.
 PORT..... 28s. 34s. 42s. 48s. 54s. to 120s.
 CHAMPAGNE..... 30s. 42s. 54s. 60s. to 84s.
 WHISKY: the Ben Nevis—CHARLES WATSON and Co.'s Speciality, 20s. per gallon; the softest and most fascinating Whisky for Taddy in the market. 30, Cornhill. Carriage free within 20 miles. Sample bottles may be had.

THE CORNHILL SHERRY, rich gold, 30s. per dozen, carriage paid. 30, Cornhill. Sample bottles may be had.

Established 1798.
 "MESSRS. CHARLES WATSON and Co., of 30, Cornhill, forwarded us samples of their 'Cornhill Sherry.' We have taken the opinion of competent judges and veteran wine consumers upon its merits, and pronounce it decidedly the best of the wines at a similar cost which we have tasted, and a great many came before us during the process of our analysis."—Medical Press.

Established 1798.
 CORNHILL SHERRY.—CHARLES WATSON and Co., 30, Cornhill (opposite Royal Exchange), requests the favour of a visit to these old-established cellars, containing a large stock of the finest old Wines of every country, some curious and rare, to please the most critical connoisseurs. Descriptive list free. C. W. and Co. appoint Agents, with first-class references, in towns where not represented.

Dr. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE.
 THE ORIGINAL AND ONLY GENUINE.

CHLORODYNE is admitted by the Profession to be the most wonderful and valuable remedy ever discovered. CHLORODYNE is the best remedy known for Coughs, Consumption, Bronchitis, Asthma. CHLORODYNE effectually checks and arrests those too often fatal diseases—Diphtheria, Fever, Croup, Ague. CHLORODYNE acts like a charm in Diarrhoea, and is the only specific in Cholera and Dysentery. CHLORODYNE effectually cuts short all attacks of Epilepsy, Hysteria, Palpitation and Spasms. CHLORODYNE is the only palliative in Neuralgia, Rheumatism, Gout, Cancer, Toothache, Meningitis, &c.

From Lord FRANCIS CONYNHAM, Mount Charles, Donegal, 11th December, 1868.
 "Lord Francis Conynham, who this time last year bought some of Dr. J. Collis Browne's Chlorodyne from Mr. Devonport, and has found it a most wonderful medicine, will be glad to have half a dozen bottles sent at once to the above address.

"Earl Russell communicated to the College of Physicians that he had received a dispatch from her Majesty's Consul at Manilla, to the effect that Cholera had been raging fearfully, and that the ONLY remedy of any service was CHLORODYNE."—See Lancet, Dec. 1, 1864.

From W. NESBITT PATTISON, M.D. Hon F.R.C.S. England; Formerly Lecturer on Anatomy and Physiology, at St. George's School of Medicine.
 "I have no hesitation in stating, after a fair trial of Chlorodyne, that I have never met with any medicine so efficacious as an Anti-spasmodic and Sedative. I have used it in Consumption, Asthma, Diarrhoea, and other diseases, and am most perfectly satisfied with the results."

From Dr. THOMAS SANDIFORD, Passage West, Cork.
 "I will thank you to send me a further supply of Chlorodyne. It was the most efficacious remedy I ever used, affording relief in violent attacks of Spasms within a minute after being taken. One patient in particular, who has suffered for years with periodical attacks of Spasms of a most painful nature, and unable to obtain relief from other remedies, such as Opium, &c., finds nothing so prompt and efficacious as Chlorodyne."

From J. MCGREGOR CROFT, M.D., M.R.C.P. London, late Staff Surgeon to H.M.F.
 "Sir,—After prescribing Dr. J. Collis Browne's Chlorodyne for the last three years in severe cases of Neuralgia and Tic-Doloureux, I feel that I am in a position to testify to its valuable effects. Really, in some cases it acts like a charm, when all other means had failed. Without being asked for this report, I must come forward and state my candid opinion that it is a most valuable medicine, and I have recommended several Chemists in this neighbourhood not to be without it for prescriptions."

From Jno. E. GOULSTONE, M.D., late Principal Surgeon to the Steamship "Great Eastern."
 "I can confidently state that Chlorodyne is an admirable Sedative and Anti-Spasmodic, having used it in Neuralgia, Hysteria, Asthma, and Consumption, with remarkably favourable results. It relieved a fit of Asthma in four minutes, where the patient had suffered eleven years in a most distressing manner, no previous remedy having had so immediate and beneficial an effect."

From Dr. B. J. BOUTON and Co., Newcastle.
 "We have made pretty extensive use of Chlorodyne in our practice lately, and look upon it as an excellent direct Sedative and anti-Spasmodic. It seems to allay pain and irritation, in whatever organ and from whatever cause. It induces a feeling of comfort and quietude not obtainable by any other remedy, and it seems to possess this great advantage over all other sedatives, that it leaves no unpleasant after effects."

J. C. BAKER, Esq., M.D., Birkford.
 "It is, without doubt, the most valuable and certain Anodyne we have."

CAUTION.—BEWARE OF PIRACY AND IMITATIONS.
 CAUTION.—Vice-Chancellor, Sir W. Fage Wood stated that Dr. J. Collis Browne was undoubtedly the Inventor of CHLORODYNE; that the copy of the defendant, Dr. [name], was deliberately copied, with the registered name, had been sworn to.—See Times, 15th July, 1864.
 Sold in Bottles at 1/3, 2/9, 4/6, and 11/0 each. None is genuine without the words "Dr. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE" on the Government Stamp. Overwhelming Medical Testimony accompanies each Bottle.
 SOLE MANUFACTURER—J. T. DAVENPORT, 35, Great Russell-street, Bloomsbury, London.

MASONIC ASSURANCE COMPANY,
9, NEW BRIDGE-STREET, LONDON.
ESTABLISHED 1868.

THE ADDRESS recently issued by the newly appointed Chairman, Bro. J. RANKIN STEBBING, P. G. D., may be obtained on application at the offices of the Company.

FREDERICK BIGG, P.M., Manager.

Active Agents will be treated with liberality.

NEW YORK LIFE INSURANCE COMPANY,
ESTABLISHED 1845.

Conducted under the official supervision of the State of New York.

$100,000 have been deposited with Trustees in England.

Life Assurance only. Purely Mutual. All Profits annually to Policy Holders.

Accumulated Funds, December 31st, 1870	£3,172,244
Surplus over all Liabilities, and Reserve Fund	389,322
Income for Year 1870	1,317,271

Bro. M. X. COHEN,
SPECIAL AGENT,
76 & 77, CHEAPSIDE, E.C.

Norwich and London ACCIDENT INSURANCE ASSOCIATION.
ESTABLISHED 1856.

SUBSCRIBED CAPITAL, £100,000.

For Insuring against

ACCIDENTAL DEATH,
With

Compensation for Personal Injury,

Caused by Accidents

CHIEF OFFICES—ST. GILES'S STREET, NORWICH.

LONDON: 10, OLD JEWRY CHAMBERS.

Secretary: CHARLES R. GILMAN, Esq.

London Manager: MR. GEORGE POWELL.

THE NEW MASONIC CANDLES,

Ionic, Doric and Corinthian, Emblemmatically Arranged for Worshipful Master, Senior and Junior Wardens.

6s. per set of 3 one-pound Candles. Packing Cases 6d. each.

BRO. GEORGE KENNING'S

MASONIC DEPOTS, 2, 3, & 4, LITTLE BRITAIN,
AND 198, FLEET STREET, E.C.

J. E. PETERS,
ORNAMENTAL ENGRAVER AND FANCY ENAMELLER,

41, Clerkenwell Close.

Writing, Engraving of every description, Masonic Emblems Engraved or Enamelled; old enamelled Work repaired; Country Orders attended to with despatch.

For Cheap Watches, Clocks, Gold Chains and Jewellery, go to

KIBBLES',

22, GRACECHURCH STREET
(one door from Lombard-street).

Gold Watches £2 15s.

Silver Watches £1 5s.

Timepieces... .. from 9s. 6d.

Every article warranted. Plate, Watches, and Jewellery bought or exchanged. List of Prices post free.

SHEPPARD & Co.
PRIME CANADIAN HAMS.
7d. lb.

113 & 115, BOROUGH & LONDON BRIDGE, S.E.

S. WELCH,
WRITER AND GRAINER.

6, MAIDENHEAD COURT,

ALDERSGATE STREET, E.C.

ROSE CROIX TRACING BOARDS,
Five Guineas the Pair.

MASONIC DEPOTS, 2, 3, & 4, LITTLE BRITAIN,
AND 198, FLEET-STREET.

LONDON AND SUBURBAN MUTUAL BUILDING SOCIETY,

Enrolled in 1855, pursuant to Act of Parliament. SHARES, £25 each, may be paid in one sum, or by Monthly Subscriptions of 5s. per share. INVESTING MEMBERS receive 5 per cent. Interest, and Share of Surplus Profits. MONEY ADVANCED ON MORTGAGE, without Premium, for any term of years. Bro. JONATHAN TAYLOR (Doric 933), Secretary. Offices:—107a, Fenchurch-street, E.C.

THE BIRKBECK

Is the only Building Society whose Annual Receipts exceeds ONE MILLION!

How to Purchase a House for 7500 Guineas per Month, With immediate possession and no Rent to pay. Apply at the Office of the BIRKBECK BUILDING SOCIETY, 29 & 30, Southampton-buildings, Chancery-lane.

How to purchase a Plot of Land for Five Shillings per Month, With immediate possession, either for Building or Gardening purposes, apply at the Office of the BIRKBECK FREEHOLD LAND SOCIETY, 29 & 30 Southampton-buildings, Chancery-lane.

How to Invest Money with safety at 4 per cent Interest, Apply to the Office of the BIRKBECK BANK. All sums under £50 repayable upon demand. Current accounts opened similar to Ordinary Bankers. Cheque Books supplied. Office hours from 10 till 4 daily, on Mondays from 10 till 9, and on Saturdays from 10 till 2. A small pamphlet, containing full particulars, may be obtained gratis, or sent Post-free on application to FRANCIS RAVENSCROFT, Manager.

THE SOUTH-WESTERN INDEX LIST

of Furnished and Unfurnished Houses to be let, and of Estates for sale in the South-west of London, is published Monthly by

MR. JAS. STEVENS, AUCTIONEER & ESTATE AGENT, CLAPHAM COMMON, S.W.

A useful work of reference for those seeking Residences, and saving much trouble in obtaining information of properties for disposal in the S.W. district.

Send post-card with your address, and a copy will be forwarded by return post.

THE LONDON MIRROR.

Published every Saturday; price 4d. The object of this journal is to set forth the claims of the many Religious, Educational, Benevolent, and Prudential Institutions of the United Kingdom, and week by week to report their proceedings, whether as Meetings, Sermons, Anniversaries, or Elections, so as to present these National Institutions to the favour of the Public. Office, 59, Southampton-row, Russell-square, London, W.C.

"THE FREEMASON" OF ST. LOUIS.

The Largest Masonic Monthly in the World. Published at St. Louis, Mo., by George Frank Gouley, Grand Secretary and Recorder of the four Grand Bodies of Missouri. The Freemason contains tidings from every quarter of the world, and will be found of great advantage to all Masons, especially those interested in American affairs. Terms $2 per annum, and to those who subscribe for the London Freemason the price will be $1.50 currency. Postage free. Subscriptions received by the London "Freemason."

THE MASONIC TROWEL.—A Masonic

Journal, published on the 15th of every month, by H. G. Reynolds, Junr., Springfield, Illinois, United States of America. Sixteen pages, large quarto. Circulation 20,000 monthly. Terms to be obtained, and Subscriptions received at the Freemason Office, 2, 3, and 4, Little Britain, and forwarded free of charge.

"TRUTH MUST PREVAIL."—Common Sense.

Lamps, Baths, Cutlery, Brushes, Fenders and Fire Irons Electroplate and Nickel-Silver Goods.

R. D. PARR,

General House Furnishing Ironmonger,
42, BLACKMAN STREET, BOROUGH.

OFFERS nothing extraordinary, but REALLY

Good Articles at fair and reasonable prices. He does not keep an "Immense Stock," but sufficiently large for any person to select from. He does not sell "cheaper than every other house in the Trade," but quite as cheap as any. A visit will, at all times, be very much appreciated.

THE JEWISH CHRONICLE

Price Twopenny. OFFICE: 43 FINSBURY SQUARE, E.C.

TESSELATED CARPETING.

Lodges, Chapters, Encampments, &c.

Four Feet wide, 5/9 per Yard.
MASONIC DEPOTS, 2, 3 & 4, LITTLE BRITAIN,
AND 198, FLEET STREET, E.C.

Bro. WILLIAMS. MASONIC EMBLEMS

Lithographic Artist Designed and Engraved ON ENGRAVER ON WOOD. OR STONE, WOOD, or VELLUM.

8, Featherstone Buildings, Holborn. 25, Acton Street, London, W.C.

GLENFIELD STARCH

is the only kind used in Her Majesty's Laundry. Those Ladies who have not yet used the Glenfield Starch, are respectfully solicited to give it a trial, and, carefully follow out the directions printed on every package. It is rather more difficult to make than other Starches, but when this is overcome, they will say, like the Queen's Laundry, that it is the finest Starch they ever used. When you ask for the Glenfield, see that you get it.

BRIDGE HOUSE HOTEL,
LONDON BRIDGE,

Opposite the South Eastern, and London, Brighton, and South Coast Railways.

THIS Hotel has great facilities for Meetings, Charitable Institutions, Wedding Breakfasts, Public Dinners, Balls, Soirees, and is allowed to be in real domestic comfort, one of the Best in the Metropolis, the tariff on application to JOSEPH H. SPENCER.

THE GREAT WESTERN HOTEL
(SNOW HILL STATION)
BIRMINGHAM.

"One of the most elegant, comfortable and economical Hotels in the three kingdoms.—The Field, July 31, 1869." "From experience gained by repeated visits, we are happy to be able to testify to the exceeding comfort of this Hotel. We have much pleasure in recommending it."—The Engineer, October 14, 1870. "An establishment remarkable for its able management, reasonable charges, and general comfort."—Bell's Life, June 31, 1871. Good Accommodation for Lodges, Chapters, &c.

City Terminus Hotel, Cannon-street,
LONDON.

WELL adapted for Banquets, Balls, Amateur Dramatic Entertainments, Public Meetings, and Arbitrations. The large Hall is capable of seating upwards of Twelve Hundred people. SYDNEY SPENCER, Manager.

Guildhall Tavern, Gresham-st., E.C.

SPACIOUS Dining-rooms, Chop and Steak-rooms, Luncheon-bars, and Smoking Rooms. Rooms of all sizes, suitable for Auction Sales, Consultations, Arbitrations, Building Societies, &c.; also for Freemasons' Lodges and Banquets, Private Dinners, &c. Guildhall Tavern Company (Limited), 32 and 33, Gresham-street, GEORGE CRAWFORD, Manager and Secretary.

Masons' Hall Tavern,

MASONS' AVENUE, BASINGHALL-STREET, CITY. THE above old-established Tavern is NOW OPEN, newly decorated, by Bro. CHARLES GOSDEN, late Manager of the Freemasons' Tavern Company. Every accommodation will be found for Lodges, Chapters, Mark and other degrees, for their Meetings, Dinners, Suppers, &c., and every attention will be paid to their comfort and enjoyment by the new Proprietor.

The Alexandra Restaurant,
7, CONDUIT-STREET, REGENT-STREET.

Public and Private Dining Rooms. First-class Cooking and Wines. Open for Suppers after the Theatres. Bro. F. HILFREICH, Proprietor.

REEVES, SON and CO., Printers, Wholesale
Stationers, and Account Book Manufacturers,
PLAYHOUSE YARD, BLACKFRIARS, LONDON, E.C.
Next the "Times" Office.

- REEVES, SON and CO., Publishers.
- REEVES, SON and CO., Newspaper Printers.
- REEVES, SON and CO., Magazine Printers.
- REEVES, SON and CO., Law Printers.
- REEVES, SON and CO., Commercial Printers.
- REEVES, SON and CO., Show Card Printers.
- REEVES, SON and CO., Label Printers.
- REEVES, SON and CO., Ornamental and Colour Printers.
- REEVES, SON and CO., Bankers' Cheque Printers.
- REEVES, SON and CO., Copper Plate Printers.
- REEVES, SON and CO., Lithographic Printers.
- REEVES, SON and CO., Lithographic Artists.
- REEVES, SON and CO., Map Printers and Colourers.
- REEVES, SON and CO., Designers.
- REEVES, SON and CO., Stereotypers.
- REEVES, SON and CO., Engravers and Die-Sinkers.

REEVES, SON and CO., offer many advantages to Manufacturers and all persons requiring large quantities of Paper and Printing, as they possess the most approved machinery, as well as every other facility for executing orders entrusted to them in the cheapest and best manner. As PUBLISHERS, their Offices are very central, and they render accounts monthly. Printed and Published by the Proprietor, Brother GEORGE KENNING at his Offices, 2, 3, and 4, Little Britain, and 198, Fleet-street in the City of London, and 2, Monument-place, Liverpool, in the County of Lancaster.—SATURDAY, MAY 18, 1872.

TABLE OF CONTENTS

Aids to Study.....	319
Bro. Lessing and his Conversations.....	320
CORRESPONDENCE:—
Practical Freemasonry	320
Masonic Notes and Queries.....	321
Masonic Tidings	321
POETRY:—
Lilac Blossoms	321
American Indian Festivals.....	321
Illustrations of the History of the Craft	322
CRAFT MASONRY:—
Metropolitan	324
Provincial	324
District Grand Lodge of Bengal.....	325
ROYAL ARCH:—
Provincial	325
Scotland.....	326
RED CROSS OF CONSTANTINE:—
Scotland.....	326
The Widow's Mite	326
The Freemasons' Hall, Liverpool.....	326
Masonic Meetings for next week... ..	326
Advertisements.....	317, 318, 327, 328

AIDS TO STUDY.

BY BRO. WM. CARPENTER, P.M. & P.Z. 177.

IV.

In my former paper, on the diversities presented in the human family, I used, as is the custom, the word Races, as designating the several varieties of mankind. The term, however, is not only vague, but is calculated to convey an erroneous idea; namely, that they are distinct species of a genus, and not forms and varieties of a single species. As Alexander Von Humboldt observes (Cosmos, Sabine's translation, vol. 1, p. 351), "Whilst attention was exclusively directed to the extremes of colour and of form, the result of the first vivid impressions derived from the senses was a tendency to view those differences as characteristic, not of mere varieties, but of originally distinct species. The permanence of certain types, in the midst of the most opposite influences, especially of climate, appeared to favour this view, notwithstanding the shortness of the time to which the historical evidence applied." But, as I have previously intimated, more powerful reasons, as they have been exhibited and illustrated by the authorities I named in a former paper, lend their weight to the other side of the question, and corroborate the unity of the human race. I may add, that Humboldt, uniting his testimony to that of other illustrious men, who have made this branch of science the object of profound and extended study, refers to the many intermediate gradations of the tint of the skin and the form of the skull, which have been made known to us by the rapid progress of geographical science; to the analogies derived from the history of varieties in animals, both domestic and wild; and to the positive observations collected respecting the limits of fecundity in hybrids; and then he remarks, that "the greater part of the supposed contrasts, to which so much weight was formerly assigned, have disappeared before the laborious investigations of Tiedemann, on the brain of negroes and Europeans, and the anatomical researches of Vrolik and Weber on the form of the pelvis."

I have, however, no intention of entering into a discussion of this subject, though most interesting and tempting. My object here, as it will be in all the papers I may be permitted to contribute, as Aids to Study, is to indicate the subjects which appear to me to demand the special attention of Freemasons, and to point out the best sources of information relating to them, rather than to put forward my own views, though I may incidentally do this. But I may add to what I have already said, that by maintaining the unity of the human species, and regarding the different races, as they are popularly called, as only forms and varieties of a single species, we repel the cheerless assumption of superior and inferior races of men, and of slavery being an institution of nature, as it stands developed in Aristotle's Politica. "If," in the words of Wilhelm Von Humboldt, "we would point to an idea which all history, throughout its course discloses, as ever establishing more firmly, and extending more widely its salutary empire—if there is one idea which, more than any other, contributes to the often contested, but still more often misunderstood, perfectibility of the whole human species—it is the idea of our common humanity; tending to remove the hostile barriers which prejudices and partial views of every kind have raised between men, and to cause all mankind, without distinction of religion, nations or colour, to be regarded as one great fraternity—aspiring towards one common aim, the free development of their moral faculties. This is the ultimate and highest object of society; it is also the direction planted in man's nature, leading towards the indefinite expansion of his inner being. He regards the earth and the starry heavens as inwardly his own, given to him for the exercise of his intellectual and physical activity. The child longs to pass the hills or the waters which surround his native dwelling, and the wish indulged, but as the bent tree springs back to its first form of growth, he longs to return to the home which he had left; for by a double aspiration after the unknown future and the forgotten past—after that which he desires, and that which he has lost—man is preserved, by a beautiful and touching instinct, from an exclusive attachment to that which is present. Deeply rooted in man's inmost nature, as well as commanded by his highest tendencies, the full recognition of the bond of humanity, of the community of the whole human race, with the sentiments and sympathies which spring therefrom, become a leading principle in the history of man.

Falling back now upon the varieties which present themselves in the great family of mankind, I may observe that there has been a tendency, as the natural history of man has continued to furnish an object of study to men of science, to reduce the number of the varieties.

The division originally proposed by Blumenbach, included five races or varieties—the Caucasian, Ethiopian, Mongolian, Malay, and American. This division, with some slight modification, was long acquiesced in. The later researches of Prichard, founded on more ample materials, led him to take the chief types of animal form—the characteristics fixed upon by naturalists, and the distinction of races founded upon them, and reduce them to three,—the Prognathous, the Pyramidal, and the oval or elliptical. The prognathous, or those marked by the predominance of the jaws, is the cranial type of the lower negro and the Australian races; the pyramidal crania, connected with the broad lozenge-formed face, furnish a type common to the Mongolian or Tartar nations, the Laplanders, the Esquimaux, the Hottentots, and many of the American races. The oval or elliptical cranium expresses the form common to the Caucasian races, and all the more highly civilised nations of the world.

But these divisions, however useful for the study of the science, and the elucidation of its several branches, cannot properly be pushed further than that; for our present knowledge enables us to follow the more strongly marked types into each other, through all the intermediate links. And we can go yet further, and affirm that some of these changes are taking place under our own eyes. The Turks of Europe and Western Asia are doubtless of the same stem as the Turks of Central Asia; yet they have gained, probably within a few centuries, the cranial form and facial features of the Caucasian races, while those retaining their original seat and manner of life, retain also the pyramidal skull and Mongolian characters of the race.

Again, we have various and reliable testimony that the negro head, so strongly marked in its character, is gradually approximating to the European type, where successive generations of negroes, without actual intermixture, have been in constant communication with European people and habits. Looking upon these divisions or races, as they are termed, then, as only so many convenient distinctions, to aid us in our investigations, I rather prefer another division, as presenting itself more obviously, in the stature and proportions of the body, the complexion of the skin, the colour and set of the hair, and the size and shape of the skull, the last mentioned particular being, as already stated, the most decisive. The races thus distinguished are the White or Caucasian, the Yellow or Mongolian, the Black, Negro, or Nigrilian, and the Red or American. The first was the sole possessor of ancient civilization, the second appears only occasionally on the scene of ancient history, when its nomad hordes come down from their homes in the plateaux of Central Asia, over which they have always wandered, the third is represented only by the slaves depicted on Egyptian monuments, the fourth does not appear at all in ancient history. The last three races, as Smith observes (Anc. Hist. of Asia, p. 6) are excluded from the families enumerated in Gen. x., not as negating their descent from Noah, but because they lay beyond the geographical range embraced by the writer; which is limited to the primary settlements of the Caucasian race. It seems to lie entirely, as he suggests, within the 20th to 60th meridians of east longitude, and the 10th to 50th parallels of north latitude extending from the Peninsula of Greece to the tableland of Iran, and from the northern shores of the Black Sea to the mouth of the Red Sea. A glance at the general results must lie over for another paper.

BRO. LESSING AND HIS MASONIC CONVERSATIONS.

BY WAY OF COMMENTARY.—PART THE SECOND.

BY BRO. CRYPTONYMUS.

Before we absolutely begin to examine the Third Conversation, it is very desirable to cast a glance at the period in which Bro. Lessing lived and worked, and the arena in which he exercised his critical and social influences. Preceded by the theosophical poet, Klopstock, and by the classical Wieland, men, both of them, who exercised a power only to be less than that of Lessing, and subsequently Schiller and Goethe, and especially the last of these, Lessing took rather the practical and moral nature of his countrymen for his seed field. He was essentially human, though actually his labours were rather dedicated to the emancipation of his countrymen from the false French taste, from mere rhetorical flourishes. As Gervinus tersely says (History of German Literature, vol. iv., page 290), "Lessing wrote German; he took his speech from the stock of our (their) own literature, and returned to the natural speech of the people; he wrote as he spoke." But in his researches into Art he must unquestionably be allowed the pre-eminence of pointing to its moral side, and its immediate effects upon the life of the people. While the two other writers had severally embodied Hebraic traditions, and the mythological legends of Antiquity and the Middle Age, Lessing clothed his creations with flesh and blood, and he likewise possessed one distinctive peculiarity, not even attributable to Goethe himself.

In Goethe, we more or less, ever see Goethe in some form. Not so in Lessing, he could, with a rare capacity, vanish from the reader's sight, and leave his Nathan, his Saladin, his Sitta, his Ernest and Falk, to stand and talk as substantive beings, a rare capacity he shared with Shakspeare. The spirit of his age breathes in his writings, and hence they become useful indices for those who would fain look upon his times. While other writers set out with a given set of axioms, theorems, and principles, Lessing was especially distinguished by having no fixed method of looking at things. That which appeared practical and plain to his insight, he set down in epigrammatic language, so that all who ran might read. No plan is visible in his method of portraying things and men; nor did he write without being urged thereto by a sharp instinct. Many of his essays bear marks of bibliographical research and dilettantism, yet, taken as a whole, the writings we have of his, breathe a true spirit of intense humanity. His view of social life was not that exhibited by Goethe in "Werther." Far other, and more concrete.

Memorable—very memorable—are certain words of his which my readers would do well gravely to weigh. They are the index to the man. In his "Duplik gegen Goeze," he passionately exclaims, "The worth of man does not consist in the truth which man possesses, or believes himself to possess, but in the sincere labour he has exercised to attain the truth. For it is not by the possession of truth, but in the search for it, that his energies are widened, wherein consists his ever growing perfectibility. Possession causes ease, idleness, pride. If God held in his right hand all truth, in his left the sole inward active desire for truth, even with the addition that I should err always and for ever, and said to me: Choose! I would humbly bend to the left hand, and answer: Father, give that to me; pure truth is for Thee alone!" And will not the more thoughtful of my Brother Masons agree with him, and recognise in such an aspiration the true feeling of a sincere and devout Brother?

At the time in which Lessing wrote and lived, stirring events were not wanting to agitate society in its moral sphere. The suppression of the Order of Jesuits lent an impetus to many wild theorists in the field of Masonry, and supplied ample food for enthusiasts and system builders. The secret Commanders of all the different sects or societies were eagerly sought after, whether those of the Illuminati, the Freemasons, or the Rosicrucians; it was even then found that Jesuitism had gained access to some of these secret societies, especially among the theosophical Rosicrucians. Here, it was affirmed, the machinations of Popery were being carried on. Works, to cite only one, such as the "Pastoral Letters to the real and true Freemasons of the Antient system." Hirtenbriefe an die wahren und echten Freimaurer alten Systems, (1785) appeared, and in these the guardians of Protestantism, such as Nicolai, Semler, and others, detected, or thought to detect, Jesuitical attacks for the support of the Roman Catholic hierarchy. To neutralise these, it was proposed to purify and improve the secret societies. Adam Weishaupt, Professor of Canonical Jurisprudence at Ingolstadt, formed the Society of Illuminati into a consistent body, by which to encounter the hierarchy and the Jesuits. The latter, however, perceived the weakness of the Illuminati, and obtained the suppression of that body in Bavaria, ever a stronghold of the Catholic party, in the year 1785. These societies passed like meteors over the surface of Society, and the Masonic Order was the only one which remained impassably triumphant. The chiefs of the Order calmly and constantly asserted the principle of non-interference with religion and politics, and, as my readers will have seen, Lessing has attributed to Freemasonry in these Conversations, a far deeper and noble aim, resting entirely on the humanitarian aspect of the century, and an aim to which the most zealous and acute Masons of the age eagerly attached themselves.

All earnest and sincere men of thought sought refuge in the lodges of the time from the stress of religious faction, and political confusion. Within the precincts of the lodge alone could fearlessly be proclaimed the doctrines of Brotherly Love, Relief, and Truth, and it is fortunate for the Order, that the ruling powers in the State so completely identified themselves with the social objects of Freemasonry as to lend no unwilling countenance to the Fraternity.

It was just in these uneasy times of mutual recrimination, and bitter contention, that Bro. Lessing wrote these Conversations, probably with the object of more clearly setting forth his ideas as to what end the efforts of Freemasons should most wisely be directed. Nor did he, as Falk clearly indicates in Conversation Three to Ernest, limit this noble sphere of action to Masons alone. Does he not say that a study of the evils of Society, and the knowledge of there existing a means for combatting them, would render Ernest "peaceful and happy, even without the name of Freemason?" Lessing's clearest idea appears to be, that while nations, in different parts of the world, should be allowed their national customs and forms of belief, induced by climate and by historic traditions, and many other causes, there yet was something inherent in our common human nature, considered from a mental standpoint, that admitted of an interfusion of all these nations and races for the general advantage.

Surely, it must be an advantage, of almost inestimable value, to find, as the members of our Fraternity do, on every shore a home, in every city a friend, and be the esoteric mysteries of our Order what they may, it is very well known that Freemasonry has contributed in a most marked degree to smooth away the acerbities arising in the outer world. It would be well for the Order to consider whether in the great emulative contest towards a better state of Society a yet more enlarged sphere of activity may not be found.

It is not alone enough to point to the Charities, to the Schools, and to the Lodges, it is not enough to say here Jew and Christians, Parsee, Hindoo, Mahomedan, Guebre, and Buddhist, meet on the Level and part on the Square, it is not enough to point to the fact, excellent in itself, that "Great Kings, Dukes and Lords,

Have laid by their swords,
This, our mystery, to put a good grace on."

It is not enough to assume an antiquity, inconsistent in itself, of time, not to be demonstrated as fact at the present time. No! The Freemason of to-day is blessed with a variety of almost innumerable ways by which he can aid in raising and improving the condition of his fellow-man whether an affiliated brother or no, and it is his duty, as well as his privilege, to stand firm in well doing, and by the assistance of the T.G.A.O.T.U., he may reasonably hope to exalt the Order in the eyes of the world by a thousand graceful acts, and thus confirm and consolidate the stones of the Temple of Humanity, at which it has been his happiness to be allowed to labour.

Rich men can easily open their pockets and give—but even those unable to aid by money, may assist in no mean degree, in the objects to which our lodges are consecrated.

In the present portion of this commentary I do not propose to proceed further than the third Conversation. We perceive that the eager, enthusiastic nature of Ernest has been awakened by the words of his friend, Falk. With the impetuosity so frequently seen in ardent, sensitive, and noble, aspiring minds—he rushes away from the scene, and, as so many have done under similar circumstances, with headlong rapidity, he seeks admission into the Order that promises to him the realization of an ideal too vaguely poetical, I fear, even in our own brighter days of enlightenment.

One other word or two, and I will leave this part of our theme. When Lessing wrote, as I have said above, there was a forward and backward current—an ebb and tide—a systole and diastole going on, threatening all European human society. While the intellectual life of Germany was exhausting its energies in a gigantic mental conflict, there was silently, swiftly, surely, coming, in the neighbouring country of France, a fearful retribution for centuries of mis-rule, and the quacks and wonder-mongers of the age were flocking Paris-ward, with brand new degrees, manufactured from traditional figments and sorry mendacities, and while true Freemasonry kept the even tenor of its way, brilliant phantoms not yet flared out were visible. To these, may I ask in conclusion, would not every sincere brother prefer the calm common-sense views of our deceased Bro. Lessing?

CRYPTONYMUS.

Original Correspondence.

PRACTICAL FREEMASONRY.

(To the Editor of the Freemason.)

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—

Bro. "P.M. Unemployed," in his letter in your last impression, brings an accusation against our Order which is unjust and untrue. After speaking of his great love for our Ancient Order, he immediately does his best to prove he has mistaken his own sentiments with regard to Freemasonry. Surely no Brother, loving the Order, as our Brother says he does, would dare publicly to accuse that Order of want of sympathy for brethren in his position. I am of course unable to say why our Brother has not succeeded in obtaining from Masonry, that which he requires; but his own letter displays throughout, a spirit so utterly antagonistic to the true spirit of Freemasonry, that I, for one, am not surprised he has not succeeded. I never supposed for a moment, that it is the duty of the Order to provide suitable employment for the brethren, but I have known many instances of worthy brethren being assisted by their brethren in such cases. I cannot, therefore, understand our Brother's suggestion, that there is a pressing necessity for the Craft to use a little exertion towards procuring employment for brethren who are unemployed. Worthy brethren who exert themselves are sure to succeed, but they must certainly not rely upon the Craft to use any exertion for them, when they have not exerted themselves to the utmost. I have very seldom seen advertisements from unemployed brethren in the Freemason. I believe it would be the best thing our Unemployed Brother could do, stating what he wants, and what his capabilities are, with good references; but he must rely more upon his own exertions, and a little less than he seems to do upon the Craft.

It is true, as our Brother remarks, we have indeed several noble charities. We provide, as

"Bro. How" says, for the exigencies of every stage of life. We feed and clothe the young, we provide annuities, and an asylum for the distressed brethren and their widows in the decline of life; whilst for the relief of casual and sudden calamity we administer a noble income, through the Board of Benevolence, and no one, acting up to the first principles of our Order, need be ashamed to accept assistance from a fund to which he himself contributes, and his self-respect cannot suffer, if our great principles have made him affectionate, generous, and just.

Practical Sympathy and Practical Benevolence may indeed be proudly inscribed on our banners, and the noble monument to Practical Sympathy and Benevolence, instituted and maintained by the Brethren of the Order, are a refutation of the charge made against us.

The "shameful slur" has been cast by your correspondent himself. I will maintain that it does not exist, and I am proud and grateful to Masonry to acknowledge the contrary. Though I have not acted as "an official at a Charity dinner," I have a life interest in all our Masonic Charities, am a Subscribing P.M. of a Lodge, First Principal of a Chapter, Senior Grand Warden of a Province, and I am willing, and perhaps able, to help an unemployed P.M., if he is worthy, and generous enough to apologise for his mistake in casting a slur, which is not the fact, upon the Order he proposes to love.

Fraternally yours,

H.B.H.

Mulum in Parvo, or Masonic Notes and Queries.

ST. PAUL'S HEAD LODGE.

The following petition to the Grand Master of the Lodge meeting at St. Paul's Head, is curious in itself, and interesting, as giving us the names of many of the London brethren of an early date.

Lord Montague was installed Grand Master, April 19th, 1732, but I confess, that as he was succeeded, according to Preston, by Lord Strathmore on the 7th June, 1733, I cannot explain the allusion to Bro. Moody, and 1732, except by supposing that, the petition was presented at the first quarterly communication, in 1733, when Lord Montague was still the formal Grand Master.

A. F. A. WOODMAN, P.G.C.

May 13, 1872.

The Memorial of the St. Paul's Head Lodge. To the Right Worshipful Anthony Lord Viscount Montague, Grand Master; Thos. Batson, Esq., Deputy Grand Master; Geo. Rooke, Esq., and James Moore Smyth, Esq., Grand Wardens.

The Memorial of the Master, Wardens, and Brethren of the Lodge, held at the St. Paul's Head, in Ludgate-street.

Humbly represents,

That ever since a Sword of State has been carried before the Right Worshipful Grand Master, at the Annual Grand Feasts, the Master of this Lodge has carried the same, except when Bro. Moody carried it in 1732.

That your Memorialists apprehend, that this is an invasion of their right, and a dishonour to Masonry.

And, therefore they hope that Bro. Moody shall not be permitted to carry the Sword of State at the annual feasts, but that the right of the Master of the St. Paul's Head Lodge to carry the same at such feasts, for the future will be declared and established by this Grand Lodge.

- Jno. Jesse, Master.
- Wm. Jackson. } Wardens.
- Jno. Mordaunt. }
- Wm. Archer.
- Rd. Cock.
- Andr. Beach.
- Jno. Davenport.
- Jno. Coward.
- Edwd. Good.
- Wm. Davis.
- Jno. Bradley.
- W. Williams.
- Edmund Bick.
- Rd. Rawlinson, D.C.L.

Rd. Hill.
F. Baker.
Rixton.

BURNS OF MOTHER KILWINNING, No. 0. (Page 313).

The Scottish brethren ought to be aware that "bairns" are not eligible as Freemasons. It ought to be men of the age of twenty-one years, not eighteen as in Scotland. A man cannot receive his inheritance until he is of age twenty-one, so also, he ought not to receive the light of Freemasonry until he arrives at, what is termed in Scottish law, proper age. The great doctrines of Freemasonry should only be intrusted with men of mature age.—ONE KNOWN IN THE CRAFT.

AMERICAN INDIAN FESTIVALS.

The Onondaga Indians in each year hold five stated festivals. The first is held in the spring, directly after the season for making sugar is past. Second is immediately after corn planting. When the green corn becomes fit for use, and directly after the first ears are broken off, they hold the third festival, called the green corn feast, which, every year, draws large numbers of people from all over the United States to witness the songs and dances which make up largely the ceremonies on this occasion; and the famous Sutatash dance concludes the whole. The fourth is celebrated immediately after the corn harvest; usually about the 1st of November. The fifth, and the one of which I am about to give an account, came off at the Onondaga Reservation, on the 15th, 16th and 17th of January. This festival is the crowning one of the year, and the one to which most importance is attached, and is celebrated late in the month of January, or early in the month of February, according to the phases of the moon.

How long or at what period the Onondagas adopted their peculiar religious custom of celebrating the solemn sacrifice of the White Dog, I have not the means of knowing. When the white people first came among them, their practices in all respects were nearly the same as at present. It is truly gratifying and worthy of remark that their pagan rites are not as rigidly adhered to as formerly. The principal actor at the last celebration was Captain George, who was the only person present arrayed in full Indian custom. The services were not as impressive as those I saw several years ago. While the dog was burning, Captain George kept up a solemn chant, and appeared to be the person most impressed by the ceremony.—Home Journal.

The above has been going the rounds of the press. We found it in a recent number of our contemporary, the Keystone. As many portions of the ceremonial of the sacrifice of the white dog have a similarity to some points in the Masonic ceremonies, we supply the following from an old note-book of ours, which we feel sure will be found interesting:—

"A similarity of a few points which characterizes the principal festival of the Onondagas, a nation of the Iroquois (a remnant of whom still live near Syracuse, N. Y.), to some which attain among Freemasons of the present day, is noticeable. We will here briefly state what they were:—Circumambulation round the Council Room, which is always of an oblong square form, while their old wigwams, in which they lived, were circular. At each round the procession (which of course moved in Indian file), following the course of the sun, stopped at the east end of the room, where the three oldest chiefs were seated, dressed in the most ancient costume of the nation. When the procession arrived at the east end, each time, questions were asked of these venerables, and answers returned. The procession consisted of nine males, two of whom were the bearers of the animal to be offered as a sacrifice to the great Spirit, 'Ho-wah-ne-o,' whom they recognised as their Creator, Governor and Benefactor. Previous to this procession round the room, the products of the earth, Indian corn, potatoes, the flesh of animals, moccasins, leggings and other articles manufactured by themselves, were presented to their priests (arrayed in spotless robes), who, after blessing them, handed them to their treasurer, and those articles were, after the festival, distributed among the poor of the nation. They have from time immemorial, for several thousand years, as they say, kept on hand, raising them from year to year, a breed of dogs, of a white colour, without spot or blemish. The dog is strangled, and of course the sacrifice is bloodless, and therefore does not refer to another great sacrifice, because without shedding of blood there can be no remission of sins. Besides the colour of the dog, which has a significant allusion, we of the Royal Craft can explain, the colours of the ribbons (formerly deer skins dyed) are significant; blue, green, and red; Faith, Hope and Charity; Wisdom, Strength, and Beauty.

"In public the word 'Ho-wah-ne-o,' is never used; they simply say 'Ne-o,' even at their most sacred festival of the White Dog. The words 'Ho-wah,' are evidently a corruption of the ineffable name of God, about as near the real word as the common English word, 'Jehovah.'"

Masonic Tidings.

BRITISH, FOREIGN, AND COLONIAL.

The foundation-stone of the new chancel of Southend Church was laid on the 21st inst., in full Masonic form, by R. W. Bro. Robert John Bagshawe, Provincial Grand Master of Essex. A sermon was preached by the Vicar of Southend, who is also the Prov. G. Chaplain. All the lodges of the Province were represented.

Bro. R. Limpus, organist of St. Michael's Church, Cornhill, has just been the recipient of two very handsome presentations, consisting of an elegant ivory baton, richly mounted in gold, from the lady members of the Benhilton Choral Society, of which Bro. Limpus is the conductor; and a large Bible, handsomely bound, with maps and photograph illustrations by Frith, the spontaneous gift of the chorister-boys of St. Michael, Cornhill.

Messrs. Mathews and Quilter, of Cloak-lane, are the architects for the Midland Counties Idiot Asylum, near Birmingham, the foundation-stone of which was laid by Lord Leigh, acting for the Grand Master, assisted by the Prov. Grand Lodge on Thursday in last week.

The fifteen sections will be worked at Brother Gable's, Rosemary Branch Tavern, Rosemary Branch Bridge, Hoxton, on Wednesday evening, at seven o'clock, Bro. Austin will preside.

Births, Marriages and Deaths.

MARRIAGE.

At St. Phillip's, Dalston, London, on the 18th inst., by the Rev. Raymond E. Daniell, M.A. Brother James Harland Cootes, W.M. of the Williamson Lodge, No. 949, Sunderland, to Kate, second daughter of the late Bro. John Swain of St. John's Lodge, No. 80.

Poetry.

LILAC BLOSSOMS.

Reflections of a Freemason on beholding a Lilac tree, growing in his garden, budding forth into bloom.

Fair and fragile lilac-blossoms,
Waving gently in the breeze;
With returning Spring are opening;
Once again upon the trees,
Partly veiled 'neath silken foliage,
Beauteous are they in their bloom,
And the air around is fragrant.
With their delicate perfume.

Fair and fragile lilac blossoms,
Budding forth in sunny May,
Soon—too soon—they droop and perish;
Soon alas! they fade away.
Short the season of their beauty,
Radiant in the bright Spring morn;
For a few days only lasting,
Ere their loveliness is gone.

Fair and fragile lilac blossoms,
Every year with Spring's return,
From their sweet but brief existence,
May we all a lesson learn.
May they teach us time is fleeting;
We like them, must pass away,
Let us then prepare for Heaven
For the resurrection day.

A. C. S.

NOTICE.

The Subscription to THE FREEMASON is now 10s. per annum, post-free, payable in advance.

Vol. I., bound in cloth	4s. 6d.
Vol. II., ditto	7s. 6d.
Vol. III., ditto	15s. 0d.
Vol. IV., ditto	15s. 0d.
Reading Cases to hold 52 numbers ...	2s. 6d.

United States of America.

THE FREEMASON is delivered free in any part of the United States for 12s. per annum, payable in advance.

NOTICE TO SUBSCRIBERS.

The Office of THE FREEMASON is now transferred to 198, FLEET-STREET, E.C. All communications for the Editor or Publisher should therefore be forwarded to that address.

Answers to Correspondents.

The following articles and communications have been received and will appear in early numbers:—"An Historical Notice of the St. Chairs of Rosslyn, Grand Master Masons of Scotland," "Freemasonry and Israelitism, by W. E. N.;" Reports of Provincial Grand Chapter Lanarkshire; Provincial Grand Conclave of Suffolk and Cambridgeshire; Girvan Encampment, Glasgow.

ERRATA:—In the article "Hull and the Masonic Charities," page 307, col. 2, line 23, for "all the purest," read "all that the purest;" line 27, for "incomprehensible" read "indissoluble;" line 65, for "alluding" read "attending;" 8th line from bottom of column for "Institution" read "Institutions;" in last line but one of the article, for "Mery's" read "Mercy's;" in the report of Grand Tribunal A. and A. Rite; page 312 for "John Baker" read "John Barker."

The Freemason,

SATURDAY, MAY 25, 1872.

The Freemason is published on Saturday Mornings in time for the early trains.

The price of the Freemason is Twopence per week; annual subscription, 10s. (payable in advance.)

All communications, letters, &c., to be addressed to the Editor 198, Fleet-street, E.C.

The Editor will pay careful attention to all MSS. entrusted to him, but cannot undertake to return them unless accompanied by postage stamps.

ILLUSTRATIONS OF THE HISTORY OF THE CRAFT.

BY A MASONIC STUDENT.

CHAPTER V.

In the last chapter, I endeavoured to demonstrate the existence of a Roman Guild of Masons, with so close a resemblance, in many particulars, to our present organisation, alike in external signs and symbols, and in internal constitution and economy, as to raise a very strong and satisfactory presumption, that those writers are altogether in the right who look on the Roman Sodalities as forerunners of the early and mediæval guilds of Operative Masons, and thus maintain the connection of our present Speculative Brotherhood, through three successive channels and developments, with the building fraternities of Egypt, Greece, Tyre, and Jerusalem.

I propose in the present chapter to consider the History of the Masonic Guilds, as far as we are now able to trace it, from the beginning of the Christian era, until the close of the Saxon Dynasty in this country.

At the outset, I think it well that we should always bear in mind that the actual position of the Roman Guilds had greatly changed with the promulgation of Christianity, from what it was in the old Roman heathen world. Within one hundred years, at the least, after the Christian Era, the same struggle would be going on in them and with them, which was going on in all other like organisations then, and which was going on in the whole society of the then known world, namely, the great struggle between expiring heathenism and progressive Christianity.

By degrees, in the building corporations, just as everywhere else, the "nova superstitio" obtained the upper hand, and these very architectural fraternities were altogether heathen, though always tolerant and cosmopolitan, because, not nearly almost, but altogether Christian, and took their patron Saints no longer from the fabulous deities of the heathen mythology, but from the true heroes and other worthies of the Christian Calendar.

During the unsettled state of the first three centuries of the Christian Era, the persecutions which arose, and the doubts, the fears, the struggles which were then agitating the world, the erection of churches and great edifices, like most of the other useful and ornamental arts, made but slow progress, and the buildings which were constructed, especially by the early Christians, for religious worship, seem to have been, as we are often told by contemporary writers, hasty of design and rude in form, run up often even of fragile and perishable materials, only to subserve the pressing and immediate wants of the hour, because liable to suffer, as frequently they did suffer, from the destruction which more than once fell with such ruthless severity on the frail tabernacles of the then despised and yet persecuted Christians,—persecuted and despised, that is, as they were, though most inconsistently, at the same time, by the heathen powers of the world.

With the reign of Constantine, popularly surnamed the Great, however, who was proclaimed Emperor in Britain, about A.D. 307, a new and happier era was ushered in for religion and for the world, and the Christian subjects of the Roman Empire, were, we are specially told, encouraged by his edicts, both to repair the churches which had been destroyed in the persecutions, and to build others in all parts of his dominions.

A few years later, though still very early in the fourth century, as ecclesiastical writers tell us, many beautiful stone churches were built at Jerusalem, Tyre, Constantinople, and in Italy, which Constantine aided, both in their erection and ornamentation, while he specially favoured the architects and building fraternities, which had now apparently become altogether Christian, but which had evidently drawn both their origin and outward and inner organisation from Rome.

It is very remarkable, that the first assembly of Operative Freemasons in England, should be connected so distinctly, in our oldest traditions, with Alban or Albanus, whose martyrdom took place in one of the Dioclesian persecutions in this country, about A.D. 287.

Of Alban little is known for certain, and though our Masonic hymns and ancient constitutions connect him with Caransius and Amphibalus, and tell us, that he got a charter for the "assemblage" to meet, yet it seems impossible, at this distance of time, to verify such commonplace traditions, long continued as they are, and certainly of very ancient date.

If it be true, as some early writers say, that Alban went to Rome, and brought thence Roman Masons, with whose aid he built Verulam, we shall, I think, probably find in this fact the origin of our Masonic tradition, which is thus essentially true!

There were in all Roman towns, Sir F. Palgrave tells us, in his "History of the Anglo-Saxon Guilds of Roman Artificers, and specially Guilds of Roman Masons," and he further says, that were he a Freemason, he could tell us whether our present Order is or is not a scion of the old Roman stock, existing through so many centuries.

Our annals are therefore, I have little doubt, myself, correct, which connect Alban with a Roman guild of Masons.

There is also another remark I feel bound to make. The history of all building art, in Europe especially, and in England, is, after all, only the development of Roman building art, and our best Masonic historian, Bro. Preston, long ago pointed out, as other writers, not Masons, have since admitted, that the history of all ecclesiastical architecture in the country is connected alike with Roman masons, and Roman work. But, I am somewhat anticipating the course of events, as regards the progress of the building art in England.

There is no doubt, however, that the earliest churches were either held in the Basilicæ themselves, or in buildings formed exactly on the models of the Roman Courts of Justice. And though it may be true that the Romans, after their 300 years of occupation of England, left many fine buildings and Christian churches in this country, yet they were, no doubt, ruined and destroyed by the ravages of the Picts and Scots, and afterwards the efforts of the Saxons to establish themselves in England.

The fall of Rome in the 5th century, requires a short notice here.

That great and startling event left the building societies, which had been gradually dissolving, like all other associations of an analogous organization, in a state of confusion, may we not say chaos? All art, all the refining influences of civilization, seemed likely to be swept away and forgotten, when, by the successful inroads of Goths and Vandals, the mighty edifice of Roman supremacy, both in arts and arms, crumbled, so to say, suddenly away.

The famous memories of Roman handicraft and skill, the schools of learning, the colleges of architecture, fell with Rome itself, and nothing remained of that wondrous part of the greatest power the world had ever seen, but the shattered fragments of a once great national life, and the decaying institutions of a once civilised society.

The fall of Rome seemed to have scattered the building societies in all directions, and when next we hear of reviving art, it is under their auspices, in Germany, and Gaul, and in Britain, and in the Italic regions of their once mighty empire.

I alluded just now to the Saxons, and we have to deal directly with their history.

It has been said that the first body of Saxons who embarked in Britain, arrived at the Isle of Thanet, A.D. 449 or 450, under Hengist and Horsa, and after one or more successful engagements, settled themselves in this country.

Subsequently, as we know, terrible strife arose between the native Britons and their allies, which ended in the defeat of the British, but who, as the old Chroniclers tell us, on the destruction of religious buildings, and in the warfare of clergy and people, churches and edifices, both public and private, were burnt down and destroyed, ministers of religion slain at the altar, the bishops and the Church involved in one common ruin, and none left to bury them.

After the middle of the sixth century, the native Britons gave up the contest, and retreated into Wales, and the hilly parts of Devon and Cornwall, while the Saxons and Angles remained masters of the rest of England, where they gradually formed themselves into that form of government, known by the name of the Saxon Heptarchy.

The Saxons were, as we know, Pagans, and seem to have shown great animosity to the British Christians, for ecclesiastical writers tell us they turned the Christian churches into pagan temples, and persecuted the Christians everywhere. We are expressly told, that Theonus, Archbishop of London, and Madioeus, Archbishop of York, after they had seen all the churches within their provinces destroyed, retired in the year 586, with their clergy, to Cornwall and Wales.

The Saxons being triumphant, and the churches destroyed, or turned into Pagan temples, all things remained in this unsatisfactory state, until Ethelbert, King of Kent, then a pagan, married Bertha, a Christian princess, daughter of Charibert, King of the Franks, and niece of Crothan the First.

By the marriage covenant the exercise of her religion was guaranteed her, and she brought over with her, Bishop Laidlaw, as her spiritual guide and director.

The Queen and her family are said to have attended religious worship in an old church, built while the Romans were in England, on the east side of the City of Canterbury, dedicated to St. Martin. *

In 597, Augustine arrived from Rome, sent by the great Gregory, to convert the Saxons, and he is said to have brought Roman Masons and artificers with him, who began to repair and to build churches "more Romano."

It has been often pointed out that the early history of Christianity in this country is also the history of the introduction of ecclesiastical architecture, and, as I have before said, and able writers have maintained, the introduction of Roman Masons is also the history of church building in England.

In 601, Rufinianus, Melictus, Justus, and Paulinus, came also on a mission to this country, bringing with them more Roman "cæmentarii" and "artifices."

In 627, Edwin, or Eadwin, King of Northumbria, who had married Ethelburga, a Christian Princess, was baptised at York by Paulinus, on Easter day, in a little church or oratory of wood, soon to be replaced by a stone church, built by Roman Masons, more romano.

Our learned brother, Drake, pointed out, long years ago, Dec. 27th, 1726, in his able address to our order at York, that this Edwin was the true hero of our old Masonic legend.

During this time Ethelbert had had Christian

* Bede.

Churches built at Canterbury, Rochester and St. Paul's, by Roman Masons, and other churches are mentioned as built in the seventh century both north and south.

In 675, the famous Benedict, Bishop Abbot of Weremouth (called Bennet Abbot of Wirreal in our earlier histories) went to Rome, and brought back thence Roman cæmentarii, and built his church, we are expressly told, according to the Roman manner.

He seems to have been more than once at Rome, and always to have brought back Roman Masons with him.

Archbishop Wilfred, again, in 669, is specially said to have brought "artifices" from Rome, Italia, et Francia, et de aliis terris ubiunque in-conire federal.

He, as we learn, with their aid, repaired York Minster, built Wrexham, Beverley, and Ripon Cathedrals, and was, as both William of Malmesbury and Eddins assure us, very skilful in the science of architecture himself.

In 710, Naitan, King of the Scots, Bede tells us, wrote to Scolfied, Abbot of Weremouth, and the friend and successor of Benedict, to send him Masons, who could carry out, "Romanum opera," and build "more Romanorum."

In 767, the Minster at York was rebuilt by Albert, the Archbishop, who had been to Rome himself, and brought back with him skilful Masons.

The names of his architects are known as Eaubald, afterwards Archbishop, and the famous Alaius, who describes the church, in a Latin poem still extant.

We have a little letter of St. Swithin, apparently directing the Masons in the building of Winchester Cathedral and other churches.

In the ninth century the incursions of the Danes again brought destruction on religious buildings in this country, and it was not until, under Alfred the Great, in 872, that peace was restored to the land, and the civilised arts again flourished.

Alfred was, as William of Malmesbury tells us, "in arte Architectonicâ summis," and he is also said to have gone to Rome and brought Masons thence, by whom many churches were rebuilt.

His son Edward, who succeeded him in 900, was a great builder of fortresses, if not of churches, but he was succeeded by his son, Athelstan, in 929, who is claimed by Masons, and has been claimed for the last 500 years, as a great patron of the order.

He was undoubtedly a great encourager of the liberal arts and sciences, a builder of churches, and a benefactor of religious houses. If it be true, as our traditions assert, that he encouraged Masons from foreign countries to come and settle in England, and placed them over the lodges of English Masons, we have in this some corroboration of the asserted connection of Athelstan with our order.

He was a giver of charters to many of the Saxon guilds, and there is no a priori objection to the old tradition that he gave a charter to the operative Masons, and that a general assembly of Masons was held at York during his reign.

I myself fully accept the Masonic traditions on this point, as I believe them to be literally true.

With regard to Edwin, I have already pointed out that, with the learned Drake, I hold this to be a mistake and a misnomer.

Some of us may be aware that Dr. Oliver held that the Masonic poem, of acknowledged date 1390, though it points to a much earlier date, is to be taken as the constitution of the York assembly in Athelstan's time.

I cannot go so far as this, as indeed there is no proof of such a supposition, and the poem itself, though it mentions the "cite," does not mention York by name.

It may preserve, in its rhythmic form, a trace of the old Anglo-Saxon Guild Charters and Regulations of the Craft, but that is the utmost that can be fairly contended. It could not then have been formed into its present shape. In the peaceable reign of Edgar, forty monasteries, besides many churches, are said to have been built, and St. Dunstan is claimed as a patron of our order, on account of his direction and supervision of most of the great works with which his name is still connected.

In 974, we hear of the famous abbey of Ramsey being built, of which the architect's name was Eduth.

With Edward the Confessor, the Saxon history, or the Saxon dynasty, really may be said to close, and in his reign, Westminster Abbey is said to have been begun, and Preston tells us that Leofric, Earl of Coventry, was a patron of the Masons, and assisted at the building of Westminster Abbey.

Whether this be so or not, Leofric was a great builder of churches, and Dagdale preserves an inscription which tells us how he and Godiva, his wife, were the "fondatores" of a church at Coventry, and were buried there. Leofric was in all probability the patron of the Coventry Guild of Masons.

I fear that I have brought little of the history of the Masonic Guilds in these Anglo-Saxon times. All that we can fairly say, I think, is that as guilds existed among the Saxons, and were a very important portion of their civil and municipal system, we may fairly believe that the Masonic Guilds would flourish, and in all probability obtained their charters from Athelstan, as our oldest traditions so persistently assert.

A VISIT TO EPPS'S COCOA MANUFACTORY.—Through the kindness of Messrs. Epps, I recently had an opportunity of seeing the many complicated and varied processes the Cocoa bean passes through ere it is sold for public use, and, being both interested and highly pleased with what I saw during my visit to the manufactory, I thought a brief account of the Cocoa, and the way it is manufactured by Messrs. Epps, to fit it for a wholesome and nutritious beverage, might be of interest to the readers of Land and Water.—See Article in Land and Water, October 14.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT AND PILLS.—Rheumatism and Neuralgia.—It is sometimes difficult to determine which of these diseases is afflicting the sufferer, but this ignorance will not matter if Holloway's remedies be used. They alleviate and cure all muscular and nervous pains. In hereditary rheumatism, after bathing the affected parts with warm salt water, Holloway's Ointment should be well rubbed upon the spot, that it may penetrate and exert its soothing and regulating properties on the deeper vessels and nerves which are unduly excited, and cause both the pain and swelling. Holloway's treatment has the merit of removing the disease without debilitating the Constitution which, was the inevitable result of the bleeding, mercury, and colchicum practice, formerly adopted in these complaints.—ADVT.

"I cannot express to you my gratitude for the cure your Pain Killer has wrought on me. I had rheumatism all over my body, accompanied with headache, so severe that I could get no sleep. As my doctor seemed to do me no good, my friends induced me, as a last resort, to try the Vegetable Pain Killer, and I am thankful to say that I am now in perfect health, and again at business.—JAMES ALSTON, Goosnargh, Sept., 1871.—To Perry Davis & Son, London, W.C."

REPORTS OF MASONIC MEETINGS.

Craft Masonry.

METROPOLITAN.

BURDETT COUTTS LODGE (No. 1278.)—In the absence of the W.M., Bro. Jas. Terry, P.M., &c., presided at the last meeting of the above lodge, which was held at the Approach Tavern, Approach-road, Victoria-park, on Thursday, the 16th inst. Under the auspices of so eminent a brother, the work was naturally done in a manner seldom equalled, and rarely surpassed. Favourable mention should also be made of the officers who assisted him, namely:—Bros. Hy. Lloyd, S.W.; Ashburner, J.W.; Geo. Verry, P.M. 554, Hon. Sec.; J. Harris, S.D.; J. Crutch, J.D.; and Gilchrist, Tyler. The evening's programme consisted of conferring the Master's degree upon Bro. Joseph Jacobs, passing to the second degree Bro. Argent, and (by permission) Bro. W. H. Reed, of 554. The ceremony of this degree was conducted by Bro. Geo. Verry, whose Masonic talent is well-known and appreciated. After which, Bro. Terry resumed the chair and initiated into the Order Messrs. W. T. Christian and A. Lazarus. The brethren then adjourned to partake of a repast provided for them by that excellent and very obliging host, Bro. Thomas Lloyd. The following brethren visited the lodge:—Bros. H. W. Reed, 554; T. J. Berry, J.D. 554; W. H. Coles, W.M. 20; Wellington, J.D. 865; C. C. Taylor, W.M. 141; E. Gotthiel, P.M. 141.

CLAPTON LODGE (No. 1365.)—Freemasonry flourishes at Clapton. This is evident from the unexampled progress the above lodge has made during a very short period of time. Its age is just eight months. At its birth it numbered about a dozen members, which have now increased to forty-three. It has already been represented at the last festival in aid of the Girls' School, Bro. Stephens, the Senior Warden (acting as Steward) heading the subscription list with £10—to which individual members of the lodge added £20 more. This speaks well of the judgment of the founders, whose anticipations as to the expediency of establishing a lodge in the locality have been more than realised. A variety of presents to embellish the lodge indicate the enthusiasm of the members, the most noteworthy of which are a handsome chair for the W.M. by Bro. Stephens, S.W., and a tessellated carpet by Bro. Batchelor, the honorary Treasurer. The working of the lodge is done with more than average efficiency, and the zeal of the officers was severely tested at the last meeting, which was held at the White Hart Tavern, Clapton, on Wednesday, May 15th. Bro. J. D. Taylor, the W.M., presiding. He was assisted in his duties by Bros. Wm. Stephens, S.W.; Wyatt, S.W.; Batchelor, Treasurer; Buller, P.M. Sec.; Lutwych, S.D.; Miles, J.D.; Catten, I.G.; Gilchrist, Tyler. The amount of business was stupendous, and consisted of conferring the M.M. degree upon Bros. Daniel, Williamson, Dennis, Soper, Birch, Cogan, and Horne, passing to the degree of Fellow-Craft Bros. High, Kiddell, Murlis, and Jessett, and initiating in ancient form, into the mysteries of the order, Messrs. W. Fox, and J. E. Coleman. In the whole of this work, the officers acquitted themselves most creditably, and the solemnity of the proceedings was enhanced by the aid of an harmonium at which Bro. McDavid ably presided. The visitors on this occasion were Bros. T. S. Smith, 895; Miles, 65; Copeland, 754; C. C. Taylor, W.M. 141; and E. Gotthiel, P.M. 141. The writer of this report may, perhaps, be pardoned for suggesting that those brethren, who think proper to pass part of their time at the bar of a tavern, instead of attending to their duties in the lodge-room, should do so without exhibiting themselves in Masonic costume to the gaze of every passer-by, for this, coupled with exceeding lateness of the hour at which the banquet is served, unnecessarily protracting the proceedings to an unseemly hour, which, with ordinary care, might otherwise be brought to an early close, must surely tend, eventually, to injure a lodge whose prospects are so bright and promising, and which seem to have a fortune in store.

second to none in the craft. The toasts of the evening were of the usual character. Bro. Buller, P.M. and Hon. Sec., in giving the health of the W.M., spoke in high terms of his assiduity and zeal, as the Mastership of the Clapton Lodge was no sinecure, to which the W.M. responded, thanking his officers for their assistance, and the brethren for their indulgence, but expressed a longing for the time to come, that would relieve him of his duties, which he would however, faithfully carry out while his tenure of office lasted.

CHESHIRE.

ROCK FERRY.—Rock Lodge (No. 1289.)—The last meeting for the season of this lodge was held on Friday, the 10th inst., at the Rock Ferry Hotel, and there was a large attendance of members and several visitors. The W.M., Bro. R. H. Moore, presided, and Mr. L. M. Sanderson was initiated, Bro. Capt. Lakey passed, and Bros. Dr. Paton and W. Wooliscroft, raised, the latter ceremony being performed by Bro. Edwd. Friend, P.M. Various matters of lodge business having been transacted, Bro. Moore, W.M., addressing Bro. Friend, informed him that the members of the Rock Lodge desired to show their appreciation of his (Bro. Friend's) services in the lodge since its formation, and after paying a high compliment to him, requested, in the name of the members, Bro. Friend's acceptance of a handsome timepiece, on which was inscribed:—"Presented by the Members of the Rock Lodge, No. 1289, to Bro. P.M. Friend, in recognition of his services on behalf of the lodge during his two years' Mastership, 1870 and 1871, and as a mark of their sincere respect and esteem, 10th May, 1872." Bro. Friend in thanking the brethren, expressed his gratification at such an unlooked-for compliment, and said he should value the gift, not only for its intrinsic worth, but as showing the kindly feeling entertained towards him, which he heartily reciprocated. The brethren afterwards partook of refreshment, and a very pleasant evening was brought to a close by the Tyler's toast.

LEICESTERSHIRE.

LEICESTER.—John of Gaunt Lodge (No. 523.)—This lodge held its regular meeting on Thursday, the 16th inst., under the presidency of Bro. Sculthorpe, W.M., who was supported by nearly all the officers, and a very large number of members. There was also a numerous attendance of visitors, among whom were, the W.M., I.P.M., J.W., Sec., I.G., and several members of No. 279; the I.P.M., S.W. J.W., Sec., J.D., and some other brethren of No. 1381; also Bros. W. C. Shout, of No. 562; Samuel White, of No. 680, P.G.S.B. West Lancashire; Henry Deane, W.M. 1007; and P. Schulze of 1009. After the confirmation of the minutes of the previous meeting, the ballot was taken for Mr. F. A. Wykes, who being unanimously elected, was admitted, and initiated into the mysteries of the Order, the ceremony being conducted in a very efficient and impressive manner by the W.M. The musical accompaniments consisted of a new set of very appropriate chants, the words of which, together with those of the opening and closing hymns were selected, and the music arranged by Bro. E. J. Crow, Mus. Bac. Cantab., W.M. 279. These were very effectively rendered by Bro. Crow, who presided as Organist, and elicited numerous expressions of approval from the brethren present. The next business was to ballot for the W.M. and Treasurer for the ensuing year. Bro. the Rev. Nathaniel Haycroft, D.D., was elected to the former office, and Bro. W. B. Smith, P.M., re-elected to the latter, the votes of the brethren being unanimous in each case. A vote of thanks was accorded to Bro. Smith for his services as Treasurer during the year, and acknowledged in suitable terms by that brother. Arrangements were made to hold the Annual Festival and Installation Meeting of this lodge on St. John's Day, June 24th. Some other business being disposed of, the lodge was closed in the usual manner.

LANCASHIRE (EAST.)

MANCHESTER.—Blair Lodge (No. 815.)—On Friday evening, May 10th, the above lodge held its usual monthly meeting in the Hulme Town Hall. Amongst the company present were Bros. G. D. Pochin, W.M.; W. Pochin, S.W.; J. Newton, J.W.; John Verdegans, P.M.; S. Cheetham, P.M.; T. A. Sidgreaves, S.D.; Dr. Raine, J.D.; Samuel R. Knight, George Cookson, junr., H. Vetter, Thomas Black, T. Hancock, John Ingham, R. Holden, Towle, Jas. Sly, and about thirty others, Bro. Adrain Callado was raised to the degree of Master Mason. It was proposed by Bro. Towle, and seconded by Bro. Cheetham, that this lodge be closed during the months of July and August, which was carried unanimously. After the business of the lodge was concluded the banquet was held. Bro. Verdegans delivered, in his usual good style, an oration upon our newly raised brother; after which Brother George Cookson, junr., sang 'Hearts of Oak.' His voice was in real good trim, and received the rapturous applause of all the brethren present.

SUFFOLK.

IPSWICH.—British Union Lodge (No. 114.)—The usual monthly meeting of this exclusive and yet prosperous lodge, was held at the Masonic Hall, Ipswich, on Thursday the 16th inst., when there were present Bros. C. E. Long, W.M.; Rev. F. I. Lockwood, P.M., D.P.G.M.; P. Cornell, I.P.M., P.G.J.D.; Dr. Beaumont, R.N., S.W.; S. Wright, J.W.; J. Spalding, P.M. Sec.; C. Schulen, P.Prov. G.J.D., Treasurer; Durance George, S.D.; Revd. A. W. G. Moore, I.G.; J. J. Burton, J.D., P.Prov. G.A.D.C. Cambridge; Emra Holmes, P.M., P.G.A.D.C.; A. J. Barber, P.M., Organist; W. Boby, P.Prov. G.S.B.; G. A. Turner, P.Prov. G.D.C.; Revd. R. N. Sanderson, P.Prov. G. Chap.; Lord Viscount Mahon, H. Miller, G. Bullen, &c. Visiting brethren R. B. Barton, L.L.D., P.Prov. Grand Master. Western India; N. Tracy, P.M. 376, P.Prov. G.J.W.; I. H. Staddon, P.M. 376, P.G.S.D.; S. B. King, P.M. 376, P.Prov. G.S.D.; C. Davy, P.M. 225, P.Prov. G.S.D. Hertfordshire; G. Gard Pyc, 51; J. White, 1304; H. Grimwade, 51; A. Grimwade, 332; E. H. Edwards, 1385; Revd. C. Woodward, Chaplain to the Masonic Institution for Girls, &c. The lodge having been opened in due and ancient form, the minutes of last lodge were read and confirmed, and the Secretary announced that the Grand Master had been pleased to grant the petition of the brethren to be allowed to wear the centenary jewel—the lodge having had a continuous existence since 1762. The lodge being opened in the second degree, Bros. Lord Mahon, and George Bullen were examined and obligated, and afterwards duly raised to the sublime degree of M.M., the impressive and solemn ceremony being performed by Bro. Sanderson in the admirable manner for which he is famous. The brethren afterward sat down to a banquet served in first rate style by Bro. Spalding. The usual loyal and Masonic toasts were given, and Bro. Dr. Barton in responding to the toast of the Grand Officers took occasion to compliment the brethren on the admirable working of the lodge. Lord Mahon proposed the W.M. in brief but happy terms, and expressed his sense of the beauty and solemnity of the ceremonies he had gone through. Bro. Long responded, and Bro. Emra Holmes having received the jewel from the W. Master, proposed Bro. Sanderson's health, and spoke of the excellent way in which he had performed the ceremonies—at the same time stating that Bro. Sanderson was equally a bright and learned Mason in the higher degrees which some present knew he worked as well as the three degrees that evening. Bro. Sanderson modestly acknowledged the toast. The brethren separated at a late hour after spending a most agreeable evening.

SURREY.

GUILDFORD.—Royal Alfred Lodge (No. 777.)—The annual meeting of the members of this lodge was held at the Angel Hotel on the 16th inst., for the installation of Bro. H. Botting, P. Prov. G.P. Surrey. The duties of installing master were beautifully performed by Bro. R.

Eve, P.M. 723, &c., P. Prov. G.S.W. Hants, &c. The Board of Installed Masters included Bros. Drewitt, Wells, Piggott, Charrington, Mason, 777; Bateman, 723; Morris, 173; Arnold, P. Prov. G. Chap. Essex, W.M. 1395, &c. At the close of the ceremony the lodge resumed, and saluted the W.M. in the three degrees. Bro. G. J. Smallpiece was appointed S.W. and Treasurer; Vickers, J.W.; Charrington, S.D.; Bean, J.D.; J. Nealds, Sec.; E. Drewitt, D.C.; Tyre, I.G.; Neate, Tyler. Amongst the brethren were Bros. Warne, 723; Taylor, 1046; Anderson, 1046; Hemming, 1141; Michaux, 777; Wainwright and G. Smallpiece, Wardens, designate 1395, &c. The lodge was closed in proper form, and an adjournment was made to the banquetting-room, where the brethren mustered in great force to support the W.M. The usual loyal and Masonic toasts were duly honoured, the W.M. receiving the fraternal congratulations of the assembly. The Tyler's toast brought the pleasant evening's proceedings to a close, and the brethren, happy to meet, sorry to part, happy to meet again, dispersed before high twelve.

INDIA.

DISTRICT GRAND LODGE OF BENGAL.

A Quarterly Communication of the District Grand Lodge of Bengal, was held at the Freemasons' Hall, Calcutta, on Thursday, the 21st March, 1872.

The following brethren were present:—The R.W. Bro. Hugh David Sandeman, C.S., District Grand Master; the W. Bros. John Pitt Kennedy, Deputy District Grand Master; G. H. Daly, M.D., P. District Grand Master; W. B. Farr, D.S.G.W.; I. L. Taylor, D.J.G.W.; D. J. Zemin, D.G. Registrar; W. B. Mactavish, as D.G. Treasurer; Capt. W. G. Murray, D.G. Secretary; G. J. Scott, D.G. Dir. of Cer.; Major C. T. Hitchins, Past D.G. Sword Bearer; Bros. W. G. Amos, as D.G. Pursuivant; C. H. Compton, D.G. Organist; J. W. Puchini, as Standard Bearer; R. C. Sterndale, A. J. Ferris, M.D., A. Le Franc, and W. Hay, D.G. Stewards; G. Alexander, D.G. Tyler; and D. J. Daniel, P.D.G. Tyler.

There were also present representatives of lodges:—Star in the East, No. 67; Industry and Perseverance, No. 109; True Friendship, No. 218; Humility with Fortitude, No. 229; Marine, No. 232; St. John, No. 486; Excelsior, No. 825; and Sandeman, No. 1374.

The visitors were:—Bros. S. H. Emanuel, 232; J. H. Turner, 232; J. Colohan, 1374; J. Gunter, 1374; Wala Gohur Shah, 392; Bros. R. W. Mathews and W. Burroughs, unattached.

The District Grand Lodge was opened in due form at 6.45 p.m.

The District Grand Secretary reported the receipt of apologies from several brethren for unavoidable non-attendance.

The Minutes of the Communication of the 27th December, 1871, having been printed and circulated, were, on the motion of the District Grand Master, taken as read, and, on being put to the vote, were confirmed.

The District Grand Master then addressed Grand Lodge as follows:—"Worshipful Brethren,—My first duty this evening is a very painful one. It is to notice the sad calamity which has fallen upon Freemasonry in India, as well as upon the country at large, by the violent death of the Earl of Mayo, who was the first Patron of our Ancient Order. You know that the news of the cruel and fatal attack upon Her Majesty's Viceroy at Port Blair by a convict assassin was received in India with feelings of the deepest horror and indignation, and I am sure that I speak the feelings of every one here present when I say that among the many millions of men who have had reason to deplore the great loss which has been occasioned by the untimely death of a nobleman who had done and was doing so much for the improvement of the country over which he was destined to rule, none feel more strongly than those who deemed it a privilege to call him their brother in the Craft. The deceased Earl was a liberal subscriber to our charities, and was always glad to have intelligence regarding the progress and well-being of the Order. A proposition will be laid before you during the evening to address a letter of condolence to the widowed Countess of Mayo, on the irreparable loss which she has sustained, and, although words of condolence can obviously do no practical good in cases which are beyond human aid, yet I think we should be failing in our duty did we not tender for her acceptance the only thing that we can offer, a hearty expression of our sincere sympathy with her under her heavy trial, and of our great grief at the loss of an honoured and respected chief.

It is also my sad duty to report to Grand Lodge the death on the 2nd January last, of our V.W. Bro. James Henry Linton, who had for several years conducted the duties of District Grand Treasurer. As it was very inconvenient, if not impossible, to carry on the work of District Grand Lodge without a Treasurer, I took upon myself to ask W. Bro. Mactavish to undertake the duties of that high office, subject to your confirmation this evening. Bro. Mactavish has responded favourably to my call, and I have to ask your sanction to his permanent appointment as your Treasurer. In making the selection, I felt that I was choosing a Brother who possesses your highest confidence, and who, from his well-known position as a merchant in this city, will reflect credit upon the post which he has very kindly consented, with your approval, to fill.

I notice with regret a paragraph in the report of the Committee of General Purposes to the effect that several lodges are in arrears of payment of dues. I sincerely hope that Masters will not allow their Lodges to suffer in name by this disregard of a positive duty. Masters of Lodges are personally and solely responsible for these dues, and they should bear in mind that the honor of their Lodges is in their keeping, and that Masons who do not intimately know the laws of the Craft are apt to attach blame to Lodges for the shortcomings of their rulers. It will be noticed that the Fund of Benevolence is still unable to meet the whole of the calls which are made upon it for charity to the poor and needy. The position of this Fund will now be further embarrassed by the painful report of the Committee that its vested property is apparently lost to us for ever. This unfortunate circumstance will, no doubt be remarked upon by you when the report is discussed.

The Committee should bear in mind that in the audit of accounts there are certain strict rules of observance which should never be relaxed in the smallest degree, whatever may be the position or the circumstances of the persons whose accounts are undergoing examination. I notice that there is a discrepancy in the balance of the Fund of Benevolence as given in the abstract of the Fund on the first, and that shown on the second page of the Agenda paper. This will require explanation.

I am confident that every Mason in Calcutta will join with me in an expression of regret at the prospect of losing the able services of the Excellent Brother who now occupies the post of Senior Warden in this District Grand Lodge.

R. W. Bro. Farr, in the ordinary course of promotion, has been ordered to a far distant station, and, although we ought to feel glad at knowing that he is personally advanced by the move, yet we cannot but regret the loss which his promotion will occasion to ourselves; the Fund of Benevolence and the Masonic Association will be great losers by his departure, for he has taken an intimate and active interest in both these institutions, and we shall, in our Lodges of the Craft, in its many degrees, miss one who is second to none of us in that careful precision which ought to characterise the work of those who conduct the ritualistic work of the order. That R. W. Bro. Farr will leave Calcutta to the regret of us all, and that he will carry with him our sincere good-wishes for his prosperity, it is superfluous for me to say, and I will but add my wish that he may again at no far distant date be stationed in Calcutta, where his presence is so useful to us in the Craft, which he so faithfully serves, and of which he is so popular a member.

A new Lodge has been formed at Roorkee, in the North-West Provinces, under the auspices of Captain Graham Birch. The Lodge will be known as the "Beauchamp" Lodge. Bro. Birch and his masonic coadjutors deserve high praise for their energetic conduct in this matter. They have purchased a well adapted house, so that the Lodge is their own exclusive property, and have formed themselves into a joint-stock company, subscribing the money under terms by which the Lodge will by degrees purchase the whole of the shares into its own name. Seeing the great difficulties which admittedly stand in the way of establishing Lodges in Mofussil stations, I feel that I cannot speak too highly of the successful scheme which the Freemasons at Roorkee have planned and matured, and I sincerely hope that their labours will be attended with the happiest results.

The Report of the Committee of General Purposes was read.

The District Grand Treasurer's Accounts for the Quarter ending 29th February, 1872, were audited and found correct.

R. Wor. Bro. J. P. Kennedy proposed and the District Grand Secretary seconded, "that the accounts as shown in the Report be accepted as correct and passed, which was carried unanimously."

The Report of the Committee of the Masonic Fund of Benevolence for the Quarter ending 31st December, 1871, was read:—

Wor. Bro. W. B. Mactavish proposed, and Wor. Bro. D. J. Zemin seconded, "that the Report of the Committee of the Fund of Benevolence be approved and adopted," which was carried unanimously.

Upon the R. W. the D. G. Master's motion, seconded by Wor. Bro. G. H. Daly, an address to Her Most Gracious Majesty the Queen, upon the recovery of H.R.H. the Prince of Wales, Past Grand Master of England, was adopted, and the D. G. Secretary directed to have it engrossed and submitted for signature at an early date.

Upon the R. W. the District Grand Master's motion, seconded by Wor. Bro. W. B. Farr, a letter of condolence to the Countess of Mayo, expressive of the profound grief of this D. G. Lodge at the loss of the late Lord Patron of the Masonic Craft in India, was adopted, and the D. G. Secretary directed to have it fairly written out and submitted for signature at an early date.

The R. W. the District Grand Master proposed, and Bro. W. G. Murray seconded, Wor. Bro. W. B. Mactavish, W.M. 109, and Past Asst. Director of Ceremonies, to be Treasurer of the D. G. Lodge, in the place of Wor. Bro. J. H. Linton, deceased, which was carried unanimously.

Bro. Mactavish was led up by the Director of Ceremonies and invested by R. W. the District Grand Master with the badge of office as D. G. Treasurer.

The District Grand Secretary read a letter from the Quarter Master General of the Army, expressing the thanks of the Right Hon. Lord Napier of Magdala for a copy of the Masonic Diary presented to him by the R. W. the District Grand Master.

The District Grand Secretary wished to lay before the District Grand Lodge a statement of the financial success of the Masonic Diary. Three hundred copies had been printed, at a cost of about 650 Rupees; 238 copies had been sold up to date.

A Collection was made for the Fund of Benevolence. The District Grand Secretary announced the amount to be Rs. 175-0-0 (including Rs. 36 sent by two Grand Lodge Officers unable to attend the meeting), which was handed over to the District Grand Treasurer.

There being no further business, the District Grand Lodge was closed in due form at 8:10 p.m.

Royal Arch.

BRISTOL.

PROVINCIAL GRAND CHIEF.

Freemasonry in the Province of Bristol, under the rule of various Provincial Grand Masters, has flourished, and, with the increase of numbers, it has lately taken a more prominent position than it had hitherto done.

Bristol is a Province in itself, on account of the number of the lodges and the influence of the various members of the Craft. It has lately emerged from its hitherto quiet home in Bridge-street, and has taken up quarters in the fine hall, late the Philosophical Institution, Park-street.

Much of the success of the Craft in Bristol has been due to the able guidance of the D. Prov. G.M., Bro. W. A. F. Powell, who has filled the office for fourteen years, and it was with no surprise that the brethren received the intelligence that the Grand Chapter of England had resolved to mark their appreciation of his merit in appointing him Provincial Grand Superintendent of Royal Arch Masonry in the Province of Bristol.

Thursday, the 16th inst., was fixed for his installation into that office, and large was the number of the Craft, not only of the Province, but of the neighbouring Provinces, to do him honour by their presence on that occasion.

The Rev. John Huyshe, Provincial Grand Superintendent of the Province of Devon, was deputed by the G. Chapter of England to perform the ceremony of installation. The details thereof taking place within tiled walls, of course we are not at liberty to divulge; but that it gave great pleasure to those within the "sacred precincts" must be taken as a guarantee by the outer world of the success of the meeting. The following were the appointments made at the formation of the Provincial Grand Chapter, and duly invested, viz.:

Comp. Powell.....	Prov. G. Supt.
" Bryant.....	Prov. G.H.
" Taylor.....	Prov. G.J.
" Inskip.....	Prov. G.S.E.
" Dimoline.....	Prov. G.S.N.
" Taylor.....	Prov. G.T.
" Page.....	Prov. G.P.S.
" Fergus.....	Prov. G.A.S.
" Bramble.....	Prov. G.Registrar.
" Merrick.....	Prov. G. Swd. B.
" Bartlett.....	Prov. G. St. B.
" Bowden.....	Prov. G. D. of C.
" Churchill.....	Prov. G. Org.

The duties of the day being over, the brethren adjourned to a sumptuous banquet at the Montague Hotel, where a very harmonious evening was spent.

SCOTLAND.

St. ANDREWS' CHAPTER (No. 69).—At the regular monthly meeting of the St. Andrews' R. A. Chap. No. 69, held in the chapter-rooms, 17c Buchanan-street, on Tuesday the 14th inst., Comp. T. D. Humphrey, P.Z. presiding; a very able and instructive lecture on the "Royal Arch Jewel" illustrated with diagrams, was delivered by Comp. T. M. Campbell, P.P.Z., and was listened to with much interest by the companions present, at the close the M.E.P.Z. moved a hearty vote of thanks which was warmly accorded.

Red Cross of Constantine.

SCOTLAND.

Glasgow.—Council of Knights of the Red Cross.—A council of Red Cross Knights was opened on the 6th inst., at the Masonic Hall, 17c Buchanan-street, Glasgow, Sir Knight David Gilchrist presiding; J. Balfour, Senior General; G. W. Wheeler, acting as Junior General; the council being duly opened, application for admission was received from Companions Shaw and Ferguson both of Chapter 73; they were approved of, and ordered to be installed at the next meeting, as this was the night for the election and installation of officers. The following Sir Knights were then duly elected and installed:—Sir Knights D. Gilchrist, President of the Council; J. Park, Junior General; G. H. Wheeler, Scribe; R. Bell, Treasurer; J. Tweed, 1st Captain of the Guards; J. McThie, 2nd Captain of the Guards; John Thay, Conductor; J. Balfour, T. Tindler, J. McKie, Auditors. The Sir Knights then adjourned for refreshment and a pleasant time was spent.

THE LIVERPOOL MASONIC HALL.

At Liverpool, Mr. S. Hague, proprietor of the great original Slave Troupe, gave an entertainment on May 17th, at St. James's Hall on behalf of the funds for the erection of the new Masonic Hall, Hope-street, the proceeds of which will be handed over for the object in view without any deduction whatever. The performance was under the distinguished patronage of his Worship the Mayor, Sir T. G. Fernor-Hesketh, Bart., M.P., P.G.M., W.L.; Lord Skelmersdale, D.P.G.M.; Bros. W. Wright, D.P.G.C.K.T.; Captain Turner, Int. Gen. of the Red Cross Knights, W.L.; W. Romaine Callender, P.G.M.; M.M., and the principals of the various Masonic Lodges, R.A. chapters, K.T. encampments, Knights of the R.C.C., &c. There was a large audience, and the result will doubtless be a substantial addition to the fund for the erection of the new hall, the foundation-stone of which will probably be laid on an early day. For the special occasion, several Masonic items were introduced into the attractive programme. The Red Cross song "Rally round the Standard," deserves special remark, as it was sung with remarkable vigour and effect by Mr. C. Herberte, who secured an enthusiastic encore. "What better theme than Masonry?" was also sung by Mr. G. Campbell; and an overture, introducing Masonic airs, arranged by Mr. Carpenter, forming a pleasing introduction to the evening's entertainments. The whole programme was of the usual excellence, and elicited frequent marks of approval.

THE WIDOW'S MITE.

I.

A woman—a widow—necessitous—old—
On the brink of a misty river,
Stood shrinking alike from the pitiless cold;
And a fear her privations should ever be told;
Though past toil, and all bread-winning ever.

II.

Fond memories of childhood—sweet home,
Bright and gay,
Come back with a mournful sadness.

A mother gentle and tender, who taught her to say,
As she lisped in her cradle-bed "Give us this day."
But Oh! with what earnestness now did she pray—
* * * * *
Swift, an angel from heaven was speeding away;
And instantly brought joy and gladness.

III.

For out of the gloom smiled the sun's cheering glow,
On the rain-drops of grief which were falling;
Reflection gave back a most beautiful bow
Of perfection diffused—the sign we all know,
"The sure word of promise" recalling.

IV.

At earth's end of the Bow, seven workmen appear,
Bearing their Master's commission,
To bridge o'er her sorrow—relieve her from care,
(The Stateman, the Jurist—Art and Science were there.)

Each worked with will, and soon all could declare,
The bridge in a finished condition.

V.

From the crown of the arch she gazed down far below,
On the seething and dark turbid river—
Of cankering care—bitter anguish and woe;
A relief from all these it was His to bestow,
And she blesses the Fatherly giver.

VI.

Now Jane Collard looks up, and a flood of delight,
Bursts forth into grateful expression,
She sees the Grand Arch, so gloriously bright,
And amid clouds and darkness, this radiance of light;
And in this sees the Freemason's mission.

VII.

Each Brother, I thank you—my best thanks are due;
To convey them I earnestly hasten,
Now I know that the Craft is both noble and true,
I've found out your secret (will publish it too);
Not the sign—but the thing which is signified thro'
Truth, Work, Light, and Love, make "A Mason."
The Langham, 17th May, 1872.

METROPOLITAN MASONIC MEETINGS.

SATURDAY, MAY 25.

- Star Lodge of Instruction (1275), Marquis of Granby, New Cross-road, at 7; Bro. C. S. Dilley, Preceptor.
- Sphinx Lodge of Instruction (1329), Stirling Castle, Camberwell, at 7.30; Bros. Thomas and Worthington, Preceptors.
- Mount Sinai Chapter of Instruction, Union Tavern, Air-street, at 8; Comp. Brett, Preceptor.
- Manchester Lodge of Instruction, Yorkshire Grey, London Street, Fitzroy-Square, at 8. Bro. Ash, P.M., Preceptor.

MONDAY, MAY 27.

- Lodge 4, Royal Somerset House and Inverness, Freemasons' Hall, St. James's.
- " 26, Castle Lodge of Harmony, Willis's Rooms.
- " 183, Unity, London Tavern, Bishopsgate-st.
- " 831, British Oak, Beaumont Hall, Beaumont-square, Mile-end.
- " 902, Burgoyne, Anderton's Hotel, Fleet-st.
- Chapter 25, Robert Burns, Freemasons' Hall.
- Sincerity Lodge of Instruction (174), Railway Tavern Fenchurch-street Station, at 7.
- Strong Man Lodge of Instruction (45), Old Jerusalem Tavern, St. John's Gate, Clerkenwell, at 8; Bro. James Ferry, Preceptor.
- Camden Lodge of Instruction (704), Adelaide Tavern, Haverstock-hill, at 8; Bro. T. A. Adams, Preceptor.
- Eastern Star Lodge of Instruction (95), Royal Hotel, Mile-end-road, at 7.30; Bro. E. Gottheil, Preceptor.
- British Oak Lodge of Instruction, Bank of Friendship Tavern, Mile End, at 7 for 8.
- St. James's Union Lodge of Instruction (180), Horse and Groom Tavern, Winsley-street, (opposite the Pantheon), Oxford-street, at 8; Bro. J. R. Stacey, Preceptor.
- Wellington Lodge of Instruction, White Swan Tavern, Deptford, at 8; Bro. C. G. Willey, P.M. 1155. Preceptor.
- St. John of Wapping Lodge of Instruction (1306), Gun Tavern, High-street, Wapping, at 7; Bro. T. Mortlock, Preceptor.
- West Kent Lodge of Improvement (1297), St. Saviour's College, Stansted-road, Forest-hill, at 7.30; Bro. H. W. Lindus, Preceptor.

TUESDAY, MAY 28.

- Lodge 14, Tuscan, Freemasons' Hall.
- " 92, Moira, London Tavern, Bishopsgate-street.
- " 186, Industry, Freemasons' Hall.
- " 259, Prince of Wales, Willis's Rooms, St. James's.
- " 1158, Southern Star, Montpelier Tavern, Walworth.
- " 1348, Ebury, Morpeth Arms Tavern, Millbank.
- Chapter 21, Cyrus, Ship and Turtle, Leadenhall-st.
- " 180, St. James's Union, Freemasons' Hall.
- Board of General Purposes, at 3.
- Metropolitan Chapter of Instruction, Portugal Hotel, Fleet-street, at 7; Comp. Brett, Preceptor.
- Domestic Lodge of Instruction, Palmerston Tav., Grosvenor-park, Camberwell, at 8. Bro. John Thomas, Preceptor.
- Faith Lodge of Instruction, Refreshment Rooms, Victoria-st. (opposite Westminster Palace Hotel) at 8; Bro. C. A. Cottebrune, Preceptor.
- Yarborough Lodge of Instruction, Green Dragon, Stepney, at 8; Bro. Isaac Saqui, Preceptor.
- Prince Fredk. William Lodge of Instruction (753), Knights of St. John Tavern, St. John's Wood Bro. F. G. Baker, Preceptor.
- Dalhousie Lodge of Instruction, King Edward, Triangle, Hackney, at 7.30. Bro. J. Saunders, Preceptor.
- Sydney Lodge of Instruction (829), Cambridge Hotel, Upper Norwood, at 7.30.
- Florence Nightingale Lodge of Instruction, Masonic Hall, William-street, Woolwich, at 7.30.
- Prosperity Lodge of Instruction, Gladstone Tavern, Bishopsgate-st. Within, at 7.30; Bro. Bolton, (W.M. 1227), Preceptor.
- St. Marylebone Lodge of Instruction (1305), British Stores Tavern, New-street, St. John's Wood, at 8; Bro. T. A. Adams, Preceptor.

WEDNESDAY, MAY 29.

- Lodge 898, Temperance in the East, 6, Newby-place Poplar.
- Pythagorean Lodge of Instruction (79), Prince of Orange Greenwich, at 8; Bro. J. Robt. Nash, Preceptor.
- United Strength Lodge of Instruction (228), the Grafton Arms, Prince of Wales' Road, Kentish Town, at 8; Bro. J. N. Frost, Preceptor.
- Israel Lodge of Instruction, Rising Sun Tavern, Globe-road, at 7.30; Bro. Isaac Saqui, Preceptor.
- New Concord Lodge of Instruction, Rosemary Branch Tavern, Hoxton, at 8.
- Confidence Lodge of Instruction, Railway Tav., London-street, City, at 7.30.
- Royal Union Lodge of Instruction, Horse and Groom Tavern, Winsley-street, Oxford-street, at 8. Bro. T. A. Adams, Preceptor.
- Peckham Lodge of Instruction, Maismore Arms, Park-road, Peckham at 8; Bro. David Rose, Preceptor.
- Temperance in the East Lodge of Instruction, George the Fourth, Catherine-street, Poplar.
- Stanhope Lodge of Instruction, Thicket Hotel, Anerly, at 7.30. p.m.; Bro. H. W. Lindus, Preceptor.

THURSDAY, MAY 30.

- General Committee Girls' School, Freemasons' Hall, at 4.
- The R.A. Chapter of Improvement, Freemasons' Hall, at 7; Comp. Brett, Preceptor. Ceremony, explanation of R.A. Jewel and Solids, part sections.

Fidelity Lodge of Instruction (3), Yorkshire Grey, London-st., Tottenham Court-road, at 8; Bro. T. A. Adams, Preceptor.
 Pannure Lodge of Instruction (720), Balham Hotel, Balham, at 7.30; Bro. John Thomas, Preceptor.
 Finsbury Lodge of Instruction, Jolly Anglers' Tavern, Bath-street, City-road; Bro. Stean, Preceptor.
 United Mariners' Lodge of Instruction, Three Cranes Mile-end-road, at 8; Bro. T. J. Barnes, Preceptor.
 St. George's Lodge of Instruction (140), Globe Tavern, Royal Hill, Greenwich, at 8.
 Whittington Lodge of Instruction (862), Crown Tavern, Holborn, at 8; Bro. Lewis Alexander, P.M. 188. Preceptor.
 Chigwell Lodge of Instruction, Bald-faced Stag Hotel, Buckhurst Hill, at 7.30.

FRIDAY, MAY 31.

Unions Emulation Lodge of Improvement for M.M.'s, Freemasons' Hall, at 7.
 Metropolitan Lodge of Instruction, Portugal Hotel, Fleet-street, at 7; Bro. Brett, Preceptor.
 Belgrave Lodge of Instruction, Duke of Wellington Hotel, Spring-gardens, Charing-cross; Bro. Pulsford, Preceptor.
 Doric Lodge of Instruction, Three Cranes Tavern, Mile-end-road, at 8; Bro. Isaac Saqui, Preceptor.
 Robert Burns Lodge of Instruction, Union Tavern, Air-street, Regent-st., at 8; Bro. W. Watson, Preceptor.
 Burgoyne Lodge of Instruction, Grafton Arms, Prince of Wales-road, N.W., at 8.
 St. Luke's Lodge of Instruction (144), Gladstone Tavern, Brompton-road, S.W.
 United Pilgrims Lodge of Instruction, Duke of Edinburgh, Shepherd's-lane, Brixton, at 7; Bro. J. Thomas, P.M., Preceptor.
 Duke of Edinburgh Lodge of Instruction, Silver Lien, Penny-fields, Poplar, at 7; Br. D. S. Potts, Preceptor.
 St. James's Lodge of Instruction, Gregorian Arms Tavern, Jamaica-road, Bermondsey, at 8. Bro. Howes, P.M., Preceptor.
 Temperance Lodge of Instruction, Victoria Tav., Victoria-road, Deptford, at 8.
 Burdett Courts Lodge of Instruction (1278), Approach Tavern, Approach-road, Victoria-park, at 8; Bro. Geo. W. Verry, Preceptor.
 Clapton Lodge of Instruction, White Hart, Clapton, at 7.30; Bro. John Saunders, Preceptor.
 Royal Standard Lodge of Instruction (1298), The Castle Tavern, Holloway, at 8; Bro. R. Lee, (P.M. 193, W.M. 1298,) Preceptor.
 Pythagorean Chapter of Instruction (No. 79), Prince of Orange, Greenwich-road, at 8; Comp. W. West Smith, Preceptor.
 Westbourne Lodge of Instruction (733) Horse and Grass, Winsley-street, Oxford-street, at 8.

Advertisements.

FREDERICK ADLARD,
MERCHANT TAILOR AND OUTFITTER,
225, HIGH HOLBORN, W.C.

Superior Tourist Suits from £2 15 0
 Black Dress Suits from 3 13 6
 Trousers in every variety, all wool, ... 0 16 0

FREDERICK ADLARD,
MANUFACTURER OF MASONIC CLOTHING,
 Inventor of the Masonic Jewel Attacher,
 (Registered 5 and 6 Victoria, cap. 100.)
225, HIGH HOLBORN, W.C.

"MASONIC JEWEL ATTACHER.—Bro. Adlard, of 225, High Holborn, W.C., has invented an attacher, which, from its simplicity and convenience, has only to be universally known to be universally adopted. It has long been a subject of complaint that the wearing of the honorable insignia of rank and merit which grace the breasts of so many of our Brethren, plays sad havoc with the fabric and material of the coat to which they are attached. Bro. Adlard's invention entirely obviates this, in addition to saving much time and difficulty in the proper arrangement of the jewels, and we have very great pleasure in recommending it, warranted as we are in doing so by our personal experience. The price (7s. 6d.) places it within the reach of all."
—Masonic Magazine.
 Bro. Adlard's superior fitting Collars are also well worthy of the attention of the Craft.
 "We have much pleasure in recommending Bro. Adlard's Jewel Attacher for its convenience and usefulness."
—Freemason.

TO ALL IN DEBT AND DIFFICULTIES.
 The New Law for Debtors.

MR. MARCHANT, of 46, Hatton Garden, obtains for Embarrassed Debtors (in Town or Country) IMMEDIATE PROTECTION OF PROPERTY from County Court and other proceedings, and an entire Release from all Debts, under the New Act, without imprisonment, bankruptcy, publicity or suspension of business. Charges, from £1 1s. Consultation Free.
 OFFICES: 46, HATTON GARDEN.
 N.B. Mr. Marchant may be consulted in the evening at his private residence, 22, Doughty-street, Mecklenburgh-square.

GENERAL FUNERAL ESTABLISHMENT, 81, City-road, E.C., opposite the Finsbury Schools, and 24, Southgate road, De Beauvoir Town, N.
Bros. SINCLAIR & SON
 beg to call the public attention to their Scale of Charges to suit all classes, to any of the Metropolitan Cemeteries, or other places. For further information, see Illustrated Book and Estimates, forwarded on application.
 No connection with any other establishment.

Second Edition, revised and enlarged, with a Copious Index. Bound in Cloth and Lettered, 10s. 6d.

HANDY-BOOK FOR INVESTORS.—Second Edition, 530 pages.
A HISTORY of the National Debt.—See Handy-Book for Investors.
A REVIEW of GOVERNMENT SECURITIES.—See Handy-Book for Investors.
REVIEW of INDIAN FINANCES.—See Handy-Book for Investors.
HISTORY of the BANK OF ENGLAND.—See Handy-Book for Investors.
STOCKBROKERS and the STOCK EXCHANGE.—See Handy-Book for Investors.
HISTORY and STATISTICS of the COLONIES and their Debts.—See Handy-Book for Investors.
FOREIGN STATES and their DEBTS.—See Handy-Book for Investors.
HISTORY of JOINT-STOCK COMPANIES.—See Handy-Book for Investors.
HISTORY of BRITISH RAILWAYS.—See Handy-Book for Investors.
INDIAN, COLONIAL, and FOREIGN RAILWAYS.—See Handy-Book for Investors.
HISTORY and POSITION of JOINT-STOCK BANKS.—See Handy-Book for Investors.
HISTORY and POSITION of FINANCIAL COMPANIES.—See Handy-Book for Investors.
SHIPPING and MERCANTILE COMPANIES.—See Handy-Book for Investors.
HISTORY and POSITION of INSURANCE and ASSURANCE COMPANIES.—See Handy-Book for Investors.
POSITION, PROFITS, and PROSPECTS of MINING COMPANIES.—See Handy-Book for Investors.
THE METALLIFEROUS DISTRICTS of the KINGDOM.—See Handy-Book for Investors.
MINES in Cornwall, Devon, Shropshire, Isle of Man, and Ireland.—See Handy-Book for Investors.
COMPARATIVE PROFITS of INVESTMENTS.—See Handy-Book for Investors.
 Bartlett & Chapman, 36, Cornhill, E.C.

THE Advertiser, a Freemason, offers his services as a Gentleman's COMPANION or AMAN- UENSIS; as Instructor in Literature to a Young Gentleman, or especially at the International Exhibition; Secretarily, or otherwise, as they could be made available.—Address J. S., Mr. Peach's Library, Bath.

CHARLES WATSON and Co., 30, Cornhill, opposite the Royal Exchange, invite attention to the CORNHILL SHERRY, as their speciality, pure, elegant and recherche, and worthy of a place on any gentleman's table.
THE CORNHILL SHERRY, elegant, pale and dry, 30s. per dozen. Carriage paid.
 CLARET..... 16s. 22s. 28s. 30s. 42s. to Five Guineas.
 SHERRY 22s. 26s. 30s. 38s. 42s. 48s. to 84s.
 PORT..... 28s. 34s. 42s. 48s. 54s. to 120s.
 CHAMPAGNE ... 30s. 42s. 54s. 60s. to 82s.
WHISKY—the Ben Nevis—Charles Watson and Co.'s Speciality, 20s. per gallon; the softest and most fascinating Whisky for Toddy in the market.—30, Cornhill. Carriage free within 50 miles. Sample Bottles may be had.
THE CORNHILL SHERRY, rich gold, 30s. per dozen, carriage paid. 30, Cornhill. Sample bottles may be had.

Established 1798.
MESSRS. CHARLES WATSON and Co., of 30, Cornhill, forwarded us samples of their 'Cornhill Sherry.' We have taken the opinion of competent judges and veteran wine consumers upon its merits, and pronounce it decidedly the best of the wines at a similar cost which we have tasted, and a great many came before us during the process of our analysis."
—Medical Press.
CORNHILL SHERRY.—Charles Watson and Co., 30, Cornhill opposite Royal Exchange, requests the favour of a visit to these well-established cellars, containing a large stock of the most old Wines of every country, some curious and rare, to please the most critical connoisseurs. Descriptive list free. C. W. and Co. Import Agents, with first-class references, in towns where not represented.

M. A. VERKRÜZEN, (Growers' Agent),
 Invites attention to his Fine and Extensive Stock of
PURE AND SELECTED GERMAN WINES,
 Including the
LIGHT REFRESHING DINNER SORTS, and all Grades up to the Greatest Growths.
 Certain of these Wines have acquired celebrity for their curative effects in cases of stone and gravel, they act beneficially on the liver and kidneys, counteract constipation, promote skin action, are invaluable in cases of dropsy, rheumatism and gout, and in all cases of the blood, greatly assist digestion, and diffuse throughout the system, even in the coldest weather, an agreeable sense of gentle warmth.
 Nothing is so refreshing, nothing gives such zest to a meal.
 DELICIOUS DINNER SORTS. From 17s. 6d. to 36s. per doz.
 DESSERT CLASS. VERY FINE. 40s. to 72s. doz. GREATEST. 78s. to 150s. doz.
 SPARKLING. HOCK. 30s. to 78s. doz. ROSELE. 30s. to 60s. doz.
 Packing and delivery within three miles, cartage free.
Wholesale Depot: 3, Fell-street, Wood-street, London, E.C.
 Can also be ordered through the Trade. Each bottle bears the name of M. A. VERKRÜZEN as a guarantee.
 "VERY FINE CHAMPAGNES," (by special contract) 34s., 40s., 46s., 58s., 70s. per dozen.
 SHERRIES 20s. to 95s. PORTS 30s. to 72s. CLARETS 12s. to 30s.
 Other Wines of Superior Quality, at lowest prices (the Wines may be tasted at the Depot).
 Detailed Price Current forwarded on application. Terms Cash. Cheques crossed "Bank of England"
 Wines for Invalids, specially selected according to the case.

NOW READY.
Vol. IV. of THE FREEMASON,
 from January to December, 1871. Bound in cloth, with richly embossed device on cover.
 Price 15 shillings.

The above forming a first-class reference and chronology of the leading events in Masonry during the past year.
 OFFICE: 108, Fleet-street.

Bro. CHARLES HEDGELONG,
 NEW AND SECOND-HAND BOOKSELLER,
 26, GRAYTON STREET, DUBLIN.
AGENT FOR "THE FREEMASON."

Just Published. Price Sixpence.
MUSIC FOR THE CEREMONY OF INITIATION.
 With Opening and Closing Hymns. Composed by Bro. Edwin J. Crow, Mus: Bac: Cantab: W.M. 279 P. Prov. G.O. Leicestershire and Rutland, &c.
 NOVELLO, EWER & Co., London; and may be had from the Composer, De Montfort Terrace, Leicester.

ASCENSIONTIDE.—"Gone up on High," a Sacred Song. Published for the benefit of the Girls' School.
 Metzler & Co., London.

TRY BARKER'S TROUSERS,
13/6
 Opposite the New Hospital,
DERBY ROAD, BOOTLE,
 Near Liverpool.

THE "EXPRESS"
GENERAL STEAM PRINTING OFFICE,
 TRAFALD-STREET, HULME,
MANCHESTER, S.W.

BRO. MASON begs to state that he can forward PRINTING to any address in the country, carriage paid.
 100 Cards 1/6, 2/0, 2/3, 3/0 and 3/6
 5,000 Handbills 12/6, 20/0, 25/0, 34/0 to 50/0
 12 Funeral Cards 1/6, 2/0; 24 ditto, 2/6, 4/6
 100 Posting Bills 5/0, 7/6, 10/6, 12/6, 15/6, 20/0
 50,000 Wake's or Paulden's Annual Circulars ... £87/10
 Gentlemen's or Ladies' Private Cards 50 for 2/6; 100 3/6
 12 Window Bills 1/0, 1/6, 2/6, 5/0, to 7/6
 5,000 Billheads, at per 1,000 5/0, 6/0, 7/6, 10/6
 Society Rules, 16 pages, 20/0, 35/0, 40/0, 45/0, to 105/0
ESTIMATES ON APPLICATION.

WANTED.—To take charge of Offices or Chambers by a Man and Wife, where the Man is not required in the day, highest references. Address, M.M., 20, Fish-street-hill, E.C.

MASONIC ASSURANCE COMPANY,
9, NEW BRIDGE-STREET, LONDON.
ESTABLISHED 1868.

THE ADDRESS recently issued by the newly appointed Chairman, Bro. J. RANKIN STEBBING, P. G. D., may be obtained on application at the offices of the Company.

FREDERICK BIGG, P.M., Manager.

Active Agents will be treated with liberality.

NEW YORK LIFE INSURANCE COMPANY,
ESTABLISHED 1845.

Conducted under the official supervision of the State of New York.

$100,000 have been deposited with Trustees in England.

Life Assurance only. Purely Mutual. All Profits annually to Policy Holders.

Accumulated Funds, December 31st, 1870 ... £3,172,244
Surplus over all Liabilities, and Reserve Fund 389,322
Income for Year 1870 ... 1,317,271

Bro. M. X. COHEN,
SPECIAL AGENT,
76 & 77, CHEAPSIDE, E.C.

Norwich and London ACCIDENT INSURANCE ASSOCIATION.

ESTABLISHED 1856.

SUBSCRIBED CAPITAL £100,000.

For Insuring against

ACCIDENTAL DEATH,
With

Compensation for Personal Injury,
Caused by Accidents

CHIEF OFFICES—ST. GILES'S STREET, NORWICH.

LONDON: 10, OLD JEWRY CHAMBERS.

Secretary: CHARLES R. GILMAN, Esq.

London Manager: Mr. GEORGE POWELL.

DEATH OR INJURY from ACCIDENT,

With the consequent
LOSS OF TIME AND MONEY,

Provided for by Policy of the Railway Passengers' Assurance Company
AGAINST ACCIDENTS OF ALL KINDS.

An Annual Payment of £3 to £6 ss. insures £1,000 at Death, or an Allowance at the rate of £6 per week for injury.

£650,000 have been paid as Compensation.

One out of every 12 Annual Policy Holders becoming a claimant each year.

For particulars apply to the Clerks at the Railway Stations, to the Local Agents, or at the Offices.

64, CORNHILL, and 10, REGENT STREET, LONDON.

WILLIAM J. VIAN, Secretary.

THE NEW MASONIC CANDLES,

Ionic, Doric & Corinthian, Emblematical, Arranged for Worshipful Master, Senior and Junior Wardens.

6s. per set of 3 one-pound Candles. Packing Cases 6d. each.

Bro. GEORGE KENNING'S

MASONIC DEPOTS, 2, 3, & 4, LITTLE BRITAIN,

AND 198, FLEET STREET, E.C.

J. E. PETERS,

ORNAMENTAL ENGRAVER AND FANCY

ENAMELLER,

41, Clerkenwell Close.

Writing, Engraving of every description, Masonic Emblems

Engraved or Enamelled; old enamelled Work repaired;

Country Orders attended to with despatch.

SHEPPARD & Co.

PRIME CANADIAN HAMS.

9d. lb.

113 & 115, BOROUGHS & LONDON BRIDGE, S.E.

S. WELCH,

WRITER AND GRAINER.

6, MAIDENHEAD COURT,

ALDERSGATE STREET, E.C.

ROSE CROIX TRACING BOARDS,

Five Guineas the Pair.

MASONIC DEPOTS, 2, 3, & 4, LITTLE BRITAIN,

AND 198, FLEET STREET.

LONDON AND SUBURBAN MUTUAL BUILDING SOCIETY,

Enrolled in 1855, pursuant to Act of Parliament.
SHARES, £25 each, may be paid in one sum, or by Monthly
Subscriptions of 5s. per share.
INVESTING MEMBERS receive 5 per cent. Interest, and Share of Surplus Profits.
MONEY ADVANCED ON MORTGAGE, without Premium, for any term of years.
Bro. JONATHAN TAYLOR (Doric 933), Secretary.
Offices:—107a, Fenchurch-street, E.C.

THE BIRKBECK

Is the only Building Society whose Annual Receipts exceeds
ONE MILLION!

How to Purchase a House for Two Guineas per Month,
With immediate possession and no Rent to pay. Apply at the Office of the BIRKBECK BUILDING SOCIETY, 29 & 30, Southampton-buildings, Chancery-lane.

How to purchase a Plot of Land for Five Shillings per Month,
With immediate possession, either for Building or Gardening purposes, apply at the Office of the BIRKBECK FREEHOLD LAND
SOCIETY, 29 & 30 Southampton-buildings, Chancery-lane.

How to Invest Money with safety at 4 per cent Interest.
Apply to the Office of the BIRKBECK BANK.
All sums under £20 repayable upon demand. Current accounts opened similar to Ordinary Bankers. Cheque Books supplied.
Office hours from 10 till 4 daily, on Mondays from 10 till 9, and on Saturdays from 10 till 2. A small pamphlet, containing full particulars, may be obtained gratis, or sent Post-free on application to FRANCIS RAVENSBOFT, Manager.

THE SOUTH-WESTERN INDEX LIST

of Furnished and Unfurnished Houses to be let, and of Estates for sale in the South-west of London, is published Monthly by

MR. JAS. STEVENS, AUCTIONEER & ESTATE AGENT,
CLAPHAM COMMON, S.W.

A useful work of reference for those seeking Residences, and saving much trouble in obtaining information of properties for disposal in the S.W. district.

Send post-card with your address, and a copy will be forwarded by return post.

THE LONDON MIRROR.

Published every Saturday; price 4d.

The object of this journal is to set forth the claims of the many Religious, Educational, Benevolent, and Prudential Institutions of the United Kingdom, and week by week to report their proceedings, whether as Meetings, Sermons, Anniversaries, or Elections, so as to present these National Institutions to the favour of the Public.
Office, 59, Southampton-row, Russell-square, London, W.C.

"THE FREEMASON" OF ST. LOUIS.

The Largest Masonic Monthly in the World. Published at St. Louis, Mo., by George Frank Gouley, Grand Secretary and Recorder of the four Grand Bodies of Missouri.

The Freemason contains tidings from every quarter of the world, and will be found of great advantage to all Masons, especially those interested in American affairs. Terms $2 per annum, and to those who subscribe for the London Freemason the price will be $1.50 currency. Postage free.
Subscriptions received at the Office of the London "Freemason," 198, Fleet-street.

THE MASONIC TROWEL.—A Masonic

Journal, published on the 15th of every month, by H. G.
Reynolds, Junr., Springfield, Illinois, United States of America.
Sixteen pages, large quarto. Circulation 20,000 monthly.
Terms to be obtained, and Subscriptions received at the Freemason Office, 198, Fleet-street and forwarded free of charge.

"TRUTH MUST PREVAIL"—Common Sense.

Lamps, Baths, Cutlery, Brushes, Fenders and Fire Irons Electroplate and Nickel-Silver Goods.

R. D. PARR,

General House Furnishing Ironmonger,

43, BLACKMAN STREET, BOROUGHS.

OFFERS nothing extraordinary, but REALLY

Good Articles at fair and reasonable prices. He does not keep an "Immense Stock," but sufficiently large for any person to select from. He does not sell "cheaper than every other house in the Trade," but quite as cheap as any.
A visit will, at all times, be very much appreciated.

THE JEWISH CHRONICLE

Price Twopenny.

OFFICE: 43 FINSBURY SQUARE, E.C.

TESSELATED CARPETING,

FOR

Lodges, Chapters, Encampments, &c.

Four Feet wide, 3/9 per Yard.

MASONIC DEPOTS, 2, 3 & 4, LITTLE BRITAIN,

AND 198, FLEET STREET, E.C.

Bro. WILLIAMS.

Lithographic Artist

AND ENGRAVER ON

WOOD.

8, Featherstone Buildings, Holborn

MASONIC EMBLEMS

Designed and Engraved

ON

STONE, WOOD,

or VELLUM.

25, Acton Street, London, W.C.

GLENFIELD STARCH

is the only kind used in

Her Majesty's Laundry.

Those Ladies who have not yet used the Glenfield Starch, are respectfully solicited to give it a trial, and, carefully follow out the directions printed on every package. It is rather more difficult to make than other Starches, but when this is overcome, they will say, like the Queen's Laundress, that it is the finest Starch they ever used.

When you ask for the Glenfield, see that you get it.

BRIDGE HOUSE HOTEL,
LONDON BRIDGE,

Opposite the South Eastern, and London, Brighton, and South Coast Railways.

THIS Hotel has great facilities for Meetings,
Charitable Institutions, Wedding Breakfasts, Public Dinners, Balls, Soirees, and is allowed to be in real domestic comfort, one of the Best in the Metropolis, the tariff on application to JOSEPH H. SPENCER.

THE GREAT WESTERN HOTEL
(SNOW HILL STATION)

BIRMINGHAM.

"One of the most elegant, comfortable and economical Hotels in the three kingdoms.—The Field, July 31, 1869."

"From experience gained by repeated visits, we are happy to be able to testify to the exceeding comfort of this Hotel. We have much pleasure in recommending it.—The Engineer, October 14, 1870."

"An establishment remarkable for its able management, reasonable charges, and general comfort."—Bell's Life, June, 31, 1871.
Good Accommodation for Lodges, Chapters, &c.

City Terminus Hotel, Cannon-street,
LONDON.

WELL adapted for Banquets, Balls, Amateur Dramatic Entertainments, Public Meetings, and Arbi-trations. The large Hall is capable of seating upwards of Twelve Hundred people.

SYDNEY SPENCER, Manager.

Guildhall Tavern, Gresham-st., E.C.

SPACIOUS Dining-rooms, Chop and Steak-rooms, Luncheon-bars, and Smoking Rooms. Rooms of all sizes, suitable for Auction Sales, Consultations, Arbitrations, Building Societies, &c.; also for Freemasons' Lodges and Banquets,
Private Dinners, &c.
Guildhall Tavern Company (Limited), 32 and 33, Gresham-street,
GEORGE CRAWFORD, Manager and Secretary.

Masons' Hall Tavern,

MASONS' AVENUE, BASINGHALL-STREET, CITY.

THE above old-established Tavern is NOW

OPEN, newly decorated, by Bro. CHARLES GOSDEN, late Manager of the Freemasons' Tavern Company. Every accommodation will be found for Lodges, Chapters, Mark and other degrees, for their Meetings, Dinners, Suppers, &c., and every attention will be paid to their comfort and enjoyment by the new Proprietor.

The Alexandra Restaurant,

7, CONDUIT-STREET, REGENT-STREET.

Public and Private Dining Rooms.

First-class Cooking and Wines.

Open for Suppers after the Theatres.

Bro. F. HILFREICH, Proprietor.

REEVES, SON and CO., Printers, Wholesale

Stationers, and Account Book Manufacturers,

PLAYHOUSE YARD, BLACKFRIARS, LONDON, E.C.

Next the "Times" Office.

REEVES, SON and CO.

Publishers.

REEVES, SON and CO.

Newspaper Printers.

REEVES, SON and CO.,

Magazine Printers.

REEVES, SON and CO.,

Law Printers.

REEVES, SON and CO.,

Commercial Printers.

REEVES, SON and CO.,

Show Card Printers.

REEVES, SON and CO.,

Label Printers.

REEVES, SON and CO.

Ornamental and Colour Printers.

REEVES, SON and CO.,

Bankers' Cheque Printers.

REEVES, SON and CO.,

Copper Plate Printers.

REEVES, SON and CO.,

Lithographic Printers.

REEVES, SON and CO.,

Lithographic Artists.

REEVES, SON and CO.,

Map Printers and Colourers.

REEVES, SON and CO.,

Designers.

REEVES, SON and CO.,

Stereotypers.

REEVES, SON and CO.,

Engravers and Die-Sinkers.

REEVES, SON and CO.,

offer many advantages to Manufacturers and all persons requiring large quantities of Paper and Printing, as they possess the most approved machinery, as well as every other facility for executing orders entrusted to them in the cheapest and best manner.

As PUBLISHERS, their Offices are very central, and they render accounts monthly.

Printed and Published by the Proprietor, Brother GEORGE KENNING at his Offices, 2, 3, and 4, Little Britain, and 198, Fleet-street in the City of London, and 2, Monument-place, Liverpool, in the County of Lancaster.—SATURDAY, MAY 25, 1872.

TABLE OF CONTENTS

Inauguration of the Masonic Hall at Newcastle-on-Tyne 331
 Historical Notice of the St. Clairs of Rosslyn 332
 Bro. Lessing and his Conversations 334
 CORRESPONDENCE:—
 Practical Freemasonry 335
 Lodge Benevolent Funds 335
 Grand Conclave 335
 Grand Lodge 335
 Consecration of a Mark Lodge at Maryport 335
 Freemasonry and Israelitism 336
 CRAFT MASONRY:—
 Metropolitan 337
 Provincial 338
 ROYAL ARCH:—
 Provincial 338
 Scotland 338
 MARK MASONRY:—
 Provincial 338
 KNIGHTS TEMPLAR:—
 Provincial Grand Conclave of Suffolk 340
 Scotland 340
 ANCIENT AND ACCEPTED RITE:—
 Metropolitan 340
 Consecration of a Lodge at Trinidad 341
 Metropolitan 277
 Consecration of St. John's Chapter, Torquay 341
 Masonic Meetings for next week 342
 Advertisements 329, 330, 343, 344

OPENING OF THE MASONIC HALL AT NEWCASTLE-UPON-TYNE.

On Thursday, the 23rd ult., the ceremony of dedicating this handsome new edifice was performed with great splendour, in the presence of a very large assemblage of brethren of the Province and neighbourhood. The foundation-stone was laid about nineteen months ago, but unavoidable delays arising from the strike in the building trade have retarded the completion of the building. The hall is built of stone, the front being Gothic, of early treatment, deeply revealed, and symbolically carved in parts. It consists of two stories and basement, with outbuildings. In the basement is a spacious banquetting hall, having a separate entrance from the street, with proper ante-rooms, lavatories, &c., and a large kitchen, with cooking range, fitted up with the latest improvements in the culinary art. The lodge room is on the first floor, approached by a flight of handsome stone steps, leading to a vestibule, on one side of which are more lavatories, on the other side the Tyler's room; next the Tyler's room is the preparing room, with a door into the lodge room, and beyond that is a room fitted up with wardrobes and cupboards for the safe keeping of the jewels and clothing of the Lodge, Chapters, and Encampment of Knights Templar. On the second floor is a very elegant club room, with carved ceiling, and above that is the Tyler's dwelling rooms, &c. The size of the lodge room is 46 feet by 24 feet, and 21 feet high in the clear. The ceiling is formed of wrought and moulded braces and ribs, the whole being decorated with Masonic emblems in a beautiful manner. At the east end of the hall the dais is situated, over which has been erected a very beautiful carved wood screen, painted to represent caen stone and marble pillars, in canopied compartments extending from the north to the south walls, this is a novel feature in Masonic architecture, and has been erected to support a very handsome stained glass window, consisting of Masonic figures and emblems, expressly designed, not only as a means of decoration, but as displaying a series of subjects of a highly moral and instructive character, visible in the interior of the lodge room at night time as an elaborate transparency, illuminated by means of gas light, reflected from behind the screen. The architectural arrangement of the windows in the east gable having been strictly carried out in the screen, also renders the windows attractive during daylight as an excellent specimen of stained glass, consisting of four principal lancet-headed compartments, arranged as a twin lancet on each side of the beautiful crocketed canopy, forming the central portion of the screen above the Master's chair, which is pierced with suitable traceried forms, and filled with stained glass illustrations in the following order, viz.:—In the quatre foil at the apex is represented the All-seeing Eye within a halo of light, and surrounded by a circle significant of eternity. In the medallion below this, is a star of brilliant cut glass on an azure ground, and the aperture under the star displays the Masonic arms, motto, and supporters, appropriately executed on glass. The four lights consist of large figures within elliptical forms or niches, with richly coloured medallion emblems above and below, interlaced with suitable foliage ornamentations on a delicately tinted ground. The first figure depicts Hiram Abiff, Architect of the Temple, taking dimensions from a plan; the second figure is a representation of King Solomon, supporting a model of the Temple of Jerusalem; the third illustrates a majestic figure of Hiram, King of Tyre, bearing in his right hand the sceptre of power; and the fourth depicts a venerable figure of Moses holding in one hand the Tables of the Ten Commandments, towards which he points. The medallion emblems in the apex of the four lights are the terrestrial and celestial globes, and the sun and moon; below these are the emblems of Truth, Justice, Peace, and Industry; and in the base below the figures are symbolical illustrations of Faith, Hope, Charity, Brotherly Love, and Unity. Devices of a similar nature occupy positions in pierced trefoils, comprising the tracery surmounting the lights. The whole of the furniture, desks, and pedestals, are carved oak, of Gothic design, in strict harmony with the period of the building, and have been most artistically designed and executed, each chair and pedestal being a study in itself. The panels of the pedestals and desks are filled with plate glass, most effectively emblazoned with Masonic insignia, and the armorial bearings of the donors, viz., Earl Percy, Earl of Durham, and Geo. Elliot Esq., J.P., while the chairs on the dais have carved on a shield on the back the crests of the donors of the chairs, amongst whom is the Earl of Zetland.

The dedication ceremony was appointed to commence at three o'clock, and long before that hour the spacious hall was crowded with brethren. It had been expected that the Right Hon. Earl Percy, Prov. G.M. of Northumberland, would have been present, to preside, but indisposition prevented him from taking part in the proceedings. In his absence L. M. Cockcroft, Esq., D. Prov. G.M. of Northumberland, occupied the chair, and performed the ceremony of dedication in a most suitable and satisfactory manner. Shortly after three o'clock the Provincial Grand Officers entered the Lodge Room in procession, when they were received by the brethren according to ancient custom, and a grand march was performed on the organ. The D. Prov. Grand Master, who occupied the chair, was supported by Lord James Murray, Representative of the Grand Lodge of Scotland to the Grand Lodge of England, and the following brethren:

Bros. B. J. Thompson, Prov. G. Sec., acting as D.P.G.M.; W. Houlsham, Prov. G. Reg.; Rev. W. Greenwell, Prov. G. Chap.; Hubert Laws, Prov. G.S.D.; A. Clapham, P. Prov. G.S.W.; J. Hopper, P. Prov. G.S.W.; Thos. Anderson, Prov. G. Treas.; J. H. Thompson, P. Prov. G.D.C.; George Thompson, P. Prov. G.S.W.; H. Hotham, P. Prov. G.S.W., &c., &c. There were also present Bros. W. Dagget, P. Prov. G.S.W.; J. A. Hair, P.G.J.W.; Addison L. Potter, Prov. G. Supt. of Works; E. D. Davies, P.G.D.C.; I. de Hart, Prov. G. Asst. D.C.; R. Smaile, Prov. G. Purst.; J. S. Trotter, Prov. G. Tyler; G. R. Brewis, W. S. Hughes, J. H. Bentham, E. P. Sherwood, R. T. Brown, and Joseph Cook, Prov. G. Stewards, also Bros. J. Edminson, W.M. 24; T. S. Wraith, W.M., and Jonathan Cook, P.M. 424; Rev. J. Featherstone, P.M. of 431, St. Georges Lodge P. Prov. G.C.; J. T. Hoyle, P.M.; W. E. Franklin, P.M., and a large gathering of the members of Nos. 406, (Northern Counties Lodge), and 481 (St. Peter's Lodge), which hold their meetings in the new hall, including Bros. W. S. Hughes, W.M.; E. B. Grey, S.W.; T. Everett, J.W. of 406; H. J. Ludwig, P.M. 406; J. F. Frolich, P.M. 406; and J. Straker Wilson, W.M. 481; W. W. Smith, P.M. 481; J. D. Storey, Shafto Robson, J. Spearman, J. Oliver, S.D.; John Atkinson, J.D. 481; Captain Hunt and Charles Perkins, of Lambton Lodge.

Bro. B. J. Thompson, as the Representative of the D.P.G.M., addressed the acting P.G.M. upon the object of the meeting.

The Prov. G. Supt. of Wks. then presented the plan to the representative of the Prov. G.M., to which the Prov. G.M. replied, and requested the brethren to assist him in opening the Lodge. The Lodge was opened in due form, when the following prayer was offered up the Grand Chaplain, Bro. the Rev. W. Greenwell:

"Almighty and Eternal God, Great Architect and Ruler of the Universe, deign from Thy Celestial Temple, from Realms of Light and Glory, to bless us in all the purposes of our present Assembly. We humbly invoke Thee to give us at this and all times, wisdom in all our doings, strength of mind in all our difficulties, and the beauty of harmony in all our communications. Permit us, Thou Author of Light and Life, Great Source of love and happiness, solemnly to dedicate this Hall to Thy Honour and Glory. Finally, may we finish all our works here below with Thine approbation, may we then have our transition from this earthly abode to Thy Heavenly Temple above, there to enjoy Light, Glory, and Bliss ineffable.

The following Anthem was then sung by a most efficient choir, under the superintendance of Bro. Richard Watson, P. Prov. G.O., who also composed almost the whole of the music used at the ceremony.

ANTHEM.

Behold! how pleasant and how good,
 For Brethren such as we,
 Of the Accepted Brotherhood,
 To dwell in unity.

'Tis like the oil on Aaron's head,
Which to his feet distils,
Like Hermon's dew so richly shed
On Zion's sacred hills.

For there the Lord of light and love,
A blessing sent with power;
Oh! may we all this blessing prove
E'en life for evermore.

On Friendship's Altar rising here,
Our hands now plighted be,
To live in love with hearts sincere,
In peace and unity.

The usual procession was then formed, and the ceremony of dedication proceeded with, according to ancient custom. At its close the Chaplain offered up the following prayer:

"Oh Lord God, there is no God like unto Thee in Heaven above, or in the Earth beneath, who keepeth Covenant and sheweth Mercy unto Thy servants, who walk before Thee with all their hearts. Let all the people of the Earth know that we have consecrated and dedicated this Lodge to thy service. But wilt Thou, O God, dwell with man upon the earth; behold the Heaven of Heavens cannot contain Thee, yet have respect unto our prayers and to our supplications, and hearken unto our cry. May thine eye ever be opened towards this Lodge by day and by night, and when Thy servants shall pray towards Thee, hearken unto their supplications, hear Thou then in Heaven, and when Thou hearest forgive, for they be thy people and thine inheritance. After which the following Anthem.

HAYDN.

The spacious firmament on high,
With all the blue ethereal sky
And spangled heavens a shining frame;
Their great original proclaim.
The unwearied sun from day to day,
Doth his Creator's power display;
And publishes to every land
The work of an Almighty hand.

What though in solemn silence all,
Move round this dark terrestrial ball;
What though no real voice nor sound
Amid the radiant orbs be found.
In reason's ear they all rejoice
And utter forth a glorious voice,
For ever singing as they shine;
The hand that made us is Divine.

The Prov. G. Master then declared the temple dedicated and consecrated to Masonry, then followed this

ANTHEM.

Hail immortal Lord!
By heaven and earth adored,
All hail, great God;
Before thy name we bend,
To us thy grace extend
And to our prayer attend,
All hail great God.

The proclamation was made by the Provincial G.D.C. after which was a flourish of trumpets and organ. Bro. Foulsham, Prov. G. Reg. then delivered a most eloquent oration on the beauties and advantages of Freemasonry, the proceedings being brought to a close by the singing of the Anthem—

Praise God in His holiness;
Let everything that hath breath praise the Lord.

The lodge was then closed and the choir sang the National Anthem, while the brethren were leaving the lodge room.

The brethren afterwards sat down to a sumptuous banquet, served by Bro. Bell, of the Crown Hotel, in the banquetting hall. The usual toasts were given and responded to, interspersed with songs and glees by Bros. Watson, Dewar, Liddell, and Blenkinsop, and a most pleasant and harmonious evening was spent.

HISTORICAL NOTICE OF THE ST. CLAIRS OF ROSSLYN, GRAND MASTER MASONS OF SCOTLAND.

BY BRO. CHALMERS I. PATON.

The office of Grand Master Mason of Scotland was, for some centuries, hereditary in the family of the St. Clairs of Rosslyn, and some account of that family may naturally be desired by those who take an interest in Masonic antiquities.

It is not exactly certain at what time the title of Grand Master Mason began to be used; and in maintaining that the St. Clairs of Rosslyn held that office from the reign of James II. of Scotland to the year 1736, it is not necessary to show that any of them ever assumed or received that special title, but only that the office which they held was substantially the same which it is now employed to designate. In the progress and development of Freemasonry new titles and forms have been introduced, whilst the system remains essentially the same that it was in remote centuries.

The family of Sinclair of St. Clair (De Sancto Claro) is of Norman origin. The founders of the family in Britain came to England with William the Conqueror. Two branches of it settled in Scotland in the twelfth century, in the reign of David I., acquiring respectively the baronies of Rosslyn and Hermandstoun. The early history of the family, however, like that of nearly every other ancient family, is involved in much obscurity, which, as in other such cases, has been increased by legends inconsistent with each other and all destitute even of the semblance of probability. It is not necessary to follow some of the older genealogists, who without hesitation trace the Scottish St. Clairs to a French or Norman nobleman, called Waldonius or Wildernus, whose mother was daughter of Duke Richard of Germany, and who married a daughter of the Earl of March; for there is no evidence whatever of the truth of this story, which on the contrary may be confidently regarded as one of the mere inventions in the old family histories of Scotland. There are several places in France which bear the name of St. Clair, and it is probable that the Scottish family derived its descent from the lord of one or other of them, but there is no evidence to prove the connection or to shew from which place of this name in France the family name was taken. That the St. Clairs brought it with them from France to England may be deemed certain, also that they came to England in the train of William the Conqueror, and thence, like some founders of noble families in Scotland, proceeded to the more northern kingdom.

We are utterly destitute of authentic information, however, as to the circumstances in which their settlement in Scotland took place. In the annals of Cisteaux, by Angelus Manriquez, it is stated that in A.D. 1167, Hugh St. Clair, (Hugo de Sancto Claro) was excommunicated along with Robert De Lacy and Joceline De Balliol, by Saint Thomas of Canterbury, because of his intermeddling with the possessions of the church of Canterbury, and appropriating them to his own use, which proves that the family was at that date one of considerable power and consequence in England.

In Scotland, however, the first authentic and trustworthy notice of them is in a charter by which Roland, Earl of Galloway, granted the lands of Hermandstoun to Alan St. Clair, in confirmation of a previous grant by William de Moreville.

The charter bears no date, as in very ancient charters is often the case, to the annoyance of antiquarians; but as it is known that William De Moreville died in A.D. 1196, and that Roland, Earl of Galloway, who had married his sister, succeeded him in his estate, it may be deemed certain that it was granted in the end of the twelfth or the beginning of the thirteenth century. The original connection between the Hermandstoun and Rosslyn branches of the St. Clair family is not more apparent than the derivation of both from the St. Clairs who had previously settled in England, and who came from Normandy. The origin of the St. Clairs of Rosslyn can be clearly traced no further than the reign of Alexander II., when Henry of Rosslyn, the previous possessor, resigned his lands into the hands of the king, who disposed them to William St. Clair; and that the estate had already been for some generations in the family. It is not impossible that Henry of Rosslyn was himself a St. Clair, but it is not probable, as until the transaction just mentioned, the possessors of Rosslyn are merely designated from their estate, De Rosslyn, and afterwards the name St. Clair, De Sancto Claro, is always used, apparently as being deemed the more ancient and honourable. The first William St. Clair of Rosslyn was a man of no small consequence in his time. He was sent in A.D. 1285, along with Thomas Charteris, the Chancellor of the kingdom, Patrick de Grahame, and John de Sanley, to France, to seek a wife for King Alexander III., the result of which mission was the king's marriage with Joleta de Islandar, daughter of the Count of Drays. He was also present at Newcastle-on-Tyne, when John Baliol swore fealty to Edward I. of England, on 20th November, 1292.

He did not, however, attach himself decidedly to the cause of Baliol, but afterwards maintained the independence of his country; and signalized himself by his bravery in the battle of Rosslyn, which was fought on 24th February, 1302-3. At that time the Scots acknowledged John Baliol as king, but he and his people, refusing to submit to the claims of sovereignty arrogantly made by Edward I. of England, an English army, commanded by Sir John Segrave, whom Edward had appointed Governor of Scotland, advanced to Rosslyn, and the Scottish troops, under Sir John de Comyn, and Sir Simon Frazer, although far inferior in numbers, making a rapid march by night from Biggar, surprised them whilst it was yet dark, and totally routed them with great slaughter.

THE BATTLE OF ROSSLYN.

The Battle of Rosslyn was fought on the 24th of February, 1302. It was not unimportant in its bearing on the history and fortunes of Scotland. It was the chief victory which the Scots won over the English during the many years in which they maintained their contest for national independence against the superior forces of their southern enemy, until under Robert Bruce, they gained the decisive battle of Bannockburn.

It was the most inclement season of the year, when armies generally have been accustomed to shut themselves up in winter quarters, waiting for better weather before the re-opening of the campaign. But it suited the ardent spirit of the Scottish leaders, to take advantage of an opportunity when it presented itself, and they were the more readily successful, because the less alert English generals took for granted the absence of all danger.

Edward I. of England seemed to want little of the triumph which he desired in the permanent subjugation of Scotland. In the Battle of Falkirk, he had gained a great victory, and the whole country seemed to be prostrated. Sir William Wallace, indeed, still refused submission, and was at the head of a party actively hostile to the English king. His followers, however, were few in number, and it was on very unequal terms that they waged war against the forces of England, supported as these were, more or less completely, by the retainers of the Scottish nobles themselves, most of whom had given in their adherence to Edward and his cause. Edward had been successful in some of his negotiations with foreign potentates, as to the acknowledgement of his sovereign authority over Scotland, but had got into a dispute on this point with the Pope, Boniface VIII. Edward, supported by his Parliament, which met at Lincoln, in A.D. 1300, maintained that he had a right to sovereignty over Scotland, as an ancient fief of the English crown, and this without regard to the will of the Pope, or any other ecclesiastical or secular judge; whilst the Pope demanded that the whole question of right and sovereignty should be submitted to his decision. The dispute almost became a quarrel, but Edward was too prudent to quarrel with one so powerful as the Pope, and probably the Pope regarded the King of England with a somewhat similar feeling. Each maintained his own view of the question in dispute, and went on his own way as before. Edward proceeded in his efforts for the complete subjugation of Scotland; and it was not long until the Pope came round to his side, and commanded Wisheart, Bishop of Glasgow, one of the most zealous of Scottish patriots, to desist from all opposition to him, falsely declaring the patriotic bishop to be the "prime mover and instigator of all the tumult and discussion which had arisen between his dearest son in Christ, Edward, King of England, and the Scots." At the same time, the Pope addressed a bull to the Scottish Bishops collectively, commanding them to be at peace with Edward, and threatening penalties in case of disobedience.

Such was the state of things at the beginning of the year 1302. The prospects of Scotland were almost as gloomy as can be imagined. The Scottish patriots had no ally upon whom they could depend. Philip, King of France, had seemed likely to befriend them, but had thought it for his own interest to desert their cause, and make peace with the King of England. The heart of Scotland, however, was re-animated by the Battle of Rosslyn, and the future fortunes of the war, even to the crowning victory of Bannockburn, may be said to have depended upon it.

Edward had appointed Sir John De Segrave Governor of Scotland. He was a great English nobleman and warrior, distinguished by his former services in the field. Anxious to repress the Scottish patriots, who were everywhere rising in opposition to the English, he marched from Berwick-on-Tweed towards Edinburgh, with an army of 20,000 men, consisting chiefly of cavalry, and commanded by some of the most distinguished English knights and generals.

He reached Rosslyn unopposed, and was now only about six miles from Edinburgh. His army was divided into three parts, each division separated by a considerable distance from the other. This circumstance proved fatal to it in the battle which ensued, but still more fatal, and the immediate cause of disaster and rout, was the fancied security of the English. All were sleeping in their tents, when early in the morning of the 24th of February 1302, a boy rushed into the Governor's tent, and called out that the enemy was upon them. The Governor was with the first division of the army, and that division was speedily overthrown by the Scots. The Scottish army had marched from Biggar during the night, and came upon the English by surprise. The troops of Dumfriesshire, Ayrshire, and Clydesdale, had been gathered at Biggar, mostly, like their English adversaries, cavalry. They were under the command of Sir John Comyn, whom, until they should settle the question of the succession to the throne, the loyal and patriotic Scottish nobles had made Governor of Scotland, and of Sir Simon Fraser, of Oliver Castle, in Tweeddale, the head of a great old Scottish family, now represented by Lord Lovat, and connected with Invernesshire, instead of the south of Scotland. The Scottish forces made a forced march during the night from Biggar, to surprise the enemy at Rosslyn. The district through which they passed abounds in moor and bog, and doubtless bore even more of that character five centuries and a half since than it does now. It is to be borne in mind, however, that Scotland was in a more advanced state of agriculture and other arts, at the close of the reign of Alexander III. than it was two centuries afterwards. The long wars with England, and the subsequent border strife, which made a large district of the country the scene of disorder and violence for centuries, threw Scotland back to a degree not generally noted as it ought to be by historians, and from which it did not begin to recover till after the Reformation. The fact which we have on record that in the thirteenth century the Bishop of Glasgow had a country seat in one of the most remote parts of his diocese, in the south of Roxburghshire, and close to the frontier of England, clearly indicates a state of things very different from that which prevailed throughout the three following centuries, and there are traces of ancient cultivation in many parts of Scotland, where in our day the plough has not again been used. From Biggar the Scottish army must have crossed over a hilly upland tract to the valley of the Lyne Water, and proceeding up that valley, must have crossed the Lyne somewhere near the place now known by the name of Romanno Bridge, from which their course would be nearly the same with that of the great road now leading from Edinburgh to Dumfries, the Pentland Hills upon their left. Passing from the head waters of the Lyne to those of the North Esk, they must have descended along the banks of the river to Rosslyn. It was a daring exploit which the Scottish leaders undertook, and which, through the courage of their patriotic followers, they successfully performed. We must give them credit also for military skill and good generalship, as well as for heroism and patriotism. It is not to be supposed that they were ignorant of the manner in which the English Army had pursued its march from Berwick-on-Tweed, in three divisions, separated by considerable distances, and encamping separately at night, and, although well aware of the inferiority of their army, in point of numbers to the whole English force, it is evident that they calculated upon being able to fall upon each division by itself, in which case the advantage of numbers was upon their side. To accomplish this, it was necessary that the English should be taken by surprise, and therefore the rapid and long march from Biggar, the distance of which being about thirty miles, must have made the English Generals pretty confident that they were safe from sudden attack at Rosslyn, even if they were aware that a Scottish army had been assembled at Biggar. The darkness of the night favoured the enterprise of the Scots, and ere yet morning had dawned, the First Division of the English Army was attacked, and being completely taken by surprise, was routed almost without a conflict. The English had not time even to form their troops in order of battle, and many were slain in their tents, or before they could saddle and mount their horses. The First Division of the English Army was commanded by the Governor, Sir John de Segrave himself, and he was severely wounded and made prisoner. His brother also and his son fell into the hands of the victorious Scots. Those of the First Division who escaped, caused great confusion amongst the troops of the Second Division, to the camp of which they naturally fled. This division was commanded by Sir Ralph De Manton, often called, in virtue of his office of Paymaster, Ralph the Cofferer. The Scots, flushed with victory, rushed on impetuously to attack this Division, and although they met with more resistance from it, than they had from the First Division, the battle was soon fought and won, and the rout of the English was complete. There remained now only the Third Division, which was probably weakened and impeded, rather than strengthened and helped by the disorderly and disheartened fugitives from the First and Second. Not, however, being so completely taken by surprise as those of the First and Second Divisions had been, the English made a stout resistance, and the battle raged for a considerable time before the victory of the Scots was complete. Deeds of valour were performed on both sides. The commander of this Division was Sir Robert De Neville, a nobleman who had rendered important services to Edward in his Welch wars. At Rosslyn he rescued, by his personal gallantry, the English Governor, Sir John De Segrave, who, as has been already mentioned, had been taken prisoner by the Scots, and De Segrave escaped along with him and the shattered remains of his army into England. It is recorded that when De Segrave was informed of the attack which the Scots had begun to make upon his camp, he was advised by some of his officers to fall back upon the Second Division with such of his troops as could be collected, but this advice he rejected, as inconsistent with his knightly honour. What might have been the result if he had followed it, may be somewhat difficult to conjecture; yet it seems probable that the overthrow of the English would not have been so complete as it was, and the victory of the Scots would at least have been more dearly bought, especially if the Second Division of the English had been able to resist their onset until the Third could come up to their aid. It is to be regretted that we do not know the exact distances of the English Camps from one another. It is stated by historians, that on their march from Berwick-on-Tweed, the Three Divisions of the English Army were separated, the First from the Second, and the Second from the Third, by distances of four miles, but it is hard to suppose that even when they had no apprehension of immediate attack, they would encamp for the night in a hostile country, at distances so great, nor is this notion consistent with the uniform testimony of those who have transmitted to us an account of the battle, that it was fought at Rosslyn, no other place being mentioned as the scene of any of the three successive victories which the Scots obtained over their enemies.

It is painful to be compelled to mention that after the rout of the First Division of the English, and again after the rout of the Second Division, the Scottish generals felt themselves compelled, by reasons of military necessity, to give orders for the slaughter of the prisoners; but they dreaded that whilst they were engaged in battle with another body of the enemy in front, they might be assailed in the rear by the numerous prisoners who had fallen into their hands. We must not judge the conduct of the Scottish generals in this matter too severely, nor too hastily ascribe it to the barbarity of the age. Reasons of military necessity have been alleged, even in our own day, for deeds still more cruel, such as burning of defenceless villages, and the bombardment of towns where exploding shells scattered destruction among women and children. Amongst the prisoners who were put to death at Rosslyn, was Sir Ralph de Manton, the Cofferer, the Commander of the Second Division of the English army. He had been taken prisoner by Sir Simon Fraser; he begged that his life might be spared because he was a priest. "This laced handwork is no priestly habit," said Fraser. Where is thine albe or thy hood?" and forthwith he struck off the hands of the unfortunate priest, and then at one stroke severed his head from his body.

After their final victory, the Scots reposed from their fatigues upon the field of battle, and there also divided their booty, which was very great, and amongst these was, what the gallant Scots must have highly valued, much armour. They carried away with them many prisoners, amongst whom were some persons of considerable note, who, it is probable, were afterwards held to ransom, or advantageously exchanged for Scottish knights and nobles, prisoners in the hands of the English. No prisoners were put to death after the battle was over.

It has been much disputed among Scottish writers, whether Sir John Comyn or Sir Simon Fraser deserves the honour of the great victory at Rosslyn, but the arguments advanced on both sides are rather political than historical. The conduct of Sir John Comyn at the battle of Falkirk, and his ready submission to Edward I. in A.D. 1304, are urged as reasons against giving him credit for fighting well on behalf of his country at Rosslyn in A.D. 1302, but there is little force in these arguments. The probability appears to be that both the great Scottish chiefs, Comyn and Fraser, exerted themselves to their utmost in their country's cause, on the memorable day of the battle of Rosslyn, however they differed afterwards, as to the course to be pursued in the difficult political circumstances of the times.

It is much to be regretted that so few particulars respecting the battle of Rosslyn have been preserved, and that, with the exception of the leaders, Comyn and Fraser, we do not know the names of any of the Scottish nobles and knights who took part in it, and who had come with retainers to Biggar to fight for the deliverance of their country. It is not even recorded what part the Baron of Rosslyn himself took in the battle which was fought on his own domain and in the vicinity of his own castle. It is not improbable that he had contributed his aid already by holding his castle against the English, as we read nothing of its having been taken or retaken. The possession of it, a friendly garrison, must have been of no small advantage to the Scots, even although the garrison was not strong enough to send out a contingent to help the actual combatants. The Barony of Rosslyn was then in the possession of the family of St. Clair, in the hands of whose descendants and representatives it still remains. The beautiful chapel, one of the most perfect gems of ecclesiastical architecture in Scotland, did not then exist. It was erected in the following century by William St. Clair, Earl of Orkney, and of Caithness, and Baron of Rosslyn, one of the greatest Scottish nobles of his age, and a liberal patron of the arts, and especially of Masonry. The old castle of Rosslyn, however, the antiquity of which is unknown, occupied a commanding site on the left bank of the Esk, and was a place of such strength that it could be maintained for a long time by a resolute, although not very numerous garrison, even against a large army, well supplied with all the implements and engines of war which were then in use.

Sir William St. Clair was succeeded by his son, Sir Henry, whose name appears among the Barons of Scotland, in a letter written by them to the Pope, and dated from Aberbrothie (Arbroath) on the 6th April, 1320. In the letter he is styled Panetarius Scotie. (Baker of Scotland). It appears that this office, like other such offices connected with the Court, was bestowed on a person of high rank—as was the case in all courts at that time—the highest dignities being those which were connected with the supply of the wants of the king, or with personal attendance upon him. Thus we have the name Butler, long of high place in the British nobility, the name of Chalmers or Chambers (Camerarius) and many others, all of such origin.

And it appears from ancient charters, that Sir William St. Clair of Rosslyn obtained a grant of the baxter (baker) lands of Innerleith, from Alexander II., these lands having previously been in the possession of Nicolaus Pistor (i.e. Baker), and formerly, in the time of William the Lion, of Ailif, the King's baxter (baker.) Copies of the charters by which these lands were granted are to be seen in the Hay MSS. in the Advocates' library at Edinburgh. King Robert I. (Bruce) granted to Sir Henry St. Clair and his heirs a pension of forty merks from the national treasury, in compensation of the losses which he had sustained in the recent wars. This pension was confirmed by David II. to his son and heir, William St. Clair. King David also granted to William St. Clair the lands of Merton and Merchamston.

This William St. Clair appears to be the same Sir William St. Clair of Rosslyn, who, in the fourteenth century, married one of the daughters and co-heiresses of Malise, Earl of Strathearn, Caithness, and Orkney. His eldest son Henry had his claim to the earldom of Orkney admitted by Hako VI., King of Norway, in 1379; the islands of Orkney belonging at that time to Norway, and not to Scotland. Conditions, however, were imposed by the Norwegian King, of such a nature that if war had arisen between Scotland and Norway, Sir William St. Clair would have been unable to retain his possessions in both countries, military service being due by him to the kings of both. No war broke out, and the double allegiance does not seem to have ever been the cause of any difficulty.

William St. Clair was succeeded in the Earldom of Orkney, the Barony of Rosslyn, and all his possessions, by his son Henry St. Clair, who was sent as Ambassador from Scotland to Denmark in 1363, on occasion of the marriage of Hako, King of Norway, with Margaret, daughter of Waldemar, King of Denmark. Whilst at Copenhagen he married a sister of the King of Norway. He appears to be the same Henry St. Clair of Rosslyn who afterwards married Azidia Douglas, daughter of Lord Nithsdale, and by that marriage acquired the lands of Nithsdale, and the offices of Justice, Warden, Chamberlain, &c. He was a person of such consequence in his time, that in A.D. 1404, the care of the infant prince, afterwards James I., was entrusted to him.

"A few months ago I was suffering from inflammation of the throat, brought on by a severe cold, so that I could scarcely speak, and only with great difficulty swallow any food. I could get no permanent relief from any source until a friend induced me to try your Vegetable Pain Killer a few doses of which completely cured me.—J. MACK, 11 Gordon St., Liverpool.—To Perry Davis & Son, London, W.C."

BRO. LESSING AND HIS MASONIC CONVERSATIONS.

BY WAY OF COMMENTARY.—PART THE THIRD.

BY BRO. CRYPTONYMUS.

How long Ernest had been absent it is hardly possible to judge, save by inference, from the text of Conversation Four, but those who are aware of the strictness with which Masonic rites were enforced on the Continent during the middle and the latter half of the last century, will, I think, agree with me that, considering the circumstances, Ernest could scarcely have obtained more than the lowest degree of Johannite Masonry.

Indeed having regard to things as they are now—when less latitude is allowed in so many ceremonial observances of various kinds, it is the most probable of all assumptions, if indeed the petulance of Ernest does not evince the fact. Falk, calm, cool, collected, logical as before, meets his friend—now his brother. I have known men, and in that consists the charm of Lessing's honest setting down what he found, who have acted, and could not act otherwise, than did Ernest. It is hard to come back from a beautiful dream to a dull and leaden reality. If distance lends enchantment to the view, the mind of an enthusiastic generaliser recoils before the ugly and common-place, but necessary details. It is one thing to imagine, another to seek with fervour, and a third to work out the problem.

At this last task, the initiate, not finding everything within his grasp, in most cases, recoils—and at such times the advice of a judicious and experienced friend, "a cool hand," is invaluable. Such a cool hand we find in Falk. He commences by welcoming his friend, but Ernest abruptly replies to him—"I am angry, and little is wanting to make me angry with you." On his making himself know as a Brother, Falk shrugs his shoulders; this excites the susceptibilities of Ernest yet more. He avers that he has been misled. To this Falk replies in a tone of unaffected surprise, and Ernest in reply urges his case. He speaks of the desert wilderness into which he has been led—he complains of being stifled by the smoke—and Falk wisely counsels endurance, objects to being held responsible for Ernest's entrance into Masonry, calls him unjust, and plainly tells him how dangerous it is for some persons to become Freemasons, unless they have not only the letter but the spirit at heart. No brother of the Mystic Tie will be loath to admit that at times such a faltering of mind takes place, even among the best. The highest duties of Masonry may indeed be fulfilled without the mere name of Freemason. To this Ernest urges in answer that his friend knew how imaginative he was, how alluring the bait, however miserable the attainment, and reward. Falk, with his accustomed composure, answers him by retort, that he has soon become too tired to attain the bait, and justly adds that he had not been made aware of his friend's intentions, and further says that he would have dissuaded him, had he known anything about it. "Who would counsel the great go-cart to a headlong way because now and then he stumbles." And yet he comfortingly adds "by this road all have to pass."

I have a striking instance of the kind within my own experience, in which the initiate acted precisely in the impatient and unreasoning manner in which Ernest is here represented to have acted. How often we find that people will shudder back from certain states of thought because their imagination is not satisfied? I remember well, on the occasion of my own entrance into the order that I had to summon up much courage and self-possession, but still I feel that I need not fear to tread where the footsteps of so many good and great men had preceded me. I could faithfully follow the guidance of my friend, whom I afterwards found to be a brother. With some natures this may be difficult, but, in my case, as I expected no marvels, nothing in the supernatural or magical way, I can honestly confess I was not disappointed. It is not so much what Freemasonry is, as what the candidate, initiate, or companion can make of it. However impressive our ceremonies, and no brother will deny that they exercise a peculiar influence on the mind, it must not be forgotten that they are of human institution, and hence fallible. They represent, truly interpreted, the aspiration man naturally has beyond other animals for the Unseen and Unknown.

But to return to our conversation. Ernest describes the aspirations of his fellow noviciates. One is an alchemist, another a necromancer, and a third—receding into the dim past—would rehabilitate the Knights Templar. But this being stated, Falk smiles—a tolerant smile—knowing well, that even in such ideas there exists a healthy kernel. The art of making gold—an unsolved problem in chemistry—may or may not exist. The power of invoking spirits is a question hotly agitated in our own times, as any reader of the spiritualistic newspapers and magazines can see. The Philosopher's Stone, in a Masonic sense, is by no means a myth. And hence Falk is justified in saying that, "the very first—whosoever he be—who attains the Philosopher's Stone, becomes in the same moment a Freemason." And again he says, "spirits could never hearken to the voice of any, not a Freemason."

When Ernest objects to these serious utterances—Falk reassures him. The age of mystery has passed away, the secret of Freemasonry is unalterable from its magnitude. But its spirit is abroad everywhere, we can see it at work in a thousand forms—refining, humanising, and enlightening the world.

All secret societies, it may be safely taken for granted, have for their common object the desire, by certain means known to the founders, to benefit mankind. Even the Jesuit body, it is just to say, according to the views of Ignatius Loyola, had a benevolent object. Warped and destroyed, it stands out at the present day in its effect upon society. Thus it is with all societies, thus it was with the Templars; to attempt any re-establishment of that Order in our own time, upon the old basis, would be a retrograde movement, as restrictive now as it was in the days of Lessing. Ernest objects, and with some show of truth, that the Freemasons with whom he mingles will hear nothing of the glorious ideas Falk had pictured to him. The very principle of equality seems to be warped and lost, he urges, and social distinctions are rigidly kept up, and religious differences to a great degree maintained. Falk, however, reminds him, that the lodge stands in that relation to Freemasonry as the Church does to Faith. Falk had himself, though still a Mason, ceased to have any formal connection with the lodges, but at the same moment his mind remained instructed with the precepts he had imbibed at the time when he was in the same position that Ernest had now assumed.

Falk in his replies to Ernest shows a singular appreciation of the Spirit of Freemasonry, bidding the novice to wait, and look beyond the letter of the ceremonies. Those who have passed through the grades of the Johannite Masonry well know how grandly symbolical they are, and when, as I have witnessed them, they are performed with due solemnity, they cannot fail to make an enduring impression on the mind. As Freemasons, however, are not ascetics, as they do not segregate themselves from the general mass of mankind, but live and act and work in the midst of society, there is no reason for the non-affiliate to attach such awful mystery to that which is rumoured to pass in the sacred bosom of the lodge.

One side of the subject it seems to me has been little touched upon until of late years, and that is, its literary and archaeological value. The works of Findel and Rebold, and some of the essays of more recent date, are bringing this most interesting aspect of Masonic History into broad view. Some years ago, Ragon likewise published some eloquent and philosophic works on the more occult portions of the subject, still his speculations were not of the practical and concrete kind. At some future time, should an opportunity present itself, I propose to introduce the English reader to a large body of Masonic literature, the existence of which is hardly known in England. The literature of France and Germany is full of learned and admirable treatises on Masonry, and it is owing to the fact of their being often clothed in a kind of allegorical language, intelligible for the most part to a very small section of the Masonic public, that they have escaped the notice to which they are justly entitled. It is greatly to be regretted that such works are not sought after and placed in the safe keeping of the Grand Lodge authorities, for the pleasure and profit of the Craft at large. It seems sad that the library should be, comparatively speaking, in a wilderness. This, however, is perhaps extraneous to the matter we have in hand at the present time. Although when we are dealing with the Masonic literature of a century ago, the thought of such a "consummation devoutly to be wished", very naturally forces itself on the mind.

At the conclusion of Conversation Four, we leave Falk and Ernest on the point of mixing in the society of the guests of the former, and Ernest, in the company of his friend, will now see how Freemasons act beyond the circle of the lodge, in contiguity with those not actually belonging to the Order.

The remarks I shall have to make on Conversation Five are of that nature, that it will be most convenient to reserve them for a separate portion of the commentary, that portion of the inquiry involving questions of an historical and philological character, likely to provoke controversy, and certainly affording a field for courting discussion in which, some other of my brethren may desire to take part. Indeed, the bold statement of Bro. Lessing demands a thorough and careful examination at the hands of Masonic historians, being so much nearer to the time of the revival of Speculative Masonry, he may have had access to documents no longer in existence, and thence of high importance to the Craft at large.

I therefore close my present paper at this point, and shall proceed to give it all the consideration in the next portion of these comments, promising only that I have myself formed no pre-conceived notion on the topic of Conversation Five.

CRYPTONYMUS.

Original Correspondence.

GRAND LODGE.

(To the Editor of the Freemason.)

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—

I have just learned that a persistency is being kept up by a member of the Grand Lodge, in bringing forward motions quite ultra vires of all Masonic Law. It has always been recognised in all countries under every jurisdiction throughout the world, that equality is a landmark of Freemasonry and therefore unchangeable, so that in bringing forward a motion in Grand Lodge, it cannot be to rule one or two members of the fraternity, and exclude all others, this, to say the least of it, would be unfair. Surely the Grand Master and the permanent office-bearers of Grand Lodge can rule and govern their officials, without bringing forward a special motion or Bye-laws to that effect. I trust that members in the country districts, when coming up to Grand Lodge at next quarterly communication, on the 5th June, will take time to consider the question and will give their vote in support of justice.

A COUNTRY WORSHIPFUL MASTER.

PRACTICAL FREEMASONRY.

To the Editor of the Freemason.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—

Your correspondent, H. B. H., appears to be greatly hurt by my former letter, written as it was at a time of great mental depression, and under peculiar circumstances, it may have contained some expressions of acerbity, which I should very much regret, I considered, that, as a member of the Craft, I was at liberty to point out, what appears to me, a fault in our social Masonic system, and which opinion is certainly shared by many other brethren. I may be wrong, but it is most ungenerous of H. B. H. to brand me as a bad Mason, for doing what I conscientiously believed was right, or to charge me with a wish to traduce an order which I consider the noblest human institution in existence, but yet human, and necessarily fallible.

I never thought it was not the duty of a Mason to help, aid, and assist a brother in such a laudable undertaking as seeking employment, on the sound policy, "prevention is better than cure," and think that if influential brethren would consider the point, it would prevent many a drain on that magnificent testimony of Masonic worth, the Benevolent Fund.

Bro. H. B. H. has never experienced what it is to look for the wherewithal to sustain life, and although his letter proves him to be a true Mason, and prompted by a desire to defend Masonry, he must recollect that even scripture tells us that the best men do not always succeed, for "The wicked flourish as a green bay tree."

Trusting that Bro. H. B. H. will at least do me the justice of having written in the interest of the order, and accepting his offer of assistance most gratefully.

I am dear Sir and Brother,

Yours fraternally,

AN UNEMPLOYED P. M.

(To the Editor of the Freemason.)

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—

I this day chanced to see a copy of your paper, and in it a letter signed H. B. H., who complains that "P. M. Unemployed" has cast a slur on our order. I do not know the grounds of complaint made by "P. M. Unemployed" but as regards obtaining assistance, I could point out one instance which occurred to myself five years ago, I was laid on a bed of sickness, but unlike "P. M. Unemployed" I do not blame our order, but my peculiar circumstances at the time. At the present time I am, as I was then, in the midst of hundreds of Masons, many of whom I have no doubt could help me into employment, but I am amongst strangers (at Birmingham) and thousands of miles from my mother lodge. For five years I have struggled hard against poverty, sickness, and death, and at the present moment I have got as low, if not lower, than any Mason ever has been. This may sound strange, but it is true. I have never asked for assistance from Masons—save in the one instance mentioned above, but seeing H. B. H.'s letter, and truly brotherly offer to "P. M. Unemployed" (though not wishing to impose on H. B. H.) I am tempted to try if some brother who can, will help me out of the slough into which I have fallen.

I will in a letter send all particulars as to my circumstances, and I am confident that any Mason who hears my story will, if he can, assist.

S. W. UNEMPLOYED.

A letter addressed, S. W., Post office, till called for, Birmingham, will find me.

Birmingham, May 28th, 1872.

LODGE BENEVOLENT FUNDS.

(To the Editor of The Freemason.)

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—

Will you allow me, through the medium of your paper, to enquire from those of your subscribers, who have a benevolent fund attached to their lodges, what is the best plan of organising such a fund? and also, what are the most successful arrangements for its management? I shall be grateful to any such brother who will kindly forward me a copy of their Bye-laws, and will thankfully acknowledge the same.

Fraternally yours,

H. B. HODGES, P. M. 403.

Watton cottage, Hertford, Herts, May 27, 1872.

GRAND CONCLAVE.

(To the Editor of the Freemason.)

SIR, AND BROTHER,—

I have been looking in vain for some account of the proceedings of the Grand Conclave of Knights Templar, which was held at the Cannon street Hotel, on the 10th May. The Freemason is now the recognised organ, as I take it, of Freemasonry in the United Kingdom, and we naturally expect to find in it reports of all the Grand Bodies connected with it, either in the Craft, the A. and A. Rite, or the Chivalric Orders. I am quite well aware that many Templars disclaim the intimate connection of their order with the Craft—but so long as Royal Arch Masons are alone eligible for promotion to the ranks of the Knights Templar—so long must the order of the Temple and Hospital be considered a Masonic body. Can you not prevail upon the powers that be to furnish you, though late, with some account of the doings on the 10th ult., for the benefit of the 120 Encampments under the banner of Sir Knight William Stuart.

Yours fraternally,

AN EMINENT COMMANDER.

CONSECRATION OF A MARK LODGE AT MARYPORT.

A very interesting ceremony in connection with Mark Masonry took place on Thursday the 22nd ult., at Maryport. A number of the Craft brethren there have long been anxious to have a Mark Lodge in connection with the English Grand Lodge, and through the perseverance and labours of a few, their efforts have been crowned with success, and the Whitwell Lodge of Mark Master Masons has been established under very favourable auspices. The brethren assembled at the Freemasons' Hall, when the effective and interesting ceremony of the consecration of the new lodge was gone through very finely by V. W. Bro. Binckes, G. S., Grand Lodge Mark Masters, of England, P. G. S. Bro. Binckes then invested Bro. Nicholson, as the first W. M. in his usual impressive manner, after which the following brethren were balloted for, elected, and advanced to the degree of Mark Master Mason. Bros. James Gardiner, Robert Brown, Joseph Abbot, Thos. Moore, Quintin Moore, G. M. Tickle, the Rev. W. Beeby, G. Rule, David Bell, Joseph Carter, W. G. Wallis, and Price. The W. M. then appointed his officers as follows:—Bros. P. de Collin, S. W.; J. R. Tickle, J. W.; W. G. Wallis, M. O.; James Gardiner, S. O.; W. H. Tickle, J. O.; G. M. Tickle, Reg. of Marks; John Adair, Treas.; John Lawson, Sec.; Geo. Rule, S. D.; R. Brown, J. D.; Rev. W. Eedy, Chaplain; Quintin Moore, I. G.; and R. Mac Bride, Tyler.

At the conclusion of the business, the brethren sat down to an excellent and well prepared dinner, served by Bro. mine host of the Senhouse Arms, to which due justice was done. On the removal of the cloth, the chair was taken by Bro. Nicholson, W. M., and the vice-chair by Bro. P. de Collin, S. W., under whose presidency a few hours were very Masonically spent.

Amongst the visiting brethren present were: V. W. Bro. F. Binckes, G. S.; W. Bros. G. Busher, W. M. 60; G. G. Hayward, P. M. 60; and Bros. Johnston, P. M. 60; and McMechan, I. G. 60. V. W. Bro. Binckes spoke at some length and with great weight on the subject of Mark Masonry, and was listened to with much attention by the brethren.

Bros. Busher and Porter also made a number of practical remarks, and were much applauded.

Song and speech varied the proceedings, and the brethren at Maryport cannot but look with satisfaction at the first Mark Master Masons' meeting in connection with the Grand Lodge of England, held at Maryport, graced as it was especially by the presence of Very Worshipful Bro. Binckes, Grand Secretary of England.

THE TRANQUILITY AND CONFIDENCE CHARITABLE ASSOCIATION.—At a meeting of the members of the above society the following brethren were elected as officers for the year, viz.:—Bros. E. Gottheil, P. M. 141, President; Harfield, P. M. 185, V. P.; Bloomfield, W. M. 185, Treasurer; Constable, J. D. 185, Secretary. A committee of twelve was also chosen, whose business it will be to adjudicate upon any matter of dispute, and whose decision will be final. The officers immediately entered upon their duties, and two Life Governorships were balloted for. The successful members were Bros. Dukes, of Lodge 15, and Dare of 185. The next ballot will take place on the fourth Wednesday in June next.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS.—Reflect that many men and many means had formerly fruitlessly endeavoured to combat the most common complaints: whereas now it is well known to all persons who suffer from bilious headaches, disordered stomach, biliousness or flatulency, these Pills, never fail them as the safest, best, and quickest mode of obtaining ease, without weakening or irritating the nervous system. Holloway's Pills are especially useful in clearing away any excess of bile, which usually produces fever, nausea, distension, diarrhoea or colic, unless remedial measures be adopted without delay. In asthma, bronchitis, and congestion of the lungs, they may be relied upon for removing danger; and, by regulating the circulation they prevent relapses.—ADVT.

NOTICE.

The Subscription to THE FREEMASON is now 10s. per annum, post-free, payable in advance.

Vol. I., bound in cloth	4s. 6d.
Vol. II., ditto	7s. 6d.
Vol. III., ditto	15s. 0d.
Vol. IV., ditto	15s. 0d.
Reading Cases to hold 52 numbers ...	2s. 6d.

United States of America.

THE FREEMASON is delivered free in any part of the United States for 12s. per annum, payable in advance.

Answers to Correspondents.

J.D.—1. Some Provincial Grand Lodges interdict the practice of residents within their jurisdictions being initiated in lodges held in other Masonic provinces, and as a general rule the regulation is both wise and proper. But, if there is no positive prohibition on this head, under the circumstances stated, there can be no objection to the initiation of a candidate known and vouched for an "irreproachable character." 2. A regular Lodge of Instruction cannot be formed without the sanction of the parent lodge, but we can see no reason why a W.M., who is obligated to instruct the members of his lodge, should not avail himself of every reasonable opportunity of perfecting the officers and brethren generally, in the various ceremonies of the Craft.

W.M.—H. Bridges, Marquis of Carnarvon, and afterwards Duke of Chandos, was Grand Master in 1738. His son James, also Duke of Chandos, attained the same dignity in 1754, and retained it for two years.

The Freemason,

SATURDAY, JUNE 1, 1872.

The Freemason is published on Saturday Mornings in time for the early trains.
The price of the Freemason is Twopenny per week; annual subscription, 10s. (payable in advance.)
All communications, letters, &c., to be addressed to the Editor, 108, Fleet-street, E.C.
The Editor will pay careful attention to all MSS. entrusted to him, but cannot undertake to return them unless accompanied by postage stamps.

FREEMASONRY AND ISRAELITISM.

AN EPITOME OF BRO. CARPENTER'S ARTICLES ON THIS SUBJECT.

By W. E. N., No. 766.

(Continued from Page 288.)

No. XXII. Nov. 18th, 1871. Bro. Carpenter refers, at some length, to an article (published in the Freemason) by an anonymous writer, on "The Israelitish origin of the Anglo-Saxon race." The national captivity of Israel is foretold by Ahijah to the wife of Jereboam, (1st Kings, xvi., 15, 16.) The prophet threatened, that for their disobedience to the Divine Will, God shall "root up Israel out of this good land which he gave to their fathers." With this language, the writer of the second Book of Kings fully agrees, so that it is clear that there was to be an uprooting of the nation, who were finally "removed out of God's sight so that there was none left, but the tribe of Judah only." Chapter xvii., 18, 22, says, "so was Israel carried away out of their own land into Assyria unto this day." It is probable that this Second Book of Kings was written in the time of Ezra, after the return of the Jews from Babylon. If so, we have evidence that at that time the ten tribes were beyond the Euphrates. Josephus also, who wrote about A.D. 93, says, "the entire body of Israel remain beyond the Euphrates, and are an immense multitude." Jerome, writing in the fourth century A.D., says, the ten tribes in his time inhabited the cities of the Medes. The numbers actually carried away have been greatly over-estimated. The Kingdom of Israel had been for more than 200 years involved in intestine feuds, and was also afflicted with famine. The numbers therefore that are mentioned in the sacred history doubtless require some correction. There are many passages in the sacred narrative, in which errors in numbers are self-evident. These errors arise from the similarity of the Hebrew numerals to each other. In fact, the mode of notation employed by the Hebrews and other orientals is uncertain, if not unknown.

No. XXIII. Nov. 25th, 1871. One of the most remarkable traits in the Israelitish character was their proneness to start aside from the Divine ordinances, and lapse into idolatry. In the very midst of the solemn covenant on Mount Sinai they made a golden calf, in imitation of the Egyptian Apis; and numerous other relapses to idolatry occurred down to the time of Solomon. After the disruption of the Hebrew kingdom, Israel sinned to a much greater extent in this way than Judah. Israel, after their deportation, continued their idolatrous course, notwithstanding their terrible punishment, and Ezekiel, 130 years after says, (Chap. xxxvi. 22, 23), "Thus saith the Lord, I will sanctify my great name which ye have profaned in the midst of the heathen." Israel lost the knowledge of the true God, and sunk lower and lower in superstition. The idolatry of the Saxons was of a gross form, and was doubtless formed upon tradition of their old faith and worship. The Saxons were acquainted with the doctrine of one Supreme Deity. Once they esteemed it impious to make any representation of this Great Being, or to imagine he could be confined in a temple, but a change in this respect arose in their minds on receiving from the East a mighty conqueror as their God in human nature, corresponding to the expected Messiah of Israel. This God Wodin they placed in a kind of ark, as in imitation of that of Jerusalem. Near Wodin they placed Friga, and between them Thor. Then there was Tuisco, and by the side of Friga was Seater, then the image of the sun, and at the other extremity, a representation of the moon. Before the ark, in the holy place, stood an altar with the holy fire continually burning, and near it a vase for receiving the blood of the sacrifice, and a brush to sprinkle it on the people. They had a temple for the whole nation, and twelve priests, presided over by a high priest. In addition they had groves for rural worship, as was practised in Israel. This commingling of truth and error, this union of Hebrew ceremonies with the worship of idols, was one of the remarkable traits of the Saxon race, as it was in ancient Israel. At the time when Mohamedanism was making rapid strides in the world, the Anglo-Saxons were converted to Christianity, and ultimately became its most constant and efficient teachers. But in the East, Christianity became corrupted and degenerated into a kind of idolatry, the Virgin Mary being invested with the name and honours of a goddess. At this juncture Mohamet arose and erected his throne on the ruins of Christianity.

Near the end of the sixth century, Pope Gregory sent Augustine to England, and he, by adapting the doctrines of the Church to the Saxon superstitions, converted Ethelbert, and the whole nation soon after adopted the Christian faith in which were mingled numerous superstitions. The Papacy gradually exalted itself, and its pretensions were submitted to by the Southern nations of Europe. Not so, the Anglo-Saxons and Noruans who would not acknowledge the Popes' supremacy without important limitations. The Popes had many fierce struggles with kings and people, but were unsuccessful, until John succumbed to the Papacy, and agreed to pay tribute to the Pope, England thus becoming a fief of Rome, and its king a vassal. This state of things did not last long, as the Barons disgusted by John's submission, joined with the people, and extorted from him Magna Charta, which was afterwards annulled by the Pope, and revoked by the king; but the people would not submit to the yoke, and after a sanguinary struggle they triumphed. This great Charter was often violated by the kings, nobles, and popes, sometimes Pope and king against nobles and people, and sometimes Pope against king and people, but the great charter still remained the bulwark of the peoples liberties.

No. XXIV., Dec. 23, 1871. Papal domination culminated in the thirteenth century. Rome then inspired all the ancient terror of her name, and was once more the master of the world. The promulgation of canon law on the authority of the Pope, tended to secure this dominion. Ecclesiastical was superior to temporal power, and asserted absolute independence of it. This was followed by the institution of the mendicant order of friars.

In the reign of Edward III. the hierarchy had so entrenched itself in privileges, as to be above all secular jurisdiction, and no civil penalty could be inflicted upon any member, even for treason.

These pretensions raised the nation against the Church, and Parliament asserted that the usurpation of the Pope caused all the miseries, plagues, famines, and poverty that afflicted the nation. Parliament petitioned the King not to employ any churchman in any office of the state, and even spoke of forcibly expelling the Papal authority from the country. Similar, but more sanguinary contests took place in Germany, between the ecclesiastical and civil powers. In the fourteenth century, Pope John deposed, excommunicated, and imprisoned, the Emperor Louis, and John's successor confirmed all his acts, but the Princes of the Empire established the famous constitution, declaring that the electoral college could appoint to the Imperial dignity without the sanction of the Pope. The contest was renewed by successive Popes, but they were baffled. The Popes solemnly claimed the power of disposing of crowns, and of releasing nations from their allegiance, and also of absolving individuals from moral duties, and pardoning all offences and crimes, and by the sale of indulgences, assumed the power of releasing the living and the dead from punishment in this world and the next. The revolting profanity of this sale of indulgences, for the purpose of raising a revenue for the Papacy, produced great indignation in this country, as well as in Germany and throughout Europe.

In England the labours of Wycliffe and his followers prepared the people for a revolt against Rome. The Bible had been read in the English tongue, and this branch of the Saxon family hailed the progress of the Reformation among their Continental kinsmen.

At this critical juncture, an infatuated Pope (Clement VII), threatened the Emperor Charles of Germany with excommunication, when the latter turned towards the Protestant Princes. The Turks at the same time invaded Hungary, and Charles, instead of marching with the Pope against the Reformation, marched with the Reformation against the Pope. During these transactions in Germany, religious truth dawned upon other Saxon nations. A quarrel of the King of England, (Henry VIII), with the Pope, about his divorce from Queen Catherine, induced him to renounce the jurisdiction and supremacy of the Pope; and Parliament and people, impatient of a foreign yoke, declared the King the head of the Church of England. The monasteries were suppressed and their revenues seized, and the Papal authority overturned.

Thus, while the rest of the civilized world was brought into bondage, its intellect blighted, and its religious aspirations perverted by a power assuming to be Christian, it may be said that "darkness covered the earth, and gross darkness the minds of the people." The Saxon nations were being prepared to combat these mischievous powers. It had been said before "O Israel thou art my servant in whom I will be glorified," "for with those who contend with thee I will contend, and their children I will deliver." The deliverance was not to come from the Celtic, but the Saxon race, the descendants of Israel. These were "to deliver the spoil from the terrible" (Isa. xlv. 25) and "from the midst of them was to break forth a strong light, and her salvation like a blazing torch, and nations shall see thy righteousness, and kings thy glory, and thou shalt be called by a new name." (Protestant?)

The reformation having abridged the power of the Papacy, and deprived it of many of its subjects, a new power arose (the Jesuits). This society sought by every means to extend the power of the Papacy, and by their energy and activity in furthering their ends, they roused the hostility of various nations. The society was abolished in 1773, but re-established in 1814, and the present Pope became fascinated by their ambitious designs. The Œcumenical Council of 1870, claimed the highest ecclesiastical and political supremacy ever claimed by the Papacy. But as the Saxons resisted Papal usurpation in the sixteenth century, so do they seem determined to do so now. The doctrine of the Pope's infallibility has raised a flame in Germany, which threatens more mischief to Rome than any occurrence since Luther's time. Ecclesiastical excommunications are set at nought, and priests minister and people listen in spite of them. Many of the German Bishops saw nothing but danger and trouble to Rome in the dangerous doctrine of infallibility, and some prophesied it would cause schism in the church and bitter hatred outside of it. Vaulting ambition has thus overleaped itself, and now Rome has lost all her temporal possessions. The Germans, our Saxon kinsmen have again the distinction of rousing the nations to a sense of the danger with which they are menaced.

(To be concluded in our next.)

REPORTS OF MASONIC MEETINGS.

Craft Masonry.

METROPOLITAN.

HONOUR AND GENEROSITY (No. 165).—The regular meeting of this lodge took place on the 21st inst. at the London Tavern, and was well attended. Bro. R. Ramsay, W.M., assisted by Bros. W. B. Church, S. Ward, J. Lemon, J.W. and the rest of the officers, raised Bro. J. S. Thomson to the sublime degree; the ceremony was worked in a most able manner, and gave great satisfaction to all present. It was decided to hold the summer meeting at the Crystal Palace early in July, when Bro. E. S. Earle, I.P.M. will be presented with a P.M. jewel voted from the funds of the lodge. There were present Bros. C. J. Prideaux, Q.C.; H. Cole, Q.C.; I. M. Cherer, T. W. Smith, all P.M.'s of the lodge, and several other brethren. Bro. Richards, 1228, returned thanks for the visitors, and after a most agreeable evening the brethren separated.

EUPHRATES LODGE (No. 212).—The regular meeting of this ancient lodge took place at Mason's Hall Tavern, Basinghall-street, E.C., on Wednesday, the 22nd inst. There were present:—Bros. Wm. Field, W.M.; T. Hammond, S.W.; T. Rusleton, J.W.; H. Franks I.P.M.; S. Watkins, Treas.; J. Cowley, Sec.; H. May, S.D.; W. J. Barrett, J.D.; C. G. Cutler, I.G.; D. Swabe, P.M.; L. Stein, P.M.; and about forty brethren. The W.M. having conducted the preliminaries, important business obliged him to leave the lodge for a short time, during which Bro. Stein, P.M., presided, and advanced to the second degree Bros. Blackwell, Hawksworth, F. Smith, and Green. The ceremony was very ably performed. Upon his return, the W.M. resumed the chair, and admitted into the Order Mr. Wm. Stein. The abilities of the W.M. are so well-known amongst his acquaintances, that comment would be entirely superfluous. A resolution, worthy of imitation in every Freemason's lodge, to present initiates with a copy of the Book of Constitutions was carried without dissent. At an early hour the brethren adjourned to partake of refreshment, provided by Bro. Gosden, in a manner which elicited the hearty approval of the whole assemblage. The usual toasts, given in a loyal and earnest manner, called forth genial responses, and a variety of songs by different brethren served to vary the proceedings, which were concluded by the Tyler's Toast. The visitors were:—Bros. D. Davis, 141; T. Mortlock, P.M. 1016; W. E. Moore, 534; C. W. Ashdown, 1076; J. Cox, I.G., 1310; E. Benjamin, 161; J. Ward, P.M. 1136; and M. Davis, I.G. 141.

PANMURE LODGE (No. 720).—The installation meeting of this lodge was held at the Balham Hotel, Balham, on Monday, the 22nd ult., when there were present:—Bros. H. F. Huntley, W.M.; H. F. Hodges, S.W.; T. Poore, J.W.; H. Payne, S.D.; C. Pulman, J.D.; W. Withall, I.G.; J. Maddern, D.C.; John Thomas, P.M.; also Bros. Woolf, Duck, Cackett, G. Lilley, Trussler, Cumin, Holmes, Lane, Leonard, Smith, Mansell, and visitors Bros. James Stevens, P.M. 720, and 1216; Platt, P.M. 144; Larham, 1216; and Huddleston, 973. The degree of Master Mason was conferred separately on Bros. Cumin, Smith, and Leonard. Bro. John Thomas, P.M., then took the chair, and in his usual able and impressive manner, installed Bro. H. F. Hodges as W.M., for the ensuing year. The customary address having been given after investment of officers, the lodge was closed, and the brethren adjourned to a capital banquet provided for the lodge by Bro. Lilley in his usual liberal manner, and with abundant service. On the cloth being cleared, the usual loyal and Masonic toasts were duly honoured, and on that of the health of Bro. Huntley, the I.P.M., being proposed the W.M., presented to that brother an elegant P.M. jewel, recording the thanks of the lodge for his past services. Bro. Huntley returned thanks in expressive terms, and congratulated the brethren on the greatly improved position of the lodge. "The Visitors" received a cordial reception, and each replied for himself. Bro. Stevens, at the request of the brethren reciting "Mason's Vows," to the great gratification of all present. Some excellent singing was interspersed with the remaining toasts, and a most agreeable evening concluded, at a reasonable hour.

ROYAL OAK LODGE (No. 871).—On Thursday 25th ult., at the White Swan Tavern, 217, High Street, Deptford, an emergency meeting of this well established lodge was held, Bro. J. W. Reed, W.M., presided, and he was supported by Bros. W. Wyatt, S.W.; G. Andrews, J.W.; W. Andrews, P.M. Treas.; F. Walters, P.M. Sec.; S. O. Lavin, S.D.; H. J. Tuson, J.D.; J. J. Pakes, I.G.; R. Harmon, D.C.; F. G. Skinner, W.S.; B. James, P. C. H. Wilkie, R. Killick, W. Shaw, J. Woollet, W. A. R. Harris, J. G. Vohman, H. J. Dawe, C. Wood, R. Deal, J. H. Wilson, &c. The visitors were Bros. G. Chapman, P.M. Sec. 471; J. A. Smith, 548; H. Daly, 1194; W. F. Payne, 1326, &c. The candidates for the several degrees being unavoidably absent, the only business done, was taking the ballot for Mr. John Baxter Langley, as a candidate for initiation into the order, and which was declared to be in favour of his admission. There being only one dissent to him, it was remarked with truth and justice, that there never had been during the existence of the lodge, such a large number of members who voted for the admission of any candidate for initiation into Freemasonry as on this occasion. It proved and showed the great desire of such a large number of members to welcome Mr. Langley into Freemasonry, had it have been possible for him to attend. The lodge was closed. Banquet was served.

FINSBURY LODGE (No. 861).—The installation meeting of this prosperous lodge was held on Friday, May 24th., at Bro. Bonds, Jolly Anglers, Bath-street, Finsbury, when Bro. W. Mackney, the retiring W.M., installed his successor, Bro. Stokes, in the chair of K.S., the ceremony being performed in a very creditable manner. The officers were then appointed as follows:—Bros. Meanwell, S.W.; Adell, J.W.; H. Thomas, S.D.; Segg, J.D.; Froom, I.G.; Owens, W.S.; and Hirsch, D.C. The portrait of Bro. Alfred Day, P.M., founder and Treasurer, was then unveiled, it is a splendid likeness, (painted by Mr. Bates), and every member of the lodge was presented with a carte-de-visite copy, which evidently gave great satisfaction. Notice of motion for the removal of the lodge to more commodious premises was given, and after the resignation of an active member, who will be greatly missed, especially in debates upon the business of the lodge, in which his clear and impartial judgment, combined with his admirable tact, great command of temper, and general saunty and kindness of disposition, had endeared him to all, had been read and accepted, the lodge was closed, and the brethren adjourned to refreshment.

BURGOYNE LODGE (No. 902).—The ordinary meeting of this highly prosperous lodge, held on Monday the 27th inst., at Anderton's Hôtel, derived a melancholy interest from the fact of its being the first assemblage of the brethren since the recent death of their late esteemed Secretary, Bro. Scotcher, P.M. 55, a brief obituary account of whom appeared in our impression of the 20th ult. The W.M., Bro. W. Simmons, having taken the chair, supported by his Wardens, Bros. Rogers and Field, and a goodly assemblage of P.M.'s, officers, members, and visitors, proceeded to open the lodge (which was draped in solemn black), and then, in due form, passed to the Fellow-Craft degree Bros. Gilbert and Jeffries and admitted to the light of Masonry, Messrs. Silvani, Clerke, Merchant, and Burt. Bro. Simmons was then relieved in his duties of W.M. by Bro. Henry Smith, I.P.M., who, in a very impressive manner, performed the ceremony of raising for Bros. Ludlow and Allen. In proposing a vote of condolence to the family of the late Bro. Scotcher, Bro. Poynter, Treasurer and P.M., spoke of the relevancy of part of the evening's proceedings to the melancholy nature of the duty he had then to perform, and highly eulogised the teachings of an institution which, symbolically depicting the mysteries and painful entrance of a man upon this his mortal career, conducted him through his busy transit and in his ambitious and vigorous search after knowledge as he passed through this world, and did not shrink from the solemn task of constantly reminding him of his duty to prepare for another sphere of labour; frequently presenting to him in a most striking manner, emblematical—but none the less impressive—suggestions of his ultimate inevitable destiny. After a high encomium upon Bro. Scotcher's Masonic career, Bro. Poynter concluded by reminding the brethren, that if the contemplation of the close of this his mortal life could never be for any great length of time absent from the mind of a Mason, to him more peculiarly was the great lesson taught that as men we sorrow not without hope, and that our blessed institution emphatically proclaims over the whole of the Great Creator's kingdom the sublime truth that the black cloud of a certain corruption is lined with the silver glory of a promised immortality. The speaker, who had at intervals during his address been visibly affected, resumed his seat amidst the evident emotion of the brethren, and was followed by the father and founder of the lodge, Bro. Wigginton, P.M. 902, and 1298, who eloquently seconded the resolution, and spoke briefly, but highly, of the great assistance he had derived from Bro. Scotcher in the foundation of the lodge more than ten years ago. The resolution was carried unanimously, the brethren upstanding, and evincing every mark of respect and reverence, and, the lodge having been closed, the brethren adjourned to banquet, where the esteemed W.M. presided with that urbanity and cordiality of manner which is not the least of his distinguishing characteristics, and which elicited the warm applause of the brethren in the reception given to his health, when ably proposed by I.P.M. Bro. Henry Smith. In responding to the toast of his health as Treasurer, Bro. Poynter, recommended the younger brethren to have but one horse and one hobby, and, if they rode their business horse hard, not to fear indulging in numerous refreshing canterers on their recreative hobby, and, he assured them, that a more harmless, nay a more useful and wholesome, hobby than Masonry could not be found. During the evening the memory of the departed Secretary was drank upstanding, and in solemn silence. This lodge has now adjourned for the recess, as, "emergencies excepted" there will, according to its bye-laws, be no further meeting until the fourth Monday in October next, which will commence the winter session.

CORNWALL.

PROVINCIAL GRAND LODGE.

A meeting of the Prov. Grand Lodge of Cornwall was held on Thursday, the 23rd ult., at the Royal Hotel Falmouth, "for the purpose of furthering the progress and good of Masonry generally, and in that neighbourhood especially, and advising with the brethren as to the mode, method, and measures most likely to promote that end."

There were present at the meeting:—Bros. Augustus Smith, Provincial Grand Master; Reginald Rogers, Past and Acting D.P.G. Master; W. H. Jenkins, S.G.W.; E. T. Carlyon, P.G. Sec.; the Rev. J. L. Church, Chaplain; and Bros. T. Solomon, P.M. 331, P. Prov. S.G.W.; W. J. Johns, P.M. 131, P. Prov. G.R.; Richd. Johns, P.M. 131, P. Prov. G.D.C.; J. Chirgwin, P.M. 131, P. Prov. J.G.W.; S. Jacob, P. Prov. Supt. of Works; J. A. Spargo, P.M. 967; H. J. Ridsen, H. Jepson, P.M.; G. L. Church, W.M. 699, A.P.G. Chaplain; John Paull, P.M. 699, P. Prov. G. Supt. of Works; S. Holloway, J.M. 131, P. Prov. G.S.D.; J. Ninness, P.M. 699, P. Prov. G. Reg.; S. Harvey, P.M. 151, P.G. Purst.; F. H. A. Wright, P.M. 331, P.G.C.; W. Manser, P.M., 967; R. A. Courtenay, W.M., 510; Thomas Gill, P.M., 967; W. Hosken, P.G. Organist, 967; Ed. Jennings, S.W., 967; A. Vine, J.D., 967; R. Hosken, Acting Steward, 967; E. A. Sanderson, P.M. 331, P. Prov. G.S.; C. Trevithick, W.M., 1272; Jacob Grigg, G.S., 496; W. Middleton, S.W., 131; G. B. Zuppelin, P.M.; F. Dinnis, P.M., 75; John Vivian, P.M., 75; W. H. Jenkins, P.M. 331, P. Prov. S.G.W.; E. T. Carlyon, P.M. 331, P.G. Sec.; R. Rogers, P.M. 331, D.P.G.M.; E. R. Gay, P.G. Tyler, 121; S.

Mitchell, P.M., 699; W. Rusden, 75; W. K. Bullmore, T. Shilson, W.M., 75; W. H. Lean, and W. Rooks, P.G. Purst., 131.

The object of the meeting was to consider the advisability of opening a new lodge in Falmouth, and after the P.G. Sec., (the lodge having been opened in due form first,) had informed the lodge of letters from Bro. Lord Eliot and others relative to their absence, the P.G. Master explained this object, and invited discussion.

Bros. Jacobs and Bullmore were the principal speakers in favour of the new lodge, and, referring to a discussion that had occurred in the old Lodge of Love and Honour, pressed the necessity of a new lodge. Considering the size of Falmouth, the largest town in the county, they thought it could well bear another lodge, especially as there were a large number of Masons unattached to any lodge. Truro, though with a smaller population, had two lodges, which were found to work admirably together, and they considered that the establishment of another lodge at Falmouth would prove a benefit to the cause of Freemasonry.

On the other hand, it was urged by the W.M. of the present lodge and his supporters, that the brethren should throw aside all differences, and meet amicably, as they were ready to receive them, and that the addition of another lodge would prove detrimental to the present one, the oldest in the county.

Several matters irrelevant to the exact question in debate, but yet closely connected with it, crept in, and prolonged the discussion, but it being concluded, the Provincial Grand Master summed up the different arguments. The question will be well considered by him, and his decision probably made known at the next provincial meeting.

The lodge was then closed, and the brethren adjourned to an excellent dinner, prepared for them in another room of the hotel.

MIDDLESEX.

HAMPTON.—Lekanon Lodge (No. 1326).—The regular meeting of this flourishing lodge was held on Wednesday, the 22nd ult., at the Red Lion Hotel, Hampton. Bro. S. Wickens, W.M., at a few minutes past three, opened the lodge. The minutes of the previous meeting were read and unanimously confirmed. The ballots for the candidates for initiation, taken separately, were unanimous in favour of their admission. The W.M. in his usual impressive manner raised Bros. R. R. Millington and C. F. Payne to the third degree, passed Bros. W. H. Payne, H. Moore, and G. Montgomery, to the second degree. Bro. J. T. Moss, P. G. Steward Middlesex, P.M. and Treasurer, took the chair for the purpose of initiating several of his friends. He in able painstaking, and correct style, initiated Messrs. J. Craven, G. Reynolds, G. E. Wood, H. Glosster, and S. Marketis, into Freemasonry. The W.M. resumed the chair. Some propositions were made for joining members, and candidates for initiation. Business being ended, the lodge was closed in due form. Banquet and dessert followed. There were present during the afternoon and evening (besides those already mentioned):—Bros. R. M. Bowman, S.W.; D. D. Beck, J.W.; F. Walters, P.M., Sec.; H. A. Dubois, S.D.; W. Hammond, P.M., J.D.; J. W. Jackson, I.G.; J. Catchpole, D.C.; H. Potter, P.M., W.S.; J. Bavin, P.M., Tyler; J. C. Peckham, P.M.; J. Hills, P.M.; H. E. Trotter, J. T. H. Moss, W. H. Scott, J. W. Baldwin, W. P. Saunders, W. Stanton, T. Pallett, C. S. Simpson, E. Hopwood, P.M., and some others. Amongst a large number of visitors we noticed, Bros. G. Chapman, P.M., Sec. 147; L. Alexander, P.M. 188; T. Price, 940; W. Smeed, P.M. 946; F. Bouts, 1306; T. Terry, W.M. 1360; and others whose names we were unable to ascertain.

LANCASHIRE (WEST.)

WARRINGTON.—Lodge of Lights (No. 148).—The regular monthly meeting of this lodge was held on Monday, the 27th ult., at the Masonic Rooms, Sankey-street. The W.M., Bro. James Jackson, was supported by Bros. John Harding, S.W.; W. Sharp, as J.W.; R. G. Stringer, P.M.; W. Richardson, P.M.; D.

W. Finney, P.M.; W. Mossop, P.M.; Dr. Bowes, P.M., P. Prov. G. Reg., Cumberland and Westmoreland; Thos. Grime, W. H. Spring, J. Dimmelow, L. Wilson, Geo. A. Clark, Charles Crosier, Robt. Richardson, Dr. Gornall, and Jas. Hannah, Tyler. Visitor:—Bro. P. J. Edelsten, 1250. The lodge was opened in due form, when the minutes of the previous meeting were read, and declared to be correctly recorded. Bros. Clark and Crosier, being candidates for preferment, having fully sustained their claim, they were entrusted, and retired. The lodge was opened in the second degree, the candidates re-admitted and passed by the W.M., under the able deaconage of Bros. Past Masters Richardson and Finney. The lecture on the tracing board was delivered by Bro. Bowes, on the conclusion of which, a cordial and unanimous vote of thanks was accorded to him for the interesting manner in which he rendered the ritual. There being no further business the lodge was duly closed.

Royal Arch.

METROPOLITAN.

CYRUS CHAPTER (No. 21).—The last meeting of this chapter for the season was held on Tuesday, at the Ship and Turtle, Leadenhall-street. Comp. W. S. Webster, M.E.Z, presided, and there were also present, Comps. C. Allen, H.; George Lambert, P.Z.; Thomas Harrison, P.Z.; Edward Burrell, P.Z.; Thomas Barringer, M.D., P.Z., Treasurer; Thomas W. White, S.E.; C. Saxon Hooper, P.S.; C. F. Knight, C. Harcourt, Harry Weston, Walter Crookes, J. Mitchell, H. Massey, Z., 619; and Chas. F. Pawley, 452. Five brethren were proposed for exaltation at next meeting, and Dr. Barringer was entrusted with the arrangements for the summer festival in July. Dr. Barringer informed tee companions that on the introduction of the five new members, the limit fixed by the By-laws of the chapter to the number of its members coming in at the low fees would be reached, and that all brethren seeking exaltation in the Cyrus Chapter afterwards, would be charged double fees. The chapter however would retain only half the amount of these fees, the other half being handed to one or other of the Masonic Institutions. A superb banquet supplied by Comp. Painter concluded the evening's labours.

DEVONSHIRE.

TIVERTON.—St. Peter's Chapter (No. 1125).—This new chapter, for which a charter was granted in February last, was formally consecrated and dedicated on the 27th May, by the M. E. and Rev. Comp. J. Huyshe, P.G. Supt. for Devon, assisted by E. Comps. W. Cann, as 2nd. G. Principal; Samuel Jones, as 3rd. G. Principal; and Comp. W. G. Rogers, Prov. G. Scribe E. These solemn ceremonies having been most impressively performed, the following companions (who were appointed by the charter), were presented and installed with the accustomed solemnities, viz:—E. Comps. W. H. Reed, (P.Z.) Z.; James Mills, H.; and W. R. G. Thomas, J. The following officers were also presented and invested:—Comps. H. Davey, Scribe E.; H. S. Gill, Scribe N.; T. B. Patterson, P.S.; and J. Wood, Steward. Twelve brethren of St. Peter's Lodge were proposed as candidates for exaltation. After the closing of the chapter, the companions adjourned to a banquet, at the Palmers-ton Hotel, where they were highly complimented by the Prov. G. Superintendent, on the handsome hall they had set apart for Masonic purposes, and on the beauty of the furniture and paraphernalia of the chapter. The consecration day was fixed for the 27th., as a compliment to the venerable Z., it being the 72nd anniversary of his birthday.

SCOTLAND.

PROVINCIAL GRAND CHAPTER OF LANARKSHIRE.

The Supreme Grand Chapter for Scotland having at the Quarterly Communication, held December, 1871, appointed Comp. F. A. Barrow as Grand Superintendent for Lanarkshire, a meeting of the whole of the present and Past Principals in the Province, was called on the 19th ultimo., but the Superintendent having inadvertently left his commission at home, the meeting was adjourned to the 17th ult., when the first meeting of the Provincial Grand Chapter was held in St. John's Masonic Hall, 213, Buchanan Street, Glasgow, F. A. Barrow, P.G. Superintendent, presiding, who stated that he had already appointed and installed Comps. J. D. Porteous, and W. Smith, as Grand H. and J., and he would now nominate A. Mc Taggart, as Grand Scribe E., and Jas. Crabbe, as Grand Scribe N., the other Grand Officers would be elected by the excellent companions present, from their own body. The Provincial Chapter would then be organised and, he trusted, would lead to advance the interests of the order in the West of Scotland.

Comp. J. Wallace, Z. of 79, while glad to find that the Supreme Chapter had appointed a Superintendent, and called together a Provincial Grand Chapter, yet he thought that they had not treated the province with the respect to which it was entitled, seeing that one-half of the whole of their revenue was derived from the City of Glasgow, he thought in these days of cheap and expeditious travelling, that they might have sent a deputation over, to have installed the Grand Superintendent and the rest of the Grand Officers, he also thought that the Grand Superintendent had exceeded his powers by appointing and installing privately two companions to the offices of P.G.H. as P.G.J., those companions who, though no doubt, very worthy brethren, yet had never been elected to fill a Principal's chair in their own chapters. The P.G.Z. replied that he had only acted in conformity with a dispensation granted him by the G.Z.

Comp. Wheeler, P.J.Z., doubted the power of even the G.Z. to grant such a dispensation, as the constitutions plainly show what should be done in the event of any companions being selected who were not already installed Principals, reading the laws bearing on that point.

Comp. Park, Z. 122; Singleton, Z. 87; Wallace, Z. 79; McDonald, 73; Mullins, 69; and several others took the same view of the subject.

Com. McTaggart and J. Crabb, the newly-appointed Scribes E. and N. held, that this meeting was not competent to discuss the question, as the P.G.Z. was only acting in strict accordance with his dispensation, and if the Provincial Grand Chapter felt aggrieved they must appeal to the Supreme Chapter of Edinburgh.

Comp. Walton held that this was the proper place to discuss the subject, even if they had to appeal to Edinburgh.

The Prov. G.Z. then intimated that he could allow of no more discussion on the laws. If they thought he had done wrong, he was only acting on the authority above him, and he should now proceed with the election. Several of the dissenting companions were proposed for different offices, but declined to serve, and the following were unanimously elected:—

- | | |
|---------------------------|-------------------------|
| D. Gilchrist, Z. 73..... | Prov. G. 1st. Principal |
| Jas. Balfour, P.Z. 73 ... | Prov. G. 2nd. Principal |
| F.D. Humphries, Z. 60... | Prov. G. 3rd. Principal |
| Thos. Halket, Z. 113... | Prov. G. Treas. |
| G. McDonald, H. 73 ... | Prov. G. Sword Bearer |
| T. Clatworthy, S.E. 112 | Prov. G. Banner Bearer |
| G. Thaldon, Z. 112 ... | Prov. G. Chamberlain |

Those appointed by the Grand Superintendent being:—

- | | |
|--------------------------|--------------------|
| F. A. Barrow, 50..... | Prov. G. Z. |
| J. D. Porteous, 50 | Prov. G. H. |
| W. White, 50 | Prov. G. J. |
| A. McTaggart, 73 | Prov. G. Scribe E. |
| Jas. Crabbe, Z. 50 | Prov. G. Scribe N. |

There being no further business the Provincial Grand Chapter was duly closed.

Mark Masonry.

CUMBERLAND.

CARLISLE. — Cumberland Lodge of Mark Masters (No. 60.)—On Wednesday a very important meeting of Cumberland Mark Masons was held at Carlisle, in connection with Lodge No. 60, Carlisle. It was the annual meeting of the lodge, and no fewer than nine were proposed for advancement, of whom eight appeared. The installation of the W.M. for the ensuing year took place, when Bro. Busher, of Kendal, P.G.S., P. Prov. G.S.B. of England, was installed in a very masterly style by V.W. Bro. F. Binckes, G.S., G.L.M.M., P.G.S. The following brethren were balloted for, elected, and advanced, the interesting ceremony being gone through by V.W. Bro. Binckes, who took the W.M.'s chair, at the request of Bro. James Porter, W.M.; Bros. John Holme, P.S.G.W.; H. Rauthmell, P.G.D.C.; W. Tattersall, J. Norman Hodgson, S.; G. Carrick, J.D.; E. W. Henry, M.D., P.A.D.C., W.M.; and Rev. Canon Ware, W.M. Bro. Colonel Whitwell was expected to be present, but a telegram was received by Bro. Porter to say that he was too ill to attend. After the new W.M. had been duly invested, he appointed his officers as follows:—Bros. James Porter, P.G.S., S.G.D., I.P.M.; Court, S.W.; Pratchitt, J.W.; Wheatley, M.O.; J. Wood, S.O.; Henry Bewes, J.O.; Rev. J. Simpson, Chap.; F. W. Hayward, Treas.; G. G. Hayward, Sec.; J. Holme, Reg.; Tattersall, S.D.; G. Shannon, J.D.; Mc Mechan, I.G.; and John Barnes, Tyler. At the conclusion of the proceedings the brethren to the number of about twenty-five sat down to a banquet at the Coffee House, which was prepared by Bro. F. W. Hayward and Mrs. Hayward—the new host and hostess of the hotel—in a style which called forth the encomiums of all present. Everything in season was amply provided and well served, and the wines of all kinds were pronounced excellent. The chair was taken by Bro. Busher, W.M., who was supported right and left by V.W. Bros. Binckes, Rev. Canon Ware, Rev. James Simpson, James Porter, Wheatley, and Mc Mechan. Amongst those present were Bros. Henry G. Shannon, G. Carrick, J. Norman Hodgson, Court, Holme, W. Johnston, W. Tattersall, G. G. Hayward, J. Barnes, J. Wood, T. Blacklock, W. Pratchitt, &c. After the usual loyal toasts had been given, and very enthusiastically received, the Chairman proposed "The Grand Master, the Deputy Grand Master Earl Percy, M.W.G.M. elect, and the Grand Officers, with the names of Bro. Binckes, Grand Secretary of England, and Secretary of the Freemasons' Boys' School." He said Bro. Portal and he had been very good friends for a great number of years, and all who knew Bro. Portal must respect him. (Hear, hear.) He believed it was through Bro. Portal that an advance was first made towards a union between Scottish and English Mark lodges, which was being productive of much good, and promoting a good feeling. Speaking of Bro. Binckes, he said, they all knew how hard he had worked for the order. They knew him as the Secretary of the Boys' School, but they knew him better as the Grand Secretary of Mark Masons of England. They knew him as a honest, earnest, hard-working man, and a thorough good Mason. (Hear, hear.) After wishing Bro. Binckes many years of happiness, he concluded by proposing the toast, which was heartily received with Masonic honours.

Bro. Binckes, in responding, said he had very great pleasure in being amongst them, as he always did what he could to promote Masonry wherever he went. It had been one of the dreams of his life to do away with that antagonism which had existed between the Mark Lodges of England and Scotland and to have them both united under one Grand Master. He had spared no pains, no labours, no exertions to effect this, and he was glad to say he hoped it was about to be carried out. It was true nothing definite had been done, but they must make some overtures to the Grand Lodge of Scotland to bring about this happy consummation. Earl Percy, he was sorry to say, now lay upon a bed of sickness, so that he might not be able to be present at the meeting, but in whatever position he was he had always shown a large amount of ability. He had shown much interest in the Mark degree. They must have good men in office, and there was no "backstairs" influence which would get a man into office either in the Grand Lodge or the Province. Merit and ability were the only things which entitled a member to hold office. Referring to the meeting of that day, he said he felt much pleasure in coming there to assist them, but it would be hard indeed if he did not do something for masonry. He thought the institution with which he was connected was the greatest glory of his life. No pleasure in life was greater than when assisting those who from circumstances could not assist themselves. There was one thing he should like to say to the newly advanced members, and that was; that although the degree of Mark was not recognised by the Craft Grand Lodge of England, yet this is the only jurisdiction which did not recognise it. It must be borne in mind that they were all members of the Craft, without which they could not get the Mark degree, and some of the best and most prominent members of the Craft belonged to the Mark. Such men would not join the Mark if they thought there was anything in it antagonistic to the Craft. The Craft Grand Lodge, did not look upon the degree with a favourable eye, but they had many members of the Craft Grand Lodge who were Mark Master Masons, including Lord Carnarvon, D. G. M. England; Lord Leigh, P. G. M.; Lord Holmesdale, P. G. M.; Earl Bective, P. G. M., Cumberland and Westmorland; W. W. Beech, Esq., M. P., P. G. M.; and last, though not least, the present respected Grand Master, the Rev. George Raymond Portal, M. A., and no brother need think anything of this. Bro. Binckes concluded a long and interesting speech amid much applause.

Bro. Porter proposed the health of the new W.M., Bro. Busher. He was very glad they had elected Bro. Busher, to the office, and he was sure that at the end of the next twelve months they would not regret the step they had taken, as Bro. Busher's energy and ability were such that he improved everything he was connected with. (Cheers.)

Bro. Busher, who was received with great applause, while thanking them for the manner in which they had drunk his health, said he always endeavoured to do his duty, and he should try to do it as W.M. of the Cumberland Lodge of Mark Masters, and when he was unable to be amongst them, he was sure they would excuse him, as Bro. Porter would be a good substitute for him. However, he would have to be very ill before he would be prevented from coming, as before now he had travelled with two crutches and three sticks to be present at a meeting. (Laughter and cheers.)

Bro. Binckes proposed the health of Bro. Porter in very complimentary terms, speaking warmly of the labour and pains he had bestowed to make that meeting the success it was. Bro. Porter was a true and good mason, and a sincere friend.

Bro. Porter, in acknowledging the compliment paid him, said that whatever he had done for the cause of masonry seemed to him very little, compared with what others had done.

Bro. the Rev. Canon Ware proposed the health of the Earl of Bective, P.G.M. He was always willing to give help when it was required. He was not yet installed the Provincial Grand Master of the Province of Cumberland and Westmoreland, but he had no doubt he soon would be, and he was sure that whatever interest he had shown in Craft Masonry he would take equal interest in the Mark. (Cheers.)

Bro. Holme proposed "The Officers of the Carlisle Lodge" which was acknowledged by Bro. Court. The W. M. gave the "Installing Master," and called for a "big cheer," which was heartily given.—Bro. Binckes, in responding, said that wherever he found a Mark Lodge, he found that as soon as they had got themselves established they wanted to do something for some of the charities, and he believed that amongst the Mark Masters and the Rose Croix might be found some of the best supporters of masonic charities. (Hear, hear.)—Bro. Binckes also proposed "The Newly Advanced Brethren," and in doing so said that the Mark would bear investigation with any other degree, and the brethren might be sure that they had not taken up any new-fangled idea. Several of the newly-advanced brethren returned thanks, and after the other usual masonic toasts had been given and duly responded to, the meeting broke up, after one of the pleasantest gatherings which has yet taken place under the auspices of Mark Masonry.

BREAKFAST.—EPPS'S COCOA.—GRATEFUL AND COMFORTING.—"By a thorough knowledge of the natural laws which govern the operations of digestion and nutrition, and by a careful application of the fine properties of well-selected cocoa, Mr. Epps has provided our breakfast tables with a delicately-flavoured beverage which may save us many heavy doctors' bills."—Civil Service Gazette. Made simply with Boiling Water or Milk. Each packet is labelled—"JAMES EPPS & Co., Homœopathic Chemists, London."

GLASGOW.

Royal Ark Mariners (No. 73.)—On the 9th ult., the Royal Ark, No. 73, was unmoored, Bro. Jas. Balfour, Father Noah, commanding; D. Gilchrist, J.; and G. W. Wheeler, acting as S.; when Comps. J. Shaw and R. Ferguson were, after due trial, admitted on board the Ark. The election of officers for the ensuing year was then proceeded with, and the following brethren were placed in command for the ensuing year, the elections in each case being unanimous:—Comps. Jas. Balfour, Noah; David Gilchrist, Japhet; Jas. O. Perk, Shem; G. W. Wheeler, Secretary; Robert Bell Treasurer. The offices of C. and J. were left open till the next meeting.

Knights Templar.

SUFFOLK AND CAMBRIDGE.

PROVINCIAL GRAND CONCLAVE.

Provincial Grand Conclave for Suffolk and Cambridge met at the Masonic Hall, Ipswich, on Tuesday, the 14th ult., when there was a large attendance of Sir Knights. The Conclave met under the banner of the Plantagenet Encampment, which was opened by Sir Knt. the Revd. R. N. Sanderson, D.P.G.C., P.E.C., acting as E.C.; the Prov. Grand Commander Capt. Phillips, being announced, he was received under the Arch of Steel, and was accompanied by Sir Knights Major General Clerk, Prov. Grand Commander for Kent; C. T. Vigne, Prov. Grand Commander for Dorsetshire; J. Montagu Pulteney Montagu, Past Grand Capt. of England; J. O. Oxland, P.G.A.D.C.; Capt. Phayre, Grand A.D.C. of England. There were also present Sir Knights Emra Holmes, Grand Provost of England, E.C. Prudence Encampment; Dr. Mills, P.E.C.; G. S. Findley, P.E.C.; J. Pitcher, P.E.C.; C. T. Townsend, P.E.C., P.2d. G.C. of Lines, P.G.C.; J. H. Townsend, E.C. Plantagenet Encampment; Dr. Beaumont, R.N.; Capt. Teversham, of the Star of the West Encampment, Barbadoes; S. B. King, P. Cornell, J. Franks, &c.

The business of the Plantagenet Encampment having been gone through, the Provincial Grand Conclave was opened. Sir Knts. General Clerk, P.G. Com. Kent; and J. M. P. Montagu, acting as 1st. and 2nd Captains. The muster roll having been called, the Prov. Grand Chancellor read the minutes of last Prov. Grand Conclave, and a motion that they were correctly recorded was carried nem. con.

The report of the managing committee was read of which the following were the principal features.

“Very eminent Sir,—

“The managing committee of the Provincial Grand Conclave of Suffolk and Cambridge have the honour to report that during the past year there have been in the Province twelve installations, and six joinings; against which are to be set one loss by death, five by resignation, and one by exclusion, making a total of sixty-eight Knights under your banner, against fifty nine last year, some of the joining members having been already members of an encampment in the Province, and still continuing their subscriptions thereto.

The attention of the Committee has been called to the fact, that several candidates have been admitted as joining members of our encampment without inquiry being made of the encampment of which they were or had been members, as to their standing as Knights Templar. The Committee would submit that such inquiry is due, both to the candidates themselves, and to the Encampments from which they come, and which they seek to join. Registrars of Encampments are also reminded, with reference to the forms of summons to be issued to their encampments, that the letters H.R.D.M. and K.H., which used to appear on the summonses of some old encampments are now obsolete and irregular, and serve only to encourage a belief entertained by some, that there exist Templar Warrants, under which degrees can now be granted, which are, and have been for many years, under the sole jurisdiction of another Masonic Body, viz., the Supreme Council of the Ancient and Accepted Rite.

They have also to state, that since the treaty with the Order of the Temple in Scotland, the word “exalted” is to be omitted from the designation of the Order.

Finally, V.E. Sir, the Committee beg to congratulate you on the continued prosperity of your Province.

The report of the Committee having been received and adopted, and a new Committee appointed for the ensuing year, the Provincial Grand Commander proceeded to appoint the following officers:—

Rev. R. N. Sanderson.....	Prov. D.G. Com.
Rev. J. Hardy.....	Prov. Grand Prior.
E. Dorling, P.E.C.....	Prov. G.S.P.
Rev. T. G. Beaumont.....	Prov. G. Prelate.
J. Deighton.....	Prov. 1st G. Capt.
Emra Holmes, G. Pro- } vost of England. }	Prov. 2nd G. Capt.
C. T. Townsend, P.E.C.....	Prov. G. Chan.
Dr. R. W. Beaumont, R.N.	Prov. G. Reg.
W. T. Westgate, P.E.C....	Prov. G.D.C.
Rev. G. W. Marwood.....	Prov. G. Almoner.
Rev. A. Holmes.....	Prov. G. Expert.
Rev. J. Walker.....	Prov. G. 1st St. B.
J. O. Oxland.....	Prov. G. 2nd St. B.
J. Caldwell.....	Prov. G.A.D.C.
J. H. Townsend.....	Prov. G. 1st H.
P. Cornell.....	Prov. G. 2nd H.
Geo. Cresswell.....	Prov. G. Swd. B.
Miller.....	Prov. G. B.B.
W. Norman.....	Prov. G. Organist.
Frater Geo. Spalding.....	Prov. G. Equerry.

At the conclusion of the regular business, the Provincial Grand Commander intimated that the next Provincial Grand Conclave would be held at Ipswich, under the banner of the Prudence Encampment, and the Provincial Grand Conclave was closed.

The Sir Knights afterwards adjourned to the dining-hall, where a récherché banquet was spread. Frater Spalding was the caterer, and worthily did he sustain his reputation as chef de cuisine.

On the removal of the cloth, the usual loyal and chivalric toasts were given, that of “Our Illustrious Brother the Prince of Wales,” being especially favoured.

In proposing the past and present Officers of Grand Conclave, the Prov. G. Commander, coupled with it the names of Sir Knt. J. M. P. Montagu, Past Grand Captain of England, and Sir Knt. Emra Holmes, Grand Provost of England, Sir Knt. Montague responded. Sir Knt. Emra Holmes proposed in eulogistic terms, the “V.E. Provincial Grand Commander, Capt. Phillips,” dwelling upon the many knightly qualities, the unvarying courtesy and urbanity he always displayed to all those Sir Knights who had the privilege of being brought into contact with him, officially or otherwise, and which had made him one of the most popular Provincial Commanders. He spoke in the presence of other Provincial Grand Commanders, who he felt sure would bear him out in his remarks.

The toast was drunk with enthusiasm.

Capt. Phillips briefly responded in well chosen language and modest terms.

Capt. Phayre responded to the toast of the “Visitors.”

Sir Knt. Sanderson, in responding to the toast of the D.P.G.C., spoke in handsome terms of the services of the Provincial Grand Chancellor and Treasurer; dwelt upon the new safeguards for the admission of none but proper candidates, (alluding to the veto of the P.G.C., on the nomination of all candidates, and the largely increased fee for installation, approved at the meeting of Grand Conclave,) and expressed his conviction, that from the general harmony which existed between encampments in the province, and the high and chivalric character of the Provincial Grand Commander, the continued prosperity of the order in Suffolk and Cambridge was well nigh assured. Other toasts followed, and a most agreeable evening was spent by the Sir Knights.

LANCASHIRE.

ROCHDALE.—Albert Encampment.—An emergency of this encampment was held in the Masonic Rooms, Ann-street, Rochdale, on Wednesday, the 22nd ult., when the Sir Knights were honoured by the presence of the Very Eminent Prov. Grand Commander Sir Knt. J. Albert Hudson Royds, and the V.E. Deputy Prov. Grand Commander Sir Knt. William Hy. Wright. The encampment having been opened in form by the Eminent Commander, Sir Knight Wm. Ashworth, Prov. Grand Director of Ceremonies; the Eminent Deputy Prov. Grand Commander assumed the baton of the E.C., and in a most masterly manner performed the ceremony of installing the following Companions Sir Knights of the Order, viz.:—Comps. Robert O’Neil, of Chapter No. 42, Bury; Richard Gorton, of Chapter No. 266, Heywood; John Cass, of Chapter No. 266; and Jesse Firth, of Chapter No. 298, Rochdale; who were subsequently obligated by the E.C., Sir Knt. W. Ashworth, dubbed Sir Knights of the Order by the V.E. Prov. Commander, Sir Knt. Royds, and invested by Sir Knt. W. Roberts, Prov. E. Commander, P. Prov. Grand Chamberlain of Yorkshire. Amongst the officers and Sir Knights were:—Sir Knts. James Holroyd, P.E.C., Prov. Grand Standard Bearer; Herod Turner, 1st Captain; John Fothergill, 2nd Captain; William Roberts, Registrar; V. M. Jones, P.E.C., Treasurer; Edward Woodcock, Director of Ceremonies; Thomas Oakden, Almoner; William Davies, Acting Expert; Thos. B. Ashworth, 1st Standard Bearer; John Ashworth, jun., 2nd Standard Bearer; Robert Butterworth, Captain of Lines; Robert Howard, 1st Herald; James Mills, 2nd Herald; and Edmund Wrigley, Organist. The newly-installed Sir Knights having been proclaimed, and the ceremonies being ended, the encampment was closed by the E.C., when the Sir Knights adjourned to banquet, after which the usual loyal and Masonic toasts were received with applause.

SCOTLAND.

GLASGOW.—Girvan Encampment (No. 329.)—The usual monthly meeting was held in the Town Hall, 22, Sturthers-street, on Tuesday, the 7th inst., Sir Knt. R. Bell, M.C., presiding, assisted by G. W. Wheeler, Acting C.G.; M’Clanahan, C.C.; J. Chatfield, S.C.; and R. Hunter, J.C.; when Comp. T. Chesholm, of Chapter 87, was proposed, and being approved of, was created a Knight of the Temple. A Priory of the Order of Knights of Malta was afterwards opened by Sir Knts. R. Bell, Prior, and G. W. Wheeler, Prelate, when that Order was conferred on the same gentleman, and also on Sir Knts. J. Dunbar and A. Spence. Sir Knt. G. W. Wheeler as Recorder, reported the result of the Grand Priory of Edinburgh, and a deputation was appointed to see to the matter.

Ancient and Accepted Rite.

METROPOLITAN.

PALESTINE CHAPTER ROSE CROIX OF H.R.D.M.—This chapter held a regular meeting on Tuesday the 28th. May ult., and was well attended, the brethren present being the M.W.S., R. Wentworth Little; the Past M.W.S.; John Hervey, 30°, Treasurer; Colonel F. Burdett, 32°, H.P.; G. Kenning, 30°, First General; H. C. Levander, M.A., Second General; T. L. Fox, G.M.; C. Hammerton, Raph.; T. Burdett, Yeoman Rec.; J. T. Moss, C.G.; J. W. Barrett, Herald; T. McGovern, J. Dyer, J. Coutts, and P. J. Marin; in addition to whom the chapter was honoured with the presence of Illust. Bros. Capt. N. G. Phillips, 33°, Lieut. Grand Commander; Hyde Pullen, 33°; S. Rosenthal, 33°; J. Starkie, 30°; C. Horsley, 30°; J. Read, 30°; and S. Boncher, 18°. After ballot for several candidates, two being in attendance, viz: Bros. J. E. Saunders, P.G. Deacon, and Captain L. J. Collum, (100th. Reg.) were introduced and permitted to participate in the privileges of the Rose Croix Degree. Col. Burdett was then unanimously elected

M.W.S. for the ensuing year and Bro. Hervey, was re-elected Treasurer with the same gratifying unanimity. The chapter was then closed, and the brethren sat down to an excellent banquet. During the course of the evening, a splendid gold jewel as Past M.W.S., was presented to Bro. Hervey by the M.W.S. in the name of the chapter amidst demonstrations of warm approval, and the worthy Treasurer expressed his acknowledgment of the compliment. Both Bros. Sanders and Collum returned thanks for the reception of their names. When the toast of the "Neophytes" was proposed, the former brother in a masterly speech replied with animation and point, and the latter, with brief but appropriate allusions to the fraternal goodwill and fellowship, which he had ever experienced from brother Masons in every part of the globe. After a singularly pleasant and agreeable evening the brethren separated.

CONSECRATION of ST. JOHN'S CHAPTER, TORQUAY.

A Provincial Grand Chapter was held on Thursday, the 23rd ult., at the St. John's Lodge-room, Torquay, for the purpose of consecrating the St. John's Chapter. Amongst the company present were:—The Rev. J. Huyshe, Past J. of Grand Chapter, and Prov. G. Supt. of Devon; L. P. Metham, P.A.S. of Grand Chapter, and Prov. G.H.; R. H. Rae, P. Prov. G.J.; T. Dand, Prov. G.S.W.; G. Glanfield, P.Z.; H. Hopkins, P.Z.; B. Bowden, P.Z.; Josiah Austin, P.Z., P. Prov. G.A.S.S.; Edward A. Davies, H.; J. Purse, Edward Appleton, Wm. Yates, Bovey, 106; C. Piller, 106; T. Oliver, 106; The warrant was read by E. Comp Davies, S.E., pro. tem.

The following oration was then ably given by the M.E. Comp. L. P. Metham:—

"Companions,—It is at all times desirable, when Freemasons meet to dedicate a building or a room to the purposes of their Craft, that their attention should be recalled to the serious obligations to which, by taking part in the ceremony, they individually and collectively pledge themselves. And if this is true with regard to our Craft Lodge, much more so is it true when applied to the Royal Arch Degree. The address, therefore, which is usual on these occasions is most properly given at this early period of the proceedings, in order that, should, unfortunately, there be any companion present who has not thought seriously enough of the meaning of the sublime ceremony in which he is about to take a part; who is content to regard it only as a beautiful spectacle, or to join with lip service only in its ritual, he may be aroused to take a deeper and more personal interest in what we are about to say and do. Beautiful, solemn, and full of significance as are the ceremonies and teachings of the other degrees, they fade into nothingness when compared with the objects of research pertaining to the Royal Arch. They speak of time, and the affairs of time, this speaks of what will be when time shall be no more. They take their stand on the life side of the narrow but deep boundary which divides death from life; this carries us across that boundary into the presence of the Infinite. They show us, as in a glass darkly, a dawn leading but to ephemeral light. This teaches us to reach the Eternal Land where dawn and morning, evening and night, cloud and storm, are unknown—all swallowed up in the ever-enduring brightness which floods its courts. Well would it be, then, for every Companion to reflect, that around the name of the Great I AM centre the mysteries and teachings of this sublime degree, and that better would it be not to approach it in a light or unbecoming manner. Let each remember and try to imitate the reverence with which the holy name of Jehovah was ever pronounced by our Jewish brethren, to whom years of trial and penance were enjoined before they were allowed to participate in the mysteries of the Order. It is indeed the climax of Freemasonry, and it is intimately blended with all that is near and dear to us in another state of existence. But to reach it in spirit we must practice through life that self-denial and that constant labour which is forcibly represented to us in the case of our ancient brethren, to whom was committed the task of clearing away the rubbish and ruin which concealed the foundation of the Temple. We must cast off self-indulgence; we must come out of the slough of idleness, immorality, and the mortal sins which so easily beset us, before, like our ancient brethren, we can reach the only true foundation-stone on which is to be built up that new living and eternal temple which is so beautifully figured to us in this degree. Of itself Masonry is not religion, although the most religious man may well select Masonry as an instrument with which to improve himself, reclaim the erring, reform the depraved, and, above all, to teach and practice that charity without which real religion cannot exist. Up to this point Masonry is but the handmaid of religion, deriving the lessons she expounds in morality, wisdom, and charity, from a source indeed which cannot pour forth turbid waters or utter an uncertain sound, the volume of the Sacred Law. But when we have reached this point she bids us raise our eyes to that bright morning star, whose rising shall bring down peace and salvation to the faithful and obedient of the human race. And if we have, as Masons, acknowledged and obeyed the moral government of the Great Architect of the Universe, if we have followed the straight and undeviating line of conduct marked out for us in the volume of the Sacred Law, by His unerring and impartial justice, we may contemplate without fear the setting of our little sun of life in the dark valley to the shadow of death. By a proper study of Masonry we shall rightly learn our duty to God and man; commencing with an avowal of belief in an omnipresent Providence, and the practice of every social and moral virtue, we shall work onwards, as it were, from the circumference to the centre of the soul, until we feel and acknowledge in our science a clear corroboration of the truth of religion. As the historical facts recorded in the Bible, which constitute the sacred landmarks of our order, are palpable in their truth, so do the lessons they teach, gradually lead the upright Mason to imbibe those spiritual doctrines, which, in their essence, and in their practice, insure for him atonement and eternal salvation. But again and again, this sublime degree urges on its members the practice of the most wide and catholic charity. In short, to him who has rightly considered Masonry, it is as the ladder which Jacob saw in his vision, its lowest round was set on the earth, but the top reached to heaven. And as on every step of that ladder were angels ascending and descending, forming one bright chain connecting heaven and earth, so does this, the highest, the noblest, and the sublimest degree, teach its graduates the same lesson they were taught at their initiation, the practice of the most wide and catholic charity, to enforce this upon us as a duty to be practised in our daily life and conversation. I conclude in the words of that ancient charge which is too often omitted at the closing of our chapter—"Companions,—You are about to quit this sacred retreat of peace and friendship, and to mix again with the world. Amid all its cares and employments forget not the sacred duties which have been so frequently inculcated and so strongly recommended in this supreme convocation; be ye, therefore, discreet, prudent, and temperate. Remember, also, that around this altar you have voluntarily and solemnly vowed to befriend and relieve with unhesitating cordiality, every brother who shall need your assistance; that you have promised to remind him in the most gentle manner of his failings, and to aid his reformation—to defend and vindicate his character whenever wrongfully traduced, and to suggest the most candid, the most palliating, and the most favourable circumstances, even when it is most liable to reprehension and blame; thus shall the world see how dearly Masons love one another. But, my brethren and companions, you are to extend these noble and generous sentiments even further. Let me impress upon your minds, and let it be instilled into your hearts, that every human being has an undoubted claim to your kind offices. We, therefore, strictly enjoin you to do good to all, while we more particularly recommend to your care the household of the faithful, so that by diligence and fidelity in the duties of your respective avocations, by liberal benevolence and diffusive charity, by constancy and sincerity in your friendship, by being uniformly kind, just, amiable, and virtuous in your deportment, you may prove to the world the happy and beneficent effects of our ancient and honourable institution. Let it not be said that you laboured in vain, or wasted your strength for nought—for your work is before the Lord, and your recompense is with your God. Finally, brethren and companions, be all of one mind, live in peace, and may the God of love and mercy delight to dwell among you and bless you for evermore." If individually and collectively we act on the principles thus clearly laid down and thus strongly enforced, then shall we have nobly answered the great end of our existence, then shall we have conscientiously fulfilled our obligations as true Royal Arch Masons, and our Masonic life and death will be "Like some bright river from fall to fall,

In many a maze descending, bright through all,
Finds some fair regions where each labyrinth past,
In one full lake of light it rests at last."

The M.E.Z. declared the Chapter duly constituted and consecrated.

The Acting Z. then installed the following companions, nominated by warrant:—E. Comps. Robert Bowden, Z.; Henry Hawker, H.; Thomas Oliver, J. The following Comps. were then invested:—Watson, S.E.; Bovey, S.W.; Lyner, P.S.; Greenfield, A.S.S.; and Yates, J.A.S.

The ceremony being concluded, the Chapter was closed, and the companions adjourned to the Ship and Albert Hotel, where a banquet was provided, which gave credit to the proprietor, and the companions spent a pleasant evening.

FREEMASONRY IN TRINIDAD.

The consecration of the new hall of the Caledonian Lodge (No. 324), S.C. Granada, Trinidad, took place on Thursday, April 25th. The following members of the Craft were in attendance:—Bros. John M. Aird, G. Palmer, G. Humphreys, A. Simmons, M. G. Stephenson, W. Kerr, D. G. Garraway, J. P. G. Munro, P. Mudie, J. R. Bertrand, W. B. Wells, F. R. Baker, J. T. Otway, A. B. Campbell, J. F. Preudhomme, W. E. Mayers, D. R. Preudhomme, A. J. Nugent, J. G. Wells, W. J. Mitchell, J. Steele, W. S. Comissiong, Geo. Simon, C. J. Wells, and G. A. Munro.

The lodge was opened in the first, second, and third degrees; and the Consecration ceremony commenced. After prayer, solemn music was performed on the harmonium by Bro. J. P. Munro, and grand honours given. Whereupon, Bro. Aird, R. W. M., delivered the following oration:—

"My dear Brethren,—Having met on this auspicious occasion as fellow labourers in the laudable work of consecrating a temple for the dedication of the solemn rites of Freemasonry, we may not unprofitably devote a few moments to a rapid review of the principles and tenets of our ancient institution. We have no authentic account of the time when it was first instituted. In a work entitled "Illustrations of Masonry," published in 1792, by Bro. W. Preston, Master of the Lodge of Antiquity in London, the origin of Masonry is traced from the Creation. "Ever since the symmetry began, and harmony displayed her charms, our order had a being." By other accounts the antiquity of Masonry is carried up no further than the building of King Solomon's temple. In Dr. Henry's History of Great Britain, we find the origin of the Freemason's society attributed to the difficulty found in former times of procuring workmen to build the vast number of churches, monasteries, and other edifices which the religious opinions entertained in those ages, prompted the people to raise. Hence the Masons were greatly favoured by the Popes, who granted them many indulgences, with a view to augment their numbers. In those times, it may be well supposed that such encouragements from the supreme pastors of the church must have been productive of most beneficial effects to the fraternity, and in consequence of such patronage, the society rapidly increased. The early history of the order is confessedly involved in obscurity. It is, therefore, no intention of mine to trim my lamp for an adventurous pilgrimage into the dim cloudlands of tradition, or the mythic regions of imagination, more especially as I believe that the actual present and the dawning future will afford us, as Freemasons, more ample food for speculation and reflection than even the venerated records of the past. It is undeniable that this is an age of progress; in every department of art and science astonishing discoveries have been made of many useful inventions. In the midst of this general advancement, we find Freemasonry still occupying a foremost place in the estimation of intellectual men. Now, as of old, Princes and the exalted ones of the earth, are found clothed in the Mason's badge, and wielding the Mason's gavel. To you, my brethren, as Masons, I need hardly say that we owe this glorious position mainly to the grand principles on which our order is founded. Indelibly inscribed on the pillars of our temple, are the hallowed words—"Brotherly Love, Relief, and Truth"—and every true Mason bears them like a talisman engraved on his heart. I will now bring to your notice a few words of practical application. We know that the tenets of Masonry are good. Let us therefore endeavour to carry them out in our lives. Let the reality of our professions be proved by our actions, and the faith that is in us be manifested, in deed as in word. My dear brethren, you are placed like a city on a hill. The eyes of the world are upon you, and strong prejudices are entertained against the institution, which can only be obviated by the correct deportment of its members. Let us, therefore, decide to walk according to the light, that men may see our good works, and glorify our Father which is in Heaven. I beg to repeat what I said at the consecration at Mount Moriah,—“Carefully guard against the admission of unworthy and worthless candidates; permit not the frivolous, the dissolute, or the intemperate to enter within our gates, or to participate in ceremonies which they can neither comprehend nor enjoy.” Better the lodge should have but nine worthy members, than ninety-and-nine who are not worthy. In conclusion, my dear brethren, I would express a fervent hope, in which, I am sure, every one present will heartily join, that the foundation we are laying this evening in the name of T.G.A.O.T.U. may be solid and lasting; that the altar which we raise may be ever consecrated to the service of morality and virtue, and that years—many years hence—when our living breathing forms shall have long mingled with our kindred dust, our descendants of Lodge Caledonia, 324, may still be found promulgating, in all their original purity the genuine principles of our noble and time-honoured fraternity.”

Solemn music followed the delivery of the Master's address, after which the Charter was laid on the table by the R. W. M., the elements uncovered, and prayer offered. The usual processions to the east, P. M. Ab. Simmons carrying Bible; P. M. Matt. G. Stephenson, Cornucopia with corn; P. M. Geo. Palmer, Cup with wine; Humphreys, Cup with oil; the R. W. M. sprinkling the corn, wine, and oil: accompanied with the usual invocations, and finally declared the hall duly consecrated.

ERRATA.—In our account of British Union Lodge, No. 114, page 324, 49th line, for “Jewel” read “gavel”; 55th line, for “three degrees,” read “third degree.”

PURE WATER.—Pure water is the greatest desideratum of life and the most difficult to obtain, and the recent revelations respecting the supply of some of the South London companies and country wells are absolutely terrifying, but remedy is to a great extent in our own hands. The use of Mr. Lipscombe's (of Temple-bar) new patent self-cleansing charcoal cistern filters, which are comparatively inexpensive and are now being extensively adopted, will furnish a supply of filtered water sufficient for all domestic purposes, which, having passed through purified charcoal, is entirely free from lead, sewage, or other impurities. This filter's self-cleansing, can be adapted to any cistern, and practically lasts a long time. The smaller filters by the same maker for drinking purposes are most convenient and ornamental, and Mr. Lipscombe thoroughly merits the many testimonials he has received from our contemporaries and the highest authorities in the medical profession.—Standard.

ROYAL MASONIC INSTITUTION FOR GIRLS.

A meeting of the Governors of this Institution was held on Thursday, 30th ult., Bro. John Symonds in the chair, for the purpose of electing nine members of the Audit Committee, and twelve members of the House Committee. The election resulted as follows:—

AUDIT COMMITTEE.

Bro. John Symonds	37
„ William Paas	37
„ J. R. Sheen	36
„ Henry Empson	35
„ Henry Browse	32
„ J. G. Chancellor	29
„ William Roebuck	28
„ A. H. Tattershall	25
„ George Bone	22
„ Brackstone Baker	20
„ William Hale	15
„ R. Herve Giraud	4

The first nine were elected.

HOUSE COMMITTEE.

Bro. Rev. J. Vaughan	43
„ Benjamin Head	40
„ William Paas	40
„ Major John Creaton	38
„ George Cox	37
„ Raynham W. Stewart	37
„ James R. Sheen	36
„ Henry Browse	35
„ John A. Rucker	33
„ Joshua Nunn	32
„ Dudley Rolls	27
„ Thomas W. White	24
„ Robert Kenyon	23
„ Edward Cox	22
„ Frederick Adlard	18
„ J. G. Chancellor	10
„ William Bristow	8

The first twelve were elected.

Poetry.

OH WOULD I WERE A FREEMASON.

Oh would I were a Freemason,
Though only of low degree
I'd try to find a link to bind,
The world in unity.
The universal brotherhood
Of man, should be my aim;
I'd help the weak and sore distressed,
The sorry, sick, and lame.
Oh would I were a Freemason, &c.
The true, right hand of fellowship;
I would extend to all,
The prince, the tradesman, and the serf
I'd own, both great and small.
I'd wreath around the brow of faith,
The guerdon of hope
And charity, the noblest trait,
With misery should cope.
Oh would I were a Freemason, &c.
And now I am a Mason,
Accepted, good, and free;
I'll try to dwell with all mankind
In love, and harmony.
The square, the compass, and the rule,
Shall be my guide through life!
The holy volume I will hold
My stay in peace or strife,
And now I am a Mason, &c.

The great all-seeing eye of God,
I know looks on me still;
I'll try to follow His commands,
And own His mighty will.
In love I'll help my brother man,
Relief to him I'll give;
And truth shall be my guiding star
Whilst on this earth I live,
And now I am a Mason, &c.

The graces, four, my actions shall Control whilst I am here,
By justice, virtue, peace, and truth.
A name, I will uprear.
In strength I will establish,

God says, this house, for aye,
And to Masonry I will stand,
My good will plenteously,
And now I am a Freemason, T.W.

PRINCE ARTHUR'S VISIT TO LIVERPOOL.—

LETTER FROM THE QUEEN.—In connection with His Royal Highness Prince Arthur's recent visit to Liverpool and enthusiastic reception, the following letter has been received by the Mayor of the town, from the Marquis of Ripon, on behalf of the Queen:—

“Balmoral Castle, 25th May, 1872. Sir,—I am commanded by the Queen to inform you that Her Majesty has received with much satisfaction from Prince Arthur an account of the enthusiastic manner in which His Royal Highness was received at Liverpool. The Queen commands me to convey to you the expression of Her Majesty's great gratification at this striking proof of the loyalty of the inhabitants of that great port and of their attachment to Her Majesty's person and family.

I have the honour to be, sir, your faithful servant, RIPON.

“To the Mayor of Liverpool.”

A similar letter we believe has been received by Mr. Graves, M.P., whose guest Prince Arthur was during his visit to Liverpool.

METROPOLITAN MASONIC MEETINGS.

For the Week ending Friday, June 7th, 1872.

The Editor will be glad to have notice from Secretaries of Lodges and Chapters of any change in place or time of meeting.

SATURDAY, JUNE 1.

General Committee Boys' School, Freemasons' Hall, at 4.
Lodge 975, Rose of Denmark, White Hart, Barnes.
Star Lodge of Instruction (1275), Marquis of Granby,
New Cross-road, at 7; Bro. C. S. Dille, Preceptor.
Sphinx Lodge of Instruction (1329), Stirling Castle,
Camberwell, at 7.30; Bros. Thomas and Worthington, Preceptors.
Mount Sinai Chapter of Instruction, Union Tavern, Air-street, at 8; Comp. Brett, Preceptor.
Manchester Lodge of Instruction, Yorkshire Grey, London
Street, Fitzroy-Square, at 8. Bro. Ash, P.M., Preceptor.

MONDAY, JUNE 3.

Consecration of Friends in Council Lodge, No 1383, Mar-sonic Hall 33 Golden Sq at 2.45
Premier Red Cross Conclave, Freemasons' Tavern.
Lodge 16, Royal Alpha, Willis's Rooms, St. James's.
„ 188, Joppa, Albion Tavern, Aldersgate-street.
„ 1319, Asaph, Freemasons' Hall.
Sincerity Lodge of Instruction (174), Railway Tavern
Fenchurch-street Station, at 7.
Strong Man Lodge of Instruction (45), Old Jerusalem
Tavern, St. John's Gate, Clerkenwell, at 8; Bro.
James Terry, Preceptor.
Camden Lodge of Instruction (704), Adelaide Tavern,
Haverstock-hill, at 8; Bro. T. A. Adams, Preceptor.
Eastern Star Lodge of Instruction (95), Royal Hotel, Mile-end-road, at 7.30; Bro. E. Gottheil, Preceptor.
British Oak Lodge of Instruction, Bank of Friendship
Tavern, Mile End, at 7 for 8.
St. James's Union Lodge of Instruction (180), Horse and Groom Tavern, Winsley-street, (opposite the Pantheon),
Oxford-street, at 8; Bro. J. R. Stacey, Preceptor.
Wellington Lodge of Instruction, White Swan Tavern,
Deptford, at 8; Bro. C. G. Willey, P.M. 1155, Preceptor.
St. John of Wapping Lodge of Instruction (1306), Gun
Tavern, High-street, Wapping, at 7; Bro. T. Mortlock, Preceptor.
West Kent Lodge of Improvement (1297), St. Saviour's College, Stansted-road, Forest-hill, at 7.30; Bro. H. W.
Lindus, Preceptor.

TUESDAY, JUNE 4.

Grand Mark Lodge, Freemasons' Tavern at 5 p.m.
Kent Mark Lodge, Freemasons' Tavern
Colonial Board at 3 o'clock.
Lodge 167, St. John's, Holly Bush Tavern, Hampstead.
„ 1257, Grosvenor, Caledonian Hotel, Adelphi.
„ 1259, Duke of Edinburgh, New Globe Tavern, Bow-road.
„ 1261, Golden Rule, Masons' Hall, Masons'-avenue.
„ 1298, Royal Standard, Marquess Tavern, Canonbury,
Chap. 169, Temperance, White Swan Tavern, Deptford.
Metropolitan Chapter of Instruction, Portugal Hotel
Fleet-street, at 7; Comp. Brett, Preceptor.
Domestic Lodge of Instruction, Palmerston Tav., Grosvenor-park, Camberwell, at 8. Bro. John Thomas, Preceptor.
Faith Lodge of Instruction, Refreshment Rooms, Victoria-st.
(opposite Westminster Palace Hotel) at 8; Bro. C. A.
Cottebrune, Preceptor.
Yarborough Lodge of Instruction, Green Dragon, Stepney, at 8; Bro. Isaac Saqui, Preceptor.

Prince Fredk. William Lodge of Instruction (753), Knights of St. John Tavern, St. John's Wood Bro. F. G. Baker, Preceptor.
 Dalhousie Lodge of Instruction, King Edward, Triangle, Hackney, at 7.30. Bro. J. Saunders, Preceptor.
 Sydney Lodge of Instruction (829), Cambridge Hotel, Upper Norwood, at 7.30.
 Florence Nightingale Lodge of Instruction, Masonic Hall, William-street, Woolwich, at 7.30.
 Prosperity Lodge of Instruction, Gladstone Tavern, Bishopsgate-st. Within, at 7.30; Bro. Bolton, (W.M. 1227), Preceptor.
 St. Marylebone Lodge of Instruction (1305), British Stores Tavern, New-street, St. John's Wood, at 8; Bro. T. A. Adams, Preceptor.

WEDNESDAY, JUNE 5.

Quarterly Communication of Grand Lodge, at 6 for 7, p.m.
 Pythagorean Lodge of Instruction (79), Prince of Orange, Greenwich, at 8; Bro. J. Robt. Nash, Preceptor.
 United Strength Lodge of Instruction (228), the Grafton Arms, Prince of Wales' Road, Kentish Town, at 8; Bro. J. N. Frost, Preceptor.
 Israel Lodge of Instruction, Rising Sun Tavern, Globe-road, at 7.30; Bro. Isaac Saqui, Preceptor.
 New Concord Lodge of Instruction, Rosemary Branch Tavern, Hoxton, at 8.
 Confidence Lodge of Instruction, Railway Tav., London-street, City, at 7.30.
 Royal Union Lodge of Instruction, Horse and Groom Tavern, Winsley-street, Oxford-street, at 8. Bro. T. A. Adams, Preceptor.
 Peckham Lodge of Instruction, Maismore Arms, Park-road, Peckham at 8; Bro. David Rose, Preceptor.
 Temperance in the East Lodge of Instruction, George the Fourth, Catherine-street, Poplar.
 Stanhope Lodge of Instruction, Thicket Hotel, Anerly, at 7.30. p.m.; Bro. H. W. Lindus, Preceptor.

THURSDAY, JUNE 6.

Lodge 10, Westminster and Keystone, Freemasons' Hall.
 " 136, Good Report, City Terminus Hotel, Cannon-st.
 " 554, Yarborough, Green Dragon, Stepney.
 " 822, Victoria Rifles, Freemasons' Hall.
 " 1155, Excelsior, Sydney Arms, Lewisham-road.
 " 1351, St. Clement Danes, 265, Strand.
 " 1360, Royal Arthurs, Duke of Edinburgh Hotel, Wimbledon.
 Chapter 6, Moriah, Albion Tavern, Aldersgate-st.
 The R.A. Chapter of Improvement, Freemasons' Hall, at 7; Comp. Brett, Preceptor. Ceremony, explanation of R.A. Jewel and Solids, part sections.
 Fidelity Lodge of Instruction (3), Yorkshire Grey, London-st., Tottenham Court-road, at 8; Bro. T. A. Adams, Preceptor.
 Panmure Lodge of Instruction (720), Balham Hotel, Balham, at 7.30; Bro. John Thomas, Preceptor.
 Finsbury Lodge of Instruction, Jolly Anglers' Tavern, Bath-street, City-road; Bro. Stean, Preceptor.
 United Mariners' Lodge of Instruction, Three Cranes Mile-end-road, at 8; Bro. T. J. Barnes, Preceptor.
 St. George's Lodge of Instruction (140), Globe Tavern, Royal Hill, Greenwich, at 8.
 Whittington Lodge of Instruction (862), Crown Tavern, Holborn, at 8; Bro. Lewis Alexander, P.M. 188, Preceptor.
 Chigwell Lodge of Instruction, Bald-faced Stag Hotel, Buckhurst Hill, at 7.30.

FRIDAY, JUNE 7.

Lodge 742, Crystal Palace, Crystal Palace, Sydenham.
 " 1275, Star, Marquis of Granby, New Cross Road.
 Chapter 259, Prince of Wales's, Willis's Rooms, St. James's.
 Unions Emulation Lodge of Improvement for M.M.'s, Freemasons' Hall, at 7.
 Metropolitan Lodge of Instruction, Portugal Hotel, Fleet-street, at 7; Bro. Brett, Preceptor.
 Belgrave Lodge of Instruction, Duke of Wellington Hotel, Spring-gardens, Charing-cross; Bro. Pulsford, Preceptor.
 Doric Lodge of Instruction, Three Cranes Tavern, Mile-end-road, at 8; Bro. Isaac Saqui, Preceptor.
 Robert Burns Lodge of Instruction, Union Tavern, Air-street, Regent-st., at 8; Bro. W. Watson, Preceptor.
 Burgoyne Lodge of Instruction, Grafton Arms, Prince of Wales'-road, N.W., at 8.
 St. Luke's Lodge of Instruction (144), Gladstone Tavern, Brompton-road, S.W.
 United Pilgrims Lodge of Instruction, Duke of Edinburgh, Shepherd's-lane, Brixton, at 7; Bro. J. Thomas, P.M., Preceptor.
 Duke of Edinburgh Lodge of Instruction, Silver Lion, Penny-fields, Poplar, at 7; Br. D. S. Potts, Preceptor.
 St. James's Lodge of Instruction, Gregorian Arms Tavern, Jamaica-road, Bermondsey, at 8. Bro. Howes, P.M., Preceptor.
 Temperance Lodge of Instruction, Victoria Tav., Victoria road, Deptford, at 8.
 Burdett Courts Lodge of Instruction (1278), Approach Tavern, Approach-road, Victoria-park, at 8; Bro. Geo. W. Verry, Preceptor.
 Clapton Lodge of Instruction, White Hart, Clapton, at 7.30; Bro. John Saunders, Preceptor.
 Royal Standard Lodge of Instruction (1298), The Castle Tavern, Holloway, at 8; Bro. R. Lee, (P.M. 193, W.M. 1298,) Preceptor.
 Pythagorean Chapter of Instruction (No. 79), Prince of Orange, Greenwich-road, at 8; Comp. W. West Smith, Preceptor.
 Westbourne Lodge of Instruction (733) Horse and Groom, Winsley-street, Oxford-Street, at 8.

FREDERICK ADLARD,
MERCHANT TAILOR AND OUTFITTER,
 225, HIGH HOLBORN, W.C.
 Superior Tourist Suits from £2 15 0
 Black Dress Suits from 3 13 6
 Trousers in every variety, all wool, ... 0 16 0

FREDERICK ADLARD,
MANUFACTURER OF MASONIC CLOTHING,
 Inventor of the Masonic Jewel Attacher,
 (Registered 5 and 6 Victoria, cap. 100.)
 225, HIGH HOLBORN, W.C.

"MASONIC JEWEL ATTACHER.—Bro. Adlard, of 225, High Holborn, W.C., has invented an attacher, which, from its simplicity and convenience, has only to be universally known to be universally adopted. It has long been a subject of complaint that the wearing of the honourable insignia of rank and merit which grace the breasts of so many of our Brethren, plays sad havoc with the fabric and material of the coat to which they are attached. Bro. Adlard's invention entirely obviates this, in addition to saving much time and difficulty in the proper arrangement of the jewels, and we have very great pleasure in recommending it, warranted as we are in doing so by our personal experience. The price (7s. 6d.) places it within the reach of all."
Masonic Magazine.

Bro. Adlard's superior fitting Collars are also well worthy of the attention of the Craft.

"We have much pleasure in recommending Bro. Adlard's Jewel Attacher for its convenience and usefulness."—Freemason.

A SCENSIONTIDE.—"Gone up on High," a Sacred Song. Published for the benefit of the Girls' School.

Metzler & Co., London.

NOW READY.
Vol. IV. of THE FREEMASON,
 from January to December, 1871. Bound in cloth, with richly embossed device on cover.
 Price 15 shillings.
 The above forming a first-class reference and chronology of the leading events in Masonry during the past year.
 OFFICE: 198, Fleet-street.

Bro. CHARLES HEDGELONG,
 NEW AND SECOND-HAND BOOKSELLER,
 26, GRAFTON STREET, DUBLIN.
AGENT FOR "THE FREEMASON."

Just Published. Price Sixpence.

MUSIC FOR THE CEREMONY OF INITIATION.
 With Opening and Closing Hymns. Composed by Bro. EDWIN J. CROW, Mus: Bac: Cantab: W.M. 279 P. Prov. G.O. Leicestershire and Rutland, &c.
 NOVELLO, EWER & Co., London; and may be had from the Composer, De Montfort Terrace, Leicester.

TRY BARKERS' TROUSERS,
13/6
 Opposite the New Hospital,
DERBY ROAD, BOOTLE,
 Near Liverpool.

CHARLES WATSON and Co., 30, Cornhill,
 opposite the Royal Exchange, invite attention to the CORNHILL SHERRY, as their speciality, pure elegant and recherche, and worthy of a place on any gentleman's table.

THE CORNHILL SHERRY, elegant, pale and dry, 30s. per dozen. Carriage paid.
 CLARET..... 16s. 22s. 28s. 36s. 42s. to Five Guineas.
 SHERRY 22s. 26s. 30s. 36s. 42s. 48s. to 84s.
 PORT..... 28s. 34s. 42s. 48s. 54s. to 120s.
 CHAMPAGNE .. 36s. 42s. 54s. 60s. to 84s.

WHISKY—the Ben Nevis—CHARLES WATSON and Co.'s Speciality, 20s. per gallon; the softest and most fascinating Whisky for Taddy in the market.—30, Cornhill. Carriage free within 50 miles. Sample Bottles may be had.

THE CORNHILL SHERRY, rich gold, 30s. per dozen, carriage paid. 30, Cornhill. Sample bottles may be had.

Established 1798.
MESSRS. CHARLES WATSON and Co., of 30, Cornhill, forwarded us samples of their 'Cornhill Sherry.' We have taken the opinion of competent judges and veteran wine consumers upon its merits, and pronounce it decidedly the best of the wines at a similar cost which we have tasted, and a great many came before us during the process of our analysis."—Medical Press.

CORNHILL SHERRY.—CHARLES WATSON and Co., 30, Cornhill (opposite Royal Exchange), requests the favour of a visit to these old-established cellars, containing a large stock of the finest old Wines of every country, some curious and rare, to please the most critical connoisseurs. Descriptive list free. C. W. and Co. appoint Agents, with first-class references, in towns where not represented.

Dr. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE.

THE ORIGINAL AND ONLY GENUINE.

CHLORODYNE is admitted by the Profession to be the most wonderful and valuable remedy ever discovered. CHLORODYNE is the best remedy known for Coughs, Consumption, Bronchitis, Asthma. CHLORODYNE effectually checks and arrests those too often fatal diseases—Diphtheria, Fever, Croup, Ague. CHLORODYNE acts like a charm in Diarrhoea, and is the only specific in Cholera and Dysentery. CHLORODYNE effectually cuts short all attacks of Epilepsy, Hysteria, Palpitation and Spasms. CHLORODYNE is the only palliative in Neuralgia, Rheumatism, Gout, Cancer, Toothache, Meningitis, &c.

From Lord FRANCIS CONYNHAM, Mount Charles, Donegal, 11th December, 1868.

"Lord Francis Conynham, who this time last year bought some of Dr. J. Collis Browne's Chlorodyne from Mr. Devonport, and has found it a most wonderful medicine, will be glad to have half a dozen bottles sent at once to the above address.

"Earl Russel communicated to the College of Physicians that he had received a dispatch from her Majesty's Consul at Manilla, to the effect that Cholera had been raging fearfully, and that the ONLY remedy of any service was CHLORODYNE."—See Lancet, Dec. 1, 1864.

From W. VESALIUS PETTIGREW, M.D. Hon F.R.C.S. England; Formerly Lecturer on Anatomy and Physiology, at St. George's School of Medicine.

"I have no hesitation in stating, after a fair trial of Chlorodyne, that I have never met with any medicine so efficacious as an Anti-spasmodic and Sedative. I have used it in Consumption, Asthma, Diarrhoea, and other diseases, and am most perfectly satisfied with the results."

From Dr. THOMAS SANDIFORD, Passage West, Cork.

"I will thank you to send me a further supply of Chlorodyne. It was the most efficacious remedy I ever used affording relief in violent attacks of Spasms within a minute after being taken. One patient in particular, who has suffered for years with periodical attacks of Spasms of a most painful nature, and unable to obtain relief from other remedies, such as Opium, &c., finds nothing so prompt and efficacious as Chlorodyne."

From J. McGRIGOR CROFT, M.D., M.R.C.P. London, late Staff Surgeon to H.M.F.

"Sir,—After prescribing Dr. J. Collis Browne's Chlorodyne for the last three years in severe cases of Neuralgia and Tic-Doloureux, I feel that I am in a position to testify to its valuable effects. Really, in some cases it acts like a charm, when all other means had failed. Without being asked for this report, I must come forward and state my candid opinion that it is a most valuable medicine, and I have recommended several Chemists in this neighbourhood not to be without it for prescriptions."

From Jno. E. GOULSTONE, M.D., late Principal Surgeon to the Steamship "Great Eastern."

"I can confidently state that Chlorodyne is an admirable Sedative and Anti-Spasmodic, having used it in Neuralgia, Hysteria, Asthma, and Consumption, with remarkably favourable results. It relieved a fit of Asthma in four minutes, where the patient had suffered eleven years in a most distressing manner, no previous remedy having had so immediate and beneficial an effect."

From Dr. B. J. BOUTON and Co., Horncastle.

"We have made pretty extensive use of Chlorodyne in our practice lately, and look upon it as an excellent direct Sedative and anti-Spasmodic. It seems to allay pain and irritation, in whatever organ and from whatever cause. It induces a feeling of comfort and quietude not obtainable by any other remedy, and it seems to possess this great advantage over all other sedatives, that it leaves no unpleasant after effects."

J. C. BAKER, Esq., M.D., Bideford.

"It is, without doubt, the most valuable and certain Anodyne we have."

CAUTION.—BEWARE OF PIRACY AND IMITATIONS.

CAUTION.—Vice-Chancellor, Sir W. Page Wood stated that Dr. J. Collis Browne was undoubtedly the Inventor of CHLORODYNE; that the story of the defendant, Freeman, was deliberately untrue, which, he regretted to say, had been sworn to.—See Times, 13th July, 1864.

Sold in Bottles at 1/1 1/2, 2/0, 4/6, and 11/0 each. None is genuine without the words "Dr. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE" on the Government Stamp. Overwhelming Medical Testimony accompanies each Bottle.

SOLE MANUFACTURER—J. T. DAVENPORT, 33, Great Russell-street, Bloomsbury, London.

MASONIC ASSURANCE COMPANY, 9, NEW BRIDGE-STREET, LONDON. ESTABLISHED 1868.

THE ADDRESS recently issued by the newly appointed Chairman, Bro. J. RANKIN STEBBING, P. G. D., may be obtained on application at the offices of the Company.

FREDERICK BIGG, P.M., Manager.

Active Agents will be treated with liberality.

NEW YORK LIFE INSURANCE COMPANY, ESTABLISHED 1845.

Conducted under the official supervision of the State of New York.

$100,000 have been deposited with Trustees in England.

Life Assurance only. Purely Mutual. All Profits annually to Policy Holders.

Accumulated Funds, December 31st, 1870 ... £3,172,244 Surplus over all Liabilities, and Reserve Fund 389,322 Income for Year 1870 ... 1,317,271

Bro. M. X. COHEN, SPECIAL AGENT, 76 & 77, CHEAPSIDE, E.C.

Norwich and London ACCIDENT INSURANCE ASSOCIATION.

ESTABLISHED 1856.

SUBSCRIBED CAPITAL £100,000.

For Insuring against

ACCIDENTAL DEATH,

With

Compensation for Personal Injury, Caused by Accidents

CHIEF OFFICES—ST. GILES'S STREET, NORWICH. LONDON: 10, OLD JEWRY CHAMBERS. Secretary: CHARLES R. GILMAN, Esq. London Manager: Mr. GEORGE POWELL.

THE NEW MASONIC CANDLES, Ionic, Doric and Corinthian, Emblematically Arranged for Worshipful Master, Senior and Junior Wardens.

6s. per set of 3 one-pound Candles. Packing Cases 6d. each.

BRO. GEORGE KENNING'S

MASONIC DEPOTS, 2, 3, & 4, LITTLE BRITAIN, AND 198, FLEET STREET, E.C.

J. E. PETERS, ORNAMENTAL ENGRAVER AND FANCY ENAMELLER.

41, Clerkenwell Close.

Writing, Engraving of every description, Masonic Emblems Engraved or Enamelled; old enamelled Work repaired; Country Orders attended to with despatch.

SHEPPARD & Co. PRIME CANADIAN HAMS.

9d. lb.

113 & 115, BOROUGH & LONDON BRIDGE, S.E.

S. WELCH, WRITER AND GRAINER.

6, MAIDENHEAD COURT,

ALDERSGATE STREET, E.C.

ROSE CROIX TRACING BOARDS, Five Guineas the Pair.

MASONIC DEPOTS, 2, 3, & 4, LITTLE BRITAIN, AND 198, FLEET-STREET.

THE "EXPRESS" GENERAL STEAM PRINTING OFFICE, TRAFFORD-STREET, HULME, MANCHESTER, S. W.

BRO. MASON begs to state that he can forward PRINTING to any address in the country, carriage paid.

Table listing printing services and prices: 100 Cards, 10, 20, 25, 30, and 36; 5,000 Handbills, 12 0, 20 0, 25 0, 34 0 to 50 0; 12 Funeral Cards, 1 0, 2 0; 24 ditto, 2 0, 4 0; 100 Posting Bills, 5 0, 7 0, 10 0, 12 0, 15 0, 20 0; 50,000 Wake's or Paulden's Annual Circulars, £87 10; Gentlemen's or Ladies' Private Cards, 50 for 2 0; 100 3 6; 12 Window Bills, 1 0, 1 6, 2 0, 5 0 to 7 6; 5,000 Billheads, at per 1000, 5 0, 6 0, 7 0, 10 0; Society Rules, 10 pages, 30 0, 35 0, 40 0, 45 0, 10 105 0. ESTIMATES ON APPLICATION.

LONDON AND SUBURBAN MUTUAL BUILDING SOCIETY, Enrolled in 1855, pursuant to Act of Parliament. SHARES, £25 each, may be paid in one sum, or by Monthly Subscriptions of 5s. per share. INVESTING MEMBERS receive 5 per cent. Interest, and Share of Surplus Profits. MONEY ADVANCED ON MORTGAGE, without Premium, for any term of years. Bro. JONATHAN TAYLOR (Doric 933), Secretary. Offices:—107a, Fenchurch-street, E.C.

THE BIRKBECK Is the only Building Society whose Annual Receipts exceeds ONE MILLION! How to Purchase a House for Two Guineas per Month, With immediate possession and no Rent to pay. Apply at the Office of the BIRKBECK BUILDING SOCIETY, 29 & 30, Southampton-buildings, Chancery-lane. How to purchase a Plot of Land for Five Shillings per Month, With immediate possession, either for Building or Gardening purposes, apply at the Office of the BIRKBECK FREEHOLD LAND SOCIETY, 29 & 30 Southampton-buildings, Chancery-lane. How to Invest Money with safety at 4 1/2 per cent Interest, Apply to the Office of the BIRKBECK BANK. All sums under £50 repayable upon demand. Current accounts opened similar to Ordinary Bankers. Cheque Books supplied. Office hours from 10 till 4 daily, on Mondays from 10 till 9, and on Saturdays from 10 till 2. A small pamphlet, containing full particulars, may be obtained gratis, or sent Post-free on application to FRANCIS RAVENSCROFT, Manager.

THE SOUTH-WESTERN INDEX LIST of Furnished and Unfurnished Houses to be let, and of Estates for sale in the South-west of London, is published Monthly by MR. JAS. STEVENS, AUCTIONEER & ESTATE AGENT, CLAPHAM COMMON, S.W. A useful work of reference for those seeking Residences, and saving much trouble in obtaining information of properties for disposal in the S.W. district. Send post-card with your address, and a copy will be forwarded by return post.

THE LONDON MIRROR. Published every Saturday; price 4d. The object of this journal is to set forth the claims of the many Religious, Educational, Benevolent, and Prudential Institutions of the United Kingdom, and week by week to report their proceedings, whether as Meetings, Sermons, Anniversaries, or Elections, so as to present these National Institutions to the favour of the Public. Office, 59, Southampton-row, Russell-square, London, W.C.

"THE FREEMASON" OF ST. LOUIS. The Largest Masonic Monthly in the World. Published at St. Louis, Mo., by George Frank Goutley, Grand Secretary and Recorder of the four Grand Bodies of Missouri. The Freemason contains tidings from every quarter of the world, and will be found of great advantage to all Masons, especially those interested in American affairs. Terms $2 per annum, and to those who subscribe for the London Freemason the price will be $1.50 currency. Postage free. Subscriptions received at the Office of the London "Freemason," 198, Fleet-street.

THE MASONIC TROWEL.—A Masonic Journal, published on the 15th of every month, by H. G. Reynolds, Junr., Springfield, Illinois, United States of America. Sixteen pages, large quarto. Circulation 20,000 monthly. Terms to be obtained, and Subscriptions received at the Freemason Office, 198, Fleet-street and forwarded free of charge.

TRUTH MUST PREVAIL.—Common Sense. Lamps, Baths, Cutlery, Brushes, Fenders and Fire Irons Electroplate and Nickel-Silver Goods.

R. D. PARR, General House Furnishing Ironmonger, 42, BLACKMAN STREET, BOROUGH.

OFFERS nothing extraordinary, but REALLY Good Articles at fair and reasonable prices. He does not keep an "Immense Stock," but sufficiently large for any person to select from. He does not sell "cheaper than every other house in the Trade," but quite as cheap as any. A visit will, at all times, be very much appreciated.

THE JEWISH CHRONICLE Price Twopence. OFFICE: 43 FINSBURY SQUARE, E.C.

TESSELATED CARPETING. FOR Lodges, Chapters, Encampments, &c. Four Feet wide, 3/9 per Yard. MASONIC DEPOTS, 2, 3 & 4, LITTLE BRITAIN, AND 198, FLEET STREET, E.C.

Bro. WILLIAMS. MASONIC EMBLEMS Lithographic Artist Designed and Engraved ON ENGRAVER ON WOOD. ON STONE, WOOD, or VELLUM. 8, Featherstone Buildings, Holborn 25, Acton Street, London, W.C.

GLENFIELD STARCH is the only kind used by Her Majesty's Laundry. Those Ladies who have not yet used the Glenfield Starch, are respectfully solicited to give it a trial, and, carefully follow out the directions printed on every package. It is rather more difficult to make than other Starches, but when this is overcome, they will say, like the Queen's Laundry, that it is the finest Starch they ever used. When you ask for the Glenfield, see that you get it.

BRIDGE HOUSE HOTEL, LONDON BRIDGE, Opposite the South Eastern, and London, Brighton, and South Coast Railways.

THIS Hotel has great facilities for Meetings, Charitable Institutions, Wedding Breakfasts, Public Dinners, Balls, Soirees, and is allowed to be in real domestic comfort, one of the Best in the Metropolis, the tariff on application to JOSEPH H. SPENCER.

THE GREAT WESTERN HOTEL (SNOW HILL STATION) BIRMINGHAM. "One of the most elegant, comfortable and economical Hotels in the three kingdoms.—The Field, July 31, 1869." "From experience gained by repeated visits, we are happy to be able to testify to the exceeding comfort of this Hotel. We have much pleasure in recommending it."—The Engineer, October 14, 1870. "An establishment remarkable for its able management, reasonable charges, and general comfort."—Bell's Life, June, 31, 1871. Good Accommodation for Lodges, Chapters, &c.

City Terminus Hotel, Cannon-street, LONDON.

WELL adapted for Banquets, Balls, Amateur Dramatic Entertainments, Public Meetings, and Arbitrations. The large Hall is capable of seating upwards of Twelve Hundred people. SYDNEY SPENCER, Manager.

Guildhall Tavern, Gresham-st., E.C. SPACIOUS Dining-rooms, Chop and Steak-rooms, Luncheon-bars, and Smoking Rooms. Rooms of all sizes, suitable for Auction Sales, Consultations, Arbitrations, Building Societies, &c.; also for Freemasons' Lodges and Banquets, Private Dinners, &c. Guildhall Tavern Company (Limited), 32 and 33, Gresham-street, GEORGE CRAWFORD, Manager and Secretary.

Masons' Hall Tavern, MASONS' AVENUE, BASINGHALL-STREET, CITY. THE above old-established Tavern is NOW OPEN, newly decorated, by Bro. CHARLES GOSDEN, late Manager of the Freemasons' Tavern Company. Every accommodation will be found for Lodges, Chapters, Mark and other degrees, for their Meetings, Dinners, Suppers, &c., and every attention will be paid to their comfort and enjoyment by the new Proprietor.

The Alexandra Restaurant, 7, CONDUIT-STREET, REGENT-STREET. Public and Private Dining Rooms. First-class Cooking and Wines. Open for Suppers after the Theatres. Bro. F. HILFREICH, Proprietor.

REEVES, SON and CO., Printers, Wholesale Stationers, and Account Book Manufacturers, PLAYHOUSE YARD, BLACKFRIARS, LONDON, E.C. Next the "Times" Office.

- REEVES, SON and CO. Publishers.
- REEVES, SON and CO. Newspaper Printers.
- REEVES, SON and CO., Magazine Printers.
- REEVES, SON and CO., Law Printers.
- REEVES, SON and CO., Commercial Printers.
- REEVES, SON and CO., Show Card Printers.
- REEVES, SON and CO., Label Printers.
- REEVES, SON and CO., Ornamental and Colour Printers.
- REEVES, SON and CO., Bankers' Cheque Printers.
- REEVES, SON and CO., Copper Plate Printers.
- REEVES, SON and CO., Lithographic Printers.
- REEVES, SON and CO., Lithographic Artists.
- REEVES, SON and CO., Map Printers and Colourers.
- REEVES, SON and CO., Designers.
- REEVES, SON and CO., Stereotypers.
- REEVES, SON and CO., Engravers and Die-Sinkers.
- REEVES, SON and CO., offer many advantages to Manufacturers and all persons requiring large quantities of Paper and Printing, as they possess the most approved machinery, as well as every other facility for executing orders entrusted to them in the cheapest and best manner. As PUBLISHERS, their Offices are very central, and they render accounts monthly.

Printed and Published by the Proprietor, Brother GEORGE KENNING at his Offices, 2, 3, and 4, Little Britain, and 198, Fleet-street in the City of London, and 2, Monument-place, Liverpool, in the County of Lancaster.—SATURDAY, JUNE 1, 1872.

TABLE OF CONTENTS

Aids to Study..... 347
 Consecration of the Friends in Council Lodge 348
 Historical Notice of the St. Clairs of Rosslyn 349
 United Grand Lodge—Quarterly Communication ... 352
 Grand Lodge of Mark Master Masons 355
 CRAFT MASONRY :—
 Metropolitan 356
 Provincial 356
 Provincial Grand Lodge of Lincolnshire 356
 ROYAL ARCH :—
 Gibraltar 357
 CORRESPONDENCE :—
 The Royal Ark Mariners Degree 358
 Masonic Meetings for next week... 358
 Advertisements..... 345, 346, 359, 360

AIDS TO STUDY.

BY BRO. WM. CARPENTER, P.M. & P.Z. 177.

V.

Resuming the subject with which my last paper concluded, namely, the division of the human family into the three varieties—Caucasian, Mongolian, and Ethiopian, or Black, or Negro; it may be well to repeat, that the sacred record, in its account of the dispersion of mankind, and of the division of the earth (Gen. x.) confines itself to the primary settlements of the Caucasian race, so called, because the most perfect types are found among the natives of the Caucasian isthmus. The student of history must inform himself of the original families, their geographical position, and their political nationality, to be able to enter intelligently and profitably into their subsequent history and exploits, and to mark the peculiarities attaching to them. Be it remembered, then, that the Caucasian race occupies all Europe, except Lapland, Finland, and part of Hungary; America and Australia, as far as their population is of European origin; Asia Minor, Arabia, Persia, India, and the whole north of Africa, to the southern border of the Great Desert. The Mongolian race occupies all Asia, north of Persia and the Himalayas, and east of the Bramahpootra; Lapland, Finland, part of Hungary, in Europe; and the Arctic regions of North America. The Ethiopian race occupies the whole of the African continent south of the Great Desert; one half of Madagascar, together with Australia, Papua, and Borneo, so far as the population of these islands is aboriginal.

But, as intimated, it will be well that the student not only gets a clear view of the character of the races into which ethnologists and historians have divided the human family, but also of the families from which they originally sprung. It is on all hands admitted that there exists no more interesting record, ethnological and geographical, independent of its scriptural authority, than that contained in the tenth chapter of Genesis. "These are the generations of the sons of Noah; Shem, Ham, and Japheth. Without discussing the several names in detail, Mr. Philip Smith, whose "Ancient History of the East" I again commend to the student, suggests that we may be tolerably sure of these general results.

1. The Hamite Race, which seems first to have left their common home, is located in Africa and South Arabia, in four branches:—1st the Cushites in Ethiopia and the southern part of Arabia, separated only by the straits of Bab-el-mandeb. 2nd, the Egyptians, under their historic name of Mizraim; with the kindred Philistines on the one side, and (probably) north African tribes on the other. 3rd. The Libyans (probably) designated by the name of Phut, 4th. The Canaanites, whose tribes are particularly enumerated. The mention of Sidon among these indicates that the first settlers in Phœnicia were Hamite; though the Phœnicians of history were undoubtedly Shemite. The like displacements clearly happened in Arabia, where the same names (Havilah and Sheba) occur among the sons of Cush, and again among those of the Shemite Joktan. Besides these nations, the record mentions a personal name among the sons of Cush, Nimrod, the founder of a kingdom, with four cities, in the plain of Babylonia; and there are later traces of Cushites in the east. They seem, in fact, to have spread over India and the Islands of the Eastern Archipelago. In all the countries of their abode the Hamite race seem to have been the pioneers of material civilisation, and the founders of States based on mere force. Their enduring monuments are gigantic buildings, the sculptures upon which attest the grossness of their worship of nature. Everywhere, except in Egypt (and there also at last), they gave way before the races of Shem and Japheth, fulfilling Noah's prophetic curse, that Ham should be the servant of his brethren. National grandeur yielded to spiritual power, and the active energy of political life.

2. The Japhethite Race extends from the Caucasian region to the south-east, across the table-land of Iran; to the west, over the peninsula of Asia Minor and the neighbouring islands, as far as Greece, (the "Isles of the Gentiles,") and to the north-west, all round the shores of the Black Sea. That the tribes enumerated in the record were the parents of those which over-spread all Europe on the one hand, and became masters of Northern India on the other, admits of no reasonable doubt.

3. Between the other two, the Shemite Race remained nearer its primeval seats, as the destined guardian of the primeval religion and traditions. Its nucleus in Armenia (probably represented by the name Arphaxed), forms the apex of a triangle, resting on the Arabian peninsula, along the east side of which we have the Assyrians (Asshur) and Elymæans, (Elame) the latter of whom gave way to the Japhethite Persians; and on its west side the Aramæan race (Aram, denoting highland) of Northern Mesopotamia and Syria, whose Hebrew descendants (Eber) afterwards possessed the land of Canaan. The middle space of the Syrian Desert, and the whole peninsula of Arabia is the seat of the Arab tribes, denoted by Joktan, the son of Eber, with whom were afterwards mingled other Semitic descendants of Abraham.

It has been intimated, in a former paper, that the two main sources of knowledge, as to the natural history of man, are human physiology and human language; lines of argument distinct in themselves, yet parallel in direction, and mutually giving force to every conclusion in which they concur. Through these channels alone can we proceed upwards, when history deserts us, and tradition throws a light too flickering or false to be safely trusted. It was a profound saying of Wilhelm Humboldt, that man is man only by means of speech, but that in order to invent speech, he must be man already. This is a powerful argument for the unity of that race which is distinguished from all other animals, by the possession of articulate language. But, moreover, the greatest philologists of the present day seem to be approaching the conclusion, that the evidence of comparative grammar, so far as it goes, is in favour of the original unity of human language. "One of the grandest results of modern comparative philology," says Dr. Meyer, "has been to show that all languages belonging to one common stock—and we may say, enlarging this view, all languages of the earth—are but scattered indications of that primitive state of human intellect, and more particularly of the imitative faculty, under the higher excitement of poetical inspiration, in which the language originated, and with which every language remains connected, as well through the physiological unity of the human race, as through the historical unity of the family to which it more especially belongs. (Bunsen's Christianity of Mankind, iii., 163.) In like manner, Professor Max Muller says, "these two points comparative philology has gained (1.) Nothing necessitates the admission of different independent beginnings for the material elements of Turanian, Semitic, and Aryan branches of speech; nay, it is possible, even now, to point out radicals, which, under various changes and disguises, have been current in these three branches ever since their first separation. (2.) Nothing necessitates the admission of different beginnings for the formal elements of the Turanian, Semitic, and Aryan branches of speech; and though it is impossible to derive the Aryan system of grammar from the Semitic, or the Semitic from the Turanian, we can perfectly understand how, either through individual influences, or by the wear and tear of grammar in its own continuous working, the different systems of grammar of Asia and Europe may have been produced." (Ibid., pp. 479, 480.) Once more, although it may not be possible singly to assign all Semitic tongues to the descendants of Shem, Aryan to the descendants of Japheth, and Turanian to the descendants of Ham, it is still observable, that comparative philology seems to have reduced all languages to three distinct stocks, even the rapid degeneracy of barbarian dialects, not wholly obscuring their relationship to one of these three families. This is the more to be noticed, when we learn that in savage tribes those who speak the same dialect will sometimes, by separation and estrangement, become, in the course of a generation, unintelligible to each other. (See the "Speaker's Commentary," vol. i., p. 83.)

Languages are divided, according to their form, into three classes:—(1.) Isolating, consisting of monosyllabic roots, entirely destitute of composition and grammatical inflection; of which the great type is the Chinese. (2.) Agglutinative, in which grammatical changes are denoted by the mere juxtaposition of different roots, and which is spoken chiefly by the Nomad tribes of Asia, and Northern Europe, and by some of those of Southern India, the Malay Peninsula, and the Indian and Pacific Archipelagos. Modern ethnologists regard these dialects as characteristic of what they call the Turanian family. (3.) Inflecting, in which the prefixes and terminations which modify the meaning and relations of the principal root are welded with it into one word, having lost their radical character.

The inflectional languages are divided into two families, the Indo-European and the Semitic. (1.) The Indo-European, or Indo-Germanic languages are so named from the two extremities of the chain in which they stretch from south-east to north-west, across Asia to Europe. They are sometimes also called Aryan, from the races which peopled Eastern Persia and Northern India. The sacred language of India, the Sanskrit, stands first in the series. Next comes the ancient and modern languages of Persia, and the other countries in the table-land of Iran; then those of Armenia and the Caucasian Isthmus; whence the family spreads out over all Europe, to the shores of the North Sea and the Atlantic. (2.) The Semitic languages are so called, because the most conspicuous members of the family are those whose Semitic descent is affirmed in Scripture; the Hebrews and Arabs, Syrians and Assyrians. These nations occupied, and for the most part, still occupy, the south-west corner of Asia, to the west of the Indo-Germanic zone; pent in between the highlands of Armenia and Iran, on the east; the Mediterranean and Red Sea, on the west, and the Gulf of Arabia, on the South.

As yet, comparative philology has not succeeded in establishing a distinct family of languages corresponding to the Hamitic race; and these languages are meanwhile classed as Sub-Semitic. Hence we have the division into (1) Semitic Proper, including Aramaean, Hebrew, Arabic, and Ethiopic; and (2) Sub-Semitic, including the Egyptian or Coptic, and, perhaps, the languages of the ancient Libyans, still preserved by the Kabyles and Touargs of North Africa, and some tribes the Upper Nile.

What has been said will show the striking general agreement of the record in Genesis with the results of comparative philology. The Indo-European family corresponds to the Japhethite races, not only as far as the range included in the biblical record; but the extensions of the former are what might be expected from the latter. The range of the Semitic family proper is precisely that assigned to Shemite races, with the addition of Ethiopia, where, as in the neighbouring parts of Arabia, they displaced the Cushites; while the more complicated relations of the Sub-Semitic languages are what we might have expected from the movements of the Hamites and Shemites. The whole result is to divide the nations of the ancient world into two great groups, of which the one expanded and made more free and powerful the civilisation begun by the other. The very names of Shem (exultation), and Japheth (enlargement), are symbolical of those destinies of the races which were foretold in Noah's prophecy, "God shall enlarge Japheth, and he shall dwell in the tabernacles (inherit the power and high privileges) of Shem."

The course of history establishes another broad division of the ancient nations into the Eastern and the Western; the latter representing the free energy of the Indo-European races; the former, not uninfluenced by the same element, as contributed by the Aryan stock, absorbed it into its own mass of immobility and deoptism. Thus the Median and Persian conquerors of the Babylonian empire, and, long afterwards, the Greek rulers of Egypt and Syria, conformed to the Oriental type. The attentive reader of history will not fail to note the great distinction which marks the two different streams, and the two antagonistic principles of ancient history—the eastern and the western—the civilisation of the Nile and the Euphrates, with the fixed principles of their great monarchies, and the higher civilisation, and noble, political, literary, and artistic life which grew up on the shores of the Mediterranean, and were destined to cover the whole world. Our early study of, and sympathy with the latter, is, however, left imperfect, unless we are familiar with what the former did to prepare its way, so as to understand the full significance of the ultimate triumph of the West.

CONSECRATION OF THE FRIENDS IN COUNCIL LODGE, No. 1383.

Another gratifying and interesting event occurred at the New Hall, 33, Golden-square, on Monday, the 3rd inst., which, like that which took place on the 8th ult., will not soon cease to be remembered by those brethren who participated in it, viz.: the constituting a new lodge, and installing the Earl of Carnarvon, as its first W.M.

There were present on the occasion, the following brethren:—The Rt. Hon. the Earl of Carnarvon, Deputy Grand Master of England; the Earl of Limerick, Prov. Grand Master for Bristol; Lord Lindsay, Past Grand Warden of England, and Prov. Grand Master for Aberdeen; the Rev. John Huyshe, Prov. Grand Master for Devon, and Past Grand Chaplain of England; Dr. Robert Hamilton, District Grand Master for Jamaica; W. W. Beach, Prov. Grand Master for Hants and Isle of Wight, &c.; Chas. Hunter, Prov. Grand Master for Aberdeenshire East, Past Master 755, England; George Chatterton, No. 1 Ireland, and Deputy Prov. Grand Master for Munster; Le Docteur Verstraeten, P.M., Bruxelles; Rev. A. Bruce Frazer, Grand Chaplain, and Prov. G.S.W. for Cambridge; John Hervey, Grand Secretary; J. B. Monckton, Grand Senior Deacon, P.M. 197; Col. A. W. Adair, Past Prov. Grand Master for Somerset; Chas. Hutton Gregory, Past Grand Deacon of England, P.M. 197; Sir M. Costa, Past Grand Organist for England; W. Hickman, Past Grand A.D.C. of England; G. J. Vigne, Past S.G.W. Somerset; Capt. N. G. Philips, P.M. 311, 333, I.C.; General H. J. M. P. Montagu, Deputy Grand Master Dorset; Hyde Pullen, Past Grand S.B. of England, and Past Deputy Prov. Grand Master Isle of Wight; S. Rawson, Past Prov. Grand Master for China; Sir P. Mc C. de Colquhoun, P.M. 370; Rev. P. H. Newnham, Prov. Grand Chaplain Hants, Past Prov. Grand Chaplain for Dorset; C. A. Newnham, Past Prov. Grand Senior Warden Staffordshire, &c.; Dr. F. H. Woodford, Past Prov. Grand Senior Warden for Somerset; E. D. Hamill, W.M., 197; Henry Gr. P.M.

187, S.W. 197; Chas. E. Hollingsworth, P.M. and Sec. 197; Gen. H. E. Doherty, Past Prov. Grand Senior Deacon for Somerset; J. Glaisher, P.M. 33; R. Costa, P.M. 263; G. Kenning, Prov. G. Deacon, Mid'x, P.M. 192; J. MacGlashan, 354, Jamaica; Col. Guyon, P. G.S.B. Somerset; John Read, P.M. 88; T. W. Boord, W.M. 222; Cap. W. Portlock Dadson, 913; Robert De Lacy, 114; C. J. Burgess, 429, 1216, &c.; J. F. Starkey, S.W. 855; R. Spencer, P.M. and Treas. Grand Steward's Lodge; J. Keregidge, G. T. Carter, 173; John Hodges, 1319, &c.,

The brethren being arranged, Bro. the Earl of Limerick took the chair by virtue, of dispensation from the M.W.G.M. the Marquis of Ripon, and appointed Bro. Hutton Gregory, P.M. of the Jerusalem Lodge No. 197, as S.W. pro tem. and Bro. J. B. Monckton, also a P.M. of 197, as J.W. pro tem.—a graceful compliment being thus displayed to the Jerusalem Lodge—the W.M. (Bro. Gregory), Wardens and members of that lodge having recommended the petition of the Friends in Council Lodge, to the consideration of the M.W.G.M. The brethren of the new lodge were then introduced, bearing the consecrating elements, and arranged in their proper places.

The Grand Secretary read the warrant, and the brethren of the new lodge having given their approval of the officers named in the warrant to preside over them, the Officiating Brother, the Earl of Limerick, proceeded to constitute the brethren into a regular lodge, which was very efficiently and beautifully done with appropriate honours and musical accompaniments.

As soon as the ceremony of consecration was completed, the Grand Secretary, Bro. J. Hervey presented the R.W. Bro. the Earl of Carnarvon, with a few truly kind and complimentary remarks, as the W.M. designate for installation, who, after having duly given his assent to the ancient charges, and formally undertaken the duties of W.M. of the lodge, was invested, placed in his chair in ancient and solemn form, and saluted accordingly. The W.M. requested Bro. C. J. Vigne to act as his P. M. for the year, who was invested with the collar of the office.

The W.M. having been greeted and proclaimed in all regularity, was pleased to appoint the following brethren as his officers for the ensuing year:—Bros. Capt. N. G. Philips, S.W.; and Dr. R. Hamilton, J.W. J. Huyshe, who had acted as Chaplain during the ceremony of consecration with much solemnity, kindly received the collar of Chaplain for Bro. Rev. E. H. H. Vernon. Sir M. Costa was invested as Treasurer; Hyde Pullen was appointed and invested as Secretary; Col. A. W. Adair, as S.D.; Gen. H. Clerke, as J.D.; J. M. P. Montagu, as I.G.; Hyde Pullen undertook the additional duty of Director of Ceremonies; John Read was appointed Organist. Bro. Hyde Pullen, who had acted as Director of the Ceremonies during the consecration and installation, then delivered the usual addresses with the impressiveness for which he is so well known.

The W.M., in kind and appropriate terms, then proposed as joining members to the Lodge the following brethren:—Sir P. Colquhoun, R. Costa, the Rev. E. H. H. Vernon, Major S. H. Clerke, the Earl of Limerick, Gen. H. G.

Doherty, T. W. Boord, Col. H. T. Guyon, Capt. C. T. Burgess, the Rev. J. Huyshe, S. Rawson, John Hervey, C. C. Pole, J. Oxley Oxland, Lord Leigh, Lord Skelmersdale, James Glaisher, C. Hutton Gregory, Capt. G. A. Phayre, Joseph Gundry, W. W. Beach, Lord Lindsay, R. W. Falconer, Capt. W. Portlock Dadson, Christopher Atkinson Newnham, Rev. P. H. Newnham, Charles Fendelow, Capt. the Hon. A. W. A. N. Hood, J. Braddick Monckton, Rev. W. F. Short, J. H. Woodforde, and John Read.

The W.M. asked the brethren to pass a vote of thanks to the officiating brethren for the admirable manner in which they had, one and all, done their duties, which was responded to by acclamation, and Bro. the Earl of Limerick acknowledged the compliment for himself and those who had assisted him.

The Worshipful Master then addressed a few kind and affectionate remarks to the brethren, expressing his fervent hopes for the prosperity of the Lodge, and his own earnest determination to promote as far as possible, the happiness of the brethren.

The Lodge was then closed, and the brethren separated, highly gratified with the ceremonials as well as the beautiful decorations of this new hall.

HISTORICAL NOTICE OF THE ST. CLAIRS OF ROSSLYN, GRAND MASTER MASONS OF SCOTLAND.

BY BRO. CHALMERS I. PATON.

[Continued from page 332.]

He was succeeded by his son William. William, third Earl of Orkney, of this family, was one of the hostages for James I. of Scotland, when he was permitted to visit Scotland in 1421, after his captivity during his youth in England. This Earl was afterwards appointed Admiral of Scotland, and received a grant of the Earldom of Caithness on his renunciation of that of Nithsdale, to which he had a claim. King James III., having acquired the Orkney Islands, on his marriage with Margaret of Denmark, in 1489, the Earl of Orkney and Caithness resigned his Earldom of Orkney into the King's hands, and it was annexed to the crown by Act of Parliament in 1471, lands in life being bestowed upon him in compensation for it. Earldoms were not then, as now, mere dignities, but the possession of them implied territorial rights, revenues, and the duty of rendering military services.

The St. Clairs of Rosslyn descended from Sir Oliver St. Clair, son of the above-mentioned William, Earl of Orkney and Caithness. Sir Oliver is generally said to have been the eldest son of the Earl, by his second wife, although the Caithness family have always maintained that his brother William, from whom they derive their descent, was the elder. However, the Rosslyn estates were far greater than those of the Earldom of Caithness, and in those days, earldoms and baronies were often disposed of by will, like estates or other possessions.

In the Peerage of England, we have a remarkable example of the disregard of mere primogeniture in the settlement of the Duchy of Somerset on the male issue of the second marriage of the first Duke; and we have a somewhat similar instance in the present day in the peerage of Cromarty; created in favour of the present Duchess of Sutherland as the Countess of Cromarty, her second son being constituted her heir in that peerage, to the exclusion of her elder son, the heir of the dukedom. Still more to the point, however, is the case of the Earldom of Breadalbane, which was granted to the first earl, with a right to dispose of it by will, which right he exercised—apparently on account of the political troubles of the times—to the exclusion of his eldest son, giving the earldom by his will to his second son, whose descendants have long enjoyed it.

William, Earl of Orkney and Caithness, was the first of his family who held the office of Grand Master Mason of Scotland. The office was granted by James II. of Scotland, to him and to his heirs, and successors in the Baronry of Rosslyn, on account of the attention which he had paid to the interests of the Order, the right of appointing to this office and to other high offices of the Masonic Brotherhood being at that time exercised by the Kings of Scotland. Sir Oliver St. Clair, and the St. Clairs of Rosslyn, his descendants, continued to hold the office till 1736. They held their principal annual meetings at Kilwinning, where Freemasonry in Scotland is commonly said to have had its origin, the Kilwinning Lodge being acknowledged as the Mother Lodge by almost all the Lodges in Scotland, and at least by all that have connected themselves with the Grand Lodge, although the Melrose St. John, which has never connected itself with the Grand Lodge, has perhaps in reality a better claim to be regarded as the most ancient. The Mother Kilwinning Lodge granted constitutions and charters of erection to lodges in all parts of Scotland.

After the accession of James VI. of Scotland to the English throne, he seems to have neglected the interests of the Masonic body in Scotland, and in his reign we find brethren of the Order exercising the right of appointing their own Grand Master, although only to this very limited extent, that they "agree and consent that William Saint Clair, now of Rosslyn, for himself and his heirs, purchase and obtain, at the hands of our Sovereign Lord, liberte, freedom, and jurisdiction, upon us and our successors, in all time coming, as patrons and judges to us, and the several professors of our Craft within this realm." The charter or deed by which the Scottish Masons, thus, as it were, ratify the hereditary authority of the St. Clairs of Rosslyn, is known to us by a copy existing in the Hay MSS. in the Advocates Library in Edinburgh, a copy which was certainly made before the year 1700, as the MSS. volume bears that date. The charter itself is without date, but with it is to be found another, dated in 1630, confirming it. The originals of these charters are now in the possession of the Grand Lodge of Scotland. These documents are very important as illustrating the condition of Freemasonry in Scotland in the beginning of the seventeenth century, and as conclusively disproving the assertion which some confidently, but ignorantly made, that Freemasonry, as distinguished from a mere Craft or Guild of working Masons, had no existence until it was devised and brought into existence by Elias Ashmole, and some of his literary friends in that century. Indeed, the appointment of William, Earl of Orkney and Caithness, to the office Grand Master Mason of Scotland—whatever the title was, of which it is of no importance to dispute—two centuries before, is of itself proof of the high position which Masonry had already attained.

It was through no mere court favouritism, however, that the Earl of Orkney and Caithness was appointed Grand Master Mason by James II., but really, as well as professedly, for his regard to the interests of Masonry. It was he who built the Chapel of Rosslyn, one of the most exquisitely beautiful specimens of Gothic architecture in Great Britain.

Sir Oliver St. Clair, son of William, Earl of Orkney and Caithness, and his successor in the Barony of Rosslyn, as well as in the Grand Mastership, was succeeded by his grandson, Sir William, who was in great favour with James V., and was often summoned to Parliament by special writ, according to an exercise of royal prerogative, not known in more recent times. He died in the flower of his age, in 1540. His son and successor Sir William, died in the latter part of the reign of Queen Mary, and was succeeded by his son Edward, who died without issue, upon which the Rosslyn estates and Grand Mastership fell to his son, Sir William, whose successor was his son, Sir James, a distinguished loyalist. Sir James suffered much for his attachment to the royal family. He was followed by his son, Alexander, and he by his son, William.

Sir Oliver St. Clair, a younger son of Sir Oliver St. Clair of Rosslyn, was general of the Scottish army, under King James V., at the Raid of Solway Moss, in 1542. He was the especial favourite of the King, but his advancement to a position of such prominence as the King assigned him, gave great offence to the nobles of Scotland, so that when proclamation of it was made, after the army had crossed the border and entered England, the greatest disorder immediately broke out amongst the Scots. The English, perceiving this, rushed forward and attacked them. The rout of the Scots was complete and terrible. Sir Oliver St. Clair was taken prisoner, and the King, who had remained at Lochmaben, was filled with consternation, continually repeating the cry, "O fled Oliver? Is Oliver taken? O fled Oliver?" and so on, from which he ceased not, until a few weeks afterwards he died at Falkland. This Sir Oliver St. Clair was a devoted adherent of the Roman Catholic party in Scotland, to which also all the St. Clairs of Rosslyn adhered throughout the sixteenth century, and during part of the seventeenth. Sir William St. Clair of Rosslyn, the second of that name, was made Lord Justice General by Francis and Mary, King and Queen of Scotland, in 1559.

He took part with Mary at Langside, in 1568, but for this he obtained a remission in 1570. He collected many manuscripts, which had been taken out of the monasteries, when they were plundered, at the time of the Reformation, although what has become of these manuscripts is unknown. They would, unquestionably, be of great value if they could now be recovered.

In the year 1736, William St. Clair of Rosslyn, being under the necessity of selling his estate, and having no children, thought it right to make provision that the office of Grand Master Mason of Scotland should not be left vacant at his death. He therefore assembled the Edinburgh and neighbouring lodges, and represented to them the advantage which would accrue to their order from having a nobleman or gentleman of their own choice, placed in the office of Grand Master, intimating at the same time his intention of resigning into the hands of the brethren, all title which he, his heirs and successors, possessed to that office. Letters were therefore addressed to all the lodges of Scotland, inviting them to appear by proper representatives, on next Saint Andrew's Day, for the election of a Grand Master. The result was the formation of the Grand Lodge of Scotland, and William St. Clair, Esq., of Rosslyn, was himself elected First Grand Master, which office, however, he held in virtue of this election, only for one year, the Earl of Cromarty being elected as his successor in 1737; and for a considerable number of years, a new Grand Master was annually elected, the first instance of a re-election being that of Lord Aberdour, in 1756.

William St. Clair of Rosslyn died on 24th January, 1778, at the age of 78. The Grand Master, Sir William Forbes, ordered a funeral lodge to be held, when above four hundred brethren assembled, in deep morning, to pay the last tribute of respect to one whom they had long esteemed, loved, and revered, and to whose zeal for the interest of Freemasonry, its cause in Scotland had been much indebted.

"The last Rosslyn," says Bro. Sir Walter Scott, the novelist (for he was universally known by his patrimonial designation, and would probably have deemed it an insult in any one who had called him W. Sinclair), was a man considerably above six feet, with dark grey locks, a form upright, but gracefully so, thin-flanked and broad-shouldered, built, it would seem, for the business of the war or chace, a noble eye of chastened pride and undoubted authority, and features handsome and striking in their general effect, though somewhat harsh and exaggerated when considered in detail. His complexion was dark and grizzled, and as we schoolboys, who crowded to see him perform feats of strength and skill in the old Scottish games of golf and archery, used to think and say amongst ourselves, the whole figure resembled the famous founder of the Douglas race, pointed out, it is pretended to a Scottish monarch on a conquered field of battle, as the man whose arm had achieved the victory, by the expressive words, Sholto Douglas,—(Behold the dark grey man). In all the manly sports which require strength and dexterity, Rosslyn was unrivalled, but his particular delight was in archery."

This William St. Clair of Rosslyn appears to have sold what remained of his family estates to General St. Clair, second son of Henry, Lord St. Clair, the heir of line of William Earl of Orkney by his first marriage. General St. Clair, by a deed executed on the 31st October, 1735, settled the estates thus acquired, failing issue of his own body, upon the heirs-male of his sisters, and was accordingly succeeded by his nephew, James Paterson, Esq., who assumed the name of St. Clair, the only son of the marriage of John Preston, Esq., of Preston Hall, and the Honourable Grizel St. Clair. He, dying unmarried in 1789, was succeeded by his nephew, Sir James St. Clair Erskine, afterwards second Earl of Rosslyn, in 1805, the grandson of Sir John Erskine, Bart., of Alva, who married the Honourable Barbara St. Clair, daughter of Henry, Lord St. Clair, and as heir male of this lady, he succeeded under this entail. His mother was a sister of Lord Loughborough, afterwards the first Earl of Rosslyn, whose peerage was created, with remainders to his nephews, Sir James St. Clair Erskine, and John Erskine, Esq. The first Earl of Rosslyn died in 1803, and was succeeded by his nephew, Sir James St. Clair Erskine, already mentioned.

The first Earl of Rosslyn was Alexander Wedderburn, born at Edinburgh, 13th February, 1733, eldest son of Peter Wedderburn, Esq., of Chesterhall, (known as a Lord of Session by the title of Lord Chesterhall.) The Wedderburns of Chesterhall were descended from Walter de Wedderburn, one of the great Barons of Scotland, who swore fealty in 1296, to Edward I. of England, for the lands which he possessed in County of Berwick. Alexander Wedderburn was early distinguished at the Scottish bar, to which he was called when only nineteen years of age; but a snubbing from the bench, such as was then too common, caused such disgust in his mind, that he tore off his gown and flung it down on the spot, declaring his intention of seeking another sphere. He went to London, where he became a member of Inner Temple in 1753. He was called to the English bar in 1757, and soon rose to high eminence. He was appointed Solicitor-General in 1771, was promoted to be Lord Chief Justice of the Court of Common Pleas in 1780, and was then created Baron Loughborough. In 1793 he was appointed Lord Chancellor. In 1795 he obtained a new patent of peerage as Baron Loughborough, with the remainder to his nephew, Sir James St. Clair Erskine, and John Erskine, Esq., above-mentioned.

In 1801, he was advanced to the dignity of Earl of Rosslyn, with the remaindership. He died on 3rd January, 1805, and was succeeded by Sir James St. Clair Erskine, who then became second Earl of Rosslyn.

This second Earl of Rosslyn was descended in the male line from the ancient family of Erskine, and by maternal progenitors from the St. Clairs of Rosslyn, and the Wedderburns of Chesterhall. Sir Henry Erskine, Bart., son of Sir John Erskine of Alva, Bart., who was a younger son of the Hon. Sir Charles Erskine of Alva, who was a younger son of John, seventh Earl of Marr, was at his death in 1765, a Lieut.-General in the army. He married, in 1761, Janet, daughter of Peter Wedderburn of Chesterhall, sister of the first Earl of Rosslyn. Through her the present Earls of Rosslyn are connected with the old St. Clairs of Rosslyn, Sir John Erskine, his father, having married a daughter of Henry Lord Sinclair, or St. Clair. The second Earl of Rosslyn was succeeded by his eldest son, James Alexander, third Earl, on his death in 1837. The third Earl of Rosslyn died on the 16th June, 1866 and was succeeded by his son, Robert Francis, fourth and present Earl of Rosslyn, also Grand Master of Scotland, residing at Dysart Hall, Fifeshire, Scotland.

The family name is now St. Clair Erskine. The claims indicate the connection with the St. Clairs and the Wedderburns.

The present Earl of Rosslyn holds the high and honourable office of Grand Master Mason of Scotland. His Grand Mastership is of special interest as connecting the present time with the past of former centuries; and it is to be hoped under his reign, Freemasonry will regain its old high reputation for purity and honour.

The grant of the office of Grand Master Mason of Scotland by James II. to William St. Clair, Earl of Orkney, has been called in question, and some ingenuity has been displayed in the endeavour to make it appear improbable. As has been already observed, it is by no means necessary to prove that the title of Grand Master Mason was given to the Earl of Orkney, or was ever assumed by his descendants, the Barons or Lairds of Rosslyn, during their tenure of their hereditary office, in order to maintain that this office was virtually the Grand Mastership. Titles and styles of address have, no doubt, varied in the Masonic body as in others. In the days of James II., of Scotland, and indeed much more recently, the king was not spoken of as His Majesty, but always as His Highness; and many other forms now in use are likewise of recent origin. The charter by which James II. granted the Grand Mastership to the Earl of Orkney is not, however, in existence, or at least, it is not known to be in existence, although a thorough search of the charter chests of the Rosslyn and Caithness families might possibly enough result in the finding of it, although it appears from the charter granted by the Masons of Scotland to Sir William St. Clair of Rosslyn in A.D. 1630, that it was then supposed to be lost, "being consumed in a flame of fire, within the Castle of Rosslyn," with other writs or charters belonging to the family. It has been pointed out, however, as a remarkable circumstance, and as calculated to throw doubt upon the story of this a "flame of fire," that there is no mention of it in the first charter granted by the Masons of Scotland to the Laird of Rosslyn in the reign of James VI., and of which the charter of 1630 is a confirmation. To this it may be replied, in the first place, that the charter of 1630 is longer and more particular in many things than the old charter, a fact which it seems strange that any fair historic inquirer should have failed to observe, and which makes it not wonderful that this statement concerning the destruction of the charters, by which the St. Clairs of Rosslyn obtained their rights from the crown, should appear only in the charter of 1630, and not in the older one, which it confirms. In the second place, it is to be observed that the argument, if such it may be called, against the truthfulness of the statement concerning the "flame of fire," in the charter of 1630, is founded on an assumption which cannot be admitted without the destruction of the very theory which it has evidently been devised to support. It has been alleged, with reckless confidence that to establish the antiquity of Freemasonry and give it a false glory, many falsehoods have been put forth as if they were historic verities; and men who were highly honoured in their own day, have been named as the framers of a system of imposture. It would not really serve the purpose, however, of those who maintain the entirely modern origin of Freemasonry, to prove, if they could prove it, or to make it appear probable, as they have evidently sought to do, that the Masons of Scotland in 1630 set down in their charter to Sir William St. Clair, a deliberate lie as to the burning of the old charters of his family. What motive can they be supposed to have had for so doing? Those who ascribe the invention of Freemasonry to Elias Ashmole, in the latter part of seventeenth century, or to Desaguliers, Anderson, and others in the year 1717, would find it little to their advantage in point of argument, for the support of either of these theories, even if they could prove that a false story for the advancement of the glory of Masonry was fabricated in 1630. They have caught at the argument too hastily, and without well considering its probable effects. However, they seem to imagine that it is desirable to throw doubt and discredit on whatever tends to make Freemasonry appear ancient, and therefore the statement of the charter of 1630, concerning the destruction of the old writs of the Rosslyn family, must be set aside if possible. And so we are asked, "By what strange fatality were particular writings consumed, when all the remaining charters, forming a complete charterlary of Rosslyn, escaped?" Now the charter of 1630, plainly declares that not only were the charters destroyed by which their rights to the Grand Mastership—or whatever it was termed—of the Masons of Scotland were granted by the crown, but that along with their "sundry other of the Laird of Rosslyn, his wreatts" were consumed.

As to the existence of a complete chartulary of Rosslyn, it is a mere gratuitous assumption. What charters may exist in the charter chests of the Rosslyn family, no one, of course, can tell; but we know that copies of certain charters are contained in the Hay MSS. in the Advocates' Library, Edinburgh, and these have been published as "the Chartulary of Rosslyn," in the "Genealogie of the Sainteclaires of Rosslyn by Father Richard Augustin Hay, Prior of St. Pieremont," (Edinburgh: Thomas G. Stevens, 1835), but a glance at the volume is sufficient to show that it is far from containing a complete set of the family charters. To assume that we have in a "complete chartulary of Rosslyn," is utterly absurd. There is, however, in this volume, one charter to which it may be worth while to refer, in connection with the present subject. It is a charter granted by King James V. "for renewing some old charters of Rosslyn," and the reason assigned for their renewal, is that they have become worn out and almost illegible, so that they would probably soon be altogether useless, "quod una pars suarum evidentiarum caduca, et ob netustatem elementarum vix lucide legenda, et tractu temporis, illius sigilla pene corrupta, sic quod in punctum consumptionis existit."

From this we may infer, that even in the Castle of Rosslyn, the charters were not kept with due care; and a charter granting authority among the Masons was not as likely to be more carefully preserved than those by which the estates of the family were conferred.

It seems proper here to give, in full, the two charters already mentioned, as granted by the Masons of Scotland to the St. Clairs of Rosslyn, in the beginning of the seventeenth century. Charter granted by the Masons of Scotland, to

William St. Clair of Rosslyn, (in the reign of James VI. of England, and after his accession to the English throne—as appears from other evidence—but without date), [some say probable date 1600—1.]

From Hay's MSS. in Advocates' Library. Originals in the Grand Lodge of Scotland:—

No. I.

Be it kend till all men be thir present Iris. We deacones maisteris and frie men of the Maissones w'tin the realme of Scotland with expres conseut & assent of W'm Schaw Maister of Wark to our sou'ane lord ffor sa mekle as from aige to aige it hes bene observit amangs ws that the Laidis of ro ling hes ever bene patrones and protectors of ws and our privileges lyckas our predecessors hes obeyit and acknowledgeit thame as patrones and p'tectoris Quhill that w'in thir few yiers throwch negligence and slewthfulness the samyn hes past furth of vse Quhairby nocht onlie hes the Laird of Kosling lyne owt of his just vrycht bot also our hail craft hes bene destitute of ane patrone protectour and oversear q'lk hes genderit manyfauld corruptiones and imperfectiones baith amangis ourselvis and in our craft and hes gevin occasion to many persones to consave evill opin'ion of ws and our craft and to leive off great inerpyses of pollecie Be ressonne of our great misbehaviour w'out correction Quhairby not onelie the comittairs of the faultis bot also the honest men ar disapoyntit of thair craft and p'fleit. As lyckwayes quhen dyvers and sindrie contraverses fallis out amangis ourselvis thair follows great & manyfauld inconveniences thair want of ane [patrone and protector] we nocht being abill to await vpoun the ordiner judges & judgement of this realme throw the occasion of our powertie and langsumnes of precess ffor remeid of q'r of and for keeping of guid ordour amangis ws in all tymes cummyng and for advancement our craft and vocatioun within this realme and furtherens of policie w'tin the samin We for our selfis & in name of our hail bretherene and craftsmen w'te consent foirsaid aggreis and consentis that W'm Sinclair now of roslin for him self & his airis purches and obtaine at ye hands of our Sou'ane Lord libertie friedome and jurisdiction vpone ws and our successoures in all tymes cummyng as patrones & judges to us and the hail p'fessoris of our craft w'tin this realme quhom of we have power and commission Swa that heirefter we may acknowledge him and his airis as our patrones and judge vnder our Sou'ane Lord w'tout ony kynd of appellatioun or declynyng from his judgement with power to the said Willieme and his airis to depute judges ane or mae vnder him and to vse sick ampill and lairge jurisdictione vpoun ws & our successors als weill as burghes as land as it sall pleis our souerane lord to grant to him and his airis

WILLIAM SCHAW.

Maistir of Wark.

Edinburgh
Andro Symson
Jhone Robeson

Thomas Weir mason in Edr. Thomas Robertsoun wardane the Ludge of Dumfermling of and Sanct Androis and takand the burding vpoun him for his bretherene of ye mason craft within they Lwdges and for the Commissionars efter mentionat viz Dauid Skowgall Alexander Gilbert & Dauid Spens for the Lwdge of Sanct Androis, Andro Alesoun and Archibald Angus Commissionars for the Lwdge of Dwmsfermling & Rot. Balze and Jhone Saw for the Lwdge of Heddington with o'r hands led on the pen be cause we can nocht write

St. Androis

Haddingtoun
P. Campbell takand ye burding for Jon. Saw
J. Vallance
William Aittoun

Ita est Laurentius Robeson Notarius publicus ad premissa quisitus de specialibus mandatis dict. personarum scribere nescien vt aseruerunt testan. manu mea proprie

Achievones Heavin
George Aittoun
Jo. Fwsetter
Thomas Petticruff

[Ita est] Henricus Banna[tyne] connotarius ad premissa [de mandatis] antedictarum personarum [scribere nescientium ut aseruerunt teste] manu mea propria

Dumfermling
Robert Pest

Charter granted by the Masons of Scotland, in the year 1630, to Sir William St. Clair of Rosslyn.

[Some say probable date May 1, 1628.] From the Hay MSS. in the Advocates' Library, Edinburgh. Originals to be seen in the Grand Lodge of Scotland Hall, Edinburgh.

NO. II.

Be it kend till all men be thir present lres. We the Deacones maisteris and friemen of the maissions and hammermen within the kingdome of Scotland That forsamekill as from aidge to aidge it hes bene observet amangis ws and ovr predecessoris that the Lairds of Rosling hes ever bene patrones and protectoris of ws & o'r priwledgis Lykas our predecessores hes obeyit reverencet & acknowledged thame as patrones and protectoris q'rof they had letters of protection & vtheris richtis grantit be his ma'ties most no'll progenitors of worthie memorie q'lkis with sindrie vtheris of the Lairds of Rosling his writis being consumet & brunt in ane flame of fyre within the castle of Rosling in ane . . .

The consummation and burneing q'rof being clearlie knawin to ws and ovr predecessores deacones maisteris and friemen of the saidis vocationis, and our protection of the samyn and priwledgis thereof [be negligence] and slouthfullness being liklie to pass furth of wse q'rdrow not only wald the Lairds of Rosling lyne out of thair just richt but also our haill craftis wald haif bene destitute of ane patrone protector & oversear quhilk wald ingenner mony-fald imperfectiounes and corruptiounes baith amangis our selfis and in our craft and give occasioun to mony persones to conceave evil opinioun of ws and our craft and to leive af many and grit interpryce of policie q'lkis wald be vndertakin if our grit misbehaviour were sufferit to go on w'tout correctioun. For remeid q'rof and for keiping of guid ordour amangis ws in all tyme cuming and for advancement of our craft and vocationes within his hienes kingdome of Scotland and furduring of policie vairntill The maist part of our predecessoris for themselves and in name and behalfe of our brethrene and craftismen w't advyse and consent of Willieme Schaw maister of wark to heines unq'le darrest father of worthie memorie All in ane voce agreit consentit and subscriyvet that Willieme Sinclar of Rosling father to S'r Willieme Sinclar now of Rosling for him self and his airis sould purches & obtaine at the hands of his ma'tie libertie friedome & jurisdictione upon ws & our predecessoris deacones maisteres & friemen of the saidis vocationes as patrones and judges to us and the haill professors y'r of within the said Kingdom q'r of they had power & commissioun Sua that they and we nicht yaireafter acknowledge him and his airis & as o'r patrone & judge under our souerane lord without ony kynd of appellation or declinatoure frome thair judgement forever, As the said agriement subscriyvet be the said m'r of wark and our predecessores at maire length [proportis] In the quhilk office privilege & jurisdictione over ws and our said [voca]tioun the said Willieme Sinclar of Rosling ever continewit to his goinge to Ireland q'r he presently remanes sen the quhilk [time] of his departure furth of this realme thair ar very mony corruptiounes & imperfectiounes rysin and ingennerit baith amangis ourselfis & in our saidis vocationes in defect of ane patrone and oversear over ws and the samyn Sua that the saidis vocationes ar altogijeter liklie to decay And now for saiftie thair of we haifing full experience of the cfauld guid skill and judgement quhilk the said S'r Willieme Sinclar now of Rosling hes in our said craft and vocation and for reparation of the ruines and mony-fald corruptiounes and enormities done be unskillfull persones thairintill We all in ane voce haif ratifiet and approven and be thir presentis ratifies & approves the foresaid former l're of jurisdictione and libertie made and sub't be our bretherene and his heines unq'le M'r of wark for the tyme to the said Willieme Sinclar of Rosling father to the said Sir William quhairby he and his airis ar acknowledged as our patrones and judge under o'r souerane lord over ws & the haill professors of our said vocation w't in this his heines kingdome of Scotlande without any appellatoun or declinatour from thair judgement in ony [time hereafter] forever And further we all in ane voce as said is of new haif maid constitute & ordainit and be thir presentis makis constitutes & ordanes the said S'r Willieme Sinclar now of Rosling and his airis maill our only patrones protectoris and oversearis under our souerane lord to ws & our successoris deacones maisteris and friemen of our saidis vocationes of maissions hammermen w't in the haill Kingdome of Scotland & of o'r haill priwledges and jurisdictiones belonging thairto q'r in he his father and yair predecessoris Lairds of Rosling haif bene in vse of of possessioun thir mony aidges bygane With full power to him and thame be thameselfis thair wardanis and deputtis to be constitute be thame to affix and appoynt places of meeting for keiping of guid ord'r in the said craft als olt and sua olt as neid sall requyre All and sindrie persones that may be knawin to be subject to the said vocation to be callit absentis to amercial transgressors to punish unlawis casualities and vtheris dewties quhatsoever pertaineing and belonging or that may fall to be pait be quhatsoever persone or persones subject to said craft to aske crave ressave intromet with and uplift and the samyn to thair awn propper vse to applo deputtis under thame in the said office with clerkis seruandis assisteris and all vtheris officiaris and ordene for quhom they sall be haldin to answer All & sindrie plaintis actiounes & causes pertaineing to the said craft and vocation and againes quhatsoever persone or persones professors y'r of to haif discuss decerne & decyde actis decretis & sentences thairvpoun to pronounce and the samyn to dew execution to cause be put and gaulie, all and sindrie vyeris priwledges liberties and immunities quhatsoever concerning the said craft to do vse & exercee and caus be done exercet and keipet siclyke and als friely in all respects as ony vyeris thair predecessoris hes done or might haif done thameselfis in ony tyme bygane friely quietlie weill and in peace but ony revocation obstacle impediment or againe calling quhatsoever. In witness of the q'lk thing to thir p'entis w'tten be Alexander Aikinheid servitor to Andro Hao wrytter we haif sub't thir p'nts w't our hands at

The Ludge of Edinburgh
William Wallace decon

Johne Watt

Thomas Paterson

The Ludge of Glasgow

Johne Boyd deakin

Rot. Boyd sne of the mestres

Hew Douok dekin of ye measoues and vrichtis off Ayr

George Lid[ell] decan of squaremen and nov quarter-maistir

The Ludge of Stirling
Johne Thomsone
James Rond

The Ludge of Dumfermling
ne of . . .

The Ludge of Dundie
Robert Strachowne maister

Thomas Fleming wardane in Andrew Wastand Ed'r and Hew Dauid Quhyit Forrest w't o'r maisteris in Dunhandis at the die w't o'r handsat pen led be the the pen led be the notar vnder notar vnder subsub'd for wso'r cryveand at our command be-cause we can cause we can not not wryt wryt Adow. Haynotarius asseruit Thomas Robertson notarius asseruit

Robert Caldwell in Glasgow with my hand at ye pen led by ye notar subscrywand for me because I cannot writ myself J. Henrysone Dawid Mesone notarius asseruit Mais . . .

I Jn. Serveite m'r of yet craftis in Stirlinge with my hand at ye pen led be ye notar vnder subscryvand for me becaus I can not writt J. Honryson notarius assaruut

I Jon Burne ane of the m'r's of Dumfermlinge w't my hand at ye pen led be ye notar vnder subscryvand for me at my command becaus I can not writ myself J. Henrysone notarius asseruit

Dauid Robertson ane of ye mesteris Andrew Welsone master and Thomas [Wc]l-one varden of the sed Lag of Sant Androis

They are of great importance in reference to the History of Freemasonry in Scotland. They throw great light on the progress of the Craft. They show that it was not a mere craft of working men, whilst yet they show that it had not attained the position which it has at the present day.

BREAKFAST.—EPPS'S COCOA.—GRATEFUL AND COMFORTING.—"By a thorough knowledge of the natural laws which govern the operations of digestion and nutrition, and by a careful application of the fine properties of well-selected cocoa, Mr. Epps has provided our breakfast tables with a delicately-flavoured beverage which may save us many heavy doctors' bills."—Civil Service Gazette. Made simply with Boiling Water or Milk. Each packet is labelled—"JAMES EPPS & Co., Homoeopathic Chemists, London."

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS.—Desirable Possession.—Without health no amount of wealth, no means of pleasure are of the slightest value. It is inconceivable how small a disturbance of the animal functions begets wretchedness, and how readily it may be rectified by a few doses of some purifying and regulating medicine such as these world-renowned Pills. These have proved the best friend to mankind in every grade, in every land, and under almost every circumstance. Holloway's Pills purify the blood, rectify digestion, stimulate the liver and kidneys, and regulate the bowels; such are their first effects on the abdominal apparatus, greater far the influence they exert in expelling or neutralizing those latent poisons which insidiously enter the system, and undermine it.—MAY.

NOTICE.

The Subscription to THE FREEMASON is now 10s. per annum, post-free, payable in advance.

Vol. I., bound in cloth	4s. 6d.
Vol. II., ditto	7s. 6d.
Vol. III., ditto	15s. od.
Vol. IV., ditto	15s. od.
Reading Cases to hold 52 numbers ...	2s. 6d.

United States of America.

THE FREEMASON is delivered free in any part of the United States for 12s. per annum, payable in advance.

Answers to Correspondents.

J.W.—The Twenty-first Degree—None but or Prussian Masons—is worked in England as one of the degrees given under the A. and A. Rite. For further information, write to the Grand Secretary, S. C., 33, Golden-square, W.

The Freemason,

SATURDAY, JUNE 8, 1872.

The Freemason is published on Saturday Mornings in time for the early trains.
The price of the Freemason is Twopence per week; annual subscription, 10s. (payable in advance.)
All communications, letters, &c., to be addressed to the Editor, 198, Fleet-street, E.C.
The Editor will pay careful attention to all MSS. entrusted to him, but cannot undertake to return them unless accompanied by postage stamps.

NOTICE TO SUBSCRIBERS.

The Office of THE FREEMASON is now transferred to 198, FLEET-STREET, E.C. All communications for the Editor or Publisher should therefore be forwarded to that address.

UNITED GRAND LODGE.

The Quarterly Communication of Grand Lodge was held on Wednesday, the 5th inst., at Freemasons' Hall, the Marquis of Ripon, M.W. G.M., on the throne. Grand Lodge was numerously attended, there being present between 300 and 400 brethren. There was not a heavy paper of business for the evening, but the old stereotyped subject, with which the name of Bro. Cooke is associated stood in two or three forms on the paper, and as this subject always forbodes much discussion, the small amount of business was likely to be spun out over a large space of time. But for this, all the business which was to be transacted on Wednesday evening might have been disposed of in half-an-hour. It lasted however from seven till ten, although very little was said which was new. It having been hinted several times in the course of the debate, that to send back the report of the Board would be an insult to that body, Bro. Llewellyn Evans requested the Grand Master to relieve him of his office, which his Lordship accordingly did, and immediately afterwards invested Bro. Horace Lloyd, Q.C., with the collar and jewel of President.

The Grand Lodge having been formally opened, Grand Secretary read the minutes of the March Communication, of the Grand Festival of 24th of April, and of the Special Grand Lodge, held at Birmingham, on the 2nd of May.

Before putting these last for confirmation, the Grand Master rose and said, I cannot resist, in a very few words, taking this public opportunity of expressing the deep regret which I felt in not being able to be present upon the occasion to which these minutes relate. It had been my hope, up to the very last moment, that it might have been possible for me to attend upon that occasion, although when I was first asked to undertake the duty of laying this first stone, I felt it my duty to point out how exceedingly uncertain it always must be, whether I can, as long as I hold the official situation which I have now the honour to fill, carry out any engagement which I may make, especially during the Session of Parliament, but at the same time, I should feel it my bounden duty to you, and especially to the brethren of Warwickshire and the adjoining counties, and I say this the more upon the present occasion because we are honoured with the presence of my noble friend and brother, the Provincial Grand Master of Staffordshire, who, on that occasion, brought so large a number of brethren together, by his influence, to do honour to the Grand Lodge, and to him, we are indebted in a large measure for the zeal displayed by the numerous brethren then assembled—I say I should have felt it due to you and the provincial brethren to have attended on that occasion, if it had been in my power; but I was called on, suddenly and unexpectedly, to be present at an important Cabinet Council assembled in the middle of that day—a duty which I felt I could not, consistently with that which I owe to Her Majesty and the country in connection with the office which I have the honour to hold, put aside for any engagement whatsoever. Consequently I had no choice, in regard to my public duty, except to break, as I did, with the deepest regret, an engagement which, under all other circumstances, I should have felt a pleasure in keeping. I feel bound to offer this apology to the Grand Lodge, and to the provincial brethren who assembled on that occasion, and having done so, I put these minutes for confirmation.

The minutes of the Special Grand Lodge held at Birmingham were then confirmed.

The election of members of the Board of General Purposes was afterwards taken, and the scrutineers of votes were chosen and obligated. There was no election for the members of the Colonial Board or of the Committee of Management of the Royal Masonic Benevolent Institution, as the number of candidates did not exceed the number of vacancies. On the retirement of the scrutineers from Grand Lodge, the Grand Secretary read the report of the Board of Benevolence for the last quarter, in which were recommendation for the following grants, viz. :—

The Widow of the late Bro. W. H. A. of the Zetland Lodge, No. 511, London £100.

The Widow of the late Bro. H. S. F. of the Zetland Lodge, No. 1002, Cocker-mouth £50.

Bro. J. J. H. of the Royal Alfred Lodge, No. 877, Jersey, Past Provincial Grand Master £100.

Bro. J. M. Clabon moved, and Bro. Joshua Nunn seconded all these grants, which were separately put, and confirmed.

The following report of the Board of General Purposes was on the motion of Bro. U. Evans,

President of the board, taken as read :—

“The Board of General Purposes beg to report as follows :—

“The board have had under consideration the 5th paragraph of their report, submitted to Grand Lodge at the Quarterly Communication in March last, which paragraph was referred back to the board. For the convenience of Grand Lodge the board subjoin the paragraph in question.

“The Board have taken into consideration the resolution proposed by Bro. Matthew Cooke, P.M. in the Globe Lodge, No. 23; for adoption by Grand Lodge at the Quarterly Communication held on the 7th September, 1871, and referred to this Board to inquire into and report. The following is a copy of such proposed resolution :—

“That whilst this Grand Lodge recognises the private right of every brother to belong to any extraneous Masonic organisation he may choose, it as firmly forbids, now and at any future time, all brethren, while engaged as Salaried Officials under this Grand Lodge to mix themselves up in any way with such bodies as the Ancient and Accepted Scottish Rite; the Rites of Misraim and Memphis; the spurious orders of Rome and Constantine; the schismatic body styling itself the Grand Mark Lodge of England, or any other exterior Masonic organisation whatever (even that of the Order of Knights Templar, which is alone recognised by the Articles of Union) under the pain of immediate dismissal from employment by this Grand Lodge.”

“The charges made by Bro. Cooke at the above Quarterly Communication, against the officials in the Grand Secretary's office, have already been inquired into by this board, and a report thereon has been made to Grand Lodge, finding that such charges were in the main without foundation, and this report has been approved by Grand Lodge. The Board have come to the conclusion that the inquiry directed to be made by them had reference to the charges above referred to, and not to the several ‘Exterior Masonic Organisations’ mentioned in the proposed resolution of Bro. Cooke, and they have therefore not proceeded to inquire further into the matter. The board are of opinion, and submit to Grand Lodge, that inasmuch as Grand Lodge has full control, not only over the officials in its service, but over the whole Craft, and would undoubtedly exercise such control should any member, whether official or otherwise, be proved to have taken part in any degree or order denounced by Grand Lodge, or inimical to its principles; and inasmuch as the proposed resolution, if passed, would not add to the power and authority either of Grand Lodge or of this Board, such resolution is unnecessary, and the Board therefore do not recommend its adoption by Grand Lodge. The Board, however, are clearly of opinion, and submit to Grand Lodge, that no clerk or other subordinate officer in the employment of Grand Lodge should take a prominent part in any degree or order not recognised by Grand Lodge.”

The Board having carefully reconsidered the above paragraph, beg leave respectfully to state that they adhere to the opinions therein expressed.

(Signed) J. LLEWELLYN EVANS,
President.

Freemasons' Hall, London, 21st May, 1872.

At the meeting of the Board held on Tuesday, the 21st instant, after the ordinary business had been disposed of it was unanimously

Resolved—"That this Board cannot separate without offering to the President, the V.W. Bro. John Llewellyn Evans, their sincere thanks not only for the undeviating courtesy and kindness which every member of the Board has received at his hands, but for the untiring zeal and attention which he has devoted to the business of the Craft, and the ability and discretion with which he has at all times conducted the proceedings of the Board."

(Signed) JOHN B. MONCKTON,
Vice-President.

To the report is subjoined a statement of the Grand Lodge Accounts at the last meeting of the Finance Committee, held on the 17th May, 1872, showing a balance in the hands of the Grand Treasurer of £4,209 10s. 7d. and in the hands of the Grand Secretary for Petty Cash £75.

Bro. L. Evans moved, and Bro. John B. Monckton seconded, the reception of this Report.

Bro. John M. Clabon asked the Grand Registrar what were the degrees or orders not recognised by Grand Lodge, and referred to a paragraph in the Articles of Union, which declared and pronounced that there were three degrees and no more in pure and ancient Masonry.

The Grand Registrar said those were the only degrees acknowledged by the Lodge of Reconciliation that preceded the Union. Still it was stated on the face of the article that it was not intended to prevent the lodges and chapters which had been in the habit of using and promulgating the degrees of chivalry from doing as they had done before. He was not himself a member of any degree beyond the Royal Arch, and whether the Ancient and Accepted Rite was or was not an order of chivalry he could not say; but he had made inquiries among those who were members of that order, and as far as he could learn, it was considered an order of chivalry. He was not able to give a fuller answer.

After some discussion as to the mode of procedure on the question of the reception of the Report, Bro. C. Hutton Gregory recommended that a portion of the Report be not received, viz., "The Board however are clearly of opinion and submit to Grand Lodge that no clerk or other subordinate office in the employment of Grand Lodge should take a prominent part in any degree or order not recognised by Grand Lodge. The Grand Registrar had indicated his belief that the body which was known as the Ancient and Accepted Rite, would be one of the bodies not recognised by Grand Lodge, and if for no others, especially for this reason that it assumed the power to make Masons. That opinion was based upon error. The Rules and Regulations of the Ancient and Accepted Rite, which he held in his hand, contained the following words, "This Council does not interfere with or militate against the authority of the Grand Lodge governing the three symbolic degrees, but distinctly recognises such authority, admitting none to the higher degrees unless previously raised as Master Masons in some regularly constituted Lodge." Then the Articles of Union declared and pronounced pure and ancient Masonry to consist of three degrees and no more, but did not prevent any lodge or chapter from holding meetings in any of the Degrees and Orders of Chivalry according to the constitution of the said orders. It did not say the Orders of Chivalry now practised by lodges and chapters. Accepting the position Grand Registrar had taken, he (Bro. Gregory) would say what any Masons who were not members of the specified degrees, were not in a condition to speak as to their being inimical or not, to Masonry. Masonry was a progressive science, and after the three ceremonies and the Royal Arch, which we got by heart; we even got tired of the everlasting dinners. Some of us also went so far as to know by heart the beautiful lectures, which was the extreme height of knowledge in the Craft degrees. The inquiring mind wished to go further, and instead of that further knowledge doing damage to Masonry, it helped to instruct a man, and to make him a better and worthier Mason. It was not for him to denounce others of that proscribed body who might be present; they were marked by social respectability, and he would warn the Board of General Purposes that in trying to stop the progress of knowledge they would fail, for the denounced rites would go on in spite of their reprobation, and a schism would be created in Masonry. The proposition of the Board was self-condemned in the strongest way; it had the merit neither of courage nor consistency. It first said, "the Board are of opinion, and submit to Grand Lodge, that inasmuch as Grand Lodge has full control, not only over the officials in its service, but over the whole Craft, and would undoubtedly exercise such control, should any member, whether official or otherwise, be proved to have taken part in any degree or order denounced by Grand Lodge, or inimical to its principles; and inasmuch as the proposed resolution, if passed, would not add to the power and authority, either of Grand Lodge or of this Board, such resolution is unnecessary, and the Board therefore do not recommend its adoption by Grand Lodge." In this he (Bro. Gregory) agreed, but he disagreed with what followed, which the Board itself had just said was unnecessary, and he should move as an amendment, that all which followed this sentence should be omitted.

Bro. J. M. Clabon seconded the amendment, Grand Lodge had made two mistakes, Bro. Cooke's motion ought to have been negatived and it should not have been referred to the Board. He (Bro. Clabon) was a member of the Ancient and Accepted Rite, and he considered he had ascended from pure Masonry to pure Masonry, and he wished the degree was acknowledged by Grand Lodge. It was a matter of history that, until the Union of the Grand Lodges, all these Orders were followed by the Duke of Sussex, and at the present time, the Deputy Grand Master was a member. All that they were now discussing was a miserable question of whether they should prevent any of the Grand Lodge clerks, who, although clerks, were still highly respectable men, joining the Ancient and Accepted Rite, when they left the Grand Secretary alone, and all the superior officers. It was quite right, that the clerks should not do anything in opposition or inimical to the principles of Masonry, but there was no reason why they should not join harmless Orders. He hoped the Board would give up this clause, and have no more of these discussions upon the matter. If Grand Lodge adopted the last clause of the report, it would be derogatory to the clerks, and such a proceeding should not be tolerated.

Bro. Matthew Cooke would also move an amendment. The President of the Board still stuck to precisely the same phraseology which was objectionable to him (Bro. Cooke), and which he objected to at last meeting. "The charges made by Bro. Cooke" was an inaccurate expression. It was within the recollection of Grand Lodge that he made no charges at all, for he was called up to answer and when he answered certain things, there came out a series of charges, indirectly, but not made by him, for he was answerable to the Board. He was cited to the Board, and so far as that was concerned, he proved, on one point, what he asserted, except where the reticence of a brother whom he could not commit, prevented light being thrown. He was the last man in Grand Lodge to say a word against an Order of Chivalry. He had in his pocket a diploma, printed by the Mother Council of the World. There was one thing the brethren did not seem to understand; there was a great difference between the Ancient and Accepted Rite, and the old Templar Kadosh, and the series that were given as the Orders of Chivalry. It was the ruling powers of the Rites that did not seem to be understood in Grand Lodge. Certain people got a Rite up, or got hold of some disjointed pieces, and they formed them into a Rite, and placed themselves at its head. There could be no doubt that many of the degrees used in this country before 1813, had been floating about the country, but they had been under a Templar jurisdiction; almost everything was given under a Templar jurisdiction, and the consequence was that the Articles of Union spoke of the Orders of chivalry. That was a wide margin, which took in all kinds of things; and matters have now reached this point; there was now a struggle whether the Templar or the Ancient and Accepted Rite, should be crushed. (No, No.) He moved as an amendment, that the words "charges made by Bro. Cooke" should be expunged from the Report, or that the Report be rejected.

Bro. Bennoch quite approved of the exclusion of the words mentioned by Bro. Gregory from the Report, but he would go further, and would move in the event of Bro. Gregory's motion not being carried, the expunging of all words after "inquire further into the matter." Grand Lodge had no business to examine into the private movements of various Masonic bodies outside themselves. There was a strong current in favour of other Rites, which Grand Lodge could not control, and to attempt to do so would be absurd and futile. Their policy was not to interfere with the freedom of Masonry, and he had no business to inquire into these rites; this had been settled before; it was a waste of time, besides creating disunion to reopen it.

Bro. Gregory said he would consent to withdraw his amendment, and would rely on Bro. Bennoch's.

After a few words from Bro. F. Roxburgh, Q.C., in favour of the declaration that Pure and Ancient Masonry consists of three degrees and no more,

A Provincial Brother stated, that Masons in the country, when any question arose in their lodges, were in the habit of inquiring what was done in similar cases in Grand Lodge. If Grand Lodge passed this Report it was equivalent to a resolution that no brother, who happened to be a member of an extraneous Order, should hold office under Grand Lodge. This would impose a great difficulty in many cases, because before giving office, it would be necessary to inquire whether a man was a member of the prohibited degrees. All that Provincial Lodges required, was to know whether a man was a good Mason, and did his duty; and when they knew that, they knew of nothing which was a disqualification.

Bro. John Havers thought they had got into a great difficulty, they had either to accept or reject the terminal portion of the Report, which was a most unfortunate one, yet it contained in it the elements of a great truth. Bro. Gregory had said that we could go beyond the ancient degrees of Masonry. Now he (Bro. Havers) denied it. We were proud of our old degrees and, more, we meant to maintain them. But at the same time, while we maintained our ancient degrees, to which we had solemnly sworn fidelity, we would give the freest liberty to others. He did not agree in the Report of the Board of General Purposes; he thought it a mistake; but at the same time he should defend the Board. It had been said that they denounced other degrees. They had not. They had said that in their opinion it was very undesirable that any subordinate officer in the employment of Grand Lodge should take a prominent part in any degree or order not recognised by Grand Lodge. And so it was. Ask all the London merchants, bankers, men of business; ask the Colonel of a regiment, if a sergeant or servant, after having done his duty for the day, employs his leisure evenings in drilling some one else, whether he would allow it. (Cries of Yes, yes). But an Assistant at Grand Lodge, though he may belong to any order he pleases, should not go and hold a prominent place in that order. A brother had stated that in the provinces they were guided by the action of the Grand Lodge, and no doubt if they found that papers, connected with unrecognised degrees, went out from Grand Secretary's office. (general expressions of dissent) they would naturally look upon those degrees as not being unrecognised. But while we were all faithful to our solemn obligations, let us be generous to all those who choose to amuse themselves with other degrees. Let the proposition now made to Grand Lodge be the last of its kind. Let those who had read the History of Masonry remember the 50, 60, or 70 years of turmoil which prevailed before two Royal Dukes got a Lodge of Reconciliation. Brethren were to ask themselves whether the number of degrees existed at the time of the Union or did not. If they did exist, they were solemnly and intentionally left out. If they had been concocted since, they were of spurious origin. Somebody had said a large proportion of these orders were given under spurious organisations. What had those spurious organisations brought us to? There were not less than six or seven, each claiming to be itself supreme, and let him remind the brethren that in giving allegiance to these smaller bodies we forgot to mention the allegiance due to the larger. These organisations, it should be borne in mind, offered no allegiance to our Grand Master and he entreated the brethren to maintain their own three degrees. He would moreover earnestly entreat them to consider, that if it were just to require subordinate servants to abstain from taking part in degrees which clashed with Masonry, it was just to require the superior officers. He would say, paid or unpaid, high or low, they should not take a prominent part in the unrecognised degrees, and though not agreeing with the Report, he recommended its adoption. If it were not adopted, it would be an insult to the Board. With regard to Bro. Clabon's remark, that many members of Grand Lodge were members of the higher degrees, he would say, in Heaven's name let them be. Every Mason had a right to join anything he liked; only he must not use the name, and the honour, and the position of Grand Lodge, in such a way as would confound it with them.

Bro. Radcliffe thought it would be illiberal to prevent any officer from joining other societies, after they had done their work. There was only one point in Bro. Havers's address that deserved the attention of Grand Lodge, which was that people in the country might consider that if officers of Grand Lodge sent out papers in the unrecognised degrees, those degrees had the approbation of Grand Lodge. He supported Bro. Gregory's amendment.

The Earl of Limerick took exception to the idea that there were competing jurisdictions in this country. They were independent. Freemasons were subject to the Grand Master in Grand Lodge; and if they were elsewhere, they were subject to whomsoever might be their President. He himself belonged to other societies, but he did not less attend to the interests of the Craft, of which he was most proud to be a member, and which was the original source and fount from which all the brethren seeking other degrees must spring. He did not think himself a less worthy member of the Craft for belonging to other degrees. He objected to the Report, and would support Bro. Bennoch's amendment.

Bro. Stebbing, in a powerful speech, also opposed the report.

Bros. Horace Lloyd and F. A. Philbrick supported the Board, and after a few words from Bros. Rev. R. J. Simpson, Lord Tenterden, and James Mason,

The Grand Master said:—Before this question is put to the vote, I am desirous of addressing one or two observations to Grand Lodge. It appears that the question which is raised by the paragraph of this Report, which it is proposed not to receive, is one which is entirely within the province and authority of this Grand Lodge themselves to deal, and I do not, therefore desire that any observations which I may make, and they will be very brief, should tend in any way to influence the vote to which Grand Lodge may come, or the view which may be taken, in the exercise of their judgment, on this question; because the question that is raised really by this paragraph is what, in the opinion of this Grand Lodge, ought to be laid down as regulations for guidance and conduct of certain persons who hold salaried offices under the Grand Lodge. Now, brethren, this question is not new; it has been now for some months before the Craft and this Grand Lodge; and as far back as the month of February last, the question having been then brought under the notice of Grand Lodge, and consequently under my own notice, I thought it right to express an opinion upon the subject, and to require that those who hold office in the Secretarial offices of this Lodge should conform to the views which were so expressed. Those views were embodied in a minute, which I am now about to read. That minute was to the following effect. "The Grand Master has directed that no meeting connected with unrecognised degrees be permitted to take place on the premises restricted to the use of the Craft, and that no business relating to such degrees be transacted by any gentleman employed in the Grand Secretary's office during office hours." That minute I am prepared strictly and fully to enforce and it would unquestionably be my duty to do so. The question before Grand Lodge now considered freely with regard to those of our servants—I use the term with all respect—in our employ, is whether it is thought desirable or not desirable to impose further restrictions upon those servants than are contained in this minute, which has been strictly and entirely adhered to since the day it was issued. The question, brethren, is this "That the Grand Lodge do not receive the following words contained in the Report. 'The Board, however, are clearly of opinion, and submit to Grand Lodge, that no clerk or other subordinate of officer in the employment of Grand Lodge should take a prominent part in any degree or Order not recognised by Grand Lodge.'"

Let Grand Lodge clearly understand. The original question was, "That this Report be received and entered upon the Minutes," since which the amendment or resolution has been moved, which I have read, the effect of which is to decline to receive the last sentence of that Report—"The Board, however, are clearly of opinion, and submit to Grand Lodge, that no clerk or other subordinate officer in the employment of Grand Lodge, should take a prominent part in any degree or Order not recognised by Grand Lodge."

On a show of hands, the Grand Master declared the amendment lost, the numbers however appearing to be nearly equal. The motion for receiving and entering the Report on the Minutes was then carried.

The Grand Master then announced that Bro. Ll. Evans, the President of the Board, had requested him to relieve him of his office, which he accordingly did, and appointed and invested Bro. Horace Lloyd, Q.C., P.G.D., in his place.

The Scrutineers having returned, the result of the election was announced.

The Annual Report of the "Royal Masonic Benevolent Institution for Aged Freemasons and the Widows of Freemasons," was laid before Grand Lodge, and the following alterations of the Laws, which were agreed to at the Annual General Meeting of the Institution held on Friday, the 17th May, 1872, were submitted for the approval of Grand Lodge, and passed:—

1st. As an addition to Rule 19 as a separate paragraph:—

“A Vice-President, being an individual donor, who subscribes Five Pounds and upwards in one payment, shall be entitled to Four Votes for every Five Pounds so subscribed.”

2nd. As a new law, to follow Law 23:—

“Every Vice-President upon completion of a further donation of Fifty Pounds to either Fund, or partly to each fund, by one or more payments of not less than Five Pounds each, shall become a Vice-Patron of the Institution.”

3rd. To amend Article 22, by inserting, after the word “payment” in the seventh line, the following:—

“And every additional Ten Pounds to such particular Fund shall be further entitled to Four Votes at each election.”

4th. To amend Article 25 by substituting the word “four” for “two.”

The following motions by Bro. Matthew Cooke, P.M., in No. 23, fell through for want of a seconder.

To add to Section 1, treating of the Grand Secretary and his duties, in the Book of Constitutions (page 37, small edition), after the words “rights or privileges as a member of the Grand Lodge” line 18:—

“That whilst this Grand Lodge recognises the private right of every Brother to belong to any extraneous organisation he may choose, it as firmly forbids, now and at any future time, all brethren while engaged as salaried officials under this Grand Lodge to mix themselves up in any way with such bodies as the Ancient and Accepted Scottish Rites; the Rites of Misraim and Memphis; the spurious Orders of Rome and Constantine; the Schismatic Body styling itself the Mark Grand Lodge of England, or any other exterior organisation whatever (even that of the Order of Knights Templar, which is alone renised by the Articles of Union) under pain of dismissal from employment by this Grand Lodge.”

The following motion by Bro. Benjamin Head, P.G.D., was carried:—

“That the sum of £50 be given from the Fund of General Purposes. That the money be placed in the hands of the Secretary of the Asylum of the Royal Masonic Benevolent Institution for Aged Freemasons and Widows of Freemasons, to supply the inmates at Croydon with coals during the winter season.”

Bro. W. Smith withdrew the following motion,

“It is desirable that the printed papers of the business to be transacted at each Quarterly Communication of the Grand Lodge of England shall include a complete list or return of all the warrants for, new lodges granted by the M.W. the Grand Master during the preceding three months, and that the M.W. the Grand Master be most respectfully requested to direct the said returns to be issued by the Grand Secretary,”

The Grand Master having stated that he thought it desirable that it should be withdrawn, said it was perfectly reasonable and natural that brethren should desire to know from time to time what were the new lodges. But at the same time, the granting of new warrants was a matter strictly within the prerogative of the Grand Master. He had no desire, and certainly had no intention of resigning or diminishing the ancient prerogatives he had the honour to hold. It therefore appeared to him, that he ought not to consent to a motion which might be interpreted on some future occasion, as trenching upon the privileges of those who might come after him; but as he thought the desire of the brother a very natural one, and as he was most anxious to give information to the Craft at large, he would beg to inform Bro. Smith that he would give directions to the Grand Secretary to furnish the list desired.

Bro. W. Smith thanked his Lordship, and Grand Lodge was then closed.

GRAND LODGE OF MARK MASTER MASONS.

The Half Yearly Communication to Grand Lodge of English Mark Masters was made on Tuesday evening, at Freemasons' Tavern, the Grand Mark Master, the Rev. George Raymond Portal, M.A., presiding. There was a very large attendance of Mark brethren, larger indeed than has been witnessed before, the degree becoming at the present time very popular.

Among the brethren who supported the Grand Master we observed, Bros. W. W. B. Beach, Prov. G.M.; Eugene Cronin, G.S.D.; D. M. Dewar, M. Emanuel, C. R. Davy, W. S. Webster, F. W. Koch, Grand Stewards; the Earl of Limerick, Prov. G.S.W.; W. E. Gumbleton, Prov. G.S.W.; James Stevens, Prov. G.J.O.; D. Shaboe, T. F. Ravenshaw, Prov. G. Chaps.; W. Mann, Prov. G. Reg.; R. Spencer, Prov. G.S.B.; T. J. Sabine, Prov. G.A.D.C.; S. M. Lazarus, John Read, Prov. G. Orgs.; Chas. Hammerton, A. D. Loewenstark, H. Massey, Prov. G. Stewards; John Huyshe, Prov. G.M. Devon; Thos. Birchall, Prov. G.J.W. Lancashire; W. O. Walker, Prov. G.M.O. Lancashire; J. Chadwick, Prov. G. Sec. Lancashire; Thos. Hargreaves, F. Davison, Dep. Prov. G.M. Middlesex and Surrey; G. Barlow, Prov. G.J.W. Middlesex and Surrey; Wm. Worrell, Prov. G. Org., Middlesex and Surrey, George Kennieg, and numerous brethren from private lodges.

This was the day appointed for the installation of the new Grand Master, who was nominated at the last half-yearly communication for that office, the three years during which, by the Constitutions of Grand Mark Lodge, the Grand Master holds the position of Sovereign of the Degree, having expired since Bro. Portal first assumed the reins of office. In consequence however, of the serious illness of Earl Percy, the noble lord was not present, and his installation was postponed to a future day, though not without expressions of deep sympathy for his lordship, and of hope that he might soon be restored to health.

Previous to Grand Lodge being opened a Lodge of Improvement was held, at which Bro. James Stevens presided, and at its conclusion a vote of thanks to him was carried for the able manner in which he had performed the Master's duties.

Grand Lodge having been opened in proper form, the minutes of last Grand Lodge of 5th Decr. 1871, and of the Special Grand Lodge of 21st Feb., 1872, were read by Grand Secretary, Bro. F. Binckes, and confirmed.

Bro. Sabine, of Brighton, having first protested against some of the items in the accounts, and deprecated increasing expenditure.

The Grand Master, in answer to Bro. Sabine, said, no doubt Grand Lodge would be satisfied with their attention having been called to the subject, and the General Board would see if this expense could be kept down in any way. The brethren were much indebted to Bro. Sabine for bringing the matter forward.

The report of the General Board which dealt with the question of an alteration in the ceremony of installation to such Masters as had not been installed in the Craft; the relation of Grand Chapter of Scotland to this Grand Lodge; the representation of foreign lodges in it; and announcing that Earl Bective would preside at the next summer festival for the Benevolent Fund of the degree; and recommending that an allowance of £200 be made to Grand Secretary on account of the increased work in his office; was read by Grand Secretary and received. He also read the diplomas from Grand Chapters of Iowa, and Pennsylvania, the former appointing Bro. Portal, and the latter Bro. W. J. Hughan as its representative in Grand Mark Lodge of England.

The Grand Master thereupon said he considered this a point of great importance, whose value it would be difficult to overrate, as it admitted this Grand Lodge into the great comity of supreme Masonic jurisdiction. It was an example also which could not fail to be followed by other American Grand Chapters. He believed Grand Lodge was indebted for this, very much to Bro. Hughan, who was well known both here and in America in the Masonic literary world. He (the Grand Master) would in consideration of Bro. Hughan's appointment by the Grand Lodge of Pennsylvania, confer on him the rank of Past Junior Grand Warden. He had also to congratulate the brethren on the Union of the Scotch Provincial Lodge of Lancashire with this Grand Lodge, and it reflected great credit on the Scottish brethren of Lancashire, who had taken steps to effect it. He should therefore confirm to them the provincial rank they had hitherto enjoyed, and ask Grand Lodge to grant the rank of Past Junior Grand Warden to Bros. Brocklebank, White, and Birchall.

Bro. Beach, P.G.M., seconded the motion. It was a matter of very great gratification to hear the announcement the Grand Master had just made. Any difference of jurisdiction must mar the harmony of Masonry, and Grand Lodge was to be congratulated on the energy and success which had characterised the efforts of the Lancashire brethren in terminating such differences. Grand Lodge was also indebted to Grand Secretary for his efforts in the same direction. He (Bro. Beach) had had many opportunities of observing how energetically he devoted himself to any cause he took in hand, and he had great pleasure in thus publicly announcing it.

The motion was carried unanimously.

The report of the General Board was then submitted to Grand Lodge, and its recommendations separately put.

The Grand Master, with reference to the qualification for the Master's chair, said, that everything had been eliminated from the ceremony of installation, that was similar to the corresponding ceremony in a Craft Lodge.

After a few words from Bro. W. Mann against, and Bro. James Stevens in favour of the recommendation, it was put and carried. With regard to the revision and reprinting of the Book of Constitutions, Bro. Sabine inquired about the expense, and thought it best that it should be put up to competition.

Bro. Stebbing was of the same opinion, and suggested that a specimen sheet should be printed, and tenders invited.

The motion was carried.

The Earl of Limerick, G.S.W., in proposing that £200 be voted to the Grand Secretary said, that his work had greatly increased, and was likely still further to increase, and it was but fair that there should be a corresponding increase in his pay.

The Rev. J. Huyshe, Prov. G.M., Devon, supported the motion, knowing personally how greatly the Order had extended.

Bro. Sabine again opposed the Grant, (Bro. Binckes having requested permission to retire from Grand Lodge as it was a question personal to himself), and moved as an amendment, that it be referred back to the General Board.

Bro. J. H. Wilkins seconded the amendment.

[In consequence of the great demands on our space, we have been compelled to omit some of the addresses of prominent speakers in this debate, but hope to furnish them in extenso in our next.]

Bros. James Stevens, W. Beach, W. E. Gumbleton, J. R. Stebbing, J. H. Wynne, Ralph Benson, S. Rosenthal, all supported the original motion, and bore their testimony to the great diligence, skill, and administrative talent, which both Bro. Binckes and Bro. Henry Binckes, displayed in discharging their official duties. Bro. Benson however suggested that £100 should be voted to Bro. Binckes, and £100 to Bro. H. Binckes.

This was carried.

Bro. Sabine, P.G.S. who nominated Earl Percy as Grand Master at the last meeting, now proposed his election, regretting at the same time the cause of his lordship's absence.

Bro. H. C. Levander, G.M.O. seconded the motion, which was thereupon carried.

The Grand Master said he was charged by Earl Percy to assure Grand Lodge that he deeply regretted his inability to be present. He was so indisposed that he had been obliged to obtain leave of absence from the House of Commons, and by the advice of his medical attendant was going to spend a few months in a warmer climate. All his friends had reason to believe that this would result in his complete restoration to health; but he (the Grand Master) trusted that before his lordship left England he would be able at a special Grand Lodge to be installed. As his lordships locum tenens he should now proceed to invest the Grand Officers for the year, of whom Earl Percy had approved.

The following officers were then appointed, and those of them who were present were invested:—

The Earl of Limerick.....	Dep. G.M.
Lord Ferrers	S. Grand Warden
C. F. Matier	J. Grand Warden
Rev. P. H. Newnham } Rev. W. M. Heath }	Grand Chaplains
J. R. Stebbing.....	Grand Treasurer
Capt. Burgess	Grand Registrar
F. Binckes	Grand Secretary
W. Foulsham	Grand M.O.
L. W. Longstaff	Grand S.O.
Lawson	Grand J.O.
Porter	Grand S.D.
T. Hargreaves	Grand J.D.
George Neall	Grand Sup. of Wks.
C. Hammerton	Grand Dir. of Cers.
Clarence Harcourt	Grand Asst. D. of C.
J. K. Smith	Grand Swd. Bearer
J. W. H. Hawton	Grand Std. Bearer
Williamson	Grand J.O.

The following brethren were appointed Stewards:—Bros. A. Williams, Funkenstein, Kemp, James W. Smith, Austin and Hillier.

The members of the General Board were Bros. Portal, (G.M.), Capt. Burgess, T. Meggy, H. C. Levander, S. Rosenthal, James Stevens, C. Hammerton, J. H. Wynne, T. J. Sabine, F. Davison, and W. E. Gumbleton.

Bro. Morton Edwards, P.M. 118, G.J.D., P.Prov. G. Std., Somerseshire then brought on the following motion:—

“That a Committee be appointed by Grand Mark lodge, consisting of five of its members, to meet an equal number of members of the Grand Lodge of Royal Ark Mariners to carry out the attachment of the Royal Ark Mariners degrees, by an equitable arrangement based upon the treaty between the Grand Mark Lodge and the Grand Lodge of Royal Ark Mariners, executed on July 6th, 1871, and agreed to be ratified on or before August 1st, 1871, but which treaty was not carried out, so as finally to dispose of all differences between the two bodies.”

Bro. James Stevens, P.G.O. moved as an amendment “That the General Board be requested to entertain any communication that may be made to them by any brother claiming to work the Ark Mariner's degree, with a view to their coming under the jurisdiction of this Grand Lodge.”

Bro. H. C. Levander, G.O., seconded it.

The amendment was carried.

Letters of apology for absence were received from:—Bros. Magnus Ohren, G.M.O.; Col. Fras. Burdett, P.G.M. Middlesex and Surrey; W. J. Luut, P.G. Insp. Wks.; C. F. Matier, G.J.W.; L. W. Longstaff, G.S.O.; Nathaniel Haycroft, G. Chap.; H. R. Trigg, G.Swd.Br.; W. J. Hughan, P.G.M.O., P.G.J.W.; W.

Foulsham, G.S.O.; Jas. Porter, G.S.O.; Geo. Hardy, P.G.S.O.; Thos. Perkington, Prov. G.M. West Yorkshire; Fred. Long, G.D.Cers.; Brockbank, P.G.J.W.; Irwin, P.J.M.O.

Bros. Bigg and Davison were presented with Steward's jewels, and Grand Lodge was then closed. The brethren afterwards sat down to an excellent banquet and then honoured a good list of toasts. The musical arrangements were very superior. Under the direction of Bro. John Read, Prov. G. Mark Organist, P.M., P.Z., 30°, &c., Bro. De Lacy, of St. Paul's Cathedral; Bro. John Hodges, Gentleman of the Chapel Royal; and Bros. Carter and Mason, of Westminster Abbey, sang some delightful music, which consisted of glees, songs, and duets. The Grace was Sir Michael Costa's “O Lord, we bless Thee,” and the other compositions were, the National Anthem, “Go, speed thy Flight,” “Anita,” “Come, let us join the Roundelay,” “Norah, Darling,” “By Celia's Arber,” “All's Well,” “Sweetly Blows,” “The Happy Muleteer,” and “Life's a Bumper.” The execution of all these pieces met with universal approbation.

REPORTS OF MASONIC MEETINGS.

Craft Masonry.

METROPOLITAN.

EBURY LODGE (No. 1348).—This most prosperous lodge was held on Tuesday, the 4th inst., at the Morpeth Arms, Millbank, Bro. John Coutts, P.G.P., W.M., in the chair, who in a beautiful, correct, and impressive manner raised Bros. S. Jacobs and H. A. Potter, passed G. Harvey, and initiated Mr. J. Gildersleeve. Bros. H. Proskauer, 861; R. A. D. Bain, 87; S. Benjamin, 141; E. J. Barnett, 87; J. Elliott, and R. H. Muffitt, were unanimously elected joining members. There was a large number of members, including nearly all the officers. Although so young a lodge, yet for good working, splendid hospitality, and other good qualities, it is second to none. The usual number of candidates for joining and initiation were proposed, and the lodge was closed. Bro. Palmer placed before the brethren one of his superior banquets, which are always good alike and have contributed to the prosperity of the Lodge. The usual and happy harmonious evening was spent. The visitors were Bros. C. Barnett, I.G. 87, and J. Jeffrey, J.D. 453.

CHANNEL ISLANDS.

JERSEY.—Lodge La Césarée (No. 590).—The twenty-first anniversary meeting of this lodge was held at the Masonic Temple on Thursday, May 30th, for the sole purpose of installing the re-elected W.M., when a large number of brethren assembled to congratulate him on his successful termination of his twelve months' labour and on the continuation of his career as a ruler of the Craft, under auspices so favourable, and with the affairs of the lodge in so prosperous a condition and perfect order. Soon after four o'clock the lodge was opened by Bro. Joseph Gregg, W.M., supported by Bros. J. Oatley, P.M., as S.W., Abraham Viel, P.M., acting as J.W.; G. J. Renouf, I.P.M.; A. Schmitt, P.M., P.Prov.G.S.W., Sec.; John Durrell, P.M., P.G.S.W.; John Th. du Jardin, P.M., P.Prov.G.S.W.; P. W. Binet, S.D.; and Jos. Pallot, J.D. &c. The Secretary read the minutes of the previous proceedings, which were unanimously confirmed. The lodge was opened in the second degree. Bro. A. Schmitt took the chair as Installing Master. Bro. Renouf presented then Bro. J. Gregg, as W.M. re-elect for installation. The customary enumeration of duties was made and acknowledged—the Ancient Charges were read and assented to and the Ob. of W.M. elect administered. The lodge was opened in the third degree when Bro. J. Gregg was placed in the chair of K.S. The several classes of Fellow Craft and E. Apprentices were in turn admitted and the processions, salutations and proclamations were gone through. The following appointments were made, the I.P.M. in each case officiating, and offering appropriate addresses and observations:—Bros. Ph. Le Sueur, S.W.; Ph. W. Binet, J.W.; Js. Durell, Treas. (elect); Jos. Pallot, S.D.; Ph. Blampied, J.D.; Ph. Pinel, Junr. Dir of Cer.; H. Du Jardin, Tyler; Henry E. Le V. dit Durell, Orator and Assistant Secretary; lastly the W.M. appointed Bro. A. Schmitt, Secretary. The Secretary read the report of the proceedings of the Audit Committee of the lodge, which contained a number of suggestions and recommendations, which was received, approved and ordered to be entered on the minutes. The Secretary also presented an elaborate account on the condition of the lodge, comprising the prominent events and prospects within it during the past year. The Secretary earnestly pleaded the noble and deserving cause of our Masonic Schools, and on his proposition, seconded by Bro. Jn. Blampied, it was unanimously resolved, “that a further sum of £5 5s. be granted towards the support of the Masonic School for Girls.” There being no other business before the lodge, it was closed at six o'clock, in perfect harmony. The brethren adjourned to the banquetting room, and more than fifty sat down to an excellent dinner provided by the Stewards. The W.M. presided having on his right Bros. A. Schmitt, J. Durell, P. W. Benham, P.M. P.G.Treas.; Ph. Binet, P.M.; H. E. le V. dit Durell, on his left Bros. G. J. Renouf, Jn. Th. du Jardin, J. Oatley, Abr. Viel, B. Hastings, P.M. 34, (J.R.) &c. After the usual loyal toasts had been disposed of, that of the brethren absent was offered, and lastly the Secretary read the names of brethren departed (29) and their memory was solemnly commemorated. Thus a most enjoyable evening was spent, grave and gay alternating. The brethren separated about ten o'clock.

LINCOLNSHIRE.

PROVINCIAL GRAND LODGE.

On Thursday, the 30th ult., a Provincial Grand Lodge was held by the Antient Free and Accepted Masons of Lincolnshire, at the Corn Exchange, Sleaford, under the auspices of the St. Botolph's Lodge, No. 588. In the absence of His Grace, the Duke of St. Alban's, Prov. G.M., the meeting was presided over by W. Bro. Major Smyth, D.P.G.M., who was supported by numerous influential brethren of the Province, among whom were:—Bros. E. Locock, P. Prov. G.W., as P.G.S.W.; Chas. Harrison, J.G.W.; Rev. J. C. Browne, P.G. Chaplain; C. M. Nesbitt, P.G. Treasurer; F. D. Marsden, P.G. Secretary; M. Crowden, P.G.S.D.; W. Watkins, P.G.S. of W.; S. W. Johnson, P.G.D. of C.; J. M. Ramplen, P.G.S.B.; G. Young, P. Prov. S.G.W.; T. E. Jacobson, P. Prov. D.G. of C.; F. R. Larken, P. Prov. G.S.B.; W. E. Howlett, P. Prov. G.A.D. of C.; Thos. H. Oldman, P.G.S.; W. H. Bailes, P. Prov. S.G.W. West Yorkshire; E. Binney, P. Prov. G.D.; and J. H. White, P. Prov. G.O.

Among the visitors were:—Bros. Dr. Lynes, P. Prov. G. Reg. Stafford; W. M. Wood, Thistle, 87, S.C.; J. W. Keyworth, Perseverance, 164; and one brother from the Truth Lodge, 521; whose name we were unable to ascertain.

The Grand Lodge was opened precisely at one o'clock, and reports from the several Committees were read and adopted.

Great regret was felt at the absence of W. Bro. W. H. Bradley, 838, the indefatigable Secretary of the Charity Committee, who was suffering from a severe attack of illness, which prevented his attendance. His report, however, read by Bro. Bland, 838, P. Prov. J.G.D., showed that Bro. Bradley had not been idle, and that more than one family had to thank him for his successful endeavours to “relieve the fatherless and widows in their affliction.”

Congratulatory addresses were read and adopted, to Her Majesty the Queen and His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales, on the recovery of His Royal Highness from his late severe illness, testifying the loyalty of the brethren throughout the Province, and their sympathy with the Royal Family in the hour of their trial.

The following officers were duly invested for the ensuing year:—

J. R. Larken	Prov. S.G.W.
T. E. Jacobson	Prov. J.G.W.
Rev. J. R. Humble.....	Prov. G. Chap.
W. G. Moore	Prov. G. Reg.
C. M. Nesbitt.....	Prov. G. Treas.
F. D. Marsden.....	Prov. G. Sec.
H. E. Turner	Prov. S.G.D.
J. B. Hildred	Prov. J.G.D.
F. Long	Prov. G.S. of W.
T. J. Tomlinson	Prov. G.D. of C.
A. Bates	Prov. A.G.D. of C.
Geo. Jackson	Prov. G.S.B.
H. P. Wickenson.....	Prov. G.O.
J. S. Mossop	Prov. G.P.

In accordance with the usual custom of the lodge the Stewards of the Province of the year were elected in behalf of the Home for Aged Freemasons and their Widows, W. Bro. E. Locock, P. Prov. G.W., being chosen as Steward to represent the Province.

The lodge having been closed in form, a banquet was provided in the Corn Exchange by Bro. Sharpe, of the Bristol Arms Hotel, to which all did ample justice, and, the usual loyal and Masonic toasts being given, a pleasant and profitable evening was spent.

MIDDLESEX.

HARROW.—Harrow Lodge (No. 1310).—On Tuesday 4th ult., at Railway Hotel, Harrow, the regular meeting of this lodge was held. Bro. W. H. Green, W.M. presided, and in an able, correct, and impressive manner, rendered the beautiful ceremony of initiation to Dr. Thomas R. L. Hooper, and then to Mr. W. Butler, (both personal friends.) Some joining members and candidates for initiation were proposed, and the lodge was closed. The usual well-served banquet followed. There were present during the afternoon Bros. S. Homewood, S.W.; F. Harrison, J.W.; F. Walters, P.M., Sec.; Capt. G. A. Smith, S.D., W.M. 619; J. Cox, I.G.; F. Smith, P.M., W.S.; G. Pymm, P.M.; W. Spells, E. Rawson, J. A. Martin, J. M. Daly, T. R. L. Hooper, W. Butler. The visitors were Bros. G. Allen, 144; W. Kinson, 619, &c.

Royal Arch.

GIBRALTAR.

One of those gatherings, which, as they are peculiarly gratifying to old Masons, are none the less interesting and encouraging to younger brethren, took place in the rooms of the Irish Royal Arch Chapter, No 325, at Gibraltar, on the evening of the 22nd June.

The occasion which called forth the demonstration, was the approaching departure from the Rock, of one of the oldest Masons on the station, one who had worthily and most appropriately earned for himself the title of the Father of the Royal Arch Chapter, No 325.

To those Masons who know Gibraltar and its Lodges, the name of Brother Ellison must be as familiar as household words, and it was on the retirement of Brother Ellison from the important Government appointment which he had so long and so ably occupied, and his return to England, that the members of the Chapter 325 desired to express their feelings of respect, gratitude and fraternal affection, by inviting to a farewell banquet and presenting a lasting testimonial to one, who for so many years had been the leading spirit of their community.

Punctually at the hour appointed the Chapter was opened by the 1st Principal, Companion Beal, who was supported on his right by Companion Leslie and on his left by Companion Ellison. Companion Ross guarded the purple veil, Companion Cunningham the blue, and Companion Gillmore the scarlet veil. Companion Dallas occupied his accustomed post as Captain of the Hosts. Companion Holliday was Superintendent of the Tabernacle, Martalini, Prelate, and the indefatigable and ever-verdant Gaby, Principal Sojourner: The members of the Chapter mustered in great force and several visiting brethren from the various Chapters and Lodges of the tation, were also present.

The minutes of a former meeting, bearing special reference to the "Ellison Testimonial" having been read by the Registrar Companion Johnstone, and confirmed, the 1st Principal notified that the business of the evening was to present Companion Ellison with the testimonial which had been voted to him. Companion Ellison having been marshalled by two of the Senior Companions to the foot of the dais, 1st Principal Beal expressed his extreme gratification at being the vehicle of communication through whom the Chapter placed in the hands of Companion Ellison, the handsome testimonial which had been voted to him, he considered it a great privilege to be in a position to bestow so pleasing a token on one like Companion Ellison, who for upwards of a quarter of a century had been a constant attendant of the Chapter and a zealous supporter of all the rites and ceremonies of the order, and who for no less a period than eleven years had occupied the chair of 1st Principal, he had worked steadily up to that exalted position, passing through all the various subordinate offices, and in all displaying zeal, intelligence and integrity. Companion Beal concluded a most feeling address, by wishing Comp. Ellison a favourable voyage home, and many years of health and strength to enjoy the well-earned result of long years of faithful service to his Queen and his country. Companion Ellison having received the testimonial, which consisted of an elaborately chased silver inkstand, on which was engraved the following "Presented by the Members of the R.A. Chapter 325. I. C. Gibraltar to the Most Excellent Companion James Settle Ellison, who filled the office of 1st Principal for eleven consecutive years, as a mark of esteem for the very efficient and valuable services he rendered to the Chapter and to Masonry in general." Gibraltar April, 1872.—Bro. Ellison was so deeply affected that it was some moments before he could sufficiently master his feelings to respond, he then briefly expressed how deeply he felt the honour that had that evening been conferred upon him and how carefully he would treasure the valuable souvenir which had that evening been placed in his hands, not alone for its intrinsic value, but for the many happy recollections which would always be associated with it and which would ever remain fresh and indelible on the tablet of his memory. If anything could have added to the value of the testimonial, it, was that he had received it from the hands of his good friend and brother mason, Beal, with whom he had worked on the most harmonious terms for upwards of 20 years.

Comp. Ellison having resumed his seat, the Deputy District Grand Master, Bro. the Rev. Geo. Alton, rose, and said that he experienced the most unalloyed satisfaction in being permitted to take a part in the interesting ceremony of the evening. The very important and onerous duties of his position in Gibraltar did not always allow of his visiting the various lodges as much as he would be desirous of doing. Nevertheless, his interest in Masonry was ever the same, and he trusted that in no way was he found wanting in the discharge of the duties attached to the high Masonic position that he held in the district. He eulogised in most eloquent terms, the past Masonic career of Bro. Ellison; he had known him for many years; he had worked with him not merely in the Craft degree, but also in many of those which were characterised as the "ineffable," and in all Bro. Ellison had been a zealous and energetic officer, holding distinguished positions, and ever gaining and retaining the respect and esteem of his brethren. He deplored the departure of Bro. Ellison, as thereby the office of District Grand Secretary would become vacant, a void which it would be found difficult to fill with another so able and efficient. The Deputy District Grand Master, who spoke with more than his usual eloquence and felicity of expression, concluded a long and most impressive address, by wishing Bro. Ellison a long continuance of health, and a full enjoyment of all the honours, Military, Social, and Masonic, which had been conferred upon him.

The M.E.Z. of the Calpean Chapter, Comp. Balfour Cockburn, then rose: He feared that after the exhaustive speech of his much esteemed Brother, the Deputy District Grand Master, there was very little left for him to say; but as the 1st Principal of the R.A. Chapter, working under the English Constitution, he could not allow this opportunity to pass without testifying to the unwearied exertions of Comp. Ellison in the cause of Masonry, and how freely, and willingly, and cheerfully, he at all times had been ready to give the benefit of his advice and experience to the Calpean Chapter. The English and the Irish Chapters had always been on the most friendly terms with each other, and he trusted that such would ever be the case. It was too true that Comp. Ellison was about to leave the station, and his absence would throw a gloom over every lodge and chapter in Gibraltar, but there were few clouds which had not a silver lining, and this which now overshadowed them was no exception. Companion Ellison had lived for so long at Gibraltar, that perhaps when the sunny days of July and August were over in England, he might recollect that Gibraltar was after all not such a bad place, and they might yet hope to see their much esteemed brother winging his way south with the swallows, and returning to spend the evening of his life under the shade of the bright coloured oleanders and the sweet-scented orange groves of dear old Gib. Companion Balfour Cockburn concluded a most telling speech, by congratulating the 1st Principal, Companion Beal, on the success of the evening's proceedings, and wishing Comp. Ellison a long continuance of his happy and prosperous career. The chapter having been closed in due form—the Companions sat down to a sumptuous banquet, the enjoyment of which was much enhanced by the strains of a band composed entirely of brother Masons, who had most kindly volunteered to come and assist to the best of their power in making the evening's entertainment pass off agreeably to Companion Ellison.

Obituary.

BRO. DANIEL SCURR.

Our much esteemed friend, and Bro. Dan Scurr, suddenly departed this life on Saturday evening last at seven o'clock. There is now one good man and Mason less in this world, and one more in those blest mansions where we shall be eternally happy with God the Great Architect of the Universe.

Bro. Scurr has for some time past been a very great sufferer, and although the state of his health had given premonitions of a sudden decease, yet his family had hopes of his continued stay; a fragile constitution sometimes holding out longer than a robust one. Although his bodily health was at a very low ebb, it was full flood with his mental; he held his light to the last, bright and clear.

In the course of social duties, he was all that could be required of a man. In his Masonic round, he stood second to none; he was ever ready to give assistance and instruction, and an extensive circle of the craft, his friends, and pupils, were delighted to share his conversation, and profit by the advantage of his great store of Maonic knowledge.

At the time of his decease, two brethren were with him, and had been upwards of an hour in Masonic conversation, during which he had given a definition of Faith, and concluded with the words, (italicised above), he left them to attend to some business, saying he should return in a minute, but in the course of a few seconds, his soul had gone to everlasting life. He appeared to die without a spasm, as though he fell asleep.

"Three years ago this autumn I had a severe attack of gout, to which I had been subject 22 years. After being confined to my room under treatment two weeks, I was induced to try your Vegetable Pain Killer, and in little more than a week was able to be at business. Two years before I had a similar attack no worse, which, under the best of care laid me up more than four months.—THOS. PERRY, Red Lion Sq., London, Nov., 1868.—To Perry Davis & Son, London."

Original Correspondence.

BRO. EMRA HOLMES'S LECTURE ON FREEMASONRY AND THE ROYAL ARK MARINER DEGREE.

(To The Editor of the Freemason.)

SIR,—

As the within alludes to a lecture, part of which appeared in your columns, and as the matter may be of interest to some of the brethren, I forward the two letters for insertion, presuming Bro. Childe does not object.

Yours fraternally,
EMRA HOLMES.

Cambridge, May 9th, 1872.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—

As the Chief Officer of the Order of Royal Ark Mariners in the Province of Suffolk, I have to draw your attention to a report of the able lecture you delivered at St. Luke's Chapter, Ipswich, on the 27th of March, which appears in the Freemason, of April 6th. You are reported to have stated, "In Scotland the candidate must be a Mark Master, as well as a P.M., (to be eligible for the Royal Arch Degree), and Chapters in Scotland also conferred the degree of Royal Ark Mariner, which is now given in England under the Grand Lodge of Mark Masters."

This statement, would you allow me to suggest, is erroneous, and I shall feel obliged if you will take steps to inform the brethren M.M.M. that such is not the case, for by Article 79, a Treaty signed on the 6th of July, 1871, by representatives of the Grand Lodge of Royal Ark Mariners, and of the G. L. Mark, it was expressly provided, "That pending the satisfaction of this Treaty, no further Warrants shall be issued by the Grand Mark Master for working the Royal Ark Mariners' Degree."

It is unnecessary for me to inform one, doubtless my senior, and apparently so learned in the science of Masonry, that the degree of Ark Mariners has been worked since 1772, if not before; that His Royal Highness the Duke of Clarence was Grand Commander of the Order; that the Warrant has been transmitted from one to another, and that Bro. Dorrington invested Bro. Morton Edwards with full powers as Supreme Grand Commander.

I feel sure that the statement you made was unintentional, and was the result of a wish, which I have every reason to believe will soon be fulfilled, of seeing the Royal Ark Degree attached to the Mark. Such, however, is not the case at present, and till this happy conclusion is effected, the Order is entirely distinct, and the power of working the degree is vested in the Supreme Grand Commander alone, and the Officers and lodge acting under his authority.

I have the honour to be, Dear Sir and Brother, yours fraternally,

CHRIS. V. CHILDE, 18°, P.M.
Inspect. Gen. R.A.M. of Prov. of Suffolk,
Mark Master Mason, Lodge 112.
To Bro. Emra Holmes.

Ipswich, 30th May, 1872.

MY DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—

I am in receipt of your letter of the 9th inst., which I should have answered before, but I have been in communication with Bro. Binckes, the Grand Secretary of the Mark Grand Lodge, on the subject. I based my statement upon Bro. Binckes's official letter in the Freemason, and bearing in mind the inherent right of several of the old lodges to confer the degree of R.A.M. as a side degree, if they felt disposed.

I am afraid that, as a loyal member of the Mark Grand Lodge, and of the other Grand bodies, partners in the tri-partite treaty, I should not be doing my duty if I did not acknowledge the fact that the Mark Grand Lodge is the only recognised authority for conferring the Royal Ark Mariner Degree.

Bro. Binckes, in his letter to me, says "This Grand Lodge has the requisite authority to issue warrants of the Royal Ark Mariner's Degree, and those lodges and brethren holding under this jurisdiction as Mark Master Masons, and wishing to work the Ark Mariner Degree, are in honour and duty bound, to seek the power they wish to exercise from this Grand Lodge.

I cannot but agree with Bro. Binckes in this. The multiplication of Grand Bodies is detrimental to Masonry, besides, as I think, being wholly unnecessary.

I suppose you will admit that the formation of a Royal Ark Mariner's Grand Lodge is unknown anywhere else than in England; that such titles as Inspector General, which belong entirely to the 33° A. and A. Rite and no other, are new in the Royal Ark; that the Royal Ark Mariner Degree is generally admitted to be as much a side degree as the Mark itself was, until the formation of the Mark Grand Lodge, and without the shadow of a claim to its antiquity; that the ceremony itself is unworthy of the name, (I speak on the authority of some of your own chiefs), and that much unnecessary bickering and unpleasantness has been the consequence of the movement.

For my own part, I cannot understand how brethren, who have sworn allegiance, like myself, to the Grand Lodge of Mark Masters, can take a part in the propagation of the rite outside her pale, consistently with their obligation, but I do not pretend to judge their motives in the matter. As to Bro. Morton Edwards, I wish to say nothing, and for yourself, I feel sure that you are inspired by the purest intentions in wishing to correct my statements.

You must forgive me if I say, however, that I am not convinced as to the necessity for a Grand Lodge of Royal Ark Mariners; as to the impropriety of my own Grand Lodge assuming control over the degrees; nor even of the sufficiency of Bro. Morton Edwards' authority for the establishment of your order on an independent footing. I could tell you more, and about the conferring of other degrees, with a usurped authority, but I refrain. Hoping that I may some day have the pleasure of meeting you, when we can talk, better than write, on things Masonic, and that you will pardon me if I have said anything to annoy you on this subject.

Believe me fraternally yours,
EMRA HOLMES, 31°, P.M.

W.M. Albert Victor Lodge of Mark Masters.
Grand Provost Grand Conclave of Knights Templar, P.G.A.D.C. Suffolk.
Member of the R. O. of Scotland.

ROYAL MASONIC INSTITUTION FOR BOYS.

At a meeting of the General Committee of above Institution, held on Tuesday the 4th inst., Bro. J. R. Sheen in the chair, the following brethren were nominated as members of the House Committee for the ensuing year:—

Bro. William Roebuck	25
„ W. Raynham Stewart	24
„ Henry Browse	22
„ George Cox	22
„ J. Giles Chancellor	22
„ Benjamin Head	22
„ William Paas	22
„ S. Rosenthal	21
„ Benjamin Mallam	20
„ George Plucknett	19
„ Fred. A. Philbrick	17
„ W. Sabben, M.D.	13
„ Joseph Taylor	11
„ Capt. J. Wordsworth	10

The first twelve were elected.
The Audit Committee was re-elected.

METROPOLITAN MASONIC MEETINGS.

For the Week ending Friday, June 14th, 1872.

SATURDAY, JUNE 8.

- Lodge 108, London, Ship and Turtle, Leadenhall-st.
- „ 176, Caveac.
- „ 778, Bard of Avon Lodge, Angel Hotel, Staines.
- „ 1328, Granite, Freemasons' Hall.
- „ 1361, United Service, Swan Hotel, Wimbledon.
- Mark Lodge, 104, Macdonald, Head Quarters First Surrey Rifles, Brunswick-road, Camberwell.
- Star Lodge of Instruction (1275), Marquis of Granby, New Cross-road, at 7; Bro. C. S. Dille, Preceptor.
- Sphinx Lodge of Instruction (1329), Stirling Castle, Camberwell, at 7.30; Bros. Thomas and Worthington, Preceptors.
- Mount Sinai Chapter of Instruction, Union Tavern, Air-street, at 8; Comp. Brett, Preceptor.
- Manchester Lodge of Instruction, Yorkshire Grey, London Street, Fitzroy-Square, at 8. Bro. Ash, P.M., Preceptor.

MONDAY, JUNE 10.

- Lodge 29, St. Alban's, Albion Tavern, Aldersgate-st.
- Sincerity Lodge of Instruction (174), Railway Tavern Fenchurch-street Station, at 7.
- Strong Man Lodge of Instruction (45), Old Jerusalem Tavern, St. John's Gate, Clerkenwell, at 8; Bro. James Terry, Preceptor.
- Camden Lodge of Instruction (704), Adelaide Tavern, Haverstock-hill, at 8; Bro. T. A. Adams, Preceptor.
- Eastern Star Lodge of Instruction (95), Royal Hotel, Mile-end-road, at 7.30; Bro. E. Gotheil, Preceptor.
- British Oak Lodge of Instruction, Bank of Friendship Tavern, Mile End, at 7 for 8.
- St. James's Union Lodge of Instruction (180), Horse and Groom Tavern, Winsley-street, (opposite the Pantheon), Oxford-street, at 8; Bro. J. R. Stacey, Preceptor.
- Wellington Lodge of Instruction, White Swan Tavern, Deptford, at 8; Bro. C. G. Willey, P.M. 1155, Preceptor.
- St. John of Wapping Lodge of Instruction (1306), Gun Tavern, High-street, Wapping, at 7; Bro. T. Mortlock, Preceptor.
- West Kent Lodge of Improvement (1297), St. Saviour's College, Stansted-road, Forest-hill, at 7.30; Bro. H. W. Lindus, Preceptor.

TUESDAY, JUNE 11.

- Lodge 548, Wellington, White Swan Tavern, Deptford.
- „ 834, Ranelagh, Royal Sussex Hotel, Hammersmith.
- „ 1269, Stanhope, Thicket Hotel, Anerley, Surrey.
- Metropolitan Chapter of Instruction, Portugal Hotel Fleet-street, at 7; Comp. Brett, Preceptor.
- Domestic Lodge of Instruction, Palmerston Tav., Grosvenor-park, Camberwell, at 8. Bro. John Thomas, Preceptor.
- Faith Lodge of Instruction, Refreshment Rooms, Victoria-st. (opposite Westminster Palace Hotel) at 8; Bro. C. A. Cottebrune, Preceptor.
- Yarborough Lodge of Instruction, Green Dragon, Stepney, at 8; Bro. Isaac Saqui, Preceptor.
- Prince Fredk. William Lodge of Instruction (753), Knights of St. John Tavern, St. John's Wood Bro. F. G. Baker, Preceptor.
- Dalhousie Lodge of Instruction, King Edward, Triangle, Hackney, at 7.30. Bro. J. Saunders, Preceptor.
- Sydney Lodge of Instruction (829), Cambridge Hotel, Upper Norwood, at 7.30.
- Florence Nightingale Lodge of Instruction, Masonic Hall, William-street, Woolwich, at 7.30.
- Prosperity Lodge of Instruction, Gladstone Tavern, Bishopsgate-st. Within, at 7.30; Bro. Bolton, (W.M. 1227), Preceptor.
- St. Marylebone Lodge of Instruction (1305), British Stores Tavern, New-street, St. John's Wood, at 8; Bro. T. A. Adams, Preceptor.

WEDNESDAY, JUNE 12.

- Committee of Royal Masonic Benevolent Institution, at 3. Lodge 1017, Montefiore, Freemasons' Hall.
- „ 1216, Macdonald, Brunswick-st., Camberwell.
- „ 1228, Beacontree, Private Rooms, Leytonstone.
- „ 1260, Hervey, Swan Tavern, Waltham Green.
- „ 1305, St. Marylebone, Eyre Arms Tavern, St. John's Wood.
- „ 1306, St. John of Wapping, Gun Tavern, High-st. Wapping.
- Pythagorean Lodge of Instruction (79), Prince of Orange, Greenwich, at 8; Bro. J. Robt. Nash, Preceptor.
- United Strength Lodge of Instruction (228), the Grafton Arms, Prince of Wales' Road, Kentish Town, at 8; Bro. J. N. Frost, Preceptor.
- Israel Lodge of Instruction, Rising Sun Tavern, Globe-road, at 7.30; Bro. Isaac Saqui, Preceptor.
- New Concord Lodge of Instruction, Rosemary Branch Tavern, Hoxton, at 8.
- Confidence Lodge of Instruction, Railway Tav., London-street, City, at 7.30.
- Royal Union Lodge of Instruction, Horse and Groom Tavern, Winsley-street, Oxford-street, at 8. Bro. T. A. Adams, Preceptor.
- Peckham Lodge of Instruction, Maismore Arms, Park-road, Peckham at 8; Bro. David Rose, Preceptor.
- Temperance in the East Lodge of Instruction, George the Fourth, Catherine-street, Poplar.
- Stanhope Lodge of Instruction, Thicket Hotel, Anerly, at 7.30. p.m.; Bro. H. W. Lindus, Preceptor.

THURSDAY, JUNE 13.

- Lodge 1227, Upton, Spotted Dog, Upton, Essex.
- „ 1288, Finsbury Park, Finsbury Park Tavern, Holloway.
- Chapter, 72, Royal Jubilee, Horns Tavern, Kennington.
- „ 619, Beadon, Greyhound Hotel, Dulwich.
- The R.A. Chapter of Improvement, Freemasons' Hall, at 7; Comp. Brett, Preceptor. Ceremony, explanation of R.A. Jewel and Solids, part sections.
- Fidelity Lodge of Instruction (3), Yorkshire Grey, London-st., Tottenham Court-road, at 8; Bro. T. A. Adams, Preceptor.
- Panmure Lodge of Instruction (720), Balham Hotel, Balham, at 7.30; Bro. John Thomas, Preceptor.
- Finsbury Lodge of Instruction, Jolly Anglers' Tavern, Bath-street, City-road; Bro. Stean, Preceptor.
- United Mariners' Lodge of Instruction, Three Cranes Mile-end-road, at 8; Bro. T. J. Barnes, Preceptor.
- Whittington Lodge of Instruction (862), Crown Tavern, Holborn, at 8; Bro. Lewis Alexander, P.M. 188. Preceptor.
- Chigwell Lodge of Instruction, Bald-faced Stag Hotel, Buckhurst Hill, at 7.30.

FRIDAY, JUNE 14.

- Lodge 134, Caledonian, Ship and Turtle, Leadenhall-st.
- Chapter 6, Friendship, Willis's Rooms, St. James's.
- Chapter 33, Britannic, Freemasons' Hall.
- Unions Emulation Lodge of Improvement for M.M.'s, Freemasons' Hall, at 7.

- Metropolitan Lodge of Instruction, Portugal Hotel, Fleet-street, at 7; Bro. Brett, Preceptor.
- Belgrave Lodge of Instruction, Duke of Wellington Hotel, Spring-gardens, Charing-cross; Bro. Pulsford, Preceptor.
- Doric Lodge of Instruction, Three Cranes Tavern, Mile-end-road, at 8; Bro. Isaac Saqui, Preceptor.
- Robert Burns Lodge of Instruction, Union Tavern, Air-street, Regent-st., at 8; Bro. W. Watson, Preceptor.
- Burgoyne Lodge of Instruction, Grafton Arms, Prince of Wales'-road, N.W., at 8.
- St. Luke's Lodge of Instruction (144), Gladstone Tavern, Brompton-road, S.W.
- United Pilgrims Lodge of Instruction, Duke of Edinburgh, Shepherd's-lane, Brixton, at 7; Bro. J. Thomas, P.M., Preceptor.
- Duke of Edinburgh Lodge of Instruction, Silver Lion, Penny-fields, Poplar, at 7; Br. D. S. Potts, Preceptor.
- St. James's Lodge of Instruction, Gregorian Arms Tavern, Jamaica-road, Bermondsey, at 8. Bro. Howes, P.M. Preceptor.
- Temperance Lodge of Instruction, Victoria Tav., Victoria road, Deptford, at 8.
- Burdett Coutts Lodge of Instruction (1278), Approach Tavern, Approach-road, Victoria-park, at 8; Bro. Geo. W. Verry, Preceptor.
- Clapton Lodge of Instruction, White Hart, Clapton, at 7.30; Bro. John Saunders, Preceptor.
- Royal Standard Lodge of Instruction (1298), The Castle Tavern, Holloway, at 8; Bro. R. Lee, (P.M. 193, W.M. 1298), Preceptor.
- Pythagorean Chapter of Instruction (No. 79), Prince of Orange, Greenwich-road, at 8; Comp. W. West Smith, Preceptor.
- Westbourne Lodge of Instruction (733) Horse and Groom, Winsley-street, Oxford-Street, at 8.

Advertisements.

FREDERICK ADLARD,
MERCHANT TAILOR AND OUTFITTER,
 225, HIGH HOLBORN, W.C.
 Superior Tourist Suits from £2 15 0
 Black Dress Suits from 3 13 6
 Trousers in every variety, all wool, ... 0 16 0

FREDERICK ADLARD,
MANUFACTURER OF MASONIC CLOTHING,
 Inventor of the Masonic Jewel Attacher,
 (Registered 5 and 6 Victoria, cap. 100.)
225, HIGH HOLBORN, W.C.
 "MASONIC JEWEL ATTACHER.—Bro. Adlard, of 225, High Holborn, W.C., has invented an attacher, which, from its simplicity and convenience, has only to be universally known to be universally adopted. It has long been a subject of complaint that the wearing of the honourable insignia of rank and merit which grace the breasts of so many of our Brethren, plays sad havoc with the fabric and material of the coat to which they are attached. Bro. Adlard's invention entirely obviates this, in addition to saving much time and difficulty in the proper arrangement of the jewels, and we have very great pleasure in recommending it, warranted as we are in doing so by our personal experience. The price (7s. 6d.) places it within the reach of all."—Masonic Magazine.
 Bro. Adlard's superior fitting Collars are also well worthy of the attention of the Craft.
 "We have much pleasure in recommending Bro. Adlard's Jewel Attacher for its convenience and usefulness."—Freemason.

For Cheap Watches, Clocks, Gold Chains and Jewellery, go to KIBBLES',
 22, GRACECHURCH STREET
 (one door from Lombard-street).
 Gold Watches £2 15s.
 Silver Watches £1 5s.
 Timepieces... .. from 9s. 6d.
 Every article warranted. Plate, Watches, and Jewellery bought or exchanged. List of Prices post free.

GENERAL FUNERAL ESTABLISHMENT, 81, City-road, E.C., opposite the Finsbury Schools, and 24, Southgate-road, De Beauvoir Town, N.
Bros. SINCLAIR & SON
 beg to call the public attention to their Scale of Charges to suit all classes, to any of the Metropolitan Cemeteries, or other places. For further information, see Illustrated Book and Estimates, forwarded on application.
 No connection with any other establishment.

Just Published. Price Sixpence.
MUSIC FOR THE CEREMONY OF INITIATION.
 With Opening and Closing Hymns. Composed by Bro. EDWIN J. CROW, Mus: Bac: Cantab: W.M. 279 P. Prov. G.O. Leicestershire and Rutland, &c.
 NOVELLO, EWER & Co., London; and may be had from the Composer, De Montfort Terrace, Leicester.

TRY BARKERS' TROUSERS,
13/6
 Opposite the New Hospital,
DERBY ROAD, BOOTLE,
 Near Liverpool.

M. A. VERKRÜZEN, (Growers' Agent),
 Invites attention to his Fine and Extensive Stock of
PURE AND SELECTED GERMAN WINES
 Including the
LIGHT REFRESHING DINNER SORTS, and all Grades up to the Greatest Growths.
 Certain of these Wines have acquired celebrity for their curative effects in cases of stone and gravel, they act beneficially on the liver and kidneys, counteract constipation, promote skin action, are invaluable in cases of dropsy, rheumatism and gout, tone and purify the blood, greatly assist digestion, and diffuse throughout the system, even in the coldest weather, an agreeable sense of gentle warmth.
Nothing is so refreshing, nothing gives such zest to a meal.

DELICIOUS DINNER SORTS.	DESSERT CLASS.	SPARKLING.
VERY FINE.	GRANDEST.	HOCK.
MOSELLE.
From 17s. 6d. to 36s. per doz.	40s. to 72s. doz.	78s. to 150s. doz.
		30s. to 78s. doz.
		30s. to 60s. doz.

 Packing and delivery within three miles radius free.
Wholesale Depot: 3, Fell-street, Wood-street, London, E.C.
 Can also be ordered through the Trade.
 Each bottle bears the name of M. A. VERKRÜZEN as a guarantee.
 "VERY FINE CHAMPAGNES," (by special contract) 34s., 40s., 40s., 58s., 70s. per dozen.

SHERRIES	PORTS.	CLARETS.
26s. to 96s.	30s. to 72s.	12s. to 36s.

 Other Wines of Superior Quality, at lowest prices (the Wines may be tasted at the Depot).
 Detailed Price Current forwarded on application. Terms Cash. Cheques crossed "Bank of England."
 Wines for Invalids, specially selected according to the case.

Established 1798.
 "MESSRS. CHARLES WATSON and Co., of 30, Cornhill, forwarded us samples of their 'Cornhill Sherry.' We have taken the opinion of competent judges and veteran wine consumers upon its merits, and pronounce it decidedly the best of the wines at a similar cost which we have tasted, and a great many came before us during the process of our analysis."—Medical Press.

CHARLES WATSON and Co., 30, Cornhill,
 opposite the Royal Exchange, invite attention to the CORNHILL SHERRY, as their speciality, pure elegant and recherche, and worthy of a place on any gentleman's table.
THE CORNHILL SHERRY, elegant, pale and dry, 30s. per dozen. Carriage paid.
 CLARET..... 16s. 22s. 28s. 36s. 42s. to Five Guineas.
 SHERRY 22s. 26s. 30s. 36s. 42s. 48s. to 84s.
 PORT..... 28s. 34s. 42s. 48s. 54s. to 120s.
 CHAMPAGNE ... 36s. 42s. 54s. 60s. to 84s.
 WHISKY—the Ben Nevis—CHARLES WATSON and Co.'s Speciality, 20s. per gallon; the softest and most fascinating Whisky for Toddy in the market.—30, Cornhill. Carriage free within 50 miles. Sample Bottles may be had.
THE CORNHILL SHERRY, rich gold, 30s. per dozen, carriage paid. 30, Cornhill. Sample bottles may be had.

Established 1798.
 CORNHILL SHERRY.—CHARLES WATSON and Co., 30, Cornhill (opposite Royal Exchange), requests the favour of a visit to these old-established cellars, containing a large stock of the finest old Wines of every country, some curious and rare, to please the most critical connoisseurs. Descriptive list free. C. W. and Co. appoint Agents, with first-class references, in towns where not represented.

- Second Edition, revised and enlarged, with a Copious Index. Bound in Cloth and Lettered, 10s. 6d.
- HANDY-BOOK FOR INVESTORS.—Second Edition, 530 pages.
 - A HISTORY of the National Debt.—See Handy-Book for Investors.
 - A REVIEW OF GOVERNMENT SECURITIES.—See Handy-Book for Investors.
 - REVIEW OF INDIAN FINANCES.—See Handy-Book for Investors.
 - HISTORY of the BANK OF ENGLAND.—See Handy-Book for Investors.
 - STOCKBROKERS and the STOCK EXCHANGE.—See Handy-Book for Investors.
 - HISTORY and STATISTICS of the COLONIES and their Debts.—See Handy-Book for Investors.
 - FOREIGN STATES and their DEBTS.—See Handy-Book for Investors.
 - HISTORY of JOINT-STOCK COMPANIES.—See Handy-Book for Investors.
 - HISTORY of BRITISH RAILWAYS.—See Handy Book for Investors.
 - INDIAN, COLONIAL, and FOREIGN RAILWAYS.—See Handy-Book for Investors.
 - HISTORY and POSITION of JOINT-STOCK BANKS.—See Handy-Book for Investors.
 - HISTORY and POSITION of FINANCIAL COMPANIES.—See Handy-Book for Investors.
 - SHIPPING and MERCANTILE COMPANIES.—See Handy-Book for Investors.
 - HISTORY and POSITION of INSURANCE AND ASSURANCE COMPANIES.—See Handy-Book for Investors.
 - POSITION, PROFITS, and PROSPECTS of MINING COMPANIES.—See Handy-Book for Investors.
 - THE METALLIFEROUS DISTRICTS of the KINGDOM.—See Handy-Book for Investors.
 - MINES in Cornwall, Devon, Shropshire, Isle of Man, and Ireland.—See Handy-Book for Investors.
 - COMPARATIVE PROFITS of INVESTMENTS.—See Handy-Book for Investors.
- Bartlett & Chapman, 36, Cornhill, E.C.

Bro. CHARLES HEDGELONG,
 NEW AND SECOND-HAND BOOKSELLER,
 26, GRAFTON STREET, DUBLIN.
 AGENT FOR "THE FREEMASON."

GEORGE KENNING,
 198, Fleet Street, E.C.
WATCH & CLOCK MANUFACTURER.

Strong Silver Watches	from	1	1	0
Silver English Levers (own make)	from	3	10	0
Ladies Gold English Levers	from	9	9	0
Gents Gold English Levers	from	12	12	0
Gold Watches	from	2	12	0
Good Sound 8-day Clocks, in neat cases	from	0	10	0
Good Sound 8-day Clocks, with alarum	from	0	15	0

Watches, Clocks, Jewellery, Medals, and Jewels, suitable for Presentation, &c., made to order with dispatch.
 All kinds of repairs done on the premises, at moderate prices, by experienced workmen.
 George Kennings' Ladies' Gold English Levers, unequalled £10 10s.
 Country orders will receive prompt attention.

Manufactory: 2, 3 & 4, Little Britain.

THE LOMBARD EXCHANGE AND NEWS ROOM,
 LOMBARD STREET, LONDON, E.C.

TERMS:		£.	s.	d.
Entrance Fee	...	3	3	0
Annual Subscription	...	3	3	0

Members residing and carrying on business at a distance of fifty miles and upwards from London, Merchants, Captains, and Clerks to Subscribers (no entrance fee) 1 1 0
 The Room is well supplied with newspapers, telegrams, and books of reference. It includes a Post-office, Poste Restante, Telegraph-office, Reading and Writing Room, Restaurant, Lavatories, &c.; also copying machines for the use of subscribers.
 Bro. JOHN H. YOUNGHUSBAND,
 P.M., P.Z., P.E.C., P.P.J.G.W., &c., Manager.

THE "EXPRESS" GENERAL STEAM PRINTING OFFICE,
 TRAFFORD-STREET, HULME, MANCHESTER, S.W.
 BRO. MASON begs to state that he can forward PRINTING to any address in the country, carriage paid.

100 Cards	1 6, 2 0, 2 3, 3 0, and 3 6
5,000 Handbills	12 6, 20 0, 25 0, 34 0 to 50 0
12 Funeral Cards	1 6, 2 0; 24 ditto, 2 6, 4 6
100 Posting Bills	5 0, 7 0, 10 0, 12 0, 15 0, 20 0
50,000 Wake's or Paulden's Annual Circulars	£87 10
Gentlemen's or Ladies' Private Cards	50 for 2 0; 100 3 6
12 Window Bills	1 0, 1 6, 2 6, 5 0 to 7 6
5,000 Billheads, at per 1000	5 0, 6 0, 7 0, 10 6
Society Rules, 16 pages	30 0, 35 0, 40 0, 45 0, to 102 0

ESTIMATES ON APPLICATION.

MASONIC ASSURANCE COMPANY,
9, NEW BRIDGE-STREET, LONDON.
ESTABLISHED 1868.

THE ADDRESS recently issued by the newly appointed Chairman, Bro. J. RANKIN STEBBING, P. G. D., may be obtained on application at the offices of the Company.

FREDERICK BIGG, P.M., Manager.

Active Agents will be treated with liberality.

NEW YORK LIFE INSURANCE COMPANY,
ESTABLISHED 1845.

Conducted under the official supervision of the State of New York.

$100,000 have been deposited with Trustees in England.

Life Assurance only. Purely Mutual. All Profits annually to Policy Holders.

Accumulated Funds, December 31st, 1870 ... £3,172,244
Surplus over all Liabilities, and Reserve Fund 389,322
Income for Year 1870 1,317,271

Bro. M. X. COHEN,
SPECIAL AGENT,
76 & 77, CHEAPSIDE, E.C.

Norwich and London ACCIDENT INSURANCE ASSOCIATION.
ESTABLISHED 1856.

SUBSCRIBED CAPITAL £100,000.

For Insuring against

ACCIDENTAL DEATH,
With

Compensation for Personal Injury,
Caused by Accidents

CHIEF OFFICES—ST. GILES'S STREET, NORWICH.
LONDON: 10, OLD JEWRY CHAMBERS.
Secretary: CHARLES R. GILMAN, Esq.
London Manager: Mr. GEORGE POWELL.

DEATH or INJURY from ACCIDENT,
With the consequent
LOSS OF TIME AND MONEY,
Provided for by Policy of the
Railway Passengers' Assurance Company
AGAINST ACCIDENTS OF ALL KINDS.

An Annual Payment of £3 to £6 ss. insures £1,000 at Death, or an Allowance at the rate of £6 per week for injury.
£650,000 have been paid as Compensation.

One out of every 12 Annual Policy Holders becoming a claimant each year.

For particulars apply to the Clerks at the Railway Stations, to the Local Agents, or at the Offices.
64, CORNHILL, and 10, REGENT STREET, LONDON.
WILLIAM J. VIAN, Secretary.

THE NEW MASONIC CANDLES,
Ionic, Doric and Corinthian, Embleatically Arranged for Worshipful Master, Senior and Junior Wardens.

6s. per set of 3 one-pound Candles. Packing Cases 6d. each.

Bro. GEORGE KENNING'S
MASONIC DEPOTS, 2, 3, & 4, LITTLE BRITAIN,
AND 198, FLEET STREET, E.C.

J. E. PETERS,
ORNAMENTAL ENGRAVER AND FANCY ENAMELLER,
41, Clerkenwell Close.
Writing, Engraving of every description, Masonic Emblems Engraved or Enamelled; old enamelled Work repaired; Country Orders attended to with despatch.

SHEPPARD & Co.
PRIME CANADIAN HAMS.
9d. lb.
113 & 115, BOROUGH & LONDON BRIDGE, S.E.

S. WELCH,
WRITER AND GRAINER,
6, MAIDENHEAD COURT,
ALDRSGATE STREET, E.C.

ROSE CROIX TRACING BOARDS,
Five Guineas the Pair.
MASONIC DEPOTS, 2, 3, & 4, LITTLE BRITAIN,
AND 198, FLEET-STREET.

LONDON AND SUBURBAN
MUTUAL BUILDING SOCIETY,

Enrolled in 1855, pursuant to Act of Parliament.
SHARES, £25 each, may be paid in one sum, or by Monthly Subscriptions of 5s. per share.
INVESTING MEMBERS receive 5 per cent. Interest, and Share of Surplus Profits.
MONEY ADVANCED ON MORTGAGE, without Premium, for any term of years.
Bro. JONATHAN TAYLOR (Doric 933), Secretary.
Offices:—107a, Fenchurch-street, E.C.

THE BIRKBECK

Is the only Building Society whose Annual Receipts exceeds ONE MILLION!

How to Purchase a House for Two Guineas per Month, With immediate possession and no Rent to pay. Apply at the Office of the BIRKBECK BUILDING SOCIETY, 29 & 30, Southampton-buildings, Chancery-lane.
How to purchase a Plot of Land for Five Shillings per Month, With immediate possession, either for Building or Gardening purposes, apply at the Office of the BIRKBECK FREEHOLD LAND SOCIETY, 29 & 30 Southampton-buildings, Chancery-lane.
How to Invest Money with safety at 4 per cent Interest, Apply to the Office of the BIRKBECK BANK.
All sums under £50 repayable upon demand. Current accounts opened similar to Ordinary Bankers. Cheque Books supplied. Office hours from 10 till 4 daily, on Mondays from 10 till 9, and on Saturdays from 10 till 2. A small pamphlet, containing full particulars, may be obtained gratis, or sent Post-free on application to FRANCIS RAVENSCROFT, Manager.

THE SOUTH-WESTERN INDEX LIST

of Furnished and Unfurnished Houses to be let, and of Estates for sale in the South-west of London, is published Monthly by

MR. JAS. STEVENS, AUCTIONEER & ESTATE AGENT,
CLAPHAM COMMON, S.W.

A useful work of reference for those seeking Residences, and saving much trouble in obtaining information of properties for disposal in the S.W. district.

Send post-card with your address, and a copy will be forwarded by return post.

THE LONDON MIRROR.

Published every Saturday; price 4d.

The object of this journal is to set forth the claims of the many Religious, Educational, Benevolent, and Prudential Institutions of the United Kingdom, and week by week to report their proceedings, whether as Meetings, Sermons, Anniversaries, or Elections, so as to present these National Institutions to the favour of the Public.
Office, 59, Southampton-row, Russell-square, London, W.C.

"THE FREEMASON" OF ST. LOUIS.

The Largest Masonic Monthly in the World. Published at St. Louis, Mo., by George Frank Gouley, Grand Secretary and Recorder of the four Grand Bodies of Missouri.

The Freemason contains tidings from every quarter of the world, and will be found of great advantage to all Masons, especially those interested in American affairs. Terms 82 per annum, and to those who subscribe for the London Freemason the price will be $1.50 currency. Postage free.
Subscriptions received at the Office of the London "Freemason," 198, Fleet-street.

THE MASONIC TROWEL.—A Masonic

Journal, published on the 15th of every month, by H. G. Reynolds, Junr., Springfield, Illinois, United States of America. Sixteen pages, large quarto. Circulation 20,000 monthly.
Terms to be obtained, and Subscriptions received at the Freemason Office, 198, Fleet-street and forwarded free of charge.

"TRUTH MUST PREVAIL."—Common Sense.

Lamps, Baths, Cutlery, Brushes, Fenders and Fire Irons Electroplate and Nickel-Silver Goods.

R. D. PARR,

General House Furnishing Ironmonger,
42, BLACKMAN STREET, BOROUGH.

OFFERS nothing extraordinary, but REALLY

Good Articles at fair and reasonable prices. He does not keep an "Immense Stock," but sufficiently large for any person to select from. He does not sell "cheaper than every other house in the Trade," but quite as cheap as any.
A visit will, at all times, be very much appreciated.

THE JEWISH CHRONICLE

Price Twopence.

OFFICE: 43 FINSBURY SQUARE, E.C.

TESSELATED CARPETING,

FOR

Lodges, Chapters, Encampments, &c.

Four Feet wide, 3/9 per Yard.

MASONIC DEPOTS, 2, 3 & 4, LITTLE BRITAIN,
AND 198, FLEET STREET, E.C.

Bro. WILLIAMS. MASONIC EMBLEMS
Lithographic Artist Designed and Engraved
AND ENGRAVER ON WOOD. OR STONE, WOOD, or VELLUM.

8, Featherstone Buildings, Holborn

25, Acton Street, London, W.C.

GLENFIELD STARCH

is the only kind used in Her Majesty's Laundry.

Those Ladies who have not yet used the Glenfield Starch, are respectfully solicited to give it a trial, and carefully follow out the directions printed on every package. It is rather more difficult to make than other Starches, but when this is overcome, they will say, like the Queen's Laundress, that it is the finest Starch they ever used.

When you ask for the Glenfield, see that you get it.

BRIDGE HOUSE HOTEL,

LONDON BRIDGE,

Opposite the South Eastern, and London, Brighton, and South Coast Railways.

THIS Hotel has great facilities for Meetings, Charitable Institutions, Wedding Breakfasts, Public Dinners, Balls, Soirees, and is allowed to be in real domestic comfort, one of the Best in the Metropolis, the tariff on application to JOSEPH H. SPENCER.

THE GREAT WESTERN HOTEL
(SNOW HILL STATION)

BIRMINGHAM.

"One of the most elegant, comfortable and economical Hotels in the three kingdoms.—The Field, July 31, 1869."

"From experience gained by repeated visits, we are happy to be able to testify to the exceeding comfort of this Hotel. We have much pleasure in recommending it."—The Engineer, October 14, 1870.

"An establishment remarkable for its able management, reasonable charges, and general comfort."—Bell's Life, June, 31, 1871.
Good Accommodation for Lodges, Chapters, &c.

City Terminus Hotel, Cannon-street,
LONDON.

WELL adapted for Banquets, Balls, Amateur Dramatic Entertainments, Public Meetings, and Arbitrations. The large Hall is capable of seating upwards of Twelve Hundred people.
SYDNEY SPENCER, Manager.

Guildhall Tavern, Gresham-st., E.C.

SPACIOUS Dining-rooms, Chop and Steak-rooms, Luncheon-bars, and Smoking Rooms. Rooms of all sizes, suitable for Auction Sales, Consultations, Arbitrations, Building Societies, &c.; also for Freemasons' Lodges and Banquets, Private Dinners, &c.
Guildhall Tavern Company (Limited), 32 and 33, Gresham-street, GEORGE CRAWFORD, Manager and Secretary.

Masons' Hall Tavern,

MASONS' AVENUE, BASINGHALL-STREET, CITY.

THE above old-established Tavern is NOW OPEN, newly decorated, by Bro. CHARLES GOSDEN, late Manager of the Freemasons' Tavern Company. Every accommodation will be found for Lodges, Chapters, Mark and other degrees, for their Meetings, Dinners, Suppers, &c., and every attention will be paid to their comfort and enjoyment by the new Proprietor.

The Alexandra Restaurant,

7, CONDUIT-STREET, REGENT-STREET.

Public and Private Dining Rooms.

First-class Cooking and Wines.

Open for Suppers after the Theatres.

Bro. F. HILFREICH, Proprietor.

REEVES, SON and CO., Printers, Wholesale Stationers, and Account Book Manufacturers, PLAYHOUSE YARD, BLACKFRIARS, LONDON, E.C. Next the "Times" Office.

REEVES, SON and CO.

Publishers.

REEVES, SON and CO.

Newspaper Printers.

REEVES, SON and CO.,

Magazine Printers.

REEVES, SON and CO.,

Law Printers.

REEVES, SON and CO.,

Commercial Printers.

REEVES, SON and CO.,

Show Card Printers.

REEVES, SON and CO.,

Label Printers.

REEVES, SON and CO.

Ornamental and Colour Printers

REEVES, SON and CO.,

Bankers' Cheque Printers.

REEVES, SON and CO.,

Copper Plate Printers.

REEVES, SON and CO.,

Lithographic Printers.

REEVES, SON and CO.,

Lithographic Artists.

REEVES, SON and CO.,

Map Printers and Colourers.

REEVES, SON and CO.,

Designers.

REEVES, SON and CO.,

Stereotypers.

REEVES, SON and CO.,

Engravers and Die-Sinkers.

REEVES, SON and CO., offer many advantages to Manufacturers and all persons requiring large quantities of Paper and Printing, as they possess the most approved machinery, as well as every other facility for executing orders entrusted to them in the cheapest and best manner.

As PUBLISHERS, their Offices are very central, and they render accounts monthly.

Printed and Published by the Proprietor, Brother GEORGE KENNING at his Offices, 2, 3, and 4, Little Britain, and 198, Fleet-street in the City of London, and 2, Monument-place, Liverpool, in the County of Lancaster.—SATURDAY, JUNE 8, 1872.

TABLE OF CONTENTS

Freemasonry and Israelitism 363
 Random Notes on Freemasonry 363
 Consecration of a Red Cross Conclave in Liverpool... 366
 CORRESPONDENCE:—
 Canvassing in Grand Lodge 366
 United Grand Lodge—Quarterly Communication ... 367
 Aids to Study..... 368
 CRAFT MASONRY:—
 Metropolitan 368
 Provincial 368
 ROYAL ARCH:—
 Provincial..... 369
 MARK MASONRY:—
 Metropolitan 369
 KNIGHTS TEMPLAR:—
 Provincial Grand Conclave of West Lancashire ... 369
 Grand Lodge of Mark Master Masons 370
 Consecration of a Masonic Temple in Carnarvon Castle 370
 The Ancient and Accepted Rite in the United States... 372
 Masonic Meetings for next week... 374
 Advertisements..... 361, 362, 375, 376

FREEMASONRY AND ISRAELITISM.
 AN EPITOME OF BRO. CARPENTER'S ARTICLES
 ON THIS SUBJECT.

By W. E. N., No. 766.

(Continued from Page 288.)

No. XXV., Jan. 6th, 1872.—The migration and history of the Goths or Getae, or Scythians, or Saxons, Angles, and Jutes, have been traced from the south-eastern parts of Europe, and southern parts of Asia—the very regions into which the Israelites were deported by the Assyrians, about 725 B.C., to their settlement in these islands, “The Isles of the Sea,” and subsequently their missions (colonising and religious), into every quarter of the globe. In this the predicted mission of Israel has been fulfilled—to occupy the isles, to raise up a standard for the nations, and to make known the true God, and His salvation, to the ends of the earth. The very marked distinction made in the prophecies between Judah and Israel must be born in the mind—the head or leading tribe of Israel being Ephraim, the inheritor of Joseph’s birthright, and of whom God declared, through Jeremiah, “I am a Father unto Israel and Ephraim is my first-born,” that in possessing the privileges and inheritance of the first son. Seeing the recorded prophecies promulgated many years ago, and the literal fulfilment of many of them, in ancient and modern history, it would demand a great amount of credulity to believe that the exact agreement, in so many particulars, of the one with the other, was the result of mere chance, or that it only exhibits a series of coincidences, the like of which is not to be found elsewhere. The careful reader cannot but see that there is at least a great weight of evidence in favour of the Israelitish origin of the Anglo-Saxon race, of which this island may be regarded as the cradle and home, and from whence have gone forth the progenitors of those vast populations, which are now taking a leading part in the civilisation and evangelisation of the rest of the world.

The late John Wilson, in his “Lectures on Ancient Israel,” puts the following queries on the Israelitish origin of the British Nation:—

1. Is not the house of Israel, and especially the tribe of Ephraim, clearly distinguished from that of Judah, in the historical and prophetic parts of Scripture, and were not of Ephraim to come the many heirs of the promises made to the fathers, just as of Judah, was to come the One Heir, from whom the blessing was immediately to descend?

2. Were not the lost tribes of Israel to be found in these, the latter days, as a seed whom the Lord hath blessed?

3. Have not all previous attempts to find the lost tribes of Israel proved abortive; especially as regards Ephraim, of whom was to come the fullness of the Gentiles or multitudes of nations; and does not the Scripture declare that the previous non-discovery of Israel has been occasioned by their blindness, and not from God having failed to fulfil His word? Moreover, do not the Scriptures expressly recognise our present condition, as being that in which Israel would be found; and do not they predict matters which can only be fulfilled in these nations?

4. Does history (which traces back our Saxon ancestry to the very countries into which Israel was carried captive by the Assyrians) present anything opposed to this view, and is it likely that God would utterly cast away the people to whom the promises were made, and out of the same place bring forth another people, and fulfil in them the promises solemnly made to Israel?

5. Are not the intellectual, moral, and physical characteristics of the Anglo-Saxons exactly those which were to be expected of the nations that were to come from Ephraim? Can our ancient religious rights, political institutions, acquirements, and manners, be better accounted for than as having been derived from ancient Israel; and do not the favours bestowed on these nations, and the whole course of God’s dealing with the English people clearly indicate that they are under the kindness and care of the good Shepherd of Israel?

To these questions, propounded by Mr. Wilson, Bro. Carpenter adds another. Do we not seem to recognise our Israelitish origin in our Masonic constitution and ritual? One brother has endeavoured to show that we (Masons) take our rise in Ancient Roman times; Numa Pompilius being our founder. That would probably be thirty or forty years after Israel was carried away captive into Assyria. Another brother carries the birth of Masonry back to a period long antecedent to that time. Guilds and architecture may have flourished in those remote times, but the Jewish tradition and ceremonial rites found in Masonry show at least that if we do not derive our origin from such early times, there is something striking which links us with that extraordinary race, which has been destined to be the salvation of the world and the glory of its Creator and Governor.

If the reasons assigned show that the Saxons are identical with the people who have been divinely selected as the instruments to bring about this blessed state of things, it should surely stimulate us to further investigation, and the study of a truth which is of no slight importance. If the unity of Israel and Judah, and preparing the way for the return of the chosen people to their own land, be our mission, then we cannot trifle with it and be guiltless. This work will be accomplished, though we may be indifferent to it, or even turn our backs upon it, for it is God’s purpose, and His purpose shall stand.

There will be a remnant (as there always has been), and through them God will do his own work.

I have now completed the task which I undertook some months ago, and which has extended to a greater length than I originally expected would be the case.

In thus writing an epitome of our excellent and talented Bro. Wm. Carpenter’s interesting articles relating to the Israelitish origin of the Anglo-Saxon race, I have adhered as much as possible to the language of the author, never materially altering it, except with a view to conciseness, even at the expense of elegance of diction.

In preparing this epitome I have had two objects mainly in view, namely. 1st. To condense and bring into a compendious form the author’s statement of facts, so that readers interested in the subject might see at a glance (so to speak) the main facts that are brought forward in the several articles in their numerical order, and date of publication; and might thus be enabled, to refer to any particular article (as published in the Freemason) for the arguments based upon such statements, and the texts quoted in support of the arguments. 2nd. I felt that the subject was one which might perhaps be new to many readers of the Freemason, or that at any rate the attention of others might not have been arrested, until several of Bro. Carpenter’s articles had appeared, and that it would be a convenience to them to have a concise view of the subject for perusal, before taking up Bro. Carpenter’s more elaborate and argumentative articles. I felt it, moreover, important to keep up the public interest in this most interesting subject, by bringing it under the notice of the new subscribers and readers, which are weekly added to the circulation of the Freemason. If I have in any measure succeeded in these objects I shall be satisfied, and Bro. Wm. Carpenter and I will not have laboured in vain.

I take this opportunity of mentioning that Bro. Carpenter has complied with the strongly expressed wishes of many persons interested in the subject, and has published his articles in the form of a volume, which can be obtained at the office of the Freemason.

RANDOM NOTES ON FREEMASONRY.

A Lecture delivered before the Members of the Royal Sussex Chapter of Perfect Friendship, at Ipswich, on Wednesday, the 5th June, 1872.

By BRO. EMMA HOLMES, 31st, P.M. St. Helen’s Lodge, No. 531, Hartlepool; P.G.A.D.C., Suffolk; W.M. Albert Victor Lodge of Mark Masters, Ipswich; E.C. Prudence Encampment of Masonic Knights Templar; P. Prov. G. Almoner, Northumberland; P. 2nd Grand Captain, Suffolk and Cambridge; Grand Provost of England, (Order of the Temple and Hospital); Member of the Royal Order of Scotland; &c.

Most Excellent Z. and Companions.—

The substance of the following lecture was given to the members of the Phoenix Lodge, Stowmarket, some time since, and delivered at the St. Luke’s Royal Arch Chapter during the winter. Excerpts from it have already appeared in the Freemasons’ Magazine, now defunct, and in the Freemason—an admirable Masonic weekly paper, which should be read by all Masons. I ventured to think, however, that this Chapter might like to hear it, and have accordingly re-written, and added much that may interest. It would be difficult, nay almost impossible, to say all that I could say on our beloved Masonry in the brief hour to which I must limit myself on this occasion, but I trust I may suggest, for I can do no more than suggest, sufficient to enable some brother better qualified than myself, to treat at greater length on the subject of my lecture, "Random Notes on Freemasonry." I must ask your indulgence too, for the somewhat discursive character of my address, and beg you to remember that it scarcely aspires to the dignity of a lecture, but merely to what I have called it—random notes—sketches by the way. I do not pretend to preach any new doctrine, to have discovered any fresh secret, but I only aim at leading my younger brethren into the same road I have travelled, to follow the same channels of information to which I have obtained access, and to come back with greater love and reverence for the great Fraternity of which we are members, a greater regard for and sympathy with the brethren of the mystic tie, wheresoever dispersed over land or water. I do not profess to be a teacher, I am only a student, and there may be many before me better qualified than myself to speak to you on this subject, but I am sure you will listen with a kindly indulgence to what I advance, and forgive my zeal if you should have cause to doubt my discretion. In the first place then as to the antiquity of Masonry, I am quite aware that there are those, even among the initiated, who think it is a creature of to-day, and that 1717 is the year from which we must date our venerable Institution. I am quite willing to admit, that almost all our information is based upon tradition; that absolute historical evidence as to its remote origin is not to be found; that being a Secret Society, with but few written documents as evidences of its antiquity in the possession of the Fraternity, there is a greater difficulty in proving its immemorial constitution, and that much must be taken on faith as to its objects and origin. But on the other hand I would ask, are not the Church of England and the Churches of Greece and Rome, founded on tradition, and are we to set aside, as fables, all that has been brought forward to illustrate the early history of the Church in the dark ages, simply because it cannot all be proven? As a Secret Society its aims and history must, from all time, have been locked up in tradition. I am of opinion that there were points of similarity between the ancient mysteries of Egypt and Greece, to warrant us in the belief that they were in fact, a kind of spurious Freemasonry, as Dr. Oliver teaches. I will even go further, and say, that there is a strong resemblance to a true Freemasonry in some of them, though veiled and obscured with much that was false and impure. The Kassiadeans, and the Essenes, were also thought to be Masonic bodies. I will call your attention to the Lexicon of Masonry on this subject. The author, Dr. Mackey, 33°, says, that the Essenes were a sect amongst the Jews, supposed by Masonic writers to have been the descendents of the Freemasons of the Temple, and through whom the Order was propagated to modern times. They were divided into two classes, Speculative and Operative, the former devoting themselves to a life of contemplation, and the latter daily engaging in the practice of some handicraft. They abolished all distinctions of rank, "meeting on the level," and as a means of recognition, they adopted signs and other modes similar to those of the Freemasons.

When a candidate applied for admission his character was scrutinised with the greatest severity. He was then presented with a girdle, a hatchet, and a white garment. The Order was divided into three degrees which could be taken only after the interval of one year, between the first and second, and two years between the second and third. Philo of Alexandria, who, in two books written expressly on the subject of the Essenes, has given a copious account of their doctrines and manners, says that when they were listening to the secret instructions of their chiefs they stood with "the right hand on the breast a little below the chin, and the left hand placed along the side." A similar position is attributed by Macrobius to Venus when deploring the death of Adonis in those Rites which were celebrated at Tyre, the birth place of Hiram the Builder. In the Popular Cyclopædia there is a long article on Freemasonry—in which the writer denies that it has, or ever had, anything to do with the Eleusinian or Egyptian mysteries—but traces it to the Roman Collegium Artificum founded by Numa Pompilius in 714, B.C. I would, with your permission, did time permit read you some portion of this article, since it contains much that is interesting and valuable and since it accepts for truth much that has been condemned as false by certain would-be wise brethren of a sceptical turn of mind. There is no doubt however that we are descended from the Operative Masons of the middle ages—and it is to my mind a matter of great regret that operative Masonry should have ceased to have any connection with us in England. Of course you are all well aware that it still exists in Scotland, where operative lodges are found side by side with speculative. Masonry abroad has changed its character very considerably—and there is now, I suspect but little trace of its descent from the Architects of the Middle Ages. Gilbert Scott, I believe talks of the fables of the Freemasons, but other worthy successors of the Gothic Architects admit the pretensions of the Freemasons to be the originators of Gothic Architecture. The following extract from Poole's "History of Ecclesiastical Architecture" will prove of interest, as coming from a man who is not prejudiced too much in favour of Freemasonry. Even in England, he says, "as late as the reign of Henry VI., in an indenture of covenants made between the churchwardens of a parish in Suffolk and a company of Freemasons, the latter stipulate that every man should be provided with a pair of white leather gloves, a white apron, and that a lodge properly tiled should be erected at the expense of the parish in which to hold their meetings." Freemasonry to-day is in fact little more than a skeleton, a relic of a bygone age—with secrets valuable to the brethren only—but with something about it which must recommend itself to the searcher after truth and the lover of his kind. Probably many of you, who are accustomed to look upon the Grand Lodge of England as at once the supreme head and pattern of Masonry, will be surprised to find that it stands per se in the recognition of what is and what is not pure and ancient Masonry—for it recognises the Royal Arch as part of its system and the completion of the third degree, and refuses to acknowledge the Mark degree, whilst the Grand Lodge of Scotland accepts the Mark and rejects the Arch, and the Grand Lodge of Ireland acknowledges both. Then again the Grand Lodge of England, in its corporate capacity, does not recognise the higher degrees, though many of its most distinguished members belong to them, notably the Prince of Wales, Knight of the Masonic Order of Charles the XIII. of Sweden; and Lord Carnarvon, 33° Deputy Grand Master, whilst almost every other Grand body in the world admits them. The most widely spread and generally adopted system is the Antient and Accepted Rite of 33 degrees, some of which are of undoubted antiquity, and which has a Supreme Council in almost every country in the world. Time will not admit of my enlarging on this Rite, suffice it to say that in a Christian country it seems to me difficult to eliminate the Christian character from Masonry, and the object of the higher degrees, as I daresay you know, is to maintain the Christian characteristics and to admit Masons of high social character and standing to the privileges of these necessarily more exclusive degrees. For my own part I have always felt that there was not enough in the Craft to interest the Masonic student, and there is no doubt that many estimable Masons after passing the chair have lapsed as it were or lost their interest in the Royal Art, because they thought there was nothing more to learn. To such I would say, "go on, you have only ascended three steps of the Masonic ladder, there are thirty three to climb."

You are doubtless well aware that in the Articles of Union between the two Grand Lodges in 1813, it was expressly added to the declaration that pure Antient Masonry consisted of three degrees and no more.

"But this article is not intended to prevent any lodge or chapter from holding a meeting in any of the degrees of the Order of Chivalry, according to the constitutions of the said orders," which was nothing more nor less than a recognition of the higher degrees, and no doubt was admitted because the Duke of Sussex, and the Duke of Kent were both Grand Masters of the Templars as well as of the Craft. No doubt you are aware that the A. & A. Rite is governed by a Supreme Grand Council of nine members who are elected for life. It was established, says Mackey, in 1786, by Frederick the Great of Prussia, for the purpose of exercising after his death the Masonic prerogatives which he personally possessed as the acknowledged head of the rite. In 1761 the lodges and councils of the Superior degrees being extended throughout the continent of Europe, Frederick II., King of Prussia as Grand Commander of the Order of Princes of the Royal Secret, was acknowledged as head of the Scotch Rite. The Duke of Sudermania was his deputy in Sweden, and Louis of Bourbon in France. On the 25th October 1762, the Grand Masonic Constitutions were finally ratified in Berlin, and proclaimed for the government of all Masonic Orders working in the Scotch Rite over the two hemispheres. In the same year they were transmitted to Stephen Morin, who had been appointed in 1761, Inspector General for the new world by the consistory of Princes of the Royal Secret, convened at Paris, under the presidency of Chaillon de Joinville, Substitute General of the order. On the 1st May, 1786, the Grand Constitutions of the Supreme Council of the 33° were ratified by the King of Prussia, by which the Masonic prerogatives of Inspectors were deposited in a council consisting of nine brethren in each nation. On the 31st May 1801, the Supreme Council of the 33° was opened in Charleston with the grand honours of Masonry by John Mitchell, and Frederick Dalcho, S.G.I.G. On the 5th August, 1813, a Supreme Council for the Northern Jurisdiction of the United States was opened at New York, but has since been removed to Boston. In 1845, the Supreme Council of the 33° was opened in London for England and the Dependencies of the British Crown under warrant from the S.C. 33° Southern Jurisdiction U.S., and similar Supreme Councils have since been founded in almost every country in the world. Findel, in his history of Freemasonry, disbelieves the connection of Frederick the Great with the A. & A. Rite, and quotes the declaration of the Grand Lodges of the Three Globes at Berlin on the subject. The Grand National Mother Lodge of the Three Globes was founded on the 13th September, 1740, under authority of Frederick the Great, who was its first Grand Master, it asserts, "he never had anything to do with the organisation and legislation of the Grand Lodge. All that has been related of his having in 1716 originated a high Masonic Senate, &c., has no historical basis." It goes on to say, that Frederick the Great was ill at the time he is stated to have signed the Constitutions, that he never came to Berlin after September, 1785, and moved on the 17th April, 1786, to his Castle of Sans Souci, where he died some four months afterwards. The declaration further states that "the documents kept from time to time in the Archives of the Grand National Mother Lodge do not show the slightest trace of the above mentioned documents, or of the existence of a Grand Council in Berlin." This argument does not go for much however—remembering that there were at the time, several opposing Masonic Bodies in Germany—that Count Zimmendorf had introduced the higher degree into the system, and that the Three Globes Lodge at that time would be as fair an authority to go to, respecting the Secret Constitutions of the A. and A. Rite as the Grand Lodge of England at this moment. Another of the arguments used against the Constitutions of Frederick the Great, is that the names of but two of the signatories are known, yet those two, Dr. Stark, Professor of Oriental Languages, at Königsberg, and Woellner, elected National Grand Master in 1791, were both well-known Masons. It is admitted that a letter is kept in the Archives of the National Mother Grand Lodge, signed by Bro. Lavalette des Langes, and touching upon the meeting of a convention in Paris, on the 15th June, 1786, but the declaration alluded to, adds "Nowhere in the Archives can be found evidence, that he took an interest in the higher degrees. "Supposing 100 years hence, a masonic student groping amongst the papers belonging to the Grand Lodge of England came upon the names of H.R.H. the Prince of Wales and the Earl of Carnarvon—he might just as well conclude, that as no mention of the higher degrees is made in connection with their names, that therefore they had nothing to do with them, and like Bro. Findel and the German opposers of the higher degrees, (is it on account of their being Christian I wonder?) he might deny that the former was a Knight Templar, Knight of the East and West, (17° A. and A. Rite,) and Knight of the Masonic Order of Charles XIII. of Sweden, or that the latter was, besides being Deputy Grand Master, S.G.I.G. 33°, and Past Grand Master of the Mark.

A learned and very distinguished brother of my acquaintance is now translating the third volume of "Mirabeau's Secret History of the Court of Berlin," and he tells me he discovers in it evidence sufficient to establish the truth of the Secret Constitutions of Frederick the Great. It does not seem to me at all improbable that an ambitious man like Frederick, should aim at the universal empire of Masonry, and the idea of a Sovereign Grand Commander of the whole world was worthy of the ambition of even Frederick the Great, if Masonry were only what it professes, and what it ought to be. At any rate the truth or falsehood of the constitutions, so far as Frederick is concerned, is a matter of no great importance to this, the most powerful and widely spread rite in the world, and of no more value than the truth or falsehood of some other of the traditions of Masonry which can never be verified.

The fact remains that, whoever first remodelled the Ancient and Accepted Scottish Rite, it is at this moment the most perfect embodiment of Masonic learning that exists: and remembering the condition of Masonry in Germany and its three Grand Lodges, one must look with an eye of suspicion upon this declaration of the Grand Lodge of the Three Globes.

Freemasonry is, as it is received, to some a religion, to others, a system of morality only. I have known Jews who thought they did their duty by their God and Creed, if they attended their Lodge, no Synagogue being near. Masonry, as Geometry, is an exact science. As a Religion, it bears the impress of a higher wisdom than is contained in the study of Mathematics and Astronomy. In fact, Masonry stands next to revealed religion in the opinion of many people, unfortunately, however, like religion, it has been made the instrument, in the hands of evil designing men, for much wrong doing. Instance, the Carbonari, Illuminati, Cagliostro, the Communists. The Chevalier Ramsay is said to have invented certain of the degrees in the A. and A. Rite—as secret associations the real object of whose members was the restoration of the Stuarts. The Royal Order of Scotland, from which some think the Rose Croix, 18th degree, is derived, was presided over by Charles Stuart, the Young Pretender, who granted a charter to a chapter at Arras, (which charter is still in existence), as Hereditary Grand Master of the Order. Cagliostro was made a Freemason in London, and it is said that he and the Illuminati were instrumental in bringing about the great revolution of France. Alexandre Dumas has written a very powerful romance, founded upon this, called "The Memoirs of a Physician." The reign of the Communists, and the part many misguided Masons took in the late unhappy struggle in France, is too recent to need more than a passing allusion here. I cannot help repeating what I said at a recent meeting of the St. Luke's Royal Arch Chapter, at Ipswich that Masonry without Christianity, in a Christian country, cannot be said to be complete. This was recognised in the fact, that before the Union of the two Grand Lodges in 1813, the Knights Templar degree was especially recognised by the Grand Lodge of all England, at York, previous to 1770, at which time the Rose Croix 18°, and Kadosh 30° were also worked; and I fearlessly assert, that the perfection of Masonry and its Christian character can only be obtained, in the Antient and Accepted Rite, and the Order of Knights Templar. Much difficulty exists in tracing the origin of the Royal Arch Degree. Dr. Oliver thinks it did not exist before the middle of the last century, whilst Mackay is of opinion, that before the year 1740, the essential element of the Royal Arch constituted a part of the third degree. In America, as formerly in England, it is necessary to be a P.M. before the candidate is eligible for the R.A. In Ireland it is the same, and there the degree differs essentially from our own. In Scotland you must be a Mark, as well as a P.M., to be eligible, and chapters in Scotland also confer the degree of Royal Ark Mariner, which is now, I believe, given in England, under the Grand Lodge of Mark Masters. The Scotch Masons contend that the Royal Arch, with its subsidiary degrees, constitute a part of Templar Masonry, and in this country, as you are doubtless aware, it is necessary to be a R.A.M. before you are eligible for the rank of K.T. My own opinion is that the degree, like that of the Rose Croix is very ancient, but I am quite willing to admit that it took its present form as Dr. Oliver asserts, about 1740 or 1750. Nothing is more surprising than the ignorance of Masons about Masonry, and one is quite surprised to find excellent Masons, who have never yet joined in the sublime mysteries of the Royal Arch degree, which is as necessary to the completion of the Third as the Mark is to the second degree.

Findel says, "The Royal Arch degree, now the fourth degree in England, is in its essential elements decidedly French in its origin, but received a somewhat different form in England, with additions from the higher degrees, then flourishing on the Continent, (Knights of the Burning Bush, Red Cross, &c.) and adopted by the Schismatic Ancient Masons, adherents of Dermott, who himself testifies that this degree was first introduced into England by the Grand Lodge of the Ancient Masons. Ramsey calls the Royal Arch the Non Plus Ultra (sic) of Masonry, and these Ancient Masons boasted of their bungling composition as the "summit and perfection of Ancient Masonry." But they are quite in the wrong, for in truth, this degree of the Royal Arch, having but little genius in it, and still less good taste, was fabricated from a confused medley of passages from the Bible, drawn from the Old Testament, from history, and fable, from religious dogmas, and Masonic tradition. The unprejudiced observer cannot here discover the true principles of Freemasonry, either in their primitive purity, or comprehensive fulness, nor is there any improvement in the outward form or ceremonial, but only a falling off from the substantial groundwork of Masonry as it once stood." So much for Bro. Findel's opinion; many of us who believe in the dignity, beauty, and antiquity of the Royal Arch will not attach much importance to his opinions,—and will think, that an author, who in attacking the Masonic Knights Templar, brings up again those base calumnies against the old order, which have long ago been answered by writers outside Masonry, is not altogether a trustworthy authority, or one whose ipse dixit is to be taken on all occasions. Nevertheless, it must be admitted, his book is a valuable addition to the History of Freemasonry. Kloss says, the Royal Arch was introduced into England in 1744, and is of opinion that we first became acquainted with it during the Austrian War of Succession.

Bro. Hughan mentions 1728 as the year when it first appeared. It was known in Ireland. D'Assigny says, before 1744, and yet curiously enough, in 1766 the Grand Secretary of the Grand Lodge of England, in a letter addressed to the Grand Lodge of Frankfurt, calls the Royal Arch, "A Society which we do not acknowledge, and which we regard as an invention designed for the purpose of introducing innovations amongst the Brotherhood, and diverting them from the fundamental rules which our ancestors laid down for us." However, Findel says, it appears to have made its way into the Grand Lodge of England between 1772 and 1774, partly in consequence of the election of a Grand Master, the Duke of Athol, from the nobility, by the so styled Ancient Masons in 1772, this Royal Arch being regarded as a counterbalance against their power, a means of retaining their own brethren, and of attracting others to join; and partly in consequence of the influence exercised by the members who had left the Grand Lodge of Ancient Masons. When the union of the two Grand Lodges took place in 1813 the Original Grand Lodge made the concession to the other, recognising the Royal Arch degree. Since then it has belonged to the system of the United Grand Lodge, yet in such a way that all Royal Arch Chapters work under a Grand Chapter separate from the Grand Lodge. It is said the degree was known in Scotland before it was practised in England, that it was worked in Ireland in 1751, and first in America in 1758, and in Germany for a short time only in 1780. In a pamphlet, entitled "Abstract of the Laws of the Society of Royal Arch Freemasonry," published about 1787, it was decreed that a full chapter must consist of three Principals, who in assembled chapter are to be all three regarded as its head, two Secretaries, two Sojourners, and seventy-two members of the Council. The Order of Asiatic brethren is likewise regulated by a Sanhedrim of seventy-two initiated. Both Orders are said to be very similar in their tendency. It was also stated, that none shall be admitted into this degree but men of superior minds and highly cultivated, sincere, generous, noble minded, and true friends of mankind, and who have passed through the three probationary degrees of Masonry, having presided at some lodge. The Royal Arch Masons claim to have been in existence in the reign of King Athelstane, and are believers in the Charter of Prince Edwin. In this Chapter I know, Companions, you have borne this in mind—the admission of none but good men and true—but unhappily for Masonry, this excellent rule has not always been observed. As you know, the ceremony of passing the V. has now been discontinued, and it is no longer necessary that the candidate shall be a Past Master to be qualified for the Royal Arch, any Master Mason of over twelve (calendar) months standing being eligible for this beautiful degree.

In 1782 the Supreme Royal Chapter of Jerusalem announced itself in London by an address, wherein, as Tessler remarks, "there are everywhere indications of the Cabbalistic, theosophical wisdom of the brethren and Knights initiated from Asia, together with the scientific leanings displayed by the Philaethes." Whilst on the subject of the Royal Arch I cannot do better than draw your attention to an article on the sacred name, from Mackay, which I am sure will interest you. As to the Royal Arch ritual, a writer in the Kingston Annual states that Bro. How admits that the one now in use was arranged by the Rev. Bro. Adam Brown, at the instance of H.R.H. the Duke of Sussex. He adds, "it completes, certainly in idea, the degree of Master Mason." Findel says, the Craft ritual was modified in 1813, and the word in the first and second degree transposed.

(To be continued.)

CONSECRATION OF A RED CROSS CON- CLAVE AT LIVERPOOL.

The Skelmersdale Conclave, No. 77, of the Masonic Order of Knights of Rome and of the Red Cross of Constantine is the most recent addition to the already influential roll of the chivalric Order: and the achat which marked its consecration, on Monday, the 3rd inst., clearly proves that the Order is likely to make greater progress in the future even than that which has marked it in the past. This is shown by the fact that this is the second conclave which has been consecrated in Liverpool during the last twelvemonth, and it is not improbable a third may before long be added to the two now in existence.

There was a large and highly imposing array of the representatives of the Order, amongst whom may be named, Ill. Sir Knt. G. Turner, Int. Gen. for West Lancashire; Sir Knts. T. Ashmore; R. Washington, H.P. 55; H. Nelson; E. Hughes; H. M. Molyneux, S.G. 55; J. T. Callow; E. Day; S. Haynes; M. Mawson; J. W. Robertson; J. Banning; J. Wood; J. Skeaf, Org. 55; J. J. Rose; S. Johnson, 55; E. Friend, Kenlis' Conclave No. 20, and others.

The splendid "Red Cross" flag which was exhibited at Kenning's Masonic Depot, Monument-place, during the recent Royal visit, and which was the centre of admiration amongst the profuse display of bunting all over the town, was hung up in the conclave chamber during the evening, and added greatly to the striking effect of the interior.

After the Knights Companions had assembled in the ante-room to the conclave chamber, properly armed and clothed, they marched in procession into and around the chamber, where the Ill. Int. Gen. for West Lancashire, as presiding officer, took his seat on the throne, and opened the conclave in ancient form. After the presiding officer had suitably addressed the Knights on the nature of the meeting, and a blessing invoked by the H.P., the R. read the petition and charter, and the assembled Knights signified their approval of the nominated officers of the new conclave. After an anthem, the Sov. Designate was presented and conducted to his seat on the left of the throne, the Generals took command of their respective divisions, and the ceremony of consecration proceeded, and concluded with all the solemnity and impressiveness which rightly belong to the knightly order. The ceremony was admirably conducted by Ill. Sir Knt. Turner, who received valuable assistance from Sir Knts. Molyneux, R. Washington, and J. Skeaf, (members of the Liverpool Conclave No. 35;) E. Friend, and J. W. Robertson. After the highly imposing ceremonial had been concluded, the presiding officers enthroned Em. Sir Knt. T. Ashmore as M.P.S.; Sir Knt. H. Nelson was duly installed in the chair of E.E. as Viceroy, and the following knights were properly invested:—Sir Knights E. Hughes, S.G.; James T. Callow, J.G.; J. Banning, H.P.; W. Cottrell, Rec.; J. J. Rose, Prefect; M. Mawson, S.B.; H. Jackson, Orator; E. Day, Herald; J. Skeaf, Almoner; and P. Ball, Sentinel; Bros. Jackson, W. Bradshaw, J. Atkinson, S. R. Wilde, and W. H. Geliott, were subsequently duly installed Knights of the Chivalric Order by Ill. Sir Knt. T. Ashmore, M.P.S.

After the transaction of some formal business, the conclave was closed in peace and harmony.

An excellent repast was subsequently provided for the knights in the refectory, the M.P.S. presiding.

The usual loyal and chivalric toasts were proposed in happy terms and responded to with much eloquence. Harmony was contributed by several knights, and after a highly pleasant evening the first meeting of the highly promising Skelmersdale Conclave was brought to a termination.

Original Correspondence.

CANVASSING IN GRAND LODGE.

(To the Editor of the Freemason.)

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—

"BOARD OF GENERAL PURPOSES,

GRAND LODGE,

5th June, 1872.

You are requested to vote for the following List:—

Such was the heading of a list of names placed in my hands on entering Freemasons' Hall, on Wednesday, the 5th inst., and copies of which were laid about on tables and seats. The list comprised the names of good men and true, many very well-known, and some tolerably well-known Masons, and for the most part members of Grand Lodge, whom I should have thought above the petty device of bidding for support after that fashion. "Is this the correct thing?" said I to a brother standing beside me, and in reply, he expressed his surprise that it should be permitted. We entered Grand Lodge, where, presently, another brother handed me another list, with similar heading, but different names. "What's this," said I. More canvassing? Surely, this is not usual! "It was done last year," said the distributor, "and the plan succeeded, now its red again—blue." "What," I replied, "Antagonism in Grand Lodge, parties, sections, cliques, divisions?"

It so happened that at my request, some week or two before, Bro. Brett had nominated me as a candidate for the Board, and had told me he had done so. I thought canvassing for votes not only infra dig., but positively forbidden, and many brethren in Grand Lodge were actually in possession of their voting papers before I was assured that my name was among the candidates. To no one of my many friends in Masonry had I said more than that I thought my name was put forward. Now, thanking my friends who did vote for me unmasked, and otherwise uninfluenced by me, I propound the question, which I should have asked as I do now, even had I not been concerned in the election. "Is canvassing for Masonic position to be countenanced?" I think it certainly should not be, and for many reasons. What freedom of opinion or power in debate is to be expected from any man who has to rely upon a continued connection with any party to ensure his appointment to or continuance in office? What an amount of evil is likely to creep into any council where a certain subserviency to the views of others is almost expected under pain of omission from the next "ticket?" I think the matter ought to be taken up seriously, as one of very considerable importance.

Of course I am quite prepared to have this letter attributed to personal chagrin at my non-election, but, as I would rather have my thirty-four unasked supporters than all the canvassed votes of Grand Lodge for any purpose, I am far better satisfied to defer my entrance amongst the Board of General Purposes until next election.

I am, dear sir and brother,
Yours fraternally,
JAMES STEVENS.
P.M. No., 25, 720, 771, 1216.

UNITED GRAND LODGE.

QUARTERLY COMMUNICATION, JUNE 5TH.

The following speeches of Bros. J. R. Stebbing, and F. A. Philbrick, delivered in Grand Lodge, the former opposing the report of the Board of General Purposes, and the latter defending it from the attacks made on it by the movers and supporters of the amendments, were omitted from our account of the proceeding in last week's issue, and we now give them in extenso.

Bro. J. R. Stebbing, who had risen some time before, came forward from his place on the dais to the front, and was received with great cheering. He said—my lord, I wish to make two or three remarks to Grand Lodge, although I would wish to consult their natural desire to divide. I have no doubt they will reject this ill-considered report and its conclusion, and I beg to call your attention particularly to an observation of Bro. Havers, and to point out the difficulties that would arise from officers in Grand Lodge holding prominent positions in other degrees signing such a document. It would be a great mistake for such a document to be signed in the name of the Grand Lodge of England, when this very report leaves out the only salaried brother who signs documents in the name of the Grand Lodge of England, a most inconclusive and weak report, ill-digested and unworthy of this Grand Lodge. The best thing is to dispose of it so that we may never hear of it again. I say do not receive the report after the condemnation it has received from Bro. Havers, and my lord, and from many of the brethren who have spoken showing the little inclination they have towards it, a report which all condemn as a weak, inconclusive and imperfect report. I say get rid of it and do not let us ever hear of it again. I do not go into the question of these high degrees, I will not debate on anything so unsound, but on the constitutional position of Masonry and the folly of opening questions that were settled at the union, and raising questions calculated to disturb the peace and the unanimity of Grand Lodge, questions which will sever one-half of the brethren in England from the other half, and raise a question, one which I know exists in your minds to a great extent, and affecting many of the brethren on the dais. If the subordinates are to be struck at, why not the Grand Secretary? If it is wrong that they should participate in what are called the high degrees, it is equally wrong for any of us to do so. They have our money: we have that which we generally value more, we have the honours; and if it is wrong of them to participate in the high degrees, it is equally wrong for us. It is time to speak out, because you are starting at the very lowest part of the fabric in order the better to let it go down rather than dare to look in the face of those above. What has made many of us go into the other degrees but to enlighten our minds on the subject of Masonry? I have gone into other degrees and have given most of them up, some of them I have stuck to, and I say, do not deprive these paid officers of the opportunity of doing that which you have done, do not fix a ban upon them because they do it. In these days of freedom, do not go and put a padlock on the lips and a chain on the fingers of the paid officers and leave out the Grand Secretary, whether it be the Grand Secretary, or his successor, because you are not always to be served by the same man. The injudicious proposition made to you is one that strikes at freedom, and opens a question among the brethren that ought never to have been raised, and cannot be raised without doing mischief to the Craft. As far as loyalty is concerned, there are none more loyal than those who practise the high grades. There are many of the very best men in the Craft who have taken many other degrees, and the highest honours in those degrees. There is no man in the Craft, and no man in the higher degrees, who is more venerated than the Grand Master of England. You recollect the manner in which he was received on a recent occasion by the brethren, the majority of whom belong to these higher degrees. How did they receive him? They received him as a god, he marched through the ranks like a god. He was venerated because he was at the head of the old Institution of Masonry, that is dear to every Mason. I say, do not think of adopting a report which cripples the freedom of Masons, for you will be dealing a death blow to that freedom if you do not shatter this proposition by your vote.

Bro. Stebbing, who spoke with much vehemence, accompanied with great dramatic action, was vociferously cheered during the above speech.

Bro. F. A. Philbrick:—Most Worshipful Grand Master, as a member of the Board of General Purposes, who took part in the report that was brought up at the last Quarterly Communication, and took part in the reconsideration of the matter, and who was a party to the unanimous vote of the Board, at which Bro. Horace Lloyd was not present, I venture to say to Grand Lodge, that you would be committing the most unheard of injustice to the members of the Board of General Purposes if you were to receive their opinion as being the opinion not to bind, for it was not the intention of the Board of General Purposes nor their desire to bind Grand Lodge to do more than this, to receive it as the opinion of the Board, and to act upon it just in the way that this Grand Lodge in its wisdom might feel disposed to act. I will not read the resolution again that has been referred to, but one thing I do say, and I think I may say it, although I am not permitted to speak as the representative of the Board, but for myself I say, that to me and to every other member of the Board, I believe this resolution, which was referred to them by Grand Lodge was a source of the greatest anxiety. It was referred simply, so we were told once here, because we were your servants, and not your masters. We accepted the position. We entered on the discussion. You asked for our opinion, and such as it is, good or bad, the opinion is our honest opinion, carefully considered at your request, and deliberately adhered to on the fullest reflection. Whether that opinion be wise or not, is for you to discuss; but that you will reject it as being our opinion, not that you will adopt it as your own, or reject it as your own, because that you will discuss is a course that I scarcely can believe this Grand Lodge will adopt. I trust I may be pardoned for referring to one thing more. One brother on the dais, who addressed Grand Lodge, spoke about different jurisdictions, and another brother spoke about divided allegiance. I trust I may be permitted to say, there is not a word in the report, nor was there an idea on the part of the Board of General Purposes, about limiting the freedom of every brother, to belong to any Masonic organisation that he pleased, which was not inconsistent with the obligation he had taken, and to which, in his conscience, he thought he might fairly and honestly belong, consistent with his allegiance to the Craft. There has not been the least attack on the part of the Board of General Purposes, to limit the absolute freedom of every member of the Craft; and I cannot help thinking that when these unhappy discussions—that is the proper term they merit—are raised, it is time they should be put an end to, and that this Grand Lodge, or the Board of General Purposes itself, should no longer be troubled with what must be considered by every one a source of embarrassment and difficulty. Allow me to say one other word, and I will trespass on the time of Grand Lodge no longer. The other paragraph at the end of the report was considered a mere matter of office regulation. It was adopted by the Board, not in the capacity of revising the acts, or having the care, or superintending the conduct of Masons, but rather in the view that there were those in the employment of Grand Lodge, which employment was inconsistent with the employment of other functions, and that it was right to see that those who were in that position, with regard to the employer, were in no other position which might render the employer either subject to remarks, or his acts be liable to misconception. That may or may not be a wise opinion. I have heard criticisms made to-night with a skill that a veteran diplomatist might envy. That was not the view of the Board of General purposes. They expressed their opinion according to the desire of Grand Lodge, and it was inexpedient to do more. What Grand Lodge may do upon that is a matter for Grand Lodge itself to decide upon; but I do confidently appeal to that sense of justice, which every assembly of Englishmen is open, to accept our opinion, which is at least an honest one. Do not reject it, but take it as being the opinion of those who are bound to express it when they are asked for it. (Great cheering.)

VISIT OF THE CHANNEL FLEET TO LIVERPOOL.

In the course of their summer cruise, the Channel Fleet, under the command of Rear Admirals Hornby and Campbell, will visit the Mersey towards the end of this month. Amongst the vessels will be the Minotaur, Northumberland, Hercules, and Sultan, and the visit is anticipated with much interest by all classes of the community. It is just ten years since the Channel Fleet, under Rear-Admiral Dacres, arrived in the Mersey, during the Mayoralty of Mr. R. C. Gardner. The chief magistrate then entertained the officers and men in the most hospitable manner. A fancy dress ball was given at the Town Hall to the officers, who were also invited to balls at the Wellington Rooms, Philharmonic Hall, &c. During the stay of the fleet, it was calculated that there were no fewer than 55,000 visitors. During the recent Royal visit, Bro. John Pearson (the Mayor of Liverpool) excited general admiration by his munificent hospitality and unwearied exertions in connection with the interesting event, there is every reason and believe that he will again earn "golden opinions" by his efforts in maintaining the credit for kindness of the "good old town."

THE HENRY BLAGROVE TESTIMONIAL FUND.—This fund has now reached nearly £1500. As it is possible there are friends of Mr. Blagrove who have not yet added their names to the list of subscribers, and who would regret missing the opportunity of so doing, we may mention that subscriptions are still received by the Hon. Treasurer, EDWARD THURNAM, Esq., Norfolk Villa, Reigate. The list will be closed shortly.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS.—The Change of Season.—The best preventive and strengthening measure adopted disease is apt to overtake the sensitive, feeble, and constitutionally delicate at these periods. These pills are particularly recommended for allaying the first symptoms of disordered action, and restoring the first commencement of ill-health. A careful perusal of the "Instructions," folded round every box of Holloway's Pills, will explain what the difficulty is, and how it can best be remedied. The body will be freed not only from disease, but the blood will be purified and enriched through the thorough concoction, and assimilation of the food, ensured by the use of this medicine according to the plain, consistent, and complete directions, intelligible alike by all classes.—ADVERT.

NOTICE.

The Subscription to THE FREEMASON is now 10s. per annum, post-free, payable in advance.

Vol. I., bound in cloth	4s. 6d.
Vol. II., ditto	7s. 6d.
Vol. III., ditto	15s. od.
Vol. IV., ditto	15s. od.
Reading Cases to hold 52 numbers ...	2s. 6d.

United States of America.

THE FREEMASON is delivered free in any part of the United States for 12s. per annum, payable in advance.

NOTICE TO SUBSCRIBERS.

The Office of THE FREEMASON is now transferred to 198, FLEET-STREET, E.C. All communications for the Editor or Publisher should therefore be forwarded to that address.

Births, Marriages and Deaths.

BIRTH.

MACMULDRON.—On 10th inst., at 9, Geneva-road, Elm-park, Fairfield, near Liverpool, of a Daughter, the wife of Bro. Peter Macmuldron, J.W. Pembroke Lodge, 1299, P.S. Temple Chapter, 1094.

MARRIAGE.

SNOW—GREENSLADE.—On the 6th inst., at Romansleigh Church, Bro. Robert Snow, Sec. Lodge 421, to Miss Greenslade of that place.

DEATHS.

RICCARD.—On April 16th, at the Island of the Mauritius, Bro. Dr. E. J. Riccard, late of Lodge 421, aged fifty-four years.

CLAYTON.—On the 2nd inst., at 375, Scotland-road, Liverpool, Bro. Henry Clayton, S.W. 220, and Treas. of Pembroke Lodge, 1299, aged thirty-two years.

NEWLANDS.—On the 8th inst., at St. Lawrence Villa, Treenheys-road, Princes-park, Liverpool, Bro. Captain John Newlands, Lodge 298, New Providence, and Pembroke Lodge, 1299, aged sixty-nine years.

Answers to Correspondents.

All communications for The Freemason should be written legibly on one side of the paper only, and, if intended for insertion in the current number, must be received not later than 10 o'clock a.m. on Thursdays, unless in very special cases. The name and address of every writer must be sent to us in confidence.

The Freemason,

SATURDAY, JUNE 15, 1872.

The Freemason is published on Saturday Mornings in time for the early trains.

The price of the Freemason is Twopence per week; annual subscription, 10s. (payable in advance.)

All communications, letters, &c., to be addressed to the Editor, 198, Fleet-street, E.C.

The Editor will pay careful attention to all MSS. entrusted to him, but cannot undertake to return them unless accompanied by postage stamps.

AIDS TO STUDY.

BY BRO. WM. CARPENTER, P.M. & P.Z. 177.
VI.

Having offered some brief observations, by way of suggestion, on what may be termed the preliminary matters of history, touching the races, and families, and nations of mankind, as topics to which the attention of the student should be given, in order that he may follow intelligently and satisfactorily the fortunes of the various peoples with whom history will bring him into relation, I may now briefly notice history, as a study, and suggest what seems to be the best method of dealing with it, by those who have neither the time nor the means of presenting the study of it, as it is to be derived from its original sources, in the various ancient and modern languages, other than English.

History may be regarded as a recital of facts, supposed to be true. According to the time in which the events occurred, it is ancient or modern, and according to its plan, it is universal, general, or particular; chronologically divided into epochs, periods, and intervals. According to the mode in which the events are represented, it assumes the various titles of History, (properly so called,) Annuals, Chronicles, Journals, Memories or Commentaries, Revelations, Fragments or detached pieces of History, Essays on particular parts of history, Memorials on particular nations, and Miscellaneous or mixed. The species of facts treated of, is either ancient history, fabulous, or true; or modern history, including ecclesiastical, descriptive or topographical, civil or political, military, philosophical or scientific, literary, biographical or personal, critical, natural, numismatic, and heraldic.

In the history of the Middle Ages, we are frequently referred to the Byzantine histories, which, it is necessary the reader should understand, is an historical collection relative to the Eastern Empire, compiled by various Oriental Greek writers.

The eyes of history are said to be chronology and geography; the one describing the time in which an event occurred, the other the place. Chronology has been compared to Ariadne's clue, which conducts our steps through all the windings of the labyrinth. Without a knowledge of Geography the student will be unable to reap any real advantage from the reading of history. It may be entertaining, but that is all. To make it useful, he must be able to identify the regions or localities in which the events described took place. He must be able, for instance, to identify Gaul as France, Iberia as Spain, Apulia as Naples, and so of other parts of the world. It may be mentioned here, though not strictly in its place, that some difficulties will present themselves to the student, arising out of the different computations of time, as well among the same people, as among various nations; the want of fixed eras among some, and the multiplicity of them among others; and the variety of proper names given to the same persons and places. The different names which the Assyrians, Egyptians, Persians, and Greeks have given to the same prince, are among the most formidable embarrassments of modern enquirers into ancient history. Three or four sovereigns of Persia have borne the name of Assuerus, or Ahasuerus, (corrupted from the Persian Ardshir); though they have also other names; and did we not know that Nubuchadnosor, Nebucadaosor, Nabuchadnezzar, and Nebuchassan were divers names of the same individual, or rather varieties of one name, we should scarcely believe it. We may also note that Ozias is Azarias, Edesias Mattanias, Joachas is frequently called Shallum, Asaraddon, Esarhaddon, or Asarhaddon, is called Asenaphar by the Cuthæans, and, by an unaccountable whimsicality, the Chaldaic name of Sardanapalus has been changed by the Greeks, into Tonosconocleros.

In pursuing the study of history, the most regular, as well as the most successful mode, is to begin with an epitome of universal history, and after having thereby obtained a pretty general acquaintance with the state of the world at large, in all its ages, then to apply to the histories of particular nations; for the study of particular histories is nothing more than an extension of a general knowledge of which the reader is presumed to be in the previous possession. When this is done, a third step may be taken, and the genius and disposition of the various nations, with the characters of their princes and governors, may be made the subject of disquisition, in the course of which, the student will frequently be surprised by the discovery of some secret springs of action, which otherwise, he would not have suspected. The latent causes of revolutions, of the rise and fall of thrones and powers will thus be laid open to his view, and in proportion to the diligence with which he pursues his inquiries, he will find his admiration called forth, and his curiosity gratified. The most celebrated epitome of universal history, written in Latin, is Tursaliris, which is read in most of the foreign universities. Bossuet's Epitome is generally and deservedly admired in France, but it brings the history no lower than Charlemagne; the Introduction to History is the Encyclopædia Metropolitana will be found a most useful manual, the new edition being in a portable form. Mr. Philip Smith's Ancient History of Asia, I have more than once mentioned, and it should certainly be used by the student. Taylor's Universal History will also be found a useful book, and for the ancient history of particular countries, several works in Murray's Students' Library cannot fail to command approval.

REPORTS OF MASONIC MEETINGS.

Craft Masonry.

METROPOLITAN.

LODGE OF ASAPH (No. 1319).—This Lodge held its usual monthly meeting at Freemasons' Hall, Great Queen Street, W.C., on Monday June 3rd. Present:—Bros. E. Stanton Jones, I.P.M.; C. Coote, P.M., W.M.; J. M. Chamberlain, P.M., S.W.; J. Weaver, P.M., J.W., P.G.O. Middlesex; Thomas A. Adams, P.G.P.; Thomas Edgar; Henry Baker; Charles S. Jekyll, J.D.; W. H. Stephens, George Horton, William A. Timney, I.G.; Henry Snyders, John Strachan, William Graves, Leopold Silberberg, Joseph Horton, Edmund H. Reynolds, and G. R. Egerton, John Gilbert, Tyler. Visitor: Bro. G. Pritchard, Org. 862. No business was done, as the candidates did not attend. It was proposed by Bro. C. Coote, W.M., seconded by Bro. J. Weaver, J.W., and carried unanimously, that a letter of condolence be sent to Bro. W. T. Wrighton, expressing the sympathy the members feel towards him in his recent illness, and a sincere wish that he may soon be restored to perfect health and strength. The Lodge was then closed and adjourned.

KENT.

DOVER.—Peace and Harmony Lodge (No. 199).—The regular meeting of the members of this lodge was held at the Royal Oak Hotel, on Monday, the 3rd inst., for the raising of Bro. J. H. Lester, installation of W.M., the appointment of officers for the ensuing twelve months, and other business. There was a large attendance of the brethren, among whom were the W. Masters of several lodges in Kent, the Board of Installed Masters being unusually large. After the transaction of the business announced upon the summonses Bro. W. J. Adcock was duly installed in the chair by the outgoing W.M., Bro. Archibald Wilson, who officiated as Installing Master, and invested the following officers:—

Bros. E. W. Fry, S.W.; W. Cessford, J.W.; J. D. Terson, S.D.; T. A. Terson, J.D.; J. Bordeaux, I.G.; J. King, Tyler; J. Coram, P.M., Treas.; and W. Gardner, P.M., Sec. Bro. G. Adamson, P.M., proposed, that a vote of thanks be recorded on the minutes of the lodge to Bro. Archibald Wilson, for the efficient manner in which he had performed the installation ceremony, seconded by Bro. A. J. Vanderlyn, P.M., and carried unanimously. Immediately after the closing of the lodge, the brethren, to the number of fifty, sat down to an excellent banquet, Bro. Adcock, the W.M., presiding, among those who sat down were:—Bros. A. Wilson, I.P.M.; Dr. Marshall, P.M.; J. O. Rees, P.M.; A. W. Ayres, P.M.; H. S. Bayton, P.M.; J. Coram, P.M.; A. J. Vanderlyn, W. Gardner, P.M.; G. Cox, P.M.; G. Adamson, P.M.; C. Andrews, W.M. 299; Melville Matson, P.M. 1052; Magrath, P.M. 926; S. Penfold, W.M. 558; H. P. Popkiss, P.M. 1208; R. J. Emmerson, W.M. 1206; G. W. Osbaldeston, S.W. 1206; T. Moring, P.M. 9; H. C. Fuhr, W.M. 1208; S. G. Fairtlough, the newly appointed officers, and the following brethren, Brown, Court, Adamson, Rose, Chadwick, A. T. Wilson, Whitley, G. R. Igglesden, B. A. Igglesden, Holmes, Lester, Oxenham, Pilcher, Risien, Forster, Carpenter, Pankhurst, Little, Canham, Atherden, Elms, sen., Birch, &c. The usual loyal and Masonic toasts were duly honoured. The W.M. in giving the toast of "The Health of the Installing Master" said it afforded him much pleasure to present Bro. Archibald Wilson with a Past Master's jewel; he was satisfied he well deserved it for the efficient manner in which he had conducted the business of the lodge during the past twelve months, and for the manner in which he had that day officiated as Installing Master, as well as for the time and energy he devoted to the extra duty, as the Provincial Grand Festival was held in Dover during his Mastership. Bro. Wilson in a feeling manner responded, and said he accepted their present, and should ever value it as a memento of their esteem and regard, he thanked them for the honour they had conferred upon him, and should ever remember with pleasure, that he had occupied the distinguished position of Worshipful Master of one of the oldest and most prosperous lodges in the Province of Kent. Some excellent singing by several of the brethren contributed very much to one of the most pleasant evening's ever enjoyed by the Masons of Dover.

LANCASHIRE (WEST.)

LIVERPOOL.—Neptune Lodge (No. 1264).—The annual meeting of this Lodge for installation, and other purposes, was held at the Temple, Hope Street, on Friday evening the 7th inst. Bro. J. Taylor, W.M., opened the Lodge in due form, the minutes were read and confirmed, and the ballot was taken for Mr. T. Farrell, Monte Video. Mr. E. Webber, Mr. J. Hughes, and two brethren, proposed for joining; each of whom were declared duly elected. Bro. Hamer, P. Prov. G.T., then took the chair, and proceeded to invest Bro. P. B. Gee, as W.M., the ceremony being conducted in the most impressive and effective manner. The following officers were then invested by the newly-chaired W.M.:—Bros. A. Davies, S.W.; J. S. Dixon, J.W.; T. Singleton, S.D.; W. Roberts, J.D.; A. Gray, I.G.; J. Healing, P.M. as Treas.; Pemberton, P.M. as Sec.; Leighton, Org.; T. Joseph, D.C.; Cotter, S.S.; Royle, J.S.; and Ball, T. Mr. J. Hughes, and Mr. T. Farrell, were then initiated into the mysteries and privileges of the Craft, by the newly-installed W.M., assisted by his officers, the ceremony being performed in a style which elicited the admiration of the numerous Past Masters present. After a sum had been voted for a case of distress, and a day appointed for the annual pic-nic, the brethren sat down to an excellent repast, after which, the usual loyal and Masonic toasts were given and responded to. Bro. Taylor, I.P.M., in proposing the health of the W.M., referred to his steady progress in Masonry; in each office proving himself an efficient, zealous, and worthy Mason. The toast was honoured with the greatest enthusiasm. The W.M. thanked the brethren in feeling terms for the honour conferred upon him, and assured them that he would endeavour to follow in the footsteps of his predecessors, and maintain that unanimity which had always marked the Lodge. The W.M. then presented, in the name of the brethren, a Past Master's Jewel to Bro. Taylor, I.P.M., as a mark of their esteem, and an evidence of the value they placed upon his past year's work. Bro. Taylor acknowledged the presentation in suitable terms, and referred, with gratitude, to the valuable help he had received from every officer during his year in the chair. The toast of the Past Masters was responded to by Bros. Healing, and Pemberton, and the Visiting Brethren, by Bros. Pearson, W.M. 249; Hill, P.M. 724; Larsen, P.M. 594; Doyle, P.M. 667, &c. After a number of other toasts the brethren separated in peace and harmony.

MIDDLESEX.

POTTER'S BAR.—Acacia Lodge (No. 1309).—The installation meeting of this lodge was held on Wednesday, 12th ult. at the Railway Hotel, Potters Bar. Bro. F. Walters, P.M. opened the lodge. He initiated two gentlemen, and installed Bro. J. H. Batten as W.M., who appointed as his officers:—Bros. E. Richardson, S.W.; G. W. Schollard, J.W.; E. Sillifant, P.M., Treas.; G. Cattel, P.Prov. G.J.D. Northamptonshire, P.M., Sec.; R. Limpus, S.D.; W. Hughes, J.D.; H. J. Waddington, I.G.; C. A. Ferrier, and Rushworth, as Stewards; F. Walters, P.M., D.C., and W.S.; J. Bavin, P.M. Tyler. Bro. Chas. Horsley, P.M. raised one brother, passed three, and initiated a candidate for the mysteries of Freemasonry. He was recommended to the Provincial Grand Master, as the brother whom the lodge would like to see have office in Provincial Grand Lodge. The work was done in an admirable manner. A vote of thanks, and the same to be entered on lodge book, was given to Bro. Frederick Walters, P.M., for doing the ceremony of the installation in such an admirable, painstaking, correct, and efficient manner. Bro. G. J. Loe, the Immediate Past Master, had a Past Master's jewel voted to him from the lodge funds for his efficient services rendered to the lodge. The lodge was then closed, and the brethren adjourned to the banquet. Bro. Limpus provided some excellent music, which was much appreciated. The visitors were Bros. Edmonds, P.G.S., P.M. 8; Still, 1293; Evans, 1293.

Royal Arch.

SUFFOLK.

IPSWICH.—Royal Sussex Chapter of Perfect Friendship (No. 376).—The usual quarterly meeting of this chapter took place at the Masonic Hall, Ipswich, on Wednesday last on which occasion there were present:—Comps. F. B. Marriott, M.E.Z.; S. H. Wright, H.; G. S. Findley, P.Z., act. J.; J. Franks, P.Z., Scribe, E.; N. Tracy, Scribe N.; S.B. King, P.Z.; Dr. Mills, P.Z. Act. Principal Sojourner; Visiting companions Emra Holmes, &c. The chapter having been opened by the three chiefs, and the Companions who had not yet passed the chair been admitted, the minutes were put and confirmed, and the ordinary business of the evening disposed of. Scribe Ethen announced that according to notice Comp. Emra Holmes, was announced to give a lecture that evening, and the M.E.Z. stated that it would give the Companions very great pleasure to hear the address. Comp. Holmes then delivered his lecture "Random Notes on Freemasonry," which though over an hour in length was listened to with great attention and interest by the Companions present, and at its conclusion Comp. Marriott spoke in very high terms of the ability and research displayed in it. Several Companions expressed a wish to read it at leisure, and Comp. Holmes stated that he hoped the brethren might be enabled to do so in the columns of the Freemason. Comp. Marriott, M.E.Z., moved that the thanks of the meeting be given to Comp. Emra Holmes for his able and instructive lecture, and that the same be recorded in the minutes. Comp. King seconded the motion with pleasure. The chapter being afterwards closed, the Companions retired for refreshment, and on the removal of the cloth, the usual loyal and Masonic toasts were given from the chair. In proposing the health of their visitor, Comp. Emra Holmes, the M.E.Z. said he agreed with many of the observations of the lecturer that evening. Many of his suggestions were most valuable—and especially as to the introduction of brethren into the order, and the election of Worshipful Master. He quite thought that some social standing, some position, should be expected of those who were called to fill so high an office. They had all learnt much that evening, and the Masonic traditions spoken of by Comp. Holmes were full of interest. Comp. Holmes in responding, said, speaking of the Masonic traditions, take that usually spoken of as the Prince Edwin Legend, (the Charter which King Athelstane granted to his brother Prince Edwin in 926 as head of the Freemasons.) Many people now a days repudiated this charter, Findel amongst them. Yet the tradition was noted in manuscripts, notably those of the Antiquity Lodge, now being published with facsimiles by Bro. Hughan, and these MSS. were some of them 200 years old. Indeed he believed there was documentary evidence in existence showing the belief in this charter 400 or 500 years ago, and this he considered was as good historical evidence as could be obtained. He had great pleasure in giving his lecture to so appreciative an audience, and he hoped the Companions would put down to zeal for Masonry anything he might have said which they did not entirely approve. A very pleasant evening was brought to a close at a reasonable hour.

Mark Masonry.

METROPOLITAN.

MACDONALD LODGE (No. 104).—The installation meeting of this Lodge was held at the Head Quarters of the First Surrey Rifles, at Camberwell, on Saturday the 8th inst. Amongst others present were the W. Bros. Dr. Eugene Cronin, P.G.D., W.M.; the V.W. Bro. James Stevens, P.G.O., I.P.M.; Thos. Meggy, P.G.O., P.M.; C. Hammerton, G.D.C., and Prov. Grand Sec. Middlesex and Surrey, S.W.; Berridge, J.W.; Worrell, and White, Overseers; Newman, S.D.; and Denne, I.G. The visitors were the V.W. Bros. Fred. Binckes, P.G.J.W., and Grand Secretary; and Fairfax. The lodge having been opened by the W.M., Bro. Stevens advanced to the honourable degree of Mark Masters, Bros. Lieut.-Col. Wigginton, Draper, and Hale; and Bro. Meggy, then installed as W.M. for the year, Bro. Chas. Hammerton. The newly amended ceremony of installation as agreed by the Grand Lodge on the previous Tuesday, was for the first time used and found to work perfectly, and to the entire satisfaction of those members of the General Board, who were present and had assisted in revising the same. The W.M. then proceeded to appoint and invest his officers. Bro. Alfred Williams, Grand Steward having volunteered to represent the lodge as Steward at the ensuing Festival of the Mark Benevolent Fund, the sum of one guinea was voted from the Charity Fund in support of his list.

Knights Templar.

WEST LANCASHIRE.

PROVINCIAL GRAND CONCLAVE.

The annual meeting of the Provincial Grand Conclave of Knight Templars in West Lancashire was held at Head Quarters in the East, Grand Field of Encampment, Town Hall, Rochdale, on the 30th May, at which there was a large and influential gathering of E.C.'s, P.G.C.'s, and other honoured, and duly qualified Knights Templar.

Amongst the representatives of the different Encampments of the province, were the following:—Sir Knights W. Ashworth, E.C.; W. H. Prince, P.; H. Turner, 1st C.; J. Fothergill, 2nd C.; W. Roberts, Reg.; T. Oakden, Almoner; R. Whitworth, Expert; J. B. Ashworth, 1st. S.B.; E. Woodcock, D.C.; J. Holroyd, P.C.; E. Wrigley, P.C.; L. Groden, Org.; S. J. Phillipson, J. Barnes, E.C., St. Joseph; W. O. Walker, G. Lee, W. Blain, W. Doyle, J. Wood, M. Mawson, J. Brocktor, R. Ingham, J. Lloyd, W. H. Grimners, J. Morris, &c. The Albert Encampment, under whose auspices the Conclave was held, was opened at half-past twelve o'clock by Sir Knight W. Ashworth, E.C. The Provincial Grand Officers, after having signed the Equerry's book, entered in procession under the Arch of Steel, marshalled by the P.G.D.C., assisted by Sir Knt. W. H. Hopkins, the V.E.P.G.C. Sir Knight Albert Hudson Royds, and his P.G. Officers were saluted in usual form, and took their accustomed stalls.

The Provincial Grand Conclave was opened in due manner, and with solemn prayer, at half-past one o'clock, after which the muster roll was called over.

The following Knights answered to their names:—

The Very Eminent Provincial Grand Commander, Sir Knt. Albert Hudson Royds, on the throne; Sir Knt. William Henry Wright, the Eminent the Deputy Provincial Grand Commander; Sir Knts. Wm. Birch, Prior; R. Mc. D. Smith, Sub-Prior; Rev. J. L. Figgins, Assistant Prelate; W. H. Pratt, First Captain; Thos. H. Winder, Vice Chancellor; John Chadwick, Registrar; Jas. A. Birch, Treasurer; Jas. Watson, Hospitaller; W. H. Hopkins, Assistant Director of Ceremonies; J. W. J. Fowler, Supt. of Works; John Fletcher, Almoner; Thos. Morris, Warden of Regalia; T. R. Williams, Second Expert; James Holroyd, Second Standard Bearer; Hy. Creeke, Second Aide-de-Camp; W. Wayne, First Captain of Lines; Thos. Hollingsworth, Second Herald; J. L. Goodwin Org.; Richd. Ingham, Banner B.; Wm. Dawson, Equerry; and several officers of the Provincial Grand Conclave.

The minutes of the Provincial Grand Conclave, holden at Manchester, on the 29th June, 1871, were read and confirmed, and P.G. Treasurer's accounts were audited and passed. Sir Knt. A. Birch, was re-elected P.G. Treas. for the ensuing year, and Sir Knt. F. W. Dawson, the Equerry for the same period. The P.G.C. then appointed and invested the following Sir Knts. as his P.G. Officers:—

William Henry Wright ...	D. Prov. G. Com.
C. R. N. Beswicke-Royd	Prov. G. Prior.
J. F. Tweedale	Prov. G. Sub-Prior.
Rev. J. L. Figgins	Prov. G. Prelate.
Rev. Thos. Wilson	Prov. G. A. Prelate.
William Ashworth	Prov. G. 1st. Capt.
J. W. J. Fowler	Prov. G. 2nd Capt.
G. P. Brockbank	Prov. G. Chan.
T. H. Winder	Prov. G. V. Chan.
John Chadwick	Prov. G. Reg.
E. A. Royds	Prov. G. Chan.
T. R. Williams	Prov. G. Hospitr.
W. H. Hopkins	Prov. G. Dir. of C.
John Ashworth	Prov. G. A.D. of C.
John Walker	Prov. G. S. of W.
Jas. Holroyd	Prov. G. Almoner.
William Blain	Prov. G. W. of R.
J. Grimmer	Prov. G. First Ex.
Harry Creeke	Prov. G. Second E.
William Wayne	Prov. G. First S.B.
Geo. E. Hardman	Prov. G. Second S.B.
Thos. Morris	Prov. G. F.A.D.C.
Thos. Hollingsworth	Prov. G. S.A.D.C.
John Proctor	Prov. G. F.C. of L.
Thomas Bowers	Prov. G. S.C. of L.
Herod Turner	Prov. G. F. Herald.
Richd. Ingham	Prov. G. S. Herald.
J. L. Goodwin	Prov. G. Org.
S. J. Phillipson	Prov. G. Sword B.
Edmund Hartley	Prov. G. Banner B.

The Committee of General Purposes was then elected, and it was resolved to hold the next annual meeting of the Provincial Grand Conclave at Ashton, under the auspices of the Loyal Volunteer Encampment. The alms were collected, and the sum of £7 was voted to Sir Knt. T. Ledward, the oldest Templar in the province. It was also resolved, "That this Prov. Grand Conclave should always be represented in Grand Conclave by the Provincial Grand Commander or his Deputy, and that the expenses of Sir Knt. Wright, or of his representatives if unable to be present, should be paid out of the funds of Prov. Grand Conclave, if required.

The P.G. Conclave was then closed in due form, after which a banquet was celebrated at the Town Hall, which was provided in splendid style by Messrs. Smethurst and Butterworth. The usual loyal and knightly toasts were duly proposed and enthusiastically honoured.

GRAND MARK LODGE.

[As there were necessarily some omissions in our condensed report of the proceedings at the Half-yearly Communication to Grand Mark Lodge last week, we subjoin a full account of the Grand Master's address, in which he stated to the brethren the steps he intended to take with regard to those brethren who had brought about the fusion of the Scottish Lodges with this Grand Lodge.—Ed. Freemason.]

The Grand Master: Brethren, I have to make one or two observations to Grand Lodge upon the points that have been alluded to in the Report of the General Board. First of all, as regards the appointment of Representatives from these two distinguished American Grand Chapters to ourselves. I think that is a point, the importance of which it is difficult to over-rate, and upon which we may very well congratulate ourselves, because it not only admits us into the great comity of Supreme Masonic Jurisdictions, but I think it is an example which cannot fail to be followed by other American Grand Chapters. I believe we are very much indebted to Bro. Hughan, who is well-known in the Masonic literary world, not only in England but in America, for this result; and as he has been appointed Representative of the Grand Chapter of Pennsylvania, I wish to mark my sense of what we owe to him by giving him the rank of Past Grand Junior Warden of this Grand Lodge, which Grand Lodge at its last meeting empowered me to do. I think also, we may congratulate ourselves upon the union of the Scotch Provincial Grand Lodge of Lancashire with this Supreme Grand Body. We are all aware that the existence of lodges owing allegiance to the Grand Chapter of Scotland in this country has been a very great thorn in our side, and I think a very great Masonic scandal: and it reflects the greatest credit, in my humble judgment, upon our Scottish brethren in Lancashire, that they have been so energetic in taking steps and coming forward so readily in bringing that state of things to an end, and expressing a desire to work under one united banner with English Mark Lodges. There are one or two more points connected with this union of the Scotch lodges with us upon which I must ask Grand Lodge to hear a few words on the course I intend to pursue in conferring Past Grand rank upon certain distinguished brethren who have promoted the interests of this Grand Lodge. First of all, I think it only due to the brethren of the Provincial Scotch Grand Lodge of Lancashire, that their present and past provincial rank should be confirmed to them. It obviously would not be right that in joining us they should lose the rank they possess, as an independent organisation. I have therefore to propose to Grand Lodge that the present and past Provincial Grand rank of the Scotch brethren in Lancashire should be confirmed to them. That is the first point. Then I have to ask Grand Lodge to give the rank of Past Junior Grand Warden to three distinguished brethren, one of them under the Scotch constitution, two of them under the English constitution. Bro. Brockbank is the brother under the Scotch constitution. Those under the English constitution are Bros. White and Birchall, and, in connection with Bro. Romaine Callender, they have been very forward in bringing about the happy result I have mentioned. They have been recommended to me by Bro. Callender; and in order to shew our appreciation of the efforts that have been made for the last year and a half by the Provincial Grand Lodge of Lancashire to maintain the dignity and efficiency of our order in those parts, I have to ask Grand Lodge to confirm my resolution to grant the rank of Past Junior Grand Warden on Bro. Brockbank of the Scotch constitution, and Bros. White and Birchall of the English. And last, though not least, I desire on the occasion of my quitting this chair as Grand Master to express my pleasure that this most vexatious negotiation has been brought to so satisfactory a conclusion, and also to express the debt we all owe to our Grand Secretary for the great and indefatigable endeavour he has always put forth, seconded as they have been by many of the brethren in Lancashire to unite the lodges working under the Scotch Constitution with us. We must acknowledge that we all owe to him a deep debt of gratitude for bringing these negotiations to such a satisfactory conclusion, and I wish to ask Grand Lodge in order to shew our sense of his eminent merit for the last thirteen years to confer on him also the rank of Past Junior Grand Warden. Those are the motions I have to make. "That the past and present provincial grand rank which our Bro. Brockbank holds under the Grand Chapter of Scotland should be confirmed to him; that he should take the rank of Past Junior Grand Warden in this Grand Lodge, that the rank of Past Junior Grand Warden should be conferred on Bro. White, and Birchall, and our Grand Secretary under the English Constitution." (Great cheering).

Bro. W. Beach, P.G.M.:—M.W.G.M., and brethren, I have very great pleasure in seconding the proposition. I am sure it is a matter of very great gratification to hear the announcement you have made to-day. To have any difference of jurisdiction must mar the harmony of Masonry, and we must congratulate ourselves upon the energy and success which have characterised the efforts of our brethren in terminating those differences. I am sure, to our Grand Secretary, we are indebted for the efforts he has made. I have had many opportunities myself of knowing how energetically he devoted himself to any course he took in hand, and I am sure this Grand Lodge must congratulate itself upon the manner in which he has conducted the negotiation. I have great pleasure in thus publicly announcing it, and I second the motion of the M.W.G.M. (Cheers).

The motion was then put, and carried unanimously.

Subsequently, on the motion of the Earl of Limerick, seconded by Bro. John Huyshe, Grand Lodge increased the allowance for the expenses of Grand Secretary's office to £200, apportioning that sum equally between Grand Secretary and whomsoever might be appointed as his assistant.

The motion as carried, was "That the sum of £100 be granted to Grand Secretary, and £100 to the Assistant appointed by Grand Secretary."

The Grand Master, in announcing the vote, said, Bro. Grand Secretary, I have great pleasure in informing you, that in your absence, the Grand Lodge has voted £200 per annum to be granted for expenses of Grand Secretary's office, and it has done that, we distinctly understand, which I am sure the Grand Lodge would have been ready to confirm, if done by the General Board, directed that £100 of that sum shall be considered as given to your very worthy son, or whoever may be appointed as Assistant, I suggest, that, in order to secure a constant attendance in the office.

The election of Grand Master, and appointment of Grand Officers followed.

CONSECRATION AND DEDICATION OF A MASONIC TEMPLE IN CARNARVON CASTLE.

The idea of fitting up a part of this time-hallowed structure as a Masonic Temple originated with the members of the Segontium Lodge. Through the influence and exertions of the V.W. Bro. W. Bulkeley Hughes, M.P., for the Carnarvonshire boroughs, and of Bro. Sir Llewellyn Turner, Deputy Governor of the Castle, the permission of the R.W. Bro. the Earl of Carnarvon, was obtained for this purpose. When (in the year 1368) the Prince of Wales and his Royal Consort intimated their intention to honor Carnarvon by a visit, that part of the Castle traditionally known as the "Queen's Tower," underwent extensive restoration and repairs, some of the principal rooms were then fitted up, and handsomely decorated for the use of the Royal visitors, and the largest apartment occupying the entire area of the base of this tower was appropriated as the reception room for the Princess of Wales. The brethren of the Segontium Lodge, following up what was then so worthily begun, have been enabled, by an additional outlay of some hundreds of pounds, to establish themselves in these rooms, and in a temple worthy of the Craft. The lodge-room, though on what may be called the basement floor, on the inner or town side of the tower, is, on its outer or seaward aspect, at a great elevation above the harbour; it is approached through an ante-room, which has been suitably fitted up with lavatory, &c., in enamelled slate, presented to the Lodge by Bros. Nicholls and Owen. The ceiling of the lodge-room is painted in blue, with gilt Masonic emblems, the furniture, manufactured by Bro. George Kenning, of London and Liverpool, is in white and gold, and the upholstery of masonic blue. The room is warmed by a Gill's stove, presented by Bro. Robert Williams, of Carnarvon. The Master's dais was presented by Bro. R. Williams. The whole of the work was carried out by Bro. Owen Morris, under the superintendance of Bro. R. J. Davids, the Architect, and to the satisfaction of the members of the Segontium Lodge.

A large number of Brethren assembled to meet the Provincial Grand Master, but Sir W. W. Wynn was prevented being present, in consequence of having to attend the funeral of his resident agent.

The Birthday of Her Majesty was the day appointed for the consecration of the hall.

Among the number of brethren present, were—Bros. Dymock, Dep. Prov. G.M.; Vaughan, Williams, Prov. G.S.W.; T. W. Goldsborough, P. Prov. G.S.W.; Copner Wynne Edwards, Prov. G.J.W.; T. C. Roden, P. Prov. G.S.W.; Love James Parry, M.P., P. Prov. G.D.C.; Robert Humphreys, P.G.S.B.; R. A. Jones, P.M. 606; W. H. Carter, P.M. 606; John Owen, P.M. 384; E. W. Thomas, P.M. 384; M. Dyer, P.M. 384; John Peters, P.M. 397; J. A. Eastwood, P.M. 317; R. W. Worrall, P.M. 722; G. L. Woodley, W.M. 755; W. Evans, W.M. 1113.

The following officers and brethren of the Segontium and other lodges were also present:—

Segontium Lodge, Carnarvon, No. 606:—Bros. J. W. Poole, S.W.; G. C. Bradbury, J.W.; T. H. Webb, Treasurer; C. Foulkes, Secretary; T. S. Nicholls, S.D.; W. Hayden, Org.; J. Lloyd, T. G. Cowell, C. H. Rees, R. T. Haleham, Louis Aronson, Thomas Roberts, John Pugh, William Hurwood, John Moreton, R. R. Williams, John Thomas, Wm. Maughan, W. H. Marrow, J. A. Ringrose, R. Griffith, W. Hamer, Richard Humphreys, Richard Rowlands, Lewis Prothero, Owen Thomas, Thomas Thomas, W. G. Owen, W. Paynter, W. Charlton, C. Davis, W. Watkins, and Jame Hawkrige.

St. David's Lodge, Bangor, No. 384:—Bros. Henry Owen, Richard Rowlands, D. Wynn Williams, Watson Roberts, Robert Owen, F. Jones, Owen Jones, and J. Jones.

Hibernia Lodge, Holyhead, No. 567:—Bros. J. Lloyd, and Isaac Peters.

St. John's Lodge, Leicester, No. 272:—Bro. J. Smith.

St. Tudno Lodge, Llandudno, No. 755:—Bro. Lloyd Jones.

Many other brethren were present, whose names we were unable to obtain.

The R. W. Dep. Grand Master opened a special Grand Lodge, and, assisted by Bro. Goldsborough proceeded to the solemn consecration of the Hall, in the course of which ceremony Bro. Roden delivered the following address:

"Right Worshipful Provincial Grand Master, Officers, and Brethren,—It is at all times our duty as Masons, to render honour to whom honour is due: and it is especially incumbent upon us that we this day gratefully acknowledge our obligations to those by whose favour and Masonic spirit it is, that this lodge has been permitted to assemble in this venerable building. It is, then, to the constable of the castle, the Right Honourable Bro. the Earl of Carnarvon, D.G. Master of England, and to our respected Brother Sir Llewellyn Turner, the deputy constable, that we are indebted for the privilege, not only of meeting within these walls, so replete with historical interest, but for the still greater privilege, for the great advantage, and I will say for the high honour, of being allowed to call this noble apartment our lodge-room—and that, not for to-day only, but for the future, and I trust for a long and prosperous future.

"There are yet other distinguished Brothers, to whom honour is due, to the R. W. Prov. G. Master, Sir Watkin Williams Wynn, who, with that kindness and fraternal feeling by which he is characterised, and for which he is justly respected by the Masons of this Province, who has summoned this Provincial Grand Lodge, and to the Deputy Prov. G. Master, the V. W. Bro. Dymock, who by his presence and assistance in the consecration of this room to the uses of Masonry, has added so much to the interest we all feel in the important object for which we are met together. Nothing could be more fitting than that this lodge, which derives its name from the Roman City, Segontium, which once stood near the spot on which we are now assembled, should have found a home and resting place within the walls of this antient castle. Surrounded, as we are, with the memorials of antiquity, and associated with the traditions of ages that are past, we might well suffer our minds, on such an occasion as the present, to recal the period when our predecessors, some six hundred years ago, raised this mighty pile; and congratulate ourselves, not only on the liberty accorded to us of inculcating the peaceful ideas of our Craft in a place devoted, in bygone ages, to the purposes of war and bloodshed, but on the happy change of circumstances which time has wrought since those days of strife. We might mark the contrast between the objects which the Master Masons who built this stronghold, had in view, as compared with those which now animate our breasts. They who laid these foundations and built these massive walls, laboured to raise a bulwark against their enemies, and provide the means of aggression; we, a far future generation of Masons, after the lapse of six centuries, would fain use our working tools in the cultivation of the arts of peace, in inculcating the principles of universal brotherhood and the practice of universal charity. We might draw yet another contrast between that troublous time when the first Prince of Wales was shown to the people from a window in this, the Queen's Tower, and the time when, recently our beloved Past Grand Master, the present Prince of Wales, received an enthusiastic welcome from his countrymen of the Principality, in this room, on his coming to inaugurate a work of public utility to the inhabitants of this town. It would conduce little to our present advantage, to enter into historical controversies, and to attempt to clear up the misty facts of a dubious antiquity, as regards this Royal Castle of Carnarvon. It will be more profitable to devote the few remaining moments at our disposal to the consideration of that which it will devolve upon some to teach, and on others to learn, within these time hallowed precincts. We do not in these days aspire to the creation of those stupendous fimes, which in the East, in Europe, and in this country, rose under the hands of our antient brethren, the ruins of some and the present existence of others of which testify to their unrivalled genius and skill; but we as speculative or Free and Accepted Masons have a temple to build up, the foundation stone of which was laid, masonically speaking, at our initiation, not a material structure, towering towards the clouds, but the humble temple of our hearts and minds which we have been taught to render perfect in its parts and honourable to the builder, a temple the superstructure of which is composed of our thoughts, words, and actions, a spiritual edifice ever pointing upwards, and if any one shall say "who will show us any good?" Let us refer him to the pure and elevating teachings of Freemasonry, and show him how, that the mind of the neophyte, instructed in the three grand principles of our Order, Brotherly Love, Relief and Truth, is modelled by Virtue and Science, and led even to the throne of God himself. All good is of God, the Great Architect of the Universe, and the existence of good proves the existence of God. All that is good in us and in our Order is of Him, therefore we may point to the doctrines inculcated in the degrees of Freemasonry as of God. Moreover, they are taught in his word, which lies unfolded in every lodge; and if we be conversant therewith and adhere thereto, they will bring us to Him who will not deceive us, neither will He suffer deception; and while we claim that the teaching of Freemasonry is of Divine origin, it is well that we should accustom ourselves, not infrequently, to take a retrospective view, in our own minds, of those degrees in Freemasonry through which we have passed, and those great duties we have solemnly engaged ourselves to perform, in order that we may be assisted thereby in practising out of the lodge, those duties we are taught in it; that the world may see the happy and beneficial effects of our antient Institution. If we purify our hearts from every baneful and malignant passion, and exercise ourselves in active beneficence and charity, if we be meek, humble, and resigned, faithful to our God, our country, and our laws; if we drop the tear of sympathy on the failings of a brother, and pour the healing balm of consolation into the bosom of the afflicted; if we feed the hungry, clothe the naked, and educate the ignorant; if we observe with loyalty and fidelity our obligations to our Order, to our lodges, and to one another; and indelibly imprint on our hearts the sacred dictates of Truth, of Honour, and of Virtue, we shall not fail to commend our profession before men; and we shall lay up for ourselves a crown of rejoicing and joy when time with us shall be no more, and may these, the genuine tenets and principles of our Order be transmitted, pure and unsullied, through this lodge from, generation to generation."

On the conclusion of the ceremony, the brethren adjourned to the Royal Hotel, where an excellent banquet was prepared by Bro. Edward Humphreys.

Grace having been said, the R. W. Bro. Dymock said: The first toast I have to propose is one you will all drink with pleasure, it is "The Health of the Queen." This is a most auspicious day for us to meet here, and these meetings show how many loyal subjects there are in the Principality of Wales. This is her birthday, and I hope we shall meet together, for many years to come, on similar occasions, and drink her good health, and wish her many happy returns of the day.

Bro. Dymock: The next toast is one of great interest to us, more particularly in this old town. The City of Carnarvon was the birth-place of the first Prince of Wales. The present Prince of Wales is a Mason, and a Past Grand Master of Masons. I don't know any place so interesting in which we could meet as loyal and good subjects, as in the old Castle of Carnarvon. We will drink his good health, and may he have many long years to live.

Bro. Dymock then proposed, "The Healths of the M.W. Grand Master, the Deputy Grand Master, and the Grand Lodge of England."

Bro. Dymock: Brethren, the next is a bumper toast, it is "The Health of our Right Worshipful Provincial Grand Master, Sir Watkin Williams Wynn." Nothing gives him greater gratification than in attending these meetings, there could be no better person to represent the Principality of Wales, and the increase in the number of Masonic lodges in Wales, since he has been the Grand Master of the Province shows, it. It is of no use for me to speak of him here in eulogistic terms, his character is so well known to you all. Long life and prosperity to him, and may we all meet him in this room before very long.

Bro. Goldsborough, P. Prov. G.S.W.: I regret that the toast I have the honour to propose has not been placed in other hands, not, brethren, on account of any indisposition on my part to propose it, very far indeed from that, but because I feel unable, for lack of words to express in an adequate manner, those warm sentiments of fraternal affection, esteem, and regard which I know to be entertained and felt in the hearts of all who enjoy the honour and pleasure of knowing the gentleman who is the subject of this toast, it is "The Health of the Right Worshipful Bro. Dymock, our revered Deputy Grand Master." (Prolonged cheering.) Thank you, brethren, for that unmistakable and enthusiastic expression of your feelings, in such perfect unison and harmony with my own. To mention the name of Bro. Dymock in any part of the Province of North Wales and Shropshire is alone, and at all times, sufficient to insure the same hearty reception as that you have just given, and I know you all feel the same joy as I do, in seeing him here to-day, restored to health. After a night journey of some two hundred and fifty miles, coupled with the information I received on my arrival here, that a melancholy occasion would prevent the Right Worshipful Grand Master being present, I could not help feeling somewhat depressed and unfitted for the duties devolving upon me, but when we found that Bro. Dymock had arrived, and was accompanied by our esteemed Provincial Grand Wardens, Bros. Vaughan Williams, and Copner Wynne Edwards, we all felt new life and energy. It is indeed a great happiness to us all to see you, Right Worshipful Deputy Grand Master, here to preside over us. May you, Sir, continue in renewed health and strength, and for many years, very many years to come, to add to the happiness of our meetings.

Bro. Dymock returned thanks in a speech replete with warm-hearted and true Masonic feeling, and calling upon the brethren to fill a bumper, proposed "The Health of Bro. Goldsborough," who had conducted the ceremonial of consecration of the Masonic Hall that day.

Bro. Goldsborough thanked the Deputy Grand Master for the kind and complimentary terms in which he had spoken of his services, and the brethren for their cordial and warm reception of the toast, concluding by wishing prosperity to the Segontium Lodge, under whose auspices the Masonic Hall had originated, and had been so successfully carried out.

Bro. R. Vaughan Williams, P.G.S.W. then proposed "the Health of Lady Williams Wynn, and the Ladies."

Bro. Roden, P. Prov. G.S.W. — "It is the greatest satisfaction to me to respond to the commands of the Deputy Provincial Grand Master, to propose the next toast. I know that the W. Master of this Lodge has been one of the prime movers in obtaining a grant of the Castle of Carnarvon. I will not go so far as to say he is the first or only agent, but we must give him that meed of praise which is due to his energetic character, and which I know he has been shown in the matter. You all will have observed that a great amount of labour, time, care, and even anxiety, must have been expended in preparing that room for to-day. We saw there the result of days, weeks, and months of labour and exertions. The room itself, I had never seen before to-day, nor did I think I should have to celebrate in the programme, an humble address within the walls of a building, where I had never been before to-day. I congratulate the Lodge on the fact that it has, through the kindness of official parties, been able to establish itself in that noble Hall. It is a point of great importance and concern, that Masonic lodges should be held in places apart from hotels, and had you searched through the whole of the Principality, it would have been impossible to have found room accommodation equal to that in which you have been installed to-day. As to the master of the Lodge, brethren, I have simply alluded to these circumstances in elucidation of his masonic zeal, I have always thought he would be a most useful member of masonry in this district, and willing to go here or there in the interest of masonry. I cannot say more, but will call upon you to drink "the health of Bro. Humphreys, the W. Master of this Lodge."

Bro. Humphreys, P.G.S.B. — "with feelings of very great pleasure I respond for the very kind way in which Bro. Roden has proposed and the very kind way the brethren have received the toast of my health—it were but right to state that some other brother should respond to this toast to-day. It is nearly two years ago since some of the members, (two of whom only are present), formed the idea of a lodge room in the castle. These two members have worked for the good of the lodge, and for its credit and honour. Five years ago, with the assistance of Bro. Roden and a few others, we endeavoured to resuscitate this lodge, we have now ninety members. Honour to whom honour is due—Bro. Henry Morgan, now on the mighty deep, was the first to propose that a Masonic Hall should be erected in this Castle; he not only proposed it, but said to me "here are ten pounds towards it," and I may say a good example set to others. I don't think there is a single brother who has not endeavoured to outdo the other; the Treasurer has been harassed day and night in receiving subscriptions. It is to them and to them alone that I am indebted for the honour of responding to this toast, I think it a great reward to have had that Hall consecrated during my year of office, and I thank you all most sincerely. I trust we shall have many such happy meetings as the present, and so long as we can have the Provincial Grand Lodge here, with Bro. Dymock and our worthy Wardens, we will make all sorts of excuses to bring them here, I warrant you."

Bro. Copner Wynne Edwards, P.G.J. Warden, in a long and eloquent speech proposed "The Health of the Visitors," to which several brethren replied—expressing their gratification in having been present on this interesting occasion.

Bro. Goldsborough—proposed the health of the brethren who had assisted him in carrying out the ceremonies, thanking especially Bro. Roden for his beautiful and appropriate address, and Bro. Hayden for the effective way in which he had conducted the musical part of the ceremony.

Bro. Roden—"I feel deeply the kind way you have received this toast, because, from the cheers you have been kind enough to accord to it, I cannot doubt your appreciation of it, and of the little I have done in this lodge. As regards the business of this day, I take no credit or honour except I may say for the few words I had ventured to summarise with respect to our duties to our Maker and to our neighbours; these I trust will be remembered and will not easily pass out of your memory. Flatter ourselves as we may upon the Institutions of Masonry, its noble maxims, and its sublime morality, we should flatter ourselves in vain, did we not exemplify, in our relations in life, the sublime doctrines it teaches. I trust that I said so much and no more, than I hope will be a profit to each and induce us to make our Masonic life as thorough and complete as we can. I thank my Brother Goldsborough especially for the kind manner in which he has spoken of me, and I thank you all heartily."

The usual and final toasts were given, and the brethren separated at a comparatively early hour (on account of the railway arrangements) and thus terminated the proceedings of the day. It is but just to state that the banquet served by Bro. Edward Humphrey, of the Royal Hotel, merited the approval of the brethren.

THE ANCIENT AND ACCEPTED SCOTTISH RITE IN THE UNITED STATES.

We extract the following from the Louisville Courier-Journal :—

A banquet given at Masonic Temple, Louisville, Kentucky, on the 10th May, to the Supreme Council 33rd. degree Scottish Rite Masons for the Southern Jurisdiction of the United States, which was one of the most elegant affairs of the kind ever seen in Louisville. It was complete in all its appointments, sumptuous, elegantly prepared, and splendidly served. The bill of fare was liberal and judicious; the rarest dishes and choicest delicacies, as well as the most substantial viands, all exhibited the very perfection of culinary art; the wine was abundant; in fact an epicure who could not have enjoyed the feast, and gratified as well as satisfied both hunger and thirst, might well have questioned the judgment of his taste.

One of the features of the banquet was the abundance of everything on the bill of fare. The throng was amply supplied with every article they called for, and at the close there was left enough to furnish the widows and orphans at the Masonic Home with a splendid feast. It was sent to them the next morning, so that the wives and children of deceased fellow-craftsmen will participate in the enjoyment of their Masonic guardians.

The bill of fare included so many dishes, totally unknown, even by name, to most "Britishers," that we give a copy.

Soups.—Sea turtle, Suprême a la Crecy.

Fish.—Scalloped crabs a la Diable; Pompino, Sheep-head, Lake Salmon, Anchovy sauce; Potomac shad, fine herb sauce; Diamond-back terrapin, au Gratin; white fish, red snapper, Genevoife; Diamond-back terrapin, stewed.

Oysters.—Raw, stewed, fried.

Entrées.—Spring chickens, Maitre d'Hotel, Blue-wing duck, with Olives; sweet bread, with French Peas; loin of beef, roast; beef tongues, tomato sauce; jacksnipe on toast, fillet of beef with mushrooms, saddle of lamb, mint sauce; beef collet a la Chipolato; golden plover.

Salads.—Chicken, Mayonaise; lobster a la Tartar.

Vegetables.—New tomatoes, sliced; lettuce; dressed; baked and stuffed tomatoes; French peas; radishes; cucumbers, vinaigrette; cauliflowers, butter sauce; asparagus; new potatoes; green corn, French coffee.

Confectioneries.—Pyramids decorated, centre pieces decorated, biscuits glacés, Panaches; ice cream, Neapolitan; ice cream, strawberry; flowers, fruits and French bonbons; sherbet, orange; Roman punch, Italienne; wine jelly, with fruits; ice cream, vanilla ice cream, pineapple; sherbet, raspberry; sherbet, pineapple.

Cakes ornamented.—Lady cake, fruit cake, jelly cake, small fancy cakes, meringues, silver cake, pound cake.

Wines.—Claret, sherry, Rhine, Hockheimer; Champagne, Heidsieck.

The banquet was spread in the small hall of Masonic Temple, and the guests, including a number of ladies, gathered in the large hall, from whence, at about nine o'clock, they entered the banquet-room and assumed the places assigned to them.

The Seventh Cavalry band provided the music of the occasion, and interspersed the ceremonies with some of its most stirring strains.

When the sharpness of the appetite was somewhat blunted with the feast, and the generous wine began to circulate more freely, toasts were drunk, and responses uttered, and the flow of wit sparkled like the champagne, that at least aided its inspiration.

The exercises were commenced by the reading of the following poem by Illustrious Bro. Fred. Webber:

If it were only that you hold within
Such faithful breasts the secrets of the Craft,
If only that the Mystery Divine
In your devoted spirits is ingraft,
We would extend to each of you the hand,
And welcome to the "Dark and Bloody Land."
For here Freemasonry we prize above
All other gifts our gracious Lord bestows;
When first our fathers with the savage strove,*
They reared her altars, they exchanged her vows,
And taught us, as we love each parted Sire,
To keep alive undimmed, the Sacred fire.
And we have done it: until now, no more
A "Dark and Bloody Land" Kentucky stand;
That Light and Love our fathers did adore
Refulgent on four hundred Mason-lands,
From mountain-height to river, East and West
The gavel-sounds, our mystic toils attest.
But what best welcome shall we offer you
Masters and Leaders in the sacred guest?
What fitting salutation can we show
To Masonry's thrice-honoured, worthiest, best?
Take, Brothers, take our hearts! words are too weak
To frame the utterance that we fain would speak!
Shape your own welcome in Kentucky's home;
Find at each vestibule the latch-string out:
As conquerors within our dwellings come,
Abide in peace, nor harbour fear or doubt,
Ours the honour: give us but to know
Our guests are happy, we are happy too!

* Freemasonry was introduced into Kentucky from the State of Virginia very soon after the settlement of the new territory, styled by the aborigines, the Dark and Bloody Ground. At the report to the Grand Lodge of Kentucky, October, 1871, more than 100 lodges were found upon her soil.

The first toast was to the President of the United States, to which there was no response.

The second was to the Supreme Council of the Northern Jurisdiction.

This was happily responded to by Ill. Bro. Carson, Cincinnati. He referred to the difference of the present meeting and similar ones held twenty-five years ago, when members travelled to their place of meeting on horseback. The Southern Council claimed to be the mother Council of the world, and he would not dispute it. But the Northern Council was her daughter, and though who was the father might be hard to find out, yet he was sure both mother and daughter had reason to be proud of each other. He closed by offering the toast: "Fraternity and good feeling between the Northern and Southern Councils. May they never be broken."

The third toast was to the Supreme Council of the Southern Jurisdiction.

This was responded to by Sovereign Grand Commander Albert Pike in an eloquent address, which was listened to with earnest attention and was frequently applauded.

The fourth sentiment was the following, by Ill. Bro. Fred. Webber, to the Sovereign Grand Commander:—

Brethren,—I have a sentiment to propose which I know you will heartily join me in; but just allow me to read you an extract from an Eastern paper, published in 1856. Speaking about the broker, it says:—Keen-eyed, unobtrusive, he sits for hours abstracted, slightly scornful. He rises slowly, and catches the friendly officer's eye with difficulty. A sort of man whom when found, you have to make a note of; conceals his hands in his pockets, throws back his head and shoulders, and begins. His sentences are long, well constructed, neatly fashioned, and calls forth a responsive "just so," from the hearer.

The man evidently believes what he says. He makes no allusions to usage, which in debate he disregards, but is all the safer upon constitutional questions where verily he is petros, a rock. He particularly abhors despotism. He speaks too seldom, dresses, walks and talks with perfect nonchalance, and acts in all things with perfect independence. We all know his labours in Masonry, especially in the Rite to which he is greatly devoted and which has rendered his name immortal; and the poem addressed to him when G. H. P. of his State closes in these words:

In the day when your sands are spent, brother,
And the Craft shall your history tell,
They'll all say as their grief has vent, brother,
He hath done his labour well;
And these they'll give to you, brother,
As the guerdon of your meed,
For the love that is warm and true brother,
For the heart and for the head.

I propose Ill. Bro. Albert Pike, Sov. G. Com., S. J., to whom the A. and A. Rite all over the world is indebted for its present proud position, and the respect it commands in every country and every clime.

This was aptly responded to by General Pike, who called up Ill. Bro. Dessessour, of Charleston, S. C., and the latter addressed the assembly in a speech very happily conceived and very pleasantly delivered.

The fifth toast was to the State of Iowa, by Sov. G. Com. Albert Pike.

In offering this toast General Pike took occasion to refer to the fact that it was the intention to bestow a medal of honour voted by the Supreme Council to Ill. Bro. W. E. Leffingwell, of Iowa, but the medal had not been completed in time.

Ill. Brother Leffingwell responded in a feeling manner. The honour was worthy of the proudest, and he felt more honour by the bestowal of this medal than he would with the richest decoration that could be placed on his breast by the proudest monarch on earth. He reviewed his own Masonic career, and spoke of the development of Masonry in Iowa, and concluded by declaring that words were too weak to express his thanks to the Supreme Council for the honour they had conferred upon him.

The sixth toast was offered by Ill. Bro. Parvin to "the distinguished representative from New Jersey"—Maj. Ben. Perley Poore, of Washington city, whose connection with the Northern Jurisdiction, marked by the initials "N. J." has been misprinted "New Jersey."

Ill. Bro. Poore responded in a humorous vein. He referred to an Egyptian tradition that there was a skeleton at every feast, bearing the motto, "Remember, man, that thou art mortal." Just as a man gets through his soup he is informed that he must respond to a toast, and that information is a skeleton to him through the remainder of his feast. Not having time to prepare a speech, the Secretary had promised to let him have five of the eulogies that were not pronounced the night before. But, on coming to the hall and observing a distinguished member of his jurisdiction present, he supposed he would have nothing to say, and sent the eulogies back on his private vehicle, a wheelbarrow. He said he had been in many States, including the state of matrimony, but this was the first time he had been hailed as from the State of Jersey. In fact, he scarcely knew where he belonged. His father was from the North and his mother from the South, and it had been difficult to choose between them. But since coming here the question had been settled. A little boy, on being told by his preceptor that he must be born again, burst into tears, and, when asked why he cried, responded, sobbingly, that he was afraid if he was born again he would have to be born girl. "So," said the speaker, "if I had to be born again, I should like to be born a Kentuckian, a name that is associated with all that is good, and great, and chivalrous, and hospitable." He closed proposing the "Gentleman of Kentucky—in time of peace they vote right at ballot-box; in time of war they knew how to handle the cartridge-box, and at all times they take good care of the band-box."

The seventh toast was to the memory of the brethren of this degree whose labours here below have ceased during the past Masonic year, drank standing and in silence.

The eighth toast was offered by Ill. Bro. Fred. Webber, to the State of California.

This was responded to by Ill. Bro. Maj. E. A. Sherman, of Washington Territory. He said that from the Pacific coast Scottish Rite Masonry sends greeting to Kentucky, across the lofty mountains of the Sierra Nevada and across the broad plains that stretch themselves between the waters of the Mississippi and those of the Pacific ocean. He had witnessed the generous hospitality of Kentuckians, and on his return he would convey to the brethren of the far West a good account of what he had seen. Masons here did not know the full meaning of Scottish Rite Masonry. It defends the rights of conscience wherever its banners are unfurled. To know well what it did and suffered, we should be on the Pacific coast, and see the Scottish Rite brethren coming from the Jesuit countries of South America, all gashed with the wounds of persecution, and bleeding from the assassin's knife. The brethren of the far West were called upon to assist their persecuted fellow-craftsmen in those intolerant lands, and they did it nobly. Scottish Rite Masonry was based upon the principles of toleration, and bravely it defended those sacred principles everywhere, even hurling back at the Vatican, notwithstanding its proclaimed infallibility, the determination to sustain the rights of conscience against all priestly oppression.

The hour was getting late, and the assembly gradually broke up, the banqueters retiring reluctantly from the scene of their pleasure.

"A VISIT TO EPPS'S COCOA MANUFACTORY.—Through the kindness of Messrs. Epps, I recently had an opportunity of seeing the many complicated and varied processes the Cocoa bean passes through ere it is sold for public use, and being both interested and highly pleased with what I saw during my visit to the manufactory, I thought a brief account of the Cocoa and the way it is manufactured by Messrs. Epps, to fit it for a wholesome and nutritious beverage, might be of interest to the readers of Land and Water.—See Article in Land and Water, October 14.

"Every mother and housekeeper must often act as family physician in the numerous illnesses and accidents that occur among children and servants. For many of these cases I have used Davis's Pain Killer with such eminent success, that I consider it indispensable in my family medicine box."—Editor N. Y. Examiner.

Obituary.

BRO. E. T. RICCARD.

We are sorry to announce the death of Edward Jackson Riccard, Esq., M.D., at Port Louis, formerly of South Molton, second son of the late James Edward Jackson Riccard, Esq.

The deceased left England in 1858, with the best wishes of his numerous friends, and at the time of his death was 54 years of age.

We extract the following from the Commercial Gazette, of Port Louis, Mauritius:—

A most worthy and excellent man has passed from our midst. Dr. Edward Jackson Riccard resigned his soul into the hands of his Creator last evening, (April 16th), after a short illness, the anguish of which was softened by the tender and affectionate care of his medical advisers, and the numerous friends by whom he was esteemed, respected, and beloved. We, who had the privilege of his acquaintance, are too strongly moved at the death of him, who will hereafter be thought of, and lovingly spoken of as "good Dr. Riccard," to enlarge on his admirable qualities, or to pay, in adequate terms, the tribute to his memory which might be expected from us. All that we can say to-day is, that the high consideration in which he was held by all classes, was richly merited, and the inevitable result of his large-hearted benevolence, and never-failing amiability. The confidence his many patients had in his skill as a physician, was augmented by the increasing devotion and self-abnegation he invariably displayed, and there is not one of those at whose sick bed Dr. Riccard ever stood, but will deplore his loss. But it is the poor of the town who will most miss his ready and genial aid, so unobtrusively; so kindly, so promptly rendered. It is they who will continually bewail his death, for from them has passed away a "good Samaritan."

Assuredly the Almighty, in calling to himself the soul of "good Dr. Riccard," has grieved us all, but we have perfect faith in His promises, and we are consoled by His assurance, that "the dead are blessed who die in the Lord."

The funeral of Dr. Riccard was numerously attended. The pall-bearers were his Honour the Chief Judge, the Assistant Colonial Secretary, the Senior District Magistrate of Port Louis, Mr. W. H. Wilson, Dr. Finimore, and Capt. Barclay. The nephew of the deceased, Mr. Herbert Riccard, the Hon. the Colonial Secretary and the Hon. the Auditor General, were the chief mourners. The Hon. the Procurer General and the heads of most of the Government Departments, besides a large number of the late Doctor's private friends, followed the hearse to St. James's Cathedral; where the body was received by the Rev. the civil Chaplain, the Rev. Mr. Buswell, and the Rev. Mr. Boyce. After Divine Service had been performed, the procession moved on to Bois Marchand Cemetery, where the remains of the good doctor were interred.

Dr. Riccard, up to the time of leaving England for the Mauritius, was a most worthy member of the Loyal Lodge of Industry, No. 421. He was universally beloved and respected, not only by the members of his lodge, but by all who knew him, he practised "that most excellent gift of charity" to its fullest extent.

At the meeting of the Lodge on Tuesday last, Bro. J. T. Shapland, P.M., the oldest member of the Lodge, after speaking of his deceased brother in the highest terms, proposed that a vote of condolence be entered on the minutes of the Lodge, and a copy thereof be presented to his relatives in this town. This was seconded by Bro. Kingdom, P.M., and unanimously carried.

Masonic Tidings.

BRITISH, FOREIGN, AND COLONIAL.

FREEMASONS' LIFE BOAT.—SUPPORT COMMITTEE.—A meeting of the above committee, held at Bro. Foster's, Railway Tavern, London-street, was called for Tuesday, the 4th inst. In consequence of the indisposition of Bro. A. E. Harris, President, and Bro. S. Davis, Treasurer, business was postponed until the next meeting. Subscriptions, are received by Bro. S. Davis, at the York Hotel, Jersey, from R. Moss, Restoration Lodge, Bro. A. G. Williams, 610, Bristol, and a friend, will be duly announced in the next list. D. DAVIS, 141, Hon. Secretary. All letters and subscriptions in connection with the above movement) to be forwarded to the Hon. Secretary, 230, Whitechapel-road, E.

Bro. Sir Michael Costa, Jt., had the honour of an interview with his Royal Highness the Prince of Wales on Monday, at Marlborough House. His Royal Highness took the occasion of presenting to Sir M. Costa a massive gold ring, bearing an engraved seal of the Royal Albert Hall, with the inscription inside:—"Presented by Her Majesty's Commissioners to Sir Michael Costa, in return for the valuable services he voluntarily gave upon the occasion of the opening of the Hall and of the opening of the International Exhibition, in 1871." It will be remembered that the musical arrangements on the occasions referred to were under the direction of Sir M. Costa, who composed a sacred cantata for the opening of the Royal Albert Hall.

CRYSTAL PALACE.—Monday, 10th June, was the 18th anniversary of the opening of the Crystal Palace, by the Queen and the Prince Consort. Since that day, up to Saturday, 8th inst., the enormous number of 30,976,929 persons have visited the Palace, a total which represents nearly ten times the entire population of the metropolis, man, woman and child, and (as given in the census returns of last year), exceeds the whole population of the United Kingdom by 166,746.

The Sphinx Lodge of Instruction is about to remove to the Castle Tavern, Camberwell-road, where its meetings will be held, as usual, on and after the 29th inst.

METROPOLITAN MASONIC MEETINGS.

For the Week ending Friday, June 21, 1872.

The Editor will be glad to have notice from Secretaries of Lodges and Chapters, of any change in place or time of meeting.

SATURDAY, JUNE 15.

- Lodge 1185, Lewis, Nightingale Tavern, Wood Green.
- Star Lodge of Instruction (1275), Marquis of Granby, New Cross-road, at 7; Bro. C. S. Dilley, Preceptor.
- Sphinx Lodge of Instruction (1329), Stirling Castle, Camberwell, at 7.30; Bros. Thomas and Worthington, Preceptors.
- Mount Sinai Chapter of Instruction, Union Tavern, Air-street, at 8; Comp. Brett, Preceptor.
- Manchester Lodge of Instruction, Yorkshire Grey, London Street, Fitzroy-Square, at 8; Bro. Ash, P.M., Preceptor.

MONDAY, JUNE 17.

- Lodge 720, Pamure, Balham Hotel, Balham.
- " 901, City of London, Guildhall Coffee House, Gresham-street.
- " 1159, Marquis of Dalhousie, Freemasons' Hall.
- " 1201, Electric, Freemasons' Hall.
- Sincerity Lodge of Instruction (174), Railway Tavern, Fenchurch-street Station, at 7.
- Strong Man Lodge of Instruction (45), Old Jerusalem Tavern, St. John's Gate, Clerkenwell, at 8; Bro. James Terry, Preceptor.
- Camden Lodge of Instruction (704), Adelaide Tavern, Haverstock-hill, at 8; Bro. T. A. Adams, Preceptor.
- Eastern Star Lodge of Instruction (95), Royal Hotel, Mile-end-road, at 7.30; Bro. E. Goutheil, Preceptor.
- British Oak Lodge of Instruction, Bank of Friendship Tavern, Mile End, at 7 for 8.
- St. James's Union Lodge of Instruction (180), Horse and Groom Tavern, Winsley-street, (opposite the Pantheon), Oxford-street, at 8; Bro. J. R. Stacey, Preceptor.
- Wellington Lodge of Instruction, White Swan Tavern, Deptford, at 8; Bro. C. G. Willey, P.M. 1155, Preceptor.
- St. John of Wapping Lodge of Instruction (1306), Gun Tavern, High-street, Wapping, at 7; Bro. T. Mortlock, Preceptor.
- West Kent Lodge of Improvement (1297), St. Saviour's College, Stansted-road, Forest-hill, at 7.30; Bro. H. W. Lindus, Preceptor.

TUESDAY, JUNE 18.

- Board of General Purposes at 3.
- Lodge 435, Salisbury, 71, Dean-st., Soho.
- Chap. 11, Enoch, Freemasons' Hall.
- " 186, Industry, Freemasons' Hall.
- Metropolitan Chapter of Instruction, Portugal Hotel, Fleet-street, at 7; Comp. Brett, Preceptor.
- Domestic Lodge of Instruction, Palmerson Tav., Grosvenor-park, Camberwell, at 8; Bro. John Thomas, Preceptor.
- Faith Lodge of Instruction, Refreshment Rooms, Victoria-st. (opposite Westminster Palace Hotel) at 8; Bro. C. A. Cotterburn, Preceptor.
- Yarborough Lodge of Instruction, Green Dragon, Stepney, at 8; Bro. Isaac Saqui, Preceptor.
- Prince Fredk. William Lodge of Instruction (753), Knights of St. John Tavern, St. John's Wood; Bro. F. G. Baker, Preceptor.
- Dalhousie Lodge of Instruction, King Edward, Triangle, Hackney, at 7.30; Bro. J. Saunders, Preceptor.
- Florence Nightingale Lodge of Instruction, Masonic Hall, William-street, Woolwich, at 7.30.
- Propensity Lodge of Instruction, Gladstone Tavern, Bishopsgate-st. Within, at 7.30; Bro. Bolton, (W.M. 1227), Preceptor.
- St. Marylebone Lodge of Instruction (1305), British Stores Tavern, New-street, St. John's Wood, at 8; Bro. T. A. Adams, Preceptor.

WEDNESDAY, JUNE 19.

- Lodge of Benevolence, at 6.
- Lodge 147, Sincerity, Guildhall Hotel, Gresham-st.
- " 700, Nelson, Masonic Hall, William-st., Woolwich.
- " 1150, Buckingham and Chandos, Freemasons' Hall.
- " 1320, Blackheath, Crown Hotel, Blackheath.
- " 1339, Friars, The-hive Choco. Crutched-hfirs.
- " 1365, Clapton, White Hart Hotel, Upper Clapton.
- " 1382, Cornhill, George Hotel, Cubitt Town Poplar.
- Chapter 10, Westminster and Key Stone, Freemasons' Hall.
- Pythagorean Lodge of Instruction (79), Prince of Orange, Greenwich, at 8; Bro. J. Roll, Nash, Preceptor.
- United Strength Lodge of Instruction (228), the Grafton Arms, Prince of Wales's Road, Kenish Town, at 8; Bro. J. N. Frost, Preceptor.
- Erael Lodge of Instruction, Eling San Tavern, Globe-road, at 7.30; Bro. Isaac Saqui, Preceptor.
- New Concord Lodge of Instruction, Rosemary Branch Tavern, Hoxton, at 8.
- Confidence Lodge of Instruction, Railway Tav., London-street, City, at 7.30.
- Royal Union Lodge of Instruction, Horse and Groom Tavern, Winsley-street, Oxford-street, at 8; Bro. T. A. Adams, Preceptor.
- Peckham Lodge of Instruction, Maismore Arms, Park-road, Peckham, at 8; Bro. David Rose, Preceptor.
- Temperance in the East Lodge of Instruction, George the Fourth, Catherine-street, Poplar.
- Stanhope Lodge of Instruction, Thicket Hotel, Anclry, at 7.30 p.m.; Bro. H. W. Lindus, Preceptor.

THURSDAY, JUNE 20.

- House Committee Girls' School, at 4.
- Lodge 1339, Stockwell, Duke of Edinburgh Tav., Stockwel.
- Mark Lodge 7, Carrivon, Mitre Tavern, Hampton Court, Observatory, K.T. Encampment, 14, Bedford-row.
- The R.A. Chapter of Improvement, Freemasons' Hall, at 7; Comp. Brett, Preceptor. Ceremony, explanation of R.A. Jewel and Solids, part sections.
- Fidelity Lodge of Instruction (3), Yorkshire Grey, London-st., Tottenham Court-road, at 8; Bro. T. A. Adams, Preceptor.
- Pamure Lodge of Instruction (720), Balham Hotel, Balham, at 7.30; Bro. John Thomas, Preceptor.
- Finsbury Lodge of Instruction, Jolly Anglers' Tavern, Bath-street, City-road; Bro. Strain, Preceptor.
- United Mariners' Lodge of Instruction, Three Cranes, Mile-end-road, at 8; Bro. T. J. Barnes, Preceptor.
- Whittington Lodge of Instruction (862), Crown Tavern, Holborn, at 8; Bro. Lewis Alexander, P.M. 188, Preceptor.
- Chigwell Lodge of Instruction, Bald-faced Stag Hotel, Backhurst Hill, at 7.30.

FRIDAY, JUNE 21.

- House Committee Boys' School.
- Lodge 6, Friendship, Willis's Rooms, St. James's.
- " 975, Rose of Denmark, White Hart, Barnes.
- " 1118, University, Freemasons' Hall.
- Chapter 92, Moira, London Tavern, Bishopsgate-st.
- " 176, Cavenc.
- Unions Emulation Lodge of Improvement for M.M.'s Freemasons' Hall, at 7.
- Temperance Lodge of Instruction, Victoria Tav., Victoria road, Deptford, at 8.
- Burdett Coutts Lodge of Instruction (1278), Approach Tavern, Approach-road, Victoria-park, at 8; Bro. Geo. W. Verry, Preceptor.
- Clapton Lodge of Instruction, White Hart, Clapton, at 7.30; Bro. John Saunders, Preceptor.
- Royal Standard Lodge of Instruction (1208), The Castle Tavern, Holloway, at 8; Bro. R. Lee, (P.M. 193, W.M. 1298,) Preceptor.
- Pythagorean Chapter of Instruction (No. 79), Prince of Orange, Greenwich-road, at 8; Comp. W. West Smith, Preceptor.
- Westbourne Lodge of Instruction (733) Horse and Groom, Winsley-street, Oxford-street, at 8.
- Metropolitan Lodge of Instruction, Portugal Hotel, Fleet-street, at 7; Bro. Brett, Preceptor.
- Belgrave Lodge of Instruction, Duke of Wellington Hotel, Spring-gardens, Charing-cross; Bro. Pulsford, Preceptor.
- Doric Lodge of Instruction, Three Cranes Tavern, Mile-end-road, at 8; Bro. Isaac Saqui, Preceptor.
- Robert Burns Lodge of Instruction, Union Tavern, Air-street, Regent-st., at 8; Bro. W. Watson, Preceptor.
- Burgoyne Lodge of Instruction, Grafton Arms, Prince of Wales's-road, N.W., at 8.
- St. Luke's Lodge of Instruction (144), Gladstone Tavern, Brompton-road, S.W.
- United Pilgrims Lodge of Instruction, Duke of Edinburgh, Shepherd's-lane, Brixton, at 7; Bro. J. Thomas, P.M., Preceptor.
- Duke of Edinburgh Lodge of Instruction, Silver Lion, Penny-fields, Poplar, at 7; Br. D. S. Potts, Preceptor.
- St. James's Lodge of Instruction, Gregorian Arms Tavern, Jamaica-road, Bermondsey, at 8; Bro. Howes, P.M., Preceptor.

The following Articles and Communications will appear next week:—"Footsteps of Freemasonry," by Bro. W. Viner Beloff, M.D."; "Presentation to Bro. E. J. Crow, W.M. 279, Leicester"; and Reports of Lodges, 1394, Leicester; Chapter 1004, Douglas, Isle of Man.

A full Report of the proceedings on the occasion of the removal of the Bard of Avon Lodge from Stratford to Staines, which was received too late for insertion, will appear next week.

Advertisements.

GEORGE KENNING,
198, Fleet Street, E.C.
WATCH & CLOCK MANUFACTURER.

	£	s.	d.
Strong Silver Watches	from	1	1
Silver English Levers (own make)	from	3	10
Ladies Gold English Levers	from	9	9
Gents' Gold English Levers	from	13	12
Gold Watches	from	2	12
Good Sound 8-day Clocks, in neat cases	from	0	10
Good Sound 8-day Clocks, with alarm	from	0	15
Watches, Clocks, Jewellery, Medals, and Jewels, suitable for Presentation, &c., made to order with dispatch.
All kinds of repairs done on the premises, at moderate prices, by experienced workmen.
George Kennings' Ladies' Gold English Levers, unequalled	£10	10-
Country orders will receive prompt attention.

Factory: 2, 3 & 4, Little Britain.

CAUTION.

In calling the attention of the Trade to a recent decision in the House of Lords, in the case of "Wotherspoon v. Currie," whereby our exclusive right to the use of the word "Glenfield" in connection with Starch is indisputably established, would also intimate that this decision renders the sale of the starch made by the defendant illegal, and will subject the seller of it to a Penalty of £10,000. We beg to intimate to those who may have been induced to buy it, that to save them from total loss we will allow 20% per cwt. for it, at the Glenfield Starch Works, Paisley, in exchange for the genuine article, at the current price. This will entail a loss upon ourselves, as the packets will be broken up and sold for House Starch, but it will at the same time be the means of rendering the Article useless for further deception. Any information that will lead to conviction will be rewarded.

R. WORMERSPOO & Co.

LOST.—At the meeting of Grand Conclave, L at Cannon-street Hotel, May 10th, a crystal K.T. Star, mounted in silver. Address, Grand Director of Ceremonies, 15, Portugal-street, Lincoln's-inn.

TABLE OF CONTENTS

Random Notes on Freemasonry	379
Footsteps of Freemasonry	381
Removal of the Bard of Avon Lodge	382
Masonic Notes and Queries	383
Masons' Marks	384
CRAFT MASONRY:—
Metropolitan	385
Provincial	385
ROYAL ARCH:—
Provincial	386
MARK MASONRY:—
Metropolitan	387
RED CROSS OF CONSTANTINE:—
Metropolitan	387
ANCIENT AND ACCEPTED RITE:—
Provincial	387
CORRESPONDENCE:—
The Royal Ark Mariners Degree	388
Anderson's Book of Constitutions	389
Masonic Tidings	390
Masonic Meetings for next week	390
Advertisements	377, 378, 390, 391, 392

RANDOM NOTES ON FREEMASONRY.

A Lecture delivered before the Members of the Royal Sussex Chapter of Perfect Friendship, at Ipswich, on Wednesday, the 5th June, 1872.

BY BRO. EMRA HOLMES, 31^o,

P.M. St. Helen's Lodge, No. 531, Hartlepool; P.G.A.D.C., Suffolk; W.M. Albert Victor Lodge of Mark Masters, Ipswich; E.C. Prudence Encampment of Masonic Knights Templar; P. Prov. G. Almoner, Northumberland; P. 2nd Grand Captain, Suffolk and Cambridge; Grand Provost of England, (Order of the Temple and Hospital); Member of the Royal Order of Scotland; &c.

(Continued from page 366).

Mackey thus writes on Jehovah, the ineffable name of God. "Josephus in writing upon this subject, uses the following expressions, whereupon God declared to Moses his holy name, which had never been discovered to men before, concerning which it is not lawful for me to say more." Inobedience to this law, wherever the word Jehovah occurs to a Jew in reading he abstains from pronouncing it, and substitutes in its place the word Adonai or Lord. In consequence of the people thus abstaining from its utterance, the true pronunciation of the name was at length lost. Nor is the question yet definitely settled, some Orientalists contending, on orthographical grounds, that Jehovah is the true pronunciation, while others, on the authority of certain ancient writers, assert that it was pronounced Jao.

Some learned Jews even doubt whether Jehovah be the true name of God, which they consider to have been irrecoverably lost, and they say that this is one of the mysteries that will be revealed only at the coming of the Messiah. They attribute this loss to the sinful habit of applying the masoretic points to so sacred a name, in consequence of which the true vowels were lost. They even relate the legends of a celebrated Hebrew scholar whom God permitted to be burnt by a Roman Emperor, because he had been heard to pronounce the holy name with these points. This dispute is not likely to be terminated by a reference to ancient authorities, among whom there is too great a discrepancy in relation to the name to be easily reconciled. Irenæus calls it Jaoth; Isidore says it is Jodjod; Diodorus Siculus, Jao; Clemens of Alexandria, Ja; and the Samaritans, Javah. The Grand Elect, Perfect and Sublime Masons tell us that the pronunciation varied among the patriarchs in different ages. Methusalah, Lamech, and Noah pronounced Juha; Shem, Arphaxed, Selah, Heber, and Peleg, pronounced it Jeva; Rue, Serug, Nahor, Terah, Abraham, Isaac, and Judah, called it Jova; by Heyrom, and Ram, it was pronounced Jeva; by Salmon, Boaz, and Obed, Johe; by Jessie, and David, Jehovah, and they imply that none of these was the right pronunciation, which was only in possession of Enoch, Jacob, and Moses, whose names are therefore not mentioned in this list. The Jews believed that this holy name, which they held in the highest veneration, was possessed of unbounded powers. "He who pronounced it," say they, "shakes heaven and earth, and inspires the very angels with astonishment and terror." There is a sovereign authority in this name; it governs the world by its power. The other names and surnames of the Deity are ranged about it, like officers and soldiers about their sovereigns and generals; from this king-name they received their orders and obey. "The Rabbins call it Shem Hamphorash, the unutterable name, and say that David found it engraved on a stone while he was digging the foundations of the earth. Manasseh Ben Israel states it as the opinion of the Cabalists, that Jehovah is not only the name of the divine essence, but that it also denotes the Azeluthic world, or word of emanations, which contain the ten Sephiroth, or emanations from the Deity, which compose the universe, according to the Rabbinical Philosophy. The pronunciation of the name was preserved and transmitted by the Essenes, who always communicated it to each other in a whisper, and in such a form, that while its component parts were known, its connected whole still remained a mystery. It is said too, to have been the pass-word in the Egyptian Mysteries, by which the candidate was admitted to the chambers of initiation. The modern Jews say it was engraved on the rod of Moses, and enabled him to perform his miracles, and they attribute all the wonderful words of Jesus Christ to the prophecy of this incommunicable name, which they say he stole out of the temple and wore about him." Touching the antiquity of the Arch, Mackey says, writers on architecture have until within a few years been accustomed to suppose that the invention of the arch and keystone were not anterior to the era of Augustus. But the researches of modern antiquaries have traced the existence of the Arch as far back as 460 years before the building of King Solomon's Temple, and this completely reconciled Masonic tradition with the truth of history. Bro. Capt. Warren, in his excavations beneath the Temple of Jerusalem, has discovered several arches of most ancient date. He came across a chamber which he supposes to have been a Masonic Hall—and found stones marked with the marks of the time of King Solomon. These facts must be full of interest to Royal Arch and Mark Masons. It is said that the Jesuits, finding Masonry leading to Infidelity, invented or at least altered the Rose Croix degree, which is strictly Christian and Trinitarian. Some think on the other hand that it originated with the Rosicrucians. If the tendency of the Craft is towards deism or infidelity (which however, I do not admit) then there is a necessity for the higher degrees to neutralise that tendency and to act as a counterpoise to the free thinking views of many who call themselves Masons—but who are not so truly at heart. I could never understand the unreasoning hatred of Roman Catholics towards our order—for there is little doubt that in the middle ages, the Freemasons were Roman Catholics—and I suppose it is only to be accounted for by the fact that auricular confession, which is the key to Romanism, is set at nought by the Mason, who cannot reveal the secrets of the Craft even to a father confessor. I received a letter from a nun some little time since, which is so characteristic that I should have liked to read it—but time is pressing. Antient Masonry was pure deism—Medieval Masonry, Catholic. Some Freemasons trace the order to an astronomical,* and others to an arkite origin, and probably there is the impress of both upon it—but I boldly affirm that there is nothing inimical to the Roman Catholic religion in Freemasonry and indeed the higher degrees are, if anything, favourable to it. Faber, who sought an Arkite origin for every thing, says, that the initiations into the mysteries of the ancients scientifically represented the mystic descent into Hades, and the return from thence to the light of day, by which was meant the entrance into the ark and the subsequent liberation from its dark enclosure.

They all equally related to the allegorical disappearance or death or descent of the Great Father at their commencement, and to his invention, or revival, or return, from Hades, at their conclusion. They were, says Warburton, the learned Bishop of Gloucester, "a school of morality and religion, in which the vanity of polytheism and the unity of the First Cause were revealed to the initiated. Bro. Longstaff,

* There are a series of most interesting papers, forming the report on the evidence given at a conference of delegates from the Grand Lodge of Scotland, the Grand Chapter of Ireland, and the Grand Lodge of Mark Masters, on the subject of the position of the Mark Degree in England, published in the Freemasons' Magazine commencing in July, 1871, to which the attention of Masonic students is directed. In that portion of the report, published July 29th, Bro. Kerr, who is speaking on the antiquity of the Mark, and its connection with the Fellow Craft Degree, says:—"There is a very general idea, I am sorry to say, that the third degree is quite a modern invention, while it is the best authenticated portion of the three degrees. It is simply an astronomical problem, showing the state of the heavens at the time the foundation-stone of the temple of Solomon was laid. We have notes of it in Scotland. I recollect seeing it worked out upon two large terrestrial and celestial globes by an eminent astronomer. The globes were properly rectified, and the state of the heavens minutely noted. The signs and words of the degree were obtained, and the reason of the implements being used in the legend of the Third Degree, also the name being thrice repeated, why the ear of corn and the waterfall are depicted, and the directions in which the procession moves. It has proved itself to be one of the best authenticated of the three degrees. The astronomer asked whether I would mind leaving the notes with him. I did so, and he afterwards informed me that he went over the whole with a very learned Professor, who expressed his opinion that it was evidently a very ancient system of some kind or other. He did not care whether it was Masonry or what it was; it appeared to be of undoubted antiquity." These gentlemen were not Masons, and your readers will, I dare say, agree with me that that fact rather adds to than takes from the interest of the statement.

in the article I have before quoted from the Kingston Annual, admits that the A. and A. Rite is "certainly the most widely diffused and probably the oldest of modern rites," that the Rose Croix is one of the oldest and most generally practised of the philosophical degrees; it is found in all the principal rites, and where it does not exist in name its place is supplied by others whose symbols do not materially differ from it. It is the Rose Croix (Royal Order) of Scotland. Of its origin we have no satisfactory account. Its ceremonies are of the most impressive character and figuratively conduct the candidate through the Valley of the Shadow of Death accompanied and sustained by Faith, Hope, and Charity, to his final reception into the abode of life, light, and immortality. It is in fact a Christian form of the third degree. Bro. Longstaff is not correct in saying, however, that the Royal Order of Scotland is the same as the Rose Croix, and were he a member of that order, which is said to have been founded by Robert the Bruce, he would know he was wrong. There is a connexion, as there is with the Templar degree but it is more or less remote, as the brethren of the Rose Croix (who in their ritual by the way are called Rosicrucian Knights) know full well. In the article quoted it is likewise stated that, The Rite Françoise, (a modification of which, the Rite Ancient Reformé, is practised in Belgium and Holland) was established by the Grand Orient of France about the year 1786, and consists of seven degrees; Apprenti, Compagnon, Maître, E ossis, Elu, Chevalier d' Orient, and Prince Rose Croix, which is identical with the 18° of the Antient and Accepted Rite. Sweden has so isolated herself from the rest of the Masonic world that we know but little of her system; it consists of some nine degrees, the 4° and 5° are termed St. Andrew's Masonry, and are founded on a Scottish legend. The members of the higher degrees are Freres de la Croix Rouge, and form the Grand Chapter Illuminé, presided over by the King. In 1811, Charles XIII. conferred on the Craft the highest compliment it has ever received, by establishing the order of knighthood which bears his name; it is conferred only on Swedish Masons of distinction, and the number of knights is limited to twenty-seven, exclusive of three Ecclesiastics and the Princes of the Blood Royal. As a rule Freemasonry is practised in Germany in its original purity, the High Grades finding but little favour. The Grosslands loge von Deutschland adopts the Swedish Rite, and a few Grand Lodges work systems of their own. The opposition Grand Lodges in Germany no doubt accounts for Bro. Findel's onslaught on the higher degrees practised by some of them. The perfection of Masonry is Christian. The Egyptian and Eleusinian mysteries were funereal in character, and a learned friend of mine, the Rev. R. N. Sanderson, M.A., 30°, is of opinion that all point to a Death and Resurrection, a sort of antetype of the Death and Resurrection, by which we are saved. If this theory be correct then Christian Masonry is the true representative of those mysterious foreshadowings which the antients had of what was to come and which they celebrated in dramatic ceremonies, and often accompanied with much that was bad, perhaps prophesying what they did not understand. The traditional history of the 3° is said to have been charged at the building of the Temple of Solomon—from the death of Bacchus or Dyonisius to that of H. A. B. I am reminded of an anecdote from "Wood's Natural History of Man," I think it is called The Becuanas and their religious ceremonies on the death of a Prince The Royal Sign amongst some African tribes, in an exactly similar way with our own. My friend Dr. Tristram * speaking of some Arab chiefs, says, he found they had Masonic signs almost identical with ours, but bearing a different signification. The legend of the 3° is said to be in the Talmud, Dr. Oliver is my authority. Bro. Buchan, the Iconoclast of Masonry—has been endeavouring for some time past to prove that Masonry did not exist before 1717—that we have in fact no past, and that our noble history is but a fable from beginning to end. That Brother stated in the Freemason now some months since, "for years after joining the Masonic fraternity, I generally speaking behaved in the popular idea of its history, rise and progress, but no sooner did I begin to examine into these thoroughly than I was obliged to throw them up, and as it was with Masonic ideas in 1868, so has it been in religious matters in 1871. Investigation into, and thought upon both, has led me up to a departure from the popular ideas. The Bible, as we now have it, is simply in great measure a mere collection of Hebrew pamphlets, full of interpolations and alterations upon the works of the original authors. It is also simply a Jewish literary production, and as such, liable to exactly the same criticism as the literary productions of any other people, whilst the inspiration contained in it is just the same as that found in Shakespeare, Luther, Milton, Newton, Scott, Watt, or Gladstone. The language speaks for itself, and I think that the man who denies the inspiration of the Scriptures is hardly the teacher whose words we should reverence, or whose opinion we should accept as to the history and the aims of our venerable and venerated institution. In these days of utilitarianism it is often asked what is the use of Freemasonry? What good does it do? It is useless for us to answer, "we have our great Masonic Charities" because the reply is, so have other bodies with not half the pretensions of the Freemasons. What nobler work than the fostering and study of architecture and archæology, the restoration of the church built by our ancestors! The Masons of Bristol, under their esteemed Provincial Grand Master, the Earl of Limerick, (one of the most distinguished members of the A. and A. Rite) have set a noble example. They have recently restored the Lady Chapel of St. Mary's Redcliffe, the grandest parish church perhaps in England, at a very great cost—and they took part in laying the foundation stone of the new nave to their Cathedral. We can all do something in this way to show the world we are not degenerated sons of the Mediæval Masons—for we can always help with our money, if not with our hands at the restoration of those beautiful and historic fanes reared by the wisdom and piety of our ancestors. Wherever a Masonic lodge is situated near to some grand old church going to decay—its members should be the first to help with loving hands to rebuild the sacred edifice, if they believe in the history of their order. Did time permit it, I could enlarge upon the science of symbolism, portrayed as it is in our sacred buildings, especially interesting to us Masons—and to the curious Masons Marks found scattered over the cathedrals and temples in Europe and Asia. Many of these marks, in countries most remote, are almost identical—pointing to a solidarity, a community whose purpose, aims, history and origin were one. Some years ago, when the Hartlepool Church (founded by one of the Bruces, ancestors of King Robert, about 1100 A.D.) was undergoing restoration, I was one of a number of Freemasons on the committee. We discovered upon some of the stones forming the foundation of the chancel, and which had been buried for 700 years—marks almost identical with some found in Notre Dame Cathedral. I would refer any brother interested in this subject to "Laurie's History of Freemasonry in Scotland," and to the Builder of March 27th and June, 26th, 1869, where he will see a collection of these marks and the places where they are found, also to that valuable work, Mackay's Lexicon of Masonry.*

* The Revd. Canon Tristram, 18 degree, L.L.D., F.R.S. Author of the "Great Sahara," the "Land of Israel," "Natural History of the Bible."

One word as to the Constitutions of Grand Lodge, and the appointment of Grand Officers. I think it will be generally admitted that the appointments to office are unsatisfactory. Men become members of Grand Lodge of whom the Craft knows nothing—and who, I venture to say, know as little about the Craft—noblemen are pitch-forked into the W. and S., who have never been Masters of Lodges, contrary to the constitutions, and young gentlemen, simply because they are related to those highest in office, are made rulers of the Craft, the first principles of which they are lamentably ignorant of. Office is almost entirely restricted to London Masons, whilst men like "Lupus" and Bro. Hughan, who are ornaments to the Craft, and whose research and learning have done so much for Masonry, are left out in the cold. What office had Dr. Oliver, the most learned Mason of his time in Grand Lodge? What position does Dr. Beaumont Leeson (I suppose the greatest Mason living), hold at the present time? I say that Grand Lodge might very well take a lesson of the Grand Lodge of Mark Masters, which authorises every Lodge under its sway to nominate a brother to office. By this plan, provincial Masons of worth might hope to attain the purple and Grand Lodge would become, what it certainly is not at present, a truly representative body. One word more. There is an impression abroad which should be removed. Freemasonry is a benevolent but not a benefit society. We succour the distressed amongst us, but we do it in secret. No man has a right to come amongst us and demand assistance as he would from an Oddfellow's Lodge. Benefit societies, most excellent institutions in their way, are mainly of use to the working classes. I speak in the presence, I believe, of some valuable members of one of the most powerful institutions, and I know that you will admit that Orange Lodges were founded by Freemasons, and bear a certain Masonic character. Indeed I am told that there are traces of the second degree in both, but I think it is a pity that these societies should imitate our titles, and usurp our dignities. The Orangemen particularly, have formed Lodges of Black Knights, and the Temperance people, an Order of Good Templars, which are only stupid imitations of our Knight Templar degree. They say that imitation is the sincerest flattery, and so we must not quarrel with our neighbours, for testifying to our worth.

* Published by Griffin and Co.

One word more and I have done, I want to remind you, brethren, of your privileges and obligations. Whilst I would strongly insist upon the declaration that the candidate for initiation into our mysteries, is unbiassed by any mercenary or other unworthy motive, and whilst one cannot help regretting that many have sought for admission within our portals simply for what they could get out of Masonry. Still I will say that we ought all of us to serve our brother first, and the world outside afterwards. I am a great advocate for the "clannishness" of Masonry. If I am in a town where there are half-a-dozen tradesmen or professional men, whose assistance I required, and one was a Mason, and another was not, I would go to the Mason, as to a friend, in preference to him who was not one of us, for all I wanted. And this, I think we ought to do, serve our brother first, and then our neighbour or friend afterwards. I think we are often too careless as to those whom we admit to our Order. A whole article might be written on the right use of the ballot in excluding unworthy persons from the benefit of the Order. The importance of this has been recognised recently in the Grand Conclave of Knights Templar, which has passed a wise and salutary law, requiring the names of all candidates for admission to that distinguished Order, to be first submitted to the Provincial Grand Commander or his Deputy, without whose sanction no one can be installed as a member of that chivalric body. The ballot is used too sparingly in our lodges, and men are admitted in this country and Scotland who would not be admitted elsewhere.

I strongly recommend to the attention of the young Masonic Student, "The Kingston Masonic Annual," from which I have already quoted, the first number of which came out in 1871, with Bro. Longstaff as Editor, and our learned Bro. Hughan as principal contributor. There is a very interesting article in it on the visit of a brother to a Prussian Lodge. He states that the Prussian Lodges do not advance the brethren as quickly as the lodges in England, a brother has to be an apprentice (Lehrling) for one year before he can be passed to the second degree, and must remain a Fellow Craft (Geselle) for two years before he can be raised to the sublime degree of a Master Mason; and all that time, three full years, the brother has no voice in the lodge, but is simply there to learn. Bro. Strömer, the author of the article, adds, "this system may seem rather hard, and I think myself, should at least be somewhat modified, at the same time, we cannot but acknowledge that the German lodges teach their members something, and improve, or at least endeavour to improve, the minds of the brethren by lectures, &c."

The Editor in an article, "Freemasonry and its Rites," says, "In Great Britain and America men are admitted into the Order far too indiscriminately, without due inquiry into their character. The fact of being a Mason should be a passport anywhere, as a just and upright man. Would it were so! With less attention paid to mere ritual, and more instruction in the objects of the Society, we may hope for better things. The formation of the Archæological Institute is a step in the right direction. Every lodge should be, not as is now too often the case, only a manufactory of Masons, but an assembly of brethren met together to expatiate on the mysteries of the Craft, and mutually to improve their minds." Another matter is the election of W.M. Masters of lodges should be men of some position and character. I cannot too strongly insist upon this. The disgust which many intellectual men have felt towards the Craft has often arisen from the impotence and low position of its rulers. A man who would be scouted if he offered himself for any public office on the ground of incapacity is thought good enough for the government of a lodge. The remedy is in the hands of Masons themselves, and with them rests the blame when improper persons intrude themselves into office. We should be careful also, not to be too ready to exhibit ourselves to strangers as Freemasons. Many people now-a-days go about with Masonic rings and pins, who are not of us, and lead the unwary to speak of matters which should only be mentioned within a tiled lodge. Remember that the simplicity of Masonry and Masonic signs, whilst it constitutes one of the greatest charms, also renders the young Mason liable to be imposed upon. Remember that a very small portion of Masonry is learnt in the lodge. One must diligently read the Masonic publications, particularly such ably conducted papers as the Freemason, to know anything of the progress of Masonry—and one must not forget that we sought initiation from a desire for knowledge—and to render ourselves more extensively serviceable to our fellow creatures. Finally, brethren, remember that what we first asked for, and what were Goethe's last words, "Light! more Light!" I beg to thank you for your kind attention to my poor attempt at a lecture. It is given with a view to make you more curious about, and more interested in our great institution, and if I have succeeded in suggesting one thought, which may bear fruit and benefit our noble Order, I am amply repaid.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS.—The business of life of late years has become so intricate and contentious that without good health, success is impossible. Epidemic diseases, both infectious and contagious, through negligence, cause woful devastation. The alarming increase of deaths from fever and diarrhoea should be a warning to every one to subdue at once any irregularity tending towards disease. Holloway's Pills should now be in every household, to rectify all impure states of the blood, to remedy weakness, and to overcome impaired general health. Nothing can be simpler than the instructions for taking this corrective medicine, nothing more efficient than its cleansing powers, nothing more harmless than its vegetable ingredients. Holloway's is the best physic during the summer season.—ADVT.

"I was suffering greatly a few weeks ago from severe pains about the kidneys and excessive weakness in the back, accompanied with a nauseous sickness, and had been confined to my bed some weeks, when a friend who had long known and experienced great benefit from the use of your Vegetable Pain Killer brought me a bottle of it, which I used with the most favourable results.—A SURGEON, Woodside, Aberdeen, Oct., 1867.—To P. Davis & Son, London, W.C."

FOOTSTEPS OF FREEMASONRY;
OR,
FREEMASONRY IN RELATION TO AUTHENTIC HISTORY.

By W. VINER BEDOLFE, M.D., J.D. 1322. Hon. Sec., Sphinx Lodge of Instruction.

(Continued from page 306.)

In the last chapter we arrived at, and treated of the third degree, which we may readily perceive divides itself into three parts.

- 1st. The ancient part already treated of.
- 2nd. The philosophic portion.
- 3rd. The traditional portion.

Whatever division of opinion may exist as to the epoch of 1723, none exists that those respected restorers of our ancient Craft, did act upon certain traditions. It has been our business to trace these traditions to their source.

As has been already observed, the three degrees resembled each other up to a certain point. In the second portion of the third degree however, a new idea commences, a spiritual element is developed, and it becomes not purely pagan, not simply philosophical, not Christian, and yet each faith may with curious eye see its own reflected therein.

The peculiar sign of the third degree being in common use among the Romans (as shown by their writings,) certainly from the time of Horace to that of Aulus Gellius, or from Augustus to Adrian, the period to which we might with propriety refer this change, would be about that epoch when Christianity arose.

It was at this wonderful period, and in the midst of the frightful calamities that the ambition and rapacity of the Romans let loose upon the earth, both in their foreign and civil wars, that the movement inaugurated by the recent conquest of Greece shone strongly forth, and the fire of Grecian genius filled the world, as it has often done since with its glory. This was the age to which Augustus gave his name, and when a galaxy, never excelled, of men of genius arose, the idols of all time.

It was however also then that many, sickened by the misery of the times, retired and cultivated philosophy in peace. Others strove to revive, in the institutions which remained, the doctrines and practices of their fathers, and in researches, like our own, nothing is more important than to apprehend clearly the characteristics of thought and feeling, which mark successive epochs.

I believe, therefore, we shall not be far out in supposing, that at this time the third degree received its peculiar philosophic character, that under the influence of Grecian ideas it raised its eyes from earth to heaven, and that the doctrine of death, and the rising again to earthly life, the object of our third degree became formulated. So far, also, as I can learn, see, or critically know, we have no reason to suppose it to be a recent innovation, but on the contrary, there is intrinsic evidence, that it took its rise in that wonderful period to which we have just alluded.

We may now ask, what are the leading points to decide us? They are, the glimmering light, and the rising star, as narrated in our mysteries, and the only source to which we can attribute them are the the Mysteries of Eleusis, which about that time became revealed to philosophic research, and the Persian mysteries of Mithias. (that is of the magic or wise men of the East,) which had recently arrived at Alexandria, and then spread their teachings through the western world.

Of the mysteries of Eleusis, we may remark, that they were celebrated at a town of that name near Athens. The origin is lost in that remote antiquity, when nature was regarded as the almost transparent veil of the spiritual world.

The story is this, Pluto, God of the inferior regions, desiring a spouse, carried off Proserpine, daughter of Ceres, by force to Hades. His kindness soothed her fears, and as Claudian sings, she entered the Adamantine gates, and assumed her milder reign, with such weird pomp as Tartarus alone could show. Ceveberus hushed, Radamanthus like Bovill rested from his labours, Tantalus assuaged his thirst, Ixion reposed by his weary wheel, and, Oh joy to Hell, the Cynic philosopher (Conscience) ceased for the hour from his trade.

In this teaching, Proserpine became to the Pagan world the Grand Triune Goddess, being Luna in Heaven, Diana on Earth, and Hecate in Hell, the Goddess of the Dead. On discovering her loss her mother lighted a torch at Mount Etna, and having in vain sought for her through Heaven and Earth, descended into Hell, and it was the rising of this star or tordo which indicated her worship throughout the world, the great Diana of the Ephesians.

The ceremonies are described as representing the descent of Proserpine into Hell, and the appearing of a bright and rising star, signified her re-ascending to earth, so fervently looked for by her devoted worshippers. The poet Claudian thus describes the holy furor,

Gressus removete, profani
Jam furor humanos nostro de pector sensus
Expulit, &c.

Away, O profane! for holy desire has banished from my soul all mortal care. Behold the temple trembles, the rising light appears to herald the Divine advent.

Homer and Virgil have both described the journey down this grand but dreamy road, and this symbol of the descent into Hell, so popular in the heathen world, has even crept into the dogmas of the Christian Church, for it is hard to find warrant for it in the sacred canon. It is not strange, therefore, that Masonry has likewise taken up this idea, and the tradition or imperfect recollection of it have descended from that ancient period.

To deny it does not remove the difficulty, but would throw upon us the charge of travestying.

The other system, which seems to throw most light upon our doctrine, is the system of Mithras, or the Sun worship. This system was combined with and established by Cyrus in his college of the Magi. These mysteries, says Schlegel, were "not so much an hereditary social caste, as an order or association, divided into various and successive ranks;" in fact, much resembling our own.

Their chief devotion had reference to a light, and was doubtless brethren of this order, then newly-established in Europe, who are stated to have seen "the star in the east which heralded our Lord."

We learn, however, from writers of the time, that by dabbling in divination and nativities, the Order soon fell into contempt.

Thirdly, About this period the Christian religion was also being propagated.

It is difficult for us at this period to realise the immense influence exerted for so many ages by these Eleusinian mysteries, and the strictness with which the secrets were kept. Even in the reign of Augustus, Horace writes:—

—"Vetabo, qui Cereris sacrum Vulgarit arcanæ," &c.

"If any one shall have divulged the mysterious rites of Eleusis, I denounce him; he shall not enter under my roof, or sail in the same swift bark." This is pretty strong, but does not equal that famous curse which elicited from my uncle Toby, the half-whistled remark, "Our army swore terribly in Flanders." Still the greatest curses were involved on all who violated the secrets, and as we learn in the Bacchanalian mysteries, even sometimes death.

From these Eleusinian mysteries the initiated were supposed to derive sweeter hopes than other men enjoy, and believed the great Triune Goddess would endow them with her divine wisdom here, and favour after death. Hence parents were desirous of having their children initiated, as a sort of baptism, by which they were devoted to greater sanctity of manners, and to a desire to be distinguished by what was then called virtue, and by whatever was holy in the pagan world. They, therefore, told of a future life, and of the immortality of the soul.

In fact, we must study this influence as the best guide to a knowledge of their domestic ideas and life, and Gellius gives striking illustrations of their influence on female tastes and conversation.

It is not, therefore, surprising that the Masonry of that day, that is of the Christian era, should become inspired by the teachings and doctrines which surrounded it, even as the Jewish religion became modified by the sojourn in Babylon.

The emblematic teachings of Masonry in the third degree are purification, with the doctrine of the resurrection alluded to in an obscure manner. Now, all this bears no remote allusion to those once popular mysteries. If we did not obtain this doctrine "even to the darkness of death," from this source, whence do we obtain it, for death is not dark to the Christian?

Bishop Warburton says, the ancient mysteries had three objects:—

1. To commemorate the origin of civilisation.
2. To inculcate the doctrine of future rewards and punishments.
3. To reveal the doctrine of the Deity.

An eminent French writer also adds that the great object was purification—hope in a future life. Take which we will, this is the philosophical meaning of our third degree.

To those versed in the literature of ancient Rome, the peculiarities of the age of Augustus, the previous and succeeding centuries will recur to them. It was there that men divided themselves, and avowed it, into philosophic sects, as we do now in religion, thus Horace calls himself "unum e grege epicuri" a "hog from the sty of Epicurus," and of nearly all the great men the sect is indicated. Thus Cato was a stoic, Porphyria (Christian writer) a Plattious, Cicero was a stoic in his younger days, but having edited the works of Lucretius, is supposed to have adopted the doctrines therein contained of Epicureanism, the world may judge whether his "De Senectute," or book on old age does not bespeak a more genial and kindly heart than his earlier ones, for in all times pure hearts make right prayers. Nevertheless Grecian teachings were bad for Rome.

Cicero, referring to an old Roman, says, "but virtues such as these are not now to be found, for new doctrines are introduced, you hear them at your feast, they talk them even in the demimonde, and those who who maintain that the way to glory is through toil are now solitary.

Talk indeed of modern sects, there is nothing new under the sun, for the jargon of ancient ones outdid them all.

Plato denied the world could be governed without geometry, whilst his opponent Lucretius, whom Mr. Disraeli loves to quote, declared it to be merely a fortuitous concourse of Atoms, without any government at all, or as Pope originally wrote it

"A mighty maze and all without a plan."

Some, it seems could not at all understand the many saving clauses for Cicero, says, "I wonder that Antiochus should not see the difference between the Stoics and the peripatetics." In contrast we may place the practice of our divine Pythagoras, there again I must quote Cicero on the nature of the Gods. "There chiefly do piety and religion flourish in our souls when we are occupied in divine service."

We may further judge from writers of that age how a Freemasonry analogous to our own, and quite distinct from the trade societies, sodalities, and religious mysteries, extensively prevailed, thus Plautus, a writer of the first century, in his comedy of the "Swaggering Captain" writes

Pulatrio.—"From the initiated you conceal them, but in me you may trust."

Melphidippa.—"Give me the sign and password, (symbolum et memoraculam) if you are one of the Jacchi."

Now on turning to Cicero, in his work on the Laws, and conversing with his friend, refers to this very society, into which both he and his friend had actually been initiated, as also into another referred to.

These societies (remarks Cicero) are among the many admirable and divine things the Athenians have established to the advantage of human society, for there is nothing better than the mysteries by which we are polished and softened into politeness from the rude asperities of barbarism."

"Justly indeed are they called initiations, for by them especially are we initiated into the grand principles of life, and gain not only the art of living agreeably but even that too of dying with a better hope."

It was doubtless to similar Lodges St. Paul alluded, when in his reference to "Gentiles, who show the law of God written on their hearts, for he uses the word 'acroatai,' a term especially used to designate the hearers, or initiates of Aristotle."

Its very remarks on the mysteries, especially in writing to the Ephesians, celebrated for their mysteries of Diana, show, that in all probability, he had been actually initiated into one or more of these quasi-Masonic institutions.

We have already pointed out that Mark Anthony was W.M. of a Lodge, which had signs and bye-laws, and wore an apron.

That Cato "squared the conduct of his life by the rule of reason," and now we pointed out that Cicero and his friend were not merely stoics or epicureans, but actually belonged to Lodges like our own, with Masters and Wardens like our own, with signs and passwords, such probably as I have already indicated, and with doctrines and practice or working so nearly allied to what we possess and ought to obey, that for my own part I fail to observe the difference.

Let us then delight to feel that we are one with them, recollect that these men still exist, and although (we being admitted to still higher mysteries), our circles with the Grand Lodge above may not be identical we may yet anticipate

"How sweet t'will be in concert to adore,
With those who made our mortal labours light,
To hear the word we feared to hear no more,
To see the mighty dead revealed to sight,
The Bactrian, Samian sage, and all who taught the right."

Such indeed are our doctrines and the teachings of the third degree.

In our next we purpose to illustrate the "Traditional history."

TRANSFER OF THE BARD OF AVON LODGE TO MIDDLESEX.

On Saturday, the 8th inst., the pleasant little water-side town of Staines was the scene of a most interesting Masonic ceremony, attended by brethren known in every-day life as literari. The occasion was the opening in Middlesex of the Bard of Avon Lodge, transferred from Shakespeare's native town to be henceforth a summer lodge.

The first Worshipful Master was Bro. J. C. Parkinson; the Senior Warden, Bro. George Elliot, M.P. for North Durham; the Junior Warden, Captain Burgess, (Secretary for the International Aid Society for the Sick and Wounded in War); W. Roebuck, C.E., Treasurer; R. Wentworth Little, Secretary; the Senior Deacon, Sir Henry Anderson, K.C.S.I.; the Junior Deacon, Dr. F. Ramsay; the Inner Guard, R. G. Glover, P.M. 181.

The transfer from Warwickshire to London of this celebrated Lodge has been warmly supported by the Masonic authorities of the two provinces, and Bro. Wentworth Little, P.G. Secretary for Middlesex, has been indefatigable in the cause of uniting the literary Masons of London with a lodge closely associated with our great bard's name.

After the lodge ceremonies, in the course of which the installation of Bro. Parkinson was performed in a most impressive manner by Bro. R. G. Glover, P.M. 181, (of which the new W.M. is also a P.M.) letters were read from Lord Leigh and Colonel Burdett, the Provincial Grand Masters of Warwickshire and Middlesex, cordially approving of what had been done in the transfer of the lodge, and congratulating Bros. Parkinson and Elliot upon their lodge beginning its new life under these favourable auspices. Bro. Parkinson gave a signal proof of his Master-ship by raising Bro. Dr. Steele, and his fine working delighted the assemblage, among whom were the Grand Registrar of the order, Bro. Eneas McIntyre, Q.C. the Grand Secretary; Bro. J. Hervey; Bro. Thomas Fenn, P.A.D.C; Bro. Dr. Rhys Williams, Edmund Yates, and many others.

On the brethren being called from labour to refreshment, (when they partook of an excellent banquet served by our host of the Angel Hotel), the health of the W.M. was proposed in eloquent terms by Bro. McIntyre, together with "Prosperity to the Bard of Avon Lodge."

The Worshipful Master, in responding, made an interesting Shakspearean speech. He said, after thanking the brethren for the compliment paid to him, no Englishman but might be proud to preside over a society which inscribes the "Bard of Avon" on its banner; no Mason but must be interested in tracing an affinity between our great national poet and the Craft, and in claiming him as brother! Before proceeding to demonstrate that Shakspeare was a Mason, or laying before you the evidence upon which my theory rests, let me first claim for the Bard of Avon Lodge a peculiar propriety in setting this great light prominently before the Order. This lodge hails from Stratford in Warwickshire, and its meetings have been held at that Red Horse, which Washington Irving's Shakspearean pilgrimage made famous, and it bears a poetic title which we may be sure the great dramatist would have been proud to own. For in the town by that silver stream, "gentle Shakspeare" was born. There he lived his generous youth, and loved, and wooed, and won, and gave his "hostages to fortune." From it he went forth, in early manhood, to battle with the world, to acquire moderate fortune, and to achieve illimitable fame. Thither, too, he retired, right lovingly, in his vigorous prime, already weary of the glare and bustle of the playhouse and the capital, to lead a simple yeoman's life, on land which the first fruits of his honourable industry had gone to purchase, and the possession and enjoyment of which, with the esteem and regard of early friends and neighbours was his ambitions modest goal. There, too, after "life's fitful fever, he sleeps well," his tomb a Shrine at which the intellect, the genius, the learning, and the culture of the wide world pay willing homage, his name a watchword, and his works his monument. (Loud cheers). Brethren of the Bard of Avon Lodge, it is important to remember, that this is nearly all we know respecting Shakspeare. (Hear, hear). Ben Jonson makes passing reference to the marvellous conversational powers of his brother poet, but beyond the broad outline I have given, biography is at fault, and the most assiduous students and commentators have not been able to do more than dash in a bit of local colour here, supply a few names and dates there, and then—either confess their ignorance, or invent some stupendous and widely improbable theory. (Laughter). Thus, essays have been written and arguments advanced to prove that Shakspeare was a lawyer, that he was a soldier, that he was a priest, that he was a physician, that he was combination of all four (laughter), while others sapient students have discovered that he never was at all—(loud laughter)—that Shakspeare the author never existed, and that the works attributed to him really fell from the pen of that Lord Chancellor whom Pope described as "the greatest, wisest, meanest of mankind." Brethren, it is not for us to meddle with the too acrimonious disputes of these great critics and discoverers! It is not for the Bard of Avon Lodge to plunge into that turbid sea. (Laughter). Be it rather our pleasing duty to collate some of the passages in Shakspeare which have a Masonic bearing, and to thus base our claim to hail him as a brother upon the imperishable testimony of his published works. (Cheers.) It is not to be expected that these passages will be plain and outspoken, beyond the possibility of doubt. Shakspeare, we may be sure, was not one to "wear his heart upon his sleeve for daws to peck at," or outsiders to make merry over, and when the Craft claims him as a Mason, as I have known some of its thoughtful members do, on the strength of the passage; "I will visit thee at the lodge" (laughter), I say at once that the evidence is insufficient. For this is said in Twelfth Night by a man addressing a woman, and it is clear from the context that if the visit were made, and the grip followed—(laughter)—it was not of a Masonic character. It is rather in hidden than in open allusions that we shall best trace the Masonic mind of Shakspeare. (Hear, hear.) Thus, when the Archbishop in Henry the Fifth alludes to the "Singing Masons," it seems clear that when the brethren of his day were called from labour to refreshment, their hours were lightened in the charming way in which Bro. Harding has lightened ours to-night. (Cheers.) When the servant in the Winter's Tale, after speaking of Antolycus, alludes to "working on the square," the symbolism is obvious; when we have in Twelfth Night one addressing another as "Worshipful Master," one of our most familiar lodge titles is used; and when Mrs. Quickly, in the Merry Wives of Windsor, desires that the "Chairs of Order" shall be scoured, what "Chairs of Order" can she mean, but those of the Worshipful Master and Wardens of the Lodge, which doubtless met at the Garter Inn, at Windsor, or the Boar's Head Tavern, in East Chepe. These are so many illustrations of Shakspeare's familiarity with our Masonic language, symbols, and signs, and an even stronger illustration, and one to which I must allude, for obvious reasons, in the presence of a fellow craft, without comment, is to be found in King John, where Hubert with a fine remembrance of a solemn degree says, ". . . They whisper one another in the ear, and he that speaks doth grip the hearer's wrist." (Cheers.) Such my brethren, are the broad indications of the case, which, we are I think, justified in putting before the Craft, not as complete, but as one worthy of careful and reverent consideration. (Cheers.) If it should be said, that it is not conclusive, our reply must be—Help us to make it stronger!—aid us by your researches, give us the benefit of your Shakspearean and Masonic studies and meanwhile, extend to us, that amount of credence which Shakspeare himself demanded for his dramatic universe, and in his words, "Piece out our imperfections with your thoughts, and give imaginary puissance." (Cheers.) If after all, opinion should be divided, if there should be still some who are not absolutely convinced of this "Bard of Avon's" right to claim Shakspeare as a brother, the broadly Masonic character of his teachings, and our own good fortune in assembling under his honoured name—(cheers)—are points upon which no question can arise. (Cheers.) Brethren, the "Bard of Avon" has migrated from Warwickshire to Middlesex a second time. May it, in the usefulness of its teachings, in the permanence of its fame, and in its beneficial influence over the hearts of men, follow, at an humble distance, the great exemplar whose name it bears, and may it, like his immortal works, flourish in unfailling wisdom, strength, and beauty, long after the human agencies composing it have passed away, and are in dust. (Loud cheering.)

Bro. Edmund Yates responded for the visitors, and the Senior Warden made a most effective speech, Masonic in all its bearing and views, in responding for the Officers.

Bro. J. C. Warden, of Stratford-on-Avon, at the request of the Worshipful Master, proposed "The Health of Lord Leigh, the Prov. Grand Master of Warwickshire," and this was most heartily responded to, as was the toast of Col. Burdett, given by Bro. R. Wentworth Little.

The banquet was excellently served by our host of the Angel, and the rest of the evening was most pleasantly spent.

Multum in Parvo, or Masonic Notes and Queries.

THE ORDER OF CHARLES XIII. OF SWEDEN.

I observe in the interesting and clever lecture of Brother Emra Holmes, published in your last issue, a statement which, perhaps inadvertently, would lead to an inference that this Order is a Masonic High Grade. Brother Holmes says:—"The Grand Lodge of England, in its corporate capacity, does not recognise the higher degrees, though many of its most distinguished members belong to them, notably the Prince of Wales, Knight of the Masonic Order of Charles XIII. of Sweden." I feel quite clear that Bro. Holmes would be anxious that no wrong inference should be drawn, even on a small point, and would wish to have his statement freed of any misapprehension. I therefore venture to supplement Bro. Holmes with the explanation that the Order of Charles XIII. of Sweden, is not a high degree of Freemasonry; but a public Royal Order of Sweden, differing only from any other public State Order in having been founded as a compliment to the Craft, which, in Sweden, is peculiarly esteemed. It is conferred only upon distinguished Masons of high grade, but is not per se a Masonic degree, or a Masonic decoration. It is essentially a public Order in honour of Masons. We have an example in our own country of the restriction of an Order to particular classes. The Bath was instituted in its modern form on the 18th of May, 1725, as a military Order. The statutes of the 2nd January, 1815, declare that the third-class companions "shall be composed of officers holding commissions in his Majesty's service by sea or land." By a subsequent statute of the 14th April, 1847, the Order was extended to the Civil Service. It is a misfortune, that in this great country there is no public Order of merit for the reward of those who have deserved well of their kind by their exertions in science, arts, manufactures, or humanity.—LUPUS.

THE MARK GRAND LODGE, AND REPRESENTATION AT GRAND CHAPTERS.

As it is something quite new in the history of the Mark degree for the Grand Lodge of Mark Masters to agree to an interchange of representatives, we furnish our readers with the text of the first of its kind ever issued. The Grand Chapter of Pennsylvania has the honour of inaugurating so desirable a Masonic work, and we hope its example will soon be followed by others equally anxious to promote "Peace on earth, and goodwill towards men." Already the Grand Chapter of Iowa has recognised the Mark Grand Lodge, and the Rev. G. Raymond Portal, M.A., is its appointed Grand Representative.

Holiness to the Lord.

We,

Charles Eugene Meyer, Esquire,
Most Excellent Grand High Priest

of the

Most Excellent Grand Holy Royal Arch Chapter of Pennsylvania,

And Masonic jurisdiction thereunto belonging

To our trusty well-beloved brother and companion

WILLIAM JAMES HUGHAN,
Past Grand Overseer,
Past Master Mark Lodges, No. 78, &c.,
Truro, Cornwall, England.

Whereas, the Most Excellent Grand Holy Royal Arch Chapter of Pennsylvania, desire to cultivate a more intimate and fraternal correspondence with the Grand Lodge of Mark Master Masons of England and Wales, &c.; and believing that the ties of brotherly affection may be strengthened, the prosperity of the Masonic fraternity promoted, its unity, integrity, and strength protected, its utility and honour confirmed by the appointment and reception of grand representatives. Therefore, be it known that, reposing the greatest confidence in your zeal, fervour, and skill in the Masonic art, we do, by virtue and in pursuance of the powers and authorities in us vested, hereby nominate, constitute, and appoint you, our said beloved brother and companion William James Hughan, Grand Representative of our Most Excellent Grand Holy Royal Arch Chapter of Pennsylvania, and Masonic Jurisdiction thereunto belonging, near the Grand Lodge of Mark Master Masons of England and Wales, and the colonies and dependencies of the British crown, for the purposes herein mentioned and set forth.

Given under our hand and the seal of our Grand Holy Royal Arch Chapter at the City of Philadelphia, in the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, this Second day of February A.D., 1872, A.J. 2402.

[Seal.]

CHARLES EUGENE MEYER,
Grand High Priest.

[Seal.]

JOHN THOMSON,
Grand Secretary.

BREAKFAST.—EPPS'S COCOA.—GRATEFUL AND CONFORTING.—"By a thorough knowledge of the natural laws which govern the operations of digestion and nutrition, and by a careful application of the fine properties of well-selected cocoa, Mr. Epps has provided our breakfast tables with a delicately-flavoured beverage which may save us many heavy doctors' bills."—Civil Service Gazette. Made simply with Boiling Water or Milk. Each packet is labelled—"JAMES EPPS & Co., Homoeopathic Chemists, London."

NOTICE.

The Subscription to THE FREEMASON is now 10s. per annum, post-free, payable in advance.

Vol. I., bound in cloth	4s. 6d.
Vol. II., ditto	7s. 6d.
Vol. III., ditto	15s. od.
Vol. IV., ditto	15s. od.
Reading Cases to hold 52 numbers ...	2s. 6d.

United States of America.

THE FREEMASON is delivered free in any part of the United States for 12s. per annum, payable in advance.

NOTICE TO SUBSCRIBERS.

The Office of THE FREEMASON is now transferred to 198, FLEET-STREET, E.C. All communications for the Editor or Publisher should therefore be forwarded to that address.

Births, Marriages and Deaths.

MARRIAGE

McKENZIE—AYDEN.—On the 17th June inst., at Syon Park Cottage, Isleworth, by special licence, Bro Kenneth R. H. Mackenzie Esq., (Cryptonymus), M.D., LL.D., F.S.A., P. Cos. S., &c., to Miss Alexandrina May Alice Maud Ayden.

Answers to Correspondents.

All communications for The Freemason should be written legibly on one side of the paper only, and, if intended for insertion in the current number, must be received not later than 10 o'clock a.m. on Thursdays, unless in very special cases. The name and address of every writer must be sent to us in confidence.

P. M.—A Past Master is entitled to the prefix of "Worshipful," and is always so described in lists of P. G. Officers to distinguish him from those who have not passed the chair, and who are consequently styled "Brothers" only.

It however seems unexpedient not to say, pedantic to use the word "Worshipful" on every occasion when addressing, or alluding to, a Past Master.

The following articles and communications have been received, and will appear next week:—"Lesson and his Masonic Conversations"; Presentation to Bro. Woolf, F.S.A.; Presentation to Bro. E. J. Crow, Mus. Bac.; Obituary:—Bro. Jesse Taylor. Report of Mark Lodge, Gibraltar. Letters from J.A.C., 1013; and Sp^{ns}*r.

The Freemason,

SATURDAY, JUNE 22, 1872.

The Freemason is published on Saturday Mornings in time for the early trains.

The price of the Freemason is Twopence per week; annual subscription, 10s. (payable in advance.)

All communications, letters, &c., to be addressed to the Editor, 198, Fleet-street, E.C.

The Editor will pay careful attention to all MSS. entrusted to him, but cannot undertake to return them unless accompanied by postage stamps.

MASON'S MARKS.

I am induced to call the attention of your readers to the interesting subject of Masons' Marks, which, though it has hitherto so far, to some extent, been overlooked, both by Archaeologists and Freemasons, deserves in truth the most careful study, and the most attentive consideration. Not indeed that the matter is entirely new, or has altogether escaped the notice of architectural students. Such is not the case.

Didron and Viollet le Duc, Mr. Ramee and Geo. Godwin, the Chevalier de Silva, and our lamented brother, E. W. Shaw, have all, at different times, attempted to elucidate this confessedly obscure and difficult question.

But yet there has been so far, no regular or systematic treatment of the subject by any writer whatever, only, if I may so say, casual efforts and partial attempts to illustrate what is so patent to all Archæologists, and which yet hitherto has received no complete or satisfactory explanation.

For Masons' Marks, be it remembered, are found at this very hour, on the most ancient ecclesiastical and other buildings, in all countries of the known world, and no one, who is conversant with ecclesiastic architecture, or has patiently studied the buildings of antiquity, is, or can be ignorant of their existence.

In truth, whether it be in Egypt or the Holy Land, in Asia Minor or in India, in Mexico or Peru, in Germany or France, in Spain or Portugal, in England or Scotland, on Grecian temples, or on Roman walls, there are these Marks still to be found, as clear and deep as when first engraved on the smooth ashlar by the cunning hand of the Craftsmen of other ages, having outlived alike the effects of weather and the lapse of time.

What then do these marks represent?

They have surely been cut into that "speaking stone" for some specific purpose! Yet what is that purpose?

Is it for trade organization, or secret symbolism?

To answer these questions rightly, constitutes the chief difficulty of the case, but as I believe that they in truth represent the continuation and preservation of the building solidarities of earlier and later ages, and demonstrate unmistakably the existence of the Masonic Guilds, I have thought it well to call attention to our present state of information on the subject, which, though it be, to some extent, limited and imperfect, may yet be naturally increased and advanced by fresh collection of the marks themselves, and additional contributions of facts and data.

I would just add here, that I trust the day is not far distant, when the collections and drawings of our lamented brother, E. W. Shaw, who for years, carefully and scientifically studied the whole question of Masons' Marks from a Masonic point of view, and has made the largest collection of them in this or any other country, may be properly edited and submitted to the cognizance of the Craft.

It has frequently been asked of late years, how Masons' Marks arose, and what was their real meaning, what in truth they are intended to represent? whether they are only arbitrary signs, simply chosen for the convenience of the workmen, or whether they are to be traced in any way to some special form of alphabetical or symbolical arrangement, which was intended to represent both the outward tokens and the inner teaching of the Masonic Guilds.

Mr. Magois said, some years ago, that he believed the earliest form of Masons' Marks was alphabetical, and that some of the earliest marks he had seen, represented the "earliest forms of the Greek alphabet."

It has since been pointed out that the letters of the Etruscan and the Coptic alphabets, and what are called "Runes," or Runic letters, give us marks which are still even used by operative Masons, and which were very largely used in other days. I believe it moreover to be perfectly true, that other ancient alphabets have furnished their contingent of Masons' Marks. It has however been said by a Portuguese writer, the Chevalier de Silva, that these marks are not Masonic, had no Masonic meaning, and were made simply on account of the special customs and convenience of the Operative Masons.

He puts it in this way, "To enable the payments to be made to so large a number of workmen without mistake, to know exactly those who had the various duties assigned to them, the workmen shaped their blocks one after another, and to avoid confusion in their work, were in the habit of marking each block with a given sign, as representing their signature, so as to show how much was due to them. The use of these signs passed from father to son, and as it was usual for sons to follow the same profession as their fathers, hence the similarity of marks seen on buildings in the Provinces of Portugal. We may learn that the stone cutters of a certain locality took part in the construction of other buildings in the same style in different places, and by the date of the construction we may even find out where the workman was first employed.

Our supposition of this point carries us still further, for it shows us how many workmen of the same family have worked together on the same building at the same time.

To find out this, it is sufficient to observe the second mark added to the special sign used by them, which will always be the same for the whole family. These marks were usually a zero (Fig. 1), a triangle (Fig. 3), a disc (Fig. 2), or a small cross (Fig. 4).

Fig. 1. Fig. 2. Fig. 3. Fig. 4. Fig. 5. Fig. 6. Fig. 7.

Fig. 8. Fig. 9. Fig. 10. Fig. 11. Fig. 12. Fig. 13.

Whether the Chevalier's theory be correct or not, these statement of his are very interesting and important in themselves. Mr. Geo. Godwin, in his able paper, seems to doubt the reality of the Chevalier's conclusions, as he says, "my own opinion, expressed long ago, is, that the second mark probably belonged to the Overseer, and I see no reason to change it, although this, like other points in connection with the marks, is by no means certain.

I have met with four stones in one wall, nearly close together, each bearing two marks, and the whole eight marks different. In the south transept of York Cathedral there is a stone with three marks on it, and so there is in Strasburg Cathedral."

Without then attempting to decide where two such learned "doctors differ," I think, that the right deduction from what has been stated is simply this, that these marks have been employed from the earliest ages by members of the Operative Masons' Craft, and for whatever purpose they really were used and perpetuated, they serve at any rate to evidence the existence of a world-wide fraternity of Masons.

Whether there was in addition, any symbolical meaning or teaching attached to the marks:

which some writers have called "Masonic Hieroglyphics," I do not yet feel prepared, decisively to say.

Mr. Dove maintained that there was, and has put forth, in some able papers in the Builder, what he believes the marks were intended to convey of hidden lore, but as it always appears to me unsafe to dogmatize, especially on uncertain data, I prefer to leave this part of the subject in abeyance altogether for the present, and to wait patiently for further light and clearer evidence.

Now it is very remarkable, that, what we are accustomed as Masons to term our special Masonic Symbols, are to be found as Mason's Marks on many buildings, especially ecclesiastical, and in widely distant countries.

For instance, the "Hecapla" (Fig 5), or double triangle, or Solomon's Seal, is still to be found in Egypt, India, and Asia Minor, and on many cathedrals and churches in England, Scotland, France, Germany, Spain, and Portugal.

The Pentalpha (Fig. 6), has been found in the Holy Land, at Jerusalem, and elsewhere, in Spain and Portugal, at Stragsburg Cathedral, in Switzerland, and very largely both in Scotland and England.

The Hour Glass Mark, as it is called, (Fig. 7), is to be seen at Carthage and in Asia Minor, in Spain, in Portugal, in France and Switzerland, in England and Scotland, and specially on three of our ruined Abbies in Yorkshire, namely, Kirkstall, Roche and Fountain.

The mark (Fig. 8), like the broad arrow of our Government, is still to be traced at Jerusalem, and in Egypt, in many of our English Cathedrals, and in many ecclesiastical buildings both at home and abroad.

The mark (Fig. 9) is often seen in the Holy Land, in Germany and Portugal, in Spain and France, and in many of the Cathedrals in England and Scotland.

The simple (Fig. 10) is found almost universally, and may be discerned on the stones of Egyptian Pyramids, as on Roman walls, and may be noticed in India and Asia Minor, and in the Holy Land, at this very hour.

The (Fig. 11) foliated so to say, is often found in Spain and Portugal, Germany, France, and England.

This well-known mark (Fig. 12), is one of the most commonly used of all the Mason's Marks, while the half hour glass as it is named (Fig. 13) is constantly to be seen by students, both at home and abroad.

Mr. George Godwin mentions that the Marks attached to the names of the "Bricklayers and Tyler's Company," of date 1580, are to be found in England, France, the Tyrol, Switzerland, Sweden, Germany, Austria, Spain and Portugal, on buildings of long anterior date.

Now I need not go through the long list of Marks, as would be indeed impossible in this short and hasty communication, for their number is very great.

Perhaps we may realize somewhat, how great is really the number of Masons' Marks, if we call to mind Mr. Street's statement, in his "account of Gothic Architecture in Spain," that he had himself counted sixty marks on the stones of of the famous Church of St. Jago de Compostella, and we shall do well, I think, also to note what he further says on this subject.

The Masons seem to have worked together in large bodies, and the walls are marked in all directions with the signs which, then as now, distinguish the work of each Mason from that of his neighbour; but I have been unable (save in one or two cases) to detect the mark of the same mason on more than one work, and from this it would seem to be probable that the masons were stationary, rather than moveable in their habits."

I may observe, that this account of the Spanish Masons is entirely opposed to what are so far known of the habits of the French, German, and English Masons.

And then as I said just now, the number of Masons' Marks is very large, it does not seem to be at all difficult, to ascertain the great number of them. When attention has been called to the subject, and we are enabled carefully to study the previous collection of Masons' Marks, we shall soon be enabled to divide them into alphabetical or national, or family groups, as the case may be, and we shall be convinced, I feel persuaded, when we have all the facts of the case before us, that they after all do but serve to demonstrate the universality of the Masonic Guilds, and that there was one principle of uniformity and unity running through all the marks used by the handicraft Masons, and which served to bind them together, however widely severed, as members of a great world-wide order.

And though there may have been, as doubtless there were, local and national marks by which the various members of the different guilds were able to know and designate their own work, and that of other masons, who came at special times from other countries, to do some specific work, and who were members of other sodalities, yet, I venture to repeat, that, as a general rule, the Mason's Marks we see in the great ecclesiastical buildings in this and other countries at the present hour, whatever may have been their use as tests of work done and wages to be received, were nevertheless the outward signs and symbols of that inner bond of secrecy and organization, which seems from the earliest times to have specially distinguished all the building confraternities of the world.

And thus it was, as I believe, that, the Guilds of Freemasons in all countries, using the same marks, and recognising the same tokens, were kept together in their separate yet cosmopolitan organisation, though the changes of time and the convulsions of society, and were enabled to raise in all their beauty of ornamentation and skilfulness of execution, these mighty and noble buildings, which still exist in this and other countries, attracting both the admiration and the wonder of all, who gaze on their perfect proportions and realize both their excellence of workmanship and their unity of design.

I trust, that this, my very imperfect contribution on so interesting a subject, may draw from some abler hand a still clearer communication, which will serve to throw light on a subject, full of increasing interest to every archæological student, and to every intelligent Freemason.

A MASONIC STUDENT.

London, June 12th, 1872.

REPORTS OF MASONIC MEETINGS.

Craft Masonry.

METROPOLITAN.

MACDONALD LODGE (No. 1216).—This lodge met at the Lodge Rooms, at Head Quarters of First Surrey Rifles, Camberwell, on Wednesday, the 12th inst., when there were present:—Bros. G. Waterall, W.M.; S. Wagstaff, I.P.M.; James Stevens, P.M.; Newingham Bridges, S.W.; W. J. Messenger, J.W.; J. J. Curtis, Sec.; J. H. Hastie, S.D.; M. S. Larlham, J.D.; F. H. Cozens, Org.; T. W. Carnell, I.G.; A. S. Fletcher, Steward; also Bros. Haggart, Douulton, Hale, Allen, Gray, Harper, Ross, Fountain, Grant, &c.; and visitors, Bros. T. White, P.M. 22; G. J. Brittain, 183; John Read, P.M. 720; and W. C. Crick, P.M. 657. The lodge having been opened in the three degrees, Bros. Cozens and Douulton were raised to the M.M., Bro. E. Eldridge was passed to the second degree. The initiates proposed at former meeting were not in attendance. Several matters of Masonic business having been disposed of, amongst which was an important provision for a sustentation fund to secure repairs and additions to the elegant lodge furniture, the brethren adjourned to supper, and passed an agreeable hour in honouring the usual loyal toasts, and in promoting harmony.

HAMPSHIRE.

ALDERSHOT.—Aldershot Camp Lodge (No. 1331).—The regular meeting of this lodge was held in the Royal Hotel, on the 4th inst. Bro. J. Fenn, W.M. presided, and was supported by the following brethren:—C. Carnegie, I.P.M., and Treas.; Captain Richardson, R.E., S.W.; A. Mc Kenzie, J.W.; R. White, Sec.; J. Hanley, S.D.; Denison, J.D.; Anderson, I.G.; Swann, Org. There was a good muster of the brethren, and several visitors. The lodge was opened in form, in the first degree, and the minutes of the last regular lodge, read and confirmed. The lodge was then opened in the second degree, and Bros. Silk, and Moore, candidates for the sublime degree, were questioned respecting their knowledge of the previous degree, which, proving satisfactory, they were entrusted, and retired. The lodge was then opened in the third degree, and Bros. Silk, and Moore, were raised to that degree; Bro. Capt. Richardson presenting the working tools. The lodge was then closed down to the second and first degrees. A vote of condolence was passed, sympathising with Bro. Osmond, P.M., in the great loss he had sustained by the death of his wife. Some further business having been transacted, the lodge was closed in peace, harmony, and brotherly love.

HERTFORDSHIRE.

WALTHAM CROSS.—Gresham Lodge (No. 869).—The installation meeting of the above lodge was held at the Four Swans, Waltham-cross, on Saturday, the 8th inst., the W.M., Bro. James Forsyth, P. Prov. G. Supt. of Works, in the chair of King Solomon, who in his usual impressive manner, initiated Messrs. H. Lister, Geo. Cullum Marchant, Alfred Nicholls, and Geo. John Baker, into the Light of Freemasonry, the charge being given in an excellent manner by Bro. Hy. Muggeridge, P.M., 192. The S.W., Bro. Capt. Barnes, was then presented for installation, the unanimous votes of the brethren having designated him as the Worshipful Master for the ensuing year. The ceremony was performed by Bro. W. E. Gompertz, P.M. 862, P. Prov. G.P., Herts, in a very impressive manner, indeed it has seldom fallen to our lot to witness the ceremony of installation so ably conducted. The W.M. having been saluted in due form, the following officers were invested:—Bros. F. D. R. Copestick, as S.W.; Joseph Copestick, J.W.; John Grocott, Treas.; W. E. Gompertz, Sec.; W. C. Barnes, jun., S.D.; A. C. Wylie, J.D.; W. H. Etherington, I.G.; J. Lewis, O.; T. Chapman, Steward. A jewel was voted to the immediate P.M., for the earnest attention paid to the welfare of the lodge during his year of office. The lodge was closed, and the brethren adjourned to a capital banquet, served by Bro. Hunt, and although the inclement nature of the weather prevented the brethren from enjoying the beautiful gardens attached to the hotel, a good display of flowers and fruits gathered therein, in some measure compensated. The cloth being removed, the usual loyal and Masonic toasts were proposed by the W.M., and heartily responded to by the brethren, intermixed with some capital songs. Among the visiting brethren were:—Bros. Thos. Rac, Lodge 35, America; W. Kibble, P.M. 715; G. Bilby, P.M. 517; Cardwell, P.M. 3; R. Wright, P.M. 504; P. Prov. G.S.D., Herts; Cummings, 534; Hill, 45; C. C. Taylor, W.M. 141; G. Maby, 820; Wallinton, J.D. 860, H. Birdseye, J.W. 715; Knevill, 49; Wagstaff, P.M. 1216; H. W. Gompertz, 1364; Henry Muggeridge, P.M. 192 and 715; Sherville, 25; Dunthorne, 141. Altogether, the meeting was a most enjoyable one.

LEICESTERSHIRE.

LEICESTER.—St. John's Lodge (No. 279).—The regular monthly communication of this lodge was held at the Freemasons' Hall on Wednesday evening, the 5th inst., Bro. E. J. Crow, Mus. Bac., W.M., presiding, assisted by the following officers and brethren:—Bros. C. Stretton, P. Prov. G.R., P.M.; S. S. Partridge P. Prov. G.R., S.W.; R. W. Widdowson, J.W.; Wm. Weare, P.M., Treasurer; J. Halford, J.D.; C. E. Stretton, J.G.; and Bro. Toller, P.G.S., P.M.; Wm. Sculthorpe, W.M.; F. J. Baines, J.W.; W. B. Smith, P.G., Treasurer, members of the John O'Gaunt Lodge; and J. B. Hall, W.M.; C. J. Wilkinson, S.W.; A. Cooper, Secretary; J. H. Johnstone, P.M.; S. P. Ekin, P.M.; Rev. W. T. Fry, and W. Wilkinson, S.D., visitors from the Commercial Lodge, No. 1391. The chief feature in the business of the meeting was the passing of Bros. S. Tebbutt, and J. Edmonds, to the degree of Fellow Craft. The candidates received the explanation of the principles of the degree from the Worshipful Master, who earnestly endeavoured to impress their minds with the serious truths which are illustrated by the tools and instruments of architecture, and other symbolic emblems transmitted to us through succeeding ages, and strongly recommended to their attention the study of the liberal arts—that valuable branch of education which tends so effectively to polish and adorn the mind. On the motion of Bro. Stretton, I.P.M., the sum of fifty pounds was unanimously voted to the Masonic Hall building fund. Other unimportant business having been disposed of, the lodge was closed in regular form for the summer recess.

LEICESTER.—Commercial Lodge (No. 1391).—The fifth meeting of this new lodge was held in the Freemasons' Hall, Halford Street, on June 8th. The following officers were present:—Bros. James B. Hall, W.M.; Samuel Proby Ekins, S.W. and P.M.; John Halford, J.W.; J. H. Johnston, P.M.; W. T. Fry, M.A., Chap.; George Clifton, Sec.; Arthur Cooper, Asst. Sec.; Walter Wilkinson, S.D.; A. J. Chamberlain, J.D.; L. L. Atwood, Dir. of Cers.; C. Johnson, (P.M. 461), Org.; G. T. Cable, I.G.; Jas. H. Ward, Steward, and other members of the Lodge. The Lodge was opened in due form, when Bros. Mason, and Alfred Chamberlain, were raised to the sublime degree of Master Masons, also Bros. James George Crofts, Benjamin Moore and J. M. Brown, were passed to the degree of Fellow-Craft. A good number of visitors were present; not only the W. Masters, and the several brethren of the two sister lodges of the town, but also many brethren from Birmingham, amongst whom were Bros. W. Pringle, W.M. 925; W. Hale, P.M. 1031; W. Lapcote, S.W. 925; James Lakin, J.W. 925; T. Walker, Sec. 925; Wm. White, I.G. 925; C. D. Taylor, 925; W. G. Moore, 1031; E. T. Brewton, 1180; E. A. Webster, Sec. 1150; Benjamin Fulwood, Thomas Leavey, 925; and Thomas Corbett, 1016.

YORKSHIRE (NORTH AND EAST.)

At a special Provincial Grand Lodge of the N. and E. Ridings of Yorkshire, held in the York Lodge 236, at York, on Wednesday, 23rd May, 1872.

The Worshipful Deputy Provincial Grand Master then proposed that the following address be presented to Her Majesty:—

To the Queen's Most Excellent Majesty.
May it please your Majesty,

We, the Freemasons of the North and East Ridings of the County of York, in Provincial Grand Lodge assembled, beg leave humbly to approach your Majesty with every feeling of duty and devotion to your Majesty's Royal Throne and Person, and to offer our most heartfelt congratulations upon the recovery of His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales from his late dangerous illness.

Whilst entertaining the deepest sense of gratitude to The Almighty Disposer of all events, that, in answer to a Nation's Prayers, He has been graciously pleased to restore His Royal Highness to health and strength, we earnestly pray that He will shower down His choicest blessing, upon your Majesty and the Royal Family, and that your Majesty may be spared to reign over a loyal prosperous, and contented people.

Which was seconded by Bro. J. Malam, P.M. 1248, and carried unanimously.

The Worshipful Deputy Provincial Grand Master then proposed that the following address be presented to his Royal Highness the Prince of Wales:—

To His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales, Most Worshipful Past Grand Master of Freemasons of England.

May it please your Royal Highness,

We, the Freemasons of the North and East Ridings of the County of York, in Provincial Grand Lodge assembled, desire to offer to your Royal Highness our sincere and cordial congratulations upon your happy recovery from your late severe and protracted illness.

Whilst rendering our heartfelt thanks to the Supreme Ruler of the Universe that He has graciously listened to a Nation's Prayer, and has mercifully restored your Royal Highness to health and strength, we fervently supplicate Him that your valuable life may long be spared to be an honour and ornament to our order, and a blessing to this great Nation.

Which was seconded by W. Bro. Holland, Provincial Grand Treasurer, and carried unanimously.

The Worshipful Deputy Provincial Grand Master then proposed that these Addresses be engrossed on vellum, signed, and presented to her Majesty and His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales by the Grand Master, which was seconded by W. Bro. Rev. H. V. Palmer, M.A., Provincial Grand Chaplain, and carried unanimously.

YORKSHIRE (WEST.)

BRADFORD.—Shakespeare Lodge, (No. 1018).—The usual monthly meeting of this lodge was held at the Masonic Hall, Salem Street, on Wednesday, June 12th, at 7 o'clock. The lodge was opened in the first degree, by Bro. A. Nicholson, W.M., when the minutes of the last lodge meeting were read and confirmed. The balance sheet for the year was also passed, and other business done. Bro. B. Broughton, S.W. 302, who had kindly acceded to the request of the brethren of the Shakespeare Lodge to do so, delivered a lecture on the "principles and advantages of Freemasonry," and it was gratifying to see the interest felt by the numerous attendance of the brethren, as well as by the many visiting brethren from other lodges. The lodge-room was quite full, and we noticed amongst those present:—Bros. Bannister, P.M. 1018, P.G.S.B.; S. O. Bailey, P.M. 600, P. Prov. S. of W.; C. H. Taylor, P.M. 302, P. Prov. G.S.D.; W. Mawson, P.M. 302, P. Prov. S. of W.; Rev. Loosemore, 974; William W. Barlow, W.M. 302; R. Richardson, W.M. 974; Rev. Chute, 974; Taylor, P.M. 600; H. O. Mawson, P.M. 302; Booth, W.M. 387; and Rev. Webb, 974. Bro. B. Broughton commenced his lecture at 8.15, and was most attentively listened to by the brethren, who were seemingly spell-bound for the fifty minutes occupied by him in its delivery. The lecture (which must have taken much time and care in preparation) was most interesting and instructive, and was greatly appreciated, and applauded, by all present. At its conclusion, a vote of thanks was proposed by Bro. Jno. Ward, P.M. 600, P. Prov. G.D., in eulogistic terms, he stating that as an old Mason he had felt greatly edified and delighted by it, and was sure that every brother present shared the same sentiments. Bro. Ed. Clifton, P.M. 1018, seconded the proposition, also bearing testimony to the great advantages to be derived from such able brethren devoting the time requisite for the preparation and delivery of such lectures. Bro. Broughton, in thanking the brethren for their kindly feeling displayed towards him, took occasion to state that he had been actuated by a desire to stimulate others to imitate him in doing what they could for their respective lodges; and that should his address have that effect, he should feel amply repaid for the time he had devoted to the subject. The brethren afterwards adjourned to their refreshment room, on the invitation of Bro. A. Nicholson, the W.M., and there partook of a very récherché supper provided for them. The W.M. presided, and went through the duties devolving upon him at the festive board, as he had done those of the Lodge, in a very efficient and laudable manner. He was supported on his right by the Rev. Bros. Loosemore, and Chute, 974; and Bros. H. O. Mawson, P.M. 302; Henry Ward, P.M. 1018; B. Broughton, S.W. 302; W. Wroe, P.M. 1018; and on his left by Bros. Edward Clifton, P.M. 1018; William W. Barlow, W.M. 302; R. Richardson, W.M.; Pentalpha, 974; W. Mawson, P.M. 302, P. Prov. S. of W.; and C. H. Taylor, P.M. 302, P. Prov. G.S.D. The usual loyal and Masonic toasts were drunk, including that of the Visiting Brethren, coupled with the names of Bros. William W. Barlow, W.M. 302; R. Richardson, W.M. 974; and B. Broughton, S.W. 302; each of whom respectively, felicitously responded. At eleven o'clock the proceedings of this most enjoyable evening were brought to a close, by the W.M. giving the Tyler's toast, and we can congratulate this young, but flourishing and united lodge on its great prosperity.

Royal Arch.

CHANNEL ISLANDS.

JERSEY.—Césarée Chapter (No. 590).—The anniversary convocation of this chapter was held at the Masonic Temple, on Thursday, the 13th inst. Comp. Jn. Oatley, M.E.Z. opened the chapter, assisted by Comps. A. Viel, H.; Ph. Binet, P.Z. as J.; A. Schmitt, P.Z., P.G.S.E., E. &c. Amongst the visitors, we noticed Comps. P. N. Benzam, P.Z. 244; W. Adams, P.Z. 244. After the confirmation of the minutes, a conclave of Installed First Principals was formed under the the direction of Comp. A. Schmitt, assisted by Comps. Jn. Oatley, Adams, Benham, W. H. Manuel, and Ph. Binet, when Comp. A. Viel was installed in due form as M.E.Z., and Comp. J. Oatley, P.Z., was inducted into the chair of J. On the re-admission of the Companions, the S.E. invested the following Companions as officers for the year ensuing, viz., G. J. Renouf, N.; W. T. Carrington, P.S.; Ph. Binet, 1st A.S.; Jn. Wakeham, 2nd A.S.; Jn. J. Durell, P.Z., Treas.; D. Le Geyt, Ast. S.E.; H. Du Jardin, Jan.; Comp. Jos. Gregg's, installation as H. was deferred to Thursday, next, owing to his unavoidable absence. The annual report of Audit Committee was presented by the S.E., which was approved. Moved by the S.E., seconded by Comp. J. Oatley, and resolved unanimously; that another donation of £5 5s. be granted to Royal Masonic Institution for Boys. On the motion of Comp. A. Schmitt, seconded by Comp. J. Oatley, the following resolution was adopted unanimously and by acclamation, viz:—Considering that our talented Bro. and Comp. Wm. J. Hughan, is one of the most indefatigable and efficient expounders of the intrinsic value of our institution by gathering and dissecting the still remaining scattered Masonic records with that profundity of sound critical analysis which has rendered him universally known in the literary Masonic world, both in Europe and America. Considering that his leisure time is devoted to Masonic researches and historical essays which have great and just claims to our consideration. Considering also, that the eminent services of that laborious brother in disseminating light, truth and knowledge of our order—his unwearied exertions at all times to uphold by example and by word the dignity, prestige, and importance of our ancient fraternity as well as to promote the welfare of the Craft at large, justly and deservedly entitle him to some acknowledgement of our grateful and affectionate regard and esteem. We therefore, cordially propose, that the dignity of an Honorary member of this chapter be conferred upon our distinguished and worthy Brother and Companion, W. J. Hughan, of Truro, Cornwall. All business being concluded, the chapter was closed in due form, and the Companions adjourned to refreshments, and a most agreeable evening was spent, the toast of the two Hon. Members, Dr. H. Hopkins, and W. J. Hughan, was not forgotten.

ISLE OF MAN.

DOUGLAS.—Athole Chapter, (No. 1004).—The annual installation ceremony in connection with the Royal Arch Chapter of the Athole Lodge, 1004, took place on Tuesday, 2nd inst., at four o'clock. The Principals installed were Comps. R. Tuton, Z.; Webb, H.; and J. J. Harwood, J., the retiring Principal being Comp. H. P. Mayle, P.Z. G. M. Lofthouse, P.Z., acted as the Installing Master of the three Principals, and did his work in the admirable letter perfect style for which he is distinguished amongst local Masons. He was ably assisted by Comps. E. W. Stocker, P.Z. of Southport Chapter, 613; and H. P. Mayle, P.Z. of the Athole Chapter. At the conclusion of the ceremony of installation, the newly-installed first principal exalted Bro. J. Lambert into Royal Arch Masonry, Comp. W. Harris ably fulfilling the office of P.S., and G. M. Lofthouse, P.Z., giving the concluding lecture in a most impressive manner. The newly-invested officers of the chapter were Comps. G. C. Heron, P.S.; T. Handley, S.E. and Treas.; J. Berrill, S.N.; and J. Lanaghan, Janitor. The banquet took place the same evening at the Victoria Hotel, where a most elegant repast was prepared for the companions by the proprietor, Mr. T. Martin. After the usual loyal and Masonic toasts were given, Comp. E. W. Stocker, P.Z., replying for the "Visitors," took occasion to remark upon the praiseworthy efficiency displayed by all who had taken prominent part in the ceremony of the evening, making particular mention of the exaltation ceremony, performed by the newly-installed Z., Comp. R. Tuton, as being something unusual and noteworthy, and as speaking well for his zeal and alacrity in mastering the duties of his office. Altogether a most enjoyable evening was spent by the companions of the Chapter; the proceedings were conducted in such a manner as to warrant a belief in the steady and sure advance of the principles of the Masonic order in Douglas.

Mark Masonry.

KENT.

DOVER.—Dover and Cinque Ports Lodge (No. 152.)—For some years past Freemasonry has been advancing with great rapidity in Dover, and on Thursday afternoon a Mark Masters' Lodge (Dover and Cinque Ports, No. 152), was inaugurated with much success at Northumberland House, the residence of Bro. W. Forster. There were present V.W. Bro. Binckes, G.M.S., P.G.J.W.; and Bros. Burgess, 7; Finch, 129; Stanley, 84; Fuhr, 129; G. Page, 129; Le Forest, 75; Captain Athorpe, R.E. 86; Osment, Fairthough, W.M., 147; G. J. Smith, 129; Stretch, 84; Forster, 199; T. A. Terson, 199; Wilson, 199; Baker, 199; Prebble, 1,208; Elms, 199; Igglesden, 199; T. W. Fry, 199; Tucker, Evans, 1,096; Grunwald, 199; and King, 199. The consecration was most admirably performed by Bro. Binckes, who also advanced twelve brethren to the degree of M.M.M. Bro. Fairthough was installed as W.M. of the Cinque Ports Lodge, and he appointed the following brethren as his officers:—Bros. Stanley, S.W.; Osment, J.W.; Magrath, M.O.; Fuhr, S.O.; Forster, Registrar of Marks and Treasurer; T. A. Terson, Hon. Secretary and S.D.; Wilson, J.D.; Baker, D.S.; and King, Tyler. The brethren then adjourned to the Harp Hotel, where a magnificent banquet was prepared by Bro. Fry. The whole affair was a most brilliant success, mainly through the exertions of Bros. T. A. Terson, and Forster, who, we are pleased to observe, are elected to the respective offices of Secretary and Treasurer. Thanks are due to Bro. Forster for the use of his drawing-room, which was handsomely decorated for the occasion. Meetings will be held monthly. From twenty to thirty members have already been enrolled, and we feel confident that the lodge will shortly become one of the most flourishing and influential in the country.

Red Cross of Constantine.

PREMIER CONCLAVE OF ENGLAND.—The anniversary assembly of this conclave was held at Freemasons Tavern, on the 3rd inst., and was well attended. Sir Knt. Angelo J. Lewis, M.A., the M.P.S. presided, and was supported by Sir Knts. W. E. Gumbleton, J.P. G.H.C.; Revd. C. W. Spencer Stanhope, W. H. Hubbard, J. G. Marsh, and other distinguished members of the order. After the usual ballot, Bro. Percival Reginald Hobson was installed as a Knight of this ancient branch of chivalry, and proclaimed accordingly, the historical oration being given by the High Prelate, Rev. C. W. Spencer Stanhope. The M.P.S. then called upon Sir Knt. Cubitt, P.M.P.S. to present Sir Knt. G. Kenning, M.P.S. Elect, for enthronement, and the usual questions having been asked and satisfactorily responded, to the M.P.S. Elect was enthroned by his predecessor, Sir Knt. Lewis in a very able manner. Sir Knt. Moss was then inducted into the chair of Viceroy, to which he had been elected—and the officers were invested as follows: Sir Knts. E. Sillifant, S.G.; G. A. Taylor, J.G.; J. W. Barrett, H.G.; T. Cubitt, P.M.P.S., Treas.; R. W. Little, P.M.P.S., Rec.; T. B. Yeoman, H.P.; Rev. C. W. Spencer Stanhope, Orator; H. Parker, Org.; G. S. Haines, S.B.; J. S. Banning, H.; J. Gilbert, S. The Aides being Sir Knt. R. S. Lines, and W.H. Scott. The resignation of Ex-Sheriff Jones, who has been a member of the conclave since 1865, was then announced, and received with great regret—but as the worthy knight has recently purchased an estate in Wales he felt unable to continue his engagements in Metropolitan Masonry. The conclave was then closed, and the knights sat down to a banquet, which did the utmost credit to Bro. Francatelli, as the manager of the Freemasons' Tavern. The viands were extremely good, and also well served—the wines with the exception of the hock, were very fair indeed, and in some instances really excellent—altogether the banquet was a great success. After the removal of the cloth, Sir Knt. John Dyer, whose fine voice is much appreciated by the conclave, sang the "National Anthem" accompanied by Sir Knt. Parker, on the piano-forte, all the knights of course upstanding. Lord Bective's health was warmly received, as was also the toast of the Grand Council, for which Sir Knt. Hubbard responded. The health of the popular M.P.S. was next given, and in acknowledging the toast Sir Knt. Kenning gracefully alluded to the services of his predecessor in the chair, adding that he had great pleasure in placing upon the breast of Sir Knt. Lewis that testimony of goodwill which he so amply merited (cheers), and he further said, that the Past Sovereign's Jewel which now became the appanage of Sir Knt. Lewis, would be supplemented by the gift of a signet ring, or locket, as might be most agreeable, to that worthy knight. Sir Knight Lewis rose amidst great applause, and, although disclaiming any special merit for having learned his work, and endeavoured to do his duty, felt, nevertheless, that the kind feeling shown towards him by the conclave, would be a stimulus to greater exertions for the benefit of their beloved order, in the welfare of which he took a deep and lasting interest. He exhorted the officers to make themselves thoroughly acquainted with the ritual, and to go forward, hand-in-hand, in perfecting the aims of christian chivalry, and he hoped that out of the two thousand members now upon their rapidly increasing roll, none would be found to prove recreant to their vows, or backsliders from those great principles which were at once the foundation and glory of the whole Masonic structure. (Immense applause.) The health of Sir Knt. Hobson was then given from the chair, in a neat and effective speech, and the newly-installed companion expressed his thanks in cordial terms, for the fraternal greeting he had received. Sir Knt. Hobson afterwards sang a capital hunting song, with a spirit-stirring chorus. Sir Knt. Marsh responded for the Past Sovereigns, of whom five were present, and Sir Knt. J. Read, Viceroy of the Roman Eagle Conclave, No. 6, replied for the visitors. The health of the officers was then drunk with enthusiasm, and Sir Knts. Moss, Sillifant, Barrett, Yeoman, and Haines, returned thanks. The musical arrangements of the meeting were entrusted to Sir Knt. Henry Parker, who conducted them in his usual efficient manner, and it is only just to add, that the harmony of the evening was greatly indebted to the vocal exertions of Sir Knts. Moss, Marsh, Dyer, Hobson, and other obliging companions. The Sentinel's toast having been given, the knights separated, fully satisfied with the proceedings attendant upon their very happy re-union.

Ancient and Accepted Rite.

SUFFOLK.

IPSWICH.—Victoria Chapter Rose & H.R.D.M.—A special meeting of this chapter was held at the Masonic Hall, Ipswich, on Friday, the 7th inst., for the purpose of installing Bro. the Rev. C. Gordon Browne, B.A., of Godmanchester, as also to present Ill. Bro. the Rev. R. N. Sanderson, 30°, M.A., P.M.W.S., with a jewel for his services to the chapter, and to receive a deputation from the Supreme Council, 33°. The meeting was called for seven, but it was nearly eight o'clock before sufficient brethren had mustered to open chapter. The want of punctuality on the part of the E. and P.P. was freely commented upon. Amongst those present were:— Ill. Bros. Captain N. G. Philips, 33°, L.G.C., S.G.C.; Rev. R. N. Sanderson, 33°, P.M.W.S.; Emra Holmes, 31°; and Ex. Bros. W. T. Westgate, M.W.S.; C. T. Townsend, P.M.W.S.; P. Cornell, R.; G. Cresswell, &c. The chapter being opened, and Bro. the Rev. Gordon Browne having previously signed the Golden Book, received the preliminary degree in an adjoining chamber; he was received, obligated I.T.N.O. T.H.A.U.T., installed and perfected Knight of the Pelican and Eagle, and Sovereign Prince Rose Croix. The beautiful ceremony, which only wanted the addition of music, and the presence of members to make it truly imposing, was performed by Ill. Bro. Sanderson, with his usual skill and ability, the Most Ill. L.G.C. sealing the neophyte with the seal of Perfection. Bro. Westgate then proceeded to present Ill. Bro. Sanderson with the handsome gold jewel of a P.M.W.S., (supplied by Bro. George Kenning,) in the name of the chapter, speaking in very complimentary terms of his services in the higher degrees. Bro. Sanderson in acknowledging the gift said, he should be proud to wear it whenever he might do so, not as a token of his own merits, but as an evidence of the goodwill of the E. and P. Princes who formed the chapter. Ill. Bro. Emra Holmes gave notice that at the next meeting of the chapter he should move that the fee for installation and perfection should be raised to £6 6s., which should include clothing to be provided by the Chapter. He proposed this because he had observed a great want of uniformity in the clothing of the brethren, which could only be secured by adopting the course he suggested. The third point having been given, and the newly perfected brother received into the mystic circle, the excellent brethren retired to the adjourned dining-hall, where an elegant supper was served. In responding to the toast of the newly-installed Prince, Bro. Browne spoke in glowing terms of the beautiful ceremony he had just witnessed, expressing his belief, that Masonry could never have been the creation of man, but, to his mind, an inspiration direct from above. A most harmonious evening was spent.

Original Correspondence.

[The following arrived too late for insertion in our last issue.

IPSWICH, June 13, 1872.

DEAR SIR AND VERY EXCELLENT BROTHER,—

Though I think I might have been consulted prior to the publication of a correspondence, I certainly intended to be private, however much you may justly have implied the contrary. I must defer to your superior experience, as you deem such a course desirable for the benefit of Freemasonry in general, yet I should myself have been tempted to fear it would tend rather to increase "unpleasantness," if such exists between the two orders. There are, however, one or two points in your letter I feel bound to take up in justification of myself, and of an order to which several brethren of the highest Craft and other rank belong.

You assert that you "cannot understand how brethren, who have sworn allegiance to the Grand Lodge of Mark Masters, can take a part in the propagation of a rite outside her pale, consistently with their obligation." Surely the following considerations can lead to but one conclusion. If the Grand Mark Lodge enter into a treaty with the Grand Lodge of the Royal Ark Mariners, if the Supreme Grand Commander of the latter order is made a Deacon in Grand Lodge of the former, then I argue the Grand Mark Lodge most assuredly recognises the existence of the R. A. Mariners, as an order possessing a jurisdiction, legitimate, yet separate from her own. As a consequence, consistency with sworn allegiance, cannot be imputed to myself or others, who have taken the Ark Mariner's Degree; still further, if I add the assertion that never, either in receiving or conferring the degree, have I heard or suffered the powers and privileges of the Mark to be questioned or infringed.

As to the sufficiency of Bro. Moreton Edwards' authority to confer the degree, that of course is a question it would be presumptuous in me to discuss, I leave the vindication of his sovereignty to the Supreme Grand Commander, and the Grand Lodge of R.A.M., and I feel confident that this clause of your reply will be answered by an abler pen than mine own. I will merely refer you, for information on this point, to Bro. E. H. Finney, the Dep. G. C., and J. O. Oxland, the Grand Senior Warden.

Your sentiments as to the multiplication of Grand Lodges, I fully endorse, and I only hope the motion of Bro. Edwards, with the amendment of Bro. Stevens in Grand Mark Lodge, at which I was present, and a report of which appears in the Freemason of June 8th, will lead to the amalgamation of the two degrees, an issue which I most earnestly desire, and as far as can lie in my power, most strenuously strive to further.

Lastly, I would add, that my first letter was addressed to you more than a month ago, before I became aware that the Treaty which I enclose was, if not a dead letter, at all events not entirely adhered to. Had subsequent events not come to my knowledge, I might have hesitated longer in venturing to address you, but let me again assure you, it was written in no spirit of animosity, (such I gratefully see you do not impute to me,) but merely from an over anxious zeal perhaps to do the duties of an office entrusted to me, and by the request of my higher officers.

I can only hope that the publicity you have given to this correspondence, a publicity I should have been the last to court, far from increasing the unnecessary bickering and unpleasantness of which you speak may tend to further the interests of the two Orders, and to hasten the time when they shall both be worked under one jurisdiction, that of the M.W. Grand Mark Master Mason. For I cannot agree with some of my own chiefs, (to whom you refer I know not,) that the Ark ceremonial is unworthy of a name, but rather believe it would be a pity that a degree, doubtless of antiquity, and certainly widely prevailing abroad, should be entirely lost.

Assuring you of my grateful appreciation of the kind sentiments you express towards me, and of the courtesy you have displayed in your reply to what may have appeared a presumptuous letter of one so much your junior.

I have the honour to be, Dear Sir and Very Excellent Brother, yours fraternally,

CHRIS. V. CHILDE,

I.G. of R.A.M., Suffolk.

To Bro. Emra Holmes.

PICNIC OF THE HARMONIC LODGE, (No. 216.)

The annual "out" of this highly prosperous and excellent lodge took place on Thursday, the 13th inst., and, in every respect, eclipses all former excursions in connection with it. Good weather and a merry company foreshadowed a pleasant trip, and the result was fully equal to the most sanguine expectant.

By the kindness of Mr. J. O. Binger, three saloon carriages were placed at the disposal of the party on crossing to Birkenhead, and on their arrival at Chester the pic-nickers were conveyed by stage carriages, to the grounds of the Marquis of Westminster, Eaton Park, across the celebrated Iron Bridge, and subsequently to the quiet little village of Aldford. Here, an excellent dinner was provided by Mr. and Mrs. White, of the Grosvenor Arms, Bro. J. Jones, W.M., occupying the chair, and the vice-chair was occupied by Bro. Beesley, S.W.

After the usual loyal and patriotic toasts, Bro. Pickering, P.J.G.D., proposed, in happy terms, "Success to the Harmonic Lodge," which was acknowledged in eloquent terms by the W.M.

The toast of the "Past Masters" was given by Bro. Fowler, and responded to by Bros. McKune and Skeaf.

Bro. G. Rigby Smith, with his usual suavity, proposed the health of "the Marquis of Westminster," referring to the kindness which he had displayed that day, in allowing the party to visit his house and grounds.

The toast was drunk in bumpers; and in reply, Mr. Parsonage said the Marquis was always glad to see parties such as that, enjoy themselves thoroughly, and he kindly allowed them the privilege of seeing over the house and gardens.

"The Ladies" was given in appropriate terms by Bro. Councillor D. Campbell, which was acknowledged by Bro. Ardran.

Dancing afterwards commenced to the strains of the Chester quadrille band, and after an ample tea and cold collation, the party returned by the same route to Liverpool, were they arrived shortly before 10 o'clock, every one being delighted with the excursion, which had passed off without a single hitch.

Special credit is due to Bro. Moore, of No. 516, who acted as Secretary to the pic-nic committee.

GRAND FANCY FAIR IN LIVERPOOL.

Charity is the very essence of all true Masonry, and therefore the intelligence that the splendid sum of £20,000 has been realised by the recent fancy fair in Sefton Park, on behalf of the Southern Hospital, must rejoice the hearts of the whole body fraternal throughout the world. A noble institution—because it helps the helpless, and gives succour to the needy—has thus been greatly enriched, and the people of Liverpool deserve immense credit for thus excelling all former efforts in a similar way. The fair in Prince's Park, in 1849, on behalf of the three principal institutions, realised upwards of £9,000; that on behalf of the Stanley Hospital, in Stanley Park, two years ago, nearly £6,000; which might have been greatly increased if the committee had not been burdened with the expenditure resulting from one or two mismanaged departments; but now, through the presence of royalty, the untiring zeal of the ladies, an energetic and enterprising executive and the cordial support of every class of the community, the full proceeds of the third great Liverpool fancy fair, have reached an amount which it will be difficult to exceed in any future undertaking of a similar kind. It may in passing be interesting to note that the very first monetary contribution towards this grand total were made by Dr. Costine, and Bro. Dr. Sheldon, both of the Stanley Hospital, who each sent £10 10s., with their warmest wishes for the success of the scheme. The actual receipts amounted to £25,053, and so well were things managed, and so liberal the assistance given by the public, that the expenses reached only £5,000, of which about half was for tents, booths, stands, &c. The admission to the park brought £5,967; the bazaar, £12,134; the flower show, £1,083; the sports, amusements, &c., £1,321; and the refreshments, £3,243. Bro. Pearson (the Mayor), Mr. E. Lawrence, and Bro. Councillor Campbell, with the others workers, of both sexes, have all done nobly, and they deserve the hearty thanks of the whole community for their exertions on behalf of the sacred cause of charity.

THE LONDON AND MIDDLESEX ARCHÆOLOGICAL SOCIETY.

The last evening meeting of the session was held at the University College on Monday, 17th inst., Mr. J. W. Butterworth, F.S.A., in the chair. There was a large attendance of members.

The following interesting objects were sent for exhibition.

By the Clockmakers' Company, through Mr. Deputy Atkins, their valuable collection of watches and watch movements, several silver cups and tankards, also the original charter of incorporation granted by King Charles I., 22nd August, 1631, beautifully emblazoned, having a portrait of the king in full coronation robes in the right-hand corner; the seal is almost perfect. The original grant of arms, conceded to them 31st January, 1672, and their bye-laws; ordinances bearing the signatures and seals of Thomas, Lord Coventry, Lord Keeper of the Great Seal; Sir Thomas Richardson, Knight, Lord Chief Justice of the King's Bench, and Sir Robert Heath, Knight, Lord Chief Justice of the Common Pleas.

By Bro. G. Lambert, F.S.A.: Several examples of early watches, in an excellent state of preservation.

By Sheriff Bro. Sir John Bennett: The perfection of clockwork, two piping bullfinches.

By Mr. J. G. Waller: A plan of Bruges, taken by Marcus Gerardus in 1562, the architectural details of which being so minute and clear, that the principal buildings are seen as in a photograph.

By Mr. Frank A. Burt: A black cinerary urn, which, when found, contained ashes; the other, a gutlurum, or water-jug of a light-coloured ware.

Mr. J. E. Price, F.S.A., the honorary director, in the course of some remarks upon the interest attached to this discovery, stated that they were found, at a depth of twenty feet, in King Edward-street, formerly called Butcher Hall-lane, and were enclosed by red tiles, indicating a Roman tile entombment, and, although now within the City limits, must, when deposited, have been extra-mural. In 1842, a large quantity of Samian pottery fragments of urns, &c., were found at this precise spot, near to a chalk wall at least five feet thick, doubtless a portion of one of London's mediæval walls.

Mr. W. H. Overall, F.S.A., read a paper upon the history of the Clockmakers' Company, and the early art of clock and watchmaking, and described the charter, grant of arms, &c., belonging to the company.

Bro. G. Lambert, F.S.A., read a paper upon the several methods used by the ancients for measuring time.

Mr. Deputy Atkins pointed out some of the most curious specimens exhibited by the Clockmakers' Company.

A vote of thanks was passed to the Clockmakers' Company, to Bro. Sir John Bennett, and the several gentlemen who had contributed to the interest of the meeting.

A special vote of thanks was passed to the honorary director (Mr. J. E. Price, F.S.A.), for the continued interest taken by him to make these meetings not only successful, but instructive, and, at the same time, entertaining.

ANDERSON'S BOOK OF CONSTITUTIONS.

BY BRO. LEON HYNEMAN.

We deem it a most unfortunate omission in Bro. James Anderson, not giving to the world, in his 1723 Book of Constitutions, some information in regard to the formation of the London Grand Lodge, in 1717. His omission to do so, may cause many persons to doubt the brief, incomplete and insufficient statement, published in 1738.

It has, to say at least, a suspicious look, as if the whole story was fabricated, and that no such organization took place in 1717. There is not a word said in relation to it in the 1723 publication, no reference to it whatever, no allusion to any such body having been formed in any sense, and yet six years had passed from that time, according to his statement in 1738, when the 1723 Book of Constitutions was published. It is reasonable to believe that if such an event had taken place, and in which he must have been a prominent actor, that Anderson would not have mentioned it in his 1723 Book of Constitutions. In our opinion, the story told in 1738 is a made-up tale, and an imperfectly told one, considering it took twenty-one years to manufacture it. The 1717 organization is and has been universally received by the Masonic Fraternity, and we do not remember ever having seen it questioned, although Anderson is the only authority, no other writer of that period, so far as we know, has noticed such an event as having taken place, and Anderson, only, as we have stated, twenty-one years afterwards.

An event so important as the inauguration of a new Grand Lodge on the revival of the fraternity, as it is asserted, and all the lodges except four had died out, ought certainly to have been mentioned by Anderson in this first book he published six years afterwards, especially as he was one of the originators, was a member of the Grand Lodge, reports himself as Master of a Lodge, and author of the Book of Constitutions.

The story of the formation of the new Grand Lodge is briefly told, and remarkable for its brevity: In the Convention, if it may be so called, "the oldest Master Mason" was put in the chair. He was Master of a Lodge. Anderson does not give his name, and hence, the world of Masons must ever remain in darkness in regard to the name of that mythical person, the oldest Master Mason. At the head of the list of the twenty Lodges whose Masters and Wardens signed their names to the "Approbation" to the Book of Constitutions, 1723 edition, is the name of Thomas Morris, senior Master. If he was that oldest Master Mason (now the Master of a Lodge) why did he not give his name, particularly as in his brief report in 1738 he reports the above quotations twice in the same way, parentheses included. Anderson could not have forgotten the name in the interval between the two publications. But it is only an inference that he may have been that oldest Master Mason. That oldest Master Mason may have died in the interim between 1717 and 1723.

In that pretended organization of a Grand Lodge, Anderson not only puts him in the chair in the Convention, but at the constituting of the Grand Lodge, which took place "before dinner," and, after he had "proposed a list of proper candidates," "Mr. Anthony Sayer, Gentleman," was elected "Grand Master of Masons, who being forthwith invested with the Badges of office and power by the said Oldest Master, and installed, was duly congratulated by the assembly, who payed him the Homage." It would seem that a person occupying such an important position, on such a momentous occasion, and being the chief actor throughout, that his name ought to have been given to the world as a matter of public and Masonic history. To leave posterity in doubt as to who that prominent individual was, and to publish the name of the person elected Grand Master, who was only a gentleman, does not speak well for Bro. Anderson's Masonic taste nor for his literary reputation. If that dinner was eaten at the "Goose and Gridiron Alehouse," where the Assembly held its meeting, and the aforesaid transactions took place, it might be inferred that the Rev. Brother had imbibed to freely, or the exhalations from the malt, or more potent liquid, had rendered his senses oblivious as to the transactions before dinner, and Rip Van Winkle like, his memory faintly came back to him twenty-one years afterwards, and he could only recollect partly the events of that important and august occasion; but the name of that oldest Master Mason, the life and soul of that whole assembly, had gone out of his memory altogether, never to be recalled. Were there no records to refer to. No minutes kept in which the name of that important personage, the most prominent actor throughout those interesting events, appeared? We make these inquiries to ascertain if there are any records existing of that doubtful movement; because, in all our readings we have not seen any mention of the name of the distinguished Brother who occupied the chair, and invested the Gentleman, elected Grand Master of Masons, with the badges of office and installed him into the chair of King Solomon.

We have carefully examined the two Books of Constitutions, the 1723 and 1738 editions, of which the Rev. James Anderson claimed to be the author, and we unhesitatingly assert, notwithstanding the universal credence of the Masonic fraternity and faith in Anderson's Books of Constitutions as of the highest Masonic authority, that no more contradictory and unreliable books of authority were ever published by any institution. We include in our statement, not only the history, which few Masons, read but the ancient charges, which are the accepted gospels of the Masonic Fraternity in all lands where Freemasons are found. It has been frequently said that Freemasons generally are credulous, and accept as true all the myths, traditional stories, symbols and their illustrations, as veritable truths, and this not only applies to the great masses who seldom read and less seldom think of the import of Masonic teachings, and whose Masonry is only and best displayed at the festive board, but applies equally to a great number who do read and claim to be intelligent, as well as teachers, and many authors of books on Freemasonry. We have yet to see a Masonic book written in the United States, that is not in the main, a mere compilation of the thoughts of previous writers with their fabulous myths and traditions incorporated, as if these were beyond question or criticism. Anderson, Webb, Cross and Oliver, have furnished generally the matter out of which recent writers make books on Masonry, but all are written in the same train of thought, without manifesting any independence of mind or original conceptions. A searching investigation as to the truth of any past statement is very seldom entered upon. Investigation, comparison, analysis, seem to be out of the province of Masonic study, and yet "false facts," as Anderson, the great falsifier has it, anachronisms and errors of every kind, intentional to mislead, abound in all of the past and recent works on Masonry. Freemasonry needs earnest, close and critical investigators, such as Bro. Hughan, of England, Findel of Leipzig, and a few others, to establish a Masonic Literature to comport with our pretensions as an institution of science, and to conform and correspond to the truly excellent and humanizing principles upon which Freemasonry is founded.—Voice of Masonry.

THE GRACES OF THE CRAFT.

My muse shall sing no sanguin'd warrior's name;—
Shall praise no red field's melancholy fame;—
Bloodless the victories shall be—I sing,
Tales of good deeds shall wake my tuneful string.
No gloomy dirge;—but my bright theme shall be
The glory of the Ancient Craft!—Freemasonry!
O Brotherhood of Love—of faithful trust—
Lock that will hold fast hearts, and never rust;
Hands that shall never fail the weak to guard,
And hearts unto the woe-worn never hard;—
Ever the drooping one to raise and cheer,
Or weeping stand beside his solemn bier;—
With ear awake to sorrow's feeblest cry,
And feet that never pass the fallen by.
Of old, Three Graces had the highest praise,
Among the scions of the old world's race;—
To-day the Craft herself with triple crown
Of Charities is graced—to her renown.
One day, where bosky dells gem Surrey's glades,
Where trees ancestral fling their cooling shades—
I passed along—and, as I passed beheld
The Home which Masonry hath built for old;
When tottering age may gently dwell in peace,
Till death from all Earth's sorrows gives release.
Never may Want unto his threshold come;
But easeful rest for ever glads his home:
He softly glides adown life's later way,
And feels no ill, save nature's calm decay.
A second time I journey'd, anear the city's towers,
And saw a band of maidens fair, at play among the flowers,
Each gaily clad in garments bright, of heaven's own spotless hue,
And in the little darlings' eyes—the height of joy shone through.
These were the tender orphans of our brothers who have gone,
From the Earth unto the presence of the Great and Mighty one;
And each of these sweet children—in the Order of her Sire
Finds home, and friends, and every joy, that mortal can desire;
In comfort dwells—neath anxious care—with those who train the mind,
Amid the paths of learning, the best delights to find.
The third Grace of the ancient Craft, the Boys'
School then I found,
Northward by green and pleasant lanes, where flowery meads abound.
With joy and with an honest pride, may swell the Mason's heart;
As he looks upon the lofty pile—that gem of builder's art!
And higher yet his pride may grow, when by love it was, he knows,
That for orphan sons of Brothers gone, the noble fabric rose.
These children of the Brotherhood, throughout each happy day—
In meet proportion give the hours, to work or healthful play;
On Virgil's stately steps they pore, or Schiller's sounding song,
With earnest zeal they triumph o'er old Euclid hated long:
Or where the sports are held, they strive, in many a sturdy game,
The muscle and the limb to train, and nerve the supple frame;
That when to age mature they come, their healthy minds may be,
In healthy bodies fitly framed, from puny weakness free.
I could prolong my song for aye—my heart is bound to speak,
E'en though my tongue be feeble, and although my words be weak;
For Brother's love—the Mason's Crown—is heav'n's best gift to man,
The gift that more than all can cheer this life's fast fleeting span.
So let the Good Craft flourish, with its love and truth sublime,
As long as our own land endures—unto the end of time.

J. B.

TABLE OF CONTENTS

Aids to Study.....	395
Bro. Lessing and his Conversations.....	396
Dedication of a Masonic Hall at Haverfordwest	396
CORRESPONDENCE:—
A Pleasant Day with the Freemasons	397
Apex	397
Israelitism and Freemasonry	397
The Royal Ark Mariners Degree	397
Masonic Progress	398
CRAFT MASONRY:—
Metropolitan	399
Provincial	399
ROYAL ARCH:—
Provincial	400
MARK MASONRY:—
Provincial	401
Presentation to Bro Richard Wool	401
The Grand Master Mason of Scotland	402
Masonic Meetings for next week... ..	402
Advertisements.....	393, 394, 402, 403, 404

AIDS TO STUDY.

BY BRO. WM. CARPENTER P.M. & P.Z. 717.

VII.

The division of history into ancient and modern is purely arbitrary; and, hence different writers have taken a different epoch at which to make the division. The more general division is placed at the Nativity of Christ, but some writers include in ancient history all the events to the overthrow of the Western Empire by the "barbarians." Others do not begin what they term modern history, until the time of Clovis's victory over the Romans, and the foundation of the French Monarchy. There are others, again, who bring down ancient history so far as the reign of Charlemagne, while they designate the period between that epoch, and the capture of Constantinople by the Turks, under Mahomet II., the Middle Ages, whence, to the present time, they reckon their modern history.

History, as a whole, is divided into three great periods, (1), from the Creation to the Deluge, which age is reckoned uncertain, because we have only the abridged account given of it in the writings of Moses. (2), From the Deluge to the first Olympiad, (A.M. 3228; B.C. 776), which, from the multitude of feigned stories related of it in profane history, is called the Fabulous Age. (3), From the first Olympiad to our own times is denominated Historical; because the actions performed in it are recorded by writers of strict veracity.

Our knowledge of very early history, excepting what we find in the writings of Moses, which relate to the Hebrews only, and notice other people only as far as they are brought into relation with them, is very scant and imperfect. The prevalence of national vanity, more or less, induced the suppression of every thing important to other peoples; and the Greeks, perhaps, had more of it than any other people. They despised all foreign history, as is evident, from the fact of their never adverting to it, further than was unavoidable for the elucidation of the subject in hand; and even then it seems rather introduced to adorn and operate as a foil to their own character, than to transmit useful information to posterity. Their treatment of the Persian records, when they became masters of that empire, is a demonstration that they chose rather to consign the remembrance of that once powerful monarchy to oblivion, than to have it stand as a competitor with themselves in the annals of fame. No Grecian historian, that we know of, ever consulted those records with a view to their continuation and completion. After being for a time neglected, they were finally destroyed. It is but just, however, to exempt from this general censure of the Greeks, Eratosthenes, Hecataeus, Abderus, and Menander the Ephesian, whose good sense got the better of their national prejudices. Certain foreigners, also, as Berosus of Babylon, Manetho the Egyptian, and one or two others, were, at different periods, encouraged to write the histories of their respective countries, for the use of the Greeks; but it is certain that they were but little esteemed, for not one of them has been handed down to modern times. All that remains of them consists of a few extracts preserved by Josephus, Julius Africanus, Eusebius, and Syncellus.

The history which Moses has left us, is not only the oldest, but is the most rational, consistent, and orderly that exists, pertaining to the ancient world. Whatever of history the Egyptians had is lost, or is veiled under their hieroglyphics, more of which, we may one day, perhaps, read with some degree of certainty; but, at present the early history of Egypt is unknown. Herodotus went hither, to gather up any fragments of it that could be found; but all the information that he gives at second-hand, needs to be tested by other lights. "Such as think the tales told by the Egyptians credible," he says, "are free to accept them for history. For my own part, I propose for myself, throughout my whole work, faithfully to record the traditions of the several nations." (Herod II., 123.)

As in India, and China, so in Egypt, a fabulous antiquity was claimed for the beginning of the nation. The reign of the gods, for ages before that of human kings, is supposed to indicate a primæval hierarchy. Manetho prefixes to his list of purely human dynasties, reckoned from Menes, a period of about 25,000 years, for the reigns of gods, demigods, heroes, and manes. (the souls of the departed). The lists of Manetho, the statements of the priests to Herodotus and Diodorus, and the inscriptions, all agree in making Men or Menes the first man who reigned in Egypt; and the very name suggests a mythical impersonation of the human race, like the Indian Menu, the Greek Merinyas or Minos, the Etruscan Menerfa, and the German Mannus. His claim to historical existence fails before the only proper test; for the hieroglyphics of his name are not contemporary. The priestly tradition connected him with the widest range of Egypt's dominion, placing his birth and early kingdom at This, in Upper Egypt, his great works at Memphis, and his conquest and death in Ethiopia. (See Smith's "Ancient Asia," B. I., Ch. 2.) That the dynasties of Manetho are in part contemporaneous, and not successive and continuous, is a thing now pretty well settled. Times, places, and inscriptions are found to be quite inconsistent with the latter assumption. Bunsen and Renan still stand by the long chronology; but its difficulties are insuperable.

The whole history of Egypt is now grouped under the following broad divisions:—(1), the old Monarchy, which had its capital at Memphis, in Lower Egypt, but probably ruled over the whole land. (2), the Middle Monarchy, and the foreign domination of the Shepherd kings. (3), The New Monarchy of Thebes, under which Egypt was re-united and raised to the acmé of its power. (4) A period during which power was held by various princes of Lower Egypt, till the establishment of a second foreign domination—the Ethiopian. (5), The later Saïte Monarchy, which re-united Egypt till it was conquered by Cambyses. (6), The Persian domination, with one episode of recovered independence, down to the conquest by Alexander. (7), The Hellenist kingdom of the Ptolemies, till Egypt became a Roman Province. (8), The Roman Province of Egypt, till the conquest of the country by the Arabs.

[ERRATA.—In last No., page 365, col. 1, four lines from the bottom, for "presenting," read "prosecuting"; col. 2, line 9, for "Annals," read "Annals," and for "memories," read "memoirs"; line 10, for "revelations," read "revolutions"; line 15, before fabulous or true, insert "sacred or profane"; col. 3, line 24, for "is the," read "in the."]

BRO. LESSING AND HIS MASONIC CONVERSATIONS.

BY WAY OF COMMENTARY.—PART THE FOURTH.

By BRO. CRYPTONYMUS.

"I come no more to make you laugh: things now,
That bear a weighty and a serious brow,
Sad, high, and working, full of State and woe,
Such noble scenes as draw the eye to flow,
We now present." SHAKSPERE.

In my last paper, I observed that it was probable some of my brethren might become controversially interested in the present portion of my theme. I have to tread over ground of the most delicate nature, and am environed with intricacies on every hand.

Fortunately for my purpose, I can appeal to documents of the utmost authenticity, and straightforwardly meet all such questions as those of the Collegia Fabrorum, the Institution of Numa Pompilius, and the Association of the German Steinmetzen. Dust! veritable undeniable dust, are the annals of the Masons anterior to Sir Christopher Wren, in the sense accepted by modern Speculative Masons. It will be my duty to establish this theory, by a series of cumulative facts, in the most rigid manner, and if there appear any reiteration in the argument, I must claim the reader's best indulgence and consideration.

Anterior to the promulgation of Speculative Freemasonry, there had never existed any doubt that associations of builders, of a more or less intimate nature, had been formed; that these builders were connected by certain protective trade regulations, and finally, that in common with other trading fraternities they had their "mystery;" but what a number of working and wandering men could have to do with the esoteric truths of Freemasonry, is truly an enigma! That fact of the erection of the vast edifice of St. Paul's, gives us a clue, although not a final clue, to a solution of this question.

It may be safely admitted, that Elias Ashmole was in some way affiliated to the Masonic body, at a time antecedent to the commencement of the eighteenth century, but I can positively assert, from proof in my hands, that the forms and ceremonies at present in use, were only in a rude and unformed state in his day, and long afterwards.

All institutions of any complexity have been the results of simple beginnings, and thus it has faded with the Masonic body, as with so many others. Traditions, more or less trustworthy, have been perpetuated, symbolic legends have been manipulated into shape, and received popular (Masonic) acceptance, but substantially, these legends are about as truthful as are the fables of Persian Divs, or the fancied Jinns of Arabia; the tales of Horam, the Son of Asmar, are as credibly true.

The spirit of mysticism, however much it may be trampled down, ever re-asserts itself, and tales of magic and wonder, in some form, arise again from age to age. Thus fancied historical legends have received credence, and stories of H. A. B. and other worthies, have been allowed to pass into veritable acceptance. Symbolically accepted, there is no finer legend than that of H. A. B.; practically, it is worthless. We must rid ourselves of these adumbrative legends; we must not let fiction become fact, and in saying so, I feel that none of my brethren will challenge me.

"And I likewise see that you have been labouring by the tombs of our ancestors," observes Falk; so did our illustrious brother Lord Leigh, when he recently laid a foundation-stone with the actual trowel used by King Charles the Second for St. Paul's Cathedral. The tombs of our ancestors! Why, every good deed is foreshadowed by our ancestors, and yet they may never have existed in esse, but only in posse. Who can trace, with certainty, the lineage of his family for more than perchance two generations? Yet the principle obtains; and hence what cannot, and will never be, true, in fact, is deliberately to be confirmed as a sign.

The predecessors of the Freemasons, it can scarcely be doubted, belonged to the various bodies of mystics, whose obscure origin is buried in the mediæval age. But documentary evidence of ceremonial observance is wholly deficient. It is like the belief in the One God, a matter rather patent to the mind, than historically demonstrable. Were we to take some of the dicta of the Talmud, some of the axioms of the Rosenkreutzers, some of the traditions of the Knights of Rhodes, Malta, or St. John of Jerusalem, we should arrive at more positive history than in bolstering up a story of King Solomon's Temple with all its magnificent adornments. Talmud, Jacob Boehme, Knights of Rhodes, Malta, &c., all exist, but the famous Three committing the terrible murder commemorated in our myth, are truly figments of a too lively imagination.

How many Temples were there? How are we even to find at El Khods any traces of Temples? How could, accepting the literal interpretation of the Scriptures, King Solomon, notorious for his amours and other things, have been the individual selected to build a Temple, silent, not made with hands, especially when in alliance with a pagan sovereign, Hiram of Tyre, and an architect doubtfully sprung from the tribe of Naphtali?

Does it not stamp itself as a seventeenth or eighteenth century adaption of a legend, in itself both praiseworthy and profitable? And yet the legend is, or may be taken to be, figuratively true. In that sense we surely are all agreed, and I would add my honest testimony to the effect it has wrought on our noble instinct of Charity. Almost unrivalled in the Universe stands the Masonic Order, but do not let us run away with the idea that it is either of remote antiquity, or of specially Divine sanction. I shall show in the course of the following papers whence it came, and whither it proposes to go. I am strong with the authority of such writers as Kloss upon this point, and to him I will next appeal.

Bro. George Kloss says in his "History of Freemasonry in France," that "If it be desired to re-conduct the origin of Freemasonry into the highest possible antiquity, it would be necessary to designate the first man who built with designative self-consciousness the first shed to protect himself from the sun's rays, or the effects of adverse weather, by the title of Freemason. Thus the origin of Freemasonry would be coincident with the the first efforts of human inventive activity, leading into nihilism, so far as the power of archæological research is concerned, for under these circumstances, any builder for his own mere selfish behoof, might be regarded as a Freemason. That this was not the case, that it could not be the case, is beyond the realm of argument."

We may, I think, safely deduce from this, that the Talmudical tradition, preserved amidst the legends of the middle ages, when magic had its sway, as to the Book delivered by the Angel Raziel to Adam, containing all wisdom, or the story about the two pillars of Seth or Enoch, are merely symbolical ideas, accommodated by the mystics to suit the views they intended to disseminate; forming in fact a portion of universal mythology.

"Men," continues Bro. Kloss, whom I here summarize, but do not misinterpret, "could not for ever merely look earthwards, their attention would be fascinated by the phenomena of the skies, and a natural feeling, not only to think of, but to learn to know the majesty of the Creator, would succeed, at any rate with some few of the more enlightened."

In this few of the more enlightened, may we not, perhaps, find the ancestors to whom Falk alluded? By whose tombs Ernest had been labouring at the problem of humanity?

Many writers have sought, indeed have maintained, that modern Freemasonry has been the outbirth of the ancient mysteries of the Egyptians, the Samothracians, the Greeks, and the degraded rehabilitators of the Isiac Rite in the Roman territory. Some humourist has declared that toenails were a base invention of the monks to deceive the people, so also is it with this high-born origin of Masonry, alike mythical and absurd. Although all secret societies have had their forms and ceremonies, more or less august, they never sought them in pagandom, or even in Hebraic localities.

The best thing, and the truest, that can be said is, that they had their origin in England, that the peculiar rites have grown up, under the hands of sincere and honest men, into their present form from a motive to preserve secret the means of mutual succour and rescue from danger. Freemasonry was unknown on the Continent, as such, until the Prussian Knights (Teutschen Orden), on the one hand, and Lord Derwentwater on the other, introduced the rude skeleton of Johannite Masonry, severally, into Prussia Proper and France. Surely if it had any more ancient origin, it would not have crossed the English Channel, or Pas de Calais, at so late a period as 1725? Surely, if it had been more ancient, we should not find four lodges alone meeting under Desaguliers and Anderson, in 1717, or thereabouts? And in the face of modern archæology who can dare to put more than a symbolical construction on the legend of H.A.B.? This is not said as a slur, or an insult, either to the First Great Light, or the fraternity at large: I undertake to prove it, point by point, and with a patient and fraternal hearing, I shall gain the suffrages of my readers. Philology will be called in to bear out what I shall advance, and what Bro. Lessing, in 1778, did not scruple to assert.

There is also a deep interest attached to this inquiry, As we proceed, the past life of man will start into vivid colours, and, divested of much mystery, without disclosing any esoteric secrets, it will be seen that man, as man in his truest sense, has been linked throughout the ages by the subtlest agencies, intended for his social and mental welfare. For the present then, farewell.

CRYPTONYMUS.

8th June, A.D. 1872, A.L. 5876.

HOLLOWAYS' PILLS AND OINTMENT.—From high temperatures many evils result more formidable than mere loss of appetite, apathy, and restlessness. By headache, giddiness, and parched skin, Nature gives warning that a feverish attack has begun, which neglect will intensify if the sufferer fail to resort early to these cleansing and regulating pills, or some such corrective medicine. Holloways' Pills meet all disarrangements of the circulation and nervous centres with efficiency and safety, and through these potent auxiliaries they are competent to check the advancing malady and to conquer the threatened peril. In disordered digestion, torpidity of the liver, alvine pains, irritable bowels, diarrhoea, or dysenteric symptoms, Holloway's Ointment should be well rubbed twice a day upon the abdomen.—ADVT.

DEDICATION OF THE NEW MASONIC HALL AT HAVERFORDWEST.

The annual meeting of the Provincial Grand Lodge of the Western Division of South Wales was held at the Masonic Hall, recently erected by the members of the Cambrian Lodge, 464, at Haverfordwest, under the presidency of the Right Worshipful the Provincial Grand Master, Bro. Sir Pryse Pryse, Bart., of Gogerddan, assisted by the Deputy Provincial Grand Master, Bro. Major J. A. Lloyd-Phillips, of Mabws, Cardiganshire.

There was a large muster of the brethren of the province, and a few distinguished visitors, among whom were:—Bro. E. J. Morris, of Swansea, the Deputy Provincial Grand Master for the Eastern Division of South Wales; and Bro. Capt. S. G. Henfray, the Deputy Provincial Grand Master for Monmouthshire.

The first part of the day's proceedings was the dedication and consecration of the new Masonic hall, which is a very handsome structure, with a noble Corinthian portico, situate in Picton Place, Haverfordwest, built by the brethren of the Cambrian Lodge, in that town, at a cost of nearly £2000. From the steps of the portico, a roomy vestibule, with staircase leading to commodious robing rooms, is gained, and attached is a large airy ante-room, and the entrance to the hall, which is a splendid apartment of about 70 feet long, by 30 feet wide, and very lofty, well lighted by three large windows at the eastern end, and by several gas sunlights. The fittings and furniture are in good taste, and if a raised dais was added in the east, the hall would be very complete and handsome, and a temple well worthy the noble purpose for which it has been designed.

Lodge was opened by the W.M., Bro. T. Rule Owen, and a procession formed of the Provincial Grand Officers, who, with the Right Worshipful the Provincial Grand Master, and his deputy and guests, entered the hall at about 3 o'clock. The prayers and portions of scripture proper to the occasion, were most impressively delivered by the Provincial Grand Chaplain, the Rev. Latimer M. Jones, the vicar of St. Peter's, Carmarthen, and W.M. of Lodge 476, in that town.

The ceremony of dedication and consecration was splendidly performed by the R.W. the Provincial Grand Master, and the musical arrangements, under the Provincial Grand Organist, Bro. W. D. Harding, P.M. 464, left nothing to be desired.

A procession, most admirably marshalled by Bro. J. Pell, 1072, Prov. G. Dir. of Cers., was then formed, and the whole of the brethren, numbering upwards of 150, proceeded to St. Mary's church, where they were received with a Te Deum, beautifully executed by the Provincial Grand Organist, and the choir of the church. After the prayers had been read a most impressive sermon was preached by the Prov. Grand Chaplain, the Rev. Latimer M. Jones. Procession was then reformed and the brethren returned to the Hall, when the Right Worshipful the Provincial Grand Master immediately proceeded to hold the Provincial Grand Lodge. The minutes of the previous meeting having been read by the Prov. G. Secretary, Bro. G. T. Smith, P.M. 1072, the accounts of the Prov. G. Treasurer were received and approved, as was also the report of the Audit Committee.

Sir Pryse Pryse, the R. W. Provincial Grand Master, then proposed the re-election of Bro. Capt. Henry Williams, P.M. 366, as Prov. G. Treasurer, which was seconded by the Prov. S.G. Warden, and carried unanimously.

The Prov. G. Master then proceeded to invest the Prov. G. Officers for the year as follows:—

- Major J. A. Lloyd-Phillips Dep. Prov. G.M.
- T. Philipps, P.M. 366, 378, } P. S. G. Warden.
- 990 }
- James Weeks Szlumper, } P. J. G. W.
- C. E., W.M. 1072 }
- Rev. Latimer M. Jones, } P. G. Chaplain.
- W.M., 476 }
- Henry Williams, P.M. 366. } P.G. Treasurer.
- T. Rule Owen, W.M. 464, } P.G. Registrar.
- G. Tempany Smith, P.M. } P.G. Sec.
- 1072..... }

Aaron Stone, P.M. 671... P.G.S. Deacon.
 William Bowen, S.W. 671 P.G.J. Deacon.
 J. Scratchley, P.M. 990... P.G. Supt. Works.
 Jonathan Pell, 1072..... P.G. Dir. Cers.
 Robert Warlow, 378..... P.G. Sword Bearer.
 W. L. Harding, P.M. 464 P.G. Organist.
 N. Boyle, 378..... P.G. Pursuivant. and Bros. G. D. Roe, 378; Webb, 378; Keynolds, 378; Gaddam, 990; J. H. Thomas, 1177, Provincial Grand Stewards.

The Prov. G. Master then said that as the funds of the Provincial Grand Lodge were now in a tolerably flourishing condition he thought they could well afford to grant a further donation to the excellent Masonic charities, and as a pleasant memento of their meeting at Haverfordwest a small sum to a charitable institution there. He therefore proposed, and Bro. Major Lloyd-Philipps, Dep. P.G.M., seconded, that a sum of ten guineas each be presented to the Royal Masonic School for Girls, the Royal Masonic School for Boys, and the Royal Benevolent Institution for Aged Freemasons and Widows of Freemasons, and a sum of five guineas to the Pembrokeshire and Haverfordwest Infirmary, making a total of £36 15s. The several grants were then affirmed with acclamation.

The Prov. G. Master then proceeded to address the brethren by congratulating them on the fair progress in Masonry made in the Province during the past year, the eight lodges comprised therein having met regularly, and admitted several new brethren. He expressed a hope that the various lodges would be particularly careful to admit only persons of good character and respectable standing in society, so as to keep up the dignity of the craft, and cautioned them, on no account, to admit any person residing in a district, either in or out of the province, where there is a lodge, without first communicating with the authorities of that lodge as to the fitness of their candidate. He also thought that those lodges in the province, whose admission fees were less at present than five guineas, would do well to raise them to that sum, as tending to keep many objectionable persons from applying to be admitted. The Rt. Worshipful Brother concluded by urging the lodges and brethren to give a cordial and liberal support to those admirable institutions the various Masonic charities, and closed the Provincial Grand Lodge in due form, after solemn prayer had been offered by the Provincial Grand Chaplain.

A banquet was served at six o'clock, at the Mariners Hotel, to which 105 of the brethren sat down and which was presided over by the Rt. Worshipful the Past Grand Master, who, according to his invariable and handsome custom, at his own cost, supplied the whole company with champagne till the removal of the cloth, after which the usual loyal and patriotic toasts were given and duly honoured, and that of the worthy and respected chief received a perfect furor of applause. It was proposed by Bro. Major Lloyd-Philipps, Dept. P.G.M., who said that Sir Pryse Pryse's ancestors and his own had often stood "shoulder to shoulder" in the battle field, and he and their worthy chief had more recently been companions in arms, but he felt particularly gratified then to stand "shoulder to shoulder" to him in Masonry, and he trusted that, with their united efforts, the Province of the Western Division of South Wales would prosper.

The toasts of the visitors was responded to by Bro. E. J. Morris, Dep. P.G.M. for the Eastern Division, and Bro. Capt. Homfray, Dept. P.G.M. Monmouthshire; and many others, were given, including the Prov. Grand Wardens, the Prov. Grand Chaplain, the Lodges of the Province, Bro. J. Rule Owen, P.G. Reg. W.M. 464, and Bro. Harding, Prov. G. Organist, with thanks for his admirable musical arrangements. The meeting broke up at about ten o'clock.

"A VISIT TO EPPS'S COCOA MANUFACTORY.—Through the kindness of Messrs. Epps, I recently had an opportunity of seeing the many complicated and varied processes the Cocoa bean passes through ere it is sold for public use, and being both interested and highly pleased with what I saw during my visit to the manufactory, I thought a brief account of the Cocoa and the way it is manufactured by Messrs. Epps, to fit it for a wholesome and nutritious beverage, might be of interest to the readers of Land and Water.—See Article in Land and Water, October 14.

Correspondence.

THE ROYAL ARK MARINER DEGREE.

Ipswich, 23rd June, 1872.

DEAR SIR AND EXCELLENT BROTHER,—

When you wrote to me to correct my statement that the Royal Ark Mariner Degree was given under the authority of the Mark Grand Lodge, and requested me to take steps to inform the brethren of your authority as Inspector General of Suffolk, to confer the degree under the Grand Lodge of Royal Ark Mariners (a body, by the way, of whose previous existence as a recognised Masonic jurisdiction I was previously unaware) I took the only course which seemed open to me, viz: to acknowledge and reply to your communication through the columns of the Freemason.

I cannot conceive how otherwise I could have given publicity—which of course I supposed you desired—to your claims, and those of the G. L. of R.A.M., as you would scarcely expect me to write to the thousands of readers of the Freemason, (in which paper the paragraph of my lecture appeared), to inform them that you de- murred to my statements.

Matters, as you know, have however, trans- pired, to which I will not further allude, but which are calculated to support my views. As to the R. A. M. Degree, and its head, and I am glad to find that you are amongst those who are desirous to put it under the only legitimate authority—the Mark Grand Lodge.

As to the degree itself, I can only say, that I have before me now a letter, received since my last communication to you, from a learned brother, a member of the high degrees, and an author, who says:—"I took the opportunity of being in—— to take the Ark Mariner's Degree, (of course under the proper jurisdiction;) the cere- mony as now worked is poor and worthless.

When the Ark is restored to its proper position as a side degree, and an appendant of the Mark, and its usurped titles given up; and when the rainbows coloured collars are thought less of, and the working of an improved ritual more; then the Royal Ark Mariner's degree may take its place as one worthy of support and encourage- ment—and not till then. I feel sure you will agree with me, that this correspondence had better now be closed. With every assurance of esteem and respect for yourself,

Believe me, fraternally yours,

EMRA HOLMES, 31°.

W.M. Albert Victor Lodge of Mark Master.
 Bro. C. V. Childe, 18°.

APEX.

(To the Editor of The Freemason.)

SIR,—

The description which appeared, some time last year, of the jewels of this unique Order, were those of the "Sponsors," and not of "Apex, the Supreme."

It may be sufficient to say, that I have seen the true jewel of "Apex," which is totally un- like any other Masonic jewel, or indeed any decoration whatever, save one of Chivalry, of a very early date.

The jewel in question is, and I say so advised- ly, of marvellous antiquity, and bears intrinsic evidence of the fact; and I hope shortly to be in a position to communicate an English version of the difficult inscription on it.

The jewel can be heard as well as seen.

Yours,
 SP-NS-R, II.

ISRAELITISM AND FREEMASONRY.

Birch House, Heaton Mersey,
 Near Manchester, June 18th, 1872.

(To the Editor of The Freemason.)

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—

You will doubtless be glad to learn that the articles by Bros. Carpenter, and W. E. N., which have appeared in your journal, on "Freemasonry and Israelitism," have been read with no ordinary interest by friends of mine (non-Masons.)

One of those friends has for some time ex- pressed a wish to see those articles published in a separate form, and desires me to procure for him the volume, recently published, by Bro. Car- penter. I may further state that in the event of the articles by W. E. N. being also published in a separate volume, he requests me to obtain it for him, immediately upon its appearance. My friend is strongly of opinion that these produc- tions ought not only to be in the library of every Mason, but also in the library of every intelligent person. If you see no objection, you are at liberty to give publicity to this communication in the Freemason at your convenience,

Yours fraternally,
 J. A. COLLINGE,
 Egerton, 1030,
 East Lancashire.

A PLEASANT DAY WITH THE FREE- MASON.

(To the Editor of the Freemason.)

Sir,—Whatever foreigners may say as to the distant nature of the English people, nothing can equal the cordiality and frankness of our friends, the Freemasons. Whatever secret they may possess amongst the brotherhood, they have certainly found out one of the best secrets—that of brotherly kindness towards all persons who may have the good fortune to come amongst them. I am indebted to a friend, who procured me a ticket, to join the summer excursion of the Constitutional Lodge, No. 55, on board the "Maria Wood," on the 20th inst.

About 12 o'clock, after a salute of guns, the barge moved slowly up the river, which is sur- rounded on both sides with the most charming scenery.

A splendid military band was provided, which soon commenced playing, and an elegant ball was opened on the deck of the barge. As to the ladies, who play so conspicuous a part in that kind of pleasure, they were as refined, beautiful, and natural as only English ladies can be.

At three o'clock a sumptuous dinner was pro- vided, with all the delicacies of the season.

It was very interesting to me to hear the Wor- shipful Master touch upon the secrets of Ma- sonry, but I attribute it to my imperfect know- ledge of the Craft, that I went away no wiser in that respect.

After dinner, the dancing was continued, and was kept up with great spirit until we returned to Kew Bridge, in the evening. This pleasant day will always be remembered with delight and gratitude by

Yours very truly,
 AN ICELANDER.

PRESENTATION OF A TESTIMONIAL TO THE REV. BRO. C. H. DRINKWATER.

On Friday, the 4th inst., the parishioners of the two parishes of St Stephen, and St. Martin, Exeter, presented a testimonial to our Rev. brother, on the occasion of his resigning the curacy of the above, consequent on his appoint- ment to the Vicarage of St. George, Frankwell, Shrewsbury. The testimonial consisted of two purses of gold; one value £53, from St. Stephen's, the other value £18, from St. Martin's, after which the brethren of the "Semper Fidelis" Lodge 1254, presented him with a handsome gold Chaplain's jewel as a token of regard for the manner in which he had performed his duties as Chaplain of the lodge. The Revd. gentleman said, there were times when language, powerful as it was to convey ideas, was found utterly insufficient to make known to others the feelings which existed within their hearts; and the present was one of those times. He thanked them from the bottom of his heart, the members of the lodge, as well as those friends who had subscribed towards the handsome testimonial that had been presented to him, and concluded by expressing his earnest wishes for their future prosperity.

W. ELLIS WALL, Esq., of Salcombe Hill House, writes, March 31. 1871 :—"I have used your Pain Killer for rheu- matic gout inwardly, and on nearly every joint in my body. In about half-an-hour after I had used it I was per- fectly free from pain. Taken internally, I have found it cure headache, griping pains in the stomach, and many other similar disorders. My only object in writing this is to express my gratitude, and with the hope that it may be for the good of the public.—To Perry Davis & Son, Londn. W.C., Proprietors."

NOTICE.

The Subscription to THE FREEMASON is now 10s. per annum, post-free, payable in advance.

Vol. I., bound in cloth	4s. 6d.
Vol. II., ditto	7s. 6d.
Vol. III., ditto	15s. 0d.
Vol. IV., ditto	15s. 0d.
Reading Cases to hold 52 numbers	2s. 6d.

United States of America.

THE FREEMASON is delivered free in any part of the United States for 12s. per annum, payable in advance.

NOTICE TO SUBSCRIBERS.

The Office of THE FREEMASON is now transferred to 198, FLEET-STREET, E.C. All communications for the Editor or Publisher should therefore be forwarded to that address.

Births, Marriages and Deaths.

DEATH.

PICKUP.—On the 20th inst., suddenly at his residence, 276, Upper Parliament-street, Liverpool, aged forty-seven, Bro. Alfred Pickup, I.G. Temple Lodge, 1094, Treasurer of St. John's Chapter, 673.

Answers to Correspondents.

All communications for The Freemason should be written legibly on one side of the paper only, and, if intended for insertion in the current number, must be received not later than 10 o'clock a.m. on Thursdays, unless in very special cases. The name and address of every writer must be sent to us in confidence.

A SUBSCRIBER will find the History and Origin of the Masonic Degrees of "Royal Ark Mariners" and "Red Cross of Rome and Constantine" in the Books of the Statutes thereof, price 2/6 and 1/6 respectively.

The Freemason,

SATURDAY, JUNE 29, 1872.

The Freemason is published on Saturday Mornings in time for the early trains. The price of the Freemason is Twopence per week; annual subscription, 10s. (payable in advance.) All communications, letters, &c., to be addressed to the Editor, 198, Fleet-street, E.C. The Editor will pay careful attention to all MSS. entrusted to him, but cannot undertake to return them unless accompanied by postage stamps.

MASONIC PROGRESS.

The half-year which has just closed cannot be said to have been an eventful period in the annals of Freemasonry.

No mighty wave of persecution has assailed the Craft in the regions of darkness and superstition. We have not to lament either heresy or schism in our Order. The march of its progress, however, although noiseless, has been none the less triumphant. In England our prosperity has increased, is increasing, and, we hope, will never be diminished, albeit we are no advocate of mere numbers as an element of strength. On the contrary, having the real welfare of the Fraternity at heart, we are glad to find that the multiplication of lodges is no longer regarded, per se, as an evidence of success. We have, on former occasions, avowed our honest conviction that there are some men in our midst who ought never to have been introduced into the Order, and in this class we include not merely the criminal and vicious, but the ignorant and uncultivated man. It is true, that Freemasonry is a school, but it is not to be degraded into a preparatory one for illiterate adults, whose minds are not sufficiently enlightened to perceive the beauty of its symbolism, or the grandeur of its fellowship.

Men of such mental calibre cannot appreciate the divine harmony of things, or comprehend the force of an idea. They cannot evolve light out of the darkness which surrounds them, and hence it is that we have to deplore the existence of many nominal Masons who court the privileges of Freemasonry, without knowing, or seeming to know, that they are living in flagrant apostasy from its principles.

In this respect, nevertheless, we are gratified to welcome signs of improvement;—the more general diffusion of knowledge, and the multiplied facilities for education have already borne goodly fruit, and we may fairly anticipate the time when few or none will seek admission to our mysteries, but men of intelligence, refinement, and even erudition.

A singular corroboration of our opinion upon the desirability of excluding weak-minded and ill-conditioned men from the Masonic body has been recently afforded by the excessive stupidity evinced by an Irish brother, who, however, we understand is but a neophyte in the Craft, when he was called upon to give evidence in a Coroner's Court, concerning a fatal accident at a railway station. This sapient individual averred that he knew one of the men who had caused the fatality, but "as he was a brother Freemason, he could not reveal his name." Upon which a Member of Parliament, well-known as an eminent disciple of Ultramontanism and an ex-Brigadier of the Pope, scented a mare's nest, and never rested until he hatched a phantom pony, and trotted it out for the edification of the House of Commons. "Privileges of Freemasonry," "awful bond, which compels men to condone villainies, and conceal guilt." These and other platitudes, ludicrously disproportioned to the occasion, were solemnly uttered by the Papal champion, and as solemnly demolished by the matter-of-fact reply of the Irish Attorney-General, who as might have been anticipated of course denied that any such Masonic privileges to defeat justice legally existed. It is, of course, superfluous to remind the members of the Craft, that there is not the faintest shadow of truth in the implication that Freemasonry interposes between crime and its punishment, or veils in its mantle of secrecy the misdeeds of unworthy brethren, but it is important that the outer world should thoroughly comprehend that the Order will never shelter "knaves, or fools, or cowards, even if they boast the blood of all the Howards." As for the simpleton who has thus caused the fair fame of the Brotherhood to be tarnished by suspicion, we would advise him to seek that congenial retirement for which his mental incapacity to learn the very A B C of Freemasonry so clearly proves him to be a fitting subject, for, to quote the quaint language of Feltham, "Mercury himself may move his tongue in vain, if he has none to hear him but a non-intelligent."

Dismissing this painful, although absurd affair from our minds, we gladly turn to the more inspiring theme of Masonic progress.

Beyond question the advancement of the cause in England has been both substantial and sure. The interest taken by the brethren in the development of charitable works, the liberal support accorded to our benevolent institutions, and the rapidly increasing desire to obtain sound data and historical evidence of the origin and claims of Freemasonry, are in themselves healthy indications, and encouraging signs of Masonic progress. In fact, with a Findel—iconoclastic as he may be in some of his proclivities—sweeping away many baseless theories on the one side, and a Hughan bringing to light incontestable proofs on the other, we are beginning to discern where and what we are, and what is more to the purpose, what we ought to be.

It is a common mistake to suppose that the literature of Freemasonry is not progressive in its tendencies—because the order itself is based upon fixed and immutable principles. Any one who takes the trouble to compare the Masonic literature of the present age with the literature of the Craft about a century ago, will readily concede that in these latter days we are far ahead of the past. Nor do we allude merely to standard works upon Freemasonry—but to that sterling periodical literature which has grown up entirely within the period we have named, and which has now attained unequivocal and acknowledged importance. It would however be presumptuous to affirm that even now we have sounded the profoundest depths of Masonic philosophy, or exhausted the multitudinous springs of Masonic knowledge. Let us rather say, in the humble spirit of the great sage, that as yet we are but children picking up pebbles on the boundless shores of wisdom—weak discerners of the light,—faint-hearted supporters of the truth in all things. It is, nevertheless, most gratifying to observe that progress—unmistakeable progress has been made, that thinkers in the ranks of the Craft are no longer few in number or insignificant in influence, and that the mastery of certain formulæ which embrace the letter of our principles, is no longer tacitly accepted as evidence of a brother's acquaintance with the heart and spirit of Freemasonry. It is indeed difficult to define, with precision, the limits of Masonic research. That it presents attractions to the antiquarian and archæologist, none who have read the thoughtful and well-reasoned articles of a "Masonic Student," or the copious and interesting, if sometimes inconclusive, annotations of Dr. Bedolfe, will care to deny. That it equally offers charms to the moralist and philosopher, we need scarcely attempt to demonstrate, while to the humanitarian, and ideal perfectionist, Masonic studies may be said to afford glimpses of that good time coming, when the lion shall lie down with the lamb, and when the whole human race shall be one vast brotherhood. Without, however, adopting the millennial idea, there can be no doubt that the influence of Masonic teaching is very great over truly Masonic minds, and in the increase of that influence, as well as in the fruit of good works which it produces and perfects, there lies, perhaps, the germ of a greater guarantee for the peace and welfare of humanity than will ever be found in the flimsy treaties of diplomatists, or the hypocritical professions of war-denouncing states.

REPORTS OF MASONIC MEETINGS.

Craft Masonry.

METROPOLITAN.

BURGOYNE LODGE (No. 902.)—The increasing popularity due to the growing reputation of this enterprising lodge necessitated an emergency meeting, which was held at Anderton's Hotel, the usual place of assemblage, on Monday, evening last, for the purpose of admitting to the light Messrs. Buthir and Norman. The ceremony of initiation was ably performed, (in the unavoidable absence of Bro. Wm. Simmons, the much esteemed W.M.) by Bro. Henry Smith, I.P.M., assisted by Bro. Rogers, S.W.; and Bros. Poynter, Iron, Vevers, and Wright, Past Masters. Bro. Smith then proceeded to pass to the second degree Bros. Silvani, Clerke, Merchant, and Burt, a ceremony this skilled brother performed with his usual ability. Bro. Smith was then relieved in the chair by Bro. Poynter, P.M. and Treasurer, who in an impressive manner raised to the sublime degree Bro. Jeffreys. This concluded the ceremonial business of the meeting, and after receiving the names of a candidate for initiation and a joining member, for the next meeting, the brethren separated in perfect harmony, after an arduous but useful, and well-spent Masonic evening. In addition to the brethren mentioned above there were also present Bros. Jas. Allen, Henry Smith, junr., Ludlow, Bundy, G. P. Smith, and Windybank, and as a visitor, Bro. Merdock, Royal Arch Lodge of Scotland, No. 165, who contemplates becoming a member of the Burgoyne Lodge.

CUMBERLAND AND WESTMORELAND.

MARYPORT.—Lodge Perseverance (No. 371.)—The annual festival and installation meeting of the above lodge, was held in the Masonic Hall, on Tuesday, the 18th inst. The chair was taken by the Worshipful Master, Bro. Armstrong, supported by the officers and about thirty members of the lodge. After the minutes had been confirmed, Bro. Lawson was presented, and in a very able manner installed Worshipful Master, by Worshipful Bro. Kenworthy, P.M., P. Prov. G.S.W. After the officers had been invested, and the lodge closed, the brethren, on the invitation of the W.M., adjourned to a substantial repast, when the usual loyal and Masonic toasts were duly given, and suitably acknowledged. Amongst the visitors were, Bros. W. Kenworthy, P.M., P. Prov. G.S.W.; Gibson, P.M., P. Prov. G.S.W.; Henry, W.M., A. Prov. G.D.C.; Porter, P.M., A. Prov. G. Sec.; Fearon, P.M., Prov. G.J.D.; Brooker, W.M., Prov. G.S.

DEVONSHIRE.

PLYMOUTH.—Lodge Charity (No. 223.)—This lodge held its regular monthly meeting on Tuesday, the 18th inst., when three brethren were raised to the sublime degree of Master Mason, and two gentlemen were initiated into the mysteries of antient Freemasonry. The ceremonies were conducted by the W. Master, Bro. J. T. Smith, in a very efficient manner, assisted by Bros. J. P. Phillips, S.W.; Pool, J.W., and other brethren. Business over, the brethren adjourned to Chubb's hotel to partake of the half-yearly banquet provided in Mrs. Chubb's bountiful style. The W. Master presided, supported on his right by Bro. Browning, P.M., P. Prov. G.D.C., Sec. of the lodge; Bro. J. M. Hifley, P. M., Prov. G. Steward; and Bro. A. Woolf, P.M.; on his left by Bro. T. Pollard, P.M., P. Prov. G. Treas., and Treasurer of the lodge; Bro. Cornish, I.P.M.; and Bro. Blackwood; the vice-chair by Bro. J. P. Phillips, S.W. The usual loyal and Masonic toasts were given and ably responded to by several brethren, but especially by Bro. T. Pollard, the senior member of the lodge, in a most feeling and appropriate address. About forty-two brethren were present, and a most pleasant and fraternal evening was spent.

ISLE OF WIGHT.

RYDE.—Ryde Lodge (No. 698.)—The installation of the W.M. elect, Bro. Richard Loveland Loveland, took place at the Masonic Hall, John-street, Ryde, on Thursday, the 20th inst. The ceremony was most impressively performed by the retiring W.M., Bro. Francis Newman. After the business was over, a grand banquet was given at the York Hotel. The company present numbered about thirty, with the W.M. in the chair. The duties of the vice-chair were ably carried out by Bro. G. F. Harrington, and amongst the company present were Bros. Pocock, W.M. of the Gloucester Lodge, Southampton; J. Isaacs, W.M. of the East Medina Lodge, Ryde; James Dashwood, Mayor of Ryde, and other distinguished brethren. It was generally stated that this was the finest Masonic gathering that had ever taken place in Ryde. The banquet, which was supplied by Mr. and Mrs. Childe in their best style, was of a magnificent description, every delicacy of the season being present.

LANCASHIRE (WEST).

PRESCOT.—Lodge of Loyalty (No. 86.)—The monthly meeting of this ancient and prosperous lodge was held on Wednesday evening, the 19th inst., at the Royal Hotel, Prescott, and was attended by a capital muster of the brethren. The Lodge was opened by Bro. Morris, W.M. After the minutes were read and confirmed, Bro. Fowler, P.M., took the chair for the rest of the evening. Amongst the other members of the lodge present were:—Bros. T. Prescott, P.M.; J. W. R. Fowler, S.W.; J. W. A. Fowler, P.M. Treas.; R. D. Simpson, J.D.; R. Corke, I.G.; R. Reynolds, W. Mercer, B. Slack, W. New-some, W. Cron, J. Ellis, J. Vaughan, T. Rymer, J. Webering, E. Bust, Wm. Jameson, W. Snape, E. Johnson Brown, W. Holme, C. Payne, W. E. Beaumont, S. Marsh, G. Head, and F. Mason. The visitors included Bros. J. Wood, 246, Treas. 1094; W. Harrison, W.M. 897; A. Hanson, J.W. 897; J. Jackson, 897; J. Young, 897; G. King, 1384; J. G. Hogg, 1384, &c. An unusually heavy business list, made up of four initiations, one passing, and one raising, was got through by Bro. J. W. J. Fowler, in a remarkably satisfactory manner, the whole of the interesting ceremonies being performed by him in a manner at once of effective and impressive. Labour kept the lodge open until an advanced hour, but not so late as to prevent the brethren from doing justice to an excellent repast, provided by mine host of the Royal Hotel.

SOMERSETSHIRE

PROVINCIAL GRAND LODGE.

The Provincial Grand Lodge of Somersetshire held its annual meeting at Frome, on Thursday, 20th inst., and it proved an exceedingly agreeable re-union. Brethren from all parts of the fair county rallied in considerable numbers at the Mechanics' Institution, when the Royal Somerset Lodge, No. 973, was opened in due form by the Worshipful Master, Bro. Inskip.

The Provincial Grand Lodge was announced to be in waiting, when they were received with the customary honours.

The Dep. Prov. G.M., Bro. Bridges, presided, in the absence of the Prov. G.M., the Right Honourable the Earl of Carnarvon, who was detained at Cowes by indisposition. A telegram from his lordship was read, expressing his regret at not being present, and signifying his intention to hold a special meeting of the Grand Lodge, to receive the address which was in waiting to be presented to him on his re-appearance in the Masonic world, congratulating him on his recovery from his recent severe illness.

The Provincial Grand Treasurer presented his balance-sheet, which showed that though they had been liberal supporters of the Masonic charities, he could, owing to the prosperity of the various lodges of the province, carry over a good balance to the next account.

The appointments of officers took place, when the following brethren duly received their patents of office:—

Herniman	Prov. G.S.W.
Inskip	Prov. G.J.W.
Sprackett	} Prov. G. Chaplains.
Tibbs
Payne
Davis	Prov. G. Registrar.
Else	Prov. G. Secretary.
Loder	Prov. G. S.D.
Chaffin	Prov. G. J.D.
Willcox	Prov. G. S. of W.
Hodge	Prov. G. Dir of Cers.
Saunders	Prov. G. A. D.C.
Fair	Prov. G. S.B.
Macfarlan	Prov. G. Organist.
Reed	Prov. G. Purst.
Mountstephen	Prov. G. A. Purst.
Woodford	Prov. G. Tyler.
Carter	Prov. G. A. Tyler.

We must not omit to mention the decorations of the lodge-room; banners being tastefully arranged along the walls, wreaths of evergreens connecting them, whilst in the niches by the side of statuary and round the pedestals were beautiful ferns and lycopodiums, many being prize plants, lent by Bro. Baylis.

A banquet was held in the evening, at the George Hotel, where a very large muster of the brethren sat down, under the presidency of Bro. Bridges, supported by many brethren, members not only of Somerset, but of Bristol and other provinces.

YORKSHIRE (WEST.)

BRADFORD.—Harmony Lodge (No. 600.)—The installation meeting of this lodge was held on Thursday, June 20th inst. The attendance of brethren and visiting brethren was very numerous, including the Right Worshipful Bro. Bentley Shaw, Deputy Provincial Grand Master of West Yorkshire; Rev. Bro. Oddy, 302, Provincial Grand Chaplain; Bros. J. A. Unna, P.M. 600, P. Prov. G. Reg., T. P. Wood, P.M. Scarsdale Lodge, P. Prov. S.G.D. of Derbyshire; S. O. Bailey, P.M. 600, P. Prov. S. of W.; W. Wright, P.M. 600; H. O. Mawson, P.M. 302; S. Barsdorf, P.M. 600; Taylor, P.M. 302; J. Beanland, P.M. 600; J. Ahrens, P.M. 600, P. Prov. S.G.D.; William W. Barlow, W.M. 302; R. Richardson, W.M. 974; A. Nicholson, W.M. 1018; Ed. Smith, W.M.; T. Johnson, P.M. 600; W. Dewhirst, P.M. 600. Bro. C. F. Unna, the W.M. elect., was installed by his father, Bro. J. A. Unna, P.M., P. Prov. G.R. who went through the ceremony he has so often done before for this lodge, in his usual excellent manner: and it was quite a unique and exceedingly pleasing sight to witness a father instal his son. Fourteen years ago Bro. Unna initiated his son, and, as our Right Worshipful Bro. Bentley Shaw, Deputy Prov. G.M., took occasion to remark in open lodge—in congratulating the W.M. on his installation—he was then a witness of that interesting ceremony, and although he had found it difficult to do so, owing to pressing engagements, he had determined, at any sacrifice, to be present to see the cape stone of the edifice placed (as it were) by his friend and Bro. Unna installing his son, W.M. of his mother lodge. After the installation the brethren, on the invitation of Bro. C. F. Unna, the W.M., adjourned to the refreshment-room and there partook of an excellent and dainty repast provided for them. The tables groaned under the abundant supply of creature comforts, at the same wearing such an elegant appearance, from the profusion of flowers &c., as to indicate that some Fair Friend had favoured the W.M. by taking interest in the amusements. The usual loyal and Masonic toasts were duly given, Rev. Bro. Oddy, Prov. G. Chaplain, responding for "The R.W. Bro. Bentley Shaw, D.P.G.M. of West Yorkshire, and the rest of the Prov. Grand Officers," and in doing so took occasion to speak of the high qualification and great courtesy of the W.M. in the discharge of his duties. He also regretted that the R.W. Bro. Bentley Shaw's pressing engagements had prevented his remaining to hear the way in which his health had been proposed and received, that he might have replied to the toast. Bro. Beanland, P.M., in a pithy and appropriate speech, proposed "the retiring Master" who had during the past year discharged the duties of the office with such aptitude, urbanity, and judgment. Bro. W. Wright, P.M. in responding to the toast begged to thank Bro. Beanland, P.M. for the kind way in which he had introduced his name to the brethren, and them for their cordial reception; whilst in office he confessed at times, he had felt somewhat like a captain of a vessel, and fearing a storm ahead, was nervous, but tried as it were to steer away from them, and flung oil on the water as far as practicable. But his duties had been rendered comparatively light from the great assistance he had received from the P.Ms. and officers of the lodge. Before sitting down he would propose "The health of the Worshipful Master," who was an older Mason than himself, and he had been proud to have him as his S.W. He had been exceedingly gratified to see the way in which he had discharged the duties of that office, and was certain he would equally well perform those of W.M. It had afforded him the highest delight to witness the ceremony that evening of his honoured father installing his son, a sight we might not expect to see again. The W.M. in responding, said, fourteen years ago, when initiated into Freemasonry, I remember saying that I hoped you would find me a chip of the old block, and I trust you have found me chippish. I have been thrice made by my father, first, in the ordinary course of nature—second, a Mason—and third, a W.M., and I venture to express a wish. There is hanging in our lodge room lists of members, my father's name heading the first—mine the second, and I hope he may live to place my son's at the head of the third. The difficulties of the position in which you have placed me are great, but I rely upon the assistance of the brethren, who are always ready to do anything for the advantage of the lodge, and I hope to surmount them, as it has been remarked, "quos vult perdere exaltant," and I trust at the close of the year you may feel that your favours have not been unworthily bestowed. Bro. J. Ahrens, P.M. proposed "The officers of last year," who had done their duty so well in every way. Bro. S. O. Bailey, P.M., responded, in very appropriate terms, making particular allusion to what had fallen from our Bro. Chaplain in lodge as to being charitable to all, and bearing no ill-will, and thus carry out the true and glorious principles taught in the craft. Bro. Peel, P.M. proposed, "The present Officers," laconically saying the remarks just made by Bro. J. Ahrens, P.M. equally apply to this toast, and as similes have been used to night he might perhaps appropriately use a parliamentary one of the State coach, and he was sure they had an excellent team of present officers—all brethren who had served the lodge well and were entitled to the honours conferred, and woe betide him who, with such an excellent whip as W.M., ventures to stop the team. Bro. Skelly, S.W., responded and being called upon unexpectedly had to crave the indulgence of the brethren, and expressed the deep gratitude of the officers for the way in which they had been spoken of, and especially thanked Bro. Beanland, P.M., for the pains he had taken with them in the Ritual and otherwise.

"For he whose wakeful tenderness removes,
The obstructing thorn, which wounds the friend
he loves
Cheers not another's rugged path alone,
But scatters roses to adorn his own."

The W.M. proposed "The Past Masters" who retired with the greatest éclat: and he would tell the visiting brethren why that was so, namely, because their are no P.Ms., who attend so well and give so much time. Some of them complain that in a measure, on their retiring they are shelved—but he would venture to suggest to them how this might be remedied. Frequently, when abroad, he had been an edified auditor of lectures by P.Ms. on general subjects and our P.Ms. might well follow this example. There are P.Ms. amongst us who have hobbies, who have given much time and study to scientific and other subjects. Bro. J. Ahrens, P.M., for instance upon electricity, &c. Talking of hobbies reminded him of a gentleman who was once speaking to a lawyer about his pet hobby butterflies, when he courteously remarked "bother your butterflies, the only hobbies worth attending to are six-and-eight-pences!" Bro. J.

A. Unna, P.M., P.Prov. G.R. proposed "The Worshipful Masters of the Hope, Pentalpha, Shakespeare, and Eccleshill Lodges," and in doing so, alluded to the time (six-and-thirty years ago) when he had the pleasure in being a member of the Hope Lodge. They all looked to her as their mother lodge, and thought very highly of her for having done so much for the Masonic Charities. The Pentalpha too, was flourishing and going on well, and so also was the Shakespeare, and their brethren, at Eccleshill, who were noted for their hospitality and good fellowship. Bro. William W. Barlow, W.M. of the Hope, thanked them for the honour done that lodge, in giving the toast of their W.M. He also personally thanked Bro. J. A. Unna, P.M., for the flattering terms in which he had proposed it, and referred to the time (more than twenty years ago) when he had the pleasure of associating with him in the Hope meetings, then held in the old Dispensary Building, in Darley Street, when all was harmony amongst them, and although a cloud afterwards appeared in the horizon of Masonry in Bradford, in those days, it has now happily dispelled; and like the storm we had witnessed in the material world, during the past week, had had the effect of rendering the atmosphere more enjoyable. Bro. Barlow, W.M., congratulated the W.M. on his being raised, by the unanimous vote of his brethren, to the highest honour in their power to confer, as also upon the very gratifying ceremony they had been privileged to witness that evening; and he expressed a hope that the W.M. also might live not only to initiate, but in like manner, to install his son, in his mother lodge, and that on that occasion he might again be honoured by the august presence of the P.G.M., or the D.P.G.M., who, in the course of conversation on the subject had expressed to him the great interest he had taken in seeing the father instal (also by his father) his son, at whose initiation, fourteen years ago, he was present. Bro. Barlow, in thanking the W.M. and brethren for their hospitality, trusted they would favour the Hope with a visit in return. Bro. R. Richardson, W.M. of the Pentalpha, thanked them for the way in which his name had been proposed and received by the brethren present. He congratulated the W.M. on his election, and hoped, as he had no doubt would be the case, that he would have a prosperous year, and he was glad to see he had taken the initiative to bring that about. He also desired to thank him for the very splendid entertainment of that evening, and trusted the W.M. and the brethren of the Harmony would return his visit. Bro. A. Nicholson, W.M. of the Shakespeare, in a few apt and complimentary terms, thanked all the brethren for their kindly and hospitable reception; and in congratulating the W.M. on his attaining his proud position, wished him and the lodge every happiness and prosperity, and hoped soon to have the pleasure of a visit from them to his lodge. Bro. Ed. Smith, W.M. of the Eccleshill, in thanking the brethren for their reception, said at this hour, as the W.M. had intimated, it was late to make a speech; but were it not so, he did not know that he could make one. However, he thanked them very heartily, and trusted they would return his visit, when everything would be done that the Eccleshill could do to give them a hospitable reception. Bro. Johnson, P.M., proposed "The visiting Brethren," and, as Chancellor of the Exchequer, was glad to do so; and if they would only come again, would see that their wants were attended to. In congratulating the W.M., he said what pleasure it had afforded him to see him initiated, and now installed, he felt that it was the proudest moment he had experienced in Freemasonry. Bro. Wood, P.M., P. Prov. G.S.D. of Derbyshire, in responding for the visitors, said how much gratification it had given him to be present at the installation of his cousin, Bro. C. F. Unna, and he wished him every happiness and satisfaction in his exalted position. The W.M. proposed "The Health of the Musical Brethren," thanking them very much for their kind efforts during the evening. Bro. Mallins responded, and gave "The Wives, Daughters, and Sweethearts of Free and Accepted Masons," in a most happy and complimentary manner. Bro. Webb responded on behalf of the ladies in his inimitably humorous style, every one present feeling that no one could have done it better, save the dear ones themselves. The W.M. brought this exceedingly instructive and pleasant evening's proceedings to a close by giving the Tyler's toast. We should not omit to mention that the proceedings were most agreeably interspersed by most excellent harmony from Bros. Unna, W.M.; R. Richardson, W.M.; Sutcliffe, Skelly, Wilcock, Watson, Mullins, and Webb.

CAPE OF GOOD HOPE.

PORT ELIZABETH.—Lodge of Good Hope (No. 863).—A meeting of this lodge was held on Thursday, April 18th, for the purpose of installing the Worshipful Master for the current year, and investing his duly appointed officers with their insignia of office. There was a good attendance, including a large number of visiting brethren. On the dais were Bro. Tonks, W.M. of the Lodge of Good Will, and Past Masters Fairbridge, Pearson, Kemsley, and Bain. Bro. Bain conducted the ceremony of installation, and performed those duties as usual with marked ability. The Lodge of Good Hope is now constituted as follows:—Bros. Chas. Wheelright, W.M.; A. Brittain, S.W.; J. Lonney, J.W.; J. Payne, Treasurer; E. R. Smyth, Secretary; J. Bredell, Organist; J. Phillips, Master of Ceremonies; T. Worrell, and W. Scruton, Deacons; C. Adecock, and R. W. Kemsley, Stewards; G. Holmes, I.G.; Jas. Morley, O.G. At the conclusion of the business of the evening, the brethren, to the number of about fifty, adjourned to the banqueting-room and sat down to an excellent repast, prepared under the direction of Bro. Phillips, who had caused everything to be laid out in the very best style. After justice had been done to the solids, the cheering wine cup was introduced, and the usual Masonic and complimentary toasts were drunk. Amongst these was the health of the newly installed Master, which was proposed by Bro. Tonks, W.M. It was well received, and drunk with enthusiasm. The "Installing Master" was next given, which was also suitably honoured. "The newly appointed Officers" was then proposed, followed by an interchange of compliments between the two local lodges. Then "The Other Visitors" were toasted. The toasts were interspersed with music, which much enlivened the proceedings, and added greatly to the pleasure of the meeting.

Royal Arch.

BERKS AND BUCKS.

WINDSOR.—Windsor Castle Chapter (No. 771).—A convocation of this chapter, was held at the Masonic Hall, St. Alban's-street, Windsor, on Tuesday the 18th inst., when a considerable number of Companions attended, amongst whom were E. Comps. J. Stevens, P.Z. 720, and M.E.Z. elect; Robert Harvey, M.E.Z. 720, as H.; H. Smith, J. 720, as J.; John Read, P.Z. 720; also Comps. J. S. Tolley, Scribe. E.; Herbert Berry, Scribe N.; E. Grisbrook, P.S.; Hodges, 1st A.S.; Kent, Janitor; Caleb Holden, R. Martin, E. Fuller, and others. Visitors, Comps. Herbert Burny, W. Worrell, Irons, &c. The minutes of the previous convocation having been confirmed and ballot taken for nine candidates, Comp. Stevens, as M.E.Z., exalted Bros. Fred. Fleck, Geo. H. Powell, and T. Welham Clarke, into Royal Arch Masonry, with full ceremony and musical services. Apologies for non-attendance and promises to attend next convocation were received from the other candidates. The installation of Comp. Stevens as M.E.Z., then took place, and the chapter was in regular form placed under his charge for the ensuing twelve months. The installation of Comps. Martin and Fuller, as H. and J. respectively were deferred until the ensuing meeting. Sundry propositions for brethren and other Masonic business having been taken, the Companions adjourned to the Castle Hotel, where an elegant cold collation was prepared. A very agreeable evening was spent by all present, and the proceedings, both at and subsequent to the chapter gave considerable promise of future success. The Companions from London left by an early train, well satisfied with the entertainment which had been afforded to them.

Mark Masonry.

SUFFOLK.

IPSWICH.—Albert Victor Lodge (No. 70).—The ordinary quarterly meeting of this lodge was held on Monday, the 17th inst., when there were present:—Bros. Emra Holmes, W.M.; Rev. R. N. Sanderson, P.G.C., I.P.M.; C. T. Townsend, P.G.D., P.M., Sec.; E. Robertson, S.W.; G. Cresswell, J.W.; A. D. George, J.D.; C. Davy, Acting S.O.; &c. Visitors:—Bros. C. V. Childe and J. Burton. The lodge having been opened, the minutes of lasting meeting were read and confirmed, and the ballot was taken for Bro. Aiken, surgeon, of the Virtue and Silence Lodge, Hadleigh, who was unanimously elected. Bro. Arthur John Grimwade, of the same lodge, who had been previously elected, being the only candidate present, he was admitted. The W.M. resigned the gavel to Bro. Sanderson, and assumed the position of M.O., and the candidate was advanced to the honourable degree of Mark Master, the ceremony being performed with Bro. Sanderson's well-known ability. A candidate for advancement was proposed who was about to leave the country, and the W.M. decided to hold a Lodge of Emergency for that purpose on Friday, the 28th inst. The lodge was afterwards closed and the brethren retired for refreshment. On the removal of the cloth, the W.M. briefly proposed the "Queen," which was given with the customary loyalty. In proposing the "Grand Mark Master," the W.M. said it was not quite clear to him who was the G.M., as although Earl Percy was elected he had not been installed. Whether, however, Bro. the Rev. Raymond Portal the late Grand Master, or Lord Percy was to be accepted, the name of both was a guarantee, and it was only necessary to allude to such excellent Masons to ensure a very cordial reception to the toast, with which they were associated. The W.M. next proposed "The D.G.M., the Earl of Limerick, and the rest of the Grand Officers present and past, and coupled with it the names of Bros. Sanderson, P.G.C., and C. T. Townsend, P.G.D." He said that office in Grand Mark Lodge was always conferred upon brethren for merit and ability alone, he wished as much could be said of Grand Lodge of England, and they had evidence of this in the persons of their excellent Secretary Bro. Townsend, and their highly esteemed I.P.M., Bro. Sanderson. Bros. Sanderson and Townsend responded, and the latter hoped he might see the day when all brethren present might be Past Grand Officers. The W.M. next proposed, "The newly advanced Mark Mason, Bro. A. J. Grimwade," who, he felt sure, would become an expert Mason at no distant day. Bro. Grimwade, in acknowledging the toast said, that he did not intend to stop at Mark Masonry, but to go on into the higher degrees, and he hoped he might become in time a credit to the Craft. Bro. Emra Holmes next proposed "The Visiting Brethren," expressing the great pleasure it gave him personally to welcome Bro. Childe amongst them. He knew that brother to be a very enthusiastic Mason, and he felt sure he would prove an ornament to the Craft. Bro. Burton was not a stranger to many of them, he being an officer of the British Union Lodge. The Albert Victor Mark Lodge was always delighted to welcome visitors, indeed, all the Masonic bodies in Ipswich were, and he could only call upon the brethren to drink to the health of the Visitors. Bro. Childe in reply said, that he had feared there might be some little difference between their W.M. and himself, owing to a matter to which he would not further allude,* but he was rejoiced to find that such was not the case; he believed he had, thanks to Masonry, only made a friend. Bro. Spalding supplied the supper as usual, and the brethren separated at the customary hour.

* Vide, Letters on Royal Ark Mariners, and Bro. Holmes Lecture on Freemasonry, in the Freemason of the 8th inst.

MASONIC PRESENTATION.—At the regular assembly of the Union de Molay Encampment and Priory No. 104, E. R. at St. John's, New Brunswick, Past Eminent Commander Robert Marshall, 33°, was presented by the Frateres with a valuable testimonial.

PRESENTATION TO BRO. RICHARD WOOF, P.M., P. PROV. S.G.W. WORCESTERSHIRE, &c.

(From Berrow's Worcester Journal.)

The presentation of the valuable articles of antique plate forming the testimonial to Bro. Richard Woof, Esq., F.S.A., took place at the Guildhall, Worcester, on Wednesday, the 5th inst. The zeal, ability, and courtesy with which during a period of fourteen years, Bro. Woof discharged the duties of Town Clerk of that city, and the claims to the regard of the inhabitants of this city and the neighbourhood which that gentleman possesses in so eminent a degree, have on previous occasions been referred to in the columns of Berrow's Worcester Journal, and with the very prompt and liberal response to the appeal for subscriptions towards the testimonial, our readers are also familiar. It will, therefore, be sufficient now to record the proceedings in connection with the presentation, which, as will be seen, was of an unostentatious character, the Committee believing that such an arrangement would be the most congenial to Bro. Woof's feelings.

At twelve o'clock a large number of the subscribers assembled in the Council Chamber.

The articles forming the testimonial were arranged on a table in front of the Mayor, who presided.

The following is a description of the articles:—

1. First, perhaps, is the Silver Parcel-gilt Cup, of the form called the Hanap. This is a very fine Cup, with cover, twenty-five inches in height; the body, cover, and base are of the bulb (somewhat akin to the pine-apple) form, and gilt. Upon the base, or foot, rests a silver barrel, upon which a beautifully modelled Bacchanalian figure, also of silver, and having grapes and a cup in either hand, is seated; the barrel and lower portion of the body of the cup are also ornamented with vines. Portions of the cup are delicately engraved, and other parts are ornamented with the quaint Grachie work. The cover is surmounted with a small, erect Bacchanalian figure. This unusually fine specimen may have been a grace-cup of some moyen-age municipality, and is supposed to have been the handiwork of that great artist of the 15th century, David Prinz. Somewhat similar examples are extant, dating from 1450 to 1580.

2-3. A pair of Flagons, silver gilt, of rare beauty, and cunning art. These are twelve inches in height, and of the narrow upright form, 3½ inches in diameter at the top, widening to 5 inches at the base. They are both of very skilful repoussé work, and present a mass of figures and allegorical objects. Upon the upper compartment of one are illustrations of town and country, and on the lower, emblematical figures of Faith, Hope, and Charity, surmounted by festoons of fruit and flowers. Upon the other are allegorical figures of the arts and sciences, with a background exhibiting a mountainous country and castellated buildings. The cover of each is surmounted by a small, seated, Bacchanalian figure. Flagons of this form, dating in the 16th century, are known.

4. A Silver Parcel-gilt Guild Cup and Cover, of very fine repoussé floral work. This cup is 14 inches in height, of very elegant form, and supported by a draped female statuette; the cover being surmounted by a small figure, holding a banner scroll. This cup is understood to have belonged, locally, to Luneberg, Hanover, and was recently purchased at Altona. Within the cover a shield of arms and inscription are engraved; the shield, which is placed upon a double eagle displayed, bears a vase containing a tulip between two roses, and is surmounted by a coronet. The inscription (round the shield) is—"Diesen Pocal haben die eltesten Und Sauebtlichen Meister der to PPFergestiFFF. Ao. 1869." The oldest and most skilful masters of the Potter's Guild have this cup). On the rim of the cover and foot of the cup the following names faintly appear in old punctured lettering:

Hans Rebendt,	Heinrich Gruber,
Remholdt Puschadel,	Peter Eichis,
Andrew Fahik,	Johan Panna,
Lundernich Pilker,	J. J. Lidenberg,
Mojjes Kook,	G. W. Haense,
Johann Gruff,	G. G. Russan,
Statius Ludiking	H. G. A. Gruttner.

5. A silver chässe, or reliquary. This is a remarkable example of ancient metal work, and of which very few specimens are known. It stands on ball feet, is about five by eight inches in size, and of considerable weight. The lid, or cover, is of the roof shape, and is secured by a quaint lock, and bolted in a curious manner by the ornamental gilt bosses of the lid. The upper edges of the front, back, and ends are ornamented with gilt crocketing, having spirets on the points; and the lid, or roof, has a gilt open work cresting, with a spiret in the centre. The front, ends, and back are ornamented with seven gilt statuettes of saints. Known examples of the same form bear date about 1500.

6. A Case of Apostle Spoons. These are of recent workmanship, the bowls and stems being modelled from an original in the possession of Sir E. A. H. Lechmere, Bart. Each is surmounted by the figure of an apostle, whose identity is denoted by the emblem he bears, as follows:—

Andrew, a cross saltire; Matthew, a purse; a dolphin at his feet, and an axe; Bartholomew, a knife and book; Philip, a basket of loaves, and a lance with double cross; James, a staff, scallop-shell, and bottle; Peter, Keys; James, (the less), a saw; Simon (Zelotes), a fish or sword; John, a cup, with a serpent issuing; Thomas, a lance, or a carpenter's square; Judas Iscariot, a purse; Judas, brother of James, a club. These figures have not been copied from any existing specimens of apostle spoons, but from the best printed authorities. The figures and bowls are gilt, and the stems of silver. Perfect sets of original spoons are rare, extremely difficult to obtain, and of high value. Examples of the dates 1515-16-19-30, 1634-7-9 and 59 are mentioned in Chaffers' Tables of Hall Marks and Date Letters. (J. Davy and Sons, London, 1872).

7. A Fine Rose Water Dish, 27 inches in diameter, parcel-gilt, of the design known as the Battle of the Amazons (Vechté), from the manufactory of Messrs. Elkington and Co.

8. A Carriage Clock, of finest workmanship, in gilt, plain Gothic case; striking the hours and chiming the half hours and quarters. The dial bears the following inscription:—

"Presented as a public tribute to Richard Woof, Esq., F.S.A., with several examples of ancient silver work, upon retirement from the office of Town Clerk of Worcester, by his friends in the City and County. 1872."

This clock was selected as being of every-day practical use, portable, and forming an excellent medium for the inscription, which could not be suitably placed upon the other articles of the presentation; it is enclosed in a morocco travelling case, and admirably answered the main purpose of its selection.

The above articles accompanied the resolution adopted by the Town Council, on Bro. Woof's retirement from the office of Town Clerk, which was inscribed on vellum, beautifully illuminated, and in an elegant frame. It was worded as follow:—"At an adjourned meeting of the Council and Local Board of Health of the City of Worcester, holden in the Council Chamber, Guildhall, in the said city, on Tuesday, the 14th day of November, 1871, Henry Willis, Esq., in the chair, Mr. Richard Woof, F.S.A., Town Clerk and Clerk to the Local Board of Health of the City of Worcester, having announced to the Corporation his intention to retire from this office at the expiration of the present year, it was moved by the Mayor, seconded by Alderman Thos. Rowley Hill, and carried unanimously—That the following resolution be inscribed on vellum, and forwarded to Mr. Woof, and that it be also entered on the minutes of the Council:—That this Council expresses its deep regret at the resignation of Mr. Woof, as Town Clerk and Clerk to the Local Board of Health of this city, and desires to record its high sense of the value of his services as their legal adviser, and of the admirable and courteous manner in which he has performed all the duties of the office for a period of fourteen years, during which time he has gained the good opinion and best wishes of all, by his readiness to assist in every movement having for its object the welfare of the citizens of Worcester, by whom his resignation will be regarded as a great public loss. Given under the common seal of the Mayor, Aldermen, and citizens of the city of Worcester. H. Willis, Mayor."

The inscription was surmounted by the city arms. The seal appended to the inscription was much admired. It was executed, in gutta percha gilded, by the Town Clerk, (Mr. Southall), who expended considerable time and labour in its preparation.

THE GRAND MASTER MASON OF SCOTLAND.

(COMMUNICATED).

In consequence of the members of the Grand Lodge of Scotland giving an adverse vote to the excellent suggestions of the Grand Master, the Right Hon. the Earl of Rosslyn, that distinguished and worthy nobleman has intimated his intention not to accept re-election as Grand Master.

The following circulars have been issued in the Lodge, that the M.W. the Grand Master Mason of Scotland will alter his decision, but it is unlikely that he will, and were it not for the good of the cause, the opposers of the suggested new laws, deserve that some heavy penalty should be visited upon them for their short-sighted and unmasonic behaviour, and, perhaps the retirement of the Grand Master will have that effect:—

Freemasons' Hall, 98, George Street,
Edinburgh, 12th June, 1872.

R.W. Dear Sir and Brother,—

The Most Worshipful the Grand Master, the Right Hon. the Earl of Rosslyn, having made known his intention of vacating the Throne of Grand Lodge, at the annual election in November, it has been considered most desirable to make an effort to induce his lordship to retain office another year, a movement with which, it is believed, your lodge will cordially sympathize. The accompanying report has accordingly been prepared for signature by the members of Grand Lodge, and of the daughter lodges throughout the country, and it is hoped that it will be largely signed by the members of your lodge.

As it is intended to present the requisition early in July, I shall feel greatly obliged by your bringing the same immediately before your lodge, and having it signed and returned to me as early as possible.

Should you require additional sheets, they may be had on application at this office.

I remain, R.W. Sir and Brother, yours truly and fraternally,

JOHN LAURIE, Grand Clerk.

To the Right Honourable the Earl of Rosslyn, &c., Most Worshipful Grand Master Mason of Scotland.

Most Worshipful Grand Master,

We, the Right Honourable the Earl of Dalhousie, K.T., G.C.B., Right Worshipful Past Grand Master, Henry Inglis, Esq., of Torsonce, Right Worshipful Substitute Grand Master, and other Office-bearers and members of Grand Lodge of Free and Accepted Masons of Scotland, having learned that your Lordship has expressed your intention to vacate the Throne of Grand Lodge at the ensuing annual election, venture to request your reconsideration of that resolution. There is but one opinion in the Craft as to the manner in which your Lordship has discharged the duties of your exalted position, and the active interest your Lordship has taken in the management of the affairs of Grand Lodge, and the promotion and extension of its benevolent institutions.

Duly impressed as we are with these considerations, and by the necessity which exists, under present circumstances, of the government of the Craft being again confided to the able, dignified, and impartial guidance which we now possess, we most respectfully and earnestly request your Lordship to allow yourself to be put in nomination for the Throne of Grand Lodge for the next ensuing year.

We have the honour to remain, Most Worshipful Grand Master, your Lordship's most obedient servants,

METROPOLITAN MASONIC MEETINGS.

For the Week ending Friday, July 5, 1872.

The Editor will be glad to have notice from Secretaries of Lodges and Chapters of any change in place or time of meeting.

SATURDAY, JUNE 29.

- Provincial Grand Lodge of Middlesex, Greyhound Hotel, Hampton Court, at 3.
- Star Lodge of Instruction (1275), Marquis of Granby, New Cross-road, at 7; Bro. C. S. Dille, Preceptor
- Sphinx Lodge of Instruction (1329), Castle Tavern, Camberwell-road, at 7.30; Bros. Thomas and Worthington, Preceptors.
- Mount Sinai Chapter of Instruction, Union Tavern, Air-street, at 8; Comp. Brett, Preceptor.
- Manchester Lodge of Instruction, Yorkshire Grey, London Street, Fitzroy-square, at 8; Bro. Ash, P.M., Preceptor.

MONDAY, JULY 1.

- Lodge 16, Royal Alpha, Willis's Rooms, St. James's.
- " 25, Robert Burns, Freemasons' Hall.
- " 1319, Asaph, Freemasons' Hall.
- Chapter 28, Old King's Arms, Freemasons' Hall.
- Mark Lodge 159, Panmure, Balham Hotel, Balham.
- Sincerity Lodge of Instruction (174), Railway Tavern, Fenchurch-street Station, at 7.
- Strong Man Lodge of Instruction (45), Old Jerusalem Tavern, St. John's Gate, Clerkenwell, at 8; Bro. James Terry, Preceptor.
- Camden Lodge of Instruction (704), Adelaide Tavern, Haverstock-hill, at 8; Bro. T. A. Adams, Preceptor.
- Eastern Star Lodge of Instruction (95), Royal Hotel, Mile-end-road, at 7.30; Bro. E. Gottheil, Preceptor.
- British Oak Lodge of Instruction, Bank of Friendship Tavern, Mile End, at 7 for 8.
- St. James's Union Lodge of Instruction (180), Horse and Groom Tavern, Winsley-street, (opposite the Pantheon), Oxford-street, at 8; Bro. J. R. Stacey, Preceptor.
- Wellington Lodge of Instruction, White Swan Tavern, Deptford, at 8; Bro. C. G. Willey, P.M. 1155, Preceptor.
- St. John of Wapping Lodge of Instruction (1306), Gun Tavern, High-street, Wapping, at 7; Bro. T. Mortlock, Preceptor.
- West Kent Lodge of Improvement (1297), St. Saviour's College, Stansted-road, Forest-hill, at 7.30; Bro. H. W. Lindus, Preceptor.

TUESDAY, JULY 2.

- Colonial Board at 3 o'clock.
 - Lodge 167, St. John's, Holly Bush Tavern, Hampstead.
 - " 1257, Grosvenor, Caledonian Hotel, Adelphi.
 - " 1259, Duke of Edinburgh, New Globe Tavern, Bow-road.
 - " 1261, Golden Rule, Masons' Hall, Masons'-avenue.
 - " 1298, Royal Standard, Marquess Tavern, Canonbury.
 - Chap. 169, Temperance, White Swan Tavern, Deptford.
 - Metropolitan Chapter of Instruction, Portugal Hotel, Fleet-street, at 7; Comp. Brett, Preceptor.
 - Domestic Lodge of Instruction, Palmerston Tav., Grosvenor-park, Camberwell, at 8; Bro. John Thomas, Preceptor.
 - Faith Lodge of Instruction, Refreshment Rooms, Victoria-st. (opposite Westminster Palace Hotel) at 8; Bro. C. A. Cottebrune, Preceptor.
 - Yarborough Lodge of Instruction, Green Dragon, Stepney, at 8; Bro. Isaac Saqui, Preceptor.
 - Prince Fredk. William Lodge of Instruction (753), Knights of St. John Tavern, St. John's Wood; Bro. F. G. Baker, Preceptor.
 - Dalhousie Lodge of Instruction, King Edward, Triangle, Hackney, at 7.30. Bro. J. Saunders, Preceptor.
 - Florence Nightingale Lodge of Instruction, Masonic Hall, William-street, Woolwich, at 7.30.
 - Prosperity Lodge of Instruction, Gladstone Tavern, Bishopsgate-st. Within, at 7.30; Bro. Bolton, (W.M. 1227), Preceptor.
 - St. Marylebone Lodge of Instruction (1305), British Stores Tavern, New-street, St. John's Wood, at 8; Bro. T. A. Adams, Preceptor.
- WEDNESDAY, JULY 3.
- Pythagorean Lodge of Instruction (79), Prince of Orange, Greenwich, at 8; Bro. J. Robt. Nash, Preceptor.
 - United Strength Lodge of Instruction (228), the Grafton Arms, Prince of Wales's Road, Kentish Town, at 8; Bro. J. N. Frost, Preceptor.
 - Israel Lodge of Instruction, Rising Sun Tavern, Globe-road, at 7.30; Bro. Isaac Saqui, Preceptor.
 - New Concord Lodge of Instruction, Rosemary Branch Tavern, Hoxton, at 8.
 - Confidence Lodge of Instruction, Railway Tav., London-street, City, at 7.30.
 - Royal Union Lodge of Instruction, Horse and Groom Tavern, Winsley-street, Oxford-street, at 8. Bro. T. A. Adams, Preceptor.
 - Peckham Lodge of Instruction, Maismore Arms, Park-road, Peckham at 8; Bro. David Rose, Preceptor.
 - Temperance in the East Lodge of Instruction, George the Fourth, Catherine-street, Poplar.
 - Stanhope Lodge of Instruction, Thicket Hotel, Anerly, at 7.30 p.m.; Bro. H. W. Lindus, Preceptor.

THURSDAY, JULY 4.

- Lodge 10, Westminster and Keystone, Freemasons' Hall.
- " 554, Yarborough, Green Dragon, Stepney.
- " 822, Victoria Rifles, Freemasons' Hall.
- " 1155, Excelsior, Sydney Arms, Lewisham-road.
- " 1351, St. Clement Danes, 265, Strand.
- Mark Lodge 3, Keystone, Ship and Turtle, Leadenhall-st
- The R.A. Chapter of Improvement, Freemasons' Hall, at 7; Comp. Brett, Preceptor. Ceremony, explanation of R.A. Jewel and Solids, part sections.
- Fidelity Lodge of Instruction (3), Yorkshire Grey, London-st., Tottenham Court-road, at 8; Bro. T. A. Adams, Preceptor.
- Panmure Lodge of Instruction (720), Balham Hotel, Balham, at 7.30; Bro. John Thomas, Preceptor.
- Finsbury Lodge of Instruction, Jolly Anglers' Tavern, Bath-street, City-road; Bro. Stean, Preceptor.
- United Mariners' Lodge of Instruction, Three Cranes, Mile-end-road, at 8; Bro. T. J. Barnes, Preceptor.
- Whittington Lodge of Instruction (862), Crown Tavern, Holborn, at 8; Bro. Lewis Alexander, P.M. 188. Preceptor.
- Chigwell Lodge of Instruction, Bald-faced Stag Hotel, Buckhurst Hill, at 7.30.

FRIDAY, JULY 5.

- Unions Emulation Lodge of Improvement for M.M.'s Freemasons' Hall, at 7.
- Temperance Lodge of Instruction, Victoria Tav., Victoria road, Deptford, at 8.
- Burdett Coutts Lodge of Instruction (1278), Approach Tavern, Approach-road, Victoria-park, at 8; Bro. Geo. W. Verry, Preceptor.
- Clapton Lodge of Instruction, White Hart, Clapton, at 7.30; Bro. John Saunders, Preceptor.
- Royal Standard Lodge of Instruction (1298), The Castle Tavern, Holloway, at 8; Bro. R. Lee, (P.M. 193, W.M. 1298), Preceptor.
- Pythagorean Chapter of Instruction (No. 79), Prince of Orange, Greenwich-road, at 8; Comp. W. West Smith, Preceptor.
- Westbourne Lodge of Instruction (733), Horse and Groom, Winsley-street, Oxford-street, at 8.
- Metropolitan Lodge of Instruction, Portugal Hotel, Fleet-street, at 7; Bro. Brett, Preceptor.
- Belgrave Lodge of Instruction, Duke of Wellington Hotel, Spring-gardens, Charing-cross; Bro. Pulsford, Preceptor.
- Doric Lodge of Instruction, Three Cranes Tavern, Mile-end-road, at 8; Bro. Isaac Saqui, Preceptor.
- Robert Burns Lodge of Instruction, Union Tavern, Air-street, Regent-st., at 8; Bro. W. Watson, Preceptor.
- Burgoyne Lodge of Instruction, Grafton Arms, Prince of Wales's-road, N.W., at 8.
- St. Luke's Lodge of Instruction (144), Gladstone Tavern, Brompton-road, S.W.
- United Pilgrims Lodge of Instruction, Duke of Edinburgh, Shepherd's-lane, Brixton, at 7; Bro. J. Thomas, P.M., Preceptor.
- Duke of Edinburgh Lodge of Instruction, Silver Lion, Penny-fields, Poplar, at 7; Br. D. S. Potts, Preceptor.
- St. James's Lodge of Instruction, Gregorian Arms Tavern, Jamaica-road, Bermondsey, at 8; Bro. Howes, P.M., Preceptor.

Advertisements.

GEORGE KENNING,
198, Fleet Street, E.C.
WATCH & CLOCK MANUFACTURER,
JEWELLER, &c.

	£	s.	d.
Strong Silver Watches	from	1	1
Silver English Levers (own make)	from	3	10
Ladies Gold English Levers ..	from	9	9
Gents Gold English Levers ..	from	12	12
Gold Watches.....	from	2	12
Good Sound 8-day Clocks, in neat cases	from	0	10
Good Sound 8-day Clocks, with alarum	from	0	15

Watches, Clocks, Jewellery, Medals, and Jewels, suitable for Presentation, &c., made to order with dispatch.

All kinds of repairs done on the premises, at moderate prices, by experienced workmen.

George Kennings' Ladies' Gold English Levers, unequalled £10 10s.

Country orders will receive prompt attention.

Manufactory: 2, 3 & 4, Little Britain.

A BROTHER from the North is open to an engagement. Has had experience as Salesman, Traveller, Cashier, Book-keeper, &c.

ORGAN FOR DISPOSAL.—A grand high class instrument, three full rows of keys, 35 stops, nearly 1400 speaking pipes, equal to new, by an eminent builder, for less than half its value. Height 21, width 16, and depth 13 feet. Inspection of, thorough practical men, invited. Sketches, &c., of Mr. Kennard, Margate.

TABLE OF CONTENTS

Aids to Study.....	407
Surrey Masonic Hall.....	408
Freemasonry in the North of Ireland.....	408
Freemasonry in New Zealand.....	408
Presentation to Bro. Dr. J. D. Moore.....	409
Consecration of the Marlborough Lodge, No. 1399... 408
Capitular Freemasonry in Great Britain and Ireland 310
Barrow-in-Furness Masonic Club.....	311
Masonic Tidings.....	411
Grand Lodge of New York.....	412
CRAFT MASONRY:—
Metropolitan.....	414
Provincial.....	415
Ireland.....	415
ROYAL ARCH:—
Provincial.....	416
MARK MASONRY:—
Provincial.....	416
OBITUARY:—
Bro Alfred Pickup.....	417
Bro. Jesse Taylor.....	417
Masonic Meetings for next week... 418
Advertisements..... 405, 406, 419, 420

AIDS TO STUDY.

By Bro. Wm. Carpenter P.M. & P.Z. 717.

VIII.

It has often been said that Masonry is not religion. This, however, is only partially true. Masonry assumes that the true and only God has revealed His will as to human conduct, and to lay an adequate foundation for this, has revealed so much of His own being and character, and of His relation to us, as our Creator, Governor, and Redeemer, as to enable us to form a true conception of our obligation to worship Him; i.e. to love and serve Him, and to regard Him as the only object of our adoration, thanksgiving, and devotion. All this is comprised in the sacred writings, which, by way of eminence, are collectively called THE BIBLE, or THE BOOK. Masonry recognises this, and expressly declares, at every candidate's initiation, that "The sacred writings are to rule and govern our faith;" and, in addition, all its meetings are opened and closed by prayer, and all its ceremonies are interspersed with prayer, recognising these religious truths, and drawing their force, obligation, and appropriateness from them.

To the orthodox Mason—by which I mean a member of the Craft who really enters into, and appreciates its mysteries, usages, and ritual—it must be a matter of gratification to find that the studies and researches of recent times, especially in archaeology, ethnology, and philology, are continually multiplying the evidences and proofs of the verity of the history and events we find recorded in the Bible, and that what—some three-quarters of a century since—were urged as arguments subversive of the historical veracity of the Biblical history, by such writers as Volney and Palmer, are now revealing facts which furnish undoubted proofs of its authenticity and historical accuracy. While the scholars of Germany were building in the dimness of their closets, a theory to persuade themselves and others of the fictitious character of the Old Testament history, the well applied zeal and industry of travellers, historians, and linguists, opened up the chambers of Nineveh and Babylon, uncovered the rocks of Sinai, discovered the key for unlocking the hieroglyphic secrets of old Egypt, laid bare the foundations of the Temple at Jerusalem, brought into the light of day the veritable records of Moabitish kings, and extorted, by patience of research, and marvellous inductive skill, a thousand other corroborations of Hebrew history and prophecy. It cannot be gainsaid that the veracity of Scripture history is confirmed by almost every additional discovery of modern science and research, and that records of the past are almost daily exhumed, that attest the historical character of events and personages which transcendental criticism had boldly impugned, as simply mythical.

In a former paper, I glanced at the very scanty and altogether imperfect knowledge we have of Egypt's ancient history, in consequence of the paucity of its existing records, and the difficulties which long existed in deciphering such as are found in the hieroglyphics of her still preserved monuments of stone and papyri. Many of these inscriptions have now been deciphered, and if they do not afford the means of constructing an Egyptian history, they afford the most decided, as well as most unlooked for confirmation of biblical history and incidents, and thus justify the claims of the sacred volume to the character of authentic history.

Some writers have seriously given to Egypt a history of tens of thousands of years, and tried to show that some of the ancient monuments were erected long before the period fixed for the Deluge; but nothing has yet been discovered amongst its vast mass of ancient inscriptions which points to so remote a chronology, while there are many presumptive evidences that these monuments are all subsequent to the time of Noah. Herodotus, indeed, speaks of 341 kings, whose united reigns reached over 11,340 years, and in connection with this, he states that during his time the sun rose twice in the West and twice set in the East, and that these strange phenomena produced no particular effect on the inhabitants, the country, or the Nile! (B. ii. c. 42.) These statements are, probably, two fables which Herodotus picked up amongst the gossiping priests, and which he felt bound to give, because they were extraordinary. Often, when relating the strange tales of the sacerdotal order, he gives plain indications of his own want of faith, though, in his relation of the account of these 341 kings, he expresses no doubt of its accuracy.

But the alleged antiquity of Egypt has been satisfactorily accounted for by men who have carefully investigated the subject. At one period of Egyptian history, as suggested in a former paper, a considerable number of princes ruled at the same time, in different parts of the country. Each of these princes has been given a distinct period, and the whole years of each prince have been added together, and the sum total has shewn a chronology of tens of thousands of years. Besides this, Mr. Bryant has shewn that still falser reckonings have helped to make up this antiquity. All the Egyptian kings had a numerous list of names and titles. Each of these names and titles has been made into a separate person, and each person into a separate and independent sovereign, to which an appropriate number of years has been attached; thus the rule of a single dynasty has been multiplied many times over, and the chronology of Egypt has become utterly confused and uncertain.

The first rulers of Egypt being, according to their traditions, gods, and the accounts of their reigns purely mythological, periods of twenty or thirty thousand years are matters of small consideration. During biblical times, beginning with Abram, the history, and the chronology too, have become more reliable; and had the Scripture accounts given the specific names of the kings who reigned, instead of the general name of Pharaoh, which simply means "monarch," the history and chronology of Egypt would have been considerably improved. But, taking the authority of Bunsen, it may be stated generally, that for about 1000 years B.C., there begins a series of contemporaneous events, of which evidence is found in the Bible and the Egyptian authorities (Egypteus Stelle.) All the statements of the Bible, in relation to Egypt, so far, are admitted, even by Bunsen, to be historically accurate, because they agree with the teachings of the monuments. Surely, then, it is presumable, that all the Scripture statements, as far down as Abraham, are equally reliable. Other, and equally careful students of history, indeed, have found points of contact between the Bible accounts and Egyptian monuments at a much more ancient date than that at which Bunsen finds them.

The key which has opened the literary treasures of the ancient Egyptians to the scientific world, is the famous Rosetta Stone, now to be seen in the British Museum. It is the fragment of an oblong slab of black basalt, from the "far Syene," and was found at Rosetta, in Lower Egypt, in 1799. It bears a trilingual inscription; the upper one in hieroglyphics, the lower one in Greek, while the centre one is in a character commonly known as the enchorial, or demotic; i.e., the writing of the people, as distinct from that of the priests. The Greek text showed that the tablet contained a recognition of the highest honours of the Pharaohs in the person of Ptolemy Epiphans, who reigned in Egypt at the close of the second century, B.C. As engraved copies of the stone became common in Europe, its decipherment appeared to scholars a problem capable of being solved. Seevne and Porson, by restoring and interpreting the Greek inscription, greatly facilitated this most difficult task. To an Englishman belongs the honour of having taken the first step towards reading the hieroglyphic portion of the tablet. Dr. Thomas Young, a learned physician, offered "A Conjectural Translation of the Egyptian Inscription of the Rosetta stone;" and the system which he originated has been more or less confirmed by the genius of such men as Champollion, De Rougé, and Mariette, amongst the French; Bunsen, Lepsius, and Brugsch, amongst the Germans; and of our own countrymen, the not less distinguished names of Birch, Osburn, Poole, Goodwyn, Sharpe, and others, who have all contributed their quota to the greatest philological triumph of the present century. Champollion's Egyptian grammar and vocabulary, enlarged by the labours of subsequent Egyptologists, have, as Brugsch observes, made the rules of hieroglyphic grammar the common property of science; and De Rougé, one of the most successful decipherers, affirms that we can now translate three-quarters of the longest documents, sometimes more, and sometimes less, according to the difficulty of the subject. It is evident, for instance, that a text on mythological mysteries, or the metaphors of poetry, will be far more obscure than a simple narrative, or a genealogy; and yet many of the former kinds have been satisfactorily translated.

The system of hieroglyphic interpretation has now stood the test of half-a-century, and not only has it received the adhesion, as well as exercised the utmost skill, of some of the acutest intellects of the day, but it has also confirmed, in no slight degree, the truth of Israel's history in Egypt, which must, therefore, commend itself to every believer in the authenticity of the earlier books of Scripture. Unhappily, some of the present Egyptologists have either denied or perverted this evidence, in disregard of the expressed opinion of the most famous of them all. Alluding to the adversaries of revelation in his own time, Champollion wrote: "They will here find an absolute reply to their calumnies, since I have demonstrated that no Egyptian monument is really older than the year 2200 before our era. This, certainly, is a very high antiquity, but it presents nothing contradictory to the sacred histories; and I venture to affirm that it establishes them on all points: for it is, in fact, by adopting the chronology and succession of kings given by the Egyptian monuments, that the Egyptian history wonderfully accords with the sacred writings."

SURREY MASONIC HALL.

It is with considerable satisfaction that we are enabled to announce the renewal of endeavours on the part of several influential members of the Craft in the South of London, to secure for the South Metropolitan District Lodges a suitable building for the purposes of Freemasonry. From various causes, former laudable efforts in this direction have not met with the success they deserved, but there now appears to be a strong expectation that a very different result will attend the present undertaking. Wisely deferring any public announcement until sufficient support to establish a company had been privately secured, the promoters of the new Masonic Hall are now about to commence operations in good earnest, and under the above title have registered the Company, and held their first meeting of pro tem. directors. In the course of a few days, we are informed, the project will be publicly announced, and the general support of the fraternity solicited. We cordially sympathise with the promoters in this matter, believing that it is most important to the progress of Freemasonry generally, that a building devoted to its purposes should be erected, and from present appearances, we are disposed to express our opinion that it will be not only most useful to the Craft, but will ultimately become successful in a commercial sense.

"Some months since, my wife was suffering with a bad cough and severe pains in the chest, and totally unable to attend to her ordinary duties. She was advised to try your Pain Killer, and after a few doses of it was restored to perfect health, which she still enjoys. I also use it for Piles, from which I have long suffered, and one dose taken internally invariably gives me entire relief.—Jas. BRADSHAW."

FREEMASONRY IN THE NORTH OF IRELAND.

BELFAST.

Monday last being the Feast of the Nativity of St. John the Baptist, divine service was celebrated in St. George's Church, Belfast, when, as on a similar occasion last year, a large number of the Masonic body, and of the general public, formed the congregation. In anticipation of the day, the following was issued on June 17, by Charles T. Walmisley, D.G.S., Grand Secretary's Office, Freemason's Hall, Dublin:—"It having been intimated to the Right Worshipful the Deputy Grand Master that some of the Masonic Lodges in the North of Ireland intend walking in procession on St. John's Day, I am directed to call attention to Rule 126 of the Book of Constitutions, viz.:—'A Masonic procession shall not take place, unless by permission of the Grand Lodge, or by dispensation from the Most Worshipful the Grand Master, or the Deputy Grand Master.' Any Lodge taking part in any such procession, or permitting any of the collars of office, or other insignia, to be used upon such occasion, will be liable to have its warrant cancelled, or called in; and any brother joining in any such procession will be liable to suspension. I have, therefore, to caution all Brethren throughout the country against any violation of the above rule."

Accordingly, on Monday, there were no processions, but the brethren invested themselves with the insignia of the Order on their arrival at Church. There was a very large attendance of the clergy, including the following:—Revs. W. MacIlvane, D.D. (Rector of St. George's), W. Cottar, H. H. Burrowes, Edmund McClure, H. B. St. George, S. S. Frackleton, Benjamin N. White, John Wrixon, J. E. Costello, F. C. Young, G. R. Wynue, George Smith, J. Meighan, John Crossley, Augustus Byrne, A. Vesey, S. Brennan, Charles Ovenden, T. Rea, J. Gardner, William Kinahan, and J. Leonard. The choir appeared in surplices; and, with the clergy and the brethren of the Ancient Order, in full Masonic costume, gave great éclat to the occasion. An excellent discourse was delivered by the Rev. Thomas F. Welland, Rector of St. Thomas's, Belfast, who selected for his text, Galatians vi. 2, "Bear ye one another's burdens, and so fulfil the law of Christ." The reverend gentleman made a forcible appeal on behalf of the two leading Masonic charities—the Boys' and Girls' Orphan Schools, Dublin. The offertory collection, which exceeded £25, was supplemented by several of the Brethren who were unable to attend; and, with the collection made on a similar occasion last year, will be employed in constituting four life governors of the Masonic Orphan Schools. The following will be the first life governors from this fund:—The Rev. Edmund McClure, Chaplain Lodge X. (who inaugurated these services); the Rev. Thomas F. Welland, Chaplain Lodge VII.; the Rev. S. S. Frackleton, Provincial Grand Chaplain; and the Rev. W. C. McCullagh, Chaplain Lodge XI.

In the evening a number of the lodges in Belfast celebrated the festival by meeting at the customary St. John's dinner. The Brethren of "106" went on an excursion to Shane's Castle, the grounds of which were thrown open to them.

CARRICKFERGUS.

It is many years since this town was honoured by such a large attendance of brethren as assembled here on Monday, 24th ult., in memory of the Patron Saint of the Order, on the invitation of Lodge No. 253. There were brethren present from the following lodges: 22, 54, and 106, Belfast; 41, Larne; 375, Aghnadhagh; 254, Holywood; 316, Ballycarry; 133, Comber; 276, Straid; 148, Cogrey; 160, Craigarogan; 43 and 253, Carrickfergus. The following lodges had flags: 253, 160, 148, 276, 316.

The brethren assembled in the Second Presbyterian Church, when Bro. the Rev. James Warwick delivered a lecture on Freemasonry. In addition to other flags, one was suspended in front of the pulpit, and it was examined with much curiosity, when the preacher gave a short sketch of its history. When General Shurot, a Frenchman, landed at Kilroot, more than one hundred years ago, and besieged the town and castle of Carrickfergus with success, amongst the trophies carried off was the flag belonging to the masons of the town. When Admiral Elliott defeated the French squadron off the Isle of Man, most of the articles were recaptured, and amongst them this flag, which he gallantly restored to its proper position in the Masonic Lodge of this old fortress town. Bro. Warwick, in concluding his discourse, made the following reference to Judge Keogh: "There is nothing more lamentable than the conduct of our countrymen in some parts of Ireland, burning the effigy of a distinguished and upright judge, who belongs to the ancient Craft of Freemasonry, because of the faithful discharge of his duty. No matter what political party is in authority, the executive should put all the power of law into force to prevent such insults to law and justice, and to teach the people respect to authority and submission to law; and every true Free and Accepted Mason will fearlessly assist them, as Judge Keogh is an honour to the brotherhood."

At the conclusion of the lecture, on the motion of Bro. J. W. McAlister, Mollusk, Cottonmount, a vote of thanks to Bro. Warwick was passed by acclamation. During the evening the brethren marched in procession through the principal streets, and there were upwards of 2,000 persons present.

FREEMASONRY IN NEW ZEALAND.

An emergency meeting of the brethren connected with Lodge Ara, No. 348, held under the Irish Constitution of Ancient Free and Accepted Masons, was opened on the 9th April, at the Masonic Hotel, Princes-street, by direction of Bro. A. Russell, W.M., for the purpose of presenting testimonials to Brother the Rev. R. Kidd, L.L.D., and I.P.M. of the lodge, and to Bro. G. H. Lavers, the late Secretary. It was attended by most of the members, and by several Masters and officers of other Auckland Lodges, as well as other distinguished Masons as visitors.

The testimonial consisted of books, to be selected by himself. This resolution was carried into effect, and the books ("Chamber's Encyclopedia" in ten vols, and Webster's Dictionary" one vol), bore the following inscription:—

"Presented to Bro. the Rev. Robert Kidd, L.L.D., P.M. and V.W.P.G., Chaplain, by the W.M., Wardens, and brethren of Lodge Ara of Free and Accepted Masons, for his efficient and valuable services while performing the duties of W.M. from December, 1870, to December, 1871; and in token of the esteem in which he is held.

LODGE OF FORTITUDE, NO. 281, LANCASTER.

FESTIVAL OF ST. JOHN THE BAPTIST AND PRESENTATION TO BRO. DR. MOORE.

Wednesday, the 23rd inst., having been appointed for the celebration of the Festival of St. John the Baptist, the Brethren of the Lodge of Fortitude met at the North Western Hotel, Morecambe, in full Masonic clothing.

The Presidential Chair was occupied by Bro. William Hall, W.M., who was supported by his Wardens, Bros. William Fleming and Edward Airey; Past Masters—J. Daniel Moore, P. G. S. B. England, James Hatch, Edmund Simpson, Joseph Fenton, John Hatch, George Kelland, Edward Storey, W. King, and about thirty other Brethren. The Banquet provided was well worthy of the occasion, and ample justice was done to it by the brethren assembled. After the cloth had been drawn, the usual loyal toasts were given, that of the Army, Navy, &c., being responded to by Bro. Moore on behalf of the Yeomanry Cavalry; Captain-Commandant J. Storey for the Rifle Volunteers, and Lieut. Sly for the Artillery Volunteers.

The health of the M.W.G.M., the Marquis of Ripon, and the Officers of the Grand Lodge and of the Provincial Grand Lodge were duly honoured, and the I.P.M. proposed the health of the Presiding Officer of the Lodge, who had by his diligence and Masonic skill fully justified the choice of the Brethren in elevating him to the highest honour that the Lodge could confer upon its members, and trusted that during the remainder of his year of office as W.M. he would have plenty of work, and would accomplish what he took in hand in as exemplary a manner as he had done up to the present time. The W.M. in a suitable manner replied to the toast, and expressed his thanks to the Past Masters and Officers of the Lodge for the assistance that they had rendered to him in course of his Masonic duties.

He then, in somewhat eulogistic terms, proposed the health of the Immediate Past Master, Bro. Dr. Mr. Moore, who had three times been honoured by election to the chair of K.S., and who had risen to the high rank of a Grand Officer of England. After commenting upon the untiring zeal and energy of that well-known Brother, the W.M., in the name of the Brethren of the Lodge of Fortitude, presented him with a Past Grand Sword Bearer's Jewel, of eighteen-carat gold, which had been supplied by Bro. G. Kenning. The inscription was as follows:—"Presented to Bro. Dr. Moore, P.M. and P.G.S.B., by the Brethren of the Lodge of Fortitude, 281, as a testimony of their appreciation of his services as W.M., and the high position which he has attained in the Craft. 26 June, 1872."

Bro. Moore, on rising to respond, was received with great applause, and in thanking the W.M. and brethren for their handsome gift, remarked that its value, both intrinsically and as a testimonial, was greatly enhanced by the sum of money given by the lodge being supplemented by the voluntary subscriptions of individual members of the Craft. In course of his progress through the various degrees and offices in Masonry, he had always endeavoured to make himself as proficient as might be in the duties of those degrees or offices, and had ever been fortunate in receiving assistance from those who were more conversant with Masonic subjects than himself. He was much gratified to find that his humble endeavours had so far met with the approbation of the Lodge of Fortitude, as to dictate the presentation to him of so handsome a testimonial of their esteem, one which he should ever prize as amongst the most valuable of his Masonic decorations. Bro. Moore repeating his thanks, resumed his seat, carrying with him the good wishes of the brethren, that he might long be spared to wear the jewel of which he had just been the recipient.

The toasts of the Wardens, Treasurer and Secretary, and Officers of the Lodge of Fortitude were duly proposed by Past Masters G. Kelland, W. King, John Hatch, &c., and responded to. The toast of the Visitors was coupled with the name of Bro. James M. Moore, Prov. G. Steward of Derbyshire, and the proceedings of the evening were brought to a close with the Tyler's toast, proposed by Bro. Edmund Simpson, P.M.

OXFORDSHIRE. — CONSECRATION OF THE MARLBOROUGH LODGE, No. 1399.

This Lodge, held at the Bear Hotel, Woodstock, was inaugurated by consecration on Wednesday, the 19th inst. About fifty brethren, including visitors from other provinces, were present. Among the number were:—

R.W. Bro. R. J. Spiers, P.G.S.B. England, D.P.G. Master, Oxon; V.W. Bros. T. W. J. Goldsbro', P. Prov. G.S.W. North Wales and Salop (consecrating officer); Reginald Bird, M.A., W.M. of the Apollo Lodge, No. 357, Oxford, P.G.S.W. Oxon; W. G. Emberlin, P.M. 340, P. Prov. G.J.W. Oxon; William Park, P.M. 340, Prov. G. Steward Oxon; W. Bros. Christopher Park, W.M. 340, Prov. G. Reg. Oxon; Thomas Blakeman Brown, P.M. 998, Chap. 185, P. Prov. G. S. of W., W.M. designate; Albert Samman, P.M. 599, P. Prov. G. S. of W. Oxon; J. Scroggs, P.M. 559, P. Prov. G.S.D.; Charles Edwards, J.W. 357, Prov. G.S. of Wks. Oxon; Hugh Eldred, Prov. G. Purusviant; Bros. F. Stockwell, M.D., Senior Warden designate; Mark Prior, 340, Junior Warden designate; A. Holliday, 340; J. G. Prior, 340; E. Elms, 340; Joseph Reade, 1036; Joseph Round, 340; J. G. Seeley, 340; William Scroggs, 340; W. H. Horn, 340; S. Harris, 340; F. L. Prior, 862; James Smith, 268; R. R. Pratt, 340; William Biggs, 478; J. Wheeler, 1036; C. Galpin, 340; T. Dyson, 771; J. Juggins, P.P.G.S.W. 340; John Meiers, 340; John Norwood, 322; R. Stephens, 340; Bayliss, and other brethren.

The brethren having entered the lodge-room in procession, Bro. Goldsbro' (the presiding officer), took the chair, and appointed the V.W. Bro. Reginald Bird, M.A., of the Apollo Lodge, Oxford, as Senior Warden, pro tem, and V.W. Bro. Christopher Park as the Junior Warden, pro tem.

Lodge was opened in the three degrees, and the petition and warrant of constitution were read. The brethren having signified their approval of the officers named in the warrant, Bro. Goldsbro' proceeded to perform the ceremony of consecration. Bro. T. Dyson, of the Windsor Castle Lodge, ably conducted the musical portion of the ceremonial, assisted by Bro. Brough, who presided at the harmonium.

On the conclusion of the ceremony of consecration, the brethren below the rank of I.M., retired, a Board of Installed Masters was formed, and Bro. Thomas B. Brown was duly installed first Master of the lodge, and proclaimed and saluted with the customary honours in the several degrees.

The W.M. then invested the Wardens designate, and the other officers, to whom he delivered the usual addresses on the nature and duties of their respective appointments, after which, Bro. Goldsbro' addressed the Wardens and brethren of the lodge.

The W.M. resumed the lodge in the second degree, for the purpose of testing Bro. Meiers, a candidate for the degree of M.M., which proving satisfactory, the candidate was intrusted, and then retired. Lodge was resumed in the third degree, Bro. Meiers was re-admitted, and raised to that sublime degree, the W.M. performing the ceremony in a most effective and solemn manner, in which he was admirably supported by the Wardens, Deacons, and other officers of the new lodge. Lodge was again resumed in the first degree, and the W.M. directed the Junior Warden to perform his duty and call the brethren to refreshment.

Between thirty and forty brethren sat down to an excellent and well served banquet, provided by Bro. Pratt, of the Bear Hotel.

After the banquet, the W.M. gave the usual toasts, all of which were right loyally and masonically honoured.

Bro. Spiers, D.P.G.M., in proposing the health of the R.W. Bro. Æneas J. McIntyre, said, "we cannot speak too highly of him, he is always ready to keep his engagements if possible, but his professional engagements, in full term, are very imperious, and he has written to me to express his great regret in not being here to day. I am sure you will, nevertheless, drink his health with the greatest enthusiasm."

Bro. Goldsbro' — "Most, if not all the brethren here, well know how much the success of Masonry in Oxfordshire has been due to the exertions of the R.W. the Deputy Provincial Grand Master; we all know how deep an interest he always takes in all that relates to the welfare of the Craft in general, more especially in those, its brightest ornaments, the Masonic Charities. I have had the pleasure of knowing Bro. Spiers for many years, and can safely say I have never attended the Grand Lodge of England without seeing him in his place there. With regard to the Masonic charities, Bro. Spiers is ever to be found in the front rank of their chief supporters. Long may he be spared among you. I call upon you to drink health and long life to your worthy and Right Worshipful Deputy Provincial Grand Master."

Bro. Spiers: — Although I have had great experience in Masonry, I hardly remember any time which has affected me so much as this has done. The compliment you paid me, and your rejoicing when I entered the room, were so hearty, so cordial, that I want words to express all I feel at the present moment. I have been a Mason for twenty-eight years, and have always received kindness from my brethren; but you have consummated this by the reception you have given me this evening, shewing, as you have done, that I stand before you high in your estimation. Brother Goldsbro' has said he hoped I should be long among you as Deputy Provincial Grand Master. Brethren, you may feel assured how deeply I regret not being present to day in time to witness the ceremonies performed in that admirable manner, for which he is celebrated throughout England; unexpected circumstances prevented me, matters which required my personal attendance in Oxford, and when at last I went to the railway station, I found I had mistaken the time of the train; however here I am. When I first came into Masonry in this province, the attendance in the lodges was very small, perhaps some eight or ten members only attended. I felt how much good would arise if the merits of the Craft were better known, and I applied myself with diligence, and with some success. I was one of the first country Masons who had office in the Grand Lodge, and I was appointed in my sixth year in Masonry. I have never missed a single attendance at the Grand Lodge, having enjoyed good health and opportunities, and it has given me the power to serve my brethren in the Grand Lodge. Brethren, you owe a great deal to your Worshipful Master for what he has done—we know his great kindness and his great talents. There are few who possess the high qualifications he does, he is a most experienced Mason, and it was felt when he took this lodge in hand, it would be a great success, Though this may be a summer lodge, I know from those who belong to it, that it will do credit to the province and to the Craft at large. After long experience (and I believe I am the senior Mason present), I must say that nothing has given me such pleasure as Freemasonry has. I thank you for your kind reception, which really deserves my best thanks, I thank my friend and Bro. Goldsbrough for the exceeding kind way he has spoken of me and I wish you all every prosperity."

Bro. Goldsbrough — It is with very sincere pleasure that I propose to you the next toast, which may be called the toast of the day, for it is the "Health of your Worshipful Master and the first Master of this lodge." I feel assured you must all feel deeply grateful to that distinguished brother for consenting to be your guiding star. It has been my pleasure to know Bro. Brown for many years past, and this is the second time I have had the privilege of installing him in the chair as the Worshipful Master of a lodge. I can fully endorse all that the Deputy Provincial Grand Master has said of his high qualifications as a Mason and as a friend and I call upon you to drink with full honours to the Health and prosperity of your Worshipful Master Brother Brown.

Bro. Brown—I am sure that my warmest thanks are due to my friend and brother Dr. Goldsbrough for the kind way he has proposed my health, and to you also, brethren, for accepting it in so hearty a manner. I have first to thank you all for your attendance here this evening; this town though not a very large place, is quite large enough for a Masonic lodge. It possesses many men of honourable and generous spirit, and I am happy to say the brethren in this town had the will to establish Masonry here, when money was mentioned, it was answered by "we have the whole of the money ready to put down and should; have, were double the amount required, the difficulty with us is to find a brother to attend as a Worshipful Master." When I was asked to become the first Master, I accepted the duty with pleasure. Every circumstance connected with the formation of this lodge encourages us to hope that this will be a most successful lodge.

Bro. Spiers:—I have a very important toast to propose. It is one of the greatest possible importance, for it is the health of the brother who has brought you into existence as a lodge. I have had the pleasure of knowing Bro. Goldsbrough for many years, and I value him very highly as a friend and a brother, and not only for his own sake but also on account of the high efficiency with which he discharges every duty he has to perform. I thank him especially for what he has done to-day for the lodge. I propose to you "The Health of Bro. Dr. Goldsbrough, and our best thanks to him for the great service he has rendered this lodge."

Bro. Goldsbrough having returned thanks, the W.M. proposed the "Health of the Visitors, and coupled with the toast, Bro. James Smith of the Margate Lodge."

Bro. Smith replied expressing the gratification he felt in being present at the opening of the Marlborough Lodge.

Bros. Parks, Reade, and Scroggs returned thanks on behalf of the "Sister Lodges" in the province.

In proposing the health of the officers, the W.M. paid a well merited compliment to Bros. Dr. Stockwell, and M. Prior, and the other officers, for the very efficient manner in which they had discharged the duties of their respective offices.

Bros. Mark Prior, and Stockwell acknowledged the compliment paid them by the W.M.

The remaining toast, "the Masonic Charities" &c., were duly honoured, after which the W.M. directed the Junior Warden to summon the brethren from refreshment to the duties of the lodge, when it was proposed by the W.M., seconded by Bro. M. Prior, and unanimously agreed that Bro. Goldsbrough be elected as Honorary Member of the lodge.

Bro. Spiers, intimated his intention to offer for the acceptance of the lodge a handsome alms box.

A large number of propositions were made for brethren desirous of becoming joining members and on behalf of candidates for initiation.

The lodge was then closed in ancient form, and with solemn prayer and adjourned.

CAPITULAR FREEMASONRY IN GREAT BRITAIN AND IRELAND.

BY COMPANION WILLIAM JAMES HUGHAN.

The following interesting letter appeared in the appendix to the proceedings of the Grand Chapter of Pennsylvania for 1871:—

In response to the invitation of my esteemed friend, M. E. Companion C. E. Meyer, I will endeavour, as the time permits, to afford the Companions in Pennsylvania a glimpse of British Capitular Freemasonry.

To commence the series, according to custom, the Mark degree should of course first receive notice.

In Ireland Mark Masonry is comparatively quiet at present.

Chapters are not compelled to give the degree as preparatory to the Royal Arch, and although it is under the jurisdiction of the Grand Chapter, but little attention is paid to its peculiar and impressive ceremonies. A distinctive mark may (not must) be adopted, and separate certificates are issued, if required. Six Mark Masters are required to be present at opening, who must be duly qualified to fill the offices of Master, Wardens, and Overseers. Members are accepted as Mark Masters under that Constitution without any intention of being exalted, just as with brethren who join the Mark Lodges in Philadelphia and in England, &c., being, of course, Master Masons.

Some of the foregoing remarks having been made by me, and questioned, I submitted the points in dispute to the Assistant Grand Secretary to the Grand Lodge of Ireland, and that most obliging Companion confirmed my statement in full. In a letter dated 1st July, 1871, he observes: "It is quite optional with brethren taking the Royal Arch to take the Mark degree; i. e., as far as Grand Chapter is concerned; but very many chapters, by their By-laws, make it a prerequisite." Hence it is clear that in Ireland.

(a) That Mark degree is not a prerequisite for the Royal Arch Masonry, according to the laws of the Grand Chapter.

(b) That some chapters do not work the degree.

(c) That lodges work under the Chapter warrants.

(d) That Mark Masonry has not the prominence as in other countries.

In Scotland the Mark degree is in a unique position. The Grand Lodge recognises it, and so does the Grand Chapter. Any Craft Lodge under its Constitution, has a right to work the degree in Scotland, as a Craft Lodge, and many exercise that privilege; and, in fact, all can. It is considered by some authorities to belong to the Second Degree, but no evidence in support of this position has been adduced. The earliest minute known which alludes to the degree is dated A. D. 1778, of which we have a copy, and unequivocally connects the Mark Master's degree with the Master Mason.

The "Mark" is a prerequisite for Royal Arch Masonry under the Grand Chapter, and candidates for exaltation who have been "advanced" in a Craft Lodge are accepted as members of the Fourth Degree.

The Grand Chapter has granted warrants to form Mark Lodges in England from A. D. 1856, but never many at any time have been working. Some of these, however, have been most successful, particularly one now working at Manchester. Some brethren, like the writer, belong to both jurisdictions, and hope soon to see all undue rivalry at an end. The warrants contain a proviso that in the event of any governing body being recognized for the degree in England, they should ipso facto be cancelled. It is believed by many that the time has come for these warrants to be recalled, as a properly constituted governing body exists in England for the present time, with more than one hundred Mark Lodges on its roll, and some thousands of members.

We anticipate ere long that the good understanding and fellowship always subsisting between the members of both organisations will be indissolubly cemented by the withdrawal of the warrants for Scottish Mark Lodges in England.

Companions in the United States can feelingly sympathise with those who are suffering from "invasion of jurisdiction," and although we in England, as Mark Masters, are content to wait patiently for free and full recognition of our claims by the Grand Chapter of Scotland, we nevertheless shall be glad of a prompt response.

In Scotland, then, the Mark degree

(a) Is recognised by the Grand Lodge and Chapter.

(b) It is a pre-requisite for Royal Arch Masonry.

(c) It can be given in a Craft Lodge, Mark Lodge, or as preparatory for the Chapter,

(d) The Grand Chapter has Lodges in England.

(e) Joining Companions not "marked," must be before the affiliation is complete.

In England the only degrees recognised by the Grand Lodge are the three first, the Past Master (viz., an installed Master of a Lodge only, who has been duly elected, and formerly served as Warden) and the Royal Arch.

The "articles of union" of 1813, which bound the two rival Grand Lodges to certain degrees, and no more, omitted any mention of Mark Masonry; and, although the Grand Chapter of Scotland and Mark Masters in England have endeavoured to secure the recognition of the degree by the Grand Lodge or Grand Chapter of England, they have signally failed.

We say unhesitatingly, unless the Grand Lodge breaks its pledge, Mark Masonry cannot be recognized in England.

The solemn promise made in 1813 effectually shuts out the Mark degree, and it is of no service to inquire whether members were wise in so promising, as the pledge was given, and therefore must be honoured by all who value treaties among Masons.

This being so, the members of Mark Lodges were averse to remain as a body without a head, and, naturally objecting to any foreign rule, formed a Grand Lodge, A. D. 1856, with many Lodges under its jurisdiction. The degree has rapidly spread, and the Grand Lodge has prospered exceedingly—so much so that now the Lodges muster more than one hundred! Lord Leigh, the first Grand Master, is an esteemed Provincial Grand Master in the Craft. The next Grand Master was the Earl of Carnarvon, who is a Provincial Grand Master, and the present Deputy Grand Master of England, (i. e. the next in authority to the Marquis of Ripon). The third Grand Master was Viscount Holmesdale, also a Provincial Grand Master; and the Grand Master at the present time is a deservedly esteemed and respected well-known Craft Mason and estimable clergyman. Many well-known noblemen and brethren under the banner of English Freemasonry are proud to acknowledge their membership of this Grand Lodge, many of whom are Past Grand Wardens of the Craft Grand Lodge. Some of the Lodges are of "time immemorial" age, and have worked the degree no one knows how long, but certainly during the last century. Without such a Grand Lodge having been formed, the degree would have been little known in England, and although it is certainly a novel feature to have a Grand Lodge for the Mark degree, it is justifiable under the circumstances. The same novelty as a governing body was instituted for Royal Arch Masons about the middle of the last century. Before then there was not a Grand Chapter anywhere over the globe, and never had been. The Royal Arch Chapters had no governing body before A. D. 1750, and, in response to the wants of the Companions, the "Ancients" formed a Grand Chapter, and the "Moderns" followed about A. D. 1766—new bodies entirely, as much as the Mark Grand Lodge in 1856, but, like it, much wanted.

The Grand Lodge of Mark Masters has the pleasure of knowing all its certificates are recognized by the Grand Chapters of Ireland and Canada, and we feel sure that, whenever the ardent and enthusiastic Companions in the United States are asked to greet English Mark Masters with a friendly grasp, they will do so. Indeed, already we rejoice to know the Grand Chapters of Pennsylvania and Iowa have decided to do so.

LANCASHIRE.—BARROW-IN-FURNESS MASONIC CLUB.

For some time past the Masonic brethren of this rising locality, have felt the want of a meeting-place, apart from their regular lodges. A Masonic Hall, including Club arrangements, is contemplated; but some time will elapse before the details can be perfected. In the meantime, and as a preliminary effort, a large number of the body have instituted a Masonic Club, at the Hartington Hotel, Duke-street, and a very suitable room, completely furnished and neatly decorated, has been adapted for the purpose, by the proprietor, Mr. Taylor.

The rules of the Club are quite of a general character, and after much care and long consideration, been framed in conformity with the principles of order and thrift, and will, no doubt, secure the advantages which a temperate desire for sociability requires—on the basis of propriety and decorum, as observed amongst any respectable body of men.

The Club is in no respects an appendage to, or combined with any particular lodge; nor was it ever thought of as creating additional Masonic qualifications, or intended to aim at conferring privileges, which are inherent to lodges alone, and does not, in any effect, assimilate to the working or procedure of the same; and exclusive of the name of the Club, and the unexceptional requirements of individual registration—that of a Master Mason—it is as much distinguished from a regular lodge as any one associated coterie from another.

The inauguration of the Club took place on Thursday evening, the 20th inst., by a supper, of which about fifty members partook. The assembly was complimented by numerous visitors, amongst whom may be enumerated: Bros. M'Cass, Dodgson, and W.M. Pearson, of Ulverstone; Whiteside and Postlethwaite, of Dalton, and W.M. elect, Barrow of Lancaster.

The repast was well provided, and highly creditable to the hotel management. It was held in the large room of the building, which will hereafter be the lodge-room of Hinchwood, No. 1225.

After the cloth was drawn, the company retired to the club-room, and under the presidency of the chairman of the Club, Bro. Cornfield, P.M., and the vice-chairman, Bro. Silver, P.M., the following business was proceeded with.

The president gave "The Queen," which was drunk in the usual loyal and fervent manner, accompanied by the National Anthem.

The next toast was "Their Royal Highnesses the Prince and Princess of Wales, and the rest of the Royal Family," which was heartily responded to.

The vice-president proposed "The Army, Navy, and Volunteers," remarking that fortunately the volunteers were practically an untried body, but he did not fear they would give a good account of themselves, even under the untoward circumstances of a "Battle of Dorking," spite of the lugubrious and gloomy manner it seems to have been fancied.

Bro. W. R. Ormandy responded—observing that Bro. Sergeant Case, who was present, had been thirteen years a volunteer, and ought to have had the honour of his name coupled with the toast. All had tried to do their duty, and, referring to the Vice-President's remark about untried, he said they had been on active service not far from the field of Waterloo, viz., at the Battle of Champagne. Alluding to the rifle contest in Belgium, where he could not tell how many were slain, but if the enemy did not run, they knocked their necks off; and if the whole host were not hors de combat, at least they were sadly disorganised, as the following morning's muster unmistakably showed.

The next toast was given by the President, and may be considered the toast of the evening. He said:—"We have assembled to celebrate the opening of the Barrow-in-Furness Masonic Club—an institution long desired by our honourable fraternity in this prosperous district, and which will do much towards creating and fostering good feeling and personal regard, characteristic of the Craft. Owing to pressure of business in our lodges, and the consequent length of our beautiful ceremonies, the opportunity for sociable communion, as could be wished, is not attainable. This Club will remove that obstacle, or is so intended, as may be gathered from Rule 2, which sets forth the object, that "It is for the convenience of members being Freemasons for associating during leisure time from business, and for amusement, recreation, and any other purpose of a lawful, proper, and decorous character. There are too, a number of Masons daily visiting Barrow, in the pursuit of business or pleasure, and it has often been much regretted that we have not had an assembly-room to meet them. It has been said, perhaps no uncharitably, but precautionary, that encouragement to conviviality will be the ruling principle, or at least have a tendency that way; I venture to assert that the course of the club will be the very opposite to what the word is intended to convey; it is quite optional to partake or not of the articles, supplied by the house; the room is quite apart from the business, and, consequently, there will not be that expectancy to partake of refreshment, which is the case in respect of ordinary members; in fact, members will be at liberty to suit themselves in the clubroom as at their own houses, and as the rules are made very stringent, the same propriety of conduct will be exacted as if the place was as private as home. The toast was drunk with enthusiasm.

Bro. Dr. Bradley proposed "The Officers of the Club," coupling the toast with the name of the President; and said it was gratifying to see the meeting so well attended, thus testifying to the fidelity and zeal of the preliminary committee in forming the rules and perfecting the club; good feeling and unanimity, and the welfare and comfort of all the members being their guide.

The President returned thanks for the honour at present done him, and for his election as first President, being quite unexpected, and trusted that a pleasant year of office was before them all; nothing should be wanted to that end.

The Vice-President and other officers briefly replied by endorsing the remarks of the President, returning thanks, &c.

"The Town and Trade of Barrow," by the Vice-President, coupled with Bro. Morris, observing on the rapid progress and prosperity of the town, the principal reason of which was the almost inexhaustible deposits of the rich ore, which is the speciality in the manufacture of the now celebrated Barrow steel.

Bro. Morris, in reply, said a few years since the future of Barrow was looked to with hope, tempered with diffidence. It had now approached a period of prosperity, which, to his mind, stamped its future with the certainty of success and duty—a great and important place in the community of large manufacturing and maritime centres. He trusted it would not be long before Barrow would reach to, and absorb, the neighbouring towns of Dalton and Ulverstone. "The Visitors" were toasted by Bro. Worrall, P.M., who hoped they would often visit the Club, and if their business in the borough became more frequent, that they would become members. He also congratulated Bro. Barrow on being elected to the chair of the new Lancaster Lodge, No. 1353.

Bro. Pearson, P.M., responded. He was much indebted for the kind invitation, and he trusted to see the Barrow brethren visit their Club at Ulverstone, and they would have the same hearty welcome. After apologising for having to depart for the train, the company arose, and making the chain complete in a most fervid manner, sang "Auld Lang Syne."

Bro. Barrow returned thanks for the compliment paid him, and was pleased to see Barrow and Masonry flourish so well.

Bro. M'Knight proposed "The Health of the Proprietor, Bro. Taylor," and glad his enterprising efforts were rewarded, as appeared.

Mr. Taylor returned thanks, and would always endeavour to deserve the kind feeling expressed towards him.

The manager and good lady was toasted by Bro. Hooker, and suitably replied to.

The toast, "Absent Brethren," concluded the very pleasant evening's proceedings.

The Club now numbers sixty members.

Masonic Tidings.

BRITISH, FOREIGN, AND COLONIAL.

TRINIDAD.

At a meeting of the Lodge Eastern Star, 368, held on the evening of Saturday, the 4th May, for the purpose of receiving the Depute and Substitute P.G. Masters, and other P.G. Officers, on a visit of inspection, a most imposing ceremony took place.

The Provincial Grand Secretary, Bro. V. A. Davis, having retired, the W. Dep. P.G. Master, Bro. James M. Reid, rose and addressed the Lodge to the effect, "that it was a circumstance well known among the brethren that Bro. V. A. Davis, who had given such ample proof of his zeal for Freemasonry, and had rendered such good services to the Lodge in Port-of-Spain, was about to leave the Island for British Guiana, and that it had been resolved to present him with some suitable token of the esteem and appreciation which he was held, especially among Scottish Masons."

Bro. Davis here re-entered the Temple, and was addressed by the Dep. P.G. Master, who, in a short, but effective speech, informed him that "the brethren of the Scottish Craft, desiring to testify their esteem for him, and their appreciation of his valuable services in the various offices he had filled, as well as his zeal in carrying out objects connected with Freemasonry generally, had determined to present him with some substantial token of their feeling towards him, and he (the D.P.G.M.) now presented him with a Regalia and Jewel of the Royal Arch Degree, and a purse, the contents of which he might apply to the purchase of some suitable article to commemorate this event.

Bro. Davis, in returning thanks to the brethren, said, that he thanked the Dep. P. G. M. and the brethren of the Scottish Craft, for the munificent present they had made him; it was indeed a substantial token of their affection and kindly feeling towards him, and as such, would serve to remind him, when at a distance, of the many loving friends he had left behind, and the agreeable hours he had spent, while participating in the pleasing labours of the fraternity in this Island. The pain he felt at parting with the brethren with whom he had lived on such happy terms, was mitigated by the thought that he carried away with him such testimony of their love as had that evening been bestowed upon him, and the assurance that he would continue with them in brotherly affection and remembrance. He now bid them a hearty adieu, in the hope that, should he be permitted some day to re-visit the Island, he would find them still progressing in prosperity as lodges, and as individual brethren in the practice of the blessed principles of the Order.

The lodge was then closed, and the brethren were invited by the W.M. to the banqueting-room, where they found awaiting them a sumptuous supper, which was enjoyed amidst that harmonious feeling which always characterise them. The usual toasts were proposed and responded to, after which the brethren retired having expressed themselves fully satisfied with the evening's proceedings.

THE ORDER OF MALTA.

The death of Prince Borgia having left the office of Grand Master in the Order of Malta vacant, the Chapter has selected the Chevalier Cherchi de Santa Torre to fill the vacant post.

NOTICE.

The Subscription to THE FREEMASON is now 10s. per annum, post-free, payable in advance.

Vol. I., bound in cloth	4s. 6d.
Vol. II., ditto	7s. 6d.
Vol. III., ditto	15s. od.
Vol. IV., ditto	15s. od.
Reading Cases to hold 52 numbers ...	2s. 6d.

United States of America.

THE FREEMASON is delivered free in any part of the United States for 12s. per annum, payable in advance.

NOTICE TO SUBSCRIBERS.

The Office of THE FREEMASON is now transferred to 108, FLEET-STREET, E.C. All communications for the Editor or Publisher should therefore be forwarded to that address.

Births, Marriages and Deaths.

DEATH.

TAYLOR.—On the 10th ult., at his residence at Church-street, Hyde, Cheshire, Bro. Jesse Taylor, P.M. 361, aged 81.

Answers to Correspondents.

All communications for The Freemason should be written legibly on one side of the paper only, and, if intended for insertion in the current number, must be received not later than 10 o'clock a.m. on Thursdays, unless in very special cases. The name and address of every writer must be sent to us in confidence. P.M. is thanked; his offer will be gratefully accepted.

The Freemason,

SATURDAY, JULY 6, 1872.

The Freemason is published on Saturday Mornings in time for the early trains.

The price of the Freemason is Twopence per week; annual subscription, 10s. (payable in advance.)

All communications, letters, &c., to be addressed to the Editor, 108, Fleet-street, E.C.

The Editor will pay careful attention to all MSS. entrusted to him, but cannot undertake to return them unless accompanied by postage stamps.

GRAND LODGE OF NEW YORK, U. S. A.

By Bro. W. J. HUGHAN.

The annual assembly of the Grand Lodge of New York was held on Tuesday, 4th June, and following days, the Grand Master, Bro. John H. Anthon, presiding.

By the kindness of Bro. F. J. Tisdall, the able Masonic Editor of "Pomeroy's Democrat" I have been favoured with a copy of the report in that well-known Democratic organ of the United States, and will summarize the interesting proceedings, for the information of the numerous readers of the Freemason. The Grand Lodge was opened in ample form, and with prayer by Bro. the Rev. R. L. Schoemaker, Grand Chaplain. The musical arrangements were under the superintendence of the St. Cecile Lodge, and the words were composed by Bro. W. F. Sherwin, Mus. Dir. of Grand Lodge, as follows:

"Hail! Brother Masons, hail!
Let Friendship long prevail
And bind us fast.
May harmony and peace,
Our happiness increase,
And Friendship never cease,
While life shall last.

"Sincerity and love,
Descending from above,
Our minds employ.
Morality our pride,
And Trust our constant guide,
With us are close allied,
And crown our joy.

"We on the level meet,
And every brother greet,
Skilled in our art;
And when our labour's past,
Each brother's hands we'll grasp,
Then on the square at last,
Friendly we'll part.

"May wisdom be our care,
And virtue form the Square
By which we live;
That we at last may join,
Our God's Grand Lodge sublime,
Where we shall perfect shine,
With Him above."

The M. W. Grand Master then delivered the following address:

Brethren, Officers and Members of the Grand Lodge: I am sincerely glad, on this opening of the Annual Communication of the Grand Lodge, to be able to congratulate you upon a year of Masonic prosperity. Peace has generally prevailed among the Craft, and the disciplinary powers of the Grand Master have seldom been called into action. Where difficulties have occurred, they have generally been composed by my personal intervention, or by the action of one or the other of the District Deputy Grand Masters. To all of these officers I have to return my sincere thanks for the fraternal aid which they have rendered me in the arduous duties of my office, and to compliment them upon the truly Masonic manner in which they have administered justice, tempered by mercy.

The ceremonies performed during the year have been numerous, and are as follows: The corner-stone of the new Court-house at Owego was laid by M. W. Bro. Clinton F. Paige. The corner-stone of the Masonic Temple at Troy was laid by W. Bro. George Babcock. The corner-stone of the Asbury Methodist Episcopal Church at Buffalo was laid by R. W. Bro. Christopher G. Fox, Deputy Grand Master—a gratifying instance of the increasing toleration of many religious denominations of our fraternity, and even the interest that some are beginning to take in it. The corner-stone of a monument to the soldiers of Morris, Otsego county, N. Y., who died in the service of their country in the late war was laid by W. Bro. Cook, of that place.

On the day of the Festival of St. John the Baptist, the corner-stone of the new Capitol at Albany was laid in ample form, the Governor of the State delivering the address. The corner-stone of the Union Presbyterian Church, at Newburg, was laid by R. W. G. Frederick Wiltzie. Other services—the institution of Lodges, the installation of officers, were performed by the Grand Master, the Deputy Grand Master, the District Deputy Grand Masters, and other brethren delegated by the Grand Master. Noticeable services of the latter class were the dedication in ample form of the beautiful Temple at Troy (the corner-stone of which was laid nine months before) and the Masonic portion of the Hall at Staten Island, the work, largely, of Beacon Light Lodge, No. 761.

Passing from these ceremonies to a sadder topic, the Grand Master alluded to the deaths of M. W. Brothers Anderson and Taylor, of Texas, and R. W. Bro. Petersson, Representative of the Grand Lodge near the G. Lodge of the Three Globes, Prussia, and continued:

Immediately upon learning of the Chicago calamity, I issued a proclamation in the form annexed hereto, and contributions were sent in to me, which afterward extended to Michigan and Wisconsin, to the following amounts: Chicago, $15,779,70; Michigan, $3,313; Wisconsin, $735; total $19,827,70. In the case of Chicago, I sent $1,000 in the form of women's and children's clothing, which, as I anticipated, was found exceedingly welcome, and the rest, as in the case of Michigan and Wisconsin, in money and certificates of deposit. My account, which will be deposited with the Grand Secretary, will show date and amount of each contribution, and of each remittance to a Grand Master. There will also be placed in the hands of the Grand Secretary, receipts from the Grand Masters for each contribution, which will be delivered on request. In the statement of the Grand Master of Illinois, New York is credited with $17,5369,70, so that it appears that $1,555 has been sent to the Grand Master without passing through my hands. I congratulate you my brethren, upon the fact that this is the largest sum received by the Masons of Illinois from the Masons of any of the States.

To one subject further I must call your attention. The Committee appointed for the purpose have sent to all the Lodges a proposed Revised Constitution. Since it has been sent, it has been, partly by revision of the Committee of their own motion, and partly on suggestion approved by them, amended. These amendments will be submitted, printed, to the Grand Lodge. I earnestly desire that this proposed Constitution be adopted as a whole, with as little change, and as little discussion as need be. It is my opinion, and that, I believe, of a majority of the Fraternity, that the proposed Constitution is substantially better than the existing one. If this be so, the most expedient plan for the Grand Lodge to pursue is to first, adopt it without material change for at least two years until you can find out how it works.

I feel it my duty, my brethren, to announce to you, that for many reasons, I must resign into your disposal the gavel, which you have twice confided to my care. In doing so, I feel it my duty also to leave a few parting words of advice on the record, as I hope, for your guidance in a few short propositions.

1. The prosperity and honor of the Fraternity cannot be maintained solely by Grand Masters or Grand Lodges; it must be sustained by the temperate, upright, pure lives and conduct, in and out of the Lodge, of all the brethren. The conduct of brethren in leaving the Lodge, or elsewhere, may do more injury to the Fraternity than any outward assault.

2. In lodges, perhaps the two most potent evils are, the misuse of the black ball. In either case, by ballot for an improper candidate, or blackballing a proper candidate, and in all cases where a ballot is cast with an unworthy motive, the lodge is defrauded by the act, and the obligation of a mason violated. The second great evil in the lodge is electioneering for office. Masonic office, to be honourable to the holder or useful to the Craft, must come unsought—certainly never intrigued for.

3. In the election of officers, and especially of Masters, there is a definite compact made. If the Master is bound by the charges of his office, the members are bound to love and respect him, and, above all things, to go to him with all their grievances as the first and best counsellor.

4. In the Grand Lodge. 1. Keep quiet and obey the gavel. 2. When business is going on, don't expect to be allowed to go in and out. 3. Don't debate on any question unless you understand both sides of it. 4. Refer to the second rule for lodges as to election of officers.

And now, my brethren, with this last scold to the Craft, whom in their lodges, and perhaps elsewhere, I have often scolded before, I add that in resigning my office, I shall not lose aught of my love for my brethren, aught of my interest in our noble Craft, or aught of willingness to labour in the cause of Masonry.

The Grand Master also, in his address, briefly alluded to the death of the Grand Master of Saxony, intelligence of which was received too late for more extended remark.

On motion the address was referred to a special committee of three.

Bro. James A. Austin then presented his report, showing that the number of Lodges which made returns, and paid dues for 1871, was 631. During the year, Bro. Austin tells us, there were 6,142 imitated, and 812 affiliated from other Grand Lodges, making a total of 6,954, and the whole strength of the Grand Lodge was declared to be about 78,000 members. This, we believe, is by far the largest Grand Lodge in the States, if not in the world. The Grand Treasurer reported the receipt of over $17,000, and the disbursements had amounted to nearly that amount. The Trustee of the "Hall and Asylum Fund" made the gratifying report of a most substantial balance of about £166,000. The expenditure on the new Masonic Temple, however, having cost to the present time some £150,000, there was only a disposable balance of about £16,000. For the information of our readers we should remark that the "Hall and Asylum Fund" originated in 1843, and from its first year of £1,000 has increased to an institution of colossal growth. The "Grand-street Property," bought in 1865 with these funds, was sold in 1868, and realized a handsome profit, and now the "Sixth Avenue Property" is to be the seat of the Grand Lodge.*

After the report had been read, a resolution, offered by M. W. Isaac Phillips was adopted, tendering thanks for donations to the fund, and particularly to R. W. Isaac H. Brown, who has been instrumental in raising nearly $3,000 towards the erection of the new hall, designating him as the noblest Roman of them all.

R. W. E. P. Breed, from Committee on Foreign Correspondence, presented their report; briefly reviewed the proceedings of 40 American, 5 Dominion of Canada, 5 European Grand Lodges, and the German Grand Masters' Conference, Kentucky, Massachusetts, Minnesota and West Virginia, were not received, which was regretted, though "Pomeroy's Democrat" could have supplied the three former from its files. The following resolutions were appended to the report:

1. Resolved. That the Grand Lodge of New York hereby extends to the Grand Lodge of Utah a fraternal recognition, and welcomes it to a place in the list of corresponding Grand Lodges.

2. Resolved. That the Grand Lodge of New York paternally greets the Grand Lodge of British Columbia, and with pleasure accords it recognition as a regular Grand Lodge.

3. Resolved. That the Grand Lodge of New York again asserts its adherence to the doctrine of the supreme and exclusive jurisdiction of every regular Grand Lodge within the territorial limits of the State, Territory or Province wherein it is located; and therefore it will, under any and all circumstances, assert and aid in asserting, the rights of every such Grand Lodge, whenever its jurisdiction shall be infringed.

4. Resolved. That it be referred to the Committee on Masonic Jurisprudence to inquire and report as to what action, if any, this Grand Lodge ought to take in reference to the countenance and support given by any Grand Lodge to such Grand Lodge, Grand Orient or Grand Council, as infringes upon the jurisdiction of any legally constituted, fully recognized, and Sovereign Grand Lodge.

The various Committees on Credentials, Jurisprudence, Warrants, Grievances, Finances, Constitution, Charity, Unfinished Business, Ap-

*[For this information we are indebted to the Phoenix number of the burnt "Keystone" of Philadelphia, U.S.—We are glad to see this most racy and interesting Masonic Magazine has so soon reappeared from the ruins, and we hope that success is before the proprietors, and that soon they will be far removed from any difficulties.]

peals, Work and Lectures, Exemplification of Work, were appointed. We mention these just to afford a view of the work done by the committees, and to show how thoroughly well everything Masonic is attended to by our American brethren.

Of course several days were occupied in the duties of Masonry, and a vast amount of real Masonic labour was achieved. On looking over the report we could not help thinking of a Grand Lodge, with twice the number of Lodges, that meets only for a couple of hours four times a year! and which affords the Craft little or no information about the progress of Freemasonry abroad, and the changes that are always occurring in our institution. In the United States each Grand Lodge, though its Committee on Foreign Correspondence, presents to the members a well written and almost exhaustive report of the spread and influence of the Craft universal, and we know of few works we would rather read on Masonry than these so-called "Proceedings."

The Grand Lecturer, W. George H. Raymond, presented his report. He stated that nearly every Lodge in the State had adopted the standard work. A few still adhered to what they called the old work, and it was extremely difficult to get them to adopt the standard work. He had visited nearly every county in the State during the year, and was received with true Masonic courtesy. Nearly all the Lodges evinced a desire to use the standard work. He recommended Warrants to be granted to the Lodges under dispensation.

The appointment of Grand Lecturers is one of our pet schemes for the improvement of our "working" in England, and we hope yet to see some such Brethren appointed, or at least that the Provinces would delegate to one or more of their officers, the duties so ably filled by Grand Lecturers in the United States.

The period set apart for the election of officers for the ensuing year having arrived, the G. East was taken by M. W. Bro. John J. Crane, P. G. M., and the special order was preceeded with.

R. W. Bro. Christopher G. Fox was nominated for Grand Master, and elected by acclamation.

M. W. Bros. Isaac Phillips, Stephen H. Johnson, and James Gibson were appointed a committee to notify the Grand Master elect of his election to office. The committee retired, and on their return M. W. Isaac Phillips presented him to the Grand Lodge in a eulogistic speech, which was responded to by the Grand Master elect in a few well chosen and feeling remarks.

Four brethren were then nominated for the office of D. G. Master, including Wm. T. Woodruff, and Jerome Buck.

The G. Master appointed Wor. Bros. H. D. Walker, John H. Reed, and M. C. Addoms, tellers. On the first ballot there was no election; 2,378 votes were cast.

On the second ballot there was no choice, when the two lowest candidates, Woodruff and Buck, were withdrawn, the last-named having dwindled from 36 on 1st to 5 on 2nd ballot. Our prophecies in regard to these two office-seekers were fully verified. Pennsylvania ought to be proud of the popularity of its Representative.

On the third ballot R. W. Bro. Elwood E. Thorne was elected D. G. Master.

The R. W. Bros. Edmund L. Judson, S. G. Warden; James W. Husted, J. G. Warden; John W. Simons, G. Treasurer; James M. Austin, G. Secretary; Revs. R. L. Schoonmaker, Fred. L. Ewer, John G. Webster, G. Chaplains; Wors. J. Fountain, G. Pursuivant; John Hoole, G. Tyler; and George H. Raymond, G. Lecturer, were elected by acclamation.

A Petition, numerously signed, by Brethren of the Jewish faith was presented, asking for certain changes in the Ritual. It was ordered to be reported on next year.

The committee on Finances having delivered their report, and other matters of interest transacted, including 50 dollars each to the reporters, the Grand Lodge was closed with prayer by the Grand Chaplain, in ample form.

The following resolutions, we think, are worthy also of reproduction in the columns of the Freemason.

On motion, the action had on Thursday in relation to referring the proposed Constitution to a Committee to be appointed by the in-coming G. Master, was repealed.

M. W. John L. Lewis then offered a resolution, which was adopted, providing for a convention consisting of one delegate from each Masonic district to meet for the purpose of revising the Constitution, at such time and place after Jan. 1, 1873, as the Grand Master should direct. Delegates to be elected by a plurality of votes of Lodges in each district at elections held before Oct. 1. The sessions of the Convention to continue not longer than four days and the actual expenses to be borne by the Grand lodge.

The Grand Officers elect were then installed, in accordance with previously adopted ceremonial, and proclaimed South, West and East.

The M. W. C. G. Fox, G. Master, was pleased to appoint R. W. Stephen, S. Marshall, W. Josiah Shove, and R. W. Wm. A. Brodie, a Committee on Printing.

On motion, the necessity of Subordinate Lodges making financial statements annually, was abolished. An unwise inquisitorship, not within the proper scope of Grand Lodge legislation, was thus done away with.

M. W. James Gibson, from Committee on Jurisprudence, presented a report, and as recommended, the following subjects were adopted:

1. That no Lodge can divest itself of jurisdiction when charges are made in open Lodge by a member against a fellow-member, nor can it delegate its authority to a commission to be appointed by the Grand Lodge without the consent of the accused.

2. That a vote for the expulsion of a member of a Lodge on charges preferred, requires a majority vote of all brothers present in Lodge, and the requirement is enforced that all present must vote on the question at issue.

3. That while each Lodge has the right to select its own material, it is asserted to be un-masonic, unlawful, and a breach of Masonic courtesy, for a Lodge to initiate, pass or raise a candidate, after having been advised by a sister Lodge, or by brethren in good standing, that such candidate is unworthy or unfit to be made a Mason.

The Committee also reported in favor of taking strong and decisive action in the case of any Grand Lodge invading the territorial jurisdiction or another Grand Lodge, especially of those with which the G. Lodge of New York is in alliance, which was unanimously adopted.

REPORTS OF MASONIC MEETINGS.

Craft Masonry.

METROPOLITAN.

DORIC LODGE (No. 933).—A special emergency meeting of this Lodge was held at Anderson's Hotel, on Tuesday evening, 25th ult., to testify the respect of the brethren to the memory of the late esteemed Treasurer, Bro. Daniel Scurr, P.M., whose sudden demise was lately recorded in these columns. The W.M., Bro. Jas Griffin, having taken the chair, was supported by his Wardens, Bros. Austin and Marsh; Past Masters Hawkins, Barns, Gilchrist, Yetton, Wainwright; Bros. J. G. Stevens, P.M., Sec.; Ayton, S.D.; and Seedon, Organist; with a goodly assemblage of the members of the Lodge, and as visitors Bros. Newton, P.M. 174; Mortlock, P.M. 186; Chadwick, P.M. 554; Poynter, P.M. 902, and several other visitors. The business of the evening commenced with the ceremony of raising, admirably performed by the W.M., the candidates being Bros. Edney, Payne, and Pollock. The ceremony of passing followed, when Bro. Martin was advanced to the degree of a Fellow Craft, and the ritualistic labours of the meeting terminated by the initiation of Mr. Tadman, a ceremony which the W.M. performed with his accustomed and now well-known ability. The said duty, for the performance of which the brethren had been specially convened, now claimed the attention of the lodge, and was appropriately heralded by the mournful strains of Handel's sublime "Dead March," admirably rendered on the harmonium by the organist, Bro. Seddon. Bro. Hawkins, P.M., then rose, pursuant to notice, to move an address of condolence to the widow and family of their late respected Treasurer, and in doing so, paid a touching tribute to the excellent qualities of their departed brother. He concluded by moving "That this lodge fully and justly appreciating the manly, honest, and truly Masonic qualities of our late Bro. Daniel Scurr (who was one of the founders, a P.M., and the Treasurer of the lodge), desires to express its deep and heartfelt sorrow at the loss it has suffered by his death, and, in all sympathy with the widow and children, to condole with her and them in their great and irreparable bereavement; and this lodge prays the Great Architect of the Universe to enable the widow to bear her great trial with fortitude,—and that time, the great soother of all human sorrows, may soften the poignancy of the grief which now lays so heavy on her and her family." Bro. Barnes, P.M., in seconding the above resolution, alluded in feeling terms to the kindly nature and sterling goodness of heart of the subject of the motion. Although he, Bro. Barnes, had not joined the Doric Lodge immediately on its formation, he had become a member within three months of its consecration, and remained connected with it ever since. During that long period of ten years he had had many opportunities of observing the character of him whose loss they all deplored; and if, in addition to that Masonic proficiency for which he was conspicuous, both in its theory and exalted practice, there was another quality in which Bro. Scurr excelled, it was in that virtue which they were taught should be the predominant characteristic of every Freemason's heart, he meant charity—and by charity he would be understood as not limiting the virtue as possessed by our late brother to its mere minor manifestation of alms-giving; but that broad and comprehensive spirit, which never imagined unkindly, or judged harshly of another—

"Thought no evil, for it knew no ill!"

Although not initiated in the Doric Lodge, Bro. Scurr's hopes and affections were all centred in it; while during all his Masonic career, he sought the good of the Craft in general, the happiness, the success, the renown, the prosperity of the Doric Lodge in particular, together with the comfort of every one of its members, was the object always dearest to his heart. Bro. Barnes, who had shown unmistakable signs of deep emotion while uttering this well-conceived panegyric, resumed his seat amidst the deepfelt, but silently expressed, appreciation of the brethren. Bro. Poynter, P.M. 902, could not allow the sad occasion to pass without offering his poor tribute as a visitor to the many excellences of their departed brother. This was his (Bro. Poynter's) first visit to the Doric Lodge, and melancholy as was the occasion, he was emboldened by the kind reception he had met with to assure them that other lodges participated with the Doric in the grief they felt at the loss Masonry in general, and that lodge in particular, had sustained. On the formation of his (Bro. Poynter's) mother lodge—the Burgoyne—now more than ten years ago many members of that lodge were resident in the neighbourhood of Bro. Scurr's place of business, and they found it a very great convenience to have a friend and a brother on the spot that they could run into at any time, and as most convenient to themselves, acquire, at odd moments, some addition to their store of Masonic knowledge. In this respect, Bro. Scurr was a well that never ran dry. Every draught was honoured, for Bro. Scurr, although as Bro. Barnes had said, the Doric Lodge stood first, and deservedly and properly first, in his affections, never failed in doing all he possibly could to promote the welfare of every other lodge, for he had from the first, of his becoming a Mason, realised the beautiful truth that in their beloved Craft, the most ardent emulation could exist without the slightest rivalry. This, indeed, as had been well pointed out, was the great feature of Bro. Scurr's character. That broad, that comprehensive, that catholic charity, compared to which the most ample benevolence was but a minor virtue. Yet, even in the exercise of that minor virtue, Bro. Scurr was not deficient, as many could testify. For the rest, said Bro. Poynter in conclusion, our Masonic profession bids us not to sorrow as those without hope; and even turning only to this sublunary sphere for consolation, we can find it in reflecting that the example, the virtues of our departed brother have afforded, must excite and inspire those yet remaining, to follow in his steps in promoting the happiness of their fellows, and the prosperity of our noble Order. We are the better that such men have lived. We are the better as men; we are the better as Masons, if, in the words of the poet,

"--- we but remember only
Such as these have lived and died."

Bro. Poynter resumed his seat amidst the thanks and suppressed applause of the brethren, and was followed by Bro. Stevens, P.M. and Secretary, whose emotion was so poignant that it was several moments before he could proceed. He begged the lodge to excuse this display, which he was really unable to prevent. His feelings at this moment were beyond his control, which he was sure the brethren would believe, when he assured them that Daniel Scurr was his dearest friend. His emotion would allow him to add nothing to what had fallen from the lips of the previous speakers as to the character of the good friend the lodge had lost, but he was reluctantly compelled to make an appeal to the brethren on behalf of those their departed brother had left behind. That generosity of disposition, which numerous speakers had to-night eulogised, had had the not infrequent effect of preventing Bro. Scurr from making that provision for his family which would have precluded the necessity of bringing the pecuniary position in which they had been left before the eyes of the Craft at large. He (Bro. Stevens) would not dwell at length on this painful subject. Suffice it to say, that the widow earnestly desired to obtain for two of her children the benefits of that liberal education, provision for which was so liberally made by our Order. The kindness of an old friend of Bro. Scurr (Bro. Snow, a well-known member of the Craft, who was not present, but had sent a letter explaining his absence, expressing his sympathy with the objects of the meeting, and enclosing a cheque), had guaranteed the reception of one of the two daughters into the Girls' School, but the boy still required the aid of his departed father's Masonic friends. The Doric Lodge could not aid him at the election in October, as all their votes had been promised for the child of another deceased member, before the death of Bro. Scurr, and at the ensuing election the lad would be too old for admission. It had, therefore, been resolved to raise a fund of one hundred and fifty guineas to buy an admission to the school, and Bro. Stevens concluded a pathetic address, with a powerful appeal to the members present, on behalf of this benevolent project. The W.M. (Bro. Jas. Griffin) also bore testimony to the esteem in which Bro. Scurr had been held, and expressed his full approval and best wishes for the success of the enterprise proposed to be taken by Bro. Stevens. Three of the visitors, Bros. Mortlock, Chadwick, and Newton, addressed the lodge to the same effect, and while bearing testimony to the general esteem in which the brother who had now gone to his reward had been held, promised the co-operation of their respective lodges in the proposed scheme, and Bro. Poynter, rising again, also pledged the participation of the Burgoyne Lodge, of which he was Treasurer, in so good a work. Indeed, the design had (he said) been informally mooted, and not unfavourably received, at an emergency meeting of that lodge, held on the previous evening. After a few remarks on the memory of the late brother, delivered in an impressive manner by Bro. Marsh, the J.W., the resolution of condolence was put to the meeting and carried unanimously, the brethren upstanding, and testifying every mark of respect and reverence. A copy was ordered to be forwarded by the Secretary to the widow. Before the brethren separated, it was resolved to constitute a committee, composed of members of the lodge and those brethren in the Craft who had known Bro. Scurr, and appreciated the excellence of his character, to co-operate in carrying out the admission of his son to the School at Wood Green, by the method suggested by Bro. Stevens, who will be very happy to receive the names of any brethren desirous of rendering assistance to this pious work, at his residence, 7, Upper-place, Romford-road, E.

LODGE OF ASAPH (No. 1319).—The brethren of this lodge held their last regular monthly meeting of the season at the Freemasons' Hall, W.C., on Monday, the 1st inst., and was but thinly attended, owing to the brethren being so much engaged at this season of the year. There were present Bros. C. Coote, P.M., W.M.; E. Stanton Jones, P.M., I.P.M.; J. M. Chamberlin, P.M., S.W.; J. Weaver, P.M., P. Prov. G. Org., Middlesex, J.W.; Edward Frewin, S.D.; Charles S. Jekyll, J.D.; William A. Tinney, I.G.; John Boatwright, Thos. Edgar, Henry Baker, William Maby, George Horton, John M. Ball, Henry Snyders, William A. Easton, Edward Terry, Leopold Silberberg, Joseph Horton, J. R. Egerton, and O. Svensden. The business consisted in initiating Mr. J. H. Maycock, which ceremony was very ably performed by the W.M. This being the meeting to elect a W.M. for the ensuing year, the W.M. proceeded with the ballot, which proved unanimously in favour of Bro. Chamberlin, S.W. Bro. Coote, jun., was re-elected Treasurer; the Officers and Committee of the Benevolent Fund attached to this lodge were re-elected as follows:—Bros. E. S. Jones, President; J. M. Chamberlin, Vice-President; C. Coote, jun., Treasurer; J. Weaver, Secretary; C. Coote, F. Ledger, and W. F. Cremer, Trustees. The Committee consists of six members:—Bros. E. Frewin, T. Edgar, C. S. Jekyll, E. Terry, W. H. Stevens, and G. A. Compton. An Audit Committee was appointed, to consist of three lay brethren—Bros. C. B. Wright, G. R. Egerton, and J. M. Ball. Bro. E. S. Jones proposed, seconded by Bro. J. M. Chamberlin, and carried unanimously, that a Past Master's Jewel, value ten guineas, be presented to Bro. C. Coote, for his very efficient services as W.M. during his year of office. Bro. J. Weaver proposed, seconded by Bro. T. Edgar, and carried unanimously, that a testimonial, engrossed on vellum, be presented to Bro. Coote, W.M., for his kind and good qualities, both as a man and Freemason; also for the zeal he has shown in the establishment of the lodge as one of its founders. Br. J. Weaver proposed, seconded by Bro. E. S. Jones, and carried unanimously, that ten guineas be voted to purchase a Life Governorship of the Girls' School, thereby making the lodge Governors of all the Charities within twenty months of its consecration. The lodge was then closed and adjourned.

LANCASHIRE (WEST).

BOLTON.—Anchor and Hope Lodge (No. 37).—The regular meeting of this Lodge was held in Freemasons' Hall, Church Institute, Bolton, on Monday, 1st July, when there were present Bros. Thos. H. Winder, P.M., P.Prov. G. Pursuivant, in the chair; Bros. Pilkington, S.W., Slater, J.W.; Walker, S.D.; Freeman, I.G., Robinson and Newton, P.M.'s; F. A. Winder, Rutter, E. Ainsworth, and Fielden. The Lodge being opened on the first degree, the minutes were confirmed, and the Lodge was then called from labour to refreshment, after which business was resumed. Bro. Fielden was passed to the degree of Fellow Craft by Brother Newton, P.M. The Lodge was then closed, after the reading of a portion of the ancient charges.

LEICESTERSHIRE.

LEICESTER.—John of Gaunt Lodge (No. 523).—The Festival and installation meeting of this Lodge took place on Monday, the 24th June (St. John's Day), at Freemasons' Hall, Leicester. The Lodge was opened by Bro. Sculthorpe, W. M., who was supported by nearly all his officers, and a considerable number of brethren and visitors. The first business was to pass Bro. T. A. Wykes to the degree of Fellow Craft, and the W. M. concluded his year of office by performing the ceremony in a very correct and efficient manner. Bro. the Revd. N. Haycroft, D.D., P. Prov. G. Chaplain, the W. M. elect, was then presented for installation, and was duly installed into the chair, according to ancient form. The ceremony was performed in a most efficient manner by Bro. George Toller, jun., P.M. and Prov. G. Sec. The W.M. then appointed and invested the following brethren as officers for the present year; accompanying each investment with an appropriate address: Bros. Wm. Sculthorpe, I.P.M.; F. J. Baines, S.W.; S. S. Partridge, J.W.; the Revd. John Spittal, M.A., Chaplain; W. B. Smith, P.M., Treasurer (re-elected); John Y. Thorp, Secretary; Revd. W. T. Fry, S.D.; W. T. Rowlett, J.D.; Alfred Sargeant and J. F. Smith, Stewards; C. Bembridge and T. Dunn Tylers.—Votes of thanks were passed to Bro. Sculthorpe, I.P.M., for his efficient discharge of the duties of the chair during the past year, to the Stewards for their valuable services, and to Bro. Toller, for the admirable manner in which he had conducted the ceremony of the installation, the duties of which he had undertaken at an hour's notice. A resolution was carried, and ordered to be entered on the minutes, expressing the regret of the brethren, on hearing of the indisposition of the esteemed Provincial Grand Master, the R. W. Bro. W. Kelly. Other business, including the proposal of two candidates for initiation, having been transacted, the lodge was called from labour to refreshment, when the brethren sat down to an excellent banquet, presided over by the newly-installed W.M. The usual loyal and Masonic toasts were duly honoured. Bros. Palmer, Crow, Taylor, Rowlett, and Wykes contributed materially to the pleasure of the evening by their excellent singing, and Bro. Crow, Mus. Bac. Cantab., and Bro. Rowlett, by their skilful performance on the pianoforte and oboe. At the close of the evening the brethren were recalled from refreshment to labour for a short period, when the lodge was closed, and the members separated in peace and harmony.

MIDDLESEX.

HARROW.—Harrow Lodge (No. 1310).—The regular meeting of this lodge was held on Tuesday, 2nd ult., at the Railway Hotel, Harrow.—Bro. W. H. Green, P.G.D.C. Middlesex, W.M., presided. He was supported by Bros. E. Mallett, as S.W.; J. Harrison, J.W.; J. Coutts, P.G.P., P.M., Treasurer; F. Walters, P.M., Sec.; Captain G. A. Smith, S.D.; F. Harrison, J.D.; J. Cox, I.G.; G. Pymm, I.P.M.; W. Smeed, P.M., P.G.J.W.; W. Kipps, T. Brewer, &c. The visitors were Bros. E. Mallett, I.G. 141; T. F. Clarke, 1357; &c. The minutes read and confirmed—Ballots unanimous in favour of admission of Bros. G. Wilton, P. M. 171; and W. Kipps, Organist, 79 and 1275; as joining members, and Dr. T. T. Thompson, as a candidate for initiation, but professional duties prevented his attendance. The W.M., in his usual faultless style, passed Bro. Alfred Butler to the second degree. It was unanimously resolved that the lodge meetings, be altered in 1873 from 1st Tuesdays of May, June, July, and August, to April, May, July, and October. Some candidates were proposed for initiation, and the lodge was closed. The next meeting will be held on Tuesday, August 6th, at four o'clock p.m. Banquet followed. The toasts were dispensed with. Some good songs were sung. It was announced that these members of the lodge were appointed as Provincial Grand Lodge Officers of Middlesex, viz., Bros. W. H. Green, W.M. as P.G.D.C.; Revd. C. J. Martyn, (Past Grand Chaplain) Prov. G. Chaplain, and W. Smeed, P.M., Prov. G.J.W.

LEBANON LODGE (No. 1326).—On Thursday, 20th ult., a meeting of this lodge was held at the Red Lion Hotel, Hampton. Bro. S. Wickens, W.M., raised Bro. Montgomery, passed Bros. Craven, Reynolds, Bremerkamp, Gloster, Marketis, and Harris (871), and initiated Mr. W. Cox, the work of the several ceremonies being well done. The election of W.M. for the ensuing year then took place, the choice of the brethren falling upon Bro. John T. Moss, Prov. G. Steward, Middlesex, Sec. Bro. F. Walters, P.M., Sec., was also elected Treasurer, and Bro. J. Bavin, P.M., Tyler. A Past Master's jewel, of the value of five guineas was unanimously voted from the lodge funds to the W.M. The lodge was then closed. A banquet followed. Several visitors were present.

SOUTH WALES.

CARDIFF.—Glamorgan Lodge (No. 36).—The annual installation of the Worshipful Master of this lodge took place at the lodge-room, Royal Arcade, Cardiff, on Monday, being the festival of St. John the Baptist. Bro. Cooper, who has efficiently filled the chair for the past year, performed the installation ceremony, and the newly installed Master, Bro. M. J. Almond, P.G.S., proceeded to invest his officers as follows:—Senior Warden, Bro. F. C. Hill; Junior Warden, Bro. W. D. Blessley; Honorary Secretary, Bro. E. C. Hurley; Senior Deacon, Bro. J. Bingham; Junior Deacon, Bro. G. Strina; Inner Guard, Bro. Charles Cross; Stewards: J. Williams and Sanders.

At the close of the lodge a most cordial vote of thanks was given to the retiring W.M. for the assiduity and zeal with which he had applied himself to his duties. The installation banquet took place at the Royal Hotel, and was admirably provided by Bro. Tissot. The W.M., Bro. Almond, presided, supported by Bros. R. J. Langley, P. Prov. G.S.W.; S. Nash, P. Prov. G.D.; E. J. Thomas, P. Prov. G.D.C.; E. Robertson, P. Prov. G.D., J. Cooper, P. Prov. G.D.; T. Hodge, P. Prov. G.D.; and N. B. Calder, all P.M.'s. No. 36; Bros. F. Ware, P. Prov. G. Reg. and J. Hurman, P.G.D., P.M.'s; and S. Weichert, P. Prov. G.D.C., W.M. Bute Lodge, No. 960; Bro. F. P. Atkins, P.G. Organist, &c.

Dinner being over, the usual Masonic toasts were proposed and replied to, intermixed with vocal and instrumental music, and, altogether, a very pleasant evening was spent.

IRELAND.

LARNE.—Royal Blue Lodge (No. 515).—The members of Lodge 615 met in the Masonic Hall, Larne, on Monday, 24th ult., to commemorate the day set apart in memory of St. John, the Patron Saint of their ancient Order. After devotional exercises, led by the Worshipful Master, P. M'Gregor, P.M., the members and their friends, to the number of about forty, sat down to dinner in the large room of the hall. When the cloth had been removed, the Secretary (Bro. Samuel Magill) read letters of apology for non-attendance from Bros. Robert M'Calmont, Thos. S. Dixon, and James M'Calmont, of Belfast. The Worshipful Master then gave the usual loyal and Masonic toasts, which were heartily received and responded to. Songs and recitations were given at intervals.

BELFAST.—True Blue Lodge (No. 272).—The members of True Blue Lodge, with their lady friends, celebrated St. John's Day by proceeding to Langford Lodge, the residence of the Hon. A. Pakenham, who granted special permission to visit the private grounds and gardens. After inspecting everything of interest around the place, the party assembled for dinner. A number of toasts having been proposed and responded to by the members, a hearty vote of thanks was given to the Hon. A. Pakenham, for his kindness in affording such opportunities for public enjoyment. The party reached home safely in the evening.

COOKSTOWN.—Green Lodge (No. 470).—According to annual custom, the members of this Lodge held their usual dinner in the Stewart Arms Hotel, in this town, on Monday evening. The Brethren appeared in the regalia of the order, several others being present as guests. About fifty sat down to dinner. Among the gentlemen present were—Bros. Henry Wilson, W.M.; W. J. Thompson, S.W.; T. M'Clelland, J.W.E.; J. Hanna, Charles James, S.D.; W. C. Holmes, J.D.; James Robinson, Treasurer; J. M'Dowell, Secretary; R. Develin, I.G. Among the general company and strangers were—Messrs. Noble, D. Smith, Parker, Bates, Gilmor, Ribbons, Rodgers, Smith, Stewart, Wilson, M'Intyre, Graham, M'Clelland, W. J. Develin, Dunseith, M'Elroy, Henderson, Milne, Graves, &c., &c. The chair was occupied by Bro. Wilson, the vice-chair by Bro. Thompson. Grace having been said by Bro. Wilson, the usual loyal toasts were proposed. Following these the "Three Grand Masters" was proposed, and drunk with much applause. The Chairman then gave the "Health of Sir John Marcus Stewart," Provincial Grand Master. The sentiment was acknowledged with respect by Bro. M'Dowell, Provincial Grand Officer. The "New Officers" was next given, and acknowledged by Bros. W. J. Thompson and Thomas M'Clelland; and J. M'Dowell, Secretary, returned thanks for the compliment, and in doing so said he considered that if Masonry progressed in the same ratio for the next ten years as it had done since his connection with it, it would in a short time be the most flourishing lodge in the country. Mr. M'Dowell explained the object of Freemasonry, showing that it neither recognises politics nor sectarianism. After some other remarks, Mr. M'Dowell concluded by formally acknowledging the compliment paid to him in connection with the officers of the Lodge 470. The Chairman next gave the "Past Masters of the Lodge," which was acknowledged by Bros. Graham, Robinson, and Devlin. The next toast given was "Our Visiting Brethren," acknowledged by Bros. Rodgers, Milne, Smith, &c. Dr. Graves then proposed the "Health of Bro. W. J. Thompson." Mr. Thompson acknowledged the compliment in a few well-chosen words. In the intervals between the toasts, several songs were given by Messrs. Millar, Devlin, James Henderson, and James Ribbons. The toast of "Our Visitors, not Masons," was next given, and responded to by Messrs. Smith, Henderson, Bates, and Ribbons. The "Healths of Messrs. Rodgers, Devlin, and the host, Mr. Mullan," were proposed and aptly responded to, after which the company separated.

KILREA (COUNTY DERRY).—Star Lodge (No. 16).—The brethren of this lodge celebrated their anniversary in the following manner:—The brethren met at their lodge rooms at five o'clock p.m., for the purpose of installing officers for the ensuing six months. The following were the officers installed:—Bros. James Tomb, W.M.; Joseph M'Cahon, S.W.; James Browne, J.W.; Joseph Bamford, Sec.; James M'Cahon, Treas.; Robert Hunter, S.D.; Adam G. Marks, J.D.; Gardner Marks, I.G. Labour being over, the brethren adjourned to Mr. Irwin's Commercial Hotel, at seven o'clock p.m., where they sat down to an excellent dinner, served up in capital style. The cloth being removed, the chairman gave the usual loyal and Masonic toasts, which were duly honoured and ably responded to by several of the brethren. The toasts of the several officers, past and present, having been given and duly responded to, the brethren separated at an early hour in peace, love, and harmony, having spent a very agreeable evening.

Royal Arch.

LEICESTERSHIRE.

LEICESTER.—Chapter of Fortitude (No. 279).—This Chapter held its usual monthly meeting at Freemasons' Hall, Leicester, on Thursday, June 27th. Present: M.E. Comp. W. Kelly, P. G. Supt. and P.Z.; E. Comp. Toller, M.E.Z.; E. Comp. Weare, P.Z.; E. Comp. Crow, J.; and Comps. Partridge, E.; Revd. Hayercroft, P.S.; Rowlett, A.S.; Atkins, and Banes. Visitors, Comps. J. M. Moore, Rowley Chapter, Lancaster; and S. P. Ekin, Pythagoras Chapter, Cambridge. The business consisted in exalting Bros. J. B. Hall, W.M. 1391; A. Palmer, 279; Walter Wilkinson, S.D., 1391; and A. Sargeant, 523; as companions of the H.R.A., the ceremony being ably performed by the M. E. Z. Bro. J. T. Thorp, Secretary of John of Gaunt Lodge; No. 523, was proposed for exaltation, and Comp. S. P. Ekin as a joining member, after which the Chapter was closed, and the companions adjourned to refreshment.

DORIC CHAPTER (No. 33).—The Doric Chapter of Instruction will meet on Thursday evening, July 11th, and every succeeding Thursday, at eight o'clock, at Comp. Yellons, the Rising Sun Tavern, Globe-road, Bethnal-green. Comps. T. J. Barnes, Preceptor; Rugg, Hon. Sec.

Mark Masonry.

DEVONSHIRE.

SOUTH MOLTON.—Fortescue Lodge (No. 9).—This Lodge held its usual monthly meeting at the Freemasons' Hall, on Monday, Bro. Edwin Furse occupying his position of W.M. An addition to its members has been recently made by the advancement of Bros. Shapland, Symons, and Pitowsky. After the business of the evening was ended, the W.M. invited the whole of the brethren present to his private residence, to supper, and a very pleasant evening was spent.

KENT.

RAMSGATE.—Holmesdale Lodge (No. 129).—A meeting of this young, but rapidly progressing, Lodge was held on Thursday evening (June 2nd), at Hiscocks' Royal Hotel, Ramsgate. There were three candidates for advancement, all of whom were unanimously approved. Two were, however, unavoidably absent, but the third (Bro. Richard J. Emmerson, W.M. of the Cinque Ports Lodge, Sandwich (No. 1206), was present, and advanced to the honourable degree of Mark Master by Bro. L. Finch, W. M. This is the first time that Bro. Finch has occupied the chair since his installation, and great credit is due to him for the very perfect manner in which he performed the ceremony; all the officers executed their work well, ably seconding the efforts of the W.M. Bro. James W. Smith, Grand Steward, delivered the lecture of the degree to the newly advanced Brother. Bro. Fairtlough, W.M. of the Dover and Cinque Ports Mark Lodge, with several of his officers, were present, and expressed their satisfaction with the work. Bro. Finch and some of his officers accepted the invitation of Bro. Fairtlough to pay a return-visit to the Dover Lodge, on Monday, the 18th instant.

GIBRALTAR.

GIBRALTAR.—Mark Lodge (No. 43).—The regular meeting of the above lodge, was held on Friday evening, the 7th inst. The business notified in the summons was to appoint officers for the ensuing twelve months; to ballot for as joining member Bro. Oxley, Limited Service Lodge No. 69, and to advance Bros. Brownlee, Lackland, Little, and Haynes. The ceremony of installation of the W.M. was unnecessary, the W.M., Bro. Balfour Cockburn, having been unanimously re-elected to the chair. The lodge having been duly opened, the W.M. then appointed the following brethren to the respective offices opposite their names, making a few appropriate remarks to each, as the badge of office was placed on their breasts. Bros. Morgan, Senior Warden; W. Brown, Junior Warden; Wall, Master Overseer; Seath, Senior Overseer; Hepper, Junior Overseer; Marshall, Senior Deacon; Ashton, Junior Deacon; Trencery, Treasurer; Williamson, Secretary; Leys, Registrar of Marks; Arrowsmith, D of Cers; Michie, Inner Guard. Bros. Lackland, and Haynes, being in attendance, were then advanced to the honourable degree by the W.M. At the conclusion of the ceremony the W.M. rose and stated that he had hoped at the expiration of his year of office to have proposed that a jewel should be voted to an officer of the lodge who, during his tenure of office, had evinced an amount of zeal and industry worthy of the highest praise. Taking into consideration however, the peculiar position of the lodge just at present, he had felt that such a demand on the funds of the lodge would have been somewhat unjust, under these circumstances, and considering the great assistance he had personally received from the officer in question, he had taken the matter into his own hands and had ordered a jewel, at his own expense—and he now seized the opportunity of bestowing it, fully believing that presenting the same in his official capacity as W.M. and in open lodge assembled, it would clothe it with a value which its mere intrinsic worth could never convey. The W.M. then directed the Deacons to marshal the late Secretary, Bro. William Brown, to the foot of the dais, and after a few appropriate observations he suspended the jewel on his left breast. Bro. Brown expressed his thanks to the W.M., stating at the same time that he had been taken so greatly by surprise at this most unexpected proceeding, that he had felt utterly incapable of saying all that he could wish to do. The jewel, which was of a somewhat novel pattern, was from a design of the W.M. himself, and consisted of crossed plumes with a scroll above, bearing the inscription, and a keystone below. It had been executed in silver gilt by Bro. Geo. Kenning, of London. The elegant simplicity of the design and the extremely chaste workmanship of the ornament elicited the unqualified approbation of all the brethren present. After the transaction of some trifling business connected with the domestic economy of the lodge, the brethren retired to refreshment, and the evening was closed in harmony and much social enjoyment.

THE PROV. GRAND LODGE OF SUFFOLK met at Sudbury on Monday, the 1st July. About 100 were present, including the Provincial Grand Master, Col. Sir Shafto Adair, Bart. Seventy-five sat down to the banquet. A full report will appear in our next. Special service had been previously held at the magnificent old church at Long Milford, where an eloquent sermon was preached by the Rector, the Rev. C. J. Martyn, Past Grand Chaplain of England.

THE PRINCE IMPERIAL OF GERMANY, in his quality of Grand Master on the Masons of Prussia, has just given his assent to a project for unifying the eight societies now existing in the Empire.

THE PRINCE OF WALES, attended by Lord Skelmersdale, was yesterday inaugurated Commander of the Encampment of Faith and Fidelity, at the Freemasons' Hall. His Royal Highness, attended by Mr. F. Knollys, having been re-elected Master of the Royal Alpha Lodge, was installed at Willis's Rooms on Monday afternoon.

THE FREEMASONS AND THE REREDOS AT GLOUCESTER CATHEDRAL.

The beautiful reredos now approaching the completion of its restoration will be unveiled to the public on the 25th September next, the Right Worshipful the Grand Master of the Freemasons of this province, Lord Sherborne, having accepted the invitation of the Dean and Chapter to take part in the proceedings.

The arrangements are in very good hands, and, in addition to a large assemblage from this and neighbouring counties, the display by the Freemasons will, doubtless, be as chaste as it will be effective.

We are reminded of two previous and memorable occasions in which the Freemasons appeared in full insignia in this venerable cathedral. On August 19, 1823, when Bro. the Rev. T. D. Fosbrooke, the county historian, preached the "Masonic Jennerian Sermon," in aid of the subscriptions for erecting a monument in honour of Dr. Jenner, and again when the Rev. R. Roberts occupied the pulpit, when the foundation-stone of the monument to Bishop Hooper was laid. The third occasion, three months hence, is to outstrip its predecessors, and promises to be an unusually marked red letter day in the calendar of the Craft.

Although the suggestion of the restoration of the Reredos originated with Sir Michael Hicks-Beach, Bart., P.G.W. of England, Past Senior Warden of the province, much praise is due to the Royal Gloucestershire Lodge of this city, who will find three hundred pounds of the money required, and who, by their ardour, have stimulated others. Its sister lodge, the Lebanon, will also subscribe, it is to be hoped, one hundred pounds. But how much more praise is not due to brethren at a distance from the capital of the province, and who may naturally be supposed not to feel so keen an interest in the project as those resident on the spot, who will find the remainder of the money to make up over £1000?

The whole matter reflects great credit on the Masonic body, as well as it a work in which all may feel proud they have assisted. The restoration of the Cathedral, if a local, is also a national undertaking, and is worthy of support from whatever quarter sought.

BREAKFAST.—EPPS'S COCOA.—GRATEFUL AND COMFORTING.—"By a thorough knowledge of the natural laws which govern the operations of digestion and nutrition, and by a careful application of the fine properties of well-selected cocoa, Mr. Epps has provided our breakfast tables with a delicately-flavoured beverage which may save us many heavy doctors' bills."—Civil Service Gazette. Made simply with Boiling Water or Milk. Each packet is labelled—"JAMES EPPS & Co., Homœopathic Chemists, London."

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS.—This cooling medicine has the happiest effect. When the blood is overheated and a tendency to inflammatory action is set up in the system one pill, taken shortly before dinner, does away with the indigestion, fullness, and flatulency, indications of a weak stomach or disordered liver. A few Pills taken at bed time, act as alteratives, and aperients, they not only relieve the bowels, but regulate every organ connected with them, overcome all acrid humours and encourage a free supply of all the secretions essential to our well-being. Holloway's Pills thoroughly cleanse, and perfectly regulate the circulation and beget a feeling of comfort in hot climates and high temperatures, which is most desirable for preservation of health.—ADVT

Obituary.

BRO. ALFRED PICKUP.

Death has suddenly removed from the Masonic circle in Liverpool a brother whose name deserves a passing comment, as it will long retain its freshness in the memory of those who knew him best. At once a worthy Mason, a generous benefactor, and a firm friend, Bro. Pickup's place in Masonic esteem was one of which any brother might be proud; and although his natural modesty prevented him from seeking place or power within the lodge, yet by his unobtrusive fidelity to the sacred cause, a willingness to do his duty, and a readiness to help in every good cause, Bro. Pickup did much to make Masonry honourable, both in the eyes of his brethren and the world. At the comparatively early age of forty-seven, and under circumstances of a peculiarly affecting character, Bro. Pickup has been suddenly removed, and with the glistening tear of sympathy for those he has left, must come the tender tribute of words to his memory. Our deceased brother, at the time of his death, was I.G. of the Temple Lodge, No. 1094; Treasurer of St. John's Chapter, No. 673; and active supporter, and member of the Liverpool Conclave of the Knights of Rome and of the Red Cross of Constantine, and in connection with each of these, he secured every one's affection and esteem by his invariable good-nature and courtesy. He was also for many years an active and honest member of the Toxteth Board of Guardians, fighting the battle of the weak, and seeking to do justice as between one class and another. The surroundings of the "last scene" in Bro. Pickup's life are exceedingly painful. His only son, only child, in whom he had centred his fondest hopes, had just returned from Cambridge University with honours which must have gladdened his father's heart; and in celebration of his son's success Bro. Pickup, at his residence in Upper Parliament street, gave a dinner to a select circle of friends, on Thursday 20th ult. Immediately after dinner, while talking cheerily to his friends, he was suddenly seized with sleepiness, and before medical aid could be obtained the vital spark had gone out in darkness. The news of his death excited general surprise and regret; and the affection felt for him by the members of his mother lodge No. 1094, was shown in the attendance of the principal officers at his funeral, which took place at Smithdown-lane Cemetery, on Monday 24th ult. About sixty relatives and friends were present, and amongst the brethren of the Temple Lodge were Bros. Richard Danson, W.M.; D. W. Winstanley, I.P.M.; R. H. D. Johnson, P.M.; Richard R. Martin, S.W.; Thomas Gibson, J.W.; J. Wood, Treas.; R. Warlington, S.D.; R. C. Yelland, J.D.; F. Jeffery, S.S.; Joseph Clegg, W. Healing, &c., besides Bros. Jesse Banning, Kidd, and Widdows, as representing other lodges. The little mortuary chapel was about three parts filled with mourners, and as Bro. John Dunkley, P.Prov. G. C. of W.L., read the burial service in the most impressive manner, many an eye was moist with the tear of genuine sorrow for a departed brother. After the body had been committed to earth, the grand or royal sign was given over the grave by the assembled brethren, who then left the scenes evidently impressed by all they had witnessed that day.

BRO. JESSE TAYLOR, P.M. 361.

On Monday afternoon, the 10th ult., the remains of Bro. Jesse Taylor were interred at St. George's Church, Hyde, Cheshire, with Masonic honours. Bro. Taylor died at his residence in Church-street on the previous Tuesday, at the ripe age of eighty-one years. He was a P.M. of the Industry Lodge No. 361, and was well-known and highly respected among the Masonic body throughout the neighbourhood. His funeral card thus speaks of him:—"Our departed brother has been a member of this lodge for more than fifty years." The deceased has served all offices in the lodge, and that of Master no less than three times; he had been Tyler for a number of years, and held the office at the time of his death. On the occasion of the fiftieth year of his membership a grand jubilee was held in his honour by the members of the lodge, and a splendid photographic portrait of the deceased was executed by Mr. Fernley, photographer, and presented to the lodge. About sixty brethren assembled in the Industry Lodge-room at 3 o'clock. The lodge was opened in the first, second, and third degrees (a dispensation having been obtained from the Right Worshipful the Provincial Grand Master, Lord de Tabley,) the brethren then formed in procession in the following order:—Master Masons, Officers of Lodges, Masters of Lodges, Past Masters, the Rev. C. J. Bowen, Chaplain to the Duke of Athol Lodge, No. 210, supported on each side by the Provincial Officers, Bros. Beriah Cooper, P.G.P., and Thomas Stafford, P. Prov. G.D.C., the rear being brought up by Bros. John Beech, W.M., and F. Drinkwater, I.P.M. The brethren appeared in full Masonic costume. They marched from the lodge to opposite the residence of the deceased, (where they opened out right and left to make room for the friends of the deceased) to the church gates, whence the body was borne into the church by the brethren. The Chaplain read the service, and after reading that portion appointed to be read in the Church, the coffin was again carried to the grave, where the service was completed. The Chaplain also read in a most impressive manner, the Masonic service, after which the brethren marched back to the Norfolk Arms, and the lodge was closed. An excellent tea was then served, after which the brethren separated. The procession was marshalled, and the arrangements carried out by Bros. R. T. Bowden, P.M. Industry Lodge, No. 361, and T. Fox, P.M. of the Clarendon Lodge, No. 1166.

WHAT IS THE GOOD OF MASONRY?

It is only right that Masons should be able to answer this question, in view of the cui bono spirit which pervades the whole ideas of this utilitarian age. It would require more space than we can command to treat this question exhaustively, but we would simply call attention to the following answers:—

1. Masonry begets a confidence between individuals that neither party nor sect ever could accomplish; this is a benefit that extends into every ramification of social life.

2. It confers authority upon its members to speak confidently yet prudently to an erring brother. It will never be known in this world how many dear brethren have been saved from temporal and spiritual ruin by a whispered counsel, sympathetic warning and proffered aid. The written and unwritten annals of our Order are full of illustrations of this fact.

3. Masonry possesses an universal language, understood in all countries by all races, of all tongues, of all colours and of all monotheistic creeds. That language is understood as well in the night season, as by day. The deaf, dumb, and blind can use it, as Masons can communicate with one another, so long as they possess the sense of seeing, hearing, feeling or speaking; so that it is strictly true, that Masons can communicate without seeing one another or hearing one another, or feeling one another, or speaking a word; either in the day time or night season, though of course one of these faculties must necessarily be used. There is nothing like this wonderful language for universality, so that amid all the vicissitudes of human life, the Mason feels that only one word of Masonic language is sufficient to call to his aid the good offices of brethren near and dear to his heart.

4. It gives men, irrespective of paltry considerations, a code of life principles, intensifying the noblest aspirations. It makes them cosmopolitan, breaking down the petty barriers of country, state, county town, sect, set, profession, business, family, and wealth. The highest of titles is, brother—no other can take its place. The talent of a hod-carrier may place him in the chair. The present Grand Master of Ireland, the Duke of Leinster, justly boasts of having risen through every grade, from that of Junior Deacon to the throne of a Grand Master.

5. It unites men in a common work for a common good, as broad and catholic as mankind. It reaches men that sects, parties and side issues never could influence beyond the narrow bounds of petty associations. It sternly refuses to proselytise, as it wants no material untried. If mankind be unworthy of such a beneficent institution,—it can wait. It has taken centuries for mankind to arrive at its present state of imperfect moral life, perhaps the time may come when the whole earth shall have become one great lodge, the ideal of Masonry. Then there will be one government, one faith, one brotherhood, one nation, all brethren, because all the children of the Holy, Blessed and Glorious Supreme Architect of the Universe.

WHAT MASONRY IS AND IS NOT.

Freemasonry has never yet, as I have heard, attempted to work miracles. It never yet infused brains into a cranium that had no cavity for their reception, nor did it ever send human blood coursing through a heart of granite, nor make a man out of a natural-born beast, and I don't suppose it ever will. Its mission is to improve, not to create, and the material for its use must be capable of being moulded, or it cannot work it up. Again, Masonry is not religion in the sectarian sense, nor a substitute for it, and he who pretends that, or declares it to be "a good enough religion" for him, foists it out of its legitimate place, inflicts upon it a grievous wrong, and lays himself open to the suspicion of ignorance of its teachings. While it inculcates a firm faith in the being and divine attributes of God, almighty and eternal, and while it includes within its acknowledged brotherhood, standing side by side upon the same level of manhood, my Hebrew brother, who worships God in unity, and myself, who worship Him triune; and while it presents to me, as it does to him, the story of the Messiah in many of its ceremonies; and while it inculcates to both of us a like reverence of the Divine Being, attention to His word, and invocation for His aid in all our laudable undertakings, it imposes upon neither religious dogmas. It leaves that for a different department; it never was thus intended, and never will be pretended to be, by the well-instructed Mason.

I say this, because it seems to me very important that these facts should be well-grounded in our minds at this time. Masonry is charged with inculcating a Pagan religion, and binding its members in the trammels of infidelity, and with conspiring against Christianity, by obliging them to ignore its Founder. What we have to do is: first, to answer all such allegations, if at all, with a simple denial; and, second, to neutralise all such falsehoods with what is called the "truth of life." "Man loves acts, not words," and by our deeds, not promises or professions, we shall be judged by our fellow man. —REV. JOHN C. WEBSTER.

THE MASTER MASON.

When we reflect that the wisest and best men for many centuries have contributed of their labour and skill to perfect the institution of Freemasonry, and so mould and fashion its various parts as to constitute a perfect whole;—and as this institution has come down to our time, with the impress of antiquity deeply stamped upon it; approved and patronised by the sages of every country through thousands of years; surely we have a right to expect the profoundest wisdom centred in an institution, formed and perpetuated for some object, corresponding in magnitude to the time it has existed, and the distinguished men who have devoted their lives to its interests, and by their example recommended it to our favour.

To the practical, common sense mind, there is just ground to expect a great deal when the mysteries of the Order are unfolded to the intelligent novice; and if he is disappointed and deceived, he has just grounds upon which to charge falsehood upon the whole fraternity, and to renounce it in disgust, and retire from its circles.

The common reader has no means by which to determine the question of the genuineness and substantiality of the Order, further than to judge of its reality by the conduct of those who join it. Such as possess a force of intellect, and moral qualities, well qualifying them to judge of its merits, if they enter its sacred halls, continue as members, and cheerfully conform to all its stern requirements; when the conclusion must be, that they have not been deceived, but find something there worthy of their approbation, and of sufficient value to engage their energies, and compensate them for all the time and money expended upon it.

It is far otherwise with the candidate who has diligently qualified himself for taking on him the "honourable degree of a Master Mason," and thereby attain to the full knowledge of the mysteries of Ancient Craft Masonry. He is lawfully and honourably brought into contact with the sublime institution, and enters upon the study and duties of his profession with growing interest. Under able and efficient teachers, with close application, he may soon become a Master Mason, in the full and proper sense of the term, which confers rights, honours and dignity, when duly appreciated, and worthily maintained, which no other institution has power to confer.

But we may be told, that every Master Mason does not place so high an estimate upon the honours and merits of the Order as the above remarks seem to indicate. This is unfortunately true; and it is true for the reason that every man who is admitted to these rights and honours, has not the heart and capacity to properly appreciate and comprehend the profound lessons brought to his view. The man who seeks to pass through the portals of our Order, with the expectation of gratifying a sensitive mind with curiosity and sensational scenes, finds himself quite disappointed, and is made to feel that the demands of Masonry are such that he has no qualifications for meeting—that there is no proper material in him to make a Mason of. Such men should never apply for our mysteries, and if they should, they ought to be rejected.—Texas Masonic Mirror.

Multum in Parvo, or Masonic Notes and Queries.

CHARTER OF THE BUILDERS OF STRASBURG.

Can any brother assist me with a confirmation of some statements made by Mr. Geo. Godwin, in a paper read before the Society of British Architects in 1868 or 1869? He then states apparently, on the authority of Ramee, 'Historie Generale d'Architecture,' that in "1275 the Emperor Rhodolph granted a special charter to the builders at Strasburg," and that in 1278 the Pope Nicholas III. delivered them a brief, or indulgence, renewed from time to time, by his successors." Sir R. Westmacott, in the third volume of the "Archaeological Journal," page 198, has said, which statement Mr. Geo. Godwin puts also forward in his able paper on Masons' Marks, that "a bull was issued prior to 1200, giving authority to heads of churches to build churches, and attaching to them a certain number of 'liberi muratores,' or Freemasons, to direct and execute the ornamental parts of the structure." What truth is there in these statements historically?

A MASONIC STUDENT.

LEARN FROM YOUR ELDERS.—A love majori discit arare minor. This adage (literally, the young ox learns to plow from his elder) applies with force to our young brethren whose attention is necessarily directed to the conduct of the older for that instruction in the art of Masonry so rare and so valued. In writing up the characteristics of the present age, one of the most disagreeable features is the neglect of precedent and experience. In the conduct of many Masons there seems absolutely no reference to what has gone before. And yet Freemasonry, in all its aims and works, is a perpetuation of past things. Throw out the idea of antiquity, and it degenerates at once into the poorest of modern affiliations, and the very fact that "its landmarks are unchangeable" is the worst feature about it. Then "let the young ox learn to plow from the elder one," and if "by reason of strength" the juvenile can excel the old one in the amount of work done, or the straightness of the furrows, or the ease with which his day's work is accomplished, all the better for the result.

SYMBOLISM OF THE CIRCLE.—The circle being a figure which returns into itself, and having therefore neither beginning nor end, it has been adopted in the symbology of all countries and times as a symbol, sometimes of the universe, and sometimes of eternity. With this idea, in the Zoroastrian Mysteries of Druidism; the temple of initiation was circular. In the obsolete lectures of the old English system it was said, that "the circle has ever been considered symbolical of the Deity; for as a circle appears to have neither beginning nor end, it may be justly viewed as a type of God, without either beginning of days or ending of years." It also reminds us of a future state, "where we hope to enjoy everlasting happiness and joy." Masonry consecrates the symbolism of the circle to itself in the teachings of its great emblem, the point within the circle; where the common explanation is, that the point is an individual brother, and the circle the boundary line of his duty; but whose true explanation is, that the symbol is derived from the ancient sun worship, where the point would represent the solar orb, and the circle the illimitable universe which he illumines and vivifies. But the sun is really a symbol of God, and the universe bears the same relation to space that eternity does to time; and hence we get back to the primitive symbolic idea, that the circle is a symbol of eternity,—Mackey's Freemason.

Poetry.

LINES OF GRATITUDE.

A Masonic brother acknowledging the generous conduct of some of the fraternity who had done him a great kindness, thus gives vent to his feelings in verse.

Long may your lodge-fires burn,
Workmen in mystic labours, "kind and good!"
And many a year return
To shed new lustre on your brotherhood!
You who the call of mercy heard and heeded,
And gave, in good supply, the bounty needed!
Foes may your work defame,
And call your acts "the offspring of the night;"
How often human blame
Has slandered those in generous doings bright!
The Lord of ALL bore to His home of bliss,
In hands and feet and side, the proofs of this.
But doubt ye not, dear friends,
There waits for you a certain full reward
The Lord will make amends
At the great pay-day, for thus saith the Lord;
"Because ye did it to the least, so free,
Come to my thorn! Ye did it unto me!"
A lasting blessing rest
Upon your work, increasing more and more!
God's largest gifts and best
Fill to the brim your basket and your store!
Till, from hard service, summoned by death's voice,
You shall, in Ledge Celestial, all rejoice!

THE BUILDERS.

BY HENRY W. LONGFELLOW.

All the architects of fate,
Working on the walls of time;
Some with massive deeds and great,
Some with ornaments of rhyme,
Nothing useless is, or low:
Each thing in its place is best;
And what seems but idle show
Strengthens and supports the rest.
For the structure that we raise,
Time is with materials filled;

Our to-days and yesterdays
Are the blocks with which we build.
Truly shape and fashion these;
Leave no yawning gap between;
Think not because no man sees
Such things will remain unseen.
In the elder days of art
Builders wrought with greatest care
Each minute and unseen part—
For the gods see everywhere.
Let us do our work as well,
Both the unseen and the seen;
Make the house where gods may dwell,
Beautiful, entire, and clean.
Eise our lives are incomplete,
Standing in these walls of time,
Broken stairways, where the feet
Stumble as they seek to climb.
Build to-day, then, strong and sure,
With a firm and ample base;
And ascending and secure,
Shall to-morrow find a place.
Thus alone can we attain
To these turrets where the eye,
Sees the world as one vast plain,
And one boundless reach of sky.

METROPOLITAN MASONIC MEETINGS.

For the Week ending Friday, July 12, 1872.

The Editor will be glad to have notice from Secretaries of Lodges and Chapters of any change in place or time of meeting.

SATURDAY, JULY 6.

General Committee Boys' School, Freemasons' Hall, at 4.
Star Lodge of Instruction (1275), Marquis of Granby New Cross-road, at 7; Bro. C. S. Dilley, Preceptor
Sphinx Lodge of Instruction (1329), Castle Tavern, Camberwell-road, at 7.30; Bros. Thomas and Worthington, Preceptors.
Mount Sinai Chapter of Instruction, Union Tavern, Airstreet, at 8; Comp. Brett, Preceptor.
Manchester Lodge of Instruction, Yorkshire Grey, London Street, Fitzroy-square, at 8; Bro. Ash, P.M., Preceptor.

MONDAY, JULY 8.

Lodge 1366, Highgate, Gate House Hotel, Highgate.
Sincerity Lodge of Instruction (174), Railway Tavern Fenchurch-street Station, at 7.
Strong Man Lodge of Instruction (45), Old Jerusalem Tavern, St. John's Gate, Clerkenwell, at 8; Bro. James Terry, Preceptor.
Camden Lodge of Instruction (704), Adelaide Tavern, Haverstock-hill, at 8; Bro. T. A. Adams, Preceptor.
Eastern Star Lodge of Instruction (95), Royal Hotel, Mile-end-road, at 7.30; Bro. E. Gottheil, Preceptor.
British Oak Lodge of Instruction, Bank of Friendship Tavern, Mile End, at 7 for 8.
St. James's Union Lodge of Instruction (180), Horse and Groom Tavern, Winsley-street, (opposite the Pantheon), Oxford-street, at 8; Bro. J. R. Stacey, Preceptor.
Wellington Lodge of Instruction, White Swan Tavern, Deptford, at 8; Bro. C. G. Willey, P.M. 1155, Preceptor.
St. John of Wapping Lodge of Instruction (1306), Gum Tavern, High-street, Wapping, at 7; Bro. T. Mortlock, Preceptor.
West Kent Lodge of Improvement (1297), St. Saviour's College, Stansted-road, Forest-hill, at 7.30; Bro. H. W. Lindus, Preceptor.

TUESDAY, JULY 9.

Lodge 548, Wellington, White Swan Tavern, Deptford.
" 1269, Stanhope, Thicket Hotel, Anerley, Surrey.
Metropolitan Chapter of Instruction, Portugal Hotel, Fleet-street, at 7; Comp. Brett, Preceptor.
Domestic Lodge of Instruction, Palmeston Tav., Grosvenor-park, Camberwell, at 8; Bro. John Thomas, Preceptor.
Faith Lodge of Instruction, Refreshment Rooms, Victoria-st. (opposite Westminster Palace Hotel) at 8; Bro. C. A. Cottebrune, Preceptor.
Yarborough Lodge of Instruction, Green Dragon, Stepney at 8; Bro. Isaac Saqui, Preceptor.
Prince Fredk. William Lodge of Instruction (753), Knights of St. John Tavern, St. John's Wood; Bro. F. G. Baker, Preceptor.

Dalhousie Lodge of Instruction, King Edward, Triangle Hackney, at 7.30. Bro. J. Saunders, Preceptor.

WEDNESDAY, JULY 10.

Committee of Royal Masonic Benevolent Institution, at 3, 820, Lily of Richmond, Greyhound Hotel, Richmond.

THURSDAY, JULY 11.

Quarterly General Court Girls' School, Freemasons' Hall at 12.

FRIDAY, JULY 12.

Rose Croix Chapter, Mount Calvary, Freemasons' Tavern Great Queen-st.

Established 1798.

MESSRS. CHARLES WATSON and Co., of 30, Cornhill, forwarded us samples of their 'Cornhill Sherry'.

CHARLES WATSON and Co., 30, Cornhill, opposite the Royal Exchange, invite attention to the CORNHILL SHERRY, as their speciality.

THE CORNHILL SHERRY, elegant, pale and dry, 30s. per dozen. Carriage paid.

CLARET..... 16s. 22s. 28s. 36s. 42s. to Five Guineas. SHERRY 22s. 26s. 30s. 36s. 42s. 48s. to 84s.

WHISKY—the Ben Nevis—CHARLES WATSON and Co.'s Speciality, 20s. per gallon; the softest and most fascinating Whisky for Toddy in the market.—30, Cornhill. Carriage free within 50 miles.

THE CORNHILL SHERRY, rich gold, 30s. per dozen, carriage paid. 30, Cornhill. Sample bottles may be had

Established 1798.

CORNHILL SHERRY.—CHARLES WATSON and Co., 30, Cornhill (opposite Royal Exchange), requests the favour of a visit to these old-established cellars.

M. A. VERKRÜZEN, (Growers' Agent),

PURE AND SELECTED GERMAN WINES

Invites attention to his Fine and Extensive Stock of LIGHT REFRESHING DINNER SORTS, and all Grades up to the Greatest Growths.

Certain of these Wines have acquired celebrity for their curative effects in cases of stone and gravel, they act beneficially on the liver and kidneys.

Nothing is so refreshing, nothing gives such zest to a meal.

Table with columns: DELICIOUS DINNER SORTS, DESSERT CLASS, SPARKLING. Prices listed for various wine types.

Wholesale Depot: 3, Fell-street, Wood-street, London, E.C.

Can also be ordered through the Trade.

Each bottle bears the name of M. A. VERKRÜZEN as a guarantee.

VERY FINE CHAMPAGNES (by special contract) 34s., 40s., 46s., 58s., 70s. per dozen.

Other Wines of Superior Quality, at lowest prices (the Wines may be tasted at the Depot).

THE NEW FLOOR CLOTH.

THE NEW ASPHALTE FLOOR COVERING has been pronounced by our Customers the softest, warmest, and best Floor Cloth yet invented.

Address—Messrs. CHILES & Co., 57 & 60, Belmont-street, London, N.W.

FLOOR CLOTH TESTIMONIAL.

GENTLEMEN,—In reply to your inquiry, I beg to say that I am quite satisfied with your Patent Floor Covering.

CAUTION.

In calling the attention of the Trade to a recent decision in the House of Lords, in the case of "Wotherspoon v. Currie," whereby our exclusive right to the use of the word "Glenfield" in connection with Starch is indisputably established.

TRY BARKERS' TROUSERS,

13/6

DERBY ROAD, BOOTLE, Near Liverpool.

GENERAL FUNERAL ESTABLISHMENT, 81, City-road, E.C., opposite the Finsbury Schools, and 24, Southgate-road, De Beauvoir Town, N.

Bros. SINCLAIR & SON beg to call the public attention to their Scale of Charges to suit all classes.

For Cheap Watches, Clocks Gold Chains and Jewellery, go to KIBBLES, 22, GRACECHURCH STREET (one door from Lombard-street). Gold Watches ... £2 15s.

THE LOMBARD EXCHANGE AND NEWS ROOM,

LOMBARD STREET, LONDON, E.C.

Table with columns: TERMS, £, s, d. Entrance Fee ... Annual Subscription ...

The Room is well supplied with newspapers, telegrams, and books of reference. It includes a Post-office, Post Restante, Telegraph-office, Reading and Writing Room.

Bro. JOHN H. YOUNGHUSBAND, P.M., P.Z., P.E.C., P.P.J.G.W., &c., Manager.

THE NEW MASONIC CANDLES,

6s. per set of 3 one-pound Candles. Packing Cases 6d. each.

BRO. GEORGE KENNING'S MASONIC DEPOTS, 2, 3, & 4, LITTLE BRITAIN, AND 198, FLEET STREET, E.C.

MASONIC FLAGS FOR HIRE.

Table with columns: Knights Templar Arms, Freemasons' Arms, Red Cross of Rome and Constantine Arms, City of London Arms, Square and Compasses, Feathers in Centre, Union Jack.

KENNING'S MASONIC DEPOTS, Little Britain, Fleet Street and Liverpool.

TABLE OF CONTENTS

Aids to Study..... 423
 Dedication of a Masonic Hall at Weston-super-Mare 442
 Freemasonry in Bermuda 425
 Centenary of the Lodge of Friendship, No. 206 425
 Immortality, an Ideal of Freemasonry 426
 New Masonic Hall at Liverpool..... 427
 Freemasonry in Constantinople..... 427
 Summer Banquet of the Capper Lodge 427
 Masonic Tidings 427
 Summer Festival of the Royal Masonic Institution for Boys 429
 CRAFT MASONRY :—
 Metropolitan 429
 Provincial 429
 Provincial Grand Lodge of Cornwall 429
 Provincial Grand Lodge of Middlesex 431
 Provincial Grand Lodge of Somerset..... 432
 Provincial Grand Lodge of Suffolk 432
 Masonic Meetings for next week... 434
 Advertisements..... 421, 422, 435, 436

AIDS TO STUDY.

BY BRO. WM. CARPENTER P.M. & P.Z. 717.

IX.

The religious side of Egyptian history is amongst the most melancholy and perplexing things upon record. We see in the Egyptians a people highly civilised and far advanced in science and art, and once holding the pure primitive faith, degenerated into a community of the grossest idolatry, and practising the most superstitious and degrading religious rites. They worshipped almost everything in nature, from the sun in the heavens to the meanest reptile on the earth; hills, rivers, birds and creeping things, stones and stocks all were worshipped. Every town and nome had its sacred animals, including the lowest forms of animal life, the frog and the beetle being objects of especial reverence. In fact, not a single deity of Egypt was unrepresented by some beast. Speaking of the time of the nineteenth dynasty, M. Renan remarks that the entrances of all the tombs and temples of that date seemed positively invaded by a whole pantheon, the most horrible and ridiculous that the human mind ever invented." And when the gross excesses of a degenerate superstition provoked the ridicule of the Greeks and Rom an the same Greek philosopher who makes Momus, express his surprise that so many persons were allowed to share divine honours—his indignation at the Egyptian crew of apes, ibises, bulls, and other ridiculous creatures, who intruded themselves into heaven—and his wonder how Jove could allow himself to be caricatured with the horns of a ram—makes Jove reply, that these were mysteries not to be derided by the uninitiated.

The truth seems to be, as Mr. Philip Smith says, Egypt had, in fact, two religions; one which Herodotus saw, captivating the eyes of the people with pompous ceremonies, and governing their lives by minute observances; the other, of which the priests barely allowed him to catch a glimpse. It is not easy to condense a writer who has condensed some half dozen of those who preceded him, but I must attempt this with the writer whom I have just named. Of the esoteric doctrine we can learn little or nothing through the Greeks, for it had become inextricably involved with their own speculations. Modern science, however, has, in the language of the Ancients, "lifted the veil of Isis," and in the Egyptian papyri we read the secrets of Egyptian theology. Even Herodotus had learnt that, amidst their system of polytheism, the Egyptians of Thebes recognised one supreme God, who had no beginning, and would have no end; and Jamblichus quotes from the old Hermetic books, this statement, "Before all the things that actually exist, and before all beginnings, there is one God, prior even to the first god and King, remaining unmoved in the singleness of his own Unity." (Cory's "Anc. Frag," p. 283.) And if, like the prophet on his mission to Egypt, we ask by what name we shall announce this God, the sacred books of Egypt give the very same answer—an answer which the initiated took with them to the grave, inscribed on a scroll, as their confession of faith:—"NUN PU NUK"—I am that I am. (Brugsch Ans. dem. Orient). What a new light, as Mr. Smith observes, this discovery throws on the sublime passage in Exodus iii. 14, where Moses, who may be supposed to have been initiated into this formula, is sent to both his people and Pharaoh to proclaim the true God by this very title, and to declare that the God of the highest Egyptian theology was also the God of Abraham, of Isaac, and of Jacob.

But if this was the original theology of Egypt, whence the outrageous polytheism—the gross superstition, which, with monstrous shapes and sorceries, abased their Maker? The answer is not difficult, and it shows one origin of polytheism and idolatry. The unity of God was lost in the plurality of His manifestations. Each of these, embodied in a personal form, became a god; while the allegorical representations of the Divine qualities gave birth to the monstrous combination of animal and human forms, and to the worship of animals themselves. All these were, so to speak, religious masks, grotesque allegorical embodiments of the original pure dogmas, communicated to the initiated at the mysteries. When once invested with a distinct personality, and with attributes which were regarded as their own, the gods became secondary agents, taking their part in the organization of the world, and the preservation of its creatures; and this polytheism was extended to embrace all nature.

Next to the Divine unity, in the original theology of the Egyptians, was the immortality of the soul, and a future state of existence. The spirit of symbolism ran through the whole religion of Egypt; and never was there a stronger case of the abuses to which that fascinating principle may sink, than in the animal worship of the Egyptians. Many fanciful theories have been devised to account for this strong religious aberration.

Diodorus quotes three reasons, which were commonly given by the Egyptians (Diod. i. 85—86). The first is a fable, which tells how the original gods, being few in number, and being no match for the iniquities and violence of men, took the shape of animals, in order to escape from them; and that afterwards, when they became masters of the whole world, they consecrated and appropriated these animals to themselves, as an act of gratitude,

The second story ascribes the custom to victories obtained by the army, under standards bearing the heads of animals—an obvious inversion of the natural order. The third reason is plausible enough to have been generally accepted by the ancient writers, as well as by modern utilitarians, that the animals were consecrated on account of the benefits which mankind derived from them. But the theory, though it may contain a germ of truth, is manifestly inadequate, for, as Kenrick well asks ("Ancient Egypt," i. ch. 21). If the ichneumon and the hawk were worshipped, because they destroyed crocodiles and serpents, why the serpent and the crocodile? Or if the ibis was worshipped because it devoured snakes and vermin, why was it specially consecrated to Thoth, the God of letters? Nor were the wants of the Egyptians so opposite in various nomes as to account for their extirpating, as noxious, in one, the very animals that were consecrated as useful in the next.

There remains the one explanation—from the universal tendency of mankind to find in the peculiar qualities of animals figures of the characters of rational beings—a tendency which survives in poetry and heraldy, and which may be traced in the symbolism of other religions, though no people have carried it to the same length as the Egyptians.

The application of this principle is admirably stated by Mr. Kenrick:—"What those analogies were, which the Egyptians found or fancied between the attributes of the gods, and the specific qualities of the animals consecrated to them, we can, in general, only guess. The lordly bull, as a type at once of power and production, seems a natural symbol of the mighty god Osiris, who—whether he represented originally the Sun, the Earth, or the Nile, was certainly revered as the great source of life. The god of Mendes, for a similar reason, was fitly represented by a goat. The bright and piercing eye of the hawk made it an appropriate emblem of Horus, who was also the sun. The crocodile might naturally be adopted as a symbol of the Nile, which it inhabits (see Ezekiel xxix. 3, and Isaiah xxvii. 1); or from its voracious habits and hostility to man, it might, on the other hand, symbolise Typhon, the principle of evil."

Our limited acquaintance with the Egyptian theology, however, compels us to leave many such questions unanswered, as "Why was the ibis appropriated to Osiris? or the cat to Pasht, the universal mother? or the ram to Kneph? or the vulture to Isis? or what made the scarabæus one of the most sacred of all the animal types of Egypt?"

We may trace three stages of this symbolism. First, the placing of the head of the animal on the human form of the god—the almost universal type of the Egyptian idols. The converse symbolism represents a king, by a human head on the body of the animal, whose qualities are ascribed to him. Next, the consecration of living animals as types of the deities—a symbolism which degenerated into actual worship. Lastly, the animal was believed to be the positive incarnation of the god in three cases only—the bull apis, who was worshipped at Memphis, as the incarnation of Phtha; the bull Mnevis at Heliopolis, the incarnation of Osiris; and the goat at Mendes, the incarnation of Khem. The most revered was Apis, who was kept in great pomp in a splendid building, and it was esteemed the highest honour to be one of his ministering priests. When he died, all Egypt went into mourning, and when a new apis was manifested, the land gave itself up to rejoicing. The body of the dead osiris was embalmed, and buried in a costly sepulchre or temple, which was called the serapeum.

The sacrifices and ceremonies of the Egyptians differed in no important respect from those of other nations. Their practice of embalment arose from their belief in a future life, and in the resurrection of the body; and the doctrine of rewards and punishments was inseparably linked with that of a future life. Resurrection was the portion of those, only, who had committed no mortal sin, either in action or in thought. The souls were weighed by Osiris and his forty-four assessors, in the hall of two-fold justice. The reprobate is condemned to annihilation, after having been subjected to a long course of torments. The just, on the contrary, purified by fire, shares the bliss of Osiris, the "good being," and feasts with him on delicious food; but not until he has expiated his venial sins by a long series of trials.

Thus it was, that, amongst the Egyptians, as amongst all other peoples of whom we know anything, the primitive and sublime truths of religion degenerated into a gross and debasing superstition, enslaving alike the body and the soul.

On the subject of this paper the student should read Bryant's Analysis of Mythology, vol. i.; Warburton's Divine Legation, b. iv., vol. iii.; Cudworth's Intellectual System, ch. iv., s. xviii.; Prichard's Analysis of Egyptian Mythology, b. iv., ch. i.; Sir Gardner Wilkinson, vol. iv.; Henrich's Ancient Egypt, vol. ii.; Cory's Ancient Fragments, and Rawlinson's Herodotus.

[Errata in No. VIII. Page 407, col. 2, line 36, for his time read this time; col. 3, line 41, Epiphans read Epiphanes, line 46, for Seevne read Heyne; and 7th line from bottom, for Egyptologists read Egyptologers; p. 408, col. 1, line 16, the same.]

DEDICATION OF THE NEW MASONIC HALL AT WESTON-SUPER-MARE, AND INSTALLATION OF WORSHIPFUL MASTER.

The annual meeting of the Masonic Brethren of the St. Kew Lodge, 1222, Weston-super-Mare, was held on Wednesday, the 3rd inst., at the Masonic Hall, High-street, presided over by Bro. Major-General Munbee, P.M., acting as W.M. pro tem. There was a large muster of the members of the lodge, and some distinguished visitors, among whom were Bros. Captain Henry Bridges, Deputy Prov. Grand Master of Somerset, R. Herniman, P.M. 261, and Prov. G. S.W.; E. T. Inskip, W.M. 973, Prov. G.J.W.; R. C. Else, P.M. 291, P. Prov. S.G.W., and Prov. G., Sec. Dr. Charles Pope, P.M., P. Prov. S.G.W.; General H. E. Doherty, C.B., P.M. 53, P. Prov. S.G.W.; Edward White, P.M. 41, P. Prov. S.G.W.; W. S. Gillard, P.M. 329 and 1168, P. Prov. J.G. Deacon Dorset; Captain Randall, R. Elton Hunt, J. Payne, and others.

The first part of the day's proceedings was the confirmation of the minutes of the election of Bro. B. Cox as W.M. elect, which was unanimously confirmed.

The V.W. Deputy Provincial Grand Master and his Provincial Grand Officers then entered the hall, and were received with Masonic honours.

The ceremony of dedication and consecration was splendidly performed by the Very Worshipful Deputy Grand Master of Somerset, Bro. Captain Bridges, assisted by his Grand Officers. Bro. White, P.M. (scattering corn), Bro. Genera, Doherty, P.M. (pouring wine), Bro. Vizard, P.M. (pouring oil), and Bro. Major-General Munbee P.M. (with incense), the Deputy Provincial Grand Master dedicating the hall for the worthy and noble purpose to which it has been designed.

The Deputy Prov. Grand Master then installed Bro. Benjamin Cox into the chair of K.S., and invested him with the emblems of office, and placed in his custody the warrant, &c., charging him carefully to preserve it during his year of office, and until the appointment of his successor. The W.M. having thanked the brethren for the honour done him, proceeded to invest the following brethren as his officers for the ensuing year: Bros. Major Genl. G. B. Munbee, I.P.M.; Edward Emra Earle, Senr. Warden; F. Vigard, Jun. Warden (for Bro. Bigsby absent through illness); Edward Gregory, Treasurer; Sidney Jones, Senr. Deacon; A. W. Butter, Jun. Deacon; W. Smith, D. Ceremonies (for Bro. W. H. Davies); A. Mickenden, Assistant Dir. Ceremonies; W. Gaskell, Organist; W. H. Beadle, John Bath Stewards; John Mathews, I.G.; I. H. Parsons, Tyler.

The lodge was then closed, and the brethren retired to Bro. Bath's, Railway Hotel, where a most recherche banquet was provided, in Bro. Bath's well-known style, (a la Russe.)

The banquet was presided over by Bro. Cox. W.M., supported on his right by Bro. Captain Bridges, Dep. Prov. G. Master Somerset; Bro. Herniman, Prov. S.G.W.; Bro. Inskip, Prov. J.G.W.; Bro. Else, Prov. G. Sec.; and on their left by Bro. Major Genl. Munbee, P.M., and P. Prov. S. G. W.; Bro. E. White, P. Prov. S.G. W.; Bro. Dr. Pope, P. Prov. S.G.W.; Bro. Gillard, P. Prov. G. Deacon, Dorset; Bro. General Doherty, P. Prov. S.G.W. Amongst the guests were observed Bros. E. E. Earle, C. H. Whereat, J. Mathews, S. Jones, A. W. Batten, W. Gaskell, R. H. Pearson, W. H. Beadle, F. Vigard, Captain Townshend, R. Gregory, J. Perry, F. Thomas, S. G. Baker, M. Bevans, G. Gibbons, E. Blundell, J. Gale, J. Mantell, W. Smith, Scott Jones, S. Lewis, R. Ellis Hunt, Captain Randall, Thomas Beadle, R. W. L. Fowler, J. Littlejohn, J. H. Marwood, and many others.

On the removal of the cloth, the W.M. briefly proposed the "Queen" which was given with Masonic loyalty. The W.M. in proposing the next toast, that of Bro. H. R. H. the Prince of Wales, remarked that the Great Architect of the Universe has been pleased to visit our Royal Brother with a severe affliction, near unto death, yet the Grand Geometrician of the Universe had also been pleased to spare H. R. H. to the nation. From no society or body of men had our Royal Brother received more warm congratulations for his recovery, than from the Masonic Brotherhood. The next toast was that of the Most Noble the Marquis of Ripon, G.M. of England. Then followed that of the D.G.M.

of England, the Right Hon. the Earl of Carnarvon, and officers of G. Lodge, to which Bro. Bridges, Past Grand Sword Bearer, replied. The next toast was that of the Provincial Grand Master of Somerset, Bro. Right Hon. the Earl of Carnarvon, which was given with honours. The W.M. then gave the toast of the Very W. Deputy Prov. G. Master, Bro. Bridges, and the Provincial Grand Officers, past and present. Bro. Bridges replied in eloquent terms. The next toast (that of the evening) was given by the Deputy Prov. G. Master, who spoke highly of the W.M. (Bro. Cox.) as a Master. The W. Master in responding thanked the Deputy Grand Master for the kind compliment paid him, and the company for their mark of respect and confidence, adding that it would prove a stimulus to him during his year of office, to use his best endeavours for the success of the order, he recommended all brethren of the mystic tie who had not been raised to the sublime degree of a Master Mason to make such progress in the science as would enable them to obtain that position, wherein they would be able to see the outlines of many Masonic facts which are not so clear in the earlier stages of the Craft, for therein can be gleaned much that is of value. The true principles of Masonry inculcate those virtues which should bind us together as one brotherhood. Bro. Cox strongly, yet in a courteous manner, recommended the brethren to avoid rending asunder the harmony of the lodge by exposing each other's little follies, but rather that they should be the advocates of progress, the lampbearers of thought, and upholders of Masonic principles. Then they would ever be welcomed into the bosom of a Fraternity whose watchword is "Masonic Light and Love."

The "Health of Bro. Major-General Munbee" was received with a perfect furor of applause, and he replied in eloquent terms.

"The Visitors," responded to by Bros. Hunt, Randall, and others. The "Health of Bro. Bath," coupling with it the name of Mrs. Bath, Bro. Bath replied in suitable terms on behalf of himself and Mrs. Bath.

The W.M. then gave the Tyler's toast, "To all poor and distressed Masons, wheresoever residing on the face of the earth, whether by land or by sea, wishing them a speedy relief and a happy return to their native country." The last toast of the evening was that of "The Town Commissioners and Staff of the Local Government Board." Bro. Commander Townshend, R.N., Chairman of the Board, replied for the Board, and Bros. Smith, Cox (W.M.) and Gaskell, for the staff. This brought the proceedings of the evening to a close, and the W.M. having vacated the chair, the brethren separated at an early hour.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT AND PILLS.—NOTABLE FACTS.—Intense heat augments the annoyances of skin diseases and encourages the development of febrile disorders; wherefore, they should, as they can, be removed by these detergent and purifying preparations. In stomach complaints, liver affections, pains, and spasms of the bowels, Holloway's unguent, well rubbed over the affected part; immediately gives the greatest ease, prevents congestion and inflammation, checks threatening diarrhoea, and averts incipient illness. The poorer inhabitants of large cities will find these remedies to be their best friends when any pestilence rages, or when, from unknown causes, eruptions, boils, abscesses, or ulcerations, point out the presence of taints or impurities within the system, and call for instant and efficacious curative measures.—ADVT.

CENTENARY OF THE LODGE OF FRIENDSHIP (No. 206).

This prosperous and harmonious lodge celebrated its centenary at the Ship and Turtle, Leadenhall-street, on Thursday, the 4th inst., under the presidency of its genial W.M., Bro. Dr. Alfred Harris, who was supported upon the auspicious occasion by the following members and visitors, amongst others.

Members.—Bros. Wm. Conbro, S.W.; Samuel Gamman, S.W.; John Waters, S.D.; Allen R. Ramsey, J.D.; Arthur J. Hard, I.G.; Geo. Collier, Immediate P.M.; Robert Boyd, P.M.; F. Harrison, P.M.; E. B. Barnard, P.M.; H. M. Collier, P.M.; John Stewart, P.M.; Wm. Rumsey, P.M., Treas.; John Rumsey, P.M., Sec.; Chas. T. Parsons, Thos. Taylor, Wm. Medcalf, Jas. Pettengill; J. G. Stephens, E. Squirrell, Thos. G. Seahorn.

Visitors:—Bros. John Hervey, G. Sec.; J. Brett, P.G.P.; John Boyd, G.P.; R. W. Little, P.M., Prov. G. Sec. Middlesex; Wm. Blackburn, P.M.; E. Sillifant P.M., Prov. G. Deacon, Middlesex; Revd. Brenchly Kingsford, 256; Henry Dearsly, P.M. 3; Joseph Davis, 3; Chas. Smithers, P.M. 101; Robt. Brown, St. Peters, Montrose; Arthur Gamman, 376; Francis Muntton, W.M. 60; Richard Seaborn, 217; Henry Smith, 907; George L. Mustoph, 134; S. Noon, 788; A. Mellish, 188; Hugh Cummings, 11; Robert Wood, 174; C. Croxford, 73.

The lodge having been duly opened, the W.M. called upon the respected Secretary, Bro. John Rumsey, P.M., to read the M.W. Grand Master's Warrant authorising the lodge to wear a centenary jewel, after which Bro. Rumsey delivered with great precision and effect, although he was only recovering from severe indisposition, the following address:—

Brethren, although the event which we have met to celebrate this evening is more especially interesting to the members of our lodge, it is also one which may fairly arrest the attention of every lover of the Craft. One hundred years have passed away since the foundations of the Lodge of Friendship were laid, and its present position and prosperity afford us another evidence, if any were required, of the vitality which distinguishes Freemasonry, when its supporters are true and upright men.

Beyond doubt our lodge has experienced periods of depression, like all other human institutions, but the broad fact remains, as an incentive and stimulus to us and our successors, that the flag of "Friendship," which was unfurled in 1772, has ever since been borne aloft by a faithful band of brothers, and is now as pure and unsullied as when first it waved. On such an occasion as this it is as well to take a retrospective glance, and to trace noteworthy occurrences in the history of the lodge, but the records of No. 206 present to us such an unbroken series of peaceful and harmonious meetings, that few comments are necessary or desirable.

It will be found that the lodge was established originally at the "Bull Inn," Wrotham, in the county of Kent, on the 9th June, 1772, by Bro. Thomas Fulljames, Sen., Thomas Fulljames, Jun., and Samuel Terry, the number then being 431. It would appear, however, that but a moderate share of success attended the labours of the brethren in that rural district, and accordingly, after a lapse of 10 or 12 years, the precise date not being known, it was resolved to remove the lodge nearer town, and it was therefore taken to the Oxford Arms, Church-street, Deptford, having previously, about the year 1781, obtained a higher place on the register of lodges by being re-numbered 340, a subsequent alteration in 1792 making it No. 280, a position which it retained on the roll until the union of the two Grand Lodges in 1813.

The lodge appears to have flourished in Deptford, particularly during the decade ending with 1795, in which period no less than 115 new members were admitted, including the Revd. Jethro Inwood, author of several Masonic sermons, which are preserved in the library at Freemasons' Hall, and who at the time of his initiation was curate of St. Paul's, Deptford. A large proportion of the members at this time were mariners, and several naval captains are found among the number.

The lodge pursued its tranquil and prosperous career down to the time of the union, when, as already intimated, the number was again altered from 280 to 354, the subsequent changes being from 354 to 248 in 1832, and from 248 to 206 in 1863, at which number it now stands on the register of the Grand Lodge of England. From 1813 the lodge has undergone few vicissitudes, and during that period its roll has been graced by many names well-known and greatly respected in the Masonic world. Bro. Henry Beaumont Leeson, M.D., one of the most learned masons of this or any other age, was a member of this lodge, which he joined in 1836.

The present father of the lodge, Bro. William Rumsey, was initiated on the 9th January, 1840, his membership thus extending over a period of more than 32 years, or nearly one third of the entire duration of the existence of the Lodge.

Following in his steps, I am glad to say, are many worthy brethren to whom the destinies of the Lodge in times to come may safely be entrusted, and with the example of those who have gone before to direct and sustain their exertions we may reasonably anticipate a future of increased success for the Lodge of Friendship. Let us then strive in our several capacities to promote the happiness of the brethren and to maintain not only the prestige of this Lodge, but the dignity of the whole craft, so that when revolving years shall bring to our successors a second centenary, the memory of this day shall still be fondly cherished, although the voices of those who now celebrate it with joy and gladness shall long have been hushed in silence.

With every good wish for the welfare of Freemasonry in general and the Lodge of Friendship in particular, brethren, let us continue by diligence and fidelity in the discharge of the duties of our respective avocations, by liberal benevolence and diffusive charity, by kind words and amiable deportment, to convince the world of the benefits of our invaluable institution, let it not be said that here we have worked in vain or spent our strength for nought. Finally, brethren, let us remain of one mind, live together in fraternal harmony and may the God of peace be pleased to dwell amongst us. And now, Worshipful Master and brethren, I have only to thank you for the kind attention which you have awarded to this hasty and imperfect sketch of the records of this lodge.

The lodge was then closed, and the brethren sat down to a most recherché banquet provided in the good old "Ship and Turtle" style, by Bro. Painter.

After the removal of the cloth, the W.M. gave the following toasts:—

"The Queen and the Craft."

"The Marquis of Ripon, W.M. Grand Master."

"The Earl of Zetland, K.T., and H.R.H. the Prince of Wales, K.G., Past Grand Masters."

"The Earl of Carnarvon, Deputy Grand Master, and rest of the Grand Officers, past and present."

This was coupled with the name of Bro. Hervey, the Grand Secretary, who, upon rising to return thanks, was greeted with loud cheers. Bro. Hervey, having acknowledged the compliment paid to himself and the Grand Officers, drew attention to the pleasing character of the meeting, which he described as an epoch in the history of the lodge, and counselled all its members to maintain the high prestige it had acquired at the close of a hundred years existence.

The health of the W. Master was given by one of the P.M.'s (Bro. Collier we believe), who spoke in the highest terms of Bro. Harris's urbanity and attention to duty at all times, as well as of his Masonic attainments. The toast was received with an enthusiasm which proved that the worthy brother reigns in the hearts of his brethren, and after a very felicitous reply, the W.M. proposed the health of the numerous and distinguished "Visitors," with which he coupled the name of Bro. Wentworth Little, Prov. G. Sec. for Middlesex. (Cheers.) Bro. Little in responding to the toast alluded to the important character of the event which they had met to celebrate, proving as it did that Freemasonry was no ephemeral institution, which derived its strength from popular favour—but was one founded upon principles that would ever flourish wherever friendship animated the hearts of men. (Applause.) He concluded his speech by thanking the W.M. and members of "206" for the opportunity afforded the Visitors of witnessing the proceedings of the Centenary celebration, and of tendering their hearty congratulations to the lodge.

The toast of the evening was then proposed by Bro. Harris, W.M., as follows:—"The Centenary of the Lodge of Friendship, and may its future bear improved fruits of good fellowship and friendship." The toast was drunk with the greatest cordiality, and "Prosperity to the Lodge" was the additional pledge of all present.

The W.M. then proposed the health of the Past Masters, eight of whom, he was happy to say, were present. (Applause.) Of Bro. W. Rumsey, the Treasurer, and father of the Lodge he could speak nothing but praise, and the same remark applied to the next senior P.M., their indefatigable Secretary, Bro. John Rumsey, whose services to the lodge had been so great and so valuable—in fact all the P.M.'s were worthy of the high respect in which they were held by the brethren—and he, the W.M., was sure all honour would be done to the toast of their healths. A most hearty reception having been given to the P.M.'s, and suitable responses made by Bro. Rumsey and other brethren, the "Wardens and other Officers" followed, and the proceedings of a very delightful evening terminated with the Tyler's toast.

FREEMASONRY IN BERMUDA.

—A special meeting of the Loyalty Lodge (No. 385), Loyalty Lodge, was held in the Hall on the evening of the above day, for the purpose of presenting to Brother G. W. Green, a handsome Secretary's Jewel, and for the purpose of taking a farewell of the worthy G. W. Bro. Robert Barnaby, on his leaving for England.

There were present, Bro. J. C. Tucker, W.M., in the chair, supported by Bros. J. C. Thiele, J. P.M.; J. R. Longshaw, P.M.; H. J. P. Anderson, P.M.; Revd. R. Measham, P.M., and P.G.C. of Devon; and all his officers, viz:—Bros. R. Barnaby, S.W.; W. E. Warder, J.W.; G. Rothwell, Treas.; J. Bray, Sec.; S. Bostridge, S.D.; W. Amsden, J.D.; J. York, I.G.; T. Barnes, Tyler; T. Stanley, G. W. Green, E. Blackwell, J. Taylor, Tims, Hitch, &c. &c., and a number of visitors, chiefly from H.M.S. Royal Alfred, among whom were noticed Bros. C. Thomas, G. R. C. Eyres, W. T. Littlejohn, J. Edgecumbe, R. A. H. Simmons, Francis C. Bate, Hawkins, Hayward, &c.

The Lodge being opened in due form, the W.M. in a short address called the attention of the brethren to the objects of the meeting, and Bro. G. W. Green was presented by the W.M. with a handsome Secretary's Jewel, awarded to him by the brethren for his services as Secretary for the year 1871, and Bro. Green in a few words thanked the lodge for the honour they had conferred on him. Prayer having been offered by Bro. the Revd. R. Measham, the lodge was closed, and the brethren, numbering about 70, sat down to an excellent banquet, provided for occasion; reflecting great credit on the Stewards, Bros. Bray and Warder, for the manner in which they had performed their arduous duty. The room was tastefully decorated, by several of the brethren, and the effect delighted everyone.

Grace being said, the brethren sat down and did justice to the good things provided, at the same time the soul enlivening strains of music were sent forth by part of the band from H.M.S. Royal Alfred, Bro. Hecker having kindly provided an excellent programme for the occasion.

The cloth having been removed the W.M. proposed the first toast, "The Queen and the Craft." The usual honours were given quite loyally, and the members sang "God save the Queen."

The W.M. in proposing the next toast, drew the attention of the brethren to that distinguished nobleman, who is now at the head of craft in England and who was selected to be the chief bearer of the olive branch of peace to our kinsmen in the West, to bring about a friendly handshaking between two mighty nations. The W.M. therefore rose to propose the health of the Most Noble the Marquis of Ripon, M.W.G.M., the Grand Officers, and that esteemed nobleman who for 26 years ruled the destinies of the craft, the Earl of Zetland, P.G.M., which toast was greeted with full masonic honours, and ably responded to by Bro. P.M. Anderson.

The next toast being that of Bro. H. R. H. the Prince of Wales, the W.M. drew the attention of the brethren to that memorable day the 27th of February, when the Royal Family went with the people to thank the Great Architect for the preservation of the life of the Heir to the Throne; hoping that the events of that day would make a lasting impression on the hearts of all. The W.M. then proposed the health of the Prince of Wales, which was greeted with the honours, the band playing "God bless the Prince of Wales."

The W.M., on rising again, to propose the toast of the evening, said it was with a mixture of regret and pleasure that he rose to propose the health of the S.W., Brother Robert Barnaby; with regret at losing so good an officer and member, and with pleasure, in that he was enabled to congratulate him on the successful completion of his mission, Brother Barnaby had by his zeal and assiduity as an officer of Loyalty Lodge earned the esteem of all present. The W.M. therefore requested the brethren to fill a bumper and drink to the health of the S.W., trusting he may have a safe and speedy voyage home, and find everything all he could wish. The toast was drunk with the honours, the band playing "Auld Lang Syne" and "Home sweet Home."

The next toast was the health of our esteemed brethren from H. M. S. Royal Alfred, who numbered about 32, which was duly honoured and responded to by Bro. Revd. A. Measham.

The "Stewards," was next given, at the same time remarking the labour and trouble taken to cater as they had done this evening, and which reflected such great credit to which Bro. Warder responded.

The "Ladies" was drunk to heartily, and responded to by Bro. Cobb.

The toast to the health of Bro. Hecker for his kind assistance in arranging for the musical treat he has given us, especially as most of the pieces played were his own composition—which was heartily drunk to by the brethren.

The W.M. then proposed the health of our "Guests" for the evening, Bros. Rowse and Newton, and especially Mr. Rowse who, at different times, rendered great service to Loyalty Lodge by his timely advice when needed, which was ably responded to by Bro. Rowse and Bro. Newton.

Bro. Charles Thiele, I.P.M., then proposed the health of the Worshipful Master, which they did in right good earnest, and the W.M. responded, remarking that he trusted, while in office, he had carried out the wishes of the brethren.

P.M., Rev. R. Measham, then proposed the concluding toast "All poor and distressed Brethren."

A few songs were then rendered by some of the brethren, and all dispersed to their homes highly gratified at the success of the evening.

IMMORTALITY.

AN IDEAL OF FREEMASONRY.

The comprehensive and grand idea of Goethe, in his inimitable "Faust," inspires the soul with a volume of thought, rich and practical. It must stamp upon every thinking mind the absolute fact that every man is a co-worker with God, for "So God created man in his own image; in the image of God, created he him! male and female, created he them." Gen. 1., 27.

There is no such thing as "Time" apart from "Eternity"—both are one and the same thing; but because the human mind cannot grasp the infinity of years, as measurements of unending time, men call that which they cannot realize, eternity. We agree with Goethe that the "loom of time" is eternal in its operations, and when God created man in His own image, possessing the immortality of soul, He placed him at that loom as its sole worker, above all other created beings, and gave him, as his highest duty, to weave in daily life by good acts, earnest and honest thoughts, intellectual improvement and study of the beautiful, the pure, and the true, and the living drapery of the Godhead in exalted and perfect humanity.

Milton, appreciating this ideal, said:

"God, who oft descends to visit men
Unseen, and through their habitations walks
To mark their doings."

It is peculiarly a Masonic ideal that God is a worker in this grand universe of worlds, and that man is the co-worker according to the intelligence with which he is endowed.

Think of it, brethren, that each and every human being is weaving in his own person the symbolic drapery and representation of God Almighty! It is a thought worthy of the Infinite, to know that we are a part of the Godhead in our work of goodness and love, and that the Infinite Mind of the Creator works with us in our private homes, marking our doings, and becoming with us a sharer of our glory in the triumphs of mind and soul.

God is symbolised in all that He has created—He clothes Himself in the glorious perfections of all that exists—and the nearest like Himself is the perfection of Man, whom he has created in His own spiritual and soul-like image—

"Spirit! whose life sustaining presence fills
Air, ocean, central depths, by man untried.
Thou for thy worshippers hast sanctified
All place, all time! The silence of the hills
Breathes veneration; founts and choral rills
Of Thee are murmuring; to its inmost glade
The living forest with thy whisper thrills,
And there is holiness in every shade."

God is everywhere; God is everything that exists—perfect and supreme. Man, and only man, has to work at the "eternal loom of Time" to weave the garment which bespeaks his nativity in the Godhead; he, alone, bears the Divine impress of inventive power. Man alone is a worshipper. All other created beings, of whatever nature, are merely creatures and dependent upon laws they can neither shape, change, or understand. Infinite Wisdom has given to them instinct, but to man alone—reason. It is in reasoning power that man becomes God-like, and whatever system of Ethics or Philosophy which reduces man from the sphere of reason to the dependency of instinct, brutalises the ideal of God and puts us down to the level of irresponsible creation.

Nothing can be improved but man. All creation, animate and inanimate, except man, is perfect at its creation. Man has power to destroy the perfection of nature by abusing its laws, but can add nothing to original perfection, except to understand and preserve its laws.

Every man, therefore, becomes a co-worker of God, because he improves upon his original condition. The boy who is born in a hut, and making use of the reasoning powers which God has given him, and arrives at the pinnacle of science, or the chief magistracy of a nation, and evinces, in his administration, the noble and magnanimous characteristics of a gentleman and a statesman, proves before the world that he has not been an idle worker at the "eternal loom" where is woven the characteristic drapery of his Creator; he is a fellow-workman of the Infinite Mind.

God works through human agencies and natural laws only. Apart from man, it is difficult to decide which is the most intelligent part of the animal creation; but, taking them all, none have invented anything new, except God himself, and He being perfect, none but Man, by his thoughts, weaves the living drapery of the Father, of which the child is a part. How, glorious, then is the ideal that we are a part of God—free as the mountain air—as unrestrained and boundless in the legality of our conceptions of the Infinite and the God-like as God Himself! What a boundless field of perspective is here opened up to every intelligent mind. The humblest, and even the untutored soul, can lift itself up in the sunlight of the Grand Architect of the Universe, and exclaim, "I am a part of Thee!"—and what nobler prayer can any heart breathe than—"more light."

In the language of Congreve:

"His pure thoughts were borne
Like fumes of sacred incense o'er the clouds,
And wafted thence on angels' wings, thro' ways
Of Light to the bright source of all."

Every human being has an idea of the perfections of God, and in clothing their impersonation, no painter has ever dared to characterise even angels in any drapery except spotless white, as the emblem of purity, hence all writers have decided that when man appears before God, he must be clothed in perfect purity, therefore when St. John in his vision of the Revelation, says:—

"He that overcometh, the same shall be clothed in white raiment; and I will not blot out his name out of the book of life." Here we have the drapery of God; and each human being is supposed to be working at the eternal loom, and weaving for himself the living habiliments fit for a heavenly home. No one of ordinary power of reason supposes for a moment that any of us shall appear in actual clothing, or that God is a tangible being, hence the only drapery here signified, is the clothing of good works, honest heart and pure soul, all symbolized by white; hence, he who shall claim the relationship of God must be clothed in good works—woven upon the "eternal loom of Time."—St. Louis Freemason.

AMERICAN MASONIC TEMPLES.

The Masonic Temple, at Troy, N. Y., was dedicated April 2, 1872. It cost $100,000. The furnishing of the Lodge Rooms cost $10,000, besides several elegant articles of furniture that were presented by the brethren.

The Masonic Temple of Philadelphia is under roof and rapidly approaching completion. It will cost when finished $1,000,000. It is designed to dedicate the building in June, 1873.

The Masonic Temple of New York is not yet under roof. It is progressing slowly. It will cost when finished $2,000,000.

The Masonic Temple of New Orleans is to cost $250,000. The corner-stone was laid on the 15th of February last.

The contract for the Masonic Temple at Macon, Ga., at a cost of $45,000, was given out in May, 1871, and was to be finished in April, 1872.

The Masonic Temple at Wilmington, Delaware, was dedicated April 18. It is a beautiful building, 92 feet front by 211 feet deep.

THE NEW MASONIC HALL IN LIVERPOOL.

The brethren in the province of West Lancashire, and especially those within the Liverpool centre, will be glad to know that all difficulties have been surmounted, active operations having been commenced in connection with the erection of the New Masonic Hall in Hope-street. The ground in front of the old building is being rapidly cleared, and there is every probability that in the course of a short time the new edifice, which will prove an honour to the craft in the "good old town" and give a great impetus to the progress of the Masonic cause, will put in an appearance as one of the architectural ornaments of the neighbourhood. The work will be carried out by Bro. Joshua Henshaw, Harmonic Lodge, No. 216 (whose name is already favourably known in connection with similar undertakings), upon plans prepared by Bro. R. Danson, W.M. 1094. Parliamentary duties will prevent Bro. Sir T. G. Fermor Hesketh, R.W.P.G.M. for West Lancashire, from being present to lay the foundation stone at the commencement of the operations, but it is probable the interesting ceremony will be performed with full Masonic honours some time during August.

SUMMER BANQUET OF THE CAPPER LODGE (No. 1076).

Thursday, the 27th ult., may be considered a red letter day in the history of this prosperous and flourishing lodge. It having been decided to hold the summer banquet at the Royal Hotel, North Woolwich, and also that ladies should participate in the festival an excursion down the river was arranged, and a special steambot chartered for the occasion. About 11 a.m., the brethren and ladies, numbering nearly 150, left the North Woolwich pier, proceeded down the river, and having rounded the "Chapman" light, returned to North Woolwich about 5 p.m. Dancing was engaged on deck with great spirit to the strains of an excellent band, and luncheon was also served, to which, it is needless to say, ample justice was done. On returning to the hotel, after a short interval, dinner was announced, and the company, preceded by the band, adjourned to the spacious concert-room in the gardens, where a most sumptuous banquet was served in Bro. Holland's best style. The bill of fare embraced all the choicest delicacies of the season, and it was at once apparent that Bro. Holland had spared neither pains or expense in his endeavour to do honour to the occasion. The W.M., Bro. C. W. Ashdown, occupied the chair, the vice-chairs being filled by Bros. Brayshaw, J.W., and Knox, S.D. A military band discoursed some excellent music during dinner, and the viands and wines were of the best quality, and gave great satisfaction. The cloth having been cleared, the W.M. briefly proposed the usual loyal and patriotic toasts, which were heartily responded to, Bro. E. West, P.M. (6th Essex R.V.) replying on behalf of the volunteers. The health of the W.M., proposed by Bro. Gaskett, I.P.M., was also very cordially received. "The Health of the Host" having been proposed by Bro. Watkins, P.M., Bro. Holland, in replying, thanked them all for the manner in which the toast had been received, and assured them that should they again honour him with a visit, he would do his utmost to cater for them, as he had done that day, and trusted that the example set by the Capper Lodge would be followed by other lodges. A grand display of fireworks brought the proceedings to a close, and all returned to their homes after having spent a very pleasant day, many expressing a hope that this happy gathering would not be the last of its kind. The thanks of the lodge are due to the committee who arranged and carried out the excursion, and especially to Bro. Sisley, P.M., who was most indefatigable in his endeavours to render the whole affair a success.

FREEMASONRY IN CONSTANTINOPLE.

The installation of the W. M. and the investment of the officers of the "Leinster" Lodge, No. 166 (Irish Constitution) took place on the 24th ult., the Festival of St. John the Baptist, at the Masonic Temple, Hasskeui, in the presence of a numerous attendance of members of the Lodge and visitors from other Constantinople Lodges. By request of the retiring W. M., Bro. G. R. Warren, W.M. of Lodge Caledonian, No. 489 (Scotch Constitution) and P. M. of the Oriental Lodge (English rite) acted as Installing Master on the occasion. Bro. Robert McGill, the W.M. elect, having been presented, was duly installed into the chair of K. S. in the presence of four P.M.'s according to the ancient rites and usages. The brethren of the lodge having been called upon to salute the newly installed Master, the W.M. then invested the officers elected with the insignia of their several offices as follows: Bro. J. Roper, S.W.; Bro. W. Dorrell, J.W.; Bro. A. Dealer, Treasurer; Bro. J. Rowe, Secretary; Bro. P. Flucker, S.D.; Bro. W. Webb, J.D.; Bro. J. Cowan, I.G.; P.M. Bro. J. Bevan, D.C.; Bro. J. Blair, Organist; Bro. W. Bersonic, Tyler. The newly installed W.M. in an able speech thanked the brethren of the Lodge, on behalf of himself and officers, for the confidence they placed in them by electing them to their respective offices. A vote of thanks was accorded to W. Bro. G. R. Warren for the able assistance he had rendered as Installing Master. W. Bro. Warren, in the course of his reply, referred to the able and energetic manner in which the I.P.M. (Bro. J. Wetherill) had carried out the duties of W.M. of the Lodge during the past twelve months, and proposed that a P.M.'s jewel be awarded to him. The W. Master seconded the proposition. Votes of thanks were also accorded to P.M. Bro. J. Bevan (Treasurer) and Bro. J. Rowe. (Secretary) for the efficient manner in which the Lodge accounts had been kept. Bros. Bevan and Rowe having returned thanks, the Lodge was closed and the brethren sat down to a collation, to which they had been invited by the W.M., when the principal Masonic toasts were given and responded to according to ancient custom, the proceedings being still further enlivened by some very well rendered songs and recitations.

The Rosicrucian Society of England will meet at the Freemason's Tavern on Thursday, 18th inst., at half-past five.

"A VISIT TO EPPS'S COCOA MANUFACTORY.—Through the kindness of Messrs. Epps, I recently had an opportunity of seeing the many complicated and varied processes the Cocoa bean passes through ere it is sold for public use, and being both interested and highly pleased with what I saw during my visit to the manufactory, I thought a brief account of the Cocoa and the way it is manufactured by Messrs. Epps, to fit it for a wholesome and nutritious beverage, might be of interest to the readers of Land and Water.—See Article in Land and Water, October 12.

"I have much pleasure in stating that though using your Pain Killer I have had, and am still having, wonderful relief from a long and painful illness, arising from rheumatic gout and nervous convulsions, which have extended over a period of seven years; causing paralysis of the limbs. But I feel sure from what I have already experienced that your medicine will entirely restore me.—W. ALLEN, Hoxton, May 1871.—To Perry Davis & Son, London, W.C."

THE GLENFIELD PATENT STARCH CASE.—Sheriff Davidson has rejected the appeal, against Sheriff Campbell's decision in the case of Wetherpoon against J. C. Anderson, Grocer, Edinburgh, by which the latter was fined £21 and expenses, for selling an imitation of the Glenfield Starch, and has granted the additional expenses.

Poetry.

LINES.

Addressed to Bro. J. Norriss, Warden, R.M.B.I. BY A MASON'S DAUGHTER.

Kind and generous, mildly ruling
Those committed to his care,
Ever patient and forgiving
Through the trials he has to bear
Sympathising in affliction,
Feeling for each neighbour's grief,
Often in his goodness striving
To afford their woe relief.

Such a friend the writer found him,
In a dark and trying hour,
He in pity sooth'd her suffering
To the utmost of his power.
And her grateful thoughts reverting
To the many friends who blest
Tribulations of her past life,
Breathe his name amid the rest

May our Father in His mercy
Still prolong his sojourn here,
That he may be spared to comfort
Those who hold him near and dear;
And when he, at last is summon'd
To his home of rest above,
In the hearts of those he succoured
May his memory dwell in love.

Masonic Tidings.

BRITISH, FOREIGN, AND COLONIAL.

The Rev. Samuel Martin, minister of Westminster Chapel, was presented by his friends on Wednesday night with two thousand guineas on the occasion of his completing the thirtieth year of his ministry there. Mr. Samuel Morley, M.P., made the presentation.

Her Majesty has been pleased to intimate her intention of conferring the honour of knighthood on Mr. J. Gilbert Scott, the eminent architect, on the occasion of the completion of the Prince Consort's National Memorial in Hyde-park.

Mr. Baxter, M.P., has in contemplation a reform which he calculates will effect a saving of £10,000 to the imperial taxpayer. He proposes to abolish the Edinburgh General Post Office, and to transfer the Scotch central authority to London.

Mr. Russell Gurney met his constituents on Monday, at Southampton, for the first time since his return from Washington. He spoke highly of the character of the American people, and said they had a strong desire to maintain friendly relations with England. It mattered not, he said, whether we had to pay two or three millions, more or less, so long as the great principles of the treaty were acted upon.

Alderman Sir W. A. Rose has recovered from his recent attack, and has been in London again during the week.

Mr. Under-Sheriff Bro. Beard, who has recently undergone a surgical operation, is much better, and is expected shortly to resume his professional duties.

Sheriff Bro. Sir John Bennett has been elected on the Court of the Liners' Company.

NOTICE.

The Subscription to THE FREEMASON is now 10s. per annum, post-free, payable in advance.

Vol. I., bound in cloth	4s. 6d.
Vol. II., ditto	7s. 6d.
Vol. III., ditto	15s. 0d.
Vol. IV., ditto	15s. 0d.
Reading Cases to hold 52 numbers ...	2s. 6d.

United States of America.

THE FREEMASON is delivered free in any part of the United States for 12s. per annum, payable in advance.

NOTICE TO SUBSCRIBERS.

The Office of THE FREEMASON is now transferred to 198, FLEET-STREET, E.C. All communications for the Editor or Publisher should therefore be forwarded to that address.

Births, Marriages and Deaths.

BIRTH.

YARBOROUGH.—On the 5th July, at Titness Park, the Countess of Yarborough, of a son.

MARRIAGES.

LAVINGTON—HODSON.—On the 4th inst., at St. Mary's, Lambeth, by the Rev. W. E. Faulkner, Bro. Henry Hugh Lavington, of the Whittington Lodge, No. 862, to Harriet, daughter of Mr. John Crisp Hodson, of Peterborough.

PAYNE—FIGG.—On the 4th inst., at St. George's, Hanover-square, Bro. George Frederick Payne, of the Egyptian Lodge, No. 27, youngest son of Bro. Chas. Bryant Payne, P.M. 27, to Elizabeth Wilmin, eldest daughter of Bro. John Wilmin Figg.

DEATH.

DOBSON.—On the 29th ult., at 135, Gower-street, Bro. William Francis Dobson, M.A., of Bearsted, Maidstone, Deputy Provincial Grand Master for Kent. Deeply lamented.

Answers to Correspondents.

All communications for The Freemason should be written legibly on one side of the paper only, and, if intended for insertion in the current number, must be received not later than 10 o'clock a.m. on Thursdays, unless in very special cases. The name and address of every writer must be sent to us in confidence.

G.R.S.—We shall be glad to insert any communication you may please to forward.

J.C.L.—Sleaford. A Master Mason's lodge may be opened with five, but seven must be present during the ceremony of raising—W.M. Wardens, Deacons, I.G., and Tyler, who is technically present, although not actually within the lodge.

CURIOSES.—Our reply referred to Provincial Grand Officers only. All officers of the United Grand Lodge below the Grand Secretary are entitled to the prefix "Worshipful." The Wardens of Grand Lodge are "Right Worshipful," the Chaplains, Registrar, President of the Board of General Purposes, and Secretary, "Very Worshipful."

The following reports are unavoidably held over:—Lodges 954, 975, 1151, 421, 1309; Mark Lodge 151, 72, 742.

The Freemason,

SATURDAY, JULY 13, 1872.

The Freemason is published on Saturday Mornings in time for the early trains.

The price of the Freemason is Twopenny per week; annual subscription, 10s. (payable in advance.)

All communications, letters, &c., to be addressed to the Editor, 198, Fleet-street, E.C.

The Editor will pay careful attention to all MSS. entrusted to him, but cannot undertake to return them unless accompanied by postage stamps.

ROYAL MASONIC INSTITUTION FOR BOYS.

The annual Summer Fête and distribution of prizes took place on Monday, the 8th inst, at Wood Green, under the presidency of William Wither B. Beach, Esq., M.P., R.W. Prov. G.M. Hants and Isle of Wight.

The programme comprised a concert by the boys, the distribution of prizes, the usual collation and a ball, with athletic sports, croquet, bowling, &c. The company assembled in goodly numbers, and apparently enjoyed themselves. Perhaps a little more sun might have had the effect of inducing a greater number of our lady friends to venture forth on this very interesting occasion.

Subjoined is a list of the prizes, with the names of the winners, and we cannot but congratulate Masters C. J. Jones, and Henry C. Bush, on the amount of proficiency they must have obtained to enable them to become the grateful recipients of so many trophies of mental warfare.

CLASSICAL DEPARTMENT.

Upper Form (value 21s. each).—Classics, C. J. Jones; Mathematics, C. J. Jones; Modern Languages, C. J. Jones; English, C. J. Jones;

First Class (value 15s. each).—Classics, Henry C. Bush; Mathematics, Henry C. Bush; Modern Languages, Henry C. Bush; English, Henry C. Bush.

Second Class (value 10s. 6d. each).—Classics, W. R. Holland; Mathematics, W. R. Holland; Modern Languages, Henry V. Belcher; English, Henry V. Belcher.

COMMERCIAL DEPARTMENT.

First Class (value 10s. 6d. each).—Arithmetic, Charles L. Bryant; History and Geography, Charles L. Bryant; Writing, James Addison; English, Charles L. Bryant.

Second Class (value 7s. 6d. each).—Arithmetic, William Boothman; History and Geography, E. G. L. Sweet; Writing, C. R. Heeley; English, William Boothman.

Preparatory Class (value 5s.).—General Proficiency, F. C. Godsmark.

Good Conduct Silver Medal, presented at the Festival, March, 1872, John Spicer.

Efficiency as monitor (value 21s.), John Spicer.

SPECIAL PRIZES: PRESENTED BY PRIVATE DONORS.

By Bro. Edward Cox, V.P., Canonbury Gold Medal, £4 4s. Presented at the Festival, 1872, Charles Ennis.

By Bro. William Winn, V.P., Oxford Local Examination, June, 1871, £5 5s., W. B. Redgrave.

By Bro. Rev. Dr. J. E. Cox, proficiency in German, W. L. Crampton.

By Bro. Rev. Dr. Goodwin—For Self Discipline, John Spicer; for Good Conduct, W. L. Crampton.

By Bro. H. C. Silvester—Painting, 21s., C. J. Jones; shading, 21s., F. Cottman; Architecture, 10s. 6d., A. W. Bowcock; 2nd Shading, 10s. 6d., W. R. Holland.

By the Franklin Lodge, No. 838, Boston, value £2. [A silver watch is given to the writer of the best letter, selected from those leaving the institution at Midsummer and Christmas]. E. C. Isborn.

By the Secretary, value 10s. 6d. each. Personal Cleanliness: Christmas, 1872, J. T. Merryweather; Midsummer, J. A. McIntosh.

PRESENTED BY THE HOUSE COMMITTEE.

First Prize, Value 21s. each: Writing, J. Addison; dictation, H. C. Bush; history, W. L. Crampton; geography and mapping, C. J. Jones; general attention to studies, F. Cottman; genera-proficiency, C. J. Jones; mental arithmetic, C. J. Jones; proficiency in drill, A. Mould.

Second Prize, value 10s. 6d. each: Writing, J. T. Merryweather; dictation, E. G. L. Sweet; history, C. J. Jones; geography and mapping, W. L. Crampton; general attention to studies, J. A. McIntosh; mental arithmetic, F. Cottman; proficiency in drill, Charles L. Bryant.

Amongst those present we noticed the following:—Bros. B. Head, H.C.; R. W. Stewart, H.C.; W. Robuck, H.C.; S. Rosenthal, H.C.; R. W. Motihn; Hancock, of Derby; D. Dewer; W. Winn, Vice Patron; Needham; Dr. Edmund Cox; A. R. Green; McQueen; Webber; S. W. Dosele; W. H. Fisher; C. Horsley.

We cannot conclude our hasty notice without a word of praise to the Boys for the excellent manner in which they performed the various pieces of music set down for them on the programme, both for time and precision, &c.; it was really excellent and that treat alone would have repaid a visit. We must not either forget to mention the indefatigable Secretary, Bro. Binckes, who as usual entered into and carried out every detail thoroughly.

REPORTS OF MASONIC MEETINGS.

Craft Masonry.

METROPOLITAN.

UPTON LODGE.—(No. 1227).—The annual summer banquet of this prosperous lodge, was held on Thursday, the 4th inst, at the Royal Crown Hotel, Sevenoaks, Kent, under the presidency of the much esteemed W.M., Bro. R. Bolton. The brethren and ladies assembled at the Cannon-street station, and were conveyed in special first class carriages attached to the 10.40 a.m. train to Sevenoaks, where the party arrived after a pleasant ride of little more than an hour, and at once proceeded to the hotel, where luncheon was provided; after partaking of this the company divided themselves into two parties, one of which proceeded to Knowle Park, the seat of Lord Buckhurst (where they were permitted to view various apartments, &c., of that ancient family seat) whilst another party proceeded in a drag to enjoy a drive through some of the loveliest scenery which the county of Kent affords. By three o'clock all had returned to the Hotel, where an excellent banquet awaited them, and for which every one appeared to be thoroughly ready, the appetite being considerably sharpened by the exercise previously undergone. The chair was occupied by the W.M., Bro. R. Bolton, and the vice chairs by Bro. English, S.W., and Bro. Bratton, J.W. Upon the removal of the cloth the W.M. proposed the usual loyal toasts, which received a hearty response. The toast of the "Stewards" was responded to by Bro. Slec, W.S., and that of the "Ladies" (proposed by Bro. Owen) by Bro. Gundelfinger, who in the course of a humorous speech, expressed the great pleasure it gave him as a single man, to return thanks for the fair sex, who had that day graced the festive board with their presence. The company then adjourned to the grounds adjoining, where dancing was kept up for some time, to the music of a band provided for the occasion. At 7 p.m., tea and coffee were served, after which another adjournment was made to the grounds, and a few more dances having taken place, the whole party left for the railway station, and returned to town, where they safely arrived about 10 p.m., having spent a thoroughly enjoyable day.

CORNWALL.

PROVINCIAL GRAND LODGE.

A Provincial Grand Lodge and General Communication of Masons of the Province was held on Tuesday, 9th July, at the Town Hall, St. Austell. There was a large attendance of brethren from all parts of the provinces, there being over 200 members present. The town was gaily decorated with bunting and bands of music paraded the streets at intervals. The bells of the parish church also rang merry peals during the day.

The proceedings were somewhat marred by the indisposition, we hope temporary only, of the R.W. the Provincial Grand Master, Bro. Augustus Smith, who had come down from town the previous day to be present at the Grand Lodge, and was the guest of Bro. Edmond Carlyon, but was unable to attend in consequence of an affection of the throat, which had given him much annoyance during the night, and from which he had not yet recovered sufficiently to be able to perform the duties which would have devolved upon him.

The following officers took their several positions in the Grand Lodge:—Br. R. Rogers, P.Prov.G.M., acting Prov.G.M.; John Rescoria, D.Prov.G.M.; Charles Read, Prov.S.G.W.; Dr. Mudge, Assist. Prov.J.G.W.; Rev. G.L. Church, Prov.G. Chaplain; William Tweedy, Treas.; E. T. Carlyon, Prov.G. Sec.; John Coombe, Prov.J.G.D.; W. Treguary, Prov. G. Supt. of Wks.; W. Mitchell and W. Guy, D. of Cer.; Samuel Harvey, Prov.G. Purst.; W. Rooks, Assist. do.; W. C. Borlase, J. F. Penrose, Martin, Dunn, J. B. Kerswell, and Jacob Grigg, Prov.G. Stewards; T. Chirgwin, P.Prov.J.G.W. The following brethren were also present:—Col. Peard, P.Prov.G.S.W.; T. Solomon, P.Prov.S.G.W.; Rev. F. P. Paul, Prov. C. Chaplain; G. A. Jenkins, P. Prov. G. Reg.; E. Carlyon, P. Prov. S.G.W.; W. H. Jenkins, P. Prov. S.G.W.; F. W. Dabb, P. Prov. J.G.W.; W. J. Johns, P. Prov. G. Reg.; W. J. Hughan, P. Prov. G. Sec.; T. Q. Couch, P. Prov. J.G.W.; John Hele, Mus. Bac., P. Prov. G.O.; T. Harvey, P. Prov. Supt. of Works; J. H. Burrall, P. Prov. G.D.C.; J. Ninness, P. Prov. G. Reg.; J. Paull, P. Prov. Supt. of Works; L. P. Metham, D. Prov. G.M. of Devon; I. Latimer, P. Prov. G. Sec. of Devon; and the Masters, officers, and many of the brethren of the lodges of the province.

Bro. E. T. Carlyon, the Prov. Grand Secretary, said in opening the business, he was quite sure that they would all be pained to hear of the illness of their Grand Master—(hear, hear). He had been very unwell during the night, and remained unwell to-day; so that he would not be able to be present. On this occasion, therefore, it would be necessary that Bro. Reginald Rogers should act in his stead. Before retiring, he had the pleasure of stating that he had had the gratification of placing on the pedestal three mallets, the gift of the Grand Master.

Bro. Reginald Rogers, on taking the chair, expressed his regret at the circumstances which prevented the attendance of their Grand Master, whom they would all have been glad to see in his place, performing his duties. He was sure that they would all feel the greatest regret that he could not be present with them to-day—(hear, hear).

The lodge was then opened in due form, and the business, which was considerable, was proceeded with, with much promptitude.

Bro. John, clerk to the Prov. G. Secretary, read the minutes of the last meeting of the Grand Lodge, which were duly confirmed.

The Prov. G. Master then read the replies which had been received in answer to the addresses of congratulation sent to her Majesty the Queen and the Prince of Wales, and moved that they be recorded in the minutes of the Grand Lodge, which was agreed to.

Bro. W. Tweedy, Prov. G. Treasurer, next read his statement of the accounts.

The Prov. G. Secretary's report was then read. Number of lodges 24; No. of initiations, 103; joining members, 18; members, 786—total 907. In 1870 there were 107 initiations; 27 joining members; 735 members—or a total of 869. This shows a net increase on the year of 1871-2 of 38. There had not been any Directory published for the present year as yet, in consequence of the annual returns not having been sent in in time to complete it.

The G. Master adverted to the inconvenience that was felt owing to the Masters of Lodges not sending in their returns earlier, and expressed a hope that attention would be given to this subject of complaint.

The reports were then passed.

Br. Chirgwin then read the report of the Cornwall Masonic Annuity Fund:—The grand total was £153 12s. 6d., being an increase of £27 11s. 6d., over the previous year—a statement which was received with much applause. The report, which was signed by Br. R. Rogers, treasurer, and T. Chirgwin, Secretary, concluded by saying:—“We have much pleasure in reporting that the income from annual subscriptions and donations still continues to increase, and has enabled us to purchase since the last annual festival meeting £200, £4 per cent., perpetual preference stock of the Bristol and Exeter Railway; and £200, £5 per cent. Russian Bonds. The income from our present investments now amounts to £70 19s. Applications have been received from two candidates for annuities, and it will be for the Prov.G. Lodge to decide, whether more than one additional annuitant shall be elected at this meeting. The usual voting papers have been sent to each subscriber.”

The report was then received and passed.

Bros. Reginald Rogers and Thomas Chirgwin were unanimously re-elected Treasurer and Secretary of the Annuity Fund, and Bro. Guy, of St. Austell, and Bro. Ninness, of Chacewater, Auditors.

Bro. Hughan, P. Prov. G. Sec., then read a series of resolutions of which he had given due notice, and the object of which was to elect two annuitants, there being two candidates, the first on the poll to have £20 a year, the second to have the balance in hand, which was £10 19s. a year, and which it was also proposed (by Bro. Chirgwin) to make up by a special vote of £10 to £20. The resolutions were ably moved by Bro. Hughan, and as ably supported by Bro. Col. Peard, and unanimously adopted.

The brethren were then formed into order of procession by Bro. Samuel Harvey, the P.G. Pursuivant.

The procession passed through the town, the bands playing the quaint well-known Masonic March music. The streets were crowded with people, and as the weather was exceedingly fine there was nothing to mar the interest of the scene. The services were conducted by the Rev. Bros. Paull, Ferris, and Bloxsome. The Rev. Bro. G.L. Church preached an excellent and appropriate sermon, founded on Malachi iii, 17—“And they shall be mine, saith the Lord of Hosts, in that day when I make up my jewels.” In the sermon the preacher entered fully into the merits of Freemasonry, and showed how thoroughly these principles harmonised with the great doctrines of Christianity and the precepts which our Saviour inculcated. Without trenching on the mysteries of the Order, the Rev. gentleman showed how much the doctrines of Masonry promoted all the moral, domestic, and social virtues.

On the return from church, the acting Grand Master reported that there were 319 votes for Bro. Collins, and 257 votes for Bro. W. Harvey. He thereupon declared that Bro. Collins was first, and Bro. W. Harvey second annuitant.

Bro. E. T. Carlton then proposed a vote of £10 to Br. W. Harvey, £5 to the widow at Fowey, and £5 to the widow at Helston.—Bro. Jenkins, Mayor of Truro, seconded, the motion, which was carried unanimously.

Bro. Roscobla, D.Prov.G.M., then proposed a vote of £25 to the Annuity Fund, and £25 to the Education Fund. Bro. Colonel Peard seconded the motion, which was also carried unanimously. The latter Fund is only now established.

The Grand Master then proposed a vote of thanks to the Grand Chaplain for his excellent sermon. This was duly seconded, and the Rev. Bro. Church acknowledged the compliment.

The Lodge was then adjourned for half an hour to allow the Deputy Provincial Grand Master consulting the Grand Master as to the appointment of his officers.

The amount collected at the church was £9 6s. 5d. One-fifth was voted to the clergyman of the parish, two-fifths were voted towards the fund for the church restoration at St. Austell, and two-fifths for the Cornwall Annuity Fund.

Bro. Mason suggested that next year they should visit Callington and hold the Grand Lodge there.—Bro. Carlyon said it was the wish of the Grand Master that they should hold their next Grand Lodge at Callington, where eighteen years since he was appointed Senior Grand Warden—(cheers).

Bro. Hughan proposed that they should vote ten guineas to the Royal Masonic Institution for Boys, and a similar sum to the Institution for Girls. He said that these sums could be got out of the “fees of honour.” But the Treasurer showed that all the funds had been for the present appropriated.

The Deputy Provincial Grand Master said that they had educational institutions in the province, and it was thought that for the present it should stand over.

Bro. Hughan altered his motion for five guineas to each of the two institutions. They had three boys in the school, who were benefitted to the extent of £120 a year, while the whole of the contributions amounted to only £100.—The S.G. Warden seconded the motion, adding as a rider, “if the funds of the province would allow of it.”

The motion, as amended, was carried by acclamation.

Bro. Anderton suggested that all their votes should be sent to Bro. Hughan, who would effect beneficial exchanges in favour of their candidates.—Bro. Hughan said that they had only 250 votes in the province, while it required 1,000 votes to get a child elected. That fact showed how much indebted they were and had been to other provinces.

Bro. Boscorla called attention to the very beautiful large ivory gavels which their Provincial Grand Master, Bro. Aug. Smith, had that day presented to the Grand Lodge, and while sympathising with him in his illness, they should also convey to him their thanks for his handsome present. This was agreed to with much applause.

Bro. Hosken, Prov. G.O., of the Lodge of the Three Grand Principals, Penryn ably presided at the organ, both in the church and the Town Hall.

The company then went in procession to the Assembly Rooms, where they partook of a banquet provided by Mr. Matthews, of Plymouth.

The D.G.P.M. Bro. R. Rogers presided, and a number of loyal and Masonic toasts were proposed, and speeches made, thus bringing a pleasant day to a most happy conclusion.

HAMPSHIRE.

ALDERSHOT.—Aldershot Camp Lodge (No 1331).—The regular monthly meeting of this lodge was held in the Royal Hotel, on the 4th inst. The chair of K.S. was occupied by the W.M., Bro. J. Fenn, who was supported by the following officers: Bros. C. Carne, I.P.M., G. Purst. Hants; Capt. Richards, R.E., S.W.; J. Osmond, P.M., J.W.; R. White, Sec.; B. Fitter, S.D.; T. Lawrey, J.; U. Lucas, O.G. The lodge was opened in form, in the first degree, and the minutes of the last regular meeting read and confirmed. Sergt. Thomas, 7th Hussars, was proposed as a candidate for initiation. Some other business having been transacted, the lodge was closed in peace, harmony, and brotherly love.

HAVANT.—Caruarvon Lodge (No 804).—The annual installation meeting of this lodge was held on Tuesday, the 2nd instant. The lodge was opened by Bro. E. Good, W.M.; assisted by his officers. Bro. R. Giles was raised in an able manner by the W.M. Bro. J. N. Hillman, P.M., then took the chair, and a Board of nineteen Installed Masters having been opened, Bro. H. Martin Green, S.W., was installed as Master for the ensuing year. He appointed his officers as follows:—Bros. Clay, S. W.; Francis, J. W.; Weeks, P.M., Treasurer; Roach, Sec.; Hillman, P.M., M. C.; Harrison, S.D.; Lintott, J. D.; Fabian Cox, I.G.; Parnell, Org.; and Stallard and Porter, Stewards. An excellent banquet, to which no fewer than sixty two brethren sat down, was afterwards provided by Bro. Parnell at the Dolphin Hotel, Havant, and after spending a most enjoyable evening the company separated.

LANCASHIRE WEST.

LIVERPOOL.—St. John's Lodge (No 673).—INSTALLATION AND PICNIC.—The brethren of this highly prosperous lodge met in strong force at the Royal Mersey Yacht Hotel, Duke-street, Liverpool, on the morning of Wednesday, the 3rd inst., the most interesting business being the installation of the W.M. elect (Bro. James T. Callow), which was immediately followed by a pleasant pic-nic excursion to the charming village of Kirby. The St. John's "festival day" had everything to make it completely successful and enjoyable, as there was an unusually large muster of influential leaders in masonry at the early day work, and splendid weather for the afternoon "out." It may be interesting to note, en passant, that the past year of the lodge has been the most successful in every respect which it has enjoyed during its lengthened existence, and this fact, no doubt, gave additional clat to the day's proceedings. The indefatigable W.M., Bro. Henry Nelson, opened the lodge about half-past nine, when he was supported by the following officers: Bros. T. Clark, I.P.M.; S. Johnson, P.M.; J. Thornton, P.M.; G. Ludmore, P.M.; J. Hocken, P.M.; J. T. Callow, S.W.; E. Kyle, J.W.; R. Pearson, Treas.; J. B. Widdows, Sec.; J. V. Digger, S.D.; T. Roberts, J.D.; W. T. May, P. M., D.C.; H. Burrows, I.G.; J. Meador, S.; W. Crawford, Tyler. The members present were Bros. W. Alderson, W. D. Bygott, J. Heggie, W. Myers, R. Maxley, C. E. Cooper, T. Edwards, R. Hulme, C. Blood, S. Hague, H. Hill, J. Harper, M. Meerate, J. Carty, J. Loleny, S. Christenson, T. Lawrence, H. Morris, J. Atkinson, S. Lyle, W. Crane, M. Corless, S. Porter, T. Granan, J. Tranter, H. F. Cooke, R. Holt, J. Dawson, J. J. Tietz, J. Seddon, T. Meares, W. Bradshaw, E. Lloyd, J. Ball, W. Bennett, H. Jackson, W. Donovan.

The lodge was favoured with the presence of the following visitors:—Bros. T. Armstrong, P. G.T. 155; T. Achmore, P.M. 823; W. Doyle, P.M. 667; J. Hamer, P. Prov. G. Treasurer, 220; W. G. Veale, P. Prov. G.O. Devon; W. Woods, P.M. 1182; C. Auchinleck, 1182; O. S. Venson, J. Bowden, W.M. 336; F. H. Evans, J.D. 1393, 823; R. Ing, W.M. 394; W. Crane, P.M. 243; Larien, P.M. 394; G. Scott, and others. After the lodge had been duly opened and the minutes confirmed, the W.M., as the last act of a busy and prosperous year of office, proceeded to initiate Messrs. T. Hague, A. Trimble, and Wm. Morris into the mysteries of the Craft, the work being performed with rare fluency and efficiency. Bro. Nelson then vacated the chair and proceeded to instal Bro. J. T. Callow as W.M. for the ensuing year. The installation ceremony was performed throughout with a completeness and impressive effect worthy of the occasion, the charges to the following officers for the year, invested by the newly installed W.M., being delivered by the much respected Bro. J. Hamer. Bros. E. Kyle, S.W.; C. Blood, J. W.; R. Pearson, Treasurer (re-invested); Joseph Ball, Secretary; J. K. Digges, S.D.; T. Roberts, J.D.; H. Burrows, I.G.; R. Hulme, Org.; T. Clark, D.C.; and Meador, Alveary, and Garrett, Stewards; Bro. W. Crawford was unanimously re-elected Tyler of the lodge. After the interesting ceremonial, the W.M., in the name of the brethren of the lodge, presented Bro. H. Nelson, I.P.M., with a handsome Past Master's jewel, bearing the following inscription:—"Presented to Bro. H. Nelson, P. M., by the brethren of St. John's Lodge, No. 673, of Free and Accepted Masons, as a token of respect and esteem, and in recognition of past services, 3rd July, 1872." In making the presentation, the W.M. said he felt sure that he was only echoing the feelings of every member of that lodge, when he said that the chair had never been so well and efficiently filled as during the year Bro. Nelson had occupied it, and he was quite certain that he (the I.P.M.) carried with him the earnest wish of every brother for his long life and happiness. Bro. Nelson expressed his deep gratitude for that recognition of his services—something of which he would always be proud, and he assured the brethren that in the future, as in the past, he would always find pleasure in doing his duty. The lodge was subsequently closed in solemn form. The musical portion of the morning's work was admirably conducted by Bro. W. G. Veale, P. P.G.O., who presided at the harmonium. The serious business of the forenoon made the pleasure of the afternoon all the more acceptable, and the party of about 150 which started from Tithebarn-street station, the brethren being there joined by their wives, daughters, and sweethearts, were evidently bent upon making the pic-nic to Kirby as enjoyable as the most exacting could wish. Shortly after the arrival of the company at the Railway Hotel, a splendid banquet, embracing many of the delicacies of the season, was served by Bro. Pepper in a marquee erected on the croquet lawn. The menu and toast card, containing at the top well-executed photographic likenesses of the W.M. and I.P.M., was a model of good taste, and universally admired. After full justice had been done to the "creature comforts," the W.M. wisely curtailed the toast list so as to allow the amusements to proceed. He simply gave "The Queen and Royal Family," and "Bro. Nelson, Our W.M.," both of which were received with cordiality and greeted with Masonic cheers. While some found their chief amusement in dancing to the strains of Mr. Martin's quadrille band, others found congenial pleasure in a friendly game of bowls, or strolling in search of the "lions" of scenery and village. The time passed pleasantly until the time for departure, when everyone returned to town, voting the "out" most enjoyable.

LIVERPOOL.—Mariner's Lodge (No. 249).—The usual monthly meeting of this lodge was held on Thursday afternoon, the 4th inst., at the Masonic Temple, Hope-street, the principal business being the installation of Bro. Edwin Hughes as W.M. for the ensuing year. There was a large gathering of the brethren of the lodge, and a good attendance of visitors. Bro. H. Pearson, W.M., opened the lodge, supported by the following officers and brethren:—Bros. E. Hughes, S.W.; J. K. Smith, P.M.; R. R. Martin, Treas.; G. de la Perelle, Secretary; P. Pinnington, P.M.; J. Hamer, P. Prov. G. Treas. and P.M.; W. Crane, P.M.; J. J. Rose, S.D.; J. Lloyd, J.D.; W. Yates I.G.; R. Carter, S.S.; J. Hayes, J.S.; C. Leighton, Org.; W. H. Ball, Tyler; T. Ramskill, R. Carter, A. Humphreys, A. Walker, A. Barnard, J. Chisnall, S. Kirkpatrick, C. Hains, C. R. Jones, G. Molley, R. Collings, J. Riley, T. Forster, R. Morriss, J. Wood, H. Harding, T. Joseph, T. E. Edwards, E. Rason, J. Pemberton, C. Warner, H. Curwen, P. Ball, P. G. Tyler, J. Honeyford, H. A. Bell, M. Swash, Bolitho, H. P. Price, and J. Nicholas. Amongst the visitors were Bros. C. H. Banister, P.G.S.B. of England, P. Prov. G.D.C. W. L.; P. Prov. G.S.D. Durham, and P. Prov. G. P. Northumberland; J. R. Gospel, P.M., S.W. 155; C. Leedham, P.M. 220; E. Clay, W.M. 204; C. H. Hill, P.M. 724; R. H. D. Johnson, P.M. 1094; T. Ashmore, P.M., 823; M. Mawson, 1013; J. Speirs, 1094; J. W. Kelly, I.G. 1299; W. G. Veale, P. Prov. G.O., 394 and 356; H. Ruskin, 606; G. Weaver, 292, &c. After the minutes had been read and confirmed, the ballot was taken for five candidates, and declared to be unanimous. The chair was then vacated by Bro. H. Pearson, W.M., who has filled the duties of his office during the year with invariable courtesy and efficiency, and his place was taken by Bro. J. Hamer, to whom Bro. Edwin Hughes, as W.M. elect, was presented by Bros. J. K. Smith and W. Crane, P.M.'s, for installation. The ceremony was performed by Bro. Hamer with great completeness, and after the W.M. had been saluted by the brethren in the three degrees, he invested the following brethren as his officers, addressing a few well-chosen words to each:—Bros. J. J. Rose, S.W.; J. Lloyd, J.W.; J. K. Smith, Treasurer; R. Collings, Secretary; A. Humphreys, S.D.; J. Hayes, J.D.; Rev. P. Hains, Chaplain; C. Leighton, I.G., and Org.; W. Crane, M.C.; and J. Chisnall and H. P. Price, Stewards. Bro. W. H. Ball was unanimously re-elected Tyler for the year. After the installation ceremonial, five candidates were initiated by the newly elected W.M. in a most effective and competent manner, which promises well for the satisfactory performance of the duties of the chair; and the "working tools" were also presented by Bro. Lloyd, J.W., in a highly impressive style. A.P.M.'s jewel was subsequently presented by the W.M. to Bro. H. Pearson in recognition of his valuable masonic services and the admirable manner in which he had performed the duties of the chair. The lodge was then closed, and the brethren adjourned to the Adelphi Hotel, where a splendid banquet was provided and admirably served. The W.M. presided, and was supported right and left by several distinguished Masons. After dessert had been tabled, the W.M. gave the first toast, "The Queen," remarking that whatever peculiar feelings they might privately hold, he was certain there was but one feeling of loyalty and veneration for what he might call that sainted name—the Queen. (Hear, hear.) That was a toast, above all others, which was invariably received in assemblies like that with the greatest heartiness, and he would ask the brethren to drink it in bumpers. The toast was received with the greatest enthusiasm, Bro. Veale playing and singing the national anthem, the brethren joining heartily. The W.M. next proposed "Bro. Albert Edward, Prince of Wales, P.G.M., the Princess of Wales, and the rest of the Royal family," and in doing so said the name of their Royal brother was always honoured before he became a mason, but now that he had joined their ancient and honourable fraternity, the toast was even more worthy of their hearty acceptance. No Liverpool lodge had yet been honoured with the presence of their Royal brother, but the fact that he had undertaken the duties of W.M. of a lodge showed that he had the good of the craft at heart. The toast was drunk in bumpers with great cordiality. In giving "The Marquis of Ripon, M.W.G.M., and the Earl of Carnarvon, R.W.D.G.M.," the W.M. remarked that with reference to the G.M. he need say nothing, as his merits were too well known. While they must all admire his Masonic zeal, the country was greatly indebted to him as a statesman, because in that capacity he had brought about arbitration instead of the bayonet, bombshell, and cannon, as a means of settling international disputes. (Hear, hear.) He had ably fulfilled his masonic duties, and the brethren ought to be proud of having such a nobleman at their head. The toast was honoured with true Masonic enthusiasm. The next toast was "Sir T. G. Fermor Hesketh, Bart., M.P., R.W.P.G.M., Lord Skelmersdale, W.D. P.G.M., and the P.G. Officers," and in proposing it Bro. Hughes said their G.M. performed his duties conscientiously, and whenever necessity required was always ready to give his time and services for the good of his province. The toast was acknowledged by Bro. Brabner, P.P.G.S.W., and Bro. G. de la Perelle, P.G.S. Bro. Pearson, I.P.M., said it gave him great pleasure to propose the toast of "The Worshipful Master." From the manner in which he had carried out the work that day, they must all feel that he was "the right man in the right place." He (the W.M.) had fully realised their expectations, and there was no doubt that a year of great prosperity lay before them. The W.M. assured the brethren that to reply to the toast was one of the most difficult tasks he ever had, and they would understand something of his feelings when he told them that if there was anything he ever craved in the whole course of his life—promotion in the army, success in his own profession, happiness in social intercourse—he never craved so much as to get into the chair of the W.M. of that lodge. He believed himself to be the representative of the entire lodge, and that without soliciting a single vote, and therefore he felt all the more proud of being their Master. He would endeavour to prove worthy of the charge and follow in the footsteps of the many excellent and worthy P.M.'s who had preceded him in that capacity. The remaining toasts were "The Installing Master," proposed and acknowledged by the W.M. (in the absence of Bro. Hamer); "The W.P.M.'s of Lodge 249," responded to by Bros. J. K. Smith, P. Pinnington, W. Crane, R. H. D. Johnson, and G. de la Perelle; "The Officers of the Lodge," acknowledged by Bro. P. Hains, Chaplain, who made a very happy speech;

"The West Lancashire Masonic Educational Institution," responded to by Bro. R. H. D. Johnson in eloquent and sympathetic terms; "The Visiting Brethren," acknowledged by Bros. Hill and Brabner; and "Poor and Distressed Masons." Several capital songs were given by Bros. Veale, Bell, Rose, &c., and the brethren separated after spending a pleasant evening.

LANCASTER.—Duke of Lancaster Lodge (No. 1353).—The installation of this young, but flourishing lodge, took place on Tuesday, the 2nd instant. The attendance of members and visiting brethren was numerous, including Bros. Wyley, Provincial Grand Registrar; Case, P.M. 995; Dodgon, P.M. 995, Installing Master; Pearson, P.M. 995; R. Dodgon, S.W. 995; F. Bell, S.D., and several other distinguished brethren from neighbouring lodges. Bro. John Barrow, S.W., and W.M. elect, was installed by Bro. Dodgon, W.M. 995, in an impressive and most effective manner. After the usual proclamations, the W.M. proceeded to invest his officers for the year; the selections were:—C. Hartly, P.M.; J. Bell, S.W.; W. Heald, J.W.; W. Barrow, Secretary; J. Acton, S.D.; J. Coulton, J.D.; R. Wolfenden, I.G.; J. H. Williams, S.S.; W. Bulfield, J.S.; Bro. Taylor, Organist; the lodge having elected at a former meeting W. Holmes, Treasurer, and J. Watson, Tyler. The W.M. then presented a beautiful Past Master's jewel, subscribed by the brethren, and furnished by Bro. Kenning, of London, to Bro. C. Hartly, the retiring Master; after which the assembled brethren adjourned to Bro. W. Bulfields, Cross Keys Hotel, and there partook of a most excellent repast, provided for the occasion. The tables were loaded with abundant supplies of creature comforts, and were beautifully decorated with flowers. The usual loyal and Masonic toasts were duly given, Bro. Wyly, P.G.R., responding to "The Health of the Provincial Grand Officers," remarking that he was very proud to meet so large an attendance of members. As he was the Consecrating Officer of the lodge just twelve months ago, and rejoiced in being godfather to so good a lodge, and he urged all the brethren to rally round their newly-installed Master with that feeling of unity, friendship, and brotherly love, for the good, the welfare, and extension of Masonry, and prayed to the Great Architect that he might preserve all present to meet again next year, not only with their present number, but a greater extension of members. The W.M. then proposed "The Health of Bro. C. Hartly, the Retiring Master," who had during the past year discharged the duties incumbent upon him with the utmost urbanity and good judgment. Bro. C. Hartly, in responding, thanked the W.M. for the forcible manner he brought his name before the brethren, and stated that no Master could be treated more cordially in everything that was done in the lodge during the past twelve months than he was, and begged to tender his very warm thanks to the Wardens and the other officers of the lodge for the support he had received; but before he sat down, he had great pleasure to propose to the brethren "The Health of the Worshipful Master," as he was an old, staunch, and true Mason, and was very proud to have him his S.W. The W.M., in responding, thanked the brethren for the very cordial manner they received the toast, which indicated that it fared well for his year of office, for the difficulties of the position in which you have placed me are great; but I rely on your assistance, and I trust at the close of my year of office, I may retire in the same manner as Bro. Hartly, the present retiring Master. "The Health of the Visiting Brethren" was now given as their train hour had almost expired, which was responded to by the Installing Master, Bro. Dodgon, who briefly stated it gave him great pleasure to attend and perform the duties required of him, and would feel happy at all times to render whatever assistance he could to the Duke of Lancaster Lodge. He intended making a long speech, as many of the brethren were very young in Masonry, but must defer until some other time, Bro. Case also briefly responded. "The Healths of the other Officers" were duly given and responded to, when the brethren separated, all seeming satisfied with their day's business.

LIVERPOOL.—Merchants' Lodge, (No. 241).—The installation of W.M.G. elect of this lodge place on the 25th ult., at the Masonic Hall, Hope-street, Liverpool, where there was a large gathering of members and visiting brethren. The Installing Master was Bro. J. W. Baker, the retiring W.M., to whom Brother John I. Knight, was duly presented for installation. At the conclusion of the ceremony, the W.M. invested the following as his officers:—Bros. J. W. Baker, I.P.M.; John Halton, S.W.; W. M. Chudley, J.W.; Dr. S. J. McGeorge, Treas.; T. Mercer, Sec.; R. Brown, S.D.; George Hutchin, J.D.; J. Peat, I.G.; and H.C. Mott, P.M., D.C.; Bro. P. Ball was unanimously re-elected and invested as Tyler. In accordance with arrangements previously made, the brethren, after labour, took the train for Southport, where a magnificent banquet was prepared by the manager of the Palace Hotel, Birkdale. The repast was of the most sumptuous character, the tables laid with most perfect taste and models of beauty while the general arrangements were so satisfactory, as to elicit a cordial and unanimous vote of thanks to the caterer at the close of the proceedings. The W.M. presided, supported by all his officers, and amongst the visitors were Bros. Councillor D. Campbell, 216; Rev. H. Carpenter, 357; Stephenson P.G.S.B., Cheshire; C. H. Hill, P.M., 754, 1276; Dr. Spiers, 1294; W. Crane, P.M., 249, 1299; H. Newnan, 1094; &c. The loyal and Masonic toasts were given and responded to with the greatest cordiality. It may be stated that an important engagement alone prevented Bro. J. Pearson, the Worshipful Mayor of Liverpool, from being present. The usual monthly meeting of the lodge was held on Tuesday evening, the 9th inst., when the W.M. was supported by the whole of his officers. There was a good attendance of members, and several visitors. Two candidates were initiated by the W.M. in a remarkable efficient manner, but as this was his first night in the chair, he delegated the ceremony of passing two Entered Apprentices, and raising one Fellow-Craft, to Bro. Baker, I.P.M. After some other business the lodge was closed in due form.

LIVERPOOL.—Merchants' Lodge of Instruction (No. 241). On the 28th ult., a highly interesting gathering in connection with this lodge took place at the Masonic Temple, Hope-street, where valuable services were acknowledged in a very substantial way. For a period extending over 13 years Bro. A. C. Mott, P.M., 241, has been connected with the Merchants' Lodge of Instruction, and during the last 10 years he has fulfilled the duties of Preceptor with a diligence and efficiency which have contributed in a large degree to the knowledge and fitness of youthful masons. Bro. Mott, notwithstanding the value of his disinterested services, has steadfastly set his face against accepting any testimonial as an acknowledgment of the good work he has done, but the brethren, determined to show their appreciation of the work he has carried out resolved, through him, to present Mrs. Mott with a handsome timepiece and gold ring as a mark of their esteem for her husband. Bros. J. W. Baker, P.M., C. H. Hill, P.M., J. Halton, S.W., and R. Brown, S.D., were appointed a committee. The presentation took place at a dinner given on the 28th ult., in the Masonic Hall, at which Bro. R. Wilson, P.M., presided, and in making the presentation he referred in eloquent terms to the long and valuable services which Bro. Mott had rendered to the Merchants' Lodge of Instruction. Bro. Mott replied in suitable terms. The following was the inscription on the clock:—"Presented to Mrs. Mott, with a gold ring, by the members of the Merchants' Lodge of Instruction, No. 241, as a token of the respect in which her husband, Bro. A. C. Mott, P.P.G.S.D., of West Lancashire, is held by the brethren, and in recognition of his unwearied attention to their interests while acting as Preceptor to the Lodge, for the period of 10 years."

MIDDLESEX.

PROVINCIAL GRAND LODGE.

The annual meeting of this province was held at the Greyhound Hotel, Hampton Court, on Saturday, the 29th ult., and was attended by a large number of brethren. The Provincial Grand Lodge was opened at half-past three o'clock by the R.W. Provincial Grand Master, Colonel Francis Burdett, assisted by the following officers of the year:—Bros. J. Glaisher, F.R.S., S.G.W.; J. Taylor, J.G.W.; H. G. Buss, G. Treas.; A. J. Codner, G. Reg.; R. Wentworth Little, G. Sec.; T. Cubitt, S.G.D.; W. Smeed, A.G.D.C.; J. G. Marsh, G.P.; J. T. Moss, E. Sillifant, J. Freeman, J. W. Barrett, and R. D. Odell, G. Stewards.

The minutes of the last annual meeting at Uxbridge were read and verified, after which the Auditors' report of the accounts for the past year was read, approved, and ordered to be entered on the minutes. The R.W. Provincial Grand Master then appointed and invested his Officers for the ensuing year as follows; the Treasurer being, according to custom, elected by the brethren:—

- Bro. Raynham W. Stewart... D. Prov. G. M.
- „ Sigismund Rosenthal... Prov. S.G.W.
- „ William Smeed... Prov. J.G.W.
- „ Rev. David Shaboe ... } Prov. G. Chaps.
- „ Rev. W. Taylor Jones }
- „ Henry G. Buss ... Prov. G. Treas.
- „ Charles Horsley ... Prov. G. Reg.
- „ R. Wentworth Little... Prov. G. Sec.
- „ John T. Moss ... Prov. S.G.D.
- „ Edwin Sillifant ... Prov. J.G.D.
- „ Joseph Freeman ... Prov. G. S. of W.
- „ William H. Green ... Prov. G.D. of C.
- „ Octavius H. Pearson... Prov. A.G.D. of C.
- „ J. Woodward Barrett Prov. G. Swd. B.
- „ Henry Parker... Prov. G. Org.
- „ Charles Tye ... Prov. G. Purst.
- „ Richard Boncey ... Prov. A.G. Purst.
- „ John Gilbert ... Prov. G. Tyler.

The following were appointed Provincial Grand Stewards:—Bros. Joseph C. Parkinson, W.M. 778; Hickson Briggs, P.M. 865; Isaac D. McDougall, P.M. 788; W. F. Laxton, W.M. 1238; Robert Kenyon, W.M. 1293; John H. Butten, W.M., 1309.

The Provincial Grand Lodge was then closed in due form, and the brethren sat down to a most excellent banquet in the very commodious dining room of the hotel. The following toasts were given and enthusiastically received.

- "The Queen and the Craft."
- "H.R.H. the Prince of Wales, the Princess of Wales, and the Rest of the Royal Family."
- "The M.W. Grand Master, the Marquis of Ripon, K.G."
- "The Past Grand Masters, the Deputy Grand Master (Earl of Carnarvon), and rest of the Grand Officers," responded to by V.W. Bro. Hervey, G. Secretary of England."
- "The Provincial Grand Master," proposed by Bro. Stewart, Dep. Prov. G.M."
- "The Visitors," coupled with Bro. G. Cox, P.G. Deacon."
- "The Deputy Provincial Grand Master and rest of the Provincial Grand Officers."
- "The Provincial Grand Stewards," coupled with "Bro. Parkinson, Chairman."
- "The Tyler's Toast."

The musical repertoire comprised the under-mentioned selection, and gave unqualified satisfaction:—

- Grace—"For these and all thy mercies" (A.D. 1545).
- National Anthem (Dr. John Bull)—Solo: Miss Kate Nott.
- National Air (B. Richards) "God Bless the Prince of Wales."
- Serenade (Stella) "I wait for Thee," Bro. Frank Elmore.
- Song (Bishop) "Love has eyes," Miss Kat Nott.
- Song (Prince Poniatowski)—"The Yeoman's Wedding," Bro. Frederic Penna.
- Solo Piano (H. Parker)—"L'assemblée des Fées," Bro. Henry Parker.
- Ballad (Linley)—"I waited till the twilight," Miss Kate Nott.
- Duet (Braham)—"Oh! Albion," Bros. Frank Elmore and Frederic Penna.
- Quartet (Sir Henry Bishop) "Sleep, gent'e Lady."

It was the universal feeling that the meeting was the best in point of comfort and completeness since the establishment of the province, and great credit is due to Bros. Buss, P.G. Treas.; Little, P.G. Sec., and the Chairman of the Board of Stewards, Bro. Parkinson, for the attention and care they bestowed upon the general arrangements.

SOMERSETSHIRE.

PROVINCIAL GRAND LODGE.

The Right Hon. the Earl of Carnarvon, R.W. Proy. G.M. of Somerset, summoned a Provincial Grand Lodge for the 20th inst., at the Mechanics' Hall, Frome, for the disposal of business connected with the province, and to appoint officers for the ensuing year. On the evening of the 19th, however, a telegram was received from his Lordship, expressing his great regret that indisposition would prevent his attendance.

The chair was in consequence taken by the V.W.D. Prov. G.M. Captain Bridges.

The Provincial Grand Lodge was opened at one o'clock.

The whole of the lodges in the province were represented, and the accommodation provided for the comfort of the brethren gave great satisfaction.

The decoration of the hall was entrusted to Mr. C. Holloway, and the effective manner in which he performed his task fully entitled him to the praise which he deservedly received; the appearance of the interior of the hall in the daytime is not of the gayest description, but on Thursday last it was transformed.

On entering the hall, the first thing which attracted attention was the organ gallery, which presented all the appearance of a grove, the gilded pipes of the organ harmonising with the dark green colour of the laurel shrubs by which it was surrounded. The platform, which was carpeted, was arranged as a dais, and around the throne was placed some beautiful ferns, kindly lent for the purpose by Bro. A. R. Baily. The walls on either side were festooned with evergreens, looped up to a point between each of the niches, and surmounted by a group of flags of all nations, springing from a shield bearing a Masonic device. Altogether, the appearance of the hall was such as we have not seen at any previous Provincial Grand Lodge in the county.

The Provincial Grand Lodge having been opened, the minutes of the Provincial Grand Lodge held on the 18th of July, 1871, at Crewkerne, and also the minutes of the special Provincial Grand Lodge held on the 5th of March last were read and confirmed.

An address was signed congratulating the Right Hon. the Earl of Carnarvon, M.W.D.G.M. of England, and R.W. Prov. G.M. of Somerset, upon his recovery from serious illness, and the presentation of such address was moved by the V.W.D. Prov. G.M.

The Treasurer (Bro. E. T. Payne) next presented his accounts, by which it appeared that Masonry was making a steady and satisfactory progress in the Province, and the accounts having been previously audited, they were now presented and passed.

The various offices having been declared vacant, and the insignia of office delivered at the foot of the pedestal, the V.W.D.P.G.M. then proceeded to appoint and invest the officers for the ensuing year as follows:—

Bro. Herniman, P.M. 261	Prov. G.S.W.
„ Inskip, W.M. 973	Prov. G.J.W.
„ Rev. W. Spragett, C. 973	Prov. G. Chaplains.
„ Rev. W. Tebbs, C. 285
„ E. T. Payne, P.M. 53	Prov. G. Treasurer.
„ W. H. Davis, W.M. 291	Prov. G. Registrar.
„ R. C. Else, P.M. 291	Prov. G. Secretary.
„ Loder, W.M. 379	Prov. G. S. D.
„ Jno. Chaffin, W.M. 329	Prov. G. J. D.
„ Wilcox, W.M. 41	Prov. G. S. W.
„ Hodge, S. W. 291	Prov. G. Dir. Cers.
„ Saunders, W.M. 285	Prov. G. A. D. C.
„ Capt. Phayre, P.M. 53	Prov. G. S. B.
„ Macfarlane, W.M. 1296	Prov. G. Organist.
„ Bragg, W.M. 1197	Prov. G. Purst.
„ Mountstevens, S. W. 1199	Prov. G. A. Purst.
„ Woodward, T. 291	Prov. G. Tyler.
„ Carter, T. 53	Prov. G. A. Tyler.
Bros. R. A. Baily, J. D. 973; S. J. Parsons, Sec. 973; R. Baker, 1917; Douglas, 41; Batten, 29; Gore, 379; were appointed Prov. Grand Stewards.

The following resolution was then proposed by Bro. E. T. Payne, P.G.D. of England, P. P. G.S.W., P.G. Treas., and seconded by Bro. R. C. Else, P. P. G.S.W., P.G. Sec., and carried:—

“That a committee be appointed to regulate (so far as the Governors and Subscribers resident in the Province will permit) the support to be given to the various candidates for admission to the benefit of the Charities belonging to the Order with a view to prevent the waste of strength which has occurred of late—and that such committee be permanent—and to name the members of such committee if appointed.”

Bro. Payne then nominated the Committee, which was agreed to.

A sum of £15 was granted to the representatives of the widow of Bro. Hellier, P.G.T., deceased, to defray funeral expenses; a contribution of £10 towards a fund to purchase a small annuity for the widow of the late Bro. Farebrother of 285; and £2 to the widow of Bro. Miller, of Bath. A collection was then made in the lodge, which amounted to the sum of £3 14s. 5d.

At 3.30 the brethren sat down to a sumptuous banquet, provided by Mr. Brunson, in the Assembly room, George Hotel. The tables were beautifully decorated with flowers, lent for the occasion by Bros. J. Baily and A.R. Baily. The viands were both plentiful and good, and ample justice was done to the good cheer provided.

The toasts were: “The Queen and the Craft;” “The M.W. Bro. the Marquis of Ripon, G.M. of England;” “The M. W. Bros. the P.G.M.'s of England, H.R.H. the Prince of Wales, and the Earl of Zetland;” “The R.W. Bro. the Earl of Carnarvon, D.G.M. of England, and the rest of the Grand Officers, past and present;” “The R.W. Bro. the Earl of Carnarvon, P.G.M. of Somerset;” “The V.W. Bro. Capt. Bridges, D.P.G.M., and the other P.G. officers, past and present;” “The Visiting Brethren;” “The W.M., Officers, and Brethren of the Royal Somerset Lodge, No. 973;” “the W.M.'s and Wardens of the other lodges in the province;” “The Masonic Charities;” and “The Tyler's Toast.”

The whole arrangements at the hall and at the banquet, were greatly praised, and reflect credit on those to whom was confided the pleasing duty of catering for the comfort of the numerous visitors.

SUFFOLK.

PROVINCIAL GRAND LODGE.

On Monday afternoon the Provincial Grand Lodge of Suffolk was opened at the Town Hall, Sudbury, by the R. W. Sir Robert A. Shafto Adair, Bart., P.G.M., assisted by the W. the Rev. E. J. Lockwood, M.A., D.P.G.M.

The Provincial Grand Lodge, which is over a century old, held its annual meeting for the first time at Sudbury. The rector of St. Peter's declined to allow the use of his church for the service, and although there is another church in the town, it was felt to be more complimentary to the W.M. of the Stour Valley Lodge, the Rev. C. J. Martyn, P. G. Chaplain of England, to hold the service at Melford church. The unusual procedure must have been very gratifying to the Rev. gentleman, but not more than he deserves, both as a good mason, and a most kind and courteous gentleman. Probably but for him the town would not have had the honour of a visit from the Provincial Grand Lodge.

Previous to the lodge being opened, the Finance Board had met at half-past eleven o'clock in the morning, at the Audit Room of the Hospital, Long Melford, after which the brethren attended the fine old church at Melford for Divine service. The parish appeared to be quite en fête; the bells were rung merrily, hunting was profusely displayed, and the inhabitants, who turned out in full force to witness the procession of the Masons, had erected a triumphal arch over the gateway leading to the church, ornamented with evergreens and flowers, and bearing the following inscriptions. On the side facing the street, “Bear ye one another's burdens,” and on the reverse, “Glory to God, good will to men,” flanked by two masonic emblems—the square and compasses and the united triangles.

The church, which is a fine ancient architecture, is dedicated to the Holy Trinity, and is a Gothic structure about one hundred and eighty feet long, with a small square tower of more modern construction, in which is a peal of eight bells. The sacred edifice, which possesses five very beautiful stained glass windows, contains several ancient brasses, and monuments of the Martyn, Parker, and Cordell families, especially one of Sir William Cordell, Speaker of the House of Commons in the reign of Philip and Mary. The register commences in 1559.

The service, which was well attended both by the inhabitants and the brethren of the lodge, who were attired in their elegant Masonic costumes, was full choral, and commenced with the following Masonic hymn, sung to tune 125, “Hymns Ancient and Modern”:—

“When I laid the foundation of the earth, the morning stars sang together, and all the Sons of God shouted for joy.”

When the Almighty Architect
Had planned the heavens and earth,
The hosts on high in concert joined,
To sing aloud its birth.

The sons of God, the morning stars
In one glad hymn unite
To praise the work, while angel choirs
Welcome the new born light.

And so one song of harmony
Rang through the heaven above;
The note they sing in glad accord
Is God's unending love.

And we too, Lord, before Thee met,
Our feeble hymn would raise,
With hearts as one, we try to tell
The great Creator's praise.

O God, thou could'st the glorious light
From blackest chaos move;
Then sin dispel from human hearts,
And light them with thy love

Maker of all things, end they plan,
Bind hearts of men as one,
Till we, like brothers, hand in hand,
Shall seek our Father's throne.

And thus with thy inspiring love
A new creation frame,
And saints above shall join with us
To praise the Maker's name.

Great Master Builder, prais'd be thou,
The God whom we adore;
Be glory as it was, is now,
And shall be evermore. Amen.

The usual afternoon service up to the Psalms was then intoned by the Rev. Mr. Brigg. The Psalms, which were the 15th, the 19th, and the 133rd, were chanted to Barnbey in E; the Magnificat and Nunc Dimittis were sung to King's Service in F, and the responses were those of Hopkins. The lessons, which were very appropriate to the occasion, were read, the first by Bro. the Rev. Dr. Bennett, and the second by Bro. the Rev. Mr. Beaumont, then commenced his sermon preaching from the 4th verse of 1 St. Peter, II. chap. to verse 17, inclusive. The second portion of the service was intoned by the Rev. Mr. Brigg, and the Anthem, which was the collect for Quinquagesima Sunday, was J. Marsh's. Bro. A. J. Barber, Provincial Grand Organist, and Bro. A. Orlando Steed, Organist of the church, presided at the organ. The sermon was preached by the former, being II. Chronicles, chapter ii., and the latter the Very Worshipful the Rev. Charles J. Martyn, M.A., rector of Melford, Past Grand Chaplain of England, and Worshipful Master of the Stour Valley Lodge, No. 1224, Sudbury. The prayer offered by the Rev. gentleman, before the sermon, was as follows:—

O Almighty God, Great and Grand Architect of the Universe, at whose word the pillars of the Sky were raised, and its beauteous arches formed. Endue with a competence of Thy Most Holy Spirit, thy servants who are assembled in Thy great name to acknowledge Thy power, Thy wisdom, and Thy goodness, and to implore Thy blessing, that we may be enabled to trace Thee out in all Thy wonderful works, that Thy praise may resound with the fervent love of Thy creatures from pole to pole, grant this O God, through Jesus Christ our Lord. Amen.

The preacher, before commencing his sermon, informed the brethren and the congregation, that by the wish of the Provincial Grand Master, a collection would be made at the end of the service, the proceeds of which would be divided in two equal portions; one-half would be presented to St. Leonard's Hospital, Sudbury, and the remaining portion would be reserved, to be given away to the poor of Melford during the coming winter. The Rev. Bro. Martyn preached a most appropriate sermon, taking for his text the 2nd chap. of the 2nd Book of Chronicles: "Behold I build an house to the name of the Lord my God, to dedicate it to him."

[We regret that the great pressure upon our space prevents our giving the sermon this week. It will be given in extenso next week.]

The service was brought to a close by the singing of the 37th hymn (Ancient and Modern.)

"O Lord of Heaven, and earth and sea,
To Thee all praise and glory be."

and the pronouncing of the Benediction.

The brethren then walked in procession back to the hospital, and having disrobed, proceeded to the meeting of the Lodge at the Town Hall, Sudbury, in vehicles provided for the occasion by the Rev. J. Martyn.

The Provincial Grand Lodge was opened at four o'clock at the Town Hall, Sudbury, by the R.W. Sir R. A. S. Adair, Bart., Prov.G.M., assisted by the W. Bro. the Rev. E. J. Lockwood, M.A., D.Prov.G.M. Among the brethren present were:—Bros. R. B. Barton, L.L.D., P.Prov.G.M. Grand Lodge West India; Bagshaw, Prov.G.M., Essex; The Rev. C. J. Martyn, P.G., Chaplain; Benjamin Head, Prov.G.S.D.; W. H. Lucia, Prov. G., Secretary; W. Wilmshurst, P.Prov. G.S.B.; E. Dorling, P.Prov.G. Sec.; J. F. Hills, Prov.G.S.; W. T. Westgate, P.Prov.G.D. of C.; C. H. Wood, Prov.G.S.; W. Armstrong, Prov. G.S.; A.W.G. Atkins, Prov.G.S.; E. B. Powell, Prov. G. Sup. of W.; Barber, Prov.G.O.; S. H. Wright, Prov.P.G.S.D.; E. Holmes, Prov.G.A.D. C.; G. S. Golding, P.G.S.B.; Newson Garrett, P. Prov.G.R.; S. Freeman, P.G.T.; C. S. Pedgrift, P. Prov. G.R.; T. Newman, P.G.P.; W. Hayward, P. Prov. G.D.C.; W. E. Bailey, P.G.A. Sec.; G. W. Brownlow, W. Jones, W. G. Woods, G. Harper, J. T. Parker, J.W. 1224; R. W. Beaumont, S.W.; A. B. Woods, S.W.; F. Grimwade, W. Kersey, J. Martin, T. Grimwood, W.M.; C. Byford, W.M.; J. Whitehead, P.M.; S. Prentice, S.W.; S. E. Rope, W.M.; R. Davies, W. G. Walford, P.M.; Alex Barber, A. Last, J.D.; W. Clarke, J. C. Squirrel, G. H. Grimwood, J.D., 1224; R. Postle, I.G.; H. Goldsmith, Rev. Dr. Bennett, Rev. R. Evans, E. Warren, W.M.; T. G. Beaumont, J. Turner, P.M.; S. Ellis, I.G.; W. J. Nunn, A. O. Steed, W. O. Ward, P.M.; T. Holland, P.M.; E. H. Adams, P.M.; R. Betts, P.M.; C. F. Long, W.M.; G. Spalding, G. Thompson, P.M.; T. J. Huddleston, P.M.; J. H. Jardine, J. Davies, J. Warren, R. Howard, &c.

The minutes of the last Provincial Grand Lodge, and a Lodge of Emergency held to adopt congratulatory addresses on the recovery of H.R.H. the Prince of Wales, were read by the P.G. Secretary and confirmed.

The P.G. Secretary then called over the roll of lodges, and found that the following were represented. Doric, Woodbridge; British Union, Ipswich; St. Luke's, Ipswich; Virtue and Silence, Hadleigh; Perfect Friendship, Ipswich; Prudence, Halesworth; Phoenix, Stowmarket; Waveny, Bungay; Adair, Aldeburgh; Prince of Wales, Ipswich; Royal St. Edmund's, Bury; and Stour Valley, Sudbury.

The P.G.A. Secretary then read the minutes of the Board of Finance, which stated the accounts to be in a satisfactory condition.

The following brethren were then appointed P.G. officers, and were invested by the R.W.P. G.M., viz:—P.J.G.W., Bro. J. F. Hills, Sudbury; P.G. Registrar, Bro. Emra Holmes, Ipswich; P.G. Chaplain, Bro. the Rev. R. W. Beaumont; P.G. Steward, Bro. Prentice, St. Luke's. The other Stewardships were not filled up, nor was the office of Director of Ceremonies.

The Provincial Grand Master, in appointing Bro. Emra Holmes to the office of Provincial Grand Registrar said that he had always borne in mind the fitness of officers for the posts to which they were appointed. He had read Bro.

Holmes' Masonic writings with much interest, and he hoped that brother might be induced, in his capacity as Registrar, to write the history of some of the Masonic lodges of the province. He had great pleasure in appointing him to the office, and he trusted that he would continue for the present to act also as Director of Ceremonies—a post he had so ably filled that day—until a successor should be appointed.

On the proposition of Bro. Gissing, seconded by Bro. Westgate, Bro. Spence Freeman was unanimously re-elected P.G. Treasurer.

The sum of ten guineas was voted to the Boys' School, and a like sum to the Girls' School; and £5 to the Royal Masonic Benevolent Society, and £20 was given in relief of distressed brethren and widows.

The Prov. G. Master then addressed the lodge on Masonic topics, congratulating the brethren on the steady progress of Masonry in the province during the year, and announcing that next year the Prov. G. Lodge will be held on the first Tuesday in July instead of Monday.

The Prov. G. Lodge was then closed in due form, and about eighty brethren adjourned to the Rose and Crown Hotel, where Mrs. Hansell had provided a most recherché banquet.

After grace had been sung,

The first toast proposed by the Prov. G.M., was that of "The Queen and Craft," which was received with the enthusiasm that this toast always receives among the Craft.

The Prov. G.M. next gave the toast of "The Prince and Princess of Wales, and the rest of the Royal Family." It was unnecessary for him, he remarked, to speak in encomium of the Royal Family of this empire, but there were special reasons why they should receive this toast with honour and with sympathy. On the last occasion, when they met, it was to acknowledge, with thankfulness, the restoration of the Prince of Wales from a perilous disease, and the relief of the Princess of Wales from the anxiety that a wife must have in daily waiting upon her husband in time of affliction. It had a peculiar significance to them, because, at the moment, when the Prince was stricken down with disease, they were hoping to meet him at a Masonic gathering. (Hear, hear.) For the second time he had to announce, within three years, that, but for the accident which he owed in the first place to the province, he should, at that moment, have been paying his respects to His Royal Highness, at one of the leading lodges in London. At that very moment, he apprehended his health was being drunk as Master reinstated of the Alpha Lodge in London. He begged to propose the toast with Masonic honours.

The toast was drunk with enthusiasm.

The Prov.G.M. said the next toast he had to give was that of the Grand Master of England, the Marquis of Ripon, who had already justified the trust that had been reposed in him. It was a satisfaction to know that he had had the opportunity of comparing the practice in England with that of the United States. As he was quite sure that if there was anything to be learnt, their Grand Master would bring it home, if it was worth learning. (Applause.)

The Prov.G.M. then, having done honour to the distinguished Mason, who is at present administering the Craft of England, said he should next give the health of one who stood high in the regards of the Masons of England, the Earl of Zetland, and the past Grand Masters of England. (Applause.) He gave them also the Deputy Grand Master, the Earl of Carnarvon, and the Officers of the Grand Lodge who were carrying on the management so well. He coupled with the toast the name of P. G. D. Head. (Applause.)

Bro. Head, P.G.D., expressed the pleasure which it gave him to come again among his old friends in Suffolk, and said he felt he must pay a tribute to that really good, righteous, benevolent, and charitable man, the Earl of Zetland, who he felt would be appreciated years hence even more than he had been during his lifetime. He also remarked that although he had been on certain subjects opposed to the Earl of Carnarvon, he now believed him to be a thoroughly good Mason. (Applause.)

Bro. the Rev. C. J. Martyn, P.G. Chaplain of England, also responded, assuring the brethren that it was at all times his hearty wish and desire to do all he could for the good of Freemasonry. (Applause.)

The D.P.G.M. begged to submit for the consideration of the brethren what he thought was the toast of the evening—the health of the Prov. G.M. of Suffolk. (Loud applause.) He was afraid that they might feel so confident and secure of the P.G.M.'s services that they might really for a time be unconscious of the blessing he was to them. (Hear, hear.) But let him be absent for a time and then they looked anxiously for his return. (Applause.)

The toast was drunk most enthusiastically and with due Masonic honours.

The Prov. G.M., in his response, alluded to the good understanding that had always existed between himself and the brethren, and attributed it to the desire that was always evinced to discuss every subject fairly. The continued spread of the Craft here had left him no uneasiness as to the position that this province held, and as he believed from the first, he believed now. There was in this province an expansive power of progressive attachment to Masonry which could not fail to develop itself more and more every year. (Applause.) He assured them that the best reward he could have for such small exertions as he had made was to find they had met with their approbation and concurrence. To economise time he begged to propose "The Health of the D.P.G.M.," whose services were so valuable to the province from whom he, as P.G.M., derived such good advice, and who was present in the province when he (the Prov. G.M.) was absent. (Applause.)

The D. Prov. G.M. briefly returned thanks, remarking that what little he could do was done with a good will. (Applause.)

The W.M. then proposed "The Health of Bro. C. J. Martyn, P.G., Chaplain, and of the Wardens and Officers, past and present, of P.G. Lodge." With the toast he begged to associate the name, in the absence of the Wardens, of Bro. Emra Holmes, who had been acting that day in a double capacity,—namely as Director of Ceremonies and as P.G. Registrar. (Applause.)

Bro. the Rev. R. W. Beaumont responded as Chaplain, and Bro. Emra Holmes as P.G. Registrar.

The Prov. G.M. next proposed what he characterised as the toast of the evening, namely the Worshipful Master and Members of the Stour Valley Lodge, who had exerted themselves under very difficult circumstances indeed in a manner without parallel for the reception, and hospitable and craftsmanlike entertainment of this Provincial Grand Lodge. He thanked Bro. Martyn for his admirable sermon which gave to the outer world a knowledge of their principles, and illustrated the symbolism that, after all, concealed nothing that they were ashamed of. He expressed a hope that it might be published, so as to have a more extended usefulness. The P.G.M. then alluded to the respectful and gratifying way in which they had been received at Melford, by those who could have no idea of the meaning of the symbols they carried, a reception which he attributed to the love which the people had for their Rector. They believed that the companions and friends of a good man must be good men themselves, and the result was the most attention and respectful reception that he had met with in the course of his Masonic experience. (Applause.)

The Rev. C. J. Martyn, in responding, said he felt quite proud of his people when he found that without a word from him they had been up early in the morning, erecting the arch which the brethren had seen, because, as they said, the Rector's club was coming—(applause and laughter.) He had Masonry at heart, and he had done what he could to welcome them, but his exertions would not have been nearly so successful had it not been for the valuable help given by the members of the Stour Valley Lodge. (Applause.)

Bro. the Rev. D. Bennett here repeated the wish that the excellent sermon of the Rev. C. J. Martyn might be printed and circulated. (Applause.)

The Prov. G.M. next proposed the health of the Provincial Grand Masters, and the Visiting Brethren of other provinces, coupling with the toast the name of Prov. G. M. Barton, the Past Provincial Grand Master of West India, one of the largest provinces in the world, who responded in very humorous terms.

The Prov. G.M. next gave the toast on "Masonic Charities" to which Bro. Head responded.

The next toast was that of "Worshipful Masters of the Province," also given by the chair, which Bro. Long acknowledged,

The Prov. G.M. then proposed the health of the P.G. Secretary, Bro. W. H. Lucia, P.G. Treasurer, Bro. Spencer Freeman; the Prov. G. A. Secretary; Bro. W. E. Bailey, who each acknowledged the compliment.

The last toast was that of the "Ladies," for whom Bro. Capt. Huddleston responded.

The Prov. G.M. then announced that the next P.G. Lodge will be held at Woodbridge; and the Rev. C. J. Martyn having given the "Tylers" toast, the proceedings were brought to a close.

The musical glee party, which assisted so agreeably at the banquet, was under the direction of Bro. Montem Smith, and was the same party which gave so much pleasure at the Provincial Grand Lodge at Ipswich last year.

The arrangements made by the Sudbury brethren were excellent, and all who attended the Grand Lodge and the proceedings connected with it, thoroughly enjoyed themselves.

SURREY.

SUTTON. — Frederick Lodge of Unity (No. 452.)—This body met at the Station Hotel, Sutton, on the 2nd inst., under the presidency of Bro. W. Sugg, W.M., who was supported by his Wardens and other officers, including the esteemed Secretary, Bro. Magnus Ohren, C.E., P.M., and the Treasurer, Bro. Robbins, P.M. Two gentlemen were initiated during the course of the proceedings, one being a brother of the W.M. After the lodge was closed the usual banquet followed, and a most agreeable evening was spent. Bro. W. S. Masterman responded for the Provincial Grand Officers, and the toast of the "Visitors" was associated with the names of Bros. R. Wentworth Little, P.M., Prov. G. Sec., Middlesex, and John E. Russell, S.W. 22, both of whom returned thanks in appropriate terms. Bro. Ohren's health was given as a special toast and received with great cordiality—a compliment which was gracefully acknowledged by the worthy brother. After the Tyler's toast was proposed by Bro. Speight, the brethren separated.

Red Cross of Constantine.

PENNSYLVANIA.

A Grand Council of the Ancient Order of Red Cross of Constantinople and Order of the Holy Sepulchre was opened for the State of Pennsylvania, authority of the Earl by Bective, Grand Sovereign, on Friday morning, June 14, at nine o'clock. Brothers C. L. Stowell, M.I.G. Sov.; C. F. Knapp, G.V.E.; Jno. L. Young, G.S.G.; Theo. F. Schaeffer, G.J.G.; H. C. A. Hoffeditz, G. Treasurer; Alfred Creigh, R. Rec. were elected as officers. A Constitution was adopted, and much important business transacted.

The Thursday succeeding the 3rd Wednesday in February next, was selected as the time of meeting.

This is the first Grand Council of this Order in America.

Brother the Right. Hon. Lord Dunboyne, has arrived at Lisdoonvarna, from Knoppogne Castle, Newmarket-on-Fergus,

Obituary.

BRO. W. F. DOBSON.

We regret to have to record the death of Bro. W. F. Dobson, M.A., which took place at his residence, Gower-street, Bedford-square, London, on Sunday evening, June 30th. The deceased brother, who resided for many years in Gravesend, took a very active part in local and other matters as Chairman of the Local Conservative Association, served the office of Mayor in the years 1853 and 1854, afterwards being placed in the commission of the peace for the borough. As a Freemason, Brother Dobson exerted himself for the well being and prosperity of the Masonic Charities. Brother Viscount Holmesdale, on his being installed Provincial Grand Master, appointed him as Deputy Provincial Grand Master. As far as we can judge, it was one of the most popular appointments ever made. At the meeting of the Gravesend Lodges, Freedom, No. 77, and Sympathy, No. 299, held on the 17th of last month, a letter was received from Brother Dobson, resigning the office of Treasurer, in consequence of failing health (he having held the office over twenty years), and a vote of thanks and sympathy was unanimously passed by both lodges. On leaving Gravesend, a few years since, he resided at Bearsted House, near Maidstone, and had only a short time since removed to London. He was universally respected throughout the Craft.

ROYAL NAVAL VOLUNTEER MOVEMENT IN LIVERPOOL.

During the First Lord of the Admiralty's recent visit to Liverpool, he called upon the "thriving, public-spirited" town to join with others in doing something for voluntary coast defence, and the hints then thrown out by Mr. Goschen have already been acted upon with an alacrity and spirit which promises to crown the naval volunteer movement with success. In the race for patriotism special praise is due to several distinguished Masonic brethren for the active part they have taken in at once endeavouring to organise the First Royal Naval Volunteers. Bro. H. Scott, J.W., of the Lodge of Loyalty, No. 86, has taken the lead as Honorary Secretary, with his characteristic energy, and he has been admirably seconded in his efforts by Bro. W. Crane, P.M. 249, 1094, and 1296, also Hon. Sec while Brothers J. K. Smith, and J. Lloyd have given their adhesion and active support to the cause. A great number of gentlemen have promised support and personal service in connection with the work, and there is therefore a strong probability that the prospect will be afloat before the end of the month. In reply to a letter from Brother Scott, detailing the steps already taken, Mr. Goschen expressed his satisfaction at the prompt and cordial manner in which his suggestions had been taken up, and saying he would be glad to learn further particulars, with the view of causing practical suggestions to be put into shape.

Besides waiting upon Captain Ward, President of the Mercantile Marine Association, who promises the most hearty support to the scheme. Brother Scott has also written to Lord Sandon, Mr. S. R. Greaves, and Mr. W. Rathbone, members of Parliament for the borough, both of whom sent a courteous reply, expressing the most cordial sympathy with the movement. Mr. Greaves says, "the fact that 50 names were enrolled (at the first meeting) is very gratifying, and confirms my conviction that we possess in our seaports and on our coasts the most ample materials for defending, at a small cost, our shores from all possibility of invasion if we will but utilize them." In the course of his reply Lord Sandon says, "I shall have the greatest pleasure in co-operating with my colleagues in doing whatever is needful in Parliament to assist in carrying out the scheme of naval defence which the First Lord of the Admiralty shadowed forth at Liverpool, if, on learning the details, we think that the scheme is adequate to the occasion. A ship for training purposes has been promised by the Admiralty, at a meeting and to be held in Liverpool last (Friday) night the matter was to be further discussed, and these letters submitted for consideration.

On the 14th of last month Brother William Holland, W.M. 157, (North Woolwich Gardens,) entertained the members of his lodge, and a few friends at his private residence, Southwood Lodge, Eltham. With his usual liberality he provided a splendid banquet. There were present Brothers Smith, Mills, Cubitt, Branden, Leah Drew, Briggs, Silcock, Coste, Baylis, Foster, Massey, &c. The evening being fine made it a most enjoyable outing. All were well pleased with the handsome entertainment provided. The brethren returned to town having spent a most pleasant and happy re-union, which made a nice break during the long vacation which all winter lodges have at this time of the year.

Bro Seymour Smith, Organist 890, on resigning the post of Organist of Hampstead Parish Church, on Thursday, 20th June, the members of that Choir entertained him at a dinner, and afterwards presented him with a very elegant silver snuff box, and a purse containing ten guineas. He is a well-known and highly respected brother, and the above fact shows he is as popular in the outer world as he is in the Craft.

METROPOLITAN MASONIC MEETINGS.

For the Week ending Friday, July 19, 1872.

The Editor will be glad to have notice from Secretaries of Lodges and Chapters of any change in place or time of meeting.

SATURDAY, JULY 13.

Lodge 176, Cavenc.
" 1328, Granite, Freemasons' Hall.
" 1361, United Service, Swan Hotel, Wimbledon,
Mark Lodge, 104, Macdonald, Head Quarters First Surrey Rifles, Brunswick-road, Camberwell.

Star Lodge of Instruction (1275), Marquis of Granby New Cross-road, at 7; Bro. C. S. Dilley, Preceptor.
Sphinx Lodge of Instruction (1329), Castle Tavern, Camberwell-road, at 7 30; Bros. Thomas and Worthington, Preceptors.
Mount Sinai Chapter of Instruction, Union Tavern, Air-street, at 8; Comp. Brett, Preceptor.
Manchester Lodge of Instruction, Yorkshire Grey, London Street, Fitzroy-square, at 8; Bro Ash, P.M., Preceptor.

MONDAY, JULY 15, 1872.

Quarterly General Court Boys' School, Freemasons' Hall at 12.
 Lodge 720, Panmure, Balham Hotel, Balham.
 „ 1159, Marquis of Dalhousie, Freemasons' Hall.
 Sincerity Lodge of Instruction (174), Railway Tavern Fenchurch-street Station, at 7.
 Strong Man Lodge of Instruction (45), Old Jerusalem Tavern, St. John's Gate, Clerkenwell, at 8; Bro. James Terry, Preceptor.
 Camden Lodge of Instruction (704), Adelaide Tavern, Haverstock-hill, at 8; Bro. T. A. Adams, Preceptor.
 Eastern Star Lodge of Instruction (95), Royal Hotel, Mile-end-road, at 7.30; Bro. E. Gottheil, Preceptor.
 British Oak Lodge of Instruction, Bank of Friendship Tavern, Mile End, at 7 for 8.
 St. James's Union Lodge of Instruction (180), Horse and Groom Tavern, Winsley-street, (opposite the Pantheon), Oxford-street, at 8; Bro. J. R. Stacey, Preceptor.
 Wellington Lodge of Instruction, White Swan Tavern, Deptford, at 8; Bro. C. G. Willey, P.M. 1155, Preceptor.
 St. John of Wapping Lodge of Instruction (1306), Gun Tavern, High-street, Wapping, at 7; Bro. T. Mortlock, Preceptor.
 West Kent Lodge of Improvement (1297), St. Saviour's College, Stansted-road, Forest-hill, at 7.30; Bro. H. W. Lindus, Preceptor.

TUESDAY, JULY 16.

Board of General Purposes at 3.
 Lodge 435, Salisbury, 71, Dean-st., Soho.
 „ 704, Camden, York and Albany, Gloucester-gate, Regents-park.
 „ 857, St. Mark's, Duke of Edinburgh Tavern, Brixton. Chap. 186, Industry, Freemasons' Hall.
 Metropolitan Chapter of Instruction, Portugal Hotel, Fleet-street, at 7; Comp. Brett, Preceptor.
 Domestic Lodge of Instruction, Palmerston Tav., Grosvenor-park, Camberwell, at 8; Bro. John Thomas, Preceptor.
 Faith Lodge of Instruction, Refreshment Rooms, Victoria-st. (opposite Westminster Palace Hotel) at 8; Bro. C. A. Cottebrune, Preceptor.
 Yarborough Lodge of Instruction, Green Dragon, Stepney at 8; Bro. Isaac Saqui, Preceptor.
 Prince Fredk. William Lodge of Instruction (753), Knights of St. John Tavern, St. John's Wood; Bro. F. G. Baker, Preceptor.
 Dalhousie Lodge of Instruction, King Edward, Triangle, Hackney, at 7.30. Bro. J. Saunders, Preceptor.
 Florence Nightingale Lodge of Instruction, Masonic Hall, William-street, Woolwich, at 7.30.
 Prosperity Lodge of Instruction, Gladstone Tavern, Bishopsgate-st. Within, at 7.30; Bro. Bolton, (W.M. 1227), Preceptor.
 St. Marylebone Lodge of Instruction (1305), British Stores Tavern, New-street, St. John's Wood, at 8; Bro. T. A. Adams, Preceptor.

WEDNESDAY, JULY 17.

General Committee Grand Chapter, at 3.
 Lodge 619, Beadon, Greyhound Hotel, Dulwich.
 „ 1320, Blackheath, Crown Hotel, Blackheath
 „ 1349, Friars, Cheshire Cheese, Crutched-friars.
 „ 1365, Clapton, White Hart Hotel, Upper Clapton.
 Chapter 192, Lion and Lamb, City Terminus Hotel Cannon-street.
 Pythagorean Lodge of Instruction (79), Prince of Orange's Greenwich, at 8; Bro. J. Robt. Nash, Preceptor.
 United Strength Lodge of Instruction (228), the Grafton Arms, Prince of Wales's Road, Kentish Town, at 8; Bro. J. N. Frost, Preceptor.
 Israel Lodge of Instruction, Rising Sun Tavern, Globe-road, at 7.30; Bro. Isaac Saqui, Preceptor.
 New Concord Lodge of Instruction, Rosemary Branch Tavern, Hoxton, at 8.
 Confidence Lodge of Instruction, Railway Tav., London-street, City, at 7.30.
 Royal Union Lodge of Instruction, Horse and Groom Tavern, Winsley-street, Oxford-street, at 8. Bro. T. A. Adams, Preceptor.
 Peckham Lodge of Instruction, Maismore Arms, Park-road, Peckham at 8; Bro. David Rose, Preceptor.
 Temperance in the East Lodge of Instruction, George the Fourth, Catherine-street, Poplar.
 Stanhope Lodge of Instruction, Thicket Hotel, Anerly, at 7.30 p.m.; Bro. H. W. Lindus, Preceptor.

THURSDAY, JULY 18.

House Committee Girls' School, at 4.
 Lodge 1278, Burdett Courts, Approach Tavern, Victoria Park.
 „ 1339, Stockwell, Duke of Edinburgh Tav., Stockwell.
 Mark Lodge 7, Carnarvon, Mitre Tavern, Hampton Court.
 Rosicrucian Society of England, Freemasons Tavern at 5.30.
 The R.A. Chapter of Improvement, Freemasons' Hall, at 7; Comp. Brett, Preceptor. Ceremony, explanation of R.A. Jewel and Solids, part sections.
 Fidelity Lodge of Instruction (3), Yorkshire Grey, London-st., Tottenham Court-road, at 8; Bro. T. A. Adams, Preceptor.
 Panmure Lodge of Instruction (720), Balham Hotel, Balham, at 7.30; Bro. John Thomas, Preceptor.
 Finsbury Lodge of Instruction, Jolly Anglers' Tavern, Bath-street, City-road; Bro. Stean, Preceptor.
 United Mariners' Lodge of Instruction, Three Cranes, Mile-end-road, at 8; Bro. T. J. Barnes, Preceptor.

Whittington Lodge of Instruction (862), Crown Tavern, Holborn, at 8; Bro. Lewis Alexander, P.M. 188. Preceptor.
 Chigwell Lodge of Instruction, Bald-faced Stag Hotel, Buckhurst Hill, at 7.30.
 Doric Chapter of Instruction, Rising Sun Tavern, Globe-road, Bethnal Green, at 8; Comp. T. J. Barnes, Preceptor.

FRIDAY, JULY 12.

House Committee Boys' School.
 Unions Emulation Lodge of Improvement for M.M.'s Freemasons' Hall, at 7.
 Temperance Lodge of Instruction, Victoria Tav., Victoria road, Deptford, at 8.
 Burdett Courts Lodge of Instruction (1278), Approach Tavern, Approach-road, Victoria-park, at 8; Bro. Geo. W. Verry, Preceptor.
 Clapton Lodge of Instruction, White Hart, Clapton, at 7.30; Bro. John Saunders, Preceptor.
 Royal Standard Lodge of Instruction (1298), The Castle Tavern, Holloway, at 8; Bro. R. Lee, (P.M. 193, W.M. 1298), Preceptor.
 Pythagorean Chapter of Instruction (No. 79), Prince of Orange, Greenwich-road, at 8; Comp. W. West Smith, Preceptor.
 Westbourne Lodge of Instruction (733) Horse and Groom, Winsley-street, Oxford-street, at 8.
 Metropolitan Lodge of Instruction, Portugal Hotel, Fleet-street, at 7; Bro. Brett, Preceptor.
 Belgrave Lodge of Instruction, Duke of Wellington Hotel, Spring-gardens, Charing-cross; Bro. Pulsford, Preceptor.
 Doric Lodge of Instruction, Three Cranes Tavern, Mile-end-road, at 8; Bro. Isaac Saqui, Preceptor.
 Robert Burns Lodge of Instruction, Union Tavern, Air-street, Regent-st., at 8; Bro. W. Watson, Preceptor.
 Burgoyne Lodge of Instruction, Grafton Arms, Prince of Wales's-road, N.W., at 8.
 St. Luke's Lodge of Instruction (144), Gladstone Tavern, Brompton-road, S.W.
 United Pilgrims Lodge of Instruction, Duke of Edinburgh, Shepherd's-lane, Brixton, at 7; Bro. J. Thomas, P.M., Preceptor.
 Duke of Edinburgh Lodge of Instruction, Silver Lion, Penny-fields, Poplar, at 7; Br. D. S. Potts, Preceptor.
 St. James's Lodge of Instruction, Gregorian Arms Tavern, Jamaica-road, Bermondsey, at 8; Bro. Howes, P.M., Preceptor.

GEORGE KENNING,
 198, Fleet Street, E.C.
WATCH & CLOCK MANUFACTURER
JEWELLER, &c.

	£	s.	d.
Strong Silver Watches	from	1	1
Silver English Levers (own make)	from	3	10
Ladies Gold English Levers	from	9	9
Gents Gold English Levers	from	12	12
Gold Watches	from	2	12
Good Sound 8-day Clocks, in neat cases	from	0	10
Good Sound 8-day Clocks, with alarum	from	0	15

Watches, Clocks, Jewellery, Medals, and Jewels, suitable or Presentation, &c., made to order with dispatch.
 All kinds of repairs done on the premises, at moderate prices, by experienced workmen.
 George Kennings' Ladies' Gold English Levers, unequalled £10 10s.
 Country orders will receive prompt attention.
Manufactory: 2, 3 & 4, Little Britain.

A M. M. and 18°, requires a Situation as RUNNING SHED FOREMAN. No objection to India or the Colonies. Has been connected with Railways for over sixteen years—the last five years of which have been spent on the Indian Railways. Good testimonials. Address, Loco, 30, Camden-road, Camden-town, N.W.

EMPLOYMENT wanted by a P.M., P.Z., &c. Age 38. Many years Mercantile and Banking experience at home and abroad. Thorough Accountant and Correspondent. Would not object to a Partnership.—W. B., 3, Upper Brighton-terrace, Surbiton.

WILKINSON'S BRONCHIO-THORACIC LOZENGES.
 Prepared from the receipt of an Eminent Physician, experience has fully justified their recommendation as the most speedy remedy in Irritation of the Throat, Catarrhal Coughs, Bronchitis, Incipient Consumption, Spitting of Blood, &c. To public speakers and vocalists they are invaluable, as they impart a clear and beautiful tone to the voice. Free from opium, and of an agreeable taste.
 In bottles of one uniform size.

WHITMORE'S STOMACH and LIVER PILLS, composed of the Extracts of Dandelion, Turkey Rhubarb, and Jamaica Ginger.
 No Pill is so efficacious in promoting Digestion, strengthening the Stomach, correcting Acidity, preventing or removing Headache, Giddiness, &c., arising from Costiveness, Debilitated Stomach, or Torpid Liver. They require no change of Diet, and the most delicate may take them with safety.
 Taken as an adjunct with WILKINSON'S SARSAPARILLA with the greatest success.
 In Bottles, Small, Medium and Large. Prepared only by THOMAS WILKINSON,
 270, Regent-street, London, W.
 May be had of all leading firms in India and Colonies.

GENERAL FUNERAL ESTABLISHMENT, 81, City-road, E.C., opposite the Finsbury Schools, and 24, Southgate-road, De Beauvoir Town, N.
Bros. SINCLAIR & SON
 beg to call the public attention to their Scale of Charges to suit all classes, to any of the Metropolitan Cemeteries, or other places. For further information, see Illustrated Book and Estimates, forwarded on application.
 No connection with any other establishment.

THE LOMBARD EXCHANGE AND NEWS ROOM,
 LOMBARD STREET, LONDON, E.C.

TERMS:

	£	s.	d.
Entrance Fee	3 3 0
Annual Subscription	3 3 0

Members residing and carrying on business at a distance of fifty miles and upwards from London, Merchants, Captains, and Clerks to Subscribers (no entrance fee) 1 1 0
 The Room is well supplied with newspapers, telegrams, and books of reference. It includes a Post-office, Poste Restante, Telegraph-office, Reading and Writing Room, Restaurant, Lavatories, &c.; also copying machines for the use of subscribers.
 Bro. JOHN H. YOUNGHUSBAND,
 P.M., P.Z., P.E.C., P.P.J.G.W., &c., Manager.

CHARLES WATSON and Co., 30, Cornhill, opposite the Royal Exchange, invite attention to the CORNHILL SHERRY, as their speciality, pure elegant and rich, and worthy of a place on any gentleman's table.
THE CORNHILL SHERRY, elegant, pale and dry, 30s. per dozen. Carriage paid.
 CLARET..... 16s. 22s. 28s. 36s. 42s. to Five Guineas.
 SHERRY..... 22s. 26s. 30s. 36s. 42s. 48s. to 84s.
 PORT..... 28s. 34s. 42s. 48s. 54s. to 120s.
 CHAMPAGNE... 36s. 42s. 54s. 60s. to 84s.
WHISKY—the Ben Nevis—CHARLES WATSON and Co.'s Speciality, 20s. per gallon; the softest and most fascinating Whisky for Toddy in the market.—30, Cornhill. Carriage free within 50 miles. Sample Bottles may be had.
THE CORNHILL SHERRY, rich gold, 30s. per dozen, carriage paid. 30, Cornhill. Sample bottles may be had.

Established 1798.
 "MESSRS. CHARLES WATSON and Co., of 30, Cornhill, forwarded us samples of their 'Cornhill Sherry.' We have taken the opinion of competent judges and veteran wine consumers upon its merits, and pronounce it decidedly the best of the wines at a similar cost which we have tasted, and a great many came before us during the process of our analysis."—Medical Press.

Established 1798.
CORNHILL SHERRY.—CHARLES WATSON and Co., 30, Cornhill (opposite Royal Exchange), requests the favour of a visit to these old-established cellars, containing a large stock of the finest old Wines of every country, some curious and rare, to please the most critical connoisseurs. Descriptive list free. C. W. and Co. appoint Agents, with first-class references, in towns where not represented.

THE NEW FLOOR CLOTH.

THE NEW ASPHALTE FLOOR COVERING has been pronounced by our Customers the softest, warmest, and best Floor Cloth yet invented. It is a non-conductor of heat, and containing no Oil, in its composition does not become frigid in Winter, or hot and blister in Summer, as does Floor Cloth, Kamptulicon, &c., and its durability is 100 per cent. greater than the usual coverings, although its cost is no more. Can be had in Tesselated Patterns. It has been in use eight years in our National Institutions in all parts of London. For Samples, &c., (post free),
Address—Messrs. CHILES & Co., 57 & 60, Belmont-street, London, N.W.
FLOOR CLOTH TESTIMONIAL.
 8, Lower James-street, Golden-square, W., March 16th, 1871.
GENTLEMEN.—In reply to your inquiry, I beg to say that I am quite satisfied with your Patent Floor Covering. I think it the warmest and softest Floor Cloth of any, and the best yet invented.—I am, Gentlemen, yours respectfully,
To Messrs. CHILES and Co. C. CALIFF.

MASONIC ASSURANCE COMPANY,
9, NEW BRIDGE-STREET, LONDON.
ESTABLISHED 1868.

THE ADDRESS recently issued by the newly appointed Chairman, Bro. J. RANKIN STEBBING, P. G. D., may be obtained on application at the offices of the Company.

FREDERICK BIGG, P.M., Manager.

Active Agents will be treated with liberality.

NEW YORK LIFE INSURANCE COMPANY,
ESTABLISHED 1845.

Conducted under the official supervision of the State of New York.

$100,000 have been deposited with Trustees in England.

Life Assurance only. Purely Mutual. All Profits annually to Policy Holders.

Accumulated Funds, December 31st, 1870 ... £3,172,244
Surplus over all Liabilities, and Reserve Fund ... 389,322
Income for Year 1870 ... 1,317,271

Bro. M. X. COHEN,
SPECIAL AGENT,
76 & 77, CHEAPSIDE, E.C.

Norwich and London ACCIDENT INSURANCE ASSOCIATION.

ESTABLISHED 1856.

SUBSCRIBED CAPITAL, £100,000.

For Insuring against

ACCIDENTAL DEATH,

With

Compensation for Personal Injury,
Caused by Accidents

CHIEF OFFICES—ST. GILES'S STREET, NORWICH.

LONDON: 10, OLD JEWRY CHAMBERS.

Secretary: CHARLES R. GILMAN, Esq.

London Manager: Mr. GEORGE POWELL.

Crown Hotel, Broxbourne, Herts.

THE PROPRIETOR begs to call special attention to the great alterations and improvements made this year in his Garden and Dining Rooms, by which he is now enable to Dine 300 Persons in One Room.

The Hotel is acknowledged to be the best out of London for SUMMER BANQUETS.

J. BENINGFIELD, Proprietor.

Mr. JAMES STEVENS,
AUCTIONEER AND SURVEYOR,

House and Estate Agent, &c.,

CLAPHAM COMMON, S.W.

Valuations for Probate or Legacy Duties. Agent to the Imperial Fire and Life Insurance Offices.

MASONIC FLAGS
FOR HIRE.

Knights Templar Arms	15ft. by 12ft.
Freemasons' Arms	15ft. by 12ft.
Red Cross of Rome and Constantine Arms	15ft. by 12ft.
City of London Arms	10ft. by 7ft.
Square and Compasses, with Prince of Wales's Feathers in Centre.....	12ft by 9ft.
Union Jack

KENNING'S MASONIC DEPOTS,

Little Britain, Fleet Street and Liverpool.

THE NEW MASONIC CANDLES, Ionic, Doric and Corinthian, Emblemmatically Arranged for Worshipful Master, Senior and Junior Wardens.

6s. per set of 3 one-pound Candles. Packing Cases 6d. each.

Bro. GEORGE KENNING'S
MASONIC DEPOTS, 2, 3, & 4, LITTLE BRITAIN,
AND 198, FLEET STREET, E.C.

THE BIRKBECK

Is the only Building Society whose Annual Receipts exceeds ONE MILLION!

How to Purchase a House for Two Guineas per Month. With immediate possession and no Rent to pay. Apply at the Office of the BIRKBECK BUILDING SOCIETY, 29 & 30, Southampton-buildings, Chancery-lane.

How to purchase a Plot of Land for Five Shillings per Month. With immediate possession, either for building or gardening purposes, apply at the Office of the BIRKBECK FREEHOLD LAND SOCIETY, 29 & 30 Southampton-buildings, Chancery-lane.

How to Invest Money with safety at 4 per cent Interest. Apply to the Office of the BIRKBECK BANK.

All sums under £50 repayable upon demand. Current accounts opened similar to Ordinary Bankers. Cheque Books supplied. Office hours from 10 till 4 daily, on Mondays from 10 till 9, and on Saturdays from 10 till 2. A small pamphlet, containing full particulars, may be obtained gratis, or sent Post-free on application to FRANCIS RAVENSCROFT, Manager.

THE SOUTH-WESTERN INDEX LIST
of Furnished and Unfurnished Houses to be let, and of Estates for sale in the South-west of London, is published Monthly by

MR. JAS. STEVENS, AUCTIONEER & ESTATE AGENT
CLAPHAM COMMON, S.W.

A useful work of reference for those seeking Residences, and saving much trouble in obtaining information of properties for disposal in the S.W. district.

Send post-card with your address, and a copy will be forwarded by return post.

THE LONDON MIRROR.

Published every Saturday; price 4d.

The object of this journal is to set forth the claims of the many Religious, Educational, Benevolent, and Prudential Institutions of the United Kingdom, and week by week to report their proceedings, whether as Meetings, Sermons, Anniversaries, or Elections, so as to present these National Institutions in the favour of the Public. Office, 29, Southampton-row, Russell-square, London, W.C.

"THE FREEMASON" OF ST. LOUIS.

—The Largest Masonic Monthly in the World. Published at St. Louis, Mo., by George Frank Gouley, Grand Secretary and Recorder of the four Grand Bodies of Missouri.

The Freemason contains tidings from every quarter of the world, and will be found of great advantage to all Masons, especially those interested in American affairs. Terms $2 per annum, and to those who subscribe for the London Freemason the price will be $1.50 currency. Postage free. Subscriptions received at the Office of the London "Freemason," 198, Fleet-street.

TRUTH MUST PREVAIL.—Common Sense.

Lamps, Baths, Cutlery, Brushes, Fenders and Fire Irons Electroplate and Nickel-Silver Goods.

R. D. PARR,

General House Furnishing Ironmonger,
42, BLACKMAN STREET, BOROUGH.

OFFERS nothing extraordinary, but REALLY GOOD Articles at fair and reasonable prices. He does not keep an "Immense Stock," but sufficiently large for any person to select from. He does not sell "cheaper than every other house in the Trade," but quite as cheap as any. A visit will, at all times, be very much appreciated.

TESSELATED CARPETING,

FOR

Lodges, Chapters, Encampments, &c.

Four Feet wide, 3/9 per Yard.

MASONIC DEPOTS, 2, 3 & 4, LITTLE BRITAIN,
AND 198, FLEET STREET, E.C.

Bro. WILLIAMS. MASONIC EMBLEMS

Lithographic Artist Designed and Engraved
AND ENGRAVER ON WOOD. ON STONE, WOOD, or VELLUM.

8, Featherstone Buildings, Holborn 25, Acton Street, London, W.C.

S. WELCH,

WRITER AND GRAINER,

6, MAIDENHEAD COURT,
ALDERSGATE STREET, E.C.

CHURCH SERMONS.

By EMINENT CLERGYMEN.

WEEKLY NUMBERS contain two Sermons. Price One Penny; Monthly Parts, Fivepence.

Published by REEVES, SON, and Co., Playhouse-yard Ludgate-hill, London, and may be had of all Book-sellers.

ROSE CROIX TRACING BOARDS,

Five Guineas the Pair.

MASONIC DEPOTS, 2, 3, & 4, LITTLE BRITAIN,
AND 198, FLEET-STREET.

BRIDGE HOUSE HOTEL,
LONDON BRIDGE,

Opposite the South Eastern, and London, Brighton, and South Coast Railways.

THIS Hotel has great facilities for Meetings, Charitable Institutions, Wedding Breakfasts, Public Dinners, Balls, Soirees, and is allowed to be in real domestic comfort, one of the Best in the Metropolis, the tariff on application to JOSEPH H. SPENCER.

THE GREAT WESTERN HOTEL
(SNOW HILL STATION)
BIRMINGHAM.

"One of the most elegant, comfortable and economical Hotels in the three kingdoms.—The Field, July 31, 1869."

"From experience gained by repeated visits, we are happy to be able to testify to the exceeding comfort of this Hotel. We have much pleasure in recommending it.—The Engineer, October 14, 1870."

"An establishment remarkable for its able management, reasonable charges, and general comfort.—Bell's Life, June, 31, 1871. Good Accommodation for Lodgers, Chapters, &c."

City Terminus Hotel, Cannon-street, LONDON.

WELL adapted for Banquets, Balls, Amateur Dramatic Entertainments, Public Meetings, and Arbitrations. The large Hall is capable of seating upwards of Twelve Hundred people.

SYDNEY SPENCER, Manager.

Guildhall Tavern, Gresham-st., E.C.

SPACIOUS Dining-rooms, Chop and Steak-rooms, Luncheon-bars, and Smoking Rooms. Rooms of all sizes, suitable for Auction Sales, Consultations, Arbitrations, Building Societies, &c.; also for Freemasons' Lodges and Banquets, Private Dinners, &c. Guildhall Tavern Company (Limited), 32 and 33, Gresham-street, GEORGE CRAWFORD, Manager and Secretary.

Masons' Hall Tavern,

MASONS' AVENUE, BASINGHALL-STREET, CITY.

THE above old-established Tavern is NOW OPEN, newly decorated, by Bro. CHARLES GOSDEN, late Manager of the Freemasons' Tavern Company. Every accommodation will be found for Lodges, Chapters, Mark and other degrees, for their Meetings, Dinners, Suppers, &c., and every attention will be paid to their comfort and enjoyment by the new Proprietor.

The Alexandra Restaurant,

7, CONDUIT-STREET, REGENT-STREET.

Public and Private Dining Rooms
First-class Cooking and Wines.
Open for Suppers after the Theatres.

Bro. F. HILFREICH, Proprietor.

Second Edition, revised and enlarged, with a Copious Index. Bound in Cloth and Lettered, 10s. 6d.

HANDY-BOOK FOR INVESTORS.—Second Edition, 530 pages.

A HISTORY of the National Debt.—See Handy-Book for Investors.

A REVIEW OF GOVERNMENT SECURITIES.—See Handy-Book for Investors.

REVIEW OF INDIAN FINANCES.—See Handy-Book for Investors.

HISTORY of the BANK OF ENGLAND.—See Handy-Book for Investors.

STOCKBROKERS and the STOCK EXCHANGE.—See Handy-Book for Investors.

HISTORY and STATISTICS of the COLONIES and their Debts.—See Handy-Book for Investors.

FOREIGN STATES and their DEBTS.—See Handy-Book for Investors.

HISTORY of JOINT-STOCK COMPANIES.—See Handy-Book for Investors.

HISTORY of BRITISH RAILWAYS.—See Handy Book for Investors.

INDIAN, COLONIAL, and FOREIGN RAILWAYS.—See Handy-Book for Investors.

HISTORY and POSITION of JOINT-STOCK BANKS.—See Handy-Book for Investors.

HISTORY and POSITION of FINANCIAL COMPANIES.—See Handy-Book for Investors.

SHIPPING and MERCANTILE COMPANIES.—See Handy-Book for Investors.

HISTORY and POSITION of INSURANCE AND ASSURANCE COMPANIES.—See Handy-Book for Investors.

POSITION, PROFITS, and PROSPECTS of MINING COMPANIES.—See Handy-Book for Investors.

THE METALLIFEROUS DISTRICTS of the KINGDOM.—See Handy-Book for Investors.

MINES in Cornwall, Devon, Shropshire, Isle of Man, and Ireland.—See Handy-Book for Investors.

COMPARATIVE PROFITS of INVESTMENTS.—See Handy-Book for Investors.

Bartlett & Chapman, 36, Cornhill, E.C.

Printed and Published by the Proprietor, Brother GEORGE KENNING at his Offices, 198, Fleet-street, and 2, 3, and 4, Little Britain, in the City of London, and 2, Monument-place, Liverpool, in the County of Lancaster.—SATURDAY, JULY 13, 1872.

TABLE OF CONTENTS

Masonic Sermon, by Bro. C. J. Martyn, P. G. Chap. 439
 Masonic Notes and Queries 441
 Masonic Tidings 441
 Aids to Study..... 442
CRAFT MASONRY:—
 Metropolitan 443
 Provincial 443
ROYAL ARCH:—
 Provincial 445
MARK MASONRY.—
 Provincial 445
 Consecration of a Rose Croix Chapter..... 445
 Consecration of the Baldwin Lodge, Dalton 445
 Masonic Meetings for next week... 446
 Advertisements..... : 437, 438, 446, 447, 448

MASONIC SERMON.

Preached before Provincial Grand Lodge of Suffolk, at the Church of the Holy Trinity, Long Melford,

BY THE REV. C. J. MARTYN, PAST. G. CHAPLAIN.

The Reverend Brother took for his text the 4th verse of the 2nd Book of Chronicles:—"Behold, I build an house to the name of the Lord my God, to dedicate it to Him."

Nearly three thousand years ago, the most wonderful, and most historical people who have ever taken rank amongst the nations of the earth were fast approaching the zenith of their magnificence and glory. Originally selected to be the favourites of heaven, and the chosen people of God, the Jews, as we now call them, the descendants of "Abraham the faithful," the Children of Jacob, or Israel, that mighty "Prince of God" who wrestled successfully with the Angel at Penuel, had been gradually subduing the fair land of promise, until nearly the whole of Canaan lay beneath their rule. "Saul," their first king, had "slain his thousands," and "David," their second king, his ten thousands," and now at length peace was established, and prosperity and plenty reigned throughout their dominions.

David indeed, full of years, glory, and honours, had been gathered to his fathers, and Solomon, his son, now sat upon the throne of Israel.

Mightily had the kingdom spread, and "from the river Euphrates unto the land of the Philistines, and unto the border of Egypt," all men bowed beneath his sovereign rule, and it is written in the sacred records, that "they brought presents, and served Solomon, all the days of his life." Still this was not all; vast armies were at Solomon's command, gold poured into his treasury in unparalleled abundance, and huge tracts of country yielded obedience to his sway, but above and beyond all else, the spirit of God was in his heart, "the spirit of wisdom and understanding, the spirit of counsel and might, the spirit of knowledge, and of the fear of the Lord." God had asked him at Gibeon, what he should give him, and he had said, "Give me now, wisdom and knowledge, that I may go out, and come in, before this people, for who can judge this people, that is so great?" And his humble speech had "pleased the Lord," and every wordly blessing, in addition to unequalled wisdom, had been given him.

And now "Solomon determined to build an house for the name of the Lord," and so 150,000 men, under the direction of 3,600 menaschins or prefects, or, as we should call them, overseers of the work, were "told out," to prepare for this enormous undertaking. And, then, he sent to Hiram, King of Tyre, his father's friend, to send him "cedar trees, and fir trees, and gum trees, from Lebanon," and asked him to cause his servants to cut the necessary wood, and "send it down in floats by sea to Joppa," whence it could easily be carried to Jerusalem. The reason of this request was given in the words I have just read to you as my text, for "behold," said Solomon, "I build a house to the name of the Lord my God, to dedicate it to him." Hiram, King of Tyre, was worthy of the trust reposed in him—not only did he send all the requisite material, but he also sent one, who was in himself a host; "Hiram Abbiff, the Prince of Architects"—a man, whose name will never perish, so long as Masonry, as at present practised, holds its place amongst us. The son of a skilful Syrian artificer, and of "a woman of the daughters of Dun," (the former widow of a man of Naphtali,) Hiram Abbiff, was indeed a worthy and a fitting man, for the great work to which he was appointed; and by his marvellous skill and "his unshaken fidelity" even unto death, he has left behind him a glorious name, and a most eloquent testimony to the great fact, that "to the just and upright man, death has no terrors, equal to those of falsehood and dishonour."

My brethren, I will not now proceed to speak to you of the great work, which "those three mighty men" performed. I will not ask you to follow out the details of that glorious temple, which gradually, and noiselessly, grew into magnificence on the summit of "the Holy Mount Moriah;" neither will I say more of those successors of "Moses, Aholiab, and Bezaleel," forerunners in their turn of "Jerubbabel, Haggai, and Joshua," by whom the work, begun and completed in former times, was afterwards restored, after the Babylonian captivity. For indeed, time and words would alike fail me were I to try to illustrate all the virtues

"Of him who most things understood,
 Of him who sent the stone and wood,
 Of him who nobly shed his blood.
 In doing of his duty."

Moreover, I have other points I wish to bring before you to day, for "we are not operative, but rather speculative, or free and accepted masons," who are gathered here this morning; still I cannot quite leave the mention of them, without continuing the old Masonic distich; concerning them, which probably is well known to many of you who now hear me, and saying,

"Blest be that age, and blest each morn,
 On which those three great men were born,
 Who Israel's Temple did adorn
 With Wisdom, Strength, and Beauty!"

Let me, then, at once proceed to say that, which perhaps you may think I ought to have said at first, how pleased I am to see so large an attendance of my masonic and other brethren here present, and how heartily and sincerely I bid them all welcome to our fine old house of God in this parish. Truly, I often think when I look round upon this glorious monument of the piety and devotion of a long past age, which I have the happiness to call, as far as any clergyman can call his church, my own, that something of the spirit of King Solomon must have animated those who, so many years ago, reared this noble fabric in God's honour; surely they must have said, in the words of our text, "Behold, we build a house to the name of the Lord our God, to dedicate it to him," for indeed I may say, without being thought egotistical, that there are few finer specimens of old church work to be met with in any country parish than that in which we meet to-day. But, as I said just now, we, who are here assembled now, and who are bound together by that "mystic tie," which is so little understood, and which, therefore, is so often ridiculed by the outside world, are not operative, but rather speculative masons. And so, as this is the first time probably, even in the history of this church, in which the members of our time-honoured fraternity have assembled within its walls, though I believe it is not the first time that the Provincial Grand Lodge of Suffolk has met at Melford, it may be expected (and whether expected or not I am sure it will be right) that I should endeavour, while I seek to impress a few of the useful lessons which our great craft teaches, upon my masonic brethren, to give the general congregation also some little idea of what Freemasonry really is. Now, it is a question we all often must have heard asked, "What is this Freemasonry of which we hear so much, and of which we know so little?" My brethren, I cannot give you a better answer than that which our text to-day supplies, "Behold, we build a house to the name of the Lord our God, to dedicate it to him,"

There, brethren, is, after all, "the great secret," the wonderful "mystery" that binds us all together. It is the building up, not of a house of stone and wood, after the manner of our operative brethren of old, but the building up of that most noble temple of the living God, the human heart, the forming and the perfecting of a good and exemplary character in our fellow men. Freemasonry is, to use the words which even the most junior and unpractised member of our body could tell you, "a peculiar system of morality, veiled in allegory, and illustrated by symbols." Its one end and object is to render its disciples better servants of their God, better members of society, better fathers, better sons, better husbands, better brothers, in a word better men. Freemasonry, teaches us to be, what Christianity would have us be, imitators and followers of all that is great, and noble, and good, and excellent, and true.

Freemasonry teaches us to "speak well of a brother, as well absent as present, and when that, unfortunately, cannot be done with honour and propriety, to adopt that excellent and truly masonic virtue—silence." Freemasonry teaches us to "measure our actions by the rule of rectitude, to square our conduct by the principles of morality, and to keep our conversation, and even our very thoughts, within the compass of propriety." Freemasonry teaches us to provide for, and to be mindful of, the wants of others, to provide for the aged, the indigent, the widow, and the orphan, to try to lighten the load under which our fellow creatures may be groaning, and in a word, to fulfil the great and golden rule, of "doing unto all men, as we would they should do unto us." But then, it may be said, and it very often is said, "Why do you want any particular society, or bond, to teach you all these things?" I answer, it certainly does so, and if men would only pray to God to help them to live up to their obligations, and their duty as Christians, we should need no Freemasonry to help us on our way, and teach us better. For we should have arrived at that millennium state, of which we read and hear, when "the people shall be all righteous," and when everything shall be perfect and excellent, I will not say to an unnatural, though I may to an unknown, and hitherto an unexperienced, extent. And it is just because I think that human nature is so weak, and so frail, and so greatly in need of every help, and every assistance it can find, that I am such a devoted advocate of Freemasonry. Not because I wish, for one moment, to exalt it, as some do, into a religion, or to put it for an instant, even in thought, into comparison with religion, but because I hold it to be such an excellent helpmate and handmaid to religion and religious practice; this is why I love Freemasonry so much. In dealing with men and women, you must think of them, and legislate for them, not as they ought to be, but rather as they are. If all people did always exactly as they ought there would be no need of clergymen, or schools, or anything else, to teach them their duty, but as it is, such helps are needed. We all know that it is the duty of every conscientious and right thinking man, whether he be churchman or dissenter, to go either to church or to chapel, but we all know too, do we not, that there are thousands who will never, of their own accord, enter either the one or the other, and so if we would bring these persons under any religious influence whatever, we know that we must go to them and try to bring means and influences to bear upon them to which they will attend, and which will, by God's blessing, gradually bring them round to a better mind, and lead them on to a more perfect life.

Now this is just the ground Freemasonry occupies with respect to religion. It is a great system of pure morality. It does not profess, in any way, shape, or manner, to interfere with a man's religious or political belief, or prejudices. As far as Freemasonry is concerned, a man may be a Churchman, or a Dissenter, a Jew, or a Christian, a Mohammedan or a Roman Catholic, so long as he acknowledges his faith and belief in the one true God, since it is only infidels, atheists, or heathens, whom we exclude on the ground of religion. In politics, too, a man may be a Conservative or a Liberal, or hold whatever opinions he chooses, provided he pays strict attention and obedience to the laws of his craft, and the ordinances of the realm or state, under which he lives. Thus you see, brethren, that loyalty to the Sovereign of our native land, and to our Grand Master, as the sovereign of our order, are forcibly inculcated on all who serve under our banners, and more especially on those who occupy a prominent position amongst us. Indeed, each brother, before he assumes the government of a lodge, is called upon to make a solemn promise, that he will be "a peaceable subject, conforming to the laws of his country, avoiding conspiracies of all kinds, and, paying proper respect to the civil magistrates, will work diligently, live creditably, and act honourably towards all men." A certain system of morality and subordination is held to be the mainspring of the order, and if any one by word or deed violates that strict code which is laid down, he is, by his own act and deed, excluded, and has only himself to blame for the position in which he is placed. And thus it comes to pass that a Masonic lodge is a sort of neutral ground, where men of all sorts of opinions can meet, and be on friendly terms, because all topics of religious or political discussion, those two topics on which people are, unhappily, too prone to disagree, are rigorously excluded.

But there is another objection often urged against Freemasonry. It is said we never meet except for social reasons. That "there is always a dinner or a banquet;" that we "talk a great deal about charity, but that it seems to begin at home, by taking care of ourselves." I quite allow there is some truth in this, and sometimes a case may occur where one or two of those who gather round the table are led into excess. But is this, I would ask, a reason for condemning the whole body for the excesses of a few? Here and there, of course, amongst such a large body as 100,000 men, as the Masonic Order numbers under its banners in England alone, such things may be found; but you might as well condemn Christianity because a few professing Christians commit murder, and adultery, and every imaginable wickedness. You might as well condemn every lawful thing because there are some few who always will abuse it. Surely this is no fair plea to urge against our Order. When men meet together for three or four hours' work or intercourse, or if it be no more than for mere conversation, instead of in a Masonic Lodge, where I can assure those who have not tried it, that the effort of memory and exercise of the mind is often really most severe, some kind of change and recreation is usually needed, and if that refreshment is conducted in the proper manner, and as I am bound to say, it generally is, or in a right and becoming way, I cannot but think that it tends to make men better, and more charitable, in their judgements one of another, and better and more intelligent members of society at large.

Then as to the charity side of the question.

People talk about our clothing, our dress, our jewels, just as if this were all we thought about! In answer, I would say, "Just go and visit our Masonic Boys' School, at Wood-green, or our Girls' School, at Battersea. Look at 110 boys and 100 girls—children of deceased, or indigent Freemasons, of those who when they entered Masonry, as little thought their children would want help as I do now for mine. Think of those children, educated, boarded, fed, clothed, and afterwards put out into the world by means of Masonry, and then say whether there is not some good in an order which never meets without making a collection, either for our "poor and distressed brethren," or for some other charitable object, and which three years ago, subscribed in 13 months, upwards of £22,000 to the Boys' School, alone; and which, every year, contributes some £5,000 to each of our three noble institutions. Then look at our great "Asylum for Aged Freemasons, and Widows of Freemasons," at Croydon, look at our "Lodge or Fund of Benevolence," which every month gives relief, to the amount of some £400, to any case of distress, well vouched for, that is brought before it; and then say, for I leave you each to judge, whether there is not some good in the Masonic Body, as a charitable institution.

But then people say again—"Why, do you want a secret? Why not throw all these benefits open to the world?" Surely, brethren, this is a childish question. Why does a man belong to any club, or subscribe to any society, but because he hopes to gain some benefit, restricted to the members of that society, from which the outer world are necessarily debarred. Why should not, by the same reasoning, every person have an equal right to anything he fancies, which he sees in a shop window? why should the man that pays for it alone be deemed to have a prior claim?

Freemasonry, as I have said, and as I have tried to show, "is founded on the purest principles of piety and virtue, it possesses many great and invaluable privileges, and in order to secure those privileges to worthy men, and we trust to worthy men alone, vows of fidelity of secrecy are required," and since if all the world knew the distinguishing sign and word of a Freemason, the privileges would be universal, instead of under a restriction, and the society, as such, worthless, and at an end. That is why we have our secrets, because, by them, we can distinguish one another, and thus know who are fit and proper persons for relief, from our own private funds, and who are not. I might go on to tell you more of Freemasonry, and explain to you how "every character, figure, or emblem, depicted in our lodges has a moral tendency, and serves to inculcate the practice of virtue in all its genuine professors."

I could tell you what most of our signs and symbols mean, and could shew you how there is a deep significance underlying many emblems, upon which, perhaps, many of you, have thoughtlessly, and even perhaps scoffingly, often gazed. But time will not permit me longer to dwell upon this subject, yet, as I conclude, I will just give you three emblems, by way of example—all known, of course, to my masonic brethren, though not to others—just as a specimen of our system.

The square, the level, and the plumb rule, are well known emblems of Freemasonry, are they not? and their teaching, to us Masons, is as follows: The square teaches us to regulate our actions by the mosaic line and rule, and so to correct and harmonize our conduct in this life as to render us acceptable to that Divine Being from whom all goodness emanates, and to whom we must give an undisguised account of our lives and actions. The level teaches us that we all spring from the same stock, are partakers of the same nature, and sharers of the same hope, and that though distinctions amongst men are highly necessary to preserve due subordination, and to reward merit and ability, yet that no eminence of rank or station should ever cause us to forget that we are brethren, and that he who is placed on the lowest spoke of fortune's wheel is entitled to our regard with him who has attained the highest, since a time will most assuredly come and the best and wisest of us knows not how soon, when all distinctions, save those of piety and virtue, must cease, and death, the great leveller of all human greatness, shall reduce us all to the same state. The plumb rule, which, like Jacob's ladder, forms a line of union between heaven and earth, and is the criterion of moral rectitude and truth, teaches us that to walk with humility and uprightness before God, neither turning from the right or to the left, from the strict path of virtue, is a duty incumbent on every Mason.

Not to be an enthusiast, persecutor, slanderer, or reviler of religion, not bending towards avarice, injustice, malice, or envy and contempt of our fellow creatures, but laying aside every selfish propensity which may tend to injure others, and steering the bark of this life over the rough seas of passion, without quitting the helm of rectitude, is the highest degree of perfection to which human nature is capable of attaining.

As the builder raises his column by the level and perpendicular, so ought every mason to carry himself in this life, as to observe a due medium between avarice of profession, to hold the scales of justice with an equal poise, to make every passion and prejudice coincide with the strict time of his duty, and in every pursuit to keep eternity in view. Hence, the square teaches us morality, the level, equality, and the plumbline, justice and uprightness of life and actions, and thus by square conduct, level steps, and upright actions, we hope to ascend to those immortal mansions where the just will assuredly meet with their reward."

Such, my brethren, are the genuine tenets and principles which, as you will remember, I said was not religion itself, but a helpmate and a handmaid to it, since we hold that faith as well as works are necessary to make up religion; and when I add that the Holy Bible is always open in our Lodges during our meetings; that every ceremony is begun and ended with prayer; and that piety, loyalty, and brotherly love prevail amongst us, I think we may safely say in the words of our text, that when we make a man a Freemason, we "build a house in the name of the Lord our God, to dedicate it to him;" and that if the Mason tries to carry out the precepts which Masonry teaches him, he becomes that which he is told he ought to be. "So that when a man is said to be a mason, the world may know that he is one to whom the burdened heart may pour forth its sorrows, and find consolation; to whom the distressed may prefer his suit, and find relief; that he is one whose hand is guided by justice, and whose hand is expanded by benevolence.

My brethren, God, the Great Architect of the Mansion alone can help us to be all this, but if we pray to him for help we may be this, and more than this, for our Redeemer's sake.

Captain MARSHALL, of Cardiff, writes:—"I have used Perry Davis's Pain Killer in all climates, and have found it of great service, and can safely recommend it in any cases, however bad, of cholera, cramps, and pains in the stomach diarrhoea, colds, coughs, bronchitis, headache, neuralgia, and other similar diseases, having used it repeatedly in such cases, and always successfully."

Multum in Parbo, or Masonic Notes and Queries.

THE ANGLO-SAXON RIDDLE.

Dr. Arnold has said that although "the Briton and the Roman dwelt in our country, they are not our fathers." Professor Grimm, of Berlin, who also looks upon the Anglo-Saxon as the predominant element in our race, ventures to assert that there is no language so well suited for a world language as the English, it having the Teutonic foundation, with the marvellous capacity of adapting to itself the beauties of other languages.

And these forecasts of the future ubiquity of the English language, by Professor Grimm, have been neatly seconded in a comparative view, by a British poet, of the beauty, power, and future influence of the different languages of the ruling nations of the past, and the present, in the following words:—

Greek's a harp we love to hear;
Latin is a trumpet clear;
Spanish like an organ swells;
Italian rings its bridal bells.
France, with many a frolic mien,
Tunes her sprightly violin;
Loud the German rolls his drum,
When Russia's clashing cymbals come,
But Britain's sons may well rejoice,
For English is the human voice.

But, perhaps, the most striking testimony that was ever rendered towards the future ubiquity of the Anglo-Saxon race and language, is, that of a clever Frenchman, the late M. Prévost Paradol. He says—"Neither Russia nor United Germany, supposing they should attain the highest fortune, can pretend to impede that current of things, nor prevent that solution, relatively near at hand, of the long rivalry of European races for the ultimate colonisation and domination of the universe. The world will not be Russian, nor German, nor French, alas! nor Spanish. For it can be asserted that, since the great navigation has given the whole world to the enterprise of the European races, three nations were tried, one after another, by fate, to play the first part in the fortune of mankind, by everywhere propagating their tongue and blood, by means of durable colonies, and by transforming, so to say, the whole world to their own likeness." These were Spain, then France. "Lastly, England came forward; she definitely accomplished the great work; and England may disappear from the world without the Anglo-Saxon future of the world being sensibly changed."

Such are M. P. Paradol's anticipations regarding the future ubiquity of a race long antagonistic to his own. A race now occupying the strongest and most defensible positions on the surface of the globe, from which they issue forth conquering and to conquer—with their free institutions, their open Bible and the most beautiful Liturgy in existence. A race running far ahead of the Latin nations—increasing at a ratio far beyond them, numbering at present 72 millions in all parts of the globe, with every probability of their rising up to 200 millions in seventy years—in short, as far as this present world is concerned, "the Coming Race." And, as we have no example in history of any power of colonisation on such a grand scale, and of such a multitudinous increase of one race over others, it may be permissible to ask is there any prescient forecast in Scripture of the possibility of such a thing.

There is nothing so marked in this subject as the death-bed of the departing Jacob, as represented in Genesis and Deuteronomy. There the old patriarch, with his hands on the heads of the two sons of Joseph, points a destiny for them distinct from that of Judah and the other tribes, allotting to them in the distant future "blessings unto the utmost bound of the everlasting hills," representing them as eventually becoming a "multitude of nations," as blossoming and budding, and "pushing the people together to the ends of the earth."

The learned Dr. Abbadie, the antagonist of Bossuet, in his work, "Le Triomphe de la Providence," published in Amsterdam, in 1723, was the first to apply those splendid predictions to the Teutonic nations that overran the Roman empire, pointing out the distinction between the ten tribes and the Jews—the former were for a long period to be only politically lost, and become "Lo Ammi," as the prophet Hosea predicted; whereas the Jews were to be for ages a marked race, a well-known people, under a long penalty of political degradation, from which they were only finally to emerge, and be restored to the divine favour again.

Several modern writers have taken the subject up, and endeavour to allot to the Anglo-Saxon race those multitudinous blessings showered upon the head of Ephraim*; attempting to prove that there is much in our ancient customs, language, and ancient religious rites, to correspond with such an origin. Moreover, the fact that Sharon Turner traces the Anglo-Saxon to Media and Assyria, the very place the ten tribes were taken captive to, and lost long before the Jews were taken captive to Babylon, and not lost, but, after a seventy years' captivity, restored again for a time.

It seems strange to attempt to identify ourselves with such an origin; but if there should happen to be truth in it, it would only be an additional evidence that the decadence of our race is not yet set in, and an additional call to us to preach the Gospel to all nations, beginning at Jerusalem, as the vigilant sentinel of liberty—civilisation—and religion throughout the whole world.

*See J. Wilson on "Our Israelitish Origin," Macintosh & Co., 4th Edition; a standard work on this subject; also the "Watchman of Ephraim," by the same author.

We read in the "Boletim official do Grande Oriente Lusitano" that the Lodges of the Irish constitution that had existed till now in Portugal have made its alliance to the Grand Orient Lusitano, thus the union of Portuguese Masonry is effected, which is to be ruled by only one Great Masonic authority under the title of Grande Oriente Lusitano unido Supremo Conselho da Maçonaria Portuguesa" being the actual Grand Master Bro. Count de Paraty.

On the 18th, the Commercio Masonic Lodge of the Grand Orient of the Benedictinos celebrated the conferring of its dignities with a festival, at which many ladies were present.

The Venerable gave liberty to a slave boy, and the festal committee presented 11 benefits for widows and distressed Masons.—Anglo-Brazilian Times.

The General Assembly of the Masonic People has published its manifesto in defence of Masonry against Jesuitism and Ultramontanism, and its protest against the Bishop's act in silencing Father Martins as a Masonic member. The manifesto is temperate in its language, eloquent, and free from personalities.—Ibid.

The reconstruction of the Scotch Post-office Department has now been finally determined upon. The General Post-office at Edinburgh is to be reduced to the character of a mere district office, like that at Leeds or Manchester, and the saving to the Exchequer is estimated at £101,000 a year.

BREAKFAST.—EPPS'S COCOA.—GRATEFUL AND COMFORTING.—"By a thorough knowledge of the natural laws which govern the operations of digestion and nutrition, and by a careful application of the fine properties of well-selected cocoa, Mr. Epps has provided our breakfast tables with a delicately-flavoured beverage which may save us many heavy doctors' bills."—Civil Service Gazette. Made simply with Boiling Water or Milk. Each packet is labelled—"JAMES EPPS & Co., Homœopathic Chemists, London."

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS.—Confusion and pain of the Head. These premonitory signs of coming illness should have early attention before the Summer's high temperature accelerates the circulation, or palpitation and uneasy feelings about the heart will succeed, and be followed in their turn by more serious symptoms. Holloway's Pills display their most constant and happiest effects in dispelling these disagreeable feelings, clearing the furred tongue, rousing the torpid bowels, and removing languor and flatulency often oppressive after taking food. No medicine is so well calculated to restore the digestive functions, so potent to soothe the nervous system, to tranquillise an overwrought brain, to raise bright gleams of hope and to dispel the dark shadows of despair.—ADVT.

NOTICE.

The Subscription to THE FREEMASON is now 10s. per annum, post-free, payable in advance.

Vol. I., bound in cloth	4s. 6d.
Vol. II., ditto	7s. 6d.
Vol. III., ditto	15s. od.
Vol. IV., ditto	15s. od.
Reading Cases to hold 52 numbers ...	2s. 6d.

United States of America.

THE FREEMASON is delivered free in any part of the United States for 12s. per annum, payable in advance.

NOTICE TO SUBSCRIBERS.

The Office of THE FREEMASON is now transferred to 198, FLEET-STREET, E.C. All communications for the Editor or Publisher should therefore be forwarded at that address.

Answers to Correspondents.

All communications for The Freemason should be written legibly on one side of the paper only, and, if intended for insertion in the current number, must be received not later than 10 o'clock a.m. on Thursdays, unless in very special cases. The name and address of every writer must be sent to us in confidence.

The Freemason,

SATURDAY, JULY 20, 1872.

The Freemason is published on Saturday Mornings in time for the early trains. The price of the Freemason is Twopence per week; annual subscription, 10s. (payable in advance.) All communications, letters, &c., to be addressed to the Editor, 198, Fleet-street, E.C. The Editor will pay careful attention to all MSS. entrusted to him, but cannot undertake to return them unless accompanied by postage stamps.

AIDS TO STUDY.

By BRO. WM. CARPENTER P.M. & P.Z. 717.

X.

Closely connected with the history of Egypt and of the Hebrews is that of Babylonia, Assyria, Ethiopia, Phœnicia, Arabia, &c., and how much soever of their earliest history, like that of Egypt, is buried in oblivion, or but very imperfectly known, their later history opens up pages of great interest and of much instruction to the diligent student.

Some learned but eccentric scholars have peremptorily asserted that the ancient kingdom of Babylon, as it is called, never had any existence, except in the imagination of misguided writers. The almost universal belief amongst those who have investigated the subject, however, is, that the earliest of the Eastern monarchies was Babylon, which had a people, language, architecture, and position, quite distinct from what is usually called the Assyrian Empire. It appears to these investigators, that the earliest kingdom, occupying part of that tract of land which lies between the Tigris and the Euphrates, lay towards the south, and was called Babylon, from the principal town Babel, or Chaldea from the fact that the inhabitants of another great state, Ur, were Khaldi, or Moon-worshippers. From Genesis x. we learn that the original kingdom was Hamite, but philologists are agreed in stating that the Assyrian language is Semitic.

Here, then, is the first debt which orthodoxy owes to the Babylonian excavations, for they have discovered traces of a kingdom more ancient than the Assyrian, whose language, as far as it can be made out, has the Hamite element most strongly prevailing in it. The grammar is but little known, the conjugations are said to be intricate and difficult, and there are traces of all the four great dialects of the world in the language—Hamite, Semitic, Aryan, and Turanian. Professor Rawlinson argues from this, that there may have been a mixed race, at first; but it has been suggested, that we may rather conclude, that we find in the old Babylonian, traces of the original language, as it was spoken previous to the distribution of men into the four great families.

According to the earliest record in existence (Gen. x.), to which I have just referred, the foundation of the old Babylonian empire was laid by Nimrod, for although the English translation gives us, "Out of that land went forth Asshur, and builded Nineveh, and the city Rehoboth, and Calah, and Resen, between Nineveh and Calah," all the Targums, and, after them, Drusius, Bochart, Le Clerc, De Wette, Baumgarten, Tuch, Gesenius, Knobel, Delitsch, Kalisch, and most modern interpreters, prefer the marginal rendering, "From this land he went out into Assyria," &c., and there appears to be good reason for the preference, which the syntax fully admits of, and the general sense of the passage requires. Nimrod is the subject treated of. Asshur, the son of Shem (ver. 22) was at least a generation older than Nimrod, and he may have first colonised the country called after him, Asshur (or Assyria), Nimrod, or one of his descendants, afterwards invading or governing it. But to get the proper sense of the passage we must take in the preceding verse (ver. 10) "And the beginning (or capital) of his (Nimrod's) kingdom was Babel, Erech, and Accad, and Calneh, in the land of Shinar (the region lying between the rivers Tigris and Euphrates, south). Out of that land," &c. According to this view of the history, the one state was founded by a Cushite, the other by a Semite, the former, or his descendants, driving out the latter, and occupying the country, the dispossessed people retiring further north.

The assumption that, in a very early period of history, Nineveh, and its neighbouring cities were subject to a kingdom which had its seat in Babylon, accords, as Smith suggests, with the tradition which makes Belus king of Nineveh before Ninus. But there is no evidence, as he observes, that the population of Assyria was ever other than Semitic; and the prevalence of Semitic dialects throughout the whole of Mesopotamia shews what was its prevalent population. "If," he adds, "the Cushite race, the presence of which is attested not only by what is said of Nimrod, but also by the Turanian element in the language of the earliest inscriptions of Babylonia, was really intrusive in that country, its entrance may be not improbably connected with the establishment of another great branch of the Semitic family in Egypt; and civilisation may have had a divided origin, both in source and time, on the banks of the Nile and the Euphrates."

That the ruling race of Babylonia, in the earliest historic times, was Cushite, and connected with the Hamite populations of Egypt and Southern Arabia is argued:—(1) From the Biblical genealogy. (2) From the resemblance between the cuneiform and hieroglyphic (or more exactly, the hieratic) systems of writing. (3) From the language of some of the Babylonian inscriptions, of which the grammar seems Turanian, but the vocabulary Hamite or sub-Semitic. (4) From the traditions of Babylonia and Assyria (and also some Greek traditions) which point to a connection of Babylonia with Ethiopia and Southern Arabia (See Sir H. Rawlinson's Essay vi. to Herodotus, B. i. p. 442).

The Babylonians and Chaldeans, not content with being the first founders of a monarchy upon earth, claimed a most extravagant antiquity, pretending to have registered the transactions of 150,000 years, according to some, or 473,000, according to others (Diod. Sic. Bibl. Hist. lib. ii. p. 81.), from the time when they first began to observe the heavenly bodies, to the days of Alexander. But the register sent by Callisthenes to Aristotle, when that prince was at Babylon, contained the observations of 1902 years, only, commencing 114 years after the flood. Berosus, a priest of Belus, at Babylon, in the reign of Antiochus II. (B. C. 261-246) compiled, from the archives in the temple of the god, a "history of Babylon, or Chaldea," but, as with Manetho's work on Egypt, we have only some fragments of it, in Josephus, Polyhistor, Eusebius, and other chroniclers, and in the Christian Fathers. Like Manetho, he begins with a mythical period, but one far surpassing the Egyptian, in the extravagance of its chronology. It is manifestly adapted to a conventional system of arithmetic.

The only tradition of this period thought to be worth mentioning, is, that which ascribes the origin of civilisation to Oannes, a being with the upper part of a man and the tail of a fish, who came up from the Indian Sea, and to six other similar fish-men—a tradition which, if worth anything, indicates the belief of the priests of Babylon that their civilization began on the shores of the Persian Gulf. It is no part of my purpose, in these hints and suggestions, to enter into a consideration of this chronological and historical problem. Those who desire to see how it has been treated, may turn to Smith's "Ancient History of the East" (p.p. 204-217), and to his references.

From what has been said, it will appear that the first Babylonians were derived from Ham, in the time of Cush and Nimrod; though they were quickly superseded by the posterity of Shem; if, indeed these ought not, (as I think they ought) to be rather deemed the aborigines of the country; for, upon the hypothesis premised, they only recovered, in the expulsion of the Cutheans, what had been first wrested from them.

Mr. Bryant insists that the Cutheans, called Chasdim before the Greeks mutilated the name, upon being defeated in their turn by the sons of Shem, spread themselves, under the various names of Cutheans, Hyc-sos, Arabians, and Ethiopians, westward as far as Egypt, and eastward as far as the Ganges; occupying all the Asiatic coasts, with the peninsula of Arabia; hence they crossed the Erythrean Gulf, and penetrated into Ethiopia; that in process of time they got possession of Egypt, and the whole coast of Africa, upon the Mediterranean, even to the Atlantic Ocean, as far as Fez and Taffilet, and are now to be found within the tropics, almost as low as the Gold Coast ("Mythology," vol. iv., p.367. See also Bochart's "Phaleg," lib. ii., c. 2.)

It may be well to note, here, that the whole region of which I have now been writing is included, for convenience, under the general name of Mesopotamia. In Scripture it is called Aram, and Aramea. But as Aram also signifies Syria, it is denominated Aram-Naharaim, or the Syria of the rivers. A line drawn diagonally across the 34th parallel of latitude, from Hit on the Euphrates to Samara on the Tigris, separates it into Upper Mesopotamia, or Assyria, in the wider sense, and lower Mesopotamia, or Babylonia. The great alluvial plain of Babylonia was again subdivided into Upper Babylonia, the country above and around Babylon, and Lower Babylonia, or (as the Greek geographers call it) Chaldea—a name sometimes applied to the whole plain, which is also designated, in Scripture, as "The Land of Shinar," a term which includes "Bateel," in Upper Babylonia, as well as Erech, Calneh, and Accad, in Lower Babylonia. In the earliest accounts we have of this country, subsequent to the time of Abraham, it was subject to a king, called Cushan Rishathaim, then the most powerful potentate of the East, probably, and the first by whom the Israelites were made captive, which happened B. C. 1,400 (Judges iii. 8.) The name of this king bespeaks him a descendant of Nimrod, and it was probably of the Lower Mesopotamia, only, or Babylonia, of which he was sovereign; the northern parts being in possession of the Arameans. This is implied in the history of Abraham, who, when ordered to depart from his country, namely, Chaldea, in the southern part of Mesopotamia, removed to Charran, still in Mesopotamia, but beyond the boundary of the Chaldees, and in the territory of Aram. About 400 years after Cushan-Rishathaim, we find the northern parts of Mesopotamia in the hands of the Syrians of Zobah, as we are told in 2 Sam. x. that Haderezer, king of Zobah, after his defeat by Joab, "sent and brought out the Syrians that were beyond the river, Euphrates. The whole country was afterwards seized by the Assyrians, to whom it pertained till the dissolution of their empire, when it was divided between the Medes and Babylonians, and subsequently formed part of the Medo-Persian, second Syrian, or Macedonian, and Parthian empires, as it does at the present day of the modern Persians.

REPORTS OF MASONIC MEETINGS.

Craft Masonry.

METROPOLITAN.

ROSE OF DENMARK LODGE (No. 975).—This flourishing lodge met at the "White Hart," Barnes, Surrey, the well-known water-side hostelry, on Friday the 21st inst. The W.M., Bro. W. H. Barnard, although but partially recovered from severe illness, was in his place, supported by Bros. H. O. Hinton, as S.W.; J. H. Tyler, J.W.; G. T. Noyce, P.M. and Treas.; R. Wentworth Little, P.M. and Secretary; H. N. Hewitt, S.D.; J. Ayles, I.G.; T. Farrell, W.S.; and a considerable number of brethren, both members and visitors. During the course of the evening, the W.M. passed Bros. Adams, Macey, Clarke, Garner, Hart, and Duck (of 879) to the second degree, and initiated Messrs. Williams and Samuels; Bro. Webb was raised. The resignation of Bro. Stephens, S.W., was announced and received with great regret, after which the lodge was closed, and the brethren dined together, a very pleasant evening being enjoyed by all present.

CRYSTAL PALACE LODGE (No. 742).—The installation banquet of this lodge was given at the Star and Garter, Richmond, on Wednesday the 10th instant. Bro. W. H. Cooper, W.M. presiding, supported by Bros. Cox, S.W.; Steigerwald, J.W.; Bros. Morley, W. Bertram, Deacons; Bradwell, I.G.; Land, W.S. The P.M.'s included Bros. Acton, John Bertram, Henry Finch, T. Foxall, G. Palmer, and Henry T. Thompson, amongst the visitors were Bros. Ough, P.G.P., E. W. Mackney, Johnson, Field, Buckland, O. H. Colvin, and others. After an excellent dinner, served under the personal direction of Bro. Nelson Coates, manager of the hotel, the usual Masonic toasts were heartily responded to, the intervals being most agreeably filled by some excellent singing by Bros Seymour Smith, E. W. Mackney, and others.

ROYAL JUBILEE LODGE (No. 72).—On Wednesday, the 3rd inst., the members of this old well-known lodge held their summer festival at the Castle Hotel, Richmond. There were about seventy ladies and gentlemen present. To chronicle that the banquet was a success would indeed be superfluous. A splendid entertainment, augmented by the lively strains of the band of a volunteer corps, of which Bro. W. Laskey, W.M., is a respected member, impressed upon those of the brethren present the fact that the Royal Jubilee carried out their entertainments, as they did the working of their lodge, perfectly. The Castle Hotel, the grounds of which stretch to the edge of the river, so picturesque in that district, was perhaps the most suitable hostelry that could have been chosen, and when we say it did credit to the choice of the brethren, we have almost said enough. The Stewards on this occasion, which, with one or two exceptions, were officers of the Lodge, acquitted themselves in a highly creditable manner, and deserve the thanks of all present on the occasion. Especially we may mention the names of Bros. H. Wright and Dodson, P.M.'s. After the banquet the company had a merry song and dance and departed highly delighted with the day's pleasure.

CORNWALL.

TYWARDREATH.—St. Andrew's Lodge (No. 1151).—On St. John's Day, the annual meeting of St. Andrew Lodge was held, when the W.M. elect, Bro. John Stephens, was installed by Bro. Rev. George, P.M., in his usually impressive manner, assisted by a numerous board of Installed Masters. Bro. Rev. J. B. Paul was invested as I.P.M. The brethren being readmitted, the W.M. invested his officers for the year:—Dr. Mason, S.W.; Capt. Stribley, J.W.; C. Truscott, Treas.; W. Whiston, Sec. The brethren then adjourned to an excellent repast, and a most social and fraternal evening was spent.

DEVONSHIRE.

SOUTH MOLTON.—Loyal Lodge of Industry (No. 421).—The usual monthly meeting of this lodge was held at the Freemasons' Hall on Tuesday, the 2nd instant. Bro. W. Cole, W.M., occupied the chair. Brother Hannaford was passed to the degree of F.C. Messrs. Frail and Reed were duly initiated into the mysteries and privileges of Ancient Freemasonry, and one candidate for initiation was proposed. The W.M. was assisted in the performance of the ceremonies by four of the Past Masters of the Lodge, Messrs. Shapland, Kingdon, and Furze. There was a goodly number of brethren and visitors in attendance, the whole of whom subsequently adjourned to the Unicorn Hotel, where they supped together, the tables being spread in a very handsome manner with creature comforts, in Bro. Coles' usual good style. On the walls were masonic devices in evergreens, and on the tables were vases of the choicest flowers of the season.

The healths of the Queen, His R. H. Brother Prince of Wales; the Marquis of Ripon, G.M. of England; Bro. Rev. J. Huyshe, P.G.M. of Devon, and the Officers and Visitors. The W.M. presided in a very able manner; the chair of S.W. was filled by Bro. Widgery (in the professional absence of Bro. Sanders), and that of J.W. by Bro. Higgins, who had come expressly from London to perform his duties. The evening was most enjoyably spent by the brethren present.

STONEHOUSE.—Sincerity Lodge (No. 189).—The annual meeting of the Masonic Lodge, Sincerity, No. 189, for the installation of W.M. for the ensuing year, was held on Monday, 8th inst., at the St. George's Hall, Stonehouse. The W.M. elect, Bro. T. W. Coffin, was installed. V.W. Bro. R. R. Rodd, P. Prov. G. Regis., was the installing officer, assisted by V.W. Bro. R. H. Rae, and supported by V.W. Bros. Dr. Dowse, J. Saddler, T. S. Bayly. At the close of the installation, the W.M. appointed the following brethren his officers:—T. B. Forster, who was unable to be present through illness, I.P.M.; I. Latimer, S.W.; M. Coates, J.W.; T. S. Bayly, P.M., Treasurer; R. R. Rae, P.M., Secretary; S. Hutchings, S.D.; J. E. Curteis, J.D.; G. Mair, I.G.; J. E. Moon, O.; W. How, Steward; J. Rogers, Tyler. The annual banquet was adjourned to the opening of the new suite of lodge-rooms, which is expected to take place in September. The principal room in this suite is described as a fine room—36 feet by 24 feet, and 18 feet in height.

DEVONPORT.—St. Aubyn Lodge (No. 954).—The annual meeting of this lodge was held on Monday, 8th inst., at the Masonic Hall, Morice Town. The W.M. elect, Bro. J. Baxter, was duly installed in ancient form. V.W. Bro. S. Chapple, P. Prov. G.A.D.C. was the installing officer, assisted by W. Bros. P. B. Clemens and H. F. Smith, and supported by V.W. Bros. C. D. Elphinstone, P. Prov. G.J.D.; E. Murch, P. Prov. G.O.; J. B. Gover, P. Prov. G.A.D.C.; J. Brown, P. Prov. G. Purs.; E. Aitken Davies, Prov. G.S.; W. Bros. P.M.'s V. Bird, 954; W. Littleton, 1091; W. Foxwell, 1071; J. Purse, 202; M. Paul, 954; J. Lynn, 230; H. Trethewey, 159; J. C. Norsworthy, 914, Jamaica; W. H. W. Sargent, 1099. At the close of the installation the W.M. appointed the following brethren as his officers:—M. Paul, I.P.M.; C. Watson, S.W.; T. Goodhall, J.W.; H.F. Smith, P.M., Treasurer; J. Norman, Secretary; A. Stephens, S.D.; T. Edmunds, J.D.; R. Dugdale, I.G.; T. Hele, O.; W. Ford, Assist. O.; D. Waight, D. of C.; W. Egbert, A.D.C.; Jno. Weary, J. Hayes, Stewards; J. Rashbrook, Tyler. In the evening over seventy of the brethren dined together in the hall of the Devonport Mechanics' Institute. W. Bro. Baxter presided, and amongst those present, in addition to the above officers, were Bro. J. Hele, Mus. Bac., J.W. 330, and P. Prov. G.O. for Cornwall; Bro. Coath, S.W. 893. An excellent choral party, under the leadership of the three Brothers Hele and Bro. Rowe, of Truro, enlivened the entertainment.

LANCASHIRE WEST.

LIVERPOOL.—Temple Lodge (No. 1094).—The monthly meeting of this lodge was held at the Masonic Temple, Hope-street, on the 10th inst. Bro. R. Dawson, W.M., in the chair of K.S., opened the lodge in due form, after which the minutes were read and confirmed. Bros. Dr. Barnard and Packman were raised by Bro. J. K. Smith, P.M., in an exceedingly effective manner. The most interesting part of the evening's business was the presentation of a very chaste and beautiful gold P.M.'s jewel to Bro. E. M. Sheldon, upon whose valuable, disinterested, and faithful services in connection with the lodge, when in the chair three years ago, the W.M. commented in very happy terms, in making the presentation, and referred to the good which the lodge had derived therefrom. In acknowledging the handsome gift, Bro. Saeldon, who was evidently deeply impressed with the kindness of his brethren, referred to his connection with the lodge, and expressed his readiness to further its interests in every way. The lodge was then closed down, and the brethren retired for refreshment, at which the usual toasts were given and responded to. On the following morning a large number of the brethren, accompanied by their wives, daughters, and sweethearts, started shortly before ten o'clock for their summer pic-nic. After arriving at Chester, the picnickers took barge, and proceeded up the River Dee for the neighbourhood of Eaton Hall, where they intended "camping out" for the day. The voyage from Chester was as unpleasant as could have been imagined. Thunder, lightning, and rain, vied with each other in making the situation anything but lively, and nearly the whole party, at the end of the stormy journey, looked the very picture of misery. Still there were some who seemed determined to brave all untoward circumstances, and make things as cheerful as possible. Dinner was served in a pavilion, but the torrents of rain seemed, for the occasion, to have washed away all loyalty, as not a single toast was proposed. The brethren, afterwards, extemporised amusements as best they could, and special credit is due to Bro. Henry Newman, who sent up a number of small balloons during the afternoon, when the storm had somewhat abated, which caused no small amusement and excitement. As the weather improved towards evening, the spirits of the "outers" rose, and they returned to Liverpool at a rather late hour, more satisfied with the day's proceedings than they anticipated when experiencing the almost tropical storm on the troubled Dee.

LIVERPOOL.—Hamer Lodge (No. 1393).—The brethren of this lodge, which bears the much-esteemed name of Bro. James Hamer, P.Prov. G. Treas., West Lancashire, met for the performance of their Masonic duties on Tuesday, the 25th ult., in their fine lodge room, No. 2 A, Windermere-street, Breck-road Everton. Bro. W. T. May, W.M., was supported by the following officers:—Bros. J. Jones, S.W.; J. Cunard Morrow, J.W.; J. Harriman, Sec.; F. Dutch, Treas. pro tem.; R. H. Evans, J.D.; H. Jackson, I.G. and M. Williamson; and amongst the members present were, Bros. J. Hamer, T. Mc Carthey, R. Parry, E. Parry, H. Roberts, T. Roberts, J. McRobbie, G. Aspinall, R. D. Charles, C. Tyrer, Jonathan Roberts, H. Burrows, R. Cain, E. Wilson, W. S. Hart, E. McConnell. The visitors included Bros. J. Pemberton, 249, 1276, P.M., 1294; W. Crane, 673; J. Wood, 249, Treas. 1094; T. W. Riley, and several others. After the lodge had been opened in due form and the minutes confirmed, one candidate was initiated, one brother passed, and three raised to the sublime degree of Master Mason. After a good evening's work, the brethren adjourned from labour to refreshment, and a very pleasant time was spent by all who were present.

LIVERPOOL.—De Grey and Ripon Lodge, (No. 1356).—The success which has attended this lodge, since its consecration a year ago, is without precedent in the Province of West Lancashire, as will be at once seen when we state that it now numbers nearly ninety members of the best standing in the Masonic world. The first anniversary of the lodge's formation, and the installation of the W.M. elect, took place on Wednesday afternoon, the 10th inst., and attracted certainly the largest attendance of brethren seen in this province for many a day. Not only did the members muster in strong force, but the interest taken in the prosperity of the youthful "De Grey and Ripon" was clearly shown by the presence of an unusually large number of distinguished and energetic Masons. The meeting was held in the handsome lodge-room of No. 1356, attached to Bro. John Roberts's, Royal Park Hotel, North Hill-street, and the proceedings commenced shortly after two o'clock. The W.M., Bro. S. E. Ibbs, P.Prov. G.S.B., opened the lodge according to ancient form, supported by the following officers:—Bros. A. Winkup, P.M.; B.B. Marson, S.W.; T. Evans, J.W.; J. Ireland, Treas.; W. H. Washington, Sec.; E. Rothwell, J.D.; J. Bell, I.G.; T. Horne, S.; W. Audley, S.; W. G. Neale, Org.; and W. Crawford, Tyler. The following members of the lodge were also present:—Bros. J. Roberts, J. E. Windel, J. W. Williams, P. Brown, W. Jones, P. Askew, W. Fletcher, S. Nickson, Jos. Jones, T. Maddull, G. Green, W. Griffiths, M. Major, W. Corris, E. Jones, Thomas Lewis, T. W.

Cockram, T. Roberts, T. Bisson, T. Walter, T. Bisson, T. Walter, J. Cliffe, H. Worthington, C. Costigan, G. H. Ager, W. Williamson, T. Clayton, T. R. Coogan, R. Swainson, W. H. Thompson, A. Woolwich, W. M. Morris, R. B. Lloyd, and some others. Amongst the visitors present were:—Bros. H. S. Alpass, P.G. Sec.; J. Mawdsley, P. Prov. G. Reg., and P. Prov. G. Sec.; J. Hamer, P. Prov. G. Treas.; G. Broadbridge, P.G.D.C.; W. Doyle, P.M. 667, P.G.S.; C. H. Hill, P.M., 724, 1276, and 321; J. Porter, P.M. 667; B. L. Johannesin, 594; Peter Mc'Carson, P.M. 594; T. H. Hustwick, W.M. 292; J. Lawson, 667; W. Woods, P.M. 1182; H. Nelson, P.M. 673; W. T. May, W.M. 1393; J. E. Jackson, 667; J. T. Callow, W.M. 673; J. Ridley, P.M. 321, S.W. 1350; A. Samuels, S.D., 1350; J. Hocker, P.M. 673; H. Burrows, 673; T. Sergeant, P.M. 594; P. P. Thorn, W.M. 1182; R. Ing, W.M. 594; W. D. Rowse, S.W. 594; J. E. Skillicorn, S.W. 667; W. Bennett, 1350; G. Scott, 1182, and others. After two candidates had been initiated by Bro. Ibbs, the retiring W.M., in a manner which elicited the admiration of every brother; he, along with Bro. J. Mawdsley, presented Bro. Benbow B. Marson, W.M. elect, to Bro. J. Hamer, for installation. The ceremony was performed by the Installing Master in the efficient and complete manner for which he has so long been held in the highest repute in the province. A board of Installed Masters was then held, and upon the return of the other brethren to the lodge, the newly-chaired W.M. was, according to the usual custom, saluted in the three degrees. The following brethren were subsequently invested as officers for the ensuing year, the ancient charges being given by Bro. Hamer:—Bros. S. E. Ibbs, I.P.M.; T. Evans, S.W.; A. M. Abbey, J.W. (by proxy); A. Winkup, P.M., Treas.; W. H. Washington, Sec.; E. Rothwell, S.D.; Jos. Bell, J.D.; T. Horne, I.G.; W. G. Veale, Org.; W. Audley, S.S.; and Joshua Jones, J.S. On the motion of the I.P.M., seconded by the S.W., Bro. W. Crawford was unanimously re-elected Tyler, and duly invested by the W.M. After the year's accounts had been passed, and several communications and propositions submitted, the brethren adjourned from labour to refreshment. A splendid banquet was served in the fine billiard room of the hotel, to which nearly 100 brethren sat down, under the presidency of the W.M., who was supported on the right and left by an imposing array of "purpled" and Past Officers. The catering was entrusted to Bro. W. Vines, P.M. 1299, whose efforts met with complete satisfaction. After the toast of "The Queen" had been given by the W.M. and responded to with true Masonic enthusiasm, Bro. Alpass proposed "Bro. Albert Edward Prince of Wales, P.G.M., the Princess of Wales, and the rest of the Royal Family." After referring to the initiation of the Prince in Sweden and the distinguished honour conferred upon him by the G.L., Bro. Alpass said that if any doubt existed as to whether their royal brother would be content with the honours thus laid upon him, or take an active interest in the Craft, that had been quickly set at rest. After serving as S.W., H. R. H. had for the second time assumed the duties of the W.M.'s chair of a private lodge. In other degrees he had taken the same course, showing that if he could have gone through all the grades of masonry, he would have done so. The toast was received and honoured. Bro. Ibbs next proposed "The Marquis of Ripon, M.W.G.M., and the Earl of Carnarvon, R.W.D.G.M.," and in doing so, passed a high and eloquent eulogium upon them as statesmen, Masons and philanthropists. The next toast, "Sir T. G. F. Hesketh, Bart., M.P., R.W. Prov. G.M.; Lord Skelmersdale, W.D. Prov. G.M., and the Prov. Grand Officers for West Lancashire," was entrusted to Bro. Winkup, who referred to the interest taken by all the Provincial Grand Officers in the affairs of the Craft generally, and that province in particular. Bro. Alpass, in acknowledging the toast, referred to the onerous duties of the Prov. Grand Officers in that large and increasing province, but no duty gave their G.M. so much anxiety as the appointment of his officers. The time for the meeting of the Provincial Grand Lodge was fast approaching, and he

(Bro. Alpass) could assure the brethren it was a time of great anxiety and grave consideration with their chief to give the offices only to those who were really deserving, and it was only those who had to advise him who could appreciate the difficulty. The "De Grey and Ripon" had only one P.M., but in other lodges they would find five or six Past Masters—all worthy Masons—who had never received office in the Provincial Grand Lodge, and who felt rather sore in consequence. When he (Bro. Alpass) told the brethren there were sixty-two or sixty-three lodges in the province, they would see the difficulty of selection, and therefore they would all give their Provincial Grand Master credit for resolving, as he had done, to change his officers annually. It was certain no eligible brother was omitted from disparagement to himself, or to his lodge, but simply because of the large number from which the selection had to be made. In concluding an excellent speech, Bro. Alpass congratulated the brethren of 1356 upon the remarkable success of their first year's existence, remarking that in no lodge did he know so many who were likely to do credit to the craft. As the result of their year's work, they had had both quantity and quality, and he trusted they would continue to show the same wisdom in their future initiations. Bro. Ibbs gave "The Worshipful Master," and referred to the qualities which eminently fitted him for that position, expressing a hope that the lodge would have as harmonious, happy, and prosperous a year under his care as that which had preceded it. The W.M. thanked the brethren for the honour they had conferred upon him; for the manner in which they had received the toast, and assured them that he would strive to follow in the steps of his predecessor, and asked for the assistance of his officers and the brethren, so that success might again crown their efforts. In the words of Sebastian to Antonio he would say, "For your kindness I have but one answer to make—thanks, thanks, for ever thanks." "The Installing Master" (in the absence of Bro. Hamer) was acknowledged by Bro. Mawdsley. The W.M. next proposed "The I.P.M.," and in doing so spoke in the highest terms of the manner in which Bro. Ibbs had fulfilled the duties of the chair. He also took occasion to present him with a very handsome timepiece, valued at thirty guineas, which bore the following inscription:—"Presented to Bro. S. E. Ibbs, the first W.M. of the De Grey and Ripon Lodge, 1356, by the members, in token of their personal esteem and friendship." Bro. Ibbs, in eloquent terms, thanked the brethren for their generosity and the manner in which they had received the toast. He had considered it an honour indeed to be the first W.M. of the first lodge in a township numbering something like 80,000 inhabitants, and therefore he felt that the valuable testimonial was altogether unnecessary and undeserved. "The Officers of the Lodge," was acknowledged by Bro. Evans, S.W. "The West Lancashire Masonic Educational Institution," proposed by Bro. Alpass (who gave highly interesting details as to the working of the noble charity) was responded to by Bro. Mawdsley. "Visiting Brethren" and "Poor and Distressed Masons" were the remaining toasts. Several excellent songs were given during a pleasant evening by Bros. H. Nelson, T. Williams, Scott, Major, Winkup, Porter, and Veale; the last-named brother not only deserving "honourable mention" for his valuable services at the harmonium during the ceremony of installation, but also for his capital accompaniments in the evening. Bro. Broadbridge, P.G.D.C., was an efficient "master gunner" at the banquet.

MIDDLESEX.

POTTER'S BAR.—Acacia Lodge (No. 1309).—The regular meeting of this well established and prosperous lodge was held at the Railway Hotel, Potter's Bar, on Wednesday the 10th inst. Bro. J. H. Batten, W.M., opened the lodge, the minutes of the previous meeting were read and unaimously confirmed. Bro. C. Horsley, P.G. Registrar, Middlesex, P.M., took the chair and in his usual efficient manner passed two brethren and raised two. The W.M. resuming his position, it was resolved unanimously to increase the lodge meetings from four to six, and meet alternate months. All were pleased with the correct working of the W.M., Bro. J. H. Butten, who will no doubt prove himself well fitted for his important position as the W.M. It was announced by the Treasurer that in the short space of two years the lodge had paid for all the furniture, and had a respectable balance in hand. The W.M. informed the lodge that their members had been thought of at Provincial Grand Lodge, for no less than two had had honours conferred on them, viz.: Bros. E. Sillifant, P.M. and Treasurer, as Prov.G.J.D. Middlesex, and C. Horsley, P.M., as Prov.G. Registrar, Middlesex. These brethren were heartily congratulated on their appointments. Some candidates were proposed for initiation and the lodge was closed. Refreshment followed labour. There were present besides those named, Bros. F. Walters, P.M.; Richardson, S.W.; Schollar, J.W.; G. Cattel, P.M., Sec.; Limpus, S.D.; Hughes, J.D.

NORTHUMBERLAND.

NEWCASTLE-UPON-TYNE.—St. Peter's Lodge (No. 481).—The festival and installation meeting of this large and flourishing lodge took place on Monday, 8th July, at the Masonic Hall, Maple-street, Newcastle-upon-Tyne. The lodge was opened by the W.M., Bro. J. Straker Wilson, who was supported by nearly all of the officers of the lodge, and a large number of the brethren. The first business was the balloting for of three brethren as subscribing members, and one candidate for initiation, who were all declared unanimously elected. Mr. Mathias Hair being in attendance and properly prepared, was admitted in due form, and initiated into the mysteries of the craft by the W.M. Bro. Geo. Thompson, P.M., P.P.G.S.W., the W.M. elect, was then presented for installation by Bro. Foulsham, P.M., P.G. Reg., and was duly installed into the chair, according to ancient form, by the W.M., Bro. J. Straker Wilson. The newly-installed W.M. then appointed and invested the following brethren as officers for the year:—Bros. J. Straker Wilson, I.P.M.; James Oliver, S.W.; J. Atkinson, J.W.; Rev. R. Broughton, Chaplain; J. A. Hair, P.M., P.G.J.W., Treas.; R. R. Hazard, Sec.; W. Foulsham, P.M., P.G. Reg., Director of Ceremonies; J. Donald Storey, S.D.; Shafto Robson, J.D.; W. Rigg, I.G.; R. Robson and J. Wright, Stewards; and Charles Martin, P.M., Tyler. The W.M. then addressed the officers on the nature and importance of the duties of their several offices, in an able and appropriate manner. Other business having been transacted, the lodge was closed in love and harmony. The brethren afterwards sat down to an excellent banquet served in the banquetting hall, and presided over by the newly installed W.M. The usual loyal and Masonic toasts were ably proposed by the W.M., and Bros. Angus, Terry, and Atkinson contributed materially to the enjoyments of the evening by their excellent singing.

Royal Arch.

CORNWALL.

TYWARDREATH.—Unity Chapter.—On the 21st ult., a convocation of the chapter was held, when P.Z. Rev. George Ross, P.G.C., installed as Principals for the ensuing year Comps. Rev. Dr. Treffry, Z.; Colonel Beard, H.; W. Gray, J. On the admission of the companions, the other officers were invested:—Comps. T. C. Stephens, E.; N. Abbott, N.; Stephens and Mason, S.S.; W. Tomkins, Janitor. The cordial thanks of all were given to Bro. Rev. George Ross, for the interesting manner in which he had conducted the several ceremonies.

LANCASHIRE (WEST).

ULVERSTON.—Chapter of Furness (No. 995). The annual gathering of the companions of this flourishing chapter, took place on Monday last, the 15th inst., at two p.m., when the installation of officers for the ensuing year was performed by Comp. T. Wylie, Prov. G. Registrar, assisted by Comp. J. Hamer, Prov. G. Treas., the ceremony being performed in their usually faultless style. The chapter being duly opened, Comp. J. Case was installed as Z.; T. Dodgson, H.; and R. Pearson, J.; Roger Dodgson, S.E.; J. Postlethwaite, S.N.; J. H. Matthews, Treas.; G. Cornfield, Prin. Soj.; W. Whiteside, 1st Assist. Soj.; T. Taylor, 2nd Assist. Soj.; J. Morris, S.S.; and J. Mills, J.S. There were present, in addition to a number of other companions, W. Dodd, P.Z. 995.; J. M. Morgan, No. 1, Cork. At the conclusion of the ceremony of installation, the companions adjourned to the Sun Hotel, where a sumptuous banquet was served up by Bro. Smith. The usual loyal and Masonic toasts were enthusiastically given and responded to, and Comps. Wylie, Crook, Taylor, Matthews, and Harper, enhanced the enjoyment by several well-rendered and inspiring songs. The most pleasing part of the day's proceedings was the presentation of a handsome jewel (supplied by Bro. Kenning) to Comp. Roger Dodgson, for the arduous and untiring duties he has performed as Treasurer for two years, and as an acknowledgment of the trouble and care he had exercised in superintending and conducting the correspondence necessary to furnishing the chapter.

Mark Masonry.

CUMBERLAND AND WESTMORELAND.

MARYPORT.—Whitwell Lodge (No. 151).—The regular meeting of the above flourishing lodge was held on Friday, June 28. The chair of Adoniram was occupied by Bro. Nicholson, W.M. After the lodge had been opened and minutes of last meeting read and confirmed, the following officers of Grand Lodge were announced and received with grand honours. V.W. Bro. C. F. Matier, P.M., G.J.W. of England; V.W. Bro. J. Porter, P.M., G.S.D. England; V.W. Bro. F. W. Haywood, P.M., P.G.J.D.; V.W. Bro. G. Hayward, P.M., P.G.I.G. Bro. Matier, at the request of the W.M., assumed the chair, and several brethren, having been duly balloted for, were admitted and duly advanced to the degree of Mark Master, in a very able manner. The names of several brethren having been proposed for advancement, a hearty and unanimous vote of thanks was passed, and ordered to be recorded on the minutes, to the Visiting brethren for their presence and assistance. The lodge was then closed with solemn prayer according to ancient custom. Among many other brethren we noticed Bros. Collin, S.W.; Tickle, Registrar; Wallace, M.O.; Gardiner, S.O.; Bell, J.O.; Lawson, S.D.; Dr. Henry, and others.

CONSECRATION OF A ROSE CROIX CHAPTER.

On the 11th of July, 1872, at the Masonic Hall, 33, Golden Square, the interesting ceremony of constituting and consecrating a Rose Croix Chapter took place. The following members of the Order were present:—

- Ill. Bro. C. J. Vigne, 33°, G. Com.; Capt. N. G. Phillips, 33°, Lt. G. Com.; Col. A. W. Adair, 33°, G. Treas.; Gen. H. Clerk, 33°, G. Chancellor; I. M. P. Montagu, 33°, G. Sec.; Dr. R. Hamilton, 33°, S.G.I.G.; Rev. E. H. H. Vernon, 33°, G. Chap.; Hyde Pullen, 33°; Chas. Goolden, 32°; S. Rawson, 32°; Capt. G. Barlow, 32°; Major S. H. Clerke, 32°; Capt. W. F. Portlock Dadson, 31°; Dr. Verstraten, 30°, Belgium; A. Bott Cook, 30°; H. Dubsoc, 30°; R. Spencer, 30°; Capt. C. J. Burgess, 30°; J. F. Starkey, 30°; F. Binckes, 30°; S. Rosenthal, 30°, and 33°, of France; John Read, 30°; W. W. Beach, 18°; F. Davison, 18°; W. Percy Chapman, 18°; Walter Spencer, 18°.

A Rose Croix Chapter was opened, and the candidates, viz.:—Bros. John Hodges, C. S.

Jekyll, Robert de Lacy, and G. T. Carter, who were elected to receive the degree, having been properly instructed, were introduced and regularly admitted into the Order.

The Supreme Council then retired, and after a short absence re-entered in formal procession, and proceeded to constitute the new Chapter, which was done with all the solemnity attendant upon the beautiful ceremony.

The new Chapter was proclaimed, as registered, under the title of the "St. George's Chapter Rose Croix."

The Grand Commander then requested Bro. Hyde Pullen to instal the M.W.S. designate, Bro. C. J. Burgess, into the chair of his Chapter, who, after the ceremony, was pleased to appoint the following brethren to fill the various offices of the Chapter, viz.:—John Read, Capt. G. Barlow, Dr. Eugene Cronin, F. Davison, H. Dubosc, W. P. Chapman, &c.

Votes of thanks were proposed and carried with acclamation, to the members of the Supreme Council, for their kind attendance and assistance on this, as well as all other occasions, when their aid and instruction are needed, and to Bro. Hyde Pullen, for the able and effective manner in which he had performed the ceremonies. These acts of attention having been responded to, the concluding portion of the business was completed, and the chapter closed.

It appeared evident that all the proceedings gave general satisfaction, for the musical accompaniments and arrangements were admirably performed during the entire duties, and the exquisite quiet of this chastely decorated and handsomely furnished hall, tended greatly to promote the solemnity and success of the beautiful ceremony of the Rose Croix, as well as the consecration of the chapter and installation of the M.W.S.

May every success attend this new chapter, and its elegant home.

CONSECRATION OF THE BALDWIN LODGE, No. 1,398.

The ancient town of Dalton, situate in the very heart of Furness, and in the centre of the rich veins of hæmatite ore which permeate that fertile district, and about five miles from the town of Ulverston, has been rapidly increasing its number of Freemasons, who have mainly been engrafted on the parent tree of the Furness Lodge, No. 995. The distance, however, to the mother lodge is so great, and the requirements of the place such that it was determined to establish a lodge at Dalton. Bro. Baldwin, who is a zealous Freemason, and whose position as a magistrate of the district gives him a considerable influence, without mentioning the good feeling he has established amongst the brotherhood by his having twice represented his lodge at the London Charities as Steward, and on each occasion liberally contributed from his substance to the welfare of these institutions, having intimated his readiness to be the first W.M., the preliminaries were easily arranged, and it was determined out of compliment to designate the new Lodge after his name.

Friday, the 12th instant, was the day fixed for the ceremony, and about mid-day the good old town presented quite an animated appearance, after the arrival of numerous guests from Liverpool, Kendal, Lancaster, Ulverston, and Barrow. The old castle of Dalton had by the kindness of Mr. Wadham, agent to the Duke of Buccleugh, been placed at the disposal of the Lodge, and it is certainly a most suitable structure for the performance of masonic rites. The upper room has been selected for the lodge room, and on this day presented a most impressive appearance, the walls being adorned with ancient armour artistically arranged. Very handsome regalia, supplied by Bro. Kenning, was disposed in proper situations, and when the brethren, to the number of one hundred, had assembled, decorated with jewels and badges representing nearly every position in the craft from the Grand Lodge downwards, nothing was wanting to please the eye of every enthusiastic mason.

The formation of the lodge, the selection of the furniture, and the work of carrying out the arrangements, were principally entrusted to the W.M. of the Lodge of Furness, Bro. R. Pearson, his Senior Warden, Bro. R. Dodgson, and the other P.M.'s of the lodge, whose experience and care in seeing that nothing was left unprovided, either for the working of the new lodge, or the comfort of the guests, contributed to make the proceedings pass off in a most satisfactory manner.

The R.W. Prov. G. Master, Sir Thos. Fermor Hesketh, Bart., M.P., entrusted the ceremony of consecration and installation of W.M. and officers to his ingenious and skilful workman, Bro. Thos. Wylie, P.G. Reg., who was assisted by Bro. J. Hamer, P. Prov. G. Treas., as Director of Ceremonies, who (without particularly dwelling upon any part of the ceremony) performed those duties in such a manner as to maintain their well-earned reputation for the efficiency and perfection with which each part is explained and illustrated. The Prov. G. Chaplain, Bro. Goggin, M.A., who, since his appointment, has earned unqualified admiration for the zeal and assiduity as well for the ability with which he adorns the duties of his high office, was also present; and during the consecration ceremony, delivered an address that for beauty, pathos, and imagery, we have never heard equalled, and will have a lasting effect in the regulation of the principles of many Masons present. The ever-working and attentive P.G. Sec., Bro. Allpass, was also at his post, and seemed to derive the greatest pleasure in witnessing the consecration of a building so eminently calculated to promote the prosperity of the Craft, in a place so far distant from his personal control.

The P.G. Treasurer, Bro. Armstrong, as well as Bro. Skeaf, the Provincial G. Organist, were both present—the one with his voice, the other with his supple fingers, contributed to enhance the beauty and pleasure of the scene by sounds of sweetest and most delicious melody.

After the ceremony of installation the brethren adjourned to the house of Bro. F. Bell, the Wellington Hotel, where a most sumptuous banquet was served in a room that excited the attention of all. The decorations have been executed by the worthy host himself, and are done in good taste and display a very large amount of ability, whilst the viands were served up, so as to tempt the appetite of the most fastidious. The wines were also very good, and what surprised and astonished every brother present, was that this fairy scene from beginning to end, including the refreshment of the inner man, had all been provided by the W.M. and that nobody was allowed to pay for anything.

Space will not permit further enlargement on so pleasing a theme beyond stating that the usual Loyal and Masonic toasts were given and responded to with the greatest enthusiasm, notwithstanding the room was illuminated almost continuously with vivid flashes of lightning and terrific peals of thunder, accompanied by such a fall of rain, as even the lake district rarely witnesses. The proceedings were brought to a close about 8 p.m., and the brethren departed by the next train to their respective homes. The officers invested were as under:—Bros. W. J. A. Baldwin, W.M.; Wm. Whiteside, S.W.; J. Postlethwaite, J.W.; Rev. J. M. Morgan, Chaplain; R. Pearson, D.C.; Francis Clark, Treasurer; John Tyson, Secretary;

Wm. Horn, S.D.; F. Bell, J.D.; J. Jenkins, I.G.; W. Johnson, Organist; Hy. Kendall, Steward; P. Derbyshire, O.G.

The principal visitors present on the occasion were Bro. the Rev. J. J. Goggin, P.G. Chaplain; Bro. Thomas Wylie, P.G. Reg.; Bro. Thomas Armstrong, P.G. Treasurer; Bro. J. Hamer, P.G. Treasurer; Bro. J. Skeaf, P.G. Organist; Bro. Edward Busher, Past G.S.B. England; Bro. C. Hartley, P.M. Lancaster; Bro. J. H. Williams, J.D. Duke of Lancaster Lodge; Bro. John Bell, S.W. Duke of Lancaster Lodge; Bro. R. Dodgson, S.W. Lodge of Furness; Bro. John Case, P.M. Lodge of Furness; Bro. H. S. Allpass, P.G. Secretary; Bro. W. Hall, W.M. Duke of Lancaster Lodge; Bro. Edward Airey, J.W. Lodge of Fortitude, Lancaster; Bro. J. M. Morgan, First Lodge, Cork, Ireland; Bro. H. Cook, P.M. Barrow; Bro. J. Dodgson, Ulverston; Bro. H. W. Mackereth, P.S. Ulverston; Bro. George Cornfield, P.M. Barrow; Bro. J. Rawlinson, Dalton; Bro. R. Pearson, W.M. Lodge of Furness; Bro. H. Barber, P.M. Lodge of Furness; Bro. T. Dodgson, P.M. 995.

METROPOLITAN MASONIC MEETINGS.

For the Week ending Friday, July 26, 1872.

The Editor will be glad to have notice from Secretaries of Lodges and Chapters of any change in place or time of meeting.

SATURDAY, JULY 20.

Audit Committee Boys' School.
Lodge 1185, Lewis, Nightingale Tavern, Wood Green.
" 1329, Sphinx, Stirling Castle, Church-st, Cambewell.
" 1364, Earl of Zetland, St. Thomas's Hall, Hackney.
Star Lodge of Instruction (1275), Marquis of Granby, New Cross-road, at 7; Bro. C. S. Dille, Preceptor.
Sphinx Lodge of Instruction (1329), Castle Tavern, Camberwell-road, at 7.30; Bros. Thomas and Worthington, Preceptors.
Mount Sinai Chapter of Instruction, Union Tavern, Air-street, at 8; Comp. Brett, Preceptor.
Manchester Lodge of Instruction, Yorkshire Grey, London Street, Fitzroy-square, at 8; Bro. Ash, P.M., Preceptor.

MONDAY, JULY 22.

Sincerity Lodge of Instruction (174), Railway Tavern, Fenchurch-street Station, at 7.
Strong Man Lodge of Instruction (45), Old Jerusalem Tavern, St. John's Gate, Clerkenwell, at 8; Bro. James Terry, Preceptor.
Camden Lodge of Instruction (704), Adelaide Tavern, Haverstock-hill, at 8; Bro. T. A. Adams, Preceptor.
Eastern Star Lodge of Instruction (95), Royal Hotel, Mile-end-road, at 7.30; Bro. E. Gottheil, Preceptor.
British Oak Lodge of Instruction, Bank of Friendship Tavern, Mile End, at 7 for 8.
St. James's Union Lodge of Instruction (180), Horse and Groom Tavern, Winsley-street, (opposite the Pantheon), Oxford-street, at 8; Bro. J. R. Stacey, Preceptor.
Wellington Lodge of Instruction, White Swan Tavern, Deptford, at 8; Bro. C. G. Willey, P.M. 1155, Preceptor.
St. John of Wapping Lodge of Instruction (1306), Gun Tavern, High-street, Wapping, at 7; Bro. T. Mortlock, Preceptor.
West Kent Lodge of Improvement (1297), St. Saviour's College, Stansted-road, Forest-hill, at 7.30; Bro. H. W. Lindus, Preceptor.

TUESDAY, JULY 23.

Lodge 186, Industry, Freemasons' Hall.
" 1348, Ebury, Morpeth Arms Tavern, Millbank.
Metropolitan Chapter of Instruction, Portugal Hotel, Fleet-street, at 7; Comp. Brett, Preceptor.
Domestic Lodge of Instruction, Palmerston Tav., Grosvenor-park, Camberwell, at 8; Bro. John Thomas, Preceptor.
Faith Lodge of Instruction, Refreshment Rooms, Victoria-st. (opposite Westminster Palace Hotel) at 8; Bro. C. A. Cottebrune, Preceptor.
Yarborough Lodge of Instruction, Green Dragon, Stepney, at 8; Bro. Isaac Saqui, Preceptor.
Prince Fredk. William Lodge of Instruction (753), Knights of St. John Tavern, St. John's Wood; Bro. F. G. Baker, Preceptor.
Dalhousie Lodge of Instruction, King Edward, Triangle, Hackney, at 7.30. Bro. J. Saunders, Preceptor.
Florence Nightingale Lodge of Instruction, Masonic Hall, William-street, Woolwich, at 7.30.
Prosperity Lodge of Instruction, Gladstone Tavern, Bishopsgate-st. Within, at 7.30; Bro. Bolton, (W.M. 1227), Preceptor.
St. Marylebone Lodge of Instruction (1305), British Stores Tavern, New-street, St. John's Wood, at 8; Bro. T. A. Adams, Preceptor.

WEDNESDAY, JULY 24.

Lodge of Benevolence, at 6.
" 507, United Pilgrims, Horns Tavern, Kennington-park.
" 753, Prince Frederick William, Knights of St. John Tavern, St. John's Wood.
" 754, High Cross, Seven Sisters Tavern, Page-green, Tottenham.
" 871 Royal Oak, White Swan Tavern, High-street, Deptford.
Pythagorean Lodge of Instruction (79), Prince of Orange Greenwich, at 8; Bro. J. Robt. Nash, Preceptor.
United Strength Lodge of Instruction (228), the Grafton Arms, Prince of Wales's Road, Kentish Town, at 8; Bro. J. N. Frost, Preceptor.
Israel Lodge of Instruction, Rising Sun Tavern, Globe-road, at 7.30; Bro. Isaac Saqui, Preceptor.
New Concord Lodge of Instruction, Rosemary Branch Tavern, Hoxton, at 8.
Confidence Lodge of Instruction, Railway Tav., London-street, City, at 7.30.
Royal Union Lodge of Instruction, Horse and Groom Tavern, Winsley-street, Oxford-street, at 8. Bro. T. A. Adams, Preceptor.
Peckham Lodge of Instruction, Maismore Arms, Park-road, Peckham at 8; Bro. David Rose, Preceptor.
Temperance in the East Lodge of Instruction, George the Fourth, Catherine-street, Poplar.
Stanhope Lodge of Instruction, Thicket Hotel, Anerly, at 7.30 p.m.; Bro. H. W. Lindus, Preceptor.

THURSDAY, JULY 25.

General Committee Girls' School, Freemasons' Hall, at 4.
The R.A. Chapter of Improvement, Freemasons' Hall, at 7; Comp. Brett, Preceptor. Ceremony, explanation of R.A. Jewel and Solids, part sections.
Fidelity Lodge of Instruction (3), Yorkshire Grey, London-st., Tottenham Court-road, at 8; Bro. T. A. Adams, Preceptor.
Panmure Lodge of Instruction (720), Balham Hotel, Balham, at 7.30; Bro. John Thomas, Preceptor.
Finsbury Lodge of Instruction, Jolly Anglers' Tavern, Bath-street, City-road; Bro. Stean, Preceptor.
United Mariners' Lodge of Instruction, Three Cranes, Mile-end-road, at 8; Bro. T. J. Barnes, Preceptor.
Whittington Lodge of Instruction (862), Crown Tavern, Holborn, at 8; Bro. Lewis Alexander, P.M. 188, Preceptor.
Chigwell Lodge of Instruction, Bald-faced Stag Hotel, Buckhurst Hill, at 7.30.
Doric Chapter of Instruction, Rising Sun Tavern, Globe-road, Bethnal Green, at 8; Comp. T. J. Barnes, Preceptor.

FRIDAY, JULY 26.

Lodge 780, Royal Alfred, Star and Garter, Kew Bridge.
Unions Emulation Lodge of Improvement for M.M.'s Freemasons' Hall, at 7.
Temperance Lodge of Instruction, Victoria Tav., Victoria road, Deptford, at 8.
Burdett Coutts Lodge of Instruction (1278), Approach Tavern, Approach-road, Victoria-park, at 8; Bro. Geo. W. Verry, Preceptor.
Clapton Lodge of Instruction, White Hart, Clapton, at 7.30; Bro. John Saunders, Preceptor.
Royal Standard Lodge of Instruction (1298), The Castle Tavern, Holloway, at 8; Bro. R. Lee, (P.M. 193, W.M. 1298), Preceptor.
Pythagorean Chapter of Instruction (No. 79), Prince of Orange, Greenwich-road, at 8; Comp. W. West Smith, Preceptor.
Westbourne Lodge of Instruction (733) Horse and Groom, Winsley-street, Oxford-street, at 8.
Metropolitan Lodge of Instruction, Portugal Hotel, Fleet-street, at 7; Bro. Brett, Preceptor.
Belgrave Lodge of Instruction, Duke of Wellington Hotel, Spring-gardens, Charing-cross; Bro. Pulsford, Preceptor.
Doric Lodge of Instruction, Three Cranes Tavern, Mile-end-road, at 8; Bro. Isaac Saqui, Preceptor.
Robert Burns Lodge of Instruction, Union Tavern, Air-street, Regent-st., at 8; Bro. W. Watson, Preceptor.
Burgoyne Lodge of Instruction, Grafton Arms, Prince of Wales's-road, N.W., at 8.
St. Luke's Lodge of Instruction (144), Gladstone Tavern, Brompton-road, S.W.
United Pilgrims Lodge of Instruction, Duke of Edinburgh, Shepherd's-lane, Brixton, at 7; Bro. J. Thomas, P.M., Preceptor.
Duke of Edinburgh Lodge of Instruction, Silver Lion, Penny-fields, Poplar, at 7; Br. D. S. Potts, Preceptor.
St. James's Lodge of Instruction, Gregorian Arms Tavern, Jamaica-road, Bermondsey, at 8; Bro. Howes, P.M., Preceptor.

Advertisements.

MASONIC EMBLEMS.

A BEAUTIFUL WORK OF ART, in Photography, for framing, representing a volume of the Scripture, opened at Chapter 6 of the 1st Book of Kings, surrounded by symbols of the Craft.

Plain, 1s. 6d.; richly coloured, 3s.

Published by STEVENS & RICHARDSON, 5, Great Queen-street, Lincoln's-inn-fields.

May also be had at Kenning's Masonic Depots, 198, Fleet-street, and 2, 3, and 4, Little Britain, London, and 2, Monument-place, Liverpool.

TABLE OF CONTENTS

Capitular Freemasonry in England 451
 Consecration of the Whitwell Lodge, No. 1390 452
 Consecration of the Morning Star Lodge, No. 1396 452
 Freemasonry in Canada 453
 Freemasonry in West Australia 454
 Masonic Notes and Queries 454
 Masonic Tidings 455
 Aids to Study..... 456
 Grand Lodge of Mark Masters..... 457
 CRAFT MASONRY:—
 Provincial 457
 MARK MASONRY:—
 Provincial Grand Lodge of Somerset..... 459
 RED CROSS OF CONSTANTINE:—
 Provincial 460
 ANCIENT AND ACCEPTED RITE:—
 Gibraltar 460
 Metropolitan 460
 CORRESPONDENCE:—
 The Prince of Wales 461
 Ancient Grand Lodge of York 460
 Reunion of Knights Templar in Scotland..... 462
 Poetry..... 462
 OBITUARY:—
 Bro. J. M. Martin..... 462
 Masonic Meetings for next week... 463
 Advertisements..... 449, 450, 463, 464

CAPITULAR FREEMASONRY IN ENGLAND.

In the "proceedings" of the Grand Chapter of Pennsylvania (U.S.), for 1871, which have lately been published, there is a lengthy notice of Capitular Freemasonry in this country, by our Bro. W. J. Hughan, representative from that Grand Chapter.

The subject is learnedly and ably introduced by M. E. Comp. Charles Eugene Meyer, the Grand High Priest, and although the progress of the Mark Degree has been so rapid of late that in some respects the account of that degree in particular is not now strictly accurate, we feel certain that Bro Hughan's answers to the questions propounded by the Grand High Priest of Pennsylvania will be read with much interest by all British Freemasons.

At Page 26 we read as follows:—

"The early history of Royal Arch Masonry in Pennsylvania, is no doubt intimately connected with a chapter or chapters, worked by officers of the British Army, stationed in Philadelphia, about the middle of the last century. It will be found by reference to the reprint of the proceedings of the Grand Chapter, that Lodge No. 3 claims the honour of having, as far as known, the oldest records of the Royal Arch Degree in this country, its records dating back as far as 1767. In 1795, the great innovator, Thomas Smith Webb, and a few others from the New England States, made strenuous efforts to form a Grand Chapter in Pennsylvania; owing, however, to the influence of many members of Grand Lodge, they were not successful, and the very object they tried to accomplish was carried out by the Royal Arch Masons of that State, in forming a Grand Chapter, subordinate, however, to the Grand Lodge. A few years after this, in 1797, a Grand Chapter for the Northern States of America was formed by Webb and his coadjutors. The General Grand Chapter of the United States was not formed until 1806.

On the 17th day of December, 1824, the Grand Chapter (of Pennsylvania) became independent

(i.e. of the Grand Lodge), and from that time, Royal Arch Masonry has flourished in this jurisdiction.

At the November Grand Communication the Grand Chapter unanimously recognised the Mark Grand Lodge of England and Wales as a legitimate grand body, and it gives me great pleasure at this time, to extend a hearty welcome and to express the wishes of this Grand Chapter for its future prosperity. The Grand Mark Lodge of England and Wales was established in June, 1856, and now numbers over one hundred and thirty lodges. It is prosperous and harmonious, and when the question of jurisdiction is settled between it and the Grand Chapter of Scotland, will increase wonderfully.

During the past year, in order that I might be able to lay before the Grand Chapter as much information as possible on the subject of Capitular Masonry in Great Britain and Ireland, I entered into correspondence with that distinguished Masonic historian, Companion William James Hughan, of Truro, Cornwall, England, who has kindly furnished me with answers to the following questions, together with a short history of the Mark Degree in the countries above named, which will be found in the "Appendix" [reprinted in the "Freemason"].

MARK MASTER MASON.

QUESTION.—Is the Mark Degree, as worked in England, the Mark Man, or the Mark Master Mason?

ANSWER.—The Mark Man and the Mark Master are both worked in England; the first as preparatory to the latter; but, generally speaking, only the Mark Master. The "Ark, Mark, and Link or Wrestle" are now obsolete. The Mark Man (or Mason) was given to Fellow Crafts on January 7th, 1778, at Banff, Scotland; but the Mark Master, at the same time, and at the same meeting, was restricted to Master Masons. This is important, as the latter has been so given to Master Masons only in England, Scotland, and Ireland.

Q.—Is it recognised by the Grand Lodge or Grand Chapter of England?

A.—The Mark is not recognised by either of these two bodies. It is however recognised (i.e. the Mark Master's Degree) by the Grand Lodge and Grand Chapter of Scotland, and by the Grand Chapter of Ireland. (The Constitutions of the Grand Lodge of Scotland declare that "all Lodges holding of the Grand Lodge of Scotland are strictly prohibited and discharged from holding any other meeting than those of the three orders, viz., Apprentice, Fellow Craft, and Master Mason, denominated St. John's Masonry, the Mark forming part of the Second Degree, though only to be conferred on Master Masons." The Mark in England is under a separate jurisdiction, called the Grand Lodge of Mark Masters, numbering over one hundred lodges, established in June, 1856. It is prosperous. A few lodges are granted for England by the Grand Chapter of Scotland, pro tempore. The Grand Lodge of Mark Masters is recognised by the Grand Chapter of Ireland, and the Grand Chapter of Canada.*

Q.—What are the requirements of an applicant? Must he be a Fellow Craft or Master Mason, and must he "pass the chair," or be an "Installed Master" before applying?

A.—Simply to be a Master Mason, no matter of how short a period.

Q.—How many candidates can be "marked," at one and the same time? or is there no limit as to number?

A.—No limit whatever.

Q.—What are its Officers?

A.—The officers are Worshipful Masters Senior and Junior Wardens, three Overseers, Treasurer, Chaplain, Secretary, two Deacons, Director of Ceremonies, Assistant ditto, Registrar of Marks, Inner Guard or Time-keeper, Stewards, and Tyler. The W.M. with the Wardens and Overseers are members officially of Prov. Grand Lodge and Grand Lodge. The W.M. must have been W.M. of a Craft Lodge, and been a Warden of a Mark Lodge for one year.

Q.—Is the Mark degree as worked in England the same as that worked in Ireland and Scotland?

A.—Yes, (virtually).

Q.—Are Lodges of Mark Masters separately constituted and consecrated, and what degree is it numerically?

A.—Mark Lodges are generally consecrated and constituted. No regular ceremony is universally worked or authorized. Numerically in Scotland and Ireland it is the fourth degree. In England there is no actual numeration whatever. It is however considered to be, numerically, as intermediate to the third degree and Royal Arch.

PAST MASTER.

Q.—Is the the "Past Master" a ceremonial of "Passing the Chair," or "Installed Master" recognized by the Grand Lodge and G. Chapter of England?

A.—In England, the P.M. means one who has served twelve months as W.M. of a lodge. No merely honorary degree is allowed at all for such a title, and it is under the control of the Grand Lodge only, though it is not termed a separate degree. In Scotland it is the fifth in rank under Grand Chapter, and is preparatory to the Arch, as is also the Mark (fourth) and most Excellent (sixth).

Bro. Lawrence Dermott, Grand Secretary of the "Ancients" (and subsequently Deputy Grand Master), was installed Master of No. 26, Dublin, Ireland, 24th June, 1746. The constitution of the Grand Lodge of England, 1723, speaks of the installation of the Master, as "certain significant ceremonies and ancient usages." The ceremony, however, was observed in the presence of even the apprentices.

Dr. Dassigny, of A.D. 1744, mentions brethren as having "passed the chair." I think the Installed Master was originated about 1738, when the Royal Arch was instituted, and by the "Ancients."

I notice in an edition of the Constitutions of the Grand Lodge of England, A.D. 1738, the 47th problem of Euclid is inserted, without note or comment, at the end of the volume.

* Since this article was written, several Grand Chapters in the United States have granted recognition and representation.

MOST EXCELLENT MASON.

Q.—Have you such a degree? If so, where and by what and whose authority is it conferred? If conferred, is it recognized by the Grand Lodge or Grand Chapter? Have they such a degree in Ireland and Scotland?

A.—Worked in England in connection with the Mark Grand Lodge; in Scotland, sixth degree, as before mentioned.

ROYAL ARCH MASON.

Q.—Under what and whose authority is the Royal Arch conferred?

A.—By Grand Chapters, in England, recognised by Grand Lodge; in Scotland not recognized by Grand Lodge; in Ireland virtually recognized by Grand Lodge.

Q.—Is the Grand Chapter a separate organization, (that is, independent,) and are subordinate Chapters distinct organizations, and do they work under Chapter Warrants?

A.—Grand Chapters are separate organizations.

Q.—What are the qualifications of candidates for the degree?

A.—In England, twelve months a Master Mason, unless by dispensation. Any number, even one, may be exalted the same evening. We never neither have (or have had) any rule requiring three candidates to be exalted at one time, whether more or less, (proxies or otherwise) in this country, as it is in the United States.

Q.—Who are its officers?

A.—(Z.) Zerrubabel, or First Principal; (H.) Haggai, or Second Principal; (J.) Jeshua, or Third Principal; Chaplain; Treasurer; Scribe E., (Ezra); Scribe N., (Nehemiah); Principal Sojourner; Assistant Senior and Junior ditto. Director of Ceremonies, Sword Bearer, Stewards, Banner Bearer and Janitor. All are elected by the members, but the Assistant Sojourners, who are chosen by the Principal Sojourner, (P.S.) The three Principals must be actually Past Masters of Craft Lodges, and they must be taken seriatim annually. We may mention that the Three Sojourners are mentioned in the constitutions of the Royal Arch, 1778 and 1782, and so in all editions since, under the "Moderns" (so called, but really "Ancients.") The quotation from the earliest laws of the Society under the Moderns we must give respecting these officers, &c. 1. "That according to ancient custom, a complete Chapter of the Supreme Degree of Masonry, consists of three Principals, who when in Chapter assembled, are to be considered conjointly as the Master, and each severally as a Master; two Scribes, three Sojourners, and seventy-two others, as council; and that no regular Chapter of this exalted degree can consist of more; but that any number may be exalted and received as companions, though not to hold the staff of office, or be considered as councillors, when more than that number are present."

Q.—Have you such a degree or order as High Priesthood?

A.—High Priesthood not recognized. Separate ceremonials, however, at installation of each of the Principals, and at opening only Past or Present Principals are present.

Q.—Is there any difference in the work of England from that of Ireland, Scotland, and the United States, and have any changes been made of late years?

A.—None of much importance, excepting in Ireland, where the officers are more after the American style. No change made of late years.

Q.—Is the degree, as worked now in England, that of the Ancients or Moderns—Anderson or Dermott?

A.—A union of both in 1817.

Q.—Do you use the words "Holy Royal Arch?"

A.—"Holy Royal Arch" never occurs in our Regulations, and is never used by Grand Chapter. The degree is often so called in our Chapters, and so designated in our Summonses. The term arose under the "Ancients," but in their "Ahiman Rezon" for 1756, the degree is called Royal Arch. In 1807 it has the prefix Holy under the same Body.

The Grand High Priest concludes by saying, "Companion Hughan has promised to be the English correspondent for this Grand Chapter, and will furnish hereafter sketches of the Past Master, Most Excellent, and Royal Arch. Although comparatively a young man, the works he has already presented to the Masonic Fraternity bear the marks of a deep research into the records of the past, and he has brought to light much valuable information relating to the early history of Freemasonry."

The Grand High Priest finally concludes his own excellent address as follows. "Thus beginning a New Year, it becomes us, as Royal Arch Masons, upon whose frontlets is inscribed Holiness to the Lord, to invoke the presence, aid, and protection of the Omnipotent, Omniscient, and Omnipresent Jehovah, that he may be with us at our beginning, middle, and ending, that all our doings may tend to His Glory and the salvation of our Souls. Relying implicitly upon Him, we need fear no danger."

CONSECRATION OF THE WHITWELL LODGE, No. 1390.

In the unavoidable absence of the Earl of Bective, the Prov. G.M., and Bro. Whitwell, M.P., D.Prov. G.M., the ceremony of consecration was performed by Bro. Busher, Past Grand Sword Bearer of England, Prov. G.S. Cumberland and Westmoreland, assisted by Captain Mott, R.N.R., P.Prov. G.D. West Lancashire, and Bro. Morten, P.Prov. G.S.W. of Cumberland and Westmoreland; Bro. Mott acted as Chaplain.

The business of the day was successfully accomplished and the impressive manner in which the proceedings were conducted will not soon be forgotten by those whose privilege it was to be present.

The three P.M.'s who bore the corn, wine, and oil, were Bros. Case, Barber, and T. Dodgson, of Lodge of Furness, No. 995.

The ceremony of installation of the W.M. designate, Bro. Roger Dodgson, 86, S.W. 995, was very ably and impressively rendered by the S.W. designate, Bro. T. Dodgson, P.M. 995, assisted by Bro. Mott.

The lodge is held in a private room, and is very beautifully furnished, all the appointments of the place being in excellent taste, making it charmingly attractive. The furniture, jewels, &c., were supplied by Bro. Kenning, of London and Liverpool, and nothing is wanting to make the lodge perfectly adapted for proper working.

A gratifying fact was the presentation, on the occasion, of a beautiful large Bible for the lodge, by Bro. Whitwell, D.P.G.M., suitably inscribed; a box of working tools of the best workmanship by Bro. Busher, Prov. G.S.B.; a case containing handsome square and compasses, by Bro. R. Pearson, W.M. 995; a perfect ashlar and windlass by the W.M., a pair of globes by the J.W., Bro. Mills, and a ballot box in polished oak, by the S.W.

The W.M., who appeared well versed in his duties, appointed his officers as follows:—Bros. T. Dodgson, S.W.; Mills, J.W. and Treas.; Meredith, Sec.; Dodd, S.D.; Hudson, J.D.; J. Postlethwaite, I.G.

A pleasing incident was the proposition of a large number of joining members, as well as a good list of very eligible candidates for initiation. The W.M. proposed the following distinguished brethren, as honorary members:—Bros. Whitwell, Busher, Mott, and Barber, a compliment feelingly and warmly acknowledged by those of the brethren who were present. Bro. Busher remarked with agreeable surprise, that it was the first time in the course of his long Masonic career that such an honour had been conferred upon him, and he gratefully accepted it.

After the lodge was finally closed the brethren adjourned to an excellent dinner at the Station Hotel, presided over by the W.M. with great ability.

The well known cordiality and affability of the Prov. Grand Officers made the after-dinner proceedings every thing that could be desired, and a most enjoyable evening was spent by all present.

The very favourable auspices under which this lodge has been started augurs well for its future success, and the officers appointed are a guarantee for its full and proper working.

CONSECRATION OF THE MORNING STAR LODGE, NEWTON ABBOT.

A special meeting of the Masonic Provincial Grand Lodge of Devon was held at Newton Abbot. The business was the constitution and consecration of a new lodge, to be known as the Morning Star Lodge, No. 1396, and to be held in that town. The brethren assembled at noon at the lodge rooms at the Queen's Hotel.

Amongst those present were R.W. Bro. the Prov. G.M., the Rev. Jno. Huyshe, M.A., P.G. Chap. of England; V.W. Bros. the Rev. C. R. N. Lyne, M.A., P.G. Chap.; W. G. Rogers, P.G. Sec.; J. Harris, P. Prov. Reg.; the Rev. Dr. W. L. Pope, P. Prov. G. Chap.; H. Miller, Prov. G.D.C.; H. Bartlett, P. Prov. G.A.D.C.; T. Lidstone, P. Prov. G.S.O.W.; J. Austin, P. Prov. G.O.; J. M. Hifley, E. Aitken Davies, and H. W. Hooper, Prov. G. Stewards; W. Bros. W. Dodd, P.M. 1194; Capt. J. W. Keyworth, W.M. 164; Capt. Webb Elphinstone, W.M. 372; J. N. Blake, P.M. 230; P. B. Clemens, P.M. 954; H. M. Bartlett, P.M. 303; J. J. Drake, W.M. elect 1396; Bros. W. L. Yates, 328; J. C. Curtis Pillar, J.W. 1358; J.

Evans, D.C. 797; J. L. Chabrol 105; J. Chapman, S.D. 328; B. H. Pescott, S.W. 797; W. N. Taylor, H. Moffatt.

The Provincial Grand Lodge was opened in ancient form. R.W. Bro. the Rev. John Huyshe presided. R.W. Bro. L. P. Metham, P.G. J.D., the D. Prov. G.M., was prevented from attending through the recent death of a relative. V.W. Bro. W. G. Rogers acted as D. Prov. G.M., and the following officers were also appointed pro tem.:—V.W. Bros. J. Harris, Prov. G.S.W.; Dr. W. L. Pope, Prov. G.J.W.; J. N. Blake, Prov. G. Sec.; E. Aitken Davies, P.G. Purst.

The Prov. G. Sec. announced the desire of the brethren to form the new lodge, and read the warrant that had been obtained from the M.W. the G.M. of England.

The brethren of the new lodge expressed their acceptance of the officers named in the warrant. viz.:—Bros. J. J. Drake as W.M.; W. E. Lambie, S.W.; Dr. Pope, J.W.

An oration, by way of the usual charge to the new brethren, was delivered by Bro. Dr. Pope.

The ceremony of the constitution of the new lodge was then proceeded with.

At the close of this ceremony, on the announcement that the lodge was a regular and duly constituted lodge, the ceremony of its consecration was proceeded with by the R.W. the Prov. G.M., assisted by the D. Prov. G.M., the Prov. G. Wardens, and the Prov. G. Chap.

At the close of the consecration, the W.M. nominate, Bro. J. J. Drake, was duly installed in ancient form. The Wardens nominate were placed in their chairs, and the W.M. appointed the following brethren as his officers:—

William Lambie, I.P.M.; W. R. King, S.D.; H. Stoke, J.D.; Dr. Pope, Treasurer; H. Moffatt, Secretary and I.G.; J. Weeks, Tyler.

This closing the business, Lodge Morning Star and the Provincial Grand Lodge were closed with prayer.

The following lodges were represented:—Nos. 1358, 1138, 1099, 1091, 954, 792, 372, 282, 230, 223, 189, 164.

From the lodge rooms the brethren moved in procession, with regalia displayed, to St. Paul's Church, where an excellent sermon was preached to them by Bro. the Rev. C. R. N. Lyne. The text was Matthew, fifth chapter, 7th verse, from which the reverend brother urged the merits of a merciful charity that thinketh no guile of others, over the mere rendering of eleemosynary aid.

At the close an offertory was made for the poor of the town. The brethren then returned in procession to the Queen's Hotel, where a large party dined together in the evening.

The next meeting of the Provincial Grand Lodge is expected to be at Torquay about August 20th.

FREEMASONRY IN CANADA.

LAYING THE FOUNDATION STONE OF ST. PAUL'S CHURCH, AT WASHAGO.

On the Queen's birthday, at an early hour, the streets of Washago assumed a gay appearance from the number of uniforms that were seen hastening to an fro. At about half-past nine the Masons moved from their hall, and proceeded down Mississaga-street to the "Ida Burton" wharf. The brethren all appeared in blue lodge clothing, and were preceded by the band; "The Merry Nine" B.B. Club, in their artistic dress; the "Sporting Nine," in their gay apparel; and the Odd Fellows, in full regalia. The procession was under the charge of Bro. Robert Ramsay, who was appointed by the Acting Grand Master as Grand Director of Ceremonies. On arriving at the wharf the brethren and their friends opened out and the Acting Grand Master, Rt. Wor. Bro. J. K. Kerr, 32°, D.D.G.M. of the Toronto District, passed through, with his Grand Wardens, Wor. Bros. T. S. Atkinson and Robert Ring, followed by other Grand Officers.

In a few minutes the "Ida" left the wharf, freighted with as happy a crowd as it has been our good fortune to meet for some time past. The boat was chartered by the Sons of Temperance, but as there had been some misunderstanding regarding the same, they very generously gave up the profits towards the erection of St. Paul's Church.

On arriving at Washago the procession reformed, and the band struck up the Masonic March; a few minutes' rest was taken at "Mine Host," Ormsby's Hotel, after which they advanced with a large number of visitors to the site of the proposed building. Here the interesting ceremony took place, of which the following is a brief outline:—

The R.W. Acting Grand Master, with his Deputy and Wardens, the Reeve, and others, advanced to the platform, and the brethren formed a circle round the stone. The band having ceased, the R.W. Acting Grand Master stepped forward, and after giving the following usual introductory remarks, delivered an eloquent oration upon our noble Fraternity:—"Men, women, and children, assembled here to behold this ceremony, know all of you that we are lawful Masons, true to the laws of our country, and professing to fear God, who is the Great Architect of the Universe; to honour the Queen; to confer benefits upon our brethren, and to practice universal benevolence to all mankind. We have amongst us, concealed from the eyes of all other men, secrets which may not be revealed, and which no man has discovered; but those secrets are lawful and honourable, and are placed in the custody of Masons, who alone have the keeping of them to the end of time."

The Rev. R. H. Harris, Acting G. Chaplain, then delivered a beautiful prayer to the Great Architect of the Universe, closing with the supplication that the Author of Life and Light, the great source of love and happiness, would grant that this building, the foundation-stone of which was to be laid to-day, might hereafter prove useful, and be blessed for the all-important purposes for which it was intended, and for the promotion of His glory.

Brethren—so mote it be!
W. Bro. Robert Ramsay, Acting D.G.M., then read the following scroll:—

"By the favour of the Great Architect of the Universe, on the 24th day of May, 1872, of the Era of Freemasonry, 5872, and in the 34th year of the Reign of our beloved Queen Victoria of Great Britain and Ireland and numerous Colonial Dependencies. (Whom may God preserve.) The Right Hon. Sir John Young, Baron Lisgar, in the Peerage of Great Britain and Ireland, and Governor-General of the Dominion of Canada, John Regan, Esq., J.P., Reeve, of the United Townships of Orillia and Matchedash, the Rev. R. H. Harris, B.A., Incumbent of St. Paul's, and W. Bro. T. S. Atkinson, W. Master, Orillia Lodge, No. 192, Most Worshipful Brother James Seymour, Grand Master of Grand Lodge of Canada. The foundation-stone of this St. Paul's Church of Washago was laid by Right Worshipful Brother J. R. Kerr, 32°.

Acting Grand Master, attended and assisted by a Special Grand Lodge of Free and Accepted Masons of Canada, in presence of a large concourse of respectable people, which may God prosper.

"Committee of Management:—Bros. T. S. Atkinson, R. H. Cuzzens, W. Bingham, C. McKenzie, and R. Ramsay."

The scroll was subsequently deposited in the cavity of the stone, together with By-Laws of Orillia Lodge No. 192, some silver coins, the Pioneer, Northern Light, and other county papers. This interesting part of the ceremony being concluded, John Regan, Esq., J.P., Reeve of the United Townships of Orillia and Matchedash, stepped forward and presented Rt. Wor. Bro. J. K. Kerr with a beautiful silver trowel, on which was the following inscription:—

"Presented to Rt. Wor. Bro. J. Kerr 32°, Acting Grand Master, upon laying the Foundation Stone of St. Paul's Church, Washago, May 24th, 1872."

The Reeve, in presenting, said that he cordially welcomed the Grand Master of Masons of Canada, and felt gratified to think that a Fraternity so generally respected, and a Brother so highly honoured, had seen fit to visit his municipality for the purpose of laying the foundation stone of the first edifice ever erected in Washago to the service of God.

Rt. Wor. Bro. J. K. Kerr briefly responded, and after returning thanks for the present, assured the Reeve of the satisfaction it had given him to be present; and also alluded in complimentary terms to the rapid progress of this section of country, and expressed the hope that as his municipality had the largest acreage in Ontario, so it might on some future day have a population in proportion.

The stone having been lowered, the band playing solemn music during the time, the Acting Grand Master spread the cement, after which, turning to the A. G. Junior Warden, he asked:—

"Bro. G. Jun. Warden, what is the proper jewel for your office?"

G.J.W. "The Plumb Rule." "Have you applied the Plumb Rule to the edges of the stone?"

G.J.W. "I have Most Worshipful Sir, and the Craftsmen have done their duty."

The same question regarding the "level" and "square" were asked, and similar responses given respectively by the G.S.W. and D.G.M.

The Grand Master said:—"Brethren, having full confidence in your skill in our Royal Art, it remains with me now to finish our work. Here he gave three knocks with the gavel, and added:—Well made, well proved, truly laid, true and trusty. And may this undertaking be conducted and completed by the Craftsmen according to the grand plan; in Peace, Harmony, and Brotherly Love."

Corn, Wine, and Oil, were then handed the Grand Master, by the Deputy, who poured each upon the stone, and said:—"I strew corn upon the stone as the emblem of Plenty; I pour wine on it as the emblem of Cheerfulness, and I anoint it with oil as the emblem of Comfort and Consolation."

The Grand Master then pronounced the following benediction:—"May Corn, Wine, and Oil, and all the necessaries of life, abound among men throughout the world; and may the blessing of the Supreme Architect of the Universe be upon this edifice and all connected with it."

General response—"So mote it be."

The Grand Master then inspected the plans, which were presented to him by the Churchwarden, Bro. R. H. Cuzzens, and expressed himself duly satisfied.

The Rev. Bro. Harris then addressed the assemblage, assuring them that although he belonged to the Church of England, he trusted that in Washago, all classes, creeds, and denominations would attend, and he would use his best exertions, with the blessing of God, to inculcate the truths of the Gospel on that broad and universal basis, that would, he trusted, prove the sincerity of his work, so happily commenced here to-day.

Cheers were then given for the Queen and the acting Grand Master, R.W. Bro. J. K. Kerr, after which the procession reformed, and repaired to Mr. Ormsby's, where a capital collation awaited them.

BREAKFAST.—EPPS'S COCOA.—GRATEFUL AND COMFORTING.—"By a thorough knowledge of the natural laws which govern the operations of digestion and nutrition, and by a careful application of the fine properties of well-selected cocoa, Mr. Epps has provided our breakfast tables with a delicately-flavoured beverage which may save us many heavy doctors' bills."—Civil Service Gazette. Made simply with Boiling Water or Milk. Each packet is labelled—"JAMES EPPS & Co., Homoeopathic Chemists, London."

One or two hours soon passed pleasantly by, and after the band had serenaded Mr. and Mrs. Cozzens, who had exerted themselves so much towards the enjoyment of the day, the party again left for Orillia.

Bro. Kerr, on leaving at the new wharf, was heartily cheered, and the brethren, on arriving at Orillia, repaired to their hall, and after some very kind and fraternal remarks from Bro. Harris, the Grand Lodge was closed.

We might add that during the day some seventy dollars were collected for the benefit of the church. The brethren concluded their ceremonies by accepting of the hospitality of Bro. Robert Ross, where they partook of an excellent luncheon.

FREEMASONRY IN WEST AUSTRALIA.

FREMANTLE LODGE (No. 1033).—On Thursday the 7th of May, the brethren of the above lodge met at their lodge room, for the purpose of presenting a Past Master's Jewel to Bro. J. F. Stone, P.M., together with other work mentioned in the summonses.

There were present Bros. D. R. Congdon, W.M.; G. B. Humble, S.W.; G. Pearce, J.W.; L. Henderson, S.D.; S. Duffield, J.D.; J. H. White, Sec.; M. Samson, Treas.; T. Wardle, I.G.; H. Jarvis, O.G.; J. F. Stone, I.P.M.; Jose, P.M., and about twenty-five of the brethren of the lodge.

After the lodge had been opened in due form, the minutes read and passed, the W.M. informed the brethren that so long ago as last June, it was resolved, that in recognition of the services of Bro. J. F. Stone, I.P.M., that a suitable jewel should be procured from England, and presented to him, but owing to the loss of the "Rangoon," the first jewel was lost, hence the apparent delay. In presenting the gift, the Worshipful Master remarked that he had a task to perform which gave him a great deal of pleasure, especially as he knew that the brethren assembled would agree with him in testifying to the kindness, cordiality, and ability ever evinced by their worthy and esteemed Bro. J. F. Stone, P.M., and it is in this shape—the presentation of a Past Master's Jewel—that the brethren have determined upon to show their just appreciation of his services. In delegating him to present this beautiful jewel, he said, that he regretted his want of eloquence; but that eloquence was not wanted to enhance the gift that was obtained, as in the present instance, by the unanimous and hearty good wishes of the brethren. After mentioning at some length, and in very praiseworthy terms, the services rendered to the lodge by Bro. Stone, the W.M. continued:—Bro. John Frederick Stone, in the name and in the presence of the brethren of the Fremantle Lodge; here assembled, I have much pleasure in presenting you with this Past Master's Jewel as a token of your kindness in, and services rendered to this lodge, during your two years of office as W.M., and our united prayer is that T. G. A. O. T. U. may spare you long to wear it. The W.M. here invested our brother with the jewel.

Bro. Stone, in replying, remarked he felt he could not adequately express in words to the brethren the thanks and gratitude he felt at their handsome gift. He was sure that if God should spare his life, in after years he would be enabled to look upon that Jewel with which he had been invested with great pride and pleasure, as it would recall to him the many pleasant hours he had spent in the lodge, in company with his brethren, and more especially would he be enabled to think with pleasure and satisfaction on the meeting there assembled. He said the W.M. had spoken of him in flattering terms, he was sure that what he did for the lodge, it was done with a willing heart, for the love he had for Masonry, and for the benefit of their own lodge in particular; that, unfortunately, for various reasons he had not been so regularly amongst them, since he had ceased to preside over the lodge, yet still he had the best interests of the lodge at heart, and would be always ready to render what assistance he might have in his power. He said he could not refrain from making reference to the past history of the Fremantle Lodge; although it was but a short history, only some five or six years, yet he felt certain that no member could think of the present state of the lodge, as compared to the time to which he alluded, but with feelings of deep satisfaction and congratulation; then, it would be remembered by many, they had not an officer able even to work the lodge, but were entirely dependent upon aid from Perth; and well he remembered his visits in company with Mr. Barber and other members of the Perth Lodge, to the old Stag's Head Inn, where the first lodge was held; but what was their state now. At present they had a very neat and well furnished lodge, and officers who, in the discharge of their duties, he felt proud to say, would compare very favourably with old and long-established lodges in England. In their present W.M., he continued, they had one, who by his perseverance and attention, was enabled to work the various degrees, so that they were now for the first time, since their existence as a lodge, entirely independent. This he felt sure was a source of gratification to all the brethren, and he paid high and well merited encomiums on Bro. Congdon, the W.M., for the work he had performed during his present term of office. Bro. Stone also reviewed the state of the lodge financially, which although in not quite so flourishing a state as it might be, yet it was going on steadily, and its funds were in a sound and healthy condition. Having thus reviewed at some length the history, state, and condition of the lodge, he concluded by again thanking the brethren for their kindness, in presenting him with the handsome token of their good will. It was well, he remarked, to have the good will of our fellow creatures, and it was a great source of gratification to know that the gift with which he had been presented, was the unanimous expression of good will from all the brethren. He hoped the lodge would still continue to prosper, that the officers would still continue to act in their praiseworthy manner, and work together with that love and harmony which should characterize all good masons.

The brethren then saluted Bro. Stone with lodge honours.

After the brethren had returned into lodge from refreshment, the W.M. proceeded with the ceremony of raising Bros. J. Logur and C. Leede to the sublime degree of Master Masons. The ceremony being concluded, the W.M. closed the lodge, with all the rites and forms, in peace and harmony.

The jewel, a neat, chaste, and elegant gold appendage was obtained from Bro. Geo. Kenning, 2, 3, and 4 Little Britain, London, and bore the following inscription, neatly engraved by Mr. Miller, of Perth.

"Presented to Bro. John Fk. Stone by the brethren of the Fremantle Lodge, No. 1033. W. A."

Mutuum in Parbo, or Masonic Notes and Queries.

THE WARDS OF THE LODGE.

The "New York Dispatch" gives the following account of a ceremony, little practised in that country, which recently took place in the Council Chamber of the Masonic Hall, District of Columbia, by the brethren of the Ancient and Accepted Rite, their wives and daughters:

This adoptive ceremony has by some been termed a baptism, but more properly should be considered as preliminary to adoption. It consists, in its immersive form, of the dipping of the hand in water, in token of the purity of the intention, and as a token of innocence consecrated.

The ceremony in this instance was conducted by the Ill. Albert Pike, 33°, Grand Commander of the Southern Supreme Council, who also occupied the same position in 1865 in this city, when over one dozen children were presented for the prayers and protection of the brethren and the blessing of the celebrant.

On other occasions this same service has been performed in our midst in years now gone, and children grown to-day wear the emblems and symbols at those times presented.

As it may be of interest to our readers, we give a synopsis of the ceremonial. The children were an infant son of Dr. Jos. W. Nairn, 32°, and a son of Mr. E. B. MacGrotty, 18°, Mithras Lodge of Perfection, A. and A. Rite. The rite was performed by Thrice Ill. Albert Pike, assisted by Ill. J. O. Sinclair, S.G.W.; J. H. Pike, J.G.W.; C. W. Bennett, Grand Orator; Rev. Mr. Harris, Chaplain. The ceremony has always been celebrated in the Ancient and Accepted order. It has been censured by many as an irreverent imitation of the Christian rite of baptism, but well informed Masons know that purification by washing was used in all the mysteries, thousands of years before our era.

After the assembly had been seated, Grand Master Pike gave a short history of the ceremony, saying that it taught neither hatred, intolerance, nor revenge.

After a voluntary on the organ by Bro. Servoss, a rap was heard at the door, and information given that two children with their parents, desired admission, when the Master directed the Master of Ceremonies and his aids to bring the children, their parents and sponsors, into the lodge. Soon after the Master of Ceremonies returned, followed by one of his assistants bearing a candlestick with three lighted candles—one white, one black, and one red—forming a triangle. Following were two assistants, one carrying the child of Doctor Nairn, Robert Bruce Nairn, upon a cushion covered with light blue silk, the other leading the child of Mr. MacGrotty, Edward Albert MacGrotty; and behind these came the parents of the children and the sponsors. The sponsors for the son of Dr. Nairn were Dr. L. B. Gibbs, 32°, and Caroline E. Davis; for Master MacGrotty, Jerome C. Davis, 32°, and Mrs. M. Walker. After the third circuit of the room the procession halted, the candlestick was placed before the altar, and the children returned to their mothers, who, with the sponsors, took seats in the middle of the room. The Masonic choir then sang

"My soul doth magnify the Lord."

After an oration by the Master, in which he explained the duties and responsibilities which the lodge was about to assume in conferring the rite, he then asked, the fathers:

"Are you willing that we should accept these duties?"

An affirmative response being given, the Master called upon the Chaplain to invoke the favour and assistance of God, which was done, the brethren all kneeling. The choir then sang the ode:

"Rejoice, rejoice fond mothers."

The sponsors then took seats near the parents, when the Master addressed them in relation to the duties they were taking upon themselves.

After an invocation to the Deity, and music, the children, parents, and sponsors were then conducted forward to the altar, on which water, oil, and salt were placed.—The Master then called the lodge up, descended from his throne, and after a few words to the group, lighted the incense on the altar. After a chant by the choir, the Master took the children severally in his arms, dipped their left hands in a basin of perfumed water, and said:

"By this symbol I devote thee—in each case—to the service of virtue and truth. May our Father, who is in Heaven, keep the innocent and pure of heart all the days of thy life."

During this ceremony, the choir sang an appropriate ode. The Master then took the vessel of perfumed oil, dipped the little finger of his right hand therein, and marked it with a delta on the forehead of each child, saying:

"I set upon thy forehead the symbol of wisdom, power and love of God. May he perfect and guide thee in right courses all the days of thy life." The choir singing meanwhile the chant:

"Blessed are the undefiled in the way."

The Master then replaced the vessel on the altar, and stretching out his hands toward the children, invoked a blessing upon them. The godmothers then placed them at the altar of obligation; the brethren present formed in a circle around them, each with his left hand on his heart and his right hand raised toward heaven; all then kneeled and repeated after the Master the solemn vow to protect the children from all danger and temptation till their arrival at maturity. After rising, the Master, taking the vessel of salt in his hand, repeated the Arab vow which sanctifies the enemy with whom he has tasted salt, and placing a portion of the salt on his tongue, said:

"With this salt I seal my vow."

The kersel was then passed to each brother, who in turn repeated the vow. The children were then invested with lambskin aprons.

A GOOD RESOLVE, AND GOOD LAW.

The Grand Lodge of New York recently "Resolved, That while each lodge has a right to select its own material, it is asserted to be un-masonic, unlawful, and a breach of Masonic courtesy, for a lodge to initiate, pass, or raise a candidate, after having been advised by a sister lodge, or by brethren in good standing, that such candidate is unworthy or unfit to be made a Mason."

TOMB OF HIRAM.

From a work entitled "Sinai and Palestine," we extract the following: "The plains of Phœnicia are strewn with distinct fragments of antiquity. One of these is called the tomb of Hiram, and stands inland among wild rocky hills, about three miles from Tyre. It is a single sarcophagus, hollowed out so as just to admit a body. A large oblong stone is placed over it so as completely to cover it, the only entrance being an aperture at its eastern extremity. The whole rests upon a rude pedestal of upright hewn stones."

Masonic Tidings.

BRITISH, FOREIGN, AND COLONIAL.

AMERICA.

The Grand Lodge of New Jersey is said to have permitted Alpha Lodge to resume the making of colored Masons. The St. Louis Freemason thinks the Grand Lodge of New Jersey may find itself cut off from Masonic intercourse with other States on that account. The Grand Master had arrested the charter of this lodge, but it was restored at the recent session of the Grand Lodge, by a close vote.

Scottish Rite Masonry, is said to be making considerable progress on the Pacific coast. During the months of March and April fifteen lodges representing that branch of Masonry were organized in Puget Sound.

FRANCE.

By a decree, dated 11th May, 1872, the Grand Orient of Paris extends fraternal recognition to the Grand Lodge of Canada, and has named W. Bro. Thomas White, Deputy Grand Master of Canada, as its representative near that Grand Lodge. A similar recognition has been extended to the Grand Lodge of Nova Scotia, near which Grand Lodge Bro. Benjamin Currier, Grand Secretary, has been appointed representative.

A revival of Freemasonry seems to have commenced in France. The Grand Orient has recently granted warrants to the following new lodges, which have been duly consecrated and dedicated:—

- "La Reveil du Parfait Silence," Orient of Sisterton;
- "L'Union de Belleville," Orient of Paris.
- "La Sagesse," Orient of Barcelona (Spain);
- "Zur Arbeit," Orient of Pesth (Hungary);
- and
- "Egalite," Orient of Bucharest (Roumania).

The Bulletin Officiel of the Grand Orient of France, publishes a list of lodges which have contributed to the Fund for the Liberation of the French Territory. Forty-six lodges contribute 35,476 francs, and three lodges subscribe conditionally the sum of 55,615 francs, making a total of 91,093 francs.

A comedy, called "Les Franc-Maçons," has been produced at Nice. It is the production of Bros. Ch. and Aug. Beaumont. The Journal de Nice describes it as an elegant defence of an order which is condemned by those who are ignorant of its principles, and states that the public has done full justice to the false and malevolent misrepresentations of which Freemasonry is so frequently the object. The brethren have not forgotten that Bros. Beaumont have produced a work unique of its kind. It has just been played at Nice with great success, thanks, mainly, to the zeal of the principal actor, Bro. Bouyer, who is equally an excellent dramatic artist and a good Freemason.

SPAIN.

The Supreme Council of the 33° Grand Orient of Spain, has summoned a Congress of all the Spanish Masonic bodies, at Madrid, on the 6th of July, to have read, and if approved, to promulgate the new constitutions which are to rule the Spanish Freemasons, under only one authority, as agreed beforehand. We will note the action of the great Masonic body of Freemasons governed by the Supreme Council of the 33° grade of Spain, on the important subject of the new constitutions, and advise our readers in due time thereof.

TURKEY.

At a meeting of the District Grand Lodge of Turkey, held June 16th, the V.W. Bro. Thompson, D. Dist. G.M., presiding, it was agreed that the name of Halim Pasha of Egypt should be recommended to the Grand Master of England as District Grand Master, in succession to the deceased R.W. Bro. J. P. Brown. An amendment for postponing the choice, in the hope that an English-speaking brother of suitably high position might be found for the office, was lost by a majority of 9 to 7. The appointment rests entirely in the hands of the Grand Master of the Order, the Marquis of Ripon; but in the case of remote provinces it is usual to consult the wishes of the brethren respecting the filling up of so exalted and important an office in the craft. Halim Pasha is already District Grand Master for Egypt, but has not discharged any duties for some years past owing to his absence from that country.—Levant Times.

HONOLULU.

Our Masonic brethren of Honolulu, Hawaiian Islands, at the request of His Hawaiian Majesty's government, lately laid the corner stone of the new government building, designed for a Legislative Hall and for government offices. The Hawaiian government recognizing the ancient and time-honoured custom of calling upon the Ancient Order of Free and Accepted Masons to perform the ceremonies of laying the corner stone of a public edifice, extending that invitation to the Lodges of Honolulu, which invitation was accepted, and performed with all the imposing ceremonies of the ancient Craft. The Mechanics' Union, Good Templars, Knights of Pythias and Independent Order of Odd Fellows joined in the procession. There were deposited in the casket, with other articles, the list of members of the lately organized Commandery of K. T., by-laws and lists of members of Honolulu Chapter, R.A.M.; by-laws and lists of members of Le Progres Lodge, No. 24, and Hawaiian Lodge No. 21, F. and A.M.; constitution, regulations and proceedings of 1871, of the Grand Lodge of California. Everything was conducted with success, and the occasion was enjoyed as a grand holiday by the people generally.

"I had been laid up several days in Birmingham with diarrhoea, accompanied by intense pain, when a fellow-traveller recommended to me so urgently to use your Vegetable Pain Killer for it that I tried it, and got almost instant and permanent relief, and I can now recommend it as strongly to any so afflicted.—Hy. J. ROBERT (Clement & Co.), Euston-on-Trent, Nov., 1868.—To Perry, D.D., & Son."

THE GOOD TEMPLARS.

The Independent Order of Good Templars was instituted in the state of New York in the year 1851. It is a temperance society, carefully and completely organized, and is not intended to rival or supplant any existing temperance organisation, but is the willing assistant of them all. This order was introduced into England on the 8th of September, 1868, having now a Grand Lodge, and more than 1,000 subordinate lodges, numbering upwards of 80,000 members. On the 13th August, 1869, the first lodge was formed in Scotland, where over 700 lodges have been opened, numbering more than 70,000 members. In October, 1870, the order was established in Ireland, and is making rapid progress there; and in Wales thousands have been enrolled. The policy of the order is:—1. No licence in any form to sell intoxicating liquor as a beverage. 2. Absolute prohibition of the manufacture, importation, and sale of such liquor, to be used as a beverage. Prohibition by the will of the people, expressed in due form of law, with the necessary penalties for such a crime. 3. Active dissemination of temperance truth in all modes known to enlightened philanthropy. 4. Election of good, honest men to make and administer the laws. 5. Persistent efforts to save individuals and the communities from the scourge of drunkenness, against all forms of opposition and difficulties, until success is complete and universal. The object of Good Templarism is to reclaim the fallen, save the young and sober from falling into the snares laid around them, and to increase, strengthen, and improve, by all judicious means, the moral and social tastes and habits of the members. The order is open to males and females of every creed, country, or colour, if they believe in Almighty God, and will abstain from all intoxicants. In America and the British Colonies the order numbers 500,000; in England, Ireland, and Scotland, between 160,000 and 170,000, and is said to be increasing daily.

SALMON FISHING.—A careful cast over the likely spot—no rise. Another and another, and still nothing stirring. Another—ha! a silvery gleam in the water, and a plunge as, either from your nervous haste or his own excess of eagerness, the salmon missed your fly. Back from the river bank and out with your fly-book, to select a fly of the same make as that at which he rose, only a size smaller. Ten minutes' time passed by your watch, and now for a throw over him again. A cast—no rise; a second—splash, whir-r-r; he has it; and he is a "bouncer!" One rush to the bottom; a dash to the opposite bank; another to the bank next you. Back quick! or he will slack your line. Another rush to the opposite bank, and up into the air, a somersault of five feet high. Hold him gently, or you are done for. Steady, and perhaps the hook, if resting on a bone, will fix itself firmer. Splash, plunge, whir-r! down he goes to the bottom, and you may be sure he is now well hooked that he has only shortened his lease of life five minutes by his extra activity. Steady now, for he is gathering his strength for a rush. There he goes; give him line up stream, down stream, across stream. He is tiring fast. There! he showed his side on the top of the water; reel on him gently, and show him the butt. Bring the gaff. Now you have him on the bank a real beauty, and twelve pounds if he is an ounce.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS—Exercise most wonderful power in promoting appetite, improving digestion, regulating the bowels, and removing nervousness and debility. The weakest will take no harm from the use of this alterative and tonic medicine, but will gradually regain their health. The strongest will preserve themselves from many of the mishaps, their boasted strength and fearlessness of results often betray them. Long suffering invalids may look toward this rectifying and revivifying medicine, with the certain hope of having their maladies mitigated if not removed by their means. In short, for all ages, circumstances, and conditions, Holloway points out the treatment which is competent to check the progress of disorders in, and extract its seeds from the human frame.

NOTICE.

The Subscription to THE FREEMASON is now 10s. per annum, post-free, payable in advance.

Vol. I., bound in cloth	4s. 6d.
Vol. II., ditto	7s. 6d.
Vol. III., ditto	15s. od.
Vol. IV., ditto	15s. od.
Reading Cases to hold 52 numbers ...	2s. 6d.

United States of America.

THE FREEMASON is delivered free in any part of the United States for 12s. per annum, payable in advance.

NOTICE TO SUBSCRIBERS.

The Office of THE FREEMASON is now transferred to 198, FLEET-STREET, E.C. All communications for the Editor or Publisher should therefore be forwarded to that address.

Answers to Correspondents.

All communications for The Freemason should be written legibly on one side of the paper only, and, if intended for insertion in the current number, must be received not later than 10 o'clock a.m. on Thursdays, unless in very special cases. The name and address of every writer must be sent to us in confidence.

The Freemason,

SATURDAY, JULY 27, 1872.

The Freemason is published on Saturday Mornings in time for the early trains.
The price of the Freemason is Twopence per week; annual subscription, 10s. (payable in advance.)
All communications, letters, &c., to be addressed to the Editor, 198, Fleet-street, E.C.
The Editor will pay careful attention to all MSS. entrusted to him, but cannot undertake to return them unless accompanied by postage stamps.

AIDS TO STUDY.

BY BRO. WM. CARPENTER P.M. & P.Z. 717.

XI.

Of what is called the Old Assyrian Empire, we know, as I have already suggested, absolutely nothing. Fables we have, but these will not satisfy the enquiring mind. The accounts handed down to us by Diodorus, Tragus, Justin, Castor, Eusebius, and others, are so absurd and contradictory, that we cannot possibly give them our assent. This is easily accounted for, as the whole of their information is known to have been derived from Ctesias, who was noted as an arrant fabulist. Who can believe that soon after the flood Ninus led to battle millions of men, that Semiramis, at the age of twenty, performed the exploits he ascribes to her; could employ two millions of men in building cities, and could procure three hundred thousand skins of black oxen, to dress her camels in the form of elephants?

But these were mere trifles, for, as Strabo says, nearly every great work in every part of Asia was ascribed to her; her edifices found their limit only at the bounds of the habitable world, on the frontiers of Scythia, and there it is said that Alexander saw her own record of her deeds: "Nature gave me the form of a woman, but my deeds have equalled those of the bravest of men. I ruled the empire of Ninus, which, on the east, touches the river Hinaman (Indus), on the south, the land of frankincense and myrrh (Arabia Felix), on the north, the Sacæ and the Sogdians. Before me no Assyrian beheld the seas. I looked upon four so remote that none had reached them. I formed rivers to run where I wished, and I only wished it in places where they were useful. I made the barren soil fruitful, by watering it with my rivers. I raised impregnable fortresses. I pierced roads with iron across impracticable rocks. My chariots have rolled in roads where the wild beasts had formed no path. And in the midst of all my labours I found time for pleasure and for love."

After having achieved all these wonders, and resigned the crown to her son Ninyas, she disappeared in the form of a dove, and was worshipped as a goddess. She thus maintained her place in the Babylonian mythology; for she was the daughter of the great goddess of Ascalon, Dercete, and became the wife of Oannes, who was the fish-god noticed in a former paper.

But apart from these absurd legends, the boundaries which Ctesias assigns to the Assyrian empire are incompatible with the extent of other nations at that period. In the time of Abraham we find Chedolaomer and his three allies possessing distinct kingdoms on the frontiers of Assyria, without the least indication of dependence on that empire (Gen. xiv. 1), when, according to Ctesias, his country must have formed a part of it. In the days of the Judges we hear of a powerful kingdom in Mesopotamia, on the west of Assyria (Judges iii. 8—11).

It has to be added, that, so late as the time of David, the Hebrew monarchy extended its conquests over a great part of the country on the side of the Euphrates, and that Benhadad and Hazael governed Syria as an independent State. As Sir Isaac Newton has observed ("Chron. of Anc. Kingdoms," ch. iii.) the kingdom formed by Nimrod, which was probably extended into Assyria, was but of small extent, being only within the fertile plains of Chaldea, Chalonitis, and Assyria, watered by the Tigris and the Euphrates. After the days of Nimrod, we hear no more of the Assyrian Empire till the days of Pul (B.C. 790). The four kings who invaded the southern coast of Canaan came from the countries where Nimrod had reigned, and were probably some of his posterity, who had shared his conquests.

The Kingdoms of Israel, Moab, Ammon, Edom, Philistia, Zidon, Damascus, and Hamath the Great, continued, subject to other lords than the Assyrians, till the days of Pul and his successors; and so did the house of Eden (Amos i. 5; 2 Ki. xix. 12), and Havan (Gen. xii. 3; 2 Ki. xix. 12), and Sepharvaim in Mesopotamia, and Calneh, near Bagdad (Gen. x. 10; Isa. x. 9; 2 Ki. xvii. 31).

While thus adverting to the early history of Assyria and Babylon, and the myths and fables in which such writers as Ctesias have indulged, I cannot help feeling the incomparable value of the sacred writings, as a record of history, independently of their containing a revelation of Divine truth. As a record of historical facts, they purport to notice foreign states only so far as they are connected in any way with the history of the chosen people; but these incidental notices, even the briefest of them, are of infinite value to the student. They furnish a clue to many facts which could not have been understood without their assistance. They serve to correct other historians, and in every instance in which the sacred writings and general history come into contact, they are to it what the chronometer is to the common watch—they measure the same period, but with superior precision; they relate the same events, but with greater accuracy. Still further, as the floating traditions of the heathen would bear upon the facts recorded in the Scriptures; so, by a reaction, sacred history develops the hidden import of many an ancient institution, the intention of which was not comprehended by those who lived under it, and which could not be otherwise understood. And it gives consistency and reality to the traditions of antiquity. It brings distant occurrences to bear upon each other; it discloses political interests, jarring among themselves, all tending to the harmony of the universe, and the amelioration of the human race. It supplies, in short, to time what gravity is to space—the principle which holds and draws all things together.

The proper home of the early Assyrians, then, as Smith observes, is marked by the four cities which are connected with the name of Asshur, in the Book of Genesis—Nineveh, Rehoboth, Calah, and the "Great City" of Resen, between Nineveh and Calah." (Gen. x. 11, 12.)

Of these, Rehoboth is unknown, and is thought by some to have been, not a city, but as in the margin of our Bible, the "streets of the city," i.e., of Nineveh. Calah is very probably identified with the large ruins of Nimrod, and Resen with those at Seamiyer; but the certain identification of Nineveh with the mounds opposite Mosul is enough to indicate the region, which, down to the latest period of ancient history, preserved the name of Aturia; the interchange of t with sh being very common in those regions. Conversely, Tyrus is now Sur.

Sir Isaac Newton and many others, who take the Scripture History as the only authentic one of these early times, ascribe the foundation of the great monarchy of Assyria to Pul or Phul, about twenty-four years before the æra of Nabonassar, 1579 years after the flood, and, according to Blair, 709, or according to Newton, 790.

Menahem having taken forcible possession of the throne of Israel, by the murder of Shallum, (2 Ki. xv. 10.), was attacked by Pul, but prevented the hostilities meditated against him by presenting the invader with a thousand talents of silver. Pul, thus gratified, took the Kingdom of Israel under his protection, returned to his own country, after having received voluntary homage from several nations in his march, as he had done from Israel, and became the founder of the great empire.

As it was in the days of Pul that the Assyrians began to attack the inhabitants of Palestine. (2 Ki. xi. 9, 1. Chron. v. 26), this was the time, according to Sir Isaac Newton, when the great Assyrian empire arose. Thus he interprets the words, "since the time of the Kings of Assyria" (Neh. ix. 32); that is, since the time of the Kingdom of Assyria; or since the rise of the empire.

GRAND LODGE OF MARK MASTERS.

The annual festival, in aid of the Benevolent Fund attached to the Mark degree, was celebrated at the Talbot Hotel, Richmond, on Wednesday last, great encomiums being expressed upon the manner with which the proprietor of the hotel had prepared a most recherché banquet.

The tables were decorated with the choicest flowers, the wines and dessert were of first class merit, and reflected great credit upon the caterer. The meeting altogether presented a favourable appearance, being graced with the presence of the sisterhood.

Bro. Col. Burdett presided over the meeting, and there were also present, Bros. F. Binckes, G.S. and P.C.J.W.; Captain Burgess, G. Reg.; Rev. B. W. Church, G.C.; Lieut. Col. Birchall, P.G.J.W.; G. Neale, G. Sup. Works; J. H. Wynne, Esq., P.G.I.G.; J. Read, G. Reg.; A. Williams, 104, G.S.; S. Funkenztein, 22, G.S.; H. W. Binckes, G.S.; H. Massey, P.G.S.; W. Roebuck, &c., Kent; T. Forshaw, 113.

The musical engagements were under the direction of Bro. John Read, P.G.Org., and who was ably assisted by Madame Wells, (Soprano); Bros. De Lacey, of St. Paul's Cathedral; Hodges, Gent. of the Chapel Royal; C. S. Jekyll, of Westminster Abbey. The following were among the several vocal renderings, Grace, "Deum Laudate," "The Queen," "Esmeralda," "Will o' the Wisp," past song, "How merrily welive," "Sing, sweet Bird," charmingly sung by Madame Wells, "The Lass o' Richmond Hill," the popular "Mynheer Van Dunk," "Sally Sally," by Mr. Hodges, with other selections.

After the first toast "The Queen," which was received with its accustomed pleasure and loyalty, the presiding brother said that the next toast was that of the "Prince and Princess of Wales." It was evident that throughout the English nation he was beloved, even a recent demonstration exhibited much loyalty and feeling towards his Royal Highness, who, in God's providence had been preserved through a great and serious illness, and he doubted not but that the toast would be drunk with fervour and enthusiasm. (Cheers.)

The toast of the "Grand Officers" was coupled with the names of Bros. Col. Birchall, Binckes, sen., Binckes, jun., Rosenthal, Church, and Burgess, who although standing high in social life had not neglected their duties.

Regret was expressed at the absence of Lord Limerick, all being aware of the manner in which he attended to the duties of Mark Masonry.

Bro. Col. Birchall acknowledged with feeling the allusion made to himself and Bros., and unaffectedly thanked the brethren, and regretted the absence of the noble earl who was at the head of the toast. It was not a proper occasion to enlarge upon the merits of the charities connected with Mark Masonry, as "charity vaunteth not itself."

Bro. Rosenthal made humorous allusions to the chairman coming "over from Ireland," but now in Masonic business you might see him everywhere; he was the right man in the right place, and could never have secured the various honours he had, if they had not been merited. He had no desire for flattering any brother, but was pleased to propose the health of Bro. Col. Burdett.

The presiding brother stated that unaccustomed as he was to speak, it was a great happiness to be supported on either side by one of the fairer sex, but he regretted the P.G.M. designate of Devonshire was incapacitated attending, owing to the severe weather. As to the present meeting it was for the consideration of the funds for the "Aged and Distressed Mark Masons, the Boys', Girls', and other Institutions." After speaking upon their individual merits, he was glad to add that a good fund already existed. These charities were not only for Mark Masters, but for the benefit of their wives and families, and who are, through this, united in one bond. He should therefore propose "Success to the funds of Benevolence in connection with the Mark Masters' Degree."

The Grand Sec., Bro. Binckes, made some allusion to the charities in connection with this special degree, he was pleased to state the liberality of Lord and Bro. Bective, who had liberally subscribed, through letter to him, for the Benevolent fund the handsome sum of £50, which together with other liberal donations, was now a total of £163 7s.

Great regret was manifested at the unavoidable absence of Rev. Bro. J. R. Portal, P.G.M., who always evinced every feeling of kindness.

Thanks were expressed to the singers.

The toast of "The Press" was acknowledged by Bro. Henry Massey, Era and Bro. E. T. Barling, Freemason.

The toast of "The Ladies," terminated a most agreeable meeting.

REPORTS OF MASONIC MEETINGS.

Craft Masonry.

DORSETSHIRE.

SHERBORNE.—Lodge of Benevolence (No. 1168).—The installation of the W.M., Bro. the Rev. George Thompson, M.A., took place on Monday last. The ceremony was performed by Bro. F. H. Woodforde, Esq., M.D., P.M. Lodge 261, and P.P.G.S.W. Somerset, after which the W.M. invested his officers for the ensuing year as follows:—Bros. W. S. Gibbard, P.M.; R. G. Long, S.W.; John Cole, J.W.; Rev. E. W. Gooden, Chaplain; S. W. Woodward, Treas.; George F. Stokes, Sec.; J. Rumsey, Org.; C. E. Benthall, Dir. of Cers.; T. D. Davis, S.D.; B. King, J.D.; T. W. Robinson, I.G.; S. G.; Smith, W. Croad, Stewards; J. Himbury, Tyler. The brethren afterwards attended a banquet at the Digby Hotel, which was served up in excellent style by the manager, Mr. A. W. B. Clarke, and was presided over by the respected W.M., who was supported by the principal officers of the lodge, and several visiting brethren from the Yeovil, Shaftesbury, Blandford, and other lodges. Some excellent songs were sung by Bros. Stokes, Lang, Robinson, and Cross, and a very pleasant afternoon was spent.

DURHAM.

ANNUAL PIC-NIC OF THE FREEMASONS OF SUNDERLAND.—The Freemasons of Sunderland had their fifth annual pic-nic on Thursday the 18th, the place this year being Duncombe Park, Helmsley, in the North Riding of Yorkshire. A special train containing nearly 300 passengers left Sunderland at half-past six o'clock in the morning, and arrived at Helmsley shortly after ten o'clock. After leaving the main line of the North Eastern Railway at Pilmoor Junction the line traverses some of the finest scenery in England. On leaving the railway station at Helmsley the tower of the old castle, surrounded by hanging woods, is the first object that attracts attention. Ryedale, in which the little market-town of Helmsley is situated, is a pretty and well-wooded valley, and the town itself seems almost buried amongst trees. Small though Helmsley is, it can boast of a handsome monument erected to the memory of the late Earl of Feversham, a spacious market-place, and a beautiful church. Two miles distant are the ruins of Rievaulx Abbey. Running due north and south, and overlooking the ruins at an elevation of some hundred feet, is a fine natural terrace half a mile in length, with a temple at each end, the one at the northern extremity having a finely painted ceiling. From this terrace seven valleys can be counted, all converging at the foot in the valley in which the abbey stands. Descending the hill by a circuitous route we reach the abbey, the ruins of which are extensive and in a good state of preservation. Wending our way along a romantic valley towards Helmsley, we pass through the park, and near the residence of the Earl of Feversham. From the "Home Terrace," in front of the mansion, some lovely bits of sylvan scenery open out to the eye. The park extends to the town, and just within the entrance are the ruins of Helmsley castle, once the residence of the famous Duke of Buckingham, who played such a conspicuous part at the court of the Second Charles. At mid-day the whole party sat down to a very excellent and substantial lunch (provided by the genial host of the Black Swan, at Helmsley, Mr. Wright), in a tent within the ruins of the old castle. The chair was occupied by the Chairman of the Pic-nic Committee, Bro. J. H. Coates, W.M. of the Williamson Lodge, No. 941, and the vice-chairs by Bros. J. J. Clay, W.M. 97, J. Wilson, W.M. 80, and G. Wandless, W.M. 949. Very little time was spent in toast giving, all being anxious to see more of the beauties of nature, or trip the light fantastic toe on the green sward. Dancing was led off by the ever courteous M.C., Bro. W. H. Crookes, Prov. G. Sec. (Durham), and Mrs. Coates, and was kept up with great spirit until it was time to make a move homewards. A very enjoyable day was spent by every one. The Earl of Feversham handsomely threw open his grounds, and his agent, Bro. Maclaughlin, did everything he could to gratify the visitors. The luncheon and tea provided by Mr. Wright, of the Black Swan, Hotel-street, Helmsley, were both excellent and substantial, and deserve great praise; and now that the locomotive has opened out this charming spot to general visitors, doubtless large numbers will, as its beauties become more known, visit this romantic little place. We are certain every one will find themselves amply repaid for turning out of the beaten track into the pleasant little valley of the Rye.

LANCASHIRE (WEST).

LIVERPOOL.—Summer Fête of the Neptune Lodge (No. 1264).—On Wednesday, the 17th inst., the brethren of the Neptune Lodge, No. 1264, with their fair friends, held their annual summer festival, which proved in every respect a truly social gathering. The morning looked black and thundery, but gloomy looks did not prevent a large contingent of the party from starting from Lime-street station about ten o'clock for the Victoria Gardens, Thatto Heath, where they were met by the band of the Engineer Corps, St. Helen's, which furnished the whole of the music during the day. A second portion of the pic-nickers started shortly before one o'clock, and they, in turn, were also met on their arrival by the band, and marched to the scene of the day's festivities amidst the general wonderment of the natives, who turned out in great force. The village was en fête, and the gardens gay with flags of all sorts and sizes, numbering upwards of 100, including a full set of Marryatt's signals, kindly lent by Bros. Captains P. S. Wilson, 1264; and E. T. Jones, of the Dublin Steam Packet Company. The scene was of the liveliest description, and as the W.M., P.M.'s, officers, and brethren of the Neptune spared no effort to make every one happy, and acted with the greatest courtesy and disinterested kindness towards every one, there was nothing whatever to detract from the full enjoyment of the

"out." Even the weather threw off its gloomy morning look, and smiled pleasantly on the "happy family." The lodge has only been about three years in existence, but its infancy has been so manly and sturdy that it already numbers about 160 brethren of good standing. An evidence of the Neptune's prosperity was given by the presence of no fewer than 150 ladies and brethren at the picnic, being even more than that which was expected by the principals, but for whom ample provision and accommodation were found. The officers of the lodge present were Bros. P. Berriman Gee, W.M.; J. Taylor, I.P.M.; J. Healing, P.M., Treas.; J. Pemberton, Sec.; H. Williams, P.M.; A. Davies, S.W.; J. S. Dixon, J.W.; T. Singleton, S.D.; Captain Roberts, J.D.; A. Gray, I.C.; G. Leighton, Org.; T. Josephs, M.C.; and Cotter and Royle, Stewards. Amongst the visitors were Bros. G. Morgan, W.M. 1035; H. Pearson, P.M. 249; Fozzard, P.M. 1035; C. Leedham, P.M. 220; Larson, P.M. 594; W. Nash, I.G. 823; J. Wood, Treas. 1094; Jos. Ball, Sec. 673, &c. As a pleasant preliminary to the day's proceedings, a number of excellent photographs of the party—one of the general company another of the officers of the lodge, &c., were taken by Bro. Burrows, I.G. No. 673. The whole company sat down to an excellent dinner provided by "the Mayor of Thatto Heath" (Mr. C. Wittle) in the large permanent marquee attached to the grounds. After the repast, the W.M. proposed the toasts of "The Queen" and "The Ladies" in eloquent terms. The latter toast was responded to in a happy manner by Bro. P.M. Healing, who said he had always thought that the fair sex should partake more largely of these Masonic social entertainments. They had frequently to sit till a late hour for their husbands coming home from the duties of the lodge, and the least that could be done was to invite them to social gatherings like that, so that they might enjoy themselves. (Hear, hear.) Bro. Taylor, I.P.M., in proposing the health of "The Worshipful Master," referred to the zeal and courtesy which had marked the career of Bro. Gee in the different offices which he had filled. The W.M. thanked the brethren and ladies for the cordial manner in which the toast had been responded to, and assured them he had always striven to perform whatever duties he was called upon to do to the best of his ability. The toast of "The Visiting Brethren," proposed in the happiest terms by the W.M., was responded to by Bro. J. B. MacKenzie. The "P.M.'s and officers of the Neptune Lodge" given by the W.M., was acknowledged by Bro. Davies, S.W. Tea was subsequently provided for the ladies, and a very pleasant afternoon was spent by the "outers" in the usual picnic fashion. Bro. J. Abrahams contributed in a large degree to the hilarity of the company by his "Waxwork" and other contributions. The company returned to town at a comparatively early hour, the station at the return start being a scene of the greatest excitement amongst the villagers, who gave their visitors a hearty parting cheer.

LIVERPOOL.—Pic-nic of the Prince of Wales's Lodge (No. 1035).—The annual run into the country taken by the brethren of this lodge has hitherto been highly enjoyable and successful, but this year's excursion, which took place on Tuesday, the 16th inst., will certainly be reckoned the most pleasant of the series. The place chosen was Thatto Heath, one of the charming stations on the new line to St. Helen's, and is but a half hour's journey from Lime-street, Liverpool, from whence a merry lot of Masons, with their wives, daughters, and sweethearts, started shortly before one o'clock. The weather was as favourable as the most exacting could have desired, the heat of the bright sunshine being tempered by a genial breeze; and as true Masonic courtesy and friendship marked the whole of the day's proceedings, there was not a single hitch during the whole of the long summer afternoon. The arrangements were principally made by Bro. Fozzard, P.M. of the Prince of Wales, and as these were admirable and complete, he deserves particular mention and praise. The party numbered about 100, and on their arrival at Thatto Heath they proceeded at once to the Victoria Gardens, where all set about finding congenial amusement until the banquetting hour. Some roamed about the charming grounds, at present in their full summer beauty—some engaged in the merry dance, to the strains of Mr. Moore's quadrille band, while a number of the "lords" played a friendly game of bowls. The officers of the lodge present during the day were—Bros. G. Morgan, W.M.; Turley, I.P.M.; Fozzard, Newall, and Williams, P.M.'s.; Bunting, P.M., Treas.; W. J. Bilsborough, J.W.; R. W. Crosby, D.; J. Salmon, I.G.; and amongst the invited were Bros. P. B. Gee, W.M. 1264; S. E. Ibbs, P.M. 1356; J. Hocken, P.M.; J. Healing, P.M. 1264; J. Pemberton, P.M.; H. Nelson, P.M. 673; H. Scott, J.W. 86; G. Walmsley, 292, besides a number of brethren connected with other lodges. An excellent dinner was served by Mr. C. Wittle, landlord of the gardens, and after full justice had been done to the creature comforts, the W.M., in brief but pointed terms, gave the toasts of "The Queen" and "The Ladies," that of "The Worshipful Master" being proposed by Bro. Fozzard, P.M. As the day was bright and inviting, little time was spent over the dinner table, but the whole party made tracks for a large field in the immediate neighbourhood, where a variety of amusements were carried on. Racing, football, croquet, dancing, &c., were amongst the pleasant afternoon sports, after which the party returned to the gardens for tea. Dancing, bowls, and other games filled up the time until the hour of departure, when the whole party started for town, arriving shortly before eleven o'clock.

LIVERPOOL.—Everton Lodge (No. 823).—The brethren of this strong and influential lodge met for the performance of their masonic duties on Wednesday evening, the 17th inst, at the Masonic Temple, Hope-street, there being no less than 120 brethren present. The principal business was the installation of Bro. Joseph Holland, W.M. elect, and the large attendance of visiting brethren showed the esteem in which he is held by all ranks of the masonic brotherhood in and around Liverpool. The lodge was duly opened at half-past five o'clock by Bro. T. D. Pearce, W.M., supported by the following officers:—Bros. S. Haynes, I.P.M.; G. Turner, P.M.; J. Jackson, P.M.; J. Holland, S.W.; W. Boulton, J.W.; W. J. Lunt, P.M., Treas.; J. Sharpe, Sec.; W. Cottrell, S.D.; T. Shaw, J.D.; T. Ashmore, P.M., D.C.; W. Wilson, I.G.; A. T. Lowe, S.S.; and W. H. Ball, T. Amongst the members of the lodge present were Bros. R. Roberts, J. Duncan, jun.; H. Ashmore, D. Service, E. Morgan, J. Brooksbank, J. Marshall, W. T. Johnson, E. H. J. Benedict, G. Lowe, C. Tyrer, H. M. Molyneux, S. Millikin, G. Farmer, J. Boyle, H. Hall, L. Bagwell, R. Warriner, W. Oldham, W. G. Veale, F. Tuft, G. W. Oglesby, E. Kelly, W. Davies, J. Hamer, P.P.G. Treas.; J. Houlding, C. Chester, E. Jones, F. J. Bell, J. Goodman, S. Campbell, D. Callow, J. Bishop, R. Casson, J. Garratt, W. Atherton, W. Houlding, T. Webster, W. H. Allan, J. Banning, P.M.; T. Bloomfield, J. White, J. S. Cuthbert, W. Summers, R. Corlett, A. Pennell, T. Evans, A. Strother, W. H. Cooper, J. Marsh, J. Podmore, R. Cox, C. C. Medcalf, S. R. Wilde, W. S. Edmunds, E. H. Bryson, J. R. Dixon, J. Davies, I. W. Robinson, W. H. Clemmey, J. W. Coates, J. B. Jeffrey, S. K. Jones, J. W. C. Brown-Cave, &c. There was also a large and highly distinguished attendance of visitors, amongst whom were Bros. A. C. Mott, P.M., P.P.G.D.; T. Armstrong, P.M., P.G. Treas.; J. Skeaf, P.M. 220., P.G.O.; G. Broadbridge, P.G.D.C.; Edwin Hughes, W.M. 249; J. T. Callow, W.M. 673; C. H. Hill, P.M. 724; J. Busfield, Org. 1299; W. Wilson, 203; T. Dilcock, 594; H. Ridehalgh, 249; T. Yateman, 667; J. Robinson, 667; J. Macmulldrew, J.W. 1269; A. Bentley, I. Honeywood, 249; J. W. Kellett, 721; R. H. D. Johnson, P.M. 249, 1094; G. Fowler, 216; F. G. Barker, 241; T. Evans, 1023; T. J. Hughes, 216; H. Nelson, P.M. 673; Thos. Jones, 241; and J. Stevenson. After the minutes had been read and confirmed, Bro. Holland was presented for installation by Bros. Pierce and A. C. Mott, and the ceremony was performed by Bro. S. Haynes, P.M., in a manner which elicited the admiration and attention of the whole assembled body of Masons. A board of Installed Masters was subsequently held, and after the brethren had been re-admitted and the usual three-degrees' salutations given to the newly chaired W.M., the following brethren were invested:—Bros. T. D. Pierce, I.P.M.; W. Boulton, S.W.; J. Sharpe, J.W.; W. J. Lunt, P.M., Treas.; W. Cottrell, Sec.; T. Shaw, S.D.; W. Wilson, J.D.; A. T. Lowe, I.G.; J. Houlding, H. Ashmore and J. Goodman, Stewards; T. Ashmore, P.M., D.C.; and W. G. Veale, Org. Bro. W. H. Ball was unanimously re-elected Tyler of the lodge. The musical portion of the ceremony was rendered in a highly effective style by Bros. Hughes, Evans, Busfield, and Yateman, Bro. Skeaf presiding at the organ, and the introduction of the fine anthem, "Behold how Good," adding considerably to the solemnity of the ceremony. Two candidates were subsequently initiated by the newly installed W.M. in a manner which shows he is an efficient Mason, and likely to be a valuable Master of the Everton. Bro. Haynes announced the commencement of the building of the new Masonic Hall, and stated that the Everton Lodge stood second in the province in the amount of their contributions to the building fund, having given £20 beyond the £200 which was promised. Bro. W. J. Lunt, after a long and exhaustive speech, in the course of which he referred to the valuable services rendered by Bro. Pierce, I.P.M., during his year of office, presented him with a valuable time-piece and jewel, in acknowledgment of the good work he had done. After Bro. Pierce had replied in suitable terms, the lodge was duly closed, and upwards of 100 brethren sat down to an excellent banquet, at which the usual loyal, masonic, and complimentary toasts were proposed and cordially responded to. Pleasant harmony was contributed by Bros. Veale, Hughes, Yateman, Wilson, &c., Bro. Skeaf presiding at the organ. On the following (Thursday) morning upwards of 200 ladies and brethren left the landing stage, crossed the river, and proceeded by railway to Frodsham. Upon arriving there (by the kind permission of the rector), the large party entered and inspected the ancient parish church, and sung the Hundredth Psalm, after which they wended their way up the hill to the grounds of Mr. Rigby, Bellefont, where a most substantial lunch had been provided, to which the party sat down and did ample justice. An admirable photograph of the whole company was taken by Bro. Burrows, of Islington, Liverpool; after which a large number betook themselves to the merry dance, and equally merry games which were provided for them, while others rambled over the hill and headlands to view the lovely scenery of the neighbourhood. The wanderers, gamblers, and dancers afterwards returned to tea, which was laid out in splendid style by Mrs. Rigby. The remainder of the evening was spent in various amusements, and the party left Frodsham at a quarter past eight o'clock, arriving in Liverpool at ten o'clock, highly delighted with the day's pleasure.

LIVERPOOL.—Fermor-Hesketh Lodge (No. 1350).—The installation of the W.M. elect of this excellent lodge (Bro. Dr. James Ridley), took place on Friday evening last, at the Masonic Hall, Hope-street, the meeting being attended by a large and influential gathering of the Craft. Bro. J. Higson Johnston presided at the opening, and after the transaction of some formal business, he presented the W.M. elect for installation to Bro. T. K. Hughes, who performed the ceremony in a most impressive and efficient manner. The W.M. subsequently invested the following officers:—Bros. Dr. Samuels, S.W.; T. A. Collinson, J.W.; Francis Day, S.D.; J. Makin, J.D.; Dr. Morris, I.G.; Dr. Crawford, P.M., D.C.; Rev. S. Topham, Chaplain; E. Harbord, P.M., Treas. (by proxy in consequence of illness); and M. Browne, Sec. A very handsome Past Master's jewel was presented by the brethren to Bro. J. H. Johnston, I.P.M., the founder and first W.M. of the lodge, as a mark of their respect and high personal esteem, and as a token of their appreciation of the manner in which he had performed his duties. The brethren subsequently adjourned to banquet, and a very pleasant evening was spent. The visitors were numerous, and of good standing.

MIDDLESEX.

HAMPTON.—Lebanon Lodge (No. 1326).—On Thursday, 18th inst., at the Red Lion Hotel, Lion-square, Thames-street, Hampton, the installation meeting of this flourishing and prosperous lodge was held. The lodge was opened by Bro. S. Wickens, W.M. There were present Bros. E. Hopwood, W.M., as S.W.; D. D. Beck, J.W.; J. T. Moss, P.G.S.D., Middlesex, P.M., Treas.; F. Walters, P.M., Sec.; H. A. Dubois, S.D.; W. Hammond, P.M., J.D.; J. Catchpole, D.C.; H. Potter, P.M., W.S.; R. Lawrence, E. H. Thiellay, C. S. Simpson, F. Holmes, J. W. Richardson, F. Moon, E. Fielding, G. E. Wood, T. Pallet, G. Montgomery, C. Bremerkamp, H. Gloster, S. Marketis, F. Bouts, J. T. H. Moss, J. W. Baldwin, H. Moore, and others. There were present, amongst a large number of visitors, Bros. Col. F. Burdett, Prov. G.M., Middlesex; W. Mann, W.M. 144; B. Harris, 177; G. S. Haines, 184; S. Smith, Org., 742; T. Price, 946, &c. At one o'clock p.m., the lodge was opened. The minutes of the last regular lodge meeting were read and unanimously confirmed. The ballots, taken separately, were unanimous in favour of the admission of the joining members and candidates for initiation. The W.M. commenced the heavy programme of work by raising Bros. J. Craven, G. Reynolds, G. E. Wood, H. Gloster, S. Marketis, C. Bremerkamp, and H. Moore, to the third degree. Bro. W. Hammond, P.M. 201, J.D., took the chair, and acted as W.M. for the purpose of initiating his nephew, Mr. G. Lawrence, the landlord, which he did in his usual able manner; afterwards initiating Mr. F. Moon and Mr. J. W. Richardson, into the mysteries of ancient Freemasonry. Bro. F. Walters, P.M. and Sec., in an able manner, installed Bro. John Thomas Moss, Prov. G.S.D., Middlesex, W.M. elect, as Worshipful Master, who appointed and invested as his officers for the ensuing year Bros. D. D. Beck, S.W.; H. G. Dubois, J.W.; S. Wickens, P.M., Treas.; F. Walters, P.M., Sec.; W. Hammond, P.M., S.D.; J. Catchpole, J.D.; J. W. Jackson, J.G.; W. H. Scott, D.C.; H. Potter, P.M., W.S.; G. Montgomery, C.S.; J. Bavin, P.M., Tyler. The W.M., in the name of the lodge, presented Bro. S. Wickens, I.P.M., Treasurer, with a massive gold five guinea Past Master's jewel, which had been voted to him from the lodge funds, and a ten guinea diamond ring (which had been subscribed for by the members) for his wife, as he had chosen the testimonial to take that form. Bro. S. Wickens, in an eloquent speech, thanked the brethren for their generous presents. The Secretary, for his untiring exertions, had a ten guinea testimonial voted to him. Several gentlemen were proposed for initiation, and as several were left on the list, it was arranged to have an emergency meeting on Monday, July 29th. The usual splendid banquet and dessert followed. Bros. H. Potter, F. Walters, and G. Montgomery, had exerted themselves in making arrangements to please every one. Some hours having been spent agreeably, the brethren returned to town, well pleased with their happy reunion.

Mark Masonry.

SOMERSETSHIRE.

PROVINCIAL GRAND LODGE.

The Mark Lodge of Science, No. 128, Wincanton, held its meeting on the 1st inst., at eleven o'clock, a.m. The minutes of the former meeting having been read and confirmed, the Worshipful Master, Bro. W. S. Gillard, P.G.J.D. who was at the last meeting unanimously re-elected as W.M. for the present year, proceeded to invest his officers as follows:—Bros. A. W. Butter, S.W.; Benjamin Atwell, J.W.; the Rev. R. H. Wingfield, Chaplain; the Rev. W. E. J. Percy, M.O.; Ernest Baker, S.O.; John Fry, J.O., Benjamin Atwell, Treasurer; W. H. Hammen, Secretary; C. R. Sheppard, Registrar of Marks; Gabriel Williams, D.C.; James Stay, S.D.; R. S. Chant, J.D.; John Rumsey, Organist; T. Sherring, R.G.; James Senior, Steward; James Young, Tyler; the W.M. then proceeded to advance Bro. W. Ball Biggs, of Bristol.

At 1.30 p.m. the Deputy Provincial Grand Mark Master of Somerset, Bro. Capt. F. G. Irwin, was announced, with his Officers, and received with the usual honours; the Vy. W.D. Prov.G.M. stated that he had to express the regret of the R.W.Prov.G.M., the Earl of Carnarvon, who could not attend on account of his health, which was received by the brethren with much regret.

The Provincial Grand Lodge having been opened, congratulated the Wincanton brethren on having secured such a comfortable lodge room. The D.Prov.G.M. called on Bro. Cox, Prov.G. Sec., to read the minutes of the last Provincial Grand Lodge, also the balance sheet, as Bro. E. T. Payne, Treasurer, was unavoidably absent; the minutes and accounts were respectively confirmed and adopted. Bro. E. T. Payne, Bath, was then re-elected Treasurer, and the Vy. W.D.Prov.G.M. proceeded, on behalf of the R.W. the P.G.M., to invest the following brethren as Provincial Grand Officers, for the ensuing year:—

- | | |
|--------------------------------|----------------------|
| F. Vizard | Prov. G.S.W. |
| W. S. Gillard | Prov. G.J.W. |
| R. C. Else | Prov. G.M.O. |
| W. Thompson | Prov. G.S.O. |
| W. H. Davies | Prov. G.J.O. |
| The Rev. W. E. J. Percy | Prov. G. Chaplains. |
| The Rev. R. H. Wingfield Digby | |
| Edward Turner Payne | Prov. G. Treas. |
| L. H. Ricketts | Prov. G. Reg. |
| Benjamin Cox | Prov. G. Sec. |
| Ernest Baker | Prov. G. Ast. Sec. |
| A. W. Butter | Prov. G.S.D. |
| S. Jones | Prov. G.J.D. |
| T. E. Kelly | Prov. G.D. of Cers. |
| W. H. Hannen | Prov. G. As.D. of C. |
| General Doherty | Prov.G.Insp.of Wks. |
| Benjamin Atwell | Prov. G.Swd.B. |
| Captain Benthall | Prov. G.St.I.B. |
| John Rumsey | Prov. G.Org. |
| John H. Harley | Prov. G.Purst. |
| John Fry | Prov. G.Steward. |
| J. Mantell | " " |
| Gabriel Williams | " " |
| T. Coles | Prov. G. Tyler. |
| Richard Skinner | Prov. G.Asst.Tyler. |

The appointments were received by the assembled brethren with hearty applause.

The Bye Laws for the Provincial Grand Lodge were received and approved.

Bro. James Bunter Colthurst, was received in due form and advanced to the honourable degree of Mark Master, by the D.Prov.G. M. in his usual impressive manner.

The Provincial Grand Lodge having been closed according to ancient custom, about thirty of the brethren adjourned to the Town Hall for the banquet, which was served in first rate style by Bro. James Stay, who had provided every delicacy in season.

Among the visitors we noticed Bro. the Rev. W. Mortimer Heath, Grand Chaplain of England; Bros. C. W. Wyndham, R. G. Long, John Hine, T. E. Kelley, F. Mantell, and W. J. Male.

After the Banquet, which was presided over by the W.D.G.M., the usual Masonic toasts were given and masonically honoured.

Bro. W. S. Gillard, D.G.J.W., in feeling terms, proposed the health of the Vy. W.D.Prov.G.M., Bro. Capt. Irwin, and thanked him in the name of the "Science" Lodge for his visit to Wincanton. This toast was received with rounds of applause, which were again and again repeated. Bro. Capt. Irwin returned thanks for the manner in which his health had been proposed and also for the hearty way his name had been received by the brethren, he also gave the brethren some good advice as to the future, and concluded a very instructive address by proposing the health of the W.M. of the Lodge Bro. W. S. Gillard. This toast, with others, including the Grand Chaplain of England, Bro. Heath, were all well received and responded to. Bro. Heath advocated the Benevolent Fund in connection with the Mark degree; the brethren responded to his appeal by subscribing the sum of £55, which sum has been handed to the Rev. J. H. Newnham, who will represent the province of Dorset and a part of Somerset at the annual festival, held in London on the 23rd of July.

The Vy. W.D.Prov.G.M. said he could not leave the Town Hall without expressing his admiration of the decorations, and expressed a desire to know who had superintended the same. On being informed that it was Bro. R. Skinner, of Sturminster Newton, who had carried out the whole affair, and that he was in the room, the D.Prov.G.M. called Bro Skinner to him and highly complimented him on his Masonic taste and ability.

The brethren having passed a delightful evening separated at 9 o'clock. This visit of the Prov. G. Mark Lodge will long be remembered by the Wincanton brethren for the very pleasant and agreeable manner all the proceedings were carried out.

Red Cross of Constantine.

LANCASHIRE (WEST).

Liverpool Conclave (No. 55).—After a year's existence of the most prosperous and harmonious character, the Sir Knights Companions of the Liverpool Conclave, No. 55, of the Masonic Order of the Knights of Rome, and of the Red Cross of Constantine, held their regular assembly at the Adelphi Hotel, Lime-street, on Friday, the 19th inst., when there was a good attendance of the members of the Order. Amongst those present were Ill. Sir Knight Captain Turner, Int. Gen. for West Lancashire; Em. Sir Knight, Dr. J. K. Smith, M.P.S., K.G.C.; Em. Sir Knight J. R. Gospel, V.E.; Sir Knights H. M. Molyneux, J.G.; R. Washington, H.P.; J. Wood, Treas.; H. James, Rec.; T. Clark, P.; J. Skeaf, Org.; M. Mawson, D.C.; P. Ball, S.; T. Ashmore, M.P.S. 77; I. W. Robinson, R. Pearson, R. Brown, J. T. Parkinson, J. E. Jackson, W. Doyle, J. Lloyd, G. H. Turner, W. Cron, W. H. Lee, S. Hague, H. Nelson, V.E. 77; E. M. Sheldon, E. Hughes, &c.; the visitors being Ill. Sir Knight C. Fitzgerald Matier, V.E. 50, D.I.G., East Lancashire; and J. T. Callow, J.G. 77. At the opening, the chair of C. was occupied by Em. Sir Knight Smith, M.P.S., who proceeded with the work of the conclave in a highly efficient manner. The principal business was the enthronement of Em. Sir Knight, J. R. Gospel as M.P.S., and the consecration of the viceroy elect, Em. Sir Knight Molyneux, the ceremony being performed by Em. Sir Knight Smith, assisted by Ill. Sir Knights Turner and Matier. The investiture of the following officers took place:—Sir Knights H. James, S.G.; T. Clark, J.G.; R. Washington, H.P.; W. Doyle, Rec.; J. Wood, Treas. (re-invested); Winstanley, Prefect; J. E. Jackson, J. Prefect; W. Crane, S.B.; S. Hague, Orator; J. B. MacKenzie, Herald; J. Lloyd, Almoner; J. Skiel, Org.; M. Mawson, Steward; R. Young, 2nd Steward. After the muster roll had been called and several candidates proposed for installation, the conclave was closed in peace and harmony, the knights adjourned to an excellent banquet set out in the large hall of the hotel. The M.P.S. subsequently gave, "The Queen and the Christian Orders of Masonry." The toast of "The Earl of Bective and the Illustrious Officers of the Supreme Grand Conclave" (given by Ill. Sir Knight Matier) was responded to by Ill. Sir Knight Smith. The M.P.S. next gave, "Ill. Sir Knight Turner, Int. Gen. for W.L.," who, in reply, alluded to the great success which had attended the Liverpool Conclave, much of the credit being due to Sir Knight Smith. The P.S. then gave the "M.P.S.," who, in reply, thanked the Knights for the honour conferred upon him, and assured them that he would endeavour to perform his duties to the best of his ability. In giving the health of Ill. Sir Knight Smith, the Int. Gen. said that as a mark of the value he placed upon his services, he had resolved to appoint the subject of the toast Deputy Int. Gen. for West Lancashire. Ill. Sir Knight Smith, D.I.G., returned thanks in feeling terms. A variety of other toasts were proposed during the evening, and excellent harmony was contributed by Sir Knights Brown, Nelson, Pearson, Sheldon, Matier, &c., the accompaniments being played by Sir Knight Skeaf, Organist.

Ancient and Accepted Rite.

METROPOLITAN.

MOUNT CALVARY ROSE CROIX CHAPTER.—On Saturday, July 13th, 1872, the members of the Mount Calvary Rose Croix Chapter, held their annual meeting at the Masonic Hall, 33, Golden Square, when Bro. William Dewar was admitted into the order, by his brother Donald Dewar, who presided and conducted the ceremony. Bro. Donald Dewar then requested Bro. Hyde Pullen to assume the chair of the Chapter in order to install the M.W.S. Elect, Bro. F. Binckes, who having been duly presented, undertook the duties of the chapter, and was regularly installed in ancient form and saluted accordingly. The M.W.S. then appointed his officers, and the ceremony being completed, the chapter was closed in regular form. Among the Brethren who attended, were Ill. Bro. Capt. N. G. Phillips, 33°; Lt. G. Com. S. C.; Ill. Bro. Hyde Pullen, 33°; Bro. Binckes, 30°; Bro. D. M. Dewar, 18°; Bro. E. Kimber, 18°; Bro. W. Roebuck, 30°; Bro. J. Stohwasser, 18°; Bro. J. Read, 30°; Bro. W. Dewar, 18°; and others.

The Annual Festival of this Chapter was held on the following Monday, on which occasion the brethren were accompanied by their wives and daughters, and a most agreeable and delightful afternoon was spent in the beautiful grounds of Hampton Court Palace, and afterwards, at the festive board. This arrangement might very properly be imitated by other chapters and lodges. The party separated, with mutual congratulations and expressions of pleasure and satisfaction.

GIBRALTAR.

EUROPA CHAPTER ROSE CROIX.—Notwithstanding the tropical heat which has environed the Rock for the last fortnight, the energetic M. W. S. convened a meeting of the Princes of the Chapter on the 5th of July, for the purpose of admitting to the mysteries of the A. A. R. Bro. Matthews, Colonel in the American Army and Minister for the American Government at the Court of Morocco; and Bro. Richard Hepper of Gibraltar. Although since the last communication many changes have taken place in this garrison and several very illustrious brethren have left this station with their regiments, it afforded us very great pleasure to see so numerous a gathering of the members assembled to support the M.W.S. Amongst those present, we noticed P.M.W.S. Price, Ill. Bros. Cornwell, Dantez-Trener, Marin, Weir, Wortmann, Wall, Haynes, Morgan, Relle, Thornton, and others. Ill. Bro. P.M.W.S. Alton, at an early period of the evening had personally come to explain to the M.W.S. that important public engagements precluded his entering the Council Chamber. Ill. Bro. McLoughlin, of the Royal Naval Chapter, was present as a visitor. The ceremony of exaltation was conducted by the M.W.S., Ill. Bros. Wall and Haynes performing the duties of Grand Marshal and Raphael, respectively, with great ability and excellent judgment. At the conclusion of the second point, the M.W.S., Ill. Bro. Balfour Cockburn, having directed Ill. Bro. Cornwell, the Senior Prince present, to marshal P.M.W.S. Price to the altar, presented to him a very beautiful 30° star, prefacing the act of placing the same on Ill. Bro. Price's breast, with a few appropriate remarks. P.M.W.S. Price expressed himself so taken by surprise at this unexpected proceeding that he felt quite unable to express to the princes assembled how very highly he appreciated the honour that had been conferred upon him—he would indeed treasure the valuable star that had that evening been given to him as a jewel above all price—not alone for its intrinsic value, but for the happy association with which it was connected and for the gratifying manner in which it had been presented. The star bore the following inscription:—"Presented by the M.W.S., Officers, and Princes of the Europa Chapter to Ill. Bro. T. C. Price, P.M.W.S., in recognition of his energetic exertions and zealous services in behalf of the Chapter," Gibraltar, 1872. At the conclusion of the third point the Princes retired to the banqueting hall where a cold collation awaited them.

ANCIENT GRAND LODGE OF YORK.

The following is by a Correspondent of the New York Dispatch :—

I distinctly recollect the strange impression it made on my mind when, for the first time, I visited a lodge in the United States, in 1842, and for the first time heard in a lodge the phrase, "Ancient York Masonry." Be it remembered that I was then regarded as a well-posted Mason; I was perfect in the English ritual, had read Anderson's "Constitution," also Preston's "Illustrations," also a book by the Rev. Bro. Ash. I have also made an attempt to read Dr. Oliver's "Antiquities," the last, however, acted on my mind the same as an emetic would on my stomach,—"I could not go it nohow." I had some idea that there was then a great many other Masonic books to learn from; but yet I found, both in Europe and here, among my associates in Masonry, very few who even pretended to know more of Masonic history than I did. I knew that a body of Masons at one time called themselves "Ancients," or "Ancient York Masons," and that they united with the Grand Lodge of England in 1813. This I have not only read about, but I conversed with several brethren who were Masons at the time of the union in 1813. Some belonged to the "Ancients" and some to the "Moderns," but I thought since the said union had taken place, the brethren had everywhere ceased to talk in a lodge about "Ancient York." I was therefore surprised to hear the phrase of "Ancient York" so emphasized in American lodges. But what surprised me still more was, that very few, both in Boston and New York, had ever heard of a union ever taking place between the York and London Masons; and even as late as 1851, a prominent active member of the Grand Lodge of Massachusetts looked thunderstruck when I assured him that no such a thing as a Grand Lodge of York exists, or has existed since 1813.

It will readily be perceived that at that time I imagined that the "Ancients" were really a branch of the old Grand Lodge of York, or in some way or other derived its authority from that body. Nor is that superstition yet extinct, for in the March number of one of our Masonic periodicals I find an able writer still censuring the London Grand Lodge of 1717 for its secession from the Grand Lodge of York of 1536. An examination, however, of the state of England prior to 1717, must at once dispel the error of such an organisation as a Grand Lodge of York exercising jurisdiction over all the Masons in England, not only as a probability, but even as a possibility. Be it remembered that every Master Mason—which means every employer—was in olden time obliged, by his obligation, to attend annually, or tri-annually, to the Masonic assembly; from this he was not exempt, unless prevented by sickness. Halliwell's poem says:

"That every mayster that is a Mason
Must ben at the generale congregacyon.
So that he hyt reasonably y-tolde
Where that the semble schal be holde,
And to that the semble he must nede gou,
But he have a reasonabul skusacyon (excuse)."

The excuse refers to sickness; otherwise he was obliged to attend. I have already stated in a former communication that the word "York" is not mentioned in Halliwell's poem. The lines in the above extract,

"So that he hyt reasonably y-tolde
Where that the semble schal be holde," make it evident that the annual assembly was not always held in York; for, if it was so, there could have been no necessity to notify anyone where it shall be held. But I imagine that somebody may argue, "What of it? Suppose they do not assemble in York? May they not at that time have such an organization like our Scotch Rite have here in America, or like our Chapter or Knights Templar organization, who meet periodically in different parts of the country?" But the question is, "Could they, in those days, have such an organization? Now, somebody proposed that the assembly shall be held every year, or once in three years, in London, to which every Master of a lodge in the United States shall be obliged to attend.

The Masters from California will have rather a long journey to perform. It will take them seventeen or eighteen days travel from the Pacific coast to the metropolis of England. Now, if such a proposition was made, would not everybody laugh at it? We would immediately ask ourselves, "Will it pay?" Of what use is it to waste so much time, to undergo so much hardship, to run so much risk, and to waste so much substance? Now the distance, or rather the time necessary for travel in those days from a remote part of England to York, or even from London to York, was fully equal to the time necessary now to make a journey from California to London. I remember reading somewhere, that it took a month travelling from London to Edinburgh, and, consequently, it must have taken seventeen or eighteen days to reach York. And as to dangers and hardships of travelling, the hardships, etc., of travelling six thousand miles by rail and steamboat is no comparison to the hardships of travelling a distance of two hundred miles in the days of Charles II. How much worse travelling in England must have been in the time of Elizabeth—how much worse still it must have been previous to the conquest, let the reader judge for himself. Macaulay, in the third chapter of his History of England, furnishes a very graphic description of the dangers and hardships of locomotion two hundred years ago. Beside being liable to be attacked, plundered, or even murdered by robbers, the mere hardships undergone in those days in moving from place to place, not of the poorer or middle classes, but of the rich and noble, must convince anyone that an annual or triannual assembly at York of the operative master builders was simply absurd—even more absurd than the supposed proposition to make all the Masters of lodges in the United States travel to England periodically. And now let us read something from Macaulay:—

"On the best lines of communication the ruts were deep, the descents were precipitous, and the way often such as it was hardly possible to distinguish in the dark from uninclined heath and fen, which lay on both sides. Ralph Thorsby, the antiquary, was in danger of losing his way on the north road between Barnley Moor and Tuxford, and actually lost his way between Doncaster and York. Pepys and his wife, travelling in their own coach, lost their way between Newbury and Reading. In the course of the same tour they lost their way near Salisbury, and were in danger of having to pass the night on the plain. It was only in fine weather that the whole breadth of the road was available for wheeled vehicles. Often the mud lay deep on the right and left, and only a narrow track of firm land rose above the quagmire. At such times obstructions and quarrels were frequent, and the path was sometimes blocked up during a long time by carriers, neither of whom would break the way. It happened almost every day that coaches stuck fast, until a team of cattle could be procured from some neighbouring farm to tug them out of the slough. But in hard seasons the traveller had to encounter inconveniences still more serious. Thorsby, who was in the habit of travelling between Leeds and the capital, has recorded in his diary such a series of perils and disasters as might suffice for a journey to the frozen ocean or the desert of Sahara. On one occasion he learned that the floods were out between Ware and London, that passengers had to swim for their lives, and that a nigger had perished in the attempt to cross. In consequence of these tidings he turned out of the high road, and was conducted across some meadows, where it was necessary for him to ride to the saddle-skirts in water. In the course of another journey he narrowly escaped being swept away by an inundation of the Trent. He was afterwards detained at Stamford four days on account of the state of the roads, and then ventured to proceed only because fourteen members of the House of Commons, who were going up in a body to Parliament, accompanied him, and their attendants, took him and his company. On the roads of Derbyshire the travellers were in constant fear for their necks, and were frequently compelled to alight and lead the beasts. The route from Wales to Holyhead was in such a state that into in 1685 a viceroy, going to Ireland, was five hours in travelling from St. Asaph to Conway. Between Conway and Beaumarische he was forced to walk great part of the way, and his lady was carried in a litter. His coach was, with great difficulty, and by the help of many hands, brought after him entire. In general, carriages were taken in pieces to Conway, and borne on the shoulders of stout Welsh peasants to Menai Straits. In some parts of Kent and Sussex, none but the strongest horses could in winter get through the bog, in which, at every step, they sunk deep. . . . When Prince George of Denmark (husband of Queen Anne) visited the stately mansion of Petworth, in wet weather, he was six hours in going nine miles, and it was necessary that a body of sturdy hinds should be on each side of his coach to prop it. Of the carriages which conveyed his retinue, several were upset and injured. A letter from one of his gentlemen-in-waiting has been preserved, in which the unfortunate courtier complains that during fourteen hours he never once alighted, except when his coach was overturned, or stuck fast in the mud."

"On the best highways heavy articles were, in the time of Charles the Second, generally conveyed from place to place by stage waggons. In the straw of those vehicles nestled a crowd of passengers, who could not afford to travel by coach or on horseback, and who were prevented by their infirmity or by the weight of their luggage from going on foot." The price per mile for conveyance in these waggons is not stated, we may, however, judge from the charges for transmitting heavy goods, that passengers then were mulct of much more money per mile than they are now. Thus, "from London to Birmingham the charge was seven pounds per ton, and from London to Exeter twelve pounds per ton. This was fifteen pence a ton per mile—more by a third than was afterwards charged on turnpike roads, and fifteen times as much as now demanded by railway companies." We may, therefore, rationally conclude that passage money for those wretched conveyances bore a similar ratio to the price then charged for transporting of heavy goods, namely, fifteen times as much as we pay to-day for travelling by rail.

And let us now look at the question from another point of view, viz., the comparative amount of wages given and received to, and by the different artisans in those days. I have stated in a former communication that the government used to legislate what amount of wages each handicraft was to receive; there was, however, then, as now, an undercurrent at work, which the government could not effect by legislation, viz., the relative value of the precious metals with each other, and with all other commodities. The laws of supply and demand were in those days unknown, hence we find wages were constantly advancing; the riots of Wat Tyler and Jack Cade; the act of Parliament in Henry the Sixth reign, making it a penal offence for carpenters and masons to assemble in their respective lodges, plainly shows the discontent of the working people. Nor was the discontent confined to the working people alone. In Stafford's dialogue, published in 1585, the squire addressing the farmer, says, "Can you not remember that within these thirty years I could in this town buy the best pig or goose for 4d., which now cost 12d.; a capon for 3d. or 4d.; a chicken for 1d.; a hen for 2d., which now costeth me double and treble. . . . I have seen a cap for 13d., as good as I can get now for 2s. 6d., etc., etc." "Such of us," says the same authority, "as do abide in the country, cannot with two hundred a year keep that house that we might have done with two hundred marks, but sixteen years past; a mark was 6s. 8d." It is evident then, that in spite of legislation, prices of products and of labour advanced; but the question is, did the price of the masons' labour advance in the same ratio? From Sir Frederick's tables, it appears that in 1530 the wages per day for masons was 8d. In 1575, a master mason, a tyler, a plumber, a house painter, received 1s per day, a common labourer only 8d. In 1601, a mason or tyler received 1s. 2d., a common labourer 10d. per day. In 1610, in the busiest time of the year, viz., before Michaelmas (September 29th), "for a Freemason which can draw his plot and set accordingly, having charge over others, 1s. 2d." (for a master carpenter, the same). "In Warwickshire, in 1865, the justices directed that throughout the county wages should be as follows:—A Freemason, a master brick mason, a master carpenter, his servant or journeyman if above eighteen, a plow-wright, a cartwright, a master bricklayer, tyler, plasterer, shingler, master thatcher, mower and reaper, at 6d. per day." Assuming that, in addition to the 6d. a day, he was furnished also with board, which may have cost another 6d. per day, then the masons in Warwickshire, in 1685, received less payment than the same classes received in some other part of the country in 1610 (Knight's Pictorial History of England, vol. ii., p. 903-4). We thus see how the Government persevered in keeping the price of labour down as low as possible; but it possessed no power to keep down correspondingly the price of provisions, &c. We have seen that while certain commodities doubled and trebled in value, in the course of more than thirty years, during the sixteenth century, the price of labour, especially of the Masons, never doubled between 1500 and 1685. We also learn from the above that the status of the best working Freemason, as indicated by the wages he received, was not higher than those of artisans of many trades. It, therefore, not only dispels the absurdity of the supposed higher respectability of the mason's trade; it not only demolishes Bro. Woodbury's new-fangled idea that the masons had an esoteric and exoteric philosophy unknown to their equals, but it also makes it appear truly ridiculous that with such scanty means as their wages afforded, the masons, and masons only, could afford to keep up such an organization as the Grand Lodge of York, with all the attendant expenses, waste of time, dangers, hardships, and other sacrifices necessary to make an annual pilgrimage to the city of York. And now let us resume the investigation of our MSS.

I have so far alluded only to Halliwell's poem; but the same injunction to attend at the assembly is also found in some other MSS. In the rituals the said law is somewhat modified; thus it says: "And also that every Maister and Fellow shall come to the assembly, and if it bee within fifty myles about him, if he have any writeinge. And if yee have trespassed against the science, for to abide the award of Maisters and Fellows, and to make them accorder if they may, and if they may not accord them, to go to common law." Now, if there is any meaning in the above quotation, it is simply this: that if two or more have a dispute, the case should be referred to assembly, who shall "accord" or make peace between the contending parties; but if that could not be effected, then the aggrieved might bring a lawsuit. The same idea may also be gleaned from the older MSS., but with this difference, viz.: in olden time the sheriff had the power of seizing the chattels of the offending party; but in more modern times, when Government ceased to appoint supervisors over the assemblies of the guilds, and when the attendance of the sheriff fell into disuetude, all the assembly could then do, in case of a dispute, was simply to endeavour to arbitrate between the contending elements, and thus prevent lawsuits among the brotherhood. But it will be seen that the party summoned to appear before the assembly was limited, "if it bee within fifty myles." In one of the rituals in Bro. Hughan's history of the Grand Lodge of York, it limits the distance to only five miles; but whether fifty or five, it is evident that there was no such a thing as supreme jurisdiction over a certain area—it precludes the supposition that there was a jurisdiction, for instance, over a county, and hence we may come to the conclusion that Masons, like other operative bodies, held only local, independent, annual assemblies. And in accordance with their local regulations, members were obliged to attend those meetings unless they were absent from home a distance of fifty or less miles, as provided for in their respective codes. To impress these facts more clearly, I must once more recall to mind the main object of these assemblies, and these were, first, to make arrangement with the local justice or mayor about the price of labour; second, to grant permission to members to take apprentices; third, to settle the squabbles among themselves, so as to prevent law suits; and fourth, to admit into membership those who have served out their seven years' apprenticeship, and also, now and then, to admit a gentleman as an honorary member or fellow. For such purposes, which was, indeed, common to all other guilds, it was no more necessary for masons than any other trade to tax themselves with the expense of keeping up a Grand Lodge having jurisdiction over all England, compelling them to lose so much time, to undergo so many hardships, to risk so many dangers which the annual pilgrimages to York must have subjected those who lived at a distance. In short, we find that the wages of about a dozen different kinds of mechanics were the same; we find that the laws of nearly all these associations were pretty much alike; we can see that with the small wages the masons received it was absolutely impossible for them to keep up an organisation such as Grand Lodge of all England. I am, therefore, satisfied that the same kind of government and the same kind of local, independent, annual assemblies which then sufficed for the wants of all other guilds, must also have sufficed for the wants of the Masonic fraternity in those days.

And that is not all, for we must bear in mind that the fiction of localizing the Athelstan Assembly to the city of York was unknown until the sixteenth or seventeenth century, for the word "York" is not mentioned in the Halliwells', MS. And the date, viz., 926. was unknown to all the writers and copyists previous to 1721.

I have in previous communications also shown how Masonic history was manufactured, for instance, the writer of Halliwell's MS. was ignorant of the Masonry of Solomon, the Hiram, St. Alban, etc. The authors of the operative rituals, knew nothing of Hiramship's Masonry—that name is first mentioned in Desaguliers' Constitution of 1721. I have also shown that the Masonry and Grand Mastership of the St. Johns were unknown even to Anderson and Desaguliers.

We thus see how successive additions were piled up by successive Masonic authors, each pretending to know historical facts unknown to his predecessors, though they lived nearer to the period he was writing of. And last, though not least, the explosion by Bro. Findel of the fiction—circulated by Dr. Oliver and his satellites—of the existence in the archives at York of the original Athelstan charter or constitution.

Taking, therefore, all these facts together, I must come to the conclusion that it is high time to cease making ourselves ridiculous by talking of York Rite, York Masonry, York Constitutions, or of "the Ancient Grand Lodge of York."

JACOB NORTON.

Original Correspondence.

To the Editor of the Freemason.

Dear Sir and Brother,—

What was my surprise on recently taking up the "North British Daily Mail," to find the enclosed statement.

"His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales attended on Monday afternoon, at the great hall in the Freemasons' Tavern, Great Queen Street, for the purpose of being installed a brother of the "Faith and Fidelity" Lodge of Good Templars. The public by some means became aware of the intended visit, and a large number of persons assembled to witness the arrival of the Prince, who was loudly cheered as he drove up in a private carriage."

I presume the Editor meant Knights Templar of good old memory, instead of "Good Templars," a body of tectotallers, of whose merits time will tell, without discussing them at the present time.

I remain, yours fraternally,

CHAS. G. FORSYTH.
H. No. 50. R.A.

REUNION OF KNIGHTS TEMPLAR IN SCOTLAND.

The Supreme Grand Priory of Scotland, of the Religious and Military Order of the Temple, though ostensibly the head of Knight Templarism in that country, has hitherto only possessed a nominal power, and for some time past there have been only two priories working under its jurisdiction, the third, in Glasgow, having become dormant some years ago. There are five or six other encampments, however, in existence, and working under their own Charters, but having only an individual existence, the governing body, formerly under the command of H.R.H. the Duke of Kent and Strathern, having also become dormant. The largest and most influential of these independent bodies, the Glasgow Girvan Encampment, numbering over 100 Sir Knights, were not satisfied with this anomalous state of things, and accordingly put themselves into communication with Sir Thos. Whyte-Melville, the Grand Commander, and Major Hamilton Ramsay, the Grand Recorder, with a view to effecting an amalgamation, which, after some negociation, has now been happily effected, and on Tuesday, July 23, the preliminary arrangements were settled by the officials of the Supreme Grand Priory, and a deputation from Glasgow. The deputation consisted of Sir Knights Robert Bell, M.N.C. of No. 32; J. C. Spier, C.G.; D. Butler, J.C.; G. W. Wheeler, Sec., and the following members:—J. Tweed, R. Mitchel, J. Mathisen, T. Scott, Dr. Neilson, W. F. Shaw, J. A. Ferguson, T. Barclay, and J. Dunbar.

After the business was concluded, the Edinburgh Knights invited their Glasgow fraters to a banquet, at which Sir Knight Major Hamilton Ramsay, Grand Recorder, and also Prior of the Lothian's Priory, presided; Sir Knight Stewart acting as croupier.

Major Ramsay said, that as it was early in the day, he did not intend to introduce any formal toasts, but he thought they ought not to separate without drinking the health of the numerous and influential deputation from Glasgow, who had honoured them that day by coming there, to effect a union which was "a consummation most devoutly to be wished," and that he trusted would prove beneficial. He hoped that the ties that now, for the first time, bound them together, would be strengthened and tightened, but not so tight as ever to be in the slightest degree irksome. He would couple this with the name of Sir Knight R. Bell, whom the Glasgow Encampment might be proud to acknowledge as their Commander. He had heard of him, and also of the encampment, from one of the American Knights Templar who were over here last summer. If it was for no other reason than this, to acknowledge the noble way in which the Girvan Encampment met and entertained their American Fraters, they would deserve the thanks of all Knight Templars.

Sir Knight Bell in responding expressed the thanks of himself and the rest of the deputation to their honourable chairman, not only for the way in which they had received the toasts, but for their conduct that day. Sir Knight Spiers in a brief speech proposed the health of "The chairman and those members of the Grand Priory, who had met and received them so kindly." Major Ramsey briefly responded. Sir Knight Wheeler said that having opened these negotiations he was most happy to be present at their termination, and to witness the kind way the Grand Priory had come forward to meet them, and hoped that it was only an augury of more such reunions; he could assure the Chairman and the Grand Priory, that the Girvan Encampment would go with them heart and hand to effect that object, and he would now give them a toast which both deputations could drink, "The speedy union of all Knights Templar in Scotland under one banner." This toast having been done full justice to, this happy meeting was ended, each agreeing that a brighter prospect for the interests of the Order was dawning on them.

THE OUTWARD MASONIC LIFE.

A life that does not quadrate with principles professed, always results in damage to the institution of which the moral defaulter is a member, and from which he claims to derive the inspiration of his conduct. Imperfect Masonic living is the greatest bane of our society. Masonry purposes no principle but what is perfectly practicable, and a failure to illustrate in the outward life is evidence of the lack of heart fealty to the ethics of the institution. So long as Masonry tolerates gross violations of the cardinal virtues upon which its fabric rests, so long will it fail to impress the profane world with either its beauty or its utility. When it is known that a profane, obscene, drunken, adulterous man is admitted to our retreats, and meets with no rebuke from the constituted authorities, the inference drawn by a discriminating public will be that either Masonic morals are a sham, or that the discipline of the Order is impotent to the reproof or correction of the vices of its adherents.

The only way in which Masonry can exert a powerful magnetism upon the outer world, to draw the good to its altars, is by inviolable fidelity to the lofty requirements which we claim to lay upon our neophytes.

Let us live in such a way that others may see the light of principle in our carriage and conduct, and spirits seeking association with the good will knock at our doors, and ask to be admitted to congenial companionship.

By the same law that induces these noble souls to apply for admission to our secret fellowships, the vicious will be repelled, and our lodge rooms be truly the retreats of virtue.

Is there a brother among us openly trampling the jewels of our order under unhallowed feet, recklessly disregarding his vows and the solemn lesson of instruction imparted to him in the lodge room, let him reflect upon the fearful responsibility he assumes in giving such a forbidding expression of the value of Masonry to the world. His wanton conduct may furnish the apology to thousands to refrain from application for our mystic rites, and afford argument to those who would blot us from existence. One profane, intemperate, and licentious Mason, can do more harm to our order than all the Masonic agitators in Christendom. A good life is an irresistible answer to all cavils.

Our Junior Wardens use charity for a very bad end when they tolerate shameless vice in the craftsmen. Let him scrutinize the conduct of those over whom he is set to watch, and be prompt to admonish the erring, and to arrest and bring to trial those who obstinately resist his warnings.—Kentucky Freemason.

An amusing story, and one said to be true, is told of a certain United States Treasury clerk, who, when he was over here on some Government business, managed to lunch with the Prince of Wales. One day in the streets of London he met the Marquis of Ripon, late Earl de Grey, chief of the High Joins, and at once rushed into his arms, so to speak. "Delighted to meet your lordship," he exclaimed effusively. "Don't you remember me? I showed your lordship through the Treasury at Washington." "Ah," said the Marquis, "charmed, I'm sure. Ah, much obliged." "Not at all, not at all," the syndicator hastened to reply. "No trouble. So glad to meet you again. Where does your lordship live?" Here the Prince of Wales interposed, and, thinking to "bluff" the enthusiastic American, said to the Marquis of Ripon, "Let's go to lunch." Before the Marquis could reply, the syndicator hastened to accept the invitation for himself, and followed the two, Prince and Marquis, into a fashionable club, and actually lunched with the Heir to the British Throne. Whether the said Heir particularly enjoyed the lunch does not appear in the tale; but the recipient of this honour never fails to make delicate allusions to the day when he "had that delicious lunch with Wales and Ripon."

Poetry.

FREEMASONRY.

What is Masonry—A Temple
Rais'd by mystic arts sublime;
Mighty fabric whose foundations
Lie beneath the sands of Time.

Countless ages have its structure
Slowly, silently uprear'd,
Heav'nward tow'r's its architecture
From antiquity rever'd.

Truth and Friendship flank its portals
Virtue paves its sacred length
Wisdom spans its spreading arches
Its foundations are in Strength.

Peace the air that fills its precincts,
Unity its grand design,
Faith and Hope its lofty pillars,
Charity its height sublime

There the Sacred Volume lights us
On our path from earth to heaven;
Square and Compass, Rule and Level,
For our moral teaching giv'n.

So when Death at length shall bid us
Take our last sublime degree
May we trusting, hoping, loving,
Enter on eternity.

Obituary.

BRO. JOHN M. MARTIN.

DIED suddenly at the Police Office, San Fernando, on Monday the 18th ult., whilst in attendance there as interpreter, Bro. John Martial Martin, aged 59 years.

Bro. John M. Martin, a native of that Island, filled in the private paths of life, several important situations, in all of which he bore an upright and desirable reputation: a friend and brother in the moment of sorrow and affliction, his sympathies will be long remembered by many a grateful friend.

Bro. Martin was also closely connected with the history of Freemasonry in this Island, as we find his name figuring on the Charters of Lodges Royal Trinity 572, San Fernando, and the Eastern Star, 368, Port-of-Spain, and was, at the time of his death, one of the very few survivors of those whose names are recorded as Founders

ST. JAMES'S GREAT HALL.—Mr. Bullock's popular Royal Marionettes and Fantoccini Entertainment, now being held at this Hall, is worthy of our special mention.

A private invitation performance was given on Monday last, followed by public performances, which have been continued during the week to good audiences, who are continuous in their expressions of approbation. The programme varied in its character, is carried out with strict integrity as advertised. Among the numerous celebrities exhibited are those of the Claimant "Tichbourne," "Blondin," "Tommy and Sarah," &c. together with a diversity of character and amusement, that at once stamps the performance of first class merit. The Transformation Scene excites much admiration, the scenic effects following in rapid succession amid various changes, and which are agreeably and artistically arranged. The Automaton characters are life like and well rendered, being sustained with a good chorus, further enhanced with a sufficient orchestra, which increases the attraction of a thoroughly good entertainment. The necessary mechanism to put this performance before an audience is very perfect, and we doubt not but that Mr. Bullock, the proprietor, will be rewarded with a successful London career. The figures are well made up, and when on the stage have life like appearance, so much so, that a lady near our correspondent was under the delusion they were life in reality. All the several manipulations are most carefully studied by Mr. Bullock's artistes and we have no hesitation in expressing our opinion that the entertainment, being so good and attractive, its popularity will be secured by the London audiences.

METROPOLITAN MASONIC MEETINGS.
For the Week ending Friday, August 3, 1872.

The Editor will be glad to have notice from Secretaries of Lodges and Chapters of any change in place or time of meeting.

SATURDAY, JULY 27.

- Lodge 1293, Burdett, Mitre Hotel, Hampton Court.
 - Star Lodge of Instruction (1275), Marquis of Granby, New Cross-road, at 7; Bro. C. S. Dilley, Preceptor.
 - Sphinx Lodge of Instruction (1329), Castle Tavern, Camberwell-road, at 7.30; Bros. Thomas and Worthington, Preceptors.
 - Mount Sinai Chapter of Instruction, Union Tavern, Air-street, at 8; Comp. Brett, Preceptor.
 - Manchester Lodge of Instruction, Yorkshire Grey, London Street, Fitzroy-square, at 8; Bro. Ash, P.M., Preceptor.
- MONDAY, JULY 22.
- Lodge 831, British Oak, Beaumont Hall, Beaumont-square, Mile-end.
 - Sincerity Lodge of Instruction (174), Railway Tavern, Fenchurch-street Station, at 7.
 - Strong Man Lodge of Instruction (45), Old Jerusalem Tavern, St. John's Gate, Clerkenwell, at 8; Bro. James Terry, Preceptor.
 - Camden Lodge of Instruction (704), Adelaide Tavern, Haverstock-hill, at 8; Bro. T. A. Adams, Preceptor.
 - Eastern Star Lodge of Instruction (95), Royal Hotel, Mile-end-road, at 7.30; Bro. E. Gotheil, Preceptor.
 - British Oak Lodge of Instruction, Bank of Friendship Tavern, Mile End, at 7 for 8.
 - St. James's Union Lodge of Instruction (180), Horse and Groom Tavern, Winsley-street, (opposite the Pantheon), Oxford-street, at 8; Bro. J. R. Stacey, Preceptor.
 - Wellington Lodge of Instruction, White Swan Tavern, Deptford, at 8; Bro. C. G. Willey, P.M. 1155, Preceptor.
 - St. John of Wapping Lodge of Instruction (1306), Gun Tavern, High-street, Wapping, at 7; Bro. T. Mortlock, Preceptor.
 - West Kent Lodge of Improvement (1297), St. Saviour's College, Stansted-road, Forest-hill, at 7.30; Bro. H. W. Lindus, Preceptor.

TUESDAY, JULY 30.

- Metropolitan Chapter of Instruction, Portugal Hotel, Fleet-street, at 7; Comp. Brett, Preceptor.
- Domestic Lodge of Instruction, Palmerston Tav., Grosvenor-park, Camberwell, at 8; Bro. John Thomas, Preceptor.
- Faith Lodge of Instruction, Refreshment Rooms, Victoria-st. (opposite Westminster Palace Hotel) at 8; Bro. C. A. Cottebrune, Preceptor.
- Yarborough Lodge of Instruction, Green Dragon, Stepney, at 8; Bro. Isaac Saqui, Preceptor.
- Prince Fredk. William Lodge of Instruction (753), Knights of St. John Tavern, St. John's Wood; Bro. F. G. Baker, Preceptor.
- Dalhousie Lodge of Instruction, King Edward, Triangle, Hackney, at 7.30. Bro. J. Saunders, Preceptor.
- Florence Nightingale Lodge of Instruction, Masonic Hall, William-street, Woolwich, at 7.30.
- Prosperity Lodge of Instruction, Gladstone Tavern, Bishopsgate-st. Within, at 7.30; Bro. Bolton, (W.M. 1227), Preceptor.
- St. Marylebone Lodge of Instruction (1305), British Stores Tavern, New-street, St. John's Wood, at 8; Bro. T. A. Adams, Preceptor.

WEDNESDAY, JULY 31.

- Lodge 898, Temperance in the East, 6, Newby-place, Poplar.
- Pythagorean Lodge of Instruction (79), Prince of Orange, Greenwich, at 8; Bro. J. Robt. Nash, Preceptor.
- United Strength Lodge of Instruction (228), the Grafton Arms, Prince of Wales's Road, Kentish Town, at 8; Bro. J. N. Frost, Preceptor.
- Israel Lodge of Instruction, Rising Sun Tavern, Globe-road, at 7.30; Bro. Isaac Saqui, Preceptor.
- New Concord Lodge of Instruction, Rosemary Branch Tavern, Hoxton, at 8.
- Confidence Lodge of Instruction, Railway Tav., London-street, City, at 7.30.
- Royal Union Lodge of Instruction, Horse and Groom Tavern, Winsley-street, Oxford-street, at 8. Bro. T. A. Adams, Preceptor.
- Peckham Lodge of Instruction, Maismore Arms, Park-road, Peckham at 8; Bro. David Rose, Preceptor.
- Temperance in the East Lodge of Instruction, George the Fourth, Catherine-street, Poplar.
- Stanhope Lodge of Instruction, Thicket Hotel, Anerly, at 7.30. p.m.; Bro. H. W. Lindus, Preceptor.

THURSDAY, AUG. 8.

- Lodge 554, Yarborough, Green Dragon, Stepney.
- 822, Victoria Rifles, Freemasons' Hall.
- 1155, Excelsior, Sydney Arms, Lewisham-road.
- 1351, St. Clement Danes, 265, Strand.
- The R.A. Chapter of Improvement, Freemasons' Hall, at 7; Comp. Brett, Preceptor. Ceremony, explanation of R.A. Jewel and Solids, part sections.
- Fidelity Lodge of Instruction (3), Yorkshire Grey, London-st., Tottenham Court-road, at 8; Bro. T. A. Adams, Preceptor.
- Panmure Lodge of Instruction (720), Balham Hotel, Balham, at 7.30; Bro. John Thomas, Preceptor.
- Finsbury Lodge of Instruction, Jolly Anglers' Tavern, Bath-street, City-road; Bro. Stean, Preceptor.
- United Mariners' Lodge of Instruction, Three Cranes, Mile-end-road, at 8; Bro. T. J. Barnes, Preceptor.
- Whittington Lodge of Instruction (862), Crown Tavern, Holborn, at 8; Bro. Lewis Alexander, P.M. 188, Preceptor.

- Chigwell Lodge of Instruction, Bald-faced Stag Hotel, Buckhurst Hill, at 7.30.
- Doric Chapter of Instruction, Rising Sun Tavern, Globe-road, Bethnalgreen, at 8; Comp. T. J. Barnes, Preceptor.

FRIDAY, AUG. 2.

- Lodge 742, Crystal Palace, Crystal Palace, Sydenham.
- Unions Emulation Lodge of Improvement for M.M.'s Freemasons' Hall, at 7.
- Temperance Lodge of Instruction, Victoria Tav., Victoria road, Deptford, at 8.
- Burdett Coutts Lodge of Instruction (1278), Approach Tavern, Approach-road, Victoria-park, at 8; Bro. Geo. W. Verry, Preceptor.
- Clapton Lodge of Instruction, White Hart, Clapton, at 7.30; Bro. John Saunders, Preceptor.
- Royal Standard Lodge of Instruction (1298), The Castle Tavern, Holloway, at 8; Bro. R. Lee, (P.M. 193, W.M. 1298,) Preceptor.
- Pythagorean Chapter of Instruction (No. 79), Prince of Orange, Greenwich-road, at 8; Comp. W. West Smith, Preceptor.
- Westbourne Lodge of Instruction (733) Horse and Groom, Winsley-street, Oxford-street, at 8.
- Metropolitan Lodge of Instruction, Portugal Hotel, Fleet-street, at 7; Bro. Brett, Preceptor.
- Belgrave Lodge of Instruction, Duke of Wellington Hotel, Spring-gardens, Charing-cross; Bro. Pulsford, Preceptor.
- Doric Lodge of Instruction, Three Cranes Tavern, Mile-end-road, at 8; Bro. Isaac Saqui, Preceptor.
- Robert Burns Lodge of Instruction, Union Tavern, Air-street, Regent-st., at 8; Bro. W. Watson, Preceptor.

- Burgoyne Lodge of Instruction, Grafton Arms, Prince of Wales's-road, N.W., at 8.
- St. Luke's Lodge of Instruction (144), Gladstone Tavern, Brompton-road, S.W.
- United Pilgrims Lodge of Instruction, Duke of Edinburgh, Shepherd's-lane, Brixton, at 7; Bro. J. Thomas, P.M., Preceptor.
- Duke of Edinburgh Lodge of Instruction, Silver Lion, Penny-fields, Poplar, at 7; Br. D. S. Potts, Preceptor.
- St. James's Lodge of Instruction, Gregorian Arms Tavern, Jamaica-road, Bermondsey, at 8; Bro. Howes, P.M., Preceptor.

Advertisements.

MASONIC MISCHIEF.—The new Masonic Song. Inscribed to the Worshipful Company of Masons by Gerald Grant. Post Free Eighteen Stamps. London: Stead & Co., 19, Piccadilly, W.

THE NEW MASONIC SONG.—"Men of the Trowe!" "An overwhelming answer to 'Masonic Mischief.'"—Court Express. Eighteen Stamps, post free. London: Henry Stead & Co., 19, Piccadilly, W.

A M.M., who has a wife and six children would be thankful to any Brother if he could assist him to a Situation as CLERK, or any place of trust. First-class references.—Address, X., 1, Chiltern-view-road, Cowly, Middlesex.

MASONIC NOTE PAPER AND ENVELOPES,

MADE EXPRESSLY FOR THE

Craft, Royal Arch, Mark, Red Cross of Rome and Constantine, Knights Templar, Ark Mariners, Rose Croix, and 30th Degree.

Stamped in Relief in Correct Colours, and with Proper Emblems.

The Paper is of very SUPERIOR MANUFACTURE, packed in boxes, containing Five Qaires, emblematically labelled,

Price Three Shillings.

ENVELOPES TO MATCH, SIXPENCE PER PACKET.

Every Freemason should order a sample, either direct, or through any stationer.

KENNING'S MASONIC DEPOTS,

LONDON:—2, 3 & 4, LITTLE BRITAIN, AND 198, FLEET-ST., E.C.
LIVERPOOL:—2, MONUMENT-PLACE.

Established 1798.

"MESSRS. CHARLES WATSON and Co., of 30, Cornhill, forwarded us samples of their 'Cornhill Sherry.' We have taken the opinion of competent judges and veteran wine consumers upon its merits, and pronounce it decidedly the best of the wines at a similar cost which we have tasted, and a great many came before us during the process of our analysis."—Medical Press.

CHARLES WATSON and Co., 30, Cornhill, opposite the Royal Exchange, invite attention to the CORNHILL SHERRY, as their speciality, pure elegant and recherche, and worthy of a place on any gentleman's table.

THE CORNHILL SHERRY, elegant, pale and dry, 30s. per dozen. Carriage paid.

CLARET..... 16s. 22s. 28s. 36s. 42s. to Five Guineas.

SHERRY..... 22s. 26s. 30s. 36s. 42s. 48s. to 84s.

PORT..... 28s. 34s. 42s. 48s. 54s. to 120s.

CHAMPAGNE... 36s. 42s. 54s. 60s. to 84s.

WHISKY—the Ben Nevis—CHARLES WATSON and Co.'s Speciality, 20s. per gallon; the softest and most fascinating Whisky for Toddy in the market.—30, Cornhill. Carriage free within 50 miles. Sample Bottles may be had.

THE CORNHILL SHERRY, rich gold, 30s. per dozen, carriage paid. 30, Cornhill. Sample bottles may be had

Established 1798.

CORNHILL SHERRY.—CHARLES WATSON and Co., 30, Cornhill (opposite Royal Exchange), requests the favour of a visit to these old-established cellars, containing a large stock of the finest old Wines of every country, some curious and rare, to please the most critical connoisseurs. Descriptive list free. C. W. and Co. appoint Agents, with first-class references, in towns where not represented.

THE NEW FLOOR CLOTH.

THE NEW ASPHALTE FLOOR COVERING has been pronounced by our Customers the softest, warmest, and best Floor Cloth yet invented. It is a non-conductor of heat, and containing no Oil in its composition does not become frigid in Winter, or hot and blister in Summer, as does Floor Cloth, Kamptulicon, &c., and its durability is 100 per cent. greater than the usual coverings, although its cost is no more. Can be had in Tessellated Patterns. It is used in London Lodges. For Samples, &c., (post free)

Address—Messrs. CHILES & Co., 57 & 60, Belmont-street, Chalk-Farm-Road, London, N. W.

GOODS CARRIAGE FREE, ANY DISTANCE.

FLOOR CLOTH TESTIMONIAL.

8, Lower James-street, Golden-square, W., March 16th, 1871.
GENTLEMEN,—In reply to your inquiry, I beg to say that I am quite satisfied with your Patent Floor Covering. I think it the warmest and softest Floor Cloth of any, and the best yet invented.— am, Gentlemen, yours respectfully,
To Messrs. CHILES and Co. C. CALIPE.

TABLE OF CONTENTS

Footsteps of Freemasonry 467
 Consecration of a Rose Croix Chapter at Southampton 468
 A Kind Word to the Brethren 469
 CORRESPONDENCE :—
 What is Freemasonry ? 469
 Ancient Grand Lodge of York 470
 Professor Rawlinson and the Ten Tribes..... 470
 Libelling the Prime Minister 471
 The Royal Order of Scotland 472
 CRAFT MASONRY :—
 Metropolitan 473
 Provincial 473
 ROYAL ARCH :
 Provincial 474
 KNIGHTS TEMPLAR —
 Scotland 475
 The Grand Mark Lodge of England 475
 Freemasonry in Trinidad 476
 Freemasonry in Italy 477
 Masonic Tidings 477
 West Lancashire Masonic Relief Committee 478
 Artemus Ward 478
 Masonic Meetings for next week... 478
 Advertisements..... 465, 466, 479, 480

FOOTSTEPS OF FREEMASONRY ;

OR,

FREEMASONRY IN RELATION TO AUTHENTIC HISTORY.

By W. VINER BEDOLFE, M.D., J.D. 1322. Hon. Sec., Sphinx Lodge of Instruction.

(Continued from page 382.)

In endeavouring to trace the Footsteps of Freemasonry, it has ever been far from my intention to suppose or teach that it existed of old under its modern name and denomination. Thus we speak of the British Constitution as existing before the "glorious Revolution," and though it did not always bear that name, yet the traditions, laws, and customs, which we summarise by that appellation, modified only by time and circumstances, have existed from time immemorial.

It is, as the French term it, the "analogue" of what formerly existed, and, as the crocodile may be said to be the "analogue" of the Saurian monsters of the geological periods, and is the form under which their type has descended to our times, so is our Freemasonry the "analogue" of those ancient associations which formed, in fact, "the basis and superstructure" of Roman society.

The more Freemasonry is contemplated, the more wonderful does it seem, and a critical consideration of the ritual, will soon convince the most sceptical that, however modern may seem its form, yet that its essentials have been handed down from ancient times. This may have been done ignorantly, by men who neither knew nor comprehended their meaning, for it is only when we compare it by the light of history with the habits, institutions, and philosophical sects of the ancient Romans, that we can detect its true and proper significations. We may, indeed, put the converse, and ask what have we which they had not, even to the very signs. In fact, ancient Freemasonry was the same as the modern, minus the traditional history. I fearlessly assert that the men who, in modern times, have moulded its forms and dictions, were altogether incapable of inventing the scaffolding on which it hangs, and I believe the question of its ancient existence to have a most important bearing on the well-being and influence of our institution.

But to digress—it must not be supposed that all secret fraternities in ancient times were of an amiable and philosophic character, as may be gathered from Livy's account of the destruction of the order of the Bacchanals.

In this instance it occurred to an unscrupulous Greek brother to invent a new order; we thus find in the testimony of Livy, that inventors of new orders even then existed.

Into this order at first only men, but subsequently, the young of both sexes, and at that immature age when the passions are least under control, were initiated. Instead, however, of pursuing virtue, they fell to vice, and such vice as brings all heathendom before our eyes.

No nation ever more excelled in virtue than did Rome in its earlier and better period, never did a people, not even Sodom itself, sink to such a state of depravity and sensual indulgence as did that nation within a generation of its Augustan age.

The Bacchanalian order, however, revolted even then, and, convicted of vice, perjury, and conspiracy, its doom was signal, for by order of the Senate it was stamped out in ignominy, violence, and blood.

It was probably the signal success of violence in putting down this association, that induced the Emperors in the next age to try the same dealing with the Christians, but how different was the result,—different as is vice from virtue. It may not however be uninteresting to the Masonic brother to bear in mind that the first systematic persecution, (for it extended through all Italy,) and by its success probably the forerunner of that of the Christians, was caused by a new order invented and developed in folly, sin, and shame. There are few pursuits more interesting than to trace the sequences of history.

We may also here notice that in this new society, the slave-born were not excluded, and it became a rule to initiate none over twenty years. We all know the importance our "constitutions" attach to both these points, and it is not impossible that the follies and destruction of this order may have afforded a warning never forgotten.

There is another subject I wish to refer to. In a previous article a quotation from Cicero's Oration for Murena was given, describing Cato as squaring the conduct of his life by the "right rule of reason," and but for want of space in that communication, should have dwelt upon its importance. Indeed, it is a very important fact for us to ascertain that men, not being operative masons, did actually profess to govern their lives symbolically by the square, level, and plumb rule, and used them as emblems. The literal translation of what Cicero says is, that Cato regulated his life by the "norman," that is, the mechanic's square, and the duties of his office, by the "perpendicularum," that is, the mechanic's plumb rule.

The very learned Portroyalist commentator on this passage remarks that these were not only proverbial phrases amongst the Greeks in common life, but that the Stoics especially adopted these mechanical emblems, and used them commonly in their teachings.

Here, then, we have, undoubtedly, the highest and clearest authority for the use of the square, level, and plumb rule, and all seem to have been included under the term of "norma," in philosophical teaching, and it is perfectly clear that as speculative masons, we are not indebted to our operative friends for their tools.

The same may be observed of the early Christian writers, some of the most eminent being either stoics or platonists, and who carrying into their new calling their accustomed figures of speech, called the Bible the "Sacred Canon" literally the "Holy Level or Plumb Rule." This does not indeed prove them to have been masons, but shows the phrases of the two bodies had one common origin.

I think we have already pretty clearly shown whence our emblem of the Apron is derived, that it is not servilely copied from the working mason, but that it is borne in memory of primeval times, precisely as our ritual expresses it, as a badge of innocence and bond of friendship.

I may here also, in passing, mention a fact accidentally omitted in its due place, viz., that our division of the day into three parts is essentially Roman. It was expressly so divided by the "Laws of the twelve tables," and for nearly 500 years remained the unchanged and only practice, the hours were subsequently added.

Although I have not at all, myself, investigated the fact, and by no means vouch for it, "Masson" is said to be a Coptic word, signifying Brother. Research would be interesting.

In attempting to chronologise our system, I should say that Freemasonry, up to and including the first part of the third degree, is essentially Roman in its character, and resembles the societies which existed there under the Republic, having been founded by Numa.

Secondly, under the Empire, B.C. 28, and for a generation previously, i.e., after the conquest of Greece, Grecian ideas penetrated, pervaded, and modified this equally with all other institutions. From this influence also arose our philosophy, and the introduction from the Stoic teachings of our Geometrical emblems. I believe also that these institutions were finally arranged about the second century of the Christian era.

I will request permission to make an extract from a very great authority, the German writer Tenneman, who remarks "the political, religious, and moral conditions of the Roman empire during the first century of the Christian era were not such as to animate and sustain a spirit of philosophical research, but a mania for the strange, and extraordinary neglect of the popular religion and superstition, and extinction of all noble sentiments prevailed; consequently the endeavours of the wise and reasoning amongst them were directed in various ways:

1st. To maintain and modify the schools already existing.

2ndly. To revive the neglected doctrines of their forefathers, as for example the "Pythagorean philosophy" (so much identified with Freemasonry).

3. To combine the various systems of Plato, Aristotle, &c., (not forgetting even Zoroaster and Hermes) and to trace the former ones back to the ancient dogmata, or teachings of Pythagoras.

4thly. To combine also in one the spirit of "eastern and western philosophy."

It was at this period, likewise, at the commencement of the second century, that Adrain first codified the Roman laws (an object not yet attained in England) under the title of the "Edictum perpetuum," and Schlegel adds that no longer bent upon conquest, the better Romans solely and exclusively devoted themselves to the regeneration of public morals, according to those ideal conceptions formed of old Rome in her earlier and happier days.

"When none was for a party, but all were for the state,

Then the great man helped the poor, and the poor man loved the great

Then lands were fairly portioned, then spoils were fairly sold.

The Romans were like brothers in the brave days of old."

This same condition of things, as above defined, existed even up to the time of Constantine the great, and the removal of the seat of empire to Constantinople in the fourth century of the Christian era, may be looked upon as a mid-point in history between ancient and modern times.

Our system bears the strongest evidence of the peculiar teachings of this period, and it may confidently be said that at this same epoch Masonry proper plumed its wings for its flight through time.

Up to this period it is most certain that no trace of our traditional history was to be found, that no vestige of Hebraism could have mingled with the brotherhoods of those days. It is only necessary to glance at the writers of those times—at Horace, with his cutting ribaldry on the "curtailed Jew," or at Juvenal's smooth satires on their "sabbaths" and their "pigs,"—to show in what mockery they were held. Further, and as if to prove that no Israelite of those days would have entered into any institution embracing gentiles, and that certainly no Jewish masonic institutions existed, Tacitus expressly says, "they will neither eat with, associate with, nor assist and comfort any person whatever, save those of their own faith; to all others they show hostility and hate." Juvenal, in another place adds, "they will neither direct the lost and wandering wayfarer into the right road, nor the traveller, fainting with heat and thirst, to the fountain, unless of their own sect."

We know very well that this feeling did not diminish, but rather increased, when Christian domination had produced Christian fanaticism (for the old Romans were not intolerant), and I believe, speaking critically, that the Jews never possessed even the mental power of forming any masonic institution whatever; there is no trace of it among the ancient Jews, and it had been a moral impossibility. Even if we consult their great writer of those days, Philo-Judeus, who, like St. Paul, his contemporary, was a Pharisee and a platonist, he makes no sign.

"Sure naught masonic lodges in that breast
And with no rapture moves the vocal air
To testisfy its hidden residence.

This also brings us to an important crisis in the history of the world, a crisis big with the fate of masonry and of Rome, when Rome itself, the proud mistress of the world, gorged with lust and crime, and blood, was to see her empire pass away, and give place to a hated rival. I refer to the removal of the Roman capital to Constantinople in the 4th century, the very threshold of modern times, and the era of the council of Nice, by which in religious matters we are all more or less still bound.

It is not my object to describe the condition of affairs at this time, the policy of the state, or its effect upon the world at large. It is sufficient for us to say that all Roman institutions, naturally, necessarily, and as history proves, were carried there also. But history likewise bears witness that the philosophy and literature, although declined from its high state of Augustan perfection, spread abroad among the Roman colonies, which under now Christianized Rome, assumed a degree of wealth and cultivation, which the remains of towns, temples, roads, bridges, and aqueducts, spread over half of Europe, attest to this day.

Rome's loss turned, therefore, to the advantage of other cities, and in the wake of commerce and cultivation flocked all the institutions which distinguished Rome, as now, in our days, do British institutions.

This is not a matter of inference, but capable of the clearest proof, and that the masonic institutions of those days still flourished, even for ages, we may be certain from the fact we have already noticed, viz., that the sodality or brotherhood of the Lupercalii, was still flourishing in the 6th century, when it was actually strong enough to require for suppression an imperial edict of the Emperor Anastatius, it is presumed from savouring too strongly of heathen traditions, and for the present we leave it. In stating this, I consider it full and efficient proof that those brotherhoods of which Cicero gives so beautiful a description existed also, and with the renewed love of the better and wiser Romans, for all which being ancient was also good and virtuous, it cannot be doubted that their masonic philosophy was cultivated with that love which, rightly understood, it ought ever to inspire.

Masonry, in fact, is either a philosophy, or it is nothing, but as a philosophy, and as such alone, do I exhort my brethren to guard its secrets, by practising them, and proclaim its mysteries by their lives, thus proving—

That some there be that by due steps aspire
To lay their right hands on that glorious key
That ope's the portal.

In our next we propose to continue the reference to the Hebraic tradition.

CONSECRATION OF A ROSE CROIX CHAPTER AT SOUTHAMPTON.

On the 29th July, at the Masonic Hall in Southampton, the ceremony of constituting and consecrating the Canute Rose Croix Chapter took place. The following members of the Order were present:—Illus. Bros. C. J. Vigné, 33°, G. Com.; Gen. H. Clerk, 33°, G. Chan.; J. M. P. Montagu, 33° G. Sec.; Hyde Pullen, 33°; Gen. Doherty, 31°; C. A. Newnham, 31°; Capt. Thayre, R.N., 30°; Rev. P. H. Newnham, 30°; Willet Adye, 30°; W. Hickman, 30°; J. F. Starkey, 30°; J. Read, 30; Montague Guest, M.P., 18°; Rev. Basil Wilberforce, 18°; J. R. Stebbing, 18°; W. H. Ford, 18°, M.W.S. Royal Naval Chapter; T. G. Horder, 18°, M.W.S. Vigne Chapter; J. E. Le Feuvre, 18°; J. N. Pocock, 18°; George Lungley, 18°; and other brethren.

A Rose Croix Chapter having been opened, the following candidates were introduced and regularly admitted into the Order, viz.:—Bros. Dr. Robert Welch, George T. Harper, Henry W. Bull, and Robert Sharpe, and under dispensation Bro. J. Biggs was obligated as Equerry.

The Supreme Council then retired, and shortly afterwards re-entered in procession, and were received by the Brethren in the usual manner.

The ceremony of Constitution and Consecration then took place, it being performed most solemnly by the Supreme Council, assisted by Bro. Hyde Pullen, and evidently made very great impression on the brethren assembled. The new Chapter was then proclaimed under the title of the "Canute" Chapter Rose Croix.

The M.W.S. designate, Bro. William Hickman, 30° (Past A.D.C. of the Grand Lodge of England) was then installed by Bro. Hyde Pullen, and the following brethren were appointed to fill the various offices in the Chapter by the M.W.S., viz.:—Bros. Rev. Basil Wilberforce, Le Feuvre, Pocock, Harper, Stebbing, Welch, Bull, Sharpe, and others.

A vote of thanks was then proposed and carried with acclamation to the Supreme Council for their having so kindly attended and conducted the proceedings on this interesting occasion.

A similar vote was also most heartily awarded to Bro. Hyde Pullen, and in proposing it the M.W. Sovereign referred to the many pleasurable recollections of former meetings with him in masonic work in the neighbourhood.

Bro. Stebbing having also added a few eloquent remarks in recognition of the high appreciation of Bro. Pullen by Hampshire Masons, the votes were very heartily responded to, and the chapter was closed with the usual ceremonies.

A very sumptuous banquet was provided in an adjoining room of the Hall, and the Brethren celebrated the opening of the new Chapter by spending a most enjoyable evening together round the festive board, exchanging mutual congratulations on the success of the meeting, and anticipating that the new Chapter will soon become a very important and influential addition to the Masonic body in this neighbourhood. Many other candidates are desirous of joining the Order, but from other engagements were not able to attend for admission on this day of meeting. The banquet was provided by Bro. Dartnall (No. 130 Craft Lodge) in his usual excellent manner, and gave entire satisfaction to all present. The room was covered with flags and banners, and the table ornamented in the most beautiful manner with ruby-coloured fruit and flower-stands, decorated with roses and other flowers, and massive candelabra, making a most elegant and appropriate appearance.

Letters of regret for non-attendance through other engagements were received from the members of the Supreme Council who were not present, and from Bro. Beach, M.P., the Prov. Grand Master (who was abroad), Bro. J. Hervey (the Grand Sec. of England), Bro. J. Coombs, 32°; Bro. R. Spiers, 32°; Capt. Burgess, 30° (M.W.S. St. George's Chapter, London); Bro. F. C. M'Calmont, 30°; Bro. C. F. Arden, 30°, M.W.S. Weymouth; Rev. Bro. Pettat, 18°; Prov. G. Chaplain; Bro. George Kenning, 30°; and others.

A KIND WORD TO THE BRETHREN.

Not that we are receiving too many members into our Order, for the greater number, consistent with thorough instruction and Masonic discipline, the more servicable to the great principles we advocate. But are we not frequently receiving persons and hastily urging them on, of whose character, habits, and reputation we know but little? We have before adverted to the exclusion of the selfish, for how can they engage in any great work for the relief of a brother or humanity? We always find such imposing some obstacle to charitable purposes and benevolent action. We have frequently referred to the importance of truth as a qualification. Can a man who is guilty of prevarication, who is dishonest in his opinions, who has no conception of principle in politics or religion, engage in search after truth and in its propagation?

But are we not now in danger, great danger, of suffering as a society from the vice of intemperance? Are we not in danger of the repetition of the scenes preceding the anti-Masonic tornado? We may have provided against the credit system then so much in use in the Lodges, and thus have saved the Order from the influence of men in debt to it, a burden and ready to become its enemies, finding it easier to cancel the obligation by abjuration. We have for ever escaped the repetition of a violent and gross persecution; but we doubt whether this was an evil to Freemasonry. Persecution and adversity are as essential, occasionally, to a society as to an individual. Have we escaped the ravages of intemperance in our midst? We may boast of our comparative freedom in this regard, and that temperance prevails among us to a greater degree than in any other institution; but are we free—are we doing our duty? Shall Masonry contribute in the least to the encouragement of intemperance? God forbid. With her claims for regard as a means of temperance, can she endure an evil official example; Can our society for a moment tolerate drunkenness in any of its officers? Should partiality for friends, or commiseration for the unfortunate, permit the retention of a man who is not perfectly sober, in any post of honour or distinction? Should we not be immovable here, and in no case yielding? Tempted by no great capability of serving as officers? Better never have a degree conferred, than to give countenance to this vice in our midst. Let such officer distinctly understand that he must promptly resign or be tried and degraded. Let no personal tenderness intervene. Such officers are men of noble social traits, who gather around our sympathies, and it is difficult to act. Love the man no less, but the whole Order, the whole Brotherhood more.

Do what you can to save the Brother, but let no tenderness stop you in your duty to the Lodge, for fear this example may prove contagious, and and the Lodge become like the Master.

Jefferson once expressed his conviction, the result of long and varied experience, that no man should be entrusted with office who drank. So our experience admonishes us in Freemasonry.

Again, what shall be done with erring brothers holding no official position? Try to reform and save. Talk with them, urge them to decision, to abstain utterly,—for when a brother has once fallen, there is no certain remedy but in total abstinence. If he hear not individual brethren, let the Lodge, in a spirit of kindness and brotherly love, appoint a good and benevolent member to talk officially with him, and if unsuccessful, increase the number of the committee, and protest and multiply effort to save the brother.

Find out where the temptation lies, and apply the remedy. Let the Lodge persevere in doing good. Let exclusion be the last resort. Thus may we do our duty to the erring brethren, and at the same time to the brotherhood. Thus will something be done to save the Craft.

But more is necessary. A drunken brother will be very likely to attract those like himself into the Lodge. Be constant in watchfulness here. Use the blackball in every case where the probabilities are of evil result. We would also suggest that the Lodge censure any brother recommending a petitioner known to be of unsteady habits.

Generally in this matter are we doing our full duty? While seeking to promote that temperance, which forms one of the noblest and most comprehensive of the Christian virtues, are we staying drunkenness, with its legion of ills? We know how it diseases the body and disturbs the equilibrium of the intellect, and poisons the springs of generous affection in the heart, and lays a ruthless hand upon the whole moral and spiritual nature, what it does to its poor victim (and he a brother sometimes), and its ravages in Masonic households. We know its blight on happiness and virtue, and even hope. We know the palpable shame, and misery, and guilt, about the drunkard's home; the desolate hearts and cold hearths, where want breaks in as an armed man, and the wife (or sister) is heart-broken or debased, and the children are demoralized, where ribaldry, blasphemy, and obscenity abound. Do we not realize that we have a duty, and are we not resolved that the vice of intemperance shall find no sanction nor protection from our Order?

There is no hope for those who have once fallen but in total abstinence, and fearful is the account of those brothers who place temptation before such.

We know the case of a young brother, of no ordinary promise, who unhappily had contracted habits of intemperance. His excess brought grief to a large circle of friends and relatives, and to the Lodge of which he was a member. The earnest and kind remonstrances of friends and the Lodge led him to desist, and understanding the philosophy of his case, he firmly resolved to abstain the rest of his days.

Not long after, in a social circle, he was urged to drink and be agreeable. A brother urged him, and a brother's wife. Yes, these unwittingly urged this brother, lately so lost, and a brother so marvellously redeemed. Yes, they became the instrument of his downfall. With banter he was cheated out of his noble purposes. He felt the demon waking from temporary sleep, and he said to a brother, "Now I have tasted once more, and I must drink on." He did drink on, and died a drunkard's death, and was borne to a grave of shame.

Let us do our duty to our brethren and our fraternity, to the wives and children of our Masonic household, and to a world to be influenced by our example.

Is not drinking healths becoming to common here and throughout the land? Is not a gentleman and a brother sometimes denominated unsociable unless he repeats it again? We cannot better illustrate the absurdity of this practice than by the case of the German nobleman who once paid a visit to Great Britain, when the practice of toasting and drinking healths was at its height.

Wherever he went, during a six month's tour, he found himself obliged to drink, though never so loath. He must drink with every one who would be civil to him, and with every one, too, who wished a convenient pretext for taking another glass. He must drink a bumper in honour of the King and Queen, in honour of Church and State, in honour of the army and navy. How often did he find himself retiring, with throbbing temples and burning cheeks, from these scenes of intrusive hospitality. At length his visit drew to a close; and to requite, in some measure, the attention that had been lavished upon him, he made a great entertainment. Assembling those who had done him honour, he gathered them around a most sumptuous banquet, and feasted them to their utmost content. The tables were then cleared. Servants entered with two enormous hams; one was placed at each end; slices were cut and passed round to each guest, when the host rose and with all gravity said, "Gentlemen, I give you the King! please eat to his honour." His guests protested. They had dined; they were Jews; they were already surcharged through his too generous cheer. But he was inflexible. "Gentlemen," said he, "for six months you have compelled me to drink at your bidding. Is it too much that you should now eat at mine? I have been submissive; why should you not follow my example? You will please do honour to your King! You shall then be served with another slice in honour of the Queen, another to the prosperity of the Royal family, and so on to the end of the chapter.—Michigan Freemason.

Original Correspondence.

WHAT IS FREEMASONRY?

To the Editor of the Freemason.

Dear Sir, and Brother,

This is a question often asked, and very easily answered by any Freemason, who will tell you, that it is a "peculiar system of morality, veiled in allegory, and illustrated by symbols."

I was initiated into the mysteries and privileges of Freemasonry in the year 1835, and I then determined to learn "what it was all about." I learnt the working of a Lodge, and soon became its W.M. I was a subscriber and an occasional correspondent to the "Quarterly Review" and read every new work by Dr. Oliver and other Masonic writers, and not only read, but took occasional notes of my readings, and I would say to my Brethren in the Craft, if you wish to become Masons in the proper sense of the word, go and do likewise; you know Mr. Editor, there are hundreds of Masons who attend lodge and banquet, and then think they have done all that is required of a Mason, and have nothing more to learn. What, can such an one think of Masonry!

I advise all young Masons, who take any interest in the Craft, to subscribe to your paper, as a stepping stone to the study of Masonry, and

I have no doubt that in the end, some of them, at any rate, will become experienced and good Masons.

I will now give you answers to the question at the head of this letter, given by some of our Brethren experienced in the Craft, which I have from time to time, in my readings, noted down, should you think them worthy of a place in your paper.

The Rev. Dr. Oliver, in a note to his Historical Landmarks of Freemasonry, says that "Freemasonry is an institution sui generis; no other society can be compared with it, it exists solely of itself. It eclipses all the institutions and orders in the world, which have been or shall be (Christianity alone excepted). The numerous attempts which ever have been made at different periods to expose it to public derision, and destroy its existence have all signally failed. Every attack has produced an effect contrary to the wishes and anticipations of its projectors. The most vindictive assault has tended to enlarge the place of its tents, to stretch forth the curtains of its habitation, to lengthen its cords and strengthen its stakes." His Royal Highness the Duke of Sussex (our former G.M.) thus described our excellent institution:—"Masonry," said he, "is one of the most sublime and perfect institutions that ever was formed for the advancement of happiness and the general good of mankind; creating in all its varieties universal benevolence and brotherly love. It holds out allurements so captivating as to inspire the brotherhood with emulation to deeds of glory, such as must command throughout the world veneration and applause, and such as must entitle those who perform them to dignity and respect.

It teaches us those useful, wise, and instructive doctrines, upon which alone true happiness is founded; and at the same time affords those easy paths by which we attain the rewards of virtue. It teaches us the duties which we owe to our neighbour, never to injure him in any one situation, but to conduct ourselves with justice and impartiality; it bids us not to divulge the mystery to the public, and it orders us to be true to our trust, and above all meanness and dissimulation, and in all our vocations to perform religiously that which we ought to do."

Brother Robinson, D.P.G.M. for Cornwall, in an address to the brethren at Falmouth, thus describes our ancient fraternity:—"Its profession," he said, "instructs and enjoins us to worship and adore our Almighty Maker, to honour and obey the sovereign of our country, to be peaceful and orderly in all our stations, diligent in our callings, upright and honest in our dealings, obedient and respectful towards our superiors, gentle and condescending to our inferiors, merciful towards our enemies, considerate, mild, and indulgent in our censures, and kind, courteous and obliging in all the relative duties of life."

The Rev. Brother John Russell, P.G., Chaplain for Devon, in his sermon before the P. G. Lodge at Barnstaple, said, "The precepts of the Gospel were universally the obligations of masonry: so far from containing aught that was inconsistent with the Gospel, the love of the brotherhood, the fear of God, and the honour of the Queen, were three of the brightest Jewels of Masonry—three of its richest ornaments—three of its first and leading principles."

I am, Dear Sir and Brother,

Yours faithfully and fraternally

J. T. SHAPLAND, P.M. 421.

R.A., 312, and M. M., 9.

South Moulton,
July 29th, 1872

THE ANCIENT GRAND LODGE OF YORK.

Bro. Jacob Norton's letter in the last number of the Freemason, appears to me to require a few remarks and corrections.

1. There never has really been any question among those who have looked into the subject for some time past, about the "York Rite." They have long known that it is a complete misnomer, in as far and inasmuch as it claims to originate at York, or to be a product of the York Grand Lodge.

The York Rite, as it is called, has really nothing whatever to do with the York Grand Lodge, but is a production of the middle of the last century.

The only degrees practised in York, were the Three Craft Degrees, the Royal Arch, and quite late in last century, about 1780, the Masonic Knights Templar Degree!

2. I fail altogether to follow Bro. Norton's argument as regards the comparative price of wages.

In the fourteenth century, the Master Mason was a person of high education and high wages, and ranked generally as a "geniosus," or gentleman, while the Masons "cæmentarii," and their assistants, were all very well paid, indeed, and above the average of common workmen elsewhere.

Bro. Norton falls into the mistake he has, by forgetting a very important question, the value of money then and now.

If we want to ascertain to-day the comparative value of money and wages, say as regards the fourteenth century, we must add fourteen times to the amount then, to get the present value, or some writers even say, fifteen times!

If we take this test, and study the York Fabric Rolls of 1370, and onwards, we shall soon see that the Masons were well paid.

If we descend to 1585, we may freely add ten times, and about seven times to 1600, so as to get the comparative value of wages and money.

There is, therefore, really no force in the argument that the Masons were too poor to go to York to attend the Grand Assembly, as they were always a well paid body, and were, in truth, the skilled artisans of those days.

3. With regard to the earliest mention of York as the place of the meeting of the Masons, though it is not in Halliwell's MS., or Matthew Cooke's, yet we find it in Dowland's copy, which represents a very old form, and that "cyte," mentioned both in the poem and the additional MS., may fairly be assumed to be "York."

Dowland's form represents a very old original (not yet found), not later than 1500, and I see no reason whatever for rejecting the old Masonic Legend of York being the place of meeting of the Grand Assembly.

4. Athelstan is mentioned in all the MSS., and as his date was about 927, it is hardly correct to say that nothing is found of his date until 1717.

5. It is quite true that St. Alban is not mentioned in the poem, so far as memory serves me now, without any book to refer to, but he is mentioned in Matthew Cooke's MS. about 1490.

6. And though it is quite true that no Charter from Athelstan has yet turned up, I am not prepared to admit that such never existed, or may not even yet exist, as I have already previously shewn, the a priori probability of Athelstan granting a Charter to the Masonic guilds.

A MASONIC STUDENT.

PROFESSOR RAWLINSON AND THE TEN TRIBES.

To the Editor of the Freemason.

Dear Sir and Brother,—

We may be tolerably certain that when a man of profound learning, who has many imperative calls upon his time, and who occupies, moreover, the chair of a Professor in the University of Oxford, turns aside from his usual course, to address himself to a subject that does not properly fall in his way, it must be because he attaches some importance to it, either for its truth and the consequences resulting from it, or for its supposed erroneousness and the mischief it is likely to produce.

In the "Leisure Hour" of July 6th, which a friend has been good enough to send to me, I find a paper, bearing the name of Professor Rawlinson, "author of the Five Great Monarchies," and sundry other erudite works, some of which, especially his "Five Great Monarchies," would induce one to believe that he is one of the men most likely to throw some light on the interesting question he has chosen to dilate upon, "Where are the Ten Tribes?" And the style in which he writes, and the supercilious terms in which he speaks of those who have given to the enquiry the most diligent study, and have written the most largely and intelligently upon it, evinces, very unmistakeably, the high estimate he has formed of his own capabilities for disposing of the question, and the assurance he feels of being able to dissipate, by a few strokes of his pen, the delusion by which, he believes, many deep-thinking and learned men are led astray!

That the question upon which the Professor now writes is one of much interest, he shews, in calling attention to the published literature of the subject, which "is so large," he says, "that even a condensed account of it, would occupy more space than can be afforded to it, within the limits of this article."

This is not overstating the fact, and it might be thought that a writer who thus calls attention to it, would have been restrained from speaking or writing contemptuously, not only of those who happen to differ from him in the view he takes of the subject, but of those who "waste their powers of ratiocination upon a question that has been examined, sifted, argued out, and put away as 'done with.'" In like manner, the Professor speaks of a book which has received the most respectful attention and called forth expressions of profound admiration, for both its substance and its style, from scholars, if not so deeply read in history as the Camden Professor, yet having a reputation for much learning, critical acumen, and sound judgment, as being made up of "arguments of the most flimsy and unsubstantial kind," the book being "after a short time forgotten, no traces of the opinions put forth in it having been adopted by any writer of any (or even of no) reputation"; that is, between 1845 and 1870. What has the Professor been doing, during the quarter of a century he speaks of? Have Babylonian bricks and Assyrian cylinders so absorbed his attention that he has been wholly oblivious of what has occupied the minds and engaged the pens of hundreds of learned and devout men, who have been induced to adopt the opinions he writes so disparagingly of, and puts away as "done with"? To be ignorant that the question has, during the years the Professor speaks of, been treated as a topic of great interest, in the religious world, at home and abroad, may not be a matter for censure; but it is a disqualification for writing upon it, and especially for writing upon it in a tone of disparagement and almost of contempt of those who "waste their time and thought" in reading what may be written on the other side.

To enumerate the names of those who have espoused and written in furtherance of the views put forth in "Our Origin," during the twenty-five years the Professor speaks of, would far exceed the limits within which I must confine myself, but I may mention Professor Piazzi Smyth, Astronomer Royal of Scotland, author of several learned works on the Great Pyramid, and Ancient Egyptian Life; Dr. George Moore, of Hastings, author of "the Use of the Body in relation to the Mind," "The Lost Tribes, or the Saxons of the East and West," "The ancient Pillar Stones of Scotland," &c.; the Rev. Jacob Tomlin, author of "A Comparative Vocabulary of 48 Languages," "An exposition of the Apocalypse," &c.; the late Rev. Alexander Dallas, Dr. Marsh, and Dr. Campbell; Mr. R. Govett, author of "English derived from Hebrew, with glances at Greek and Latin;" and Mr. Robert Mimpriess, whose "Gospel Treasury and Expository Harmony of the Four Evangelists," partly the work of Mr. Wilson, whose views on the Israelites pervade it, and of which there have been editions, in different sizes, sold to the number of more than 30,000 copies. These are all men of some reputation; and it may be safely affirmed, because the proof is at hand, that during the period that Professor Rawlinson supposes the question of "Our Origin" to have been dead and put away as "done with," it was exciting a very lively interest throughout the United Kingdom, in America, where the work was republished and largely circulated, and in such distant regions as Syria and Palestine.

But as if awaking out of sleep, Professor Rawlinson finds that after a lapse of five and twenty years, Mr. Wilson's "views have been reasserted," in a sort of reproduction of his work—"Our Israelitish Origin—in a modern form;" but though "the brochure is having a wonderful circulation," it "is not," he says, "calculated to produce the slightest effect on the opinion of those competent to form one," but "only on the ignorant and unlearned;” and to refute it, therefore, “would be waste of labour, for which” the Professor has “no inclination.” Nevertheless, Professor Rawlinson, animated by a praiseworthy desire to do good, leaves his professor’s chair, and his profounder studies, for a time, in the hope of “preventing, in the future, the recurrence of such idle and unprofitable exertions as the ‘identifications’ on our Israelitish Origin,” and in “checking such speculations, and curtailing the waste of time and thought which at present takes place in the reading of them.”

Those who are so unfortunate as to entertain the views thus characterized and tabooed by the Professor, might readily submit to the imputations of stupidity or folly, of unlearning and ignorance, thus put upon them, if, in following this great luminary for “more light,” or in the hope of finding something which might induce them to re-examine the foundation upon which they rest, they did not, instead, find themselves in the condition of the poor countryman who wearied himself, all day, in toiling up “a long rode that led nowhere.” The “teachings of history,” by which the Professor undertakes to correct our errors and stop “our waste of time and thought,” do not comprise a single fact or incident with which those who have studied the subject have not long since become familiar; and which I may add, have not all and often been “thoroughly discussed, examined, sifted, argued out, and put away as ‘done with.’”

It is somewhat mortifying when looking for a piece of bread to have a stone thrust upon one; and scarcely less so, when a learned Professor, who, in his own department of knowledge, is inferior to few, condescends to go out of his way, with the laudable purpose of “putting down” false and ignorant teachers, who are causing men to waste their time and strength, but who, though opening in a style which makes one tremble as in the presence of an infallible authority, gives one nothing but the chaff which has been thrown aside, as waste, by many labourers, who have been in the field before him. The Professor’s exertion is as barren of arguments as it is of facts; and furnishes another proof that a man may be an industrious student of history and an accomplished archaeologist, revelling amongst cuneiform writings, and exploring the ruins of ancient cities, and yet not be able to read or truly apprehend the text of a book which is familiar to millions of his fellow countrymen, who know no more of Assyria or Babylonia, where Professor Rawlinson is at home, than they do of Timbuctoo or Japan.

But let me glance at the Professors “teachings of history,” which are produced with as much apparent confidence, and as little attempted proof, as if they had not all been examined and answered, over and over again, between 1845 and 1870.

Professor Rawlinson’s first “teaching of history” is, that the Ten Tribes were “not carried away wholly into captivity by Tiglath-Pileser and the Assyrian King who took Samaria, whether he were Shalmaneser or Sargon.” Before I offer a word on this “teaching of history,” I may be permitted to say that the sentence I have quoted affords no favourable example of style, in an historical investigation. It is on the contrary, careless, loose, and calculated to produce a false impression. A mere child who has read his Bible knows that Tiglath-Pileser did not carry away wholly into captivity the Ten Tribes of Israel, for he has read in 2 Kings xv. 29, “In the days of Pekah, King of Israel, came Tiglath-Pileser, King of Assyria, and took, Ijon, and Abel-beth, Maachah, and Janoah, and Kedesh, and Hazor, and Gilead, and Galilee, all the land of Naphtali, and carried them captive to Assyria.” He could not have read the historical books of his Bible and not have known that these were but a few places in the extreme north of Galilee and of the trans-Jordan country. This was not the overthrow of the Israelitish nation, though a prelude to it. That was accomplished by a subsequent king of Assyria, and it is a proof of the carelessness with which the Professor has treated this subject, to find him writing, “the Assyrian king who took Samaria, whether he were Shalmaneser or Sargon.” He knows—for no man, perhaps, is more familiar than he with the results of the researches which Mr. Layard and others have made in the Assyrian ruins, that it is no question as to what Assyrian king completed the conquest of Israel. We are not left in doubt whether it was Shalmaneser or Sargon, for the discovery of Sargons’ Palace, at Korsaban, by M. Botta, in 1842, and the decyphering of an inscription on the wall of the great hall there, and which, there is reason to believe was written or dictated by Sargon himself, says, “I besieged, took, and occupied the city of Samaria, and carried away 27,280 persons who dwelt in it.” Thus much for the Professor’s precision; now for his facts, arguments, &c.

What may be meant by the phrase, “carried away wholly into captivity,” I will not undertake to determine; if it be meant that every individual Israelite was not carried away, it is not to be disputed. But that is not the question. Was the carrying away such as to transplant the ten tribes, as a nation, into the territories of the Assyrian conqueror; or was it that only the flower of the people were taken away, leaving a considerable portion of them in their own land? I submit, with all deference to so great an authority, that the carrying away of the people was so general as to justify the statement, that Israel was carried away wholly into captivity, leaving the land in a state of desolation. My reasons are (1) That it is so stated in the only record to which Professor Rawlinson refers. When the wife of Jeroboam went to consult the Prophet Ahijah, the old man uttered this terrible threat, “the Lord shall smite Israel, as a reed is shaken in the water; and He shall root up Israel out of this good land, which He gave to their fathers; and shall scatter them beyond the river, because they have made their groves, provoking the Lord to anger.” (1 Kings xiv. 15.) Surely no language could more clearly portray the extinction of the nation, and the scattering of the people beyond the river, whither they were afterwards carried. Nevertheless, we have in chap. xvii. of the Second Book of Kings, language if possible still more explicit, as describing the carrying away of the people: “Therefore the Lord was very angry with Israel, and removed them out of his sight; there was none left, but the tribe of Judah only.” “And the Lord rejected all the seed of Israel, and delivered them into the hand of spoilers, until He had removed Israel out of His sight.” So was Israel carried away out of their own land into Assyria.” If this language is not intended to describe the carrying away of all Israel into captivity, no language could do so. Once more, Jeremiah, depicting the desolating judgment that was coming upon Judah, uses these expressive words; “And I will cast you out of my sight, as I have cast out all your brethren, even the whole seed of Ephraim;” that is, the Ten Tribes, (Jer. vii. 15). If words have any meaning, or were intended to be understood in their ordinary meaning, both the historian and the prophet describe the carrying away of the tribes, as a whole, and the utter extinction of the kingdom. (2) The same conclusion is to be drawn from these two circumstances, first the Assyrian king sent people from his own dominions to colonise the kingdom of Samaria, instead of the children of Israel, whom he had deported, (2 Kings xvii. 24); and second, that even after this immigration, the land was so sparse of people that the wild beasts multiplied in the towns and villages, and slew many (ver. 25).

After looking at these circumstances and the authority upon which they rest, we are hardly prepared, at the Professor’s bidding, to admit that the carrying away of the Israelites into the dominions of the Assyrian king was so partial as to represent only a “small community or several small communities” there—that being the inference we are suggested to draw from the circumstances of the captivity.

But Professor Rawlinson finds proofs in “many passages of Scripture,” that the deportation of the Israelites was but a partial one. (1) The first of these is deduced from the fact, that, eighty years after the captivity, Josiah, king of Judah, made “a progress through the cities of Manasseh, Ephraim, and Simeon, even unto Naphtali, cutting down all the idols throughout all the land of Israel,” (2 Chron. xxxiv. 6. 7.) But this surely furnishes an argument the other way, for had not the kingdom been completely overthrown, and the Israelites reduced to so few in numbers as to be termed a remnant, the Judaites with whom they had so long lived in enmity, and with whom they were engaged in a desolating war, up to the crowning of their calamities by the Assyrians, would never have been permitted to march through the land unmolested, and “break down the altars and the groves, and beat the graven images into powder, and cut down all the idols, throughout all the land of Israel.” (2) “The great Passover celebrated by Josiah was attended not only by all Judah, but by the children of Israel that were found,” (ch. xxxv. 17, 18.) But, I submit here, as I have done on the Professor’s first proof, that the argument points in the other direction. Indeed, the very phraseology employed to represent the presence of Israelites at this great Passover in itself determines the question. Upon the approach of Shalmaneser upon Samaria, many of the Israelites, no doubt, fled into Judea, as well as into the coasts of Tyre and Sidon, and such as were at Jerusalem and such of the remnant as were left in the cities of Israel, as were disposed to do so, joined in the celebration of the great festival. The authorised version says “such of the children of Israel as were present, i.e., in Jerusalem, kept the Passover at that time;” or, as the translators have it in the margin, more literally, such as were found—their number being so few in the land, that they had to be “sought for,” “and found.”

One may certainly concede to the Professor and to Dr. Davidson, whom he quotes, that “the country had not been so depopulated as to possess no Israelite whatever,” but we cannot permit any mere inference from the fact just noticed, to set aside the unequivocal statement of the sacred text, that “the Lord was very angry with Israel, and removed them out of his sight, so that there was none left. . . . The Lord rejected all the seed of Israel, and delivered them into the hand of spoilers, until he had cast them out of his sight. . . . Until the Lord removed Israel out of his sight. . . . So was Israel carried away out of their own land, to Assyria unto this day,” (2 Kings xvii. 18-23.) In these verses the total carrying away—the entire removal of Israel out of sight—is four times repeated, as if in anticipation of such objection thereto as that urged by the Professor.

I must ask for a little further space to complete what I have to say in reply to Professor Rawlinson.

Yours fraternally,
WILLIAM CARPENTER.

LIBELLING THE PRIME MINISTER.

The following paragraph appeared in the Echo. As it might have led some to suppose that the Freemason had so far strayed away from its legitimate course as to take part in politics, it was deemed necessary to request a correction:—

“Colonel Knox, amid great laughter, drew attention to an article which had appeared in the Freemasons’ Journal reflecting upon the character of the Prime Minister, charging him ‘The People’s William’ with persecuting the priests, and stifling the attempts made for their defence. The hon. member wished to know whether it was the intention of the Irish Government to prosecute the newspaper in which the scurrilous article appeared.”

At our request the Editor of the Echo courteously inserted the following correction:—

“PARLIAMENTARY REPORT.—The editor of the Freemason asks us to correct a misprint in our Parliamentary news of Thursday last. The newspaper in which the alleged libel on Mr. Gladstone appeared was the Freeman’s Journal, and not the Freemason, from whose columns all articles of a political nature are excluded.”

“After some days’ severe suffering with neuralgia and influenza in the head, I was induced to try your Vegetable Pain Killer for it. In less than five minutes it gave me ease, and by continuing the use of it according to the directions, I have quite lost the pain, and my general health has since rapidly improved.—S. J. SMITH, tea-dealer, Norwich, Feb., 1870.—To Perry Davis & Son, London, W.C.”

NOTICE.

The Subscription to THE FREEMASON is now 10s. per annum, post-free, payable in advance.

Vol. I., bound in cloth	4s. 6d.
Vol. II., ditto	7s. 6d.
Vol. III., ditto	15s. od.
Vol. IV., ditto	15s. od.
Reading Cases to hold 52 numbers ...	2s. 6d.

United States of America.

THE FREEMASON is delivered free in any part of the United States for 12s. per annum, payable in advance.

NOTICE TO SUBSCRIBERS.

The Office of THE FREEMASON is now transferred to 198, FLEET-STREET, E.C. All communications for the Editor or Publisher should therefore be forwarded to that address.

Answers to Correspondents.

All communications for The Freemason should be written legibly on one side of the paper only, and, if intended for insertion in the current number, must be received not later than 10 o'clock a.m. on Thursdays, unless in very special cases. The name and address of every writer must be sent to us in confidence.

G. KOHLBERG.—Money not received.

J. E.—An introduction to a lodge is necessary by a brother.

The Freemason,

SATURDAY, AUGUST 3, 1872.

The Freemason is published on Saturday Mornings in time for the early trains.

The price of the Freemason is Twopence per week; annual subscription, 10s. (payable in advance.)

All communications, letters, &c., to be addressed to the Editor, 198, Fleet-street, E.C.

The Editor will pay careful attention to all MSS. entrusted to him, but cannot undertake to return them unless accompanied by postage stamps.

ROYAL ORDER OF SCOTLAND.

H. R. M. OF KILWINNING AND R. S. Y. C. S.

This old Order, which is said to have been re-established by King Robert the Bruce in 1314. formerly had a home in London, when chapters of H.R.M., held under the Grand Lodge of the Order in Scotland, occasionally met during the early part of last century.

At the close of the eighteenth century the tide of events seem to have set against the Order in Scotland, where it had nearly become extinct, and we believe that members from the metropolis of the British Empire, were foremost in restoring it to its old home.

In course of time the London Chapters ceased to meet and it is now, we believe, nearly a hundred years since a Chapter of the Royal Order has been held in London.

On Friday the 26th ult., a Provincial Grand Lodge was opened at 33, Golden Square, in the presence of some of the most distinguished members of the Hautes Grades, and under such favourable auspices that we cannot but predict a glorious future to the Royal Order, which boasts of so noble a past.

A preliminary meeting had been held on the previous day for the reception of the members of the 33°—the following being present and taking the degrees—Ill. Bros. C. J. Vigne, M.P.S.G.C.,

33°; Capt. N. G. Philips, M.I.L.G.C., 33°; J. M. P. Montagu, Sect. Genl., 33°; Sir Michael Costa, 33°; Hyde Pullen, 33°; John Read, 33°.

The Provincial Grand Lodge was opened by the Right Hon. The Earl of Rosslyn, 33°, Deputy Governor of the Order, (who wore the magnificent jewel of his rank as Grand Master of Scotland), and who was supported by the following members of the Scotch deputation, sent to assist in the opening of the Provincial Grand Lodge of London, and the metropolitan counties. Alexander Hay, 30°, Sen. Gd., Warden and D.T.; William Mann, 30°, J. G., Warden, and S. Gd. Guardian; J. B. Douglas, Gd. Secretary; Geo. Murray, 30°, Gd. Treasurer, C.A.; Fs. Augs. Barrow, 30°, P.G. Master of Glasgow; Dr. R. Hamilton, 33°; Gen. H. Clerke, 33°; D. Skirving; C. Melville Donaldson, Prov. G. Master, China; John T. Lotting; A. Mitchell; Capt. C. Hunter; H. Tomasozeirski; W. H. Bryce, G.G.; together with the following:—C. J. Vigne, 33°; Capt. N. G. Philips, 33°; J. M. P. Montague, 33°; Sir Michael Costa, 33°; Hyde Pullen, 33°; C. Fendelow, 31°; Emra Holmes, 31°; F. Binckes, 30°; C. F. Matier, 30°; Rev. T. F. Ravenshaw, 30°; J. J. Mackenzie; Sir J. Nepean. Bart; J. C. Angus; J. T. Starkey, 30°.

The following candidates were received and admitted into the ancient order of H.R.M., the quaint and impressive ceremonial being performed by Brother and Sir Knight Geo. Murray, in an admirable manner, he being ably assisted by Brothers Hay and Mann. The beautiful room and the handsome and appropriate furniture, appointments, and regalia all added doubtless to the solemnity of the proceedings: Bros. S. Rawson, 32°; C. C. Pole, 32°; Maj. S. H. Clerke, 32°; R. Costa, 32°; C. A. Newnham, 31°; Gen. H. E. Doherty, 31°; Rev. P. H. Newnham, 30°; Capt. J. Burgess, 30°; G. Lambert, 30°.

At the conclusion of the ceremony, the Earl of Rosslyn, as Deputy Governor of the Order, conferred the honour of the Knighthood of the R.S.Y.C.S. upon the brethren, giving to each newly dubbed Sir Knight the characteristic which he would henceforth bear in the Order. The Sir Knights having taken their seats in the Chapter of the R.S.Y.C.S., the noble Earl proceeded to invest the following as the first office-bearers in this Provincial Grand Lodge.

Office Bearers in the Provincial Grand Lodge of London, and the Metropolitan Counties, Royal Order of Scotland, appointed July 26, 1872.

Dr. R. Hamilton	Prov. G. Master.
Genl. H. Clerke	D. Prov. G. Master.
Capt. N. G. Philips	Prov. G. S. Warden.
Rev. T. Ravenshaw	Prov. J. G. Warden.
R. Costa	Prov. G. Sec.
Major S. H. Clerke	Prov. G. Treas.
H. Dubosc	Prov. G. S. Bearer.
Emra Holmes	Prov. G. B. Bearer.
Hyde Pullen	Prov. G. Marischal.
Capt. C. J. Burgess	D. P. G. Marischal.
C. A. Newnham	Prov. G. Steward.
G. Lambert	Prov. G. Guarder.
J. Read	Prov. G. Organist.

Lord Rosslyn expressed his deep regret that important duties in the House of Lords prevented his banqueting with the brethren, and Dr. Hamilton briefly thanked his Lordship and the Scottish brethren for coming so far to inaugurate this Provincial Grand Lodge. The proceedings were then brought to a close, and the Rosicrucian Knights dined together afterwards at Freemasons' Tavern.

Many of our readers will be familiar with the history and traditions of this ancient order, as articles on the subject have appeared in our own columns and in those of our defunct contemporary the "Freemason's Magazine," notably one by Reitam, (the anagram, or nom de plume of a well-known and expert mason), which we published, June 24th, 1871, and another which may be found in the "Freemasons' Magazine" of the 1st July, 1871. They will both be found interesting and instructive to the Masonic student.

The Royal Order consists of two degrees, that of H.R.D.M., or more properly H.R.M., and that of R.S.Y.C.S. The first may be briefly described as a Christianized form of the third degree, purified from the dross of Paganism, and even of Judaism, by the Culdees, who introduced Christianity into Scotland, in the early centuries of the Church. The second degree is an order of civil knighthood, supposed to have been founded by Robert the Bruce after the battle of Bannockburn, and conferred by him upon certain masons who had assisted him on that memorable occasion. He, so the tradition goes, gave power to the Grand Master of the Order for the time being to confer this honour, which is not inherent in the general body itself, but is specially given by the Grand Master and his Deputy, and can be conferred only by them, or Provincial Grand Masters appointed by them. The number of Knights is limited, and formerly only sixty-three could be appointed, and they Scotchmen; now, however, that number has been much increased, and distinguished Masons of all countries are admitted to its ranks. We believe that a lodge or Chapter of this Order met in London so long ago as 1686, and Brother Reitam says we have indubitable evidence to show that in 1730 there was a Provincial Grand Lodge of the Order in South Britain, which met at the Thistle and Crown, in Chandos Street, the date of whose constitution was then so ancient as to be called "from time immemorial." At this time the order had become almost extinct in Scotland, and the Provincial Grand Lodge obtained permission from the Deputy Grand Master and Governor to grant charters, and on the 11th December, 1743, a warrant for a Chapter of H.R.M. was granted to certain brethren, who met at Cannon Street, Southwark, and in 1750 a Scotchman obtained a Charter for Holland, which is now in the possession of the Order in Scotland.

The Book of Records, containing lists of members, &c., commencing prior to 1763, is still in existence, but it is supposed that many of the older documents were destroyed in the rebellion of 1745.

Bro. Reitam says, "It must not be forgotten that in 1747 Prince Charles Edward Stuart, in his celebrated Charter to Arras, claimed to be the Sovereign Grand Master of the Royal Order, "Nous Charles Edouard Stewart, Roi d' Angleterre, de France, de l' Ecosse, et d' Irlande, et en cette qualité, S.G.M. du Chapitre de H." Prince Charles goes on to say that H.O. or H.R.M. is known as the "Pelican and Eagle." "Connu sous le titre de Chevalier de l'Aigle et de Pelican, et depuis nos malheurs et nos infortunes, nous celui de Rose Croix." Now there is not the shadow of a proof that the Rose Croix, says Bro. Reitam, was ever known in England till 20 years after 1747; and in Ireland it was introduced by a French chevalier, M. L' Aurent, about 1782 or 1783. The Chapter at Arras was the first constituted in French—"Chapitre primordial de Rose Croix," and from other circumstances (the very name Rose Croix being a translation of R.S.Y.C.S) he is forced to the conclusion that the degree chartered by Prince Charles Edward was, if not the actual Royal Order in both points, a Masonic ceremony founded on and pirated from that most ancient and venerable order.

This is said to have been done by that celebrated Scotchman, the Chevalier Ramsey, for political and Jacobite purposes. Bro. Reitam is led to the conclusion that to the Royal Order of Scotland we are indebted for all those degrees called Ecossais, but which were invented, in his opinion, in France or Prussia towards the close of the 18th century. In this, however, we are disposed to differ from our worthy and esteemed brother—because, except in name there is only the smallest trace of any connection between the Rose Croix and the Royal Order.

There is a connection, we admit, but it is very remote. In the first place the whole ceremonial is different, and different in essentials. Most of the language used in the Royal Order is couched in quaint old rhyme, modernised, no doubt, to make it "understanded of the vulgar," but still retaining sufficient about it to stamp its genuine antiquity. The Rose Croix degree we believe to be the genuine descendant of the old Rosicrucians, and no doubt has always had a more or less close connection with the Templars. Findel himself admits that the occult sciences were formerly practised by the brethren, and we ourselves have seen a very old book written in French, containing the "vrai histoire du Rose Croix," and which contained a cabalistic plate with the names of the seven angels upon it, and other evidences of its connection with the Hermetic philosophers, and believers in the transmutation of metals.

The book we allude to is in the possession of Bro. W. Bowden, of Bristol, an enthusiastic and learned Mason, through whose courtesey the author of this article was enabled to see many of the old records in connection with Masonry in the higher degrees in the old city of Bristol.

Dr. Oliver had a great opinion of the Royal Order, and had no doubt of its antiquity.

Its place by right is side by side with the Rose Croix and Knights Templar degree, to our thinking, and we hope that the members of the latter order will be considered as eligible to take it, as the former.

At Glasgow, where there is a Provincial Grand Lodge, it is or was only necessary to be a Master Mason to be eligible, but if we remember right, certain privileges were granted to Knights Templar and Rose Croix Masons in seeking admission to the Royal Order.

In England we learn it is intended to restrict Membership to those only who have taken the 18°, but there are many estimable Masons who have not yet come under the S.G.C. 33°, and who might yet desire admission to the Scottish Order, but who will be excluded by this means. In Edinburgh Royal Arch Masons are alone admissible, but we are sure it will be to the advantage of the Provincial Grand Lodge of London, if the Knights Templar are admitted to its ranks.

We are quite aware that in Scotland the Milites Templi are not looked upon as a Masonic body at all by many members of that Order; but then the R.S.Y.C.S. is presumably a civil order of knighthood, and the Order of Charles XIII. of Sweden also, but they must be considered, in a sense, masonic, inasmuch as they are conferred on Masons only.

The King of Scotland is hereditary Grand Master of the Royal Order, and a chair is always kept vacant for him at all assemblies of the Knights. The Deputy Grand Master and Governor of the Order is Bro. Whyte-Melville, 33°, P.G.M.M. of Scotland, father of the well-known novelist. The Earl of Rosslyn, 33°, the present Grand Master of Scotland, is Deputy-Governor of the Order.

Provincial Grand Lodges are held at Glasgow, Rouen in France, in Sardinia, Spain, the Netherlands, India, viz., Calcutta and Bombay, China, and New Brunswick. In Sweden the King of Scotland is Provincial Grand Master.

In Clavel's History it is said the Royal Order of Heredom of Kilwinning is a Rosicrucian Degree, having many different gradations in the ceremony of consecration. The kings of England are de jure, if not de facto, Grand Masters; each member has a name given him denoting some moral attribute. In the initiation the sacrifice of the Messiah, is had in remembrance, who shed his blood for the sins of the world, and the neophyte is in a figure sent forth to seek the lost word. The ritual states that the order was first established at Icomkill, and afterwards at Kilwinning, where the King of Scotland, Robert Bruce, took the chair in person, and oral tradition affirms that in 1314 this monarch again re-instated the Order, admitting into it the Knights Templar who were still left. The Royal Order, according to this ritual, which is written in Anglo-Saxon verse, boasts of great antiquity.

Bro. Findel, of course, disbelieves in the Royal Order, as he does in all the Christian degrees. He remarks that the Grand Lodge of Scotland formerly knew nothing at all about the existence of this Order of Heredom, as a proof of which he adduces the fact that Bro. Laurie, in the first edition of his work, the history of the Grand Lodge of Scotland, has not mentioned the Order. Fancy arguing that because no mention is made of the high degrees in the Masonic Calendar published by the English Grand Lodge, that therefore they do not exist in this country.

One might as well do so, according to Bro. Findel, whose ill-disguised hostility to the hautes grades is thoroughly understood and appreciated at its proper value.

We cannot conclude this article without congratulating English Masons, and especially our brethren in London, on the establishment in their midst of this beautiful, interesting, and venerable Order, and we feel sure that it will be as successfully propagated as it deserves to be known.

It is in the right hands, at all events, and the distinguished brethren at its head are not likely to forget its chivalric origin and exclusive character, so that only those who are tried and trusty will, we are confident, be admitted to its ranks.

VECTIS.

REPORTS OF MASONIC MEETINGS.

Craft Masonry.

METROPOLITAN.

ROYAL OAK LODGE (No. 871).—The brethren of this Lodge met at the White Swan Tavern, High-street, Deptford, on Thursday 25th ult. Present:—Bros. J. W. Reed, W.M.; W. Myatt, S.W.; G. Andrews, J.W.; W. Andrews, P.M., and Treas.; F. Walters, P.M., Sec.; S. O. Lewin, S.D.; H. J. Tuson, J.D.; J. J. Pakes, I.G.; R. Harman, D.C.; H. G. Skinner, W.S.; J. Hawker, P.M.; H. A. Collington, P.M.; J. Truelove, P.M.; F. R. Hood, W.A.; R. Harris, P.C.; H. Wilkie, C. Wood, W. Shaw, G. Clark, J. G. Vohmann, C. Letton, H. J. Dowe, J. Woollat, G. Harvey, H. J. Wells, E. C. Kilsby, J. H. Wilson, and others. Visitors:—Bros. E. Mallett, W.S., 141; J. A. Smith, 548; W. Abbott, 588; J. Carver, J.W., 1155; and others. The minutes of last regular lodge and two emergencies were read and confirmed. The ballot box proved unanimous in favour of Messrs. Wason, R. Hadley, E. Good, and C. Kedgley, as candidates for initiation. Mr. J. Baxter Langley was unable to be present. Bros. G. Clarke, and E. C. Kilsby were passed. It was resolved unanimously to hold an emergency meeting August 15. A banquet followed the proceedings.

CAPPER LODGE (No. 1076).—An emergency meeting of this prosperous Lodge, was held on Wednesday, the 24th inst., at the Marine Hotel, Victoria Docks, West Ham., E. The W.M., Bro. C. W. Ashdown, occupied the chair of K.S., supported by his officers as follows:—S. Gaskell, I.P.M.; E. West, P.G.S.D., Herts; and H. G. Sisley, P.M.'s; Bros. T. Pincombe, as S.W.; B. B. Brayshaw, J.W.; A. Knox, S. D.; W. W. Noot, I.G.; G. Park, Treas.; I. Henderson, P.M. and Sec.; and W. Allison, Tyler. The lodge having been opened in due form, the ballot was taken for Messrs. Hesselwood and Hobbs, which proved unanimous in their favour. The lodge was opened in the second degree, and Bros. Williams, Swift, and Fairlie, of this lodge, and Bro. Maltley, of the Nelson Lodge, No. 700, being candidates for the third degree, were examined as to their proficiency in the former degrees, entrusted, and retired. The lodge was opened in the third degree, and those brethren being re-admitted were raised by the W.M. to the sublime degree of Master Mason. The W.M. then vacated the chair, which was taken by Bro. Gaskell, I.P.M., who passed Bros. Ralph, and Foley, to the degree of Fellow Craft. The chair having been re-taken by the W.M., Messrs. Hesselwood and Hobbs were admitted, and duly initiated into the mysteries and privileges of ancient Freemasonry. All Masonic business being ended, the lodge was closed in due form, refreshment followed labour, and a pleasant evening was spent by the brethren, who separated at an early hour. About twenty-five brethren and ten visitors were present, notwithstanding the extreme heat of the weather.

BURDETT LODGE (No. 1293).—The July meeting of this lodge was held at the Mitre Hotel, Hampton Court, on Saturday last, there being a large attendance of members and visitors. In the absence of the W.M., the chair was taken by Bro. Dr. Self, who, in an able manner, raised Bros. Bindoff and Coalbank to the degree of Master Masons. The lodge was then resumed to the first degree, when Bro. R. W. Little initiated Mr. James William Berrie into the mysteries and privileges of Antient Freemasonry, the duties of the Senior Warden's chair being well discharged by Bro. S. Rosenthal; the Junior Warden being our well-known Bro., D. R. Still. The lodge was then closed, the brethren retiring to banquet, when a pleasant evening was spent, enlivened by the vocal talent of Bros. Adams, Baxter, Hobson, and others.

ESSEX.

SOUTHEND.—Priory Lodge (No. 1,000).—The regular monthly meeting of the Priory Lodge, No. 1,000, took place a few evenings ago at the lodge room in the Middleton Hotel, Southend. The W.M., Bro. S. Cox, R.A., being supported by his officers as follows:—Bros. Wardell, S.W.; Hennmann, J.W., P.M., Treas.; W. S. Cox, P.M., Sec.; Rowley, P.M., Dir. of Cers.; Lacking, S.D.; Frost, J.D.; Chaplin, I.G.; Notley, P.M., Tyler. A large number of members and visitors were also present. The ceremonies of passing Bro. Bellis and raising Bro. Copinter were performed by the W.M. in the same excellent manner in which during his term of office he has carried out all his work. The I.G. gave the lecture of the second degree, illustrated by references to the tracing board, in a manner which proved he had well studied and was completely master of his subject. A well-deserved compliment came next, when, by desire of the W.M., the father of the lodge (Bro. Wood) rose, and, after a highly eulogistic speech, presented W. Bro. William Pissey, P.M., of Rochford Lodge, No. 160, and P.Prov. J.G.W. of Essex, in the name of the Southend Lodge, with a very elegant Past Master's jewel of solid eighteen carat gold, which bears the following inscription:—"Priory Lodge, No. 1,000.—Presented to Bro. William Pissey, P.M., as a token of esteem, and in appreciation of efficient and valuable services rendered by him in installing several Worshipful Masters of that lodge.—July, 1872." Bro. Pissey returned thanks in a suitable manner; and the brethren subsequently adjourned, after spending a most happy evening.

LANCASHIRE (WEST).

LIVERPOOL.—Hamer Lodge (No. 1393).—An emergency meeting of this young but highly prosperous and promising lodge was held on Tuesday evening, the 23rd July, in the handsome lodge room, No. 2A, Windermere-street, Beck-road, Everton, at which there was a goodly gathering of the brethren. The chair of S. was occupied by Bro. W. T. May, W.M., who was supported at the opening (shortly after six o'clock) by the following officers:—Bros. James Jones, 594, P.M.; John Jones, S.W.; John Harriman, Sec.; R. H. Evans, J.D.; H. Jackson, I.G.; W. F. Johnson, S.S.; T. Dilcock, J.S.; W. G. Veale, Org.; and Mr. Williamson, T. The members present were Bros. J. McCarthy, J. Bluck, D. R. Charles, C. Tyrer, T. Rumskill, W. S. Hare, C. Edward Dutch, R. W. Rowlands, E. Wilson, R. C. Buck, W. M. Welsh, J. A. McRobie, Jonathan Roberts, G. A. Aspinall, T. Roberts, J. Houlding, H. Roberts, R. Parry, and H. Burrows. The visitors were Brothers J. T. Callow, W.M. 673; T. Garratt, 673; J. Hunter, 673; Evan Parry, J. B. Jeffery, 823; W. Bradshaw, 673; J. Yates, 673; F. Handcock, 594; J. Peters, I.P.M., Treas. 597; R. Williams, 594; J. Wood, Treas. 1094; J. Holland, W.M. 823; R. Price, 823; and T. Chuck, S.W. 1013. The serious portion of the evening's proceedings consisted of one initiation and three raisings, the work being efficiently performed by the W.M.; but not the least interesting feature of the after proceedings was the banquet given as a mark of respect for Bro. James Jones, I.P.M. of the "Hamer," and P.M. 594, who is about to proceed to America. The W.M., in alluding to the departure of their brother, spoke in high terms of the valuable services he had rendered to the Masonic cause, and wished him prosperity in his new sphere and future home. Bro. Jones, in reply, thanked the Brethren for their invariable kindness, and wished success to the Lodge which he was about to leave, but which he would never forget, wherever he might be. He concluded by proposing in happy terms the health of the W.M., who, in responding, thanked the brethren for the honour and cordiality of the toast, and assured them that the lodge would lose none of its lustre while he held the proud position of its W.M. The toast of "The Visitors" was responded to by Bro. J. Holland, W.M. 823. An extremely social and enjoyable evening was spent by the Brethren.

GARSTON.—Lodge of Harmony, (No. 220). The brethren of this suburban lodge assembled in the room at the Garston Hotel, at 2 o'clock on Wednesday, the 24th ultimo, the principal business being the installation of Bro. W. Jones, as W.M. Bro. Richard Jones, W.M., opened the lodge in due form, and after the confirmation of the minutes, and the transaction of some formal business, the W.M. elect was solemnly and efficiently installed by Bro. Hamer, P.P.G.T. The following officers were subsequently invested:—Bros. Dr. Worthington, S.W.; John Evans, J.W.; Hughes, S.D.; Fisher, J.D.; Bush, I.G.; T. Tellett, Sec.; J. W. Baker, Treas.; Raw and Aspinall, Stewards, and W. Robertson, Tyler. The first degree was subsequently given by the newly installed W.M. in a very effective manner. Bro. W. S. Vines, P.M., 220 and 1299; Bro. J. Cant, P.M., 1086; several other P.M.'s, officers, and a large number of other brethren were present during the interesting proceedings. During the afternoon, a P.M.'s jewel was presented to Bro. R. Jones, I.P.M., as a token of the esteem and respect in which he was held by the brethren. A superb banquet was subsequently provided by the hostess (Mrs. Birkett), the grapes at dessert being from the world-known vineyard of Mr. Meredith, in the immediate neighbourhood. With an excellent dinner, abundant dessert, happy and complimentary speeches, and capital songs, the brethren spent a pleasant evening.

LANCASTER.—Duke of Lancaster Lodge (No. 353).—The regular monthly meeting of this Lodge was held in the Masonic Temple, St. Leonard-gate, on Wednesday, the 17th instant. The following brethren were present: C. Hartly, I.P.M.; J. Barrow, W.M.; J. Bell, S.W.; W. Heald, J.W.; Joseph Barrow, Sec.; J. Acton, S.D.; J. Conlon, J. D.; R. Wolfenden, I. G.; J. H. Williams, S.S.; J. Taylor, Org.; Carr, Foster, Ellershaw, Kent, Heath, &c.; Visiting Brother, P. Dickinson, Royal Standard, 1298, and J. Watson, Tyler. The Lodge was opened in the first degree in due form, when the minutes of the former lodge and emergency meetings were read and unanimously confirmed. An answer was read from Mrs. Troughton to the letter of condolence sent to her from the Lodge on the demise of her husband, when, on the motion of Bro. Heald, J. W., seconded by J. Bell, S.W., it was unanimously agreed to place it on the minutes of the Lodge. The Lodge was now opened in the second degree, when Bro. Kent was questioned, and the answers given proving satisfactory, was entrusted by the W.M., and retired. The Lodge was now opened in the third degree, when Bro. Kent was readmitted and raised to the sublime degree of a Master Mason by the W.M. in a most effective manner. The Lodge was then closed down to the First Degree; a candidate was proposed for initiation; hearty good wishes were given by C. Hartley, I.P.M., from Lodge Fortitude, 281; J. Taylor, Org., 1051; and by P. Dickinson, 1298; and the Lodge closed in peace and harmony.

MIDDLESEX.

HAMPTON.—Lebanon Lodge (No. 1326).—The brethren of this lodge met at the Red Lion, Hampton, on Monday, the 29th ult. Present: Bros. J. T. Moss, P.G.S.D., Middlesex, W.M.; W. Hammond, P.M. as, S.W.; H. A. Dubois, J.W.; S. Wickens, P.M., Treas.; F. Walters, P.M., Sec.; J. C. Peckham, P.M.; F. Holmes, J. T. H. Moss, G. Montgomery, J. W. Baldwin, J. Hayward, J. Richardson, E. G. Wood, R. Lawrence, E. Bouts, T. Pallet, T. Clarke, W. B. Smith, J. Marsh, J. R. More, G. Godfrey, R. Gower, and others. The visitors were Bros. C. Horsley, P.G.R. Middlesex, W.M. 811; W. Long, W.M. 569; G. J. Hillstead, 21; Capt. W. H. Hawkes, 345 (I.C.); W. H. Burton, 933; D. B. Raw, P.M. 969, and others. The work was done by the W.M. in an efficient, correct, and able manner, and comprised the initiation of Messrs. W. B. Smith (late R.N.), J. Marsh, J. R. Moore, R. Godfrey, and R. Gower. Five brethren were proposed for initiation. Banquet and dessert were served under a tent. Bro. S. Beck, Bandmaster of the London Scottish, was elected as Organist, and recommended by the unanimous vote of the lodge as the brother whom they would like to see appointed Organist of the Provincial Grand Lodge of Middlesex.

Royal Arch.

CUMBERLAND.

WHITEHAVEN.—Sun, Square and Compasses Chapter (No. 119).—On Monday, the 15th ult., a meeting of this Chapter was held at the Freemasons' Hall, Whitehaven, at two p.m., for the purpose of installing officers for the ensuing year. Companion A. C. Mott, P.P.J.G.D., West Lancashire (Craft Lodge), and P.P.J.W. Grand Chapter of Lancashire, performed the ceremony of installation in a most impressive manner, assisted by Companions E. Busher, P.G.S. Bearer, England, P.M.E.Z. Kendal Castle Chapter, No. 129; J. W. Baker, P.M. 220 and 241; P.G.S. West Lancashire and M.E.Z. Chapter 241; Companion W. B. Gibson, P.M. 119 and P.P.G.S.W. Cumberland and Westmoreland, was installed First Principal of the Chapter; Companion G. W. Kenworthy, P.M. 119, and P.P.G.J.W. Cumberland and Westmoreland, Second Principal; and Companion J. Barr, P.M. 119, P.P.G.S.B., Cumberland and Westmoreland, Third Principal. The following Companions were then duly invested:—Comps. McKelvie, P.M. 119 and P.P.G.J.D. Treasurer; E. Fearon, P.M. 119, P.S.; E. W. Henry, P.M. 119, E.; W. Sandwith, W.M. 119, N.; E. Tyson, S.D. 119, Asst. S.; P. Quin, Janitor. After the business of the chapter, the companions partook of an excellent banquet, the chair being taken by the M.E.Z., Comp. Gibson, who was supported right and left by Comps. Mott, Baker, Kenworthy, and Barr; the vice-chairs being occupied by Comps. Henry and Sandwith. The usual loyal and masonic toasts were proposed and responded to in due course, after which Comp. Fearon proposed "The Health of Comp. Mott," to whom, he said, every member of the chapter was deeply indebted, he having, at considerable inconvenience to himself, come from Liverpool to install the First Principal, and invest the officers. Now, although the chapter had been formed for several years, true it had not for some time past been in full working order. This was the first occasion on which a regular installation of officers had taken place; and Comp. Mott had gone through that beautiful ceremony in such an effective and impressive style, that the proceedings of that evening had endeared him to the hearts of the companions. The health was then drunk with full honours. Comp. Mott, in responding, thanked the companions for their kindly expressions, and assured them that it always gave him pleasure to be present on all occasions which appertained to Freemasonry in general, and to Royal Arch Masonry in particular. He also threw out some valuable hints to the new officers, touching their respective duties, which will be of great assistance to them during their year of office; and so well were his remarks received, that ere long he predicted that the Sun, Square and Compasses Chapter would rank amongst the best worked in the kingdom.

LANCASHIRE (WEST).

HEYWOOD.—Chapter of Naphthali (No. 266).—A meeting of this Chapter was held on Thursday last, July 25th, in the Masonic rooms, Heywood, under the presidency of Comps. Wm. Roberts, P.P.Z., Prov. G.P. Soj., as Z.; Wm. Ashworth, P.Z., Prov. G. 1st A. Soj., as H.; S. Lord, P.Z., as J., when the following brethren of the Naphthali Lodge were duly exalted to the degree of Holy Royal Arch Masons:—Albert Wolstenholme, John Bell, John Partington, William Stott. The ceremony was very ably performed, Comp. Wm. Briggs, P.P.Z., Chapter of Benevolence, No. 266, acting as Principal Soj. After the ceremony of exaltation had been completed the officers for the ensuing year were balloted for and installed as follows:—Comps. James Mills, Principal Z.; Simeon Lord, H.; J. Cass, J.; Albert Wolstenholme, Scribe E.; Richard Gorton, Scribe N.; J. C. Oldham, Principal Soj.; John Bell, First Assistant Soj.; Wm. Stott, Junior Assistant Soj.; J. Partington, Janitor. The ceremony of installing the several officers was performed by Comps. Roberts and Ashworth, of the Chapter of Unity, 298, Rochdale, and Comp. Briggs, of Littleborough, to each of whom the Companions in open chapter gave a vote of thanks for their attendance and assistance. The business of the evening being ended, the chapter was duly and solemnly closed, when the companions adjourned to refreshment.

Knights Templar.

SCOTLAND.

GLASGOW.—Girvan Encampment (No. 31).—An emergency meeting of this encampment was held on Monday, July 22nd. Sir Knight R. Bell, E.C., presiding; assisted by Sir Knight J. E. Spiers, C.G.; G. W. Wheeler, Sec., acting as Prelate; M. Claurchen, C.C.; D. Butler, J.C.; when the following seven companions, having been properly examined and vouched for, were initiated, dubbed and created Knights of the Order, namely:—James Balfour, J. A. Ferguson, W. T. Shaw, of Chap. 73, T. Ellis, D. Barr, T. H. McDonald, and H. S. Bosworth, of Chapter 87. The ceremony was performed in that impressive style which always distinguishes Sir Knight R. Bell's working. Arrangements were then made for a deputation to proceed on the following morning to Edinburgh, to attend the meeting of the Supreme Grand Priory of Scotland.

THE GRAND MARK LODGE OF ENGLAND.

(From Pomeroy's Democrat.)

The following letter is from the pen of one of England's brightest Masons, Bro. William James Hughan, of Truro, England, who has already done so much for the unravelling of many of the musty Masonic manuscripts and records of Great Britain. The title of this article indicates the nature of the communication:—

TRURO, ENGLAND, June 7, 1872.

Dear Bro. Tisdall,

In Pomeroy's Democrat for March 30th, you kindly inserted a letter from me respecting the Mark Grand Lodge of England, and to which you appended some editorial remarks. In the same paper for the 13th April you quoted from the Evergreen (edited by Bros. Parvin and Langridge), an opinion expressed by Bro. Parvin, in unison with your own, relative to representation from and at the Mark Grand Lodge; and in the issue of the 25th May you greeted the Freemason's Monthly Magazine very warmly, and promised to insert Bro. C. W. Moore's article "in reference to the Grand Mark Lodge of England."

With respect to the foregoing I desire to make a few observations in the most fraternal spirit, and I hope the editors of your various excellent Masonic papers in the United States who differ from me will kindly insert the following (with replies) in their columns and mail me copies. Should they require anything explanatory from me, I will write them direct on the subject, as time permits.

It savours somewhat of presumption for me to engage in a friendly discussion with three such able brethren as Bros. C. W. Moore, T. S. Parvin, and yourself, but as my course appears to me to be just, and truth is not always with the greater number, I do not fear the result of the fraternal conflict. Believe me, my desire is to elucidate truth, and I care nothing for anything but that, masonically or otherwise.

1. In your editorial notes, March 30th, you state, "We have no objection at all to the Mark Masters of England being recognised and fraternised with the Mark Masters of America." Thank you! We are glad of this, and shall be exceedingly glad to hear that the brethren of the United States have all decided to receive our certificates as evidence of the Mark degree having been legally given under our Grand Lodge.*

Then, in the case of affiliation of an English companion, who is also a Past Master under the English Constitution, there would remain only the "Excellent Master" to be taken before the membership was completed in one of your United States Royal Arch Chapters. You then state that "the troublesome question is, how is it to be done under the present American organisation?" I answer simply thus: Let the Grand Chapters recognise the Mark Grand Lodge as the legal governing body in England and the colonies of the British crown) for the Mark Master's degree, and then all we virtually ask from you as our brethren will be conceded. The Supreme Council of the Ancient and Accepted Rite, 33°, for England and Wales have done so, as also the Grand Conclave of the Knights Templar, the Grand Chapter of Canada, and the Grand Chapters of Pennsylvania and Iowa.

It affords me much pleasure to be informed of your recognition of our claims as the legal head of the Mark Master's degree in England, and though we do not agree on the representative question, let us, at all events, unite to secure recognition freely and fully for us, from every Grand Chapter in the United States.

If these bodies prefer not to exchange representatives, well, all I can say is, brethren, follow your own inclinations. If, on the other hand, any say we not only recognise you, but let us exchange representatives, we will say, "Certainly, with much pleasure." Either way, we as a body are satisfied, so long as the thousands of members under our jurisdiction may safely calculate on their certificates being recognised in your country, and wherever the English language is spoken.

In your "notes" to my letter you say, "We consider the Mark degree below and not above the Third." Why do you so consider? What evidence have you of the Mark Master's degree (not the "Mark Man") being ever worked in a Craft Lodge as lower than the third, or as part of the second degree?† No evidence has ever been submitted in this country (or in Scotland and Ireland) of such an occurrence, although many consider that the degree is "below the third." But mere considerations are worthless, when facts lead to the reverse conclusion!

I am tolerably conversant with the history of Freemasonry in America, and make bold to say you cannot produce the records of any Lodge which worked the Mark Master's degree in your country as "below the third," or in a Fellow Craft's Lodge. If you can do so, and I will be the first to retract, and acknowledge my error, but until then I shall believe that your "consider" is opposed to facts, and until the proof is forthcoming, it will be idle to speculate about the nature of the "lopping off" process you mention, which at the present time I utterly deny; because, so far as my researches go, the Mark Master's degree never has been a portion of the Second degree, but only the "Mark man." You mention that the "sticking point" is the representation of Mark Masons in a Grand Chapter. "If all the representatives are R. A. Masons, they take their seats in our Grand Chapters as such, and not as Mark Masons." Precisely so. As Royal Arch Mason, they take their seats, as without it they could not attend, but I cannot for the life of me see that on that account they are precluded from acting as Representatives from the Mark Grand Lodge; in fact, I cannot see that they are necessarily mutually destructive whenever found together.‡ I can only say that in one of the largest and best managed Grand Chapters in the United States the principle is admitted for Representatives of Mark Masters and Excellent Masters. Lodges are expressly provided for in their Constitutions, and they are admitted to the Grand Chapter as such, whenever it is opened, though of course, they are Royal Arch Masons also I refer now to the Grand Chapter of Pennsylvania, in whose "Proceedings" for 1871, I have communicated a few facts relative to Capitular Masonry, in England, Ireland and Scotland, which I would like the Craft in the United States to peruse.

You say, "As well might a Grand Lodge of Entered Apprentices (could there be such a thing) ask of a Grand Lodge of Master Masons for an exchange of representatives on an equality." Could there be such a thing, and there was such thing, under circumstances similar to the Mark Grand Lodge, there would be nothing absurd about the matter at all, but as there cannot be such a thing, would it not be as well when making known your views to use comparisons within the bounds of possibility?

I contend that so long as the representative of Mark Grand Lodge is a Royal Arch Mason, there is nothing contrary to Masonic law—when interpreted in the light of past experience as well as present legislation—in such representation, especially when it is for the good and prosperity of the same degree which the Grand Chapter recognizes.

With respect to representation, I make bold to say that all the laws relating thereto in connection with the Royal Arch and Mark Masonry, are all arbitrary, and made this century. I presume that Representatives are appointed to fraternally aid in disseminating correct information with respect to their own jurisdiction, and to unite in the bonds of fraternal love more closely, all the several parts of each body, so as thereby to cement the two—as one body—speaking Masonically. I cannot see why we should refuse representation then to the body acknowledged to be below in point of rank or order to Grand Chapters, seeing that its degree is a part of the Royal Arch system, and that its seeking recognition, and being a Grand Body at all, are simply due to peculiar circumstances existing nowhere else in the world.

2. With respect to Bro. Parvin's decision, and that of the M. E. Companion, J. H. Drummond—whom I acknowledge to be a high authority—it appears to me that they are not applicable to the present case, as the Grand Commandery degrees are not worked under the Grand Chapter, and consequently do not in any way affect or concern them, whereas, in the case of the Mark Grand Lodge, the Mark Master's degree is legally worked only under its authority in England, and under the authority of the Grand Chapters in the United States. It is therefore not a parallel case, and does not meet the point. I may also state that the Grand Commandery, being subject to the Grand Encampment, is also an objection, as though the Grand Commander may not be allowed to exchange Representatives; the Grand Encampment might feel quite competent to do so. I quite think that Grand Commanderies being subordinates of the Grand Encampment cannot legally exchange Representatives at all, as they correspond to our Provincial Grand Lodges in England, and Provincial Grand Encampments, who are powerless without the consent of their chiefs. It may be styled "folly" to maintain the Representation to be legal that we advocate, but mere assertions will not do. Let us know who decides what is, and what is not a correct Representation, and why? Let us also know why we in the present day cannot liberally exchange Representatives with all Grand Bodies working similar degrees, so long as their Constitutions are legal?

3. As I presume you will shortly insert the learned Bro. Moore's article from his "Monthly Magazine," allow me to say that its consideration requires too much time for me to do justice to it now, as it would involve a long inquiry into the antecedents of Masonry. Bro. Moore seems to consider the Mark was a "waif" in America until incorporated with the Grand Chapters. Well, so it was, and so was the Royal Arch until then. In fact until A.D. 1756 in England, and A.D. 1795 in the United States, both degrees were alike "waifs" on the stream of unrecognized Freemasonry. Bro. Moore incorrectly takes it for granted that we are anxious to have Mark Grand Lodges. Far be it from us any such intention. We do not believe in such bodies at all, unless as a matter of necessity, such as exists in England, and therefore we fully admit the force of Bro. Moore's well-expressed objections to such a body at all if its institution can be avoided. I could write for a long time, but it would end virtually in this, that the Mark degree, as also the Knights Templar, and the Ancient and Accepted Rite, will never be recognized by the Grand Lodge and the Grand Chapter of England, because of the binding and exclusive nature of the "Articles of Union" of A.D. 1813. They have, however, exchanged official relations by virtue of a Treaty executed lately, in which they recognize each other as the lawful heads of their respective degrees under the English Jurisdiction.

Bro. Moore says. Our Brethren of the English Mark Lodge, in seeking an interchange of Representatives with our Grand Chapters, seemed to have overlooked the important fact, whatever may be its antiquity, or its former relative Masonic position, the Mark Lodge has had, for more than half a century, its fixed and permanent place in the Masonic Government in this country and that it now holds a dependent existence only." We have not overlooked this fact, and we are equally anxious that our able Bro., the editor of the Freemasons' M. Magazine, should not overlook another fact, viz.: That we do not ask any Mark Lodge to recognise (and exchange Representatives with) us, but Grand Chapters, who are independent and have the power to do what we seek from them. We are, as Mark Masons, under as independent a body, Masonically speaking, as any Royal Arch Grand Chapter, and we are simply solicitous for a friendly interchange of Representatives to promote the highest object of our beloved Order.

Fraternally yours,

WM. JAMES HUGHAN.

*We have not as yet heard from any American source, entitled to consideration, any doubt regarding the legitimacy of the Grand Mark Lodge of England, and as a consequence, that among brothers of that grade, every certificate it may issue ought to be received and accepted as evidence of regularity, entitling the possessor to just as much credit as would inure the holder of a Grand Lodge or Grand Chapter certificate of a constitutionally formed body of either. And should the bearer of the same pass the Tyler's examination; welcomed as cordially as the usages of Masonry demand. But he could only be recognized as a Mark Master, and in a lodge of such when at labour. When the lodge was about to be opened in a higher degree, the Mark Master would have to retire, his credentials being then exhausted of their force and vigour; for a lodge of Mark Masters bears the same relation to a Royal Arch Chapter, as does a lodge of E. A. P.'s to a lodge of Master Masons. There is no equality between the two, and where there is no equality there can be no representation. The rule in that respect is arbitrary.

†We have the best evidence in the world, notwithstanding our esteemed friend and brother asserts—and his assertion may be entitled to credit—that "no evidence has ever been submitted of such an occurrence, as the conferring the Mark before the Master's degree, in England, Scotland, or Ireland."

We (F. G. T.) had the honour of being Master of St. John's Lodge No. 1, New York City, in 1848, 49, and '50, and for the fourth time in 1857, the lodge at the close of that year celebrating its centennial anniversary. For many months previous to the December 7, 1857, when the celebration took place, we were engaged in preparing a condensed history of the lodge from its records. These records gave the fullest evidence that what was asserted by the older Masons of the Lodge as well as of other lodges was correct, and that the lodge originally conferred the Mark degree.

On the 24th October, 1794, the lodge (as per records) determined that the sum for initiation of modern Masons (including Mark degree) be reduced from £4 to 40s. In 1795, the minutes show that one modern Mason was thus healed and admitted a full member of the lodge.

The Minute Book of the Lodge at the close of year 1796 read thus: "The accounts of St. John's Mark Lodge No. 1, made up to December 23, 1796, show a balance due the Treasury of £3 18s.," meaning the treasury of the Masters' Lodge. These records also showed not only that the Mark degree was given under the authority of the Lodge Warrant, and that a special fee was paid for the same, but that the officers of the Masters' Lodge were the officers of the Mark Lodge, the conferring of the degree preceeding the conferring of that of Master Mason. This degree was continued to be conferred until May 20, 1802, under the Lodge Warrant, or for some four year and four months after the establishment of the Gen. Grand R. Arch Chapter of the Northern States of America (since 1806 known as that of the United States) which latter body embodied in itself the several degrees of Mark Master, Past Master (virtual or honorary), M. Ex. Master and Royal Arch; declaring that it, and the State Grand Chapters acknowledging it, had "the sole government and superintendence" of the said degrees. The entry on the minute book of St. John's Lodge No. 1 of May 20, 1802, reads thus:—"The balance of the funds belonging to St. John's Mark Lodge was paid over to the Treasurer of St. John's Lodge." This can also be found in the history of the Lodge, printed in 1857. It was, therefore, below the third, and when the Lodge, as a Mark Lodge, discontinued to confer the degree (probably owing to the establishment of the General Grand Chapter), the funds were paid over to the Treasurer of the Master Masons' Lodge, which controlled it previously. Our "consider" then, is not opposed to facts, and our reference to the "lopping off" process, was something more than idle speculation.

The very structure of the Mark Master's degree proves it to be a part, nay, the perfection of the Fellow Craft, for without the use of the implements of the Mark Master, the operative could not fashion the stone for the builder's use. The plumb, the square, and the level could never perform the operation. The mallet and chisel were required. Again, the founders of the American Capitular System must have considered the Mark Master's degree as below the third, else they would not have made it precede the Past Master's (so called) degree. A symbolic lodge when at labour in its highest degree is but a body of Master Masons. The ceremony of the installation of a Master of a lodge, does not make him a fourth degree Mason. He only becomes for the time being the Chief Master Mason, and when his term of office expires, he falls back again to his membership as a fellow among his fellows, a Master Mason among Master Masons. Therefore, as a Past Master is but a Master Mason, distinguished by having been chosen to fill a certain station; and as the Mark Master's degree precedes it, by the commonest rules of logic, it must be of an inferior grade, next below in rank, or in other words, the Fellow Craft completed. So much for the elucidation of Truth, and that Truth based upon common sense, and undisputable facts.

Dr. Albert G. Mackey, an authority of no mean order, in his excellent work, "The Masonic Lexicon," in speaking of the Mark Master's degree said:—

"Mark Masters were the Masters of Fellow Craft Lodges, at the building of the Temple. They distributed the Marks to the workmen, and made the first inspection of the work, which was afterward to be approved by the overseers."

The same distinguished author said that "Mark Men were the Wardens." †

In regard to the G. Chapter of Pennsylvania, so flatteringly alluded to by our Bro Hughan, we have only to remark that it has never been a component part, or representative of the American system of Capitular Masonry. Nor is it now.

From the earliest history of that G. Chapter as a body of R. A. Masons down to the year 1824, it was controlled by the Grand Lodge of Symbolic Masons of Pennsylvania. It was an isolated body, the Companions of which could not, from the nature of its organization affiliate or associate with the Companions owing allegiance to the General Grand Chapter, especially as it did not require of its members the possession of the degree of Mark Master and M. Excellent Master. The Past Master's degree it has never controlled, the G. Lodge still retaining sole control over that, even to the conferring of the same by dispensation; the revenue derived from which last year amounted to over $6,000.

To relieve itself from its isolated position, it, in preparing its Constitution in 1823 (one year before it became an independent Body:

Resolved, That it be recommended to all brethren who now are, or hereafter may become Royal Arch Masons to make themselves acquainted with the honorary degrees of Mark Master and Most Excellent Master, as the means of enabling them to meet and act with their brethren in Arch Masonry throughout the United States.

On the 17th May, 1824 the Grand Chapter of Pennsylvania, as an attache of the G. Lodge of that State, closed sine die; and on the same day did organize themselves into a GRAND HOLY ROYAL ARCH CHAPTER, under and by virtue of the said Constitution," meaning the one alluded to above. It then assumed, for the first time the titles obtaining for officers in the G. Chapters under the G. G. Chapter of the United States, but did not claim jurisdiction over the Past Masters' (so-called) degree. Therefore any action of the G. Chapter of Pennsylvania had in reference to the Grand Mark Lodge of England would have no weight among any bodies holding allegiance to the Gen. Gr. Chapter of the United States, or any other Grand Chapter in America, for it is "sui generis."

As regards Bro. Hughan's further appeal for representation, and his arguments to sustain the same, we have seen nothing to induce us to change our long since expressed opinions, or to view as not conclusive against him, the articles of beloved Brothers Charles W. Moore and T. S. Parvin. On the contrary, the more we have looked into the subject, the more fully have our opinions been strengthened.

As the Grand Chapters in the United States acknowledging the Gen. G. Chapter hold a precisely relative position to the same, as do the G. Commanderies under the G. Encampment, to that supreme head, Bro. Hughan will readily perceive, that they also "are powerless without the consent of their chiefs."

We believe in recognition, but not in affiliation by representation.

F. G. TISDALL.

TRINIDAD.

THE LAYING OF THE FOUNDATION STONE OF ATHOLE LODGE, SAN FERNANDO.

The announcement that St. John's day, the 24th instant, was fixed for the laying of the corner stone of the new building, for the accommodation of the members of Lodge Athole, No. 438, was wide and generally known long ere the time arrived, with all the inclemency of a regular wet season day, appointed for the meeting of the members of the fraternity for that purpose, and despite the uninviting appearance of the streets, and the unceasing rains, between the hours of four and five, a large gathering of Masons of Lodges Athole, and Royal Trinity, 572, met above the store of Mr. J. P. Thatcher. Shortly afterwards His Worship the Mayor, the Town Clerk, and Messrs. Geo. Lambie and Bro. James Wharton, in a double capacity, arrived, representing the Corporation, closely followed by the members of the Harmonic Society.

Partly on account of the rains, (and partly from the non-arrival of the R.W. Bro. J. A. Tench, the Provincial Grand Master of Grand Lodge of Scotland, who, we regret to say, did not attend,) the forming of the procession was delayed until some time after five o'clock, when it moved off, headed by the band of the Harmonic Society, in the following order:—

- Tylers with drawn Swords.
- Band.
- Members of the Corporation.
- Entered Apprentices.
- Fellow Crafts.
- Master Masons.
- Inner Guards with wands.
- Stewards.
- Secretary with Jewel, &c.
- Treasurer.
- Deacon, with Wand.
- Orator and Bard with Book of Constitutions.
- Past Officers.
- Wardens with Columns.
- Brethren with Corn, Wine, and Oil.
- Architect with plans and tools.
- Past Masters.
- Chaplain with Bible, Square and Compasses.
- W. Master with Charter.
- Provincial Grand Junior and Senior Wardens.
- Deacon with Wand.

The Band struck up Brother Charles Renaud's Masonic March, and the procession marched up High-street, and ascend Penitence-street, at the top of which it opened and proceeded in inverted order, along Harris's Promenade, to the intended site, where there was a dais or platform erected for the special accommodation of the members of the Municipality, and the Principal members of the Craft. There was also a derrick erected, from which was suspended, by a set of patent differential blocks, a stone of about fifteen to eighteen inches square. The ceremony was then opened by Brother William Cuthbert, W.M., of the Lodge Athole, who, in becoming language announced the object of the meeting; whereupon the Rev. R. C. Neilson, as Chaplain, invoked a blessing on the proceedings of the day. The Band then struck up the "National Anthem," after which the Worshipful Master called upon the Brother Secretary, George H. C. Allen, to read a copy of the inscription contained in a bottle, which was subsequently deposited below the stone, and which was as follows:—

This Corner Stone of
"ATHOLE MASONIC HALL"

Was laid on St. John's Day, 24th June, A.D. 1872., A.L. 5872, by Bro. William Cuthbert, R.W.M. of the Lodge Athole, 438, S.C., in the presence of the Mayor, Charles Leotaud, Esq., and several members of the Borough Council of San Fernando; of the W.P.M. and brethren of said Lodge Athole, 438, whose names are—

(Here followed the names of the Members.)

And in the presence also of the W.M., Bro. Joseph Richards, the W.P. Master, P.C. Corrie, and other brethren of the Lodge Royal Trinity, 572, E.C., viz:—

(Here followed the names of Members.)

In the xxxivth year of the reign of Queen Victoria, His Excellency James Robert Longden being Governor and Commander-in-Chief of this Island of Trinidad.

The Worshipful Master afterwards requested Bro. James Wharton, as Provincial Grand Junior Warden, to plumb the stone, which duty was duly performed. Bro. Joshua Palmer, the W. Past Master, as Senior Grand Warden, at the request of the Worshipful Master, tried the stone with the jewel of his office, and found it level. Bro. Philip C. Corrie, W. Past Master of Trinity Lodge, applied the square to the corners of the stone, and declared it square, whereupon the Worshipful Master concluded the ceremony by the sprinkling of corn, wine, and oil, as is usual on these occasions. This portion of the ceremony might have been advantageously prolonged, but the approaching darkness, and the very threatening appearance of the evening tended to curtail it.

That concluded, the Worshipful Master offered thanks to His Worship the Mayor and Burgesses, for their kind and cordial assistance in the duties of the day; in reply to which the Mayor in very few words, with becoming earnestness, wished the Craft "Unity of action." The Band then struck up "Rule Britannia," after which the procession moved on to the lodge, passing on its march through Penitence, St. James, and Cuenca-streets.

On reaching the Lodge, the Temple was thrown open for the gratification of the "profanes." Shortly after the Lodge met, closed the labours of the day, and invited the Mayor and Councilors to join them in refreshment.

The Arms being prepared, the Worshipful Master proposed the health of His Worship the Mayor, and in suitable terms repeated the pleasure which he and his officers and members experienced in the interest he, the Mayor, had taken throughout the proceedings; and he called upon the Brethren to join him in a triple plaudit and a full bumper to his, the Mayor's health and prosperity. The toast was drunk with fervour and repeated acclamations.

Past-Master P. C. Corrie, then proposed the health of the President and Members of the Harmonic Society. He made allusions to the influencing charms of music over all conditions of life, and all classes of society: he acknowledged how much of the success of the day's proceedings was due to the enlivening strains of the band. He then proceeded to propose the health and prosperity of the Harmonic Society, and requested the brethren to support the same with acclamation.

The Chaplain, Brother the Rev. R. C. Nelson, said he could not do better than support all that had been said by brother Corrie: he felt satisfied that on this special occasion, and in such weather as this, the work would have been very dull and wearisome indeed, were it not for the life which was derived from the beautiful music of the band. He added that it was well-known that he was a great lover of music, and that as he believed in this, as in all other matters, "what's worth doing, is worth doing well," he trusted that the members would persevere and reach as near perfection as possible. He wished them every success.

Mr. Edward Boucaud, the President of the Harmonic Society, in his usual graceful style, returned thanks for the compliment paid to him, and the members of the Society over which he had the honour to preside; he animadverted with pleasure to certain things which had fallen from the Past-Master Corrie, but he felt more pleasure in being there enjoying the hospitality of the brotherhood, to whom, on his part, and on behalf of the Society, he wished all happiness.

The Rev. Bro. Burr, in a very humorous and suggestive address, thanked the brethren for their reception towards the strangers. He was in one sense totally a stranger to them, having only arrived in the Island a short time ago; and in another sense was probably less so than the worthy Mayor standing beside him—whom he also thanked for his kindness to him as a stranger in this community; he trusted ere long to make himself well-known to them all.

The Mayor and suite having requested to be allowed to retire, did so accordingly, and the brethren then continued to entertain, with a Banquet, the members of the Harmonic Society, who, at intervals, enlivened the meeting with several appropriate airs.

The business of the evening being closed, the usual toasts were given and responded to, and the brethren retired about ten o'clock, shewing evident signs of mingled satisfaction and joy.

In conclusion, we can only add that all things considered, the ceremony was well conducted, and the proceedings a perfect success. It is gratifying to add, that notwithstanding the very heavy rains that fell, several bright and cheerful faces of the softer sex, who lent by their presence an encouragement to labours which would be heavy at best, if they failed to receive the encouraging and appreciative smile of the partners of our moments of labour and refreshment. The Stewards deserve much praise for the handsome manner in which their portion of the work was prepared and attended to.—New Era.

Masonic Tidings.

BRITISH, FOREIGN, AND COLONIAL.

An interesting ceremony took place on the 29th ult., the meeting of the St. Clement Danes Lodge, No. 1315 viz:—the initiation of a member of the Burmese Embassy, Mr. John Scheffer, Chief Dragoman and Attaché to the Embassy. The ceremony was performed by the W.M. Bro. W. Hale, at the place of meeting of the lodge, Carr's Hotel, Strand; and after the initiation the brethren entertained their newly-made brother at a banquet.

—Mr. Augustus Smith, Lord and proprietor of the Sicily Islands, died on Tuesday night, at the Duke of Cornwall Hotel, Plymouth, after a severe illness. The deceased sat in several Parliaments as M.P. for Truro. He was Provincial Grand Master for Cornwall, and took an active interest in the affairs of the Craft. He was in his 69th year

"A VISIT TO EPPS'S COCOA MANUFACTORY.—Through the kindness of Messrs. Epps, I recently had an opportunity of seeing the many complicated and varied processes the Cocoa bean passes through ere it is sold for public use, and being both interested and highly pleased with what I saw during my visit to the manufactory, I thought a brief account of the Cocoa and the way it is manufactured by Messrs. Epps, to fit it for a wholesome and nutritious beverage, might be of interest to the readers of Land and Water.—See Article in Land and Water, October 14.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS.—In general debility, mental depression, and nervous irritability, there is no medicine which operates so like a charm as these pills. They purify the blood, soothe and strengthen the nerves and system, give tone to the stomach, elevate the spirits, and, in fact, make the patient sensible of a total and most delightful revolution in his whole system. They may be commended most unreservedly as the very best family medicine in existence. Though so powerfully efficacious, they are singularly mild in their operation, and might be given with perfect confidence to delicate women and young children. They contain not a grain of mercury, or any other noxious substance, and cannot do harm. Delicate females, and all persons of sedentary habits, will find these pills a blessing.—ADVT.

FREEMASONRY IN ITALY.

We have received the following document from Rome:—

I.T.N.O.T.G.A.O.T.U.

Universal Masonry, Italian Family.
Liberty, Equality, Fraternity.

Grand Lodge of Freemasons in Italy and in its Masonic colonies.

Circular No. 1.

To all the Grand Masonic authorities of the two hemispheres, on terms of alliance, or of friendship with us.

Very dear brethren,

The desire which the different Italian Masonic Centres have entertained to become united as one body, is at length consummated. The constituent assembly, held at Rome on the 28th of last April, of which you, very illustrious brethren, have been already apprised by the usual circulars of summons, has achieved this noble object.

All the lodges, and all the Masonic Bodies previously scattered over the Italian peninsula, were represented in the Assembly by legitimate proxies, all of which, joining in the indissoluble bonds of fraternal union, have established at Rome the fundamental bases of the Italian Masonic fraternity, as a part of the universal brotherhood of the world.

Very dear and illustrious brethren,

We are convinced that you cannot fail to apprehend how important to the welfare of the universal Masonic Association is the fact which we have the pleasure to announce to you.

The Constituent Assembly, not forgetting that it is a part of one great whole, and having provided for what it considered as its individual interest, by the proclamation of Italian Masonic unity, has felt that it was its duty, within the limits of its sphere of action, to discuss all subjects which concern the Order in general; and with this object, it has given a commission to the Grand Master to take the initiative in issuing summonses for an international Masonic Congress.

Henceforth we indulge in an earnest hope that the Masonic authorities will entertain and strive to promote this idea, will bring all their attention and intelligence to bear upon it, and that, in accordance with our views, finding it useful, opportune, and glorious in the interests of the Order, they will endeavour to carry it into execution in the manner, and at the period which, in their judgment, may appear the most desirable and suitable, thus reducing to action a notion which evidently may powerfully affect the general interests of the Order.

Not only do Masonic habits and customs make it a duty, but we also feel it an honour to inform you of the result of the new elections made by the representatives who met together.

The following have been proclaimed honorary Grand Masters for life:—

- The very illustrious and puissant brethren Joseph Garibaldi, 33°, General.
- Joseph Mazzoni, 33°, Member of Parliament.
- Frederic Campanella, 33°.
- Mariano Maresca, 33°.

The following were afterwards elected:—

- Grand Master, Bro. Joseph Mazzoni, 33°, Member of Parliament.
- 1st Deputy Grand Master, Bro. Jos. Massi, 33°, Member of Parliament.
- 2nd Deputy Grand Master Bro. Mariatto Maresca, 33°, Member of Parliament.
- 3rd Deputy Grand Master Bro. Geo. Tanrejo, 33°, Member of Parliament.
- Grand Secretary Bro. Louis Castellazzo, 33°.
- Grand Treasurer Bro. Louis Pianciani, 33°, Member of Parliament.

The Council of Order is composed of the following brethren:—

- Manro Macchi, Member of Parliament.
- Pierre La Cava, ditto.
- Geo. Asproni, ditto.
- Simon Larcher, Advocate.
- C. Pinocchio, Homme de Lettres.
- C. Zizzi, Member of Parliament.
- Jos. Stagno, Merchant.
- Jos. Avezzana, General, and Member of Parliament.
- B. Odicini, M.D.

Antoine de Witt, Member of Parliament.
 Andrea Crispo, Homme de Lettres.
 Jn. Nicotera, Member of Parliament.
 Frs. Degli Azzi Vitelleschi, Landholder.
 L. Grecco Cassia, Member of Parliament.
 Fabius Cannella, ditto.
 Jn. Della Rocca, ditto.
 Antonio Facci, M.D.
 Frs. Bennicelli, Landholder.
 Jos. V. de Zugni, ditto.
 Jos. Petroni, ditto.
 Corrado Tomassi-Crudelli, Professor of Medicine.
 De Virte, Landholder.

Members of one great family, the deputies to the Italian Masonic Constituent Assembly, have regarded as being present with them in spirit all their brother Freemasons scattered over the whole surface of the globe, and in order, by external and marked manifestations, to express the sentiments of esteem and affection which link Italian Masonry to that of the whole world, they have sent salutations from Rome to all the Freemasons in the universe, and have given a triple Masonic fire, with all the honours, as a token of respect for all the authorities and powers who rule over the various branches of the universal Masonic fraternity.

Very dear and illustrious brethren,

We feel assured that you will receive, with infinite satisfaction, these tokens of our esteem and affection. They are the bonds which unite us, and which, by proving that we are a portion, however insignificant, of a vast association, furnish us with strength and encouragement to labour in the promotion of the great object of our institution, that is to say, the intellectual and moral progress of the human race.

Very dear and illustrious brethren,

We pray you to afford a cordial reception to these documents, which we now lay before you, and to stamp with your Masonic authority all those portions which may bear good fruit by drawing the bonds of union more closely together.

Done at the Grand Lodge of Rome, May 5th, 1872.

Guiseppe Mazzoni, Grand Master.
 Guiseppe Mussi, 1st Deputy Grand Master.
 Mariano Maresca, 2nd Deputy Grand Master.
 Geo. Tomado, 3rd Deputy Grand Master.
 Manro Macchi, Grand Chamberlain.
 Frs. Bennicelli, Grand Registrar.
 Luigi Castellazzo, Grand Secretary.

WEST LANCASHIRE MASONIC RELIEF COMMITTEE.

ANNUAL REPORT.

Brethren.—Again your attention is called to a statement of receipts and expenditure, from which it will be seen that during the past year the usefulness of this Institution has not decreased.

The non-attendance of representatives from most of the Lodges, while it shows the great confidence with which this Committee is generally regarded, is nevertheless a cause for regret, as it throws a large amount of responsibility upon a few regular attenders, the necessity is again urged upon you, of appointing those only who will attend the Meetings.

Intercommunication with the Committees in Manchester, Birmingham and Leeds still continues to be the means of preventing imposition, and thanks are heartily accorded to the Secretaries of those Committees for their co-operation and assistance.

One circumstance has caused much general sorrow, and that is the retirement of Bro. Thomas Marsh, P.P.G.A.D. of C., from the office of Honorary Secretary, which he so ably filled from the formation of the Committee, being twelve years, up to the present time, and the best thanks of the Lodges are due to Him for the services he has rendered to the "Craft" through this Committee.

The Annual Grant is now due, and can be paid to the Treasurer or Secretary, any Friday evening at six o'clock, and you will please elect three members of your Lodge as representatives on this Committee, forwarding their names and addresses to the Secretary.

On behalf of the Committee,

WILLIAM LAIDLAW, Chairman

ROBERT WYLLIE, Hon. Sec.

Masonic Hall, 22, Hope Street, Liverpool.

5th July, 1872.

ARTEMUS WARD, M.W.G. M.S.M.

We have been furnished with a speech from Artemus Ward, said to have been delivered at Baldwinville, Ind., June 24, in the year of Grace, 1859. It may be a matter of surprise to our readers that this distinguished showman hath attained to the high position indicated by the letters attached to his name above, which all will readily understand. The speech is written in the author's best style, but its great length precludes our laying it before our readers at this time. We give the closing portion:—

"But I return to the day we celebrate. It is the 24th of June, St. John's day. St. John was one of our Order, and a good showman in the Judee country; and were also a hard-shell Baptist, who preached in the woods, as we do today. He was persecuted for our sakes and driven into the wilderness, where he had nothing to eat but locusts (which is a cimbell for grasshoppers) and wild honey. The honey was good enough, but it is the speaker's opinion the grasshoppers were mighty hard feed for a showman. But we have no fear that such evil will befall us; for to all the persecutors of our show, we can raise our brazen fronts and exclaim in the words of our great national poet—

"Hail Columbio! who's afeered,
 Look on our cimbells and be skeered."

But I see by the sign, which we all understand, that our dinner is ready. This is the most important and pleasing event connected with our show, an appeal to the inner man that can never be resisted. We may stand here before an admiring world, and speak like Hannibal or Plutarky of the wonders, and glories, and age, and dominion of our beatific show. We may clothe ourselves in simbells and fantasticals, mount on horses, or proudly walk on foot, looking with contempt on all around us, while we represent the great cimbell of simbells. Yea, we may even spread on our abdomins all the symbolicals of our Order; but a good warm dinner taken innardly, is better than them all. Aye, my fellow showmen; now I see, I've touched your feeling with a Past Grand Master's hand, and deeply stirred the yearnings of your bowels. And in the full glow of this excitement, I will conclude by giving you the following national and patriotic toast, that may be eat sitting:

"All hail Columbia, and each Columbiana,
 And hail the brightest gem, the blushing Indiana."

—Masonic Advocate.

METROPOLITAN MASONIC MEETINGS.

For the Week ending Friday, August 10, 1872.

SATURDAY, AUG. 3.

General Committee Boys' School, Freemasons' Hall, at 4.
 Star Lodge of Instruction (1275), Marquis of Granby, New Cross-road, at 7; Bro. C. S. Dille, Preceptor.
 Sphinx Lodge of Instruction (1329), Castle Tavern, Camberwell-road, at 7.30; Bros. Thomas and Worthington, Preceptors.
 Mount Sinai Chapter of Instruction, Union Tavern, Air-street, at 8; Comp. Brett, Preceptor.
 Manchester Lodge of Instruction, Yorkshire Grey, London Street, Fitzroy-square, at 8; Bro. Ash, P.M., Preceptor.

MONDAY, AUG. 5.

Lodge 1319, Asaph, Freemasons' Hall.
 Sincerity Lodge of Instruction (174), Railway Tavern, Fenchurch-street Station, at 7.

Strong Man Lodge of Instruction (45), Old Jerusalem Tavern, St. John's Gate, Clerkenwell, at 8; Bro. James Terry, Preceptor.
 Camden Lodge of Instruction (704), Adelaide Tavern, Haverstock-hill, at 8; Bro. T. A. Adams, Preceptor.
 Eastern Star Lodge of Instruction (95), Royal Hotel, Mile-end-road, at 7.30; Bro. E. Gottheil, Preceptor.
 British Oak Lodge of Instruction, Bank of Friendship Tavern, Nile End, at 7 for 8.
 St. James's Union Lodge of Instruction (180), Horse and Groom Tavern, Winsley-street, (opposite the Pantheon), Oxford-street, at 8; Bro. J. R. Stacey, Preceptor.
 Wellington Lodge of Instruction, White Swan Tavern, Deptford, at 8; Bro. C. G. Willey, P.M. 11.55, Preceptor.
 St. John of Wapping Lodge of Instruction (1306), Gun Tavern, High-street, Wapping, at 7; Bro. T. Mortlock, Preceptor.
 West Kent Lodge of Improvement (1297), St. Saviour's College, Stansted-road, Forest-hill, at 7.30; Bro. H. W. Lindus, Preceptor.

TUESDAY, AUG. 6.

Colonial Board at 3 o'clock.
 Lodge 167, St. John's, Holly Bush Tavern, Hamstead.
 " 1257, Grosvenor, Caledonian Hotel, Adelphi.
 " 1259, Duke of Edinburgh, New Globe Tavern, Bow-road.
 " 1261, Golden Rule, Masons' Hall, Masons'-avenue.
 " 1298, Royal Standard, Marquess Tavern, Canonbury.
 Chap. 169, Temperance, White Swan Tavern, Deptford.
 " 507, United Pilgrims, Horns Tavern, Kennington.
 Metropolitan Chapter of Instruction, Portugal Hotel, Fleet-street, at 7; Comp. Brett, Preceptor.
 Domestic Lodge of Instruction, Palmerston Tav., Grosvenor-park, Camberwell, at 8; Bro. John Thomas, Preceptor.
 Faith Lodge of Instruction, Refreshment Rooms, Victoria-st. (opposite Westminster Palace Hotel) at 8; Bro. C. A. Cotterburne, Preceptor.
 Yarborough Lodge of Instruction, Green Dragon, Stepney, at 8; Bro. Isaac Saqui, Preceptor.
 Prince Fredk. William Lodge of Instruction (753), Knights of St. John Tavern, St. John's Wood; Bro. F. G. Baker, Preceptor.
 Dalhousie Lodge of Instruction, King Edward, Triangle, Hackney, at 7.30. Bro. J. Saunders, Preceptor.
 Florence Nightingale Lodge of Instruction, Masonic Hall, William-street, Woolwich, at 7.30.
 Prosperity Lodge of Instruction, Gladstone Tavern, Bishopsgate-st. Within, at 7.30; Bro. Bolton, (W.M. 1227), Preceptor.
 St. Marylebone Lodge of Instruction (1305), British Stores Tavern, New-street, St. John's Wood, at 8; Bro. T. A. Adams, Preceptor.

WEDNESDAY, AUG. 7.

Grand Chapter, at 7.
 Pythagorean Lodge of Instruction (79), Prince of Orange Greenwich, at 8; Bro. J. Robt. Nash, Preceptor.
 United Strength Lodge of Instruction (228), the Grafton Arms, Prince of Wales's Road, Kentish Town, at 8; Bro. J. N. Frost, Preceptor.
 Israel Lodge of Instruction, Rising Sun Tavern, Globe-road, at 7.30; Bro. Isaac Saqui, Preceptor.
 New Concord Lodge of Instruction, Rosemary Branch Tavern, Hoxton, at 8.
 Confidence Lodge of Instruction, Railway Tav., London-street, City, at 7.30.
 Royal Union Lodge of Instruction, Horse and Groom Tavern, Winsley-street, Oxford-street, at 8. Bro. T. A. Adams, Preceptor.
 Peckham Lodge of Instruction, Maismore Arms, Park-road, Peckham at 8; Bro. David Rose, Preceptor.
 Temperance in the East Lodge of Instruction, George the Fourth, Catherine-street, Poplar.
 Stanhope Lodge of Instruction, Thicket Hotel, Anerly, at 7.30. p.m.; Bro. H. W. Lindus, Preceptor.

THURSDAY, AUG. 8.

Lodge 1227, Upton, Spotted Dog, Upton, Essex.
 " 1288, Finsbury Park, Finsbury Park Tavern, Holloway.
 Temple Crossing K. T. Encampment, Horns Tavern, Kennington.
 The R.A. Chapter of Improvement, Freemasons' Hall, at 7; Comp. Brett, Preceptor. Ceremony, explanation of R.A. Jewel and Solids, part sections.
 Fidelity Lodge of Instruction (3), Yorkshire Grey, London-st., Tottenham Court-road, at 8; Bro. T. A. Adams, Preceptor.

Panmure Lodge of Instruction (720), Balham Hotel, Balham, at 7.30; Bro. John Thomas, Preceptor.
 Finsbury Lodge of Instruction, Jolly Anglers' Tavern, Bath-street, City-road; Bro. Stean, Preceptor.
 United Mariners' Lodge of Instruction, Three Cranes, Mile-end-road, at 8; Bro. T. J. Barnes, Preceptor.
 Whittington Lodge of Instruction (862), Crown Tavern, Holborn, at 8; Bro. Lewis Alexander, P.M. 188, Preceptor.

Chigwell Lodge of Instruction, Bald-faced Stag Hotel, Buckhurst Hill, at 7.30.
