REFUGES and HOMES for the DESTITUTE and NEGLECTED.—The Council of the REFORMATORY and REFUGE UNION earnestly APPEAL for AID, to enable them to renew their winter grants to the various Refuges and Homes for the outcast, destitute, and homeless, to the same amount as in former years.

Last winter they received £2,000 in answer to their appeal, and were thus enabled to give most seasonable help to 38 different institutions, situate in all parts of the kingdom, providing accommodation for upwards of 2,600 boys and girls, all of whom are lodged, fed, clothed, educated, and taught some useful occupation, by which to earn their own living.

No grant is made until after the Institution has been carefully inspected and fully reported upon by a member of the Council, and its management approved.

Up to the present time the Council have only received £700 of the 2,000 required to enable them to re-vote last year's Grants. They therefore earnestly APPEAL for further help.

UNITED MARINERS LODGE (No. 30).—The regular meeting of this prosperous lodge was held at the Guildhall Tavern, Gresham-street, E.C., on Tuesday, the 21st of January, 1873. Bro. G. J. C. Smith, W.M. presiding. The lodge was opened in ancient form in the 1st, 2nd, and 3rd degrees, when Bro. W. J. Osborne, W.M. elect., was duly installed into the chair of K.S., by the Installing Master Bro. I. Driscoll, P.M., 30, assisted by a board of 18 Installed Masters. The W.M. then appointed his officers as follows: Bros. G. J. C. Smith, I.P.M.; W. Ansell, S.W.; H. Bethell, J.W.; R. J. Deeley, S.D.; Lefeaux, J.D.; T. Smith, I.G.; Caseley, D.C.; Field, S.; J. Driscoll, A.S.; Crossley, O. The lodge was then closed with solemn prayer, and the brethren adjourned to a well provided banquet. The usual loyal toasts having been given, the I.P.M., proposed "The Health of the W.M.," who duly responded. A Past Master's jewel having been awarded to Bro. G. J. C. Smith, by the lodge, the W.M. duly presented it. The toasts to the visitors P.M.'s, and the Installing Master having been given, Bro. J. Driscoll, P.M., favoured the brethren with a beautiful recitation called "The Spirit of Charity." The toast of the Royal Masonic Benevolent Institution for Aged Freemasons was then given, coupled with the name of Bro. G. J. C. Smith, I.P.M., who has accepted the office of Steward, at the forthcoming festival, which toast was duly and fully responded, by Bro. Smith, and Bro. Gompertz, P.M., P. Prov. G.P., Herts; other toasts followed concluding with the Tyler's. A number of songs were given during the evening, a very enjoyable evening having been spent. The visitors were Bros. Younghusband, P.M., P. Prov. G. P. 241, Lancashire; Gompertz, P.M., P. Prov. G.P. Herts, 869; Parker, P.M., 619; How, P.M., 212; Senecal, P.M., 860; Barly, P.M., 441; Fulham, P.M., 1031, Birmingham; Tye, P.M., P. Prov. G.P., Middlesex, 1237; Roberts, P.M., 192, and numerous other brethren.

KEIGHLEY.—Royal Yorkshire Lodge (No. 265).—The brethren of this lodge met together on Friday evening last, in the lodge room of the Masonic Hall, Hanover-street, to celebrate their annual festival in honour of St. John the Evangelist. The banquet, to which about sixty brethren sat down, was presided over by Bro. J. W. Rhodes, W.M., assisted by his officers, Bros. W. Naylor, S.W.; C. Dinsdale, J.W., and others; and the Worshipful Past Masters, Bros. Hopkinson, Scott, Smith, Summerscales, Wall, and Williamson. The usual patriotic, loyal, and Masonic toasts were duly honoured. The W.M., in proposing the toast of "The Queen," briefly adverted to the advancement and prosperity of the country under Her Most Gracious Majesty's reign; the brethren heartily responded by singing the National Anthem. After the toast of "His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales, Princess of Wales, and the rest of the Royal Family," Bro. Asquith gave the song and chorus "God Bless the Prince of Wales." Bro. Capt. Williamson responded with patriotic and soldierly warmth to the "Army, Navy, and Reserved Forces;" after which B. T. Aked sang "Let me like a Soldier Fall." "The M.W.G.M. of England, the Marquis of Ripon, K.G.," was worthily given by the W.M., who portrayed the benevolence and charity of the M.W.G.M. in such a manner as to make every brother feel that there was one at their head who ever had the interest of Masonry at heart. The toast was heartily and enthusiastically greeted with the honours, &c. "The Visiting Brethren" was given by the W.M., and responded to by Bros. Hoyle, Hope Lodge (302), Branford; Dr. Murgatroyd, P.M. Airedale (387), Shipley; B. Pawson, P.M., the Three Graces (408), Haworth; B. Kidd, Craven Lodge (810), Skip-ton; and Booth, of Exeter. "The I.P.M. of the Royal Yorkshire Lodge" was given by the W.M., who extolled the able and praiseworthy manner in which the business and working of the lodge had been conducted during the past year, and the interest displayed for the good of Masonry in general in so worthily maintaining the high position of the Royal Yorkshire. The brethren received the toast as it deserved. The I.P.M. gave the toast of "The W.M.," which was heartily responded to by the brethren. "The Officers of the Royal Yorkshire Lodge" and other toasts were severally proposed and honoured; and the W.M., in giving "The Masonic Charities," had only to observe, before the brethren should honour the toast, that charity was the distinguishing badge of every true Mason, and was very happy to say that the brethren of this lodge had contributed about fifty guineas to the Masonic charities during the last year. Bro. S. Summerscales, in proposing "The Distressed Masons," said that he merely desired to remind the brethren that the "distressed Masons" were men who had seen "better days," and therefore felt their present misfortunes the more keenly, &c. The toast was drunk in silence. With toasts, songs, and glees the evening glided pleasantly away, and the brethren retired to their respective homes at "low twelve."

BODMIN.—One and All Lodge (No. 330).—At the regular meeting of this lodge was held at the Freemasons' Hall, on the 12th of January, inst., the notification from the Grand Lodge announcing the appointment of the Right Honourable The Earl of Mount Edgcumbe, as Provincial Grand Master of Cornwall, was read, whereupon it was resolved with great applause, that a congratulatory address be presented to the Right Worshipful Provincial Grand Master, tendering to him the sincere congratulations of this, the Mother Lodge of the eastern division of this province on his appointment as Provincial Grand Master, and that it be signed by the acting Master, Bro. Colick, P.M., P. Prov. S.G.W., and transmitted by Bro. Rich, P.M. the P.J.G.W., Hon. Secretary 330, to which the following gracious answer has been received.

Grand Master of Cornwall, and I beg that you will accept my best thanks for your good wishes and be assured that I am deeply sensible of, and much gratified by this expression of your kind feeling towards me; and that I hope it may not be very long before I have an opportunity of becoming further acquainted with yourself and the members of your lodge.

"I remain, Worshipful Sir and Brother, Mount Edgcumbe."

"Bro. H. J. COLVILLE, P.M., Acting W.M. No. 330. P. Prov. J.G.W."

cluding the R.W. the Deputy Provincial Grand Master of Hants and the Isle of Wight, Bro. J. R. Stebbing, P.G. Deacon of England, and the following P.M.'s and W.M.'s—Bros. M. E. Frost, P.G. J. Payne, S.W.; J. Maltby, J.W.; John Moore, S.D.; E. Bunting, J.D.; E. M. Wells, Treasurer; M. E. Frost, Secretary; J. Astridge, Assistant-Secretary; W. Barnes, Organist; Townshend, D.C.; G. Bond, I.G. After the closing of the lodge, a banquet was served in the adjoining room, to which upwards of 60 sat down, including a number of guests invited by the W.M., who with great liberality placed the wines upon the tables. The W.M. presided, and the vice-chairs were filled by the Wardens of the lodge. At the conclusion of the dinner the W.M., in terse and appropriate terms, gave "The Queen," "P.G.M., H.R.H. the Prince of Wales and the Craft;" and "The M.W. the G.M., the Marquis of Ripon," to which D.P.G.M. of Hants (Bro. J. R. Stebbing, P.G. Deacon of England) responded. He was sure they rejoiced with him that the D.G.M. of England (the Earl of Carnarvon) was a Hampshire man, whom they very much regarded, and who was an active Freemason. The G.M. was very much beloved for his personal bearing and kindness of heart. No doubt many of the other officers of the Grand Lodge were there to the exclusion of men who had an equal and perhaps a greater title to that position, but it was pleasing to say that all who occupied positions in the Grand Lodge had done a great deal of good work outside their lodges for the Masonic Charities and in helping on the work of the Masonic structure in one way or another. The G.M. had looked a little beyond the City of London, and it was only some few years ago that two additional Deacons were added to the number of appointments at the disposal of the G.M. in order that the brethren of the provinces might have their merits acknowledged. He hoped it would not be long before the G.M. would cast his eye in the direction of Portsmouth, so that one of his (the speaker's) fellow townsmen might be placed on the dais. There was great Masonic merit in the locality, and men deserving the recognition of the G.M. The W.M. next gave "The R.W. the P.G.M. of Hampshire and Isle of Wight, Bro. W. W. Beach, M.P." and expressed a hope that he would hold the office for many years to come. In proposing "The R.W. the D.P.G.M. of Hampshire and the Isle of Wight, Bro. J. R. Stebbing, and officers of P.G.L.," the W.M. said he felt highly honoured by the presence of the D.P.G.M., who attended at some personal sacrifice. D.P.G.M. Stebbing responded in a lengthened and eloquent speech. He referred to the fact that he had constituted that lodge, and consecrated it some thirty-one years since. In exhorting brethren not to be over anxious as to the attainment of Masonic honours, he mentioned that when he consecrated the lodge he had the appointment in his pocket of the D.P.G.M. of Hampshire, but he did not then accept it, and had waited until he was an older man. After suggesting that it would be well if they endeavoured to close the meetings of the lodge a little earlier than at present, the D.G.M. called attention to the wonderful progress Masonry was making in the present day. The number of lodges had doubled within a generation, and the number of members far exceeded the number in any former period of its history, although Masonry had existed from the earliest times. After much reading and research he believed Masonry was one of the oldest institutions that had existed in this world. Masonry was not made up of the Grand Lodge or its officers, or of the number of the lodges, but it consisted in the strength and wisdom of the lodges and in the faithfulness and honesty of the men who were members. If they were faithful to their trust and did not tarnish the mighty fabric under the shadow of which they reposed, and outside of it were faithful to its principles, it would continue to be one of the brightest, noblest, and greatest institutions which the Great Architect of the Universe ever gave to man. Even if any of these failed it was too great an institution to be affected thereby; notwithstanding any little speck it would shine forth in the strength of immortal youth, until that period when the end of all things shall come, and whether in easy or troublous times,

Like some tall cliff that lifts its awful form,
Swells from the vale, and midway leaves the storm;
Though round its breast the rolling clouds are spread,
Eternal sunshine settles on its head.

Masonry would live for ever, a thing both rich and rare. He urged the brethren to be true to their obligations, to realise the full advantages of the great and blessed Order by being worthy of it, and striving to be among the noblest of its sons. (Loud applause). Bro. H. Ford, after dwelling in forcible terms upon the duty of the brethren to promote charity and good feeling, gave "Poor and Distressed Brethren all over the World." Bro. Frost gave "The W.M., Bro. G. S. Lancaster," and expressed his belief that he would make as good a Master as they had had for many years. The toast was drunk with great cordiality, and the W.M. made a fitting response. Bro. Ubsdell then proposed "The W. Masters, and Representatives of neighbouring Lodges," to which Bro. Leigh Bailey responded in a telling speech, in which he dwelt upon the importance of carrying out the vital principles of Masonry. "The Visitors" was given by Bro. Rake, and ably acknowledged by Bro. F. Bigg, of London. "The Installing Master" was given by the D.P. G.M., who spoke of the importance of uniformity of practice in the different lodges, and acknowledged by Bro. Frost. "The I.P.M." proposed by Bro. Cousins, and acknowledged by Bro. Ubsdell; "The P.M.'s" spoken to by Bros. T. Batchelor and Cousins, and "The Officers," responded to by Bro. J. Payne, brought the list of toasts to a close. The speeches were interspersed with some excellent singing by several of the company. Bro. Bigg's rendering of the "Death of Nelson" almost within sight of the ship "in which the gallant hero fought" having been received with unequivocal enthusiasm.

DEVIZES.—Hillsire Lodge of Fidelity (No. 663).—This lodge held its installation festival at the Town Hall, Devizes, on Friday, the 21st inst., when Bro. J. H. Chandler, P. Prov. G.O. After the lodge business was closed, the brethren adjourned to the banquet at the Crown Hotel, to which a liberal supply of game had been contributed as usual by Bro. S. Watson Taylor, of Erlestoke Park. The usual loyal and Masonic toasts followed the repast, that of the W.M.

being given in a most eloquent manner by the D. Prov. G.M., Bro. Wittery, who referred to his father, the (Installing Master) services for his own lodge at Swindon, and held them up as a pattern for the son's imitation in the Devizes Lodge, of which he had been this day installed as the ruler.

LIVERPOOL.—The Derby Lodge (No. 724).—The annual gathering of the brethren of this lodge for installation and other purposes was held at the Masonic Temple, Hope-st., on Wednesday evening, the 22nd ult., when there was one of the most numerous and influential meetings which have been held for some time. The lodge was opened according to ancient form by Bro. J. F. Jones, W.M., who was supported by the following officers and brethren:—Bros. C. H. Hill, P.M.; R. Cain, P.M.; W. Snortis, S.W.; J. D. McLaren, J.W.; T. Chesworth, Treas.; G. Hutchin, Sec.; J. W. Ballard, S.D.; G. Barker, I.G.; T. H. Ward, O.; and W. Mills, Tyler; J. Davison, J. Stewart, E. Mc Swiney, J. B. Jeffery, W. Evans, A. Hart, G. Dykms, M. Hart, E. Wise, T. Maxwell, &c., a number of distinguished visitors were present. This highly imposing gathering of the principals of sister lodges proved how much the "Derby" is valued and esteemed in the province. After the minutes were unanimously confirmed, two brethren were balloted for and declared duly elected. The balance sheet for the past year showed that the funds of the lodge were in a healthy condition. Bro. Jones, W.M., then initiated Mr. Thomas Mc Nabb, into the mysteries and privileges of the order, Bro. J. Hamer, P.P.G. Treas., afterwards took the chair, and proceeded with the installation of Bro. W. Shortis, W.M., elect, who was presented by Bros. C. H. Hill, and J. F. Jones. The officers of the lodge for the ensuing year were subsequently invested.

GOSPORT.—Gosport Lodge (No. 903).—The annual meeting of this lodge, for installation and other purposes, was held at the Star Hotel, Gosport, on Tuesday, the 13th inst. Bro. Wilson, P.M., opened the lodge in the 1st degree, and the minutes of the last regular lodge, which contained a vote of 5 guineas to the Royal Masonic Institution for Girls, were read and confirmed. This sum, together with previous grants, will constitute the lodge a Vice President of that Institution, as it already is of the Institution for Boys. The report of the Audit Committee was also read, showing a very favourable balance in hand on last year's account. A ballot was then taken for two brethren as joining members and one candidate for initiation, which was declared unanimously in favour in each case. Bro. Whitcomb, P.M., was then proposed and seconded as Treasurer of the lodge for the ensuing year and was duly elected. The chair was then taken by Bro. W. T. Miller, I.P.M. P. Prov. G.S.D. Hants, proceeded to install Bro. H. Skemm as Worshipful Master for 1873. The ancient charges were read to and the obligation taken by the W.M. elect, when all brethren not installed Masters retired, and a Board of installed Masters was formed. The brethren were readmitted in the several degrees, and saluted the W.M. according to ancient form, after which the Installing Master delivered the usual address to the W.M., officers, and brethren. This concluded the ceremony of installation, which was conducted throughout with such ability, eloquence, and grace of diction as we have rarely seen equalled and never surpassed. Indeed, Bro. Miller, although a comparatively young Mason, has already achieved a wide reputation as a most able, learned, and energetic one, and by his energy and zeal during his year of office as W.M., has raised the Gosport Lodge to a position second to none in the province for its working. A Masonic Anthem, composed by Bro. Robinson, of Dublin, and an ode, written and composed by Bro. J. Douglas, P.M., P. Prov. G.W., and Bro. T. G. Bradbear, P. Prov. G.O., were sung during the ceremony by Bros. Lancaster and Knight, assisted by Bros. Bradbear, P.M., Stapleford, P.M., and Totterdell. Bro. Barnes, P.G.O., presided at the harmonium. The following brethren were then invested by the W.M. as his officers, viz:—Bro. J. Hall, S.W.; G. T. Lancaster, J.W.; Rev. E. B. C.

Churchill, Chaplain; C. B. Whitcomb, Treas.; J. Maling, Sec.; W. Hillier, S.D.; H. Long, J.D.; A. Knight, D.C.; V. Brown, I.G.; W. Eades, and G. Cavell, Stewards. Mr. Gill, a candidate duly elected for initiation, was admitted to the lodge, and regularly initiated into the mysteries and privileges of Ancient Freemasonry; the ceremony being performed by the newly installed W.M. in a style which elicited the admiration of the many Past Masters present. A vote of thanks to the Installing Master for the admirable manner in which he had performed the ceremony was proposed and unanimously passed by the brethren. Several candidates having been proposed for initiation, the lodge was then closed in perfect harmony and solemn prayer. The banquet, held at the India Arms Hotel, was attended by about 60 brethren, including most of W.M.s of neighbouring lodges and a number of other distinguished visitors. The usual loyal and Masonic toasts were duly honoured, that of the Installing Master being received with vociferous cheers; and it having transpired that the father of the worthy brother was present, that gentleman was congratulated by Bro. P. M. Wilson upon the ability displayed by his son in conducting the duties of that evening. Bro. P. M. Miller responded to the toast in his usual felicitous manner, and his father warmly acknowledged the pleasure he had received and the pride he felt at the high esteem in which his son was held by the brethren. The toast of the evening, that of the Worshipful Master, proposed by Bro. P. M. Miller, was received with equal warmth. Bro. Miller highly complimenting the W.M. upon the very creditable manner in which he performed the ceremony of initiation. The W.M. returned thanks in feeling terms for the compliments passed upon him, and assured the brethren that he would endeavour to follow in the footsteps of his predecessors, and maintain that unanimity which had hitherto existed in the lodge. The Tyler's toast brought this very pleasant evening to a close at a seasonable hour.

S. Cook, P.M., Tyler; Mr. S. Miles having been unanimously elected the W.M. at once proceeded to initiate him into the mysteries and secrets of the Order. This was done in a most masterly manner, showing that the W.M. was well qualified in the duties of his high office with great ability, and which was highly applauded by the brethren. The R.W.D.P.G.M. then asked permission of the W.M. to be allowed to address a few words to the lodge. He stated that he was much pleased at the manner in which he found the lodge duties performed, paying a high compliment to Bro. T. Phillips, P.M., P.G.S.W., for the able manner in which he had initiated the W.M. that evening, also to the brethren who so ably assisted him. In alluding to the manner in which the newly installed Master had performed his duties he considered it reflected great honour on the lodge in having made such a selection in the choice of a W.M. He was pleased to express great admiration to the W.M.

for the very efficient manner in which he had performed the ceremony of initiation that evening; that he had no doubt from the ability of the W.M. the business of the lodge would be conducted in a satisfactory manner. It would afford him much pleasure to report to Sir Pryse Pryse, the R.W.P.G.M., the high state of efficiency in which he found the lodge. This announcement was highly pleasing to the brethren, and much applauded. The lodge was then closed in due form by the W.M., and the brethren adjourned to the banqueting room, where an excellent supper had been prepared by the worthy host, Mr. Whitton, in his usual first-rate style. The W.M. presided, supported on his right by Bro. Major J. A. Lloyd Phillip, R.W.D.P.G.M.; Bro. Phillips, P.M., 378, P.G.S.W.; Bro. I. Smedly, P.M., 990, P.P.G.J.W.; Bro. I. R. Parry, P.M., 990, P.P.G.S.W.; Bro. G. W. Phillips, P.M., 990, P.P.G.D.C.; and about 20 other brethren and several visitors from H. West and Pembroke Dock. The usual loyal and patriotic toasts were given. "The Queen and the Craft," "The M.W.G.M. of England, the Marquis of Ripon," "The R.W.D.G.M. the Earl of Carnarvon, and the Officers of the Grand Lodge, past and present," "The R.W.P.G.M. of the W.D.S. Wales, Sir Pryse Pryse, Bart," "The Provincial Grand Officers past and present." The W.M., in a kind and graceful manner, proposed "The health of Major Lloyd Phillips, R.W.D.P.G.M., W.D. South Wales." This was most enthusiastically received by the brethren, who drank it in a bumper. The R.W.D.P.G.M., after referring to the kind manner in which the brethren had been pleased to drink his health, expressed the pleasure it afforded him to be amongst them in his official capacity as D.P.G.M., and to observe the very excellent manner in which the lodge was worked, and the state of efficiency to which it had attained. The able way in which the installation ceremony had been conducted, and also the very satisfactory manner in which the newly Installed Master had discharged his duties were to be highly commended. He then asked permission to be allowed to propose a toast, which he knew would be well received, which was that of the W.M. who had shown his ability as Master that evening, and under whose guidance he had no doubt the lodge would go on and prosper. This was very cordially received, and suitably acknowledged by the W.M., who expressed his thanks to the R.W.D.P.G.M. for the kind way in which he had spoken of his merits as a Master, and the cordial manner in which the brethren had responded. He felt proud of being Master of this lodge, considering it as being the highest honour that could be conferred on him, and he assured the brethren that it was duly appreciated, and if in the first ceremony he had performed he had executed it to their satisfaction he was much gratified and pleased at their approval, and that he was glad to see so many visitors present. The W.M. then proposed the Installing Master, Bro. T. Phillips, knowing that this toast would be well received from the high estimation in which he was held by the brethren, not only in that lodge but in the whole province, and also the high position he held in the P.G. Lodge, and his willingness at all times to further the interest of Freemasonry, he being in fact one of the founders of the lodge. Bro. Phillips having suitably replied, proposed "The Health of Bro. G. Parry, as one of oldest Masons in the province." This toast was well received. Bro. Parry being highly popular with the Craft. Bro. Parry having replied, gave an historical account of Masonry since he knew it and showed the rapid spread of the Order subsequently to that time. Bro. T. Phillips then proposed the "Health of the Visitors," coupling it with the name of Bro. T. R. Owen, P.M., who ably responded pointing out the advantages of Freemasonry and the many benefits it conferred on the members of the Craft, and showing in a masterly manner the principles of the Order when duly carried into effect. The W.M. then proposed the "Health of the Officers," which was responded to by Bros. Davis and Cousins. The "Health of the worthy Host and Hostess" was then proposed by Bro. Phillips for the very excellent dinner which they had provided. Mr. Whitton was then called in, and duly acknowledged the compliment. The brethren separated about 10 p.m., after enjoying a most agreeable evening.

The twenty-second half-yearly communication was held at the Freemasons' Hall, Byenlla, on Friday evening, the 29th November, 1872. There were present:—Rt. Wor. Bros. the Hon. Sir. Justice Gibbs, District Grand Master; George Taylor, Past District Grand Master; M. Balfour, D.G.S.W.; J. P. Cornforth, P.D.G. S.W.; A. Hay, P.D.G.S.W.; C. E. Mitchell, P.D.G.J.W., as D.G. J.W.; E. T. Leith, P.D. G.J.W.; W. H. Hussey, D.G. Secretary; S. Frommuze, D.G.J.D., as D.G.S.D.; P. Callaghan, D.G.J.D.; G. L. D'Emden, D.G. Dir. of Cer.; J. N. Dady, D.G. Pursuivant; J. W. Seager, D.G. Tyler; F. W. Bedford, C. D. Ling and H. N. Ghista, D.G. Stewards, and representatives of most of the lodges in the District.

The Right Worshipful District Grand Master announced that during the past half-year the lodges in the Bombay District have been working with a true cordiality and unanimity with which no country ought to be worked in every part of the globe. There has been no complaint from or against any lodge, and we have reason to believe that all the lodges are in a satisfactory and flourishing condition. A vote of condolence with the family of the late Lord Mayo, the Patron of Freemasonry in India, was passed, which had been acknowledged by the Hon. Robert Burke, his lordship's brother.

At the last communication of District G. Lodge it was agreed that the Grand Lodge should take over charge of the hall from the P. Prov. G. R. Committee. The hall was accordingly taken charge of, and with its liabilities also, amounting to about Rs. 8,200, of which Rs. 6,800 was on account of debentures taken up when the hall was first opened, for the purpose of forming the funds required for the furnishing and fitting up of the place. The debentures have been paid off to the extent of Rs. 3,800; the rents charged against the different bodies meeting in the hall have been reduced. There are now 60 debentures, which now represent Rs. 3,000 outstanding and in a short time, it is hoped, these will also be redeemed. In addition to this, the hall has been put into a state of repair, and all that remains is to decorate the lodge-room.

The District Grand Master announced that he had been favoured with a personal authority from the M.W. Grand Master of England, empowering to grant provisional warrants to lodges formed in this District.

Owing to the resignation of W. Bro. Percy Leith, the high office of Deputy District Grand Master has become vacant, and in the exercise of the right vested in him the District Grand Master appointed W. Bro. Andrew Hay to be the Deputy District Grand Master. W. Bro. Andrew Hay was presented by the Past District Grand Master, and invested with the insignia of his office.

The report of the meeting of the subscribers to the "Bengal Masonic Association for educating Children of Indigent Freemasons," held on the 5th June, 1872, was recorded. The District Grand Secretary stated that any member of Grand Lodge could have it to read.

The District Grand Secretary stated that he had some prospectuses of Bro. Lyon's "History of Lodge Mary's Chapel, No. 1, of Edinburgh," which he should be happy to distribute to any brother who might wish to register his name for a copy of the work.

The District Grand Secretary said that the District Grand Lodge of the Punjab had sent a contribution of Rs. 150 towards our General Masonic Charity Fund, and that the money had been handed over to the Treasurer of that fund.

The report of the Board of General Purposes was adopted.

The District Grand Secretary said it had been suggested at a meeting of Lodge "Truth" (944) that the propriety of celebrating St. John's Day by the Masons in Bombay should be brought before the District Grand Lodge, as it was thought that the festival might now be observed successfully. The District Grand Master remarked that the principal objection to the proposal was that St. John would have his day on the 27th December (laughter) when most were out of Bombay. The last time an attempt to celebrate the festival was made, it was a signal failure.

The Past District Grand Master rose and presented to the District Grand Master a beautiful work of art in shape of a Hiram in ivory, turned in a lathe and decorated with ornamental designs and patterns, which he said had been entirely fashioned and ornamented by his own hand, for the express purpose of presentation to the District Grand Master. The District Grand Master suitably acknowledged the gift, and the Hiram, a perfect little work of art, carved with the most elaborate and minute tracery, was then handed round for inspection.

The District Grand Lodge was closed in peace at 8 o'clock.

Mark Masonry.

STARKIE LODGE (No. 159).—On Friday, 17th inst., the Starkie Lodge of Mark Master Masons was duly consecrated at the Red Lion Hotel, Accrington. The lodge was opened at 2.30 p.m., by Bro. Thomas Hargreaves, P.M.M., 113, Junior Grand Mark Deacon of England. There was a numerous attendance of Provincial Grand Officers. In the absence of Bro. W. Romaine Callender, the Prov. G.M.M.M. of Lancashire, who was unable to be present through indisposition, and the Prov. Grand Chaplain, their respective offices were filled by Bro. George Mellor, Prov. S.G.W., as Prov. G.M., and Bro. Thomas Hargreaves, Junior G. Deacon, as Prov. G. Chaplain; the rest of the officers being Bro. G. P. Brockbank, Past Grand Warden, as Dep. Prov. G.M.; G. Galloway, Prov. S.G.W.; W. H. Prince, Prov. J.G.W.; John Chadwick, Prov. G. Sec.; Joseph Handley,

P.G.M.O.; T. J. Lancashire, P.G.S.O.; W. Walker, P.G.D.C.; W. Roberts, P.G.A.D.C., and others. After the reading of the warrant by Bro. John Chadwick, P.G. Sec., the acting Prov. G.M. proceeded to consecrate and constitute the brethren into a regular lodge. The ceremony of consecration was most ably performed, and was of the most solemn and impressive character. The acting P.G.M. afterwards called upon Bro. Thomas Hargreaves to install the first W.M. Bro. Thomas Hindle, the W.M. desig., having been presented, a Board of Installed Masters was formed, and the W.M. was then installed according to ancient form. The appointment and investiture of officers was next proceeded with; Bro. Redin, S.W.; Bro. Royston, J.W.; Bro. Boothman, M.O.; Bro. Hindle, S.O.; Bro. Parker, J.O.; Bro. Ward, Sec.; Bro. Halstead, Treas.; Bro. Biggs, S.D.; and Bro. Barnes, I.G. Hearty good wishes for the future prosperity of the lodge were expressed by Bro. Hargreaves, on behalf of Grand Lodge; Bro. Chadwick, Prov. Grand Lodge of Lancashire; Bro. Roberts, Prov. Grand Lodge of West Yorkshire; and by many other brethren, on behalf of private lodges. The lodge was honoured on the occasion by the attendance, as a visitor, of Bro. Major Le-Gendre N. Starkie, the V.W. Prov. Grand Master (Craft) of East Lancashire, after whom the lodge is named, and whose Lancashire residence is only a few miles distant. Upon the lodge being closed the brethren adjourned to banquet which was most bountifully supplied by the host, Bro. W. Harrison. The usual loyal and Masonic toasts were then duly given and honoured by the brethren. "The Queen, the Prince and the Princess of Wales, and the rest of the Royal Family." "The Rev. G. Raymond Portal, M.A., Most Worshipful Grand Mark Master of England." "The Earl of Limerick, W. Dep. G. Master, and the rest of Grand Officers." To the latter toast Bro. G. P. Brockbank, Past Grand Warden, responded on behalf of himself, Bro. Hargreaves, and the rest of Grand Officers. He begged to thank them for the very kind reception, and at the same time to congratulate them upon the choice of a name for their new lodge; he was sure they would all agree with him in saying that the name of Starkie was very much revered amongst the Craft Masons in the province, that he was glad to see that in the future should have the name of Starkie associated with the Mark degree. Bro. Redin, the S.W., proposed "The Health of W. Romaine Callendar, Esq., R. W. Prov. G. Master of Lancashire," and in doing so, referred in feeling terms to the indisposition which had prevented his being present; he said the brethren of the new lodge, along with himself, had been looking forward to the time, of the consecration that they might be able to give him a true Accrington welcome. In consequence of the P.G.M., leaving at an early period of the evening to catch the train, the toast was not responded to. The W.M. next proposed "The Health of Earl Skelmersdale and the rest of Prov. G. Officers," in a neat and appropriate speech. Bro. Handley and W. H. Prince, responded on behalf of present and past officers respectively. Bro. Prince in speaking at length, and he could not see how any one could be otherwise than a good Prov. Officer under such a good commander as their P.G.M., Bro. W. Romaine Callender. The Junior Grand Deacon, by the command of the W.M., proposed the next toast, "The Health of the Prov. Grand Master, (Craft), of East Lancashire, Bro. Major Le-Gendre Starkie." He said, we have amongst us to-day as a visitor no less a personage than the head or ruler of Craft Masons in the province, and though strictly speaking, this toast is not generally inserted in the list of Mark toasts, it affords the brethren very great pleasure. I am sure, to give a kind and hearty reception to the toast, on more than one account. It shows on the one hand that there is a unity of feeling between the rulers in the Craft and the Mark, and between the two branches of the science themselves, for though the Grand Lodge of England does not recognise us as Mark Masons still we recognise them, for all Mark Masons, must be full Craft Masons. There is also another reason why this toast will be well received, which is the fact that it bears the name of

Starkie. It has often been said that the Mark Degree is an anomaly, that as it is not recognised by Grand Lodge of England, it has no right to an existence, or a separate Grand Lodge; but to show the fallacy of such views, and that there is no antagonism between Craft and Mark Masons, it is only necessary to mention the names of some brethren of high repute in the Mark degree, and who have taken a great interest in the Grand Mark Lodge, to find that the same brethren occupy an equally high position in Craft Masonry. This shows that there really is no antagonism between the two branches. As to the choice of a name, the brethren of the new lodge, have made, in my own opinion, a very wise selection; this is not the only town, which has been for some time, considering the advisability of opening a new Mark Lodge, under the title of the Starkie Lodge. Blackburn has for some time been talking about a Mark Lodge under this name, but the despatch of the Accrington brethren in maturing their plans will cause the Blackburn brethren to select another name, when they finally resolve to open a new lodge. They cannot do better than take a leaf from your book. He was glad to see Bro. Starkie there in person, as it would shew by the manner in which the toast was received, the great amount of respect which they entertained towards him. The toast was then drunk with great enthusiasm. Bro. Major Starkie in responding, made a very brilliant speech; he entered at length into the matter of his taking the command of the Province (Craft) and said, he little thought at the time of the onerous duties which would devolve upon him. As to his being a Mark Mason, he had to thank Bro. Hargreaves for that honour, for it was at his suggestion, that he first took the degree, upon the occasion of the consecration of Blair Mark Lodge at Haslingden. Bro. Hargreaves invited him to join the lodge and take part in the ceremonies, he did so, and he then had the opportunity of meeting the M.W. Grand Master, Bro. Portal, for the first time. He was sorry to say that since that time he had not paid much attention to Mark Masonry, but he had just promised Bro. Hargreaves to take another degree in the Mark. He spoke of the articles of Union in 1813, as excluding the Grand Lodge from any possibility of acknowledging the Mark degree, but this did not prevent the high authorities in one degree from paying their respects to the supreme authorities in another. He mentioned the fact that his family had for many generations past been Masons; for within the last few days he had visited the tomb of one of his ancestors, in the neighbouring county of Cheshire, who was Gentleman Usher to King Henry VIII, and one of the first Knights of Malta. And he hoped that the little boy, whose health along with his own, they had so kindly drunk,—would follow in his footsteps. He had now a very pleasing duty to perform, that of proposing "The Health of Bro. Thomas Hindle, the first W.M. of the Starkie Mark Lodge," after speaking at considerable length, the toast was honoured in the usual way. The W.M., F. Hindle, responded in a very suitable manner. A number of other toasts were given during the evening, including the "Installing Master, the Visitors, the Officers of the Lodge and the Mark Benevolent Fund."

SCOTLAND.

EDINBURGH CONCLAVE (No. 4).—It is very gratifying to be able to record the progress of the Red Cross Order in Edinburgh. During the financial year now closing No. 4 has prospered in a highly satisfactory degree under the able guidance of its excellent M.P.S., Sir Knt. Christie, who has performed his duties in a most zealous spirit, besides attending attending the Lodge St. David, where he has been again elected to the chair of K.S. He has received the able assistance of his Viceroy, Sir Knt. Grant, a P.M. of Lodge St. Clair (349); also the Recorder, Sir Knt. R. S. Brown, P.V., R.W.M. of the Lodge St. Stephen (145); the Prelate, Sir Knt. Taylor, whose ability and zeal is well known, is also a P.M. of St. Stephens. A host of companions are also in attendance at the roll call to aid and assist in the harmony of the conclave. At a special meeting, held on the 4th inst., four brethren craved permission to explore the mysteries of the order. After due examination they were admitted, and, amid a large assembly, duly constituted and proclaimed Knights of the Red Cross of Constantine. The Conclave was thereafter closed, and the Sir Knights retired to the banquet, where, after the toasts of "The Queen" and "The Order," coupled with the name of the Grand Sovereign, Earl Bective, the M.P.S. proposed "The Health of the Newly-installed Sir Knights," calling upon Sir Knt. Coupar for the Red Cross Song, by whom it was very ably rendered. Sir Knt. Mercer, P.S., K.G.C., then proposed "The Health of the M.P.S.," and referred to the great success of the conclave during Sir Knight Christie's year of office, and mentioned that nearly thirty well-tried and true members had been added to the roll, and hoped that he would consent to be again nominated for the chair of C. at the ensuing election. After an hour's fraternal intercourse the companions separated after pledging the toast "Faith, Unity, and Zeal."

MASONIC BALL AT BURY.

A grand full-dress Masonic Ball, promoted by the brethren of the Royal St. Edmund Lodge (No. 1008), took place at the Athenæum Hall, Bury St. Edmund's, the 24th ult. As there had not been a similar gathering in this town for a great number of years, it was looked forward to with very great interest, both by Masons and non-Masons, a limited number of the general public being invited by the brethren of the mystic tie to share in the festivities. The Stewards, upon whom devolved the work of making the necessary preparations, succeeded so well in their endeavours that on the night of the ball there was absolutely nothing left to be desired.

The carpets and the awnings which were in use for the County Ball the previous evening were allowed by the committee to remain, and the floor of the room was in capital order—all the better for having been so recently danced upon. The decorations reflected the utmost credit on Bros. W. H. Lucia and W. Clarke, who undertook the responsibility of preparing the hall, and who displayed most admirable taste in carrying out their task. The adornments used were exclusively of a Masonic character. On the wall facing the company as they entered the hall were three large panels of crimson cloth, bearing in large purple and gold letters the Masonic injunction, "Aude, Vide, Tace." Beneath these, between the two doors leading to the refreshment room, were pedestals of the W.M., the S.W., and the J.W., supporting the globes and the perfect ashlar and tripod, and by the side of each was placed a smaller pedestal bearing the "three lesser lights of Masonry," marked with Masonic devices. Behind and above each was a Royal Arch banner. On the panels between the side windows were placed the "tracing boards" of the lodge, the symbolical devices of which served to whet the curiosity not only of the daughters of Eve, but also of "cowans" of stronger sex. Above and below these were also Royal Arch bannerets. Under the windows were neatly framed engravings of the Masonic Boys' and Girls' Schools, and the coat of arms of titled members of the old St. Edmund's Lodge, founded, as an inscription on one of them states in A.L. 5773. In the three panels over the orchestra, were hung purple banners of the P.G.L., the centre one bearing the arms of the R.W.P.G.M. Col. Sir R. A. S. Adair, Bart., and those on each side emblazoned with the Masonic arms and the county arms. Ranged in a semicircle in the back of the recess forming the orchestra, and at intervals on the panels of the room, were the bannerets of several of the chapters and lodges of Ipswich, kindly lent for the occasion; and here and there might be noticed portraits of several of the Past Grand Masters of England. The most effective part of the decorations, however, was the double winding staircase leading to the Museum and the supper room. In front of the semi-circular balcony was placed the square and compasses, with the sacred letter in the centre, elegantly formed in purple and gold on a crimson ground; and running up and down the staircases on each side was the Masonic sentence, "I.T.N.O.T.G. A.O.T.U.," also in purple and gold letters on a crimson ground. Above this, and following the outline of the staircases, thus forming an arch, were the splendid new various coloured silk bannerets of the "Twelve Tribes," with amber silk fringe, intended for the Chapter which it is proposed shortly to open in connection with the St. Edmund's Lodge, and in the centre, forming as it were, the keystone, was a beautiful white silk banner with the R.A. symbol in gold. The exterior of the Athenæum was illuminated by the square and compasses in gas. The entrance to the hall was guarded by sergeants of the Militia staff, wearing Masonic aprons and Tyler's collars.

The company began to arrive at nine o'clock, and by ten the ball-room presented a most brilliant appearance. The sombre character of the gentlemen's full dress was agreeably relieved by the white aprons of the Craft, with their sky-blue and silver ornaments, to which, again, the dark blue and gold of the provincial officers offered a pleasant change. At eleven o'clock those of the brethren who had attained to the higher orders of Masonry assumed the peculiar clothing to which by rank they were entitled, and the variety of the gentlemen's costumes was thus further increased. The rich crimson and purple aprons and scarves of the R.A. distinguished those who alone were entitled to take part in the Royal Arch Quadrilles at the head of the room; while the scarlet tunic and the white lined black cloak of the Knights of Malta was only surpassed in beauty by the gorgeously embroidered crimson clothing of the Rose Croix, and the equally elaborate gold embroidered white clothing of the 31st Degree. The ladies appeared, as usual, in all the colours of the rainbow, the Masonic blue being perhaps a little in predominance; but we noticed only one lady who wore the blue sash which it is comme il faut to wear at the Masonic balls. The refreshment room, which was open from the commencement to the close of the ball, was adorned with the gilt candlesticks of the Provincial Grand Lodge representing the Doric, Ionic, and Corinthian columns, and here could be obtained an abundance of sherry, claret cup, fruits, strawberry creams, lemon water ices, and other cooling beverages and light refreshments. At half-past eleven the supper room was thrown open, but as the accommodation is so limited, only sixty could be admitted at one time. As there were nearly 300 persons present, there were consequently five relays, and though some disappointment was doubtless felt by those who were unable to gain admission until late, they were amply rewarded by the comfort attending the absence of bustle and confusion. In catering for the supper, Bro. W. G. Guy, of the Angel Hotel, excelled himself.

Dancing was kept up, to the strains of Howlett's excellent quadrille band, till five o'clock in the morning, and universal regret was expressed when "Sir Roger de Coverley" announced that one of the best balls ever held in Bury was brought to a close. The company present included members of many of the county families, the Mayor of Bury, G. P. Clay, Esq. (who wore his chain of office), and the most influential inhabitants of Bury and the county for twenty miles round.—Bury Free Press.

The favours worn by the Masters of Ceremonies and Stewards, which were very handsome and much admired, were supplied by Bro. Geo. Kenning, of Little Britain, London.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT AND PILLS.—Rheumatism, Gout, Tic-doloureux. Trouble will come at all times and prevail at every season, scarcely a week passes without our hearing of or seeing some friend stricken by these agonising maladies. The pain is situated in the joints, whence it may be driven with ease. Foment the part well with warm salt and water, and after drying the skin, let it be rubbed twice a day with Holloway's soothing ointment, which should also be rubbed into the neighbouring glands. It is always advisable to take Holloway's Pills in these disorders, as they much assist the Ointment's action. The Pills check fever, purify the blood, and eject all morbid matters engendered by these diseases.—ADVT.

"For a long period I have been subject to frequent attacks of rheumatism, at times so severe as to totally unfit me for my business. After trying many medicines for it to little or no purpose, I was induced to use your Pain Killer, and the result was surprising, for in a few days the pain left me entirely, and has not since returned.—J. J. O'NEIL, New Mills, Derby, Nov. 1869.—To Perry & Sons, London, W.C."

CONSECRATION OF THE ATHOLE MASONIC HALL AT SAN FERNANDO, TRINIDAD.

On Thursday, the 12th ult., San Fernando witnessed the ceremonies connected with the dedication to the purposes of Freemasonry of a new Masonic Temple. This building is of two stories, situated in a convenient locality, and commands a fair view. Its architectural beauty reflects the highest praise on Bro. Joshua Palmer P.M. and Architect. The town wore quite a holiday appearance on the occasion. Many of the stores and shops were closed, and the streets were kept alive by those who came out to see the sight. As soon as the steamer from Port of Spain came in view of San Fernando, she hoisted the Masonic flag, and on arriving at the pier was immediately entered by Bro. Cuthbert, W.M. of Athole Lodge, accompanied by a large Masonic body, to receive the Provincial Grand Lodge, and other Masons who came to assist at the dedication. Owing to the unavoidable absence of our esteemed, Bro. J. A. Tench, P.G.M., from ill-health, Bros. J.M. Reid and C. Besson, the D. and S.P.G. Masters, conducted the consecration. At about 10.50 a.m. a large concourse of Masons had assembled before the pier, and formed, into procession, preceded by an effective brass-band, moved on to St. Paul's Church. A service, suitable to the occasion, was then performed, the officiating minister being the Rev. Bro. Nelson, assisted by the Revs. H. N. Huggins, Lauri, and Knight. Bro. Nelson then preached an eloquent sermon.

On the termination of the service the procession assembled outside the church in the same order as before, and moved up High-street and round by Harris'-promenade to the site of the new temple. The site was truly gay and imposing. Crowds of gazers followed the procession, and the doors and windows of the building were thronged with spectators. The length of the procession, the brilliant show of Scotch and English Masonic paraphernalia and jewels, the Stewards with their white wands marshalling the brethren under the supervision of the Director of Ceremonies, and, above all, the inspiring strains of the music, created a troupe ensemble that was truly admirable. Arrived at the temple, the dedication ceremony was performed in accordance with the laws of the Order. In the place of the P.G.M. who, as we have already stated, was absent from ill-health, Bro. J. M. Reid, D.P.G.M., assisted by Bro. C. Besson, S.P.G.M., on the right, and by Bro. P. J. Delisle, W.M. Eastern Star Lodge, on the left, dedicated the new temple to the purposes of Freemasonry.

At the end of the ceremony of dedication, Bro. H. S. Billouin, P.G.O. and B. gave an oration.

Obituary.

BRO. A. MEGGY, D. PROV. G.M. ESSEX

We regret to have to record the death of Bro. Andrew Meggy, solicitor, Chelmsford, which sad event took place at his residence, at Chelmsford, at three o'clock, on Friday morning, the 24th inst. Bro. Meggy has been unwell for some weeks, but he appeared to rally, and was thought to be mending rapidly, until a day or two back. The deceased gentleman was articled to the late Mr. E. S. Chalk, with whom he afterwards carried on business in Chelmsford for some years. At the time of his death Bro. Meggy was Clerk to the Chelmsford Bench, Clerk to the Local Board of Health, and Secretary to the Chelmer and Blackwater Navigation Company; and he had also for many years most efficiently filled the office of Rector's Churchwarden, and acted as the Conservative agent for the division. Bro. Meggy was also a prominent Freemason, having for some years held the office of Deputy Provincial Grand Master for Essex. At the Chelmsford Bench prior to the commencement of the business, Mr. Dixon, Bro. Meggy's managing clerk, communicated the sad intelligence to the Magistrates. We may add that Bro. Meggy, who was 55 years of age, leaves a widow and large family.

BRO. EMRA HOLMES'S LECTURE ON THE "UNITED ORDERS OF THE TEMPLE AND HOSPITAL."

NOTES BY LUPUS.—No. III.

I quarrel not with creeds, and as a member of the Church of England, I have as much respect for the Roman Catholic Knights of St. John as for those of the faith to which I myself belong, but, so far as in me lies, I must see the same justice and fair play accorded to the one as to the other.

Bro. Holmes, after making a very unnecessary assertion of rights on the part of the Freemasons, as compared with the English langue, ventured to state to Grand Conclave as follows:—"A body of Knights met in Paris, and "revived the English langue of the Order, but as Protestants, and bearing in mind it was a Papal Order, they had no more right to call themselves Knights of Malta, than the Sir Knights present had." If Bro. Holmes made this assertion with an imperfect knowledge of his subject, I hope he will pardon my saying that some caution should be exercised before public statements are made which the speaker may afterwards find he cannot support. If on the other hand he was aware that he was giving utterance to a beautiful declaration, in positive opposition to historic fact, then I look in vain for any other motive than that of an unprovoked and gratuitous attack on the brotherhood* he designates as the "Manchesterian body."

I do not clearly comprehend whether the Paris Knights are intended by Bro. Holmes to be described as Protestants, or whether the revived langue only is meant, or both; I will, however, take them as a whole. The Knights meeting in Paris were of the Roman faith, as I have before stated, were a lawfully constituted commission of the Order, and were representative of a majority of the then existing langues; they were well aware that the revived langue would be mostly composed of members of the Church of England, and they provided accordingly (as I have before quoted) in the Articles of Convention.

It is however, useless, now that the schoolmaster is far abroad, for this parrot cry to be rung out as against the lawful claim of the English langue, because its members are mostly of the Protestant faith; such a flimsy pretence is the too plain indication of a miserably bad cause, and could only have any effect when addressed to the ears of the ignorant or the unwary. Bro. Holmes himself strenuously advocates the legal position of the Emperor Paul of Russia; and the Roman Catholic branches of the Order accepted him as their lawful head and chief; was he a Roman Catholic? Can anything after the latter fact, be said against the right of action of the French Commission, or the claims of those deriving under it? Was the Duke of Sussex, whose apocryphal position Bro. Holmes fondly hoped, by his unsupported statements, to convert into a substantial reality, a Roman Catholic? What were the Royal brothers George IV. and William IV., and the late revered Prince, Albert the Good, who all received their crosses from Roman Catholic branches of the Order? Is it a mistake in history that the Bailiwick of Brandenburg, after separating itself from the main body on account of its adoption of the reformed faith, was again reunited with the Order, retaining its altered creed and electing its own Bailiff? And is it untrue that the Bailiwick is at the present time acknowledged as a lawful institution of the Order, and yet holds the Evangelical faith? Is it an error to suppose that the legality of the Russian Priors of the Greek Church has never been impugned? Was Louis de Boisgelin, (a Roman Catholic Knight), the Order's most accomplished historian of his date, under some delusion when he wrote, "The Order of Malta, though it regrets the circumstances that have occasioned its separation from the knights of a different religion, does not refuse them a place among its members to fight against the enemies of Jesus Christ." Pope Pius VI., whose virtues struck with awe even the cruel monsters, his persecutors, was of the same opinion, and approved the association of the Russian Knights of the Greek Church with the Order of Malta. It may indeed be reasonably expected that such a union will be attended by the most edifying and advantageous consequences."

Even the Commander Taafe, whom Bro. Holmes quotes, and in whom he believes, says; "War with the Turks would now be useless and ridiculous, and the basis of our Order is not such wars, but utility in general and neutrality between all Christians. At the confession of Augsburg a deputation of our Knights was sent to declare that all Christian religions were indifferent to us, and one of the latest acts at Malta was to receive both Protestant Germans and Greek Russians into the Order as integral members of it, we not being theologians, but soldiers." Sir J. C. Meredyth, Bart., one of the last Englishmen who received the Accolade of Knighthood in the Order at Malta from the 69th Grand Master, was a member of the English langue to the period of his decease. So also were Sir James Lawrence, Admiral Sir Home Popham, K.C.B., Admiral Sir W. Sydney Smith, G.C.B., Sir W. H. Tonkin, and others, also Protestants, and also received into the Order abroad. So much for the myth upon which Bro. Holmes hangs his statement to the Grand Conclave.

I have shown, in my last communication, that the most competent historians of the Order are fully agreed of the illegality of the Emperor Paul's election as Grand Master of the Order, not on the score of his faith, but of the entire informality of his election, and if any confirmation of their opinion was necessary it may be found in the fact that the election took place whilst the last actual Grand Master of the whole Order was living, and had not abdicated. But, granting Paul's election, the Emperor Alexander had no power to make appointments in the Order. He probably was a Grand Cross, and he declared himself "Protector;" where, however, was his authority, in such self-elected capacity, to appoint the Duke of Sussex Grand Prior of England? I think the statement that such an appointment ever occurred has only been made at a recent date, and when it appeared in Bro. How's book, an enquiry was addressed to him as to his authority for the assertion, to which he replied (by letter dated 19th January, 1864) that it was not founded upon any evidence, but was merely a repetition of a statement made by Bro. R. Lee Wilson. The Emperor Paul died in 1801, and his son Alexander at once assumed the title of Protector. But did not long retain this position, for, upon his recommendation, and that of the King of Naples, the Pope, on the 9th of February, 1822, appointed the Count Giovanni di Tommasi to the dignity of Grand Master; a power which the Pope had no right to exercise, and which can only be accounted for by the dismembered condition of the Order at the time. Tommasi proclaimed his appointment, on the 27th of June, 1802, so, I presume, if Alexander sought to appoint the Duke of Sussex Grand Prior of England, it must have occurred between March, 1801, and February, 1802, for we hear of no claims of the Russian Emperor subsequently to the appointment of Tommasi; indeed, after the instigation by the Emperor of Tommasi's appointment it is out of the question that the former could exercise the powers he had caused to be vested in a Grand Master of the Order.

Tommasi died in 1805, after which no election or appointment of a Grand Master occurred; the Bailli Suardo succeeding as Lieutenant Master. Thus Alexander's powers, if he ever lawfully possessed any, must have ceased in 1802, but if we admit that Alexander could, and did appoint the Duke as Grand Prior, what then? He would not have been appointed to rule over Freemasons or any other similar fraternity to which the Duke belonged: The only purpose of such an appointment could be that he should become the head and chief of a Priory composed of members of the genuine Order; so that if the Duke's appointment was as clear as noonday it could in no way affect or avail the Masonic body. Argument, however, on the subject is not of much avail, we must deal with facts; and it is a fact that titular Grand Priors of England were appointed from time to time, but that the name of the Duke of Sussex is not one amongst them.

I may however go further and say that a series of letters have passed through my hands, from which it is clear that the Duke was not even a member of the genuine Order. The Duke had, in 1839, been requested by the English langue to become a member of the Order, with a view to his occupying a position of dignity in that body. H.R.H., after considerable deliberation, wrote his ultimatum as follows: "I know that I am growing old, and prudence warns me gradually to retreat from public life. Anxious as I am to contribute towards the happiness and welfare of mankind, I cannot venture to embark in new undertakings, knowing well I do not possess the strength and activity I did formerly; and with every feeling of good will, and every sentiment of gratitude for the kindness and distinction intended me, I must beg to decline an office which would impose new duties, such, as I am conscious I could not fill with the ability they require." I need hardly say that this is not the language of a member of the Order, and an already, Grand Prior of England.

In another letter the Duke made allusion to a circumstance which he considered rendered it inconsistent that he should become a Knight of St. John. Thus ends the vision which ingenious and fertile Masonic fancy has sought to weave about the memory of the once excellent Grand Master of Freemasons, and which, if a substantial fact, would have had about as much effect on the Masonic Knights of Malta as had the circumstance that he was a Knight of the most noble Order of the Thistle.

I may state, for the information of "A Masonic Student" that the Rev. Sir Robert Peat, D.D., was a well-known and distinguished divine; he was Chaplain to King George IV, and was a Knight Grand Cross of the Order of St. Stanislaus of Poland: The instruments, Articles of Convention of 1826 and 1827, are in the custody of Sir E. A. H. Lechmere, Bart, the Secretary of the English langue, have been inspected by myself, and are quoted by me at page 829.

They are duly signed and sealed, and were acknowledged as genuine and of lawful effect, on the 18th of September 1841, by the Secretary General of the French langues, who added his own signature and seal.

The proceedings taken before Sir Thomas Denman occurred on the 24th of February, 1834, and did not constitute the revival of the Order in England, as the revival had already taken place: The proceeding consisted in Sir Robert Peat being publicly announced in the Court of King's Bench, as the Prior of the Order of St. John in England, upon which he was formally received by the court, and openly took the oath de fidei administratione. Whatever may have been the use or value of this proceeding, it was at all event, a public declaration, of the most formal character, that the venerable Order of St. John had been revived in the fair land of England.

Multum in Parvo, or Masonic Notes and Queries.

THE ORDER OF ST. JOHN.

I find that I accidentally omitted replying to one portion of the question of "A Masonic Student." A copy of the Letters' Patent of Philip and Mary may be found in the appendix to the second volume of Col. Porter's larger work on the Order. The revival of the present English langue, however, does not rest on this document, and it is therefore not materially in question. I here wish to add that I have no intention or desire to discuss the English langue, and that I should have never made allusion to it had not its name been very unnecessarily, as it appears to me, imported into discussions of Masonic subjects with which it has nothing to do, nor has ever meddled. The langue is one of the only two branches of the old Order devoted to its original and real purposes, and it may surely be let alone in the unostentatious exercise of the hospitaller duties with which it has been occupied for the past forty years, of which the benefits are, I am glad to say, gradually, but surely extending.—LUPUS.

OLD MASONIC BOOKS AND "MASONIC STUDENT."

I have a copy of the 2nd edition of Smith's "Freemasons' Pocket Companion, with large additions" London, John Torbuck, 1738. The pages number 119. At the end (fortunately for me as the purchaser) is a copy of the "Secrets of Masonry," by Samuel Pritchard. London, J. Torbuck, 1837. The first edition of this, one of the earliest and the most widely circulated exposures, was published A.D. 1730. Not having a copy of the latter, I shall be glad to correspond with a brother who has, and should our "Masonic Student" possess such a work, he will oblige by communicating with me on the subject.

The earliest exposures (so-called) contains little, of anything respecting the third degree. I have a transcript of one A.D. 1724. There were a number of "Pocket Companions" issued during the last century in England and Scotland. The earliest we know of was before the mentioned 'Torbucks', in this country, and of A.D. 1761 in Scotland. (also in 1765).

A large volume entitled "Bibliographie der Freemaurerei," by Dr. George Kloss (Frankfort-on-the-Maine), A.D. 1844, is published at the trifling cost of 5s. and may be ordered through any German bookseller, in London. Dr. Kloss gives title pages and other particulars of many thousands of works on Freemasonry, pamphlets, &c., and after repeated comparison with many hundreds of books on the subject, which have passed through my hands, I can confidently recommend the volume to all interested in Masonic bibliography.

Have any of the correspondents of The Freemason knowledge of Dr. Fifield Dassigny as a Masonic author? I have a copy of his "Enquiry" of A.D. 1744, Dublin, which mentions the Royal Arch several times, and so far as we have been able to trace is the earliest reference to that degree yet discovered in print. We have had a thorough search instituted in all likely places in Ireland, and Brother J. G. Findel also carefully examined the catalogues about that period, in the British Museum, but as yet, no other copy has turned up. We mention the matter now, thanking the supporters of this new department in The Freemason will assist me if possible in obtaining a clue to the author referred or information about other works by him, as the "Enquiry" was not his first publication.—W. JAMES HUGHAN.

GRAND LODGE CALENDARS.

I particularly want a copy of the Calendar of the Grand Lodge of England for 1873. Also copies of the same publication for the two following years. I shall be glad to reciprocate if any of our friends can assist me in procuring either of the foregoing, for purchase, or perusal.—W. J. HUGHAN.

ORDER OF ST. JOHN.—"SECRETA RECEPTIO."

If "A Masonic Student" mistook my statement that there were no "mysteries," for an assertion that there was no "secreta receptio" in the Order of St. John, I would desire to explain that I referred to secrets as understood in Masonry. There is a "reception" of a religious form, but not accompanied with secrets or mysteries.—LUPUS.

BANQUET AND PRESENTATION OF A TESTIMONIAL TO DR. J. P. BELL, AT HULL.

On Thursday evening, at the Freemasons' Hall, Osborne-street, Dr. J. P. Bell was presented by his brother Freemasons of the North and East Ridings of Yorkshire, with a very handsome testimonial, in the shape of a silver epergne and salver, value 250 gs., designed and executed by Mr. M. C. Peck. Preceding the presentation—grace having been said by the Prov. Grand Chaplain—the brothers present, to the number of seventy and upwards, sat down to a magnificent banquet, prepared by Mr. Varley, of the Cross Keys Hotel. The chair was occupied by Bro. J. W. Woodfall, P.P.S.G.W., of Scarborough; and the vice chairs by Bro. Armitage, P.G.S.W., and Bro. Wells, P.G.J.W. At the conclusion of the banquet, the Chairman, in proposing the "Queen," said no body of men more sincerely revered the Queen or more heartily obeyed the laws of the State than Freemasons; and in proposing the "Health of the Prince and Princess of Wales and the rest of the Royal Family," alluded to his recovery from illness more than twelve months ago, and how deeply this district and especially his native town, Scarborough, had felt interested in that recovery. He held that Scarborough was untruly blamed for the Prince's illness.

In proposing the "Army and Navy and the Reserve Forces," the Chairman expressed the hope that our country might grow stronger as it grew older, and her might never be less, and that the Anglo-Saxon race should always act on the principles of truth and justice, and for the benefit of mankind. Captain Longstaff responded.

Before unveiling the testimonial he would read the inscription it bore:—"Presented with a silver salver, value together 250 guineas, by the Freemasons of the Province of the North and East Ridings of Yorkshire, to John Pearson Bell, Esq., M.D., Senior Grand Deacon of England, Deputy Provincial Grand Master, and Grand Superintendent of R. A. Masons of North and East Yorkshire, Past Provincial Grand Secretary, author of the "Stream of English Masonry," &c., &c., 1872." On the second shield, "A token of sincere and fraternal regard for urbanity, integrity, moral worth, and high character, also as an acknowledgement of long-continued and eminent services to the Province of North and East Ridings of Yorkshire, and of literary and other labours in the interests of the Craft, 1872." On the third shield were the arms of Dr. Bell, with motto "Celer et Audax." The salver, or tea tray, is very massive and handsome, having richly engraved pattern centre, with pierced border. The inscription on the shield is, "Presented with a silver epergne, value together 250 guineas, by the Province of North and East Ridings of Yorkshire, to John Pearson Bell, Esq., M.D., Senior Grand Deacon of England, Deputy Provincial Grand Master and Grand Superintendent

R. A. Masons, N. and E. Yorkshire, as a token of services and fraternal regard. 1872."

Mr. Malam said he hoped Dr. Bell, in prosperity and health, would live long to enjoy these handsome articles and when he ceased to be a pilgrim on this earth, may his descendants appreciate them as tokens of the high esteem in which he was held by his brethren who knew him well.

Dr. Bell responded in an able speech.

Reviews.

The Practical Magazine, a new half-crown illustrated monthly, "published for the Proprietary," at 7, Printing-house-square, is on an ambitious scale, and embraces a variety of topics. It is designed for "the use of those concerned in Raw Materials, Machinery, Manufactures, Building, and Decoration." The first twelve pages are devoted to the History of the House of Rothschild (rather a departure from the plan set out in the prospectus of the work, although in itself a somewhat interesting article), the illustrations of which seem to have "done the state some service,"—we fancy to have seen them before. The typography of the work generally is good, as might be expected, coming from the celebrated Chiswick Press, but in some instances we miss the accuracy for which that house has long been famed, in such errors as "formally" for "formerly," and in the description of a new loom, which at the heading of the article is mentioned as "for weaving fabrics of any width," while the line under the engraving says "of any length."

The Anglo-Indian Commercial Advertiser and News Budget (Flack and Co., Warwick-court), is, as its name implies, chiefly devoted to advertisements of English goods suitable for the Indian Market, interspersed with a few pages of reading matter, more or less interesting.

The Fifth Report of the Executive Committee of the Manchester National Society for Women's Suffrage narrates chiefly the doings of Miss Becker (the Women's Rights Advocate) and her supporters. An elaborate statistical account of the petitions presented to Parliament, with the number of signatures attached, is given, from which we learn that 848 petitions with 355,806 signatures, have been presented in favour of female suffrage, three petitions, with three signatures only, have been presented against it, showing that a large proportion of the people are in favour, or that all who are not are indifferent to the fate of the measure.

The Westminster Papers (monthly) is devoted to chess, whist, games of skill, and the drama. On chess the "Papers" have become an authority. The "Whist Problems" must prove interesting to all lovers of the game. The "Dramatic Notes" are evidently from the hand of a true critic, and show a just appreciation of talent in author and actor, which contrasts conspicuously with the fulsome praise indiscriminately bestowed by the theatrical press, either in gratitude for past favours in the shape of advertisement patronage, or the hope of getting it.

Efforts to be Heard, is an antipodean effusion by Bro. Edward Francis Hughes, of Melbourne, Australia. If Bro. Hughes has not always caught the inspiration of the poetic muse, he deserves some credit for his persistent praise and advocacy of the land of his adoption. His pieces, some 36 in number, vary strangely in quality, many of them not nearly reaching mediocrity, while some few are far above it. That Bro. Hughes loves the Craft, is evidenced by the fact that his best efforts are devoted to its praise. The following is a specimen:—

MASONIC FELLOWSHIP.

Come whence we may, o'er land or sea,
Whenever Masons meet,
Though icy cold the region be,
Or parched with torrid heat;
As brethren we each other hail,
Exchange the grip and sign,
While fellowship and truth prevail,
To prove our art divine.

When Masons meet, whate'er our state,
A subject or a king,
We on the level meet and wait,
To labour, rest, and sing.
Though diff'rent mothers we have known,
Of diff'rent age and name,
We all one common father own,
One royal kindred claim.
When Masons part, 'tis on the square,
And wheresoe'er we roam,
If we but go where Masons are,
We find ourselves at home.
The world's a lodge, through every land
Our banners are unfurled,
Linked as a chain, we form a band,
To bind and bless the world.

The Little Dressmaker (No. 1. vol. 2.) is specially devoted to fashions for children and dolls. A beautifully coloured plate of fashions is given, which contains six figures, of which three are girls, two boys and one a baby. It is an evidence that the customs de luxe of our French neighbours are pervading England when we see a fashion book devoted to children's clothing, and even including, as a feature, an article on the clothing of dolls in the latest fashion.

"BRO. HOLMES'S NOTES."

To the Editor of The Freemason.

Dear Sir and Brother,—

Whilst agreeing with "Lupus" in deprecating the course which Bro. E. Holmes has thought fit to adopt in dragging into discussion the Order of St. John, which in this country progresses quietly, and practically carries out the great principle of the old followers of St. John the Almoner, under the rule of the Duke of Manchester, I begin to hope that some good may come of it after all. The articles by "Lupus" which have already appeared in The Freemason, and of which we are promised a continuance, must already, if I judge Masonic feeling aright have given rise in the minds of many of those who recently, in Grand Conclave, voted for the adoption of the new Statutes, to some doubt as to the wisdom of their vote on that occasion. One side of a case is good until you have heard the other side, and the goodness of Bro. Holmes' case seems to be rapidly disappearing under the comments of "Lupus." On the one side we have speculation, romance, absurdity; on the other side, fact, history, and common sense.

There is one point in Bro. Holmes' "Notes" on which I would specially touch. He suggests that the "Manchesterian body," as he is pleased to term it, should join the Masonic Templars. This suggestion is founded upon such utter ignorance of his subject that I am surprised Bro. Holmes should ever have put it forward. The "Manchesterian body" is not, never has been, and never can be, a Masonic body; the old Hospitallers were not, the existing Hospitallers are not, a Masonic body—how then can they, or any portion of the Order, as a body, amalgamate with a body of Freemasons? It is no doubt true that a few members of the Order of St. John are Masons; it is no doubt also true that Masons may be found in almost every existing English Order, Society, Fraternity, Guild, or Club. Arguing, therefore, in Bro. Holmes' state of mind, one might suggest that Grand Conclave should go over bodily to the "Ancient Buffaloes" or the "Stray Buzzwings," amongst whom, no doubt, Bro. Holmes might, by careful research, discover one or two Masonic Templars. Why not also, arguing from Bro. Holmes' point of view, usurp at once the titles of all the 170 Chivalric Orders which "Lupus" tells us are extinct?

Those who are well acquainted with the statutes and history of the old (unmasonic)

Templars and Hospitallers, know that these Orders, composed only of nobiles, that is, of men entitled by descent to bear coat-armour, were completely republican in their organization, in ancient days. It is reserved for Masonic moderns to adopt their name, but to ignore their object, their practice, their constitution, and to substitute for these a system which places the complete control of the Order in the hands of one irresponsible officer.

When we have heard all that Bro. Holmes and "Lupus" have to say, would it not be well to bring forward for reconsideration what already seems to have been an injudiciously hasty decision of Grand Conclave? If the decisions of this body are as the law of the Medes and Persians, then I fear that much harm has been done to the Masonic Order of the Temple. What is now only a suppressed growl may eventually break out into action, which, with the heir to the throne as Grand Master, would be an edifying spectacle for the unmasonic world to contemplate.

Apologising for the length of these remarks,
I am, faithfully yours,

CIVIS.

"THE BRIGHT MORNING STAR."

To the Editor of The Freemason.

Dear Sir and Brother,—

I will endeavour to reply to "Cheshire's" enquiries on the present occasion.

My opinion is that the words "peace and salvation" are an older form than "peace and tranquility."

More than one explanation of the words has been suggested.

1. One is that which considers these words as descriptive of the "Bright Star of Hope" which was to lighten up the Dark Valley with its radiant gleams of salvation and peace.

2. Another has been that they refer to the Five-Pointed Star or Pentalfa, a Jewish Emblem, which symbolically represented the goodness and mercy of Almighty God, in its rays of brightness, for the faithful and obedient of Adam's race!

3. While a third view has been that they point to Him who is called the "Bright and Morning Star," "Alpha and Omega," "the Beginning and the End," "the First and the Last!"

Each of these explanations is admissible, and each agrees with the context of the particular passage referred to.

We should never forget, it seems to me, that our Order, wisely tolerant, does not profess to force any dogmas of religious teaching one way or the other on any of our members.

The Christian brother may see in these words solemn and touching allusion to that Bright Star of promise, which shone last, as some one has beautifully said, on the "dark night of this weary and waiting world," while the Jewish brother may see in it an evidence still of Hebrew faith, in the great mercy and loving salvation of Jehovah.

And beyond this the Theist may accept them as a mystical reference to the eternal benignity and compassion of the Great Father, the Common Parent of the whole human family.

I confess I think it far wiser not to seem ever to dogmatize on such matters, or lay down a hard and fast line of belief and practice, but simply to accept what our Ritual so happily puts before us, and to hand it on to others, in loyal adherence and hearty acquiescence.

A MASONIC STUDENT.

MR. LOCKE AND FREEMASONRY.

To the Editor of The Freemason.

Dear Sir and Brother,—

I have read with much interest our very able Brother Chalmers I. Paton's "Origin of Freemasonry, &c.," and I heartily endorse all he says as to the untenableness, historically, of the 1717 theory, but I confess that I think it a great pity that he has introduced in support of his general argument, clear and conclusive as it otherwise appears to me to be, "Mr. Locke's Letter," and the so-called "Henry the Sixth's Manuscript."

Though much search has been made in various quarters for Mr. Locke's letter, the original has never yet been seen, and no one professes to say where the original may be found.

I fear that we cannot accept the letter without better proof as written by Mr. Locke, and that we must, on the contrary, regard it as in itself "apocryphal."

With respect to the MS. that also has hitherto eluded all research in the Bodleian, and I equally fear that we must look on it as "fraus pia Architectonica."

Its history however, is not a little singular, and therefore I think well to give it over again, and I would fain hope once for all.

In the Gentleman's Magazine for the year 1753, as all may see for themselves, vol. XXIII., p. 417, there is to be found a reprint of a pamphlet said to have been printed at Frankfort-on-the-Maine, in 1748, "as found on the table of a deceased brother." Why an English pamphlet on Masonry should be printed in Germany is not, however, said. The original pamphlet has never yet been found—so that we hear nothing more of it but what appears in the Gentleman's Magazine.

If true, it was a most important and interesting document, and was accordingly printed in the Freemasons' Magazine for August, 1794, without apparently the slightest doubt of its authenticity and genuineness.

Preston reproduced it, and so did Hutchinson, and it has been repeated in all our Masonic histories since then, I believe, perfectly "bona fide," and in entire acceptance of its reality and truth.

The MS. professes to have been copied by a Mr. Collins from an old MS. in the Bodleian Library, and to have been forwarded by the famous John Locke to Thomas, Earl of Pembroke, with an explanatory letter, May 6th, 1696.

A further statement that Leland, the well-known antiquary, found it in an old monastic library, copied it, and deposited it in the Bodleian Library, has unfortunately not yet found the slightest historical support or verification.

I carefully studied it many years ago, with my lamented friend, Mr. Wallbran, and the conclusion we both came to was, that it was probably founded on some old Masonic MS., but that it bore marks in it of compilation, and that if the "archaisms" were real, they denoted an early origin, but that in all probability it had been put together by some person, who was not fully acquainted with the full meaning of the words he employed.

The MS. itself, does not exist in the Bodleian Library, or if it does, it is in some volume of MS., which has hitherto escaped all search.

The only possible explanation would be, that it may exist in one of the College Libraries, but even that is not very likely.

As Bro. Paton seems to believe both in the authenticity of Mr. Locke's letter, and the existence of the manuscript at present in the Bodleian, I think it well to call his attention to the real facts of the case, as it seems to me most undesirable to weaken a sound and effective argument, by the admission of doubtful authorities and untenable evidence.

A MASONIC STUDENT.

STATUS OF PAST MASTERS.

To the Editor of The Freemason.

Dear Sir and Brother,—

In answer to "A North Country Mason," I would say that, a P.M. who joins another lodge under the English Constitution becomes a subscribing member of the same, and though he is not a P.M. of the lodge, is a P.M. in the lodge.

He is eligible to be balloted for as W.M., and being a P.M., could in the absence of the W.M., the Immediate P.M., and any other P.M.'s of the lodge, take the chair.

A Scotch P.M. who joins an English lodge, though he is recognised as a P.M. in the lodge, must serve as a Warden twelve months before he can be balloted for as W.M.

The same rule applies to an Irish P.M.

As both the Scotch P.M. and Irish P.M. have passed the chair, they are seated on the left of the W.M.

The Chaplain as a rule is generally seated on the right of the W.M. in the private lodge, though in P.G. Lodge and in Grand Lodge the Grand Chaplains, present and past, are seated on the left.

The general rule of the Craft seems to be, that in Craft Lodges all Chaplains, present and past, are seated on the right of the W.M.

AN OLD P.M.

LYON'S HISTORY OF THE LODGE OF EDINBURGH.

To the Editor of the Freemason.

Dear Sir and Brother,—

Will you allow me to add the following to your appreciative notice of the forthcoming work by my friend Bro. D. Murray Lyon. The publishers are now proceeding with the printing, and hope soon to announce its completion. The volume will contain more than sixty portraits of the most distinguished Craftsmen of this, and former generations, and about twenty-five fac-similes of valuable Scottish MS. from the sixteenth century.

No expense is being spared to render the work worthy of the Craft in every sense, and we believe it will fairly be entitled to challenge, as to its artistic merit, any book, Masonic, or otherwise, yet published.

The subscription of one guinea is scarcely expected to cover the cost of production, so that immediately after its issue, the price for each copy will be raised at least fifty per cent. Knowing your great interest in all that affects the welfare and history of our Fraternity must be our apology for troubling you thus far.

W. J. HUGHAN.

RED CROSS DEGREE.

To the Editor of The Freemason.

Dear Sir and Brother,—

I do not wonder "a Member of the Council of the Degree of Rome and Constantine" should take exception to the heading of the report of a meeting held in Glasgow, on the 30th ult.; the notice I think you will find, if the printer refers to the copy, was simply headed "Red Cross Degree;" I presume, not, knowing any other, added the words "of Constantine." I can assure a member of the Council that we are quite aware of the difference in the degrees, and have no wish to shine in borrowed plumes, at the same time I cannot agree with him that it should have been headed "of Babylon," for the reason he himself assigns, viz., that the Grand Chapter under whose authority it is given expressly says that it has been commonly so called. In the Charter under which we work, and also in the law and constitutions of the Supreme Grand Chapter of Scotland it is described as the "Red Cross Degree."

Our meetings are called Councils of the Order; of Rome and Constantine, Conclaves; these distinctions should be sufficient to prevent all Masonic readers from confounding the "Red Cross Degree," as given under the sanction of the Supreme Grand Chapter of Scotland, with the Red Cross of Rome and Constantine, as worked under its own supreme head. Regretting that a printer's error should have caused this mistake,

I am, yours fraternally,

G. W. WHEELER.

Secretary of the Council No. 73.

IMMEDIATE PAST MASTERS.

To the Editor of the Freemason.

Dear Sir and Brother,—

Will you allow me to give my own opinion upon the question raised by "A Young J.W.;" it is one that ought to be settled by authority, and it seems a pity that the Book of Constitutions does not lay down rules for numerous matters that occur in lodges, and which doubtless the Grand Secretary has to answer over and over again, but on which he can only give his own opinion.

I was re-elected to the chair, and had I been unavoidably absent, I should certainly have asked the Immediate Past Master to take my place; it would not have occurred to me to do otherwise. I may do wrong, but I hardly see how an actual Master can be considered as such and also an

I.P.M. rolled into one. It seems to me an actual Master does not become a P.M. until a successor is elected and duly installed in his place; he is merely holding on the same office for a longer period of time.

Perhaps "A Young J.W." will favour us in due course with the Grand Secretary's opinion on the point.

I never heard before of the lectures in the first and second degrees being "assigned" to the Wardens, but I think most Masters will agree that it is very desirable the Wardens should be invited to lecture, if they can do so, it is not only an encouragement to them to work, but affords evidence to the lodge that it is likely to have a succession of competent W.M.'s.

I scarcely understand one part of "A Young J.W.'s" letter. As he talks of the Senior P.M. taking the chair, but also that I.P.M. is to retire and give his place to the Senior P.M. Does he mean that the Senior Past Master being in the chair, the I.P.M. is to retire, and give his collar to the second Senior P.M., present.

Yours fraternally
P.M.

IMMEDIATE PAST MASTERS.

To the Editor of The Freemason.

Dear Sir and Brother,—

In reply to a young J.W. in your last number, I beg to say as an old P.M. of 30 years standing, that I am of opinion, that A.B., the W.M. of the lodge he referred to, is perfectly right. A.B. being re-elected cannot be a P.M. until he has vacated the chair, by another being appointed W.M. in his stead, consequently C.D., is the Immediate Past Master, for another year.

Yours very fraternally,
J. T. SHAPLAND, P.M.

Masonic Tidings.

BRITISH, FOREIGN, AND COLONIAL.

Bro. the Right Hon. Lord Skelmersdale, R.W. Prov. G.M. for West Lancashire, who has been W.M. of the Skelmersdale Lodge, No. 1380, meeting at Great Crosby, near Liverpool, since its consecration, will be present at the installation of Bro. Broadbridge, P. Prov. G.D.C., next Monday, and perform part of the ceremony.

THE LATE MR. S. R. GRAVES, M.P.—At a most influential public meeting at the Town Hall, Liverpool, on Saturday last, presided over by Bro. his Worship the Mayor (E. Samuelson, Esq.), it was unanimously resolved to erect a memorial to the late Mr. S. R. Graves, M.P., in commemoration of his many public services and private worth. The proposal that a statue of the deceased gentleman should be placed in St. George's Hall met with general favour, and it is expected this will be carried out.

ST. MUNGO ENCAMPMENT, GLASGOW.—At a meeting held on the 20th January, Captain Shanks, Royal Marine Lt. Infantry, Knight of the Imperial Order of the Medjidie; P.E.C. of the Royal Veterans' Enct.; P. Prov. Sub-Prior of Devon; P.G.S.B. of England; was unanimously elected an honorary member of this old and flourishing Encampment.

The installation ceremony will be worked at the Strong Man Lodge of Instruction, held at Bro. Wickens, St. John's Gate, Clerkenwell, on Monday, February 3rd, at 7 p.m., Bro. Beckett, Preceptor of the Lodge, Installing Master.

The fifteen sections will be worked at the Metropolitan Lodge of Instruction, Portugal Hotel, Fleet-street, on Friday, 7th inst., by E. Gotthiel, P.M. 141, P.Z. 1056, M.E.Z. 141, commencing at 6 o'clock.

Earl de Grey, son and heir of the Marquis and Marchioness of Ripon, came of age on the 29th inst. The event was celebrated by a variety of rejoicings.

Microscopical investigation has proved that the substances which accumulate between the teeth contain animal and vegetable parasites, and that the tooth powders, pastes, and washes in general use have no effect upon these. Messrs. Gabriel's Coralite Tooth Paste and Royal Dentrice (sold by all chemists and perfumers at 1s. 6d. per box) completely destroy and remove these animalcules and also preserve and beautify the teeth. Prepared only by Messrs. Gabriel, the old-established dentists, 64, Ludgate-hill, and 66, Hartley-street, Carentish-square, London, where they practice their unique system of painless dentistry.

MASONIC BALL AT SUNDERLAND.—The fourth annual ball of the shareholders of the Sunderland Masonic Hall Co. (Limited) was held in their hall, Park-terrace, Sunderland, on Friday, January 24th. The attendance was large and the capacity of the building was fully taxed. A most agreeable evening was spent, and this ball proved to be both most successful and a very pleasant and agreeable reunion. The ball was opened shortly after nine o'clock by Bro. T. Riley, J.W., 1389, (President of the Ball Committee), and Mrs. Coates, and was kept up with great spirit till a late hour to the strains of an efficient band. Bro. R. Hudson, P.G.D. of C., officiated as M.C., and Bro. F. Maddison, S.D. 1389, as Secretary.

DISEASES OF THE LUNGS AND AIR-VESSELS.

CROSBY'S BALSAMIC COUGH ELIXIR.

Opium, Narcotics, and Squills are too often invoked to give relief in Coughs, Colds, and all Pulmonary diseases. Instead of such fallacious remedies, which yield momentary relief at the expense of enfeebling the digestive organs, and thus increasing that debility which lies at the root of the malady, modern science points to CROSBY'S BALSAMIC COUGH ELIXIR as the true remedy.

SELECT TESTIMONIAL.

Dr. Rooke, Scarborough, author of the "Anti-Lancet," says: "I have repeatedly observed how very rapidly and invariably it subdued cough, pain, and irritation of the chest in cases of Pulmonary Consumption, and I can, with the greatest confidence, recommend it as a most valuable adjunct to an otherwise strengthening treatment for this disease."

This medicine, which is free from opium and squills, not only allays the local irritation, but improves digestion and strengthens the constitution. Hence it is used with the most signal success in Asthma, Bronchitis, Consumption, Croup, Influenza, Night Sweats of Consumption, Quinsy, and all affections of the throat and chest. Sold in bottles at 1s. 6d., 4s. 6d., and 11s. each, by all respectable Chemists, and wholesale by Jas. M. Crosby, Chemist, Scarborough.

*Infractors should read Crosby's Prize Treatise on "Diseases of the Lungs and Air-Vessels," a copy of which can be had Gratis of all Chemists.

REFUGES and HOMES for the DESTITUTE and NEGLECTED.—The Council of the REFORMATORY and REFUGE UNION earnestly APPEAL for AID, to enable them to renew their winter grants to the various Refuges and Homes for the outcast, destitute, and homeless, to the same amount as in former years.

Last winter they received £2,000 in answer to their appeal, and were thus enabled to give most reasonable help to 38 different institutions, situate in all parts of the kingdom, providing accommodation for upwards of 2,600 boys and girls, all of whom are lodged, fed, clothed, educated, and taught some useful occupation, by which to earn their own living.

No grant is made until after the Institution has been carefully inspected and fully reported upon by a member of the Council, and its management approved.

Up to the present time the Council have only received £700 of the 2,000 required to enable them to re-vote last year's Grants. They therefore earnestly APPEAL for further help.

REPORTS OF MASONIC MEETINGS.

Craft Masonry.

WINCHESTER.—Lodge of Economy (No 76).—It is, no doubt, gratifying to every Freemason to learn of the continued progress of the Craft generally, but when that progress has been marked, has it has been marked in the present instance, within the area of his own lodge, the gratification is necessarily much increased. For some reason or other there had been a temporary decline of prosperity attending the Winchester Lodge, or Lodge of Economy. This, however, can be asserted with truth no longer. During the past twelve months the lodge has gone forward with a healthy bound, and there is every sign of continued and continuous prosperity on every hand. Under such circumstances the saying of the word "Farewell!" to the late W.M., who had steered his bark so successfully during his period of office, and the uttering of the word "Welcome!" to a new W.M., into whose hands should be confided the great interests of its members, was naturally a subject of important concern to all the members of the lodge. But the W.M., Bro. E. Snelling, had fulfilled, and ably fulfilled, the term for which he was elected, and when it was found, therefore, that a gentleman so eligible as Bro. Capt J. C. Moore was willing to accept that responsible office, the news was received with great pleasure by every member and his unanimous election rendered sure. The installation of the new W.M. was, therefore, fixed for Wednesday last, and for the grand ceremony great preparations had been made. The skill of Bro. Lumsden, of Sussex-street, was called into exercise to decorate the assembly room, and a new dwarf platform was erected. The result is that the room, which has been painted with French and continental tints, of very chaste design—a fashion which is now becoming extremely in vogue—is now one of the most handsome assembly rooms in the country, Bro. Capt. Moore having been (we understand) one of the active agents in assisting to produce such satisfactory results. The decorations on the walls and the paraphernalia of the lodge have all likewise undergone complete restoration. There was a large number of brethren present on this interesting occasion, some of whom came from Basingstoke, Southampton, Portsmouth, and other localities. The ceremony of installation on Wednesday was preceded by the raising of Bro. W. C. Powell. The preliminary ceremonial was performed by the W.M., Bro. Snelling, but the remainder of the working was undertaken and carried out in admirable style by Bro. P.M. Harris. Bro. Buttifant (Alton) presided at the harmonium, and effectively rendered the musical portion of the ceremony. The installation of Bro. Capt. Moore into the chair of W.M. by the Right Worshipful Bro. W. B. Beach, M.P., Prov. G.M. Hants and Isle of Wight, followed. He was accompanied (by invitation from the lodge) by the Grand Treasurer, Secretaries, and officers of the Provincial Grand Lodge, and the ceremony acquired additional interest and importance from the easy eloquence of the officiating Prov. G.M. The customary ceremonies were of a very impressive character. At their completion, the new W.M. appointed the following brethren as his officers for the ensuing year:—Bros. King, S.W.; Salter, J.W.; Sheppard, Treas.; Stopher, Sec.; Higgate, S.D.; Burchett, J.D.; Way, I.G.; Everett, D.C.; E. Snelling, A.D.C.; Buttifant, Org.; Naish and Whale, Stewards; Sims, Tyler. The lodge, which had been opened at two p.m., was closed at about five p.m., and the members of the Craft then adjourned to the Royal Hotel, where a banquet, prepared by Bro. Spriggs, and well served by him, awaited them. They were joined by several other brethren amongst them Bros. Binckes, Secretary of the Boys' Masonic Institution at Wood Green, and W. Best, of Winchester. At the close of the banquet, which was presided over by the W.M., Bro. Moore, a few toasts were given from the chair, among them "The Queen and the Craft," "The Prince of Wales and the P.G.M.," "The M.W.G.M., the Marquis of Ripon," "The V.W. Deputy G.M., Lord Carnarvon, and Officers of Grand Lodge," and the "Prov. G.M., W. B. Beach, M.P. (also Installing Master)." The whole of the toasts were ably given and enthusiastically received.

PLYMOUTH.—Harmony Lodge (No. 156).—To celebrate the festival of St. John, Lodge "Harmony" held a banquet at Bro. Thomas's, Great Western Hotel, last night, when a large number of brethren sat down to an excellent repast. Among those present were the Worshipful Bros. W. T. Pilditch, W.M. (presiding); H. F. Hearle, I.P.M.; W. Triplett, W.M. 1255; G. Stentford, W.M. 159; S. Kelton, I.P.M. 1249; J. Manning, S.W.; F. Hall, J.W.; R. R. Ellis, P.M.; J. Watts, P.M., P.P.G.T.; W. K. Mitchell, P.M., P.P.G.A.D.C.; T. A. Yeo, P.M.; J. Kessell, P.M.; C. Stribling, W.M. 70; R. Andrews, P.M. 70; W. Williams, I.P.M. 105; Pearce, D.C. 1255; W. S. Hearder, Organist, 105; J. Rendle, J.W. 1247; R. Miller, 1071; N. B. Westcott, 1247; Cooksley, D.C. 202; E. Husson, S.S. 70; D. Box, J.D. 156; G. Lewis, D.C. 156; Ferguson, W. Ford, W. Murphy, Clutterbuck, Gould, Rev. W. Whittley, Staddon, Lucas, Connor, White, Lander, Campbell, Windcatt, Thorne, I.G. 156, &c., &c. The Worshipful Bro. W. T. Pilditch, W.M., read letters received from the P.G.M., D.P.G.M., and Br. Latimer, P.P.G. Sec., apologising for not being present. After ample justice had been done to the repast, and the cloth removed, the usual loyal and Masonic toasts were given and responded to, the musical responses being effectively led by Br. Hearder, Organist 105. During the very pleasant evening that was passed, Bros. Hearder, Rendle, Hussen, Andrews, and others rendered with good effect several songs; and Br. Yeo, P.M., gave a dramatic recitation in capital style. The Rev. Bro. W. Whittley delivered an excellent oration on the grand principles of Masonry, as seen individually and socially, claiming for them an eminence second only to that of the Divine institution of Christianity, expressing his conviction they would yet win the confidence of the world at large. The health of the host (Bro. Thomas) and the hostess was enthusiastically drunk, and great satisfaction expressed at the catering of the banquet. After a most pleasant evening, the brethren broke up at an early hour.—Western Daily Mercury.

PLYMOUTH.—Lodge Sincerity (No. 189).—The festival of St. John was celebrated by Lodge Sincerity, No. 189, last evening, by an excellent banquet at the Duke of Cornwall Hotel, Plymouth, the Lodge being favoured with the presence of both the P.G.M. and the D.P.G.M. The company numbered about fifty, and was under the presidency of the W. Bro. T. W. Coffin, W.M., and he was supported by the following brethren of the Lodge:—I. Latimer, S.W.; M. Coates, J.W.; T. S. Bayly, P.M., P.P.G.T., Treas.; R. H. Rae, P.M., P.G.D.; S. Hutchings, S.D.; J. E. Curteis, J. D.; G. Jackson, D.C.; G. Mair, I.G.; A. Latimer, S.; T. W. How, S.; J. Moon, O.; P.M.'s R. Dowse, L.P. Metham, D.P.G.M.; J. Trickett, F. Balkwell, H. Richards, J. Sadler, J. Dampney; Brs. E. Bisser, J. G. Wall, Rev. T. W. Lemon, W. Monkhouse, W. Lister, and W. W. Stevens. With a few well chosen words the W.M. proposed "The Queen,"

"H.R.H. the Prince of Wales, P.G.M."—an acquisition to the craft, and working hard and indefatigably in furthering Freemasonry—and "R. W. the Marquis of Ripon, G.M. of England"—a worthy successor to Earl Zeatland, whose retirement was universally regretted. The W.M. having announced that the Earl of Mount Edgcombe and Lord Eliot had written expressing regret at being unable to attend, and that Admiral the Hon. Sir Henry Keppel and General Sir Charles Staveley were kept away by official duties, gave "The R.W. the Rev. J. Huyshe, M.A., P.G. M. of Devon," and the toast was received with most hearty applause. Though embarrassed by the intensity of his regard for the P.G.M., and by his presence, the W.M. was bound to say that there was an amount of love and regard shown for their R.W. Bros. which was unsurpassed—(hear hear). Right glad were they to welcome him that evening—(applause)—and they regretted that in his circular on the masonic charities, he expressed his belief that never again would he fill the office of Steward. They fervently hoped this would not be the case, and that "Lodge Sincerity" would be able for many years to greet him at their banquets—(loud applause). The R.W. the Rev. J. Huyshe, made a feeling response. It was impossible, he said, for a man always to go on working hard, and he had had a fair share of it; so that it was highly improbable that he should ever again be a Steward for the charities. The response made in the Province, especially be the Grand Lodge, was a noble one, and he thanked them most cordially for it on behalf of the institutions whose merits they so greatly appreciated—(hear, hear). As to the welcome afforded him on this occasion, as on every occasion he visited Plymouth, he could only use a stereotyped phrase and say he heartily thanked them for it. Upon a subject which weighed with some anxiety on his mind he desired to say a few words. A good many years ago a highly meritorious Mason, Captain Grey Clarke—the predecessor of the G.S.—made use of a very singular expression to him. They were talking upon that all engrossing subject to Masons—their charities—when Captain Clarke said, "I look with some apprehension to the great charities which are being promoted by Freemasons, because I am afraid that the time will come when these charities will cause a great rush of candidates, and Freemasonry degenerate into a large benefit society." He did not accord with that view at the time, but the longer he lived the more he saw there was danger of that occurring which Captain Clarke predicted. There was an immense rush of candidates already, and the numbers had increased from 4,000 and 5,000 yearly to 7,000 and 8,000. He was present at the Committee of the Masonic Institution when it was resolved to increase the annuities to Freemasons from £25 to £36, and since then the allowance to widows had been increased by £5. Here was a still further inducement for candidates to rush in with the idea that they might possibly become recipients of these great charities. It was always difficult to preserve quality against quantity, but in Lancashire they initiated many persons who ought not to be members. But the great question still was: How could they prevent the introduction of men totally unfitted to be Masons at all. He only knew of one plan. On the last occasion of consecrating a new lodge at Torquay, he cautioned the Master to be careful whom he initiated, to keep the lodge select, and that the way to do this was to have a large initiation fee. The Master had taken the hint, and promised to make it one of the best lodges in the Province. The present minimum fee of three guineas allowed by the Grand Lodge was much too small, and he should use his endeavours to get it increased. (Hear, hear). The G.M. then proposed "The W.M. of Sincerity," speaking of the lodge as one of the most efficient in the Province, and Bro. Coffin as one able and determined to uphold its prestige (applause). W. Bro. Coffin, responded, and in eulogistic terms, proposed "The R. W. Bro. L. P. Metham, P.G.D., D.P.G.M. of Devon," a P.M. of Sincerity, R.W. Bro. Metham, acknowledged a very cordial reception of the toast. After speaking in high terms of Lodge Sincerity, the D.P.G.M. proposed "The R.W. the Right Hon. the Earl of Mount Edgumbe, P.G.M. of Cornwall," who was an old member of Lodge Sincerity and one of its Past Masters. It was a very happy thing indeed for Cornwall, and the Craft generally that such an appointment was made. Bro. Rodd, P.G.S.W. of Cornwall, responded to the toast. Bro. Capt. Tanner Davy, responded for "The P.G. Officers of Devon, present and past." The W.M., in giving "The P.M.'s and Officers of Lodge Sincerity," regretted the death of the I.P.M., Bro. Forster, who had done so much for the new lodge, and then spoke of the pride the lodge had in the fact that their Past Masters included the P.G.M. of Cornwall, the D.G.M. of Devon, a P. Prov. G.S.W. of Cornwall, and others high in office. The credit of these honours reflected on the lodge. P.M. Dowse took great delight in the furnishing of the old lodge, and for years was a trusty Treasurer, and was now worthily succeeded by P.M. Bayly; whilst P.M. Rae they had to thank for efficient services as Secretary. The officers he also had to thank very much for great and cordial assistance. Bro. Rae and Bro. Ball will respond. R.W. Bro. Latimer proposed "Visiting Brethren and Sister Lodge," in so doing he spoke of the thoroughly friendly feeling which existed between the lodges, and took occasion to acknowledge the kindness extended to him in the Provinces of Devon and Cornwall. He was glad to bear testimony to the existence of this feeling, because they had a great many visiting brethren present. Looking at the new Guildhall the other day, it occurred to him that it would give great satisfaction if at its opening the whole of the brethren of the Three Towns, joined by as many from a distance as could conveniently be present, attended the ceremony. It would be an outside demonstration as well as an inside gratification, and he threw out the hint for consideration. If such a fraternal assembly was approved of it could doubtless be arranged.

LODGE OF TRANQUILITY (No. 185).—The January meeting of this lodge was held on the 20th inst., at Cannon-street Hotel, Bros. R. Z. Bloomfield, W.M.; H. Abrahams, S.W.; N. Moss, J.W.; J. Peartree, Treas.; P. Levy, Hon. Sec.; J. Constable, S.D.; J. H. Ross, J.D.; J. Barnett, I.G.; Past Masters L. Barnett, S. Solomon, E. Harfield, S. E. Moss, M. Harris, Bros. The election of W.M. was then proceeded with, and the S.W. having intimated his intention to retire in favour of J.W., the latter viz., Bro. N. Moss, was unanimously elected W.M., and returned thanks for the unexpected honour in suitable terms. The following were appointed:—Bro. Peartree, as Treas.; Vesper, Tyler. Bro. M. Hart, P.M., and L. Barnett, I.P.M., were elected auditors. The sum of 10 guineas was granted from lodge funds to purchase a testimonial to the retiring Master. Solomon, P.M., assuming the chair in consequence of the W.M. leaving through domestic affliction. The usual loyal and Masonic toasts were given and responded to. Bro. Brown returned thanks for the newly initiated brethren, and acknowledged the impression made upon his mind by the beautiful rendering of the ceremony by the W.M. We have great hopes for the future in Bro. Brown. The toast of the W.M. elect followed, and the Presiding Master spoke in high terms of Bro. N. Moss, who, in reply, assured the brethren of his high appreciation of the honour conferred upon him, and gave assurance that he would endeavour to make "Tranquility" second to none in the Craft. The toast of the "Benevolent Fund" was responded to by the Treasurer, Bro. J. Peartree, who stated that the funds now amounted to upwards of £600. Bros. Brown, Payne, and Luck, the initiates, contributed to this fund very liberally. The Presiding Master then gave the toast of the absent W.M., and regretted his absence under so painful a circumstance. Bro. L. Barnett, I.P.M., next proposed the toast of the Presiding Master, whose kind and affable manner is always appreciated, no matter whether in Masonic or other circles, and the hope was expressed that the G.A.O.T.U. might long spare our Bro. Saul Solomons to present his welcome face in the lodge. (Applause.) The toast of the visitors was heartily received and responded to by Bro. Moss. Bro. Hart (late P.M. of the lodge), on behalf of G. Hawthorn, 236.; M. Emanuel, W.M. 205.; S. Gottheil, P.M. 141.; J. Woodman, S.W. 209, 1298.; H. A. Hart, 795.; H. M. Levy, P.M. 188. Chevalier de Kotski played excellently on a grand piano by Kirkman, and was vociferously applauded. Further amusement was contributed by the drollery and imitations of Bro. H. M. Levy.

LODGE OF ISRAEL (No. 205).—The meeting of this lodge was held at City Terminus Hotel, Cannon-street, on the 28th inst., Bro. M. Emanuel, W.M.; C. F. Hogard, S.W.; C. Coote, P.M., Treasurer; A. M. Cohen, Secretary; A. Ayden, S.D.; T. Waylett, J.D.; F. Buckland, I.G., Vesper, Tyler. The lodge was opened and the minutes of the previous meeting confirmed. Bros. Lynes and Hawkins, having answered the necessary questions satisfactorily, were raised to the degree of M.M. The ballot was then taken for Messrs. Isaac Cohen and C. Naylor, being in their favour, they were duly initiated. The installation of W.M. for the ensuing year was then proceeded with. Bro. C. F. Hogard, W.M. elect, having been presented by P. M. Harris, was duly installed into the chair of K.S. in the most efficient manner by Bro. Emanuels, I.P.M. The W.M., C. F. Hogard, then appointed the following as his officers: J. Emanuel, S.W.; A. Ayden, J.W.; J. Waylett, S.D.; F. Buckland, J.D.; L. Jacobs, I.G.; Hall, D.C.; Roxworthy, Steward; Vesper, Tyler; Treasurer and Secretary and Tyler, having been re-elected, were invested. The sum of £5 5s. was voted from the funds of the lodge to benevolent fund attached thereto. There were also present Bros. Marks, Jacobs, Gompertz, Abraham, Evans, Cremer, Collingridge, Nathan. The lodge was closed and the brethren adjourned to banquet, which was creditably served. The usual loyal and masonic toasts were gone through. The toast of W.M. was given and ably responded to by the W.M., who assured the members that he would do all in his power to render the Lodge of Israel perfect, and at the same time regretted that he should fall very short in his duties, as such excellent Masters had preceded him. The toast of "The Initiates" was drunk with enthusiasm and responded to by each. The W.M. then proposed "The Health of the I.P.M., and eulogised him in appropriate terms, and at the same time invested him with the exquisite jewel awarded by the Lodge for his past services, and also presented him with a silver salver and engrossed testimonial, which the P.M., Bro. M. Emanuel, acknowledged in such phrases as were not only eloquent, but sublime and to the purpose, each word telling as it fell upon the hearers. Bro. Emanuel resumed his seat amid great applause. The toast of "The Benevolent Fund" was given, and met with a liberal response on the part of the brethren, who subscribed to the amount of £15. The toast of "The Visitors" followed, among whom were Bros. Hunt, W.M. 188.; R. T. Bloomfield, W.M. 185.; E. Gottheil, P.M. 141.; J. Constable, S.D. 185.; A. W. Berkham, 749.; A. W. Meyer, 941.; Sydney, P.S.W.; J. Abrahams, 898.; W. J. Stevens, 742.; Lazarus, P.G.J.W. Wilts. Each visitor replied, and Bro. Lazarus more particularly followed with one of his usual descriptions of the beauties and principles of F.M. Some capital singing and other amusements were contributed by the brethren.

BURTON-ON-TRENT.—Royal Sussex Lodge (No. 353).—This lodge was held at the Swan Hotel, on Monday, 27th inst. Bro. J. L. Gibbons was installed, according to antient custom, as W.M. of this lodge for the ensuing year. J.P.M. Bro. T. A. Jackson performed the onerous duties of installation, to the expressed satisfaction of a lodge, composed in a great measure of old Masons, who delight in criticism. By command of the W.M. the I.P.M. then invested with the badge of their respective offices the following brethren to serve for the ensuing year:—Bros. W. J. Gothard, P. Prov. G. Supt. of Works, as S.W.; H. G. Diamond, J.W.; G. B. Knobel, P. Prov. S.G.D., as Director of Ceremonies; T. Hobday, Secretary; G. A. Taverner, S.D.; W. Johnson, J.D.; C. Jackson, I.G.; J. L. Spooner and J. Hawkins, Stewards; and Turner as Tyler. The ordinary business was then undertaken, the new W.M. proving himself fully equal to the occasion, and reciprocating in the most cordial manner the "hearty good wishes" of the visiting brethren. At 5 o'clock, Bro. Spooner intimated in an impressive manner that his culinary arrangements had given him every satisfaction, and that should the brethren approve the banquet, the choice of his own epitaph would be decided. Future generations will read of his happy demise. In proposing the toast of the evening, Bro. T. A. Jackson dwelt at length on the results already attained for the lodge by the W.M., and predicted that his year of office would be signalled by an important increase in strength and efficiency. Bro. Jackson also gracefully alluded to the Masonic services rendered to the Royal Sussex, and to himself personally, by P.M. Bro. Robt. Bindley (No. 1060). The W.M. in responding, remarked upon the sympathy and support he had received from all members of his lodge, and of his determination to be guided, in all his Masonic duties, by the recognised constitutions only. He further urged upon his officers the importance of their individual attention to such obligations as he purposed introducing them to, and succeeded in impressing all present that work is meant in and by the Royal Sussex. Bro. E. F. Knobel kindly presided at the organ, and Bros. Upton, Bindley (J.A.) Johnson and Bellamy assisted in furthering the harmony of the evening.

RAMSEY.—St. Maughold Lodge (No. 1075).—The brethren of this lodge celebrated their annual festival of St. John's day, the 27th ultimo, at their Lodge-rooms, Neptune-street. After the business of the lodge was concluded, the brethren dined together at the Royal Hotel. A large number of the brethren were in attendance, and a handsome P.M.'s jewel, of gold and brilliants, was presented to Bro. Webb, the retiring Master, in recognition of his valuable services during the past two years. After dinner, the usual loyal and Masonic toasts were given, and the brethren separated shortly after ten o'clock. Bro. A. Dumbell, W.M. for the present year, invested his officers as follows:—Bro. T. Allen, S.W.; Bro. W. L. Wild, J.W.; Bro. D. Miller, Treas.; Bro. J. Hannay, Sec.; Bro. C. B. Nelson, S.D.; Bro. J. Vondy, Junr., J.D.; Bro. T. H. P. Mylechreest, I.G.; and Bro. T. Verdy, Tyler.

LIVERPOOL.—Skelmersdale Lodge (No. 1380).—On Monday, the 3rd inst., the Skelmersdale Lodge, No. 1380, meeting at the Blundellsands Hotel, Great Crosby, near Liverpool, completed its first year's existence, and the proceedings were of more than ordinary interest from the fact that during the year the position of W.M. had been occupied by Bro. the Rt. Hon. Lord Skelmersdale, who at the beginning of his year of office was D.G.M. of the Province, but at the close held the more honourable post of R.W. Prov. G.M. designate. By thus assuming the mastership of a private lodge, his lordship gave another proof of the interest which he takes in the progress of the Craft, and his willingness to do whatever he can to increase its weight and standing. The proceedings of Monday last passed off with an eclat which was largely owing to the presence of our noble brother, to the fact that the brethren of the lodge to which he kindly lent his name took the opportunity of presenting him with a handsome jewel on his retirement from the chair, and also to the fact that his lordship was to be followed in the chair by a brother who is highly respected and greatly esteemed. Shortly after three o'clock, Bro. Lord Skelmersdale, W.M., opened the lodge in due form, supported by the following officers and brethren:—Bros. A. C. Mott, I.P.M., P.G.S.W. for Cumberland and Westmoreland; G. Broadbridge, S.W.,

P.P.G.D.C.; G. de la Parelle, J.W., P.P.G.S.; R. Brown, Sec.; C. Swaby Smith, S.D.; H. L. Richards, Org.; G. Ladmore, Tyler; Bros. J. Hughes, E. Ford, jun., W. H. Loewe, C. K. St. John, J. Mawdsley, P.P.G. Reg.; W. Chamberlain, T. Ellison, H. Davies, and J. J. Rose. Amongst the visitors were Bros. J. P. Platt, P.P.J.D.W., Cheshire; W. M. Chudley, J. W. Baker, P.M. 241; W. Cooke, S.W. 1289; L. Moritz, 292; F. J. Eaton, P.M. 241; W. Doyle, P.M. 667; J. Busfield, 216; T. G. Bark, 241; R. Wilson, P.M. 341; J. Skeaf, P.P.G.O.; C. Petty, 216; J. Wood, Treas., 1094; E. Brigg, 1063, &c. The minutes of the previous meeting having been read and confirmed, several candidates were balloted for and declared duly elected. Bro. Lord Skelmersdale then vacated the chair, which was taken by Bro. A. C. Mott. His lordship and Bro. Mawdsley then presented Bro. G. Broadbridge, W.M. elect, and Bro. Mott proceeded with the ceremony in a most impressive, complete, and effective manner—very rarely excelled in this part of the province. The W.M. subsequently invested the following brethren as his officers for the ensuing year:—Bros. George de la Parelle, S.W.; R. Brown, J.W.; Dr. Limerick, Treas.; T. G. Bark, Sec.; C. Swaby Smith, S.D.; T. W. Richardson, J.D.; and Ford, jun., I.G. Bro. G. Ladmore was unanimously re-elected Tyler of the lodge. At the conclusion of this portion of the business, Bro. Broadbridge, W.M., said he had a very pleasing duty to perform in presenting to Bro. Lord Skelmersdale, I.P.M. of No. 1380, a P.M.'s jewel, which had been unanimously voted by the brethren of the lodge. They had, he said, received many acts of kindness at his hands, and he was well-known and highly beloved in the province for his valuable Masonic labours. The W.M. then presented his lordship with an exceedingly chaste and handsome P.M.'s jewel, which bore the following inscription:—“Presented to Bro. Lord Skelmersdale, R.W.P. G.M., P.M. of the Skelmersdale Lodge, as a token of esteem from the lodge, and a memento of his being the first W.M.” At the call of Bro. Mott, his lordship was greeted with the “royal salute,” in view of his appointment as P.G.M. Bro. Lord Skelmersdale said he had to acknowledge the gift of that beautiful jewel as one of brotherly love and the friendship which he had gained in that lodge and throughout the province. He would always wear that jewel, and he could assure the brethren it would never fail to bring to his remembrance the duty which he owed to the lodge, and the province generally. After the W.M. had initiated a candidate into the mysteries and privileges of the order, the brethren adjourned from labour to a sumptuous banquet, provided by the host of the Blundellsands Hotel, to which about 40 sat down, under the presidency of Bro. Broadbridge, W.M. During a pleasant evening the usual loyal, masonic, and charitable toasts were proposed with zest, and responded to with enthusiasm. Bros. Busfield, Brown, J.W., Petty, &c., contributed several excellent songs; the accompaniments being admirably played by Bro. J. Skeaf, P.P.G.O.

MILTON.—Whitwell Lodge (No. 1390).—The regular monthly communication of this lodge took place on Tuesday, January 21st. The lodge was opened at 7 o'clock, by the W.M., Bro. Roger Dodgson, P.G.S.B., supported by Bro. Myers of Liverpool, acting S.W.; J.W., P.G. Steward and the rest of the officers. Visiting brethren John Hailley, No. 995 and 1398, and Bro. Myers. The ballot was taken for Mr. Bradley, builder, which proved unanimous in his favour, and he being in attendance, was regularly initiated in Freemasonry by the W.M., the working tools and charge being given by the J.W. Bro. Bradley, having retired, Bro. Bell, a candidate for the degree of F.C., answered the usual questions and has entrusted and retired, the lodge was then opened in the second degree, and Bro. Bell admitted and passed the working tools being very ably explained by the acting S.W. The lodge was closed down to the first degree, when the W.M. read a letter received from Bro. R. Pearson, P.M. 995, suggesting that the lodges be occasionally held in the afternoon for the convenience of non-resident members. One gentleman was proposed as a candidate, and the lodge was finally closed at 9.30, p.m., with solemn prayer.

DURHAM.—Chapter of Concord (No. 124).—The annual convocation of this chapter was held on Tuesday evening last, in the Freemasons' Hall, Durham, under the presidency of Comp. C. Rowlandson, M.E.Z.; Comp. W. Brignall, Junr.; Prov. G. Registrar, E.H.; and Major James Monks, E.J.; assisted by the usual staff of officers and E. Companion, John Fawcett, Esq., Provincial Grand Superintendent for Durham. After the minutes of the previous convocation had been read and duly confirmed, three candidates, viz. Bros. Francis Bewsher (M.A.), Chaplain, both of the Earl of Durham Lodge, No. 1274, and James Laidler, S.D., of the Norman Lodge, No. 1334, were regularly introduced and exalted to this supreme degree in the accustomed form; the H.S.M. lectures being given by the several officers whose duty it is to deliver them, except the last one, which by special request, was given by the respected Provincial Grand Superintendent, John Fawcett, in such a solemn and impressive manner as can seldom be equalled. The election of officers for the ensuing year was then proceeded with, the following being the result:—Comps. William Brignall, Junr. M.E.Z.; Major James Monks, E.H.; Rev. George Robert Bulman (M.A.), E.J.; T. W. Hearon, S.E.; William Donkin, S.N.; Henry Lawrence, Prin. Soj.; George Johnston, Treasurer; and John Carter, Janitor. After a hearty vote of thanks had been tendered to the Provincial Grand Superintendent for the services he had rendered throughout the evening, the chapter was closed in the prescribed form until Tuesday, 25th March next.

LIVERPOOL.—Walton Chapter (1086).—A meeting of this Chapter was held on Thursday evening the 23rd ult., at the Masonic Hall, Kirkdale, at which were present Comps. Thos. Cheshworth, M.E.Z.; Josh. C. Lunt, H.; J. W. Baker, M.E.Z. 241, as J.; P. Armstrong, S.E.; H. Hughes, S.N.; J. P. W. McArthur, P. Soj.; Wm. Archer, P.Z., Treasurer; Jno. Lunt, P.Z.; Visitors Comps. Baker, the Symbolical Lecture by Comp. J. C. Lunt, H.; and the Mystical Lecture by the M.E.Z. On the conclusion of the business the companions adjourned to refreshment. Grace having been said, the usual loyal and Masonic toasts were given and responded to. Comp. Archer, P.Z., then rose and said he now came to what he deemed the toast of the evening, namely, “The I.P.Z. Comp. John Lunt,” who had won the esteem of every companion by his good working, as well as by the zeal and ability he had displayed in the faithful discharge of his duties. He then presented him on behalf of the companions of the Chapter, with a splendid P.Z. 18 carat jewel, set with a diamond and two rubies, and in affixing this jewel he, Comp. Archer, wished him many years of prosperity and health to wear it. The jewel bears the following inscription:—“Presented to Comp. John Lunt, P.M.E.Z., by the companions of the Walton Chapter, No. 1086, as a mark of their esteem and respect, January 23rd, 1873.” Comp. Lunt thanked the companions, and said he received this proof of their esteem and regard with feelings of the deepest gratitude; he should ever retain and prize the tribute of respect which he had received at their hands, and would act as an incitement, if any were wanted, to the most unremitting exertions for the future. The usual final toast was most feelingly given, and thus terminated an evening spent in truly fraternal harmony.

LEICESTER.—Fowke Lodge (No. 19).—A highly interesting meeting of this lodge was held at the Freemasons' Hall, on Thursday, the 23rd inst., under the able presidency of Bro. S. S. Partridge, W.M., assisted by his principal officers and a numerous attendance of brethren. The ceremony of advancement was most efficiently conducted by the W.M., the scriptural portions being rendered by the Rev. Dr. Hayroft, and the music by Bro. Wykes. The ballot for the W.M. for the ensuing year resulted in the election of Bro. Weare, S.W., by a very large majority. Bro. Stretton was unanimously re-elected to the office of Treasurer, and received the cordial thanks of the brethren for his valuable services to the lodge, during the lengthened period of six years. Bros. Sculthorpe, J. M. McAllister, and T. A. Wykes, were appointed members of the “Audit Committee.” Bro. George Toller, jun. M.O., proposed that a Past Master's jewel be presented to Bro. Partridge, in tangible recognition of the admirable manner in which, on all occasions he had conducted the ceremonies of this degree, and for his assiduity in the faithful discharge of the responsible duties appertaining to his exalted position. This most agreeable proposition was duly seconded by Bro. Weare, W.M. elect, and the brethren were delighted at being afforded such an opportunity of thus placing their “mark” on the “perfect work” of their esteemed W.M. on his retirement. Bro. Stretton who is ever forward in a charitable cause, having generously undertaken to serve the office of a Steward for the Boys' School, the usual subscription was unanimously voted towards the support of that Institution. The lodge was closed in ancient form.

REDRUTH.—Meridian Lodge (No. 73).—The annual festival of the Meridian Mark Lodge, No. 73, was held at Redruth on Tuesday, the 28th ult. at 5.30, p.m. A goodly number of the brethren were present, and almost to the stroke of the “half hour” the W.M., Bro. W. Tregay took the chair, and having opened the lodge, called upon Bro. W. J. Hughan, P.M. 78, Past Grand Warden of England, &c., to officiate as Master, advance the candidates, and instal the W.M. elect, Bro. James H. Reynolds, S.W. Bro. Hughan, P.M. then took the gavel in hand, and in his usually perfect and impressive manner, advanced two candidates to the degree of a Mark Master Mason, explaining the tools, emblems, &c., in full. Our well-known brother then gave a long address on Freemasonry, more particularly with reference to the custom of Mark Masonry, tracing the marks in lodge books, especially the records of the Lodge of Edinburgh from 1598, and the Mark Book of the Lodge of Aberdeen from 1670. He also referred in the most grateful manner to the kindness and assistance rendered him in his Masonic investigations by these two old lodges. Bro. Reynolds was then duly installed, and appointed his officers Bro. Tregay proposed that Bro. Thomas Solomon, J.P., P.M. 78, be elected an honorary member of the lodge. As Prov. Grand Secretary he had visited the lodge that evening, and they were glad to see him. Bro. Solomon, J.P., suitably responded, and thanked the lodge for the intended honour, which he would be proud in complying with, in conjunction with his friend Bro. Hughan, who had had a similar distinction conferred upon him some years since. The lodge was then closed, and the brethren adjourned for refreshment. The W.M. presided at the banquet, and a most enjoyable evening was spent. Bros. P. W. Dalb, P.M.; John Hocking, P.M.; J. F. Pearce, P.M.; W. Tregay, P.M.; the Rev. Dr. J. Bamister, J.W.; James Sims, S.W.; and Bros. Wales, Kitcher, Thomas, Martin, Wellington, Cocks, and other brethren attending. Bro. Hughan, P.G.W., responded on behalf of the Grand Lodge, and Bro. Solomon, Prov. G. Sec., for the Prov. Grand Lodge of Cornwall.

RAMSGATE.—Holmesdale Lodge (No. 129).—A regular meeting of this lodge was held at the Royal Hotel, Ramsgate, on Thursday last, the 23rd of January. Bro. Lewis Finch, Prov. G.M., Treasurer, W.M., Bro. T. H. Grove, Snowden.

D.P.G.M. Master, S.W.; Bro. J. L. Ellerm, J.W.; Bro. J. J. Darby, Prov. G.M.S. Deacon, M.O.; Bro. H. Wootton, Prov. G.M.J.O., S.O.; Bro. T. S. Clarke, Prov. G.M.A.S., J.O.; Bro. The Rev. G. W. Sicklemore, Prov. G.M.M.M., Chaplain; Bro. E. J. Smith, Prov. G.M.D.C., as Sec.; Bro. James W. Smith, G.M. Steward, and Prov. G.M. Sec., S.D.; Bro. Geo. Miles, J.D.; Bro. Geo. Page, Prov. G.M. Swd. Br., as I.G.; Bro. Geo. Meager, Tyler. Several other brethren were also present. The first business of the evening, after the opening of the lodge, was to elect a W.M. for the ensuing year, and the result was a unanimous vote in favour of Bro. Snowden, Dep. Prov. G.M.M. Bro. Snowden, in returning thanks for the honour conferred on him, paid a just tribute to the W.M. for his excellent working of the ceremonies during his year of office, and promised to emulate the example set him, so that the lodge might not suffer by the change of Masters. Bro. Snowden is well-known for his excellent rendering of the Craft and R.A. ceremonies, and therefore there needs be no apprehension as to the maintenance of the distinguished character which the lodge has acquired. The W.M. elect announced his intention to immediately carry out the improvements just introduced in the Mark Ritual. Bro. Finch, the retiring W.M., was elected Treasurer. Bro. Meager was re-elected Tyler. A ballot was then taken for Bro. Isaac Jarman, J.W. of the Royal Navy Lodge, 429; who being unanimously approved, was advanced to the honourable degree. The Lecture was delivered by Bro. James W. Smith. The Installation is to take place on the fourth Thursday in March, when it is expected that a large number of influential brethren will be present.

Knights Templar.

IPSWICH.—Preceptory of Prudence.—The regular meeting of this Preceptory was held on the 22nd January, when there were present Sir Knights Emma Holmes, Grand Provost of England, Preceptor; the Rev. R. N. Sanderson, D.P.G.C., Suffolk and Cambridge, P.E.C., Act. 1st Captain; Dr. Mills, P.E.C. Act. 2nd Captain; J. Pitcher, P.E.C.; G. S. Findley, P.E.C., Registrar, and others. The Preceptory having been opened with solemn prayer, and the minutes of last meeting having been read and confirmed, Sir Knt. Mills rose to tender the resignation of Sir Knt. G. S. Golding, the E.C. elect, who was compelled to decline the honour the Preceptory had conferred upon him, in consequence of ill-health. He moved that his resignation should be accepted. Sir Knt. Sanderson, in seconding the motion, expressed his great regret at the circumstances under which Sir Knt. Golding was compelled to resign and hoped that an expression of that regret on the part of the Preceptory would be placed upon the minutes. The Preceptor also begged to endorse the sentiments of the Sir Knights who had spoken, and requested the Registrar to take a minute of the observations of their esteemed D.P.G.G. Some conversation ensued and it was decided to apply to the Prov. G. Commander, Capt. Phillips, for a dispensation to hold a special meeting on the 5th February, to elect a Preceptor, who would be installed at the regular meeting in April, according to the Statutes. There being no other business before the Sir Knights, the Preceptory was closed, and the Fratres retired for refreshment.

GRAND LODGE OF SCOTLAND.

The quarterly communication of the Grand Lodge of Scotland was held in Freemasons' Hall, George-street, Edinburgh, on Monday, 3rd February, 1873. The Earl of Rosslyn, Most Worshipful Grand Master, occupied the throne, and amongst the brethren present were Sir Michael K. Shaw Stewart, Depute Grand Master; F. A. Barrow, Acting Senior Grand Warden; Wm. Barton, Acting Junior Grand Warden; Wm. Mann, Past Grand Warden; Walter Montgomery Nelson, of Queenshill, Provincial Grand Master of Glasgow City; Major Hamilton Ramsay, Senior Grand Deacon; John Laurie, Grand Clerk; John Coghill, Grand Director of Ceremonies; Convener Robertson, Grand Bible Bearer; Lindsay Mackersy, W.S., representative of Grand Lodge of Canada; Robert Davidson, Grand Organist; M. Mackenzie, Chief Grand Marshall; A. T. Abthorpe, Grand Marshall; H. Y. D. Copland, J. T. Douglas, T. H. Douglas, and others.

The Grand Lodge having been opened in ample form, a number of proxy commissions were read and sustained. The Grand Clerk then announced that presents had been received from Grand Lodges of England, France, the Netherlands, and New Brunswick, for which a vote of thanks was accorded on the motion of the Grand Master. The minutes of the Grand Lodge and Grand Committee having been read and approved of, the Grand Committee for the ensuing year was appointed.

Petitions for charters to the following lodges were granted unanimously:—Waring St. John, Murchison, Victoria; Seville, Jamaica; Rothes, Leslie; Abercromby, Bridge of Allan; Caledonian, Canterbury, New Zealand; Omaru Kilwinning, Oamaru, New Zealand; Patea, Taranaki, New Zealand; Cromwell Kilwinning, Cromwell, New Zealand; Sir Walter Scott, Auckland, New Zealand; St. Andrew, Grey River, Grey Mouth, New Zealand.

The Grand Clerk having intimated that the newly-appointed representative from the Grand Lodge of Sweden and Norway was in waiting, the Grand Master ordered him to be conducted into the Grand Lodge. Bro. Mann, Past Senior Grand Warden, was accordingly ushered in with due ceremony, and the commissions from the King of Sweden having been read, was installed into office amidst loud applause. After he had returned thanks for the honour conferred upon him, Bro. Robert Cowan, Past Provincial Grand Master of Scotland, was appointed representative at the Grand Lodge of New Brunswick, and Bro. Chevalier A. F. Krintberg, representative at the Grand Lodge of Sweden, vice Bro. Erskine, deceased.

The resignation of the Right Hon. the Earl of Stair, K.T., as Provincial Grand Master of Wigtownshire, was received with regret. The Grand Master said he had received a letter from the noble Earl, and he had written in reply, entreating him to reconsider his determination, but as he had received no reply, he concluded the noble Earl would not continue in office.

A motion by Captain Gordon, tabled at last meeting, to change the day of meeting of the Grand Lodge, was, in his absence, delayed till next meeting.

It was then moved by Bro. W. Officer, Past Grand Deacon, seconded by Bro. Lindsay Mackersy, in the absence of Bro. Alexander Hay—

“That on and after the passing of this motion the office of Grand Clerk shall cease, and its duties shall devolve on and be discharged by the Grand Secretary; that the present Grand Clerk shall be conjoined in the office of Grand Secretary, with Bro. Stewart as joint Grand Secretary; that upon the occurrence of the first vacancy by death or resignation, the joint office shall cease, and the remaining holder of the office shall be sole Grand Secretary till the date of the next annual election, when only one Grand Secretary shall be elected; and that the laws of Grand Lodge in so far as not coincident with this motion be repealed.”

The motion was unanimously adopted, and the Grand Masters passed a high eulogium on Bro. Lawrie, Grand Clerk, for his valuable business services to Grand Lodge during the past two years, a compliment which was warmly endorsed by the brethren present.

It was unanimously agreed that the hour of meeting should in future be five, instead of six o'clock.

Bro. Abbot, No. 1, then moved the following motion:—

“That all lodges holding of this Grand Lodge, whether represented or not by their Master and Wardens, shall be compelled to pay the fees exigible for representation in Grand Lodge, on the 24th June annually, if not paid by their representatives previously.”

Bro. John Baird seconded the motion, and after some discussion it was agreed to.

Bro. Lindsay Mackersy then brought forward the following motion:

“That in future the Master shall appoint the Depute Grand Master, and the Grand Lodge laws so far as inconsistent with this are hereby altered.”

Bro. Dr. Loth seconded the motion, and after the Grand Master had made some remarks bearing on the subject, it was unanimously agreed to.

Motions for consideration at next meeting having been laid upon the table, Grand Lodge was closed in ample form.

PROVINCIAL LODGE OF DEVONSHIRE.

On Monday, 27th ult., a meeting of the Committee of Petitions was held at the Masonic Hall, Exeter, for the despatch of business. The D.P.G.M., Bro. L. P. Metham, presided. Bro. Goyer, the Secretary, read the proceedings of the last meeting, and stated that a boy, named Sawtell, was elected fifth in the last election of boys into the Masonic Boys' School. In order to effect his election they had used all their own votes, and Bro. Stevens, the agent of this Province in London, had borrowed 500 votes, so as to secure Sawtell's election. In consequence of this loan all the votes of the Province were pledged this year to be sent to London. The committee then proceeded to consider the applications for relief, and £5 was voted now to a poor brother at Bideford, and £5 will be voted at a future time. An application for relief for a widow at Plymouth was next considered, and £5 was voted, subject to the decision of Bros. Metham and Latimer, in whose hands the case was left for some inquiry. A letter was read from a widow at Totnes, thanking the committee for a former vote, and asking for further assistance. This letter was deferred. It was then proposed that the votes of the Province should be given for a decayed brother living at Sidmouth, a Freemason of 33 years' standing and of a high character, as a candidate for admission into the Royal Benevolent Institution for Decayed and Indigent Masons. The proposal was unanimously agreed to, and it was urged that all votes should be sent from the whole of the lodges in the Province to the Committee of Petitions. This would bring the whole of the Province into co-operation, and would give to every lodge a right by union to claim relief for any distressed brethren.

The D.P.G.M. then introduced a matter of considerable importance with regard to the future education of boys and girls for whom the Province wished to provide. He said they were in debt a large number of votes, and it would be two years before they would be out of debt. He had thought a great deal on the subject of their educating the sons of Freemasons who were either in indigent circumstances or left orphan-

He had turned the matter over in his mind for several years past, in order that some educational scheme might be adopted for boys especially, and for girls if they had the means of bringing it about. The Boys' School in London cost £43 per head, and had been considerably more, but there was great difficulty in getting a boy into the school. In Lancashire the Freemasons had fifty boys under education in good and well-conducted schools, and they clothed the boys, leaving them to reside with their mothers. He thought that they could adopt a plan of that kind, and whilst they were giving a proper support to the charity in London, they might have an additional scheme, and they might educate and clothe the boys for £15 each. There were now six applicants without the means of education, and they might take the whole six of them and place them in schools near their own homes at an expense of about £90 per annum. He had before him several reports from the Province of Cheshire, and in the ninth he found twenty boys under education, at a cost of £96 for the year. That did not include clothing, but in Devon they would like to do it properly, and clothe and educate as well the boys they took under their charge. Bro. I. Watts observed that in such a case as that they ought to raise funds and invest them, and call upon each lodge to contribute a sum which might be sufficient for carrying out the scheme.

The D.P.G.M. thought it would be best to adopt the principle. After much consideration, Bro. Gover mentioned that to elect a boy to the school in London cost 200 guineas. They had just elected one, and taken three years about it.

A resolution was then moved, seconded, and carried unanimously. It was to the following effect:—"That a sub-committee should be appointed to inquire into the desirability of instituting an educational fund for this Province, and that the sub-committee bring up a report for the consideration of the next meeting of this Committee of Petitions." The following brethren were appointed to act on the committee:—Messrs. Metham, Latimer, Bird, Watts, Jones, Gover, Hooper, and Jew.

The special business to be transacted was to decide whether any and what sum of money should be contributed from the funds of the Provincial Grand Lodge to the Royal Masonic Benevolent Institution on the occasion of the festival in February, at which His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales will preside as chairman, and the Right Worshipful the Provincial Grand Master will be one of the Stewards.

Bro. Metham rose in furtherance of the call of the meeting to propose that a sum should be given to the Grand Master to represent their Province well and worthily at the Grand Lodge in London. He desired that this Province should be represented as standing out for its benevolence, and that it should be one of the first in the amount that it would contribute. It would flatter their pride,—and he thought it was a just pride,—and when the vanity had passed away they would have the satisfaction of knowing that they could look back and see what an amount of good they had done their distressed brethren who wanted their assistance. They had not so largely supported some of the other charities as many Provinces had done, but their contributions towards the Benevolent Institution had been always very considerable. On the present occasion their brother, the Prince of Wales, who was evincing a great deal of interest in the Craft, and was actually going to become the Master of a lodge, and initiate his own brother in the mysteries of the Order, would preside. Their P.G.M. should on this occasion be assisted by all the influence and power that money could give. It was at that festival that he desired that that Lodge should stand out well, and he should like to see Devon at the top of the list. (Applause.) When he himself went up he had the honour of standing first, and on the second occasion he stood second, and surely they were also desirous that their Grand Master should stand at the top of the list. (Cheers.) Bro. Metham then referred to the great benefits the Benevolent Institution conferred upon poor and decayed Masons, giving instances of some of those who had benefited in this Province. No one who was in business could say but what he might one day be subject to misfortune, and he trusted that every case of the kind that might arise they should be prepared to meet (Cheers.) To do that they must put their hands in their pockets, and he hoped that they would give freely that day; and he proposed, therefore, that they should vote their Grand Master one hundred guineas. (Applause.) Their funds could not be better spent than in the cause to which this money would be devoted.

Bro. Bird seconded the motion, remarking that he should have been better pleased had the amount been £150.

Bro. Davies proposed, as an amendment, that £150 should be voted; and this was seconded by Bro. Hooper. Bro. Gover said that the first proposal almost took away his breath, but he was quite astonished at the second. He objected that so large a sum of the funds of the Province should be devoted to such a purpose, for they were "eating the calf in the cow's belly." (Laughter.)

The Grand Master said that the whole of the lodge dues were due to the Grand Lodge on the first of January, but they always gave time for their being sent in; still the money could as well be relied upon as if it were in their hands. He also remarked that the Grand Lodge of England were in future going to give to every annuitant £36 a year instead of £26, and he should say that the former was not a farthing too much to give to a Freemason on the fund. (Applause.) And they would also give the widows £5 a year more than they were giving at present, therefore the sum required to sustain these benefits would be a very large one. Then the Prince of Wales was going to preside, and they ought to support him. His Royal Highness did not merely give his name, but supported Masonry in every way, and he was going to become the Master of his (the Grand Master's) mother lodge, the Apollo of Oxford, of which he was one of the oldest members living, and he intended to go up on the nineteenth with his brother, Sir John Hayes, who, with himself, was initiated in 1822—now more than 50 years since, and within a few days of each other. The Prince of Wales had done more for the Order than any crowned head, except the King of Sweden, and he would make Masonry exceedingly popular.

Bro. Watts was unable to give a silent vote on this question. He had been taken by surprise, and thought that the amount was altogether too large, and if it had not been for the Prince of Wales they would have heard nothing of this meeting.

Bro. Latimer rose, and said that Bro. Watts did not represent the feeling of the Three Towns. There was no occasion on which a money question arose but what Bro. Watts exhibited the niggardly spirit which then animated him, and he was satisfied that no one lodge in the Three Towns concurred with him. He (the speaker) had brought the matter forward on several occasions, and had been met with the most cordial approval, whilst the suggestions of Bro. Watts did not find even a seconder. After some further discussion, a vote was taken, and the amendment received 27, whilst for the original motion 29 voted. The amendment for £150 was thus lost by a majority of two.

The Past Grand Master said he was highly satisfied. (Loud cheers.) It was a very large sum for any Province to vote, excepting the great Provinces in the North, and he would be most happy and proud to carry up such an amount along with the sums which would be voted by the lodges in the Province. (Cheers.)

It was then determined that the bye-laws of the Province, which have not been printed since 1845, should be reprinted, after they had been subject to revision. For this purpose proofs are to be sent to all the lodges, and to all the members of the Provincial Grand Lodges.

The Provincial Grand Lodge was then closed in due form.

Afterwards, on a special invitation from Bro. John Way, P.P.G.T., of Alphington, the following brethren, members of the Committee of Petitions, dined at Mr. Gifford's, High-street:—Rev. John Huyshe, L. P. Metham, W. G. Rogers,

I. Latimer, R. Rodda, W. H. Geachias, J. B. Gover, S. Jew, I. Watts, V. Bird, Hambly, and Browning. The dinner was in all respects most excellent, and the wines, from Bro. Way's own cellar, were of the choicest. The party spent a most pleasant and happy afternoon, and were very much indebted to Bro. Way for his fraternal hospitality.

MASONIC PRESENTATION AT LOWESTOFT.

We have pleasure in announcing a well-deserved compliment paid to our esteemed fellow-townsmen, Mr. Robert Clark, the proprietor of the Suffolk Hotel. On Thursday evening, Mr. Clark was invited to a dinner at the Suffolk Hotel, by the members of the Lodge Unity, No. 71, upon which occasion nearly 30 of the brethren were present. The chair was ably occupied by Brother Thomas, W.M., the Senior and Junior Wardens' chairs being efficiently filled by Brothers Marks and Collins. In the course of the evening the Worshipful Master, in an address which met with its echo in every brother present, handed to Brother Clark, in the name of the lodge, a testimonial of their high regard and esteem, in the form of a splendid silver vase or "Loving Cup," with ebony stand and glass shade, upon which was the following inscription:—"Presented to Bro. Robert Clark, P.M., Masonic Lodge Unity, No. 71, by the Brethren of his Lodge, Lowestoft, January, 1873." Bro. Clark, who was much touched with the kindness manifested by the members of his lodge, responded most appropriately and with much feeling. He alluded to the many years the lodge had been held at his hotel; the many kind manifestations of their regard he had received, of which the present was the visible and tangible climax. He thanked them all most sincerely, and should treasure up, not so much for its material value—though that was considerable—as for the sincere expression of regard and esteem for him of which it was the practical proof. A very happy Masonic evening was spent, which was greatly augmented by the excellent songs of Brothers Firmin and Mann.—Ipswich Journal.

WEST INDIES.

Never was the town of Grenada thrown into such a state of excitement as on Friday, Dec. 27th, when the Masonic Fraternity turned out and marched to St. Andrew's Kirk, for the purpose of having a sermon preached to them, on the anniversary of their Tutelar Saint. The streets, and windows in every building throughout the line of route, were thronged with persons of all classes and creeds—in fact, there were thousands out to witness a sight which for over twenty years Grenada had not seen. The brethren formed in procession at the lodge, and (avoiding the order in which they respectively stood), numbered thirty-eight. Amongst their number stood some old veterans of the Craft,—brothers, who on that day, called to remembrance happy years of the past when similar happy gatherings took place, and who also, with that love for the Order which none but Masons can have, marked the stirring present, and for old "Caledonia, 324," pointed to a hopeful future.

In the evening, an entertainment was given at the lodge. The programme included dancing and supper. The menu comprised every delicacy of the season, and the viands being served in proper style, their fully enjoyment was ensured.

The usual loyal and Masonic toasts were given and responded to. "The Queen," "The Grand Masters of England, Ireland and Scotland," "Our Brother the Prince of Wales and the Princess of Wales," were proposed by the W.M., and from the heartiness of the manner in which they were received, were undeniably endorsed by all.

The ball room was profusely decorated with shrubs, flowering plants, &c.

The arrangements were carried out by a most indefatigable band of Stewards, and to these we can safely say, with the co-operation of the respected R.W.M., the great success may be attributed.—St. George's Chronicle.

AIDS TO STUDY.

By BRO. WM. CARPENTER, P.M., AND P.Z. 177. XVIII.

To the biblical student, and, indeed, to all who desire to find sacred history verified by ancient traditions and records, the contributions which the mounds of Assyria and Babylon have yielded, through the labours and researches of travellers and scholars, during the last few years, are of more interest than anything that has been obtained through the interpreted memoranda of Egyptian monuments and papyri, inasmuch as many of them connect themselves with scripture history, and afford incontestible evidence of its authenticity, in some of its most remarkable features. Some of the earliest of that most interesting class of records, which have been truly called Assyrian books,—tablets, cylinders, or prisms of clay, covered with cuneiform inscriptions, in a fine character, some of which were multiplied for use and preservation, have been disinterred at Kileh-Shergat (now identified with Asshur), west of the Tigris; but those found on the eastern side of the river, as at Khorsabad, Bavian, She-reef Khan, Nebbianus, Koyunjik, and Nineveh, are by far the most interesting and valuable.

Conspicuous among the ruins are those which have been mentioned as capitals: Nineveh; Nimrud (Calah), lower down the river; Kileh-Shergat (Asshur), lower still; and Khorsabad or Dur-Sargina, north of Nineveh, on the little river Khors-su, which joins the Tigris at Nineveh. The very name of the last, as Mr. Philip Smith observes,—the "City of Sargon," excludes it from the original Tetrapolis. It was, in fact, a new royal city, supplemental to Nineveh.

The largest ruins in Assyria are the mounds of Nebbi-Yunus and Koyunjik, on the left bank of the Tigris, opposite Mosul, on the right bank, in latitude 36° 21' N., which mark the traditional site of the original Nineveh, and contain the palaces of Sennacherib and his successors.

Passing down the great plain, we find similar mounds to these of Assyria, among the ruined cities of Babylonia. The argillaceous plain supplied the materials for bricks, which the fierce sun hardened sufficiently for the construction of the massive stages of the tower and walls of the palaces, while, for the protection of the outer surfaces, they burnt them thoroughly. As the scriptural record says, "they had bricks for stone and slime for mortar." It is doubtful whether the "slime" means the tenacious mud, or the bitumen, which is one of the most characteristic products of Chaldea. The characters impressed upon the bricks, and upon the tablets and signet-cylinders, found in the ruins, attest the knowledge of the art of writing, and furnish testimony concerning this early age, which is, in some cases, confirmed by the records of later kings, representing, of course, only the traditions of their times. The names of the earliest of these cities are recorded in the scriptural notice of Nimrod. Of the cities forming the southern tetrapolis (besides Babel), Erech and Calneh seem to be the Huruk and Nipur of the cuneiform inscriptions, which are identified, almost certainly, with Wark, and Niffer. Accad seems to be the name rather of a region than of a city, and is sometimes used like the general name of the kingdom. The testimony found in the ruins seems to indicate the existence of two Tetrapoleis, corresponding to the two-fold division of the Babylonian plain—the upper consisting of Babel, Borsippa, Cutha (now Ibrahim, N. E. of Babylon) and Sippara (the Sepharvaim of Scripture), now Sura, on the Euphrates, twenty miles above Babylon; the lower comprising (besides Erech and Calneh) Larsa, or Larancha (the Ellasar of Scripture, and now Senkereh), and Hur (now called Mugheir, i.e. the mother of bitumen, from the vast quantity of bituminous cement found in its ruins).

Among the travellers who have been possessed with a desire to explore the vast mounds of Assyria and Babylonia, Mr. Layard, while seeking for the means of effecting his purpose of penetrating those of Nineveh, was stimulated to increased activity by the success of M. Botta, who had discovered, at Khorsabad, about 10 miles N.N.E. of Nineveh, at the foot of the Makloub Hills, the magnificent palace of Sargon, the sovereign who completed the capture of Samaria, and extinguished the kingdom of Israel, as is recorded by Sargon himself, on one of the tablets in the great hall of his palace, B.C. 720, according to the canon of Ptolemy.

But by what means are the inscriptions found in these ancient ruins rendered intelligible? By written letters, and that not in their first stage, for the writing of the Assyrians and Babylonians had, like that of the Egyptians, passed beyond the hieroglyphic stage. The kind of writing found on these monuments is what has been variously called the wedge, nail, arrow-head, dagger, or swallow-tail, but is now generally called cuneiform, or cuneatic, from the Latin cuneus a wedge, that being the form of the letters, which seem to have been produced upon the soft clay, by the simple pressure of the style or instrument of writing, which left a mark like a fine wedge, or something like the form which would be made if a shortened arrow were impressed upon a soft clay tablet—broad at one end and tapering off to the other.

Inscriptions have been found in which the tapering is wanting, and others in which it is represented by cross-bars, like the head of a hammer. Evidently from its rigid and curveless character, this form of writing was specially, and very probably, purposely, adapted for being inscribed, either on soft brick or on stone, and the taper form may have been suggested by observing that, in practice, a line thicker at one end came out more natural than one uniformly hick. In regard to the origination of the characters, it is now fully ascertained that, like the Egyptian hieroglyphics, they were at first pictorial, though, unlike the Egyptian, the pictures became generally unrecognisable. In some cases, however, the likeness to the object represented is still discernible; and it is found that in the oldest modes of writing the signs present the most distinct traces of pictorial origin. The student who desires to see further on this subject may consult Loftus, Chaldea; Taylor, in Journal Asiatic Society, XV.; Rawlinson, ib., 1839 and 1846; Oppert, Exped. Scientif.; Hinks, in Report of Brit. Assoc. 1857; Rawlinson, Herodotus, i, pp. 442-444; Ménant, Les écrits, Cun. pp. 19-52; Layard, Nineveh and Babylon; and other writers to whom references will there be found.

Such has been the course of enquiry in regard to this cuneiform writing, and so satisfactory and complete the results, that Sir. H. Rawlinson, in 1850, could write "There are probably not more than twenty words in the whole range of the Persian cuneiform records (it should be observed that the cuneiform writing was not confined to the Assyrians and Babylonians, but was used by all the nations that held dominion in the plain of Mesopotamia, down to the time of Alexander; and some few inscriptions are found of a later date than the Macedonian conquest) upon the meaning, grammatical condition or etymology of which any doubt or difference of opinion can be said, at present, to exist." (Comment. on Cuneiform Inscriptions, p. 3).

The very magnitude of the achievement provokes, in some minds, a doubt of its reality. "The more," says a writer in the Quarterly Review for March, 1847, "we consider the marvellous character of this discovery, the more we feel some distrust and misgiving returning to our minds. It is no less, in the first place, than the creation of a regular alphabet, of forty letters, out of what appears, at first sight, confused and unmeaning lines and angles; and, secondly, the creation of a language out of words so found from this alphabet," the reconstruction of a lost tongue from its characters—characters which could tell nothing of their own meaning, which if once pictorial, had long lost their pictorial significance, and of which there was no Rosetta stone, as for the interpretation of the Egyptian hieroglyphics, to guide the enquirer. Yet that this is no imaginary feat has been shown by evidence sufficient to satisfy any unprejudiced mind." This evidence I may not attempt to produce here. It may suffice to repeat what is said by Mr. Talbot, a very competent judge, that the clearness and consistency of the numerous passages, and the long historical narratives translated by Rawlinson (and, I may now add, by Mr. George Smith) afford in themselves no slight presumption that we cannot be greatly mistaken as to the meaning of these ancient records. The rival system of Forster breaks down.

"For several years I have suffered from repeated and severe attacks of lumbago, and I can truly say that I have never found such electrical relief as I have recently from the use of your Vegetable Pain Killer. Its effects are truly marvellous.—JOURN. LONDON, 16, Chrysel-st. London, Jan., 1870.—To Perry Davis & Son, London, W.C."

THE HOUSE OF BONAPARTE AND FREEMASONRY.

BY BRO. R. WENTWORTH LITTLE.

Ragon, in his Orthodoxie Maçonnique p. 193, describes an Order of French Noachites, under the heading of "Maçonnerie Napoléonienne," and which he states was originated by certain partisans of the ex-Emperor in 1816. The Grand Master of the Order was General Bertrand, one of the fallen chief's most devoted friends, but during his absence at St. Helena its affairs were directed by a Supreme Commander and two Lieutenants. The Order was divided into three degrees, 1. Chevalier, 2. Commandeur, 3. Grand-Elu, in three points, viz., Secret Judge, Perfect Initiate, Knight of the Crown of Oak (Oaken Crown). Under the name of Peleg (Phaleg), the architect of the Tower of Babel, allusions to Napoleon were conveyed. The tower was said to be eight stories high, and the initials of the names given to each of them, composed the word Napoleon, thus—Adam, Eve, Noah, Lamech, Naamah, Phaleg, Oubal, Orient. The age of the candidate was ten years, viz., from 1804 to 1814—the duration of the first Empire. In the second degree Napoleon's decease was commemorated, as will be perceived from the following account in Ragon.

The aspirant carried an urn covered with a veil, and was thus accosted by the Chief. What is thy name? Faithful. Whence comest thou? From an island. What has thou seen? A weeping willow. What bringest thou back? An urn. What does it contain? The ashes of Phaleg.

It is to be noted that, although the queries were put in French, the candidate responded in Latin. Ragon asserts that this Order flourished for many years, but is now (1853) extinct.

There can be no doubt that the late Emperor Napoleon III. was a member of the once formidable society of the Carbonari, inasmuch as he participated in the various insurrectionary movements in Italy which were directed by the chiefs of the Carbonari, and as the latter body endeavoured in every way to establish a quasi connection with the Masonic Order, it is more than probable that Louis Napoleon was initiated in one of the many secret lodges then existing in Austrian Italy, and in the kingdom of the Two Sicilies. In the "Memoirs of the Carbonari" at p. 10, the following remarkable statement upon the subject occurs: "The Freemasons were established in Italy among all ranks. The illuminati of Weishaupt reckoned among their initiated some of the Knights of Malta, with the celebrated Dolomieu at their head. But the reorganizers of the Carbonari of the present day (1821) chose that Order in preference, because it suited their plan to gain proselytes chiefly among the middle and lower classes of the people." Again, at p. 20, in a quotation from the judgment of the Roman Tribunal against the conspirators of Macerata—the Court affirms that, "the adherence of any individual to any of the secret societies suffices to ensure his reception, with a corresponding rank, into all those that may be formed afterwards, so that one sect is always merging in another, while procuring fresh proselytes. That they are, however, no other than so many ramifications of Masonry, some of the best informed sectaries themselves allow, and none of them differ essentially as to the object they have in view: viz., independence, or, at least, a constitutional government, particularly in Italy." It is further stated that "all Freemasons were admitted simply by ballot, and without undergoing the preparatory trials required from ordinary candidates." What these "trials" were may be gathered from the subjoined account of the reception of a Carbonaro in a Baracca or Lodge.

The Preparatore (preparer) leads the Pagan (uninitiated) who is to become a member, blindfold, from the closet of reflection to the door of the Baracca. He knocks irregularly; the Copritore (coverer) says to the second assistant, "A Pagan knocks at the door." The second assistant repeats this to the first, who repeats it to the Grand Master; at every communication the Grand Master strikes a blow with an axe.

GRAND MASTER. See who is the rash being, who dares to trouble our sacred labours.

This question having passed through the assistants and Copritore and Preparatore, he answers through an opening in the door.

PREPARATORE. It is a man whom I have found wandering in the forest.

GR. M. Ask his name, country and profession. The secretary writes the answer.

GR. M. Ask him his habitation—his religion. The secretary notes them.

GR. M. What is it he seeks among us?

PREP. Light; and to become a member of our society.

GR. M. Let him enter.

(The Pagan is led into the middle of the assembly; and his answers are compared with what the Secretary had noted.)

GR. M. Mortal, the first qualities which we require, are frankness, and contempt of danger. Do you feel that you are capable of practising them?

After the answer, the Grand Master questions the candidate on morality and benevolence; and he is asked if he has any effects, and wishes to dispose of them, being at the moment in danger of death; after being satisfied of his conduct, the Grand Master continues, "Well, we will expose you to trials that have some meaning—let him make the first journey." He is led out of the Baracca—he is made to journey through the forest—he hears the rustling of leaves—he is then led back to the door, as at his first entrance.

GR. M. What have you remarked during this first Journey?

(The Pagan relates accordingly.)

GR. M. The first journey is the symbol of human virtue: the rustling of leaves, and the obstacles you have met in the road, indicate to you, that weak as we are, and struggling in this vale of tears, we can only attain virtue by good works, and under the guidance of reason, &c. &c. Let him make the second journey.

(The Pagan is led away, and is made to pass through fire; he is made acquainted with the chastisement of perjury; and, if there is an opportunity, he is shown a head severed from the body, &c. &c. He is again conducted into the Baracca.)

GR. M. The fire through which you have passed is the symbol of that flame of charity, which should be always kindled in our hearts, to efface the stains of the seven capital sins, &c. &c. Make him approach the sacred throne, &c.

GR. M. You must take an irrevocable oath; it offends neither religion nor the state, nor the rights of individuals; but forget not, that its violation is punished with death.

The Pagan declares that he will submit to it; the Master of the Ceremonies leads him to the throne, and makes him kneel on the white cloth.

GR. M. Order!

The Oath.

I, N. N. promise and swear, upon the general statutes of the Order, and upon this steel, the avenging instrument of the perjured, scrupulously to keep the secret of Carbonarism; and neither to write, engrave, or paint anything concerning it, without having obtained a written permission. I swear to help my Good Cousins in case of need, as much as in me lies, and not to attempt anything against the honour of their families. I consent, and wish, if I perjure myself, that my body may be cut in pieces, then burnt, and my ashes scattered to the wind, in order that my name may be held up to the execration of the Good Cousins throughout the earth. So help me God.

GR. M. Lead him into the middle of the ranks (this is done). What do you wish? The Master of the Ceremonies suggests to the Pagan, to say Light.

GR. M. It will be granted to you by the blows of my axe.

The Grand Master strikes with the axe—this action is repeated by all the apprentices—the bandage is removed from the eye of the Pagan—the Grand Master and the Good Cousins hold their axes raised.

GR. M. These axes will surely put you to death, if you become perjured. On the other hand, they will all strike in your defence, when you need them, and if you remain faithful. (To the Master of the Ceremonies.) Bring him near the Throne, and make him kneel.

GR. M. Repeat your oath to me, and swear to observe exactly the private institutions of this respectable Vendita.

THE CANDIDATE. I ratify it and swear.

GR. M. Holding the specimen of wood in his left hand, and suspending the axe over the head of the candidate with his right, says, To the great and divine Grand Master of the universe, and to St. Theobald, our protector—In the name and under the auspices of the Supreme Vendita of Naples, and in virtue of the power which has been conferred upon me in this respectable Vendita, I make, name and create you an apprentice Carbonaro.

The Grand Master strikes the specimen which is held over the Apprentice's head, thrice; he then causes him to rise, and instructs him in the sacred words and touch.

GR. M. Master of the Ceremonies, let him be acknowledged by the apprentices.

The Assistants anticipate the execution of this order, by saying to the Grand Master, All is according to rule, just and perfect.

GR. M. Assistant tell the respective orders to acknowledge, henceforth, the Good Cousin N. N. as an active member of this Vendita, [&c., &c.]

The Symbolical Picture is explained to the new apprentice.

GR. M. At what hour do the Carbonari terminate their sacred labours.

FIRST ASSISTANT. As soon as the Sun no longer enlightens our forest.

GR. M. What hour is it?

SECOND ASSISTANT. The Sun no longer enlightens our forest.

GR. M. Good Cousins, as the Sun no longer enlightens our forest, it is my intention to terminate our sacred labours. First, let us make a triple salutation (Vantaggio), to our Grand Master, divine and human, (Jesus Christ.)—To St. Theobald, our protector, who has assisted us and preserved us from the eyes of the pagans—Order! To me, &c. The sign and salutation (Vantaggi) are performed.

GR. M. I declare the labours ended; retire to your Baracche—retire in peace.

THE ILLUSTRIOUS BRO. EMRA HOLMES, AND "UNITED ORDERS OF THE TEMPLE AND HOSPITAL."

As our worthy Bro. Holmes has before him a series of interesting and valuable articles by the Masonic Scholar "Lupus," and will require space in The Freemason to state his views of the question, now that it has been so clearly put, it is not my intention for the present to review the history. However ably Bro. Holmes has treated the subject, and I frankly admit on many subjects he has done well, and is entitled to our best thanks, yet there is a grave fault in the "Notes" throughout, viz. the claiming the Masonic Knights Templars, and Knights of Malta, to be the descendants of the original Orders. It is to this point my remarks will tend, when an opportunity is afforded me of saying a few words, but of course if Bro. Holmes withdraws his claim, and simply alludes to Grand Conclave as of Masonic origin, the discussion will be at an end, and will require no observations from yours fraternally, W. J. HUGHAN.

BRO. LUPUS.

I am obliged to Bro. Lupus for his explanation, though I had not in any way sought to interfere in the discussion between him and Bro. Emra Holmes.

I agree with him. I do not see why Bro. Emra Holmes brought the Knights of St. John into the discussion, as the question really was and still is, "are the Masonic Knights Templar the legitimate and historical descendants of the famous Order of the Temple?"

Bro. Emra Holmes states that he believes they are, and endeavours to prove that the Knights of the Hospital were duly constituted in this country in direct succession, through the English langue, though I observe, he has not so far supplied the many links still wanting to unite in any way the Masonic Knights Templar with the Chivalry of the Temple!

Bro. Lupus's clear explanatory notes place before us the disposition of the English langue of the Hospital in this country.

Though Bro. Lupus does not say so, he seems by implication to believe that the langue to which he alludes, in the documents he has seen and verified, is a lineal descendant of the old English langue of St. John of Jerusalem. But I would respectfully ask his careful attention to one or two patent historical difficulties, as it seems to me.

Supposing we admit the Conventions of 1826 and 1827 to be what they profess to be, how can they be said to re-constitute the English langue?

Was the English langue an original langue of the "Hospitallers of Jerusalem?" Was it not only a mediety?

How could any conventions in Paris, in 1826, deal only with a specified langue? or the mediety of a langue? Under what authority did they act?

Could any power call together the Knights of St. John, except the power by whom the original institution was created, or by which it was sanctioned, and under which it would remain, in its dormant state? How does the acknowledgement of the Secretary General of the French langue, affect the question? These are points to be considered carefully by so acute a debater as Bro. Lupus, and so able a brother, and on their solution, a great deal turns.

If this re-constitution in 1826, was "ultra vires," I confess it seems to me, the "quæstio," altogether cedit.

If on the other hand, all was in due order "et plenâ potestate," then, Bro. Lupus may claim a historic connection for the present langue, with the old order. It will however require much proof, and one or two very important considerations seem to be entirely overlooked.

I am much obliged to Bro. Lupus, for his information about Sir R. Peat, but I confess I do not understand the proceedings before Lord Denman—why he administered such an oath to Sir R. Peat, or why Sir R. Peat took it, or what he gained by doing so.

Perhaps Bro. Lupus will throw a little further light on the matter. Up to the present time, no proof has been brought forward that there was a "secreta receptio," in the Hospital, though it has been said there was.

It is however quite clear that there was a Templar "secreta receptio."

A MASONIC STUDENT.

NOTES ON THE TEMPLE AND HOSPITAL.

In the next issue of The Freemason I propose to give my reply to "A Masonic Student" and "Lupus," and for the information of your readers I shall publish an important document from the head quarters of the Order of St. John at Rome, repudiating the claims of the Protestant Order of St. John under the Duke of Manchester, which will prove my assertion that the said Manchesterian body have no more right to the title they assume than we of the Masonic body.

EMRA HOLMES.

OLD MASONIC BOOKS.

Finding that my first communication has produced an interesting reply from Bro. W. J. Hughan, I am induced to send a few more "Notes" on the same subject. With regard to Pritchard, my copy was lent some years ago, and unfortunately not returned to me, but I am trying to discover it.

If it is the 1730 edition, I will communicate with Bro. Hughan.

The first old book I wish to mention, is a French History of Freemasonry, entitled "Histoire des Francs Maçons," in two volumes, of which the first is published "à l'Orient, chez G. de l'Etoile, entre l'Equerrie et le Compas, vis à vis le soleil couchant," 1745.

The "Tome Second," is published at the same place, with same description, 1746.

I do not profess to say that there is anything very important or striking, or even novel in these volumes, as for the most part their general history is a recapitulation of ours, as taken from Anderson, and their particular history is confined to the "Statuts et Reglemens des Francs Maçons" contained in a "Discours" delivered "par le Grand Maître des Francs Maçons," de France dans la Grand Loge, assemblée solennellement à Paris, l'an de la Franche Maçonnerie cinq mille sept cent quarante." 1740. The first volume contains however, more than one interesting historical essay and the translation of our "Regulations" of 1721.

The second volume contains principally apologies for the Order, both in poetry and prose, some of a high order of merit, and an interesting collection of "Chansons des Francs Maçons, en usage dans les loges, et hors des loges."

The book is now somewhat rare.

The second book to which I would call attention is a curious old book, published at Amsterdam, 1745, called "Les Secrets de l'Ordre des Francs Maçons. Devoilés et mis au jour, par Monsieur P."

This is composed of two parts, making 198 pages, with two very interesting prints.

Like all other attacks on our Order it is most inconsistent in itself, and the writer at the outset proclaims himself unworthy of credit.

Bound up with this attack is "Le Secret de la Société des Mopses," (Lady Freemasons,) by the same well-informed Mr. P., together with the Chansons of the Freemasons and the music of those days. The volume, valuable as it is, finishes with a very curious pamphlet of 444 pages, published also at Amsterdam, 1747, and entitled "Les Francsmaçons ecrasés, suite du livre intitulé, l'Ordre des Francs Maçons trahi. Traduit du Latin.

Where the Latin original of so serious an attack on Freemasonry exists, if it ever existed, I know not, but it is comforting for us to feel, that, notwithstanding such a declaration, Freemasonry still survives!

3. The third book I wish to call attention to is a little and valuable collection, in MS., of five songs, the date of the MS. is about 1772, as it names Lord Petre and "Kelly," about whom some Irish brother may kindly tell us. Lord Petre was appointed G.M., May 4th, 1772.

The five songs are, the "Master's Song," "Fellow Craft's Song," "Hail Masonry, &c.," "The Entered Apprentice's Song," a fourth song beginning "Here's a Health to each one," and a fifth song beginning "Ye thrice happy few," and the chorus, "Like Pillars we stand."

The peculiarity of the little MS. is, that it is in a very neat and striking handwriting, which perhaps may yet be recognised.

4. It may interest some members of the Masonic Knights Templars, to know that I have in my possession a very interesting copy of a work entitled, "The Preceptory of the Temple at London," of date 1850, which contains "the Officers of the Temple at London, with abstracts of the history of the Order, of its preservation in Scotland, and of the Rules of the Preceptory, with the roll of its members."

"The Preceptory of London" is said to have been instituted by charter from the Grand Master, March 11th, MDCCCLVII.

I mention this book, though of so recent a date, because it was privately printed, and is not generally known.

The history of the Templars is very well written, and abounds with curious details.

5. Lastly, I am anxious to call attention to a very old and curious copy of the "Ordonnances des Chevaliers et voyageurs au Sanct Sepulchre de Hierusalem. Outre mer. 1573.

These profess to be Ordonnances of date 1260.

I hope that my budget is not too long, and that my communications may draw forth others.

Microscopical investigation has proved that the substances which accumulate between the teeth contain animal and vegetable parasites, and that the tooth powders, pastes, and washes in general use have no effect upon these. STATUS OF PAST MASTERS.

To the Editor of The Freemason.

Dear Sir and Brother,—

Pray allow me space in your next impression of The Freemason to thank "An Old P.M." for his prompt reply to my letter of last week. Would he kindly add to the obligation already conferred by stating whether an Irish or Scotch P.M. could, in the absence of the W.M. and all other English P.M.'s, take the chair.

Yours fraternally,

A NORTH COUNTRY MASON.

IMMEDIATE PAST MASTERS.

To the Editor of The Freemason.

Dear Sir and Brother,—

I have to thank the brethren who have with such courtesy answered my queries. The one with reference to my own immediate duties I am told by the worthy brother and Past Master who raised the question, he based on the working he uses, which at the end of raising intimates that on the candidate's return to the lodge "the J. W." will direct his attention to the tracing board. Other brethren, however, tell me that it is the Master's duty to deliver all three explanations or lectures on the tracing board, but that he may depute that duty to any competent brother. In any case, I hold that giving the explanation of the first tracing board on an evening when there was no business before the lodge, by consent, and at the request of the W.M., I was not out of order, and that "it is very desirable the Wardens should be invited to lecture," seeing first their hope of one day attaining the chair, and their responsibilities in the absence of the Master.

Upon the other point I agree with the courteous and encouraging brother, whom I have just quoted, in the Book of Constitutions, being revised from time to time to meet cases of the kind which has arisen in our midst, in a fraternal manner, but we know no brother cares to hold a position which is questioned. As I understood it, Grand Secretary, on being appealed to held that a brother re-elected as W.M. need not be reinstated. The 2nd clause, however, in the Book of Constitutions, under the heading "Private Lodges," rules that "every lodge shall annually elect its Master, and at the next meeting after his election he shall be duly installed," &c.; and this having been pointed out, Grand Secretary replied, "I think that when a W.M. is re-elected, his I.P.M. would continue to retain his position until the Master vacated the chair; in fact, no other brother comes between the I.P.M. and the chair to supply his place. Bro. ——— being re-elected, my opinion is that C.D. as I.P.M. should be again invested." It will be seen that this opinion coincides with those given by your correspondents of last week. Nevertheless, an experienced and much respected Past Master in our midst still contends that as the Worshipful Master necessarily left his chair to be re-installed, the fact of his having so left it, made him the immediate Past Master for the year he had just served—that therefore C.D. was no longer entitled to occupy the seat on the left of the chair which he had held for twelve months, but that it should be taken by the Senior Past Master present in the lodge. C.D. being the junior or youngest Past Master, and therefore not called upon to occupy the position in presence of his senior in the office. This, I hope, both makes my meaning clear to your correspondent "P. M.," and places the controversy plainly before many brethren who take sufficient interest in it to pass their opinion thereon.

Fraternally yours,

A YOUNG J.W.

"THAT BRIGHT MORNING STAR."

To the Editor of The Freemason.

Dear Sir and Brother,—

I have been so situated that I did not receive The Freemason of January 25th till yesterday, or I should have endeavoured to reply to several of your correspondents at an earlier period, so as to obtain insertion in your number of to-day. Perhaps a few lines even now will not be out of place, as I am a M.M. & twenty-five years' standing, and have twice filled the chair of W.M. in different lodges, the first occasion being twenty-two years ago. I profess to work implicitly according to the standard of the Emulation Lodge of Instruction, as acquired in an early part of my Masonic career, and was there instructed to use the words "peace and salvation," not "tranquility." In reference to the inquiry of "A Young J.W.," I reply that I have always thought that, when a W.M. is re-elected, his I.P.M. continues also to hold his position for two years. It is manifest that he cannot himself fill both offices. As to the latter inquiry, in reference to the lectures, I can hardly say how I formed my impressions, probably from the practice in my district, confirmed by my own judgment, but my teaching has been this; The explanation of the working tools in all three degrees may be given by either of the Wardens; the charges by the Chaplain, if present, and if not, by the W.M. or a P.M.; the lectures by the W.M. or a P.M., though failing these, I have allowed them to be given by a Warden. A little consideration will, I think, commend this as a suitable division of labour, in the absence of any specific legislation on the subject.

As to the status of Past Masters, the first ten years of my Masonic career were passed in the Province in which I was initiated, where I attained the rank of P.G.S.W. I then changed my residence, and spent nearly ten years in another Province, there forming a new lodge, and being its first W.M. I then removed to a third Province, in which I have now been more than five years. On one occasion, soon after coming hither, I received a letter from the W.M. of the lodge I had joined, stating that he could not attend one of the meetings, and asking me to take his place. I showed the letter to the I.P.M., who expressed a wish that I should comply with the request. After the lodge was opened, I read the letter to the members, and offered the chair to the P.M.'s and Wardens, as I am not a P.M. of the lodge, but all declined to take it. I had, therefore, no alternative, and proceeded with the work. A report of the meeting was sent to your late contemporary, and in a day or two after its publication I received a letter from the Prov. G.M., informing me that I had acted wrongly, and forbidding me to take the chair in any lodge in his Province, until duly authorised by becoming W.M. of one in it. The propriety of this dictum I disputed, of course, with all respect and courtesy, and the matter was under discussion for nearly a year. The result was that my view was confirmed, and restrictions were removed. I am therefore a P.M. in, but not of the lodge, and am eligible to fill the chair, but all the P.M.'s of the lodge have precedence before me. Of course, though a member of the Prov. Grand Lodge in which I held office, I have no status or vote in the one under whose jurisdiction I am now located.

As regards the place of Chaplain and Past Chaplains, it will be observed that the S.D. is at or near the right of the W.M., the Chaplains coming between them, which is provided for by the insertion of the word near.

A question was asked as to the position of Scotch or Irish Past Masters. I conceive that they should be on the left of the W.M., after the Past Masters of the lodge. They are not entitled to take the chair under our jurisdiction until they have been Wardens in an English lodge for a year, and have been installed as W.M.'s

I think it would be well if these and many other doubtful matters were defined by the Book of Constitutions.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT AND PILLS:—Life may be blessed with the enjoyment of health through these curatives. To live is one thing, to enjoy life is a far superior state. What avails all our wealth when sickness screens our view? Health and poverty are preferable to riches with infirmity. Few men would be so foolish as to barter health for wealth. The poorest can secure the former by a trifling investment in these noble medicaments. Be the mischief external or internal, slight or malignant, the patient may rest assured that the proper use of Holloway's Ointment and Pills will speedily mitigate and expel his malady. The very continuance of life depends on sound healthy blood, which these remedies secure. —ADVERT.

BRITISH, FOREIGN, AND COLONIAL.

THE INSTALLATION OF R.W.P.G.M. FOR WEST LANCASHIRE.—Probably the largest and most imposing Masonic assembly of the brethren within the division of West Lancashire will take place in Liverpool on the 27th inst., when Bro. the Right Hon. Lord Skelmersdale will be formally installed as the Right Worshipful Provincial Grand Master for West Lancashire. The appointment has given the most unbounded satisfaction amongst the brethren in the province, and therefore it is expected that lodges, even from the most distant part of the province, will be present to do honour to the new Masonic chief. Bro. his Worship the Mayor of Liverpool, (Mr. E. Samuelson), has most kindly granted the splendid suite of rooms at the Town Hall for the occasion, and this will give a town's importance to the ceremony. It is not yet known who will perform the ceremony of installation.

CENTRAL INDIA.—Colonel Farquharson, S.W., has been elected W.M. of the Lodge of St. Paul, Mhow, for the ensuing year. The installation took place on St. John's Day, Dec. 27th, when some 40 brethren sat down to the banquet.

The General Committee of the Royal Masonic Institution for Girls met at Freemasons' Hall, on Thursday, January 30th. After the transaction of routine business the Committee proceeded to the election of a clerk in the Secretary's office, with the following result, Mr. H. W. Durnford Green, 13; Mr. Francis R. W. Hedges, 42; Mr. George Knill, 28. Mr. Hedges was declared duly elected, and the Committee adjourned especially to Saturday, 15th February, at 3. p.m.

We understand that Bro. Captain Turner, P.M. and P.Z. 86, 826, &c., will again be nominated for the Provincial Grand Treasurer ship, to which it will be recollected, Bro. Armstrong, then P.P.G.D. was elected by a majority of six out of 146 votes at the last Annual Provincial Meeting for West Lancashire.

At the usual meeting of the members of the Strong Man Lodge of Instruction, held last Monday, at Bro. Wickens's, St. John's Gate Clerkenwell, Bro. Beckett in the chair, the ceremony of installation was most efficiently performed by the W.M., who afterwards gave further proof of his great knowledge of Freemasonry by working for the instruction of the brethren, the 1st, 2nd, 3rd, 4th, and 5th sections of the first lecture. The Brethren passed a vote of thanks to Bro. Beckett for his capital working. Bro. Beckett was most ably supported in the ceremony by Bros. Hanes, W.M. elect, Morrison, S.W.; Owens, J.W.; Griffith, S.D.; Tickle, J.D. and Bros. Shepperd, West, Foxcroft, and others.

A Lodge of Instruction has been opened at the Maismore Arms, Park-road, Peckham, under the preceptorship of Bro. Rose, P.M. of the Mount Lebanon Lodge, No. 73, to meet at the above named tavern, at eight o'clock in the evening on the first and third Monday of every month, for the purpose of working the installation ceremony.

CITY OF LONDON MASONIC LIFEBOAT.—A ball, in aid of the City of London Masonic Lifeboat Fund, was held last night, at the Long Tavern. The company numbered about 200 and included the Right Hon. the Lord Mayor, the Lady Mayoress, and Miss Waterlow, Sheriff Perkins, and Mr. Under-Sheriff Cross. Shapcott's band was in attendance, and dancing was kept up till an early hour in the morning. An excellent supper was provided under the superintendence of Mr. Whitfield. The principal M.C. was Bro. T. Meekhan. City Press, Jan. 25.

CONSECRATION OF THE ERA LODGE

No. 1423.

The fifth lodge since the formation of the Province (in addition to the "Bard of Avon" Lodge transferred from another Province) was consecrated on Saturday, 1st inst., at the King's Arms Hotel, Hampton Court.

The important ceremonies of the consecration and installation were rendered in a faultless, correct and impressive manner by the Provincial Grand Secretary, Bro. Robert Wentworth Little, P.M. (Secretary to the Royal Masonic Institution for Girls) which were fully appreciated by all present as great Masonic treats.

The programme (a lengthy one) was carried out in its entirety. The lodge was opened at the appointed hour, Bro. R. W. Little appointing as his officers Bros. S. Rosenthal, P.G.S.W. Middlesex as S.W.; W. Smeed, P.G.J.W. as J.W.; F. Walters, P.M. 1309, as Secretary; R. Limpus, S.D. 1309, Organist; G. Kenning, P.P.G.S.D. Middlesex, P.M. 192, as D.C. (which position he efficiently filled), R. T. Elsam, W.M. 889, as I.G.; J. Gilbert, P.G. Tyler Middlesex, as Tyler.

The entire ceremony of the consecration was admirably given and greatly improved by the beautiful music and singing of Bros. R. Limpus, G. Musgrave, F. Gilby, and H. D. Martin.

After the consecration came the installation of Bro. J. T. Moss, P.G.S.D. Middlesex, as the first W.M., he being a P.M. of 169, P.M. and W.M. of 1326.

The ceremony was somewhat curtailed, but was none the less interesting.

The newly installed W.M. appointed and invested the following as his officers:—Bros. H. A. Dubois, S.W.; J. W. Baldwin, J.W.; T. J. Sabine, P.M., 73, (being unanimously elected) Treasurer; F. Walters, P.M., Sec. 73, Secretary; E. H. Thiellay, S.D.; J. S. Sweasey, J.D.; J. Baxter Langley, I.G.; E. W. Mackney, W.M. 134, Organist; H. Keeble, W.M. 1275, D.C.; H. Cutress, W.S.; J. Gilbert, Tyler.

The ceremony being concluded the following resolutions were unanimously carried, namely—That Brother Col. Francis Burdett, P.G.M. Middlesex, be elected the first honorary member of the lodge, which he was pleased to honour the lodge by accepting. That a vote of thanks be given and the same be entered on the lodge minute book to Bro. R. W. Little for his kindness in performing the ceremonies of consecration and installation which had been so correctly and forcibly rendered. Also that he be elected an honorary Member of the lodge. That a vote of thanks be given, and be entered on the lodge minute book to the brethren who had rendered such efficient services to the lodge at the ceremony of consecration, viz:—Brothers Rosenthal, Smeed, Kenning, Elsam, Limpus, Musgrave, Gilby. These votes were duly acknowledged and were well appreciated.

The Secretary, Bro. F. Walters, solicited some member to represent the lodge as its Steward at the forthcoming festival of the Royal Masonic Institution for Girls. But as the W.M., S.W., J.W., Treasurer, S.D., I.G., D.C. and W.S., had already been appointed by their several lodges to represent them, it left but few to select from. However, the choice was soon made by electing Bro. J. S. Sweasey, J.D., to that honourable position. Bro. Sweasey, in an appropriate speech, acknowledged the compliment paid him, and expressed the pleasure he would feel in accepting it. The Secretary, Bro. F. Walters, announced he had a member's name (who however was prevented from attending) who would feel it an honour to represent the lodge both at the festivals of the Royal Masonic Benevolent Institution and the Royal Masonic Institution for Boys. It was arranged to let that business stand over until the next lodge-night.

A large number of propositions for joining members and candidates for initiation was handed to the Secretary. The lodge was then closed. It was arranged to meet on Saturday, 8th February, at four o'clock p.m.

Amongst a large number of visitors besides those named were.—Bros. W. Hammond, P.M. 1; R. Lawrence, 1326; J. H. Spencer, 73; W. Seyfang, 1076; and others.

A good banquet and dessert were served.

CROSBY'S BALSAMIC COUGH ELIXIR.

DISEASES OF THE LUNGS AND AIR-VESSELS.

CROSBY'S BALSAMIC COUGH ELIXIR.

Opiates, Narcotics, and Squills are too often invoked to give relief in Coughs, Colds, and all Pulmonary diseases. Instead of such fallacious remedies, which yield momentary relief at the expense of enfeebling the digestive organs, and thus increasing that debility which lies at the root of the malady, modern science points to CROSBY'S BALSAMIC COUGH ELIXIR as the true remedy.

SELECT TESTIMONIAL.
Dr. Rooke, Scarborough, author of the "Anti-Lancet," says: "I have repeatedly observed how very rapidly and invariably it subdued cough, pain, and irritation of the chest in cases of Pulmonary Consumption, and I can, with the greatest confidence, recommend it as a most valuable adjunct to an otherwise strengthening treatment for this disease."
This medicine, which is free from opium and squills, not only allays the local irritation, but improves digestion and strengthens the constitution. Hence it is used with the most signal success in Asthma, Bronchitis, Consumption, Coughs, Influenza, Night Sweats of Consumption, Quinsey, and all affections of the throat and chest. Sold in bottles at 1s. 6d., 4s. 6d., and 11s. each, by all respectable Chemists, and wholesale by Jas. M. Crosby, Chemist, Scarborough.
* * * Invands should read Crosby's Prize Treatise on "Diseases of the Lungs and Air-Vessels," a copy of which can be had Gratis of all Chemists.

YOUNG'S ARNICATED CORN AND BUNION PLAISTERS are the best ever invented for giving immediate ease, and removing those painful excrescences. Price 6d. and 1s. per box. May be had of most chemists.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE.

THE ORIGINAL AND ONLY GENUINE.

CHLORODYNE is admitted by the Profession to be the most wonderful and valuable remedy ever discovered. CHLORODYNE is the best remedy known for Coughs, Consumption, Bronchitis, Asthma. CHLORODYNE effectually checks and arrests those too often fatal diseases—Diphtheria, Fever, Croup, Ague. CHLORODYNE acts like a charm in Diarrhoea, and is the only specific in Cholera and Dysentery. CHLORODYNE effectually cuts short all attacks of Epilepsy, Hysteria, Palpitation and Spasms. CHLORODYNE is the only palliative in Neuralgia, Rheumatism, Gout, Cancer, Toothache, Meningitis, &c.

From Lord FRANCIS CONYNNGHAM, Mount Charles, Donegal, 11th December, 1868.

"Lord Francis Conyngham, who this time last year bought some of Dr. J. Collis Browne's Chlorodyne from Mr. Davenport, and has found it a most wonderful medicine, will be glad to have half a dozen bottles sent at once to the above address.

"Earl Russel communicated to the College of Physicians that he had received a dispatch from Her Majesty's Consul at Manila, to the effect that Cholera had been raging fearfully, and that the ONLY remedy of any service was CHLORODYNE."—See Lancet, Dec. 1, 1864.

From W. VENSALIUS PETTIGREW, M.D., Hon. F.R.C.S. England;

Formerly Lecturer on Anatomy and Physiology at St. George's School of Medicine.

"I have no hesitation in stating, after a fair trial of Chlorodyne, that I have never met with any medicine so efficacious as an Anti-spasmodic and Sedative. I have used it in Consumption, Asthma, Diarrhoea, and other diseases, and am most perfectly satisfied with the results."

From Dr. THOMAS SANDIFORD, Passage West, Cork.

"I will thank you to send me a further supply of Chlorodyne. It was the most efficacious remedy I ever used, affording relief in violent attacks of Spasms within a minute after being taken. One patient in particular, who had suffered for years with periodical attacks of Spasms of a most painful nature, and unable to obtain relief from other remedies, such as Opium, &c., finds nothing so prompt and efficacious as Chlorodyne."

From J. M'GRGOR CROFT, M.D., M.R.C.P. London, late Staff Surgeon to H.M.F.

"Sir,—After prescribing Dr. J. Collis Browne's Chlorodyne for the last three years in severe cases of Neuralgia and Tic-Doloureux, I feel that I am in a position to testify to its valuable effects. Really, in some cases it acts like a charm, when all other means had failed. Without being asked for this report, I must come forward and state my candid opinion that it is a most valuable medicine, and I have recommended several Chemists in this neighbourhood not to be without it for prescriptions."

From Jno. E. GOULSTONE, M.D., late Principal Surgeon to the Steamship "Great Eastern."

"I can confidently state that Chlorodyne is an admirable Sedative and Anti-Spasmodic, having used it in Neuralgia, Hysteria, Asthma, and Consumption, with remarkably favourable results. It relieved a fit of Asthma in four minutes, where the patient had suffered eleven years in a most distressing manner, no previous remedy having had so immediate and beneficial an effect."

From Dr. B. J. BOUTON, and Co., Horncastle.

"We have made pretty extensive use of Chlorodyne in our practice lately, and look upon it as an excellent direct Sedative and Anti-spasmodic. It seems to allay pain and irritation, in whatever organ and from whatever cause. It induces a feeling of comfort and quietude not obtainable by any other remedy, and it seems to possess this great advantage over all other sedatives, that it leaves no unpleasant after effects."

J. C. BAKER, Esq., M.D., Bideford.

"It is, without doubt, the most valuable and certain Anodyne we have."

CAUTION.—BEWARE OF PIRACY AND IMITATIONS.

CAUTION.—Vice-Chancellor Sir W. Page Wood stated that Dr. J. Collis Browne was undoubtedly the Inventor of CHLORODYNE; that the story of the defendant, Freeman, was deliberately untrue, which, he regretted to say, had been sworn to.—See Times, 13th July, 1864.

Sold in Bottles at 1/12, 2/9, 4/6, and 11/0 each. None is genuine without the words "Dr. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE" on the Government Stamp. Overwhelming Medical Testimony accompanies each Bottle.

SUCCESS THE INDEX OF MERIT.

ALLCOCK'S POROUS PLASTERS.

The public are informed that these celebrated Plasters have been established twenty-seven years. Patented U.S., 1845. It is supposed and claimed that they restore the of the part where applied, by which pain and diseased actions cease. But we really know little on this subject, because the properties of medical agents can only be known by experience, and this has taught that whenever Allcock's Porous Plasters are applied they do good, often restoring the withered hand, removing the unsightly lump, lengthening the shorter leg, and restoring the lame to walk. But read our testimonials, and if you have a weak spot in your body, try a plaster; the cost is small,

BEING TWENTY-SEVEN HALFPENCE ONLY.

No doubt they impart all

to the system needed. We believe this because they have made greater cures than were ever achieved by the most costly applications.

WHERE ONE WAS SOLD A YEAR AGO A THOUSAND ARE SOLD NOW.

They strengthen, warm, and invigorate the part upon which they are applied, and relieve nervous affections of the bowels, lumbago, pains of the side, and usually, all local pain. In affections of the kidneys they are of great service.

LUMBAGO.

"To Messrs. Allcock & Co, Liverpool.

"Manor-road, Folkestone, July 6, 1872.

Gentlemen,—Some months ago I suffered severely from lumbago, and could not walk without much pain and difficulty. One day I met a friend, General ———, who advised me to try one of Allcock's Porous Plasters, adding, 'I have one on me at this moment, which has wholly removed an affection similar to the one from which you are suffering.' I had really never before heard of the plasters, but was so struck with what I heard that I immediately procured one and put it on. I found almost instantaneous relief; the pain and stiffness were gone in an hour, and have never since returned. I may add that several friends, including an eminent physician, laughed at my account of my cure; more than one of them, however, including that physician, have owned to me since that, in consequence of my statement, they have resorted to Allcock's Porous Plasters when suffering in various ways, and have in every instance found relief. A lady of my acquaintance, who heard from me of these plasters, has tried them with wonderful effect among the suffering poor. She finds the demand for them so great that she wrote to you to ask at what rate you could supply her with plasters for the poor. In answering her question you kindly sent her a supply for gratuitous distribution. To thank you in my own name, and in behalf of my friends and of the poor, I feel it a duty and a pleasure to send you these few lines, of which you may make any use you please."

J. H. WOODWARD.

VOLUNTARY AND IMPORTANT TESTIMONIALS.

"Sir,—I have myself proved the efficacy of your plasters, but to-day a well-known clergyman, in the course of conversation, asked me if I knew anything of 'Allcock's Porous Plasters.' I replied, 'O yes, we sell them largely; I have just ordered £50 worth of them.' 'Well,' he said, 'they are invaluable. I give them to nearly all my poor parishoners for all sorts of complaints—rheumatism, lumbago, colds, bronchitis, &c. I also use them in my own family, and recommend them to my friends. My wife was suffering from bronchial disturbance, but was quickly relieved by Allcock's Plaster. One case of cure was almost amusing. A person had been suffering a long time from dreadful pain at the pit of the stomach, and had spent I don't know how much in trying to get cured, but in vain. I gave him one of Allcock's Plasters, and it cured him in a quarter of an hour. He spoke so enthusiastically about the plasters that I asked him to allow his statement to be made public. As he consented, I give you his name—viz., Rev. G. COMYNS, Vicar of Sidbury, Devonshire.

"I forward you this with pleasure, knowing it will have weight with the public, especially in the southern counties of England."

With compliments,

EDWIN J. ORCHARD.

Letter from the REV. THOS. BONSALL, M.A., as to Qualities and Reputation of Brandreth's Pills and Allcock's Plasters.

"Wisset Vicarage, near Halesworth, Suffolk, July 29, 1872.

'H. D. BRANDRETH, Esq., Liverpool.

"My Dear Sir,—Please forward me some Brandreth's Pills and Porous Plasters to amount of enclosure. I may here state I have been in the habit, for the last thirty-seven years, of administering these remedies to the sick with great success. I have been well acquainted with Dr. B. Brandreth, of New York, for nearly forty years, and can certify that he gives constant employment to upwards of one hundred persons preparing these commodities alone. Brandreth's Pills and Allcock's Porous Plasters are the household remedies of nearly every family in the United States and throughout South America. We all know that many persons take medicine when they do not need it. It is, therefore, of importance that the medicine should be incapable of hurting. Now, I know Brandreth's Pills to be perfectly harmless from long experience of their effects. Yet, when the bowels or the blood need cleansing, they are a thoroughly energetic medicine, arousing all the interior organs to healthy action. In colds, colics, and costiveness, they give relief immediately, and those who use them will find them a safe and most reliable remedy.

"I am, yours truly,

THOMAS BONSALL,

"Late Curate of Linstead Magna and Parva, Suffolk."

Observe "D. Brandreth" on the Government Stamp, without which they cannot be genuine.

Barber, P.G.O.; S. Wright, S.W.; A. D. George, J.W.; W. Spalding, Secretary; F. C. Ord, R.A.; Capt. Saxton, R.A.; S. G. Fairtlough, R.A., P. Prov. S.G.D., Malta, &c.; Dr. Clarke, R.A.; H. Miller, I.G.; W. Bobby, P.M.; the Rev. T. G. Beaumont, the Rev. J. Tweed, and others. The lodge having been opened with the first degree, was raised to the third, when Bro. Sanderson having assumed the gavel raised Bro. Tweed to the sublime degree of a Master Mason. On resuming in the second, Bro. Ord was passed as an F.C., Bro. Cornell performing the ceremony, and on the lodge being closed down to the first, Mr. Benjamin Spurling, of Shortley, was initiated as an E.A.P. The labours of the evening having been brought to a close, the brethren sat down to an excellent repast, served in Bro. G. Spalding's best style. After the usual Masonic toasts had been given by the W.M., Bro. Emra Holmes brought forward the subject of a Masonic ball, and proposed that one should be held at Easter, under the auspices of the British Union Lodge. The motion was warmly seconded by Bro. Clement Cobbold, and was carried nem. con., but the brethren appearing somewhat apathetic in the matter, and the Prov. Grand Master, Sir Shafto Adair having expressed an opinion that it was unnecessary and unmasonic to ask for the names of lady patronesses, without whom Bro. Holmes felt it would be impossible to secure success, he withdrew his motion and the subject dropped. Much regret was expressed by some of the brethren that the matter should fall through. The party separated at a late hour.

LIVERPOOL.—Mariners' Lodge (No. 249).—By far the largest and most influential assembly in connection with this lodge which has ever been held, took place on Thursday evening, the 6th inst., at the Masonic Temple, Hope-street, when and where Bro. E. Hughes, the present esteemed W.M., took occasion to present the lodge with a handsome banner in commemoration of his year of office. The banner—on which is depicted an ancient Craft in full sail, supposed to be the first bearer of Freemasonry to this country—is a magnificent specimen of art—bold in its worked outlines, harmonious in its colours, and striking in the general effect—and was especially manufactured by Bro. G. Kenning, of London and Liverpool. The interest in the presentation of this banner was shown by an attendance of about 100 brethren, amongst whom were an unusually strong representation of leaders in the Craft. The lodge was opened in due form by Bros. Edwin Hughes, W.M.; who was supported by Bros. J. J. Rose, S.W.; J. Lloyd, J.W.; the Rev. P. Hains, C.; H. Pearson, P.M.; J. K. Smith, P.M., Treas.; R. Collings, Sec.; W. Crane,

P.M., D.C.; J. Hamer, P.M.; G. de la Perelle, P.M.; A. Humphreys, S.D.; J. Hayes, J.D.; C. Leighton, I.G.; H. N. Price, S.; R. Carter, S.; W. G. Veale, O.; W. H. Ball, Tyler; and others. Amongst the visitors were Bros. C. H. Hill, P.M., 724; J. Holland, W.M., 823; J. E. Jones, P.M., 724; J. Sellar, W.M., 1299; W. Shortis, W.M., 1325; S. J. McGeorge, P.M., 241; J. Beesley, W.M., 261; J. T. Callow, W.M.; 673; T. Ashmore, P.M., 823; J. M. Eccles, Sec., 1325; T. Fozzard, P.M., 1035; H. Nelson, P.M., 673; and others. After two brethren had been passed to the degree of F.C. and a substantial sum had been voted for charity, the W.M. (Bro. Hughes) proceeded to present the banner to the lodge. In doing so, he said he could not help expressing his heart-felt thanks for the very large amount of sympathy and help during the time he had occupied the chair of the Mariners' Lodge, and out of the fulness of his gratitude he felt there could not be a more appropriate gift, as a slight expression of his feelings, than the presentation of a banner. He must thank every brother for the support he had received from every brother of the Lodge in a position which had been the one great ambition of his life, and also for the kindness displayed in overlooking the many shortcomings of his work. The only stipulation he made was that his name should not be placard upon the banner, and that no alterations should be made in connection without his consent. Bro. Hamer, as the eldest P.M. of the lodge, accepted the handsome gift in the name of the members of the lodge, and thanked the W.M. for his gift. He trusted that banner would be handed down from generation to generation, and that it would long be cherished as a valuable gift from their W.M. Bro. Haines, Chaplain: May it brave a thousand years without being exposed either to the battle or the breeze.—After a most impressive consecration prayer by Bro. Haines, it was moved by Bro. P.M. Pearson, seconded by Bro. P.M. Smith, and unanimously agreed, to record a vote of thanks on the minutes to Brother E. Hughes, W.M., for his handsome gift to the lodge. The brethren subsequently sat down to an excellent repast, and a highly enjoyable evening was spent by the numerous brethren.

LEICESTER.—St. John's Lodge (No. 279).—The members of this lodge met at the Freemasons' Hall, on Wednesday the 5th inst., for the transaction of ordinary business. Bro. Clement Stretton, P.G.W., W.M., presiding; A. Palmer, S.W.; J. W. Smith, J.W.; W. Weare, P.M., Treasurer; J. M. McAllister, Secretary; G. W. Statham, S.D.; C. E. Stretton, J.D.; S. Tebbutt, Organist; S. Cleaver, Steward; L. A. Clarke, P.P.G.W.; L. L. Atwood, P.P.G.D.C.; George Toller, Junr., P.P.G.R.; S. S. Partridge, P.G.S.; R. Waite, P.M.; S. P. Ekin, P.M.; J. Adlard, J. T. Thorpe, Sec., 523; S. A. Wykes, 523; and others. The W.M. inaugurated his year of office by conferring upon Bro. G. K. Billings the sublime degree of Master Mason, in which ceremony he was assisted by Bro. Toller, P.P.G.R., whose impressive working evidenced his thorough understanding and appreciation of the true nature and design of Freemasonry. The W.M. intimated that George S. Widdowson had been admitted on the 24th ult. to the Royal Masonic Institution for Boys; and the sum of one hundred and fifty guineas for his admission had been paid to the proper authorities. Bro. Smith, J.W., who had kindly taken the boy to London, gave an interesting description of the Institution, its management, &c., and alluded in laudatory terms to the ability and fitness of the Head Master for his important charge. An appeal for relief was liberally responded to, and the names of two candidates for initiation were submitted for enquiry, unity and brotherly love pervaded the business of the meeting throughout, and as our W.M. has already passed with much satisfaction, that severe test—"the chair"—which is an important criterion of prudence, discretion, and judgment, we may safely anticipate a year of prosperity to the lodge.

BRIGHTON.—Royal York Lodge (No. 315).—The monthly meeting of this lodge took place on Tuesday, 4th inst., at the Pavilion Rooms, Brighton. The lodge was opened by the W. M., Bro. Dr. J. M. Cunningham, P.M., S.W., P.M., 916, P.Z., 916, P.P.G.S.W. Sussex, at 7 o'clock, P.M. The minutes of the previous meeting were read and confirmed. Letters from various correspondents were read and dealt with. Bro. Jones Eborall was unanimously elected to the chair of this old and flourishing lodge for the year 1873-4. The election of Treasurer resulted in Bro. Hugh Saunders, P.M. 315, P.P.G.D. Sussex, being unanimously chosen. Bro. Thos. Hughes was elected Tyler. Bro. W. Challen, P.M. 315 and 1141, P.Z., 732, P.P.G.S.B. Sussex, announced his intention to represent the lodge at the festival in aid of the Masonic Benevolent Institution, and made an earnest appeal in support of his list. The lodge was closed in perfect harmony, and the brethren adjourned to the Terminus Hotel, Queen's Road, Brighton (Bro. Pearson's) to supper. There were present during the evening, Bros. S. R. Ade, P.M.; Stride, I.P.M.; W. Marchant, P.M.; Sandman, Sec.; W. Challen, P.M.; Emery, Staples, Nell, J. Robinson, P.M., H. Payne, Hailey, Hawkes and several others.

STOURBRIDGE.—Lodge of Stability, (No. 564).—The brethren of this lodge celebrated the Festival of St. John in the commodious lodge-room at the Talbot Hotel, on Tuesday, 28th ult. There was a very numerous attendance, both of members and visitors. The lodge was opened punctually at 3 o'clock by the W.M., Bro. Healy, who, after the usual preliminary business had been transacted, initiated Mr. H. D'Arcy Ellis into the mysteries and privileges of Freemasonry in such a masterly manner as to almost make the brethren regret that that was the last ceremony he would perform as their W.M. The report of the Audit Committee was then presented, which showed the finances of the lodge to be in a most flourishing state, reflecting the greatest skill and ability of the Treasurer, who, in responding to the vote of thanks unanimously tendered to him for his services, drew the attention of the visitors especially to the beautiful tablets recently placed in the lodge-room on which are recorded the names of the Past Masters, and which were a present from Bro. Westwood, P.M., on the condition that the brethren would subscribe to make the W.M., for the time being a Vice-President of the Masonic Institution for Boys, an offer which was at once accepted and acted upon. The Lodge of Stability is the only one in Worcestershire in so proud a position; we trust the example may be speedily followed. The W.M. having vacated the chair, it was taken by Bros. Mansfield, P.P.S.G.W. and P.G. Treasurer, who, we believe, has, with only one exception, installed all the Masters of this lodge since its foundation. The W.M. Elect, Bro. E. T. Wright, having been duly presented, and taken the customary obligation, a Board of Installed Masters, at which twelve were present, was formed, and the new W.M. duly placed in the chair of K.S. The lodge being resumed, and the W.M. saluted in the three degrees, he proceeded to appoint his officers as follows:—Bro. Broomhall, S.W.; L. L. Campbell, J.W.; F. Perks, Secretary; C. Williams, S.D.; F. Fisher, J.D.; F. Foley, I.G.; F. Stringer, and B. Brooks, Stewards. Bro. Jones was unanimously re-elected Treasurer. This lodge being closed in harmony the brethren adjourned to a banquet.

DERBY.—Hartington Lodge (No. 1085).—This young and prosperous lodge held its seventh anniversary on Wednesday, the 5th inst., when the following Grand and Provincial Grand Officers and visiting brethren were among those present. Bro. Dr. Moore, Past Grand Sword Bearer of England and Standard Bearer to the Grand Chapter. Bros. Naylor, P.G.S.W.; Cox, P.P.G.S.W., P.G.T.; Bobart, P.P.G.S.W. Eastwood, P.P.G.R.; Marsden, P.G.S.; Iliffe, P.P.G.D.C.; Brentnall, P.P.G.S.D., W.M. 802; Waite, P.P.G.S of Works, W.M. 253 Worsnop, P.P.G.P., P.M. 1085; Hall, P.M. 47; Wharton, 47; Burn and Merry 731. The W.M., Bro. Webster, P.G.A.D.C., opened the lodge, and the minutes of the previous meeting were read and confirmed. The lodge was opened in the 2nd degree and Bro. Dr. Moore, P.G.S.B., of England (who had come specially from Lancaster for the purpose of installing his brother, James Mason Moore, a Master of the lodge) took the chair of King Solomon. The S.W., Bro. Moore, was presented to the Installing Master by Bros. Cox and Campion, and took the obligation of a W.M. elect. The lodge was opened in the third degree, and all below the rank of Installed Master retired. The W.M.E. was instructed with the pass-word and retired, and a Board of Installed Masters was opened. He was then re-admitted, and after being obligated was invested and installed, and entrusted with the secrets of an Installed Master. He was then proclaimed, and the Installed Masters (of whom there were thirteen present) saluted him as W.M. of the Lodge. He then invested Bro. Webster as I.P.M., and the Board was closed. The Master Masons were admitted and the Master proclaimed and saluted. The W.M. resumed the Lodge in the second and afterwards in the first degree, and was in each duly proclaimed and invested. He then invested his officers, and in doing so addressed a few words of praise or encouragement to each. The following were appointed officers: Bro. Webster, I.P.M.; Bemrose, S.W.; Radcliffe, J.W.; Bobart, P.M., Treasurer; Worsnop, P.M., Secretary; Eaton, S.D.; Pipes, J.D.; Shaw, M.C.; Dodd, Organist; Heathcote, I.G.; Stone, Tyler. After each officer had been invested, the Installing Master explained the symbolism of the jewel of their respective offices in a very appropriate and telling manner; that on the jewel of the Past Master attracted special attention. The W.M., Wardens and brethren were then addressed by the Installing Master on their respective duties, and after an enthusiastic vote of thanks to the Installing Officer, the lodge was closed in due form. The W.M.E. received letters from Bro. Kelley, Past Prov. Grand Master of Leicestershire and Rutland, and Bro. Toller, Past Prov. Grand Registrar of the same province, congratulating him on attaining the rank of W.M. and expressing their regret at being unable to be present at the installation. The brethren sat down to an excellent banquet, prepared by Bro. Plock, of the St. James's Hotel, and after the cloth was drawn, the usual loyal and Masonic toasts were given. Bro. Dr. Moore, as Past Grand Officer, responded in an eloquent and highly interesting speech to "The Health of the D.G.M. and Officers of the Grand Lodge." The Mayor of Derby, Bro. Smith, P.G.J.W. and W.M., 731, in acknowledging the toast of The Officers of the Provincial Grand Lodge, expressed his regret at being unable to be present at the Installation, but stated his official duties rendered it impossible for him to meet with brethren at an earlier hour. Bro. Marsden, P.G.S., also responded to the toast. The Health of the Visitors was acknowledged by Bro. Hall, P.M. 47, Wharton, 47, and other brethren. The ceremony of Installation was conducted throughout in the most correct and impressive manner by Bro. Dr. Moore, and both the visitors and members of the Lodge expressed themselves highly gratified at witnessing the excellent working of our talented brother, who had at considerable inconvenience travelled so far for the purpose of installing the W.M. of the Lodge. During the evening the energetic Manager of the Hotel, Bro. Plock, presented the Worshipful Master with a beautiful Masonic device. It was made of sugar and was about $\frac{1}{2}$ feet high by $1\frac{1}{2}$ feet broad. The design appears to have been taken from the Photograph of Masonic emblems published by Messrs. Stevens & Richardson. It is appropriately coloured and all the details are admirably worked out. The separate verses in the volume of the Sacred Law are easily distinguishable, as are also the distances marked on the 24-inch gauge, &c. The whole work reflects great credit on the artist, who is one of the staff belonging to the hotel. We understand it will be exhibited at the Masonic Ball, which will shortly be held at Derby.

LANCASTER—Rowley Lodge (No. 1051).—The regular meeting of this lodge was held at the Masonic Rooms, Athenæum, on Monday, 3rd February. The W.M., Rev. W.J. Lord Skelmersdale to the position of Prov. G. Master for West Lancashire. The traditional history of the degree of a Master Mason was then delivered to Bros. Longman and Sutton, it having been omitted, at the last meeting of the lodge, in consequence of want of time. The lecture on the tracing board of that degree was given by Bro. Moore, and the working tools presented by Bro. J. Hatch, P.M. 281. A candidate was proposed for initiation, and the lodge closed in due form.

Le Gros had laid under contribution all the resources of that well-known establishment, in order to give his brethren a magnificent banquet, and which gave unbounded satisfaction to all present.

Royal Arch.

KENDAL.—Kendal Castle Chapter (No. 129).—The annual and united festival of the Kendal Castle Chapter of Royal Arch Masons, and the Union Lodge of Craft Masons, was held at the Masonic Hall, Shamongate, on Thursday, January 30th. The Chapter was opened about one o'clock, for the purpose of exalting three brethren, and installing three Principals. There was a goodly attendance, and the duties of Installing Principal were ably performed by M. E. Comp. Mott, P.L., &c., assisted by M. E. Comps. Bowes, S. Gaweth, and Holme. On the completion of the business the Chapter was closed. The Craft Lodge was duly opened in solemn form according to ancient custom, about half-past three, when the minutes of the previous meeting were read and confirmed. The chair was occupied by the W.M., Bro. T. Wilson, who was supported by a large number of brethren. Bro. John Bowes, P.M., P. Prov. G. Reg. presented Bro. H. Ranthmell, the W.M. elect, for the benefit of installation, and after he had given adhesion to the ancient charges and regulations, and pledged himself to discharge his high and important duties aright, the chair was assumed by W. Bro. John Bowes, who conducted the ceremony of installation proper, and delivered the charges to the W.M., Wardens and brethren. The following officers were appointed and invested viz.—Bro. J. Bentley, S.W.; F. C. Grayson, J.W.; W. Doubleday, Treasurer; R. J. Nelson, Hon. Sec.; James Gooding, S.D.; H. J. Gibbon, J.D.; Eli Cox, Org.; Thos. Cooper, I. G.; Dan Cleary, Tyler. A vote of thanks was unanimously accorded to Bro. Bowes, for the impressive manner in which he rendered the beautiful ceremony of installation. The lodge was then closed, and the brethren adjourned to refreshment at the King's Arms Hotel, where a sumptuous banquet was excellently served. The chair was of course occupied by the newly-installed W.M., Bro. H. Ranthmell, who was supported right and left by the R.W. Bro. Colonel Whitwell, M.P.D.P.G.M., Bros. Edward Busher, P.G.S.B. of England, Henry Cook, P.P.G. Reg., Capt. Mott, Prov. S.G.W., John Bowes, P. Prov. G. Reg.; Henry Cartmell, P.M.; John Holme, P.M.; Dr. Noble, Dr. Leeming, Dr. Page (Kirkby Lonsdale), H. Dodd, P.M.P., Prov. G.D., and about fifty others. After dinner the usual loyal and patriotic toasts were duly honoured, introductory to those of a purely Masonic character. Excellent speeches were delivered by several of the brethren, and the health of the W.M. was most enthusiastically drunk on the proposition of R.W. Bro. Whitwell. The Masonic gatherings at Kendal are at all times popular, and the last one seems to have been no exception to the general rule, for we heard but one expression of opinion, and that altogether favourable.

LOUGHBOROUGH.—Charnwood Chapter (No. 1007).—The first meeting of this young chapter since the consecration, was held on Tuesday, the 11th inst., when the Right Hon. Earl Ferrers was installed in the chair of Z. The chapter was opened at 3 o'clock by Ex Comp. W. Kelly, Prov. G. Supt.; Ex Comp. Rev. W. Langley, Prov. G.P.S., and P.Z. of 1130; and Ex Comp. Weare, Prov. G. Standard Bearer, P.Z. 279. Lord Ferrers was then passed through the chairs of J. and H., and installed as first M.E.Z. of the Charnwood Chapter. Several exaltations of brethren of the Howe and Charnwood Lodge followed. Comp. Kelly, at the desire of the M.E.Z., taking the ceremonies and delivering the lectures; Corp. Amatt acted as Prin. Soj., and performed his duties very creditably. The following officers were elected.—Comps. Boughton Smith, Scribe E.; Dobell, Scribe N.; Amott, P.S. The bye-laws were received, and the chapter fairly launched upon what may be hoped will be a very prosperous career, as several brethren are ready for advancement at the next meeting, and the officers are very well up to their work, from the M.E.Z. to the Janitor. At the close of the chapter the Prov. G. Supt. invested Comp. Lord Ferrers with the collar of Prov. G.H. A vote of thanks was proposed by Ex Comp. Deane, seconded by the Prov. G. Supt., to Ex. Comps. Langley and Weare, for their attendance, at considerable inconvenience, for the installation of the M.E.Z., to which Comp. Langley briefly responded. The chapter was then closed, and a meeting of the Howe and Charnwood Lodge was held. We regret to state that Comp. the Rev. Dr. Hayercroft, D.D., Prov. G. Chaplain, is in a very critical estate.

Mark Masonry.

BRIGHTON.—Royal Sussex Lodge (No. 75).—The usual bi-monthly meeting of this lodge was held in the Masonic Rooms, Royal Pavilion, Brighton, on Tuesday, the 11th inst. The Lodge was opened by the W.M., Bro. John Robinson, and after the minutes of the previous meeting were read and confirmed, Bro. Foot was regularly introduced and advanced to the degree of a Mark Master Mason, the lecture of the degree being most impressively given by P.M. Bro. T. Cooke. The Treasurer of the lodge, Bro. J. Lockyer, was unanimously elected W.M. for the year ensuing, and Bro. George Emery unanimously elected Treasurer. A Past Master's jewel was voted to the out-going W.M., and several announcements of Masonic importance were made. This closed the business of the lodge, which was adjourned until the second Tuesday in March, which is installation night. The following members were in attendance:—Bro. T. Chandler; J. R. Lockyer, Treasurer; Bro. T. Sabine, 18°, P.M. 22, P.A.G. D. of C.; Bro. Murday, Bro. Foot, Bro. G. Emery, Bro. T. Cook, P.M., Bro. J. Ebberall, Bro. Lnight, Bro. J. N. Steuer, Bro. John Robinson, &c.

MACDONALD LODGE (No. 104).—This lodge met at the head-quarters of the First Surrey Rifles, at Camberwell, on Saturday, the 8th inst. In the unavoidable absence of the W.M., Bro. Charles Hammerton, Grand Steward, the chair of A. was occupied by the V.W. Bro. Thomas Meggy, P.G.O., who was supported by the V.W. Bro. James Stevens, P.G.O., and Provincial Grand Mark Secretary for Middlesex and Surrey; the W. Bro. Dr. Eugene Cronin, P.G.D.; the P.M.'s of the lodge; and also by Bros. A. Wolton, S.W.; W. Worrell, J.W.; Berridge, M.O.; White, S.O., Secretary; Drewett, I.G.; Ritherden, S.D.; O'Neill, J.D.; Cozens, Org.; and several other members. Bro. T. Y. Strachan, Provincial Grand Mark Secretary for Northumberland and Durham attended as visitor. The lodge having been duly opened, and previous minutes confirmed, ballots were taken for Bros. W. P. Collins, Sprague, Crammelin, and Basnet, which proving unanimous, they were severally introduced, and advanced into the honorable degree with full ceremonial, in accordance with the new ritual, and with musical service. The work was most ably conducted by the acting W.M. and his officers, and on the conclusion of the advancements the Lecture of the Degree was delivered by Bro. Stevens. The great improvement in the Ritual was manifested by the ease and smoothness with which each portion of the work was carried out by the respective officers, and Bro. Strachan subsequently informed the lodge that he felt assured that the alterations and additions, would meet with cordial approval by the lodges in his province. Notices of motion for consideration at next meeting were given, and, the wages having been duly paid, the lodge was closed in due form. The usual moderate supper followed business, and a pleasant hour or two was spent before separation.

ALNWICK.—Hotspur Lodge (No. 135).—At a regular meeting of the Hotspur Lodge of Mark Master Masons, held on the 15th ult., at the Masonic Hall, Alnwick, Brother Edward Thew Turnbull, banker, Alnwick, S.W. and Treasurer (P.P.G.I.G. Northumberland and Durham) was unanimously elected Worshipful Master. Brother Turnbull is also W.M. of the Alnwick Craft Lodge, 1167. Since he was proclaimed W.M. of 1167, at every meeting he has had the countenance and support of his fellows.

whilst, assisted by his officers, he has performed the duties pertaining to his high office thoroughly, and we are sure he will be equally well assisted and upheld by his brethren of the Hotspur. Brother the Rev. Edward Lawrence Marrett, M.A., Vicar of Lesbury and Alnmouth (P.P.G.C. and Prov. G.J.W. Northumberland and Durham) the present W.M. was elected treasurer.

IPSWICH.—Prudence Preceptory.—An emergency meeting of this old preceptory was held at the Masonic Hall, Ipswich, on Wednesday, the 5th inst., under dispensation from the Provincial Prior, Sir Knt. Capt. Phillips, for the purpose of proceeding to the election of a Preceptor in the room of Sir Knt. G. S. Golding, who was unanimously elected to that important office, but through ill-health had been compelled to retire. There were present Sir Knts. Emra Holmes, Grand Provost of England, Preceptor; the Rev. R. N. Sanderson, Provincial Sub-Prior, Acting 1st Capt.; Dr. Beaumont, R.N., 2nd Capt.; J. Pitcher, P.P.G. Capt., P.E.C.; G. S. Findley, P.E.S., Reg., Dr. Mills, P.E.C.; P. Cornell, Almoner, and others. The Preceptory having been opened and the muster roll called, the dispensation was read by the Preceptor, Sir Knt. Holmes, and the Sir Knights proceeded to ballot for a Preceptor for the ensuing year. Sir Knt. Dr. Beaumont, R.N., was unanimously elected to fill that high and important post. Sir Knt. Holmes then proceeded to read the circular on the "object and scope of the Convent General" (which has already appeared in our pages) and reminded the Sir Knights of the important alterations which now required that candidates should not only be R.A. Masons, but Master Masons of two years standing, that they should be unanimously elected, and approved by the Provincial Prior, previous to installation. No other business being entered on the agenda, the Preceptory was closed and the Sir Knights retired for refreshment.

ROCHDALE.—Albert Encampment.—The regular meeting of this encampment was held in the Masonic Hall, Ann-street, Rochdale, on Thursday, the 30th day of Jan. The Eminent Commander, Sir Knight William Ashworth, Provincial First Captain, Lancashire, opened the encampment in person at 7.30, when the minutes of last meeting were read and confirmed. After the regular disposal of sundry matters, Sir Kt. Herod Turner, 1st Captain, and Prov. Grand Herald, was unanimously elected Eminent Commander for the ensuing twelve months. Sir Kt. C. M. Jones, P.E.C., was, with many complimentary expressions from the E.C. and Sir Kts., re-elected Treasurer, and Frater John Ashworth, sen., equerry of the encampment. Companion J. Bell having been proposed for installation as a Sir Kt. of the Order, and the business of the evening being ended, the eminent Commander proceeded to close the encampment, and had great pleasure in receiving the hearty congratulations of several Sir Knights, amongst whom were Sir Knight Clement, R. N.; Beswicke-Royds, Eminent Commander United, First Grand Captain of England, and Prov. Grand Prior of Lancashire; and Sir Knight W. Roberts, Prov. Grand Prior of West Yorkshire. The encampment having been closed the Sir Knights adjourned to banquet, after which the usual toasts were duly honoured, those of the "Very Eminent Provincial Grand Commander, Sir Knight Albert Hudson Royds," and his worthy deputy, "eminent Sir Knight W. Henry Wright," two as good and worthy knights as can be found, were severally received and specially honoured as Lancashire Knights know how to honour those whom they love and revere. The Eminent Commander, in proposing the officers, &c., of the Albert Encampment, alluded in very graceful terms to the great assistance he had received in the discharge of his duties during the past year, specially mentioning and sincerely thanking Sir Knights Jones and W. Davies for their untiring energy and perseverance to benefit the encampment, and their anxious readiness at all times to contribute to the Good of Knight Templarism, for which services they are eminently deserving of special recognition by the Prov. Grand Commander. The kind expressions of the E.C. were unanimously appreciated, and the proposition was enthusiastically received. Sir Knights Jones, Davies, Mills, and Gorton having responded, and other toasts having been honoured, the proceedings were brought to a close at 10.30 by the Sir Knights, as usual, singing the National Anthem.

NEWPORT.—Gwent Encampment.—On Tuesday an encampment of this Order was held at the Masonic Hall. The aspect of the room, very different from that which the day before presented itself in the bright and brilliant Chapter Rose Croix, was nevertheless equally imposing, and curious visitors, admitted to view it, wondered greatly over the paraphernalia of the encampment. We shall not attempt to describe it. About twenty Sir Knts. attended and took their stations under their respective banners. The encampment was opened according to ancient custom by E.C. Colonel Charles Lyne, who is also G. Sub Prior of England. The principal business was the installation of the E.C. for the ensuing year. The ceremony was performed with great dignity by Major Shadwell Clerke, P.P.G.C. (West Indies), and the following officers were appointed.—H. Martyn Kennard, E.P.; A. L. Willett, P.; H. Hellyer, 1st Capt.; S. G. Homfray, 2nd Capt.; Captain Pearson, Exp. 1; W. H. W. Homfray, 1st Std. Br.; L. J. Chambers, 2nd Std. Br.; R. S. Roper, Registrar; W. Pickford, Treasurer; Wm. Williams, Herald; H. J. Groves, Organist; L. A. Homfray, Captain of Lines; G. W. Fletcher, Outer Guard. The candidates installed were Brothers Henry Greene, 471; A. L. Willett, 683; James Livingston and George Shaddick (the two latter of the "Virtue and Hope" R.A. Chapter, Swansea.) The onerous duty of installing the candidates fell, as a matter of course, to the newly-elected E.P., H. M. Kennard, who performed the ceremony with a skill and dexterity which elicited the unanimous approval of the Encampment. Votes of thanks, recognising the services of those who had worked in honour of the Encampment, were cordially given; amongst the names recorded being Major Shadwell Clerke, and the P.E.C. The sum of £5 5s. was voted to the Aged and Decayed Freemasons Institute, and the P.E.C. (Col. Lyne) generously added another £5 5s. in order to confer the privilege of a life governorship on the E. Preceptor of the Gwent Encampment. A Prior of Knights of Malta was then opened, when, in addition to the above candidates, S.K. Bro. R. J. Chambers was duly installed. S.K. Bro. H. M. Kennard was then installed as E.P. of this Order, and the Encampment closed with the usual solemnities.

The fraternal community, consisting mainly of the Ivor Hael Chapter Rose Croix, and the "Gwent Encampment" of the Order of the Temple, met at the social board in the King's Head Hotel, on Tuesday, when a sumptuous dinner was prepared by Host Cretton. The party numbered about twenty, and amongst them were the following:—H. Martyn Kennard, E.P. (in the chair); Major Shadwell Clerk, P.E.C. and P.G. Commander; A. L. Willett, 18°; Rose Croix, P.G. Chap.; Captain Pearson, 18°; L. Augustus Homfray, 30°; C. Lyne, G. Sub Prior of England, and Pro. P.G.M.; S. George Homfray, 30° (in the vice-chair), M.W.S. Ivor Hael Chapter Rose Croix and second Captain of the Gwent Encampment; Bros. Walter West, 18°; Hy. Greene, 18°; George Shaddick, 18°; J. Livingstone, 18°; William West, 18°; R. J. Chambers, 18°; Thomas Williams, 18°; Henry Hellyer, 18°; C. R. Lyne, M.M.; W. Pickford, 18°; R. S. Roper, 18°; H. J. Groves, 18°; D. Bodessa, 18°; &c. The health of the Queen was right loyally received. Then came that of "Prince Albert Edward of Wales," a P.G.M. of England; each toast followed with musical honours. "The Marquis of Ripon, the G.M. of England." (Masonic honours.) The "Health of the E. P. (Brother Kennard) was proposed by the P.E.C., Colonel Lyne, in very eulogistic terms. The speaker dwelt on the unanimity which characterised all the degrees of Masonry in this province, and heartily congratulated the President on his accession to the post of E.P. of this flourishing Encampment (cheers). S. K. Brother Kennard returned thanks, acknowledging the compliment which had been passed as to the manner in which he had gone through the Preceptorial duties that day. He attributed a large share of the credit to the assistance rendered to him by his excellent officers, and the brethren by whom he was surrounded (cheers). The President gave "The four candidates duly installed that day, including the brother who took the order of Malta, coupling with the toast the health of Brother Livingston (Swansea). Brother Livingston, in returning thanks, referred to the delight which he had experienced from the fraternal and social gathering of to-day, promising that his Swansea friends, who had missed the treat, should certainly hear of it (cheers). The President recognising the eminent services rendered by Major Clerke to the Province of Monmouthshire, and his indefatigable zeal on behalf of Freemasonry in general, proposed his health in a bumper. The company responded with enthusiasm—an enthusiasm which vested itself in a very hearty rendering of the old refrain, "For he's, &c." Bro. Major Clerke returned thanks. He had what might be termed the misfortune to live in London—a long way from the Province of Monmouthshire. He hoped, however, to be present at the periodical meetings of those Orders of which he had the honour to be a member (cheers). He was only too proud to place his services at their disposal. He was called upon to respond so often to their kind expressions towards himself, that he really felt embarrassed, and could scarcely find words to express his sense of their fraternal kindness. One thing he might, however, say, and it was this—Having been all over the world, being Past Master in many degrees in Masonry, he never met with more genuine and charty feeling than he had met with in Monmouthshire (cheers). He came here not knowing a soul, and he found himself to-day with a host of kind friends around him (cheers). Brother Major Clerke again rose. He proposed the health of a brother, distinguished, he might say, in every degree of Masonry. When the direction of what he might term the "revival" of the Christian degrees in this Province, was confided to his (Brother Clerke's) hands, Brother Colonel Lyne worked con amore with him. In the Craft proper Brother Lyne was still more distinguished, for he held the coveted post of P.G.M. (loud cheers). It was significant of the genuine interest felt by Brother Lyne in the Province of Monmouthshire that he was about to go to the Metropolis, their representative;—necessarily at great personal inconvenience and expense—as one of the Stewards of the Masonic charities; and he (Major Clerke) was happy to add that Brother Lyne would carry with him for presentation at the dinner to be presided over by the Prince of Wales, a golden guerdon, second to few of those Provinces in England (cheers). He proposed the health of Brother Colonel Charles Lyne (applause). Bro. Lyne returned thanks. He attributed in great measure the courtesy and kindness of Major Clerke to the well-known feeling which existed between the British sailor and the British soldier. They had rowed in the same same channel, and had sailed together in Masonic life (cheers). Many hours of pleasure had they spent in that little island of Malta. He knew that, long after he left, Major Clerke's name was known there as an active and ardent Mason (cheers). He (Bro. Lyne) might be allowed to say that he was the first installed in the modern Encampment in Malta, and it was a satisfaction to find that one so worthy the honour had followed him (hear, hear, and cheers). If his Bro. Clerke felt a difficulty in responding to the compliments showered upon him, let him look at the difficulty that he (the speaker) was placed in. He had to acknowledge the encomiums passed upon his conduct as P.G.M. of Monmouthshire, and, with every respect to the chivalric degrees, he regarded that position as the highest honour in Masonry (protracted cheering). He believed that the intention of the brethren was to cement the various degrees of our noble Order, because they had but one common object, viz., the welfare of mankind (hear, hear). Bro. Lyne paid a deserved compliment to Bro. S. G. Homfray, whose work as D.P.G.M. had been unexceptionable. The speaker trusted that love and harmony, which should always characterise Freemasons, would be conspicuous among them; and whether it was the old Craft Lodge, Royal Arch, Rose Croix, Mark Master, or the Templar Order, he believed in the idea of a great Masonic social cordon, which could not be broken. As P.G.M. he would give his ready sanction to everything that conduced to promote the spread of principles essentially Masonic (applause). The health of the M.W.S. of the Chapter Rose Croix was toasted by the B.P. with many compliments, and responded to by Bro. George Homfray in suitable terms by Bro. Lyne: "The Health of the Officers of the Gwent Encampment," the name of Bro. Hellyer being connected with the toast, as 1st Captain. Bro. Hellyer duly acknowledged. Bro. Capt. Pearson proposed, "W.M.'s of the various Lodges in the Province," coupled with the health of one who had evinced a sincere desire to promote the best interests of Masonry since he had entered the Craft—Bro. L. A. Homfray, W.M., Isca, 683 (cheers). Bro. L. Augustus Homfray, who, at a social gathering such as this, had thought he might have had a "quiet evening," was called upon to return thanks. He hoped that the toast proposed would find a response at every gathering of this Order (hear, hear), for he believed with Bro. Lyne that unity was an essential element in Freemasonry (cheers). If they meant to "dwell together" they must "pull together," and he was convinced that the present aspect of Freemasonry in this Province warranted him in saying that whilst they dwelt in unity they would certainly so pull (cheers). He had experienced some difficulty in Freemasonry. As a conscientious Craftsman he had abstained from asking any one to join their Order; and yet he felt that every good and true man ought to be a Mason (hear, hear). Bro. Homfray then addressed himself to the particular toast, and as W.M. of the Isca Lodge, returned his thanks for the high compliment paid to him. Bro. the President proposed the health of Bros. Wm. West and Thos. Williams (proposed members of the Illustrious Order of the Temple). They respectively returned thanks. Bro. Lyne gave, "The Masonic Charities," coupled with the name of worthy Brother Pickford. [The writer of this report has been accustomed masonically to dub him as the "jolly masonic beggar." That Bro. Pickford has laboured for years and years in the cause of masonic charity is known to all the brethren, and he has well earned the sobriquet which we have given him. Bro. Pickford, in returning thanks, said that he should not be satisfied if the P.G.M. of Monmouthshire (Col. Lyne) did not go to the Freemason's Banquet, over which H.R.H. the Prince of Wales would preside next month, with less than £200 (great cheering). Bro. L. A. Homfray, with a happy allusion to masonic harmony, paid a compliment to Bro. H. J. Groves for his musical services that evening. Whilst recognising the excellent vocal and instrumental performances which they had all enjoyed, he laid claim to Bro. Groves as his "own organist"—the organist of the Isca Lodge,—who manipulated the instrument with the hand of a true artist and the heart of a thorough mason (applause). Bro. Groves, in returning thanks, mentioned incidentally that he had for fifteen years occupied the honourable position of P.G. Organist. His aspiration that he might be spared for many years to do duty in the interest of Freemasonry, was cheered to the echo: for, to tell truth, it must be admitted that no one can discourse sweet music in this province more sweetly than Brother Groves.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS:—These Pills are more efficacious in strengthening a debilitated constitution, the vital springs of which were naturally weak, or through hard usage have become relaxed and worn, than any other medicine in the world. Persons of a nervous habit of body, and all who are suffering from weak digestive organs or liver complaints, eruptions, flatulency, constipation, colic, or irritable bowels, should lose no time in giving these pills a fair trial. Coughs, colds, asthma, or shortness of breath, are also within the range of the curative powers of this very remarkable medicine, gout, and rheumatism bow before them. The cures effected by these pills are not superficial or temporary, but complete and permanent. They are as mild as they are efficacious, and may be given with confidence to delicate females and young children.—ADVT.

INSTRUCTION.

METROPOLITAN LODGE OF INSTRUCTION.—(No. 1056).—The usual weekly meeting of the above Lodge was held at the Portagul, Fleet-street, on Tuesday evening, 7th February, at 6 o'clock, for the purpose of working the fifteen section, Bro. E. Gottheil, P.M. 141, having been solicited to work the sections, he assumed the chair of W.M., and appointed the following as officers for the evening; J. Pender, 1015 S.W.; E. Rugg, 781, J.W.; J. Constable, 185, I.G. The lodge was opened in the first degree, and the following brethren worked the sections of the same. First section, Bro. Cowan; second section, Bro. Hogard; third section Bro. Wolf; fourth section, Bro. Crutch; fifth section, Bro. Portway; sixth section, Bro. Stacey, P.M.; seventh, Pinder. The lodge was opened in the second degree, and the sections relating thereto worked by the following:—First section, Bro. Constable; second section, Bro. Bengewand, Secretary; third section Bro. Rugg; fourth, Bro. Pinder; fifth, Bro. Stacey. The lodge was then opened in the third degree, and the sections of the same same worked as follows:—First section, Bro. Dwarber, P.M.; second section, Bro. Hogard; third section, Bro. Constable. The lodge was resumed to the first degree; and the following brethren unanimously elected elected joining members; Pender 105; Rugg 781; Rumsey 260; Stevens 206; Crosbie 1364; Brown 1237; Longby 1297; Constable 185. A vote of thanks was recorded on the minutes to Bro. E. Gottheil for the kindness, skill, and ability in performing the duties of the chair. The honorary membership of the lodge was also conferred upon the W.M., who acknowledged in appropriate terms his hearty appreciation of the high honour the members had conferred upon him, being the greatest a Lodge of Instruction has power to give, and assured them of his readiness at all times to impart instruction to those seeking it. A vote of thanks followed to those members of Confidence Lodge of Instruction who had assisted in the evening's work. Bro. Pender, S.W., returned thanks, remarking that the only means he had of evincing his gratitude to those who had instructed him, was, by imparting his knowledge to others who were desirous of advancing in the Craft. The members then determined upon returning the visit of the Confidence Lodge to assist in the fifteen sections which are to be worked at Bro. Forster's, Railway Tavern, London-street, E.C., on Wednesday evening, 26th February, commencing at six o'clock. The following members and visitors were present:—Bros. Cowan, Willing, Brown, Payne, Parkinson, Brocksopp, Lee, Anderson, Potter, Abell, Crutch, Portway. Bro Stacey remarked that he had not heard the business of F.M. carried out more efficiently than on the present occasion, in which the members concurred. Thus an enjoyable evening was spent in masonic learning. The lodge was closed, and the meeting adjourned until the 14th February.

Grand Lodge, as did also the D.G.M. of Scotland. The Prov. G. Lodge was then closed in ample form.

PROVINCIAL GRAND CHAPTER OF GLASGOW.

The quarterly communication was held on January the 31st, Comp. T. A. Barrow, Provincial Grand Superintendent, presiding as P.G.Z.; Comp. Porteous, P.G.H.; J. Smith, P.G.J.; J. Crabe, G.S.N., acting as Scribe E.; G. Halkett, P.G.T.; D. Humphries, P.G. 1st S.; J. Balfour, P.G. 2nd S.; G. McDonald, P.G.S.B. The following chapters were represented:—Glasgow, 50; Catterdale, 67; St. Andrew, 69; Caledonian Unity, 73; Shamrock and Thistle, 87; Partick, 113; Roslin, 119. The Provincial Grand Chapter having been opened in due form, the P.G.Z., announced that the principal business was to arrange for visiting all the chapters in the province. This he intended to do as soon as possible, and he trusted that all the Provincial Officebearers would try to accompany him on those visitations. The Scribe E. was then instructed to inform the various First Principals that the Provincial Grand Z. would visit them at the next meeting of this chapter. There being no further business the chapter was then closed in due form.

OLD CONCORD MASONIC BALL.

The thirty-third annual Masonic Ball of this lodge was held at the Freemasons' Hall, on the 28th ult. About 250 ladies and gentlemen shared in this festivity, under the presidency of Bro. E. Dottridge, W.M., supported by Bros. Masterman, P.S.W., V.P.; Lawson, P.S.W.; Devenish, S.D.; Darby, J.D.; G. Watson, P.M.; Webster, S.W.; Hancock, S.; and Bro. John Emmens, the Hon. Sec. We have much pleasure in recording the complete success of the Stewards in providing such a brilliant and enjoyable evening.

Good music is a first consideration in the ball-room, and the band, organised and conducted by Bro. C. Marriott, was more than equal to all requirements. The programme, though excellently defined, could not possibly do justice to the execution of the music, which was of a most select and popular order.

The magnificent and appropriately arranged suite of rooms was opened for the occasion, and a distinguished company assembled.

At the termination of the first portion of the programme, the company adjourned to the supper rooms, and partook of a repast of most unexceptionable quality. Bro. E. Dottridge, W.M., who presided, proposed, according to custom, "The Health of the Queen," prefacing it with a few well chosen observations. Bro. J. Emmens, P.M., then gave "The Health of the President," (Bro. Dottridge,) and in doing so, said he was sure the President and Stewards were proud to see such a large and distinguished company present, at the same time conveying in his remarks a well-merited tribute to the indefatigable energy and perseverance of their respected Chairman. The toast was drank with acclamation, and suitably responded to by the Chairman, who then proposed in graceful terms "The Ladies." If the previous toasts were received with enthusiasm, this one invoked a prolonged tempest of applause, showing that the company were not behind in testifying their appreciation of the opposite sex. The toast was duly responded to by Mr. W. Tidman, who, with marked care, thanked the company in terms most applicable to the occasion.

Dancing recommenced, of the most animated character, and the ladies, who were magnificently attired, threw a lustre on the scene, which lasted until a late—or rather early—hour in the morning.

Too much praise cannot be bestowed upon the Stewards for the excellent arrangements made for the comfort of the company. Especially we must mention Bro. Masterman, the Vice-president, who with his experience, constant attention, and supervision of arrangements, greatly added to the enjoyment of all.

We are pleased to understand that the proceeds resulting from this ball are specially devoted to Masonic Charities.

In Memoriam.
LORD LYTTON.

OBIT, 18TH JANUARY, 1873.

"Through the portals of the grave lies the true initiation into the holy and the wise."
—ZANONI.

I.

Victory, victory for the seer!
Beyond this mundane sphere
Where mortals wrestle in ignoble strife
And things unreal take the form of life.
Triumph for him who ever nobly dares
To strangle worldly cares
With the strong will of an unyielding spirit!
Yea! his shall be the palm which Heav'n awards to merit.

II.

O leader loved and lost!
We mourn thee, and tis human thus to mourn,
We peer into the valley thou hast crossed,
And see but shapes forlorn.
We gaze a moment longer,
And from thy yawning tomb
A radiance growing brighter, stronger,
Kills the spectral gloom,
And a sweet voice of tenderness sublime
Calls thee to eternity from time!

III.

Though shadows came,
And clustered round thy soul of flame,
Though darkness seemed to pour apace,
And hide thee in its mute embrace.
Thou wert but wending slowly
To the temple of the wise,—to the haven of the holy—
To the rest of the blest, with the mighty and the lowly!

IV.

No "Dweller of the Threshold" now
Can breathe its horrors o'er thy brow.
Beyond the lampless shore
Thy feet have passed for evermore.
Now thou art numbered with the regal throng.
The glorious sons of Science and of Song,
Who hail thine advent to the fields of light,
To raptures ever new, and bliss for ever bright.

V.

Can we who watch below
Enshrouded still in grief and woe,
Commune with thee in thoughts divine,
And mingle our dull dreams with thine?
Or make thy lofty visions ours
By converse with immortal powers?

VI.

Hope answers—Yes! and points with pride
To labour that thy life has sanctified—
To work begun and ended—
To thoughts that died not in their birth
But blossomed over all the earth
Into a fruitage splendid.
The majesty of toil thy hand hath shown
To be the best and purest "preparation"
For all who seek beyond the dim unknown,
The mystery of "True Initiation."

VII.

Nor is thy work yet done,
For from the radiant realms above
To wearied hearts that sigh alone
Thy spirit whispers "Faith and Love!"

BRO. EMRA HOLMES'S LECTURE ON THE "UNITED ORDERS OF THE TEMPLE AND HOSPITAL."

NOTES BY LUPUS.—No. IV.

The late Duke of Sussex was no doubt a Prior of the French Ordre du Temple, and this may possibly have led to some confusion, ending in his supposed connection with the Order of St. John, which I have proved, by the Duke's own letter, is an erroneous assumption. The Emperor Paul's name, too, has been mixed up with the Duke's appointment in the former Order, for we find a clever correspondent of Notes and Queries writing, in reference to the Ordre du Temple, "The Duke of Sussex, our last Grand Master, was one of its Priors, the Patent for which was sent him by the Emperor Paul, another High-Grade Freemason." This perhaps may suggest a key to the confusion; but whether it does or not, it is clear that the Duke was not a Knight of St. John. The writer in Notes and Queries was under the impression that the Ordre du Temple was a species of High-Grade Masonry, as erroneously stated in the pages of Clavel's book. It is well known that the legitimacy of this Order has been much disputed, but, without entering upon any discussion of the objections, it is fair to say that Clavel was no doubt inspired by an expelled member of the Order, whose name and date of expulsion are known to me. Whence the Duke of Sussex derived his appointment as Prior of the Ordre du Temple I cannot say, but it was certainly not from Sir Sidney Smith (as stated by Bro. Holmes), as the Duke became Prior about the year 1824 or 1825, whilst Sir Sidney Smith did not become Regent of the Order until 1838.

This will show that Bro. Holmes was in error too when he expressed to Grand Conclave his opinion that this Order became extinct in 1834. Sir Sidney Smith continued Regent until his death, on the 26th of May, 1840, when he was succeeded by M. Raoul, a distinguished advocate. A Convent of the Order was established in London, with the Duke's concurrence, and another was founded in Liverpool, without his sanction; he never acknowledged the members of the latter, and as the then Grand Master, Palaprat (in breach of an understanding with the Duke), would not withhold his consent to the admissions in the latter Convent, a total cessation of official intercourse was the result. Both Convents died out many years since, and there are now very few of the members surviving. The badge of the Ordre du Temple was a cross of eight points, enamelled white, charged with a cross patée of red enamel, and surmounted by a crown, which on the one side represented an ecclesiastical diadem, somewhat resembling a mitre, but with an azure mound having a red cross over it, indicative of the sovereignty of the Order; and on the other side representing the eastern crown, used by the Grand Masters of the Temple, with an ermine caul, or cap, and the red cross patée in front. This badge (on the singular principle of appropriation, I suppose, recently suggested to the Grand Conclave) was some years since usurped by the English Masonic Templars, greatly to the indignation of the French Order; remonstrances were made, and I believe an apology was tendered through the then Duke of Leeds, with a promise that the infringement should be discontinued. The English Templars, however, continued the use of the jewel until 1853, when it was abandoned, to be again revived, in 1862, for Priors of the then new Maltese invention. I have been informed by a brother, now deceased, who had been many years a Masonic Templar, that previously to the appropriation of the French badge, the English Order used the same cross as still worn in Scotland.

With this digression I will address myself to the Order of the Temple in Scotland, inasmuch as the amalgamation, in that country, of the original Templar and Hospitaller Orders, has been put forward by way of claim to a connection between the Scottish Freemasons and the Knights of St. John. Many curious and conflicting statements have been made in regard to these Scottish claims. It seems clear that on the suppression of the Ancient Templars in Scotland, many of their number were received by the Knights of St. John, and some kind of combination appears to have been effected. It also seems historically admitted that after the surrender of the Hospital lands in Scotland, the Knights of St. John, with their Prior, David Seton, retired to Germany, about 1572-3. Historians tell us that Seton was the last Prior of Scotland, consequently there was an end of the succession; the Masonic Templars appearing in Scotland only after the slight interregnum of 228 years. One remarkable statement, put forward by Alexander Deuchar, the first head of the Scottish Masonic Templars, was that a Masonic lodge at Stirling had a chapter of Templars attached to it as early as 1596. I need hardly say that no foundation for this assertion has ever been adduced. Several writers inform us that Sir John Mitchell Ramsay appeared in London, offering the Masonic Templar Degree in 1728, and that the Grand Lodge refused to have anything to do with it. This refusal is somewhat significant, and would hardly have occurred if the Grand Lodge had not considered it spurious, thus bearing out the opinion of those writers who tell us that Ramsay himself invented the degree. It must be remembered, too, that the combined Orders disappeared in Scotland 156 years before Ramsay's advent.

Bro. Holmes observes that Bro. Woof has stated in his book on the Orders, that Lord Dundee appears to have been Grand Master at the period of the battle of Killiekrankie (1689), and that he was succeeded by John, Earl of Mar, and the Duke of Athole. Bro. Woof, I am sure, desires to be accurate in his statements, but he has here relied upon the assertions of other writers without testing their allegations for himself, and has shared the fate of the unwary: I am glad to know that he sees the error of his ways, and is now more cautious than to accept an assertion, however boldly put forward, as a fact. It must not be forgotten that as regards Scotland we are dealing with the Templars, as combined in the Order of St. John, they having at the period now alluded to no other existence. Having, then, to deal with the combined Orders, it is impossible that Lord Dundee could have been Grand Master, or Grand Prior of the Templars, in 1689, or at any other time, for obvious reasons. The Templars of Scotland were then merged in the Order of St. John, and could have no separate Grand Master, or Prior; and never had, or could have, a Grand Master for Scotland, at any period of their existence as an Order. Lord Dundee was as certainly not Grand Master of the Order of St. John in 1689, as there is no difficulty in ascertaining that Adrian de Vignacourt was elected Grand Master in that same year, not upon the death of Dundee, but upon the demise of the 60th Grand Master, Gregory Caraffa; whilst Henry Fitz-James (natural son of James II.) was appointed Prior in 1687, and had office until 1701. It is possible that Dundee may have received a Grand Cross for some reasons, but the test of historic facts must prove that he could have held no ruling position in either Order. One other circumstance effectually places an extinguisher on these marvellous fictions, and constitutes their expiring flicker: James, the "Pretender," wrote a letter on the 14th of September, 1725, to the Grand Master at Malta, complaining that a Grand Prior had been appointed without his concurrence, and requesting that he might be treated with the same consideration as other princes on similar occasions. Here, then, is evidence that the Grand Prior, whose rule extended over Scotland in 1725, was not one of the alleged successors of Lord Dundee, nor appointed by any authority owning Scotland as its local habitation. Only three years after this the renowned Ramsay appears on the scene, and (still dealing with the amalgamation) can any member of the honourable Craft of Freemasons be found simple enough to believe that he, Ramsay, possessed in himself the power to offer for the acceptance of the Masonic Brotherhood a distinguished Order of Knighthood, whilst, only three years before, the unfortunate prince whom he honoured and struggled to serve, had written his querulous complaint that he had not even been consulted in the appointment of a Prior! As there is thus no evidence whatever to give the most shadowy connection to the Scottish Masonic Templars with the early Order, either by itself, or as amalgamated in that of St. John, let us shortly review the history of the present Order in Scotland, and consider the foundation of its claims. The worthy brethren of Scotland modestly declare in their Statutes, "There is but one Chapter General, and one Grand Master for the whole world; and from the Order having been suppressed in 1309, in all countries except Scotland, it shall always be held in that Language." Unfortunately, the other jurisdictions existing in 1856 were not made parties to this very different enactment, and may possibly not quite subscribe to its reasoning. Singularly, though, the same Statutes contain the following, in a note: "The present body in Scotland merely claims to be the legitimate descendants, by adoption, of the original Knights of the Order." This is in itself curious; I have heard of adopting children and nephews, and neices, and I have heard of Wardour-street ancestors, but I do not remember to have met with a real case of the adoption of forefathers; here, however, we have a signal instance, in which the Scottish Masonic Templars are kind enough to adopt the chivalrous old Knights of the Temple as their legitimate ancestry. All this appears somewhat ungrateful to the English brethren, when we consider that no proof or instance has been adduced of the existence of the Masonic Templar Degree in Scotland before its introduction by English brethren. The correspondence of Bro. Morison with the Secretary of the Scottish Templars (1845-6) has been published; and he there asserts of his own knowledge that the Order was introduced in St. Stephen's Lodge, Edinburgh, in 1798, by non-commissioned officers and men of the Nottingham Militia, then quartered in the castle, and that his own diploma from that lodge, as a Knight of the Temple, was dated the 19th of August, 1800. I am in a position to corroborate this in the main, having had in my possession a letter written by a very distinguished Scotch Mason, now deceased, in which he plainly states that the Templar Degree was introduced in the lodge named by a sergeant and several non-commissioned officers of the Nottingham Militia, that he was one of the instigators of its introduction and one of the first initiates, and Mr. Deuchar another; that he (the writer of the letter) was the author of the first printed regulations of the degree, and of the Statutes of 1837, and that he was mainly instrumental in procuring the resignation of Mr. Deuchar and inducing Sir David Milne to become Grand Master. Its pretensions, he states, were no more than Masonic, and that on these principles he installed a large number of its members before 1857.

Thus it is beyond dispute that the Scottish Templars must look to England for the foundation of their claims, and equally plain that the English chain of descent has no link in the history of the Order in Scotland.

It is said that shortly after the introduction of the Order in St. Stephen's Lodge, the brethren who had joined it desired to adopt a separate existence, and accepted a warrant from the "Early Grand Encampment" in Dublin, a doubtful authority at the least; they were not long satisfied with this, and on the 9th June, 1811, a charter was issued, upon their application, by the Duke of Kent, who was then the chief of the English Masonic Templars.

In November, 1836, the Scottish brethren desired to be affiliated en masse to the Ordre au Temple of France, but were informed that such a course was impossible, that applicants could only be received individually, that each must occupy such a social position as would entitle him to be presented at Court, and must be recommended by the Duke of Sussex, as Grand Prior of the Ordre du Temple in England. In 1844 our Scottish brethren set up a "chivalric" section of the Order on their own account, into which persons could be received who were not Freemasons, but the present Statutes (in which the French Order is termed a surreptitious body) express grave doubts if this was a legal proceeding. The new system did not prove successful, and the Order returned to its original Masonic constitution, it being declared in the revised Statutes of 1856 "that every one received into the Order must be previously a regular Royal Arch Mason."

The Scottish Grand Conclave entered into a solemn compact with the English and Irish Orders to carry out the project for an union of the whole under one Grand Master, and with uniform Statutes, but appears, so far as we know, to be negatively repudiating the treaty. If this course is persisted in, the Scottish brethren will commit a grave mistake. The whole Order is under a large debt of obligation to the learned Chancellor, Sir Patrick Colquhoun, for his skilful and untiring services in originating and carrying out a scheme, so greatly to the advantage of the Templars—a scheme in which it is possible other jurisdictions of the Order may yet desire to be included, and in which some of the American divisions are already interested; indeed, I can myself testify to one, of which I am an honorary member. The Scottish Order can adduce no claim to the title of Templar, which it does not derive from an English source, and if it now thinks well, or right, to repudiate the treaty, it must exist as a branch founded in Scotland by Englishmen, only legalised by an English Grand Master, and now alienated from the parent stem by an act which we must all view with regret. Those who know me best will be aware that I have never been backward to advance the interests of the Templar Order so far as my opportunities would permit; I would still join in doing much for its prosperity, but let us do it with moderation, fairness, and charity to all; we can always find enough in the regulation of our own affairs without unnecessarily impeaching the position or the honour of others, and we may well and profitably be occupied in setting in order our own house without interfering in that of a neighbour. I have no objection to the Maltese Degree, abandoned in 1853 (as I have made known in the proper place), but I strongly object to the invention which followed the Statutes of 1862 (as I have also made known), and I very distinctly object to the founding of fictitious claims upon unnecessary comparisons with the rights of others, and the appropriation of titles or badges, because there does not at the time appear to be a watchman at his post. I hope I have made this apparent. In conclusion, I thank The Freemason for permission to occupy so much space, and I sincerely hope I may be able to return to this subject.

NOTES ON THE TEMPLE AND HOSPITAL.

BY BRO. ENRA HOLMES, 31°.

Preceptor of the Prudence Preceptory of Knights Templar and Prior of the Prudence Priory of Knights of Malta; Grand Provost of England (United Orders of the Temple and Hospital), &c.

I am very grateful to Bros. "Lupus" and "A Masonic Student" for noticing my articles on the above subject, and must beg leave to reply to them in as brief a manner as may be.

Bro. "Lupus" will, I am sure, take in as good part as I have done my answer to his strictures.

"A Masonic Student," I am thankful to see, knows that I only desire to be just; that I give the pros and cons as fairly as I can; and that my sole desire is to seek after the truth and maintain it; and that in all these questions I endeavour to give chapter and verse for all I put forward, my single object being the elimination of truth.

I am sorry that "Lupus" should accuse me of making unsupported assertions, because that is just what I have aimed not to do, and in no case can I accuse myself of putting forward asseverations for which I had not some authority, good, bad, or indifferent. I fancy my authority for the statement that he was Grand Prior, was a newspaper paragraph, but I have ascertained from Sir George Bowyer himself that he is not appointed Grand Prior, that there are no dignitaries of any sort in England, and that the Pope has no power to create a Prior. I hasten to make this correction. A mutual and distinguished friend wrote to Sir George respecting this discussion, and asked him whether heretics and schismatics could enter the Order; to which Sir George answers, "No."

My friend put the query—"How was the Emperor Paul elected Grand Master, he being a schismatic; and why was such election recognised as valid?" to which the reply is made "that it was recognised, though irregular, in a time of revolution and trouble."

"What is the position of the Duke of Manchester, who claims to be Grand Prior in England?" was the next query addressed to Sir George, to which he returns the significant answer, "Nothing?"

What is the order of St. John in Prussia and whence descended et quo titulo?

"Irregular, illegal, and unrecognised," is Sir George's brief answer.

"Is celibacy still a sine qua non?" my correspondent asked.

"Only in the case of those who choose to take the vows," Sir George replies.

I hope Bro. Lupus is satisfied.

"A Masonic Student," in canvassing the claims of the Camp of Baldwin to a real descent from the Red Cross Knights, objects to the term Encampment, as being a Masonic title not older than 1760. This I admit. He also says that Preceptories in the old days were named after places, not persons, and that the name Baldwin Encampment must be a misnomer, and betrays its Masonic origin.

I admit this also, but by parity of reasoning I would ask, does not the same rule apply to the craft? Were the old lodges named as at present, or were they not frequently, up to the beginning of the 18th century, called after the hostleries at which they were held, rather than, as now, after the names of people, Masonic symbols, attributes, graces, and so forth? Yet anyone who argued that, therefore, the present Masons had nothing to do with their Masonic ancestors of the 16th and 17th centuries, or the travelling Freemasons of the middle ages, would surely be wrong, and "A Masonic Student," the redoubtable opponent of the 1717 theory, would make short work of such specious reasoning.

The fact that the Camp of Baldwin existed under its present name prior to 1780, is no proof that the Templars as a body did not exist long prior to that in Bristol under another name. I am glad to be corrected by my learned and courteous opponent as to my authority for stating that Richard I. left Palestine as a Templar, and especially glad to find that the statement itself is correct, though I gave Vinsauf, instead of William of Tyre, as its author.

Turning to Bro. Lupus, I will answer his statements in few words, and show by what authority I maintain my statement that the Protestant Order of St. John in England has no more right to the title than we the Masonic Knights of St. John.

Lupus, at page 24 of The Freemason, asserts, amongst a number of equally rash assertions, that the Russian Pories never had any connection with the Anglo-Bavarian langue. Well, I refer him to his friend Col. Porter's valuable work, where he will find the following at page 439. I like to be particular.

"The late Polish Priory was largely augmented and converted into a Russian Priory with a revenue of 300,000 florins, or about £7,500. This Priory was to be divided into ten commanderies for knights, and three for chaplains, and was incorporated into the Anglo-Bavarian langue."

I leave your readers to judge, after this, who is in the habit of making unfounded assertions.

I may here remark that Porter says,* "In 1782 also a new language was created in Bavaria, and joined to the extinct language of England under the title of Anglo-Bavarian."

Lupus impugns the election of the Emperor Paul as illegal, because he was made Grand Master during the lifetime of Dr. Hompesch. Turning to Porter,† I find Raymond Despuig was elected Grand Master by the suffrages of all the knights, even during the life of his predecessor, on the 16th December, 1736.

Lupus fails to find a statement in Porter's work bearing the complexion I put upon the paragraph, which he proceeds to quote, and from which I draw the inference that, though re-established, the Protestant Anglican langue has no connection with the foreign branches of the Fraternity.

Well, I put it to any impartial reader of The Freemason whether the inference I draw from the very quotation "Lupus" gives, and which is to be found at p. 464 of Col. Porter's book, is not the natural and most reasonable one, and that Col. Porter meant what he said when he wrote that "the dormant language of England was once more revived and again established, although without connection with the foreign branches of the Fraternity."

I have to thank "A Masonic Student" for his interesting notes on my lecture, at page 46 of The Freemason. "Lupus" has already replied to some of his queries respecting the Order of St. John, so I need say but little upon that score. I may, however, observe that I have a trenchant letter before me on this subject from a learned friend (himself a knight of several orders, who refused the knighthood of the Holy Sepulchre), who tells me that Sir Richard Peat, who called himself Grand Prior of England, was declared an impostor.

I am inclined to agree with him ("A Masonic Student") that the Templars received their aportreta from the Masons, and not the Masons from the Templars, and I contend that your correspondent's note is, on the whole, favourable to my view. I do not the least favour Hutchenon's view that Masonry descends to us from the Crusaders, and that it is of chivalric origin; on the contrary, I have always held "A Masonic Student's" views as to its connection with the Operative Masons of the middle ages; but still the actual connection, whatever it was, is a vexata questio, and we can at best theorise, according to our views.

I do not even yet despair of making "A Masonic Student" a very good Templar, even though he never joins the Order.

My genial critic will find much suggestive matter in Jennings's "Rosierucians."

The author of that interesting but very curious work speaks of the Templar flag, the Beauséant (Beau Séant), "as the grandly mystic banner, revealing a whole occult philosophy to the initiate, which the leaders of the Templars undoubtedly were."

Jennings goes on to say—"Von Hammer's Mystery of Baphomet revealed," contains much suggestive matter relative to these mysterious Templars. The Parisian "Templiers" (no doubt he meant the Ordre du Temple of France) assert that there is a connection between the recent Niskhi character and the Cufic characters, and that the origin of the secrets of the Order of the Temple is contemporary with the prevalence of the latter alphabet." Your readers know that the Templars were accused of being Gnostics, and Jennings adds to some comments on the subject, "It is well known that the preservation of gnostic symbols by Freemasons was, and remains so to this day, exceedingly sedulous."

In another portion of the work, the author says: "The character of the Head which the Templars were charged with having worshiped (sic) in their secret encampments or mystic lodges had been the subject of much dispute, some say it was the head of Prosperpine, or of the mother of nature, presented under certain strange aspects. Others assert that the figure was malee of Dis or Charm, according to the classic nomenclature. The object was reputed to be a talisman, and that it is called by some to be the head of Medusa, or the snake haired visage, dropping blood which turned to snakes, and transforming the beholder to stone. It was this head, or one of a similar description, which was supposed to serve as the talisman or recognitive mark of the secret fraternity or society headed by Pichegru and others which was suppressed by Napoleon."

To return once more to Brother "Lupus" and his strictures, I may say that Sir George Bowyer, through a friend, very courteously placed at my disposal the other day a very important document touching the Anglican claims. He also lent me a book, which I had in my possession till this last day or two, the General Roll of the Order, published at Rome in 1872, entitled Ruolo Generale del Sov. S.M. Ordine Gerosolimitano.

In the table of Grand Masters I find the names of Emmanuele Pinto de Fonseca as 68th Grand Master, from 1741 to 1743; Ferdinando Hompesch as 71st Grand Master, from 1797 to 1798; Paolo I. Imperatore de Russia as 72nd Grand Master, from 1798 to 1800; and Giovanni Tommasi, as 73rd Grand Master, from 1802 to 1805. I also find the name of Filippo di Colloredo as Luogotenent, del Magistero (Lieutenant of the Mastery) from 15th Sep., 1845 to 9th Oct. 1864; and Giovanni Battista Ceschi di Santa Croce in the same important post, to which he was elected 14th Feb., 1872. I find also an account of the names and rank of the Knights who form the Grand Priory of Rome, and the rest of the dependant bodies which constitute the Italian langue—including the Grand Pories of Lombardo-Venetia and the Two Sicilies; I also see the German Langue, which includes the Grand Prior of Bohemia and its dependant bodies, together with the association of knights in Silesia and Westphalia. I further trace the names of Sir George Bowyer and Count Traffé, whose Book on the Order I have noticed, but I fail to find that of His Grace of Manchester, or that of many others who claim to be Knights of St. John of Jerusalem. The fact is, as I have stated, the so-called English langue is repudiated by the authorities of the Order at Rome, and whatever my worthy and esteemed Brother "Lupus" may say to the contrary, we, as Masonic Knights of Malta, have as much right to the title as the Protestant gentlemen whom I have rightly called "the Manchester Body." Indeed, I have reason to believe that the Catholic Order has less objection to us as a body, inasmuch as they deem us only ad imitationem, than they have for the body which was, as many think, illegally revived in England as the Order of St. John in Anglia, and which claims a legitimate succession.

The document to which I have referred I propose to publish in next week's Freemason. Your readers will then see whether I do or do not make unsupported assertions.

So far as the Duke of Sussex is concerned, I do not quarrel with Bro. Lupus' conclusions, though I may have a very different view of the matter to my learned antagonist.

The Duke would not care to join a branch of the Order which he, in common with others, might look upon as spurious, but he was far too courteous to say what he meant. I don't see anything in what Bro. Lupus has printed (of course I don't know what the letters are he has seen) to prove that the Duke of Sussex was not appointed Grand Prior of England by the Emperor Alexander.

As to the Emperor's right to appoint him, that is quite another matter.

ORDER OF ST. JOHN IN ENGLAND.

I beg that "A Masonic Student" will not for a moment suppose I considered his courteous communication indicated a desire to interfere with a discussion in which I regret to have been compelled to play my humble part. I am glad that the "Student" concurs in my view that the Order of St. John has been improperly brought into Bro. Holmes' lecture and speech to Grand Conclave. I protest against it as being a gratuitous attack on an Order which contains amongst its limited numbers a large proportion of persons distinguished not only for position and rank, but for good work, high deeds, and literary and scientific attainments; an Order which has made its mark in the world for good and beneficent objects, and is doing its utmost to ameliorate the ills of suffering humanity; and an Order of which every member and associate would scorn to forward any spurious claims, whilst they would be just as unlikely to accept any premeditated insult. I am most happy to give the Student any information in my power, but as I had not intended, and have still no intention, to discuss the English Langue, I shall be glad to hear from him privately; but as his present queries have been publicly asked, I will endeavour to reply briefly and directly.

1. I do claim, distinctly, that the Order of St. John of Jerusalem in England, of which H. G. the Duke of Manchester is the present Prior, and of which the members mostly belong to the national church, is a lawful branch of the genuine Order of St. John.

2. If the act of the miscellaneous body of Knights in Russia, when they elected a new Grand Master during the life of the old one, is accepted, as is the fact, as a lawful proceeding, can it be disputed that the five out of the seven remaining langues could give legitimate sanction to the resuscitation of a branch of the Order in England? Most of the divisions of the Order are now acting as independent sections. Sir Bernard Burke, who is our modern authority on Orders, says that the Order of St. John exists in Austria, in several Italian Duchies, and in Bohemia, Russia, and Poland, and in Spain, "though under a modified constitution, and in separate bodies." I say that no other reason why the conventions could legalise the Order in England, is wanted, than that which enables the refugee Knights to elect the Emperor Paul, when they alleged "the impossibility, in our present circumstances, the members of our Order being generally dispersed, of preserving all the forms and customs prescribed in our Constitution and Statutes." If the will of a majority of the langues shall not prevail, what else can?

3. The English (sixth) langue was an original division of the Order.

4. The convention in Paris represented the three langues of France and those of Spain and Portugal; they thus acted as a large majority of the Order. As a "Commission" they derived under the powers declared by a Chapter General of the French Knights, which was assembled at Paris, in 1814, under the presidency of Prince Camille de Rohan, Grand Prior of Aquitaine. The Commission was confirmed by a Pontifical Bull, on the 10th of August, 1814, and was recognised as representative of the whole Order on important historic occasions.

5. The Order of St. John was essentially a republic, which was called into existence by the will of its own original assembly. It is not, and never was, as Bro. Holmes has asserted, a Papal Order, but was the offspring of the small hospitalier association which formed its humble beginning at Jerusalem. Why not, then, a great majority of this republic authorise the revival of a branch here, or elsewhere? I am not aware that Bro. Holmes has attempted to prove a direct succession for the Freemasons through the English langue, of which the last information is in 1558. If he has, I will venture to say he has lamentably failed.

6. The acknowledgment of the Secretary General of the French langues is only of effect as disposing of any question that the convention was made by a fictitious body or that the documents were not genuine.

7. I have already said that the proceedings in the Court of King's Bench were quite apart from the revival under the conventions with the French Knights, but I may explain that it was at that time believed that the Corporation of the Order, under the Letters Patent to which the "Student" has before referred, could be by this proceeding re-constituted. Sir Robert Peat's action was taken at the instance of Sir Lancelot Shadwell, then Vice-Chancellor of England (who soon afterwards became a member of the Order), and it was no doubt considered right to adopt the recommendation of so distinguished a legal functionary. This explanation I have no doubt is correct, as the oath taken by Sir Robert, which is signed by Sir Thomas Denman, and still in existence, alludes to the Letters Patent. There may be circumstances surrounding the subject, which would require a judicial decision to determine the value of this proceeding, but the subject, is not worth discussing, as the revival of the Order is not dependent upon it, and it may be as well simply looked upon as a marked public and legal notice that the banner of the Hospital was again raised in England.

And now a word on brother Holmes's boastful announcement. I believe that his terrible "document" from Rome, repudiating the English Langue, is very well known to me, has been published more than once, and has even been printed by myself. It is about as valuable and useful as would be a similar document from London repudiating the Roman claims; and it had origin, if I correctly anticipate the terrific fulmination, in a piece of curiously under-hand dealing, of which I am happy to say I possess the history. I would have had pleasure in making this interesting "document" known over again, had I been aware that Bro. Holmes desired it, and had I also any intention to discuss the English Order. As it is, I simply reserve to myself the right (which I shall regret to exercise, as I hoped my task was ended) to make a few comments upon the overwhelming repudiation which Bro. Holmes seems to have so long nursed. "Parturient montes."—LUPUS.

OLD MASONIC BOOKS.

I feel quite certain not one of the many readers of The Freemason will consider "Masonic Student's" budget to be too long, but rather not long enough, for anything from his pen has never yet proved dull or uninteresting to all lovers of the Craft and its history. I hope our brother will succeed in tracing his lost "Pritchard," and that it will prove to be the first edition. In my last communication the edition in my possession is stated to be of 1837 in error. It is of 1737, just seven years after its first appearance.

The French History of 1745 in the "Masonic Student's" last budget is the 2nd edition of Varrentrapp's valuable little book of A.D. 1742 (A Francfort sur le Meyn, small 8vo. 30 pp. & 283) and apparently was edited by "Le Frere de la Tierce." The discourse is in it of 1740, and though in one volume, it really consists of two parts. Much in it, as in the second edition, it would be well to have translated, especially the Oration of 1740, if some good brother would undertake that task. The collation of 2nd edition so far as is given by Dr. Bloss is as follows. "Ed. II. a L'Orient chez G. de l'Etoile, etc, 2 Tomes, 1745. S. T. I. p. xii. 311; T. II. p. xii. 322. 2. The particulars as to the one of 1742 agree with the copy in my library.

The 2nd book of 1745, viz., Les Secrets de l'Ordre des Francs-Maçons. A Amsterdam 1745. I have a copy of it, and believe it to be very scarce. "Masonic Student" speaks of "two interesting prints." There are, however, seven, and all are most interesting. The work is by "L'Abbé Perau." I know this because of a cypher which concludes the "Epitre," and from the key given at page 174 it is the name as above. "Le Mot de Maitre" is especially curious, but of course inappropriate to be considered in this place. "M. L'Abbe Perau" also had his "Les Secret des F.M." in Paris, 1744, and at "Geneve," at first we believe in 1742. I have not the work of 1747, and should like to know if it agrees with the one, of 1745, by Perau.

The Songs about 1772, in MS., is likely a copy from a book about that period. The Earl of Kelly was Grand Master of the "Athole Masons" from 1761 to 1767.—W. J. HUGHAN.

STATUS OF PAST MASTERS.

To the Editor of The Freemason.

Dear Sir and Brother,—

In reply to a "North Country Mason," I beg to say that, in my humble opinion, until a Scotch or Irish P.M. has served as a Warden, and been installed in the chair of a lodge under the English Constitution, he cannot preside over that lodge, even in the absence of the W.M. and all the Past Masters.

Though a Past Master in the lodge, he is not of it, and not having been installed under our Constitution, he is ineligible to take the chair.

This may seem a regrettable anomaly but, it arises from the difference of working under the three Constitutions as many Irish and Scotch Masons "Pass the Chair," as it is called, though not actual W.M.'s, and are then denominated Past Masters.

My own opinion long has been, that all actual Past Masters, whether Scotch or Irish, that is to say, those who have been installed W.M.'s bonâ fide and presided over a lodge twelve months, should on formal certificate of the same, issued by their Grand Lodges, when they become subscribing members of a English Lodge, be eligible to election as W.M., like all other P.M.'s, and be effective for all the duties of a P.M. in the lodge.

This a matter which could be easily adjusted by a little mutual concession on the part of all the three Grand Lodges respectively.

There can be not doubt, but, that our own Grand Lodge is perfectly correct both on the ground of ancient usage and common sense, in the strict regulation it has hitherto laid down on the subject.

"Passing the Chair" ought to be given up, both by the Irish and Scotch Grand Lodges.

Such an enactment as I have now suggested, would place all actual W.M.'s on an equality, and prevent many of those questions which constantly arise, to the annoyance of an Irish or Scotch Past Master on the one hand, and to the regret of our English brethren on the other.

I hope I have now satisfactorily answered the questions of a "North Country Mason."

I am, yours fraternally,

AN OLD P.M.

THE MASONIC CHARITIES.

To the Editor of The Freemason.

Dear Sir and Brother,—

Perusal of the leading article in the Athenæum of Saturday, February the 1st, has brought to my mind a conviction formed long ago, one too which becomes more confirmed as circumstances increasingly occur tending to show that there is substantial ground for it. The paper to which I allude is based on several publications having reference to "The Royal Hospital for Incurables," and therein the writer strongly condemns the method of obtaining admission for patients, by which "those who are elected are not so much those who really stand in need of help, as those who have influential friends, who can afford a considerable outlay in printing, postage, &c., and who can collect a hundred pounds or so to purchase votes." The facts mentioned in support of this opinion are so strong that one can hardly conceive any person who carefully considers them persisting in advocacy of the present system. The plan adopted in the above and many other institutions of similar character is exactly the same as that pursued by the Masonic body in regard to admissions to the Schools for Boys and Girls, and to participation in grants from the Benevolent Funds, and there appear to me to be indications that the increasing difficulty in procuring the election of most deserving candidates is becoming evident to members of our Craft, and is inducing the formation of more limited charities, restricted to the several provinces in which they are established. Indeed, I have recently seen somewhere in print this alleged as a reason for neglecting our great Masonic institutions in London, in favour of a local one. The effect of such a course may not be sensibly felt as yet, but it appears to me that in course of time it will be inevitable. In addition to the cost incurred by candidates whose means are necessarily very limited, and who in case of failure are on this account much to be pitied, there are several other objections, namely, the system of borrowing votes, which have to be repaid, thus crippling the means of the borrowers in future years; the systematic purchase of votes pursued in some provinces; the recommendations of candidates on canvassing cards by brethren who have no personal knowledge of the cases, for which the use of my name has repeatedly been solicited; the exchange of votes in one branch for those in another; the trouble and expense to which subscribers are put in filling up and posting the papers; the probability, since many provinces look chiefly to their own interest, and if they do not require their own votes barter them, that a district in which there are but few lodges will fail in obtaining relief for any unfortunate who belong to it; lastly, the amount of labour in the office in the preparation and sending out of the balloting papers, and the cost of printing and postage.

I have long been of opinion that the course pursued among us is very unsatisfactory, sometimes annoying, and that the object we have in view, that of helping the most necessitous and deserving, since we have not means wherewith to meet all the applications, would be far better effected by the periodical appointment of a special committee, to the members of which, acting conjointly, should be entrusted the examination of claims and the selection of the candidates most in need. This is just the course proposed by the writer of the article in the Athenæum to which I have referred, and of which I recommend a perusal, as the subject is there treated at greater length than is desirable in your columns, and the result is the same as that at which I arrived some years ago. It may be said that subscribers value the patronage exercised in giving their votes, but, is the gratification of vanity to so small an extent worth consideration, when weighed against serious objections to the system? Public interest in the charities may be maintained by forwarding to every donor and subscriber annually a brief abstract of the proceedings, a list of the candidates, without full details of each case, and the decisions of the committee with regard to them.

A LIFE GOVERNOR OF ALL THE MASONIC CHARITIES

THE HOUSE OF BONAPARTE AND FREEMASONRY.

To the Editor of The Freemason.

Dear Sir and Brother,—

I see that our excellent Brother R. Wentworth Little states it to be certain, his words are—"there can be no doubt that the late Emperor Napoleon III. was a member of the Carbonari." Now, the query I venture respectfully to put, is "Is it altogether without doubt?" I am aware it has been often said so, but it has also been denied.

I am rather inclined to think that the late Emperor was probably in early life admitted a member of the "Maçonnerie Napoléonienne," and never was a member of the actual Carbonari. It is very important that all matters in the domain of history should be perfectly correct and trustworthy. Has our Bro. R. W. Little any actual authority for so important a statement?

Yours fraternally,

D. BLOCS.

THE CITY OF LONDON MASONIC LIFE- BOAT BALL.

This ball, which took place on Friday, 24th ult., at the London Tavern, was, as the Lord Mayor described it to be, one of the most brilliant assemblages of the season, and was as agreeable as brilliant. The varied Masonic clothing of the gentlemen—Craft, Arch, Knights Templar, Rose Croix, Knights of the Red Cross of Rome and Constantine, Provincial Grand Officers, &c., intermingled with the equally elegant dresses of the ladies, produced a charming coup d'œil. Dancing commenced to Shapcott's very efficient band soon after half-past 9 o'clock, when the fine room of the London Tavern was tolerably well filled, brother Meekham, the principal M.C., and his assistants, having most satisfactorily arranged all the preliminaries. The Stewards, most of them in Masonic clothing, were distinguished by very handsome satin and silver rosettes, emblazoned with the crest of the City of London, after Bro. Kenning's most effective fashion, and praise is due to them for their assiduous attention to the numerous company. At half-past eleven o'clock the arrival of the Lord Mayor and Lady Mayoress, accompanied by Miss Waterlow, Mr. Sheriff Perkins, and Under-Sheriff Crossley (Mr. Sheriff White being unfortunately absent through illness) were announced. They were received and conducted to the ball room by Bros. William Carpenter, Frederick Kent, C.C., Henry Chapman, Hon. Sec., Joseph Morrell, P.G.D., and Brother Stephen Carey. The Stewards having formed a double line from the head of the stairs into the ball room, and the company having ranged themselves on either side, the Lord Mayor preceded and accompanied by several brethren and other gentlemen, entered, followed by the lady Mayoress, escorted by Bro. F. Kent, and Miss Waterlow by Bro. W. Carpenter. The ladies having taken their seats at the further end of the room, the Lord Mayor, after a friendly gossip with some of the gentlemen about him, amongst whom was Sir Patrick Colquhoun, D.G.M.K.T., (introduced to his lordship by Bro. Wm. Carpenter), joined in two or three quadrilles, which he seemed much to enjoy.

Supper was announced, whereupon the party proceeded to the supper room, laid for them and about twenty others, the Lady Mayoress being escorted by Bro. Wm. Carpenter, Miss Waterlow by Bro. F. Kent, and the accompanying ladies by other of the Stewards, including Bros. Y. Christian, S. Carey, F. Bartlett, J. Morrell, H. Chapman, and others. At the supper table, Bro. F. Kent occupied the chair, having on his right the Lady Mayoress and Mr. Sheriff Perkins, and on his left the Lord Mayor, and Mr. Deputy Sheriff Crossley. The vice-chair was occupied by Bro. W. Carpenter, having on his right hand Miss Waterlow, and on his left Sir Patrick Colquhoun. In the course of the repast, the Lord Mayor proposed "The Committee of the City of London Masonic Lifeboat Fund, and the Chairman proposed "The Lord Mayor and the Corporation of the City of London," to which the Lord Mayor responded. His lordship expressed his thanks to the Committee for having invited him to their ball, which he was pleased to say, was the most brilliant and agreeable assemblage he had yet had the pleasure of being present at. In advertising to the object which the ball was intended to promote, his lordship observed, that he was gratified to think that there would be a life-boat identified in name with the City of London, which he thought ought not to be without at least one. His lordship then adverted to the awful calamity that had befallen the "Northfleet" and her passengers and men, and expressed his gratification at having been enabled, in the course of the day, to raise a subscription of nearly £1000, which he hoped, considerably to increase. As to Masonry, he said, he was sorry he was not a brother. How he was not, he scarcely knew, he held the Order in very high estimation, for its moral character, and its charitable institutions, and it was not at all impossible that, if he should be thought worthy, he might one day have the honour of being enrolled amongst its members. Looking around him, he saw honours, or whatever they were called, borne on the breasts of some of them, that made him look poor, indeed, although he was not without his decorations. His lordship hereupon naïvely told a story, which created shouts of laughter, in which he heartily joined. He said that one day, they were about to have a festive gathering at the Mansion House, and a short time before the hour at which they had to receive their guests arrived, a friend of his—not of the party—called. Having expressed a wish to see his lordship in his official attire, he (the Lord Mayor) said, if he would wait a few minutes his wish should be gratified. Leaving the room, said his lordship, I returned in a few minutes, with all my honours thick upon me. Having submitted myself to the criticism of my friend, he very dryly said, Well, Sir, I think you may now do very well to compete with one of your own footmen;" upon which, as we have said, there were shouts of laughter, which the Lady Mayoress and the other ladies seemed much to enjoy. The chairman then proposed the health of Mr. Sheriff Perkins and Mr. Under-Sheriff Crossley, to which they both responded, expressing their desire, as the Lord Mayor had done, to do anything in their power to promote the object of the Lifeboat Committee. The Vice-Chairman proposed the health of Sir Patrick Colquhoun, who responded, expressing, with most kindly feeling, his gratification at the in every way successful efforts of the Committee towards the attainment of a most noble object.

The party returned to the ball room, the Lord Mayor and Miss Waterlow again joining in a quadrille with Bros. H. Chapman, J. Clever, J. Stansfield, and their respective partners, and not taking their departure till a late hour, before doing which they again expressed their gratification with all they had seen and heard.

We may add, that after leaving the supper rooms the general company returned to the ball room, and kept up the dancing, until (some of them) nearly five o'clock.

Everything, from first to last, was well conducted, and passed off in the most satisfactory manner. The refreshments during the evening were ample, and were well served, and the supper tables were plentifully and elegantly spread.

We have reason to hope that the fund will be benefitted in proportion as the company was pleased. There were about 250 present.

The case is strongly recommended by the following Brethren:— Bro. A. H. Roys, Provincial Grand Master, Worcester, V.P.

CROSBY'S
BALSAMIC

ELIXIR

DISEASES OF THE LUNGS AND AIR-VESSELS.

CROSBY'S
BALSAMIC COUGH ELIXIR.

Opiates, Narcotics, and Squills are too often invoked to give relief in Coughs, Colds, and all Pulmonary diseases. Instead of such fallacious remedies, which yield momentary relief at the expense of enfeebling the digestive organs, and thus increasing that debility which lies at the root of the malady, modern science points to CROSBY'S
BALSAMIC COUGH ELIXIR as the true remedy.

SELECT TESTIMONIAL.

Dr. Rooke, Scarborough, author of the "Anti-Lancet," says: "I have repeatedly observed how very rapidly and invariably it subdued cough, pain, and irritation of the chest in cases of Pulmonary Consumption, and I can, with the greatest confidence, recommend it as a most valuable adjunct to an otherwise strengthening treatment for this disease."

This medicine, which is free from opium and squills, not only allays the local irritation, but improves digestion and strengthens the constitution. Hence it is used with the most signal success in Asthma, Bronchitis, Consumption, Coughs, Influenza, Night
Sweats of Consumption, Quinsey, and all affections of the throat and chest. Sold in bottles at 1s. 9d., 4s. 6d., and 11s. each, by all respectable Chemists, and wholesale by Jas. M. Crosby, Chemist, Scarborough.

* * * Invalids should read Crosby's Prize Treatise on "Diseases of the Lungs and Air-Vessels," a copy of which can be had Gratis of WIMBORNE MINSTER.—St. Cuthberga Lodge (No. 99).—This lodge met on Wednesday, 12th inst., Bro. C. W. Wyndham, the W.M. elect, was duly installed as W.M. by W. Bro. Rev. W. M. Heath, one of the Grand Chaplains of Grand Mark Lodge. The following were appointed officers for the ensuing year:—Bros. J. W. Fletcher, S.W.; B. J. Kerridge, J.W.; J. W. Luff, M.O.; F. H. Tanner, S.O.; H. Baverstock, J.O.; J. W. Luff, Secretary; W. Reade, Reg. of Marks; R. G. Long, S.D.; W. J. Guest, J.D.; E. A. H. Castleman, D.C.; W. Bro. Rev. W. M. Heath, Chaplain; J. Symes, I.G. No appointment of Tyler was made, the brother elected to that office having recently deceased.

GREAT YARMOUTH.—Lodge of Friendship (No. 100).—The brethren of this lodge celebrated the festival of St. John on Thursday, 13th inst. There were present visitors from Norwich, Lowestoft, and Ipswich. The Lodge was opened at the Record Room, Town Hall, when Bro. John Franklin was duly installed into the chair of K.S. by Bro. P.M. Oswald Diver, in his usual impressive style. Lodge being resumed, and the W.M. saluted in the three degrees, the Master invested his officers, viz. Bros. Gage, S.W.; Fowler J.W.; Wm. Wright, P.M., Secretary; Boning, S.D.; Bond, J.D.; Galloway, I. G.; H. Camping and Batty, Stewards; Holt, Tyler. The lodge having closed in peace and harmony, the brethren adjourned from labour to refreshment at their lodge room, Crown and Anchor Hotel, of which the W.M. is proprietor, (this being the only instance in the Province of the host embodying the two positions, and for which a dispensation from Grand Lodge has to be obtained), and partook of a sumptuous banquet. The cloth being removed, and the usual loyal and masonic toasts being disposed of, a handsome silver salver, suitably inscribed was presented to Bro. P.M. Secretary, Wm. Wright, by Bro. Morgan (of Norwich) P.G.S., in the name of the brethren, as a token of the high estimation in which he is held, and in return for the invaluable services he has rendered as Secretary, which position he has held for the last 13 years. Altogether a most enjoyable evening was spent, the brethren separating, not at high twelve, but at Bruce's eleven.

TRANQUILITY LODGE (No. 185).—It is somewhat a difficult task to report the proceedings of a lodge gathering when the writer aims at a strict adherence to truth, and is at the same time most anxious to avoid irritating the susceptibilities of the members. For it must be confessed, that although there are numerous lodges, to the working of which no possible exception can be taken, yet there are unfortunately some where unwarrantable laxity is the rule, and becoming decorum scarcely observed. But in this instance it is a happy privilege to be able conscientiously to record that the above lodge is undeniably one of the best conducted in the metropolis, and fortunate in possessing a staff of officers whose Masonic abilities and general intelligence, as exemplified during the discharge of their various duties, are worthy the highest praise. The meeting on the 16th inst. was especially characterised by the amount of work and the manner in which it was accomplished. After the necessary preliminaries, Bro. R. L. Bloomfield, the W.M., who presided, conferred the supreme degree of M.M. upon Bros. Parkinson, Brocksopp, and Grant, and initiated into the ancient mysteries Messrs. Wm. Spence and Henry J. Thompson. The ceremonies were performed with calm dignity, and the solemnity thereof greatly enhanced by the addition of sacred music, under the able superintendence of Bro. Bilby, P.M., 527. The W.M., however, excelled even himself while conducting the onerous duties installing Bro. Nathan Moss as his successor. Generally, the performance of this particular ceremony falls to the lot of some expert Past Master, and is therefore usually done with tolerable efficiency, but it is very rare indeed to witness such proficiency as was displayed by the I.P.M. upon that occasion. The addresses, delivered with marked earnestness, lucidity, and impressiveness were especially listened to with undivided and breathless attention, and at the conclusion the Installing Master was on all sides congratulated upon his successful debut in that capacity. The newly installed W.M. commenced his duties by appointing his officers in the following order:—Bros. John Constable, S.W.; John Ross, J.W.; John Peartree, Treas.; Phillip Levy, Sec.; Joseph Bennett, S.D.; Henry Lyon, J.D.; R. Simons, I.G.; Vesper, Tyler. The brethren having been for several hours diligently at labour, were called off for refreshment, and ample justice was done to the repast prepared for their delectation. The removal of the cloth was followed by the customary loyal and Masonic toasts. The speeches of the W.M. and responses were given with delightful brevity. The former acquitted himself very creditably, considering the novel position in which he was placed, while amongst the latter the most noteworthy were that of Bro. J. M. Lazarus, P.M., &c., who, having been a member of the Craft for just half a century, was deemed the best qualified to reply on behalf of the visitors, a task which the venerable and highly esteemed brother performed with much good humoured eloquence, and also that of Bro. S. Solomon, P.M., who appealed in favour of the Benevolent Fund attached to the lodge in stirring terms, which had the magical effect of softening hearts and opening pockets, resulting in gifts of numerous guineas and half guineas, which came flowing in with exemplary rapidity. This fund up to this meeting amounted to £700, and the speaker expressed his intention never to rest until it has attained the round sum of £1000. The proceedings in the banquetting room were interspersed with music and song. Miss Fowell presided at the piano, assisted by Bro. Joseph Burrett, S.D. The singers were Misses Estella Emerick and Rosa Leo, Bros. Constable, Ross, Farmer, and others. Of the ladies, one deserves especial mention, namely, Rosa Leo, who is only ten years of age, but betrayed an amount of precocious talent which indicates fair promise of future excellence. A selection from "Faust," in Italian, was given by that young artist with such sweetness and precision that it secured for her the hearty applause of all present. Among the Past Masters of the lodge were observed:—Bros. Harfeld, Holbrook, M. Harris, Alex. Levy, and Algernon Sydney. The visitors were:—Bros. T. M. Lazarus, P.M., P.Z., and P. Prov. G.O. Wiltshire; G. Bilby, P.M., 527; E. W. Hunt, W.M. 188; H. M. Levy, P.M., 188; E. P. Albert, P.M. 188; George Kenning, P.M. 192, P.G.D. Middlesex; C. F. Hogard, W.M., 205; C. Slater, P.M., 1309; D. H. Jacobs, P.M., 27; E. Gottheil, P.M. 141; and others.

LANCASTER.—Lodge of Fortitude (No. 281).—The regular meeting of the Lodge of Fortitude was held on Wednesday evening, 12th February, at the Masonic Rooms, Athenæum. There were present the W.M., Bro. William Fleming, W. Hall, I.P.M.; Edward Airey, S.W.; Robt. Greyson J.W.; Edmund Simpson, P.M. and Secretary; Robt. Jervis, S.D.; Richard Taylor, J.D.; W. Duff, I.G.; Watson and Beeley Tylers. Past Masters, John Hatch, George Kelland, and J. Daniel Moore, M.D., P.G.S.B. of England, J. Stanley, J. Bell, W. Heald, J.W. 1353, Ellershaw, Acton, Beesley. Visitors—Bro. Jesse Banning, P.M., 823 and 310; Thomas Jackson, 1051. After the regular business had been transacted and communications read from the Provincial Grand Lodge, a Master-Mason's Lodge was opened, and Bro. Dr. Moore delivered a short lecture on the secrets and mysteries of Freemasonry, and in so doing at first adverted to the rigid inviolability with which they should be kept, and then pointed out the distinction which existed between the secrets and mysteries, showing also when and in what manner they became merged into each other. He then drew the attention of the brethren to the symbol of the Master's office as exemplified in the secrets of Freemasonry, and gave other information on the subject, which for obvious reasons we are unable to record. A hearty vote of thanks was awarded to the lecturer, who briefly responded, and who then proceeded to advocate the cause of the Royal Masonic Institution for Boys, of which Charity he was about to represent the lodge as Steward at the coming Festival. A donation of five guineas was unanimously voted towards that object on the motion of Bro. E. Simpson, P.M., seconded by the S.W., and their being no other business before the lodge, it was closed in due form.

LEEDS.—Fidelity Lodge (No. 289).—On Friday evening, the 14th inst., a conversazione and ball was held by the members of this lodge in their new hall recently erected and opened at Carlton Hill. The company was received by Mrs. Watson and the W.M. (Bro. Watson) at seven p.m., in the lodge room, which had been suitably transformed for the occasion. Here coffee was served, and the guests, who soon mustered upwards of sixty, were for some time occupied in examining various objects of interest placed about in the shape of articles of virtue, philosophical instruments, curiosities, &c., kindly lent by members of the lodge. A fine bedstead in carved oak, once the property of the great Hampden, and slept on on one occasion by Oliver Cromwell, being an object of special interest. A display, ably conducted by Bros. Ramsden (D.C.) and Walker (S.D.), of views photographed in the Island of Java, was afterwards given by means of large sheet and an oxyhydrogen lamp. The company adjourned downstairs into the tastefully decorated banquet room, when dancing commenced, and was kept up with unwonted zeal and spirit during the entire evening, into the "small hours." This lodge is peculiarly fortunate in containing such great musical talent, some of the most gifted local instrumentalists and vocalists being numbered amongst its members, and during the evening a sort of impromptu concert was got up which gave great delight to the audience. Much of the success of the evening must be attributed to the valuable aid rendered by Bros. Kirkley, Ramsden, and Walker, who at a very short notice undertook and carried out the principal arrangements most satisfactorily, and to Bro. W. Glover, the accomplished and zealous Organist of the lodge, who performed the duties of Master of the Ceremonies with great tact and skill. A similar gathering of the Fidelity brethren and their ladies had not taken place for many years, and the company, on breaking up, declared they had never passed a more delightful evening, and determined to repeat at the earliest suitable date what had proved so successful an experiment.

NORTHAMPTON.—Pomfret Lodge (No. 350).—The brethren of this lodge assembled in goodly number on Thursday evening, February 6th, it being the first occasion of their meeting together under the present W.M., Bro. E. W. Tuffley. Three brethren were passed to the second degree, the ceremony being performed by the W.M. Three candidates were balloted for, and, being all elected, were initiated, the ceremony being performed by Bro. P.M. Stanton. £10 was voted towards the Royal Institution for Aged and Decayed Freemasons. At the close of the business the brethren sat down to supper, and afterwards spent a short time in a thoroughly enjoyable manner. There was a good muster of P.M.'s, and every officer was at his post, and the whole proceedings augur well for the Pomfret Lodge for 1873.

DORCHESTER.—Faith and Unanimity Lodge (No. 417).—At the February meeting there were present—Bros. C. Parsons, W.M.; W. P.

Cocheram, S.W.; A. B. Timbrell, J.W.; Rev. P. H. Newnham, Chap.; W. Osmond, Sec.; W. H. Dean, J.D.; H. Ling, D.C.; A. W. Edwards, I.G.; W. How and J. S. Scriver, Stewards; J. Lovelace, Treasurer; Bros. Fenner, A. Atkins, T. Chich, Chamer. Visitors—Bro. J. W. Melhuish 195, St. Patrick's, Belfast, and Bro. Sherry, 76, Economy, Winchester. Mr. Charles Shorto, of Stratton, was initiated into the Order according to ancient form, the W.M. performing the ceremony most efficiently. It was his first initiation, and the able manner in which he acquitted himself shows that he is not unworthy to succeed even so experienced a Mason as Bro. the Rev. P. H. Newnham. The visiting brethren present complimented the officers of the lodge on their good working. The working tools were explained and the charge delivered by Bro. T. Chick, P.M.

WIMBORNE.—St. Cuthbert's Lodge (No. 622).—At the February meeting of this lodge took place the installation of Bro. Henry Charles Burt as W.M. for the current year. There was a large attendance of the Craft, and the ceremony was ably performed by Bro. the Rev. W.M. Heath, assisted by Bro. J. W. Smith. There were visiting brethren present from Blandford, Poole, Weymouth, and London. The W.M. appointed his officers, Bro. Montague Guest, M.P., S.W.; J. W. Taff, J.W.; Rev. W. M. Heath, Chaplain; Bro. C. C. Binett, Sec.; A. J. Budder, S.D.; J. Hammour, J.D.; J. A. Atkins, I.G. At the annual banquet which followed, between 30 and 40 brethren were present.

NEW MILFORD.—Heyland Lodge (No. 990).—On the 11th inst. the brethren of this Lodge met at the South Wales Hotel. There were present (in the absence of the W.M., the chair was ably filled by Bro. T. Phillips, P.M.), Bro. Gaddam, I.P.M.; Bro. T. Phipps, P.M.; Bro. Scritchly, P.M.; Bro. W. G. Phillips, P.M.; Bro. P. S. Davis, S.W.; Bro. Cousins, J.W.; Bro. Haous, S.D.; Bro. J. Davis, J.D.; Bro. Walkley, I. G.; with a full muster of the brethren, with Bro. Shirlan, visitor. Mr. A. Evans having been elected, was initiated into the secrets and mysteries of the order, in a most able manner, by Bro. T. Phillips. The W.M., Bro. Chas. Nibbs having arrived, took the chair of K.S.; Mr. S. Nibbs having answered the necessary questions, was passed to the second degree by the W.M.; in his usual able manner, the working tools being beautifully presented. Two gentlemen having been proposed as candidates, and other necessary business transacted, the Lodge was closed in due form with perfect harmony.

STOCKWELL LODGE (No. 1339).—An emergency meeting of the above lodge was held at Bro. Coles', the Half Moon, Herne Hill, on Tuesday the 18th February, 1873. Present:—Bros. W. Worrell, W.M.; J. Pain, S.W.; J. G. Brighton, J.W.; Frances, Sec.; Klenck, S.D.; Bentam, D.C.; also Bros. Bowyer, Coe Hinckman, and Bassnett. The business of the evening was the raising of Bro. Coe, and the initiation of Messrs. James and John Knibbs. Bro. Bassnet of (Lodge No. 22) having been previously proposed and seconded, was unanimously elected a joining member. All Masonic business having ended the brethren adjourned to a very excellent supper, presided over by the W.M.

WIDNES.—The Lodge of Equity, No. 1384.—The first anniversary of this lodge, which was consecrated twelve months ago, under highly favourable circumstances, was celebrated on Tuesday last, the 18th inst., at the Sims' Cross Hotel, Widnes. The principal business was the installation of Bro. Reginald Young, W.M. elect, and the large attendance of brethren showed the great respect in which the retiring and prospective Master were held. The lodge was opened according to established form, shortly after three o'clock, by Bro. J. W. J. Fowler, W.M., who was supported by the subjoined officers and brethren of the Equity:—Bros. R. Young, J.W.; W. Jameson, Treas.; R. D. Simpson, Sec.; H. S. Oppenheim, S.D.; J. W. Wareing, I.G.; W. Newsome, S.; T. Seplton, T.; J. White, J. Walker, Borthwick, W. J. Thompson, J. A. Stoddart, J. T. Hall, J. Sampson, J. W. Carlisle, G. King, and J. Knight. Amongst the visitors were Bros. J. Hamer, P.P.G., Treas.; J. T. Birchall, P.M. 86; Dr. Morris, P.M. 86; W. Leather, W.M. 897; J. W. R. Fowler, W.M. 86; C. C. Imison, P.M. 758; H. Nelson, P.M. 673; A. Gurney, S.D. 897; B. Elvis, 477; A. Mitchell, 477; J. H. Jordan, 897; J. Van Denne, 86; W. Tyrer, Sec., 86; G. Stead, &c. After the minutes of the previous meeting had been read and unanimously confirmed, Bro. J. W. J. Fowler proceeded with installation of Bro. Young as W.M. The ceremony throughout was performed in a masterly style and impressive manner, the charges to the new staff of officers of the lodge being given by Bro. J. Hamer. The newly chaired W.M. subsequently invested the following brethren as his officers:—Bros. R. D. Simpson, S.W.; H. S. Oppenheim, J.W.; W. Jameson, Treas.; R. W. Wareing, Sec.; W. Newsome, S.D.; W. Thompson, J.D.; J. King, I.G.; J. White, S.S.; and Borthwick, J.S. Bro. Seplton was unanimously re-elected Tyler for the ensuing year. Before the termination of the business hearty good wishes were conveyed to the W.M. by brothers representing lodges Numbers, 86, 148, 477, 537, 858, 673, and 1,086. The brethren afterwards sat down to an excellent banquet, presided over by the W.M., who was honoured with the presence of a strong muster of P.M.'s. After the customary loyal and Masonic toasts, Bro. Fowler, I.P.M., proposed "The Health of the W.M.," referring to his many excellent qualities as a Mason and a citizen. After acknowledging the compliment, Bro. Young, W.M., gave "The Health of the I.P.M." in a terse and excellent speech, and concluded by presenting him with a massive gold ring, set with a stone of the Masonic colour, as a token of the admiration of the brethren of the lodge of his valuable services as their first W.M. Bro. Fowler acknowledged the handsom present in suitable and eloquent terms. After spending a pleasant evening the brethren separated at an early hour.

Mark Masonry.

SOUTH MOLTOX.—Fortescue Lodge (No. 9).—This old and flourishing lodge held its usual monthly meeting on Monday, at the Masonic Hall, a very large number of the members being present. After the minutes of the last lodge-night had been read and confirmed, and the business of the lodge disposed of, Bro. Capt. Davey, the W.M., informed the lodge that our late much respected P.G.M. had resigned his office, which he had so long and worthily filled, and that he (the W.M.) had been appointed P.G.M. in his stead. It was proposed by Bro. Shapland, seconded by Bro. Riccard, and unanimously resolved, that the congratulations of the lodge be given to our W.M. for the honour conferred on him, and that it may please the G.A.O.T.U. to grant him health to enable him to perform the duties of his office, which this lodge was assured he would discharge with credit to himself and satisfaction to the brethren of the province. The lodge was then closed in due form, and the brethren repaired to the Unicorn Hotel, where a splendid banquet had been prepared for their reception by Bro. Cole at the request and expense of the W.M. The room was beautifully decorated with Masonic devices and the table with rare flowers, the wines were all that could be wished, and a most pleasant evening was spent.

Ancient and Accepted Rite.

NEWPORT.—Ivor Hael Chapter of Rose Croix.—A chapter of Sovereign Princes Rose Croix of H.R.D.M., was held at the Newport Masonic Hall, on Monday. By permission of the brethren ladies and gentlemen, properly introduced, whether by members of the Order or not, were allowed to inspect the decorations, which constitute a great feature of this really beautiful chivalric degree. The brilliantly lighted altar, the splendidly wrought banners (not fewer than eighteen in number), and the other sumptuous embellishments were witnessed with admiration by those who were thus privileged, the ladies especially being charmed with the coup d'œil presented in the principal room. In truth, it was a scene sufficient to dazzle the eyes of any ordinary observer. We were pleased to hear a highly commendatory remark from Major Shadwell Clerke, (the father of the Chapter), who is so frequently engaged in Masonic ceremonials, both in the Metropolis and the Provinces—to the effect that nowhere had he found these degrees of Masonry more tastefully, more beautifully aided by the accessories of elegance and art than in Newport. It is a high compliment to the Ivor Hael Chapter that its founder is this year selected for the distinguished honour of the 33°—that is, a member of the Supreme Grand Council for England and Wales! The Chapter having been duly opened, five candidates, viz., Bros. George Shaddick, Swansea, 207; W. B. Broad, Monmouth, 457; E. H. Bromage, Monmouth, 457; Henry Greene, Newport, 371, and H. Ansell Smith, Swansea, were duly perfected. The next business was to elect the M.W.S. for the ensuing year. Bro. Major Clerke had great pleasure in proposing for election to the honour of M.W.S. of the Ivor Hael Chapter, Bro. L. Augustus Homfray, under his worthy brother, the present M.W.S. No one, he felt certain, had the interest of Masonry in general, and of this Chapter in particular, more at heart, than Bro. Homfray. (Masonic approbation.) Bro. H. Martyn Kaynard seconded the proposition in a few hearty fraternal expressions. Bro. L. Augustus Homfray felicitously returned thanks. A proposition to alter the days of holding the periodical meetings of the Ivor Hael was carried. In future they will be on the last Wednesday in July, and the last Wednesday in January of each year. The installation of Bro. L. A. Homfray will, therefore, take place in Midsummer. The sum of ten guineas was unanimously voted to the charity of the Aged and Decayed Freemasons, which constitutes a life governorship for the M.W.S. for the time being, of the Ivor Hael. It was resolved that a jewel be presented to each of the P.M.W.S.'s in succession by the Chapter. Brother Major Clerke was literally overwhelmed with thanks for his great kindness to the Ivor Hael, and, with his usual self-abnegation he took but small credit to himself. There were other complimentary passages, and the "third point" having been given, the Chapter was closed. The excellent and impressive manner in which Bro. S. George Homfray went through his very arduous task as M.W.S. deserves special commendation. None but those who appreciate Masonry in its practical and inexorable work, know the drain upon the mental faculties which high office entails. Brother Homfray showed that he had acquired the nice and delicate working of that roseate degree with consummate skill. Not a rose lost a petal, nor a flower drooped, in the pretty, ay, the very pretty ceremony of the Rose Croix.

Red Cross of Constantine.

BYZANTINE CONCLAVE (No. 44).—The regular assembly of this flourishing Conclave took place at the Freemasons' Hall, Leicester, on Wednesday, the 12th instant, when there was a full average attendance of members. In consequence of the alarming illness of the Rev. Dr. Haycroft, V.E., the chair of C. was filled by the Int. Genl. of the Province, Sir Kt. W. Kelly, the M.P.S., Sir Kt. G. Toller, jun., acting as V.E. Of the seven candidates on the summons five were in attendance, and having been approved on a ballot were regularly installed by the Int. Genl. as Knights of the Order, the traditional history and charge being given by Sir Kt. Toller. The Int. Genl. referring to the sudden and dangerous illness of Dr. Haycroft, said that he was sure that every member would join in the wish that his life might be spared. The M.P.S., Sir Kt. Toller, spoke of the great services rendered by Dr. Haycroft to the Red Cross Order in general, and No. 44 in particular. The ballot was then taken for the election of the officers for the ensuing year, when Dr. Haycroft, as M.P.S., and Sir Kt. S. S. Partridge, as V.E., were unanimously elected, Sir Kt. Sculthorpe being also unanimously re-elected Treasurer. Sir Kt. Partridge expressed his acknowledgments for the honour conferred upon him. Sir Kt. Toller stated that he had suggested to the authorities the desirability of holding movable provincial assemblies of the Grand Conclave in the manner so successfully adopted in the Mark degree, and that Sir Kt. R. W. Little had engaged to bring the matter forward at the annual assembly in March. It was, after some discussion, unanimously resolved that the Grand Council be invited to hold a Provincial Grand Conclave in Leicester, on Wednesday the 14th of May next (being the day of the installation of the M.P.S.), or at such other time as they may appoint. It is hoped that if the invitation be accepted, it may result in a large gathering of members of the Order from all parts of the kingdom. This can scarcely fail to be advantageous to the interests of the degree, which has hitherto suffered from want of some such means of intercommunion between its members. We trust that the Red Cross Order, having now established friendly relations with the other Masonic jurisdictions, has before it a long career of even increased success and usefulness.

Scotland.

GLASGOW.—St. Andrew's Chapter (No. 69).—The regular monthly meeting of this chapter was held on Tuesday, the 11th instant. Comp. J. D. Humphries, M.E.Z., presided. There was a large attendance of visitors, amongst whom were Comps. Balfour, P.Z. 73; G. W. Wheeler, H. 73; and J. Kay, R. Kay, R. Skinner, 973; T. Halket, Z. 113; J. G. Park, Z. 122, and Gumm, Mc. Kennan and Boyd of 122. A Lodge of Mark Masters was opened by Comp. Humphries as M.M.; J. Balfour, P.Z. 73, acting as S.W.; G. W. Wheeler, H., 73, acting J.W.; Bro. R. Gregory, of Campbellton, was duly advanced to the degree of Mark Master. A Lodge of Excellent Masters was then formed with the same officers when Comp. Halket, Z. of 113, worked that degree at the request of the Z., and the Royal Arch Degree was also conferred upon him, Comp. Halket acting as Z; Comp. Humphries filling the chair of H., and T. M. Campbell, P.Z. 69, that of J. With such staff of officers it is needless to say the ceremony was very efficiently rendered, for the work of Comp. Halket is known and appreciated throughout the province; and it is one of the best features of Masonry in Glasgow that the brethren are always ready to assist in any capacity any Lodge or Chapter that they may be visiting.

GLASGOW.—Glasgow Chapter (No. 50).—Thursday, February the 13th, was a red letter day amongst the companions of the Arch in Glasgow, for Comp. J. Crabb, M.E.Z. of No. 50, had invited most of the Principals in the city to attend a special meeting to exalt into the degree Bro. W. M. Neilson, P.G.M. of the province, and three other gentlemen of high social standing, and the call was well responded to, for on the dais, beside the Principals of the Chapter Glasgow No. 50, we observed T. A. Barrow, P.G.Z; A. Mc. Taggart, M.A. the P.G. Scribe, E.; J. Crabb, P.G.S.N.; J. Balfour, P.G. 1st. S.; T. D. Humphries, Z of 69, P.G. 2nd S.; G Mc. Donald, Z, 73, P.G.S.B; T. Halket, Z; 113, P.G.T; T. Duthie, Z., 67; J. J. Tweed, D.C.K.T. A Lodge of Mark Masters was opened, J. Crabb, Z, of 50, as R.W.M.M. who selected the following Comps. to assist him, J. Balfour, P.Z. of 73 as S.W.; G.W. Wheeler, H. 73, as J.W.; T. Halket, Z. of 113, and G. Mc. Donald Z. of 73 as S. and J. Deacons, Comp. Miller, R.W.M. of 113, as Organist. Letters of apology were read from Councillors Steel, and S. More, M.D., regretting that professional engagements had prevented them from attending. Bros. T. J. Smilie, R.W. M. of 3½ St. Johns, and Wm. Crawford were then separately introduced and regularly advanced to the degree of Mark Master.

GLASGOW.—A lodge of Most Excellent Masters was then formed, with the same officers, when the same two gentlemen were entrusted with the secret of that degree, and passed through the veils. A chapter of the Holy Royal Arch was then opened, Comp. J. Crabb, Z. 50, P.G.S.N. as 1st P.; J. Duthie, Z. 47, as H.; J. Frazer, H. of 50, as J.; C. Halket, Z. 17; G. W. W. Wheeler, H. 73; and G. McDonald, Z. of 73, as the three Sojourners. Bros. Smilie and Crawford were then duly exalted as Royal Arch Masons. At the close of the lengthened ceremonies, Comp. Crabb, as Z. of 50 tendered, the thanks of the chapter to all the visitors for their attendance, and more especially to those Principals who had kindly taken subordinate positions under him, in order to more efficiently render the various ceremonies. He also thanked the Provincial Grand Superintendent, Comp. Barrow, for his kindness in attending to grace the occasion with his presence. F. A. Barrow in reply, said he thought that he, in common with the rest of Companions rather ought to return thanks to Comp. Crabb, and the rest of the companions who had so ably assisted him in working all these three degrees so admirably; it had indeed been a rich intellectual treat, and while they had such workers in the province, and they continued to be actuated by the same fraternal spirit that that had prompted them that day, they need have no fears for the progress of Arch Masonry in Glasgow. The chapter was then closed, all having been well pleased with the day's proceedings.

Reviews.

The Science of Theology, or the Order of Universal History; Established by Scriptural and Historical Data, and illustrated by a Chart and Tables. By ROBERT GREGORY, 8vo. pp. 428. London, Nisbett.

It is seldom that a volume embodying the result of so much labour and research on a high and noble subject, and written in a style as clear and attractive as the one before us, falls under our notice. The object of the author we may describe as being an exhibition and illustration of the unity of the Divine plan and the wisdom of the Divine government, in relation to mankind and the world they inhabit, for the purpose of moral, intellectual, and spiritual training, and the development of their faculties as a preparation for that higher state of existence which the Beneficent Creator has destined for them. Neither sacred nor profane history, nor both combined, will enlighten the understanding of a careless or superficial reader on these high subjects. On the contrary, he will meet with much to perplex him, much that seems incompatible with any Divine plan or purpose of the Great Architect of the Universe, much that will appear contradictory to all its ideas of a moral Government, designed and unceasingly exercised for the present and future welfare of mankind. The pages of history present us with constant scenes of apparent disorder and confusion—individuals and nations striving to distinguish themselves by deeds of violence and cruelty, relentlessly waging war upon others, and devastating the fairest portions of the earth, in pursuit of objects to which a false ambition or a base desire of predominance has promoted them. Wherever we look, we find an apparent absence of that order and happiness which all our ideas of a wise and beneficent Being suggest, as characteristic of His wisdom and power. As our author observes, "In connection with the numerous changes which have transpired, in the past of mankind, there remains no difficulty in detecting the intrigues of ambitious spirits, the rule of injustice, and the train of human depravity and misery, which is certain to follow in their wake; but in all this, history fails to discover the working out of great principle, or the existence of any plan tending to the general emancipation and regeneration of the human race."

If we survey the material universe, we find a different state of things. There, all is found subject to law; everything exhibits part of an orderly plan and purpose. All emergencies are provided for, and even those occurrences which we call accidents are the results of laws which operate with unerring truth.

"The very law that moulds a tear,
And bids its trickle from its source,
Preserves the universe a sphere,
And guides the planets in their course."

It may be safely inferred, that similar order governs the moral and intellectual condition of mankind; and to discover this is an object worthy of the highest order of mind. As our author writes—

"It would have been altogether incompatible with the character of the Almighty had mankind been left to the uncertain issue of a train of fortuitous circumstances. The presence of God, as the Sovereign Ruler of the Universe, is of itself a sufficient guarantee for the existence of order and design in all that relates to mankind. It cannot be supposed that the Infinite mind was without a purpose when man was first made, nor can we for a moment entertain the idea, that the circumstance of the fall of our first parents arose through any disorganization in those laws which had been instituted, from the first, for the government of the whole creation. It is doubtless true, that all creation, and the different laws by which it is governed, the primary state of mankind, and the order of dispensations which have subsequently transpired, were all founded by God, in accordance with the laws of truth, and that for one great and eternal purpose. It therefore follows, that all creation and its laws must harmonise with the character of God Himself, from whom, as the source of all existence, they radiate, and to whom, as the first and ever-sustaining power, they must of necessity converge."

It was to work out and develop this great problem, with respect both to man's present and future state, as this forms part of the Divine purpose, that the author undertook the laborious task, of which we have the result in the volume before us, consisting of twenty-nine chapters, in addition to a "prospectus," in which the object of the work is judiciously indicated. Beginning with an enquiry into the nature of man, in his relation to both worlds, Mr. Gregory leads us through the wide regions opened up in the pages of sacred and profane history, and concludes with "a full and complete solution" of the apocalyptic visions, as they portray the future of man in both the worlds to which he is related. Such of our readers as have taken an interest in the series of papers on the Israelites and the Anglo-Saxons with which Brother Carpenter favoured us, and which have since been re-published in the form of a book, will find much in the work before us in accordance with the views which our Brother Carpenter had propounded, on a subject that is exciting enquiry and study amongst students and thoughtful men generally.

It can hardly be expected that in reviewing a work of so multifarious and comprehensive a character, and treating of topics so far out of the ordinary course of reading and study, as this "Science of Theology, or the Order of Universal History" is, we should be able to say that we concur in all the author's conclusions, or that we deem all his reasoning and alleged proofs alike happy. We do not; but, taking the work as a whole, we can heartily commend it to our readers, as one in which they will find much to instruct in those hidden mysteries of nature and science which yield such gratification to the diligent student.

The Lifebout, Feb. 1st, 1873. This useful "Quarterly" is again a candidate for our best wishes, and deserves every success. Of course many of its accounts are most saddening, but, withal, its report for the last quarter contains many points which should stimulate and cheer us in aiding so noble an enterprise.

We notice that during 1872 the work of the Lifebout Institution may be summarised as follows:—

Lives saved from shipwreck by Life-boats	569
By shore boats &c., for whose services rewards have been granted by the Institution	170
	739

We give our warmest thanks to the committee and officers of this most valuable Institution, and unite with them in praying that this year not may be so stormy as the last, and that the public will continue to support the National Lifeboat Institution (which is so merciful and patriotic in its design) as it deserves.

The International Masonic Review (New York). We are glad to see Bro. F. G. Tisdall has resumed active labour again on behalf of the Fraternity, and as Editor of the foregoing, he is sure to make his mark in the Masonic world, as he has already, as former Editor of "Masonic Department of Pomeroy's Democrat." The "Review" is well printed, neatly arranged, and carefully edited, and bids fair to be widely circulated.

Rev. John W. Simons is Editor of the Local Department, and commences in the first number to set the dishes in order as Steward, and as he trusts to the brethren for the material whereof the same may be composed, we hope they will give a bountiful provision.

Tribunals of Commerce. (London Mirror office.) The small pamphlet now before us will repay a careful perusal, and as it is edited by sure the Hon. Sec., Mr. John Robert Taylor, it is to be found as valuable as it is trustworthy. The object of the compiler is to draw attention "ere it be too late," to the vital importance of rendering the proposed Tribunal of Commerce for the City of London "as exempt as possible from the legal element."

Without venturing to offer any remarks as to the object of the compilation, we may state that a Parliamentary notice of the Corporation of the City of London has already been inserted in the public papers in November last, for the Session of 1873, by which it appears that the Mayor, Aldermen and Commons of the City of London (otherwise known as the Corporation of the City of London) intend to apply to Parliament for leave to bring in a bill.

"To establish a Court or Tribunal of Commerce of the City of London, for the trial and determination of all disputed questions which may arise between the parties to any commercial transaction in relation thereto, and effected within such limits as the bill may define or as Parliament may prescribe.

Mr. Taylor inserts a number of letters on the subject, and certainly as we have all our interest in this important matter, we cannot do better than advise our readers to procure copies of the little book, and read for themselves.

The Evergreen. Dec. 1872. (Iowa U. S. A.) This number is remarkable for an excellent copper plate engraved portrait of Z. C. Luse, M.E. Grand High Priest of Grand Chapter of Iowa, and a capital memoir of William Sewell Gardner, Past Grand Master of Massachusetts. The career of this most indefatigable and intelligent Mason is skilfully sketched by the masterhand of Bro. W. C. Moore, Editor Freemasons' Monthly Magazine and as our distinguished brother is now in the prime of life, we expect that he will render still more service on behalf of the Fraternity.

Proceedings Supreme Grand Council, 33^o, United States, N.J. The volume now under notice is for 1872, and though not so interesting as some of the earlier issues, is nevertheless of great value to all the adherents of that most flourishing Rite. Bro. Josiah H. Drummond, 33^o, is the Commander, and Bro. Daniel Sickles, 33^o, Hon. Sec. General. During the recess the thirty-third degree was conferred upon some thirty members of the 32^o, all no doubt worthy men and zealous masons, but it strikes us that such wholesale receptions into the last and highest degree of the Ancient and Accepted Rite, is quite foreign to its original foundation.

The claim of Supreme Council of Scotland to concurrent jurisdiction with the Supreme Council of England, in the dominion of Canada, has caused a flutter in the United States, and is now being investigated with extra care and caution. The correspondence on the subject is appended, and we are not a little interested on the subject ourselves. An offer was sent the Supreme Council of U.S. by the body in England to endeavour to open up a means of reconciliation with the Grand Orient of France, so far as the United States Councils are concerned. "An act of Incorporation" was agreed on, and will be accepted, and also the legal appointment of Trustees. The meetings were held at New York, from the 17th September, 1872, and were of a most and unanimous and pleasing character.

Boletim Do Grande Or. Unido Do Brazil. This official publication is issued monthly, and we have pleasure in acknowledging of late the receipt of the numbers for the last quarter of the year 1872. The publishing office is at Rio De Janeiro. We notice that a communication was received from Bro. Goodall, 33^o, Representative of the Supreme Council of Brazil at the Northern Jurisdiction of United States, 33^o, and considerable space is devoted to general Masonic intelligence.

The Freemasons Calendar for the Province of Dorset. By HENRY LING, Dorchester.

A very useful list for the local brethren, by whom it is doubtlessly well appreciated.

Obituary.

BRO. ALEXANDER CROMBIE BREBNER.

Again the hand of death has beckoned one of our brethren away, and as a personal and intimate relation, I have especially, to mourn the loss of Bro. Alexander Crombie Brebner, who died peacefully, although suddenly, on the 26th of January last. He was the eldest son of the eminent advocate, James Brebner, Esq., of Aberdeen, and had himself for many years occupied a confidential and important post in the Audit Office, Somerset House, London.

He was initiated in the Oak Lodge, 190, on my own proposition, seconded by Bro. John Hogg, on Wednesday, the 18th of May, 1870, the ceremony being impressively performed by Bro. Littauer; he was subsequently passed and raised in the St. John's Lodge, No. 167, Hampstead, in which lodge he took a deep interest. Although not a prominent Mason, he was one who ever expressed in his acts towards others, a right understanding of the great principles of Masonry, and acted upon them in no niggardly spirit.

He was a member of the Social Science Institute, in the proceedings of which he took a constant share, and he was also a fellow and member of the Anthropological Society, where he supported the financial economies of Bro. Hyde Clarke.

As a man of education and taste, there were few of his time who could rank higher, and as a personal friend, I can myself, with great sorrow at his loss, testify to his sterling and amiable qualities.

When he entered our Fraternity, I was glad that he turned to me for such slight services as I could perform, and the many brethren who remember him will join in my sincere regret that, after a close friendship of many years, he should have passed away without further distinction at the early age of forty-one.—K. R. H. MCKENZIE.

BRO. THORNBUR, P.M., 381.

On Saturday, 1st inst., the mortal remains of Bro. George Thornbur, P.M., mason, builder and contractor, of Darwen, Lancashire, (who met with his death from inflammation of the brain, caused by falling down a cellar-way in Green-street, on Thursday, the 23rd ult.) were interred in the family vault at Holy Trinity Church. The deceased brother has left a widow and two small children, and was thirty-six years of age. He was a well-known tradesman, and much respected by his workmen and a large circle of friends, and held in high esteem by his brethren of the Craft. As the deceased brother had expressed an anxious desire that his funeral should be conducted Masonically, the usual dispensation was procured from the Provincial Grand Lodge, and as the deceased was a P.M. of Lodge Harmony and Industry, 381, Darwen, his brethren mustered in strong force and preceded the hearse in full Masonic costume in accordance with their degrees, amongst whom we may name—Bros. T. Grime, W.M.; James Bentley, P.M.; L. Roberts, P.M.; Benson Wood, P.M.; R. H. Smalley, P.M.; W. Almond, S.W.; T. Almond, J.W.; Geo. Grime, S.D.; Thomas Robinson, J.D.; B. M. Cormack,

I.G.; W. G. Hutchinson, P.M., and O.G.; Geo. Wood, P.M., and Secretary; George Martin, Treas.; Charles Tiplady, of Blackburn, 345, P.G.P.T.; G. Dearden, W.M. 345; Duckworth and Eastwood, P.M.'s, 545; Cunliffe of Blackburn, and the Rev. Charles Hughes, of Tockholes near Darwen, Chaplain to 345. The Rev. R. Mayall, Vicar of the Church, kindly permitted the organ to be used on the occasion. On the corpse entering the sacred edifice, Bro. A. M. Briggs presided at the organ, and the solemn tunes produced a feeling most reverent and religious on all who entered. Large numbers were moved to tears, the beautiful burial service of the Church of England was impressively read by the worthy vicar. On the corpse leaving the church, the "Dead March" was performed on the organ. The funeral service at the grave having been concluded by the Vicar, the brethren formed a circle around the vault of the departed brother. The Chaplain read his portion of the ceremony, and the language of our beautiful service was most impressively read, his manner of delivery being deeply affecting and calculated to produce deep thought and seriousness while we received "a striking instance of the uncertainty of life, and the vanity of all human pursuits."

The W.M. of the Lodge then concluded the ceremony in the usual words of our Masonic ritual, responded to by the brethren. The service being ended, the brethren retired in the usual order, and dropped the ivyleaf on to the coffin of their departed brother, and returned to the lodge-room, where a cup of tea, &c., awaited them, provided by Bro. Gregg of the New Inn, and which was heartily welcome, as the day was bitterly cold and a strong nipping wind was blowing at the time. After tea the memory of the deceased brother was mentioned in the usual form, and his character and Masonic feelings were highly eulogised by his brethren and Bro. Tiplady, and a most impressive prayer by the Chaplain on behalf of the widow and children. The Lodge was closed as usual at half-past three.

BRO. THE REV. DR. HAYCROFT, W.M. 523.

We deeply regret to record that the illness elsewhere alluded to of the Rev. Dr. Haycroft, of Leicester, has terminated fatally. He expired on the afternoon of Sunday, the 16th instant, after an illness of only nine days, but the severity of the symptoms from the first were such as to leave but slight hopes of his recovery. His removal creates a void in the town, and especially in the Masonic body, that will not be easily filled.

One of a class—that of Nonconformist Ministers—but too seldom represented in the ranks of the Craft, he had by his conspicuous abilities attained a high position in the town, and secured the respect and esteem, not only of his friends, but even of those who differed from him.

As a preacher he enjoyed a wide-spread reputation, whilst as a Mason his career, though somewhat brief, had been highly honourable. He was remarkable for the strict punctuality no less than the ability with which he invariably fulfilled his Masonic engagements, notwithstanding that his time was largely occupied, the duties of every office he undertook were always efficiently and conscientiously performed.

He was, we believe, initiated in the Universal Lodge, London, No. 181, in the year 1868, of which lodge his brother-in-law, Dr. Wilkinson, was then Master; he afterwards joined the John of Gaunt Lodge, Leicester, No. 523; in 1868 he was appointed Senior Deacon, and having successively filled both Warden's chairs, he was unanimously elected W. Master in June last, since which time he has presided over the lodge with marked ability and success. As Prov. G. Chaplain, he delivered a masterly oration on the occasion of the consecration of St. Peter's Lodge, Market Harborough, which justly enhanced his Masonic reputation.

He was exalted to the R.A. in the Chapter of Fortitude, No. 279, and held the office of Prin. Soj. at the time of his death.

In the Mark degree he was a Past Grand Chaplain of England, and J.W. of the Fowke Lodge, No. 19.

He was one of the founders of the Byzantine Red Cross Conclave at Leicester, and it is to him mainly that its success is due. The important services which he had rendered to the Order were recognised by his promotion to the Grand Senate, of which he was a member at his decease. As noticed in another part of our paper, he was only last week unanimously elected to the principal chair of the Conclave.

He was the President of the local Literary and Philosophical Society, and a member of the School Board.

The funeral was to take place yesterday (Friday), and was to be attended by members of the Masonic and other public bodies with which he was connected.

Servant of God well done
Rest from thy lov'd employ,
The battle fought, the victory won,
Enter thy Master's joy.

BRO. CAPT. JOHN GEORGE FREER.

At Auckland, New Zealand, on the 10th November last, the mortal remains of Captain John George Freer were conveyed to the cemetery, and there interred with the ceremonies which are used by the brethren of the body of Free and Accepted Masons—ceremonies intended to symbolize a blessed eternity, which all Masons are instructed to believe will fall to the lot of a true and faithful brother of the Craft, ceremonies very beautiful and most touching to every one of them. Two hundred and forty of the brotherhood were present, but the cortège was swelled to quite 400 by the addition of the personal friends and acquaintances of the deceased. As the funeral procession marched to the place of interment, the fine band belonging to the Artillery preceding the coffin, which was carried by eight bearers, played the "Dead March." The Masonic burial service was read and the funeral oration pronounced very impressively by Bro. Andrew Beveridge, R.W.P.D.G.M., S.C. The deceased brother had attended the Roman Catholic Church, and a few hours previous to his death a priest was sent for to administer the last consolations of the Church offered to the dying. On the arrival of the rev. father he exhorted the dying man to renounce his connection with the brotherhood of Freemasons, but this he declined doing. Then the rev. father declared he could not under these circumstances administer the sacred rites of the Church, nor pronounce the absolution. But Bro. Freer, knowing that his end was very near, still refused to renounce his connection with that fraternity he had sworn at his initiation to be a worthy member of, and the rev. father left. After Bro. Freer died, Bro. Simon Lipstine, 421, I.C., waited on the Right Rev. Dr. Croke, Roman Catholic Bishop of Auckland, and requested that the funeral service according to the Roman Catholic Church might be read over the coffin in which the dead man's body had been placed. But, greatly lamenting the circumstance, Bishop Croke declined to allow this to be done. He would willingly, he said, have complied with the request, but by doing so he would bring down upon himself the censure of the Church. Neither was it permitted that the body of the deceased should be buried within the precincts of the Roman Catholic burying ground. An application was made and burial space was offered for the deceased's remains within the area of the Presbyterian interment ground.

The refusal of Burial of the Priests of his religion caused considerable correspondence in the local paper, the Daily Southern Cross.

The Right Honourable the Lord Skelmersdale, Provincial Grand Master for the Western Division of Lancashire has consented to take the chair at the 85th Anniversary Festival of the Royal Masonic Institution for Girls on Wednesday the 14th May.

The annual assembly of the General Grand Conclave of the Order of Constantine will be held at Freemasons' Tavern, Great Queen-street, on Thursday, the 6th March, under the presidency of the Earl of Bective, M.P.

Microscopical investigation has proved that the substances which accumulate between the teeth contain animal and vegetable parasites, and that the tooth powders, pastes, and washes in general use have no effect upon these. Messrs. Gabriel's Coralite Tooth Paste and Royal Dentifrice (sold by all chemists and perfumers at 1s. 6d. per box) completely destroy and remove these animalcules and also preserve and beautify the teeth. ALPHA AND OMEGA.

Earthborn! remark the wrong and degradation
Which ev'ry Vice entails upon the Soul.
Dragging it from the higher aspiration
By Affinity's durable control
Into the mire.
Albeit wordly-wise: how can our Measure
Enlarged and graduated be, to suit
The standard of the unseen Next Life's treasure?
Brute can but have affinity for brute
And rise no higher.

The Spirit liberated from its mansion
Must seek its like; e'en in the World beyond.
The Soul refined, may soar to bright expansion
In hope and faith, discarding ev'ry bond.
The base—appears
With downcast eyes, which cannot bear the Light
With low desires, to Earth and Lust yet clinging;
Purblind and hampered from the loftier flight,
And out of place 'mid purer Spirits, winging
To purer spheres

Bright, on our meaner thoughts and darker ways,
What mem'ries glimmer from the Ages past!
What stately pageants of classic days
Transient, as tho' too beautiful to last
For our birthright!
Visions of early Faith and Virtue strong
Of Inspiration in the human breast,
When Truth was victor over Fraud and Wrong;
When Error only seem'd to rear its crest
For Gods to smite.

Too clear and lambent for our grosser Mind
The aura of the old Ideals glanced.
Colour and Form and Poesy entwined
In graceful and fantastic guise, advanced To reach us.
The Artists of Expression and of Form
Swept boldly up to bear the meed of Fame;
Invoking Beauty from the waste and storm
Genius—in grandest aspiration, came To teach us.

The Master-Minds of Ages toiled and thought
To give new life to a dull world's desire;
Giants of Art applied what Sages taught Achieving Wonders. And where are they; Fire
And Sword consumed them!
The wretched remnant of the Hebrews, wept
In Babylonian and Assyrian chains;
Babylon and Syria in turn were swept,
Leaving to us—but shards, whose frail remains Entombed them.

Egypt succumbed beneath the Persian's blows.
Its hoary Treasures well-nigh gone for ever,
Until the Greeks, Persia's victorious foes,
Built up the ruins; And the rich endeavour
Was richly paid.
Then rose the great and glorious result
Alexandria! Learning, Art, Science,
With mighty Philadelphus to consult;
To all our rivalry bequeath'd defiance,
Cast all in shade.

Law works by man! The Roman's ruthless will Blotted from us that hoarded priceless Lore.
And gaunt fanatics, men more ruthless still,
Grew on the spot and ev'ry record tore Widely in sunder!
We strive to rebuild what was there destroyed;
And marvel at the frenzy and the hate
Which could make such majestic labour void,
That Library, Museum,—desolate.
Wonder of wonder!

Fanaticism—or Intolerance!
The monomaniacs saddest spur to Crime.
Which ev'ry passion must perforce enhance:
The cause of scenes in ev'ry age and clime
Which most appall.
If Devils have faith—'tis thus pestilent,
And nourished thus on dark and monstrous deeds!

Which kill itself whene'er its force be spent.
What is the end of all such burning Creeds?
Where are they all?

DIRGE.

Osiris and Isis—your fanes are athirst,
The groves are a desert, the worship accurst.
The keys and the symbols of mysteries dread
Forgotten, the very tradition is dead!
No perfumes of spices bewilder the brow;
A loathsome miasma, is sacrifice now.
No Hierophant grovels in dust at the door,
Your mandates recorded—no more!

No more!

Thou Hebrew vision materialised!
Whose grand proportions the Tyrian devised:
The splendour and riches of jewels and gold
Of marbles and cedar—are blent with the mould.
Lust and rapacity, judgment of crime,—
Scatter'd the fragments thro' ages of Time.
Tho' twice thou wert a del' for Israel's ad'or
The foundations know thee—no more—

No more!

Halls of the Norsemen! Your Gods are no more.
Off to Walhalla their Legends they bore,
Where blue-eyed Walkuras divided the spoil
And goblets of Mead-drink refreshed them from toil.
Still'd is Thor's hammer, your symbol of old,
Fled are the Dragoons, and vanish'd the Gold;
Not now on black pinions enchanted they soar,
And Skalds chant the Sagas—no more—

No more!

Awful Olympus! For long in the world
No thun'dring Zeus his anger has hurled,
No heroes to Pall as invoking have knelt,
Nor graceful divinities with us have dealt.
Cavern of Delphi! 'mid incense and smoke
Where sov'reigns paled when the Oracle spoke,
Lost and deserted the influence of yore.
The Pythoness foaming no more—

No more!

Rome! The victorious, mighty, renown'd,
Relics of Empires encumber thy ground!
Mars is no longer. So abject and mean
A monk was Lord where a Caesar had been.
Intriguers may plot and conspirators grieve
Or Christianised Europe revere and believe,
But Mem'ries alone are left to adore
And thy Pentiff is Caesar—no more—

No more!

The factor Time ploughs up all in the Past.
Ruin, the owner, reaps harvest at last.
Our Temples rest on the bones of the dead,
Out of Corruption the living are fed.
Let the bigot behold and mark well the decay.
That To-morrow weep not for his Pride of To-day!
For all, on one scroll, in predestin'd array,
Time, Ruin, and Bigot—are passing away!

On the 27th December, St. Johns' Day, the brethren of the Northern Lodge of China, No. 570, held their usual annual meeting, when Bro. W. A. Turnbull was installed as W.M., Bros. F. S. Barnes and T. R. Wheelock being appointed as Wardens. After the ceremony the brethren dined, and spent a pleasant evening together at the Shanghai Club.

BRO. EMRA HOLMES'S LECTURE ON THE ORDERS OF THE TEMPLE AND HOSPITAL.

By LEFUS.

And so Bro. Holmes refreshingly hopes I am satisfied. I venture to believe that the intelligence of your readers will have induced them to suppose that I am satisfied in a very homoeopathic manner if I am content with what has been advanced by Bro. Holmes for their consideration.

Bro. Holmes appears to consider that the replies of Sir George Bowyer to certain questions, put by a distinguished friend of the brother, must perforce settle the question and satisfy us all; but I accept no dictum of Sir George Bowyer, and I have yet to learn why he is the oracle whose decrees are to settle the discussion which Bro. Holmes has forced before the readers of The Freemason. Your readers will see in these replies another of Bro. Holmes's unsupported statements, and will compare the negative of Sir George Bowyer to the admission of heretics and schismatics, with the facts, as published by known, competent, and accepted historians, who were both Roman Catholics, and both members of the Order. The question put by the distinguished friend is, "Can heretics and schismatics enter the Order?"

DE BOISGELIN.—"The Order of Malta, though it regrets the circumstances that have occasioned its separation from the knights of a different religion, does not refuse them a place among its members to fight against the enemies of Jesus Christ." Again, he says, that Pope Pius VI. "was of the same opinion, and approved the association of Russian Knights of the Greek Church with the Order of Malta."

TAFFE: "One of the latest acts at Malta was to receive both Protestant Germans and Greek Russians into the Order as integral members."

SIR GEORGE BOWYER: "No."

Upon the last, and your readers will probably add, the least of these replies, I may be excused the quotation, "Thy wish was father, Harry, to that thought." I suppose De Boisgelin and Taffe are to be humbly accepted, in the presence of these oracular responses, as very minor authorities, poor deluded members of the Order, whose spectacles of prejudice were not of the requisite focus. Sir G. Bowyer settles the Duke of Manchester at once, as "nothing," and this Bro. Holmes kindly adds is "significant." I suppose it is not sufficient that George IV., William IV., Prince Albert, Sir J. C. Meredyth, Count de Salis, Sir J. Lawrence, Sir H. R. Popham, K.C.B., Sir W. Sidney Smith, G.C.B., Sir W. H. Tonkin, (the six last of whom added their names to the Roll of the English Langue), cum multis aliis, all sad heretics were members of the Order from Roman Catholic sources? I suppose there is no significance in the period and practical knowledge of De Boisgelin and Taffe? Does history lie when it tells us that on the 11th June, 1352, the festival of St. Barnabas, an agreement, was concluded at Heimbach, between the Prior of Germany, Conrad von Braunberg, and the Bailli of the Marquisate of Brandenburg, Berned von der Schulenburg, in which the seceding and evangelical Bailiwick was fully recognised, and it was expressly stated that the Knights of the Bailiwick should have at all times authority and power to elect their Bailli? Is it untrue that this agreement was confirmed in the same year at a Chapter General at Valencia, convoked by the Grand Master Ferdinand von Heredia, and that it subsequently received full ratification? What, then, becomes of Sir G. Bowyer's "irregular, illegitimate, and unrecognised?" A Balk special pleading would object that the Protestant Bailiwick of Brandenburg was dissolved by the edict of the King of Prussia, on the 30th of October, 1810, and then converted into a Royal Order; but, unfortunately for this view, the present Emperor, by mandate of the 15th of October, 1852, restored the Bailiwick to its former constitution; Prince Charles informed the Lieutenant-Master, the Baili Count Colorado-Mansfield, by letter, that the Bailiwick was restored; and that he, the Prince, was elected Herren-meister; and in the return he received the congratulations of Bailli: And this is "irregular and unrecognised!"

Bro. Holmes, [with a singular disregard of proof as against mere unsupported assertion, compels me again to trouble your readers with these evidences and facts, which utterly refute the opinions of Sir G. Bowyer, and I greatly marvel that so acute a gentlemen should venture such replies if they were to be made public. If the Langue of England has been revived, as I have shewn, and Bro. Holmes has admitted, then the Duke of Manchester is its present Prior. Sir G. Bowyer seeks to infer that it cannot have existence, inasmuch, as in his private opinion heretics and schismatics cannot enter the Order, a position which the whole Order, by its public and notorious acts, declares to have no foundation.

Bro. Holmes must have been very hard up when he resorted to this joint-stock method of bolstering up his drooping case, but he has adopted a course fraught with dangers we should all desire to avoid: He is treading in unhappy proximity to the religious cry, and it looks much as if he did so in consequence of my plainly intimated desire to avoid such a misfortune. Thank Heaven I can, I hope, be fair enough to hold the Roman Catholic Knights in respect, and have already said so; I did not originate this controversy, nor did I desire it, but I will not stand by whilst (I say advisedly) unsupported statements are put forward in a gratuitous attack upon an honourable and lawful body of the Order of St. John, without raising my small protest against such an unwarrantable and unnecessary proceeding.

At page 711 Bro. Holmes told us that the Order of St. John "was split up into several independent bodies," and he supposed that the Masonic Knights had "as good a claim to the title as the others," but Bro. Holmes now modifies his supposition, and opines only that they have as good a claim as the "Protestant Gentlemen." Whence this curious and shifty change of belief? Is this a trimming of the sails to suit the new allies, whose proffered aid shall waft his bark into the waters of safety at the opportune moment when on his last legs? Bro. Holmes in his despair has cried aloud, and the distinguished friend has heard him. Bro. Holmes has a "learned" and a "trenchant" friend also; I have no objection to his being learned, to his being a knight of several Orders, nor to his declining the knighthood of the Holy Sepulchre, but I distinctly object to his being so "trenchant" as to calumniate the memory of the dead. I envy him not his charity, which dictates a libel on the late Sir Robert Peat, and I express my regret that Bro. Holmes should have condescended to the ignoble position of mouthpiece to such a scurrilous statement. Sir Robert Peat, D.D., was a clergyman of the Church of England (which perhaps accounts for what we have read), he was a magistrate, was appointed Chaplain Extraordinary to the King in May, 1800, was a Knight Grand Cross of the Royal Order of St. Stanislaus of Poland, and received permission, under the sign manual of George III. dated 2nd October, 1804, to use the dignity and wear the insignia. I will leave the "trenchant" friend, and the memory Sir Robert Peat, in the hands of your readers.

Bro. Holmes says he will answer my statements "in a few words," and he then proceeds, not to answer one single statement, but to struggle in vain with what he supposes are three errors on my part, but of which he seems unable to see that he has himself demonstrated the truth.

He wishes to shew (he "likes to be particular") that because the Polish Priory was once connected with the Anglo-Bavarian branch of the Order, and was subsequently seized by Russia, that therefore Russia and the Anglo-Bavarian branch of the Order must be connected. The Grand Priorate of Poland no doubt was for a long time connected with the Anglo-Bavarian, but its seizure by Russia had no effect in joining the latter to the Anglo-Bavarian. The Russian Order is divided into two Grand Priorates, for the Knights of the Greek and of the Roman Catholic confession.

In another supposed error I am at one with Bro. Holmes, "that though re-established, the Protestant Anglican langue has no connection with the foreign branches of the Fraternity", and I assent to the proposition of my friend Colonel Porter, with which Bro. Holmes agrees, that the dormant langue of England was once more revived and again established, although without connection with the foreign branches of the Fraternity." It was revived by a majority of the Order, but is not in connection with any foreign branches, excepting [its amicable relations with the Bailiwick of Brandenburg. Bro. Holmes quotes the election of a Grand Master during the life of his predecessor as an arrangement for the election of the Emperor Paul, but he tells us, in the same paragraph, that it was made by the whole Order and not by a few refugees. Sir G. Bowyer truly says it was recognized, although irregular, and thus it creates a precedent which can never be ignored. Bro. Holmes's table of Grand Masters must be incorrect; Fonseca was the 66th Grand Master, (not the 68th), Hompesch the 69th, (not the 71st), Paul the 70th, (not the 72nd), and Tommasi the 71st, (not the 73rd). If his new, and (I may, I hope without offence, add) strange allies do not lend him more accurate documents than this, he must be careful how he gives too much faith to their contents. He cannot expect to find in such a list the names of members of the protestant langue, nor of other lawful bodies of the Order, Russian, Prussian, Austrian, and others; but it is weak and futile to suggest that these are not legal branches, and that nothing can be lawful which is not put forward by Bro. Holmes's newly formed allies.

The "Student" told us that Bro. Holmes sought to prove for the Masonic Knights of St. John a constitution, "in direct succession, through the English Langue." If this be so Bro. Holmes is sadly deserting his masonic friends when he admits that they are only "ad imitationem." Is this also a trimming of the sails, or why did not Bro. Holmes say so before, instead of making comparisons with the Order which he says many think illegally revived, and which claims a legitimate succession.

Your readers have seen an extract from the letter of the Duke of Sussex, and can judge for themselves. I need only add to it that I know the Duke did not look upon the English langue "as spurious"; I know that he was not a Knight of St. John, and I am acquainted with his reasons for declining to become a member of the Order.

ADDITIONAL NOTES ON THE UNITED ORDERS OF THE TEMPLE AND HOSPITAL.

BY BRO. EMMA HOLMES, 31°.

Grand Provost of England:—Preceptor of the Prudence Preceptory of Knights Templar; Prior of the Prudence Priory of Knights of Malta &c., &c.

The accompanying document, the original of which was in my possession till within the last few days, was sent from the head quarters of the Order of St. John of Jerusalem at Rome, in 1858 to Sir George Bowyer, Bart., M.P., who is a simple Knight of the Order, and nothing more. Sir George was instructed by the then head of the Order, to send certified copies of it to Prince Albert and the Lord Chamberlain, so that the persons against whom it was directed (the body under the Duke of Manchester), should not wear spurious decorations at Court.

It may not be generally known that the late Prince Consort was particularly anxious to be admitted into this Order, and applied to the Pope, since being a Protestant (technically a heretic), he was dehors the regula of the order. The Pope replied he had no power in the matter, the governing body of the Order having alone the right to create knights. The Prince then applied through several other channels, and ultimately the Emperor of Austria moved the Pope to grant a dispensation to the Order of certain obligations inconsistent with the Reformed Religion, if the Order choose to admit him, for the order cannot admit a "heretic," or non-Catholic without dispensation, and the Pope cannot create any one a knight. Thus the Prince was admitted—but not to the Order which the Duke of Manchester governs, and which by this act he repudiated. I have it on authority from Sir George Bowyer himself, who speaks of the body which Bro. Lupus is pleased to champion, as "the pretended langue," that copies of this important document were sent to the Prince (who became by papal dispensation, a Grand Cross of the Order) to the Home Secretary, and to the Lord Chamberlain, as I have before stated; and they each and all acknowledged the receipt.

With all due deference to "A Masonic Student," I don't see very clearly, why, in giving Notes of the United Orders of the Temple and Hospital. I should be excluded from bringing under discussion the claims of the various bodies. The Masonic Knights of Malta claim a descent from the Hospitallers, just as the Masonic Templars do from the old Knights, and as far as I know, they have quite as good grounds for believing that descent to be real and not chimerical.

Maitres, et Lieutenant du Magistère de l'Ordre de St. Jean de Jerusalem, ayant residé successivement à Jerusalem, à Rhodes, à Malta, à St. Petersburg, à Catane, à Ferrare, et à Rome, et ne voulant pas que les inductions éronnées puissent être tirées du fait de l'ajouction de ses noms aux listes précetées, declarant au nom et par ordre de Son Excellence le Vénéable Lieutenant du Grand Magistère, ainsi qu'en leur propre nom, que l'Ordre de Saint Jean de Jerusalem, dont Son Excellence est le chef, commes ils en sont les fonctionnaires, n'a jamais été dans aucune connexion organique avec la susdite société, ni a son origine, ni plus tard, soit à l'égard de son organisation, soit a celui de sa composition personnelle, ou de son activité. Les Grands Prieurés de l'Ordre dans les langues d'Italie et d'Allemagne, qui seules ont encore une existence legitime, d'après les statuts de l'Ordre, et qui sont en communion de juridiction et d'obeissance avec le Grand Magistère et Conseil, resident temporairement à Rome, sont: 1° Le Grand Prieuré de Rome, 2° Le Grand Prieuré Lombardo-Venetien, y compris Parme et Modine, 3° Le Grand Prieuré de Bohème. L'existence des Chevaliers de St. Jean en Prusse qui se rattachent par une succession legitime et non interrompue a l'ancien Grand Baillage de Bandebourg, est reconnue par l'Ordre comme parfaitement l'egale, quoique cette branche soit placée depuis plusieurs siècles par des raisons epeciales en dehors de la juridiction ordinaire et continué du Grand Magistère.

Le petit nombre de Chevaliers décoré de la Croix de devotion qui par leur naissance n'appartiennent à aucune des Prieurés ni à aucune des langues legalement encore existante, ne sont reconnus par notre ordre que parueque et pour autant qu'ils out été reçus par le Magistère et Conseil "in situ religionis" ou qu'ils y ont été admis moyennant une Bulle de devotion delivrée en toute forme par cette même autorité. Hors de ces langues, de ces Prieurés, et des Chevaliers ainsi créés ou constitués, tout ceux qui pourraient se dire tels sont legalment ignorés par notre Saint Ordre. C'est à ces causes que son Excellence le Chef de notre Order et les soussignés desirent et demandent d'être rayés et declarent qu'ils se regardent, des à présent, comme rayés des listes publiées dans ce "Synoptical Sketch," ou ils n'ont aucun droit de figurer. The undersigned, Knights and officers of the Sovereign Order of St. John of Jerusalem, having heard of a "Synoptical Sketch" published in London by an honourable society which styles itself Sovereign Order of St. John of Jerusalem of the Anglican Langue, and having remarked that in the lists annexed thereto their names are included, as well as that of his Excellency the most Reverend Brother Phillippe di Colloredo, Lieutenant of the Grand Mastery now residing at Rome, the only legitimate successor of the Grand Masters, and Lieutenant of the Mastery of the Order of St. John of Jerusalem, who were domiciled successively at Jerusalem, Rhodes, Malta, St. Petersburg, Catania, Ferrara, and at Rome; and not wishing that erroneous inferences should be drawn from the fact of the connexion of these names with the preceding lists, declare in the name and by the Order of his Excellency the Venerable Lieutenant of the Grand Mastery, as well as their own name, that the Order of St. John of Jerusalem, of which his Excellency is the chief, and of which they are the officers that they have never had any organized connexion whatever with the above mentioned society, neither at the formation, or at any latter period, either with regard to its organisation or its personal composition or operation. The Grand Prieories of the Order in the Italian and German langues, which alone have still a legitimate existence according to the Statutes of the Order, and these alone are in communion, jurisdiction, and obedience with the Grand Mastery and Council, at present residing at Rome; viz: First, the Grand Priory of Rome; second, the Grand Priory of the Venetian Lombards, including Parma and Modena; third, The Grand Priory of the Two Sicilies; fourth, The Grand Priory of Bohemia. The existence of the Knights of St. John in Prussia, which descends by a legitimate and uninterrupted succession from the Ancient Grand Bailliewick of Bradenbourg is recognised by the Order as perfectly legitimate, although this branch has stood for many centuries, for special reasons, without the ordinary and continuous jurisdiction of the Grand Mastery. The small number of Knights of Justice, and those of the Knights decorated with the Cross of Devotion, who, by their birth do not belong to any of the Pories nor to any of the legal langues still existing, are only recognised by our Order in so far and in as much as they have been received by the Mastery and Council in situ religionis, or because they have been admitted into its Order by means of a Bull of Devotion, delivered in due form by that same authority. Except these langues, these Pories, and the Knights thus created or constituted, all those who may call themselves such are legally ignored by our Holy Order. On these grounds his Excellency the Chief of our Order, and the undersigned, desire and demand to be erased, and declare that they consider themselves from the present time as erased from the published list of the "Synoptical Sketch," where they ought not to be inserted. ORDERS OF THE TEMPLE AND HOSPITAL.

To the Editor of The Freemason.

Dear Sir and Brother,—

The points which we are patiently waiting for Bro. Holmes to prove, are, not what existing Orders are unconnected with those Orders to which they claim affiliation, but, precisely, whether the Masonic Order of the Temple has a well-established connecting link with the Chivalric (unmasonic) Order of the Temple, and, this being so or otherwise, whether the Masonic Order of the Temple has any right to adopt the title of the Chivalric (unmasonic) Order of the Hospital, an Order whose chief historical connection with that of the Temple is that it was constantly hostile to the latter, and eventually swallowed up the chief part of its property.

I submit that Bro. Holmes has signally failed to prove his case on either of these points, that he now has entirely left the ground upon which only can be founded any right of the Masonic Orders of the Temple and Hospital to drop the prefix "Masonic," and by dropping it assume to be what I think the majority of Masonic Templars believe them not to be.

The publication of a so-called "important" document from Rome, denouncing what Bro. Holmes and his party are pleased to call "The Manchester Men" can in no way affect the Masonic Order of the Temple, except in so much as this, that if the document should turn out to be the well known logey, dated the 14th December, 1858 (the original of which is in the possession of Sir George Bowyer, Bart., a Knight of Grace of the Roman Catholic Branch of the Order in England), it seems a pity our Bro. Holmes, evidently the useful man of a party in Grand Conclave, should forget that the Order of St. John of Jerusalem is Hydra-headed, and that if he should succeed in doing what so many before him have tried hard, and with such signal ill-success, to do, that is in crushing the Protestant portion of the Order in England, there will still remain staring him in the face Sir George Bowyer, Lord Beaumont, and Messrs. Watts, Waterton, Cavendish, and Havilland, representing the Roman Catholic portion of the Order in England, duly accredited by the Pope; there will still exist, even in Bro. Holmes's mind, an Order of St. John in England, purely un-masonic.

Let us be honest men and Masons, and let us not be ashamed of the prefix "Masonic." If in a hasty moment we have dropped the title, and so assumed another which is not ours, let us not be afraid to acknowledge our error and resume our title "Masonic."

I am, faithfully yours,

CIVIS.

IMMEDIATE PAST MASTERS.

To the Editor of The Freemason.

Dear Sir and Brother,—

I think "A Young J.W." may be satisfied with having laid the views of those Past Masters of his lodge who dissent from the dictum of the Grand Secretary on the subject of the Immediate Past Mastership before your readers. I should recommend him and them to be content with the very explicit decision quoted by him.

The argument of the P.M. who contends that the W.M. became I.P.M. ipso facto, on leaving his chair to be re installed, is clearly wrong. The law that a king never dies is as true in a lodge as in our outside Constitutions; if the W.M. became I.P.M., he ceased for a few minutes to be W.M.; the lodge was therefore without a Master, which is impossible, as twelve months before he took an O.B. as W.M., not only for the ensuing twelve months, but until a successor should be elected and installed in his stead.

One word as to the lectures and explanations of the tracing boards, which appear to be treated of as identical. They are quite distinct one from the other. A lecture in either degree is divided into sections and is given in the catechetical form. I have never heard these given from the Warden's chairs. The explanations of the tracing boards are not, technically speaking, lectures.

Yours fraternally,

F. L. E. J.

THE MASONIC SCHOOLS.

To the Editor of The Freemason.

Dear Sir and Brother,

Masters of lodges possessing Governorships of our Charities, and who aim at handing down the privileges of their position pure and un sullied to their successors, will do well to attend a Special General Court of the Boys', and Girls' Schools, which is to be held at the Freemason's Hall on the 6th of March next. Last Saturday, at a meeting of half a dozen brethren—including the Secretaries of the two Schools, it was agreed to recommend that the right of voting at the General Committees of the Institutions should be taken away from the Masters of the lodges. I don't quite know whether the authorities of the Court of Chancery, or the Court of Queen's Bench would agree to this summary alteration of the conditions under which large sums of money have been paid; but so far as the Joint Committees, who are our Trustees, are concerned, it has been decided to attempt this act of confiscation. Fortunately, however, the recommendation of the six brethren who met on Saturday requires the formal approval of the general body on the 6th March; and I trouble you with this note to let my fellow subscribers know how matters stand, and how necessary it is that the representatives of lodges, who feel and think as I do, should take the necessary steps for asserting their determination to uphold existing rights.

Yours fraternally,

A LIFE GOVERNOR.

To the Editor of The Freemason.

Dear Sir and Brother,—

I would ask you for the favour of a little space in your columns to enable me to make a few suggestive remarks upon the value of music in our ceremonies, the difficulties attending its use, and a suggestion of a way to get over some of those difficulties. The value of music, and the power that it is capable of exercising over the mind, has been acknowledged in all ages, and I believe the Masons of the present day will appreciate its influence. Few lodges are now without that useful instrument for solemn music, the harmonium, but on the other hand there is often a difficulty in securing the services of an Organist, who will attend regularly. Musical people are often rather difficult to deal with and to manage, and as it is necessary that they should be Masons, our choice is frequently very limited. Thus again most of our existing Masonic odes, chants, &c. are written for part singing, which requires trained voices, and is useless unless you have them all there. The absence of one voice may effectually stop the music for the evening. Some of our Masonic composers seem to think it a point of excellence to make it as difficult as possible, by writing in musical keys and putting notes in that but few male voices (non-professional) can attain.

I would suggest that all our singing should be in unison and consist principally of short but appropriate chants, with a hymn or anthem at the opening and closing of the lodge. And I would just throw out a hint to the dealers in Masonic fittings that if they could arrange with some of the music manufacturers to construct a barrel organ specially adapted for the Masonic lodge, it might meet with a good sale, as I know many brethren would sooner have "handle" music (I do not mean a P.M.) than none at all.

It should be arranged to play two or three airs, to sing our odes and a couple of chants, and a small selection of short voluntaries or interludes to be played whilst the C. is being led round in the various degrees. A lodge possessing one of these instruments would then be able to have music, if not of the finest order, every night of meeting, and would not be prevented by the absence of the Organist, as any brother could turn the handle. Let it be distinctly understood I only propose this as an auxiliary, to be used when other instrumental music is unattainable.

Yours fraternally,

ORPHEUS.

UNAUTHORISED OFFICES.

To the Editor of The Freemason.

Dear Sir and Bro.—

I observe many lodges, both provincial and ordinary, presume to appoint officers to which they are not entitled; for instance, in your publication of the 15th February, I find a private lodge appointing a Supt. of Works, a Standard Bearer, and a Director of Ceremonies. By a reference to the Book of Constitutions, page 61, the two first named of these officers have no existence, and the latter must be called "Master" of Ceremonies, not "Director," as that is the name of a similar office in Grand and Provincial Grand Lodges.

Again, I find some Provinces appointing as officers Prov. Grand Standard Bearer; they have no right to do so. Such an officer does not exist. Even the Grand Master himself cannot appoint such an officer, much less any Provincial Grand Master (see Book of Constitutions, page 40). It is lawful to appoint such an officer in Grand Chapter and Provincial Grand Chapters, but not in the Craft.

Would it not be well to call the attention of Provincial Grand Lodges, as well as private lodges to this excess of jurisdiction.

Yours fraternally,

H.

STATUS OF PAST MASTERS.

To the Editor of The Freemason.

Dear Sir and Brother.

Referring you to a letter on the above subject, signed "An Old P.M.," in your issue of the 15th inst., and thanking the writer for his desire to remove the disabilities under which Irish Past Masters at present labour with regard to their status in English lodges; I would ask to be allowed to point out a few errors under which your correspondent evidently lies.

Passing the chair—as a preparation for exaltation to the Royal Arch—has for some years been discontinued in this country, and now no one receives the P.M. degree under any circumstances other than that of being installed W.M. of a lodge; and even under the old R.A. system, the receipt of the virtual P.M. degree conferred no benefit; as to the recipient possessed no locus standi in a lodge or Board of Post Masters, to which he was unable to gain admittance until he had been regularly installed, and served the office of W.M.

At the present day Past Masters are not in Ireland acknowledged as members of Grand Lodge, until they have been registered and taken out their certificates as such. This being the case, I do not see what objection there could be, under the English Constitution, to give to such brethren the full honours and privileges to which their English brethren would be entitled.

As far as Ireland is concerned, I do not see any difficulty in the way of a regularly qualified P.M. of an English lodge taking the chair of an Irish lodge, in the absence of all other Past Masters of the lodge, as the Constitutions of Freemasonry in Ireland, rule 91, provide that,—“In the absence of the Master of a particular lodge, a Past Master of that lodge, or in case of necessity, a Past Master of any lodge, may fill the chair.”

I remain yours fraternally,
AN IRISH W.M.

MASONIC BALL AT CORK.

The grand fancy and full-dress ball in aid of the funds of the Masonic Orphan Schools, Dublin, under the auspices of the First Lodge of Ireland, took place at the Athenæum amid considerable éclat. The renovations which have been going on for some time in the interior of the Athenæum had almost approached completion before the event, a feature that conspired in no immaterial degree to lend effect to the scene witnessed additional. The decorations for the ball were conducted on a scale of great extent and no small taste. Festoons of evergreens elaborately wrought, intermixed with roses, spanned the entire arc, and offered a pleasing contrast to the varied, and, withal, gay surroundings. The upper portions of the hall were ornamented with banners of the Prince Masons, shields and swords, and all the other insignia symbolic of the Order of Masonry; while both galleries were hid to view (except the part allotted to the band) by deep crimson drapery. The raised dais supporting the organ, on which stood the chair of the Right Worshipful the Grand Master—a venerable specimen of antiquity, we may remark, dating back some 300 years—was also decorated with a number of plants and shrubs, an arrangement that served in the quarter to neutralise the perhaps too dazzling brilliancy of the lights. The company began to arrive shortly after nine, and, at about half-past ten, followed the usual procession—itsself a very imposing pageant. Its merit would have been further enhanced by the sprinkling of fancy dresses, but the costume was not worn by any of the company, though the committee hoped the contrary result. The band of the 15th Regiment attended.

MADAME TUSSAUD'S.—The portrait model of his late Imperial Majesty Napoleon III. lying in state continues to attract many visitors. The decorations and appointments of the room specially devoted to the representation are now completed.

“Mr. JAMES BARNETT, Chemist, Birmingham, writes, June 18:—“Your Pain Killer is gaining many friends in this section. Among the many cures effected by it which have come under my notice, I may mention the case of a lady, who, after suffering from long neuralgia, and trying many reputed remedies without benefit, was at length cured, and that almost instantly, with the first application of your Pain Killer.—To Perry Davis & Son, London, W.C.”

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT AND PILLS:—Safety amidst danger, surrounded on all sides by the causes of disease, especially if the old proverb hold “As the day lengthens, the cold strengthens,” man must keep up constant watch, if he would retain or recover his health. These purifying pills present the most certain and effectual means of removing all noxious matters from the blood, at the same time that they regulate any disordered action, which their presence has induced and particularly preserved against congestion, irritation, and inflammation of the throat, and its lining membrane, extending through the lungs. The harmless strengthening balsams of which Holloway's Pills are composed render them peculiarly well adapted for the young and delicate, who can with impunity only bear tender treatment.—ADVT.

MASONIC BALL IN LIVERPOOL.

On Tuesday evening last, the brethren of the Lodge of Harmony, No. 220, and the Pembroke Lodge, No. 1299, held their fifth annual ball at the Delamere Rooms, Hardman-street, Liverpool, and as in former years it proved a reunion of the most agreeable kind. This is the first occasion on which the officers and the brethren of the “Pembroke” have entered into partnership with the “Harmony” to carry out the ball, and the success which attended last Tuesday's assembly will doubtless lead to a continuation of the “happy family” arrangement. Although illness prevented many from being present, the attendance numbered about 100. Amongst the principals present, being Bros. W. Jones, W.M. 220; J. Sellars, W.M. 1299, P.M. 220, T. Page, 823; J. W. R. Fowler, W.M. 86; Dr. Worthington, S.W. 220; T. Berry, S.D. 1393; J. W. Barker, P.M. 841; J. G. Butterfield, 220; T. B. Myers, S.D. 1182; R. Martin, jun., S.D. 1182; S. Newbold, 1182; R. B. Martin, 673; T. Winstanley, S. 1094; &c. The arrangements were admirably carried out by Bro. Tellett, Secretary 220, and Bro. R. Bennett, Secretary 1299, who received the valuable help from the W.M.'s of the two lodges. The catering of Bro. Vines, one of the P.M.'s of the Canton Hotel, gave the most complete satisfaction. Mr. Reynolds efficiently fulfilled the duties of M.C. The music was by Mr. Martin's quadrille band.

MASONIC BALL AT WAVERTREE.

In conformity with custom the brethren of the Duke of Edinburgh Lodge, No. 1182, held their annual ball recently at the Coffee House, Wavertree, near Liverpool, and as the noble cause of charity was kept in view in connection with the festivity there was all the more reason for rejoicing at the complete success which attended the festive gathering. As in former years, the proceeds will be handed over to the funds of the West Lancashire Masonic Educational Institution, and as there were about 170 present on this occasion the financial result will doubtless be a very substantial addition to the exchequer of the noble charity. The arrangements for the ball were of the most complete character, and while every officer and member of 1182 did their utmost to render it pleasant to the numerous visitors, particular credit is due to Bro. Pughe, W.M., and Bro. Bales, Sec., who were unremitting in their efforts in connection with the arrangements. A dispensation had been obtained from the M.W.G.M., and therefore the brethren appeared in full Masonic clothing and the collars and the jewels of their office. Amongst the visitors were Bros. Washington, S.D. 1094; Lambert, 111; McDonald, 472; Wrynhart, 673; Munroe, 823; H. Pearson, 249; Joseph, 249; Martin, 594; Larsen, P.M. 594; Hignett, 1356; Turner, J.D., 86; B. B. Marson, W.M., 1356; Arodren, 216; Winstanley, P.M. 1094; Merri-man, 1356. The ball-room was decorated with the most exquisite taste, and certainly the most elegant and pleasant of the decorative extras was the introduction of a number of “perpetual perfume fountains,” kindly lent by Bro. Newbold, of South John-street, Liverpool. The catering of Mrs. Wright, the hostess, gave the most complete satisfaction, Mr. Martin's quadrille band furnished excellent music, and Bro. B. Myers efficiently and courteously fulfilled the duties of Master of Ceremonies. Dancing was kept up with unflagging spirit to far beyond the “wee short hour ayont the twal.”

The Earl of Limerick was kindly consented to be President of the Masonic Ball to be held at the City Terminus Hotel on the 26th of March.

Sir Michael Costa is, it is stated, engaged in adapting and preparing Balfe's manuscript oper The Knight of the Leopard, for performance at Drury-lane during next season.

MR. CHEVALIER has completed for her Majesty a picture commemorative of the Thanksgiving Day for the recovery of the Prince of Wales. The point chosen is that when the procession is passing the great triumphal arch between Fleet-street and Ludgate-hill.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE.

THE ORIGINAL AND ONLY GENUINE.

CHLORODYNE is admitted by the Profession to be the most wonderful and valuable remedy ever discovered. CHLORODYNE is the best remedy known for Coughs, Consumption, Bronchitis, Asthma. CHLORODYNE effectually checks and arrests those too often fatal diseases—Diphtheria, Fever, Croup, Ague. CHLORODYNE acts like a charm in Diarrhoea, and is the only specific in Cholera and Dysentery. CHLORODYNE effectually cuts short all attacks of Epilepsy, Hysteria, Palpitation and Spasms. CHLORODYNE is the only palliative in Neuralgia, Rheumatism, Gout, Cancer, Toothache, Meningitis, &c.

From Lord FRANCIS CONYNNGHAM, Mount Charles, Donegal, 11th December, 1868.

" Lord Francis Conyngham, who this time last year bought some of Dr. J. Collis Browne's Chlorodyne from Mr. Davenport, and has found it a most wonderful medicine, will be glad to have half a dozen bottles sent at once to the above address.

" Earl Russell communicated to the College of Physicians that he had received a dispatch from Her Majesty's Consul at Manila, to the effect that Cholera had been raging fearfully, and that the ONLY remedy of any service was CHLORODYNE."—See Lancet, Dec. 1, 1864.

From W. VERSALIUS PETTIGREW, M.D., Hon. F.R.C.S. England;

Formerly Lecturer on Anatomy and Physiology at St. George's School of Medicine.

" I have no hesitation in stating, after a fair trial of Chlorodyne, that I have never met with any medicine so efficacious as an Anti-spasmodic and Sedative. I have used it in Consumption, Asthma, Diarrhoea, and other diseases, and am most perfectly satisfied with the results."

From Dr. THOMAS SANDIFORD, Passage West, Cork.

" I will thank you to send me a further supply of Chlorodyne. It was the most efficacious remedy I ever used, affording relief in violent attacks of Spasms within a minute after being taken. One patient in particular, who had suffered for years with periodical attacks of Spasms of a most painful nature, and unable to obtain relief from other remedies, such as Opium, &c., finds nothing so prompt and efficacious as Chlorodyne."

From J. McGRIGOR CROFT, M.D., M.R.C.P. London, late Staff Surgeon to H.M.F.

" Sir,—After prescribing Dr. J. Collis Browne's Chlorodyne for the last three years in severe cases of Neuralgia and Tic-Doloureux, I feel that I am in a position to testify to its valuable effects. Really, in some cases it acts like a charm, when all other means had failed. Without being asked for this report, I must come forward and state my candid opinion that it is a most valuable medicine, and I have recommended several Chemists in this neighbourhood not to be without it for prescriptions."

From Jno. E. GOULSTONE, M.D., late Principal Surgeon to the Steamship "Great Eastern."

" I can confidently state that Chlorodyne is an admirable Sedative and Anti-Spasmodic, having used it in Neuralgia, Hysteria, Asthma, and Consumption, with remarkably favourable results. It relieved a fit of Asthma in four minutes, where the patient had suffered eleven years in a most distressing manner, no previous remedy having had so immediate and beneficial an effect."

From Dr. B. J. BOULTON, and Co., Horncastle.

" We have made pretty extensive use of Chlorodyne in our practice lately, and look upon it as an excellent direct Sedative and Anti-spasmodic. It seems to allay pain and irritation, in whatever organ and from whatever cause. It induces a feeling of comfort and quietude not obtainable by any other remedy, and it seems to possess this great advantage over all other sedatives, that it leaves no unpleasant after effects."

J. C. BAKER, Esq., M.D., Bideford.

" It is, without doubt, the most valuable and certain Anodyne we have."

CAUTION.—BEWARE OF PIRACY AND IMITATIONS.

CAUTION.—Vice-Chancellor Sir W. Page Wood stated that Dr. J. Collis Browne was undoubtedly the Inventor of CHLORODYNE; that the story of the defendant, Freeman, was deliberately untrue, which, he regretted to say, had been sworn to.—See Times, 13th July, 1864.

Sold in Bottles at 1/1½, 2/9, 4/6, and 11/0 each. None is genuine without the words "Dr. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE" on the Government Stamp. Overwhelming Medical Testimony accompanies each Bottle.

CROSBY'S BALSAMIC COUGH ELIXIR.

DISEASES OF THE LUNGS AND AIR-VESSELS.

CROSBY'S
BALSAMIC COUGH ELIXIR.

Opium, Narcotics, and Squills are too often invoked to give relief in Coughs, Colds, and all Pulmonary diseases. Instead of such fallacious remedies, which yield momentary relief at the expense of enfeebling the digestive organs, and thus increasing that debility which lies at the root of the malady, modern science points to CROSBY'S BALSAMIC COUGH ELIXIR as the true remedy.

SELECT TESTIMONIAL.

Dr. Rooke, Scarborough, author of the "Anti-Lancet," says: "I have repeatedly observed how very rapidly and invariably it subdued cough, pain, and irritation of the chest in cases of Pulmonary Consumption, and I can, with the greatest confidence, recommend it as a most valuable adjunct to an otherwise strengthening treatment for this disease."

This medicine, which is free from opium and squills, not only allays the local irritation, but improves digestion and strengthens the constitution. Hence it is used with the most signal success in Asthma, Bronchitis, Consumption, Coughs, Influenza, Night Sweats of Consumption, Quinsy, and all affections of the throat and chest. Sold in bottles at 1s. 9d., 4s. 6d., and 11s. each, by all respectable Chemists, and wholesale by Jas. M. Crosby, Chemist, Scarborough.

ALLCOCK'S POROUS PLASTERS.

The public are informed that these celebrated Plasters have been established twenty-seven years. Patented U.S., 1845. It is supposed and claimed that they restore the of the part where applied, by which pain and diseased actions cease. But we really know little on this subject, because the properties of medical agents can only be known by experience, and this has taught that whenever Allcock's Porous Plasters are applied they do good, often restoring the withered hand, removing the unsightly lump, lengthening the shorter leg, and restoring the lame to walk. But read our testimonials, and if you have a weak spot in your body, try a plaster; the cost is small,

BEING TWENTY-SEVEN HALFPENCE ONLY.

No doubt they impart all

to the system needed. We believe this because they have made greater cures than were ever achieved by the most costly applications.

WHERE ONE WAS SOLD A YEAR AGO A THOUSAND ARE SOLD NOW.

They strengthen, warm, and invigorate the part upon which they are applied, and relieve nervous affections of the bowels, lumbago, pains of the side, and usually, all local pain. In affections of the kidneys they are of great service.

LUMBAGO.

"To Messrs. Allcock & Co, Liverpool.

"Manor-road, Folkestone, July 6, 1872.

Gentlemen,—Some months ago I suffered severely from lumbago, and could not walk without much pain and difficulty. One day I met a friend, General ———, who advised me to try one of Allcock's Porous Plasters, adding, 'I have one on me at this moment, which has wholly removed an affection similar to the one from which you are suffering.' I had really never before heard of the plasters, but was so struck with what I heard that I immediately procured one and put it on. I found almost instantaneous relief; the pain and stiffness were gone in an hour, and have never since returned. I may add that several friends, including an eminent physician, laughed at my account of my cure; more than one of them, however, including that physician, have owned to me since that, in consequence of my statement, they have resorted to Allcock's Porous Plasters when suffering in various ways, and have in every instance found relief. A lady of my acquaintance, who heard from me of these plasters, has tried them with wonderful effect among the suffering poor. She finds the demand for them so great that she wrote to you to ask at what rate you could supply her with plasters for the poor. In answering her question you kindly sent her a supply for gratuitous distribution. To thank you in my own name, and in behalf of my friends and of the poor, I feel it a duty and a pleasure to send you these few lines, of which you may make any use you please."

J. H. WOODWARD.

VOLUNTARY AND IMPORTANT TESTIMONIALS.

"Sir,—I have myself proved the efficacy of your plasters, but to-day a well-known clergyman, in the course of conversation, asked me if I knew anything of 'Allcock's Porous Plasters.' I replied, 'O yes, we sell them largely; I have just ordered £50 worth of them.' 'Well,' he said, 'they are invaluable. I give them to nearly all my poor parishioners for all sorts of complaints—rheumatism, lumbago, colds, bronchitis, &c. I also use them in my own family, and recommend them to my friends. My wife was suffering from bronchial disturbance, but was quickly relieved by Allcock's Plaster. One case of cure was almost amusing. A person had been suffering a long time from dreadful pain at the pit of the stomach, and had spent I don't know how much in trying to get cured, but in vain. I gave him one of Allcock's Plasters, and it cured him in a quarter of an hour. He spoke so enthusiastically about the plasters that I asked him to allow his statement to be made public. As he consented, I give you his name—viz., Rev. G. COMYNS, Vicar of Sidbury, Devonshire.

"I forward you this with pleasure, knowing it will have weight with the public, especially in the southern counties of England."

With compliments,

EDWIN J. ORCHARD.

Letter from the REV. THOS. BONSALE, M.A., as to Qualities and Reputation of Brandreth's Pills and Allcock's Plasters.

"Wisset Vicarage, near Halesworth, Suffolk, July 29, 1872.

"H. D. BRANDRETH, Esq., Liverpool.

"My Dear Sir,—Please forward me some Brandreth's Pills and Porous Plasters to amount of enclosure. I may here state I have been in the habit, for the last thirty-seven years, of administering these remedies to the sick with great success. I have been well acquainted with Dr. B. Brandreth, of New York, for nearly forty years, and can certify that he gives constant employment to upwards of one hundred persons preparing these commodities alone. Brandreth's Pills and Allcock's Porous Plasters are the household remedies of nearly every family in the United States and throughout South America. We all know that many persons take medicine when they do not need it. It is, therefore, of importance that the medicine should be incapable of hurting. Now, I know Brandreth's Pills to be perfectly harmless from long experience of their effects. Yet, when the bowels or the blood need cleansing, they are a thoroughly energetic medicine, arousing all the interior organs to healthy action. In colds, colics, and costiveness, they give relief immediately, and those who use them will find them a safe and most reliable remedy.

"I am, yours truly,

THOMAS BONSALE,

"Late Curate of Linstead Magna and Parva, Suffolk."

Observe "D. Brandreth" on the Government Stamp, without which they cannot be genuine.

CROSBY'S BALSAMIC COUGH ELIXIR. DISEASES OF THE LUNGS AND AIR-VESSELS.

Opiates, Narcotics, and Squills are too often invoked to give relief in Coughs, Colds, and all Pulmonary diseases. Instead of such fallacious remedies, which yield momentary relief at the expense of enfeebling the digestive organs, and thus increasing that debility which lies at the root of the malady, modern science points to CROSBY'S BALSAMIC COUGH ELIXIR as the true remedy.

SELECT TESTIMONIAL. Dr. Rooke, Scarborough, author of the "Anti-Lancet," says: "I have repeatedly observed how very rapidly and invariably it subdued cough, pain, and irritation of the chest in cases of Pulmonary Consumption, and I can, with the greatest confidence, recommend it as a most valuable adjunct to an otherwise strengthening treatment for this disease." This medicine, which is free from opium and squills, not only allays the local irritation, but improves digestion and strengthens the constitution. Hence it is used with the most signal success in Asthma, Bronchitis, Consumption, Coughs, Influenza, Night Sweats of Consumption, Quinsy, and all affections of the throat and chest. Sold in bottles at 1s. 9d., 4s. 6d., and 11s. each, by all respectable Chemists, and wholesale by Jas. M. Crosby, Chemist, Scarborough. * * * Invalids should read Crosby's Prize Treatise on "Diseases of the Lungs and Air-Vessels," a copy of which can be had Gratis of all Chemists.

ANSWERS TO "MASONIC STUDENT."

By JACOB NORTON, of Boston, U.S.A.

Bro. "Masonic Student" is courteous in his remarks, and I shall endeavour to be equally so. I am labouring, however, under a disadvantage which my friendly opponent is not. His replies appear in The Freemason a week, or at most two weeks after mine, while my answers cannot appear until two months have expired after the appearance of his questions. This necessitates the reproduction of his question and arguments. In order, therefore, to save time and space, I shall preface the paragraphs with our respective initials; and now for his remarks in The Freemason of November 23rd, page 734.

M. S.—"What does Bro. Norton mean by the Edward III. Constitution? I have heard of many Constitutions, but never heard of this one before."

N.—Anderson says (Hyneman's edition, page 59), "The Constitutions were now meliorated; for an old record imports that in the glorious reign of Edward III., when lodges were many and frequent, the G.M., with his Wardens, at the head of the Grand Lodge, with the consent of the realm, then generally Freemasons, ordained."

"That for the future, at the making or admission of a brother the Constitutions shall be read, and the charges hereunto annexed." Here follow four paragraphs, which it is needless to transcribe, and these wind up with "concluding with Amen, so mote it be." Again, in Bro. Mackey's "Text Book on Masonic Jurisprudence," I find the above quotation from Anderson, headed "The Constitutions of Edward III., and followed with five paragraphs, each regularly numbered. The fifth paragraph, which is more than twice the length of the four preceding, I cannot find in Anderson's Edward III. Constitution. This, however, is in perfect accordance with the style of most Masonic writers, that is, to add a little, and in Bro. Chalmers I. Paton's "Masonic Jurisprudence" (which, by the bye, Bro. Robert Macoy, the well-known Masonic publisher of New York, assured me was a wholesale plagiarism from the above-named work by Bro. Mackey), Bro. Student may also find an Edward III. Constitution.

M. S.—"When Bro. Norton goes on to say, 'We are also satisfied that the operative Masons were an ignorant and credulous body of men, is he not speaking very wide of the mark, very much at random?'"

N.—Certainly not, for if they had not been ignorant and credulous they never would have swallowed the story of Abraham and Euclid being contemporaries of Grecus, a builder of Solomon's temple, initiating Charles Martel, etc., etc., and other stories too numerous to mention.

M. S.—"Is Bro. Norton aware that Master Masons, for instance in the 13th and 14th centuries, received very high salaries, indeed, ranked very often as 'Generosi,' and were men of education and position?"

N.—If by Master Masons, my brother means the chief architect, then I shall not dispute his assertion. But the question is, can Bro. M. S. prove that the then architects ever concerned themselves with the affairs of the working men; or even took an interest in their lodge meetings? or were ever initiated into the mysteries of the brotherhood? But even supposing that our brother could prove all that, which I very much doubt, what then? Why, it would prove that the then architect, though he understood certain geometrical rules, and was master of the art design required by his profession, must nevertheless have been ignorant of history and chronology, and also exceedingly credulous if he swallowed the fables handed down in the old MSS.

M. S.—"As regards the operative Masons generally, there is also evidence to prove that they received wages considerably above the average of other Crafts."

N.—I have asked for that evidence in my "Hints to Masonic Students," (Freemason, Sept. 21st), and unless Bro. Student furnishes the source of his information, he must pardon me for doubting his opinion.

Our brother next gives me a dissertation on the mistake inseparable from oral traditions. That is true; but he does not seem to know that most of the Masonic traditions had no foundation whatever, but were invented hundreds and even thousands of years after the supposed events. Take for instance the legend of the four crowned martyrs. Does Bro. S. believe that four kings who were Masons and graveurs of images, had ever suffered martyrdom for refusing to make an idol for an Emperor?—bosh. Again, we know that Euclid flourished about three hundred years before the Christian era, and that he was a famous mathematician, but does Bro. Student believe that there is the least foundation about his organizing the children of the Egyptian nobility? This part of Euclid's doings originated in the brain of a priestly romancer of the middle ages. It was not a perversion of some former legend, but an entire new creation, and a poor creation too.

M. S.—"Bro. Norton seems to forget that the compiler and transcriber both of the Masonic poem and the additional MSS. of our so far two oldest legends were ecclesiastics, not operatives, and they only repeated and handed down what they had seen in older MSS., etc."

N.—In the first place, I cannot understand why Bro. S. doubts the originality of the Matthew Cooke MS.; what proof has he that the copy in the British Museum is a transcript of some older copy. But supposing it to be so; what then? If the present copy is a correct transcript of a former one, the original one could not have been written before the latter part of the 15th century, because the author, and he certainly deserves that appellation as much as Anderson, Preston, Findel, Dickens, etc. (as it is immaterial on this point whether a book contains a true narrative or a romance), the writer must be called its author. Now, the author of the Cooke MS. alludes to a printed chronicle, hence he must have written after the invention of printing. We know that Anderson has put many things into his book not found in the older MSS., and which he did not learn from the old members of the Craft. Ramsey added the Crusade legend to the history of Masonry, some other luminary added the story of St. John becoming G.M. when upwards of ninety years of age. Oliver also added a great deal of nonsense, and this was generally the style among Masonic authors until the appearance of Bro. Findel's history. Some manufactured legends, for the purpose of glorifying the society and others, for the purpose of Christianizing it, why, then, should my opponent be reluctant to admit that the authors of the oldest MSS., were also actuated by the some motives to manufacture their legends? True, they were not operatives, but yet they were officers of the lodge, and were evidently disposed to enhance its respectability. And let me assure Bro. M. S. that it was no trifling undertaking to write a poem of such length in the 14th century. The cost of the parchment alone in those days was equal to a man's wages of a week or more, and this desire to glorify the Craft doubtless induced them, as it did Anderson and others afterwards, to manufacture their legends. I must only here add, that if the elder Disraeli had known anything of the Masonic legends, he would doubtless have placed them in his "history of events which have not happened."

M. S.—"Were I to write a history of the operative Masons in England, &c., I should, judging from their works, speak far more respectfully of them than Bro. Norton does."

N.—Were I to write such a history, I would divest it of every particle of partisanship, and would endeavour to give the truth, the whole and nothing but the truth.

M. S.—When Bro. Norton says, we know now that their Masonry is not our Masonry! What does he, what can he mean?

N.—Simply this, that our ceremonies, signs, &c., as well as the religious ideas of our charges, were not those of the operatives. Suppose, now, that either of the authors of the oldest MSS. was again brought to life, and attempted to visit a lodge, his signs, &c., would not get him or them admission; they would be marched off from the door as impostors. Supposing still further that the whole or either of their lodges was resuscitated and Bro. Masonic Student attempted to visit the said lodge, he would in a like manner be treated as a coward. Suppose, however, in the course of his remonstrances with either of the rev. authors of the oldest MSS., Bro. Student was to declare that "Masonry unites men of every sect and opinion," &c., I verily believe that his reverence upon hearing this, would order immediately two or more of the stoutest bricklayers in lodge to seize poor Bro. Student, and would have him sent to the ecclesiastical authorities to be disposed of in Smithfield as other heretics used to be disposed of in those days. The charge of the operatives was "to be true to the Church," which in those days meant to hate every one who dissented from its creed, while our charge enjoins to unite the good and true of every creed, hence our Masonry was not their Masonry.

M. S.—"To ignore the operative connection is, . . . to cut away completely the ground from beneath our feet, historically."

N.—I have nowhere denied the connection of the modern society of Freemasons with the operatives, but have always intimated that one is a development of the other, but yet I maintain that there is a wide difference between the two. For instance, there are certain creatures that are hatched in water, they live, eat, and grow in water; water, is as much their element as it is of the finny tribes, but at a certain period those creatures burst their skins, from which issues a mosquito, or a fly of some other shape; this new development changes its nature entirely, and if it is then forced to descend to the bottom of a glass of water, it is surely drowned. The religious teachings of the Masons of the middle ages was intolerance to all who did not believe in the Catholic Church; the teachings of the early Protestant Masons in England; were just as intolerant as those of the Catholic times, but our Masonry is based on universality, and to attempt to introduce their sectarian dogmas into our lodges will as surely tend to destroy the life of the institution as that of the mosquito when forced to immerse in water.

Bro. Student refers to a discussion carried on by himself and others in the Freemasons' Magazine and The Freemason, relative to the 1717 theory. I confess that I have not read the discussion in the former, but I did read the discussion in The Freemason. I further confess, that I never could understand wherein Bros. Buchan and Hughan really differed. They both agree that the operatives had secret signs, &c., also that Anderson Desaugliers and others were initiated in one or more of these lodges; also that the then Masons conferred but one degree, and they differ simply in this:—one maintains that the 1717 epoch, should be called a revival, and the other calls it a creation. But so far as I can judge, Bro. Student differed with both the above named brethren, by maintaining the antiquity of the third degree, and he must pardon my frankness, that in that discussion he assigned the same degree of importance which he does in the present one, viz., of asserting, without proving. Thus in The Freemason of September, 1871, Bro. Buchan said (Bro. Student) "has for a long time been a capital promiser but a very poor performer; he is always going to produce something in the indisputable way, but somehow it never comes." And Bro. Hughan, in the "Kingston Annual," is no less severe in his remarks. Bro. Hughan says:—"We find that Masonic Student in the Freemasons' Magazine declares that he has numismatic evidence of the antiquity of the second part of the third degree, coeval with the operative lodges of the York Masons, certainly in the 15th century, . . . and although we have since, and during the discussion in which this statement formed a part, frequently asked for such evidence, or indeed for any evidence that would prove or even shadow forth the third degree before the revival at London, none such has been produced," &c. It seems therefore that in the discussion carried on in the Freemasons' Magazine, Bro. Student's theory was not triumphant.

The next dissertation of Bro. Student is about the gilds, or guilds, viz., whether "guild" is derived from the Anglo-Saxon word gelt or money, or from gildan. This refers to the paragraph I copied from Bromfield's History, but as I never passed an opinion on that part of the paragraph, it has really nothing to do with me. It may be, Mr. Bromfield's etymology is right, or that Bro. Student's is right, or both are wrong; this is not a chicken of my hen's hatching, and must therefore not come into my hennery to roost; and now for the remainder.

M. S.—"If it be true, as no doubt it is, that other trades had their secrets, and mysteries, and points, as well as the Freemasons, no guild that I know of had constitutions or legends dating as far back as 1390, admittedly, and no other guild had an elaborate ritual," &c.

N.—In the first place, I do doubt "that other trades had their secrets, mysteries, and points," in the same sense as Masons have, or have had. Secondly, if other fraternities had "secrets, mysteries, and points," they must have had a ritual and constitution too, the one is indispensable to the other; and thirdly, that other guilds had no legends, shows clearly that either their Chaplains were more honest and truthful than those attached to the Masonic fraternity, and therefore invented no legends for their respective Crafts, or that the members of those Crafts were less credulous than the Masons were.

The last remarks of Bro. Student refer to "freeborn," in which my brother admits the very fact I meant to establish, viz., that the oldest Constitution which has come down to our time, did not require the apprentice to be freeborn, but only that he should be no bondman at the time when apprenticed; that "freeborn" was a later introduction, and consequently it cannot be an irremovable landmark.

One more subject I must discuss ere I finish this paper. Bro. Student seems to take it for granted that the Halliwell Constitution is older than that of any other Craft, but is it so? I know that Bro. Student sticks to his imaginary idea that the Halliwell Constitution is a copy of an Athelstan Constitution, but here I must again ask, was it so? It is my opinion that the Masons of the English metropolis were entirely ignorant of an Athelstan Constitution, or any other kind of a Constitution, at the beginning of the second half of the 14th century. In The Freemason of April 8th, 1871, page 217 and 218, Bro. Student will find the most authentic, as well as oldest code of laws that the London Masons had ever had. For the document says, "Whereas, Simon Fraunceys, Mayor of the City of London, has been given to understand that divers dissensions have been moved in the said City, between the Masons who are hewers on the one hand, and the light Masons and setters on the other, because of their trade has not been regulated in due manner by the government and folks of their trade in such a form as other trades are." This was in 1356, or about 40 years before the Halliwell MS. was written. Now, if an Athelstan Constitution, or even the Halliwell Constitution, had been in existence in 1356, the London City authorities never would have said that the Masons' trade "has not been regulated in such a form as other trades are," and what is more, the code of laws which the Mayor and Aldermen then gave to the Masons, would have been perfectly needless, as the most essential part thereof forms part of the Halliwell Constitution. The inference therefore is that some of the laws in Halliwell's MS. were copied from the above code, or from a later edition. Now, if the Masons of the English metropolis were without the regulations in 1356, which other trades then had, it proves certainly that the Masons' Constitution is not so old as Bro. Student imagines. And secondly, if the Masons in the English metropolis knew nothing of an Athelstan Constitution in 1356, we may rationally conclude that the then Masons residing in provincial towns also knew nothing about it.

It seems to me that Bro. Masonic Student, and the brethren who support him, would be as right in charging me with intolerance for calling a pickpocket "thief," or a thimble-rigger "gambler," as they are for my denouncing the perverters of Masonic history and Masonic principles as dreamers and charlatans. Bro. Emra Holmes, in The Freemason, Nov. 30th, page 762, attributes what he calls my coarseness to Yankee manners. The truth, however, is, that as long ago as 1757 Bro. Sauer, S.G.W. of Holland, in a letter to Dr. Thomas Manningham, then D.G.M. of England, denominated the pretensions of Masonic Templarism and High Degreedom, as charlatanism, and Bro. Manningham, in reply to the above letter, said, "and which you designated with perfect right as the charlatanism of Masonry." If, therefore, there is any coarseness in my vocabulary, as they call it, I have copied it from European Masonic dignitaries of very high standing.

Bro. the Rev. A. F. A. Woodford was also pleased in the same paper to refer to what he calls "Bro. Norton's wild and chimerical attack on Anderson and Preston." Bro. Woodford in the very same letter admits that no Grand Lodge did or could exist before 1717 under such a name.

Now, let him read the introductory paragraph of Anderson to the Edward III. Constitution, given in my last reply to Bro. Student, about the Grand Master with his Wardens, at the head of the Grand Lodge, with the consent of the lords of the realm, then generally Freemasons, and then ask himself, was this written by an historian or by a romancer?

Nor is Bro. Norton the only one who is not ashamed to expose the errors propagated by the early writers of modern Masonry, as Bro. Dr. Mackey, in his introduction to Bro. Hughan's "Unpublished Records of the Craft," in the first number of his Magazine, condemns Anderson's and Preston's Histories of Freemasonry as worthless. I have not the said Magazine before me now to give the quotation, but I beg to assure Bro. Woodford that Bro. Mackey's language was as plain in relation to that point, as Bro. Norton's is, and has been for several years past.

Another part I must mention in connection with the questions under consideration; Bro. Albert Pike, who styles himself "Thrice Illustrious Most Puissant Sovereign Grand Commander of the Mother Grand Consistory of the World (and is, besides, a Knight Templar, and what not). Well, the said Bro. Pike furnished an article of thirteen printed pages for Bro. Mackey's "National Freemason." It was, in fact, a synopsis of the history of the twelve London guilds, and in that article he showed a strong leaning to what is called "the 1717 theory." Last spring I was introduced to Bro. Pike by our mutual friend, Bro. John W. Simons, P.G.M., and now G. Treasurer of the Grand Lodge of New York, when he took occasion to compliment Bro. Pike on the common-sense views he propounded in the aforesaid article, and expressed a hope he would continue to furnish some more articles of the same nature. And I must here add, that as a scholar, Bro. Pike has not a superior, and very few equals among the Masonic fraternity in the U.S. He has written more about ancient mysteries than any other Masonic writer I know of, and was always a highflyer in the upper regions of, the very first order, but yet I found in his conversation a spirit of candour and truthfulness, very rare among the professed defenders of High Degreedom. In reply to the remarks I made about the communication from his pen, Bro. Pike said, "Bro. Norton, we all know, that previous to 1717, there was but one degree, and that one degree was not like or did not resemble any of our degrees." Further comment is needless.

Microscopical investigation has proved that the substances which accumulate between the teeth contain animal and vegetable parasites, and that the tooth powders, pastes, and washes in general use have no effect upon these. Messrs. Gabriel's Coralite Tooth Paste and Royal Dentifrice (sold by all chemists and perfumers at 1s. 6d. per box) completely destroy and remove these animalcules and also preserve and beautify the teeth. Prepared only by Messrs. Gabriel, the old-established dentists, 64, Ludgate-hill, and 56, Harley-street, Cavendish-square, London, where they practice their unique system of painless dentistry.

Original Correspondence.

NAVAL AND MILITARY BRETHERN.

To the Editor of The Freemason.

Dear Sir and Brother,—

I believe, from some little experience I have had at home and abroad, that many hard-working Masons in the navy and army are practically lost to us for the reason that having so frequently to change their residences through the exigencies of the service, the expense of having to join new lodges, chapters, &c., falls heavily on them, and the higher they are in Masonry the worse it is.

This is bad enough in the commissioned ranks, but it falls more heavily still on the non-commissioned officers, amongst which worthy body we number a very large proportion of brethren.

These, in many cases, are unable to attend lodge from the heavy demand on their slender purses, in consequence of the necessity of joining new lodges, &c., so frequently, and their unwillingness to partake too often of the hospitality so universally shown to them when visitors.

I am certain more brethren than would like to acknowledge the fact, even to themselves, are deterred from doing their duties as contributors to our charities through the regular channel on account of the ever recurring expense.

In civil life the most regular attendant of a lodge pays his entrance fee but once, while we, in order to be considered good Masons, have to do so nearly every year, if not oftener.

Now, I think this could easily be remedied, if in towns possessing no regular naval or military lodge (whose fees I imagine are always small), the lodges treated the temporary sojourners amongst them, in a similar manner to that in which most clubs, institutes, &c., do under similar circumstances—viz., by giving these brethren all the privileges of membership for the time being, upon payment of a subscription only, plus the necessary registration fee, but without other joining fee.

We must, however, by our constitutions, still insist on a ballot, and "clearance" from last lodge, which latter, by the way, is, I am afraid, too often overlooked.

Whether these brethren should be permitted to take office would be a matter for each lodge to decide. I think myself that when they took office they should be called on to pay the regular joining fee.

I am sure if this idea was acted on, lodges in seaports and garrisons would get a large increase of subscribing members, if some of them were only for a few months. I hope an abler pen than mine will take up this matter, for I feel convinced from personal knowledge that it would have a good effect.

Apologising for the length of this letter, which you will oblige me greatly by inserting.

I beg to remain yours fraternally,

R. A.]

THE MASONIC SCHOOLS.

To the Editor of The Freemason.

Dear Sir and Brother,

The letter of "A Life Governor," which appears in The Freemason of the 22nd instant, has been written under a misconception.

Allow me, as Chairman of the Joint Committee for revision of Laws, to state that no proposition has been made to deprive any Lodge, Chapter, or Society of any of its privileges. On all occasions, hitherto, of alteration in the laws, the invariable rule has been that there should be no retrospective action which would abrogate or reduce privileges already acquired, and this rule will apply to any alterations that may now be adopted. Moreover, at the adjourned General Committees on the 15th instant, formal notice was given for the Special Court, on the 6th March, of the following motion:—

"That the Laws as revised shall come into operation on 1st July, 1873." The object of this motion, it will be at once seen, is to enable lodges, &c., to add to their present privileges and acquire fresh ones, according to the laws existing, up to 30th June next, inclusive.

As many of your readers must, of necessity, have been unable, from various causes, to attend recent meetings of Courts or Committees, it will be well to give some information which may be interesting and useful.

At the Quarterly Court of the Boys' School, in October last, two resolutions were brought forward for alteration of the Laws. One directed that arrangements should be made to hold the elections of the two schools on the same day; the other proposed that donations which would give to individual brethren privileges only for their lives should, as respects future payments from lodges, Chapters, and Societies, confer similar privileges only for twenty years, instead of in perpetuity.

No similar motions had been submitted to the Quarterly Court of the Girls' School, and it was ultimately resolved, with the assent of the movers of the resolutions,

"That, inasmuch as it was undesirable to establish any divergence between the recently assimilated Laws of this Institution, and of the Royal Masonic Institution for Girls, the several motions for alterations of Laws, of which notice has been given for this Court be not now put; and that it be a recommendation to the General Committee to invite the co-operation of the General Committee of the Girls' School, with a view to the formation of a Joint Committee to consider whether these and other alterations of the Laws are desirable, and report to Special General Courts of the two Schools on Thursday, 6th March, 1873."

Accordingly, each General Committee appointed the same brethren, eleven in number, all of whom had had much experience of the working of the existing Laws to form the Joint Committee.

This Committee had had many and lengthy meetings, have gone very carefully over the whole of the Laws, and have agreed to recommend certain modifications, which they will submit to the Special Courts on the 6th March.

It would encroach too much upon your space to specify the alterations, but copies of the revised Laws are at the offices of both Institutions, and may be seen during office hours by any of the Governors and Subscribers.

The time of meeting of the combined Courts on Thursday, 6th March, is 12 o'clock at noon precisely. The day and the hour have been so fixed with a view to the convenience of country brethren coming to London to attend Grand Lodge on the previous evening. It is to be hoped that the meeting will be numerously attended, and that the recommendations of the Joint Committee—all of which has been well considered with a view to the welfare of both Institutions—will meet with a general acceptance.

Yours truly and fraternally,

JOHN SYMONDS.

NOTES ON THE TEMPLE AND HOSPITAL.

To the Editor of The Freemason.

Dear Sir and Brother,—

Bro. Holmes's "distinguished friend" and his distinguished friend's prompter, Sir George Bowyer, Bart., seem to be making a tool (I feel almost inclined to say a fool) of Bro. Holmes, and I am sure it must be a matter of much regret to the brethren to see him placing himself in such a ridiculous position. The distinguished friend is ready to adopt any course to prevent interference with the New Statutes, passed by a coup de main at the last Grand Conclave of the Masonic Orders of the Temple—Statutes under which he is practically the Grand Master, the Grand Master's Council, the High Court of Appeal, and the Execution-Officer, Judge, Jury, Home Secretary, and Gaoler in one person. The distinguished friend's prompter is a rabid Romanist who although he is prohibited from the light of Freemasonry by his Pope, who launches vigorous anathemas against Freemasonry and Freemasons, is sufficiently a Jesuit to use the Freemasons with the view of crushing his old foes, "the Manchester Men." It is "significant" that these "Manchester Men" who according to Sir George Bowyer do not exist, who are governed by a noble and gentle Englishman, who according to Sir George Bowyer is "nothing," are still to the front in much that is good and great, and still "go marching on," exercising Sir George Bowyer pretty freely on their way.

Bro. Holmes's distinguished friend and his prompter appear to have inadvertently omitted to furnish him with some information which, with your permission, I will at once supply for his benefit and for that of all who may be interested in this matter. The original letters from which I am about to quote are still in existence. I enclose my card (Masonically) as an evidence of good faith.

Bro. Holmes's important document (which, taken in conjunction with subsequent events, would appear to have been drawn up at the instance of Sir George Bowyer) is dated 16th December, 1858, now in the summer of 1858, one of the signatories of that document writes a letter to "the Manchester Men," in which he stated that "he accepted the Order" (that is the Manchester Men who according to Sir George Bowyer have no existence as the Order) in the position in which it then stood; he added it is now too late to discuss the origin of the establishment of the actual Langue of England, the Council of the Order has already expressed its full satisfaction in the good faith of the Englishmen, and as soon as the Catholic Priory is established in England it will announce to the Magistry and to the sacred Council the formation of a Protestant branch of the Order as already existing there.

Again, in 1860, two years after this, and upwards of a year after the fulmination of the Bowyer-Holmes document, the same writer, properly described in Bro. Holmes' translation as Secretary to the Mastery of the Sovereign Order of St. John of Jerusalem addressed the Secretary of the "Manchester Men" in the following terms, "Our programme and intentions are always the same as when I wrote in June, 1858; the substantial basis of all remains the same."

Bro. Holmes has thought fit, on the dictum of his distinguished friend, to denounce a deceased Clergyman Divinity Doctor of University Chaplain to a recent King of England, as an impostor. Perhaps he may think it advisable to denounce the letters from which I quote as forgeries, without seeing them. But let me, with all deference, offer him a little bit of advice—if he really desires true information about the Order of St. John of Jerusalem in England it would be well for him to apply, not to his distinguished friend or to his prompter, Sir George Bowyer, but to the Order itself, in whose possession are some very curious documents, whose authority and "importance" could hardly be disproved or disguised, before an impartial inquirer, by all the Saints of the Calendar with Sir George Bowyer's interpretations at their back.

I am, faithfully yours,

SERO, S&D SERIO.

NOTICE TEMPLARIE. BY A PAST GRAND OFFICER.

To examine and review the Old K. T. Statutes, seriatim, would take a longer time than would suffice to wear out the patience of ordinary readers. To criticise fully the new Statutes would still more trespass on their good nature. Each set, I apprehend, was compiled by a single individual, and submitted to an amiable Committee, who, placing implicit confidence in the knowledge, astuteness, and good faith of the compiler, probably objected as little as possible to the details, except such evident errors as will sometimes escape the vigilance of the writer; and so, after a short explanation of a few apparent incongruities, the whole is fathered by the Committee and passed helter skelter through the Grand Conclave. Such, at least, appears to have been the course lately adopted in the revision of the Statutes of Knights Templar. Revision? no! that word may be open to dispute, so let us call it re-enactment. That this wholesale destruction of time-honoured regulations, and the substitution of new ones should take place without affording an opportunity to those chiefly interested (or at any rate to their representatives in Grand Conclave) of fairly considering the changes contemplated, evinces a usurpation of power to which the Committee have neither legal nor moral right; and I shall be anxious to see how many of those who have so far exceeded their authority will be re-elected at the next Grand Conclave, to fill the offices they now bear. Fortunately for the future such occurrences are provided for, as by the new Statutes it is arranged that the proceedings of Grand Conclave "shall be regulated by the rules in Parliament." As far as I can ascertain, these changes appear to have given general dissatisfaction, and it is not difficult to recognise the object of all this unseemly haste, which has been displayed in pushing an undigested code of laws through a small winter meeting, when few of those present, and none of the absent, had an opportunity of properly considering a subject of so much importance. I see in the changes now made, an easier and more frequent access to Royalty, on the part of certain chief officers of the Order, and a wedge is inserted for the future advantage of "Ould Ireland;" but let that pass—"Every man for himself" (and his native country), &c.; an old proverb which I fear will not wear out in our time.

I remember in Grand Conclave a noble Lord accusing (most unjustly) a Very High and Eminent Sir Knight of attempting to pass a measure "by a side wind;" it did not need the assurance of the Deputy Grand Master that he "scorned to do such a thing"—but in what way were the re-enacted Statutes passed through the Assembly, and were they not supported by the noble lord in question?

One of the objects (avowed) of the new regulations is to raise the status of the Order! admit that to have secured the presidency of His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales, is an honour of which every member will be proud, but in no other way have these alterations contributed to its advancement; rather the reverse. The remission of the qualification of Royal Arch, the extinction of the rank of Eminent Commander, the abolition of past rank in Grand Conclave, &c., are all steps in the wrong direction. The substitution of the word "Convent" for Conclave, betrays a lamentable ignorance of the meaning of the latter term, and supposes that because it was applied to "an assembly of Cardinals to choose a Pope" that therefore it had no other meaning. Why, the word Conclave existed long before Popes were thought of! and signified simply "a room with lock and key," or "an assembly of any kind met together in private;" and I know of no other word so appropriate to all the meetings of Knights Templar, as Conclave, from the time when the equeries, or sentinels, are placed on duty. It is an Encampment (or Camp) before business begins, but afterwards a Conclave, or an assembly of Knights Templar met together in private for the usual purposes. Then I object to the change of the word "Installation" of a Candidate. Why? Why all these changes? The reasons should be explained separately and seriatim, in reply to any questions from the members of Grand Conclave, and not presented as a whole, first to the "amiable" Committee, and then to a small winter meeting, when the Order is scarcely represented, and has had no means of knowing the important subjects about to be introduced.

These reasons are, in my opinion, sufficient to justify any Sir Knight, member of Grand Conclave, in moving "that the minutes of the last Grand Conclave be confirmed only as regards the election of His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales to the Grand Mastership of the Order."

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS AND OINTMENT:—Common humanity suggests and public interests demand, that the knowledge of the surest, safest and quickest method of renewing soundness to the sick, should be forced upon all unfortunate sufferers. For bad legs, bad breasts and scorbutic or scrofulous sores, Holloway's Medicaments are Specifics. The grateful and earnest testimony of thousands who have experienced their unrivalled power over these complaints, and who have been raised from prostrate helplessness and a condition loathsome to themselves and others, renders it quite unnecessary to enlarge in this place upon their extraordinary virtues. The affected part should be bathed with lukewarm water and when the pores are opened the Ointment should be rubbed in twice a day all round the complaining parts.—ADVT.

"A few months ago I was suffering from inflammation of the throat, brought on by a severe cold, so that I could scarcely speak, and only with great difficulty swallow any food. I could get no permanent relief from any source, until a friend induced me to try your Vegetable Pain Killer, a few doses of which completely cured me.—J. INNOVATIONS IN MASONRY.

There is a well-known maxim of the law, which says "Omnis innovatio plus novitate perturbat quam utilitate prodest," that is, every innovation occasions more harm and disarrangement by its novelty than benefit by its actual utility. This maxim is peculiarly applicable to Freemasonry, whose system is opposed to all innovations. Thus Dr. Dalcho says, in his Ahiman Rezon, (p. 191,) "Antiquity is dear to a Mason's heart. Innovation is treason, and saps the venerable fabric of the Order." In accordance with this sentiment, we find the installation charges of the Master of a lodge affirming that "it is not in the power of any man or body of men to make innovations in the body of Masonry."

By the "body of Masonry" is here meant, undoubtedly, the landmarks, which have always been declared to be unchangeable. The non-essentials, such as the local and general regulations and the lectures, are not included in this term. The former are changing every day, accordingly as experience or caprice suggests improvement or alteration. The most important of these changes in this country has been the abolition of the Quarterly Communications of the Grand Lodge, and the substitution for them, except, perhaps, in a single State, of an Annual Communication. But, after all, this is perhaps only a recurrence to first usages; for although Anderson says that in 1717 the Quarterly Communications "were revived," there is no evidence extant that before that period the Masons ever met except once a year in their "General Assembly." If so, the change in 1717 was an innovation, and not that which has almost universally prevailed in America.

The lectures, which are but the commentaries on the ritual and the interpretation of the symbolism, have been subjected from the time of Anderson to the present day to repeated modifications.

But, notwithstanding the repugnance of Masons to innovations, a few have occurred in the Order. Thus in the schism which took place in the middle of the 18th century, and which resulted in the formation of the Grand Lodge of Ancients, as they called themselves in contradistinction to the regular Grand Lodge of England, which was styled the Grand Lodge of Moderns, the former body, to prevent the intrusion of the latter upon their meetings, made changes in some of the modes of recognition; changes which, although Dalcho has said that they amounted to no more than a dispute "whether the glove should be placed first upon the right hand or on the left," (Ahim. Rez., 193,) were among the causes of continuous acrimony among the two bodies, which was only healed in 1813, by a partial sacrifice of principle on the part of the legitimate Grand Body, and have perpetuated differences which still exist among the English and American and the Continental Freemasons.

But the most important innovation which sprang out of this unfortunate schism is that which is connected with the Royal Arch degree. On this subject there have been two theories: One, that the Royal Arch degree originally constituted a part of the Master's degree, and that it was dissevered from it by the Ancients; the other, that it never had any existence until it was invented by Ramsay, and adopted by Dermott for his Ancient Grand Lodge. If the first, which is the most probable and the most generally received opinion, be true, then the regular or Modern Grand Lodge committed an innovation in continuing the disseverance at the Union in 1813. If the second be the true theory, then the Grand Lodge equally perpetuated an innovation in recognising it as legal, and declaring, as it did, that Ancient Craft Masonry consists of three degrees, including the Holy Royal Arch." But however the innovation may have been introduced, the Royal Arch degree has now become, so far as the York and American Rites, well-settled, and recognised as an integral part of the Masonic system.

About the same time there was another innovation attempted in France. The adherents of the Pretender, Charles Edward, sought to give to Masonry a political bias in favour of the exiled House of Stuart, and for this purpose altered the interpretation of the great legend of the third degree, so as to make it applicable to the execution, or, as they called it, the martyrdom, of Charles the First. But this attempted innovation was not successful, and the system in which this lesson was practised has ceased to exist, although its workings are now and then seen in some of the high degrees, without, however, any manifest evil effect.

On the whole, the spirit of Freemasonry, so antagonistic to innovation, has been successfully maintained, and an investigator of the system as it prevailed in the year 1717, and as it is maintained at the present day, will not refrain from wonder at the little change which has been brought about by the long cycle of one hundred and fifty years.—Dr. Mackay's "National Freemason."

ROYAL MASONIC BENEVOLENT INSTITUTION.

The 31st annual festival of this Institution was held on Monday last at the Freemason's Tavern, under the presidency of His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales, Past Grand Master. About 400 brethren, including the Stewards, attended, besides a strong gathering of ladies, altogether forming the largest number of visitors who have ever honoured a Masonic meeting. As it was the first time His Royal Highness has presided at a public dinner since his illness in 1871, the Fraternity felt his ready consent to dine with his fellow craftsmen as a compliment not frequently accorded by Princes to people, and the muster of brethren to welcome him was no doubt on this account larger than it would otherwise have been. Among the distinguished brethren who supported His Royal Highness were: The Marquess of Ripon, K.G.; The Marquess of Hamilton; The Marquess of Londonderry, P.G.W.; The Earl of Shrewsbury and Talbot, P.G.M., Staffordshire; The Earl of Limerick, P.G.M., Bristol; The Lord Methuen, P.G.M., Wiltshire; The Lord Skelmersdale, P.G.M., W. Lanc; The Lord Tenterden, S.G.W.; Lieut. Col. Lyne, P.G.M., Monmouthshire; Lieut. Col. Adair, P.P.G.M., Somerset; Rev. John Huyshe, P.G.M., Devonshire; R. J. Bagshaw, P.G.M., Essex; Lieut. Col. Burdett, P.G.M., Middlesex; Æ. J. McIntyre, G. Reg.; Rev. J. E. Cox, P.G. Chaplain; Rev. J. Simpson, P.G. Chaplain; Rev. C. J. Martyn, P.G. Chaplain; John Hervey, Grand Secretary; Francis Knollys, J. M. Clabon, P.G.D.; Major Creaton, P.G.D.; Benjamin Head, P.G.D.; R. W. Stewart, P.G.D.; Jabez Hogg, P.G.D.; R. W. Wheeler, P.G.D.; C. H. Gregory, P.G.D.; Joshua Nunn, P.G.S.B.; Bentley Shaw, P.G.D., D.P.G.M., W. Yorkshire; C. A. Murton, J.G.D.; Sir Albert Woods, Garter, G.D.C.; Thomas Fenn, P.A.G.D.C.; R. J. Spiers, P.G.S.B.; E. Busher, P.G.S.B.; George Lambert, P.P.G.W. Herts; Sir Michael Costa, P.G. Org.; W. Ganz, Grand Org.; Hyde Pullen, P.G. S.B.; John Boyd, G.Purst.; C. A. Cottebrune, A.G.Purst.; Joseph Smith, P.G.P.; William Pugh, P.G.P.; John Coutts, P.G.P.; Frederick Binckes, Sec. Royal Masonic Institution for Boys; R. Wentworth Little,

Sec. Royal Masonic Institution for Girls; At the conclusion of the banquet grace was sung, and the toasts were delivered in rapid succession, music in only a few instances being allowed to fill up the intervals between toasts and replies.

His Royal Highness in giving the first toast said:—Brethren, the first toast that I shall have the honour of proposing to you this evening, is one which I feel convinced will require no preface from me; it is that of "Her Majesty the Queen," (Cheers.) Brethren, let us drink "The Health of the Queen, and the increasing happiness of the Craft."

The toast was followed by the singing of the National Anthem.

The Marquess of Ripon:—May it please your Royal Highness, Brethren, I esteem myself very fortunate that it should have fallen to my lot upon this occasion to propose to you the toast that I have now to offer to this great assembly. I know well that the health of the Royal Family is always drunk with the utmost enthusiasm in every Masonic assembly, (Hear, hear.) Loyalty is one of the distinguishing features of the Craft, and therefore we delight to honour the Royal Family. (Hear, hear.) But, brethren, we have upon this occasion a yet closer and more Masonic interest in the toast which I am about to propose, because the first name that I have to offer to you now is the name of His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales (immense applause), who is dear to us all, inasmuch as he has been pleased to add to the many honours of this ancient Craft the dignity of his illustrious name. But on this occasion we have to drink the health of His Royal Highness not only as a distinguished Mason, but as the Chairman of this festival. Brethren, you have assembled in vast numbers from every province in England for the purpose of testifying your interest in the Institution in whose honour we have met to-day, and I am sure that there is no brother present in this hall who will not join me in thinking that it is a subject of deep congratulation to this Institution and to the Craft at large that we should have the great advantage of being presided over by the Prince of Wales. (Hear, hear.) Such sanction to the labours of all who are engaged in carrying on the work of this Institution is indeed an honour and is the highest encouragement; and sure I am that every one of you will join with me in drinking from your hearts "The Health of the Prince of Wales," and in giving to His Royal Highness a truly Masonic welcome.

The toast was drunk with great enthusiasm, and was followed by the rendering of "God bless the Prince of Wales."

His Royal Highness, in responding, said:—Most Worshipful Grand Master and Brethren, I can assure you that I feel deeply sensible of the excessively kind manner in which our Grand Master has proposed my health, and the cordial way in which you, brethren, have received it. It is now two years since I have had the pleasure and advantage of meeting my Masonic brethren, and I can assure them that it affords me very great pleasure to do so again this evening, and to see myself on this festive occasion supported by so many of the brethren from every part of our realms. Brethren, I think you will believe me when I tell you that it is not merely idle words when I assure you most deeply that I have the interest of our great brotherhood at heart (Cheers). Although I was initiated in the mysteries of our Craft in a foreign land, from the moment that I returned to England till the present day have I been received with such kindness and such cordiality by my Masonic brethren and countrymen, that I have always considered myself as a true English Mason. (Hear, hear.) Brethren, I have so many duties to do in the course of the year that I cannot be so much given up to the interests of our Craft as I should like; but whenever the occasion demands that I should give you assistance, in any way that lies in my power, I can assure you that I most cordially and heartily do so. Allow me once more to thank you for the kind way you have received this toast, and allow me, in the name of the Princess of Wales and the other members of the Royal Family, to thank you also, brethren.

His Royal Highness:—Most Worshipful Grand

Master and Brethren, I have now the honour of proposing to you a toast—one which I think in this generous assembly will be received with the greatest possible enthusiasm, as it is the "Health of our Grand Master." (Cheers.) I feel sure, brethren, that you will agree with me that before him it would be bad taste on my part to pronounce those eulogies on his name which, if he were absent, it would give me the greatest pleasure to do. At the same time I know I shall receive the hearty concurrence of all those present in proposing to you his health, and you will agree with me that no person in this country has the interest of Freemasonry more at heart than he has. Confident I am that all those who are under his order feel proud that he should be our chief. Brethren, I call upon you to drink "The Health of the Most Worshipful the Marquis of Ripon." (Applause.)

The Marquess of Ripon in response, said, May it please Your Royal Highness,—Brethren, I thank you heartily for the manner in which you have been kind enough to drink my health. I can assure you, sir, that I esteem it a great honour to be present upon this occasion, on which you have been pleased to give your personal support and sanction to one of our Great Masonic Charities. You have shewn, sir, by so doing that you truly appreciate the principles of our Craft (hear, hear), and the body which, cemented together in one common bond of mutual sympathy and united principle. Your Royal Highness on the step of the throne, and every brother in the most distant part of this country, must, I think, be a body, when its public character is such as that which I trust Freemasonry can claim throughout the country, of which any man may justly be proud that he has the honour to be at its head. I, sir, am well aware of my own shortcomings in the great office which I fill. I come among you; but whenever I do so, brethren, you receive me with so much kindness, you give me so many proofs of your confidence, and I hope I may say, your regard, that I am encouraged still so long as that confidence may be preserved to me to endeavour to discharge the duties of my office and to labour earnestly and zealously for the benefit of the Craft. (Cheers.)

The Earl of Shrewsbury and Talbot:—May it please Your Royal Highness, ladies and brethren, I confess I should feel a great diffidence in rising to give the toast that I have the honour of suggesting to you at the present moment were it not of such intrinsic value that it requires little or no recommendation on my part. It is one of the great beauties of our Craft that our reflections are not only for a moment, but are sanguine as our anticipations for the future, and when I offer to you the name of the Earl of Zetland, who you will immediately remember ruled over the Craft for five-and-twenty years, and endeared himself to us, it is not for me, somewhat of a young Mason, to attempt to eulogise the character of the noble Lord: but sure I am that anybody who will take the trouble to recollect or to look into the support that Lord Zetland gave to Masonry, will drink this toast with very great enthusiasm. His Lordship was a past President of this Institution. I believe we have a most noble and illustrious example in our Prince who sits with us and who spoke curly, but truly, when he said that the ornaments of our Craft were our Charitable Institutions. That principle was carried out by Lord Zetland, and I think it is carried out by our Grand Master; and I venture to say that Masonry has an enormous power. Look at what our two great sister Institutions have done. Look at what this Institution to-night will realise by His Royal Highness's condescension in continuing among us;—at what our Boys' School—at what our Girls' School, at their annual festivals have done. The spirit of charity is becoming our chief feature. There is less banqueting, less of bodily enjoyment among us, and our first duty is to recollect we are Freemasons, and to remember and carry out the principles of our Craft in a social point of view; and in that point of view charity should be the first and foremost element. My toast is "The Health of the Deputy Grand Master, the Earl of Carnarvon, and the Past Grand Officers." You will drink their health because you know them well. I am sorry Lord Carnarvon, from the state of his health, is not able to be with us to day, but I am sure you will drink his health, and the health of all those included in the toast, separately and collectively, with great warmth, as it is one that commends itself to your acceptance.

Lord Tenterden.—Brethren, I am glad to think, from the manner in which this toast has been received, and the manner in which the toast of "The Grand Officers of England" is always received in Masonic bodies, that the efforts that are made by the Grand Officers meet your approbation. On the present occasion. I may, however, say that I think we deserve but very little praise for being here this evening, when the most distinguished and illustrious brother in our Craft condescends to come and preside over your meetings. It would, indeed, be but a discredit to Grand Lodge if he was not warmly and actively supported by all the officers, and more especially do I feel that this is the case when the Institution which he is here to support this evening maintains that great cause which was first inculcated in us on our admission into the Craft, namely, to succour and support those who from circumstances of unforeseen calamity and misfortune had been reduced to the lowest ebb of poverty and distress. (Cheers.)

His Royal Highness:—Most Worshipful Grand Master and Brethren, the toast which I have now the honour of proposing to you is, I may say, the so-called toast of the evening: I have to beg you to drink "Success to the Royal Masonic Benevolent Institution for Aged Freemasons and the Widows of Freemasons." (Applause.) I was certain that this toast would be most cordially responded to, as from the assemblage that I see before me I feel convinced that the Craft in general, and those that I see around me in particular, are deeply interested in this great charitable and excellent Institution. It shows me, brethren, that you agree in those great objects, and those great events of our Craft of which our Worshipful Grand Master reminded you, those of charity; and I feel sure, brethren, that although many have preceded me this evening, and many have explained to you far better than I shall be able to do, the objects and principles of this charity you, will be as liberal as it is in your power to be. As you are doubtless aware, brethren, my late grand-uncle, the Duke of Sussex, who was formerly your Grand Master, and who I have always understood took the deepest interest in all that concerned our Craft, was one of the first to suggest the Institution for Aged Male Freemasons, and the suggestion was warmly taken up by Grand Lodge, under his presidency, and the sum of £4,000 a year was voted. Since that time—seven years afterwards, our most worthy and excellent, and I may say revered late Grand Master, the Earl of Zetland, who nobody regrets more than I do not to see here this evening supporting us on this occasion, extended this Institution to the Widows of Freemasons. Although these funds were separate, we may consider them as so far united that not only do our male aged brethren receive support, but their widows do so also. The few statistics that I have to recal to your attention, I will now just mention. In 22 years as many as 147 widows were relieved, at the cost of over £19,000 by annuities of £25 each. As many as 352 indigent Freemasons were assisted at the cost of over £40,000 by annuities of £26. It is proposed that after next month male annuitants should have £36 a year, and female annuitants £28 a year, therefore an increase of £10 and £3. I feel sure that we should all do our utmost to give our cordial co-operation to effect this. I believe I am not incorrect in stating that we have entire trust in those who have the management of this Institution and as it is under the auspices and presidentship of our own Worshipful Grand Master, I feel sure that he will be with us and give his utmost attention to the interests of this Institution. It is well and economically managed. From what I understand about the certain annual income, it is unfortunately small. The males annuitants receive only £1300 a year, while the expenses are over £4000 a year. The female annuitants receive under £800 a year, and the expenditure is £1200, not counting the working expenses, £1200 a year. For some years past the annual expenses have been £4000 or £5000 per annum. This sum, this deficit I may say, has to be made up by donations and subscriptions. Let me therefore impress upon you once more most heartily to do your utmost to render this deficit as small as you possibly can, I feel sure that you will do so, and I feel sure that no long speech of mine will be necessary to make you do it. It is said that brevity is the soul of wit, and on this occasion I beg to adopt that proverb. I once more thank you, brethren, for the cordial manner you have supported me, and if by taking the chair this evening I may have in any small way augmented the funds of this Institution, I shall return home feeling that I have done a pleasant duty. (Great applause.) I call upon you now to drink in bumpers "Success to the Royal Masonic Benevolent Institution for Aged Freemasons and the Widows of Freemasons."

Bro. Jas. Terry here read the Stewards' lists, which amounted in the aggregate to £6,686 6s. 6d., or £3,000 over the collection of last year.

The Earl of Limerick:—May it please your Royal Highness, My Lords, and Brethren, I shall have but little trouble in proposing the toast that has been committed to me on the present occasion, for I am sure nothing is more fitting than that the brethren who have gathered together here to support one of the great Masonic charities should also express their feelings in favour of the success of the other two charities. On this occasion we may be said to have assembled by our subscriptions to aid in assisting the decayed years of our aged and distressed brethren and their widows. The other two charities may be said also to aid in smoothing the dying beds of our aged and distressed brethren and their widows, by giving to them the hope that after their death the brethren would not be forgetful of the duty of supporting the orphans whom they have left behind them. The brethren on the present occasion have done well and nobly in the amounts they have contributed to this Institution. It may not be necessary for me to say—it will hardly be necessary for me to remind them that on the 12th of March is the festival of the Boys' School, and on the 14th of May is the festival of the Girls' School, which always highly commend themselves to our best sympathies. I will give you, therefore, then, brethren, "Success to the Boys' and Girls' Schools, to the other Masonic charities," coupling with that toast the name of the brother who is Secretary to that charity whose festival comes first after the present evening, Bro. Binckes.

Bro. F. Binckes:—Your Royal Highness, Lord Limerick, My Lords, and Brethren, my name has been associated just now so cordially by the noble Lord, the Earl of Limerick, with this toast, of "The Sister Institutions," which in two successive years enjoyed the same illustrious patronage which this Institution has the honour to enjoy this evening, that I immediately respond. These Institutions bear still a grateful recollection of the enormous advantages, the beneficial substantial results that accrued from that august patronage, and that dignified presidency; and I venture to say that those who are most immediately connected with those Institutions, and have their interests most deeply at heart, can never forget the benefits conferred on those two institutions by His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales; and while they, therefore, are fully sensible of those benefits, they, without any grudge, and without any feeling of jealousy, I may say, would offer their most sincere congratulations to those most immediately connected with the Benevolent Institution on the very large and distinguished body who have met, under your Royal Highness's Presidency, this evening. But Brethren must bear this one fact in mind, what I have spoken of in reference to the other Institutions is associated with the past, of which, of course, I keep a grateful remembrance. Brethren, the great success of this evening should stimulate you to further exertion, and we ask you in all sincerity, in all Masonic fervency, and in the spirit of real charity not to forget that the future also calls upon you when the festivals of the other two great Institutions will come. This must be borne in mind, that the more the Masonic Brotherhood does in support of these Institutions, the more they are called upon to do it; because if any body of men should bear aloft higher than another "the banner with the strange device, 'Excelsior,'" it is the Masonic Brotherhood. Brethren, we cannot go back to the success of the past; and success to the present must be melted and classed in the future. This I hope, that we shall see ourselves surrounded by as large a gathering of good friends as I see now, and that no less substantial success—I hope even more substantial success—may be met with by all the Institutions in future. On behalf of those two Institutions, I offer you their best and warmest and most sincere thanks for bearing us in mind on this great occasion.

The Marquis of Hamilton:—Your Royal Highness, and Brethren, the toast which I now have the honour to propose to you, is one which I am sure you will all drink with acclamation, namely, that of the "The Stewards;" and I feel that, surrounded by so many of them this evening, as regards names it will be impossible to mention them all; yet I feel as if I should be scarcely able to do justice to them unless I did. You are all aware, brethren, that the Stewards of an institution like the present one, have duties very arduous and varied; and with regard to the entertainment which they have presented to your Royal President this evening, I, conjointly with all others, can testify to its magnificence, and the noble manner in which the Stewards have accomplished their duties. But there are other duties to which we look, and those are the substantial ones, and the money which you are able to produce for Institutions like this. It is to the Stewards' energies, and to their perseverance during the twelve months which intervene between one anniversary dinner like this and another that they have to labour and to bring the fruits of their labours to perfection; and I need not bring before your notice any more words of eulogy of the Stewards of this institution, but will only refer to the words just uttered by your worthy Secretary, when he stated that the sum of £6,686 has been collected during the last twelve months by your Stewards. There is also a double obligation connected with the Stewards; for not only have they the trouble of collecting from others, but they are also under the necessity of putting their hands into their own pockets, and contributing to that amount (hear, hear). But, brethren, in bringing this toast under your notice, I bring before you the names of no ordinary Stewards. Among the list of Stewards of this institution you will find that there are some of the greatest Masons of this kingdom, men who by their energy, by their influence, and by the interest which they have taken in Masonry, have brought its Institutions before the eyes of the public, and made the Masonic Order of England the envy of the whole of Europe. Not only have they done this, but they have also, by their liberality, mainly helped to contribute to the great funds of this Institution up to the present point. I will not occupy your attention any longer, but following the example of your Royal President, I will now beg to propose "The Health of the Stewards," and "The Health of Major Creton, the Chairman of the Board of Stewards."

Major Creton, V.P.:—May it please Your Royal Highness, Most Worshipful Grand Master, My Lords, and Brethren, as President of the Board of Stewards, I am deputed by those brethren with whom I have the sincere pleasure to be associated, to offer our hearty acknowledgments for the honour you have been pleased to confer on us, and to assure you, My Lord, that your kind expressions of approval of our services have given us the greatest possible pleasure and satisfaction. The success of our efforts and this kind compliment which has just been paid us will for ever be endeared to us as rendering us confident that we have done our duty. With these few remarks I will conclude by thanking your Royal Highness, Most Worshipful Grand Master, My Lords, and Brethren, for the honour you have been pleased to bestow on the Board of Stewards.

His Royal Highness Most Worshipful Grand Master:—Brethren, the toast which I now have to give to you is the last one, but although the last one, by no means the least one, as it is that of "The Ladies." I know that this toast is always most cordially received, and I know also that it is a great source of satisfaction and of pleasure to us that so many fair ladies have graced this festival by their presence this evening. Although they are not initiated into the mysteries of Freemasonry, and although women's right have not been extended to the Craft, still, Brethren, it affords us, I feel sure, the greatest satisfaction to observe, that although at a distance, they support us by their smiles and by their presence, and seem to take an interest in our great charitable Institutions. I will not keep you now, Brethren, but will beg you to drink most heartily and cordially, "The Health of the Ladies," and with the toast I beg to couple the name of Bro. Gregory.

Bro. C. Hutton Gregory:—May it please your Royal Highness, although I have received your Royal Highness's command to respond for the ladies, I cannot help feeling that there is a strong contrast between May in the gallery and December here. However unequal I may be, either mentally or physically, to return thanks for that toast, I can say, Sir, on behalf of the ladies, what they would say much better than myself, and without the infliction of a cold speech, they are greatly indebted to your Royal Highness for your presence here to-night—indebted, Sir, because they love this charity, and because they know that your Royal Highness's presence has raised to double its former maximum result the list of subscriptions on the present occasion. They are indebted to you, Sir, because it is the first occasion since it pleased God to restore you to health on which you have attended any Masonic gathering; and when they remember how you supported Masonry before that critical time; when they remember the tears they shed, and the prayers they uttered to the Great Architect of the Universe—tears not shed by women alone, and prayers not uttered alone by women; that now, on the first occasion when in renewed and restored health your Royal Highness identifies yourself with those Masonic Charities you have done so much to keep alive, you take upon yourself to propose "The Health of the Ladies," with the princely gallantry with which you always do it, they feel still more greatly obliged to you.

The company then adjourned to the Temple, where a grand concert was given, under the direction of Bro. Seymour Smith, by Miss Banks, Madame Osborne Williams, Madame Florence Lancia, Miss Adelaide Newton, and Bros. Frank Elmore, Chaplin Henry, Kerr Gedge, Lester, Seymour Smith, Ransford, and Mr. John Thomas.

Bro. Goodchild was an excellent toastmaster; and, as, with ladies and brethren, something like a thousand persons were "repasted," the banqueting arrangements reflected great credit on Bro. Francatelli.

THE "SPENCER TESTIMONIAL."—The services which Bro. Sidney Spencer has rendered to hotel-keepers and others in respect of the successful opposition to the demand of the Commissioners of Inland Revenue for the taxation of occasional waiters, led recently to the organisation of a fund for the purpose of presenting a testimonial to him. The project was warmly taken up, and upwards of 200 subscribers, representing all parts of the kingdom, were soon obtained. The testimonial is plate. The presentation will take place at the City Terminus Hotel, Cannon-street, at a banquet, on Wednesday, 12th of March. Along with several other specialities, the services of the band of the Coldstream Guards, the Glossop Champion Bell Ringers (some most remarkable performers), and of Mr. Ellis Roberts, harpist to the Prince of Wales, have been secured; and there will be some good vocal music, under the direction of Mr. John Elwin. The present of plate will be accompanied by an illuminated address. The chair will be taken by Mr. John Hall, proprietor of the Great Western Hotel, Birmingham.

The fifteen sections will be worked at the Constitutional Lodge of Instruction, No. 55, Wheatsheaf Hotel, Hand Court, Holborn, by fifteen brethren of the Metropolitan Lodge of Instruction, No. 1056, on Tuesday, March 4th, 1873. Bro. Bingemann, S.D., 55, will preside. The lodge will be opened at half-past 6 o'clock precisely.

BRO. HOLMES'S LECTURE ON THE ORDERS OF THE TEMPLE AND HOSPITAL.

By LUPUS.

Before proceeding to reply to the last communication of Bro. Holmes, or to consider the well-known document of which he is made the channel of this new publication, accompanied by so remarkable a translation, I would crave indulgence for a few preliminary observations.

The Order of St. John of Jerusalem was never an Imperial, Royal, or Papal Institution, but was in its constitution chapteral, at once aristocratic, and republican; a federation of separate langues, forming in the aggregate a sovereign and independent power. Each langue retained its separate principles of self-government, of which no more prominent instance can be given than the election of Grand Master, which was effected by delegates who were chosen, three by each langue in its own chapel. The Bailiwick of Brandenburg, on adopting the evangelical faith, separated itself from the main body of the Order in 1319, but was afterwards fully recognised, as I have shown. The Order in England was, by Statute in 1540, declared dissolved and void, and its possessions confiscated. It was revived by Charter of the 2nd April, 1557, and its property partly restored, but again to be absorbed by the Crown, with other general ecclesiastical possessions, under the Statute of 1558, though the latter enactment did not declare the re-suppression of the Order in England. The three French Langues were suppressed, and their property confiscated by an Edict of the Directory, on the 19th September, 1792, but were, as was the English, still deemed existent at Malta, where the French Knights formed, as they ever had done, the great proportion of the Order, there being at the cession of the island 200 of their members out of the total of the 332 Knights then at the chef-lieu. The French Langues possessed and enjoyed much authority and consideration; they had contributed, perhaps (I speak from memory), forty of the seventy-one Grand Masters who have ruled the Order, and Vertot, who is on all hands acknowledged as its chief historian, tells us the French always alleged "that the Order owed its foundation entirely to their ancestor; that if, in the series of time, other nations had been admitted into it, still it was the French alone who had adopted them; that the other languages ought always to consider them as their first parents." Thus four out of the eight divisions of the Order were in a dormant condition in the nations of their languages, though all recognised at the chef-lieu. The growing power of Napoleon in the latter part of the last century, and the then unsettled state of Europe, induced the Order to look outside its own limits for support, and, no doubt, viewing Russia as a great bulwark against the aggression of Napoleon, the Order induced the Emperor Paul to accept the position of "Protector." Malta fell in 1798, the Knights became scattered, and, as Colonel Porter justly remarks, the Order was entirely disintegrated, and the whole of the langues were reduced to the same position as that of England, entirely separate as a federation, but still retaining in some degree their organisation as separate entities. Those Knights who had sought refuge in Russia naturally looked to Paul, already the "Protector," as their most probable aid in restoring the sovereignty of the Order, and thus, in extremis and grasping at a straw, they proceeded to his election as Grand Master, of which we have heard; an independent course of action to which they did not then, or thereafter, think it necessary to invite the Papal sanction; indeed, the historian Sutherland says "the election was bitterly reprobated by the Pope; and the elector of Bavaria, to get rid of the disputes in which it involved him, abolished the Order in his dominion." Although this election was an utterly illegal proceeding, yet excuses may be found in the divided condition of the Order at the time, by which any united action was rendered impracticable; indeed, the Knights themselves proclaimed that their action had been taken, "knowing the impossibility, in our present circumstances, the members of our Order being generally dispersed, of preserving all the forms and customs prescribed in our Constitution and Statutes." Paul died in 1801, and his son and successor Alexander immediately assumed the title of "Protector;" but on the 22nd of June, in the same year, he convened a Council of the Order of St. Petersburg, which called itself the "Sovereign Council of the Order," when a substitute was proposed for the original mode of election of a Grand Master, by which lists of names were to be submitted to the Pope, and from which he was to select a Grand Master; but it was stipulated that this expedient should not form any precedent for a future election. His Holiness, the Pope made, I think, three nominations, but without success, as the nominees each declined, or would not enter upon the office; at length, on the recommendation of the Emperor Alexander and the King of Naples, the Pope, on the 9th of February, 1802, named the Count Giovanni di Tommasi as Grand Master of the Order. Colonel Porter says, "This nomination was, of course, in direct contravention of the Statutes, but was accepted by the few fragments of the dispersed fraternity who could be assembled together. Tommasi proclaimed his appointment to a conclave who had met in the Priory Church of Messina, on the 27th of June, 1802. Nothing of any importance in the interests of the Order was proposed at this meeting, nor indeed were they capable of much amelioration. Tommasi resided until his death at Catania, and when that event took place, in June, 1805, the Pope, who declined any longer to take upon himself the responsibility of naming a Grand Master in violation of the Statutes, contented himself with selecting the Bailiff Guevara Suardo as lieutenant, and from that day till now he has continued these appointments."

These lieutenants, some of whose names were enumerated in the imperfect list quoted by Bro. Holmes, have presided over the body known as the Sacred Council, which continued located at Catania until 1827, when it was removed to Ferrara, and from thence to Rome, in 1834, where it still remains.

In 1814 the French Knights, encouraged by the humiliation of their enemy, Napoleon, assembled themselves at Paris, under the presidency of the Prince Camille de Rohan, Grand Prior of Aquitaine, and elected a permanent Commission determining to do their utmost to restore the position of the Order at large. This movement met with approval; the Pope confirmed it by Bull of the 10th August, 1814, and the Sacred Council recognised it by an instrument, dated the 9th October following, addressed to the chiefs of the French langues in their official capacity as such. This Commission exercised most important acts on behalf of the General Order during a series of years. It negotiated, but unsuccessfully, with the King for the restoration of the estates of the Order. It treated in 1814 with the Congress of Vienna for a new chef-lieu in the Mediterranean. It represented the whole Order, in 1816, in an appeal to the French King and Chambers; again in 1832 at the Congress of Verona, and if it did not accomplish all its aims, it certainly was not, as the Sacred Council admitted, the fault of the workmen. It appears to have been for so long a period, and on such important occasions, the only active representation of the Order, that there seems no doubt it was invested with full and entire powers and authority. If this was not so, the Sacred Council would itself have been to the front, as representing the Order in which they claim so high a place, and would not have sat by, whilst a subordinate body, with limited authority, was carrying on one long struggle to enter into treaties for the benefit of the Order for which it was professing to act.

INSTALLATION OF LORD SKELMERSDALE.—At a Provincial Grand Lodge, held on Thursday, at the Town Hall, Liverpool (the use of which was kindly given by Bro. Samuelson, Mayor, P. Prov. J.G.D., Cheshire), the Right Hon. Lord Skelmersdale was installed with the usual impressive ceremonial as Right Worshipful Provincial Grand Master of the Province of the Western Division of the County of Lancaster. The ceremony was performed by Bro. Starkie, R.W.P.G.M. for the Eastern Division of Lancashire, who had been nominated by the M.W.G.M., the Marquess of Ripon, to do the work. His Worship the Mayor entertained Bro.

Lord Skelmersdale, and Prov. G. Officers to breakfast at the Town Hall, after which the Craft and Provincial Grand Lodges were opened, and the important business proceeded with, and a large number of the brethren banquetted at the Adelphi Hotel in the evening. Owing to the ceremony being performed towards the end of the week, a full report of the interesting meeting is reserved till our next

THE MASONIC BALL IN LIVERPOOL.—Thanks to the zeal and excellent generalship of Bro. Dr. J. K. Smith, Hon. Sec., P.M., 249, who received able help from an active Committee, no less a sum than £150 9s. 6d. has been handed over to the Treasurer of the West Lancashire Masonic Educational Institution, as the monetary result of the brilliant Masonic Ball, recently held at the Town Hall, Liverpool. With the exception of what is known as the "royal visitors' year," when the suite of rooms both at the Town Hall, and adjoining Exchange News Room, had to be used, this is the largest sum which has been handed over to the funds of this noble institution, and therefore great credit is due to all concerned, Chairman, Hon. Sec., Hon. Treasurer, and Committee, for the manner in which they worked, and the unusual success which has crowned their efforts. At a recent closing meeting of the General Committee of the Ball, hearty thanks were passed to Bro. the Right Hon. Lord Skelmersdale, R.W.P.G.M. for West Lancashire, and Lady Skelmersdale, for their presence on the occasion; and an equally cordial vote of thanks were passed to his Worship, the Mayor of Liverpool, Bro. E. Samuelson, for receiving and entertaining the noble visitors.

PROSPECTUS.

The Surrey Masonic Hall Company has been formed with the object of providing a Building specially adapted to the requirements of Masonic Lodges, Chapters, and Conclaves, held in the South Metropolitan District; and in connection therewith, a large Hall, for the general use of the public when not engaged for Masonic purposes.

This project has met with the approval of Brethren high in the Craft, and been very favourably received at the several Public Meetings that have been held.

The Site for the Building is in the Camberwell New Road, lying between the Post Office and the County Court, close to the Station of the London, Chatham, and Dover Railway, and to the Tramways from Brixton, Vauxhall, Westminster, Blackfriars, Peckham, and Greenwich. It possesses a frontage of about 70 feet, with a depth of about 150, and has been secured for a term of Ninety-nine Years, at a very low Ground-rent. The plans have been prepared by a well-known Architect and Member of the Craft, and embrace every convenience that long experience could possibly suggest.

The propriety of holding Masonic Meetings in buildings devoted to the purpose is universally acknowledged by the Craft, and the advantages have been fully proved in many provincial towns where Masonic Halls have been erected. It will also supply a want, long felt in this neighbourhood, of a commodious Public Building.

Although the chief object of the Company is to promote the good of Freemasonry, the Directors are of opinion, from estimates carefully prepared, that the Shareholders will also derive a very fair return in a commercial point of view. They therefore, with full confidence, invite the active support of their Brethren. A large number of shares have already been subscribed for.

The estimated annual expenditure for Ground-rent, Taxes, Gas, Coals and sundries about £200.

The estimated annual receipts from Lodges, Chapters, Lodges of Instruction, Conclaves, &c., including rent of Wine cellars, about £220; and from rental of Hall for Concerts, Public Meetings, &c., about £300. And the estimated cost of building and furnishing the Hall, capable of accomodating about 700 persons, in addition to spacious Masonic Rooms, from £2,500 to £3,000, thus shewing 10 per cent, interest on the capital. The Directors, however, fairly anticipate a larger return from public lettings.

The Company is registered under Table A of the Companies Act, 1862. A copy of the Memorandum of Association can be seen at the Offices of the Company.

CROSBY'S BALSAMIC COUGH ELIXIR.
Opium, Narcotics, and Squills are too often invoked to give relief in Coughs, Colds, and all Pulmonary diseases. Instead of such fallacious remedies, which yield momentary relief at the expense of enfeebling the digestive organs, and thus increasing that debility which lies at the root of the malady, modern science points to CROSBY'S BALSAMIC COUGH ELIXIR as the true remedy.

SELECT TESTIMONIAL.
Dr. Rooke, Scarborough, author of the "Anti-Lancet," says: "I have repeatedly observed how very rapidly and invariably it subdued cough, pain, and irritation of the chest in cases of Pulmonary Consumption, and I can, with the greatest confidence, recommend it as a most valuable adjunct to an otherwise strengthening treatment for this disease."
This medicine, which is free from opium and squills, not only allays the local irritation, but improves digestion and strengthens the constitution. Hence it is used with the most signal success in Asthma, Bronchitis, Consumption, Coughs, Influenza, Night Sweats of Consumption, Quinsey, and all affections of the throat and chest. Sold in bottles at 1s. 9d., 4s. 6d., and 11s. each, by all respectable Chemists, and wholesale by Jas. M. Crosby, Chemist, Scarborough.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE.
 THE ORIGINAL AND ONLY GENUINE.

CHLORODYNE is admitted by the Profession to be the most wonderful and valuable remedy ever discovered. CHLORODYNE is the best remedy known for Coughs, Consumption, Bronchitis, Asthma. CHLORODYNE effectually checks and arrests those too often fatal diseases—Diphtheria, Fever, Croup, Ague. CHLORODYNE acts like a charm in Diarrhoea, and is the only specific in Cholera and Dysentery. CHLORODYNE effectually cuts short all attacks of Epilepsy, Hysteria, Palpitation and Spasms. CHLORODYNE is the only palliative in Neuralgia, Rheumatism, Gout, Cancer, Toothache, Meningitis, &c.

From Lord FRANCIS CONYNNGHAM, Mount Charles, Donegal, 11th December, 1868.
 "Lord Francis Conyngham, who this time last year bought some of Dr. J. Collis Browne's Chlorodyne from Mr. Davenport, and has found it a most wonderful medicine, will be glad to have half a dozen bottles sent at once to the above address.

"Earl RUSSEL communicated to the College of Physicians that he had received a dispatch from Her Majesty's Consul at Manilla, to the effect that Cholera had been raging fearfully, and that the ONLY remedy of any service was CHLORODYNE."—See Lancet, Dec. 1, 1864.

From W. VERSALIUS PETTIGREW, M.D., Hon. F.R.C.S. England;
 Formerly Lecturer on Anatomy and Physiology at St. George's School of Medicine.

"I have no hesitation in stating, after a fair trial of Chlorodyne, that I have never met with any medicine so efficacious as an Anti-spasmodic and Sedative. I have used it in Consumption, Asthma, Diarrhoea, and other diseases, and am most perfectly satisfied with the results."

From Dr. THOMAS SANDIFORD, Passage West, Cork.

"I will thank you to send me a further supply of Chlorodyne. It was the most efficacious remedy I ever used, affording relief in violent attacks of Spasms within a minute after being taken. One patient in particular, who had suffered for years with periodical attacks of Spasms of a most painful nature, and unable to obtain relief from other remedies, such as Opium, &c., finds nothing so prompt and efficacious as Chlorodyne."

From J. M'GRGOR CROFT, M.D., M.R.C.P. London, late Staff Surgeon to H.M.F.

"Sir,—After prescribing Dr. J. Collis Browne's Chlorodyne for the last three years in severe cases of Neuralgia and Tic-Doloureux, I feel that I am in a position to testify to its valuable effects. Really, in some cases it acts like a charm, when all other means had failed. Without being asked for this report, I must come forward and state my candid opinion that it is a most valuable medicine, and I have recommended several Chemists in this neighbourhood not to be without it for prescriptions."

From J. S. E. GOSTSTONE, M.D., late Principal Surgeon to the Steamship "Great Eastern."

"I can confidently state that Chlorodyne is an admirable Sedative and Anti-Spasmodic, having used it in Neuralgia, Hysteria, Asthma, and Consumption, with remarkably favourable results. It relieved a fit of Asthma in four minutes, where the patient had suffered eleven years in a most distressing manner, no previous remedy having had so immediate and beneficial an effect."

From Dr. B. J. BEULTON, and Co., Horncastle.

"We have made pretty extensive use of Chlorodyne in our practice lately, and look upon it as an excellent direct Sedative and Anti-spasmodic. It seems to allay pain and irritation, in whatever organ and from whatever cause. It induces a feeling of comfort and quietude not obtainable by any other remedy, and it seems to possess this great advantage over all other sedatives, that it leaves no unpleasant after effects."

J. C. BAKER, Esq., M.D., Bideford.

"It is, without doubt, the most valuable and certain Anodyne we have."

CAUTION.—BEWARE OF PIRACY AND IMITATIONS.

CAUTION.—Vice-Chancellor Sir W. Page Wood stated that Dr. J. Collis Browne was undoubtedly the Inventor of CHLORODYNE; that the story of the defendant, Freeman, was deliberately untrue, which, he regretted to say, had been sworn to.—See Times, 13th July, 1864.

Sold in Bottles at 1/1 1/2, 2/9, 4/6, and 11/0 each. None is genuine without the words "DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE" on the Government Stamp. Overwhelming Medical Testimony accompanies each Bottle.

REPORTS OF MASONIC MEETINGS.

Craft Masonry.

GATESHEAD.—Borough Lodge (No. 424).—The brethren of the aforesaid lodge held their usual monthly meeting at their Masonic Hall, on Monday, the 17th inst., when Bro. Joseph Probert, S.W., and P. Prov. G.S., was installed in the chair of K.S., he having been regularly elected, according to ancient custom, on the previous lodge night. Amongst the large number of brethren present we noticed the following—Bros. Jonathan Cooke, P.M., 424; R. Stephenson, P.M., 424; Franklin, P.M., 424; Ridsdale, P.M.; A. Harkness, P.M., 1274; Dr. Cook, W.M., 48. The interesting ceremony was performed in a very beautiful and impressive manner by Bro. A. Harkness, P.M., 1274. The W.M. then invested the following brethren as his officers for the ensuing year—Bros. T. S. Waith, I.P.M.; J. Marchant, S.W.; J. C. Preece, J.W.; A. W. Giles, Sec.; F. T. Pearson, S.D.; J. Wilkin, J.D.; T. Dawson, I.G.; J. Curry, Tyler, &c. Bro. T. S. Wraith, I.P.M., presented to Bro. Jonathan Cooke, as a mark of appreciation of his exertions, by means of which the lodge has been raised to its present prosperous condition, a very beautiful P.M. jewel, manufactured by Bro. Kenning, after which the brethren adjourned to the Queen's Head Hotel, and partook of a sumptuous banquet; a most enjoyable evening followed.

GREAT YARMOUTH.—The Lodge of Friendship held their annual meeting at the Record room, Town Hall, on Thursday, when Bro. J. Franklin, proprietor of the Crown and Anchor Hotel, was installed Master for the ensuing year by Bro. P. M. Oswald Diver, in a most impressive manner. The lodge being resumed, and the W.M. saluted with the three degrees, the Master invested his officers, viz., Bros. Gage, S.W.; Fowler, J.W.; P. M. Wright, Sec.; Bonding, S.D.; Bond, J.D.; Golloway, I.G.; H. Campling and Batty, Stewards; Holt, Tyler. The lodge having closed in peace and harmony, the brethren adjourned from labour to refreshment at their lodge room, Crown and Anchor Hotel, this being the only instance in the province of the host embodying the two positions, and for which a dispensation has to be obtained from Grand Lodge. The brethren (among whom were several visitors from Norwich, Lowestoft, and Ipswich) partook of a sumptuous banquet such as host and hostess Franklin only can supply. In the course of the evening a splendid piece of plate was presented to Bro. W. Wright, for his valuable services as Secretary, for 13 years to Lodge 100. Altogether a most enjoyable evening was spent.—Norwich Argus.

GIBRALTAR.—Lodge of Friendship.—On few occasions before have we seen the room of this well-known lodge so crowded as at the regular meeting held on Wednesday, the 5th February. The return of the Channel Fleet from a lengthened cruise to their cosy anchorage alongside the New Mole afforded an opportunity, which the naval brethren gladly seized, of passing a truly Masonic evening with their brethren of the shore. The agenda paper presented a goodly array of business to be done, including work in each of the degrees. Punctually at the time appointed the W.M., Bro. Price, ascended the throne of K.S., being supported by Bros. Balfour Cockburn, P.M.; Henry, P.M.; Dantey, P.M.; MacLoughlin, with Bros. Marshall, S.W.; Hepper, J.W.; Bros. Evjenth, and Clavaresso, Deacons; and Bro. Gilbert as Director of Ceremonies. Amongst the visitors, who amounted to nearly sixty in number, we noticed Bros. Ponsonby and Morris, of the Flag Ship, and Bros. Burroughs, Davis, Bonlas, Alton, Campbell, Yeates, Arney, and Edmonds, &c., &c. The lodge was opened in due form, when the Secretary, Bro. C. V. de Santy, read the minutes of the previous meeting. Immediately after the confirmation of the same, Dr. Leslie Ogilby Patterson, Surgeon Major Royal Artillery, and Lieutenant Charles Brown, R.N., H.M.S. "Sultan," were admitted and initiated into the mysteries of the first degree. Bros. Sandham and Aparicio were then passed to the second degree, and, finally, the lodge having been raised to the third degree, Bro. Glassford, Jones, Wheeler, and Cavaye, received the rank of M.M. The lodge was then closed, and the brethren retired to refreshment. Here, under the genial influence of the W.M., a few hours of the most pleasant and agreeable social intercourse were passed Bro. Price proposing the health of the newly initiated, and Bro. Balfour Cockburn that of the visitors—a toast responded to in a most felicitous manner by Bros. Ponsonby and Burroughs.

DOVER.—Corinthian Lodge (No. 1208).—The installation meeting of this lodge was held at the Royal Hotel on the 17th instant. There were present Bros. Prebble, W.M. elect; Fuhr, W.M.; Popkin, P.M. and Treasurer; Adamson, P.M. and Secretary; J. Barton, S. Wiles, A. Smeeth, J. Bourdeaux, A. Wilson, P.M., E. J. P. Brown, G. Eastman, E. Todd, G. Thurlow, J. S. Fenis, F. Boulton, H. Fellows, Chas. Clayton, J. C. Rees, A. Wilson, J. W. Newman, J. Chadwick, W. J. Adcock. Visitors:—A. Prate, P.M., 22; W. Tucker, J.W., 125; J. King, 199; J. Harvey, P.M.; W. Winch, P.M., 429; H. Woolton, W.M., 1209; J. M. Goldfinch, W.M., 1273; Captain Levensen, 453; S. C. J. White, W.M., 972; B. Davis, W.M., 125; E. Tomalen, P.M., 125; G. Page, 1209; Dr. Marshall, P.M., 199; J. Canham, 199. The lodge is only a young one, but exemplifies by its progress the increase of Masonry. The minutes having been read, the ceremony of installation was proceeded with by Bro. G. Adamson, P.M., and the founder of the lodge, in his usual good working style. The W.M. appointed as his officers Bros. Barton, as S.W.; Wiles, J.W.; Popkins, P.M., Treasurer; Adamson, P.M., Secretary; Smeeth, S.D.; W. Adamson, J.D., who were inducted into their several offices by Bro. Rees, who also gave the working tools of the three degrees in a most able manner, and gave the address in the East. The Wardens were addressed by Bro. Wilson in the West, and the brethren by Bro. Adamson in the South. Votes of thanks to the Installing Master and to the I.P.M., Bro. Fuhr, for his services during the past year, were carried nem con. Hearty good wishes were proposed by the various lodges represented. Nothing for the good of F.M. being proposed, the lodge was closed with solemn prayer. The brethren then adjourned to the sumptuous banquet served by the esteemed host, Bro. Adamson. The usual loyal and Masonic toasts were given and heartily responded to. Upon the proposal of the health of the visitors, Bro. Pratt replied, and as is his wont, he dilated on the benevolence which should instigate every mason in the support of the Masonic Institution. He greatly feared that entrance to Masonry was too cheap or too easily acquired, and that in many instances it was joined for selfish motives and not for that true feeling of being useful to your fellow creatures, and this was to be illustrated by the number of applicants for admission to the institutions by those whose parents had not, at the time of their well-being, rendered any service to relieve others; thus, then, the degeneracy spoken of by Bro. Gray Clarke. He also strongly urged the visiting brethren to form a similar society to the one he had been the means of starting in the Corinthian Lodge, viz., sixpence per week to a fund to make the members life subscribers to either of the institutions. When the sum amounted to £5 5s. a draw took place, and the successful member became a life subscriber—remarking, surely if Masons cannot or will not give this trifle—they had better retire, for their continuance as members of a lodge proved what he had stated, that such only joined from self-interested motives. He (Bro. Pratt) was granted permission in the after part of the evening to propose a toast. The toast was the health of a Mason (Bro. Wm. Foster) He was pleased to see in him an emblem of what a Mason should be. A little girl from the melancholy wreck of the Northfleet was cast upon our shore; he seized the opportunity of being useful, and took charge of her; thus he was not avoiding the responsibility thrown upon him. He concluded by desiring it might please the G.A.O.T.U. to spare his life, give him health, and bless him with the means to carry out his benevolent intentions. (Great cheers.) Bro. Forster replied in a most suitable speech, and concluded by trusting—should he from any circumstances not be enabled to carry out his present intentions—he should leave this child as a legacy to the pure and holy feelings of the Masons of Dover, resting assured that the little orphan would have every opportunity of becoming serviceable to her fellow-creatures hereafter. (Great cheers.)

MILLOM.—Whitwell Lodge (No. 1390).—The regular monthly meeting of this lodge took place on Tuesday, the 18th ult. Present—Bros. Roger Dodgson, W.M., P.G.S.B.; T. Dodgson, S.W., P.M. 995; J. Mills, J.W., P.G. Steward; J. Meredith, Sec.; J. Dold, S.D.; J. Hudson, J.D.; J. Postlethwaite, I.G., J.W., 995 and 1393; J. Holloway, Organist; W. Croke, Steward; and several brethren. Visiting brethren—F. C. Warne, S.W., 1046, and John Hartley, J.S., 995. The lodge was opened at seven o'clock by the W.M., and minutes of last communication read and confirmed. The ballot was then taken for Mr. J. R. Beck which proved unanimous in his favour. At the request of the W.M., Bro. T. Dodgson, S.W. and P.M. assumed the chair, and Bro. F. C. Warne that of S.W. The acting W.M. then initiated Mr. Beck into the mysteries of the Order. Bro. Bradley having answered the usual questions in the first degree, was entrusted and retired, and upon being re-admitted was passed by the acting W.M. Bro. Bell was then examined as to his proficiency as a F.C. and entrusted. The lodge was then opened in the third degree, and the W.M. then took the chair of K.S., and raised Bro. Bell to the sublime degree of M.M., the several degrees being rendered by the W.M. and S.W. in their usual impressive manner, the working tools in the first and second degrees being explained by the J.W. and S.W. respectively. The lodge was then closed down to the first degree, and hearty good wishes given from Lodges 995, 1046, and 1398. The lodge was finally closed at 10.15 p.m. with solemn prayer.

SUNDERLAND.—Chapter of Strict Benevolence (No. 97).—The annual meeting of the members of this chapter was held at the Masonic Hall, Park-terrace, Sunderland, on the afternoon of Thursday, February 20th. The first business taken was the installation of Principals and the investiture of the officers, which were as follows, viz., Comps. M. Allison, Z.; W. Liddell, H.; W. Skelton, J.; R. Humphrey, E.; S. P. Austin, N.; J. H. Coates, P.S.; John Lindsay, Treas.; J. Thompson, Jan.; T. Twizell and R. J. Ward, Assistant Sojourners. Three brethren, viz., Bros. C. H. Bastow, W. H. Surtees, and J. Whitfield were then exalted to this degree, and after passing sundry votes in aid of charities and the transaction of other business, the chapter was closed in the usual form. The companions afterwards dined together at the Palatine Hotel, the M.E. the First Principal in the Chair, supported by H. and J. Amongst those present were E. C. Levy, P.Z., P.P.G.J.; E. C. W. H. Crookes, P.Z., P.G.E.; M.E.C. D. Clark, Z. 80; E. C. W. Brignal jun. H. (Durham); E. C. J. Roddam, P.Z. (South Shields), and others.

GIBRALTAR.—Calpeah Royal Arch Chapter.—The regular meeting of this chapter was held on the 12th February. A goodly attendance of the companions presented themselves, in a measure influenced no doubt by the fact that the business of the evening consisted in exalting two brothers, whose popularity throughout the garrison is generally acknowledged. The chairs were occupied by Companion MacLoughlin, as First Principal, Companion Morgan as second, and Companion Balfour Cockburn as third Principal. Companions Marshall and Browne as Scribes, and Companion Elmes, Principal Sojourner. The very excellent Companion Beal, First Principal of the Irish Chapter, was also present. The candidates for exaltation were Bro. Keilley, of Lodge 278, Lieutenant 81st Regiment, and Bro. Ponsonby, Lieutenant R.N., H.M.S. "Sultan." The ceremony was conducted by Companion MacLoughlin in his usual impressive manner, Companion Balfour Cockburn giving the explanation of the signs, and Companion Morgan the final charge. After the discussion of some matters relative to the disposal and distribution of a sum of money recently voted for local charities, the Chapter was closed in due form and the companions retired.

Red Cross of Constantine.

PREMIER CONCLAVE OF RED CROSS OF CONSTANTINE.—A meeting of this conclave was held on Monday at the Freemasons' Tavern, Sir Knt. Little (in the absence of V.G. Sir Knt. George Kenning, presided. The conclave having been duly opened several candidates were duly installed as Knights of the Order. A College of Viceroys was then opened and several Sir Knights were advanced to the degree of Priest Masons. A Senate of Sovereigns was then opened, and the highest degree was conferred upon seven candidates for that high honour:—viz., V.E. Sir Knts. Kingston, Moore, Silifant, Brelte, the Rev. C. J. Martyn, and two other Sir Knights. The conclave was then closed in imperial form.

BRO. HOLMES'S LECTURE ON THE UNITED ORDERS OF THE TEMPLE AND HOSPITAL.

By LUPUS.

Observing in the last issue of The Freemason a letter signed "Sero, Sed Serio," desire to say (without any offence) that I have no knowledge whatever of its authorship. I shall have to quote the letters referred to by the writer, but I do not know what may be the source of his information, still evidently correct, nor do I join him in the hard words which his letter contains (words to which Bro. Holmes has, unhappily, been leading, as I not long since predicted) unless I could believe that Bro. Holmes had been prompted to the baseless, and therefore vindictive, assertions contained in the preface of his last communication, and of which I will in my next expose the gross untruth.

In 1788, the French Langues numbered no less than 808 Knights of the whole Order, the grand total of which in 1874 was, we learn from Clarke's book, only 1,000. and it must be obvious that so powerful a proportion would feel that their voice in the welfare of the fraternity was entitled to the greatest weight and influence, if not wholly as much as the words of Vertot would convey. That most competent historian, Sutherland, says of the commission elected by the French Knights, that "the government being declared concentrated in this commission, it was empowered to regulate all political, civil, and financial affairs connected with the Order." And from these Knights did our own Sovereign Geo. IV. accept the Cross of St. John. The French Knights were joined by those of the langues of Arragon and Castile, who had resisted the change in constitution of the Order in Spain, and thus a representation of five out of the then existing seven divisions of the Order, forming an overwhelming majority, became allied for purposes for the general benefit, and prosecuted those evidences of entire power of action so amply demonstrated by historic facts, of which one other proof may be added in the circumstance that the official memorial of the Order to the Congress of Verona was signed by the Count Achille de Joffroy, as authorised to represent the three langues of France and those of Arragon and Castile.

In addressing my observations to the document, or protest, which has been published by Bro. Holmes, and so happily placed at his disposal by Sir George Bowyer, "a simple Knight of the Order, and nothing more" (but made the medium of this document nevertheless), I may set out with the very evident proposition, that if there had been nothing in the claims of the English langue, nothing in its revival, nor any substantial fact in its actual existence, the occasion would not have been deemed worthy of this protest, and its authors, as Colonel Porter aptly says he should have done, would have passed over the subject in silence. But no, this could not be, the ostensible authors of the protest, and the Council they represented, were too deeply committed to the English langue in honour and in truth, to render it possible that they could retreat from the alliance to which they had positively agreed, in writing, without making some show of excuse for the circumstances which led to its rupture.

This "protest" has been in print before, and is no secret, but as it may not be familiar to all your readers, I am obliged to Bro. Holmes and his new allies, much as I regret this discussion, for the opportunity to throw a little light upon its history. It will be observed that it is signed by the Count de Medici Spada, "Vice-Chancellor" (called in Bro. Holmes's very accurate documents "Deputy Knight;" O if the shade of the Vice-Chancellor could only see this!) and the Count de Gozze, "Magisterial Secretary," both officers of the body calling itself the Sacred Council.

It originated in the breach of certain negotiations which had occurred between the Council of the English langue and the Roman Council, for an alliance which it is to be regretted, for the sake of the time-honoured Order, was not effected. The negotiations were complete, and the formal ratification of the alliance alone required accomplishment.

The terms had been propounded in writing by the Count de Gozze, endorsed by the Count de Spada, approved by the Roman Council and finally accepted by the Council in London, on the 14th of July, 1858. The proposition, in general terms, was that a Roman Catholic branch of the Order should be formed in England, which should then notify "the Protestant section, as already existing," and that the latter should be acknowledged as a non-Catholic branch, separated from the ordinary jurisdiction, but appertaining to the Order in its generality; and it was to be expressly understood that no jurisdiction could be ever, in any manner, exercised over the members of the English langue in opposition to their perfect lawful allegiance to the Sovereign of Great Britain. The proposition was not, in all its details, such as the Council in England could have fairly expected, but they believed that the interests of the Order in general would be better advanced by the union of all its branches, and, after some interchange of suggestions, they assented to the terms with a condition that the Sacred Council should accept the alliance with the English langue as it then stood, "receiving our Catholics according to the ancient rules, and our Protestants on the principles enunciated by your Excellency in conformity with the precedent established in the Bailiwick of Brandenburg;" a precedent acknowledged and put forward by the Count de Gozze, but in the private opinion of Bro. Holmes's new friends, who must surely have been hoaxing him, "irregular, illegal and unrecognised."

The conditions were accepted by the Roman Council, their Secretary saying, in reference to the letter of the English Council, and the stipulations it contained, "I see in its arrangement all the characteristics of moderation, of justice, of loyalty, and of prudence, which the Council of London desires to bring to the settlement." Their Vice-Chancellor said, "with your permission, I have read all, and I must say that in my opinion the conditions are acceptable." But it may be fairly assumed that he feared, if not anticipated, the interposition of malignants, as he strongly urged expedition in the final settlement of the alliance, and added, "thus to prevent the intrigues which might be the means of causing our plans to miscarry."

In these negotiations all the circumstances attending the revival of the English langue were discussed, and it was after the consideration of these that the terms were proposed, any objections being then cast aside as untenable after a lapse of thirty-two years (during which no objection whatever had been made to an alliance save on the ground of religious belief) and the Count de Gozze declaring that "whatever may be the opinion of the Mastery in regard to position and principle, we perfectly agree with the idea that it is now too late to discuss the origin of the establishment of the actual langue of England."

Thus then, were both Councils agreed, and, as a worthy member of the langue once wrote, "neither partly doubted that a cordial union was at hand, which was not only to raise the institution from its ashes, but to place it on a pinnacle of glory and usefulness it had never before attained, by suiting it to the spirit of the age, and constituting it a vast and extended field, on which the high-born, noble and enlightened of both religions throughout Europe might meet for generous purposes, and emulate each other for the good of mankind."

The counsel offered by the Count de Spada was an instance of strange and remarkable foresight; but the Englishmen, confident in mutual honour, did not accelerate the confirmation of the alliance with the dispatch he so sagaciously recommended, the foreshadowed intrigues worked their sinuous way, awakened the demon of discord which has cursed the Order, and frustrated the endeavours which both parties had brought to such an apparently satisfactory conclusion. The breach thus created was followed by the concoction of this "protest," in the hope, no doubt, in certain quarters, that the heretical (from the Papal point of view) langue of England would be effectually strangled. This, I am happy to know, was not, nor is at all likely to be, the case. The Order in England flourishes; it has done good deeds, I trust, and believe, will do more, and it has the sad satisfaction of being one of the only two branches of the venerable Order of St. John devoted to the work which throughout centuries has been its beneficent purpose.

The Grand Holy Royal Arch Chapter of Pennsylvania held its Annual Grand Communication on Friday, December 27 last, being St. John's Day. The following Grand Officers were duly installed:—Comps. Charles E. Meyer, Grand High Priest; John Wilson, Jun., Grand King; Andrew Robeno, Jun. Grand Scribe; Thomas Brown, Grand Treasurer; John Thomson, Grand Secretary. After the installation, the M. E. Grand High Priest delivered his annual address, principally a resumé of his official doings during the past year, after which he announced his appointments for the present Masonic year: From the 27th December, 1871, to December 1st, 1872, there were 685 candidates marked, while 763 were received and accepted Most Excellent Masters, and 732 were exalted to Royal Arch Degree in the subordinate Chapters of Pennsylvania.

Comp. Wm. James Hughan, of Truro, Cornwall, England, who furnished the Grand Chapter of Pennsylvania last year with a most interesting history of the Mark Degree in England, has this year forwarded to Comp. Chas. E. Meyer, Grand High Priest, the following valuable letter on the Past Master's Degree. By kind permission, we are enabled to present it to our readers in advance of the published proceedings of the Grand Chapter.

"Truro, England, Oct. 1, 1872.

"My Dear Friend and M. E. Grand High Priest: I am anxious to write you re the Past Master's Degree, according to promise made by me last year, and desirous of doing so before your next annual meeting. As a fact, however, I have found it a most difficult subject to write about, as so little is discoverable of its early history.

"When the degree first took its rise I know not as yet, but am continuing my researches, and may be able to elucidate the point. I might write a great deal on the subject, but cui bono? A great deal would be purely apochryphal, and so is better left unsaid than written.

"It seems to have been the custom (in fact was) of the 'Grand Lodge according to the old Constitutions' (called the 'Ancients') to confer the P.M. degree in a Craft Lodge to candidates for Royal Arch Masonry. No separate Chapters or warrants were required to work the Royal Arch Degree under the 'Ancients,' and it seems to me most probable that the 'Installation Ceremony' originated with that body, at least, became prominent, and a separate degree under their management. If so, it is not older than, say about 120 years. The Grand Lodge of the 'Ancients' was not actually formed, and no regular records kept, until after A.D. 1750. The minutes still exist, and commenced A.D. 1758. The Grand Lodge of England is the custodian thereof.

"Whether the regular Grand Lodge, or in other words, the Grand Lodge which was formed A.D. 1717, had a knowledge of the degree so early as 1750, I cannot yet say positively, although there does appear evidence that a ceremony of some sort was observed at the installation of a W.M. of a Lodge. In the Constitutions of the Grand Lodge of England, published A.D. 1738, there is an engraving of the 47th Problem of Euclid, which is the Jewel of the P.M. degree. Under the 'Moderns' (so-called in the Grand Lodge of 1717) separate warrants were required to work the 'Royal Arch,' as that degree was not actually recognised until the Union of 1813. (It virtually was, however, as the leading members of Grand Lodge, from the Grand Master downwards, were the officers of the Grand Chapter.) Their first R. A. Constitution was published A.D. 1778, and second edition 1782, both of which I have. The use of substitutes, or any law requiring a certain number to be exalted, was unknown. Since the 'Union of A.D. 1813,' the Past Master's Degree has been conferred on the elected Master of a lodge, and so such alone. Hence all Past Masters in England, have actually served the office of Master of a Lodge for a period of twelve months. The only pre-requisite, Masonically, for R. A. Masonry, being twelve months a member of the third degree. Until recently, in Scotland, the system of Capitular Freemasonry prevailing in the United States was adopted, but at the Grand Lodge held the 5th February last, it was decided to return to the old English system, and hence the Grand Chapter of Scotland has retired from the control of the Past Master's Degree, and left it entirely in the hands of the Grand Lodge.

"The following are the terms of the agreement:

"1. That the Grand Lodge shall recognise a ceremonial or degree to be conferred on Masters of Lodges on their taking the chair at a lodge similar to that conferred in England and Ireland.

"2. That a register shall be kept by the Grand Clerk of Installed Masters, and he shall record the name of every Installed Master therein, and furnish a diploma upon certificate being sent, signed by three recorded Installed Masters, that the ceremonial or degree has been duly conferred. The fee for registration and diploma to be 2s. 6d.

"3. That this ceremonial or degree shall under no circumstances whatever be conferred on anyone except the actual Master of a lodge, or one who produces a certificate from the lodge that he has occupied a chair as duly elected Master.

"4. That with the view of carrying out these resolutions, three or more Masters of lodges or Past Masters, to be selected by the Grand Lodge, shall procure themselves duly installed by three or more English or Irish Installed Masters, and shall thereupon adjust the Ritual to be used in future.

"5. That thereafter the said Installed Masters shall duly install three or more Past Masters in the cities of Glasgow, Aberdeen, Dundee, Perth, &c., and in any of the larger towns, the brethren in which may desire it.

"6. That the ceremonial or degree shall only be conferred when three or more Installed Masters are present, and any lodge having that number of Installed Masters present at a meeting may confer the ceremonial or degree upon its Master;—but in the event of any lodge not having a sufficient number of Installed Masters, it shall be competent to the Masters of that Lodge to procure himself duly installed at any lodge having three Installed Masters, provided he produce evidence to the satisfaction of these Installed Masters that he is a bona fide Master of a lodge.

"In Ireland, the Past Master's Degree is also confined (or supposed to be) to the Masters elect of Craft Lodges, and a ceremony of some sort is worked, as in England, and as it is to be now in Scotland. The ceremony itself is most interesting and rather lengthy. The charges to the officers are valuable, if only followed, as they should be, and altogether an installation according to the English Ritual is most imposing.

"In Ireland there is much irregularity as to the installation ceremony, but the three countries now agree in having a distinct ceremony or degree for the W.M. elect of a Craft Lodge, and more correctly speaking, it should be termed the Installation Master's Degree, rather than the Past Master's.

"With every respect and good wishes to you, M. E. G. H. P. and the G. Chapter, believe me, fraternally and faithfully yours,

"WILLIAM JAMES HUGHAN."

FREEMASONRY IN EGYPT.

To the Editor of The Freemason.

Dear Sir and Brother,—

I have much pleasure in handing you herewith particulars of the presentation of an address to the Khedive, which I have no doubt will be found interesting. The step just taken and its result cannot be looked upon with too much importance, considering the position of Freemasonry of late in this country, particularly in relation to the natives and their ruler, as it must now give more confidence both to those who are already Masons and those who have a desire to join the Fraternity. The Khedive Ismail during his reign has done wonders in improving his country and the condition of its inhabitants. The connection of H.R.H. the Prince of Wales with Freemasonry has undoubtedly given H.H. the Khedive a more favourable opinion of our order. We have now a further proof of the worth of this enlightened Prince Ismail Pasha, and we trust he and his people will continue and prosper.—

I am, Sir and Brother,

Yours Fraternally,

JOHN C. MILBOURNE,
P.M. St. John's Lodge, No. 99.

Presentation to H.H. the Khedive by the District Grand Lodge of Egypt of an Address of Congratulation on the occasion of the Marriage of H.H. the Hereditary Prince Tantik Pasha.

The address was surrounded by an illuminated border in the following style:—In the centre of the upper part the initial "I." (Ishmail) was inscribed in a medallion surmounted by a vice-regal crown. On either side of the medallion a cornucopia (emblem of plenty), from which dropped fruits and flowers of the country joined under the medallion, and were fastened by a pair of scales (justice); while a sprig of laurel and oak leaves filled the space between the medallion and cornucopias. The two sides of the address were ornamented with fruits and flowers, symbolical of joy and happiness, fastened to mahogany coloured poles, which were surrounded by ears of corn and a cotton plant, over which bees and butterflies were gathered. The centre of the poles was ornamented by large cameos, in which arts and sciences were beautifully designed. In the lower portion of the address a large landscape, in which the progress and civilization of Egypt were skilfully represented, occupied the central part, supported on either side by a statue of Isis and one of Osiris. This portion of the border was enclosed in a gilded scroll, which joined at the gilded ends, supporting the sides.

The Address was as follows:—

A Son Altesse Ismail Pasha, Khedive d'Egypte. Altesse,—

La Grande Loge Provinciale des Maçons Anciens, Libres et Acceptés d'Angleterre pour l'Egypte se permet d'offrir a votre altesse les felicitations les plus sinceres pour l'heureux mariage de Son Altesse le Prince Héritier

Seal of the Dist. Grand Lodge for Egypt.

His Highness having received at Abdeen on the 19th of February, 1873, at 11.30 a.m., the deputation consisting of the District Grand Lodge Officers who signed the address, the address was read over by the D. and acting D.G.M., when H.H. replied, thanking in warm terms the English Freemasons for the address. His Highness expressed himself highly gratified with the expressions contained therein, and indeed appeared very well pleased. Bro. Borg then said:—

Monseigneur,

En remettant l'adresse de la Grande Loge Prov., que votre altesse me permette de lui remercier de la nouvelle preuve de progrès et de civilisation qu'elle donne au monde entier. La Maçonnerie, jusqu'ici proscrite et cachée en Egypte, par cause de sa devise progressiste se relève aujourd'hui sous les auspices de votre altesse, est fière du rang qu'elle accorde en son royaume elle peut se déclarer régénérée, grace au patronage dont votre altesse l'entouré en reconnaissant son existence légale. Au nom de cette institution constituée en Egypte, ainsi au nom de la Maçonnerie repandue sur les deux hémisphères, je remercie votre altesse de l'insigne faveur qu'elle lui accorde. Je suis certain, Monseigneur, que j'exprime aussi les sentiments de mes collègues en assurant votre altesse que nous nous sentons fiers et heureux d'avoir été choisis par le Grand Loge Prov. à remettre a votre altesse son adresse de félicitation et de remerciements.

His Highness answered that he knew Freemasonry to be a beneficent society, was glad to receive such proofs of its friendship towards the work he has so much at heart, and said if there was anything in his power he could do for the benefit of Freemasonry it would be willingly accorded and afford extreme pleasure. His Highness then entered into general conversation with the members of the deputation who, afterwards withdrew, exceedingly satisfied with the very cordial reception they had received.

SATURDAY, MARCH 8, 1873.

UNITED GRAND LODGE.

The Quarterly Communication to Grand Lodge was held at Freemasons' Hall, the Rev. John Huyshe, Provincial Grand Master for Devon, on the throne. The Grand Master was not present, owing to his being suddenly called away to Cannes, on account of an accident having happened there last Sunday to his eldest son, the Earl De Grey. The circumstance, it will be seen below, was mentioned to Grand Lodge by the acting Grand Master, and a profound feeling of sympathy with his lordship was manifested by the brethren present. Grand Lodge was very numerous attended, and the circumstance that this was the night for the election of the Grand Master, perhaps drew more brethren together than would have otherwise been the case. Nevertheless, a heavy paper of business presented attractions which partly might account for so large a concourse, although there were not so many brethren of great distinction in the number as attended at the great festival, held last week. Lord Tenterden, who has been most assiduous in his duties as S.W., since he was appointed, occupied the chair assigned to his rank, Col. Burdett acted as Deputy Grand Master, and Col. Brownrigg as Past Grand Master. The other officers were in their places, and a large body of Past Grand Officers were on the dais.

The regulations for the government of Grand Lodge during the time of public business were read by the Grand Secretary, after which the same worthy official read the minutes of last Quarterly Communication, which were put and carried unanimously.

The Acting Grand Master then said, brethren, I rise under peculiar circumstances to address you to-day. Most deeply do I regret the absence of our Most Worshipful Grand Master, but above all things I regret the cause of that absence. I regret most deeply that the son of the Most Worshipful Grand Master should have met with a very serious accident abroad, and that that requires his presence where his son now lies. I have the satisfaction of being able to tell you on the very best authority, the information of the Senior Warden of England, that a telegraphic message has been received from Cannes, which declares that the serious accident, which it was believed to be, and which I believe it is, at present, is not so serious as it was supposed to have been. The Senior Grand Warden informs me that he has good reason for supposing that the misfortune which has befallen our Grand Master, though it has deprived us of his presence, will not turn out to be what we had at first conjectured so disastrous. Having thus spoken briefly on that point, I wish to tell you that the next subject we have to consider is the election of Grand Master for the year. (Cheers.)

Bro. F. A. Philbrick, P.M. 18:—Most Worshipful Acting Grand Master, the nomination of Grand Master which has been read by the Grand Secretary, and which I had the honour to make at the Quarterly Communication in December, I now rise to follow up. I rise to propose that the Most the Honourable Marquess of Ripon be re-elected Grand Master of our Order during the ensuing year. (Hear, hear.) The nomination which was made received the entire approval of this Grand Lodge, faithfully reflecting the sentiments of the Craft at large; and if anything were wanting to call forth an expression on the part of Grand Lodge towards the distinguished nobleman who occupies the throne of our Order, it was the reception which the announcement which your Most Worshipful Acting Grand Master has just made, and the sympathy which was elicited under the present painful circumstances which deprive Grand Lodge of the advantage of the presence of the Grand Master of England upon this occasion. (Hear, hear.) For some years now the Marquess of Ripon has presided over our Order. During the period he has so presided the progress of the Craft has been one of continued prosperity and success. At no time, I may venture to say, has the Craft stood higher in the estimation of the country, or of the public at large. At no time has it been more united in loyalty to its head, or devotion to the great principles of the Order; and in calling our Grand Master again to preside over and administer our affairs, if judged by the standard of the past, the rough standard of success, we may pronounce his administration to have been a complete one; if judged by his own conduct on the throne, all who have been present in Grand Lodge can bear witness to the fairness and impartiality with which he has borne himself on all occasions; to the unvarying courtesy and ability which he brings to the discharge of the important duties of his office, and to those qualities which have endeared the name of the Marquess of Ripon to every Mason throughout the length and breadth of the land. Therefore it is Most Worshipful Acting Grand Master, I venture to propose that the Most Honourable the Marquess of Ripon be re-elected to the throne of the Order; and I am sure that in so doing by acclamation this Grand Lodge will, as I said before, but faithfully reflect the sentiments of every Mason throughout the country; it will do itself in honour, for we are proud that the chief position in our Order should be filled by a nobleman so eminent and exalted in himself, so thorough an example of all the principles of Masonry, and I think I may venture without ostentation, to add that our Grand Master may fairly congratulate himself on the position the Craft has usurped under his most successful sway. (Cheers.)

Bro. J. A. Rucker:—In rising to second this proposition, I venture to think, with the brother who made it, that it will be received with acclamation. In the ordinary course of our business I believe it requires a seconder; but it is hardly necessary for me to use any words in expressing my approbation of the terms in which one brother has proposed this resolution to you, the members of this Grand Lodge; but I do think this, that nobody can stand up, as I am doing, to second this and sit down with satisfaction to himself and to you without expressing our deep sympathy with the Most Worshipful Grand Master at the calamity that has befallen him. I am quite sure that every one of us has received with the greatest satisfaction the intelligence that the accident is not so great as we at first supposed. I have only to say that in proposing for re-election the Most Honourable the Marquess of Ripon the proposer, and myself, and you, who will I am quite sure all respond to it, and desire to do an honour to our Most Worshipful Grand Master, and I am quite certain of this, that he, in accepting the position of Grand Master of Freemasons of England, does a great honour to them. (Cheers.) I have the greatest satisfaction, Most Worshipful Acting Grand Master, in seconding the re-election of the Marquess of Ripon.

The motion was put by the acting Grand Master and carried unanimously.

Sir Albert W. Woods (Garter) then came forward and proclaimed the Marquess of Ripon, with all his titles and territorial qualifications, Grand Master of English Freemasons.

Bro. Geo. Lambert proposed the re-election of Bro. Samuel Tomkins as Grand Treasurer, which was duly seconded.

This was also carried unanimously, the acting Grand Master previously stating that Bro. Tomkins had filled the office for many years with benefit to the Craft and much honour to himself.

The Acting Grand Master, addressing Grand Treasurer, said,—Bro. Tomkins, I have to announce to you, that, for what number of years I cannot tell, you are re-elected again to hold the office of holding funds in your hands belonging to Grand Lodge. I congratulate you again on the honour conferred on you, and I congratulate Grand Lodge of England on the good sense they have shown in re-electing you to your office. (Cheers.)

Bro. S. Tomkins,—Acting Grand Master and brethren, I thank you cordially for the honour you have done me in re-electing me to this exalted office. I have had a great deal of pleasure in serving you so many years, and I have witnessed with great satisfaction the great progress and prosperity of the Craft in that time; and I trust that great progress and prosperity will not be diminished during the ensuing year. (Applause.)

The Report of the Lodge of Benevolence for the last Quarter (in which are recommendations for the following Grants) was presented:—

A Brother of the Neptune Lodge, No. 22, London.....	£50
The Widow of a Brother of the Lodge of Faith, No. 141, London.....	200
A Brother of the Albion Lodge, No. 9, London.....	50
A Brother of the St. Andrew's Lodge, No. 222, London.....	250

Bros. Clabon, Savage, Nunn, and Raynham Stewart moved and seconded the above grants which were carried without the slightest hesitation, and after graceful tributes had been paid to high Masonic character of the brethren named therein.

The following Report of the Board of General Purposes, was, on the motion of Bro. Horace Lloyd, Q.C., President of the Board, taken as read:—

THE REPORT OF THE BOARD OF GENERAL PURPOSES.

The Board of General Purposes beg leave to submit their Report for the last quarter as follows:—

Rent of the Tavern Premises.

At the last Quarterly Communication of Grand Lodge upon an amendment moved by Bro. McIntyre, Grand Registrar, to a motion of Bro. Francis Bennoch, P.M., No. 1, it was resolved "that the question of the propriety of reducing the rent of the Tavern be referred to the Board of General Purposes to consider and report thereon to Grand Lodge."

The Board find that the Freemasons' Tavern Company (Limited), hold their premises under a lease from the Trustees of the Grand Lodge property for twenty-one years, from Christmas, 1867, granted in consideration of a premium of £5000, and at reserved rents of—

For the year 1868, 1869, and 1870 ...	£1,200 per annum.
" 1871 ...	£1,300 "
" 1872 ...	£1,400 "
" 1873 } " 1874 }	£1,500 "

and thenceforward an increase of £50 per annum until the year 1880, by which time the rent would reach £1800 per annum, at which it was to remain during the residue of the term.

The payment of this premium of £5000 was equivalent to an addition of about £300 per annum to these rents.

The Board have satisfied themselves, after consulting a most experienced adviser, that at these reserved rents the Company is over rented, apart from the question of premium, and that the full rental value of the Tavern as a going concern may be taken at £1500 per annum. The agreement by which the amount of premium and the reserved rents was fixed was made in the year 1864, when somewhat exaggerated ideas prevailed as to the value of property of this description.

The Board have further satisfied themselves that the rent so reserved is a serious burthen to the lessees, and that to obtain some reduction of it is a matter of urgent importance to the financial prosperity, if not to the existence of the Company, as will be apparent from the consideration that the undertaking has not been hitherto a prosperous one, and that a difference of £300 a year in the rent is equal in round numbers to a dividend of 1 per cent. per annum on their paid-up capital.

The Board see no reason to believe that there has been anything in the conduct of the Company to deprive them of a right to consideration in this matter. They have hitherto paid their rent with fair regularity at the rate of £1200 per annum, the payment of the additional rent above that minimum having been, by consent of both parties, deferred until the settlement of the pending question as to the reduction of the rent.

The application by the Company for a reduction of the rent is placed solely on the ground that they had entered into an improvident agreement, and is an appeal to the favourable consideration of Grand Lodge. The Board are of opinion that the Company have made out a good case for some diminution of the rent, and upon the whole, and having regard to the premium originally paid, they recommend that the rent reserved by the lease should be reduced so as to stand as follows:—For the years 1868, 1869, and 1870, £1200 per annum, as originally fixed; that it should thenceforward increase by £50 per annum until in 1876 it reaches £1500; and that it should remain at that amount during the residue of the term.

But the Board further recommend that the right to this reduction should be dependent upon the Company paying up forthwith all arrears of rent due on the reduced scale, and upon the punctual payment of the reduced rent quarter by quarter.

Exclusion of Members by Lodges.

At the last Quarterly Communication of Grand Lodge certain resolutions were moved by Bro. J. Rankin Stebbing, P.G.D., for conferring certain powers upon private lodges in this respect. Upon an amendment moved by Bro. J. Havers, P.G.W., the subject was referred to the Board of General Purposes to consider and report to the Grand Lodge.

The Board having fully and carefully considered the matter, have now to report that in their opinion the present provisions of the Book of Constitutions confer adequate powers upon private lodges for the excluding of members upon sufficient cause if so authorised by their bye-laws. The Board are of opinion that it would be desirable that lodges should be permitted to include in their bye-laws, as framed under Sec. 5 on page 63, one authorising the exclusion of members for sufficient cause on condition that every such bye-law shall provide for the member complained of receiving due notice of the complaint made against him, and of the time appointed for its consideration, shall give the power of exclusion only to a majority of not less than two-thirds of the brethren present, and shall state on its face the right of appeal against exclusion if illegal or without sufficient cause.

The power thus given will be in addition to the powers conferred by the Book of Constitutions, Sec. 20, pp. 67 and 68.

Irregular Dispensation.

It was brought to the notice of the Board that in a country lodge a brother has been raised to a superior degree within less interval than four weeks from the conferring of a previous degree, contrary to the provisions of the Book of Constitutions, p. 86, Sec. 7. It appeared, however, that this had been done under a dispensation granted to them for that purpose by the Provincial Grand Master of the Province, assuming to act under the power given by the Book of Constitutions at p. 56, Sec. 1, par 2, and in the full belief on the part of the lodge that such dispensation was regular, and duly authorised them to confer the degree. Upon application to the Provincial Grand Master in question the Board ascertained that the warrant of dispensation had been issued by him in error and inadvertently, at a time of great domestic affliction.

Under these circumstances the Board did not consider it necessary to do more than to call the attention of the Provincial Grand Master and the country lodge to the irregularity, and to refuse to recognise as valid the degree so conferred. The Board refer to the matter in this report solely for the purpose of making it generally known to all lodges that there is no power in a Provincial Grand Master, in whatever circumstances of emergency, to dispense with the requisite interval of four weeks at the least, and of removing an erroneous impression which they believe exists upon the subject. The special provision on p. 56, already mentioned, refers to district Grand Masters and to Masters of lodges in the colonies and foreign parts, where there is no district Grand Master, and even they have not the power unless when it is specially conferred upon them by the M.W. Grand Master.

Additional Clerk in Grand Secretary's Office.

The Board desire respectfully to represent to Grand Lodge that in consequence of the increased work requiring to be transacted in the Grand Secretary's office, the present staff is inadequate, and they recommend that an additional permanent clerk should be appointed, to be termed the fifth clerk, and to receive a salary upon the same scale and conditions in all respects as the third and fourth clerks.

The President will therefore move—

That the Report be received and entered on the minutes.

That the Board of General Purposes be authorised to enter into arrangements with the Freemasons' Tavern Company (Limited), for a reduction of the rent of the Tavern premises upon the basis of the recommendations contained in their report to Grand Lodge.

That an additional permanent clerk be appointed in the Grand Secretary's office, to be termed the fifth clerk, and to receive a salary upon the same terms and conditions as the third and fourth clerks.

(Signed) HORACE LLOYD, President.

To the Report is a subjoined a statement of the Grand Lodge accounts at the last meeting of the Finance Committee, held on the 14th February, 1873, showing a balance in the hands of the Grand Treasurer of £4150 5s. 9d.; and in the hands of the Grand Secretary, for petty cash, £75.

The annual assembly of the General Conclave of the Knights of the Red Cross of Constantine was held on Monday, March 3rd, at the Freemasons' Tavern, Great Queen-street. Sir Knight Colonel Burdett occupied the throne, in the unavoidable absence, through illness, of the Earl of Bective, M. Ill. Grand Sovereign; J. G. Marsh, P.G.S.G., and G.A., as V.E.; the Rev. C. J. Martin, G. H. Prelate; W. E. Gumbleton, G. H. Chancellor; R. Wentworth Little, G. Treasurer; Dr. W. R. Woodman, G. Recorder; James Lewis Thomas, Ill. G. Architect; H. C. Levander, G.H. Almoner; A. J. Lewis, G. Orator; J. Boyd, G. Historiographer; T. Cubitt, G. V. Chancellor; T. M. White; J. T. Moss; G. Kenning, and S. Rosenthal, G. Senators; Sir G. E. Campbell, Bart., Intendant General, Hants; Major-General G. B. Munbee, Intendant-General, Somersetshire; Dr. Holman, K.G.C.; D. M. Denar, K.G.C.; the Rev. Dr. Brelle, &c.

The agenda contained the following notices of business to be transacted:—

To receive the report of the Executive Committee in which the following resolutions are incorporated:—

That the Annual Assembly of the General Grand Conclave be held in future on the Monday preceding the Quarterly Communication of the Grand Lodge of England, in March.

To elect a Grand Treasurer, vice Sir Knt. Hubbard, who has resigned.

To elect Twelve Members of the Grand Senate.

"That, in the event of the Grand Sovereign convening Moveable Grand Conclaves, the travelling expenses of the Executive or other delegated Members of the Grand Council or Senate be defrayed out of the General Fund."

"That a Live Governorship of the Royal Masonic Institution for Girls be purchased in the name of the Grand Senior General for the time being."

"That the apron be no longer required to be worn by Officers, or Past Officers of the Council and Senate, Intendants General, or Knights of the Grand Cross."

"That a honorarium of Ten Guineas be presented to Ill. Sir Knt. Hubbard upon his retirement from the post of Grand Treasurer."

Sir Knt. R. Wentworth Little, P.G.R., Acting Grand Treasurer, reports that the sum of £500 Consols is now invested to the credit of the Order, an increase of £200 during the year.

The Grand Recorder read the report of the Executive Committee, which stated that since the last report was presented, 22 new Conclaves had been added, making the total number 91; of these 14 were ranged under the banner of Pennsylvania, which was originated in 1872; six were under the Grand Council of Illinois, which was originated in August last, and it said that it could but afford sincere gratification to the Grand Council of England that the Order had gained such importance in having two newly formed American Grand Conclaves. In India, Sir Percy Leith, and another Brother, were establishing Conclaves, where none previously existed, and Sir Knight Adlard was most energetic in the Punjab, and had established a new Conclave at Aden in Arabia. There was also a new Conclave at Wellington, in New Zealand, and petitions had been received for other new ones, in England and America; and the report generally congratulated the members on the great success which had attended the Order in all parts of the world.

Sir Knight Levander moved that the report be received.

Sir Knight White seconded the motion which was put and agreed to.

Sir Knight Little was elected Grand Treasurer, in the place of Sir Knight Hubbard, resigned.

The whole of the recommendations were put seriatim, and agreed to, with the exception of one which referred to the discontinuance of an apron being worn by the Officers and Past Officers of the Council and Senate, Intendants General, or Knights of the Grand Cross, which was negatived, and the regulation is to remain as heretofore.

The Grand Conclave was then closed in Imperial form, and the Sir Knights adjourned for refreshment.

The banquet was served in a first-rate style, and gave general satisfaction.

The cloth having been cleared, grace was sung by Miss Kate Maria Nott, Bro. Lester, and Bro. Frederick Penna, Sir Knight Henry Parker presiding at the pianoforte.

The M.P. Sovereign rose and said—There was no reason why they should depart from the usual custom of drinking, as the first toast, the health of the Queen; and he was sure that amongst the highest class of Freemasons that toast would be drank with the utmost enthusiasm, and therefore he would, without further preface, give "The Health of Her Most Gracious Majesty the Queen and Christian Freemasonry." (Loud cheers.)

The National Anthem was then sung, the solo parts by Miss Kate Maria Nott, accompanied by Sir Knight Parker on the pianoforte.

The M. P. Sovereign then said he would proceed with the next toast, which he was sure would be received with the same enthusiasm as the former, as it was the health of His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales. They would, he was sure, all testify their satisfaction in drinking the toast to the health of the Prince of Wales; for having seen their Royal Brother taking the chair on Monday at the Royal Masonic Benevolent Institution Festival, they were gratified at his looking so well. Last year his life was but trembling in the balance, for he had then just passed through that fearful crisis in which they all had taken so deep an interest; and great was their pleasure to see him recovered to health and strength. For himself he was fearful when he took up the newspaper in the morning that it should contain the announcement of a fearful result. He had, therefore, great pleasure in proposing "The Health of Their Royal Highnesses the Prince and Princess of Wales, and the rest of the Royal Family." (The toast was drunk with the utmost cordiality.)

The toast was followed by the national air "God bless the Prince of Wales."

The M.P. Sovereign said the next toast he had to propose he was sure would be well received, as it was the health of "The Most Illustrious Grand Sovereign, the Earl of Bective," whom he greatly regretted was not present, but there was no one more than himself who regretted his absence. The Grand Sovereign was nearly always among them, and they were always pleased to see him, but that evening he had sent an excuse, which was that he was unable to be with them on account of ill health, and that was a reason they would be sorry to hear why he was not there amongst them. He had no wish to unduly extol the Grand Sovereign, but he might say that he had been most beneficial to the Order in every way in his power, and they also regretted that through an unavoidable cause he was absent from them. He would say no more, but propose "the health of the Earl of Bective, their most illustrious Sovereign." (Drunk with loud cheers.)

Miss Kate Note sung in exquisite style "Bid me discourse."

The M.P. Sovereign then rose and said that they had not the pleasure of the presence of the individual Knight whose health he had now to propose, but his name was well known among them, and he believed his duties had prevented him from being present there on that evening to attend their Red Cross meeting. The Grand Council had also exerted themselves, for it was mainly to their exertions that the Order was indebted for the high position it then held, and to those of the Grand Council whom he saw around him. He gave them, "The most Eminent Grand Viceroy, Sir Frederick M. Williams, Bart., M.P., and the Past and Present Members of the Grand Council," and he coupled with the toast the name of Sir Knight Martyn.

Sir Knight Martyn said he knew no reason why his name should have been coupled with this toast, although he had done all he could for the prosperity of the Order in any way that lay in his power, and he only repeated that he had to return thanks for the toast for those who would have done so much better than he could, and especially so, as his attendance at the meetings of the Red Cross Conclave had not been so frequent as he wished they had been; at the same time he had a great number of Masonic duties, as well as those connected with a large parish to attend to, and living 60 miles from London, he could not come among them as often as he could wish. He was, however, at all times ready to do all he could for the advancement of Freemasonry, and as regarded the Red Cross Degree, he loved it from his heart, and in every respect adored the great principles of the Order. In the name of the Most Illustrious Grand Viceroy and the Past and Present members of the Grand Council, he thanked them for the honour conferred upon them. (Loud cheers.)

Sir Knight Martyn again rose and said he had to ask their indulgence in a few words he had to offer, in proposing the health of their Illustrious Sovereign, Colonel Burdett, who had presided over them that evening at a very short notice, and when it was known what he had done in that, as well as the other Orders of Freemasonry, he was sure they would give a heartfelt reception to the toast he was about to propose, for Colonel Burdett was respected not only in his own province, but in every part of the kingdom, as he had done his utmost to promote the interests of the Order. In the province of Middlesex the mention of his name always evoked the utmost enthusiasm, for his merits were well known and appreciated. (The toast was most enthusiastically responded to.)

The Acting M.P. Sovereign said it was most gratifying to any one to preside over an assemblage of Freemasons, and it was at all times gratifying to him to receive an expression of their feeling, but he must say he had never felt that so much as he had done that night, for the kind manner in which the Sir Knights had received that toast, and for the position he held, perhaps unworthily, in the absence of their Grand Sovereign. He had come amongst them that evening, without the slightest idea that he should be called upon to take a position he had filled so unworthily (No, no.) in the absence of the Earl of Bective, who for so long a time had given so much satisfaction to the Sir Knights of the Order. He felt extremely grateful for the manner in which they had received him, and it would stimulate him to renewed exertions for the benefit of the Order.

Bro. Lester sung Sir H. Bishop's beautiful recitative and air "The Pilgrim of Love," in a manner which called for enthusiastic applause, and there was a marked desire to have it repeated, but that was not permitted, on account of the long programme of toasts be gone through.

The M.P. Sovereign, having called upon the Sir Knights to fill their glasses in honour of the next toast he had to propose, said he said it was a pleasure to them to know that the Red Cross Order was extending far and wide in different countries throughout the world, but that could not have occurred had they not had an efficient body and able staff to carry out the regulations of the Order. They had among them a certain number of Intendant Generals, who were assiduous in carrying them out in the best way they could. The Intendant Generals were like General Officers in the Army, and each of them was responsible for the conduct of those under his command, and he believed, that one and all, they had done their duty in a manner most satisfactory, both to the Order and the Grand Council who had to receive the report of their proceedings. General Munbee was one of the oldest members of the Order, and he believed that he could not do better than call upon him to represent the Intendant Generals on this occasion. He concluded by proposing "The Illustrious Intendants General of the Order." (Cheers.)

General Munbee said—Illustrious Sovereign and Sir Knights of the Order of the Red Cross—I feel that I can hardly describe the pleasure I experience in having my name coupled with the toast of the Intendant Generals, and I congratulate you on the amount of prosperity which has attended the Order, and the rapid strides it has made, and is making, in all parts of the world, and the best principles are flowing from it. What goes on, from the Grand Council to the lowest of the Sir Knights, and induces them to carry on their duty in a proper manner, and the excellence of their Christian principles has brought with it support and success that was not only unexpected, but altogether unexampled. I had no doubt whatever that it would succeed but I was not prepared for the rapid progress it has made in so short a time in all parts of the world. The Order is now flourishing, for it is founded on a great fundamental principle, and on the firm basis of faith, unity, and zeal, and in sitting down I beg most sincerely to thank you for the very kind manner in which you have drunk the health of the Intendants General of the Order.

The M.P. Sovereign said the next toast he had to propose was that of "The Very Eminent Grand Preceptor, the Earl Ferrers, and the rest of the Grand Senate," and in doing so he had very peculiar pleasure, as he had known him ever since he was a little boy, and had the privilege, many years ago, of initiating his father into Freemasonry. He was the individual who revived a Lodge in which the Father of Earl Ferrers was initiated, and it was now in good working order, and was one of the best Lodges in Dublin. In connection with the toast of Earl Ferrers, the Grand Preceptor, he coupled with it the Grand Senate, and the names of Sir Knight Cubitt, Sir Knight Binckes, and Sir Knight Rosenthal. (Great cheering.)

Sir Knight Cubitt, Grand V. Chancellor, said he ought to feel very proud in being called upon to respond to the toast, and to have his name coupled with that of the Grand Preceptor, and the members of the Grand Senate; for, having, for fifteen years led a bachelor's life, it was something new to him to find himself coupled again (loud laughter); for he thought he should never have had another opportunity of being coupled again. He felt proud of what had fallen from their Illustrious Sovereign, and also from Major-General Munbee, as to the rapid strides which their Order had taken, not only in the provinces, but in distant parts of the world. He was one of the first who joined it after its revival, and he was indeed surprised at the rapid strides it had taken, and especially so when he found that that night six worthy Freemasons had been installed into their Order.

The next toast was that of "The Knights of the Grand Cross," to whom the Conclave was much indebted, and the toast was coupled with the name of Dr. Holman.

Sir Knight Dr. Holman said, when he came amongst them that evening, he did not expect to be called upon to respond to the toast which had just been proposed, as he had been absent from England for some time; but since then 91 had been added to the Order. He was here to-day, and gone to-morrow, for he was a bird of passage; and although the Red Cross Order was in its infancy when he went away, some of the infants had become fathers now, and their infants were growing apace. He hoped that such a state of things might continue, and he could assure them that wherever he might be, he would do his best to promote the extension of the Order.

The M.P. Sovereign said he had to bring under their notice a body, although not of so high a degree, but who had exerted themselves for a considerable time for the benefit of the Order, and who were generally selected in consequence of the exertions they had made in other Orders of Freemasonry. They were connected with, and had sprung from different grades, and although they called themselves Red Cross Knights of Constantine, they did not admit any one into their Order unless they had been initiated, passed, and raised in the three degrees of Freemasonry. He proposed "The Sovereigns and Viceroys of the several Conclaves," and coupled with the toast the name of Sir Knight Binckes. (The toast was very cordially received.)

Sir Knight Binckes said he had quite been taken by surprise in having his name associated with the toast which had just been proposed, and after a few observations as to his duties as a good Mason, the first of which was obedience, said that unfortunately no more inefficient Sovereign than himself could be found, and as he was quite alive to the importance of the toast he hoped that his career might be taken as a beacon to warn future Sovereigns to take care to do what devolved upon them well, and to exercise more especially the duties which devolved upon them. He could assure them that no one had a greater desire to do so than himself, but to use a stereotyped phrase he was prevented from doing so by circumstances over which he had no control. He wished, however, to clear away a deal of misconception for a second or two, as he seemed to have been put up to respond to the toast, in reference to the Grand Senate, when it was supposed he had been re-elected, but since then he had been told that he had not been re-elected. He submitted with philosophic resignation, and should accept the same, and although he should not break his sword as he had seen on the stage, or tear up his apron, he should be warned by the event on a future occasion, and taking it in that spirit it would actuate him to a greater exertion in future. They too often took a higher estimate of themselves than their friends did of them, but very generally speaking their friends were right, and they were wrong. He accepted his defeat that evening, but still he must do his best to promote the prosperity of the Order, and whether he was a member of the Senate, or whether (to use another stereotyped expression) he was "left out in the cold," he should not shrink from performing any duty which might advance the interests of this the highest organisation of Freemasonry. It was true that some branches looked coldly upon them, yet he felt assured that they were most useful in the performance of their duties, and he regretted that he was not with them at an earlier period of the evening, but he was unable to be present unless he had left duties undischarged which he had been most anxious to discharge himself. He was proud of the spirit which had actuated the members of the unrecognised degrees, and grateful for "uncovenanted mercies," but he believed that they would live and flourish, and would be able to show to those who opposed them, that notwithstanding all their teaching that the members of this Order would add a chain to the three degrees, of which they had no conception whatever. They were banded together by a treaty of rights of various Orders, and closely cemented together year by year, under the great principles of Freemasonry. After some observations, he said in conclusion that he thanked them cordially for the compliment they had paid him and which he had so imperfectly and unworthily acknowledged.

Song—Bro. Fred. Penna—"Linked for ever," words by Sir Knt. R. Wentworth Little.

The M.P. Sovereign gave "The Board of Stewards and Prosperity to the Order."

Sir Knt. Little, Grand Treasurer, said he had been requested to return thanks for the Board of Stewards on that occasion, and being simply connected with them as Treasurer, he felt the difficulty of adequately responding to the toast but he must say that he had exerted himself to bring this Order to its present state of prosperity. They had heard from the Grand Recorder an epitome of the proceedings, of the Order it having grown from one to 91 conclaves, and although there had been a secession from England, their American Brethren had carried the Red Cross banner along the American continent, and at the present time they had not only six petitions for new conclaves in England, but three from America and two from more distant colonies, showing the interest which was felt for the extension of the Order, and he said it was to him a subject of pride and gratitude that such great results had been achieved. They were greatly indebted to their Intendant Generals for this great extension of the Order, and he begged to render thanks on his own behalf for placing him in the proud position of Grand Treasurer, and also on behalf of the Board of Stewards, and he could assure them that as long as he was spared, he would do his best to promote the prosperity of the Order. (Cheers.)

The Sentinel's toast brought the proceedings to a close.

The musical arrangements were under the direction of Sir Knt. Parker, Grand Organist, and the whole gave the most unqualified satisfaction.

Microscopical investigation has proved that the substances which accumulate between the teeth contain animal and vegetable parasites, and that the tooth powders, pastes, and washes in general have no effect upon these. Messrs. Gabriel's Coralite Tooth Paste and Royal Dentrifice (sold by all chemists and perfumers at 1s. 6d. per box) completely destroy and remove these animalcules and also preserve and beautify the teeth. UNAUTHORISED OFFICES.

To the Editor of The Freemason.

Dear Sir and Brother,—

In page 126 of Feb. 22nd, No. 207 of The Freemason, under the heading "Unauthorised offices," "H," who would have more weight and influence if he used his own name, speaks about "Standard Bearer," "Director of Ceremonies," &c., As to the Director I see he is quite right; "a Master of Ceremonies may be added to the proper officers" (page 61, Constitutions). But "Standard Bearer," why should there not be one in every lodge where there is a standard? Who is to take care of it in lodge; who is to put it in its proper place in Provincial Grand Lodge, and see that it is not injured? Surely there can be no reason, if you allow a lodge to have standards, why a proper officer should not be appointed? In page 61 of the Constitutions no mention is made of I.P.M. and P.M.'s, yet they must be essential to the proper administration of the lodge. Again, no notice is taken of Organist still, as we have certain chaunts, they ought to be guided by a brother at the harmonium or organ. I presume, therefore, that though Bro. H. is right in the strict letter of the Constitutions, though may be some slight deviations from general laws, where no fundamental rule or practice may be interfered with.

It is much to be desired that letters appearing in your excellent paper should have appended the signature of brethren, if they are to do any real good.—Believe me, yours fraternally,

AUGUSTUS A. BAGSHAW.

THE ORDERS OF THE TEMPLE AND HOSPITAL.

To the Editor of The Freemason.

Dear Sir and Brother,—

I have watched with some astonishment the struggle of some of the leaders of the Order of Knights Templar to be recognised as the descendants of the glorious Knights of old, for if there be one Order more than another that has a modern origin it is this one, which cannot show a trace of evidence of its being in existence before the end of the last century. It has no more to do with the Swedish Rite than light has to do with darkness.

As Masonic Knights Templar, no one could complain very much of the vanity of the title. I think Bro. Hughan would have but little difficulty in showing how our Masonic K.T. Order grew out of the Masonic Knights of the Temple, supposed to have been established somewhere about the time of the Babylonish captivity, and prior to the Royal Arch; how it was introduced into these dominions by Dunckerley, and how he succeeded in getting this chivalric degree semi-recognised by Grand Lodge.

Yours fraternally,

A MASONIC KNIGHT TEMPLAR.

CHARITY.

To the Editor of The Freemason.

Dear Sir and Brother,—

The word heading this letter is seldom interpreted in its proper sense by members of our ancient Fraternity, and I feel it to be a duty incumbent upon me to call the attention of brethren to the fact, that although their hearts are expanded by benevolence, they are frequently found wanting in discriminating who are fit and proper persons to be recipients of their charity. This virtue, lovely in itself, and a bright ornament of our profession, should always be tempered with prudence; thereby teaching us to regulate our actions according to the dictates of reason, and not to be unwearily led away by the cunning and deceitful.

In pursuing my researches for Masonic lore, I have had an opportunity of witnessing the desire on the part of brethren to relieve any person who may present himself at our portals and say he is a brother, without first ascertaining that he is worthy of confidence. According to our Constitutions we should only relieve those who may be found worthy upon production of proper credentials. Knowing this, I was surprised and annoyed to find that a so-called brother recently received relief from the individual members of a lodge of instruction, after a vote had been recorded against dispensing its funds from the inability of the so-called brother to prove satisfactorily that he was allied to the brotherhood. He made three different statements to as many brethren regarding his certificate, and he was recognised by a member as having solicited alms of brethren for the past twelve months. With such facts before me, I can arrive at no other conclusion than that the individual in question is a cowan, a professional beggar, and one against whom our Fraternity should be warned.

I know, Sir, that every human being has an undoubted claim to our kind offices; yet I cannot help remarking "while we continue to relieve unworthy persons, our sin is equal to theirs, for we are the primary cause of their practising upon us that deception which induces our charity." If our brethren were more careful both in public and at the banquet table we should not be so frequently greeted by strangers to our mystic art. I have known brethren who have only been initiated, or passed, almost led away by those who have attempted certain things which they acknowledged to have seen Masons do. Therefore, Sir, I say to the noble Fraternity at large, "be as diffusive in your charity as circumstances will permit, but at the same time remember that you are to be discreet and prudent."

I am Dear Sir and Brother,
Yours fraternally,
COSMOPOLITAN.

MUSIC IN LODGES.

To the Editor of The Freemason.

Dear Sir and Brother,—

As an old subscriber to "The Freemason," I trust you will allow me to thank "Orpheus" very cordially for his interesting letter to day, respecting lodge music. It is a most charming and desirable adjunct to our beautiful ceremonies; no one can possibly deny that after experiencing the difference when the music is absent. I just happen to have completed my year of office as W.M., and have had several years of experience in Greta Lodge. For a year of two we had no music, but after I had visited other lodges, I was so impressed with the desirability of having an instrument, that I joined with two other members, in purchasing a very nice harmonium, on the three years' system. A few older members looked upon this at first as an innovation, but we persevered and got up some nice music, and the brethren were at last so well pleased with the service, that eventually, before eighteen months had expired they passed a resolution that the instrument should be purchased and become the property of the lodge, and we each were returned the money we had advanced. With respect to what "Orpheus" states about the difficulty in securing an Organist, I can only say that even in this small town of Keswick, we have two organists belonging to the lodge; but if any lodge has not an Organist, surely there will be more than one enthusiastic brother who will immediately proceed to take lessons, and fit himself for this pleasing duty. The idea of procuring a barrel organ for Masonic music seems to me to be very infra dig, as it would be too mechanical, and, I fear, very monotonous, as the piano and forte movements could not be expressed, and the beautiful feeling of sympathy, which a true Mason would naturally infuse, would be entirely lost.

Can any of your readers inform me which is the most popular lodge music for the Craft and the Mark Lodge. We do not sing in unison here, having a sufficient number of voices to sing in parts; but I think the idea of having a service to be sung in unison occasionally is good, but I cannot agree with "Orpheus," that all our singing should be in unison. Hoping you will kindly insert this letter, and trusting to hear more discussion on this very interesting subject.

I am dear Sir and Bro.

Yours very fraternally,
JOHN WOOD, P.M., 1073.

ORDER OF THE TEMPLE.

The following circular, which we have much pleasure in publishing, has been forwarded to the Registrars of all Preceptories in the Kingdom.

15, Portugal-street, Lincoln's Inn, W.C., 21st February, 1873.

Dear Sir Knight,—

I have the honour to inform you that His Royal Highness The Prince of Wales, Grand Master elect, will notify to the Arch-Registrar, three weeks previously to his installation, the day His Royal Highness may fix for that purpose.

I am directed to make this announcement thus early to afford ample time in the Provinces to make arrangements for attending the installation and subsequent banquet, at which His Royal Highness intends to preside.

It will be necessary that those intending to be present at the installation should notify their intention to head-quarters at least for days previously, in order that suitable arrangements may be made. Admission to the banquet will be by ticket, for which application must be made seven days previously.

The present edition of the "Statutes of the Convent-General" being exhausted, a reprint has been ordered, which may be obtained upon application to the Vice-Chancellor, at the above address, enclosing a remittance of one shilling.

Members of the Order who may wish to procure the new jewels are recommended to abstain from doing so until after the installation of His Royal Highness, when accurate drawings will be published for their guidance.

Preceptors are requested to give this information the greatest publicity among the members.

I remain,

Dear Sir Knight,

Yours fraternally,

W. M. FINKLER.

MASONIC BALL AT EDINBURGH.—The annual assembly in connection with the Lodge Edinburgh, Defensive Band, No. 151, was held on Wednesday evening, 26th February, in Freemasons' Hall, George-street, Edinburgh. The ball was opened at ten o'clock by the Right Worshipful Master, Bro. Thomas H. Douglas. Under his directorship, aided by the Stewards and other office-bearers of the lodge, the ball proved one of the most successful of the season. The attendance of the brethren was large, and included the Masters of most of the sister lodges of the province, and many visiting brethren, amongst whom were some old familiar faces, Bros. T. Douglas, R.W.M. Lodge St. Andrew, No. 48; J. Ford, R.W.M., No. 468; C. I. Paton, P.M., Lodge St. David, No. 393, English Constitution; J. M. Laurie, J. Murray, No. 97, T. McNeil, No. 60, J. Henderson, No. 2. A good sprinkling of the brethren appeared in the dress of the Chivalric Degrees, and gave a very fine appearance to the ball, which was illuminated in all its splendour. Mr. John Gunn, Milne Square, was purveyor on the occasion. There was an excellent orchestra, and the duties of master of the ceremonies were efficiently discharged by Bro. R. Archman.

The Emperor of Germany has been graciously pleased to confer upon Captain Charles John Burgess the Gold Cross of the Royal Order of the Crown, in recognition of his services in aid of the sick and wounded during the recent war.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT AND PILLS:—Hopes and fears. Whatever be the ailment, let no one despair of meeting with a cure till these searching and purifying remedies have been fairly tried. A vast variety of chronic complaints which had baffled the most learned physicians, have readily been relieved by the conjoint action of Holloway's curative agents. They act primarily in discharging all deleterious drugs from the blood and secondarily in rectifying disordered conditions of the secretions caused by unknown or unavoidable impurities existing in the air or in the food, or resulting from late hours or dissipated habits. Cutaneous diseases, so frequently affecting the scrofulous, consumptive and feeble, yield with surprising rapidity to the steady use of Holloway's medicaments.—ADVT.

PROSPECTUS.

The Surrey Masonic Hall Company has been formed with the object of providing a Building specially adapted to the requirements of Masonic Lodges, Chapters, and Conclaves, held in the South Metropolitan District; and in connection therewith, a large Hall, for the general use of the public when not engaged for Masonic purposes.

This project has met with the approval of Brethren high in the Craft, and been very favourably received at the several Public Meetings that have been held.

The Site for the Building is in the Camberwell New Road, lying between the Post Office and the County Court, close to the Station of the London, Chatham, and Dover Railway, and to the Tramways from Brixton, Vauxhall, Westminster, Blackfriars, Peckham, and Greenwich. It possesses a frontage of about 70 feet, with a depth of about 150, and has been secured for a term of Ninety-nine Years, at a very low Ground-rent. The plans have been prepared by a well-known Architect and Member of the Craft, and embrace every convenience that long experience could possibly suggest.

The propriety of holding Masonic Meetings in buildings devoted to the purpose is universally acknowledged by the Craft, and the advantages have been fully proved in many provincial towns where Masonic Halls have been erected. It will also supply a want, long felt in this neighbourhood, of a commodious Public Building.

Although the chief object of the Company is to promote the good of Freemasonry, the Directors are of opinion, from estimates carefully prepared, that the Shareholders will also derive a very fair return in a commercial point of view. They therefore, with full confidence, invite the active support of their Brethren. A large number of shares have already been subscribed for.

The estimated annual expenditure for Ground-rent, Taxes, Gas, Coals and sundries about £200.

The estimated annual receipts from Lodges, Chapters, Lodges of Instruction, Conclaves, &c., including rent of Wine cellars, about £220; and from rental of Hall for Concerts, Public Meetings, &c., about £300. And the estimated cost of building and furnishing the Hall, capable of accomodating about 700 persons, in addition to spacious Masonic Rooms, from £2,500 to £3,000, thus shewing 10 per cent, interest on the capital. The Directors, however, fairly anticipate a larger return from public lettings.

The Company is registered under Table A of the Companies Act, 1862. A copy of the Memorandum of Association can be seen at the Offices of the Company.

ALCOCK'S POROUS PLASTERS.

The public are informed that these celebrated Plasters have been established twenty-seven years. Patented U.S., 1845. It is supposed and claimed that they restore the

of the part where applied, by which pain and diseased actions cease. But we really know little on this subject, because the properties of medical agents can only be known by experience, and this has taught that whenever Allcock's Porous Plasters are applied they do good, often restoring the withered hand, removing the unsightly lump, lengthening the shorter leg, and restoring the lame to walk. But read our testimonials, and if you have a weak spot in your body, try a plaster; the cost is small,

BEING TWENTY-SEVEN HALFPENCE ONLY.

No doubt they impart all

to the system needed. We believe this because they have made greater cures than were ever achieved by the most costly applications.

WHERE ONE WAS SOLD A YEAR AGO A THOUSAND ARE SOLD NOW.

They strengthen, warm, and invigorate the part upon which they are applied, and relieve nervous affections of the bowels, lumbago, pains of the side, and usually, all local pain. In affections of the kidneys they are of great service.

LUMBAGO.

To Messrs. Allcock & Co, Liverpool.

"Manor-road, Folkestone, July 6, 1872.

Gentlemen,—Some months ago I suffered severely from lumbago, and could not walk without much pain and difficulty. One day I met a friend, General ———, who advised me to try one of Allcock's Porous Plasters, adding, 'I have one on me at this moment, which has wholly removed an affection similar to the one from which you are suffering.' I had really never before heard of the plasters, but was so struck with what I heard that I immediately procured one and put it on. I found almost instantaneous relief; the pain and stiffness were gone in an hour, and have never since returned. I may add that several friends, including an eminent physician, laughed at my account of my cure; more than one of them, however, including that physician, have owned to me since that, in consequence of my statement, they have resorted to Allcock's Porous Plasters when suffering in various ways, and have in every instance found relief. A lady of my acquaintance, who heard from me of these plasters, has tried them with wonderful effect among the suffering poor. She finds the demand for them so great that she wrote to you to ask at what rate you could supply her with plasters for the poor. In answering her question you kindly sent her a supply for gratuitous distribution. To thank you in my own name, and in behalf of my friends and of the poor, I feel it a duty and a pleasure to send you these few lines, of which you may make any use you please."

J. H. WOODWARD.

VOLUNTARY AND IMPORTANT TESTIMONIALS.

"Sir,—I have myself proved the efficacy of your plasters, but to-day a well-known clergyman, in the course of conversation, asked me if I knew anything of 'Allcock's Porous Plasters.' I replied, 'O yes, we sell them largely; I have just ordered £50 worth of them.' 'Well,' he said, 'they are invaluable. I give them to nearly all my poor parishioners for all sorts of complaints—rheumatism, lumbago, colds, bronchitis, &c. I also use them in my own family, and recommend them to my friends. My wife was suffering from bronchial disturbance, but was quickly relieved by Allcock's Plaster. One case of cure was almost amusing. A person had been suffering a long time from dreadful pain at the pit of the stomach, and had spent I don't know how much in trying to get cured, but in vain. I gave him one of Allcock's Plasters, and it cured him in a quarter of an hour. He spoke so enthusiastically about the plasters that I asked him to allow his statement to be made public. As he consented, I give you his name—viz., Rev. G. COMYNS, Vicar of Sidbury, Devonshire.

"I forward you this with pleasure, knowing it will have weight with the public, especially in the southern counties of England."

With compliments,

EDWIN J. ORCHARD.

Letter from the REV. THOS. BONSALE, M.A., as to Qualities and Reputation of Brandreth's Pills and Allcock's Plasters.

"Wissset Vicarage, near Halesworth, Suffolk, July 29, 1872.

'H. D. BRANDRETH, Esq., Liverpool.

"My Dear Sir,—Please forward me some Brandreth's Pills and Porous Plasters to amount of enclosure. I may here state I have been in the habit, for the last thirty-seven years, of administering these remedies to the sick with great success. I have been well acquainted with Dr. B. Brandreth, of New York, for nearly forty years, and can certify that he gives constant employment to upwards of one hundred persons preparing these commodities alone. Brandreth's Pills and Allcock's Porous Plasters are the household remedies of nearly every family in the United States and throughout South America. We all know that many persons take medicine when they do not need it. It is, therefore, of importance that the medicine should be incapable of hurting. Now, I know Brandreth's Pills to be perfectly harmless from long experience of their effects. Yet, when the bowels or the blood need cleansing, they are a thoroughly energetic medicine, arousing all the interior organs to healthy action. In colds, colics, and costiveness, they give relief immediately, and those who use them will find them a safe and most reliable remedy.

"I am, yours truly,

THOMAS BONSALE,

"Late Curate of Linstead Magna and Parva, Suffolk."

Observe "D. Brandreth" on the Government Stamp, without which they cannot be genuine.

FREEMASONRY IN WEST LAN-CASHIRE.

INSTALLATION OF LORD
SKELMERSDALE, as R.W.P.G.M.

The imposing Masonic ceremonial which took place at the Town Hall, Liverpool, on Thursday the 27th ult., was not only a striking evidence of the vitality and progress of Freemasonry in the Province, but also proved that the respect for Bro. the Right Hon. Lord Skelmersdale, who was then installed R.W.P.G.M. for the Western Division of the County of Lancaster, was both deep-seated and universal. Not only was the gathering the most numerous which has ever been held in the Provinces, and about twice the numerical strength of any ever seen in W. Lancashire; but the attendance of the "purpled" of this and neighbouring provinces, and the representation of leaders in the Craft Lodges were such as to lean additional importance to a meeting which must long be remembered in Liverpool. The appointment by the M.W.G.M. of Lord Skelmersdale to this important office was singularly wise, and certainly the most popular which could have been made, because his lordship has not only done much for the Order throughout the province, but he has done all in a manner which reflected the highest honour upon him as a nobleman and a Mason. To give an additional clat to the imposing ceremonial, his Worship the Mayor, Bro. C. Edward Samuelson, P.P.J.G.D., Cheshire, in the most handsome and fraternal spirit, placed the magnificent suite of reception, entertaining, and ball rooms at the disposal of the Prov. Grand Lodge for the transaction of their interesting business, thereby investing the meeting with a thoroughly town's importance. Bro. Major Le Gendre N. Starkie, R.W.P.G.M. for the Eastern Division of the County of Lancaster, was chosen by the Marquis of Ripon to perform the ceremony of installation, and the wisdom of the selection was abundantly proved by the really admirable manner in which the work was done. The larger ball room was utilised for the purpose of holding the lodge, and it is due to Bro. Samuelson, who was assisted by the Ex-Mayor, Bro. J. Pearson, S.D., 680, to say that the arrangements were as complete and satisfactory as could have been expected under the circumstances. There were upwards of 700 brethren present, and amongst these there were representatives from every lodge in the province—numbering upwards of 60—visitors from the neighbouring provinces of Cheshire, East Lancashire, Staffordshire, &c., and several from London, as well as more distant parts of the kingdom. The rapid strides made by the Order in this province of late years has been something extraordinary; but the meeting of last Thursday, accompanied as it was by a ceremonial which must have impressed even the oldest Mason, will doubtless give an impetus and freshened vigour to the progress of Masonry throughout the whole province.

THE MAYOR'S BREAKFAST.

Preparatory to the day's business, his worship the Mayor, Bro. Samuelson, entertained about 70 of the Provincial Grand Officers and other brethren to a recherche breakfast in the Banqueting Hall. Amongst those who sat down to breakfast, as well as others who afterwards appeared in lodge, were the following:—

Bros. Lord Skelmersdale, P.G.M.; Lord

de Tabley, P.G.M. of Cheshire; Hon. Frederick Stanley, M.P., Prov. D.G.M.; Lord Lindsay, Prov. S.G.W. and P.G.M. Aberdeen; Major Wilson Prov. G.J.W.; Rev. J. F. Goggin, rector of Rufford; Prov. G.C.; T. Armstrong, Prov. G. Treas.; T. Wylie, Prov. G.R.; H. S. Alpass, Prov. G.S.; James Pickering, Prov. J.G.D.; Rowson, Prov. G. Sup. Works; George Broadbridge, Prov. G. Dir. Cer.; J. M. His Worship the Mayor presided, supported on the right by Bro. Lord Skelmersdale, and on the left by Bro. Lord de Tabley. After Breakfast, which was provided by Mr. Eberle, of the Alexandra Hotel, Dale-street.

The Mayor said, my Lords and brethren, you will at once understand that a large number of brethren are anxiously awaiting us in another room, and, therefore, I will not now ask you to listen to any set speeches, in proposing the few toasts to which it will be my duty, privilege, and pleasure to call your attention. As loyal men and good Masons we must first drink the health of "Her Most Gracious Majesty the Queen." (Cheers.) Brethren, I give you "The Queen and the Craft," and in coupling the Craft with the toast you will appreciate my intentions when you recollect the position which our royal brother, the Prince of Wales, holds in the Order, and the interest he has from time to time taken in its progress and welfare. (Loud cheers.)

The Mayor said, I have now to propose the health of a distinguished brother, without whom we could not have well proceeded with the business of the day, I allude to the R.W.P.G.M. for East Lancashire. (Cheers.) Major Starkie's father, I believe, was connected with this province since the year 1827, and therefore you can readily understand that his son will take all the greater interest in perpetuating the work which was so ably begun by his father. (Hear, hear.) It is a very high compliment indeed, that has been paid to Major Starkie, which he doubtless fully appreciates, to be appointed by the M.W. G.M. of England to act as his deputy on this occasion. (Loud cheers.) We are at all times very glad to see our brethren from the adjoining provinces; and I must ask you to unite with me in now drinking the health of the R.W.P.G.M. for East Lancashire, Major Starkie. (Cheers.)

Bro. Major Starkie, after thanking the Mayor and brethren, for the kind and cordial manner in which the toast had been proposed and responded to, said, it was his chief desire to do all he could to be of any service to the Craft in any capacity in which he felt he could serve his brethren. (Hear.) It was a great pleasure to come amongst them, and all the more so because West Lancashire was his mother province, and he was a member of the lodge from which the P.G.M. rose into office. (Cheers.) He hoped that the commission entrusted to him (that of installing Lord Skelmersdale) would be carried out successfully and satisfactorily, because his lordship, he (Bro. Starkie) was certain, would prove an admirable and worthy successor to the late P.G.M., and because he felt that the present appointment was in entire accordance with the feelings of the whole of the brethren in that important province. (Hear, hear, and cheers.)

The Mayor: I have now to propose a toast which I am certain has only to be named to meet with a most cordial reception. We are assembled to-day by command of the R.W.P.G.M.-designate of West Lancashire, and we are here to do him honour to the fullest extent. (Cheers.) I believe we find to-day that upon no previous occasion has such a number of Masons assembled together than we will see in the great room of this Town Hall. (Cheers.) It affords me the greatest pleasure as an old Mason, to contribute in any degree to the success of this meeting. I now give you the "Health of the Rt. Hon. and Rt. Worshipful Lord Skelmersdale." (Loud cheers.) I am sure that the Marquess of Ripon, in selecting this distinguished nobleman to fill the office of his representative in this division of the county has given satisfaction to every one who has had the honour of knowing him. In giving you the health and long life of Lord Skelmersdale, I must express the hope, in which you will cordially join, that he may continue to reign over this province in the manner in which he has already done during the few months he has already held the position into which he will be formally installed to-day. (Loud and prolonged cheering.)

Lord Skelmersdale said, he must thank the Mayor most heartily for the kind manner and flattering terms in which he had proposed his health, and he would also express his obligations to the brethren for the cordial manner in which the toast had been received. He earnestly hoped that he would be able to fill the station to which he had been appointed by Lord Ripon, in a manner as satisfactory as that in which the duties had been performed by his predecessor.

The Mayor said, it now gave great pleasure, having first seen the light in Cheshire, to have sitting on his left the P.G.M. for that Province. (Cheers.) Their lamented friend and distinguished brother, the late Viscount Combermere, did all in his power to promote Masonry, not only in his own province, but throughout the length and breadth of the land. (Hear, hear.) A more worthy successor to that nobleman could not have been appointed than Lord de Tabley. (Cheers.) The Freemasons of Cheshire had proved this clearly by the manner in which the business of their lodges had been conducted, and by the admirable way in which his lordship had presided over and directed them in the proper conduct of their affairs. (Hear.) Very much depended upon the head of a department in the conduct of business in Freemasonry, as in other matters, and the Cheshire Masons in this respect recognized Lord de Tabley as one of the first Masons in the country. (Cheers.) He gave them "The Health of the Right Hon. Lord de Tabley, P.G.M. of Cheshire." (Cheers.)

Lord de Tabley, in reply said, he should always do his best to serve the interests of Masonry in the district over which he presided, and it would always be his endeavour to promote a reciprocal good feeling between his own and the brethren of the adjoining provinces. It gave him great pleasure to respond to the invitation to assist at the installation of Lord Skelmersdale, because he wished to do honour to his noble brother, to the Mayor of this ancient borough, to whose hospitality they were greatly indebted for some measure of the success which was attending that meeting; and because he wished to testify by his presence how earnestly he desired the harmonious working of Masonry in both provinces. (Loud cheers.)

Lord de Tabley, in proposing health, long life, and happiness, to Bro. Samuelson, Mayor of Liverpool, referred in special terms of praise to his great kindness in having placed the fine suite of rooms of the Town Hall at the disposal of the Provincial Grand Lodge, and for his munificent hospitality that morning.

The Mayor, in response, said that with the exception of his worthy predecessor (Bro. J. Pearson) it was many years since a Mason occupied that chair, and since the hospitality of that board had been extended to the Masonic Fraternity. He had had great pleasure in issuing invitations to as many brethren as could conveniently assemble in that room to join him in that little festivity.

The Provincial Grand Lodge Officers then retired to clothe for the Ceremony of Installation.

Shortly after eleven o'clock the Craft lodges began to assemble in the large ball-room of the Town Hall, and about twelve o'clock every available seat was occupied. The W.M.'s chair was occupied by Bro. A. Fletcher, W.M. 32; the P.M.'s chair being filled by Bro. J. Fowler, W.M. 86; the S.W.'s by Bro. W. Sumner, W.M. 113; the J.W.'s by Bro. W. Sharp, W.M. 148. Amongst the other principals of the lodges present were Bros. J. Beesley, W.M. 216; G. Rigby Smith, S.W. 216; J. W. Baker, P.M. 241; G. Turner, P.M. 86; J. K. Smith, P.M. 249; J. R. The Craft Lodge having been opened in the third degree, the arrival of the P.G. Lodge was announced about half-past twelve o'clock, and the whole of the brethren standing, received the imposing assembly of officers in due form with solemn music. After the salutation with the royal sign, Bro. Major Starkie, Prov. G.M., East Lancashire, then ascended the throne, and having appointed Bro. E. Samuelson, P.P.J.G.D., as P.G. Senior Warden, pro tem., and Bro. Major Wilson, as P.G. Junior Warden, he proceeded to open the Prov. Grand Lodge according to ancient form, solemn prayer being offered by Bro. J. F. Goggin, P.G.C. Bro. J. Skeaf's anthem, "Behold how good," was then sung with striking effect by Bros. Haswell, Evans, Yeatman, Busfield, T. J. Hughes, D. Saunders, W. Smith, and H. Ashmore, Bro. Skeaf, P.G.O., presiding at the harmonium. The roll of the lodges was read by the Prov. G. Secretary, when it appeared that every one within the province was represented, more than one by upwards of fifty brethren.

Bro. Starkie, P.G.M., addressing the brethren, said they were all aware that they were assembled that day to inaugurate a new reign; but while they were gathered to welcome their new Master, they ought to remember with gratitude the kindness, fraternal love and affection which had been displayed by their deceased P.G.M., Sir Thomas G. Fermor-Hesketh—(hear, hear)—who had been an active ruler in that large and influential province, and who was known to many of them as an excellent Mason. Under his rule, the province flourished very greatly, and Masonry had made rapid strides. He was courteous, kind, and affable, and ready at all times to use his best efforts to promote the interests of the Craft. Turning to the business of the day, Bro. Starkie said that every one must feel genuine satisfaction at the appointment of Lord Skelmersdale, whose selection had elicited the loudest acclamations from all the brethren in the province; and a feeling of gratitude must be cherished by every one that such an appointment had been made in one of the greatest provinces in the country. Lord Skelmersdale's connection with the Craft had already borne its fruit, and there was no doubt that that fruit would ripen more and more bountifully, and that his rule would tend to the increase of Masonry in this province. Bro. Starkie concluded by saying he thought the brethren fortunate in having such an election and selection of a brother made to rule over so wealthy, intelligent, and influential a province as that of West Lancashire.

The P.G. Secretary then read the patent of the appointment by the M.W.G.M., after which Lord Skelmersdale was presented for installation by Bros. Colonel Birchall, and Captain A. C. Mott; the former congratulating the brethren of the province in having an excellent nobleman and able Mason as his lordship appointed to rule over them.

Before proceeding with the ceremony, Bro. Starkie, P.G.M., congratulated Lord Skelmersdale in having received the appointment, said the position he was about to assume was one either for good or for evil, and the Order in this province would either prosper or retrograde, according to the activity or lukewarmness shown by him in connection with his office. Freemasonry, like all other social institutions, could not stand still, and he had no doubt that under his (Lord Skelmersdale's) rule the Craft would greatly prosper, as it had done under other auspices in the past.

Bro. Lord Skelmersdale—the ancient charges usually given to W.M.'s of Craft Lodges having previously been read to him by the Prov. Grand Secretary—then advanced to the pedestal and took the solemn obligations, after which he was installed with acclamation in the chair of the Provincial Grand Master for West Lancashire.

The newly-installed P.G.M., addressing the large assembly, said he could honestly assure the brethren that it was with the most solemn feelings that he had taken his place in that chair, and he could only say that it was his wish and intention to act up to the obligations he had taken, and endeavour to rule over that province in a way which would prove satisfactory to every brother under his control. Bro. the Right Hon. Frederick Stanley was then duly installed the Deputy Provincial Grand Master, according to ancient form, by Bro. Starkie.

After the minutes of the previous P.G.

Lodge meetings had been read and confirmed, Bro. Wylie, P.G. Reg., moved that the following vote of condolence with the family of the late R.W.P.G.M. should be passed:—"The Prov. Grand Lodge cannot meet without recording upon their minutes how deeply they deplore the loss which T.G.A.O.T.U. in His wisdom has permitted them to sustain by the decease of the late R.W.P.G.M., Sir T. G. Fermor-Hesketh, Bart, of Rufford, and they earnestly desire to sympathise and to condole with his sorrowing mother and orphan family in their painful and sudden bereavement, and resolve that a copy of this resolution be sent to them." The motion was seconded by Bro. Mawdsley, P.P.G.R., and unanimously agreed to.

The P.G. Treasurer read the financial statement, from which it appeared that the amount in the bank was £1,228 2s. 9d., and in hand £50 5s. 11d. On the motion of Bro. Sherlock, P.P.G.S. of W., seconded by Bro. Mott, P.G.S.W., Bro. T. Armstrong was unanimously re-elected P.G. Treasurer.

The Prov. G.M. then appointed and invested the following as his officers for the ensuing year:—Bros. Lord Lindsay, P.S. G.W.; Major T. Wilson, P.J.G.W.; Rev. J. F. Goggin, P.G.C.; T. Wylie, P.G. Reg.; H. S. Alpass, P.G. Sec.; R. Wylie, P.S.G.D. (by proxy); Pickering, P.J.G.D.; Rowson, P.G. Sup. of Works; G. Broadbridge, P.G.D.C.; J. W. J. Fowler, P.G.A.D.C.; J. Skeaf, P.G.O.; Baxendale, P.G. Pur.; Dr. J. Mercer Johnson, P.G.C.S.; Doyle, Robinson, G. de la Perelle, J. W. Baker, and Landless, P.G.S.; and Sharrock, P.G.S.B. Bro. Ball was re-appointed P.G. Tyler, and Bro. Ball, jun., P.G.A. Tyler.

Bro. Alpass, P.G.S., announced that Lord Skelmersdale had consented to preside at the annual festival, to be held in London in May next, in connection with the Royal Masonic Girls' School, and he moved that the sum of 50 guineas be given by the province to the Girls' School Fund, in commemoration of his lordship's installation.

Bro. Armstrong, P.G.T., seconded the motion.

Bro. Captain Mott, P.S.G.W., moved as an amendment that the sum be 100 guineas, and Bro. Broadbridge, P.G.D. of C. seconded the amendment, which was carried unanimously; Bro. Alpass withdrawing his resolution in its favour. It was also resolved that the sum of £15, being the balance of the ten percent. fund, be devoted to the same purpose.

Bro. R. Wentworth Little, Secretary to the Royal Masonic Institution for Girls, thanked the Prov. Grand Lodge of West Lancashire, in eloquent terms, for the munificence displayed towards the institution which he represented.

Bro. Thomas Wylie, P.G.R., said it was his very pleasing duty to ask the P.G.M. to present to Bro. Hamer a P.G. Treasurer's Jewel, and also an address, expressive of the Lodge's high sense of the valuable services rendered by him as P.G. Treasurer.

The P.G.M. then made the presentation in suitable terms, referring to the valuable services rendered by Bro. Hamer. The Jewel, which was a very handsome one, bore the following inscription:—"Presented to Bro. James Hamer, P.M., 220, 249, 580, P.Z. 220, 249, 580, 1094, on his retiring from the office of P.G.T., which he has filled for eleven years. Provincial Grand Lodge, Western Division of Lancashire, Town Hall, Liverpool, 27th January, 1873." The following are the terms of the address:—

Presented, together with a P.P.G. Treasurer's Jewel, to Bro. James Hamer, P.M., P.Z., P.P.G. Treasurer of West Lancashire, &c., at a meeting of the P. Grand Lodge, held at the Town Hall, Liverpool, on Thursday, the 27th February, 1873, on his retirement from the office of P.G.T. of West Lancashire, which he had filled for a period of eleven years; in token of the respect and esteem with which he is regarded by his brethren, and to record the founding in his honour of the Hamer Benevolent Annuity Fund for the assistance of decayed Freemasons; the money for which was subscribed by the various lodges and brethren in the province, to show their appreciation of the very great services rendered by him to Masonry for many years past.

(Signed on behalf of the brethren),
SKELMERSDALE, P.G.M., W.L.

The address is bordered by the Craft and Royal Arch Emblems, and surmounted by Bro. Hamer's Crest and Coat of Arms, the whole being enclosed in a massive frame. Mr. J. O. Marples, of Liverpool, who was entrusted with the execution of the address, performed his work in a highly artistic manner.

The presentation was acknowledged by Bro. Hamer in suitable terms.

The P.G.M. then said he had been called upon to perform a pleasing duty, as he had been asked by the brethren of Liverpool to present to his worship, the Mayor, the chair in which he (the P.G.M.) then sat, as a memorial of the greatest Masonic event which had ever taken place in the Town Hall. The brethren thought that there ought to be some remembrance of the Mayor's kindness in granting the use of the Town Hall, and in that spirit they asked his worship to accept the presentation.

Bro. Samuelson, in acknowledging the gift, said he little thought, when he offered the use of the Town Hall for that P.G.L. meeting—he little dreamt that the brethren of Liverpool would have thought so much of the offer as to recognise it in the way in which they had done. He felt that that hall could not have been appropriated to a higher purpose than that to which it had been devoted that day. As the hall which was now being erected in Hope-street, could not be used for that purpose, he felt the Town Hall could not be more worthily occupied. In accepting the civic chair he felt as if the duties were very similar to those he fulfilled in passing through the chair of a Masonic Lodge; and when he occupied the chair which had now been presented he would feel a still greater obligation resting upon him to perform his duties to the best of his abilities. He hoped that future mayors, when they sat in it, would feel it an honour as he now personally did. He concluded by saying that he considered that as one of the "red letter days" of his mayoralty, and would do all in his power to further the interests of the Craft.

The chair, which is a splendid work of art in the Gothic style, was manufactured by Bro. Chuck, Redcross-street, and designed by Messrs. Danson and Davies, Architects of the new Masonic Hall now approaching completion. The carving of the chair, which is made of Spanish mahogany, ebony, and sandalwood, was executed by Mr. Shairett, Slater-street. The medalion ornaments, consisting of the Freemason's Arms and the Emblems of Office of the P.G.M. of West Lancashire were richly engraved on metal by Bro. George Kenning, Monument Place. The following inscription is engraved on a plate at the back:—"This chair was presented to the Worshipful the Mayor of Liverpool (Bro. Edward Samuelson), Past Provincial Junior Grand Deacon, Cheshire, by the Freemasons of Liverpool, to commemorate the installation of the Right Hon. Lord Skelmersdale, Right Worshipful Provincial Grand Master of the Western Division of the county of Lancaster, in the Town Hall, Liverpool, on the 27th day of February, A.D. 1873; A.L. 5873."

The Provincial Grand Lodge was then closed in due form.

THE BANQUET.

As a fitting close to the highly interesting and brilliant day's proceedings, upwards of 200 brethren dined in the evening at the Adelphi Hotel, under the presidency of Lord Skelmersdale, who was supported by Bros. Lord de Tabley, Lord Lindsay, the Hon. F. Stanley, Major Starkie, the Mayor and ex-Mayor, W. Romaine-Callender, &c. After an excellently served dinner, the Provincial Grand Master gave the toast of "The Queen," remarking that the brethren knew how thoroughly she appreciated every effort to extend the works of charity and benevolence in this country. (Cheers.) He knew personally that Her Majesty took a great interest in Freemasonry, as being the most benevolent institution in her kingdom. (Cheers.) The Prov. Grand Master in giving the toast of "Bro. H.R.H. the Prince of Wales, M.W. P.G.M., the Princess of Wales, and the rest of the Royal Family," said that any brother who had the good fortune to be in London on the previous Monday, and he believed there were two or three now present who had been there, would bear him out in saying that the Prince of Wales was a thorough Freemason. (Hear, hear, and cheers.) Any one who heard his speeches on that occasion; as well as on other Masonic occasions, must have felt deeply impressed with the conviction that the Prince had Freemasonry at heart. (Loud and prolonged cheering.)

Bro. Le Gendre Starkie next proposed "The Earl de Grey and Ripon, M.W.G.M., the Earl of Carnarvon, M.W.D.G.M., and the other officers of the Grand Lodge." He said their G.M. would have been present that day had not imperative engagements detained him in London. The M.W.G.M. took a very deep interest in the Craft, and would appear amongst the brethren more frequently did not his high vocations and duties as one of Her Majesty's Ministers render it impossible for him to do so. (Hear, hear.) The D.G.M. had also requested him (Bro. Starkie) to say that he would have been present on that occasion had he not sailed on the previous day for the Mediterranean, which the brethren would doubtless think a good reason for his absence. (Laughter.) He (Bro. Starkie) thought that no better evidence of the fraternal spirit and principles of the Craft could be found than to see two noblemen politically opposed, joining in the most harmonious manner in the good and noble work of Freemasonry. (Loud cheers.) Bro. Starkie said he had now the greatest pleasure in giving the health of "Our newly-installed R.W.P.G.M., the Right Hon. Lord Skelmersdale." He used the word "our," because he (Bro. Starkie) considered himself as belonging to that province. If they regarded their newly-appointed chief either socially or Masonically, they only found qualities which they could admire, and which they would all do well to imitate. (Cheers.) In the responsible position he occupied as one of her Majesty's Ministers, he had exhibited high qualities in the performance of the duties of his office, and he was quite sure that in the manner he would fill the office to which he was now called he would endear himself to every member of the Order, not only in the province but in the whole country. (Cheers.) Freemasonry in England tabooed all questions of political, polemical, or religious scruples—in that respect drawing its principles from purer and more sacred fountains than was in other countries unhappily the case. (Cheers.) This province had done nothing more than its right and proper Masonic duty in paying honour to its new chief, who would, he had no doubt, in the discharge of the duties of his office, exhibit those many qualities which had distinguished him from boyhood. (Loud applause.) The newly-installed Provincial Grand Master had been invested with the clothing presented to their late lamented Provincial Grand Master, Sir Thomas G. Fermor-Hesketh, and he trusted and believed that that might be taken as an augury that he would prove a worthy successor to the late P.G.M. (Cheers.)

The toast was received with the utmost enthusiasm and full Masonic honours, led by Bro. G. Broadbridge, D.C.

Lord Skelmersdale, in rising to respond, was most enthusiastically received. He said it was extremely difficult for him to respond to the toast which they had drunk in such a hearty manner, and which had been proposed in far too flattering terms by Bro. Starkie. (No, no.) He only hoped that he might live to show that he would at least endeavour to fulfil their expectations; but he assured them that when he walked into the large room of the Town Hall, and saw there assembled the crowded mass of brethren, he, for the first time, felt the heavy responsibility which he had taken upon himself—felt how much would devolve upon him to advance Freemasonry in that province. (Hear, hear.) He felt what different elements existed in the body throughout the province, and how much would rest upon him in the endeavour to fuse those elements into thorough and complete Fraternity. (Cheers.) As far as lay in his power, he intended to do his duty; and though in this large province he might not be able to visit the lodges as regularly as he might wish, he hoped in a short time to enter upon a course of visits to every lodge in the province. (Cheers.) He intended to go through them one by one, find out their working, and look for brethren who would be most able to support him in his high office. (Loud applause.) He hoped his election of officers would give satisfaction, and concluded by thanking the brethren most heartily for the kind reception they had given to him, assuring them that he had been deeply moved by it, and that he should always look back upon that day as one of the most trying and touching he had ever passed through. (Cheers.)

Bro. Capt. Mott, in giving "The Health of the D.P.G.M. (the Hon. F. Stanley,) and the P.G. Wardens (Lord Lindsay and Major Wilson)," said, they could not be surprised that in the county of Lancashire the name of Stanley should be received with honour, because it had everywhere attained a high place in public estimation. In Lord Lindsay they had also one of the Crawfords of Balcarres—a name long known in Masonry—and known for years in Scotland. (Loud cheers.)

The Hon. F. Stanley and Lord Lindsay replied, the latter remarking that it was always their desire in Scotland to be in the most hearty fellowship with their English brethren, and he was certain that at some future time there would be a grand fusion of the Masonic bodies in the three countries. (Loud cheers.)

Lord Skelmersdale proposed "The Health of the Installing Master, Bro. Le Gendre N. Starkie, R.W.P.G.M., East Lancashire," observing that it would be many long years before the name of Starkie died out from Masonry, or from the remembrance of its connection with many other good works in this country. (Cheers.)

Bro. Starkie in responding, said his father was installed P.G.M. of East Lancashire in 1827, and continued to reign until 1865. (Cheers.) Having referred to his own Masonic training in West Lancashire, and to the fact that Lodge 32 had the proud distinction of having given three Provincial Grand Masters to the Craft, he concluded by thanking them for the manner in which they had received the toast.

The P.G.M. next gave "The Health of Lord de Tabley, P.G.M., Cheshire," to which his lordship replied, enlarging upon the charitable nature of the Order.

Bro. Starkie proposed the health of "His Worship the Mayor of Liverpool, Bro. Edward Samuelson, P. Prov. J.G.D., Cheshire," eulogising the manner in which his worship had dispensed his hospitality to them on this occasion in his capacity as the highest civic Magistrate of that great and wealthy town. This, he continued, had been a very auspicious day, and the quadruple "S" which formed part of the device on the chains which the Grand Masters wore round their necks was a happy augury of success. There were Bros. Samuelson, Skelmersdale,

P.G.M. for West Lancashire; Stanley, D.G.M.; and Starkie, P.G.M. of Cheshire. He looked upon this as an auspicious combination and as being propitious for the manner in which the duties of the office of P.G.M. would be performed by the newly-installed brother. (Cheers.)

The toast was received with Masonic honours.

The Mayor, said he considered that no one was more fitted to occupy the honourable position of chief magistrate than a Free and Accepted Mason. He did not say this in a spirit of egotism, but he was satisfied that through the tenets of Freemasonry, if carried out to the fullest extent, the Mayor of Liverpool ought to be a good man. He was not aware whether it was by accident or design that the Grand Lodge had been held in Liverpool that day, but it had been called to his remembrance that that was the anniversary of that great day when England poured out its thanksgiving to Almighty God for restoring to health the Past Grand Master of England, the Prince of Wales. (Cheers.) Such being the case, he felt that it was the duty of the Chief Magistrate of Liverpool to offer every facility in his power in order that these proceedings might be conducted in a spirit worthy of the occasion, because it was his duty not to appear in them as a brother Mason, but as representing the entire community of Liverpool. (Cheers.)

Bro. Pearson (ex-Mayor of Liverpool), in answer to repeated calls, expressed the pleasure he had in being present on that occasion, and complimented the Mayor for his thoughtfulness in giving his assistance towards making the installation of the P.G.M. successful.

Bro. W. Romaine Callender proposed "The Provincial Grand Officers, past and present," which was acknowledged by Bro. Alpess, P.G. Sec.

Bro. the Rev. H. Vernon, P.P.G.C. gave "The West Lancashire Masonic Educational Institution," which was coupled with the name of Bro. R. Wilson, the treasurer, who stated that the actual value of the institution was now about £9,700.

Bro. Captain Mott said, he did not intend to say anything in connection with that toast, but he felt bound to acknowledge the spontaneous generosity of the two brethren from London. Bro. F. Binckes, Secretary of the Boys' Institution, had just handed him the sum of five guineas to constitute himself a Life Governor; and Bro. George Kenning, proprietor of The Freemason, had now subscribed ten guineas for the same purpose. (Loud cheers.)

Bro. J. Beesley, W.M. 216, replied to the toast of the W.M.'s of the "Lodges in the Province," and Bro. Cooke proposed "The Ladies," which was responded to by Bro. S. White. During the evening an admirable selection of music was given by Mrs. Skeaf, Miss Barret, Bros. Busfield, T. J. Hughes, Haswell, and D. Jones, under the direction of Bro. Skeaf, who presided at the pianoforte.

ANNUAL FESTIVAL OF THE GLASGOW THISTLE AND ROSE LODGE, (No. 73.)

This lodge celebrated its one hundredth and seventeenth anniversary on Thursday, February the 27th, at the Waverly Hotel, the large Hall of which was tastefully decorated with flags and banners, kindly lent by several Masonic bodies. At 8 o'clock about fifty brethren, most of them accompanied by their wives or sweethearts, sat down to an excellent and substantial repast. Bro. G. McDonald, R.W.M. presiding, and Bro. W. Walton, Treasurer, in the absence of the S.W., acting as Croupier. After the cloth had been cleared, the Chairman gave "The Queen and the Craft," "The Prince of Wales and the rest of the Royal Family," "The Army, Navy and Volunteers." Bro. J. Stewart, P.M. replied in a humorous speech descriptive of the hardships endured by the Volunteers when reviewed in Edinburgh by the Queen, and in their camping expedition at Palloch, at the same time expressing his conviction that if ever called on they would be as ready for real service. The Chairman then gave "The Three Grand Lodges of England, Ireland, and Scotland," and called on Bro. J. Johnson, of 738, E.C., who thanked the brethren for the kind wishes expressed towards the three Grand Bodies, and to him as a very humble member of the English Constitution, by honouring him by intrusting him with the privilege of replying on behalf of what he would characterize as the three greatest bodies in the world. The Chairman then gave a brief address on the present position of the lodge, and expressed the great pleasure it had been to him, a comparatively young Mason, to have had the honour for the third time to be elected to preside over so old and influential a Lodge as No. 73, and to preside at this its one hundred and seventeenth anniversary, he then called on Bro. G. W. Wheeler to give some lines he had composed expressly for the occasion.

Bro. J. Bannerman gave the next toast, "The Prov. Grand Lodge of Glasgow," highly eulogising its officers for their attention to their duties, and their efforts in the cause of benevolence.

Bro. J. Balfour 332, P.G.D.C. replied, thanking the brethren for the kind manner in which they had received the toast, and the flattering way in which they had also received him as the representative of the P.G.L., it was true they had done something to uphold the honour of Masonry in the province, and had also laboured in the cause of benevolence, but he hoped to see a deal more done in this way, he hoped to see their charities placed on a firm basis like those of their sister kingdoms, England and Ireland, and in that object he knew he should have the sympathies and support of Lodge 73.

Bro. A. H. Mackay, D.M., then in a very humorous speech proposed "The Health of the Lord Provost, Magistrates, and Town Council of Glasgow."

The Croupier gave "Absent Brethren and Freemasons all over the World."

The Chairman "Deputations from Sister Lodges."

Bro. Sinclair, R.W.M. of St. Mungo, 27, replied, expressing the pleasure it had given them as visitors to be present at the one hundred and seventeenth anniversary of the "Thistle and Rose," his conviction of the good accruing to Masonry in general from the keeping up of this fraternal spirit amongst the lodges, and his hope that all present would visit St. Mungo, and partake of their hospitality in return for this kind reception of him.

The next toast, that of "The Ladies," was given by Bro. J. S. Ampleford, who had taken it at a few minutes' notice in consequence of the absence of the brother to whom it had been entrusted, but he proved quite equal to the occasion. While Bro. J. F. Hanbridge, the Secretary, in replying on behalf of the ladies, proved that he had been deeply imbued with their spirit, as his speech throughout was witty and eloquent.

Bro. T. Stewart, P.M., gave what might be considered the toast of the evening, "Prosperity to the Thistle and Rose Lodge, No. 73." In so doing, he briefly sketched the history of the lodge, stating that it first obtained a charter as the St. Paul's Lodge, but in 1761 they obtained permission to call it by its present name, since then it had had a course of almost unexampled prosperity, and still exhibited no symptoms of old age or decay.

Bro. Walton, Croupier, in replying said, that he as Treasurer could at any rate speak of its success financially since the funds had come into his possession, and if any one doubted its present prosperity let them look at its members with their happy faces, in their fine new clothing, and he must say that they should return their thanks to Bro. Kenning for making them all look so fine. He had sent their clothing not only up to the sample but even handsomer, and in order that the ladies may properly admire their new clothing, the material proof of their prosperity by looking at it during the ball, he would close his speech and then get to the ball.

The Chairman gave the "Strangers present," coupling with it Mr. Liskard, a gentleman, who that evening had contributed so much to their amusement, through the kind permissions of Bros. Owens and Adamson, at whose music hall he was engaged. Mr. J. Liskard in reply said, he had only one regret and that was that he could not address them as brothers, and in return for their friendly greeting give them back the Masonic grip, but this was a loss that he meant to remedy, he had often thought of joining the body, and his reception that night had determined him to delay no longer he then concluded with one of his favourite songs that he had sung before the Prince and Princess of Wales at Marlborough House.

The Final Toast was then given from the Chair and concluded this part of the programme which had been interspersed with songs from Bro. Pratt and Adamson, a Poem by G. W. Wheeler, and a Musical entertainment by the celebrated J. Liskard, the Musical Mammoth.

The Hall was then prepared for the dancers, about forty couple entered in the Grand March, the rich crimson aprons and sashes of the brethren contrasting finely with their black coats and afterwards in the mazes of the dances, blending finely with the lighter dresses of their fair partners. Altogether a very pleasant evening was spent by the brethren and friends of "old 73."

"The editor is a gentleman well-known to the readers of Fraser's Magazine, as well as to the Transatlantic world, and wields a ready, graceful, and fluent pen."—Morning Post. CROSBY'S BAL SAMIC COUGH ELIXIR. DISEASES OF THE LUNGS AND AIR-VESSELS. CROSBY'S BALSAMIC COUGH ELIXIR. Opium, Narcotics, and Spulveric too often invoked to give relief in Coughs, Colds, and all Pulmonary diseases. Instead of such fallacious remedies, which yield momentary relief at the expense of enfeebling the digestive organs, and thus increasing that debility which lies at the root of the malady, modern science points to CROSBY'S BAL SAMIC COUGH ELIXIR as the true remedy.

SELECT TESTIMONIAL. Dr. Roderic, Scarborough, author of the "Anti-Lancet," says: "I have repeatedly observed how very rapidly and invariably it subdued cough, pain, and irritation of the chest in cases of Pulmonary Consumption, and I can, with the greatest confidence, recommend it as a most valuable adjunct in an otherwise strengthening treatment for this disease." "This medicine, which is free from opium and quinine, not only allays the local irritation, but improves digestion and strengthens the constitution. Hence it is used with the most signal success in Asthma, Bronchitis, Consumption, Croup, Influenza, Night Sweats of Consumption, Quinsy, and all affections of the throat and chest." Sold in bottles at 1s. 6d., 3s. 6d., and 11s. each, by all respectable Chemists, and wholesale by Jas. M. Crosby, Chemist, Scarborough. * * * Travellers should read Crosby's Prize Treatise on "Diseases of the Lungs and Air-Vessels," a copy of which can be had gratis of all Chemists.

REPORTS OF MASONIC MEETINGS.

Craft Masonry.

LION AND LAMB LODGE (No. 192).—The last regular monthly meeting of this lodge took place at the Terminus Hotel, Cannon-street on Thursday, the 6th inst., presided over by Bro. F. Trott, W.M., the officers present being:—Bros. Geo. Abbott, S.W.; Geo. Newman, J.W.; W. Goodyear, P.M., Treasurer; J. G. Marsh, P.M., Secretary; Thos. Cohe, S.D.; Chas. Arkell, J.D.; E. Jones, I.G.; G. Parker, D.C. The remaining Past Masters present were Bros. J. J. Harris, E. King and G. Kenning. Bro. Henry Jarvis was raised to the degree of M.M., and the following gentlemen were initiated into the Order, viz., Messrs. Barclay, Perkins, J. G. Marsh, jun., W. Alfatt and E. Hunter. The ceremonies were worked by the W.M. in a perfect and satisfactory manner. Sundry business before the lodge having been disposed of, the lodge was closed in due form and adjourned. The brethren, numbering about seventy, then retired to a sumptuous banquet, served in the Pillar Room, in Bro. Spencer's well-known excellent style, and was presided over by Bro. Trott the W.M., who presented to the brethren the usual loyal and Masonic toasts, to which ample justice was done, the last toast of the evening bringing a most agreeable evening to a close. Amongst the members present were:—Bros. W. Figs, C. Cann, A. G. Marks, F. Fellowes, F. Baker, W. R. Baker, A. E. Bright, S. Haynes, T. Fisher, E. Taylor, Geo. Taylor, S. T. Lucas, W. Smale, S. Edwards, D. McVicar, J. Curle, T. Perom, W. Ramsey, J. Hyde, J. Kent, J. Elliott, A. C. Payne, W. F. Bates, C. Grainger, J. D. Fawcett, A. Lewis, R. G. Putnam, Chas. Selby, T. Layborn, H. Davis, B. Marsland, J. Cook, A. J. Garnet, W. Donne and H. Jarvis. The visitors present were:—Bros. David Evans, 28; W. Donald, 712; B. B. Brayshaw, W.M., 1076; W. Kindon, S.W., 1297; Chas. Jardine, J.W., 140; J. Cooper, 733; C. G. Hill, I.G., 1366; H. C. Soper, 704; J. A. Brading, 781; W. Hobbs, 1155; E. W. Garden, 949; Chas. Woodman, 157; Henry Dyne, 396; and Bro. Sidney Spencer, Belvedere Lodge and City Terminus Hotel.

TORQUAY—St. John's Lodge (No. 328).—The monthly meeting was held at the Masonic Hall, on Monday, March the 3rd, when there was a good attendance of upwards of 30, including four visitors, among whom were Bros. Higgins, an old and distinguished Provincial Officer for West Yorkshire, and Dr. Hopkins, P. Prov. G.S.W. for Warwickshire. At the urgent request of the W.M. and officers, the last named brother took the chair and opened the lodge in the first degree. The minutes of the previous meeting were read and confirmed. The lodge was then opened in the second and third degrees, and there being no ceremonies to perform, was closed down to the first degree. There was however an important duty mentioned on the circular of summons, no less than the presentation of a handsome P.M.'s, jewel to Bro. Watson, I.P.M. It was intended that this should be performed by the Rev. Bro. Bowden, P.M. and Chaplain, who, however, was prevented from attending by illness. Bro. Harland, P.M., therefore took the chair of W.M. and addressing Bro. Watson, paid a just tribute to his merits as a ruler in the Craft, in regard to his efficient working, his courtesy to the brethren, and specially his tact and judgment in guiding the lodge through times of trouble and difficulty, but still securing to himself the respect and good-will of the members by his impartiality and kindness. Though on previous occasions jewels had been presented to brethren who had rendered services, on their removal from the district, this was the first instance of such a presentation at the close of a year of office, but on all hands it was considered to have been most honourably merited. Bro. Watson replied with much effect but still with great emotion, owing to the heartiness with which the gift had been bestowed and the encomiums and marks of approval which had been so worthily expressed by Bro. Harland. A plan was propounded by Bro. Carkeek with a view to the presentation of a Masonic Surgical bed to the Torquay Infirmary. He proposed that a course of ten lectures on Freemasonry should be given by members of the Craft, in the hope that sufficient money would be raised by the sale of tickets for the course and by single admission fees. Some discussion ensued, and a Committee was appointed to make the necessary arrangements. The lodge was finally closed soon after 8 o'clock, and the brethren adjourned to the banquet, which was presided over by Bro. Richardson, W.M.

OXFORD.—Churchill Lodge (No. 478).—On the 3rd inst., the brethren of this lodge met at Alfred-street Masonic Hall. The chair was filled by the W.M., Bro. Lord Burleigh, (P. Prov. G. Sec. Oxon.) S.W., and Bro. E. M. Wakeman, as J.W. The meeting was well attended. Amongst others, Bro. Rev. A. B. Frazer the Grand Chaplain of England; Bro. R. J. Spiers, D.P.G.M.; Bro. Reginald Bird, (Prov. S.G.W. Oxon) W.M. of the Apollo University Lodge, and Bro. Nicolas Tindal, of the Argenta Lodge, Salt Lake City. The business was of a purely formal nature. The election of officers took place, when Bro. Rev. A. B. Frazer, Grand Chaplain, was elected to succeed Bro. Lord Burleigh as W.M. for the ensuing year, and Bro. F. P. Morrell, (P. Prov. G. Sec. Oxon) was elected to fill the office of Treasurer, in the room of the Deputy Provincial Grand Master. The brethren then adjourned for refreshment, and the proceedings were of a very festive nature, as Bros. Plowman, G. Gumbleton and Neville delighted the company with a variety of songs, and the Grand Chaplain was in his usual vein of eloquence.

FILEY.—Royal Lodge (No. 643).—The regular monthly meeting of the Royal Lodge, 643, was held at Ford's Hotel, Filey, on the 10th of February. After the general business of the lodge had been disposed of, Bro. Walter Fisher, P.S.W., was installed W.M. for the current year by P.M. Bro. J. Woodall Woodall, P.P.G.S.W. Old Globe, 200, who kindly attended for that purpose, and performed the interesting ceremony in his usual efficient manner. The newly installed Master then proceeded to invest his officers as under:—Bros. S. Rimmington, S.W.; R. Simpson, J.W.; H. Blanc, P.M., Chaplain; W. Hanks, P.M., Treas.; H. A. Darby, Sec.; C. Beck, S.D.; H. Simpson, J.D.; J. Cocks-worth, C. Reynolds, Stewards; W. Budd, I.G.; W. Jefferson, O.G. After the ceremony had been performed, the lodge was closed in the usual form, and the brethren adjourned to a most excellent banquet, provided by Bro. H. Kilby in his usual profuse and liberal manner. The newly installed W.M., Bro. Fisher, presided, and the lately invested S.W., Bro. Rimmington, occupied the vice-chair. After the cloth was drawn, the W.M. gave in succession the Queen and the Craft, His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales, P.G.M., the Princess of Wales, and all the Royal Family. The most noble the Marquess of Ripon, Grand Master of England; the Right Hon. the Earl of Zetland, P.G.M., the Right Hon. the Earl of Carnarvon, D.G.M., and Bro. I. P. Bell, D.P.G.M. Bro. Fisher then proposed, in a speech of great eloquence and Masonic feeling, the health of the Past Masters, alluding in terms of the warmest approbation to the praiseworthy manner in which they had severally performed their arduous duties when in office, and pointing them out as examples to be followed by those younger members of the lodge who might aspire to occupy that chair which they in turn had filled so gracefully. The next toast was that of the newly invested S.W., Bro. Rimmington, who replied in a very brilliant speech, pledging himself to use every exertion to promote the interests and well-being of the lodge, and he followed up his able reply by singing an excellent song in first-rate style, and which was greatly applauded. Bro. Long, I.P.M. and P.G.S.B., then proposed in his well-known witty and humorous style the health of the outgoing officers, thanking them for their very efficient support during his occupation of the Master's chair, and hoping that the newly invested officers would exert themselves to the utmost to uphold and sustain his successor. Bro. Hanks, Treasurer, returned thanks pithily but briefly. Bro. P.M. the Rev. J. Witford Taylor, gave the S.W. and Officers of the lodge, which was most ably replied to by the S.W., Bro. Rimmington, Bro. P.M. Dobson, in a most masterly speech, gave the Visiting Brethren, which called up Bros. Walshaw, Pencoek, Mervyn, and Smiles, all of the Old Globe, 200, who severally responded, making many pertinent remarks and observations on the great benefits arising from Freemasonry, and wishing every success and much prosperity to the Royal Lodge. Bro. Blane, the highly esteemed Chaplain of the lodge, was, to the great regret of the brethren, unavoidably absent, but his health having been most enthusiastically drunk, Bro. P.M. Taylor, eloquently and feelingly returned thanks for him, justly praising the worthy Chaplain for the warm interest which he took in Masonry, and for his untiring exertions to promote its general interests. Several other toasts having been given and duly responded to, the Secretary, Bro. H. Darby, rose and proposed that the health of Bro. Hanks, the respected Treasurer of the lodge, be drunk with all the honours, as the most useful member of the Royal Lodge, and as a brother who spared neither time nor trouble in giving the most efficient aid and valuable advice to every brother who required it. It is almost superfluous to add that Bro. Hanks, in responding, spoke most fluently and earnestly, giving much sound and reliable advice to the members of the lodge, and more especially to those who had but recently joined it. Bro. Mervyn, 200, in quaint and appropriate terms, gave the health of Bro. Cocks-worth, pointing him out as a genuine specimen of the true British farmer. Bro. Cocks-worth replied with much weight and feeling. Bro. Walshaw, 200, with a just appreciation of the good things that had been placed upon the table, proposed the health of Bro. Kilby, the worthy host, and that of his wife, the much esteemed hostess. Bro. Kilby made a very suitable and sensible reply on behalf of himself and wife, regretting that the weather had been so unpropitious as to deter many brethren from other lodges from putting in an appearance. The health of the Secretary having been drunk and duly responded to the Tyler's toast closed the proceedings of a most delightful and enjoyable evening, which had been much enhanced by some first-rate songs by Bros. Beck, Mervyn, Walshaw, Pencoek, and others, the gem of the whole being a splendid song by Bro. P.M. Dobson, who was in fine voice, and whose performance was loudly applauded. The brethren then separated without requiring the services of the local P.C. to point out the legal hour at which conviviality should cease.

BOSTON.—Franklin Lodge (No. 838).— Present:—Bros. Thomas Shaboe, W.M.; W. Pooles, S.W.; G. Jackson, J.W.; Ferguson, S.D.; Pearson, as J.D.; Dr. W. Wood, as I.G.; Radley, Treasurer; Allen, Secretary; Johnson, Tyler; and Past Masters Radley, Belton, Bland, Crowden, Bratley, Palmer, G. Young, C. Jackson, and E. J. Smith. The minutes were read and confirmed, the ballot was then taken for Mr. John R. Sator, brother of the W.M., and Mr. W. Challaus, and being unanimous, those two gentlemen were admitted into the lodge and initiated into Freemasonry in the eloquent and careful manner of the W.M., who afterwards briefly explained to the newly initiated brethren the tracing board in that degree. Bro. Radley then introduced the subject of the Boys' School, informing the brethren that a resolution was about to be adopted by the committee appointed to revise the laws of the two schools, which moved for the future reduce the number of votes procured by donations to half the quantity so obtainable. After explanation by Bro. Radley, and discussion by the brethren, it was proposed by Bro. Poole, S.W., and seconded by Bro. Bland, P.M., that this lodge do give £10 10s. out of its funds to make the W.M. a Vice-President of the Boys' School, providing that the remaining amount, together with £26 5s., already subscribed, be subscribed by the brethren. The lodge was then closed, and the brethren afterwards sat down to the usual monthly banquet, spending a most pleasant and instructive evening.

ALTRINCHAM.—Hanford Lodge (No. 1045).—The annual meeting of this young and flourishing lodge, numbering now seventy members, was held at the Town Hall, Altrincham, on Monday the 3rd inst., there was a large assemblage of Past Masters present, and visitors, to witness the installation of the W.M. The lodge was opened at 2.30, and Bro. Frank A. Church was passed to the degree of a F.C., after which the ceremony of the installation took place Bro. James, A. Birch, P.M., took the chair, as Installing Master. The W.M., elect, Bro. John Siddeley, was presented by Bro. Kirk W.M. The Secretary having read the usual obligation and the W.M. elect having assented thereto the brethren below the rank of Installed Master retired. Bro. Siddeley received the obligation and retired with due tests of merit. The Board of Installed Masters was then opened, there being twenty-four present, and Bro. Siddeley having been admitted in due form was installed into the chair of K.S. The Board of Installed Masters was closed. The W.M. then appointed, and Bro. Birch invested, the following brethren as officers for the ensuing year. Bros. J. H. Kirk, I.P.M.; H. Kenyon, S.W.; Robt. Fergusson, J.W.; The Rev. R. Hodgson, P.G.C. Chaplain; Mort, P.M., Treasurer; R. Newhouse, P.M., Secretary; R. Baker, S.D.; J. Burgess, J.D.; E. Simpson, P.M.O.; J. S. Owen, I.G.; and Bro. Worthington, Tyler. The entire ceremony was listened to by more than seventy brethren with the greatest amount of pleasure, as it was rendered by Bro. Birch in a manner seldom heard, being a comparatively young Mason (initiated 1865) he can render the ritual in a manner rarely equalled and seldom surpassed. After the after the lodge was closed the brethren sat down to a splendid banquet, provided by Bro. Harvey, the newly Installed W.M. in the chair. Justice being done to the dinner, the W.M. proposed the usual loyal and Masonic toasts, and in proposing the health of the Queen expressed the great pleasure they all felt that this year they had not, as on the occasion of their last festival, to sympathise with the Sovereign in moments of domestic anxiety, and trusted it would be long before sickness again invaded the Royal household. The health of the newly Installed W.M. was proposed by Bro. Kirk, P.M., in a happy and pleasant manner, he referred in warm terms to the way Bro. Siddeley had filled every office in the lodge, and did not doubt his year of office would be prosperous. Bro. Birch proposed the Masonic Charities in a very eloquent speech, which was responded to by Bro. Forshaw, who said he could not speak, but could give, and offered Bro. Birch £25 for the Boy's School. All the other toasts were duly drunk and replied to, and the brethren separated, well pleased with each other and everything, at 11 o'clock.

Younghusband, the two Warden's chairs being ably filled by Bros. Terry and R. Shackell. Bro. Ballantyne having presented Bro. W. J. Woodman, Bro. Younghusband, in a very able and fluent manner, installed him into the chair of K.S. Bro. Woodman then appointed and invested his officers as follows:—Bros. Dudden, S.W.; Cattlin, J.W.; Rev. R. J. Hugh Ballantyne, P.M. 754, to mark their appreciation of his truly Masonic conduct, firmness and urbanity of manners, and zeal evinced for the prosperity of the lodge, 4th March, 1873." Votes of thanks to Bros. Younghusband and Terry were passed, and the brethren adjourned to a first class banquet, provided in excellent style by Bro. Tullett, to which some 50 sat down and did ample justice. The usual loyal and Masonic toasts were given, those of the I.P.M., Bro. Ballantyne, "The Visitors," responded by Bro. Bellaby, "The Masonic Charities," by Bro. Terry, and the officers, with which was coupled the name of Bro. R. Shackell, were all particularly well received. The brethren separated at an early hour, much pleased with what they had seen and heard that day.

The lodge was opened in form in the first degree, and the minutes of the last meeting were read and confirmed. A ballot was taken for Bro. Smith, 3, I.C. as a joining member, and for Sergeant Olphert, R.E. a candidate for initiation, which proved satisfactory in each case. Bros. O'Leary and Brown, candidates for the F.C. degree, were then examined respecting their proficiency in the former degree, which proving satisfactory, they were entrusted, and retired. The lodge was opened in the second degree, and Bros. O'Leary and Brown were passed to that degree; Bro. Carnegie giving the charge, and the W.M. putting round the questions for the information of the newly passed brethren, and also explaining the tracing board of the second degree. The lodge was closed to the first degree, and Sergeant Olphert was initiated into the mysteries of the Order. On the proposition of Bro. C. Carnegie, five guineas were voted from the Charity Fund of the lodge for the list of Bro. R. Eve, P.P.G.S.W., Hants, who is one of the Stewards for the Annual Festival of the Boys' School on the 12th inst. Two pounds were voted to the widow of a deceased brother, on the proposition of the Worshipful Master. Some other business having been transacted, the lodge was closed in peace, harmony, and brotherly love, about nine p.m.

STOCKWELL LODGE (No. 1339).—A meeting of the above lodge was held at the Half Moon, Herne Hill, on Thursday, 20th February, 1873.

There were present:—Bros. Wm. Worrell, W.M.; C. Pain, S.W.; Brighter, J.W.; Klirck, J.D.; Francis, P.M., Sec.; also Bros. Benham, Bowyer, Coe, Hinksman, Basnett, Webbe, R., and J. Knibbs. The occasion of the meeting was to install Bro. Brighter, J.W., the Master for the ensuing year, the present S.W., having wished to retain his office for a further term. Bro. Brighter had been unanimously elected to that important office. The ceremony was performed by Bro. Worrell, the outgoing Master, the addresses being impressively given and the brethren who were aware it was a maiden effort on the part of the worthy P.M., appeared much gratified with the ceremony. Bro. Brighter appointed his officers for the year viz. Bros. Pain, S.W.; Benham, S.D.; Klirek, J.W.; Basnett, J.D.; and Francis, Sec. Bro. Worrell was then presented with a jewel for past services, and the W.M., as is the custom in this lodge, presented the lodge with a handsome silk banner of his arms and mottoe "clariore tenebris." After some further business the lodge was closed and the brethren sat down to a banquet in a most chaste and elegant repast that reflected much credit on the host, Bro. Coles. After the usual loyal and Masonic toasts, the worthy P.M. proposed "The Health of the W.M." paying a deserved tribute to his capabilities. The W.M. returned thanks in feeling terms, and eloquently expressed his thanks to the brethren of the lodge for the honour they had done him. The toast of "The Initiates" was given and duly responded to by Bro. Mills, who was initiated at a previous emergency meeting. The W.M. gave "The Health of the Visitors," expressing his thanks for the compliment they had paid him in being present at his initiation, he was particularly grateful for the attendance of his friend, Bro. Fraser, P.P.G.S. whom he had known and whose friendship he had enjoyed for many years, he, the W.M., being quite a boy when he first made the acquaintance of Bro. Fraser, and now Bro. Fraser had specially journeyed many miles to be present at the installation. He was sure that the brethren of the Stockwell Lodge gave him a hearty and cordial welcome. Bro. Fraser returned thanks in happy terms, and the toast was also replied to by the other visitors. "The toast of the Installing Master" was received with acclamation and duly responded to by Bro. Worrell, Bro. Francis also replied to the toast of the Secretary and P.M. "The Officers" was then given and responded to, and the Tyler's toast was the finale to a most happy evening, which had been enlivened by the musical abilities of the W.M., Bro. Worrell and others.

EARL DE GREY.—The last telegram from Cannes, dated March 11, says: "A good night. Symptoms continue favourable." The Marquis of Ripon, writing to Sir Bruce Seaton on the 10th, reports that Lord de Grey was going on very well, but three weeks must pass on before he can be considered out of danger. Consequently, until that period has elapsed, the Marquis of Ripon cannot leave Cannes for London.

"I cannot express to you my gratitude for the cure your Pain Killer has wrought on me. I had rheumatism all over my body, accompanied with headache, so severe that I could get no sleep. As my doctor seemed to do me no good, my friends induced me, as a last resort, to try the Vegetable Pain Killer, and I am thankful to say that I am now in perfect health, and again at business.—JAMES ALSTON, Goosnagarh, September, 1871.—To Perry, Davis & Son, London, W.C."

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS.—The World is a hard place enough to make one's way through without illness, yet somewhere or other disease is ever rife, and everywhere its surest opponent, this purifying medicine is to be found and should always be handy to parry and turn the first attack of the enemy. When symptoms of sickness first set in, they may be easily subdued by this grand remedy, which gives great and prompt relief to every oppressed organ or disordered function, these pills regulate and strengthen digestion, more readily, more efficiently and with more certainty than any other combination of drugs, be it ever so scientifically prescribed. Nothing can exceed the ability of Holloway's medicine to secure natural functional action.

ROYAL MASONIC INSTITUTION FOR BOYS.

The 75th anniversary festival of this Institution was celebrated on Wednesday evening at the Freemasons' Tavern. The chairman of the day was His Grace the Duke of St. Albans, Provincial Grand Master of Lincolnshire, who was supported on his right by the Right Hon. Lord Leigh, Provincial Grand Master of Warwickshire, and on his left by Col. F. Burdett, Provincial Grand Master of Middlesex. There were also present a great number of Grand Officers and of Provincial Grand Officers.

The brethren who attended from Provincial and London Lodges numbered about 300, and many ladies also graced the festival with their presence. It had been announced that an endeavour would be made to wipe off the debt of £6,000 hanging over the school, and it will be seen from the list of subscriptions announced below that the stewards' lists more than justified the desire entertained. But it must be remembered that brethren should not relax their exertions to obtain subscriptions because the current year's expenses, which are very large to maintain 120 boys, have to be met, in addition to the clearing of the debt.

The dinner was admirably served by Bro. Francatelli, and a general opinion was expressed that the improvement in this particular was a marked one. When the repast had been freely partaken of, grace was sung by the vocalists engaged, and the speeches in honour of the many Masonic notabilities who are never forgotten on these occasions, were delivered. In giving the first toast, "The Queen,"

The Chairman said: We had it on the high authority of the representative of the United States last August that our Queen is looked upon on both sides of the Atlantic as the embodiment in her example of all those virtues which make our homes dear. I would only say that in any assembly of Englishmen the toast at this time will be welcome, but in an assembly of Masons the toast of their Queen, the daughter of a Mason, the mother of a Mason, in our Royal brother the Prince of Wales (hear, hear), the mother-in-law of a Mason, in our illustrious brother, Frederick, Prince of Prussia, would be equally well received, but she has this further claim on this occasion to our respect, our loyalty, and our devotion, that she has, ever since her reign commenced, been the ardent patroness and supporter of this Institution. Under these circumstances, I can scarcely suppose any further words will be required from me to make you receive with that enthusiasm which I believe thoroughly in all parts of this city pervades the community, her name. Love and loyalty towards the throne would always make it acceptable, and believing that that sentiment fills your breasts, I give you "The Health of Her Majesty the Queen, the Patroness of the Royal Masonic Institution for Boys." (Cheers.)

The toast having been drunk, was followed by the rendering by the vocalists of the National Anthem.

The Chairman: It is my privilege to give you now the toast of "The Most Worshipful the Grand Master, the President of the Institution, Lord Ripon." I believe that everyone in this room must regret his absence from among us to-night. I greatly regret it myself, and I believe you all regret it, the more from the knowledge of the cause of it—the illness, and the unhappy accident that led to it, of his only son, in the South of France. I feel that I am expressing the feeling of every brother in this room when I say that throughout the Masonic Craft in England there has gone forth but one voice, and that a voice of deep sympathy with our popular Grand Master, in the sad distress which has come upon him at this very critical time. Brethren, I give you "The Health of our Most Worshipful Grand Master, Lord Ripon, President of this Institution."

The Chairman: I have now to give you "The Health of the Earl of Zetland," who was so long our Most Worshipful Grand Master, and who did such admirable service in the past. I have at the same time to propose to you "The Health of His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales, Past Grand Master." I feel that this toast requires no words from me to render it acceptable to this assemblage.

The toast was drunk with the usual loyal enthusiasm.

Bro. F. A. Philbrick—My Lord Duke, my lords, and brethren, I have the honour to ask this assemblage to drink "The Health of our Right Worshipful the Deputy Grand Master, the Earl of Carnarvon, and the rest of the Grand Officers, present and past." In the Earl of Carnarvon we have a Deputy under our Most Worshipful Grand Master of whom the Craft is justly proud; and in the Grand Officers who have graced this festival with their presence we have a number of brethren whose support and countenance are of the utmost value to our Institution. To see brethren in those distinguished positions rallying round one of the great charities of our order—a charity which everyone who bears the name of Mason may be justly proud, is an advancement of the charity itself and an example to all who hold any position among us. And, therefore, my lord, I venture to propose that which I am sure this assemblage will accept with enthusiasm—"The Health of the Right Worshipful the Deputy Grand Master, the Provincial Grand Masters, and the rest of the Grand Officers."

Col. Burdett: My Lord Duke and brethren, I assure you I feel under peculiar difficulties in attempting to respond to the toast which has just been so ably given by our Brother Philbrick, and so kindly responded to by every brother of the order now present. I feel that I am attempting to respond to a toast which comprises an immense body, comprehending all those who influence the great Craft of which we are so proud to be members. I have, first of all, to return you my very sincere thanks for the Earl of Carnarvon, for the warmth with which his health has been received. We all, I know, regret that he has not been able to be with us, but we do not forget him, although he is absent. We know that though he is absent his heart is with us, and I believe that all the Grand Officers under his control, and those who are associated with him, are equally with us in heart. We all are associated together in the firm desire to do our duty, and whether we are present or absent, we always have the same wish to benefit the Craft. You are all aware of the duties the Grand Officers have to perform, whether on these occasions, in Grand Lodge, or in the provinces over which they preside. I believe they are all appreciated, and they feel very much indeed the kind feelings that are exhibited towards them by all the brethren. In their name, therefore, and in my own, I return you their warmest thanks.

Bro. F. Binckes then came forward and said, my Lord Duke, there are two prizes which are annually presented at this festival. I need hardly add that the great mass of the prizes are presented at the Institution itself on the 8th of July; but there are two particular prizes which are always presented at our anniversary festival by the chairman, one is the silver medal awarded by the Institution to that boy who has manifested the greatest amount of good conduct, and the other prize given by our most worthy and revered Bro. Edward Cox, called the Canonbury Prize, given to the boy who is elected by the unbiassed votes of his school-fellows. I think those two prizes speak for themselves. I will not occupy your time in expatiating upon them. I shall, therefore, content myself by merely introducing the two recipients to your Grace, William L. Crampton, the recipient of the Institution's silver medal for good conduct, and Frederick Cottmann the recipient of the Canonbury medal. I can no longer regard those two youths as inmates of the school because they have just left us, having made their first successful attempt towards their future progress in life. (Cheers.)

The Chairman then presented the prizes to the two recipients.

Bro. J. W. Luft, Steward for the Province of Devon, said, it is immensely gratifying to me to see a boy belonging to my province the successful competitor for one of these prizes. I had the pleasure to use very great exertions to get him into the school, and as he has so honoured my province I shall be most pleased to present him with a guinea. (Cheers.)

The Chairman: Brethren, when I look at the list of illustrious brethren who have previously filled this chair, I can scarcely feel otherwise than nervous in approaching the toast of the evening. I may say that I am almost unknown to London Masonry.—(No, no,)—though perhaps only as presiding over a distant province. Yet I would ask you to regard not the man, but the manner of my words, to look to what we all have at heart, the prosperity and the future success of the Royal Masonic Institution for Boys. (Hear, hear.) Ladies and brethren, I am afraid I must detain you a certain time, as I think it is good for the Institution to place before you certain, what may seem dry, statistics; but I promise you I shall be as short as I can, to enable you afterwards more to enjoy the most excellent music which the Stewards of this evening are providing for us. Brethren, it was 1798 that this spark was first lighted which has since illuminated the Masonic world. In the first instance, in 1798, it had twenty-five boys who were clothed and educated by our brethren. It was at the jubilee in the reign of George the Third, this number was increased to fifty. By gradual progress to 1851 there were seventy boys; and I may here observe that up to 1855 these boys were educated in schools adjacent to the homes of their parents. All the expenses of their education were defrayed by the Brotherhood; but there was no Masonic Boys' School at that time. In the same year, 1855, a house was purchased at Wood Green, and in 1856 the first experiment was made of giving a local home for the Masonic Boys' School. (Hear, hear.) At that time twenty-five boys were admitted, which left forty-five boys still to be educated under the former principle—namely, that they received the money payment, and not the education. This experiment proved so successful and the encouragement was so great that the existing building was commenced, and all of the seventy boys were brought under one management. It was in 1863 that it was determined to provide fuller accommodation, not only for those who were educated by the Institution; but for an increased number, seeing that the applications were greatly on the increase. The foundation-stone of the new building was laid in that year, viz., in 1863, and in 1865 the structure was completed. In years of later date the boys who were educated, clothed, and maintained, were increased in number from seventy to 115, and at the last Quarterly Court in January of the present year, the number was further increased to 125. (Cheers.) In addition to this number there were three boys in the Institution under purchase by perpetual rights, and sixteen boys were also admitted by payment of one hundred and fifty guineas. So that there are at present 144 boys enjoying the benefit of education at the Royal Masonic Institution for Boys. I may mention that since the infant efforts of our brethren in 1798 the large number up to the present time, of 1198 boys have enjoyed the blessings of education at the hands of this Institution (cheers). At the election in April next there are 69 candidates of whom 19 will be elected. The school enjoys great popularity among the Craft, as is evidenced by the numerous applications there are for admittance. During the last eleven years, I may inform the brethren, the Craft has subscribed £90,000 towards this Institution, which, I need not say from a position of great obscurity and want of means has been raised to one of the best educational institutions that we have. I understand that a most admirable and suitable building has been erected, that the general convenience of the boys in every way has been studied; and it is important that I should state that at the age at which boys are usually admitted is eight years, and that they receive the advantages of the Institution up to fifteen-and-a-half. It is to be extended to sixteen. I mentioned to the Secretary the question of scholarships, and I cannot, but, from my own experience at the University, equally impress upon those present, and who take an interest in these schools foresee the greatest advantage which would be bestowed upon the scholars if it were in any way possible to allow boys when they leave these schools to gain certain distinctions in money which would enable them to continue their education in the higher educational institutions—the Universities—(hear, hear)—without being obliged to break it off and to take to everyday life, and mingle in commercial affairs. The money that is required for the demyships at Cambridge, in the Universities under the present system is not very large and if you were enabled to offer to the cleverest boy at these schools the means to go to the University, I think you would be conferring the greatest benefit upon him; and we should reap our reward by seeing the crowning efforts of education which was begun years ago, and at the same time be conferring a national benefit. It is well also that I should bring before this meeting that this Institution differs from the other Masonic Institutions, viz., the Girl's, and the Aged Freemasons, in this, that it possesses no funded property, but is entirely, with the exception of the grant which it receives from Grand Lodge, dependent upon the individual efforts of the brethren every year. I need not say that this Institution enjoys the confidence of the Craft; most of those present know its working better than I do. We all know the energy of the Secretary, and the care and attention which the Board bestow on it. We have seen this evening two admirable examples of the result of that assistance which we have been enabled to afford to deserving cases, in extending to them that which fits them to commence and continue the struggle of life. Brethren, I feel that I may have but imperfectly preferred the claim of the Institution, but I feel that you know the benefit which this Institution generally is giving to the Craft, not only in the metropolis but in the provinces. I speak for the province to which I belong—Lincolnshire—from which there are many brethren I see sitting round me (hear, hear). I have received the greatest kindness from the Officers of that province. We have sent up many boys, and I believe we have on every occasion been most satisfied with the care and attention which have been paid them, and with the education they have received. Brethren, I will not detain you any longer, but will give you from the very bottom of my heart my good wishes for the prosperity of the Boys' School, and I have to couple with the toast the name of our brother, George Plucknett, the Treasurer. (cheers).

The toast having been drunk, Lord Leigh called for "one cheer more for the two lads who had won prizes," which was duly given.

Bro. G. Plucknett: My Lord Duke and brethren, I beg on the part of the Institution to thank you for the cordial manner in which you, my lord have proposed, and you, brethren, have responded to the toast of "Prosperity to the Institution," and for the honour that you have done me in associating my name with that toast. I regret very much that the brother who would have responded to this is no longer with us. He was so intimately connected with this Institution and others of a similar character, he was so well-known to the Craft in general, that his loss cannot but be sincerely felt. However, brethren, it is my duty to express to you gratitude of the Institution for your good wishes. The Institution is doing its work effectively and well; it has the most careful superintendence; but I may add that it is capable of doing more good than it has; and the Craft I am sure will never be satisfied until they have filled those beds which are vacant at the present time. There is no reason to think it can be otherwise, because you have a most able Committee, an indefatigable and enthusiastic Secretary, and they all do their utmost to make the Institution, as I believe it will be, one of the most perfect of its kind. I assure you as far as my humble services go they will be devoted to render all the assistance in my power to make the Institution perfect.

Bro. Binckes continued, there are a large number of lists not yet to hand, on many of which I know there are sums of money of considerable amount. The announcement of the totals will be as follows; but before I give you them I may be allowed to say, some of the lists may not quite realize the expectations of our good friends who have we hope a very successful festival to take place in May. We meet this evening with a great success, and I feel confident that this is the turning point in the fortunes of this Institution. It is a happy coincidence that your Grace presides over us. I remember the Duke's motto, "I am here," and when I look at your Grace's motto, I consider it a most happy omen. Your Grace's motto is auspicium melioris avi, and I think we have now better things in store for the Boys' School. I will now announce the result of the Stewards' lists.

Nineteen lists not yet received.

The announcement was received with loud cheers.

Lord Leigh: Right Worshipful Sir and brethren, it is with very great pleasure that I rise to propose the next toast which has been entrusted to my care, and I am quite sure that it is a toast that will be most warmly received by every brother present. A brother early in the evening said most justly, that we brethren of the Craft were proud of our Masonic Institutions. I think, indeed, that we have every reason to be proud of those Institutions, as I believe most sincerely that there are no better schools in the kingdom than we can boast of. But it must be borne in mind that those schools cannot be kept up without very great expense, and we have to depend very much indeed on the support we receive at these annual meetings. The Boys' Institution especially requires, as my noble brother in the chair stated, support from the individual members of the Craft, inasmuch as it has only or mainly to depend upon the individual exertions of the brethren. I think then that you have done most wisely in selecting so popular a member of the Craft to preside over your annual festival this day as the Right Worshipful Provincial Grand Master of Lincolnshire. My noble brother stated that he was not known in the Craft in London, but he very modestly said he was only known in his own province. My noble brother did not do himself justice. I believe there are few members of the Craft more widely known than the Right Worshipful Provincial Grand Master of Lincolnshire; and I can only say I congratulate you here on securing his services to-day, and I congratulate him on his able presidentship. I ask you therefore to drink to the "Health of his Grace the Duke of St. Alban's."

The Chairman: I have to thank my kind brother on my right, and you, for the very kind way in which the toast has been proposed and accepted. I shall leave this chair with the greatest satisfaction, feeling that we have reversed the old proverb of the straw breaking the camel's back, and that our exertions have now and for ever cleared the Masonic Institution for Boys from debt, unless, indeed, another wing at some future time shall be built, for which a new debt will be incurred, and I suppose the coming race will clear it off with greater expedition than we have. But, joking apart, I think it is always a pleasure when one leaves an assembly of friends and brethren who have received him in the kindest possible way, and goes home with the satisfaction that whatever anxieties one has had they have been crowned with success. I can only say that I shall look back on this evening with the greatest pleasure and satisfaction. I return you, brethren, my cordial thanks for the honour you have done me. I came among you without for a moment hesitating, determined to do my best for the Institution. I thank you, my noble brother; I thank you all heartily for the way in which those endeavours have been met, and I have no doubt that the exertions of our worthy Secretary will soon bring a deserved success.

Bro. J. R. Stebbing: Brethren, perhaps this is the only Institution in England following the example of what has been done to-night, and recently was done, under the presidency of H.R.H. the Prince of Wales, and will be in a few weeks, in reference to the Girls' School, repeated. There is no other instance in our country where every year there is collected very nearly, as there will be to-night, £20,000 in the year in the cause of charity. It is one of the brightest instances in connection with our Institution that however the world may condemn our secrecy, and however unkindly they may speak of the Freemasons, at all events, there is no person with a right hearted disposition but will gladly give the palm of superiority to the exertions we make in the cause of charity, the care we take of our old men and our old women, and how we educate our young. Your Grace, this cannot be done without the assistance of many active members of the Craft—the Vice-Presidents, who can only reach that honour by paying fifty guineas a-piece, the Trustees who take care of the money, and the Committee, who give not only their money, but their time, to help these Institutions, are all mixed up with the success of these proud monuments of Masonic benevolence, and it is the health of those liberal, public, charitably-disposed people that I have to propose to the meeting to-night. In so doing, your Grace, I must pay a passing tribute to the peculiar excellence of the charity of the Boys' School, and with that remark I should not at this late hour detain you longer. We provide for the old Mason in his distress and old age; we provide for his widow when she has no brother to protect her; we provide for the girls, and educate them, and give them the means of earning their subsistence; but, with regard to the boys' school, we give these poor children maintenance and education, and we enable them, as I say with great pride and satisfaction, as has often been the case, we give them an education and a position by which they are enabled to provide for their own advancement as they grow into manhood—to take a position in society, to help on their helpless brothers, and their sisters, to support their widowed mothers in their decline of life, and by this charity, the Boys' School, they realise again the position that their fallen fathers once held, and raise their heads again in society as brothers and Masons. It was not, your Grace, upon my list, but I see included under the Vice-Patrons of this Institution every Vice-Patron—and they are very numerous—brethren who must have given one hundred guineas to the charity—many have given more—and when you are drinking in your enthusiasm the men that pay and the men that work for this Institution, do not forget the Vice-Patrons, and when in preparation for the next year's meeting you have to consider your duty and your obligations, recollect that by every pound you give to the Boys' School you are enabling some boy to recover the position in life held by his father, and you will be doing a good service to your own heart, pleasing to yourself and blessed by the brethren. Your Grace, I omitted to say that the brother who will return thanks for this toast is a brother who has in love and ardour devoted his whole life to Masonry, and that brother is

John Hervey, our Grand Secretary. (Cheers.)

Bro. Hervey—My Lord Chairman and brethren, my name has been proposed in connection with the last toast, and I do not hesitate for one moment to attempt to return thanks for the Vice-Presidents, the Trustees, and the Committees of this society. After the eloquent speech which you have heard, I am sure you will not expect me to detain you for any length of time to return thanks for the toast which has been proposed by Bro. Stebbing in terms which you would be only too glad if they could be repeated. I can only say, in responding to his toast, that I believe sincerely that the Vice-Presidents and the other brethren who have been associated in this toast do their utmost to promote the welfare of the school, to forward its interest, and to ensure its prosperity, as far as lies in their power. Brethren, the Vice-Presidents have given their money, the Trustees give not only their money but their trust, and if I may venture to recur to one name which has been mentioned this evening, I think you will say that the Trustees of this charity have done their duty to it most religiously and most generously. (Cheers.) I refer to Bro. Cabbell, who for a long series of years has been at the service of this school. He has this evening given his forty-seventh donation of fifty guineas, in furtherance of its objects. Bro. Stebbing has alluded to the manner in which the Committees of this Institution give not only their time but their money; and I may more readily allude to the services of the House Committee, and the manner in which they devote themselves to the benefit of this school. The House Committee meet every month; they go down to the school; they see everything that is carried on, and take care not only that it is done effectively, but in the most remunerative manner. They do their utmost to see that everything is carried out to the best advantage. It is very easy for brethren to give their money to a charity, but it is not so easy to give their time. I am sure you will all appreciate the services the House Committee renders when you consider that for twelve times in the year they go down a whole day to the schools of this Institution, not to mention the other days they sit on other committees. I will not detain you longer, but return you my best thanks for your kindness in drinking this toast. (Cheers.)

Bro. H. Browse: Brethren, it has been entrusted to my care, to propose the next toast "The sister Charities." In doing so it is not necessary I should trespass long upon your time, because the subject is equally well-known with those we have been speaking of. Bro. Hervey told you that these charities are equally well-supported as the Boys' School. It is only necessary that I should tell you the facts about this. We had during the last year, occasion to change the Secretary of the Benevolent Institution, which was founded in 1840. Bro. Farnfield, who discharged most effectively and energetically the duties of Secretary, for 30 years and upwards, by affliction was obliged to retire; and his place has been filled up by a brother who I feel confident will merit all your approbation.

Bro Terry: The festival of that Institution, was held in this hall a fortnight ago, and we witnessed the beneficial effects of our Institution under the presidentship of H.R.H. the Prince of Wales, by the large amount of £7,000, which was collected. The Girls' School, unfortunately, in the same year had its Secretary afflicted to so great an extent, that it was necessary he should resign. He had filled the office of Secretary for 11 years, having succeeded Bro. Crews, and that success of the Institution was greatly enhanced by their administration. The Girls' School we see in a very flourishing condition, under the wise and just administration of the Officers, and particularly their Secretary. I therefore have much pleasure in stating to you that these charities are now progressing most favourably and with great and good results, equal to that which has preceded; and I entertain no doubt whatever that under the present administration they will succeed. I am a member of both Institutions, and am on the Committees of both, and I am perfectly satisfied that they are progressing favourably. All do their duty most righteously and religiously; they administer the funds of the Institution with justice while they do it with liberality, and are anxious still to extend their benefits to those outside the pale of the Institution. There are still many knocking at our doors and wishing to be admitted. We have unfortunately, many on the list who cannot be admitted, at the next election in April. And, therefore, while they are thankful for the support already given, they yet hope to receive from the Craft future support. I cannot sit down sir, without saying how deeply we are indebted to your Grace in the Boys' School. I hope this Institution will not long be behind the sister Institution. I hope it will share the prosperity of the other, and have something in the funds; but when fifty candidates are knocking at the door—we have sixty-nine in April and only nineteen can be admitted—we do sincerely trust that the Craft will help us, so that we shall be able to open our doors and admit many more of those who are clamouring for the privileges of the Boys' School.

With these remarks at this late hour, I shall content myself by proposing "The sister Institutions," and I will couple with that, the name of the newly-elected Secretary of the Girls' School, Bro. Little.

Bro. Little: It is to me a very gratifying thing to have to return thanks for the Royal Masonic Institution for Girls. I do so with heartfelt pleasure, and the more so, because I have the satisfaction of offering my humble congratulations to His Grace upon the magnificent success which has attended this festival of the Boys' School. I am sure every brother in this room will re-echo with me the idea that among the charities, we have nothing but a generous rivalry, and we are all pleased to find the cloud of debt that has hitherto hung over the Boys' School, is now about to be entirely extinguished by the liberality of the brethren. I am sure, brethren, it is no wish of ours that the Boys' School should have to labour under a load of debt, on the contrary we are willing that the charities should go hand in hand together, and uphold the prestige of the Craft. My Lord Duke, I have to thank you for coupling my name with the toast. I have to thank your Grace on behalf of the Girls' School, and I have to thank you on behalf of Bro. Terry, and I have now simply to bespeak, brethren, your continued support for the Girls' School. Its festival is on the 14th of May when Lord Skelmersdale will take the chair, and from the number of Stewards we have on that occasion, I think we shall shew to the world at large that charity is the great characteristic of Freemasons.

The Chairman: I have to propose to you "The Board of Stewards, and the President of the Board of Stewards, our Bro. Lord Leigh." You will all agree with me that they have done their work well and that their arrangements have been crowned with thorough success. Before we part we cannot but return them our best thanks for the exertions they have made on our behalf. In drinking their health will be best shewn the very grateful feelings we have towards them. The high office they have undertaken involves, I think, great labour and we should be thankful to them for it, especially to Lord Leigh who has undertaken another duty that of President. I give you "The Health of the Board of Stewards, and the President, Lord Leigh.

Lord Leigh: I feel that in rising to respond to this toast, I ought not to be placed in that position, for that office ought to have devolved upon the excellent acting President who has done all the work—I allude to our excellent brother Alexander J. Duff Filer. When I was asked to accept the office of President, I said that that office must be an honorary one. Living as I do one hundred miles from town it was perfectly impossible that I could fulfil the arduous duties that my noble brother has alluded to. When I was told that the Acting President would be Bro. Alex. Filer, I felt assured that the duties of President could not be in better hands, and that I might rest assured they would be carried out in the best possible manner. I have now only to ask the brethren whether my expectations have not been fully justified, when we have had this evening a most successful festival—not only have the creature comforts been well attended to by Bro. Filer for the brethren, but our wives and daughters, who I see gracing the gallery, have been well looked after by Bro. Filer. That function of Bro. Filer, I envy him. I only wished when I came in this evening that Bro. Filer had deputed to me the duty of looking after the ladies in the gallery; but he took very good care not to do so, and late in the evening Bro. Filer asked me if he had done his duty (laughter). Brethren, most sincerely I thank you, and I congratulate you all on the successful festival we have had this day.

Bro. Filer: My Lord, it has been suggested to me that I ought to say something after the very kind expressions you have made. Allow me to say, in the whole course of my life I never performed a more agreeable duty than of acting for your Lordship, a nobleman so highly esteemed and respected throughout the Masonic world. Allow me to say, that the Stewards in entering upon their duties determined to do their best, and to feel that they have done it to your Lordship's satisfaction is the greatest reward you can give them. The Stewards beg to thank you again and the whole company assembled here this evening to support the undertaking. The ladies also we thank for the unvarying support they have given the Boys' School. We believe their co-operation has been a great incentive to the brethren getting subscriptions to the Institution. I shall be very happy on all occasions my Lord to do my best to assist in the good work of Freemasonry, and I beg to thank you most sincerely for being so kind as to mention my name.

Bro. R. J. Spiers: May it please your Grace, I think we should not part with satisfaction to ourselves if we did not thank the ladies, who have graced this festival with their company. I believe if it were not for the ladies we should not have so high an incentive to be here. Their coming among us is always a very great feather in our cap. Bro. Filer has taken the words out of my mouth, but at all events this I may say, as the ladies have left us, we had better join them in the other portion of our building. Before doing so, we thank them for their attendance.

The company then adjourned to the Temple, where a concert was given under the direction of Bro. W. Ganz, and in which that accomplished professor, and Mdle. Carola, Miss Banks, Miss Cullenford, and Miss Julia Elton, assisted by Bros. Geo. Perren, J. E. Patey, Carl Stepan, and Pague, took part.

The dinner was well served by Bro. Francatelli, and Bro. Goodchild was an excellent toastmaster.

(To the Editor of The Freemason.)

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—Pray oblige me by giving prominent notice of the correction of the amount as announced by me at the Festival last night. I felt sure there was an error in the addition, and on examination this morning I find the following to be the correct total of the various lists.

I am, Dear Sir and Brother,
Yours faithfully,
FREDK. BINCKES,

LINES COMPOSED BY G. W. WHEELER FOR THE 117TH ANNIVERSARY FESTIVAL OF LODGE 73, GLASGOW, "THISTLE AND ROSE."

A pleasant theme is mine to-night,
With rapturous thoughts my bosom glows;
To praise, amongst the Sons of Light,
Our Lodge, the THISTLE and the ROSE.

For they are both Masonic flowers,
With Guards to keep intruders back:
The Thistle bath its prickly powers,
The Rose its thorns doth never lack.

The Thistle is a stalwart flower,
Of Scotland's sons it's still the boast;
Her foemen oft' have felt its power,
When landing hostile on her coast.

The legend runs, that the god Mars
First planted it upon her soil;
Invaders since have shewn its scars,
Instead of their expected spoil.

Her warlike Sons, in many a land,
Have made their swords like it to bristle;
And many a gallant foreign band
Have felt the force of Scotland's Thistle.

But we are peacefully inclined—
As each Masonic Brother knows—
So with the Thistle we have twined
The bonnie blooming British Rose.

Few flowers can with the Rose compare,
It scatters fragrance all around,
Its odours scent the very air,
Its leaves perfume the ground.

Fit emblem of a Mason true,
Whose actions should a fragrance shed;
While he life's pathway doth pursue,
And still smell sweetly when he's dead.

Then let us like the Thistle stand,
Proudly erect against all foes;
While our good deeds, throughout the land,
Shall blossom sweetly like the Rose.

Since Seventeen Fifty-Six we've stood,
The pride of friends, unhurt by foes;
Then still be faithful, firm and good,
To Seventy-Three, the Thistle and the Rose.

And Oh, may each succeeding year,
Some latent virtue still disclose,
'Mongst all that are assembled here;
As Sons of Thistle and the Rose.

ADDITIONAL NOTES ON THE UNITED ORDERS OF THE TEM-PLE AND HOSPITAL.

BY BRO. ENRA HOLMES, 31°.

In The Freemason of Jan. 11th, "Lupus" says, Grand Conclave in 1853 having no faith in its claims abandoned the Order of Malta, but in 1862 revived the title, "set up a new Order and invented a new Ritual," which Bro. Lupus is pleased to call preposterous. I am sorry to have to contradict Bro. Lupus, but this statement requires correction.

Grand Conclave did not invent a new order nor a new ritual. The ritual was brought from Malta where it is in use, and has been for years; but in essentials and especially so far as the Mediterranean Pass is concerned it is precisely the same as given in the old Encampments for a considerable period. The learned brother speaks also of Grand Conclave appropriating the jewel of the Ordre du Temple of France, and all that I can say is the very fact of that jewel's existence shows that the members of Grand Conclave considered that they had a right to wear it as legitimate Templars or they would not have done so. Besides, the jewel itself symbolizes the union of the two Orders, and perhaps Bro. Lupus will explain that fact, if there was no connection between them. The Baldwin Charter of Compact, of 1780, speaks of the "Royal Encampment of the Order of Knights Templars, of St. John of Jerusalem, Knights Hospitallers and Knights of Malta, &c." It asserts the existence of a chivalric body under that name in England at that date and without the prefix Masonic. One of the highest members of the Baldwin writing to me touching this controversy says, "It is curious that the private cross worn by the Knights of that Preceptory is a Maltese Cross with a fleur-de-lis between the four greater divisions of the cross, in fact, such a cross as a Knight of Malta of the French langues would have worn. It is no new invention but has been long used by that Preceptory."

I might here state that the old mantle of the Baldwin Knights was black and not white at all. My correspondent adds, "I have seen at various times several papers relative to the society over which the Duke of Manchester presides. Although I believe that the Society was started through some undoubted Knights of Malta of the French langues, I cannot see that they had any authority to revive a langue, nor that such a revival has ever been acknowledged by the authorities of the Order. I allow that they are engaged in promoting many worthy charitable objects and I trust that our only rivalry with them will be a rivalry in promoting good works. If the Order of the Temple does not enter on some path of extended usefulness, I think the increased activity under the Grand Mastership of the Prince will be worth little.

These sentiments of my esteemed correspondent I fully and heartily endorse, and Bro. Civis is greatly mistaken if he supposes I wish to injure the branch of the Order under the Duke of Manchester. When however its members seek to crush the Masonic Order of Malta it is necessary to point out that their position is not above cavil, that their legitimacy is not unquestioned. I did not expect Lupus would admire my translation of the Roman document—it was hardly likely he would—but most of your readers will be able to detect any little defects in rendering the idioms which are somewhat involved.

Bro. Lupus speaks of the Order of Malta as only enrolling entrants possessing certain qualifications fixed by the Statutes, and into which hundreds of persons of high personal position have sought admission in vain. This may be, and I do not dispute the aristocratic exclusiveness of the old Order, but I have yet to learn that in the Masonic Order we have an equal number of men of rank and family with those gentlemen who have joined the Manchester branch, and I hope the day will come when we shall be as exclusive in the admission of members as they. Bro. Lupus disputes the connection of the Stuarts with High Grade Masonry and the Masonic Templars. Perhaps he will tell us what was the degree in the old French Rite, alluded to I think by Oliver and Mackey (I cannot find the reference at this moment), as having reference to the Sacred Vault of James VII?

Touching the disputed election of the Emperor Paul I now publish the document I promised, and which is copied from Porter's Work,* and I note with wonder Lupus' statement that no single langue took any action in the election of either of the Emperors. In his last article anent my Notes he wishes to lead your readers to infer that the election of the Emperor Paul was the act of a few refugees. Yet Bro. Woolf says † that "a considerable number of Knights proceeded to Russia and elected the Emperor," and his distinguished friend Col. Porter in his work § says, "the great body of the Knighthood proceeded at once to Russia on their expulsion from Malta and elected Paul." There's a trimming of sails here on the part of somebody I don't pretend to understand; but when Civis kindly speaks of my Notes as being nothing but speculative, romance, and absurdity, whilst the comments of Lupus abound in fact, history and common sense. I am much obliged for the comparison, and point to the above as an illustration the of facts, history, and common sense. I beg to add for the benefit of "Civis" and all concerned, that I have no other object than the elimination of truth and the acquisition of knowledge in writing these Notes; that I am the "tool" of no body and the "useful man" of no party in Grand Conclave. Touching the letter of "Sero sed serio," I have only to say that it is a stale device when you have no case to abuse the plaintiff's attorney. Probably the gentleman with the motto is one of the nobiles who think that to be at once abusive and anonymous is chivalric and gentlemanly, when he states that he feels almost inclined to say that I am a fool, I might easily respond tu quoque but I decline to follow the example of your gallant correspondent, and am sorry for the Order which boasts of him as its latest champion. It is to be hoped that "Sero sed serio" is not a member of the Manchester branch ("Brummagen" might seem more appropriate for him) as the gentlemanlike, not to say Masonic tone of his letter would reflect great credit upon his distinguished fratres and friends.

Proclamation appointing the Emperor Paul as Grand Master of the Order of St. John.

"We, the Bailiffs, Grand Crosses, Commanders, Knights of the Grand Priory of Russia, and all other Members of the Order of St. John of Jerusalem, present in this Imperial City of St. Petersburg, reflecting on the disastrous situation of our Order; its total want of resources, the loss of its sovereignty and chief place of residence, the dispersion of its Members, wandering through the world without a chief or any fixed spot of rendezvous, the increasing dangers by which it is threatened, and the plans formed by usurpers to invade its property and ruin it entirely; being desirous and in duty bound to employ all possible methods to prevent the destruction of an Order equally ancient and illustrious, which has ever been composed of the most select nobility, and which has rendered such important service to the Christian world; whose institutions were founded on such excellent principles as must not only be the firmest support to all legitimate authority, but tend to its sure preservation and future existence; animated by gratitude towards his Imperial Majesty, the Emperor of all the Russias, for the favours bestowed on our Order, penetrated with veneration for his virtues, and confidently relying on his sacred word "that he will not only support us in our institutions, privileges, and honours; but that he will employ every possible means to re-establish our Order in its original independent situation where it contributed to the advantage of Christendom in general, and of every different state in particular." Knowing the impossibility in our present circumstances, the Members of our Order being generally dispersed of preserving all the forms and customs prescribed in our constitution and statutes; but being nevertheless desirous to secure the dignity and the power inherent to the sovereignty of our Order, by making a proper choice of a successor to D'Aubusson L'Isle Adam, and La Valette: We, the Bailiffs and Grand Crosses, the Commanders, and Knights of the Grand Priory of Russia, and all other Members of the Order of St. John of Jerusalem, assembled at St. Petersburg, the chief place of residence of our Order, not only in our names, but in those of the other languages, Grand Priorities in general, and all their Members in particular, who shall unite themselves to us by a firm adhesion to our principles, proclaim His Imperial Majesty the Emperor and Autocrat of all the Russias, Paul I., as Grand Master of the Order of St. John of Jerusalem.

"In virtue of the present proclamation, we promise, according to our laws and statutes, and that by a sacred and solemn engagement, obedience, submission, and fidelity, to His Imperial Majesty the Most Eminent Grand Master.

"Given at St. Petersburg, the residence of our Order, this present Wednesday, the 27th October, 1798."

Acceptation of the Emperor Paul of the post of Grand Master, in answer to the above proclamation.

"We, by the grace of God, Paul I., Emperor and Autocrat of all the Russias, &c.

"In consideration of the wish expressed to us by the Bailiffs, Grand Crosses, Commanders, Knights of the Illustrious Order of St. John of Jerusalem, of the Grand Priory of Russia, and other Members assembled together in our capital, in the name of all the well-disposed part of their fraternity, we accept the title of Grand Master of this Order, and renew on this occasion, the solemn promises we have already made in quality of Protector, not only to preserve all the institutions and privileges of this Illustrious Order for ever unchanged in regard to the free exercises of its religion with everything relating to the Knights of the Roman Catholic faith, and the jurisdiction of the Order, the seat of which we have fixed in this our Imperial residence: but also we declare that we will unceasingly employ for the future all our care and attention for the augmentation of the Order, for its re-establishment in the independent position which is requisite for the salutary end of its institution, for assuring its solidity, and confirming its utility. We likewise declare, that in taking thus upon us the supreme government of the Order of St. John of Jerusalem, and considering it our duty to make use of every possible means to obtain the restoration of the property of which it has been so unjustly deprived, we do not intend in any degree, as Emperor of all the Russias to the smallest right or advantage which may strike at, or prejudice any of the powers, our allies; on the contrary, we shall always have a peculiar satisfaction in contributing at all times, everything in our power towards strengthening our alliance with the said powers. Our grace and Imperial favour towards the Order of St. John of Jerusalem in general, and each of its Members in particular, shall ever remain invariably the same.

"Given at St. Petersburg, the 13th November, in the year 1798, in the third year of our reign.

"(Signed) PAUL,

"(Countersigned) PRINCE BESHORODKO."

Will Bro. Lupus explain why Prince Albert joined the Catholic and not the Manchester body?

The Masonic Knights of Malta existed in England fifty years before the English Langue was revived, and wore the costume and jewel of Knights of Malta in 1780 if not before, which is the new Order?

Next week I propose to publish the Proclamation of the Emperor Alexander, and the decree of the Sacred Council.

THE BOYS' AND GIRLS' SCHOOLS.

The Joint Committee for amending and assimilating the laws of these two Institutions would have inflicted lasting injury upon them if it had been permitted to work its will. By depriving duly qualified Lodges and Chapters of the right of voting at General Committees, an important section of supporters would have been alienated in the future; and by putting the Secretaryships up to auction, as it were, an element of discord and unfairness would have been infallibly introduced. Bro. John Symonds, as the spokesman of the Joint Committee, contended that the General Committee is already an "unwieldy" body, and that the disfranchisement of lodges would be useful, inasmuch as it would reduce the numbers of those entitled to join in the management of affairs. But, as was pointed out by Bro. J. C. Parkinson, who once more led a successful opposition, the fault of the body which really governs the Charities is not that it is unwieldy, but that it is too compact. To speak plainly, an opinion has been long abroad that the Masonic Schools are too exclusively in the hands of a clique; and this opinion has been considerably strengthened by the events of the last few months. The proposition to place "the appointment and dismissal" (there was the rub!) of Secretary in the hands of voters by proxy followed too closely upon the warm discussions arising out of Bro. Little's candidature and election not to look like a counter demonstration, and though we are aware, from the assurances of the Joint Committee, that nothing was further from its thoughts, it will be useful to call attention to a few salient points, which almost justified the belief. First, however, let it be remembered, that the dismissal of a Secretary by proxy-papers would make it possible for that functionary to be discharged by people who never saw him, who knew nothing of his character or work, and who would be liable to be influenced by hearsay, or by the representations of any third person who took the trouble to canvas for and collect their votes. This was a sufficiently radical change; and, as it was slipped into the proposed Laws after Bro. Little's appointment as Secretary, his friends may be pardoned if they considered it aimed at him. If it be asked why the Joint Committee should be credited with any such predilections or dislikes? the answer is, that such Committee was largely leavened by those brethren whose public acts and utterances were popularly supposed to be against Bro. Little, rather than in his favour.

It would not be difficult to particularise these, or to give each man a distinctive label from his own speeches or acts; but it is perhaps wiser to let bygones be bygones, and to explain to the brethren in the provinces that it was from no unwillingness to make concessions to them that the rejection of the proxy proposition was moved and carried. Let concessions come in the shape of an alteration in the constitution of the House Committees, and no difficulties will be raised, unless it is by those who regard their own election thereto a matter of indefeasible and prescriptive right.

There are, at present, brethren who sit upon the House Committees of both the Boys' and Girls' Schools. Why did not the Joint Committee introduce a short law to disestablish these pluralists and what were Bro. J. C. Parkinson and Bro. the Earl of Limerick about to overlook such an obvious mode of crowning the useful work of amending the Committee's "amendments?"

The answer to the first question is, that Bro. Browse, the Chairman of the meeting at which the laws were submitted, is himself on the House Committees of both the Boys' and Girls' Schools, and that there has not yet been an instance recorded in history of a pluralist bringing in a measure to abolish himself. Why the opposition did not repair the omission is not so clear; and it is left to the Life Governors of the Charities to declare, by their votes at the next election of the House Committees, if they approve of any one brother being on both, and whether it will not be well to infuse some new blood into each. If brethren from the provinces can be found who can guarantee a regular attendance, we should be heartily glad to know that the "concession" had been made of electing them to the Committees. If there be any other reasonable way of bringing provincial brethren more prominently to the front in matters of administration, we should rejoice to welcome and endorse it. But votes by proxy, save for the election of boys and girls, are clearly inadmissible; and those who are not willing to make the sacrifice involved in a personal attendance at the Committees, must be satisfied to entrust practical details to those who are able to give time, thought, and energy, as well as money, to the good cause.

The Joint Committee have discovered by this time that they made a mistake in supposing that by putting up the Secretaries as whipping boys they were making a "concession" which would be either useful or popular. Bro. J. C. Parkinson's anecdote of Artemus Ward was strictly to the point, and may be meditated over with advantage by these guileless advocates of vicarious sacrifice. It was in the height of the American war, that the humourist declared publicly that every true patriot must be prepared to make sacrifices for the State, and that he, for his part, was ready to offer up all his wife's relations on the altar of his country. A Joint Committee composed of House Committeemen which carefully preserved the constitutions of the House Committees intact, and even exempted the Collectorships from the conditions to which they had no hesitation in submitting the Secretaries, furnishes too complete an analogy to the American story to be readily forgotten. The anecdote exactly hit the temper of the meeting, and the next time any select Masonic Committee submits propositions for protecting itself, and for jeopardising the interests of other people, it will be met (as Bro. John Symonds was at the meeting, when he explained with much ability and good humour how necessary it was to make some "concession," and how utterly impracticable it would be to have provincial brethren on the House Committees), with pleasant laughter and jocose cries of "Artemus Ward!" "Artemus Ward!"

THE FESTIVAL OF THE MASONIC BENEVOLENT FUND.

The final meeting of the Board of Stewards of the Masonic Benevolent Festival was held on Friday, the 7th inst., when Bro. Major Creaton, P.G.D., the Chairman, presided. The accounts were submitted and passed; and a debate followed upon the confusion which prevailed on the night of the festival with respect to the hats and coats of the brethren present. Explanations were tendered, but considerable dissatisfaction was expressed; and it seemed clear, from the statements made, that the arrangements had been far from perfect. After votes of thanks had been passed to Bro. Major Creaton, as Chairman, and Bro. Joshua Nunn, as Treasurer of the Board, Bro. J. C. Parkinson rose to propose a cordial vote of thanks to Bro. Sir Albert Woods and Bro. Thomas Fenn for the excellent and careful manner in which they had superintended and carried out the arrangements for the reception of the Prince of Wales and the other distinguished visitors, on the night of the festival. After expressing warm acknowledgments to those brethren, and his satisfaction at having so pleasant a duty entrusted to him, Bro. Parkinson added that it was with deep regret he had an announcement to make to his brother Stewards, which he felt sure would fall upon them as disagreeably as it had done on him. It appeared that, in addition to these legitimate Directors of Ceremonies, there had been another and self-appointed Director, who had comported himself with so much rudeness to a distinguished brother at the Prince of Wales's table, that his conduct had been, in Bro. Parkinson's hearing, made the subject of in dignant complaint. This particular Steward had peremptorily, and in the rudest way, ordered the brother in question out of his seat; and had conducted himself with so much obtrusive fussiness as to make his behaviour a reflection upon the whole Board of Stewards. Bro. Parkinson added that as he had not the aggrieved brother's permission to mention the matter officially, he did not feel justified in giving his name to the meeting, but would be willing to communicate it privately to the Chairman. He might add, however, that the brother who had been subjected to this indignity (and it was the offensive and hectoring manner which had been complained of far more than the specific act, was one honoured by the personal friendship of the Prince of Wales, and that an insult to him was in effect an insult to his Royal Highness, at whose table he sat. Bro. Parkinson concluded by proposing a hearty vote of thanks to Bro. Sir Albert Woods and Bro. Thomas Fenn for their invaluable assistance and unflinching courtesy, and with an expression of his personal annoyance that their efforts should have been supplemented so unworthily by some brother who had by his unseemly officiousness brought discredit upon the whole Board of Stewards. After the vote had been carried unanimously, several brethren spoke upon the unpleasant incident brought to their knowledge by Bro. Parkinson, and an earnest desire was expressed to discover the offender. Eventually it was agreed to leave the investigation of the matter in the hands of the Chairman, Bro. Major Creaton, with power to take such steps as he should think fit, after conferring with Bro. Parkinson.

UNITED GRAND LODGE.

Bro. Horace Lloyd moved that this report be received and entered on the minutes. After pre-facing his motion by observing that this form was more convenient than the old one—"that this report be adopted"—he said that at the former meeting he congratulated the brethren on the brevity of the report. The present one, however, was long, but it dealt with four subjects of great importance. The rent of the Tavern was a subject on which he intended to found a substantive motion, and therefore he would not say anything on that. The matter of "irregular dispensation" had been sufficiently explained on the face of the report, but the subject of "the exclusion of members by lodges was of such great importance that he trusted he might be allowed to explain in a few words what the result of the Board's deliberations had been. It would be in the remembrance of Grand Lodge that their question had been referred to the Board of General Purposes; and he would venture to remind Grand Lodge that the word "exclusion" was a technical phrase, which was prescribed for Freemasons by the Book of Constitutions. That book drew a distinction between "the expulsion of a member from Masonry," which rested wholly in the power of Grand Lodge, so that not even the Grand Master could do anything upon it, and the exclusion of member by his own lodge. It was suggested that at present the power of exclusion was not sufficiently extensive, that some alteration was desired on the subject, and the whole matter was, without any selection, left to the consideration of the Board. He begged his hon. friend who had brought forward the subject (Bro. Stebbing) to believe him when he said that the Board approached the question with feelings of grave responsibility, and deliberated on it with the greatest attention, and with an earnest desire to do what was right. It must be obvious to that brother what a difficult duty they had to perform, and the members of the Board who were now present would bear him out when he said that on two different occasions it was under their consideration, and that the conclusion at which they arrived was an unanimous one. That unanimity was not the unanimity of a flock of sheep following a leader, but, whereas, there was at first a difference of opinion, careful consideration of the matter produced the conclusion they had now come to. Their first duty had been to see how the matter stood, and what the Book of Constitutions provided on the subject. On one point they found it made special provisions, and this was to be found in clause 20, at pp. 67 and 68, which dealt with an express charge—contumely in open lodge. A brother who will not obey the Master in calling to order a second and a third time at last is to be dealt with for that persistent disobedience. Upon all that the Book of Constitutions was clear; but he, (Bro. Lloyd), agreed with Bro. Stebbing, that if that were all the Book of Constitutions provided it would leave untouched many cases. With all possible care that was exercised the Board found some one was occasionally introduced into lodges who was not worthy to be a member. In the first instance, such member was worthy, but being capable of sliding back from a better position to a worse, if he did so that would not be sufficient to cause his expulsion. The Board had come to the conclusion that there was nothing to prevent a lodge taking power by its bye-laws to exclude him; but, further than that, they did not see that the Book of Constitutions authorised anyone to go. There was an express provision, and he would call particular attention to this, as it had a very important bearing on what they were going to consider. On page 32 it was said that if the Grand Master should be satisfied that any brother be illegally or without sufficient cause,—those were the words,—excluded from any of his Masonic functions or privileges by a private lodge or other authority, he may order him to be reinstated, and may also suspend till the next Quarterly Communication the lodge or brother who shall refuse to comply with his order. And a similar power was given to a Provincial Grand Master. Now, whatever power was intended to be so given, it was not intended that a private lodge should have the power of excluding a brother without sufficient cause. The Constitution gave an injured brother an appeal to the Grand Master, and the Grand Master in such a case has power to reinstate him in his Masonic position. Now, between those two points the Board had had to consider how the matter stood, and the conclusion they had come to was that in their opinion the present provisions of the Book of Constitutions conferred adequate powers on private lodges for excluding members upon sufficient cause, and so thoroughly by their bye-laws that the Board considered the present state of the law was satisfactory.

Then, how did the matter stand as to bye-laws; what provision could a lodge make by its bye-laws for dealing with this matter? Then, again, the Book of Constitutions was perfectly clear. Every lodge had the power of framing bye-laws for its government, provided they were not inconsistent with the laws of Grand Lodge. On this the Board had come to the conclusion that there was no doubt at all that a lodge had the power of framing bye-laws under which it should exclude a member. Was that a satisfactory solution, or would it be better that some general law should be framed attempting to define what was "sufficient cause?" The Board had thought it better to leave the matter elastic. It was rather for the lodge itself to determine how it would deal with the question of exclusion, and therefore the members of the Board were disposed so to leave it. But upon the other hand, they thought it would only open the door to private piques and quarrels if the bye-laws in this respect were not hedged round with some safeguards to prevent too great laxity in this matter. The Board therefore recommended that it would be desirable that lodges should be permitted to include in their bye-laws, as framed under Sec. 5 on page 63, one authorising the exclusion of members for sufficient cause on condition that every such bye-law shall provide for the member complained of receiving due notice of the complaint made against him, and of the time appointed for its consideration, shall give the power of exclusion only to a majority of not less than two-thirds of the brethren present, and shall state on its face the right of appeal against exclusion if illegal or without sufficient cause.

As to giving notice, that was already provided for in page 68. It was only necessary that it should be on the bye-laws that a brother should know what his position was. As to the majority of two-thirds, that was the exact majority Bro. Stebbing had proposed. As to the right of appeal, it existed already, and was given by the Book of Constitutions, but it was well known that all the provisions of that book were not within the knowledge of all the members of lodges at the time it was necessary to recall them by those who were enforcing them. But the brother against whom action might be taken should know where he might go for redress, and that should be brought prominently before him. He hoped that this easy solution of the question would be satisfactory to Bro. Stebbing. It was true it would not permit a lodge to exclude a member for a fanciful reason; it would not permit a lodge to exclude a member for some of the faults suggested last meeting, because he eat with his knife instead of his fork, or spilt his soup, or was overstrict in enforcing the exact Masonic law on most inopportune occasions; but he ventured to say that that was a grievance for which they must go to the Book of Constitutions to find out what was a sufficient cause. "Sufficient cause" was used in that book, and it meant a cause which was a substantial grievance to a lodge. Still, the right of appeal existed in any case; but, depend upon it, no man who felt himself in the wrong would ever exercise the right of appeal, and no one would succeed in such an appeal unless he could show that his exclusion was frivolous or fanciful. He hoped this would settle the question, and that he would satisfy Bro. Stebbing, who, in his reply on the last occasion, thought that he was treated with somewhat of discourtesy. This he (Bro. Lloyd) did not intend; but he had a duty to perform as President of the Board of General Purposes, and he had done it. He did not speak for the other members, but only for himself. He was, however, sure that Bro. Stebbing could not have thought he meant personal discourtesy to him, who was an old and distinguished and energetic Freemason, and also was a brother to whom they were all deeply indebted for that splendid building in which they were then assembled—a most active and valuable member of the Building Committee. (Cheers.)

The Acting Grand Master having put the motion for the entry of the report of the Board on the minutes,

Bro. Stebbing said it was not his intention to raise a discussion on this matter then; it would be better, as it had been raised at former Grand Lodge, and had been considered by the Board, not to deal with it now. He might venture to bring it forward again in some way or other when the brethren were educated up to the point from their own and their friends' sufferings in lodges, and they were anxious that they should be remedied. He thanked the President of the Board for his courtesy and acknowledged it with gratitude; and although he had certainly felt hurt at the time the observations of Bro. Lloyd were made, he assured him that the irritation had passed away before he went to bed. There was this advantage in the discussion that had taken place—it had taught the brethren that they had no more power in their bye-laws than they had supposed they possessed, and he hoped the brethren would feel they could now take a wide range as to the treatment of disagreeable brethren by making bye-laws more applicable than it had been thought they had power to do before. The circumstance of the words "sufficient cause" having been dwelt on so especially by the President of the Board was significant in removing a difficulty they had all felt. They knew they must specify a particular law that had been broken, and this removed much of the difficulty that existed previously; but with regard to the special report, he must remind the President of the Board that what they proposed to do was a restriction on the previous condition of the law rather than an extension of the power he (Bro. Stebbing) had proposed should be given to private lodges. He had proposed that two-thirds majority of members should be necessary to exclude; but he did this as a counteracting power to prevent the exclusion of a member without giving a reason for doing so. When they took this ingredient out, they took out that which was against him, but they gave nothing which was in his favour, which reminded him of the old saying, "thank you for nothing." However, as he had said it was not his intention to proceed with the matter that night, he hoped to approach the President at some other time with a solution of the difficulty, and he would have an opportunity in the meantime of ascertaining the feelings of brethren by visiting lodges. He had in his pocket a host of letters all clamouring for the change he had proposed, and when he should press upon the Board the matter, the President would perhaps see how desirable it was to deal with the matter.

In answer to Bro. John Symonds, Bro. Horace Lloyd said he thought the Book of Constitutions might advantageously contain some clause showing what the powers of lodges were, and he would be glad to take the duty of bringing the subject before the Board.

After a few words from Bro. Brackstone Baker, the Acting Grand Master put the motion, and it was carried nem con.

Bro. Horace Lloyd then moved the adoption of that part of the Board's report which recommended a reduction of the Tavern Company's rent.

Bro. Brackstone Baker moved an amendment "that the report of the Board be referred back to the Board to consider whether the rent should not be continued at £1200 a year until the shareholders of the Tavern Company receive 5 per cent. interest on their shares." (The amendment was received with roars of laughter.) Bro. Baker thought the laughter proved the reasonableness of his proposition, because it evinced the general belief of how long it would be before there was a dividend.

Bro. Bridges seconded the amendment, and was followed by a few words from Bro. James Mason; but the amendment was lost, and the original motion carried.

Bro. Horace Lloyd moved the "Additional Clerk" clause of the report, and said that the extra work entailed on Grand Secretary's office, by the great increase in the number of lodges, all of which seemed very fond of consuming paper and stationery, was enormous. The office was overworked now even with extra clerks, which it was not desirable to have, and an additional permanent clerk at £100 a year was wanted. As the Craft was thriving and prosperous, and the work of Grand Secretary's office was very well done, he hoped the recommendation would be carried.

Bro. J. B. Monckton, P.G.D., seconded the motion, and took occasion to remark that having seen a great deal of the working of the office he could say with confidence that the zeal, industry, and ability therein displayed were not to be surpassed. The staff of officers were not sufficient to carry it out properly, and he had much pleasure in seconding the recommendation of the Board.

The motion was carried unanimously.

The report of Bro. R. P. Harding, auditor of Grand Lodge accounts, of receipts and disbursements, during the year 1872, was then read by Grand Secretary, and on Bro. McIntyre's motion it was ordered to be received and entered on the minutes.

In compliance with the report of a special meeting of the governors and subscribers of the Royal Masonic Institution for Aged Freemasons and Widows of Freemasons, held at Freemasons' Hall on Tuesday, the 7th day of January, 1873, the rules of that Institution were unanimously altered by providing that male pensioners should have their annuities increased to £36 instead of £26, and female pensioners should have an increase to £28 instead of £25.

Bro. Matthew Cooke had the following motion on the agenda paper, but he not being present, it was not brought on:—

"To add to Section 6 of the Board of General Purposes," Book of Constitutions, page 109, small edition, after the words "by the authority of the President," "every meeting of the Board is open to the Craft, and any brother may, on the production of his Grand Lodge certificate, attend, but shall take no part whatever in the matters under discussion or adjudication."

Bro. Benjamin Head, P.G.D., moved—

"That the sum of £40 be given from the Fund of General Purposes; that the money be placed in the hands of the Secretary of the Royal Masonic Benevolent Institution for Aged Freemasons and Widows of Freemasons, to supply the inmates at Croydon with coals during the remainder of the winter season, the sum previously granted having been expended, owing to the increased price of coals."

He said that the price of coals had so much increased this season that the usual sum which was granted by Grand Lodge for the purpose of purchasing them for the Benevolent Institution was exhausted. Last year they were paying sums of £6 4s., £6 8s., and £6 13s., where they were now paying £9 15s. 5d., £9 16s., £9 12s. 3d., £9 4s. 10d., £13 4s., which swallowed up the whole £50 granted. He therefore came to ask for another £40, and he did not think he would have to ask in vain.

The motion was seconded and immediately carried.

Bro. William Smith, P.G. Steward and P.M. No. 26. moved, that it be an instruction from the Grand Lodge to the Board of General Purposes to consider the following alteration with respect to the subscription payable by members of private lodges, and as to the registry of their names as continuing subscribing Members in the books of Grand Lodge; to make the necessary alterations in the Book of "Constitutions," to give effect to such alterations, and that the President of the Board of General Purposes do report to the next regular Quarterly meeting of Grand Lodge what the Board has done here anent:—viz., That any Member of a Private Lodge on his removal from the neighbourhood in which the lodge is held, or when, in the opinion of the lodge, for any other good and sufficient cause he is unable to attend its meetings, but being desirous to continue a Member thereof, such Member may, upon a Vote duly carried in open lodge, compound for his being continued as a Member upon the Books of the lodge for life, and be returned to Grand Lodge as a Life Member on his paying the sum of £ to the funds of the said lodge, the interest whereof shall, at the rate of five per centum per annum, be more than sufficient to pay the Quarterage to the Fund of Benevolence of Grand Lodge (as also to the Provincial Grand Lodge Fund when in a Province), and leave a marginal sum beyond to represent a beneficial interest therein for the Private Lodge.

The sum to be paid under this clause for such Life Membership to be not less than £10, but such larger sum as the Board of General Purposes may agree upon and fix.

The motion met with a great deal of support and several brethren spoke on it, the Rev. J. S. Brownrigg, R. T. Spiers, Reginald Bird, (W.M. Appolo University Lodge, Oxford); and Colonel Whitwell, being among the number.

In conclusion it was referred to the Board of General Purposes to report upon it next Quarterly Communication.

Grand Lodge was then closed.

DISTRICT GRAND LODGE OF BENGAL.

A quarterly communication of the District Grand Lodge of Bengal was held at the Freemasons' Hall, Calcutta, on Friday, December 27th, 1872.

The District Grand Master, R.W. Bro. Hugh David Sandeman, occupied the throne, and was represented by Bro. David Locke as Dist. Deputy Grand Master, and a goodly attendance of his District Grand Officers and representatives from nearly every lodge in the district.

The District Grand Lodge having been opened, and apologies read from several District Grand Officers and other absent members of District Grand Lodge, the minutes of the previous communication were read and confirmed.

The District Grand Master then delivered a lengthened address, in which he referred to numerous important topics, amongst others the backwardness of certain lodges paying their dues; the lukewarm support accorded by the brethren to the efforts of literary brethren in their efforts at the diffusion of Masonic knowledge, hoping, however, that want of financial success would not lead to a separation of the "Bengal Masonic Diary." He was prompted to say a word in advocacy of the local Masonic publication, "The Bombay Masonic Magazine." This is at present edited every month by a brother who labours nearly single-handed at his task. It is a matter of great importance that they should have a periodical in this large district as a means of communication on Masonic matters, to the general improvement of those who are interested in their advancement; and he would be glad to hear that lodges and brethren came forward more readily with subscriptions in money and contributions in writing to support the editor, whose great anxiety is to establish on a permanent footing and a larger scale what he has so energetically taken in hand. He would, therefore, commend the periodical to the favourable notice of the brethren. The important legacy was the Bengal Masonic Association, which had prospered beyond his first expectations. After an existence of only three and a half years, it was supporting and educating four children, and had an invested capital of £2000.

He would take this opportunity, which might probably be his last, of offering an acknowledgment of his heartfelt thanks to those Masonic officers who have shared his labours in the District Grand Lodge. In the second place, he wished to address a word to those brethren who may feel that has in any way injured them by word or by deed during my long tenure of office. He put aside any hypocritical pretension of supposing that there can be none such, for it would be impossible to hold so high an office for any length of time without aggrieving somebody. To such, however, he would like to say with conscientious assurance that he had never wilfully or intentionally grieved any one, his sole and earnest desire having been to work fairly, fearlessly, and impartially for the good of the brotherhood, and that in every action he has endeavoured to put aside everything approaching to personal feeling. He could conscientiously say that there was not a brother in the Craft in India towards whom he was not kindly and affectionately disposed, and he should be grieved to think that this feeling is not, as he felt convinced it would be reciprocated.

Although leaving India, he freely might still be permitted to keep up an active interest in Masonry, and so long as it may please the Great Architect of the Universe to continue to him the blessings of health and strength they might depend upon him as an earnest advocate in every matter connected with the advancement of our Great Order in the East.

He would not yet bid farewell, because he hoped to be frequently among them before he left India; but he thought it proper to address them in the terms of a farewell, as in all probability he might have left India before the District Grand Lodge next meets in March, and in so doing he would ask them ever to be firm and true in their allegiance to Freemasonry; she has conferred upon us all great privileges, and it is our bounden duty, in conformity with our obligations, to endeavour to the best of our ability to make a return for those privileges by supporting the Institution, obeying her laws, and observing her precepts.

The Report of the Committee of General Purposes was read and approved.

It was proposed, seconded, and carried unanimously, that the thanks of the District Grand Lodge be given to those brethren and lodges who had subscribed to replace the money recently lost to the Fund of Benevolence by the death of the Treasurer.

The Report of the Fund of Benevolence was presented. The Committee recommended an increased payment by lodges to the fund.

The Report of the Bengal Masonic Association was presented, which showed a falling off in the income.

An address and jewel were presented to Bro. Capt. Murray, District Grand Secretary, from the W.M. and brethren of Lodge Chute Nagpore, No. 1352, as a token of esteem and gratitude for the assistance he had rendered in the establishment of the lodge.

Bro. Compton, Dist. G. Organist, gave notice that at the next meeting of District Grand Lodge he should move that a Select Committee be appointed to meet and confer on the best scheme to be adopted for obtaining premises, either by building, on a joint-stock principle, or otherwise, a temple or lodge for Masonic purposes in Calcutta.

Bro. J. H. Turner addressed the District Grand Master, and begged to be informed whether in the case of a Hindoo becoming a Mason, he should be obligated on the Volume of the Sacred Law, or merely on his conscience. He added that one of the brethren present had merely been obligated on his conscience, and that as he considered this a departure from the landmarks of Ancient, Free and Accepted Masonry, he begged to be informed as to the precise nature of the landmark in point.

The District Grand Master replied that if Bro. Turner had any cause of complaint against any brother for a departure from the established landmarks, he should submit such complaint through a proper channel, and promised that it should be duly investigated, and orders passed thereon.

A collection was then made for the "Fund of Benevolence," and the amount announced by the District Grand Secretary to be Rs. 153-4.

There being no further business to be brought forward, the District Grand Lodge was closed in due form at 8.45 p.m.

BRO. HOLMES' LECTURE ON THE ORDERS OF THE TEMPLE AND HOSPITAL.

By LUPUS.

Bro. Holmes has experienced the great honour of retaining in his possession the original of this "protest," this documentary scare-crow, written in questionable French, instead of pure Italian, from an indefinite date until a recent period, and this great enjoyment appears to have so far encouraged and emboldened our brother's wrathful mind as to induce his betrayal into statements (as unsupported as ever) which I think may reasonably excuse the expression of some amount of controversial indignation on my part. Bro. Holmes has unblushingly asserted that the great and good Prince Albert, in honouring the Roman Council by accepting their Grand Cross, repudiated the Langue of England, and this statement I deliberately characterize as an untrue, unworthy, and utterly unwarrantable assertion. Albert the Good did the council at Rome the honour to accept their Cross before England had the great happiness to receive him on her shores, before he ever heard of the revived langue, and nearly twenty years before the date of this insidious and tricky "document from Rome." The English langue was brought under the distinct notice of Prince Albert in the year 1861, and received from him an amount of consideration which was perfectly satisfactory to its members, who have full reason to love and revere his memory. When Bro. Holmes, to repay borrowed aid, thus ventures on statements which neither he, or any of his allies, can substantiate, his zeal betrays him into gratuitous and gross injustice, and he adopts a position which his best friends will hardly say is not one of unmitigated folly.

Bro. Holmes takes upon himself to say that the late Prince "was particularly anxious to be admitted into this Order, and applied to the Pope, since being a Protestant (technically a heretic) he was dehors the regular of the Order." What does this mean? What does Bro. Holmes know about the particular desires of our lamented Prince at the period before his marriage with our gracious Queen? or since? I know that when the Grand Bailli Ferretti was occupied in negotiations with the Council in London, for an alliance then proposed, he expressed high satisfaction that Prince Albert held the Cross of the Order, treated the circumstance as a matter of congratulation to the Roman Council, and with much delight exhibited the original letters of the Prince, and his elder brother, acknowledging and accepting the decoration. Does Brother Holmes know more of the private circumstances than did this chosen representative of the Roman Council upwards of thirty years since?

I much regret that Bro. Holmes has imported these questions of religious influence into the subject, but I conclude he was so far driven to extremity that this was the sole argument left upon which he could make a last faint struggle. And yet it is a singular resource for a zealous Freemason, whose historic knowledge must tell him of the fulminations against his own charitable Craft contained in Papal bulls, extending over a considerable period. I had no intention to refer to the religious question, and, although forced upon me, I hope I may be able to avoid offending the convictions of those who differ from myself.

Your readers must not be led away by the attempt which has been made to induce an inference that the Pope's dispensation is necessary to every transaction of the Order of St. John which involves the infusion of a faith, deemed from the Papal point of view to be "heretic." No such dispensation was implored by the Knights in Russia who elected the Emperor Paul; no such sanction was thought indispensable by the Knights of Catania, Ferrara and Rome, the sole fountain whence springs the Council now, apparently, so willing to deliver up the trust they claim to hold.

That the Knights of St. John, originally, and when guided by the Constitution of the brotherhood of St. Augustine, were under the control of the Pope is fully true, but we know that the holy and enlightened Paschall II. "soon freed them from all ecclesiastical jurisdiction and left them entirely to their own:" he was a "Vicar of Christ," and infallible, and how shall his decree be set at naught by "true sons of the Church?" That extravagant pretensions to intermeddle in the affairs of the Order of St. John, and most eager and longing restlessness to steal a march on its independence and bring its sovereignty under the Papal thumb, has been longingly exhibited by successive Pontiffs is quite true, but it is as true that these efforts, though meeting with some amount of success, were constantly opposed by the Knights; and an early writer on Malta, tells us that "when the Grand Master dies they suffer no vessel to go out of the island 'till another is chosen, lest the Pope should interfere in their election." Do we not know that the virtuous and inspired Pius VI., "approved the association of the Russian Knights of the Greek Church with the Order of Malta?" and is it not a plain and well known fact that numbers of Englishmen, Germans, Russians and others, all schismatics, according to Papal estimate, received the Cross of the Order at Malta? Was any dispensation then asked for?

The Pope has the privilege, by convention with the Order, of appointing the Prior of Rome; but even those who most strongly favour the influence of the Pontiff, and who have made themselves acquainted with the history of the Order, will say that the Papal brief is required only to enable the Roman Catholic branches to dispense with certain things which were originally confirmed by Papal bull.

If the modern Roman Council has abandoned (for themselves and their own local action) the independent principles and position maintained by the totality of the Order in its original integrity, (freed by Paschal II. from all ecclesiastical jurisdiction) as proved by its pulic acts, and the writings of de Boisgelin and Taafe, and chooses to lay their share of the Order at the feet of the Pope, this cannot, and will not destroy the facts of history; nor render the other branches who adhere to old principles, less legal when they pursue their own course, and follow the brighter example of leaders who had the wide experience of the whole Order, and who were certainly not less wise in their generation. The Roman Council must accept the responsibility of setting at naught the edict of Paschal the second, and of defying the decree of the inspired Pius the sixth, whose opinion was based on the religion of love and toleration; but the Roman Council is not "the Order of St. John," its acts are not the statutes of the fraternity, nor does its sacrifice of independent principles require a similar departure from ancient landmarks by other branches of the Order as lawful as their own.

Brother Holmes takes upon himself to say that certified copies (certified be it observed by "the simple Knight of the Order and nothing more") of the scare-crow, "were sent to Prince Albert and the Lord Chamberlain so that the persons against whom it was directed (the body under the Duke of Manchester)"—observe the pleasing solicitude with which this parenthesis is inserted—"should not wear spurious decorations at Court;" and Bro. Holmes tells us that "they each and all acknowledged the receipt." Astounding circumstance! What a misfortune they did no more; and what a fact that they could not do less. Bro. Holmes set out with a light heart, bold pen, and glib tongue too, but he has experienced fatal reverses in this small fight, as is not unfrequently the fate of reckless assailants, and must have been blind (when he talks of "spurious decorations") to the gross impropriety of a statement which is superlatively untrue, and which courtesy and good taste should have prevented his importing into a discussion unprovoked on my part, and unwarrantable on his.

The badge of the Order of St. John is as honourable, and far from spurious as any distinction ever possessed by the Chivalry of Europe; it marks not only the knightly character of the patriarchs of these aristocratic fraternities, but tells of the beneficent deeds to which was devoted one of the most remarkable associations in the annals of all time. If we could believe that Bro. Holmes's wild assertion was founded on fact, how much should we admire the tender, ay, touching solicitude of the signatories of the scare-crow, that the ceremonial observances of the British Court should be shielded from the insidious encroachments of "heretics," who dared, then, alas even as now, not only to claim, but to occupy place, as members of the Order in England; but unhappily this feeble fiction is utterly extinguished by the stronger fact, that the decoration of the Order could not be worn at Court by Englishmen who had not received permission for the purpose, and that as a consequence no such anxious interference was necessary. There were then, and are now, certain troublesome regulations of the Foreign Office, with which perhaps our brother is unacquainted, prohibiting the wearing, by a British subject, of any decoration not received under Royal licence. The English advisers of M.M. de Gozze and Spada were better up to these facts than Bro. Holmes, so that these gentlemen cannot be accorded credit for the solicitude with which Bro. Holmes would invest them.

The badge of the Order of St. John in England has ever stood in the same position as a foreign decoration, inasmuch as it is not conferred by the Crown, and it may suffice to inform Bro. Holmes that neither the Duke of Manchester nor Sir George Bowyer, can without special licence wear, in the presence of the Sovereign, either the decoration of any foreign Power, or the badge of an Order, which, although unbroken in its succession and autonomous, has not, since its attempted suppression in England by Henry VIII and Elizabeth, been, as yet, officially recognised within these realms.

Every document must be tested by its analyzed contents, and if Bro. Holmes is instructed to put this scare-crow forward in the hope that it will be accepted as proof of the invalidity of the English langue, his friends, and himself, will be greatly mistaken. Your readers will be unable to discover in its most cautious wording one single syllable which can impeach the lawful position of the Order in England. It is a declaration that the "honourable" (and self-elected) "society," styling itself "the Sacred Council," had nothing to do originally with the English langue, has taken no part since in its construction and composition; has no share in its objects, and that all persons called Knights of St. John, who do not pay obedience to the honourable and self-elected body at Rome are "legally ignored." This is what the document does contain, and nothing more; but I have imparted to your readers a few facts which it does not contain (and shall probably offer them a few others), which are as great facts as that every kingdom in Europe recognizes the present Order of St. John as valid branches of its venerable chivalry in States which are not enumerated in the protest, and where, consequently, its existence should come within the boastful, weak, and feeble ban by which they are all "legally ignored." Let your readers judge of the gross presumption of the concoctors of this protest who, after a smiling acceptance of the Emperor Paul as Grand Master, humbly swallowing all the circumstances of his election, and parading his portrait in official engravings of the Grand Masters, whilst they omit that of the unfortunate, but last lawful, Grand Master Hompesch, turn upon the memory of Paul, dead and gone, and with unparalleled ingratitude "legally ignore" the Priorities he founded and endowed. And this is the precious "document from Rome," by which we are now asked to gauge the truth of the English langue, the lawful Sixth langue of the Order of St. John: which has not been suppressed by English law, since its revival on the 2nd of April, 1557: which has always been treated at the chéfen as existent, and the revival of which to a state of activity in its own nation was deemed imperative when that chéfen no longer existed, and was accordingly effected by a representation of the great majority of five out of the seven other langues, at the very first moment after the arch enemy of the Order had met his doom and the Knights of France could once more freely breathe. With this revival the honorable society at Rome had no "organic" connection, but the honorable society did not think it necessary to advance the fact by way of objection when informed in due course that the revival had occurred, and it must therefore be the natural inference that the predecessors of the present Roman Council had no objection to make, and knew full well that the action of this great majority of the Order was perfectly lawful. Throughout years of correspondence with the French langue, as well as with the Order in England the Roman Council has had full opportunity to dispute the legality of the latter branch. It has never done so, nor is there one paragraph in this most cautious "protest" which impeaches the English langue any more than the branch of the Order in Austria, with which the honorable society at Rome can with equal truth say that it "has no organic connection."

Obituary.

MASONIC FUNERAL of BRO. SAMUEL WITTEY, D.P.G.M. of WILTSHIRE.

On Thursday, the 27th ult., the D.P.G.M. for Wiltshire, Bro. Samuel Wittey, who was a Solicitor, fell dead in the Assize Courts, at Devizes, whilst in the active exercise of his profession. He had been suffering for some time from weak action of the heart, and had been under medical treatment for the complaint, but did not seem worse than he had done for some time previously, except that he complained of his breath failing him somewhat if he took more than usually active exertion; but he had, we understand, on the morning of his sudden death, walked up from his residence at Rowde, and had been actively engaged in the personal superintendence of those cases in which he was concerned.

Happening to leave the Court at a period when he supposed his presence would not be required for some time, a case in which he was concerned was unexpectedly called on in his absence, and he was sent for by direction of Mr. Justice Grove. Of course he at once hurried back to the Court, and proceeded to put his case in train for hearing, but it was noticed by those present, who saw him enter the Court, that he seemed completely "done" and hardly able to articulate. After a few moments he was seen to put his hand to his heart and rise from his seat, and, turning to some one near he requested him to get a glass of water. It was sent for immediately, but almost before the words left his mouth he staggered back and fell into the arms of Mr. Norris, the barrister whom he had instructed, who supported his head upon his knee for the very few minutes he survived, and then assisted in conveying his remains to one of the waiting rooms. Mr. Langdon, M.R.C.S., was sent for, and lost no time in attending, but deceased must have been dead, or at his last gasp, before he arrived, as he was not able to get him to swallow the brandy and water which he administered. Of course the Court was in confusion, and everybody in a state of excitement, but fortunately Bro. the Rev. W. S. Oake, vicar of Rowde, happened to be present, in fact was the last person who met Mr. Wittey's eye as he fell backwards, and he immediately hastened to break the painful shock to Mrs. Wittey, and arrived in time to prevent its being abruptly communicated to her.

An inquest was held before Mr. H. K. Norris, the borough coroner, in the Nisi Prius Court, the same evening at 6 p.m., when after hearing the evidence of Mr. Norris, the barrister, and Mr. Langdon, and after a few moments consultation, the jury returned a verdict of "Death from natural causes," which the coroner interpreted as "Death from apoplexy by the visitation of God."

The deceased was not only D.P.G.M. of the Province of Wiltshire, but he also held the distinguished office of Grand Superintendent of Royal Arch Masons for the same province.

He was one of the founders of the Devizes Lodge of Freemasons (the Wiltshire Lodge of Fidelity, No. 663), and one of its earliest Masters.

Bro. J. H. Chandler, the present W.M. of that Lodge, of which the deceased had continued a member to his death, on hearing of the sad event and finding that Bro. Wittey had frequently expressed a wish that he might be lowered to his last resting place with due Masonic ceremonial, at once applied for a dispensation for that purpose, and invited the whole of the lodges of Wiltshire to unite with his own in complying with the expressed wishes of Bro. Wittey, and paying the last sad tribute of respect to departed merit.

The esteem and regard with which the deceased had inspired the brethren, were such that, notwithstanding the very short notice and the very unpromising state of the weather, the invitation was promptly responded to by nearly 70, including amongst them some of the most distinguished members of the fraternity. Lord Methuen, Provincial Grand Master of Wiltshire, and Sir Daniel Gooch, who fills the like office in the neighbouring province of Berks and Bucks, and who was also Bro. Wittey's predecessor in the office which the latter held at his death, were both unavoidably prevented from being present.

The brethren in full Masonic craft costume, but with their badges and emblems covered with crape, assembled in their lodge-room at the Town Hall, Devizes, at 2 o'clock p.m., on Monday the 3rd inst., when the lodge was opened in the three degrees by Bro. Chandler, the W.M.; who in a few appropriate words alluded to the melancholy circumstance which had caused him to invite them to meet here that day, and called upon the Secretary, Bro. Nott, to read the dispensation for a public Masonic funeral which had been granted by the R.W.P.G.M., Lord Methuen. This having been done, the W.M. claimed the attention of the brethren to the Chaplain of the Lodge, Bro. the Rev. T. F. T. Ravenshaw, P.G. Chap. England, who thus proceeded:—

Chaplain.—If a man die shall he live again.

Response.—The dust shall return to the earth as it was, and the spirit to God who gave it.

Chaplain.—When he dieth shall he carry anything away with him.

Response.—He brought nothing into this world, and it is certain that he can carry nothing out.

Chaplain.—The Lord gave and the Lord hath taken away, Blessed be the name of the Lord.

Response.—God is our God for ever and ever, he will be our Guide and support through the dark valley of the shadow of death.

Chaplain.—Our Brother has been called from labour in the Lodge terrestrial, and is gone we trust to partake of the Divine refreshment in Paradise. Let us remember his virtues, the benevolent spirit which he manifested, the offerings which he made upon the altar of Charity, whereby the needy were supported, the distressed comforted, the widows woes assuaged and the orphans' tears dried up. Let us behold in the precepts of our holy religion and in the sublime teachings of our Masonic Craft those principles which led him to adore T.G.A.O.T.U. and to love his fellow men which taught him how to live and how to die. And since, in obedience to the Heavenly mandate, he is now gone forth from us, may the recollection of his virtues be cherished in our hearts, and have a salutary influence on the lives of us who remain.

And now let us say beloved brother, farewell, farewell, till we meet thee with a lasting embrace in the Grand Lodge above where the Supreme Grand Master for ever presides—reigns God Almighty.

And now Almighty and most merciful Father, who we adore as the Sovereign Lord of Worlds, of Time and of Eternity, who rulest the destinies of all Thy creatures. Since it has pleased Thee to remove from us one dear to our hearts and a distinguished brother in our Craft; we beseech Thee to bless and sanctify to us this dispensation of Thy Providence. Inspire our hearts with wisdom from on high, that we may glorify Thee in all Thy ways. May we realize that Thine All-seeing Eye is now upon us, and be influenced by the spirit of truth and love to perfect obedience, that so we may hope for Thy blessing here below. And when our toils on earth are ended may we rest from our labours among the blessed dead whose works do follow them, and when the last and Supreme Grand Lodge is opened may we be raised to unfading light and immortal life in thy everlasting kingdom, when Faith and Hope shall end, and Love and Joy prevail through eternal ages.

To Thee, O Righteous Father! G.A.O.T.U. be ascribed all honour and glory, dominion and power, both now and for evermore.

The W.M. afterwards adjourned the lodge to the residence of the deceased at Rowde, some three miles distance, whither they were conveyed in carriages.

On leaving the house there, the funeral procession was formed in the following order:—

On the rich silk velvet pall which covered the coffin were placed in order the various badges of office held by the late Bro. Wittey in Freemasonry, amongst others his collar, apron, and gauntlets as Deputy Prov. Grand Master, his scarf and collar as Prov. Grand Superintendent of Royal Arch Masons, &c., also several very beautiful wreaths of crosses of natural flowers, made for the occasion by friends. The oldest brother of the deceased, Henry Wittey, Esq., of Colchester, followed as chief mourner, the next to him came the Rev. Preb. Kemble, of Bath, and Mr. Young, relatives, then Rev. Preb. Teale, Rector of Devizes, and the Rev. F. Shum, of Bath, followed by the executor, solicitor, and various friends of the deceased, his chief clerks, &c., &c., and lastly by a number of his fellow townsmen, who fell into the rank as the procession passed out of the house, and thus voluntarily paid the last sad tribute of respect to the remains of the departed. A large crowd of people assembled to witness the impressive ceremony.

The melancholy procession left the house of the deceased in the above order, and on arriving at the entrance to the church the brethren halted, and, opening out to the right and left, allowed the coffin, preceded by the two Rev. brethren officiating and followed by the private mourners, to be borne between them.

The Freemasons then, led by the W. Master immediately in rear of the mourners, followed in inverted order into the Church. On issuing thence, after the completion of the portion of the service there, the junior members of the procession led as at first; when near the vault they halted, and opening out thus allowed the W.M. and the others next him in procession to pass through, and diverging to the right and left take up their positions round the grave, followed by the remainder of the funeral procession.

At the conclusion of the service and before leaving the grave the W.M. of the Devizes Lodge and the other brethren, after him, threw a sprig of Acacia into the grave with the words "Farewell, Brother, mayest thou rest in peace."

The funeral ceremony was most impressively performed by the Vicar of Rowde, Bro. the Rev. W. S. Oke, P.P.G. Chap., Hants, assisted by Bro. Ravenshaw, the musical part being effectively rendered by Bro. Charles Clarke, assisted by an impromptu choir, formed principally from amongst the Freemasons present. Bro. Clarke played the Funeral Anthem, "When the ear heard him," by Handel, as the mournful procession entered the church, and in the service the Psalms were the 39th and 90th, sung to Purcell's single chant in G minor. Whilst the procession was reforming on its way to the grave, Bro. Clarke also played the Dead March in Saul, with thrilling effect.

On leaving the grave the Masonic procession was reformed with the W.M. and other senior brethren in front, and followed the mourners to the house of the deceased, and from thence to the carriages in waiting, in which they were conveyed to the lodge-room, at the Town Hall, Devizes.

On resumption of business there, Bro. Joseph Burt, P.M., as a long standing and intimate friend of the deceased, and as one of the founders of the lodge, and its senior member, claimed the melancholy privilege of calling upon the brethren to express their condolence with the widow of the deceased, in a manner which he felt sure needed no words of his to introduce, he therefore begged to propose the following resolution:—"That the members of this lodge deserve to tender to Mrs. Wittey their profound sympathy and condolence in her grief at the loss of her husband, who in the inscrutable wisdom of the Great Architect of the Universe has been suddenly called from this earthly life. And to record their own extreme sorrow at the melancholy event which has deprived the Freemasons of Wiltshire of one who in every Masonic office he filled endeared himself to his brethren and won their universal esteem and regard."

This resolution was seconded by Bro. W. Biggs, P.M., and the second oldest member of the lodge, and was carried unanimously in solemn silence.

The Rev. Bro. Roach, D.P.G. Chap., Wilts, then addressed the lodge with most touching allusions to the sudden death of Bro. Wittey, and to the lessons and warnings to be drawn therefrom.

After the lodge had been closed down to the first degree, the Rev. Bro. E. O. Roach proposed, and Bro. Horatio Ward, P.M., 586, seconded, a vote which was carried unanimously, expressing the thanks of the various lodges of the province to the W.M. of 663; Bro. J. H. Chandler, for the opportunity which the thoughtful and well considered action he had taken had given them of attending, leaving their last testimony of respect to the departed.

A vote of thanks was also, on the proposition of Bro. W. Biggs, P.M., seconded by Bro. Parfitt, P.M., 626, unanimously accorded to Bro. William Nott, P.M. and Secretary, who had charge of the arrangements generally for the excellent and decorous manner in which they had been made and carried out.

The lodge was then closed and the brethren departed, evidently much affected by the solemn ceremony in which they had taken part.

Amongst the brethren present on the melancholy occasion were—Robert Stokes, P.M. 586, Prov. S.G.W.; Horatio Ward, P.M. 586, Prov. J.G.W.; Joseph Burt, P.M. 663, P.P.S.G.W.; W. Biggs, P.M. 663, P.G. Sec., Berks and Bucks, P.P.S.G.W.; R. de M. Lawson, P.M. 632, P.P.S.G.W.; Richard Bradford, P.M. 355, P.P.S.G.W., and P.G. Treas., who acted as pall-bearers;—and the following other officers of the Provincial Grand Lodge:—Bros. J. G. Parfitt, P.M. 626, P.P.S.G.W.; C. W. Wyndham, P.M. and Sec. 586, P.P.J.G.W.; Rev. T. F. Ravenshaw, P.M. and Chap. 663, Past G. Chap., England, P.P.G. Chap.; Rev. E. O. Roach, P.M. 356, Dep. Prov. G. Chap.; T. Graham, P.G. Reg.; E. Turner Payne, Past G.D. England, P.P.G. Reg.; William Nott, P.M. and Sec. 663, P.P.G. Reg.; T. R. Lord, P.M. 335, P.P.G.D.; J. H. Sloane, W.M. 335, P.G.D.C.; T. E. S. Jelly, P.P.D.C.; J. C. Collie, W.M. 1271, P.G.O., and J. H. Chandler, W.M. 663, P.P.G.O. There were also present—Bro. J. M. Shum, P.M. 53, P.S.G.W. Somerset, and the Rev. W. Spraggett, Chaplain of 973. Amongst the members of private lodges, there were present from the Devizes Lodge, No. 663.—Bros. J. H. Chandler, W. M.; Joseph Burt, P.M.; Rev. T. F. Ravenshaw, P.M. and Chaplain; W. Biggs, P.M.; D. A. Gibbs, P.M. and Treas.; W. Nott, P.M. and Sec.; T. G. O'Reilly, P.M.; Rev. H. Richardson, S.W.; H. I. Ward, J.W.; Thomas Waite, P.M. Dir. of Ceremonies; W. H. Burt, Acting Steward; Dr. Hitchcock, Acting S.D.; John Marsh, J.D.; Captain Sterne, R.V.; T. Ford, W. H. Hill, J. Neate, T. Raymond, H. Howse, &c. SCOTLAND.

IMPORTANT MEETING of the PROV. GRAND LODGE of AYRSHIRE.

On Saturday afternoon, 8th March, a meeting of the Provincial Grand Lodge of Ayrshire was held in the Masons' Hall of the Mother Lodge, Kilwinning, for the purpose of considering certain complaints anent recent enactments of the Grand Lodge of Scotland. In the unavoidable absence of the P.G. Master Bro. Colonel Mure of Caldwell, the Deputy P.G.M., Bro. Captain Smith Neil of Swinridgemuir, presided. The meeting was very largely attended, representatives being present from the most distant parts of the province. The Provincial Grand office-bearers present were Capt. Neil, D.P.G.M.; D. M. Lyon, P.G.S.W.; Robert Wylie, P.G. Secretary; and J. Whinton, P.G. Treasurer. The following lodges in the province were represented by their respective Masters and Wardens—viz., the Mother Lodge, Kilwinning; St. John Kilwinning, Kilmarnock, 22; Loudon Kilwinning, Newmilns, 51; Navigation, Troon, 86; St. Marnock, Kilmarnock, 109; St. James Kilwinning, Tarbolton, 135; Ayr Operative, 138; St. John Kilwinning, Beith, 157; Thistle and Rose, Stevenston, 169; St. John Kilwinning, Largs, 173; St. Mungo, Mauchline, 179; St. Thomas Muirkirk, 201; St. Clement's Riccarton, 202; St. Paul, Ayr, 204; St. Barnabas, Old Cumnock, 230; St. John, Girvan, 237; Blair, Dalry, 290; Royal Arch, West Kilbride, 314; St. John, New Cumnock, 334; Royal Blues, Kilbirnie, 399; St. Thomas Kilwinning, Dal-mellington, 433; Neptune Kilwinning, Ardrossan, 442; St. John Cathrine, 497; and the Burns' St. Mary, Hurlford. After the lodge was opened according to ancient form, Bro. Captain Neil very ably explained the object of the meeting, and expressed an opinion that there were grievances existing in regard to Grand Lodge proceedings, and called upon the brethren to state them, and offer suggestions for their remedy, and concluded by urging upon the brethren the propriety of taking a more active share in the proceedings of the Grand Lodge.

Bro. D. M. Lyon next made an explanation regarding the representation of the Ayrshire Lodges in the Grand Lodge, showing that out of 750 members of the Grand Lodge, upwards of 300 were resident in Edinburgh, and about 100 in Glasgow, while in Ayrshire the number did not exceed 20. There were 36 lodges in the Ayrshire province, and if they were representing themselves, they could bring to bear about 110 votes on any motion coming before Grand Lodge. He said, numerically speaking, Ayrshire was the largest and the most important province under the Scottish constitution; and concluded by suggesting that, in respect to the importance of the business now being transacted by the Grand Lodge, and the preponderating influence which brethren residing in the province might exercise in the enactments of Grand Lodge, that this provincial Grand Lodge recommend the lodges within its jurisdiction to choose from their resident members brethren to represent them in the Grand Lodge communications.

In response to the invitation of the Acting P.G. Master, Bro. Neil, the brethren gave voluminous expression to their opinions on the matter, and ultimately unanimously adopted a motion to the effect that a committee—consisting of the following brethren—viz., Captain Smith Neil, R. Wylie, D. M. Lyon, H. Shaw, and J. Mackay—be appointed to draw up a petition for presentation to Grand Lodge embodying the sentiments of the meeting, and take the necessary steps for having it presented before the Grand Lodge of Scotland. The brethren before closing the lodge, awarded Captain Neil a cordial vote of thanks for the tact he displayed in the management of the meeting; for notwithstanding the strong feelings expressed regarding the late doings of Grand Lodge, the proceedings were conducted in a very harmonious manner.

MASONIC PRESENTATION AND SUPPER.

On the evening of Friday, the 28 ult. the Sir Knights of No. 3, Conclave, Cambuslang, Glasgow, encamped, to do honour to one of the Sir Knights in the shape of a presentation. Commander William Jarvil in a neat and appropriate speech made the presentation to Depute Commander James Jarvil, who in a few well-chosen sentences returned thanks for the honour done him. Thereafter the Sir Knights formed in order of procession, and marched through the principal parts of the village, headed by a fine instrumental brass band. The procession was rather of an imposing character, the Sir Knights carrying torches. The onlookers evinced much interest in the spectacle, after promenading for upwards of two hours the Sir Knights returned to their encampment and enjoyed a most excellent supper.

The remainder of the evening was spent most harmoniously by song and sentiment.

CIRCULARS ISSUED BY THE GRAND LODGE OF SCOTLAND.

Freemasons' Hall, 98, George St., Edinburgh,
8th February, 1873.

R. W. SIR AND BROTHER,—It is my duty (in the absence of Br. Stewart from serious indisposition) to send you, for the information of your Lodge, the following Enactments of Grand Lodge, passed at the Quarterly Communication held on the 3rd current, viz.—

1st, "On and after the passing of this motion the office of Grand Clerk shall cease, and its duties shall devolve on and be discharged by the Grand Secretary; that the present Grand Clerk shall be conjoined in the office of Grand Secretary with Brother Stewart, as Joint Grand Secretary, and that upon the occurrence of the first vacancy by death or resignation, the joint office shall cease, and the remaining holder of the office shall be sole Grand Secretary till the date of the next annual election, when only one Grand Secretary shall be elected; and that the laws of Grand Lodge, in so far as not coincident with this motion, be repealed."

2nd, "All Lodges holding of this Grand Lodge, whether represented or not by their Master and Wardens, shall be compelled to pay the Fees exigible for representation in Grand Lodge on the 24th June annually, if not paid by their representatives previously."

With reference to the first, the Grand Lodge having done me the honour to promote me to the position of Joint Grand Secretary, it will be part of my duty (as it shall be my earnest endeavour) in the discharge of my office to Grand Lodge, carefully to attend to and promote the interest and welfare of the Daughter Lodges, and I beg you will do me the favour to assure the office-bearers and members of your Lodge, that to the utmost of my ability I shall seek, in this direction, to render satisfaction to the Grand Lodge, by prompt, unremitting, and impartial attention to the requirements and interests of her subordinate Lodges.

As regards the second enactment, I must inform you that very numerous and constant complaints are received, that the Lodges in the Provinces are not sufficiently informed of what transpires in Grand Lodge. This, in so far as true, must be attributed either to the neglect of the Lodges in not being represented in Grand Lodge, or by their failing to sustain a regular communication with their Proxies, who are in a position to acquaint them with all the proceedings of Grand Lodge as they occur, and not leave it to the issue of the "Grand Lodge Reporter" alone to make intimation thereof.

I must also remind you that every Lodge, in express terms of its Charter, is required to attend the whole General Meetings and Quarterly Communications of the Grand Lodge by their Representatives, being their Master and Wardens for the time, or by lawful Proxies in their names, so that they, by their said Representatives, may act and vote in the Grand Lodge, and be duly certified of the proceedings thereof."

The Roll of Representatives in Grand Lodge is made up and closing annually on 1st April, and you will observe from the new Law that the Representatives are allowed time, down to the 24th June, to pay the Fees exigible for Representation, at which date, if they have not been paid by the Representatives, or if the Lodge be unrepresented, it will be my duty to request that the sum due be remitted by the Lodge.

If your Lodge is not represented at present, please inform me as early as possible before 1st April, whether it will be represented by the R.W.M. and Wardens, or by a Proxy Master, and give the Addresses of these Brethren for insertion in Grand Lodge Roll.

Any further information on this or any other subject connected with the Craft, I shall be delighted to afford you, on hearing from you.

Wishing you and your Lodge all prosperity,

I remain,

R.W. Sir and Brother,

Yours truly and fraternally,

JOHN LAURIE,

Joint Grand Sec.

Original Correspondence.

SO-CALLED, "MIRACULOUSLY DISCOVERED."

(To the Editor of The Freemason.)

In the FREEMASON of January 25th, under the heading "Multum in Parvo," Bro. J. W. Hughan, and Masonic Student, invite the brotherhood to call attention through the FREEMASON to any old MSS. or curious Masonic works that may come to their knowledge, I heartily approve of the suggestion, I think that a great deal of useful information may be diffused among the Craft by such means, and therefore beg to call attention to an old pamphlet sent to me for perusal by Bro. Leon Hyneman of Philadelphia; the pamphlet in question, is doubtless not unique; but as it is not alluded to in Bro. Hughan's "Old Charges," it must certainly be rare. The title page reads, "The secret history of the FREEMASONS: being an accidental discovery of the ceremonies in the several Lodges, upon the admittance of a brother as a Free and Accepted Mason, with the charge, oath, and private articles, given to him at the time of his admittance. Printed from the old original Record of the Society, with some observations, reflections, and critical remarks on the new Constitution Book of Freemasons, written by James Anderson, A.M., and dedicated to the Duke of Montague by J. T. Desaguliers, LL.D., Deputy Grand Master; with a short Dictionary of private signs or signals. London, Printed for Sam Briscoe, at the Bell Savage, in Ludgate Hill," etc., etc. (No date appended.)

This followed with a sarcastic preface, and next comes "The history of the Free-Masons, now miraculously discovered." Which is indeed no more nor less, than an old ritual, differing somewhat from those published by Bro. Hughan, but not more so, than they differ from each other. The language of the ritual is perfectly modern, and I at first imagined that it was a copy of Robert's Constitution, but on comparing the two, I found it was not so, I have however, afterwards discovered, that the pamphlet was described by Dr. Oliver, in the beginning of the fourth chapter of the "Revelation of a Square," and that a second edition was published in 1725. "The Dictionary of signs or signals," with very few exceptions, have reference to localities in London, where the brother to whom the signal is given, was to meet the one who signalized. Thus, there are signs, for meeting in Westminster Abbey, St. Paul's Cathedral, Royal Exchange, the "Horn Ale House" in Gutter Lane, the "Devil's Tavern," in Fleet Street, etc. And not only were localities denoted by signs, but even the time of meeting was specified by pulling the right or left ear, by rubbing the right or left eye, etc.

The "Observations and critical remarks on Anderson's Constitutions," are, as we may well imagine, full of biting satire. There is however, one piece of information in it, which I am sure, that nine-hundred and ninety out of every thousand of the present generation of Masons have never heard of, and if old legends—that is, "somebody said, that somebody said," that it is an old legend, may be relied on as having some foundation in truth? who knows, whether the legend which I am about to copy, may not also have had some foundation? Well—be that as it may, our author, who withheld his name from the publication in question, informs me, that:

"Paracelsus, who was an errant a Freemason as Adam, or any of his posterity, says, 'The miscarriage of the grand design in building the Tower of Babel, was not owing to the confusion of languages, but to too glib a tongue, whence happens the mistake in the translation from the Chaldee copy of the word languages for tongue; for one of the most expert workman in the fabric, being in bed with his wife, who had scolded him severely that night, on a sudden fell a-laughing, thinking on the great design they were about, whereupon his wife waking suddenly, demanded the reason of that laughter, which waked her from rest; the poor ingenious Freemason, who stood in awe of this terragant, at her incessant importunity at last confessed the secret, that he had entered into a combination with the rest of the builders of Babel, to carry on that work till it should reach to heaven, and he was laughing within himself to think how one day he should give her the slip; for they all designed when that was finished to make the best of their way to heaven and leave all their wives below to shift for themselves on earth, since Eve had played their father, Adam, such a slippery trick as to betray him out of Paradise, he had left it in charge to his male posterity to return the favor the first opportunity; and this they had bound themselves now by an oath of secrecy to perform. The next morning the whole camp rung with the discovery, and the confederate body of Freemasons broke up in such confusion, that they understood not one another, but by signs and tokens to depart, and so they left their tools behind. Now the learned do agree, those signs remain among the accepted Masons even to this day."

This legend, like many others, is very plausible, and like many others, it will scarcely bear criticism, but anyhow, it will serve to furnish the believers in old legends with a knowledge of the origin of Mason's signs.

Respectfully and fraternally,
Boston, U.S., JACOB NORTON.
February 10th, 1873.

(To the Editor of The Freemason.)

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—Allow me space for a few words in reply to the letter of Bro. Jno. Wood, P.M. 1073, which appeared in your last issue, upon the subject of music in our lodges, and also to thank him for the flattering terms in which he speaks of the previous letter of "Orpheus."

I am glad to find that our brethren at Keswick are so well off for musical talent, and that they do not experience the difficulty that we do in a town many times larger, and with two lodges comprising something like 150 members, and another just in process of formation. Bro. Wood mentions having encountered a little opposition to the introduction of music in the ceremonies, from some of the old hands in the lodge, and I can feelingly congratulate him upon its removal, as we have had to encounter a similar opposition from some of our brethren who cannot appreciate the elevating, and at the same time tranquilizing influence of music properly adapted to the occasion. Bro. Wood thinks my suggestion of a barrel organ rather "infra dig." Well I am not sure but what it may be, but if he will turn to my letter once more he will see I only propose it as "dernier resort," sooner than be deprived of music altogether. I have an idea that the pianoforte parts might be rendered even in a barrel organ by enclosing it in a box with a swell similar to the manual organs, and which might be worked with a lever for the foot to press. In my previous letter there were one or two typographical errors which I may perhaps be excused in pointing out. I am made to say "music manufacturers," when at all events I meant to say "musical instrument manufacturers," and "I do not mean a P.M.," when it should have read "I do not mean a pun." The omission of the little word to in the second line of the concluding paragraph causes it to read as if I expected the organ "to sing our odes" instead of the brethren. In reply to Bro. Wood's query, as to the most popular music for Craft and Mark degrees, I would advise him to write to Bro. Edwin Crow of Leicester, who is a P.M., P.P.G.O., &c., and to my mind appears thoroughly to understand what is practical, practicable and useful, in a masonic lodge in the way of music. He has published the music for the Mark and also for the first degree, and as I am given to understand, has the second and third degrees now in press. As the price of each number is only sixpence, a copy can be provided for every member of a lodge at a small expense. Pardon me Bro. Editor for having intruded so much upon your space, the earnest wish of my mind is to see music esteemed as an essential part of our ceremonies, and that wish must be my excuse.

Yours, truly and fraternally,
ORPHEUS.

NOTITIÆ TEMPLARIÆ.

To the Editor of The Freemason.

Dear Sir and Brother,—

A word or two in reply to the Past Grand Officer, who writes in your last number under the head of "Notitiæ Templariæ."

I cannot quite understand what it is he quarrels with, as to the new Statutes, unless it is that he was not asked to assist in making them. He alludes to the "time-honoured regulations of the old Statutes," and yet supposes that "both the old and the new were compiled by a single individual, and submitted to a committee, who placed implicit confidence in the knowledge, astuteness, and good faith of the compiler, and were then passed by Grand Conclave." I would now ask Past Grand Officer what more he would require than this.

P.G.O. says he remembers a noble lord accusing (unjustly) a very high and eminent Sir Knight of attempting to pass a measure in Grand Conclave by a side wind. I was present at the time he alludes to, and quite agreed with the remarks that were made by the two noble lords as to their opinion of the improper and undignified attempt; and Grand Conclave, by their vote on the occasions fully endorsed the remarks of the noble lord. But there is no comparison between that case and the passing of these new Statutes.

I have attended Grand Conclave many times, and believe it is quite able to understand what is brought before it, and to decide; and when measures are brought before it in due course, as these New Statutes were, and duly passed, I think it ill-becomes a single member to complain because the decision differs in some way from his own idea.

He surely ought to recollect the charge that was given to him at the time he was admitted into Freemasonry, namely, that he was to cheerfully acquiesce in all resolutions passed by a majority of the brethren.—I am,

Yours fraternally,

EXCELSIOR.

THE ORDERS OF THE TEMPLE AND HOSPITAL.

To the Editor of The Freemason.

Dear Sir and Brother,—

As a Blue Mason I have been much interested in seeing, by means of the Notes and Correspondence in The Freemason, how members of certain high degrees are knocking their heads against each other. I honestly pity poor Bro. Holmes—"Lupus" and "Civis" had already knocked him out of time, when down came "Sero Sed Serio" who (acting well up to his motto) tripped him up and sat upon him. Such a calamity could never have happened to our dear brother had he stuck to the old colour, but he was ambitious. He began to worship the sun almost before the dawn. Poor Bro. Holmes! he deserved a better fate; he has fought stoutly, after his fashion, for his new masters, Colquhoun and Bowyer; unluckily the latter has no visible means of rewarding him, as, though he has made use of him, I doubt whether he would recommend him to any small office under the Pope; but from the former at least he may expect reward, and a Grand Cross of the brand new "Order of the Temple and Hospital" would indeed be most fitting reward for so well-intentioned, though so unfortunate a champion.

But Sir, let us spare pity for our unlucky brother, there are grounds for giving him sincere and hearty thanks. Emra Holmes is indeed a brother who for his services to Blue Masonry might well be remembered by Grand Lodge with the envied purple and gold of high office. He has been the instrument of exposing the absurdities which Masons are apt to commit when they leave the beaten track of pure and ancient Freemasonry. He has shown us that the Masonic Templars have worn crosses, and mantles, and swords, until they have got to believe that "fine feathers make fine birds;" until they have swallowed a set of Statutes which it is difficult to believe a body of sensible Masons could digest, a set of Statutes whose title at once ignores all Masonic origin, and pretends to something entirely un-masonic.

More extraordinary still, when one or two brethren, who are evidently not ashamed of their Masonic origin, and of their allegiance to Grand Lodge, have come forward in opposition, Bro. Holmes has gone the length of parading the opinions of a Roman Catholic Baronet with the view of confuting his opponents. Masonry must indeed have reached a low ebb when such an opinion can thus daringly be introduced to guide a party or support an argument in Freemasonry. What have we, as Masons, in common with Sir George Bowyer? Who and what is he to us? Simply a man whose delight it must naturally be, whose absolute duty it is, to sow dissension amongst Freemasons.

Whether the "honourable body" which exists in England and claims a true descent for the Ancient Order of Hospitallers (more modernly known as the "Order of Malta") has a true claim or not is a matter which cannot possibly concern Freemasons, who, because they are Masons, and for no other reason, are eligible to belong to a Masonic degree known until recently to the "Masonic Order of the Temple." Bro. Holmes has gone out of his way to attack a body to which he never can belong, and which is not Masonic; Cui bono? I think he has committed a grave error as a Mason.

I would strongly urge my brethren who are beyond the pale of the so-called "Order of the Temple" to carefully read the entire discussion which has so long occupied the columns of The Freemason. They would then, perhaps, thank Providence that they are still, as "Civis" puts it, "honest men and Masons." I think their thanks are due to you, too, for having permitted Bro. Holmes to afford them an opportunity of doing so.

fraternally yours,

TRUE BLUE.

BRO. HOLMES'S NOTES.

To the Editor of The Freemason.

Dear Sir and Brother,—

I feel that I shall only be giving utterance to the sentiments of many of my brethren, when I most emphatically protest against the unnecessary and unwarrantable attack made by Bro. Holmes in his "Notes" as published in your columns upon the English Language of the Order of St. John of Jerusalem.

There was not the slightest occasion for dragging the English Language into the discussion.

If the members of the Masonic Order of Malta have the legitimate right to the title and status of Knights of St. John which Bro. Holmes would fain claim for them, he had simply to state the facts which establish and demonstrate that right. If they have not, it does not in any way better their case to assert (even if it were true) that another body has assumed the same title and status upon insufficient grounds. Two "wrongs" cannot make one "right;" nor can a false claim upon the part of one body be justified or excused by the fact (real or alleged) that a similar claim has been made by another. Bro. Holmes has set his heart upon "a universal brotherhood of gentlemen" which he considers a "grander idea" than a "universal brotherhood of men." He does not seem in this matter to be going the way to realise his idea. The first canon of "gentle" conduct is always to respect the feelings of others, and never to inflict unnecessary pain. That Bro. Holmes has violated this canon by stepping out of his way to make a needless and unprovoked attack upon the English Language—a body of honourable persons, quietly engaged in the high and holy work of ministering to suffering humanity—is, I trust, for their own sakes, the opinion of many members of the Craft, and of the chivalric Orders connected therewith, who are readers of your paper. It is certainly the opinion of yours, fraternally,

M. A. OXON and E. C.

THE BENEVOLENT FUND FESTIVAL.

To the Editor of The Freemason.

Dear Sir and Brother,—

I beg to thank you for your prompt insertion of my advertisement, in answer to which Bro. Binckes, into whose charge the bracelet had been given, very kindly communicated with me, and thus enabled me to claim it; but the brother who took my coat, and knew at the time that it was not his own, returned to the hall next morning and claimed his own, but did not return the one he had taken away. He refused to give his address, but promised to send it (the coat) to the head waiter per return, which he had not done at 6 o'clock on Wednesday, the 5th instant. He has been applied to personally, I have written to him, and he acknowledges having seen the advertisement, still he refuses to return the coat.

I am only young in the Craft, but I thought a Mason was quite above such conduct. I enclose his name, but do not wish it published, as I have no desire that the brethren of his lodge, &c., should feel disgraced by having such a dishonourable brother amongst them.

Yours faithfully and fraternally,

HENRY W. GOMPERTZ,

Earl of Zetland Lodge, 1364.

MASONIC HALLS.

To the Editor of The Freemason.

Dear Sir and Brother,—

Is it lawful and right for the members of a Craft Lodge, built and solely used for Masonic purposes and duly consecrated, to hold a ballad concert in the lodge-room, and to allow ladies and gentlemen (not Masons) to be present? Your reply or that of any of your readers will oblige.

Yours very fraternally,

AN OLD P.M.

ROYAL MASONIC BENEVOLENT INSTITUTION.

To the Editor of The Freemason.

Dear Sir and Brother,—

I expect you will be as much surprised as I was to find that our Institutions are not lighted with gas, and that the death of one of the inmates may probably be laid to that cause. Had there been a light in the hall when poor Mrs. Parish was coming down stairs, she would have seen she had another stair yet to go, and possibly have been alive now instead of in her grave. I would ask the simple question, "why have they not gas?" Not from want of funds; nor is there any difficulty about laying it on, as it is laid on up to the entrance. Then I say, Sir, by all means let them have it. They have all seen brighter days, and no doubt been used all their lives to gas, and now they require it most through failing eyesight and old age, they must sit and read by a tallow candle. Every male inmate has been asked the question, "what do you most stand in need of?" Let the same question be put to them now, and hear their answer. Hoping, Sir, you see the desirability of inserting this, with a few remarks from your own able pen,

I am, yours fraternally,

W. D. MAY, P.M. 700.

UNAUTHORISED OFFICES.

To the Editor of The Freemason.

Dear Sir and Brother,—

Referring to the letter signed "H" in your number of the 22nd of February, some years ago I had some correspondence with the P.G.M. of my province as to the appointment of a brother to the office of M.C. The first reply was a letter congratulating the lodge of which I was W.M. on its great prosperity, so great as to require the services of a Man Cook. In the Book of Constitutions no mention is made of a "Director" of Ceremonies, but if Provincial Grand Masters insist on calling the "Master" of Ceremonies the "Director," we cannot be surprised if the members of private lodges do the same.

In your issue of 15th ult., I observe a brother is mentioned as D.P.M. What on earth does this mean? It is to me a greater puzzle than my M.C. was to my Provincial Grand Master.

I have also noticed that Deputy Provincial Grand Masters are often styled Right Worshipful. I have a strong impression that some years ago (I think 1865) Lord Zetland caused a circular to be issued censuring the assumption of this title as unwarrantable. Can you give your readers any information on this point?

While I am on this subject of titles, can you say which is correct, Senior Grand Warden, &c., or Grand Senior Warden, &c. Many old Masons maintain that the officers of Grand Lodge are Grand Officers of the rank to which they are appointed, and that the Senior or Junior only denotes their respective positions, and that it should always be mentioned first. There appears to be great confusion in the general practice, and I have seen reports in which both forms were used, as though a matter of indifference; but that correctness cannot be a matter of indifference must be my apology for troubling you.

B. E. T. A.

To the Editor of The Freemason.

Dear Sir and Brother,—

In reply to Bro. Bagshawe, at page 169, I have only to say that my using an initial signature was only to avoid an appearance of advertising myself in The Freemason as being wiser than my fellows; and as good wine needs no bush, it matters not one jot who the brother is who writes the article, provided the information it contains be correct.

I have again refer to my brother to page 61 of the Book of Constitutions, and there he will find the names of all the officers that it is possible for a private lodge to appoint viz., the Master the two Wardens, two Deacons, Inner Guard, and Tyler. There must also be a Treasurer and Secretary. These are the regular officers; the permissive officers, are a Chaplain, Master of Ceremonies, and Stewards; all others are encroachments. It is to be observed that there is no Organist or Standard Bearer mentioned, for the simple reason that there is no such recognised officer in a private lodge. It is only of comparatively recent date that music has been generally used in our lodges, and that may account for the omission in the Book of Constitutions; but that omission need not prevent any musical brother giving his services at the organ, as all I contend for is that he is not a recognised officer of the lodge as such, and not entitled to be invested on the day of installation.

With respect to the office of Standard Bearer, there is none such in a lodge, or even a Prov. G. Lodge; and if lodges choose to do such an absurd thing as to exhibit a standard, and then say we must have a Standard Bearer to carry it, because we have got it, they must expect to be laughed at for their pains. By referring to the table of precedent in the Book of Constitutions, page 18, there is no official rank given them even, in Grand Lodge. All that the G.M. can do is to appoint any Master Mason, as occasion shall require, to carry his standard, but they are not, by their appointment, members of Grand Lodge, or entitled to wear the clothing of a Grand Officer (see Book of Constitutions, page, 40 and 41, title Grand Standard Bearers).

Several provinces have discontinued appointing Provincial Grand Standard Bearers, because they found such an officer had no existence, and I refer you to the Province of West Lancashire as one that has done so, although the Provincial Grand Master is entitled to bear arms, or, in other words, a standard, which is generally carried by a Tyler or some Master Mason for the occasion. As I before remarked, these observations do not apply to Provincial Grand Chapters, for there the Royal Arch regulations recognise the office of Standard Bearer.

Yours fraternally,

H.

A MUSICAL RITUAL.

To the Editor of The Freemason.

Dear Sir and Brother,—

Will you kindly allow me to state, for the benefit of "Orpheus" and all whom it may concern, that I have compiled a Musical Masonic Ritual for use in the Stour Valley Lodge, which will, I think, meet his wishes. It consists of hymns for opening and closing the lodge in the three degrees, together with hymns and verses selected from the volume of the Sacred Law, to be sung and chanted during the ceremonies of initiation, passing, and raising. They are all thoroughly appropriate to the teachings of the degrees, and are so arranged as not materially to lengthen the ceremonies. The music consists of simple tunes and chants, which may be sung in unison or three-part harmony, and is within the compass of any ordinary voices. At present the brethren sing from MS. copies which they have made, but after a short probation in order to make it as perfect as possible, the little work will be printed in a cheap form, and the profits, if any, applied to one of the Masonic Charities. Of this due notice will be given in the advertising columns of The Freemason.

I am, fraternally yours,

A. ORLANDO STEED,
Organist, 1224.

BRITISH, FOREIGN AND COLONIAL.

THE VIENNA EXHIBITION.—We have been requested to announce that the W.M. of the "Vienna Lodge Humanitas" (Dreilaufergasse No. 7, first floor) invites foreign brethren to visit the lodge during the exhibition, as it has resolved that during that time some brother, should be present in the lodge rooms to receive foreign brethren daily from 10. a.m. till 7. p.m.

At the Anniversary Festival of the Royal Masonic Benevolent Institution the largest Steward's list presented was that of Bro. G. W. Verry, P.M. Yarborough Lodge, No. 554, amounting to no less than £206 1s.

The fifty-sixth anniversary of the Stability Lodge of Instruction, No. 217 (Bro. Henry Muggeridge, P.M., W.M.), will be held at the City Terminus Hotel, Cannon-street, on Friday, the 25th April, at half-past five o'clock, when the lecture of the second degree will be worked in sections by the following Brethren, viz.:—First section, Bro. John Jonas, J.W. 715; second section, Bro. R. T. Eames, J.W. 22; third section, Bro. J. B. Scriven, W.M. 5; fourth and fifth sections, Bro H. Muggeridge, P.M. 192 and 715. The V.W. Bro. Aeneas J. McIntyre, Grand Registrar, will reside at the banquet, which will be on the table at half-past eight o'clock.

Mr. James Adley Reeves has joined the directorate of the Surrey Masonic Hall Company.

We hear with regret the melancholy intelligence that Bro. Alexander James Stewart, W.S., R.W. Senior Joint Grand Secretary, Grand Lodge of Scotland, died at Musselburgh, on the 8th inst., at a quarter past five o'clock.

Bro. J. W. Barratt, P.M. and Treas. 169 &c., was on Thursday evening, the 6th inst., while returning from meeting of H.C., knocked down and run over by a reckless driver of a cart. We are happy to learn, however that, although the vehicle passed over Bro. Barratt's legs, fortunately no bones were broken. The sad occurrence still keeps our worthy brother confined to his bed in great pain.

On Wednesday last Bro. Sidney Spencer, of the City Terminus Hotel, was entertained at dinner in his own house by his brother hotel-keepers, and presented with a handsome testimonial, as a recognition of his services in connection with the repeal of the tax upon hotel servants. Mr. Hall, of the Great Western Hotel, Birmingham, presided, and, in proposing the toast of the evening, said the hotel-keepers of the country were deeply grateful to Bro. Spencer for what he had done on their behalf.

The Editor of the Cosmopolitan Masonic Calendar will be glad to receive from the Secretaries of the American Lodges, not later than September 1st., the information necessary for the issue of 1874.

To ensure insertion in the Calendar all alterations and other notices from Colonial and Foreign parts should arrive at the office, 198, Fleet-street, London, by the above mentioned date.

BRO. JACOB NORTON AND THE "OLD MS."

Bro. Norton has done well to call attention to "The Secret History of the Freemasons," and I hope his reference to the pamphlet will be the means of leading to a decision as to the year in which it first appeared. Evidently in the earliest half of the last century, but in which decade at present I cannot myself fix. I have a copy of the pamphlet (8vo. pp. 47.)* and have already virtually reprinted it in my "Masonic Sketches and Reprints" page p42 part 2. ("Unpublished Records of the Craft.") The Masonic Student will find on comparing the "Secret History MS.," with the "Harleian MS. 2054, British Museum, that they are one and the same, and will be convinced that the author of the pamphlet in question had access to this number of the Harleian MSS. at the time of preparing his wonderful work for the press. At page 8. of my "Old Charges of British Freemasons" the Harleian MS. 2054 is alluded to, and to have rendered the paragraph complete I ought to have noticed the transcript of it in the "Secret History" mentioned by Bro. Norton, but it had escaped my attention at the time. A second edition was not published in 1725, for the work Bro. Norton quotes from, the Rev. Dr. Oliver's "Revelations of a Square" was "The Grand Mystery of Freemasons discovered," of A.D. 1724, the second part of which is dated 1725, and from which the author of "Secret History" appears to quote at length towards the end of his pamphlet, which must therefore have been issued subsequently. "The Grand Mystery of Freemasons discovered" is reprinted in the "Freemasons' Monthly Magazine" for September, 1855, and September and December, 1857. Looking over Dr. Kloss's "Bibliographie der Freemaurerei" I have not found any reference to Briscoe's work, but if any brother has been successful in tracing it, he will kindly inform the readers of The Freemason the page of the work for reference. Thanking Bro. Norton for his communication, I must now conclude this notice.—W. J. HUGHAN.

PROSPECTUS.

The Surrey Masonic Hall Company has been formed with the object of providing a Building specially adapted to the requirements of Masonic Lodges, Chapters, and Conclaves, held in the South Metropolitan District; and in connection therewith, a large Hall, for the general use of the public when not engaged for Masonic purposes.

This project has met with the approval of Brethren high in the Craft, and been very favourably received at the several Public Meetings that have been held.

The Site for the Building is in the Camberwell New Road, lying between the Post Office and the County Court, close to the Station of the London, Chatham, and Dover Railway, and to the Tramways from Brixton, Vauxhall, Westminster, Blackfriars, Peckham, and Greenwich. It possesses a frontage of about 70 feet, with a depth of about 150, and has been secured for a term of Ninety-nine Years, at a very low Ground-rent. The plans have been prepared by a well-known Architect and Member of the Craft, and embrace every convenience that long experience could possibly suggest.

The propriety of holding Masonic Meetings in buildings devoted to the purpose is universally acknowledged by the Craft, and the advantages have been fully proved in many provincial towns where Masonic Halls have been erected. It will also supply a want, long felt in this neighbourhood, of a commodious Public Building.

Although the chief object of the Company is to promote the good of Freemasonry, the Directors are of opinion, from estimates carefully prepared, that the Shareholders will also derive a very fair return in a commercial point of view. They therefore, with full confidence, invite the active support of their Brethren. A large number of shares have already been subscribed for.

The estimated annual expenditure for Ground-rent, Taxes, Gas, Coals and sundries about £200.

The estimated annual receipts from Lodges, Chapters, Lodges of Instruction, Conclaves, &c., including rent of Wine cellars, about £220; and from rental of Hall for Concerts, Public Meetings, &c., about £300. And the estimated cost of building and furnishing the Hall, capable of accomodating about 700 persons, in addition to spacious Masonic Rooms, from £2,500 to £3,000, thus shewing 10 per cent, interest on the capital. The Directors, however, fairly anticipate a larger return from public lettings.

The Company is registered under Table A of the Companies Act, 1862. A copy of the Memorandum of Association can be seen at the Offices of the Company.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE. THE ORIGINAL AND ONLY GENUINE.

CHLORODYNE is admitted by the Profession to be the most wonderful and valuable remedy ever discovered. CHLORODYNE is the best remedy known for Coughs, Consumption, Bronchitis, Asthma. CHLORODYNE effectually checks and arrests those too often fatal diseases—Diphtheria, Fever, Croup, Ague. CHLORODYNE acts like a charm in Diarrhoea, and is the only specific in Cholera and Dysentery. CHLORODYNE effectually cuts short all attacks of Epilepsy, Hysteria, Palpitation and Spasms. CHLORODYNE is the only palliative in Neuralgia, Rheumatism, Gout, Cancer, Toothache, Meningitis, &c.
From Lord FRANCIS CONYNHAM, Mount Charles, Donegal, 11th December, 1868.

"Lord Francis Conynham, who this time last year bought some of Dr. J. Collis Browne's Chlorodyne from Mr. Davenport, and has found it a most wonderful medicine, will be glad to have half a dozen bottles sent at once to the above address."

"Earl RUSSELL communicated to the College of Physicians that he had received a dispatch from Her Majesty's Consul at Manilla, to the effect that Cholera had been raging fearfully, and that the ONLY remedy of any service was CHLORODYNE."—See Lancet, Dec. 1, 1864.

From W. VERSALIUS PETTIGREW, M.D., Hon. F.R.C.S. England; Formerly Lecturer on Anatomy and Physiology at St. George's School of Medicine.

"I have no hesitation in stating, after a fair trial of Chlorodyne, that I have never met with any medicine so efficacious as an Anti-spasmodic and Sedative. I have used it in Consumption, Asthma, Diarrhoea, and other diseases, and am most perfectly satisfied with the results."

From Dr. THOMAS SANDIFORD, Passage West, Cork.

"I will thank you to send me a further supply of Chlorodyne. It was the most efficacious remedy I ever used, affording relief in violent attacks of Spasms within a minute after being taken. One patient in particular, who had suffered for years with periodical attacks of Spasms of a most painful nature, and unable to obtain relief from other remedies, such as Opium, &c., finds nothing so prompt and efficacious as Chlorodyne."

From J. McGRIGOR CROSS, M.D., M.R.C.P. London, late Staff Surgeon to H.M.F.

"Sir,—After prescribing Dr. J. Collis Browne's Chlorodyne for the last three years in severe cases of Neuralgia and Tic-Doloureux, I feel that I am in a position to testify to its valuable effects. Really, in some cases it acts like a charm, when all other means had failed. Without being asked for this report, I must come forward and state my candid opinion that it is a most valuable medicine, and I have recommended several Chemists in this neighbourhood not to be without it for prescriptions."

From Jno. E. GOULSTONE, M.D., late Principal Surgeon to the Steamship "Great Eastern."

"I can confidently state that Chlorodyne is an admirable Sedative and Anti-spasmodic, having used it in Neuralgia, Hysteria, Asthma, and Consumption, with remarkably favourable results. It relieved a fit of Asthma in four minutes, where the patient had suffered eleven years in a most distressing manner, no previous remedy having had so immediate and beneficial an effect."

From Dr. B. J. BOUTON, and Co., Newcastle.

"We have made pretty extensive use of Chlorodyne in our practice lately, and look upon it as an excellent direct Sedative and Anti-spasmodic. It seems to allay pain and irritation, in whatever organ and from whatever cause. It induces a feeling of comfort and quietude not obtainable by any other remedy, and it seems to possess this great advantage over all other sedatives, that it leaves no unpleasant after effects."

J. C. BAKER, Esq., M.D., Bideford.

"It is, without doubt, the most valuable and certain Anodyne we have."

CAUTION.—BEWARE OF PIRACY AND IMITATIONS.

CAUTION.—Vice-Chancellor Sir W. Page Wood stated that Dr. J. Collis Browne was undoubtedly the Inventor of CHLORODYNE; that the story of the defendant, Freeman, was deliberately untrue, which, he regretted to say, had been sworn to.—See Times, 13th July, 1864.

Sold in Bottles at 1/1 1/2, 2/9, 4/6, and 11/0 each. None is genuine without the words "Dr. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE" on the Government Stamp. Overwhelming Medical Testimony accompanies each Bottle.

CROSBY'S BALSAMIC COUGH ELIXIR. DISEASES OF THE LUNGS AND AIR-VESSELS.

CROSBY'S BALSAMIC COUGH ELIXIR. Opium, Narcotics, and Squills are too often invoked to give relief in Coughs, Colds, and all Pulmonary diseases. Instead of such fallacious remedies, which yield momentary relief at the expense of enfeebling the digestive organs, and thus increasing that debility which lies at the root of the malady, modern science points to CROSBY'S BALSAMIC COUGH ELIXIR as the true remedy.

SELECT TESTIMONIAL. Dr. Rooke, Scarborough, author of the "Anti-Lancet," says: "I have repeatedly observed how very rapidly and invariably it subdued cough, pain, and irritation of the chest in cases of Pulmonary Consumption, and I can, with the greatest confidence, recommend it as a most valuable adjunct to an otherwise strengthening treatment for this disease." This medicine, which is free from opium and squills, not only allays the local irritation, but improves digestion and strengthens the constitution. Hence it is used with the most signal success in Asthma, Bronchitis, Consumption, Coughs, Influenza, Night Sweats of Consumption, Quinsy, and all affections of the throat and chest. Sold in bottles at 1s. 6d., 4s. 6d., and 11s. each, by all respectable Chemists, and wholesale by Jas. M. Crosby, Chemist, Scarborough.  Invaders should read Crosby's Prize Treatise on "Diseases of the Lungs and Air-Vessels," a copy of which can be had Gratis of all Chemists.

STOCKTON-ON-TEES.—Tees Lodge (No. 509).—The monthly meeting of this lodge, held at the lodge-room, Mason's-court, Stockton-on-Tees, on Thursday, the 6th inst., was a gathering of more than usual interest, it being the occasion of the presentation of the two testimonials to the Immediate Past Master, Bro. William Metcalfe Watson, P. Prov. J.G.D., as a mark of appreciation after the highly efficient and admirable manner in which he has discharged the important and onerous duties of that office during the last two years. Amongst the brethren present were the following:—Bros. G. Ellis, W.M.; W. M. Watson, P.M., P.P.J.G.D.; W. Best, P.M., P.P.J.G.D.; J. Robinson, P.M., Treasurer; M. D. Wood, S.W.; J. Bowran, J.W.; J. H. Hart, Secretary; W. M. Best, S.D.; E. C. Naish, J.D.; G. Happer, I.G.; J. Walton, Organist; J. J. H. Bellringer and W. J. B. Casley, Stewards; J. Trenholme, Tyler; C. M. Norman, W. R. Bolsover, A. Levy, J. L. Potts, W. Hird, S. G. Allan, A. de L. Lang, J. Brotherton, C. Jordison, and the following visitors:—Bros. J. Trotter, P.M.; J. H. Jackson, P.M.; J. G. Mann, P.M.; I. Walton, W.M.; N. Lye, J. Usher, A. S. Fowler, C. Bone, J. Rose, B. R. Smith, all of the Lodge of Philanthropy, 940; T. Shepherd, 302, Bradford; J. Vitty, 25, Georgetown, California. The lodge having been opened in due form, and the ordinary business transacted, the ballot was taken for Bro. J. R. Pearson, surgeon, who was admitted as a joining member to this lodge from the Phoenix Lodge, No. 516, Stowmarket, and Bro. J. H. Tarleton, surgeon, who was also admitted as a joining member from the Lodge of Philanthropy, No. 940. Two other brethren were then passed to the second degree. The Worshipful Master Bro. George Ellis then rose, and in the name of the brethren of the lodge presented to Bro. W. M. Watson, the Immediate Past Master, an address of thanks which was as follows:—"Tees Lodge, No. 509, Stockton-on-Tees. At a meeting of this lodge held February 6th 1873, it was moved by Bro. W. Best, P.M., and seconded by Bro. G. Ellis, W.M., and carried unanimously that the best thanks of this lodge be given to Bro. W. M. Watson, P.M., P.P.J.G.D. for his very valuable and indefatigable services as Worshipful Master of this lodge during the years 1871 and 1872. And that the foregoing resolution be entered upon the minutes, and engrossed upon vellum, and presented to him, together with a gold Past Masters' Presentation Jewel, subscribed for by the members of this lodge, in recognition of his services. J. H. Hart, Sec." The address has been very neatly engrossed on vellum, within a beautifully illuminated border, by Messrs. Peters and Son, of York. The W.M. in making the presentation referred in very eulogistic terms to the thoroughly efficient manner in which Bro. Watson had presided over the lodge for the last two years, and to the kindly feeling that was entertained towards him by the whole of the members. After handing to Bro. Watson the address, he called upon Bro. W. Best to present to Bro. Watson, a gold P.M.'s Jewel. In doing so he said it was with no ordinary feeling he rose on that occasion to discharge the duty which had been entrusted to him by the brethren of the lodge, to convey to Bro. Watson their strong expression of kindly feeling towards him, for the very zealous, efficient and able conduct displayed by him in the discharge of the important duties of Master of the Tees Lodge during the two years he had had the honour of holding the appointment of Worshipful Master. He had been deputed by the brethren to present to him a Past Master's Jewel, as a token of their high appreciation of his valuable services, and in recognition of the grand principles inculcated in Freemasonry; not looking merely at the services of Freemasonry, but diving deep down into its mysteries, and embodying in their life and conduct the noble and elevating truths it inculcated, and enriching and enlarging the mind by their grand teaching. In handing over the jewel he expressed a hope that Bro. Watson would be long spared to wear it, and that it would be held by him a lasting memorial of the kindly feeling evinced towards him by the brethren. Bro. J. Robinson, P.M., then said: "Worshipful Sir, As the oldest Freemason in Stockton, I cannot let this opportunity pass without saying how much I have been pleased with the working of this lodge by Bro. Watson. I may say I have seen the greater part of the Master workings of this lodge, and taking all in all, I can say that the way in which it has been done during the last two years, by Bro. Watson, has been second to none." The jewel was one of the most elegant and highly finished we have seen. It was composed of 18 carat gold. It was most tastefully executed; in the centre blue were displayed the emblems of a P.M. surmounted by the arms of the borough of Stockton and surrounded by the motto "Palmas Qui Meruit Ferat," and suspended from a dark blue ribbon, with three clasps bearing the name of the lodge. On the back was inscribed the following: "Presented to Bro. W. M. Watson, P.M., P. Prov. J.G.D., by the members of the Tees Lodge, No. 509, Stockton-on-Tees, as a mark of their esteem, and in recognition of his valuable services as W.M. of the lodge, during the years 1871 and 1872." Bro. Watson, in reply, said: "Worshipful Master, Bros. Best and Robinson, and brethren of this lodge; on many occasions I have had the duties to perform in this lodge since I was first elected into office, but never before have I felt so utterly incompetent to adequately express my thanks to you, brethren of the Tees Lodge, as I do on this occasion. But, believe me, if I do not fully express to you my thanks, it is not because I undervalue the handsome jewel and vote of thanks I have just received at your hands, but it is because I value them the more, and more fully appreciate the honour you have conferred upon me. It is, I believe, seven years to-night since I was admitted into this lodge as a candidate for Freemasonry and little did I then think that in so comparatively short a term, I should be the recipient of two such handsome testimonials; and I can assure you that when wearing this jewel, either here or in any other lodges, it will be with no small degree of pride that I shall be able to say that it was given to me by the individual members of the Tees Lodge, and this pleasure will be enhanced by the fact that ever since I have known the Tees Lodge, I never remember ever hearing any expressions made use of at all approaching a spirit of contention, or in the least degree tainted with ill-will. May that feeling long continue in the lodge. I can assure you it will always afford me great pleasure to assist the W.M. at any time when he may require it, and my most sincere wish for Freemasonry in general, and this lodge in particular, is, that it may flourish and abide. Again, accept my best thanks for the testimonials, and I can assure you they will be highly prized gems at all times." The lodge was shortly afterwards closed, and the brethren sat down to refreshment, after which the usual loyal, patriotic, masonic, and complimentary toasts were drunk, interspersed with vocalism by various brethren, Bro. J. Walton presiding at the pianoforte. The evening was spent in that cordial good feeling which does, and we hope always will, characterise the gatherings of the Craft.

ABERYSTWITH.—Aberystwith Lodge (No. 1072).—The regular monthly meeting of the members of this flourishing lodge was held at the Belle Vue Royal Hotel, on the 6th inst., under the presidency of Bro. George T. Smith, P.M., Prov. G. Sec. Western Division, South Wales, who referred in graceful terms to the indisposition of the W.M. (Bro. William Williams, F.R.C.S.) wishing him better health. Bro. Smith was ably supported, and, after the minutes of the previous meeting had been read and confirmed, raised four brethren; passed two, and initiated Dr. Pugh, of Machynlleth, all the ceremonies being conducted by Bro. Smith in his usual careful and impressive manner. The grants of £10 10s. to the Boys' School, and of a similar amount to the Aberystwith Infirmary, were unanimously confirmed. One gentleman was proposed for initiation. We have great pleasure in congratulating the lodge upon the number and status of their initiates during the past six months; it is keeping up its character for carefulness in propositions, and is leading the "van" in the Province. The business of the evening being concluded the lodge was closed in perfect harmony, and the brethren adjourned to an excellent supper. On the removal of the cloth the acting W.M. proposed the usual loyal and Masonic toasts, and in giving that of "The Wardens' and Officers' expressed the hope that they, in particular, would be regular and punctual in their attendance, and painstaking in their work, so that each brother, as he arrived in the East, might be able to discharge the duties attached to that important position, with satisfaction to himself, pleasure to those members from whom he might have received instruction, and be competent to communicate the light to the brethren beneath him. Bro. Smith, in conclusion, reminded the officers that the W.M. had reposed great trust in them, and that it was their duty, as it should be their pleasure, to support him on every occasion when summoned.

LIVERPOOL.—Temple Lodge (No. 1094).—The usual monthly meeting of this lodge was held on Wednesday the 12th inst., at the Masonic Temple, Liverpool. Bro. R. Whitney, 1013, &c. After the minutes had been read and confirmed, Messrs. Thomas A. Wilson, Edward Lovett, and Edward Charter, were duly initiated into the mysteries and privileges of the Order. Bro. the Rev. T. C. Ewbank, Bros. Dean, Callender, and Guy were afterwards raised to the sublime degree of M.M.'s, and Bro. R. Bennett, Sec. 1299, was received as a joining member. Bro. R. R. Martin, S.W., was afterwards unanimously elected W.M., and Bro. J. Wood was also re-elected Treasurer for the eighth time. After business, the brethren sat down to an excellent repast.

Mark Masonry.

The Cheltenham and Key Stone Lodge of Mark Masters, by dispensation from Grand Lodge, held its first moveable meeting at the Masonic Hall, at the Spread Eagle Hotel, Gloucester, on Thursday, the 6th instant. The W.M., Bro. William Forth, presided, and the following chairs were occupied:—Senior Warden, Bro. John Walker, M.A.; Junior Warden, Bro. Dr. Thomas Smith; Master Overseer, Bro. James Bruton; Senior Overseer, Bro. Edward Tew Smith; Junior Overseer, Bro. Past Master Henry Jeff; Senior Deacon, Bro. P. M. Martin Ricketts; Junior Deacon, Bro. Balcomb; Secretary, Bro. W. R. Holman; Registrar, Bro. P. M. J. Brook Smith (Cheltenham College); Inner Guard, Bro. F. G. Roberts. There were four candidates for advancement, Bros. Robertson, Haselton, Coole, and Shadgett, and the ceremony was most efficiently performed by the W.M., assisted by his officers, who were all well up to their work. The lecture was delivered by Past Master Ricketts. At the banquet the usual loyal and Mark Masters' toasts were proposed and honoured. Bro. Major Basevi, the D.P.G.M. of Mark Masters, Bengal, responded for Grand Lodge. This moveable meeting was in every respect a success, and if it should be the pleasure of Grand Lodge that it shall be repeated, the movement will be very popular and acceptable amongst the brethren.

Knights Templar.

CONSECRATION OF THE DE WARRENE PRECEPTORY, BRIGHTON; AND INDUCTION OF PROV. GRAND PRIOR OF SUSSEX.

On Friday, 7th March, the above-mentioned most interesting ceremonies took place at the Pavilion Rooms, in the presence of a large number of distinguished members of this ancient and chivalric Order.

Among those present were the following Knights:—

The Right Hon. the Earl of Limerick, Lord Great Prior of England (designate) Provincial Grand Master of Bristol; Capt. N. G. Phillips, Provincial Grand Prior of Suffolk and Cambridge; Sir Patrick de Colquhoun, Q.C., Great Chancellor of the Order in England; Major Shadwell Clerke, Past Provincial Grand Commander, West Indies, and Provincial Grand Prior Nominated of Sussex; William Tinkler, Grand Vice-Chancellor of the Order in England; F. S. Gower, Past Grand Chaplain; W. Hyde Pullen, Grand Superintendent of Works; Turner, Past Grand Captain of Lines; Charles Horsley, Past Provincial Grand Captain of Surrey; T. Lane, Kt. Preceptor of the Sussex Preceptory, Eastbourne; J. Lucas Allen, Kt. Preceptor (nominate) of the De Warrene Preceptory, Brighton; the Rev. J. A. M. Little, M.A.; Henry Sanderson; Captain Edward Walker, Dr. J. Trollope, Dr. F. Morris, and many others.

The Masonic Rooms of the Pavilion were handsomely and appropriately fitted up with the paraphernalia peculiar to the order of the Knights Templar, and presented a most imposing spectacle. At three o'clock, the hour fixed for the ceremony, the Knights assembled in knightly garb. Having formed the Templars, "arch of steel," the Consecrating Officer, the Very Eminent Knight Major Shadwell Clerke, entered, accompanied by the Very Eminent Sir Knts. the Earl of Limerick, Captain N. G. Phillips, Sir Patrick de Colquhoun, &c., and, having ascended the dais, proceeded to open a Preceptory of the Order. The object of this present meeting having been explained and the Warrant of the De Warrene Preceptory having been read, it was consecrated in due form; Sir Knt. the Rev. G. Little, performing the solemn religious portion of the ceremony most impressively.

Sir Knight J. L. Allen, the Preceptor nominate, was next installed into his office by V.E. Sir Knt. Major Clerke, by whom also the following Royal Arch Masons, candidates for admission into the Order being in attendance, and having passed through the ceremonies, were duly installed and proclaimed as Knight Commanders of the Temple, viz.:—Bros. Mark B. Tanner, M.D., W.M. 811, M.W. Sov. Eureka Chapter, Rose Croix, 18; W. R. Wood, P. Prov. G.W. Sussex; Capt. J. R. Molineux; Alex. Elmsley, P. Prov. G.W., Sussex; Thomas Sabine, T. H. Mosely, and C. J. Smith.

The ceremony was most impressively performed by Sir Knts. S. Clerke and W. Hyde Pullen.

The following Knights were then appointed Office Bearers for the ensuing year:—Prelate, Sir Knt. W. R. Wood; 1st Captain, W. Hyde Pullen; 2nd Captain, Capt. E. Walker; Expert, Dr. Mark Tanner; Captain of Lines, Captain J. R. Molineux; Almoner, Alex. Elmsley; 1st Standard Bearer, T. H. Mosely; 2nd Standard Bearer, C. J. Smith; Registrar, T. Sabine.

At the conclusion of the above business, the V.E. Sir Knight Patrick de Colquhoun, Grand Chancellor of the Order, having assumed the chair, proceeded to open a Provincial Grand Priory for the Province of Sussex, "and having caused to be read the Patent from the Grand Master of the Temple, appointing Sir Knight Major Shadwell Clerke as Provincial Grand Prior of the Province," that Very Eminent Knight was duly and solemnly inducted into his high office, and was duly proclaimed and saluted by the Knights present, the V.E. the Grand Chancellor, passing some very eulogistic remarks respecting the new Provincial Prior's qualifications for the position.

The Provincial Grand Prior then appointed the following Knights as his Provincial Grand Officers for the ensuing year:—

Sub-Prior, Sir Knt. W. Hyde Pullen; Prelate, Rev. J. A. M. Little; Chancellor, Dr. Mark Tanner; 1st Captain, Thomas Lane; 2nd Captain, J. L. Allen; Treasurer, C. Horsley; Almoner, W. R. Wood; 1st Standard Bearer, Dr. J. Trollope; 2nd Standard Bearer, Captain J. R. Molineux; Registrar and Vice-Chancellor, Thos. Sabine; Director of Ceremonies, Captain E. Walker; 1st Aide-de-Camp, Dr. Roberts; 2nd Aide-de-Camp, C. J. Smith; Captain of Lines, J. Morris; Sword Bearer, T. H. Mosely; 1st Herald, Alex. Elmsley; 2nd Herald, F. Morris; Equerry Frater, Thos. Hughes.

Sir Knight Major Clerke next proposed a vote of thanks to their distinguished visitors for their presence on that day, which was carried unanimously, and courteously acknowledged by Sir Knight the Right Hon. the Earl of Limerick.

The Provincial Grand Priory having been closed, a Committee was appointed to draw up the Bye-laws, and votes of thanks were then proposed and carried unanimously, to Sir Knight J. Lucas Allen, for his kindness in presenting the fittings of the chapter, and to V.E. Sir Knight S. Clerke, for the great assistance and service he had rendered in the establishment of the chapter, and his admirable rendering of the various ceremonies of the day.

The De Warrene Preceptory was then closed according to ancient form. The knights subsequently assembled at a banquet, at Mutton's hotel, Major Clerke presiding, when the usual loyal and fraternal toasts peculiar to the Order, were proposed and duly honoured.

It was notified, before the close of the proceedings, that H.R.H. the Prince of Wales, had fixed on Wednesday, the 2nd April, for his Installation in London, as Grand Master of the Order of the Templars, when a great gathering from amongst the 5,000 Knights Templar in this country is expected, in their full costume as K.T.'s, and a ceremony will be witnessed unsurpassed by any similar one which has ever taken place in England.

We congratulate the Masons of Brighton on the establishment of a Chapter of Knights Templars amongst them, as well as at Eastbourne, and wish every prosperity to the Order in Sussex, under the superintendance of the Provincial Grand Chapter.

Ancient and Accepted Rite.

PLYMOUTH.—Huysh Chapter of Rose Croix.—A very important and numerously attended meeting of the Ancient and Accepted Rite was held in the Masonic Temple, Princess-place, Plymouth, on Friday. Among the brethren present were the illustrious Bros. Charles John Vigne, 33, M.P.S., Grand Commander of the Supreme Council of the Ancient and Accepted Rite for England, Wales, and the dependencies of the British Crown; Major Shadwell H. Clarke, 33, S.G.I.G.; J. Oxley Oxland, 31, (32, Portugal), P.M.W.S. of the University and Huysh Chapters; Rev. P. Hankinson Newnham, 31, P.M.W.S. of the Vigne Chapter; Colonel Elliott, 30, M.W.S. St. Aubyn Chapter; Captain Phayre, R.N., 30; together with the following members of the 18th degree, viz., Richard Rodda, Isaac Watts, Desmond McCarthy, Elliot Square, L. Westcott, Josh. H. Curteis, Fredk. H. Heale, R. Robinson Rodd, W. B. Hambly, J. E. Godtschalk, and others. In the absence, through domestic affliction, of the M.W.S., the illustrious Bro. H. Dubosc, 31, the chair was taken by the illustrious Bro. J. Oxley Oxland, and the chapter opened in solemn form. The members of the 33rd degree were then received under arch of steel, and with the customary honours. Three candidates for perfection being in attendance, their names were submitted to the M.P.S. Grand Commander and duly approved. A Grand Lodge of Perfection having been opened, the degrees under its jurisdiction were conferred upon the candidates. A council of the 15th and 16th degrees was then formed, and the candidates duly received. Under the authority of the illustrious Bro. Major S. H. Clerk, 33, who likewise presided over the Grand Lodge of Perfection and Council of the 15th and 16th degrees, a Grand Council of Knights of east and west was then opened, and the candidates admitted in due form. A chapter of Rose Croix was then opened by the illustrious Bro. J. Oxley Oxland, 31, and the candidates perfected as S.S. P.P. Rose Croix of H.R.D.M., the beautiful ceremony of the degree being faultlessly performed by the illustrious brother who presided. The new bye-laws were then considered, and, after some discussion, duly passed. The E. and P., Bro. R. Rodda, 18, was then installed as Most Wise Sovereign for the ensuing year, and proceeded to appoint his officers as follows:—Rev. P. Hankinson Newnham, Prelate; W. B. Hambly, 1st General; Elliot Square, 2nd General; F. H. Earle, Grand Marshal; Desmond McCarthy, Raphael; R. R. Rodd, Herald; Josh. E. Curteis, Recorder; I. Watts, Treasurer; L. Westcott, Captain of Guard; E. A. Davies, Almoner; J. Moon, Organist; W. S. Hearder, D. of Ceremonies; Windeatt, Outer Guard. A well merited eulogium was passed on the illustrious Bro. J. Oxley Oxland, 31, for the great knowledge and skill he had brought to bear in the establishment, arrangement, and conduct of the chapter; the M.W.S. observing that without the indefatigable and untiring exertions of the illustrious brother it would have been impossible to have brought the chapter to such a state of perfection as it could now happily boast of. The thanks of the brethren were then passed to Bro. Oxland with acclamation. The M.P. Sov. Grand Commander expressed his admiration of the fittings and decorations of the chapter, and congratulated the members on the skill and correctness with which all the arrangements had been carried out. The chapter was then closed in solemn form after a very pleasant and successful meeting.

GIBRALTAR.—Europa Chapter, Rose Croix.—A meeting of this chapter was held in the room of the Friendship Lodge, on Thursday, the 27th ult. Ill. Bro. Balfour Cockburn, M.W.S.; Ill. Bro. Dantez; H.P.; Ill. Bro. Henry, Senior General; Ill. Bro. Trenerry, Junior General; Ill. Bro. Haynes, Raphael; Ill. Bro. Morgan, G.M.; Ill. Bro. Maria, Recorder; P.M.W.S. Price, 30; and several others. The business of the evening consisted in advancing Bro. Elmes, 278, and of the election of the M.W.S. for the ensuing year. As soon as the chapter was duly opened, the M.W.S., Ill. Bro. Balfour Cockburn, alluded in feeling terms to the great loss which Masonry in general, but more especially the members of the Ancient and Accepted Rite, had recently sustained by the death of The Most Illustrious Brother Dr. Henry Beaumont Lesson, 33, Past Most Puissant Sovereign Grand Commander of the Order. The distinguished brother's name would ever remain intimately blended with the historic details connected with the Establishment of the Supreme Council on its present footing, and he was one of the last, if he was not the very last, representatives of the Ancient York Masons. At the suggestion of Ill. Bro. Henry it was resolved that the M.W.S. should be desired to convey to the Supreme Council the sentiments of profound sympathy and regret with which the Europa Chapter had received the melancholy intelligence of the demise of their Venerable and Illustrious brother. Bro. Elmes was then introduced by Ill. Bro. Morgan, and gradually advanced to the exalted rank of a Prince Rose Croix. On the completion of the ceremony, the election for the M.W.S. took place, when it was found that Ill. Bro. Cornwell had been elected by a large majority. The M.W.S. notified that he had received a communication from Ill. Bro. Cornwell expressing his regret that a severe domestic affliction prevented his attendance that evening. Ill. Bro. Balfour Cockburn, however, gave the Princes to understand that no unnecessary delay would take place in holding a meeting for the installation of the M.W.S. elect. Ill. Bro. Maria was re-elected Treasurer and the M.W.S. on behalf of himself and of the Princes present thanked Ill. Bro. Maria for his past exertions and also for his kindness in again accepting the onerous and responsible post which he had so long filled so very much to the advantage of the chapter. The princes then retired.

THE FESTIVAL OF THE MASONIC BENEVOLENT FUND.

To the Editor of The Freemason.

Dear Sir and Brother,—

In the number of The Freemason of the 15th inst., is contained the report of the final meeting of the Board of Stewards of this institution, at which a complaint was made by Bro. J. C. Parkinson "of the conduct of one of the Stewards towards a distinguished brother at the Prince of Wales's table, and which conduct had been, in Bro. Parkinson's hearing, made the subject of indignant complaint;" the complaining brother was stated to be "one honoured by the personal friendship of the Prince of Wales and that an insult to him was, in effect, an insult to His Royal Highness, at whose table he sat." It was agreed to leave the investigation of this matter in my hands as Chairman of the Board of Stewards. I have seen Bro. Parkinson and having ascertained that the complaining party was Sir Michael Costa, and the alleged offender Bro. Joshua Nunn, I have communicated with the latter, and he has corresponded with Sir M. Costa in consequence; the result is that Sir Michael has, in three letters, altogether repudiated having made any complaint "or having made any statements to any one in any manner affecting Bro. Nunn, or the Stewards." I have the correspondence, which can be published if necessary.

I have also ascertained that Sir M. Costa was not the guest of His Royal Highness, as was stated at the Board meeting, and that the Prince was in no way aware of any question having arisen. I am Sir and Brother,

Yours fraternally,
J. CREATON,
Chairman.

Union Club,
19th March, 1873.

To the Editor of The Freemason.

Dear Sir and Brother,—

Bro. Major Creaton having been kind enough to show me, to-day, a letter he has written to you, I venture (with his concurrence) to ask you to give me space for a few words of supplementary explanation. On the afternoon of Tuesday, the 4th March, I had the honour to be a guest at the Friends in Council Lodge, at 33, Golden Square; and sat for a portion of the meeting between Bro. Sir Michael Costa and Bro. S. Rosenthal. In the intervals of work the conversation turned upon the Benevolent Festival which had been held in the preceding week; and I heard, with deep regret, from Sir Michael Costa, that he had been treated with considerable rudeness by Bro. Joshua Nunn, having been first dispossessed of his proper place by that brother, and subsequently restored to it upon the Prince of Wales asking "Where is Sir Michael?" I had not up to that day had the pleasure of knowing Sir Michael Costa, save for the knowledge which I share with all the world of his distinguished genius; but hearing this at a lodge of the eminence of the Friends in Council, and at a meeting at which four or five Provincial Grand Masters, Members of both Houses of Parliament, and many past and present Grand Officers were present, I felt considerably annoyed. Sir Michael Costa did not, it is quite true, prefer a formal complaint, least of all to me; for he did not know I had been a Steward at the Festival, but his remarks left no doubt on my mind, that he had been improperly and disrespectfully treated, and on being asked at the final meeting of the Board of Stewards, to propose a vote of thanks to Bros. Sir Albert Woods and Thomas Fenn, for their courteous direction of the ceremonies at the Festival, I felt it my duty to acquaint my brother stewards of the unpleasant circumstances of which I had heard. I was careful to add that as I had not the authority of the distinguished brother, who had been annoyed, to mention the matter, I did not feel justified in naming him, or the Steward whose manners had given offence to the meeting, but would, if it were insisted on, communicate them privately to the Chairman, Bro. Major Creaton. Bro. Creaton having now, in the legitimate exercise of his discretion, communicated both names to you; it is right I should inform you when, where, from whom, under what circumstances, and in whose presence, I heard of the transaction which gave rise to my remarks.

Yours fraternally,

J. C. PARKINSON.

BRO. HOLMES'S NOTES.

To the Editor of The Freemason.

Dear Sir and Brother,—

I observe in to-day's Freemason that Bro. Holmes alleges as an excuse for his unnecessary attack upon what he now, with little courtesy, calls the "Brummagem Men," that the members of the Order of St. John of Jerusalem desire to crush the Masonic Order of the Temple.

I am well acquainted with the feelings of those members of the Order of St. John of Jerusalem who also happen to be members of the Masonic Order of the Temple, and I can safely assert that this charge of Bro. Holmes against them is absolutely an untruth.

I can afford to pass over Bro. Holmes's other remarks on this issue in silence, because he could not possibly have damaged his own cause more effectually than by the adoption of his present course of wild vituperation, which is like the noisy hissing of a snake whose poison fangs have been drawn.

Yours fraternally,

SURREY MASONIC HALL COMPANY (LIMITED.)

A meeting of the Board of Directors was held on the 12th inst., at the Offices of the Company, 47, Leipsic-road, Camberwell, which was also attended by several brethren interested in the undertaking, Bros. J. Thomas, Deputy Chairman; E. J. Bailey, M. S. Larlham, J. S. Abbott Dunbar and Dr. Pinder, Directors, also Bros. George Kenning, James Adley Reeves, George Baker, and others.

After the formal business of the meeting had been completed, and Bro. James Adley Reeves elected as Director of the Company, Bro. John Thomas submitted very elaborate drawings of a spacious hall 50ft. by 37ft. by 26ft., Masonic lodge room 28ft. by 22ft. by 13ft., dining room 32ft. by 18ft. 9in. by 13ft., reading room 18ft. 9in. by 13ft. by 13ft., besides large retiring and ante-rooms; these were highly commended as being replete with every necessary convenience. The Secretary announced that considerable progress had been made in the general affairs of the Company, several applications for shares had been that evening considered, and allotments directed to be sent to Bro. George Kenning, 25 shares; Bros. W. Ramsey, five shares; George Baker, five shares; Mr. Thomas Clark, two shares; Mr. I. J. Masters, 20 shares; and several other brethren.

The Directors desire it to be known that the shares are being rapidly subscribed for, and strongly urge those brethren connected with lodges, chapters, &c., meeting on the Surrey side of the water, to avail themselves of the opportunities of being associated with an undertaking that must ultimately prove advantageous both to themselves and the lodges, &c., they belong to.

The plans will shortly be submitted to the Shareholders for their approval, and the building commenced forthwith, as the Company obtain possession of the land at the end of the present month.

Bro. George Kenning will join the Directorate of the Company on the first vacancy occurring.

Reviews.

Report on Correspondence, Grand Lodge of Missouri, U.S.A.

A pamphlet of 160 pages, and really full of interesting matter. The credit for so valuable a publication is due to Bro. Geo. F. Gouley, the Chairman of the Committee, and a most painstaking and accurate writer who, it is well known, has done much for the benefit of his Grand Lodge in particular and Freemasonry generally. Forty-six Grand Lodges are reviewed, so the work is not a slight one, seeing so many "Proceedings" have to be carefully examined. We are sorry not to see our Grand Lodge in the list, and also note that Scotland and Ireland are absent, we presume owing to the documents not having been sent. We believe thoroughly in the interchange of all annual publications between the Grand Lodges, and particularly with those in the United States, who appreciate such courtesy. In Arkansas State, a man was not allowed to be initiated because "his right knee was so stiff that he could not bend it," and in its lodges "all balloting is done in the Master's lodge, and it may open and work with three members being present." In Alabama, the G.M. decided that "a one-armed man cannot be made a Mason," and the report on Masonic jurisprudence included a decision to the effect that "a Fellow-Craft, who has lost his left arm cannot be made a Master Mason." With Bro. Gouley's remarks respecting the G.M. of Connecticut making "Masons at sight," we quite agree, and consider the Constitutions were violated both "in the letter and in the spirit," on the evening of August 11th., 1871, by the chief officer of that Grand Lodge. In Florida, the limb-question is again alluded to, and it was agreed that "an artificial substitute will not qualify a dismembered applicant," and "that the casualties of war are no reason for changing the ancient landmarks of Freemasonry;" but we need not present more specimens of the limb-legislation in the United States; nearly all, if not all the Grand Lodges have adopted something similar to the foregoing, but in our opinion without any due warrant from the Grand Lodge of England, from which they originally, directly or indirectly, derived their charters. If the "old Constitutions" are to be the test, then why should the limb regulation be retained, and other equally stringent laws ignored. Candidates formerly under the operative régime had to be free-born, now we permit them to be accepted if free men, &c. The fact is, that if a man is worthy, it is an absurd custom, in the present day, to object to his initiation in any lodge, even if he has an arm or leg less than we poor mortals generally have. The matter in dispute between Canada and Quebec is ably considered, and, had we space enough at our command, we should like to notice some of the arguments against the recognition of the latter at length, as we are with those who support the Grand Lodge of Quebec in its present trying, but certainly Masonic position. We say, well done Bro. Gouley, as Chairman of Foreign Correspondence Committee.

BRO. HOLMES'S LECTURE ON THE ORDERS OF THE TEMPLE AND HOSPITAL.

By LUPUS.

And now, after having indulged in a general view, let us inspect the interior of the scare-crow, which is so skillfully padded into shape, that its outer proportions, from the enchanting distance occupied by Bro. Holmes, actually lend it a dummy-like semblance to an honest reality, and may thus enable it to cast figurative dust into the mental vision of unwary beholders. Such is the cunning mode of this composition that whilst its general tone is intended to infer a declaration that the English Langue is an unauthorised body, yet not one single passage can be found which impeaches its validity in a greater degree than that of the Russian, Austrian, Polish, or other branches of the Order, each of which are as completely and perfectly lawful as the Council at Rome.

These then are the allegations of the "protest" to which attention is called.

1. That the signatories had discovered that their names, and that of the Lieutenant of the Mastership, had been included in "lists" published by the English Langue, inferentially with the improper pretence that they were members of the same branch of the Order.

2. That the Roman Council had never been in any "organic" connection with the "honourable society," at its origin, or any later period, and had nothing to do with its re-organisation, personal composition, or action.

3. That the only Grand Priorities in communion of jurisdiction and obedience with the Grand Mastership and Council, are Rome, Lombardo-Venetia, including Parma and Modena, and Bohemia.

4. That the existence of the Grand Bailiwick of Brandenburg is recognised as perfectly legal.

5. That beyond the Priorities enumerated, and certain Knights of Justice and Devotion, who do not belong by birth to any of such Priorities, all those who may call themselves Knights of St. John "are legally ignored by our Sacred Order."

6. The signatories demand that the names of the Lieutenant of the Mastership, and their own, be erased from the lists referred to in No. 1.

I hope I have fairly set forth these points, and I proceed to a few comments for the consideration of your readers.

1. The cunning composition of the first portion would lead to an inference that the English Langue, although described as "an honourable society," had been long publishing in "lists" the names of the Lieutenant of the Mastership, and MM. de Spada and de Gozze, with a view improperly to put forward such names as connected with the English Langue; this however, distinctly, is not the fact. The English Secretary, confident in the completion of the alliance, to which both parties had agreed in writing as previously detailed, caused an additional sheet to be printed, ready for insertion in the pamphlet, referred to in the "protest" as the "synoptical sketch." This sheet was not published, nor intended to be so, until the alliance was signed and sealed. It was, no doubt, and as the result proves, a premature proceeding; but one to which no blame or suspicion of dishonour can attach, nor can it be said, with truth, that any wrong, however slight was done. The cost of printing was wasted, and beyond this no body suffered.

In the ingeniously worded protest it is made to appear, inferentially, that the names of the Lieutenant of the Mastership, and the two signatories had been included in lists of members and widely circulated. Whilst, in fact, the offending sheet, of which a print lies before me, bears the names of the three dignitaries at the top, separated and distinct from the title of the langue of England, which then follows below, with an enumeration of its officers: Indeed the fact that the sheet had been printed was made known by a member, or members, of the langue, with a result of which the secret details are in existence; it was, as I have said, never distributed, or published, and immediately on the breach of the negotiations, and before the date of the "protest," was destroyed, with the exception of twelve copies which had passed into the hands of members of the Council.

If any intention had ever existed on the part of the English Langue to put forward the names of members of the Roman Council with any such unworthy intent as that which it is endeavoured dishonourably to imply, plenty of time and opportunity had occurred during the nearly thirty years which had then elapsed of the active existence of the revived langue.

And so this small circumstance, this too sanguine reliance on good faith, was greedily and joyfully seized by the concoctors of the "protest," in the hope of stigmatising in high quarters the "heretical" langue, they hypocritically called "an honourable society," with the brand of false pretence. It was made known that the sheet had been printed, it was not a surreptitious act suddenly discovered, it was well known that it had not been published, and it is therefore plain that the advisers of the signatories made this the stalking horse by which the English Langue was to be paraded before the attention of the Prince, Albert the Good, and the ceremonial officials of the kingdom, solely for the purpose, if possible, of casting upon it the slanderous suspicion of dishonour and deceit. And the Prince acknowledged its receipt! But I am very glad to know that it did not, with him, have the effect which was intended, and fondly hoped by its authors. It was deposited with secret dispatch, the actors in the plot avoided the daylight, and forgot to give any intimation of their work to the "honourable society," whose credit and fair fame they hoped secretly to undermine.

2. We are here told that the branch of the Order represented by the protesting parties had no "organic" connection with the English Langue. Bro. Holmes calls it "organised connection whatever." What right, or motive can he have for interpolating the word "whatever," unless it be an anxious desire to support his allies at any price! If the passage means, as I conclude it must, that the Roman Council took no personal action in reviving the English Langue, nobody wishes to gainsay it. I have already stated that the revival was accomplished by a representation of five-sevenths of the then majority of the Order, of which majority the Roman Council did not form part. It is, therefore, true that they had no "organic" connection with the English Langue; but it is equally true that the Roman Council was not long afterwards made acquainted with the fact of the revival, and did not dispute, or object to it. It is equally true that, certainly, as early as 1837, the Council in London was in direct correspondence with the Lieutenant of the Mastership and Roman Council, and it is no less true that no difficulty in an alliance between the two councils was ever made on any other ground than that of religious belief. The document proceeds to state that the cavillers and protesters had no connection with the organisation of the English Langue, nor with its personal composition or objects. These statements hardly need comment; it is of course plain that the Roman Council did not carry out the organisation; of its personal composition they would, I am sure, admit that they have no reason to be ashamed, and with its objects it would be a very desirable thing that they had something, instead of nothing, to do. This is entirely a question between doing something, and doing nothing.

Yet still, notwithstanding the English Council having expressly stipulated that the Langue of England and the Langue of Italy must meet each other on terms of strict reciprocity; that the Order in England should preserve entire independence in the election of its Grand Prior, Officers, and members; that the government of the langue should be in conformity with the existing habits and feelings of British society; that the langue should be accepted as it then stood, and that the admission of members should not be influenced by religious distinctions, yet, I say, notwithstanding all this, the Roman Council were prepared to accept the alliance with more than delight, had it not been that intolerance prevailed over charity, and religion was sacrificed to creed. Could but the Christian counsels of Pius VI. have prevailed, the union of the now, unhappily, antagonistic langues would have been eagerly confirmed.

3. Here we find that certain enumerated Grand Priorities are in communion of jurisdiction and obedience with the Grand Mastership and Council." There is no "Grand Mastership," but this is not material, as it is not a question of words. But what then? Are all the branches of the Order not in such communion rendered illegal by this fact? Feeble nonsense: What becomes of Austria? Where are the two Grand Priorities of Russia? Burke does say that their "connection with the chapter at Rome is of a very loose character;" what of the Sicilies, and what of Poland? Can any sane individual for one moment believe that the knights of these branches of the Order have no claim to the title because they are not in obedience to the Roman Council? And is the mere assertion and bombast of this "protest" a law which shall deprive all others of their legal rights?

4. The legal existence of the Evangelical Bailiwick of Brandenburg, here proclaimed on behalf of the Roman Council whose fulminations the allies of Bro. Holmes would fain exalt into law when convenient, will fully prove to your readers the value they should put upon the oracular opinions Bro. Holmes has had instructions from his friends to put forward. Those who utter railing accusations, those guilty of unprovoked attacks, those who base not their assertions on established facts, should have good memories.

5. Here we are informed that beyond the Pories enumerated, and certain Knights of Justice and Devotion received by the Lieutenant and Roman Council, all those who call themselves Knights of St. John are legally ignored. Yes, this is plain, but, as I before observed, what then? Are all the other lawful Knights of the Order deprived of their dignity? Assume that the Knights of the Greek Church in Russia sent over a declaratory protest they had no "organic connection" with the honourable society at Rome styling itself the Sacred Council, inasmuch as that society is of more modern formation; that the society at Rome was never appointed by the Order, and has no lawful claims to position as a directing body; that it is not derived from, or representative of, any other section of the Order than the Langue of Italy, is the birth of the present century and nothing more than a local institution; that it fulfils no hospitaller duties, nor has any object other than to live at ease in Rome on the fragmentary revenue of the Order, which ought to be devoted to the help of the poor; that it accepts the interference of the Pope in matters with which he has nothing whatever to do, nor ever had since the days of Paschall II. and is consequently not representative of its principles or observant of its laws and sovereign independence; that it has power only over those who chose to acknowledge its authority, and that its pretensions to dictate in any way "are legally ignored." Would such a protest as this deprive the Roman Council of any rights it lawfully possessed? Assuredly not. And, as assuredly, no protest or dictum of that same Council can alter any single position which Russia, Austria, or England has a right to occupy.

6. The signatories require their names to be erased from the lists before referred to. This has been necessarily answered in No. 1.

The authors of this "protest" probably thought it a very clever expedient; but I much mistake my brethren of the ancient and honourable Craft of Freemasonry if they consider the proceeding at all on the square, and if they do not view it as about as shabby a piece of double dealing as they have ever had the misfortune to meet with.

The Roman Council probably repented having too readily consented to precipitate action, for on the 23rd of January, 1860, thirteen months, only, after he had signed the protest, the Count de Gozze wrote to a well-known member of the English Langue, telling him that the intentions of the Roman Council remained the same, that the substantial basis was unaltered and that the Catholic Priory, once for all constituted, would announce the English Langue as already existing, and he added "I need not tell you, Monsieur le Chevalier, how truly desirous I am that this constitution should be realised as a primary condition to lead to "ulterior arrangements." And this from the very "Magisterial Secretary" and protestor in chief! but who, as other letters of the same period disclose, was not the only repentant gentleman "truly desirous" to witness "the ulterior arrangements."

The English Secretary, Sir E. A. H. Lechmere, Bart, in 1870, renewed, with the Duc de Bentivoglio, Vice-Chancellor of the Roman Council, the propositions for an alliance; the former negotiations were referred to, and a desire was expressed by the Englishman to let all by-gones remain in the shadows of the past. He explained the practical labours of the Order in England, and offered to unite and work with the other branches in that great cause of humanity which has ever been the distinguishing principle of the Order. These advances were courteously met, but declined on the old, and only question of religious difference; the Vice-Chancellor replying (on the 2nd of May, 1870) that the alliance could not be made with members of any other church than the Roman Catholic. He said "this Church is not only a belief, but a visible external society. All the institutions which depend upon her must exist within her pale—the visible pale of the Roman Catholic Church. Purity of intention, works of charity, serious aspirations, are all most laudable in themselves, but in no way modify the absolute conditions imposed by our organisation."

Whether this is a more enlightened view than was taken by the older Knights, who are chronicled by de Boisgelin and Taafe, or by the Roman Council in 1858, your readers are as well able to judge as I am. The English Secretary finally addressed to the Duc de Bentivoglio an enquiry whether his communications were to be considered official. The Duc (on the 7th of May, 1870) replied in the affirmative, but added, "In our relative positions, that is, in those of our Orders, no more official character can be given to this answer."

And now, I trust, your readers may be relieved of a discussion which I have much regretted should be forced upon their attention. If Bro. Holmes had confined himself to the claims of the Masonic Order of Knights of Malta, which, in its present form, dates only from 1862, as Bro. Holmes and every other member of the Grand Conclave of Masonic Templars well knows, I should never have alluded to the subject of the English Langue of the order of St. John; but when Bro. Holmes steps out of his way to make a gratuitous attack upon a most unobtrusive institution, a genuine and lawful scion of a grand old Order, a fraternity which to the utmost of its means quietly pursues the one sole object of doing good; it becomes necessary that such an attack, based, as it has been, upon error and misrepresentation, shall be met by the exposure of its fallacies, and the demonstration of those facts which you have enabled me to lay before the readers of The Freemason. I have shown, I venture to say conclusively, that the constitution of the Order of St. John as a whole, was one of self-government; that each of its several national divisions was an independent langue regulated by its own chapteral councils; nay, I may have shown the independence of each member in that true republic where their own elected chief was but primus inter pares; and that the infallible decree of Paschall II. relieved the Order from all Papal and Imperial interference. It is too late now to say, as a mere convenience, that the intermeddling of the Pontiff has been subsequently accepted by the Order: It may possibly be accepted by the Roman Council, but in such acceptance they admit that their position is one of a local institution only, and this is a view which other existing branches of the Order will no doubt feel that the Council at Rome is perfectly welcome to adopt. The Order of St. John was a sovereign and independent association relieved from all interference, and opened to all Christians, by decisions of the Papacy now declared infallible; thus no power can destroy the independence of the fraternity, nor can any Roman Catholic section of it say, with truth, that the decrees and opinions of the Popes Paschall II. and Pius VI. may be set aside and "legally ignored."

The admissions of members into the Order in England have been, and are, wholly irrespective of political or other party feeling, and whilst the British Langue, constituted so as to place it in accord with other aristocratic and chivalrous institutions of the present day, is essentially Protestant in its character, yet differences in Christian faith are not grounds of exclusion; further, whilst the Order of St. John, in the British Dominions, will ever be actuated by the warmest sentiments of loyalty and devotion to the reigning Sovereign, and by fidelity to the British Constitution in Church and State, its object is, and will be, pre-eminently the cause of charity and of those hospitable virtues which presided over the Order at its inception in Palestine. In this work has the English Langue been ever ready to join with the Roman Council and its Langue of Italy; in this earnest desire to aid the poor and suffering, irrespective of creed, did it hold out the hand of brotherly alliance in 1843; with the same object of uniting the dismembered sections of the Order for purposes of human benefit, did it negotiate in 1858, when the Count de Gozze proclaimed the Roman Council's admiration of "the frank, noble and judicious manner with which the London Council has received and appreciated our advances;" and with the same noble aspirations, which mark the unobtrusive action of the English Langue, did its Secretary, the Commander Sir Edmund A. H. Lechmere, Bart., make his overtures to the Duc de Bentivoglio in 1870.

The English Langue has been regardless of creed, but has looked on Religion, the law of love, impressed on each page of the Gospels, as the true source of union betwixt men of every race; it regrets the conflict of Churches, feeling that even justice and conscience are not always gifted with that reflex intelligence which can see in the claims of others the portraiture of the same rights they defend for themselves, and whilst feeling that immediate success is given but to few, it has patiently awaited the dawn of better things, and has endeavoured in the pursuit of the objects of which I subjoin a statement, and with which the Roman Council has repudiated any connection, to carry out the only principle imposed by its organisation, that of help to the poor and suffering, and love and charity to all.

The objects and purposes of the Order of St. John of Jerusalem in England, are:—

I.

"Generally, the encouragement and promotion of all works of humanity and charity in the relief of sickness, distress, suffering and danger, and the extension of the great principle of the Order.—PRO UTILITATE HOMINUM."

II.

"Aiding the restoration to health of sick poor, without distinction of creed, by providing the convalescent out-patients of public Hospitals and Dispensaries with diets prescribed by the Medical Officers, and visiting them at their homes during the period of sickness."

III.

"The foundation and maintenance of Cottage Hospitals and Convalescent Homes, and Training Establishments for nurses to attend the sick poor; and the formation of Provincial organisations in furtherance of the general objects of the Order."

IV.

"The promotion of a more intimate acquaintance with the wants of the poor in the time of sickness, and the supplying of such information as may usefully aid the proper authorities in the prosecution of measures for the improvement of the localities and houses they inhabit."

V.

"The further and continuous support of the National Society for Aid to the Sick and Wounded in War (the establishment of which in England was first initiated and mainly promoted by this Order), and the aid in such permanent organisation during time of peace as may be at once available upon the occurrence of any necessity for active exertion."

VI.

"The award of silver and bronze medals for special services on land in the cause of humanity, especially for saving life in mining and colliery accidents."

The English Langue is essentially an honourable and distinguished association, it numbers on its roll of members, male and female, many of the oldest names amongst our titled and untitled families, and I venture to predict that to this section of the venerable institution it lawfully represents, will one day be mainly owing the preservation of the most interesting relic of the ancient chivalry of Europe.

Permit me again to express my deep sorrow that this discussion has been forced upon me, and intruded upon your readers, and my sincere regret that I have been compelled to allude to our Roman Catholic neighbours by their being unnecessarily imported into the controversy. I trust that in performing my share in the task, I have not exceeded the bounds of due propriety, or written any sentence which can bear the aspect of intentional malice.

NEW MASONIC HALL AT LISKEARD.

This elegant little building situated on the Parade, next to the Devon and Cornwall Banks is now nearly completed. The front elevation is exceedingly ornate, and undoubtedly a great ornament to the town in an architectural point of view. It has been designed by Mr. Paul, architect, of Liskeard, and is built entirely of stone, several varieties and colours being introduced, contrasting favourably with the massive and somewhat sombre granite bank next door. The new building is like a beautiful woman leaning against a mighty warrior. We can scarcely venture to hint as to what "style" the new structure is. Years ago we studied the "five orders," and could then define them fairly at a glance, but now-a-days a great many of our most successful buildings belong to a mixed style, which we very seldom read about, but very often see. The nearest type to which we can compare the building in question is French Classic freely treated, and if French Classic is the proper definition, very happy and successful French Classic it is. The plinth of the building is of granite, and above the walling is a local stone raised in the adjacent parish of St. Clair, the dressings are of Ham Hill, a material warm and creamy in its tone, blending well with the other materials. The arch stones of the windows are relieved by alternate bands of Polyphant; and above and below the richly moulded and carved cornice, that runs the full length of the building between the ground floor and the story above, are bands of Polyphant also. The upper cornice, between the carved tresses that carry the roof, is relieved by the introduction of diagonal panels or paterae, upon each of which is a monogram formed by the blending of the square and compass with the capital letter G. Immediately beneath this cornice, and between the arched heads of the three upper windows, are circular panels; in the central one of these is a shield, bearing upon its field the date 1872, supported on either side by ears of wheat; whilst projecting from the other two panels are sculptured life sized busts, male and female, representing allegorical figures. The columns to all the windows, as well as those at the entrance, are of red Mansfield stone, and from them spring carved foliated capitals, by which the window arches are carried. A glance within the building affords evidence of the internal arrangements being excellent and convenient. The front room of the lower story will be used as offices. The first floor is reached by a wide and elegant staircase. The newels are of oak, carved neatly, wheat ears being largely introduced. The hand rail, very broad and massive, is of polished mahogany. The lodge room is spacious and lofty, 17ft. 6in. by 30ft. The walls are prettily relieved by a high skirting of varnished deal running around the entire girth. The mantel-pieces are of Portland stone, and upon their key stones, and in circular panels, are carved various emblems of the Craft the other compartments are equally roomy. Under Bro. Paul's personal superintendance the work has been executed, Bro. Lang, of the same town, being the build. The carved stone and wood work, and the sculpture have been entrusted to, and carefully carried out by, Mr. Harry Hems, Sculptor of Exeter.

Mayne, P.P.G.S.W.; T. Dorrington, P.G.S., and others. The lodge was duly opened and closed by the D.P.G.M., the P.G.M. being unable to perform that duty until his installation, which is fixed to take place at the festival meeting in the summer.

The first business of the meeting was to consider a motion of Bro. Hughan in relation to the Cornwall Masonic Annuity Fund, but, at his suggestion, it was determined, out of respect to their late Prov. G.M., first of all to receive the address of condolence from the Provincial Grand Lodge of Devon on his (Bro. Augustus Smith's) death. The address, which was beautifully illuminated, and handsomely framed, was then read. It was as follows:—

"We, the Provincial Grand Worshipful officers and members of Devon, in Provincial Grand Lodge assembled, desire to convey to our brethren of the Province of Cornwall an expression of our sincere sympathy with them on the inestimable loss sustained by the death of their efficient chief and brother, Augustus Smith. One whose distinguishing attributes were wisdom, firmness and benevolence, qualities whose exertion had beneficially influenced the career of thousands, could not pass away from the scene of his labours without leaving with his brethren a deep impression of sadness, relieved only by the certain hope of a re-union with the former companions of his toil, by the remembrance of his bright Masonic example, and by the mark which he has set on the important province over which his beneficial influence extended. That such a reflection may afford consolation, and tend to the increased prosperity of our brethren in Cornwall is our sincere hope and earnest expectation."

A letter, written by the P.G. Secretary, acknowledging the receipt of the address, was read. It acknowledged with deep feeling the truth and justice of the estimate of their late P.G.M., and looked upon the address as an evidence of the kind feeling and fraternal regard which rightly existed between the two provinces.

The P.G.M., the D.P.G.M., the P.G.S., the P.G.T., and the P.P.G.S., were appointed to make a formal reply to the address.

Bro. Hughan then brought forward his resolution—"That there shall not be more than four annuities of £20 each payable from the 'Cornwall Masonic Annuity Fund,' and whenever sufficient funded property exists to yield £80 per annum, the contributions thereafter shall be devoted entirely to the Benevolent Fund." He explained that his reason for bringing it forward was that he thought the time was come when they should limit the useful annuity fund, and he was glad that the Committee in drawing up the new bye-laws, had taken the same view. So long as the fund remained an annuity fund all the subscriptions would have to be expended in annuities, however desirable it was to apply it to other purposes. The fund was practically commenced in 1865, and would this year amount to £1,700, which could only be used for annuities. The interest for that amount was almost sufficient for four annuities of £20, and at the same rate of increase in 20 years they would have enough to pay twelve such annuities. Now, as they were not likely ever to have more than four annuitants, it was evident that they should so alter the character of the fund that it should not accumulate for annuities which would not be required. No injustice would be done to indigent brethren, for they could make sure by a right use of their votes to obtain the election of an annuitant on the fund of the Royal Masonic Institution for Aged Freemasons. After four annuitants had been provided for the fund should be applied to the education of the children of brethren and to the relief of their widows.

Bro. Tweedy seconded the motion, which was supported by the D.P.G.M., but it was opposed by Bro. Carter (Penzance) who thought it ill-timed. The fund had only been formed six years, during which time the brethren in the province had doubled, and seven annuities would not be too many.

Bros. Solomon and Geach favoured the principles of the motion, but would leave the number of annuities open.

At the suggestion of the P.G.M., the motion was adjourned until the new bye-laws of the fund which dealt with the question had been decided.

The D.P.M. then proposed, "To rescind the present rules and regulations of the Cornwall Masonic Annuity Fund, and to substitute in their stead others having a more extensive basis, and to change the name of the Fund to the 'Cornwall Masonic Annuity and Benevolent Fund.'" When the fund was first started, no one had any idea that it would reach its present dimensions, and it occurred to some of them that the time had now come when the basis of the fund should be extended, and not only make provision for brethren, but for their widows' and for education; and the committee, in considering the matter, thought they should take advantage of the opportunity to establish a fund for the advancement of the children of deceased Masons and for the support of their widows. The new basis of the fund would be sufficiently extensive to embrace all these objects. Four annuities would be provided for out of the fund; they had never had application for a larger number, and they thought that would be quite sufficient for the time. The plan for advancing the children in life and the relief to widows were important objects.

The bye-laws were then gone through.

The title of the fund—Cornwall Masonic Annuity and Benevolent Fund—caused some discussion. The P.G.M. suggested "annuity and" should be omitted, that it might be uniform with the Royal Masonic Benevolent Fund, but it was explained that "annuity" was inserted to show the origin of the fund, and if left out it was feared its popularity would suffer. Bro. Solomon suggested "educational" should be inserted to indicate the full character of the fund, but ultimately the title remained as agreed to by the committee.

The P.G.M. then read the rules, which were discussed seriatim. The first was—The objects of this charity are—(a) To provide annuities for aged and infirm Masons of the Province of Cornwall. (b) To make grants to assist in the education of the children of Masons requiring relief. (c) To make grants to assist in the advancement in life of children of Masons requiring relief. (d) To make grants to widows of deceased Masons.

This was passed after it was explained that after the annuities had been provided for, the remaining objects would have no priority, except that decided by the Prov. Grand Lodge at the time.

The second rule was agreed to without comment.

Sources of the Funds—1. Such sums as may be ordered to be paid from time to time out of the funds of the province by the Prov. Grand Lodge at their annual festival meeting, and from collections that may be made on special occasions. 2. Annual subscriptions and donations by lodges, chapters, and encampments, or individuals. 3. Legacies. At each annual festival meeting there shall be chosen a treasurer, secretary, and two auditors. All annual and other payments shall be made to the said treasurer, and immediately paid by him to the account of the trustees at their bankers. Each lodge, chapter, and encampment in the province, at its annual festival shall have the right, and is requested, to nominate a steward, whose special duty shall be to collect subscriptions and donations to the fund.

The rule which decided that the annuities shall not be more than four of £20 each, to be enjoyed for life, and payable half-yearly, was discussed at some length, objection being made to limiting the number to four, especially as it was admitted that the Provincial Grand Lodge could at any time suspend the rule and grant a fifth annuity. After, however, the committee had pointed out that unless a limit was placed, great difficulty would be caused, and the funds would have to be kept separate, whereas their object was to fuse the funds, the rule was adopted as proposed.

The rule with regard to education was "The aggregate grants to assist education shall not exceed £60 per annum; no grant in any one case shall exceed £15 per annum; and no grant shall be held for more than 5 years, nor after the age of 14 years." Objections were taken to the limit of £60, but this was overruled. Many thought that the £15 proposed to be spent on each child was too large a sum, especially as it was much more than the majority of brethren who could subscribe to the fund could afford to pay for their own children's education. It was, however, pointed out that the question had been fully debated in committee, and not to exceed £15 was fixed upon to meet all cases. An amendment to reduce the sum to £7 10s. was lost, and the rule as drawn was adopted.

The grants for advancement are not to exceed £10, and a second grant should not be made to the same person. The grant to widows was fixed at the same sum, but the words preventing a second grant being made to the same person were omitted by a large majority.

The principal rules as to qualifications of applicants and form of applications are as follows:—An applicant, or his or her deceased father or husband, must have been a subscribing or serving member of some lodge in the Province of Cornwall during a period of five consecutive years. Every application must be forwarded to the Secretary through the Master of the lodge to which the brother or deceased brother belongs, or last belonged, and must be signed by the Master and Wardens of the same. No one shall be entitled to an annuity or grant who, at the date of the application, is in the receipt, or who thereafter shall become possessed, of a fixed income exceeding £20 a year. No child shall receive a grant for education who is under seven or above fourteen years of age. No grant for advancement shall be made to a child who is under 12 or above 18 years of age.

It was further agreed that the election for an annuitant, or any vacancy that may arise, and grants for education, advancement and widows, shall take place at the annual festival meeting of the Provincial Grand Lodge, previous to the instalment of the new officers for the ensuing year. The voting is the same as in the old rules, with the exception of giving votes to the Stewards of the Fund. Other rules as to the voting were:—"The votes shall be given in writing in the form issued by the Secretary, and shall be delivered to him when called for at the annual festival meeting, or may be transmitted to him during the previous week. All annual subscriptions shall be due on the 1st day of January, and must be paid on or before the 31st of March in every year, and no person shall be entitled to vote whose subscriptions shall be in arrear."

The last rule provided that "All the funds shall be vested in the following brethren, as trustees, viz.:—The Right Hon. Earl of Mount Edgecumbe, P.G.M.; Reginald Rogers, D.P.G.M.; E. T. Carlyon, P.P.S.G.W.; Sir F. M. Williams, Bart., P.P.S.G.W.; and William Tweedy, P.G. Treas., and any vacancies among the trustees may be filled up from time to time by the Prov. G. Lodge, at their annual festival meeting, after notice in writing to any brother, sent to the Prov. G. Secretary, previous to the 31st of March in any year; but when the number is reduced to three, additional trustees shall be appointed at the said meeting, on the report to that effect by the Secretary or Treasurer.

Bro. W. Tweedy was re-elected Prov. Grand Treasurer by acclamation, the P.G.M. having asked all the other officers to retain their places as under his predecessor.

It was mentioned that the place of the next meeting had not been fixed on, but that it was likely to be Callington, and that considering the importance of the meeting, a more central town would be fixed on.

A vote of thanks was passed to the Prov. Grand Master for his kindness in attending.

CONSECRATION OF THE NEW LODGE-ROOMS, GIBRALTAR.

It may perhaps be in the recollection of some of your readers that a few months since occasion was taken to comment unfavourably on the unsatisfactory size, form, and condition of the rooms in which the St. John's Inhabitants and Mark Lodges held their communications. Since then the exertions of Bro. Morgan, the W.M. of St. John's, to remedy this evil, have been unremitting, and a few weeks ago he was happily enabled to obtain the lease of a property which he, with great good judgment, felt confident could be easily adapted to the requirements of his and the other lodges. Calling to his aid, therefore, Past Masters Henry and Cavanna, and also Bro. Haynes, whose name as a practical engineer is a power throughout Andalusia, their united efforts, warmly met by the proprietor, Bro. Levy, soon changed the aspect of affairs, and it must have afforded unmingled satisfaction to the above-named brethren that on the 24th of last month, Bro. Morgan, as W.M. of the Senior Lodge, was enabled to issue out a general invitation to the Masons of the district to attend the ceremony of the consecration of these new lodge rooms, which interesting event was notified to take place on the 1st of March. For several years past it has been our privilege to assist at almost every Masonic festival at this station, but never in our recollection have we been present at one where the brethren gathered together in such overwhelming numbers, or one which has afforded us greater pleasure, for it is impossible that any ceremony could have been conducted in a more complete, solemn, or thoroughly Masonic manner. It would trench far too seriously on your valuable space if an attempt was made to name all the brethren present, suffice it to say that we noticed the following Past Masters:—Beal, Cavanna, Balfour, Cockburn, Carver, Henry, Holliday, Price, and Woodward, and of the brethren generally the following are a few of those best known to us:—Bros. Marshall, Weir, Gilbert, Jones, Satterwaite, Riley, McMerney, Lackland, Paston, Leslie, Patterson, Cotton, Little, W. Brown, Donald, Ward, Michie, Seath, Trenerry, Gomez, Aparicio, Benselm, Aboab, Trenerry, Eaynes, Clemente, Leys, &c., &c. Amongst the visitors we remarked also Past Masters Taylor, Beal, and Gilbard, with numerous naval brethren, from H.M.S. Northumberland, Pigeon and Pheasant. The immense crowd utterly precluding the possibility of organising the usual procession. The Lodge was opened in the first degree by W.M. Bro. Morgan, who then explained to the brethren that the proper forms having been gone through to obtain authority for leaving their old and occupying these new rooms, he would now place the gavel in the hands of Past Master Bro. Balfour Cockburn, who had most kindly undertaken to carry out the ceremony in which they were about to engage.

Past Master Balfour Cockburn was then placed in the chair of K.S., and proceeded at once to request Past Masters Price and Woodward to act as Senior and Junior Wardens respectively. This done, Bro. Balfour Cockburn rose and said that before proceeding with the immediate business of the evening, he considered that it would be unbecoming if some public acknowledgment of the great zeal and energy displayed by Bro. Morgan, through whose instrumentality they were now gathered together in so excellent a lodge-room, was not recorded, he therefore suggested that his remarks should be entered in full in the minutes and that a vote of thanks should be given to their excellent Brother the W.M. of St. John's, this was duly seconded and carried by acclamation.

The Consecrating Officer then offered up the usual prayers, which was followed by the Junior Warden reading the appropriate Psalm. Past Masters Morgan, Henry, and Cavanna then approached The Lodge, which they unveiled, a very beautiful and solemn march being played in the meanwhile by Bro. Evjenth who presided at the organ. The Past Masters then proceeded to diffuse the corn, wine and oil. On the completion of this very interesting portion of the ceremony Bro. Cavanna delivered some eloquent remarks, in Spanish, specially pertinent to the elements of consecration, to this succeeded Solomon's Invocation, given by the Senior Warden, Past Master Price. The Consecrating Officer then solemnly dedicated the Lodge to God, Masonry and to benevolence and universal charity and constituted it in form. The distinguished brother to whom the important duty of Consecration had been entrusted, then rose and delivered a most instructive and impressive address; entering minutely into all the historical details connected with the consecration of buildings and temples devoted to religious worship, explaining in a clear and lucid manner the special importance and signification attached to the consecrating elements, the corn, wine and oil and the beautiful and interesting symbolical allusions connected therewith, finally concluding his remarks, which had been listened to with wrapt attention, by a brilliant peroration, wherein he invoked peace, honour and length of days on the Grand Master of England, wisdom and the furtherance of all noble principles in his representatives over the whole world, and unanimity, harmony and brotherly affection in all the communications that should now and for ever take place within the lodge in which they were at present assembled and met together.

The Lodge was then closed and the brethren retired.

A very elegant supper had been provided for those who wished to partake of the same, when upwards of eighty of the brethren availed themselves of this refreshment, and the remainder of the evening was spent in much friendly intercourse and social enjoyment.

ALPHA AND OMEGA.

Plain in our brother's eye the mote is seen,
And Pride complacent, points his doom of woe;
But is Almighty Love a myth so mean
That Heav'n needs contrast with the depths below?

Mortal—beware!

The beam which magnifies our brother's fall,
That Virtue hides, which would our crown enhance.

Is vengeance thine? Have Charity for all,

And tolerant—'e'en of Intolerance,

Thy zeal forbear!

Behold with me the massive ruins, strewn
In desert spots o'er Earth's remotest bounds;
No skill of ours could raise those stones thus hewn,

Fashioning pinnacles and towers and mounds,
As giants please.

On the Thebaid; by Palmyra's rocks;

On Cuzco's lake, hidden in Yucatan;

On India's shores. Not injured by Time's shocks

But by the sacrilegious hand of Man.

Say! Who reared these?

The monoliths and crosses that remain

Which Ignorance set down to Christian score;

The Cockatrice—and Serpent—mounds again

And circled stone no Briton chiselled o'er

Nor Tyrant broke;

In Erim-glas, the lonely Phallic towers;

The Cross—Tau—Shamrock, pledge of India's love;

Delicate bronzes in the bogs and bowers:

Who sculptured elephant, and wolf, and dove,

Ere History spoke?

Far Eastern wilds, from which Mankind has fled

But where the ancient rivers yet flow on,

Hold cities vast, built by the mighty dead,

Which overawe the traveller forlorn

In desolation:

Terraced along the rotting foetid banks,

Matted in densest jungle, slimed and sapped

By noxious forest-growths, dull ranks on rank

Of silent corridors and temples, capped

With vegetation.

Weird in their silence, awful in their gloom,

They would be eloquent of highest theme

(Could we but burst the riddle of the tomb)

And show us like the phantom of a dream

A shape Titanic;

Civilisation of the primal type;

A knowledge, lost, for which 'tis vain to grieve;

A golden age ere Sin and Shame grew ripe;

Wisdom and Power, which we with toil retrieve

From facts organic.

NAPOLEON III., EMPEROR OF THE FRENCH.

BY MRS. L. A. CZARNECKI.

He is gone, who reigned supreme
O'er the mind and hearts of men;
Gone, gone, for ever and ever,
Away from all mortal ken.
The great glory that he won,
Which none can dare gainsay,
He has left, like rare perfume,
That never knows decay.

He stood on the highest step
In the temple of the world;
Where shafts of deadly hate
Were ever on him hurled.
But like to a giant rock,
Whom thunder has not riven,
Still rears its noble head
Fore all the winds of heaven.

So calm and brave he stood,
In every phase of life;
So in his grand and brilliant day—
So in the last sad strife.
When reft of mighty power,
And fallen from his throne,
More kingly yet he firmly stood
When grandeur all was gone.

Napoleon Third lies dead—
Dead, upon English ground!
Proud England! truest friend
That ever yet she found.
She has bent before his bier,
And shed for him her tears;
Ah! never could she forget
The friend of bygone years.

And France, recreant France,
What does she dare to say
Of the Chief who raised her high 'Bove every earthly sway?
Alas! her strength is fading,
Her high energies downtrod;
She's in the hands of stern men,
Who own and fear no God.

But France, chivalric France,
Will soon throw off all fear:
And welcome back the Son
Of him they held so dear.
Tho' the Master's voice is hushed,
And clouds appear o'er head,
The vital power still lives;
The EMPIRE is not dead.

BRO. D. M. LYON, ADVOCATING TRUE MASONIC REPRESENTATION IN G. LODGE OF SCOTLAND.

I am very glad to see that Bro. D. Murray Lyon is now standing forth as the advocate of true Masonic principles with regard to the constitution of the Grand Lodge of Scotland, as in a meeting of the Provincial Grand Lodge of Ayrshire the other day he supported a motion in favour of the representation of the Ayrshire Lodges by their own Masters and Wardens, instead of by proxies resident, as proxies generally are, in Edinburgh or Glasgow. He stated, as I see from the report, that of the 750 members of the Grand Lodge, upwards of 300 are resident in Edinburgh, and 100 in Glasgow, whilst not more than 20 are resident in Ayrshire, although the Ayrshire Lodges, 36 in number, might send 108 of their own office bearers to appear for them in the Grand Lodge. He, therefore, denounces the proxy system as inconsistent with the proper representative character of the Grand Lodge, and as giving an undue preponderance in its proceedings to the metropolitan brethren. I have long maintained these views, and rejoice to find Bro. Murray Lyon, now coming forward to urge them on the regard of the Freemasons of Scotland. Not in Ayrshire only, but everywhere throughout Scotland the call should be heard that representation according to the old rules and principles of Freemasonry should be substituted for the extremely objectionable proxy system. If Bro. Murray Lyon would look at a motion of which notice has been given in the Grand Lodge for next Quarterly Communication by Bro. J. T. Douglas, R.W.M., No. 48, he would find in it the sure means of perfectly accomplishing the end he now appears to have in view.—A PAST MASTER OF THE ENGLISH AND SCOTTISH CONSTITUTIONS.

ANNIVERSARY FESTIVAL OF THE UNITED STRENGTH LODGE OF INSTRUCTION, No. 228.

The 36th anniversary supper of this old and celebrated Lodge of Instruction was held on Wednesday evening, the 26th February, in the noble lodge room at Bro. Green's, the Grafton Arms, Prince of Wales-road, Kentish Town, the Preceptor, Bro. J. N. Frost, P.M. of Lodges Nos. 208, 704, 865, and P.Z. 753, in the chair, supported by Bro. L. R. Rogers, W.M. of the Burgoyne Lodge, No. 902, in the Vice-chair.

About fifty brethren were present, who partook of a most excellent repast, which Bro. Green had provided in his usual satisfactory manner.

After grace had been said, and the cloth removed, Bro. Frost gave the first toast, "The Queen and the Craft," and the National Anthem was ably sung. He then proposed the "Most Noble the Marquess of Ripon, Most Worshipful G.M. of Masons;" next "The Right Honourable the Earl of Zetland, and His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales, Most Worshipful Past Grand Masters," this was succeeded by the health of "the Right Honourable the Earl of Carnarvon R.W.D.G.M., and the rest of the Grand Officers."

The Chairman then rose to propose the toast of the evening, namely, "Prosperity to the United Strength Lodge of Instruction," in which he gave a brief yet succinct history of the lodge, from its formation to the present time, showing its many vicissitudes and removals, its periods of abeyance, and finally its resuscitation in Kentish Town, where its success had been so great; the various charities it had assisted, and the number of its members had so augmented, concluding his remarks by informing the brethren that since its location in Kentish Town there had not been one blank evening.

Bro. Alexander, P.M. of St. John's Lodge, No. 167, next proposed the health of "The Chairman," whom he highly eulogised as the Preceptor of the lodge, assuring the brethren that wherever the name of Bro. Frost was mentioned, he was always recognised as the most urbane and gentlemanly of Preceptors, and had won the golden opinions of the members of the Craft.

Bro. Frost, in returning thanks, expressed his lively sense of gratitude for the manner in which his health had been received, and begged to assure the brethren that nothing gave him greater pleasure than imparting a knowledge of Masonry to those who required it, and although he most strongly advocated a strict adherence to the ancient landmarks, yet he had endeavoured to render, as far as practicable, the language of Masonry a "well of English undefiled."

Bro. Frost then proposed "Prosperity to the Burgoyne Lodge of Instruction," No. 902, and coupled with it the health of the Secretary, the Vice-Chairman, Bro. L. R. Rogers, W.M. 902, expressing his satisfaction at the truly fraternal feeling existing between the two lodges meeting under the same roof, and hoping their friendly rivalry in trying to surpass each other might continue for many happy years.

Bro. Rogers expressed his thanks in very appropriate terms, and was proud of the prosperity of the Burgoyne Lodge of Instruction, of which he was the founder, and a staunch supporter.

The Chairman then said there was another excellent Lodge of Instruction in that vicinity, which might almost be considered as one of their own, namely, the "Camden, No. 704," and with that he would couple the health of the Secretary, Bro. Lambie, J.W. of the Egyptian Lodge, No. 27, and Bro. Alexander, P.M., St. John's Lodge, No. 167, who severally returned thanks.

The Chairman next proposed the health of Bro. Baker, P.M. 167, the Hon. Secretary of the Lodge, expatiating on his abilities, and regretting that his professional duties had called him into the country, so that he was not able to be present.

Bro. Dr. Stewart, P.M. of the Lodge of United Strength, No. 228, proposed the health of the host, Bro. Green, pointing out to the brethren his constant anxiety to promote their Masonic convenience.

Bro. Green briefly returned thanks, assuring the brethren that he had Masonry at heart, and his effort would always be to persevere their good opinion. A very happy evening was then brought to a close.

Some very excellent singers were present, whom it would be almost invidious to particularise. Suffice it to say that to prove the universality of the Craft, there were songs in French, Belgian, Danish, German, and Italian.

Obituary.

BRO. ALEXANDER JAMES STEWART, W.S.,

Joint Grand Secretary to the Grand Lodge of Freemasons of Scotland died at his residence in Musselburgh on the 8th March, 1873, after a long and painful illness. His death will be the source of deep regret to a large circle of friends and acquaintances. Bro. A. J. Stewart, for many years held a high and responsible position as an official of the Grand Lodge of Freemasons, and on the decease of the late Bro. William Alexander Laurie, W.S., was appointed Grand Secretary of that institution. He was also Secretary to the directors of the National Monument, and was connected with many of the public institutions of the city. For many years he held a commission in the Athole Highlanders, and took considerable interest in the Volunteer movement when first organised; and when dressed in full highland costume looked exceedingly handsome, being far above the average height. He was of a frank and generous nature, and possessed of very clear judgment. About two years past he was seized with paralysis, from which he never recovered, and died at the age of 52 years. His remains were interred in the family burying ground in the Dean Cemetery, Edinburgh, on Friday, the 12th March, the funeral being strictly private.

Masonic Tidings.

The M.W.G.M. has nominated Bro. the Earl Ferrers as P.G.M. of Leicestershire and Rutland. The Installation will probably take place on Easter Monday at Leicester.

We understand that a testimonial is about to be presented to R.W. Bro. Kelly, Past Prov. G. Master for Leicestershire and Rutland, by the brethren of that province.

CONSECRATION OF A NEW MARK LODGE.—On Monday the 31st inst., Bro. W. Romaine Callender, Prov. Grand Mark Master of Lancashire, assisted by his Provincial Grand Officers, will consecrate the Walton Lodge of Mark Master Masons, No. 161, at the Masonic Hall, Kirkdale, Liverpool. The ceremony will begin at half-past three o'clock, but a meeting will be held at 2 o'clock for the purpose of advancing Candidates. Bro. J. C. Lunt, is the W.M., designate, and as those who have accepted office are well-known for their good working, there is no doubt that the new lodge will hold a very high rank.

A BOON TO EVERY HOUSEHOLD.—Boots, with the celebrated wire-quilted soles, wearing twice as long as ordinary leather, for all ages; and children's boots with metallic tips, which never wear out at the toes, may be had at most shoe dealers. Insist on giving these a trial, and judge on their merits.

We are happy to be able to announce there is a considerable improvement in the condition of the Earl de Grey, according to the following telegram which has been received by Sir Bruce Seton, from the Marquess of Ripon at Cannes; "March 17th, 2.38 p.m. Going on well, shall send no more bulletins at present."

Lieut.-Col. Lyne, the Provincial Grand Master of Monmouthshire, has been appointed Grand Superintendent of Royal Arch Masons for that District, by patent dated 27th January, 1873.

The Admiralty contract for candles, oils and soap has been taken by Mr. Robert Mendey, of Fenchurch-street.

"After suffering many years from indigestion and biliousness, for which I could find no remedy, I was at length induced by a friend to try your Vegetable Pain Killer for it, and the first bottle I used of it gave me entire and permanent relief.—J. L. HAYLOCK, Manchester, July 15, 1867—To Perry Davis & Son, London, W.C."

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT AND PILLS are the most reliable remedies for the Blotches, Pimples, Boils and Carbuncles, which, often appearing at the change of seasons, are ever annoying, sometimes dangerous and always disfiguring. The subtle permeating powers of this Ointment, by repressing both inflammation and irritation, reduce the Skin to its natural temperature and colour, whilst radically expelling the causes of the blemishes of the system. The Pills assist the cooling and purifying influence of the unguent, by expelling all that is gross from the Bowels, and by thoroughly rectifying digestion. Under this treatment every organ throughout the body is compelled to dislodge both irregularities and impurities, whereby the Skin becomes soft and silky, the spirits gay, and the health robust.—ADVT.

PROSPECTUS.

The Surrey Masonic Hall Company has been formed with the object of providing a Building specially adapted to the requirements of Masonic Lodges, Chapters, and Conclaves, held in the South Metropolitan District; and in connection therewith, a large Hall, for the general use of the public when not engaged for Masonic purposes.

This project has met with the approval of Brethren high in the Craft, and been very favourably received at the several Public Meetings that have been held.

The Site for the Building is in the Camberwell New Road, lying between the Post Office and the County Court, close to the Station of the London, Chatham, and Dover Railway, and to the Tramways from Brixton, Vauxhall, Westminster, Blackfriars, Peckham, and Greenwich. It possesses a frontage of about 70 feet, with a depth of about 150, and has been secured for a term of Ninety-nine Years, at a very low Ground-rent. The plans have been prepared by a well-known Architect and Member of the Craft, and embrace every convenience that long experience could possibly suggest.

The propriety of holding Masonic Meetings in buildings devoted to the purpose is universally acknowledged by the Craft, and the advantages have been fully proved in many provincial towns where Masonic Halls have been erected. It will also supply a want, long felt in this neighbourhood, of a commodious Public Building.

Although the chief object of the Company is to promote the good of Freemasonry, the Directors are of opinion, from estimates carefully prepared, that the Shareholders will also derive a very fair return in a commercial point of view. They therefore, with full confidence, invite the active support of their Brethren. A large number of shares have already been subscribed for.

The estimated annual expenditure for Ground-rent, Taxes, Gas, Coals and sundries about £200.

The estimated annual receipts from Lodges, Chapters, Lodges of Instruction, Conclaves, &c., including rent of Wine cellars, about £220; and from rental of Hall for Concerts, Public Meetings, &c., about £300. And the estimated cost of building and furnishing the Hall, capable of accomodating about 700 persons, in addition to spacious Masonic Rooms, from £2,500 to £3,000, thus shewing 10 per cent, interest on the capital. The Directors, however, fairly anticipate a larger return from public lettings.

The Company is registered under Table A of the Companies Act, 1862. A copy of the Memorandum of Association can be seen at the Offices of the Company.

SUCCESS THE INDEX OF MERIT.

ALLCOCK'S POROUS PLASTERS.

The public are informed that these celebrated Plasters have been established twenty-seven years. Patented U.S., 1845. It is supposed and claimed that they restore the of the part where applied, by which pain and diseased actions cease. But we really know little on this subject, because the properties of medical agents can only be known by experience, and this has taught that whenever Allcock's Porous Plasters are applied they do good, often restoring the withered hand, removing the unsightly lump, lengthening the shorter leg, and restoring the lame to walk. But read our testimonials, and if you have a weak spot in your body, try a plaster; the cost is small,

ELECTRICAL CONDITION

BEING TWENTY-SEVEN HALFPENCE ONLY.

No doubt they impart all

to the system needed. We believe this because they have made greater cures than were ever achieved by the most costly applications.

WHERE ONE WAS SOLD A YEAR AGO A THOUSAND ARE SOLD NOW.

They strengthen, warm, and invigorate the part upon which they are applied, and relieve nervous affections of the bowels, lumbago, pains of the side, and usually, all local pain. In affections of the kidneys they are of great service.

LUMBAGO.

To Messrs. Allcock & Co, Liverpool.

“Manor-road, Folkestone, July 6, 1872.

Gentlemen,—Some months ago I suffered severely from lumbago, and could not walk without much pain and difficulty. One day I met a friend, General ———, who advised me to try one of Allcock's Porous Plasters, adding, ‘I have one on me at this moment, which has wholly removed an affection similar to the one from which you are suffering.’ I had really never before heard of the plasters, but was so struck with what I heard that I immediately procured one and put it on. I found almost instantaneous relief; the pain and stiffness were gone in an hour, and have never since returned. I may add that several friends, including an eminent physician, laughed at my account of my cure; more than one of them, however, including that physician, have owned to me since that, in consequence of my statement, they have resorted to Allcock's Porous Plasters when suffering in various ways, and have in every instance found relief. A lady of my acquaintance, who heard from me of these plasters, has tried them with wonderful effect among the suffering poor. She finds the demand for them so great that she wrote to you to ask at what rate you could supply her with plasters for the poor. In answering her question you kindly sent her a supply for gratuitous distribution. To thank you in my own name, and in behalf of my friends and of the poor, I feel it a duty and a pleasure to send you these few lines, of which you may make any use you please.”

J. H. WOODWARD.

VOLUNTARY AND IMPORTANT TESTIMONIALS.

“Sir,—I have myself proved the efficacy of your plasters, but to-day a well-known clergyman, in the course of conversation, asked me if I knew anything of ‘Allcock's Porous Plasters.’ I replied, ‘O yes, we sell them largely; I have just ordered £50 worth of them.’ ‘Well,’ he said, ‘they are invaluable. I give them to nearly all my poor parishoners for all sorts of complaints—rheumatism, lumbago, colds, bronchitis, &c. I also use them in my own family, and recommend them to my friends. My wife was suffering from bronchial disturbance, but was quickly relieved by Allcock's Plaster. One case of cure was almost amusing. A person had been suffering a long time from dreadful pain at the pit of the stomach, and had spent I don't know how much in trying to get cured, but in vain. I gave him one of Allcock's Plasters, and it cured him in a quarter of an hour. He spoke so enthusiastically about the plasters that I asked him to allow his statement to be made public. As he consented, I give you his name—viz., Rev. G. COMYNS, Vicar of Sidbury, Devonshire.

“I forward you this with pleasure, knowing it will have weight with the public, especially in the southern counties of England.”

With compliments,

EDWIN J. ORCHARD.

Letter from the REV. THOS. BONSALE, M.A., as to Qualities and Reputation of Brandreth's Pills and Allcock's Plasters.

“Wisset Vicarage, near Halesworth, Suffolk, July 29, 1872.

“H. D. BRANDRETH, Esq., Liverpool.

“My Dear Sir,—Please forward me some Brandreth's Pills and Porous Plasters to amount of enclosure. I may here state I have been in the habit, for the last thirty-seven years, of administering these remedies to the sick with great success. I have been well acquainted with Dr. B. Brandreth, of New York, for nearly forty years, and can certify that he gives constant employment to upwards of one hundred persons preparing these commodities alone. Brandreth's Pills and Allcock's Porous Plasters are the household remedies of nearly every family in the United States and throughout South America. We all know that many persons take medicine when they do not need it. It is, therefore, of importance that the medicine should be incapable of hurting. Now, I know Brandreth's Pills to be perfectly harmless from long experience of their effects. Yet, when the bowels or the blood need cleansing, they are a thoroughly energetic medicine, arousing all the interior organs to healthy action. In colds, colics, and costiveness, they give relief immediately, and those who use them will find them a safe and most reliable remedy.

“I am, yours truly,

THOMAS BONSALE,

“Late Curate of Linstead Magna and Parva, Suffolk.”

Observe “D. Brandreth” on the Government Stamp, without which they cannot be genuine.

REPORTS OF MASONIC MEETINGS.

Craft Masonry.

MOUNT LEBANON LODGE (No. 73).—This old and prosperous lodge met on Tuesday, March 18th, at the Bridge House Hotel, Borough High-street, Southwark. Bro. George Jolly Grace, W.M. presided. The minutes of the previous meeting were read and unanimously confirmed. Ballots, taken separately, were unanimous in favour of the admission of Bros. Prince, and Bennett, as joining members, and Mr. T. H. Philpott, as a candidate for initiation. The work, done in good style, was the passing Bro. Syer and Cooper, to the second degree, and initiating Mr. T. H. Philpott, into Freemasonry. On motion duly made and seconded, it was unanimously resolved to give ten guineas to the Girls' School in the name of the Junior Deacon of the lodge for the time being, as all the officers above that rank in the lodge possessed the privilege of being Life Governors; The W.M. being Vice President of all the Masonic Charities. It was explained it would be in time the intention of the lodge to make every officer in the lodge a Life Governor of that Charity, similar to the arrangement made in the case of the Boys' School, of which all the officers including the Immediate Past Master, possessed during their term of office, the advantage of being Life Governors. This old lodge sets a good example to all others in supporting the Charities of the Order. Although far excelling lodges of its class in doing so much good to the Charities, and possessing amongst its Past Masters, Past Stewards and Life Governors to all the Masonic Charities, yet strange to say no one has been selected from this lodge to be a Grand Lodge Officer. The merits of some member will, it is hoped, secure that acknowledgement being conferred on him and that, too, in good time. Some gentlemen were proposed for initiation. The lodge was closed. Banquet followed: there were present in addition to the W.M., Bros. A. L. Dussek, S.W.; J. Harman, J.W.; E. Harris, P.M. Treas.; F. Walters P.M., Sec.; J. S. Gomme, S.D.; J. T. H. Wilkins, J.D.; J. H. Butten, I.G.; C. Rayden, D.C.; D. Rose, P.M.; G. Morris, P.M.; F. H. Elsworth, P.M.; J. H. Spencer, H. Keeble, T. S. Hill, A. J. Treton, J. Mercer, G. W. Muskett, W. Rutlin, and others. Amongst the large number of visitors were Bros. Dosell P.M. 55; R. Limpus, J.D. 1309; Jesse Smith, 1326, and many whose names we were unable to ascertain.

LEICESTER.—St. Johns' Lodge (No. 279).—The monthly communication of this lodge was held at the Freemasons' Hall, on Wednesday the 5th inst. Bro. Clement Stretton, P.G.W., W.M., in the chair. Bro. Kelly, P.P.G.M., P.M., conjointly with Bro. Toller, P.P.G.R. and Bro. Crow, P.M., assisted the W.M. in the initiation of two candidates, and recommended to their consideration the beauties of our mystic art in a manner which could not fail to impress their minds with a reverence for the grand principles upon which our Order is founded. This system of a division of labour, is more attractive to the brethren, judging from the presence of some who have recently been rather remiss in their attendance and the arrangement receives their hearty commendation. Bro. Crow, I.P.M., received an appreciative acknowledgement of his ability in the discharge of the duties of the chair during the past year. A well merited compliment was also paid to the deservedly popular brother, George Toller, jun., P.P.G.R., in unanimously electing him an Honorary Member of the lodge. We have also to notice the presence of Bros. Sculthorpe, P. Prov. G.S.D.; S. S. Partridge, Prov. G.S.; Atwood, Chicago; Atwood, Sen.; R. Goodman, 354, Glasgow; C. E. Stretton, J.D.; J. T. Thorp, Prov. Grand Steward; and J. M. McAllister, Secretary.

LIVERPOOL.—Ancient Union Lodge (No. 203).—The usual monthly meeting of the brethren connected with this lodge was held at the Masonic Temple, Liverpool, on Thursday, the 20th inst., the special business on the paper being the installation of Bro. T. W. Sergeant, W.M. elect. The lodge was opened shortly after five o'clock by Bro. John Parsons, W.M., who was supported by Bros. H. James, I.P.M.; Rowson, P.M., P.G.S.; T. W. Sergeant, S.W.; C. Bromley, P.M., Treasurer; P. McF. Neill, Secretary; H. Glover, S.D.; J. Parker, I.G.; W. H. Ball, Tyler; J. Hewitt, J. Winsor, J. Pipe, E. Johnson, &c. The visitors' list embraced the names of Bros. T. Armstrong, P.G. Treasurer; J. Skeaf, P.G.O.; J. Hamer, P.P.G. Treasurer; C. H. Hill, P.M. 724 and 1276; S. Haynes, P.M. 823; E. Hughes, W.M. 249; J. Kenyon, W.M. 1013; J. Jones, S.W. 1393; J. Devaynes, P.M. 667, &c. After the minutes had been confirmed, Bro. J. Parsons proceeded to install his successor in the chair of K.S., which he did in a highly efficient manner. The following brethren were afterwards invested as officers:—Bro. P. McF. Neill, S.W.; Hugh Glover, J.W.; E. Johnston, Secretary; C. Bromley, P.M., Treasurer; J. Birtles, S.D.; T. Armstrong, J.D.; J. Winsor, I.G.; M. Aronsberg and Wilson, Stewards. The newly-installed W.M. then initiated two candidates in a highly creditable manner. At the close of the business, the brethren sat down to an excellent banquet, and during the evening a handsome marble timepiece and two bronze ornaments was presented to the I.P.M., Bro. J. Parsons. A silver plate on the clock bore the following inscription "Presented to Bro. Past Master Parsons by the brethren of the Ancient Union Lodge as a mark of esteem. Liverpool, 20th March, 1873." After Bro. Parsons had responded, he, in name of the brethren, presented Bro. P.M. Charles Bromley, Treasurer, with a very handsome silver cup, subscribed for by the brethren. The cup bore the following inscription:—Presented to Bro. Charles Bromley, P.M., by the members of the Ancient Union Lodge, No. 203, as a token of their high appreciation of his services as Treasurer, 1873." The whole of the proceedings were marked by the greatest cordiality and true brotherly feeling.

LIVERPOOL.—Everton Lodge (No. 823).—The usual monthly meeting of this lodge, which took place on Wednesday evening, the 19th inst., was the largest and most interesting which has taken place for some time. The presence of Bro. E. Samuelson, P.P.J.G.D. of Cheshire, Mayor of Liverpool, caused the liveliest interest, and indicated how deep is the interest he takes in the progress of the Craft. There were about 70 members and 30 visitors present, and the whole of the evening's business was conducted in the finest spirit and efficiency. The lodge was opened shortly after six o'clock by Bro. J. Holland, W.M., the officers being Bros. T. D. Pearce, I.P.M.; J. S. Taylor, P.M.; S. Haynes, P.M.; T. Ashmore, P.M.; W. J. Lunt, P.M., Treas.; W. Boulton, S.W.; W. Cottrell, Sec.; T. Shaw, S.D.; W. Wilson, J.D.; W. G. Veale, Org.; J. Houlding, S.; and H. Ashmore, S. Amongst the principal visitors were Bros. E. Samuelson, P.P.J.G.D., Cheshire; E. Hughes, W.M. 240;

Dr. J. K. Smith, P.M. 249, 1094; T. Armstrong, P.G. Treas.; J. Skeaf, P.G.O.; H. W. Nicholas, 249; P.B. Gee, W.M. 1264; J. Hyde, 249; Dr. McGeorge, P.M. 241; W. Shortis, W.M. 724; Dr. R. H. D. Johnson, P.M. 1094; J. Ball, Sec. 673. After the transaction of some formal business the W.M. initiated three candidates with striking effect—Messrs. Warriner, Parry and Hynes. The lodge was subsequently opened in the third degree, when Bro. Dr. Taylor raised Bros. Parker and Graham to the sublime degree of M.M.'s in impressive style. Bro. his Worship the Mayor, after expressing his pleasure with the working of the lodge, left immediately after the conclusion of the business. The brethren afterwards supped together, and a pleasant evening was passed.

BURY ST. EDMUNDS.—St. Edmund's Lodge (No. 1008).—On Friday, the 14th inst., the ninth anniversary and installation of W.M. of the Royal St. Edmund's Lodge, No. 1008, took place in the spacious new lodge room in the Angel Hotel, Hotel, Bury St. Edmunds. The "annuals" of the St. Edmunds lodge have already become known as some of the most pleasant Masonic gatherings in the province, and there was a large assemblage of brethren of this and the neighbouring lodges, amongst those present being Bros. J. F. Hills, W.M., 1224, P.J.G.W. Suffolk; Spencer Freeman, P.M. 516, P.G. Treasurer Suffolk; W. H. Lucia, P.M. 100, 1008, P.G. Sec. and P.P.J.G.W. Suffolk; T. J. Huddleston, I.P.M. 1008, P.P.J.G.W. Suffolk; J. N. York, P.M. 88, and W.M. and P.M. 1008, P.Z., and P.P.S.G.W. Cambridge-shire; J. D. Perrott, P.M. 651, 1072, and P.P.S.C.W. Wales; F. B. Marriott, P.M. 516, P.P.G. Sec. Suffolk; S. H. Wright, P.M. 516, P.P.G. Reg. Suffolk; G. Thompson, P.M. 1008, W. Bailey, P.M. 155, 343, 703; and about forty other brethren. Bro. J. N. York acted very ably as installing master, and Bro. W. H. Lucia (secretary) read the ancient charges. Bro. Captain T. J. Huddleston presented to the Installing Master the brother on whom the choice of the lodge had fallen as W.M. for the ensuing year, Bro. W. E. Bailey, P.G.A. Sec., Suffolk, who was then regularly inducted into the chair of K.S. and proclaimed and saluted in the several degrees. The impressive manner in which the ceremony was performed elicited the highest encomiums, many old Masons present averring that they had never seen it done more effectively. The W.M. afterwards proceeded to appoint and invest his officers as follows, delivering a short appropriate address to each:—S. W. Bro. Captain C. J. T. Oakes; J. W. Bro. J. Hedley Bevan; S.D. Bro. F. Fearnside; J.D. Bro. W. G. Patrick; I.G. Bro. Henry Miller; Chaplain, Bro. the Rev. Dr. Bennett; Organist, Bro. W. J. Nunn; M.C. Bro. W. Armstrong; Steward, Bro. W. Clarke; Secretary, Bro. W. H. Lucia. The brethren then elected Bro. Captain Huddleston as Treasurer, and Bro. Gooch as Tyler. A vote of thanks was passed to Bro. W. Clarke for a pair of very handsome globes, celestial and terrestrial, which he that evening presented to the lodge, and also to the I.P.M. Bro. York, for the very admirable manner in which he had gone through the ceremony of installation. The brethren afterwards sat down to a banquet which included all the delicacies of the season, and was served in a manner which reflected infinite credit on Bro. W. G. Guy, who on this, as on all occasions, displayed the utmost consideration for the comfort of the brethren. In the course of the evening the W.M. proposed the toast of the "Masonic Charities," and made an earnest appeal to the brethren on their behalf, to which they liberally responded by depositing in the "brok'n column," a sum sufficient, with the few donations from absent brethren, to purchase a life governorship of one of the charities. Bro. Marriott, P.P.G. Sec., in responding to the toast of "The Visitors," characterised the Royal Bury St. Edmunds lodge as second only to one, in point of numbers, in the province of Suffolk, and certainly inferior to none in status, either socially or masonically. Several admirable glees and songs were sung by the brethren, and a most happy evening was spent in "peace and harmony." A Royal Arch Chapter in connection with this lodge is to be instituted during the ensuing month.

MELTON MOWBRAY.—Rutland Lodge (No. 1130).—The regular monthly meeting of this lodge was held on Thursday, 13th ult., when there was a fair gathering of brethren, the W.M. Bro. Adcock in the chair. Amongst the visitors were:—Bros. Orford, P.M. 466; H. Bagg, and Bro. Markham, I.P.M. of 1265. A P.M.'s jewel of a very chaste design was presented to the I.P.M. Bro. Bright, whose good working during his year of office had well sustained the credit of the chair of this lodge.

GREENWICH.—Star Lodge (No. 1275).—At the Ship Hotel, Greenwich, the regular meeting of this prosperous lodge was held on Friday, 7th inst. Brother Henry Keeble, W.M., opened the lodge. The minutes of the last meeting were read and confirmed. The ballots proved unanimous in favour of the admission of all the candidates. The W.M., in a correct manner, raised one to the third degree, and initiated two gentlemen into the Order. Several gentlemen were proposed for initiation. The lodge having been closed, a splendid banquet followed. After the removal of the cloth, the usual toasts were given and responded to. Great credit was justly taken for the successful efforts put forth by the lodge in sending Stewards to represent them at the festivals, viz., one for each. However, thanks to the energy and perseverance of the hard-working Secretary that success has been achieved. After a few hours spent in enjoyment, the brethren separated. There were present Bros. T. R. Darke, S.W.; G. Pymm, P.M., J.W.; J. Smith, P.G.P., P.M., Treasurer; F. Walters, P.M., Secretary; G. F. Guest, S.D.; J. J. Limebeer, J.D.; W. Kipps, I.G. and Organist; W. Ough, P.G.P., P.M.; C. J. Hogg, P.G.S., P.M.; G. S. Elliott, J. Finch, J. Fox, and others. The visitors were Bros. W. Farnfield, P.M. 907; Rev. Vaughan, P.M. 907; E. Shalless 140; E. Mallett, 141; W. Vine, 1310.

WEST DERBY.—Pembroke Lodge (No. 1299).—The annual meeting of this admirable suburban lodge was held on Thursday, the 20th inst., at Rawlinson's Hotel, West Derby, near Liverpool, the special business being the installation of Bro. Joseph Clegg, as W.M. for the ensuing year. Since its consecration a few years ago, the "Pembroke" has made steady progress, taking a well-earned place as one of the best worked and most harmonious lodges in the province of West Lancashire; and the election to the chair of a true and large hearted Mason like Bro. Clegg, who has done noble service to the cause of Masonry during his long connection with it, was not only a fitting and just reward of merit and zeal, but one eminently popular with the brethren and likely to prove beneficial to the lodge itself. Shortly before three o'clock, the lodge was opened in due form by Bro. J. Sellar, W.M., who was supported by Bros. J. Clegg, S.W.; P. Macmurdrow, J.W.; H. Liversage, Treas.; R. Bennett, Sec.; W. Jones, S.D.; and J. Robinson, Tyler. There was a good attendance of the brethren of the lodge, amongst those present being Bros. D. Saunders; J. Rockliffe, P.M. 1035; R. Langley, P.M. 477 and 823; J. W. Kelly, W. Nash, J. S. G. Aspinall, E. Bartlett, H. J. Gunn, J. L. Jones, A. Jones, T. Farms, A. T. Smith, W. Avis, T. G. Winstanley, and others. The attendance of visitors was also large including Bros. S. Y. Hess, P. Prov. J.G.W., Cheshire; A. C. Mott, P.G.S.W., Westmoreland and Cumberland; J. W. Baker, P.G.S., P.M. 220 and 241; W. Woods, P.M. 1182; D. W. Winstanley, P.M. 1094; W. T. May, W.M. 1393; R. R. Martin, S.W. 1094; R. Jones, P.M. 220; R. C. Yelland, J.D. 1064; J. Ball, Sec., 673; J. Busfield, J. Tabley, 594; and others. A letter of apology was read from Bro. W. Vines, P.M., who was necessarily absent on account of ill-health. Apologies had also been received by the W.M. elect from Bro. E. Saker, Bro. H. Leslie, and Bro. H. J. Loveday. After the minutes had been read and confirmed, Bro. J. Clegg was presented for installation to Bro. J. W. Baker, whose rendering of the impressive ritual was striking and efficient in the highest degree. After a board of Installed Masters had been held and Bro. Clegg duly "chaired," the brethren were re-admitted and saluted the W.M. in the three degrees. The charges were also given by Bro. Baker with great force and impressiveness to the following officers, invested by the W.M. for the ensuing year:—Bros. P. Macmurdrow, S.W.; W. Jones, J.W.; H. Liversage, Treas.; R. Bennett, Sec.; A. T. Smith, S.D.; M. Bush, J.D.; A. Jones, S.S.; W. Avis, J.S.; G. Aspinall, I.G.; and J. Robinson, Tyler. Mr. John Christian was subsequently initiated by Bro. Clegg, W.M., in a manner to which the slightest objection could not be taken, reflecting the highest credit upon his Masonic aptitude and intelligence. A sumptuous banquet was afterwards served by "mine host," to which a large number of the brethren sat down, under the presidency of the W.M., who after giving the usual loyal and Masonic toasts, gave "The Prov. Grand Officers, Past and Present." Bro. S. Y. Hess, P. Prov. J.G.W., Cheshire, replied in an excellent speech, in which he expressed great pleasure in being present that day. In giving the health of the W.M., Bro. J. Sellar, I.P.M., said he had known Bro. Clegg for many years, not only in that, but other lodges, where he had held responsible offices, and judging from the satisfactory manner in which he had performed his duties that afternoon there could be little doubt that he would be an honour to the lodge during his year of office. The W.M., in reply, thanked the brethren for their kindness in unanimously electing him to fill the chair. When he received the telegram in London conveying this intelligence, nothing ever gave him greater pleasure, and he felt amply repaid for all the work which he had done in connection with Masonry. The W.M. then proposed the health of Bro. Sellar, I.P.M., and referred to him as the actual founder of the Pembroke Lodge, as having done good service in the different offices he had filled, and concluded by presenting him (Bro. Sellar), in name of the lodge, with a splendid set of diamond studs, hoping he would have health, wealth, and prosperity for many years to come. Bro. Sellar acknowledged the toast and presentation in a very feeling speech. "The Installing Master" was acknowledged by Bro. Baker, and "The West Lancashire Masonic Educational Institution" by Bro. Capt. Mott, who spoke in eloquent terms of the progress made by the institution since its foundation. In the course of his speech he also referred with pride and pleasure to the fact that Bro. Lord Skelmersdale, their P.G.M., would preside at the annual meeting of the Royal Masonic Institution for Girls, in May next. While they ought to look to their own Masonic Charities at home, he felt that their sympathies ought to extend to the great London Masonic Charities, and therefore he had consented to act as one of the Stewards in which capacity he solicited their cordial help and donations. The toast of "The Officers of the Lodge" was acknowledged by all the staff, and "The Visitors" by all who were present. Capital songs were contributed by Bros. J. Busfield, W. Jones, &c., and the brethren separated at an early hour, highly delighted with the whole of the afternoon's proceedings.

HAMPTON.—Lebanon Lodge (No. 1326).—This highly prosperous and successful lodge, held its meeting on Saturday, 15th March, at the Red Lion Hotel. The lodge was opened by Bro. William Hammond, P.M., S.D., punctually at three o'clock, p.m. The minutes of the meeting held in January were read and unanimously confirmed. The ballots were unanimous in favour of the admission of Bro. R. Limpus, S.D. 1309; C. Saunders, 1275; T. Wheeler, 1275; and R. Gutteridge 1275; as joining members, also for Messrs Came, I. Jones, Jesse Smith, G. Shott, J. N. White, and C. A. Grant, as candidates for initiation. Bro. F. Walters, P.M., Secretary, took the chair, and in his usual correct manner raised Bro. H. Nell, T. Archer, John Thompson, and B. Hall, to the third degree. He passed Bros. Joseph Thompson, J. Deeks, M. Mildred, J. Newton, Webster, 1309 and Collins, 1309; to the second degree. The W.M. Bro. J. T. Moss, P.G.S.D. Middlesex, having arrived, he took the chair and presided over the lodge for the remainder of the evening. He most impressively initiated Messrs Jesse Smith, Charles Allan Grant, George Shott, and W. N. Smith, into the secrets and mysteries of Ancient Freemasonry. The name of Bro. James Robert Moore, was added to the twelve already sent in as Stewards to represent the lodge at the Girls' School Festival to be held on May 14th, 1873, as he expressed a wish to assist on that important occasion. Two visitors were proposed as joining members, four gentlemen were proposed as candidates for initiation, and the lodge was closed and declared adjourned until Thursday, April 17th. There were present besides those already named, Bro. H. A. Dubois, J.W.; J. W. Jackson, J.D.; W. H. Scott, D.C.; E. Hopwood, P.M.; J. Hammond, P.M.; H. Potter, P.M.; H. Woodrow, P.M.; C. W. Fox, J. Hayward, H. Jones, C. Heitzmann, G. Black, W. B. Smith, H. Gloster, R. Lawrence, J. W. Baldwin, J. Thomas, and many others. The visitors were Bros. A. Pulley, P.M. 169; W. Vine, 1310; Collins, 1309; Webster 1309; and others. Banquet followed the business.

ANDOVER.—St. Hubert Lodge.—It is gratifying to notice the progress of Freemasonry in Andover, with a lodge only twelve months old. At the regular monthly meeting on Monday last, the Rev. Bro. Evan Yorke-Nepean, M.A., S.W. and P.G.C., was elected to the office of W.M., in the room of Bro. J. Rankin Stebbing, Deputy Provincial Grand Master, under whose guidance the St. Hubert has had so successful a training. The installation of the new W.M. will in all probability take place on the 21st prox., when it is expected the P.G.M. Bro. W. W. Beach, M.P., will perform the ceremony. The annual meeting will be held at the same time, and a banquet will be given in the evening, when it is hoped a large number of brethren from other lodges will attend.

Royal Arch.

LANCASTER.—Roxley Chapter, (No. 1051).—The regular meeting of this Chapter for the installation of the Principals Elect and investiture of Officers was held at the Chapter rooms, Athenaeum, Lancaster, on Friday, March 14. There were present Comps. W. Hall, M.E.Z.; E. Simpson, H.; J. L. Whimpray, J.; J. Danl. Moore, P.Z., Prov. G.H., G.S.B. England; W. H. Bagnall, P.Z.; T. Mason, P.Z.; James M. Moore, E.; W. Heald, N.; F. Dean, A.S.; W. Hall, James Taylor, J. Watson, Janitor. The chapter was opened, muster roll called and other business transacted. Bro. Harger was elected as a candidate for Royal Arch Masonry, and being in attendance was effectively exalted to that supreme degree by Comp. W. Hall, M.E.Z., the lectures being delivered in the usual manner, and the duties of P.S., in the absence of Comp. Airey, being undertaken by Comp. J. M. Moore. The Installing Officer having taken the chair of the chapter, next proceeded, in a board of Installed Principals consisting of Comps. Moore, Mason, Bagnall, Hall, &c., to install the Principals Elect, as follows:—Comps. E. Simpson, Z.; J. L. Whimpray, H.; James M. Dean, P.S.; R. Taylor, Janitor; after which the chapter was closed in due form.

MELTON MOWBRAY.—De Mowbray Chapter (1130).—The regular meeting of this chapter was held on Thursday, 13th ult., immediately before the Craft lodge, when there were present E. Comps. Langley, Orford and Newcome, P.Z.'s; Fast, H.; and Comps. Bright, Adcock, Markam, Past Scribe E.'s; R. Boughton Smith, Scribe E. of the Charnwood Chapter; Chester, Newcome, Duncombe, Bugg, and Norton. The candidates for exaltation were not in attendance, so no work was done, except the election of officers for the ensuing year, which was as follows:—Fast, Z.; Dean, H.; Duncombe, J.; Bright, Scribe E.; Johnson, Scribe N.; Boughton Smith, P.S. The chapter was then closed. Comp. Dean is H. in the Charnwood Chapter, and therefore will not require installation, but Comps. Mark Masonry.

LEICESTER.—Fowke Lodge (No. 19).—An emergency meeting of this lodge was held at the Freemason's Hall, on Wednesday evening the 12th inst. Bro. S. S. Partridge, W.M., presiding. There was a good attendance of brethren, including Bro. W. Kelly, P.G.M.M.; Rev. John Spittal, D.P.G.M.M.; W. Weare, S.W.; George Toller, jun., M.O.; W. Sculthorpe, S.O.; J. M. McAllister, Secretary; W. T. Rowlett, R.M.; R. A. Barber, S.D.; E. J. Crow, J.D.; J. T. Thorpe, H. T. Bobart, and others. Five candidates for advancement were duly balloted for, and admitted, viz., Bros. S. Tebbutt, A. Ross, J. S. Tomlin, M. H. Bobart, and W. Saunders. The ceremony was ably conducted by the W.M., whose self-devotion to the welfare of the lodge has been fully exemplified by the fact that he has conferred this very interesting degree on no less than twenty candidates during his year of office.

BRIGHTON.—Royal Sussex Lodge of Mark Masters (No. 75).—The members of this lodge held their regular meeting for March, at the Pavilion, Brighton, on Tuesday evening, March 11th, 1873. The lodge was opened at five o'clock p.m., and Bro. S. Cowley was advanced into this beautiful and instructive degree, after which Bro. G. R. Lockyer, of Brighton, was duly installed as Worshipful Master, by Bro. Thos. Cook, P.M. 72, P.M. Mark Lodge 75, assisted by Bro. Dr. Cunningham, P.M. 811, 315, 1110, P.P.G.C.W., Sussex, a Past Master of the lodge and P.G.J.O. of Grand Mark Lodge, a special dispensation from the Grand Mark Lodge of England, Wales, &c., &c., having been granted upon the requisition of a large number of the members of the lodge, all who were eligible for the chief office signing the same. Bro. Lockyer then having appointed his officers for the ensuing year, a very elegant Past Master's jewel, bearing the following inscription:—"Presented to Mr. John Robinson, P.M. 315, P.M. Mark Lodge No. 75, as a mark of respect, by the members of the lodge, on his retirement from the office of W.M. March, 1873," was presented to Bro. John Robinson, P.M. 315, on his retirement from the office of W.M. We are pleased to say that this lodge is in a highly flourishing state, having a list of between forty and fifty subscribing members. The lodge having been closed, the brethren adjourned to the Terminus Hotel, where Bro. Pearson served an excellent dinner in his usual style. It is rumoured that application will shortly be made to the Grand Master for a warrant to hold a lodge at Hayward's Heath (as a summer lodge), to be called the "Southdown Lodge," and of which Bro. W. Hudson, P.M. 315, P.P.G.D. Sussex (Craft), and P.M. Mark Lodge 75, and P.A.G.D. of C.M.M., is to be the first Master. Hayward's Heath is a station about twelve miles from Brighton, and the centre of an important district. The last train from London stops every night at 11.30 p.m. It is suggested that, if established, the lodge shall be holden on the first Saturdays in June, July, August, and September. It is also proposed to open another lodge of Mark Masons in Brighton before the close of the year; and a hope is entertained that at no distant day a provincial Grand Mark Lodge for Sussex will be founded. It will be considered an act of justice by those few members of the degree in Brighton who from the first have (through good report and evil report) against the unmistakable opposition of certain Craft Masons, kept the Mark degree not only alive, but by their constant efforts have so thoroughly established the Royal Sussex Lodge, that it is felt safe to establish other lodges for the promotion of a knowledge of this useful, instructive, and elegant degree in Freemasonry.

Knights Templar.

ROCHDALE.—Albert Encampment.—The grand field day of this encampment was held at the Masonic Rooms, Rochdale, on Thursday last, the 26th day of March. The encampment was opened at 7 p.m. by the E.C. Sir Knt. Wm. Ashworth, assisted by his officers, Sir Knt. T. Jones, P.L.C. acting Prelate; when the muster roll was called and the minutes read and confirmed. Comp. John Bell having been proposed, the same being regularly entered on the minutes of last meeting, was balloted for and unanimously elected, and afterwards duly installed a Knight of the Order of Temple by the Eminent Grand Prior of Lancashire, Sir Knt. Clement R. N. Beswicke Royds, who performed the ceremony in a faultless manner, and to the evident satisfaction and advantage of all present. The newly installed Sir Knight having been proclaimed, the Eminent Commander Sir Knt. Herod Turner, was presented by Sir Knt. Wm. Roberts, Grand Prior of West Yorkshire, for the benefit of installation by Sir Knt. Royds, First Grand Captain of England, who again distinguished himself in the performance of the ceremony, thereby proving to the Sir Knights that he takes great interest in the Order, and that he will, as he no doubt intends, at no distant day, to be of great use and advantage to the province. The Eminent Commander then appointed his officers as follows:—Sir Knts. Wm. Ashworth, P.E.C., Prelate; Wm. Davies, 1st Captain; John Pothergill, 2nd Captain; Wm. Roberts, Registrar; C. M. Jones, Treasurer; T. B. Ashworth, Director of Ceremonies; Simon Lord, Almoner; Robert Whitworth, Expert; Robert Butterworth, Captain of Lines; John Bell, 1st Standard Bearer; Richard Gorton, 2nd Standard Bearer; Robert Howard, 1st Herald; James Mills, 2nd Herald; Edmund Wrigley, Organist; Frater John Ashworth, Equerry. The business of the encampment having been regularly and efficiently despatched, the same was closed in due form, and the Knights adjourned to banquet, after which a pleasant hour was spent in the usual loyal and Masonic manner. The toasts specially honoured on this occasion being the Prince of Wales, Grand Master Designate; Sir Knts. A. H. Royds, V.E. Prov. Grand Commander; W. H. Wright, E. Dep. P.G.C. and Clement R. N. Beswicke Royds, Eminent Prov. Grand Prior. May their names ever remain a household word to Knights Templar.

We are frequently called upon to lay before our readers accounts of Masonic meetings, presentations, banquets consequent thereon and picnics, but it is only at long intervals that an event such as is named at the head of this notice takes place. We hail the opening of this lodge with great pleasure, as it tends to show that the fraternity in this city, although they cannot boast of a hall of their own, are alive to their wants and requirements, and do their utmost to supply them.

A brief account of the origin of this lodge may not be uninteresting. About nine months ago a few of the members of the various lodges, having often discussed the want of a lodge for the working of the Mark Degree, met together, subscribed the necessary funds, and applied to the Grand Master in England for a warrant empowering them to open a lodge and to confer the degree. This was duly granted, and the requisite furniture and jewels were sent for to Bro. George Kenning, Little Britain (London), the eminent Masonic jeweller and publisher. Bro. Kenning has supplied articles superior to anything of the kind we have ever before seen, creditable alike to his establishment and to the lodge which has now the honour of wearing them. We have no doubt should a Masonic procession, or outdoor ceremony, at any time take place, that the statements we are now making with respect to the Mark regalia will be fully borne out by all who may see them—the fair sex included.

To enable the lodge to make a start, it was necessary that the assistance of brethren who had already received the degree should be obtained. A hearty co-operation and assistance to the new lodge was given by Bros. Hayward, Atkin, Savage, Seon, Ibbetson, and others.

Punctually at the hour appointed, the lodge was opened, and the ceremony of consecration performed, by Bro. W. R. Hayward, Worshipful Master of the Lodge. The usual elements—corn, wine, and oil—were duly scattered and sprinkled, according to ancient custom, solemn prayers being said, and appropriate portions of Scripture read, dedicating the new undertaking to the Grand Geometrician of the Universe "who tries the blocks thus offered, with his unerring square."

Thereafter 23 candidates were duly ballotted for, and advanced to the degree.

The requisite officers being selected from them, were installed as follows:—W. R. Hayward, W.M.; Alex. Fleming, acting P.M.; George Gledhill, acting S.W.; John Savage, J.W.; W. Batt, Treas.; H. G. Wade, Sec. and Reg. of Records; F. H. Ibbetson, M.O.; James C. Doull, S.O.; James Macready, J.O.; Walter Sleane, S.D.; Uriah Hurrell, J.D.; G. A. Avey, I.G.; Charles Porter, T. The newly-installed officers assisted at some part of the degree, and were highly complimented by the W.M. for their aptitude in acquiring their several parts.

Labour being ended by the closing of the lodge, the question of refreshment next occupied the attention of the brethren. An appropriate Masonic grace having been pronounced by Bro. Hayward, the good things set before them by the host were duly disposed of with a zeal worthy of the fraternity, and highly satisfactory to Bro. Avey, who in this, as in all previous undertakings, showed that the credit of the Masonic Hotel was being duly kept up.

The cloth having been removed, the toast of "The Queen and the Craft," by the W.M., commenced this part of the evening's proceedings, which was followed by "Bro. Albert Edward, Prince of Wales," also from the chair, both the toasts being honoured according to the customs of the Craft.—Song, "God Save the Queen," by the company.

Bro. Hayward next called for a bumper to the "Grand Mark Master of England and Wales," Bro. the Rev. G. R. Portal. He briefly detailed the active and energetic interest displayed by the Grand Master in the cause of Mark Masonry in England, which was shown by the increase in the number of new lodges under this constitution.

The toast was duly honoured, and Bro. Ibbetson, as the oldest Mark Master present, suitably responded.

Another bumper was called for by Bro. Morrison to the health of the Worshipful Master, Bro. W. R. Hayward, whose efforts for the advancement of the lodge had been untiring, and who had that evening conferred the degree in such a correct and workmanlike manner as to elicit the commendations and admiration of all present.

The W.M., in responding, said that he considered this one of the most remarkable nights he had ever spent in connection with Freemasonry, and that the lodge just formed promised to be the most successful in Auckland.

The most amusing speech of the evening fell to the lot of Bro. Barnes, who was called upon to propose "Masons' Wives and Masons' Bairs," which he did in very humorous terms, graphically describing the scenes which some times take place in domestic circles, when the "brother" announced to his better-half the ominous words, "I have to go to my lodge to-night." Bro. Barnes's speech was worthy of "Mrs. Caudie." Drunk with full Masonic honours.

Bro. Batt, in a neat speech, stood champion for the fair sex, and felt sure that if the ladies could only be led to believe how Masonic lodges were conducted, a great many of the objections existing in their minds against the Order would vanish, for "no mortal could more the ladies adore than a Free and Accepted Mason."

The Tyler's toast, "Poor and Distressed Masons," which in all well-conducted lodges terminates the proceedings, brought one of the most successful and pleasant night's entertainments which has ever taken place in connection with the Craft in this city, to a happy termination; "Auld Lang Syne" being the appropriate musical accompaniment.

We might add, in conclusion, that the name chosen for the lodge is most appropriate—"Union," all the lodges in the place being represented amongst its officers and members.

Local industry was also brought to bear on the manufacture of part of the lodge furniture, certain articles required for the degree having been made by Bros. Hurrell and Cole.

The brethren separated shortly before eleven.

THE ORDERS OF THE TEMPLE AND HOSPITAL.

To the Editor of the Freemason.

Dear Sir and Brother,—

I am accused of worshipping the rising sun. Such devotion is strictly Masonic, and of great antiquity, but I am not a Parsee and cannot plead guilty to it.

Those who know me best, however, will admit that my usual course is simply to stick to my colours and nothing more. I am loyal to the Order I have joined, and I did not enter its ranks to attack it, or to throw it over as others seem to have done, to follow the ignis fatuus of the English Langue of St. John of Jerusalem.

"True Blue," says I cannot join that newly revived and very exalted and exclusive body. Well, I am not ambitious, but if I were, I dare say I could satisfy the heralds on the point of genealogy, as well as some others who call themselves Knights of Justice and Knights of Grace.

When "True Blue" kindly suggests that I may hope to be rewarded with a brand new Cross of the Order of the Temple, I may simply remark that I am not desirous of pushing myself forward in any way, whatever others may be; that many of the anonymous writers who now attack me will be the first to accept such honours when they get the chance; that the Grand Cross will in all probability be restricted to knights; it is possible more distinguished than the gentlemen who dignify the Anglican Langue—persons who like the late Prince Consort, would fail to see the desirability of joining that much vaunted body; and that I for one certainly do not presume to aspire to wear the cross which will (mark my words) at no distant date, decorate the breasts of men the Duke's Order would gladly welcome.

I think very highly of the services of Sir Patrick Colquhoun, the Earl of Limerick, and others, and have not scrupled to say so frankly when, perhaps, it would be more politic to hold my tongue; and I am not ashamed of the course I have pursued—a course, I venture to say, consistent from the first—nor will I be frightened, nor put down by men who foresee, perhaps, the coming decadence and fall of their pet orders and degrees before the rise and progress of the Order of the Temple.

The Masonic Order of Malta has been unjustly and unwarrantably attacked by Masons who have taken the obligation to support and maintain it; but who, I suppose, in consequence of joining another (as they are pleased to think) more legitimate body, imagine they are justified in throwing over their old allegiance, and attacking those who are loyal to the Order.

And yet, "M.A. (Oxon)," and some others blame me for showing those gentlemen that their ground is untenable, that in seeking to make us out bastards they only throw a doubt on their own legitimacy.

Well, the Committee of Privileges of the House of Lords (the Sacred Council) has sat upon their claims, and whilst it says we are all illegitimate—a fact most of us have always admitted—decides that the would-be peer (the English Langue) has not made good the claim to a seat in the house—these Scotch marriages are so difficult to prove and French ones are sometimes worse.

I have laboured, and shall continue to do so, with no hope of reward, for I know full well that in Masonry, as in everything else, it is not those who have worked the hardest that get recognition and encouragement, but those who have been holding aloof, or, may be, insidiously urging on others to oppose, but who it is politic and desirable to buy over because of their influence, who get the prizes.

"True Blue" need only look at the Craft he vaunts so highly above the Temple for an illustration of the truth of what I say. I could name ten great Masons who have been taboed, to one whose work was acknowledged. But this is beside the question; only do not quote the beloved Craft for its superiority to the higher degrees in the prompt recognition of merit.

As to the different class of men in the respective Orders of Malta, Manchester and Masonic, again I say I have yet to learn that in social standing we are not as good every whit as they.

For 150 Knights of St. John of the English

Order I will undertake to name 500 Masonic Knights their equals in every respect by birth, breeding, education and profession. Will any Sir Knights accept my challenge? If they will not, then I ask them to kindly bear in mind that we have feelings as well as they, that we have as great a dislike to be called spurious and the members of a ten years' old Order, as they have; and let writers like "Sero sed Serio" (a Daniel come to judgment!) remember the Arab proverb quoted by General Damas, "Curses are like young chickens and oft come home to roost." For curses let him read abuse, and then, perhaps, he will bethink himself of the motto of the Order of the Thistle when he and his friends disparage the Templar Order and its supporters—"Nemo me impune lacessit."

Apologising for taking up your valuable space, I am, fraternally yours,

EMRA HOLMES, 31^o,
Grand Provost of England.

To the Editor of the Freemason.

Dear Sir and Brother,—

Two words in reply to "Civis." I did not call the Manchester Order of St. John "Brummagem," and I never spoke of the desire of the Order to crush the Masonic Order of the Temple.

I suggested that "Brummagem" might be an appropriate title for writers like "Sero sed Serio," and I hinted that there was a desire on the part of some of the members of the Manchester Langue to crush the Masonic Order of Malta.

And this I can prove if necessary, indeed your own columns show it. When "Civis" talks of my wild vituperation, I can afford to smile. Your readers, upon whose impartial judgment and good sense I rely, will readily see on whose side the "wild vituperation" has been; but I refrain from this date to take any further notice of anonymous scribblers, whose principal idea of argument is simple abuse.

A "Masonic Student" and "Lupus," are honourable opponents who most of us know, and whom it is a pleasure to meet in courteous controversy; but I decline to be the butt of gentlemen who dare not sign their names, but who gladly sting like one of "Civis's" snakes, and slink away under the shadow of their anonymity.

To "Lupus" I would briefly say that his very answer to the Roman document shows that I was right. The English Langue is not acknowledged, and is repudiated by the Sacred Council—the Governing Body of the Order—and until Bro. Lupus can adduce a single instance of a Langue being created, or revived, without the authority of the Sovereign, the Grand Master, or his representative, I must again repeat, that, notwithstanding the support of representatives of the five langues out of eight, notwithstanding the technical formalities in the Court of Queen's Bench, the English Langue of the Order of St. John's does not exist, and the Order, or "Honourable Society," calling itself by that name, has no more right to the title than we, the Masonic Order, have.

Yours fraternally,

EMRA HOLMES,
Grand Provost,
Past 2nd Grand Captain of Lines.

NOTITIÆ TEMPLARIÆ.

To the Editor of the Freemason.

Dear Sir and Brother,—

As "Excelsior" thinks it ill-becomes a single member to complain, permit me to inform him, and the numerous readers of his letter, that the writer of "Notitie Templariæ" is, so far from being singular in his ideas with regard to the very underhand way in which the Statutes of the new Order of Knights Templar are carried, that a large and important Province was with difficulty prevented from seceding altogether from the present Order. Scotland, also, would not come in under the treaty, solely in consequence of her dislike to the new Statutes. There is no doubt (the old Grand Conclave being destroyed) that Masonic Knights Templar owe no allegiance to the present system. This is the more unfortunate both as every K.T. must rejoice at the graciousness of H.R.H. the Prince of Wales in consenting to rule over what was the United Order, and because there is no doubt—not a shadow of a doubt—if almost the very best evidence can be relied upon, that the Prince never said he would not rule over us unless we accepted the new Statutes, and that such a thought never even entered his head.

A MEMBER OF THE LAST GRAND CONCLAVE.

To the Editor of the Freemason.

Dear Sir and Brother,—

I have read Bro. Holmes's most astonishing statement in last week's Freemason, that the members of the English Langue of the Order of St. John "desire to crush the Masonic Order of Malta" and I believe it to be utterly false. The English Langue occupies itself in helping, not in crushing, other people; it does not trouble itself with the affairs of other bodies which are in connection with it or its work, but I feel sure that all its members would rejoice to see any body, Masonic or not—but more especially a powerful body such as the Masonic Order of the Temple might be, under the Prince of Wales as Grand Master—occupying itself with more work and less play. The world is big enough for all of us to do our best and still leave room for others to do theirs; but don't let the Masonic Order forget that it is the Masonic Order, and nothing else—nobody else forgets it.

I am, yours obediently,

CHAS. J. BURGESS.

COMPOUNDING FOR SUBSCRIPTIONS.

To the Editor of the Freemason.

Dear Sir and Brother,—

I see in your account of the work done at Grand Lodge, that the motion of Bro. Smith to allow members of private lodges to compound for their annual subscriptions on their removal from the neighbourhood of their lodge, was referred to the Board of General Purposes. The passing of such an alteration in the Book of Constitutions would, I feel sure, be a great boon to many country Masons; but I would venture to suggest that the composition be paid not to the funds of the private lodge, but to Grand Lodge, which shall hold the sum in trust for the private lodge, and every year pay the interest accruing to the credit of the lodge. My reason for making this suggestion is, that in many cases lodges in country towns are not well managed as to their finances, and through many causes they may cease to exist; and thus both the individual Mason and Grand Lodge would be losers. It would be a very easy thing to arrange for the payment of the Provincial Lodge dues from the funds of the private lodge.

Hoping that the Board of General Purposes may report favourably upon the matter.

I am Sir, yours fraternally,

W. LANGLEY, P.M. 50 and 1130.

P.P.S.G.W. of Leicester.

MASONIC MUSIC.

To the Editor of the Freemason.

Dear Sir and Brother,—

Having for many years taken an active part and a deep interest in the introduction of suitable music into our various ceremonies, I may, perhaps, be permitted to remark, in reply to several brethren who have communicated with you on the subject, that there can be no question with all who desire to add solemn impressiveness to our ritual—that proper music, carefully rehearsed and performed, is of considerable importance, and happily, growing daily in favour with the Craft. Doubtless some of the "old hands" who have not been accustomed to music, and may be—have but little taste for the tuneful art, object to its introduction as a suitable and necessary adjunct; yet, few indeed who have participated as I have done, in the soul-stirring ceremonies of foreign lodges—can deny that music in the German, French, Swedish and other Continental lodges occupies a large and important part in their ritual, and that it tends to sublimate the working in a manner unknown in this country.

Being then fully impressed with the advantages to be derived from the introduction of appropriate music into our own lodges, I have for some years been engaged in compiling a work which should contain compositions "for all the ceremonies of Masonic order," and I am happy to add that this book ("The Freemason's Liber Musicus") which is now in course of publication, and will have attained next week to the eighth, out of twelve parts forming the complete publication, is already much used (as the numerous letters I have received testify), and is highly appreciated by the brethren of the various lodges where it has been successfully introduced.

Some of the most useful pieces are easily arranged for voices in unison, with accompaniments, so that where there is any vocal talent, their performance can be readily accomplished; but, even without vocal aid, the work contains voluntaries—with full directions for use—suitable for every part of the different ceremonies.

Before it is completed nothing will be omitted from the book which I deem likely to be of service in the various degrees of Freemasonry.

It is not only music for the ceremonies that we require, but good, suitable compositions for our refreshment and banquet table. Something has been done in this way by many esteemed brethren, but no other musical work has yet been published in England, containing the words and music of a large number of songs, duets, glees, &c., by various good composers, applicable to all those toasts which we are in the habit of giving and honouring on festive occasions.

The highest members of our Craft have encouraged me greatly in my undertaking, and I believe the whole work will be authoritatively recommended when completed. I have only to add that it will afford me much pleasure to give any information I may possess on this or any other subject connected with the introduction of music into our lodges, if any of the brethren will write to

Yours fraternally,
W. M. SPARK, Mus. D.,
P.P.G.O., W.Y. 289.

MASONIC HALLS.

To the Editor of The Freemason.

Dear Sir and Brother,—

In answer to an "Old P.M.," I would beg to say, that I believe all lodge rooms, duly set apart for Masonic purposes, should be confined to their own great object. But our brother opens up a very difficult question in itself, and one which all who have taken part in lodge work and proceedings have often had much trouble to settle satisfactorily.

The rule in a lodge with which I was for years connected, and of which I have still the privilege to be a member, was this:—

Our beautiful lodge room was kept for Masonic purposes entirely, or for a Masonic lecture, the handsome dining room, became the ball room and the concert room for the nonce, while our large committee room was used as a supper room, the great lodge room itself being thrown open simply as a promenade. But all lodges are not so happily situated or arranged, and no doubt in many cases, there is a difficulty in enforcing a strict observance of such wise regulations.

There is no actual law on the subject, and still less any uniform usage.

My own feeling long has been, that the strict rule should ever be observed, of not allowing anything to be transacted in the lodge room excepting what is of or belonging to Freemasonry, our rites and ceremonies, or our purely Masonic lectures.

I heartily sympathise with an "Old P.M." in his meritorious anxiety, to preserve the sacredness of the lodge room, duly set apart for Masonic purposes; I fought the battle years ago, and though it is not always a popular battle to fight, yet, I feel sure, that the principle is a right one and a true one in itself, and of untold benefit if carried out systematically, to Freemasonry in every way.

I am yours fraternally,
A VERY OLD P.M.

THE BOYS' SCHOOL FESTIVAL.

To the Editor of The Freemason.

Dear Sir and Brother,—

Will you permit me to correct an inaccuracy in the list of sums collected at the past festival of the Masonic Boys' School? A sum of £42 is there put down as the contribution from the Channel Islands, it should have been put down from "Guernsey." At the festival in 1871, I represented the Channel Islands as Steward, thus including Jersey and Alderney. On the recent occasion my list was contributed from Guernsey alone.

Fraternally yours,
W. T. KINNERSLY, W.M. No. 24.

EMANUEL MOEDANBORG.

To the Editor of The Freemason.

Dear Sir and Brother,—

Can you or any of your readers say whether Emanuel Moedanborg was a Mason? I think not; but some who are enquiring, think he was.

Fraternally yours,
WILL. CARPENTER.

UNAUTHORISED OFFICES.

To the Editor of The Freemason.

Dear Sir and Brother,—

The words "in a private lodge" should have been inserted after the word "Ceremonies" in the tenth line of my letter in yours of last week. I am afraid that I omitted them, or perhaps your compositor overlooked them.

Please insert this correction, otherwise it may be thought that I was not aware of the difference between the laws of Grand and private lodges, as laid down in the Book of Constitutions.

Yours fraternally
B. E. T. A.

BENEVOLENT FUND FESTIVAL.

To the Editor of The Freemason.

Dear Sir and Brother,—

As an Englishman and a lover of fair play, I ask permission to add one letter more to those referring to my conduct at the last festival of the Royal Masonic Benevolent Institution; and without making any reference to any one in particular, to state, first, that I never interfered, from first to last, with the arrangements of the seats on the dais. Secondly, I neither courteously, or rudely, removed, or caused to be removed, any brother from a seat on the dais, or spoke to any one to induce him to think I had any such intention.

I entered the dining room as an attendant on the Chairman (the Prince of Wales), went direct to the seat allotted to me, and did not remove from it until I attended the Prince to the Concert hall after dinner. For corroboration of this statement I appeal to the Chairman of the Board of Stewards, and to the Secretary as to the arrangements of seats. I may further add I did not in any manner interfere with the arrangements of the meeting beyond attention to the duties allotted to me as Treasurer of the Board of Stewards.

I am Sir, very respectfully yours,

Obituary.

BRO. RICHARD DOWSE.

It is with deep regret that we have to announce the death of Bro. Richard Dowse, M.D., Inspector-General of the Army Medical Department, who died at his residence at Plymouth, on the 21st inst., aged 79. Dr. Dowse entered the Army in 1814 as Assistant Surgeon, and served at the surrender of Martinique and Guadaloupe in 1815; also in the Ionian Islands during an epidemic of plague in 1826. He also served with his regiments, the 14th and 88th, three times in the West Indies, and was on the staff as Principal Medical Officer in Canada. In 1871, he was granted by Her Majesty, on the recommendation of H.R.H. Duke of Cambridge, the reward for distinguished services. He was a most devoted Mason, and during his service as Staff Surgeon to the Depot Battalion in the Isle of Wight in 1842-48, was W.M. of the Albany Lodge, and founded the Masonic Hall, in which his portrait, presented by the brothers, still hangs. During his residence in Canada he represented the Canadian Lodges in the United States, and on his return to England, in 1855, while stationed at Plymouth as Head of the Army Medical Department in the Western District, he connected himself with the Lodge of Sincerity 189, of which he was P.M., and held high positions in the Provincial Grand Lodge of Devon; of late years he was Treasurer of his lodge and the Almoner of the lodges in the district of South Devon. His manners were courteous and urbane, and of that gentlemanly type that carried with them the love and affection of all who knew him. It may be truly said of him that the principles of Masonry guided all his actions through life. He married in 1839 a sister of Bro. James Lewis Thorny, P.M., of St. Thomas's Lodge 142, whom he initiated into Masonry, and one of his daughters is the popular actress, Mrs. Rousby.

BRO. HOLMES'S ADDITIONAL NOTES OF THE 15th OF MARCH.

BRIEF REPLIES BY LUPUS.

"O that mine enemy would write a book." This was an uncharitable desire, for is it not full of fervent hope, nay certainty, that in trusting himself to literary efforts the enemy must assuredly step into a pit-fall, and thus become the prey of his adversary?

If I could dispose myself to unseemly rejoicing over the self-inflicted immolation of Bro. Holmes and to exultation at his still dealing out these marvels, I should perhaps be tempted to exclaim "O that Bro. Holmes, may continue to publish additional notes in The Freemason."

Your readers would, however, view this as a piece of unmitigated vindictiveness, and I admit at once that it would betray a gross absence of that charity which specially should mark the members of our ancient Craft; but I would say, in all brotherly regard, that if Bro. Holmes will persist in the course he has commenced, he should be more sure of his facts, and less reckless in his statements. Bro. Holmes has placed his foot upon ground which he need not have approached, and as some "rush in where angels fear to tread," so has our brother ventured upon treacherous places and they have let him in. I will spare your readers to my utmost power, and be as brief as possible in my replies.

1. I repeat that in 1853 "Grand Conclave having no faith in its claims abandoned the Masonic Order of Malta, but in 1852 set up a new Masonic Order" of the same name; I say emphatically an entirely new Order. This is a mere fact, and beyond the necessity for controversy.

Perhaps in inadvertently conveying the impression that the Grand Conclave enjoyed the exclusive merit of inventing the ritual for the new Masonic degree at the same time, I was not literally correct; I should perhaps have distinctly placed on record the sources whence that farrago of absurdity, which Bro. Holmes, with all his Masonic acumen, must well know is a ridiculous concoction, was derived; but I will now, since he will have the whole truth, put myself in a position of more perfect accuracy. The ritual of the Masonic Order of Malta which was severed from the Temple and abandoned in 1853, is very simple, consequently not wanting in some dignity, and is in strong contrast with the ridiculous concoction which was not brought from Malta, but was, in fact, the selected ritual of two curious specimens from the respective manufactories of Bros. Emly, and Shuttleworth and I am bound to say that it bears complete impress of its brilliant origin. There were no Masonic Templars at Malta until the, not very archaic year 1850.

2. It is a simple fact that the Masonic Templars in England did "appropriate," and usurp, the jewel of the "Ordre du Temple." I am unable to say how they attempted, if at all, to justify the act, but I may confess to some surprise that Bro. Holmes should think such a proceeding creditable: Would Bro. Holmes think the "Good Templars" justified in adopting the regalia of Grand Conclave? I am in a position to give considerable information relative to the "Ordre du Temple" and its insignia; but cuilibet? It is utterly beside the present question; it was not a Masonic body; the Masonic Templars in England have no connection with it, and the usurpation of the jewel by the English Masons could in no greater degree give them additional claims, than would the purchase of the insignia of the Garter entitle Bro. Holmes to a stall in the Chapel Royal at Windsor.

3. I called attention to the Baldwin document some weeks since, so it is no novelty to your readers. The private jewel of that Encampment has no resemblance to the cross of the French, or any other Knights of the genuine Order of St. John. It is an interesting jewel to the Masonic Templars, as it bears, in its engraving, a combination of the emblems of the High Grades, and is no doubt a relic of the period when these Masonic degrees could only be obtained in an Encampment. The kindly observations of the Baldwin brother do him much credit; he will now have seen that the sections of the genuine Order of St. John are, and have been since the fall of Malta, independent institutions; that the Order was lawfully revived in England by an overwhelming majority of its remaining divisions; that its validity has never been impeached, and that it stands in the same position as the Priorities of Russia, Austria or Poland. As the language of the Baldwin document has been quoted, I may here express my belief that the introduction of a Maltese degree into the Masonic Templar Order had its origin in the absurd confusion of names at a period before any popular historic knowledge of the original Order had been disseminated. In old Masonic books and magazines they were styled "Knights Templar of St. John of Jerusalem;" the titles were used synonymously and the old lectures exchange them with charming confusion. This absurd admixture no doubt became apparent with the dawn of more extended information, and I conclude, and believe, that in seeking the explanation of such a jumble it was assumed that, in the confusion of the one name, two Masonic degrees must necessarily exist.

4. Bro. Holmes has the hardihood to affirm that the members of the English Langue of the Order of St. John "seek to crush the Masonic Order of Malta;" But Bro. Holmes knows full well that they have never interfered with Masonic, or any other Order; that they do not now object to its only proper title, the "Masonic Order of Malta;" that they made no sign whatever, even respecting recent occurrences, and he as well knows that he himself made a public, voluntary, and entirely unprovoked attack for which his utmost ingenuity can find no palliation, but for which his sense of justice should induce him to apologise in the same public manner.

5. Bro. Holmes says he has "yet to learn that in the Masonic Order we have an equal number of men of rank and family with those gentlemen who have joined the Manchester branch." I assume he means he still has to learn that we have not an equal number; but I have never cast any reflection upon the social status of the Masonic Templars, nor do I treat their Masonic title with the terms of discourtesy and disrespect in which I regret that Bro. Holmes should permit himself to indulge. The exclusiveness which our brother seems so much to desiderate appears hardly consistent with the principles of the ancient Craft. I have been under a considerable delusion if Freemasonry does not aim at an universal brotherhood of all classes. The "men of rank and family," suggested by Bro. Holmes, in entering the Masonic Fraternity, show that they do not consider themselves out of the pale of common humanity, and that they know they form part of the universal brotherhood of man; each one thus declares with Terence; Homō sum humani nihil a me alienum puto. Would our brother exclude from the association of these men, their fellows who are less fortunately placed in life? Would he preach a new doctrine of Masonry, and remove those ancient landmarks which throughout so long a period have bound together, by common ties, a great and grand brotherhood extending from the rulers of Empires down to the humble trader?

6. I have never said that the Stuarts had no connection with high-grade Masonry. I said "it is not well known that the dethroned Stuarts revived the Templar Order," and I gave historic evidence (on the 15th of February) for my scepticism. Bro. Holmes is very ingenious, no doubt, in referring to imaginary statements, but let me adjure him, in the words of the old play, "of your courtesy I pray you read the preface."

7. I cannot conceive what benefit can possibly result from Bro. Holmes, perpetually hammering at the election of the Emperor Paul, which has been in no way at issue. Col. Porter, has no doubt said that the "great body" of the Knights went to Russia; he has also said that a "large number" went there; but he said also that the election was notoriously illegal; Bro. Woof, in his little book on the Masonic and other Orders, called them a "considerable number"; but he said that the election was utterly informal: Sutherland, a great authority, described them as "a few refugee Knights," and characterises their proceeding as shattering the very basis of the Order. Surely then, I, your humble contributor may be permitted, with all diffidence, to adopt the expressions of so great an authority as the last named; but, be this as it may, the Knights unfortunately were refugees, and whether their number was great, large, considerable, or few (and Bro. Holmes shall take his choice) the fact remains the same, it was an illegal act. The Roman Council derives its only title through this source, and is compelled to accept the act of a miscellaneous assemblage of Knights, not representing any one division of the Order, as a body, who assumed the very grave power of placing "a heretic" at the head of the institution when its lawful Grand Master was yet living. All the historians of eminence agree that the act was illegal, and Bro. Holmes himself has advanced the same opinion on the part of Sir Geo. Bowyer. What, then, can be the use of forcing the question in a manner so very unnecessary and uninteresting to your readers, threatening them, moreover, with almost a reprint of Colonel Porter's book, when a few lines, which I will reprint for Bro. Holmes's especial benefit, would explain that accomplished author's view. He tells how the Knights on proceeding to Russia "were received in the most gracious manner by the wily monarch, whose ambition prompted him to desire the post of Grand Master, in order that he might upon that title found a claim to the island of Malta, should it be wrested from the grasp of the French republic. This desire on his part speedily became known to the Knights, and on the 27th of October the farce was enacted of nominating the Emperor Grand Master of the Order, notwithstanding the fact that Hompesch who was still at Trieste, had not as yet resigned his office. Paul, however, did not consider his appointment free from cavil so long as the election of Hompesch remained unannulled. He therefore, caused such a pressure to be brought to bear upon that unfortunate knight that on the 6th of July, 1799, a formal act of abdication was forwarded to St. Petersburg, and from that date Paul was left in undisturbed possession of his new dignity."

I think after this, your readers will require no more reprints of Colonel Porter. I have already said that there were circumstances which excused the action taken by these knights, who, themselves proclaimed as their reason that any lawful action was then impossible; and I have fully assented to Sir George Bowyer's statement that it is "recognised though irregular."

I have not wished to raise these questions; I think it a great misfortune that they should be rashly forced upon me, and I refer to the subject with reluctance and regret.

8. Bro. Holmes tells us that Masonic Knights of Malta existed in 1780, which, in itself is distinct proof that they had no relation to the genuine Order which did not leave Malta until eight years after that date. I have examined minutes of Masonic bodies as early as the time of Malta's fall, but I find no traces which will in any way help Bro. Holmes; no copies of correspondence with the Grand Master Hompesch; no allusions to observance of Statutes or qualifications of entrants; indeed the Masonic Knights of that period appear to have been received in very free-and-easy manner, and to have attained their honours for the very modest foundation of seven-shillings and sixpence.

9. I have already explained, I trust to Bro. Holmes's satisfaction, how it came about that Prince Albert received the decoration of the Order from the Roman Council. He seems to have been anxious on this point, and to have hoped his unscrupulous assertion would touch a weak place; but now he knows the truth I think he would do himself no discredit in the estimation of your readers if he expressed his regret that he had been tempted to make an experimental assertion for which he can offer no justification.

Masonic Notes and Queries.

A POINT OF MASONIC HISTORY.

We have a great many discussions, now-a-days, in The Freemason, about questions of Masonic archaeological interest, ranging back sometimes through several centuries; but I propose to call attention to-day to a much later date, and to a fact in our annals, about which à priori, we might have thought there could not be much great difficulty, and certainly not any discrepancy among our Masonic Historians.

The date 1715, is familiar to us all, as the era of what is often and commonly called the "Masonic Revival," and to which some Brethren would also apparently limit the real antiquity of our Order, though most unwisely in my opinion.

Well, even about this memorable date, several discrepancies exist in our Masonic historians, and practically the proper date in all probability should be 1716, or 1717.

Smith in his Freemasons' Pocket Companion, 1736, gives us no account whatever of the Revival, though he adopts Anderson's history of the Order, in the Constitutions of 1723; and says, that at the date of his publication, 1736, "the number of Lodges" had "prodigiously increased within these few years in Great Britain and Ireland."

Anderson in his 1723 edition, says nothing of the Revival, but in his edition of 1738, gives us for the first time a history of that transaction. According to him in 1716, four lodges met at the Apple Tree, "constituted themselves a Grand Lodge," "revived the Quarterly Communication of the Officers of Lodges called the Grand Lodge," and "resolved to hold the Annual Assembly and Feast, and then to choose a Grand Master from among themselves."

And we are told, that, "accordingly on St. John the Baptist's day, in the third year of King George, A.D. 1717, the Assembly and Feast of the Free and Accepted Masons were held at the Goose and Gridiron" and Mr. Anthony Sayer was elected by a majority of hands, Grand Master of Masons.

Such was in 1738 Anderson's history of the Revival which is repeated in Entick's Edition of the Constitutions 1767, and in Noorthouck's Edition of the Constitutions of 1784.

Preston's first edition of the "Illustrations of Masonry," appeared in 1772, in which however he does not give us any historical detail whatever of the Revival. His second edition appeared in 1775, and in that edition, he thus records the Revival. I give his words in extenso partly on account of their somewhat peculiar vagueness, and partly for the purpose of comparison with Anderson's statement on which they are evidently based as he admits himself, in the ninth edition 1796, page 239.

"On the accession of George the First, (that was as we know in 1714, as he entered London September 20th 1714.)" the lodges resolved to cement under a new Grand Master, to be annually elected as in former times, to revive the communications and festival of the Society, to regulate the ancient usages and customs of the Fraternity, and to establish such modes only as might correspond with the practice of the Members of which the lodges were now principally composed." This statement of Preston is in itself somewhat vague, and might be primâ facie understood to refer to a meeting of the Order in 1714, or 1715, for anything which appears to the contrary. Indeed the opening clause of the sentence seems to allude to the contemporary date of 1714. But then Preston goes on to say "Accordingly on the festival of St. John the Baptist, in 1717, a General Assembly of the Fraternity was convened. Four lodges attended in form and a Grand Lodge was constituted, the oldest Mason present being in the chair, the brethren proceeded to elect a Grand Master for the ensuing year, when the choice fell upon Anthony Sayer, Gent., who was declared duly elected."

So far the accounts of Anderson and Preston seem mainly to agree, but in his ninth edition which is the next I have, though probably also in one or more of the intermediate editions, Preston varies considerably his original account, and gives us that fuller record which is to be found in all the subsequent editions of his valuable work.

For he there talks of a preliminary meeting at the Apple Tree, in February 1717, as precedent in the same year, to the election of Anthony Sayer as G.M., St. John's Day, 1717. Thus he apparently gives up Anderson's statement of the meeting in 1716, and limits the Revival to 1717. The author of "Multa Paucis," whose work alike anonymous and undated, from internal evidence, was published not later than 1764, tells us a completely different story. Let us hear his words:

"The Masters and Wardens of six lodges assembled at the Apple Tree on St. John's Day, 1716 (and after the oldest Master Mason, who was also the Master of a Lodge, had taken the chair), they constituted themselves a Grand Lodge "pro tempore" and revived their Quarterly Communication, and their Annual Feast."

The author of "Multa Paucis" then goes on to record in almost "ipsisimis verbis" with Anderson and Preston, the meeting in 1717 at the Goose and Gridiron, and the election of Anthony Sayer as Grand Master. Thus we see, that while he agrees with Anderson as to 1716, being the date of the preliminary meeting, and concurs with both Anderson and Preston as to the election of Anthony Sayer in 1717, he entirely disagrees with them both as to the number of lodges represented, which he asserts to be six instead of four. Now the question is, which of these accounts is the correct one?

In what year did the Freemasons first assemble, was it 1715, or 1716, or 1717? And how many lodges were represented or congregated?

And when we remember that we are now dealing with the principal date of our speculative organization, it only serves to show how important is accuracy in small details as in larger matters, and how careful we should always be to give ourselves, or hand on to others, a perfectly correct and reliable account of transactions in which we take a part, or of matters in which we feel a personal interest. And this little difficulty at so late a period, as regards a point of Masonic History serves also to convince us how many are the difficulties attendant on the annals and chronology of earlier periods, and how much allowance we should always make for unavoidable errata and inevitable discrepancies.

THE ST. CLAIR CHARTERS.

The Freemason of June 8, 1872, contains a communication by Bro. Chalmers I. Paton, in which he professes to give copies of the St. Clair Charters "from Hay's MSS. in the Advocates' Library." These copies, minus the copyist's or printer's errors which they contain, appeared to me at the time to be a literal transcript of the copies from the originals made by myself for the "History of the Lodge of Edinburgh (Mary's Chapel)" and published in The Freemason of August 27, 1870. I have since examined the Hay MSS., and am confirmed in that opinion. The document given by Bro. Paton is not a copy made from the Hay MSS. It differs considerably from it in orthography, in abbreviations, and in the arrangement and rendering of some of the signatures—and is simply a copy of my transcript of the originals published two years ago. I had previously, through The Freemason, informed Bro. Paton of the existence of the original Charters—a fact of which he was ignorant. If Bro. Paton was unable to decipher the original Hay MSS., he should not have palmed off my transcription of the original charters as copies of them, nor should he have appropriated my work in any case without the courtesy of acknowledgment.—D. MURRAY LYON.

JACOB NORTON.

The Trowel, Springfield, Illionis, which (as well as some other journals) has spoken severely of Jacob Norton, publishes a letter from a friend of his, objecting to the criticisms. We will add our testimony to that of the letter writer. While we think Bro. Norton frequently speaks too harshly, and imputes wrong motives to his brethren, whom he detects or thinks he detects in error, we have the highest respect for his motives and the highest appreciation of his Masonic labours, and when he occasionally drops in upon us we enjoy his visit, and can assure Bro. Reynolds that he will find him a genial and pleasant acquaintance, if he ever meets him. We think it safe to lay down as a general rule that when a Mason is sufficiently interested in Masonry to discuss it, he does so because he loves the Craft, and any man who loves the Craft should be criticised with loving kindness.—Masonic Token, U.S.A.

OLD MASONIC BOOKS.

Whatever may be the actual value of the pamphlet Bro. Jacob Norton, dilates upon in The Freemason of the 15th, we must all feel obliged to him for his interesting communication. Bro. W. J. Hughan, is quite right in saying, that Bro. Dr. Oliver, alludes to "the Grand Mystery," published in 1724, folio, of which I have a copy, and not to Briscoe's publication.

But Bro. Hughan, seems to overlook the fact that Bro. Dr. Oliver, does mention Briscoe's pamphlet at page 31, in the edition of the "Revelation of a Square" in 1855, where he gives the date at 1725.

It is quite clear, however, that Bro. Jacob Norton is in error, when he states that he has discovered "that our Bro. Dr. Oliver, describes Briscoe's pamphlet" in the beginning of the fourth chapter of the "Revelation of a Square;" all he says, is that the pamphlet itself was published in that year? Dr. Oliver alludes to Briscoe's pamphlet, undoubtedly, but his observations mainly refer to "The Grand Mystery"—published in 1724.

Neither does Dr. Oliver mention the 2nd edition of Briscoe's pamphlet in 1725; all he says is, that the pamphlet itself, or the work itself, was published in 1725. That a 2nd edition of Briscoe's pamphlet was published in 1725 is true, as there are two copies of the 2nd edition in the British Museum, and one of the first edition undated, or with the date cut off by the binder. In all probability Briscoe's pamphlet was issued after "The Grand Mystery," in 1724, and very little anterior to the 2nd edition in 1725.

I confess, that, my studies have not led me to attach much value to such works as Briscoe's pamphlet, which, sensational in themselves, are utterly unreliable as to data.

Many of the explanations they give are absurd in themselves, and many of the observances purely imaginary, meant, in fact, as a "skit" upon the order—resembling Dean Swift's more humorous but equally idle attack on Freemasonry. This is especially the case as regards a portion of Briscoe's pamphlet.

One cannot accept such works as authority on any moot questions which rest almost entirely on the "mala fides" of the publisher.

The writer of Briscoe's pamphlet may have seen the Harleian 2054 as Bro. Hughan thinks, but with all deference to him I should be inclined to think that he is more likely to have seen Roberts', reprint of 1722, or the original of the one printed for Mrs. Dodd, 1739. It is quite clear that if the writer of Briscoe's pamphlet saw 2054 he has completely altered its verbiage, modernised its archaisms, and departed from it in numberless instances, in some points very remarkably so.

The conclusion no way resembles the Harleian 2054, and we may have in Briscoe's pamphlet the transcript of another Constitution, varying from all the others in several interesting particulars. I confess I cannot believe that Briscoe copied Harleian 2054, though the M.S. he saw had much in common with Harleian 2054.

Interesting as Briscoe's pamphlet is in one respect, I attach little value to its contents for any purposes of Masonic History or Archæology.

FUNERAL OF A ROYAL BROTHER.

The Honolulu Commercial Advertiser gives the following account of the funeral of his late Majesty Kamehameha V., on the 11th of January:—"A little before noon the order was given to start. The cavalry under the command of Captain Judd, led off, numbering some 40 rank and file. Following them was the fire department, headed by Acting Chief Engineer Waller, numbering about 75 strong. The Mechanics' Benefit Union came next, then the Good Templars, numbering 30; Knights of Pythias, 16; Oddfellows, 7; Masons, 24; Royal Arch, 17. A long line of natives in black, the Konohikis of the Crown lands and King's private lands followed, and then came the Governor of Oahu and his staff. The Hawaiian military band followed, playing a splendid funeral march, after which came the military—viz., the Artillery, Captain Brown commanding, numbering 46 all told; Honolulu Rifles, Captain Gulick commanding, 35; Marine Corps of the United States ship Benicia, Lieutenant Ellsworth commanding, 20; and the household troops, Major Moehonue commanding, 40. Then followed the late king's purveyor and servants, and then the clergy. The various insignia of rank belonging to the late king were borne immediately in front of the hearse. This was composed of a substantial platform on wheels, drawn by four fine horses, with heavy black housings and with running footmen at their bridles; at each corner of the platform was a pillar upholding a canopy surmounted by the crown. The large and heavy case containing the remains of the late king was firmly secured beyond the possibility of displacement while on the way to the mausoleum, extraordinary pains having been taken with every detail on account of the great weight—something over a ton—of the coffin. Around the hearse were borne the large and small Kahilis, the many coloured feathers of which they are composed, together with their size and beauty, attracting much attention. Immediately following the hearse came the carriage, drawn by four horses, containing his Majesty and her Excellency Ruth Keelikolani, and the Hon. Mrs. Bishop. In the second carriage were Queen Emma and the Hon. Mrs. Naca. Next came mourning carriages containing the Chancellor, members of the Cabinet of the late King, foreign representatives, the captain and officers of the Benicia, Judges, Privy Council, Legislative Assembly, Governors of the Islands, Consular Body, clerks, Postmaster and Collector General, Marshal and Sheriff, members of the bar, &c. Upon the arrival of the head of the long line at the mausoleum grounds, the hearse was backed up to the platform built out over the steps, and the coffin, covered with a black velvet pall and the Royal feather cloak, was moved out on rollers. The chief mourners, together with the officiating clergy, Bishop Willis and his attendants, entered the mausoleum, and the coffin being moved into its place, the burial service was read, after which the Masonic ritual was performed. Upon the conclusion of these ceremonies a Royal salute was fired by the troops, and a requiem march played by the band. While the services were being gone through at the tomb a drizzling mist and rain made it uncomfortable for those who were without umbrellas. Upon the conclusion of the ceremonies, the procession escorted the King back to the palace, amid loud cheers for Lunalilo the King."

CONSECRATION OF THE CAMPBELL LODGE, No. 1415.

The fifteenth lodge in the Province of Middlesex was consecrated at the Greyhound Hotel, Hampton Court, on Saturday the 8th inst., under very favourable auspices. The name of the lodge is derived from its worthy first Master, Sir Gilbert Edward Campbell, Bart., and its inauguration was attended by a goodly number of brethren, many of whom are distinguished members of the Craft. Colonel Burdett, the ever genial and popular Provincial Grand Master was unfortunately unable to be present, but he was represented as Consecrating Master by Brother Robt. Wentworth Little, Provincial Grand Secretary, whose impressive working elicited the warmest encomiums from the brethren.

At four p.m. the procession entered the lodge, when the chair was taken by Bro. Little, who appointed the following officers, pro. tem.:—Bros. John Hervey, Grand Secretary of England, S.W.; Sigismund Rosenthal, Prov. S.G.W., J.W.; T. W. White, W.M. 21, D.C.; J. Lewis Thomas, P.M. 142, I.P.M.; W. Mann, P.M. 144, 186, &c., I.G. The ceremony of consecration was then performed with the accustomed chants and anthems which were admirably rendered by the musical brethren.

At the conclusion of this ceremony, Bro. Little proceeded with the installation of the W.M. Designate, who was placed in the chair of K.S. in the presence of some twenty installed masters.

The officers appointed or elected were—Bros.

Edward Kimber, M.A., Ph. D., S.W.; Henry Carter, J.W.; Thomas Cubitt, Treasurer; Donald M. Dewar, S.D.; Thomas Keene, J.D.; Antonio J. Codner, I.G.; Wm. R. Woodman, M.D., D.C. The addresses were severally delivered by Bros. Little, J. C. Parkinson, and H. Muggeridge, and were each received with marked Masonic applause.

Sir Gilbert Campbell then said that he had a most pleasureable task to perform, namely to propose as honorary members of the lodge several brethren to whom they were all much indebted for their successful inauguration. Upon the W.M.'s proposition the following brethren were unanimously elected honorary members:—Col. Fras. Burdett, P.G.M.; John Hervey, G. Sec.; R. Wentworth Little, P.G.Sec.; Thomas W. White, W.M., 21, the D.C. Bro. Little having returned thanks for all, several propositions for initiates and joining members were made, and the lodge was closed.

At the banquet which succeeded, great satisfaction was manifested at the catering of "mine host" of the "Greyhound," which was of a very superior character. When the cloth was cleared the W.M. proposed the usual toasts which were duly honoured.

The names of Bros. J. Hervey, G. Sec., and J. Coutts, P.G. Purst., were coupled with the "Grand Officers," and evoked a kindly and cordial response from the first-named excellent representative of that body.

Colonel Burdett's health was drunk amidst general expressions of regret at his absence, and the health of the W.M., proposed by Bro. Thomas, was also enthusiastically received. "The Visitors" had a capital spokesman in Bro. J. C. Parkinson, W.M., "Bard of Avon," 778, P.M. 181, P.G.S., who eloquently expressed their feelings of gratification at the entire proceedings of the day; while the "Consecrating Master," a toast most felicitously proposed by the W.M., was appositely responded to by Bro. Little, who had officiated in that capacity. The S.W., Bro. Kimber, replied for the "Officers," and the proceedings of a very charming Masonic festival was brought to a close, in the usual manner, by the Tyler's toast.

Besides the brethren already mentioned, there were present Bros. F. Binckes, P.G.S., Colonel J. Peters, J. G. Marsh, A. A. Pendlebury, F. W. H. Ramsay, M.D.; H. C. Levander, S. C. Davison, C. B. Payne, W. Bristow, &c.

KNIGHTS TEMPLAR.

THE ANNUAL MEETING OF THE CHAPTER GENERAL OF SCOTLAND was held in Freemasons' Hall, Edinburgh, on Tuesday, March 11, 1873, Sir Knight J. Whyte Melville, Esq., of Bennoch, presiding. Amongst those present were the G. Chancellor Dr. Somerville, Bro. H. Ramsay, G.T. and G. Registrar, Prior of the Lothians; G. H. Harriett, G.P., J. Laurie; G. Chamberlain; R. Bell, M.N.C. St. Mungo; John Tweed, D. Commander; G. W. Wheeler, Secretary St. Mungo; and J. Bryce, G.S. Captain Shanks, P.E.C. of the Royal Veteran (E.C.) and P.G.S.B. was also present. The Chapter General having been duly opened the G.R. read the minutes of the last meeting, and also extracts from the correspondence received from the Priors of Sydney, Otago, St. John's and St. Mungo's. He then read the minutes relative to the admission of the Girvan Encampment to the Order, and the report of his visit to Glasgow, to confirm the Charter and instal the officers; speaking highly of the way in which the deputation had been received.

The report of the Council relative to the treaty with England and Ireland was then read, which stated that the Council were unanimously of opinion that they should decline to sign the treaty, as it contained provisions quite opposed to those which were originally suggested as the basis of the treaty. He also stated that he had received a letter from Aberdeen from the unrecognised body there, asking on what terms they could be received into communication with the Chapter General; he had replied that they could be received on the same terms as the Girvan Encampment, but had got no direct reply, though one of their own old body had informed him that they were about to make an application to be received under the English Constitution.

Captain Shanks, as a member of the E.C., begged that they would not think of that for one moment, as he knew Sir P. Colquhoun and the other officers would not think of invading another territory, on the contrary he knew they were desirous of doing all in their power to conciliate their friends on this side of the border.

On the question of the confirmation of the Council's report, the most Eminent Grand Master asked if the Commander of St. Mungo's had anything to add to his letter in favour of the treaty.

Sir Knight Bell said: I approve entirely of the union, 1st. because I find each jurisdiction is to have the management of its own internal affairs; 2nd. I perfectly agree with the mode of electing the Grand Master, in fact it gives Scotland the greatest favour, making her equal to the other nationalities, while her population is less; 3rd. because I believe that Templarism would flourish better under one head than under three, and instead of remaining stationary, or nearly so, we might then expect to increase; 4th. unity would create uniformity of law and ritual, and greatly promote the peace and harmony of the Order, and give us a dignity and standing in the world equal, if not superior, to any other degree of Masonry; 5th. seeing that Knight Templarism is a Christian Order, I consider it the duty of every member to foster union. As we have but "one head, one faith, one baptism," so should we be but one body under Christ our head; and nothing would give me greater pleasure than to see every nation appointing delegates to a confederation for the purpose of assimilating Freemasonry in all its branches. Such a union would form a grand foundation on which to continue the erection of our moral temple; then we might construct some world-wide scheme of benevolence and make ourselves more and more like our Head, who was never weary of doing good but sacrificed Himself for the good of the poor. This would truly open up the way for evangelising the heathen, and promote that virtue which is yet to raise us above the ranks of seraphs, even to a union with the Godhead itself. Having devoted ourselves to the service of the Temple let us keep this glorious union in view, for I believe it to be the chief end of Masons. No other organisation is so well adapted for labours of love, hence the necessity of our remaining united. I trust, therefore, Most Excellent Grand Master that you and Chapter General will put forth every effort in your power to hasten a treaty with England and Ireland.

The Grand Registrar said that union was all very well, but if they read the terms of the treaty they would see that England would entirely swallow up Scotland. The whole power would be vested in the Grand Council sitting in London—there, too, would be situated the fountain of all the honours of the Order, and to London they must go if they had any appeal to make against the decision of any Preceptory. He was afraid that their friends of St. Mungo's had not well considered the terms of the treaty, or they would not consent to become a mere Province instead of the head of the Order.

Dr. Somerville, G.C., though one of the committee for drawing up the treaty, must confess that he was not well acquainted with some of its provisions, but he decidedly objected to Scotland being made a province of England, or subservient to it.

The Most Excellent Master said that along with the Grand Registrar he had no objection to a treaty to be formed between two equal powers for mutual aid and assistance, but he had a repugnance to being absorbed by any other body under the name of union.

Sir Knight Wheeler begged to assure the Chapter General that along with Sir Knight Bell he had given the terms of the treaty a most careful consideration, and yet he had come to quite a different conclusion to their Most Excellent Master and the Grand Registrar, for by the terms of that treaty Scotland, so far from having any right to complain of being swallowed up, or being treated as a mere Province, has had full justice meeted out to her. Their G.M., like the G.M. of Ireland, might have had his rights fully protected, and had he, like the Duke of Leinster, resigned in favour of the Prince of Wales, no doubt he would have been appointed Grand Prior. Then, in future elections, Scotland was to have quite as much power as either Ireland or England—surely that was not treating her as a Province. True that the Prince of Wales would be the fountain of honour, but that was the right that must vest in whoever was the Grand Master, and the statutes provided how these honours were to be decreed. Where was the injustice to Scotland? She was to have as many of her sons entitled to honours as Ireland, though only half as many as England, and this though Ireland had nine Encampments, England twenty-nine, and Scotland one! Did this, he asked, look like being swallowed up and treated like a Province? Again, the meetings of the Convent General are to be held alternately in the three nations, so that if they might have to go to London to present an appeal, the Londoners might have to come to Edinburgh, or go to Dublin, to do the same. The M.N.C. of St. Mungo had dwelt so much on the advantage of union that he would not travel over that ground, but on the lower one of expediency he would ask them to consider it. He would not ask them to sacrifice any principle for expediency, but he would ask them to sacrifice some of their privileges for the sake of the good that undoubtedly would accrue to the order at large by their acceding to this treaty and forming a truly fraternal union.

The Grand Registrar remarked that small bodies had always suffered from union with large ones, and though the present rules might seem pretty equitable, they must remember that the English knights being much the largest body could outvote both the Irish and the Scotch, and so pass any fresh laws that they pleased at a future time.

The report of the Council was then passed.

The Grand Master then proceeded to nominate the Grand Officers for the ensuing year. He had first to announce with regret the death of two of those officers, T. C. Macritchie and A. J. Stewart, who had only died that week. Their loss would be severely felt, not only in that Order, but in the other degrees of Masonry. He would now appoint the following as the Grand Officers:—Seneschal, Viscount Strathallen; Preceptor, Earl of Roslyn; Constable, Colonel Kinloch; Admiral, Lord James C. P. Murray; Hospitaller and Almoner, Dr. Somerville; Chancellor, G. R. Harrall; Treasurer and Registrar, Major W. H. Ramsay; Primate, Rev. V. G. Faithfull, M.A.; Provost, G. W. Harrall; Beaucennifer, G. F. Colt; Bearer of the Vexillum Belli, H. Inglis Tarrance; Chamberlain, J. Lowrie; Steward, Vacant; Aide-de-Camp, Vacant; Jeweller to the Order, Francis L. Law.

This terminated the business of the Chapter General. There was no banquet, but the Sir Knights of St. Mungo and Capt. Shanks were entertained by the Prior of the Lothians previous to their return home.

NEW MUSIC.

L'Assemblée des Fées and The Fairy Harp, by HENRY PARKER. Sheard: 192, High Holborn.

WE have received a copy of "L'Assemblée des Fées," and have great pleasure in adding another to the numerous favourable critiques that have already been awarded to it. There is a marked and charming melody running through this piece—a fact that is in itself no small recommendation to those who hear much of the modern style of pianoforte music. The piece commences with a strikingly original subject in the martial style, followed by arpeggios of a singularly graceful character in the right hand, and concludes with a return to the first subject.

To the "Fairy Harp," we can also give much the same praise, and can cordially advise our musical readers to become personally and practically acquainted with both pieces. They will, we are sure, do much to increase the reputation of their composers.

HELP FOR A MASON'S FAMILY.

On the 8th October last, the steamer Scandaria, commanded by Bro. Capt. Upton, sailed from New York for a port in Wales, but, like many other noble ships, she has never since been heard of. The story is a sad one, and appeals directly to the hearts of every right-minded man. Bro. Upton has left a young widow and two fatherless children, to whom the loss of the bread-winner has proved a loss indeed. With the view of raising money to help our deceased brother's widow and family, a Concert of miscellaneous music was given at Bro. Molyneux's Assembly Rooms, Bootle, near Liverpool, on the evening of the 18th inst. While the general public took a warm interest in the scheme, several brethren of the Prince of Wales Lodge, No. 1035, of which Bro. Upton was a member, took an active part in organising and carrying it out. Bro. Turley, P.M. 1035, especially deserves credit for the zeal he displayed, and he was admirably assisted by Bros. Capt. Tobias, G. Morgan, P.M., T. Fozzard, P.M., S. Ibbes, P.P.G.S.B., and Bro. Capt. Mott, P.G.S.W., Cumberland and Westmorland. As the spacious and elegantly appointed hall was crowded to its utmost capacity, there is good reason to expect that about £60 will be realised from the concert, and this sum, along with £10 voted by the members of 1035, will probably be ultimately increased to £100 from other sources. An excellent programme was furnished for the occasion, and it is due to the artistes engaged to state that all who appeared during the evening gave their services gratuitously. The singers were Miss T. Clensy, Miss Brown, Miss Newall, Miss Webster, Miss H. Webster, Miss H. Lowthian, Mr. Francis, Mr. Hobart, Mr. J. G. Clensy, and Mr. R. Peake. The efforts of the soloists were greatly appreciated, and more than one encore was given. Dr. Churchill also gave a reading between the parts, and the Highfield Musical Society, under the conductorate of Mr. Carmichael (which has only been in existence six weeks), sang several pieces in a highly creditable and intelligent manner. Bro. J. L. Parry fulfilled the duties of accompanist and director in a highly satisfactory style.

ELIXIR.

DISEASES OF THE

CROSBY'S
BALSAMIC COUGH ELIXIR.
Opium, Narcotics, and Squills are too often invoked to give relief in Coughs, Colds, and all Pulmonary diseases. Instead of such fallacious remedies, which yield momentary relief at the expense of enfeebling the digestive organs, and thus increasing that debility which lies at the root of the malady, modern science points to CROSBY'S
BALSAMIC COUGH ELIXIR as the true remedy.

SELECT TESTIMONIAL.
Dr. Rooke, Scarborough, author of the "Anti-Lancet," says: "I have repeatedly observed how very rapidly and invariably it subdued cough, pain, and irritation of the chest in cases of Pulmonary Consumption, and I can, with the greatest confidence, recommend it as a most valuable adjunct to an otherwise strengthening treatment for this disease."
This medicine, which is free from opium and squills, not only allays the local irritation, but improves digestion and strengthens the constitution. Hence it is used with the most signal success in Asthma, Bronchitis, Consumption, Coughs, Influenza, Night
Sweats of Consumption, Quinsy, and all affections of the throat and chest. Sold in bottles at 1s. 6d., 4s. 6d., and 11s. each, by all respec-

PROSPECTUS.

The Surrey Masonic Hall Company has been formed with the object of providing a Building specially adapted to the requirements of Masonic Lodges, Chapters, and Conclaves, held in the South Metropolitan District; and in connection therewith, a large Hall, for the general use of the public when not engaged for Masonic purposes.

This project has met with the approval of Brethren high in the Craft, and been very favourably received at the several Public Meetings that have been held.

The Site for the Building is in the Camberwell New Road, lying between the Post Office and the County Court, close to the Station of the London, Chatham, and Dover Railway, and to the Tramways from Brixton, Vauxhall, Westminster, Blackfriars, Peckham, and Greenwich. It possesses a frontage of about 70 feet, with a depth of about 150, and has been secured for a term of Ninety-nine Years, at a very low Ground-rent. The plans have been prepared by a well-known Architect and Member of the Craft, and embrace every convenience that long experience could possibly suggest.

The propriety of holding Masonic Meetings in buildings devoted to the purpose is universally acknowledged by the Craft, and the advantages have been fully proved in many provincial towns where Masonic Halls have been erected. It will also supply a want, long felt in this neighbourhood, of a commodious Public Building.

Although the chief object of the Company is to promote the good of Freemasonry, the Directors are of opinion, from estimates carefully prepared, that the Shareholders will also derive a very fair return in a commercial point of view. They therefore, with full confidence, invite the active support of their Brethren. A large number of shares have already been subscribed for.

The estimated annual expenditure for Ground-rent, Taxes, Gas, Coals and sundries about £200.

The estimated annual receipts from Lodges, Chapters, Lodges of Instruction, Conclaves, &c., including rent of Wine cellars, about £220; and from rental of Hall for Concerts, Public Meetings, &c., about £300. And the estimated cost of building and furnishing the Hall, capable of accommodating about 700 persons, in addition to spacious Masonic Rooms, from £2,500 to £3,000, thus shewing 10 per cent, interest on the capital. The Directors, however, fairly anticipate a larger return from public lettings.

SHERNESS.—Adam's Lodge (No. 158).—The ceremony of installation of W.M., and the appointment of the various officers for the ensuing year took place on Thursday last, Bro. George Beckwith being favoured with the distinguished honour. Forty-five of the brethren assembled at 2.30 p.m. at the Britannia Hotel, the spacious room having duly prepared for the ceremony, which was impressively performed according to the accustomed rites, &c., by Bro. Spears, P.M. and Treasurer (158) B.Z. and P. Prov. G.O. The lodge having been worked in its several degrees by the retiring W.M., Bro. Carpenter, the W.M. elect, Bro. Beckwith, was presented by Bro. Bagshaw, P.M., for the installation ceremony, which being completed with much carefulness by Bro. Spears, the newly installed W.M. proceeded to appoint his officers which are as follows:—Bros. A. Oyston, S.W.; Woodley, J.W.; T. Townsend, P. Prov. G.R., P.Z., P.M., Secretary; Spears, P.M., Treasurer; Mitchell, S.D.; Thurlow, J.D.; Kelly, I.G.; Foster, O.G.; Simmonds and Dustan, Stewards; and Carpenter the I.P.M. After the several official appointments, the lodge was addressed by Bro. Spears, and closed according to ancient custom with solemn prayer. Subsequent to this the brethren adjourned to their Masonic Hall where a most recherché banquet was provided by Mrs. Green, of the "Britannia," and widow of the late much respected and lamented Bro. John George Green, P.M. and P.P.J.D. of Kent. Eulogies were deservedly awarded for the very great care taken in providing for the necessary creature comforts, the tables being most tastefully decorated, independent of the delicate though substantial bill of fare. The lodge room presented quite a fairy-like appearance. There were present at the banquet fifty-six of the Craft, among whom were the following from various lodges.—No. 1174, Pentangle, Chatham, Bro. Blakey, P.M. and P.P.A.D.C. of Kent; The Gundolph, 1050, Rochester, Bro. Geo. Watson, W.M. and P.G.S. of Kent; The Lodge of Antiquity, 20, Chatham, Bro. Edwards, W.M.; and a strong muster of brethren from the "De Shurland," 1089, Sherness, comprising the subjoined:—Bros. J. Hancock, W.M.; W. Parnell, P.M. and P.G.D.W. of Kent; M. W. West, P.M.; F. Jones, P.M.; J. M. Rigg, S.W.; A. Ingleton, J.W.; H. Bourne, Sec.; Lieut. Joffe, R.N.; W. J. Duttall, H. G. Clarkson, and E. Penny, R.N. The accustomed loyal and Masonic toasts were given and received with enthusiasm, combined with songs and appropriate speeches, in which latter Bro. A. Spears gave a most lucid and graphic history of the ancient Craft, which was well received. Harmony in every sense was pre-eminent, and the brethren dispersed about eleven p.m., with expressions of general satisfaction.

LODGE OF ISRAEL (No. 205).—The usual meeting of this lodge was held at the Cannon-street Hotel, on Tuesday, March 25th. Present Bros. Hogard, W.M.; Ayden, J.W.; Waylett, S.D.; Buckland, J.D.; Jacobs, I.G.; Hall, M.C.; Cook, P.M. and Treasurer; Cohen, P.M. and Hon. Sec.; also Bros. Littam, P.M.; Emmanuel, P.M.; F. S. Jones, P.M.; and other brethren. The W.M. in a masterly manner initiated Messrs. D. McLeod, T. V. W. Schade and E. Hood into our ancient Order, after which he passed Bro. S. Witmann, and raised Bro. Naylor in a very impressive way. The names of eight gentlemen were proposed for initiation, subject to the ballot, this with six left from last summons will make fourteen waiting to join this lodge, so justly celebrated for the beautiful way in which all the ceremonies are given, and will no doubt cause the W.M. to call a lodge of Emergency either before or after the next regular lodge. This being an off night the brethren sat down to a cold collation, which was quite appreciated and the evening concluded in peace and harmony.

STONEHOUSE.—Metham Lodge (No. 1205).—The members of the Metham Lodge met at their lodge room, Caroline-place, Stonehouse, on Monday afternoon, March 17th, for the purpose of installing the W.M. for the ensuing year. There was a very large attendance, and amongst those present were Bros. Powell, W.M. (who presided), J. Elliott, P.M., P.P.G.S.W.; E. W. Cole, P.M.; W. Browning, P.M., P.P.A.D.C. (223); J. May, P.M. (223); J. E. Alexander, P.M., P.G.O. (666); J. Baxter, P.M. (254); E. Aitken Davies, P.M. P.G. Supt. Works (1299); J. Austin, P.M. (1399), P.P.G.O.; L. D. Westcott, P.M. (70), P.P.G. Supt. Works; C. Leigh, P.M.; J. Montgomery, P.M., P.G. Steward; R. R. Rodd, P.P. G.S.W, Cornwall, P.P.G. Regis., Devon. The attendance also included the Rev. W. Whittley, the Rev. T. Lemon, and W. Ventham. Bro. Daniel Cross was installed as W.M. for the ensuing year, and the ceremony of installation was ably and impressively performed by the W.M. of the past year, Bro. W. Powell. At the close of the installation, the W.M. appointed the following brethren his officers:—Bros. J. Oxley Oxland, S.W.; E. Northey, J.W.; J. Montgomery, Treas.; Alexander White, Sec.; Lieut. W. F. McIlwaine, R.M., S.D.; W. Harris, J.D.; A. Staite, D.C.; T. Gibbons, Org.; W. H. King, I.G.; Charles Hall, and E. Graves, Stewards; T. Moore, Tyler. The annual banquet was held in the evening at the Duke of Cornwall Hotel, the W.M. elect, Bro. Daniel Cross, presiding. There were about eighty brethren present. The W.M. then gave the toast of "Her Majesty the Queen," which was received with much enthusiasm. The D.P.G.M. Bro. Metham, next proposed "The Prince of Wales and the Craft," and in so doing he remarked that Masons, at any rate, should be true and loyal to the Prince, because he had been true and loyal to the Craft. There had not been one occasion on which the Craft had called upon him to exercise the influence of his exalted position for the benefit of the Craft that he had failed to do so, and his Highness had lately exercised it in a manner that had carried comfort to the firesides of many of their distressed brethren, for he had presided at a dinner which had enabled the Committee of Decayed Masons to extend the benefits of the fund from £26 to £36 a year, and to the Widows' Fund a proportionate increase. In addition to this, his Highness had condescended to become the Master of a lodge at Oxford, in which lodge he intended to initiate his own brother—(hear, hear). He was sure they would all join with him in wishing that the Prince might live for many years, and that every year might foster in him those virtues which he could not but believe were sown in his breast from his birth, virtues which he derived from his excellent and noble father; in hoping also that he might live to be regarded and respected as his father was, and that Masons might always feel a delight in calling him Brother—(applause). Br. Leigh proposed "The Grand Master, and Deputy Grand Master; the Past G.M., the Earl of Zetland, and the Past and Present Grand Officers." Br. Metham responded, and said that the whole of the Grand Officers ruled the fraternity throughout the country, not only with a great deal of urbanity, but also with a great deal of zeal and talent. The best proof they could have of this was, that among the many thousands of Masons who lived in England, there was seldom or ever any cause of complaint as to the manner in which the duties of the Grand Officers were discharged. He made bold to say that as a body, not only on account of their illustrious rank, but also on account of their private and public virtues, they stood unequalled by any other body in this or in any other country—(applause). The W.M., proposed "The R.W. Br. the Rev. J. Huyshe, G.M. of Devon." He had not the pleasure of a personal acquaintance with their excellent Provincial Grand Master, but he knew enough of him to justify him in saying that in Br. Huyshe the province had been blessed with a good and faithful P.G.M.; and his only fear was that, considering the great age which Br. Huyshe had reached, he would ere long be compelled to relinquish his high office, the duties of which he had so well and so worthily discharged—(hear, hear). P.P.G.S. Br. Latimer responded to the toast. The next toast on the list was that of the "Deputy Grand Master of Devon, and the Provincial Grand Officers, Past and Present," proposed by the W.M. Bro. Metham acknowledged the toast, and replying to an observation of the W.M. that he attended to Masonry, probably to the sacrifice of his other duties, he stated that he never did a thing which was Masonic or otherwise until he had first attended to his professional duties. This was one of the best lessons a young Mason could have. Masonry was to him, and ought to be to every one else, a great luxury. Let them first complete their daily avocation, and when that was over they might go to their lodges and do the business which had there to be done in the same spirit and with the same conscientiousness as they discharged their other private and public duties. If they acted differently to this they were not true Masons. He was proud to be able to tell them that at the recent meeting in London the province of Devon sent up the noble sum of £4000, which was three times as much as that forwarded by any other province in England—(loud applause). Br. Col. Elliott proposed the "Worshipful Master," a toast which was very warmly received. The W.M., in returning thanks, assured the brethren that whether he was in office or out of it, it would always be his aim to do what good he could to the lodge and to Masonry in general. The W.M., then proposed the health of the Immediate Past Master, Br. Powell, to whom, he said, must in a great measure be ascribed the success of Metham Lodge. All who had been present at their meetings must have noticed the excellent manner in which the duties of the lodge had been carried out by the I.P.M., who had thoroughly mastered the various rituals connected with the many offices through which it was necessary to pass before the W.M.'s chair was reached. During the last twelve months Br. Powell had not been absent from a single lodge meeting, and in addition to thanking him for his services he had great pleasure in presenting him with a Past Master's jewel. The W.M., then affixed the jewel to Br. Powell's breast, and the I.P.M., acknowledged the gift in appropriate terms. In proposing the toast of "The Past Masters," the W.M., spoke in high terms of the valuable services which had been rendered to the Lodge by Bros. Col. Elliott and C. Leigh. To the former must be ascribed not only the prosperity, but the foundation of the lodge, whilst the latter, although a Past Master, had been most regular in his attendance, having been present at no less than twenty meetings during the last twelve months. Br. Col. Elliott, in responding, said he took a very great interest in Metham Lodge, and regretted that his many other duties prevented him from attending oftener than he now did. Speaking of Br. Powell, he observed, that in the whole of his Masonic career he never met with an Immediate Past Master who performed the ceremony of installation in the able manner in which it was done that day by the I.P.M. (Hear, hear). Br. Cole, P.M., added that it was about the finest piece of Masonry he had ever witnessed in his life. (Applause). Bro. Montgomery, P.M., P.G.S., Treas., returned thanks, and expressed his best regard toward the welfare of the lodge. Bro. Leigh, P.M., also returned thanks. The toast of "The Wardens and other Officers of the Lodge" was suitably acknowledged by Br. J. Oxley Oxland, S.W., and Bro. E. Northey, J.W., and the toasts that followed were—"Visiting Brethren, and Success to all Sister Lodges," responded to by Bro. the Rev. P. H. Newnham, and "Our Poor and Distressed Brethren." In proposing the latter toast, the D.G.P.M. of Devon asked for the support of the lodge on behalf of a child of a deceased brother, who was seeking admission into the Orphan Asylum at Stoke. The deceased was formerly a member of Metham Lodge, and therefore the case was essentially their own. It was decided that the matter should be considered at the next lodge meeting, but the W.M. and S.W. expressed a strong feeling that an effort should be made to obtain the admission of the child into the Asylum.

ST. IVES.—Tregenna Lodge (No. 1272).—On Friday the 21st ult., this young but flourishing lodge held its annual meeting, when Bro. John Richards, the W.M. Elect, was placed in the chair of K.S., according to ancient form, by the W.M. Bro. Charles Trevithick, as Installing Master. The lodge was summoned at high Twelve, at which hour a large number of the brethren presented themselves, as well as many visitors from the neighbouring lodges, especially from the mother lodge, Cornubian, Hayle, 450. The lodge was opened in the first degree by the W.M., assisted by his officers, when the minutes of the last regular lodge and intermediate lodges of Emergency were read and confirmed. The Treasurer, Bro. Dunn, I.P.M., then presented his accounts, which showed the year then closing to have been a highly prosperous one, upwards of £70 having been added to the funds of the lodge, out of which all existing liabilities were paid, and an appreciable balance left in the Treasurer's hands. After sundry congratulations, the lodge was opened in the second degree, when the Installing Master proceeded with his work in such a way as to leave no doubt that he was equal to the occasion (which the sequel fully proved); for although a Mason of only two or three years' standing, we have rarely, if ever, witnessed that impressive ceremony more ably performed. The W.M. then invested the officers, with a few words of congratulation and encouragement to each:—Bros. C. Trevithick, I.P.M.; A. R. Harry, S.W.; J. Wearm, J.W.; J. B. Jones, Chap.; J. T. Short, Treas.; T. B. Williams, Sec.; T. T. John, S.D.; S. Thomas, J.D.; W. Trevorrton, I.G.; H. D. Edwards, O.; R. Penberthy, D. of C.; T. Stevens and M. D. Gyles, Stewards; J. P. Trevorrton, Tyler. Visitors—Bros. Jas. Pool, W.M. 450; F. H. Pool, I.P.M. 450; T. G. Greer, 833; G. Hamlyn, 450; E. Temby, 450; W. H. Thomas, 450; M. L. Nicholls, 450. Bro. Coombe, the retiring J.W., P.M. 453, P.P.G.D., read some extracts from the minutes of the Old Ship Lodge, formerly held at the Ship Inn, St. Ives, from 1765 to 1780, which were highly interesting and instructive, as showing that the consumption of "toddy and tobacco at the expense of the lodge," which seems from the minutes to be one of the cardinal virtues of the crew of the "Old Ship," was by no means conducive to keeping her afloat, seeing that she got water-logged in fifteen years. Knill, the first W.M., whose mausoleum still adorns an adjacent hill top, willed an amount (in 1797) of £10, to establish a "quinquennial celebration and divers charities in the Borough of St. Ives." A portion of the rejoicings consisted of ten girls, not exceeding ten years of age and natives of the said borough, between the hours of ten and twelve in the forenoon, dancing on the ground adjoining the mausoleum. The £50 is divided into something like twelve or fourteen portions. (Considerations of space prevents us giving more copious extracts of this strange bequest; should, however, any of our readers wish for a copy of the document, the writer will be pleased to get it transcribed, on receipt of the fee the professional writer may charge for the work. The address can be obtained through Bro. Kenning.) A vote of thanks from the chair, supported by many of the brethren, having been presented to Bro. Coombe, for his excellent paper, the lodge was closed, when the brethren proceeded to Bro.

Geo. Richards', White Hart Hotel, where a sumptuous repast awaited them, to which they did ample justice. After the cloth was removed the usual loyal and Masonic toasts were ably given by the W.M. and duly honoured and acknowledged by the brethren. In responding for the P. G. Officers, Bro. Coombe gave a short but interesting account of the Prov. G.L. of Cornwall, commencing with the year 1752. Amongst his statements were the following:—"In 1752 there were only five Master Masons in the Province; the P.G. officers consisted of five only; from 1786 to 1839 Sir John St. Aubyn reigned as P.G.M., occupying the position no less than fifty-three years; from 1839 to 1844 there was an interregnum of five years, in consequence of no one being at once "able and willing to undertake the management of the work." (It is impossible to give anything like a lengthened report of this interesting and instructive speech, but if he could be induced to put his Masonic facts and data into a pamphlet, many of his brethren would be amused and instructed.) At length the Tyler's toast brought the formal part of the proceedings to a close. Cigars, coffee, &c., coming on, a pleasant and lively conversation was continued until about nine o'clock, when the brethren separated in peace and harmony, amid mutual congratulations on the enjoyable day that had been spent.

ACACIA LODGE (No. 1309).—An emergency meeting of this prosperous and well established lodge was held on Saturday, March 8th, at the Railway Hotel, Potter's Bar, Middlesex. Bro. John Henry Butten, P.G. Steward, Middlesex, W.M., opened the lodge. The ballots for the five gentlemen who were candidates for initiation, taken separately were unanimous in favour of their admission. The veteran Bro. Frederick Walters, P.M. and Sec. in an able and fluent manner raised Bro. H. D. Martin to the third degree. Bro. J. H. Butten, W.M., then resumed the chair, and in an able, painstaking, and impressive manner initiated Messrs. Coltman and George into the secrets and mysteries of ancient Freemasonry. He then stated it was his intention, in conjunction with the S.D., Bro. Richard Limpus, to represent the Lodge as one of its Stewards at the forthcoming Festival of the Girls' School, to be held on Wednesday, May 14th, 1873. He was promised a liberal support, and the business of the meeting being ended the lodge was closed. A good banquet followed, which reflected the greatest credit on Bro. Selby, who was, as usual with him, indefatigable in his exertions to please all present, and succeeded, as every one expressed their satisfaction. Bro. R. Limpus with his friends amused all by the exquisite manner they rendered the splendid music. Their harmony was well appreciated; all seemed pleased and delighted at their exertions. A few hours having been well and agreeably spent the brethren returned to town. The next meeting was arranged to be held on Wednesday, April 9th, at half-past four o'clock, p.m. There was a larger number of members present than on any former occasion. The visitors were well represented by Bro. G. A. Taylor, P.M. 217, who responded for them.

EBURY LODGE.—(No. 1348).—On Tuesday March 23d, at the Morpeth Arms Hotel, Pensonby-street, Pimlico, this well established and prosperous lodge held its regular meeting. We were gratified on entering the lodge room to observe a new organ had been placed there since the last meeting. Bro. G. Stacey, P.M. 209, and Organist of the "Ebury" Lodge added to the beauties of the ceremonies by the admirable manner he rendered the music. The work done in efficient style was raising Brothers Bowler, White, and Hooper, to the third degree, passing Brothers Browne, Thomson, Taylor and Buckland to the second degree, and initiating Messrs. J. F. Lowden, and J. Hayes. The initiation fee is raised to seven guineas. A cordial vote of thanks was given to Brother J. Stacey for the delight he had given to all present, as the Organist. Business being ended, the brethren partook of a cold collation which had been provided by Bro. Palmer with his usual good judgment. The regular toasts were given and responded to. Bro. W. Bourne, W.M.P.M. 749, presided with his usual well known ability, supported by Bros.

J. Summers, S.W.; T. Verity, J.W.; J. Elliott, Secretary; J. Verity, J.D.; A. J. Treton, I.G.; Funian and Harrison, Stewards, and others.

The Lodge was opened in the first degree, and the minutes of the former meeting having been read and duly confirmed, the lodge was opened in the second degree. Bros. Donovan and Taylor, candidates for the degree of M.M., having answered the usual questions and retired, the lodge was opened in the third degree, those brethren readmitted and duly raised to the sublime degree of Master Mason; the ceremony being ably and impressively rendered by the W.M. The lodge was then resumed to the first degree, when two candidates were proposed for initiation, the W.M. announcing his intention to call a lodge of emergency for the purpose of initiating those gentlemen, together with the candidate who was unable to attend that evening. The lodge was then closed, and the brethren and visitors adjourned to partake of an excellent banquet, which was served in first-rate style by the worthy host, Mr. Morley, and thoroughly enjoyed by all present, and which reflected the highest credit upon the establishment. The W.M. presided, and on the removal of the cloth, proposed the usual loyal and Masonic toasts, which were duly honoured, the health of the host and hostess being very warmly received. The Tylers' toast brought a most happy and pleasant meeting to a close at 11 p.m. The visitors who honoured the lodge with their presence on this occasion were Bros. T. Austin, W.M. 933; Brayshaw, W.M. 1076; W. A. Thorp, P.M. 49 and 1228; S. Watkins, P.M. 212 and 1076; T. Cohn, S.D. 192; Lewis Angell 33 and 1228; S. J. Girling, 1000; Jno. Rugg, 781; T. FREEMASONRY IN JAMAICA.

FALMOUTH (JAMAICA).—Athole Union Lodge (No. 367 S.C.).—The members of this lodge had their annual meeting on Wednesday, Jan. 29, for the purpose of installing Bro. D. C. De Souza, W.M. for the ensuing year, and also the officers. The R.W. M. A. Nunes having resigned the chair (his term of office having expired), the R.W. S. Constantine Burke, Prov. G.M. for Scotland, took the chair, and summoned the Master Elect to the Pedestal, and delivered the usual charges and installed the W.M. After a complimentary address the W.M. proceeded to instal his officers, at the conclusion of which the W.M. addressed the brethren and officers, and thanked the R.W. S. Constantine Burke for the honour he had done them in travelling a considerable distance to attend the installation. The lodge was then closed, and the brethren marched in procession to the Court House, where an assembly of fully 150 ladies and gentlemen were assembled. The brethren having marched into the ball-room then received the Prov. G.M., after which dancing was commenced and kept up with great spirit until one o'clock, when the company was conducted to the supper-room, where a sumptuous banquet was prepared. After the usual loyal and Masonic toasts, the R.W. S. C. Burke proposed "The Ladies;" a return was then made to the ball-room, when dancing was renewed, and kept up without flagging until 5.30. The company then retired highly delighted with the entertainment of the evening.

FREEMASONRY IN TASMANIA.

"We extract the following from the Hobart Town Mercury" of 31st. Dec. last."

"FREEMASONS' HALL COMPANY.—An extraordinary general meeting of shareholders in the Freemasons' Hall Company (Limited), was held at the Victoria Tavern, Murray-street, last evening. The meeting was called for the purpose of receiving and confirming the report of the directors on the tenders for the proposed hall, and also to give power to the directors to borrow a further sum of money for the completion of the building. D. Lewis, Esq., was in the chair, and there were nearly 1,000 shares represented. The report of the directors, which stated that they had accepted the tender of Mr. Gregory for the building of the hall, for the sum of £2,568, was read. Several shareholders inquired why the tender of Mr. Wiggins, which was the lowest by £48, had not been accepted, and on it being proposed that the report be adopted, a ballot was taken, when the action of the directors was confirmed by a large majority. A resolution was carried that shares lately forfeited by the directors for non-payment of calls may be resumed by the several shareholders on payment of the amounts due thereon within 10 days. The following motion was also agreed to:—"That to enable the directors to carry out the work, they may be, and are hereby authorised to borrow such further sum or sums of money, as in their discretion may be taken to be requisite to complete the proposed building, not exceeding £1000." The directors reported that they had authorised another issue of shares on the following terms, viz., 5s. per share cash, and 5s. per share promissory notes, at 3, 6, and 9 months, bearing date January 1st, 1873, for new shareholders; present shareholders to be allowed additional shares by giving four promissory notes at 5s. per share each at 3, 6, 9, and 12 months, from the 1st January. The meeting closed with a vote of thanks to the Chairman."

GRAND MASONIC BALL.

A grand Masonic ball (the proceeds to be given to the Royal Masonic Institution for Girls, was given on Wednesday, 25th ult., at the Cannon-street Hotel, by the members of the Lodges and Chapters meeting at that place. Dancing began about ten o'clock to the strains of Coote and Tinney's magnificent band of twenty-five performers, and was continued until one, when supper was served in the upper hall, the chair being occupied by Sir Gilbert Campbell, Bart. This over, and the toasts of the "Queen" the "Grand Master, the Marquess of Ripon, the Prince of Wales, and all other past Grand Masters," having been duly honoured, the chairman proposed the "Royal Masonic Institution for Girls," remarking that he was sure it must have added to the pleasure of all present to know that while they were enjoying themselves they were at the same time contributing to the support of such a really good and deserving institution as that was.

Bro. Little responded, and observed that it was one of the first and oldest Masonic Charities in the world, and, although they were not able to present it with any great sum, yet they were adding their mite to the great aggregate of Masonic charity.

The health of the Chairman was then drunk in bumpers, and one other toast, "The Ladies" (for whom Bro. Yeoman replied), brought the list to an end.

Dancing was then resumed, and continued until about five o'clock.

The company present numbered nearly three hundred, and the ball altogether, thanks to the indefatigable exertions of Bro. G. Kenning (hon. sec.) and Bro. Sidney Spencer, was one of the most enjoyable and successful of the season.

The brethren were all in full Masonic costume, which added greatly to the brilliancy of the scene. The staircase and ball-room were beautifully decorated with the banners of the "Lion and Lamb Chapter" and the "William Preston Lodge," whilst conspicuous on one side of the room were three fine banners (kindly lent for the occasion by Bro. Kenning), representing the "Freemason's Arms," "the Knights Templars," and the "Red Cross of Rome and Constantine."

Great praise is due to Bros. Bates, George Newman, J. T. Moss, George Abbott, Hogard, Levander, Yeoman, and Dubois, for the energetic part they took in carrying out the arrangements.

"After thoroughly testing it, I believe your Vegetable Pain Killer to be the best medicine for diarrhoea I have ever known. It gives speedy and permanent relief without any shock, or causing constipation. It is a most useful and valuable family medicine.—E. T. BARRETT, Surrey Chambers, Strand, July 1869.—To Perry Davis & Son, London."

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS.—Many persons are apt to regard the winter past when a few bright days enliven them, and some are rash enough at once to change warm for lighter clothing; much risk attends their imprudence, though the inevitable ill-health resulting from it, can be readily set aside, by recourse to these purifying and corrective Pills, invaluable to the sickly at all times and doubly useful at this season, when they cast out the impurities of winter and fortify the system against the sudden variations, and frequent epidemics attending Spring. Holloway's medicine relaxes the skin, permits free transpiration through its pores and thus rids it of the irritation and harshness which increasing temperatures make annoying to the nervous and sensitive.—ADVT.

MASONIC BALL AT BRIGHTON.

Owing to the thorough success of the late Masonic Ball a few weeks ago, by which twenty guineas were cleared and equally divided between the Boys' and Girls' Schools maintained by the Craft, and likewise, and in no small measure, in consequence of the thorough enjoyment which was obtained on that occasion, it was resolved to repeat it, at an early date, in aid of the Brighton and Hove Dispensary, and it took place at the Royal Pavilion on the 10th ult. Perhaps we are not strictly correct in calling it a "Masonic Ball," when the circulars describe it as a "Private Invitation Ball," but the Masonic element was so far paramount last evening, that we feel bound to give honour where honour is due. All the Stewards were Masons, the M.C.'s were Masons, the Committee were Masons, the Hon. Sec. a Mason, the caterer of the creature comforts and the necessary florist were Masons, and the band was led by a Mason. How then could we shut our Masonic eyes to the fact, especially after the gratuitous inuendo made not long since at a public meeting with reference to the Craft and local charities. It is not our desire to rake up this old grievance, but we merely throw aside the cloak on this occasion to show that beyond maintaining their own charities, the Freemasons some time do good by stealth, and thus hide their blushes. However, the ball last night was "awfully jolly," and the enjoyment was participated in by about 160 guests.

Between the first and second part there was an interval of forty-five minutes, and the guests improved each shining quarter-hour by the making of tissue and sustaining of stamina by the agreeable process of sitting down to supper in the drawing room—the repast being served by Mr. Albert Cowley, of the West Pier restaurant in his usual admirable style. The following gentlemen acted as M.C.'s, Mr. J. Robinson, Mr. J. W. Staples, Mr. C. W. Hudson, and Mr. G. Emery, and Mr. A. J. Hawkes was the indefatigable Secretary of the indefatigable Committee, who carried out all the arrangements in the most perfect manner.

GRAND MASONIC BALL AT BARROW-IN-FURNESS.

The most brilliant affair in the matter of balls which has ever been held in this town took place on the 25th ult., under the auspices of the "brethren of the Mystic Tie" of Barrow. The ball was got up for the benefit of the Masonic Charities. A dispensation was granted by the Provincial Grand Master, Lord Skelmersdale, for the purpose, to the Hindpool Lodge, No. 1225, and it was carried out under the auspices of the brethren of that lodge and the brethren of the Hartington Lodge, No. 1021, and by their united efforts was one of unequalled success. The ball was under the patronage of Bro. Sir James Ramsden, W.M.; Bro. H. W. Schneider, P.M., P.P.G.J.W.; Bro. J. T. Smith, Esq. (Mayor of Barrow), P.M.; Bro. H. Cook, Esq., P.M., P.P.G.R. for Cumberland and Westmoreland; Bro. Robt. W. Graham, W.M., and the officers and brethren of the neighbouring lodges. The arrangements were entrusted to the hands of an active committee, whose exertions deserve great commendation. The decorations were conducted by a sub-committee, consisting of Bros. J. Lewis, B. Townson, and W. Gradwell, junr.

The doors of the hall were thrown open at half-past eight o'clock, and shortly after that time carriages rolled up and deposited their beautifully-decked occupants at the entrance, which was laid with richly-coloured carpets, as were also the stairs, at the sides of which and on the landing were placed beautiful plants and flowers in pots, kindly lent for the occasion by Sir James Ramsden, His Worship the Mayor (J. T. Smith, Esq.), Joseph Fisher, Esq., Fairfield, and other gentlemen. The ante-room on the ground floor was set apart for the gentlemen's dressing room, and was attended to by Bro. Gabbat. The corresponding room upstairs was most tastefully fitted up as the ladies' dressing room, and was attended to by Mrs. Gabbat. The ball room itself was a most magnificent display of taste, and the greatest credit is due to Mr. J. Lewis, under whose personal supervision and direction the whole was carried out, for the grand effect produced.

The refreshments were provided by Bro. R. T. Taylor, and were set out on the platform. The table was most beautifully laid with all that the heart could desire, and in a style which could not but please the most fastidious eye, and with a taste which did great credit to the purveyor. This department was brilliantly lighted by a massive gasalier with six branches, each branch having seven jets, and in front of the tables were placed settees for the accommodation of the company.

There were in all about 90 couples present. Dancing commenced at nine o'clock to the excellent music of Mr. Kearsley's band. Mr. M. Haslam and Mr. W. Gradwell, junr., acted most ably as Masters of Ceremonies, and the Stewards were most assiduous in their attention to the comforts and convenience of the large company. We must especially thank the Committee and the two Secretaries, Bros. Kershaw and Milner, for the attention they paid to the representatives of the Press.

Dancing was kept up with great spirit until half-past four o'clock on Wednesday morning, when the party broke up highly delighted with the ball, which in every respect was one of the greatest successes.

An excellent photograph of the ball room has been taken by Messrs. Richards and Ludlam, which they have printed, and copies are now on sale.—Barrow Pilot.

PROVINCIAL GRAND LODGE OF WEST YORKSHIRE.

On Thursday, the 27th ult., the half-yearly communication of this Provincial Grand Lodge was holden at the Alfred Lodge Rooms, Leeds, at the invitation of the Copley Lodge of Mark Masters, No. 111. A Mark Masters Lodge was opened at 12, and at 12.30 the P.G.M.M., accompanied by his officers (there being only two absentees), entered the room, the P.G.L. was opened, and the P.G.M.M., formally saluted. On the roll of lodges being called over, every lodge in the province was found to have representatives present. The P.G.M.M. presided, and after the withdrawal of the cloth, the usual loyal, patriotic, and Masonic toasts were given and responded to, and a very pleasant time was spent, everything tending to show that the establishment of a P.G.L. in West Yorkshire was giving an impetus to the Mark Masters' degree.

ROYAL MASONIC INSTITUTION FOR GIRLS.

At the first meeting of the Board of Stewards for the Festival, held on the 18th ult., Col. Burdett, Prov. Grand Master for Middlesex, was elected President; Bro. J. B. Monckton, S.G.D. Monckton, Cubitt, Hopwood, Kenning, and Levander, as a committee to superintend the arrangements for the Festival. The Stewards' fee was fixed at three guineas, and the Secretary intimated that he should be glad to receive the names of additional brethren willing to serve as Stewards.

THE "SECRET HISTORY" MASONIC CONSTITUTIONS.

Since my last communication in The Freemason (of March 15th) and Bro. Norton's article on Briscoes' work, Bro. Charles Molly, P.M. (of Manchester) has kindly directed my attention to page 125 of Dr. Kloss's "Bibliographie der Freimaurerei" (No. 1832,) where I find that the "Secret History" is mentioned of date 1725. It did not appear to me to be so old, so it will probably turn out that Bro. Norton was right, and myself wrong, as to the year in which the pamphlet first appeared. Dr. Kloss states that the "Secret History" gives a copy of Coles' Constitutions. This is not correct, for I have compared the two carefully. Another Masonic Student has written me to the effect that Briscoes' work of 1725 contains a transcript of Roberts' MS., published in 1722, lately reprinted by Bro. R. Spencer (of London). This also is incorrect, as the two have been carefully collated by me, and also at the same time, word for word with the "Harleian MS. 1942," but it is quite evident to me that the author (or compiler) of the "Secret History" of 1725 never copied in any way from either the printed pamphlet of 1722, or the MS. of about A.D. 1670. (No. 1942). On the whole I am inclined to believe that the Harleian MS., No. 2054, was the text for Briscoes' pamphlet, for with one or two trivial exceptions they read as one document. "Roberts' MS," and "Harleian MS. 1942" are so peculiar, they differ so radically from all other MSS., in having the "New Articles," and agree only with two or three others in containing the "Apprentice Charge" (which peculiarities are not to be found in "Briscoes' MS."), that it is quite easy to decide when they are used by any one as the text for a "Masonic Constitution."—W. A QUERY FOR BRO. J. FINDEL.

Do you know anything of two Manuscripts said to be in the library of "Donau Eschingen," mentioned by a person of the name of "Barack" in a catalogue of the manuscripts there.

One purports to be a "Geschichte der Fraumaurerie," and the other to be a list of Masonic books.

Donau Eschingen is the seat of Prince Fürstenberg apparently in the Grand Ducny of Baden.—A. F. A. WOODFORD, P.G.C.

BRO. HOLMES'S NOTES.

To the Editor of the Freemason.

Dear Sir and Brother,—

I am not surprised to see your desire that the correspondence anent the chivalric Orders shall now terminate; but as allusion is made to myself, I would crave your indulgence for these final lines. I thank Bro. Holmes for his courteous allusion to myself, and I trust I may never forfeit his favourable opinion. I much regret that he has followed his friendly expressions by two allusions to our past controversy, in which I have met him with fairness and with facts. These allusions are in defiance of all the rules of proper argument, inasmuch as they have been previously met and utterly refuted by me. I have shown your readers that the late Prince Albert accepted his Cross before the English public had ever heard of him, and before he ever heard of the English Langue of the Order of St. John; it is therefore, to say the least, ungenerous on the part of Bro. Holmes, to revive what he now knows is a misrepresentation, for no other apparent purpose than to damage an institution which interferes with no one.

I could have given documentary proof of the courteous attention of Prince Albert to the English Langue had I thought my statement would be treated with doubt.

The English Langue needs no acknowledgement from any existing person (unless Her Most Gracious Majesty should think it proper to render it a public institution of England). There is no present Governing body of the Order, its institutions are independent and distinct, and the English Langue is in perfect and lawful existence. It is impossible to say with reason that five-sevenths of the Order, representing five distinct divisions, each having separate power, could not by their will and act revive a dormant langue, when it is admitted, nay urged, that a handful of members of the Order, not having authority to represent any one langue, could elect a Grand Master at a time when the office was full. Bro. Holmes's opinion is in curious contrast with one written in 1837, and which lay before me as I read his letter; it was the opinion of the Baron de Reinach, a Commander of the Order, who was at Malta, at the time of the capitulation. The Baron was a distinguished member of the Order, and had its sovereignty continued he was the chevalier who in point of rank and standing would probably have become Prior of Germany.

This eminent Knight expressed an opinion on the 26th of December, 1837, distinctly adverse to the view which Bro. Holmes so positively puts forward at the close of his letter. The Baron expressed his gratification at the restoration of the Order in England, and said that the proceedings for that purpose were quite regular. The Baron Ferdinand von Hompesch, a nephew of the 69th Grand Master, held the same view, and inscribed his name on the roll of the English langue. I think the opinion of Bro. Holmes will be found wanting in the balance against these knights, who ought to know a little of their own institution. I am happy to receive Bro. Holmes's friendly expressions, I reciprocate them with all the courtesy to which they are entitled, and with sincere thanks to yourself for the patience with which your space has been afforded me, I am,

Fraternally yours,

LUPUS.

PROVINCIAL GRAND LODGES.

To the Editor of The Freemason.

Dear Sir and Brother,—

On reading your report of the Prov. G.L. of Cornwall at page 202, of your last, I find that it was held at Truro, on the 13th inst., and that it was attended (inter alia) by the following brethren, viz:—The Right Hon. the Earl of Mount Edgcumbe, Prov. G.M. designate, &c., and the first paragraph concludes by stating that the lodge was opened and closed by the D.P.G.M., the P.G.M. being unable to perform that duty until his Installation, which is fixed to take place at the Festival meeting in the summer.

On reading the article I confess that my Masonic Law received a severe shock. In my simplicity, I believe that on the death of a Prov. G.M., the Prov. G.L. ceases to exist and all the offices become vacant, and so remain until a new P.G.M. is appointed, by whose authority the P.G. Lodge might be again established (see Book of Constitutions, clause 7, pages 54, and 55). And the new P.G.M. must be installed at the first Prov. G. Lodge which he may hold after his appointment (see Book of Constitutions, clause 1, page 45).

Now it appears to me clear, that on the death of the late Prov. G.M., the Prov. G. Lodge ceased to exist and it could not be revived until a new Prov. G.M. was installed, for until he was installed he had no power to appoint new officers or ask the old ones to retain their places for the current year; for they had all ceased to exist, and the power to appoint new officers could not be exercised by the Prov. G.M., until he was installed.

To say that the lodge was opened and closed by the D.P.G.M. is an absurdity, when such an officer did not exist, for on the death of the late P.G.M. the officer in question became a Past D.P.G.M. as his office became defunct on the death of the late P.G.M., and the new P.G.M. had no power to re-appoint him until he himself had been installed.

I shall be glad to be put right if I am wrong, and it may turn out that it was no meeting of a Prov. Grand Lodge at all, but simply some Charity Meeting, composed principally of Past P. G. Officers and other brethren, which could not wait for the assemblage of the first Prov. Grand Lodge in the summer.

Yours fraternally.

INSTALLATION OF H.R.H. THE PRINCE OF WALES.

To the Editor of The Freemason.

Dear Sir and Brother,—

Although I am aware it is too late now to alter the arrangements which have been made for the installation of H.R.H. the Prince of Wales as Grand Master of the Masonic Knights Templar, still, I trust you will kindly insert this letter in the next issue of the Freemason. I do not imagine that I only give utterance to my own feelings, but that I also shall express that which many other Knights Templar feel, when I say that I very much regret that those in authority have thought fit to recommend to H.R.H., the 7th of April for his installation. Had it been a great meeting of Craft Masons, it would surely have been as well to have remembered that many members of the Order might object to a festival of the kind in Passion week, but as Craft Masonry is not by any means restricted to members of the Christian religion, there would have been nothing contrary to its profession had such a day been selected. But as you, sir, are doubtless well aware, many Knights Templar are in the habit of making much of their Order, as being essentially a "Christian degree"; and therefore I do think that the leaders of that Order ought not to have suggested a day (more especially as it was simply an alteration in the day of meeting) which would occur in a week, which a very large body of Christians agree in thinking ought to be set apart for other and higher thoughts than those which such a festival as the installation of our illustrious Grand Master Elect is likely to produce. In common with all Masons and all Knights Templar, I rejoice beyond measure that H.R.H. should preside over us, and I rejoice at the marked interest with which he regards everything connected with Freemasonry, but I am certain that if it had been only hinted to him that some brethren—some over-particular brethren, if you like to call them so—might possibly object to a festival in that particular week, he would instantly, with that kindly and thoughtful consideration which always marks his actions, have fixed some other and more appropriate day for his installation. Of course, many of my Clerical brethren will, like myself, be prevented by our other duties from attending, as it is; but it is not on this account that I write, but simply because I think it my duty as a Past Grand Chaplain to put before my brethren what I conceive to be right in this matter.

I have the honour to be,

Yours faithfully and fraternally,

Past Grand Chaplain of England, &

COMPOUNDING FOR SUBSCRIPTIONS.

To the Editor of The Freemason.

Dear Sir and Brother,—

The question of compounding for subscriptions, though apparently simple enough, is in truth somewhat of an intricate character, and surrounded by several difficulties both Masonic and financial.

Bro. W. Langley's suggestion would indeed be one way of settling the question and solving the difficulty, but how far it would accord with the interest and prosperity of private Lodges your deponent saith and seeth not.

I confess, it appears to me that neither our excellent Bro. Smith, nor Bro. Langley have realised the patent financial and fundamental objections to the proposition in itself. The whole membership system of our English Freemasonry is based on the annual subscription; without it, not only all the privileges of the private Lodge, but the qualifications for Grand Lodge, are lost and abrogated.

Hence, the "Composition" of Subscriptions introduces an entirely new element into our Masonic practice and usage, and great caution must be exercised lest, in order to suit the convenience of the few, we invade or invalidate the position and rights of the many.

No doubt, in one sense, it is merely a question of money, but it is not entirely, or only, a question of money.

Other questions and ulterior consequences are involved which cannot be overlooked, because, they relate to the rights and prosperity of our private lodges, and affect in truth the best interests of the Grand Lodge itself.

For unless the composition be fixed at an amount which precludes any possibility of interference with the financial position of the private lodges, and the recognised principle of necessary annual subscriptions, much injury will accrue inevitably, not only to private lodges in particular, but to Freemasonry in England in general.

I would wish to put before your readers two illustrations, of the way, in which the Composition, unless carefully guarded, will work prejudicially alike to private lodge funds, and the Grand Lodge funds!

1. A brother leaves a lodge, and offers to compound.

The same is fixed at a given sum. Unless the sum be estimated at such an amount as shall shut out altogether the possibility of under payment, he may exhaust his composition; and the private lodge will have to pay, as long as he lives, his Grand Lodge and Provincial quarterages. I am aware that the argument cuts both ways, but, for the interest of the private lodges, the possibility of such insufficient payment must be carefully provided against.

2. Again a brother leaves the North or the South, as the case may be, and compounds with the lodge for his annual subscription; he may join another lodge—but he may not; there is nothing to compel him to do so, and he may retain and claim all the privileges of the private lodge and all the privileges of the Grand Lodge, at a rate of payment far lower than his brethren, and practically without an Annual Subscription at all.

If such a state of things were extensively introduced into our Order, it would revolutionise our English Freemasonry, one of the strong points of which undoubtedly is the Annual Subscription to lodges.

If, then, this proposal for composition is to go forward it must be carefully watched and dealt with, as no doubt it will be, by the Board of General Purposes and its able Chairman. But this I am sure of, that anything which tends to impair the dignity or affect the pecuniary position of the private lodges, or to weaken the long recognised importance of the annual subscription, will be deprecated sincerely, by every earnest member of the Craft,—I am, Dear Sir and Brother,

Fraternally yours,

A P.G.O.

THE UNITED ORDERS OF THE TEMPLE AND HOSPITAL.

A FEW WORDS BY LUFUS ON HIS OWN ACCOUNT.

As the sublime and the ridiculous are said to be severed by so small a distance as one step, it is a great misfortune that an institution which even is ad imitationem only, according to the statement of a well-known brother, but which nevertheless possesses much to interest and a great deal (in this utilitarian age) to enlist the attention and sympathy of the student of the past, should suddenly, or at all events recently, have its name allied and mixed up with pretensions which it has never put forward during the whole previous period of its existence; pretensions without a shadow of foundation, and which its best and truest friends must view with regret. I, speaking for myself and having devoted some attention to the subject, believe that originally the Masonic Templar Order had no infusion whatever of a Masonic Order of Malta, but was a traditional representation of the grand old Order of the Temple, pure and simple; and I regard it as a misfortune that upon this tradition, in which I seem to possess a stronger faith than many others, should be cast those shadows of doubt which must naturally be created when injudicious advocates attempt to raise for it new claims to an Order with which it never had any connection; with which, from the creation of the Templars to the date of their tragic fall, it was at constant enmity; which, moreover, has never ceased its own existence—in separate and independent sections exist now, and has no connection whatever with the Masonic fraternity.

In dealing with a mere fact no one should be thought wanting in respect for the Masonic Order of the Temple because he is bold enough to deny that it is two Orders instead of one. It is inconsistent and absurd that the Masonic Order of the Temple, traditionally representing the ancient brotherhood of that name, ever was, or can be, another and violently antagonistic Order also. We know the Masonic tradition to be, that on the suppression of the Templars, in and after 1307, some of their number sought refuge and held their conclaves in the Society of Freemasons, and that these meetings are represented in the present institution of Masonic Templars. It is true that we have no more proof of this than arises out of tradition, and although some writers have said, and still say, that this is an empty delusion and a myth, yet in the words of the old play we may exclaim—

"There's something in that ancient superstition, Which, erring as it is, our fancy loves."

When we look to facts for proof of the existence of the Templars as a Masonic Order in England, we are unable to attain an earlier date than shortly before 1780, and even of this period we have no authentic records. Our definite information appears to commence with the election of Admiral Thomas Dunckerley as Grand Master, which event Bro. Yarker informs us occurred on the 24th of July, 1791; but that the Templars had existed as a Masonic Order a considerable time before that date is obvious, or they would not have been in a sufficiently organised position to appoint a Grand Master. I well remember to have met (some ten years ago) with a statement that a record was in existence of a meeting of "The Grand Encampment of England," at Carisbrook, Isle of Wight, in 1780. If this should meet the eye of any brother who can verify the statement, and will do so, and especially if he can obtain access to the record (which ought to be placed in the custody of Convent General), he will confer a benefit upon the Fraternity. Bro. Woolf, in his small and somewhat crude work, which was written in 1865, when the Masonic information on the subject was more difficult of access, says: "The earliest Encampments on record appear to have been London, York, Bristol, Bath and Salisbury"; I am, however, able to give a few extracts from MS. notes, written possibly about 1846, by a brother who had much personal knowledge of the events of many previous years. He says: "There were originally five encampments of Knights Templars, called 'The Camps of Baldwin of Time Immemorial,' and they dated according to the following classification:—1, York; 2, London; 3, Bristol; 4, Bath; 5, Salisbury. In the year 1791, a Grand Conclave, under the patronage of H.R.H.

Prince Edward (Duke of Kent), with Thomas Dunckerley as Grand Master, R. W. Whalley Grand Chancellor, W. Eagle Principal Grand Scribe and Registrar, and W. Hammond Acting Grand Master, started in London; but no mention is made from whom they derived their authority. The five before named camps worked under their own Superintendents and Commanders, and acknowledged, at this time, no allegiance, inasmuch as the powers which granted their original warrants had ceased to be."

The MS. proceeds to state that the Grand Master Dunckerley sent a warrant (without number) to each of these five Camps, calling them "time immemorial warrants," and that with the exception of Bristol they were all accepted, but that Bristol declined, and "still issued its own warrants and worked under its own Grand Superintendent and Grand Commanders."

In a subsequent portion of the MS. it is alleged that on the 7th June, 1793, an invitation was addressed to Encampments, informing them that "A Grand Conclave of Knights Templar would be held at the London Coffee House, Ludgate Hill, on the 24th June, 1793; the Knights were to assemble at the Temple Church, Fleet Street, at Eleven, a.m., the use of which was granted for that purpose."

Perhaps some brother can ascertain if this statement is correct. Are the Grand Conclave minutes of that period accessible, or would there be any register of such an occurrence in the books of the Temple Church? The MS. contains much interesting detail, but which could hardly with benefit, be made public. The Vice-Chancellor of the date seems to have dissented from some of the foregoing statements, as in notes subsequently written, he says, "The Baldwin encampment at Bristol was duly enrolled under the Grand Conclave, and regularly registered its members, and paid the fees, until about 1832-3." He then proceeds to state that owing to irregularity in the administration of the Treasury, and to the cessation of the Grand Conclave meetings, nearly all the encampments discontinued their payments about the same time; he however adds "Grand Conclave never did dissolve, but the fact is that from the time of the Duke of Sussex's election as the head of the Order in England he never could be induced to hold a meeting of Grand Conclave." The same Vice-Chancellor seems to dispute the fact that a Grand Conclave under Dunckerley was established in 1791, and he requests to know the authority for the statement

I conclude from this that it was an opposition to what he designates the "Early Grand Encampment of England." In Dr. Oliver's "Historic Landmarks" he refers only to four original encampments called camps of Baldwin, but he has thus omitted Salisbury. There was also an early encampment at Bridgewater, but now extinct, and there are, or were, old encampments at Exeter and at Hull; not to mention the Jerusalem at Manchester. I have understood the records of the Hull encampment are in preservation, and I would suggest to Bro. Holmes that an investigation of the books and papers of these earlier camps may have an interesting result. I am loyal to the old Masonic Order of the Temple, and am too jealous of the claims it does possess, and too conservative of its constitution, to witness with any complacency changes and pretensions which tend to convert it into something which it is not, and to jeopardise its position as the representative of so grand an institution. I believe that the addition to it of the Masonic Maltese Orders arose solely from an error and confusion of names; but, however this may have been, they were entirely combined, there were no separate badges, and thus did the constitution continue for many years. At length a brief and simple ritual, to which I have in former articles referred, was compiled for use at the conclusion of the older ceremony, and is used at this time in the two preceptories to which I belong. Long subsequently to the institution of the little ceremony in question (which is conducted by any Preceptor and a Chaplain) a separate badge was also adopted. At length came the changes of 1853 when ritual and badge were alike discarded and the Order was declared to be "The Royal Exalted Religious and Military Order of Knights Templar" alone; But, after the lapse of another nine years, the Grand Conclave, in 1862, again set up the Maltese element; not reviving it in its old form, as combined with the Temple, but as a separate degree, with a second diploma, and a new and entirely distinct ceremony, on which I have already expressed my opinion. The Statutes of 1872 have again united the Orders in name, but have discarded, unfortunately, and I hope temporarily, the title "Masonic." I say unfortunately, because the Order of the Temple belonged to our good old Craft; the good old Craft was proud of it; the constitution of the Craft pervaded that of the Temple, and without the former the Templars have no existence. Many Templars, taking the Craft view, strongly feel this; as did the Templars, in their view, strongly feel that they were the custodians of the "high-degrees," and that their rights were confiscated when those degrees were removed from their keeping. I trust, under the new Statutes, the Order will be assimilated to its earlier and only true constitution, that it will revive its old traditional form upon which alone we can rely; that it will in its dignity reject these dangerous doctrines that appropriation creates a right; and that we may yet view it as the same representative and honourable Masonic Order which has existed, at all events for a century, and not as a thing of to-day, or even as dating from the venerable enactment of nine years ago.

MASONIC MUSINGS.

By BRO. J. BALFOUR COCKBURN, P.Z. 278.
Past Installed Mark Master, 43.

Ever bearing in mind the end I proposed to myself when I ventured to address your readers on the origin, nature, and objects of that ancient and comprehensive science, which should ever form the subject of our studious investigation; again I resume the thread of my reflection, and desire now to call attention to one or two instances which appear to my view, as illustrating in a most striking and remarkable manner, the great and mysterious problem which we have to demonstrate, namely, the intimate connection which has ever existed between Religion, or what perhaps may be more correctly described as the culture and adoration of a Supreme Being, and the Arts and Sciences. On a previous occasion, it was my particular aim to endeavour to explain and impress on the minds of those who honoured me by following out my arguments, that it was on this single fact that our system and our society, in reality two very different things, are securely based. By extracts from the records of the Old Testament and by such general tradition as conveyed undeniable elements of truth, an attempt was made to confirm whatever might relate to our peculiar principles and history in the remotest ages of the world, from the time of Adam to that of Noah. It was, I take it, clearly, evidenced that this period of more than 1600 years was by no means barren or unfruitful in the discovery, production and application of the Arts and Sciences—we must not be surprised however, though it in no way militates against the reality and truthfulness of the testimony, to find, that in the compass of the few pages wherein the early history of man is detailed, no very minute or extensive account of the causes of discovery, or the modes of application, even to sacred purposes, is recorded. Still what we have received, and what has flowed down to us through this channel, though undeniably somewhat scanty in quantity and meagre in detail, is unquestionably true, and herein lies the surpassing value of the information which we acquire by the study of that Blessed Volume, wherein the matchless wisdom of the Most High is so forcibly portrayed.

Having in our search arrived at the date of the Deluge, a new scene is opened to us, which thenceforth expands and comprehends many of the most profound mysteries and characteristic elements of our Craft, in their earliest operation.

We have every encouragement to look with care to certain incidents in the life of Noah, and the legitimate deductions therefrom, and especially to his marvellous passage from the original antediluvian world to the new and still existing surface of the Globe.

Thus was foreshadowed a far more terrible destruction, a more effectual submersion, a more complete conquest of Satan and Death, and a far more glorious Advent, when the Ark rested on the summit of Mount Ararat and the Patriarch emerged from its portals, accompanied by his family, and the stock of animal classes from which the face of the earth was to be re-peopled and re-furnished, in accordance with the decrees of an all-ruling Providence.

To the most prominent and instructive of these circumstances I propose to confine my present enquiry, and this shall be done within the narrowest limits of which the subject will admit.

We come, then, to that stupendous monument of the saving mercy of Jehovah, remembered in the midst of his wrath against his sinful and rebellious creatures—the Ark of Noah—"And God said unto Noah, the end of all flesh is come before me; for the earth is filled with violence through them; and, behold, I will destroy them with the earth, make thee an Ark of gopher wood." The word ark in the original means properly a box or chest, and it is almost beyond the possibility of doubt that the material of which this Divinely inspired and first attempted form of marine architecture was composed, was cypress wood—the etymology of the word alone would indicate this; but it is further strengthened by facts that cypress trees grew abundantly on the banks of the Tigris and Euphrates—that this wood is remarkable for resisting decay, and for other reasons admirably adapted for the purpose of ship building; possessing many of the peculiarities and properties of the teak wood of Burmah, at one time so extensively employed in the construction of our ocean clippers: On this account it was used by the Athenians for the preservation of their illustrious dead, and by Alexander the Great for his Babylonian fleet. The shape of the Ark was oblong, its breadth one-sixth of its length, and its height one-tenth. Taking the cubit at eighteen inches, the dimensions in feet would be as follows:—length 450 feet, breadth 75 feet and height 45 feet—and though this by no means depicts a construction, equal to the floating cities, as represented by the iron-clad monsters of the present day, such as our Agincourt, Minotaur, or Lord Warden, still a vessel with the cubical capacity—or more nautically speaking with the tonnage of the Ark, would not compare insignificantly with the Shannon, the Arkansas, or the Victory, ships with which Blake, Nelson and other gallant seamen swept all opponents from the ocean, and raised the naval supremacy of England to its highest pinnacle—

"Actions sublime
Whose distant glories echo down the corridors of time."

By many it has been supposed that the top of the Ark was covered with a span roof of low pitch; there is, however, no authority for this supposition. A well built flat roof would be equally as efficacious as a sloping one to resist the entrance of the "rain impetuous,"

"The cataracts
Of heaven set open on the earth."

As was remarked before, the simple form of the Ark does not present a model for the naval constructors or shipbuilders of our time, but it is worthy of notice that the experiment has been tried, and with success. The following is taken from a foot-note in Stackhouse's History of the Bible, a work published in 1742, and the authority in which it is given is sufficiently sound to warrant the entire credibility of the account:—"About the beginning of the last century Peter Jansen, a Dutch merchant, caused a ship to be built for him, answering in its respective proportions, to those of Noah's Ark, the length of it being 120 feet, the breadth of it 20 and the depth of it 12. At first this was looked upon no better than a fanatical vision of this Jansen (who was by profession a menonist) and, while it was building, he and his ship were made the sport of the seamen, as much as Noah and his Ark could be. But afterwards it was found that ships built in his fashion, were, in the time of peace, beyond all others most commodious for commerce; because they would hold a third part more, without requiring any more hands, and were found far better runners than any made before."

After the closest enquiry and most accurate calculations, it has been computed that the most expert mathematician could not have proportioned any vessel, or adapted it better to its purpose than did Noah under Omnipotent inspiration and direction; and this alone is no trifling or inconsiderable proof of the Divine origin of the sacred writings.

The capacity, or interior space, being about one million and a half of cubic feet, it has been ingeniously demonstrated that ample accommodation existed for all the animals which would be required to preserve their species, and also for the food and forage to be consumed by them in one year, as well as for the sustenance of Noah and his companions.

The remainder of the plan was only this, "a window shall thou make in the Ark and in a cubit shall thou finish it (the Ark) above (the window) with lower, second, and third stories shall thou make it! Thus did the Great Artificer, the Grand Geometrician, deign to prescribe by line and measure the form and dimensions of that marvellous vessel which was to contain the whole living world—

"Of mankind, so numerous late,
All left in one small bottom swam embarked,"
and to give to the desolated earth, the stock from which her beauteous and luxuriant surface should be re-peopled and re-animated to the end of time.

Independent of the historical details conveyed in the Pentateuch, there can be no doubt that a knowledge of the construction and building of the Ark had been preserved, and that in the sacred and secret mysteries of all nations, the events connected with the tradition of an universal deluge, the preservation of the human race in a vessel of some sort, and the eventual emergence therefrom into a new world and a new life, were typified and illustrated in the rites and ceremonies of initiation. The word VAOS, or Navis, Nave, (applied to the body of a temple or church), is one proof of the idea of a ship attaching to a building consecrated to the celebration and performance of sacred rites and ceremonies.

I may now pass on and endeavour, without encroaching within the line of our landmarks, to point out some very remarkable particulars in which a Masonic lodge resembles this Ark of Noah—as also to make reference to some symbolic allusions which are capable of Masonic interpretation.

There is a strong similitude between a modern lodge and this ancient vessel :—

1st. In form.

2nd. In closeness.

3rd. In exclusiveness.

4th. In being a temple.

5th. In being an asylum.

6th. Also an enclosure containing all mankind.

7th. In being found among all nations.

8th. In sending forth its emissaries to return in peace; and

Lastly. In restoring to the world those it has for a time held concealed within its walls, fraught with the traditionary learning of former ages, and prepared to raise an altar for the offering up of praise and thanksgiving to the Creator and Preserver.

Now with regard to the form of the Ark, little doubt can exist but that it was a right-angled parallelogram; and that such is the required ground plan of all rightly constituted lodges, is well known to our youngest apprentices.

The closeness of a lodge should be such as even at times to render it impervious to the light. In the construction of Masonic halls, the windows should be either in the roof of the building or at least very high from the floor. The Helvetian ritual prescribes that the lower part of the window should be seven and a half feet from the surface of the floor, thus effectually impeding all communication or observation from without or within.

In admitting none but its qualified and appointed tenants, its exclusiveness was the very model and counterpart of a lodge. Noah himself guarding the approach, keeping away all intruders, and tiling the entrance against all those whom the G.A.O.T.U. the High and Mighty Master of the Grand Lodge above had proved cowards and unfit for admission within that hallowed circle, where alone the accepted and the initiated might rest in security and peace.

"Of God observed,

The one just man alive,"

The Ark was a Temple designed by the Grand Geometrician himself, wherein the whole human race was gathered together, to render thanks and adoration for the manifold mercies of the Most High, their Maker, Saviour and Sanctifier, and to mark with dutiful observance that sacred day in which Jehovah had rested from the work of creating all things. For God said to Noah, when the building of the Ark was completed, "yet seven days and I will cause it to rain upon the earth, forty days and forty nights," or six times seven in even numbers; and so it came to pass, after one hundred and fifty days, or twenty one times seven, the waters were abated, and the Ark rested, on the seventh month, on the seventeenth day of the month, upon the mountain of Ararat in Armenia. And it came to pass at the end of forty days, that Noah opened the window of the Ark, which he had made, and he sent forth a Raven and then a Dove, which returned to him and he staid yet another seven days, and again sent forth that "surer messenger" the Dove, which returned to him with evidences that vegetable life was again appearing, and the face of nature revealing itself. Yet another seven days he tarried, and then the emblem of peace and purity—embodiment of the spirit of God which descended on Him, who for our transgressions took on Himself the mortal form of a man—was permitted to wing its flight from that retreat which had so long been its haven of refuge, and returned not again to the expectant Patriarch any more. Can this singular repetition of the seventh day be accidental? No, in each case we may rest assured that Noah enquired of the Lord on the day specially dedicated to His Service, and was answered. So will every good Mason observe the statutes and ordinances of his God, and so shall his prayer be heard when the waters of sickness or affliction come in even to his soul. So will he be enabled, like Faithful when he had shaken off shame, to sing.

The trials that those men do meet withal,

That are obedient to the heavenly call,

Are manifold and suited to the flesh,

And come, and come, and come again afresh;

That now, or sometime else, we by them may

Be taken, overcome and cast away.

O, let the pilgrims, let the pilgrims, then

Be vigilant and quit themselves like men.

The Ark was an asylum from the anger of an offended Deity, most justly pouring down destruction on those, every imagination of the thoughts of whose heart was only evil continually. And if any credit is to be attached to the details given in the book of the Prophecy of Enoch, a work quoted by St. Jude in his Epistle v. 14, and 15, the wickedness of the world at that time much have surpassed all that ever before or has since existed, for we read that 200

"Of that race of men, whose lives Religious titled them the Sons of God," descended on Mount Arnon, and chose themselves wives from the daughters of the earth-born, to whom they taught sorcery, and incantations, and ungodliness. From these alliances giants were born who were each 300 cubits high. These when they had devoured all the produce of the earth, began to eat men, beasts, birds, and fishes, to drink their blood and to commit every species of profanation and sin.

"All turned degenerate, all depraved," naturally arousing the attention of the Almighty, who beheld that the world he had created with so much care—to be the abode of beings whose sole thoughts and ideas should be directed to his praise and glorification—had become the theatre of all impurity and corruption—

"The dismal situation, waste and wild," presenting nought but,

"Regions of sorrow, doleful shade—

All flesh corrupting each their way—

A world devote to universal wrack."

And thus so long as we love the Lord our God with all our heart and our neighbour as ourselves we shall be protected and sustained though destruction beset us on every side; for do we not in token of the same ever behold,

"A dewy cloud, and in the cloud a bow

Conspicuous with three listed colours gay,

Betokening peace from God and covenant

new."

Within the compass of the Ark, eight persons, the only surviving remnant of the antediluvian world, were instructed, nourished, and preserved, and thus within the Masonic lodge, which in its capacity has no limits but those of the terrestrial globe, may be included all mankind at the present day; that is all those who are qualified and desire to be received into its comprehensive pale, therein are they nourished by faith and encouraged by hope, that sweet and sacred emotion so well described by an eloquent French writer:

"L'espérance, cette planche que Dieu jette au milieu de tous les naufrages, à laquelle le naufragé peut toujours se cramponner un instant, et pendant cet instant croire encore à la vie: l'espérance, cette dernière et inépuisable monnaie du cœur avec laquelle votre pauvre nature humaine achète sa dernière émotion."

therein—

"By Faith directed and confirmed by Hope they survey

Dawnings of beams and promises of day," till finally they reach the third and final step at the summit of the Masonic ladder.

"Then constant Faith and holy hope shall die,

One lost in certainty, and one in joy:

Whilst thou, more happy power, fair Charity,

Triumphant sister, greatest of the three,

Thy office, and thy nature still the same,

Lasting thy lamp and unconsumed thy flame

Shall still survive—

Shall stand before the hosts of Heav'n confest

For ever blessing and for ever blest.

The Ark itself continued in existence for many years, and bore testimony to the truth of the Mosaic narrative, as is expressly affirmed by several authors of antiquity; and that the memorials of it are to be found in almost all nations, as has been already stated, is well known to those who have studied the literature of Masonry. I may here, in confirmation, quote what Mr. George Smith writes respecting the account of the Deluge which he has lately deciphered from the Assyrian monuments, he says:—The Cuneiform inscription which I have recently found and translated gives a long and full account of the Deluge. It contains the version or tradition of this event which existed in the early Chaldean period at the city of Erech (one of the cities of Nimrod) now represented by the ruins of Warka. In this newly discovered inscription the account of the Deluge is put as a narrative into the mouth of Xisuthrus, or Noah. He relates the wickedness of the world, the command to build the Ark, its building, the filling of it, the Deluge, the resting of the Ark on a mountain, the sending out of the birds and other matters. The narrative has a closer resemblance to the account transmitted by the Greeks from Berosus, the Chaldean historian, than to the Biblical history, but it does not differ materially from either; the principal differences are as to the duration of the Deluge, the name of the mountain on which the Ark rested, the sending out of the birds, &c.

NOTES ON THE ORDERS OF THE TEMPLE AND HOSPITAL.

BY EMRA HOLMES 31.^o

Preceptor Prudence Preceptory, Knights Templar, Prior Prudence Priory, Knights of Malta; Grand Provost of England.

According to promise I now publish the two documents respecting the Emperor Alexander and the Sacred Council, from which it will be made abundantly manifest that I was not so far wrong in describing the Knights of St. John as a Papal Order. The correspondence being now closed, I have only to say, in reply to the last paragraph of Bro. Lupus's article of the 29th, that I had very excellent authority for the statement I made respecting Prince Albert, and that again I assert that by the mere fact of his joining the Roman Catholic Order, and not joining the English Langue subsequently, when it was formed, he in substance ignored and repudiated the Protestant body.

Proclamation of the Emperor Alexander, appointing Count Soltikoff Lieutenant of the Grand Master.

We Alexander I, by the grace of God &c., being desirous of giving a proof of our particular esteem and affection towards the Sovereign Order of St. John of Jerusalem, declare that we take the said Order under our Imperial protection, and that we will employ every possible care and attention to maintain it in all its rights, honours, privileges, and possessions.

For this purpose we command and ordain that our General, Field-Marshal, Bailiff, Count de Soltikoff should continue to exercise the functions and authority of Lieutenant of the Grand Master of the said Order, and convene a sitting of the Sacred Council to make known our intention that the Imperial residence should be still regarded as the chief seat of the Sovereign Order of St. John of Jerusalem, until such time as circumstances shall permit the election of a Grand Master, according to the ancient forms and statutes. In the interim, we ordain, in our quality of protector, that the Sacred Council shall have the government of the Order, and shall make known to all the langues and priories this our determination, inviting that at the same time, for their own proper interest, they submit to the decrees issued by the said Council. We confirm, by this present declaration, our two Grand Russian and Catholic priories, established in our empire in the enjoyment of the property, privileges, and administration already bestowed on them; and it is our will and pleasure that they should be governed in our name of protector, by the Lieutenant of the Mastership, our General, Field-Marshal, Bailiff, Count Nicholas de Soltikoff.

The first moment that, in concert with other Courts, means can be found, and a proper place fixed upon, to convene a General Chapter of the Sovereign Order of St. John of Jerusalem, the first effects of our protection will be, to procure a Grand Master to be elected who shall be worthy to preside over the Order and to re-establish it as formerly.

Given at our Imperial residence of St. Petersburg, on the 16th of March, 1801, in the first year of our reign.

(Signed) ALEXANDER.
(Countersigned) The Grand Chancellor,
COUNT DE PABLUS.

Decree of the Sacred Council of the Sovereign Order of St. John of Jerusalem, in accordance with the preceding Proclamation.

In order to contribute as soon as possible to the restoration of a Grand Master, and the primitive Constitution to the Order of St. John of Jerusalem, the Sovereign Council of the said Order, in the meeting of the 22nd of June, 1801, has inquired into the form of convocation for a General Chapter, and finds that the Statutes are as follows upon the subject:—

"A General Chapter must consist of the Grand Master, the Bishop of Malta, the Prior of the Church, the Conventual Bailiffs or Pillars of the Languages, the Grand Priors or Capitular Bailiffs who have a decisive vote, a Solicitor for the Knights of each language, and a Solicitor for the Commanders of each Priory. The Sovereign Council, in consideration that all the elements of a general chapter are dispersed, and knowing that in the present situation of things, it would be impossible to assemble them, according to the form expressed in the Statutes, has resolved to adopt a mode of election which shall differ as little as possible from the ancient one, prevent delay, spare the priories all unnecessary expense and inconvenience, and immediately fix upon a chief for the Sovereign Order, to govern it and to take possession of the Island of Malta whenever circumstances shall make it possible to do so:—

For this purpose, the Sovereign Council enjoins all the Grand Priors immediately to convene their Chapters, and to carry before them the following propositions:—

1st.—The Provincial Chapter shall mark out among the professed Knights of every language, those whom they think most capable of filling the dignity of Grand Master with due courage and firmness. The Grand Priors shall acquaint the Sovereign Council as soon as possible with this opinion, that a list may be formed by all the different priories of those who are candidates for the Grand Mastership.

2nd.—The Council proposes to send this list to the Court of Rome and his Holiness, as Supreme Chief of the Romish Church, and as superior of all religious orders, shall be entreated to select a Grand Master from among the candidates; specifying at the same time that this is only to be the case on this one occasion, and without derogating in any degree from the rights and privileges of the Sovereign Order.

His Holiness shall also be requested to notify this election to all Catholic countries by a Pontifical Brief, commanding the Knights to obey the Grand Master thus chosen, according to the statutes of holy obedience.

All the Sovereign Chapters shall be summoned by their Grand Priors to declare their opinions formally and with precision, on the question of referring to the Pope to elect a Grand Master from the number of professed Knights pointed out by the different priories. By these means the Order will be assured of having a Grand Master of its own choice, and from among its own members; and the Sovereign Council may proceed with confidence, according to the wishes and opinions of all the Capitular Chapters. Moreover, the Sovereign Council represents to all the Grand Priors, that it is more important than ever to employ all their authority and prudence to prevent every kind of division and intrigue, to choose a candidate truly worthy of the sovereign command, endowed with the necessary qualities to make the Order of general utility, and to restore a severe discipline.

Lastly, the Sovereign Council has in its wisdom judged that this was the only method to conciliate the members in general, to avoid all pretences for schisms, and to unite all the scattered members of the Order of St. John of Jerusalem.

Given at St. Petersburg, the 20th day of July, 1801.

PROVINCIAL GRAND MARK LODGE OF KENT.

A special meeting of this Provincial Grand Mark Lodge was held at Hiscocks' Royal Hotel, Ramsgate, on Friday, the 14th inst.

There were present the R.W. Bros. the Rev. Geo. Sickleman, M.A., Prov. G.M.M.M.; T. H. Grove Snowdon, Dep. Pro. G.M.M.M.; R. J. Emmerson, S.W.; S. G. Fairlough, P.M. 152, J.W.; D. S. Osment, W.M. 152, S.O.; H. Wootton, J.O.; Lewis Finch, W.M. 129, Treasurer; James W. Smith, G.M. Steward, Secretary; Thomas S. Clarke, Assistant Secretary; Wm. T. C. Harrison, J.D.; Edward J. Smith, D.C.; John Finch, A.D.C.; George Page, Sword Bearer; and George Menger, Tyler. Bros. George Neall, G.M.J. Works, Fuhr, J.W. 152, and other brethren attended.

A procession of Prov. G.M. Officers was formed at a little before 3 o'clock, and entered the spacious lodge room. The R.W. Prov. G.M.M. ascended the throne, and the door being properly tyled, Prov. Grand Mark Lodge was opened in due form, and with solemn prayer. The Prov. G.M.M. and Deputy Master were saluted with five and three respectively.

The minutes of the meeting held on the 22nd day of October last having been read and confirmed, the Secretary read Sec. 60 of the Book of Constitutions, which empowers Prov. Grand Mark Lodge to make bye-laws for its government.

The Secretary then read the bye-laws which had been prepared by him, making a pause at the end of each.

Considerable discussion followed upon two or three points, and amendments were made. Some divergence of opinion was manifested as to the bye-law providing that the Treasurer should, when required, execute a Bond with two sureties some considering that the Treasurer should positively be required by the bye-law to do so, so that the onus of proposing, at a future time, that a Bond should be entered into, should not fall upon any member of Prov. Grand Mark Lodge, while others thought that a Bond was unnecessary, and that the question might, at least for the present, be altogether omitted from the bye-law. Eventually it was agreed that the Treasurer should enter into a Bond with one Surety.

The remainder of the bye-laws were read, and the whole passed unanimously, as amended.

Bros. Wootton and Page were then appointed Auditors, and Bros. Neall, Emmerson, Fairlough, and Hiscocks to act, with the Prov. G.M. Master, the Deputy Master, the Treasurer, the Registrar, and the Secretary, as a Committee of General Purposes.

The roll of private Mark lodges and that of Prov. G.M. Officers were then called over.

Bro. Fairlough suggested that a certificate on vellum should, when desired, be granted by the Prov. G.M.M. to any brother who may have served the office of Master, Warden or Overseer, or been appointed to any office in Prov. Grand Mark Lodge. He thought that such a certificate might be found very useful to a brother removing at any time from one province to another. The question was referred to the Committee of General Purposes.

Prov. Grand Mark Lodge was closed in due form.

The brethren then adjourned to the banquetting hall of the hotel, and an excellent dinner was served by Bro. Hiscocks.

Numerous toasts were proposed and heartily responded to, and the brethren having spent a most agreeable evening, separated at an early hour.

The Votes and Interest of the Governors and Subscribers are earnestly solicited on behalf of CROSBY'S BAL SAMIC COUGH ELIXIR. DISEASES OF THE LUNGS AND AIR-VESSELS. CROSBY'S BALSAMIC COUGH ELIXIR.

Opiates, Narcotics, and Squills are too often invoked to give relief in Coughs, Colds, and all Pulmonary diseases. Instead of such fallacious remedies, which yield momentary relief at the expense of enfeebling the digestive organs, and thus increasing that debility which lies at the root of the malady, modern science points to CROSBY'S BALSAMIC COUGH ELIXIR as the true remedy.

SELECT TESTIMONIAL.

Dr. Rooke, Scarborough, author of the "Anti-Lancet," says: "I have repeatedly observed how very rapidly and invariably it subdued cough, pain, and irritation of the chest in cases of Pulmonary Consumption, and I can, with the greatest confidence, recommend it as a most valuable adjunct to an otherwise strengthening treatment for this disease."

This medicine, which is free from opium and squills, not only allays the local irritation, but improves digestion and strengthens the constitution. Hence it is used with the most signal success in Asthma, Bronchitis, Consumption, Coughs, Influenza, Night Sweats of Consumption, Quinsey, and all affections of the throat and chest. Sold in bottles at 1s. 6d., 4s. 6d., and 11s. each, by all respectable Chemists, and wholesale by Jas. M. Crosby, Chemist, Scarborough. * * * Invaders should read Crosby's Prize Treatise on "Diseases of the Lungs and Air-Vessels," a copy of which can be had Gratis of all Chemists.

YOUNG'S ARNICATED CORN AND BUNION PLAISTERS are the best ever invented for giving immediate ease, and removing those painful excruciations. Price 6d. and 1s. per box. May be had of most chemists. Observe the trade mark.—HY—without which none are genuine. Be sure and ask for YOUNG'S.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE.

THE ORIGINAL AND ONLY GENUINE.

CHLORODYNE is admitted by the Profession to be the most wonderful and valuable remedy ever discovered.

CHLORODYNE is the best remedy known for Coughs, Consumption, Bronchitis, Asthma.

CHLORODYNE effectually checks and arrests those too often fatal diseases—Diphtheria, Fever, Croup, Ague.

CHLORODYNE acts like a charm in Diarrhoea, and is the only specific in Cholera and Dysentery.

CHLORODYNE effectually cuts short all attacks of Epilepsy, Hysteria, Palpitation and Spasms.

CHLORODYNE is the only palliative in Neuralgia, Rheumatism, Gout, Cancer, Toothache, Meningitis, &c.

From Lord FRANCIS CONYNHAM, Mount Charles, Donegal, 11th December, 1868.

"Lord Francis Conynham, who this time last year bought some of Dr. J. Collis Browne's Chlorodyne from Mr. Davenport, and has found it a most wonderful medicine, will be glad to have half a dozen bottles sent at once to the above address.

"Earl Russell communicated to the College of Physicians that he had received a dispatch from Her Majesty's Consul at Manilla, to the effect that Cholera had been raging fearfully, and that the ONLY remedy of any service was CHLORODYNE."—See Lancet, Dec. 1, 1864.

From W. VERSALIUS PETTIGREW, M.D., Hon. F.R.C.S. England;

Formerly Lecturer on Anatomy and Physiology at St. George's School of Medicine.

"I have no hesitation in stating, after a fair trial of Chlorodyne, that I have never met with any medicine so efficacious as an Anti-spasmodic and Sedative. I have used it in Consumption, Asthma, Diarrhoea, and other diseases, and am most perfectly satisfied with the results."

From Dr. THOMAS SANDIFORD, Passage West, Cork.

"I will thank you to send me a further supply of Chlorodyne. It was the most efficacious remedy I ever used, affording relief in violent attacks of Spasms within a minute after being taken. One patient in particular, who had suffered for years with periodical attacks of Spasms of a most painful nature, and unable to obtain relief from other remedies, such as Opium, &c., finds nothing so prompt and efficacious as Chlorodyne."

From J. M'GARGOR CROFT, M.D., M.R.C.P. London, late Staff Surgeon to H.M.F.

"Sir,—After prescribing Dr. J. Collis Browne's Chlorodyne for the last three years in severe cases of Neuralgia and Tic-Doloureux, I feel that I am in a position to testify to its valuable effects. Really, in some cases it acts like a charm, when all other means had failed. Without being asked for this report, I must come forward and state my candid opinion that it is a most valuable medicine, and I have recommended several Chemists in this neighbourhood not to be without it for prescriptions."

From Jno. E. GOULSTONE, M.D., late Principal Surgeon to the Steamship "Great Eastern."

"I can confidently state that Chlorodyne is an admirable Sedative and Anti-Spasmodic, having used it in Neuralgia, Hysteria, Asthma, and Consumption, with remarkably favourable results. It relieved a fit of Asthma in four minutes, where the patient had suffered eleven years in a most distressing manner, no previous remedy having had so immediate and beneficial an effect."

From Dr. B. J. BOULTON, and Co., Newcastle.

"We have made pretty extensive use of Chlorodyne in our practice lately, and look upon it as an excellent direct Sedative and Anti-spasmodic. It seems to allay pain and irritation, in whatever organ and from whatever cause. It induces a feeling of comfort and quietude not obtainable by any other remedy, and it seems to possess this great advantage over all other sedatives, that it leaves no unpleasant after effects."

J. C. BAKER, Esq., M.D., Bideford.

"It is, without doubt, the most valuable and certain Anodyne we have."

CAUTION.—BEWARE OF PIRACY AND IMITATIONS.

CAUTION.—Vice-Chancellor Sir W. Page Wood stated that Dr. J. Collis Browne was undoubtedly the Inventor of CHLORODYNE; that the story of the defendant, Freeman, was deliberately untrue, which, he regretted to say, had been sworn to.—See Times, 13th July, 1864.

Sold in Bottles at 1/1 1/2, 2/9, 4/6, and 11/0 each. None is genuine without the words "Dr. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE" on the Government Stamp. Overwhelming Medical Testimony accompanies each Bottle.

PROSPECTUS.

The Surrey Masonic Hall Company has been formed with the object of providing a Building specially adapted to the requirements of Masonic Lodges, Chapters, and Conclaves, held in the South Metropolitan District; and in connection therewith, a large Hall, for the general use of the public when not engaged for Masonic purposes.

This project has met with the approval of Brethren high in the Craft, and been very favourably received at the several Public Meetings that have been held.

The Site for the Building is in the Camberwell New Road, lying between the Post Office and the County Court, close to the Station of the London, Chatham, and Dover Railway, and to the Tramways from Brixton, Vauxhall, Westminster, Blackfriars, Peckham, and Greenwich. It possesses a frontage of about 70 feet, with a depth of about 150, and has been secured for a term of Ninety-nine Years, at a very low Ground-rent. The plans have been prepared by a well-known Architect and Member of the Craft, and embrace every convenience that long experience could possibly suggest.

The propriety of holding Masonic Meetings in buildings devoted to the purpose is universally acknowledged by the Craft, and the advantages have been fully proved in many provincial towns where Masonic Halls have been erected. It will also supply a want, long felt in this neighbourhood, of a commodious Public Building.

Although the chief object of the Company is to promote the good of Freemasonry, the Directors are of opinion, from estimates carefully prepared, that the Shareholders will also derive a very fair return in a commercial point of view. They therefore, with full confidence, invite the active support of their Brethren. A large number of shares have already been subscribed for.

The estimated annual expenditure for Ground-rent, Taxes, Gas, Coals and sundries about £200.

The estimated annual receipts from Lodges, Chapters, Lodges of Instruction, Conclaves, &c., including rent of Wine cellars, about £220; and from rental of Hall for Concerts, Public Meetings, &c., about £300. And the estimated cost of building and furnishing the Hall, capable of accommodating about 700 persons, in addition to spacious Masonic Rooms, from £2,500 to £3,000, thus shewing 10 per cent, interest on the capital. The Directors, however, fairly anticipate a larger return from public lettings.

The Company is registered under Table A of the Companies Act, 1862. A copy of the Memorandum of Association can be seen at the Offices of the Company.

O'Leary and Brown, candidates for the M.M. degree, were then examined respecting their proficiency in the former degree, which proving satisfactory, they were entrusted, and retired. The lodge was opened in the third degree, and Bros. O'Leary and Brown were raised to that sublime degree. The lodge was closed down to the second and first degrees. Bros. Drew, Harper, and Munro signed their Grand Lodge Certificates, which were then presented to them by the W.M. The sum of half a guinea was voted to the widow of a military brother, A. ballot was then taken for a life subscribership in one of the Masonic Charities by the subscribers to the Charitable Association in connection with the lodge. Bro. Brown was the winner—and he selected the Boys' Institution, to which Bro. Carnegie was requested to forward the amount; five guineas. This is the first fruits of the Charitable Association, for which a prosperous career is anticipated. The votes of the lodge for the Girls' School were directed to be given for the daughter of a deceased military brother—Bro. Thompson. On the motion of Bro. Carnegie the resignation of Bro. Dillon was accepted. A candidate for initiation was proposed by Bro. Coleman, P.M. and seconded by Bro. Carnegie, P.M. OLD MASONIC BOOKS.

May I be allowed in this interesting column, lately revived by our good brother, "The Masonic Student," to ask for a certified copy of a warrant issued by the Grand Lodge of England prior to A.D. 1726. Some important matters depend greatly as to the wording of such documents, and not having such a transcript, the publication of one or more, in these pages, will be esteemed a favour by many, and especially so by, WM. JAS. HUGHAN.

Original Correspondence.

PROVINCIAL GRAND LODGE OF WEST YORKSHIRE.

To the Editor of The Freemason.

Dear Sir and Brother,—

Under this heading, I observe in your impression of the 5th April, an account of the meeting of Mark P.G. Lodge for W. Yorkshire. When I first noticed this heading in your columns, I concluded at once that the paragraph related to the real and undoubted "Provincial Grand Lodge of W. Yorkshire."

Let me then enter a respectful protest against a practice far too common just now—that of appropriating and adopting names to which persons, and even associations, have no possible right whatever.

It is altogether a misnomer to call this assembly of Mark Masons the "Provincial Grand Lodge of West Yorkshire."

As an old provincial officer of W. Yorkshire, I beg, in your columns, to call the attention of the brethren concerned, in all good feeling and fraternal sympathy, to so great a forgetfulness of Masonic propriety and etiquette.

There is only one "Provincial Grand Lodge of W. Yorkshire," presided over by our M.E. Grand Master, and of which the V.W. Bro. Huntley Shaw is the effective Deputy.

I am, dear Sir and Brother,
A.P.P.G.O. for W. Yorkshire.

ROYAL ARCH CEREMONIES.

To the Editor of The Freemason.

Dear Sir and Brother,—

Will you kindly inform me, through the medium of your columns, on the following points:—

1st. When addressing the Z. in open Chapter, is it proper to say "Most Excellent" or simply "Excellent?" And is it correct to say on the summons "By command of the M.E.Z.," or "By command of the Excellent Principals?"

2nd. In a certain portion of Craft work, the words "with the centre" are used in some lodges, while in others, the preposition is "in." Which is right? Should the preceding question commence with "How" or "Where" do you expect, &c.

I am, Dear Sir and Brother,

Yours fraternally,
CHESHIRE.

THE "PROVINCE OF CORNWALL" AND BRO. H.

To the Editor of The Freemason.

Dear Sir and Brother,—

If our Bro. H. will refer to the report of the meeting of the Province of Cornwall, in the Freemason (No. 211), he will find that the business was almost exclusively to decide on certain laws to regulate the Cornwall Masonic Annuity and Benevolent Fund. The only matters else which occupied the attention of the members were—(a) propositions respecting the very kind vote of condolence from the Province of Devon, and (b) the election of the Prov. G. Treasurer. The Prov. G.M. Designate, the Rt. Hon. the Earl of Mount Edgcumbe, did not attend the Prov. G.L., but the R.W. Brother presided over a private meeting of the brethren, preparatory to the holding of the Prov. G.L., at which all the business was virtually transacted, but which was subsequently formally duly proposed, seconded, and carried (seriatim) by the members composing the Prov. G. Lodge. It is, therefore, a fact that His Lordship did not attend the Prov. G. Lodge at all, but it was held by his D. Prov. Grand Master, who has been so appointed by the present Prov. G. Master, as well as by our lamented R. W. Bro. Augustus Smith. I am informed that Bro. Reginald Rogers has been regularly registered in Grand Lodge, and is therefore entitled to act in such a capacity. Our esteemed Prov. G. M. was anxious to have our charity laws passed, so that we, as a province, may at once be able to grant aid when required, and hence his lordship's laudable anxiety not to keep the members waiting until his installation, about the autumn of this year. The Prov. G.M. considered that the law, ably described by our friend Bro. H., meant that he (the Prov. G.M.) should "be installed at the first Prov. G.L. which he may hold after his appointment" but not necessarily the first P.G.L. held after his appointment, because he need not hold it, but his deputy might. On this ground the Prov. G. L. was held, and as the Prov. G.M. did not attend, he cannot be said, strictly speaking, to have held it. I am not myself clear on the point, but rather incline to the belief that the province, Masonically speaking, does not exist until the installation of the Prov. G.M. is an accomplished fact. The only thing is, if the D. Prov. G.M. was allowed to be registered, that brother was right in holding the Prov. G.L. I shall be glad to know authentically when the Prov. G.L. commences to really exist under circumstances such as Prov. G.L. of Cornwall.—W. J. HUGHAN.

MUSICAL RITUAL.

To the Editor of The Freemason.

Dear Sir and Brother,—

Your impression of The Freemason for Saturday, March 29th, having fallen into my hands, and a letter therein having attracted my attention, permit me through the medium of your wide circulation to endorse the observations of your correspondent's suggestive communication.

This letter, to which I would again draw your readers' attention, bears the signature of that distinguished musician, Bro. Dr. Wm. Spark, who has done so much for, and is still labouring in the cause of, Masonic Music, and alludes to "the introduction of suitable music into our various Masonic ceremonies. He has, for some time past, taken up, in an intelligent and noble spirit, and brought to bear upon this hitherto somewhat neglected branch of Masonry in this country—with all the genius of his great abilities—the consolidation, into one admirable work of the highest class, of vocal and instrumental music applicable for all our Masonic ceremonies in the lodge, in the Church, at the refreshment, as well as at the banquet table.

In his magnificent collection, "The Freemason's Liber Musicus," now in course of publication, the Craft have, for the first time in their history, a musical work worthy of their "Order," and which enjoins the cultivation of music, amongst the six other liberal arts and sciences, as one of the especial studies to every Fellow Craft Freemason upon his passing the second degree.

Hitherto I have frequently—either as a W.M., or as Installing Master, or attending at the consecration of a lodge, or the ceremony of laying some foundation stone, or as a visiting brother to some one or other of the numerous lodges in the provinces—felt the urgent necessity of some fixed but classical standard of music, recognised by the Craft generally to be used, instead of the voluntary selections, often most unsuitable, if not trashy and vulgar, which have marred, rather than given sublime dignity to, our beautiful rites and ceremonies.

To Dr. Spark, the brethren of the Province of West Yorkshire are greatly indebted for his noble collection of the compositions of the best masters (as also for contributions of his own) into one homogenous work of glees, duets, songs, and also instrumental melodies either for the organ, harmonium, or pianoforte, peculiarly applicable to all occasions of the solemn or festive gatherings of the Craft.

The lodges of this province are paying the highest tribute to Dr. Spark's genius and labours in taking up this matter of the introduction of good music in an earnest spirit, by making, the "Liber Musicus" the foundation of their musical programmes at all their important meetings, and which will "tend to sublimate their workings in a manner unknown in this country."

So highly did the St. Oswald's Lodge appreciate the labours of this talented brother, that last October, on the occasion of the laying the foundation stone of a new church near Pontefract (promoted entirely by the Freemasons), by the Most W. Grand Master of England, and P.G.M., of West Yorkshire that the music from the "Liber Musicus" was performed exclusively. Hardly any composition could be more touching or more solemnly appropriate, when the upper stone was being slowly raised and the lower one adjusted, than the music and the ode which the choir sung:—

"Round the spot, Moriah's Hill, Masons meet with cheerful will;
Him who ruled as king that day,
We as cheerfully obey;
Lord we love Thy glorious name,
Give the grace Thou gavest him."

It is as an ardent admirer of good classical music myself—and warmly wishing that English Provincial Lodges would take up Dr. Spark's efforts, by following the example of Continental lodges, in the introduction into their home ritual of tasteful, classical music—that I have ventured to trespass on your columns in bearing my testimony to the great value I attach to Dr. Spark's "Liber Musicus," in the hope that every lodge in this kingdom may be induced to adopt his excellent music also.

I remain, yours respectfully and fraternally,
P. T. W. PEW, P.M., P.Z.,
P.S.G.W. Province of West Yorkshire.

PRESENTATION TO BRO. JAS. A. GORE OF NORWICH.

NORWICH.—Some few weeks since, Mr. James A. Gore, the well-known cutler in the Haymarket, attended a Masonic lodge in this city, by invitation, and was very rudely treated by a brother of the Mystic Craft; indeed the insult was so unwarranted that several brethren at once took the matter up and placed the whole circumstances before the Provincial Grand Lodge; and as that body has it now sub judice, no doubt justice will be done. Meanwhile, these said brethren—foremost among whom we may note Mr. James S. Olford—determined on salving the wounded feelings of their brother with a substantial expression of their sympathy; and on Monday the 31st ult., they met at the Rampant Horse Hotel, where, after partaking of a splendid banquet, such as Host George only can serve, the "expression"—in the shape of a huge silver goblet—passed into the hands of Bro. Gore. It was richly gilt, elegantly chased (Arabesque pattern), had a cover to match, stood 17 inches in height, weighed over 500z., and bore the following inscription:—"Presented to James A. Gore, by some of his brother Masons, in token of their esteem for him as a Mason and their regard for him as a friend. March 31, 1873." The subscribers' names, engrossed and framed, accompanied the gift. A novel feature in the affair was that to each subscriber was given a faithful photo of the cup, as a memento. To judge of its capacity, four quart bottles of champagne were emptied into the loving cup, which was replenished again and again at the expense of its generous recipient. Bro. Loftus (P.M. 93) very kindly attended from Braconash, and made a capital chairman, faced by Bro. Baxter (W.M. 807), and supported by Bros. Gore, Olford, R. Baldry, P. Soman, (Norwich Argus), H. J. Martin, Buttifant, Lamb, Juler, G. Kersey, R. Colby, J. E. H. Watson, &c. Appropriate and deserved were the remarks of Bro. Olford in handing over the massive piece of plate, which, valued at 40 guineas, was subscribed for in about as many hours. So well respected was the cutler among the Craft in Norwich and London, that, had a house been fixed on for presentation, the cash would have been forthcoming. Bro. Gore made a feeling reply, and almost executed a break-down at its close. Song, toast, and jest, by turns, enlivened the social board, not one word being uttered that could have hurt the feelings of the most sensitive brother, present or absent; and high twelve came upon the convives almost unconsciously. The Host had, however, conciliated the "powers that be" by securing a two-hours "special," and the party did not break up till "the small hours ayant the twal," thus bringing a long March to a pleasant halt. Such a spontaneous and successful affair has seldom been known in this city. We shall take care to let our readers know in due time the result of inquiry referred to above.

MASONIC MUSINGS.

By BRO. J. BALFOUR COCKBURN, P.Z. 278.
Past Installed Mark Master, 43.

The Cuneiform account is much longer and fuller than that of Berosus, and has several details omitted both by the Bible and the Chaldean historian.

This inscription opens up many questions of which we know nothing previously, and it is connected with a number of other details of Chaldean history which will be both interesting and important. This is the first time any inscription has been found with an account of an event mentioned in Genesis.

That Masonry itself has, in fact, pervaded all people, nations, and languages, is obvious enough to those who have sought its traces. But it is no easy task to make the search with due patience and competent information, amidst the strange entangled heaps of superstitious material with which the pure and simple truth has been overlaid and disfigured, not less by many of the enlightened than by the most ignorant portions of the human race.

Doubtless the study is one commenced and prosecuted by many—but the journey is long, the path rough, the obstacles numerous, and many faint by the wayside. Many also, I fear, attain just so much insight into the subject that they remain satisfied with the reward afforded them by occasional glimpses of the truth, veiled behind the misty clouds of a sort of dreamland—led astray from the direct course, they allow their minds to wander unguided and unprotected into the shadowy and mysterious, permitting moments, alas, too alluring and too oft recurring, when—

*Each thought, as it forms and rises,
Is full of a solemn awe.
Wildly it breaks and scatters
The gems of a thousand more.
Onward and ever onward
The old thoughts lead to new,
Waking and fading together,
The false lights and the true.
Truths unrevealed show dimly
And pass with a fitful gleam,
The marks of the soul's great battles
Flit past like a misty dream.
Winding and changing quickly,
Clashing at times in strife.
Yet their bitterness all softened
By the spell of their Spirit-life.*

As Noah despatched the raven, the bird of ill-omen, and the dove, the emblem of Divine Grace, and put forth his hand to take back only the gentle creature which had found no resting place on which to set his foot, but when again sent forth to reconnoitre that terrible battle field—that wide-spread arena wherein the Almighty had permitted the elements of nature to mingle in one overwhelming and all-destroying conflict—brought back the symbol of peace; so should the brethren put out from among themselves all causes of discord and offence, and let the humility and modesty of their demeanour in communication, not only with themselves, but with the whole human race, evince the spirit by which they are actuated in the lodge—the spirit of brotherly love. Let them prove to the uninitiated that they quit not their respective stations till the olive branch has been produced and engrafted amongst them, and laid up like Aaron's rod, as a perpetual memorial in an Ark of Covenant. Let the remarks which fell from the lips of the Most Worshipful Grand Master, on a recent occasion, when laying the foundation stone of a church in the north of England, be ever borne in mind and instilled deeply into the hearts of all Masons; for within the compass of a few words was evolved a great—I might almost say the greatest truth of our Order. No apology is needed for repeating these remarks. "Although it was true," said his Lordship, "that no enquiry was made of those who sought admission to the Order of Freemasons as to their religious opinions; yet those greatly erred, if any there were, who supposed that that rule of their ancient and world-wide craft arose from indifference to religious subjects. The principles of the Order, high and noble as they believed them to be, could only be carried out by those who were aided by a higher grace than merely human institutions could supply. Their principles, he as proud to say, commended themselves to every one who believed in the Christian Faith; and for himself he could not doubt that those principles could only fully be applied by those who enjoyed Christian privileges. Therefore, although all religious differences were banished from Masonic lodges, they felt free to come forward upon this and all similar occasions, to aid in works which they knew were calculated to confer the highest blessings, spiritual and temporal, upon those for whose benefit they were designed."

To Noah and his sons had doubtless been communicated all the knowledge that had been acquired by Adam and the generations which had intervened, for as we have before shown, one link only existed between Adam and Noah. This precious fund which had been thus accumulated for the benefit of future ages, has not even now been exhausted, and we are permitted to partake largely of the stock. That there is nothing new under the sun is a proposition which might appear to be contradicted by the present state of science, and the constant marvellous discoveries, as they are called, which attract the attention and excite the wonder of the multitude. Still I am disposed to think that as the auriferous produce of our antipodean colonies was no less gold, while it lay concealed in its native matrix, than it is now, when it is brought to light by the avidity and labour of successful adventurers; so there is, and has always been, a mine of intellectual wealth, well known and largely worked by our ancient forefathers, which has and does still afford the most brilliant results, and as amply and justly rewards the diligent, the persevering, and the skilful. But yet we cannot say that this is new, otherwise than that it is new to us.

To Masons, as a body, belong especially the privilege and office of digging deeply into the golden grained veins of science, which were indisputably discovered, known, and turned to account by the members of our primitive Craft in various quarters of the globe. That mankind have been greatly indebted to their industry and talents is especially demonstrated by their acknowledged attainments in architecture and astronomy; in their sacred buildings, of all ages, since the days of Solomon, and in their knowledge of the heavens since the time of Pythagoras.

I must crave indulgence, I fear for, having dwelt so long upon the Ark. It is indeed a subject so fruitful of discussion as to render it difficult to draw to a conclusion.

Now, however, I will pass on to a contemplation of the first act of Noah, after he went out of the Ark, he, his wife, his three sons and their wives with him, and all the animals which had been miraculously brought together for the preservation of their kind. "And Noah builded an altar unto the Lord, and took every clean beast and of every clean fowl and offered burnt offerings on the altar."

Seven of each of these animals had been taken into the Ark and one of each was sacrificed, leaving three pairs to perpetuate their kind.

It is of some importance to discover of what materials altars were, by Divine command, constructed, as they were doubtless amongst the first of sacred erections. Now the altars mentioned in Scripture after that of Noah were the following. The one which Abraham built in Sichem, on the plain of Moreh, when the Lord called him out of Haran and bade him pass over to a land that he would show him. The one which Abraham also built when he removed "into a mountain on the east of Bethel." And again the one which he built after his separation from Lot when he "came and dwelt in the plain of Mamre, which is in Hebron."

When the holy Patriarch received that trying order to sacrifice his son Isaac, the heir of all the promises made to Abraham, when he was summoned away from Haran, he immediately set forward to obey it, and he came to the place which God had told him of and here he at once proceeded to build an altar. Nothing is recorded in any of the above instances with regard to the construction of the altars, but of their being essential to the proper modes of offering sacrifices as it had been originally appointed, I think, they give abundant proof.

In Exodus xx. 24-25, we read the following command respecting the construction of altars. "An altar of earth thou shalt make unto me, and shall sacrifice thereon thy burnt offerings, and if thou wilt make me an altar of stone, thou shalt not build it of hewn stone, for if thou lift up thy tool upon it, thou hast polluted it."

Moses commanded the people of Israel that on the day when they should pass over Jordan into the promised land, they should set up great stones and plaster them and write upon them the words of the law, and he added, "there shalt thou build an altar unto the Lord thy God, an altar of stones: thou shalt not lift up any iron tool upon them. Thou shalt build the altar of the Lord thy God of whole stones, and thou shalt offer burnt offering thereon unto the Lord thy God."

Now we perceive that it was God's will, for such wise and significant reasons as He might not be pleased to communicate, that altars created to His Name, should be of earth or unhewn stone; and there is the strongest presumption for believing that it had always been so. Abraham built the altar on Mount Moriah before he laid the wood and the victim on it—and that it was not constructed of wood, or of hewn stone is evident from the circumstances of the case—it must, then, have been of earth, or of unhewn stone, which corresponds with the direction afterwards explicitly given by God Himself and by His servant Moses. We may presume that altars were for many ages constructed of the most simple materials, because when they were first raised, we may with justice infer that no means of art existed for adorning them, and as they were originally formed by Divine direction, so it pleased the Almighty that they should continue, till the building of the tabernacle and the establishment of the Levitical ceremonies. No tool was permitted to be used in shaping and polishing the stones, for fear it might conduce, or be turned, to the purposes of idolatry, in the formation of graven images, or in the sculpture of figures and ornaments, all of which might divert the mind of the worshippers from the great objects of their vows and supplications. The regulation of this especial point we find strictly laid down in the 18th chapter of Deuteronomy.

The roughness of the work and the little time and pains required to rear a temporary altar would remind the patriarchs that till the chosen race should obtain possession of the promised land, they were to have no abiding city, but remain as strangers and pilgrims on the earth. That the primitive altar, imitated by pagans, and especially Plato, was highly emblematic and symbolical we cannot doubt, neither can we hesitate to credit, that the rough ashlar of which it was composed represented most fitly the then existing general state of the human mind as regarded the heavenly oracles; that its unpolished earthly materials typified the constituent parts of that holy altar of expiation, over which the gorgeous tissue of splendid promises and dark enigma was thus early thrown, as a spiritual veil, by the hand of the Most High Himself, evolving in after years that historic temple whose architectural interest is so intimately blended into many of our rites and ceremonies, and culminating eventually in the manifestation of that mighty altar, that great rock, in whose earthly portion alone the all-redeeming sacrifice was offered up, when the earth did quake, the rocks were rent, and the graves gave up their dead, forcing conviction on the minds of the cruel and bigoted unbelievers—who, in all the dread agony of cowardice and terror, with blanched and quivering lips, gasped forth "truly this was the Son of God." Now was the terrible tragedy completed, the veil of the temple was rent in twain, light was brought to those who sat in darkness, and salvation to all men.

"MR. JAMES BARNETT, Chemist, Birmingham, writes, June 18:—"Your Pain Killer is gaining many friends in this section. Among the many cures effected by it which have come under my notice, I may mention the case of a lady, who, after suffering from long neuralgia, and trying many reputed remedies without benefit, was at length cured, and that almost instantly, with the first application of your Pain Killer.—To Perry Davis & Son, London, W.C."

Knights Templar.

INSTALLATION OF H.R.H. THE PRINCE OF WALES AS GRAND MASTER OF THE UNITED ORDERS.

One of the grandest and most interesting Masonic festivals which have been celebrated in London for many years, took place at Willis's Rooms, on Monday, 7th inst., on the occasion of the union of the Grand Conclave of Masonic Knights Templar of England, and the Grand Conclave of High Knights Templars of Ireland, together with the installation of his Royal Highness the Prince of Wales as Grand Master of the United Orders.

Great interest was manifested in the event, and the muster of Knights was very large, including nearly all the Officers of the English Order, viz: Sir Knight William Stuart, Most Eminent and Supreme Grand Master; Sir Knight the Rev. J. Huyshe, M.A., Very High and Eminent Deputy Grand Master; Sir Knight Col. G. A. Vernon, Past Deputy Grand Master; Sir Knight Right Hon. Lord Skelmersdale, Grand Seneschal; Sir Knight Right Hon. the Earl of Limerick, Grand Prior; Col. C. Lyne, Grand Sub-Prior; Rev. E. Moore, M.A., Grand Prelate; C. R. N. Beswicke-Royds, First Grand Captain; Lieut.-Col. H. C. Fitzgerald, Second Grand Captain; Sir Patrick Colquhoun, Q.C., LL.D., Grand Chancellor; W. Tinkler, Grand Vice-Chancellor; Joseph Lavender, Grand Registrar; C. Goolden, M.A., Grand Treasurer; Lyons Wright, Grand Chamberlain; Rev. P.H. Newnham, Grand Hospitaller; J. Lambert Sim, Grand Director of Ceremonies; J. F. Starkey, Assistant Grand Director of Ceremonies; W. Hyde Pullen, Grand Superintendent of Works; F. W. H. Ramsay, M.D., Grand Constable; Emra Holmes, Grand Provost; Rev. C. Dowson, Grand Almoner; G. Lambert, Grand Warden of Regalia; J. R. Bramble, First Grand Expert; S. Rosenthal, Second Grand Expert; G. Jones, First Grand Standard Bearer, R. H. Hutchinson, Second Grand Standard Bearer; J. D. Moore, M.D., Third Grand Standard Bearer; A. C. Mott, Fourth Grand Standard Bearer; Sir Knight Preston J. Wallis, First Grand Aide-de-Camp; George Barton, Past First Grand Aide-de-Camp; J. Read, Second Grand Aide-de-Camp; E. Turner, First Grand Captain of Lines; J. Fletcher, Second Grand Captain of Lines; W. R. Maby, First Grand Herald; J. R. Poulter, Second Grand Herald; Wilhelm Ganz, Grand Organist; A. Horsfall, Grand Sword Bearer. The Grand Officers of the Irish Conclave are: His Grace Augustus Frederick Duke of Leinster, M.E. and Supreme Grand Master; Robert W. Shekleton, Deputy Grand Master; George Johnston, M.D., Grand Captain-General; Captain George Huband, Grand Marshal; John Ringland, M.D., Grand Treasurer; Chas. D. Walmisley, Recorder or Sec.; Rev. John J. MacSorley, Grand Prelate; Richard B. de Burgh, Grand Standard Bearer; Wm. J. O'Donovan, LL.D., Grand Sword Bearer; John A. Baker, Grand Senior A.D.C.; Capt A. Vesey Davoren, Grand Junior A.D.C.; Edward Hamilton, M.D., many of whom were in attendance. It is understood that only one knight of the Scottish order was present. Not unlikely there will be an endeavour made before long to unite the Scottish order of Knights Templar with the English and Irish, and His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales would then be invited to act as Grand Master of all.

At five o'clock a special Grand Priory of England was opened, after which the Great Prior of England Designate took his seat in the second circle below the dais, on the right hand of the Deputy Grand Master, the dais itself being left vacant. The Prince of Wales, who came in the most unostentatious manner, arrived about six o'clock, and was received by the Aides-de-Camp at the entrance. The following officers: the Grand Master Emeritus Stuart, the Past Deputy Grand Master and Sub-Prior of Ireland (R. W. Shekleton), the Deputy Grand Master (the Rev. John Huyshe), the Past Deputy Grand Master (Col. Vernon), and officers designate, the Great

Prior of England, the Seneschal, the Primate, the Arch-Chancellor, the Great Constable, the Great Marshal, the Arch-Registrar, his Royal Highness's Chamberlain, having left the Great Priory, adjourned to the Prince's private room to receive his Royal Highness. When the reception was over, these officers retired, except the Chamberlain, who remained for the purpose of robing the Prince. Shortly afterwards, notification was given to the Aides-de-Camp that the Grand Master Elect was ready. The Aides-de-Camp having announced to the Grand Priory the arrival of the Grand Master Elect, the Prince was conducted by the Great Officers Designate of Convent General, in inverted order, juniors first, to the Grand Priory. Their arrival at the Priory was announced by a great flourish of trumpets, and the doors having been thrown open, they proceeded under the Arch of Steel towards the dais, the organ playing the National Anthem. At this moment the scene was most striking. The Knights, wearing their mantles and swords and the insignia of their various offices, stood ranged in order from the doorway to the dais at the farther end of the room, with their swords raised and crossed. The room was hung with scarlet, decorated with innumerable banners, and brilliantly illuminated, the Sepulchre, with the cross, bearing the figure of our Saviour, being placed in the middle of the room. His Royal Highness was received on the dais by the Great Prior of Ireland, the Grand Master Emeritus of England, the Past Deputy Grand Master and Sub-Prior of Ireland, R. W. Shekleton; the Deputy Grand Master, the Rev. John Huyshe; the Deputy Grand Master Emeritus, Colonel Vernon. The Installing Officer on the throne having placed the Grand Master Elect on his right, the Grand Master Emeritus Stuart on his left, the Deputy Grand Master (the Rev. J. Huyshe) next the Prince, the Past Deputy Grand Master and Sub-Prior of Ireland, (R. W. Shekleton) next Grand Master Stuart, and the Past Deputy Grand Master (Colonel Vernon), next the Rev. J. Huyshe, the Installing Officer opened the Convent General, and called upon the Arch Registrar to read the statute of election. The Installing Officer then put the following questions to the Grand Master Elect:—

Installing Officer: Are you ready and willing to undertake the supreme government of these Orders in England and Ireland, and the dependencies of the British Crown?

His Royal Highness: I am.

Installing Officer: Will you observe all things that will promote the well-being and dignity thereof?

His Royal Highness: I will.

Installing Officer: Will you protect and uphold the same to the best of your ability?

His Royal Highness: I will.

Installing Officer: You will not acknowledge any superior, co-ordinate, or inferior jurisdiction?

His Royal Highness: I will not.

Installing Officer: You will not permit any authority or prerogative to be infringed?

His Royal Highness: I will not.

Installing Officer: You will uphold the Queen's supremacy?

His Royal Highness: I will.

Installing Officer: You will judge all equally without distinction of rank?

His Royal Highness: I will.

The Primate thereupon offered up the following prayer:

"O Lord, who ruleth the hearts of the greatest and humblest on earth, imbue this Thy servant and our Governor with a portion of Thy Divine grace, to the end that he may rule us aright, and, ever relying on Thy protection, he may glorify Thee in his works. Endow all those committed to his care with such a measure of Thy wisdom that they may render due obedience to him who, under Thy guiding power, has been set in authority over us. This we pray, through Christ our Prophet, Christ our Priest, and Christ our King."

The Grand Master Elect then took the oaths and signed the roll on the Sepulchre, the proper officers attending with the insignia of office—viz., steel chain, cross of Salem, sword, baton, ring, and book, which the Installing Officer took severally and delivered to the Grand Master at the Sepulchre. This solemn part of the ceremony having been concluded, the Installing Officer conducted His Royal Highness to the throne, with the words, "I place you on the Throne as Grand Master of the Order in England, Ireland, and Wales, and the Dependencies of the English Crown;" and then took his seat on the right. The Primate, having pronounced the Benedictio Sacerdotalis—"Pax et benedictio Patris omnipotentis, Filii, et Spiritus Sancti, in te descendit et tecum maneat a sæcula sæculorum. Amen!"—the Herald made due proclamation to the East, South-West, and North-West. The Knights in order filed past from both sides, saluting, two at once, and then marched down the centre, to the swelling notes of the organ accompaniment. This respectful salutation having been made, the Arch-Chancellor advanced to the foot of the dais and delivered the inaugural address, after which the Grand Organist played a voluntary. The Grand Master then installed the Great Prior of England, and next appointed his officers, who thereupon were summoned by the Great Marshal to do homage. The Grand Master afterwards appointed Grand Crosses and Commanders, and nominated the Subaltern Officers. Notices of motion for the next Convent General were given, the Committee for effecting a uniformity of Ritual was appointed, and the Grand Master then closed the Special Convent General in due form, and retired to his room with the Great Officers only, passing again under the Arch of Steel, while the organist played a solemn air. The Great Prior of England then brought the proceedings to a conclusion.

After the breaking up of the "Encampment," a banquet was prepared. This, under the personal superintendance of Mr. Willis, was speedily done, and a dinner of a most magnificent description was spread. His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales presided, supported by the Earl of Limerick and the Earl of Skelmersdale. Nearly all the Grand Officers and Knights present at the installation sat down to the banquet, and amongst the American Knights present were Pay Director Cunningham, U.S. Navy, Commissary to the Vienna Exhibition; Colonel Mann, U.S. Cavalry; and General Raddy, U.S. Army.

After the repast, His Royal Highness, who was received with the most enthusiastic cheering, rose and said that on such an occasion few words were required to introduce the first toast, namely, the health of "Her Majesty the Queen." In connection with the toast he had to make an agreeable announcement. They were all aware that the Queen was the Patroness of Craft Masonry, and he had her Majesty's permission to state, now, that she would be the Patroness of their Order. (This intimation was received with immense applause, and the health of her Majesty was drunk with nine times nine.)

The Earl of Skelmersdale, in proposing the health of the Grand Master, expressed the great pleasure he felt at seeing so many gentlemen around him from the Sister Isle. The "Encampment" that afternoon had been one of the most brilliant he had ever attended, and such a sight had never been seen in England before.

The Prince of Wales, on rising to respond, was again cordially received. He thanked the company very heartily for the kind manner in which they had received him. Indeed, so cordial was their greeting, that it was difficult for him to find words adequately to convey his feelings; and he could only again express the pleasure he felt at being present on that occasion, and in having been elected their Grand Master. They might rely upon his doing everything in his power to promote the interests of their Order. He desired specially to thank those gentlemen who had come from afar to take part in these proceedings. He could bear emphatic testimony to the kind feeling manifested towards him by brethren on the other side of the Channel—(loud cheers)—and had never forgotten the reception they gave him in the Grand Lodge of Ireland. (Renewed cheering.) It was not the custom of Craft Masons to make long speeches, and he, as their Grand Master, did not mean to violate that golden rule. He would, therefore, conclude by proposing the health of the Grand Prior of England and the Grand Prior of Ireland, a toast which would certainly be cordially received. He regretted the absence of the Grand Prior of Ireland, and returned him his warmest thanks for having vacated his place in his favour. He esteemed it a very high honour that one so justly popular and so justly beloved should have done so. (Loud cheers.)

The Earl of Limerick, who regretted that the Senior Grand Prior of Ireland was not present, briefly responded. He remarked that he had striven to the utmost of his ability to promote this union of the two orders, and he warmly congratulated the company that the union had at last been accomplished.

Deputy Grand Master R. W. Shackleton also acknowledged the compliment, and the proceedings then terminated, the speechmaking ceremony having occupied only about a quarter of an hour.

His Royal Highness on retiring from the room, was again loudly cheered.

ROYAL MASONIC INSTITUTION FOR BOYS.

At the meeting of the General Committee, on Saturday, 5th inst., held at Freemasons Hall, Bro. Symmond Rosenthal, V. Pres., in the chair, the Secretary having reported the successful result of the recent Festival, and the gratifying fact of the prompt payment of a large portion of the money promised, and having submitted a recommendation with reference to the finances of the Institution.

The Chairman was authorised, on the proposition of Bro. Henry Browse, seconded by Bro. George Cox, to sign a cheque on the Treasurer in account with Sir Samuel Scott & Co., for the payment of £4000, the remainder of the debt due to them as bankers. This was adopted with acclamation—has since been acted upon, and we are pleased to announce that this noble Institution IS NOW FREE FROM DEBT.

FINANCIAL POSITION OF GRAND LODGE OF SCOTLAND.

SIR,—The Grand Lodge Report has at length been published, eleven months after the close of the accounts. They are unsatisfactory, and show a considerable excess of expenditure over the income.

During the year ending April 1872, 1241 fewer entrants were enrolled than during the year preceding, and of the 519 lodges on the roll, who by the Constitutions are each bound to take out an annual certificate of its status, only 139 have done so. The largest number of certificates issued during any one of the last eight years was in 1866, when 263 were issued; and there was then about 442 lodges nominally on the roll. No explanation is made why the non-certificated lodges have not taken out their certificates, and paid the corresponding fee. The "casual lettings" of Freemasons' Hall have also fallen off by about £50 as compared with an average of the six preceding years, and the miscellaneous receipts are also considerably smaller. While such is the state of the receipts, it is a matter of regret that the expenditure is equally, if not more, unsatisfactory. The rental from the heritable property of Grand Lodge is.....£686 The disbursements connected with it.....1018

Deficiency.....£332
To which falls to be added the interest of (say) £3000 paid towards its price.....150

It is thus seen that Grand Lodge pays the sum of £482 for its own accommodation.

Among other items of discharge in the accounts for 1872, one finds that "stationery, printing, and advertising" cost the large sum of £588, as against the also large sum of £375 in the previous year. How these sums could be so spent is beyond conception, but the expenditure under this head during the last six years has averaged £347. It is not, therefore, surprising to find, from a note by the Grand Secretary, that the auditor has now discovered that "over-payments" to the amount of £248 have been made to the "contractors for stationery;" but he adds that the accuracy of this statement is "not yet admitted." Whether admitted or not, it suggests reflection as to how these accounts have been hitherto both kept and audited. As it is, during the last year, very nearly one-third of the total income of Grand Lodge has been spent under this branch of expenditure—a sum, altogether disproportionate to the sums realised. It is a subject which ought to receive careful investigation.

There is another branch of expenditure which also deserves consideration. The Grand Hall was erected about 14 years ago, and the other relative buildings were then all altered to suit the requirements of the Order, and finished in the manner they were intended, but ever since under the heading of "Outlay on Repairs and Improvements on Property and Sundry Furnishings," large sums of money have been spent, averaging annually during the last six years £151. During 1872, £137, was spent, as against £80 in the previous year. Now when is this large expenditure to stop, and of what does it consist? We are not told; but on new and well completed buildings, as these are understood to have been, such expenditure is unwarranted. From this head of the accounts, therefore, a large sum ought to have been saved towards the extinction of Grand Lodge debt, which has been long felt to cripple the resources of the order, and which after 14 years remains as large as ever.

"Expenses connected with the Hall" have, likewise, during last year, considerably increased, and it is difficult to understand why they should have done so, seeing that the Hall revenue has considerably decreased. These expenses, however, which were in 1867 only £102, with receipts from the Hall of £279, are now in 1872 more than doubled, while the receipts are only £192. Under this branch of the account, and the heading "sundry expenses connected with the Hall," is the sum of £78, as against £52 in the preceding year. These "sundry expenses," in 1867, were only £11. They have since been undergoing a large annual increase. We are not told of what they consist.

Again under the branch "postal and incidental expenses" is to be found, with upwards of one-third fewer entrants, and a consequent amount of less work, an increased expenditure of almost a half over the like disbursements in the year preceding, which was one of more than ordinary prosperity.

Since the correspondence which you published in December last, the office of Grand Clerk has been conjoined with that of Grand Secretary; and not only will a considerable pecuniary saving be thus effected, but we have now one responsible person at the head of affairs, and from his experience and zeal one may hope for radical improvement in the general management. I trust that he will act on the principle of the old adage—"a penny saved is a penny gained." As, however, matters presently stand, it is seen that the affairs of Grand Lodge have been hitherto conducted in a loose and unbusiness-like manner by its officials, and with indifference on the part of its members as a body.—Yours, &c.,

PAST MASTER.

CROSBY'S
BAL SAMIC
TRADE MARK
COUGH
DISEASES OF THE LUNGS AND AIR-VESSELS.
CROSBY'S
BALSAMIC COUGH ELIXIR.
Opium, Narcotics, and Squills are too often invoked to give relief in Coughs, Colds, and all Pulmonary diseases. Instead of such fallacious remedies, which yield momentary relief at the expense of enfeebling the digestive organs, and thus increasing that debility which lies at the root of the malady, modern science points to CROSBY'S
BALSAMIC COUGH ELIXIR as the true remedy.
SELECT TESTIMONIAL.
Dr. Rooke, Scarborough, author of the "Anti-Lancet," says: "I have repeatedly observed how very rapidly and invariably it subdued cough, pain, and irritation of the chest in cases of Pulmonary Consumption, and I can, with the greatest confidence, recommend it as a most valuable adjunct to an otherwise strengthening treatment for this disease."
This medicine, which is free from opium and squills, not only allays the local irritation, but improves digestion and strengthens the constitution. Hence it is used with the most signal success in Asthma, Bronchitis, Consumption, Coughs, Influenza, Night
Sweats of Consumption, Quinsy, and all affections of the throat and chest. Sold in bottles at 1s. 0d., 4s. 6d., and 11s. each, by all respectable Chemists, and wholesale by Jas. M. Crosby, Chemist, Scarborough.
* Invalids should read Crosby's Prize Treatise on "Diseases of the Lungs and Air-Vessels," a copy of which can be had Gratis of all Chemists.

REPORTS OF MASONIC MEETINGS.

Craft Masonry.

WEYMOUTH.—All Soul's Lodge (No. 170).—The April meeting of this Lodge was held amid tokens of mourning, the Masonic Hall—the finest in the Province—being hung with crape on account of the sudden and lamented death of the I.P.M. Bro. John Tigard, Solicitor. On the wall on either side of the chair were placed the shields of P.M.'s, and that of the deceased Bro. was shrouded in crape. He was an active and esteemed Mason for ten years past, worthily filling the office of W.M.; and he was also P.G. Reg. in the Provincial Grand Chapter of Dorset; S.O. in All Soul's Lodge of Mark Masters; P.G. 1st Captain in the P.G. Conclave of Knights Templar; and M.W.S. of the Weymouth Chapter of S.P.R.C. All the Brethren loved him: he was a regular attendant at the Lodge, and ever the same—genial and frank in his demeanour. At this meeting the Officers and Brethren wore crape rosettes on their clothing. There were present, Bro. J. Jesty, W.M.; Bro. J. B. Cole, S.W.; Bro. J. L. Carpenter, S. D.; Bro. G. F. Wadsworth, J.D.; Bro. T. A. Hanne, I.G.; Bro. Plowman, Steward; Bro. Lundie, P.M.; Bro. C. F. Arden, P.M.; Bro. Harper, P.M.; Bros. Ireland, C. Jesty, Talbot, Hallett, Farwell, and others; and the following visitors from Lodge of Faith and Unanimity, No. 417, Dorchester—Bro. Ling, P.M.; Bro. W. Chick, P.M.; Bros. R. Case, W. Osmond, Alfred Atkins, and W. H. Dean. Bro. Lundie referred to the loss the Lodge had sustained by the Lodge by the death of Bro. Tigard, I.P.M., and briefly called to their remembrance his worth, and the esteem in which they held him, and proposed that a letter of condolence be written to his widow. This was feelingly seconded by Bro. Arden, and carried nem dis. Mr. Harry Wheeler, bookseller, Weymouth, and Mr. Hubert James Capon, surgeon, of Wyke Regis, having been balloted for and unanimously approved, were initiated according to ancient form, the ceremony being performed in an able and impressive manner by the W.M., who also explained the working tools.

LEICESTER.—St. John's Lodge (No. 279).—The monthly meeting of this lodge was held at the Freemason's Hall, on Wednesday, the 2nd inst., present:—Bro. Clement Stretton, W.M., in the chair, Bros. A. Palmer, S.W.; J. W. Smith, J.W.; J. M. MacAllister, Sec.; W. Weare, Treas.; G. W. Statham, S.D.; C. E. Stretton, J.D.; S. Scaupton, I.G.; S. Tebbutt, Organist; Bros. Kelly, P. Prov. G.M., P.M.; S. S. Partridge, Prov. G. Sec.; G. Toller, P.P.G.R., P.M.; F. J. Baines, S.W., 523; and many others. The lodge was opened in due form, and the routine business despatched. The ballot was then taken for one joining member, and three candidates for initiation, which resulted in their unanimous election. Sir Alexander Beaumont Churchill Dixie, one of the candidates, being in attendance, was regularly initiated into the mysteries and privileges of ancient Freemasonry. Bro. Kelly, P.P.G.M., the veteran P.M. of the lodge, unveiled to the distinguished neo-phyte the peculiar system of morality constituting speculative Masonry, and earnestly recommended to him the study of that science which includes all others, and which teaches the moral duties which are incumbent upon us both as Masons, and as members of civil society. The lodge, during the periods of labour and refreshment, was numerously attended by the brethren, including a number of visitors, which fact affords presumptive evidence of the popularity of our W.M., and of the unity of spirit and zeal which animates the active members of the lodge.

DORCHESTER.—Lodge of Faith and Unanimity (No. 417).—At the April meeting of this lodge, the chair was occupied by Bro. W. Chick, in the absence of Bro. C. Parsons, W.M. There were present: Bros. W. P. Bockeram, S.W.; J. S. Scriven, acting J.W.; R. Case, Treas.; W. Osmond, Sec.; W. H. Dean, J.D.; A. W. Edwards, J.G.; W. How, Steward; J. Lovelace, T.; Fenn, P.M.; Gregory, P.M.; T. Coombs, P.M., G.A.D.C.; A. Atkins, C.; C. M. Shorts, W. The principal work of the lodge was raising Bros. Alfred Atkins and C. Shorts to the sublime degree of Master Masons, the ceremony being performed by Bro. W. Chick, P.M., while the working tools and traditional history were admirably explained by Bro. Fenn, P.M., late of Aldershot Camp Lodge, No. 1331.

LIVERPOOL.—St. John's Lodge (No. 673).—The usual monthly meeting was held on Wednesday, the 2nd inst., at 90, Duke-street, Bro. J. T. Callow, W.M., occupying the chair of K.S. There was a very numerous attendance of the brethren, amongst those present being Bros. H. Nelson, I.P.M.; J. Thornton, P.M.; G. Ladmore, P.M.; E. Kyle, S.W.; W. Blood, J.W.; R. Pearson, P.M., Treas.; J. Ball, Sec.; J. K. Digges, S.D.; T. Roberts, J.D.; H. Burrowes, I.G.; J. Mealor, S.; W. Crawford, Tyler. After the transaction of some formal business, Bro. Callow, W.M., initiated six brethren, and passed five to the degree of F.C. A brother intimated that he would move at the next meeting that notice should be given to the landlady of their Lodge-room, and that arrangements should be made as early as possible with the Masonic Hall Committee, with the view of removing the St. John's Lodge meetings to the new hall upon its completion. After five guineas had been voted in charity, the Lodge was closed in peace and harmony.

LODGE OF ST. JAMES (No. 765).—This prosperous and flourishing lodge held its sixteenth installation meeting, at the Bridge House Hotel, Borough High-street, Southwark, on Tuesday, April 1st. The shoot from such an old branch in Masonry as the Mount Lebanon Lodge, No. 73 really is, it is not surprising to see and know, that, both these lodges are now held under the same roof. The lodge owes in a measure its existence to the "Mount Lebanon," from which it hails, and is worthy of such parentage. Bro. T. Neville, W.M., opened the lodge. The minutes of the previous meeting were read, and unanimously confirmed. Some other business was then disposed of, the good old veteran in Masonry, Bro. G. Hyde, P.M., of this and 141, Lodge of Faith, an old lodge so well known for the distinguished number of Past Masters it has produced, who are as a body such expert workers in Masonry, took the chair. He ably raised Bros. Briggs, Jay, and Shelford, to the third degree, the ceremony being beautifully rendered. Bro. Montague Scott, P.M. and Secretary (Father of the Lodge), took the chair for the purpose of doing the ceremony of the evening, viz., the Installation of the Worshipful Master elect, Bro. W. Jones, S.W., who had proved his qualifications for that all-important position by the painstaking, correct, and earnest manner he filled every minor office under the chair. The ceremony, it is needless to say, in the hands of such an expert worker as the Installing Master is, was done in a faultless manner, far superior to what we are accustomed to see in our travels amongst Masonry. It was most pleasing to witness the happy manner in which the work was done. The new officers are Bros. F. Child, S.W.; P. McCallum, J.W.; R. P. Hoote, P.M.; Treasurer (reinvested); M. Scott, P.M., Secretary (reinvested); Brown, S.D.; Gibbs, J.D.; Cox I.G.; Jolly, D.C.; Shelford, Org.; Jones, W.S.; Bro. T. Neville, I.P.M., had a five guinea Past Master's Jewel presented to him, which, in a suitable speech, he acknowledged. Bro. J. H. Spencer provided a banquet, which as usual gave universal satisfaction. The W.M. in a fluent and agreeable manner gave the usual toasts. "The Visitors," was responded to by Bros. Dr. Goldsbro, P.M.G.G.S., P.P.G.S.M.S. of Wales; Bro. Richards, P.M., 482, P.P.G.D., Stafford, the latter expressed his entire satisfaction with his visit to the St. James's Lodge, and more particularly noticed the admirable working of Bro. Past Master Hyde in the Master Mason's degree which struck him as being more beautifully delivered than he had ever heard in his somewhat long experience. He had been in the habit of believing that at home in Staffordshire they excelled others in Masonry, but he would return with very different feelings. Others also responded. There were present besides those named as visitors, Bros. F. Walters, P.M. 73; W. Long, P.M. 435; L. R. Rogers, W.M. 902; Spelling, 435; Neville 781. The musical arrangements were under the care of Bro. Shelford who proved himself equal to his duties.

LANCASTER.—Rowley Lodge (No. 1051).—The regular meeting of this lodge was held at the Masonic Rooms, Athenæum, on Monday, 7th inst. The chair was occupied by the W.M. Bro. W. J. Sly, who was supported by the following officers and brethren. Bro. J. Daniel Moore, M.D., P.G.S.B. of England, as I.P.M.; Bro. W. Hall, L.R.C.P., P.M.; Bro. E. Airey, S.W.; J. L. Bradshaw, J.W.; James Taylor, S.D.; Thos. Jackson, as J.D.; Henry Longman, I.G.; Geo. Sutton, Steward; N. W. Helme, E.A.P.; John Watson, Tyler. Visitor, Bro. Ellershaw, 281. After the regular lodge business had been transacted, and Bro. Helme had given proof of his proficiency as an Entered Apprentice, he was duly passed to the degree of Fellow Craft by the W.M., the working tools being presented by Bro. Past Master Hall, and the lecture on the tracing board of the Second being delivered by Bro. Dr. Moore. Some other instruction having been given, after the usual proclamations had been made, the Lodge was closed in due form.

LIVERPOOL.—Temple Lodge (No. 1094).—The annual meeting of this lodge was held on Wednesday afternoon, the 9th inst., at the Masonic Temple, Liverpool, the principal business being the installation of Bro. Richard R. Martin as W.M. The lodge was opened shortly after three o'clock by Bro. R. Dawson, W.M., who was supported by Bros. D. W. Winstanley, P.M.; W. Crane, P.M.; J. K. Smith, P.M.; R. R. Martin, S.W.; T. Gibson, J. W.; T. Marsh, P.M., Sec.; R. Washington, S. D.; R. C. Yelland, J.D.; A. Jarvis, S.; W. Healing, S.; F. J. Jeffrey, I.G.; and P. Ball, Tyler. The members present were Bros. the Rev. T. C. Ewbank, H. Pearson, J. Hamer, T. J. Winstanley, A. Woolfenden, R. Bennett, A. C. Doe, H. Jones, J. McLean, W. Fitzgerald, A. Bernard, J. R. Callender, jun., Dr. Speir, J. Holt, C. Leighton, E. Chater, E. Lovett, &c. The visitors present were Bros. J. Skeaf, P.G.O.; Collinson, P.M. 667; P. Donaldson 249; J. Clegg, W.M. 1299; T. Shaw, 605; C. A. Whitney, 1013; J. Watson, 304; Dr. J. Mercer Johnson, P.M. 1094; J. Porter, P.M. 667, &c. After the minutes had been confirmed, Bro. Martin was presented for installation to Bro. R. Dawson, who performed the ceremony in a highly effective manner, assisted by Bros. Smith, Winstanley, and March. The newly-installed W.M. afterwards appointed and invested the following as his officers for the ensuing year:—Bros. R. Dawson, I.P.M.; T. Gibson, S.W.; R. Washington, J.W.; Rev. T. C. Ewbank, Chaplain; J. Wood (by proxy) re-elected for the 7th time Treas.; T. Marsh, Sec.; R. C. Yelland, S.D.; F. J. Jeffrey J.D.; D. W. Winstanley, P.M., M.C.; W. Healing, I.G.; J. Skeaf, Org.; A. Jarvis, S.S.; T. G. Winstanley, J.S.; A. C. Doe, A.S.; and Bro. P. Ball was unanimously re-elected Tyler. The W.M. afterwards initiated Mr. T. Birch into the mysteries and privileges of the Craft, the ceremony being performed with a force, point, and impressiveness rarely equalled.

After business the brethren sat down to a sumptuous banquet laid in the lodge-room. After the usual loyal and Masonic toasts, (Bros. Marsh, Skeaf, and Johnson acknowledging that of the P.G. officers), the W.M. proposed "The West Lancashire Masonic Educational Institution," and in doing so referred to the exertions of Bro. H. Newman on behalf of the charity, whereby the Temple Lodge had perhaps more Life Governors than any others within the province. Bro. Newman, whose name was coupled with the toast, and who was most enthusiastically received, said he had done no more in connection with the Institution than he would be delighted to do again. "England expected every man to do his duty," and he thought every Mason was only doing his duty in seeking to provide for the education and advancement of his brother's orphan children (loud cheers). He hoped that not a single brother would rest contented until he had become a Life Governor. Bro. Danson, I.P.M., then gave "The Worshipful Master," and in doing so alluded to the qualities which peculiarly fitted Bro. Martin for fulfilling the duties of his office. The W.M., replied in eloquent terms, and assured the brethren that his greatest aim would be to fulfil the functions of his important office to the best of his ability, and to the entire satisfaction of the brethren "The Newly Initiated Brother" was acknowledged by Bro. Birch, and "The P.M.'s of Lodge 1094," by Bros. Johnson, Crane, and Smith. The W.M., next gave "The I.P.M., Installing Officer," to which Bro. Dawson replied in suitable terms, "The Officers," responded to by Bro. Gibson, S.W.; Bro. Washington, J.W.; J. Wood, Treas.; and others, and "The Visiting Brethren," acknowledged by Bros. Clegg, Donaldson, Porter, and others, were the remaining toasts. Excellent songs were contributed during the evening by Bros. Dawson, Washington, Levett, Clegg, Leighton, and others.

RAMSGATE.—Lewis's Lodge (No. 1209).—The installation meeting of this Lodge was held at the Royal Hotel, Ramsgate, on Wednesday, April 9th. The Brethren assembled at 3 o'clock, and the Lodge was opened in the first degree. Bro. Cassingham was examined and entrusted, and then retired. The Lodge was opened in the second degree, and Bro. Martin, A.F.C., of the Royal Navy Lodge (No. 429), was examined as to his knowledge of the second degree and, having proved his proficiency, was entrusted. The Lodge was opened in the third degree, and Bro. Wootton, P.G.A.S., W.M., having vacated the chair, Bro. Winch, P.G.J.D., W.M., (429), raised Bro. Martin to the sublime degree of M.M. The ceremony was ably performed, and rendered the more impressive by the musical accompaniment of Bro. Larkin who presided at the organ. Bro. Wootton resumed the Lodge in the second degree, and passed Bro. Cassingham. Bro. Lewis Finch, P.M., 429, and 1,209, P.P.G.D.C., the Installing Master, then took the Chair; and Bro. Wootton presented Bro. Bedford N. Hiscocks, the W.M. elect; who, after promising adherence to the ancient charges and regulations, took the O.B. of a W.M. elect. A Board of Installed Masters was formed, and the Brethren below that rank having retired, Bro. B. N. Hiscocks was duly installed in the chair of K.S., with the customary ceremonies. The Brethren saluted the W.M. in the three several degrees, and the following officers were invested, viz.—Bros. Call, S.W.; A. Wootton, W.M. 127, J.W.; Lewis Finch, Treasurer; B. L. Hiscocks, Secretary; Geo. Page, S.D.; James W. Smith, J.D.; Crux, D.C.; Larkin, Org.; Edward J. Smith, I.G.; John Finen, Steward; Geo. Meager, Tyler. The remainder of the installation ceremony was performed by Bro. L. Finch, and the W.M. closed the Lodge. The Brethren, including visitors from Sandwich, Margate, Dartford, and other places, adjourned to a banquet which by the superior quality of the dishes and the excellence of the wines, gave great satisfaction to all. Among the toasts which followed none was drunk with more heartiness than that of the W.M.; great stress being laid upon the fact that he was the first candidate for initiation after the consecration of the Lodge, that he is a Lewis (his father being an old and esteemed Mason and the Secretary of the Lodge), and that he is one of those who gave rise to the name of the Lodge, it having been established especially in order to afford to the sons of members of the Royal Navy Lodge opportunities of more rapid promotion than could be had in that Lodge, which was, and is still, of great numerical strength.

MACDONALD LODGE (1216).—This lodge held its regular meeting for election of W.M. and officers, at the head-quarters of the First Surrey Riiles, Camberwell, on Thursday, the 9th inst., when were present, Bros. Waterall, W.M.; S. H. Wagstaff, I.P.M.; James Stevens, P.M., as S.W.; J. H. Haske, S.D., as J.W.; M. S. Larham, J.D.; Dr. Eugene Cronin, Treas.; J. J. Curtis, Sec.; Hammond, I.G.; F. Cozens, Org.; Fletcher, Steward; and Bros. Hale, Williams, Collins, Alexander, Gray, Styan, Bradley, Mayo, and others, and visitors, Bros. A. Woodcock, J.W. 1201; and G. F. Smith, 184. The minutes of the previous regular meeting and of a subsequent lodge of emergency having been confirmed, Bros. Bradley, Capt. Styan, and Capt. Mayo were severally raised to the sublime degree of M.M., with the usual perfect musical ceremony. The lodge having been closed for the first degree, Messrs. B. B. Joy, R. C. Culling, and Thomas Day, efficient members of the corps and unanimously approved of on ballot, were severally introduced and initiated into the Order. The elections for the ensuing year were then proceeded with, and Bro. G. H. Newington Bridges, the Senior Warden (unfortunately absent and on the Continent seeking restoration to health), was unanimously elected W.M. The highly respected Treasurer, Bro. Dr. Eugene Cronin, was also re-elected without a dissentient. Bros. F. Williams, and Hale were appointed on the Audit Committee, Bro. Stevens, P.M., proposed, and it was unanimously voted "that a P.M. Jewel of the value of ten guineas, and of the adopted pattern, be presented to Bro. George Witenall in appreciation of his valuable services to the lodge, and of the ability displayed by him as W.M. during the past year." The lodge was then closed, and refreshment followed labour, the brethren thoroughly enjoying the brief period allowed for this purpose and separating in perfect harmony. The Installation meeting is appointed for the 8th May, when consequent upon the well-deserved popularity of the W.M. elect, and the general good report in which this lodge is held, a large gathering and most pleasant entertainment may be confidently anticipated.

LEICESTER.—Commercial Lodge (No. 1391).—The twenty-first meeting of this young and flourishing Lodge was convened on the 12th inst. The Lodge was opened at 4 p.m. The minutes of the previous Lodge, held March 8th and 24th respectively, having been confirmed, and the ballot declared clear in the election of a candidate, the W.M. then proceeded to install his successor. The newly installed Master then appointed and invested his officers, viz.: Bros. J. B. Hall, I.P.M.; Dr. Clifton, S.W.; R. A. Barber, jun., J.W.; A. G. Chamberlin, Sec.; W. H. Chamberlin, Asst. Sec.; E. Mason, S.D.; B. Moore, J.D.; G. Matts, J.G.; G. Crofts, Dir. Cer.; Alfred Chamberlin, Org.; J. S. and W. R. Tomlins, Stewards; Bembridge and Dunn, Tylers. The Treasurer's accounts were presented and confirmed, showing a balance in hand on the General Account of £25 17s. 6d.; and a balance of £4 13s. 9d. on the Benevolent Fund Account. In the first year of the existence of this Lodge, it has raised upwards of fifty guineas for charitable purposes, including a donation to the Girls' School of £5 5s., £21 to the Boys' School (proceeds of a ball held March 10th, 1873), and £20 18s. 6d. subscribed by the Members of the Lodge to a fund raised in this Province to purchase Lewis into the Boys' School. The W.M. then rose for the first and second times. The charity box was then carried round the Lodge, yielding 21s. 2d. By this means alone, during the year, £16 14s. 11d. has been realised—proof of the estimate the Brethren of this Lodge put upon that virtue which is justly denominated the distinguishing characteristic of a Freemason's heart. The W.M. then rose for the third and last time, and after four candidates had been proposed for initiation, and the hearty good wishes of the visiting Brethren had been duly acknowledged, the lodge was closed in due form, and the Brethren adjourned to the banquet. The attendance was not quite so numerous as was expected, owing partly that next Friday, the 18th, has been fixed for the Installation of the Right Hon. and Right Worshipful Bro. Earl Ferrers, P.G.M., designate, and that Saturday proved an inconvenient day for many of the Brethren of our own and the sister Lodges. Notwithstanding this drawback those that attended were highly delighted with the proceedings. The Stewards placed before the brethren the delicacies of the season, the Worshipful Master presiding with conspicuous ability. After grace the usual loyal and Masonic toasts were given. "The Queen and the Craft," "the G.M., his Deputy, and Grand Lodge," "The Provincial Grand Master, designate, the Rt. Hon. and Rt. Worshipful Bro. Earl Ferrers," "The Past Pro. Grand Master, the Rt. Worshipful Bro. W. Kelly," responded to by Bro. S. S. Partridge, Prov. G. Registrar. The I.P. Master then gave the toast of the evening, "The Worshipful Master of the Commercial Lodge, Bro. J. Halford, and success to his Lodge." The W.M., after thanking the Brethren for the enthusiastic manner in which Bro. Hall had presented that toast to their notice, assured them he was duly sensible of the very high honour they had done him in placing him in that proud position, and no efforts on his part would be wanting to fully justify the confidence the Brethren had reposed in him; and with such a staff of officers he had the good fortune to be supported by, he believed the ceremonies of the body would be most efficiently performed. Again thanking the Brethren, the W.M. concluded by proposing the I.P.M., Bro. Hall's health. Bro. Hall, after thanking the brethren for the kind manner in which they had drunk his health, said the official position he then held, that of I.P.M., proved the lodge had a history, although a brief one, still it enabled them to take a retrospective glance, and they were justly proud of what had been done, and grateful to the G.A.O.T. U. for the success that had attended their efforts in forming that lodge and conducting it through its infancy. It had now arrived at that age that it might fairly expect to feel its feet. He could not help reminding the Worshipful Master when he assumed that position, he could only offer the brethren words of promise, and when a little cloud hung over their lodge his hope was in the future. The prosperity and success of the lodge was an accomplished fact, and the prospect was all that could be desired, with such an able and zealous Master in the chair. The toast of "The Officers" was responded to by Bro. Barber, jun., J.W., and the S.D. Bro. Barber, in responding, regretted the absence of the S.W., who would have responded far more ably than it was possible for him to do. He said, W.M., I cannot but think that you are fortunate in having invested to-night such a useful set of officers, for commencing with the P.M.'s, they Hall, Waite upon you, and I am sure our S.W. (the most popular investment you have made to-night) will for his year of office interpret freely the letters he usually signs at the end of his name, M.D., as Masonic Duty instead of Money Down (laughter and cheers). Of the J.W. I cannot say much, at all events, he is the Barber of the lodge, and, judging from the appearance of most of the faces of the members, he will not often have occasion to close shave any of them. Well, W. Master, reaching Secretary, and Assistant Secretary, of course upon all state occasions you will have your Chamberlins in attendance, and going on to the S.D. if you have not an excellent officer in him who is a born Mason as well as a Freemason, it would be a pity; in case, however, of this double-dyed Mason not being sufficient for his work you have Moore (J.D.) behind. Passing on, Worshipful Sir, through Crofts (Director of Ceremonies), we come to the I.G., and what is there more appropriate at the entrance of the lodge than a Matt, our Matt, however is made of excellent fibre, but it will not stand trampling upon; our I.G., in particular, is a tragedian of no mean order, and would use both blood and oratorical thunder to prevent improper knowledge of our mysteries being obtained. So far, Worshipful Master, I have managed fairly, but as soon as I reach outside to look for Bembridge, I'm Dunn (Tylers). (Much laughter). Joking apart, Worshipful Sir,

I can assure you that your officers will use their utmost endeavours to support you, and it shall be no light matter that keeps them from their post the lodge nights. We accept in the spirit in which it is given, the straight forward and manly advice given by the W.M. to his officers; and I beg in thanking you again, Worshipful Sir, to repeat the assurance that the officers will remember their obligations and do their part towards making the year of J. Halford's reign a most successful one in the annals of the Commercial Lodge. The toast of the Sister Lodges was acknowledged by Bro. S. S. Partridge who made special reference to the truly Masonic character of Bro. J. W. Johnston's speech. Responding for the "ladies" at the command of the W.M., Bro. E. H. Butler in warmly thanking the brethren, said the very handsome manner with which they had received the toast, was only in accordance with the high duties which were imposed upon the Craft, by acknowledging those to whom they were so much indebted, not only for their personal comfort, but for the dearest of their domestic and social ties, and of whom one had truly said.

"When pain and anguish wrung the brow,"
A ministering angel thou."

The exalted position which the ladies occupied in their affections, he felt sure, were materially enhanced by the fact, that at the Installation of H.R.H. the Prince of Wales, last week, H.R.H. announced that our beloved Sovereign had most graciously become the Patroness of Masonry, he need hardly add that while this imported additional lustre and brilliancy to the toast he had been called upon to respond to, it increased the difficulty in which he felt himself placed. In conclusion he hoped that those of the fairer portion of creation, who had not yet passed the matrimonial Rubicon, would ere long be raised from "the wicked world" of single blessedness to the "happy land" (great laughter and cheers) of convivial felicity, where no "Lord Chamberlain" could exercise his censorship, and where only the rude hand of death, or the demoralising atmosphere of the Divorce Court could pronounce a lasting separation. (Applause.) For those, who in the order of affairs might fail to attain the height of conjugal happiness (so much to be desired) he would ask those brethren by whom he was surrounded, that in all their transactions with them, the words of Hood, so eloquently, but yet so pathetically rendered by Bro. Matts that evening, should ever be borne in mind.

"Take her up tenderly,
Lift her with care.
Fashioned so slenderly,
Young and so fair."

(Loud Applause). The brethren were greatly indebted, and the enjoyment of the evening greatly enhanced, by the songs beautifully rendered by the Bros. Wykes, Tebbutt, and Chamberlin, and the recitations given by Bro. Matts, and others. The Tyler's toast brought the meeting to a close.

ERA LODGE, No. 1423.—The first meeting of this lodge, since its consecration, was held on Saturday, 5th inst., at the King's Arms Hotel, Hampton Court. Punctually at four o'clock, p.m., the time appointed for the meeting, the lodge was opened by Bro. J. T. Moss, P.G.S.D. Middlesex, P.M., W.M. The minutes of the previous meeting were read and unanimously confirmed. The ballots for the six gentlemen, who were candidates for initiation were declared in each instance to be unanimous in favour of their admission. Bros. R. Limpus, T. B. Yeoman, and S. Kisch, were unanimously elected joining members. The Prov. G.M. of Middlesex, Bro. Col. F. Burdett, then arrived, and was received with all due honor and respect. Three gentlemen being in attendance, they were admitted separately, and most impressively initiated into ancient Freemasonry. The ceremony was beautifully rendered and admirably done. All present expressed the gratification they felt at hearing and seeing such good working. The bye-laws were then agreed to. The initiation fee being made seven guineas for the first few who may join—it being understood that it would be increased to ten guineas—the joining fee to be the same amount as the initiation. Some gentlemen were proposed for initiation and amongst them were officers of the Navy and Army. Bro. J. S. Sweasey, J.D., had promise of good support for his list as the first Steward to represent the lodge at the Girls' School. Letters of apology for non-attendance were received from Bros. R. W. Little, Secretary, and W. Smeed, P.G.J.W., &c. who were absent from causes beyond their own control, and the lodge was closed. It was arranged to hold an emergency meeting on Saturday, May 16th. Banquet followed; it was well served, and proved that the hostess Mrs. Luce (widow of the late esteemed and respected Bro. Luce, P.M.) intended to make the members comfortable in that all-important part of the business. The usual loyal toasts were given and responded to, and the zest with which the M.W.P.G.M., Col. Burdett's name was received proved how popular he is. It was the toast of the evening. The Initiates found an able responder in Bro. W. C. Devereux, R.V. (an author of note in Naval circles), who, in a well worded speech, fully acknowledged the handsome manner he had been received as well as his friends, who were now brothers. There were present besides those members already named:—Bros. H. T. Dubois, S.W.; J. W. Baldwin, J.W.; T. J. Sabine, P.M., Treasurer; F. Walters, P.M., Secretary; E. H. Thiellay, S.D.; J. S. Sweasey, J.D.; J. Baxter Langley, I.G. The Visitors were:—Bros. W. Long, P.M. 569; and H. Keeble, W.M. 1275, and others.

Mark Masonry.

PROVINCIAL GRAND LODGE OF CHESHIRE AND NORTH WALES.

A very uncommon and beautiful ceremony was witnessed on Saturday, the 5th inst., at the Town Hall, Altrincham by a large number of Mark Masons from all parts of Lancashire, Cheshire, and North Wales, at the installation of the Right Worshipful the Hon. Wilbraham Egerton, M.P., as Provincial Grand Master Mason of the new Province of Cheshire and North Wales. The ceremony was performed by the Right Worshipful Bro. William Romaine Callender, Prov. Grand Mark Master of the County Palatine of Lancaster. The Stamford Mark Lodge, No. 141, was opened by Bro. James A. Birch, W.M., at half-past one and being informed the Provincial Grand Master of Lancashire and his officers sought admittance they were at once received and saluted with Grand and Royal honours. Bro. Callender then called on Bro. John Chadwick, Provincial Grand Secretary to read the Dispensation granted by the Grand Master authorising him to proceed to Altrincham and there install Bro. the Hon. Wilbraham Egerton, M.P., in the chair as the Provincial Grand Master Mason of the new Province of Cheshire and North Wales. Having opened the Provincial Grand Lodge, Bro. Egerton was conducted into the Lodge and presented by the Right Worshipful Bro. C. F. Matier, Deputy Provincial Grand Master, and Junior Warden of England. After receiving the obligation he was duly installed and saluted with Grand and Royal honours nine times. Bro. Egerton then nominated and invested the following Brethren as his Provincial Grand Officers, Bro. the Rev. Charles William Spencer Stanhope, R.W.D.P.G. Master; Bro. William Bulkley Hughes, M.P., P.G.S.W.; Bro. William Bulley, P.G.J.W.; Bro. Lieut.-Col. Wilkinson, P.G.M.O.; Bro. Joseph Sillatoo, P.G.S.O.; Bro. Gaptain James Watson, P.G.J.O.; Bro. the Rev. J. Newell Tanner, P.G. Chaplain; Bro. Thomas Platt, P.G. Treasurer; Bro. Richard Newhouse, P.G. Secretary; Bro. Thomas Forshaw, P.G. Registrar; Bro. Frederick K. Stevenson, P.G.S.D.; Bro. Major Platt, P.G.J.D.; Bro. Captain Hampton Lewis, P.G. Inspector of Works; Bro. Edward Friend, P.G.D.C.; Bro. George L. Woodley, Prov. Grand Assistant Director of Ceremonies; Bro. Charles H. Coates, Prov. Grand Sword Bearer; Bro. Geo. Higgins, Prov. Grand Standard Bearer; Bro. John M. Bentley, Prov. Grand Organist; Bro. John S. Mort, Prov. Grand Pursuivant; Bro. John Worthington, Prov. Grand Tyler; and Bro. Richard Baker, Thomas Kent, George H. Wilson, and James Heap, as Prov. Grand Stewards. Other business being done, the Prov. Grand Lodge was closed, and a large number of the brethren sat down to a splendid banquet provided by the host, Bro. James Harney. The chair was taken by Bro. the Hon. J. Wilbraham Egerton, M.P., P.G.M.M. He gave the first toast, "The Queen," which was received with great enthusiasm; the next "H.R.H. Bro. Albert Edward, Prince of Wales, H.R.H. the Princess of Wales, and the rest of the Royal Family," and in doing so remarked that Masons had cause to be true and loyal to their Prince; there had been no occasion on which Masons had called on him to exercise the influence of his exalted position for the benefit of the Craft that he had failed to do so, and we had now a further proof of the interest he took in Masonry, as he was shortly about to be installed as Grand Master of the Knights Templar. Bro. Birch sang with great feeling, "God Bless the Prince of Wales." The next toast was "The M.W. Bro. the Rev. George Raymond Portal, M.A., G.M.M.M.," followed by "The V.W. Bro. The Earl Percy, G.M.M.M. Elect, The V.W. Bro. The Earl of Limerick, Deputy G.M.M.M., and the rest of the Grand Officers," which was replied to by Bro. Matier. The next toast was the toast of the evening, "The Health of the R.W. Bro. The Hon. Wilbraham Egerton, M.P., Prov. Grand Master of Cheshire and North Wales," which was given by the R.W. Bro. William Romaine Callender, who, on rising, was received with round after round of applause. He spoke in the highest possible terms of Bro. Egerton as a man and a Mason, and delighted the Brethren with a speech of more than his usual eloquence. Then followed the song of the evening by Bro. J. M. Bentley, Prov. Grand Org. The song (a Masonic one) was composed by himself, and sung with great feeling, and was received with great applause. Bro. Egerton, who was received with great enthusiasm, replied, thanking the Brethren, in a speech of great feeling, and with his usual good taste proposed "The health of Bro. Callender," who replied; and after other toasts had been proposed and replied to, the Brethren separated at seven o'clock in peace and harmony, amid mutual congratulations on the enjoyable afternoon they had spent.

LEICESTER.—Fowke Lodge of Mark Masters (No. 19).—The lodge assembled at an earlier hour than usual on the 27th ult., to transact ordinary business, to receive the Provincial Grand Master and Officers, and to celebrate the annual festival of the lodge. There were present:—Bros. S. S. Partridge, W.M., Prov. Grand Secretary; Wm. Weare, W.M. elect; G. Toller, M.O.; W. Sculthorpe, S.O.; C. Stretton, Treasurer; J. MacAllister, Secretary; W. T. Rowlett, R.M.; R. A. Barber, S.D.; E. J. Crow, J.D.; and T. A. Wykes, Organist. The lodge having been opened, and the preliminary business despatched, the Right Worshipful Bro. W. Kelly F.R. Hist. S., Prov. G.M. and his Officers were received and saluted in due form. The Provincial Grand Lodge was then opened, and the Reports received from the several lodges in the province were highly satisfactory; more especially the report from the Fowke Lodge, which indicated great vitality during the past year under the able presidency of Bro. Partridge; there being an unusual increase in the number of advancements, without any diminution in the number of subscribing members. Bro. C. Stretton was unanimously elected the representative Grand Steward, an honour most heartily accorded to that deserving brother. The R.W.P.G.M., Master appointed Bro. MacAllister, to the vacant office of Inspector of Works. Perhaps no brother in the province is working more zealously and devotedly for Masonic interests than Bro. MacAllister, and to confer an honour upon him, is but a dutiful acknowledgment of his various and manifold labours. Other acts of benevolence and charity having received the attention of the Prov. G.M. Master and brethren, the Prov. Grand Lodge was closed. Bro. S. S. Partridge, resumed the chair, and in an admirable manner conducted the ceremony of Installation, including the impressive charges to the principal officers. Bro. W. Weare, the newly installed Master then proceeded to appoint and invest his officers as follows:—Bro. G. Toller, S.W.; Bro. J. M. MacAllister, J.W.; Bro. W. Sculthorpe, M.O.; Bro. L. L. Attwood, S.O.; Bro. R. A.

Barber, J.O.; Bro. C. Stretton, Treasurer; Bro. F. J. Baines, Secretary; Bro. W. J. Rowlett, R.M.; Bro. J. B. Hall, S.D.; Bro. Dr. Clifton, J.D.; Bro. J. T. Thorp, J.G.; Bro. T. A. Wykes, Org.; Bro. G. W. Statham, Master of Ceremonies; Bros. Dr. Clifton, and G. W. Statham Stewards. A very interesting part of the Agenda then occupied the attention of the brethren, a presentation to the I.P.M. Bro. S. S. Partridge. The W.M., in making the presentation, said, nothing could give him greater pleasure than to perform the duty assigned to him on that occasion. Bro. Partridge in vacating the chair, carried with him the good wishes and esteem of every member of the lodge. During his Mastership he has performed the onerous duties incumbent upon him, zealously, and faithfully, and in testimony of that fact, and in appreciation of his eminent services, the W.M., in the name of the brethren, had much pleasure in presenting him with a handsome Past Masters' Jewel, and hoped he would be long spared to wear the decoration. Bro. Partridge, in reply, after expressing his thanks, said, that until shortly before leaving the chair, he had not the slightest expectation of receiving such a handsome present from them. He would ever prize it as a mark of their kind regard, and as a reminder of that measure of pleasure he had enjoyed during the period of his Mastership. He hoped that Bro. Weare would be favoured with the same support from his officers which he had received, and assured the brethren that his own zeal and interest in the lodge would not abate, neither would his attendance be less frequent, although he now occupied the honourable position of a Past Master. The banquet which followed, thanks to the care and forethought of the Stewards, was all that could be desired. The tables, through the kindness of Bro. Charlesworth, were gaily decorated with plants and flowers, and the evening's enjoyment was considerably enlivened by "Toast, Song, and Sentiment."

GIBRALTAR.—Gibraltar Mark Lodge (No. 43).—The regular meeting of this lodge was held on Tuesday, the 18th ult. The chair was occupied by the W.M., Bro. Balfour Cockburn, with Bros. Morgan, S.W.; W. Brown, J.W.; Hepper, J.O.; Seath, S.O.; Price, M.O.; Marshall, S.D.; and Williamson, Sec. The agenda paper presented the following as the detail of business for the evening: To advance to the degree of W.M.M., Bros. Jones, 278, Capt., 81st Regt.; Ryley, 278, Capt., 81st Regt.; Satterthwaite, 278, Lieut., 81st Regt.; Prosser, 184, Sergeant-Major, R.E. To read cash account. To present G.L. certificates, and to elect the W.M., Treasurer, and Tyler for the ensuing twelve months. Before proceeding with the immediate business of the evening, the W.M. stated that since their last meeting he had received a diploma constituting him a Past Grand Senior Deacon. Whilst fully appreciating the distinguished honour thus conferred upon himself, he could not but congratulate the members of the lodge in this very marked proof of the great interest the M.W.G.M. took in all their proceedings, and of his earnest desire to encourage the progress and prosper the interests, not alone of the Gibraltar Mark Lodge, but of Mark Masonry generally. He sincerely trusted that this laurel with which he had been crowned might be a future prize held out to encourage his successors in the chair to devote their fullest energies to the welfare of their lodge and the advancement of the Degree, and thus safely securing the approval and graceful acknowledgment of the M.W.G.M. The W.M. further congratulated the Lodge on their now being enabled to hold their communications in rooms well adapted for the full performance of the rites and ceremonies of the Degree. Bros. Jones, Ryley, Satterthwaite, and Prosser, having been duly prepared, were forthwith admitted; and, having eventually presented work which met with the approval of the Overseer, were duly advanced to the honourable degree of Mark Master Masons. The election for the W.M., Treas., and Tyler then commenced, with the following result: Bro. Morgan, W.M., Bro. Trenerry, Treas., and Bro. Llamas, Tyler. After some further business of minor importance, the Lodge was duly closed, and the Brethren retired to refreshment.

I am happy to inform you of the great benefit my daughter has derived from your Pain Killer. She was suffering from tic-douloureux and severe pains in the head. We used many remedies, but nothing eased her till we tried your Vegetable Pain Killer, which gave her instant relief. Two doses effected the cure.—JOSEPH LEWIS FENTON, Staff. Oct., 1871.—To Perry Davis & Son, London, V.C.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT AND PILLS.—Wonder Working Remedies.—As the battle of life has to be fought, alike by the naturally feeble and constitutionally strong, how momentous is it to preserve the former from adventitious ailments?—A Scratch on the Leg, slight swelling or inflammation about the ancles, which would have been cured at once by Holloway's medicaments, grow from want of the commonest precautions, into grievous diseases, which throw the sufferer on the bed of sickness, and perhaps his family on the parish. Every peasant's home should have these remedies, they will save both parents and children from much misery and above all they will remove their complaints at a trifling cost and leave no disheartening heavy Bills behind.—ADVT.

A BOON TO EVERY HOUSEHOLD.—Boots, with the celebrated wire-quilted soles, wearing twice as long as ordinary leather, for all ages; and children's boots with metallic tips, which never wear out at the toes, may be had at most shoe dealers. Insist on giving these a trial, and judge on their merits.

On Thursday, the 3rd inst., a new Lodge of Freemasons, designated the Lodge of Fraternity, No. 1418, was consecrated at the Freemasons' Hall, Wellington-street, Stockton, by John Fawcett, Esq., the Right Worshipful Provincial Grand Master for Durham, under very auspicious circumstances. At the close of the consecration ceremony Bro. John Henry Jackson, P.M. (940), and P.P.S.G.D., was duly installed Worshipful Master of the Lodge. The remainder of the business being disposed of, the R.W. Prov. G.M. expressed the great gratification it afforded him to be present to consecrate that Lodge, and was of opinion that it would be a source of strength to the other two Lodges. He then expressed his high sense of appreciation of the admirable manner in which he had been assisted by the various officers who had taken part in the proceedings of the day, and concluded by wishing the new Lodge prosperity.

the Earl of Zetland, P.G.M.," "The Right Hon. the Earl of Carnarvon, D.G.M., and the officers of the Grand Lodge." The next toast on the list was given by Bro. John Hunton, P.M., and was, "The Right Worshipful P.G. Master, John Fawcett, Esq., as Installing and Consecrating Master, and The Right Worshipful D.G.P.M. and Officers of the Provincial Grand Lodge," to which Bro. J. Monks responded, and proposed "The W.M. of the Lodge of Fraternity." In doing so, Bro. Monks spoke in very warm terms of the W.M. (Bro. J. H. Jackson), and congratulated the lodge upon the choice they had made in selecting him as their first Master, and he expressed his gratification with the thoroughly efficient manner in which the proceedings of the day had been carried out. The W.M., replied, and proposed the health of the "Visiting Brethren," coupled with the names of Bros. Monks and Brunton. Bro. G. Ellis then gave the health of "The Officers of the Lodge of Fraternity," and in doing so expressed a hope that a strong fraternal feeling would exist between that lodge and the other two in the town. Bro. W. J. Watson, acknowledged the compliment, Bro. R. S. Hooper gave "The W.M., Officers, and Brethren of the Tees Lodge, No. 506," coupled with the name of Bro. G. Ellis. Bro. M. B. Dodds followed with the toast of "The W.M., the Officers, and Brethren of the Lodge of Philanthropy, No. 840," coupled with the name of Bro. T. Walton, W.M. Several other toasts followed, and the whole was agreeably interspersed with songs. The evening's proceedings passed off in a most enjoyable manner.

THE PERILOUS MOMENT.

BY ROBERT MORRIS, LL.D.

Place, a large and fashionable hotel in St. Louis. Time, evening. Hero, a well known and distinguished member of the Masonic fraternity, just arrived from a long journey by rail, and in that nervous state of irritation easily aroused to anger, which every one has experienced under the same circumstances. To look at him as he emerged from his room on his way to the dinner table, you would have seen a bluff, solid man, rotund, but not to grossness, with a red beef-fed face, dressed like a gentleman, and bearing himself with the port of one who knows his rights, and "knowing, dares maintain them." Such was the man whom, for the sake of precision, we will denominate Brother Larkin, George Alexander Larkin.

Such was the man as he appeared to a group of three, who looked after him with eyes singularly inquisitive, and when he disappeared in the supper-room exchanged glances with each other that said, "the very man." One of them, a burly ruffianly fellow, at the same moment rattled something in his pocket, that might have been specie, or might have been something else. This group of three, by the way, were standing in the office of the hotel when our friend first entered the house. They divided him amongst them, one glancing over his shoulder as he wrote his name in the Travellers' Register; one looking sharply after his valise and following it to the baggage room; one quietly slipping after him as he went up stairs, and preceding him on his way down.

The contrast between a man just in from a long journey by rail, before dinner and after, is evident to the dullest intellect. As Brother Larkin came out from his feed, his rosy cheeks rosier, his rotund figure more rotund, and in every respect he looked more kindly upon all around him. This made it easy to fall into conversation with the elder of the group of three to whom we have already introduced our readers, and who was standing in readiness to address him as he came out. A sort of recognition followed, that is Brother Larkin admitted having before met the gentleman, who called himself Colonel Westcott, although it would have puzzled his brain considerably to specify when and where. A mutual cigar, a chat over the political situation in which, by a pleasant coincidence, they found themselves in accord, and the new made friends made an appointment to visit the theatre in company. And all this time the group of three were "reckoning up" our Brother Larkin, whispering to each other, covertly comparing notes, preparing for some grand coup-de-main to come off in due season. The click of the telegraphic instrument in the corner—had Brother Larkin recognised it?—was speaking his name to fellow-operators at St. Joseph, Missouri, and elsewhere, some hundreds of miles away, and cords were tightening around him of which he was altogether unconscious. As he puffed his cigar and chatted benignantly of the pending election, and digested his good dinner with a beaming countenance, as little was he aware of the interest manifested in him sometimes by the chief clerk of the house, sometimes by the landlord himself, but most of all by that quiet group of three whose leader was engaging him all the time in a conversation seemingly unimportant, but which had issues of life and death in it.

The day before, a bank had been robbed in Western Missouri by a singularly bold device, gagging and chlorforming being a part of the means employed—means so energetic in fact, that when the unfortunate cashier was found and released the next day, the drug and the gag had been too much for him. This addition of murder to the enormous theft, and the extraordinary heavy reward offered, had naturally set the detectives on the qui vive; and at that very hour groups of men like these were inspecting hotel registers and baggage, and new arrivals in all cities three hundred miles around. The despatch that came over the wires to St. Louis said: "Principal man short, thick-set, English in appearance, with sharp voice, well dressed, fond of talking politics, slippery as an eel." And that was the flattering appearance attached to our Brother Larkins, who had come that very day from Western Missouri, and was as loquacious on the subject of the robbery as every man is in such a case who has a good listener. So he talked in a gay, unrestrained manner, while the man who sat by his side rattled something in his pocket that might have been specie, and might be something else.

The theatre that evening presented unusual attractions, and together the two newly-made friends wended their way, purchasing reserved seats of the hotel clerk, and sitting together in the box. At every interval in the play the conversation was renewed, designed on the one part to draw out Brother Larkin from his apparent reserve, on the other, merely to wile away the dull evening. It is a serious matter in St. Louis "to arrest the wrong man." Colonel Westcott therefore plied all the arts of social life upon his victim, and when at the close of the play he found himself making no headway in the direction he was pursuing, an invitation to wine and oysters followed as the next move. As the two entered the brilliant saloon, the favourite resort of the bon-vivant of St. Louis, the other two members of the group were close behind them, and the toils were compassing our friend, although totally unaware of his danger. Every means was now attempted by Colonel Westcott to throw him off his guard and elicit something that would connect him with the great bank robbery, but in vain. The loquacious fellow, warm with wine and good fellowship, was not to be entrapped into a word implicating him in an affair of which indeed he knew nothing except the extravagant rumours current among the passengers. And still the Colonel rattled something in his pocket that might have been specie and might have been something else. It was quite midnight when they returned to the hotel, the other members of the group being already there reinforced by several of their own class.

And now came the consummation. A hurried conference among the detectives while Brother Larkin was asking the usual question of the clerk relative to hotel trains, &c., and Col. Westcott walked straight to his victim, laid his hand decidedly upon his shoulder and said, "Tom Brailey, you are my prisoner."

If the reader has ever had the heavy grip of a sheriff's officer laid upon him he will bear witness to its ponderosity and the utter feeling of helplessness that momentarily follows. Brother Larkin was a man constitutionally brave, himself a major in the late war, who had seen service in well-fought fields, but he may be pardoned for blenching a moment and even cowering under the unexpected blow.

"Is this a jest, Col. Westcott?"

"No jest, Tom Brailey, my name is Carroll, and I am a detective, these gentlemen are also detectives and we are bound to have you."

"What is the charge?"

"Will you go with us peaceably?"

"What is the charge? Don't you dare to lay your hand on me again until you explain the charge and show your authority."

Our hero had by this time backed into a corner out of which opened the door to the baggage room. On one side of him was the high desk of the book-keeper, and the passage way was so blocked up with large trunks on the other hand, that his own portly form occupied the whole entrance. As he stood facing the chief detective, his eye now kindled up with a sense of the deceit that had been practiced on him all the evening, he was undoubtedly a dangerous subject.

Evidently the detectives so viewed it for the spokesman dropped his tone.

"Now Tom Brailey."

"My name is not Tom Brailey. You will see my name in the register George Alexander Larkin; I have ample papers about me to prove my identity. Had you asked it instead of playing the dirty sneak all the evening as you have, I should have satisfied you in five minutes. But now explain the charge and show your authority, or the first man who lays hands on me dies the death."

And the display of a pocket six-shooter, and the sharp click of its lock, and the steady aim from an arm, brawny and untrembling that bore directly upon the officer's head, served to clench these bold words. A dead silence of a minute ensued. A brief conference with the landlord who was watching the proceedings, and the officer yielded; he exhibited the telegrams he had received, showed the marked resemblance between the bank-robber and our excited friend, proved his own identity by the testimony of the landlord, and in a conciliatory tone requested that no further defence be made.

So Brother Larkin consented to accompany the party to the house of detention. Placing his pocket-book in the hands of the clerk and restoring his pistol to his pocket, he had moved a few steps towards the door, when a new and more startling incident was added to the drama. The chief detective drew from his own pocket the rattling objects which might have been specie but proved to be handcuffs, and began to arrange them for use upon our Brother's hands.

All the soul of the outraged man now rose in arms. He sprang back to his corner at a bound, prostrating one of the officers in the act. He again drew his pistol, cocked it at a motion and fired upon the officious detective with so good an aim as to knock the hat from his head; an inch lower would have made a vacancy in that department forever. Cocking the dangerous little machine again, he held it forward and "Now which of you are ready for your coffins?" he boldly said.

The report of the pistol called down from their rooms in an incredibly short space of time a score of travellers. The police from the streets gathered in like eagles to their prey. Before the smoke of that first discharge had dispersed, the office was crowded with persons, crowded all but that handy nook in which was ensconced our friend Larkin, who still gaily and invitingly said:

"Who will be the next? my hand is in now and I never miss my shot twice."

A venerable man, grey haired and mild, evidently a preacher, proposed a compromise.

"I consented to the arrest. I started peaceably to go with that man. He had a number of men to help him, yet he was about to hand-cuff me, that is an indignity that can only be inflicted on my corpse. One step nearer and you die." This last remark to the ci-devant Col. Westcott, who was quietly slipping upon his prey. The detective hastily slipped back.

"Tell us who you are," said the grey-haired man of peace. "Commit no murder if you are innocent, I for one, will stand by you."

THE QUESTION OF HEREDITARY GRAND MASTER.

Bro. J. S. B., of No. 175, has thought fit to question the remarks made by a member of the "German Masonic Union" (to which society I have the honour to belong), and claiming an equal right with him to speak pro or con respecting any matter of Masonic interest, I respectfully beg to support my fellow member—whoever he may be—and to strongly object to the method Bro. J. S. B. has taken to ventilate his opinions. So far as his belief is concerned, that, of course, mainly depends upon the evidence he has had submitted to him; but seeing that evidently the
