The published quarterly balance-sheet is a very prosperous one, and seems unmistakably to point to great material well doing. Indeed, if the present position of our Order in England can be fairly gauged by the Grand Lodge financial quarterly statements, as must we apprehend be the case, never at any time in our history had we so many tokens of a flourishing, nay of an increasing, fraternity. The Fund of Benevolence starts with a balance for the quarter of £1124. It has received on dividends (representing investments to the amount of £35,200) £397 14s. 11d. for the half year, £12 12s. for dispensations, contributions of lodges £2705 6s. 11d.; in all £4369 19s. 10d. The quarter closes March 31st, commencing January 1st, 1875. The Fund of Benevolence has paid for the relief of Masonic distress to our brethren and their widows during that period £1378, to the Royal Masonic Benevolent Institution £200. It has made an investment of £931 5s., leaving a balance to the good of £1860 13s. 10d. A very satisfactory return. We beg, however, to call attention to the fact, that the quarterly amount of relief reaches to the large sum of £1378, moving onwards rapidly to an expenditure of £6000 per annum. The return for the Fund of General Purposes is equally striking and improving. It began the year with a balance of £1195 11s. 7d. During the first three months of 1875 it received from Mr. Bacon for rents £89 5s. net; contribution from Grand Chapter, for Salaries £84; from the Tavern Company, Limited, for one quarter's rent to Christmas, net, £347 1s. 8d.; Rent of lodge rooms during the quarter, £378 16s.; sale of Book of Constitutions, less discount, £94 8s. 6d.; Dispensations, £21 18s. 6d.; Rent for the three Masonic Institutions, £27; Insurance for Tavern Company, £19 10s.; and Contributions of Lodges, £3014 7s. 6d.; in all £5271 10s. 1d. The expenditure has been as follows:—Annuity to Bro. Farnfield, £62 10s.; Salaries, £462 8s.; Servants' Wages, £96 15s.; Postages, £36; Coals, £26 8s.; Fire Insurances, £78 2s. 6d.; Government Licenses, £1 16s.; Parochial Rates, £145 17s. 3d.; Repairs, £177 16s. 1d.; Gas and Coke, £32 1s. 3d.; Certificates, £98 3s. 10d.; Reporting, £4 13s.; Small Expenses, £31 1s. 6d.; Water Rate, £9 3s. 6d.; Stationery for half-year to December, 1874, £10 0s. 7d.; Cleaning Windows for the year, £31 5s.; Printing, £71 15s. 4d.; Petty Disbursements, £80 6s. 7d.; Casual Relief, £5 0s. 6d.; Royal Masonic Institution for Girls, £37 10s.; Royal Masonic Institution for Boys, £37 10s.; Purchase of Consols, £1862 10s.; Balance, £997 15s. 6d. Thus the whole amount received by the two funds conjointly is £10,141 8s. 11d., while the sum actually expended is £4489 4s. 7d., conjoint investments amount to £2793 15s., and conjoint balances to £2858 9s. 4d. That this prosperous state of affairs is a continuing one is evident from the further fact, that on the 13th August the conjoint balances amounted to £3842 10s. 7d., besides £75 for petty cash and £96 15 for wages in our excellent brother the Grand Secretary's hands. Such, as we have said above, are our quarters' accounts ending March 31st, this year of light and grace, and we beg unfeignedly to congratulate our readers on these unmistakeable proofs of the soundness of our financial arrangements, and the great material prosperity of our good Order. We cannot conclude this short resumé without expressing what we know to be the general feeling of the Craft, warm and grateful appreciation of the long and most important services of our very worthy and zealous Grand Treasurer.

THE RELIGION OF FREEMASONRY.

Freemasonry has many friends, but, strange to say, it has also many enemies. We have not in the progressive march of religion and civilization and culture, outlived, alas! the animosities of mortals, or the love of slander. Hence, despite many distinct evidences of the truly religious spirit which ever makes our Anglo-Saxon Freemasonry noteworthy, and its numerous works of admitted utility and benevolence, it has pleased some envenomed writers to term Freemasons unbelievers, infidels, revolutionists, and to give them many other agreeable names, and even to describe them as utterly irreligious, and distinctively atheistical. Such charges are openly made by professedly God-fearing people, and are eagerly caught at by the credulous, and hastily handed on by the inconsiderate. One great authority terms our Masonic Lodges "Synagogues of Satan," and ourselves "children of the Evil One," pleasant appellations for our peaceful and religious Order. It only serves to prove, if, alas! such a matter required proof, the inveteracy of intolerance, and the violence of the "odium theologicum." That such diatribes should be issued at all is very distressing, but that they should be promulgated for the glory of God, and in the name of Christianity, is alike an awful paradox, and a humiliating verity. And the hard part of the whole affair is, that, so far from our Anglo-Saxon Freemasonry being irreligious or infidel, it is really a religious Order, and we believe positively as orthodox as any sucking Ritualist, or as Pio Nono himself. It is true that Freemasonry does not deal with dogma quâ dogma, neither does it lay down articles of agreement, or creeds, or catechisms. Freemasonry is not religion—it is not a Church—it is not a dispenser of doctrines or sacraments. It is not an abstract religious organisation, with the tests and privileges of faith for its own people, but it is still, despite what it is not, a very religious body. All such matters and questions are not of its domain, and it leaves them entirely to the ministers of religion. For Freemasonry, though carped at by some, and misunderstood by others, and condemned by more, has an individuality of its own. It ignores the contentions of conflicting denominations. It may be wrong in doing so, but it does so, and its teaching may be paraphrastically in this respect put as follows: "Commend me or condemn me, it matters not, here I am, whether you like it or not, and you cannot 'root me out.' I hold out the hand of friendship and fraternity to all who acknowledge the Supreme Creator of all, and accepting the moral law of God, or the moral law of Nature (as in the case of non-Christian Masons), are willing to work together, in labours of humane sympathy, for the honour of God, the good of the brotherhood, and the welfare of mankind." It is impossible but that such teaching as this must antagonise many prepossessions, and impinge on many denominational views. The ardent Romanist or Ritualist, the pious Churchman or Nonconformist, may say, "Why, you deny the foundation of Christianity, you do not recognise the claims of the Church, general or individual, you are really nothing but Deists, or Theists, or Voltairians, or even Pantheists." This is what now has been actually quite recently said, and by those who ought to know better. And the reply of Freemasonry is very simple. "It is untrue to say that, because we take so wide a platform, we are, therefore, irreligious or anti-Christian. Such is not a logical case of 'sequitur.' We do not oppose or deny Christianity or antagonize any body of Christians, and we do not profess to decide your difficulties and disputes, we leave all such 'vexatas quaestiones' to your own divines. We are friendly to all, we quarrel with no man's views or opinions, and such 'latitudinarianism' as you consider it, and so it may appear to some, is, in our opinion, not only needful amid the acknowledged schools of thought and dogma to-day, but constitutes a very good and useful basis for our world-wide Order. We are, despite our refusal to mix up in the controversies of men, a very religious body. We begin and close our meetings with prayer. The open Bible is seen in every Anglo-Saxon lodge. We have many most worthy brethren, our good Chaplains, and we often attend public worship as Freemasons. Though we do not dispute, we believe most firmly in, and we seek to regulate our lives by, the precepts of the Best of Books. We labour actively in the cause of kindness, sympathy, charity, and brotherly love. We educate, and clothe and feed the orphan, we aid the widow, we care for the old and infirm. What more can we do? If we are not religious who is in this world? Such is the fair and simple ad hominem appeal of our maligned brethren to-day. Who can gainsay it? Like a great many other cruel insinuations, vile charges, and lying slanders just now, such crude and irrational assertions of hasty religionists must be left to silence and contempt. Though we are said not to be religious, our religion has taught us this, not to return railing for railing, but to bear the unjust attacks even of the most violent of our adversaries, in a spirit of patience and peacefulness. They cannot crush Freemasonry. "Nonostante il nuove."

THE CHESHIRE EDUCATIONAL MASONIC INSTITUTION.

We have before us the twelfth report of this very useful provincial institution. We are happy to say that though comparatively a young plant in the great forest of Freemasonry, it is rising to strength and usefulness, and is flourishing more and more with each succeeding year of existence. Its balance sheet is a prosperous one. It began the year with a balance of £251 15s. 10d. It has received during the past twelve months for fees from lodges and chapters, by its special provincial arrangements, £43 2s. 6d.; donations from lodges, chapters, and brethren, £144 12s.; subscriptions from lodges and members, £91 0s. 6d.; by special donations from Lord and Lady de Tabley, £7; from the Stockport brethren, £5 5s.; by dividends, £95 0s. 5d.; and by the repayment of a Mersey bond, £200; in all £737 16s. 3d. It had last year £1995 3s. 10d. invested capital; it has this year £2216 11s. 2d. Its expenditure is as follows:—Payments for education of twenty children, £127 12s. 1d.; payments for advancement of two children, £8 3s. 6d.; by expenses of all kinds, £28 13s. 6d.; purchase of stock, £303; and total balance £370 1s. 2d. Such is the satisfactory balance sheet of a useful little institution, and one that does much credit to the Cheshire Freemasons. We are inclined to think that such institutions as these are alike Masonic and meritorious, and may fairly be considered as "succursales" to the two great Metropolitan Institutions. For though the Boys' School can soon be adapted to receive many more inmates, the Girls' School is full, and cannot, we believe, without very great expense, be further enlarged. Hence it is just possible, as the needs of our Order increase, that these provincial institutions will afford a very helping hand to many a poor orphan, in the greatest of all needs, education. We do not say that such institutions do everything for our orphans that they could do, or that the mere payment of school dues is a discharge to us of our duties and obligations towards our deceased brethren's children. But they are good as far as they go, they afford a valuable help, gratefully received by many, and we cannot shut our eyes to the fact that, though not everything we can desiderate, they are certainly useful and benevolent, and seem to call out much local interest and liberality. As we said before, we deem it not improbable that, seeing how many candidates there are, and how many disappointed ones, our good brethren in the provinces may follow in the wake of Lancashire and Cheshire, and establish similar institutions, constituting to some, no doubt, a half way house to the greater institutions in London. We congratulate our Cheshire brethren on the success so far attendant on their useful educational charity.

ALLEGED MASONIC INFIDELITY.

"A Freemason" has written with reference to this ridiculous charge of the correspondent of the "Church Herald," and disposes of it "more suo." He seems, however, to be somewhat dissatisfied with our remarks on the same subject, and points out what he conceives to be a difference of statement between Bro. Parkinson and ourselves. He also seems to find fault with our expression of the "revealed word of God," and brings in, much to our astonishment, the foreign argument of the Hindoo, Mussulman, &c., &c. We wish, then, to point out that there is no real difference between Bro. Parkinson and ourselves. We both express the same teaching, though in a different way of putting it. He makes the universality of Freemasonry to consist in all who accept the Great Father, and Maker, and Ruler of the world and of men, and obedience to the moral law; we put it as expressing those who acknowledge the Great Architect of the Universe, and accept his revealed word, which, as the basis of the moral law, includes it as the greater does the lesser. Our authoritative teaching terms the "practice of every moral and social virtue," the "solid foundation" of Freemasonry, and hence Bro. Parkinson was using the well-known words of our English ceremonial. But we are also taught to give our "most serious contemplation to the volume of the Sacred Law," and we are charged to "consider it as the unerring standard of truth and justice, and to regulate our actions by the divine precepts it contains, since therein we shall be taught the duty we owe to God, to our neighbour, and to ourselves." This is a paraphrastic way of putting what we said, as if it is "unerring" it is divine, and if it is divine, it is revealed to us from God. The argument with respect to the Mahomedan and Hindoo, &c., has nothing to do with this question: that is an entirely different matter, and stands independently on its own basis. We accept all, as we said before, into our lodges who accept the Great Architect and Father of the Universe, and in the way most binding on their religious consciences, and, of course, in the case of non-Christians, they are governed by the moral law of natural life. But the Bible, nevertheless, the revealed and inspired word of God Most High, remains in all our lodges, by the fundamental rules of our Order, as an emblem of that deep and true religious reverence and simple unostentatious piety, which ever characterizes Freemasonry. Having said this, as far as we are concerned, the subject must drop. It is not one, which by its discussion tends to edifying, and we have no intention of turning our unpoetical "Freemason" into an arena of theological discussions. One thing is clear, the Bible is inseparably connected with English Freemasonry; it is alike the "decus tutamenque" of its great system—and long may it so remain. Nothing has so tended to make our English Masonic system what it is as its loyal and unwavering acknowledgment of the binding obligation of God's revealed word, and God's moral law, and we may ask to-day, who will venture to take it from our lodges? quis separabit us and it? We think it is a pity that "A Freemason" has raised such a question at all, but having replied to his letter, we shall not re-open the discussion in our columns, as we are quite sure, with all deference to him, that it is neither good for religion, nor for the Craft.

THE "FREEMASON."

Like persons of sound business habits we think it well from time to time to "take stock," and to impart the result to our readers. We are happy in being able to announce that very prosperous is the condition of the "Freemason." We have to thank, and we do warmly thank, a large and increasing circle of readers, increasing weekly, for all their good wishes and kindly support. Our publisher has indeed good cause to feel satisfied, and even proud, of the result of his many years of sacrifice and waiting. The tide at last has turned, and is coming in with ever augmenting strength. At this moment the "Freemason" is most truly cosmopolitan. It has readers in all portions of the known and habitable world, and from all we have frequent assurances of approval, sympathy, and encouragement. And yet when we say this, we feel bound to make a little qualification. A good correspondent of ours wrote to us the other day, saying, "I should like to take the 'Freemason,' but I see no Irish news in it." Like the Frenchman of old we may say "A qui la faute." The Irish Grand Lodge authorities have set themselves against all Masonic publications, and even their late lamented Grand Master, the Duke of Leinster, with all his courtesy and "bonhomie," would give no patronage to the Masonic Press. Yet let us see how the system works, and to what a "reductio ad absurdum" the argument and practice of the Irish Grand Lodge authorities, all good fellows, have come to! They forbid all authorized publication in Masonic papers, and we can receive no official tidings, and as a rule little Irish intelligence. All that we do receive we owe to the Masonic feeling and liberal views of some warm-hearted Irish brethren from various parts of Ireland. But though the Irish Grand Lodge will not allow us to receive official reports, or encourage us in any way, long reports of their Grand Lodge proceedings appear in "Saunders' News Letter," and other Irish papers, and it has more than once come to pass that we have been actually compelled to copy from an Irish non-Masonic journal the account of the Irish Grand Lodge proceedings! If any of our friendly brethren across the Channel will think, they will see that such a position is neither consistent with Masonic principles of justice, nor conducive to the honour and dignity of the Irish Grand Lodge itself. Indeed, the fact that such reports do appear, and will appear, is a proof how idle are such "sumptuary" regulations, how vain are the precautions of "Green Tape," how hopeless is the effort, to repress a legitimate aspiration for Masonic intelligence, and lawful reports of the proceedings of the Irish Grand Lodge, and the Irish Craft generally. We ask then the Irish officials to-day, to relax a little of this needless strictness, and to depart from this unwise distrust of the Masonic Press. We are not appealing for favour, or partiality, or patronage—we simply beg for Masonic fair play. If the Irish Grand Lodge, under their most distinguished Grand Master, will depart from this uncalled for reticence, if they will within due bounds allow the "Freemason" to publish from time to time such reports as they themselves even deem fitting to be published, a great gain will accrue to Irish Freemasonry we feel sure, and to Irish Masonic literature. As it is, there is hardly any Masonic literature in Ireland, except, to use a bull, what comes from England! So we hope for better things! In the struggle that is going on with the Ultramontane party, the Irish Freemasons are not and cannot be a purely passive body; they must sympathize with our efforts to uphold the dignity of our Order, and to protect it against mendacious statements and intolerant persecutions. We trust then that we may receive in the future more fraternal support and encouragement from the Irish Grand Lodge, and Irish lodges and brethren. We shall always be most happy to give prominence to Irish reports, and anything that can advance the interests of our Irish brethren and the Grand Lodge of Ireland will have our hearty and zealous co-operation.

PROVINCIAL GRAND LODGE OF HAMPSHIRE IN THE ISLE OF WIGHT.

To the Editor of the Freemason.

Dear Sir and Brother,—
I was sorry to see by a letter in your last issue that the selection of the names of those present at our late P.G.L. meeting at Ryde, as published in your paper, did not meet the approval of one of our brethren.
I think I cannot do better than plead guilty of the responsibility of forwarding you the names, and in so doing I am certain all who know me will believe that nothing could be more repugnant to my feelings to do any act which might have a tendency to interfere with the unanimity of feeling happily existing between the brethren of Hampshire and those of the Isle of Wight.

The fact is that from the signature book, containing 200 or 250 names, I selected all the Provincial Grand and Past Provincial Grand Officers; this resulted in the publication of 37 names, 7 of which represented lodges in the island, in which there are 4 working lodges, the remaining 30 names representing lodges on the mainland, where they number in all 23.

In the hurry of copying out these names I did not notice that the P.G. Officers of the Cowes and Medina Lodges had either unfortunately not been able to attend, or had omitted to sign the attendance book.

I am, Sir and Brother, yours fraternally,

J. G. LE FEUVRE,

P.G. Sec. Hants and Isle of Wight.

THE INSTALLATION OF THE M.W.G. MASTER.

To the Editor of the Freemason.

Dear Sir and Brother,—

Several portraits of our M.W.G.M. being published, and in course of publication, in which different jewels are exhibited on his breast and hanging from his neck, I should like to know the actual jewels (both Masonic and otherwise) that he wore on his installation, as some I have seen on the portraits are those belonging to Masonic Orders not recognised by the Grand Lodge of England.

I am, Sir and Brother, yours fraternally,

JOHN SMITH, 1257.

THE POWERS OF W. MASTERS.

To the Editor of the Freemason.

Dear Sir and Brother,—

I shall feel greatly obliged if you could in your next issue give me your opinion as to the extent of the control which a W.M. possesses over his lodge, and what constitutes incapability of discharging the duties of his office other than by death or removal—see Constitutions, Art. 6, of Masters and Wardens of Lodges.

It often happens, I imagine, that a Master is temporarily absent from his lodge on account of sickness or other pressing emergency, and what I want to know is whether such absence deprives him of all power and authority over his lodge. Has the lodge, for instance, any right to refuse to obey his directions that he should be regularly furnished with a copy of the summons for each meeting, and a report of the proceedings thereof, in order that he may be kept acquainted with all that was going on during his absence. The length of the term of such absence would not, I apprehend, affect the question in the least degree, for if absence at all deprives a Master of authority over his lodge, he would lose it as much by one day's absence from the place where the lodge meets as by an absence of several months. And if a Master's absence is so fatal to his authority, it follows, I think, that all the W.M.'s of provincial and foreign lodges who attended H.K.H.'s installation as M.W. Grand Master in April last lost all control over their respective lodges during their absence from the places of meetings of their lodges, and their wishes and instructions would therefore be necessarily disregarded!

Yours fraternally,
18th August, 1875.

AN ABSENT W.M.

[A very difficult question to answer.—Ed.]

GRIMSBY MASONIC HALL.

To the Editor of the Freemason.

Dear Sir and Brother,—

On the 2nd inst. I was present at the laying of the foundation stone of the Masonic Hall, Great Grimsby, and from the large gathering together of P.G. Officers, and several noted members of the Craft, I quite expected to see a full account of that most interesting ceremony in your paper, and looked forward with impatience for this last week's number, and I was somewhat disappointed at not even a word being mentioned, even to say that the ceremony had taken place, especially when the stone was laid by one who had done so much for our province and for the Craft. I now beg to furnish you with one of our local papers, and beg that you will give room in your valuable paper for at least a moiety of the report.

I am, dear Sir and Brother, yours fraternally,

THOS. FRYER,

W.M. 1282, P.G.S. of Lincolnshire.

[We only received the account on Friday, nor had we any intimation from any brother of what was going to take place. We publish the report in this impression. Brethren who ask for reports to be inserted should attend to the notices, and not blame us for their own carelessness.—Ed.]

MASONIC INFIDELITY.

To the Editor of the Freemason.

Dear Sir and Brother,—

I have read your criticism on page 360, but while cordially placing myself upon your side, I am not sure that the small heart and weak brain of "A Churchman" were really worthy of the rubbing down you give them. I have no doubt but that this innocent genius imagines that he can reckon up the history of our globe upon his ten digits—thumbs included—in five minutes. The idea that rises up before my mind is that, having expended the large sum of sixpence sterling upon a pocket telescope, he has lately taken to studying astronomy, and upon directing his gaze to the stars, with the big end of the said telescope next his eye, for a better view, of course, he imagined himself to be a second Archimedes, and that with his pen for a lever, the telescope for a prop, and himself the power, he could easily overturn the world, especially the Masonic portion of it. I fear, however, he will not effect much, as the tools are too soft.

Leaving "A Churchman" to digest his "abominable sentence," and finish his work at his leisure, I would respectfully call attention to the various renderings given by Bro. Parkinson and yourself of what is requisite in a candidate for Freemasonry. Bro. Parkinson says "Let a man's religion or mode of worship be what it may, he is not excluded from the Order, provided he believe in the Glorious Architect of Heaven and Earth, and practise the sacred duties of morality." You say, "In the lodge we know nothing of religious disputations, differences, decrees, or dogmas; we accept all good men who believe in the Great Architect of the Universe, and revere the Revelation which He has given us." Now, I would ask, Why this difference in the latter clause? So far as I can Masonically judge, the words, "and revere the Revelation which He has given us," are an interpolation. Bro. Parkinson does not use them, and I do not see how you could have penned them in a Masonic article unless through inadvertence. Were they intentionally included I would feel inclined to say that their insertion caused the one part of the sentence to be contradictory to, or inconsistent with, the other part. We are told that a Mahomedan may make as good a Freemason as a Christian, but as "the Revelation" of the one is not "the Revelation" of the other, it follows that the less said about Revelation the better for Masonic consistency, and for their standing as Freemasons. If it were not for the cursed selfishness that makes a political tool of it, Religion would be left more to the private home than it generally is. The world, however, is not yet old enough for that, hence the need of Freemasonry.

Yours fraternally,

A FREEMASON.

[The words animadverted upon are our own. See our leader.—Ed.]

BRO. MAJOR BURGESS AND THE MARK DEGREE.

To the Editor of the Freemason.

Dear Sir and Brother,—

I find that in my last letter I omitted, under paragraph 3, to say that of the persons there enumerated as forming the "Judicial Council," Nos. 2, 3, 8, 9, and 10, are all, to the best of my knowledge and belief, in addition to Nos. 1 and 4, "Knights of the Order of the Temple," so called. It seems important, as touching "a Mark Master's" remarkable statement about that Council, that this fact should be stated.

"A Mark Master," apparently retreating from the position, that I wrote a letter making a false charge, and marked that letter "private" in order to avoid the consequences of so doing, now says I have made "a disgraceful charge," and "against a brother Mason." I ask your readers, before they accept his statement, to require of him good proof that my retirement from being a Masonic Templar (a point proved by my letter to Mr. Tinkler, which he aids me by publishing), on account of certain conduct by a Masonic Templar, was merely a pretence and was not a bona fide step on my part, sincerely taken by me on Masonic grounds, and in as a quiet a manner as was possible consistently with the circumstances.

I have not, as "A Mark Master" alleges, "refused to withdraw or prove," to any Masonic body competent to deal with the matter, the true statement of the true cause of my retirement as a Masonic Templar. But I have refused, and I do refuse, as a Mason and on Masonic grounds, to enter into any discussion respecting a Masonic matter with a body which has openly avowed itself to be not a Masonic body; and from this position I have no intention of retreating.

The charges brought against me by "A Mark Master" are new evidence of the use of the weapon misrepresentation by "the Order of the Temple." Until the close of the meeting of the "Judicial Council," and afterwards, I was not aware that I had been charged by the "brotherhood of gentlemen" with ungentlemanlike conduct. The gushing virtue of "A Mark Master," which prevents him from meeting me in "society," is it is sad to think, unlikely to be put to the test; and, as a comment upon his fear of contamination, I may add, that since the meeting of the "Judicial Council," which in February last went through the farce of trying me, I have had the pleasure of meeting, and also of corresponding, with more than one of the seven "Knights" who, with three other gentlemen, composed it, and their greeting has been as warm and as friendly as of yore. Further than this, let me ask, if my conduct as a man and as a Mason has been such as "A Mark Master" wishes to make it appear, how comes it that, not daring to make a public statement of truth under his own name, in the cause of virtue, he takes refuge under a series of insinuations made anonymously, and with evident intention? How comes it, too, that if my conduct has been such as "A Mark Master" insinuates, his Mark brethren, the three Past Grand Mark Masters who sat on the Judicial Council, acquiesced in its decision, which, as far as the Mark Degree could, upheld me as against the Temple by allowing me a month in which to retire from the Mark Degree? Why did not these three gentlemen, careful of the honour of the Mark Degree, insist upon my sham expulsion by "the Order of the Temple" being then and there carried out, as regards the Mark Degree, against me? How comes it that, with a month allowed me for retirement, I have declined for a single moment to entertain the notion of obligatory retirement from a body against which conscience accuses me of no offence?

My case is in truth a simple one, but it is not what "A Mark Master" wishes the Mark Degree to believe it to be. It is simply this, that since December, 1872, when "The Order of the Temple" came into existence, I have, as a loyal subject, objected to it as a sham and unauthorised Order of Knighthood, and I have, as a Mason, objected to Masonry being used as a foundation for any such thing. If I had supported the new "Order," would you have ever heard anything but good of me from "A Mark Master" and his friends? I guess not. The "Order of the Temple" is, self-acknowledged, not a Masonic body. It has, however, been glad enough to allow me and a large number of Masonic Templars to attend its meetings, no doubt thinking thereby to establish a claim of allegiance upon those who may be weak enough to admit it. As a non-Masonic body it cannot be a party to a Masonic treaty; and if the Mark Degree had not been under the rule of the ruler of the Temple no Grand Mark Master Mason would have dared to say that such a treaty could validly exist.

Faithfully yours,

CHAS. J. BURGESS.

SIR CHRISTOPHER WREN.

To the Editor of the Freemason.

Dear Sir and Brother,—

It is amusing to see how gallantly our good Bro. Buchan rides his hobby, though in this instance he seems to be riding it literally to death.

He will not have the pre-1717 Freemasonry at any price, and will shut his eyes to the facts of indubitable history.

I ask him again the question he has left unanswered, and to which, if he declines to reply, as far as I am concerned, and I believe, as far as Bro. Hughan is concerned, the discussion must be closed in the "Freemason." The question is this:—If your theory is correct, how do you get over the evidence of Dr. Plot, a non-Mason, and of Elias Ashmole? I confine myself to-day to these two points. Take Plot first of all. In the last quarter of the seventeenth century he states that Freemasonry had existed for many years in Staffordshire, that gentlemen and operatives belonged to it, practically, very much the same as it still is, and that he had seen a parchment roll, no doubt one of our MS. Constitutions. He was not friendly altogether to the Craft; to use a French word, he seeks to "persuade" its pretensions to long antiquity, he criticizes its chronology, but of the fact of its existence, and that long prior to 1682, he has no doubt. Is he speaking truth? Could he be mistaken? If it must be admitted, as I believe it must be, that he is speaking truth, and that he cannot be mistaken (he had no motive to be so) on such a subject, what becomes of Bro. Buchan's theory? There is so little difference between Dr. Plot's description of the Staffordshire Freemasonry and our own even to-day, "mutatis mutandis," that it is quite clear to any fair reader of his book that the order he alludes to is the same as our own. So, too, as regards Elias Ashmole. "Society of Freemasons." It is quite clear that the Freemasons to which he belonged were not the London Masons' Company. It was an independent organization, and the meeting in Basinghall Street was a meeting, in all probability, as Bro. Hughan suggests, of the actual body from which the Lodge of Antiquity descends. If so, I ask again, where is Bro. Buchan's theory?

There are many other points and evidences which might be adduced to prove that a society did exist akin to our own altogether, and the fact that Freemasonry is alluded to as a secret institution in a public magazine quite early in the eighteenth century is, in itself, utterly fatal to Bro. Buchan's elaborate argument. I await his reply. With regard to Sir Christopher Wren, I do not lay so much stress on Aubrey as some do, but accept his evidence as non-Masonic corroboration. I am somewhat inclined to believe that Sir Christopher Wren was a member of our Order earlier a good deal than Aubrey puts it, and that our histories are correct, and for this reason. Anderson in 1738 states the fact distinctly, though I admit not so clearly in 1723, and as Sir Christopher Wren only died in 1723, there must have been many living who knew the fact to be as Anderson stated it or not. It is hardly likely that if Anderson had stated a deliberate untruth some one or other of the eager assailants of Freemasonry then would not have controverted his statement. Pace Bro. Buchan, I am inclined to accept Anderson's statement, though I think we may yet find better evidence of the fact.

A MASONIC STUDENT.

LODGE OF INDUSTRY, GATESHEAD.

To the Editor of the Freemason.

Dear Sir and Brother,—

In the "Masonic Magazine" for this month, I see a notice with several extracts from an old minute book of the Lodge of Industry, Gateshead, No. 142, and amongst those extracts I see that several persons signed the rules from 1732 to 1773. I presume the lodge was then located at Swalwell, a village about 4 miles from Gateshead, at which place it was supposed to have been founded by some of the operative Masons brought from the South of England by Sir Ambrose Crowley, who established large ironworks there, and at Winton Mill and Winton villages, near Swalwell. Can you tell by the old minute book if anyone of the name of "George Heppel" was amongst the number of the persons who signed the four columns in the book? He was residing either at Swalwell or Winton Mill about that time, and was manager for the ironworks of Crowley, Millington, and Co. He is an ancestor of mine, and am anxious to know if he was a Mason, as I think it is very likely, being one of the most influential men in the village at that time.

Yours fraternally,

CHAS. ANDERSON, P.M. 1046.

[In answer to Bro. Anderson, I am happy to inform him that the name of George Heppel occurs twice. June 24th, 1756. Enters George Heppel, and his name also is found among those who became a "Highroadman," June 23rd, 1759.]

MINUTES AND THEIR CONFIRMATION.

To the Editor of the Freemason.

Dear Sir and Brother,—

The view taken by our Bro. P.G.W. in the "Freemason" of 21st August is not only legal but rational, viz., that the minutes of previous meeting are put for confirmation "that everybody may have an opportunity of recording his vote on one or other of the meetings." The Book of Constitutions undoubtedly gives this privilege, in the case under discussion, as to the W.M. elect of a lodge being disqualified for re-installation by the non-confirmation of the minutes—it is distinctly laid down that "Should the minutes of the election of Master not be confirmed, then a summons must be issued for the following regular meeting of the lodge, setting forth that the brethren were again to proceed to elect a Master." This appears to me so clear that it should satisfy even Bro. Tebbs, who thinks it not necessary to confirm the minutes of a previous meeting, but simply to record that they are correctly entered. Again, with respect to an elected Master ruling the lodge, Bro. Tebbs says, in his letter published the 14th August, that it is a gross absurdity to allow a brother to assume a position of absolute authority, and others, at the next meeting, take it from him by reversing his election. True, Bro. Tebbs, it would be if such were the correct reading, but it means, without doubt, that he may rule the lodge as an elected Master after the confirmation of the minutes, i.e., providing for any hitch in the installation, by the absence of the Installing Master, or of the W.M. elect, on the day of confirmation of the minutes.

Yours fraternally,
MAGNUS OHREN,
P.P.G.W. for Surrey.

THE PROVINCIAL GRAND LODGE OF WEST YORKSHIRE.

To the Editor of the Freemason.

Dear Sir and Brother,—

I am very sorry to have to call attention again to the no doubt unintentional slight offered to this distinguished province by the Mark Masons.

Last year they termed their meeting "The Meeting of the Provincial Grand Lodge of West Yorkshire." This year they repeat it.

It is true that you, Sir, careful as you are, head the column "Mark Masonry," but they simply term themselves "Provincial Grand Lodge of West Yorkshire."

I venture to think such an usurpation of the honours of others is very "bad form," and very un-Masonic. The proper heading is The Mark Provincial Grand Lodge of West Yorkshire.

I will not be invidious or carping enough to ask "cui bono" such an assemblage? for that may be a matter of opinion or of taste, but I wish, as an old Provincial Officer of West Yorkshire, to repeat that there is only one Provincial Grand Lodge of West Yorkshire, presided over by our distinguished brother, Sir H. Edwards. Some people may say, What's in a name? but, curiously enough, there is often a good deal in a name, and in such matters we cannot be too accurate. Many of the brethren, named and present, I know personally, and worthy men and Masons they are, and I hope they will admit that my letter is just, and that they will be more careful in their nomenclature for the future.

Yours fraternally,
A. W. Y. P. G. OFFICER.

MASONIC DRINKING MUG.

I was lately shown a pint drinking mug, of good delf, apparently of the last century, on which, between two pillars, and under ordinary Masonic emblems, was the following inscription:—

"Friendship is Love, benevolent, sincere,
'Tis such as Masons do to Masons bear;
This gift divine the power supreme bestows,
To aid their joys and dissipate their woes."

Can any of the readers of the "Freemason" tell me the author of the lines, and when, where, and by whom these Masonic mugs were made?

GEORGE MARKHAM TWEDDELL, Stockport.

HIGHRODIAMS.

I shall be obliged to any brethren who will throw a light on the meaning of this word. Bro. W. J. Hughan objects to my suggestion that it is a corruption of "Harodim," though I confess I think it is more likely than anything else. Bro. Findel suggests that it is a corruption of "High Order." But as we have the word "Highrodiam" twice in the same page, as also the words "High Order," and all in the same handwriting, that can hardly be.

Review.

The "Secret Warfare of Freemasonry against Church and State. Translated from the German." Burns, Oates & Co., Portman-street.

We have perused this somewhat portentous and pretentious work, which in its bright cover and 288 pages might be better worth reading! It is translated from the German, no doubt carefully and skilfully enough, and harmonizes wonderfully with the Ultramontane and Ritualistic view of the hour, a view we believe equally unfair and intolerant. As if to add fuel to the flames of suppressed inquisitorial emotion, the editor gives us a little preface of his own, which is most conspicuous for its proof of his utter incompetence to deal with the subject he professes thus to give to the world with the sanction of a scholar, a thinker, and a gentleman. What can we reckon of his accuracy when he tells us boldly that Freemasons number above seventeen millions of members? Ex hoc disce! His 63 pages of preface are all what may be fairly called "padding," and only demonstrate conclusively that the editor's acquaintance with the matter is second-hand, that he is working as it were on a given theme, and that he writes the preface, because he must say something. But we are unable to discover in his somewhat "feeble forcible" expressions anything like originality of thought, or accuracy of statement. He is in fact but a copyist of other men's conclusions, a retailer of other men's thunder.

He has taken up the stereotyped opinions of all extreme fanatics at the present moment, who seem to think that they can crush Freemasonry by the violence of their language, and the vehemence of their accusations. The "Saturday Review" has, no doubt, thought well to say that the "Roman Catholic condemnation of Freemasonry is after all not unnatural, and that the Roman Catholics are justified, on their own principles, in their hostility to Freemasonry." But while we have never denied the abstract right of the Roman Catholic Church to forbid Freemasonry to its own people, though we believe its fear of Freemasonry utterly chimerical, even if real, we object to the Church of Rome branding Freemasonry generally as disloyal and irreligious, and making use of the virulent abuse respecting all Freemasons she has thought proper to do. When we turn to the pamphlet we see at once that it is composed by a very ardent Romanist, or a follower of the Ultramontane school, probably an affiliated of the Jesuits. He has been at infinite pains to collect the rubbish of the past century, not forgetting the Abbi Barruel, and he has diligently put together all the speeches and acts which seem to give to Freemasonry in France, Austria, Belgium, and even Germany, the aspect of a pure political confederation, animated by the secret aims of the Illuminés, or directed by the teaching of the International. Well, we meet him at once and join issue with his premise.

His argument is as follows, put syllogistically:—The views of the Masonic body are avowedly revolutionary and irreligious. Freemasonry holds these views, therefore Freemasonry is revolutionary and irreligious.

Now he has put a part for the whole, and is arguing from a particular to an universal.

That some Freemasons have made foolish and irreligious speeches, and committed absurd acts, we do not deny, but if any body is to be judged by the speeches and acts of individuals, we know no body which must be so condemned as the Church of Rome.

All that the writer can fairly assert is what we do not controvert, that individual Freemasons in those countries have at times been very weak and very perverse, but we are not aware that any of the foreign Grand Lodges, to which this writer alludes, have ever endorsed the theories to which he calls attention, and the assertions of which he so loudly complains.

In Germany, for instance, whatever may have been the views of particular writers, or even passing epochs, with very few exceptions, the German Freemasons now are a loyal and religiously minded fraternity of good men and true, and keep themselves, like ourselves, aloof from religious discussions, and political disputes. It is idle, then, for Ultramontane writers to "hark back" to the past. The real question is, what does Freemasonry profess avowedly to-day? We have already admitted that much may be said for individual wrong teaching, but the Order is not to be condemned for the unauthorized addresses or acts of individuals. This carefully compiled work, so lauded by the "Union Review," does not touch the fringe of English Freemasonry, so to say, at all, though the writer of that review, with the peculiar display of illogical argument common to many acolytes of that school, quietly takes the part for the whole, and condemns English Freemasonry on the ground of the alleged misdoings of Foreign Freemasonry, and, also, in consequence of the Papal allocutions.

It is hopeless to attempt to argue out the question with persons who take such a ground. We are not on equal terms. They are building up their position on the fact of the decrees of an infallible Pope; we are simply seeking to meet them within the lines of human reason, as well as of fallible judgment. We cannot discuss the subject fairly with such opponents, and, therefore, we think it well to leave the matter where it is. In Great Britain and the United States the Order is known to all men, by its peaceful habits, loyal disposition, law abiding teaching, and religious sympathies, by its deeds of benevolence, and its labours of love. What matters to it, therefore, these foolish and heated attacks, all proceeding from the same one "fiery furnace," all marked by the same condemnatory spirit of hatred and ill-will, persecution and intolerance? We think, on the contrary, that such attacks will do us, in the long run, good rather than harm, and we await with calmness and confidence the judgment of our fellow citizens. When we have seen the German original we shall recur to the subject.

RESIGNATION OF BRO. SUPERINTENDENT FOWLER, OF PRESCOT.

For some time it has been supposed likely that Bro. Supt. Fowler, P.P.G.A.D.C., P.M. and Treasurer of the Lodge of Loyalty, No. 86, who for so many years has had charge of the police force in the Petty Sessional Divisions of Prescott and Childwall, would resign his office and retire into private life. Mr. Fowler's resignation has been sent to the Chief Constable, and will take effect from the end of September. During the long time that Mr. Fowler has had command of the police force in Prescott, near Liverpool, and neighbourhood he has enjoyed the respect and good will of the inhabitants. He has well earned the right to spend the remainder of his days in rest and quietness.

It is proposed to present Bro. Fowler with a testimonial prior to his departure from Prescott. To this end a committee has been or is in course of formation, and we understand that Mr. Evans, J.P., the Rev. L. W. Sampson, M.A., and other influential gentlemen have expressed their approval of the proposal, and their intention to subscribe to the testimonial. Mr. F. Smith, coroner for the manor of Prescott, has consented to act as honorary secretary to the committee.

Bro. Fowler joined the Metropolitan police force at the age of 21 years, on December 23rd, 1834, and was attached to the C or St. James division. He was transferred at his own request to the B or Westminster division, on the 4th July, 1836. On the 20th of July, 1839, he resigned office in the police force, having obtained, through the interest of Mr. D. Gregory, stipendiary magistrate, Queen's-square Police-office, the office of 1st class turnkey in the new Tothill-fields prison, Westminster. On the 25th May, 1840, he resigned the office of turnkey, having obtained the appointment of sergeant in the Lancashire County Constabulary, just formed. He arrived in Preston a few days afterwards and was sworn in, and attached to the Garstang division, of which Mr. Jordan was superintendent. On the 14th June, 1840, he was seriously wounded with a knife in the right hand, which rendered it useless for some time, by Edward Connell, in a riot at Garstang amongst a number of Irish navvies, who were employed in cutting the line of railway between Preston and Lancashire. On the 16th June, 1841, he was violently assaulted, with several constables, in a disturbance which took place at Eccleston fair. On the reduction of the constabulary, in 1841, he was transferred, with Mr. Supt. Jordan, to the Prescott division, and posted to the Toxteth Park section. In 1842 he was removed from the Toxteth to the Prescott section. In the same year he was promoted to the rank of inspector, and posted to the Kirkdale division, but at the express wish of the magistrates, and by an authority signed by them in petty sessions, he was retained in the Prescott division. In the same year he was violently assaulted about the head, body, &c., in company with several constables, in a riot at Roby wakes amongst the Knotty Ash carters and farm servants. His right hand was seriously injured, so much so as to render it nearly useless since, but more particularly in damp and cold weather. The effects of the injury to his head he feels to the present time. In August, 1843, he was savagely assaulted and injured about the head, body, &c., by a man named William Lyon, a bricksetter, when apprehending him under a warrant for a breach of the peace. In December, 1843, Bro. Fowler was promoted to the rank of superintendent, and posted to the Middleton or Rochdale division, which then included the towns of Rochdale and Heywood. In June, 1844, he was thrown from his horse through a dog running at it whilst on his way to Oldham to attend petty sessions. In 1849 he was transferred to the Warrington division, which then comprised the present Warrington and Wigan divisions. In the same year he was badly assaulted, with another constable, when apprehending a notorious character named James Seddon, a collier, for being drunk and riotous in the public street, on a Sunday evening. In April, 1855, in consequence of declining health, brought on entirely by downright hard work and rough usage, he was, by the kind permission of the chief-constable, Captain Woodford, transferred to the Prescott division.

We may add that during his long connection with Prescott he has proved himself an able, zealous, and trustworthy Mason, and his connection with the "old Lodge of Loyalty" has been to it an immense boon, as well as a source of help to the brethren, who desire him health, long life, and prosperity in his retirement.

Obituary.

THE LATE BRO. H. W. NICHOLAS.

Many brethren in the Province of West Lancashire will regret to hear of the death of Bro. H. W. Nicholas, a member of the Mariner's Lodge, No. 249, Liverpool, who, although never holding any prominent office in the craft, was universally esteemed and admired. His death took place somewhat suddenly at 66, Cable Street, Liverpool, on Wednesday, the 18th inst. His genial wit and humour were greatly appreciated in local lodges, and his topical song, "In a Quiet Sort of Way," which always embodied something bearing upon the meeting, was greatly relished. Bro. Nicholas had a happy knack of impromptu verse-writing, and he never failed to make his talent tell. In every good work he was always willing to give a helping hand, and in many a charitable scheme his presence will be missed. Our dead brother, who was forty-nine years of age, was interred on Saturday last at St. James's Cemetery, and the funeral was attended by upwards of 100 brethren and friends. The funeral service was conducted by the Rev. W. Banister, B.A. Amongst those present were Bros. H. P. Price, W.M. 249; J. Hayes, I.P.M. 249; Dr. J. K. Smith, P.M. and Treas. 249; H. Pearson, P.M. 249; W. Crane, P.M. 249; E. Hughes, P.M. 249; C. Leighton, 249, P.M. 1325; J. Wood, 249, ("Freemason"); W. B. Jennings, 249; T. Joseph, 249; S. Kirkpatrick, 249; J. W. B. Brunton, 249; E. Gamble, 249; W. H. Ball, 249; J. Skeaf, P.G.O., P.M. 216; F. Lilly, P.M. 251, P.P.J.G.D., E.L.; C. Leedham, P.M. 220; H. Ashmore, W.M. 1325; H. Scott, P.M. 86; W. Matthews, 220; J. F. Hall, 673; D. Frame, 220; W. Burnett, J.W. 1013; J. Twist, 1325; J. Hamer, P.M.; J. Jones, 667; E. Barlow, 216; Goodman, J. Atkinson, Jacobs, Neale, C. Campion, and others. The general mourners included Mr. R. Pearson (nephew of the deceased), Mr. W. E. Hanner, Manchester; Mr. Walter Hildyard, and others; and the musical friends present, besides several already named amongst the brethren, were Mr. Hugh Shimmens, Mr. Robert Crompton, Mr. A. Child, Mr. J. Austin, and Mr. E. Foulkes.

BRO. CAPTAIN D. C. LOVERDO.

It is with deep regret that we announce the death of Bro. Captain Dionysius C. Loverdo, of Zante, Ionian Islands, on Sunday morning, the 15th inst., at Addlestone Hill, Surrey, the residence of Dr. Chaldecott, his father-in-law. Brethren who had the good fortune of visiting his native island during his most distinguished and useful Masonic career there need hardly be reminded of the courteous hospitality with which he received them, both at the lodge and under his own roof. He leaves an only child, Bro. John D. Loverdo, F.R.S.L., &c., who is well known in English and continental literary circles as the author of some fine poems in Romaic, which were reviewed in our impression of the 25th January, 1875.

COLONIAL AND FOREIGN SUBSCRIBERS are informed that acknowledgements of remittances received will in future be published in the first number of every month.

NOTICE.—It is very necessary for our friends to advise us of all money orders they remit, more especially those from the United States of America, and India; otherwise we cannot tell where to credit them.

METROPOLITAN.

MARQUESS OF RIPON LODGE (No. 1489).—A very agreeable day was passed by the brethren of this young lodge on the 26th ult., for whom a picnic party to Burnham Beeches was designed and carried out by the W.M., Bro. W. Stephens, and several of the leading members. Accompanied by Mrs. Murlis, and Miss Stephens, Bros. Hanney, W. Grist, W. Kennard, S. Smout, sen.; J. Glaskin, H. Morrey, Cockburn, and H. Massey, ("Freemason"), proceeded by Great Western express train from Paddington at 10.30 a.m. to Slough, where they were joined by Bro. John High, and several other brethren, including the Secretary of the Windsor Castle Lodge, No. 771, and conveyed by carriages to Bro. High's pretty residence at Farnham Royal. Here they were welcomed by Mrs. High, and conducted to a liberal lunch before proceeding to the Beeches. The weather was delightfully fine, and there was every promise of a pleasant day for the party. After dispatching the lunch the brethren and ladies, whom Mrs. High then joined, drove to Burnham Beeches, and in a remote part of that retired spot drew up, and had the cloth spread on the green sward for dinner. While these preparations were going on the brethren amused themselves with different games, and when the hour for dinner arrived disposed of the repast with well seasoned appetites. There was but one toast proposed "Success to the Lodge, and many similar pleasant meetings," and when the cloth was removed, for which operation, however, there was no hurrying, the brethren and ladies surveyed the beauties of the scenery and inspected the many natural curiosities with which Burnham Beeches abound. As there was more amusement still in store the party did not remain late at the Beeches, but drove by a different route back to Farnham Royal to Bro. High's, where they were to partake of tea. Having alighted from the carriages and walked about the grounds, they were conducted by Bro. High to the church, for the building of the steeple of which Bro. High has the contract, in addition to large works which he is executing in the neighbourhood for Lord Cholmondeley. After viewing and admiring the beautifully executed porch, the company returned to Bro. High's, where tea was provided à fresco, and here they remained till half-past ten o'clock at night, engaged in singing, conversation, and amusing tales. At half-past ten they repaired to the carriages, after wishing their host and hostess a hearty good-bye, and with recollections of a very pleasant day, and hopes for many similar days in future, took their journey Londonwards.

ALEXANDRA PALACE LODGE (No. 1541).—The second meeting of this lodge since its foundation and consecration was held on Saturday, at the Palace whose name it bears. This out-of-town season, as might be expected, was not conducive to a large gathering, and several of the officers had to make great sacrifices in order to be present—the Senior Warden, and W. M. Delegate, Bro. Kelly King, having had to travel straight from Cheltenham; and Bro. J. R. Stacey, the Secretary, returned expressly from the Hibernian capital to be present. Bro. J. C. Parkinson, the W.M., was unavoidably absent, and letters were read excusing absence on the part of officers and brethren, some giving as a reason their presence in the far north, and one, a family bereavement. The lodge was opened with Bros. Kelly King, as W.M.; Dyte (D.C.), as S.W.; J. Willing (visitor), as J.W.; J. H. Dodson, S.D.; W. W. Snelling, J.D.; J. Lee, as I.G.; and J. While, (W.M. 228), as I.P.M. The ballot was taken for Bro. John Dodson, of 55, as a joining member, and it was unanimous. The ceremony of initiation was then performed, Mr. Jesse Edmund Ward and Mr. Webster Dennison being the initiates. Bro. Kelly King presiding as Master, and the efficiency of the officers greatly heightened the effect of the ceremony. The Mastership was again put into commission, Bro. J. R. Stacey occupying it to perform the next ceremony, that of passing the five brethren initiated on the first regular meeting of the lodge, and these were Bros. Larchin, Daniel, Chapman, Kensington, and Matthews. The ceremony was, it need scarcely be said, performed in the perfect manner for which Bro. Stacey, as the Preceptor of at least two Lodges of Instruction, has made himself famous. The bye-laws of the lodge were then presented and forwarded a stage, and the lodge then dealt with a notice of motion proposed by Bro. Kelly King, the S.W., to have as the meeting days of the lodge the last Saturdays of the spring and autumn months, in place of the last Saturdays of the summer months. This motion was proposed to meet the convenience of the Palace authorities, who, joined with the founders in the privileges of the lodge in being named as officers, have found that the days of meeting originally proposed would interfere with the work of the Palace, and have unfortunately not taken their assigned parts in the lodge owing to this cause. The motion was carried, and the wish was expressed that this concession would meet the convenience of the Palace authorities. Several propositions for joining members and of gentlemen to be initiated were made, and among the latter was a proposition by Bro. Rowlands, and most cordially received by the lodge, of the name of the well known "Red Spinner" of the "Gentleman's Magazine" the author of several works, the latest being the pleasant piscatorial volume entitled "Waterside Sketches." There can be no doubt from the reception the name received, the Master in the chair seconding the motion, that this popular brother of the angle and pen has been marked by those of the Craft who have the pleasure of knowing him as one whom they could welcome in the brotherhood of the "Mystic tie." The business ended, the brethren dined together, not en loge, the uncertainty as to numbers, and other circumstances, preventing that, but at the "table d'hôte" of the Palace they enjoyed a corner by themselves, and the toasts of "The Initiates," "The W.M.," "The Officers," and "Visitors," were none the less cordial if given without the usual ceremonies accorded under riled circumstances. The visitors were Bros. Boys (Lodge Camden); W. M. Styles, W.M. 177; H. Ralph, 177; H. Thompson, P.M. Great City; H. Potter; J. W. Berry, 1185; C. Scales, W.S. 1507.

PROVINCIAL.

WARRINGTON.—LODGE OF LIGHTS (No. 148).—The regular monthly meeting of this lodge was held on Monday evening last, at the Masonic Rooms. The W.M., Bro. Bowes, P.M., P.Z., P. Prov. G. Reg., Cumberland and Westmoreland, was supported by his officers and a large number of brethren and visitors. After the minutes were read, Bros. Johnson, Peake, and B. L. Pierpoint claimed preferment, and having sustained their claims, were entrusted. The lodge was opened in the Second Degree, when the three brethren were re-admitted and passed by the W.M. The lodge was then closed in the Second Degree, when Dr. G. W. Joseph, who had been previously ballotted for and unanimously accepted, was duly and solemnly initiated by the W.M. The working tools were presented by the J.W., Bro. Thomas Tunstall, and the charge was delivered by Bro. P. J. Edleston, W.M. 1134. There being no further business, the lodge was closed.

ECCLES.—VICTORIA LODGE (No. 1345).—The usual monthly meeting of this highly prosperous and well-conducted young lodge was held on Wednesday evening, the 18th ult., in the lodge-room at Bro. John Pearson's, the Cross Keys Hotel, Eccles. The lodge was opened at 4.30 with solemn prayer, the officers present being Bros. William Wright, W.M. (now residing at Crewe, but formerly of Salford); C. Rudman, S.W.; J. S. Ballard, acting J.W.; V. Holt, J.D.; V. Shaw, S.D.; J. Pearson, I.G.; J. Buxton, P.M., Treas.; J. Barker, P.M., P. Prov. G.T.E.L., Sec.; J. C. Gillman, P.M.; Geo. Mountain, P.M.; J. Brooks, P.M.; Thomas Lee, P.M.; and a number of other brethren and visitors. The minutes of the previous meeting having been read and confirmed, the ballot was taken for the admittance into Freemasonry of Mr. James Chadwick Mather, of Patricroft, which proved unanimous. Bros. T. Hile, E. J. Collins, and G. K. Ashton were passed, and Bro. H. Ainsworth raised, the ceremonies being performed in a masterly manner by the W.M. and Bros. P.M.'s Barker, Brooks, and Gillman. The lodge was presented with a valuable copy of Bro. Spark's well-known "Masonic Music" for the use of the lodge by P.M. J. Buxton (the founder of the Victoria Lodge), who has already done so much for Freemasonry in West Lancashire. A hearty vote of thanks was accorded to P.M. Buxton for his valuable present, on the motion of Bro. Pearson, I.G., seconded by P.M. Barker, Sec. There was no other business of importance before the lodge, and it was closed in due and ancient form.

BARNSTAPLE.—CHAPTER OF LOYALTY AND VIRTUE (No. 251).—A quarterly meeting of this chapter was held at the Masonic Hall, on Wednesday last. Present: Comps. Willshire, Z.; Ebsworthy, H.; Britton, J.; Shapland, P.S.; J. Hancock, A.S.; Oliver, Scribe E.; T. Hancock, Scribe N.; List, Treas.; Nicklin, Org.; W. Hancock, and other companions. Bro. Wm. Young was exalted, and other business transacted. Comp. Shapland impressed on the chapter the necessity of the members meeting punctually at the time mentioned in the summons, so that one should not be kept waiting for another, thus causing the loss of much valuable time. All business being ended, the chapter closed at 9 o'clock p.m.

PROVINCIAL GRAND CHAPTER FOR LANARKSHIRE.

The quarterly meeting of this Provincial Grand Chapter was held in St. Mark's Hall, 213, Buchanan-street, Glasgow, on the 27th ult. Comps. J. Miller, acting Z.; J. Duthie, acting H.; G. W. Wheeler, acting J.; John Fraser, acting S.E.; J. Brodie, First Soj.; J. Balfour, Second Soj.; G. Thallon, Third Soj.; and others. Letters of apology had been received from several of the office-bearers, explaining the cause of their absence. The minutes of the last quarterly meeting were read and confirmed. Among the other business to be settled was that of appointing Auditors to examine the books of the chapter. Comps. J. Duthie and G. W. Wheeler were chosen for that duty. Comp. Duthie then called the attention of the Provincial Grand Royal Arch Chapter to the want felt in the Province of Glasgow of a chapter of instruction. He pointed out the great results that would flow from such a chapter in a clear and able way. Comp. Wheeler followed with some very practical and judicious remarks on the subject. After a lively and interesting conversation, the desirability of having such a chapter was agreed to. No business of further importance. The chapter was duly closed.

CAMBUSLANG.—LODGE ROYAL ARCH (No. 114).—A most enjoyable afternoon was spent by the brethren of this lodge on Saturday, the 21st ult. They assembled in the lodge-room at half-past two o'clock, and, after some necessary arrangements, formed themselves into procession, and, headed by the Cambuslang instrumental band, marched first through the village, where they were joined by their wives and sweethearts, then to Dechmont, the place appointed. Deputations from St. John Operative Lodge, 347, Rutherglen, and Lodge St. Andrew, 524, East Kilbride, were present on the occasion. On reaching the hill the R.W.M. pronounced the blessing, after which each one was supplied with bread and milk. Various games were indulged in, and a few dances got up and gracefully gone through. The weather during this part of the day was all that could be desired. The prospect from the summit of the hill was delightful (for a view of landscape, beautiful and extensive, Dechmont will vie with many of the hills in Scotland). Before leaving, three ringing cheers were given for the Duke of Hamilton, and the Duke's chamberlain, for their kindness in granting them the privilege of getting on to the hill; also three hearty cheers to Mr. Park, of Dechmont, for giving them one of his fields in case the hill should be refused, and three merry cheers to the R.W.M. of the lodge for the worthy manner in which he had conducted the proceedings of the day. After singing "Auld Lang Syne," they wended their way down the hill, and made for home. They escorted the Rutherglen brethren to the station, and then returned to the lodge, all highly pleased with the afternoon's outing.

GLASGOW.—LODGE COMMERCIAL (No. 360).—A special meeting of this lodge was held in their hall, 30, Hope-street, on the 26th ult. Bro. John Monro, R.W.M., presided, supported by Bros. J. M. Oliver, S.W.; G. B. Adams, acting J.W.; R. Brodie, J. Thomson, and others. Bro. Monro said he had called this meeting to get through with the business before the lodge that was pressing. Applications from three gentlemen wishing to join the Order were submitted, viz., Wm. Thomson, Robt. Wilson, and Murdoch McLean; they were proposed by Bro. John Cummings, and seconded by J. Monro, R.W.M. They were found worthy, and received the First Degree, Bro. J. M. Oliver, S.W., officiating, and the R.W.M. delivered the charge with his usual ability and impressiveness. The lodge was then closed in due and ancient form.

REPORT OF THE GRAND CHAPTER ROSE CROIX OF IRELAND.

In the circular letter by which this convocation was announced, it was stated that on this occasion I would present a report of the progress and present condition of the Rose Croix Order in Ireland. It has hitherto been the duty of the Vice-President—not of the Sovereign of the Order—to present the triennial report to the convocation; but I am departing from that rule to-day in order to preserve the spirit of it; for, although I now have the honour of being Sovereign of the Order, I was myself the actual Vice-President until very recently. So that I hope I may not be deemed to have overstepped my proper limits, or intruded upon the province of my friend who has kindly accepted from me the office of Vice-President.

It was not without reluctance that I commenced my present task. Not to speak of the impossibility of accomplishing it without repeating much of what I have already said in my former reports, it is a painful thing to review the transactions of even a few past years, at a period of life when each additional year must bring its share of sadness, as friends drop away faster and faster, and energy and activity decline. What was once an agreeable exercise of the mind then becomes a laborious effort. But as there is no necessity to occupy your attention long, I may be brief, and I need not apologize for brevity, or waste time by trying to excuse what is inevitable.

I could not address the first convocation which has met since the death of the late Duke of Leinster without mentioning that venerable nobleman, whom I served, as Vice-President of this Order, for eighteen years; but I will merely acknowledge the respect and affection we all feel for his memory. The language of eulogy has been exhausted; our expressions of regret, however sincere, are idle and unavailing; and I do not ask you to listen to a funeral oration: we meet here for a more profitable purpose. Let me, however, be excused for dwelling for one moment on the name of one who also, very lately, held a high place amongst us, and was deservedly respected and esteemed—the late Major-General Dunne. We all felt sincere sorrow at his unexpected death; none more deeply than myself, for he had been my friend for forty years. He was indeed a noble gentleman, worthy of his ancient and high lineage, a man who had served his country in high and responsible stations, both military and civil; a true Mason, whose personal character was an example of the qualities on which our society boasts itself to be founded, and whose exertions and influence were always cheerfully and ably employed for its advancement.

I now proceed to the main objects of this address. On looking to my former reports, which contain the statistics of our Order since 1854, I find that the number of its members has been actually doubled within the last twenty years: the increase has been at the average rate of ten per annum. In 1854 there were 144 subscribing members of the Rose Croix Chapters of Ireland; there are now 290. If we analyze that sum total, we shall find it composed of 197 members of Dublin chapters and 93 of provincial chapters. This striking difference is accounted for by the fact that of the 73 chapters now held in Ireland, 8 are in Dublin. All the 13 chapters appear to be in full work.

As I stated here in 1872, the increase of this Order may be either a subject of congratulation or very much the contrary. It is true of it as of the human frame,—the cessation of its growth may be taken to indicate the first beginning of its decay,—yet it may grow too fast or grow too large to be in a perfectly healthy condition. But when we remember how greatly the general Masonic fraternity has increased in number and importance during the last twenty years, in spite of those allocutions and ecclesiastical fulminations by which it is periodically denounced, we cannot say that our own branch of it has become disproportionately extended. I do not think it would be just—indeed I do not think it would be possible—to prevent the extension of the Rose Croix Degree while the general Masonic fraternity continues to increase in numbers; but I think it both just and possible to preserve the present high character of our own Order by regulating its extension judiciously. Its numbers declined between 1847 and 1854, and between 1857 and 1860; they have ever since been increasing. No doubt they may decline again; but I think it improbable. We had but seven chapters in 1854, whereas we have now thirteen. The more warrants that are issued the more Prince Masons we shall have, and again, the more Prince Masons, the more likelihood that new warrants will be sought for; as we frequently have seen new lodges spring out of those which have become very numerous. As no warrant has been issued for since 1872, we may be satisfied that at least quite enough of them have been issued for the present.

The warrant we had in Lisbon for many years is extinct and has been returned by the brethren who held it; they are now subject to the United Grand Lodge of Portugal, as stated to the convocation of 1872. At present we have no warrant in any foreign country. I do not like the affectation of quoting myself; but as I cannot mend what I observed at the last convocation, on the establishment of new chapters, I will, for convenience sake, repeat it now. I said, "I cannot lay down a hard and fast rule to guide you in matters of discretion, on which it is not easy to form a fair opinion; but this I may say—I would have you grant new warrants with a very cautious hand, having regard to a great many circumstances which would not be taken into account if you were to grant them merely to gratify a few individuals, however estimable in character or anxious for the extension of the Order. We must not either withhold promotion from men who deserve it, nor make promotion too cheap, too easily had, too common to be thought very well worth having. I have stated thus much for your consideration, knowing, as I do, that I incur the risk of displeasing many who may hear me, because it is my duty to point out a danger, and it will be yours to avert it, if you can, by good sense, discretion and circumspection." The exercise of that discretion in the granting or refusing of new warrants is plainly one principal way in which the extension of this Order is to be regulated; the approval or rejection by the Grand Chapter of individual candidates is another. On the latter point I would observe, that the Grand Chapter having now become a numerous body, and being generally well attended, I think it not improbable that in a short time some attempt may be made to have some of its business intrusted to a committee. To that I see no objection; but I hope that in any event the important trust of passing candidates will never be thus delegated. The experiment has been tried already, although it may not be within the memory of many here, and it proved a signal failure; in fact it placed, as I may say, the very existence of the Order in the hands of one or two men, until the Grand Chapter, finding how matters were going, wisely took back the important function into their own direct administration, in which I hope it will ever continue. The Grand Chapter is not infallible; but although in this or that instance it may have made a mistake—sometimes on the score of strictness, sometimes of indulgence—I believe that in the great majority of cases its vigilance has been rightly exercised, and I am certain it has always been exercised honestly and honourably. We have done a great deal in preserving, as we have hitherto done, so high a character for so numerous a society. And how have we done it? By each member of the Grand Chapter requiring to be reasonably satisfied, as if we were solely responsible for the result, respecting the character and fitness of every person for whom his vote is sought. I hope I may not be misunderstood, as if I meant to imply any distrust of the subordinate chapters. It rarely happens that they offer a doubtful name. Rose Croix Chapters are not at all regarded by their members as mere clubs, as we all know that even very respectable Craft lodges are; but all who know mankind must allow, that people do not like to be deemed fastidious censors of their neighbours; many would not oppose, although they may not altogether approve, the admission of an acquaintance, or even of a person brought forward by some friend they would not willingly disoblige. People do not like to introduce disunion or dissatisfaction into a favourite society; yet men will often be found so weak and vain as to think it justifiable to break up such an one, if they should fail in obtaining admission into it for some favourite of their own, who, for one reason or another, may not be quite acceptable to the rest. And unquestionably the present system has, on the whole, worked very well. I believe the subordinate chapters, which are all represented in the Grand Chapter, feel that such is the case, and are well satisfied with the existence of this controlling power, and would prefer that it should continue unaltered.

It is surely better to err, since we cannot always avoid error, on the safe side; better that now and again a worthy man should be disappointed than an unworthy admitted. You may admit the former when you discover your mistake; but, once admitted, you cannot so easily exclude the other. I cannot too often repeat my solemn warning—it is by the Grand Chapter that the Rose Croix Order will be preserved, an honour to the Masonic community of Ireland, as it is this day, or ruined past all remedy.

It must be gratifying to all of us to know that perfect harmony and good will exist among all our chapters, and that no complaint has been made on the part of any individual member of any of them. This is saying a good deal for a community so numerous. We have not much intercommunication with chapters of our Order in other countries, but so far as we have had any it has been of a most friendly nature.

The office of Assistant Secretary General has recently become vacant by the resignation of Bro. Charles T. Walmisley, who for many years past filled that place. The Grand Chapter has deferred the appointment of his successor until November next, in order that time may be afforded to the Grand Secretary to enquire and report whether any alteration should be made in the duties of the office of his future assistant. But I deemed it due to my respected friend Bro. Walmisley to enquire from him respecting our financial position at present, and I found that his accounts, to the end of 1874, have been kept with great regularity. They show a very decided improvement in our monetary affairs since the time when he undertook the care of our finances. We have now to credit of the Grand Chapter a sum of £214 3s. 5d. in Three per Cent. Consols in the names of our trustees, £100 of which was invested last year. And the accounts show a cash balance, on the 1st of January last, of £98 17s. 6d. in bank to our credit; a further sum of £76 15s. 6d. was due at the same date to the Grand Chapter, of which £25 13s. 6d. has since been paid and lodged in bank. In 1872 we had but a sum of between £40 and £50. Bro. Walmisley has informed me that all demands made upon him as Grand Treasurer have been paid; that if there be still any outstanding it is because they have not been furnished; that such demands (if any) are of trifling amount, and that we have in fact no debt impending over us. I need not go further into these financial matters, which belong more properly to the Grand Chapter. I am happy to say that Bro. Walmisley, though he has resigned the troublesome office of Assistant Secretary, retains the honorary one of our Grand Treasurer.

A revised code of rules for the Order has been recently under consideration, but has not yet been finally arranged. It will introduce some alterations into the existing code; some few additions will be made upon matters of regulation, but some others will be of greater importance—I mean those relating to the 15th, 16th, and 17th Degrees of the "Ancient and Accepted Rite," hitherto, I believe, usually known as Knights of the Sword, Knights of the East, and Knights of the East and West, although the 16th is more properly styled the Degree of "Prince of Jerusalem." Those degrees have always been regarded as requisite qualifications for that of Rose Croix; but as the Great Priory of the Temple in Ireland does not now permit its preceptories to confer any other degrees than those belonging to its own Order, it became necessary to make some arrangements by means of which the chapters might be enabled to qualify candidates for future elevation to our own ranks. I will not trouble you by recapitulating what was done after full deliberation; but the result of the proceedings taken has been, that the Grand Chapter has now power to confer on its subordinate chapters the right to elevate brethren to those degrees, according to certain rules which will be comprised in the new code of our Order.

How far the plan which has been adopted, and which I am mainly responsible for suggesting, will ultimately prove successful, it is not at present easy to predict, as it has not yet been acted on, the rules not being yet promulgated, as they very soon will be. It is to be hoped that it will get over a serious difficulty—I see no reason why it should not do so; yet I cannot but expect that the 15th, 16th, and 17th Degrees will soon be regarded as mere forms, and be abridged to the least possible extent, or given by mere communication. In fact they have already become practically useless; partly through the ignorance of those who originally introduced them here, and partly by our increasing apathy as to all Masonic ceremonial. I am not able to tell you by whom, or when, they were first introduced; but I must say, for my own part, that I have not seen anything in any of those three degrees, as they have usually been administered here, worth the attention of men of education and sense. When we read the elucidation of them—which has been given by so great an authority as our Bro. Albert Pike, Sovereign Commander of the 33rd Degree in the Southern Jurisdiction of the United States, who has conferred much benefit on all intelligent Masons by his masterly, learned, and eloquent expositions and lectures—then, indeed, we can see how the 15th Degree was intended to inculcate fidelity and perseverance; how the 16th teaches the noble maxim that labour is honourable, not disgraceful—that, in fact, it is the service of God; and how the 17th Degree—now the least interesting of the three—ought really to be most instructive, for it is the first of the Philosophical Degrees, however little title it has to that epithet at present. In short, I think that those three degrees have been so disfigured by corruption, and by the interpretation put on them by ignorant and conceited persons, professional lecturers on Masonry—a class of people who were our only authority on the subject in former years,—that they are merely weariness and disappointment both to the administrant and the recipient, conveying no useful knowledge whatever. This is but my own individual opinion, which does not bind any one; yet, I think, many will concur in it. Whether it would now be possible to restore to those degrees their original spirit and utility I cannot tell. I wish it were so; but, in truth, I cannot hope that it would be so. The main object at most of our Masonic meetings seems to be, to dispense with as much ceremonial as possible, and to hurry through the little that is left; and I feel ashamed to be obliged to say, that this is especially so in the higher grades. An effort recently made by the Council of the 33rd Degree, and approved by the Grand Chapter, to establish "Lodges of Perfection," as they are called, has been received with utter apathy and produced no result. Yet, assuredly, it would be well to have some high and important degree interposed between the lower degrees and this of ours. Such was the opinion of my esteemed friend, our Bro. George Chatterton, a very learned and experienced as well as zealous Mason, who first suggested the idea, which appeared to me to be an admirable one. But what can two or three men effect against the indifference of so many, or that pitying approbation so closely akin to ridicule? Not a movement has been made in the Masonic Order to encourage the hope that some of the admirable, though long disused, steps of the Ancient and Accepted Rite might be restored with their impressive forms, their ceremonies and their teaching, to be a reward to active and zealous Masons who had not yet attained the age our rules require, or who might fairly expect honourable promotion during the long probationary period of seven years, during which this degree of ours is in general unattainable, and, in my judgment, very properly so. It should be reserved for men not only of approved zeal and intelligence, but of mature years and practical experience. It should be a reward for long services as well as a promotion.

But the truth is that Masonic ceremonials afford little to interest the understanding when the symbolism of Masonry is not understood,—and it is not generally so. Why? Because it requires study and attention as well as intelligence to understand it. Our ancient predecessors had no notion of feeding lazy animals with pearls. Their symbols were meant to conceal as well as to instruct—the concealment was meant for those too indolent to care for instruction. Our modern plan is to instruct all the world alike; we cannot go back upon the system of ancient thought, but it is necessary to bear in mind that it differs from ours. When I speak of the symbolism of Masonry, I do not mean what is commonly called "Masonic working," which is a mere matter of memory and practice; I mean what that very working was intended to convey, which is quite a different thing. Good workers are tolerably plenty; good working is pleasant to see; there is no good reason why we should be without it, although we shall never have it where men trust to written or printed ceremonials, as I think we have all had experience. But if you who, as you were told, have been admitted to the inmost sanctuary of our Order, think the commonplace teaching of Masonic expositors worth listening to, your notions of the extent or capability of Masonic instruction cannot be very exalted. Still, I do not like to see even ordinary teaching given up; for it is surely better than none. We are really like men who walk over undiscovered or long forgotten mines of precious ore; it lies under our feet, and we know nothing of it. Perhaps I might better illustrate my meaning by an idea which struck me while reading one of Albert Pike's essays, already referred to.—A peasant, working in his fields, frequently finds a stone of somewhat peculiar shape, which he turns into lime for manure, as did his fathers before him. It answers very well as a limestone—so far so good. But a skilful geologist comes; he strikes a similar stone with an experienced hand, and lo! hidden within it lies the fossil form of what was once a living and moving creature, though it has been locked up in darkness for ages. Form after form is thus revealed to our astonished eyes; and by the light of the scientific knowledge of the master mind we can recognize animals and plants like those around us—yet unlike too;—of a different era—of antiquated pattern, so to speak; yet they enable us to realize, though it may be dimly, the conception of a past creation. So we are now enabled by the teaching of a man I am proud to call my Master—in whose school I learn with mute and delighted attention—to image forth the shadowy and often uncertain, but yet indisputable traces of ancient wisdom and ancient worship, in the trivial and unconsidered teaching of Masonic rites and symbols.

I adverted at the last convocation, in too triumphant a tone (as now it appears), to an arrangement, which had existed since 1836, by which the several governing bodies of the Masonic Order had agreed to recognize and act upon each other's orders of suspension or expulsion. That compact no longer exists. A brother suspended or expelled by this Grand Chapter may, notwithstanding, enjoy all the privileges of fraternity in a Master's Lodge. This not being a place in which it would be becoming to discuss the measures which the Grand Lodge have adopted, or shall think proper to adopt, I mention the fact merely to apprise my brethren of the change. I do not pretend to assign a reason for it, nor to predict its probable consequences.

A still more important change is that by which my own position has been so much affected, that I mention it merely because it would be mere affectation to pass it over, and I shall speak of it, if possible, quite in the abstract. The dignity of Sovereign of this Order has, since the death of the late Duke of Leinster, been severed from that of Grand Master of the Masons of Ireland, and we are now a distinct and separate branch of the Masonic community, under our own head and with our own resources. This change will probably render us more independent, active, and self-reliant; consequently, more powerful and more important than before. Yet the want of a President of high position is a real want, not a mere fancied disadvantage. It is probably felt here to-day by many; and I think it impossible but that some regret and disappointment must be felt by those who remember the occasions on which the late Sovereign presided in our assemblies, giving them the lustre of his noble name and the honour of his dignified presence. I am not so blind as to underrate the advantages I have referred to, and I am, I hope, superior to the silly affectation of underrating myself; the approbation of my brethren is sufficient proof that they do not think me unfit for my present high office here. Yet none of us can be insensible to the great advantage of having one of the like high station occupying the same place amongst us as the Duke of Leinster long did. Like all the rest of the world, I think we would be sufficiently indulgent to the shortcomings, and even to the occasional neglect, of a man of rank; for by appointing a competent and accessible Vice-President he might not only provide for the proper administration of our affairs, but sustain his own popularity with our community. We shall see how matters get on under the present arrangement. If it be hereafter found advisable to do so there will be nothing to prevent our reverting to that system, which for a number of years worked very well. The union of all great Masonic dignities in the same individual tends, no doubt, to keep things quiet; and quiet, order, and regularity are great matters in themselves, and are also main objects of all Freemasonry. I know that at least one most zealous and experienced member of our Order disapproved of filling up the vacant Presidency of it; but yet, would it have been consistent with our just pretensions, or our open professions of independence, to leave our highest honours in the dust, until some sufficiently dignified hand might be extended to take them up? If not, still less should we lay them at the feet of a man who would merely think them as unworthy his notice. For the present they are in the hands of one who deems them the highest and best compliment by which the services of twenty years can be recompensed. The future will take care of the things of itself. I take leave to read for you a few lines from a letter I recently received from the eminent gentleman I already alluded to, and I do so, not merely for the pleasure of telling you what he has said of the measure the Grand Chapter has adopted, but for the sake of the just and generous sentiments he expresses. "I am not," says Bro. Pike, "one of those republicans who affect to see no value, nor any right to deference, in ancestral honours and hereditary titles. It is right they should have due honour; but, I think, that to make Masonry the recipient of patronage is not to exalt it: the noble should not be held to honour it, but it the noble. If one who bears a noble name is a true brother to the brethren, and loves Masonry enough to be a faithful worker, it is for the good and honour of the Craft to have him at its head; but Masonry should not purchase patronage with its dignities." And he kindly adds a few words of which I am very proud, expressing his satisfaction that I have become Sovereign of this Order, whether a much more distinguished person would or would not have felt honoured by the nomination. I need only add, that at your bidding I have taken that high office; at your bidding I shall gratefully lay it down, sufficiently honoured in that you deemed me worthy to hold it at all.

I have now laid before you as well as I could a statement of our condition and our prospects. Whatever may be in store for me, or for any of us, I most earnestly hope that our condition, good as it is, may be improved; that those prospects, fair as they are, may yet be fairer when our brethren shall assemble next, on a similar occasion to this. I must honestly admit that my efforts to improve our ritual, as I suggested some years ago, have signally failed. But, after all, I am not one who lays much stress on external ceremonies, and to the essential part of the association I had rather turn your attention. Our Rose Croix Order, like all the philosophical grades, inculcates the great principles of all spiritual life—the existence of a Supreme God, incomprehensibly and unchangeably wise, merciful and good; the redemption of the world from evil, sin, and death; and the hope of life hereafter. If we never have been able to discern its object, or if we have lost sight of it, our philosophic Masonry, with or without its forms and ceremonies, is but an empty name. We may look at the externals of the higher degrees as we may gaze on the figures carved on an Egyptian temple or tomb—with indifference, or perhaps with curiosity or admiration, but with very little enlightenment. There are the designs of the old, dim centuries, long vanished away into the eternity of the past—to us only strange, grotesque, monstrous forms. We do not discern the purer principles they were intended to conceal from the profane, but to convey to the enlightened—principles whose freshness dissipates the darkness of ages and the sepulchral air of the tomb; principles as strong and living at this day as when the foundations of the pyramids were laid; as strong they will be when those strange monuments of superstition and perseverance shall be mixed with the dust of the desert. We cannot all become masters of the symbolism of Masonry: few will even attempt to understand it; fewer still will thoroughly succeed. But each of us, in the small duties and petty grievances of daily life—in the common intercourse of business and the common cares of a humble home—may do something worthy of a noble nature, something that will survive, if not in itself, in its results, when he has gone where neither wealth, rank, nor station can confer distinction. This very association of ours, with its many advantages to start with, ought to have great power; power as valuable as great, nay rather power which would be actually inestimable in its good effects upon society if we were to be always actuated by the principles we profess. Is that too ambitious an aspiration? Then let us look at home, within our own pale. Shall it be said that all we have learned and professed has not taught us to quench the petty dissensions which may arise among ourselves? It must needs be that offences come among us as everywhere else; but, surely, they should not subsist among men joined by such ties as ours—no, not for one hour after the first flush of irritation has passed away. I am not here to preach to you; but I felt bound to speak what may probably be of use, and what it is my duty to say—who can tell whether I may have another opportunity?

I have now said enough to give you some general idea of what has been done and what is doing amongst us; and as that is all I proposed to do, I will prolong my address no further than to express my earnest wish that the noble Order of the Rose and Cross may be to each what those sacred symbols mean, and have meant from an antiquity too remote to be ascertained. If any present does not know that meaning, let him enquire, but not of me, lest I should think the enquiry a proof that, however proudly he may wear the decoration of a "Knight of the Eagle and Pelican, Prince Grand Rose Croix," he does not, as yet, quite deserve to be recognised as a true and worthy member of that noble Order?

J. F. TOWNSEND, 33°

Sovereign of the Order of Rose Croix in Ireland.

AN INTERESTING MEETING.

A few evenings since a very interesting ceremony was witnessed at the Coach and Horses Tavern, Lower Tottenham, where various Masonic meetings take place. Bro. Thompson, who is the W.M. of the Enfield Lodge, has displayed a very warm and active interest in a benevolent association held at the above house in connection with the Tottenham and Enfield Lodges; and having recently been elevated to the position of Grand Sword Bearer of the Province of Middlesex, a suggestion was made that the brethren of the two lodges with which he was associated should present him with his official clothing, as a slight recognition of the services he had rendered to the cause of charity, so dear to the heart of every Freemason. The idea took a practical form at once; the necessary funds were soon obtained; and the presentation was fixed for Tuesday evening last. A numerous company assembled, including Bros. J. Maller, W.M. of the Tottenham Lodge (who was requested to preside), Matthison, P.M., Enfield Lodge (vice-chairman); Wells, P.M., Jones, P.M.; Roberts, P.M.; Dance, Secretary of the Tottenham Lodge; Bros. Brown, Cocksedge, Burford, Farrin, Peckham, O'Brien, Clements, Fowler and others. Considerable regret was expressed at the absence of Bro. Linzell, P.M., who was not only the principal founder of the institution, but mainly instrumental in obtaining Bro. Thompson his provincial honour.

The presentation was preceded by a nicely-arranged and well-served repast, furnished by Bro. J. Smith, of Lower Tottenham, and, on the cloth being cleared, the usual loyal toasts were given by Bro. Maller with his genial perspicuousness, and received with proper enthusiasm.

Subsequently came "The Health of Bro. Thompson," proposed by the chairman, and accepted with the greatest cordiality. Bro. Maller paid a just tribute to the high qualities of Bro. Thompson as a Mason, and, with special reference to the benevolent institution with which he was closely identified, mentioned that the number of members represented ultimate contributions to the Masonic charities of £600, £300 of which had already been devoted to the noble purposes for which the money was intended. Bro. Thompson had exerted himself to the utmost to render the association a success, and he was entitled to some mark of their esteem. Whether at Enfield or Tottenham, Bro. Thompson was ever ready to assist in any good work; and it was one of the most pleasing duties he (the chairman) had ever performed in Masonry to invest him with the clothing which had been so spontaneously subscribed for by the members of the Tottenham and Enfield Lodges.

Bro. Thompson expressed his sincere thanks for the great kindness which had been evinced towards him. He was much gratified at receiving the congratulations of so many brethren on his receiving Provincial office; and, if any acts of his in the past had rendered him worthy of their approbation, he would show, by his conduct in the future, that the confidence reposed in him had not been misplaced. As to the benevolent institutions, all he had done had been a labour of pure love, and he should never weary of pursuing the same path.

The "Visitors" were next toasted, and Bro. Lee responded.

Bro. Roberts, in proposing "The Health of the Brethren from Enfield," spoke in high terms of Bro. Thompson, who, he said, had laboured hard in Freemasonry for seven years. Although he belonged to the Enfield Lodge, he was often in Tottenham, and, come when he would, he would always receive a cordial welcome, because he came in the name of charity. It was through the exertions of such men as Bro. Thompson that the great Masonic institutions were supported, and he trusted he would long be spared to work in the grand field of benevolence.

Bros. Matthison, Thompson, Brown, and Farrin returned thanks.

"The Health of Bro. Maller," proposed by Bro. Matthison, who said the W.M. of the Tottenham Lodge was known amongst the Craft as a most worthy man and a good Mason, brought the toasts to a close.

Bro. Maller responded, and a very pleasant meeting was brought to a close.

LAYING THE FOUNDATION STONE OF NEW SCHOOLS AT OLD CUMNOCK.

On Thursday 19th ult. the usually quiet little village of Old Cumnock was the scene of an event of considerable interest, namely, the laying of the memorial stone of a public school in course of erection there. The building, which is situated on the Barrhill Road, in close proximity to the old graveyard, is of the Gothic style of architecture. It is a handsome structure, similar to the other School Board schools, and, being designed to accommodate upwards of 800 scholars, will supply the requisite school accommodation for the children residing in the district. It has been erected at a cost of nearly £4000, and will supply a want in the locality which has been felt for some time past. To witness the ceremony of laying the memorial stone of the school the inhabitants turned out en masse on Thursday. In the forenoon contingents from Kilmarnock, Ayr, Troon, Catrine, and a number of other Masonic lodges began to arrive, and by mid-day the streets of the village were crowded with visitors. Shortly after two o'clock the procession, headed by a brass band, left the Black Bull Hotel for the new building. Among the lodges represented were St. John's, 22, Kilmarnock; Navigation, 86, Troon; St. James', 125, Ayr; St. Andrew's, 126, Kilmarnock; St. James', 135, Kilwinning, Tarbolton; St. Mungo, 179, Mauchline; St. Andrew's, 245, Muirkirk; St. John's, 334, New Cumnock; St. Thomas, 433, Kilwinning, Dalmellington; St. John's, 497, Catrine; St. Barnabas, 230, Old Cumnock. Among the gentlemen present were Colonel Mure, M.P., R.W.M., Mother Lodge, Kilwinning, and, as such, Provincial Grand Master for Ayrshire; Mr. Hatrick, of Woodside, D.P.G.M. for Ayrshire; Mr. R. Wylie, Provincial Grand Secretary; Mr. John Mackay, Past R.W.M. of St. John's, Kilwinning, Kilmarnock, and acting P.G. Senior Warden; Mr. P. Burns, of Auchinharvie, acting P.G. Junior Warden; Mr. J. A. Ferguson, Proxy S.W. of Mother Lodge, Kilwinning; Mr. John Tweed, Proxy J.W. of Kilwinning Grand Lodge, Edinburgh, and about twenty brethren from Lodge Kilwinning. On the arrival of the procession at the building, the Freemasons and others took up their positions around the school. The usual preliminary Masonic ceremonies having been completed, Mr. Weir presented to Colonel Mure a silver trowel, with which to lay the memorial stone. He expressed the pleasure which Colonel Mure's presence afforded the Freemasons and the inhabitants of Cumnock, on account of the high position which he held in the Craft, and of the good services which he had rendered to the country. Colonel Mure briefly returned thanks for the presentation, after which he proceeded to lay the memorial stone with the usual formalities. This having been done, Colonel Mure again addressed the assemblage. After a few preliminary remarks, the gallant Colonel proceeded to say that there was a time when civilization was low and luxury was great, when the public money was spent on buildings devoted to the most abominable purposes, and which had been left us by antiquity. Some of the finest architecture—colosseums, amphitheatres, and arenas—had all been devoted to the greatest cruelties and the most unspeakable horrors. Even in those times temples raised to the Deities were the area of scenes such as no pure mind could dwell upon. But, thank God, those days were past, and that now we had great civilization, great wealth, great commerce, great power, and never since Christianity existed could it be said that any public money had ever been devoted to the rearing of any building except for the most pure, the most beneficent, and the most laudable purposes. The Freemasons, therefore, were glad to lay the foundation stone of any building, because they knew that it was, as most buildings are, reared by public money—money which was demanded from the people by a wise and provident legislature. He might tell them of a time when Scotland was a purely rural country with nothing but an agricultural population, when there was hardly a female in Scotland whose children were not well educated. Times, however, had changed, and we had become a very great, wealthy, and powerful nation. The great union between England, Scotland, and Ireland, had established a power which was felt over the whole world. We were the greatest colonisers, the greatest merchants, the greatest soldiers, and the greatest sailors in the world—and our power was respected in all the four corners of the earth. But unfortunately we could not have great power without commerce, nor commerce without great aggregates of population, nor great aggregates of population without ignorance, and we could not have ignorance without vice. In our crowded lanes, in our humble kennels, in those artisans' dwellings of which they heard so much lately, the little children were the greatest sufferers. We have always had a certain number of schools in this country; we have always had a great many schoolmasters, but there was one thing we had not had sufficient of—and that was power to make children go to school. Compulsory education that interfered with families was never popular and seldom answered. In England the system did not work well, but in Scotland, owing to the fact that from 1494 the people of Scotland had had the compulsory principles among them, although, like many other principles, they had been set aside, and which had led them to adopt those features of the act which had proved themselves so gallant to the people of England. He believed that the time would come when we would be as the Prussians were at this moment in regard to education. The law which had been adopted in Prussia for many years had become a dead letter, not because of the people breaking the law by not sending their children to school, but that the feeling for education which had existed for centuries in that country had resulted in there being no necessity for making it compulsory. That was what he hoped would soon take place in this country. We wanted something more than the meagre education which the children of this country received, something more than to teach children to read, write, and cypher. To his mind it looked like ploughing the ground and allowing grass to grow up more luxuriantly. What we wanted was a system of secondary education and a higher system of cultivation whereby the seed which had been sown in the primary schools would have an opportunity of bringing forth some richer intellectual fruit. (Cheers.)

On the motion of Mr. Boswell, a cordial vote of thanks was awarded to Colonel Mure.

GRAND LODGE OF CANADA.

The twentieth Annual Communication of the Grand Lodge A. F. and A. M. of Canada was held in the City Hall, London, on Wednesday and Thursday, the 14th and 15th July. Grand Lodge was opened in due form, the following Grand Officers being present:—

R. W. Bros. James Kerr, Acting-Grand Master; W. R. White, Grand Senior Warden; Hugh Murray, Grand Junior Warden; Rev. Vincent Clementi, as Grand Chaplain; Otto Klotz, as Grand Treasurer; D. M. Malloch, Grand Registrar; John J. Mason, Acting Grand Secretary; V. W. Bros. Fred. J. Menet, Grand Senior Deacon; George S. Birrell, Grand Junior Deacon; Andrew Irving, Jr., Grand Director of Ceremonies; F. R. Despard, Hamilton, Assistant Grand Secretary; John M. Clément, Niagara, Grand Sword Bearer; C. A. Sippi, London, Grand Organist; Hugh Kerr, Ingersoll, Grand Pursuivant; Bro. James Heron, London, Grand Tyler; V. W. Bros. James Sutton, Lucan, J. Scarff, Woodstock, Isaac Waterman, London; Josiah Corlis, St. Thomas, E. Peplow, Jr., Port Hope, T. F. Blackwood, Yorkville, John Gibson, Stratford, A. Hudspeth, Lindsay, John Kerr, Ingersoll, and W. L. P. Eager, Milton, Grand Stewards.

District Deputy Grand Masters:—R.W. Bros. Thomas C. Macnabb, W. D. McGloghlon, Chauncy Bennett, J. H. Benson, J. J. Mason, D. E. Broderick, R. P. Stephens, J. B. Traves, S. S. Lazier, A. S. Kirkpatrick, J. W. Pickup.
 Past Grand Masters:—M.W. Bros. A. A. Stevenson and James Seymour.

And about 500 representatives from 250 lodges. After the usual preliminary proceedings, the Acting Grand Master delivered the following address:—

Brethren of Grand Lodge:
 The great bereavement which we sustained in January last, and which cast the veil of grief over the whole fraternity throughout the length and breadth of this Grand Lodge jurisdiction, called upon me, under the provisions of the Constitution, to assume the functions of Grand Master, and threw upon me the duties and responsibilities pertaining to that office during the most important half of the Masonic year just ended. Being without the assistance of a deputy, these duties have drawn more heavily upon my time than I had anticipated, and the difficulties of my situation were immeasurably increased through the death of our Grand Secretary, whose loss we have together mourned since August last.

It becomes my duty, therefore, to assume the gavel, and in doing so I desire to submit for your consideration a brief outline of such events during the whole of the past year as may require the notice of the Grand Lodge.

At our last annual communication, the brethren of Grand Lodge for the twentieth time elected R.W. Bro. Thomas Bird Harris to the important and honourable position of Grand Secretary—and many now present will remember the modest terms in which he alluded to the services he had already rendered to the Craft, and his acknowledgment of the honour then done him by re-electing him to an office where he loved to labour. Scarcely had the brethren returned to their homes, when the alarming intelligence reached them that their beloved brother was seriously ill, and that his friends were apprehensive lest fatal results might ensue. During a month he was prostrated and suffered much, and although there were intervals of hoping even against hope, when he and the loved ones who attended him looked forward for his recovery, it was not so willed in the councils above. His illness became more serious, his sufferings more intense, his physical system more infirm, his strength exhausted; the bodily frame gave way, and his spirit took its flight to the right hand of his Redeemer, and the sad tidings were heralded throughout our jurisdiction that our brother had departed hence and would be seen of men no more.

It is greatly to be feared that the deep interest which R. W. Bro. Harris took in the affairs of Grand Lodge incited him frequently to exert himself in the cause of Masonry beyond his physical strength, and in the effort to promote the interests of the Craft he had been wont to overtask his powers. Many whose privilege it was to know him intimately are aware that after our annual assemblies he almost invariably suffered from the effects of the severe strain then put upon his energies, and that for years past he left our deliberations agitated and prostrated to seek rest and repose, and to recover and regain his wasted strength. Prior to the last communication of Grand Lodge Bro. Harris laboured assiduously to have the business in a forward state, and after his return home he engaged most actively in the details of the work which had been then determined upon until the fatal illness overtook him, and he was summoned to cease from his labours.

Bro. Harris was devoted to the interests of Grand Lodge, and there can be no manner of doubt that he wore himself out in its service. He was initiated into Masonry in St. Andrew's Lodge, No. 16, in 1848, and from that time he took an active part in and was a warm supporter of the cause of Masonry. No man laboured more abundantly to advance its interests.

He was mainly instrumental in establishing this Grand Lodge, and it was his great privilege as well as his just pride, that he had done more than any other one to contribute to its present prosperous and truly honourable position. At the convention of delegates assembled at Hamilton, in 1855, prior to the formation of this Grand Lodge, Bro. Harris was appointed Secretary, and at the following convention, when the Grand Lodge was formed, he was elected to the office of Grand Secretary, which position he continued to hold with but a brief interruption down to the time of his death, which occurred on Tuesday, the 18th day of August last, at his residence in Hamilton. He died peacefully, after a brief illness, borne alike with fortitude and resignation.

He held many other important positions in Freemasonry during the whole time that he was Grand Secretary, and on many occasions he received warm acknowledgments of his services to Masonry from the Craft at large, from Grand Lodge and private lodges, as well as from other Masonic bodies, and he was frequently the recipient of substantial tokens of the good will of his brethren, and of the esteem in which he was held by them.

MASONIC TRIP.—The annual excursion and picnic of the brethren of Dumbarton Kilwinning Lodge of Freemasons, No. 18, took place on Saturday last. The morning being wet and discouraging, no doubt prevented a much larger turn-out, as it was, however, about sixty, including a number of the brethren of Leven St. John's, No. 170, and accompanied by their wives, sweethearts, &c., were present. The brethren met in the lodge-room about 9.30, when they formed in procession, preceded by the Battalion Band of the D.R.V., and marched to the pier, where they embarked on board the "Carrick Castle" for Lochgoilhead. The rain having taken off about noon, the day became one of the loveliest for such an excursion—the beautiful scenery of Lochlong and Lochgoil being seen and enjoyed to the fullest extent. On the arrival at the head of the Loch, the party proceeded to a beautiful spot on the banks of the River Goll, where refreshments were served out, and a couple of hours spent in the most enjoyable manner, dancing being carried on with great spirit, varied by a song from Bro. T. Baird. At 4 o'clock the company re-embarked on board the "Windsor Castle" on the return journey, arriving at the pier about 7 p.m., where they re-formed and walked in procession to the lodge-room, where they were met by their respected Chaplain, Bro. Williamson, town missionary, who congratulated the brethren on their day's "outing" and its pleasant termination. The R.W.M. of No. 18, Bro. Wm. Barr, also gave a suitable and appropriate address. Votes of thanks having been passed to the band, Bro. Paul, R.W.M., No. 170, &c., and a verse of "Auld Lang Syne" sung, led by Bro. Baird, brought a thoroughly enjoyable day's proceedings to a close.

COMMEMORATIVE JEWEL.

The following circular has been issued from the Grand Secretary's office:—

"Freemasons' Hall, London, W.C.,
 "25th August, 1875

"W. Master,

"The attention of the Board of General Purposes having been directed to the fact of "Special or Commemorative Lodge Jewels" being worn by members of the Craft, with the authorization of the Most Worshipful Grand Master, I am directed to request you to warn all the members of your lodge that no "Special or Commemorative Lodge Jewel" can legally be worn without the express authority of His Royal Highness the Most Worshipful Grand Master having been first obtained.

"I am, W. Master, yours fraternally,

JOHN HERVEY, G.S.

"To the W. Master—
 "Lodge No. ———— London."

THE SPECIALITE SHERRY.—Sherry being an article of great demand at our officers' messes, we feel that we are doing a good turn to the service by calling the attention of mess committees to Messrs. Felton's speciality. As in these days we are nothing if not analytic, we may mention that the "Spécialité Sherry" has been submitted to the most searching tests, and that Dr. Redwood, the well-known analyst, has pronounced "the results are all satisfactory."—"The United Service Gazette."

FAULTLESS ANTIDOTES TO FEARFUL AND FATAL EPIDEMICS.—Whatever are the causes of Fever, Diarrhoea, Dysentery, and similar ailments, it is well ascertained that these diseases are rampant in summer, and it should be as well known that they can be safely and successfully subdued by Holloway's purifying preparations. Holloway's Ointment well rubbed over the entire abdomen, his Pills taken internally, and his dietary rules strictly observed, embrace the domestic and medical management of these diseases, which, when neglected, weaken, if they fail to prove fatal. These remedies remove the causes of disease from the system, and no sufferer, whether his complaint be chronic or acute, should despair till trial has been given to these remedies.—ADVT.

UNITED GRAND LODGE.

Grand Lodge was held on Wednesday evening last in the Temple, and considering that this is the dull season of the year Grand Lodge was numerously attended. There was, however, a marked absence of members of the nobility, although there was as noticeable an attendance of active leading members of the Craft. The day was the anniversary of the late Grand Master's public announcement of his withdrawal from the Craft, which created such a profound sensation this time last year; but so completely had the brethren buried that unpleasant subject, that when one or two brethren mentioned it to others it appeared to have escaped their recollection. The subject of the installation of the late Grand Master's successor, the Prince of Wales, on the 28th of April, however, had not faded from the brethren's minds, for it was still the subject of conversation in all parts of the hall.

Bro. Maj.-Gen. Brownrigg, Prov. Grand Master of Surrey, presided; and he was supported by Bros. J. Rawson, P.D.G.M. of China, as Past Grand Master; Sir H. Edwards, M.P., Prov. G.M. West Yorkshire, as Dep. G.M.; F. Pattison, as S.G.W.; Capt. Platt, as J.G.W.; T. Fenn, P.G.D., as G.D.C.; E. J. McIntyre, Q.C., G.R.; J. B. Monckton, P.G.D., Pres. B.I. G.P.; Revs. Sir J. Warren Hayes, P.G.C., and S. R. Wigram, G.C.; Herr Wilhelm Kuhe, G. Org.; R. J. Spiers, P.G.S.B.; H. Browne, P.G.D.; Rev. R. J. Simpson, P.G.C.; J. M. Clabon, P.G.D.; Rev. J. S. Brownrigg, P.G.C.; Rev. C. J. Martyn, P.G.C.; Dr. Woodman, G.S.B.; J. A. Rucker, P.G.D.; Dr. Jabez Hogg, P.G.D.; Henry Smith, Prov. G. Sec., West Yorkshire; Peter de Lande Long, V.P. Bd. of G. Purposes; Capt. Phillips, E. S. Snell, P.G.D.; H. Marston, Herbert Dicketts, P.G.S.; Thomas W. White, P.G.S.; W. Kindon, W.M. 619; Richard Spencer, P.G.S.; E. P. Albert, A.G.P.; Wright, G.P.; Joseph Smith, P.G.P.; James Brett, P.G.P.; C. A. Cottebrune, P.G.P.; Hyde Pullen, P.G.S.B.; John Boyd, P.G.T.; W. Ough, P.G.P.; N. Bradford, P.G.S.; Joshua Nunn, P.G.S.B.; A. J. D. Filer, P.G.S.B.; W. Stephens, W.M. 1489; T. J. Sabine, W.M. Chaucer; J. C. Parkinson, W. Dodd, P.M. 1194; Israel Abrahams, P.M. 188; Charles Bennett, P.M. 25; W. Watson, P.G.S.; Henry Thompson, P.M. 177, &c.; John While, W.M. 228; A. H. Tattershall; N. B. Headon, W.M. 1426; E. Moody, Sec. 1426; M. S. Larham, W.M. (Surrey Masonic Hall Lodge); F. Adlard, P.M., and Treas. 7; E. M. Haigh, James Ebenezer Saunders, and about 200 others. Bro. John Hervey, G.S., and Bro. H. G. Buss, Assistant, were also in attendance.

The business of Grand Lodge was very light, lighter indeed than it has ever been known to be before. After Grand Lodge had been opened, Bro. John Hervey, G.S., read letters apologising for absence from the Marquis of Hamilton, S.G.W., who was in attendance on the M.W. G.M., and the Lord Mayor, who was also absent from London. Grand Secretary also read a letter from the clerk of Bro. W. Speed, G.D., informing Grand Secretary that Bro. Speed had "left England for a six weeks' tour, and his address will not be known till his return." (Great laughter.)

Grand Secretary then read the minutes of the Quarterly Communication of 2nd June, which were put and confirmed.

He afterwards read the Report of the Lodge of Benevolence for the last quarter, in which are recommendations for the following grants, viz.:

The widow of a brother of the Union Lodge,
No. 129, Kendal	£50 0 0
The widow of a brother of the Acacia Lodge,
No. 1309, Southall	100 0 0
A brother of the Lodge of Harmony, No. 298,
Rochdale	50 0 0
A brother of the Westminster and Keystone
Lodge, No. 10, London	150 0 0

Bro. Joshua Nunn, Senior Vice-President of the Lodge of Benevolence, moved the adoption of the first of these recommendations, and said that the late brother whose widow was proposed to be relieved was a serviceable member of the Craft for many years, and the lodge thought that the widow was fairly entitled to the £50 recommended.

Bro. Clabon, President, seconded the motion, which was unanimously adopted.

Bro. Clabon moved the second grant. The deceased brother had been in the Craft over twenty years, and had hardly begun to save for his wife and children when he was carried off by death. It was a grant to a most deserving case.

Bro. Joshua Nunn seconded the motion, which was also unanimously carried.

Bro. Clabon moved the third grant. The brother to be relieved was an architect, but was struck down by paralysis. His, also, was a most deserving case.

Bro. Joshua Nunn seconded this motion also, which was carried.

Bro. Clabon, in moving the fourth grant, said it was a higher one in amount, being £150. The brother was a clergyman of the Church of England, who had lost his property through misfortune, and not through his own fault. He was in possession now of a small living—very small indeed. He had been struck down by paralysis, and he had to pay almost the whole of the emoluments of his living to some one else to perform his duty.

Bro. Nunn having seconded the motion, it was put and carried.

Bro. John B. Monckton, P.G.D., President of the Board of General Purposes, then moved that the following Report of the Board of General Purposes be taken as read:

"To the United Grand Lodge of Ancient Free and Accepted Masons of England:—

"The Board of General Purposes beg to report that the subject of wearing special or commemorative jewels unauthorized by the Most Worshipful Grand Master having been brought under their notice, they have considered it desirable to direct the Grand Secretary to issue a circular to the Provincial Grand Secretaries and other Masonic authorities, requesting them to warn the brethren under their several jurisdictions against wearing any such jewels, except those which have previously received the sanction of the Most Worshipful Grand Master.

(Signed) "PETER DE L. LONG.

"Vice-President.

"Freemasons' Hall, London, W.C.,

"15th August, 1875."

Bro. Peter de L. Long, Vice-President Board of General Purposes, seconded the motion, which was adopted.

Bro. Monckton, in moving the adoption, &c., of the Report, said there was nothing in it which required the confirmation of Grand Lodge; but the members of Grand Lodge would see that the Report itself comprised that which would be of some importance to the Craft. There was no doubt that for some time past, in country districts mainly, the practice had been springing up of wearing unauthorized jewels. It had been known for some time, but great emphasis had not been laid on the occurrence until just lately; and it did so happen, that the suggestion probably of those who had something to do here and there, and were interested in the manufacture and issuing of Masonic jewels, had led to a vast lot of enquiry on the subject, through the Grand Secretary and the Board of General Purposes. It had been thought wise that the Grand Secretary should issue the communications referred to in the report of the Board, that so the matter should be set at rest for some time. The Craft would see that it was in the order and fitness of things that those jewels only should be worn in Craft lodges which appertained to Craft Masonry. (Hear, hear.)

Bro. Peter de L. Long seconded the motion, which was unhesitatingly adopted.

To the Report of the Board was subjoined a statement of the Grand Lodge accounts at the last meeting of the Finance Committee, held on Friday, the 13th day of August last, showing a balance in the hands of the Grand Treasurer of £3482 10s. 7d.; and in the hands of the Grand Secretary, for petty cash, £75; and for servants' wages, £96 15s.

The annual Report of "The Royal Masonic Benevolent Institution for Aged Freemasons and Widows of Freemasons," dated the 21st May, 1875, was laid before Grand Lodge, and Grand Lodge was then formally closed and adjourned.

Masonic Tidings.

Bro. Lord Skelmersdale, D.G.M., Eng., R.W.P.G.M., West Lancashire, and Lady Skelmersdale, have returned to their country seat, Lathom House, Near Ormskirk, which has been re-decorated throughout.

Bro. Lord de Tabley, P.G.M. Cheshire, after attending his daughter's marriage in London, returned to Tabley House, Cheshire, on Thursday week.

Bro. the Rev. P. H. Ernest Brettle, D.D., will be installed as W.M. of St. Mark's Lodge of Mark Masters No. 1. on Tuesday, the 7th inst., at Masons' Hall Tavern, Masons' Avenue, Basinghall-street.

A few days since the choir of St. Botolph, Aldersgate-street, paid a holiday visit to Southend, and, having offered their services to the vicar of Prittlewell (the Rev. Bro. S. R. Wigram), there was a special choral service at the parish church. They were afterwards entertained by Bro. and Mrs. Wigram.

Bro. T. P. Josland (Josland's Hotel, Falcon-square) has been elected guardian for Cripplegate by a majority of 90 votes over and above the whole of the votes given to the other three candidates.

Prince Leopold's intended visit to the residence of Colonel Campbell, of Blythswood, is creating a good deal of interest in the west of Scotland. It is expected that his Royal Highness will arrive at Blythswood about the 23rd of September.

The most cheering accounts continue to arrive from all parts of the country with reference to the Irish harvest.

A Skating Rink on a large scale is being organised in Dublin.

Baroness Burdett-Coutts has sent £100 to the funds of the Open-Air Mission.

A handsome stained glass window has been presented to the parish church of Sandown, Isle of Wight, by the Imperial Crown Prince and Princess of Germany, in commemoration of their visit there last season.

At a meeting of farmers held at Bro. Pawley's, the Royal Crown Hotel, Sevenoaks, on Wednesday, under the presidency of Mr. Richard Russell, of Orford Castle, it was decided to form a Farmer's Club and Chamber of Agriculture for that part of the county of Kent, and a large number of agriculturists gave in their names as members. Rules for the guidance of the new society were adopted, and officers were appointed, Mr. Russell being the chairman.

Two sturgeons, each seven feet long, have been captured off the Lancashire coast, and conveyed to the aquarium recently opened at Southport.

The "Maconick Weekblad," is the organ of the Craft in Holland, and a well-encouraged Masonic publication.

The Prince of Wales is to be invited to become the patron and one of the presidents of the Great National Eisteddfod at Wrexham next year.

An Autograph of Bro. Monckton, President of the Board of General Purposes, appears in the "Figaro" of the 1st inst.

The Fifteen Sections will be worked at the Dalston (Rose of Denmark), Lodge of Instruction No. 975, held at the Havelock Tavern, Albion Road, Dalston, on Wednesday next, the 8th inst., at seven o'clock precisely. Bro. Gilchrist, P.M. 933, will preside.

The Grand Lodge of New Jersey are having prepared a steel engraving of Grand Master Cox, who, in 1730, was appointed first Provincial Grand Master of New York, New Jersey, and Pennsylvania, by the Grand Lodge of England. The cost is to be 275 dols., and a copy is to be presented to the living representatives of Bro. Cox, as a mark of esteem for the Father of Freemasonry in America.

The eighty-eighth annual communication of the Grand Lodge of New Jersey was held at Trenton, on the 20th ult., when the following officers were elected:—M.W. Bro. William A. Penibroke, 33, G.M.; R.W. Bros. Marshall B. Smith, 67, D.G.M.; Joseph L. De La Cour, 15, G.S.W.; Julius C. FitzGerald, 112, G.J.W.; Charles Bechtel, 5, G. Treas.; Joseph H. Hough, 50, G. Sec.; William D. Rutan, 55, D.G. Sec.

The Knights Templars of Pennsylvania have taken the Centennial celebration in hand, and intend to make it a grand affair, all who profess Christian Knighthood in the world will be invited, so that it is probable the gathering will be an immense one. By the way, is it not strange that the brethren of the lower ranks of Masonry are not to participate? Chivalry is up, and the city of Brotherly Love is determined to have the largest encampment of Templars ever seen.

The Philadelphia "Keystone," than which there is not a better Masonic journal in existence, has entered on its ninth year, and does so with an extended address to its readers, in which it justly claims to be free from all such influences as would deprive it of the real sympathy and support of the Craft generally. We are pleased to see the "Keystone" making good progress, but regret that it cannot boast of doing more than to hold its own. In other words, the earnings of the paper are all required to keep it up, thus giving us further proof of the indifferent way in which the fraternity support papers wholly devoted to the interests of the Order.

The oldest authentic Masonic portrait in the world—that of Bro. Sir Walter Hawksworth, Knight and Baronet, who was "President" of the Lodge of York, England, in A.D. 1713—one hundred and sixty-two years ago—now adorns the York Lodge.

The house still exists at Stonegate, York—the Starr Inn—in which Francis Drake, M.D., F.R.S., a celebrated antiquarian and historian of York, was initiated, at a private lodge, on September 6th, 1725, nearly one hundred and fifty years ago.

The Grand Orient of Portugal has forty-eight lodges affiliated with it, some of which are located in Portugal and others in Spain.

Bro. William Worrell, P.M. and Sec. 766, and P.Z. and S.E. 766, has been appointed Secretary to the South London Conservative Club, Stockwell. Bro. Worrell will still continue to hold his appointment as Secretary to the Royal Albert Orphan Asylum, Bagshot, Surrey.

The first Masonic Lodge of Jerusalem is a beautiful illustration of the cosmopolitan nature of the principles of brotherly love in practical operation. The Master is an American, the Past Master an Englishman, the Senior Warden a German, the Junior Warden a native, the Treasurer a Turk, the Secretary a Frenchman, the Senior Deacon a Persian, and the Junior Deacon a Turk. There are Christians, Mohammedans and Jews in the lodge.

The Grand Lodge of New York, at the late annual communication, amended its constitution with reference to unaffiliated Masons, so that it now reads: "One who shall remain an unaffiliated Mason within this jurisdiction one year or more shall not be allowed to visit any lodge, or join in a Masonic procession, nor be entitled to receive Masonic relief or burial."

The 10th Baroness Burdett-Coutts will visit Manchester on the 10th inst., for the purpose of formally opening the drinking fountain which her ladyship has presented to the town.

The Ritualistic party in the church of England has now taken up the cudgels against the Freemasons, whose part is admirably defended in "The Freemason," a sixteen-page weekly newspaper, published every Friday, price 2d., by George Kenning, 198, Fleet-street. In addition to its leading articles, it contains a great digest of information interesting to Masons, and we recommend it to the Craft as an admirably-conducted journal.—"Figaro."

The Freemasons' Club of New York is said to be in a flourishing condition. It has a valuable library, and affords all the comforts of a home to the travelling brother who may happen to be on a visit to the great city. There is a board of directors and seven committees, so that the management must be pretty complete.

The Freemason,

SATURDAY, SEPT. 4, 1875.

SCOTTISH FREEMASONRY.

We are greatly rejoiced to hear of the movement in Scotland to raise the fees of initiation, for we are quite sure that such a step is a step in the right direction, a reform that long has been needed. We some time back called attention to the subject in a friendly and fraternal spirit, and we hope that our remarks to-day will be appreciated as they are intended and understood, as they are penned in the highest feelings of respect and good will for all our brethren of the mystic tie in Scotland. We have private and personal reasons of our own for feeling the deepest interest in all that concerns "North Britain," and our leader to-day is the "outcome" of honest sympathy with Scottish Freemasonry, and of kindly aspirations for its progress, and honour, and welfare. "Revenons," then, "à nos moutons." Much as we are pleased to hear of this desirable movement, which we are assured is spreading among the lodges in Scotland, we yet venture to remind all Scottish Freemasons of what is really the "fons et origo" of all their "malorum." We are convinced that the absence of an annual lodge subscription, and of an annual payment to their Grand Lodge and their Provincial Grand Lodges for benevolent purposes, is at the bottom of any weakness which may be alleged against their general system—of any default, so to say, in their practical working out of Freemasonry. We are quite aware that some lodges have annual payments, but they are the very few to the very many. We also know that some Provincial Grand Lodges require, and properly require, a payment from each entrant to the Provincial Benevolent Fund. It is also, no doubt, quite correct to say that some Provincial Benevolent Funds, may even private lodge similar funds, are both important in themselves and well managed by the brethren. But what we are very anxious our Scottish brethren should realize, is the advisability of adopting in toto our English system of annual payments. For until they do so all Scottish benevolent efforts must be, we fear, both fragmentary and spasmodic. Some one has said that "system" is everything, and that is the very point on which—we say it with deference—Scottish Freemasonry is deficient. For instance, what a change would take place in the whole Scottish organization for good, in every way, if every lodge in Scotland outside of the metropolis paid 2s. as quarterage annually to the Grand Lodge Benevolent Fund, and 2s. to its Provincial Grand Lodge Benevolent Fund, for every member? In England, in our metropolitan district, all lodges pay 4s. for quarterages annually to the Grand Lodge Benevolent Fund, and 2s. in the provinces. Why should not such a simple and practical regulation be grafted into the Scottish Book of Constitutions? The Scottish Grand Lodge has admitted the principle by section xxii., cap. xx., page 52, but the provisions of the Scottish Book of Constitutions unintentionally tend, in our opinion, to promote any such system becoming general. For though the power to "levy an annual contribution not exceeding 20s." is given, yet, "all lodges availing themselves of the above license" are bound to set aside one half of the sum "as Charity Fund for the lodge" and "for contributing to the said fund of Scottish Benevolence" fifty per cent., in fact the lodge only "retaining 10s. to defray the ordinary expenses." This is too elaborate a system to work. Were the Grand Lodge of Scotland, as with us, to be content with 2s. for provincial and 4s. for metropolitan members as a capitation payment, the margin would be an inducement to the private lodges to enforce an annual subscription. As it is, the proportion is clearly too great of enforced payment in Benevolence, and such a regulation stands in the way of any general adoption by the private lodges of an annual subscription. We do not presume to say what the maximum or minimum of lodge subscriptions should be, but until such are rendered imperative on all lodges and brethren, nothing effective we feel persuaded, will be done in the way of benevolence by the Freemasons in Scotland. We hope that what we have said may commend itself to many of our long-headed, and practical, and well-disposed brethren in Scotland. We might pursue the argument further, but we have said enough, we think, for our purpose, which is to ventilate a very important question amongst those best qualified to consider and deal with the subject. We shall endeavour next week, in the same sympathetic and fraternal spirit, to point out, in our opinion, some of the patent evils of the present Scottish system.

CHURCH RESTORATION.

We publish in another column a letter from Bro. the Rev. J. J. Farnham, with reference to his wants for Westhorpe Church, Suffolk, and we refer our readers to the "Masonic Magazine" for September for a print of the church and a most interesting appeal from our rev. brother. We are very glad to have the opportunity of commending the matter to the notice of all our readers, and we earnestly recommend them carefully to peruse Bro. Farnham's letter in our impression of to-day, as well as his longer statement in the "Masonic Magazine" for September. It seems most befitting that as our operative forefathers built so well and so beautifully the "Houses of God on our land," and which have stood so well the "wear and tear" of several centuries, we, their speculative descendants, should help in our time and generation to restore and renew what Time's effacing hand has weakened or destroyed. Of course such work, and such a recommendation from us, it is understood, are suggested and offered in complete liberty of thought and action. Though we are ourselves on every ground strongly in favour of this appeal, there may be some of us who, for various reasons, do not see the matter exactly as we do. All, therefore, that we write to-day we write in the conscientious freedom of Englishmen, and the full toleration of Freemasons. For we feel this ourselves, and we feel it strongly. There is nothing, as it appears to us, which appeals more earnestly to every Englishman than the sight of a peaceful and comely parish church. And though we are Freemasons, we do not deprive ourselves, outside the lodge at any rate, of our inestimable birthright, whether as patriotic citizens or humbler members of some greater or smaller religious denomination. We think, then, that all of us feel, more or less, no doubt, the power of architectural design, the beauty of proportion, and the strength of religious associations, when we pass by some isolated village church in its sheltered God's Acre, to which for many generations the "rude forefathers of the hamlet" have been wont to repair in all the fervour of simple devotion, and in all the piety of believing worshippers. That humble little building, or that stately fane, as the case may be, is bound up with some very tender memories of humanity. Our ancestors who lived and died in that old manor house, or rural grange, or in yon gabled farm-house, or trellised cottage, set great store by that consecrated tabernacle of the Most High. They spent their earthly existence in that quiet village, and they grew old, and grey, and bent within its well-known limits. They were baptized in that Church, they were confirmed there, they received their first Communion there. They were married there, their children too were also received into the Church there, and some of them, and not a few of their friends, are lying under those little hillocks of fragrant turf. They, themselves, when their time has come, expect to be committed to their rest near unto them, and under the "slanting shadows of those old grey walls." Such were their feelings, such we believe to be shared in fully and deeply by many of our readers, by very many of our great brotherhood. When, then, to-day a worthy and reverend brother, no great dignitary, it is true, simply "the curate in sole charge," a hard-working brother clergyman, asks us to assist him to render this House of God fit for public worship, to recover it from decay, and to restore it to decency and beauty, will we say nay? That very building, now "in extremis," was once reared by our operative forefathers; their cunning chisel elaborated, and their skilful designs constructed, from their tracing-board in the pure Craft lodge, that goodly building for the duties and services of religion. Their marks are upon many stones, their emblems on many a window, and we, it appears to us, have a claim upon us, alike pressing and even Masonic, to aid the efforts of Bro. Farnham. That old church is still very dear to many, perhaps some brethren of our own. Many have been able to hear there the Word of Life, have knelt and worshipped there. Many have taken sweet counsel together, and "walked in the House of God as friends," and they know every stone of its courses, and every fantastic form of its gargoyles.

To very many that same old church is the very embodiment of all that is affecting in religious emotion, all that is graceful in art, all that is sacred in worship. We think, then, that we, as Freemasons, may be fairly called on to-day by our reverend brother to aid to conserve what the operative guilds erected so well, and to restore what they planned and perfected in their time. We hope that the words we have used may commend themselves to all our kindly disposed brethren. They have been written in a spirit of sincerity and sympathy, and they are addressed to that love of architectural beauty and of skilful construction, and religious worship, which as Freemasons we have never wholly lost. May our Brother Farnham's appeal be successful, and may he obtain from our speculative brotherhood to-day some fraternal offerings to further his appeal for preserving, and restoring, and beautifying another specimen of the unrivalled handiwork of those lodges of Craftsmen who were the forerunners of our great and speculative brotherhood.

BRO. MAJOR BURGESS.

We think that this controversy should cease. We have allowed both sides fair play and a "full deliverance," barrin," as the Irishman said, "one or two particulars," which seemed to us a little too personal. And so we shall not publish any more letters on the subject. The old saying is true in things Masonic as in things profane, "A man convinced against his will is of the same opinion still," and we do not suppose that either "athlete" is the least affected, or satisfied, or convinced by what the other has said. But such is the result of all human controversy; it only for the most part leaves the matter as it was before, and it is very lucky if it has not tended to exacerbate instead of composing, to affront instead of convincing. So far, the "outcome" of the whole discussion is, leaving out Bro. Major Burgess's case, that the Mark Grand Lodge, a professedly Masonic body, has placed its members under the decision of a tripartite Judicial Committee, of which two of the signatories are non-Masonic—that is to say, not belonging to Craft Masonry. All Mark Masons under this peculiar arrangement can be expelled from Mark Masonry for an offence which they have committed, against discipline or morals, in the Priory of the Temple, and the Ancient and Accepted Rite. Such delinquents may be utterly innocent as regards Mark Masonry; they may have committed not the slightest offence against its Book of Constitutions, they may be faithful and loyal Mark Masons, they may be old subscribers, high in rank and office, but all this avails nothing. Woe unto them if they become liable to a sentence of the tripartite Judicial Committee, for an offence against one is an offence against all, and expelled from one Order you must be expelled from all. This seems to us a very novel kind of justice, but so it is. Without going further into the case, we cannot but express our humble opinion, that the tripartite treaty is greatly to be deprecated, in the interests of fair play and Masonic equity. No system long can endure in which possible injustice may accrue to its members, and we cannot believe that such an arrangement can be maintained. Mark Masons ought only to be judged by their own Order, just as members of the Priory of the Temple and of the Ancient and Accepted Rite should be ruled over by their own appointed officers and committees. We feel sure that the tripartite treaty is a great mistake, in that it is a surrender of the rights and liberties of Mark Masons to an irresponsible body, to an un-Masonic tribunal.

THE CURIOSITIES OF A RELIGIOUS CENSUS.

It is perhaps not generally known, says the "Times," that "although the late census in England took no note of the religious denominations" which exist in this good land of ours, "the Irish census, on the contrary, included authentic returns of the various religious bodies in that kingdom." There are, it appears, 5,412,377 living souls in that "green island," which its admirers often call also, "First flower of the ocean, and first gem of the sea." The Roman Catholics number 4,150,000 members; the Protestant Episcopal Church, 668,000; the Presbyterians, 497,000; and the Methodists, 43,000. "These four denominations thus embrace, it will be seen, about nine-tenths of the entire population." Among "other religious bodies which make up the balance, we find 1,538 Covenanters, 2,600 Brethren and Christian Brethren of whom, as Paddy says, 'very shtrangely the majority are women, hedad, sir!' 40 non-sectarians, 44 Christian Israelites, 33 Mormons, 10 Latter-Day Saints, 6 Exclusive Brethren, (but no Exclusive Sisters, N.B.), 5 Humanitarians, 10 Durllyites, 9 Puseyites, 6 Walherites, 5 Christadelphians, 5 Morrisonians, 60 Freethinkers, 8 Secularists, 16 Deists, 6 Theists, and 1 Atheist! There are also—1 disciple of Positivism, 1 Buddhist, 1 Mussulman, 1 Confucian, four men and one woman 'undetermined' or undecided; and there is a 'residuum' (quite a proper use of the word), of 1,050 men and women whose form of religion is 'not specified.' Is not this a striking return? and, we would also ask, why should not a similar return be obtained from England? We prefer facts to fanaticism, and statistics to what Dr. Johnson would have termed the "ridiculousness" of so called "conscientious scruples." What a commentary do these Irish figures afford on many topics of a controversial character, on many of the struggles of contending religious bodies! Are we not wise in our generation, we excommunicated Freemasons, when we sternly banish from all our lodges the semblance even of political or religious discussions? Happy it is for us that there is and can be one spot where religious differences are unknown, and political bitterness cannot exasperate, and where we meet as brethren, and feel as brethren, respecting each other's honest creed, and carefully avoiding any act or word which may trench on the solemn and sacred liberty of Freemasons, in all that affects the conscience, in all that concerns the benign principle of absolute toleration.

A MASONIC PATERFAMILIAS AT THE SEA SIDE.

August is going out and September is coming in, and heat and glare are soon to be succeeded by partridges and pointers. Many of our good brethren who have been sauntering on the Lees at Folkestone, or the Marine Parade at Brighton, at Dover or Sandgate, at Margate or Ramsgate, unfashionable Weymouth, or at fashionable Cowes, are wending their way back to the "little village," surrounded by blooming olive branches and buxom wives. The days of excursions, of early hours, of healthy breezes, of "dolce far niente," are over; those lords and masters of domestic shrines have to plunge once again into the dimness of counting houses, and to tread with anxious steps the purlieus of "Cockayne." Their hours of rest are over for 1875, their moments of priceless freedom are ended; donkey boys and donkeys, waggonettes and Badminton, gipsy hoods and laughing fairies, are but shadows of the past; they return to the mysteries of "tare and tret," to Mr. Collie's affairs, and to "some tightness in the money market." And yet what a "refresher" to many a hard-worked "Paterfamilias" has been that month or six weeks' holiday at the sea side. What a wise institution it is, what a needful repose for many wearied brains, and exhausted bodies. And then what happiness to that little circle of agitated but easily contented "blossoms." Who can tell, pent up as we are amid the smells, and glare, and dust, and noise of this huge Babylon—who can tell, we repeat, the joy of sand castles, the good of the ocean ozone? Who can rightly estimate the present value to many a little pale boy and white-faced little girl of those glimpses of the ocean and those breezes of the downs, which have returned them like rosy apples or tinted peaches? It is impossible, we think, to estimate the intense physical value of shells and sea-weed, of "mud pies," and of delightful paddlings in the refreshing brine, for some of that younger generation which, when we are gone and forgotten, will carry on alike the duties of English citizenship and the work of English Freemasonry. It is said that Englishmen have a knack of always making themselves uncomfortable, and of grumbling and growling everywhere. We do not believe the accusation. Let any of us take a peep at these seaside "guinguettes" of ours, whether north or south, or east or west, and they will hear the prattle of pleasant voices, and they will note the harmonious evidence of English domestic life. The Masonic Paterfamilias, like his profane contemporary, may sometimes grumble at the expense of the holiday. It is not given to all to have a constant and agreeable balance at even the most accommodating of bankers, but as a general rule we believe that that most important personage, Paterfamilias, pays more liberally than most men, because he wisely discerns how good it is for the "young uns," his dear, dear Femina, and last, not least, himself. And all honour to the Feminas of our nation. They are they, after all, who bear the "burden and heat of the day;" they make two ends meet; they endure trouble without a murmur, and disappointment without a complaint. They are the very salt of life to our English society, that preserving power which alone prevents it from degenerating into an arena of uncontrolled license and foul-living barbarism. We do not wish to get too serious, and so we wish all who have now come back from their yearly outing every happiness and weal, until another golden summer shall see them once again with old and young, with near and dear, inhaling the healthful breeze, or grateful for the annual holiday.

CAPTAIN WEBB.

All Englishmen admire pluck under all circumstances, and as Freemasons we do not lose our individuality as Englishmen, or put from us all civic feelings, and all national sympathies. "Au contraire," like the great Moliere, we declare to-day with an allowable adaptation, "pour être un Franc Maçon, on n'est pas moins homme." We have said this by way of preface, because we believe that our readers, universally, like ourselves, have rejoiced to hear of Captain Webb's plucky achievement of swimming across the Channel, and landing in France, after an immersion in the sea of twenty-two consecutive hours. Though towards the end of his travel the gallant Captain became exhausted, and when he landed he was apparently completely overcome by the length of his voyage and the buffeting of the waves, this, in our opinion, in no way detracts from the success he has achieved, the energy he has evinced, and the courage which never left him. It is a very notable achievement, look at it which way you will, and as Englishmen we may well be proud of our enduring countryman. We do not profess to think, indeed, that the feat, great as it is, proves much either way. It is clearly an exceptional case, and we must credit Captain Webb with a great amount of pluck, energy, and physical activity, when we seek to appreciate the full bearings of this realized endeavour—to swim so long a distance and to remain so long in the water. The "Times" truly says:—"One practical point may be regarded as settled by Captain Webb's success, and that is the possibility of a man's remaining many hours in the water, without any artificial provision for protecting the body from cold. The greatest danger of exposure at sea has long been known to be, not exhaustion from fatigue, but collapse from penetrating cold. A low temperature will pierce a swimmer to the marrow even while he keeps on steadily moving, much more when he ceases to exert himself and rests by floating. The vital powers are all lowered, and it is believed that the heart soon gives way. But Captain Webb's adventure shows that a strong man, in the vigorous prime of life, accustomed to swimming and in highly-trained condition, may remain in the water for nearly twenty-four hours during a sultry day in August without suffering any serious inconvenience. This is all that the experiment proves. It does not show that any ordinary swimmer could hope to save his life by swimming if he were lost at sea twenty-five miles from the shore, nor even that he could remain twenty-two hours in the water; it only exhibits endurance of an exceptional character under exceptional conditions." We believe also, that that is all we can lay down from this "fait accompli," as regards either its distinct importance or practical value. But still the fact remains a fact, reflecting the very highest credit on the skill, and courage, and determination, and endurance of the plucky swimmer, and proving also completely what well trained energies are capable of and what physical strength and condition can accomplish. We note that Lord Stanhope recommends a subscription to be set on foot, and that Captain Webb has been warmly received at a meeting at Dover. We wish the captain all prosperity; may "good luck" attend him, and may he in his future career meet with all the success, which indomitable perseverance can expect, or unshrinking courage can obtain.

THE COSMOPOLITAN MASONIC CALENDAR, DIARY, AND POCKET BOOK FOR 1876.

A form has been forwarded within the last twelve or fourteen days to the W.M. of every London lodge, respectfully requesting that the name and number of the lodge, place, day and months of meeting, might be filled in and returned as speedily as possible, in order that corrections, where needed, may be made in the Diary and Pocket Book for 1876, which will be ready about October 1st. As many lodges do not re-assemble until October and November, a large number of the applications will not unfortunately reach the W.M. until too late for the publication. The publisher will therefore be very thankful to any W.M. or other officer, or members, who will favour him by forwarding the above information as early as possible to the Office, 198, Fleet Street, London. A regular form will be sent, when required, on receipt of name and address.

Original Correspondence.

[We do not hold ourselves responsible for, or even as approving of the opinions expressed by our correspondents, but we wish, in a spirit of fair play to all, to permit—within certain necessary limits—free discussion.—Ed.]

MINUTES AND THEIR CONFIRMATION.

To the Editor of the Freemason.

Dear Sir and Brother,—

Will you kindly once more grant me space to thank Brother "P.G.W." for his fraternal reply to my letter, which, however, I am bound to say, so far from convincing me that my formerly expressed view about the election of W.M. is wrong, entirely confirms me in my opinion that it is right; indeed, on examination, I believe that it will be apparent that "P.G.W.'s" quotations entirely bear out my reading of the law of the case.

"The Constitutions," says "P.G.W.," "provide that certain matters shall not be binding, unless they have been proposed, seconded, and carried at one meeting, and have been confirmed at the next ensuing meeting" (see p. 28, section 8). "The matters stated to require confirmation are few, but important, and it is from their very importance that they are made to require confirmation, e.g., the election of Master, from the Grand Master downwards, grants of money," &c., &c.

Now, what do we find to be the case? In the first place "p. 28, section 8," refers to Grand Lodge and Grand Lodge only, the points contained in it (money grants by committee of G.L. and alterations of laws) being, besides, matters which could by no possible chance come under the cognizance of any subordinate lodge, whilst, in the second place, no mention whatever is made of the election of Master, whether Grand or otherwise. This section is, therefore, entirely out of court; besides which, just mark that the actions there defined to require confirmation by a second Grand Lodge are those upon which the former Grand Lodge voted immediately upon their being put from the chair without any previous notice.

Now, this is not the case with regard to the election of Grand Master (which, I admit most willingly, is a precedent to be followed by every subordinate lodge), for what do we find in page 29, section 1? The Grand Master is to be nominated (not elected) at one G.L., elected at the next, and then installed, but without any second election at the ensuing festival. Is not this exactly what I say should be done, and more, I believe, usually is done? What I dispute is that any second election is legal.

Again, any member may nominate a second candidate at the first meeting, whilst an adverse majority may reject the nominee at the second. Surely there is here ample scope for disaffection or opposition.

I might stop here did I not feel that one other dictum of "P.G.W." needs comment. Further on he says:—"This provision" (confirmation of election by means of "confirmation of minutes") "is made not only for the purpose of assuring time for due consideration of so important a matter, but that every member may have the opportunity of recording his vote at, at least, one or other of the meetings."

Now, this seems to me to be perfectly unnecessary. Surely the month between nomination and election is ample time for due consideration of the matter, if, indeed, the consideration of it has been so long delayed: Surely, two consecutive meetings are sufficient in which to bring a well-founded opposition to bear, whilst, again, the course which I call illegal seems to provide an unnecessary opportunity of stultifying both Master elect and lodge by allowing one to take up a rule of which he may be capriciously deprived, and by the other submitting to and afterwards subverting an authority which the fundamental laws of Masonry declare to be absolute.

Once more, Grand Lodge, or any other lodge, must be ruled by its written law so long as it exists. If its law be wrong, let it be altered; if it be doubtful, let it not only make an authoritative declaration of what its law intends, but let it also revise those other portions of it which make it seem conflicting.

I remain, dear Sir and Brother, fraternally and faithfully yours,
WILLIAM TENNIS.

Caterham Valley, Aug. 24th, 1875.

P.S.—Since sending my letter Bro. Ohren's reply has appeared. I think the above will apply to his observations, which are simply a re-iteration, without further proof, of those of Bro. "P.G.W."

THE POWERS OF W. MASTERS.

To the Editor of the Freemason.

Dear Sir and Brother,—

I have been asked to reply to a letter on the above subject, signed "An Absent W.M.," which appears in your issue of 28th ult.

I find some little difficulty in doing so satisfactorily to myself, because I do not quite understand, nor do I think that the writer can himself quite understand, the full extent of the questions which he has put.

He asks for an "opinion as to the extent of the control which a W.M. possesses over his lodge," &c., &c., and he then goes on to particularize two cases. I will, with your permission, deal with the latter first.

He writes, "It often happens that a Master is temporarily absent from his lodge on account of sickness or other passing emergency, and what I want to know is whether such absence deprives him of all power and authority over his lodge." He then proceeds to the two questions—1st, "Has the lodge, for instance, any right to refuse to obey his directions that he should be regularly furnished with a copy of the summons for each meeting?"

The answer to this would be clearly, No, but this answer must be qualified, because the lodge (as lodge) has nothing to do with it; it is the duty of the Secretary, by the Master's directions, to summon all members to each meeting of the lodge, and, therefore, the W.M. must be summoned as well as all the rest.

The second question is, "Has the lodge any right to refuse to obey his directions that he shall be regularly furnished with . . . a report of the proceedings thereat, in order that he may be kept acquainted with all that was going on during his absence?"

If the question thus worded means, has the Master a right to inspect the minute book and all other books and documents of the lodge, and thus make himself acquainted with what has taken place during his absence? the reply must unquestionably be in the affirmative. The Master not only has such right, but he is really the custodian of all such books and documents, and he is the person who is bound to produce them: see p. 69, sec. 23 ("The warrant and books and papers belonging to the lodge must be produced by the Master when required by competent authority"), and so also at p. 78, sec. 5 ("The Master is responsible for the due observance of the laws relating to private lodges, and is bound to produce all books, minutes and accounts, when required by lawful authority.")

If he is bound to produce them he is entitled to hold them; if he holds them he can make himself acquainted with their contents. But if the question means, can a Master who, by intention or even from necessity, is absent from his lodge, require any individual member of his lodge to send him a report of its proceedings? I apprehend that the answer must be in the negative.

I presume that there is something more in the question than meets the eye. There are Masters and Masters. I believe and hope that in nineteen out of every twenty cases, where things go pleasantly, as they generally do in lodge, that when a W.M., either from "sickness or other pressing emergency," has been absent from his lodge, any or all of his brethren would be only too willing to make him acquainted with its proceedings, and to take his advice on all matters touching its interests.

There may be cases where a W.M. has very exaggerated notions as to his powers, and may have so stretched his authority or have exercised it so disagreeably that no one of the members may care to inform him as to the proceedings which have taken place in his absence, and in such case, subject, as I have said, to his right to inspect all books, papers, &c., I repeat that, in my opinion, he has no power to compel any one to report to him as to the proceedings of the lodge.

Having thus dealt, and I hope satisfactorily, with these two questions, I now revert to the general and somewhat vague question, viz.:—"What is the extent of the control which a W.M. possesses over his lodge, and what constitutes incapability of discharging the duties of his office, other than by death or removal. . . . Whether his absence deprives him of all power and authority over his lodge?"

Before this question can be answered satisfactorily we must know what is meant by the term "control" (I leave out, or rather I include, "power and authority," because I presume that they are all three intended to mean one and the same thing). I hold that a W.M. has full control over his lodge, provided that the meaning of that word is limited to one of the definitions given to it by Johnson, viz., "superintendence." In every body of men there must be some one who is responsible. The Master, in truth, is but a superintending officer, placed at the head of a lodge, not to carry out any exercise of his own free will, but to see that the laws of the Craft are faithfully observed, and its rites duly administered. The office of Master involves a great deal of responsibility, and gives but little control further than superintendence. He pledges himself "faithfully, zealously, and impartially to perform the duties of the lodge," and that he will administer the rites, &c., &c., and preserve our ancient landmarks. But does this give him any power, or control, or authority, further than that of superintendence? I answer, Certainly not. He is there not to do his own will, but to see that all things are done in order, and that the general laws of the Craft and the particular bye-laws of the lodge are duly observed.

Our laws contemplate the presence of the W.M., though they provide for his absence: see p. 78, section 6, "In the Master's absence the immediate Past Master, or, if he be absent, the Senior Past Master present, shall take the chair," &c., &c. The Master not being present at a meeting cannot superintend the proceedings of the lodge, and, therefore, he cannot control it; the authority in such case, or, rather, the responsibility, then rests with the Immediate P.M., or Senior P.M., or whoever by the law is entitled to rule the lodge in the absence of the W.M.

A lodge is a pure republic, electing for convenience sake certain officers, clothing them with a certain rank, and investing them with a very slight authority, but retaining its government in its own hands. Thus at p. 80, section 4, we read, "The majority of the members present at any lodge duly summoned have an undoubted right to regulate their own proceedings, provided that they are consistent with the general laws and regulations of the Craft."

Here the lodge does the act, the Master only sees that it is properly done. Again, at p. 69, sec. 24, "The majority of the members of a lodge, when congregated, have the privilege of giving instructions to their Master, the Immediate Past Master, and Wardens, before the meeting of Grand Lodge, because such officers are the representatives, and are supposed to speak their sentiments." Here the lodge directs what is to be done, and the Master does it.

It is true that the Master has some little power granted to him in addition to that possessed by all other members, e.g., he may, when the votes are equally divided, give a casting vote, except in the case of election of a candidate for initiation or a brother to join: p. 62, sec. 3. He is constituted the judge of the necessity or otherwise for holding a lodge of emergency, and may give or refuse his consent to it, but in his absence the power merges into other hands, viz.: those of the Senior Warden, or in his absence the Junior Warden. See p. 64, sec. 9.

The Master, then, is made for the lodge, not the lodge for the Master. As regards the singular question (or rather deduction from a question supposed to be previously answered) with which "An Absent W.M." concludes his letter, I can only remark that as the W. Masters who attended the installation of H.R.H. did so in obedience to the summons issued to them by their superior authority, the Grand Lodge, they could not, and did not, lose any privileges to which they were otherwise entitled as W. Masters.

If their lodges were not meeting at that particular day they wanted no control, and therefore the W. Masters lost nothing.

If the lodges were meeting, the W.M.'s, not being present, could not superintend the proceedings, and therefore their authority devolved upon some other officers for that time.

I apologize for the length to which I have unavoidably been led.

P.G.W.

FREEMASONRY AND ITS DISTRACTORS.

To the Editor of the Freemason.

Dear Sir and Brother,—

I am sure the brethren who perused the two articles in your columns of Saturday the 21st inst., under the heads "Sermons against Freemasonry," and "The Union Review," cannot but feel honoured with having read such a noble exposition of the errors perpetrated by a class of nobodies who presume to denounce a society strong in its humanity, truth, innocence, utility, and above all charity. I do not wish to occupy your space in condemning the conduct of persons who do not actually know anything, practically, of the subject, but merely cke out their illogical abuse in order to gratify a misguided animus.

I am Sir, your faithful brother,

A MASTER MASON.

Eccles, August 25th, 1875.

SIR CHRISTOPHER WREN.

To the Editor of the Freemason.

Dear Sir and Brother,—

At page 382 "A Masonic Student" asserts that I "will not have the pre-1717 Freemasonry at any price," and adds that I "shut my eyes to the fact of indubitable history." Now, this way of putting it is highly calculated to mislead, and not only so, but I beg to state that both statements are most decidedly untrue. The fact is that I not only admit the existence of a "pre-1717 Freemasonry," but I admit the existence of two "pre-1717 Freemasonries," viz.: the operative Freemasonry of the 14th, 15th, and 16th centuries, and the social Freemasonry of the 17th century. Another Freemasonry, however, sprang up in the 18th century, and what I "will not have" is that this 18th century Freemasonry—or "our Freemasonry," as it has lately been termed—existed before 1717. Ashmole and Plot might both be acquainted with a Freemasonry—viz., with the 17th Freemasonry—but they were not acquainted with our Freemasonry, for it was then still in the womb of futurity. Bro. D. Murray Lyon some time ago stated that our Freemasonry "was manufactured by Desaguliers and Anderson" about A.D. 1717. And at p. 23 of the "Freemasons' Magazine and Masonic Mirror" for July 11th, 1868, we find him saying—"The fact that the Master Degree abounds with archaisms does not of itself contribute much to the settlement of the question of its antiquity. It is no breach of charity to suppose that its fabricators knew their mission too well to frame the ritual in language that would point to its modern origin; hence the antique garb in which it is masked."

It is not long since I read Bro. Hughan's words to the effect that he could find no evidence to support the supposed existence of our three degrees before 1717, nor, he added, of any degrees proper at all.

As to the value of Dr. Plot's wordings, little dependence can be put upon it, unless it can be practically proved that a horse-chestnut is just the same as a chestnut-horse.

It is not mere verbiage that will do good here, but things. And unless "a Masonic Student" can prove that the Pope and his advisers in 1738 were ignorant of the subject, and therefore wrong when they stated that our Freemasonry at that time had only been recently formed, I fear that I must still hold on by the 1717 theory. "A Masonic Student" I dare say feels proud of the nominal adhesion of Bro. Hughan to his "Guild Theory," but although he had half-a-dozen Bro. Hughans to cheer him on, I think it quite possible to send a shot through his said theory. As to what Bro. Hughan's Guild Theory is we have yet to learn. I asked him several weeks ago to give an independent explanation thereof, but as yet it has not been forthcoming.

I am, yours fraternally,
Glasgow, August 28th.

W. P. BUCHAN.

HIGHRODIAMS.

To the Editor of the Freemason.

Dear Sir and Brother,—

I am of opinion that the word "Highrodiams," is a corruption of "Herodians," the latter being the name of a Masonic Order formerly well known in England. Under the pseudonym of "Antiquarius," I called attention to the "Herodian Order," in the "Freemason," of Oct. 1, 1870, and to save reference it may be well to repeat what was then stated as a quotation from Finch. "The Herodian Order," treats of the Third Temple, built by Herod, King of Judea, and what was there found, which, with the particulars relative to the attempt to build a fourth temple by the Emperor Julian, together with the Arch of Constantine, and the Arch of C—, B— of I—m, fully completes the discovery of Royal Arch Masons; and ends the Order of Arch Masonry in a grand and sublime manner; and renders the Arch with all its parts, the finest Arcanum in the whole Order." The next degree mentioned by Finch is the "Red Cross" of Rome and Constantine, and he also refers to "part of the Royal Arch secrets discovered by Constantine the Great," being "no ways connected with the Christian degree called the 'Red Cross of Rome and Constantine.'" Under the title of Rosycrucian, Finch observes, "This degree consists of five points; the end of the third closes with the A— of J— C—; the other two carry us to the discovery made in the year when the Emperor Julian impiously attempted to erect a fourth temple, contrary to the prophecy relative to the final destruction of the T— C—, &c."

I may add that these traditions are preserved in the K.H.S. Order, vide "Notes and Queries," in "Freemason," Oct. 15, 1870, and the principal legend may be found in "Nioephorus Callistus."

"Highrodiams," or "Herodians," evidently date back to 1746, the interesting records of the lodge of Industry, Gateshead, conclusively proving that fact, they cannot, therefore, be identical with the "Order of Harodim," which was "instituted at the Mitre Tavern, Fleet Street, January 4, 1787," according to their "Plan and Regulations," now in my possession, and which I intend to publish. May I suggest that the words "Domaskin or Forin" refer to the distinction made between "Operative and Speculative," "Domestic and Geomatic," (sic) "Home and Foreign" Masons, in the earlier decades of the eighteenth century? This is purely conjectural, but, in any case, I quite agree with Bro. Hughan "that 'Highrodiams' does not mean 'Harodim,'" and I venture to suggest that "Herodian," considering the hazy orthography which prevailed in 1746, is somewhat nearer the mark.

R. WENTWORTH LITTLE.

THE "MASONIC MAGAZINE" AND WESTHORPE CHURCH.

To the Editor of the Freemason.

Dear Sir and Brother,—

I am greatly obliged to you for your kind interest in my great work, and for the insertion of my appeal in the September number of the Magazine. I trust that it will commend itself to my brother Masons, and that from them I shall receive substantial aid.

These old churches were doubtless built by our ancient brethren; and it is fitting that we should save their work from ruin and decay. The Masons of many parts of England have honourably distinguished themselves in this good work, and my Suffolk brethren, with our good Prov. G.M. at their head, are taking the matter up warmly. I trust that the fraternity generally will do the same, and they will earn the gratitude of

Yours faithfully and fraternally,
Westhorpe, July 26th, 1875.

J. J. FARNHAM.

[We beg to refer all our readers to Bro. Farnham's interesting and Masonic statement in the September Magazine. We trust that it will both be read and answered by many of our Order.—Ed.]

Mulum in Barbo; or Masonic Notes and Queries.

HIGHRODIAMS.

Your translation of "Highrodiams" seems to me very likely to be correct as Harodim (or Heredom). Would "Menatschims" occur to you for "Domaskin." Some brother living at, or near, Gateshead should be able to assist you with the dialect of the district, which is very peculiar as you doubtless know, they (in Newcastle) cannot sound the letter "R," but give it the sound of W—as America, becomes "Amewica"—still there is a faint sound of the "R," and perhaps the way to spell it would be Amerwica—again, to-morrow for to-morrow. Thus, a century ago, if they tried to spell the words as they pronounced them, it is now difficult to get at, and perhaps the middle class then spoke no better than the lower class do (there) now. I have heard foreman pronounced frequently as "form un," but this does not seem near enough to "forin," but how they might pronounce it I cannot say. These are only rough ideas, but they may present the names to you in a fresh light, and enable you to work them out.

If Highrodiams is accepted as a corruption of Harodim (or Heredom), and is taken to mean a grade, or degree, such as, for instance, provost (which is really a chief), or priest, or whatever Heredom is believed to mean, then does not "Domaskin" seem likely to indicate another grade or degree when it is regarded as a corruption of "Menatschim," prefect or overseer. "Prefect" means really "a governor of a Province," therefore, a second (or lower) grade. If "forin" was originally "foreman," it is, at once, but another name for "overseer."

"Harodim," as suggested by Bro. Woodford, seems a very probable solution of the difficulty, especially as it is not only similar in form, but also because there was a "Grand Chapter of Harodim" opened in London in 1787. It was a school of instruction under a "chief Harod" (Preston says), divided into different classes; each class was presided over by a "Sectionist," each section was subdivided under "Clauseholders," when a member knew all the sections he was called a "Lecturer." It was probably in existence as lately as 1846.

In this Grand Chapter, however, there seems to have been no recognised title (at least recorded) as "Highrodiams," or anything like it, so, I venture to offer the following suggestion, not as a better one than Bro. Woodford's, but as one which, being within the bounds of possibility, may lead to some further discovery. In the "Ancient Scotch Rite" there was a term "Sovereign Prince of Rose Croix de Heroden," Heroden being the name of a mountain in the north-west of Scotland, where the first, or metropolitan lodge of Europe was held ("Harodum" [Latin, heritage] is also given [by Ragon] as the derivation). In 1754 the "Rite of Perfection," or "Hérédóm," consisting of twenty-five degrees, mostly the same as those of the "Ancient Scotch Rite," and including "Rose Croix," was established in France by the Chevalier de Bonneville. Recognizing in these two rites the "Rose Croix," and taking into account the titles "Heroden" and "Hérédóm," it is not possible that a corrupt form of them might have arisen, partly based, too, upon the term "High Rood" (or Cross), or, as it was more anciently spelt, "Rode" (Chaucer), thus—Heroden or Hérédóm, High-Rode-(ians), High-rodi-ams?

MASONIC MEDALS AND TOKENS.

I described a medal in the "Freemason" of the 14th of August, which, I believe, was presented to every brother who advanced money towards the loan raised in 1779 for the purpose of paying off the debt on Freemasons' Hall, and I have just examined another medal which relates to the same subject. It is of silver, 1½ inches in diameter; the obverse contains a female winged figure, draped in flowing robes (Fame, I suppose), in the act of inscribing on a column "In honour of the subsci." In her left hand she holds a trumpet, and also a scroll bearing an elevation of a building. The floor is a tessellated pavement; in the background, to the left, is a building in course of erection surrounded by scaffolding. From the top of the medal extend rays of light. There is also the date 1780. The reverse contains this inscription, "To John Allen, Esq., G.W., in grateful testimony of a liberal subscription towards completing their Hall," surrounded by the words "Grand Lodge of Freemasons in England."

A ring at the top of the medal seems to indicate that it was worn by its original possessor, who, I observe, held the office of J.G.W. in 1777.

The Emulation Lodge No. 21, and the Britannic Lodge No. 33, are each in possession of a precisely similar Medal, which is worn by the W.M., suspended within the square. Bro. Brackstone Baker, in his interesting notice of the former lodge, says: "The Emulation Lodge contributed to this fund (Hall Loan Fund), and subsequently resigned its claim for repayment, making the subscription a gift to the Society, and received the thanks of Grand Lodge for 'its liberal and generous present,' and as a mark of distinction for the service thus rendered a medal was presented to it, to be worn ever afterwards in lodge by the Master for the time being." Here we have a clear instance of the reason for which this medal was presented, and Bro. Allen's was probably earned by a similar act of generosity. I therefore conclude that this medal was given to those who surrendered their claims for repayment, while that which I described on the 14th of August was no doubt issued to each and every subscriber.

A list of the contributors to this fund used to be given in the "Freemasons' Calendar." In the publication for the year 1813 the names of 26 lodges appear (all that subscribed, I believe); of these the following 17 are still in existence:—

Grand Stewards; Royal Somerset and Inverness, 4; Friendship, 6; Emulation, 21; Castle Lodge of Harmony, 26; St. Alban's, 29; Britannic, 33; Royal Cumberland, 41; Old Union, 46 (then Union Lodge of Freedom and Ease); Love and Honour, 75; Shakespeare, 99; London, 108; Caledonian, 134; Unanimity, 154; Nine Muses, 235; Indefatigable, 237 (originally Groll Lodge, Neath), and Harmony, 255. It will be observed that I have given the present numbers of the lodges. I am indebted to the valuable list in Bro. Hughan's "Memorials of the Union" for the means of doing so.

It is quite likely that all of these lodges were not entitled to this medal, but it would be interesting to know how many of them possess one at the present time.

E.S.

MARK MASONRY.

We hear a good deal of Mark Masonry just now. Can any brother throw light on its early history in this country? That in old days the Guilds used marks is certain, and probably the old operative lodges did so.

What is the earliest date of a warrant for the present grade? and how comes it that it was ignored completely at the Union?

A MASONIC ARCHEOLOGIST.

SIR CHRISTOPHER WREN.

In answer to my friend Bro. Buchan, I spoke of the year 1720 as (so far as my memory of the records served me), the period when the list of members of the "Lodge of Antiquity" commences, which is still preserved in the archives of that ancient lodge. The earlier documents are lost, excepting the MS. charges of A.D. 1686, which are to be found in my "Old Charges of British Freemasons," but even at that date mention is made of a Masonic Society, not connected with the "Company of Masons."

WILLIAM JAMES HUGHAN.

ROYAL MASONIC INSTITUTION FOR GIRLS.

The General Committee of the subscribers to this school assembled at their usual monthly meeting, at Freemasons' Hall, on the 26th ult. Major J. Creation, V.P., presided, and was supported by Bros. Thomas W. White, H. A. Dubois, James Mason, Griffiths Smith, F. W. H. Ramsay, M.D.; H. Browne, A. H. Tattershall, John A. Rucker, Raynham W. Stewart, Robert Kenyon, Thomas Massa, S. Rawson, Thomas Kingston, Wm. Jones, Henry Dubosc, Leopold Ruf, D. Nicols, Major E. H. Finney, H. C. Levander, E. H. Thieilay, Joshua Nunn, and R. Wentworth Little (Secretary).

After the formal business of the committee had been transacted, an important notice of motion was given by Bro. Joshua Nunn in reference to enlarging the establishment.

Two candidates' petitions were read and approved, and the committee afterwards adjourned.

A NEW CHAPTER AT BARROW-IN-FURNESS.

Craft Masonry has been very flourishing for some time in this town, but hitherto the only Royal Arch Chapter in the neighbourhood has been that held at Ulverston. This has been a great disadvantage to the Barrow companions, as the distance between the two towns is nearly ten miles, and it was felt that it would be most desirable to form a chapter to be held in the town of Barrow itself. We have, therefore, heard with pleasure that a meeting of companions was held on Monday evening, 23rd ult., over which Comp. Cornfield, H. 995, presided, at which resolutions were adopted expressing the desirability of holding a chapter in Barrow, and a committee appointed for drawing up the necessary petition to Grand Chapter, and for taking all other needful steps for carrying out the idea. Companions Brooke, Hooker, and Haslam were nominated as the first three Principals. It is proposed to call the new chapter "The Abbey Chapter," and to attach it to the Hindpool Lodge, No. 1235.

GREAT MASONIC CONFERENCE.

A great Masonic conference is announced to take place at Lausanne this month. Delegates from every Grand Lodge in the world are expected. It seems that there is a dreadful schism among Swiss Masons. Until a few years back they lived in republican style, without a Grand Lodge. A Supreme Council decided questions that arose. Just before the war it was resolved to make a Swiss Grand Lodge, and the members of the Council cheerfully resigned their office. When the great war broke out this new body, speaking for the Masons of Switzerland, protested against it. By this act they gave umbrage to their Prussian brothers, who declared the protest an insult, seeing that the war had been forced upon their country. An apology was demanded, and the Grand Lodge granted it. There were, however, many dissentients, headed by the members of the defunct Supreme Council. The breach has grown wider, and at this moment there is a talk of a secession. Peacemakers have applied to all the first authorities of the universe, and out of this dissension has sprung the idea of a conference. The last was held in 1819. French Masons have taken the leading part in arranging this great ceremony. I hear no particular mention of English or American delegates, who, indeed, if all tales be true, would find themselves in an atmosphere quite strange amongst the Orientals and the professors of the Scotch Rite, so called.—"London Daily Telegraph," Aug. 26th, 1875.

COLONIAL AND FOREIGN SUBSCRIBERS are informed that acknowledgements of remittances received will in future be published in the first number of every month. (See page 390.)

NOTICE.—It is very necessary for our friends to advise us of all money orders they remit, more especially those from the United States of America, and India; otherwise we cannot tell where to credit them.

METROPOLITAN.

PERFECT ASHLAR LODGE (No. 1178) was held at Bridge House Hotel, Southwark, on Thursday, September 2nd. Bro. Frederick Walters, P.G.P., Middlesex, P.M. Sec., presided as W.M. He passed Bros. Carterbrook, Salvage, and Nice; raised Bros. Shaw and Bell. The elections resulted in Bros. J. A. Smith, J.W., being W.M.; F. H. Ebsworth, P.M., Treas. and J.W.; Y. Laing, P.M., Tyler, being re-elected. The W.M., Bro. C. Deakin, arrived in time to close the lodge. The only visitor was Bro. P. Magee, 548. There was not any banquet or refreshment.

STAR LODGE (No. 1275).—The seventh installation meeting took place at the Ship Hotel, Greenwich, on Friday, September 3rd. Bro. J. Smith, P.G.P., P.M. and Treas., took the chair. He raised Bro. F. J. Lindsey, initiated Mr. C. Marr; installed J. J. Limebeer, S.W., as W.M. Officers are:—H. J. Green, S.W.; R. W. Williams, J.W.; Rev. G. R. P. Colles, Chaplain; J. Smith, P.G.P., P.M., Treas., (re-invested 6th time); F. Walters, P.G.P., Middlesex, P.M., Sec. (re-invested 7th time); C. W. Williams, S.D.; W. B. Woodman, J.D.; W. Kipps, I.G.; E. W. Chetwynd, D.C. W. Ough, P.G.P., P.M., delivered the addresses. Vote of thanks was given to Bros. J. Smith, P.G.P., P.M., Treas., and F. Walters, P.G.P., Middlesex, P.M., Sec., for carrying out their duties as Treasurer and Secretary to the satisfaction of the lodge, and with credit to themselves. Some candidates were proposed for initiation. The lodge was closed. Banquet and dessert followed. Bro. E. W. Mackney, P.M., sang some of his best songs. The visitors were Bros. H. Potter, P.M. 11; C. M. Hubback, P.G.S., P.M. 58; G. T. Fox, P.M. 73; J. Hayward, W.M. 946; G. A. Garrett, P.M. 704; L. Dettimus, 179; J. V. Watkins, 1326; T. Jennings, P.M. 59; J. Hillhouse, P.M. 228; A. C. Burrell, W.M. 1446; J. Wright, P.M. 1158; J. H. Kemp, 27; A. W. Furber, 27; J. Burford, 173; A. M. Thomas, 134; F. R. Vine, 173; F. D. Vine, 173, and others. The members present besides those named were Bros. C. J. Hogg, P.G.P., P.M.; H. Keeble, P.M.; W. Mock, W. Brough, A. Tisley, W. Hardman, J. Brooks, J. Finch, S. Marketis, A. C. Woodward, H. J. Class, W. P. Tong, and others.

PRINCE LEOPOLD LODGE (No. 1445).—The installation meeting of this lodge was held on the 2nd inst., at Bro. Geo. Townsend's, the Lord Stanley, Sandringham Road, Kingsland. There was a very large attendance of members of the lodge and visitors, the lodge, although a young one, having become very popular. As usual at this lodge, many of the visitors were of high rank in the Craft, while others have been known for some time as cordial supporters of the charities of the Order. Among the visitors were Bros. Wright, Grand Purst.; Peter de Lande Long, V.P. Board of General Purposes; H. G. Buss, P.G. Treas., Middlesex; W. Monckton, P.G.S.D., Kent; George Kenning, P.G.D., Middlesex; Thos. Grime, P.G.A.D.C., East Lancashire; E. Palmer, P.G.S.D., Kent; F. S. Knyvet, W.M. 1495; T. B. Yeoman, I.D. 1460; Koch, P.M. 820 and 1381; S. Watkins, P.M. 212; T. G. Barnes, P.M. 554 and 933; B. Cundick, S.W. 1,211; Williams, 933; Young, 820; H. Robinson, 65; Moss, 212; Fellows, 192; Turner, 754; Gutheray, 3, Hungary; Massey, P.M. 619 (Freemason); Withers, 933; Durant, 1256; John Green, 27; and S. Archer, 1426. Among the members of the lodge were Bros. Joshua Nunn, P.G.S.B.; W. T. Howe, P.M.; G. Townsend, P.M. 820, W.M. 724; E. Blackmur, S. H. Cox, J. C. Preston, S. Howell, J. G. Long, J. S. Hill, J. H. Cambridge, J. Badkin, G. C. Obey, J. H. Vollum, E. Smith, J. Rainbow, S. Clark, G. Mowl, J. Jermy, and W. A. Ide. Bro. Frank Green, W.M., presided, and by an excellent arrangement the only ceremony he had to perform was the installation, the ceremonies of advancing members having been completed at a former meeting, an example which might with benefit be followed by other lodges in the forthcoming season. The minutes having been confirmed, and the audit report, which was very favourable, having been adopted, Bro. Frank Green proceeded with the installation, and in admirable style placed Bro. W. H. Myers, S.W., and W.M. elect, in the chair of the lodge. At the proper time the following brethren were appointed to office:—Bros. Frank Green, I.P.M.; F. W. Wilkins, S.W.; J. Pinder, J.W.; W. T. Howe, P.M.; P. G. Purst, Middlesex, Treas.; G. E. Walters, Sec.; J. E. Simms, S.D.; J. Clark, J.D.; T. E. Goddard, D.C.; S. L. Green, I.G.; N. D. Partridge, Stewd.; C. Hubbard, Stewd.; and Bro. Gilchrist, Tyler. An eight guinea P.M.'s jewel was presented to Bro. Frank Green, who made a short acknowledgment to the brethren for the gift. The lodge was then closed, and the brethren adjourned to a substantial banquet and first class wines, provided by Bro. Townsend. The customary toasts were given and drunk at the termination of the repast. After "The Queen," and "The Grand Master" had been duly honoured, "The Pro and Deputy Grand Masters and the rest of the Grand Officers" was proposed by the W.M., and Bro. Wright, G.P., replied. As a Grand Officer he hoped the present and future Grand Officers would endeavour to emulate those who had gone before them, and to earn the favourable opinion of their brethren. The present Grand Officers he knew were anxious to do so, and he advised the brethren as a stepping stone to be well up in lodge work. The Grand Officers were always well received in Masonry, and this stimulated brethren to do all they possibly could to obtain the same honours. Bro. Joshua Nunn, P.G.S.B., who was also called on to respond, said, that as a member of the lodge he had hoped to be excused from performing this duty, but as the brethren would not excuse him he could only reiterate what Bro. Wright had said. It was a great pleasure to him to be a member of such a lodge as the Prince Leopold, and he hoped its prosperity would continue, which he could not doubt, as he could see it was opening and extending most brilliantly and splendidly under the auspices of the Masters who had already occupied the chair. "The Masonic Institutions" was the next toast, and the W.M. said he thought a Freemason who practised charity might go through the world, and be reckoned the best Freemason there was. He (the W.M.) would give the brethren an excellent opportunity of practising charity, for he should stand as Steward for the next festival of the Aged Freemasons. He did not know whether all the brethren before him had practised charity, but he could assure them that the pleasure of contributing to the pleasure of another person was the utmost delight any one could feel. Bro. Barnes, P.M. 554 and 933, replied in a speech of considerable length, contrasting the position of the charities in the past with the present. Formerly the claims of the charities required pressing, but now it did not require much urging to induce individuals to subscribe. He believed he was the first that took up the subject in the East End of London. In his younger days, being ambitious of rendering himself useful in Freemasonry, and desirous of going into office, he was "snubbed" and "put down." At length he found there was a direction in which he could be useful—the support of the charities; and in this, when he took it up, he was not snubbed or put down, for he had the field entirely to himself. By his humble efforts attention had been called to what was thought the grandest feature in Freemasonry, the relief of those who were unable to relieve themselves. The Institution had now arrived at a glorious pitch, but it was insignificant to what it ought to be, and what he was sure it would be in the future. Some lodges there were—indeed, there was one great lodge in London—that rejoiced in having a bread-and-cheese banquet, and giving the price of a regular banquet to the charities. That was a glorious effort no doubt; but he trusted that Freemasonry had not fallen to so low a point as to be obliged to sit down to a bread-and-cheese supper in order to make the charities of the Order rich or sufficient to supply the wants of the poor. He hoped that they could afford to sit down to supper and yet give something to the charities, if only 5s. Even though small it was acceptable; it was the widow's mite, the many 5s. which made the Benevolent Institution so rich. There were 100 men that could give 5s. for one that could give £5, and 100 who could give £5 for one that could give £50. He exhorted the brethren to get all the 5s. they could; he himself had taken half-crowns. Let them not "despise the day of small things," or forget the "power of the pence." Bro. Frank Green proposed "The Health of the W.M." The W.M., he said, enjoyed a privilege which did not fall to the lot of every occupant of the chair—he brought with him to the Prince Leopold Lodge experience gained elsewhere. When he said that was an advantage to the W.M., he would like to impress on the brethren that it was a still greater advantage to the members of the Prince Leopold Lodge. Those W.M.'s who had gone before the present W.M. were not great in number but strong in principle. They had not had much previous experience, and for one of them at all events he might say that he came into the chair very "green" indeed to the work. He had heard it said that in the place from which the present W.M. last hailed, he found it impossible to steer that lodge clear of "mires." He could only say that if he could not steer the Prince Leopold Lodge clear of mires he would not leave it in the Slough of Despond. He congratulated the brethren on having the experience of their W.M., which, he was sure, would culminate in great credit to the Prince Leopold Lodge. He could not sit down without taking that opportunity, if the W.M. would allow him to do so, of congratulating him upon the number of visitors who were around that festive board. It was not only gratifying to the W.M., but equally so to the P.M.'s, to see the W.M. so well supported. Many of the visitors had come long distances to congratulate him on being installed. Many of the brethren who visited the lodge last year to see him (Bro. Green) installed were so well impressed with what they witnessed, and the reception they met with, that they had come again this year. No greater testimony could be borne to the favourable nature of the reception they had last year. He hoped they would come a third, fourth, and fifth time. Bro. Green then drew attention to the circumstance that Bro. Grime had come from East Lancashire, and Bro. Walter Monckton from the wilds of Kent. Bros. Long and Palmer had also come at great inconvenience to themselves. The W.M. acknowledged the value of the experience he brought from his other lodge, but said he was one of the weakest of mortals at the banquet table. But for work in lodge he would not give way to any brother present. He would do his duties as Master in making, passing, and raising Masons. He then thanked the visitors for attending, and afterwards proposed their health. Bro. Peter de L. Long replied, and thanked the W.M. for the great Masonic treat which they had had. Having, as an old Mason, visited many lodges, he could say he had never seen the installation better performed than by Immediate P.M. Green that night. The W.M., also, in the appointment and investiture of officers had shewn the utmost skill, and these facts augured well for the prosperity of the lodge. The gavel was now in the hands of a brother who would most ably maintain the good name the lodge had already obtained. The visitors felt sure that he would do so, and he (Bro. Long) trusted that all the brethren would rally round the W.M., and support him in every way, and maintain the good name of the lodge for many, many years to come. The visitors would always be happy to assist again at the installation, and hoped they would see many as good Masons placed in the chair of the Prince Leopold Lodge as he who had been placed there that night. The W.M., in giving "The Health of the P.M.'s," said he would endeavour to prove that this lodge was designed from the "Third period of Creation," to become a fact, and he, in a series of amusing similes connected the names and pursuits of the Masters of the lodge with the events given in the lecture on the six periods of Creation. Bro. Green and Bro. Howe both responded, the latter saying that what little he had done for the lodge he had done with a great deal of pleasure. His anxiety for the prosperity of the lodge was as great now as when the lodge was first launched into existence. He looked upon that day as one of the red letter days in the history of the lodge, for they had then installed the third out of four of the promoters of the lodge. He was sure the new W.M. would go through his year of office as successfully as Bro. Green and himself (Bro. Howe) had; and if only the officers who would follow him would do the same, the lodge's prosperity would continue, and it would be second to none in the Craft. "The Officers of the Lodge" having been proposed and drunk, and responded to by Bros. Wilkins and Pinder, the brethren separated.

MARQUESS OF RHON LODGE (No. 1489).—An emergency meeting of this lodge was held on Friday, September 3rd, at the Metropolitan Societies' Asylum, Ball's Pond Road. Bro. W. Stephens, W.M., presided, and was supported by Bro. G. Somers, S.W.; W. J. Murlis, J.W.; T. Jessett, S.D.; J. Walford, P.M., J.D., and several other brethren. Bros. C. H. Fisher, W. Langford, S. Smout, jun.; H. Johns, J. Pushman, and E. Blunt, were raised; and Bros. B. Jeffries, W. J. Cook, and D. Fraser, passed. The W.M. did the raisings separately, and gave the traditional history in very fluent and correct style. In the passings he explained the working tools according to the lectures. None of the numerous candidates for initiation, whose names had been previously balloted for, presented themselves. Several visitors were present, and one from the Grand Lodge of Quebec expressed his pleasure at finding the work of the lodge so well performed. Before the evening was brought to a close Bro. Murlis, W.M. elect, thanked the W.M., Bro. Stephens, for the kind invitation given to the ladies to the summer picnic at Burnham Beeches, the proceedings at which were reported in our last impression. He hoped that the lodge would never lose the opportunity of paying such a compliment to the sex, who had no other chance of meeting with the brethren as brethren. He also rejoiced in all the arrangements on that occasion having been carried out so successfully. Bro. Murlis, in turn, was congratulated on being W.M. elect. Bro. Murlis is very popular among the brethren, and is also a great supporter of the Masonic Institutions, and his coming Mastership is looked forward to as one likely to be as brilliant as that of Bro. Stephens.

DERBY.—HARTINGTON LODGE (No. 1085).—On Wednesday evening, the 1st inst., this lodge held its usual meeting at the Masonic Hall. The brethren present were: Bros. Henry T. Bobart, P.P.G.S.B., W.M.; S. Pipes, S.W.; W. Heathcote, J.W.; W. H. Bobart, P.M., Treas.; J. Worsnop, Sec.; Theo. Hills, S.D.; Thos. Gadsby, J.D.; J. Heathcote, I.G.; T. Slinn, O.G.; Geo. Pipes, J. H. Biggs, T. H. Hepworth, Edgar Taylor, J. O. Manton, Henry Mills, James Parkins, jun. The lodge was opened in the First Degree at 7.30 p.m. The minutes of the previous meeting were read and confirmed. A letter was read from Bro. Stone, acknowledging with heartfelt thanks the donation of five guineas, which was voted to him by the lodge at the last meeting for their appreciation of his services as Tyler. The lodge was opened in the Second Degree. The lodge was opened in the Third Degree. The lodge was then closed in the Third and Second Degree. The W.M. called the attention of the brethren to the Grand Secretary's letter, forbidding all "special or commemorative lodge jewels" to be worn by members of the Craft without the express authority of His Royal Highness the Worshipful Grand Master. A gentleman having been proposed for initiation, the lodge was closed in ancient form and solemn prayer, and adjourned until the 6th of October.

LIVERPOOL.—LODGE OF EMULATION (No. 1505).—The last ordinary meeting of the first year's existence of this lodge was held at the Masonic Hall, Hope-street, Liverpool, on Friday, the 3rd inst., under the presidency of Bro. Henry Nelson, the first W.M., who is worthy of congratulation in connection with his general working and the admirable manner in which he has safely floated the good ship "Emulation." The officers present were Bros. J. T. Callow, S.W.; T. Morris, J.W.; J. Hocken, P.M., Treas.; W. Quayle, Sec.; R. Craft, J.D.; J. Capell, D.C.; J. Skeaf, acting I.P.M.; Org.; and Ball, Tyler. The "full privates" present comprised among others Bros. J. Irving, R. Lytham, A. McKenzie, H. Coulson, M. Drake, jun., R. Foote, J. Queen, H. J. Atkinson, H. B. Saunders, R. Brown, W.M. 241; R. Taylor, C. W. Sidebotham, F. H. White, B. Anthony, W. S. Matthews, &c. The visitors present included Bros. G. Hutchin, S.W. 241; H. Burrows, J.W. 673; J. Robinson, 823; J. Norminton, 667; H. T. Raisbeck, 417; J. Busfield, 216; W. H. Cooper, J.W. 1350; R. N. Bence, 673; T. A. Bioletti, 241; W. Crane, P.M. 249; H. Hundle, &c. The First Degree was conferred on a candidate (Mr. Thomas) with masterly impressiveness by the W.M. The lodge then proceeded to the election of the necessary officers, when Bro. J. T. Callow, S.W., was unanimously elected W.M.; Bro. J. Hocken, P.M., was unanimously re-elected Treas.; and Bros. Queen and Atkinson were chosen auditors. It was resolved that a presentation should be made to Bro. Nelson, the retiring W.M., as a recognition of his valuable services during his official year. The brethren subsequently supped together, and during an exceedingly enjoyable evening the standard Masonic toasts were given and responded to, the prosperity of the Emulation, the excellence of its Mastership, the happy choice which had been made in the W.M. elect, and the fine musical harmony of the members, being the subjects most prominently dwelt upon. The musical programme, which was much above the average, was contributed to by Bros. Busfield (whose professional talent makes him a great favourite both amongst Masons and "outsiders"), Queen, Quayle, R. Brown, Morris, J.W.; Atkinson, Hindle, Washington, P.M. 1034; and R. R. Martin, 1094, each of whose efforts gave great satisfaction. Bro. Skeaf, P.G.O., ably presided at the harmonium.

ST. MARK'S LODGE (No. 1).—On Tuesday the installation meeting of this old Mark Lodge was held at Bro. C. Gosden's, Masons' Hall Tavern, Basinghall-street, when there were present Bros. Thos. B. Yeoman, W.M.; the Rev. Dr. Brette, of Christ's Hospital; Thos. Cubitt, Hyde Pullen, R. Wentworth Little, S. M. Lazarus, H. Massey ("Freemason"), Rev. W.B. Church, J. G. Marsh, W. T. Howe, Rev. P. M. Holden, Charles Horsley, H. Parker, Newton, W. Stephens, Keily, Southwell, R. G. Hall, W. Wilkinson, E. L. Shepherd, and W. H. Hubbard. The Rev. Dr. Brette was installed as W.M. of the lodge by Bro. H. C. Levander, and after the ceremony was completed the following brethren were appointed the officers of the lodge for the year:—Charles Horsley, S.W.; E. H. Thielley, J.W.; H. A. Dubois, M.O.; George Newman, S.O.; the Rev. P. M. Holden, J.O.; H. C. Levander, P.M., Treas.; R. Wentworth Little, P.M., Sec.; the Rev. W. B. Church, P.M., Chap.; Newton, Reg.; W. Stephens, S.D.; Keily, J.D.; Southwell, I.G.; H. Parker, Org.; and J. Gilbert, Tyler. Bro. Levander proposed that a P.M. jewel should be presented to Bro. Yeoman for his zeal and ability in the discharge of his duties during the past year. The motion was seconded by Bro. T. Cubitt, and carried unanimously. A letter was read from P.M. Bro. George Kenning, regretting his inability to attend, and after this the lodge was closed, and the brethren sat down to banquet. When the toasts were proposed Bro. S. M. Lazarus replied for the "Past G. Masters and Grand Officers," and after thanking the brethren for the toast descended on the beauties of Freemasonry, and of the wholesome influence it exercised in bringing together men of all parties, politics, nations, and religions. As a proof of this he narrated a circumstance which had occurred, and in which he himself was an actor. In 1825 and 1826 he was W.M. of the Sussex Lodge, Bath, of which the organist was Bro. Goodall, who, on his death bed, requested Bro. Lazarus to attend him to his grave. Having promised to do so, he obtained a dispensation from Bro. Col. Tynte, the Prov. G.M., for the brethren to appear in clothing. This was granted. A clergyman of the church of England read the service over the grave, and then retired. He (Bro. Lazarus) then, as W.M., stood at the head of the grave and read the funeral service, according to the Constitutions of the Order. There were then present, Bros. Henriade, a Turk; Rymer, a man of colour, and other brethren of different denominations. Hand in hand they walked in procession and stood at the grave. It was a matter of astonishment to the people of the place, many of whom were present, to see Bro. Lazarus, of Abbey Green, a Jew, with a Turk, and a man of colour, all standing at a Christian's grave; and they said, "This shews the universality of Masonry." Bro. Yeoman having proposed "The Health of the W.M.," and the brethren having cordially honoured it, the Rev. Dr. Brette replied and said his motto was, "Facta non Verba," and both in Masonry and in everyday life he had tried to be faithful to that motto. He had endeavoured to do so in the past, and as the brethren had now placed him in the high position of W.M. of St. Mark's Lodge it should still be his motto. He would endeavour to fulfil his duties to the very utmost of his ability. The W.M. afterwards gave the toast of "The Visitors," to which Bro. Hyde Pullen replied. To the toast of "The P.M.'s" Bro. Yeoman responded, and after "The Press" and "The Officers" had been duly honoured all responded to, the brethren separated.

GLASGOW.—CALEDONIAN OF UNITY CHAPTER (No. 73).—The regular meeting of this chapter took place on the 31st ult., in the Freemasons' Hall, 170, Buchanan-street. G. W. Wheeler, M.E.Z., presided, in the absence of his two Principals. He was ably supported by J. Duthie, M.E.Z. 67; D. Gilchrist, G. McDonald, James Crabb, &c.; Comps. J. Balfour, S.E., and J. Bannerman, Treas., being in their respective places. Two applications for R.A. honours were submitted, viz., Bro. E. Arthur, M.M. of Mother Kilwinning, No. 9, and Bro. Thomas Kennedy, M.M. of Lodge Caledonian Railway, 354. The companions present had no objections to offer to the two brothers, and their applications were entertained. The minutes of the last meeting were read and confirmed. A lodge of Mark Masters was opened, when the two brothers received that degree, Bro. Wheeler officiating; after which the Excellent Degree by Bro. Duthie, when a R.A. Chapter was opened, and the two brothers made companions of R.A. Masonry, Comp. James Crabb, M.E.P.Z. of No. 50 Chapter, officiating. The nomination of office-bearers for the next year ought to have taken place then, but the night being far advanced, and some of the principal office-bearers absent, Comp. J. Balfour, S.E., moved that the nomination and election should be left over to the next regular meeting. At this stage a long and very animated conversation ensued on several points of R.A. law, Comps. Wheeler, Balfour, G. McDonald, Gilchrist, J. Crabb, and G. B. Adams taking part. It was ultimately arranged that Comp. Balfour's motion to postpone nomination should be agreed to, and the chapter closed in due and ancient form.

GLASGOW.—LODGE UNION AND CROWN (No. 103).—The regular meeting of this lodge was held in the Freemasons' Hall, 170, Buchanan-street, on Monday, the 30th ult. The R.W.M. was present, and was supported by Bros. A. Bain, I.P.M.; D. McGechy, P.M.; G. Muir, D.M.; D. Murray, S.M.; Wm. Thomas, S.W.; D. Munro, J.W.; W. Anderson, S.D.; J. M. Pollock, J.D.; J. Campbell, R.W.M. 128, and others. As usual with this lodge, the meeting was exceedingly well attended. The minutes of the previous meeting were read and confirmed, as also those of an emergency meeting which took place between the two regular meetings. After some business of an ordinary nature was settled Bro. Munro moved, That all those gentlemen who had been proposed for initiation previous to the passing of the motion for raising the lodge fees, and who in consequence were entitled to be admitted at the old rate, would forfeit that privilege if they did not come forward at the next monthly meeting, after which the new rate of entrance fee would be exacted. This was seconded by Bro. McGechy, and unanimously carried. The R.W.M., Bro. A. W. Wright, submitted to the brethren the names of two gentlemen desiring to become members of the Order, viz., Messrs. Geo. Waters and John McInnes—proposed and seconded by Bros. Munro and Murray for Mr. Waters, McKay and Cameron for Mr. McInnes. There was no objection raised to their qualifications to receive the honour, and they were admitted in the usual form into the E.A. Degree, Bro. Wright performing the duties with his accustomed carefulness and ability. The lodge was then passed to the F.C. Degree, when Bro. Bunton was squared in that, Bro. G. Muir, D.M., performing the ceremony. This finished the business before the lodge, and it was closed in due and ancient form.

GLASGOW.—LODGE CALEDONIAN RAILWAY (No. 354).—The monthly meeting of this lodge was held in the Freemasons' Hall, 30, Hope-street, on the 1st inst., at 8 o'clock. Bro. J. Shaw, R.W.M., presided, and was supported by Bros. Ferguson, Dunn, Colquhoun, McDougall, J. M. Oliver, S.W. 360, and others. The lodge was opened in the First Degree, the minutes of the previous meeting read and confirmed, when Bro. Colquhoun moved that the motion before the lodge for raising the affiliation fees should take effect from this date; this was seconded by Bro. McDougall, and became law. The case of the widow of a late brother was brought up, who had a young son depending upon her. She being very unable to do him the justice she would like, the members present agreed to take up the case and grant what assistance they could. The R.W.M. then referred to the forced resignation of Bro. Stafford, who was called away from Scotland to fill an important situation. He said they must all feel that the lodge in consequence of this had sustained a great loss; the able and efficient manner in which he discharged the difficult duties of S.W. was much admired by every member of the lodge; and he (the R.W.M.) would now propose that a jewel be procured and presented to him from the lodge as a mark of the high esteem in which he is held. This was at once agreed to. After some other business of a formal nature, the lodge was closed in due and ancient form.

COATBRIDGE.—LODGE ST. JAMES, OLD MONKLAND (No. 177).—On Friday, the 27th ult., the members belonging to the above lodge, along with their friends, assembled in the Masonic Hall, Main-street, Coatbridge, and, headed by the Rosehall brass band, proceeded to the beautiful policies of Douglas Support, belong to the Rev. Sholto Campbell Douglas. On arriving there a halt was called, and the company retired to the lawn, which was kindly granted for the occasion by the present tenant, Mr. Wm. Mitchell, where games of all sorts were entered into with great spirit. A quadrille band was in attendance, keeping those who felt inclined "tripping it on the light fantastic toe." Others enjoyed themselves roaming about the policies, surveying the natural beauties peculiar to the place. A muster was called about seven o'clock, when refreshments in abundance, and of excellent and diversified quality, were partaken of by the company. A vote of thanks to Mr. Mitchell, the overseer of the grounds for the kind way in which they were received, was given. The brethren then set out for home in regular procession, the ladies coming on behind in machines specially engaged for the occasion, where they arrived about eight o'clock. This is the first pic-nic held by Old Monkland St. James, and augurs well for the future, as it was a most successful and enjoyable day's recreation.

GLASGOW.—LODGE CLYDE (No. 408).—The regular meeting of this lodge was held in the Freemasons' Hall, 170, Buchanan-street, on the 3rd inst. The R.W.M., Bro. Harper, was unable to be present, and Bro. Gordon, P.M., took the chair and officiated throughout the evening, which was a long one so far as the amount of business before the lodge was concerned. The R.W.M. was supported by Bros. J. M'Innes, S.W.; W. Bisland, J.W.; D. S. Mitchell, Sec., and others; and among others present were Bros. J. B. Macnair, R.W.M. Lodge Union, 332; Stark, D.M., Lodge St. Vincent, 553; Stevens 553; and others. The minutes of the previous meeting were read and passed. The acting R.W.M. read an application from Mr. John M'Knight, (mariner), he was proposed by Bro. J. M'Innes, S.W., and seconded by Bro. Allin Martin. Bro. Gordon said, if the gentleman was approved of as a candidate, his mover and second wished to take advantage of the liberty left to the discretion of the R.W.M. of any lodge, to give more than one degree in one night when the candidate was about to leave the country, or was not stationary in one part of it. He said for himself he must tell them he was very much opposed to do this under any circumstances, but if it was the desire of the lodge he would not oppose it. The gentleman was approved of, and he received the First Degree. The lodge was then passed to the Fellow Craft Degree, the same candidate receiving that. A letter was then read by the Secretary from Bro. M'Dougall, R.W.M. of Lodge St. Vincent, 553, asking the R.W.M. of Lodge Clyde (if working the Third Degree) to do him the favour of giving that to Bro. C. E. Gibbs, sergeant-instructor, Royal Engineers, a member and Fellow Craft of Lodge St. Vincent; this was agreed to with pleasure. The lodge was then raised to the Sublime Degree, when, besides Sergeant Gibbs for the St. Vincent, two for Lodge Clyde were raised to that degree, Bro. Gordon officiating throughout all the degrees. An application was then read from Mr. Thomas Brown, wishing to be admitted into the Order through the Clyde Lodge at the next monthly meeting. He was proposed by Bro. Anderson, and seconded by B. Harper, R.W.M. The application was ordered to lay on the table till next meeting. Bro. Stark thanked the acting R.W.M. and the Lodge Clyde on behalf of the St. Vincent Lodge for the favour granted by giving Bro. Gibbs the Third Degree. This finished the business of the evening, and the lodge was reduced and closed in due and ancient form.

GLASGOW.—LODGE ST. VINCENT (No. 553).—The regular meeting of this lodge was held in Claremont Hall, Kent Road, on the 2nd inst. In the absence of the R.W.M., Bro. McDougall, the D.M., Bro. Stark, presided. He was well supported by a considerable number of the office-bearers. The meeting was well attended by the members of the lodge and visiting brethren. The Secretary, Bro. J. Halley, read the minutes of the previous meeting, which touched upon the bye-laws of the lodge, which are in course of being arranged, and a proof copy before the lodge. A considerable difference of opinion existed, and was freely expressed by several members of the lodge, the whole of the brethren present listening with great attention to the conversation. Ultimately the minutes were passed, with certain additions and qualifications, which the Secretary carefully noted. An application from Mr. William Mailer was submitted to the lodge. He was proposed by Bro. Paxton and seconded by Bro. Crawford. There was no objection offered to him by the members of the lodge present, and he received the First Degree, Bro. Stark officiating. The lodge was then passed to the Square Degree, when Bro. Sergeant-Instructor C. E. Gibbs, Royal Engineers, who had been waiting for a month to receive this, was entrusted with it, Bro. Stark again officiating. A vote of thanks to Bro. McInnes, S.W. of Lodge Clyde, 408, who was acting S.W., brought the business to a close, and the lodge was closed in due and ancient form.

GLASGOW.—LODGE DRAMATIC (No. 571).—The bi-monthly meeting of this lodge was held in the Freemasons' Hall (St. Mark's), 213, Buchanan-street, on Wednesday, the 1st inst., at three o'clock. Their own office-bearers and members turned out well, and a considerable number of brethren from various sister lodges were present to give a cordial welcome to them as the youngest lodge in the province (this being but their second meeting.) The R.W.M., Bro. W. E. J. Dobson, took his place in the chair, supported by Bros. G. Houston, D.M.; W. Barbour, Treas.; J. Booth, acting Sec., and his Wardens in their respective chairs, viz.:—H. W. Jackman, S.W.; Wm. Sievwright, J.W.; J. McGregor, S.D.; R. S. Smyth, J.D. On the dais were Bros. J. Fraser, P.M. Lodge Thistle, 87, and Henry 571; J. Balfour, P.M. Lodge Union, 332; J. F. Mitchell, R.W.M. St. Mark's, 102, and honorary member 571; and J. Monro, R.W.M. Commercial Lodge, 360. Amongst many other visiting brethren were Bros. J. Tweed, Mother Kilwinning, 0; J. M. Oliver, S.W. 360; J. Stewart, 360; and others. The lodge was opened in the First Degree. The Acting Secretary read the minutes of the previous meeting, which were confirmed. Bro. John Fraser then rose, and addressing the R.W.M., Wardens, and brethren, said he took a deep and warm interest in the welfare and prosperity of the Lodge Dramatic, and would feel it not only a duty, but a pleasure, to do anything in his power to forward their interests. He then requested the R.W.M. to accept from him a gift of a set of mallets for the R.W.M. and Wardens, as also a mallet for the Third Degree, and with a few graceful words of caution placed the mallet of his office in his hand, proceeded towards the S.W. and J.W., and placed their respective mallets into their hands in like manner. The R.W.M.'s mallet bore a suitable inscription on a silver plate. The R.W.M. said he could hardly find language to express himself in thanking Bro. Fraser for the very handsome present he had made to the lodge, but he could assure him that while he had the honour to fill that chair he would see those mallets properly used. Bro. Jackman, S.W., in a neat little speech, thanked Bro. Fraser on behalf of himself and J.W. An application from Mr. Alfred W. Baylis, of H.M. ship Excellent, proposed by W. Sievwright, J.W., and seconded by the R.W.M., was agreed to. An application was then read from Bro. Archd. Lauder, M.M. of Lodge Athol, 413, for affiliation into Lodge Dramatic. This was agreed to, he stepping to the altar, when the R.W.M. administered the usual obligation. Mr. Charles Harry Baylis, who was proposed and carried at the last meeting, was present in the adjacent room along with Alfred W. Baylis, who was carried at this meeting. They were prepared, and received the First Degree, Bro. Dobson, R.W.M., officiating in excellent and impressive style. The two gentlemen appearing at the altar occupied the relationship of father and son to each other, which added solemnity to the beautiful ceremony. Such an occurrence we had never seen before. There being no further business before the lodge, it was closed in all due and ancient form.

The high position to which his brethren elevated him, and his continued re-election to the same, attest their appreciation of the many virtues and Masonic abilities of this excellent man. A good and a true man, moral in his deportment, kind and courteous in his demeanour, benevolent in his disposition, never weary in well-doing. As a neighbour he earned the regard of those who knew him, and as a husband and father he excelled in all those noble qualities, and possessed in a large degree those tender affections and endearing characteristics that make home happy.

"None knew him but to love,
None named him but to praise."

Our late Grand Master promptly appointed our esteemed and R. W. Bro. J. J. Mason to act as Grand Secretary for the remainder of the year. Bro. Mason immediately entered upon the duties of the office, and I think it but due to him to say, that M.W. Bro. Wilson frequently expressed to me his entire satisfaction at the thorough and efficient manner in which Bro. Mason discharged the responsibilities so unexpectedly cast upon him.

I desire also to acknowledge the promptitude, energy, and assiduity evinced by Bro. Mason since I have been brought into close and frequent communication with him, and I take this opportunity of publicly thanking him for the services he has rendered to me, especially during the half year just ended.

As the funeral dirge is ever vibrating upon our ear, we become indifferent to the sorrow and grief of those around us. We heed not the mournful wail, until a deep-toned bell tolls the knell that summons us to the grave of one we love; then, in agony we kneel, and in our weakness cry unto the Mighty for help and succour!

Scarce had we left the grave of our brother—scarce had we wiped away the tears which we shed upon the last resting place of our Grand Secretary—nor had we begun to know the full measure of the loss we had sustained—when we were again plunged in grief—calamities accumulated upon us. The sad tidings went forth that our Grand Master was stricken, and that we were called to lay him in the silent tomb. Again did our sorrowing hosts assemble to pay their last sad offices to the departed—whose memory we revered—and to resign his body to the earth whence it came, and to offer up to his memory the last tribute of our affection and regard.

This being the first instance in the history of our Grand Lodge that the Grand Master had been called by the Supreme Architect of the Universe to lay aside the gavel, we were overwhelmed with unutterable grief, and this great bereavement threw us into confusion. Our Head and our Chiefstain had fallen.

M.W. Bro. Wilson was initiated into Freemasonry in St. John's Lodge, Simcoe, in 1840. He at once engaged in the active duties of the lodge, being elected Junior Warden in the same year, and thenceforward he continued earnest and devoted in promoting the interests of the Order, seizing every fair opportunity of inculcating the principles and precepts which we profess, and actively discharging the duties which throughout his lifetime were cast upon him by his brethren.

It has been well written of him, that "The Craft has lost one of its brightest ornaments in Ontario, and the fraternity a shining light, whose large experience, sound judgment, and just decisions, commended him as a Masonic authority of the highest order. His services to Masonry have been great and are fully appreciated, though they can never be adequately rewarded, for no man could have done more to advance its interests. He was among the first to aid in the establishment of the Grand Lodge of Canada, and so highly were his services at that time regarded, that he was chosen the first occupant of the Oriental chair, which he held uninterruptedly for several years. In 1860 he was permitted to retire, and chosen again in 1866, holding the position for two years, when he only relinquished it on account of acceptance of office under the Government. Five years later he was again elected to this position, and continued to hold it up to the time of his death."

M.W. Bro. Wilson was most indefatigable in promoting the cause of Freemasonry. He shrank from no task calling for effort on his part, but cheerfully undertook the most arduous labour, and accepted the most exacting calls upon his time and his strength, in forwarding the cause he had so truly at heart. Brilliant in the discharge of his duties, untiring in his zeal and energy, possessing those qualities which attract and charm the minds of men, it is impossible to measure the service he has rendered to the Craft in Canada.

He promoted our interest throughout the United States, and won for our Grand Lodge the high position which it occupies in the estimation of the Grand Lodges throughout the world. He introduced into the working of our system any improvements which he found existing in the other Grand Bodies visited by him. He examined into the working of our subordinate lodges, and contributed largely to their instruction, and in a great measure he controlled for good the cause of our Grand Lodge. He at all times furthered the prosecution of good works amongst his brethren, and inculcated the practice of our professions and tenets.

In M.W. Bro. Wilson were embodied those attributes symbolized by the three famous pillars of the ancient Temple. His Masonic wisdom was great. The strength of his decisions was conceded by all, and the beauty of his Masonic and Christian work won the admiration of his brethren. His exertions were largely crowned with success, and his untiring efforts were admired and appreciated by his brethren, who continued to shower upon him the highest honours that they could bestow; and whilst the records of our Grand lodge abound with the works of his hands, they also bear testimony to the estimation in which M.W. Bro. Wilson was always held by his brethren. Full of Masonic honours, he left this earthly scene.

In the world at large he played an important part, and discharged his duties in such a manner as to entitle him to the respect of all.

In official life he was affable and courteous—at the bar he was an able advocate and a generous adversary. In the municipal and county councils he was a thoughtful and prudent member, a dignified and judicious warden. In the military service he was a brave soldier, a considerate commander. On the bench, an upright judge and a sound lawyer. As a neighbour and friend, he was noble, generous, and hospitable. As a husband and father, he was kind and affectionate. As a good citizen, none stood higher. He was honoured as a man and almost idolized as a Mason—for he possessed all those qualities which distinguish the good and true brother, and which have indelibly impressed his name upon the tablet of our hearts.

It was by a strange and mournful coincidence that our First Grand Master and our First Grand Secretary were both taken from us within a few short months during the same Masonic year.

They had been for many years labouring side by side in the Masonic vineyard. In life their names and works were linked together for good, and now they have gone almost together to the Grand Lodge above.

But whilst we mourn our loss, let us endeavour to console ourselves with the belief that it is not commensurate with those high and noble honours and awards to which our beloved brethren have been called. Let us be admonished that in the midst of life we are in death, and so live and act our parts that we may have no cause for repentance when the hour of our own departure is at hand.

"Lives of good men all remind us
We can make our lives sublime,
And departing, leave behind us
Footsteps in the sand of time—
Footprints that, perchance, another,
Trav'ling o'er life's troubled main,
A forlorn and shipwrecked brother,
Seeing, shall take heart again."

It is perhaps not necessary for me to add, that the funerals of our departed brethren were conducted by Grand Lodge, and that they were largely attended by the members of our Order, of all grades—as well as by an immense concourse of other citizens. They were two of the most numerous attended funerals ever known in this country. The proceedings at the special communications held on both occasions have been recorded, and will appear in our printed proceedings of Grand Lodge.

I regret to add that other familiar faces will be missed from our assemblies, the cruel hand of death having during the past year removed many who had been regular attendants at Grand Lodge. Mention is made of some in the reports of the D.D.G.M.'s, to be laid before you.

I cannot, however, omit to make special mention of the death of R.W. Bro. Dr. R. M. Wilson, P.D.D.G.M. of Niagara District, on Monday, the 31st day of May last, at Simcoe. Ill health prevented him from being with us lately, but he was one of the earliest of our members, having taken an active part in the formation of Grand Lodge, and subsequently proved to be one of the most useful and most faithful among the brethren. He was buried by the members of Norfolk Lodge, No. 10, at the request of Niagara Lodge, No. 2, when the ceremonies were conducted by R.W. Bro. Bennett, D.D.G.M. of Wilson District.

Towards the close of last year the sad intelligence of the death of His Grace the Duke of Leinster, who for a period of sixty-one years, without interruption, ruled over the Craft in Ireland as Grand Master, with mild and courteous sway, was received here from the Grand Lodge of Ireland. We proffer our sympathy and condolence to that Grand Lodge on the loss of one who so worthily presided over the deliberations of that body for a period exceeding the span of most men's lives. The vacancy thus created in the Grand Master's chair was filled by the election of His Grace the Duke of Abercorn, Lord Lieutenant of Ireland, who was installed on the 6th of January last.

One of the most important events which has transpired in the Masonic world during the year now closed was the installation of H.R.H. the Prince of Wales as Grand Master of the United Grand Lodge of England, in April last, in the presence of more than seven thousand Freemasons.

The grandeur of the proceedings attendant upon the installation was such as to call for the unqualified admiration and approval of all who witnessed them, and the occasion was one long to be remembered by the fraternity.

Long may our Royal Grand Master be spared to preside over the Craft in England, and to uphold the principles of the Order!

Our late Grand Master, M.W. Bro. Wilson, up to the time he was afflicted with his last illness, was very active in the discharge of the duties of his office. At the close of the annual communication at Toronto he repaired to Weston and dedicated two lodges, the Humber Lodge, No. 305, and the Blackwood Lodge, No. 311, when he installed the officers. From a trip to the seaside he returned in time to visit the bedside of his dying friend and brother, and to render him great service in those trying moments. He conducted the services when the remains of R.W. Bro. Harris were interred, and took an active part in investigating the affairs of the Grand Lodge, as they had been left by the sudden call of our departed Grand Secretary from his earthly labours. A few days later he was at St. Thomas, where he dedicated St. David's Lodge, No. 302, and installed the officers. Ten days after that we find him in Montreal, where he seized that opportunity of presenting to M.W. Bro. Thos. White, P.G.M., the testimonial which the Grand Lodge at the last annual communication directed to be procured and presented in recognition of the many valuable services of M.W. Bro. White.

The testimonial consisted of a beautiful silver epergne, side pieces, and a handsome silver tray and tea-service, and the committee to whom the selection was left are assured that it will be gratifying to the members of the Grand Lodge to know that the articles selected were those most acceptable to our Most Worshipful Bro. White. After discharging a number of minor but none the less exacting duties, he went to Ingersoll in October, where he dedicated the new Masonic Hall; and I am aware of the pleasure it gave him to conduct those proceedings and to meet his brethren and friends who participated therein. But a few days before he was confined to his bed he delivered a lecture at Chatham, under the auspices of Parthenon Lodge, No. 267, and dedicated Kent Lodge, No. 274, at Blenheim. These, with a multitude of official acts of every variety—which time would fail me to detail—kept him almost constantly occupied up to the hour when the summons was sent him to attend before the Great Architect and Ruler above.

Thus, my brethren, you will see that our Grand Master was to the last mindful of his duty and active in the discharge of the same. Let his example serve to stimulate us to the exercise of like energies, and the promotion of the honour and aim of our noble Order.

Whilst our late Grand Master was confined to bed I was called upon to act on his behalf in conducting the interesting ceremony of dedicating the new Masonic Hall at Hamilton, a special communication of Grand Lodge having been called on Wednesday, the 30th of December last, for that object.

This new hall is one of the largest, handsomest, and most substantial edifices in the city of Hamilton, and contains ample accommodation for all the Masonic bodies meeting in the city. It is admirably laid out for the purposes for which it is intended, and the halls dedicated to Ancient Craft Masonry have been most completely and elegantly furnished throughout.

The ceremony was performed in the presence of a large assembly of ladies and gentlemen, who had been invited to be present by the members of the Craft, of whom also large numbers attended and took part in the proceedings.

In the evening the event was celebrated by a Grand Masonic ball, which was largely attended, and proved to be a most successful and enjoyable affair.

I cannot pass from this subject without extending my most hearty congratulations to our Hamilton brethren upon the completion of this edifice; and I must at the same time commend them for the energy they have displayed in the prosecution of their undertaking and the enterprise which has characterised their efforts in connection with the same.

On the 3rd of March last I dedicated the new Masonic Hall in Seaford, when I was assisted by a number of Grand Officers and by brethren of Britannia Lodge, No. 170, and a large number of visiting brethren of the neighbouring lodges, who, notwithstanding the inclemency of the weather, assembled to take part in the proceedings. After the ceremony of dedication was completed I had the opportunity of attending a meeting of Britannia Lodge, and seeing the work performed by the W.M., and I have great pleasure in bearing testimony to the able manner in which it was done. Everything was commenced in order, conducted in peace, and closed in harmony.

The new and handsome hall lately erected in the town of Aylmer, for the use of Malahide Lodge, No. 140, was dedicated to Masonry on the 1st of July last, when R.W. Bro. McGloghlin, D.D.G.M., of London, very kindly acted for me, and ably performed the ceremony.

At the request of the Board of School Trustees of Walkerton, I called a special communication of Grand Lodge at that place on Dominion Day, the 1st July last, and with the assistance of the brethren of Saugeen Lodge, No. 197, and of a number of other brethren from that section of the country, and in the presence of a large assembly of the people of that locality, I laid the corner stone of a new high and public school about to be erected in that town. I regret exceedingly that I was not able to avail myself of the kind hospitalities proffered on that occasion, but I desire to acknowledge the kindness shown by extending to me an invitation to the festivities of the day.

The corner stone of a new church at Belleville was laid on the 31st of May last, on which occasion R.W. Bro. Lazier, D.D.G.M. of Prince Edward District, kindly acted for me and efficiently performed the work.

On the 24th of May last the corner stone of a new Baptist Church was laid at Pembroke, by R.W. Bro. White, G.S.W., who ably represented me in conducting the proceedings; and R.W. Bro. Richardson, P.D.D.G.M. of Prince Edward District, performed a like ceremony at Nanapanee Mills, where the corner stone of a new church was laid by him.

R.W. Bro. McGloghlin, D.D.G.M. of London District, at the request of our late Grand Master officiated on the occasion of laying the corner stone of a new Masonic Hall, then about to be erected at Port Stanley by the brethren of St. Mark's Lodge.

A special communication of Grand Lodge was held at Ridgeway on the 15th September last, when the base of a tablet to be raised in the memorial church erected at that place to the memory of the brave volunteers who fell in the defence of their country during the Fenian invasion of 1866 was laid by R.W. Bro. Broderick, D.D.G.M. of Niagara District, who had been deputed to act on behalf of the Grand Master, and he conducted the interesting proceedings throughout with marked ability. In the appropriate observations which he addressed to those present he alluded in feeling terms to the sacred respect entertained for the memory of those who had sacrificed themselves on the altar of their country, and whose noble deeds infuse an inspiration of patriotism whenever recalled.

During the early part of the year our late Grand Master renewed his dispensations for:—

1. Hiram Lodge, Cheapside; 2. Chesterville Lodge, Chesterville.

And granted dispensations for the formation of the following lodges:—

1. Walker Lodge, Acton; North Star Lodge, Owen Sound; 3. Alvinston Lodge, Alvinston; 4. Temple Lodge, Hamilton; 5. Orono Lodge, Orono.

And since I assumed the gavel I have granted dispensations as follows:—

6. Zetland Lodge, Toronto; 7. The Hammond Lodge, Wardsville; 8. Ionic Lodge, Napier; 9. King Solomon's Lodge, Jarvis; 10. Corinthian Lodge, London, East; 11. Eden Lodge, London; 12. Fordwich Lodge, Fordwich; 13. Stratford Lodge, Stratford; 14. Prince Arthur Lodge, Fiesherston.

The work which has been performed by these lodges will be submitted to your consideration, and it will be for you to say whether or not warrants shall be issued to authorize them to continue longer to meet.

It afforded me much pleasure to receive the application of the brethren of King Hiram Lodge, No. 89, Lindsay, for the return of their warrant and for authority to resume work. After due enquiry into the state of Masonry in Lindsay, and upon receiving full assurance of the ability of the brethren about to engage in the work, and their thorough and earnest desire to resuscitate the lodge, I felt justified in acceding to the application. R.W. Bro. Traves kindly undertook the duty of returning the warrant and re-establishing the lodge in good working order. The manner in which the work has so far been conducted gives great promise of a prosperous and useful career for this long dormant lodge.

I have much pleasure in announcing to you that in August last I received at the hands of our late Grand Master my credentials as the representative of the Grand Lodge of Utah, near this Grand Lodge, and I now submit them to you. I trust that the cordial relations opened up with the Grand Lodge of Utah through our late Grand Master may continue to be of a most friendly character, and I shall esteem it a privilege if I may be in any means instrumental in preserving the relations so happily begun.

Through the like channel, R. W. Bro. Mason, Grand Secretary, received his credentials as the representative of the Grand Lodge of Kansas, in the place of our deceased R. W. Bro. Harris, who so ably represented that Grand Lodge for many years.

I have received information of the establishment and recognition by several other Grand Lodges of the Grand Orient of Hungary, and I am glad to recommend that she be received by us as a sister Grand Lodge, and the right hand of fellowship extended towards her upon her admission to the status of a Grand Lodge in the Masonic fraternity.

During last month I received from Winnipeg a letter from Bro. W. C. Clarke, advising me that "The Grand Lodge of Manitoba, A. F. and A. M.," had been constitutionally formed on the 12th of May, 1875, by the unanimous consent of the duly appointed delegates from all the subordinate lodges in that province, and that formal and official documents would be forwarded to our Grand Secretary, to be laid before this communication of Grand Lodge.

No report has been received from the D.D.G.M. of Manitoba District, nor has any information been forwarded respecting the movement referred to in the above letter, which is the only intimation of any kind whatever that was communicated to us of either a necessity or a desire for change on the part of our Manitoba brethren. I therefore submit the matter for the consideration of Grand Lodge.

On the 5th of December last the Grand Lodge of Wyoming was organized for the territory of that name, the officers thereof elected and installed, and a constitution adopted for the government of the same; and the official notice received a few days since informs us that the proceedings were conducted in every particular in a manner consistent with the ancient landmarks and established usages of our Order. There has not been time to make due enquiry into the regularity of the above proceedings, but upon such enquiry proving satisfactory I recommend the recognition of this new Grand Lodge.

I have also received notice that at a meeting of delegates representing all the lodges in Prince Edward Island, held at Summerside in February last, it was resolved that a Grand Lodge for that province should be formed, and that a committee was appointed to communicate with this and other Grand Lodges in this dominion, as well as the parent Grand Lodges of England and Scotland, requesting that such action may be taken as will lead to our recognition of the new Grand Lodge when organized. I have much pleasure in recommending to your favourable consideration the request of our brethren of Prince Edward Island.

I am glad to be able to report the satisfactory condition of our finances. The report of the auditors will be submitted to you. From this you will see that, after paying over to our brethren in the Province of Quebec 4000 dols., as authorised by resolution of Grand Lodge last year, we have:—

The Masonic business of the past year has been far from unimportant. Many matters have been disposed of by the late Grand Master and by myself, which do not require special notice here. And others will be brought before you by the Board of General Purposes in the course of our proceedings.

I submit to your approval this review of the past year. I cannot hope that no error has been committed, or that in every case satisfaction has been given. To err is human. To satisfy all and yet discharge duty faithfully, impossible. But of this I am sure, that I have endeavoured to discharge the obligations pertaining to this position, by maintaining the landmarks and laws of Freemasonry with inflexibility, yet impartially, and in the spirit of courtesy and kindness. Obedience to duty is the highest obligation of a Mason. In my efforts to discharge this obligation my feelings and human passions have not been without severe trials, but, by the blessing of God, it was endured, and the approval of my brethren and of my own conscience, and the belief that I shall deliver over the trust so unexpectedly imposed upon me untarnished and unsullied, is my most ample reward.

The reports of the D.D.G. Masters of the various Masonic Districts were received, considered as read, and, on motion, referred to the Board of General Purposes.

The following reports of the Board of General Purposes were adopted:

The Board of General Purposes beg to present this their annual report.

The annual meeting was held in the town of St. Catharines, on Tuesday, the 9th day of February last.

The books of the Grand Secretary and the Grand Treasurer were carefully audited, together with the accounts, statements, and vouchers for the financial year ending 31st December, 1874, and the Board have much pleasure in reporting that they were found correct.

The Board have not had the accounts of the Asylum Fund Committee before them, and have not, therefore, had an opportunity of auditing them. They would recommend that in future the Asylum Trust Committee be required to send their accounts and vouchers to the annual meeting of the Board for audit.

The Board regret to find that their recommendation to invest 5000 dols., adopted by Grand Lodge at its last annual communication, has not been complied with, and they now beg to recommend that that amount, as well as an additional sum of 5000 dols., be at once invested in government securities, and they further recommend that as soon as the funds in the hands of the Grand Treasurer shall at any time reach the sum of 10,000 dols. an additional 5000 dols. be invested.

The Board have had under consideration an application from R.W. Bro. Groff, Grand Treasurer, asking the consent of the Board for the transfer of the account of Grand Lodge from the Canadian Bank of Commerce to the Federal Bank, and regret that (though they would wish to gratify R.W. Bro. Groff) they cannot sanction the removal at the present time.

With reference to the application of Bernard Lodge, No. 225, Listowell, for aid, and Kerr Lodge, No. 230, Belle Ewart, for a loan, the Grand Lodge has established a rule that its funds cannot be granted for the purposes mentioned.

The Board regret to find that there are a great many lodges in arrears, and beg to recommend that the Grand Secretary be instructed to notify to them, that unless they are in good standing at the next meeting of Grand Lodge action will have to be taken.

The Board are again indebted to R.W. Bro. Klotz, the zealous and worthy chairman of the Sub-committee on Benevolence, for the report and tabulated statements submitted herewith. (Here follow the semi-annual reports of various Boards of Relief, and a list of appropriations from the Fund of Benevolence, amounting to 2,310 dols.) The application of Bro. David Blakely has been rejected, the applicant not being considered worthy of relief.

The grant made last July to Bro. Lambert Cowell was not paid over to him, he having died before the money could reach him; it is, therefore, recommended that R.W. Bro. Allan McLean be authorized to pay over the money to the son of the deceased brother, that son having been at great expense by reason of the sickness and death of his father, and not being able to bear that expense.

The Board of General Purposes beg leave to present the following report on certain questions which have arisen and have been submitted for their consideration and opinion:—

1. The jurisdiction of a lodge extends half way to the nearest lodge in a direct or air line (see sec. 3 of proposing members).

2. A member of a lodge who has been a Master of another lodge, and properly returned, is entitled to his rank according to seniority, both in Grand Lodge and in the lodge with which he is affiliated (see sections 6 of Masters of Lodges, 7 of Grand Lodge, and 28 of Private Lodges).

COMPLIMENTARY PRESENTATION TO BRO. J. C. PARKINSON, J.P., AT ABERDARE.

On Wednesday, Sept. 1st., at the Black Lion Hotel, Aberdare, in the presence of a large number of Masons, representing a number of the prominent lodges in the principality, an interesting presentation of a P.M. jewel was made to W. Bro. J. C. Parkinson, J.P., P.J.G.D. of England, &c., &c., and immediate Past Master of the St. David Lodge, Aberdare, No. 769. Apart from the eminent position Bro. Parkinson occupies in the Ancient Order of Free and Accepted Masons, and the deep respect in which he is held by the brethren of St. David's Lodge, he is greatly interested in and is manager of one of the largest industries in South Wales, viz., the Powell Duffryn Coal Company, and residing as he does a considerable portion of his time at Aberavon House, in the immediate neighbourhood, it was not surprising to find such a large muster of the lodge over which he has so ably presided during the 12 months previous to March last, and also of the brethren holding high rank in neighbouring and distant lodges. Shortly after six o'clock the brethren met in the lodge room. The lodge was duly opened by the W.M., Bro. Evan Thomas, and after the ordinary business on the agenda had been transacted, the Worshipful Master (Bro. Evan Thomas) formally invested Bro. J. C. Parkinson with a P.M. jewel. The jewel represents the red dragon of Wales, enamelled in gold, resting on a green ground; from the mouth of the dragon depends a large single brilliant pendant, from which is a P.M. jewel in frosted silver. The dragon is united by a small golden chain to a pale green silk ribbon secured at the top by a bar of gold with the word "Aberdare" in enamelled letters. On the obverse of the dragon is the following inscription:—"To W. Bro. P.G.D. J. C. Parkinson, from St. David's Lodge, No. 679, Aberdare, A.D. 1875."

After the formal presentation the lodge was closed, and the brethren adjourned to the large front upper room where the banquet was served, the W.M. presiding. The following is a list of the brethren: W. Morris, P.M.; W. J. Thomas, P.M.; John Robertson, P.M.; Dr. Evan Jones, P.M.; George Smith, S.W.; C. H. White, J.W.; William Little, S.D.; William McCulloch, J.D.; Charles Botting, I.G.; Evan Jones, Sec.; Bro. Dyer, Dir. of Cer.; Dr. Price, Chap.; Major T. B. Powell, Treas.; Thos. Phillips and Edward Roberts, Stewards; William Davies, William Moody, Fred Davies, Matthew Mayne Morgan, Edwin Adams, John Rhys, John Snape, Captain Charles Grey, F. Widdowfield, E. G. Price, David Davies, H. I. Thomas, William Thomas, and John Davis. We also noticed amongst the visiting brethren the W.M., Bro. Chas. Taylor, of the Loyal Cambrian Lodge, Merthyr; Peter Williams, P.M., Merthyr; J. E. Jones, W. E. Jones, P.M.; Seddon, I.P.M., Merthyr; and H. Simpson, Cardiff. Letters of apology were read from the R.W. Prov. Grand Master, T. M. Talbot, as well as the W. Dep. Pro. Grand Master, E. J. Morris. After the usual loyal and patriotic toasts had been given and duly responded to,

The Worshipful Master proposed "The Health of the Officers of the Grand Lodge of England, coupled with the name of Bro. J. C. Parkinson, the guest of the evening, and, in doing so, said that Bro. Parkinson had instilled a measure of freshness, vigour, and energy into the hearts of the members, and imbued them with a determination to uphold the efficiency of St. David's Lodge.

The toast was enthusiastically received, and drunk with Masonic honours.

Bro. J. C. Parkinson said: In repeating my thanks for this most beautiful work of art, allow me to say that I shall wear it gladly at all Masonic gatherings, and shall always refer with satisfaction and with pride to my connection with the St. David's Lodge of Aberdare. From the night of my presenting myself at its door and working my way in here unknown, uninitiated, and unvouched for, trusting only to my own Masonic knowledge and to the universality of its passport, through the phases of my joining the lodge, being elected to its chair, and presiding over it as Master, I have met with uniform kindness from the brethren, as well as with what has been to me even more valuable—a ready and intelligent appreciation of the lessons of the Craft. (Hear, hear.) From causes to which it is unnecessary to refer, the Masons of Aberdare remained for some years under a cloud, from no fault of their own, but from circumstances entirely beyond their control. I venture to assert that the cloud has now been entirely removed, and under the genial rule of our Provincial Grand Master, whose unavoidable absence to-night we deeply deplore, this St. David's Lodge will henceforth take its legitimate place on the roll of lodges in South Wales, as one in which the spirit of Masonry burns brightly and where the working and the discipline of the Order may fairly challenge comparison. (Cheers.) I speak with some experience of lodge working, and I say the strides taken by the Masons of Aberdare during the last two years have been enormous, and reflect the highest credit upon them. Recent events have stimulated the public curiosity concerning the tenets and practices of our Order, and it is admitted on all hands that we are a powerful and influential body, strong in our unity, our organization, and our discipline. (Cheers.) The only difference between our critics is as to the scope and tendency of those. Seven years ago I wrote a paper entitled "What is the good of Freemasonry?" and sent it to the late Mr. Charles Dickens, who did me the honour of publishing it in his periodical "All the Year Round." I then declared the Craft to be "Blessed by crowned, and banned by tonsured heads, the essence of evil according to some men, and a fountain of goodness if you listen to others;" and it has sometimes seemed to me that the description gains strength and force as the years roll on. Here, in England, where we have inherited from our forefathers all the blessings of religious toleration and civil liberty, we can hardly understand the venomous rancour with which so innocent and beneficial an institution as Freemasonry is assailed, and many of us were at first disposed to smile at attacks which seemed childish in their meanness, spite, and misconception. But the perseverance with which these attacks were repeated, and the unrelenting hostility displayed, has stimulated inquiry and caused the reasons for their enmity to be better understood. (Cheers.) Not to go over an old story, I would ask students of history to note that wherever nations are free, happy, prosperous, and law-abiding, where there is constitutional government and religious liberty, Freemasonry flourishes; the most exalted personages in those realms are proud to enter its ranks and to avow their allegiance to its principles. On the other hand, in countries oppressed by spiritual tyranny or civil despotism, the light of Freemasonry is dreaded, and it is proscribed as a thing accursed. There is at this time no country in Europe where it is so dangerous to admit to be a Freemason as in Spain, and we all know the distressed condition of that unhappy country. (Loud cheers.) Italy furnishes a stronger example still, for so long as she was oppressed by misgovernment Freemasonry was punished by imprisonment, confiscation, and banishment, while directly she became free, lodges multiplied, and a Grand Lodge, presided over by the distinguished patriot Mazzini, was established. In Rome itself, it is important to know—and I pledge my personal credit to the fact, for I have taken unflinching means to inform myself, and it is beyond dispute—that Italian and English Freemasonry are absolutely identical. All the gossip as to the incendiary designs of Italian Freemasons, their conspiracies against the State, and their lawless compacts, are absolute inventions of the enemy. Doubtless, in times past Italian Freemasons, smarting under the horrible mis-government of their country, endeavoured to realise the principles taught by the Craft, but now that Italy is free, Masonry there is precisely what it is here, and it would be as sensible and as truthful to brand this meeting as composed of assassins and conspirators, as to believe the same charges against the illustrious men who rule the Craft in Italy. (Cheers.) Let us never forget, whenever Freemasonry is called in question, that Italy's past and present history, and the position of the Craft in that country then and now, furnish the most complete answers to assailants. It is for them to prove that light, freedom, order, constitutional government, and religious toleration are imperilled when Freemasonry is allowed to pursue its way without suppression or interference. (Hear, hear.) This makes the establishment of the Grand Lodge of Rome one of the greatest Masonic triumphs of the century, and it is gratifying to find that His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales readily recognised its importance, and that one of his earliest acts as Grand Master was to place the Grand Lodge of England in official communication with that of Italy. Brethren, by our Masonic laws and obligations, no lodge can flourish in any district without conserving and strengthening respect for duly constituted authority, obedience to the law, loyalty to the Throne, charity to all mankind, and affection to the brotherhood; and it is the bounden duty of every Mason, whatever his position in life, to co-operate with his brethren for upholding the Craft. I shall always be glad that I have been able to render some slight service to this lodge, and shall always refer with pride to this evening, and to this mark of your great kindness and consideration. As for my own wishes for the prosperity of the St. David's Lodge, let me quote the words of our illustrious Mason, our brother Robert Burns, as sung by him at the Kilmaruock Kilwinning Lodge on an occasion somewhat similar to the present:—

"The powers who preside o'er the world and the tide,
Who marked each element's border;
Who formed this frame with beneficent aim,
Whose sovereign statute is order.
Within this dear mansion may wayward contention,
Or withered envy ne'er enter;
May secrecy round be the mystical bound,
And brotherly love be the centre.

—(Loud cheers.)

The remainder of the evening was spent in a very pleasant manner, the toasts being interspersed with songs and recitations.

TRADE MARKS.—One of the last Acts passed in the recent Session was to establish a Register of Trade Marks, under the superintendence of the Commissioners of Patents, and from and after the 1st July next a person is not to be entitled to institute any proceeding to prevent the infringement of any trade marks as defined by the Act until and unless such trade mark is registered. An office is to be established, not later than the 1st of January next, in such a manner and with such officers and at such salaries, to be paid out of moneys provided by Parliament, as the Lord Chancellor may, with the consent of the Treasury, direct.

Poetry.

THE "P.M.'S" SONG.

By BRO. T. BURDETT YEOMAN.

Dedicated by permission to the Most Illustrious, Exalted, and Worthy Bro. R. WENTWORTH LITTLE.

Come once again, whilst I relate
Some worthy deeds and acts;
Give ear all ye, till I discuss
A record full of facts.
My tales are true, no one will doubt
They're pungent in their way,
For stirring scenes and sympathies
Are met with ev'ry day.

Chorus: Then honour pay where it is due,
For 'tis a sterling gem,
One of rare worth—all Masons own
Past jewelled chair, P.M.

The path it may be difficult,
And some can ne'er attain;
Sometimes a check lies in the way
But patience pray maintain.
All is not perfect e'en with us,
To gain the goal we like;
But earnest be in what you do,
The vein you're sure to strike.

Chorus: Then honour pay, etc.

One cannot stride through all degrees,
But step by step one gains
A near approach for what he toils
Before he holds the reins.
Much thought you need, and study too;
'Tis not an easy task
To reach the chair beset with cares,
And in its honours bask.

Chorus: Then honour pay, etc.

The rule is somewhat paradox,
But truth it is laid down;
Intelligence must reign supreme,
Yet justice bears the crown.
All are as one before 'tis done,
And union is complete;
You must by all accepted be
To reach the longed-for seat.

Chorus: Then honour pay, etc.

To rule a lodge of goodly men,
With hope the guiding star;
To sit among the jewelled band,
Its lustre ne'er to mar.
'Tis highly honoured in the Craft,
Each glance doth homage pay
To see this noble band of men,
The Past Masters' array.

Chorus: Then honour pay, etc.

THE MASONIC INSTITUTIONS.

On Saturday last a small party of brethren, well known in the Order, assembled at a most agreeable dinner provided with much care by Bro. R. Stone, at the Ship Hotel, Halliford, Middlesex. The chair was occupied by Bro. the Rev. Dr. Brette, of Christ's Hospital. On his left was Lieut.-Col. Peters, and among the other members of the company were Bros. R. Wentworth Little, Prov. G.S.W. Middlesex, Secretary to the Royal Masonic Institution for Girls; J. G. Marsh, W. T. Howe, J. Llewellyn Jones, E. G. Hislop, C. A. Davis, George Townsend, W. Clifton Crick, R. Stone, and H. Massey ("Freemason"). After enjoying the excellent repast and choice wines set before them, the brethren honoured several Masonic toasts, beginning with "The Queen," and following this up with "The Prince of Wales, G.M.," "The Pro Grand Master," "The Deputy Grand Master, and others." In the course of the evening Dr. Brette proposed "Success to the Masonic Institutions," and when this had been enthusiastically drunk, Bro. R. Wentworth Little responded. In his reply he contrasted the present with the past condition of all the Masonic Charitable Institutions. After referring to the large number of annuitants now on the books of the Benevolent Institution, the number (177) of boys in the Boys' School, and of girls in the Girls' School, he said that the rapid increase in the members of the Order, and the liberality of the contributions to its charities, necessitated a corresponding distribution of their benefits. With this view the managers of each of the institutions were constantly exercising their minds as to how much further they might go in opening their doors to the multiplying demands made thereat. Speaking for the moment of the Girls' School, with which he was more immediately connected, he might inform the brethren that the building at St. John's Hill, Battersea Rise, was not capable of receiving a greater number of children than it at present contained (150). Although the grounds were extensive they were merely sufficient for this number of children, and the alterations in the neighbourhood of the school rendered it impossible to purchase more land contiguous to the existing site. It would therefore be incumbent on the managers to find land elsewhere to keep pace with the growing claims of the Craft, and a scheme would shortly be placed before the subscribers with that object. A notice of motion for the enlargement of the establishment had already been given in committee by a member (Bro. Joshua Nunn), and in that shape the matter would come before the brethren. The Rev. Dr. Brette thanked the brethren for their liberal support of his list, on which he, as Steward at the last festival of the Royal Masonic Institution for Boys, had been enabled to take up the sum of £94 10s., to be added to the funds of that institution. The party of brethren returned to town by the last train.

ROYAL MASONIC BENEVOLENT INSTITUTION.

A committee of this institution met on Wednesday, September 8th, Bro. Joshua Nunn, P.G.S.B., in the chair. Bros. Samuel Rawson, R. H. Giraud, Henry G. Warren, Charles F. Hogard, Louis Stean, John Newton, James Brett, C. A. Cottebrune, Wm. Stephens, Hyde Pullen, Thos. Cubitt, R. W. Little, and James Terry, Sec.

The minutes of the last meeting were read and verified. The Secretary reported the death of two annuitants, one of whom had received £150, and the other £213.

The report of the House Committee was approved, and an estimate directed to be made of the cost of erecting an iron railing in front of the institution at Croydon.

A widow was granted half her late husband's annuity, and one candidate was placed on list for election in May next.

ROYAL MASONIC INSTITUTION FOR BOYS.

The General Committee of this Institution met on Saturday, 4th September, Bro. Henry Browne, Vice-Pat., in the chair. Among the others present were Bros. Richard Spencer, Vice-Pat.; Henry Smith, West Yorkshire, V.P.; Frederick Adlard, V.P.; George Bolton, V.P.; Henry Moore, Henry Dubosc, Robert Webster, Jesse Turner, and F. Binckes, Secretary.

Petitions were accepted on behalf of two candidates for April, 1876, election, and an outfit value £5 was granted to an ex-pupil, after which the Committee adjourned.

Masonic and General Tidings.

We learn that Bro. Edward James Harty, the designer and drawer of the Installation Picture, has been in Paris in connection with the engraving of the picture, and that from thence he proceeded to Lausanne, to lay it before the "Convent Universel," which commenced its proceedings on Monday, the 6th inst. We are happy to learn that Bro. Harty is progressing well with his undertaking, and we trust that it will receive warm support alike at home and abroad.

Bro. W. W. B. Beach, M.P., Prov. Grand Master, Hants, offers himself as a candidate for the vacant seat at the board of the London and South-Western Railway Company, caused by the resignation of Mr. Hutchins.

Mr. Alderman and Sheriff Ellis and Mrs. Ellis have returned to Byfleet from Castleham, Hollington, where they have been on a visit to the Right Hon. the Lord Mayor and the Lady Mayoress.

With reference to a complaint of our Bro. Homfray, A.G.D.C., we beg to say that his name, as well as that of Bro. R. Scott, D.G.M. Trinidad, were omitted from the posts they occupied in last Grand Lodge by inadvertence.

The will and codicil, dated July 22nd, 1871, and December 7th, 1872, of Sir Charles Locock, Bart., late of Hertford-street, Mayfair, and of Binstead, in the Isle of Wight, who died on July 23rd last, was proved on the 18th ult. by Sir Charles Brodie Locock, Bart., and the Rev. Alfred Henry Locock, two of the sons of the deceased, the executors, the personal estate being sworn under £100,000.

ALEXANDRA PALACE.—The number of visitors to the Alexandra Palace since the opening on the 1st of May has considerably exceeded one million.

Ten thousand rupees have been subscribed by the merchants of Aden for the purpose of giving a fitting reception to the Prince of Wales.

It is rumoured that the Maharaja of Travancore will proceed to Bombay to visit the Prince of Wales.

Messrs. C. T. Brock and Co., the Crystal Palace pyrotechnists, have been informed that the Municipality of Calcutta has decided to engage them to give a display of fireworks on a very large scale, in honour of his Royal Highness's (the Prince of Wales) visit to that city.

We are under obligations to the Provincial Grand Prior of New Brunswick and Nova Scotia for lists of the officers of the Nova Scotia Preceptory and the Priory of the same. They are as follows:—Sir Knts. Benjamin Curren, D.C.L., Eminent Preceptor; W. N. Woodill, Constable; C. F. Vose, Marshal; Rev. H. P. Almon, D.C.L., Chaplain; S. R. Sircorn, P.E.C., Treasurer; H. M. Hamilton, Registrar; A. H. Woodill, M.D., Sub-Marshal; J. Tracey, Chaplain of the Guard; C. Payzant, B.A., Almoner; J. W. Andrews, W. W. Rickards, Standard Bearers; R. M. Stirling, A. G. Hesslein, Pursuivants; J. M. Taylor, Guard. Priory:—Sir Knts. Benjamin Curren, Eminent Prior; Rev. H. P. Almon, Prelate; W. N. Woodill, Capt.-General; C. F. Vose, First Lieut.-General; A. H. Crowe, Second Lieut.-General; W. E. McCoy, Third Lieut.-General; A. H. Woodill, Marshal; W. W. Rickards, Hospitaller; J. W. Andrews, Admiral; J. R. Jennett, Conservator; J. Tracy, Bailie; C. Payzant, Turcopolier; H. M. Hamilton, Chancellor; S. R. Sircorn, Treasurer; J. M. Taylor, Guard. The head quarters are at Halifax.

NATIONAL TRAINING SCHOOL FOR MUSIC.—His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales has decided that his free scholarship in this school shall be awarded, after an open competition, among the inhabitants of the Principality of Wales.

NOTICE.

Many complaints having been received of the difficulty experienced in procuring the Freemason in the West-end, the publisher begs to append the following list, being a selected few of the appointed agents:—

THE COSMOPOLITAN MASONIC CALENDAR, DIARY, AND POCKET BOOK FOR 1876.

A form has been forwarded within the last twelve or fourteen days to the W.M. of every London lodge, respectfully requesting that the name and number of the lodge, place, day and months of meeting might be filled in and returned as speedily as possible, in order that corrections, where needed, may be made in the Diary and Pocket Book for 1876, which will be ready about October 1st. As many lodges do not re-assemble until October and November, a large number of the applications will not unfortunately reach the W.M. until too late for the publication. The publisher will therefore be very thankful to any W.M. or other officer, or members, who will favour him by forwarding the above information as early as possible to the Office, 198, Fleet Street, London. A regular form will be sent, when required, on receipt of name and address.

The Freemason,

SATURDAY, SEPT. 11, 1875.

SCOTTISH FREEMASONRY.

We had intended finishing our remarks commenced last week to-day, but as we publish in this impression a most able letter from a Scottish brother, on the present position of the Craft in Scotland, we think it better to give up our intention. We do not know that we could say much that is either new or striking. There is no reason why the Masonic system in Scotland should not be as firm and regularized as it is in England, but perhaps on the whole, it is more respectful to Scottish Freemasons, and the Scottish Grand Lodge, to believe that they are capable of managing their own concerns, and know their own business best, and so we leave the matter here. We shall always welcome any change, which shall give strength and vitality to Freemasonry in Scotland; as knowing how warm-hearted and "leal" our good brethren are, we always feel regret when we hear it said, what is the proof before the world of the active principles of Scottish Masonic Charity? All movements, though good in themselves, which do not deal with the annual contribution from every member to the Benevolent Fund are only palliatives in our opinion of a standing weakness, not a permanent remedy, nor a radical cure.

THE MASONIC CONGRESS AT LAUSANNE.

A dreadful event is taking place this week in Switzerland. Elderly Abbès and young Ultramontones are shaking their heads and ears in pious horror at the development of the "mystery of the iniquity" of Freemasonry, evidenced by tolerated (tolerated, Sir!) meetings of revolutionists, conspirators, illuminés, agitators, destructives, unbelievers, internationals, "children of Satan," &c., &c., from all parts of the world, at the pleasant and quiet city of Lausanne. What dreadful consequences may be the result of this weakness of the Swiss authorities, who can foretell or venture to say? But there can be no doubt "something is up," some mischief is being hatched, when these dreadful Freemasons meet in such large numbers. There can be little question that it is only to further their own "secret warfare against Church and State." Now, we always feel a great deal of pity for alarmists, whether elderly ladies or young "ansers," and we think it well to endeavour to relieve their anxieties and sooth their fears. Not that we believe that anything we can say will do so, in fact, now, as the word "Freemasonry" acts like "a bit of red rag" to large classes of bovine Romanists and Ritualists. As we write, and when you read, the meeting of the Rite Eccossais will be about half over, not quite; and we think it, therefore, well to call attention to its programme, with such comments as our Masonic experience may suggest. It seems that the Swiss members of the Supreme Council of the Scotch Rite, and foreign members of the same, delegates, &c., are expected to arrive at Lausanne on the 4th, 5th, and 6th, and are to be received by a Council of Reception with white rosettes. There is something very significant in this colour. Is it the "Drapeau Blanc" raised in Switzerland? or, though it looks like a "badge of innocence," does it only cover the dark deeds and the black hearts of Freemasons? It is a serious question. The "convent," it appears (nothing is said about a nunnery) is to be opened on the 6th at 3 p.m. in the casino-theatre at Lausanne. At seven, after four hours of "travail"—not travel—a banquet is to be offered to the hungry and thirsty brethren, and which is to be followed by a soirée familière, a fraternal "free and easy," at which smoking and singing will both be allowed. We are not told whether ladies are to be admitted; we hope they are. Tuesday, the 7th, and Wednesday, the 8th, are to be given up to "labour," and as nothing is said about "refreshment," it almost looks, as Sir Wilfrid Lawson would facetiously observe, as if it would be a "very dry job." On Thursday, the 9th, after an early "seance" for work, they are to make an excursion to Chexbres, a pleasant hill and Pension not far from Vevey, overlooking the beautiful Lake of Geneva. On the 10th and 11th they are to go to work again, on the 12th they rest, and on the 13th they have a grand outing. A steamboat leaves Ouchy at 9 a.m., calls at Vevey at 9.45, and takes them on to Chillon. They will visit the castle and dungeon, they will shake hands with Bro. Bonnard, they will open a lodge actually in the subterranean chamber, and they will hold a revel in the Knights' Hall. At 6 they return to Lausanne. We fancy that the recital so far will cause our agitated adversaries to exclaim, What can they be after? What iniquity are they hatching? There must be something in this more than meets the eye, to assemble in a subterranean chamber, and dine in the Knights' Hall! Well, this band of conspirators will return to Lausanne, et puis? They do nothing apparently until the 18th; at least, nothing is said in the programme; no, they conspire in secret. On the 18th, dreadful act, they promenade in Lausanne and its environs, and, no doubt, admire the ladies and the scenery. Again a mysterious silence about four days. What can they be doing? On the 22nd they go to Eschallen for a picnic, croquet, and five o'clock tea, and having opened a lodge in the 33rd Degree Reamur, they close it immediately in consequence of the intense heat, and the extensive demand for Swiss champagne and the Sippon. The Lodge of Liberty thereupon invites the brethren to a sitting of "adieu," and a standing-up "family soirée," and then they all disperse to the four winds of heaven as fast as the railway trains can carry them away. Is there not a good deal to be made out of this apparently explicit, but clearly misleading programme? What deeds of darkness are they plotting on the days not specified? Who can answer? On the whole, we are inclined to believe that our brethren of the Rite Eccossais, when assembled, will be excessively happy together, and with light hearts, good spirits, and excellent appetites, will enjoy alike the "seances" of "travail," the "banquets," and the "soires familiares," as well as the "fête champêtres." We fancy, that once assembled as Freemasons, lawfully and peaceably alike in the fear of God and love of man, they will care little for ban or blessing, for angry incrimination, or foolish excommunication. They will see one of the fairest countries in the world, they will look on the Lake of Geneva in all its beauty, and catch a glimpse of the Savoy Hills, and the "Pic du Midi." Theirs will be very happy "rassemblement," and fascinating "pelerinages," and if they are wise enough to take their fair sisters with them, they will double their enjoyment, and enhance the pleasantness of the reunion. We are sure they will meet and part in love for one another, and charity with all men, and as they pour out the final "vin d'honneur," they will wish to their calumnious and remorseless adversaries a more Christian vocabulary, and much better manners. We trust that all success and happiness will attend the brethren of the Rite Eccossais now gathered together at Lausanne.

THE STRUGGLE IN FRANCE.

A paper which we publish in another column, translated from the "Chaine de l'Union" of August, suggests many seasonable thoughts, to all those who take an interest in French Freemasonry, and we would add to the French brethren themselves. We do not know exactly what the "Eglise Libre" of Nice is as a journal, whether it represents what is termed the "Old Catholic" or the French Protestant, or even the Waldensian body. Whichever it be, the writer of the article uses very effective arguments, and shows much good sense. Curiously enough, the views propounded and the dicta laid down by this independent and non-Masonic witness, exactly agree with what has often been said in the leading columns of the "Freemason." We have tried to point out that the real teaching of the French Freemasonry (whatever may be the "chic" of the hour,) is neither materialism, positivism, or moral independence. Remembering the older French teaching, we have contended that they, like us, are bound to uphold the theistic position of our Universal Order, and to make the Bible a perpetual emblem in their lodges, and the basis and guide of all their moral strivings. It is this, let us hope temporary, alliance with the sceptical school and violent politicians, both in France and Belgium, which has so weakened the true status of Freemasonry in each country, and has alarmed friends and embittered foes! Whatever Monsignor Dupanloup's real feeling about Freemasonry may be, when confined to the purely philanthropic and benevolent side of the question, as with us in England, we know not, though probably, like all sincere Roman Catholics, he does not allow himself to argue upon the matter, and accepts the infallible allocutions of infallible occupants of the See of St. Peter. Still, we are bold enough to think and to express our opinion that had the Bishop of Orleans only to deal with Freemasonry as it exists under the Anglo-Saxon system, and where its watchwords are "Loyalty and Charity," he would not have deemed it worth his while either to "étudier" the question, much less to communicate his "Etude" to the world. Under all the circumstances of the case, "le jeu," most certainly, ne valait pas "la chandelle." But as it is, he had a fine field open to him, and he has profited by the occasion to make the most of his case, and we fear that we must add, to cause impartial persons to admit that there is great room for improvement, alike in words and acts, among many Freemasons of both those countries. We therefore earnestly commend this important extract from Bro. Hubert's journal to the attention of all our brethren in France and Belgium. Its moderation will ensure attention, and its ability will attract readers. Heartily agreeing with every word of it, and rejoicing to note how it confirms in every particular our previously expressed opinions, we feel that it is in itself a complete justification of every remark we have made and of every argument we have used. Our Bro. Valleton, who is the correspondent, we believe, of the "Monde Maconnique," says, that we believe everything the Bishop of Orleans and others choose to say against Freemasonry in France, &c. But, begging his pardon, we do nothing of the kind. We have, on the contrary, pointed out where we think Bro. Caubet has the advantage of the Bishop of Orleans, but where also, as Bro. Caubet seems to admit, the Bishop of Orleans may fairly complain of speeches which are not Masonic in any sense. We agree with Bro. Caubet that, so far, the Grand Orients of both countries are not responsible for the silly vapourings of individual brethren. When we talked of the "sterile path of politics, &c.," we meant that the Grand Orient should publicly disavow any sympathy with many of the proceedings of the lodges under its control, with numberless discussions which are not Masonic, and which do no good to true Freemasonry. As a body it is possible the Grand Orient does not allow any discussion on such topics, but if we in England in our lodges amused ourselves by long debates about purely political matters, such as the education question, and numerous social subjects which we leave wisely to the legislative bodies, and, above all, if we put forth disquisitions on points both of doubtful morality and actual scepticism, our Grand Lodge would be held responsible for the acts of the private lodges. And so it must be in France. The one hope of safety and salvation for Freemasonry in France and Belgium is that it may cease to be a debating club, and that it will banish all religious and political discussions from every lodge, and give itself up to works of common beneficence and usefulness, as peaceable and law-abiding citizens, as instructed and faithful Freemasons.

THE LOSS OF THE VANGUARD.

Few Englishmen, or Scotchmen, or Irishmen, but felt a thrill of pain, when they heard of the submersion of this noble specimen of our modern naval construction. We all feel proud, perhaps no longer of our "wooden walls," but at any rate of our "ironclad bulwarks." There is something in the free, manly, devoted spirit of sea service which has ever commended itself very deeply to the hearts and sympathies of all the inhabitants of Great Britain. We have been proud of our navy, its successes, its devotion, its discipline, and its unconquered flag! It is not often that such disasters have happened, though of course, in the long and stormy annals of the past, amid deeds of danger and scenes of peril, amid the storm and tempest, the battle and the breeze, amid the horrors of fire and the dangers of icy seas, we have had more than one occasion to mourn over losses of ships, and above all losses of life. The Royal George went down, with brave old Kempenfelt, with many hundred men; the Captain capsized in a squall off the Spanish coast; and we have had to deplore numerous cases of mournful shipwreck, only lightened up by the heroic endurance and the unflinching discipline of our gallant blue jackets. In a fog off the Irish coast one great ironclad runs into the other, and in an hour the "Vanguard," struck by the ram, goes down in nineteen fathoms of water, luckily with no loss of life, except the captain's faithful dog. What a commentary on the uncertainty of earthly things, and the insecurity of earthly strength! Despite "water tight compartments," &c., which aim to keep the vessel afloat, the fatal rent has apparently overpowered all scientific contrivances, or rather the mighty and irresistible and uncontrollable ocean has asserted its own unchanging strength. Whether the "Vanguard" can be raised or not, remains to be seen, but whether or no, it is impossible but such an event must be a matter of much serious thought for all connected with the navy, and indeed for any reflecting person. One writer states that the "Vanguard" could not communicate with the "Iron Duke" because it had no means of signalling in a fog. Surely the advance of science is able to deal with such a question as this, and in this age of discovery and amelioration, some mode may be found of affording the means of fog-signalling. It seems odd to an impartial spectator, that in a fog such mighty vessels were so close together, so as to allow no room for the slightest variation of the course, but that is surely a question for the naval enquiry. We are only expressing the feeling of all our readers when we say how much we regret to hear of such a startling catastrophe, and when we rejoice in knowing that all lives were saved, and that the "devouring main" which holds this mighty specimen of our modern Navy in its tumultuous waves, has not also in its mysterious depths any human victims, for us to mourn over, or to weep for.

THE PERILS OF THE RAIL.

* Those of us who are old enough to remember the days of coaching, and the George and Blue Boar, Holborn, will call to mind not a few of the perils of the road. To-day we are most concerned, sic "tempora mutantur," with the perils of the rail. Every now and then London, calmly perusing the "Times" and daily papers, is startled from its apathy by the account of some dire accident. Many, then, are our remarks, "More Britannorum," and forcible are our observations. Still the perils remain, still they crop up, still they sadden us with their lugubrious details, still they make us actually think for a few passing moments, for the "phenomenon" of a railway accident is very impressive. Despite all the advance of science and efforts of skill, despite all human care and precaution, it often happens that "in a moment in the twinkling of an eye," the line is covered with the debris of shattered and splintered carriages, the ground occupied by the wounded, the dying, and the dead, and the shrieks of agonizing suffering, or the exclamations of absorbing terror, affect the strongest heart, and flurried the stoutest nerve. And we confess, that despite many great and heartrending episodes in railway travelling, we have seldom realized more deeply the perils of the rail than in the recent Kildwick calamity. The remarks of the "Times" on the subject were most opportune and effective, and at the same time most undeniably true. Kildwick is a station of the Midland Railway, in what is termed the Craven country, and this train was an excursion train returning to Bradford. Some hard worked Bradfordians had been away for an "outing," and on their homeward return there comes this dreadful accident, this cruel suffering for them and surviving friends. And then of course re-appears the old question, Who's to blame? Who did it? The first and hasty reply to the question is generally an attack on the railway company. At such times the frame of mind of the British travelling public is very severe, and they believe that until the fate happens to a Director or General Manager which Sydney Smith anticipated for a Bishop these accidents will never cease. Now, we feel bound to say for the Midland Railway Company, knowing its line well, that despite some dreadful accidents which have occurred on it, it is most carefully worked and skilfully managed. All precautions are taken, humanly speaking, to avoid collisions and to shut out danger in travelling; and we do not suppose that any company, as a rule, is more watchful over its arrangements and its officials, who, for the most part, are steady, particular, and yet obliging. Probably it all will have arisen from some unforeseen and uncontrollable contingency, the mistake of a pointsman, or the error of a signalman. The enquiry under Captain Tyler will probably tell us something to this effect. And then what more can be done or said? The victims are gone, the sufferers are still there. We do not know that much more can be made of the matter one way or the other. It is a most deplorable accident, and affecting in its commentary on the vicissitudes of human life, and the uncertainties of a day of pleasurable excursion. All our readers will be full of pity for those who saw the sad catastrophe, who suffered from it, who survive it, who have left their friends to mourn for them for many a long day. But numbering the thousands upon thousands who throng our railway system, the stress upon railway officials, the extreme carelessness of many excursionists, and above all the unavoidable contingencies and perils of the rail, we cannot shut our eyes to the fact, considering everything, that accidents are happily not of frequent occurrence, and we are disposed to doubt whether the perils of the rail, with countless travellers to-day, exceed in their measure the perils of the road, with their hundreds by comparison fifty years ago. Since this was written the official enquiry has demonstrated that the collision was owing to one or both of the causes mentioned above.

THE MASONIC STRUGGLE IN FRANCE, AND THE NEW POSITION OF FREEMASONRY THERE.

With reference to the present struggle going on in France between the Ultramontanes and the Freemasons, and the true position of Freemasonry in that country, we have translated the following interesting paper, which originally appeared in the "Eglise Libre" of Nice, and is quoted by Bro. Hubert in the "Chaine de L'Union," for August. To understand the extract aright, we must bear in mind the internecine struggle going on between the opposing schools of thought and action, and we shall appreciate the impartial spirit and the correct views of the writer, be he who he may.

"With regard to the philosophical address of Mons. Littré, at his Masonic initiation, the 'Eglise Libre' has expressed the idea to which all Christians will subscribe. It is evident that if Freemasonry, which appears to aim at rallying all the living forces of true liberality in the struggle against an invading clericalism, had no other profession of principles but that made at the lodge of 'La Clemente Amie,' it would drive away from it not only Christians, but those convinced spiritualists who think you cannot create a sound social and individual morality without positive belief in the soul and its immortality. A fortiori the disciples of our common Saviour would feel themselves obliged to separate themselves from a society which was expressly based on principles hostile to their faith. But must we consider Mons. Littré's manifesto as an official declaration of Freemasonry?"

No; and nothing could be more erroneous. One might contend "au contraire," that the traditional and authentic Masonic principles are opposed to materialism and positivism. They are based on the belief in a personal God. The ancient expression of the "Great Architect of the Universe" applied to God, sufficiently indicates this fact, and one might say that the immense majority of Freemasons, especially among the middle and working class, still hold to this religious and moral idea, as philosophical as any other, and most akin to common sense. It is true that Freemasonry has not escaped more than other human societies in general, and religious denominations (churches) in particular, also, from the contentions of intellect, and from the divisions which result from them. All the perturbations of our actual society are reflected in them. We have had orthodox and Freethinkers, and we remember that a lodge was suspended some years ago by the Grand Orient of France for having introduced in its regulations details of doctrine which contradicted the traditional principles! There are also among Freemasons the "Littrés" "in petto," and even more advanced, as well as fervent Roman Catholics. The latter have become more rare since the war declared by the syllabus. There are in particular two great currents, one which draws us towards the principles of the morality called independent, and which entirely contests the affirmation of all believers, the other, which maintains the belief in God, Father of all men, source and end of the activity of all moral beings. This last, we say once more, is in a great majority. Whatever it may be, we may say that Positivism is not at all the official faith of Freemasons—just the contrary. They have come to tolerate it greatly, that is all. That this toleration may be maintained without giving a mournful blow to that humanitarian alliance which Freemasonry seeks, it is certainly desirable that it should not degenerate into manifestoes like that which has been alluded to. It is true that in the place of believing that the Littré manifesto is painful to the conscience of Christians, we might deduce from it on the contrary, that Mons. "Littré" dogmatizing gave to Christians the right of professing their beliefs in the lodges, and of rendering homage to their Saviour. And as there are men of faith among the Freemasons the Gospel truth would have there its representatives and its defenders. But Freemasonry would lose too soon its character and its usefulness, if it became an arena for religious discussions, and of diverging professions of faith. The best would be, that it should return to its neutral character and its original purpose, which is an humanitarian alliance outside and above all political and religious parties, with this only dogma positive and exclusive; liberty for all, and respect of all! Holding itself within these limits as it is in reality inclined, Freemasonry could not have anything hostile to the evangelical faith, nor repugnant to Christians. On the contrary it could become one of the "boulevards" of modern liberties, for it is the only general organization and tolerated in all states which can be opposed to the great Jesuitical conspiracy. Far from encouraging Christians from uniting themselves with its efforts, and enrolling themselves under its banners, we ought to urge perhaps all liberal minded believers to enter its lodges. They would prevent Freemasonry from getting into the hands of intolerant philosophical coteries, and they would reinforce the "League of Liberty" of which the success is so important above all in France, for the free spread of the evangelical faith."

[By this last phrase we understand that liberty of conscience and worship are meant, which all Freemasons respect.] Ed.

HIGHRODIAMS.

Dear Bro. Kenning,

I have read with much interest Bro. R. W. Little's letter in your last "Freemason," and am not primâ facie indisposed to accept the plausible explanation he suggests, if it can be substantiated, as "Herodian" is very near to "Highrodiam," though I cannot agree that his proposal to understand "Domestic and Foreign," Domestic and Geomatic, speculative and operative, one of the three that is for "Domaskin and Forin," so far is either a philological one, or is likely to be accepted generally. I do not, however, quite agree with him, that because in 1787 Preston opened the Grand Chapter of Harodim, therefore the grade, or whatever you like to term it, did not exist before. Preston distinctly says that it was an old Order, but mainly cultivated abroad, and new in England, and it is just possible that it is after all only adapted from one of the well-known foreign High Grades, in which the word "Harodim" occurs. I quite agree that if it really only was founded altogether in 1787, it could not be identical with an Order mentioned in 1746, but this point has yet to be decided, and cannot be settled until we know the exact nature, &c., of the Grand Chapter of Harodim, for which Preston claims great merit and excellence. With regard to the "Herodians," as a distinct grade, "formerly well-known in England," I confess that I receive the statement, with all deference to Bro. Little, with much hesitation.

It would almost seem as if our good brother's authority for the statement is Finch, though Bro. Little must well know that Finch's authority is of no value in such a discussion whatever, he being a thorough charlatan, and may have been the originator of the "Herodians" himself. Though I know Bro. Little has said so, Finch's assertion is new to me as a fact.

The "Herodians" are unknown, I believe, to all Masonic historians and writers. I know of no printed work professing to deal with the High Grades, though I have read a great many, which alludes even to such an Order.

They are not mentioned by Preston nor acknowledged by Oliver, as far as I am aware, I find no trace of them in Mackey or Macoy, nor are they apparently known by the compilers of the "Allgemeines Handbuch." But though I say this, I write deferentially on all matters relating to the High Grades, and I do not deny that Bro. Little may have subsidiary evidence which will settle the question. Bro. Hughan tells me there was a Harodim Lodge warranted in 1790, and which united with the Lodge of Antiquity in 1794. But a question comes in which Bro. Hughan might perhaps help us, as to whether this "High Order" did not refer to the Royal Arch after all.

There was also, it seems, a Grand Chapter of Herodim or Herodin in London in 1778, and which was visited by a German of the name of Meyer that year, which was under Robt. Lintot and Daniel Gottfried Hintze.

The compilers of the "Handbuch" seem to think that Oliver has confounded these two chapters in his remarks, but that is a point Bro. Little could clear up. I am very glad to hear that Bro. Little is contemplating publishing "extracts" from the Grand Chapter of Harodim, and if he can verify Finch's statement, we may have the explanation of "Highrodiam" in "Herodian."

Yours fraternally, A. F. A. WOODFORD.

THE 1717 THEORY.

Dear Bro. Kenning,—

I do not think that there is much use in going over this "debateable land" again!

Bro. Buchan, will he forgive me for saying so? seems in a very bad way. "Incidit in Scyllam cupiens evitare Charybdim."

In order to get out of the inevitable conclusion of historical and non-Masonic evidence—he has now endeavoured to set up three systems of Freemasonry, "The operative Freemasonry of the 14th, 15th, and 16th centuries," "The social Freemasonry of the 17th century," and "18th century Freemasonry." This is, begging his pardon, "a reductio ad absurdum" with a vengeance!

Feeling naturally how the "shoe pinches" as regards Plot's and Ashmole's evidence, he calmly disconnects the Freemasonry they mention from any previous or subsequent system, and make it of course entirely distinct from the 1717 Freemasonry!

What is the use of going on with such a discussion?

Bro. Hughan and myself, in accord upon this point, have pointed out to him that Plot, a non-Mason, actually describes almost the exact counterpart of our present system, and declares that it was in existence in 1686, and long previously.

To get over this, Bro. Buchan replies, "oh yes! Plot is correct, there was a Freemasonry in existence in his time, a 'Social Freemasonry,' different from the operative Freemasonry of 'Auld lang syne,' and different too from our modern system." Now what I want to ask Bro. Buchan is, what evidence will satisfy him?

He objects to Masonic historians, we offer him Plot non-Masonic; he quietly puts Plot on one side, invents pro hac vice, his wonderful theory of a "Social 17th century Freemasonry."

I hardly like to say more, but other critics may be less lenient, because Bro. Buchan is an able man, he understands alike the force of evidence and of argument, and I cannot think his last letter either does credit to himself or the cause of truth, which I honestly believe he really after all, like myself, is anxious to maintain and to advance.

Yours fraternally,

A MASONIC STUDENT.

MINUTES AND THEIR CONFIRMATION.

To the Editor of the Freemason.

Dear Sir and Brother,—

Bro. Tebbs is not only not convinced by my last letter upon this subject, but he is confirmed in the opinion that he is right, because, according to him, "my quotations entirely bear out his view of the law of the case."

I am sorry that I did not express myself so clearly as to make him understand me. I am afraid that I cannot write more plainly than I did; it would be of no use to reiterate what I have written. I stated the law as I believe it to be, and I further gave the reasons why I thought it a good law, and I now, therefore, confine myself to remarking upon two errors, as regards fact, into which Bro. Tebbs appears to have fallen. He writes, "Now this is not the case with regard to the election of Grand Master (which I admit most willingly is a precedent to be followed by most every subordinate lodge), for what do we find in page 29, section 1? The Grand Master is to be nominated (not elected) at one Grand Lodge, elected at the next, and then installed, but without any second election at the ensuing festival." (The italics are mine.) Bro. Tebbs goes on, "Is not this exactly what I say should be done, and more, I believe usually is done? What I dispute is that any second election is legal."

The difference between the proceedings in Grand Lodge for the election of Grand Master and those in a private lodge for the election of W.M. consists in this, that in the former case the G.M. is nominated at a previous meeting, and in the latter case the W.M. is not so nominated. In all other respects the proceedings are precisely similar, and the same laws govern both elections.

As regards the words I have italicised above, I take it that Bro. Tebbs supposes that the election of G.M. is not subject to confirmation at the ensuing festival. Let me remind him that at the festival meeting the minutes of the preceding Grand Lodge, so far as they relate to the election of Grand Master, are put for confirmation before the ceremony of installation takes place. If when the question is put the minute were not confirmed the previous election of the Grand Master would be null and void.

Bro. Tebbs will, I trust, now see that this is not what he says should be done, and it is, moreover, not what he says is usually done, and that his contention that any second election (i.e. confirmation of the election of W.M.) is illegal falls to the ground.

Referring to my reasons why, in my opinion, time should be allowed (in the interval between election and confirmation) for due consideration of so important a matter as that of the election of a W.M., Bro. Tebbs writes "Now this seems to me to be perfectly unnecessary. Surely, the month between nomination and election is ample time for the consideration of the matter." My reply is that no such thing as nomination of a W.M. exists. No nomination is required, and, as a rule, I believe that generally none is made. The Secretary reads the names of the members of the lodge who are qualified for election to the office of W.M., each person then writes the name of the brother he votes for on a paper, the paper is placed in the ballot box, the W.M. examines the paper, and declares he who has most votes to be W.M. elect. At the next meeting of the lodge, when that election is confirmed, the brother so elected and his election confirmed is to be installed. What then becomes of Bro. Tebbs's argument? In the election of Grand Master the brethren have from December (the nomination) to the first Wednesday in March (the election), and then from the first Wednesday in March till last Wednesday in April (the confirmation) for consideration. In a private lodge the brethren have only one month, viz., from one lodge meeting to the next, to consider it; and Bro. Tebbs would not even allow them that. He not only thinks that the decision of at that one meeting is, but that it ought to be final.

I think that few will agree with Bro. Tebbs.

THE POWERS OF W. MASTERS.

To the Editor of the Freemason.

Dear Sir and Brother,—

Permit me to thank P.G.W. for the trouble he has given himself to answer my letter of the 18th ult. I am sorry, however, he is so needlessly suspicious of me, and it would have been kinder if he had not presumed that there was "something more in my questions than meets the eye," as all I asked for was a plain answer to a plain question, involving a general principle with no reference to any particular case.

THE ARMS OF THE FREEMASONS.

A correspondent under the initials E.S., in a communication at p. 338, asks what is the colour of the chevron and 3 castles on the shield shown on a Masonic token commemorating the election of the Prince of Wales as G.M., in 1790. The following extract from "Guillim's Display of Heraldry" will supply an answer, with the exception that, as borne by the Society of Free and Accepted Masons, both before the union and at the present day, and as shown in the Masonic token, the field is gules and not azure. Guillim says, "The Company of Masons, being otherwise termed Freemasons, of ancient standing and good reckoning, by means of affable and kind meetings divers times, did frequent this mutual assembly in the time of King Henry IV., viz., the 12th of his reign. Their arms azure, on a chevron between three castles argent, a pair of compasses, somewhat extended, of the first, were granted by William Hawkston, Clarendieu, 13 Edward IV."

Many years ago a collection of Masonic extracts from MSS. and printed books, made by a member of the lodge at Newark towards the latter end of the last century, came into my hands.

The following extract may possibly interest some of the readers of the "Freemason."

"The Arms of the Fraternity of Free and Accepted Masons, &c., from a curious old MSS.

"The Freemasons' Arms were found in the collection of the learned and famous Hebrewist, architect and brother, Rabbi Jacob Jehudah Leon. This gentleman, at the request of the States of Holland, built a model of the Temple of Solomon. The design of this undertaking was to build a temple in Holland, but upon surveying the model it was adjudged that the United Provinces were not rich enough to pay for it, whereupon the model was by the States generously bestowed upon the builder, notwithstanding they had already paid him his demand, which was very great. This model was exhibited to public vision, by authority, at Paris and Vienna, and afterwards at London by a patent under the Great Seal of England, and signed Killigrew, in the reign of King Charles II. At the same time Jacob Judah Leon published a description of the Tabernacle and the Temple, and dedicated it to his Majesty, and in the years 1759 and 1760 I had the pleasure of perusing and examining both these curiosities. The arms are emblazoned thus: Quarterly per squares, countercharged vert, in the first quarter azure, a lyon rampant or; in the second quarter or, an ox passant sable; in the third quarter or, a man with hands erect, proper robed crimson and ermin; in the fourth quarter azure, an eagle displayed or, crest the Holy Ark of the Covenant proper, supported by cherubims. Motto, Kodes La Adorai, i.e., Holiness to the Lord. The learned Spencer says, the cherubims had the face of a man, the wings of an eagle, the back and mane of a lion, and the feet of a calf. Ezekiel says they had four forms, a man, a lion, an ox, and an eagle. When the Israelites were in the wilderness, and encamped in four cohorts, the standard of the tribe of Judah carried a lion, the tribe of Ephraim an ox, the tribe of Reuben a man, the tribe of Dan an eagle. These four standards comprised a cherubim, therefore, God chose to sit upon cherubims bearing the forms of those animals to signify that was the leader and king of the cohorts of the Israelites. Bochart says they represented the nature and ministry of angels; by the lion's form is signified their strength, generosity, and majesty; by the ox their constancy and assiduity in executing the commands of God; by their human shape their humanity and kindness, and by that of the eagle their agility and speed. As these were the arms of the Masons that built the Tabernacle and the Temple (!) there is not the least doubt of their being the proper arms of the Most Ancient and Honourable Fraternity, Free and Accepted Masons, and the continual practice, formalities, and tradition in all regular lodges (from the lowest degree to the most high, i.e., the Holy Royal Arch) confirm the truth thereof."

Since the union the arms of the Grand Lodge of England consists of both these coats borne per pale, the former coat (as shown in the Masonic Tokens) on the dexter side, and the latter on the sinister. With the former coat the supporters were two beavers; with the latter (and as now borne) two cherubims.

MASONIC MEDALS AND TOKENS.

Having had an opportunity of again examining the specimen of these tokens briefly referred to in my former communication at p. 283, I now append a fuller description of it, and it will be seen that, in one respect, it differs from those already described by your various correspondents. It is 1½ inch in diameter, and is in excellent preservation, being as fresh and sharp as when first struck.

The coat of arms, emblematical figures, and inscriptions on the two sides of this token exactly correspond with Bro. Hughan's description, except that what that worthy brother takes to be an hour-glass is clearly shown to be a book—the volume of the sacred law. The tinctures of the shield are also distinctly shown, and in reply to the queries of E.S. on this subject at p. 338, I send, under another heading; Guillim's emblazonment of the Masons' Arms. Where the Leicester specimen differs from the rest is in the inscription round the rim, which reads as follows:—"Masonic Halfpenny Token MDCCXCIV. XX. X." The probability is that all these tokens were struck from the same die, and that the various inscriptions round the rim (of which other varieties may yet turn up) were subsequently stamped for different Masonic tradesmen, or others who might purchase a lot of the tokens to pay away as small change in their business—a practice which we know was very prevalent about the middle of the seventeenth century, and also, to a less extent, about the period in question, several specimens of which tokens I possess.

WILLIAM KELLY,

P. Prov. G.M., Leicestershire and Rutland.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS AND OINTMENT.—Protracted suffering of any kind soon wears down the strongest frame, and weakens the most determined spirit; as the dropping of water will in time wear away the hardest granite, so will persistent pain wear away the powers of the strongest mind. Let none, therefore, who are afflicted with Chronic Rheumatism, Neuralgia, pains, or old painful sores, and Ulcerations, which render their life miserable, yield to despair, but give these inestimable twin remedies a steady and fair trial. Many who have done so (having previously tried "almost everything" without relief) have been delighted and amazed at the change for the better which has been the result of their use. They are invaluable in Skin diseases.—ALVT.

ON THE PRESENT POSITION AND FUTURE PROSPECTS OF THE CRAFT IN SCOTLAND.
(FROM A CORRESPONDENT.)

The Institution to which we of the present age belong is sprung (as doubtless most of our readers are aware) from what in the olden time was a body composed entirely of men who were actually Masons, and who earned their daily bread by their skill in the manipulation of the mallet and chisel.

When, in the seventeenth century, there began to be admitted within its pale those who were other than members of the craft operatively, these were gentlemen who occupied either the highest positions in society, or had rendered their names famous in their country's history by their gallant deeds in times of war, or their chivalrous conduct in times of peace. Then, when there had sprung into existence the institution known in every corner of the world as Freemasonry, and its founders among us had placed at its head as Grand Master the great St. Clair of Roslyn, what a galaxy of noble, talented men stood around him, able and willing to advise and to support him. Then were the days of the glories of Freemasonry; then lived the men who were determined to make the name "Freemason" respected wherever it was heard, and, all honour be to their memories, they succeeded.

But as time passed on and the strictness of the regulations regarding a man's qualifications for admission into its lodges was relaxed, there began to creep into the fraternity men whom it would have been better without, and who, by their behaviour, degraded the name of the Craft. At one memorable period in the history of its progress in Scotland it was very nearly threatened with annihilation, as one of the consequences of a disgraceful trial for libel, but, though thrown under a cloud for a time, the tenets of the Order soon again began to assert their worth, and it was not long ere it had regained all it had lost, and had increased mightily in the public esteem. No society so honourable; no institution so much respected. At a time when the fires of revolution blazed throughout continental Europe, and their terrible fury caused nations to shake to their centres, when it was feared their seductive influences might take a too powerful hold on our own countrymen—when Chartism was not a myth but a reality, and troublous times were looming ominously on the horizon of the political sky—the enemies of the Craft thought that Freemasonry had received its death blow when the bill was introduced which denounced all secret societies as illegal, and made all secret conclaves liable to be entered upon by the officers of the law, owing to their likelihood to be treasonable. But here the purity of its teachings, and the well-known fact that not even an allusion to politics was allowable inside its lodges, stood it in good stead and saved it. Nay, when the bill became law, it alone was found to be excluded, and when consternation prevailed among the members of the other associations, and their meetings were deserted, its members met in their accustomed places, secure and safe from interruption or intrusion. Since that time the numbers of our brotherhood have gone on increasing wonderfully, and the stain which even but lately was attached to our name has gradually but effectively been effaced.

The position which Freemasonry occupies presently, not only in Scotland, but throughout the whole world, when contrasted with that of any other body, be it social, religious, or political, is not only second to none, but pre-eminently and conspicuously foremost. Freemasons have reason to congratulate themselves upon the fact that this is the case, and to be thankful to those who have striven nobly and well to bring about such a successful issue. And who are these last? First, our Grand Masters and the office-bearers of their respective Grand Lodges, and after them the managing committees of our Provincial Grand Lodges.

We are all agreed that for many years the work in our Grand and Provincial Grand Lodges has been carried on in a most business-like manner. The members of the various committees have not confined themselves to talking only, but have gone about the discharge of their duties in such a manner as to merit the commendation of all right-minded men. The visiting committees of our Provincial Grand Lodges deserve our special thanks. They go here and there and everywhere in their provinces, looking after our lodges, just as if they would accept no evidence as to good conduct or bad save and only that of their own senses, and we know that they are quite as ready to censure (but always kindly, and animated by a true spirit of Masonry) where blame is due, as they are to commend, and they are not slow to do that where praise is due. Then again, see how our Grand Lodge office-bearers attend to their duties, and what a lively interest they take in the welfare of the Craft. It is no sinecure holding office in the Grand Lodge, but though the amount of work entailed be great, our Grand Master and his office-bearers do not seem to shrink from it. But we live in an age of progress, and, having achieved great results, we are not disposed to sit idling our time or lazily to cry "Content, content; let us leave well alone." If we had been we would still be travelling in stage coaches on the land; we would still be taking months instead of weeks for our voyages on the sea; and we would never have encompassed the earth with that magic wire to the furthest extremities of which we can flash our thoughts with the speed of the lightning.

The position of the Craft in Scotland is eminently satisfactory, but though it be so that is no reason why we should desist from our efforts to make its influences even more widely felt and to raise its standing still higher. We are very hopeful of the future. The march of intellect and the consequent advancement of the arts and sciences received, we believe, a great impetus when the Compulsory Education Bill was passed. There lies one of our hopes. What are we to expect from this act as regards Masonry? Wise counsellors, firm, cautious rulers, and intelligent members. These are what are wanted, because in many cases we have them not, and these will be what we will have. There is too much ignorance amongst us; there is too much lethargy amongst us. How many are there, who, having taken the various obligations of their initiatory degrees, attend the meetings of their respective lodges with the most unvarying regularity, and think, each one of them, "I am doing my duty; this is Freemasonry; this is all my obligations require of me." Are these men right? Emphatically, no! They are wrong; totally, miserably wrong. That is not their duty, that is not Freemasonry, that is not fulfilling the requirements of their obligations. As well might we say that the whole duty of a soldier is to become expert in his drill or quick in his motions, or of a lawyer to become learned in the law. There is something more required of the soldier—to defend and protect the interests of his native country by keeping its enemies at bay; there is something more required of the lawyer—to exercise his learning, in order that the guilty may be punished and the innocent protected. So is there something more required of the Freemason. He is to be the perpetual enemy of immortality of crime, or of evil of any sort; he is to assist the weak; to aid in alleviating human suffering and misery wheresoever found, to bestow his charity and compassion on all possible occasions on the deserving and the needy; to extend the right hand of fellowship to the stranger, to minister to his wants, and make him feel himself among brethren; he is to be as careful of his neighbours' good names as he would have them be of his—in a word, he is ever to be on the side of truth, mercy, and justice, and so to order his walk and conversation as to live in the favour of God and man. That is Freemasonry; that is his duty; that is what his obligations require of him. How we pray that this is what the future will bring us, and that the time will soon be when simply to say of a man "He is a Freemason," will be quite sufficient to afford us such an insight into his character as will enable us to trust him implicitly.

It is not on our Grand Master nor on our Grand or Provincial Grand Lodges that our future prospects of success depend. It is on each and every member of our common fraternity. From the moment of his initiation a sacred duty devolves upon the initiate. The welfare of the Craft is entrusted to his keeping, and there is not one amongst us whose position is so humble or obscure that he cannot either add to its lustre and its reputation or assist in tarnishing its time-honoured name.

That a future lies before us, the glories of which shall eclipse all the glories of the past, we are not slow to believe, but to bring this about we must work. And in working we have many noble examples to look up to. See what an interest the late Lord Dalhousie took in the Craft, and how he spent a large part of a long lifetime in endeavouring to promote its welfare. How devoted to the work was our last Grand Master, the Earl of Rosslyn, and have we not a Grand Master presently in the person of Sir Michael Shaw Stewart, whose reign promises to stand out conspicuously as one during which the Craft has flourished.

"Lives of great men all remind us
We should make our lives sublime,
And, departing, leave behind us
Footprints on the sands of time."

We must work, and work hard too. It is not three oars going in a four-oared boat that we want, but all four swinging merrily and heartily together. It is not big talk and little work, but big work and little talk. See, the sun is already peeping out upon us, and soon we may be basking in its glorious rays if we can only remove the clouds. Let us remove our Masonic clouds, and we shall see the fruits of our labour springing up around us like the plants in the tropics. Let us bend our backs to the oars, let us put our shoulders to the wheel, let us strain every nerve for the attainment of our common object—that of raising still higher the status of the Craft; and rest assured that if we do so we shall ultimately be rewarded with that grand prize of perseverance—success.

But in all our doings let us never be forgetful that there is one above us, one who sits on the great throne of the Grand Lodge on high, noting all our actions here below, and let us so work

"That to perfection's sacred height
We nearer still may rise,
And all we think, and all we do,
Be pleasing in His eyes." X.Y.Z.

FREEMASONRY IN INDIA.

KEYSTONE CHAPTER (No. 757) held its installation convocation at the Masonic Hall, Mazagon, Bombay, on Monday, the 12th July, when there were present M. Ex. Comps. Alexr. McKenzie, P.Z.; C. E. Mitchell, P.P.Z., as P.H.; V. Ex. Comps. G. R. Henderson, P.J.; A. Edginton, P.P.Z.; H. J. P. Thompson, P.P.Z.; W. H. Hussey, P.P.Z.; Ex. Comp. F. S. Lewellin, acting S.E.; Comp. R. Cooper, as S.N.; Ex. Comp. W. C. Rowe, P.S., who has held this post for four consecutive years; and Comps. Dr. De Tatham, First Asst., and W. Richardson, Second Asst. Sojourners; J. W. Seager, Janitor, and a large attendance of companions.

The chapter was opened in due form with prayer at 6.30 p.m., and the minutes of the last convocation and permanent committee were read and confirmed.

The business of the evening was to install the Principals elect, Comps. R. G. Henderson, W. C. Rowe, and H. W. Barrow, and the other officers of the chapter.

The M.E.P.Z. then requested all the companions below the rank of an installed Principal, with the exception of the Principals elect, to retire from the chapter, when Comps. G. R. Henderson was installed P.Z.; W. C. Rowe, P.H., and H. W. Barrow, P.J., and the companions were then admitted, and M. Ex. P.Z. invested the following companions:—F. S. Lewellin, S.E.; R. Cooper, S.N.; Dr. De Tatham, P.S.; and Ex. Comp. P.S. nominated Comps. B. Robinson, First Asst., and W. Richardson, Second Asst. Sojourners. M. Ex. Comp. A. Edginton then proposed that a P.P.Z. jewel be voted by the chapter to M. Ex. Comp. Alexr. McKenzie for the services he had rendered to the chapter, which was carried by an unanimous vote. M. Ex. Comp. McKenzie then thanked the companions in feeling terms for their kindness in recognizing his past services to the chapter, but said he must take this opportunity of thanking the past officers of the chapter for the assistance they had given him by attending to their duties in the way they had done during the past year, and stated that at any time he should be most happy to give his services to the chapter whenever they might require them.

Comps. G. R. Henderson, W. C. Rowe, and H. W. Barrow then returned thanks to the companions for electing them to the high offices, and said they would endeavour to perform their duties to the best of their ability, to maintain and uphold the high name the chapter has held in the district for its working.

M. Ex. Comp. A. Edginton said he had read with pleasure in the last number of the "Masonic Record" the announcement of H.R.H. the Prince of Wales being installed as G.P.Z. in the Grand Chapter of England on the 3rd of May last, and proposed that the chapter record the great satisfaction this has given to all English R.A. Masons in the district, which was seconded by M. Ex. Comp. McKenzie, and carried with applause.

The sum of Rs. 50 was voted to the Janitor, he being out of employment, which was ordered to be paid to him at once.

V. Ex. Comp. H. W. Barrow proposed, and V. Ex. Comp. W. C. Rowe seconded, that Comps. Dr. De Tatham, B. Robinson, and C. Tudball, be elected as members of the Permanent Committee, which was carried unanimously by the companions of the chapter. V. Ex. Comp. W. C. Rowe proposed, and V. Ex. Comp. H. W. Barrow seconded, Comp. T. Council as a joining member. Comp. the Rev. C. Gilder signed the Grand Chapter certificate and received the same.

M.E.P.Z. then requested Ex. Comp. S.E. to enter the names of the companions that had passed the ballot, to be placed on the next summons for installation at the next meeting.

There being no further work before the chapter, it was closed in solemn form at 8.30 p.m., the newly installed P.S. giving the closing charge in a most impressive manner.

LODGE CONCORD (No. 757).—The regular meeting of this lodge was held in the Freemasons' Hall, Mazagon, on Saturday, the 17th July, 1875. Present:—W. Bros. W. C. Rowe, W.M.; G. R. Henderson, I.P.M.; B. Robinson, P.M.; F. Burdett, as S.W.; F. S. Lewellin, as J.W.; O. Tomlinson, Sec.; J. Spiers, S.D.; W. G. Davie, J.D.; J. E. Syers, Org.; J. F. Grew, Steward; S. Thomas, I.G.; J. W. Seager, Tyler. Members:—Bros. A. Edginton, P.M.; W. Fearn, J. H. Burrett, W. E. Craddock; W. W. Wilson, J. Weddle, J. Middleton, J. Jones, &c. Visitors:—Bros. Thomas Connell, W.M. 1100; E. C. Mitchell, P.M. 944; A. McKenzie, P.M. 944; H. W. Barrows, P.M. 944; W. J. Wilkinson, W. Grant, Rev. C. Gilder, J. Holland, G. Claridge, J. Watkins, J. O. Weeks, G. Parker, R. O. Kershaw, J. Hartley, E. Ludhall, W. Waring, &c. The lodge was opened with prayer at 7 p.m. The summons convening the meeting was read. The minutes of the last regular meeting were read and confirmed. The minutes of the last meeting of the Permanent Committee were read and adopted. The ballot was then taken for Bro. Emanuel Lucas, of Lodge Corinth, No. 1122, E.C., as a joining member, and announced clear. One gentleman was then balloted for as a candidate for initiation, and announced duly elected. The W. Master then said, as there was no work before the lodge, he proposed to deliver an address "On the Solicitation and Selection of Candidates for Freemasonry," which he did in his usual masterly style. Some delicate points were treated in such a manner as to surprise most, if not all, present, and evidently to the satisfaction of all, for on the completion of the address he was warmly applauded. The application of Bro. J. W. Seager, Tyler, for assistance (he having been a long time out of employment) was then laid before the lodge, and Bro. F. S. Lewellin proposed and Bro. J. Weddle seconded, that the sum of fifty rupees be voted from the lodge funds to Bro. J. W. Seager (carried). The resignation of one brother was then read, and accepted with regret. All dues fully paid up. A letter was read from D.G. Secretary, acknowledging receipt of the returns for the half year ending June 30th, 1875, together with a cheque for the amount due for the same. All members present who had not signed the new bye-laws were then requested by the W.M. to do so, and signed and received a copy of the new bye-laws accordingly. Bro. G. R. Henderson, I.P.M., then proposed, and Bro. W. C. Rowe, W. Master, seconded, that 100 rupees be given from the charity fund of the lodge to the European General Hospital fund (carried unanimously). The meeting then accorded a vote of thanks to the W. Master for the address he had delivered, and asked him to allow the same to be printed. The W. Master accorded his sanction to hand his manuscript copy of the address to his bro. Secretary, to be forwarded, with the proceedings of this meeting, to the "Masonic Record," as the work done in the lodge during this evening, but would not agree to its being printed as a separate address. The W. Master then proposed, and Bro. G. R. Henderson, I.P.M., seconded, that a "subscription box" be made and placed outside the lodge on lodge meeting nights, for any brother who chose to subscribe his mite to the Masonic Benevolent Institutions, and suggested the amount so collected during the year be brought to the notice of the lodge every regular December meeting, and that it be then decided which benevolent institution the amount so subscribed be voted to. Bro. E. Lucas then proposed, and Bro. B. Robinson, P.M., seconded, Dr. Gregson de Cuna as candidate for initiation.

METROPOLITAN.

DOMATIC LODGE (No. 177).—An emergency meeting of this lodge was held on Friday, the 10th inst., at Anderton's Hotel, Fleet-street, the W.M., Bro. George Everett, presiding. Bro. Fowler, 244, was passed, and five gentlemen were initiated, one of them being the W.M.'s son. The names of the initiates were George Land Everett, Robert Osborne (Capt.), A. S. Gilbert, Frederick Wigmore, and Frederick Harding. After this, propositions were given in for five more initiates, and the brethren then adjourned to banquet. Among those who sat down were Bros. Geo. Everett, W.M.; A. Treadwell, S.W.; Jas. Willing, J.W.; Joseph Smith, Treas.; Thos. Williams, S.D.; W. Palmer, J.D.; J. Buscall, I.G.; J. Tims, P.M.; F. Kent, P.M.; J. E. Walford, P.M. Visitors—H. B. Fowler, 244; H. C. Thompson, 299; John Kent, 192; W. Read, 1507; T. W. Gardner, W.M. 1381; B. Simmer, P.G. Warden of British Burmah; D. R. Still, P.M. 1293, and Sir John Bennett; H. Massey ("Freemason"), and thirty-two lay members of the lodge. In the course of the evening Bro. Sir John Bennett, No. 1, favoured the company with his presence. The usual toasts were proposed, and that of "The W.M." was received with great enthusiasm, unqualified popularity with the brethren having characterised his year of office. The W.M., in reply, said that he had often had occasion to remark that to speak of oneself was always a disagreeable operation. It was, however, highly gratifying to him to know that the brethren appreciated his humble endeavours to carry out the duties of his office to the best of his ability, and also to know that up to the present time the brethren had considered him successful. The Mastership of the Domatic Lodge was not altogether a bed of roses. It was very different to presiding over a lodge of thirty or forty brethren. Although this was an emergency meeting, there were forty-nine brethren present, a very quiet night for the Domatic Lodge, the numerous members of whom the lodge was composed evidently not expecting that there was anything but the lodge work to do. Bro. Joseph Smith, the Treasurer, who had proposed the toast, had said very kind things of him, more he feared than was his due, and his allusion to the excellent summer banquet, with which every one was delighted, revived in his recollection some pleasant hours which he should never forget. If he might be allowed to refer to it he would say that he undertook it with diffidence, because he knew what an onerous affair it would be. But on all hands he received support and encouragement, which encouraged him to do all and everything he could to serve the lodge and all connected with it. Now this he was always determined to do in conjunction with Bro. Willing, and if he could only succeed in doing it during the remainder of his year of office, with the same approbation of the brethren as he had had hitherto, he should consider himself amply rewarded. The W.M. next proposed "The Initiates," and particularly referred to the pleasure it gave him to have initiated that night his own son, and a few old friends, who he was sure would do honour to the Craft they had joined. Referring to his son, he said he had not admitted him to Masonry in order that he might get "Masonry on the brain," and rush about night after night to the detriment of his health, but he was desirous of teaching him some of those good things there were in Masonry. Seventeen years ago he had gone through the same ceremony as his son had that night, and he then thought, as he now knew, to be a good Mason was to be a good man. He brought him into the Order with that before his eyes. The man who just went through his three degrees and thought no more of it, knew little of Masonry; but the man who studied it found that it, like the works of the great poet, Shakespeare, revealed more beauties the more it was known. There were beautiful things in it which occurred to a man in every part of his life. He might say that many and many a time when he was working up for the position of W.M., before his son had attained to manhood, he wished to communicate to him some of the things which he was studying. By his obligation, however, he was precluded from doing it; but now that barrier was removed, and he could teach his son, as well as the friends who that night accompanied him, the knowledge he himself possessed. The W.M. concluded by trusting that all the initiates would go through and thoroughly understand all the degrees in Masonry, and its practical work. If they did so he was satisfied they would all be good men and good Masons. All the initiates responded. Sir John Bennett was the principal respondent for "The Visitors."

In the course of his remarks he said he always thought that when men were absorbed in business it always gave them vitality to look occasionally into a Masonic lodge. His had been a very busy life, and unfortunately he had not been able to give the attention he should have wished to Masonry, although 25 years ago he joined the Mount Moriah Lodge. When he plunged into public life he found out that the more a man had to do the better he did it; and so when he became Sheriff he engaged in a thousand things. He then said to himself, "Now is my time to rejoin Masonry." He was taken up by the Grand Master's Lodge, and he was now one of the active members of the body for which he had so profound a respect. Reflecting, as public men did on the present, the future, and the past, he came now to what had been done in Freemasonry, for we could scarcely tell how many centuries, possibly, as tradition went, for 5000 years. In the best times of the world's history, bodies like Freemasons, not only among the Hebrews, the Greeks and the Romans, and then through the dark ages, gave support to progress. The world could hardly know to what great causes to attribute its success, and whom to say it owed as its greatest benefactors; but his own notion was that from the Masonic body, strange to say, from century to century the world had derived an amount of permanent good—from the best men, the elect and the select, meeting and advocating the best interests of the whole human race and family. Coming to our own times—within the last 700 or 800 years—Masonry still did its work, we could not tell how the old fellow-craftsmen left all sorts of influences on our present state of civilisation throughout the world. At any rate we know priestcraft was always their enemy (and priestcraft was always a good judge in all ages), and knew perfectly well that the Craft meant in its most holy form—religious liberty. It meant then, and it insisted on meaning throughout the whole thread of its great career and existence, the establishment of the highest and best social institutions. It now meant whatever it meant in the past; it meant the pursuit of an intellectual life which would make a future which we were hardly able to contemplate the success of at the present moment. He believed fully in the power of the Masonic body. There were in that room men pledged to the advocacy and advancement of all that would constitute the very highest influences and best capacities of human nature. The men of the Craft were preliminary men, devoted to the promotion of human liberty and freedom, and he gloried in belonging to the Order. It was an honour to any man who took part in public life that he now and then could come among such a body as this, and receive a kind word of encouragement, which acted as a hearty impulse to him to go out into the world, and find it better than he left it. He had had a hard day's work, and Bro. Walford asked him to come down and see a hearty body of men, in the Domatic Lodge, good Masons, who would tell him to go out and prosper in every good undertaking. He accepted the invitation with cheerfulness, and he was happy, indeed, to be a visitor to this lodge. Other visitors also replied, shortly after which Sir John Bennett left. Bro. Walford replied for the "P.M.'s," Joseph Smith for "Treasurer," James Willing, jun., for "Secretary," and Bro. Treadwell and others for the "Officers." The brethren separated about eleven.

PROVINCIAL.

SUDBURY.—STOUR VALLEY LODGE (No. 1224).—The annual meeting of the Stour Valley Lodge, and the installation of the new W.M. took place in the lodge room at the Literary Institute. The following is a list of the officers and others present:—F. Wheeler, W.M.; H. Welham, S.W.; Rev. C. J. Martyn, P.M., Sec.; J. F. Hills, P.M. and P.P.G.J.W., Treas.; W. H. Smith, J.D.; A. O. Stead, Org.; N. Aprile, I.G. Members: H. S. Oliver, C. W. Grimwood, C. J. Cardinall, H. S. Pratt, W. Bailey, C. Emmerson, E. R. Boulter, S. Spurgin, A. Grimwood, C. Gooch, R. R. Ellis, W. L. Lewis, G. Murrells, F. Thurston, W. H. Sholl, Tyler. Visitors:—J. G. D. Mayd, P.M. St. John, 349; H. Luff, P.M. Perfect Friendship, Ipswich, 276; J. King, A. J. Grimwade, S. Cooper, F. Grimwade, A. A. Seabome, Virtue and Silence, 332, Hadleigh; S. J. Carman, Treas. 1500, Norwich; R. Postle, 1008; C. F. Lilley, Fortitude, 12; H. R. Thompson, P.P.G.S.W.; J. Hedley Bevan, W.M., P.G.S.W., Tufnell Oakes, I.P.M., P.P.G.R., Royal St. Edmunds, 1008. The lodge having been opened by the W.M., Bro. F. Wheeler, Mr. Alfred Spring was duly initiated into the mysteries of ancient Freemasonry. The installation of Bro. G. H. Grimwood, J.W., was next proceeded with, V.W. Bro. the Rev. C. J. Martyn, Past Grand Chaplain of England, officiating as Installing Master, Bro. Hills acting as Secretary, reading the charges and regulations, to each of which the W.M. gave his unqualified assent. The ancient ceremonies were most impressively performed, and the new Master was proclaimed in due form as from the four quarters of the globe, after receiving the salutations of all the brethren present, according to ancient usage. Bro. Grimwood being duly installed as W.M., proceeded to appoint his officers as follows:—Bros. C. Emmerson (formerly Treasurer), S.W.; W. H. Smith, J.W.; Rev. C. J. Martyn, Sec.; J. F. Hills, Treas.; A. O. Stead, S.D.; N. Aprile, J.D.; R. Ellis, I.G.; E. R. Boulter, Steward, and W. H. Sholl, Tyler. The Installing Master then gave the usual address from the West to the Worshipful Master, and to the Wardens from the East. The lodge was then closed, and the brethren adjourned to a sumptuous banquet in the Assembly Room, Rose and Crown Hotel. We are happy to say the lodge is in a flourishing state, with a fair balance in the hands of the Treasurer. In the course of the year eight candidates have been initiated, and the lodge now numbers some 50 members. The chair was taken by the W.M., Bro. Grimwood, and the vice-chair by the S.W., Bro. Emmerson. The cloth having been removed, the following toasts were duly given:—"The Queen and the Craft," "The M.W. the Grand Master of England—H.R.H. The Prince of Wales," "The R.W. the Pro Grand Master—The Right Honble. the Earl of Carnarvon; the Deputy Grand Master—The Right Honble. the Lord Skelmersdale, and the rest of the Grand Officers, Past and Present;" from the chair, the latter being responded to by the Rev. J. C. Martyn, P.G.C. "The R.W. the Prov. Grand Master for Suffolk—The Right Honble. the Lord Waverley; the V.W. the Deputy Provincial Grand Master—the Rev. E. J. Lockwood, and the rest of the Prov. Grand Officers, Past and Present," from the chair, and acknowledged by Bro. J. Hedley Bevan, P.G.S.W. Suffolk;" "The Worshipful Master," proposed by Bro. F. Wheeler, P.M., and suitably acknowledged;" "The Immediate Past Master—Bro. F. Wheeler," was proposed from the chair: "The Visitors," from the chair, coupled with the names in our list, all of whom returned thanks;" "The Installing Master," from the chair: "The Officers of the Lodge," from the chair, the Vice-chairman returning thanks;" "The Masonic Charities," from the chair, responded to by Bro. Martyn;" "The Initiate," from the chair, responded to by Bro. A. Spring. The "Tyler's" toast completed the list, the company breaking up at eleven o'clock.

SANDGATE.—SANDGATE LODGE (No. 1436).—The regular monthly meeting of this lodge was held at the Royal Kent Hotel, on Monday evening, 13th inst. Present:—Bros. R. J. Fynmore, W.M.; assisted by W. C. Gosby, I.P.M.; F. Staddon, S.W.; R. H. Pledge, J.W.; A. Kuler, S.D.; W. Syson, J.D.; W. Dixon, I.G.; F. Jarvis, Secretary; G. Butcher, Tyler. The minutes of the last meeting being read, were duly passed by the brethren, after which the brethren proceeded to ballot for as candidates Mr. B. Simmonds and Mr. G. Kuler, both of Sandgate; also for Quartermaster-Sergeant Field, of the Army Service Corps, as a joining member. The ballot being unanimous the initiation was proceeded with in true Masonic form, Bro. R. H. Pledge giving the address, Bro. P. M. Gosby the charge. It was also proposed by Bro. Staddon, S.W., and seconded by Bro. Pledge, J.W., that a Past Master's jewel be presented to Bro. Gosby, P.M., by the brethren of the lodge, as a slight acknowledgement for the able services he has rendered to the lodge from its commencement. This was carried unanimously, it was decided that Bro. Kenning, of the "Freemason," should supply the jewel with a suitable inscription appended thereto. The lodge was then closed with prayer. This was one of the pleasantest evenings that has been passed for some time. Visitors—Bros. J. Kennet, P.G.O. for Kent; Glynn; J. G. Lockyer, Army Service Corps.

MANCHESTER.—LODGE OF TRUTH (No. 1458).—This lodge held its regular meeting on Saturday, September 4th, 1875, at the Royal Archer Hotel, Dale-street, Manchester. The W.M., Bro. Henry Smith, opened the lodge at four o'clock; many of the officers being absent on business and some on pleasure, the W.M. had to select from those present. Bros. Robert Caldwell, P.M., acting as S.W.; J. W. Knider, P.M., Sec.; Batchelder, S.D.; Branton, J.D.; Cox, Org.; Fallows, I.G.; Beswick, Tyler. The minutes of last meeting were read and confirmed; Bro. Bray Shaw was passed to the degree of Fellow Craft, and Bro. Oldham was impressively raised to the sublime degree of a M.M. This being the first time many of the brethren had had an opportunity of hearing Bro. Knider work this beautiful ceremony; they were delighted, and the expression of pleasure at being present to hear the beautiful and impressive working was general throughout the lodge, and those brethren who were absent have been deprived of a Masonic treat. It is not often we have an opportunity of being present when a ceremony is so efficiently worked. The lodge is justly proud of possessing such an excellent worker as Bro. Knider, P.M., and whilst the lodge is supported by such brethren they have no fear of success. The lodge was then closed in the Third and Second Degrees. A communication was read from Grand Lodge. Hearty good wishes were given by Bros. J. H. Walton, Frontier Lodge, 422, Oswego, U.S. America; and J. B. Williams, No. 3, Cork, Ireland. The business being completed, the lodge was closed at 6.20 p.m. An excellent banquet was provided by the host, Bro. Potts, and presided over by Bro. J. W. Turner, I.P.M., the W.M. having to fulfil an engagement. On the removal of the cloth the Masonic toasts were proposed and heartily responded to. Bro. Caldwell, P.M., proposed "The Health of the W.M.," coupling with it the I.P.M., and remarked that as Instruction Master for the lodge it was very pleasing to him to see how well the working had been conducted since the establishment of the lodge, and if the brethren were always so successful in appointing such Masters they need not fear of the business being conducted to their satisfaction. To himself it was a particular pleasure to have seen the working of the ceremonies and the business of the lodge conducted in so able a manner as it had been by the W.M. and the I.P.M. In reply, the I.P.M. said it would be a great pleasure to have to inform his friend the W.M. of the great but well deserved praise bestowed upon him by Bro. Caldwell, and so enthusiastically responded to by the brethren. As for himself he said he had only done his duty, and if it had met with the approval of the brethren he was amply repaid; what he had done in the past he was willing to increase in the future. The next toast being that of "The Officers" was responded to severally. "The Visitors" was responded to by Bros. Williams and Walton, who expressed their pleasure at being present to see the beautiful working and the kindly feeling which existed in the lodge. The Senior and Junior Warden having given their toasts, the brethren separated after spending a very agreeable evening.

NORTH WOOLWICH.—HENLEY LODGE (No. 1472).—The usual monthly meeting of the above lodge took place on Tuesday evening, the 7th inst., at Bro. West's, the Three Crowns, the business before it being the raising of Bros. Elder, Cayley, and Little to the Sublime Degree. The following officers and brethren were present: B. B. Brayshaw, W.M. and P.M. of No. 1076; H. Sisley, P.M. and P.M. of No. 1076; J. Ives, S.W.; W. Steele, J.W.; W. T. Turner, acting S.D.; A. J. Manning, I.G.; W. Steadman, Tyler and P.M. No. 754; J. O. Cox, M. Stanford, F. Bingham, R. Williams, W. T. Dawson, 27; C. Jolly, 913, and others. The lodge having been opened in due form and with solemn prayer, and the usual business of its minutes duly passed, the candidates were, after the usual questions, raised in the most impressive manner by the W.M., his officers most ably assisting him in the ceremony. The lodge was then closed, and the brethren adjourned to a cold collation, to which the visitors were, as is usual with this most hospitable lodge, especially invited. The usual loyal and Masonic toasts were then duly honoured, and a most enjoyable evening was spent in harmony.

INSTRUCTION.

STRONG MAN LODGE OF INSTRUCTION (No. 45), was held at the Crown Tavern, Clerkenwell Green, September 6th, 1875. Present: Bros. Saul, W.M.; Stock, S.W.; Tolmie, J.W.; Read, S.D.; Walker, J.D.; Sparkes, I.G.; Killick, Sec.; Beckett, Preceptor; Christopher, Tyler, and a numerous gathering of the members. The lodge was opened in the usual manner, and the minutes of previous meeting read and confirmed. The ceremony of initiation rehearsed. Bro. Jones was candidate. The W.M. worked the First, Second, and Third Sections of the First Lecture, assisted by the brethren, and Bro. Tomie worked the Fourth, the questions being answered by the W.M. Bro. Sparkes was elected a joining member. Bro. Stock elected W.M. for the next meeting. The meetings of this lodge will in future be held at the Old Jerusalem Tavern, St. John's Gate, St. John's Square, Clerkenwell. All Masonic business being ended, the lodge was closed in ancient form and perfect harmony.

DALSTON LODGE OF INSTRUCTION (No. 975).—The usual weekly meeting of this lodge was held on the 8th inst., when the Fifteen Sections were worked for the first time in this lodge to celebrate its first anniversary. Bro. W. Gilchrist, P.M. 933, in the chair; Bro. Fieldwick, I.G. 1364, Senior Warden; Bro. Lee, W.M. 1524, J.W. 975, Junior Warden.

There was a large attendance of the brethren, who expressed themselves highly gratified at the skilful Masonic working of the W.M. and the brethren who supported him. Votes of thanks were unanimously given to the W.M. and to the visiting brethren for their services, and after several brethren had been elected joining members, the lodge was closed in ancient form and adjourned. This highly prosperous lodge of instruction, although only established twelve months, numbers over sixty members, and has been well attended every Wednesday evening throughout the past year, a fact which speaks well for the interest taken in our ancient Craft in Dalston and its neighbourhood.

LEYTONSTONE.—BEACONTREE LODGE OF INSTRUCTION (No. 1228).—On Tuesday, 7th inst., the inauguration meeting of this Lodge of Instruction, working under the charter of the Beacontree Lodge, was held at the Red Lion Inn, Leytonstone, when Bro. J. Terry, the esteemed Secretary of the Freemasons' Benevolent Institution was a visitor, as also Bro. W. H. Myers, F.S.A., P.M. 820, and W.M. 1445, both of whom contributed in a most important degree to the success of the meeting, as Bro. Terry undertook the important duty of reciting and explaining the ceremony of consecration, after which Bro. Myers performed the ceremony of installation. The working of both of these brethren was excellent, leaving nothing to be desired; and all the brethren present appeared greatly impressed and much gratified. The success of the meeting was beyond question, the brethren living in the neighbourhood applauding the formation of this lodge of instruction, and declaring their intention of giving it their earnest and what is more to the purpose—regular support. Bro. Barford, P.M. of the mother lodge was elected first W.M., and after installation appointed his officers as follows:—Bros. R. J. Tucker, S.W.; J. Boulton, J.W.; G. E. Walters; W. G. Durrant, S.D.; J. Buseall, J.D.; and W. Allen, I.G. The visitors were Bros. Musto, P.M. 1349; W. Hogg, 1349; J. Pinder, 1445; Rivite, 1421; Westfield, 813; King, 1056; W. W. Morgan, 385; L. Lewis, 1426; Burton, 548; Taplay, 1076; G. Lewis, 1076; Anning, 1364; and Massy ("Freemason"). When the lodge had been duly closed, the brethren present sat down to an excellent banquet, admirably served, and administered by extremely civil and attentive waiters, a feature in the programme which rendered the meal an extremely pleasant one. The cloth having been removed, the usual loyal and Masonic toasts were proposed by the W.M., and cordially responded to by the brethren present. During his remarks he adverted to a few speakers when they find occasion can withstand the temptation of advertising to the impressiveness of the ceremony and the spectacle of that unique occasion, the installation of H.R.H. the Prince of Wales. He also referred to the zeal displayed at the east end of London in propagating Freemasonry and promoting its interests, and added that he was extremely pleased to find that the M.W.G.M. had recognised this in promoting an east end brother to one of the Grand Offices. The Chairman: Brethren, The toast of the evening on which we assemble to inaugurate the Beacontree Lodge of Instruction, to give éclat to the formation of an institution which we consider to be necessary, and which we hope, by the way in which it shall be conducted, will be found an extremely useful and beneficial institution, is or ought to be "Success to the Beacontree Lodge of Instruction." (Cheers.) Those amongst us who are anxious to see all Freemasons intimately acquainted with the details of the working of Freemasonry—and I think that there are few amongst us who are not desirous of this—must feel that we owe a debt of gratitude to our esteemed Secretary, Bro. Walters, for all the trouble he has been at in getting together the necessary elements for constructing this little institution of ours. The brethren who honour us by being our visitors this evening cannot imagine, unless they have had some similar experience themselves, how great the trouble has been, and how very much in earnest a man has to be who intends to succeed in such a matter. It was by no means the work of a day or of weeks. I believe I am right when I say that it is nearly two years since our Bro. Walters first began "turning over the stones," if I may use the expression, and that during that time he has found it necessary to leave no stone unturned; so great is the amount of determination and persevering plodding work necessary to success in a matter of this kind. As regards the actual establishment of the lodge, nothing could be more auspicious than the opening we have. I cannot think the members could have had a better or more practical teaching of the usefulness of a lodge of instruction than that which has been given by Bro. Terry and Bro. Myers in the way the ceremonies of consecration and installation have been worked by them this evening. For, brethren, it only requires persevering study in a lodge of instruction to enable you one and all to become as familiar with the ceremonies as those two brethren are, whose skill we have so much admired this evening. Brethren, I shall conclude by proposing "Success to the Beacontree Lodge of Instruction," and I shall take the liberty of combining with it "The Health of Bro. G. E. Walters, our esteemed Secretary." He is a young Mason, but a very worthy one. Bro. Walters, in returning thanks for the honour which had been done to him, and his work at the same time, said that it was true it had taken a considerable amount of time and perseverance to enable him to get this lodge formed, but he was happy to say that the work was so far accomplished, and that it only now remained for them to combine to see the work so carried out as to make it a thoroughly useful institution. In thanking the W.M. and brethren for their cordial appreciation of his services, he heartily joined with them all in wishing "Success to the Beacontree Lodge of Instruction." "The Health of Bros. Terry and Myers, the Visitors, and Officers of the Lodge" were proposed from the chair and cordially responded to; and "The Health of the W.M." was proposed by Bro. Myers, who, having known him from a boy, could speak as to his excellent qualities. He congratulated the brethren on having so worthy a Master, and trusted that they would one and all endeavour to walk as worthily in the path of Freemasonry as Bro. Barford had done. Bro. Barford having returned thanks, the brethren separated, after a very pleasant evening with expressions of the best wishes for the success of this new lodge of instruction.

GLASGOW.—LODGE ST. JOHN (No. 34).—This most ancient and prosperous lodge met in their hall, 213, Buchanan-street, Glasgow, on Tuesday, the 7th inst., Bro. Wm. Bell, R.W.M., presiding; Bro. J. B. Young, S.W.; Bro. Brownlie, S.D., acting J.W.; and the remaining officers in their respective places. There were also present—Bros. McMillan, Craig and Park, Past Masters of the lodge; and D. M. Nelson, Depute Master; and as usual a large attendance of members of the lodge and visiting brethren, both of English and Scotch Constitutions. Representatives of the press—Bros. J. Stewart, G. B. Adams, W. H. Bickerton. The lodge was opened by Bro. Wm. Bell, R.W.M., and the minutes of regular meeting, also that of an emergency meeting, read and confirmed, after which letters of application were read from the following gentlemen for admission into Freemasonry, viz.:—Messrs. John Davidson, John McGill, and Wm. Anderson. There being no objection, the candidates entered and received the E.A. Degree, Bro. Wm. Bell, R.W.M., officiating in his usual impressive manner. The lodge was thereafter called from labour to refreshment, and the usual loyal and Masonic toasts given with great spirit. There were some excellent songs given, enlivened with music, and after a most enjoyable evening had been spent, the lodge was closed.

EDINBURGH.—LODGE JOURNEYMAN (No. 8).—A meeting of this lodge was held in their hall, situated at Blackfriars-street, on the 9th inst. Bro. Peter Sinclair, R.W.M., presided, and was supported by Bro. Andrew Kerr, P.M.; George Ronaldson, S.W.; Robt. Kerr, J.W.; W. Stevenson, J.D., &c. The meeting was well attended by the members of the lodge, and a number of visiting brethren were present. The lodge was opened in the E.A. Degree, when an amount of business was satisfactorily got through. An application from Mr. William Hurst was then read, asking for admittance into the Order. He was proposed by Bro. James Bryce, and seconded by Bro. James Stevenson. The application was sustained, and he was prepared, and received the First Degree, Bro. Kerr, P.M., officiating in that admirable style so peculiar to himself and satisfactory to the brethren. The case of a brother who had fallen into adverse circumstances was then brought before the lodge, and after a full explanation of his case was given, it was unanimously agreed to grant him a sum of money from the lodge Benevolent Fund, and also to assist him further in every way in their power. The question of new clothing was then arranged to the satisfaction of the brethren present, and the lodge closed in due and ancient form.

GLASGOW.—LODGE THISTLE AND ROSE (No. 73).—The regular meeting of this lodge was held in the Masonic Hall, 170, Buchanan-street, on the 7th inst., Bro. George McDonald, R.W.M., presided, and was supported by Bros. G. Weston, I.P.M.; John Bannerman, D.M.; W. Macgregor, S.W.; J. Hambridge, J.W.; James Amplford, Sec.; G. W. Wheeler, Chaplain; W. J. Rae, S.D., and others. The meeting was remarkably well attended. Among the visiting brethren we noticed Bros. J. McInnes, S.W. 408; Arthur, Mother Kilwinning; W. J. Herrin, St. John's Cupar, No. 19; G. Wrenock, Lindores 106, and others. The minutes of previous meeting were read by the Secretary and confirmed. An application was read from Mr. J. Bouker craving admittance into the Order. He was proposed by Bro. James Ballantyne, and seconded by Bro. G. McDonald, R.W.M. The application found favour with the brethren, and he was prepared and received the First Degree, the R.W.M. officiating. This constituted all the business in this degree, when the lodge was passed to the F.C., and raised to the Sublime Degree. Two brothers of the F.C. Degree were brought forward to receive the M.M., which was given with great effect by the worthy R.W.M. This finished the evening. The brothers who received the Third Degree were Thomas Brown and Joseph Deas. The lodge was then closed in due and ancient form.

GLASGOW.—LODGE THISTLE (No. 87).—The regular meeting of this lodge was held in the [Freemasons' Hall, 30, Hope-street, on the 7th inst., at 8 o'clock, J. W. Burns, R.W.M., presided, supported by Bros. J. Fraser, P.M.; J. Miller, P.M.; James Love, S.M.; James Booth, S.W.; William Wilson, J.W.; D. McDougall, Sec.; D. W. Stewart, S.D., and others. The meeting was exceedingly well attended, among the visiting brethren were Bros. Stark, D.M. 553; P. Hepburn; J.W. 187; S. Sive-wright, J.W. Lodge Dramatic, 571, and others. The R.W.M., with the assistance of his Wardens, opened the lodge on the First Degree and called upon the Secretary to read the minutes of the previous meeting, which were confirmed, as were also the minutes of emergency meeting which took place between the two regular meetings. The R.W.M. then said, the members of the lodge were aware that the office of I.G. had become vacant, as this was too important an office to be left unfilled, he would be glad to hear if any of the brethren present had anyone to nominate. Several brethren present were mentioned as having his qualification for the vacant office, among whom were Bro. Barr, who was elected, and also installed into office by Bro. John Fraser, P.M., and P.G. Assist. Director of Ceremonies. An application was then read from Mr. Peter Troup for admission into the Order; he was proposed by Bro. J. Love, S.M., and seconded by Bro. D. McDougall, Sec., his application was approved, and he was initiated into the First Degree by the R.W.M. A letter from the R.W.M. of Lodge Dramatic 571, was then read, asking the favour from Lodge Thistle of giving the F.C. Degree to Bro. A. W. Bales on behalf of the lodge Dramatic, which was at once complied with, Bro. Miller, P.M. of the Thistle Lodge, working the degree with all the full impressive solemnity this beautiful degree calls forth when properly given. There was no further business before the lodge, and it was closed in due and ancient form.

GLASGOW.—LODGE SCOTIA (No. 178).—An emergency meeting of this lodge was held in the Freemasons' Hall, 170, Buchanan-street, on the 6th inst. Bro. Singleton, R.W.M., presided, and was supported by Bros. Matheson, P.M.; Gardner, S.W.; J. Gilmour, J.W.; and a competent number of well qualified brethren present. The object of the meeting was to initiate, pass, and raise three gentlemen, all of whom were engaged in seafaring pursuits, and consequently their time for attending the regular meeting uncertain. The names of the gentlemen are James Wilson, Fred. Larson, and Antna West, their proposers and seconders, Bros. Gardner and McAlpine. Bro. Matheson, P.M., officiated in the First Degree, the remaining work before the meeting being ably performed by Bro. Singleton, R.W.M., entrusting the three brothers with the Sublime Degree finished the business of the meeting, and the lodge was closed in due and ancient form.

GLASGOW.—LODGE SCOTIA (No. 178).—The regular meeting of this lodge was held on the 8th inst., in the Freemasons' Hall, 170, Buchanan-street. Bro. J. Singleton, R.W.M., presided, and was supported by Bros. Matheson, P.M.; Thomas Russell, D.M.; R. Gardner, S.W.; P. Hepburn, J.W.; W. Higgins, Chaplain; W. King, Treas.; P. Denman, acting Sec.; and others. The meeting was well attended, and the visiting brethren numerous. The lodge was opened in the First Degree, and the minutes of previous meeting read and confirmed. After some business of an ordinary character was arranged, the lodge was passed to the Second Degree, when Bro. R. F. Boyd was entrusted with it, the R.W.M. officiating. It was then announced that Mr. George Pettigrew, whose application for admittance into the Order had been before the lodge and passed, was in the adjacent room. He was proposed by Bro. P. Hepburn, and seconded by Bro. J. Singleton, R.W.M. The lodge was then reduced to the E.A. Degree, and the candidate was initiated, Bro. Matheson, P.M., officiating. The lodge was then called to harmony, when a very pleasant and profitable hour was spent, after which the lodge was closed in due and ancient form.

GLASGOW.—LODGE UNION (No. 332).—The regular meeting of this lodge was held in the Freemasons' Hall, 170, Buchanan-street, on the 6th inst. The R.W.M. (who was in his own place to open the lodge at the appointed hour) was well supported. There was a large attendance of the members and visiting brethren, and the office-bearers present acted their parts with their usual ability. The R.W.M., Bro. J. B. Macnair, took the chair; Bro. Murray, acting S.W.; J. McInnes, the worthy Sec. of the lodge, acting J.W.; J. Law, Treas. The minutes of the lodge were read, considered and confirmed. The case of a brother who had met with adversity was brought up. The members present seemed to take a deep interest in the brother, and his case was met in that true spirit of brotherly love and charity which adorns our order. An application from Bro. Birrell, wishing to become an affiliated member of this lodge, was made. His brother is an old member of the lodge, and has filled various offices in it with great satisfaction to the members, so that, along with Bro. Birrell's known good character as a Mason, gained him admittance into the lodge as a member. There was no further business in this degree, and the lodge was passed to the F.C., and hence to the Sublime Degree, when Bro. Gill was proved and found worthy to receive this, which was given by Bro. Macnair, R.W.M., with his accustomed precision and impressiveness. This finished the business of the evening, and the lodge was closed in due and ancient form.

GLASGOW.—LODGE ST. GEORGE (No. 333).—The regular meeting of this lodge was held in the Freemasons' Hall (St. Mark's) 213, Buchanan-street, on the 8th inst. In the absence of Bro. Alex. Thomson, R.W.M., Bro. J. Winton, P.M., presided. Bros. J. Findley, S.M.; J. Forsyth, S.W.; R. Anderson, J.W. The meeting was well attended. On the lodge being opened, the minutes of the previous meeting were read and confirmed, and other formal business settled. An application from Mr. David Allan Arnot was read for admittance into the Order, his proposer and seconder being Bros. J. M. Crosher and Edward Crosher. The application was sustained, and the gentleman received the First Degree of Freemasonry, P.M. J. Winton, officiating. The business before the lodge being finished, it was closed in due and ancient form.

GLASGOW.—LODGE ST. ANDREW (No. 465).—A large number of the brethren of this lodge met at Bro. Smart's on the 17th inst., under the presidency of Bro. Andrew Herron, to take farewell of Bro. Andrew Thomson, who is about to leave this country for New Zealand, and to wish him prosperity in the country of his adoption, and to present him with a mark of the esteem in which he is held by the brethren he leaves behind him. The presentation was a very handsome Master Mason's Jewel with suitable inscription. Bro. D. Anderson presented the jewel in a speech of great feeling. A very pleasant evening was spent amidst harmony and kind feeling towards the brother about to leave, and the company broke up much pleased with the night's enjoyment.

PARTICK.—PARTICK CHAPTER (No. 613).—The annual trip of the companions of this chapter took place on Friday week. The chapter, largely represented, left the burgh at an early hour in the morning, and, proceeding to Glasgow, took the train to Dollar, where the party breakfasted at Castle Campbell Hotel. They afterwards had a most enjoyable couple of hours' walk in the romantic and beautiful glen, and were afterwards conveyed to Rumbling Bridge, returning to Dollar about three o'clock, where "mine host" of the Castle Campbell had dinner prepared. Bro. Halket occupied the chair, and Bro. Thomas Granger discharged the duties of Croupier. After a number of toasts had been proposed, the chairman gave a most interesting address on the history and antiquity of the scenery they had just viewed. The party returned to the burgh in the evening, very highly pleased with the day's enjoyment.

ROSSLYN ROYAL ARCH CHAPTER (No. 119).—The regular monthly meeting of the above chapter was held in the Masonic Hall, Robertson-street, on Monday, the 6th inst. A lodge of Mark Masons was opened. Minutes of last meeting having been read and confirmed, an application from Bro. James Strong, Master Mason of Lodge St. Mungo, No. 27, for admission into Royal Arch Masonry was unanimously agreed to. The brother being in attendance was admitted, and received the degree of Mark Master, Bro. George Thallin, Z. of the chapter, officiating in his usual impressive and intelligent manner. There being no further business before the lodge it was closed in due form.

NEW PUBLIC SCHOOLS IN KILWINNING.

The following circular has been issued by Bro. R. Wylie, Secretary of Mother Kilwinning Lodge:—

Dear Sir and Brother,—

I have to inform you that on the invitation of the School Board of Kilwinning, the R.W.P.G. Master, Bro. Colonel Mure, has consented to lay the Memorial Stone of the New Public Schools with Masonic honours, on Saturday, the 25th inst., when your attendance is particularly requested.

The brethren are to assemble in the Kilwinning Temperance Hall, at quarter before three o'clock afternoon.

The Provincial Grand Lodge of Ayrshire will be opened at quarter past four o'clock precisely.

The members and friends will dine in the Eglinton Arms Hall at half-past four o'clock. Dinner ticket 4s.

As only a limited number can be accommodated perhaps you will kindly say before Thursday, the 23rd inst., if we may expect the pleasure of your company.

I remain, faithfully and fraternally yours,

ROBERT WYLIE,

Secretary.

Mother Lodge,
Kilwinning, 9th Sept., 1875.

Bro. Robert A. Carleton died on the 10th inst., at the Royal National Hospital for Consumption and Diseases of the Chest, Ventnor, Undercliff, Isle of Wight, aged 49. He was for many years resident in Constantinople, and Grand Secretary of Freemasons for the District of Turkey.—"Standard."

PROVINCIAL GRAND LODGE OF SOMERSETSHIRE.

The Provincial Grand Lodge of the Province of Somerset was invested this year with peculiar interest, the death of the Deputy Prov. Grand Master, Capt. Bridges, and the elevation of the P.G.S., Bro. Else, having changed two of the chief permanent appointments. As a consequence, there was a large attendance of Masons at the meeting on Monday, and to receive them Lodge 446 had prepared special accommodation by flooring over the Nisi Prius Court on the level of the Grand Jury Gallery. The capacious room thus formed was entirely filled, and when Grand Lodge was assembled, with the Right Hon. the Earl of Carnarvon, Pro Grand Master of England, on the throne, the scene was lively and brilliant. After the usual preliminary Masonic business and a statement of Grand Lodge accounts, showing a direct expenditure upon charity of no less than £136, and a balance of £119 to Grand Lodge funds, the P.G.M. directed Bro. Else to retire, and five of the oldest W.M.'s in the province to introduce him for investment as Deputy Grand Master, in the place of our deceased brother, Capt. Bridges. This having been done, the P.G.M. invested Bro. Else, saying he did so not only with pleasure to himself, but he was sure he might say also with the acquiescence and concurrence of all in that great province. "Under ordinary circumstances," continued the Pro G.M., "I should have closed here, but within the last few minutes a jewel has been placed in my hands, and it affords me great satisfaction that I now hand it you with confidence that it will be worn with credit to the province, and with satisfaction to yourself."

The new Deputy Prov. Grand Master said: Sincerely, very sincerely, do I return thanks to your lordship for the great honour you have been pleased to confer upon me, and also for the kind and graceful manner in which you have been good enough to convey to me the wish that I should succeed our late beloved and distinguished Deputy G.M. I am not insensible to, although I highly appreciate the honour of the position in the duties, the great responsibilities, and the difficulties of the office; I pray that the Great Architect may give me health and strength so to carry out those duties that no shadow of regret will ever pass over your lordship's mind for having placed this collar round my neck. I thank also most heartily my mother lodge, 291, for this beautiful jewel. Although I wear several jewels upon my breast, which I hope I am not wrong in saying I have earned by Masonic work, there is no jewel which I prize like this—there is no reward which any Mason should prize more than the recognition of his services, however humble, by his own mother and parent lodge. I thank you, my lord, and brethren, most sincerely and heartily.

Bro. Turner Payne, of Bath (who was unavoidably detained for an hour), having been heartily re-elected Treasurer, the G.M. proceeded to appoint the P.G.L. Officers as follows:—

Major J. W. Preston, P.M. 41	Prov. G.S.W.
Capt. Alfred T. Perkins, W.M. 446	Prov. G.J.W.
Rev. T. Bailey, 261	Prov. G. Chaplain.
Rev. Thomas James Gatehouse, 437	Prov. G. Chaplain.
E. Turner Payne, P.M. 53	Prov. G. Treas.
W. Cox, P.M. 329	Prov. G. Reg.
Francis R. Pridaux, P.M. 291	Prov. G. Sec.
W. H. May, P.M. 135	Prov. G.S.D.
William Bennett, W.M. 976	Prov. G.J.D.
Benjamin Attwell, P.M. 537	Prov. G.S. Wks.
T. S. Lord, P.M. 53	Prov. G.D. Cer.
Robert Baker, P.M. 1197	Prov. G. As. D.C.
Capt. William Long, P.M. 1199	Prov. G.S.B.
Albert Down, P.M. 772	Prov. G. Org.
William Channing, P.M. 261	Prov. G. Purst.
John Thorley Night, P.M. 446	Prov. G.A.P.
W. H. Forty, W.M. 291	Prov. G. Stewd.
George Ricks, W.M. 135	Prov. G. Stewd.
John Fry, W.M. 437	Prov. G. Stewd.
A. W. Butler, S.W. 1222	Prov. G. Stewd.
T. Hyatt, J.W. 285	Prov. G. Stewd.
H. J. Taylor, S.D. 772	Prov. G. Stewd.
William Woodard, Tyler 291	Prov. G. Tyler.
Alfred John Salter, Tyler 53	Prov. G.A. Tyler

The W.M. Pro G.M. then said: On these occasions, as I have often said, I think it is undesirable to make long speeches, but there are certain events which from time to time pass, which are either matters of congratulation or regret, and which interest all of us as a common body, and it does seem that when such an occasion arises it is not fitting it should be passed over in complete silence. One of those events has just taken place. We have lost in this province one who was not only familiar to us, but was endeared to us by his personal character, his long service, and his great Masonic abilities. For very many years our brother, Captain Bridges, who filled the office of Deputy Prov. Grand Master, carried through his work with zeal and energy, and with great fidelity. When, a good many years ago now, I received the honour of the high office which I have since held in this province, I found Captain Bridges the Deputy Grand Master. He was then in comparatively full possession of health. Unremitting in work, he never spared himself, I may truly say, any pain or trouble in the discharge of that work. In time, when illness laid its heavy hand upon him, and during the last few years, we all saw with great regret his strength failing; that he was no longer equal to take on himself those duties which he had hitherto discharged with so much facility; not that his interest in them slackened, for to the very last his thoughts were interested in Masonry. If there was any one who was emphatically a true and zealous Mason it was our brother whose death we now deplore, and it does seem to me that when one who has lived so long, held so high an office, discharged, during the days of his health and strength, his work with so much energy and ability; who when sickness incapacitated him from that great work, still followed us with his sympathy and thoughts—it does seem to me we cannot do less than express our regret in the most deliberate and solemn way at the first of these annual meetings after the melancholy event. Therefore, without using many words, what I would propose to do is to express my own regret, and the extreme regret which I am convinced animates the whole of those present, in the most solemn and deliberate way. I therefore propose a resolution in these terms:—

"That this Prov. G. L. desires to place upon record its great sorrow at the death of its beloved and esteemed V. W. D. G. M., Captain H. Bridges, and deep sense of the loss which Freemasonry has sustained thereby."

I think I shall be interpreting the feelings of this Prov. Grand Lodge if, instead of asking for any seconder or show of hands, without putting it to the vote I ask you to express your concurrence.

The P. G. T., Brother Payne, having entered the hall in the interim, then returned thanks for the honour done him by re-appointment, and then introduced a resolution, which stood in his name, of congratulation to Brother Else as the new D. Prov. G. M. He could not call to mind any brother on whom more worthily could be bestowed or who would more unanimously receive this honour, than Brother Else. He had now for ten years carried on the business of Prov. G. L., and during that time the failing health of the Deputy threw on him, not only all his own duties, but the duties of Deputy Grand Master as well. He need say nothing of the way in which he had done his work—that was shown by the honour that had been bestowed upon him. There was no need to mention his unflinching zeal, his energy, the concentrated interest which he had shown in his work, and which had so well marked him out for further honours. To speak of these things would almost seem to indicate that something need to be said. The appointment was one which in the hands of his Lordship, received the unanimous approval of the province at large. Bro. Payne concluded with the following resolution:—

"That this Prov. G. L. receives with cordial assent and hearty congratulations the appointment by the R. W., the Prov. G. M. of Somerset, the Rt. Hon. the Earl of Carnarvon, M.W. Pro. G. M. of their esteemed Bro. R. C. Else, to be D. Prov. G. M., of Somerset, in the room of their lamented friend and brother, Capt. Henry Bridges, deceased. The labours of Bro. Else on behalf of the Province during many years are thus gracefully acknowledged, and the Prov. G. L. trusts that many years of usefulness may be granted to their valued brother in the more important office to which he has now been promoted."

The Prov. Grand Master said: It is my extremely pleasing duty to put this proposal to the vote, but I shall not be exceeding the limits of the observations which should fall from the chair if I say, confident of the way in which it will be received, for one, give it my hearty support. I am not unwilling to say one or two words up in it. In the appointments which are so fully entrusted to the Prov. Grand Master it is always a question of some anxiety to feel assured that the appointments which he has made are ratified by the voice of the province. In more than any other case it is desirable that in the case of the Deputy Grand Master, he should not only confer honour and distinction upon the person most fitting to receive it, but also on whom the province recognises as the most fitting to receive it, and when those two things go together in the mind of the Prov. Grand Master, as directing his choice, it is obviously a very happy and satisfactory feeling, and I do not fail to think it is so upon the present occasion. (Cheers). The province is fully and fairly represented here on this subject to-day. As far as I am concerned, I am quite certain I have placed this day the collar upon the neck of the man who, in the estimation of the Prov. G. Lodge, was most fitted to wear it. But I will not stop here, for I will say, if I had not Bro. Else, there are many men whom I might have selected, with regard to whom my choice would have been a good one, and would have been ratified by you to-day. And it is well for a province when such is the case, and when a single man does not make an irreparable gap. We rejoice that here, as in England generally, no man's life is so valuable that he cannot be spared. But we do rejoice when the choice which it is the privilege of one individual to make, is endorsed promptly and heartily by the full voice of the whole province. (Cheers). I rejoice at this for many reasons. I have been thrown into constant habits of business familiarities with Bro. Else. I know he did his work; how well he did it; how thoroughly he did it—that is not a mere profession of doing the work, but that it is actually done, and nothing has fallen more truly from any one than that which was uttered by Bro. Payne when he said that during the illness of the late Bro. Bridges the principal work of the province fell on the shoulders of our Bro. Else. And he carried it like a second Atlas! He never flinched under it; whatever trouble he might have given him or work imposed upon him, I always found there was an undeveloped capacity for work still latent in him. (Cheers) And my motto in this matter is

"Palmarum qui meruit ferat."

Let the man who does the work bear the honour and distinction. (Loud applause.) Acting upon that principle, I did not for one moment hesitate to confer this distinction upon our Bro. Else, and I hope and trust he will continue to enjoy it for many years to come—that, whilst I have the privilege of presiding over the province as Prov. G. Master, I may still receive from him the same free, full, zealous, unstinted, measure of help which I have had for so many years. (Loud applause.)

The motion having been agreed to with acclamation, Bro. Else again returned thanks, in a suitable speech, for the honour done him.

W. Bro. Captain A. Perkins, W.M. 446, proposed—"That a subscription be set on foot in the province to provide a memorial to our late V.W.D.P.G.M., Bro. H. Bridges, the memorial to take the form of a scholarship at one of the Masonic schools, should the subscription be to a sufficient amount, or such other form as the Prov. Grand Lodge may decide upon;" and at the suggestion of the M.W.P.G.M. the following words were added:—"And that the Charity Organisation Committee be requested to consider the subject and take any steps they may deem expedient in regard to this object." The resolution was carried. Some other formal business was then disposed of, including sundry charitable grants, and brought the business to a close.

The brethren then proceeded to the banquetting hall, where a splendid repast was served by Bro. F. C. George, 446, of the Swan Hotel, Wells, to which about 140 brethren sat down, the R.W. the P.G.M. presiding, and being supported by the newly-appointed D.P.G.M., W. Bro. R. C. Else, V.W. Bro. S. G. Homfray, A.G.D. of C., D.P.G.M. (Monmouth); W. Bro. Major S. H. Clenke, P.G.S.W. (Devon); Bro. H. Lopes, M.P., S.W. 973; General Doherty, C.B., P. Prov. G.S.W. Somt.; W. Bro. F. Binckes, P.G.S. Eng.; W. Bro. W. R. Wood, P.G.S. Eng.; R.W. General Gore Munbee, P. Prov. G.S.W. Somt.; and the newly-appointed G.P. Officers.

The two ends of the horseshoe table were presided over by the Provincial Grand Wardens, W. Bro. Major Preston, and W. Bro. A. T. Perkins.

The haunch of venison at the banquet was sent by Lord Carnarvon.

After the claims of hunger had been appeased, the usual loyal and Masonic toasts were given and heartily responded to.

General Doherty, P.P.G.S.W., proposed in eloquent terms the health of the R.W. the P.G.M., the Earl of Carnarvon, remarking that this was the first time this province had had the opportunity of personally congratulating him upon the distinction conferred on him by the Prince of Wales on the 28th of April last, by appointing him Pro Grand Master of England, and how cordially every Mason in Somersetshire did so. With his Lordship's health he also coupled the healths of the D.G.M., Lord Skelmersdale, and the rest of the Grand Officers, past and present.

His Lordship returned thanks in feeling and suitable terms.

Major Shadwell H. Clerke, P.P.G.S.W., Devon, proposed the next toast, which was "The newly-installed D.P.G.M. of Somerset, and the rest of the P.G. Officers past and present." He congratulated the province on the appointment of Bro. Else, as D.P.G.M.; a brother whose merits were so well known in the province, that any repetition of them would appear at the present moment to be superfluous. He would therefore content himself with saying that Bro. Else's name and character, as an enthusiastic and untiring worker for the Craft, was widely known, and highly respected in every province in England. Major Clerke continued to remark that it afforded him peculiar pleasure to be present on this occasion, to witness the investment into the high and honourable office of Junior Grand Warden of the Province, of a very old friend and brother officer of his, namely, Captain Alfred Perkins, and who had, by exertions in the province, so worthily earned the honour he had now received. In conclusion, he said that although unfortunately he was a stranger to many of the new Provincial Grand Officers, still, he was fully aware that they were brethren who had well deserved the position to which they had just attained, and in wishing the province every success in the future, he begged to congratulate W. Bro. Else on the high appointment he had that day received, and the province of Somerset on having so true and trusty a brother as their New D.P.G.M.

Bro. Else, in responding to the toast, thanked Bro. Clerke for the kind and flattering remarks he had made, and said that the services he had rendered the province for the last ten years as P.G. Secretary, would still be continued with even greater pleasure as D.P.G.M. and for himself and his fellow officers he returned his sincere and hearty thanks for the reception which had that day been accorded him.

Lord Carnarvon being obliged to leave the chair, it was assumed by W. Bro. Else, who proceeded to propose the next toast, which was "The Health of the D.P.G.M., of Monmouth, who had come strongly supported by the brethren of his province, and had rendered great assistance in the proceedings of the day. Bro. Homfray was one of those brethren who had been especially singled out for distinction on the occasion of the installation of H.R.H. the Prince of Wales, and on that occasion had been appointed A.G.D.C. Bro. Else congratulated him on his well-earned honours, and assured him and the brethren of his province, of the hearty welcome they would at all times receive in the neighbouring Province of Somerset.

Bro. S. George Homfray responded, and thanked the D.P.G.M., for the compliment paid his province by the special notice taken of them. Although unknown to most of the Province of Somerset, still their late D.P.G.M., Bro. Bridges, was his father in Masonry, and had trained him in the Craft, and his loss was not only a serious one to the Province of Somerset, but also to the G.L. of England, which he had the honour to represent. Bro. Homfray congratulated the province on Bro. Else's appointment, and, as the D.P.G.M. of a neighbouring province, could promise him every support and assistance, if required.

W. Bro. Else next proposed "The Health of Bro. H. G. Lopes, S.W., of No. 973, and M.P. for Frome," who responded in suitable terms.

The next toast was "The W.M. of No. 446, W. Bro. Capt. A. S. Perkins, and the Officers and Brethren of the Lodge." The D.P.G.M. in giving this toast, said that it gave the brethren of the province great pleasure to visit the Benevolent Lodge, and he took this opportunity of thanking the W.M. and brethren for their reception of the Prov. G.L., and for the hospitality they had shewn them on this occasion. He felt especially glad that Lord Carnarvon had elected their W.M. for the office of P.G.J.W., as he could see by the reception given to the province by his lodge this day, that the appointment was a most appropriate one, and he felt sure that at the end of W. Bro. Perkins's term of office, he would hand over his lodge in the same efficient state to which he had now brought it.

W. Bro. Capt. Perkins, in returning thanks, said that he was proud and glad to see the large number of brethren of the province who had come to visit his lodge this day, and in the name of his lodge he offered them a hearty welcome to the ancient City of Wells. He specially welcomed those distinguished visitors who he saw supporting the D.G. Master, and would now take this opportunity of returning thanks for the high office to which he had been this day appointed, and to his old friend and comrade, Major Clerke, for the very kind way he had spoken of him, when proposing the health of the P.G. Officers. He was happy to state that his lodge was in a most flourishing condition, and he hoped that he had been able to keep up its ancient fame during his term as Master, and trusted to hand it over in as good a state as he had himself received it.

W. Bro. E. Turner Payne, P.G. Treasurer, proposed "The W.M.s and Officers of the other Lodges in the Province," which was replied to by W. Bro. M. Messiter, W.M. of the Frome Lodge.

The toast of "The Visiting Brethren" was given by W. Bro. Else, and W. Bro. Wood replied in a humorous and amusing speech.

The D.P.G.M. proposed as the next toast "Those Institutions which were the pride of every Mason; those Charitable Schools and Asylums which were supported by the Craft, and which afforded a home for so many aged men and women and education for their children." He was pleased to see Bro. Binckes here to-day. He was one who had given up much of his time to these institutions, and as the Secretary of the Boys' School he would call upon him to return thanks.

Bro. Binckes, in returning thanks, said he was glad to have this opportunity of speaking in this province. At the last festival their P.G.M. presided, and it was owing to his exertions, that the magnificent sum of £12,000 had been subscribed on that occasion, the largest sum that had ever been brought up at one meeting, and the province of Somerset alone brought, through their stewards, Bros. Else, Doherty, and Gagne, the handsome sum of £500, the largest sum subscribed by one province. Bro. Binckes proceeded to give some account of the working, &c., of the Boys' School, and expressed a hope that its present prosperity might long continue.

After the Tyler's toast had been given and responded to, the brethren broke up, having enjoyed a most pleasant and successful meeting.

PROVINCIAL GRAND LODGE OF DORSETSHIRE.

The Grand Lodge of the Province of Dorsetshire assembled on Thursday, the 2nd inst., at the Town Hall, Wareham, when there was a large attendance of past and present provincial officers, and representatives from nearly all the thirteen lodges in the county. The inhabitants of Dorset have frequently been held up to a great disadvantage when compared with the residents of larger counties, and though often the criticisms have been unfair, yet, by the local press they have been often allowed to pass for what they are worth. Masonry boasts of being an universal institution. On members of the Craft the sun ever shines with noon-tide splendour, because in every part of the habitable globe Masonic lodges are to be found. Whilst this is the case it is also a fact that nowhere have the principles of true Masonry been better carried out than in the little county of Dorset with its thirteen lodges and five Royal Arch Chapters. If proof is demanded we may cite the fact that the sum taken up for the Masonic Institution for Boys last year, by the two Dorset Stewards was over £1,000, being nearly one-twelfth of the whole collected in the country; and of this large contribution Bro. H. C. Burt, P.M. 622, Wimborne, collected £633 3s., an amount only exceeded by the West Riding of Yorkshire as the result of the labours of its twenty-seven stewards. The amount taken in by Bro. Montague, D.P.G.M., was £368 11s. All the lodges in the province are in good working order, and yearly increasing in numerical strength and Masonic activity. This happy condition of the province is very largely owing to the zealous exertions of Bro. T. Coombs, of Dorchester, who for years has made Freemasonry his relaxation from professional work. The incident of the present annual meeting has been the retirement of Bro. T. Coombs from the secretarial office he has held with so much advantage to the Craft and to those objects of benevolence with which Masonry is so particularly identified. Nothing could exceed the kind feeling shown by the brethren when mention of Bro. Coombs's retirement was made, and better fortune, better health, and a renewal at no distant time of his active participation in the direction of the province was the hearty wish of both Provincial Chapter and Provincial Lodge.

The lodge having been opened in ample form, Bro. the Rev. H. Pix, Prov. G. Chaplain, delivered an address. He remarked in the outset that their obligations as English Masons were not opposed to or inconsistent with their obligations as Christians; and proceeded to enlarge on the advantage of making known as widely as possible their Masonic principles so far as that was not inconsistent with Masonic vows. The common idea of Masonry was that it was a secret society, whose transactions in lodge would not bear the light, and, in other countries, that their meetings were frequently held for factious purposes, and even plots and conspiracies. They knew how untrue were these notions; that religion and politics were not named in their meetings, but he thought they would be acting wisely by ventilating the principles embodied in the published Book of Constitutions. The ancient charges were not to be kept secret, but to be read and studied, and he thought if they were more widely known they would silence many of the objections put forward by those of the outer world. He concluded by commending the brethren not only to study for themselves this book, but to spread among the uninitiated its lofty maxims as a means of warding off the accusations of ignorant men.

On the motion of the Prov. Grand Master, a vote of thanks was passed to Bro. Pix by acclamation.

The R.W. Prov. G. Master then addressed the brethren on the state of the province, congratulating them that the improvement in regard to the charities reported last year had been continued, for a larger amount had been contributed to the Masonic Charities in the past twelve months than in any previous year (applause) not only that, but the subscriptions to the Boys' Institution, carried up by Bro. H. C. Burt, of Wimborne, amounted to more than any other list, excepting that for the western division of Yorkshire. The fact spoke strongly for the popularity of Bro. H. C. Burt in the province and for the liberality of the Craft. Bro. Montagu took up a large sum on the same occasion, and the two lists combined made considerably more than even the Yorkshire contributions of which he had spoken. They must all feel very grateful to those two Stewards, and might well be proud of their province proving not only capable but willing to subscribe so handsomely. It showed that the true spirit of Masonry was vivid amongst them, and indicated the strength of their position in regard to the charities. In illustration he mentioned the triumphant election of a son of the late Captain Barrett, and the failure only to secure young Green's election through the bad faith of a person who had borrowed votes to be returned at that election, but which were used against our candidates. He referred in congratulatory terms to the resuscitation of Wareham Lodge, 386, by the exertions of Bros. Budden and Wyndham and the brethren of Wimborne Lodge, and hoped that it would become one of the most flourishing in the province. After referring to other topics of purely Masonic interest, he concluded by speaking of the success which had attended the concentration of the voting power of the province and to advocate its closer application. The good management of the province had been largely due to the eminent abilities and zealous exertions of their Bro. T. Coombs, and he was much grieved that circumstances had arisen which had let him to relinquish the position of P.G.S. which he had so ably and devotedly filled. He should have an opportunity of alluding to the subject presently, but he could not allow it to pass without mention in his address to the lodge.

The Acting Secretary (Bro. R. Case) then read a letter from W. Bro. T. Coombs resigning the Secretaryship, and it was received with very deep regret by the entire lodge:—

The P.G. Master said he was sure they all joined with him in his feelings of sympathy and regret on the resignation of Bro. Coombs. Through his abilities and exertions the province had been raised to its present eminent position, and he was sure they all greatly deplored that circumstances, over which to a great extent he believed Bro. Coombs had no control, should have rendered it necessary—for a time at least—that he should sever his active connection with the province. (Applause). He had kept them in a state of order and prosperity, and it would be difficult, if not impossible, to fill his place. Personally Bro. Coombs had been of very great assistance to himself as G.M., advising and aiding in all the questions that necessarily arose. He proposed—"That a very cordial and heartfelt vote of thanks be given to W. Bro. Thomas Coombs on his retiring from the office of Grand Secretary to this province after sixteen years of unremitting services, during which time by his untiring energy and zeal for Masonry, he brought both the old and the new lodges of the province into regular working order, and conducted the important duties of his office to the entire satisfaction of this P.G. Lodge; and that this P.G. Lodge whilst sincerely regretting that in deference to the wishes of his friends and medical advisers Bro. Coombs has resigned his office, would record their earnest hope that his absence from amongst them may be but of temporary duration, and beg to express their firm belief that for the benefit of Freemasonry in general and of this P.G.L. in particular, his presence at future meetings will be of great importance (Applause).

W. Bro. Montagu, D.P.G.M., seconded the motion.

At the suggestion of Bro. Crickmay, supported by Bro. W. Smith, it was added to the motion that the resolution be engrossed on vellum and forwarded to Bro. Coombs.

The motion was carried with acclamation.

The G. Master announced that the annual P.G. Lodge would be held at Shaftesbury.

Bro. the Rev. W.M. Heath seconded, and it was carried.

W. Bro. Montagu proposed "That the thanks of this Prov. G.L. be rendered to W. Bro. Wm. Smith, P.M., 170, Prov. G.J.W., and W. Bro. H. C. Burt, P.M. 622, P. Prov. G.A.D.C., for undertaking and executing the office of Stewards from this province on the occasion of the installation of H.R.H. the Prince of Wales as M.W.G.M. on the 28th April last, and that for this and their other constant, ready, and good services to the Craft in general, and this province in particular, and as a token of appreciation thereof, the Prov. G.L. do present these brethren with the commemorative jewels sanctioned to be worn by those who acted as Stewards on that occasion, and that a sum not exceeding £10 be expended out of the funds of the Prov. G. Lodge for that purpose."

Bro. the Rev. H. Pix seconded, and it was carried.

The G.M. affixed the jewels amid the applause of the brethren.

The Pro G. Master proposed—"Thanks of this Prov. G. Lodge are pre-eminently due and are hereby rendered to W. Bro. H. C. Burt, P.M. 622 for his exertions as Steward from this Province, for the R.M. Institution for Boys, which enabled him to present a list at the festival of that charity in July last, with donations amounting to £633 3s., an amount only exceeded by that from West Yorkshire, the result of the labours of 17 Stewards. That the thanks of the province are also due to W. Bro. Montagu, D. Prov. G.M., who attended the festival as Steward from the Lodge of Friends in Council, 1383, London, carrying in a list of donations and subscriptions amounting to £368 11s. in the whole, whereof the sum of £194 5s. was from Dorset contributors, and the thanks of the province are rendered to him accordingly."

Bro. M. Guest, S.W., seconded.

Bro. F. Binckes, Secretary of the Boys' Institution, personally, and on the part of the trustees, members, and committee of that charity, expressed heartfelt thanks for the large amount of support those brethren had obtained for it.

The motion was cordially adopted.

Bro. Montagu, responding, stated that in 1864, in the province of Dorset, they only had 22 votes for the Girls' Institution, and 10 of them belonged to Bro. Vernon, who was not a member of this province, and now they had 216 votes. (Applause). For the Boys' Institution in 1865, Dorset had 42 votes, this year 904. (Applause). In 1873 they had for the Benevolent Institution 181 votes, and now they were 224. Good progress had been made, and he hoped they should go on till they were able to carry at each election an old man, a woman, a girl, and a boy. (Applause).

Bro. H. C. Burt also replied, and expressed thanks for the support he received.

The Prov. G. Master appointed and invested his officers for the ensuing year as follows. A dispensation had been received from the Grand Lodge for the appointment of Bro. Fane Bennet-Stanford, M.P., as that gentleman resides out of the province.

Vere Fane Bennet-Stanford, W.M. 472	Prov. G.S.W.
H. C. Burt, 622	Prov. G.W.
Rev. W. J. E. Percy, P.G. 473	Prov. G. Chap.
J. T. Davies, 1168	Prov. G. Reg.
Cam Sykes, 477	Prov. G. Treas.
R. Case, 417	Prov. G. Sec.
J. Soppitt, P.M. 473	Prov. G.S.D.
C. Yearsley, P.M. 386	Prov. G.J.D.
T. B. Miles, 472	Prov. G. S. Wks.
William Smith, P.M. 170	Prov. G.D.C.
R. G. Gilman, 386	Prov. G.A.D.C.
J. Tucker Geen, 472	Prov. G.S.B.
Whitehead Smith, P.M. 622	Prov. G. Organist.
T. Hunter, 386, as	Prov. G. Purst.
R. Hooper, J. Beer, sen., 386, W. C.
Usher, J. Tanswell, T. Imber,
and J. Foot, 472	Prov. G. Stewards.
John Lovelace, 417	Prov. G. Tyler.

Prov. Grand lodge was then closed.

The annual banquet took place in the Corn Exchange, and the Stewards, with Bro. Yearsley, the caterer, are to congratulate on the admirable arrangements made for the comfort of the party. The room was tastefully decorated with Masonic emblems and mottoes and fern leaves. A cold collation was provided, and the waiting was all that could be desired. A waiter was provided for each eight persons, and to prevent mistake each chair was numbered and the staff of waiters wore badges indicating the number they had to serve. Thus arranged the dinner passed off without a hitch and with comfort to all. After dinner, which was bountiful and excellent, a good dessert was placed on the tables, a contribution from the Pro.G.M. The usual loyal, craft, and complimentary toasts were given and responded to, and brought to a close a very successful gathering.

PROVINCIAL GRAND CHAPTER OF DORSET-SHIRE.

The Provincial Grand Chapter of Royal Arch Masons was held at the Masonic Hall, Dorchester, on Wednesday, 1st inst., M.E. Comp. J. Grundy, Prov. G. Supt. of Bridport, presiding, and there was a numerous attendance of companions. The Prov. G. S. E. reported the province to be in a progressive state, Chapter St. Cuthberga, Wimborne, having made the most additions to its roll. The G. Supt. congratulated the companions on the position of Royal Arch Masonry in Dorset, and offered some words of counsel to the chapter. The Treasurer's report showed a balance to the credit of P.G.C. Chapter of £46 9s. 7d. The announcement of the resignation of the duties of Prov. G. Scr. by E. Comp. T. Coombs elicited very hearty and unanimous demonstrations of fraternal sympathy and regard, and hopes were fervently expressed that he might soon return to that position in the chapter with renewed health and brighter fortune. The Prov. G. Supt. appointed his officers for the year ensuing as follows:—

J. M. P. Montagu, P.Z. 170 and 707	Prov. G.H.
Rev. W. M. Heath, 622	Prov. G.J.
W. Chick, P.Z. 417	Prov. G.S.E.
W. J. Fletcher, 622	Prov. G.S.N.
C. Tucker, Z. 707	Prov. G.P.S.
J. Jesty, 170	Prov. G. 1st A.S.
C. Parsons, H. 417	Prov. G. 2nd A.S.
J. Jacob, 170	Prov. G. Treas.
W. P. Cockeram, J. 417	Prov. G. Reg.
J. H. Boyt, J. 137	Prov. G. Swd. B.
J. B. Cole, J. 170	Prov. G. Std. B.
Wm. Smith, P.Z. 170	Prov. G.D. of Cers.
Jas. Smith, 622	Prov. G. Org.
John Lovelace	Prov. G. Jan.

After the closing of the Prov. Chapter the companions supplied together by invitation of E. Comp. H. Ling, Z. of Chapter 417. The usual toasts were duly honoured, and the Prov. G. Supt., taking a hint from E. Comp. Ling, said he would endeavour in turn to visit during the year the various chapters and lodges throughout the province.

Bro. S. C. Hadley, P.A.G.D.C., of the City Flour Mills, will probably succeed Sir S. J. Gibbons as Alderman for the Ward of Castle Baynard.

Masonic and General Tidings.

A new lodge, and also a new chapter, are talked of in Toxteth-park, Liverpool.

The Provincial Grand Lodge of Sussex will hold their next meeting in Brighton on the 30th inst.

The Burdett Coutts Lodge (No. 1278) met on Thursday last, the 16th inst. A full report will appear in our next.

The Sixth anniversary Banquet of the Star Lodge of Instruction No. 1275, will take place on the 5th October.

Bro. Major John Tanner Davy of Rose Ash, South Molton, P.G.M. of Mark Masons of Devon, has been appointed a Justice of the Peace for the county of Devon.

The Earl of Leicester and Lord Waveney, two of the landowners asked by the labour league to sell them land, have written stating that they are ready to treat with the League for the sale of land, to be farmed by its members.

The annual banquet of the Constitutional Lodge of Instruction, No. 55, will be held at the Wheatsheaf Tavern, Hand-court, Holborn, on Tuesday, the 28th inst., at seven o'clock. Bro. Robertson, S.W. 55, will preside.

The annual Provincial Grand Lodge meeting of Cheshire will be held on the 23rd inst., at Hyde, near Manchester, and the annual gathering in connection with the Province of West Lancashire will take place at Preston, Oct. 6th.

Mr. Senior will represent the "Daily News" in India during the Prince of Wales's visit to that country, and Mr. Gay the "Daily Telegraph." By the absence from England of Mr. Gay the editorship of the "Home News" will pass into other hands. The "Central News" will be represented by Mr. George Wheeler.

The volumes of the unpublished letters and documents belonging to Michael Angelo are to be exhibited at the approaching Centenary in Florence in glass cases. Our correspondent in the city has had a private view of the volumes in question. There are nine in all, quarto size; six contain letters addressed to Michael Angelo by celebrated contemporaries, and the remaining three are his own letters to members of his family and friends. The first was written in 1497, and the last 66 years afterwards, but the handwriting is throughout almost the same, there having been little change in it during Michael Angelo's life.

THE FREEMASONS AND THE POLICE.—At the great assembly of the Freemasons of England on April 28th, at the Royal Albert Hall, for the installation of H.R.H. the Prince of Wales as Grand Master of the Order, the force of Metropolitan police in attendance was under the command of Mr. Superintendent Mott. Its duty was most efficiently performed to the convenience and satisfaction of the Freemasons, and as Bro. James Mott is one of their fraternity, the Grand Lodge has voted him a testimonial gift in the shape of a Steward's jewel, the pattern of which is shown in our engraving.—"Illustrated London News."

The next meeting of the Provincial Grand Lodge of West Yorkshire will be held at Sheffield, on Wednesday, October 20th, 1875, under the banner of the Wentworth Lodge, No. 11239. There are now 61 lodges in West Yorkshire, in consequence of which the provincial meetings are numerously attended; so with a view to insuring comfort, the rooms of the famed Cutlers' Hall have been secured. The Wentworth Lodge will be ably supported by the two sister lodges, Britannia, No. 139, and Royal Brunswick, No. 296, also its immediate neighbour, Phoenix, No. 904, (Rotherham), so a most successful meeting is anticipated.

THE HISTORY OF ENGLAND.—A new edition is announced of "Cassell's History of England," in monthly parts. This is the history of which Lord Brougham said, "The soundest principles are laid down in almost every instance. The interests of virtue, of liberty, and of peace—the best interests of mankind—are faithfully and ably maintained throughout." It will be illustrated with upwards of two thousand engravings, and a new portrait of Her Majesty the Queen, produced in the best form of art, and printed on imperial paper, 2 ft. 6 in. by 1 ft. 10 in., will be issued as a presentation plate with the first monthly part, which will be published on September 27th.

At Lathom House, Ormskirk, the first sale of shorthorns from the fashionable herd of Bro. Lord Skelmersdale, Dep. G.M., P.G.M. W.L., took place on Tuesday week. The sale was well attended, among those present being the Earl of Bective, Earl Clarendon, Lord Calthorpe, Marquis of Blandford, Lord Moreton, Colonel Gunter, Rev. J. Lomax, and Messrs. Sheldon, Bowley, Villiers, Beauford, Magniac, Holford, Longman, and others; a number of American gentlemen, including Mr. J. H. Pickrell, President of the American Shorthorn Society; also representatives from Canada, Australia, New Zealand, and the continent. After luncheon, at which Lord Wimarleigh presided, Mr. Thornton, the well-known and excellent auctioneer, was engaged for more than three hours in dispersing the herd catalogued for sale, and obtained famous prices, the total amount realised being nearly 5700 guineas for 40 head, or an average of over 140 guineas each.

PROPOSED COMPLIMENT TO A WORTHY BROTHER.—An influential committee was appointed on Friday last at the Masonic Hall, Hope-street, Liverpool, for the purpose of organising and carrying out a complimentary concert to Bro. J. Skeaf, P.M. 216, P.G. Organist West Lancashire, which will take place in the course of the year. Bro. H. S. Alpins, P.G. Sec., was appointed Chairman of the committee. No compliment has been more worthily earned than that which is intended to pay to Bro. Skeaf, as he has for a long series of years not only been ready to lend a helping hand in the working of Masonry, but he has been especially ready to give hearty aid in connection with any and every true work of charity, Masonic and otherwise, even at considerable sacrifice to his own personal interests. His fame as a musician is known in all the lodges, and it is to be hoped the brethren of West Lancashire (as well as neighbouring provinces) will show their appreciation of his services and talents by making the forthcoming concert a complete success and a substantial gain.

AN INTERESTING PRESENTATION.—Bro. Yelland, W.M. of the Temple Lodge, No. 1094, very recently had an addition to his family, and following the example of municipal bodies in reference to their mayors under similar circumstances, the members of the lodge determined to present him, if not with a silver cradle, at least with some token of their esteem on the interesting occasion. The presentation took place at the Masonic Hall, Hope-street, Liverpool, on Wednesday, the 8th inst., at the ordinary meeting of the lodge, when Bro. Washington, I.P.M., in the name of the members, handed to Bro. Yelland a very handsome case containing solid silver knife, fork, and spoon for the little stranger. In doing so, he conveyed the heartiest wishes of the members for the prosperity and welfare of parents and little one. The W.M., in acknowledging the present, said he had never been more surprised in his life than by this unexpected presentation, and he thanked the brethren very cordially for their handsome gift.

MASONRY IN EAST LANCASHIRE.—Those "brethren of the mystic tie" who are resident in Ramsbottom and the immediate neighbourhood labour under the disadvantage of being located about four miles from any lodge—the nearest meeting places being Bury on the one hand and Haslingden on the other—and with a view to remove this difficulty a meeting was held at the Railway Hotel on Tuesday evening, under the presidency of Bro. S. Porritt, S.W., of Lodge 215, (Haslingden), when it was unanimously resolved, on the motion of Mr. Peak, P.M., seconded by Mr. John Schofield, that a petition be drawn up praying the Provincial Grand Master (Colonel Le Gendre Starkie) to issue a warrant for the holding of a lodge at the Railway Hotel. It is not improbable that the new lodge will be named "The Cheeryble Brothers"—the late Mr. John Grant of Ramsbottom, one of the brothers made famous in Dickens's "Nicholas Nickleby," having been a member of the Masonic Order.—"Bury Times," Sept. 11th.

THE MARQUIS OF HARTINGTON AT PRESTON.—A branch railway connecting Preston, the county town of Lancashire, with the Leominster and Kingston, and the Cardisley and Kingston lines, and by them with the Shrewsbury and Hereford, and the Herefordshire and Brecon Railways, was opened recently with great rejoicings. A procession, headed by a regimental band, with waggons filled with oxen, sheep, bread, and coal, was marched from the town to the station, the articles being distributed to the poor. A luncheon was afterwards held, over which the High Sheriff of the county presided. There were athletic sports, and at night a brilliant display of fireworks. At the luncheon, the Marquis of Hartington, responding to the toast of "The Borough Member," after referring to the importance to the district of the new railway, said the celebration had offered him one of those opportunities which he had of coming among them in some other than a political capacity. It gave him great pleasure to see his Lancashire friends in a non-political way. His visits to them had on former occasions been almost exclusively connected with politics, and they must come to look upon him as a man who could talk on no other subject. He had had no opportunities of forming an opinion of the borough except during a contested election, therefore he was very glad to see, by what had transpired that day, that there were other subjects and other interests which could occupy their minds, and on which they could meet without differing so widely as they had on former occasions when he had been among them. He should follow the example of Mr. Wash (who had preceded him) in avoiding political subjects. He was aware that he had friends in the borough who were anxious to testify their kind feelings with regard to him, and wished to take the opportunity of hearing from him a political speech; but he would rather postpone that to future opportunities in the desire that politics should be excluded from what took place that day. There was another reason why he was unwilling to make a political speech. It was not long since the termination of the session. There might be difference of opinion about the work of the session, but whether they thought that much was done or little was done, and whether they thought it was well done, there could be no doubt that with the Government and the opposition it had been an arduous session, and they were now engaged in a rest. Up to the present time very few political speeches had been made in the country since Parliament adjourned, and he should be sorry prematurely to excite political discussion, and to begin a new political campaign. They would, no doubt, soon be engaged in a new political campaign; but he was enjoying his holiday when he could, and wished to protract it as long as he could, therefore he hoped his friends would abstain from asking him to give them any account of the proceedings of the past session. The noble Marquis subsequently gave the toast of the evening, "Success to the Preston Railway."

TO OUR READERS.

The Freemason is a sixteen page weekly newspaper, price 2d. It is published every Friday morning, and contains the most important and useful information relating to Freemasonry in every degree. Annual subscription in the United Kingdom, Post free, 10s. Brethren in foreign parts, wishing to have this newspaper sent them regularly from the office of publication, should, in sending their remittances, add to the 2d. per week the postage on 202. newspapers.

TO ADVERTISERS.

The Freemason has a large circulation in all parts of the Globe, its advantages as an advertising medium can therefore scarcely be overrated.

POSSIBLE ENLARGEMENT OF THE GIRLS' SCHOOL.

Bro. R. W. Little, the energetic Secretary of the Girls' School, in a speech which we published last week, alluded to the present position of the Girls' School. He stated that it now held 150 girls, but could not be enlarged, and was "not capable of receiving a greater number of children than it at present contained." Neither was it possible, Bro. Little went on to say, "to purchase more land contiguous to the existing site," and, "although the grounds were extensive, they were merely sufficient for the number of the children." "It would therefore be incumbent on the managers," said Bro. Little in conclusion, "to find land elsewhere to keep pace with the growing claims of the Craft, and a scheme would shortly be placed before the subscribers with that object. A notice of motion for the enlargement of the establishment had already been given in committee by a member, Bro. Joshua Nunn, and in that shape the matter would come before the brethren." They say "Tempus omnia monstrat," so we must wait for some little space, before we hear what the exact proposal is. Bro. Little's words are a little, not intentionally enigmatical, as it is not quite clear whether the "land" to be found elsewhere was required for a new building altogether, or only for a supplementary institution. In the need for accommodation, all will agree, the only question on which a good many may have something to say, is the where and how. It is possible that the present site might sell for sufficient to cover the purchase of a new one, and the building of a school, and if so, the committee, in our opinion, if they can make a good bargain, would be fully justified in the step, on the ground of the exigencies of the Craft. But we feel bound to express our hope, that if such a step is taken, all caution and circumspection will be shown, so as not to make the Royal Masonic Girls' School a petitioner to the Craft for a large sum for building purposes, nor to necessitate the sacrifice of all its funded capital. We have learned, as a body, some experience from the contracts for the Boys' School, and such reminiscences render us anxious, lest we should have similar difficulties to contend with again, though we have no doubt, but that Bro. Little and the House Committee will exercise every care, and practice every economy. We are ourselves quite convinced of the absolute need of an enlarged school, looking at our lists of applicants, but we think it right to offer a few friendly words of fraternal caution, as we know that just now for many reasons, the Craft is a little indisposed to re-commence large building transactions. We have no doubt that when our worthy Bro. Nunn's motion is made, it will be found to be alike practical and business like, in entire keeping with that prudent and sensible management which has ever marked the onward progress of that most admirable Institution, our Girls' School.

FREEMASONRY IN RECESS.

Though the rule of "Recess," as it may be termed, is not such a "Law of the Medes and Persians" in the provinces as in the metropolis, yet we may fairly say that nine-tenths of our London lodges, and a large number of our provincial lodges are just now enjoying their Masonic "Siesta," a little relaxation after many and severe labours. Lodges of instruction still abound, as our notices evidence, but even they, we fancy, are marked by reduced attendances, for the season and the heat are both against the most eloquent explanation, the most lucid development of our time-honoured ritual. On the whole we think the "Recess" is a good institution, and ever needful for the refreshing, the vitality of a lodge. Human nature is still human nature, and in these hot months to be pent up in close rooms, when we might be inhaling the reviving ozone, or basking amid refreshing breezes, savours neither of Masonic wisdom nor profane hygiene. And the fact that our lodge is in recess,—the brethren scattered north, south, east, and west, the faithful Tyler with his wife and olive branches at Ramsgate, is after all only a foreshadowing of an after reunion. That some of our friendly "Caterva" are on the top of the Rhigi, some at Llandudno, some at Windermere, and some at Killarney, only points after all to the universality of Freemasonry, and is suggestive of a goodly muster again, when our admirable Secretary summons his brethren to meet once more, and to open the Masonic season. After a short "retreat" we ardent members of the mystic tie return to the "charge" with the courage and discipline of Britons and Freemasons. The little pause in our Masonic toils has given us fresh breath and new zeal. We hasten to put in an appearance, and to listen approvingly to well-known words we have heard not unfrequently before. We are not indisposed to take our wonted seat at the festive board. We enjoy a very good dinner, we greet some very old friends, we loudly applaud the W.M., and we do hearty honour to the Tyler's toast. Ours has been a pleasant hour, and flow of cheery gossip. Bro. Jones tells us how Brown and Robinson and himself have been to Norway, and he is full of salmon fishing, and the "Fiords." Higgins has come back from Kissingen quite "rajeuni," and declares that "it has done him a world of good." Tomkinson has been in Brittany, and is full of Brittany cows and butter, and that most romantic of districts. While old Horace Hill, P.M. and Treasurer, says, offering you his snuff box (a very bad habit, sir), "I could not afford a foreign trip, so I took Emma and the little Hills to Sandgate, where they have been as merry as grigs." And so the chat runs on, if a little disjointed at times, through whirling hours and cooling liquids, until coffee and liqueurs are ushered in, the lights of fuzees, and the odours of the soothing weed. Well, life has many weaknesses and many follies, its sunshine and its storms, its greatness and its bitterness, its smiles and its tears accompany us all along its dusty and dirty high way, and we should not be mortal, and life would not be life without these lights and shadows of the road. But despite the ridicule of the ignorant, notwithstanding the animadversions of the unjust, Masonic sociality is a good thing, and affords a very pleasant hour of alleviating companionship for many a weary and harassed brother. When our lodges meet again after the recess, if we miss some honest heart, or some pleasant face, if the voice is hushed which once could delight, and the jest is ended which once could raise the honest smile, there will still rally round each W.M. a "band of brothers," proud of their good old Order, loyal to its teaching, and tender-hearted and loving to one another.

MASONIC GOOD MANNERS.

In old days it was customary to send our "young men of family" on what was called the "Grand Tour," to polish up under a fitting companion some heir of many acres, or some hereditary legislator, and to give him a fashionable "tournure," and "good manners." Those of us who have read Lord Chesterfield's Letters to his Son will remember how constantly he tried to teach that uninteresting youth the same important characteristic, though, as we know, in vain. Still, the necessity of good manners is admitted by us all, and is inculcated forcibly by Freemasonry. In its symbolical and often mystical language it would demonstrate to us the advantages of civilised over barbarous life, the reforming influences of the study of the arts and sciences, of moral culture and intellectual development over the rough mass of unpolished and inert humanity. Hence, one of the great benefits of Freemasonry really and truly is, that it is in one sense a school of good manners, a very important educational institution, be it remembered, for us all alike. And there can be no reasonable doubt that, as Freemasons, we are ourselves greatly improved by this much needed teaching in our lodge assemblies. The contrasts of rank and humble station, the severances of mere earthly society, are all transfused, so to say, into the amalgam of the spiritual equality of Freemasonry. We meet all upon one level within the lodge, as brethren one and all, having due regard to those necessary distinctions of rank and grade which, as in earthly society, constitute alike the safety and the welfare of us all. So that a Freemason's Lodge is an academy of good manners, as well as of sound morals and tolerant teaching. It is strange, indeed, and somewhat saddening for us to realize what a struggle in all things now, physiological as well as personal, mental as well as material, the onward life of man is for us, the inhabitants of earth for a little season. One should have thought, a priori, that good manners and courteous address would be a self-evident duty and need for all human beings. But not so. The inborn selfishness of Ego comes in from the first development of precocious youth, to the last babblings of maundering old age, to taint and to mar all our relations towards our fellow creatures. Nay, even more than this. There is a love of singularity, a tendency to idiosyncrasy, more or less in all, which leads us sometimes to the belief that "brusquerie" of manner, the unconciliating address, the ungenial tone, the assertion of superiority, the "hauteur" of ill suppressed selfishness, are not undesirable accompaniments of our rank, Masonic or profane, our position, our post, our standing in society. We actually, sometimes affect to think that such amiable traits raise us in the eyes of our fellow creatures, and constitute us "swells," laudable ambition, in the esteem of less flourishing compeers. Though all this be a mistake, it is a mistake we many of us daily and hourly make, forgetting good old Wykeham's immortal proverb, "Manners makyth man." Now Masonry teaches us from first to last the same goodly lesson. It would bid us repress the self-assertion of individual conceit, and the display of personal egotism. It would require us to look kindly, considerately, courteously on all. It would warn us against the hasty utterance, and the unreflecting opinion. It would point out to us that others have feelings as well as ourselves, and that our fellow creatures have sensitive sensations and tender hearts. So that when we annoy them by our rudeness, or hurt them by our want of good feeling, when we seek to wound, to irritate a brother or fellow creatures by unamiable words, unfriendly acts, bad manners, we are committing alike a breach of humanitarian morals, to take no higher ground, and are evidencing the ignorance of our own Masonic principles. For good manners would lead us always to forget our own individuality in that of our brethren and our Order. If we are exalted in rank or grade, good manners would bid us to extend a friendly hand to, and look with a kindly face on any humbler member of our Order. Good manners would urge us to be courteous and genial to all, neither foppish nor priggish, but always natural, open, and honest, ready to do a good turn, and be not only a "buon camarado," but a true Freemason, whenever we meet our brethren in lodge or out of lodge. There is nothing so odious in our opinion, as the overbearing ill manners of a little brief authority, that vulgarity which, arising from a mistaken estimate of wealth or position, renders us pompous and pretentious, tyrannical, and even insolent. We do not say that such a state of things is common to Freemasons or Freemasonry; happily it is not so. On the contrary, Freemasonry does succeed in educating in a wonderful way a great amount of true-hearted sympathy, and generous feelings, and good manners amongst us all. But as we are writing didactically to improve and to impress and to elevate, we have necessarily to deal with what is possible and probable, as well as with what is actual and in presentia. We trust that our humble, if warning words, will be appreciated by all who, like ourselves, deeply value Freemasonry, especially under the conditions in which, as it appears to us, it ever looks most most fair, namely, in its genial inculcation of true fraternal sympathies, cultured gracefulness, good manners, loving memories, and honest hearts.

THE COLLISION IN THE SOLENT.

The jury at Portsmouth have made their "deliverance" in the second inquest to the effect, that the collision was accidental, but they have added a "rider," that the collision took place through an "error of judgment" on the part of the "navigating officer of the Alberta," that "a slower rate of speed, during the holiday months especially, would be more conducive to public safety," and that, "also there should be a more efficient look out." In England we wisely accept always the verdicts of juries, even when we do not agree them, and we think it would be very bad taste, to say nothing of waste of time, to cavil at a free expression of opinion like that of a jury at a Coroner's inquisition. We are, however, writing in the interest always of truth, absolute truth, and matter of fact, and we are a little inclined to think, that under the guise of a factitious public opinion, some injustice may be shewn, and has already been manifested by our impulsive English feeling, towards the members of a very gallant service. Let us here recapitulate the actual and proved realities of this no doubt most distressing case, "ab initio." The Alberta Royal Yacht, followed by a tender, Commander Sullivan, is on its voyage to Gosport, the Queen being "en route" for Scotland. The Alberta is running, as they say, free at 15 knots an hour. The yacht Mistletoe is on its way to Ryde, but yet is sailing, for a time, parallel to the Royal Yacht. But here begins the usual contradictions of a "running-down case," which is generally considered in the profession, as to have as its inevitable condition, "hard swearing on both sides." The officers and others of the Royal Yacht state distinctly, that they had seen the Mistletoe before the accident, and that she was running abeam of the Alberta. Some of the surviving crew of the Mistletoe, as well as Mr. Heywood the owner, declare that this is incorrect, and that the Alberta ran down and on to the Mistletoe. Something no doubt was said on board the Mistletoe, though not apparently by Mr. Heywood, about running in close to have a look at the Queen; a discussion arose as to which vessel carried Her Majesty, (the Royal Standard ought to have indicated that), and preparations were made for "dipping the ensign." This evidence hardly squares with the assertion, that the Alberta ran straight down to them. In this position, as there is this great and startling contradiction, we must next look at the acts of the two crews. Captain Welch on the Alberta sees the Mistletoe on his port side, but apparently in no danger of a collision, and crosses over to the starboard side of the bridge to have a look at another yacht. When he turns to the port side again, he sees the bowsprit of the Mistletoe close to the bows of the Alberta; a Quartermaster tells him at the same moment, that the yacht is put about, and he gives the order to starboard the helm, meaning, according to the rule of the road at sea, to give way, and go astern of the Mistletoe. But in a few seconds, and as Captain Welch well says, accidents happen at sea in seconds, comes the collision. The yacht is stopped, and then ordered to go slowly astern. And then that most lamentable and saddening loss of life occurs, and the yacht goes down. This statement seems perfectly plain and correct, and a sailor's unvarnished tale, and we cannot but regret the tone that was introduced into the cross examination at the first inquest. What has happened in the interim on board the yacht? Mr. Heywood did not give the order to put the helm down to port, and to send the yacht up into the wind, but he says that Captain Stokes did so, and fastened down the helm. Brown, the steward and cook, here appears on the scene, unusually, as the coroner, Mr. Garrington, forcibly observes, and seems alike to have advised and aided in the act. But why did the Mistletoe port her helm? What good could possibly come of such a proceeding then? The only effect, humanly speaking, could be, to bring the Mistletoe across the bows of the Alberta, and we cannot help thinking and fearing, that Stokes, the captain of the yacht, though no doubt a good sailor, lost his head in the emergency, put down his helm because he did not know what else to do, and left it, and went "forrard," as there is evidence of in the first inquest. If that be so, we have the real explanation of the unfortunate collision in the Solent. We are inclined to think that the Quartermaster's evidence in the first inquest was true when he said, that owing to the position a collision was unavoidable, that is to say, owing to the porting of the Mistletoe's helm. Had the Alberta's helm been ported, as has been hastily suggested, we cannot understand what possible good could come of it, or how, as it then was, a collision, could have been avoided. When Captain Welch starboarded the Alberta's helm, he did, though probably the case was desperate then, all that could possibly and nautically be done. There is an interesting chart in a recent number of our contemporary, "The Graphic," which gives the actual position of the vessels at sea, and is, we think, decisive of the case, namely, that the real cause of the collision was the porting of the Mistletoe's helm. There is one ingredient in the case which has been but little attended to, the comparative speed of the two vessels, one running at 15 knots, the other, it is surmised, at 5, which we do not profess to be able to explain. But the surmise may be incorrect, and if so, "cadit questio." We feel naturally the deepest commiseration for Mr. Heywood and his sorrowing family, as well as for the friends and relatives of the captain and mate of the yacht. But as we write, and always ought to write, in the grave interests of truth and right, and fair play to all, we feel that in this as in all other things, whether Masonic or profane, the abiding importance of the good old axiom, "Fiat justitia ruat cælum."

THE CHEQUE BANK.

We have had our attention called to this new and useful banking establishment, and are glad to commend it to the notice of our readers. Though not of any long existence, it seems to be, and is likely we think to become a very useful means of accommodation to business houses of various kinds. It is often inconvenient to remit sums, it is loss of time often to run to the nearest

Post-office for a money order, and with many of our readers time is money. One or two peculiarities of the Cheque Bank deserve attention. The cheques we may observe are good, however long they remain in circulation, so that those who hold them need not hurry to cash them, as with common cheques, but they can keep them as long as they like, without any risk, and use them with the houses they do business with, as a "circulating medium." And another point is, that these Cheque Bank drafts can be paid away from hand to hand, and be used almost as bank notes in the common transactions of mercantile business. They may pass through hundreds of holders, until some day they are paid into an account at a bankers', and then they return to the head office for clearing. There are many of our readers who have daily to send small sums in letters, and as postage stamps are sometimes troublesome, and coin is decidedly dangerous, and time is too valuable to go to the Post Office, the Cheque Bank affords a ready means of convenience to many, and a safe payment for all. Many persons object to keep much small cash in the counting office, and these Cheques are a convenient substitute. In all that we have said, we do not wish to be supposed to undervalue our great postal system, with its admirable adaptation to the wants of all classes alike, but we simply mention one or two points for the calm consideration of our readers, in which, as it appears to us, the Cheque Bank affords to many business men and firms, the maximum of convenience and of easy payments. We wish the experiment every success.

THE POWERS OF W. MASTERS.

To the Editor of the Freemason.

Dear Sir and Brother,—

I am sorry to read that "An Absent W.M." thinks that I was unkind in presuming that there was more in his question than met the eye. I was glad to hear that I was wrong. The fact that "An Absent W.M." found it necessary to ask whether he could require to have the lodge summons and a record of its proceedings sent to him, appeared to me to be so unusual a circumstance, that I imagined, and I hope not unjustly, that there must be something behind the question. I have not the least notion who "An Absent W.M." is, but I unfeignedly express my regret that anything which I wrote should have annoyed him. P.G.W.

THE POSITION OF MASONRY IN GREAT BRITAIN IN 1875 AND ITS NOBLE CHARITIES.

SECOND ARTICLE.

Sorry am I to find that another "Breaker ahead has arisen." I had hoped that in my last article I had exhausted all but solitary instances; but the ultimatum from Grand Lodge respecting the wearing the jewel authorized by our Royal Grand Master, shows that a more extended ground for complaint has arisen, "self conceit, self thinking" must have largely increased even in England to call forth this severe rebuke, which could never have happened without good cause, especially so soon after the Installation that occurred this spring.

All who have studied the constitutions of the Grand Lodge of England know that all processions, all means for display, are strictly prohibited, save on special occasions, and then only by special dispensation. How then can this inordinate vanity have arisen. Brethren, you well know we meet as equals, our jewels of office point out the superiority of those who are worthy, does the newly initiated know the meaning of our jewels? We ourselves who know the meaning require no further information! Let the P.M. who has worthily filled his chair receive decoration, but only in one case. If he has served the chair in one or more lodges (to their satisfaction), let him put on bars for each successive holding of office. Let the P.M. be for life a member of Grand Lodge so long as he pays his dues, but not entitled to vote or speak in Grand Lodge or in his own lodge, during any period that he may be in arrears, or after taking his name off the books of his lodge until he shall have replaced it in the books of Grand Lodge by rejoining his own or another lodge as a subscribing member. This would clearly define the high position of P.M. But I would go further, I would even propose the following method of recognising a worthy P.M. in lieu of giving him a jewel commemorative of esteem by his brethren: Remember brethren the Mason's apron is a higher distinction "amongst us" than any other decoration. The emblems of a P.M. emblazoned as they are on his apron sufficiently prove him worthy! Let these emblems suffice!

Believe me, brethren, I am not bigoted, but display begets display.

Vanity, self seeking, personal aggrandisement are all repugnant to the true spirit of Masonry; our highest aim is to do our work well and to be "Primus inter Pares."

The good and great Duke of Wellington, the finest soldier of his age—as I know full well from my father (a good and high Mason), who was in the staff corps under him in the Peninsular war—utterly repudiated all decorations; he truly maintained that it was for every British soldier “to do his duty.” If the soldier did his duty he only did that which he had been called on to do, the Duke looked on all men as equals in their several stations and capacities, he considered it nothing beyond his (the soldier's) duty for him to succeed, to fail was disgrace.

Let us consider Masonry in this light. What do we each and all of us engage ourselves to do when we enter Masonry? To devote our abilities (if we have any) to acquire a true knowledge of our subject, to discharge to the best of our power the offices entrusted to our care, to instruct those not so well informed as ourselves, in fact, whether we rule or whether we serve, to remember that we are all equals in Masonry, and to endeavour who can best work and who can best excel. We do nothing, therefore, in doing our duty but what we engage ourselves to do on admission to our glorious Order—to fail is disgrace. Would to God this was the rule duly carried out. Think not that all can excel, that all are gifted with equal abilities, some must rule, the rest must obey, but while saying this, I contend that the brother who serves to the utmost of his power, is as good (as a Mason) as him who rules; the Great Architect has not gifted all men alike. Those who fail in their duties, those who are disgraced, are those timeserving, those negligent, those half-hearted brethren, who do not busy themselves with the cares and troubles of the Order, who look listlessly on while others are doing their work, who failed in all essentials.

I would now show you how I think a brother who has done his duty might be adequately rewarded, and in a manner more conducive to the good of the Order.

We do not want display. The good Mason seeks no gewgaws to prove himself to the world at large. How can we then recompense the brother who knows and does his duty?

The proposition I am now going to make for the consideration of the Craft in general is not entirely my own. We read in Scripture “By their deeds ye shall know them.” This we can do, but by other good deeds we can commemorate theirs. It has been proposed and read in the Masonic papers that all W.M.'s, P.M.'s, and those who deserve well of the Craft should be presented Life Governorships or more by their brethren. Surely this is a more fitting reward for good deeds, a more fitting recompense for a worthy brother. If this proposal comes to be adopted, and those hitherto callous and half-hearted respond to our call, if due supervision is exercised in admitting true and worthy brethren, if the duties of our Order are duly impressed on the minds of our candidates, if they are duly instructed in and urged to respond to our great characteristic “charity,” the amounts subscribed to our three several institutions will in future years be twenty-fold—aye, fifty-fold—increased.

Seeing then that Masonry is in such a flourishing state, something more must, and can be done, to help the orphans, the widows, and the aged; what more fitting time can there be than this? in what more fitting manner can we inaugurate our Royal Grand Master's elevation to the throne of Grand Lodge? than by a large addition to the donations to our charities, thus laying down a precedent to be followed by all lodges in doing honour to those who have well and worthily discharged the duties of office.

I would offer one more idea for general consideration by which we might extend our sphere of usefulness! Oxford I know, and Cambridge, I believe, have opened their several universities to unattached students; our orphans who have received good education (primary and secondary) from our Order, are most of them the children of parents in a better class of life, who, through no fault of their own, have fallen into difficulties and distress, they have been well brought up under our auspices; cannot something then be done in establishing exhibitions at each of the universities for unattached students from our Boys' School, the exhibitions would enable the young men to live, not in luxury perhaps, but in some comfort, during their sojourn there; smaller exhibitions of a second class might be established for boys and girls for the middle class examinations; thus an opening in life could be made for those who have passed through our schools; these exhibitions to be tenable for definite periods, say three or four years, and with due regard to character and conduct.

Having placed my case before you, brethren, think the matter over carefully, those amongst you who are skilled in the matter, you who are ever seeking to do good.

Of course the first increase of donations must be applied to our schools; it takes large sums of money to endow exhibitions; all these points, however, can be compassed if the tide of prosperity flows, as I trust it may.

Here then, brethren, is a new field open to you, Grand Lodge of Benevolence can, and will help you; if our support is given to it, England may well say that it has striven to do its duty.

I have heard on good authority that in Sweden and Norway they have an orphanage containing 800 children; if such is really the case, and I do not doubt it, England has yet much to do to hold its own in the field of charity.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT AND PILLS.—These remedies have stood the test of time, and opposition has proved fruitless, in consequence of their sterling qualities of efficacy, mildness, and certainty. They are unfailing in their operation on the causes of disease, and in that common class of disease, throat and chest complaints, are invaluable. The Ointment rubbed perseveringly over the seat of disorder, causes the irritation to subside, and the congestive condition to be arrested, so that the difficulty of breathing, which is so distressing an accompaniment of these diseases, is soon relieved, and the tendency to the development of Diphtheria, Ulcerated Tonsils, Mumps, Pleurisy, Bronchitis, and other alarming and dangerous diseases of these parts is at once checked and relief obtained.—ADVT.

UNVEILING THE MAYO STATUE AT COCKERMOUTH.

The long-anticipated and deeply interesting ceremony of uncovering the Memorial Statue of the late Earl of Mayo at Cocker-mouth came off on Thursday, August 19, under circumstances of a most gratifying and auspicious character. There was a large gathering of the nobility and gentry of the county and of the inhabitants of the town and district, amongst whom the most tender memories of the late Earl will ever survive. The principal duty of the day devolved upon Lord Napier and Ettrick, who it will be remembered, being then Governor of Madras, assumed the chief direction of affairs in India when Lord Mayo was suddenly cut off by an assassin.

The history of the Memorial may soon be told. It was on the 13th of February, 1872, that the news of Lord Mayo's assassination reached this country. In no place was the sad impression produced deeper than in Cocker-mouth, for in that place Lord Mayo had endeared himself to men of all shades of political opinion by the genial frankness of his manner and his kindness of heart. A public meeting was held in the Court-house, which was presided over by Mr. William Wood, the High Bailiff of the borough, and attended as numerous by Liberals as Conservatives. At that meeting Mr. Isaac Fletcher, M.P., paid an eloquent tribute to the worth and ability of the deceased nobleman. Mr. Fletcher said: “I believe that everybody in this room will admit that at no former period in the history of our borough have the inhabitants been called together upon a more melancholy or a more appalling occasion. A nobleman who for eleven years represented this borough in Parliament, who never had a contest, who three times had held office under the Crown, who had been a cabinet Minister, and who was selected by her Majesty's advisers as Viceroy of India, who for three years had discharged the duties of that most important office to the entire satisfaction of his Queen and of his country, has in one fearful moment been struck down by the blow of a base and cowardly assassin. Lord Mayo's career has been a somewhat remarkable one. Three times he had held the same office under the Crown, and on all of those occasions he distinguished himself chiefly by an entire devotion to the duties of his office, by a conscientious industry, and proving to demonstration that he possessed all the high qualities of an administrator. When, in the autumn of 1868, the Governor-Generalship of India became vacant, Mr. Disraeli, with that keen appreciation of character which I may say has always distinguished him in his selections for high office in the State, conferred the office of Viceroy and Governor-General of India upon Lord Mayo, I need not remind you that that appointment provoked much hostile, and perhaps I might almost say unfriendly, criticism. Although Lord Mayo's talents were universally admitted, there were undoubtedly very many who held the opinion that he was hardly possessed of those superior qualities of mind and of intellect which is essential in any one who undertakes such a gigantic task as the government of 150 millions of the natives of an empire who are more or less disloyal to the rule of this country. But Lord Mayo had been but a very short time in India when he amply proved that if he had not on former occasions displayed those great qualities it was because the opportunity had never been afforded him. For three years he had held that office; and he had grasped that problem of India Government more completely than any of his predecessors. He at once, by an intuitive perception, saw that the only mode of our permanently retaining our Empire in the East was by improving the means of communication, to develop the internal resources of India, by opening out railways and communication through the various parts of the country, and by endeavouring in every way to alleviate the physical and moral condition of those under his sway. I do not know that I need say very much more in praise of Lord Mayo. He amply justified the choice of Her Majesty; and the Duke of Argyll, in the House of Lords, and Mr. Gladstone in the House of Commons, both of whom were hostile to him in politics, have admitted that he has conducted the government of India to the entire satisfaction both of Her Majesty and of themselves. (Applause.) It is, indeed, sad to think that a man like Lord Mayo, in the meridian of life, and in the midst of a great career, should have met so terrible and tragic an end. Many, I believe, looked forward to his fulfilling his high office for some time to come, and the qualities which he there displayed seemed to mark him out for high office if Providence had permitted that he should ever return to this country; but, alas, all these expectations have come to an end, and I may quote these lines:

Now is the stately column broke,

The beacon fire is quenched in smoke.

But I believe that both the present generation and posterity will admit that among the illustrious roll of Indian rulers there are few who have left behind them a brighter and more stainless life.” Mr. Fletcher concluded his address by moving a vote of sympathy and condolence with Lady Mayo, which concluded thus:—“And the meeting takes leave to add to this the assurance that throughout Lord Mayo's long connection with the borough, as one of its representatives in Parliament, he never failed to command, in a remarkable degree, the honour and regard of all classes of the constituency, as well by his noble personal qualities as by the able and faithful discharge of his public duties.” At the meeting referred to, addresses were also delivered by Colonel Green Thompson, the Rev. Canon Hoskins, the Rev. W. Williams, Mr. Ferdinand James, and others, it was resolved that, in consideration of Lord Mayo's former connection with the borough, and as a memento of the local appreciation of his personal virtues no less than of his public worth, steps be taken to erect a suitable and abiding memorial of the lamented statesman. All ranks and classes joined cordially in the movement, and in a short time an eminent firm of sculptors, Messrs. Wills, of Euston-road, London, were commissioned to execute a statue in marble. A committee, consisting of a number of influential gentlemen, was formed, and of that committee Mr. Jonathan Mitchell was appointed the Honorary Secretary. A better man could not have been selected for the office, for Mr. Mitchell has laboured hard and indefatigably to make the movement, which culminated in the proceedings of Thursday, worthy of the man whose memory it was designed to honour, and the success which has crowned it is due in a very great measure to his exertions, which have certainly been ably seconded by his colleagues. The appeal for subscriptions was heartily responded to, and in a short time between £800 and £900 were collected. At first it was suggested that the memorial should take the form of a public hall, but this idea was quickly abandoned, and it was finally decided that the memorial should be a statue of Lord Mayo. Accordingly, on the 14th of November, 1872, an agreement was entered into by Mr. Bowerbank and Mr. Jonathan Mitchell, on behalf of the Mayo Memorial Committee, with Messrs. W. and T. Wills, sculptors, of 172, Euston-road, London, to make and complete the statue by the month of June, 1874, for the sum of £800. The statue was not, however, finished till the beginning of the present month. At one time it was in contemplation to place it at the end of Station-street, but the Committee finally resolved that the site for it should be the centre of Main-street, near the Bush Inn, and when the pedestal arrived at Cocker-mouth it was placed in its position by workmen, superintended by Mr. Phillips, the contractor for the Whitehaven Wet Dock, acting for Messrs. Wills, and Mr. Pickering, of the firm of Pickering and Crompton, of Whitehaven, engineers, acting on behalf of the Memorial Committee.

There were 144 subscribers to the memorial, in sums ranging from 5s. to £50. Lord Leconfield, the Hon. P. S. Wyndham, and the Earl of Lonsdale each subscribed £50, and the two former added £25 each to their first subscription, to aid in defraying the expenses connected with the unveiling ceremony and the alterations to the street. Among the other principal subscribers were Colonel Green-Thompson, £40; R. Senhouse, Esq., £30; George Moore, Esq., £25; George Mawson, Esq., £25; H. Bell, Esq., £23; John Sterling, Esq., £20; Trustee of the late J. Harris, Esq., £19 19s.; Mrs. Ann. Thornburn, £20; Sir Wilfrid Lawson, £20; H. Henhouse, Esq., £20; W. Fletcher, Esq., £20; L. Fletcher, Esq., M.P., £20; W. Wood, Esq., £20; T. A. Hoskins, Esq., £15; His Grace the Bishop of Carlisle, £10 10s.; the late J. Wybergh, Esq., £10; W. L. Alexander, Esq., £10 10s.; Lord Muncaster, £10 10s.; Messrs. S. and S. G. Saul, Carlisle, £10 10s.; Mr. W. Banks, Highmoor House, £10; Mr. Joseph Bowerbank, £10 10s.; Rev. J. Wordsworth, £10; Mr. D. Ropley, £10 10s.; Mr. John Ashley, £10 10s.; Mr. Joshua Jenkinson, £10 10s.; and W. N. Hodgson, Esq., M.P., £10 10s. The contract with Messrs. Wills, the sculptors, was signed in November, 1872, by Messrs. Mitchell and Bowerbank, on behalf of the Committee.

The statue reached Cocker-mouth on Friday week, and was placed on the pedestal on Monday. We can congratulate the artists upon the success of the work which has now left their hands. It is nine feet in height, and is carved from a block of fine Sicilian marble. The form, like that of him whose counterfeit presentment it is, is noble and commanding; and the attitude is imposing, as, befits one who held a beneficent and almost regal sway over two hundred millions of his fellow creatures. He is represented in his robes as Viceroy, which are very effectively arranged. The left hand rests on the hip; the right grasps a scroll. The likeness is admirable; it would have been impossible to render the manly and vigorous countenance with more fidelity. The massive pedestal of Cornish granite, twelve feet high, bears but one word—“Mayo.” In modelling the likeness, the sculptors were much assisted by suggestions from Lady Mayo and the Hon. Percy Wyndham, M.P., both of whom visited the studio on several occasions, and took great interest in the progress of the work. The whole structure will be surrounded by iron rails, at each corner of which a lamp is to be placed. The total expenditure will amount to £1000. The position of the statue has been well chosen in the most central and broadest part of the Main-street.

The proceedings were remarkably favoured by the weather. It was a glorious day of early autumn, a grateful breeze tempering the rays of an almost Indian sun. From early morning the streets of the town presented a busy and animated appearance, and a considerable number of visitors from the neighbouring towns and villages proceeded to Cocker-mouth by the early trains. This number was largely increased on the arrival of the trains from the east and west about noon. There was no attempt made to decorate the town, as it was thought by the Memorial Committee that such a proceeding would be out of keeping with an event which partook of a sad and solemn character, and one calculated to awaken very painful recollections. The whole of the tradesmen's shops and places of business were closed at twelve o'clock, and from that hour till three in the afternoon the traffic in Main-street, between Station-street and Sullart-street, was stopped by order of the Local Board of Health. In front of the statue a platform was erected for those who had to take part in the ceremony of unveiling, and running in the line of the street on each side was a stand, with seats rising one above another, for the accommodation of the subscribers to the Memorial Fund and the ladies. The space between the stands and within the enclosure was reserved for the officers and members of the Eighth Cumberland Rifle Volunteers and the Friendly Societies. Upon the rifle corps, in the first instance, however, devolved the duty of keeping the line of procession clear. About half-past twelve o'clock the spectators began to take their places in the street, upon the grand stands, and at the windows. The band of the Rifles was in its appointed position in front of the central platform, and a detachment of police, placed at the service of the committee by the Chief-Constable, carried out the regulations under the directions of Mr. Superintendent Spencer, admitting none within the barricades except those who were privileged to enter. While the procession approached, the band played the "Dead March" (Saul). At a quarter before one o'clock the head of the procession of Friendly Societies appeared at the head of the street with a banner waving in front.

The Freemasons had mustered in strong force, a large number of brethren from neighbouring lodges visiting Skiddaw Lodge on the occasion. The members of the "Mystic Craft," it may be mentioned, had a peculiar interest in the proceedings, for the late Earl of Mayo, when Lord Naas, M.P. for the borough, and representative of the Grand Lodge of Irish Freemasons at the English Grand Lodge, became a joining member of Skiddaw Lodge, Cockermouth, on the 6th September, 1864, and continued a subscribing member till the day of his melancholy death, February 8th, 1872, at which time he also held the honour of Patron of the Masonic Order in the Indian dependencies of the British Crown. The Freemasons had met at Skiddaw Lodge-room, in the Market-place, at noon, and had luncheon at Bro. Stephen Thwaite's, Old Hall Inn. As they marched down the street they appeared in full Masonic Craft clothing and jewels, the Provincial Grand Officers present taking the head of the procession, led by the Tyler of Skiddaw Lodge, with their banner, and Bros. Evening and Ferguson with their wands as Stewards. The W.M., with the officers and brethren of Skiddaw Lodge, followed the Provincial Officers, and to these succeeded the deputations from other lodges. We give the names of the brethren who took part in the ceremony:—Among the brethren of Skiddaw Lodge 1092, present were:—Bros. W. F. Lamonby, W.M.; W. H. Lewthwaite, L.P.M. and Org., P.G.S.; C. Morton, P.M.; P. Prov. G.S.W.; R. Robinson, P.M. and Treas., P. Prov. G.S.D.; W. Shilton, P.M., P. Prov. G.S.B.; J. Pearson, P.M., P. Prov. G.S.D.; Jos. Allison, S.W.; Rev. E. M. Gretna Lodge, 1073, Keswick: Rev. R. Rutherford, P.M., P.P.G.A. Chaplain; J. Wood, P.M., P.P.G.S.D.; W. Lamonby, P.G. Tyler; R. J. Hunter, A. Wilson. Witton Lodge, 1077, Blackley, Lancashire. G. Kay. Kenlis Lodge, 1267, Egremont: W. Miller and John Nelson. Curwen Lodge, 1400, Harrington: James Dick, S.W.; Tom Dixon, Sec.; J. Young, P.M.; W. Waite, W. Carlyle, D. Dickinson, R. Wattleworth, H. Halliday. Bective Lodge, 1532, Carlisle: G. Potter, S.W.; R. Orman. Thistle Lodge, 62, Dumfries, Scotch Constitution: Bro. W. Rome.

Following the members of the Masonic body came the Loyal Cocker Lodge of Oddfellows, with their gorgeous new banner floating on the breeze, emblazoned with the arms of the Order and the motto Amicitia, Amor, et Veritas. These were succeeded by the Derwent Lodge of Mechanics, and the Good Intent Friendly Society. The procession marched down the Main-street, through the open ranks of the Volunteers, to the inclosure round the statue, where places had been assigned for each body. The whole of the brethren would muster between 200 and 300 strong. At a brief interval came the members of the Memorial Committee, namely, Mr. Jonathan Mitchell (honorary secretary, who had the principal direction of the arrangements), Mr. Joseph Bowerbank, Mr. David Rapley, Mr. Joseph Brown, Mr. John Naisbit, the Rev. Canon Hoskins, M. W. Faulder, Mr. R. Senhouse, and the sculptors, Messrs. Wills.

At ten minutes past one o'clock the Earl of Lonsdale, in opening the proceedings, said: Ladies and gentlemen, I beg to introduce to you a gentleman who was next in rank in India at the time of Lord Mayo's death, and who has kindly consented to come here and perform the ceremony of unveiling the statue which has been erected to his memory. I beg to introduce to you Lord Napier.

Lord Napier and Ettrick then stepped forward and addressed the assemblage, and afterwards performed the ceremony of unveiling. The statue was greatly admired as a work of art, and as a likeness there could be no doubt as to its fidelity. It had been requested that there should be no cheering on the occasion, but several passages of Lord Napier's speech were applauded, and when at thirty-five minutes past one o'clock the drapery, which till that moment had shrouded the statue from the public view, was withdrawn, there was a general outburst of applause, and most of the spectators took their hats off. The band performed the National Anthem, and the assembly quietly dispersed.

A YEAR'S MASONIC WORK IN ROUMANIA.

Bro. Caubet, the editor of the "Monde Maconique," gives us in the number for August, at page 162, a most interesting account of the labours of the Lodge "Les Sages d'Heliopolis," under the French Constitution at Bucharest.

This lodge, which has only been in existence a year and some months, has shown so much Masonic energy and life as to deserve recognition and preservation in our pages. Though Bro. Caubet's account is a little too long for our limited space, yet we have thought well to give a "precis" of his valuable article for the information and appreciation of our many readers.

We are not told the actual strength of the lodge, though it is doubtless very numerous. It has held in twelve months, ending February, 1875, sixty-five meetings, two lodges of emergency, a funeral service, and eleven conferences of instruction. It has, as is the foreign custom often, a sanitary section, composed of medical men, a juridical section composed of lawyers, and a Committee of Instruction.

The medical section has assisted, with gratuitous advice and medicine, 774 sick persons at the lodge itself, has visited 111 at their own homes, has placed in the civil hospitals 14 serious cases, so that in all 874 sufferers have received affectionate and zealous care, belonging as they do to all religions and nationalities. This seems to us very "good Samaritan" work.

Nothing is said about a Lodge Dispensary, though that probably exists, and in a town like Bucharest must be a great blessing. If the lodge has not one, it will probably soon establish one.

The juridical section has done a good deal of work, and in a way to slightly startle our Anglo-Saxon Freemasons. Remembering the old proverb, to the effect that legal advice gratis is good for nothing, "will it surprise" our readers to be told that the lawyers of the Lodge "Les Sages, &c.," have given numerous gratuitous consultations at the lodge, have pleaded gratuitously in a certain number of suits for some who did not belong to the lodge, and who sued in "forma pauperis" have rendered signal services to two foreign Freemasons, and have saved the widow of a member of the lodge from ruin.

The Committee of Instruction has endeavoured to establish a school of "arts et metiers," which we usually term technical instruction, and have raised, in one way or other, 6000 francs, £240, so far for that purpose, a sum they hope soon materially to increase.

The same committee has sought to aid all the Roumanian Schools, as we understand, in Bucharest, and to that end have given 456 volumes as prizes at the general examination in 1874.

The same committee inaugurated a series of "Scientific Conferences," which Bro. Caubet tells us were "very remarkable and very worthy of interest."

The "Mistria," a Bucharest Masonic paper, which we have seen, has been established by this same lodge, and is flourishing, while the lodge has also laid the foundation of a good library.

The financial position of the lodge is also very good. It has received independently of the School Fund to which it has contributed, from its formation a year and a few months ago, the sum of 51,709 francs 91 centimes—in English money, in round numbers, very nearly £2080. It has 6500 francs, in round numbers, or £245, balance to credit, on the general purposes funds, July 28, 1875, and 5283 francs—a little over £200—in its hospitable chest, the fund of benevolence.

We leave this simple statement of facts and figures to the consideration and approval of our brethren in Anglo-Saxon Freemasonry.

Ireland.

We call attention to this interesting Masonic intelligence from Ireland, for which we are indebted to a distinguished member of the Order:—

I ZINGARI IN IRELAND.

"We always wish to see them here,
We see them go with many a tear,
And Ireland always pipes her eye,
When she loses her jolly Zingari.

Now, all you lads and lasses all,
Sing in good chorus to our call,
May the black, red, and gold flag ever fly,
High o'er the heads of I Zingari."

The above stanzas form part of a poem composed by his grace our brother the Lord Lieutenant, in honour of I Zingari; and I am sure that if saw I Zingari go with many a tear, the tears were mutual, for regret at parting (with those whose never failing kindness had rendered the viceregal a paradise for the weary cricketer) was uppermost in the breasts of all. Old Ireland is, indeed, blessed in its Lord and Lady Lieutenant. There exists a peculiar charm in the way everything is managed. During the whole of the cricket week all who came were welcomed on the ground with kingly hospitality, and not only was the welcome extended to the world by day, but the most attractive dances, the best of music, and the best of suppers made the nights equally enjoyable. "God bless his grace, his whole family, and long life to them!" is the Zingari parting prayer; nor let those who tasted the hospitality of Abbotstown forget to give three cheers in honour of their old friend and entertainer, Mr. Hamilton, M.P. And now about the cricket. Out of the three matches played, I Zingari only won the military match. For three years in succession they had been beaten by the gentlemen of Ireland, and it is no use disguising the fact that they were beaten on their merits. Year by year Ireland becomes stronger in its cricket, and I.Z. must find better bowling and safer batting if they hope ever to win again. The Viceregal team of fifteen was much too strong, and Byrne's bowling most destructive. There is no doubt that the reverend gentleman is one of the few good amateur bowlers of the day; his pace about the same as old Hillyer's, his style a great deal like that of Mr. Charles Hazrene. A rival cleric was asked what Byrne's bowling was remarkable for. We give his answer—was it jealousy that prompted that answer? No, our professor was never jealous; it was, we imagine, to bring in his jocular learning. "It is remarkable," he said, for what Aristotle calls euthetia, or simplicity." If he was right I Zingari must hide their diminished head, but for once the professor made a mistake. But whilst we are on the subject of jokes we cannot omit to mention a ready answer of a gallant Hussar. During the vice-regal match the best bat in Ireland was playing in his very best form. "It is a shame," said some captious Zingaro, "to play that man in your fifteen; he has nothing to do with the Viceregal." "Honi soi qui maly pense" was the witty response of the popular owner of Caramel and Chimney Sweep. The Lord-Lieutenant played a real good innings, and caused a change in the bowling. Having mastered the fasts, he fell a victim to the slows. Defeated Zingari, you all tried to do your duty, but if the club were to revive an old custom, and give a dinner to the most worthy, you would all agree that "Bay Middleton" should be the guest of the evening. A timely hint, which may be worthy for future consideration. And now farewell to all. Though your old leader has left you to fight your southern battles without him, he is still present in spirit, and wishes you all the success that your good cricket, your untiring energy, and your good humour richly deserve.

OUR ROYAL GRAND MASTER'S INTENDED VISIT TO INDIA AND CEYLON.

The official intelligence that his Royal Highness the Prince of Wales intends to visit Ceylon in December has been received with the utmost enthusiasm by all classes in the Colony. The press, both English and vernacular, has expressed its anticipations of the good feeling which the Prince's visit will excite toward the Crown and the Home Government, and all classes are prepared to give his Royal Highness a most hearty reception. So far are the natives from grudging the expenses of his Royal Highness's visit, that the two leading vernacular journals, the Prodeopoya and the Kirna, have both earnestly urged that the reception given by the Government to its Royal visitor should be such as will do honour to the island and at the same time make his Royal Highness carry away with him pleasant impressions of it.

A public meeting of the inhabitants of Colombo was held in the Town Hall, and was well attended by representatives of all races. A committee was appointed, with Mr. C. P. Layard, C.M.G., Government Agent of the Western Province, as chairman, to organize the fêtes and illuminations which are to be given in honour of the Prince. An address is to be presented by the Colombo Municipality, and the ratepayers have requested that £5000 should be voted from the town funds for a basket of native workmanship in which the address is to be enclosed.

The Prince's movements during his Ceylon tour have been arranged as follows:—His Royal Highness will steam across from Tuticorin to Colombo, a voyage of 86 hours, and will land here on Saturday, the 11th of December. He will be received by the Governor, the chief officials, and a number of the leading colonists, and on landing will step into the train and proceed at once to Kandy, the beautiful mountain capital of the island. Here he will spend Sunday quietly, and will have an opportunity of seeing the beautiful glimpses of Ceylon mountain scenery from the hills which overhang the Governor's pavilion, and also of visiting the fine Botanical Gardens at Peradeniya. On Monday, the 14th of December, his Royal Highness will return to Colombo, where the Governor will hold a lever, and an out-door entertainment of some sort will be given. The foundation stone of the new breakwater will be laid by his Royal Highness the same afternoon, and in the evening a grand ball is to be given, the town will be illuminated, and a display of fireworks will be made. On the 15th the Prince will again embark and sail round the island to Tricomalee, where he will enjoy a few days' sport among the elephants.

ROYAL MASONIC INSTITUTION FOR BOYS.

On Monday, 6th inst., the newly appointed Head Master, Rev. Dr. Morris, before the assembled pupils, at their request, presented to the Matron, Miss Hall, a handsome musical album, at a cost of four guineas and a-half, spontaneously contributed by the entire school. The presentation was intended to mark the boys' appreciation of Miss Hall's long and constant kindness in the discharge of her duties, her care for their comfort and welfare, and her attention to their daily requirements, so far as her sphere of domestic management is concerned. In acting as the spokesman of his pupils, and, on their behalf, making this presentation Dr. Morris expressed himself in most suitable terms, and in reply Miss Hall most warmly thanked her young friends for so valuable a mark of their regard and esteem.

Obituary.

BRO. D. MITCHELL, P.M. 54.

On Monday night, the 6th inst., between eight and nine o'clock, Bro. Dan Mitchell, P.M., Hope Lodge, 54, departed this life at his residence in River-street, after a short sickness. Those brethren who saw Bro. Mitchell a few days before death did not think for a moment that his departure from among us was so near at hand. As each brother was informed of his death they felt deeply affected at so sudden and unexpected news. Bro. Mitchell was initiated into Masonry about twelve or thirteen years ago, and became distinguished among the brethren for his good attendance, steady working, and ever zealous in promoting the harmony and prosperity of the lodge, which gained the esteem and confidence of the brethren, and he was unanimously elected to the important office of W.M., and was installed accordingly in 1870, and discharged the duties of that office with credit to himself and satisfaction to the lodge. He was interred in the Rochdale Cemetery on Friday afternoon, and the brethren, in order to pay the last tribute of respect to our much lamented brother, attended in white ties and gloves. Brethren present—Bros. James Clegg, John Jones, Henry Chadwick, John Wild, Cockroft Smith, Ed. T. Fletcher, James Hutchinson, James Burnish, J.W.; A. Barker, S.W.; John Ashworth, W.M.; Edmund Lord, W.M.; Rd. Simpson, W.M.; David Buckley, P.M.; James Holt, P.M.; Ralph Rawstron, P.M.; Sam. Lord, P.M.; Wm. Briggs, P.M.; James Midgley, P.M.; Wm. Davies, P.M.; and a number of brethren, mostly P.M.'s, attended as private friends.

THE COSMOPOLITAN MASONIC CALENDAR, DIARY, AND POCKET BOOK FOR 1876.

A form has been forwarded within the last twelve or fourteen days to the W.M. of every London lodge, respectfully requesting that the name and number of the lodge, place, day and months of meeting might be filled in and returned as speedily as possible, in order that corrections, where needed, may be made in the Diary and Pocket Book for 1876, which will be ready about October 1st. As many lodges do not re-assemble until October and November, a large number of the applications will not unfortunately reach the W.M. until too late for the publication. The publisher will therefore be very thankful to any W.M. or other officer, or members, who will favour him by forwarding the above information as early as possible to the Office, 198, Fleet Street, London. A regular form will be sent, when required, on receipt of name and address.

COLONIAL AND FOREIGN SUBSCRIBERS are informed that acknowledgements of remittances received will in future be published in the first number of every month.

NOTICE.—It is very necessary for our friends to advise us of all money orders they remit, more especially those from the United States of America, and India; otherwise we cannot tell where to credit them.

METROPOLITAN.

BURDETT COUTTS LODGE (No. 1278).—The brethren of this lodge met on the 16th inst., at their usual quarters, the Approach Tavern, Victoria Park, to install their seventh Master, and a very goodly attendance honoured the event. Of members and visitors the following is the list:—J. G. Harris, W.M.; J. I. Ashburner, I.P.M.; W. J. Crutch, S.W.; Wm. Toye, J.W.; C. K. Crouch, S.D.; A. Lazarus, I.G.; Henry Lloyd, P.M.; James Terry, P.M., Treas.; G. Ward Verry, P.M., Sec.; W. T. Christian, D.C.; Marx Gross, W.S.; H. G. Buss, Barker, Defriez, Gould, Ewin, Raven, Witherick, Sleaf, Davis, Ferry, Hastelow, T. Lloyd, Jennings, Ch'tson, Jones, Lloyd, sen., Shephard, Aitken, Berry, Prestage, Birchall, Loveday, Macklin, Wallington, and Nicholson. Visitors:—W. G. Brooks, S.W. 902; J. Southwood, J.W. 1260; W. H. Brand, 1524; W. Snowdon, D.C. 901; T. Lewis, 65; G. Seddon, J.D. 174; M. J. Cooke, 23; B. Cundick, J.W. 1421; E. Wilks, 1305; J. Miles, 65; S. Davis, Joppa; D. Barnett, 141; T. Austen, P.M. 933; W. Clouston, P.M. 33; E. Payne, 142; W. H. Lee, W.M. 1524; E. J. Allen, I.G. 733; H. Massey, P.M. 619 ("Freemason"); and D. Hodges, 1382. The work done was the reading and confirmation of the minutes of the previous meeting, the reception of the auditors' report, the election of Messrs. W. Latham and W. Aitken for initiation, the election of Bros. J. J. Berry, 554, and Thomas Jennings, 554, as joining members, the initiation of Mr. W. Aitken, the passing of Bro. Ferry, and the installation of Bro. Crutch as W.M. The W.M., Bro. J. G. Harris, did the initiation and passing, and Bro. James Terry, G.D.C., and Past G.S.B., Herts, Secretary of the Royal Masonic Benevolent Institution, and P.M. of this and several other lodges, installed Bro. W. J. Crutch. The brethren appointed as his officers for the year were:—W. Toye, S.W.; C. K. Crouch, J.W.; James Terry, Treas.; G. W. Verry, Sec.; A. Lazarus, S.D.; W. T. Christian, J.D.; M. Gross, I.G.; Burdell, D.C.; Barker, W.S.; and Gilchrist, Tyler. When the ceremony had been completed by the delivery of the addresses, the new W.M. proposed a vote of thanks to Bros. Terry and Verry, to the former for the able way in which he presided on the occasion of the presentation of the chairs to the lodge by the Baroness Burdett Coutts, and to the latter for the great trouble and labour he had had as Secretary to the lodge in making the arrangements. The W.M. said that the presidency on such an occasion required a great amount of tact and judgment, and much skill and ability. Every brother and every lady present on that occasion had witnessed such skill and ability, and to his management was in a great measure due the great success attained on that day. Every one was highly delighted with the way in which all the arrangements were carried out; and the distinguished guests of the lodge, including the Baroness, had expressed their delight. Her ladyship testified to it by inviting the company to her garden party the following Monday, besides mentioning before her departure what a happy day she had spent. At that garden party, the members of the lodge, one and all, were greeted with the greatest cordiality, which would ever be remembered by them, and the day was spent as cheerfully and harmoniously as any one could have desired. As for the general success the brethren have under marked obligations to Bro. Terry, he would move the vote of thanks which he had proposed. Bro. J. G. Harris, I.P.M., seconded the motion with the greatest cordiality, and Bro. Lloyd, P.M., having supported it, it was carried with acclamation. Bro. Terry in acknowledging the compliment in a very few words explained, that while he was always happy to do anything that would contribute to the happiness of the brethren, and the prosperity of the lodge, he was amply repaid for what he had done at the presentation referred to by the gratification of having to preside on so important an occasion. He however, could not take to himself the acknowledgments of the brethren for more than he had done, and he must inform the brethren that the far greater labour had fallen on Bro. Verry. Bro. Ashburner thought that a testimonial should be presented to both these brethren, but as this was not pressed, Bro. Verry also acknowledged the vote of thanks, and detailed some of the labours that had to be undergone in supervising the building of the chairs, and arranging for the presentation to the satisfaction of all the brethren. The brethren then closed down, and adjourned to a capital banquet supplied by Bro. Thomas Lloyd. The customary toasts were proposed and honoured, and the intervals between the various toasts were occupied with some excellent singing, besides some choice instrumental music by Bro. G. T. H. Seddon, of 554 and 933. The initiate, Bro. Aitken, expressed his pleasure at being admitted a member of the fraternity, and Bro. Harris, I.P.M., proposed "The Health of the W.M.," expressing his confidence that the lodge would be always well worked while under his direction, as he had given ample proofs that afternoon in investing his officers that he was a fluent deliverer of the ritual of Freemasonry. The W.M. replied that as the brethren had placed him in the chair of the lodge he thanked them heartily for it, and he would endeavour to make the year prosperous. He looked upon it as a great pride to any Mason to become Warden and Master of the lodge in which he was initiated, and as this was his mother lodge he would do all he could to add lustre to its already brilliant names. Bros. W. H. Lee and Brooks replied for "The Visitors," and a very handsome Past Master's jewel was presented to Bro. Harris, who has performed the duties of the year most creditably, and to the entire satisfaction of the brethren. Bro. Harris thanked the brethren sincerely for their kindness, and was proud to say that he was the second initiate of the Burdett Coutts Lodge that had passed through its chair. The toast of "The Officers" was afterwards given, responded to by Bro. Toye, S.W.; and Bro. Gilchrist having given the "Tyler's Toast," the brethren separated.

PROVINCIAL.

SMALLBRIDGE.—PROBITY AND FREEDOM LODGE (No. 367).—This lodge held its monthly meeting on Thursday, the 16th of September, at the Bull's Head Hotel, Smallbridge, near Rochdale. Present: Bros. John James Ashworth, W.M.; William Schofield, S.W.; William J. Kinder, S.D.; Alfred Thos. Shore, J.D.; William Beswick, Sec.; C. M. Jones, P.M., Treas. The lodge was opened in due form at 7.30 p.m. by the Worshipful Master. The minutes of last regular meeting were read and declared faithfully recorded. The ballot having been taken for Mr. Henry Ashworth, was declared favourable, and he was initiated by Bro. Jones, P.M., in a very impressive manner. Bro. Swift was passed to the Second Degree by Bro. Davies, P.M. The lodge was closed in peace and harmony at 9.30 p.m., when the brethren sat down to a banquet.

STOKESLEY.—CLEVELAND LODGE (No. 543).—The monthly meetings of the Cleveland Lodge were resumed after the summer recess on Monday evening, at the Golden Lion Hotel, when all the officers were present, and there was a fair attendance of other brethren. The W.M., besides the labour of opening and closing in the three degrees, had a raising, a passing, and an initiation, the whole of the ceremonies being performed in a very creditable manner. Though living many miles away in Glaisdale, with a wide practice as a country surgeon, Bro. Richardson has rarely missed the meetings of his lodge since his initiation, and since he was elected to the chair of K.S. his devotion to his duties has won him the admiration of all his brethren in the lodge, who trust his good example will long be followed.

HARWICH.—STAR OF THE EAST LODGE (No. 650).—The annual meeting of this lodge was held at the Pier Hotel, Harwich, on Monday, 13th inst., when Bro. G. Gard Pye, S.W., Angel Lodge, Colchester, was installed as Worshipful Master. The installation ceremony was ably and impressively performed by Bro. the Rev. C. J. Martyn, P.G. Chaplain of England, there being present Bro. W. Clark, R.W., Deputy Provincial Grand Master, Essex. The Provincial Grand Lodge of Essex was also represented by Bro. J. Wright Carr, P.G. Sec. At the conclusion of the ceremony the newly-elected W.M. proceeded to invest his officers as follows:—Bros. James Durrant, I.P.M. and D.C.; Jonathan Dunlop, S.W.; S. Dutton, jun., J.W.; S. Dutton, sen., Sec. and Treas.; J. Cartledge, S.D.; W. Oxenham, J.D.; S. J. Newton, I.G.; W. Downs and G. S. Smith, Stewards; R. Barlow, Tyler. There was a large attendance of visiting brethren, chiefly from Colchester; and letters regretting their inability to be present were read from the R.W. the P.G. Master (Bro. R. J. Bagshaw) and others. The brethren afterwards had a banquet, admirably provided by host Brice. W.M. Pye presided, and in a felicitous manner proposed the loyal and other toasts suitable to the occasion. The evening was passed in a most harmonious manner, and the company separated before eleven. Among the brethren present (in addition to those already named) were:—Visitors: Bros. W. F. Laxton, P. Prov. G.S.D. Middlesex, and P.M. 1238; W. Westgate, P. Prov. G.D.C. Suffolk; A. Welch, W.M. 51; A. R. Clench, W.M. 607; T. Eustace, P.M. and S.W. 697; W. Rivers, P.M. 74; W. Richey, P.M. 700; T. J. Ralling, Sec. 51; J. Hanly, P.G.S. and I.G. 51; F. Wright, 213, 697, 1500; A. Tennant, 153 (late 179, Gibraltar); T. M. Middleton, 51; John J. C. Turner, Org. 51; T. H. Naylor, 697; Mills (Cape of Good Hope), Hennemeyer, 697; H. Everett, 697; W. G. Siggers, 697; T. Downing, 697; C. Gunner, 51 and 697; A. J. Staines, 51. Members of 650: Bros. R. Guy, T. H. Naylor, J. H. Robinson, W. O. Ward, P.M.; C. Lucas, W. Nickerson, W. Walker, C. J. F. Barker, J. W. C. Butcher, P.M.; R. T. Dickson, P.M.; G. L. Jackson, J. Warren, and S. A. Wymark, P.M.

RUNCORN.—ELLESMEERE LODGE (No. 758).—The regular monthly meeting of this lodge was held at the Freemasons' Hall, on Wednesday, Sept. 15th, 1875, at half-past six o'clock. The following is a list of the officers and others present:—Bros. Robert Rigby, W.M.; Edward Aston, S.W.; James Warburton, J.W.; William Garnett, S.D.; Charles Gerrard, J.D.; J. Fothergill, P.M.; William Wass, I.G.; Horsfall, Sec.; I. W. Lightburn, Org.; Geo. Purver, Tyler; George Moss, William Mellor, William Lyon, Thomas Gregson Giles. The minutes of the previous meeting were read and unanimously confirmed, when the W.M. informed the members that Bro. Couth was a candidate for being raised, who, after giving satisfactory proofs of his efficiency in the former degree, was entrusted and retired. During his absence the lodge was opened in the Third Degree. On Bro. Couth's re-admittance, he was raised to the Sublime Degree of Master Mason, through which Bro. Fothergill, P.M., officiated in the place of the Worshipful Master of the lodge, who was indisposed. The working tools, as well as the Tracing Board, were also lucidly explained with effect and impression. The lodge having been closed at 8.15, the brethren subsequently adjourned to an excellent supper provided by Bro. Jonathan Wilson, at the Commercial Hotel. After the repast, Bro. J. Fothergill, P.M., gave the toasts of "The Queen," "Bro. H.R.I.I. the Prince of Wales, M.W.G.M.," and the rest of the Royal Family," and "Our Masonic Rulers, Supreme and Subordinate." The next was "The Worshipful Master." He was certain it would be received with enthusiasm, which he well deserved. All who had watched Bro. Rigby's career would be well pleased to see him occupy the honourable position which he now did, and every one must wish that he might long be spared to adorn the Order to which he belongs. The W.M. said he could hardly find words to express the gratitude he felt for the manner in which his health was proposed, and the enthusiastic manner in which it had been responded to. If his humble efforts during his year of office could in any way justify their good opinion, he would use them to the utmost. His endeavour would be to further the best interests of the lodge, and promote the harmony and good fellowship of every member. The W.M. next gave "The Health of the P.M.," to which Bro. Fothergill responded. "The Newly-initiated Brother," to which Bro. Couth responded. The next toast given was "The Officers of the Lodge," to which all officers responded. "The Visitors" was the next, responded to by Bro. Diggs, W.M. of St. John's Lodge. The evening was greatly enlivened by excellent songs being given by Bros. W. Garnett, S.D.; James Warburton, J.W.; and C. Gerrard, J.D. At 10.30 the brethren parted, having spent a very pleasant evening together.

WARRINGTON.—GILBERT GREENALL LODGE (No. 1250).—The regular meeting of this lodge was held on the 14th inst., at the Masonic Rooms, Sankey-street. The W.M. (Bro. Richardson) took the chair at 6.30 o'clock, and was supported by Bros. Reid, S.W.; Crosier, J.W., other officers and members, and several distinguished visitors. The minutes of the last meeting were read and confirmed, and there being no regular business, the W.M. proceeded to present Bro. D. W. Finney, P.M., with a testimonial for his services as Hon. Secretary to the lodge from its formation. The testimonial consisted of a very handsome skeleton drawing-room timepiece and a P.M.'s gold jewel. The timepiece bore the following inscription:—"Presented to Bro. D. W. Finney, P.M., P.Z., etc., by the brethren of the Gilbert Greenall Lodge of Freemasons, Warrington (of which he was one of the founders), in recognition of his services as Hon. Secretary for the past six years." The W.M. said he was very pleased to be the mouthpiece of the lodge on that occasion. As one of the founders of the lodge he was associated with Bro. Finney, and others who were then in the room; and he well remembered the arduous duties which devolved upon the Secretary in those early days, and he could say from personal knowledge that all those duties had been discharged by the worthy brother in a most highly satisfactory manner. It was not his intention to make a long speech, but he could say with the greatest confidence and satisfaction that the late Secretary was eminently entitled to this substantial mark of esteem at their hands. He hoped he might live long, and that these things might become mementos to his children of the third and fourth generation. Bro. Finney was grateful to the lodge for the very handsome testimonial which had just been presented to him, and for the very flattering way in which the W.M. had been pleased to speak of his humble services as Secretary. He should always look back with pride and satisfaction to the time when he was Secretary of the lodge. He was reminded by what had fallen from the W.M. of the time, now nearly seven years ago, when a few of them met in that room to discuss the advisability of forming a new lodge. The lodge was consecrated on the 12th April, 1869, and from that time up to the present it had been his pleasure to act as its Secretary. He had always tried to do his duty and to support the dignity of Masonry, and whether he had been successful or not he must leave them to judge, but of this he was sure, he had had the honour of serving under six W. Masters, who would under any circumstances have done credit to any lodge. He was not prepared to make a long speech, and he would conclude by wishing every prosperity to the Gilbert Greenall Lodge. Another pleasing feature in the programme was the presentation of a very handsome gold P.M.'s jewel to Bro. R. Brierley, I.P.M., who also returned thanks. The brethren afterwards sat down to an excellent supper supplied by Bro. Arthur Potters, after which the usual loyal and Masonic toasts were given and responded to, and the brethren separated in perfect harmony.

GREAT STANMORE.—ABERCORN LODGE (No. 1540).—The last regular meeting of this lodge for the season was held at the Abercorn Hotel on the 7th inst., Bro. Robert Helsdon, W.M., in the chair, supported by the officers. The lodge was opened in solemn prayer to the First and Second Degrees at 2.30 p.m. Bros. Best, Swatton, and Felton, after a successful examination, were impressively and separately raised to the Sublime Degree of M.M. The lodge was then resumed, and Bro. Eversden having shown great proficiency, was passed to the Second Degree, and the Tracing Board fully explained. The ballot was then unanimously taken for Messrs. Thompson, Lloyd, and Hackney, and they were respectively initiated to the First Degree. The usual business being completed, the lodge was closed at 6.30, and the brethren met at banquet in perfect harmony, the usual musical contributions by the brethren closing the day's labours with general satisfaction. Bro. Woodstock, P.M. 749, and Bro. Ray, 188, were amongst the visitors.

Knights Templar.

PRESCOT.—WILLIAM DE LA MORE PRECEPTORY.—A convocation of the Knights belonging to the William de la More preceptory was held at the New Masonic Hall, Prescott, on Thursday, the 16th inst. This was the first meeting in the new Masonic Hall at Prescott, and all the arrangements gave universal satisfaction. The room is a good one, and very comfortable, and there is no doubt that the Knights Templar, as well as the other Masonic bodies in the neighbourhood, will experience the benefit of having a meeting-place of their own. The preceptory was opened at 4.45 by Sir Knight Dr. J. Kellett Smith, M.R.C.S., the E.P., and amongst the others present were Sir Knights G. Turner, P.E.P.; R. Brown, Prelate; Reginald Young, First Captain; Thomas Ashmore, Second Captain; Joseph Wood, Treas.; William Tyrer, Almoner; W. Thomson, Captain of the Lines; P. H. Whittaker, &c. The minutes were read and confirmed, and two brethren were balloted for and elected. Sir Knight Reginald Young was unanimously elected Eminent Preceptor for the ensuing year, and Sir Knight Wood was re-elected Treasurer for the same period. Sir Knights Young and Brown were elected Auditors. Apologies were read for non-attendance from several Sir Knights. One brother was proposed for installation, and the preceptory was closed in solemn form, after which the Sir Knights sat down to an excellent banquet.

GLASGOW.—LODGE ST. JOHN (No. 34).—This most ancient and prosperous lodge met on Monday, the 13th inst., in their hall, 213, Buchanan-street, Glasgow, for the purpose of admitting into the ancient order of Freemasonry Mr. A. Stewart, who had been regularly proposed and vouched for, and no objection offered. On account of Mr. A. Stewart being about to leave Glasgow for India in the course of a few days, the whole three degrees were conferred upon him at this meeting. Mr. John McGaw also received the three degrees at this meeting. Bros. Wm. Anderson, John McGill, and J. Mayberry were passed to the degree of Fellow Craft, and Bros. Ross, Blackwood, Anderson, McGill, and Mayberry raised to the degree of Master Mason—Bro. Wm. Bell, R.W.M., officiating in the First Degree; John Dick, Sec., officiating in the Second Degree; and John Monro, R.W.M., Lodge Commercial (No. 360) officiating in the Third Degree. The whole of the degrees were worked in a thorough, efficient, and masterly style. There was a good attendance (as usual) at this meeting, and at the conclusion of the business the lodge was closed.

GLASGOW.—LODGE ST. MARK (No. 102).—A specially interesting meeting of this lodge was held within their hall, in Buchanan-street, Glasgow, on Monday, the 13th inst. Bro. J. F. Mitchell, R.W.M., in the chair. The lodge having been duly opened, the minutes of last meeting read, and some other business disposed of, the chairman called attention to some matters in which they were all interested. He was sorry, he said, to inform them that they were in danger of taking a short road down to the street some night. Owing to the alterations going on in the lower portion of the building, their walls were cracking and subsiding, and a general amount of damage had been done to the place, which would require to be paid for by somebody. Mr. Carrick, of the Royal Hotel, he understood, some time ago bought the property below them, but not theirs, and commenced to alter it. He (the chairman) believed that he had got the sanction of the Dean of Guild Court so to do; but, although other parties were summoned to appear for their interests when the application came before the Court, no information regarding the matter came to any of them (Lodge St. Mark); and he (the chairman) only heard of it after it had passed. That made it the worse for Mr. Carrick; he was bound to repair the damage done to their property. When they discovered that the damage was being done, they got two architects to examine the place, and through their law agents, Messrs. Thomas Stout and Son, sent a letter on the subject to Mr. Carrick, which, as yet, that gentleman had taken no notice of. This was a case in which they had to get reparation, not for wounded feelings, but for wounded walls. If Mr. Carrick wanted to buy their place he must give a price for it; if not, he must pay for the damage done. In answer to inquiries by one or two brethren, the chairman said that Mr. Carrick had asked if they would take £2000 for it, and had been told that the lodge would not take it. The lodge had put no price on it themselves as yet. In further explanation, he stated that that lodge room and its adjuncts had been supposed to belong to St. Mark's Lodge; but, on examination, they found that the property had been made the absolute property of certain members of the lodge—the case thus being that the brethren present and other members had no more right to it than any one else. The members to whom the property had thus been made over were fifteen in number; of these eight were dead, and the seven who remained were the absolute proprietors of that lodge room; and as matters stood the last survivor of that number could say, "This property is mine." It was certainly not intended to have been so in drawing up the deed of conveyance, but simply that the brethren whose names were attached to it should hold it as trustees for the lodge; and, as he understood, that was entirely their own impression. Under the circumstances, what the lodge now wanted to do was to get the trust declared, and assume a greater number of trustees, younger members, to keep it up as the original ones fell off. If, however, the survivors declined to give up their rights—which he did not believe they would—they (the lodge) had not a word to say. Reverting to the matter of Mr. Carrick and his offer of £2000, they considered that their property was worth £2500; and he (the chairman) had taken upon himself to say that they should not take less. In concluding, he explained, in reply to a question on the subject, that the matter of re-arrangement of the trust was presently in process. Bro. James Lang, P.M., said that in coming there that night he was surprised to hear what had been explained with regard to the trusteeship of the lodge. He remembered the drawing up of the deed very well, and he certainly considered that the brethren named were trustees simply. They certainly considered themselves as trustees; and one of the survivors, Bro. A. McDonald, told him so, within a year ago; and he (Bro. Lang) had no doubt that they would all agree as to putting the matter right. The subject then dropped. An interesting feature of the evening was the appearance in the lodge, after long absence, of Bro. Lang, P.M., just mentioned, who is a Masonic veteran. He became a Mason and a member of St. Mark's so far back as December, 1817; and he remarked that he had just come up that night to see how his mother lodge looked fifty-eight years after he had joined it. He was elected R.W.M. in 1843, and held the chair for two years. In a few words the R.W.M. (Bro. Mitchell) expressed the gratification they must all feel at having Bro. Lang with them that night, and hoped they would often see him among them again. The lodge was thereafter closed.

GREENOCK.—LODGE ST. JOHN (No. 175).—An emergency meeting of this flourishing lodge was held in the handsome lodge room on the evening of the 8th inst., when a great deal of business was gone through. The meeting was under the guidance of Bro. Urie, D.M., who was ably supported by Bro. McIntyre, S.W.; Bro. McWatty, J.W., and several of the other office-bearers. No fewer than eight candidates were made, passed, or raised to the Sublime Degree of Master Mason, the work having been performed in a most satisfactory manner. Bro. Rodger, Treasurer, conducted the business of the First and Second Degree, the working tools being explained in a very telling manner, and the lecture, by Bro. McQuarrie, was given in a fluent and correct style. As showing the prosperity of this lodge, we may mention that over 100 members have been made acquainted with the mysteries of the Craft since St. Andrew's Night, a good evidence of the popularity of the R.W.M., Bro. Alex. McMaster. We never attend the meetings of this lodge without being struck with the admirable working of all the office-bearers, and we believe the success attending their efforts is due a good deal to the indefatigable exertions of the Secretary, (Bro. Wm. Wright), who is most attentive to his duties, and most kind and courteous to all, and more particularly to visiting brethren. As the season for more increased business and festive gatherings is fast drawing round, we hope from time to time to be able to give reports of the proceedings.

GLASGOW.—LODGE COMMERCIAL (No. 360).—The brethren of this prosperous and well managed lodge met in their hall, 30, Hope-street, Glasgow, on Friday, the 17th inst. Bros. Monro, R.W.M., in the chair; J. M. Ollit ver, S.W.; T. Graham, J.W. There were also present—Bros. A. Morton, P.M.; J. Davidson, P.M.; D. Lamb, D.M.; J. E. Spiers, S.M.; Wm. Finlay, Treas.; W. H. Bickerton, Sec., and a fair attendance of members of the lodge and visiting brethren. On the lodge being opened, the Secretary read the minutes of last regular meeting, which were confirmed. On the retirement of Bros. Thomson, Wilson, and McLean, Entered Apprentices, the lodge was raised to the degree of F.C., when the aforementioned brethren, who had been properly prepared, re-entered, and were passed to the degree of F.C., Bro. Monro, R.W.M., officiating in his usual masterly style. The lodge was then reduced to the degree of E.A., when Mr. James Colquhoun, who had been regularly proposed, seconded, and balloted for, and no objection offered, received this degree, Bro. D. Lamb, D.M., officiating. There being no further business, the lodge was closed.

GLASGOW.—LODGE ST. VINCENT (No. 553).—On Thursday evening, 16th inst., the long delayed visitation of this lodge by the P.G.L. of Glasgow was made at the regular meeting of No. 553, within the hall rented by them in Kent-road, Glasgow. The deputation was headed by Bro. F. A. Barrow, D.P.G.M.; and included, further, Bros. A. McTaggart, P.G. Sec.; James Gillies, S.D.; John Fraser, G. Thallon, James Balfour, William Phillips, and George Sinclair, Treasurer and Convener of the P.G. Benevolent Fund. The deputation having been received with due honour, and the R.W.M. of the lodge (Bro. R. McDougall) having in customary form acknowledged the supremacy of P.G.L., Bro. Barrow called upon the P.G. Secretary (Bro. McTaggart) to read the report which the deputation had to make as the result of their visit. This bore that the books of the lodge were on the whole in a very fair condition; while at the same time it took notice of several discrepancies as to dates between the roll book and the minute book, where, as a matter of course, both should have corresponded. The funds on hand of the lodge were, as at 27th February last, £29 18s. 7d.; nothing having been given away in charity for the reason that it had not been required. The number of members made during the year reported on was 76, and the sum contributed to the P.G. Benevolent Fund from the entrance fees had been £14. In the course of a few remarks following, and based upon the report read by the Secretary, Bro. Barrow remarked that the P.G.L. of Glasgow was the first to lead the way in these periodical visitations, a chief end and object of which was to give assurance to every member of a lodge within the province that whatever was done in the lodge was under the strict and regular surveillance of a superior body. Upon the whole he was very well pleased with the result of their visit; and the fact that he had in the minutes deprecated strongly the irregularities that had appeared in some of their books, only showed that the P.G.L. were looking after the best interests of the lodge. Further, Bro. Barrow animadverted against the system of giving more than one degree on one night, for which, however, he blamed the Grand Lodge of Scotland. He was a member of the Grand Lodge, and if he remained so it should be the aim of his life to do away with the permission conceded by it to give two or three degrees in one night. In concluding, Bro. Barrow referred to the subject of admission fees; giving it as his opinion that these were at present disgracefully low within the province, and that the minimum figure should be five guineas. The R.W.M. (Bro. McDougall) having shortly replied to the remarks of Bro. Barrow and the Secretary, the deputation withdrew in order as they had entered.

GLASGOW.—LODGE DRAMATIC (No. 571).—The third regular meeting of this lodge was held in St. Mark's Hall, Buchanan-street, Glasgow, on Wednesday, 15th inst., Bro. W. J. E. Dobson, R.W.M., presiding. Immediately after the opening of the lodge, the S.W., Bro. H. W. Jackman, said that being desirous of giving some substantial evidence of the interest he took in it, he begged to present them with a box of working tools, and accompany the same with a wish that every candidate in whose making they might be used would turn out to be a good and worthy brother of Lodge Dramatic. The receipt of the gift (a very handsome box of tools it is) was duly acknowledged by the chairman; who, in so doing, took occasion to mention that they had been under many obligations to Bro. Jackman on different occasions; and he (the chairman) could truly say that they had never had a more willing and assiduous co-worker than their worthy brother, the Senior Warden. Thereafter, the compliment of honorary affiliation to the lodge was conferred upon Bros. W. H. Bickerton, 972, E.C.; John Stewart, 360; and J. B. Hardie, 102. The lodge then proceeded to the business of initiation, when Lawrence Rankin Mitchell, engineer, South Portland-street, received the E.A. degree at the hands of Bro. Dobson, R.W.M. This concluded the business.

GLASGOW.—ST. ANDREW'S CHAPTER (No. 69).—The regular monthly meeting of this chapter was held in the Masonic Hall, 170, Buchanan-street, on Tuesday, 14th inst. A lodge of Excellent Masters was opened, Comp. G. W. Wheeler, Z. 73, presiding, supported by Comps. Geo. Heron and J. M. Oliver as Senior and Junior Wardens. Minutes of last meeting having been read and confirmed, Mark Masters R. C. Lynes and David, P. Boyd, of Abbey Chapter, 76, Paisley, were admitted on behalf of that chapter, and received the degree of E.M. Before closing the lodge, Comps. Jas. Anderson, Z. 76, and Nicholson, 76, who had to leave to catch the last train for Paisley, severally thanked Comp. Humphreys, Z. 69, and the other members present for their ready assistance in forwarding the interests of Chapter 76. A R.A. Chapter was then opened, with the following Office-bearers:—Comps. T. D. Humphreys, Z.; Geo. Heron, H.; G. W. Wheeler, acting J.; J. M. Oliver, E.; Wm. Thomas, Treas., and others, when the same two candidates for R.A. Masonry were re-admitted and duly received into companionship, Comp. Wheeler again officiating in his usual masterly style, ably assisted by Comp. J. Balfour, P.Z. 73, who on this occasion undertook the arduous duties of First Soj. The nomination of Office-bearers for the ensuing year, was the next business before the chapter, but after some discussion, it was agreed to postpone that matter until the 23rd inst., when it was hoped there would be a larger attendance of members of the chapter to participate in so important a matter. There being no further business before the chapter, it was closed in due form.

FREEMASONRY IN INDIA.

Our brethren in the Craft on this side of the water will be pleased to hear that the District Grand Lodge of Bengal has appointed a committee under the resolution passed on the 24th June, 1875, which has for its object the building and maintaining a Masonic Hall worthy of the Freemasons of Bengal and of the capital of India. The committee met at the Freemasons' Hall, in Bentinck Street, Calcutta, on the 3rd July last, and the whole of the necessary resolutions were passed to carry out the scheme for the building of the New Masonic Temple. A company has been created, and is called "The Bengal Freemasons' Hall Building Company," with a capital of 150,000 rupees, divided into 100 rupees each, bearing interest at 6 per cent., and the necessary officers and directors have been appointed. The site for the new temple has been fully determined upon, and nothing remains but the completion of the list of shareholders, which already numbers 150. There are still some 500 shares at the disposal of the committee, and it is hoped some of the Craft on this side of the water may feel disposed to assist our India brethren in their laudable and praiseworthy scheme. It is anticipated that everything will be in readiness for the commencement of the building during the visit of H.R.H. the Prince of Wales to India, and no doubt a very forcible appeal will be made to him to inaugurate the event by laying the foundation stone himself. The prospectus and plans can be seen at Messrs. Grindlay and Co.'s, Parliament Street, London, by whom all inquiries will be given and enquiries answered, and by whom subscriptions will be received.

MAZAGON.—LODGE CORCORAN (No. 757, E.C.).—The regular meeting of this lodge was held in the Freemasons' Hall, Mazagon, on Saturday, the 21st August, 1875. Present: Wor. Bros. W. C. Rowe, W.M.; G. R. Henderson, I.P.M.; B. Robinson, P.M. Bros. F. Burdett, as S.W.; W. Fearn, as J.W.; F. Burdett, Treas.; O. Tomlinson, Sec.; J. Silks, S.D.; W. G. Davie, J.D. J. E. Tyers, Org.; J. F. Grew, Steward; L. Thomas,

I.G.; J. W. Seager, Tyler. Members: Bros. J. N. Dady, P.M. No. 1359; J. May, W. E. Craddock, H. Watson, W. W. Wilson, W. Hobbs, J. Holt, J. Anderson, J. Weddle, F. Langford, E. Lucas, J. H. Burrett, C. Peters, R. Ballard, and others. Visitors: Bros. A. McKenzie, P.M. 944; H. W. Barrow, P.M. 944; F. Connell, W.M. 1100; W. Fraut, R. Raymond, C. Parker, &c. The lodge was opened with prayer at 7 p.m. The summons convening the meeting was read. The minutes of the last meeting of the Permanent Committee were read and adopted. The ballot was taken for Dr. Joseph Gerson Da Cunha as a candidate for initiation, and announced duly elected. Mr. Ernest Fuelling having passed the ballot in July, and Dr. Joseph Gerson Da Cunha properly prepared, were duly and respectively admitted into the secrets and mysteries of ancient Freemasonry. The Secretary then read a letter from the D.G. Secretary, forwarding the Grand Lodge certificates of Bros. Isaac Holt and C. Peters. The certificates were then duly signed by and delivered to Bros. Isaac Holt and C. Peters. Then read a letter from Bro. J. P. Hoare, Aden, acknowledging the receipt of his clearance certificate. A letter was read from Mr. Stephen Rust, Norfolk, England, stating our late Bro. William Rust died at Hull, on the 12th May, 1875, and the Secretary was directed by the Wor. Master to send a letter of condolence in the name of the lodge to Mr. Stephen Rust, father of the deceased. The Secretary read an application for relief from Mrs. A. Cesserat, and was directed to refer the matter to the Permanent Committee for their consideration. Then read a letter from Bro. F. S. Llewellyn, asking to be placed on the absent list, which was accordingly done. Then read a letter of thanks from Right Wor. Bro. H. H. Locke, Past Deputy D.G.M. Bengal, Vice-President of the Bengal Masonic Fund of Benevolence, in reference to information wanted of a brother. One gentleman was proposed as a candidate for initiation. Rupees six annas four only were then taken from the subscription box, and duly taken into account. There being no further business before the lodge, it was closed with solemn prayer at 9.30 p.m.

BOMBAY.—HOLMESDALE IN THE EAST LODGE OF MARK MASTERS (No. 72, E.C.).—The regular meeting of this lodge was held at the Masonic Hall, Bombay, August 18th. Present: W. Bros. C. E. Mitchell, W.M.; A. McKenzie, I.P.M.; A. Swift, P.M.; W. C. Rowe, S.W.; H. De Latham, J.W.; C. Sudball, M.O.; O. Tomlinson, S.O.; J. E. Tyers, J.O.; B. Robinson, S.D.; A. Swift, as J.D.; T. Mills, as I.G.; W. G. Davie, Sec.; W. Natchell, Tyler. The lodge having been tyled, was opened in due form at 6.45. The summons convening the meeting having been read, the minutes of the last regular meeting were read and confirmed. The minutes of the last Permanent Committee were read and adopted. The ballot was then taken for Bro. T. E. Cochrane, which proved clear. Bros. C. Parker and C. Peters were then advanced to the honourable degree of M.M.M. Bro. T. Mills was then requested by the W.M. to come forward to sign and receive his Grand Mark Lodge certificate, which he did. A letter was read from Bro. B. Frankeon, Secretary of Lodge 500, returning thanks to W. Bro. A. McKenzie for the kind manner in which he came forward to their assistance in connection with the installation of Bro. Capt. Holloway. A letter was read from H. D. Barrow, referring to the testimonial for W. Bro. Hussey. The W.M. then invested Bro. C. Parker as J.D. There being no further business before the lodge, it was closed in peace and harmony at 8.45.

PUBLIC HEALTH CONGRESS AT BRUSSELS.

GENERAL REGULATIONS FOR BRITISH EXHIBITORS.

1. An International Exhibition and Congress will take place at Brussels in 1876, under the Gracious Protection of H.M. the King of the Belgians, the Honorary Presidency of H.R.H. the Comte de Flandre, and the patronage of the City of Brussels; and will be directed by a Belgian Executive specially constituted for the occasion.
2. The Exhibition will be held in buildings specially erected in the park at Brussels. It will be opened on the 15th June, and closed about the 1st October.
3. Nothing will be admitted to the Exhibition but what comes strictly within the limits of the published classification, and is distinguished by merit, interest, or superiority of some kind.
4. The introduction of dangerous substances is strictly prohibited, and special measures will be adopted in regard to inconvenient matters.
5. Each exhibitor will receive a diploma, certifying that the honour of admission to the Exhibition has been obtained.
6. The apparatus and other articles exhibited will be submitted to an international jury, who will make the awards.
7. The Exhibition building will be a temporary bonded warehouse, no Customs charges being imposed either on reception or return of foreign contributions, but duties will have to be paid on articles sold.
8. All packages, in order to insure admission duty free, must bear the printed official labels that will be furnished to exhibitors.
9. No sketch, copy, or reproduction of any objects exhibited will be allowed to be taken without the special permission of the exhibitor and the approval of the executive. The right of permitting general views to be taken is, however, reserved by the executive.
10. Each exhibitor will receive a non-transferable season ticket, subject to the usual conditions, giving admission to the Exhibition and to all the official ceremonies in connection with it.
11. An Official General Catalogue in French in which exhibitors may, at fixed charges, insert explanatory notices immediately following their official class entries, will be published by the Belgian Executive. There will also be published a Special Official Catalogue of the British Exhibits.

12. Prices may be attached to the articles exhibited, and the usual places of their sale notified.

13. Under special conditions, small portable articles, such as can be immediately replaced, may be sold and removed at any time from the building. Other articles may be sold, but must not be removed until after the close of the Exhibition.

14. The Belgian Executive will take all the usual precautions to preserve objects exhibited from injury, and the building will be watched by active officials. The executive, however, will not be in any way responsible for losses by theft, damage by fire, or other causes. Exhibitors can effect insurances on their own account.

15. The charges for space, per square yard, or fraction of a yard, are as follows:—

In the Main Building, floor space, 30s.; wall space, 15s. In Sheds, Tents, &c., floor space, 18s.

In the Open Ground, 10s.

But the minimum chargeable to each exhibitor is fixed at 30s., how small soever the space actually occupied.

The square yard only gives the right to one yard of frontage. All applications must specify the number of yards required in frontage and depth.

Articles standing on the floor and against a wall must not exceed 5 feet in height. Any further space covered above will be charged as wall space.

As the arrangement of exhibits in the building will be strictly according to the classification, a separate form of application must be filled in for the space required in each class in which it is proposed to exhibit.

16. Agents may be appointed by exhibitors, but such nominations must be officially confirmed after communication to the London Committee.

17. Exhibitors or their agents will be responsible for the packing, forwarding, receiving, unpacking and repacking of goods, for the opening and at the closing of the Exhibition respectively, and will have to bear all charges connected therewith. The Belgian Government will reduce by one-half the rates of transport by railway; and all other possible concessions on the rates of transport by land and water will be obtained.

18. All arrangements for the display of articles exhibited, including special constructions, stands, cases, tables, shelves, and the mounting of machinery and apparatus, will be at the charge of exhibitors, the plans being previously submitted and approved.

19. Everything intended for exhibition must be delivered at the building before the 1st May, 1876, and be opened in the presence of the Belgian Custom House officers.

20. All objects should be removed immediately after the close of the Exhibition; any remaining in the building after the 1st November, 1876, will be taken possession of by the executive at the cost and risk of the owners. Whatever remains unclaimed after the 31st December will be sold, and the proceeds disposed of by the executive.

21. Exhibitors must conform in every way to the present and such other rules and regulations as may from time to time be issued.

Applications for space must be made immediately; the necessary forms, and all information respecting the Exhibition, may be obtained of Mr. Edmund Johnson, Commissaire Délégué, at the offices of the Exhibition, 3, Castle-street, Holborn, London.

THE COSMOPOLITAN MASONIC CALENDAR, DIARY, AND POCKET BOOK FOR 1876.

A form has been forwarded within the last twelve or fourteen days to the W.M. of every London lodge, respectfully requesting that the name and number of the lodge, place, day and months of meeting might be filled in and returned as speedily as possible, in order that corrections, where needed, may be made in the Diary and Pocket Book for 1876, which will be ready about October 1st. As many lodges do not re-assemble until October and November, a large number of the applications will not unfortunately reach the W.M. until too late for the publication. The publisher will therefore be very thankful to any W.M. or other officer, or members, who will favour him by forwarding the above information as early as possible to the office, 198, Fleet Street, London. A regular form will be sent, when required, on receipt of name and address.

WHAT THEY SAY OF US IN NORTH BRITAIN.

This, one of the most popular and successful of the organs of the Masonic body, continues to supply its numerous readers with useful information regarding the progress of the Order. In addition to publishing elaborate and reliable reports of meetings in Craft, Royal Arch, and Mark Masonry in this country, Canada, the United States, and elsewhere, there appear from week to week interesting and instructive "Notes and Queries," which must prove of much service to the brethren; and in the correspondence columns, also, there are numerous letters on matters attracting attention, which are generally treated in an able and liberal-minded manner. Last week's issue contains two very sensible and well written articles on the subjects of "Scottish Freemasonry" and "Church Restoration," as well as others of a more or less readable nature. In the same number we observe, among the distinguished brethren who have signified their adhesion to the Scottish Masonic Benevolent Fund, several belonging to Renfrewshire, namely, Sir M. R. Shaw Stewart, the Most Worshipful Grand Master of Scotland; Colonel Mure of Caldwell, M.P.; Colonel Campbell of Blythswood; and William Guy, Esq., Johnstone. The places and hours of the meetings of the various lodges are also given, and numerous other items of importance tend to make the "Freemason" almost indispensable to the brethren of the "mystic tie" who wish to keep themselves posted up in what is transpiring in the Masonic world.—Greenock Telegraph and Clyde Shipping Gazette.

LAYING THE FOUNDATION OF A NEW MASONIC HALL IN HALIFAX, NOVA SCOTIA.

The corner stone of the New Masonic Hall, corner of Granville and Salter Streets, was laid with one of the most imposing displays ever made by the Craft in Halifax. The weather was perhaps a trifle too warm for comfort in the early afternoon, and the streets through which the procession had to pass were dustier than they should have been. Otherwise everything favoured the ceremony.

At two o'clock the Grand Lodge met in the old Masonic Hall, Harrington-street, and the Subordinate Lodges met at the same hour in the Skating Rink, South Park-street. After the necessary preliminaries, each body marched to the appointed place of meeting, on Spring Garden-road. As the two bodies met, the Subordinate Lodges opened their columns and allowed the Grand Lodge (headed by the Grand Director of Ceremonies) to pass through to the rear, that being the place of honour in Masonic processions. The procession was now complete in the following order:—

SUBORDINATE LODGES:

(Band of the 66th Halifax Volunteer Battalion of Infantry.)

Kentville Lodge, Kentville, No. 58.

Harmony Lodge, Aylesford, No. 52.

Eastern Star Lodge, Dartmouth, No. 51.

Truro Lodge, Truro, No. 43.

Eureka Lodge, Sheet Harbor, No. 42.

Lodge of St. Mark, Halifax, No. 38.

Conequid Lodge, Truro, No. 37.

Welsford Lodge, Windsor, No. 28.

Union Lodge, Halifax, No. 18.

Keith Lodge, Halifax, No. 17.

Athole Lodge, Halifax, No. 15.

Acadia Lodge, Halifax, No. 14.

Burns Lodge, Halifax, No. 10.

Royal Sussex Lodge, Halifax, No. 6.

Virgin Lodge, Halifax, No. 3.

St. John's Lodge, Halifax, No. 2.

Royal Standard (Registry of the Grand Lodge of England, and chiefly composed of Her Majesty's soldiers and sailors), Halifax.

St. Andrew's Lodge, Halifax, No. 1.

Each Subordinate Lodge was formed in the following order:—

Tyler with drawn sword.

Stewards with white rods.

Entered Apprentices.

Fellow Crafts.

Master Masons.

Two Deacons with rods.

Secretary and Treasurer.

Senior and Junior Wardens with columns.

Past Masters.

Master, supported by two Deacons with rods.

THE GRAND LODGE.

(Band of the 63rd Halifax Volunteer Battalion.)

Grand Tyler with drawn sword.

Grand Stewards with white rods.

Principal Architect, with square, level, and plumb.

Past Grand Chaplains.

Grand Chaplains.

The Five Orders of Architecture.

Past Grand Secretaries and Treasurers.

Grand Secretary and Grand Treasurer.

Bible, Square, and Compasses, supported by two Stewards.

District Deputy Grand Masters.

Past Junior Grand Wardens.

Junior Grand Warden carrying silver vessel with oil.

Past Senior Grand Wardens.

Senior Grand Warden carrying vessel with wine.

Past Deputy Grand Masters.

Deputy Grand Master carrying the golden vessel with corn.

Master of the oldest Lodge carrying the Book of Constitutions.

Grand Master supported by two Deacons with rods.

Grand Standard Bearer.

Grand Sword Bearer with drawn sword.

In this order, with banners flying and bands playing, the procession marched through avenues of people who filled the streets along the route, South through Queen-street to Morris-street, East to Hollis-street, North to George-street, and thence South through Granville-street to the foundation of the new building. When the head of the procession reached the foundation a halt was called, and the columns opened, allowing the Grand Lodge and Senior and Subordinate Lodges to pass through and take precedence.

The scene at this point, when the Masons had taken their positions, was a brilliant one. The whole area of the new building had been covered with substantial seats, rising tier above tier, which were now filled with the Masons' lady friends to the number of about six hundred—the youth, beauty, and fashion of the city. In front were representatives of the Army and Navy, the Dominion and Local Governments, the City Corporation, the Clergy, &c., with their lady friends. Below them, and near the corner stone, which hung suspended from a derrick, were the Grand Master and Officers of the Grand Lodge wearing the brilliant regalia, rich jewels, and other emblems of their rank. Around them, within and without the lines of enclosure, were the Masons generally, to the number of nine hundred, wearing black clothing, white ties and gloves, bouquets of flowers and varied regalia—some having only the simple white lambskin or leathern apron, "the emblem of innocence and the badge of a Mason," and others having more showy ornamented aprons. Outside the Masons' circle was a great gathering of spectators, and many others filled the windows and covered the roofs of the neighbouring houses. Such a scene must be memorable in the annals of Masonry in Halifax.

All being in readiness for the ceremonies, the Grand Marshal, Bro. Charles J. Macdonald, proclaimed silence!

The brethren sang the "Old Hundred," the two bands accompanying them in this and in the subsequent singing.

The Deputy Grand Master, Allan H. Crowe, then addressed the Most Worshipful Grand Master, Col. J. Wimburn Laurie, as follows:

Most Worshipful Grand Master,—The Grand Lodge of Ancient, Free, and Accepted Masons of Nova Scotia, having decided to erect on this site a new Hall for Masonic purposes, and having requested you to lay the corner stone, it becomes my duty to inform you that the necessary arrangements are completed, and that the brethren are now assembled for the purpose of witnessing the impressive ceremonies. I have much pleasure therefore in presenting to you Bro. Samuel M. Brookfield, contractor of the work, under whose superintendence the stone has been prepared.

Bro. Brookfield then said:

Most Worshipful Grand Master,—The Building Committee having awarded me the contract for the erection of this new edifice, and having assigned to me the duty of preparing the corner stone, and making arrangements for its being laid, I have much pleasure in reporting that labour completed. It is now ready, Most Worshipful Sir, to be made the foundation stone of this new Hall.

ADDRESS BY THE GRAND MASTER.

Grand Master Laurie said:

Men and brethren here assembled to behold the ceremony:—Be it known unto you, that we be lawful Masons, true and faithful to the laws of our country, and engaged by solemn obligations to erect handsome buildings to be serviceable to the brethren, and to fear God, the Great Architect of the Universe. We have among us, concealed from the eyes of all men, secrets which may not be revealed, and which no man has discovered; but these secrets are lawful and honourable, and not repugnant to the laws of God or man. They were entrusted, in peace and honour, to the Masons of ancient times, and having been faithfully transmitted to us, it is our duty to convey them unimpaired to the latest posterity. Unless our Craft were good and our calling honourable, we should not have lasted for so many centuries, nor should we have had so many illustrious brothers in our Order ready to promote our laws and further our interests. We are assembled here to-day in the presence of you all, to build a house for Masonry, which we pray God may prosper if it seem good to him, that it may become a building for good men and good deeds, and promote harmony and brotherly love throughout the world till time shall be no more. As the first duty of Masons, in any undertaking, is to invoke the blessing of the Great Architect upon their work, we will unite with our Grand Chaplain in an address to the Throne of Grace, after he shall have read a lesson from the Holy Scriptures.

Bro. Rev. Henry Pryor Almon, of Windsor, one of the Grand Chaplains, read the following

LESSON.

"Where wast thou when I laid the foundation of the earth? Declare, if thou hast understanding?"

"Who hath laid the measures thereof, if thou knowest? or who hath stretched the line upon it?"

"Whereupon are the foundations thereof fastened? or who laid the Corner Stone thereof?"

"When the morning stars sang together, and all the Sons of God shouted for joy." Job, xxxviii., 4-7.

"That our daughters may be as Corner Stones polished after the similitude of a palace."—Ps. cxliv., 12.

"Therefore, thus saith the Lord God—Behold, I lay in Zion for a foundation Stone, a tried Stone, a precious Corner Stone, a sure foundation; he that believeth shall not make haste. Judgment also will I lay to the line, and righteousness to the plummet."—Isa. xxviii. 16-17.

"What is this, then, that is written, the stone which the builders rejected the same is become the head of the corner."—Luke xx., 17.

Bro. Rev. A. W. Nicholson, one of the Grand Chaplains, offered the following PRAYER.

Almighty God, Supreme Architect and Ruler of the Universe, we would come reverently into Thy presence and devoutly implore Thy blessing upon the service of this hour, and upon the undertaking in which our brethren of this city are now engaged. While we thank Thee for the prosperity which has attended them in the past, we ask that Thy continued favour may be upon them in the future.

Bless those who direct and the workmen who shall construct this edifice, that when completed it may fully illustrate the wisdom, strength, and beauty of the Spiritual Temple not made with hands.

Within its walls may the Divine principle "on earth, peace, good will toward men," be ever inculcated and enjoyed; may all the proper work of our institutions that may be done in it be such, as Thy wisdom may approve and Thy goodness prosper.

And finally, graciously be pleased, O thou Sovereign Architect of the Universe, to bless the Craft, wheresoever dispersed, and make them true and faithful to thee, their neighbours, and to themselves; and when the time of our labour is drawing near to an end, and the pillar of our strength is declining to the ground, graciously enable us to pass through "the valley of the shadow of death," supported by Thy rod and Thy staff, to those mansions beyond the skies, where love, and peace, and joy for ever reign before Thy throne.

The brethren then, with the Grand Chaplain, repeated the Lord's Prayer, after which they sang the following hymn, which was first read by Bro. Rev. George Dodwell, one of the Grand Chaplains:

HYMN.

O, Lord of Hosts, whose glory fills
The bounds of the eternal hills,
And yet vouchsafes in Christian lands,
To dwell in Temples made with hands.

Grant that all we, who here to-day
Rejoicing this foundation lay,
May be in very deed Thine own,
Built on the precious corner stone.

The heads that guide endue with skill,
The hands that work preserve from ill,
That we, who these foundations lay,
May raise the topstone in its day.

The Grand Master then addressed the Grand Secretary:

Brother Grand Secretary,—You will now read the Scroll to be deposited in the Foundation Stone.

The Grand Secretary, Bro. Benjamin Curren, D.C.L., enumerated the articles to be placed under the Corner Stone.

Grand Master Laurie, addressing the Grand Treasurer, said:—

I now direct you, Bro. Grand Treasurer, to deposit the glass vessel containing those articles in the place prepared for its reception. The (acting) Grand Treasurer, Bro. J. Taylor Wood, proceeded to place the various articles in the glass vessel, which was then put into a tin case, sealed with solder, and deposited in the cavity in the foundation. While this was being done the band played "Auld Lang Syne."

The cavity was covered with a brass plate, bearing the following inscription:—"This Corner Stone of Freemasons' Hall was laid on the 31st of August, A.D. 1875, A.L. 5875, with Masonic ceremonies, by M.W. Bro. John Wimburn Laurie, Grand Master of the Grand Lodge of A.F. and A. Masons of Nova Scotia."

Grand Master Laurie said:—

Right Worshipful Deputy Grand Master,—It is my will and pleasure that the corner stone of the new Hall is now laid. You will announce the same to the R.W. Senior Grand Warden, that he may announce it to the R.W. Junior Grand Warden, with directions then to proclaim the same to the brethren, that all present may govern themselves accordingly.

Deputy Grand Master Crowe said:—

Right Worshipful Senior Grand Warden,—It is the Most Worshipful Grand Master's will and pleasure that the corner stone of the new hall be now laid. You will announce the same to the Right Worshipful Junior Grand Warden, with directions then to proclaim the same to the brethren, that they may govern themselves accordingly.

The Senior Grand Warden, Bro. Rev. Richard Avery, of Aylesford, said:—

Right Worshipful Junior Grand Warden,—It is the Most Worshipful Grand Master's will and pleasure that the corner stone of the new hall be now laid. You will proclaim the same to the brethren, that all present may govern themselves accordingly.

The Junior Grand Warden, Bro. J. F. McDonald, M.D., of Hopewell, said:—

Brethren, take notice, it is the Most Worshipful Grand Master's will and pleasure that the corner stone of the new Hall be now laid on this site; you will, therefore, govern yourselves accordingly.

The Grand Master said:—

Right Worshipful Deputy Grand Master,—You will see that the Craftsmen have well and truly prepared the corner stone to be laid by me.

The Deputy Grand Master said:

Brother Right Worshipful Junior Grand Warden,—You will now see that the Craftsmen have prepared the stone and that it is true and trusty. Test it with the plumb, and report to me if you are satisfied with the work of the Craftsmen.

The Junior Grand Warden then proceeded to the stone, tested it, and reported as follows:—

Right Worshipful Deputy Grand Master,—I find the stone plumb, and the Craftsmen have prepared the corner stone true and trusty.

The Deputy Grand Master said:

Brother Right Worshipful Senior Grand Warden,—You will now examine and satisfy yourself that the Craftsmen have worked well. Try the stone with the level and report to me the result of your examination.

The Senior Grand Warden then proceeded to the stone and tried it with the level, and reported:

Right Worshipful Deputy Grand Master,—I find the corner stone level, and that the Craftsmen have worked well.

The Deputy Grand Master then proceeded to the stone and tested it with the square, and, returning to his station, reported:

Most Worshipful Grand Master,—I find the corner stone of this Freemasons' Hall tried, true, trusty, plumb, level and square, and that the Grand Officers have approved of the work, and have found it well and duly prepared, and that the Craftsmen have worked well.

The Grand Master then addressed the Deputy Grand Master, Senior Grand Warden, and Junior Grand Warden:

Right Worshipful Brothers,—You will proceed to the stone while the labourers and bearers are laying it in its proper position at the north-east angle of the foundation; you will try it with the plumb, level and square, and report to us if it is well and truly prepared.

The three officers proceeded to the stone, and having returned, the Deputy Grand Master said:—

Most Worshipful Grand Master,—The corner stone is placed due east and west, and is now ready to be laid.

Bro. William A. Hesson then presented Bro. W. Henry Hart, Vice-Chairman of the Committee appointed to arrange for the erection of the building, who said:—

Most Worshipful Grand Master,—On behalf of the Committee appointed by the Grand Lodge to arrange for the erection of the new hall, I have very great pleasure in presenting you with this trowel, to assist in completing the work so auspiciously begun.

The trowel was a very handsome one of silver, bearing the following inscription:—"Presented by the Grand Lodge of A.F. & A. Masons of Nova Scotia to Colonel J. Wimburn Laurie, Most Worshipful Grand Master, on the occasion of the laying of the Corner Stone of Freemasons' Hall, Halifax, August 31st, A.D. 1875, A.L. 5875."

Grand Master Laurie thanked Bro. Hart for the trowel, and said it would be kept as a valuable memento of this important occasion.

The Senior and Junior Deacons then proceeded to the stone with the trowel and gavel.

The Grand Master, preceded by the Grand Director of Ceremonies and Grand Sword Bearer, and accompanied by the Deputy Grand Master, the Senior and Junior Grand Wardens, proceeded to the stone—the Grand Master at the east, the Deputy on his right, Senior Warden at the west, Junior Warden at the south.

The Grand Master took the trowel from the Junior Grand Deacon, and spread the cement.

The stone was then lowered with three gradual motions. At each one the bands played a part of the National Anthem, and the Masons gave the Public Grand Honours.

The stone is of granite, with a polished front bearing this inscription:—

"FREEMASONS' HALL.

This Corner Stone was laid with Masonic ceremonies, Aug. 31st, A.D. 1875, A.L. 5875, by Col. J. Wimburn Laurie, M.W.G.M.

STIRLING and DEWAR, Architects.

SAMUEL M. BROOKFIELD, Builder.

G. A. SANFORD, Sculptor.

The Grand Master took the gavel from the Senior Grand Deacon, struck the stone three times, and said:—

Well made—well proved—truly laid—true and trusty, and may this undertaking be conducted and completed by the Craftsmen according to the Grand Plan, in peace harmony, and brotherly love.

The Grand Master and officers then returned to their stations, and the Grand Master announced:—

I, J. Wimburn Laurie, Grand Master of Masons of Nova Scotia, declare this corner stone to be plumb, level, and square, and so duly laid according to the ancient usages, customs, and landmarks of Freemasonry, and may the Great Architect of the Universe bless the work here begun and make it memorable to the latest generation.

The bands played several lively airs. The Grand Stewards, with corn, wine, and oil, proceeded to the stone, and the other Grand Officers followed. The first Steward, presenting to the Deputy Grand Master the cornucopia, he dropped the corn on the stone and said:—

May plenty be showered down upon the people of this city and province, and may the labours of the Craft be refreshed by the Great Giver of every good and perfect gift.

The second Steward then presented the wine to the Senior Grand Warden, who poured it on the stone and said:—

May the health of the Craftsmen employed in erecting this hall be preserved to them, and may the Supreme Architect bless and prosper their labours.

The third Steward then presented the oil to the Junior Grand Warden, who poured it on the stone and said:

May the Supreme Ruler of the world vouchsafe unity, peace, and prosperity to the people of Nova Scotia, and to the nations of the earth; preserve and protect the fraternity of Freemasons; make the virtues of the Craft a lesson to the world, and the labours of the Craftsmen easy and their burthens light.

Grand Chaplain Rev. H. P. Almon said:

May corn, wine, and oil, and all the necessities of life abound among men throughout the world; may the blessings of Almighty God be upon this undertaking, and may the structure here to be erected stand for ages in strength and beauty, a lasting monument of the Masonic zeal, enterprise, and liberality of its founders, and of the moral precepts and beneficent influence of the ancient and honourable institution.

The District Deputy Grand Master, Bro. A. H. Woodill, M.D., then presented the Architect, Bro. David Stirling, saying:

Most Worshipful Grand Master,—Allow me to present to you, Bro. David Stirling, chosen to be the architect of the new hall. He has his Craftsmen ready for the work, and desires you to give him the designs from the trestle boards and the tools of the workmen.

The Grand Master then handed the architect the plans and tools, square, level, and plumb, and said:

To you, Brother Architect, are confined the implements of operative Masonry, with the fullest confidence that by your skill and taste a fabric will here arise which shall add new lustre to the City of Halifax and our honoured Fraternity. May it be blessed with wisdom in the plan, strength in the execution, and beauty in the adornment; and may the Sun of Righteousness enlighten the Craftsmen who build, the brethren who give, and the institution under whose care this structure shall arise.

The proclamation was then made for the first time.

The proclamation was then made for the second time, in the West, by Bro. Colonel J. W. Poyntz, of Windsor, and for the third time in the South by Bro. James Hudson, of Albion Mines. At each proclamation the "Grand Honours" were given and a trumpet sounded, and at the last the bands played "God bless the Prince of Wales."

A collection was taken up, according to custom, for the benefit of the workmen engaged in the building.

Grand Master Laurie then made a brief speech, alluding to some of the illustrious men who had honoured Masonry, and who felt that they had received honour in being permitted to identify themselves with the institution. At the conclusion of his remarks, the Grand Master introduced the orator of the occasion, Rev. Canon Townshend, of Amherst, whose oration we shall give next week.

Poetry.

THE FOUNDER'S SONG. BY BRO. T. BURDETT YEOMAN. FOR MUSIC.

I.

We read the earth was made from naught,
Now beautiful and fair;
All Freemasons they affirm, our Great Architect was there.
Lodges we consecrate to Him,
Then pleadingly we seek
To symbolize and bless our work,
And all the words we speak.
Chorus: For out of chaos the world was made,
Then glory put around her;
Soon in shape she then was turn'd,
But not without a Founder.

II.

Without a lodge we cannot work,
For holy are our rites;
And Temple Laws are practised there,
Through Covenantal Lights.
'Tis hallow'd ground to look upon,
And not for profane bands
To handle, or to tread or touch,
Unless Masonic hands.
Chorus: For out of chaos, etc.

III.

What class more unctious than good men,
With virtue for their guide;
With hope, and charity, and faith,
Such graces ne'er deride.
They that conceive and make a home
Wherein these gifts can dwell,
Are true Freemasons of rare worth,
Let us their goodness tell.
Chorus: For out of chaos, etc.

IV.

The "Mason" Founder is a man,
And good he's bound to do,
For in his heart their lives a wish
To bid dull care adieu.
To think and act within his lodge,
A resting place and free,
Where none can enter or disturb
The wonted harmony.
Chorus: For out of chaos, etc.

V.

Then let our song be full of praise,
For in our ranks we find
Men who desire our cause to spread,
And benefit mankind.
Such are the brethren we approve,
Exalt and honour too,
For they are worthy of the world,
Those "Founders" of the Blue.
Chorus: For out of chaos, etc.

Obituary.

BRO. ARDEN AVERY SHAPLAND.

A sad case of drowning occurred on Saturday afternoon, on the Teignmouth bathing-ground. Bro. Arden Avery Shapland, solicitor, of Epsom, son of Bro. John Terrell Shapland, solicitor, South Molton, with Mr. Westwicke, of London, were on a visit to the former's brother-in-law, Mr. Tucker, residing near Newton Abbot, and on Saturday morning they all of them went to Teignmouth. About two o'clock they commenced bathing from a machine, the only one who could swim being Mr. Westwicke, while he could not do so very well. Bro. A. A. Shapland was the first to enter the water, and caught hold of a rope, which was fastened to the machine, going out to the depth of his armpits; but there was a nasty ground swell on, which lifted him off his feet and carried him outwards. Responding to his cries for help, Mr. Westwicke went off to his assistance, and after struggling some time in endeavouring to save his friend, he was compelled to let go his hold. By this time a boat had arrived, and the occupant of it was enabled to save Mr. Westwicke, who was brought ashore in an apparently lifeless condition, but Bro. Shapland had sunk and was not afterwards seen. The usual restoratives were applied to Mr. Westwicke, and the treatment was eventually successful. Up to a late hour on Tuesday Bro. Shapland's body was not recovered. The deceased, who had a highly respectable practice as a solicitor, lost his wife a year or two since from a carriage accident. Bro. A. A. Shapland was a member of the Constitutional Lodge, No. 55; a Royal Arch and a Mark Master Mason.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT AND PILLS.—In these autumnal months the human health is sorely tried by the extreme changes of temperature, which weaken the digestive organs, lower the bodily tone, and lay the system open to numberless complaints. The vast majority of maladies affecting the throat, lungs, and circulation may be checked in their dangerous course by rubbing this curative Ointment briskly twice a day upon the skin covering the seat of the ailment, and by taking at the same time appropriate doses of Holloway's purifying, corrective, and operative Pills. This simple treatment knows no failures, is devoid of danger, restores strength to frames debilitated by disease, and imparts vigour to the nervous centres, however much shaken by repeated illnesses.—ADVT.

Masonic and General Tidings.

It is announced that on the seventh of next month the Earl and Countess of Derby will be present at a grand banquet given by the Mayor of Liverpool (Lieutenant-Colonel Stible).

The annual meeting of the Sussex Provincial Grand Lodge of Mark Master Masons will be held on Wednesday, Oct. 27th, at the Castle Hotel, Hastings.

The Right Hon. the Earl of Zetland, Prov. Grand Master of the North and East Ridings of Yorkshire, purposes holding a Provincial Grand Lodge and General Communication of Masons of his province in the Town Hall, Hull, at 2 o'clock on Wednesday, the 6th of October.

Bro. Alderman and Sheriff Ellis has offered to subscribe five guineas annually, to form the nucleus of a prize fund in connexion with the Surrey Industrial School.

LORD SELBORNE AND THE MERCERS' COMPANY.—The Right Hon. Lord Selborne has been elected by the Mercers' Company as their Master for the ensuing year, without being called upon to pass through the preliminary office of Warden; and his lordship has signified his readiness to fill the position.—"City Press."

Lucy, Countess of Powis, widow of the second Earl of Powis, K.G., and daughter of the third Duke of Montrose, K.G., died on Thursday, at Walcot, at the age of 82.

TESTIMONIAL TO BRO. JOHN GEORGE MARSH.—A meeting of the committee was held on the 15th, at the Jamaica Coffee House.

THE LATE COUNTESS OF CARNARVON.—The granite and marble tomb of the late lamented Countess of Carnarvon has just been completed, and presents a very chaste and massive appearance. It is situated at the west end of the mortuary chapel in the cemetery in Highclere Park, near Newbury. The monument is composed of axed Peterhead granite, with a fine polished grey granite kerb. Within this is an open space for flowers, and in the centre is a slab of red Aberdeen granite, surmounted by a cross of white Sicilian marble. The red slab is splayed, and has the following inscription cut in raised letters on a rusticated ground: "Evelyn Georgina Katherine, wife of Henry, fourth Earl of Carnarvon, born 3rd November, 1834, died 25th January, 1875." On the plinth of the red granite slab is the following inscription: "We asked life of Thee and Thou gavest her a long life, even for ever and ever." The monument was designed by Mr. T. H. Wyatt, architect.

A lodge of Freemasons for the military, which has hitherto held its meetings in the garrison theatre at Chatham, is ordered to discontinue doing so.—"Daily Telegraph."

It is now finally arranged that the Duke of Connaught will leave England for Gibraltar on the 14th October.

His Royal Highness the Duke of Connaught, accompanied by Archduke Albert of Austria, left Liegnitz on the 18th inst. for Vienna, having been expressly invited by the Emperor of Austria.

The Marquis of Hartington, M.P., Prov. Grand Master Derbyshire, presided at a public meeting held in the Mechanics' Institute, Nottingham, on Tuesday night, to promote the extension of university education.

A Strasburg paper states that the sword given up by Napoleon III. to King William was handed over by Prince Bismarck in March, 1871, to General Castlenau, who went to Berlin for that purpose under an assumed name.

If the man who makes two blades of grass grow where but one grew before deserves well of his country, how much more must he merit a nation's gratitude who saves the lives of its citizens? Such a man in the highest degree was Jenner, and there have been many others who at a humble distance have followed in the footsteps of the great discoverer of vaccination. Only recently we happened to read a report of Dr. Leitch, of Carlisle, to the chairman of the Board of Guardians respecting the arrest of an epidemic of small-pox at Keswick. From the beginning of June until the 27th of August the disease spread rapidly and with increasing virulence, and a number of vexatious delays took place before the step most urgently pressed by the doctor was adopted, but on the day named he succeeded in having the whole of the sewers thoroughly disinfected by means of Condy's Patent Fluid, and not another case occurred. Here is indeed a valuable proof of the preventability of epidemics and contagious diseases, though it is but one among hundreds in the history of this Fluid, which, during the twenty years that have elapsed since its introduction, may be said without exaggeration to have been the means of saving thousands of lives. But while this disinfectant is so popularly known as a means whereby disease can be prevented, it is also applicable to the refinements and delicacies of life, as it is peculiarly suited for use with the refreshing bath, and adds much to the invigoration of the body and the entire cleansing of it. Like many things which by their integrity have become by-words in almost every household, Condy's Fluid is extensively pirated, and we would therefore point out that the genuine article bears the very plain signature of the inventor—"H. Bollmann Condy."

The first annual banquet of the Dalston Lodge of Instruction will be held at the Havelock Tavern, Albion-road, Dalston, on Wednesday, 6th October next, at 7.30 p.m.

Prince Leopold, accompanied by a distinguished party, left Blytheswood on Wednesday, and visited the ship-building yards of Messrs. Robert Napier and Sons and Messrs. John Elder and Co. His Royal Highness was greatly cheered.

Bro. Boord, M.P., Mr. Gladstone, Lord Eustace Cecil, and Mr. W. H. Smith, members of Parliament, have each contributed £5 towards the fund which is being raised on behalf of Mrs. Young and Mrs. Walstow, widows of the men killed in the gun-cotton explosion at the Royal Laboratory at Woolwich. The fund now amounts to about £120, most of which has been subscribed in the locality, including one anonymous donation of £50.

The Queen has been graciously pleased to permit the Albert Memorial Chapel, Windsor Castle, to be opened to the public three days a week.

LODGE OF BENEVOLENCE.

The Lodge of Benevolence met on Wednesday evening in the Board-room, Freemasons' Hall, when there was a large attendance of the brethren. Bro. James Brett, P.G.P., Junior Vice President, acted as President; Bro. Joseph Smith, P.G.P., as Senior Vice President; and Bro. E. P. Albert, A.G.P., as Junior Vice President. There were also present Bros. Joshua Nunn, P.G.S.B.; H. Bartlett, 147; W. Smith, C.E.; W. T. Howe, P.M. 1445; C. A. Cottebrune, P.G.P.; S. Rawson, P.D.G.M. China; James Mason, P.G.S.B.; H. W. Hemsworth, P.M.; W. Clifton Erick, P.M. 657; J. Wright, G.P.C.; R. Scott, D.G.M.; T. Cubitt, P.G.P.; J. McIntyre, Q.C., G.R.; H. Maudslay, P.G.S.D.; R. J. Spiers, P.G.S.B.; J. Ebenezer Saunders, P.G.D.; Samuel May, P.M.; W. Stephens, P.M.; Hyde, Pullen, P.G.S.B.; Dr. J. Hogg, P.G.D.; H. Dicketts, P.G.S.; E. Wits, W.M. 144; W. J. Mantle, I.P.M. 297; H. Dubosc, P.M. 156; H. Cawte, P.M. 342; W. Edmonds, P.M. 309; F. Driver, W.M. 45; J. F. Huggins, W.M. 1238; C. Lacey, W.M. 1327; J. De Solla, P.M. 1017; John C. Cox, W.M. 1257; C. F. Hogard, P.M. 205; L. Keays, W.M. 907; James L. Thomas, P.M. 142; James W. Baldwin, W.M. 1423; C. Ward, W.M. 700; A. S. Tomkins, W.M. 822; H. Massey, P.M. 619; T. Bull, P.M. 145; A. A. Pendlebury, P.M. 1056; W. Dodd, C. B. Payne, G.T.; and Bro. Sadler. Bro. John Hervey, G.S., also attended.

Grants amounting to £115 made at last lodge were confirmed, and new grants were made to the amount of £300. There were eighteen cases before the lodge. Of these two were withdrawn and two deferred. The highest grant was £70, and the lowest £5. The others consisted of a £50, a £40, four £20, a £15, and three £10. Four of £5 were granted. The lodge was then closed.

MASONIC JEWELS.

To the Editor of the Freemason.

Dear Sir and Brother,—

Is there any recognised jewel for Master Masons, and if so, what kind of a jewel should be worn? I have seen some M.M.'s wearing a five-pointed star (silver); others have had the square and compasses. I have seen the latter both in gold (or gilt) and silver. Some old Masons assert that either is correct, while others say neither is allowed or recognised by G. Lodge. As there seems to be a doubt about it here, will you kindly give me the benefit of your valuable opinion on the matter, so that in the event of a brother visiting any lodge, and wearing a jewel that he supposes is allowed, he may be spared the annoyance of being told that he has no right to wear that in lodge?

Believe me, dear Sir and Brother, faithfully and fraternally yours,

DEACON.

[The Book of Constitution, mentions jewels in three places—at pages 18, 68, 118. At page 18, it is said, "Nor shall any member be permitted to wear in G. Lodge or in any private lodge any jewel, medal, or device belonging or appertaining to any order or degree not recognised by the G. Lodge of England as part of pure ancient Freemasonry." At page 68 it is stated, "No jewel shall be worn or a badge other than those specified for the officers, except such honorary or other jewel as shall be consistent with those degrees recognised by the G. Lodge as part of ancient Freemasonry." At page 118 it is stated, "No honorary jewel or emblem shall be worn in the G. Lodge or any Subordinate Lodge which shall not appertain to or be consistent with those degrees which are recognised and acknowledged by and are under the control of the G. Lodge as part of pure and ancient Masonry." We see, then, that the qualification, so to say, for the jewel is, that it belongs to one of the degrees recognised by the G. Lodge. Any jewel which has an emblem of the three degrees or R.A. is admissible in a lodge. The five-pointed star is an emblem of the Third Degree, and is the proper jewel for a M.M. The square and compasses belong to the W.M. alone.—ED.]

MASONIC CHIVALRY.

The word "Chivalry" takes us back to ancient days, and long vanished scenes, to deeds of knightly prowess, to the code of chivalrous enthusiasm. For as the poet sang—

"The knights are dust,
Their good swords are rust,
Their souls are all at rest, we trust."

But yet the reflective student of history will not overlook or undervalue the influences of chivalry on the great advancing tide of human civilization. Some shallow writers of the Cockroach school affect to question the reality of chivalry, its benefit to society, its need to mankind. But those of us who have pored over the chronicles of the past, we know better than the sciolist and the sceptic of to-day how, at a time when anarchy reigned around, when order was constantly menaced, and law was powerless, when the "jus hominum," as well as the "jus gentium," was at the mercy of the most powerful, the most ambitious, and the most unscrupulous, the institution of chivalry was providentially overruled for the protection of the weak, and the defence of the defenceless. In its first conception and development chivalry was but the aggregation of the brave-hearted and the true, the well-disposed and the right thinking, the reverential and the religious, for the purpose of stemming the surging waves of licence and disorder, of offering a shield to the victim, and a refuge to the oppressed, for mitigating the mournful effects of unbridled passions, and for ameliorating the evils of disorganised society. That it declined from its first high estate, that it degenerated as years passed on, is only to admit that it was human and earthly, and, like all human and earthly things, it was but the pageant of an hour, so to say, but a pageant which left indelible memories behind, alike on the human conscience and on earthly institutions. If chivalry had done nothing else than breathe into the hearts and sympathies of men a higher and truer sentiment for women, if it sought to surround that gentle but suffering sex with all the attributes of excellency and grace, with the pathos of poesy, with the respect of the honest and the admiration of the brave, if it sought to ennoble the very existence and to enshrine the tender image of woman in the hearts of the chivalrous and the enthusiastic—it surely had done a good work, it surely had effected something. And as civilizing influences have succeeded to civilizing influences in the fleeting years which have come and gone, as society has become more compact, the laws better observed, order more firmly established, the domestic hearth more prized, and woman has found her true place in our earthly society, we should not forget that the germs of all these happier realities are to be traced back to the ill-understood, often undervalued, not unfrequently maligned institution of chivalry. We do not deny that to Christianity may be surely credited the first real great change in woman's position, her elevation to her rightful sphere in human society. But at the time when chivalry first organised itself, the Church was too weak to restrain more than in part the relentless sway of violence and brutality, and required, and fairly called for, the intervention of the "secular arm." The subject is too wide for our columns to day, as it leads to numberless other considerations, but what we have said may be taken as a "precis" of what, when writing in the abstract alone, might be avouched for chivalry. We have left out, as we could not touch upon, its practical development for several generations. And Masonic chivalry takes up the old story, and repeats the ancient "saw." Freemasons are bound to be chivalrous, alike in sympathy to their brethren as in reverence for their sisters in this world; they are bound to evince the disinterested honour and loyal hearts of "preux chevaliers." You may, it appears to us, always and speedily realize the true Freemason. If ever you hear a brother speaking maliciously of his brother or lightly of woman, if you hear any one eagerly relating the last morsel of scandal, or the appetizing "bonne-bouche" of slander, if you listen to some ornate or hirsute individual busily intent on injuring another's fair fame, or doing despite to the honour of an innocent woman, you may at once most safely conclude that, though accidentally admitted, he is not, and never can be, a true member of our Order, that he is, and ever will remain, a "Filius terre" to the end of the story. For Masonic chivalry teaches us to be above all these pettinesses and basenesses of earth. We are to be loyal and faithful to our brethren on all occasions, to support them absent, and to believe them when present; we are to be above the "moral cowardice" of the hour, and to despise the weak tittle-tattle of weaker men. Like good old Johnson, we are never to look down in the "dirt," but we are to do unto others as we would ourselves be done by. Nothing is so repugnant to the Freemason as the idle retailer of pothouse scandal, as that "gobe-mouche" who has so little "nous" that he accepts everything and swallows everything, however grotesque, improbable, and impossible. And so, too, as regards women. Freemasons, as an old song well says, "are to be true and sincere, and just to the fair," who will, the ballad writer believes, therefore, "trust them on every occasion," and if there is one thing which Freemasonry teaches us all, and which Masonic chivalry emphatically endorses, it is that respect, that reverence for women which looks on them, not as the slaves of an idle hour of animal companionship, but as the friends, the mentors, the guides, the helpmates of man. Loyalty to our brothers, reverence and love of our sisters, are the unerring teaching of Masonic chivalry, and while these remain the dictates of our Masonic conscience, we do not fear but that our good old Craft will wage its onward warfare with calmness, with power, and with success.

THE AMERICAN ROMAN CATHOLIC TABLET.

It seems that there is a paper called "The Tablet," published in New York, which is said to be also the "leading" Roman Catholic paper in the United States. If so, we are heartily sorry, we feel bound to say at once, for the Roman Catholics in the United States. If the "pabulum mentis" offered to them by "The Tablet" be the best they have, they must be in a baddish way. For according to "The Voice of Masonry" for September, it has lately put forth one of the most "bête," as the French would say, one of the most ridiculous articles on the subject of Freemasonry it has ever been our misfortune to wade through. Were it not for the vile animus displayed in every paragraph, as well as for what our young men term its "calm lying," we should not have deemed it worth any notice in our pages, and have passed it over with the smile or silence of contempt. For at this moment, as we know, the Roman Catholic body on the subject of Freemasonry is going through what "the Marchioness" called "delicious trimmings;" it has become intensely excited, and very incoherent. There is nothing the Ultramontane Press will not say; we have, for instance, read productions too shocking to quote, so repugnant to decency, so loaded with absolute filth. Indeed, we feel inclined to say to the writer of such a farrago of nonsense and mendacity, what was once observed to the immortal Dogberry, "Go to, thou art an ass;" but we are restrained by the "egards" of editorial "politesse." Yet, as we are told that the "Tablet" is the leading Roman Catholic paper in the United States, we think that our brethren may like to read its opinion of the Order, delivered honestly, truthfully, and dogmatically, "ad fideles." Let us listen to this well-informed and veracious expounder of the heretical teaching of the "deadly sin" of Freemasonry:—"Catholics know but too well that there is throughout the world a criminal organization, the members of which are bound together by secret oaths, to reveal any of whose secrets involves certain assassination, and every member of which is at any time liable to be forced to become an assassin. They know that this organization is Jewish in its constitution and ends, and they suspect it to be chiefly manipulated by Jews; that its one object is the destruction of that Church of which they are members, and which they love with a love surpassing that of women; that mankind owe to it the revolutions and disorder which, initiated by the "age of reason," have ever since anticipated on earth the anarchy of the infernal world; and that they, in particular, owe to it the furious persecutions their brethren are enduring in Germany, Switzerland, and on the South American continent. They know, moreover, that it lies under the heaviest excommunications of the Church; that whoever belongs to it, if he were a Catholic before, ceases to be one ipso facto by the very fact of belonging to it; that it is, in fact, whatever it may profess—an Order to lure us to our ruin—the pledged enemy of Christ, his Church, and his Vicar upon earth." Is not this most alarming if true? and does it not remind us all of the famous couplet, "'Tis true, 'tis pity, pity 'tis, 'tis true?" For surely a more dreadful conspiracy and a more abominable society cannot probably exist? Our able "confreres" in the "Voice of Masonry" write in very moderate terms. They say "There is no necessity to reply to this statement. To quote it is enough to show its absurdity to every intelligent reader. But considering that the 'Tablet' is in other respects conducted with much ability, and that its editors are far from being fools, we are constrained to believe that the misrepresentation is a wilful one, made to impose upon the credulity of its ignorant readers. It is absolutely impossible that any man of an ordinary amount of brain could seriously believe in the truth of charges of such a nature. The editors of the 'Tablet' were, no doubt, governed in making them by the Jesuitic maxim, that 'the end justifies the means.' The assertions that Freemasonry is 'chiefly manipulated by Jews,' and that 'its one object is the destruction of the Catholic Church,' are particularly rich. The 'Cynosure,' which, equally with the 'Tablet,' is an organ of intolerance, has never yet reached this point of absurdity." We quite agree with them, but still we deem it well to bring this "elegant extract" before our readers, as it is needful that they should fairly realize what is the unchanged bitterness of Rome, alike in America as in Europe. When the writer who penned the statement above gave it forth to his co-religionists, he knew that there was not one word of truth in his assertions, and his only object could be to inflame their feelings against their fellow Christians and Hebrew brethren. We in England or in America know that such a statement is absolutely false in every particular. Freemasonry has nothing to do with politics, in Anglo-Saxon lodges at any rate, whatever individual cases may be alleged in other constitutions, and as regards the Hebrews, they are a peaceful, loyal, orderly community, conservative (not in a political sense) of law and public tranquillity, and opposed to revolution and anarchy. The most mournful part of this picture of Roman Catholic truth and toleration is, that in this year of light and grace, a large portion of our fellow creatures seem to be doing all they possibly can by word and deed to revive the hateful intolerance of dead generations, and to malign, to irritate, to excommunicate, and burn their brother men. Let us wish them one and all kindlier sympathies, a more tolerant religion, and better hearts, as well as a happier realization of the abstract importance of truth.

PUBLIC HEALTH CONGRESS AT BRUSSELS IN 1876.

Our attention has been called by Bro. Major Burgess to an International Exhibition, and Congress of Public Health and the means of preserving life, to be held in Brussels, in 1876. As many of our readers may be interested in the matter, we thank Bro. Major Burgess for calling our attention to so important a gathering, and we publish the General Regulations for British Exhibitors this week, while next week we propose to give the "Classification" of articles to be exhibited, as it may be useful to a considerable number of our friends and brethren. The English circular thus commences. "A Congress and International Exhibition of means, appliances, and instruments for saving life and preserving health will be held in Brussels in 1876. The movement originated with the Royal Humane Society of Belgium (Société Royale des Sauveteurs de Belgique), presided over by Lieutenant-General Renard, Aide-de-camp to the King of the Belgians. The necessary capital has been raised by subscription in Belgium. The cost of management, buildings, machinery, &c., is to be defrayed from the fund thus created, and all receipts on account of the Congress and Exhibition are to be credited to it. Detailed rules for the management of this philanthropic and eminently useful undertaking, and for its careful regulation on strictly commercial principles, have been promulgated with the programme, which inaugurates a new and sound economical basis for such undertakings. The Congress and Exhibition are under the special patronage and protection of the King of the Belgians and of the City of Brussels, with his Royal Highness the Count of Flanders as Honorary President. The Crown Prince of Germany has accepted the Honorary Presidency of the German Committee. The Archdukes Charles Louis and Joseph are Honorary Presidents of the General Committees for Austria and Hungary, respectively; and in France an influential committee is now being formed." The following are the eloquent words of the Belgian Committee, whose address we feel bound to add does much credit to them. "The study and application of the principles of public health and safety, in their largest sense, have now become of primary necessity from the accumulation of numbers in great centres and from the development of industry and commerce. Terrible fires have often destroyed large cities; fatal collisions at sea and on land are frequent, and will become more so with the advance of civilization and the transactions to which it gives rise. Mercantile fleets are multiplied, and with them the shipwrecks attendant upon every storm; war is no longer waged by limited armies; whole populations cover fields of battle, and in the presence of numberless calamities the means of affording aid is terribly inadequate; industries increase incessantly among civilised nations, absorbing more and more the strength of the populations. Some occupations place the lives of the labourers in constant peril, while others enfeeble the vital powers of those who pursue them. Society, then, has powerful inducements to provide against or mitigate these evils, and owes a deep debt of gratitude to those devoted and disinterested individuals who, singly and in societies, make constant efforts to protect human life and to provide for the health and safety of the labouring classes and of the general public. It must be admitted that governments, public administrations, manufacturers, medical men, engineers, and philanthropists have already made great efforts; everywhere the solution of questions affecting the welfare of humanity has been diligently sought; everywhere important works of surpassing interest exist, but such work, should not be confined to localities—they belong to the whole world. Nations should communicate to each other their several discoveries. The inventions of many eminent engineers and distinguished manufacturers for protecting the lives of the industrious, and ameliorating the conditions in which they live, should receive due recognition and publicity. To give but one example—Who can deny that, numerous as are the casualties on railways, at sea, and in mines, spreading abroad mourning and misery, it would be a public relief to have publicly discussed by public men of all nations the modes of preventing or at least mitigating such disasters and the consideration of the means and appliances intended to reach them? In other words, to group together all that the charity and foresight of public bodies and private individuals have devised or effected to save and protect human life, and to assist those in danger and suffering. In the Great Exhibitions of London, Paris, and Vienna, health and public safety were not overlooked, but the departments relating to them were scattered and lost in the splendour of the more attractive portions of those Exhibitions. Moreover, they received but little attention, from the want of explanation of their nature and use, and from the general indifference with which these matters have heretofore been treated. All this will be remedied in the Exhibition of 1876, in which public attention will be concentrated on the one class of objects, and the means afforded of forming a correct judgment of what is exhibited. The Congress will be divided into as many sections as there are classes. Committees appointed by the sections will make public trials of apparatus and processes exhibited, and every one will thus be able to see for himself the benefit to be derived from them." We think the scheme a very praiseworthy one, and deserving of great support in this country, where we have so many thousands of our fellow creatures daily following avocations in which hurt to limb and danger to life are often incurred, either by carelessness or mismanagement, or the uncontrollable accidents of a dangerous business. We wish it all success, as we always sympathize, as Freemasons especially, with every endeavour to ameliorate the condition, or lessen the sufferings, or preserve the life of our brethren of the dust. We think it right to add, that Mr. P. de Keyser, President of the Société Belge de Bienfaisance, represents in this country the Central Committee at Brussels, and that brethren desirous of information or of taking part in the Congress will please to address Bro. Major Burgess, the Honorary Secretary, at the Mansion House. Intending exhibitors, and others interested in the Exhibition, should communicate with Mr. Edmund Johnson, the Commissaire Délégué, at 3, Castle-street, Holborn.

ARCHÆOLOGICAL PROGRESS.

One of the great stumbling-blocks in the way of Masonic Archæological studies is, and has been, the "vexata quæstio" of the connexion (if any) between Freemasonry and the old Knightly Orders. Whenever the history of English Freemasonry is re-written, and it will have to be some day, this point will have to be alike fully discussed and deliberately decided. At present it is simply a great "debateable land," on which Masonic Students may and do skirmish continually, on which they may even fight a good fight, but nothing comes of either, and we go back unconvinced to our favourite theories or individual prepossessions. It has been often stated, for instance, that all the three great Knightly Orders, the Templars, the Hospitallers, and the Teutonic Knights, had a form of Masonic reception and symbolism, and an esoteric bond of union and of teaching. Bro. Findel utterly denies the fact as regards the Teutonic Knights; there seems to be the gravest doubts in respect of the Hospitallers: but it is alleged that there is some evidence as far as the Templars are concerned. Let us see then what is our available and direct evidence. We think that there is plenty of evidence to prove that the Templars had a "secreta receptio" over and above their ordinary one, though what it was we have not yet sufficient data to decide. In the great enquiry at Paris, which began April 11th, 1310, it is no doubt admitted by many of the witnesses partially, and by some distinctly, that there was this "illicita receptio," or secreta, after the chapter of reception was closed by the Preceptor, and that it was an innovation introduced from the East by the G.M., Wm. de Beaujeu, and that it was intended originally as a proof of devotion, as a test of courage. One witness, the 121st, Antoine Sicci de Verceil, Notary, Apostolic and Imperial, not a member of the Order, makes a long statement to the commission. He declares that the Freemasons had a "secret," which he terms "Honteux," and that Guillaume de Beaujeu was "passant pour l'auteur des innovations dans l'ordre." It is a little noteworthy perhaps that Jacques de Molai defended Beaujeu, though long dead, before this very commission, for being too friendly with Saladin. We note this because some of us will recall Ramsay's original theory, that the Knights Templar learned Freemasonry in the East, from the Eastern lodges then extant. The only witness out of 231 of anything like a Masonic ceremony is the 35th witness, Tilley, a serving brother. The French editor of these documents says (translated), "He relates his reception with circumstances which resemble those of Freemasonry." That is to say French Freemasonry, and of some of the foreign grades. "Repeated entreaties for admission, exhortation to reflect, warning as to the fatigues, privations, and dangers. Repeated sending back to solitary reflection. Summons three times." But this is all. And though we have read carefully the proceedings in England, all that seems to be substantiated is, that the reception was at night, in the chapel, and that none but Knights were present or near. There is no further evidence that we are aware of, of any Masonic ceremony, and yet we do not mean to say that none exists, or that the question is as yet absolutely decided, one way or the other. For it is just possible that there was a connexion after all. The Knights Templar are said to have been "Patrons" of our Order, and as they were great builders, and found the guilds existing with their secret teaching and inner bond of union, so it is just possible that they did add a form of "secreta receptio" to their original "rule," which, innocent in its first idea, and harmless, became afterwards perverted to bad purposes. Not that we believe the allegations against the Templars in their "hideous nakedness," as some one has said; we fancy that their principal crime was being rich, and perhaps they owe somewhat of their fall to their pride and overbearing disposition latterly. Be this as it may, it is much more likely that the Templars took Freemasonry from the guilds than that the guilds derived it from the Templars. We are then inclined to believe that there was a connexion between the Templars and the Freemasons, though what it was has yet to be distinctly shewn. There is still an Order in Paris called "L'Ordre du Temple," which professes to come down direct from Jacques de Molai, but whose historical reality is by no means clear. The so called Charter of Larmenius, which no one has seen, is generally believed to be a "fraus pia," and to be actually the creation of the last century. The evidences that we have seen of its genuineness and authenticity put forward by the Order itself do not convince us of its truth, just the contrary. The wording of the Charter is not like that of the early 14th century verbiage, and we fear that without better proof we must relegate it to the "limbus" of Masonic fiction. There is an Order in Scotland called "The Royal Order," professing to date from Robert the Bruce, but, as we understand, its evidences do not go beyond the last century. It would require a good deal of strict historical proof to accept so early a date, though we are open to conviction. The Masonic Knights Templar, as they were once called, "The Priory of the Temple" as they are now called, are clearly the production of the last century. The Baldwin Encampment cannot substantiate its claim to long antiquity, as once alleged, as its very name incontestably proves. We shall not be wrong in saying that in the south of England the Masonic Knights Templar cannot go beyond 1750 at the earliest, if so early, and that in the north not beyond 1780. Such then is essentially the position of the "Knights Order Question." We do not suppose that any Masonic writer will now adopt a former theory of "Templar perpetuation," because the result of Archaeological research has been to demonstrate undoubtedly the late and not early creation of the so-called Knights Grades, all being the "outcome," in fact, of last century theories and practice.

THE BOYS' SCHOOL.

We are glad to note the presentation by the boys in our Royal Masonic School of a "souvenir" of good will, and regard, and gratefulness to the Matron. It is a sign that recent events and complications have not affected the inner life and regime of the school materially, at any rate, and that all is now progressing harmoniously and peacefully. We think that it is a subject for present rejoicing in all who value the Boys' School, both for what it is and for what it may be to the Craft, that everything now appears to portend a careful carrying out of the great work of so important an educational establishment in proper order, due discipline, and entire harmony. No educational institution can prosper or progress which is embarrassed by open hostilities or secret cabals amongst its staff, which is at all afflicted by that partizan spirit which is a standing nuisance to discipline, and a sure evidence of weakness and defect somewhere. All educational establishments require to be conducted on the distinct principles of unity of action, and entire subordination to the ruling powers, whether scholastic or institutional, if we may use such a word, and wherever a clique is found, or unwise party spirit is engendered; there, assuredly, the school work languishes, and the essential harmony of the entire institution is destroyed! We trust that the little episode which appeared in our columns last week may be accepted by us all as an omen, not only of restored agreement and efficiency in the whole executive "personnel" of the school, but also as a foreshadowing of real practical advance under their new head, of our Masonic orphans in an improving path of educational proficiency and reality.

A DREADFUL CRIME.

Another sickening murder has been committed in the Metropolis, and has added a fresh and painful page to the long and dreary annals of human criminality. A man of the name of Charles Wainwright, together with a young woman called Alice Day, only 20, are in custody on the charge of having a portion of a mutilated body in their joint possession, supposed to be the remains of a woman of the name of Harriett Lane, one among several women with whom Wainwright had been cohabiting. Owing to the perseverance of the young man Stokes the arrest of Wainwright by the police originally took place, and since that time they have been diligently labouring to unravel the mournful mystery. At such a time, and in the pressure of temporary excitement, there crops up evidence of that deep and dark undercurrent of social evil and shrouded sin which pervades and permeates the great sea of human life, and lends often such pathos to its gloomier scenes, and such reality to its developed iniquities. Another young woman has been missing for a year, who was, it is said, known also to the prisoner, and the police probably have much important evidence behind. When our newspapers teem with such horrors, the general feeling of the public is that the police authorities ought immediately to find out everything, even when the matter is most complicated from a variety of causes. Now, we always consider this unfair to a very meritorious body of men. There is no royal road to detection, just as there is to nothing else in this world, and though to-day all seems plain-sailing in the present case, we yet think it well to point out that the common view is a fallacious view of the whole subject of detection. When a great crime is before us, of which the detective body can have no previous cognizance, all that they can possibly do is to apply the powers of observation and discovery, rendered in them more acute than in ordinary persons by a long apprenticeship to criminal studies, and a near acquaintance with bad characters, to the detection, if possible, of the crime, and the arrest of the perpetrators of it. But it is incorrect to suppose, as so many seem to do, by what they say and what they write, that in a few moments of close investigation, however skilful or expert they may be, detectives can jump to a conclusion, or light upon the direct clue. The discovery of crime, the detection of criminals, is always made more difficult by the acts and arts of all malefactors, who seek to envelope their proceedings in a cloak of impenetrable obscurity. All criminals, whatever has happened to others, hope that they may and will elude the pursuit of the officers of justice, just as we all of us, though mortal as we know, hope that, whatever happen to others, we shall outlive our friends and neighbours. We therefore always feel how unwise and unfair it is for our press to complain of the slowness of detection, or for ourselves to be impatient or incriminative because that detection does not always follow the committal of crime, because that the criminal is not immediately hunted down and apprehended. Many false tracks, for instance, have to be followed out by the most experienced officers, many "red herrings" have to be run over before the cautious and competent detective can get upon the right scent. The one consolation we always have and feel in such matters is, that crime generally aids to detect itself, and that in nine cases out of ten, by what we may fairly consider the compensatory and providential course of human acts and events, crime not only bears with it its own punishment, but its own eventual discovery. It often happens, as we all know, that the scientific labours of Detective-officer Jones, and the great acumen of Detective-officer Robinson, are marvellously aided by some one act of deliberate stupidity on the part of the desperate offender, some blunder, some overlooked proof, which lands him inevitably into the hands of those who are so deeply interested in his whereabouts and well-being, to say nothing of his ill-doings. Such is one link of that irresistible chain which binds down for the general safety of society crime and criminals to-day, and sends them as the last act of the drama, to confront the vindicating majesty and the retributive justice of the Law. In the present case there seems, as we said before, no cause to fear but that detection will bring to full light, and that punishment will ere long overtake, such a deed of foul and fearful brutality. Since we wrote this the young woman has been discharged, but the enquiry goes on as regards Wainwright both before the Court and the police magistrate.

GRAND MASTERS OF THE ENGLISH FREEMASONS.

To the Editor of the Freemason.

Dear Sir and Brother,—

In an early volume of the "Builder" newspaper, 1844, Vol. II., p. 4, I find the enclosed list of Grand Masters of English Freemasonry.

In a memo. the writer says:—"Having just met with the subjoined very minute detailed list of the Grand Masters of the English Freemasons, permit me through one of your columns to ask, as I take a great interest in all historical and other matters relating to Freemasonry, upon what authority such a catalogue rests, how are the data authenticated, and where lie the records confirming so circumstantial a document?"

Can you or any brother throw any light upon it?

I am, faithfully and fraternally yours,

T. W. WHITLEY.

AFFILIATION.

To the Editor of the Freemason.

Dear Sir and Brother,—

Could you kindly inform me if a member of a Scotch lodge living in Lancashire, and who wishes to affiliate with an English lodge, can, without coming to London, affiliate, first by proxy to a London lodge, and afterwards to a local lodge?

Or can you inform me where there is a lodge between Liverpool and Whitehaven whose number is not higher than 13, or even 50? Your reply will much oblige,

Yours faithfully, ENQUIRER.

[We apprehend that a Scotch Mason producing his certificate can, by vote of members, become a joining member, affiliated to that or any lodge under the English constitution. Of course he will have to pay, in addition to joining fee, the registration fee.—Ed.]

MINUTES AND THEIR CONFIRMATION.

To the Editor of the Freemason.

Dear Sir and Brother,—

I am sorry that I cannot even now agree with Bro. "P.G.W." in his views on the election of Masters from Grand Master downwards.

With regard to the election of G.M., I must maintain what I said before, that there is no second election, nor even confirmation of the first; the minutes, so far as necessary, are usually confirmed, it is true, but not the elections. What say the Constitutions? "The G.M. shall . . . be nominated . . . in December . . . and at the G.L. . . . in March the election shall take place. The G.M. so elected shall, either on the day of the grand Masonic festival or on the day immediately preceding, as he may direct, be regularly installed." Not a word about confirmation of minutes, still less about the possibility of the election of the previous G.L. being invalidated, but rather a distinct statement that the G.M. has been elected.

Surely a moment's consideration will show Bro. "P.G.W." the terrible position in which the entire Craft might be placed by such a law! Supposing that on the day of Grand Installation so lately past, after the brethren had been gathered from the four winds of heaven to the ceremony, a vote of the kind contemplated by Bro. "P.G.W." had been carried, whatever would have been thought of the G.L. of England, not only by the brethren of other lands, but also by the world at large? I do not for a moment say that such a catastrophe could ever be probable, but could the bare possibility of it be allowed for a single instant to exist? Most surely not!

Next, as to the election of W.M. Perhaps the readiest method of expressing any dissent from Bro. "P.G.W.'s" views will be to briefly re-state my view of the law.

Most undoubtedly non-confirmation of the minutes would render a fresh election imperative, but what is non-confirmation of minutes? Simply a declaration that the record of the former election has not been correctly made; and, as I take it, unless the objector could show a clear case of incorrectness in reporting, his objection would fall to the ground. But even this needs repeal, as, if acted upon, every lodge is liable to find itself in the same absurd position as G.L. might be, if a similar course of procedure could be taken there. Besides which, by the installation being postponed, the whole working of the lodge would be thrown out of gear, for that year at least, whilst all brethren below the chair would necessarily have their advancement to the P.M. degree postponed for a like period.

I am sorry to differ thus with Bro. "P.G.W.," but this is considered a point of importance by many brethren, as well as by

Yours faithfully and fraternally,

WILLIAM TEBBS.

RECORD, LODGE OF INDUSTRY, GATESHEAD.

I have been much interested in reading the several communications of Bros. the Rev. A. F. A. Woodford, R. W. Little, Rev. W. Tebbs, S.B.E., and others, respecting the curious entries in the lodge records at Gateshead. Bro. Woodford suggests that Highrodians may refer to Harodim; Bro. Little fancies the word may mean Herodians; Bro. Tebbs invents a ladder of gradations most ingeniously from Heroden to High-Rode, and High-rod-ians; and S.B.E. thinks it likely that Bro. Woodford has solved the knotty question. I should not like to commit myself to any view just yet which has been propounded, and whilst Bro. Little has come to the nearest in my opinion, to the solution of the difficulty, I am inclined to doubt the correctness of his explanation as well as all the others. My impression is, that as it is evident that High Order was another title by which the Highrodians were known, the probability is that the Royal Arch is referred to; a suggestion which I have communicated to Bro. Woodford, and which our able friend is inclined to view favourably.

Should that suggestion be exploded—which is most unlikely—I should still be inclined to disagree with the explanations already mentioned, because inconsistent with the known character of the operative lodges early last century, and be ready to believe that as the "English Masters" are especially noted, as also a Grand Lodge, that the ceremony spoken of had reference to the Past Master's Degree, which was then coming generally into work, and which doubtless many Past Masters of lodges were still ignorant of.

Failing that, we should then seek to find out what possible reference the words may have to the Sublime (or High) Degree (or Order) of a Master Mason, which in many lodges in those days was only communicated at special meetings held at long intervals; or whether the words had not reference to the virtual Past Master's Degree, which was communicated to Master Masons as a pre-requisite for the Royal Arch.

As to the "Domaskin" or "Forin," I lean to the belief that the public houses in which certain lodges were held are here referred to, and that when the ceremony was worked away from the regular place of meeting an additional fee was to be charged.

It must be remembered that though an operative lodge, at the time in question it was working by virtue of a warrant derived from the Grand Lodge of England, 1735 (at the "Fountain"), and that in consequence of the disruption with the seceders the authorities would be more disinclined than ever to permit "deviations from the ancient landmarks."

WILLIAM JAMES HUGHAN.

MASONIC NUMISMATICS.

Returning again to a consideration of the Masonic Token of 1794, we are now able to speak of other issues, having examined three more lately.

In the "Freemason" for June 12th occurs my first letter on the subject, and I send an engraving of the coin, which may be found in the "Freemasons' Magazine" for 25th July, 1868.

On June 19th, Bro. Hayes writes, stating that he has seen a friend wearing such a coin, composed of "copper gilt." In the same paper the R.W. Bro. Colonel Burdett presents a sketch of a coin in his possession, and refers again to the subject in the "Freemason" for June 26th. The R.W. Bro. W. Kelly also sends a communication to the effect that these coins are not so rare as considered, and as we have traced at least a dozen his assertion has been fully confirmed. On July 31st Bro. E. S. describes a coin having the same obverse and reverse as ours and Colonel Burdett's, but different words on the rim, and since then we have also seen one with the inscription the same as the one mentioned by Bro. E. S. August 14th ("Freemason") again witnesses a return to the subject (as also the 7th of the month). Our esteemed Bro. Kelly gives a detailed description of the coin he is familiar with in that paper for September 11th. We are now able to state, from the interesting letters of the several correspondents who have assisted us in the inquiry, that all the Masonic tokens of 1794 agree, excepting as to the inscriptions on the rims, those traced varying as follows:—

1. Masonic Token. I. Schichley, Fecit. 1794 (W. J. Hughan's and others).
2. Masonic Halfpenny Token. I. Schichley, Fecit. 1794 (Colonel Burdett's).
3. Masonic Token. Brother Sketchley, Birmingham (W. J. Hughan's).
4. Halfpenny. Payable at the Black Horse, Tower Hill (Bros. E. S., W. J. Hughan, and others).
5. Masonic Halfpenny Token. [MDCCXCIV., XXX. (R.W. Bro. W. Kelly).

Another token is mentioned by me in the "Freemason" for June 26th, p. 274, and two medals by Bro. E.S. in the "Freemason" for August 14th and September 4th. Those communicated by Bro. E.S. have reference to the Masonic Hall Loan, and his interesting remarks on the subject are quite correct, and the thanks of the readers of the "Freemason" are due to him for the trouble he has taken. Who else will do a similar favour? There are more coins and medals yet to be described, which are preserved in this country, and it appears to us a Masonic duty that the possessors thereof should make their character known to us Masonic students, and I shall be pleased to purchase any of such coins (if for sale), or reciprocate the kindness in some other way if they are lent me for examination, so that their character may be communicated to the leading and thinking members of the Fraternity.

WILLIAM JAMES HUGHAN.

BROTHER BUCHAN AND HIS CONSTANT QUESTIONING.

In answer to Bro. Buchan, I am quite prepared to abide by my offer in the "Freemason" of June 12th, 1875, as to a discussion upon the origin of Freemasonry, but I am certainly not inclined to keep "pegging" away at the subject, without any method or apparent object; and so, until our brother is prepared to accept my offer, I am quite content to wait patiently the results of our researches, which are being conducted by Bro. Woodford, myself, and others, for we are after facts, not theories, and prefer such work to useless controversies.

W. J. HUGHAN.

A MASONIC SONG.

Can any of the readers of the "Freemason" inform me who was the author of the following song, and when it was written? I extract it from the "Freemasons' Pocket Companion," published in Glasgow, in 1771. I will also be glad to learn if the song is founded on facts, or is a mere impudent invention (as I fear it is) of the poet.

GEORGE MARKHAM TWEDDELL.

Rose Cottage, Stokesley.

I.

A Mason one time
Was cast for a crime,
Which malice had put a bad face on;
And then, without thought,
To a gibbet was brought
The Free and the Accepted Mason.
And then without thought, &c.

II.

And when he came there,
He put up his pray'r
For heav'n to pity his case on!
His King he espy'd,
Who in progress did ride,
Was a free and an accepted Mason,
His King he espy'd, &c.

III.

Then out a sign flew,
Which the Grand Master knew,
Who rode up to know the occasion;
Ask'd who had condemn'd
So worthy a friend
As a Free and an Accepted Mason?
Ask'd who had condemn'd, &c.

IV.

He tried the cause,
And he found out the flaws,
According to justice and reason.
He tuck'd up the judge,
And all that bore grudge
To the Free and the Accepted Mason.
He tuck'd up the judge, &c.

V.

Tho' ignorant pride
Our secrets deride,
Or foolish conjectures occasion,
They ne'er shall divine
The word or the sign
Of a Free and an Accepted Mason.
They ne'er shall divine, &c.

(May honour and honesty ever distinguish the brethren.)

A QUOTATION.

In the "Freemason" of the 4th September, No. 339, p. 391, the 8th line in the article on Bro. Major Burgess is the following quotation:—"A man convinced against his will is of the same opinion still." In one of the numbers of the "Freemason" at the commencement of last year I read a correction of the quotation. Can any of your readers refer me to it.

AMERICA.

100,000 ACRES OF THE FINEST FARMING LAND IN AMERICA FOR SALE.

IN LOTS TO SUIT PURCHASERS.

AT FROM £3 to £4 PER ACRE.

THE LAND is situated in SOUTH-WESTERN MINNESOTA, and is open, rolling prairie of unsurpassed fertility, and all ready for the plough. The climate is as healthy as any known, so much so as to have made the state a resort for invalids.

Very unusual opportunities are now presented for profitable farming and investment in this portion of the State.

Droughts, which are such a frequent cause of loss to farmers in the West, have never been known in this region. The country is interspersed with beautiful lakes, which abound in fish, and wild fowl are plentiful. The land can be made to pay from £8 to £12 per acre, with certain crops recently introduced, or say a profit of from 100 to 200 per cent. on the total outlay, so that with £1000 capital, properly managed, from £1000 to £2000 per year can be realised, and proportionately for larger amounts of capital; as to which full particulars, giving details of the farming, &c., will be furnished to applicants, but no one is advised to attempt the business with less than £500 capital.

Concerning the land, &c., applicants will be referred to His Excellency the Governor of the State, and to prominent Bankers, Merchants, and others in London, Liverpool, New York, Saint Paul, and elsewhere; and as to the profitability of farming there, to parties who have purchased land and are now working their farms.

METROPOLITAN.

WILLIAM PRESTON LODGE (No. 766).—The first meeting after the recess of this flourishing lodge was held at the City Terminus Hotel, Cannon-street, on Thursday, the 23rd September, Bro. Augustus Braun, W.M. This is one of the very few Banner lodges. It may be necessary to explain to some of our readers that each Worshipful Master on his initiation has his arms and crest emblazoned in a banner, which is displayed behind his chair. On leaving office this is presented to the lodge, so that in course of time a Banner lodge is surrounded with heraldic emblems, having a most picturesque and striking effect. Another peculiarity of this lodge is that its numbers are limited. On this occasion Bro. Pringle, S.W., was elected W.M. for the ensuing year, and Bro. Capt. Kain was re-elected Treasurer. Bro. Wm. Worrell, in the unavoidable absence of the W.M., most impressively initiated two gentlemen, namely, a foreign Baron, and Mr. W. J. Collins. At the refreshment after labour both gentlemen expressed themselves much impressed with the ceremony, in which the Masonic charge was not forgotten. During the evening a letter was read from the wife of an old subscribing member of the lodge, stating that her husband had been bereft of reason, and that she and her 5 children were destitute. A collection was made and about £20 was raised for their benefit, of which amount the Baron contributed 5 guineas, which he wished to be considered as a thank-offering on the occasion of the birth of a daughter, the gift of the Great Architect of the Universe.

INSTRUCTION.

MARQUESS OF RIPON LODGE OF INSTRUCTION (No. 1489).—On Thursday, the 23rd ult., the ceremony of inaugurating a new lodge of instruction, under warrant from the Marquess of Ripon Lodge, No. 1489, was performed at the Albion Tavern, Albion Road, Dalston, by Bro. W. Stephens, then the W.M., but now I.P.M. of No. 1489. The ceremony of consecration was fully explained, and was followed by the ceremony of installation, when Bro. W. J. Murlis was appointed the first W.M. of the new lodge. Bro. James Glasken was appointed S.W., and Bro. Dr. Defriez, J.W. Bro. W. Stephens was unanimously elected Preceptor, Bro. James Hanney, Treasurer, and Bro. W. Jones, P.M. 445, Secretary. Several brethren were elected members of the lodge, and rules were afterwards framed for the government of the lodge, which will now hold its meetings every Thursday evening at seven o'clock (see list of Metropolitan Masonic Meetings).

PROVINCIAL.

GUILDFORD.—ROYAL ALFRED LODGE (No. 777).—At a bi-monthly meeting of this lodge, held at the Angel Hotel, on the 16th ult., the brethren were honoured with the company of the R.W. Provincial and Deputy Grand Masters of Surrey, Bros. Major-General Brownrigg, C.B., and W. R. Harrison. The first business of the evening was to initiate Mr. Denzil R. Onslow, M.P., of Flexford House, into the mysteries of the Craft, which was very ably performed by the W.M., Bro. Wells, Provincial Grand Superintendent of Works of Surrey. Bro. Gilbert J. Smallpiece, P.M., presented the lodge with a handsome portrait of his Royal Highness the Prince of Wales, the Most Worshipful Grand Master of England. A very chaste Treasurer's jewel was also presented to Bro. John Nealds by the brethren of the lodge, as a slight token of regard and appreciation of his invaluable services as Past Treasurer. After the cases of charity had been deliberated upon and disposed of, the lodge was duly closed, and the brethren adjourned to the banquet provided by Bro. Michaux, where the rest of the evening was spent in social harmony.

HAMPTON.—HEMING LODGE (No. 1512).—An emergency meeting of this lodge was held at the Lion Hotel, on Saturday, the 18th ult. The lodge was opened at five o'clock in the afternoon by the W.M., Bro. W. Hammond, P.M. 201 and 1326, P.G.J.D. of Middlesex. Bros. Hopwood, P.M. 141, W.M. elect, S.W.; S. Hill, P.M.; J. W. Hurst, S.D.; Walls, acting J.D.; Jno. Hammond, P.M. 201, Sec., acting I.G.; Gilbert, Tyler. The ballot was taken on behalf of Messrs. Hunt, Hiscox, and Aston, and having been declared unanimously favourable, the two first-named gentlemen were duly entrusted into Craft mysteries by the W.M. with his customary ability. The second Thursday in October having been fixed for the meeting of the Audit Committee, and several minor matters having been transacted, the lodge was closed in ancient form, and the brethren adjourned to an excellent cold collation. This being only an emergency meeting, the usual loyal and Masonic toasts were given but formally by the W.M., who, however, supplemented them by some well chosen remarks. In proposing "The Health of the Initiates," Bro. Hammond congratulated the lodge upon its enrolling Bros. Hunt and Hiscox as members that evening, and he sincerely hoped that those brethren would never regret the important step they had taken in entering the Craft. The toast having been duly honoured, Bros. Hunt and Hiscox responded. The first-named stated that he had been many years abroad, and he had especially remarked the number of halls and institutions connected with the fraternity that there were in the West Indies and other remote parts of the globe, and he was so struck with the importance that Freemasonry possessed, even at Vera Cruz, and many minor places that he had visited in his travels, that he determined to join the Order upon his arrival home, feeling assured that, from its cosmopolitan popularity, the principles of the Craft must be good indeed, and in conclusion he had to acknowledge the deep impression the ceremony of initiation had made upon his mind that evening. Bro. Hiscox also made an excellent reply, in which he thanked the brethren very heartily for the honour they had done him by receiving him amongst them, and he hoped their confidence would never be misplaced. The J.W. proposed "The Health of the W.M." in a very neat speech, and congratulated the Hemming Lodge upon possessing so distinguished a member of P.G.I. as Bro. William Hammond. The W.M. briefly acknowledged the compliment, and proposed "The Health of their Visitor, Bro. Tozer, 1326." The toast having been drunk, Bro. Tozer replied at length, and gave a very interesting account of his experience of the Craft in America and the colonies. "The Health of the S.W. and the Other Officers" followed, and the W.M. mentioned their names and services individually. Bro. Hopwood, the W.M. elect, who has just recovered from a long and serious illness, feelingly alluded to the kind remarks passed by the W.M. in proposing his health in conjunction with the rest of the officers, and hoped that his year of office would be as prosperous and as successful as that of Bro. Hammond's. Bros. Hill, J.W.; J. Hammond, Sec.; Hurst, S.D.; and Walls, acting J.D., severally acknowledged the compliment. Between the toasts the brethren were entertained by the singing and reciting of Bros. Hurst, Hiscox, Hill, Walls and Ockenden. The Tyler's toast brought the proceedings to a close.

ASHBY-DE-LA-ZOUCH.—ST. AUGUSTINE'S CHAPTER (No. 779).—A convocation of this chapter was held at the Town Hall on Tuesday, the 21st ult., under the presidency of the Senior P.Z., M.E. Comp. Kelly, Prov. Grand Supt., and among the other officers present were Comps. Rev. John Denton, P.Z. and P.P.G.J., Treas.; Love, H.; Mammatt, J.; E. Carrick-Crofts (M.R.C.S.), E.; Rev. W. Langley, P.Z., and P.P.G.J., as N.; Thorp, P.S. 279, as P.S., in the absence in Ireland of Earl Ferrers, Prov. G.H., and others. An apology for unavoidable absence was received from the M.E.Z., Companion H. Etherington Smith, J.P. A ballot took place for four candidates, two only of whom were in attendance, viz., Bros. H. Blood, P.M., and W. S. A. Allen, S.W. of the Ferrers and Ivanhoe Lodge, No. 779, who were duly exalted, the three lectures being delivered by the Prov. G. Supt., and the duties of N. and P.S. being most efficiently performed by Comps. Langley and Thorp. A ballot took place for the officers for the ensuing year, when the following were declared to be duly elected, viz., Comps. Love, M.E.Z.; Mammatt, H.; Crofts, J.; Denton, Treas.; Allen, E.; Faulkner, N.; Rev. H. Cuyler, P.S.; Bembridge, Janitor. The companions subsequently adjourned to a banquet at the Queen's Head Hotel, and spent an hour or two very pleasantly, the loyal and Masonic toasts being duly honoured, the health of the Prov. G. Supt., Comp. Kelly, being proposed in very warm and complimentary terms by the Rev. Comp. Denton, who was subsequently heartily congratulated on his recent well-deserved preferment as vicar of Ashby-de-la-Zouch, where he has laboured for many years.

GLASGOW.—LODGE ST. JOHN (No. 34).—The regular meeting of this lodge was held within their own hall at No. 213, Buchanan-street, Glasgow, on Tuesday evening, 21st ult. The R.W.M., Bro. William Bell, presided, with whom on the dais were Bros. Robert Craig, P.M., and Thomas Fletcher, I.P.M. The chief office-bearers present were Bros. D. M. Nelson, D.M.; John D. Young, S.W.; David Horn, J.W.; Dalzell, Treas.; and John Dick, Sec. There was a numerous attendance of members of the lodge and visiting brethren. The lodge having been duly opened and the minutes of last meeting read and passed, the Secretary read a circular received from Bro. R. Wylie, P.G. Sec., Argyshire Province, intimating that, by invitation of the School Board of Kilwinning, the foundation stone of the new school house there would be laid with Masonic honours by Bro. Colonel Mure, R.W.P.G.M., on Saturday next, and inviting a deputation from Lodge St. John, 34, to be present on the occasion. On behalf of Bro. W. H. Bickerton, who had been unexpectedly called out of town, the Secretary next read a communication of some interest, and embodying an important notice of motion. In this Bro. Bickerton stated that that worthy brother of the Order, G. R. Harriott, Prov. Grand Master of Wigtown and Kirkcudbrightshire, had been for some time endeavouring to establish on an adequate scale an institution for the support of decayed Scottish Freemasons and their widows and orphans. Bro. Harriott was sparing no trouble, time, or expense on his own part to bring the scheme to a successful issue, and he (Bro. Bickerton) was proud to say that most of the noblemen and wealthier members of the Order in Scotland had rallied round him with their support. Bro. Geo. Kenning had kindly authorised him (Bro. Bickerton) to place the sum of one hundred guineas at the disposal of this lodge (St. John's), to be applied in furtherance of Bro. Harriott's scheme; and he (Bro. Bickerton) begged to give notice of motion that Bro. Kenning's offer be accepted; and further that Lodge St. John do vote £20 out of their funds in aid of the same cause; beyond this, he trusted the members of the lodge would independently contribute to such a noble scheme according to their means, so that, at no distant day, brethren from the sister countries should not be able to ask them what they in Scotland had to show for Masonry. In bringing forward this motion he was not unprepared for opposition; because he had often heard it said that, in so far as the Province of Glasgow was concerned, they did not require such institutions, seeing they had their Provincial Grand Benevolent Fund. Now, for immediate relief, the latter was noble; but when worthy brethren became worn out, unable, however willing, to work for their daily bread, and when the widow was left with a family totally unprovided for, then he (Bro. Bickerton) held that the P.G. Benevolent Fund was not in a position to support such cases according to their necessities. The communication having been submitted to the meeting, it was moved by Bro. D. M. Nelson, D.M., seconded by Bro. David Horn, J.W., and agreed to, that the Secretary be instructed to write Bro. Bickerton, thanking him for it, and requesting some further information on the matter. Applications for affiliation to the lodge were then heard from Bros Wm. Laught, Lodge Scotia, 178, and Andrew Bain, Lodge Navigation, Troon, 86, and, there being no opposition, they received the same at the hands of the R.W.M. The next business before the lodge was initiation, when Mr. John Morrison, of Shamrock-street, received the E.A. Degree, the ceremony being performed by Bro. J. Morgan, R.W.M., Lodge Star, 219. The lodge then adjourned for a short time to refreshment, thereafter being recalled to labour, and closed in due form.

GLASGOW.—COMMERCIAL ROYAL ARCH CHAPTER (No. 79).—The annual meeting of this chapter was held, in accordance with the laws and constitution of the Order, on the 23rd September, in the place of meeting, 30, Hope-street. Owing to the fact that most of the other chapters in town held their statutory meetings for election on the same evening, the attendance was not large, a goodly proportion of those who generally attend the meetings being office-bearers or members of other chapters in the neighbourhood. The law of the Supreme Grand Royal Arch Chapter of Scotland makes it imperative for each of its subordinates to meet on the 23rd September, annually, for the election of their officers, otherwise a special dispensation has to be applied for. This arrangement, though in some important respects well devised, is frequently found to lead to considerable inconvenience, a sufficient number of companions not being always forthcoming to enable the business to proceed. This would not be the case if each chapter could fix the date for its annual meeting sometime near the autumnal equinox—but we digress. The chapter having been opened by Companion Brode, the retiring First Principal, with the necessary assistance in the various offices, the first business was the reading of the minutes of last regular meeting, which the Scribe E. was requested to do. From these it appeared that the business at that meeting had been the nomination of office-bearers, and the Scribe E. mentioned that he had duly notified the companions who had been nominated; and was glad to say that, with the exception of Comp. R. A. Buchanan, all had cordially acquiesced and were willing to accept office. The name of Comp. John McRobbie having been substituted for that of Comp. Buchanan, the following were declared duly elected for the ensuing year, viz., Comps. David Lamb, First Principal; William M. G. Mason, Second Principal; Robert Brodie, Third Principal; John Monro, Scribe E.; John McRobbie, Scribe N.; George Macpherson, Treas.; with Comps. W. H. Bickerton, James Pyle, and James M. Duncan, First, Second, and Third Sojourners respectively, and Comp. James Minnoch, Janitor. Comp. Julius Brode, in the course of a few well chosen remarks, congratulated the chapter on the election of the new office-bearers, and said that with such a staff the continued prosperity of the chapter might be regarded as a certainty. He had done his best while he held the office of Z., and was gratified to think that his efforts had been attended with so much success, a success which he was, however, bound to say could not have been attained unless through the support which he had uniformly experienced at the hands of those with whom he had been associated, whose services he went on to particularize with many expressions of gratitude. The installation was postponed to a future day, as the requisite number of installed Principals was not present, and the chapter was closed in due form.

EDINBURGH.—LODGE CELTIC (No. 291).—A special meeting of this most prosperous lodge was held in the Ship Hotel, East Register Street, Edinburgh, on Tuesday, the 21st ult., for the purpose of admitting into the Ancient Order of Freemasonry Mr. Wells, who was about to proceed to New Zealand. The candidate, who had been well recommended, and no objection offered, received the E.A. Degree, Bro. D. Kinnaird, P.M., officiating in his usual impressive manner, supported by Bro. Gucirgides as S.W., and Bro. James Walker as J.W., and others. Among the visitors was Bro. W. H. Bickerton ("Freemason"), from Glasgow. Bro. Wells, if proficient, was to receive the F.C. Degree on Friday, the 24th ult., and there is not the least doubt, from the manner in which the ceremony of this degree was given and the very great attention paid to it by Bro. Wells, but what his proficiency will permit of his being passed to the F.C. Degree. There being no further business, the lodge was closed.

GLASGOW.—CHAPTER CATHEDRAL (No. 67) met in the Masonic Hall, 22, Struthers-street, Glasgow, on Thursday, 23rd ult., for the election of office-bearers, when the following companions were duly elected and installed by Companion George Thallon, Z. Chapter 119. Companions James Duthie, Z.; George Pridie, H.; D. Ronald, J.; J. Galdie, E.; J. Mason, N.; J. Wood, Treas.; Samuel Bisland, First Soj.; W. Sloan, Second Soj.; J. Dickie, Third Soj.; Andrew Crawford, Janitor. On this occasion there was a good attendance of members of the chapter and visiting companions. The duty of installing the above companions was most ably performed by Companion Thallon. There being no further business, the chapter was closed.

FREEMASONRY IN THE ISLE OF MAN.

(FROM A CORRESPONDENT.)

CASTLETOWN.—MONA LODGE (No. 212, I.C.)—Happening to be on a visit near the metropolis of "Ellan Vannin," I received a courteous invitation to visit the above lodge on the occasion of its last meeting, Monday, September 20th, and was much pleased with what I saw and heard. The chair was occupied by the W.M., Bro. the Rev. S. E. Ferrier, M.A., Government Chaplain of the Island, your correspondent was honoured by being requested to take charge of the West, while Bro. M. J. Backwell occupied the Junior Warden's chair. Among the other brethren present were Bros. James Mylchreest, P.M., acting Org.; R. Watterson, P.M.; Dr. Edwards, George Quayle, Hon. Sec.; H. S. Mylchreest, I.G.; Chicas, J.D., and others whose names I do not remember. The lodge was opened in due form, when the following "opening ode" was sung:—

Hail, Eternal! by whose aid
All created things were made;
Heaven and earth Thy vast design,
Hear us, Architect Divine.
May our work, begun in Thee,
Ever blest with order be;
And may we, when labours cease,
Part in harmony and peace.
By Thy glorious majesty,
By the trust we place in Thee,
By the badge and mystic sign,
Hear us, Architect Divine.

The minutes were then read and declared to be correctly recorded, and by them we learned that the lodge had forwarded through the Governor of the Island, the Hon. H. B. Loch, himself a member of our brotherhood, an address of congratulation to H.R.H. the Prince of Wales as M.W. Grand Master of English Freemasons. The ballot was then taken for Mr. Paterson, a candidate for our mysteries and privileges, which proving "clear" in the S.W. and E., and that gentleman being present, he was duly initiated by Bro. Past Master James Mylchreest. On the conclusion of the ceremony, the chair of K.S. was again assumed by Bro. Ferrier, who read a telegram just received from a gallant colonel who intended to be present to claim preferment, but who was unexpectedly detained at Douglas. After some routine business, a vote of thanks was accorded to your correspondent, and a request that on the occasion of his next visit he would meet the members at a lodge of instruction. There being no further business, the lodge was closed in solemn form, which included the singing of the following "closing ode":—

Now the evening shadows closing,
Warn from toil to peaceful rest;
Mystic arts and rites reposing,
Sacred, in each faithful breast.
God of light, whose love unceasing
Doth to all Thy works extend,
Crown our Order with Thy blessing,
Build, sustain us to the end.
Humbly now we bow before Thee,
Grateful for Thy aid Divine;
Everlasting power and glory,
Mighty Architect, be Thine.

The brethren then adjourned to light refreshment, and all separated in perfect harmony. I cannot close this report without giving expression to the pleasure my visit to the Lodge of Mona afforded me. I have attended many lodges, but never saw one better worked. Our brethren in the Isle of Man, however, labour under one disadvantage—they have no Provincial Grand Lodge, and this, perhaps, arises from the fact that the lodges hail under two Grand Lodges, England and Ireland. If all the lodges could be placed under one jurisdiction, and the Governor be constituted Provincial Grand Master, it would add to the progress of Masonry and the advancement of its members. I noticed that one of the bye-laws of the Lodge of Mona wisely provided "that all officers quartered at Castletown, who are Masons, shall be deemed honorary members during their stay."

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS.—EXCELLENT PILLS.—The resources of chemistry and medicine were long fruitlessly tried before they yielded a remedy which could overcome disorders of the stomach and nerves, till Professor Holloway discovered his purifying and tonic Pills. They are the surest and safest correctives of indigestion, heartburn, flatulency, torpidity of the liver, twitches, nervous fancies, despondency, low spirits, and declining strength. Holloway's Pills subvert all irregular action on the body, and so strengthen and support the system that disease departs and leaves the patient not at all shaken. This is the grand aim and object of medical art, to regulate disordered functions without damaging the constitution by the remedy, and admirably is the end obtained by Holloway's Pills.—Advr.

EARLY GRAND ENCAMPMENT, SCOTLAND.

The Grand Council of the Early Grand Encampment in Scotland had their quarterly communication at the Sun Inn, Kilmarnock, on Saturday, the 11th Sept. With one exception all the encampments were represented, producing the most successful meeting the Early Grand has experienced these last six years.

The encampment being opened in due and ancient form, business was proceeded with, minutes of last quarterly meeting were read and adopted, and other preliminary matters being disposed of, the council then commenced proceedings with their annual election for Grand Officers, who being nominated in the usual way, the vote was taken, when the following candidates were found successful, and simultaneously installed:—Alexander Pollock, M.N.G.C.; James Pollock, P.G.C.; Thomas Clark, G.S.; Matthew Pollock, G.T.; the other officers being filled by representatives from the various encampments present.

A petition some time ago being presented by a few Sir Knights from Airdrie for a warrant to erect an encampment acting under the E.G. in that place, having during the prescribed time been under the consideration of the council, was forthwith granted, which gave entire satisfaction. The newly-elected M.N.C., Sir Knt. A. Pollock, having ascended the throne, addressed the assembled Sir Knts. in an earnest and impressive manner, especially counselling them to use their utmost exertions in vindicating the claims of the E.G. Encampment, and repelling the insinuations of those whose mission to this earth evidently consists in the amount of abuse and malignity they are capable of casting on the devoted head of our Order. A few pithy remarks from other Sir Knights followed, each determined to maintain our old motto, "We were the first and we shall be the last." Business being accomplished to the satisfaction of all present, and the sentinels withdrawn from their posts, the encampment closed in solemn form. The Sir Knights thereafter adjourned for refreshment, when a most pleasant and enjoyable evening was spent.

The usual loyal, patriotic, and Masonic toasts were given and ably responded to, song and sentiment being pleasantly and artistically diversified, conducting much to the altogether most delightful meeting the E.G. has had.

AN ORATION

DELIVERED BY REV. CANON TOWNSHEND AT THE LAYING THE FOUNDATION STONE OF THE NEW MASONIC HALL AT HALIFAX, N.S.

This corner stone which has collected together this imposing assemblage to-day is another illustration of the old adage and Masonic motto, "Magna est veritas et prevalebit." Need I say that I refer to the past dark days of the brotherhood—past and gone, I trust, for ever—when prejudice and slander dogged the footsteps of Freemasons in all lands; when their purposes and acts were judged of in the ignorance of uncharitable suspicion, and their very existence denounced as hostile to the well-being of society. This corner stone, Most Worshipful Grand Master, implying as it does a stately fabric, is gratifying evidence, I say, that those evil days have passed away, and that happier times have succeeded, in the manifest propriety and extension of this ancient Craft, in the public confidence which it enjoys, and in the benevolent character which it has earned for itself throughout the world. There are few acts and ceremonies of past ages which have come down to modern days more distinctly and intelligibly than that in which we are at present engaged. The ritual of the ceremony may be varied in different ages and nations; but the act itself of laying a corner stone, and the ideas connected therewith, both in the substantial purposes, and symbolical sense of the "Corner Stone," suggest to our minds at this day the same thoughts as are expressed in that beautiful passage of Sacred Writ from probably the oldest work extant in the world, the Book of Job. It is indeed the Deity Himself who is represented by the Patriarch as addressing him in these sublime words—"Where wast thou when I laid the foundations of the earth? Declare if thou hast understanding, who hath laid the measures thereof, if thou knowest? or who hath stretched the line upon it? Whereupon are the foundations thereof fastened? or who laid the corner stone thereof; when the morning stars sang together, and all the Sons of God shouted for joy?" And again, we have the same reference expressed by the Blessed and Holy One, the Word by whom the world and all things in it were made quoting the words of the Royal Psalmist, "The stone which the builder rejected, the same is become the head of the corner; this is the Lord's doing, and it is marvellous in our eyes."

We have, then, the testimony of both antiquity and Divine inspiration to the important character of the corner stone, whether as used in the material building or figuratively applied to spiritual and moral edification.

The newspapers have made far and wide the interesting discovery of the corner stone of the first Masonic building of these maritime provinces, erected on this spot, and but lately taken down, to be succeeded by a noble temple and one more worthy of the name and fame of Freemasons, and better suited to the dignity of the Grand Lodge of Nova Scotia.

Our new country, Most Worthy Grand Master, cannot boast of its antiquities; we cannot point to our venerable cathedrals, nor our crumbling castles and towers of by-gone days; but no one could doubt the existence of the genuine antiquarian spirit in the brotherhood, who witnessed the anxious searching for, and finally the joyous exhuming of, the old corner stone, which had rested undisturbed where it was laid by Royal hands three quarters of a century ago.

Though all, I suppose, have perused with much pleasure the published copy of the inscription engraven on the stone, let me read it now in the ears of this assemblage, who are repeating to-day the work of their honoured forefathers, long since gone to rest, remembering with deep solemnity that, as years roll on, the record of this our deed, will again in turn afford to those who shall follow us the like subject of affectionate interest, when we who now look upon each other shall also have passed away, and entered into that Glorious Temple, not made with hands, eternal in the Heavens. The stone covered by the slab containing this inscription, held in a cavity prepared for it, a bottle in which were several of the current coins of the day, and parchment whose record had nearly disappeared.

As well as we could judge, it seemed to be a transcript of that engraven on the stone, with the exception of several signatures appended; these interesting autographs of good men and true we tried to decipher, in the special and loyal hope of tracing the letters of an illustrious name, associated with the early history of our province—His Royal Highness the Duke of Kent, the grandfather of His Royal Highness the present Most W.G.M. of all England, and the father of Her Most Gracious Majesty Queen Victoria whom God long preserve.

In referring to this ancient memento of by-gone days, one's thoughts naturally turn to the various changes which have taken place since that old corner stone was laid in the general condition of the world, but more especially in our own national history, both in the Fatherland and its Colonial Empire, in the political acts of wisdom which have been accomplished for the freedom of those in bondage; for the increased liberty and adjustment of the civil rights of the subject, and for the general social improvement of all classes of people; in the naval and military renown of our country; in the admirable discoveries and practical application of science; in the controlling and utilizing of the tremendous powers of nature to the convenience and business of man. Compare the swift passages of those palace steamers which now leave, every week or two, this noble harbour for old England's shores, with the forty, fifty, sixty, and even seventy day voyage of 1800—yes, and for thirty years later; or the flashing of thought, with lightning speed, from one side of the Atlantic to the other—with the letters of old date which the tardy packet of those days used to bring to anxious and impatient friends.

Time, however, will not permit me to do more than refer to these two or three examples of the great changes and improvements of the last half century, in all the advantages of which our province and this city fully participate.

Of the personal changes also which have occurred in the same period, I can only mention one, without which this address would be singularly deficient. Doubtless to many here present there are other sad memories of dear brothers whose familiar faces they behold no longer in their fraternal meetings. But he of whom I would say a word in reverend remembrance is our latest loss; for many years our worthy Head and Master, and always the genial and warm-hearted friend and brother, known far beyond the boundaries of his own jurisdiction, and distinguished by numerous marks and testimonies of honour and esteem—while his generation lasts, the good honest face of Alexander Keith will not be forgotten, and his memory for generations to come will be affectionately retained by those brothers who shall fill our places in the Masonic brotherhood of Nova Scotia.

In an old book taken out of rubbish in the garret of the old Masonic Hall which was lately demolished, entitled "Constitution of the Ancient Fraternity of Free and Accepted Masons," I find the following scraps of information: "From Europe the Royal Art crossed the Atlantic with the first emigrants, and settled in various parts of America. It is said to have been known in Nova Scotia while in the hands of the French." "As early as the year 1750, which was as soon almost as there were any houses erected at Halifax, we find a number of brethren met together, with Governor Cornwallis at their head, deeming it, as they expressed it, for the good of the fraternity that Masonry should be propagated in the province, and that there was a necessity of encouraging it in this place. Erasmus James Phillips, Esq., of Annapolis Royal, was Provincial Grand Master at that time, and they agreed to petition him for a warrant to hold a lodge at Halifax, and that His Excellency might be Master of it. Governor Cornwallis was, while he resided in this province, Master of this lodge. He was succeeded in the Government and in the chair by Governor Lawrence, who enjoyed both till his death."

It is a remark which must offer itself to every person in the least acquainted with the state of progress of Masonry in this province, that it has ever been conducted by persons of the most respectable characters, and that those who have had the direction and management of public affairs have generally been zealous and active in promoting its growth. On March the 18th, 1751, the second lodge was formed at Halifax; Bro. Murray, Deputy Grand Master. On St. John's Day they resolved to celebrate the festival with usual pomp, to walk in procession to the Governor's House, thence to church to prayers. But receiving melancholy news of the death of our brother, the late Prince of Wales, they resolved to appear in mourning as a mark of respect to his memory.

Seven years after this a Grand Warrant was received from the R.W. and Hon. William Stewart, Earl of Blesington, G.M. of England, constituting Erasmus James Phillips, Esq., Provincial Grand Master of Nova Scotia. G.M. Phillips was succeeded by His Honour, Jonathan Belcher, Esq., Lieutenant-Governor of the province. After the death of R.W. Bro. Belcher, the affairs of the Craft lay dormant for many years. At last, in 1783, the lodges about Halifax determined to petition the Grand Lodge of England for a renewal of former Grand Warrant. This was issued in September, 1784, constituting the Right W. John George Pyke, Esq., Grand Master. Next year, G.M. Pyke resigned, and nominated His Excellency Governor Parker as his successor. His Excellency died on the 25th of November, 1791, and was succeeded by the R.W. and Hon. Richard Bulkeley, President of His Majesty's Council, who continued to hold the office until the 27th of December, 1800, when he resigned. The R.W. Duncan Clarke was then elevated to the chair, 27th December, 1800. On the 28th of December, 1801, His Excellency Sir John Wentworth, Lieutenant-Governor, was elected as Grand Master, which he held till the 11th of January, 1810, when he resigned. The R.W. John George Pyke, Past Grand Master was installed on the 27th of December following, which office he held till June 24th, 1820, when he resigned. Here, the record of the old book to which I have referred terminates.

This day the Grand Lodge of Nova Scotia enters, as it were, on a new period in its history in the city of Halifax. The brothers, in warm zeal, and with enterprising spirit, have just laid the corner stone, with appropriate ceremonies and imposing solemnity, of a commodious edifice, a goodly temple in which to meet in God's holy name, where the order and beauty of God's handiworks will be set forth—where His divine laws will be inculcated—where charity, the perfection of all virtues, is laid down as the bond of our union and the chief purpose of our being—where every sign and symbol, every word and token, is the expression of some good, either material or moral, to the bodies and souls of men.

Nevertheless, it would be mere affectation to appear ignorant of the fact that prejudices do still exist against the Craft, though in a diminished degree. Secrecy is one of the chief objections—secrecy, which on the one hand excites curiosity, on the other creates suspicion. It is continually asked, What secret knowledge can these men have which is not equally accessible to all? And what are the effects of this knowledge? Are Masons better or wiser men than others; and if not, what is the use of their knowledge and secrets? Now, in reply to all this, Masons frankly admit that their confraternity is a secret society—secret so far as its terms of admission, its vows, and its ritualism are concerned; but its avowed principles openly declare it to be a band of God-fearing brethren, and not a cabal of designing conspirators. Its known works are deeds of love and mercy, and not destruction and revolution. The symbols of its government, its instruction, and its degrees are the highest expression of order, obedience, and harmony, and the Supreme Authority which stands forth prominently in the midst of all their assemblies is the ever-open Law of the Most High God. Can evil, I ask, proceed from such an institution?

Whose are the glorious names that adorn the history of Freemasonry? The brilliant stars that illumine its ancient roll, noble names of Heaven-born genius—of renowned patriotism, of undaunted valour? Have we not reason to pride ourselves on a fraternity in which kings and nobles in the olden times, as well as in the present, delighted and do still delight; in which the capacities of Sir Isaac Newton and Benjamin Franklin, and the intellectual Locke rejoiced—with which such great warriors of modern times as Sir John Moore, Lord Nelson, and last, though not least, nay grandest of all, the immortal Wellington, and hundreds of others identified themselves. Again, turning to our neighbours, of the past Presidents of the United States but four were strangers to the Craft. In the Courts and Legislative Halls of that nation we find such names as Patrick Henry, Judge Marshall, De Witt Clinton, Livingston, the learned and logical Jurist Storey, and numbers of others in Church and State, in science and literature, to be added to the long roll of illustrious men recorded in the annals of Freemasonry. Again, then, I challenge an answer—can evil proceed from such an institution, except, alas, the common evil of human infirmity? A faithful Mason cannot be a bad man. But the precious deposit of Masonic truth, like the sacred ministrations of the glorious Gospel, is held in earthen vessels, which are often unworthy of the great trust, too often damaging the treasure by their own imperfections. But though it would be as unjust to cast upon the principles of Freemasonry the blemishes in the lives of Masons as it would be to bring forth the inconsistencies of Christians to condemn the Blessed Gospel of our salvation, yet the true Mason will take the warning to himself, and ever remember that it is his duty, not only to appear punctually in his lodge at the Master's call, and cheerfully take his part in the work thereof, but, when out of the sacred precincts and the sound of gavel, to exhibit before the world the virtues inculcated in every mysterious rite and sacred symbol of the ancient Craft. He will thus convince and recommend, by the practical proof of good deeds, what he dare not speak of with his lips. He will conquer with the weapons of truth and gain a brother by the beauty of holiness.

COOK'S TOURIST HANDBOOK FOR SOUTHERN ITALY.

We are a good deal taken by this well-arranged little handbook for travellers, and almost personally on one of Mr. Cook's tours to a very fascinating land. "Italia! oh Italia!" the Morgen land of poetry and of imagination, as some one sung of old, what pleasant associations crowd around thy very name! Other countries in the world have great souvenirs and imperishable records attached to them, other lands can still attract, or amuse, or alarm or depress, but to Italy belong the unceasing sympathy and the fervour of admiration. Why is it? Perhaps it is to be found in this, that as its earlier history takes us back to the great deeds of sovereign power, and the unequalled achievements of a wondrous people, so its later centuries have witnessed a remarkable development of artistic life, as well as the special and pervading characteristics of a most sumptuous religious system. And we should not forget, too, how much of European history has been bound up with the See of St. Peter, and the convulsions of Italy itself. For many ages it was not only the battle-ground of nations, but the centre of diplomacy, the arbiter of peace, the de-cider of war. The very ambitions of its Popes, and the aims and intents of its rulers, make Italy a subject of the deepest interest to every statesman and every student. But beyond all this, beyond its historical memories, its ecclesiastical annals, its tales of blood, and its deeds of ill, we think that Italy, in its own inherent loveliness of natural beauty and grace, and the kindly and genial and tolerant character of its people, have had a good deal to do with this admiration among the inhabitants of Great Britain.

Our great public school system has had much to do with it, no doubt, as George Canning used to say, and the general taste happily amongst us for classical lore and classical learning. And there has remained with our great people conspicuous for their united love of order and charity, for their reverence to law and authority, and their impatience of oppression, injustice, and social wrong, amid that admixture of Anglo-Saxon "standhaftigkeit," and Norman French impulsiveness, the warmest appreciation of Italy's claims on every account to the regard, the love, the admiration, the attachment of mankind; at any rate, of all cultivated intellects, and of all refined imagination.

And as we pore over Mr. Cook's handbook and maps to-day, as we drift by Genoa la Superba, and Firenze la Bella, and Napoli la Gentile, until we come to Roma la Santa, we feel what a wondrous history is summed up in these three great towns alone, as we travel back through the stirring records of several hundred years, to say nothing of such unchanging recollections as cling to Cumæ, and Civita Vecchia, to Syracuse, Messina, and Palermo, to Bologna and Siena, to Herculaneum and Pompeii, to the Coliseum and St. Peter's. We are taken back at once from the tastes and theories of the hour, "un peu boutique par ma foi," to great names and high deeds, to those imperishable memories which Time, though it mars all things, and destroys most, still preserves, even though dim perhaps now in the hoariness of departed centuries, for the study, the wonder, the appreciation, or the awe of the traveller in Italy to-day.

Few there are who linger amid the ruins of the past, or the creations of to-day, in the cities, and villages, and churches, and plains of Italy, but must feel how lightly time, after all, has touched that wondrous clime. The relics of by-gone greatness, the monuments of classic days, the creations of Giotto, the masterpieces of Michael Angelo, the works of countless cunning Craftsmen, all rise still before our wondering eyes, in all their silent greatness and speaking grace.

Italy is full of wonders from first to last, we can go nowhere without being instructed, or pleased or impressed, and we therefore thank Mr. Cook, as citizens of the world, that he has given to many a humble tourist and loiterer to-day amid the ruins, and graves, and fair scenes, and tinted vineyards of that glorious land a convenient and portable vade mecum, to be carried in a knapsack, or thrust into a carpet bag, as we look once more on "flavum Tiberini," or linger respectfully among the buried streets of Pompeii, or smile at Naples, or look grave at Rome, or talk of the Sybils; or, leaving the south, wend our way to the north of Italy, and stand on the Bridge of Sighs at Venice, and remember Juliet within the walls of Verona. Addio, Italia!

MASONIC MUSIC.

Our good Bro. H. J. Hatch, P.G.C. for Essex, and S.W. 160, has recently published an installation song, to be procured at Bro. George Kenning's, 198, Fleet-street, and 1, 2, and 3, Little-Britain. We beg to commend it to the notice of our brethren, and we sincerely trust that the Craft generally will accord to it a fraternal patronage. It is lively and effective, and seems very well arranged, the words and music being both composed by our kind and warm-hearted brother.

ROMAN CATHOLIC EXCOMMUNICATIONS.

Can any brother give me a reference to the Bull of Benedict XIV., published May 18th, 1751, beginning "Providus Romanum Pontificum," in an English translation?

I shall also be much obliged by a reference to the published allocation of Pius the Ninth, the present Pope, in which he condemns the Masonic body.

THE EDITOR.

ORATOR HENLEY AND MASONRY.

John Henley, more commonly known as "Orator Henley," was in the early part of the last century the most popular preacher of London. He had been admitted to orders in the Church of England, but built for himself an independent chapel, where he soon became notorious for his eloquence and the eccentricity of his discourses. In 1730, Samuel Prichard published his "Masonry Dissected," to which Henley replied, and in the "Daily Post" of October, 20, 1730, appeared the following characteristic advertisement:

"This day at large a new Oration in reply to Masonry Dissected, or the Freemasons' triumph, or hod and trowel, beat the whole field, for wager, against Prichard's jaw bone of an ass; being a defence of Masonry against yelping, braying, burring, snarling, grinning, barking, growling, huffing, blowing, tearing, staring, stuttering, snorting, and petulant clatter of late about it in papers and pamphlets."

Dr. Anderson also replied to Prichard, but his reply was moderate in style. Henley's, no doubt, was incisive, and in the slashing order of writing. None of the Masonic bibliographies mention this brochure. A copy of it would be a rare treasure to the Masonic collector.

ALBERT MACKEY,
in the "Voice of Masonry."

A plot of land in the City, at the corner of Threadneedle-street and Bishopsgate-street, has been recently let at a ground-rent of £2600 per annum, or at the rate of more than £31,000 per annum per acre.

At Liverpool recently the London and North-Western Railway Company were fined £20 and costs for having neglected to have some cattle trucks cleaned and disinfected.

It has been found necessary to increase the accommodation for students in the Military College at Sandhurst, and the works are to be carried out at a cost of £35,000.

Masonic and General Tidings.

Bro. the Rev. Augustus A. Bagshawe, P.P.S.G.W., and P.P.G.C. for Derbyshire, has been presented with the Installation jewel as Provincial Steward of Derbyshire, by his lodge, Phoenix St. Ann, No. 1235, Buxton.

A Grand Council of the Illustrious Knights, K.H. 30°, will be held at the Masonic Hall, 33, Golden Square, on Wednesday, the 13th of October, at 4.45 p.m. There are twelve candidates for advancement.

The "Masonic Magazine" for October contains a portrait of His Royal Highness George, Prince of Wales, from the "Sentimental Magazine" of 1792.

ELECTION OF AN ALDERMAN.—The election of an alderman for the ward of Castle Baynard, in the room of Sir Sills John Gibbons, took place on Saturday last, at 10 o'clock, at the infant school-rooms, St. Andrew-by-the-Wardrobe. Bro. the Right Hon. the Lord Mayor presided, supported on his left by Mr. Deputy Farrer, and on his right by Mr. Orton, his lordship's solicitor. The voting was carried on with considerable spirit, Bro. Hadley keeping the lead. The state of the poll was at 11 o'clock, Bro. Hadley 74; Mr. Cockerell 53; and at the close of the poll, Bro. Hadley 121; Mr. Cockerell 120. Mr. Cockerell handed in a notice demanding a scrutiny, which was received with hisses, and after a vote of thanks to the Lord Mayor for presiding, the wardmote was adjourned to the 14th of October, at 10 a.m.

The vacant superintendency of police of the Prescott division, rendered so by the resignation of Bro. Fowler, P.M. 86, P.P.G.A.D.C., has been conferred on Superintendent Brendle, of the Rochdale division.

THE ROYAL STANDARD LODGE (No. 1298).—The meetings of this lodge are now held at the Wellington Club, Upper-street, Islington, in place of the Marquis Tavern, Canonbury. The next meeting is on Tuesday, the 5th inst., at half-past 6.

We understand that a very fine portrait of H.R.H. the Prince of Wales, as Grand Master Mason of England, has been bought by a few of the members of Maryhill Lodge, No. 510, and is to be presented to that lodge. Bro. R. Shaw, a young and worthy member, and son of the respected Provost of the burgh of Maryhill, has taken the initiative in this matter.

The first annual Lincolnshire Provincial Grand Lodge of Mark Master Masons met on Thursday last. A report of this meeting will appear in our next.

The meetings of the Camden Lodge of Instruction, No. 704, are now held every Monday evening at 8 o'clock, at the Stanhope Arms, Upper James's-street, Oval-road, Camden Town.

The Holy Palestine Preceptory, Eminent Sir Knight Colonel Francis Burdett, Eminent Preceptor, will meet at the Masonic Hall, 33, Golden Square, on Wednesday next. The names of seven companions have been approved. They will be balloted for and installed.

JEWISH NEW YEAR.—Thursday (30th September), the new year in the Jewish Calendar 5636 commenced.

An International Potato Show was the special feature at the Alexandra Palace on Wednesday, when many varieties were on view. Prizes were offered by Messrs. Sutton, Messrs. Hooper and Co., and Bro. Coutts, P.G.P.

The annual Court of Governors of the West Lancashire Masonic Educational Institution will be held at the Guildhall, Preston, on Wednesday, the 6th inst., at 12 o'clock.

Bro. Thomas Preston (1426), the Secretary of the Albert Assurance Company Arbitration, received last year, when it was thought the arbitration was about to close, a testimonial from the numerous firms of solicitors engaged in it, which they forwarded to Lord Cairns, the arbitrator, expressing to his lordship their satisfaction at the way in which Bro. Preston had discharged the duties of his office, for the magnitude, intricacy, and novelty of which he had proved himself in all respects equal. The Indian business having delayed the issue of the final award, Lord Cairns deferred his acknowledgment of the receipt of the testimonial; but on the 12th of August last his lordship, by his principal secretary, wrote to Bro. Preston, returning his testimonial, and stating that it had given him much pleasure to note such a recognition of his services as secretary of the arbitration, and that he himself was fully cognisant of the diligence and intelligence with which he had discharged the duties of that office.

The marriage of Lady Theresa, eldest daughter of Bro. the Right Hon. Lord Shrewsbury, Prov. Grand Master for Staffordshire, with Lord Castlereagh, eldest son of Bro. the Marquis of Londonderry, will take place at his lordship's private chapel, in the grounds at Alton Towers, this day (Saturday).

The prospectus has been issued of the Briton Life Association, which is formed for the creation of a "New Series" of the Briton Medical and General Life Association on a perfectly independent basis, and entirely free from any of the existing liabilities or engagements of the parent institution. The capital required is £500,000, in £1 shares, of which 100,000 are now offered to the public. Shareholders will receive an annual interest of 5 per cent.,

payable half-yearly, in addition to 20 per cent. of the next divisible profits. In the ten years ended the 31st December, 1873, the new annual premiums of the old society amounted to an average of £21,698 per annum; hence the prospects of the new company, which has been formed in connection with the 2000 old-established agencies, are unusually encouraging.

The Provincial Grand Lodge of Durham will be held at the Masonic Hall, Durham, on Tuesday, the 26th of Oct., at two p.m.

An emergency meeting of the Great City Lodge, No. 1426, takes place this day (Saturday), at the Terminus Hotel, Cannon-street, at half-past two.

The "Chemist and Druggist," in speaking of Felton and Sons' Specialité Sherry, remarks, "This wine is a particularly wholesome one. It has a smooth dry flavor, and is remarkably free from the heat and acidity so usually found in all but the very finest sherries. We are quite confident that for a wholesome stimulant this sherry can hardly be surpassed."

TESTIMONIAL TO THE EX-TOWN CLERK OF MAIDSTONE.—At a public luncheon, held on Wednesday last, at the Town Hall, Maidstone, a life-size portrait, painted by Mr. Sant, R.A., was presented by the town and neighbourhood to Mr. John Monckton, for 37 years town clerk of Maidstone, on behalf of 500 guinea-subscribers, including 60 of Mr. Monckton's professional brethren. The presentation was made by the Mayor, Mr. Henry Hughes. Mr. Monckton is father of Bro. J. B. Monckton, President of the Board of General Purposes, town clerk of the City; and another of his sons, Bro. Herbert Monckton, succeeds to the town clerkship of Maidstone. Mr. Monckton has several times served the office of under-sheriff for the county. It was stated that, inasmuch as Mr. Monckton had declined any personal testimonial, the committee, who comprised gentlemen of every shade of political and religious opinion, had, at a special meeting of the corporation held for that purpose on the same day, requested that the picture might be hung in the Town Hall, in lasting remembrance of the high esteem in which Mr. Monckton was held. It is needless to add that the request was unanimously acceded to, and the proceedings, both at the council meeting and at the déjeuner which succeeded it, bore the most gratifying testimony to the warm and affectionate feelings entertained by those present for their old fellow-townsmen and friend.

The "Times" of Thursday has the following telegram, dated, Paris, September 29th:—The Freemasons' Congress which has just been held at Lausanne is considered such a success, that a similar meeting in 1877 is already talked of, and will be held either in Rome or London. If in the former capital, the President will be King Victor Emmanuel; if in the latter, the Prince of Wales. London would be preferred by the Freemasons, but a meeting at Rome would be considered by them as a more convincing proof of the victory of liberty over religious bigotry.

ROYAL MASONIC INSTITUTION FOR GIRLS.

The General Committee of this Institution met in the Board Room, Freemasons' Hall, on Thursday afternoon, Bro. Thomas W. White in the chair. There were also present Bros. Benjamin Head, H. Browne, Joshua Nunn, H. Dubois, John Boyd, W. Paas, W. Roebuck, Col. Peters, G. Bolton, J. A. Rucker, A. H. Tattershall, W. Moore, Richard Spencer, Robert B. Webster, Walter Wellsman, J. Mason, H. M. Levy, H. Massey ("Freemason"), and R. W. Little (Secretary).

The following paper was printed and circulated for the information of the Committee by Bro. J. A. Rucker:—

By the laws of the Royal Masonic Institution for Girls the general direction and control of the affairs of the Institution is vested in the General Courts.

The ordinary business of the Institution is transacted by a General Committee, consisting of all Life Governors, together with twelve life or annual subscribers elected annually at the Quarterly General Court in April, thus the General Committee, so far as it is elective, is appointed by the General Courts.

The House Committee, to whom is entrusted the working of the details of the interior economy of the Institution, are elected by the General Committee from amongst their own members.

Such being our constitution, it appears to me (I speak subject to correction) that it is due to the members of the House Committee that no proposal shall be brought by any one of its members before the General Committee or General Court until his colleagues shall have had an opportunity of considering the same, in order to secure, as far as possible, unanimity of opinion of the House Committee in the discussion of the subject at the General Committee or Quarterly General Court.

I therefore beg leave to move—

"That in the opinion of this Committee it is advisable that arrangements be made for the admission of an increased number of children to the benefits of the Institution."

I would support this proposition by the following statistics, premising that the Governors of this Institution have not, in the past, been neglectful of their duty in this respect, for I find that the number of children in the school on the

31st December, 1859, was	68
" 1864, "	97
" 1869, "	100
" 1874, "	130
And at this date is	150
Or an increase of 120 per cent. in 16 years.

The increase of numbers has necessarily led to increased expenditure, as I find the total amount expended during the year ended

31st December, 1859, was	£2,150
" 1864, "	2,980
" 1869, "	4,060
" 1874, "	6,370

Or an increase of nearly 200 per cent. in 15 years.

But the increased income has more than kept pace with the increased expenditure, thus:—The income for the year ending

31st December, 1859, was	£2,930
" 1864, "	4,310
" 1869, "	5,900
" 1874, "	8,820

Or just over 200 per cent. increase in 15 years.

During the same years the amount of Capital invested has increased as follows:—Amount of Capital

31st December, 1859, was	£13,000
" 1864, "	18,200
" 1869, "	26,000
" 1874, "	33,000

Or 150 per cent. increase in 15 years.

I will add the fact that the number of lodges on the nominal roll of Grand Lodge was, on 31st December, 1859, 1106.

The numbers were closed up in 1863, and there were,

On 31st December, 1864, ...	1,047 lodges.
" " 1869, ...	1,299 "
" " 1874, ...	1,527 "

Or over 31 per cent. increase in 10 years.

The number of approved candidates for the next election is ... 30

The number to be elected is ... 6

I do not think it necessary to occupy your time by dwelling on these figures, they speak for themselves, and more than justify the motion I invite you to pass.

It is not, however, so easy a matter to determine how such a resolution shall be carried into practical effect; my own opinion is, and I have frequently expressed it, as many of you know, that the care of 150 children, with the necessary staff of assistant governesses, teachers, and domestics, is quite sufficient to tax to the full the energies of a matron as head of the household arrangements, and of a head governess as director of the educational departments; I therefore desire (and should do so even if it were not the fact that our present buildings are as fully occupied as health and convenience will admit) that a nucleus shall be formed of a preparatory, or lower school, into which the children shall be passed on admission into the institution, and be drafted therefrom into the first, or upper school, as vacancies shall occur. Such an additional establishment would involve the necessity of the purchase of freehold ground of sufficient extent to accommodate a much larger number of children than we should in the first instance be justified in electing, and the erection of a building that would admit of very considerable extension, without altering its architectural character.

Such a plan would not, I think, require an immediate outlay of more than £10,000.

But besides the motion of which notice has been given by Bro. Nunn, asking that a sum not exceeding £25,000 be expended out of the funds of this institution for the purposes under consideration, I understand that an alternative proposition is likely to be brought forward; therefore, in order that the whole subject may be duly deliberated, I shall, if my first resolution be carried, ask you to resolve further,—

"That this Committee recommend that a sub-committee consisting of nine members, of whom not less than four shall be members of the House Committee, together with the Treasurer and Trustees of the institution, be appointed, three to form a quorum, to consider and report to the General Court on the arrangements to be made for the admission of from thirty to forty more children to the benefits of the institution; that in case of need a Special General Court be summoned to receive such report, and that such report be read for information at any House Committee or General Committee that may meet between the completion of the report and the meeting of the (Quarterly or Special) General Court."

JOHN A. RUCKER.

After the minutes had been read and confirmed, the brethren proceeded with the discussion of the object contained in Bro. Nunn's and Bro. Rucker's notices of motion.

Bro. Nunn, in calling attention to the fourth paragraph of Bro. Rucker's paper, said that his notice of motion was given without any disrespect being intended to the members of the House Committee. The object for which his resolution was intended in no way interfered with the functions of the House Committee. He had no desire to bring forward any matter in opposition to their views; but according to his own general view he thought he was in duty bound to bring forward a fixed proposition. At the time Bro. Patten was Secretary, he (Bro. Nunn) first mooted the idea of increasing the capacity of the institution. It was then found impossible to accommodate the number of children properly in case of sickness. An infirmary was afterwards built; and he had repeatedly brought before the House or General Committees a proposition for increasing the size of the school, not so much the existing building, but by erecting a new one, reiterated that the matter did not interfere with the House Committee, because such a matter did not come under their control. In Bro. Rucker's paper it was inferred that the subject should have been brought before the House Committee; but it was not so. He thought it his duty to bring it before the General Committee, and he had done so.

The following is Bro. Nunn's notice of motion:—

"With a view to enable the Institution to accommodate a greater number of children, found necessary by the increase of applications (four-fifths of the applicants at the next election cannot be admitted for want of room), and the vastly extending growth of the Craft generally, with the circumstance that space cannot be obtained on the limited site of the present school, as it is so hemmed in by railway lines and buildings, and which at no distant period will be required (or partially so) for increased railway accommodation that year by year has extended since the school has been at Wandsworth.

That, a sum not exceeding twenty-five thousand pounds (£25,000) be expended out of the Funds of the Institution in the purchase of land, and the erection of a suitable school-house and building, to educate and support two hundred children, and to be arranged that in the event of the existing school being removed, space be found for extending the same, so as to contain all the children under one roof.

July, 1875.

JOSHUA NUNN.

Bro. Rucker said he had committed what he proposed to writing, but it was by the desire of the House Committee that it had been printed. He was still of the opinion expressed in the paragraph alluded to by Bro. Nunn; but in order that there should be no ground whatever for Bro. Nunn thinking there was a personal allusion in the paper, he proposed his first resolution—"That in the opinion of this Committee it is advisable that arrangements be made for the admission of an increased number of children to the benefits of the Institution," and then the appointment of a sub-committee. His reasons were expressed in the printed paper, and he thought the brethren would agree with him that increased accommodation should be afforded in the institution. This was really the proposition of Bro. Nunn, and there was another proposition to the same effect by Bro. Raynham W. Stewart. There were many members of the House Committee proposing distinct plans with the same end before the Quarterly Court. He would appeal to the brethren then present whether if the proposers of the plans, however different, met to discuss their objects, it would be better that they should do so, and also with the House Committee in order that when they came before the Quarterly Court they might be found to be unanimous in their opinion in reference to these points.

Bro. H. Browne thought that if there were several distinct propositions they should be discussed separately, and in all probability a sound decision would be arrived at. He was not at all displeased that there were so many propositions, and he should, when the proper time arrived, before the Quarterly General Court—be prepared to speak upon them.

Bro. Joshua Nunn's notice of motion was then formally put in.

Bro. Rucker said that with regard to his notices they were given for the General Committee to deal with; the proper course being, by the rules of the institution, that they should be submitted to the General Committee, and, if approved by them, should be passed on to the General Quarterly Court.

The Committee deciding that this was the proper course, approved of the notices, and Bro. Rucker moved "That they be passed forward to the Quarterly General Court."

The time now left was only ten days.

Bro. Tattershall could not agree with Bro. Browne on this point. If the subject was brought forward at the next Quarterly Court, time would be given for the full development of the plan. Applicants were now knocking at their doors, and the question should be decided as quickly as possible. It was a wise step to increase the capacity of the institution.

Bro. R. W. Little then read Bro. Raynham Stewart's notice of motion to the effect that in view of the large expenditure involved in Bro. Nunn's motion, a more desirable mode of proceeding under existing circumstances be adopted, by utilising the infirmary, and taking another house as an infirmary; and further, that the whole of the approved candidates be at once admitted. (Hear, hear.)

Bro. Joshua Nunn said that he would give way to Bro. Rucker, and

Bro. Rucker said he would offer his resolutions to Bro. Nunn, in order that the subject might be discussed.

Bro. Nunn thought that his and Bro. Rucker's ideas were identical.

Bro. Rucker's notices were then passed by the Committee and that brother, on the Committee deciding that it was necessary for him formally to move his notice for the Quarterly Court, accordingly did so.

One petition of a candidate was then read, but the child being unable to attend, through illness, it was deferred, and the Committee adjourned.

Bro. A. H. Tattershall seconded the motion.

Bro. H. Browne asked that the motions might be postponed to a later Court, thinking that if not, it might be doing the matter rather hastily. It would only be to wait another three months, a delay which would be fully justified by the importance of the subject, which required much ventilation before being decided upon.

Obituary.

BRO. JOHN FREEMAN.

Freemasonry in Yorkshire and in the town of Huddersfield has suffered a great loss in the death of Bro. John Freeman, solicitor, late of the Lodge of Harmony in that town. Our lamented brother was born 8th March, 1811, died September 22nd, 1875, and was buried amid many regrets and a large assemblage of townsmen and brother Masons, at Holy Trinity Church, on the 25th. We had hoped to be favoured with the particulars of his Masonic career in time for publication, but we shall probably recur to the subject in our next. We have thought it well to express the sense which we know is entertained of his loss to the Craft by our brethren in Huddersfield and Yorkshire.

The Freemason,

SATURDAY, OCT. 2, 1875.

OUR ROYAL GRAND MASTER'S VISIT TO INDIA.

Much interest is felt in the Craft about the movements of our Royal and Illustrious Brother, and so we give the following particulars of his movements, which we understand are correct:— "According to present arrangements, His Royal Highness will leave London on the 12th of October, via Dover and Calais, for Paris, where he will arrive on the 13th. He will leave that city on the same day, and travel by rail to Venice, where he will arrive on the 16th. He will then embark on board his yacht, the "Osborne," which will convey him on board the "Serapis." This vessel, owing to her draught, will anchor at a distance of about seven miles from that city. It is probable that the "Serapis" will proceed thence to Corfu, but on her doing so or not depends whether the Prince will remain two days or thirty-six hours only at Athens, where he will pay a visit to his brother-in-law, King George of Greece. Leaving Athens, the vessel will make her way to Port Said, and on arriving at Ismailia His Royal Highness will disembark and visit Cairo and other places in the neighbourhood, the "Serapis" going on to Suez, her arrival at which port will be telegraphed to the Royal party, who will then hasten on by rail to rejoin her. Aden will be the last place of call, and, after a few hours' stay the "Serapis" will go on to Bombay, where she is due on the 8th of November. The Prince will remain about eight or nine days in the Bombay Presidency, at the end of which time he will embark on board the "Serapis" for Calicut, where he will land and pay a visit to Mysore. Thence he will proceed by water to Tuticorin, on leaving which place the "Serapis" will make direct for Colombo, where she will stay ten days. She will next go on to Trincomalee, the chief naval port of Ceylon, to coal, and will then proceed to Calcutta, where the Prince is due a day or two before Christmas. His Royal Highness will then visit Delhi, Lucknow, and other places of interest, and will gradually work his way back to Bombay, where he is expected on the 17th of March. He will at once embark in the "Serapis," and return by the same route as that taken on the outward trip, the proposed voyage round the Cape having been given up. His Royal Highness will probably reach this country about the 7th or 8th of April. Canon Duckwork will be Chaplain in attendance on His Royal Highness during his Eastern visit. The following is understood to be the route which the Prince will pursue on landing in India:—Leave Aden for Bombay, Nov. 2; visit Bombay, Nov. 8; visit Beypoor, Nov. 23; Bangalore, Dec. 2; Madras, Dec. 6; Tuticorin, Dec. 8; Colombo, Dec. 11; Trincomalee, Dec. 17; Calcutta, Dec. 23; Barrackur, Jan. 4; Benares, Jan. 4; Lucknow, Jan. 6; Cawnpore, Jan. 10; Delhi, Jan. 11; Umritsur, Jan. 20; Lahore, Jan. 21; Jamoo, Jan. 24; Lahore, Jan. 27; Suharunpore, Jan. 28; Paneeput, Jan. 28; Agra, Jan. 29; Gwalior, Feb. 3; Agra, Feb. 5; Ajmere, Feb. 7; Jeypore, Feb. 11; Bareilly, Feb. 13; Lucknow, Feb. 29; Allahabad, Feb. 29; Jubbulpore, March 2; Kudwah, March 7; Indore, March 9; Kundwah, March 11; Ellora, March 12; Dowlutabad, March 14; Bombay, March 15; Poona, March 19; and Sattara, March 19. The "Serapis" left on Sunday, and the "Osborne" will shortly follow. The following description of the "Serapis" may interest some of our readers. The "Serapis" is now ready for sea, the Prince's apartments having been finished. The Royal furniture is all of unpolished English oak, and the sofas, chairs, tables, &c., are covered with brown morocco leather stamped with the Prince's arms and initials, the tables having a broad band of gold, the design being the rose, shamrock, and thistle, and the three feathers in each corner. The saloon is white, with pale blue and gold, and medallions of the Indian troop-ship's crest, the sides are ornamented by eight pier-glasses, the Brussels carpet is of Persian pattern, and the table cloths Indian. The windows are shaded by dark green silk blinds and lace curtains. The Prince has a double set of private apartments, on one side of the vessel for the outward, and on the other for the homeward voyage. Sixty guests can be accommodated at the principal dining table, but a smaller one for 24 persons will be generally used. The "Serapis" has been painted white, while round her runs a gold moulding, edged each side with a blue ribbon. Owing to the superior speed of the "Serapis" the Flying Squadron will meet her at Bombay instead of Aden. We are further told that their Royal Highnesses the Prince and Princess of Wales, with Princes Albert Victor and George, and Princesses Louise Victoria and Maud, attended by Miss Knollys, Lieutenant Colonel Teesdale, Mr. Francis Knollys, Mr. Holzmann, and the Rev. J. N. Dalton, arrived at Sandringham on Friday evening from London. Their Royal Highnesses will probably remain at Sandringham till the Prince's departure for India. We shall continue to keep the Craft informed of our Royal Grand Master's movements, as in his visit to India he goes accompanied by the "hearty good wishes" of our entire brotherhood.

THE "MONTH" AND FREEMASONRY.

The "Month and Catholic Review," as it terms itself, is a monthly periodical of some literary pretensions, belonging to the Roman Catholic communion. The number for September, besides some very able and interesting articles in themselves, contains one on Freemasonry, "communicated," as the editor takes pains to point out. It seems that the writer is an Anglican-Ritualist, that the article itself "has been refused insertion in more than one Protestant organ of influence," on account, as the editor naively adds, "we may fairly presume, of its candid witness about the tendency of Freemasonry." We confess that we feel some astonishment that our "confrere" did not see at once that some other reason might be alleged for the rejection of this high-spiced article. We fancy that the cause is not far to seek, namely, its worthlessness as a fair treatment of a remarkable subject, its obvious unreliability as a statement of facts, and, above all, its intense weakness of argument from first to last. We think also that if we were Roman Catholics we should prefer to fight under our own banners, and not adopt that very piebald one, under which some few of our modern ritualists are content to fight to-day. We believe, however, that as regards Freemasonry the "Catholic School," as it calls itself, in the Church of England is greatly divided, and we therefore henceforth shall not treat such utterances as the utterances of a party, but only of individuals. The present attack on Freemasonry is a very weak and incoherent one. Cribbing the idea from a Roman Catholic Abbé, the writer declares that Masonic signs and symbols are Gnostic, and that Freemasonry and Gnosticism have joined hands. Begging the writer's pardon, a greater piece of nonsense never was put forth; a more hopeless betrayal of ignorance of historical accuracy never was made. Freemasonry has about as much to do with the Gnostics as the writer of the article has to do with Druidism, or any other ism. It is simply a piece of Roman Catholic "chaff," which we wonder at a grave Anglican taking up, though, as Horace Walpole once wittily observed to some Roman Catholic friends who refused meat on a "jour maigre," "you eat nothing, but you swallow everything." So at this moment, some of our young Ritual-Catholic friends have a very capacious swallow for all that appertains to Romish attacks on Freemasonry. Though why we know not, and cannot for the life of us understand. Among other objections the writer makes is that Christianity is ignored, and that it is "un-Masonic" to use our Saviour's name. The fact is that many Chaplains do just the contrary, and there is nothing in our "formularies" to prevent or forbid the use of a Christian prayer. It is true that since 1813 the general rule has been to make our prayers Theistic, on the principle of the Lord's Prayer, and as best according with the universality of our Order. But this argument, it appears to us, though good, no doubt, for a Christian place of worship, is out of court in a Freemasons' lodge, and if the objector is consistent to his own principles he must object to the use of the Lord's Prayer altogether. It is, to our own mind, perfectly plain that the position of the Chaplain in Freemasonry is very easy and simple, and that he is perfectly consistent, and doing his duty, when he offers up a prayer in which all believers in God can join, alike for the promotion of a social brotherhood and the practice of humanitarian charity. The writer says Freemasons never use the New Testament in lodges. He is quite in error. In a good provincial lodge which we know well the 13th chapter of the 1st Epistle to the Corinthians is read regularly before business, with unanimous approval, both of Christian and Hebrew brethren. This writer, who signs "Joabert M.," need not be in any apprehension of Freemasons, though he says, page 101, "unless before the month come round I be burked at a railway station, or throttled in a crowd by one of the social brethren sworn to vengeance on his way home from a Grand Lodge dinner at Freemasons' Tavern." After this we may have some doubt of his "sanity," at any rate, we can have none of his utter incompetency to discuss a very deep question, though he threatens, we note, the poor readers of the "Month," with another paper on "Rites and Ceremonies, and the Masonic Traditions," if the editor is weak enough to give him the opportunity of displaying how little he knows of what he professes so pompously to explain to all. We have never read an article which gave us a poorer opinion of the intellectual calibre or historical accuracy of the writer, or one which showed us how prejudice and perversity can press into their arguments, when moved by the "rabies" of intolerance, or a degrading tendency to persecution, the most inane theories and the most preposterous illustrations. If Joabert M. appears any more in the "Month" we will not fail to keep our readers acquainted with his remarkable contributions, and to make them "au fait" of his happy discoveries.

ARCHÆOLOGICAL PROGRESS.

The history of the three grades is a very peculiar one, and a somewhat difficult one. Whether we commence with the A. and A. Rite, or any other of the Continental systems, we are struck at once with the great peculiarity that they all make the Craft Degrees the foundation of their after and elaborate system. This is a very striking point, per se, as it involves a paradox. The Craft Degrees, including the Royal Arch, with us are universal, the High Grades are limited, that is to say, while the Craft Grades make Theism the test, the High Grades make Christianity. We are now speaking of Freemasonry in Great Britain and the United States, we do not suppose that any such test really exists in France or on the Continent generally, where the High Grades are to be found, Sweden, perhaps, excepted. As, however, it does not concern us to explain this "seeming paradox," we will go on, having merely noted the point. The High Grades have not "antiquity's pride" on their "side," like the Craft Degrees. It is quite clear now that they are all emanations of the "Rite de Bouillon," or rather developments, or expansions of it. Probably, when Ramsay drew up his "Ancien Rite de Bouillon," he little realised what an extension his more modest ideas were ere long to receive. The great defect, in our mind, which is to be found in the High Grade system is its unhistorical character. Ramsay began with a distinct lapse from truth, historical truth, and, to speak honestly, moral truth, when he declared that the Knights Templar, brought back the Freemasonry of his day from the Crusades, and that that was his "Ancien Rite de Bouillon." From that one false step numerous other false steps have arisen "ex necessitate rei," and fictitious claims, and a spurious parentage have been adopted by many of them. The Rose Croix have nothing to do, for instance, with the "Fratres Rosæ Crucis," and all the other grades of the Ancient and Accepted Rite have been but the fancy creations of some fertile imagination, some without even the slightest appearance of connection or chronology, and we must add, in our humble opinion, common sense. But in saying this we do not wish to be misunderstood. We pass no opinion on the High Grades, in their practical development; we are only treating the subject technically and historically. We conceive that if their members find good in them they are the best judges of the matter, and we readily concede to them the same liberty of opinion and judgment we claim for ourselves. But historically they are all 18th century handiwork, and though some may be earlier and some a little later, we cannot concede to any an earlier formation than 1730. The same remark applies to many such Orders as the Red Cross of Constantine, which, however interesting in itself, cannot historically go back beyond the last century, and is the speculative adaptation of no doubt a once existing Order of Constantinian chivalry. The Mark Degree has taken great proportions latterly, and has now a Grand Lodge and Provincial Grand Lodges of its own, and yet we cannot, we fear, on the stern principles of true historical criticism and archæological truth, credit it with any antiquity beyond the middle of the last century, if even so early. It is probably the general idea that it embodies in its system the old custom of operative marks on stones. But that, we fear, is an illusion, as its connexion with operative marks is very hazy, and utterly unchronological. At least, it certainly has no reference to the mediæval system, and the original Jewish system seems to have been purely alphabetical. We fancy that the real solution of the word "Mark" is to be found in something very different. A suggestion has been made that the earlier Mark lodges, or whatever they were called, such as "Ark, Mark, and Link," &c., were dedicated to "St. Mark," about 1770 or 1780, and hence the name "Mark." Just as Craft-Masonry was called Johannite, so this was called Mark. If any warrants now exist which contain the name of "St. Mark" it would settle the question, and we shall be happy to publish any communication on the subject, within due limits, and written for archæological purposes. All we have written to-day has been penned in the interests of truth. We have no interests to serve, no party to uphold, but we think that "truth is truth" after all, and that when we are digging about the foundations of the good old building of Freemasonry, in order to see that all is sound and safe, we should be careful, if the Masonry seems a little loose or out of line, to underpin it with good ashlar work, and to strengthen it with the lasting cement of historical reality, certainty, and accuracy.

PLAGIARISM.

Plagiarism is an offence not uncommon by any means in the past history and present condition of literature. It is not a novel complaint on the part of many writers, some so-so, some mediocre, and some very common-place indeed. As a general rule your original thinker does not complain of plagiarists or plagiarism. For all such know full well that "Geist" or intellect finds, like water, its own level, in the struggles of the press, in the controversies of the hour, in the progress of literary labour, and care very little whether others appropriate the happy idea, or the eloquent passage, contented that somehow their words are conveyed to many readers at home and abroad. But your second-rate and third-rate "litterateur" is mostly very impressive about "plagiarism." With some everything, as the printers say, is "copy." The name of an article, the turn of a sentence, the view of matters common to a good many persons, even a mistake in a translation corrected, is plagiarism, because, forsooth, he has honoured the world with writing something about the same subject. It is not, indeed, exactly the same in any one point, but it is something like. In our opinion, there cannot be in our literary struggles and discussions any impertinence more idle, or any pretension more ridiculous. And both deserve to be noted and exposed. For the great field of literature is open, happily, to us all. There is no privileged class in authorship or in the press. Like the "Free Lances" of old, we ask for a "fair field and no favour," and we care neither for the criticism of the incompetent nor the outcry of the unreasonable. What is the real state of the case? Some "Arch mediocrity," as Mr. Disraeli once said somewhere of somebody, complains of plagiarism. What is this dire and vile offence? The A.M. has, it seems, put forth an article on some subject, elevated or common-place, dull or diluted, it matters not to our purpose now. Another writer, who has not read his eloquent production, has also sent out in due course an article on a somewhat similar subject. Straightway A.M. sends up a loud and impassioned cry of plagiarism. There is nothing really in common between the two articles, no similarity of treatment or of diction. Indeed, the subjects may be entirely different, but then, oh, ye Gods! there is plagiarism in the name. One writer has said "How much," the other has said "Thus much." You see at once the plagiarism—both have the word "much." Such a complaint is like the facetious Talley, who told Mr. Justice Lindley a few days ago that, as both their names ended in "ley"—

"As the end of your name is the same as mine. In the Courts of Equity your Honour will shine." His Honour, however, did not see it, and sent this rhyming representative of an "uncurrent six and eightpence" into Newgate for twelve months. Neither do we see, neither can we

for the life of us see, that such childish and querulous complaints, which we often note in contemporary literature, whether profane or Masonic, can in any way justly substantiate the charge of "plagiarism." And what is the more amusing in nine cases out of ten, those who make such complaints against their contemporaries are the boldest and most unhesitating of plagiarists themselves. They coolly appropriate a portion or the whole of your original contributions, without any acknowledgments; they write after you—a very common trick. That is to say, you write an article say, "on a good appetite," this week, a fortnight afterwards you will see a feeble parody of what was both vigorous, truthful, and effective, at least, you flatter yourself so. Or perhaps you notice that an article of yours has been travestied, a little altered here, a little changed there, a few figures struck out, a few figures put in, and, voila, an original article. Yet, who is the plagiarist? We therefore protest to-day against these "Mawworms" of the press, who are always indulging in querulous complaints of plagiarism, and all the while are the greatest of literary pilferers. Some one has said, that there is nothing in these days like "cheek," in literature as in everything else, and no doubt there is some truth in the statement, as we have seen a good deal of that latter commodity lately. But we belong to an earlier school of manners and morals, and we prefer the good old-fashioned notions of "fair play" and "running straight" in all matters literary, domestic, and personal. It is probable that plagiarists and plagiarism will long abound among us while readers are many and originality is limited. But yet, after all, plagiarism does not much harm, it is good for trade; and those of us who think over what we write, and write moreover what we really think, we can afford on every principle of philanthropy and Freemasonry to be generous, and genial, and tolerant towards many a struggling confrère who kindly cribs our ideas, and carefully "hashes up" our articles.

THE ILLUSIONS OF LIFE.

Some one has said that life is full of illusions, and so it is. We start often on our earthly career believing in a great deal, which calm experience or customary cares soon teach us is an illusion after all. Life is before us in its day dreams, youth is strong and honest in its own convictions, the sky is blue above us, the breezes are pleasant around us, and all seems to foreshadow for us a very prosperous voyage. Our song seems to be "Vogue ma nacelle." But in a little time the sky becomes overcast, the clouds lower, the storm bursts, and we feel that life, like the great sea, is deceitful and dangerous, and that it too has reefs, and breakers, and a lee shore for us poor tempest-tossed mariners. And so little by little our illusions vanish. The fairy castle has utterly disappeared, never to return, its gay "pleasance" has passed out of sight, there is nothing before us but the barren heath, or the perilous morass. Disenchanted, as the French say "disillusionnés," we discern clearly the great difference between anticipation and reality, between fiction and fact, between imagination and truth. It is sad, we feel and confess, for us all often thus to feel and to reach that home, and that mile stone on our journey, where, as some one has well said,

When rising from the turf where youth reposed,
We find but deserts in the far sought shore;
When the huge book of fairy land lies closed,
And those strong brazen clasps will yield no more.

And yet perhaps such a "reveille," is good for us all alike. It certainly must be good for us if it makes us realize the true lesson as well as the great end of all human existence, if it causes us to feel that despite our own disappointments and faded dreams, our life, human life, is a most real thing, if we learn to say with the poet, "life is real, life is earnest, and the grave is not its goal," and that it has ever its high mission, its solemn calls, its deep responsibilities for us all alike. Happy for us if when we rise to the verity of this wondrous life of ours, we have accepted the lesson thus imparted to us, in all humility of mind, and cheerfulness of submission, if we do not take a cynical, a desponding, a distorted, a morbid view of things in general and in particular. Like soldiers in a fray, let us hope rather that we may resolve to fight on bravely to the end, without one thought of surrender, without one apprehension of defeat. And after all, though the illusions have left us one by one, never to return, they were very pleasant while they lasted. To believe firmly in the fidelity of a friend, to bask in the sunshine of affection, to cheer ourselves amid the concerns of each returning day with the warmth of earthly heart companionship, to find a charm and a solace amid weariness and adversity in the hallowed circle of domestic happiness; all these are very pleasant conditions of life, and as elevating as pleasant. If we fondly hope that they will last our time, that they will accompany us while we linger here on the plain, the illusion is after all not hurtful or unnatural. And if they do leave us, if we find that the weakness and taint of earth have marred all this world's associations, and all human fellowship, if we let go each dear illusion with a sigh, nay, a tear, let us be content with what we have enjoyed, let us not look for perfection here, let us believe that on all of this fair earth of ours, high or low, grave or gay, beautiful, graceful, loving, tender, true, the affections of the heart, and the fascinations of the intellect, there is graven as with an adamant pen, the mournful words, weakness, imperfection, decay, destruction. Now we do not wish to drift into a sermonette, and so we stop here to-day, or, as our friend Robinson says, "pull up." Freemasonry, like life, has also many illusions, but happily our true Masonic philosophy comes in to induce us one and all to regard them with equanimity, and to endure them with cheerfulness. "All is not gold that glitters" is true of Freemasonry as of any other earthly institution and thing. Freemasonry is after all only like ourselves, mortal. Its practice does not always square with its precepts, its outward progress with its professions, its exoteric acts with its esoteric system. We are sometimes greatly disappointed when we find that with all our own high views of it, our lofty notions of its work or influence, that it is still marked, more or less, with most of the imperfections of earth. We preach, for instance, habitually, brotherly love, alas! how few of us all really practise it! We avow ourselves "brethren one of another," alas! how unbrotherly we can be, and often shew ourselves to be when the occasion serves. We proclaim beneficence and concern for others one of the great aims of our Order, alas! how purely material are our normal masonic life and work for the most part. Still, let us not be disappointed, or disheartened, or complain over much. Freemasonry is, nevertheless, a very great, a very useful, a very benevolent Order, making allowance for all its shortcomings, and though perhaps we may regret that what some may term our high-pitched notions are illusory, yet we will not be too exacting, we should not be too sentimental. We accept to-day, as we did years ago, our Masonic teaching and Order in the full faithfulness of loving children, believing that it has a great future yet before it, of usefulness, benevolence, and good for man. So mote it be!

OLD MASONIC APRON.

We have to call attention to an old and very curious Masonic apron, which originally belonged to a member of the Lion and Lamb Lodge, and can now be seen at our publisher's show rooms, 1, 2, and 3, Little Britain. We understand that our Rev. Bro. J. Hordern Jukes, its possessor, intends kindly to present it to the Lion and Lamb Lodge, through Bro. Kenning.

BRO. BUCHAN AND HIS CONSTANT QUESTIONINGS.

To the Editor of the Freemason.

Dear Sir and Brother,—
I am very sorry to find, from the style of his remarks at page 423, that I appear to have offended my esteemed friend Bro. Hughan. There is not one in all the circle of my Masonic acquaintances whom I esteem more highly, consequently I hope that if he has taken offence at any remark of mine he will believe me when I state that it was not my intention to give offence, and especially not to him. In fact, my last remark in connection with his name was really intended as a compliment to him.

Bro. Hughan objects to my "constant questionings," and to my "pegging away at the subject," but I am not aware that I have really been asking so very many questions of late (what is "Mulum in Parvo; or Masonic Notes and Queries," for, unless for questions?), and as to the "pegging away," that is often a very laudable as well as serviceable way of attaining one's object. It was by "pegging away" at it, so folks say, that Grant captured Richmond, so if by "pegging away" I can manage to capture or upset the "Guild Theory" Bro. Hughan must excuse me.

Bro. Hughan wishes to engage me in a regular battle upon the "origin of Freemasonry," but as I am "over head and ears" in other matters at present, he must excuse me postponing that in the meantime. There is another reason also, viz., this:—Bro. Hughan stated a few weeks ago that he accepted the "Guild Theory" of "A Masonic Student" as the true theory of the origin of Freemasonry. It so happens, however, that so far as the hitherto published statements of these two distinguished brothers are concerned, they are decidedly opposed to each other upon several very important points; consequently, before entering into any regular battle on the subject, I consider that I and all other readers of the "Freemason" are entitled to receive an explanation as to this, and to ask Bro. Hughan if his ideas regarding the history of our Freemasonry, and its rise and progress, have undergone any important change within the past few months?

"A Masonic Student" has repeatedly stated that he considers our three degrees existed long before A.D. 1717. Bro. Hughan, again, has repeatedly denied that; now, with such an important difference existing between them I must say that I cannot see how Bro. Hughan can consistently support the "Guild Theory" of "A Masonic Student." If Bro. Hughan has a "Guild Theory" of his own I would beg of him to explain it, as by doing so all difference between him and me might possibly cease.

Yours fraternally, W. P. BUCHAN.

GRAND MASTERS OF ENGLISH FREEMASONS.

To the Editor of the Freemason.

Dear Sir and Brother,—

In answer to Bro. T. W. Whitley, I would beg to say that, so far as historical evidence is concerned, there has not as yet been produced any substantial evidence whatever to show that the English Freemasons ever had any "Grand Master" before A.D. 1717. The list from A.D. 59 to A.D. 1698, inclusive, is purely imaginary. Until within the last few years the modus operandi of Masonic "historians"—save the mark—was to draw upon their brains for fancies instead of consulting Masonic records for facts.

I am, yours fraternally, W. P. BUCHAN.
Glasgow, Sept. 25th, 1875.

To the Editor of the Freemason.

Dear Sir and Brother,—

In reply to the letter from Bro. Whitley, I think the list of Grand Masters which appeared in the "Builder" newspaper in 1844 must have been taken from Dr. Anderson's Book of Constitutions, published in 1738, for in it the names given can easily be traced; in this book there is an earlier mention of a Grand Master than that given first on the list, namely that of St. Alban, who died A.D. 303. From page 57 I have taken the following passage:—

"St Alban loved Masons well, and cherished them much, and he made their pay right good, viz., two shillings per week and threepence to their cheer, whereas before that time through all the land a Mason had but a penny a day and his meat, until St. Alban amended it. He also obtained of the king a charter for the Freemasons for to hold a general council, and gave it the name of assembly, and was therat himself as Grand Master, and helped to make Masons, and gave them good charges."

I am, dear Sir and Brother, Yours faithfully and fraternally,
THE SECRETARY OF No. 38.

GRESHAM LODGE, No. 869.

To the Editor of the Freemason.

Dear Sir and Brother,—

I have much pleasure in informing you that the Gresham Lodge, 869, formerly meeting at the Four Swans, Waltham Cross, will for the future hold their meetings in the Banqueting Hall of Cheshunt Great House, Cheshunt Park, one of the palaces of Cardinal Wolsey, Bro. Rev. C. Erskine, M.A., Chaplain, and Prov. Grand Chaplain of Hert's, having kindly given the brethren the free use of that ancient historical place for that purpose.

I may here remark that for a long time past there has been a desire amongst the brethren to remove the lodge, but they have not been able to find the necessary accommodation in any tavern in the neighbourhood, when it occurred to me, "knowing the place well from living in the neighbourhood," to ask Bro. Mayo if he would have any objection in allowing the use of the Hall of Cheshunt Great House for the purposes of the lodge. He at once consented, and informed the brethren that such a change he thought would materially enhance the respectability of the lodge, and that he knew of several of the resident gentry who would like to become members of our ancient fraternity, but objected to attend a tavern for that purpose. We have now received the consent of the R.W. Prov. Grand Master to the removal, and will shortly hold an emergency meeting to receive several of the proposed initiates.

Our regular meetings will be, as heretofore, the second

Saturday in the months of May, June, July, August, and September, and I can assure you a visit will gratify and amply repay you for the trouble of a journey to visit the lodge. The appointments and associations of the place, hung round as it is with a number of very ancient portraits, some armour, and a variety of curiosities, cannot fail to impress one, and lend an additional charm to our ancient ceremonies; and, congratulating ourselves on our good fortune, in obtaining such good quarters for our own lodge, I feel very seriously for the honour of our Craft, unless measures are promptly taken to check lodges being held at second, and even third rate public houses, where there is no accommodation for holding a lodge with anything like decency. Gentlemen of good social position are naturally averse to having to force their way through a public bar, surrounded by a number of persons, to get to the lodge room, and then only to find an inefficient retiring room before entering the lodge. I know of several warrants granted lately where there has scarcely been sufficient room and convenience for the consecration ceremony, and at the end of the first or second year the landlord of the house has found it so inconvenient to him, and interfere so much with his ordinary business, or the brethren for the want of room, have been obliged to seek other accommodation, and then find their warrants endorsed for that neighbourhood only, where it is almost impossible for them to continue their meetings. Such a state of things must sooner or later bring our Order into contempt; could you not call attention to the growing evil?

There may perhaps be some able member of Grand Lodge, who, if it were represented to him, would frame a motion, that it be required of some Grand Officer to visit the place at which it is proposed to hold a new lodge, and report to the Board of General Purposes, whether the accommodation is such as is consistent with our requirements, before the petition is allowed to be presented to the M.W. Grand Master. Such a course I feel assured would check the growth of public house lodges, and save our Order from reproach.

Apologizing for thus troubling you, I am, dear Sir and Brother, yours fraternally,

WALTER E. GOMPERTZ, P.M. and Sec. 869,

MASONS AT SIGHT.

To the Editor of the Freemason.

Dear Sir and Brother,—

A very wrong impression seems to prevail as to the power of the M.W.G.M. to "make Masons at sight." One brother, a high dignitary in the Province of East Lancashire, has the idea that the G.M. can invite a "profane" into a room, and without any assistance or ceremony simply create him a Mason in the three degrees.

I have always held the opinion that this power only consists in the G.M., if presiding in a Craft Lodge, being able to dispense with any proposition, or ballot, and permitting the candidate to be at once initiated with the usual ceremonies. I do not think it is within the power of the M.W.G.M. to give a dispensation to admit a candidate to two or more degrees on one night. At least, it is so in England. Would that it were so in Scotland. I have read in to-day's "Freemason," an account of the meeting of St. John's Lodge, 34, Glasgow. I find that two gentlemen received the whole of the three degrees in one night, and this, also, the night on which they were proposed and ballotted for.

Three Entered Apprentices were passed and raised at the same time.

In another lodge reported in the same number, St. Vincent 553, 76 candidates were admitted to the Order in one year, at an initiation fee of two guineas each, and nearly all received the three degrees on the same night they were proposed. This certainly is making "Masons at sight." Will you kindly give the Craft the benefit of your large experience.

I am, yours fraternally, AGSI.

FREEMASONRY AND THE RITUALISTS.

To the Editor of the Freemason.

Dear Sir,—

I observe in the "Freemason" that there is a not unnatural feeling of annoyance among Masons at the attitude assumed towards the Craft by various religious bodies. Romanists, Presbyterians, Baptists have more or less officially inveighed against Masonry, and to them you add the "sect everywhere spoken against" of the so-called Ritualists.

I, Sir, should probably be numbered amongst them by those that allow themselves to use such nicknames, though I neither desire nor adopt any name but that of a Catholic. Will you allow me, therefore, utterly to disclaim on behalf of "Ritualists," as a school of thought, any such antagonism to Masonry as you suppose. Your gravamen against Rome is that she has argued from particulars to universals, and condemned all Masonry for the faults of some of the lodges of some of its territorial divisions. Have you not unawares fallen into the same error when you ascribe to a party the views advanced by one alone out of several papers which would be called "Ritualistic?"

I am not a Mason, though the son of one and the brother of another; my poverty and not my will consents to my remaining outside a body which I consider so much entitled to the respect of all who have the cause of philanthropy and brotherhood at heart; but I would say that I agree with every word of the able "Defence of Freemasonry" published at your office. I have read this twice with much attention, and am convinced that the majority of "Ritualists" would adopt its views.

I was present recently at a large meeting of "Ritualistic" clergy, at which the subject of the attitude of the Church towards Freemasonry was (inter alia) exhaustively discussed. Various priests who were Masons made admirable speeches in its favour, while I and other non-Masons took mainly the lines of argument adopted in the above-mentioned "Defence." I, of course, allow that ignorance or prejudice might and does cause some of us to be adverse to the Craft—this would be the case in any body of men—but that "Ritualists" as a body are thus minded I cannot for a moment admit.

The motion I then brought forward in this meeting, which was seconded and supported by priests who were Masons, will best explain my views.

"That it is the duty of Catholics with regard to Freemasonry—

"1. Carefully to distinguish between Anglo-Saxon and Continental Freemasonry, and thereby to avoid the error of indiscriminately condemning the Society for the un-Masonic teaching of some of the lodges or brethren of a few of its territorial divisions.

"2. Not to dissuade laymen from joining Anglo-Saxon lodges, against which no charge has been proved."

The word "laymen" is used in the second clause to meet the objection that hardworking priests can frequently not afford the expenditure of time or money that an intelligent and enthusiastic support of Masonry must of necessity entail.

Were your cause less admirable than it is, a Catholic above all others would still say, Homo sum, et nihil humanum a me alienum puto; being what it is, the Church must bid, at least to all Anglo-Saxon lodges, God speed, and I trust it may be generally seen that her wisest line of action is by sympathy, at least, to strengthen the hands of all lodges not infected with the Continental leaven.

MARK MASTERS' LODGES.

To the Editor of the Freemason.

Dear Sir and Brother,—

What legally constitutes a Mark Master's Lodge, to work on that degree of Masonry in Scotland? We know that the Grand Lodge and Supreme Chapter have agreed that the Mark degrees can be given by opening a Mark Lodge under St. John's Masonry, but which of the two powers that be has the right, or will grant the charter, and afterwards grant diploma to the brother elevated to that degree? Without such, Mark degrees given are a mere nothing, as neither charter nor diploma has been used to confirm the brother's claim to having taken the degree, and before he can be exalted to the Royal Arch Degree it becomes our duty to bind the brother to recognise the Mark under the charter of the Supreme Grand Royal Arch Chapter of Scotland. Now, not only do Royal Arch companions recognise the Mark Degree being given in a St. John's Lodge, but First Principals who had taken the Mark under the Royal Arch Chapter do even work the degrees themselves in such a way without having any charter, or granting any one a diploma, the lodge merely chartering three shillings or so, as it happens. As I have all along thought that it was out of my place to countenance the working of the Mark Degree, unless under a charter, and getting diplomas for every brother taking the degree, I appeal to the brethren to assist me in the undertaking.

The smallest item will in this case be gratefully received by me.

"FOR SONS OF GENTLEMEN ONLY."

To the Editor of the Freemason.

Dear Sir and Brother,—

Under this heading there are two advertisements in your issue of Sept. 25th, by schoolmasters for pupils.

Will they, or either of them, kindly be a little more explicit, and inform me who they consider gentlemen capable of obtaining for their sons the privileges set forth in the said advertisements.

Yours fraternally,

MASONIC JEWELS.

To the Editor of the Freemason.

Dear Sir and Brother,—

I am greatly surprised at finding in an editorial reply to "Deacon," that you imply a right for a M.M. to wear a five-pointed star, and a W.M. to wear the square and compasses, in Craft or Grand Lodge. This is quite at variance with anything that I have been taught or can gather from the Book of Constitutions. Neither the five-pointed star or square and compasses as jewels are recognised in the Book of Constitutions, except as those authorised and directed to be worn by the Deputy Grand Master, the Past Deputy Grand Master, and the Provincial Grand Master; indeed, any brother wearing the square and compasses, gilt, is actually taking upon himself the jewel belonging to no one but a Past Deputy Grand Master. In conclusion, I think if the Grand Lodge deem it necessary to issue a mandate against wearing jewels commemorative of the installation of our M.W.G.M., its officers would certainly decline to admit brethren to the Grand Lodge sporting such decorations as the five-pointed star or square and compasses (the latter except when worn by a Past D.G.M.)

I am, yours fraternally,

P.G.S.B. England.

[The letters W.M. were a misprint for G.M. With deference to our brother, the five-pointed star is clearly legal by the Book of Constitutions, and no W.M. could lawfully object to it.—Ed.]

To the Editor of the Freemason.

Dear Sir and Brother,—

In your answer to "Deacon," you say that "any jewel which has an emblem of the three degrees, or R.A., is admissible in a lodge. Is not the Mark M.M. jewel admissible in the English Lodge?"

You also state that "the square and compasses belong to the W.M. alone. Qy. As jewel, or as ruler of the lodge?"

By Book of Constitutions, I find that the Past Deputy G. Master is the one that legally wears the compasses and square, and that the W.M., only a square as jewels.

A QUOTATION.

To the Editor of the Freemason.

Dear Sir and Brother,—

In answer to the letter of "R.W.O." in your issue of the 25th inst., permit me to say that the quotation contained in the article on Bro. Major Burgess is ridiculously incorrect, and had the writer thought for a moment he would have noticed the impossibility of a man being convinced against his will. The quotation should be

"He that compels against his will

Is of his own opinion still."

And may be found in Butler's "Hudibras," part III., canto III. and line 547.

Editors and leader writers, of all men, should be careful in matters of this kind. They are the public educators and the circulators of the genius and intelligence of others, and should be above the suspicion of being, in the words of Byron, "With just enough of learning to misquote."

Yours fraternally,

WM. BERNARD.

OUR ROYAL GRAND MASTER AT SHEFFIELD.

In our issue of August 21st we gave a copy of an address from the Freemasons of Sheffield to H.R.H. the Prince of Wales, to which the following gracious acknowledgement has been received:—

"Marlborough House, Pall Mall, S.W.,

September 23rd, 1875.

"Dear Sirs,—

"Sir W. Knollys has desired me to send you the enclosed reply to the address which the Freemasons of Sheffield presented to the Prince of Wales on the occasion of his visit there.

"Sir William wishes me at the same time to express his great regret at the accidental delay that has taken place in answering this address, and to explain that in the multiplicity of business which he had to get through during the visit he had been under the impression that a reply had been already transmitted.

"Yours faithfully,

"FRANCIS KNOLLYS.

"To the Masters, Past Masters, Wardens, and Brethren of the Britannia, No. 139, Royal Brunswick, No. 296, and Wentworth, No. 1239, Lodges of Free and Accepted Masons.

"Gentlemen,—

"I am desired by the Prince of Wales to convey to you, on the part of himself and the Princess of Wales, the sentiments of satisfaction with which they have received your Address.

"Their Royal Highnesses thank you most cordially for your expressions of attachment towards themselves, and of loyalty to the throne and constitution of this country.

"Their visit to Sheffield has been one of unmixed gratification. Their reception by its inhabitants, and the wonderful products and effects of the industry of its working class which they witnessed, will ever be remembered by their Royal Highnesses and indelibly impressed on their minds.

"The Prince especially thanks you on his own part for your congratulations on his installation as Grand Master of Freemasonry in England. It is a source of great pride to him to occupy the position so long held by his illustrious relatives the late Dukes of Kent and Sussex, and His Royal Highness desires you to be assured that the interests of the Craft and the principles they profess will be at all times objects of his ambition to promote.

"I have the honour to be, Gentlemen, your most obedient servant,

METROPOLITAN.

FAITH LODGE (No. 141).—A strong meeting of this important City lodge took place at Anderson's Hotel, Fleet-street, on Tuesday, the 28th ult., being the first gathering since the vacation. The lodge was opened by Bro. Kennit, W.M., assisted by Bros. Hopwood, P.M., W.M. elect of 1512, acting S.W.; Davis, J.W.; Mallett, S.D.; Fox, J.D.; Dairy, I.G.; Carter, P.M., Treas.; Themans, I.P.M.; Stuart, P.M., P.Z., &c., Sec.; Davis, D.C.; Byc, W.S. Among the visitors present were Bros. Holden, P.M., Prov. Grand Chaplain of Middlesex; Wilkins, W.M. 73; Thompson, 188; Lambert, 1138; Dickson, 1178; Phillips, 1424. The minutes of the previous meeting having been read and confirmed, the W.M. raised Bro. Field to the degree of M.M. most impressively, and initiated Mr. Martin into the mysteries of the Craft. According to custom the bye-laws of the lodge were then read, and the brethren proceeded to elect a W.M. for the ensuing year. The W.M., who was assisted by P.M.'s Taylor and Themans, investigated the result of the ballot, and declared the election to have fallen on the Senior Warden, Bro. Waygood. The other members who received votes were the W.M., Past Master Cobham, and the Junior Warden. Bro. Carter, P.M., was unanimously re-elected Treasurer, and Bro. Longstaffe re-appointed Tyler. Bros. Byc, Walls, Hewlett, Wilson, and Holland were appointed to audit the accounts on the 11th of October next. The Benevolent Fund Committee of the lodge having been appointed, and a Past Master's jewel voted to Bro. Kennit, the lodge was closed in ancient form, and the brethren adjourned to the banqueting hall, which, during the recess, has been most chastely and elegantly decorated and re-furnished. Upon the removal of the cloth, the W.M. gave "The Queen and the Craft," "H.R.H. the Prince of Wales, G.M.," and the usual Craft toasts, which were warmly received. In speaking of the G.M., the W.M. alluded to the approaching departure of H.R.H. for India, and hoped that his visit would be productive of great good, morally, socially, and commercially, to the interests of the inhabitants of that great empire. Bro. Themans, I.P.M., proposed "The Health of the W.M.," and congratulated him upon the manner in which he had carried out the duties of his position. He hoped that he would be many years spared to hold the important rank of P.M. of the Lodge Faith. The W.M. made a brief reply, in which he said he had striven to perform the responsibilities of the Master's chair to the best of his ability, and if he had succeeded in pleasing the brethren, and he believed he had done so, he felt himself amply repaid. The Initiate, Bro. Martin, having been toasted, made a neat and "apropos" reply, "The Health of the Past Masters" followed, and was responded to by Bros. Themans and Stuart. The W.M., in giving "The Visitors," congratulated the lodge upon the goodly and distinguished number of visiting brethren present that evening, and hoped that their visit to the Faith had been fraught with pleasure. This toast having been duly and heartily honoured, was responded to by Bros. Holden, Dickson, and others. The first-named gave two excellent readings, "The Level and the Square," and the ever memorable "Charge of the Light Brigade." Bros. Bird, Martin and Walls also entertained the lodge instrumentally, dramatically, and vocally between the toasts. Bro. Longstaffe, the Tyler, having discharged his duty, the brethren shortly afterwards separated.

IVY LODGE (No. 1441).—The first regular meeting of the winter session of this young and rapidly rising lodge was held on Tuesday, the 21st September, at the Windsor Castle Hotel, Southwark, under the presidency of the W.M., Bro. George Mattock, supported by the following officers:—Bros. Charles Smith, I.P.M.; Cattle, S.W.; Poupard, J.W.; Jolly, Sec.; Cornhillson, S.D.; D. H. Ashford, acting J.D. (Bro. Ashwell, the J.D., being unavoidably absent); Knight Smith, I.G.; Fox, Tyler. The lodge was opened in the First Degree by the W.M., when the minutes of the last regular lodge meeting in March last and two emergency meetings were read and confirmed. The lodge having opened in the Second Degree, Bros.

Gloag, Partington, and J. Vernon being candidates to be raised to the degree of Master Masons, they were severally examined, &c., by the W.M., and having retired, the lodge opened in the Third Degree, Bro. Knight Smith undertaking the music, to enable him to do which Bro. J. R. Ashford relieved him of the duties of I.G., and on the re-admission of Bros. Gloag, Partington, and Vernon, they were raised to the Sublime Degree of Master Masons in a most impressive manner. The lodge resumed to the First Degree, when Bros. Goodman and Matthews were examined as to their proficiency for passing. Bro. Goodman proving himself in a manner that was highly creditable to him, they were duly entrusted and retired. The lodge having opened in the Second Degree during their temporary absence, on their re-admission, were regularly Crafted. This ended the ceremonies, as the gentleman for initiation could not attend, owing to domestic affliction, the ceremonies having been worked by the W.M. in a most able and efficient manner. The lodge having again resumed to the First Degree, notice of motion was given and received for the removal of the lodge, which will be discussed at the next lodge meeting. Business being ended, the lodge was closed according to ancient form with solemn prayer. The brethren then adjourned for refreshment, which was served by Bro. Plock with his usual care and excellence. The Masonic toasts succeeded, after which the harmony of the evening was enlivened by some capital singing by Bros. Cattle, Knight Smith, and Skegg. Bro. Cattle, who is possessed of a magnificent voice, sang the "Will of the Wisp" in fine style. The Tyler's toast brought the evening's proceedings to a close, and the brethren separated.

ROYAL STANDARD LODGE (No. 1298).—An emergency meeting of this lodge was held on Tuesday evening, at the Wellington Club, Wellington-street, Islington. Bro. J. F. Wilson, W.M., presided. There were also present: Bros. Wright, S.W.; Dickinson, J.W.; Geo. S. Bigley, Sec.; W. H. Cohen, S.D.; H. W. Gladwell, J.D.; A. L. P. Stevens, D.C.; J. F. Walford, Org.; L. Buderns, I.G.; Geo. Allison, Steward; F. Blay, Steward; H. Ballantyne, P.M.; Walter John Woodman, P.M.; about sixteen lay members, and half-a-dozen visitors. Two gentlemen were initiated, Messrs. William Samuel Brooks and Thomas Stephen Lidbury. This was the first evening of the lodge meeting at the Wellington Club, and the whole of the furniture had been repaired and decorated in preparation for the event. The lodge therefore presented a very attractive appearance, and the room being a fine, large, commodious one, the brethren experienced great comfort. The premises appeared to be particularly suitable for the holding of a lodge, and the apartments devoted to the purpose had the great advantage of strict privacy. At the conclusion of the ceremony the brethren expressed themselves much pleased with their new habitation and the arrangements which were made to accommodate them, and the lodge having been formally closed, a nice repast was provided for them by the caterer of the club, over which Bro. Wilson presided. The customary toasts were duly honoured at the termination of the supper. The W.M., in proposing "The Health of the M.W.G.M., the Prince of Wales," said that H.R.H. was about to visit that miniature dominion of ours, the Empire of India, and he was sure there was no body of men in this or that country could wish him more substantial fruit of his journey than the brother Masons of His Royal Highness. They all wished him the enjoyment of the blessing of good health throughout his trip. They also wished him a prosperous and pleasant voyage. "The Health of the Earl of Carnarvon, Pro Grand Master," &c., was then given, and the W.M. proposed "The Initiates." Masons were always pleased to add to their numbers. As the Order was a good one, it conferred benefits upon all, and he hoped, as he doubted not, that the newly-initiated brethren might become an honour to the Order into which they had been admitted. The toast having been drunk, was followed by the E.A. song, and Bro. Brooks, in responding, said that he was very proud to have joined the Order and the Royal Standard Lodge that day. He hoped in future his and his brother initiate's future would prove them worthy of it. Bro. Lidbury also responded, and reiterated the words of Bro. Brooks. He trusted that he might prove to be a true Mason. The W.M. afterwards gave the toast of "The Visitors," and advised the brethren to visit other lodges than their own, that they might compare the working of the two. Bro. Simpson, of the Baltic, 284, Brooklyn, N.Y., replied, but said that such an honour had been little dreamed of by him when he had the pleasure of receiving an invitation from Bro. Bigley. He had been brought up in a very different Masonic school to that of most of the brethren round him, for in the United States they did not have banquets. He had noticed on the business paper of the evening a motion that banquets should be abolished, and before he came to the lodge he felt that if he were a member he should be disposed to favour such a course, but ever since he had been at that table, and had participated in the genial hospitality of the brethren, he had seen such cordial feelings exhibited to the visitors, and by all members of the lodge to each other, that he believed he had never seen its equal in similar assemblies, and he felt now somewhat of an opponent to the motion, which, however, was not brought on. It might not perhaps be out of place to allude slightly to some of the leading features of difference which he recognised in the working of lodges here and in America. Bro. Simpson explained these as far as they concerned the First Degree only, as initiates were present, and continued that the lodge-rooms in the United States were far more spacious than in this country, and were devoted entirely to the purposes of Masonry. After stating how the American lodge-rooms were arranged, and that they were very cosy and comfortable, Bro. Simpson said he was much struck that evening with the universal feeling of brotherhood which seemed to animate Freemasons. Although he was a native of Great Britain himself, having been born in Scotland, he had been much in the United States, and when he went into a lodge there he found that nationality was of no account, for he felt on an equal footing with all who were present. He came to the Royal Standard Lodge that evening, a lodge in England, and he still found that he was among a band of brothers. This showed the universality of the brotherhood of the Craft, and it afforded him unlimited gratification to have the privilege of responding to the toast of "The Visitors," which had been so warmly proposed and so cordially drunk. Bro. Ballantyne, P.M., proposed "The W.M.," who had so competently discharged his duties while he had held the office of Master. The W.M. said it was very gratifying to receive such an expression of approval, and was an ample reward for the endeavours he had made. In proposing "The P.M.'s," he said that though the lodge had at one time been rather under the star of adversity, it was now under the star of prosperity, which he trusted might never set, and which was in truth owing to the exertions made by the P.M.'s. Bro. Ballantyne replied that he was happy to hear the W.M. say so, and it was very satisfactory to the P.M.'s to know that they had contributed in a measure to such a state of things. He was no chicken in Freemasonry, for he had been initiated in Scotland 24 years ago, and referring to Bro. Simpson's remarks about the universal brotherhood of Masons, which made them recognise each other over the whole world, said that as a Scotchman he should not have needed Bro. Simpson to tell him that he was a Scotchman, for his dropping of the word "cosy" instantly proclaimed his nationality. Bro. Woodman, P.M., also replied; and the W.M. then proposed "The Officers" of the lodge, making special reference to Bro. Bigley for the exertions he had used for the comfort and accommodation of the brethren in their new home. The brethren then separated, after enjoying some excellent music and singing by various members, Bro. H. J. Moxon contributing, in capital style, "Ring the Bell, Watchman," and other songs.

MARQUESS OF RIPON LODGE (No. 1489).—On the 1st inst. the brethren of this lodge met for the installation of a new W.M., at the Metropolitan Societies' Asylum, Ball's-pond road. Bro. W. Stephens, W.M., presided, and installed Bro. W. J. Murliis as Master of the lodge. The brethren appointed to office were Bros. J. Jessett, S.W.; J. E. Walford, P.M. 177, J.W.; W. Stephens, I.P.M. and P.M. 1365, Treas.; W. Jones, P.M. 445, P.P.G.D.C. Norths. and Hunts, Sec.; Dr. Symons, S.D.; John Hligh, J.D.; J. Glaskin, I.G., D.C.; W. Grist, Steward; T. Hastings Miller, P.M. and Prov. G. Organist, Middlesex, I.G.; and Gilchrist, Tyler. Before the lodge was closed the new W.M. rose and said he had very great pleasure in presenting a P.M.'s jewel to Bro. W. Stephens, and he only hoped that every P.M. of this lodge would be as worthy to wear such a jewel as Bro. Stephens. Bro. Stephens, in accepting the jewel, said that in performing the duties appertaining to the office of Master of the lodge he had only done what he thought was his duty, and what he considered the best for the Marquess of Ripon Lodge. Bro. Stephens then proposed that the sanction of this lodge should be given to a Lodge of Instruction to be held in connection with it. A meeting had been held to establish it, and it had been arranged that it should meet every Thursday evening at the Albion Tavern, Albion Road, Dalston. Bro. Jones, Secretary, seconded the motion, which was then put and carried. Bro. J. Hanney having presented a very handsome harmonium to the lodge, Bro. Stephens proposed and Bro. Hastings Miller seconded a vote of thanks to the donor, which was carried by acclamation. Bro. Walford proposed and the S.W. seconded a vote of thanks to Bro. Stephens for performing the ceremony of installation. Bro. Walford said he was quite sure that every one of the brethren present had been delighted with the way in which the ceremony had been performed, and it was a great happiness to know that their first W.M. had installed his successor. It was not often the case in lodges, and therefore this lodge should be additionally pleased. The vote of thanks was unanimously adopted, and the lodge was thereafter closed. The brethren adjourned to a beautiful banquet supplied by Bro. Grist, and under his personal superintendence. The toasts were afterwards honoured. In proposing that of "The W.M.," Bro. Stephens said he had known Bro. Murliis many years, and was convinced from his acquaintance with him of a quarter of a century, that when the brethren had known him as long, they would respect him as much as he did. He would be an excellent Master of this lodge, and, in fact, every thing that could be desired in a Master of the Marquess of Ripon Lodge. The W.M., in reply, said that, unworthy though he was to fill the office of Master, he was sure the brethren would assist him to keep up the lodge to the high point at which it had been kept hitherto, and also the spirit of harmony that had been maintained in it. He trusted that his year of office would not prove worse than its predecessor; but he felt a grave responsibility resting upon him in accepting the office. Indeed, he thought it was the heaviest undertaking of his life. He had been connected with many societies, and had held high offices in them; but he had not presided over a lodge of brethren. He hoped they would bear with his shortcomings, and he trusted that he should be spared to perform his duties to the satisfaction of the brethren. He would not willingly make an enemy, and he did not know that he had one in the world. If, therefore, anything should in the course of the year arise to cause unpleasant feelings, he would endeavour to pour oil on the troubled waters, and to arrange the matter amicably with all parties. When he joined Masonry he did not do it for the sake of taking office, but for the sake of charity, the brightest jewel in its crown. If he could benefit the institutions or the Order it would be the height of his ambition. Before sitting down he would propose "The P.M.'s," and he then referred to what Bro. Stephens had done for the lodge during his year of office, to the splendid manner in which he had just performed the installation. For himself he could but express his gratitude to Bro. Stephens, through whom he had joined Masonry. He had belonged to other societies with him, and from every observation of his conduct he felt that he would be following a good man if he imitated Bro. Stephens and joined Masonry. The brethren of the Marquess of Ripon Lodge now desired to present him with a ring in token of their admiration of his conduct as their first W.M. A handsome ring was then handed to Bro. Stephens, who in acknowledgement thereof, said he was gratified to find that the brethren appreciated the efforts he had made on behalf of the lodge. He was thoroughly repaid by such consideration. He had not expected such a present. The P.M.'s jewel was quite sufficient. However, as the brethren had thought fit to supplement it with a ring he could but accept it. "The Officers of the Lodge" was the next toast, which the S.W. J.W. Secretary and others respectively responded to. Bro. Mugeridge responded for "The Charities," after which the Tyler's toast was given, and the brethren separated. The following is a list of the brethren present, in addition to the officers given above:—J. Tovell, J. Hanney, J. R. Bredding, C. Smith, J. Friedrich, E. Blunt, H. Field, R. Cockburn, G. J. Glover, T. H. Martin, D. Martin, J. Starkey, H. Marrey, S. J. Parker, W. Langford, J. Pushman, J. Weston, F. C. Nevill, W. Gray, W. Norris, H. Patient, F. A. Hawthorn, J. Osborn, H. Johns, J. Crocker, C. Biggs, W. H. Mayes, W. J. Cook, B. Jeffries, P. A. Coard. Visitors:—J. G. Defries, 45 S.D.; R. J. Davies, 1278; A. Dickenson, 174 P.M.; H. G. Buss, 1293, P.G. Treas. Middlesex; T. Grove, 55; A. Gythman, Orient, Hungary; J. A. Taylor, 1365 P.M.; J. Godfrey, 1365; R. Buller, (P.M. 9), Sec. 1365; R. Wyatt, W.M. 1365; H. J. Perry, 145; M. J. Hayes, 1348; J. Lundy, P.M. 45; C. Crosbie, 174; W. M. Stiles, 1507; G. R. Soper, 1365 J.W.; J. H. Coulson, 27; W. H. Lee, W.M. 1524; H. Massey, P.M. 619, "Freemason"; G. J. Mumford, 145, and H. Mugeridge, P.M. 217, and others.

DUKE OF CONNAUGHT LODGE (No. 1524).—This young and flourishing lodge met on Thursday, the 30th ult., when there were present Bros. W. H. Lee, W.M.; H. G. Buss, Prov. G. Treas. Midsx., hon. mem.; T. C. Chapman, S.W.; R. Philip, acting J.W.; Neville Green, Hon. Sec.; J. B. Shackleton, S.D.; J. Symes, J.D.; H. Meyer, acting I.G.; Gilchrist, Tyler; R. Dallas, W. Brand, J. Alford, and J. Bailey. Visitors:—Bros. John Bingham, W.M. 55; C. B. Payne, P.M. 27; John Green, S.W. 27; Marx-Gross, 1278; G. E. Acker, Lafayette, U.S.A. 19; N. Finch, 1365; J. Coultis, 105. The business commenced with the raising of Bros. F. Brasted and E. Harding. Then followed the passing of Bros. J. Bailey and F. A. Kelly. Mr. John Varney was then initiated into the mysteries of Freemasonry. The ceremonies were performed by the W.M. in his usual able manner. The notices of motion for the raising of the initiation and joining fees, of which due notice had been given, were then brought forward and carried unanimously. It was then resolved to sanction the meeting of a Lodge of Instruction, held at the Havelock Tavern, Albion Road, Dalston, every Wednesday evening, such Lodge of Instruction having hitherto been held under the sanction of another lodge. Propositions were then received for the next meeting, which will be held on Thursday, Nov. 25th. The Steward's jewel, commemorative of the Installation of H.R.H. the Prince of Wales as M.W.G.M., which had been voted to Bro. Lee by the members of the lodge at the last meeting, was then presented to the W.M. by Bro. H. G. Buss, Prov. Grand Treas. Midsx., P.M.P.Z., &c., who spoke of Bro. Lee in very eulogistical terms. The W.M. then thanked the brethren in feeling terms for the very handsome jewel presented to him, also Bro. Buss for the very kind manner in which he had referred to his (Bro. Lee's) Masonic services. The lodge was then closed in due form. An excellent cold collation was provided, to which ample justice was done. The usual loyal and Masonic toasts were then proposed. That of "The Initiate" was responded to by Bro. John Varney; "The Visitors" by Bro. H. G. Buss, John Bingham, G. E. Acker, and Mark-Gross. Among the other toasts given were "The W.M." responded to by Bros. W. H. Lee, and "The Officers of the Lodge," to which Bros. Chapman, Shackleton and Symes replied. The brethren soon after separated.

PROVINCIAL.

WARRINGTON.—LODGE OF LIGHTS (No. 148).—The regular monthly meeting of this lodge was held on Monday, Sept. 27, when the W.M., Bro. John Bowes, P.M., P.Z., P.P.G. Reg. Cumberland and Westmoreland, was supported by his officers, a goodly number of members, and several visitors. The lodge was opened in due form, and the minutes read and confirmed. The W.M. read a letter of apology from Bro. Dr. Joseph, who was due for preferment, but who was unable to be present. The lodge was opened in the Second Degree, when Bros. Johnson and Peake sought advancement, and having sustained their claim, were entrusted and retired. The lodge was opened in the Third Degree, when the two brethren were separately re-admitted and raised by the W.M., the working tools being presented and explained by the S.W., Bro. W. H. Robinson. The lodge was closed down, when the remaining business was transacted, and when finally closed, the brethren adjourned to refreshment. The W.M. presided, and was supported by the I.P.M., Bro. John Harding, Bro. Tomlinson, W.M. of the Good Samaritan Lodge, Sandbach; Bro. Tongue, of Crewe, and others. The W.M. was well cared for by Bro. Joseph Pickthall, S.D. After supper the usual loyal and Masonic toasts were given; the visitors warmly complimenting the W.M. on the excellent working which they had witnessed. After an evening pleasantly spent, the Tyler proposed his toast, and the brethren separated in harmony.

WOOLWICH.—NELSON LODGE (No. 700).—The first monthly meeting after the summer vacation of the above lodge occurred on Wednesday, 15th ult., at the Masonic Hall, William-street, and was attended by a goodly number of both members and visitors. The following officers were present:—T. Ward, W.M.; W. Ritchie, P.M.; S. Goddard, P.M.; W. Dunham, P.M.; G. Bowles, P.M.; T. W. Butt, S.W.; J. Waters, J.W.; F. S. Dawson, P.M. and Treas.; J. Henderson, P.M. and Sec.; N. Woodley, S.D.; J. Warren, J.D.; J. Wilkins, I.G.; and B. Norman, Tyler. Among the visitors were—J. McDougall, P.M. 913; A. Jessop, Treas. 913; T. Hayes, S.D. 913; W. Gamble, 706; G. Spinks, J.W. 1536; W. G. Picken, 1536; R. J. Lapham, 1536; W. Hambyn, 975; T. Jorkey, 1107; J. Reynolds, 169; Mason, 309; and C. Jolly, 913. The lodge having been opened in due form and with solemn prayer, Bros. G. J. Beaver and W. Harris were raised to the Sublime Degree, and Messrs. J. Tame and G. Fraser were, after ballot and approval, initiated. Bro. E. Tappenden, of 781, had previously been received as a joining member. The ceremonies of raising and initiation were most impressively worked by the W.M., and gave unlimited satisfaction to all, more particularly as this was his first effort as a Master. The lodge was then closed, and the brethren then adjourned for refreshment, at which the visitors were most hospitably entertained. The usual loyal and Masonic toasts were then duly honoured, and Bro. P.M. Ritchie, as I.P.M., had the honour of proposing "The W.M.'s Health," and in so doing said he felt sure they would all respond to the toast with the heartiness that it deserved. They had all seen the admirable manner in which the ceremonies of the evening had been carried out, and he felt sure that every one of them must rejoice at the decision that had placed so good a W.M. in the chair of that lodge. For himself, he regretted exceedingly that circumstances, over which he had no control, and which were well known to the majority of the brethren present, prevented him from being present at the installation banquet, but from what he had seen that night he felt perfectly satisfied that the lodge was in the hands of one fully capable of maintaining its high character for efficiency, and who had been so well and deservedly placed in the W.M.'s chair. He felt, therefore, great pleasure in asking them to drink with him "The Health of the W.M., Bro. Ward." The W.M., in reply, said he thanked them exceedingly for the kind feeling they had evinced towards him, not only in that room, but during the working of the ceremonies in the lodge. P.M. Ritchie had expressed himself pleased with that working, but he (the W.M.) had only followed the example set by Bro. Ritchie and his predecessors, and had not once, from the date he was appointed I.G., been absent from the lodge during working hours; he had always felt it a duty to be present, and had fulfilled that duty, and he felt proud that his endeavours had been and were appreciated by the brethren of the lodge; he felt proud to be supported by so many worthy Past Masters on his left, and by so many in the lodge who had been his former companions and comrades outside, and he trusted to have the same support and kindness shown him in the future as in the past, and then they might be assured of one thing, and that was that his great aim should be to keep up the unblemished reputation of the Nelson Lodge. The next toast was that of "The Initiates," to which both brethren replied. "The Visitors" were most cordially toasted. Bros. Gamble, Hayes, Weston, and others responded, and all thanked the W.M. and the lodge for the rare treat afforded them in witnessing the thorough discipline and good working of the lodge, as well as for their hospitable reception at the social board. The W.M. then gave "The Health of the Past Masters of the Nelson Lodge," paying high compliments to the I.P.M., Bro. Ritchie; P.M. Bro. Dawson, who, he said, had been his indefatigable tutor, and to whom he was indebted for so much of the efficiency they had been pleased to compliment; P.M. Bro. Bowles, who had initiated him into Masonry, and in fact every Past Master was well worthy of their hearty good wishes. P.M. Bro. Hobson was away on the moors, and P.M. Bro. Norman was unfortunately compelled to be by the side of a suffering wife, or he would have been present that evening. He asked them to drink his health most cordially. Bro. Ritchie replied in a most eloquent speech, and said he had come all the way from Colchester that day to be present and do honour to his friend the W.M. He then gave a glowing account of the exceeding kindness and brotherly love shown him by the brethren during a late affliction, and assured them that it would never be effaced from his memory. He had visited many lodges at Colchester, Harwich, &c., and although he was immensely pleased with the working of those lodges, yet he was not ashamed of the Nelson. He thanked them from the bottom of his heart for the kind reception of his name. Bro. Dawson and Bro. Bowles replied as well, and then, after a most pleasant and fraternal meeting, the brethren dispersed.

ISLEWORTH.—VILLIERS LODGE (No. 1194).—The 8th anniversary of this lodge was held on the 2nd inst., and we are glad to see its continued prosperity. Indeed, the lodge is now almost too strong in numbers for its place of meeting, and it is contemplated to raise the fees very considerably. The lodge was opened, and the minutes confirmed. Ballots were taken for Messrs. James S. Lean and Edward W. A. A. Mayhew, and proved unanimous in their favour. The latter gentleman being under age, and about to depart for New Zealand, a dispensation had been obtained from the Provincial Grand Master to initiate him. Bro. Pendlebury, P.M., then duly initiated the candidates into the mysteries of the Craft separately, the W.M. elect having altered the business on the summons, and permitted him to perform the ceremony before the installation, as Mr. Mayhew was Bro. Pendlebury's nephew, and he had asked permission to initiate him. The ceremony was very impressively performed. Bro. Dodd took the chair, and installed Bro. Richard A. Steel as W.M. The officers appointed were Bros. W. Harvey, S.W.;

Thos. L. Green, J.W.; Thomas Verity, W.M. 1348, Treas.; William Dodd, P.M., Sec.; E. H. Dalby, S.D.; George L. Ridge, J.D.; Thomas A. Woodbridge, I.G.; Henry Allman, P.M., D.C.; John Verity, Assistant D.C.; William Plimsaul and Thomas Cross, Stewards; John Gilbert, P.G. Tyler Middlesex, Tyler. The addresses were delivered by Bros. Dodd, Pendlebury, and Lancaster respectively. Amongst the brethren present were noticed: Bros. H. G. Buss, Prov. G. Treas.; J. Galt Fisher, W. Vincent, H. Walker, W. T. Hollands, Frank Arliss, Edwd. Mousen, C. Simmons. Visitors: Bros. Edward Wits, W.M. 144; W. L. O'Neill, 1056; C. J. Foakes, 40; N. Green, 1524; B. Verity, 1348; W. H. Williams, 819; N. Lowes, 1260; and Vaccaini. We prophesy a successful year for the lodge under the rule of Bro. Steel, who has taken great care to render himself efficient for the office of W.M. Five guineas were voted to the Girls' School, to complete the amount requisite to constitute the lodge a Life Governor of that Institution. The lodge was closed, and the brethren adjourned to banquet, at which the usual loyal and Masonic toasts were given. Bro. Buss responded to the toast on behalf of the Provincial Grand Officers, and said he was very happy to be of any service to the lodge. This province being young, both his colleagues and himself were always most anxious in every way to do the best they could to promote the interests of the Craft, in accordance with the feeling which was predominant in the mind of the Provincial Grand Master, and at the same time he personally felt great gratification in observing the prosperity of the Villiers Lodge. He thanked them very sincerely for the kind and cordial way in which the toast had been received, and he would take an early opportunity of conveying to the Provincial Grand Master the sentiments they had been pleased to convey to him. The Worshipful Master then proposed "The Health of the Brother Initiates—Bros. Mayhew and Lean." He was very happy to welcome them both to the lodge, but he was sorry that Bro. Mayhew should be compelled to leave them almost immediately after his coming amongst them in consequence of the state of his health, and to go to the other side of the globe, but he hoped when he got there he would be thoroughly restored to health, and, judging from appearances, he certainly did not seem delicate now, and he hoped that the change from our climate to a more genial and warm one would contribute to restore and re-establish his strength and health. With regard to Bro. Lean, he hoped he would be passed and raised in the lodge, and would continue with them for many years. The toast was drunk with all the honours, and afterwards Bro. Buss sang the song of "The Entered Apprentice," which was highly appreciated. Bro. Lean responded briefly, and thanked the lodge and the Worshipful Master for the kind manner in which they had received the toast of the health of Bro. Mayhew and himself, and he hoped as long as he lived he would be a credit to the Craft. Bro. Mayhew responded, and said—Worshipful Master and Brethren, though young in years, and but a new born babe in Masonry, I nevertheless rise with the greatest pleasure to express to you my sincere thanks for the kind manner in which you have received me amongst you and made me one of yourselves, and I sincerely trust you will never have cause to regret having admitted me into your lodge, but that you will hereafter find me an earnest Mason, and an ornament to a noble and honourable Order, for which I have for many years been looking forward to join, and had only been waiting until I had attained the age of 21 years, when my uncle and brother, well known to many of you, had agreed I should be initiated. Circumstances, however, have altered what was proposed. I have recently been attacked with congestion of the lungs, but after a short sojourn at the seaside I find myself considerably recovered; but the medical gentlemen who attend me are of opinion that a sea voyage would be most beneficial; it has therefore been deemed expedient that I should go to New Zealand, to which place (D.V.) I shall sail in about a fortnight, where, when I arrive, I trust I shall find myself perfectly well, and soon have an opportunity of having completed the work you have so kindly begun—a Master Mason, as my uncle, grandfather, and great grandfather have been before me, and, for what I know, others of my ancestors may have been. I can also assure you, that I shall carry away with me a lasting impression of the solemn ceremony of this evening, and shall anxiously look forward to the time when I shall make further progress in the Order. In the meantime I will endeavour to learn as much as possible, and, having a Mason well versed in the ceremonies at my elbow, as it were, I shall doubtless gain enough of the outline to enable me to knock at the door to claim the next step. I am now amongst you for the first time, and it may be many years before I shall have an opportunity of being with you again; but whenever I may be in England on some future occasion, you may depend I shall ascertain the day of your meeting and come to see you. Thanking you all, brethren, for your kindness, I now take the opportunity of bidding you a long farewell. The Worshipful Master proposed "The Health of the Visitors," and apologized for some little inconvenience which he thought some of them had suffered for want of room. The toast was honoured in the usual way, and afterwards Bro. Simmons sang a song, "Down in Trafalgar Square." Bros. Wits, O'Neill, and others briefly responded on behalf of the other visitors and themselves, and thanked the Worshipful Master for the kind, cordial, and hospitable manner in which they had been treated. Bro. P.M. Lancaster proposed "The Health of the New Worshipful Master," who had been long known to and respected by them all. The toast was enthusiastically drunk. The Worshipful Master responded, and said he was deeply thankful for the honour they had done him, and he would do his best to discharge the duties of his office, and promote the prosperity of the lodge, and leave his name as one not unworthy to be added to the long list of former Masters of the lodge. The Worshipful Master then proposed "The Health of the Past Masters." Bro. Lancaster returned thanks on behalf of Bro. P.M. Dodd and himself. In passing he could not refrain from remarking that he was this evening very much struck by the sincere and earnest manner in which the two brother initiates, Mayhew and Lean, went through the impressive ceremony of initiation. They seemed thoroughly to appreciate the feeling and spirit of Masonry. He must also say that he deeply regretted the necessity which compelled Bro. Mayhew to go abroad, but they would be all proud to have in a far distant clime a brother who he believed would do credit to their lodge, and he hoped in future years to meet him once again restored to health and vigour. The toast was warmly received and drank, and Bro. Ramsay sang the song, "There's a land which bears a world-known name." The Worshipful Master next proposed the toast of "The Senior Warden and Junior Warden." Bro. Green responded briefly, and said that he and his brother officers would do their best at all times to assist the Worshipful Master. Bro. Gambrell sang a song, "I will stand by my friend." The Worshipful Master next proposed "The Health of the Treasurer and Secretary." The Treasurer took care of their money and the Secretary took care of their minutes, and had been Secretary for about six years, and, as they all knew, both Secretary and Treasurer were most able and competent officers. The toast was enthusiastically received. Bro. Verity and Bro. Dodd responded, and said they would endeavour in the future to discharge their duties in the same manner as they had hitherto done. The Worshipful Master then proposed the health of the rest of the officers, which was duly responded to, after which Bro. Vaccaini sang an Italian song. The Tyler's toast was then drunk. Bro. Mayhew gave a recitation from "Hamlet"—"Polonius' advice to his son." The brethren then adjourned to meet their train.

HALLIFORD.—THAMES VALLEY LODGE (No. 1460).—A meeting of the members of this lodge was held on Saturday last at the Ship Hotel, Halliford. The Rev. Dr. Brette, of Christ's Hospital, W.M., P.P.G. Chaplain, Middlesex, presided, and there were also present Bros. J. Llewellyn Jones, J.W.; W. Paas, Treas.; J. G. Marsh, Sec.; W. T. Howe, S.D.; J. A. Magee, J.D.; T. B. Yeoman, I.G.; Col. Peters, P.M., Prov. G.S.D., Middlesex; T. R. Gibson, W. Sweetland, R. Stone, J. H. R. Gowan, Major the Hon. O. G. Lambert, E. C. Hislop, W. Alcock, G. Townsend, W.M. 754; E. Liddbury, 656, New South Wales; H. C. Levander, S.W. 1415; W. W. Stephens, 657; Adam Leigh, 657; Capt. Heathcote, 228, and H. Massey ("Freemason"). Bro. J. G. Marsh initiated Messrs. Dunn, and Tyler, and passed Bros. W. Alcock, E. C. Hislop, and Major the Hon. O. G. Lambert, shortly after which the lodge was closed. An excellent banquet, supplied by Bro. R. Stone, followed, and the W.M. afterwards proposed the toasts. In giving that of "The M.W.G.M.," Dr. Brette said the brethren could but express the hope that the G.A.O.T.U. would protect him in the long and difficult, and he might say somewhat dangerous, journey he was about to undertake. A more difficult task he had not undertaken than to go through India and win the hearts of the Indian people as he had won the hearts of the Craft and the people here. When the lodge met next spring he (Dr. Brette) hoped the brethren would have the pleasure of congratulating H.R.H. on his safe return. The toasts of "The Pro G.M.," "The D.G.M. and G. Officers," and of "The Prov. G.M., Col. Burdett," and "The D. Prov. G.M., Sir G. Elliott," followed, and Col. Peters, Prov. G.S.D., Middlesex, and Bro. W. T. Howe, Prov. G.S., responded. Col. Peters afterwards proposed "The W.M." As an officer in Her Majesty's auxiliary forces he knew it was necessary to have a head to all bodies of men, and he could only hope that they might have a good head. He was very proud himself of being a commanding officer, and he was also proud that the Thames Valley Lodge had such a good commanding officer as Dr. Brette. All the brethren appreciated him, because during the time he had been W.M. he had done all he could in furtherance of the prosperity of this lodge. All of them would agree that, provided it went on as it had begun under him (Col. Peters), who was the father of the lodge, it would soon become second to no other lodge in the Province of Middlesex. His friend, Col. Burdett, had put him in the proud position he now held as father of the lodge, and he hoped he might live many years so to be, and to see it the best lodge. Under the present W.M. he was sure it would pursue that object. The W.M. replied, and said that the brethren had so generously supported him that day that he had ample testimony of their wish to raise the lodge to the highest point of excellence. He thanked them most heartily for their support, and for their good wishes. With a continuance of that support he would use his best exertions in favour of the success of the lodge. Dr. Brette then proposed "The I.P.M.," founder and father of the lodge, Col. Peters, and hoped he might long be the father of the lodge. Col. Peters responded, and said he felt it a high honour to be father of a lodge in which there were so many gentlemen of position as members. There were no doubt many lodges in the Province of Middlesex, but he did not think there were any equal to the Thames Valley Lodge, 1460. It was one of the best as a supporter of the charities, and at last festival sent up a list of over £95 to the Girls' School. There was generally great difficulty in getting up an amount of that kind; but doing so showed the energy of their W.M. The W.M. went in for it, and he did it to the satisfaction of everybody. When the amount was announced by Bro. Little (who he was sorry was unable to be present with them on the present occasion) there was quite an ovation. The toast of "The Initiates" followed, and Dr. Brette reminded those brethren of the obligations they had laid themselves under.

Bros. Dunn and Tyler responded, and Bros. Liddbury, Levander, and Capt. Heathcote replied for the visitors. Bro. J. Llewellyn Jones, J.W., responded for the officers, and the brethren shortly afterwards returned to town.

LIVERPOOL.—LODGE OF EMULATION (No. 1505).—The first annual installation gathering of this, the second youngest lodge in the province of West Lancashire, was held at the Masonic Hall, Liverpool, on Friday, the 1st inst., when there was a very large turn-out of members and visitors. The lodge was opened promptly at four o'clock by Bro. H. Nelson, W.M., who was supported by Bros. J. T. Callow, S.W.; H. Morris, J.W.; J. Hocken, P.M., Treas.; W. Quayle, Sec.; W. H. Corbin, S.D.; T. Large, I.G.; J. Capell, D.C.; J. Skeaf, P.M., P.G.O., Org.; and W. H. Ball, Tyler. The members present were Bros. R. Brown, W.M. 241; A. E. Pearson, J. Purvis, A. McKenzie, H. Coulson, T. Walley, P. Thomas, J. Carmichael, O'Hagih, L. Johnson, J. Queen, W. S. Matthews, H. B. Saunders, J. Irving, C. Sidebotham, J. R. Taylor, T. Garratt, W. H. Chapman, M. Drake, jun., R. Lytham. The visitors included Bros. J. A. Edgington, P.M. 1182; J. Robinson, 813; J. Thornton, P.M. 673, 1182; R. W. Holt, P.M. 1276; W. Laidlaw, P.P.G.S.B., P.M.; W. Davidson, 1276; J. F. Hall, 673; T. Delcock, W.M. 594; E. Clements, 673; G. Grant, 1017; W. Hiles, 1299; H. Burrows, J.W. 673; G. Hutchin, S.W. 241; J. Busfield, 216; Rev. H. G. Vernon, P.P.G. Chap.; G. Broadbridge, P.P.G.D.C.; J. Pemberton, P.M. 1264; P. B. Gee, W.M. 1264; T. Shaw, W.M. 823; H. Hindle, 1393; J. B. MacKenzie, 1357; T. Kewley, 241; W. T. May, P.M. 673; S. E. Ibbis, P.M. 594; H. Jackson, W.M. 1393; J. Skelly, 673; W. Forrester, 1035; T. Salber, 241; D. Meek, 203, &c. After the minutes had been confirmed, Bro. H. Nelson, W.M., as the closing act of an excellent year's services, initiated three candidates into the privileges of the Order in a remarkably effective manner. The balance sheet, which showed a highly satisfactory state of the finances, was taken as read, and unanimously passed on the motion of the I.G. Bro. J. T. Callow, the W.M. elect, was then presented to Bro. Nelson, the retiring W.M., by Bros. J. Hocken, P.M., Treas., and J. Skeaf, P.G.O., P.M. 216, Org.; the chairs of S.W. and J.W. being respectively filled during the ceremony by Bros. G. Broadbridge, P.P.G.D.C., P.M. 241, and R. Brown, W.M. 241, Hon. Sec. to the West Lancashire Masonic Educational Institution. Bro. Callow was installed W.M. in a most efficient manner by Bro. Nelson, to whom a special vote of thanks was ultimately passed by acclamation. The following were invested officers of the lodge:—Bros. H. Nelson, I.P.M.; H. Morris, S.W.; W. Quayle, J.W.; J. Hocken, P.M., Treas. (re-elected); W. H. Corbin, Sec.; R. Croft, S.D. (by proxy); T. Large, J.D.; J. Capell, I.G.; C. Sidebotham, S.S.; H. Coulson, J.S.; J. Skeaf, Org., and W. H. Ball, Tyler. On the motion of Bro. P.M. Hocken, seconded by Bro. Queen, it was unanimously resolved to vote the sum of ten guineas for the purchase of a testimonial to Bro. H. Nelson, I.P.M., in recognition of his very valuable services during the first year's existence of the lodge. After two propositions had been made for initiation the lodge was closed, and nearly the whole of the brethren adjourned to the large dining hall for banquet. The menu and toast card were very artistic, reflecting the highest credit upon Bros. Vandyke and Brown, the eminent photographers, who executed the excellent likenesses of the W.M. and I.P.M., and also upon Bro. Matthews, who did the "litho" work. The loyal and Masonic toasts were pointedly given by the W.M., "The Health of the P.G.M. for W.L. and his Officers" being acknowledged by Bro. Skeaf, P.G.O. In proposing "The Worshipful Master, Bro. James Teare Callow," Bro. I.P.M. Nelson said it was satisfactory to find that one had been chosen as W.M. who was so well fitted to fulfil his important duties. Bro. Callow fittingly responded. "The Past and Installing Master, Bro. Henry Nelson," was proposed in highly complimentary terms by the W.M. "The Officers of the Lodge" had respondents in Bros. H. Morris and W. Quayle; and "The West Lancashire Educational Institution" was eloquently acknowledged by Bro. R. Brown, W.M. 241, the Hon. Sec. Various other toasts followed. Several excellent glees, songs, &c., were given by Bros. Busfield, Queen, Quayle, Forrester, and others, Bro. Skeaf presiding at the harmonium.

INSTRUCTION.

STAR LODGE OF INSTRUCTION (No. 1275).—On the 4th inst. the sixth anniversary banquet of this lodge was held at the Marquis of Granby Tavern, New Cross, at which Bro. Charles James Hogg, P.M. 1275, P.G.S., Treasurer of the lodge, was to have presided. Illness however prevented this esteemed brother from attending, and in his absence Bro. Keeble, P.M. of the mother lodge, was elected to the chair. The Vice-Presidents were Bro. Green, S.W. of the mother lodge, and Bro. Jobson. The President was supported on his right by Bro. Macdonald, S.W. 1158, Hon. Sec. and Preceptor, and on his left by Bro. P. M. Dille, the late Preceptor. Among the brethren present we observed Bros. Davidge, the late Secretary; Jardine, Jenkins, Nevins, Tong, Hutchings, Glosler, Davison, Turner, Catterston, Sherfy, of Boston, U.S., and Allcott, lately returned from a long residence in China. The banquet was admirably served, and did credit to Bro. Seager, the proprietor, and his staff of assistants. On the removal of the cloth, the usual loyal and Masonic toasts were proposed and responded to with the utmost cordiality. These were followed by the toast of the evening, "Prosperity to the Star Lodge of Instruction," which was coupled by the President with the name of Bro. Macdonald, their Hon. Secretary, who, in returning thanks, stated that fifty-two weekly meetings had been held during the year, at which the attendances had been 1401, giving an average of twenty-seven for each meeting, a result that had not been attained by any other lodge of instruction in London. The funds had prospered during the year; they had received £18 2s. 2d., out of which they had presented £10 10s. 0d. to the Boys' School, and £1 1s. had been applied in individual charity, about £5 had been spent in furniture, and a balance of £1 12s. 2d. was carried forward. He thought that this state of affairs must be very satisfactory to all present, and as an officer of the Lodge of Instruction he begged to thank them for the cordial manner in which they had responded to the toast. "The Health of the President" was then proposed by Bro. Dille, and Bro. Keeble having briefly returned thanks, proceeded to propose "The Health of Bro. Macdonald," and to present him, on behalf of the brethren of the Star Lodge, with a mark of their affectionate esteem in the shape of a gold watch, a very handsome piece of workmanship manufactured by Bro. Gloster, and having engraved upon it (by Bro. H. L. Jenkins) the monogram of the recipient, and an inscription in his honour. The President said that knowing Bro. Macdonald as they all did, how energetic, how painstaking, how persevering, and at the same time how kind, considerate, and courteous he was, it was quite unnecessary for him (Bro. Keeble) to say anything to call these good qualities to their minds. For himself, he might say, and he believed they would all endorse the remark, that he himself was extremely proud of the position of the Star Lodge of Instruction, and of the large amount of knowledge it had been the means of diffusing, and the charitable good it had been enabled to do; and as Bro. Macdonald had been largely instrumental in obtaining these results, he and they could not but feel a great amount of esteem for Bro. Macdonald on this account, as well as having a separate affectionate regard for him on account of his more personal, kindly, and genial nature. The toast having been enthusiastically received, Bro. Macdonald, who was evidently affected by the reception of the toast, returned thanks for the honour that had been done him, and spoke very feelingly of his appreciation of the friendships he had made among them. Various other toasts, Masonic and otherwise, were proposed and duly honoured, and the brethren did not separate till a late hour.

BLACKPOOL.—CLIFTON CHAPTER (No. 703).—A meeting of this chapter was held on the 22nd ult. at the Clifton Arms Hotel, Blackpool, when the following were present:—Comps. Ralph Landless, Z.; J. Pemberton, P.Z. 1094, acting as H.; William McMurtrie, J.; J. Grime, S.E.; A. Viener, S.N.; H. Johns, P.S.; E. Gregson, First A.S.; J. B. Fisher, Second A.S.; J. Harrison, C. Caudwell, A. Wade, J. Eccleston, H. Bird, W. Parker, II. Raines, and W. Stewardson. The visitors present were Comps. T. Nevett, Z. 113; J. Pemberton, P.Z. 1094; S. Biddulph, 204; and Joseph Wood, Treas. 1094 ("Freemason"). The minutes of the previous meeting were read and confirmed, and four brethren were ballotted for. Two of these being in attendance, they were exalted in a manner which did much credit to the working of the chapter. Three brethren were proposed for exaltation at the next meeting. After "hearty good wishes" from the visiting companions, the chapter was closed in perfect harmony. An excellent banquet was subsequently served, but on account of the death of Comp. J. Crossley, H. of this chapter, all toasts were dispensed with except "The Queen," "The Prince of Wales," and "The Grand Officers."

BOLTON.—ST. JOHN'S LODGE (time immemorial).—The regular meeting of this lodge was held at the Commercial Hotel, Bolton, on Wednesday, 29th Sept., when there were present Bros. John Alcock, W.M.; Jas. Horrocks, S.W.; Jno. Harwood, J.W.; Jas. Allen, S.O.; Thos. Holmes, J.O.; Henry Greenwood, J.D.; Samuel Barrett, I.G.; also the following P.M.'s:—Thos. Entwisle, P. Prov. G. Mark Master, Lancashire; Thos. Morris, P. Prov. G. Sword Bearer; Robt. Harwood, P. Prov. S.G. Deacon; Daniel Stansfield, P. Prov. J.G. Deacon; Jas. Newton, P. Prov. G. Inspector of Works; Jno. Brandwood, P. Prov. G. Standard Bearer; Wm. Hamer, and others. The lodge being opened and the minutes read and approved, two candidates were balloted for and elected, and one of them being in attendance (Thomas Dooley, M.M. 146) was advanced to the honourable degree of Mark Master by Bro. Entwisle. This being the meeting for the election of W.M., the ballot was taken, and resulted in the election of Bro. James Horrocks, S.W. A candidate was proposed for advancement, and the lodge was then closed.

GLASGOW.—LODGE COMMERCIAL (No. 360).—The regular bi-monthly meeting of this lodge was held in their hall, 30, Hope-street, Glasgow, on the 1st inst., Bro. Monro, R.W.M., presiding; Bros. J. M. Olliver, S.W.; T. Graham, acting J.W. There was a goodly number of brethren present, members of the lodge and visitors. On the minutes being read and approved of, the ballot was taken for Messrs. John L. Barr and David Nicoll for admission into the ancient Order of Freemasonry, which proved favourable. The candidates then entered, and received the E.A. Degree, Bro. John Monro, R.W.M., officiating in his usual efficient manner. The lodge was then raised to the F.C. and M.M. Degrees, when Bro. Murdoch McLean was raised to the Sublime Degree of M.M., Bro. David Lamb, D.M., officiating. This degree also was worked in a most admirable and impressive manner. There being no further business, the lodge was closed in due form, according to ancient custom.

RUTHERGLEN.—LODGE ST. JOHN'S OPERATIVE (No. 347).—The consecration of the new Masonic Hall for this lodge, recently erected in Cathcart-street, Rutherglen, will take place on Friday, 12th Nov., 1875, at 7 p.m. Bro. Colonel Campbell, R.W.P.G.M., will preside, assisted by the office-bearers of the P.G. Lodge, Renfrew, East. To prevent overcrowding it is arranged that admission be by ticket, none but Master Masons to be present. Dress, full Masonic. As circulars have been sent to the R.W.M.'s of lodges, inviting deputations, it is expected that a goodly number will be present.

PROVINCIAL GRAND LODGE OF CHESHIRE.

On Thursday, the 23rd ult., the annual Provincial Grand Lodge of Cheshire, of which Bro. the Right Hon. Lord de Tabley is the Right Worshipful Provincial Grand Master, was held at the Mechanics' Institution, Hyde, situated about seven miles from Manchester, for the purpose of transacting the annual business of the province. The brethren from Birkenhead, Egremont, Seacombe, Rock Ferry, and other places on the shores of the Mersey, who attended in goodly numbers, were conveyed from the Central Station, Ranelagh-street, Liverpool, and arrived about twelve o'clock, somewhat late, but this was unavoidable in consequence of certain causes over which the railway company in this instance had no control. The Masonic province of Cheshire comprises the towns of Birkenhead, Chester, Stockport, Staleybridge, Runcorn, Congleton, Seacombe, Egremont, Newton, Macclesfield, Hyde, Nantwich, Northwich, Knutsford, Crewe, Cheshire, Sandbach, Marple, Altrincham, and other places, there being altogether about forty lodges, and each of these sent representatives, some in large numbers, to attend the annual meeting of the province. Besides the R.W.P.G.M., there were present about forty Provincial Grand Officers, about 360 W.M.'s, P.M.'s, officers and members of lodges in the province, and nearly fifty visitors from East and West Lancashire and other provinces. The town of Hyde, which is certainly not attractive in situation nor surroundings, wore quite a holiday aspect, banners and flags floating in nearly every direction, and at various points the motto "Welcome to Lord de Tabley" was displayed, this welcome being given especially by the members of the Lodge of Industry, Hyde, No. 361 (which sent sixty-one representatives), and the Clarendon Lodge, Hyde, No. 1166 (which sent seventeen). The annual meeting was held under the auspices of these lodges, but the committee entrusted with the arrangements do not deserve much credit in connection with these. Every brother was allowed to look after his goods and chattels as best he could, and the provision made for signing the Tyler's Book was simply ridiculous. One book was provided and placed on a form in the entrance from the street, right in the gaze of the wondering outsiders. This has occurred more than once in connection with these Provincial Grand Lodge meetings in Cheshire, but it is to be hoped the same thing will not again occur. A dozen folio sheets of paper and as many pens would greatly expedite the signing and save confusion. As scarcely half the brethren signed the book, and as there were no facilities given for getting names, we cannot give a list of those who were present.

Business was announced to begin at half-past twelve o'clock, and, shortly after that time Bro. Lord de Tabley opened the Provincial Grand Lodge in due form, solemn prayer being offered by Bro. the Rev. R. Hodgson, P.G.O. Letters and telegrams of apology for non-attendance were read from Bro. G. Cornwall Legh, D.P.G.M.; Bro. Lord Grosvenor, and others; after which the rolls of P.G. Officers and lodges were read. The minutes of the last annual meeting at Chester on the 17th September, 1874, were also read and confirmed, as well as the minutes of the committee of the Fund of Benevolence, held at Crewe in March.

Bro. Platt, P. Prov. J.G.W., who moved the confirmation of the proceedings, explained that the votes of the Province of Cheshire for the last charity election had been lent to Warwickshire, but they would be forthcoming next month. There was no doubt they would carry their candidate at the next election, and he trusted that every lodge would send its votes signed in blank to the Prov. G. Sec.

Bro. Lord de Tabley said he thought they could not do better than re-appoint Bro. Capt. Cope, P.G.S.B. of England, the Chairman of the Committee of the Fund of Benevolence. They must all deplore that Bro. Cope's absence was caused by the illness of a near relative. The re-appointment was carried unanimously.

Bro. Lord de Tabley, P.G.M., in accordance with his custom in previous years, then addressed the brethren on the present position and prospects of Masonry in his province. It was to him a great happiness to be able to continue the same congratulation which he expressed last year in reference to the Craft in his division. Freemasonry was flowing on interruptedly in its prosperity—increasing in numbers, and he hoped increasing in the influence it exercised on the opinions of the society in which it existed. He had the greatest pleasure in seeing the lodges of the province over which he had the honour to preside so fully and numerously represented as they were that day; and it was also a source of satisfaction to him to have the welcome given to the P.G. Lodge in that north-east portion of the province—a welcome, he was sure, which would long remain green and fresh in their memories. He had before spoken of the care which ought to be exercised as to the respectability of those initiated into their Order, and he would again urge them to exercise this caution, striving not to secure mere numbers, but assuring themselves of the character and sterling worth of those they introduced. (Applause.) He would also say that, proud as he was of the number of the lodges over which he presided, he was above all anxious for the stability of those lodges in every part of the province. His conduct as P.G.M. must have been criticised when he hesitated to forward a petition to the G.M. for a new lodge, but before forwarding it he was bound to consider whether there was a fair and reasonable ground for believing that that lodge would be steadily and permanently carried out, and that the warrant would not be tossed about after the promoters left the neighbourhood. He hoped his conduct in this respect would meet with the approbation of the brethren, and their charitable and kind indulgence. (Applause.) The minute books of the different lodges, he said, had been carefully kept, and showed considerable improvement; but he would remind the Secretaries of lodges of the necessity of stating in each case in the minutes, and also on the circulars, the cause for holding "Lodges of Emergency." The gift of a pulpit which they had last year made to the cathedral at Chester was still incomplete, owing to the whole of the promised subscriptions not having been received; but he was certain he had only to mention this to have the moneys paid up without delay. He had no doubt that he would soon be able to report that the pulpit, which was being erected under the direction of Mr. Gilbert Scott, would be one in every respect worthy of their Craft. (Hear, hear.) Their charities had again been very successful during the year, and they had succeeded in electing one old woman for the London Institution, and there was every prospect of their boy candidate being elected in October. He trusted that their charity in the future would enable them to be as successful in connection with coming elections, and he cordially urged the claims of all their charities on the hearty support of the brethren. His lordship then referred to the deaths of prominent members of the Craft in that province during the year, alluding specially to Bros. Cruttenden, Dr. Evans, Terry, and William Bulley, each of whom had done honour to Masonry.

The P.G. Treasurer (Bro. Ferdinando Jackson) said he was very glad to present a favourable financial report, notwithstanding the fact that last year they had voted very large sums. The balance at present to the credit of the funds of Prov. Grand Lodge amounted to £406 7s. 9d., and the sum of £1236 18s. 6d. was the balance to the credit of the Fund of Benevolence. The financial report was adopted, and Bro. F. Jackson was unanimously re-elected P.G. Treasurer, on the motion of the P.G.M., who referred to the excellent manner in which the duties of the office had been carried out.

Bro. G. W. Latham, P. Prov. G. Reg., then moved, "That a grant of 500 guineas be made from the funds of the Provincial Grand Lodge for the purpose of aiding in the purchase of a perpetual presentation to the Royal Masonic Institution for Boys; such grant to be on the condition that a sufficient additional sum be raised in the province to make up the amount required by the Governors of the Institution for such privilege." He stated that this was probably the largest sum which the brethren had ever been called upon to vote for charity, but he had no doubt they would cordially fall in with the proposition. The usual cost of a perpetual presentation was 1500 guineas, but the governors of the Royal Masonic Institution for Boys had generously agreed to reduce it to 1000 guineas. The raising of the other 500 guineas would take some consideration, but he thought a way was already seen by which the sum might be raised. (He also proposed that Bros. Horatio Lloyd, P.G.S.W.; J. Wood, P.G. Reg.; G. W. Latham, P. Prov. G. Reg.; and J. E. Williams, P.M. of the Cestrian Lodge, Chester, be appointed a committee to confer with the Governors of the Cheshire Educational Institution, and also with the Governors of the Boys' School, London, with reference to the matter.

Bro. H. Bulley, P.G.S.B. of England, seconded the motion.

The P.G.M. said it gave him the greatest pride and pleasure to put this motion to the brethren, and it had his most cordial support.

The motion was carried unanimously amid great cheering.

Bro. Lord de Tabley said he had received a letter from the D. Prov. G.M. (Bro. G. Cornwall Legh), asking him to express to the Prov. Grand Lodge how sorry he was that he was prevented from being present in consequence of the state of his health. He, however, hoped to be in his place next year, and take part in the proceedings.

The following brethren were then appointed P.G. Officers for the ensuing year:—

G. Cornwall Legh	Prov. D.G.M.
Horatio Lloyd	Prov. G.S.W.
Captain H. A. Bennett	Prov. G.J.W.
Rev. R. Hodgson	Prov. G.C.
Rev. J. S. Darvell	Prov. G.C.
F. Jackson	Prov. G. Treas.
J. Wood	Prov. G. Reg.
E. H. Griffiths	Prov. G. Sec.
J. E. Williams	Prov. G.S.D.
J. Hibbert	Prov. G.J.D.
R. T. Bowden	Prov. G.S. of W.
Wilmot Eardley	Prov. G.D.C.
P. Wadsworth	Prov. G.A.D.C.
Captain Arrowsmith	Prov. G.S.B.
J. Travis	Prov. G.O.
R. Sykes	Prov. G.P.
J. Swindells	Prov. G. Tyler.
J. Boardman, F. Broadsmith, M. H. Bradley, W. Berry, G. Hesketh, and J. Turner	Prov. G. Stewards.

Bro. Horatio Lloyd, P.G.S.W., in a few well-chosen words, conveyed to the P.G.M. the pleasure felt by the brethren at his restoration to health, which would enable him to stay during the whole of the day's proceedings.

Lord de Tabley briefly acknowledged the kind expression of sympathy by the brethren.

The P.G.M. then presented Charity Jewels to Bros. C. Dutton, H. Bennett, Goodacre, and Matthews, which they received in consequence of serving the office of Stewards at the festivals in London in aid of the Masonic Schools.

A telegram from Bro. Romaine Callender, E.L., was read by the P.G.M., deeply regretting his inability to be present.

On the motion of the P.G.M. thanks were voted to the Rev. W. H. Lowther for the use of the church and the schools, and to the directors of the Mechanics' Institution for the use of that building.

After Lord de Tabley had intimated his intention of holding his next Provincial Grand Lodge at Knutsford, the business proceedings closed.

The brethren then formed in the usual order of procession, and marched through the streets to St. George's Church, headed by the Kingston Mills brass band, of which Mr. Reuben Taylor was conductor.

On arriving at the door of the church the procession halted, the brethren opening to the right and left, face inwards, to leave room for the P.G. Master to pass up the centre, preceded by his Standard and Sword Bearers; the P.G. Officers and brethren following in succession from the rear, so as to invert the order of procession. On leaving the church, the brethren observed the order of procession by forming as they were on halting at the door of the church.

The service was a special one, Bro. J. Travis, P.G.O., presiding at the organ. The processional hymn was the well-known "Onward, Christian Soldiers," the proper psalms for the day were sung to chants by Lawes and Fitzherbert, and the anthem was Dr. Goss's "The Glory of the Lord." The sermon was preached by the Rev. R. Hodgson, M.A., P.G. Chaplain, and at the close a collection was made on behalf of the Provincial Fund of Benevolence and the Cheshire Educational Masonic Institution, the amount realised being upwards of £22.

A banquet was served by Messrs. Jennison and Co., Manchester, in St. George's Schools, to which about 250 brethren sat down, under the presidency of Bro. Lord de Tabley. The musical arrangements were under the direction of Bro. Travis, P.G.O., who presided at the piano-forte, the vocalists being Bros. Edmondson, Stafford Dumville, Ball, and Roscoe.

After proposing the toasts of "The Queen" and "H.R.H. the Princess of Wales and the rest of the Royal Family," Bro. Lord de Tabley gave "The M.W. the Grand Master of England, H.R.H. the Prince of Wales, and Earl of Chester, and the other Officers of Grand Lodge." The acceptance of the Grand Mastership by the Prince of Wales had, he said, given an impetus to Masonry which it had not received for many years. H.R.H. was about to enter on a lengthened journey, and he (Lord de Tabley) was sure the good wishes of the whole Craft would accompany him, and they would hail with pleasure his happy return to his brethren in England. "The Right Hon. Lord de Tabley, R.W.P.G.M. of Cheshire," was proposed in happy terms by Bro. J. Wood, P.G. Reg., and received with tremendous enthusiasm. His lordship replied in equally felicitous terms, expressing his thanks to the officers and brethren in that province for the support they had given him. "Bro. G. Cornwall Legh, R.W.D.P.G.M., and the Other P.G. Officers" (acknowledged by Bro. H. Lloyd, P.G. S.W.), "The Visiting P.G. Masters and Officers," "The W.M.'s of Lodges 361 (Industry), and 1166 (Clarendon)," "The Visiting Brethren," "The P.G. Stewards," and "All Poor and Distressed Masons" were the remaining toasts on the list, which were got through speedily in consequence of the early departure of trains from this out-of-the-way corner of the province.

Obituary.

OUR LATE BRO. JOHN FREEMAN.

We called attention shortly in our last impression to the loss Freemasonry in Yorkshire and the Craft generally has sustained by the death of this worthy brother, and we now recur to his Masonic career. Bro. John Freeman was admitted at a comparatively late period into Freemasonry, but as an able correspondent of ours truly puts it, "this I always look upon as rather a compliment to our Order than otherwise. For it seems to me a much greater acquisition for our principles to win over a man of mature years and ripe experience."

Bro. Freeman, our correspondent goes on to say, "was a P.M. of the Harmony Lodge, 275, Huddersfield, which is not one of the least distinguished in the province, nor one in which it is very easy to attain that rank. He was also a P.Z. of the chapter, and P.Prov.G.R., and P.Prov.S.G.W. of the province."

Such, in the terse but lucid language of our correspondent, is the Masonic career of our late worthy and lamented brother.

It boots not here, in the pages of a purely Masonic journal, to recount his professional experience, or his public avocations. Bro. John Freeman was a very useful man in his time and generation, and one who worthily filled many important posts among his fellow citizens, especially those which related to his profession as a solicitor, and as a member of the well known firm of Brock, Freeman, and Battey. He was what may fairly be termed a self-made man, and had earned for himself the regard of a large and attached circle of friends, and the approval and respect of his fellow townsmen. Now that he has passed away from the home and circle in which he lived, and from the many posts of active labour which he conscientiously filled, there can be, and is, but one expression of regret for his loss, and appreciation of his many qualities of geniality, kindness, uprightness, and worth. He will be missed for some time, both in his profession and in the Craft, of which he was a faithful member.

NORTH OF ENGLAND LODGES.

In the "Freemasons' Pocket Companion," printed for Peter Tait, James Brown, and John Tait, of Glasgow, in 1771, I find "an exact list of regular English Lodges, according to their seniority and constitution," from which I extract the following nine, being all that are named as then existing in the six northern counties:—

"41. King's Head, at Salford, near Manchester, 1st Monday in the month.

"51. Three Tuns, in Scarborough, 1st Wednesday, August 27, 1729.

"76. New King's Arms, at Leith, in Lancashire, February 22, 1731.

"93. A private room, in Bolton Lee Moors, in Lancashire, next Wednesday to every full moon, November 9.

"104. Red Lion, at Bury, in Lancashire, next Thursday to every full moon, July 26, 1731.

"117. Fencers, near Newcastle upon Tyne, 1st Monday, June 24.

"128. Fountain, Gateshead, in the Bishoprick of Durham, March 8, 1735.

"131. George in Tyth-Barn-street, in Liverpool.

"138. City of Durham, in Wallow-street."

I will be glad to receive any information, for my "History of Freemasonry in the North of England," regarding these or any other old lodges in the northern counties. Were they all acting under charters, or warrants, granted by the Grand Lodge of York? Or was the last on the list the lodge for which the Grand Lodge of London granted a warrant for Durham, in 1724? Now that much of the so called ancient history of Freemasonry must be dismissed with the Scottish verdict of "Not Proven," it is time that every true and faithful brother among us did his share to rescue from oblivion the true history of the Craft, which will then shine with more resplendent glory than ever. Whilst we have been cherishing myths we have been neglecting to preserve and make known the true history of our wide-spread and unrivalled institution.

GEORGE MARKHAM TWEDELL

RECORD LODGE OF INDUSTRY, GATESHEAD.

Following up Bro. Hughs's clue to the meaning of "at Domaskin or at Forin," I venture to suggest an additional one. The ancient architectural remains at Gateshead point to the fact that there was a Roman settlement there. If so, what so feasible as that certain terms should remain in use and become part and parcel of the local dialect. If this were the case, "Domaskin" might be derive from "Domus" (Latin, house), with the addition of the Saxon "Maskewen" (a probable form of "maskewid" masked, fortified, or enclosed); whence "masken." Again, "Forin" from "Forinsecum," abroad (e.g.: "Forinsecum Maseticum"—Latin, a manor without a town's boundaries, and again "Forinsecum Servitium," "the payment of aid, scutage, and other extraordinary impositions of knight's service [see Bailey]), whence "at Domaskin or at Forin" might mean either "within the enclosed town or in the manor beyond it," or (and, perhaps, more probably) "within the tiled lodge or at another place of meeting."

As explanations, however seemingly far-fetched, may still be valuable as ultimately leading to results in sometimes unlooked for directions, I venture to add another, which is, perhaps, somewhat in accordance with my previously suggested explanation of "Highrodians." In Monkchester (Newcastle, just on the other side of the Tyne) there was a foundation of St. John; this (as the Roman as well as the Greek Church canonized both) may have been dedicated either to St. John the Almoner, otherwise St. John of Jerusalem, or to St. John Damascenus (who also lived at Jerusalem). Either, or both, may have been adopted as the patron of the "High Order" alluded to; St. John of Jerusalem is well known as the Patron Saint of Masons, as well as of Knights Templar (Manuel du Franc Maçon, p. 144.) St. John Damascenus also lived in Jerusalem, entering the Convent of S. Saba there in 730. As he was renowned as both orator and philosopher, it is quite possible that he, too, may have become the patron of the primitive, or mother, lodge held at Jerusalem.

It is just possible, then, that "Domaskin" may be a corruption of Damascenus or Damascene, and "Forin" of Conferens (the Distributor of Alms, or Almoner), whence we might explain the terms in question, either by the supposition that the "High Order" of "High-rodians" was dedicated to either St. John "Damascene" or St. John "Conferens," (or perhaps to both); or that the brethren of "Lodge Industry" were admitted into the "High Order," either "at Domaskin or at Forin," that is, on the feast-days of these saints, which were doubtless well known to the inhabitants of Gateshead, surrounded as it was by monkish foundations. In confirmation of this supposition your readers may be referred to a note in Mackey's "Lexicon of Freemasonry," Art.: "St. John of Jerusalem," p. 304.

ROMAN CATHOLIC EXCOMMUNICATIONS.

Can any brother give me a reference to the Bull of Benedict XIV., published May 18th, 1751, beginning "Providus Romanum Pontificum," in an English translation?

I shall also be much obliged by a reference to the published allocation of Pius the Ninth, the present Pope, in which he condemns the Masonic body.

PROVINCIAL GRAND MARK LODGE OF LINCOLN-SHIRE.

As announced in our impression of last week the Provincial Grand Mark Lodge of Lincolnshire, was held at Grimsby on the 30th ult. Preliminary to the proceedings of the day, the Prov. G. Mark Master, Bro. John Sutcliffe, entertained the brethren at breakfast at his residence. The first proceedings were the consecration of a new Mark Lodge, the Sutcliffe Lodge, which was performed in the Mechanics' Hall, by Bro. F. Binckes, the Rev. Dr. Ace delivering the oration, which specially dealt with the idea of "marks," which were used from the earliest times. At the conclusion of this ceremony the Provincial Grand Mark Lodge was formed, Bro. Sutcliffe presiding. After the appointment of the Grand Officers, the Grand Master exhorted the Mark Brethren to interest and exert themselves in the cause of charity. A banquet was afterwards partaken of at the Royal Hotel, and the toasts were honoured in due course. Among the brethren present at the meeting were Bros. F. Binckes, James Terry, Thos. Perkinson, W. H. Prince, Dr. Harris, Dr. Ace, Watkins, Bland, Kirk, Watson, Bates and Gough. The Grand Lodge was well attended, and for so young a province exhibited signs of the strongest vitality.

THE CONGRESS AT LAUSANNE.

We publish the following from the "Daily Telegraph" of Friday week:—

A spirited reply to the attacks of the Vatican has been drawn up by the Freemasons at Lausanne, in a document which attracts a considerable amount of attention here. It is exactly such a declaration of principles as might have been made by the English Grand Lodge, thus proving that the alleged wide divergence between English and Continental Masonry does not exist; if it is real, at any rate, it is not apparent in this enunciation of principles. Freemasonry, the Ultramontanes are told, is an acknowledgment of a creative principle under the name of the Great Architect of the Universe. It places no limits on the search after truth; and it guarantees and exacts toleration. In its workshops it prohibits political and religious discussion. It receives all, even the profane, whatever be their religion or political opinion, provided they are personally free and of good morals. Freemasonry is opposed to all intolerance. It is a school, the programme of which may be summed up thus: To obey the laws of one's country, live in conformity with the precepts of honour, love one's neighbours, work incessantly to promote the happiness of mankind, and prosecute its progressive and peaceful emancipation. "Freemasonry," the address continues, "lays down the principle that the Creator has given us liberty as the most precious of all blessings; liberty, the patrimony of the whole of mankind, a ray from above which no power has the right to diminish or suppress, and which is the source of all feelings of honour and dignity. From the preparation for the degree to the attainment of the highest step in Scotch Masonry, the first condition, without which nothing is granted to the claimant, is an unblemished reputation for honour and honesty. To these men, for whom religion is a supreme consolation, Masonry says: 'Practise your religion without let or hindrance; follow the dictates of your conscience.' Freemasonry is not a religion; it has no form or worship; therefore it wishes for the establishment of lay education, and its doctrine may be summed up in the beautiful tenet—Love thy neighbour. To those who dread, with so much reason, political dissensions, Freemasonry says: 'I banish all discussions from my meetings; be for thy country a faithful and devoted servant; thou hast no account to render us.' The love of country, moreover, accords with the practice of all virtues. Masonry has been charged with immorality! Our morality is the purest morality, the holiest morality! It is based on the first of all virtues—humanity. The "Convent" proceeds to declare that its own meeting was sufficient proof of the catholicity of its principles. Its members, unknown to each other and from widely different countries, had no sooner met than fraternal hands were clasped and there were the utmost harmony and concord. Such are the laws, such the principles, such the mysteries of Freemasonry. "Against it calumny and insults will be unavailing." It is said that the success of the gathering at Lausanne has been so great that similar assemblies will be attempted hereafter. The next meeting is to be held at Rome under the presidency of the King of Italy, or at London two years hence, with the Prince of Wales presiding.

The "Standard" of Thursday week, which publishes the same address, adds the following "morceau" from the French "Pays":

"In point of fact, Freemasonry is nothing but a vast secret society, which, in spite of its assertion, dabbles in politics—and very unwholesome politics too. . . . It is not easy to understand why the Government tolerates the existence of that old-fashioned association; perhaps it is because its accessories are too grotesque to be dangerous. . . . There are among the masses a certain number of imbeciles who actually believe in the humanitarian humbug of the society, &c."

OUR ROYAL GRAND MASTER.

A large and distinguished party have been staying at Sandringham Hall, Norfolk, previous to our Royal brother the Prince of Wales's departure for India; and on Sunday the Prince and Princess, with the Duke and Duchess of Edinburgh, the Duke and Duchess of Teck, Mr. Disraeli, Lord Colville, and other visitors, attended divine service in pretty little church in the park, when the Rev. Canon Birch preached in the morning, and was assisted in the service by the Rev. W. Lake Onslow, M.A., Chaplain to the Prince, and the Rev. E. M. Evans, M.A., of Waddesdon, Bucks. Canon Birch made allusion to the fact of the Prince's departure for India, and commended him to the thoughts and prayers of his relations and dependants, trusting that the whole nation would earnestly offer up their supplications for his safe return. Service was again held in the afternoon, the sermon being preached by the Rev. E. M. Evans from Eph. iv. 4, 5, 6.

Masonic and General Tidings.

We regret to learn that Bro. R. Wentworth Little, Secretary of the Royal Masonic Institution for Girls, has been confined to his room for the last ten days with a severe throat affliction. It is feared that it will yet be some days before he will be enabled to resume business.

At a quarterly and election court of the Needlemakers Company held on Thursday, Bro. J. C. Parkinson, J.P. was unanimously re-elected Master for the ensuing year, and Bro. Sir George Elliot, Bart., M.P., and Bro. Dr. Ramsay Wardens, and at the same court seven freemen were elected on and admitted to the livery.

It is understood that a testimonial is to be set on foot for presentation to Bro. Vine, the Lord Mayor's Secretary, on his retirement from the office he has so ably filled.

An emergency meeting of the Gresham Lodge, No. 860, will be held in the Banqueting Hall of Cheshunt Great House, Cheshunt Park, this day (Saturday), at 3 o'clock. A report of same will appear in our next.

Bro. Simeon Charles Hadley, Past Grand A.D.C., has been duly elected Alderman for the Ward of Castle Baynard.

The tender of Bro. T. Boyce for erecting a new building for the London School Board has been accepted. The cost exceeds £10,000.

At the Mutual Society's meeting, held on Tuesday last in the Freemason's Tavern, Great Queen-street, Mr. George Coulson James was seized with an epileptic fit, and died in less than five minutes. The deceased, who was a member of the legal profession, had just made a speech on the proceedings of the board.

Bro. the Rev. John Huyshe, P.G.C., Provincial Grand Master for Devon, will dedicate the New Masonic Hall, at Bideford on the 13th inst. The proceedings will commence at 12.30 precisely.

Bro. Ex-Sheriff Shaw, who is known as an able writer, is understood to have kept a diary of his official duties during his year of office. From this it is understood that some graphic sketches will see the light before the next Session of Parliament.

A Masonic Soirée and Conversazione in connection with the Dedication of the New Masonic Hall, will be held (by special dispensation from the Prov. Grand Master) at the Public Rooms, in Bridgeland, St. Bideford, Devon, on Wednesday next the 13th inst.

The Prince of Wales has appointed this day (Saturday), at three o'clock, for the reception of the address from the Corporation of London, preparatory to his departure for India.

A communication from Bro. Lord Carnarvon, Prov. G.M., to Governor Sir Henry Barkly, which appears in the Cape Town papers, points out that a construction has been placed upon some portion of the noble earl's recent dispatch with reference to the South African Confederation which a more careful perusal of the document would have shown to be contrary not only to its whole intention, but to the language actually used. His lordship, in the communication, then proceeds to indicate the mistakes which have arisen on the subject.

FASHIONABLE MARRIAGE.—The marriage of Viscount Castlereagh, eldest son of Bro. the Marquis of Londonderry, to Lady Theresa Talbot, eldest daughter of the Earl of Shrewsbury, Provincial Grand Master of Staffordshire was celebrated in the private chapel of Alton Towers, Staffordshire, on Saturday. In addition to a large party of distinguished friends of the families, over a thousand of the tenantry of the Staffordshire, Shropshire, and Cheshire estates availed themselves of the opportunity of showing their respect for the noble earl and his daughter. The bridegroom was attended by Lord Hemsley, and the bridesmaids were Ladies Gwendoline and Muriel Talbot, the bride's sisters, and Miss Chetwind. The ceremony was performed by the Archbishop of Armagh, assisted by the Dean of York, the Rev. the Hon. A. C. Talbot (great-uncle of the Bride), and the Rev. the Hon. W. Talbot. Luncheon was served to over a thousand persons in the Armoury. A magnificent wedding-cake was placed in the Talbot Gallery, which the bride duly cut, and shortly afterwards the newly-married couple left for Ingestre Hall, another of Lord Shrewsbury's Staffordshire seats, where they will spend a week, and then proceed to the bridegroom's seat in Kirby Hall, Yorkshire. The presents to the bride were very numerous.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT AND PILLS.—Giddiness, Headache, and Palsy. These first two symptoms are usually the forerunners of serious diseases, and if neglected, palsy, and apoplexy too, often follow. The instant giddiness, dimness of sight, or headache comes on, Holloway's Ointment should be freely rubbed into the nose and glands of the neck, at the same time that these Pills are being taken internally. The patient's safety depends on the assiduity with which the directions for use are carried out. Holloway's remedies repress these symptoms by drawing the blood from the head. Sufficient Pills should be taken to act briskly as a purgative. The diet must be regulated, self denial practised, and stimulants studiously shunned.—APVT.

The Freemason,

SATURDAY, OCT. 9, 1875.

OUR ROYAL GRAND MASTER'S VISIT TO INDIA.

There is "nothing new under the sun," we know, and we equally have to realize every now and then, that there is nothing reliable in the current news of the hour. The "Times" having given a most elaborate list of the daily movements of H.R.H. the Prince of Wales in India, and which appeared in the last "Freemason," turns round quietly to-day, and offers us the following laconic "Communiqué." "We are authorized to state that none of the programmes which have lately appeared regarding his Royal Highness the Prince of Wales's Indian tour are accurate in their details. In fact, beyond Calcutta, nothing is settled, except that His Royal Highness will go up country, probably as far as Jummoo, visiting the Camp of Exercise at Delhi, and some of the native capitals of Northern and Central India." This almost puts us in mind of a Delphic oracular announcement, but we have thought it well to lay it before our readers. We shall not fail to communicate ourselves from time to time all the official and reliable information we can obtain of the expedition, which has such interest for our great English people, and not the least for our Masonic confraternity. May all of health and happiness attend upon our Royal Grand Master in his most interesting and important journeys.

THE EXTENSION OF THE GIRLS' SCHOOL.

There is "a tide in the affairs of men," we are assured on great authority, and it seems that such a turn has taken place in the position and prospect of our Girls' School, that an extension of its educational good work is actually needed. Three plans so far are before us. The first comes from our worthy and well-known Bro. Joshua Nunn, and is very simple and straightforward. The following is his motion, to be submitted to the Quarterly Court:—"With a view to enable the Institution to accommodate a greater number of children, found necessary by the increase of applications (four-fifths of the applicants at the next election cannot be admitted for want of room), and the vastly extending growth of the Craft generally, with the circumstance that space cannot be obtained on the limited site of the present school, as it is so hemmed in by railway lines and buildings, and which at no distant period will be required (or partially so) for increased railway accommodation that year by year has extended since the school has been at Wandsworth. That, a sum not exceeding twenty-five thousand pounds (£25,000) be expended out of the funds of the Institution in the purchase of land, and the erection of a suitable school-house and buildings, to educate and support two hundred children, and to be so arranged that in the event of the existing school being removed, space be found for extending the same, so as to contain all the children under one roof." By this motion if carried, our brethren will see that £25,000 is to be spent on a new site and school for 200 children, in addition to the existing number of children, thus making, when the existing school is removed, the number of inmates 350. Whether 350 children can be accommodated with all the new requirements of educational establishments for £25,000, which sum is to include the purchase of the site, is, we think, prima facie a little questionable. But that is of course a matter of arrangement and detail. Bro. Joshua Nunn reckons on a large sum for the present school-house and land, when sold, but, as we understand, does not at present contemplate either the sale or the removal of the existing school buildings. Bro. J. A. Rucker proposes:—1st. "That in the opinion of this Committee it is advisable that arrangements be made for the admission of an increased number of children to the benefits of the institution;" and 2ndly, "That this Committee recommend that a Sub-Committee consisting of nine members, of whom not less than four shall be members of the House Committee, together with the Treasurer and Trustees of the Institution, be appointed, three to form a quorum, to consider and report to the General Court on the arrangements to be made for the admission of from thirty to fifty more children to the benefits of the Institution; that in case of need a Special General Court be summoned to receive such report, and that such report be read for information at any House Committee or General Committee that may meet between the completion of the report and the meeting of the (Quarterly or Special) General Court." The way in which Bro. Rucker proposes to give practical effect to these resolutions is, as we understand, to expend £10,000, and erect a preparatory school, from which the girls will be drafted in turn to the existing establishment, and both will be kept always full. Bro. Raynham Stewart proposes another plan, which is to utilize the existing infirmary, and to rent another house near, and to turn it into an infirmary with a proper establishment. No doubt Bro. R. Stewart's plan will give probably the most immediate help to our candidates, as he proposes to take in all approved candidates without ballot at once. But some subsidiary questions arise. What is the accommodation which the infirmary will give, at the most? And is it wise or safe to remove the infirmary to any material distance from the school? We understand that no ground can be obtained near the school for the purposes of extension, and therefore the new infirmary, if Bro. Raynham W. Stewart's motion be carried, must be at some distance from the school. Is this practicable or advisable? It seems that not long ago the girls were suffering severely from "umps," a very catching complaint, to the number of forty, and formerly there were from seventy to eighty cases of scarlet fever, and it therefore seems to be an imperative condition for the infirmary that it should be as near the school as can be, to escape the difficulty of removing cases of infection any considerable distance. Such are the three schemes before us. If some arrangements could be made by which in the meantime the approved candidates could be dealt with, we should say, that would be most satisfactory to the Craft, and whatever decision the Quarterly Court may come to, we would impress upon it, for the sake of some who, if not elected now, will be left poor orphans in the wide world, that that plan will be most gladly hailed by our entire brotherhood which will ensure the benefits and blessings of this invaluable institution to all present approved candidates. It is possible that were we now to increase the accommodation so as to educate 200 girls, a plan might be matured for an enlarged building on a convenient site, whether for 200 or 300 girls, and in the meantime 200 girls would be actually educating, a great fact and blessing. When a new site is obtained and the new building erected, the girls could all be moved there once for all, and the present buildings and site would be sold, which would recoup the House Committee for much of their expenditure. We are looking more to the immediate wants of the Order, and claims of our poor orphans, than anything else, and we think that while Bro. R. Stewart's plan will afford the most immediate benefits to all alike, Bro. Joshua Nunn's plan is the plan of the future. Of course the practicability and advisability of Bro. R. Stewart's plan rests on the possibility of renting a house near for the infirmary. We shall await with great interest the result of Saturday's meeting of the Quarterly Court.

THE LAUSANNE MASONIC CONGRESS.

We are glad to hear, on the authority of the "Times," that this meeting has been a great success. We predicated success for the movement, and we are happy to hear that for once our anticipatory views have been realised. But the telegram concluded with a statement that the next meeting is to be in London or Rome. We feel at once what intense difficulties surround the question of such a congress in London, as far as English Freemasonry is concerned, and as far as relates to our Grand Lodge; and if the "difficulty of the situation," to use a term of the day, be successfully surmounted, then comes on another, and still more difficult question, cui bono? In the first place, we must bear in mind that the congress at Lausanne has been a meeting of the "Rite Ecossais," which answers in England to the "Ancient and Accepted Rite." Our Grand Lodge knows nothing, and can know nothing by its enduring and unchanging Constitutions, of any grades beyond the R.A. It would be impossible for members of our Grand Lodge to meet together in another "Rite," of which they are utterly ignorant, and with which they have no concern. Even supposing a congress could meet as "Master Masons," it could do no possible good, and could not have the slightest possible influence on our Grand Lodge. Happily, in England we have no points to discuss, and no difficulties to arrange. We prefer our own peaceful, and religious, and loyal system of Freemasonry to any other, and we do not approve of any admixture of foreign views of Freemasonry in our purely indigenous and Anglo-Saxon teaching and practice. We cannot even understand what such a congress could do while in England, the topics even it could discuss, the end of its meeting. It is hopeless to suppose, that amid the confusion of various systems abroad we in England are to be expected in any way to alter or accommodate our old, and long tried, and most successful organisation, whether in its formulæ or its outward manifestations, in a vain idea of uniformity of system and ritual. That is, we know beforehand, an utter impossibility, a chimera of chimeras. Our English system is so simple, so sensible, so straightforward, and so reasonable, that it commends itself alike to our feelings, our tastes, and our affections, and we would not exchange it for any other system, or in any way sap or weaken its fundamental principles. We speak here as much for Freemasonry in Canada, India, and the United States, as for ourselves. We could not, for instance, weld it into any agreement, either with the Rite Ecossais, the Rite of Misraim, or any other foreign eclectic Rite, as we should, by so doing, lower its status of historical importance, and betray its position and prestige. But while we say this for ourselves, we have no doubt that the Rite Ecossais would be able to find a genial welcome and much of interest to themselves at Rome or elsewhere. Rome is full of attractions to the instructed Mason, and we cannot conceive a pleasanter fortnight than one spent amid its palaces, its churches, its galleries, and its ruins. While, then, we wish all success to any future congress at Rome or elsewhere, we have felt it our duty to point out, as far as Craft Masonry is concerned, its utter impracticability and unmeaningness as regards us and our Grand Lodge. It is true that there is an important body, both in England and Scotland, terming itself "The Ancient and Accepted Rite," and if so influential an organisation can see its way, in the interest of the High Grades, to hold such a gathering, by all means let it hold one. But we fancy that even it would find a difficulty. What is to become, for instance, of the "Priory of the Temple." As the French say, "sous tous les rapports," we feel persuaded that such a congress in London would be alike a waste of time and money, and would certainly not tend in any way to promote the cause of Freemasonry, but rather to excite many angry questions, and to arouse some burning controversies.

MASONIC JEWELS.

Some little question having been raised lately on this subject, we beg to point out to-day, the following as the law on the subject:—"No Honorary Jewel or emblem shall be worn in the Grand Lodge, or any subordinate lodge, which shall not appertain to or be consistent with those degrees which are recognized and acknowledged by and are under the control of the Grand Lodge as part of pure and ancient Masonry." The five-pointed star is in our opinion, clearly legal and admissible under this law. The square and compasses, old Masonic teaching used to say, belonged to the Grand Master, but his jewel, as decided by the Book of Constitutions, is "The compasses extended to 45°, with the segment of a circle at the points." The Deputy Grand Master wears the compasses and square united with a five-pointed star in the centre; the Past Deputy Grand Master, the compasses and square only; Provincial Grand Masters the compasses and square, with a five-pointed star in the centre. Such is the present law on the subject, and all brethren should confirm themselves to it, and avoid wearing any jewels in lodge which do not come within the clear definition of the Book of Constitutions. All Mark jewels and High Grade emblems are clearly illegal, and all W.M.'s should forbid any brethren to wear them, if members of the English Constitution.

MR. HORSLEY'S LETTER.

The Rev. Mr. Horsley, Vicar of St. Michael's, Shoreditch, has written a very friendly and able letter to us, which appeared in the last "Freemason." We commend it to the careful perusal of our readers, for it gives us this most important information, that the attack which has recently been made persistently by one weekly journal, professing to represent what are commonly called Ritualistic views, only represented, after all, the feelings of individuals, not of the section or body. Henceforth, therefore, we shall not assume that this school amongst us is hostile to Freemasonry; we shall always take care in future to point out, that such views, when expressed, are the views of individuals alone. There is this little excuse, we think, for our falling into the error to which Mr. Horsley fairly alludes, of mistaking a part for the whole, that for some time past the "Church Herald," from which we have often quoted, always distinctly declared, though it seems now without any authority, that it represented the Ritualistic, or as it called it, "The Catholic School." That some individual members of that school agree with its violent and unnecessary denunciations of our loyal and benevolent Order is unquestionable, and we are very sorry to see any English clergymen, professing to belong still to a very tolerant Church like the Reformed Church of England, following in the wake of Rome's insidious attacks, or violent incriminations. But as we quite agree with Mr. Horsley that it is wrong for us to mistake the utterances of an individual for those of a body, we at once withdraw the statement, that the Ritualistic School generally denounced Freemasonry, as we for ourselves never could see why they should, and only put it down, as the Romanist kindly does to us, to the score of "invincible ignorance." We are very much pleased to be able to make such an "amende honorable," and to receive the assurances of the Vicar of St. Michael's, Shoreditch. In the meantime, the "Church Herald" is defunct, and we will say patetically, "peace to its manes." Thus then we see that the atmosphere is cleared a little around us. We have a violent Roman Catholic attack upon us, a Reformed Presbyterian accusation, a Baptist denunciation, some Anglicans very wordy indeed, and "full of froth," like the writer in the Roman Catholic "Month," and a few fanatics of differing bodies! But Freemasonry really has no fear and little concern for such assailants or such assaults. It is moving on, despite anathema and allocution, despite sermon and sensational lecture, despite the decrees of synods, and the resolutions of Anti-Masonic meetings, despite Baptist and Bunkum of any kind, and we believe will continue to move on. That it is a most useful and benevolent Order, its charitable efforts tell to all around; that it is and may be a means of much good in this suffering world of ours, we also venture to assert against all gainsayers. Like all human institutions it may have defects here, and weaknesses there, but look at it as a whole, "take it" as they say often now-a-days "all round," there are few purely earthly societies which come near it, for its general usefulness and its particular value! At a time when men's minds are irritable, and ceaseless controversies and divisions abound, when contest wax hot, and sensible and religious men are struggling for "trifles light as air," as if they were a matter of death and life, Freemasonry is preaching a sermon of absolute toleration. It is boldly declaring, at a time when some are so excited as to lose often the balance of justice and fair play, that the worst use you can put a man to is to "burn" him, and that we and all must agree to differ, as we are not judges of one another's creeds, and to his "own Maker" each one of us stands or falls. Surely such a society is valuable, and deserves the support of all cultivated intellects and ingenious minds. We thank Mr. Horsley and his reverend brethren for their friendly and sympathetic opinions of our much maligned Order.

A PLEASURABLE INCIDENT.

We publish in another column two very interesting and pleasant letters. They speak volumes for the mutual regard and fraternal sympathy existing between the brethren of a distinguished province and their noble head. The letters themselves tell their own tale, and need no note or comment from us. We think that they do equal credit to the heads and hearts of our Staffordshire brethren, and to our distinguished brother the Earl of Shrewsbury. Our best wishes will accompany the youthful and charming bride, who, the daughter of a Freemason, has married a "Lewis," the eldest son of our kindhearted and popular brother, the Marquis of Londonderry.

Original Correspondence.

[We do not hold ourselves responsible for, or even as approving of the opinions expressed by our correspondents, but we wish, in a spirit of fair play to all, to permit—within certain necessary limits—free discussion.—Ed.]

ROMAN CATHOLIC INTOLERANCE, AND LIBER-ALITY OF THE ORTHODOX GREEK CHURCH.

To the Editor of the Freemason.

Dear Sir and Brother,—

By post I forward you a copy of "La Borsa" newspaper of 13th inst., containing an account of a presentation, or, rather, an address on vellum, which was made to the Venerable Patriarch of the Greek Orthodox Church on the occasion of his kindly burying a brother of ours, viz., a Mr. Figari, an Italian advocate of Cairo, whom the Roman Catholics refused to bury because he was a Freemason.

The translation is as follows:—

"The Evangelic charity of the Venerable Patriarch of the Greek Orthodox Church suggested the idea to several Masonic brethren to present him with the following address, which was signed in Egypt by a large number of Freemasons of every nationality.

"TO HIS SANCTITY THE PATRIARCH SOPRONIOS.

"The undersigned Freemasons resident in Egypt, conscious of the good action of your Holiness when the Roman Catholic clergy refused burial to their respected Brother Figari (advocate or barrister), come forward to express the sincere thanks and respect they owe to your Holiness. The burial of our worthy deceased brother, through the means of the Orthodox Church, which is governed in Egypt by your Holiness, caused all worthy Freemasons to feel the effects, because it is in accordance with their institution to teach all men of the world who are sons of One Great Father to be tolerant, following the dictates of Jesus Christ.

"In you, true follower of Christ, and of His moral principles, we have found the noble philanthropic sentiments which are inculcated in the Masonic doctrine, sentiments which you profess with courage worthy of a great minister faithful to the duties of his mission (who studies to imitate our Saviour, Jesus Christ), to unite the knot of fraternity of all nations, always avoiding religious or party feelings.

"The Freemasons of Egypt fervently hope long life may be spared your Holiness, and pray to God that you may be protected to the glory of your throne for the benefit of the suffering humanity, which are divided, and cruelly persecuted, by some who call themselves ministers of Christ, but are only obstacles of light and lovers of discord.

"Accept therefore, your Holiness, the reverence of the undersigned Freemasons, who will ever have imprinted on their memory and in their hearts the recollection of your action, which is gratifying to the Great Architect of the Universe.

(Here follow the signatures of about 300 brethren.)

"The committee appointed to present the above address to his Holiness consisted of the following brethren:—

"DEMETRIO MOSCONAS, W.M. Pythagoras;
"E. H. BINGHAM, P.M.;
"L. D. MARIA;
"W. H. WELDON, W.M. St. John's, 919;
"J. ALUM JONES, Barrister;
"HENRY JEVON, Secretary St. John's, 919;
"A. ZACCA;

who had the honour to be received by His Holiness on Sunday, September 12th, 1875, at ten a.m., when, in response to the address, he replied as follows:—

"Gentlemen,—

"I thank you for an honour which I do not merit, because I have only performed my sacred duty—Si praecepta mea servabitis manebitis indilectione mea, si diligitis me mandata mea servate. The Greek Orthodox Church observes and maintains the precepts of Christ, is ever ready to assist, by His ministers, all who call for her protection. His Holiness then spoke on the great virtues of the deceased advocate brother, Figari, who was greatly respected by all who knew him, and concluded with the hope that one day all the Christian churches might be joined together as one under the Holy Symbol of the Cross.

"The committee then took leave of his Holiness and retired."

I am, Sir and Brother, yours fraternally,

Sept. 25.

[We publish the above with great pleasure from our worthy brother, Henry Jevon. We have seen "La Borsa."]

HUDIBRAS.

To the Editor of the Freemason.

Dear Sir and Brother,—

I am a good deal amused by Bro. Bernard's dogmatical letter in your last impression. It seems a great pity, and to reflect little credit on our Masonic teaching, that hardly any one can write on the commonest subject without becoming personal. As the writer of the article, and the criminal quoter of the inculcated versicle, I venture to say, pace so learned a critic, that I happen to know my "Hudibras" as well as he knows it, it may be even better. But comparisons are "odorous." I used the verse as others have used it, better men than either of us, with no question or concern as to its correctness. I did not quote "Hudibras," at all, and so did no injustice to Butler's pleasant shade, but I used the words as a common saying to convey my meaning, which they did and do most appositely. For a long time every one who cares for such things has known that there was an error in the actual quotation itself, but as the popular proverb and popular version had great currency there seems to be but little use or value in being hypercritical. For myself, I can only say that the state of mind which the popular saying represents is not an uncommon one, and despite Bro. Bernard's learned disquisition, there is nothing absurd in the use of such words. Burke's concluding sentence may be reckoned equally "sublime and beautiful," but it looks here very like what the American called "greased lightning."

I am, Sir, your obedient servant,

THE WRITER OF THE ARTICLE.

ROYAL MASONIC INSTITUTION FOR GIRLS.

To the Editor of the Freemason.

Dear Sir and Brother,—

Permit me through the medium of your columns to call attention to the proposition to be brought before the Quarterly Court on Saturday next, the 9th inst., for building and extending the above institution.

The increasing demand for admittance of children and the want of more space and accommodation for the daughters of our indigent brethren call for prompt action, especially as the funds are in hand, now lying idle, and which cannot be used for better purposes than making such extension.

I am, Sir, yours fraternally,

A VICE-PRESIDENT.

MASONIC TOKENS.

To the Editor of the Freemason.

Dear Sir,—

Having seen a great deal of correspondence in your paper of late respecting the token commemorating the Installation of H.R.H. the Prince of Wales, I feel much pleasure in forwarding a description of the one in my possession, and which is the only one I have ever seen.

The circular inscription is "Prince of Wales, elected G.M. 24th November, 1790."

In the centre is a shield divided by a chevron, composed of the square and compasses, between three castles. The shield supports a globe, surmounted by a dove with folded wings. The side supporters are two beavers.

The riband bears the motto: "Amor. Honor. Et. Justitia."

On the obverse is the circular inscription: "Sit Lux. Et. Lux. Euit."

In the centre is a right angled triangle, and on the three sides are the words "Wisdom, Strength, and Beauty."

In the triangle is a Cupid pointing his right hand finger to the letter G, surmounted by the all-seeing Eye, from which rays of light are shedding downwards. The left hand supports a plumb rule.

At the base of the triangle is a Bible, mallet, trowel, square, and compasses.

The edge of the token bears the inscription, "Scotchley, Birmingham. Facit. Masonic Token."

It was presented to me in gratitude by a non-Mason in return for a trifling favour that I conferred on him.

I remain, Sir and Brother, yours fraternally,

SAML. DUTTON, Sen. Sec. and Tr. 650, P.P.G.P. Essex.

MASONIC CLOTHING.

To the Editor of the Freemason.

Dear Sir and Brother,—

Correctness in clothing and insignia is, I consider, as desirable as uniformity of ritual and similarity of ceremonial.

In the Constitutions of symbolical Masonry the regulations for the former are clear and distinct, but in those for the Order of H.R.A. there exists some ambiguity, or rather a lack of precision. This is especially the case with regard to the regalia of Present and Past Officers of Provincial Grand Chapters. Let any companion study those regulations carefully, and at the next country chapter he attends let him examine the clothing and insignia worn by the members, officers, and visitors, and judge how far those regulations have or have not, in his opinion, been carried out.

Answers by some competent companion to the following questions would be of much service, and assist materially in establishing that uniformity so much to be desired:—

1. Description of apron of Second and Third Principals and other officers of Provincial Grand Chapter?
2. Device of jewels worn by Second and Third Principals of Provincial Grand Chapter?
3. Authority for collars usually worn by Past Officers of Provincial Grand Chapters?
4. If jewels are worn by Second and Third Past Principals of Provincial Grand Chapters. If so, device?
5. If jewels are worn by other Past Officers of Provincial Grand Chapters?
6. Colour of ribbon by which medal of Past Officers of Provincial Grand Chapters is suspended?

Yours,

PROVINCIAL.

A CAUTION.

To the Editor of the Freemason.

Dear Sir and Brother,—

In August last a distressed brother applied for relief from this lodge. He stated that he belonged to a lodge at Quebec, that he had been master and owner (or part owner) of a small vessel, the wreck of which had left him penniless; that he had lost his certificate when his vessel went down, that he had been picked up and taken to Dover, and had received relief there from certain magistrates, and also from a lodge (as set forth in a paper certifying to his loss, and purporting to be signed by such magistrates, &c.), that on his way through London he had received relief at Freemason's Hall, and that he was then on his way to Bristol to seek employment as a mariner.

We relieved him, but should not have done so had we been in possession of information which subsequent enquiry has given us, and which is at the service of any brother interested.

Yours truly and fraternally,

WILLIAM NOTT,

P.M. and Sec. 663; P.P.G.R. Wilts.

Devizes, 4th October, 1875.

(COPY.)

Lapley, Penkridge, 24th Sept., 1875.

Dear Lord and Brother,—

At a meeting of the P.G. Chapter at Tamworth it was suggested that, in consideration of many acts of kindness received from your lordship as P.G. Master, especially in your valuable support of the Masonic charities, and the kindness shewn to the brethren on the occasion of the Installation of the Prince of Wales, that an article of jewellery should be presented to your daughter, Lady Theresa Talbot, on her marriage with Viscount Castlereagh, as a mark of respect from the Freemasons of the province. At a committee meeting held at Birmingham to-day we found it impossible to arrange for its presentation on the wedding day. Will your lordship please ask the Lady Theresa to kindly inform me if she will accept this testimonial, which might be presented at any time convenient to her ladyship when visiting at Allon or Ingestre after the marriage.

I can assure your lordship it is a great pleasure to me to make this communication.

Yours sincerely and fraternally,

GEORGE S. TUDOR, Grand Supt., Stafford.
The Earl of Shrewsbury, P.G.M. Stafford.

Ingestre, Stafford, Sept. 25th, 1875.

Dear Bro. Tudor,—

I hardly can find words to express the deep sense of the honour that I consider has been paid to me and to my family by the kind intimation by you of the wish of the Freemasons of the province to offer my daughter, Lady Theresa Talbot, a present on the occasion of her marriage with Viscount Castlereagh. I am requested by the young lady to express her most grateful thanks, and to say how deeply she feels the compliment paid to her, and how proud she will be of a gift given by the whole province.

For my own part, I must state whilst immensely gratified by the kindness of the brethren, I am not surprised at their action, as it is only a continuance of the brotherly feeling which has been always shewn to me, and which, I trust, I thoroughly reciprocate. I will add that the pleasure is greatly enhanced by your having been selected as the brother who should convey to me the expression of the brethren's wish.

Believe me, Dear Bro. Tudor, Yours very sincerely and fraternally,

SHREWSBURY, P.G.M. Stafford.

To Bro. Tudor, Grand Supt. P.G. Chapter, Staffordshire.

ROYAL MASONIC INSTITUTION FOR BOYS.

The General Committee of this institution met on Saturday last, at Freemasons' Hall, Bro. W. F. C. Moutrie in the chair. Very few brethren attended, but Bros. H. Browne, Jesse Turner, John Symonds, H. Massey, J. W. Dosell, S. Rosenthal, J. G. Chancellor, Hyde Pullen, Henry Dubosc, R. Spencer, and F. Binckes, Secretary, were present.

On the recommendation of the House Committee the brethren resolved to admit one lad (Brock) by purchase in January next. An additional vacancy in the school, caused by the death of one boy, was declared for the election of next Monday. Some petitions were received, and an outfit was granted to an ex-pupil. The Committee then adjourned.

RAILWAY ACCIDENTS.

A RAILWAY ACCIDENT to any particular person is a (theoretically) remote contingency; but as it may happen, as a matter of fact, the very next journey undertaken, and as the sum at which it will be seen the risk (in a pecuniary sense) may be extinguished FOR LIFE is almost absurdly small, it is not too much to say that the insurance is an OBVIOUS DUTY in the case of most travellers. £1000 if killed, with liberal allowances if injured, for a single payment of £3, covering the whole life. 100,000 ACRES OF THE FINEST FARMING LAND IN AMERICA FOR SALE.

IN LOTS TO SUIT PURCHASERS.

AT FROM £3 to £4 PER ACRE.

THE LAND is situated in SOUTH-WESTERN MINNESOTA, and is open, rolling prairie of unsurpassed fertility, and all ready for the plough. The climate is as healthy as any known, so much so as to have made the state a resort for invalids.

Very unusual opportunities are now presented for profitable farming and investment in this portion of the State.

Droughts, which are such a frequent cause of loss to farmers in the West, have never been known in this region. The country is interspersed with beautiful lakes, which abound in fish, and wild fowl a re plentiful. The land can be made to pay from £8 to £12 per acre, with certain crops recently introduced, or say a profit of from 100 to 200 per cent. on the total outlay, so that with £1000 capital, properly managed, from £1000 to £2000 per year can be realised, a proportionately for larger amounts of capital; as to which full particulars, giving details of the farming, &c., will be furnished to applicants but no one is advised to attempt the business with less than £500 capital.

Concerning the land, &c., applicants will be referred to His Excellency the Governor of the State, and to prominent Bankers, Merchants, and others in London, Liverpool, New York, Saint Paul, and elsewhere; and as to the profitability of farming there, to parties who have purchased land and are now working their farms.

METROPOLITAN.

EGYPTIAN LODGE (No. 27).—The Egyptian Lodge met for the first time after the holidays at its old quarters, Anderson's Hotel, when some sixty brethren assembled. Bro. S. B. Lambie, W.M., presided, supported by Bros. John Green, S.W.; H. G. Buss, P.M., Treas.; J. B. Poole, P.M., Sec.; J. Walker, S.D.; W. O. Paterson, J.D.; W. Richards, I.G.; T. J. Maidwell, D.C.; Charles Atkins, I.P.M.; and Past Masters C. B. Payne, F. Harrison, H. T. Hoare, John Coutts, D. H. Jacobs, W. H. Libbis, and T. Sheppard. The work performed comprised the raising of Bro. John Riches, and the initiation of Messrs. Richard Adolphus Howell, Benjamin Young, and Robert Maidwell. At the termination of this business the brethren adjourned to banquet, at which they honoured the long list of toasts recognised by lodges, and the W.M. and brethren wished His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales, M.W.G.M., a prosperous and happy journey to the East, with a speedy and safe return.

DOMATIC LODGE (No. 177).—The regular monthly meeting of this lodge was held on the 8th inst., at Anderson's Hotel, when Brother George Everett, the W.M. of the lodge, presided. Bros. George Everett, jun., (son of the W.M.), Gilbert, and Osborne, were passed to the Second Degree, and Messrs. Simmer, Jennings, Pierpoint, Pinhey, and Sherlock were initiated, the W.M. exhibiting much skill in the performance of these ceremonies. Brothers Thomas George Ell and John Kent were admitted as joining members of the lodge, and at the conclusion of the lodge work, the brethren, to the number of 104, sat down to banquet. The W.M., in proposing the first toast, said the toast of "Her Majesty" was always well received by all classes of her subjects, but more especially Freemasons, who prided themselves so much on their loyalty. Now that the Prince of Wales was about leaving us for so long a time, he trusted the Queen would emerge from the long seclusion, and appear more frequently in our midst. Such a proceeding on her part would be hailed with delight by all her people. In proposing "The Health of H.R.H. the Prince of Wales, Most Worshipful Grand Master of England," the W.M. said he was sure the toast would be received with more than ordinary interest on that occasion, it being just on the eve of his departure to India. This visit would necessitate his absence from his native land for upwards of six months, and, as our Grand Master, and the head of our noble institution, they naturally felt a deep interest in all his doings, as well as a certain amount of anxiety on his behalf. Since his advent to Freemasonry he had never failed to show his deep concern for the Craft, and they in return were bound to show the same feeling towards him. He trusted, and indeed he felt assured, that much good would result from this visit, and he was convinced the brethren round the table would all join with him in wishing His Royal Highness God speed on his journey and a safe return to his native land. The toast was received with much cheering. Bro. F. Kent, C.C., the I.P.M., in proposing "The Health of the W.M.," paid him a high compliment for the manner in which he was carrying out the duties of his office. He liked originality, and there was a good deal of that in their present Master. The toast was received with much heartiness. The W.M., in reply, thanked Bro. Kent and the brethren for the cordial manner in which they had received the toast. Although they met so numerous, the kind attention they paid to the chair, and the ready assistance they rendered him on all and every occasion, made his duties very pleasant and comparatively easy. The toast of "The Grand Officers" was ably responded to by Bros. Josh. Smith and Adams; that of "The P.M.'s" by Bro. F. Kent. The officers each in turn made most excellent replies to the toast of their health. Bros. Watts, Clark and several other brethren contributed by their excellent singing and reciting to the harmony of the evening, and a most splendid banquet was as usual ably superintended by the manager of the hotel, Bro. Smith.

LION AND LAMB LODGE (No. 192).—The first meeting of this well-known lodge for the Masonic season just commenced was held at the Cannon-street Hotel, on Thursday the 7th inst., under the presidency of Bro. Geo. Newman, W.M., supported by his officers, Bros. T. Cohu, S.W.; Charles Arkell, J.W.; J. G. Marsh, P.M. and Sec.; E. Jones, S.D.; H. Legge, J.D.; F. Fellowes, I.G., and W. T. Rickwood, D.C. The lodge having been duly opened, the following brethren were passed to the Second Degree—viz., Bros. E. C. Scholes and T. T. Hampton. The business in the agenda having been disposed of, a letter was read from Bro. J. Hordern Jukes, P.M. 120 and 892, P.P.G.W. Herefordshire, presenting to the lodge, through the hands of Bro. George Kenning, P.M., an Ancient Masonic Apron, together with the certificate of a brother named Jonathan Smith, who was initiated in this lodge in the year 1801, at a time when the lodge did not possess any distinctive name, but was known by the number, 258, and the sign of the house where it was held, viz., Northumberland Arms, Artillery Lane, London. The apron is in good preservation and most interesting as regards its antiquity, the three great attributes of our excellent institution, viz., "Faith, Hope, and Charity," being beautifully delineated on the kid, with the Bible and compasses, and other Masonic devices. The certificate is dated Nov., 1801, bears the signature of Bro. Robert Leslie, as G.S., and Edward Harper, D.G. Sec. It need scarcely be said that the presentation was received with great interest by the members present, and the thanks of the lodge were voted to Bro. Jukes for his great kindness in presenting to the lodge these ancient relics of the lodge in bygone days, and we are glad to hear that the lodge intend to confer on the said brother an honorary membership. We regret to note that since the last regular meeting the lodge has sustained a loss by death of two of its well-known and valued P.M.'s, viz., Bro. W. Goodyer, Treas., and Bro. F. Trott; and also two other of its members, well-known and much respected, Bro. Sidney Spencer and Bro. S. Muggeridge. This bereavement to some extent could not fail somewhat to cast a gloom over the pleasures of the evening. The lodge having been closed and adjourned in due form, the brethren banqueted in the large Pillar-room, at which the W.M. presided, when all the usual loyal Masonic toasts usually given on these occasions were most ably rendered; the visitors present, who were numerous, gave a most hearty response to the toasts, so heartily proposed by the W.M. The Tyler's toast, according to time-honoured custom, brought a most agreeable meeting to a close. Amongst the members present were Bros. Geo. Abbott, P.M.; Geo. Kenning, P.M.; E. Roberts, P.M.; E. King, P.M.; J. Mayo, T. Barker, W. R. Baker, R. E. Bright, S. Haynes, J. Curle, W. Smale, S. T. Lucas, G. T. Smith, S. Edwards, W. F. Poulton, E. C. Alfatt, W. Alfatt, B. Jenkins, T. Perrin, J. H. Fuller, Geo. Bartholomew, W. Elliott, T. Fisher, G. H. Gillam, W. Medwin, H. A. Pratt, C. J. Benson, W. Cotter, T. B. Charlesworth, Geo. Hall, A. G. Marks, Charles Cann, A. Lewis, Henry Davis, R. G. Dixon. Visitors—C. R. Smith, 87; J. Copstick, P.M. 809; H. Roberts, 45; W. Worrell, P.M. 766; H. B. Dunn, 28; T. H. Cox, 1445; H. Russell, T. B. Yeoman, 1460; E. Ledbury, 656; W. Chames, 1423; J. H. Webster, 1309; W. T. Farthing, P.M. 55; G. M. Felton, J. Morton, P.M. 1056.

HERVEY LODGE (No. 1260).—A meeting of this lodge was held on Wednesday evening, Oct. 12th, at the Freemasons' Hall, Great Queen-street, and was very fully attended. Bro. Jabez Hogg, P.G.D., W.M., presided, supported by his officers, as follows:—Bros. George Harrison, S.W.; Southwood, J.W.; Darby, Treas.; George King, jun., P.M., Sec.; H. Hollingsworth, S.D.; J. Sandilands Ward, J.D.; Goodacre, I.G.; and C. T. Speight, Tyler. Amongst the visitors were Bros. Cubitt, P.G. Purs.; J. G. Defries, 45 and 1278; Robert Grey, 259, Deputy Master to the Prince of Wales's Lodge; W. Morgan, 1358; Ballard, 511; Nuttall, West Kent Lodge; Atkins, I.P.M. 27; John Green, 27; H. Thompson, P.M. 177, 1158, and 1426, &c. The lodge was opened soon after four o'clock, when the minutes having been read and confirmed, the lodge was opened in the Second and Third Degrees, and Bro. Hall was most impressively raised to the Third Degree, the W. Master's interpretation of the ritual being in his usual excellent style. The lodge was then lowered to the Second Degree, and Bro. Foote was passed to the degree of a F.C. Two candidates offered themselves for initiation, they were Mr. Gifford Thomas Salmon and Mr. Adolphus L. Rosenthal, and the ballot being unanimous in their favour, they were admitted to the mysteries and privileges of ancient Freemasonry, the ritual being most ably rendered by the W. Master. At the conclusion of the ordinary business the W. Master said he rose with great pleasure to perform one of the most pleasing duties which could devolve upon the Master of the lodge, which was the presentation to the lodge of a portrait of Bro. Hervey, painted by Bro. Baron Tetterborn, of Liverpool-street, King's Cross, who was present that evening. It was a portrait of a most worthy brother, who was always ready to do a good action, and at the right time and in the right place. As their brother initiates might not be aware of it, he told them that it was a portrait of one of the most distinguished members of the Craft, a man whose virtues were so well known to the Craft that they needed no eulogium from him, and his only object was to place his good qualities in a strong light, but that was almost unnecessary to those who had the honour of his acquaintance. For this valuable present they were indebted to Bro. Southwood, their worthy Junior Warden, and the picture represented one of the brightest characters to be found in the Order of Freemasonry. He was not only known for his genial and amiable virtues, far and wide (and all who knew him estimated his character), but for the assistance he was ever ready to render to others. He (the W. Master) had seen him that day, and he was not sorry that he was not then present to hear what he said, for in his absence he could speak of him with greater freedom; and he said a more estimable man than Brother Hervey he never had met with in his life, for his equal temper, his great judgment, and his willingness to extend the hand of friendship to every brother who required his assistance. He had been for many years the Preceptor of the Lodge of Emulation, and at all times he was ready to assist with his advice and instruction the youngest member of the Order. He was known by all for the kindness of his heart, and therefore he need not detain the lodge with a detail of his good qualities, but he felt sure that he could not say enough of him, for any one who applied to him for his advice or assistance never applied in vain. It was with pleasure that they received this portrait, and the lodge had every reason to be glad that the Board of General Purposes had permitted them to have possession of that of so distinguished a member of the Emulation Lodge, and when younger members looked upon the lineaments of his kind and placid face, and read the inscription that was placed under it, he hoped that it would stimulate others to go and do likewise. He was proud that the duty of unveiling the splendid portrait of Bro. Hervey, painted by Bro. Baron Tetterborn, had fallen upon him. It was no slight honour and pleasure to receive it in that lodge, and the inscription at the foot of it would always keep them in mind that it was Bro. Southwood that they were indebted for it, and he was sure that it must always be a great pleasure to the brethren to have such a beautiful work of art displayed on their walls. The Worshipful Master then by a slight motion unveiled the portrait, and there was a spontaneous expression of opinion that Bro. Tetterborn had achieved one of his greatest triumphs of art, for he had not only secured the features but the exact expression of the worthy brother, and it was unanimously pronounced to be a work of fidelity, for which the artist was entitled to the highest praise. The inscription attached to the portrait was as follows:—"The W.V., Bro. John Hervey, Grand Secretary, &c., of the Grand Lodge of England. Presented to the Hervey Lodge, No. 1260, October 13th, 1875 by Bro. J. H. Southwood, Junior Warden." It may be worthy of remark that this first-rate work of art, with all its fidelity of details so splendidly executed, was produced from a small carte de visite, and during the many months that Bro. Tetterborn was engaged on that work he never once received a sitting from Bro. Hervey. The lodge was then closed in due form, and the brethren adjourned to Simpson's Hotel, in the Strand, for the banquet. At the conclusion the W.M. gave "The Queen and the Craft," which was heartily responded to. The W. Master said the next toast he had to give them was "His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales, the Most Worshipful Grand Master of Masons," and on the present occasion they wished him "God speed." Their hearts were with him on his journey, wishing that he might enjoy himself in India, and that he might speedily return in renewed vigour, and that for many years he might remain at the head of the Craft. On this occasion he thought they ought to couple with the toast the health of Her Royal Highness the Princess of Wales, who, as a loving wife, had accompanied him on a part of his journey. The toast was cordially responded to. The W. Master said the next toast he had to propose was "The Health of the Earl of Carnarvon, Pro Grand Master, Lord Skelmersdale, Deputy Grand Master, and the rest of the Grand Officers." On this occasion he had not much to say as to the Pro Grand Master, but he knew that he was most willing to occupy the position assigned to him, so that between the Pro Grand Master and the Deputy Grand Master nothing would be wanting in Grand Lodge when the Grand Master wished them to act in his place. They had present with them that night two Grand Officers, Bros. Grey and Cubitt. He had known Bro. Grey for many years, he did not like to say for how many years, as that might make Bro. Grey as old as himself, but he might say that he had known him from his initiation. Bro. Grey was then a very young man, full of energy, had filled every office. He (the W. Master) was struck with the energy he displayed in the Lodge of Emulation, for there he filled every office, worked the sections, and did everything that it was possible for him to do, and in due time he received his reward, as he wore the purple, and at the present time was Deputy Master to the Prince of Wales Lodge, and on that occasion they were called upon especially to do honour to Bro. Grey, for whom he had a sincere respect. As to Bro. Cubitt, he was well-known to all the members of the lodge, as he had filled the office of Grand Pursuivant, and he hoped the brethren would do honour to them that night. Bro. Grey, Deputy Master to the Prince of Wales's Lodge, said whilst he was in the robing room he heard one of the brethren tell one of the initiated that he was expected to make a speech ever so long, and, therefore, any speech on the part of the Grand Officers must necessarily be very short. The Worshipful Master had been pleased to speak kindly of him and of their early associations when they worked together, little thinking when they were side by side that they should wear the purple together. It was one of the greatest pleasures to him, as a Freemason, to visit that lodge, and see his old friend Dr. Hogg sitting in the chair. The W. Master then, in an eloquent speech, in which he dwelt upon the antiquity of the Order, and its great novel effects upon the happiness of mankind, proposed "The Health of the Initiates," which was duly responded to. Bro. Grey then said that the privilege had been given to him by special favour to propose a toast which had been intrusted to his hands, but which he regretted had not been confided to abler hands who would be able to do more justice to it, which was "The Health of the W. Master." He then proceeded to speak of him in complimentary terms, and said he could speak of his working in the lodge of Emulation, and the many acts of charity which daily and hourly characterised his Masonic life, and if he spoke of him for hours he could not exhaust the enumeration of his good qualities. He asked the brethren to drink the health of the W. Master, wishing him long life, health, and prosperity, and he congratulated the lodge in having such a Master to preside over them. The toast was enthusiastically responded to. The W.M. said he thanked Bro. Grey from his heart for the kind and brotherly way in which he had proposed his health, and the brethren for the very cordial way in which they had responded to it. As regarded his humble endeavours he should be happy to do his utmost to make that lodge one of the best in the Craft, and he hoped that he should then deserve all the praise that Bro. Grey had said of him. The W.M. then gave "The Visitors," for which Bro. Cubitt, P.G. Purs., returned thanks, and alluded to the excellent portrait of Bro. Hervey presented to the lodge, and said that when it should please the G.A.O.T.U. to remove in substance Brother Hervey, they would have a correct resemblance of the original left to them. As the visitors had been so kindly received it would be a great inducement to them to come again. The next toast was "The Press," for which Bros. Thompson, P.M. 177, and 1158, and 1426, and Morgan, returned thanks. The W. Master gave "The Health of Bro. Baron Tetterborn, the painter of the portrait of Bro. Hervey," for which that brother returned thanks, stating that he never had a sitting from Bro. Hervey, and had produced the picture from a carte de visite, and although he had been a Mason for 20 years he had never painted a portrait of a Freemason before. He thanked them sincerely for the honour they had conferred upon him. The Past Masters of the lodge were given for which Bro. Hyde Pullen responded, congratulating the lodge that the seed he had sown some years ago had produced such abundant fruit. Some other toasts were given, and the evening was spent in the most harmonious manner, and in the true spirit of Masonry.

ST. CLEMENT DANES LODGE (No. 1351).—At the installation meeting of this lodge on the 7th inst., at Bro. Carr's, King's Head, Strand, Bro. D. Betts, W.M. presided, and having initiated four gentlemen into the Order, and performed other Masonic work, installed Bro. Stewart as Master of the lodge. The brethren appointed to assist the new W.M. were Bros. C. Livett, S.W.; Wilson, J.W.; Parker, P.M.; Treas.; W. Hilton, P.M.; Sec.; H. Porter, S.D.; Wigg, J.D.; Butler, I.G.; Perryman, D.C.; Barnes, Org.; and Gilbert, Tyler. Bro. Dr. Archer Farre, of the Waterloo-road, was elected a joining member of the lodge, and the brethren afterwards celebrated the installation of the W.M. at a banquet. Bros. Joseph Smith and W. Ough, P.G.P., responded to "The Grand Officers" toast, and Bro. Betts, I.P.M., proposed "The W.M." In doing so he said he wished him every happiness which he himself had had during his past year of office. If the W.M. could have the same happiness when he surrendered his emblem of power to his successor he would feel the same gratification as he (Bro. Betts) then felt. There were many things required to make love and harmony in a lodge. The W.M. might sometimes do all he could, but if the brethren did not show their anxiety to do the same, all his efforts were of no avail. He (Bro. Betts) had had nothing of that kind to complain of, and he had had the pleasure of installing in the chair that evening a brother who would endeavour to win the hearts of the brethren, and at the same time shed lustre on his office and on Freemasonry. Speaking not for himself only, but for every brother around the table who had not the privilege of an intimate acquaintance with the W.M., he could say he was a brother to be respected. He had had a long and close knowledge of him, and had found that not only was he an excellent Mason, but a good and true man. He could honestly call him his "dear old friend of many years." He would not enlarge on his private virtues, because the brethren knew them as well as he, but he might say that in whatever position of life he was placed he had shown that he was aware of the duties that therein devolved upon him, and performed those duties as a true Christian and good man. His pocket (thank God! he had an ample pocket) was always open to the relief of the poorer brethren he came in contact with, and his heart was as large as his pocket. The brethren had seen how he had that night presided over the lodge, and it was unnecessary to say any more about him. He could only wish him all the prosperity and happiness he could wish himself, and he (Bro. Betts) wished that when the W.M. laid down his gavel he would have health given him, prosperity and happiness, all the blessings of life. The brethren had elected him as their W.M., and they could not give him a higher certificate than that. The W.M., in reply, said that he must thank the brethren very much for their kindness, and Bro. Betts for the very flattering way in which he had spoken of him. Indeed, Bro. Betts had said a great deal about him that he scarcely knew of himself. Perhaps it was as well for men or brethren passing through life that they should not know all about themselves, but let others find it out. That appeared to have been the case with Bro. Betts, who had found out a great deal more about the W.M. than the W.M. knew. He (the W.M.) did not care what he found out about him providing it was creditable to Freemasonry, and that he had done his duty in the station of life to which it had pleased God to call him. What Bro. Betts had said of him he had said from the kindness of his heart, the genuineness of his disposition, and his very strong friendship for the W.M. But to the brethren he would also return his best thanks for the heartiness with which they had received what Bro. Betts had said. Two years ago he (the W.M.) had not the slightest idea of going into the chair. His health was then in such a state that he thought it his duty to send in his resignation as a member of the lodge. Owing, however, to Bro. Betts and the P.M., his resignation was not accepted, and he (the W.M.) felt now deeply indebted to the brethren that his resignation was not received. His health after that improved, and after a few months he was able to resume his position in Freemasonry, and join his brethren with that love and harmony which had characterised them since the formation of the lodge. Having been placed in the chair by the brethren's suffrages and good will, he promised that he would do his very best for the Craft for the promotion of the brethren's comfort and happiness, and for the advancement of the lodge. After the toast of "The Visitors" had been drunk and responded to, the W.M. gave "The P.M.'s," and after passing a high compliment on all the P.M.'s for the energy they had shown in advancing the best interests of the lodge, said he was more concerned then with the I.P.M., Bro. Betts. They were all very proud of him. Bear in mind he was a son of their own. He was born in the St. Clement Danes Lodge; he was christened there, vaccinated there, educated there, he arrived at maturity there, and they all knew the rapid progress he had made in the science of Freemasonry since he had attained his majority. In four short years he had passed through all the offices of the lodge, and had occupied the W.M. chair. He had attained to the third chair in Royal Arch Masonry: he had become a member of the Board of General Purposes; and he had crowned all by installing that night, in a way never to be excelled, the W.M. All honour to Bro. Betts for his proficiency, and for the eminence to which he had attained. He (the W.M.) had been asking himself since sitting there what had been the mainspring of action and the moving cause which had urged Bro. Betts in the noble Craft, and he had come to the conclusion that it was first of all his love for Freemasonry. He believed Bro. Betts loved Freemasonry for its own excellence, that he loved its principles, and felt that he was under some slight obligation to the Craft for being placed in his present position. When he first took office in that lodge Bro. Betts pledged his honour as a man and his fidelity as a Mason that he would render himself efficient for the various offices that he would have to sustain. He (the W.M.) would appeal to the brethren now to testify how ably he had discharged his obligation. That he had performed his duties in a way well pleasing and acceptable to all of them they had admitted in a more substantial way than by merely expressing it in so many words. On the last occasion they voted him a jewel, which he (the W.M.) held in his hand, and which, with their permission, he would now present. To Bro. Betts: In the name of this lodge, I attach this jewel to your breast, not only as the expression of their kindly feelings towards you, but as a mark of merit and approbation for the very able and efficient manner in which you have discharged the duties of your office. I am sure you will wear it with pleasure and with profit. May you long continue to do so; may you live many years to come in and out amongst us as a P.M. of this lodge, to cheer us by your smile, and aid us by your counsels; and when by the inscrutable wisdom of the G.A.O.T.U. you are removed from this sublunary abode, may you ascend to the Grand Lodge above where the world's G.A. lives and reigns for ever." Bro. Betts said, although no tongue could adequately express his feelings, he would be quite unworthy of the kind expressions which had fallen from the W.M., if he did not thank him for his kindness, and the brethren also for the way in which they had received it. The W.M. of a lodge might do whatever he pleased to promote the interests of the lodge, but he would be a very sorry figure indeed if he was not well supported. He had endeavoured to do his best for the lodge, which he had found united in the closest bonds of friendship, and this had aided him a great deal. For the glittering jewel just placed on his breast he thanked the brethren very much indeed, and he was very proud of it, as testifying to the brethren's opinion of the way he had performed the office of W.M. But there was that which they had given him which could not be bought, and which he could not thank them sufficiently for, which was the cordial friendship and kind assistance they had always shown him. More than this; he had initiated many brethren into the Craft, and eight of them had given him £5 5s. each when he was Steward for the Boys' School. He did feel proud of his lodge, and he would say there were very few lodges in the kingdom of which the W.M. could say he had been so well supported. He would always feel affection for the lodge. In that lodge he was initiated; in it he had initiated his son; the eldest son of his dearest sister; and he hoped they would love it as much as he did. The other toasts were given, and the brethren shortly afterwards separated. Among the brethren present were Bros. Duncan Harrison, Butler, Porter, Hilton, Hamilton, Parkes, W. Hall, J. Child, J. K. Metherell, and J. Mott. Bros. Harwood and Blamey were the principal musical brethren of the evening, and they contributed some charming glees, &c., to the general enjoyment. Bro. Barnes was Organist.

KENNINGTON LODGE (No. 1381).—An exceedingly strong muster of the members of this lodge took place at the Surrey Club House, Kennington Oval, on the 5th inst. There were present Bros. Gardner, W.M.; Everett, W.M. (Domestic), S.W.; Koch, P.M., acting J.W., in the place of Bro. Harry Painter, deceased; Drysdale, P.M., acting I.P.M.; Page, P.M., &c., Treas.; Higgins, acting S.D.; Walls, acting J.D.; Webb, I.G.; Mann, P.M., acting Sec.; Kohler, A.W.S. The minutes of the last lodge and emergency meetings having been read and confirmed, the W.M., assisted by P.M. Drysdale and his officers, raised Bro. Rogers, passed Bro. Stranger, and initiated Mr. J. W. Brooke. Mr. R. Whinham was balloted for, and Bro. F. Trotman (742) admitted as a joining member. A sum of £5 5s. was voted to Bro. Stuart, P.M., Sec., and a vote of condolence passed to the widow of Bro.

Painter, J. W. Bro. Page, P.M., having informed the lodge that Bro. Pope, P.M., had presented the lodge with two ceremonial chairs and "firing" glasses, a vote of thanks was passed to Bro. Pope, and ordered to be entered on the minutes. Bro. Mann gave notice of motion that the entrance fee should be increased from six to eight guineas. Several minor matters having been transacted, the lodge was closed in ancient form, and the brethren adjourned to an excellent banquet, most elegantly served by the new caterer to the lodge, Bro. Trotman. Upon the removal of the cloth the W.M. gave the toast "The Queen and Craft and H.R.H. the Prince of Wales, M.W.G.M." He alluded to the departure of the latter for India on the 11th instant, and hoped that both the Prince and the inhabitants of the great Indian empire would be greatly benefitted by the visit, and concluded by wishing H.R.H. "God speed" and a safe return. The other toasts followed in quick succession. Bro. Koch, P.M., proposed "The Health of the W.M.," and Bro. Gardner briefly replied. The health of Bro. Brooke, the initiate, having been given, that brother made a most appropriate reply. Bros. Whitley, P.M. (Strawberry Hill), and Palmer, S.D. Domestic acknowledged the health of the visitors, and expressed the gratification a visit to the Kennington Lodge always afforded them. The toast of the Past Masters was responded to by Bros. Koch, Page, Mann, Drysdale, and Pope. Bro. Walls having contributed a ballad, the W.M. proposed, in most complimentary terms, "The Health of the Minor Officers of the Lodge," and in particular congratulated the lodge upon having so good a S.W. as Bro. Everett, who, as W.M. of the Domestic, was "gaining golden opinions from every one." This toast was acknowledged by Bros. Everett, Reeves, and Walls, on behalf of the other officers, absent and present. Bro. Longstaffe, the Tyler, having discharged his duty, the lodge shortly afterwards separated until the 1st Tuesday in November.

THE GREAT CITY LODGE (No. 1426).—The installation meeting of the Great City Lodge was held on Saturday evening, Oct. 9, at the Terminus Hotel, Cannon-street, and was most numerous attended by members and visitors; but with a view of lightening the work for this day an emergency meeting was held on the previous Saturday, when Bros. Durrant, Rowe, Lisle, Lord, and Goodman were raised to the Third Degree; Bros. Skinner, Hartley, Lockett, and Clark, were passed; and the following were initiated:—Mr. William Edward Thompson, Mr. John Wynne, Mr. Emanuel Horace Cadot, and Mr. Henry John Bertram. Mr. William Edward Thompson was, by permission of the W.M., initiated by his father, Bro. Henry Thompson, P.M. 177 and 1151, and who is a member of this lodge. The lodge was opened at three o'clock, Bro. Nathan Bryant Headon, W.M., presiding; Bro. J. H. Townend (W.M. elect), S.W.; and Bro. Seax, J.W.; and all the subordinate officers were present. There was a large body of visitors present, and some of them came from very distant places. The first business was to initiate Mr. Everett into the mysteries of Freemasonry, which was performed in the W.M.'s usual careful manner, and at its conclusion Bro. James Hamilton Townend, P.M. (W.M. elect), was presented to receive the benefit of installation. Although this was attempted by Bro. Headon for the first time, he installed his successor into the chair in a manner which elicited the highest commendations. After receiving the usual congratulations and salutes, the new W.M. appointed his officers as follows:—Seax, S.W.; Staneray, J.W.; Bleckie, S.D.; Catchpole, J.D.; Preston, I.G.; Freeman, Treas.; Moody, Sec.; Hamer, D.C. Hook, Org.; Jenkins, Assistant Org.; C. Taylor, S.S.; Kibble, J.S.; and Steedman, Tyler. Bro. Headon then delivered the usual addresses, and at the close he was greeted with loud cheering. The report of the Auditors of the accounts for the past year was received and adopted. The Rev. R. J. Simpson, P.G. Chap., said before the lodge was closed he wished to call their attention to a subject which was well worthy of their consideration, and that was the way in which Bro. Headon had discharged his duties, not only in the past year, but from the very commencement of the lodge. He need not tell them, as they were all well aware of the great gratification with which he had met them on every occasion, and from his gentlemanly manners and examples he had won the good opinion of all, not only as their Worshipful Master, but as a man. Their feelings, however, were expanded when they found their Worshipful Master so punctual in his attendance, and by his beautiful interpretation of their ritual he had added the greatest dignity to the ceremonies performed in the lodge. He was not merely a technical expositor of Freemasonry, but by the gentlemanly, moral, and dignified conduct he had displayed the lodge had attained a most distinguished position, for while those high qualities had been observed, at the same time he had carried out the traditions of their Order in spirit and to the letter. In the case of the worthy brother who had just retired from the chair, his one great idea was the prosperity and welfare of the Great City Lodge, for from him it first originated. It was true that this was done in conjunction with Bro. Moody, their worthy Secretary, and other brethren who were the founders of the lodge, but they were about to pay honour to the one from whom originated the great idea which had been so admirably carried out, and which it had pleased the Great Architect of the Universe to permit them to see. The brethren, therefore, took that opportunity of testifying to his zeal in the work by asking the acceptance by Bro. Headon of a graceful tribute of esteem for him as the first originator of the lodge, and for the dignified and kind manner in which he had carried out the duties in the past year. He was sure that if he spoke for half an hour he could not express the silent feelings which played round their hearts, but he might say, at the same time, that his modesty was equal to his good qualities. He presented him with that watch as a token of their affection and regard, but he would carry with him, both in his private and public life, that which was dearer than gold, and that was the unbounded esteem of his brother Masons. He hoped and trusted that he would enjoy good health and all other blessings, but when it should please the Great Architect of the Universe that he shall be called away from this sublunary lodge he trusted these presents would be an earnest of the higher prizes which were to be obtained in the Grand Lodge above. He then asked Bro. Moody to read the address in conjunction with the present of the watch he then handed to him. Bro. Moody, the Secretary, then read the address, which was splendidly illuminated and handsomely framed and glazed. It was as follows:—"Ancient Free and Accepted Masons of England. Great City Lodge, No. 1426. To Bro. Nathan Bryant Headon, P.M., member of the Board of General Purposes. Dear Sir and Brother,—The members of the Great City Lodge being desirous of showing their high appreciation of your eminent services as the originator and one of the founders of the lodge, have much pleasure in presenting you with this address, and the gold watch, value 50 guineas, which accompanies it. They desire specially to record the fact that it was entirely owing to your persevering energy that the Most Worshipful Grand Master ultimately granted the warrant for the formation of the lodge, and they also take the opportunity of bearing testimony to your intelligent interpretation of the ritual of Freemasonry." Then follow the signatures. Bro. Headon, who was evidently taken by surprise at this presentation, remained silent for some moments, and appeared quite overcome by the warmth of the sentiments expressed towards him, at length said—Worshipful Master and brethren,—I really do not know how to express myself to you; I can only say I thank you. The fact of this presentation was ordered to be recorded on the minutes, and after some other matters had been disposed of the lodge was closed, and the brethren adjourned to the dining-hall for refreshment, where a splendid banquet was served, under the superintendence of Bro. Lord, the manager of the Terminus Hotel. The cloth having been drawn, grace was sung by Messrs. Bernard, Daniels, Morgan, and Bamford. The W. Master then said that amongst all the talents with which the G.A.O.T.U. had blessed him there was one that he was not possessed of, and that was speechmaking. He should, therefore, not worry himself or bore the ears of the brethren by attempting to make a speech, but get over the business as quick as he could, so that they might all get home in good time if they chose to do so. In a few pithy sentences he gave "The Queen and the Craft," which was drunk with great heartiness, and followed by the National Anthem, Mr. Bernard taking the solo parts, and Bro. W. H. Hook, the Organist, presiding at the pianoforte. The W. Master said the next toast was "The Most Worshipful Grand Master, His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales." In one of the charges delivered to Masons they were told that "monarchs themselves have been promoters of the arts, and have thought it not derogatory from their dignity to exchange the sceptre for the trowel, have patronised our mysteries, and even joined in our assemblies," and although they often had a prince of the blood as a member of the Craft, yet they now once more had as the head of their Order the Prince of Wales, heir apparent to the throne, who by his social and genial qualities had endeared himself to all, and particularly to Freemasons, and those who had witnessed his installation at the Albert Hall would never forget the ability with which he presided and the able manner in which he appointed his officers of Grand Lodge on that occasion. Most sincerely did he (the Worshipful Master) hope that it would be a considerable time before he would be called upon to ascend the Throne of England, and sorry indeed should he be if anything were to happen to Her Majesty; but when it should please the Great Architect of the Universe to call her away, he felt sure that the Prince of Wales would give satisfaction to all classes of the people, as he had hitherto done to the Craft. The toast was enthusiastically responded to, followed by the song of "God bless the Prince of Wales," but with a new verse, written and sung for the first time by Bro. Hook, the Organist of the lodge:—

"O'er sea and land we follow,
With heartfelt joy, to own
Our Royal Prince, and trust that he May journey safely home.
Our Worshipful Grand Master,
Each brother's voice now hails,
With hearty wishes good, and prays,
God bless the Prince of Wales."

This new verse of the national song was highly applauded. In proposing the next toast, "The Right Worshipful Pro Grand Master, the Earl of Carnarvon, K.G.," the W. Master said it was well understood, when the Prince of Wales undertook the office of Grand Master, that, in consequence of the numerous duties devolving upon him, he could not at all times attend the Grand Lodge, and therefore a Pro Grand Master was appointed, the Earl of Carnarvon, who had himself done good suit and service to the Craft. As the Royal Prince was now about to visit foreign parts his place would be supplied by the Earl of Carnarvon, and he had no doubt that he would well fulfil all the duties the Craft required of him. The toast was cordially received. The next toast on the list was "The Right Hon. Lord Skelmersdale, Deputy Grand Master, and the rest of the Grand Officers, Past and Present." Bro. R. J. Simpson, Past Grand Chaplain, in responding, thanked the brethren, on behalf of Lord Skelmersdale, for drinking this constitutional toast, and after a few other observations he alluded to the position of The Great City Lodge. To use a common expression, the lodge's heart was in the right place, and he said that it was not often that the man who originated an idea had the honour of carrying it out, and he gave as an illustration of his argument that the first lifeboat was the idea of a poor man of Shields, who afterwards died in the workhouse, while others came after him and carried it out. He had visited Ireland lately, he had been to Dublin, Limerick, and other places, and he there found Freemasonry greatly on the increase, but they had regard to quality and not to quantity. They were cautious there, and so they ought to be. Still, he spoke of Masonry as having a great mission in the world. They should show that its principles were to uphold truth and morality in the government, in the Church, and in the body politic throughout the world. It was its mission to help to build up the social fabric and make man what he ought to be, and worthy to enter a mansion beyond the skies. Brother Headon, I.P.M., said in the usual way it devolved upon him to propose the next toast, which was "The Health of the W. Master," but as he should have frequent opportunities of speaking in regard to him, and as one of his oldest friends was present—he meant Sir John Bennett—he was going to ask him to put the toast before the brethren, for at the next meeting they might not have the opportunity of having Sir John present amongst them. Brother Sir John Bennett said he really rose with some trepidation, as he was a little out of order, and especially as he had to follow a distinguished orator like their Chaplain, Brother Simpson, but an Irishman was expected to be an orator. That night he might say it was no little pleasure to him to find one of his oldest friends installed as W. Master of The Great City Lodge. He had known him from his cradle, and had seen him in and out for the last 30 years, and as he was now at the head of such a distinguished body as the Great City Lodge, it was a great honour for him to be present on such an occasion. He knew their W. Master was fond of a joke when it came in the right place, but he could also be serious in a right cause, and he knew that he was willing to undertake all the responsibilities of his office. Now he (Sir John Bennett) was never one who could treat in a light spirit the great objects of Freemasonry, as he knew from its antiquity that it had played no insignificant or unimportant part in the history of the world. He had thought over the history of mankind for the last 3000 years, and although in Rome there were bright days, yet in the darkest hour of the darkest ages, when the privileges of freedom were at their lowest ebb, the little lamp of Freemasonry preserved the light and spirit of freedom, and it is now scarcely known for how much of what they now enjoy mankind is indebted to Freemasonry. They had the benefit of what had been done by Masonry, and men had carried it forward like a string of beads from generation to generation, and so it had come down to them in the present day. It had preserved a great principle, and his old friend, who then sat in the chair, was one of a line of men whose influence was so great and so potent in the great object of promoting the welfare of their fellow creatures. The past was but an earnest of the future, and within the walls of the Craft they would send out worthy successors to make their fellow men more happy and more useful members of society. Brother R. J. Simpson denied the soft impeachment of Sir John Bennett as to his being an Irishman, as his father was born in Canada, and he had only been a temporary sojourner in that country. He was therefore indebted to Sir John Bennett, only for the country he had assigned him. The W. Master said he thanked Sir John Bennett very heartily for the very complimentary manner in which he had spoken of him, but he thought his friendship had blinded him to his faults, and he had only put the bright side before them. He might say that he always made it a principle never to undertake to do anything but to do it to the best of his ability, and he might also say that some twelve months ago, when there was a probability of his being elected as W. Master, there was a war of elements in his mind whether he should go on or not, but there predominated an amount of ambition in the prospect that he should obtain the chair of the Great City Lodge, and he had looked forward to it with pride. As the ritual to which he was accustomed was different to that used in that lodge, and they did not work in the manner he was used to, he should have some difficulty in unlearning what he had already learnt, and if any little discrepancy should now and then occur he hoped they would pardon him. He trusted that when his year of office had expired he should go out of the chair with the same esteem and respect they had given to his esteemed predecessor, Bro. Headon. The W. Master, in giving the next toast, "The Immediate Past Master and Installing Master, Bro. N. B. Headon," said the manner in which he had worked the ceremonies and interpreted the ritual during his year of office had been an admirable one, and had elicited encomiums from all classes and visitors, and he had endeared himself to all by his kindly disposition and the assistance he was at all times willing to render. He was the first to put his hand into his pocket, and as to his charity, he had proved himself to be a man and a true brother. He had received a substantial mark of esteem in the lodge, as a token of their appreciation of the admirable manner in which he had worked the ceremonies, and although others might be equal, they could not be superior. He was sorry that he had gone out of office, for he had always listened to his working with pleasure. He had much gratification in placing the jewel voted by the brethren on his breast, and he hoped for many years he might wear it, and he might say that if ever a brother deserved a Past Master's jewel, that was Bro. Headon. Bro. Headon, P.M., said their kindness had quite overpowered him. He had never risen before in The Great City Lodge but with pleasure; that night it was with pain, for after what had been done in the lodge their kindness that night had quite overpowered him. He was prepared to receive the Past Master's jewel, but not such a mark of esteem as he had received in the lodge, and as long as he was connected with it he would do anything and everything in his power to promote its interests. Some other toasts were given, and the evening was spent in complete harmony. The musical arrangements were under the direction of Bro. W. H. Hook, the Organist, assisted by Messrs. Bernard, Daniels, Morgan, and Bamford, and gave the highest satisfaction. As an earnest of the W.M.'s promise at the commencement of the evening, the business was brought to a close, and the Tyler's toast was given, before ten o'clock.

PROVINCIAL.

CHESHUNT.—GRESHAM LODGE (No. 869).—An emergency meeting of this lodge was held at Cheshunt, Herts, on Saturday last, W. Bro. A. C. Wylie, P.P.G.S.B., W.M., in the chair, assisted by Bros. John E. Grocott, S.W.; W. H. Etherington, J.W.; the Rev. Charles E. Mayo, M.A., Chaplain and P.G. Chaplain; F. D. R. Copestick, P.M., P.P.G.S.B., Treas.; Walter E. Gompertz, P.M., P.P.G.P. Secretary; E. G. Pottle, S.D.; T. C. Chapman, J.D.; Thomas Stephens, I.G.; C. B. Cheese, S.; G. Gilchrist, Tyler. The visitors were Bros. William Bradstock, King Harold (1327); J. K. Young, P.M. (1327); Charles Cuthbertson, Egyptian (27), and Bro. Massey ("Freemason"). To the large section of Freemasons who desire to see all purely Masonic ceremonies performed in private rooms the removal of this lodge from the Swan at Waltham Cross to the Banqueting Hall of Cheshunt Great House will be hailed as a step in the right direction. And, indeed, by all it must be acknowledged that it is very seldom, if ever that a lodge has had the good fortune to secure such a home as has fallen to the lot of the Gresham Lodge. Saturday was the first occasion of their assembling at Cheshunt Park, and we never remember to have witnessed the impressive Masonic ceremonies performed with greater effect than in the atmosphere of olden time which seemed to pervade the place. For the information of those of our readers who unacquainted with this relic of antiquity, we may say that it is supposed to have been erected in the time of Henry VI., and was parcel of the revenue of John Walsh of Cheshunt, who devised it to Sir John Moore, father of the celebrated Lord Chancellor Moore. The greater portion of the original structure has been pulled down; the portion that remains consisting of a large hall and apartments to the north, with a vaulted crypt beneath, formerly used as a chapel, and is said to have been paved with embossed tiles. This house was one of the residences of Cardinal Wolsey; and it is by the kindness of Bro. Mayo, himself a lineal descendant of that great man, that the Gresham Lodge has acquired such an unique lodge-room as the Banqueting Hall makes. It is thirty-seven feet long by twenty-two wide, and thirty-six high; it has an arched gothic roof supported by ribs of oak or chesnut, with wainscoted sides, and floored with a tessellated pavement of black and white marble. Around this grand old room hangs a valuable collection of family and historical portraits, with several scriptural and historical compositions by old masters. Over the cavernous fire-place hangs a fine portrait of the great cardinal in a beautifully carved oak frame, surrounded with cherubim and flowers, and surmounted with a bishop's mitre. In front of this, on a carved pedestal, is an extremely ancient shirt of chain mail—so ancient as to be now a very ragged shirt—with neck piece of apparently later date. Higher up on the wall is a large family piece of the second Sir John Shaw and family, by Sir Peter Lely, and we are told that one of the little girls there represented is the great-great-grandmother of Bro. Mayo. There are several other suits of armour. Some of serviceable black plate, we presume the armour of actual warfare, show, by the dints upon them, that they have saved both head and heart from bullet and axe. There are others of gayer, though, perhaps, not less serviceable kind; possibly for jousting purposes, or to adorn as well as protect some knight with "swellish" tastes. Many banners, scutcheons, and ancient halberds, crossbows, and lances adorn the walls, and render the hall of the greatest interest to the antiquarian. Here, also, is to be seen the identical chair in which the "splendid prelate" reclined and cogitated upon those schemes of ambition which made him so remarkable and so dangerous a man. Among the portraits are to be found those of Sir Hugh Middleton, Cromwell, James II., William II., and Mary, his Queen; the Earl of Orrery, Queen Mary, Queen Elizabeth, Philip of Spain, Lucius Carey, Lord Falkland, Fairfax, Charles I. (a very fine portrait by Vandyck), Charles II., Queen Ann, Archbishop Laud, Archbishop Juxon, and many others. We have said enough, however, to show how extremely interesting a home has been acquired by the Gresham Lodge; and we expect that the fact of their meeting there will be a great inducement to Freemasons living in the neighbourhood of Cheshunt, to become members of the lodge. The lodge having been opened in due form, and with solemn prayer, the W.M. rose and said that he thought that their first duty, and the very least they could do, was to thank Bro. Mayo for his kindness in placing this fine old room at the disposal of the lodge, and, therefore, he proposed that a vote of thanks be recorded on the minutes to that effect. He was quite sure that the kindness and care with which the room had been arranged for their benefit must be evident to all the brethren present. The vote was seconded, and carried unanimously. Bro. Mayo: Worshipful Master and Brethren, I can only say that I am too happy in having it in my power to give you the use of this room, and I thank you for your kind acknowledgments for it. I can only say further that I think you have said too much about it. Mr. William Layton, proposed by Bro. Forsyth, seconded by Bro. Copestick, P.M., and Mr. J. R. Rignall, proposed by Bro. Mayo, seconded by Bro. Wylie, W.M., were then ballotted for, and initiated, the ceremony being performed in a very impressive manner by Bro. Gompertz, P.M. and Sec., who, being, as we understand, the father of the lodge, was gracefully invited by the W.M. to perform the ceremonies on this occasion, which marks an era in the history of the lodge. The ballot was then taken for Bro. G. F. W. Mugliston, M.D., I.P.M. 1421, as a joining member, and Bro. Dr.

Mugliston was declared duly elected. The ordinary business being ended, the W.M. said that observing that Bro. Hunt (the landlord of the Swan, where they had met for so many years,) was now present, he would take occasion to assure him that the removal from his house had been made solely in the interests of the lodge, and not from any dissatisfaction with Bro. Hunt's arrangements; but because several of the local gentry objected to join a lodge that met at a house of public resort. He knew that Bro. Hunt had always done all that he could for the comfort of the brethren, and he assured him that they all desired to avoid hurting his feelings, and had only made the step they had taken purely in the interests of the lodge itself. They all felt towards him personally in the kindest manner. He therefore proposed a vote of thanks to Bro. Hunt for what he had done on behalf of the lodge, and trusted he might be spared for many years to come among them as a member of the lodge. Bro. Hunt: I thank you sincerely for your vote of thanks. I have done my best for the prosperity of the Gresham Lodge. I believe I am the oldest member of the lodge. I hope I shall continue a member for many years to come. I shall always do all I can for its benefit, and I may say that nothing could please me better than the change you have made. I thank you very cordially for the vote you have passed. The lodge was then closed in perfect harmony. The brethren adjourned to the Green Dragon, where dinner was served in an admirable manner, and heartily enjoyed by all present. During the repast, by favour of Bro. Etherington, band master to the Band of the 41st Middlesex Volunteer Corps, the brethren were entertained with some good music from the band referred to, who occupied an adjoining room. On the removal of the cloth the usual loyal and Masonic toasts were given and responded to in the heartiest manner. In proposing the health of the M.W.G.M. the Prince of Wales, the W.M. said that H.R.H. would start for India on Monday, and that there was no doubt that his visit would do much to consolidate an Indian possessions, and help to cement a good feeling between us and the native princes, and be an additional bond of union between the two countries, and he thought it behoved us all to wish the Prince 'God Speed' in his journey, and a safe return. The toast was received with enthusiasm, and the band played "God bless the Prince of Wales." The W.M. then proposed "The Health of Bro. Halsey," whom he described as a man full of energy, full of youth, well pleased with the position he had attained in the province, receiving lustre from that position, and reflecting light on all connected with him. He always received them with kindness, and he (the W.M.) could certify that Bro. Halsey, not only readily consented to their changing their place of meeting, but stated that he thought they were greatly indebted to Bro. Mayo for the manner in which he had placed the hall at their disposal. The W.M. next proposed "The Health of the Provincial Grand Officers past and present." There were present Bros. Gompertz, and F. F. Copestick, and last but not least, Bro. Mayo, Provincial G. Chaplain. He should couple Bro. Mayo's name with this toast. He was very proud that Bro. Mayo was a member of the Gresham Lodge, for that in honouring him with the office of P.G. Chaplain honour had also been conferred on the lodge. Bro. Mayo having returned thanks, the I.P.M., Joseph Copestick proposed "The Health of Bro. Wylie, the W.M.," of whom they had reason to be proud for his energy as a Mason and his amiable qualities as a man. Bro. Wylie, W.M., Brethren, I thank you for the very kind manner in which my health has been proposed and responded to. I think that Bro. Copestick has given too flattering an account of myself. I feel myself very imperfect. My absence from England has interrupted my attending to my Masonic duties; this you have kindly excused, and my place has been ably filled by Bro. Copestick. There is one matter I will call attention to, and that is the disadvantages under which Freemasons labour in Russia, as in that country no secret society is allowed to hold meetings, and I have thought the matter well over, and have come to the conclusion that in these days of advanced thinking it might not be out of place to memorialise the Russian government—on behalf of British residents—to allow them to hold their Masonic meetings. I know that it would be a great boon to our countrymen if the concession were made, and I think that the time has arrived when they should agitate for it. The W.M. proceeded to propose "The Health of the Initiates, Bros. Layton and Rignall," coupled with the name of Bro. Layton, who responded. "The Health of the P.M.'s," "The Visitors," "The Press," &c., which were all warmly responded to, but our space will not admit of our including these speeches in this report. The whole business of the lodge, and at the banquet table, was carried out in the ablest and most kindly manner, and we think we may safely say that there was not present a single brother who did not thoroughly enjoy the whole proceedings of the day.

LIVERPOOL.—SKELMERSDALE CONCLAVE (No. 77).—The regular meeting of this conclave, undoubtedly the most successful in this province, took place on Monday, 4th October, at the Masonic Temple, 22, Hope-street. The M.P.S., Em. Sir Knt. Cottrell, took his seat upon the throne at 6.30 p.m., and was supported by the following officers and about twenty Sir Knight Companions:—Em. Sir Knts. H. Jackson, Viceroy; J. T. Callow, P. Sov.; Nelson, P. Sov.; T. Ashmore, P. Sov. and Treas.; Sir Knts. Quayle, as High Prelate; Corbyn, Recorder; R. H. Evans, Prefect; Garrett, Orator; Burrows, Herald; and others. Both the Senior and Junior Generals were absent. The room presented a most brilliant appearance when filled with the Sir Knights wearing the beautiful insignia of this Order. After the usual routine business had been transacted, the M.P.S., Em. Sir Knt. Cottrell, proceeded to install Bro. Richard Reader, of Lodge 292, as a Knight of Rome and of the Red Cross of Constantine, and his installation was duly proclaimed by the Herald in the E. and W. The beautiful oration upon the watchwords of the Order was given by Em. Sir Knt. H. Jackson, V.E., in a manner truly eloquent and effective, and the historical oration was given by Sir Knt. Quayle, as H.P., with much impressiveness. On the motion of Sir Knt. H. Jackson, V.E., the sum of three guineas was voted from the funds of the conclave towards purchasing a Past Sovereign's jewel for Em. Sir Knt. J. T. Callow, as a slight recognition of his valuable services in connection with the conclave. After the muster roll had been called, the conclave was closed with due solemnity by the M.P.S. The Sir Knights subsequently sat down to a banquet, and when the cloth was removed, the M.P.S., Sir Knt. Cottrell, proceeded to give the usual loyal and chivalric toasts. In responding to the toast of "Our Chivalric Rulers, Supreme and Subordinate," Sir Knt. J. K. Smith, Ill. Dep. Int. Gen. W.L., said he was very pleased to see the great progress the Skelmersdale Conclave was making, and he was sure that the Ill. Int. General, Lord Skelmersdale, would learn with pleasure of the advancement that the Order was making in the province, and particularly in the conclave which bore his name, as he knew that his lordship took a great interest in the success of this chivalric and knightly Order. The "Newly Exalted," Sir Knt. Richard Reader, in responding to the toast of his health, expressed in well chosen terms the gratification he felt at being admitted a member of the Order, and also expressed himself as having been much pleased and impressed with the ceremony, and particularly with the oration which had been so ably given by the Viceroy, Sir Knt. Jackson. The harmony of the evening was much increased by the excellent songs of Sir Knts. Garrett, D. Smith, Nelson, Cottrell, Jackson, Quayle, and others.

GLASGOW.—LODGE ST. JOHN (No. 33).—The regular fortnightly meeting of this most flourishing lodge was held in their hall, 213, Buchanan-street, Glasgow, on Tuesday, the 5th inst., Bro. Wm. Bell, R.W.M., presiding. There was a good attendance (as usual) on this occasion, upwards of seventy having signed the sederunt book, amongst whom were Bros. T. Fletcher, P.M.; J. McMillan, P.M.; D. M. Nelson, D.M.; J. B. Young, S.W.; D. Horn, J.W.; T. Dalzell, Treas.; John Dick, Sec.; Brownlie, S.D. After the minutes had been read and approved of, in accordance with a motion read at last meeting, Bro. Wm. Bell, R.W.M., called upon Bro. Bickerton to give the brethren some information respecting his motion relating to the Scottish Benevolent Institution. Bro. Bickerton informed them that he had supplied Bros. Bell, R.W.M.; D. M. Nelson, D.M.; J. B. Young, S.W.; D. Horn, J.W.; and J. Dick, Sec., each with a copy of prospectus of Bro. Harriott's scheme for the said institution, and he had no doubt that at a future meeting these brethren would give them their opinion, with a full explanation. The following candidates were then brought in, and received the F.C. Degree at the hands of Bro. T. B. Bell, the ceremony being gone through in a most efficient manner, Messrs. Robert McNab, H. Hamilton, and A. M. Morrison. Bro. D. Horn then brought forward his motion for raising the initiation fees from four to five guineas. In support of this motion Bro. Horne, in a most able manner, pointed out the many advantages and great effect this would lead to in raising the status of Freemasonry, combined with the strict examination and care of whom were admitted into the Order of Freemasonry; he said Freemasonry was for a noble purpose, and none but those that were noble minded and of a strict moral character could carry out the ancient landmarks of this our most ancient and honourable Order. After a few remarks from Bro. D. M. Nelson, and Bro. Mayberry, in support of the motion, it was carried unanimously. The brethren were then called to refreshment, when the usual loyal and Masonic toasts were given and heartily responded to, enlivened with a few most excellent songs. Among the toasts, Bro. D. M. Nelson, with his usual kindness, proposed "The Press," coupled with the names of Bro. Bickerton and Bro. Stuart. This, with the last toast, brought the evening to a close, everyone enjoying themselves most pleasantly.

GLASGOW.—LODGE DRAMATIC (571).—The regular meeting of this young and flourishing lodge, was held at 213, Buchanan-street, Glasgow, on Wednesday the 6th inst., at 3 p.m., Bro. W. E. Dobson, R.W.M., in the chair, Bro. H. W. Jackman, S.W.; Wm. Sivewright, J.W.; W. D. Vallane, D.M., and other officers. For the hour there was a good attendance. Among the visitors were Bros. G. W. Bainham, Lodge Athol 413; J. M. Oliver, S.W. Lodge 360 Commercial; W. Anderson, R.W.M. Paisley; Mitchell, R.W.M., Lodge St. Mark 102; D. Horn, J.W., Lodge St. John 33; Brownlie, S.D. Lodge St. John 33; Munro, J.W., Union and Crown 103, and others. On the minutes of last meeting being read, which were approved of, the following gentlemen were admitted and received the E.A. degree, viz., Messrs. Thomas Leslie and G. R. Weir, Bro. Dobson officiating in a very efficient manner. Bro. Dobson, R.W.M., among his very many kind actions for the benefit of the Lodge Dramatic and Freemasonry in general, then presented to the lodge two most handsome Warden's Columns, placing them in front of the Senior and Junior Wardens, which was received with acclamation. Bros. J. W. Lunn, of Lodge 116, Airdrie, and G. W. Bainham, Lodge Athol, 413, were then affiliated with this lodge, Bro. W. E. Dobson, R.W.M., officiating. The lodge was then raised to the degree of Fellow Craft, when Bro. Laurence, Rankin Mitchell was passed to the F.C. Degree, Bro. J. F. Mitchell, R.W.M., Lodge St. Mark, No. 102, officiating in his usual efficient manner. The lodge was then closed in due and ancient form.

[Several reports of Glasgow lodges, unavoidably crowded out, will appear next week.]

Masonic and General Tidings.

PROVINCE OF MIDDLESEX.—The Provincial Grand Master having, during the last six weeks, been constantly moving about, trusts that the W.M.'s, Brethren and Secretaries in the Province will not think that he has intentionally neglected to answer their kind invitations, which he has lately received; but in some instances they were not forwarded and received until after the day appointed for the meeting.

ROYAL MASONIC INSTITUTION FOR GIRLS.—Mrs. John Bowler desires to return her grateful thanks to the numerous kind friends whose good offices secured the election of her little girl on the 9th inst.

Bro. Sir George Elliot, M.P., on Thursday, laid the foundation stone of St. Thomas Church, South Shields. He declared that the Church of England by its doctrine and teaching was now doing a greater work than it had done since the Reformation.

THE Provincial Grand Lodge of West Yorkshire will meet at the Cutlers' Hall, Sheffield, on Wednesday, the 20th, at 1 o'clock.

A PROVINCIAL Grand Lodge of North Wales and Salop will be held at Bangor, on the 22nd inst., by the R.W. Prov. G. Master, Sir Watkin Williams Wynn, Bart., M.P., at 2.45 p.m. Choral service in the Cathedral at 3.45 p.m.; the sermon by the Lord Bishop of Bangor.

Bro. Sir Edward Lee, on behalf of the directors of the Alexandra Palace Company, has offered to defray all the immediate expenses of the projected dinner to the survivors of the Balaklava charge.

ACCORDING to the "South African Mail," the Government at the Cape has been unable to withstand the demand of the colony to be represented at the Conference proposed by Lord Carnarvon, and an extraordinary session of Parliament has been convened for the 10th of November.

A MONUMENT has just been erected over the grave of the Rev. Thomas Binney, in Abney Park Cemetery. It is a small obelisk on three graduated plinths, in red granite, with the inscription—"In loving memory of Thos. Binney, born at Newcastle, 19th April, 1798; died in London, 24th Feb., 1874. 'I shall be satisfied when I awake in Thy likeness.'"

Bro. Ex-Sheriff Jones has been elected master, Bro. Sir Frederick Perkins M.P., upper warden; and Bro. Sir John Bennett, under warden of the Loriners' Company.

Bro. E. Towell, Churchwarden of St. Peters, Walworth, having the management of the Monday Evening Readings in that district, will thoroughly appreciate the kindness of any brother who will aid him with songs or readings.

The foundation stone of the Yarmouth Aquarium was held on Saturday by Bro. Lord Suffield. The aquarium will be 400 feet by 100, and will cost about £30,000.

United Mariners Lodge of Instruction, No. 30, held at the Coopers' Arms Tavern, Silver-street, Wood-street, City, under the preceptorship of Bro. Hames, P.M. The first meeting, after the recess, will take place on Monday evening next, at seven o'clock precisely, and is well worthy the attention of those brethren, desirous of instruction, who wish to be within easy distance of the various city termini. Bro. Hames is a worthy Master in the Craft, well skilled both to rule and teach.

The Duke of Connaught Lodge, No. 1558, was consecrated on Thursday last. A full report of the proceedings will appear in the next issue.

DEPARTURE OF OUR ROYAL GRAND MASTER FOR INDIA.

On Saturday, pursuant to previous arrangements, a deputation from the Corporation of the City of London, headed by the Lord Mayor and Sheriffs, went in State from the Guildhall to Marlborough-house, to present an address from the Court of Common Council to his Royal Highness the Prince of Wales. Besides the Lord Mayor and Sheriffs, with their Under Sheriffs, the deputation included Mr. Russell Gurney, the Recorder; Sir Thomas Chambers, the Common Serjeant; Mr. William Lawley, chairman of the City Lands Committee, and in that capacity the mover of the address in the Court of Common Council; six members of the Court of Aldermen, the Chamberlain of London, the Remembrancer, the Controller, the Town Clerk, and a limited number of the Common Councilmen, all of whom wore their civic robes. The Lord Mayor was also escorted by the Sword and Mace Bearers.

His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales received the civic dignitaries with his habitual courtesy and consideration on their arrival.

The Right Hon. the Recorder, addressing the Prince, said,—"May it please your Royal Highness,—We the Lord Mayor, Aldermen, and Commons of the City of London, in Common Council assembled, desire to convey to your Royal Highness the expression of the deep interest we feel in the journey you are about to undertake to Her Majesty's Indian dominions.

"We know well the desire that has ever been manifested by your Royal Highness to become familiar with the habits and feelings of the people of this country, and we regard it as only consistent with that desire that you should seek to become personally acquainted with the country, the customs, and the sympathies of the millions of her Majesty's subjects in India over whom, if God so will, you are one day destined to rule.

"We earnestly trust, as we are glad to believe, that the visit of your Royal Highness will tend to bind together the hearts of all in a common feeling of loyalty to our Sovereign, and that a spirit of kindness and goodwill will be diffused among the various races forming her Majesty's subjects, whatever may be their creed or their colour.

"We pray that the blessing of health may be vouchsafed to your Royal Highness during your absence from England, and that a journey, auspiciously commenced, may in due season be accomplished in happiness and safety.

"Signed by order of the Court,

"JOHN B. MONCKTON, Town Clerk."

His Royal Highness, in reply, said,—My Lord Mayor, Aldermen, and Members of the Court of Common Council, I thank you most cordially for this expression of the interest you take in the success of my journey to India. You state with truth that, with the desire I have ever entertained of becoming familiar with the habits and feelings of my countrymen, it is only consistent that I should endeavour to become better acquainted with the several classes of the population over which our Sovereign reigns in India. If the result of my visit shall conduce to unite the various races of Hindostan in a feeling of loyalty to the Queen, attachment to our country, and of goodwill towards each other, one great object will at least be gained. I thank you again, my Lord Mayor and gentlemen, for the wish that health may be vouchsafed to me during my absence from England. It will be one of my most pleasing reflections that I carry the good wishes of my country with me, as it will also be a moment of sincere gratification when I return to it.

At the conclusion of this reply, the Lord Mayor presented Mr. Lawley, the mover of the address in the Common Council, and six of the Aldermen, to His Royal Highness. With that the ceremony ended, and the civic dignitaries, escorted as before, returned to Guildhall.

H.R.H. the Prince left the Charing-cross Station at 8 o'clock on Monday evening, with the Princess, the Duke of Cambridge, and the Duke of Edinburgh. A large number of friends had assembled to bid him farewell; among them were the Duke and Duchess of Teck, the Princess Louise, the Duke of Connaught, the Russian Ambassador, the German Ambassador, the Danish Minister and Madame Bulow, the Duchess of Wellington, the Duchess of Sutherland and Lady Florence Gower, Lord and Lady Sydney, Lord Hartington, Mr. and Mrs. Stonor, Lady Westmoreland, Prince Edward of Saxe-Weimar, Count Gleichen, Prince Teck and Princess Mary, the Duke of St. Albans, Lord Colville, Lord Barrington, Mr. Ward Hunt, Lord H. Lennox, Lord Hardwicke, Mr. Rothschild, M.P., Lord John Hay, Sir G. Arthur, Sir Percy Doyle, General Doyle, Mr. H. Petre, General J. Macdonald, Colonel Marshall, Colonel Sturt, Mr. H. Chaplin, Mr. G. Drummond, Mr. Cockerell, and Mr. Christopher Sykes.

The Royal party reached Dover at 9.33; there they were received by Captain Bruce, R.M., Lord and Lady Granville, and a large circle of officers. The mayor and corporation then presented a loyal address, to which H.R.H. replied, "I thank you, Mr. Mayor," and at ten minutes past ten the "Castalia" steamed away for Calais. It reached Calais after a splendid passage at 12.10.

The Prince of Wales, who took leave of the Princess of Wales on board the "Castalia," was driven from the Quai de Mairie to the station.

The train left at 2 o'clock, amid the loud cheers of those assembled, and reached Paris punctually at 7.20. Lord Lyons and Mons. Renault, Prefet de Police, received His Royal Highness, few persons being present at that early hour.

Shortly before the arrival of the train Marshal MacMahon drove up, with the Duc de la Rochefoucauld-Bisaccia, General d'Absac, Prince de la Trémoille, and other gentlemen, all in shooting attire, for they were on their way to Compiègne. The Prince, on descending from the train, shook hands heartily with the Marshal, Lord Lyons, and the Duc de Bisaccia. Immediately after he drove in Lord Lyons' carriage to the Hotel Bristol, where apartments had been prepared for him. In the afternoon he called upon the Grand Duchess Constantine of Russia. In the evening Lord Lyons entertained the Prince at dinner, and on Wednesday Marshal MacMahon received him at lunch at the Elysée.

The "Castalia" remained all night in Calais Harbour, and at 7 a.m. on Tuesday started for Dover, arriving alongside the Admiralty Pier a few minutes after 9 o'clock. The weather was again most favourable, and the passage involved no disagreeable incidents to the most squeamish traveller. Her Royal Highness, who breakfasted on board, was received on her arrival by the Duke of Cambridge and Lord Sydney, and in about half an hour came ashore, leaning on the arm of the Duke, and entered the same saloon carriage in which she had travelled from town on the previous evening. Miss Knollys, Lord Colville, General Sir William Knollys, and Colonel Teesdale were in attendance on the Princess. The Royal train started at five minutes to ten o'clock, the Duke of Cambridge remaining at Dover. Mr. Shaw, the manager and secretary of the South-Eastern Company, was in charge of the train, as on Monday evening, and the engine was again driven by Mr. Watkin, locomotive superintendent. No pause was made in the journey back to London, and Charing-cross was reached in excellent time at about 11.40 a.m. Carriages were in waiting upon the arrival of the Princess, and at once conveyed her Royal Highness to Marlborough-house.

Our Royal Grand Master left Paris on Wednesday evening for Turin and Brindisi. He lunched with Marshal MacMahon on Wednesday, having dined with Lord Lyons on Tuesday, but the weather during his stay has been most unpropitious—a regular downpour. He left the Lyons Station at a quarter to nine, amid cries of Bon Voyage—pleasant journey. He seemed well and in good spirits, and was dressed in an Ulster and felt hat, as the correspondent tells us. Some of his staff have already reached Brindisi.

The following prayer for the protection of our R.G. Master in India has been drawn up by the Bishop of Lichfield:—

"O God, whose never-failing Providence ordereth all things both in heaven and earth, we beseech Thee to take into Thy gracious keeping Albert Edward, Prince of Wales, on the distant journey he is about to undertake.

"Preserve him, we pray Thee, from all evil accidents by land or by water, from the pestilence that walketh in darkness, and from the arrow that destroyeth in the noonday.

"May he prove a messenger of goodwill to our Indian fellow-subjects, binding them together in loyalty to our Sovereign and in peace among themselves.

"Restore him, we pray Thee, in health and safety to his own land, and in the remembrance of Thy manifold mercies may he live long to glorify Thy name, through Jesus Christ, our Lord. Amen.

ROYAL MASONIC BENEVOLENT INSTITUTION.

At a meeting of the General Committee of this institution on Wednesday last, W. Bro. Major Jno. Creaton, P.G.D., V. Patron, in the chair, the following were present:—Bros. Hy. G. Warren, James Brett, B. Head, A. H. Tattershall, S. Rawson, Jno. G. Stevens, Joseph Smith, Wm. Stephens, R. W. Little, Thos. W. White, H. Browne, H. M. Levy, R. W. Stewart, J. Hogg, Capt. Wordsworth, Chas. F. Hogard, and James Terry, Secretary. The minutes of the previous meeting were read and verified. The Secretary reported that H.R.H. the Prince of Wales had fixed Wednesday, the 9th February, 1876, for the next festival to be held, and that Lord Skelmersdale, Dep. G.M. and Prov. G. Master of West Lancashire, had consented to preside upon the occasion. The report of the Finance Committee was received and adopted, and cheques ordered to be drawn in payment of certain accounts. A discussion ensued as to the erection of a new fencing at the entrance of the building at Croydon, when it was resolved that an oaken one should be placed instead of a brick wall and iron railing. Five candidates were placed on the list for election in May next. Permission was granted to one of the annuitants to marry. Some unimportant business having been transacted, the Committee adjourned.

ESTABLISHMENT OF A MASONIC CLUB IN GLASGOW.

An idea for some considerable time past entertained by some of the leading members of the Masonic fraternity in Glasgow has at length taken form in the establishment of "The Glasgow and West of Scotland Masonic Club and Freemasons' Hall Company, Glasgow (Limited)." The scheme originated from a consideration of the fact that Glasgow, as a large commercial centre, and the province occupying an important Masonic position in Scotland, was very much behind in the matter of accommodation for carrying on or carrying out the objects of the brotherhood. Every other country of any consequence in a Masonic connection can boast of magnificent buildings erected and suitable for the conduct of the business of the Craft, but in the West of Scotland nothing of the kind has hitherto existed.

With a view to remedy this, the association in question has been started, on the principle, as we have stated, of "limited liability." It has been registered for a capital of £2000, distributed in 2000 shares of £1 each. Of these, about 800 are already taken up among 195 shareholders, holding from one to 100 shares each, there being several holding the latter number. The former portion of the scheme, as expressed in the title, has only as yet been taken up. For the use of the club one of the old self-contained houses in Windsor-place (No. 7) has been rented, and a start made. On the ground floor are a private parlour, a billiard room, and the club-master's department—fully equipped with all the requisites for club purposes. On the upper floor is another private parlour, a commodious dining room, a handsomely furnished smoking room, and ample lavatory accommodation.

The club is under the management of a directorate of 15 members, exclusive of treasurer and secretary, Bro. David Horn being president, and Bro. James F. Mitchell vice-president. Shareholders in the scheme must be members of the Craft, but not necessarily members of the club. Admission to the latter is by ballot, a meeting being held on the second Thursday in each month for the purpose of balloting for new members. The entrance fee, at present, is one guinea, and the annual subscription the same sum. Hitherto the establishment has been under the able direction, as club master, of Bro. Robert Robb.

While the immediate intention of the association is to provide a place to which members of the Masonic fraternity can resort for the purpose of social intercourse and discussion on points affecting individual lodges and the well-being of the Craft generally, its ultimate aim is the erection of a commodious hall, adequate in every degree to the requirements of Freemasonry in Glasgow, and thus place it on a footing at least equal to what it holds in the sister counties of the kingdom, on the continent of Europe, in America, and other parts of the world.

MASONIC CEREMONY AT LARGS.

On Saturday, 22nd ult., the memorial stone of the new Drill-hall in Brisbane-road, Largs, was laid with Masonic honours, by Bro. Major James Stewart, of Garvocks. The members of the Craft turned out in large numbers on the occasion; the following lodges having sent representatives:—Mother Kilwinning, No. 0; St. John's, Glasgow, No. 3½; St. John's, Greenock, No. 12; St. Mungo, Glasgow, No. 27; St. Mirren's, Paisley, No. 129; St. John's, Rothesay, No. 292; Royal Arch, West Kilbride, No. 314; Royal Blue, Kilbirnie, No. 399; Kilburn, Millport, No. 459; Clydesdale, Glasgow, No. 556. The Masons assembled at the lodge-room, and from thence, headed by the Largs brass band, they marched down Main-street and along the front to the parish church, where they were joined by the members of the Artillery Company, in charge of Captain and Lieutenant Fraser, and accompanied by the Rev. John Kinross, chaplain of the company. Headed by the volunteers, and with flags flying, the procession marched through the principal streets of the town to the hall, where a large crowd awaited their coming. Here they halted, and the Masons and principals of the procession proceeded to the platform, where everything was in readiness for their advent. Captain Fraser came to the front, and presented Major Stewart with a handsome silver trowel, beautifully engraved, and bearing the following inscription:—"Presented to Major James Stewart by the 3rd Ayrshire Artillery Volunteers on the occasion of laying the memorial stone of the new Drill-hall, Largs, Oct. 2, 1874." Major Stewart returned thanks. The Rev. John Kinross having offered up a prayer, Major Stewart went through the ceremony of laying the stone, with the usual Masonic honours, and afterwards addressed the meeting in appropriate terms. Beneath the stone was placed a bottle, carefully tinned and sealed, containing the following articles:—Copies of Largs Almanac, Advertiser, Glasgow Herald, Citizen, Mail, and News, coins of the realm, list of officers, subscribers, committee, honorary office-bearers, contractors, instructor, and Freemason office-bearers, also the name of the architect, Mr. Thos. Jamieson, Greenock. A large company of Masons, volunteers, and others met for dinner in the Victoria-hall in the afternoon. Mr. Roger Montgomerie, M.P., occupied the chair, and Major Eckford and Mr. Crockett acted as croupiers. Major Stewart proposed "Both Houses of Parliament," to which the chairman replied.

LAYING FOUNDATION STONE OF THE BURGH SCHOOL AT ALLOA.

On Friday, the 8th inst., the foundation stone of the new Burgh School was laid with Masonic honours by the Right Hon. the Earl of Mar and Kellie, Deputy Grand Master of Scotland, and chairman of the Alloa Burgh School Board, under the most favourable circumstances. The style of architecture of the building is national, and is estimated to cost £3600. On the principal floor there are to be three classrooms of the following dimensions:—45ft. by 31ft. 6in., 32ft. by 26ft., and 28ft. 6in. by 27ft. 4in., all of which are to be well lighted. A separate room will be provided for the sewing department. The rooms are to be heated by open fireplaces, and will be ventilated through the ceiling. Lavatories and cloak-rooms for the children occupy the basement floor, while those for the teachers are on the principal floor, adjacent to the schoolrooms. The boys and girls enter at different sides of the building, which, when finished, will have accommodation for 400 scholars. Messrs. John Melvin & Son are the architects, the following being the contractors:—Mason work, George Cousin, Alloa; joiner work, Wm. McMillan, Alloa; plaster work, John Davy, Alloa; slater work, R. Ferguson, Alloa; plumber work, John Steel, Stirling; iron and smith work, Robert Melvin, Alloa; painter work, W. Cornelius, Edinburgh. A dinner took place in the afternoon in the Royal Oak Hotel.

FREEMASONRY IN TASMANIA.

Due honour was paid to St. John's Day (24th June) by the Masonic Lodges in Hobart Town, who on that day held their annual festival in their fine hall, Murray-street. There was a large attendance, including representatives from all the Hobart Town lodges, and from the lodges at Oatlands. The Worshipful Master, W. S. Hammond, occupied the chair, supported by W.M., W. H. Burgess, jun., and W.M., J. E. Addison. The vice-chairs were occupied by the Senior Wardens of the different lodges in Hobart Town. The usual patriotic toasts, including the health of his Excellency the Governor, were proposed by the chairman, and right loyally responded to. These were followed by the customary Masonic toasts, received in Masonic style, and duly acknowledged. The evening was spent in a jovial and pleasant manner. The proceedings were enlivened by several appropriate songs, well sung, and the festival was in every respect a success. Bro. Harris, of the Criterion Hotel, was the caterer.

Obituary.

BRO. ALDERMAN PATERSON.

Much regret was occasioned on Saturday last in the City by the intelligence of the death, on the previous evening, of Bro. Alderman Paterson. He had been ill since January last, and died at Brighton. He was 57 years of age, and was lineally descended from William Paterson, a Scotch merchant, who in 1694 projected the Bank of England to meet the difficulty experienced by William III, in raising the supplies for the war against France. The late alderman entered the Corporation in 1863 as a member of the Court of Common Council for the Ward of Aldersgate, and in 1869, in the Mayoralty of Mr. Alderman Besley, he served the office of Sheriff of London and Middlesex, his colleague being the late Sir Joseph Causton. He also acted as chairman of some of the most important Corporation committees. In September, 1873, he succeeded the late Sir David Salomons, M.P., as alderman of the Civic Ward of Cordwainer. This year, moreover, he was chosen Master of the Bakers' Company. He was a merchant in Staining-lane. For the vacancy in the Court of Aldermen thus caused there will probably be three candidates—namely, Sir John Bennett (who contested the seat with Bro. Alderman Paterson, and to whom a requisition has been presented), Bro. David Evans (a merchant in Watling-street); and Mr. James Waddell, a public accountant. All three gentlemen are members of the Common Council.

DEATH OF THE GRAND PRIOR, ORDER OF MALTA.

Some few years ago the "Freemason" published an interesting account of all that remained of the once powerful Order of Knights of Malta, with a statement of the revenues of the same. In 1841, Ferdinand I., Emperor of Austria issued a decree restoring it to Italy, and endowing it with a moderate revenue; but its power, wealth, and magnificence have passed away. The Knights were originally divided into eight languages, and on the extinction of that of England, that of Anglo-Bavaria was substituted. By cable telegram of August 16th, ult., we learn that the Grand Prior of the Order, Prince Charles Theodore, great uncle to the King of Bavaria, fell from his horse while out riding on that day, and was killed. He was born in Munich, July 7, 1795, and was much beloved. We doubt if a successor will be elected or appointed. The office, of late years, was merely nominal.—"The Square."

INDIA AND THE PRINCE OF WALES.—Under this universally attractive title the directors of the "Illustrated London News" have published what is really an important pictorial work, which fully justifies the interest awakened by its mere announcement. A map of the proposed route, not roughly, hastily, and indistinctly prepared, but, as befits the occasion, clear in detail and comprehensive in geographical information, accompanies this imperial quarto pamphlet, which can neither be called a book, nor a magazine, nor a newspaper; which outwardly resembles a piece of music in its prettily lithographed wrapper; and which, however it may be described, fairly merits categorical praise. The engraved designs are splendidly suited to their purpose, which is obviously two-fold—popular instruction at the present time concerning the Prince's Indian tour, and a worthy and permanent record of an event "which must speedily pass into the great history of the land, not to linger there in a pale and shadowy guise, but to form an integral and an important part of the chronicles of the Victorian era." These are the well-chosen words in which Bro. Sala, who has supplied the letterpress of this opportune publication, introduces his genial disquisitions on India, on Indian architecture, on the character and incidents of Indian travel and Indian life, on Indian Mahomedanism, and on all things concerned in a proper account of our wonderful Eastern empire. In addition to this most popular, suggestive, and vivacious author's chatty and none the less solid commentary, "the Old Shekarry" has contributed a few dashing hints and reminiscences of sport in India, which complete a work of welcome intelligence and lasting value.

THE NEW ALDERMAN.—Bro. Simeon Charles Hadley, the newly-elected Alderman for the Ward of Castle Baynard, is a member of an ancient Gloucestershire family. He was born at Cambridge, Gloucestershire, on November 3rd, 1831, and was educated at a private school at Dursley, in the same county. In partnership with his three brothers, he has carried on the great establishment known as "The City Flour Mills," in Thames-street, and is largely interested in other property in the ward which he represents. Bro. Hadley first entered the Common Council, as a representative of the Ward of Castle Baynard, in the year 1861, and he has at all times taken an interest in philanthropic and public matters. He is a member of the Bakers' Company. His residence is at Cranbrook-park, Ilford, Essex.

PRINCE LEOPOLD will, upon the invitation of the Corporation, formally take up the freedom of the City of London, to which he is entitled by patrimony, at a special meeting of the Court of Common Council, to be held in the Guildhall on Monday, the 26th. After the ceremony the Prince will be entertained at a déjeuner.

THE Governors of Christ's Hospital draw attention to the fact that they are able to grant annuities of £10 yearly to nearly seven hundred blind persons, under certain conditions.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS AND OINTMENT.—Nervous debility often occurs at this season of the year in persons otherwise healthy, but who, having overtaxed both mind and body in some one of the many ways, so common now-a-days, suffer in consequence, from an irritability of the whole nervous system, characterised more especially by sleeplessness, tremors, palpitation of the heart, and a general feeling of shakiness, and senses of unstrung fibre—more distressing even than actual pain—the muscular and vital energies in these cases seem almost as if they were utterly relaxed, and mental despondency sufficient to alarm anxious relatives and friends often accompanies this condition. No time should be lost, but immediate resource had to these powerfully tonic and restorative remedies.—ADVT.

LAYING THE MEMORIAL STONE OF A PUBLIC SCHOOL AT KILWINNING.

The memorial-stone of a large and handsome new school for the parish of Kilwinning was laid on Saturday 25th ult., by Bro. Col. Mure, M.P., with full Masonic honours. The school, with the erection of which considerable progress has been made, is situated at a point near the Dalry Road, in close proximity to Kilwinning. The building is commodious, and in every respect well adapted for an educational institution. The architect is Mr. John Armour, of Irving. The school will accommodate 700 pupils, and will cost about £7000. The ceremony of laying the memorial stone on Saturday proved an event of great interest to the people of the parish, as was evinced by the large number who assembled to witness the proceedings. Additional eclat was given to the ceremony by the part the Freemasons took in it, and by the demonstration they made in their procession to and from the Temperance Hall in Kilwinning, where the Provincial Grand Lodge of Ayrshire, of which Colonel Mure is R.W.G.M., was opened. At the site of the school a platform was erected for the accommodation of a large number of ladies and gentlemen. Among those present were the Earl of Eglinton, the Hon. Mr. Vernon, chairman of the School Board; the members of the board, and the clerk, Mr. Andrew Macrorie; also the following office-bearers of the Masonic body:—Colonel Mure of Caldwell, P.G.M.; Sir James Fergusson, Bart., of Kilkerran, P.P.G.M.; Roger Montgomery, D.P.G.M.; W. Ralston Patrick, of Trearne, S.P.G.M.; R. W. Cochrane Patrick, Substitute P.G.M.; D. Murray Lyon, Proxy P.G.M. for West India Islands, P.S.G.W.; D. Campbell, Maybole, Acting P.J.G.W.; John Whinson, P.G. Treasurer; Robert Wylie, P.G. Secretary. The following were the lodges represented:—Mother Kilwinning, 0; Glasgow, 3 bis; Maybole, 11; St. John's, Kilmarnock, 22; Thistle and Rose, Glasgow, 73; St. Andrew, Kilmarnock, 126; Thistle, Stewarton, 127; St. James (Burn's Lodge), Tarbolton, 135; St. Andrew, Irvine, 149; St. John, Kilwinning, Beith, 157; Thistle and Rose, Stevenson, 169; Royal Arch, Maybole, 198; St. Clement, Riccarton, 202; St. John, Girvan, 237; St. Andrew, Glenbuck, 245; Blair Dalry, 290; Royal Arch, Ardrossan, 320; St. Peter, Galston, 331; Neptune, Ardrossan, 442; St. Matthew, Dregghorn, 549; St. James, Dailly Fergusson 596. The proceedings were commenced with prayer by the Chaplain, Mr. Inglis of Kilmaurs, after which the usual formalities were gone through. The Earl of Eglinton presented the trowel to Colonel Mure, who, having performed the ceremony, declared the stone duly laid. Three cheers were called for, and given with enthusiasm by the spectators.

Colonel Mure, M.P. (P.G.M.), then addressed the assemblage. He said it was a very long time ago now—he thought it was in the year 1814—since the Freemasons of Kilwinning were employed in a similar ceremony as that which had just been completed. On that occasion they laid the foundation of the kirk tower, which was familiar to them. He had no doubt a great many of them, and particularly the ladies, who, generally speaking, were supposed to be more curious than men, might wonder what the object of Freemasonry was. Well, the object of Freemasonry was, in itself, a most excellent one, as the Craft consisted of a vast number of men, throughout the whole world, banded together in order to promote that which is good. People might sometimes say to themselves, "Are Freemasons better than any other body?" All he knew was that if they were not they ought to be, because they bound themselves by solemn vows to be better than other people. With regard to education, he would say this for the Freemasons in Ayrshire, that, quite independent of the great educational movement which had been going on some years in this country, they had tried to do a little for education, because they had already collected a subscription among themselves by which they could afford to give £20 a-year to enable the son of a Freemason to leave the parish school with the prospect of securing a higher education, and do, as many Scotchmen had done before him, raise himself in condition and intellectual power. That was not a very great thing, but it was a step in the right direction. He quite admitted, however, when he knew what a vast organisation Freemasonry is, and when he looked at the enormous ramifications of Masonry throughout the world, that he would not grumble if they did a little more good than they had done. The gallant colonel then referred to the various emblems which had been used in the ceremony, and explained their meanings and applications. In the course of his remarks on these heads, he observed that when he took the sheaf of corn in his hand he could not help thinking that it formed in some parts of this island not only the emblem of prosperity, but in some sense it might be said to be not an unfit emblem of the ignorance that prevailed in certain parts of Her Majesty's dominions. He alluded to the wretched condition of the children employed in agriculture in the South of England, and in various counties in that country; and when he thought of that, and also remembered that it was not so very long ago that the standard of their education was lowered, in order to meet the blind folly of the farmers of England, he could not help congratulating himself that in Scotland, at least, our farmers had not come forward and said, "We cannot afford to collect the gift of a bountiful Providence unless our children are kept in ignorance." That in itself was to him a subject of sincere congratulation, and looking, as they ought to do, with a more extended eye, let them hope the day was not far distant when the compulsory powers we had in this happy part of Her Majesty's dominions might be welcomed by all classes and trades in the whole of this great and otherwise prosperous island. The hon. gentleman then commented on the harmony which had prevailed at the school board, congratulating the gentlemen engaged on having set aside their religious differences in their desire that little children who were ignorant might be taught. He also congratulated the people of this country that while the leading men of other nations had to take up their time considering questions which stirred up the worst passions of their countrymen, or questions of peace or war, our great men devoted themselves to public education, and to efforts to improve the condition of the children of the country. By our future acts, by our reformatories, by our industrial schools, and by this great effort—this great educational scheme—he hoped, by the blessing of God, we would become before many years were passed a happier, better, and more Christian people.

The Hon. Mr. Vernon, on behalf of his colleagues, the members of the School Board of Kilwinning, thanked Colonel Mure and those who assisted him for their kindness. Referring to an observation which fell from Colonel Mure regarding the importance of unanimity, he remarked that the board had worked most harmoniously and unanimously.

Colonel Mure acknowledged the compliment. Three cheers were then given in succession for the Queen, for Colonel Mure, and for the members of the School Board. The Freemasons subsequently formed into procession and marched into town, followed by the people who had witnessed the proceedings at the ceremony.

In the evening a large number of gentlemen, including the members of the School Board and others who took part in the ceremony, met at dinner in the hall connected with the Eglinton Arms Hotel. The Hon. Mr. Vernon occupied the chair, and Mr. Roger Montgomery, M.P., and Mr. Ralston Patrick officiated as croupiers. After dinner, the Chairman intimated the receipt of letters of apology for absence from Bros. Lord Rosslyn, Past G.M.; Sir Wm. Cuninghame, M.P.; Dr. Taylor, secretary to the Education Board; Mr. Smollett, and other gentlemen. At the request of the Chairman, the company then drank the loyal toasts.

Sir James Fergusson, who was very warmly welcomed, proposed "Both Houses of Parliament." In doing so he said he could not refrain from noticing how large a portion of the time of parliament was at present occupied in considering and passing measures, having for their special object the improvement of the moral and material welfare of the people. He believed there was no respect in which parliament could better provide for the safety of the people and the good of the nation than by insisting on a good and satisfactory education for the people. He sincerely hoped, with his friend Colonel Mure, that it would not be long before every parent in the kingdom would not only have the means, but would have imposed upon him the duty of the education of his child. And he believed we might best look forward without apprehension to the future, and expect that not only would this country remain in the enjoyment of peace within its borders, but hold its own in the great competition with other producing nations if our people were well educated, and so be preserved from falling into those dangers of which ignorance was the fertile source. He was glad to see the liberal provision which the school boards were making for public education. He trusted that the work that district, in common with others, was engaged in would result in great benefits to this and to future generations. He coupled with the toast the name of Mr. Montgomery.

Mr. Montgomery, M.P., congratulated the meeting on the re-appearance of Sir James Fergusson, and congratulated him on having had such an excellent opportunity for his re-appearance. Speaking to the toast which had been proposed, the hon. member said in no period of our history had the House of Lords occupied a more honourable position than at present. It was a remarkable thing that whilst our neighbours in countries on the continent were making new constitutions, they always stuck at the difficulty of creating a second house of legislation. There might be anomalies about the House of Lords which shocked the ordinary mind of the constitution monger, but it was an institution which had worked well ever since the country was governed as it is at present. It had never happened that the House of Lords had failed to supply men of first class talents, who were prepared to give up their time and energy and talents to the service of the country; and he trusted that it might never be the case that such a class of men should cease to exist. He was proud to return thanks on behalf of the House of Commons. There was not in the world another assembly like that house. He being a member, should not speak so highly of it, but it was undeniable that there was not another representative assembly in the world that maintained its dignity in the way the House of Commons did. The last session had been a laborious one; the Government and its supporters had done their work to the best of their ability, and he trusted they had done it with a certain amount of acceptance to the country. They had devoted themselves to measures which affected the real domestic happiness of the country; and he thought these measures when they came into operation would be found to work well. It was sometimes objected to some measures that they were permissive in their character; but surely it was proper when they proposed to tax people largely for improvements of which they did not perhaps see the immediate value, that they should carry the people along with them. Measures could not be forced down people's throats without raising up an opposition which really defeated the object they had in view. The hon. member then in eulogistic terms, proposed "The Health of Lord Stair, Lord-Lieutenant of the County." Mr. Ralston Patrick gave "The Health of the Earl of Eglinton, Lord of the Manor," and Mr. Fergusson proposed, "The Army, Navy, and Auxiliary Forces," coupled with Captain M'Jannett, of the Irvine Artillery Volunteers, who replied.

"The Clergy of Scotland" was proposed by Mr. Halkett, Saltcoats, and Bro. Inglis responded. The Chairman then gave "The Grand Lodge of Ayrshire," coupled with the name of Colonel Mure.

Colonel Mure briefly replied, and afterwards spoke to the toast of the educational interests of Kilwinning and of the county. They had in Kilwinning, he said, a magnificent school and an earnest and active School Board. They had also, he was given to understand, a most able schoolmaster, and an active and efficient school officer; but now came the time that their real work would have to be done. They would be able, he had no doubt, to sweep the children into the school because they had got compulsory powers. They had been able to build a handsome school because Government had given them power to raise money, and they had been able to obtain the services of a good schoolmaster; but with all this done and secured they would only perhaps be able to teach these children to read and write. He had no hesitation in saying that they wanted something more than that. He did not believe in children being brought up to the lower standards we had in this country, and then being swept into the fields. After remarking on the necessity for the poor populations in our great cities being properly housed, Colonel Mure concluded by remarking that it would only be in a few years hence that they would get the real test of this education scheme. It would not do then for them, as they did now, to take the education reports and read admirable descriptions of the number of children swept into the school, and the numbers who had passed the standards, and to read eulogiums upon school boards. They would then read these reports not alone, but side by side with them the reports of the police, the criminal statistics, the pauper statistics, and then, if they found vice and pauperism decreasing, if these were found falling off, they would be able to say their educational efforts had been of real value. (Applause.)

A number of other toasts followed.

FREEMASONRY IN RUTHERGLEN

The following appeared in the correspondence of the "North British Daily Mail," 28th September, 1875.

Sir,—There are a good many Freemasons in Glasgow, who are probably not aware that the largest, and, indeed considerably the largest, hall in the West of Scotland is situated in the little burgh of Rutherglen. I was present the other evening at one of their meetings, and witnessed what is technically known as "working the three degrees." The ritual was literally perfect in its delivery, and at once stamped me with the impression—and that very forcibly too—that the St. John's Operative Lodge, No. 347, had every reason to be proud of their R.W.M. and the several office-bearers, and equally proud of the finest Masonic Hall in the western district of North Britain. I have visited all the most important institutions of this kind in Glasgow, but Rutherglen so completely eclipses anything of the kind in this city that I sincerely trust the consecration of this new hall on the 12th of November next, by Colonel Campbell, the justly esteemed Provincial Grand Master of Renfrewshire East, may be numerously attended, so that every Freemason in Glasgow may personally satisfy himself that there is no exaggeration as regards its magnitude. The building, of course, is new, and just in its present condition may not be so tastefully decorated as what subsequent arrangements may suggest. The rough walls and absence of paint in new buildings do not contribute as a rule to the most favourable aspect of matters; but I still repeat that Rutherglen can boast of the best Masonic Hall in the west of Scotland.—I am, &c., A FREEMASON.

PRESENTATION TO A WORTHY BROTHER.—On Wednesday week, at the police station, Prescot, a presentation was made by the police of the Prescot division to Bro. J. W. J. Fowler, P.P.G.A.D.C., P.M. 86, who is retiring from the position of superintendent, upon the superannuation allowance, after about 40 years' service in the police force of the country, a large portion of that period having been spent at Prescot as superintendent. The testimonial consisted of a silver cup and a gold pencil case for Bro. Fowler and a gold brooch for Mrs. Fowler. On one side of the cup appears Bro. Fowler's crest, and on the other the following inscription:—"Presented by the officers and constables of the Prescot division, as a mark of respect, to Superintendent J. W. Fowler on his retirement from the service. September, 1875." The presentation was made, on behalf of the subscribers, by Inspector Binns. A testimonial to Bro. Fowler is also being raised by the inhabitants of Prescot and the immediate neighbourhood.

MUNIFICENCE OF DISTINGUISHED BRETHREN IN WEST LANCASHIRE.—The foundation stone of a new church, to be called St. Michael and All Angels, was laid at Dalton, near Wigan, on Wednesday week, by Lady Skelmersdale, of Lathom House. Owing to the want of church accommodation in the district, five years ago a barn was converted into a church, and this was endowed with £3000, which was raised mainly by the munificence of Bro. John Prescott, P.P.J.G.W. West Lancashire, of Dalton Grange. The district was made into a separate ecclesiastical parish, a resident minister was appointed, and a vicarage house shortly afterwards built by Bro. Prescott. In place of the present small building, Bro. Lord Skelmersdale, D.G.M. of E., Prov. G.M., W. L., offered to build a new church, and on Wednesday week the first stone was laid. Although the weather was very inclement, there was a large number of spectators, amongst these being Lord and Lady Skelmersdale and family, the Hon. Mrs. Wilbraham, Lord Clarendon, the Hon. F. Villiers, and Mrs. Prescott, Mrs. Loch (wife of the lieutenant-governor of the Isle of Man), and a large number of clergymen from the surrounding neighbourhood. A service was first held in the present church, and the ceremony was then performed by Lady Skelmersdale in the customary manner. Luncheon was afterwards provided, and the usual toasts were given and responded to. The new church is estimated to cost from £3000 to £4000, and will accommodate 150 people.

TO OUR READERS.

The Freemason is a sixteen page weekly newspaper, price 2d. It is published every Friday morning, and contains the most important and useful information relating to Freemasonry in every degree. Annual subscription in the United Kingdom, Post free, 10/. Brethren in foreign parts, wishing to have this newspaper sent them regularly from the office of publication, should, in sending their remittances, add to the 2d. per week the postage on 202. newspapers.

The Freemason may be procured through any newsagent in the United Kingdom by giving (if needed) the publisher's address, 198, Fleet-st.

OUR ROYAL GRAND MASTER'S VISIT TO INDIA.

By the time that these lines meet the eyes of our readers our Royal Grand Master will be on his route (D.V.) to Brindisi, to embark on board the Serapis on the 16th. He will leave Paris, we understand, by the 20 to 9 train from Paris on Wednesday evening, and, reaching Turin 20 minutes to 7 on Thursday evening, will proceed to Brindisi, where, as we have just said, he will find some of his suite and the Serapis waiting for him. The whole suite will then comprise the Duke of Sutherland, Lord Alfred Paget, Lord Aylesford, Lord Carington, Sir Bartle Frere, Lord Suffield, Major-General Probyn, Lord C. Berestord, Colonel A. Ellis, Mr. F. Knollys, Canon Duckworth, Mr. Albert Grey, Captain Williams, Dr. Fayrer, and Dr. Russell. We also are informed that on leaving Brindisi our Grand Master will proceed to Athens, arriving there on the 18th of October. In the capital the Prince will be the guest of the King and Queen of Greece. Remaining at Athens till the 20th of October, the Prince will cross the Mediterranean to Port Said, and enter the Suez Canal. It is expected that the Prince will reach Cairo about the 24th of October. Aden will be the next stage, and thence the Prince will proceed to Bombay. The Prince himself may be expected to return to England about the close of March. The abstract from the "Times" in another page will give our brethren the full account of his departure from England, in itself a subject of great importance to all concerned. Our good wishes and earnest aspirations for his health and happiness go with him, and we trust that the result of his visit to India may answer all our national and patriotic expectations, and tend to the lasting happiness of a mighty Empire. And while we say this in all fervent sincerity, the sympathies and interest of the entire brotherhood will be concentrated, so to say, on that august lady, and that little family circle whom he leaves behind looking forward to his glad return, ere long to a home of affection, of happiness, and peace.

INTOLERANCE OF THE ROMAN CATHOLIC CHURCH. LIBERALITY OF THE ORTHODOX GREEK CHURCH.

We are sure that all our readers will have shared with us the pleasure with which we perused the interesting communication forwarded to us by Bro. H. Jevon from Alexandria. It appears that a deceased brother of ours, an Italian of the name of Figari, a man of "great virtues," as the Greek Patriarch called him, and "who was greatly respected by all who knew him," was refused Christian burial because, and only because, he was a Freemason, by the Roman Catholic authorities. Thereupon, the Patriarch of the orthodox Greek Church, Sophronios, buried him with religious ceremonies. Three hundred Freemasons of all nationalities have presented an address to the Patriarch, of thanks and gratitude, which was kindly received and warmly responded to by that true minister of religion, and we feel sure that all English Freemasons will applaud alike his sentiments and admire his tolerant and kindly sympathies. Indeed, it might be a question whether our Grand Lodge, seeing the all but universal persecution and contumely that Freemasons are now enduring at the hands of the Roman Catholic authorities, should not officially thank the Patriarch Sophronios, in the name of our common Freemasonry, for his act of humanity and kindness. Pleasant as is the contemplation of the religious and brotherly spirit of the good Patriarch of the Greek Church, sad, we think, most sad, is this fresh proof of the high-handed and uncanonical intolerance of the Church of Rome. We believe that we are correct when we say that there is no power invested in the Pope, even straining to the utmost the dogma of personal infallibility, of excommunicating any one without process. If previous Popes have taken upon themselves to excommunicate people wholesale, it has really been an usurped authority, and no canon of the Roman Catholic Church can be produced which justifies any Roman Catholic authority, "mero motu," on his own "ipse dixit," to excommunicate any one without due citation and trial. We are aware that Roman Catholics base their persecution of Freemasons on the decrees of Clement and Gregory, of Pius VII., and of Pius IX., and on the faith of this the Archbishop of Malines excommunicated lately all Freemasons in Belgium "en bloc," and Father Cuffe refused to bury Armourer-Sergeant Johnson, and no doubt, on the same ground the Roman Catholic authorities in Egypt refused to bury poor Advocate Figari. But we challenge any Roman Catholic to shew us any authority for such a proceeding, according to Romish Canon Law, unless, indeed, he falls back on the Council of Avignon, the decree of which relating to this subject has recently been published "in extenso" by our Bro. Albert Mackey, and will shortly appear in the "Masonic Magazine," but which, instead of simplifying the subject, surrounds it with countless difficulties, alike historical and denominational. And, in addition to this technical view of the question, we object on moral grounds to any religious body holding itself up as the "fautor" of persecution, as the representative of intolerance. No more mistaken course has ever been taken by the Church of Rome than in her defiance of the guaranteed liberties of nations, and the humanitarian sympathies of the age, which she daily and hourly exhibits, in constant violation of every law of kindness, decency, and piety. To war with the living is bad enough; to set brother against brother, and nation against nation, is almost the acme of human wickedness, but to carry on the internecine contest with the dead, to make the very graveyard a scene of ruthless intolerance and unforgiving hatred, is enough to make the "angels weep." If the Church of Rome perseveres in her intolerant and untenable course in this respect, or in many others akin to it, she will assuredly end in alienating from herself some of her own best and most educated children, as in thus outraging every feeling of our common humanity she is making herself a sad spectacle, alike for the moralist and the student, the cultivated and the refined, her own honest supporters, and her many rejoicing opponents.

EXTENSION OF THE GIRLS' SCHOOL.

The Quarterly Court of the 9th decided, and we think wisely, to refer, on Bro. Rucker's motion, the above question to the House Committee for consideration and report. Bro. Nunn's motion fell to the ground for want of a seconder, and Bro. R. Stewart withdrew his, as, after his statement, it was quite clear he had not fully realized the whole bearing of the Infirmary question. After the discussion of Saturday last, we are quite convinced that the course pursued was a right one, and we were glad to call attention to some interesting facts and figures contained in an able paper put out by Bro. Rucker, and which were printed last week. One thing is quite clear, that the Girls' School must be increased, and the only question is, how best to do it. If ground cannot be found in the immediate vicinity, it may be necessary to erect a preparatory school, in which all the girls admitted will pass a certain time before passing into the upper school. Indeed, we think that if such passing is made to depend on a test examination of proficiency, the cause of education in our Girls' School will be still further happily promoted! The one little objection we always felt against Bro. Nunn's motion was, whether in his estimate of £25,000 our worthy brother had fully gone into all the needful calculations; as it seemed to us, from some little experience in such matters, rather problematical whether the site could be furnished and accommodation secured for 350 children, on the modern scale of educational requirements, for £25,000. As, moreover, it was stated at the meeting that it was not certain that the ground would be wanted by the railways, it was equally clear that any movement to sell the land and remove the school was at present premature. We therefore, alike in the interests of the Fraternity and our poor orphans, feel it but right to express our entire approval of Bro. Rucker's motion, and to say, that we feel convinced the Craft at large may safely rely on the House Committee to elaborate a plan which shall do credit to the Craft, advance the interests of the School, and, above all, not overlook the most sacred cause of all, in the eyes of every faithful Freemason, the cause of the orphan and the friendless. It was with much regret that we missed the presence of our excellent Bro. R. W. Little at the Quarterly Court, but we hope, and in this we express the feelings of our brotherhood, that he will soon be restored to his normal condition of zeal, and energy, and efficiency, and health.

MASONIC IRREGULARITIES.

We called attention some time back to some very peculiar regulations proposed to be adopted in a lodge in the Province of South Wales, Eastern Division, with reference to the imposition of a fee on all visiting brethren, a proposal which we ventured to say was alike unprecedented and unmasonic. We understood that such proposition was abandoned, and we had hoped to hear no more of it. We have, however, before us now the bye-laws of another lodge in the same province, sanctioned by the P.G.M., though we are inclined to hope and believe, not submitted to the Grand Secretary's Office. In them we read the following bye-law, XVIII., which we give in extenso for various reasons:—"XVIII.—No visitor shall be admitted into the lodge unless he is introduced and vouched for by a subscribing member present, nor until he shall have been properly examined, nor until he has written his name, with the name of the lodge of which he was or is a member, in the attendance book. He shall also produce his Grand Lodge certificate if required to do so. He shall conform when in lodge to its bye-laws, and shall on no account be permitted to address the lodge, except by request, or with the permission of the W.M. The visiting fee shall be five guineas. The member who introduces a visitor shall in all cases be held responsible for his introduction." Now, we venture to conceive that this is a most unparalleled and unconstitutional bye-law, and ought not to be found in any lodge regulations. It is averred, we understand, that other lodges have similar bye-laws—we should be glad to know of them, as we should certainly avoid them, and that this bye-law relates to refreshment. Such an argument is clearly inadmissible and Jesuitical, the whole reference in the bye-law itself being to "in the lodge." We think that the continuance of such an irregularity in any lodge shows an imperfect appreciation of the constitutional rights of Freemasons. But other matters come before us from the same quarter. It is known to many of our readers that a complaint from certain brethren of that province has been "sub judice," with respect to a petition for a new lodge. We complained some time back that a very distinguished brother, the P.G.M., had, evidently inadvertently, departed from the "customs" of Masonry in "like cases," by practically expressing a public opinion on the very question about which the "gravamen" had arisen, and was made. In all such cases we held and hold that any opinion as to the matter of fact itself ought to be carefully avoided by both sides. Subsequently to that we have perused a speech, in which, with reference to another petition, the P.G.M. thus expresses himself, "The Worshipful Prov. G.M., in moving the adoption of the report of the Provincial Grand Lodge Committee, said a very large portion of that report was taken up with the consideration of charities. This was as it should be. For the rest, everything throughout the province was going on prosperously and well. Masonry was progressing. For the second time he had sent up a petition to the Grand Lodge for a warrant for a new lodge at Swansea. He had forwarded the petition, and he had no doubt the warrant would be granted, and that, before long, the Caradog Lodge would be in existence in Swansea in addition to the two already so flourishing there. He might also predict the same for Pontypridd, where, he had no doubt, there would soon be a new lodge opened. He then referred to the Masonic Charities, and hoped the votes of the province would be received for the candidate recommended by the Provincial Grand Lodge Committee—the orphan of the late Bro. Leyshon. The report was adopted." If by the words "second time" this distinguished brother alludes to the "Caradog petition" we have nothing to say, but if he alludes to the original "querela," it is somewhat amusing to remember, that the complaint lately under consideration is, that he never sent the petition up at all. Our attention has also been called to the report of a speech delivered at Aberdare, August 18th, but which for some reason was suppressed in our pages. It is as follows:—"The Worshipful Master gave the toast of 'The Provincial Grand Master, Theodore Mansel Talbot.' In doing so he expressed his regret at the absence of Bro. Talbot. He had indeed, sent an apology, which was a great disappointment to them all. He (the Worshipful Master) did not wish to speak in terms too strong, but he considered that the fact that the Provincial Grand Master had not, although he had been invited, visited them for five years, was one upon which it was impossible not to feel strongly. He had been formally communicated with, and had accepted the invitation with the utmost readiness. It was, therefore, a matter calculated to raise strong feelings that the excuse, he would not say apology, given was that there was a volunteer inspection going on. Considering the notice which had been given, and the Provincial Grand Master's position in Freemasonry, it was not too much to say that he might have kept his engagement with the St. David's Lodge. Although he had felt it necessary to speak severely of Bro. Talbot, he gave his health, with a hope that in the discharge of the duties incumbent on his position he would find time to visit the lodge in the future—and not leave them for five years unnoticed, in spite of repeated and respectful invitations." All these various matters show, we venture to think, a little "screw loose somewhere," and we feel it to be our duty, in the interests of our Order, to allude in a Masonic spirit to what we must deem to be Masonic irregularities.

WEST YORKSHIRE.

We notice a motion given in the agenda paper of the next P.G. Lodge of West Yorkshire by Bro. Cawthorn, P.M. 458, and Past Provincial Assistant Grand Pursuivant, which we have perused with the deepest regret. It is to this effect:

"That this Provincial Grand Lodge of West Yorkshire take into consideration the necessity of thoroughly investigating the management and expenditure of the Royal Masonic Institution for Boys, to the end that a more economic system of collecting and dispensing the funds of the Institution may be arrived at, so that candidates who from time to time are excluded from its benefits by reason of the present system may, by a more judicious and less expensive management, be enabled to participate in the benefits of the Charity; and that this P.G. Lodge pray that the Grand Lodge of England would move a resolution for the appointment of a committee for the investigation of this matter." The province of West Yorkshire was famous in former years for its liberal support of the great Metropolitan Charities, and we deplore the retrograde tendencies of some few amongst our many excellent brethren in that good province—brethren, we make bold to add, who have no experience or knowledge of the subject with which they profess so hastily and so un-Masonically to deal. We venture to think that such a resolution is highly inexpedient and uncalled for, especially at the present time, will be very prejudicial to the interests of the Boys' School, will greatly interfere with its educational work, is most unfair to its official representatives, and we must say, after much consideration, not a little unconstitutional. For it is more than doubtful if the P.G. Lodge, or even G. Lodge itself, can legally pass such a resolution. The Royal Masonic Institution for Boys is a purely voluntary institution, in no way under G. Lodge, except inasmuch and in as far as G. Lodge votes a small annual amount of £150. G. Lodge can inquire into the due appropriation of that amount, but legally we are inclined to think no further. The P.G. Lodge has got its quid pro quo, and has not the slightest right or warrant to pass such a resolution. It is altogether based on unacquaintance with constitutional Masonic Law, and indeed any law. It strikes our mind as ill-advised in the highest degree. We hope that the good sense of our practical West Yorkshire brethren will quash at once such a motion, and put a stop to such a movement, which are the result we feel bound to add, of personal feelings and very questionable proceedings, either in tact, taste, common sense, or Masonic fair play. As we said before, we deplore such an animus, and such a procedure, especially in West Yorkshire, very greatly indeed. We shall recur to the subject next week.

SEWING MACHINES.

In very many homes now-a-days are to be seen, set up as part of the household furniture, especially in the room where ladies "most do congregate," a sewing machine. We do not allude to the "domestic sewing machines," so termed by our irreverent youth, because we consider them very difficult creations to handle and to deal with, but to the real matter-of-fact sewing machine. This is a new "trouvaille," as the French say, even within the last few years practically, and is a distinct innovation on the good old samplers and worsted work of manual production, in that antiquated regime under which our mothers lived. We venture to doubt at the same time that we say this, whether the advance of scientific machinery has given us actually such "fine work" as the nimble fingers of past generations contrived to impress on the often all but living canvas. The modern sewing machine may be considered the symbol of our modern work, and on the whole we hold that it is a good institution. Some young men aver that it is a pleasant medium for flirtations; knowing nothing of that sort of thing ourselves, we take the fact on the faith of our fervid youth, who we think are not unlikely to be for once speaking truth, and prefer to treat the subject in a much more business-like way. Yet of those fair workers who use their sewing machines so diligently day by day, how many, we have often asked ourselves, know the history of that complex yet simple piece of machinery, so useful and so effective in its results, which they see before them hourly, and manipulate habitually? Our contemporary, "The Co-operative and Financial Review," in its 31st number, of Sept. 18, page 103, gives us a most interesting historical resumé of the patent question of the sewing machine, and, after careful perusal of it, we have been led to use much of it in our pages, to "point the moral and adorn the tale" for a large circle of sisters and brethren. It seems that the first machines invented for the purpose of lightening the labour of sewing were all intended to facilitate the execution of embroidery and other ornamentations rather than to assist in the drudgery of plain sewing. The first embroidery machine was patented June 25th, 1755, by Charles Weisenthal. Another improved one was granted to Henry Roche on behalf of Josué Heilmann, May 2, 1829. In 1804 John Duncan obtained his patent for "tambouring upon cloth," a near approach to the present sewing machine. So far the history of such machines has been rather of machines for embroidery than simple sewing, and though sewing machines existed, they had met so far with but little success. A sewing machine was patented to Leonard Borthwick in April, 1844, taken from an older idea, and an improved patent was granted to Arthur Walker in January, 1846. Since that time many sewing machines and patents have been at work, both in England, and the United States, and France, and other countries, including, among others, Howe's patent. And now the question comes on, who is the inventor of the sewing machine? As our contemporary well observes, "like many other important discoveries, it was made by two men at the same time, though they were widely separated from each other, and there is nothing to prove that they had access to the same books, drawings, or specifications of other patents. Most likely the same chain of circumstances produced the same idea in their minds, and as one was a tailor and the other the husband of a sempstress, they had every opportunity of observing the practical requirements of the case." We believe, like our contemporary, that "the earlier of these inventors—the man to whom the credit of introducing the sewing machine to the world is justly due—was a Frenchman named Barthelmy Thimmonnier. He was the son of a dyer, in anything but easy circumstances, and was born at Abreste in 1793. The first record that we have of his own position in life is as late as 1825, when he was a journeyman tailor at St. Etienne. Probably he was an expert workman, for from what we can learn of him he was in the habit of taking small contracts and employing men to work under him, occupying a position similar to that of a chamber-master in this country. It was through trying to increase his business that he first turned his attention to the subject of sewing machines, and as he spent much time and a good deal of money in experiments his neighbours began to believe that his reason was affected, and as a matter of course his business fell off, and in a short time he was reduced to absolute poverty. Nevertheless, he persevered, and after four years' patient labour he completed his machine and obtained a patent in 1830. The principle was that of the simple chain stitch. The needle employed was a curved one, which when it descended through the material had a loop of thread thrown round it by an apparatus termed a thread carrier. This loop was brought up through the material and the previous loop, thus crocheting the work in a similar manner to the old embroidering machine. In this machine no means were provided for regulating the length of the stitch, the work having to be carried forward by hand; but a sort of stop, through which the needle passed, held the work in its place during the sewing of each stitch. Unfortunately, Thimmonnier, like a great many other inventors, had neither the money nor the business aptitude for bringing his patent before the public; accordingly he sought the assistance of a Government engineer, a certain M. Beaunier, then living at St. Etienne. He was favourably impressed with the idea, and through his instrumentality the firm of Feraud, Thimmonnier, Germain, Petit, and Co. was established for the purpose of working the patent. For a time the business prospered, and in 1841 eighty machines made of wood were at work in their factory in the Rue de Sévres upon clothing for the army. But poor Thimmonnier was destined to suffer all the ills that inventors are heir to, and just when his prospects were brightest, and there was every hope of his invention becoming known, a band of ignorant workmen in his own trade, enraged at his success, and too short-sighted to see its ultimate benefit to themselves, broke into his workshop and destroyed his machines. To add to his misfortunes, the engineer Beaunier, to whose business qualities the success of the company was in a great measure due, soon after died; the company, missing his assistance and advice, got into difficulties, and at last stopped altogether, and thus, after so nearly reaching the haven of his desires, Thimmonnier was once more cast penniless upon the world, with all his work to do over again. Like most inventors, bitter as his disappointment was, he was not discouraged. He started for Paris and tried once more to gain his living as a chamber-master. Once more he failed, and this time he turned his face towards his old home at Abreste, and alone and on foot almost begged his way. Just as Goldsmith once supported himself by playing the flute, so this intrepid inventor—who, had he lived in happier times, or had he found some experienced capitalist to take him by the hand, would no doubt have been looked upon as one of the greatest mechanics of the age—supported himself on his journey by exhibiting the model of his machine for the few sous the villagers sometimes gave him. However, he had seen during his short period of prosperity of what his invention was capable, and he bravely set himself to reconquer what he had lost. Once more he constructed a machine, which he was enabled to dispose of without difficulty, and for a time he subsisted entirely on the profits arising from this and subsequent sales. About this time fortune again seemed about to smile upon him. A friend of his—M. Magnin, of Villefranche—joined him, and the machines were now improved by the substitution of metal for wood; the rate of sewing was very much increased, and there seemed to be every prospect of the matter being taken up by manufacturers on a large scale. But he was once more doomed to disappointment. The revolution of 1848, in upsetting for the time the trade of the country, swept away, with many more important—or, at least, better known—institutions, poor Thimmonnier's factory, and the reputation he was acquiring. Ruined as he was, when the revolution had passed away he made one more effort. Though he had been forced to sell his patent in England, he sent a model of his machine to the Great Exhibition of 1851, which was to award justice to all the soldiers in the army of peace. Alas for poor Thimmonnier! it left him unmentioned. For a few years longer he struggled on, neglected and unknown, until in 1857 he died in absolute poverty, still believing in the merits of his invention, but unable to obtain for it the recognition he sought. Thus, doomed to privation and neglect, passed away the first inventor of the now popular sewing machine. Fortunately, the idea did not die with him; it was yet destined to be accepted as one of the most useful inventions of the age, and to reflect honour upon the humble grave of its ill-fated discoverer. Such is the history of the sewing machine, says our contemporary, such, we say is the way of the world. Time and busy life pass over the graves of many like humble benefactors of humanity—we reap the reward of their assiduity, acuteness, labours, sufferings, and yet practically we know nothing about them. When we are using some most useful discovering to-day, we are utterly ignorant often, through what privation and opposition, and even cruel neglect, that brilliant idea was worked out, of which we now can clearly see the inestimable value and reality. How often does it happen, when the inventor has died poor and penniless, the rich adventurer has made a still larger fortune by the once under-valued discovery of many a soldier in the great army of labour like Barthelmy Thimmonnier. Well it is "a queer world, my masters," and yet it is the way of the world, and nothing we believe can alter, nothing can alleviate either its injustice or its oblivion, in that, that being too prosperous, and too self-satisfied, it has no time often to remember its benefactors, and little inclination to remunerate those humble labourers, those poor inventors, who toil through good report and through evil report to offer ease and readiness to labour, and to endow persevering and unending toil with the gracious elements of scientific accuracy and success.

AN OLD MASONIC APRON.

To the Editor of the Freemason.

Dear Sir and Brother,—

Permit me to supplement the brief notice contained in your impression of last week by the following particulars. The Apron was bound with purple ribbon, and with purple strings attached. Upon it were engraven figures of Faith, Hope, and Charity, with different Masonic emblems. Appended was the certificate of the brother to whom it formerly belonged, from the "Grand Lodge of England according to the Old Institutions," more familiarly known as the "Ancients," showing that he was registered on Dec. 4th, 1800, and the certificate signed and sealed Nov. 5th, 1801, by Robt. Leslie, G. Sec., and Edward Harper, D.G. Sec. The name of the brother, "Jonathan Smith," was duly inscribed in the margin, and written underneath, "Lodge 258, Bear and Wheatsheaf, Thames-street, London." This lodge, which did not then appear to have any distinctive name, but to have been known by its number and the house at which it assembled, as it occurs in the "Ahiman Rezon," or Book of Constitutions of the "Ancients," as "258, Northumberland Arms, Artillery Lane, London," and subsequently to that, at the "Hercules Tower, Threadneedle-street, London," as I learn from Bro. Hughan's interesting "Memorials of the Masonic Union of 1813," is now known as the Lion and Lamb Lodge, No. 192, meeting at the City Terminus Hotel, in Cannon-street. I felt therefore that so interesting a memento would be more appropriately in the possession of that lodge, and, as you have already intimated, have desired Bro. Kenning, as one of its P.M.'s, to make the presentation on my behalf.

I am, dear Sir and Brother, yours fraternally,

J. H. JUKES.

Oct. 5th, 1875.

"A QUOTATION."

To the Editor of the Freemason.

Dear Sir and Brother,—

You will not object, I daresay, to my informing Bro. William Bernard, in return for his kind instruction to "editors and leader writers generally, and yourself, I presume, in particular, that the passage in question contained in the article on Bro. Major Burgess (Sept. 4th), is strictly correct.

The writer of that article says:—"The old saying is true . . . 'A man convinced against his will, is of the same opinion still,' and that same 'old saying' has existed and been in use in that same identical form for many a long year.

As an "old saying," and not as a quotation from Butler, the writer used it.

Who is to say that Butler was the originator of that "old saying?" for we know how writers in all ages have quoted from one another, sometimes, it is true, word for word, but quite as frequently clothing the borrowed thought in their own diction.

Would it not be well for Bro. William Bernard to "be careful in matters of this kind" before starting to publicly educate you, "the public educator," &c.?

I put this question very impartially, as I was

NOT THAT "LEADER WRITER."

To the Editor of the Freemason.

Dear Sir and Brother,—

I read with deep interest an account of the progress of Freemasonry in the Isle of Man in your last issue. Your intelligent correspondent has struck a nail which I think it would be well to "drive home." His suggestion relative to the formation of a Prov. Grand Lodge for the Isle of Man is an excellent one, and one worthy the attentive consideration of those in authority. Our Manx brethren have no Prov. Grand Lodge at present, and it would not be strange, in a position of such indirect responsibility, if irregularities were found among them; but we have the testimony of your excellent correspondent that such is not the case. Still they desire and should have some incentive to work by and up to our ancient landmarks. At present they are kept together by the truly Masonic feelings which pervade them, and by the frequent visits of "foreign" brethren. This, however, may not last always, and its place can only be supplied by the formation of a Prov. Grand Lodge. May we hope to hear from some of your able correspondents how this can be done.

I am, dear Sir and Brother, yours very faithfully and fraternally,

D. W. FINNEY, P.M., P.Z., &c.

LIST OF GRAND MASTERS.

To the Editor of the Freemason.

Dear Sir and Brother,—

In the book I quoted last week is the following:—A List of Provincial Grand Masters deputed by and under the protection of the Grand Master of England.

Deputations for Provincial Grand Masters were granted, In 1726 by Lord Paisley; Grand Master, to Sir Edward Mansell, Bart., for South Wales; Hugh Warburton, Esq., for North Wales.

In 1728 by Lord Kingston, Grand Master, to George Pomfret, Esq., for Bengal, in the East Indies.

In 1729 by the Duke of Norfolk, Grand Master, to Captain Ralph Farwinter, for the East Indies; Monsieur Thunannas, for the Circle of Lower Saxony; Mr. Daniel Cox, for New Jersey, in America.

In 1731 by Lord Lovell, now Earl of Leicester, Grand Master, to Captain John Phillips, for all the Russians, &c., &c., &c.

Should you think the above list worth while copying for the "Freemason" I shall be happy to do so. The list goes as far as 1767, to Lord Blancy, Grand Master.

I am, dear Sir and Brother, yours fraternally,

ROBERT OWEN, R.W.O.

MASONIC JEWELS.

To the Editor of the Freemason.

Dear Sir and Brother,—

The Masonic season in London, now commencing, will abound with installations and presentations of jewels to retiring W.M.'s, subscribed for by some brethren, and voted from lodge funds by others, and I should like to repeat and ventilate in your journal what I advocated in the "Masonic Mirror" years ago, viz., that instead of spending the money upon jewels of a given "carat" of gold, it should be given to the charity the brother shall select, and that our respected and worthy Secretaries of these several charities should institute a commemorative jewel in "silver gilt," recording the fact of its presentation by such and such a lodge. The numbers they would annually require would, I should fancy, enable them to get a very handsome jewel for about 30s. or 35s., and it would answer their purpose to give even a larger amount and secure the presentation amount of £5 5s., or, if more, the same could be recognized by "bars" on the ribbon. By this method our charities would be greatly enriched, and the money flow in the proper channel; and on a brother's decease his relatives would have the satisfaction of knowing that his jewels represented the good done to charity in the brother's lifetime, instead of finding that a number of very costly jewels are only realisable at "breaking up" price, which, in many instances, will not produce in shillings what has been spent in pounds, and thereby one of our "watchwords" grossly abused.

Yours truly,

P.M.

PROVINCIAL GRAND LODGE OF WEST LANCASHIRE.

By command of Bro. the Right Hon. Lord Skelmersdale, R.W. Deputy Grand Master of England, the Provincial Grand Master, the annual meeting of the Provincial Grand Lodge of the Western Division of the county of Lancashire, was held on Wednesday, the 6th inst., at the Guildhall, Preston, for the transaction of the annual business of the province. "Proud Preston" has never before witnessed a Masonic gathering of a like magnitude and importance, and, therefore, it caused no small interest and excitement in the place. The popularity and acceptance of the rule of Lord Skelmersdale were clearly established by the attendance of between 500 and 600 brethren from every part of the province, with one exception, there being sixty-nine lodges represented. The arrangements for the conduct of business were admirable, and the meeting place was well adapted for the purposes of the annual gathering.

The Craft Lodge was opened shortly after noon, Bro. Hunt, W.M. 113, officiating as W.M.; Bro. Bowes, W.M. 148, as S.W.; Bro. Johnston, W.M. 203, as J.W.; Bro. Hughes, W.M. 220, as S.D.; and Bro. Richard Brown, W.M. 241, as J.D.

After the usual preliminaries, the Provincial Grand Lodge was opened, under the presidency of Bro. the Right Hon. Lord Skelmersdale; R.W.P.G.M., the following other brethren also officiating:—Bro. T. Wylie, P.P.G. Reg., acting as D.P.G.M.; Bro. A. Stoddart, S.G.W.; G. Remington, J.G.W.; the Rev. J. M. Morgan, P.G.C.; Reuben Pearson, P.G. Reg.; H. S. Alpess, P.G. Sec.; Robert Wilson, P.G.S.D.; W. J. Turley, P.G.J.D.; George Owen, P.G. Supt. of Wks.; J. R. Goepel, P.G.D.C.; Wm. Leather, P.G., Assistant D.C.; T. Archer Lowe, P.G.S.B.; Joseph Skeaf, P.G.O.; Watson Barker, P.G. Purst.; and Armstrong, P.G.T. Amongst the other P.G. Officers present were Bro. the Rev. J. F. Goggin, P.P.G.C.; Gilbert Greenall, M.P., P.P.G.J.W.; Dr. J. T. Smith, P.G.S.; J. Lunt, P.G.S.; S. Johnson, P.G.S.; G. Broadbridge, P.P.G.D.C.; Dr. Moore, P.P.G.S.B.; F. A. Binckes, G.S.; S. E. Ibbes, P.P.G.S.B. (Lincolnshire); N. W. Newell, P.P.G.S.B.; W. Doyle, P.P.J.G.D.

Amongst the principals from the Craft lodges were Bro. Thomas Shaw, W.M. 823; T. G. Bark, W.M. 1380; Richard Brown, W.M. 241; Henry Jackson, W.M. 1393; J. K. Digges, W.M. 673; Joseph Bell, W.M. 1356; F. W. N. Johnson, W.M. 1213; Edward Tale, W.M. 178; John Cockshott, W.M. 343; W. Jones, W.M. 1299; Robert Cross, W.M. 484; Thomas Ocklishaw, W.M. 667; William Archer, W.M. 1086; P. B. Forshaw, W.M. 1403; Harold Wyatt, W.M. 1473; H. P. Benton, W.M. 333; Thomas C. The roll of the lodges of the province having been called over, it was reported that every lodge in the province was represented with the exception of the Chorlton Lodge, 1387, held at Chorlton-cum-Hardy, the usual fine being imposed in this case.

The minutes of the previous meeting of the Provincial Grand Lodge, held at the Masonic Hall, Liverpool, were read, and on the motion of Bro. Goepel, P.G.D.C., seconded by Bro. Dr. Kellet Smith, P.G.S., P.M. 1094, they were confirmed.

Bro. T. Armstrong, P.G. Treas., submitted the annual accounts of the Provincial Grand Lodge, from which it appeared that there was a balance in favour of Provincial Grand Lodge fees amounting to £429 15s. 7d., to the Fund of Benevolence £1328 7s. 3d., making a total of £1758 2s. 10d.

On the motion of Bro. J. R. Goepel, P.D.G.C., seconded by Bro. Dr. J. K. Smith, P.G.S., the accounts were adopted and passed.

On the motion of Bro. T. Wylie, P. Prov. G. Reg., seconded by Bro. Alpess, P.G. Sec., it was unanimously resolved to vote the sum of £40 from the funds, in aid of the Royal Masonic Institution for Boys in London.

On the motion of Bro. Goepel, P.G.D.C., Bro. T. Armstrong was re-elected P.G. Treasurer by acclamation.

The R.W.P.G.M. then appointed the following as his officers for the year 1875-6:—

Hon. F. A. Stanley	Dep. Prov. G.M.
Charles Fryer (Mayor of Preston)	Prov. S.G.W.
W. C. Deeley	Prov. J.G.W.
Rev. J. M. Morgan	Prov. G. Chaplain.
Dr. J. Kellet Smith	Prov. G. Reg.
H. S. Alpess (re-ap.)	Prov. G. Sec.
J. Gillman	Prov. G.S.D.
W. Leader	Prov. G.J.D.
H. Bagot	Prov. G. S. of Wks.
J. Lunt	Prov. G.D.C.
S. Johnson	Prov. G.A.D.C.

Bowden	Prov. G.S.B.
J. Skeaf (re-ap.)	Prov. G.O.
W. J. Sly	Prov. G. Purst.
G. Cornfield, J. Pemberton, P. Mackmuldrow, J. S. Roberts, H. Collinson, and J. Jackson	Prov. G. Stewards.
P. Ball	Prov. G. Tyler.
W. H. Ball	Prov. G.A. Tyler.

The sum of £60 was voted from the Funds of Benevolence and P.G. Lodge in aid of the widows of deserving deceased Freemasons.

Bro. R. Wylie moved a resolution to the effect that for every brother initiated the sum of five shillings, and for every brother joining the sum of one shilling, be paid to a fund to be called a charity account, which should be devoted to the assistance of the London charities. The motion was seconded by Bro. Dr. Smith, P.G. Reg., and agreed to. Bro. R. Wylie also moved that the sum of £100 be voted to the Benevolent Fund of the Institution for aged Freemasons in London. Bro. Goepel seconded the motion, which was agreed to. Bro. Lord Skelmersdale stating that he would probably preside at the coming festival of that institution, and hoped that he would be well supported by the brethren from West Lancashire. (Loud cheers.) On the motion of Bro. R. Wylie, the sum of £20 was voted to the Hamer Benevolent Fund.

Bro. H. S. Alpess, P.G. Secretary, read his report for the past year, which was of a very satisfactory character. It appeared that two new lodges had been added to the number in the province—the Lodge of Israel and the Liverpool Lodge. It was also reported that the Craft continued to increase in numbers, although many lodges had increased their initiation fee, with the view of keeping the Order as select as possible. The new Masonic Hall at Liverpool was reported to be greatly approved of, though some money, it was said, was still needed to complete the building.

The second annual report of the Hamer Benevolent Fund, submitted by Bro. R. Wylie, P.P.S.G.D. Hon. Sec., which was taken as read, showed that the state of the funds now warranted the committee in receiving applications for assistance from deserving brethren. The progress made during the past year was a proof that many brethren were convinced that great benefit was likely to be derived from the fund. It appeared from the Treasurer's account that £230 were invested in connection with the fund and £132 12s. 10d. in the bank. The report and accounts were adopted and office-bearers appointed.

The Provincial Grand Lodge was then constituted a Court of Governors of the West Lancashire Masonic Educational Institution.

Bro. R. Brown, W.M. 241 (Merchants' Lodge), Honorary Secretary to the institution, has recently issued the following report, which indicates the present position of the charity:—

"Your committee, in once more presenting the annual statement of accounts for the year 1874, have again the pleasure to report the continued prosperity, progress, and usefulness of the institution; but, before referring to matters more immediately requiring notice in connection with the working of the charity, your committee desire to place on record their great and heartfelt regret at the loss the institution and the Masonic fraternity throughout the province have sustained through the death of Brother Andrew Cook Mott, who for eight years acted as honorary secretary, and to whose unexampled energy and exertions may be attributed much of the success of the institution during that period. Your committee cannot but feel that the result of Brother Mott's labours in this matter is a brilliant and lasting memorial to his great energy, perseverance, and Masonic zeal in the cause of charity. The statement annexed shows a gratifying increase in the progress of the institution, both financially and in the direction of extended usefulness. The income for the year from invested funds amounts to £481 12s. 11d., and the income from other sources, including donations and subscriptions, fees from lodges, the proceeds of the annual ball, &c., is £838 14s. 2d.; the result of the year's working being that, after making the necessary payments for the education and advancement of the children on the foundation of the institution, there has been added to the funds the sum of £969 6s. 7d., making the total amount to £11,815 1s. 4d. It is gratifying to note that this saving has been effected without in any way curtailing the excellent objects of the charity, the number of children receiving the benefits afforded by the institution having been increased from 44 to 48. This prosperous state of the funds warrants your committee in venturing to suggest that the time has arrived when they may fairly make such arrangements as will tend to enlarge the advantages of the charity, and to grant, in certain instances, in addition to the benefits of a liberal education, such clothing as will allow the children attending school to appear more respectable than some of them are at present enabled to do; and, with this object, such alterations in the rules as are necessary will be submitted for your approval at an early date. Your committee hope that the brethren throughout the province will endorse this desire to extend the benefits of the charity, by continued co-operation and support, and they have no doubt their exertions will be crowned by an abundant measure of success."

Bro. Brown read the minutes of the different meetings held during the year, and the office-bearers in connection with the institution were appointed.

When the Provincial Grand Lodge resumed, Bro. J. F. Goggin, P.P.G. Chaplain, said he did not see why the Masons of West Lancashire should be denied a privilege which was enjoyed by every other province in the kingdom, viz., that of attending church in connection with their annual meeting. It was satisfactory to find that charity prevailed, but charity without prayer was nothing, as prayer without charity was nothing. He hoped that in future the Craft would have the privilege of attending Divine service in connection with their annual meetings. The P.G.M. concurred with Bro. Goggin in thinking they ought to attend church before proceeding with the Provincial Grand Lodge business, and promised that the matter would be considered.

The following letter was read from the Precentor of Chester Cathedral:—

Abbey Court, Chester, Oct. 5.

My Lord,—With every expression of apology for the liberty I am taking, I venture, on behalf of our Cathedral Restoration, to ask if you could give your kind assistance to the work by introducing to the notice of the Freemasons of Lancashire, at least as much of it as may be included in the diocese of Chester, the suggestion that a fund, similar to that raised by the lodges of Lord De Tabley's province in Cheshire, might possibly be generously subscribed to by members of lodges in West Lancashire.

A pulpit has been given by the Freemasons of Cheshire, at a cost of £450; and if any once special part of the work were to be undertaken by the Freemasons of West Lancashire it would be highly gratifying to the Dean and Chapter.

I venture to add three things which are much wanted:—The stone sedilia, £450; the pavement under central tower, £400; the corona, or means of lighting, £750.

With every apology for my bold intrusion, I am, my Lord, yours faithfully,

EDWD. L. Y. DEACLE,

Precentor of the Cathedral.

The P.G.M. thought such a contribution would be highly meritorious to the brethren, and he suggested that some of the brethren should take the matter in hand, and see what could be done—a suggestion which met with very general approval.

It was resolved that a vote of sympathy with Mrs. Brabner, widow of the late Bro. Brabner, so long identified with Masonry in the province, should be recorded on the minutes.

The Provincial Grand Officers then retired, and the Craft lodge was closed by Bro. Nevett, W.M. 113.

A large number of the brethren subsequently sat down to a banquet at the Temporary Corn Exchange, under the presidency of Lord Skelmersdale, but the catering was so insufficient and inefficient that a large number of the brethren left and sought for sustenance elsewhere at the hotels, which was much needed, as many had fasted since early morning. It is to be regretted that this unpleasant episode in an otherwise pleasant and satisfactory day's proceedings should have occurred, and it is to be hoped that in future years the same state of things may not arise. The usual loyal and Masonic toasts, it is said, were proposed during the evening, Bro. Alpess, P.G. Sec., proposing "The R.W.P.G.M., Lord Skelmersdale," who replied in a happy speech, "giving good sound advice to Freemasons, and counselling a more liberal support of the London charities. Bro. R. Brown, Hon. Sec., replied for the West Lancashire Masonic Educational Institution in a capital speech, which was enthusiastically received.

PROVINCIAL GRAND LODGE OF CUMBERLAND AND WESTMORLAND.

The annual meeting of the Provincial Grand Lodge of Freemasons, belonging to Cumberland and Westmorland, was held at Penrith on the 8th inst., under the banner of Lodge Unanimity, Sir Richard C. Musgrave, Bart., W.M.

It may be remembered that the Right Hon. the Earl of Bective, Right Worshipful Provincial Grand Master of Cumberland and Westmorland, some time ago announced his intention to hold the annual Grand Lodge this year at Kirkby Lonsdale, and afterwards to entertain the brethren to a banquet at his beautiful seat, Underley. Owing, however, to a painful domestic bereavement, this generous intention had to be abandoned. In this emergency the brethren of Lodge 339 were applied to, and they at once undertook to entertain the Grand Lodge.

The Provincial Grand Lodge was opened in the billiard-room at the New Crown Hotel, by Bro. Jos. Kirkbride, P.M., P.P.G.P. Colonel Whitwell, M.P., R.W. Deputy Grand Master, Past Grand Warden of England, presided, in the absence of the Earl of Bective.

After the minutes had been read, the Grand Treasurer's accounts were approved and adopted, as also the Charity Committee's report, in which it was recommended that the support of all lodges and individual subscribers in the province be accorded to the son of a deceased brother of Solway Lodge, Silloth, in order to insure his admission to the Freemasons' Boys' School in London.

The Treasurer's accounts showed a balance in favour of the Grand Lodge of £230 5s. 7½d. A notice of motion, signed by Bro. Thomas Dodgson, of Millom, was then taken into consideration, to the effect that it was desirable to form an institution in the province for the education and advancement in life of the children of deceased and distressed Freemasons. A committee was thereupon formed, to report to next meeting, amongst the members being Colonel Whitwell, M.P.; Lord Muncaster, M.P.; Sir R. C. Musgrave, Bart.; Rev. Dr. Simpson (Kirkby Stephen), Rev. E. Cockett (Upperby), &c. Bro. John Lemon, P.M., St. John's Lodge, Wigton, P.P.G.S.W., was unanimously re-elected Provincial Grand Treasurer; and Bro. J. Gardiner, P.M. 371, Maryport, was elected Provincial Grand Tyler for the ensuing year.

The officers for the year were invested by the R.W. Acting Grand Master as follows:—

J. Porter	Prov. G.S.W.
W. Dodd	Prov. G.J.W.
Rev. W. Beeby	Prov. G. Chap.
Rev. C. H. Gem	Prov. G. A. Chap.
J. Lemon	Prov. G. Treas.
W. B. Gibson	Prov. G. Sec.
Sir R. C. Musgrave	Prov. G. Reg.
J. R. Bain	Prov. G. S. Wks.
C. J. Smith	Prov. G.S.D.

J. Bain Prov. G.J.D.

 Grand Stewards:—Bros. T. McMechan, Dr. Dinwoodie, J. J. Beattie, A. Hodgetts, W. F. Lamonby, J. W. Young.

After the officers were invested, the Right Worshipful the Deputy Prov. Grand Master, Colonel Whitwell, addressing the brethren, said they would all remember that at the recent installation of His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales as Grand Master of the Order, two brethren were appointed from this province to attend as Stewards. They were brethren highly esteemed amongst them, one from the south and the other from the west, and they had discharged their duties on that occasion—no doubt at considerable expense of time and money—in a highly satisfactory manner, and he would suggest that in commemoration of that great event, and as a mark of their appreciation of the services of the two brethren, that the Steward's jewel which they were entitled to wear should be presented to them by the Provincial Grand Lodge.

A motion embodying the suggestion having been proposed, seconded, and unanimously agreed to, the Deputy Provincial Grand Master, with some highly complimentary remarks, referring to the long and valued services of Bro. Lemon, Provincial Grand Treasurer, and to the energy and zeal Bro. H. Rauthmell, Past Provincial Grand Director of Ceremonies, had displayed in Freemasonry, presented to each of them the jewel specially designed by Sir A. W. Woods, Garter G.D.C. of England, which was approved by His Royal Highness the Most Worshipful Grand Master, and is to be worn suspended by a ribbon of the Swedish national colours by the Stewards who officiated at the installation of His Royal Highness, April 28th, 1875.

Bro. Lemon thanked the brethren in feeling terms, and said that the jewel they had just presented to him would be highly prized and valued, as a token of their regard, so long as he lived, and that it would be handed down as an heirloom to generations that would come after him.

Bro. Rauthmell said, in thanking the Prov. Grand Lodge, that it did not need this additional proof to convince him of their kindly feelings towards him. He assured them that he felt it was a very great honour to have been appointed to represent as Steward so important a province as that of Cumberland and Westmorland on the occasion of the installation of His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales as Most Worshipful Grand Master of their Order. Whenever he looked upon the jewel which they had just presented to him it would be with twofold gratification and pleasure; it would recall to his memory that brilliant scene he witnessed in the Albert Hall, in which he had the honour of taking a part; and secondly, but not less, he should value it for the kindly sentiments that had accompanied its presentation from the Provincial Grand Lodge.

A very sincere vote of sympathy was unanimously passed to the R.W. Provincial Grand Master, on his recent severe bereavement.

A vote of thanks was also given to the brethren of the Unanimity Lodge for their kind entertainment of the Provincial Grand Lodge at so short a notice.

After the lodge was closed, the brethren were marshalled in order of procession, and marched to the parish church, Bective Lodge heading the procession, where an excellent sermon was preached by the Rev. F. W. Wicks, St. Nicholas', Whitehaven, Past Provincial Grand Chaplain, from the following text:—Ephesians, c. 2, v. 21—"In whom all the building fitly framed together, growth into an holy temple in the Lord." Bro. Freeman, Provincial Grand Organist, presided at the organ.

Returning to the New Crown Hall, banquet was served, Colonel Whitwell, M.P., presiding, supported on the right by the Rev. S. J. Butler, Penrith; Rev. T. R. Holme, P.P.G. Chap.; Bro. J. Lemon, Grand Treasurer, and others; and on the left by the Rev. F. Wicks, Rev. W. Beeby, Bro. Porter, and others.

The Chairman proposed "The Health of Her Majesty the Queen." As Masons and Englishmen they loved their Queen, the mother of three sons who are Masons. (Cheers.)

The Chairman next gave "The Prince of Wales and the rest of the Royal Family." The toast he applied to the Prince of Wales as heir to the throne, and he should have an opportunity later on of proposing His Royal Highness's health in another capacity. (Cheers.)

The Rev. F. W. Wicks, in an energetic speech, proposed "The Army, Navy, and Auxiliary Forces."

The Chairman next proposed "The Bishop and Clergy of the Diocese." The Rev. S. J. Butler responded.

The Chairman said the next toast was one of no slight importance to the company; it was "The Health of their Royal Grand Master." (Cheers.) Many of those present in the room had seen the Prince of Wales installed on the throne of English Masonry the other day. That was an assembly that filled not only England, but the whole of Europe, with admiration, and for the reason that a society, proscribed by some potentates, had chosen for their ruler a prince who would one day become Sovereign of the greatest realm in the world. (Cheers.)

The Chairman then proposed "The Healths of the Earl of Carnarvon, Pro Grand Master of England; Lord Skelmersdale, Deputy Grand Master; and the rest of the Officers of the Grand Lodge."

The Chairman next proposed the health of one who was not present with them, their R.W. Provincial Grand Master. (Cheers.) They all knew the reason of the Earl of Bective's absence that day. He had a letter from his lordship, who said he had never been absent from an annual meeting since his election as Provincial Grand Master. He begged to convey his extreme regret at not being able to be present. Their Provincial Grand Master had been congratulated on the increase in their ranks, and he

(the chairman) should be glad to congratulate his lordship on the entire success of their meeting to-day. (Cheers.) He only hoped that on the occasion of their next meeting they would have his lordship amongst them again.

The Rev. F. W. Wicks proposed "The Health of the Chairman, and the rest of the Provincial Grand Officers." (Cheers.) He did not wonder at the outburst of enthusiasm which met the proposition, for he always heard the name of Colonel Whitwell spoken of by Freemasons with the heartiest respect and brotherly esteem. (Cheers.)

The Chairman, in returning thanks, said that when he came amongst Masons he found human nature in its truest form, and he felt that his feeble efforts were too much praised. Speaking of the progress of Freemasonry in Cumberland and Westmorland, he said it was a noble tree, whose branches were spreading out year after year.

Bros. Lemon and Gibson replied on behalf of the other Provincial Grand Officers.

Bro. Lemon proposed "The Health of the W. Masters of Lodges in the Province," each of whom present responded.

The remaining toasts were "The Visiting Brethren," "The Masonic Charities," and "The Tyler's Toast."

The company broke up about six o'clock. The arrangements of the meeting were admirably carried out under the experienced and energetic management of Bro. W. Kirkbride, P.M., Secretary of the Lodge of Unanimity. "Kendal Times," Oct. 9, 1875.

PROVINCIAL GRAND LODGE OF SUSSEX.

The annual meeting of the Provincial Grand Lodge of Ancient Free and Accepted Masons of Sussex was held in the Music-room, at the Royal Pavilion, Brighton, on Thursday, 30th, ult. Bro. E. J. Furner, P.G.D., Dep. Prov. G. M., presided, and there were about 130 members present. Two o'clock was the time fixed for the commencement of the proceedings, but it was nearly three before the meeting began. The first business on the agenda was to receive a letter from Lord Pelham, Prov. G. Master, requesting Bro. Furner, D.P.G.M., to transact the entire business of the province in his stead, and during his pleasure. The letter was read, and the Deputy Prov. G.M. explained that the Prov. G.M. was led to make this request in consequence of continued indisposition. The letter was ordered to be recorded in the minute-book. Bro. C. J. Smith, of Cliftonville, moved that the letter should be re-considered. He thought that the long-continued illness of the Prov. G.M. was one reason why he should resign the reins of office to the man upon whom its labours really devolved. His proposition was, however, ruled out of order. A letter respecting the funeral of the late Bro. Pocock having been read, the Acting Prov. G.M. proposed the following resolution:—"It is with feelings of deep regret that the members of the Provincial Grand Lodge of Sussex record in their minute book the decease of Bro. Gavin Elliott Pocock, which took place on the first day of the present year. His untiring exertions during the twenty years of his Provincial Grand Secretaryship were duly acknowledged by a unanimous vote of thanks at the annual meeting, two years ago, and the high estimation in which he was held by his Masonic brethren was evinced by the testimonial which was presented to him last year; so that it is unnecessary now to dilate upon his worth. The melancholy duty, however, of formally declaring the loss Freemasonry has sustained by the removal from its ranks of so distinguished and so devoted a brother, still remains, and, therefore, the members of this Provincial Grand Lodge resolve to place on their minutes this record of their sorrow at the death of Bro. Pocock; and further, in order to perpetuate the recollection of the high regard in which he was held by them, and in recognition of the great services he rendered to Freemasonry, both as regards its ceremonies and its charities, they vote from the funds of this provincial Grand Lodge the sum of fifty guineas to the Royal Masonic Institution for Girls, to be registered in the books of that institution as the 'Pocock Memorial,' the privileges of this donation to be exercised in perpetuity by the Provincial Grand Master for the time being." Bro. S. R. Ade proposed the word "Deputy" before the term "Prov. Grand Master," contained in the last clause of the resolution, but subsequently withdrew his proposition, and the resolution was agreed to in its original form. The report of the Finance Committee was presented, and ordered to be entered on the minutes. Bro. G. Tatham was re-elected Prov. Grand Treasurer; and the following Prov. Grand Officers were appointed and invested: Bro. E. J. Furner, Deputy Prov. G.M., acting as Prov. G.M.; Bros. J. Cunningham, as Dep. Prov. G.M.; W. H. Hallett, Prov. G.S.W.; L. J. Bridgen, Prov. G.J.W.; C. A. Woolley, Prov. G. Reg.; J. H. Scott, Prov. Sec.; W. H. German, Prov. G.S.D.; J. Dorman, Prov. G.J.D.; J. O'Brien, Prov. G. Chaplain; J. Dixon, Prov. G.D. of C.; R. Pidcock, Prov. G.A.D. of C.; J. M. Reed, Prov. G. Sup. of W.; C. Walker, Prov. G. Swd.B.; Bostock, Prov. G. Purst.; and W. Smith, J. Eberall, Crouch, and W. Read, Prov. G. Stewards. Bro. Trollope, P. Prov. G.J. Warden, proposed the following motion, of which he had given notice:—"That Bro. John H. Scott and Bro. V. P. Freeman, the brethren appointed to act as Stewards for the Province of Sussex, on the occasion of the installation of his Royal Highness the Prince of Wales as M.W.G.M., be presented from the funds of this Prov. Grand Lodge with the jewel struck by order of Grand Lodge, to be worn only by those who acted as Stewards on that memorable day." The resolution was unanimously agreed to, the Prov. Grand Secretary following it up with a few appropriate remarks. There was no ordinary business to be transacted. The lodge was closed in proper form and with solemn prayer. It was followed by a banquet, served by Messrs. Mutton Brothers, King's Road, Brighton, in the banqueting-room, in their best style, about one hundred brethren partaking of it.

PROVINCIAL GRAND LODGE OF NORTHUMBERLAND.

On Thursday, September 30th, the annual gathering of the Provincial Grand Lodge of Free and Accepted Masons belonging to the Province of Northumberland was held in the ancient town of Hexham, under the banner of the Northern Counties Lodge, 406. The brethren assembled in goodly numbers in the Town Hall, which was very beautifully decorated for the occasion by a rich assortment of green and hot house plants, ferns, &c., which were kindly lent by Mr. Ralph Robson, of Hexham, and the massive, elegant furniture of the new Albert Edward Lodge gave to the spacious hall an imposing and impressive appearance. The assembly was presided over by the Right Hon. Earl Percy, M.P., the Right Worshipful Provincial Grand Master of Northumberland. The S.W. chair was occupied by Bro. T. B. Winter, P.G.S.W.; and the J.W. chair by Bro. A. Potter, P.G.J.W. The minutes of the previous lodge having been read and received, the various reports for the past year were read and received, from which it transpired that the ancient Order was prospering within the province. The proceedings of the day were rendered highly interesting by the consecration of a new lodge in the town of Hexham called the Albert Edward Lodge, No. 1557. The solemn and imposing ceremony was duly performed with all the accustomed rites and usages by the Provincial Grand Master and his officers. The lodge having been duly consecrated, Bro. George White, of Dilston Villa, was duly installed into the chair of K.S., as the first Worshipful Master of the Albert Edward Lodge. The business having been transacted, the lodge was closed in due form, and the brethren adjourned to the banquet, which was served up in first rate style. The banqueting hall was also beautifully decorated. The chair was occupied by the Right Hon. Earl Percy, P.G.M., and the vice-chairs by Bro. B. J. Thompson and Bro. C. Jarvis, W.M. Tyne Lodge. Upwards of 200 brethren partook of a recherché repast.

ROYAL MASONIC INSTITUTION FOR GIRLS.

The Quarterly Court of Governors, &c., of this Institution met on Saturday last in the Board-room, Freemasons' Hall, Bro. Major Creaton, Vice-patron, presiding.

Among the other brethren present were R. J. Spiers, Thomas Massa, F. Binckes, Joshua Nunn, Benjamin Head, J. Stohwasser, William Stephens, Edward Harris, F. Tyerman, J. G. Sturch, W. J. Mantle, H. Moore, George Bolton, H. Massey ("Freemason"), Robert Kenyon, Walter Wellsman, H. Browse, John A. Rucker, George Kelly, A. H. Tattershall, Henry G. Warren, Edward Clark, Alfred H. Diaper, Thomas Kett, Henry Smith, J. L. Hime, Raynham W. Stewart, James A. Birch, John Sutcliffe, W. J. Stracey, C. Swan, Donald King, Charles Jardine, H. Hacker, W. Downing, J. Vaughan, D.P.G.M. Somerset; S. Rawson, John Symonds, T. J. Sabine, J. Terry, Griffiths Smith, Peter de L. Long, L. Keough, H. A. Dubois, W. Lane, F. J. Cox, R. W. Townsend, R. Spencer, R. H. Whiteman, R. B. Webster, James Bellamy, J. Bodenham, A. H. Edwards, John Simpson, 910 W.Y.; W. Hickman, D.P.G.M. Hants; William Hale, W. A. Bowler, C. Koeste, C. F. Hogard, J. Thompson, C. Waters, R. H. Wand, J. Porter, E. J. McIntyre, Richard Cope, John Boyd, Henry Dubosc, Edward Cox, F. H. Ebsworth, Thomas Meekham, C. A. Cottebrune, W. Manger, W. F. C. Moutrie, W. Watson, James Stephens, W. Lane, H. Muggeridge, H. G. Buss, Dr. Hogg, J. Emmens, F. Davison, W. Swallow, and Bro. Cole (Aldershot).

Bro. Hedges acted for Bro. Little.

The Chairman in opening the proceedings said he was sorry to inform the brethren that Bro. Little, the secretary, was ill, and unable to be present. A certificate had been sent by his medical attendant that he (Bro. Little) was unable to leave his room, a circumstance which he (the chairman) was sure all would regret. (Hear, hear.)

Bro. Hedges having read the different minutes, which were put and confirmed,

Bro. Joshua Nunn, P.G.S.B., rose to bring on the following motion, of which he had given notice:—

"With a view to enable the Institution to accommodate a greater number of children, found necessary by the increase of applications (four-fifths of the applicants at the next election cannot be admitted for want of room), and the vastly extending growth of the Craft generally, with the circumstance that space cannot be obtained on the limited site of the present School, as it is so hemmed in by railway lines and buildings, and which, at no distant period, will be required (or partially so) for increased railway accommodation, that year by year has extended since the School has been at Wandsworth.

"That a sum not exceeding twenty-five thousand pounds (£25,000) be expended out of the Funds of the Institution in the purchase of land, and the erection of a suitable school-house and buildings, to educate and support two hundred children, and to be so arranged that in the event of the existing School being removed, space be found for extending the same, so as to contain all the children under one roof.

"In the event of my proposition being carried: That a Sub-Committee be formed out of the General Committee to carry out the details, and complete the same."

In doing so he said that the brethren had no doubt all read this motion, which had been advertised, and probably they might not all agree with him in his proposition to spend so large a sum as £25,000; but when he informed them that in the funds of the institution they had £40,000, perhaps they might think otherwise. An immense number of children were continuously knocking at their doors, and the time was not far distant when, as it would be almost impossible for them to take any more girls in at the present building at Wandsworth, and they could not get sufficient additional land there to build further than they had already done, as they were hemmed in on every quarter, and the railways were drawing closer and closer, this Institution must go elsewhere. In asking the Court to favour a large vote, he had not done so without well considering what the necessities of the case were now, and what they would ultimately be. The proposition he had to make was that they should purchase land elsewhere, and build on it a certain school, which might be extended at some future time to meet the wants of any number of children if they were compelled to give up the premises they now held. He did not think they would be doing wrong in spending so much of their capital; the probability was that they would be doing a great deal more good than letting it lie idle at 3 per cent. by erecting a school which would be the nucleus of a larger one capable of holding from 300 to 500 children. He had not considered any particular site as desirable, but certainly not the present one, or near it; but he knew there were plenty of sites at a convenient distance from London. On the ground that it was a profitable investment of the money, without wishing to make a speech, he submitted his motion to the brethren, and would take the sense of the meeting upon it.

Bro. Nunn then read his motion.

A seconder being called for, no one answered, and the Chairman declared the motion dropped in consequence.

Bro. J. A. Rucker, P.G.D., then brought his motion forward:—

"That this Committee recommend that a Sub-Committee consisting of nine members, of whom not less than four shall be members of the House Committee, together with the Treasurer and Trustees of the Institution, be appointed, three to form a quorum, to consider and report to the General Court on the arrangements to be made for the admission of from thirty to fifty more children to the benefits of the Institution; that in case of need a Special General Court be summoned to receive such report, and that such report be read for information at any House Committee or General Committee that may meet between the completion of the report and the meeting of the (Quarterly or Special) General Court."

He said he thought that in admitting from thirty to fifty more children they would be admitting as many as the funds of the Institution would allow of, large as they were. The children were boarded, educated, and clothed for a comparatively small sum; at the same time this was the nucleus of a larger school; and he thought that notwithstanding the great increase in the subscriptions, and the large sum the Girls' School had in the funds, the great increase in the numbers of the Craft rendered it inadvisable that this institution should do at the present moment more than his motion proposed.

Bro. H. G. Warren, P.G.S., seconded the motion. As it was a matter which was to be referred to a Committee he would defer his remarks on it till the Committee made its report. He would not have been willing that a large expenditure should be incurred without such an enquiry as was proposed, and he believed that it was always better to take that course, because it was not to be supposed that in the limited time during which these Quarterly Courts lasted due consideration could be given to these matters.

Bro. John Symonds, P.G.D., said he was quite prepared to vote for the motion as it stood, if it came to that. He presumed it was through Bro. Rucker's modesty, as a member of the House Committee, that he did not propose that the subject should be referred to the House Committee, who, it seemed to him, were best qualified to deal with it, as they knew all the requirements of the Institution. He hoped that Bro. Rucker, with Bro. Warren's consent, would refer it to the House Committee, who could report to the Quarterly Court. Bro. Symonds explained the many advantages which would arise from this plan, and the opportunities which would be given to a much larger number of experienced brethren having full information as to the proceedings than by a reference of the matter to a Special Committee.

Bro. Raynham W. Stewart, P.G.D., said there was a motion of his on the paper which would carry out to a great extent Bro. Rucker's proposition to give an education to a larger number of Freemasons' children than at present. They had plenty of funds to do so with. It was admitted that a great many children were knocking at their doors and anxious to be received into the Institution. Much money had been spent in erecting an infirmary, which to his mind ought to be utilised by accommodating at once all the approved candidates. It would cost very little to get a home elsewhere for an infirmary, and if the railway required the existing premises at a future time the brethren would have done a wise thing not to remove till they had notice that the present site was required. If that did occur, then he hoped they would be able to accommodate 300 children, if necessary. He was in favour of a junior school being established, into which children might go when first elected. They should have a superior school and an infant school. Money had already been laid out very freely, and within the last two or three years the brethren had gone to great expense in enlarging the building, in its dining hall and lavatories, and also in erecting an infirmary. Supposing any of the children should be taken ill, it would be a very rare occurrence if they were more than four or five in number; and surely it would be cheaper to provide another building for them, with nurses and staff to attend to them, than to have such a large infirmary as they had now. The brethren were now anxious to accommodate a larger number of the children of the Craft. The Craft had come forward and given plenty of money, and what ought to be done was to provide at once for the children of this generation, and let posterity take care of the future. When the land and buildings at Wandsworth were required by the railways it would be time enough to look out for other land for the Masonic Girls' School, and then they would have plenty of funds. What was wanted was immediate accommodation. With this and no other view, he would be willing to consent to Bro. Rucker's motion being referred, to see how the scheme could be carried out, but he would ask the brethren honestly and sincerely to make the infirmary of some use by converting it into a portion of the school.

Bro. J. A. Farnfield suggested that if Bro. Rucker's motion was carried to the House Committee, they should also have power to consider Bro. Stewart's motion.

The Chairman said he understood that to be the intention of Bro. Stewart.

Bro. Stewart.—Yes.

Bro. Farnfield, in reference to the observation that the railway company would be wanting the land of the Masonic School, said that it had always been said that the railway was coming there. The railway had only just laid out a large sum of money at Clapham Junction on the other side of the school, and it would be a long time before they wanted that as well. The school building did not extend right up to the railway, and unless the railway company took some portion of the school building they could not be compelled to take the whole. He had grave doubts whether the railway might not enlarge the line, taking only a portion of the land. All these matters could be dealt with, however, under Bro. Rucker's motion.

Bro. Stewart said he was quite willing not to bring his motion forward that day, provided the matter was referred to the House Committee.

Bro. Hacker, P.M. 723, while agreeing with Bro. Rucker, would like to add a rider, that before anything was done every brother entitled should have notice of it.

Bro. Kenyon enquired whether the Committee would receive suggestions from a Governor.

The Chairman.—Yes.

Bro. Kenyon added that he mentioned the matter because he knew there were brethren who could render the Committee efficient service.

The Chairman had no doubt that the Committee would gladly receive any assistance that could be offered.

Bro. Rucker said that as far as the question of the infirmary was concerned, that building had been erected when 70 children were laid down with scarlet fever. Although the children who were sick were hermetically sealed from those who were whole, it was only by the blessing of Divine Providence that there was not a death. The infirmary truly had cost a great deal of money, but it had answered the purpose for which it was built. He would alter his first motion to suit Bro. Symonds' proposition, as follows:—"That in the opinion of this Court it is advisable that arrangements be made for the admission of an increased number of children to the benefits of the Institution, and that the question he referred to the House Committee to consider and report thereon." It would be quite open to any brother to write to the Secretary of the school, with any suggestions, and it would be the duty of the Secretary to lay such letter before the Committee.

The motion was then put and carried unanimously.

The brethren then proceeded with the election of six children, and at the declaration of the poll the following were declared successful:—

1 Taylor, Lucy Maria (West Yorkshire) ...	1431
2 Jones, Edwina Russell (Gloucestershire) ...	1395
3 Bowler, Mary Louisa (Suffolk) ...	1376
4 Cowley, Minnie Eliza (West Yorkshire) ...	1348
5 Saunders, Fanny Amelia W. (Norfolk) ...	1293
6 Kelley, Alice Elizabeth (Somerset) ...	1128

The following were unsuccessful:—

1 Daly, Eliza Edith ...	805
2 Milligan, Rosa ...	803
3 Bellamy, Sarah Lizzie ...	720
4 Bridgeman, Emma Lizzie ...	716
5 Norrish, Susan Jane ...	675
6 Moore, Florence M. G. ...	599
7 Bryant, Ida Mary ...	585
8 Herlan, Josephine Amelia ...	488
9 Boyd, Alice ...	474
10 Wright, Clara Isabel ...	433
11 Escott, Edith Harry ...	433
12 Douglass, Isabella ...	414
13 Wilton, Lucretia Catherine A. ...	379
14 Morgan, Marian Aline ...	370
15 Strong, Ann Maria ...	366
16 Potts, Emma Mary ...	328
17 Potts, Edith Maude ...	327
18 Morris, Diana Gordon ...	201
19 Hollis, Ellen Elizabeth ...	138
20 Clase, Ada Huyshe ...	85
21 Lindeman, Alice Evelyn ...	32
22 Lapington, Fanny Elizabeth ...	27
23 Perks, Blanche Jenny ...	24
24 Hellier, Catherine Louisa ...	17

Votes of thanks to the scrutineers and Chairman were afterwards passed, and the proceedings closed.

ROYAL MASONIC INSTITUTION FOR BOYS.

The Quarterly Court of Subscribers and Governors of the Royal Masonic Institution for Boys was held on Monday last, at Freemasons' Hall. Bro. John Symonds, Vice-Patron, presided. The other brethren present comprised Bros. Thomas Hill, J. Wordsworth, Henry Smith, J. L. Hime, Wm. Birch, Geo. Hutt, Major J. Creaton, Richd. Spencer, James Robins, H. Browne, W. West Smith, W. Downing, A. H. Tattershall, Robert B. Webster, Wm. Lane, Alfred Layton, H. Massey ("Freemason"), James A. Birch, Jas. Terry, J. Stohwasser, John Simpson, Hyde Pullen, Jesse Turner, A. H. Green, E. T. Budden, J. P. Platt, P.P.G.J.W., Cheshire; Raynham W. Stewart, Henry Dubosc, John Sampson, Perrie, J. W. Oram, Allen C. Wylie, J. Mason, F. B. Davage, Charles Lee, P.M. 9; Aeneas J. McIntyre, Q.C. G.R.; T. H. Pulsford, W. Watson, W. Hickman, D.P.G.M., Hants and Isle of Wight; A. D. Loewenstark, John Bodenham, F. A. Cole, George Wilson, J. N. Frost, Jos. Morrell, John Read, James Stevens, Edward Cox, A. Thellard, John G. Stevens, Edward Clark, Thos. J. Barnes, Thos. W. White, W. R. Marsh, John Constable, Alfred Avery, Peter de L. Long, R. J. Spiers, J. Finch, E. J. Harty, James Kindred and F. Binckes (Secretary).

At the conclusion of the formal business, the motion, of which notice had been given by Bro. Jesse Turner, "That the right to the presentation of a properly qualified boy, in perpetuity, for admission to this Institution, be secured to the Cheshire Masonic Educational Institution, on payment to the funds of this institution of the sum of £1050," was then taken, but Bro. Turner not being present, Bro. Birch, on his behalf, brought the motion forward, and requested that "Provincial Grand Lodge of Cheshire" might be substituted for "Cheshire Masonic Educational Institution."

Major Creaton (the alteration having been agreed to) seconded the motion, which was then put and carried unanimously.

The Court then resolved to admit one boy by purchase on the 1st of January.

Bro. Alfred Layton, P.M. 181, suggested that the time had arrived when the building should be increased in size, so as to accommodate a still larger number of pupils than were at present in the school.

The Chairman said that the subject had not escaped the attention of the different committees of the Institution. Hitherto the school had been always in debt, and money had had to be borrowed from the bankers for various liabilities. The last festival, however, was so successful, that they would not be in the same position this year. The friends of the Institution would be very glad to see it enlarged, in order to receive more scholars, and as soon as they could see their way clear it would be done.

Bro. Layton added that at present the number of applicants was so enormous that unless a candidate had very strong friends he could not succeed.

Bro. Binckes said that, with reference to the question of enlargement, the size of the building had been extended the year before last, and again last year, and that at the present time the 176 boys in the school occupied every available space.

The election of ten boys out of an approved list of fifty-eight candidates was then proceeded with, and at the close of the day the following were declared elected:—

1 Price, Ernest Lavers ...	2157
2 Green, Alfred James ...	2081
3 Sutton, Herbert Henry ...	2008
4 Jones, John Llewellyn ...	1992
5 Barclay, James Archibald ...	1925
6 Tibbits, Elwood Blake ...	1893
7 Shipway, Henry Morrison ...	1858
8 James, Percy ...	1839
9 Duff, Robert ...	1802
10 Hunter, William Reginald ...	1675

The following were the unsuccessful candidates:—

11 Dawson, George Arthur ...	1661
12 Vivian, Alfred Greville ...	1658
13 Perren, Gilbert Palmer S. ...	1629
14 Cromwell, Charles Henry ...	1613
15 Lee, Vincent John ...	1470
16 Stansfield, William Ashton ...	1388
17 Gardner, Richard Thomas ...	1366
18 Wain, Leonard ...	1264
19 Cooke, William Astle ...	884
20 Rees, James Herbert ...	881
21 Austin, Charles Frederick ...	835
22 Quech, A. Christopher ...	668
23 Keddel, Robert Walter ...	500
24 Ginharn, Percy Norman ...	470
25 Chandler, Robert Stanley ...	461
26 Leyshon, Herbert Henry ...	424

METROPOLITAN.

LODGE OF TRANQUILLITY (No. 185).—The resumption of business after the vacation took place in this lodge at the City Terminus Hotel, Cannon-street, on Monday, the 18th inst., under the presidency of the W.M., Bro. John H. Ross, assisted by the following brethren:—J. D. Barnett, S.W.; D. Posener, J.W.; G. S. Pare, S.D.; W. D. Bosley, J.D.; F. Croaker, I.G.; and J. Rawles acting as Tyler. The summons convening the meeting contained the names of four gentlemen for initiation, viz., Messrs. Sailard, Sadlier, Bush, and Cohen, who, being in attendance, were initiated by the W.M. with all his accustomed ability. Notice of motion was given "That the sum of £5 paid by the W.M., as Steward, for the Royal Installation jewel be refunded from lodge funds." The lodge was closed, and the brethren, upwards of fifty in number, repaired to the banquet room, where they partook of such viands as the Terminus Hotel can provide, and upon this occasion they were neither too numerous or recherché. The usual loyal and Masonic toasts were gone through by the W.M. in regular form, and commendable brevity, and responded to in like manner, saving in the instance of Bro. Lean, P.M. 1087, who, replied for "The Visitors" in most eloquent terms, and pointed out generally the relative duties of P.M.'s and brethren, and descended fully upon the beneficent effects of our principles, and hoped the initiates would emulate the example of many old veterans in the Craft, to whom he could point with intense satisfaction for their integrity, probity, and faithful allegiance to Craft tenets. Bro. Terry replied for "The Charities," and, as a matter of course, had some interesting intelligence to lay before the members; he said he was much pleased to hear recorded on the minutes of the lodge the large sums collected by the members of the Tranquillity Lodge this year on behalf of the Masonic Charities, amounting to upwards of £470. This, added to the amount of the past year, aggregated a sum of nearly £1000, the production from a single lodge, a circumstance unprecedented in the annals of the Craft, and he hoped that the mere record, simple as it was, but a stubborn historical fact, would be an incentive to others to go and do likewise. He further stated that £27,000 had been produced by the last three festivals, but such sum was required to keep the institutions in working order, and urged upon the members not to lack in their exertions, for as the numerical strength of the Craft increased, so would the claims upon the charities run hand in hand. Bro. Terry called attention to the fact that the W.M. had offered to represent the lodge at the next festival of the Benevolent Institution, provided the lodge headed his list with £10. He ventured to express his belief that Bro. Ross's exertions would be a large addition to the funds of the charity. "The Tranquillity Benevolent Fund" was given, and responded to by Bro. S. Solomon, P.M., whose winning ways drew forth from his initiates a guinea each. The "Tyler's" toast concluded the evening, which was enlivened with harmony by the W.M., Bros. Child, and Bayley, who were never in better voice, and Bro. W. W. Morgan gave the "Balaklava Charge" with accuracy and great dramatic effect. Amongst the visitors present were Bros. Lean, P.M. 1087; Plummer, 177; Field, 1321; Brown, 1426; Terry, P.P.G.J.W. Ilerts, Sec. R.M.B.I.; Reed, 765; Atkins, 55; Frost, 1347; Herold, 1056; W. W. Morgan, 1385; Baker, 192. Amongst the members we noticed Bros. Constable, I.P.M.; Moss, P.M.; R. Bloomfield, P.M.; Holbrook, P.M.; Sidney, P.M.; Harteld, P.M.; S. Solomon, P.M.; Child, Parkinson, Brocksopp, and others.

WHITTINGTON LODGE (No. 862).—This lodge met on Monday evening at Anderson's Hotel, and was very well attended. Bro. Alfred R. Haey, W.M., presided, and raised Bro. Cole to the Third Degree. He also initiated Messrs. Thomas Smith, Thomas Richardson, and Wm. Devine. The election of W.M., which followed, resulted in the unanimous choice of Bro. Thomas Kingston, S.W. The Treasurer, Bro. Gailty, was also unanimously re-elected, as was likewise Bro. James Weaver,

Treasurer of the Benevolent Fund, and Bro. Gilbert, Tyler. A P.M.'s jewel was voted to Bro. Haley in token of the brethren's appreciation of his able conduct as W.M. during the past year. The brethren then partook of banquet, and afterwards honoured the ordinary list of toasts. Bro. Hurlstone, P.M., proposed "The Health of the W.M.," and in doing so descended on the great virtues and merits of Freemasonry. As a noble system of virtue and morality, the more it was considered, developed, and practised, both in public life and in private lodges, the more would the general public benefit by it. Why the system was condemned by any religious body he could not understand, and he presumed that if the head of the Church which denounced it only knew its real sentiments he would be the first man to support it. Instead of being condemned it ought to be prized. Look at the charity of the Order, which was not confined to one country, but was intended for all the world. Enough, however, of that theme. To come to the W.M. No other Master since the consecration of the lodge had progressed in the ceremonies of Freemasonry so rapidly or so satisfactorily as Bro. Haley. To him therefore was especial honour due. He had done everything that was required of a W.M. with advantage to the lodge and credit to himself, and in drinking his health the brethren would do it with sincere enthusiasm, and with earnest wishes for his happiness and prosperity in his retirement when he left the chair. The W.M. responding, said that he believed Brother Hurlstone, although sincere in his expressions, had said of him (the W.M.) far more than he was entitled to; but still he had said no more than he (the W.M.) wished to deserve. He had hoped to do better than he had, and he still desired when he should have left the chair to support and assist his successors in any emergency. While on his legs he would propose "The Initiates." They had three that night who he thought would be a credit to the body. Two of them he was personally acquainted with. He hoped they would study Freemasonry, many parts of which required and would repay the closest study, and the more they studied it, he could promise them, the more they would appreciate its advantages. It was a beautifully arranged system: it pointed out many moral virtues, and was in fact like the Bible—they could be always studying it and yet not know it all. He hoped the initiates would study it, avoiding the little, unimportant, formal, and unnecessary parts, but keeping in view its grand unequalled principles. Bros. Devine, Smith, and Richardson severally responded. The W.M. proposed "Bro. W. F. Smith, I.P.M.," who, having been obliged to leave, was represented by Bro. Jones, P.M. This was followed by the toast of "The Visitors," and regret expressed that they were but few on that occasion. Bro. Hubbard replied, congratulating himself on his visit to a lodge so distinguished in the Craft both for its numerical strength, the ability with which its ceremonies were known to be performed, and the good will which existed among its members. Although he had had much pleasure in attending, and meeting such old friends as Bros. Hurlstone, Smith, Jones, Kingston, Moore, and others, he greatly regretted the absence of Bro. Little, by whom he had been invited, and whom he had fully expected to meet. A week ago he had seen him in his room in very poor health; but since then he had been so desirous of attending to his duties at Freemasons' Hall that he went out and had thrown himself back. He hoped, however, that he would now stay at home for a little while, and endeavour to bring himself round again. Bros. Ross and Weist also responded, the latter informing the brethren of the pleasure he had in seeing the W.M. perform the ceremonies so fluently. The W.M., in giving "The Officers of the Lodge," reminded the brethren that Bro. Weist had been his preceptor. Bro. Kingston having replied, the W.M. next proposed "The W.M. Elect," for whom he had very great respect. It was particularly gratifying to him that Bro. Kingston had been unanimously elected that night. It just proved what his own ideas had previously been, that there was not a breath against Bro. Kingston. Bro. Kingston said he felt so highly elated at the compliment that he really did not know what to say. He would only thank the brethren for their unanimity in electing him as their W.M. for the ensuing year, and he assured them he would do his utmost to discharge his duties to the satisfaction of everybody. The Tyler's toast was then given, and the brethren separated by ten o'clock. Among the brethren present were A. R. Harley, W.M.; T. Kingston, S.W.; C. Walker, J.W.; A. Moore, I.G.; W. J. H. Jones, P.M.; W. F. Smith, P.M.; J. S. Brown, R. P. Tate, S. Godden, F. H. Roberts, H. W. Evans, J. K. Ward, F. L. Prior, E. Sedgwick, and K. R. H. Mackenzie.

PROVINCIAL.
CANTERBURY.—UNITED INDUSTRIOUS LODGE (No. 3).—The first regular meeting of the winter session of the lodge the oldest but one in the province of Kent, was held on Thursday week at the Guildhall Concert-room, for the purpose of installing Bro. John Green Hall as W.M. for the ensuing year, when a numerous assemblage of the brethren was present, the beautifully solemn ceremony of installation being ably and impressively performed by Bro. Higham, P.M. At its conclusion the following brethren were appointed and invested with the respective collars and jewels of their offices:—Bros. B. Browning, S.W.; Willsher, J.W.; Higham, P.M., Treas.; John R. Hall, P.M., P.P. Assistant G. Sec., Hon. Sec.; Plant, S.D.; Dean, J.D.; Tice, I.G.; Longhurst, Organist; Pringuer, Tyler. After the lodge was closed the brethren sat down to the customary annual banquet at the Rose Hotel.

FALMOUTH.—LOVE AND HONOUR LODGE (No. 75).—A large number of members of the Lodge of Love and Honour, No. 75, Falmouth, assembled on Monday, the 11th October, to dispatch the regular business of the lodge, but more especially to witness the initiation of their esteemed townsman, Richard C. Richards, Mayor of the Ancient Borough of Falmouth. Many visitors being present added to the attendance and pleasing sight, for the capacity of the old hall has never been more tested to its utmost as one announcement after another was made of brethren seeking admission. The lodge was opened by the W.M., William H. Dunstan, Prov. G.S. of Works, shortly after the time named on the summons, and the two Wardens, Bro. Thomas Webber, J.P., S.W., and Bro. Dr. Arthur B. Harris, J.W., with the other officers, were most exact in the performance of their duties. Amongst the Past Masters we noticed Bros. John Vivian, Walter F. Newman, P. Prov. S.G.D.; Francis Dennis, Prov. G. Purst.; Timothy C. Polglaze, and Michael Little. The ballot being, as was expected, unanimously in favour of the candidate, the Mayor of Falmouth was soon ushered into the lodge, and was duly initiated into the mysteries and privileges of Ancient Freemasonry in an effective manner by the W. Master, who is an old Past Master of the lodge. His worship paid a marked attention to the ceremony, and was most observant throughout. In fact we never remember being present at the initiation of a candidate who was evidently so desirous of understanding the ceremonies and appreciating the spirit of the "old charges" as the representative of this ancient borough. The lodge being closed, the brethren adjourned to a banquet at the Royal Hotel, served in a most agreeable way by the host, Bro. Richard Castle, P.S.W. 121, and at which the W.M. presided. The W. Bro. William James Ilughan, Past Senior Grand Deacon of England and P. Prov. G. Sec. of Cornwall (who had also attended the lodge, of which he is an honorary member), was present and responded on behalf of the Grand Lodge, receiving from the brethren a most hearty reception. The maiden Masonic speech of the Mayor, Bro. R. C. Richards, was a model of its kind, and this ancient centennial lodge has added another polished stone to its old building.

IPSWICH.—BRITISH UNION LODGE (No. 114).—The members of this old lodge met after their summer recess at the Masonic Hall, Ipswich, when, owing to the stormy weather no doubt, there was a much smaller attendance than is usual at "the gentlemen's lodge," as an old Mason tells us it has been called for some time past. The brethren present were Bros. A. D. George, W.M.; J. J. Burton, P.P.G.D.C. Cams., S.W.; S. Wright, acting J.W.; W. Bobby, P.G.S.W.; Emma Holmes, P.P.G. Reg. and P.G.D.C.; W. Spalding, P.M., Sec.; H. Miller, S.D.; J. Casley, acting J.D.; P. Cornell, P.P.G.S.D. Visiting Bro. Newton Garrett, P.P.G. Reg. The lodge having been opened in due form and with solemn prayer, the minutes of last lodge were read and confirmed. The Secretary announced that he had received letters from Viscount Mahon, M.P., and the Rev. A. W. G. Moore, J.W., regretting their inability to attend. Bro. Harry Ribbins being a candidate for the Second Degree was duly passed, the ceremony being performed by the W.M. with his customary ability. The other business of the evening having been disposed of, and two or three brethren having been proposed as joining members, the lodge was closed, and the brethren retired for refreshment. Supper was served in the committee-room, the dining hall undergoing repairs, and ample justice was done to the excellent repast provided by Bro. G. Spalding. On the cloth being removed, the usual toasts were given from the chair. The W.M. in proposing that of "The Prince of Wales," alluded to his visit to India, and expressed a hearty wish that he might return to us safe and sound, a wish to which all good Masons will say, Amen, so mote it be. In giving the toast of "The Visitors," Bro. George remarked that they had a very distinguished brother amongst them, one who had done a great deal for Masonry, and one who was known for his charity and generosity everywhere in the province. Bro. Garrett, in responding, said he thanked the brethren very much for drinking his health. Thank God, he enjoyed very good health, and he hoped he might long continue to do so. He had heard a good deal of the British Union Lodge, and had been anxious to visit it, but he regretted that there was not a larger attendance on the occasion of his visit. He was very much obliged for the hospitable reception he had met with, and again thanked the brethren for so cordially responding to the toast. Our worthy and esteemed brother has long been a notable Mason in Suffolk, and his generous entertainment of the Provincial Grand Lodge at his residence at Aldeburgh some years ago will not soon be forgotten. The W.M. expressed great regret that the unpropitious weather had kept so many brethren away, and hoped that Bro. Garrett would visit the lodge again at the installation of the W.M. or the Feast of Roses, when they could assure him a very hearty reception. Bro. Garrett afterwards asked leave to propose a toast, that of "Their W.M." He said that he could see Bro. George was "one of the right sort." A lodge such as the British Union should be always careful to have "one of the right sort" as Master. The toast was cordially drunk, and Bro. George modestly responded. Bros. Miller and Emma Holmes contributed to the harmony of the evening by singing two or three songs, and the brethren, loth to part, separated at a reasonable hour, after enjoying as usual a very pleasant evening together. A history of this interesting old lodge will appear shortly in the "Masonic Magazine."

WINDSOR.—ETONIAN LODGE OF ST. JOHN (No. 209).—The first monthly meeting of the session was held on the 5th inst., at the Masonic Hall. The W.M., Bro. John O. Carter, presided, supported by Bros. Denne, S.W.; Canvin, J.W.; Hume, J.D.; Roberts, I.G.; Nicholes, S.; Dixon, P.G.D.C., I.P.M.; J. Wilson, P.M.; Reid, P.M.; Mellisham, P.M.; Hiscock, Bladon, Woods, Webster, Prince, Ferry, Legge, and others. Visitors—Bros. Devreux, P.M. 771; Bingham, P.M. 771; Johnson, 771. The lodge was opened in the First Degree, and the minutes of the previous meeting confirmed. Bro. Legge was passed to the Second Degree. The Ballot was then taken for Messrs. Day, Waterson, and Cousins, as candidates for initiation, and proved to be unanimous in each case; the two first-named gentlemen were unavoidably absent. Mr. Cousins was initiated into the light of Freemasonry by the W.M. The ballot was also taken for Bro. Stedwell, P.G.S. Eng., W.M. of Grand Steward's Lodge, P.P.J.G.W. Middlesex, P.Z., &c., &c., and Bro. J. B. Churchill, late of Montefiore Lodge No. 1017, as joining members, and was declared to be unanimous. Bro. Stedwell afterwards thanked the W.M. and brethren for having admitted him to the lodge as a member. A candidate for joining was proposed, and after some other business had been transacted, the lodge was closed in due form.

LIVERPOOL.—MERCHANTS' LODGE (No. 241).—The usual monthly meeting of this most influential lodge was held at the Masonic Hall, Hope-street, Liverpool, on Tuesday, the 12th inst., when Bro. Richard Brown, the W.M., signalled his first quarterly night by inviting all the newly-appointed P.G. officers resident in the locality. Many of these accepted, and the result was a gathering of the most enjoyable kind. Bro. R. Brown, W.M. (Hon. Sec. to the West Lancashire Masonic Institution), occupied the chair at the opening of the lodge, supported by the following officers and brethren:—Bros. W.M. Chudley, I.P.M.; J. J. Knight, P.M.; J. W. Baker, P.M.; R. Wilson, P.M.; P.P.G.J.D.; Ralph Robinson, P.M.; G. Hutchin, S.W.; Councillor G. Peet, J.W.; S. J. McGeorge, P.M. Treas.; James Winsor, Sec.; T. C. Jones, S.D.; T. H. Sheen, J. D.; G. Broadbridge, P.M.; P.P.G.D.C., D.C.; F. E. Smith, Org.; T. Salter, I.G.; P. Ball, Tyler; W. Hopps, John Winsor, T. Goode, C. E. Jones, R. Wade, W. Savage, R. Jones, V. E. King, D. Hughes, J. M. Hewitt, F. Shaw, J. Quayle, A. Ballard, A. Woolrich, J. T. Pugmire, J. Pendleton, R. W. Williams, A. Hodgkins, R. Pruddah, W. A. Smith, J. Hall, B. Woolf, H. Marks, W. J. Raverty, Rev. C. J. O'Reilly, W. M. Norbury, W. Williamson, J. Kirwan, S. Broadbridge, T. M. Stanbury, and R. White. The visitors included Bros. Dr. J. Kellett Smith, P.G. Reg.; J. Pemberton, P.G.S.; P. Macmudrow, P.G.S.; J. Lunt, P.G.D.C.; R. Wylie, P.P.G.S.D.; J. Skeaf, P.G.O.; B. Drake, 1094; H. Nelson, P.M. 1505, and 673; Capt. T. Berry, S.W. 155; G. G. Walmsley, 292; E. B. Smith, W.M. 1432; A. Taylor, 1432; J. Vaughan, J.W. 86; H. Vaughan, S.D. 86; R. G. Elston, 86; W. Levy, 1502; S. Levy, 1502; Rev. T. W. Richardson, J.W. 1380; J. Penney, 1393; T. G. Bark, W.M. 1380; S. Blinkhorn, 519; D. Meek, 203; W. Cooke, 1289; G. Maxwell, 594. During the business it was resolved that a Chaplain should be appointed to the lodge at an early meeting. After the transaction of some formal business, in the course of which Bro. Fairhurst, 1380, was unanimously elected a joining member, the brethren adjourned from labour to refreshment, under the genial presidency of the popular W.M. (Bro. Brown). An excellent banquet was served by Messrs. Fisk and Fairhurst. The W.M. afterwards gave the toasts of "The Queen," and "The Prince of Wales." In giving the latter, Bro. Brown said at that moment their G.M. had started on his long journey, and he was sure that every member of that lodge wished him safety and prosperity during his travels. He was certain that H.R.H. would find in the east not the least hearty welcome from his Masonic brethren. As he journeys from west to east he would have the hearty good wishes of all under his care, and the hope that he might have a safe return to his native country. The next toast was that of "Bro. Lord Skelmersdale, R.W. Deputy Grand Master, R.W.P.G.M. West Lancashire," coupled with the names of his P.G. officers, past and present. After referring to the interest his lordship took in Masonry, as was shown on the previous Wednesday at the P.G. Lodge, Bro. Brown said they ought to feel a special pride in West Lancashire, as the P.G. Master had been made the Deputy Grand Master. The new P.G. Lodge officers were now present, with all their "blushing honours thick upon them," and he felt proud in being honoured with the presence of brethren who would, no doubt, do their work in an admirable manner. In a province which comprised more than 2000 brethren it must be exceedingly difficult for their P.G. Master to make his selection of officers, but he (Bro. Brown) thought they would all acknowledge that the honours were distributed very fairly and with wise discretion. Bro. Dr. J. K. Smith, P.G. Reg., said he had in his hands two or three apologies from brethren who were unable to attend that evening. He (Bro. Smith) thanked the W.M. and brethren of the Merchants' Lodge for the very hearty and enthusiastic manner in which the toast had been given and responded to. He cordially acknowledged that but for the Merchants' Lodge he would not have held his present proud position, and referred especially to the benefit he had derived from the Masonic training of the late Bro. Captain Mott. Bro. J. Lunt, P.G.D.C., and Bro. J. Skeaf, P.G.O., also responded. Bro. J. I. Knight, P.M., gave the toast of "The Charities." Bro. Broadbridge, P.P.G.D.C., in replying for the London charities, said that Lord Skelmersdale on the previous Wednesday remarked that West Lancashire compared very favourably with East Lancashire in regard to these charities, but his lordship did not go quite far enough. He stated that East Lancashire had 1700 votes, to 200 possessed by West Lancashire for the Boys' School, but Lord Skelmersdale did not intimate that East Lancashire had two perpetual presentations for that school, which cost them 1000 guineas each. It had been suggested that they should purchase a presentation so that one of Captain Mott's children might be admitted without going to an election, and he thought there would be no great difficulty in securing this. Lord Skelmersdale, however, did not allude to the fact that in West Lancashire they had an institution of their own, which did not exist in East Lancashire. Bro. R. Wylie, P.P.G.S.D., responded on behalf of the Hamer Benevolent Fund, and Bro. R. Wilson, P.P.G.J.D., for the West Lancashire Masonic Educational Institution, of which he is Hon. Treasurer, urging the claims of the charity in an excellent speech. Bro. Chudley, I.P.M., gave "The Health of the W.M.," which was received with the greatest enthusiasm. Bro. Brown, W.M., in responding, spoke of the proud position which the Merchants' Lodge occupied in that province, and the many excellent works of charity and true Masonic liberality it had displayed. Speaking of the furnishing of the Masonic Hall, Bro. Brown said that something like £400 or £500 was required for this purpose, and he could promise that the Merchants' Lodge would find £100 of the amount if the rest were contributed by the other lodges. "The Past Masters" was acknowledged by Bros. P.M.'s Chudley and Robinson, the latter referring especially to the benefits of the Lodge of Instruction of which he is Preceptor. "The Visiting Brethren" was acknowledged by Bros. J. Vaughan, T. Foulkes, and Captain Berry. "The Officers" was responded to by Bros. G. Hutchin, S.W.; G. Peet, J.W.; and S. J. McGeorge, P.M., Treas. An excellent musical programme was provided by Bros. Forrester, Foulkes, and others, with Bro. Skeaf, P.G.O., at the piano. Labour was then resumed, and after several propositions for initiation, the sum of five guineas was voted to the fund now being raised for the widows and families of the life boat men who recently lost their lives during the storm while trying to save the crew of the ship Ellen Southard. The lodge was then closed in peace and harmony, after a most enjoyable evening had been spent.

LEICESTER.—ST. JOHN'S LODGE (No. 279).—The first meeting of this lodge for the season was held at Freemasons' Hall, Leicester, on Wednesday evening, the 6th of October. There were present Bros. J. W. Smith, W.M.; J. M. MacAllister, S.W.; G. W. Statham, J.W.; William Weare, P.M.; Treas.; Clement Edwin Stretton, S.C.; S. Cleaver, S.D.; Clement Stretton, P. Prov. G.W., P.M.; G. Toller, jun., P. Prov. G.S.W., P.M. 523; S. S. Partridge, P.G. Sec., P.M. 523; W. B. Smith, P.M. 523; F. J. Baines, P.M. 523; G. Clifton, P.M. 1391; J. Clemmey, 830; J. Young, I.G. 523; S. Knight, 1391; and others. The lodge having been opened in due form, and the minutes read and confirmed, Bro. Crick was passed to the Second Degree, the ceremony being performed and the lecture delivered by the W.M. It was announced that a letter had been received from Bro. Hughan, P.G.D. (and an honorary member of this lodge), enclosing a presentation copy of his work, "The History of Masonry before the Union," and a cordial vote of thanks was unanimously passed to Bro. Hughan. Bro. Cleaver, S.D., was elected a P.G. Steward, and Bros. Smith, W.M., and Statham, J.W., were elected as the representatives of this lodge on the Hall Committee. Bro. MacAllister, S.W., proposed a vote of thanks to Bro. Partridge, P.G. Sec., for the trouble taken by him in compiling the valuable "Freemasons' Calendar for the Province of Leicestershire and Rutland," which having been seconded by Bro. Stretton, P.M., and supported by the W.M., was carried unanimously. Bro. Partridge suitably acknowledged the compliment. At the conclusion of a large amount of routine business the lodge was closed in due form, and the brethren partook of refreshment, after which the loyal and Masonic toasts followed in their usual order.

PETERBOROUGH.—ST. PETER'S LODGE (No. 442).—On Thursday evening, 23rd ult., the brethren of this lodge met at the Masonic Hall, Boroughbury, in response to notice issued by the Worshipful Master, Bro. R. H. Griffin, to receive, as a gift to the lodge, a large and beautiful likeness of His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales, photographed from life by Watkins, and beautifully coloured by hand, framed &c., by Bro. Gladwell, to which is annexed the following inscription: "H.R.H. the Prince of Wales, K.G., &c., &c., Most Worshipful Grand Master of England. Presented by H.S.H. the Dowager Countess Gleichen to St. Peter's Lodge, No. 442, to commemorate the Royal Installation, on the 28th April, 1875. Bro. Keddy had the honour of representing the illustrious donor, in formally presenting this gift, at a lodge of emergency, held at the Masonic Hall, Peterborough, the 23rd day of September, 1875. Bro. R. H. Griffin, W.M.; Bro. W. Dixey, Secretary." The following brethren were present:—Bros. Griffin, W.M.; Pilcher, J.W.; Buckle, P.M.; E. Vergette, P.M.; Paviour, P.M.; T. Pank, Treas.; Dixey, Sec.; E. Vergette, S.D.; Jones, J.D.; Marson, P.G.D.C.; Keddy, Beeby, Pearson, Bays, Rutherford, Foskey; S.D. Allen, P.M. P.P.G.S.W., 373; Robertson, 261. Several brethren who were previously engaged for the evening sent letters of apology to the Worshipful Master, regretting their absence, and the inclemency of the evening prevented many brethren from the country being present. The lodge being opened, the Secretary (Bro. Dixey) read the circular letter convening it. Bro. Keddy rose, and presented the picture to the Worshipful Master for the benefit and use of St. Peter's Lodge, No. 442. Bro. Keddy remarked that it was gratifying to himself that he was permitted, in the name of Her Serene Highness, to offer for the acceptance of the lodge so appropriate a present as this tribute of respect to Masonry, as represented by His Royal Highness. The Grand Master of English Freemasonry had already proved himself worthy of the high and honourable position, and His Royal Highness had honoured Freemasonry by accepting the office as head of the Craft, whilst Protestantism would also be the gainer, for the cardinal principles of Freemasonry were inspired by the Holy Bible. It was to be hoped that His Royal Highness might favour Peterborough with his presence at the next annual provincial gathering in May next. The Countess knew nothing of St. Peter's Lodge, but as she insisted on making him a present for services rendered, extending over a period of several months, he (Bro. Keddy) suggested to Her Serene Highness, who was residing in the county of Suffolk, that such a gift as this portrait would be the most gratifying to himself and also most acceptable to the brethren. The Countess left England on the 16th ult. for Bombay, en route for her home in the Punjab, where she took up her residence shortly after her bereavement, and since then, for nearly twenty years, had devoted her life to the education and care of the young, and was known and beloved by all classes. She was the first lady who drew the attention of the Government to the importance of the work to which she was devoting her life, and she had the gratification to find that, in order to carry out her desires, funds from the Treasury were placed at her disposal. Bro. Bays observed that this presentation was, he felt certain, the greatest honour that had been conferred upon St. Peter's Lodge. P.M. Bro. Ed. Vergette and P.M. Bro. Buckle made a few observations expressive of their appreciation of the gift. The W.M. said he had great pleasure and honour in accepting this very beautiful and admirable likeness of His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales, in his official clothing as Grand Master of England; and closed his observations by thanking Bro. Keddy for having been the means of the lodge becoming possessed of such a valuable tribute to loyalty and Masonry. A unanimous vote of thanks was accorded to her Serene Highness. At the close of the lodge the brethren partook of an excellent supper, P.M. Bro. Vergette having presented a really excellent haunch of venison. The usual loyal and Masonic toasts were given and duly responded to, and, after a most agreeable evening, the brethren retired to their respective homes.—"Peterborough Standard."

PERFECT ASHLAR LODGE (No. 1178) met on Thursday, October 7th, at Bridge House Hotel, Southwark. Bro. E. Deakin, W.M., opened the lodge. He initiated three gentlemen. Bro. Dr. Dixon, P.M., installed J. A. Smith, J.W., W.M. Officers are:—W. Batchelor, S.W.; W. T. Lover, J.W.; F. H. Ebsworth, P.M., Treas.; F. Walters, P.M., P.P.G.P. Midx., Sec.; F. Garbett, S.D.; J. Stock, J.D.; J. Wootton, I.G.; J. Porter, D.C.; G. J. Grace, P.M., W.S. A vote of thanks (to be entered on minute books) was given to Bro. Dr. Dixon for doing the installation. Banquet and dessert were served. Bro. C. Deakin, at the banquet table, had a five-guinea P.M.'s jewel presented to him. About seventeen visitors were present.

MANCHESTER.—LODGE OF TRUTH (No. 1458).—The regular meeting of this lodge was held on Saturday, Oct. 2nd, at the Royal Archer Hotel. The minutes of previous meeting having been read and confirmed, the ballot was taken for Mr. Walter Nicholson, and being favourable, he was duly initiated into Masonry by Bro. Henry Smith, W.M., the charge being very impressively given by Bro. J. E. Hall, P.S.W., W.M. Ashbury Lodge, 1459. This being all the business to transact, the brethren adjourned to refreshment, and after duly honouring the Masonic toasts, that of the newly-initiated brother was proposed and suitably responded to. The W.M. then proposed "The Visitors," and said it gave him greater pleasure than usual in proposing the toast on that occasion, seeing he had a brother present who had worked with him at the Lodge of Instruction, and from whom he had received much Masonic information and instruction. The bro. to whom he alluded was Bro. Henry Moxon, W.M. Faith, 581. He was also glad to receive Bro. J. Moorhouse, of the Imperial George, 78, and Bro. John Taylor, Sec. Ashbury, 1459. Bro. Moxon responded to the toast in suitable terms, saying he had many times promised himself a treat by visiting the Lodge of Truth, and he had not been disappointed; he had never felt more at home than he did that evening when he saw so many brethren whom he knew. He had also derived great pleasure in seeing the ceremony so ably performed. In conclusion, he wished the W.M. with as many of the members of the Lodge of Truth to pay him a return visit at their convenience before the expiration of his year as W.M. Bros. Moorhouse and Taylor also acknowledged the toast in suitable terms. After spending a very pleasant evening the brethren separated at 9.30 p.m.

LEOMINSTER.—ROYAL EDWARD LODGE (No. 892).—The first meeting of this lodge for the present season was held in the lodge-room on Tuesday evening, Oct. 12th. There were present Bros. M. J. Ellwood, W.M.; E. Gregg, S.W.; R. Hayes, J.W.; P.M.'s Jukes, Moore, Wormington, &c., and other brethren. The minutes of last meeting having been read and confirmed, the W.M. proceeded to propose a vote of condolence to the widow of the late Bro. Bradford. The W.M. alluded to his sudden decease in May last, and to the fact of his attendance at the installation in the Albert Hall of His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales in April, where he appeared so thoroughly to enjoy himself. After some remarks as to his thoroughly good qualities as a brother, a husband, a parent, and a townsman, the Secretary was requested to draw up a letter expressive of the sympathies of the lodge, and transmit it in due course to Mrs. Bradford. The other business of the lodge having been disposed of, and the lodge closed in due and ample form, the brethren retired to banquet, and spent a thoroughly enjoyable evening.

HOLBEACH.—ALEXANDRA LODGE (No. 985).—Wednesday week was the day appointed for the installation of Bro. J. J. Bartram as W.M. of the Alexandra Lodge, now held at Holbeach instead of Long Sutton. The brethren assembled at 4 p.m., Bro. S. S. Mossop, W.M., opening the lodge. Bro. Woodrow, P.M., of Spalding, then conducted the ceremonies in a most impressive manner. At the close, votes of thanks to Bro. Woodrow for his services, and Bro. Cole, who has acted as Secretary to the lodge for many years, were carried with acclamation. The following officers were then invested, viz., Bros. W. Ridlington, S.W.; T. W. Curtis, J.W.; Hodgkin, S.D.; Jackson, J.D.; Milns, Sec., and Hargrave, I.G. After lodge, the brethren adjourned to the Chequers Hotel, where a most sumptuous and liberal banquet was served by Bro. Hargrave, who deserves the highest possible compliment for the manner in which he catered. The wines were also very fine, and the evening passed off in the most harmonious and agreeable manner. The usual loyal and Masonic toasts were given and heartily responded to; and from what we can learn, there is every reason to hope for a very successful year for the lodge in its new quarters.

DERBY.—HARTINGTON LODGE (No. 1085).—The usual monthly meeting of this prosperous lodge was held at the Masonic Hall, Gower-street, on Wednesday, the 6th inst., when the following brethren were present:—Bros. Henry T. Bobart, W.M.; S. Pipes, S.W.; J. H. Biggs, as J.W.; M. H. Bobart, Treas.; J. Worsnop, Sec.; Theo. Hills, S.D.; Geo. Pipes, as J.D.; Jos. Heathcote, I.G.; T. Slinn, Tyler; F. Campion, P.M.; Jos. Shaw, C. D. Hart, F. Rippon, J. O. Manton, Matthew Hill, Richard Daniel, Jas. Parkins, jun. Visitors: Bros. John Smith, P.P.J.G.W., P.M. 731; T. H. Warner, P.M. 802; A. Frazer, 731. The minutes of the last lodge were read and confirmed. Bro. Richard Daniel was raised to the Sublime Degree of Master Mason by the W.M. Mr. Joseph Griggs was ballotted for as a fit and proper person to be made a Mason, and elected. Bros. Joseph Shaw and Geo. Pipes were nominated to act as Provincial Grand Stewards for the year. The lodge was then closed according to ancient custom, and adjourned until the first Wednesday of the ensuing month, emergencies excepted, of which due notice will be given.

WALTHAM.—KING HAROLD LODGE (No. 1327).—The installation meeting of the King Harold Lodge was held on Tuesday, at the Britannia, Waltham New Town, when Bro. Charles Lacey, W.M., presided, and was assisted by his officers. Before the installation Bros. Newman, Bull, Ridley, and Fuller were passed to the Second Degree, and this ceremony was succeeded by the initiation of Mr. William Henry Hornsby, C.E., Langham Hotel, London. Bro. James Terry, P.G.D.C. Herts, then presented Bro. Gilbert, S.W., Prov. G. Steward and W.M. elect, to the W.M. for the benefit of installation. Bro. Copestick, P.G.J.W. Herts, taking the S.W. chair, and Bro. Young the J.W. Bro. Lacey thereupon proceeded to instal Bro. Gilbert as Master of the lodge, executing his work in an admirable manner. The officers appointed and invested by the W.M. were Bros. Charles Lacey, I.P.M.; Riley, S.W.; Tydeman, J.W.; Barwick, Treas.; Malcolm, Sec.; Holmes, S.D.; Jacobs, J.D.; Pritchard, Org.; Fisher, I.G.; Creed and Noyes, Stewards; Knight, D.C.; and Bro. Steedman, Tyler. Bro. Lacey then delivered the charges. Before the lodge closed the proposition of Bro. Young, Prov. G.D., to increase the Tyler's fee was carried. On the motion of Bro. Young, seconded by Bro. Tydeman, J.W., a vote of condolence with Bro. West, the first Master of the lodge, on the sudden loss of his wife, was also carried, and a letter was ordered to be sent to Bro. West, and the vote of condolence was directed to be entered on the lodge minutes. A vote of thanks to Bro. Lacey for performing the ceremony of installation was moved by Bro. Young, seconded by the S.W., and carried unanimously, and also ordered to be entered on the lodge minutes. The Worshipful Master afterwards rose to present a P.M.'s jewel and a Provincial Grand Deacon's jewel to Bro. Lacey, and in doing so said that this was at once one of the most important and most pleasing duties that could devolve upon any W.M. To present a token of recognition of his services to any brother was at all times a most pleasing duty, because it conveyed to the brother the ideas of the brethren upon the subject. (Addressing Bro. Lacey the W.M. said) I give to you what the brethren thought well to present to you as a mark of their sentiments; for I am sure that the way in which you have performed your duties must have won the approval of every one connected with the lodge. It is my pleasing duty to decorate you with a mark of the very great honour which we as Freemasons who are hard working greatly desire and work for, and for which you have worked so assiduously that no one will grudge you the honour that the decoration confers upon you. It is very pleasing for me to have to decorate you with this jewel, and may you long live to enjoy the privilege it confers upon you. I have also another decoration to confer upon you, which is that of the jewel of the Provincial Grand Deacon. It is one which you are entitled to in connection with the lodge in consequence of your being a Provincial Grand Officer. This will be a testimony to the Masonic world that you have so well pleased the brethren of the King Harold Lodge that they do not grudge to invest you with this mark of distinction. I hope you will continue long to enjoy the privilege of wearing it. Bro. Lacey thanked the W.M. for this mark of approbation of his conduct, but refrained from saying any more, as the time was short. The Secretary read the communication from Prov. Grand Secretary as to the wearing of commemorative jewels; also one from Bro. T. F. Halsey, M.P., Prov. G.M., regretting his inability to be present, and hoping to be present at next Prov. Grand Lodge. The Secretary also read another letter from Bro. Wilson Iles, Prov. Grand Secretary, regretting his inability to be present. A circular from Bro. James Terry, Prov. G.D.C., Secretary of the Benevolent Institution, asking for a Steward for next festival, on 9th Feb., 1876, was also read. The W.M. offered himself as Steward, and was accepted. Lodge was then closed, and the brethren adjourned to banquet. Among the brethren who were present during the ceremonies, and at the installation and banquet were Bros. J. K. Young, P.M.; James Terry, Prov. G.D.C. Herts, P.M.; Barwick, Treas.; A. Malcolm, Sec.; J. Tydeman, S.D.; and W. Holmes, J.D. Among the visitors were Bros. Jos. Gaskill, 1076; G. J. W. Mugliston, 1421; A. C. Wylie, W.M. 869; T. T. Asga Thorp, 1439; J. H. Hobbs, J. W. 749; W. H. Etherington, J. W. 869; Walter E. Gompertz, P.P.G.P. Herts.; J. Copestick, Prov. G.J.W.; Bradstock; G. T. English, P.M. 1227; H. Massey ("Freemason"); J. H. Thompson, W.M. 1237; John Maller, W.M. 754; R. T. Ingersoll, W.M. elect 1237; J. C. Wylie, 860; M. C. Lucy, 60; and T. J. Carter, W.M. 403, P. Prov. G.S.D. Herts; and Shelton. After the banquet the toasts were proposed in regular order. In giving "The G.M.," Bro. Gilbert commended His Royal Highness's earnestness and energy in Freemasonry, and applauded his sentiments; that the interest he took in the Craft was not for the jewels he wore, but for the glorious cause itself, and its watchwords,

"Loyalty and Charity." The toasts of "The Pro Grand Master," and "The Deputy Grand Master, &c.," also drew from the W.M. expressions of approbation of the manner in which those several brethren discharged their duties. In proposing "The Provincial Grand Master, Bro. T. F. Halsey, M.P.," the W.M. referred to the letter from that brother, which had been read in lodge that day, and added that if he had been able to be present the brethren would have given a most hearty welcome. "The D.P.G.M., Bro. Sedgwick, and Provincial Grand Officers" was the next toast, and referring to those who were in attendance, the rejoiced to see Bro. Copestick, Prov. G.J.W., honour the lodge in conjunction with several other Prov. Grand Officers. Bro. Copestick replied, and assured the brethren that the Prov. Grand Officers were ready to do their duty whenever called upon, and whatever it might be. When they considered what good examples were set them first and foremost by the Provincial Grand Master, whose assiduity was such as to deserve the greatest respect and thanks, and next, by the Provincial Grand Secretary, Bro. Wilson Iles, whose courtesy at all times cheered the brethren in the discharge of their duties, the other officers of the province could not but be energetic. The province was now attaining a very high position, and in a short space of time he expected to see it second to none in the kingdom. The number of lodges and the number of Freemasons was increasing; and the Freemasons he hoped were good men and true. It was one of the most important things in connection with Freemasonry at the present moment that the Order should have a strong army in the field of men of courage and esteem, and he believed that there were such men in the Craft. Bro. Lacey, I.P.M., proposed "The W.M.," and said it was the first time he had had the privilege and the honour to propose this toast in connection with Bro. Gilbert. For various reasons he had great pleasure in doing so; and among them was the fact that Bro. Gilbert was one of the founders of the lodge. It was very gratifying to see him in the chair; it was a position he was well entitled to. From the time he had been associated with the lodge he had carried out with great ability the various offices below it, and the brethren, as soon as they had the opportunity, conferred upon him the highest office they could bestow. When his term of office expired it would be found that he had done justice to his position. The W.M. replying, said, that when he was initiated the first thing that struck him was how Bro. Watkins, who was the Master, could remember the beautiful ritual. When he found that it was all committed to memory he made a resolve to imitate him if he could. Although he never expected to do it so well as Bro. Watkins he had endeavoured to perfect himself. He mentioned this to show that great difficulties appeared to present themselves at first, but by application and perseverance they were overcome. When he began to see the beauties of Freemasonry, the good society it brought him in connection with, and the excellent objects it had in view, he felt bound to go on in the direction which he had pointed out for himself, and he set himself to work to learn the Masonic ceremonies. He was happy to say he had succeeded. As to being one of the founders of the lodge, he was glad to say he was; and whenever the monthly meetings came round they were regarded by him with pleasure and gratification, and as a relaxation from his daily avocations. It was his desire to go on in the course he had marked out, and he hoped that he would receive the support of his officers and the members of the King Harold Lodge in doing so. When he looked at Bro. Lacey's career he felt he had only to imitate him, and he should retire from office with honour, and with the laurels which Bro. Lacey had so justly earned. He pledged himself to do his utmost to perform the duties that devolved upon him according to those true Masonic principles which were so well set forth in the ceremonies. The W.M. then proposed "The Visitors," for which Bros. Thompson, W.M. 1237, P.G.S.B. Middlesex; Ingersoll, Mallow, and Carter returned thanks, and the brethren then drank the remaining toasts and shortly afterwards journeyed homewards. The day was an exceedingly pleasant one, and the admirable banquet supplied by Bro. Sheldon added greatly to the general enjoyment.

HAMPTON COURT.—ERA LODGE (No. 1423).—This lodge met on Saturday, 9th inst., at King's Arms Hotel, Hampton Court. Bro. J. W. Baldwin, the W.M., passed three brethren, and initiated Dr. Gilliespie (late 78th Highlanders). The Stewards to represent this lodge in 1876 were elected. The three charities will be represented. Banquet followed. There were present Bros. E. H. Thielley, S.W.; J. B. Langley, J.W.; T. J. Sabine, P. Prov. G.S.B. Middlesex, P.M., Treas.; F. Walters, P. Prov. G.P. Middlesex, P.M., Sec.; E. W. Devereux, S.D.; S. Wolff, J.D.; A. F. Loos, I.G.; and some dozen others. Several visitors were present.

TWICKENHAM.—FRANCIS BURDETT LODGE (No. 1503).—Two emergency meetings of this lodge took place at the Albany Hotel, on the 22nd and the 30th ult. At the first meeting there were present Bros. W. Wigginton, P.M. 902 and 1298, P. Prov. G.D.C. Worcestershire, and P.G.S. of Middlesex, W.M.; Saunders, S.W.; Tomlinson, P.M., and P. Prov. G.S.D. of Norfolk, J.W.; Horsley, P.M., P. Prov. G.R. of Middlesex, acting I.P.M.; Walls, I.G.; Mitchell, Sec. The visitors were Bros. Artus, P.M. 34; Palmer, 1293; Court, jun., 113. This meeting was convened to record on the minutes a letter received from the G.S., Bro. J. Hervey, to the W.M., stating that the removal of the lodge from Hampton Hill to Twickenham, which had been approved by Colonel Burdett, P.G.M., had received the concurrence of the M.W. the Grand Master. The resignation of the Secretary, Bro. Mitchell, in consequence of his departure for America, was announced, and a vote of thanks for his services passed. Some minor matters having been discussed, the lodge was closed, and the brethren partook of refreshment. At the meeting on the 30th ult., in addition to the above officers, Bro. Knaggs, the Treasurer, was present. The W.M., assisted by his officers, initiated Mr. F. M. Ashley into the mysteries of the Craft most ably and impressively. The ballot was taken as joining members for Bros. Ewens, 144; Court, jun., 113; Artus, P.M. 34; and upon investigation was declared unanimous. Several propositions having been taken, the lodge was closed, and the brethren partook of an excellent cold collation. The usual loyal and Craft toasts were given by the W.M., briefly, but to the purpose. Bro. Horsley responded for the "P.G. Officers of Middlesex," and proposed, in a neat speech, "The Health of the W.M.," who ably replied. "The Initiate, Bro. Ashley," was toasted, and he acknowledged the compliment. Bros. Palmer, 1293, and Carless (late St. George's) replied for "The Visitors." "The Health of the Officers of the Lodge" was most cordially proposed by the W.M., and responded to by Bros. Tomlinson, Knaggs and Walls. Bros. Horsley, P.M., and Walls having contributed some harmony, the proceedings terminated with the Tyler's toast.

A numerous meeting of the members of this young but exceedingly flourishing lodge was held at the Albany Hotel, Twickenham, on the 13th inst. The lodge was opened by Bro. Colonel Wigginton, P.M., P.P.G.D.C., Worcestershire, P.G.S. of Middlesex, &c., W.M., assisted by Bros. Artus, P.M. (Mount Moriah), acting S.W.; Tomlinson, P.M., P.Z., P.P.G.S.D. of Norfolk, J.W.; Birchill, P.M., P.Z., &c., acting I.P.M.; Deeks, acting S.D.; Walls, acting J.D.; Sugg, P.P.G.O. of Surrey, acting Org.; Knaggs, Treas.; Court, sen., Sec., pro tem. The minutes of the previous meetings, both regular and emergency, having been read and confirmed, the W.M. proceeded to initiate the Rev. Mr. L. M. D'Orsey, M.A., into the mysteries of the Craft. The solemnity of the beautiful ceremony, which was most ably performed, was further enhanced by the harmonious symphonies of Bro. Sugg, the acting Organist. The ballot was taken for Bro. C. Palmer, L.L.D. (1293), who was unanimously elected as a joining member. The election of two members upon the Library Committee resulted in favour of Bros. Taylor and Palmer, who each returned thanks for the honour accorded. A proposition of Bro. Rogers—"That each member of the lodge do subscribe one shilling per month towards a special fund for the Masonic charities, and that a ballot for a Life Governorship be taken as often as ten guineas may be collected; the brother receiving the largest number of votes to be nominated for the Life Governorship, the donations to be for the three Charities alternately, as follows: 'Aged Freemasons and their Widows, Boys' School, and Girls' School'"—was briefly discussed and adjourned until next meeting. Several important resolutions which had been passed during the year were ordered to be inserted in the bye-laws when printed, and the audit night fixed. This being the night of the election of W.M. for the ensuing year, Bro. Colonel Wigginton was unanimously re-elected to that high position. The W.M., when the result was made known, made a most feeling reply, in which he stated, amongst other things, that although the work of a newly formed lodge was very great and exacting, he had endeavoured, and he hoped successfully, to establish the "Francis Burdett" upon a sound foundation, and that his labours to promote that end had been very considerably lightened by his brother officers. In being proudly placed again at the head of the lodge, he should strive still further to increase the prosperity of the "Francis Burdett," as well as the comfort and interests of its members, and in conclusion he hoped that upon the termination of this second year of his Mastership the lodge would be thoroughly well established, and second to none in the province. Bro. Knaggs was re-elected Treasurer, and Bro. Harrison re-appointed Tyler. Both brethren having returned thanks, the lodge was shortly afterwards closed, and the brethren partook of a cold collation. The usual toasts were circulated, and a most agreeable evening brought to a conclusion with the "Tyler's" toast. The installation of the W.M. and banquet to celebrate the opening of the lodge at its new quarters will take place on the second Wednesday in November, when the Provincial Grand Master of Middlesex and many other distinguished members of the Craft are expected to be present.

PLUMSTEAD.—UNITED MILITARY LODGE (No. 1536).—The regular monthly meeting of the above lodge took place on Friday, the 8th inst., at the new Masonic Hall adjoining the Sir Robert Peel, Crescent Road, Plumstead, when a large number of the brethren and visitors attended. Among the latter were Bros. C. Santi, W.M. 706; T. Ward, W.M. 700; F. J. Dawson, P.M. 700; J. McDougal, P.M. 913; J. Fenn, P.M. 1331; Donolly, 706; T. Dovey, 861; C. Mason, 295; J. Regan, 1205; J. Battersby, 1424; H. Fellows, 1208; R. McCoy, 1424; W. McCoy, 700; R. Beaver, 700; B. Plaisted, 913; B. Norman, 13, and C. Jolly, 913. The officers of the lodge present were Bros. Croisdale, P.M. 706, and who, on account of the serious illness of Bro. F. Pownall, the W.M., kindly officiated as W.M. for the evening; W. Weston, S.W.; G. Spinks, J.W.; T. Cooper, Sec.; A. G. Picken, S.D.; J. McCaffery, Steward; R. G. Lapham, I.G.; and J. Lackland, Tyler. The lodge having been opened in due form and with solemn prayer, the following brethren were duly elected as joining members:—Bros. James Brooks, Serjt. Major R.A., 199; Alex. Masterson, Serjt. Major R.A., 1000; G. Webster, Battery Gr. Master Serjt. R.H.A., 434; and J. Fenn, Battery Gr. Master Serjt. R.H.A., 1331. The following were then balloted for and approved of:—S. Morrish, Battery Serjt. Major R.H.A.; J. A. Mason, Serjt. Major R.A., and G. Smith, Gr. Master Serjt. R.A. Band. The two latter not being present, Serjt. Major Morrish was duly initiated. Bros. M. Tormey, H. Harding, R. Thompson, R. Moore, J. Knight, and J. B. Gibson were then passed to the Second Degree, and Bros. E. G. Latham, T. Pearson, S. T. Smith, and W. Land raised to the Sublime Degree, the whole of the work being done by the W.M. in a most eloquent and impressive manner.

The lodge was then closed, and the brethren adjourned to refreshment. The usual loyal and Masonic toasts were most enthusiastically received, and the W.M., in proposing "The Initiate," said he had felt a deal of pleasure in unfolding to him some of the beauties of Masonry; as yet he had only taken the first step into its mysteries, but he had seen enough to know that its teachings were pure. He trusted the initiate would always look well to the best interests of the Craft, and prove himself a worthy brother among Masons. Bro. Morrish briefly replied. In proposing the toast of "The Visitors," the W.M. said he heartily welcomed them in the name of the lodge, he was glad to see them present for many reasons, and he held that the interchange of visits between the brethren of the various lodges brought them into a knowledge of and an identity with each other's working, and caused a spirit of emulation to exist among them, the results of which showed itself in the excellent working of every lodge in the district that he had had the honour of visiting; it as well made them acquainted with one another, and at the social gathering, when labour was over, a genial spirit of good feeling and good fellowship was interchanged among them by visiting one another, and it bound them together truly in one bond of brotherly love. He begged to couple with the toast the name of Bro. Past Master Dawson, who he felt sure was esteemed by every one present. P.M. Dawson, in reply, thanked them for the very handsome and cordial manner in which the toast had been put before and received by the brethren of the lodge; but could not consider himself otherwise than as a victim of misplaced confidence in the case. He fully expected that Bros. P.M. Ward or P.M. Santi would have been called upon to respond, and hugged himself with the belief that one of them would have had to do penance by making a speech, and not he himself. However, he must say that he felt much pleased with what he had seen done in the lodge that night, more particularly with the great improvement made by the officers of the lodge in their working over that done by them a fortnight ago, and he must say that as a young lodge, with young and inexperienced officers, their working was a credit to them. The W.M., in speaking of the good results arising from the interchange of visits between neighbouring lodges, had truly said that it created a great amount of good and brotherly feeling; it as well made them one in heart and in work, and he endorsed every word the W.M. said on that matter. He regretted the absence of the W.M., Bro. Pownall; no one could help appreciating his energy in the cause of the Order, he was, in fact, a model for every Mason to set before himself and imitate, and in his affliction he had the full and heartfelt sympathy of every one who knew the sterling qualities of both his head and heart. He trusted soon to see him in that chair again, well and able to carry out the work that he had set his mind upon—the success and prosperity of the United Military Lodge, of which it might be truly said he was the father. He concluded by saying it was a pleasure to see a young lodge like this working so well together, and that it was a credit to the Province of Kent. Bro. P.M. McDougall said he felt sure the Province of Kent would be proud of this, the latest addition to its strength, and if the Most W. Grand Master of Kent, Lord Holmesdale, were present he would be the first man to acknowledge it, and as a Past Master of the Pattison Lodge, No. 913, he felt it incumbent upon him to thank them for their kind and cordial reception of his lordship's name. For himself he thanked them heartily for their kind reception. P.M. Fenn then proposed "The Health of the W.M.," and Bro. Croisdale, in reply, said he felt deeply sensible of the kind manner in which they had drank his health. He looked upon it not only as a compliment to him, but to those who had so ably helped him through the ceremonies of the evening. No one regretted the absence of Bro. Pownall more than he did. He trusted that it was only a temporary absence, and that he would soon be back to do his work once more among them, and to help on the progress and prosperity of this lodge as well as the whole Masonic Craft. The toast of "The Past Masters belonging to the Lodge" was briefly replied to by P.M. Fenn, and after a warm greeting to "The Officers of the Lodge," especially to Bro. Weston, who replied, thanking them all for the very kind and feeling manner in which they had spoken of the W.M., Bro. Pownall, and that it would give him great pleasure in conveying those expressions to him. He also thanked P.M. Croisdale, on behalf of the officers and brethren of the lodge, for his kindness in taking the chair on this occasion, also P.M. Dawson for doing the duty of I.P.M., and trusted that on their next meeting they would see Bro. Pownall in the chair again. He would not detain them any longer. Bros. Cooper and McCaffery having expressed a wish to say a few words, the "Tyler's Toast" concluded a most enjoyable evening.

INSTRUCTION.

EGYPTIAN LODGE OF INSTRUCTION (No. 27).—On Thursday, the 28th October, the brethren of the Egyptian Lodge of Instruction, which was established only six months ago, will meet at the Hercules Tavern, Leadenhall-street, to work the Fifteen Sections. The hour of meeting is seven p.m., and Bro. Austin, P.M. 933, will preside as W.M., having Bro. Horsley, 933, as S.W., and Bro. Williams, 933, as J.W. The sections are to be worked as follows:—

VICTORIA CHAPTER (No. 1056).—The installation meeting of this chapter was held at the Masons' Coffee House, E.C., on Monday, October 4th, the anniversary of its formation. The M.E.Z., Ehnhus, opened the chapter in due form, and the minutes being read, and also a most satisfactory report from the audit committee, both were duly confirmed. Companion Newman was then duly installed in the chair of M.E.Z. by Comp. Gotthel, in his usual impressive and effective manner. Next Comp. Taylor was exalted to the chair of Second Principal by Comp. Pendlebury, whilst Comp. Noehmer (who is also Z. of Chap. 186) was, in virtue of his office, simply inducted into the Third Principal's chair, after which the subordinate officers received the usual investiture. For the first time since the formation of this now numerous and influential chapter, no candidate was exalted, those approved being unavoidably absent, through their public or private avocations. No further business presenting, the M.E.Z., after thrice rising in due form, closed the chapter, when the companions adjourned to partake of the bountiful and recherché repast which this hostelry provides for those guests whom the M.E.Z. delights to honour. The newly-installed Principal was well supported by, amongst many others, Companions Forsyth, P.Z., Hooper, Bedolfe, Musto, Forge, Bosworth, Payne, D'Arcey, sen., Leggett, Oliver, Taverner, Gompertz, Turquand, &c. The evening proved one of considerable social enjoyment, although the companions had to regret the absence of some they esteem, such as Comp. Brett, that "preux chevalier" of Masonry, Clark, Mackney, and others, and last, though not least, of one present at the last installation, the dear and beloved companion, W. Carpenter, P.Z., whom death has called away, but whose writings will long be remembered for their earnestness and simplicity in Masonic annals. After the usual loyal and Masonic toasts "The Health of the newly-installed M.E.Z." was proposed by Comp. Ehnhus, I.P.Z., those of the Principal and other Officers following in due course. "The Health of the I.P.Z.," was then proposed, and the usual handsome and well-earned jewel presented, for he had long borne the burthen and heat of the day in assiduously toiling up the steps of the chapter. In replying he informed the companions in a touching manner that as a Dane he was about to return to his native land, expressing the regret he felt at leaving those with whom he had so long acted, and, referring to one and another friend, he could only feel towards each as—

"Sorrowing most of all that he Should see that face no more."

As time wore on harmony prevailed, and Bro. Forsyth and others contributed pleasing melodies. Social chat also enlivened the evening. Some discussed upon the legitimacy of Mark Masonry, and the peculiar ideas some entertain with regard to its origin; others unbosomed themselves upon the antiquity of the "Craft," and the modified opinions now prevailing as to its historic theories; whilst a third set discoursed upon the Masonic charities, their uses and abuse. One companion, indeed, seemed to think that as the average cost of maintaining each child was £50, in many cases less than half that sum, if granted to the widowed mother, might so strengthen her other resources as to enable her to keep a home for all her children in that best of all schools—a parent's domestic circle, a point where the present system often lamentably fails. Others contended, also, that so magnificent a body as the Masons ought not to confine its operations to the present narrow bounds, but should seek some sphere in the domain of philanthropy and of human aims, so that it might make its mark in the world's history, and leave behind a memorial of its greatness (for Masonry is human) which shall not pass away—Floreat res Victoria.

LEBANON CHAPTER (No. 1326) was held at the Red Lion, Hampton, on Saturday, October 2nd. Comps. W. Smeed, as M.E.Z.; W. Hammond, H.; F. Walters, P.Z., as J. Bro. J. B. Shackleton was exalted. The ceremony was well done. Refreshment followed labour. Comp. E. Gilbert, P.S., did his part in an excellent manner.

MACDONALD LODGE (No. 104).—The autumnal meeting of this prosperous lodge was held at the Masons' Hall, Masons'-avenue, Coleman-street, E.C., on Saturday, the 16th inst. The W. Bro. Robert Berridge, W.M., being unavoidably absent, the chair of A. was occupied by the I.P.M.; the W. Bro. William Worrell, P.G. Organist, and amongst others present were: Bros. T. W. White, S.W.; N. Ritherdon, M.O.; E. Moody, S.O.; the V.W. Bros. Thomas Meggy, P.G.M.O., P.M. and Treas.; and James Stevens, P.G.J.O., P.M.; the W. Bro. Charles Hammerton, P.G.D.C., P.M., and Sec.; Bros. W. P. Collins, S.D.; G. Yuxley, G.S., D.C.; John Close, W. Johnston, J. R. Williams, J. M. Wohlgermuth, J. H. Pitt, H. F. Partridge, G. W. Verry, Truman, Grant, &c.; and visitor, the W. Bro. Sigismund Rosenthal, P.G.D.C. There were several candidates for advancement, but in each case absence from town prevented attendance, and the opportunity was thereby afforded for perfecting certain arrangements affecting the working of the lodge, which resulted satisfactorily for the good of the Order in general and the lodge in particular. The brethren subsequently adjourned to banquet under the presidency of Bro. Worrell, who afterwards proposed the usual loyal and Masonic toasts with considerable ability. The evening's pleasure was enhanced by the vocal efforts of Bros. Stevens, Meggy, Close, and Truman, and by a spirited recitation by Bro. Moody of "The Charge of the Six Hundred," in response to which the brethren "whipped round" for a donation to the fund for the forthcoming banquet of the gallant survivors of the glorious Balaklava Charge. For a few brief moments the meeting resolved itself into a gathering of "Craft Masons," to do honour to the M.W.G.M., and to wish the Royal traveller, health, happiness, and a "safe return to his native land." A most enjoyable evening, characterised by that earnest good fellowship and social harmony which has always been conspicuous in the Macdonald Lodge, was brought to a close shortly before eight o'clock, when the brethren separated, "sorry to part," but hoping to "meet again" in February next.

ERA MARK LODGE (No. 176) was held at the Bridge House Hotel, Southwark, on Friday, 8th October. Bro. H. A. Dubois, W.M., opened the lodge. Four candidates were advanced. One brother was elected an honorary member. Banquet followed. There were present: Bros. Dr. John Baxter Langley, S.W.; T. Horton, J.W.; F. Walters, P.G.P., P.M., Sec.; and others. Two or three visitors were present.

PROVINCIAL GRAND LODGE OF ABERDEENSHIRE (EAST).

On Tuesday, 21st Sept., the annual meeting of the Provincial Grand Lodge of Aberdeenshire (East) was held within the Keith Lodge, Peterhead, and the proceedings attracted a large attendance of Masons from all parts of the province. The chair was occupied by Captain Charles Hunter, the Provincial Grand Master, who was supported by Bros. W. Boyd and Major Lumsden, of Pitcaple Castle, the Depute and Substitute Grand Masters of the province. There were also present Dr. Beveridge, the Provincial Grand Master of the City of Aberdeen, with other strangers from a distance. Some formal business having been transacted and the roll of the lodges in the province having been called by the Provincial Grand Secretary and duly responded to, the nomination and election of office-bearers for the ensuing year was proceeded with. The following is a list of the officials:—

Capt. Charles Hunter	Prov. G.M.
Wm. Boyd	Dep. Prov. G.M.
Major Lumsden	Sub. Prov. G.M.
Alexander Simpson	Prov. S.G.W.
William Davidson	Prov. J.G.W.
Rev. James Stewart, Rev. M. Morgan, Rev. Wm. Webster	Prov. G. Chaplains.
John Ingram	Prov. G. Sec.
James Davidson	Prov. G. Treas.
David Gray	Prov. G.S.D.
James Laing	Prov. G.J.D.
Alexander Stuart	Prov. G. Architect.
William Stuart	Prov. G.D.C.
David Macdonald	Prov. G.O.
Alexander Macdonald	Prov. G.B.B.
Wm. Cowie	Prov. G.S.B.

It must be satisfactory to those interested in Masonry to know that the Provincial Grand Lodge has, specially through the zealous co-operation of the office-bearers, attained a high state of efficiency as regards its working and management. The large attendance present at the recent meeting is a proof of the interest which the revival of the institution long dormant has awakened, and induces a hope that at no distant date it may lead to an increase in the number of lodges in the province. We understand it is probable that the next meeting of the Provincial Grand Lodge will be held at Fraserburgh.

GLASGOW.—LODGE ST. MUNGO (No. 27).—This most ancient and flourishing lodge held their regular bi-monthly meeting on Thursday, the 7th inst., in St. Mark's Hall, 213, Buchanan-street, Glasgow. The lodge was opened by Bro. Dugald Butler, R.W.M., assisted by Bros. McTaggart, Scott, Sinclair, and others. Bros. Dr. McInnes, S.W.; A. Bain, P.M. Union and Crown, No. 103, acting as J.W. As usual there was a good attendance. Among the visitors there was a deputation from Lodge 426, Prince of Wales, Renfrew, headed by their respected R.W.M., Bro. William Glen. The business of the evening was the admittance into the order of Freemasonry of Mr. W. McIntyre, who after the minutes of the previous meeting had been read and approved of received the E.A. Degree, the ceremony being performed by Bro. Scott, P.M., in a most efficient manner. The lodge then went to refreshment, when the usual loyal and Masonic toasts were given and duly responded to, the toast of the evening being that of "The Visiting Brethren," which was ably responded to by Bro. W. Glen, R.W.M. 246. The intervals were much enlivened by several most excellent songs, especially those of Bro. J. G. Sharpe, the celebrated Scottish tenor. The R.W.M., Bro. Dugald Butler, said before closing the lodge he had much pleasure in proposing for honorary affiliation into Lodge St. Mungo, 27, Bro. W. H. Bickerton, of the "Freemason," which was unanimously agreed to, Bro. Bickerton taking the usual obligation. This brought the proceedings to a close.

GLASGOW.—LODGE THISTLE (No. 87).—The regular fortnightly meeting of this lodge was held in the Masonic Hall, 30, Hope-street, Glasgow, on Tuesday, the 5th inst., with a fair attendance. Bro. J. W. Burns, R.W.M., occupied the chair and opened the lodge, when the minutes of last regular meeting were read and approved of. There were present on this occasion Bros. James Booth, S.W.; Wm. Wilson, J.W.; A. McPhee, Sec.; Paton, Treas.; Stuart, S.D.; McLachlan, J.D.; Barr, I.G.; Sinclair, Tyler; the R.W.M. being most ably supported by the two esteemed Past Masters, Bros. John Miller and John Fraser. The business before the evening was the passing of three E.A.'s to the degree of Fellow Craft, Bros. D. Nicoll and J. L. Barr being for Lodge Commercial, No. 360, they being about to leave this country for Monte Video. The ceremony of passing was performed in a most efficient manner by Bro. J. M. Oliver, S.W., Lodge Commercial, No. 360. This being the first time of Bro. Oliver working this degree, it reflects great credit upon him, and shows the great zeal he must have for the Order. At the conclusion of the ceremony a vote of thanks was proposed to Bro. Oliver, which was received with acclamation. The lodge was then closed.

EDINBURGH.—LODGE ST. JAMES (No. 97).—The opening meeting of this lodge for the season was held in their hall, Writers'-court, No. 317, High-street, Edinburgh, on Thursday, the 14th inst., with a most sumptuous banquet, Bro. Robert Gordon, R.W.M., in the chair. Among those present, members of the lodge, were Bros. J. R. Turnbull, P.M.; Samuel Aitken, D.M.; H. McPherson, J.W.; Wm. Hannah, Treas.; Thos. Millar, Sec.; Jas. Fowler, Chaplain; J. Wilson, B.B.; B. Napier, Bard; Wm. Bell, Steward; John Anderson, S.B.; Wm. Martin, I.G.; J. Newbigging, Tyler; J. C. Tod, G.M.; J. Melville and J. Turner, the respected Past Masters of the lodge. There was a good attendance of visitors on this occasion, and deputations from Lodge Journeyman, No. 8, headed by P.M. Hendrie, and Lodge St. Stephen, headed by their R.W.M. and Bro. R. C. Brown, P.M. After the dinner, which had been most tastefully and plentifully served, the R.W.M., in proposing the first toast, that of "Her Majesty," said it was one that was always well received by all classes of her subjects, more especially Freemasons, and he hoped she might be long spared to reign over them. The next toast was that of "The Prince of Wales, Grand Master Mason of England." He alluded to his departure for India, and wished him God speed and a safe return. Other toasts followed in quick succession. There were some excellent songs from several of the brethren, which contributed very much to the general enjoyment of the evening, which was spent in a most harmonious manner.

GLASGOW.—LODGE ST. MARK (No. 102).—A meeting of this lodge was held within their hall in Buchanan-street, on Monday 11th inst. The R.W.M., Bro. James F. Mitchell, presided, the office-bearers present being Bros. D. H. Miller and Thomas Halkett, Past Masters; A. C. Lindsay Gray, D.M.; William Nicholson, S.M.; Thomas Kerr, S.W.; A. C. Paterson, Treas.; John Smith, Sec.; Hugh McMillan, J.D.; and Seth Dory, St. Steward. There was a good attendance of visiting brethren, among whom were Bros. Dugald Butler, R.W.M. Lodge 27, St. Mungo; R. M. Yuill, R.W.M. Lodge 275, Shamrock and Thistle; Charles Scobie and E. Arthur, Mother Kilwinning; David Horne, J.W. 34; J. Stewart, 360, &c. The lodge having been duly opened, the Chairman read applications for admission to the Order and to that lodge from three candidates, and the ballot was taken as regarded each serialim. It being found clear in each case, the candidates having been prepared, were brought in and received the First Degree at the hands of the R.W.M. On the conclusion of the initiation, the compliment of honorary affiliation to the lodge was bestowed upon Bros. Dugald Butler, of Lodge St. Mungo (27), and John Stewart, Lodge Commercial (360). Thereafter, the Chairman said he had a little piece of information to give with regard to their property in the lodge building, as to which he had spoken somewhat in detail at last meeting. It was that the matter had now entered upon an epistolary phase, and it had gone so far that the lodge committee had simply had it referred to their law agents, and asked the latter to have a meeting with the trustees. The lodge was then raised to the Fellow Craft Degree, when two brethren were passed to that degree by the R.W.M., and subsequently to the Sublime Degree of Master Mason, to which two were raised at the hands of Brother Halkett, P.M. This concluded the business, and the lodge was duly closed.

OBAN.—LODGE COMMERCIAL (No. 180).—This lodge, which is at present in a healthy condition, celebrated its annual excursion last week. About thirty of the brethren, with their wives and sweethearts, proceeded by the steamer Mountaineer to Ballaculish, and from thence in conveyances to wild and weird Glencoe, which was seen in its most savage beauty, mountain torrents being visible on every side, rushing in milkwhite foam down the sides of the scarred and given rocks; and towering over all were the cloud-kissed peaks of the "Lord Chancellor," and the wondrous Cave of Ossian. Refreshments were obtained, both going and returning from the glen, at Bro. P. Macculloch's tidy inn at Clachaig; and on reaching the steamer again a sumptuous repast was partaken of, served up in Bro. Cameron's superior style. On reaching Fort William, a landing was made for a short time, and in the evening all returned to Oban, well satisfied with the day's proceedings. Dancing was indulged in during the trip to the music of bagpipes and violin alternately, and mirth, melody, and Masonic geniality abounded, the esteemed R.W.M., Bro. John Livingston, doing all in his power to promote the enjoyment of the brethren and their lady friends. A movement, prompted by recent remarks in the "Freemason," is now being made to raise the fees of the lodge.

GLASGOW.—LODGE STAR (No. 219).—The regular fortnightly meeting of this lodge was held in their Hall, No. 12, Trongate, Glasgow, on Monday, the 11th inst., and was very fully attended. Bro. John Morgan, R.W.M., presided, supported by the following officers:—Bros. Jas.

Horn, J.W., acting S.W.; G. Miller, acting J.W.; Bro. Jasper Martin, D.M.; Smart, Treas.; Crawford, Sec., and others. Among the visitors were Bros. J. Burns, R.W.M. Lodge Thistle, 87; Wm. Phillips, R.W.M. Lodge Clydesdale, 556; Muir, D.M. 103; J. B. McNaught, S.W. 536; Weir, J.W. 556; McLeod, P.M. Shettleston St. John's, and a deputation from Lodge 347, Rutherglen, headed by the R.W.M., Bro. Ferguson. The lodge was opened, and the minutes read and confirmed. Mr. John Brand was then admitted to the mysteries and privileges of ancient Freemasonry in the First Degree, the ritual being most ably rendered by Bro. Wm. Phillips, R.W.M. Lodge Clydesdale, 556. At the conclusion of the ordinary business the lodge was called from labour to refreshment, when the usual loyal and Masonic toasts were given and heartily responded to. Several brethren contributed to the harmony of the evening with some excellent songs, to the general enjoyment of all present, the last toast bringing the evening to a close.

GLASGOW.—LODGE CALEDONIAN RAILWAY (No. 354).—The regular fortnightly meeting of this lodge was held in the Masonic Hall, 30, Hope-street, Bro. J. Shaw, R.W.M., in the chair, and the other officers in their respective places. On the lodge being opened, Bro. W. R. Dunn, Secretary, read the minutes of last regular meeting and special meeting, which were approved of. Bro. Angus Drummond then received the degree of Fellow Craft, Bro. D. Reid, R.W.M. of St. Andrew's Lodge, 465, officiating. In the course of the meeting Bro. Shaw, R.W.M., passed a most handsome M.M. jewel and illuminated address round to the brethren for their inspection, which had been voted by the lodge for presentation to Bro. Carmichael, their late Treasurer, who had left Scotland for New Zealand, and Bro. Stafford, late Senior Warden, who was residing in Carlisle. The brethren were highly pleased with both, which will be forwarded to the above-named brethren at the earliest convenience. There being no further business, the lodge closed, and the brethren adjourned to an adjoining room, and spent a short time in harmony.

GLASGOW.—LODGE COMMERCIAL (No. 360).—A special meeting of this lodge was held in their hall, 30, Hope-street, Glasgow, on Friday, the 8th inst., for the nomination of officers for the ensuing year, and conferring the degree of Master Mason upon the following brethren who were about to leave Scotland for abroad in a few days, viz., Messrs. D. Nicoll, J. Lyle Barr, and Robert Wilson. Bro. Monro officiated in his usual impressive manner. Considering it was a wet night their was a good attendance on this occasion. Bro. J. M. Oliver occupied his position as S.W., and Bro. T. Graham, Junior Warden; there were also present Bros. D. Lamb, D.M.; W. Finlay, Treas.; Wm. H. Bickerton, Sec.; and other officers in their respective places. Among the visiting brethren was Bro. Wm. Ferguson, R.W.M. Lodge No. 543, St. John's, Dalmeir. The following were nominated for office-bearers for the ensuing year:—Bros. John Monro, R.W.M.; D. Lamb, D.M.; W. Finlay, S.M.; J. M. Oliver, S.W.; T. Graham, J.W.; G. Scott, Treas.; James Coupar, Sec.; Wm. Keiller, S.D.; D. Reid, J.D.; W. H. Bickerton, Jeweller; James McCosh, Dir. of Cers.; R. Brodie, D. of M.; A. Sloan, B.B., and James Minnoch, Tyler, the offices of President of Stewards, Chaplain, and Inner Guard being held over.

GLASGOW.—LODGE COMMERCIAL (No. 360).—A special meeting of this lodge was held in their hall, 30, Hope-street, Glasgow, on Tuesday, the 12th inst. Bro. Lamb, D.M., in the unavoidable absence of Bro. Monro, R.W.M., presided. Among those present were Bros. J. M. Oliver, S.W.; Bickerton, Secretary, who acted as J.W.; Wm. Finlay, Treas.; Wm. Keiller, I.G.; R. Brodie, 360; R. Wilson, 360; R. Reid, 360; J. Nelson, 360; J. Johnson, 34, and others. The business of the evening was the raising of Bro. Wm. Thomson to the Sublime Degree of M.M., the ceremony being most ably performed by Bro. D. Lamb, D.M. The lodge was then closed.

GLASGOW.—LODGE GOVANDALE (No. 437).—The eleventh anniversary of this most prosperous lodge, was celebrated on Tuesday, the 28th ult., with great success. A large number of the members of the lodge and visiting brethren left the lodge room, Portland Buildings, about 6 p.m. and marched in procession through the burgh, headed by the Govan instrumental band, returning to the Lorne Hall, where the brethren, with their wives and sweethearts, about 140 in all, sat down and partook of an excellent dinner, Bro. John McFarlane, R.W.M., presiding, Bro. A. Campbell, P.M., officiating as Croupier. The usual loyal and Masonic toasts were then given. "The Queen and the Craft," "His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales, Grand Master Mason of England," "The Three Grand Lodges," and "The Provincial Grand Lodge of Glasgow," by the Chairman, Bro. McFarlane. In proposing the toast of the Queen, and the Prince of Wales, Bro. McFarlane, in a most neat and appropriate speech, pointed out the many good qualities of Her Majesty, and her appreciation and close relationship with the Order of Freemasonry, also the position of His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales as Grand Master of England. Bro. McFarlane said, respecting the toast of the Three Grand Lodges, he had much pleasure in coupling that toast with the name of Bro. Bickerton, of the "Freemason." Bro. Bickerton, in replying, thanked the chairman for his kindness in coupling his name with this toast, and in the course of his remarks pointed out the great amount of money that had been given for charitable purposes towards helping decayed Freemasons, their widows and orphans, in England and Ireland, also of their institutions for the support of the same, and he hoped that the day was not far distant when the Scottish brethren would have their institutions, for the same noble purpose. They had a most worthy brother, the Provincial Grand Master of Wigton and Kirkcudbright, doing all he possibly could, and he hoped one and all would put their shoulder to the wheel and make

Bro. Harriott's scheme a success. The toast of the Provincial Grand Lodge of Glasgow was replied to by Bro. Carrick in a most able manner. The toast of the evening was then given, "Prosperity to Lodge Govandale," by Bro. Don in most genial terms, and duly responded to by the chairman, who, in so doing, was glad at being able to state that the lodge was never in a more prosperous condition than at the present. Their meetings were characterised by good attendance, good order, and good conduct, in fact, they were blessed with perfect peace. Several other toasts followed. Between the toasts the company was enlivened with some most excellent and humorous songs by Bros. McCall, Sutherland, and others. On the conclusion of the proceedings within the Lorne Hall, an adjournment was made to the lodge room, Portland Buildings, where dancing was commenced, and continued for some time. Altogether the anniversary was a great success, every one spending a most enjoyable and pleasant evening.

GLASGOW.—LODGE CLYDESDALE (No. 556).—The regular meeting of this lodge was held in their hall, 106, Rose-street South, Glasgow, on Monday, 4th inst., Bro. Wm. Phillips, R.W.M., presiding; Bros. J. B. McNaught, S.W.; John Howie, J.W. There were also present Bro. Dr. Russell, D.M., and others. Among the visitors we noticed Bros. John Morgan, R.W.M. 219; Wm. Ferguson, R.W.M. St. John's Operative, 347, Rutherglen. There was a fair attendance on this occasion. The business before the meeting was the initiation of Mr. J. McDermott; passing Bros. J. Ferguson, A. Malcolm, and J. Haggart to the Fellow Craft Degree; and raising Bros. J. Haggart, J. Ferguson, and T. Henderson to the Sublime Degree of Master Mason, the ceremonies being performed by Bro. Wm. Phillips, R.W.M. of the lodge, in the E.A. and M.M. Degrees, and Bro. John Morgan, R.W.M. Star Lodge, 219. The whole of the degrees were worked in a most able manner. Bro. Phillips read the applications for admission into the Order of Freemasonry (with the names of their proposers and seconders) from two gentlemen, who will be brought forward at next regular meeting, and if no objection be offered will then receive the E.A. Degree. The lodge was then closed.

GLASGOW.—CALEDONIAN OF UNITY CHAPTER (No. 73).—The annual election and installation of office-bearers in this chapter took place on Tuesday, 28th ult., within the Masonic Hall, at No. 170, Buchanan-street. A Mark Lodge was opened by Bro. G. W. Wheeler, assisted by Bros. George McDonald and David Gilchrist, acting Senior and Junior Wardens, respectively. The minutes of last meeting having been read and passed, an application for admission to that degree was read from Bro. David Andrew, M.M. St. John, 34; and there being no objections he received the same at the hands of Bro. Wheeler. The Mark Lodge was then closed, and the Royal Arch Chapter opened, when the following office-bearers for the ensuing year were declared duly elected, and thereafter installed into office by Comp. J. Crabb, P.Z., 50:—G. W. Wheeler, Principal Z.; John Stewart, Principal H.; John Kinnaird, Principal J.; James Balfour, Scribe E.; Edward Arthur, Scribe N.; John Bannerman, Treas.; Wm. McGregor, First Sojourner; John Gilles, Second Sojourner; Thomas Yuille, Third Sojourner; J. F. Hanbridge, First Captain; Thomas Renton, Second Captain; Alexander Penman, Third Captain; William Jamieson, Janitor. The chapter was then closed, and a pleasant hour was spent in refreshment.

CALTON.—CHAPTER CATHEDRAL (No. 67).—An emergency meeting of this chapter was held in the Masonic Hall, 22, Struthers-street, Calton, on Tuesday, the 5th instant. Present:—Comps. Duthie, M.E.Z., 73; G. Pridie, H.; G. W. Wheeler, Z. 73; James Goldie, P.Z. 67; Wood, Treas.; James Dickie, Third Soj., and others. A Mark Lodge was opened by Bros. Duthie, R.W.M.; G. Pridie, S.W.; J. Wood, J.W. Applications were read from Bro. J. Dove, Lodge St. Mungo, No. 27, and from Bro. McDonald, Lodge Commercial, No. 360. There being no objection offered, the aforesaid Master Masons entered and received the Mark Degree, and retired. The lodge was then closed, and opened in Excellent Degree, Bro. J. Duthie presiding; Bros. Pridie, S.W.; G. W. Wheeler, J.W. Bros. Dove and McDonald received this degree and retired. A chapter was then formed, Comps. J. Duthie, Z.; G. Pridie, H.; G. W. Wheeler, J.; J. Goldie, Scribe E.; G. Mason, Scribe N.; Wood, Treasurer, with other officers. Bros. McDonald and Dove then entered and received the R.A. Degree, Comp. James Duthie, Z., officiating in his usual efficient manner. There being no further business the chapter was closed in due form by the three Principals.

GLASGOW.—CHAPTER PARTICK (No. 113).—The meeting of this chapter took place in their lodge room, Dumbarton Road, Glasgow, on Tuesday, the 5th inst., for the election and installation of their office-bearers for the ensuing year, when the following companions were duly elected and installed, viz., Comps. Thomas Hackett, Principal, Z.; G. Ward, H.; A. Brunton, J.; W. White, Scribe E.; W. Barr, Scribe N.; J. White, Chancellor; D. Stevenson, Treas.; J. Tomlinson, First Sojourner; J. Bain, Second Sojourner; W. Boag, Third Sojourner. The chapter was then closed in due form.

MOTHERWELL.—Tuesday, the 5th inst., was observed by the inhabitants of this town, as a half-holiday on the occasion of the visit of Her Royal Highness the Princess Christian to Dalzell House. The shops were closed and business generally suspended. At 5 p.m. the Masonic body marshalled into the Masonic Hall, and subsequently lined both sides of Merry-street from the arch towards the church, under the supervision of Bro. King, R.W.M., and included representatives from the following lodges:—St. John's Dalziel, 406; Hamilton Kilwinning, 7; Hamilton 233; St. Mary's, Coltness, 31; St. Clair, 427; St. John's, Woodhall, 305, and Livingstone, St. Andrew's, Motherwell.

Masonic and General Tidings.

In Brazil, notwithstanding recent struggles, Freemasonry is progressing. Up to last March there were in that country 169 Symbolical Lodges, of which 139 follow the Rite Ecossais, 16 the French Rite, 10 the Rite Adonhiramite, 1 the Rite Schroeder, 1 the Rite of York, and 2 the Rite of Adoption. The Archbishop of Canterbury has received a reply to the address presented to the Prince of Wales by the Society for the Propagation of the Gospel in Foreign Parts. His Royal Highness, through General Knollys, expresses his admiration for the missionaries, and assures the Archbishop that there will be no omission of any opportunity that may present itself during his visit to India to give encouragement to those earnest men.

On Thursday, Oct. 14, Bro. Hadley, the Alderman-elect of Castle Baynard, entertained a large number of his friends and supporters at dinner, at the London Tavern. Following as it did immediately upon the declaration as to the result of the scrutiny, the gathering was naturally of a very hearty and enlivening character, the main business of the evening being the rendering of thanks on the one hand, and of congratulations on the other. Even the room in which the dinner was held presented a more than ordinarily attractive appearance, the London Tavern having been recently painted and redecorated, the effect being most satisfactory. The chair was, of course, occupied by Bro. Hadley, who was supported on either hand by Mr. Stafford Northcote and Dr. Hardy, the list of guests also including the names of Major Wieland, Mr. Blakesley, C.C.; Bro. J. Gale, C.C., Mr. P. McKinlay, C.C., Mr. Joseph Newbon, Mr. Stafford Northcote, jun., Mr. John Hudson, Mr. C. Walton, Mr. W. S. Oram, Bro. Dosell, and others, the party numbering about one hundred and fifty.

The annual meeting of the Provincial Grand Lodge of West Yorkshire took place on Wednesday in the Cutlers' Hall, Sheffield. A report of the proceedings will appear in our next.

Bro. Robert Canton will preside at the autumn dinner of the Past Officers' Club, to be held at the Raglan Hotel on Friday, 29th inst.

CHRIST'S HOSPITAL.—The annual dinner, on the birthday of King Edward VI., will be held at the London Tavern, on Monday, the 25th inst. Bro. J. D. Allcroft, treasurer of Christ's Hospital, will preside.

LORINERS' COMPANY.—On the invitation of Bro. Alderman and Sheriff Knight, the Master, Wardens, and Court of Assistants will accompany him in the civic procession to Westminster on the 9th of November next.

A very fine jack, weighing 17lbs., was caught on Saturday last at the Rye House Fishery (Bro. Teale's).

THE BALAKLAVA BANQUET.—The following railway companies have consented to grant free passes to any of the survivors of the Balaklava charge proceeding to London on Monday next who are unable to defray their own expenses:—The Great Northern, the London and North-Western, the Great Western, the London and South-Western, and the London, Brighton, and South Coast. Nearly £150 has already been subscribed towards the banquet fund. Sir Roger Palmer will be prevented from being present by his duties as High Sheriff of Dublin. Lord George Paget, the senior surviving officer, will attend the dinner, and it is hoped that he will take the chair on the occasion. It has been decided to invite to the banquet Miss Elizabeth Thompson, the well-known painter of battle scenes. The Great Northern Railway Company have kindly offered to convey all those invited to the banquet on Monday, 25th inst., at the Alexandra Palace. The "Daily Telegraph" of Tuesday last acknowledged the receipt of £155. from the members of the Macdonald Lodge of Mark Masters, No. 104, sent in aid of the "Balaklava Banquet."

PRINCE LEOPOLD AND THE FREEDOM OF THE CITY.—The City Lands Committee are making arrangements for the forthcoming presentation to H.R.H. Prince Leopold of the freedom of the City, to which he is entitled by patrimony. Upwards of 700 invitations have been issued for the dejeuner to the members of the Corporation, the masters of the principal City companies, the leading merchants and bankers, chairmen of some of the public companies, and other persons of distinction.

Bro. Sir John Bennett made a good fight for the vacant gown of Alderman for the Cordwainer Ward. He was, however, beaten by Mr. Nottage. Sir John bore his defeat with unflinching good temper.

The mother and friends of Lucy Maria Taylor, of Huddersfield, desire to return their warmest thanks to those Governors and subscribers who have so generously responded to their appeal on her behalf by recording their votes in her favour, so as to secure her election to the benefits of the Royal Masonic Institution for Girls.

ROSICRUCIAN SOCIETY.

The usual October meeting of the above society was held at the Royal Masonic Hall on Thursday, the 14th inst. Present—Bros. Dr. Woodman, Rev. W. B. Church, Thomas, Foulger, Hubbard, Marsh, Massa, Rosenthal, Kenning, and others. The minutes of the last meeting were read and confirmed. Some other routine work having been performed, the M.C. was then closed.

THE TOTTENHAM MASONIC HALL.

The application made to the Middlesex magistrates by Mr. Poland, on behalf of Bro. Oddy, of the "Seven Sisters" Hotel, Page Green, Tottenham, for a music licence to that establishment was unanimously granted. The memorial in support of the application was signed by the Vicar of Tottenham, the senior churchwarden, one or more of the overseers, and a large number of Bro. Oddy's immediate neighbours. The case was also recommended by the local magistrates, and there was no opposition of any kind. The primary object of Bro. Oddy in seeking the licence was to enable Masonic and other influential bodies to give occasional concerts and miscellaneous entertainments, in which music would form a chief feature, the splendid hall, which he has just erected at his own cost, being peculiarly adapted for such purposes. Few neighbourhoods possess such a fine room; and for Masonic business it may be said to stand unrivalled in the suburbs of London. The acoustic properties are perfect; and the ventilation—so important where large assemblies take place—is arranged on the most approved principles. It will comfortably seat nearly 250 persons. The decorations are now complete; and the artistic manner in which the painting, &c., has been carried through speaks much for Bro. Oddy's taste. The work, from first to last, was done from his own designs and under his personal superintendence; and the result is highly satisfactory. Brilliantly lighted and decorated with choice flowers as the noble apartment has been of late, it presents an appearance of which the visitors felt justly proud; and when better known, there can be no doubt that the hall will be largely patronised.

MASONIC BANQUET TO THE HON. F. P. BARLEE.

A banquet was given on the 7th July in honour of the Hon. F. P. Barlee, by the brethren of the Lodge of St. John, No. 485, E.C. at Perth, West Australia.

About sixty of the brethren assembled in lodge, and afterwards adjourned to the banquet room. The W.M., Bro. Thos. Sherwood, presided. After the usual loyal toasts (viz, "H.M. The Queen," "The Princess of Wales, and the rest of the Royal Family," "H.E. The Governor," and "The Most Worshipful Grand Master, His Royal Highness The Prince of Wales") had been duly honored, Bro. P.M. Lochée stated that the W.M. had done him the honour of placing the next toast in his hands, and said that the toast he had to propose was sure to be cordially received by all present. It was the toast of the evening, and formed, in fact, the main purpose of their assembly that night: it was,—"The Health of our worthy Brother, P.M. Barlee." It was known to all the brethren, that Bro. Barlee was about to leave us for a time, and it had been the general desire of the members of the lodge that he should not take his departure without receiving some expression of the feelings of regard entertained for him by the brethren. In this desire he (Bro. Lochée) very cordially shared, and he could not but feel highly gratified that he had been deputed to convey such expression of esteem and regard to their worthy brother. Bro. Lochée went on to say that by the rules of the ancient Craft he was precluded from making any particular reference to the political acts of Bro. Barlee, but he was not aware that there was anything to prevent them all from acknowledging, even in that hall, the untiring industry with which Bro. Barlee had filled a most responsible and laborious public office,—in so far, at all events, discharging one of the main duties inculcated by the ancient Craft. Bro. Barlee had also, on more than one occasion, been elected to the high office of Master of that lodge, and he was sure that all the members would be ready to acknowledge the courtesy and ability he had displayed in the discharge of the duties that had devolved upon him, as well as his desire to further the interest of the Craft at all times. He would only add that the members of that lodge proffered to Bro. Barlee their very best wishes for his health and prosperity, and concluded by proposing,—The health of our worthy brother, Past Master Barlee, with all the honours.

Br. Barlee said that at a time when his mind was very much occupied in clearing up many matters of business, prior to his departure from the colony, he felt he should have the indulgence of the brethren if he did not express in as full a manner, or at such length as it deserved, his sense of the ovation accorded to him. He could sincerely assure them of his appreciation of the compliment paid him by the brethren, who as Masons had shown him that same good feeling which he had experienced from the whole community. He would be ashamed to admit that all the kind things said of him during the last few weeks were deserved; he was fully aware that they rose from the friendly feeling of those among whom he had lived so long; and even in what had fallen from Br. P.M. Lochée that evening he felt that he had looked on the bright side of the picture,—but they all knew there was a reverse side to every picture. He was very grateful for what had been said, and thanked them for the manner in which the remarks had been received; but when he looked back on his career as a Mason (and he was thankful to say he could do so with unmixed satisfaction), or, indeed, at his whole public career during his long service of twenty years in the colony, he was unable to recognize that he had done anything that did not come to him in the ordinary course of duty, done anything to receive so fully as he had done the approbation of his fellow colonists. He did, however, believe that any man who tried to do his duty, no matter in what position he was placed, who was loyal to those with whom he worked, honest in his actions, anxious to help those whom he believed deserved help, who, refraining from the natural desire to act on the impulse of the moment, would be guided by that grand principle (a principle equally of Masonry as of Christianity) to do unto others as he would others should do unto him, would—whether he occupied a position of influence and was in a position somewhat as a leader of men, or whether he was in a subordinate position and had simply to carry out instructions—not go far astray, and would in the long run gain the esteem and respect of those among whom he lived. He (Br. Barlee) had endeavoured to act on those principles, and tried to do what he conceived to be his duty: how often he had failed in doing it he was painfully aware; but he thought that the entertainment of that evening, coupled with what had occurred during the past few weeks, might lead him to hope that he had not altogether failed. When he was first made a Mason he took great interest in the proceedings of the lodge; but as work increased, as fresh labours had opened up in various directions, he had retired from the active duties of the lodge; and he had in no degree found he had been missed. When he looked at what had been done by those who had preceded him in the management of the lodge, and those who had followed him, he could not see that he had ever done anything as a Mason which should entitle him to the distinguished compliment they paid him; and he was fain to believe that they had rather desired to meet him as an old friend, as one who had lived among them for a long time; and as such he thanked them, and told them that the proceedings of the evening would be held by him in grateful recollection. Br. Barlee then said he had been talking very much of himself: he was not fond of so doing, but it had really been forced on him, and at all events the responsibility was on their shoulders and not his. He then spoke of the spread of Freemasonry in England, and the interest that the appointment of H.R.H. the Prince of Wales to the office of Grand Master had created, and followed by showing that in this colony the numbers of the Craft were steadily increasing. He alluded to the erection of the building they then occupied; of that lately erected by the Plantagenet Lodge at Albany; and of the arrangements almost definitely made for the erection of a handsome lodge at Fremantle; and expressed his opinion that in no other community where the population was so small (only about 26,000 or 27,000 inhabitants) had so much energy been shown in the interest of the Craft. After various remarks in connection with the proceedings of the Craft in this Colony, and having alluded to the handsome manner in which he had been received a few days previous by the members of the Fremantle Lodge, No. 1033, and on a late occasion by those of the Plantagenet Lodge at Albany, Br. Barlee again expressed his thanks to the brethren for the honour they had conferred on him.

We regret we are unable to insert a full report of the subsequent interesting speeches and proceedings, but must be content with giving a summary of the toasts which followed, viz.—"Fremantle Lodge, No. 1033," proposed by Bro. E. C. Dean, S.W., acknowledged by Bro. J. F. Stone, the W.M. of that lodge; "The Plantagenet Lodge," proposed by Bro. F. L. Hussey, J.W., responded to by Bro. P. M. Barlee; "The Lodge of St. John, No. 485," proposed by Bro. Sir Archibald Paull Burt, acknowledged by the W.M., Bro. T. Sherwood; "The Guests," proposed by Bro. P.M. Hillman, responded to by Bros. Landor, Helms, and Sir A. P. Burt; and "The Ladies," proposed by Bro. P.M. Smith, responded to by Bro. F. Pearce.—the last of which brought to a close a most delightful evening, the enjoyment of which will long remain in the memories of those who had the pleasure of being present.

A number of gentlemen interested in colonial affairs, especially in regard to the colony of West Australia, assembled at the Guildhall Tavern on Friday, the 15th inst., for the purpose of presenting to the Hon F. P. Barlee, Colonial Secretary of West Australia, a testimonial which had been subscribed for by many friends in that colony. The chair was taken at an elegant déjeuner by Bro. J. Farmaner, and besides the guest of the day, there were present;—Mr. W.

Felgate (vice chairman), the Hon. L. S. Leake, (Speaker of the Legislative Assembly, West Australia), Mr. J. H. Monger, the Very Rev. G. P. Pownall, the Rev. G. Flack, Messrs. A. Hillman, J. Wilson, F. A. Edelston, Ellis Jones, R. S. J. Joyce, J. G. Neilson, D. Crombie, F. Lewis, T. Fifoot, J. French, T. Carleton, E. H. Barlee, G. Lawrence, J. G. Thomson, (West Australia), T. Grove, J. Hainsworth, W. Purdy, J. G. Shearman, W. Shearman, F. C. Farmaner, F. Harris, G. Farmaner. The Chairman, in presenting to Bro. Barlee the silver epergne which formed the testimonial, spoke as a colonist of some years' standing in that country, and could bear testimony to the very great kindness he had always experienced in business transactions with Bro. Barlee. He received all who came to him in his official position with the greatest kindness and attention, and was respected alike by rich and poor throughout the colony. All the legislative measures he had ever brought forward were for the benefit of the colony, and the prosperity of the colony was in great measure due to him. The Chairman having handed the testimonial to Bro. Barlee, that gentleman, in his reply, said that he regarded the compliment paid to him as a recognition of his official position rather than as a personal matter. He had been connected with every public movement in the colony for the past twenty years. They had passed through dark days previously, but things were now looking brighter. If he should never be called upon to return to the colony he would hold this testimonial as a memento of all he had done, though he assured them no such memento was required for him to bear all his old friends in affectionate remembrance. Since the inauguration five years ago of representative institutions in the colony he thought that matters had manifested a steady progress. Public works of all kinds were being carried out, and they would soon now be linked with the telegraph system of the world. New railways had been commenced, and communications with the coast opened up. All these things, he reminded City gentlemen, would have their effect on the London market. The Chairman proposed "Prosperity to the Colony of West Australia," and dwelt upon many facts showing the remarkable progress being made there. With the toast were coupled the names of the three gentlemen who are about to return to the colony—The Hon. Mr. Leake, Mr. Monger, and Mr. Thomson. "The Health of the Chairman" was proposed by Bro. Barlee, and "The Health of the Vice-Chairman" and other toasts followed.

THE FREEMASONS AND THE RAILWAY JUBILEE.

Although the brethren of the "mystic tie" could not take part in the public demonstrations at the Railway Jubilee, still they were not behindhand in celebrating the event after their ancient custom. The happy thought occurred to some of the old members of the Restoration Lodge that as a large number of Freemasons from neighbouring lodges were certain to visit Darlington during the jubilee—who would not have invitations to the banquet in the cricket-field—it would be a fitting opportunity to offer them that hospitality which is the distinguishing trait of all loyal Craftsmen. The idea was no sooner communicated to the Worshipful Master, Bro. Andrew Farman, than he issued invitations to the brethren of the various lodges in this and the adjoining provinces. Here the ingenuity of some of the members was displayed in the composition and arrangement of the circular containing the invitation, it being a near counterfeit of the jubilee banquet ticket, and causing much amusement. Accordingly at five o'clock on Tuesday evening one of the largest gatherings ever assembled in Freemasons' Hall, Archer-street, met to partake of a cold collation. A monster game pie, the particular contribution of the W.M., was the subject of general comment and request, while other equally satisfying dishes graced the festive board. The duties of the Stewards were heavily invoked, and never more cheerfully and ably rendered. The time was short before the illuminations and fireworks commenced, yet the following loyal and Masonic toasts were duly honoured:—"The Queen and the Craft," "H.R.H. the Prince of Wales, Most Worshipful Grand Master," "The Visitors," proposed in an appropriate speech by Bro. Councillor Morrell, and responded to by representatives of the various lodges. "The Master," proposed by Bro. Babington Boulton, the Vice-chairman, was most enthusiastically received. The visitors hailed from Newcastle, Berwick-upon-Tweed, Stockton, Middlesborough, Redcar, Northallerton, Thirsk, Richmond, Manchester, and London.

SATURDAY, OCT. 23, 1875.

OUR ROYAL GRAND MASTER'S VISIT TO INDIA.

H.R.H. the Prince of Wales left Paris at $\frac{1}{2}$ to 9 Wednesday evening, and reached Turin Thursday evening. He left Turin at 9.40 Friday morning, and got to Bologna at 5 in the afternoon, and Ancona at 10.30 p.m. the same day. Many of the English residents were present at the station, and the Prince said, in answer to their fervent wishes for his prosperous voyage and safe return, "Thank you, gentlemen." The train departed amid enthusiastic cheers at 10.45, and arrived at Bari at 1.10 Saturday morning. He left for Brindisi at 7.23, which place he reached at 9.30, and was met at the station by the remainder of his suite. Accompanied by the Italian Minister of Marine, Admiral de San Bon, Count Maffei, and amid salutes from the British and Italian ironclads, he proceeded in the Royal launch to the Serapis, where breakfast was served. The weather was fine, and the Serapis steamed out of the harbour amid fresh salutes from the men of war. The Prince of Wales reached Athens after a fair passage on Monday, the 18th, at 10.10, and anchored in the harbour of the Piræus. He landed at 12.10, and went with the King to the palace, amidst the cheers of the densely crowded streets. The Serapis lost two anchors. He was to stay Tuesday and leave Wednesday. Next week we shall resume the story of his journey.

THE GRAND ORIENT OF FRANCE.

A press of matter has prevented us noticing the full and interesting account of the meeting of the Grand Orient for 1875, which is contained in the "Monde Maçonnique" for September-October, which we received the week before last. We propose, however, to call attention to it next week.

WEST YORKSHIRE.

Reflection has convinced us even more strongly than last week, how very unwise and how very unsound is the proposed motion relative to the Boys' School, to which we felt it to be our duty to allude. Unwise it is, as probably inflicting irreparable injury on the Boys' School, which is now in full and active work, where everything and everybody, we are assured, under the new regime, are falling into their proper positions. All is now proceeding harmoniously, and we fancy that there is little real doubt where the original fault lay. As we read over some published papers, printed too under very strange circumstances, we fancy that we can put our finger readily on the true cause of all the pettiness and unseemly spirit which have been exhibited. Some amusing exaggerations have been scattered broadcast among the Craft. It has been stated, for instance, that the four retiring Masters were university men. There is not a word of truth in the statement. Whether any of them had ever been at any university we doubt, certainly they had not university degrees. Ex hoc disce omnia. The course as proposed to be pursued by the Prov. Grand Lodge of West Yorkshire by Bro. Cawthorn is, we think, most unwise therefore on every ground, as regards the true interests of the school, but Masonically we also deem it to be thoroughly unsound in principle. Bro. Cawthorn is, we understand, not even a subscriber to the Boys' School at all. How can he propose such a resolution? And how can the Prov. Grand Lodge of West Yorkshire pass such a resolution, still less hand it on to the Grand Lodge? What possible right has the Prov. Grand Lodge of West Yorkshire to express such an opinion as a corporate body? It has, it is true, paid certain monies to the school in days of old, and it has received a return in votes, and there its interest practically ends. It is impossible that on any known principle of Masonic law or equity it can pass such a resolution without thoroughly stultifying itself. We hope, therefore, that for the "honour and dignity" of West Yorkshire, the resolution will be withdrawn with a good grace. But how can Grand Lodge even interfere? How could it receive such a resolution? How could it act upon it? It gives £150 annually to the institution, a purely voluntary institution, which receives £10,000 in round numbers annually from the Craft as private donations and subscriptions. How can it on its grant of £150 profess to have a right to enquire as to the expenditure of the £10,000? It may, indeed, enquire how its £150 are appropriated, and, if not satisfied with the explanation tendered, may withdraw its own annual grant, but it can do no more, and can go no further. We think that those who propose such a resolution can hardly have realized to themselves its full effect, as if it could be passed it would, we venture to say, be fatal to the independence and self-supporting character of all our metropolitan institutions. No one can deny that Grand Lodge in times past has been very liberal to all our great charities, but such grants do not give it a right to appoint a committee to examine into the expenditure, past and present, of the Boys' School or the Girls' School, or even of the Benevolent Institution, and to lay down the salaries of the officials, and the proper mode of conducting the proper work of each, for such, though ingeniously veiled over, is the actual bearing of Bro. Cawthorn's motion. The only proper course for any to follow who have complaints against anything or anybody, is to go to the General Court, or to lay the matter officially before the House Committee. Until that has been done no one has a right to pretend to say that he has exhausted all modes of redressing real or imaginary grievances. Above all, no one, we venture to repeat, should seek by such revolutionary proceedings to undermine the very foundation on which the Boys' School rests, as a great voluntary institution, aided, no doubt, by Grand Lodge, but supported by the Craft at large.

MASONIC EGOTISM.

Those of us who know much of Freemasonry, (and some of us have seen its sunny as well as its hazy side for many long years) know well how often we have been bored, and how much the Craft suffers from the personal egotism of more than one worthy and, perhaps, well-meaning brother. Too often the harmony of a lodge, the peaceful flow of work, the serenity of the witching hour of refreshment, are all alike sadly marred and affected by the intruding tendencies of an irrepressible personal egotism. Many of us even now can picture that well-known and active brother of ours, with many good points, no doubt, in his character, whose theory of Freemasonry is entirely based on its opportunity of individual display, or its occasions of personal assertion. To him Freemasonry, no doubt very good, proper, useful, and agreeable, whether in work, refreshment, or principles, is only worth anything at all to him as it affords him the means of putting forward his own overwhelming claims to position and to prominence. Hence he is always to the fore; go where you will you find him always busy, always agitated, always loquacious. He will take any work, or propose any health, or return thanks for everybody and everything. In short he is a Masonic "factotum," or "teetotum," call him what you like, so versatile are his talents, and so shifting are his "poses." Sometimes, no doubt, he degenerates into an awful bore, even a trying nuisance, as the educated and cultivated often protest inwardly and groan outwardly at his slipshod English, his unmeaning and unceasing assertions of his love, and his respect, and his labours for Freemasonry. They have heard it all over and over before; they have to listen to it, and will have to listen to it, over and over again. Well, this brother Tripod of ours is a not uncommon character, and many a lodge, as well as many a province, has to lament that every gathering, that every "alba dies," are made, as it were, only to minister to his personal grandeur, not to advance the career of brotherhood, not to enhance the wholesome influences of Freemasonry. No doubt something may be said, looking at the question merely socially, in favour of egotism, in respect of the struggles of life. As a general rule we are all taken at our own valuation, and some of our satirical writers have undoubtedly held, that if any of us wish to get on, or push our way in the world, we must assert ourselves, we must impress others around us with the prevailing idea of our own cleverness, ability, shrewdness, superiority. Indeed, some go so far as to assert that that man is always most looked up to who so proclaims his own merits that he makes himself disagreeable even to other people. They are the meek, the forbearing, the "goody-goody," as our young ladies say, who go to the wall. Such a view we believe to be a fallacy, and one, moreover, that does but little credit to humanity. It may be that by the vulgar and tawdry trappings of the Vanity Fair of life many are blinded and misled to-day; it may be that the recklessness of self-assertion and the claims of personal egotism may often impress the weak, the wavering, and the coarse-minded; but on the whole we are inclined to believe that the noble qualities of the mind and heart still sway, after all is said and done, the feelings and consciences of, at any rate, the most elevated of our race. Freemasonry, in its gentle and true teaching, ever forbids the domination of that encroaching egotism which claims all for No. 1, and forgets its neighbour, its brother, and its friend. Still, as of old, despite much of untoward and ill-omened individual selfishness amongst us all, still though egotism abounds on every side of us, and seems sometimes to go with us from our cradles to our graves, all who are not merely following in the ruck of the purely worldly, self-opinionated, self-seeking, irregular, and, as the Germans say, "gemein," must admire the holier and better laws of modesty and abnegation. We are not to yield to the bully or the blatant, we are not to fear the "tall talk" of the blusterer, we are not to surrender to the ingrained selfishness of the egotistical, but, preserving the golden mean between selfishness and sentiment, between modesty and self-assertion, we are never to forget that we are "members one of another," that we are brethren of one great family, creatures of one Creator. Above all, we are ever to prefer the interests of another to our own selfish strivings, since Freemasonry has bound us all with its golden links of love Divine, and has knitted us close, amid every contingency of earthly life, to our brethren of the light throughout the world.

COLOURED LODGES IN THE UNITED STATES.

Some good and worthy brethren of ours in America seem to think that we have somewhere pronounced a decided opinion in respect of this confessedly difficult question. But we have not done so. We have carefully avoided from our editorial "cathedra," laying down the law on the subject, good, bad, or indifferent. The subject has been, we believe, touched upon, and a distinct opinion has been expressed there anent, by some writers and bodies in Germany; but in England, so far, we have said nothing, and certainly not in the "Freemason," on the grave points at issue. We have, indeed, as all Englishmen naturally would, welcomed all coloured Freemasons who were received as bona-fide freemen, as we do not think that there is any distinction of colour in Freemasonry. But with respect to the position taken up by coloured Freemasons in the United States—as we note, they say because they cannot obtain admittance into white lodges—we have never advanced any views of our own, for this reason, that they are, owing to the peculiar question of "colour," somewhat hazy on the subject. The position of the coloured Freemasons is, we understand on unimpeachable authority, this. "There is no doubt that the Prince Hall Lodge was lawfully warranted, but owing to failure to meet for a number of years and making returns, and paying the dues to Grand Lodge, it certainly ceased to exist, and became, to all intents and purposes, a dead lodge"—as the lawyers say, a "caput mortuum"—in the body of Masonry. "It was not possible therefore for a number of the members of this defunct lodge, years afterwards, to reorganize, without any authority whatever, and assume themselves the powers of a Grand Lodge, and grant warrants to institute new lodges and form Grand Lodges." In the State of Pennsylvania it appears that there are two rival Grand Lodges. On this statement of facts, it is quite clear to us, that any lodges meeting under a warrant from the defunct Prince Hall Lodge are irregular lodges, according to the unfailing laws of Freemasonry, as not only are they acting "ultra vires," but the inception of their proceedings being radically wrong and illegal, all their subsequent acts are vitiated by their original wrongdoing. Their old warrant only gave them power to initiate, pass and raise profanes, and affiliate brother Masons; but it could not grant to them, and did not grant to them, the power to offer a delegated authority to others to do these special Masonic acts. The warrant being dormant could only be revived properly through the action of the Grand Lodge, the original grantor, and the grantee could not, without rehabilitating itself with Grand Lodge, by payment of overdue fees, &c., come into Masonic life again at all. Under these circumstances, notwithstanding the expressed views of some brethren in Germany and elsewhere, we have no doubt then, that, as the Spanish say, "to speak Masonically," the Prince Hall Lodge was an irregular and clandestine gathering of Masons, and had neither, legally, Masonic status or Masonic authority. All Masons made under its warrants are not and cannot be considered as "true and lawful Freemasons," or admitted "in a lodge just, perfect, and regular." But here comes in a grave question. Admitted, as we do admit most fully, that the regular Grand Lodges have all Masonic law and equity on their side, there are a large number of coloured Freemasons in the United States. What are you to do with them? There is no doubt the course of non-recognition, except upon submission, but we fear the controversy now is too embittered for that. There is an axiom very common of old, which often applies practically to this and other like cases to-day, "fieri non debet factum valet." For let us look at the whole matter fairly and fully. Are the regular white Grand Lodges and regular private lodges ever likely to welcome the coloured Masons under any circumstances? If they are, then there is not and cannot be the slightest excuse for the proceedings of the coloured Masons. But if not, what are the coloured Masons to do? We do not see any abstract objection to coloured Masons meeting as such, supposing they can obtain legal warrants, as we are inclined to think that such an arrangement would be best for both sides. The only end of the controversy, as it appears to us, or escape from the dilemma, is for the coloured lodges to apply for warrants to the lawful Grand Lodges, and then, if they like, to form State coloured Grand Lodges of their own; these lodges meeting originally on regular warrants granted by the proper authorities. As it is, we are entirely with the Grand Lodges of the various American States, as we feel bound to say that the position of the coloured lodges in America, which hold warrants from self-constituted bodies, is neither in accordance with well-known Masonic law, nor can it be defended, except sentimentally, on any grounds of true Freemasonry.

ANOTHER MASONIC PERSECUTION.

Bro. Caubet gives in the "Monde Maconnique" for September-October a short statement to the effect that 14 Freemasons at Porto Rico have been condemned to imprisonment, simply because they were Freemasons, members of the Masonic family. Three of these unfortunate brethren have been sentenced to four years' imprisonment, eleven to two years of the same penalty. Bro. Caubet adds, "We shall publish the text of the judgment in our next," which we shall also duly place before our readers. If the fact be a fact, can nothing be done for them?

DWELLINGS FOR ARTIZANS.

One of the most beneficial, and practically useful of the many wise measures passed during the last session of Parliament was "The Artizans' and Labourers' Dwellings Improvement Bill." The state of the cottages and humble dwellings of our wealthy land, despite some notable exceptions here and there, notwithstanding the praiseworthy efforts of some benevolent landlords in special localities, has long been a disgrace to us as a civilized people. And no legislative enactment could therefore be more beneficial in its scope or operation, or could be to all patriotic citizens of our favoured country, a subject of more heartfelt support and rejoicing, than a good bill for the improvement of the homes of our labouring people! It is, no doubt, a subject in itself surrounded with some difficulties, owing to the grave complication of vested interests, and the serious question of expense, but yet, as no course of parliamentary interference is more needed, so none will be in the long run more acceptable to the toiling classes of our great and busy community. We are, therefore, glad to note by the reports of the proceedings of the Metropolitan Board of Works, that that important and active body is directing its attention to the practical carrying out of the act. In the "Times" of Tuesday, October 6th, we find these remarks, and which we read, as we think our readers will read them, with equal gratification and approval. "From the report of the last meeting of the Metropolitan Board of Works it appears that body has received already several requests for the exercise of the new powers the recent act has conferred. The first application made to them was about a block of buildings in the neighbourhood of a main thoroughfare of Holborn, and immediately to the east of Gray's-inn-road. This region the Medical Officer of the Holborn District Board has pronounced to be so unhealthy and unfit for human residence as to be a proper subject for the remedial intervention of the Board of Works. We cannot be surprised that the Board has accepted the task thus primarily assigned to them. Those who are acquainted with the spot in question will be aware that it is one of the very worst in all London, and that as regards a great part of it we should do wisely to get rid of it on almost any terms, and to put up something better in its place, if no lighter remedy can be devised for the evils of its present state. The scheme which the consulting officials of the Board of Works have recommended fits in very happily other Metropolitan improvements. Some open spaces of ground will be secured in a crowded region which much needs them. Gray's-inn-road will be widened, and streets and thoroughfares of a proper breadth and construction will be carried all through the parts in question, and will, we may hope, differ from the blind courts and alleys which exist there at present in being accessible with safety to the police. The total extent of ground over which the improvements are to extend is about 10½ acres, and the cost to the Board of dealing with it will be somewhat over £200,000, of which rather more than half may be looked upon simply as invested. The yearly loss on the remainder will amount to £3466, which will have to be provided from the rates. By this outlay a proper site will have been secured for buildings which it is hoped some one or other of the existing societies will erect, and the ground will be handed over to them on terms which will permit of the further expenditure being remunerative. The attention of the Board has also been already drawn to a locality in Whitechapel, for which the requisite plans or recommendations are in course of being prepared, but are not yet ready. We are told, too, that various other Metropolitan districts will yet remain to be somewhat similarly dealt with by the Board of Works. Some of these have been brought before their notice by the Resident Medical Officers, while with regard to others the Board knows only that a communication is certainly to be expected. There is thus no prospect that the labours of the Board in this direction will be soon or easily concluded. Rather the work to be done will be necessarily both long and costly. The arrears are very great, and the present generation must be prepared to pay heavily for the neglect of its more careless predecessors." In all this we fully agree, but we cannot concur with the following remarks of the "Times":—"We could wish there was any reason to think that the improvements contemplated in Holborn and elsewhere would be acceptable to the class for whose benefit they are intended." 'Tis true that the "Times" describes the Holborn population as a migratory one, but we venture to express our opinion, based on long study and some acquaintance with the subject, that no greater calumny can be devised or spread as regards the working classes, than to suppose that they are indifferent to, or opposed to the amelioration of such patent evils. The truth is that many of them are so accustomed to signs of squalor, and evidences of filth, so many live and die in crazy tenements, and in reeking alleys, and foul cellars, that they grow dull and apathetic on the subject, and actually prefer in their shortsightedness "quieta non movere." There also may be a class here, as elsewhere, that "classe dangereuse" of all great cities, too well known to the police, and which feels ever the deepest interest in the pockets and properties of their neighbours, which naturally objects to light, cleanliness and respectability. But there is implanted in the artizans, as in every class of England, a love of home, and home work, and home happiness. We never could see why working men should not, if you give them good air, good houses, and bits of garden or allotments, be as happy, and contented, and satisfied as those whom they call their "betters." They have an intense love of flowers, for instance some of the most industrious and persevering of botanists are to be found notably among the working classes of Lancashire and Yorkshire; they have a great appreciation of home, enduring attachment for their wives and children, for the most part they are thrifty and saving, despite all irrational charges to the contrary, and that they long for often a comfortable house they can call their own, no longer surrounded by dens of vice and dirt, is, we feel sure, incontestable. No improvement can, then, be more desirable on every ground, social, moral, or religious, than that of the dwellings of our artizan brethren. We have sighed to see in a room, 10 by 10, the grandmother, a married son and daughter, two unmarried daughters, and two lads, to say nothing of a baby, all using this one room as a sleeping apartment. In vain we remember saying years ago when our eyes beheld actually what our pen has now described, "in vain are the teachings of school, and the lesson of decency and morality, their normal life, by no fault of their own, is one continued departure from every law which health would demand, or propriety suggest." We have, then, always advocated, and always shall advocate, the building of better cottages and dwellings for the labouring population of the Empire. In some places the good work has been done in a great measure, in many it is going on, in more, let us hope, this new act will set it in motion. Better late than never. Henri Quatre said he wished every Frenchman could enjoy his homely meal. Good old George III. declared he hoped that every Englishman would have his Bible; we say to-day that the best wish we can frame for those who compose the great base of the pyramid of society is that they may have a comfortable and decent dwelling, where they can learn for themselves the elevating lessons of self-respect, self-restraint, and self-improvement, and where they can teach their children alike by word and example the ever-needed maxims of prudence and propriety, of economy and industry, of piety to God, and of regard for their fellow creatures.

INTERNATIONAL EXHIBITION AT PHILADELPHIA IN 1876.

A kind brother correspondent having sent us from America a copy of the rules and regulations for this important gathering, we shall call attention to it next week, and publish in extenso the regulations for exhibition.

A QUOTATION.

To the Editor of the Freemason.

Dear Sir and Brother,—

The ingenuousness of your correspondent signing himself "The Writer of the Article," as displayed in and by his letter headed "Hudibras" in your issue of the 9th inst., is most refreshing, and were I in possession of a scrap book for the effusions of newspaper correspondents, I should certainly think this one deserving a little trouble and paste, as a literary curiosity.

I rejoice to hear that I have been the means of "amusing" your correspondent, although by the tenor of his letter, I should have thought that "amusing" would more appropriately have expressed his feelings. At the same time I must candidly admit that it was not my intention to do either.

He continues by complaining "that hardly any one can write on the commonest subject without becoming personal." If this be true, I agree with him that it is much to be regretted, yet if he really thinks so, why do (sic) he act differently? It surely cannot, even according to his logic, be good in him and bad in others to follow the same course.

After sarcastically referring to me as "so learned a critic," he states, "I happen to know my 'Hudibras,' as well as he knows it, it may be even better. But comparisons are odorous." (sic) Self praise, I find by this, is now and then a great recommendation, and that "The Writer of the Article," amongst his other accomplishments, possesses, "undisturbed by conscientious qualms," the art of admirably blowing his own trumpet. What does he know of my familiarity with the work in question? I presume I am, even by name, to him a perfect stranger. His assertion, therefore, is simply absurd. If, however, he possesses the virtue which he assumes, why not do the author justice by quoting him correctly instead of making him talk nonsense. He should remember that the art of quotation requires more delicacy in the practice than those conceive who can see nothing more in the quotation than an extract. Whenever the mind of a writer is saturated with the full inspiration of a great author a quotation gives completeness to the whole; it seals his feelings with undisputed authority. As for comparisons being "odorous," (sic) I presume your correspondent means "odious," or he would not have misapplied this quotation. Shakespeare makes Dogberry use the expression, but not in the manner of a Mrs. Malaprop. As for his using the verse (the quotation in dispute) "as others have used it, better men than either of us (another comparison), with no question or concern as to its correctness," I can only say, that if an author is worth quoting from at all, that some "question or concern" as to the accuracy of the quotation is due to his reputation in return for the benefit derived at his hands. "The Writer of the Article" then tries to get out of his difficulty by saying, "I did not quote Hudibras at all!" He admits "using a verse." Whose verse was it then? As for not quoting Hudibras, that is true. He misquoted it, and as for conveying his "meaning" most appositely, that is a matter of opinion. I am informed that "for a long time every one who cares about such things has known that there was an error in the actual quotation itself." Where is the error, and what authority refers to it? I have examined two old editions of the poem, and a very good modern one, "published by J. Walker and the other proprietors," in 1817, besides reading several commentaries by eminent authors, yet cannot find any proof or mention of what your correspondent asserts. As for a man being "convinced against his will," being a state of mind not uncommon, I can only say that it is impossible. It is easy to understand a man "complying against his will," but I never knew or heard of an instance of one being so convinced.

What he means by "Burke's concluding sentence may be reckoned equally 'sublime and beautiful,'" I do not know. My concluding sentence, "With just enough of learning to misquote," was Byron's. Your correspondent's introduction of "The Sublime and Beautiful" prevents me attributing this to a misprint. Whether it looks like "greased lightning," or not, I cannot say. Of that article I know nothing, and therefore leave it without any encroachment of opinion, as a subject perhaps deserving of some attention from "The Writer of the Article." Hoping in the meantime that our little correspondence may not be unproductive of even a little good, and that where no offence was intended none will be taken,

Believe me, yours fraternally,

WM. BERNARD.

To the Editor of the Freemason.

Dear Sir and Brother,—

Having seen Bro. Bernard's letter at the office, I venture to subjoin a short reply to his voluminous epistle. As Lord Derby, when Lord Stanley, once said to the famous Lord Macaulay, then Mr. Macaulay, and both in the House of Commons, "the honourable gentleman is a great critic," so I think I may venture also to say to Bro. Bernard to-day. Reading carefully now over his two letters, one is really in doubt which most to admire, the "feineness of his writing" or the lucidity of his style. Yet I fear that Bro. Bernard is one of those unfortunate persons you often meet with in the world, who always will be "convinced against" their "will," "pace," so very great an authority. I have already stated that I did not quote Hudibras in any way at all. Bro. Bernard is so polite and Masonic as to give me the lie direct, and to repeat his statement that I quoted, or, rather, misquoted, Hudibras. I have previously remarked that I was not likely to misquote Hudibras, knowing it better than Bro. Bernard, and I have attempted also to make Bro. Bernard understand, though in vain, that I used the words as an old Jametian "saw," without any reference to Butler's version of it. For the truth is, as another writer puts it clearly, the saying is older than Hudibras, and in its axiomatic form embodies, despite Bro. Bernard again, a very wretched condition of the human mind.

For it often happens that in an argument a man gives way, though not convinced by argument; but yielding the point for some reason or other, or withdrawing from the controversy, still retains his own opinion. This is the state of mind well pointed out by the almost proverbial saying, and which, notwithstanding Bro. Bernard's condemnation and anathema, I venture to believe, as I happen to know, is a very correct one. Would it not be well before Bro. Bernard attempts to set everybody else right that he should attend to his own grammar and spelling. I have never yet seen "odorous" spelt with an "e," nor do I ever remember such a sentence as "why do he act differently." It is really sublime.

But it is useless to go through Bro. Bernard's letter, as it is only another proof not only how much can be said about nothing, but how excessively personal a pseudo-critic can be. In fact, there is something excessively offensive and un-Masonic in the tone that Bro. Bernard has thought well to assume, though, as far as I can see, with no pretension to play such a role. I have, as it happens, more important work to attend to than to read, except often very cursorily, the tedious platitudes or the meaningless objection, and I confess to a "lapsus penne" in substituting Burke for Byron. The truth is the same remark is applicable, and in either case, such a quotation in Bro. Bernard's hands is evidently what the witty American termed "greased lightning." If Bro. Bernard wishes to improve his style, and learn to be civil and convincing, polite and critical at the same time, let us recommend to his perusal George Canning's famous critique on the "Reformation of the Knave of Hearts," in the "Microcosm," page 87, for I feel sure, that the good it must do him will be quite marvellous. Let me fraternally urge him to be a little more courteous when he again assumes the "stylus" of the critic, and not to forget that nothing is so absurd as that childish and carping hyper-criticism, which is generally the refuge of the incompetent, and the intolerant.

I am,

THE WRITER OF THE ARTICLE.

THE MARK DEGREE.

To the Editor of the Freemason.

Dear Sir and Brother,—

Will you kindly inform me whether the "Mark Degree" is a recognized Masonic Order (i.e.) by the Grand Lodge of English Freemasons, and whether they support the various Masonic institutions?

Their origin, and why Mark jewels are not to be worn in Craft lodges.

Whether it is necessary to join the Mark Degree before going to the Royal Arch.

Having heard a diversity of opinion upon the matter by several M.M.'s is the reason of my troubling you with this enquiry upon the subject.

Yours fraternally,

AN ENQUIRING M.M.

[In answer to our correspondent we beg to state that the Mark Degree is not recognised by our Grand Lodge, but that it supports the Masonic institutions, we believe, as a corporate body, we are certain individually. There is some obscurity as to the real origin of the Mark Degree, but it is said to have taken its rise in this country in the latter part of the last century, and that the original lodges were dedicated to St. Mark. In our humble opinion it is an adapted Order, and has nothing to do with the operative custom of Masons, Marks. The reason why Mark jewels cannot be worn in a Craft lodge is, that they do not appertain to any of the degrees recognized by the Grand Lodge of England. It is not necessary at all to join the Mark Degree before becoming a R.A.—Ed.]

MASONIC JEWELS.

To the Editor of the Freemason.

Dear Sir and Brother,—

Having read the correspondence in your valuable paper hereon, I take it that I am entitled and fully justified in wearing the "five-pointed star" as a jewel of the Third Degree, recognised by the Grand Lodge of England in my Craft Lodge, and that the W.M. and officers could not object to it.

Yours fraternally,

AN ENQUIRING M.M.

[With regard to the five-pointed star, our opinion is that under the wording of the Book of Constitutions it is clearly legal. Indeed, if it is not, we do not see clearly how any other jewels are so, except those actually specified in the Book of Constitutions.—Ed.]

MASONIC TOKENS.

To the Editor of the Freemason.

Dear Sir and Brother,—

I have taken in business during the past week a halfpenny token, in every respect similar to that spoken of by your correspondent, Bro. Samuel Dutton, excepting that the inscription on the rim is "Masonic Halfpenny Token, 1794."

I have also been shown another by a brother of the Lion and Lamb Lodge, so that I cannot think they are as scarce as many of your correspondents suppose.

I am, dear Sir and Brother, yours fraternally,

WILLIAM STEPHENS,
P.M. 1365 and 1489.

FREEMASONRY IN CANADA.

To the Editor of the Freemason.

Dear Sir and Brother,—

I desire, through you, to tender my thanks to an unknown correspondent, who has kindly forwarded me a copy of the address of the V.H. and E. Sir Knt. Col. MacLeod Moore, Grand Prior of Canada, delivered to the Knights assembled in Grand Priory at St. Catherine's, Ontario, on the 11th of August last.

Yours fraternally,

J. EDWARD CURTIS,

P. Prov. G. Reg. and Provincial Chancellor, Devon,
Member of the Council of Great Priory, England.

MASONIC JURISPRUDENCE.

To the Editor of the Freemason.

Dear Sir and Brother,—

Will you kindly favour me with a reply to the following queries through the above valuable paper:—

1. Is there such a distinction as honorary member in Masonry, without the word affiliated, and if so, what is the difference?

2. If an individual is entered in the minutes of a lodge as an honorary affiliated member, and that minute passed by the lodge in regular form, and said honorary member pays test fees from time to time, can he vote as an ordinary member, and is he eligible for office?

3. The Master of a lodge being absent, but his Deputy present, who is not an installed Master, but an installed Master is present as a visiting brother, has the Deputy the right to open the lodge in preference to that installed Master, if so, what are the privileges of an installed Master?

Your kind reply will oblige, dear Sir and Brother, yours truly and fraternally,

R.M.

[1. Any brother can, by vote of lodge, be admitted an honorary member of the lodge solely. As such he pays no contributions.

2. A brother admitted as an honorary member (unless there be some special provision in the bye-laws to the contrary) cannot become a joining or affiliated member without notice, proposition, and ballot. As an honorary member, unless the bye-laws specially say so, and we believe that such a bye-law would be very questionable, he cannot vote, nor is he eligible for office, on the ground that he bears no part of the expenses of the lodge, and is not returned as a contributing member to Grand Lodge.

3. The third question is difficult to answer, as we have no Depute Master in England. In our humble opinion, if in a lodge the Master is absent, and no Past Master of the lodge is present, the Senior Warden rules the lodge for the purpose of all needful business. But he ought not to perform any of the ceremonies of the Craft, not being an installed Master, and it would be better for him to ask an installed Master who happens to be present, standing by his side, to go through the needful ceremonial.—Ed.]

A LIST OF PROVINCIAL GRAND MASTERS.

To the Editor of the Freemason.

Dear Sir and Brother,—

I enclose a list of Provincial Grand Masters, deputed by and under the protection of the Grand Master of England.

Deputations for Provincial Grand Masters were granted:—

In 1726 by Lord Paisley, Grand Master, to Sir Edward Mansell, Bart., for South Wales; Hugh Warburton, Esq., for North Wales.

In 1728 by Lord Kingston, Grand Master, to George Pomfret, Esq., for Bengal in the East Indies.

In 1729 by the Duke of Norfolk, Grand Master, to Captain Ralph Farwinter, for the East Indies; Monsieur Thunannus, for the Circle of Lower Saxony; Mr. Daniel Cox, for New Jersey in America.

In 1731 by Lord Lovell, now Earl of Leicester, Grand Master, to Captain John Phillips, for all the Russias; Captain James Commerford, for the province of Andalusia in Spain; to Sir Edward Mathews, for Shropshire.

In 1734, by the Earl of Crauford, Grand Master, to Edward Entwistle, Esq., for Lancashire; Joseph Laycock, Esq., for Durham; Mathew Ridley, Esq., for Northumberland.

In 1736, by the Earl of Loudoun, Grand Master, to Robert Tomlinson, Esq., for New England; John Hamerton, Esq., for South Carolina; David Creighton, Doctor of Physic, for Cape Coast in Africa.

In 1737, by the Earl of Darnley, Grand Master, to James Watson, Esq., for the Island of Montserrat; George Hamilton, Esq., for the State of Geneva; Henry William Mareschalch, Esq., Hereditary Mareschal of Thuringia, for Upper Saxony; William Douglas, Esq., for the Coasts of Africa and Islands of America, where no particular deputation has been granted; Richard Riggs, Esq., for New York.

In 1738, by the Marquis of Carnarvon, now Duke of Chandos, Grand Master, to Will. Horton, Esq., for the West Riding of the county of York; His Excellency Governor Mathew, for the Leeward Islands.

In 1739, by Lord Raymond, Grand Master, to the Marquis Des Marches, for Saxony and Piedmont.

In 1740, by the Earl of Kintore, Grand Master, to His Excellency James Keith, for all the Russias; Matthias Albert Luttman, Esq., for Hamburg and the Circle of Lower Saxony; Edward Rooke, Esq., for the West Riding in the county of York, in the room of Horton, deceased; Thomas Baxter, Esq., His Majesty's Attorney-General, for the Island of Barbadoes, and of all the islands to the windward of Guadeloupe.

In 1741, Earl Morton, Grand Master, to William Vaughan, Esq., for North Wales.

In 1742, by Lord Ward, Grand Master, to William Ratchdale, for the county of Lancaster; Ballard Beckford, George Hynde, and Alexander Crawford, Esqs., for the Island of Jamaica; to Thomas Oxnard, Esq., for North America.

In 1744, by the Earl of Strathmore, Grand Master, to Alured Popple, Esq., for Bermudas.

In 1746, by Lord Cranstoun, Grand Master, to Captain Robert Commings, for Cape Breton and Louisbourg.

In 1747, 1748, 1749, 1750, 1751, by Lord Byron, Grand Master, to William Allen, Esq., Recorder of Philadelphia, for Pennsylvania in America; Count Denneskiold Laurwig, for Denmark and Norway; Lieut. Col. James Adolphus Oughton, for the Island of Minorca; Francis Coelet, Esq., for the Province of New York.

In 1752, 1753, by Lord Carysfort, Grand Master, to William Pyc, Esq., for the county of Cornwall; James Montisior, Esq., for Gibraltar; His Excellency Governor Tinker, for Bahama Islands; Sir Robert de Cornwall, Bart., for the counties of Worcester, Gloucester, Salop, Monmouth, and Hereford; George Harrison, Esq., for the Province of New York; Thomas Dobree, Esq., for Guernsey, Jersey, Alderney, Sark, and Arme in the British Channel.

In 1754, 1755, by the Marquis of Carnarvon, Grand Master, to Peter Leigh, Esq., Chief Justice of South Carolina, for South Carolina; David Jones Gwynne, Esq., of Talliaizes, for South Wales, in the room of Sir Edward Mansell; the Rev. and Hon. Francis Byam, D.D. for Antigua; the Hon. Roger Drake, Esq., for Bengal, for East Indies; Jeremiah Gridley, Esq., for all North America where no Provincial is appointed; William Maynard, Esq., for Barbadoes and all other His Majesty's islands to the windward of Guadeloupe; Edward Galdiard, Esq., for St. Eustatius, Saba, and St. Martin, Dutch Caribbee Islands in America; John Head, Gent., Collector of the Customs at Scilly, for Scilly and the adjacent islands; Jobsh Anthony Hinuber, for all His Majesty's dominions in Germany, with a power to choose their successors; John Page, Esq., of Hawthorn, for the County Palatine of Chester and the City and County of Chester.

In 1758, 1759, 1760, 1761, 1762, by Lord Aberdour, Grand Master, to William Jarvis, Esq., for Antigua and the Leeward Caribbee Islands, in the room of Dr. Byam, deceased; Edward Bacon, Esq., Recorder of Norfolk, for Norwich and the county of Norfolk; James Bradford, Esq., one of the Council in Bahama Islands, for the same, in the room of Governor Tinker, deceased; Gottfried Jacob Jenisch, M.D. for Hamburg and Lower Saxony, in the room of Albert Luttman, resigned; the Hon. Robert Melville, Esq., lieutenant-colonel of His Majesty's 38th Regiment of Foot, and Lieutenant-Governor of Fort Royal, in the Island of Guadeloupe; John Smith, Gent., of Manchester, for the county of Lancaster, instead of Ratchdale, dismissed; Grey Elliot, for the Province of Georgia; the Hon. Colonel Simon Frazer, for Canada; John Lewis, Esq., for Andalusia and places adjacent, in the room of James Montisior, Esq., gone to Carolina; William Pepple, Esq., for Bermuda; Benjamin Smith, Esq., Speaker of the House of Assembly at Carolina, for Carolina; Thomas Marriot Perkins, for the Mosquito Shore; Culling Smith, Esq., for East India.

In 1763, 1764, Earl Ferrers, Grand Master, to Thomas Marriot Perkins, for Jamaica, as well as the Mosquito Shore; John Pluvit, Commander of the Admiral Watson, Indianman, for East India, where no other Provincial is to be found; George Bell, Esq., His Majesty's agent for the Paquets at Falmouth, for Cornwall; Dr. Dionysius Manasse, for all Armenia in the East Indies; George Agustus, Baron of Hammerstein, for Westphalia; James Todd, for Bombay; Ernest Siegmund de Leswitz, for the Dukedom of Brunswick; His Excellency Robert Melville, Captain-General and Governor-in-Chief of His Majesty's Caribbee Islands, the Greater and Lesser Grenadines, St. Vincent, Dominico, Tobago, &c., Brigadier-General of His Majesty's Forces in America; Milborne West, Esq., of all Canada.

In 1765, 1766, 1767, Lord Blaney, Grand Master, to John Stone, Esq., His Majesty's Solicitor-General for the Island of Barbadoes, for Barbadoes; John George Henry, Count de Wertbera, Lord Steward of the Household to the Duke of Saxe-Gotha, for all Upper Saxony; Charles Fullman, Esq., Secretary to Sir John Goodrich, Ambassador to Stockholm, for Stockholm; the Hon. Prestley Thorton, one of His Majesty's Council in the colony of Virginia, and His Majesty's Lieutenant for the county of Northumberland; Samuel Middleton, Esq., for Bengal, in the absence of Culling Smith, Esq., should he be removed, then Thomas Burdell may act until a new one is appointed; Don Nicholas de Manuzzi, for Italy; John Peter Gogle, of Frankfort, for the Upper and Lower Rhine, and the Circle of Franconia; Capt. Joseph Dunbar, for Antigua, in the absence of William Jarvis, Esq.; Major Agdollo, in the service of His Highness the Elector of Saxony, for the Electorate of Saxony; Capt. Edmond Pascal, for Madras and its Dependencies; in case of his absence the lodge to have power to choose another till application can be had for another; Thomas Duncherley, for Hampshire; Edward Danial, for Montserrat.

"The office of Prov. G.M. was instituted and the first deputation granted by Earl Inchiquin, on the 10th May, 1727, to Hugh Warburton, Esq., for North Wales, and on the 24th of June following to Sir Edward Mansell, Bart., for South Wales."—Preston, p. 225, ed. 1788.

At the Grand Lodge held at Devil Tavern, Temple Bar, on the 29th March, 1762. "The lodges in the East Indies having no Provincial Grand Master, sent a petition to the Grand Master, praying his worship would grant them one, and recommending Culling Smith, Esq., of Calcutta, to be the Provincial Grand Master for India, and sent the sum of fifty guineas to be paid into the Publick Fund of Charity."

"Ordered that a deputation be made out in the nearest manner, appointing Culling Smith, Esq., to be Provincial Grand Master of India, and the expense be defrayed out of the fund of the Grand Lodge."

Copied from "The Constitutions of the Antient and Honorable Fraternity of Free and Accepted Masons, containing the History of Masonry from the Creation throughout the known world, with their charges, regulations, &c." R.W.G.

THE PROVINCE OF WEST YORKSHIRE AND THE BOYS' SCHOOL.

To the Editor of the Freemason.

Dear Sir and Brother,—

If proof were needed of the "personal feelings" by which certain of the brethren of the Province of West Yorkshire are actuated, it will be found abundantly in the brochure just issued, entitled "The Royal Masonic Institution for Boys.—Reply to the Secretary." To characterise this production as it deserves—to speak, or write, of the authors (it is signed "T. W. Tew—O. G. D. Perrott"), in the terms they merit, would be to incur a risk, which in the present unsatisfactory condition of the law, I decline. All I can do, at present at all events, is to request the friends of the institution to refrain from giving a ready credence to the specious charges and exaggerated statements with which the pamphlet abounds. I must, however, ask at your hands the favour of sufficient space for two or three corrections, which will prove how easily the whole mass of vindictive accusations may be confuted.

On opinions as to conduct, &c., I shall not now dwell. Angry words, strong expressions, manner and demeanour, will be judged of very differently when associated with an intimate knowledge of the circumstances which cause or produce them, or when described in print with the aid of partial gloss or personal bias, and before venturing on censure, all the surrounding facts and events should be thoroughly known. My object now is to repel charges—direct or implied—with reference to monetary payments and statistical information.

As a specimen of the first, refer to p. 29, where attention is prominently directed to a "most serious and unaccountable blunder in giving the name of 'James Gasson,' whose name appears on p. 39 with a £5 grant. Whilst reckoning a second time, the grant under the same date is set down at £10, on p. 40! (the italics are the twin authors'!).

How does this terrible charge fade away, when it is explained that the grant was £15, £5 paid for outfit in May, 1872, £5 at commencement of apprenticeship, and £5 on expiration of twelve months therefrom. The insinuation is palpable, and what I complain of is that Mr. Tew, in commencing his crusade, did not first write to the office for explanations of what might appear to be "unaccountable,"—forming his own opinion of such explanations—instead of uncharitably assuming that what he could not quite understand, must be dishonest.

For errors in details—when information has been wished to be conveyed—as distinguished from accounts and balance sheets certified by proper authorities, I am willing to accept responsibility, and to bow to reproof. There is, however, a wide difference between error and fraud, and it is from the balance sheet, examined by the Audit Committee, that the actual amounts expended in any given year for "grants and outfits," or for any other item, must be taken, and the figures there will be found to be correct.

As regards statistics, the average number of boys is computed from the total number actually in the institution as per "Weekly Expenditure Book," and will bear the strictest examination.

In opposition to the views of Messrs. Tew and Perrott, I submit that the actual cost at which the boys in our institution are maintained is accurately shewn by classing under the head "Ordinary Expenditure" all that is absolutely essential for the purpose, without the addition of special outlay, every detail of which is susceptible of explanation, which, I repeat, in common fairness, ought to have preceded complaint.

The style and value of the criticism to which I am exposed is shown in the manner in which assumptions are treated throughout, as if they were facts. Numerous instances will present themselves to any one perusing the pamphlet.

Again, with respect to the discrepancy in the total number of boys in the institution. The number for which provision is made is 177, including 155 elected boys, and 22 admitted on "purchase" or "presentation," as regulated by the laws of the institution, or by resolutions of the General Court. Here the explanation is exceedingly simple, though these astute critics writing in ignorance cannot perceive it.

In the Report published in June, for instance, would appear the names of the boys elected in April, who would not be admitted until August, while boys leave monthly as they attain the age of 16 years, thus preventing the possibility of the total number being absolutely in the building at the same time. For the "Class Lists" &c. I am in no way responsible. It is, further, rarely that there are not absentees, varying in number from time to time, from causes over which we have not always control.

The question of salary—"extravagant" or not—can be discussed fully elsewhere, but is it fair to describe me as "drawing £581 9s. 6d. per annum, besides commissions and other remuneration?" The £81 9s. 6d. is money spent out of pocket in the service of the institution. The charge contained in the words "besides commissions" I indignantly denounce as false and unjust. While as to "other remuneration" I can only associate this with the impertinent remarks on the manner in which the festival stewards, in the exercise of their discretion, think proper to dispose of the surplus of their own fund. Why do not the writers inform those whom they address that in the 14 years to present date the sum of £510 17s. has been presented to the funds of the institution from this source.

It is impossible to compress a reply to the voluminous mass of malicious exaggeration within limits suitable for your paper, and I must suffer the consequences of delay, unless I can trust to the good feeling and strong common-sense of those whose confidence I am not conscious of having abused. To one whose mission it evidently was, by the exercise of unparalleled tyranny and persecution, to goad into resistance all who declined to cringe subserviently to his arbitrary rule, I can easily understand how unpalatable was my determination to maintain my own position, and this accounts for all the vituperation to which I have been subjected. The matron and myself are the only persons (non-residents excepted) now officially connected with the institution whom Mr. Perrott found in office on his unfortunate advent as head-master, and nothing will be left untried to distort truth, so that our action and conduct generally may be held up to reprobation.

One word as to "letters one, two, and three." What will be thought of a head-master, within fourteen days of his appointment, extorting from his assistants written testimony in favour of a system the result of which had yet to be ascertained.

I have never denied that I did dictate the reply of the matron to Mr. Perrott's insidious letter. I unreservedly deny any knowledge whatever of the letters of the assistant masters in reply to the same.

I pledge myself to the accuracy of the accounts given in my "Reply," of the interview between Mr. Perrott and myself, and positively asserting that Mr. Perrott did express to me his thanks for such influence as I exerted in his favour (to me a lasting cause of regret), and that his remark in connection with the pianos was literally, "for instance, I didn't purchase the pianos," no allusion having been made verbally to "commission," which never entered my mind, though in his it evidently had a place.

Apologising for thus trespassing upon you, and leaving the refutation of the remaining accusations to another opportunity.

I am, dear Sir and Brother, yours faithfully and fraternally,
FREDERICK BINCKES,
Secretary.

London, Oct. 16, 1875.

P.S.—A second edition of the pamphlet by "T. W. Tew and O. G. D. Perrott" has reached me since writing to you. In this, paragraph 6, page 3, reads—"We demand the appointment of a new committee, the dismissal of the Secretary and of the Matron, and a thorough investigation." Truly our two censors are worthy imitators of the "Tailors of Tooley-street," with little idea of the value or importance of any one save themselves. This, too, from those who charge others with being "arrogant" and "autocratic."

DANIEL O'CONNELL.

"La Gazette d'Italia" states, that "O'Connell was a Freemason." Is the fact so?

It states that he was received in 1799, in a lodge at Dublin, No. 189. Is this correct?

It also adds, though clearly an error, that he was Grand Master, which post he resigned in 1839.

Probably, if he was a Freemason, he was Master of a lodge, which, is the explanation of the mistake of the "Gazette d'Italia."

Not knowing the fact myself, I shall be glad if some Irish brethren can kindly enlighten me in your pages.

ENQUIRER.

CURIOUS SILVER JEWEL.

I have lately had placed in my hands a very curious jewel, evidently intended to be suspended from a collar, and probably used at times as a Tracing Board.

It is a solid silver oval plate with a number of emblems and figures engraved on both sides. The late owner of the jewel is the great grandson of the brother, who was, (it is believed), the first to wear it. In fact, the probability is that the great grandfather in question had it presented to him on the revival of his lodge in 1784. It was formerly suspended from a light blue, red, and black ribbon, representing likely the Craft, Royal Arch, Knights Templar, and other degrees, agreeing also with the various emblems depicted on the medal. On the obverse are the Craft emblems represented, such as the two columns, the Arch and Keystone, square and compasses, sun, moon and stars, square, level and plumbline, 24-inch gauge, common gavel and chisel, Volume of the Sacred Law, trowel, beehive, cross, pens, key, the letter G, &c., forming a model little Tracing Board.

The reverse has the pilgrim habited as a neophyte of the Knight Templars behind being the dove with olive branch, hourglass, a cock, three crowns, &c. The first division contains besides these an ark, the Temple (?) &c. Below are other emblems connected with Knight Templary and Royal Arch Masonry, such as the mitre, burning bush, twelve lights arranged in the form of a triangle, emblems of mortality, &c.

I have been thus particular in describing the jewel, so as to discover if there are any more of the same kind, or similar, of the last century.

The medal has been in my friend's family for about a century, the Masonic body being much indebted in the past, as well as in the present, to several members thereof, and three generations at least have been most intimately connected with the Craft in Ireland, so that the handsome jewel is doubly valuable as a heirloom and for its Masonic character.

HIGHRODIAMS.—ANOTHER EXPLANATION!

I have just heard from a good Masonic friend of mine that in all probability the "Highrodians" simply refer to the members of the Craft who travelled by road or coach on the high road. In an old newspaper, a little, older than the minute of the Gateshead Lodge, is an advertisement, being "The Humble Remonstrance of the Five-Foot-Highians against the Anti-Christian practice of using a Standard in Enlisting of Soldiers."

Those brethren who travelled, and stopped the night at a lodge meeting, having thus arrived by coach on the high road, would be called Highrodians, or Highrodians, and doubtless the term described certain brethren who were frequently visitors as suggested.

So far I think the above the nearest guess at the meaning of the singular term, and it is very likely to be the correct origin of the word.

KING SOLOMON'S TEMPLE.

In a list of workmen, &c., for the building of King Solomon's Temple are the following, viz:—

1. Harodim—Princes, Rulers, or Provosts, in number	300
2. Menatzchim—Overseers and Comforters of the people in working, that were expert Master Masons	3,300
3. Ghiblim—Stone Squarers, Polishers and Sculptors, and Ishchotzeb; men of Hewing; and Benai—Setters, Layers, or Builders, being able and ingenious Fellow-Crafts	80,000
4. The Levy out of Israel, appointed to work in Lebanon one month in three, 10,000 every month, under the direction of noble Adoniram, who was the Senior Grand Warden...	30,000
	113,600

Can the above Herodim have anything in connection with the Highrodians?

CONSECRATION OF THE DUKE OF CONNAUGHT LODGE, No. 1558.

Another important link was on Thursday, the 14th of October, added to the great chain of Freemasonry by the inauguration of a new lodge, bearing the name of His Royal Highness the Duke of Connaught, which took place at the Surrey Masonic Hall, Camberwell New Road, being the second event of the kind that has occurred at this new hall during the very brief period it has been established, it having been consecrated by the Right Hon. Lord Skelmersdale, Deputy Grand Master, only a few months ago. The opening of this new hall has therefore met with a success that must be highly gratifying to its promoters, for as the performance of the Masonic ceremonies are here entirely separated from any tavern influence, it cannot fail to be appreciated by those who wish to see the noble Order unconnected with the public house, which in many instances is almost unavoidable; and as an encouragement to the directors of the Surrey Masonic Hall three Lodges of Instruction have already made this place their home, and several regular lodges will also remove there as soon as the necessary arrangements can be made.

The warrant for the holding of the Duke of Connaught Lodge was granted by his Royal Highness the Prince of Wales, Most Worshipful Grand Master, about the end of July, but circumstances arose which prevented the consecration of it until Thursday last, when there was a large attendance of brethren, amongst whom were Bros. R. W. Little, Consecrating and Installing Master; W. Hammond, P.J.G.D. Middlesex, W.M. 1512, as S.W.; R. N. Field, W.M. 902, as J.W.; H. G. Buss, P.G.T. Middlesex, Director of Ceremonies; P. M. Holden, Chaplain, P.G.C. Middlesex; W. Snowden, W.M.; W. S. Cackett, T. Sleep, J. Dann, P.M. 72; W. Mitchell, A. Runacres, E. W. Boynton, Knight Smith, J. Kemp, W. Chalk, F. Geider, C. B. Rayne, P.M. 27; S. J. Harvey, 72; G. Harrison, 1326; E. Salisbury, P.M.; I. Lawrence, W.M. 901; C. B. Wright, 1319; W. Temple, W.M. 194; H. Thompson, 1426; J. Oliver, W.M. 1328; J. Martin, 188; J. H. Vockins, W.M. 1329; H. Massey, P.M. 619; W. E. Gompertz, P.M. and Secretary, 869 and 1475, P.P.G.P. Herts; and J. T. Dalby, W.M. 1475.

The important duty of consecrating the lodge and the installation of the new Worshipful Master was entrusted by the Prince of Wales to Bro. Robert Wentworth Little, Provincial Senior Grand Warden for Middlesex, who was assisted by Bro. the Rev. P. Melancthon Holden, P.M., Grand Chaplain; and Bro. Henry G. Buss, P.M., Grand Treas. of Middlesex.

Shortly after three o'clock the brethren, who had assembled in an ante-room, were arranged in the order of rank, and amidst solemn music entered the lodge-room, and the Installing Master took the chair, appointing Bro. Hammond, of the Era Lodge, to take the position of S.W.; Bro. Field, W.M. of the Burgoyne Lodge, J.W.; and Bro. Henry Thompson, of The Great City Lodge, as P.M. The installing Master then opened the lodge in the three degrees, after which Brother Knight Smith, Organist 1441, played a choice piece of solemn music. Brother Little then addressed the brethren on the nature of the meeting and the cause which had brought them together, which was the promotion of their Order and to extend good will, kindness, and charity to all mankind.

Bro. Dann, the Secretary pro tem., then read the petition and warrant, and in answer to the Installing Master the petitioning brethren said they approved of the officers named in the petition and warrant.

Bro. the Rev. P.M. Holden, Prov. Grand Chaplain for Middlesex, thereafter delivered a splendid oration on the objects and purposes of Freemasonry, which was listened to with the deepest attention, and at its conclusion there was loud and general cheering. The following hymn was then sung by the brethren:—

Oh, praise our God to-day,
His constant mercy bless,
Whose love hath helped us on our way
And granted us success.
God of the widow, hear,
Our work of mercy bless;
God of the fatherless, be near,
And grant us great success.

Some portions of Scripture having been read, the Presiding Officer gave the invocation, after which the lodge board was uncovered, and three P.M.'s carried corn, wine, and oil three times round the lodge.

The Chaplain having offered up the usual prayers, and read portions of Scripture, the Presiding Officer dedicated and consecrated the lodge, after which the following hymns and anthems were sung:—

O Lord, how joyful 'tis to see
The brethren join in love to Thee;
On Thee alone their heart relies,
Their only strength Thy grace supplies.
Lord, shower upon us from above
The sacred gift of mutual love;
Each other's wants may we supply,
And reign together in the sky.—Amen.
Guide me, O Thou Great Jehovah!
Pilgrim through this barren land;
I am weak, but Thou art mighty,
Hold me with Thy powerful hand:
Bread of Heaven!
Feed me till I want no more:
Open Thou the crystal fountain,
Whence the healing streams do flow:
Let the fiery, cloudy pillar
Guide me all my journey through:
Strong Deliverer!
Be Thou still my strength and shield.

ANTHEM.

"Glory to God on High!
Let Heaven and Earth reply,
Praise ye His name;
Masons, His love adore,
Tiled in their mystic lore,
And cry for evermore
Glory to God."

The patriarchal blessing brought the consecration ceremony to a close, and it was the unanimous opinion of several Past Masters that in its performance Bro. Little had excelled himself for his careful and impressive rendering of this solemn rite.

THE INSTALLATION.

Bro. Little, the Presiding Officer, then proceeded with the installation ceremony.

Bro. William Snowden, the W.M. designate, was presented to receive at the hands of Bro. Little the benefit of installation. The brethren below the degree of an Installed Master having retired, Bro. Snowden was most impressively installed into the chair of K.S. as the first Master of the Duke of Connaught Lodge. The brethren having been admitted, he was in due form saluted in the three degrees, after which the following were the brethren appointed to office and invested by the W.M.:—Bros. W. S. Cackett, S.W.; T. Sleep, J.W.; J. Dann, P.M., Sec.; W. Mitchell, S.D.; A. Runacres, J.D.; E. W. Boynton, D.C.; Knight Smith, Org.; J. Kemp, I.G.; W. Chalk, Steward; and F. Geider, Tyler.

The addresses were then given by Bros. Little and M. S. Lariham, and the installation ceremony was brought to a close.

On the motion of the W.M., seconded by Bro. Cackett, and carried unanimously, Bros. Little and Holden were elected honorary members of the lodge. Six propositions were made for initiation at the next lodge, and the lodge was closed in due form.

At the conclusion of the banquet the W.M. gave ample proofs of his ability to preside over a meeting where compliments are passed by the chairman to individuals and associations. Not forgetting Her Majesty and the ancient Craft, he proceeded to draw attention to the Grand Master, and while submitting his name to the brethren, reminded them that while they were highly honoured in having H.R.H. as their head, he had had to pass through the same ordeal as every other brother in being initiated, passed, and raised. Freemasons were loyal subjects, and wherever the prince might be he was safe, as they were a law-abiding community. They were to him bone, blood, and sinew, and he would find in India, where he was going, hearty sympathy and support. He (the W.M.) was himself essentially loyal, and he was proud to be there that night, as the first W.M. of that body, to propose the Prince of Wales's health while he was on his journey. While wishing him long life and a prosperous and pleasant journey, he trusted that Freemasonry would benefit by it. Bro. Little proposed "The Health of the W.M.," to which Bro. Snowden made a short reply, but thanked the brethren very heartily for their warmth. In giving "The Health of the Visitors," he complimented Bro. Buss on the admirable style in which he had that day performed the office of Director of Ceremonies. Bro. Buss said it was always difficult to reply when there were so many eminent members of the Craft present who were better able to respond. Still, he had much pleasure in replying, because of the honour conferred on him by the W.M.'s attention. He had had the pleasure of being present at the Surrey Masonic Hall when it was consecrated, and he could not help feeling that the spot which had been selected for the hall was in the right part of London for such a structure. If the Craft did not rally round the promoters of the hall it would be their own fault if Masonry did not succeed on that side of the water. There was no other good place where Masonry was able to establish itself in that quarter of London. Much praise was due to the promoters, and it was with very great pleasure that he at any time took part in any undertaking which would increase to a valuable property Masons in South London could not do better than hold their lodges at the Surrey Masonic Hall. After again thanking the brethren, he left the further reply to the toast to the remaining visitors, who severally responded. The W.M. proposed "The Masonic Charities" and "The Officers of the Lodge," including among them Bro. Little, who replied. He thanked Bro. Mitchell for having come forward in support of these institutions the very first night of the meeting of the lodge, and hoped his example would be followed. Indeed, he was satisfied it would be, and that the W.M. would put before the brethren the principles of Freemasonry and the support of the charities. It had been aptly and justly said that loyalty and charity were the brightest jewels in the Masonic crown, because they were the practical result of Masonry. Those principles they all admitted. At so late a period of the evening he would not dilate on the principles of the Craft and the benefits that were being conferred in its name upon the world. Englishmen were practical, and English Masons saw that unless they carried out Freemasonry in its entirety they would not be worthy of the name of Masons. Ninety years ago they established the Girls' School, after that the Boys' School, and then the Benevolent Institution. Very great good had been done by all. The Girls' School had for ninety years past discharged its duty by boarding, clothing, and educating the daughters of Freemasons. Speaking on the subject of this institution, he might inform the company before him that it had been considered a reproach to the institution that it was comparatively rich. If this was considered in the proper light it was not a reproach, because they were obliged to husband their funds because they had no endowment. In the presence of representatives of the press he was happy to say that no less than forty girls had been added to the establishment. Not only that, but there was now a project before the subscribers for still further extending it. To accomplish this object the institution must depend on the liberality of the brethren. (Hear, hear.)

Bro. Mitchell, S.D., said he was standing for the Girls' School. He simply mentioned this for an advertisement. He hoped the brethren of the lodge would support him, for he was going to try to work very hard for that charity. (Cheers.)

Bro. Hammond also replied, and in the course of his observations, remarked that he was glad to see the brethren taking what he considered a step in the right direction, by disconnecting the Masonic ceremonies from the "public" element. A great deal of the money subscribed in Masonry, no doubt had hitherto gone in the "Fourth Degree;" but at that Masonic Hall the brethren had an opportunity of seeing what could be done by disconnecting them from the taverns. At the same time he would not disparage that element of Freemasonry, for in the provinces Masons were compelled to seek the shelter of those houses. He would be glad to find Masons inaugurate a system by which they should have the major part of their funds devoted to the charities instead of creature comforts. They seemed to be doing this rather extensively now, and the Surrey Masonic Hall was assisting them in that work. Bro. Buss had made a very appropriate speech to this effect, and had brought before the brethren the duty that lay upon them to support the hall. In furtherance of that great end, he also (Bro. Hammond) would exhort all the lodges on the Surrey side of the water to hold their meetings at that hall.

This concluded the business of the evening, and the brethren soon after separated. The musical arrangements throughout the day were under the charge of Bro. Knight Smith, and both in the lodge and after banquet were of a very superior character. Miss Snowden, daughter of the W.M., added some pretty singing to the vocal performances of the brethren.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS.—Mind and body are so closely intertwined that for the former to be vigorous the latter must be healthy. The first step towards the maintenance of health is to secure perfect digestion, which is readily attained by this noted medicine, the most competent effectually to restrain every adverse influence which can mar, impair, or vexatiously modify this all-important process. The student, merchant, man of pleasure, and humblest labourer, may each in turn derive vigour, ease, and strength, from occasional doses or a larger course of Holloway's purifying Pills. However wavering the mind, or unstrung the nerves, this fine medicine will track the derangement to its source, where it will overthrow it and establish order and purity in its place.—ADVT.

PROV. GRAND LODGE OF JERSEY.

The annual meeting of the Prov. Grand Lodge was held on Wednesday, October 13th, at the Masonic Temple, when a goodly number of brethren attended to show their fraternal respect to the esteemed Bro. Dr. J. Le Cronier, D. Prov. G.M., who, owing to the unavoidable absence of Bro. Col. Malet de Carteret, P.G.M., opened the Prov. Grand Lodge in form, supported by Bros. A. Schmitt, P. Prov. G.S.W., as Dep. P.G.M.; G. J. Renouf, S.W.; J. Oatley, J.W.; Ellis A. Owen, Reg.; P. W. Benham, P.P.G. S.W., Treas.; J. O. Le Sueur, Sec.; C. Kingsnorth, P.P.G.J.W.; W. T. Pugsley, P.P.G.J.W.; E. Leigh Bennett, S.D.; R. Barrow, P.S.D.; Ed. Martel, D.C.; Ed. Gilley, Asst. D.C.; J. Blampied, P. Asst. D.C.; Ph. Blampied, P. Asst. D.C.; Abr. Viel, P.G. Supt. of W.; Jos. O'Flaherty, Pursuivant; Prov. Grand Stewards, Masters, Past Masters, and Wardens.

The Secretary read the minutes of the last Prov. Grand Lodge, which were unanimously confirmed.

The reports of several meetings in reference to the Local Fund of Benevolence were read and adopted, showing that they were able to alleviate the distresses of several really deserving brethren. The report of the Board of General Purposes was also read, received and ordered to be entered on the minutes.

The Treasurer presented likewise the financial statement, which was unanimously adopted. From the various transactions of the Committees whose reports were read, we agreeably perceive that Masonry has progressed during the year, and that the funds, too, appear to be in a healthy state. The proceedings of the Preparatory Committee were now read, among which was the following notice of motion by Bro. P. Binet, P.P.G.S.W. :—

"That W. Bro. A. Schmitt, P.P.G.S.W., be delegated to represent the Province of Jersey as Steward at the forthcoming Festival of the Royal Masonic Institution for the Girls' School, to be held in May, 1876,—and that the sum of £15 15s. be voted towards the fund of sustenance of the said School."

Bro. P. W. Benham, in the absence of Bro. Binet, heartily advocated the cause of the Masonic Girls' School by impressing on the minds of the members present the imperious necessity of liberally supporting the claims of the orphans of our deceased but deserving brethren. The motion being put to the vote was carried unanimously and by acclamation.

Bro. A. Schmitt, kindly undertaking the duties of Prov. Grand Steward, expressed the gratification his heart felt at his being deputed to represent the Province at the next Festival of the Girls' School, and ardently craved the support of lodges, Chapters, and individual members, to whom his appeal to that effect will be made in due time, hoping it will be practically responded to; at the same time informing the Prov. Grand Lodge that the Rt. W. Prov. Grand Master, before he left the island in September, was pleased to signify his cordial pleasure in having his name placed on the list for £10 10s.

The brethren were now called to elect a Treasurer for the ensuing year, when Bro. C. Kingsnorth moved :—"That Bro. P. W. Benham, who has for several years held that important office, be re-elected, upon whom he passed a well-deserved eulogium for the able and efficient manner in which he has discharged his duties. The nomination of Bro. P. W. Benham, seconded by Bro. J. O. Le Sueur, was then put to the vote, agreed to, and the Acting Prov. G.M. begged to observe that it was with pleasure he had to announce to Bro. Benham the pleasing intelligence of his unanimous re-election. The Treasurer, in acknowledging his obligations to the brethren for their continued confidence in him, begged to assure them that any efforts of his would not be wanting to carry out the duties of his office in as efficient a manner as he possibly could. The acting P.G.M. appointed and invested the following Prov. Grand Officers :—

John Oatley ..	Prov. G.S. Warden.
Ellis A. Owen ..	Prov. G.J. Warden.
Ch. Marett ..	Prov. G. Chap.
R. Barrow ..	Prov. G. Reg.
P. W. Benham ..	Prov. G. Treas.
J. O. Le Sueur ..	Prov. G. Sec.

Gen. T. C. Kelly, C.B. ... Prov. G.S.D.
 Jos. O'Flaherty .. Prov. G. J.D.
 J. Blampied .. Prov. G.S. of W.
 Ph. Blampied .. Prov. G. Dir. of C.
 Ed. Simons .. Prov. G. Asst. D.C.
 J. Le Feuvre .. Prov. G.S.B.
 Ph. W. Binet .. Prov. G. Purst.
 Bros. G. F. Baker, S.W. 491; W. T. Dumaresq, S.W. 244; Wm. Wetherell, J.W. 1003;
 W. H. Chapman, J.W. 958; W. J. Ennis, S.W. 877; and Ch. A. Chanter, J.W. 244, Prov. Grand Stewards.

This being the regular period for electing members of the Local Board of General Purposes, the scrutineers collected the balloting papers and withdrew. On their return they handed to the A.P.G.M., a list of the result of the ballot, when the following brethren were declared members of the Board for the ensuing year :—Bros. A. Schmitt, President; Ellis A. Owen, P.M. 877; Ph. W. Binet, P.M. 590; Ed. Martel, W.M. 491; Jos. O'Flaherty, P.M. 958; F. P. Le Marquand, P.M. 491; Ed. Gilley, W.M. 291; R. Barrow, P.M. 491;—Moved by Bro. A. Schmitt, seconded by Bro. C. Kingsnorth, and unanimously resolved :—"That a sincere vote of thanks be recorded in the minutes to Bro. Ed. Martel, W.M. 958, for the very effective, able, and courteous manner in which he has discharged the rather onerous duties of Prov. Grand Director of Ceremonies during two consecutive years."

The Prov. Grand Lodge was closed in form and perfect harmony.

The brethren adjourned to the refreshment hall, and sat down to a banquet, under the presidency of the acting P.G.M., supported on his right by Bros. A. Schmitt, P. W. Benham, J. O. Le Sueur, R. Barrow, Abr. Viel; on his left by Bros. G. J. Renouf, W. T. Pugsley, C. Kingsnorth, Ed. Martel. Bro. Jn. Oatley occupied the vice-chair. On the cloth being removed, and after the usual loyal and Masonic toasts, Bro. A. Schmitt gave "The Acting P.G.M., Bro. Dr. Le Cronier." In briefly passing in review his eminent services and the judicious manner in which the affairs of the Province have been conducted he needed hardly to dilate upon his many merits as a gentleman and Mason, because he is so well known to the brethren, and year by year he shows how his interest in the Craft increases. Bro. Dr. Le Cronier in every walk of life has shown himself kind and affable, while in Masonry he has displayed on all occasions, energy, zeal, and a noble desire to perform the functions of his post to the satisfaction of his brethren. The Chairman, in returning thanks, expressed his deep sense of gratitude for the good and true Masonic feeling shown towards him by the brethren, and that it would be an encouragement to persevere in the course he had marked out for himself, which, he ventured to hope, would be approved by the members of the Province.

The Chairman gave "The Prov. Grand Officers, Past and Present," and in so doing he expressed his thanks for their assistance since his appointment to the distinguished post he is holding. He also conveyed his gratitude to the brethren who accepted office that day, and trusted that the working of the Province would be as efficient and harmonious in the future as it had been in the past. The S.W., Bro. Oakley, in responding to the P.G.M., promised their most earnest and hearty support. Bro. J. O. Le Sueur in ardent terms proposed "The Masonic Charities," responded to by Bro. A. Schmitt, who thanked once more the brethren for the difficult task entrusted to him, and in alluding to the great forthcoming Masonic Festival in May, he trusted that the brethren would make up their minds to liberally support him in his exertions, so that they may be able to show their feeble efforts were not in vain, as the Great Masonic Institutions, in his conception, constituted the strength and glory of English Craft Masonry. After the Tyler's toast, the company separated shortly before 10 o'clock.

NEW ROYAL ARCH CHAPTER IN INDIA.

On the 26th August the New Royal Arch Chapter "Rock" was opened at Trichinopoly, Madras Presidency, by M.E. Companion Major W. L. Twentyman as Z., assisted by M.E. Comp. H. Bartels as H., and E. Comp. J. W. Borthistle as J. The provisional warrant from the D.G.C. of Chapter was read. The proposed by-laws were read and passed. Comp. Colonel J. W. Doveton was then obligated, intrusted, invested, and installed as E. Comp. H. The companions saluted the newly-installed H. The following Master Masons were proposed for exaltation. Bros. J. C. Fowler; P. Soubier, S. Winfred, C. J. Littlewood, Rev. C. Smith, T. Ganapaty Jayer, J. E. Lillywhite, P. Sreenamalloo Naidu, C. V. Sayambu Jayer, J. G. Coombs, Dr. Mootosawmy, N. Gabriel (serving brother), Org.; G. Kalkovan (serving brother), Janitor. On the 28th August was the first regular meeting, when nine of the above brethren were exalted. There is every reason to hope the new chapter will flourish, there being already twenty one companions on the register.

PROVINCIAL GRAND LODGE OF WARWICKSHIRE

The Provincial Grand Lodge of Free and Accepted Masons was held in the Shire Hall, at Warwick, on Tuesday, 26th ult., under the presidency of the Right Hon. Lord Leigh, P.G.M., and was numerously attended.

The brethren afterwards attended Divine service at St. Mary's Church. Bro. C. J. Sutton, W.M. 1180, presided at the organ, and, as a voluntary, performed "The Victoria March," by Bro. Otto Brown, of London. Special psalms were chanted. The anthem was "The Hallelujah Chorus." Meyerbeer's "Grand Coronation March" was played as the brethren left the church.

The sermon was preached by the Rev. Bro. Randall, P.G.C., from the text, "Where is the house that ye built unto Me, and where is the place of My rest?" : Isaiah lxvi., 1.

After the closing of the Provincial Grand Lodge the brethren dined together, under the presidency of Lord Leigh, at the Court House.

Reviews.

"The Royal Masonic Cyclopædia." Edited by Bro. KENNETH R. H. MACKENZIE.

We welcome the first number of this laborious work very sincerely. Knowing something of the toil of compilation, comparison, and collation ourselves, we must give our able brother credit for much care and persevering energy. We welcome gladly another aid to Masonic students, as an incentive to patient study, and intellectual improvement. It has been too much the custom in years gone by to discountenance all original research, and all explanatory works in our ancient Order.

And no doubt it is true that readers and students amongst us are few and far between, and most unthankful and unremunerative for the most part are the zealous endeavours of Masonic archaeologists.

We trust that Bro. Mackenzie may be rewarded for all his patient perseverance, and interesting labours, by the friendly patronage of a large circle of readers.

The first number is very well printed, contains a great amount of very valuable information, and promises to do credit alike to Freemasonry and to himself. We have perused the first number very carefully, and we again thank Bro. Mackenzie for this valuable contribution to Masonic literature. W.

REPORTS OF MASONIC MEETINGS.

Craft Masonry.

METROPOLITAN.

MOUNT LEBANON LODGE (No. 73).—The winter campaign of this old and influential lodge commenced on Tuesday, the 19th inst. The rendezvous was the Bridge House Hotel—now almost a Masonic hall—and the brethren met in goodly numbers under the presidency of their highly-esteemed and energetic W.M., Bro. J. J. Hooper Wilkins. Evidently Bro. Wilkins has learnt the importance of the motto, "Punctuality is the soul of business," for he always takes the chair at the appointed time, and in this he is ably supported by his officers. Would that many of our brethren in a similar position would copy his example. How frequently do we find a meeting called, say for half-past five, and, having ourselves kept the appointment, are destined to wait wearily until six, or, perhaps later, before the W.M. puts in an appearance. As the W.M. makes his own appointment in this matter, it is of the utmost importance that he should keep it, as we are taught that "it is only by a strict observance of the laws in ourselves that we can expect obedience to them from others." But we are digressing. The chair was taken punctually at half-past five, when every officer of the lodge was present, viz., Bros. Dussek, I.P.M.; Rayden, S.W.; Knott, J.W.; E. Harris, P.M.; Treas.; Free, P.M., Sec.; Keeble, P.M. 1275, S.D.; Ireton, J.D.; Cooper, I.G.; Laing, Tyler. There were also present Bros. Ebsworth, P.M.; Klingenstein, Müller, Scott, Frankau, Chambers, Willoughby, Spencer, and many others. The lodge having been opened, the minutes of the last meeting were read and confirmed. The W.M. then, in his usual impressive manner, raised Bro. Willoughby to the sublime degree of a Master Mason, giving the traditional history and the lecture on the tracing-board in full. He next passed to the Second Degree Bros. Chambers, Frankau, and Scott. A letter was read from the widow of a deceased brother, a P.M. of the lodge, asking for assistance, and the sum of £10 was voted from the Benevolent Fund. A further sum of £5 was voted to the widow of another deceased brother, a master mariner, who was lost at sea in the year 1869, and it was resolved to recommend this case to the Board of Benevolence for a further grant, the widow being now in very straitened circumstances. The W.M. and his officers also signed a formal petition to the Committee of the Boys' School in favour of the admission of one of the children of the last-mentioned widow. Another case of distress was brought under the notice of the lodge, and although the brother on whose behalf the appeal was made was not, and never had been, a member of the lodge, the sum of £2 was voted to him, and this was afterwards supplemented by private donations from many of the members who had known the brother in the days of his prosperity. The lodge was then closed in due form, and, there being no banquet, the brethren shortly afterwards separated.

LODGE OF SINCERITY (No. 174).—On the 20th inst. the new season of this lodge was opened at the Guildhall Tavern, when Bro. E. J. Moore, W.M., presided. Among other brethren, who were very numerous, there were present Bros. W. T. Wells, S.W.; G. J. Hilliard, J.W.; J. Newton, P.M., Sec.; S. H. Rawley, P.M. Treas.; Appleby, S.D.; Seddon, J.D.; Webb, D.C.; Verry, Tyler. P.M.'s Barlow, Lacey, Tuck, I.P.M., Palmer. Visitors: Bros. Robert H. Morrison, Attorney General, Michigan, U.S. America; Dr. Horwood, of New York; and Dr. Adrian, of Indiana; Dr. Self, S.G.W. of Essex; Binckes, and Terry. Bro. George Smith was raised. Messrs. Arthur Harper Bond, William Green Norman, George Gibson Harris, and William Taynton were initiated. Bro. J. Vigor was elected a joining member of the lodge. After some other formal business, the W.M. presented to Bro. J. Newton, P.M. and Secretary, in the name of the lodge, an address, elegantly emblazoned on vellum, and framed, together with a handsome gold watch and chain, as well as a gold locket and chain for Mrs. Newton. The presentation of these was made, accompanied by a speech from the W.M., in which he recapitulated the many Masonic virtues of Bro. Newton, and the eminent services he had performed to the lodge, not forgetting the great demands on his time that his duties as Secretary of the lodge made.

The address was as follows:—Sincerity Lodge, No. 174. This testimonial, together with a gold watch, chain, &c., was presented to Bro. John Newton, P.M., in open lodge, 20th October, 1875, in accordance with a resolution passed at a lodge meeting, held 19th May, 1875, by the brethren, in recognition of the valuable services rendered to the lodge, and especially in acknowledgment of the zeal and efficiency with which he has for a number of years carried out the arduous and important duties of Secretary, and also as a mark of personal esteem and friendship for the truly Masonic spirit always manifested by him towards his brethren of the lodge. Signed on behalf of the lodge by the members of the Testimonial Committee: Chas. Lacey, P.M., Chairman and Treasurer; E. J. Moore, W.M.; W. T. Wells, S.W.; G. J. Hilliard, J.W.; Jno. Appleby, S.D.; C. H. Webb, D.C.; Jno. Miller, W.S.; S. H. Rawley, P.M.; Jno. Bulmer, P.M.; Jno. Adkins, P.M.; E. Tuck, P.M.; Jas. Thomas, W. T. Roberts Jno. Burchill. Fdk. Brown, Hon. Sec."

Bro. Newton acknowledged the gift, and said that although he had had great pleasure in performing his duties, and always would have such pleasure, the gifts made to him that evening would stimulate him to yet greater exertions. A banquet was provided at the conclusion of the lodge work, and the long list of Masonic toasts was systematically gone through. The "Health of the Visitors," drew an acknowledgment from the American brethren. Bro. Dr. Adrian, of Indiana, in his reply, observed that he and his brother visitors from the "other side" congratulated themselves very much on finding themselves surrounded by so many brethren of the mother country, who on all occasions during the present visit had extended the greatest hospitality to them. Their expression of thanks, however warm, was quite inadequate; but the brethren would allow him to say that there was a bond of union between the brethren of the Order, however distant the parts might be from which they came. This arose from the principles of the body they belonged to, brotherly love, relief, and truth, which taught them to regard the whole human species as one family; and the three great theological virtues, faith, hope, and charity, which united earth to heaven, and man to God. The strongest ties of fraternal feeling should exist between English and American Freemasons. Did the world but realise the fact that they were indeed brothers, with the feelings, emotions, and impulses which should move a brother's heart, this mundane sphere would soon present a scene of bliss that angels might wish to come down to, and make and call their own. The principles of Freemasonry in their practical exhibition were of untold value to the human family. It regarded man not only as a social being, connected by ties and impulses with his fellow man, but also as an immortal being, linked by nature and destiny with beings of a higher race, and a life that knew no ending. An institution invested with such attributes, and designed for the bettering of man's earthly condition and eternal destiny was a cause that must flourish, because it was the cause of civilization, refinement, virtue, and happiness. Wherever established its reign had been marked with numberless blessings, and it was destined to accomplish even more than it had yet secured for suffering humanity. Bro. Dr. Horwood, of New York, also replied. He said—Worshipful Master and Wardens of Sincerity Lodge, and brethren here assembled: Through the medium of electricity, about half-past six this evening I was summoned to this place, and what was to transpire on my arrival I was as ignorant of as our newly-elected and initiated brethren were. It has been my good fortune to fall into the hands of Bro. C. G. Hill, whom it seems to me is the prince of jolly good fellows, and the embodiment of a true Mason and an Americanised Englishman. This is my first visit to the mother country. Since my arrival here I have been on the Continent, where I came in contact with but one Mason. To-night is the first time I have been in a Masonic lodge since I crossed the broad and trackless ocean which separates your country from my own. I most heartily thank you for the very complimentary manner in which you have coupled my name and American Masonry with "The Visitors." I assure you I have been wine and dined to a considerable extent through your instrumentality. I have listened to some soul-stirring remarks by our British brethren, and have been thoroughly over shadowed by my American companion Bro. J. A. Adrian (as you can all appreciate), and considering the lateness of the hour I cannot do better than stand in the rear and second the words that have just fallen from his lips in your hearing. For myself, I will say that I shall carry to my home the pleasant recollections of this evening, and shall be glad to tell my countrymen of the warm grasp of the hand and the generous hospitality that you have extended to their fellow subjects. May the heartfelt pleasure you experience here in your lodge be your companion through life. The principles of Masonry are correct, are connected with the best interests of humanity, and, if properly lived up to, will alleviate every corrosion of care, heighten every sensation of joy, and in the hour of dissolution shed Divine triumph over your soul. (Great cheering.) After the other toasts had been given the brethren separated.

LODGE OF UNITED STRENGTH (No. 228).—This lodge held its first meeting of the year on Tuesday week, and had a large gathering, not only of the brethren of the lodge, but of visiting brethren from the provinces, who viewed the Old Gate of Clerkenwell, the lodge meeting place, with interest. In the temporary absence of the W.M. on a public duty in connection with a cause célèbre, Past Master Hillhouse, the Immediate Past Master, opened the lodge, the officers being all present—Bros. Robt. Griggs, S.W.; Hill, J.W.; Snare, S.D.; Halford, J.D.; Percy I.G.; Flaws, D.C.; and Patmore, W.S. There were also present Past Masters Bros. James Terry, Joseph Crump;

(Secretary for nearly twenty-five years); Winsland, Treas., Braid, Org.; Davies, and others. Among the visitors were Bros. Thomas Cooke, S.W. of 948; G. Cumberland, J.D. of 475; F. J. Coleman, of 475; W. Whitby, of Faith, 141; Dr. W. J. Hunter, of 219, Scotland; M. Cuff, 511, Zealand; and Wm. Read, of 1507, Metropolitan. The P.M. in the chair passed Bros. Whiting and Bartlett (the latter is the well-known analyst), and the W.M., Bro. John While, having then arrived, took the chair. He put the necessary questions to Bros. Trewinnard and Dr. Franklin, who were candidates to be raised to the Third Degree, and performed the ceremony according to ancient custom, in the room beautifully fitted for the purpose. The lodge was then resumed in the First Degree, and the ballot having been taken for Mr. Jeus Stockholm Breinholt, a Danish gentleman, who, being unanimously elected, was at once initiated by the W.M., who did the work in good form. Five propositions for initiates were made for the next meeting, and several for joining members. The lodge having closed, the brethren sat down to an excellent banquet, provided by Bro. Gay, who had to meet a difficulty created in the lodge being late before the heavy work of the evening was discharged. After the cloth was removed the loyal toasts were given, and the brethren warmly echoed the W.M.'s expressions of "bon voyage" in regard to the W.M. the Grand Master's journey to India. The visitors replied to the toast, warmly given and received, of their health, and the initiate was also warmly toasted. Bro. Bartlett, who that night was passed, was introduced to the brethren as a brother who was initiated at the last meeting, and had to leave in order to attend to public duties. The W.M., referring to Bro. Bartlett's profession, said that the brother might, at the result of his investigations, have reason to warn the public against articles of food, but his investigations into our ancient institution would show him, if he carried his analysis far enough, that it was composed all of that which was true and good. Bro. Bartlett made a very appropriate speech in reply, and the W.M., in proposing the toast of "The Past Masters," having stated that he had obtained the promises of the brethren to make the lodge a Vice-President of the Benevolent Institution, as a compliment to their Bro. James Terry, the latter, in reply, referred to the W.M.'s successful summer banquet of the lodge, and said that the W.M. had proved himself a prophet, for he had foretold a fine day, and the lodge had the one sunny day which occurred in weeks of rain. Bro. Terry also urged the case of the late Bro. Vivian's boy upon the members, and trusted that they would use their best efforts to carry the son of their late P.M. into the Boys' School. The lodge ended with the Tyler's toast.

BURGOYNE LODGE (No. 902).—On Monday last this lodge met, after the recess, at Anderton's Hotel. There was a large attendance of brethren on this occasion, there being no less than ninety present, including visitors. Through ill health, the W.M., Bro. Richard Noakes Field, was not present, and his place was consequently filled by Bro. Rogers, I.P.M. On this brother devolved the duties of initiating, passing, and raising, and the task was discharged in the most exemplary manner. The list contained the names of six gentlemen as candidates for initiation, but of these only three made their appearance. These were Messrs. George Stickland Criswick, Henry Woolcott Jeanes, and Henry Sladden. The passings were Bros. Cayat, 753; Finney, Wilkins, Reville, Hoslombe, Finlay and Creasey. The raisings were Bros. Wilcox, C. Young and Hodges. There were also several candidates for joining, and these were successfully balloted for, and were Bros. H. Lavington, 862; J. J. De Hain, 1053; G. B. Mackereth, 192; and J. Coker, 1441. Bro. Poynter, P.M. and Treas., brought on the following motion:—"That a sum of fifteen guineas, to be taken from the charitable fund of the lodge, be handed to the Trustees now engaged in raising a sum in aid of the sustenance and education of the three orphan children of a lamented late brother, former Junior Deacon of this lodge, in which he was initiated on the 19th day of March, 1862, as the contribution of his mother lodge to that fund." This motion having been duly seconded, was carried, and Bro. Poynter then gave notice of motion for next lodge to increase the subscription to the lodge and the initiation and joining fees. After this the brethren adjourned to banquet, and the toasts were subsequently given. Bro. James Terry, Secretary to the Royal Masonic Benevolent Institution, asked for a Steward from this lodge for the next festival of his institution on the 9th of February, at which Lord Skelmersdale would preside; and in a long and able speech commended the pooraged and infirm who could not help themselves to the kind care and consideration of those who were yet in the happy possession of the blessings of prosperity, youth, and strength. Not forgetting the claims which the children of the Craft have upon the brethren, he thought that the aged, who had borne the burden and heat of the day, had a prior claim. The acting W.M. proposed "The Health of the W.M.," wishing him a speedy restoration to health and strength. The toast was drunk most cordially. An American brother responded for "The Visitors," and stated that he had been much interested in what he had witnessed, which was somewhat different from the American style. He would give a good account of it when he got back to his native country. Bro. H. Thompson, P.M. No 177, also replied, and in a few words alluded to the fact that he had been present when the lodge was consecrated in 1861, by the late Bro. Stephen Barton Wilson. An inspiration had been drawn in the lodge that brother had consecrated, and could he come back again in the flesh, he would himself be surprised to find the seed he had sown had produced such good fruits, not only in the number of members of the lodge, but in the attendance and working of its officers. The evening was passed very pleasantly and profitably, and the new season of the lodge opened under favorable circumstances, except the regretted indisposition of the W.M.

GREAT NORTHERN LODGE (No. 1287).—At an emergency meeting, the second this season, held on Thursday, the 14th inst., there were present: Bros. J. Forbes, W.M.; A. Christie, J.D.; G. West, I.G.; J. W. Robinson, D.C. The offices of the S.W. and J.W. were ably filled by I.P.M. T. H. Staton and P.M. G. Webb. The business of the evening consisted of initiating Messrs. W. Cushion, H. Arding, and J. Hobbs, who, being elected, were duly admitted into the ancient Order. There were also present, besides the above-mentioned brethren, Bros. Stevenson and Trebell (the candidates at the former emergency meeting), P. G. Jupe, J. Arkell, Hammond, Hawtin, Hitchcock, Freshwater, Owen, Bathard, Jenkins, and Sadler. As there was no banquet, the brethren were invited by the W.M., before separating, to partake of some slight refreshment, which was gladly received. "The Health of the W.M." and "The Candidates" having been responded to, the brethren separated, to meet again on Thursday, 21st inst.

METROPOLITAN LODGE (No. 1507).—The installation meeting of this lodge, and first anniversary of its consecration, was held on the 21st inst. at the Metropolitan Club, 269, Pentonville-road, Kings Cross. What the lodge has done during its first year may be judged of by the fact that about eighty brethren attended to participate in the ceremonies, and to hail with gratification the progress which the lodge has made. Among these were some brethren of considerable eminence in the Order, not only those belonging to the lodge, but others who came as visitors. There were, too, brethren from America, for whose presence the lodge was indebted to Bro. James Terry, himself a brother of both rank and energy. The lodge room was crowded, although it is of considerable size, and it required constant exertion on the part of the officers below the chairs to minister to the comfort of those present. The work of the lodge began about four o'clock, and Bro. James Willing, W.M., was under engagement to be out of the room by seven. There being two passages and to initiations to perform before the installation, that brother's abilities were taxed to the utmost to keep his engagement. The ceremonies, however, were speedily proceeded with, and Bros. Sayers and Erwood were passed to the Second Degree. This was succeeded by the initiation of Messrs. Gilbert and Swaagman, at the completion of which Bro. Willing requested Bro. Joseph Smith, P.G.P., to take the S.W. chair, and Bro. Thomas Adams, P.G.P., the J.W. At this time there were in the lodge, among other visitors, Bros. Geo. Everett, W.M. 177; James Terry, P.G.D.C. Herts; H. M. Levy, P.M. 188; Thomas Cubitt, P.G.P.; W. Mann, P.M. 186; the Hon. R. H. Morrison, Attorney-General of Michigan, 33rd; Dr. A. Adrian, of Indiana; Dr. Horwood, of New York; Miles, P.M. 1375; George Puzey, W.M. 1107; J. T. Briggs, P.M. 157; S. Milles, P.M. 157; and H. Massey ("Freemason"). Bro. Terry presented Bro. Joseph Jacob Michael, S.W., and W.M. elect, to the W.M., who then formally installed him in the high and distinguished office of Master of his lodge. At the board of Installed Masters, among whom were the American brethren, some eighteen brethren were present, and, according to usual custom, they gave the salutes to Bro. Michael. After Bro. James Willing had been invested as I.P.M., the brethren wished the W.M. a happy and prosperous year of office, and the brethren were then admitted, and the ceremony was completed, and the following brethren were appointed to office and invested:—Bros. W. Williams, S.W.; Kingham, J.W.; Rose, Treas.; J. Timms, Sec.; Douglass (Standard Theatre), S.D.; Scales, J.D.; Side (of the Metropolitan Railway), I.G.; Stiles, D.C. and Asst. Sec.; George Colls, W.S.; and Daly, Tyler. Bro. Willing afterwards delivered the addresses, and was much cheered when he sat down. Bro. James Terry thereupon rose, and asked that he might have the pleasure of receiving the name of some brother who would take the office of Steward for this lodge at the next festival of the Royal Masonic Benevolent Institution, which is to be held on the 9th Feb., 1876, Lord Skelmersdale presiding. Bro. James Willing offered himself, and was immediately accepted by the brethren. There yet remained another piece of business to be done before the closing of the lodge, the presentation to the lodge of a portrait of Bro. Willing, painted by Bro. Tattenborn, and the Deacons having uncovered the same, the W.M. said, addressing the brethren, that he had a very pleasant duty to perform, and it was the more pleasing because he knew it would meet with the brethren's approval. He had been for some time filled with apprehension that he might not be able to discharge the trust placed in his hands so creditably as his heart could wish. He need not comment, he was sure, upon the great merits of Bro. Willing as being the founder of the lodge in the chair of which he (the W.M.) had had the honour of being installed that day. Some time ago it was the expressed wish of many of the brethren to do something which would commemorate the founding of the lodge and its consecration a year ago. A committee was formed, which, after deliberation, decided upon a certain course, which was, that a portrait of Bro. Willing should be painted and presented to the lodge. This was done that the lodge might honour itself in what it did, and at the same time pay a tribute of respect to their brother, who was now the I.P.M. It was he who had borne the burden and heat of the day, and who never refused to devote any amount of time or trouble that might be required of him for the welfare of the lodge. No time or trouble had ever been irksome to him, and not a single thing they had asked of him had he denied them. It was the general wish that something should be done in recognition of his services. The scheme was most liberally responded to; it was so unanimous that it far exceeded the most sanguine expectations. They rejoiced that they that night had Bro. Willing among them in the possession of health and strength, and enabled to place his successor in the chair. The testimonial took the form of an oil painting by Bro. Tattenborn in his happiest style; and he (the W.M.) would now ask Bro. Willing to stand up while he presented it, that all the brethren might see the brother who had done so much for them. The time might come and circumstances might happen when Bro. Willing might be removed from amongst them; but with this picture in the lodge-room he might know that he would still live in the hearts and memory of his brethren of the lodge he had founded. He (the W.M.) felt that it was utterly impossible for him, with the limited vocabulary he had at his command, to do full justice to the presentation, but he was quite sure that Bro. Willing would feel that in the presentation of this portrait the brethren had done the thing that was most gratifying to his feelings, and that they could not have chosen a more appropriate way of paying a tribute to his merits than by hanging a portrait of him where for years it might remain when Bro. Willing himself and many of the other brethren had passed away. Bro. Willing, who was nearly overcome with emotion, said in reply that he hardly knew how to acknowledge this compliment. He had believed that when he had anything to say he could say it with fluency. "Out of the fulness of the heart," King Solomon said, "the mouth speaketh." It was not so, however, with him. His words came slowly and with more difficulty at that time than at any other time. He was, though, very much pleased—aye, more than pleased—with the mark of esteem bestowed on him by the brethren for the way in which he had carried out the duties of his office. He was pleased that in his endeavours to carry out these duties he had endeared himself to the brethren as they had all endeared themselves to him. He had through this lodge made the acquaintance of brethren which he hoped would last the whole of his life. He had likewise been pleased to find throughout his year that so many brethren came, and gave such great attention to his working. It greatly encouraged a W.M., and he hoped that the same courtesy would be extended to his successor, and the successors of his successor. He also trusted that the brethren would continue to be as unanimous and happy as they had been hitherto, and with these few remarks he thanked the brethren from the bottom of his heart. Banquet followed; and the toasts were subsequently given; and Bro. Joseph Smith in replying as one of the Grand Officers, made a special reference to the working of the I.P.M., and his installing his successor. At one time, he said, there was scarcely a Master of a lodge or a Principal of a chapter who could install his successor. Now, however, it was astonishing to find a principal officer who could not do so. Bros. Cubitt and Adams also replied. Bro. Willing proposed "The Health of the W.M." Bro. Michael, in reply, observed that at present he had not done much for the credit of the lodge, and he could only promise that he would do. What he could do he would do. If his year of office should turn out to be as fortunate and happy a one as his predecessor's he should be pleased to retire into the ranks of the P.M.'s, as he would feel that he had had an unlimited reign of success. After again assuring the brethren that he would do everything in his power for the benefit of the Metropolitan Lodge he urged them to assist him to their utmost in that object, for without the aid of his officers a W.M. could not possibly do that amount of good which he desired. Bro. Michael then proposed "The Health of the I.P.M.," and presented him with a Masonic P.M.'s jewel voted by the lodge. He hoped that for many, many years he might live to wear it. The brethren, he was sure, while presenting this small testimonial, accompanied its presentation with their heartiest good wishes. On the jewel was an inscription showing that Bro. Willing was the first Master of the lodge, and those who knew anything of Freemasonry would bear him (the W.M.) out in saying that that represented a great deal more than any of them could possibly say in words. It represented much anxiety and care, and many of the greatest qualities that could be possessed by a brother. Bro. Willing responded, and acknowledged the gift with much warmth of expression. He had felt great pleasure in founding and being the first W.M. of the lodge, and all he had done was for his love of Freemasonry. His efforts in its behalf would not be relaxed in any way, and he should always take a pleasure in promoting the interests of the lodge of which he had been the W.M., and in which he had received so many kindnesses from the brethren over whom he had been called to rule. "The Visitors" was the next toast proposed by the W.M., but while expressing the great pleasure the lodge had in receiving visitors, the W.M. was compelled to make his speech very short on account of the advanced hour of the night. He made special allusion to the visit of the American brethren, and informed the lodge that American and English Freemasons speaking the same language were on identically the same platform. Bro. Geo. Everett, W.M. No. 177, was the first to respond, and knowing Bro. Willing in another sphere, he was able to supplement the W.M.'s observations by adding that Bro. Willing was a sincere and true friend. He could say this without flattery and in all sincerity, and he might be pardoned for saying with what pleasure he saw the tribute presented to him on that occasion. After some further complimentary remarks with respect to the I.P.M., Bro. Everett thanked the lodge for its hospitality. The lateness of the hour will preclude any extended remarks on my part. I can say in all sincerity, that it is with no ordinary degree of self-congratulation that we find ourselves surrounded by so many of the brethren of the mother country, and especially so as we have met with such munificent hospitality, and such warm and cordial greeting among you. Believe me, when I tell you, that warm is the heart that feels and willing the tongue that speaks, and yet I cannot, in an appropriate manner, express to you those feelings and emotions that come welling up from the deepest fountains of the heart, in response to the warm, cordial, and fraternal greeting which you have extended to us on every and all occasions. There is, indeed, a bond of union between brethren, however distant—there is a common tie that comes up unbidden from the deepest fountain of the heart, in response to those great and glorious principles of Freemasonry. And what are the great principles of Freemasonry? I answer, brotherly love, relief, and truth. By the exercise of brotherly love we are taught to regard the whole human species as one family. The high, the low, the rich, and the poor, as created by one common parent, and placed on the same theatre of action, are to support, aid, and protect each other. These, in connection with the three great theological virtues, namely, faith, hope, and charity, are the golden links of that chain which unite earth to heaven, man to God. The strongest ties of fraternal feeling should ever exist between Masons of the mother country and that of America. And, brethren, did we but realise in all its force the fact that we are indeed brothers, and with the feelings and emotions and impulses which should move a brother's heart, endeavour to promote each others welfare and best interest, this world of ours would soon present a spectacle of bliss that even angels might wish to come down to make and call their own. Freemasonry, in all its parts, is essentially an organisation of principles brought from the highest source of human reason and Divine revelation, which in their practical exhibition and moral influence are of untold value to the human family. Freemasonry looks from its throne of brightness, upon man, in all his natural and accumulated depravity regarding him in the light of a glorious future—not only as a social being connected by ties and impulses to his fellow man, but also as an immortal being, linked by nature and destiny with beings of a higher race, and a life that knows no ending. An institution invested with attributes of such glorious consequences, and in the plentitude of inherent power, tearing down the bulwarks of human misery and awakening up in the heart of man new thoughts, new hopes, and new desires, and telling him that he may not only be happy himself, but how to make others' happy, is a cause that must flourish; it is the cause of civilization, refinement, virtue, and human happiness. Wherever its empire has been established its reign has been marked with numberless blessings, and its votaries have much to rejoice in a cause which has already done so much, and is destined to accomplish still more for suffering humanity. In conclusion, allow me to offer as a sentiment, "The Brotherhood of the mother country and that of America—now and for ever, one and inseparable." The other toasts were given, and the brethren shortly afterwards separated.

THE ALEXANDRA PALACE LODGE (No. 1541).—The last meeting for the year of this new summer lodge, held last Saturday, looked like the opening meeting of a winter lodge, for the year's work had been prolonged into that season when the "woods decay and fall," and the uncompromising manner in which, to put it very gently, "the vapours wept their burthen to the ground," gave the Palace anything but a summer aspect. So wretched indeed was the day, that the general public, who are ever eager to take the most remote part in anything which concerns the army and navy, most sedulously stopped away from looking on the preparations for the Balaclava banquet, and the happiest and most numerous party in the building was that of the lodge named after the palace. It was again as on previous occasions, short of its head, Bro. Parkinson, the W.M., being, as on other occasions, absent, and his place was most efficiently filled by the Senior Warden, Bro. Kelly King, whose place in the S.W. chair was taken by Bro. Dyte, while Bro. Palmer occupied his own part as Junior Warden. Bro. Haigh was Senior Deacon. Bro. Lee, Junior Deacon, and Bro. Daniel, newly raised, tried his hand at Inner Guard, the lodge being determined to work its own members, and in the course of the long day's work, Bro. John Rowlands was called to the Senior Warden's chair, in the time that Bro. Dyte proceeded to fill the duties of his other office. Bro. Kelly King had the pleasing task of initiating "un frère de la plume," Mr. Senior, an author and journalist well-known, in the former capacity, to the reading public, but though only known in the latter, as is the fate of English journalists, to his brothers of the press, he has acquired a reputation as a man of mind and mark; and "Red Spinner" of the "Gentleman's Mag" found the door of the Craft open at his knock, and brethren of his Craft and favourite sport by the waterside welcome him within the portals. Then a habitat of Dr. Johnson's favourite street was admitted in the person of Mr. Alfred Arnold. The other work of the day, the passing of Bro. J. E. Ward, and the raising of Bros. Matthews and Denison, had to be handed over to Bro. P.M. Stacey, the Secretary, for the Master and Wardens were called by business relating to the Fourth Degree, into consultation with Messrs. Bertram and Roberts. The two ceremonies were rendered by Bro. Stacey in that faultless style as regards memory, and masterly manner so far as elocution is concerned, for which the brother is famous. It will be a point of honour among the young Masons of this lodge to "do the work as well as P.M. Stacey." After the working a letter was read from the brethren connected with the palace, who were to have joined the lodge and to have shared its early honours, expenses, and difficulties. It will be remembered that the lodge was started as one to be held on Saturday afternoon, its raison d'être being that it would offer Masonic life and light to that tribe which cannot call its time its own, especially during the time from Sunday night until Saturday morning—the tribe of London journalists. After the lodge was under way the palace authorities found they could not join a lodge on Saturday afternoon in summer, and they desired the day altered, and this was met by the lodge offering to give up the meetings in the midsummer and to meet in the spring and autumn months. This offer has not been accepted, and the letter read was in effect a withdrawal of the palace authorities from the working of the lodge. It fortunately happens that the lodge has never had the benefit of the presence thus formally withdrawn, and therefore practically the lodge sustains only a sentimental loss. At the dinner, which was well served by Messrs. Bertram and Roberts. Acting W.M., Kelly King, presided, supported by Bro. Rooke, P.G.S.; Bro. T. L. Fox, P.M. 19; Bro. A. Cameron, P.M. 180; J. While, W.M. 228; Brother Styles, Metropolitan; Brother Hallford, and Bro. Freeman. The usual loyal toasts were given with the accustomed fervour, and the Royal Grand Master's journey was the theme which found point for expressions of hope that His Royal Highness would return from his journey in safety and would accomplish the good which was anticipated from his visit. The W.M. then gave in appropriate terms "The Health of the two Initiates," whom he termed two worthy foundations of our great structure, both possessing the qualifications which were necessary to carry men through the Craft. Bro. Senior, in responding to the toast, which was most warmly received, said that as speechmaking was not one of his gifts he hoped the brethren would not measure his gratitude by his fewness of words. Though belonging to a profession which, by bringing its members behind the scenes, raised in their minds a cynicism regarding things which the world generally regarded with respect, he would say, speaking as a very young Apprentice, that what he had that day seen, the Masonic Craft raised in his mind very different feelings to those to which he had alluded, and he felt that if he could only act up to what had been imparted to him that day, he should want no other religion to fit him for the next world. He concluded by thanking the brethren for the honour they had done him by electing him a member of the Craft, and then Bro. Arnold made a suitable response. Bro. Rooke then proposed "The Health of Bro. King," and the brethren gave the toast the warmest reception in recognition of the service which he has done by taking the place, time after time, of the absent Master. The W.M. then proposed "The Health of the Visitors," all of whom responded in brief terms, for the warning had come that the brethren must prepare to retire, as the last train from the palace at that late hour—it being a little after eight o'clock—was about to depart. The toast of "The Officers," was coupled with the names of the Senior and Junior Wardens, these posts being filled at the banquet table by Bros. Palmer and Haigh, and justice in speech was done to Bros. Stacy, Dyte, Lee, and the other active brethren of the lodge. Then the party hastened away to find that the last Palace train had gone, and they had to tramp through the dark dark grounds to Wood Green Station, where they caught the something after nine o'clock train, which landed them at Finsbury Park. Here they had to wait in the damp for some time until a train came to carry them on to King's Cross. Some of the lodge being of the class who make Ludgate their point of journey, had booked from there, and struggled to return to this centre, which they did after nearly two hours travel and stoppages, most of them astonished at the ease with which the combined railways manage to carry passengers the six miles to or from this hapless undertaking in the course of nearly two hours.

PROVINCIAL.

WOOLWICH.—Union Waterloo (No. 13).—The above lodge held its usual monthly meeting on Wednesday, the 13th Oct., at the Masonic Hall, William-street, and we were rather sorry to see so few of the officers present. Bro. F. G. Pownall, the S.W., was unfortunately too ill to attend, and his place was most ably filled by Bro. G. W. Reed. Bro. T. J. Carnelly, the W.M., was at his post, and the following brethren filled the several offices:—R. H. Smith, J.W.; T. Hutton, S.D.; H. Russell, J.D.; N. Brown, I.G.; J. Henderson, P.M. and Treas.; H. S. Syer, Sec.; and N. Norman, Tyler. The visitors included Bros. H. Carlin, 1536; J. Dallen, 640; J. A. Elder, 1472; G. Green, 1076; and C. Jolly, 913. The lodge having been duly opened, and with solemn prayer, Mr. E. W. Crews was, after ballot and approval, regularly initiated into Freemasonry; and Bros. Cleall, Archer, and Matty were raised to the Sublime Degree, the whole of the work being most impressively done by the W.M. The lodge was then closed, and the brethren adjourned to Bro. De Grey's, Freemasons' Tavern, opposite the dockyard station, for refreshment, where, after the usual loyal and Masonic toasts, Bro. G. Davis, P.M., in eloquent terms proposed the health of the W.M., who responded in a most feeling manner, and in proposing "The Officers of the Lodge," regretted most sincerely the absence of Bro. Pownall, who, he said, was a most excellent officer and worthy Mason. The "Initiates" health followed, and Bro. C. Jolly's name was warmly received as coupled with the "Visitors," and then, after a most cordial and harmonious evening, the brethren separated.

CONGLETON.—Eaton Lodge (No. 533).—On Wednesday, 13th inst., the brethren of the above lodge celebrated their festival of St. John the Baptist, when Bro. Andreas Edward Cokayne was installed as W.M. The installation ceremony was very correctly and admirably performed by the retiring Master, Bro. Samuel Blackshaw, who had occupied the chair for two years, the address to the Master, to the Wardens, and to the brethren being given by Bro. W. Blackshaw, P.M., Sec. The attendance was larger than on any former occasion, and the event passed off with every success, and the utmost harmony and heartiness prevailed. Bro. Cokayne was already a Past Master of the lodge, having filled that office a few years ago. He appointed his officers as follows:—Bros. Terry, S.W.; Henry Clarke, J.W.; Furnival, S.D.; John Brown, J.D.; E. B. Fraunceys, I.G.; Chadlock, O.G.; Beales, P.P.J.G.W. Cheshire, Treas.; and W. Blackshaw, P.M., Sec. The brethren, to the number of forty, afterwards banqueted at the Bull's Head Hotel (where the lodge is held) under the presidency of the W.M. Among the visiting brethren were members of lodges in Cheshire, Lancashire, Staffordshire, and Shropshire.

TOTNES.—Pleiades Lodge (No. 710).—The monthly meeting of this lodge was held on Thursday, the 14th day of October.—Bro. William Bennett Mayo, W.M., in the chair. Numerous visiting brethren were present. After the minutes of the previous lodge were confirmed, the principal business of the day was proceeded with, viz., that of installing Bro. James Westhead into the chair of K.S. for the ensuing year. The ceremony was ably performed by Bro. Rev. Robert Bowden, P.M. The Board of Installed Masters was dissolved, and the brethren admitted, the W.M. being proclaimed and saluted in the usual form. The officers for the ensuing year were then appointed, viz., Bros. Robert Drennan, S.W.; Edward Seale, J.W.; William Cuming, P.M., Sec.; Thomas Mitchelmore, S.D.; George Cheers Challoner, J.D.; Richard James Steward, I.G.; William Henry Taylor, Org.; Thomas Luscombe was invested as Treasurer; John Crocker was unanimously re-elected Tyler, and duly invested. The remaining business was adjourned to the next meeting. Heartly good wishes were tendered by the representatives of various lodges. The lodge was then closed in ancient form and with solemn prayer. The brethren then retired to the Seven Stars Hotel, where an excellent banquet was served by Bro. John Heath, P.M. The usual toasts were duly proposed and honoured, and altogether a most enjoyable evening was spent.

DEAL.—Wellington Lodge (No. 784).—The usual monthly meeting of the above lodge was held at the Public Rooms, Park-street, Deal, on Thursday, the 14th inst., when the following brethren were present:—John E. Apps, W.M.; A. F. S. Bird, P.M., S.W. pro tem; A. E. Ralph, P.M. and P.G.D., J.W. pro tem; J. M. Browning, P.M.; T. E. Mason, P.M.; W. Harding, P.M.; W. M. Cavell, Secretary; W. H. Hayman, S.D.; F. Fitch, J.D.; S. Olds, Steward; J. C. Doorne, Org.; T. Stubbs, I.G.; and W. J. A. Norris, Tyler. There were also present Bros. Woodward, Moon, and Robert Brown, and the following visitors:—Bro. Henry S. Watts, J.W. of the Cinque Ports Lodge, No. 1206, introduced by Bro. Bird, P.M.; and Bro. T. Lawler, Organist of the West Kent Lodge, No. 1297, introduced by Bro. Hayman. The lodge opened in due form in the First Degree. Mr. W. S. Thornton, of Deal, was balloted for, and, being unanimously elected, was initiated into the sacred mysteries of the Craft. Our correspondent who kindly furnishes the above adds that the Wellington Lodge is, in truth, an ornament to the Craft, the several duties, from the W.M. down to the Tyler, being carried out with far greater precision and perfection than that which is occasionally met with at lodges in the metropolis and its environs.

GREAT GRIMSBY.—Pelham Pillar Lodge (No. 792).—Although the day was exceedingly unpropitious there was a very strong muster of the brethren of Pelham Pillar and from other lodges within the province, and several brethren from Yorkshire also honoured the old Pelham Pillar by their presence. The Provincial Grand Officers present were Bros. Major Smyth, D.P.G.M.; John Sutcliffe, P. Prov. G.S.W.; Capt. E. Locock, P. Prov. G.S.W.; Rev. J. E. Hodgson, P. Prov. G. Chaplain; Anderson Bates, P. Prov. G.D.C.; W. W. Copeland, P. Prov. G.S.D.; J. Hadfield, P. Prov. G.J.D.; J. Harriss, P. Prov. G.J.D.; W. G. Mure, P. Prov. G. Reg.; R. M. Vivien, P. Prov. G.S.D., Yorkshire; M. Kemp, P. Prov. G.J.D., Yorkshire; J. S. Wilson, P. Prov. G.S.W., Yorkshire; Jack Sutcliffe, W.M., St. Alban's Lodge; Fryer, W.M., Ancholme Lodge; S. Walsley, P.M.; Ashton, W.M. elect. St. Matthew's; Sissons, J. Chapman, Porlett, Nelson, Haddelsey, Brown, Hunt, and about 40 brethren of Pelham Pillar Lodge. The brethren having assembled at the Masonic Hall, in Bull Ring Lodge, Bro. Marshall opened his lodge in due form, when he at once presented to the Installing Master Bro. Copeland for installation, the W.M. elect, Bro. Robinson, and Bro. Copeland as Installing Master, performing the ceremony in a most masterly and impressive manner. Bro. Robinson then invested his officers, addressing each in appropriate terms:—Bros. Marshall, I.P.M.; Gough, S.W.; McSheen, J.W.; Hump, P.M., P. Prov. G.J.D. Chaplain; Bates, P.M., P. Prov. G.D.C. Sec., Master; Dawson, Treas.; Clark, Sec.; Fox, S.D.; Teasdale, J.D.; Roberts, D.C.; Steffense, Almoner; Bramme, Org.; Tongue, Steward; Bruton and Dawson, Assist. Stewards; Wardle, Tyler. Bro. Robinson, the newly Installed W.M., then returned thanks to the brethren of the Pelham Pillar Lodge, saying: I cannot allow the present opportunity to pass without thanking the brethren of my mother lodge very heartily for the honour conferred upon me, the more to be appreciated being the highest honour that you, brethren, can bestow, that of electing me to fill the chair of this prosperous lodge, and I depend upon every officer of the lodge to support me at all times on this to me most important question. I take this opportunity of announcing that the lodge will be opened exactly at the stated time. I feel assured that my newly-appointed officers will be regular and punctual in their attendance. Bro. Robinson then proposed a vote of thanks to Bro. Copeland for the invaluable services rendered to the P.P. Lodge year after year as its Installing Master. Bro. Robinson remarked that he was individually under marked obligations to him for having performed the ceremony placing him in such a distinguished and coveted position as W.M. of that lodge. Bro. Robinson then thanked the W.M., the D.P.G.M., and the many distinguished brethren for their presence on that occasion. He considered it a very high compliment paid to his mother lodge, the Pelham Pillar. The D.P.G.M., Major Smyth, remarked that it gave him extreme pleasure to be present. The rendering of the installation ceremony by Bro. Copeland was certainly beyond anything that he had heard in the province, and although Bro. Copeland's feelings overcame him, we all knew well the cause—he was thinking of the recent loss sustained by the sudden death of a brother of that lodge. The lodge was then closed, and the brethren adjourned to the St. Alban's Lodge, at the Royal Hotel, under the able direction of Bro. Jack Sutcliffe as W.M. After which a sumptuous banquet was partaken of by all the brethren at the Royal Hotel. Bro. Robinson, as presiding officer, proposed "The Queen," remarking that under our present constitution we were the freest, happiest, and most prosperous nation on the face of the earth. The prerogatives of the Crown were never more judiciously exercised than by our present Sovereign and Lady Queen Victoria. As the Sovereign, the wife, the mother, she had justly earned the loyal devotion, affection, and respect of the people. "Prince of Wales, G.M. of England, Princess of Wales, and rest of the Royal Family," Bro. Robinson said, We cannot do otherwise than entertain a deep sense of the importance of H.R.H.'s visit to India. It must tend to strengthen the cordial feelings that already exist between India and this great country. It must also strengthen the hand of the Queen's representative in that vast empire. H.R.H.'s visit to India must be of much benefit to him as our Heir Apparent; the experience he will gain will not benefit him alone, but also this seagirt isle of ours as well. It is natural that there should be much anxious care for the Prince by the subjects of Her Majesty, and no small amount of solicitude as to the Prince's safety by his brother Masons. We wish him on the present occasion a pleasant voyage and safe return to old England. "Our Masonic Heads." The Earl of Carnarvon, the [Pro G.M., and Lord Skelmersdale, our D.G. Master, being quite unknown to me, I must be particularly guarded in what I say. I can, however, state, brethren, that they have been placed in that most distinguished position because they were found "true and trusty." This recommendation is all-sufficient. We are proud to tender our allegiance to our Masonic heads. Bro. Robinson next proposed "The R.W. His Grace the Duke of St. Albans, P.G.M., and his Deputy, our much respected bro. the W. Major Smyth, the D.P.G. Master." We come nearer home now, brethren, when we speak of Provincial Masonic heads. We should certainly like to see our P.G. Master, my lord duke, amongst us a little more frequently. We all must and do admit that we have in our D.P.G. Master, Major Smyth, a very intelligent and able substitute. I have every brother present with me when I say that a more affable, agreeable, and obliging brother could not be found to fill that post than our worthy and much esteemed Bro. Smyth, and the Province would never suffer as long as we had such a brother to rule over the Craft. The D.P.G. Master, Major Smyth, in rising to respond was received with much applause. He remarked that he was much pleased to be with them that evening. He had spent a very agreeable day, having, in his capacity as D.P.G.M., visited two lodges, and he must say that the work in each had been performed admirably. The D.P.G. Master had the permission of the W.M., Bro. Robinson to propose a toast for their acceptance not on the list; it was "The Masonic Hall Company." They had had ocular demonstration that day that the hall now occupied by the lodge was not sufficiently capacious. Bro. Hadfield responded. Bro. Robinson next proposed Bro. Marshall, I.P.M. of P.P.L. In bringing this toast before your notice, and for your acceptance as the toast of the evening, Bro. Marshall will pardon me if I attempt during his presence to pay him a just and deserving compliment, I claim to be however, the mouthpiece of the brethren of Pelham Lodge, when I state that as superintending officer of the lodge he performed his duties in a most able and efficient manner, having faithfully, zealously, and impartially performed the duties that devolved upon him, and thereby gained the esteem of every brother of the lodge. Bro. Marshall I.P.M., proposed "The Health of the newly instituted W.M., Bro. Robinson," remarking that he (Bro. Robinson) had paid him a very flattering compliment; he had only done his duty, and to the best of his ability, and I feel assured that our W.M. will do even better than I have done. "The Past Officers and Newly-appointed Officers" were next proposed by Bro. Marshall, and suitably responded to by Bro. Smyth, S.W. Bro. Chapman next proposed "The Health of the Installed Master," paying a very high compliment to Bro. Copeland for the masterly style of rendering the installation ceremony. Bro. Copeland responded and acknowledged the compliment paid him, further stating it was a pleasure to him to do anything to further the interests of the Craft. Bro. Vinan (Hull) next proposed "The Health of the W.M. of St. Anne's Lodge, Bro. Jack Sutcliffe." He was very pleased indeed to bear testimony to his worth; like his father, his heart was in the right place, and he must in time become, like his father, a prominent and shining star in Masonry. Several more toasts were circulated, "The Masonic Charities," Visiting Brethren," Seafaring Brethren," "All Poor and Distressed Masons," "Bro. Clark, Sec. P.P. Lodge," "Bro. Dawson, Treasurer," "Wardens and Officers St. Albans Lodge," W.M. Sutcliffe Lodge M.M. Masons," "Host and Hostess," and "The Ladies." After a very agreeable evening had been passed the brethren journeyed homewards.

LEOMINSTER.—Royal Edward Lodge (No. 892).—The following address to the widow of Bro. Bradford was received too late for insertion in our report last week:—

To Mrs. Bradford,—

We the undersigned officers, on behalf of the members of the Royal Edward Lodge, hereby desire to assure you of our most sincere sympathy in the loss occasioned by the death of your beloved husband and our affectionate brother.

He with us had learnt that, where we [at his burial placed a sprig of acacia, must not be considered his final resting-place, so we hope that you, with us, will think of him now as having received the "crown of life."

"Death is the Crown of life."

"Death, the deliverer, who rescues man."

"Death, the rewarder, who the rescued crowns."

"Death, that absolves our birth, a curse without it."

"Death wounds to cure, we fall, we rise, we reign."

"Death gives us more than was in Eden lost."

"This King of Terrors is the Prince of Peace."

"When shall we die? When shall we live for ever?"

Please accept our condolence and believe us to remain, yours very faithfully, M. I. Ellwood, W.M.; E. Gregg, S.W.; R. Hayes, J.W.; C. I. Saxby, S.W.

LIVERPOOL.—Temple Lodge (No. 1094).—The usual meeting of this lodge was held on the 13th inst., the business being of a highly interesting kind. The lodge was opened at six o'clock by Bro. R. C. Yelland, W.M., and amongst others present during the evening were Bros. Richard Washington, P.M.; Richard R. Martin, P.M.; D. W. Winstanley, P.M.; Wm. Healing, S.W.; Alfred Jarvis, J.W.; Jos. Wood, Treas.; Thos. Marsh, P.M., P.P.G.A.D.C.; Sec.; T. G. Winstanley, S.D.; W. B. Jones, as I.G.; T. Birch, Steward; John Alexander, Thos. Knott, M. G. Balemam, Jas. Tyson, T. Durrans, W. Callow, J. R. Cave, W. Harrington, Fred. J. Jeffery, H. Horspool, J. G. H. Pugh, G. B. McGachen, &c. The visitors were Bros. H. Prince Hiram, New Orleans, U.S., 70; A. K. Paynter, 1276; W. Davidson, 1276; E. Morgan, 823; J. Curtis, 1035; Wm. Waring, 32; &c. The minutes of the previous meeting were read and confirmed, and the ballot having been taken for candidates the ceremony of initiation was admirably performed by the W.M., the charge being beautifully given by the S.W. Several propositions were afterwards given for initiation. At the banquet, which followed business, the usual loyal and Masonic toasts were given and responded to. In reply to the toast of "The Newly Initiated," Bro. the Rev. Dr. Lowe spoke as follows:—Worshipful Master, Officers, and brethren—Although I cannot aver that I am unaccustomed to public speaking, yet I experience considerable difficulty in giving expression to my thoughts and feelings on the present occasion. It behoves me, however, according to the best of my ability, to tender my most hearty thanks to the Worshipful Master, officers, and brethren for the extremely kind manner in which they have this evening initiated me into the primary mysteries of Freemasonry and for the manifestly cordial welcome they have accorded me as a brother. I owe especial thanks to the brother whose rather troublesome duty it was to aid me in attaining the high honours of being a Mason. I beg also to tender my fervent thanks to Bro. Dr. Kellet Smith and Bro. Wood, who rendered me the kind office of being my proposer and seconder. Allow me to say, Worshipful Master, that, after having gone through the laborious and instructive ceremony of being made a Mason, I feel exceedingly proud of the honours thus conferred on me. In addition to, or rather in expansion of, the reasons I have already been obliged to give for desiring to join this illustrious and ancient Order, I may say that I have an intense love for everything which is good and has been handed down to us from the remote past. Ever since my boyhood, my intellectual pursuits as well as my professional duties have caused me to live much amongst the ancients; and it would be strange if the ambition had not sprung up in my heart of being, even in a humble way, identified with a Craft which the ceremonies of this evening compel me to regard as one of the most precious legacies bequeathed to modern times by antiquity. I was, also, attracted to the Order by its well-known cultivation, and manifestation of the splendid principles of brotherly love and charity, and by the fact that its creed, though stern in its requirements, is at the same time so pure and simple as to present a ground on which all virtue-loving men may meet and clasp each other's hands in a world-wide fellowship. Besides, although I live a somewhat retired and monkish life, I sought, in desiring to be one of the brethren of this great Order and a member of the Temple Lodge, occasional opportunities of mingling in such a society as this, possessing, as it does, at once a social and an intellectual character. I am glad to find myself surrounded by a body of men whose countenances bear the impress of high intellectuality. I love a warm grasp of the hand, a good laugh, and a good song, although, in this last regard, I cannot myself contribute to harmony. In fine, Worshipful Master, officers, and brethren, I thank you for the honour to which you have raised me. I feel that, in being made a Mason, I have achieved a most desirable and honourable distinction; and I shall strive with your generous aid to be a good Mason. I am always seeking opportunities of adding to my knowledge; and you will allow that, if Mr. Charles Knight had seen me this evening, he might have included me among those heroes of whom he has so ably written, and who distinguished themselves by the "pursuit of knowledge under difficulties." The scope of my knowledge has this evening been greatly increased; and I am especially rejoiced to know that he who is a good Mason must of necessity be a true man. The proceedings terminated at an early hour.

MELTON MOWBRAY.—Rutland Lodge (No. 1130).—The regular monthly meeting of this lodge was held on the 14th inst., Bro. S. Weaver, the W.M., in the chair. The attendance was small, there being nothing of any importance on the agenda paper. Bro. John Selby was elected P.G.S.

SEACOMBE.—Warren Lodge (No. 1276).—The regular meeting of this lodge was held on Tuesday, the 19th inst., at five o'clock, for the installation of Bro. James Ridehalgh, the W.M. elect. The following brethren were present, viz., Bros. W. R. Bainbridge, W.M. and P.M. 721; T. H. Ward, I.P.M.; R. W. Holt, P.M. and D.C.; J. P. Platt, P.P.G.J. Warden; T. Platt, P.P.G.J.D.; R. C. Mellor, P.P.G.I.G. North Wales and Salop; E. Haddon, W.M. 605; J. Radcliff, P.M.; C. Leedham, P.M.; Ellis Davis, P.M. 605; John Williams, J.W.; H. Skinner, S. Deacon, J. Lawrence, J.D.; W. H. Frances, Treas.; W. Jones, Sec.; T. M. Pennington, J. Harding, A. Paynter, W. Davidson, J. Webster, H. Matthews, J. Howard, J. Taylor, Wm. Price, G. Monroe, M. Ellaby, J. Burgess, A. Caterall, J. Manson, W. Evans, J. Looney, J. M'Murdie, T. Yeats, J. Hindley, E. G. E. Snow, W. Williams, G. Henderson, A. M'Kay, T. Burrows, J. Martin,

W. McGraa, E. A. Pemberton, W. Beard, 447; M. Mc Nerney, 605; W. Egerton, 605; T. Birch, 1094; J. Alexander, 1904; E. Harris, 605; Henry Ridehalgh, and a large number of other brethren. The lodge was opened. The minutes of last regular meeting, also a lodge of emergency, were read and confirmed. Bro. G. J. Kani, 31, U.S. of America, was balloted for and admitted a joining member. The lodge was then opened in the Second Degree, and the business of the evening was then proceeded with by Bro. James Ridehalgh being presented to Bro. Platt, the Installing Master. The charges having been read and assented to, the lodge was opened in the Third Degree, when all brethren not Installed Masters retired, and a board of Installed Masters was formed, consisting of twelve, and the usual formalities gone through. The brethren having been admitted, and the new Master saluted in the manner conformable to ancient custom, Bro. Ridehalgh, the W.M., invested his officers as follows:—Bros. W. R. Bainbridge, I.P.M.; John Taylor, S.W.; W. Jones, J.W.; W. H. Frances, Treas.; H. Skinner, Sec.; W. Price, S.D.; T. Yeats, J.D.; J. S. Jones, P.M.; D.C.; H. Matthews, S.S.; J. Looney, J.S.; each brother receiving their charge from Bro. J. P. Platt, after which the lodge was closed, down to the First Degree, when Bro. P.M. Holt moved that the sum of five guineas be given to constitute the Treasurer for the time being a Life Governor of the Cheshire M.E. Institution, which was carried. Bro. Bainbridge gave notice of motion that the sum of ten guineas be given to constitute the W.M. for the time being a Life Governor of the Boys' School in London. Several propositions for initiation having been given, the lodge was duly closed, and the brethren adjourned to the Seacombe Hotel to the banquet, the W.M., Bro. Ridehalgh, being supported on his right by Bro. J. T. Lea, P.M., P.P.G.S. Works, as D.C.; J. P. Platt, P.P.G.J.W.; T. Platt, P.P.J.G.D.; Haddon, W.M. 605; on his left by W. R. Bainbridge, I.P.M.; T. H. Ward, P.M.; R. W. Holt, P.M.; Ellis Davis, P.M. When the dessert was placed upon the tables, and, grace said, the W.M. proposed "The Health of Her Majesty the Queen, and the Craft," which was received right loyally. (God save the Queen). The next toast was "Bro. Albert Edward, Prince of Wales, M.W.G. Master, the Princess of Wales, and the rest of the Royal Family." ("God bless the Prince of Wales," by Bro. Harding.) The W.M. then gave "The Right Hon. the Earl of Carnarvon, M.W. Pro. G. Master," which was duly honoured. The next toast was "The Right Worshipful P.G. Master, the Right Hon. the Lord de Tabley, and the P.G. Officers," coupling the name of Bro. T. Platt. Bro. T. Platt, appropriately replied. Bro. W. R. Bainbridge, the Immediate P.M., then proposed "The Health of the W.M., Bro. Ridehalgh," and stated that if the officers appointed that evening gave him that support which he expected he would receive, the lodge would soon be second to none in the province for its usefulness. Bro. Williams rendered a capital song. Bro. Ridehalgh, in responding, sincerely thanked the I.P.M. for proposing his health, and also the brethren for the flattering manner in which they had received it, assuring them that it would be his earnest study to promote the welfare of the Warren Lodge. The W.M. then said,—Brethren, you know the toast I am about to propose, it is, "The I.P.M.," and you will, I think, drink his health in a bumper, previous to which I beg to present to you, Bro. Bainbridge, this gold hunting watch, the committee thinking, you having so many jewels, that it would be more acceptable to you. The inscription is "Presented to Bro. W. R. Bainbridge, P.M. 721, and Warren Lodge, 1276, for his meritorious services during his year of office as W.M., 1875." Bro. John Williams, P.J.W., then advanced to the W.M., and asked his permission to present a testimonial, and said,—Bro. Bainbridge, I.P.M., on behalf of a few friends, and the seafaring members of this lodge, I present you with this P. Master's jewel. This called forth a ringing cheer from the brethren. (The jewel is 18-carat gold, set with diamonds, beautifully made by Bro. T. M. Pennington, a member of the lodge). Song by Bro. Paynter. Bro. Bainbridge said he must confess that if ever he had a difficulty he had one now in finding words to sufficiently express his feelings at that moment. He thanked the brethren of the Warren Lodge for their very handsome present. He then said,—Bro. J. Williams, please accept my heartfelt thanks, and convey them to the seafaring brethren, and tell them while I live I shall value this gift more than any I possess. Brethren all, please accept my sincere thanks. The W.M. then said,—I have another pleasing duty to perform. It is to present our Treasurer, Bro. Frances, with a gold Treasurer's jewel, also his likeness, and he hoped that Bro. Francis might live long to wear this jewel (supplied by Bro. Kenning, of Liverpool and London). Bro. Frances then said,—W.M., Officers, and brethren,—I thank you very much for this mark of esteem. You appointed me Treasurer of this lodge, and I merely did my duty. I may tell you that we have had a very prosperous year, though an expensive one. We have given between £20 and £30 in charity; we commenced the year with £20, and at the end of the year we have in hand over £80 pounds. This announcement was heartily received. The W.M. then proposed "Success to the Cheshire Educational Masonic Institution," and he had very great pleasure in coupling the Installing Master and Founder of the Institution, Bro. John Parry Platt, P.P.J.G.W. Cheshire. Bro. Platt thanked the W.M., officers, and brethren for the way this toast was received, and stated that it was very pleasing to him to hear that the Treasurer was made a Life Governor of the Institution, and to hear Bro. W. R. Bainbridge give notice that he would propose that the sum of ten guineas be given to constitute the W.M. for the time being a Life Governor of the Boys' School. He also begged to thank the brethren for unanimously electing him an honorary member of this lodge, that he would be glad at all times to give advice should it be required, and he strongly recommended the W.M. to be particular in looking into the character of all candidates for initiation. The next toast was "The Past Masters of the Lodge," which was responded to by Bros. Holt, Ward, and Bainbridge. The officers were then toasted, each responding for the compliment. The W.M. then gave "The Health of the Visiting Brethren," coupling the names of Bro. Haddon, W.M. 605, and Bro. E. Davis, P.M. 605. During the evening Bro. Bainbridge presented, handsomely framed, the likeness of the R.W.P.G.M., the Right Hon. the Lord de Tabley, which he received from his lordship at the meeting of the Provincial Grand Lodge at Hyde, September 23, at which meeting Bro. Bainbridge was supported by nineteen members of the lodge. We must not omit a word of praise for the admirable manner in which the duties were discharged by Bro. Looney, the wine Steward. The Tyler then gave the final toast, to all poor and distressed Masons. The evening was spent very pleasantly, and the enjoyment of the brethren was enhanced by the excellent manner in which Bro. Lea, P.P.G.S. Wks., discharged the duties of Director of Ceremonies, and the excellent harmony during the evening.

HAMPTON COURT.—Burdett Lodge (No. 1293).—The Mitre Hotel, at Hampton Court, on Saturday last, the 23rd inst., was the scene of a most enjoyable meeting of this lodge. The brethren, including Colonel Burdett, Prov. G. Master F. Keily, Prov. G. Steward; the W.M.; D. W. Pearce, S.W.; J. W. Burrie, J.W.; Little, Prov. S.G. Warden, Treas.; Buss, Prov. G. Treas., Sec.; Mallam, P.M.; Woollard, Levick, Brookes, Ball, Sanders, Dr. Clayton, Palmer, and others, assembled at an early hour in the afternoon. The summons showed a goodly quantity of work to be done, but from various causes the candidates for the several degrees were unable to attend, and sent letters explaining the cause of their absence. The lodge, consequently, at once proceeded to the election of officers for the ensuing year, and Bro. D. W. Pearce was elected Master, Bro. Little was re-elected Treasurer, and Bro. Gilbert, Tyler. Bro. Phythian, the I.P.M., then proposed, and Bro. Little seconded, a motion to the effect that a P.M. jewel should be presented to Bro. Keily, the retiring Master, and also as a small token of the esteem and regard in which he was held, and in appreciation of his services as Master and Prov. G. Steward, such jewel should be supplemented by a presentation of one of Bro. Harty's pictures, which is shortly to be published, illustrating the installation of His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales as M.W. Grand Master at the Royal Albert Hall on the 28th of April last. This resolution was most heartily concurred in by every member of the lodge, and several of the brethren spoke of the W.M. in the most eulogistic terms. Bro. Keily expressed his thanks for the honour the lodge conferred upon him, of which he should ever retain a lively remembrance, and also his grateful acknowledgments for the very flattering manner in which the brethren had been pleased to speak of his services as W.M. The lodge having been closed, the brethren retired to the banquet supplied by our esteemed friend Bro. Charles Sadler, after which the usual loyal and Masonic toasts were given, and responded to in a hearty manner. The Provincial Grand Master, in reply to the toast of his health, alluded, in glowing terms of satisfaction, to the present prosperous state of the Province of Middlesex, and to the good order and regularity with which the affairs of the different lodges and chapters in the province were conducted, and expressed the pleasure he felt in being again amongst his brethren after a short sojourn in the North. He referred to the gratification he felt in witnessing the prosperity of the Burdett Lodge, of which he was the first W.M., and also of the admirable and unanimous manner in which the business of the lodge had been conducted by the W.M. and officers. Amongst the visitors on this occasion were Bros. Chas. Horsley, Past Provincial Grand Registrar Middlesex; Sugg, Provincial Grand Organist for Surrey; Thicellay, Provincial Grand Pursuivant Middlesex, who, in responding to "The Health of the Visitors," severally expressed their thanks, and their acknowledgement of the pleasurable evening they had spent on this occasion. The last toast having been given in due form, and responded to, the brethren separated at an early hour, evidently much pleased with the proceedings.

NORTH WOOLWICH.—Henley Lodge (No. 1472).—An emergency meeting of this lodge was held on Friday, October 15th, at Bro. West's, the Three Crowns, in place of the usual monthly one on the 4th, Mrs. West having died on that day, and therefore rendered it impossible that any business could be done under such sorrowful circumstances. Upon the present occasion the W.M., Bro. B. B. Brayshaw, P.M. 1076, was present, supported by the following officers: Bros. Turner, who officiated as S.W. in the unavoidable absence of Bro. J. Ives; W. Steele, J.W.; J. Silver, S.D.; N. Stansfield, acting J.D.; Manning, I.G.; and H. Sisley, P.M. and Sec., and P.M. 1076. The business before the lodge was the raising of Bro. Berry, and the passing of Bro. Fletcher, but as neither of those brethren were present, Mr. J. Plume, licensed victualler, and Mr. G. Cavey, engineer, were, after being duly balloted for and approved of, initiated by the W.M. in excellent style. The lodge then closed, and the brethren adjourned to a cold collation in an adjoining room, and afterwards, in true Masonic spirit, spent a very happy evening together.

LIVERPOOL.—Lodge of Israel (No. 1502).—The usual monthly meeting of this new and flourishing lodge was held at the Masonic Hall, Hope-street, Liverpool, on Monday week. This being the night appointed for the election of W.M. and Treasurer, a full attendance of members were present. Amongst them were Bros. R. Robinson, W.M.; M. De Frece, S.W.; A. J. Henochsberg, J.W.; Rev. P. Prag, Chaplain; J. De Frece, Treas.; M. Hart, Sec.; A. Jones, S.D.; S. Schoustadt, J.D.; B. Woolf, I.G.; W. G. Veale, Org.; Crozier, and A. Hart, Stewards. Amongst the private members were Bros. R. Brown, W.M. 141, Hon. Sec. West Lancashire Educational Institution; B. Levy, Silver, Goldberg, Lyons, Lumb, L. Hart, W. Levy, Joseph, Rev. Dr. Stern, Prensland, S. Levy, and others. Among the numerous visitors might be noticed Bros. Bell, W.M. 1356; W. Aronsberg, 1052; Manchester, who is justly and worthily known by his many charitable gifts of surgical, optical, and mathematical instruments to the principal infirmaries and institutions in East Lancashire; Barnett, S. 249; Goldstone, 249; Parker, 1474; Trevitt, I.G. 724, and others. After the usual opening, reading of the minutes and balloting for candidates, the W.M., Bro. Robinson, P.M. and Preceptor of the Merchants' Lodge of Instruction, initiated in his usually instructive manner Mr. A. Cohen, Mr. J. L. Levy, and Rev. A. D. Marks, Minister of the South Manchester Synagogue, the other officers doing their work in an efficient manner. The ballot was then taken for W.M. for the ensuing year, when Bro. A. J. Henochberg, J.W., was unanimously elected to fill the chair; the S.W. declining to accept the office on account of his continued ill health. Bro. J. De Frece was unanimously re-elected Treasurer, a post he has filled during the past year to the extreme satisfaction of officers and brethren. Auditors were then elected, and also the Committee and Trustees to the Benevolent Fund attached to the lodge. We believe this is the first lodge in the Province of West Lancashire that has attached a Fund of Benevolence, to enable its members' widows and orphans to receive substantial relief in cases of necessity, and it is to be hoped this good example will be emulated by other lodges in this province. Bro. W. G. Veale was then unanimously re-elected Organist. The W.M. having temporarily left the chair, it was taken by Bro. Brown, W.M. 241, when it was proposed, seconded, and carried without dissent, that a testimonial be presented to Bro. R. Robinson, W.M., the first Master of the Lodge of Israel, 1502, as a mark of esteem for his courtesy, his ability, and the faithful manner he has performed the arduous duties of Worshipful Master. Several brethren having been proposed for joining, relief having been granted to a deserving case, and other business of a formal character having been transacted the lodge was closed in the usual solemn form.

INSTRUCTION.

STRONG MAN LODGE OF INSTRUCTION (No. 45).—At a meeting of this Lodge of Instruction, held at Old Jerusalem Tavern, St. John's-gate, Clerkenwell, on Monday, 25th October, 1875, there were present—Bros. Stock, W.M.; Percy, S.W.; Tolmie, J.W.; Kidder, S.D.; Crawley, J.D.; Hill, I.G.; Christopher, Tyler; Beckett, Preceptor; Killick, Hon. Sec. Visitors—Bros. Powell, 186; Hall, 898; Mitchell, 1360, and a large muster of the members. The Ceremony of Initiation was rehearsed, Bro. Walker being the candidate. The W.M. worked the 1st, 2nd, and 3rd sections, and Bro. Beckett, the 4th of the first lecture, ably assisted by the brethren. Bro. Mitchell, 1360, was unanimously elected a member, and Bro. Tolmie, W.M. for the ensuing week, under whose presidency the fifteen sections will be worked.

PYTHAGOREAN CHAPTER (No. 79).—The regular convocation of this young but prosperous chapter was held at the Ship Hotel, Greenwich, on Thursday, the 21st inst. The M.E.Z., being unavoidably absent, Companion Griffin, P.Z., occupied the post of honour, supported by Comp. Halsey, P.Z., as H., and Comp. Leman, P.Z., as J. There were also present Comps. W. West Smith, P.Z. acting Scribe E.; I. J. Hooper Wilkins, Scribe N.; Dussek, acting P.S., and other companions. The chapter having been duly opened, and the companions admitted, a letter of apology was read from the candidate for exaltation, explaining the cause of his non-attendance, and letters were also read from the officers not present, in which the absence of each was respectively accounted for. Another letter was read from the widow of Comp. Wilson, announcing the death of her husband, an announcement which was received with great regret, as Comp. Wilson, though not absolutely one of the founders of the chapter, was very active in its promotion, was present at its consecration, and made a very handsome present towards its furniture. The Scribe E. was ordered to write to Mrs. Wilson, expressing the regret manifested by the chapter at the melancholy intelligence. There being no further business, the lodge was closed in ancient form, and after a fraternal "good-bye," the companions went their several ways rejoicing.

WHITEHAVEN.—Sun, Square, and Compasses Chapter (No. 119).—The annual convocation of this chapter was held at the Freemasons' Hall, College-street, on Wednesday, October 13th. The chapter was opened by the M.E.Z., Comp. John Barr; E. Fearon, H.; and John Bowes, P.Z., &c., as J.; assisted by [Comps. W. Gibson, P.Z.; Kenworthy, P.Z.; and James Porter, P.Z., No. 327, Wigton, after which the remainder of the companions, an unusually large number, were admitted. Several candidates were balloted for, and afterwards exalted by the M.E.Z., the Historic Lecture being delivered by Comp. E. Fearon. After some routine business had been disposed of, Comp. W. B. Gibson, P.Z., in the name of the chapter, presented to the M.E.Z. a handsome gold P.Z. jewel, which bore the following inscription, "Presented to M.E. Comp. Barr in recognition of his invaluable services as M.E.Z. of the Sun, Square, and Compasses Chapter, No. 119, October 13th, 1875." The M.E.Z. then called upon E. Comp. John Bowes, P.Z., P.P.G.S.B. West Lancashire, to take the chair as Installing Principal, who installed the Principals and invested the officers as follows:—Comps. John Barr, re-elected Z.; E. Fearon, H.; W. Sandwith, J.; John Tickle, S.E.; W. Armstrong, S.N.; E. Tyson, P.S.; J. McKelvie, Treas.; John Rothery and W. F. Lamony, Asst. Sojs.; and W. Corrie, Janitor. On the conclusion of the ceremony E. Comp. W. B. Gibson, P.Z., said they were in the habit of according to their kind Comp. Bowes annually a vote of thanks, but he had an addition to propose on that occasion—it was that in consideration of the great assistance afforded by E. Comp. Bowes to the chapter for a long time past, he elected an honorary member for life. This proposition was seconded by Comp. Fearon, supported by Comp. Tickle, S.E., and unanimously agreed to. The chapter then voted ten guineas to the Boys' School. The business of the chapter being concluded, the companions adjourned to the banqueting-room, where an excellent repast awaited them. The chair was occupied by the M.E.Z., Comp. Barr, supported on the right and left by Comps. W. B. Gibson, P.Z.; James Porter, P.Z.; E. Tyson, P.S.; John Bowes, P.Z., &c.; Kenworthy, P.Z.; McKelvie, Treas. The cross tables were presided over by Comps. Tickle and Armstrong. The Chairman proposed the usual loyal toasts. Comp. Bowes then proposed "The Three Grand Principals of the Supreme Grand Chapter of England," and in doing so referred to each individually, and said that with such chiefs they had every reason to be proud of that, the highest Order of recognized Freemasonry.

Comp. W. B. Gibson, P.Z., proposed "The M.E.Z., Comp. John Barr." He said they were all deeply indebted to their M.E.Z. for the zeal and ability with which he had managed to work the chapter, and therefore it was the unanimous desire of the members that he should retain the position another year. The M.E.Z., in responding, said that he was deeply indebted to the companions for their kindness. He assured them that it was no easy task to master the ceremonial part of his labour; that he had succeeded owing in no small degree to the untiring exertions of their Preceptor, Comp. Bowes. Comp. Pagen proposed "The Second and Third Principals and Officers of Chapter No. 119." He said he could not but echo the feelings of regret expressed by the M.E.Z. in chapter at the enforced absence of their worthy and E. Comp. Dr. Henry, H. elect. He had written from London to say how sorry he was that he could not be with them to receive the benefit of installation at the hands of his friend Comp. Bowes, and they shared his sorrow, and sincerely hoped that his health ere long would be completely restored. He had great pleasure in proposing the toast because he felt confident that the chapter would be efficiently worked by their present staff. Comps. E. Fearon, W. Sandwith, McKelvie, Tickle, Armstrong, Tyson, and Rothery severally responded. Comp. McKelvie proposed "The P.Z.'s of Chapter No. 119." He said the age of their chapter precluded them from having many P.Z.'s, but out of the small number two were present, Comps. Gibson and Kenworthy, and two more worthy brethren and trusty companions could not be found. Their zeal in the Masonic cause was well known and appreciated in the province. They were both Past Senior Wardens of the province, and, as they all knew, Comp. Gibson was at present Prov. G. Sec. Their interest in Masonry was unabated, and they therefore might congratulate themselves that they had their names on their muster roll. Comp. Gibson thanked them very heartily for the kind manner in which the toast had been proposed and received, and said Comp. McKelvie was not far wrong when he said his friend Comp. Kenworthy and himself took a warm interest in Masonry. Their engagements were frequent, and it afforded them great pleasure to undertake the duties which they were invited to discharge. Comp. Kenworthy also responded, and expressed the great delight he experienced in witnessing the efficient manner in which their chapter was worked. When they lost their friend and companion, Capt. Mott, it occurred to him when, M.E.Z., that Comp. Bowes would take the chapter under his care and put it in working order. This desirable object had been achieved, and they rejoiced on all sides. Comp. Fearon proposed "The Installing Principal, E. Comp. John Bowes, P.Z., P. Prov. G.S.B. West Lancashire," complimenting him upon the admirable manner in which he had performed the ceremony of the day. He said Comp. Bowes was always both ready and willing to impart instruction to those who required it. On reaching the town the night before, he at once expressed a wish to meet the officers in the Chapter Room, to talk about the work they had successfully completed that day. He had very great pleasure in proposing the toast. Comp. Bowes, in responding, said that having lived in the county, and some of his oldest friends still living in it, he was naturally attached to Cumberland. With respect to Freemasonry, he had been a "working" brother for many years; but he was one of those who did not wish to keep the work in his own hands. When he first visited their chapter, which he did on the invitation of his old friend Comp. Kenworthy, they could do little of themselves. He offered his services to any companion who desired instruction, and Comp. Barr came forward. What they had witnessed that day was a proof that they were both sincere. No one could have listened to the ceremony of exaltation without feeling that they were deeply indebted to the M.E.Z. for the labour he had bestowed upon the requirements of his office. He (Comp. Bowes) never remembered having a more apt pupil. He would only add that his best offices should always be at the disposal of the province. He was rejoiced to see that due care and oversight of Royal Arch Masonry was about to be inaugurated. A new chapter was shortly to be consecrated at Kirkby Lonsdale, with Lord Bective at its head, and then they might soon hope to see a Provincial Grand Chapter constituted. He thanked them very heartily. Comp. Alop proposed "The Principals, Officers, and Members of Chapters in the Province," and coupled with it the name of Comp. James Porter, P.Z. of Wigton, who responded. Comp. Kenworthy, in proposing "The Visiting Companions," said he had much pleasure in discharging that duty, as he should couple with it the names of two Cumberland men now resident in far distant climes, but who happened to be on a visit to the land of their birth. Comp. George Glasce, of Victoria, Hong Kong, and John R. Smith, of Chicago, U.S. America, responded, and were warmly received. Comp. McKelvie proposed "The Newly-elected Companions" and Comp. Cowman responded. Comp. Gibson proposed "The Masonic Charities," and in doing so alluded in gratifying terms to the recent election to the Boys' School of Robert Duff, of Silloth, due in a great measure to the active personal exertions on the spot of Comp. James Porter, with whose name the toast was coupled. Comp. Porter responded in a most interesting and instructive speech. Comp. Bowes asked permission to propose a toast not on the list. The officers had all been considered, but there was an unofficial member who, if they would excuse the paradox, was always in office, and one to whom the chapter was deeply indebted; he referred to Comp. White. The toast was heartily received. Comp. White briefly responded. The Janitors' toast completed the list. During the evening a number of companions kindly favoured the company with songs, &c., under the able direction of Comp. Cooper, Organist.

JERUSALEM CHAPTER (No. 185).—The first meeting since the summer recess of this old chapter was held at the Freemasons' Tavern, Great Queen-street, on the 12th inst. There were present Comps. Smith, M.E.Z.; Holbrook, acting H.; Elsam, J.; Davage, Scribe E.; Wagner, N.; P. Robinson, P.S.; Mander, Second Assist.; Loewenstark, P.Z.; Webb, Walls, Watts, and others. The minutes of the April chapter were read and confirmed. Two brethren of the Jordan and Royal Union Lodges were to have been exalted, but in consequence of business arrangements they were unable to attend the chapter. A letter having been read from Comp. Hammond, the Second Principal, apologizing for his absence, the chapter was closed in ancient form, and the companions adjourned to banquet. Upon the removal of the cloth the M.E.Z. gave the Royal toasts, and alluded to the departure of H.R.H., the G.Z. of the Order, for India, and hoped that before the Jerusalem Chapter separated for the annual recess the Prince would have returned in good health to his native country, to renew those duties of his high position which hitherto he had discharged with credit to himself and to the national satisfaction. Comp. Loewenstark, P.Z., proposed "The Health of the M.E.Z.," and congratulated the chapter upon possessing so energetic a First Principal, who frequently came several hundred miles in order to be present at the working of the chapter. Comp. Smith acknowledged the compliment, and in the course of his speech stated that he was one of the few first Principals present when H.R.H. the Prince of Wales was installed G.Z. of the Order, and the ceremony was so efficiently and impressively performed that it had created an impression upon his mind which could never be effaced. He concluded by assuring the companions that, although he resided so many miles from London, nothing short of ill health or domestic calamity should prevent his coming among them. Comps. Loewenstark and Davage replied for "The Past Principals," and Comp. Elsam responded on behalf of himself and Comp. Hammond, who was unavoidably absent, to the toast of "The Second and Third Principals." The health of the other officers having been drunk, Comps. Robinson, and Mander replied. Between the toasts Comps. Robinson, Mander, and Walls vocally and dramatically entertained the companions, who separated at an early hour, after spending a most agreeable evening.

LION AND LAMB CHAPTER (No. 192).—A meeting of the above chapter was held at the City Terminus Hotel, Cannon-street, City, on October 20th. Members present:—Comps. Henry Mugeridge, M.E.Z.; G. Newman, H.; F. D. R. Copestick, J.; Henry Birdseye, S.N.; Edward Jones, P.S.; Charles Arkell, First Asst.; T. C. Chapman, Second Asst.; Edward King, P.Z.; George Kenning, P.Z. and Treas.; Joseph Copestick, T. Burdett Yeoman, E. J. Storr, J. G. Dunn, John Kent, C. W. Cheese, John Curle, Francis Fellowes, George Phythian, Edward H. Lidbury. Visitors:—Comps. W. T. Howe, 217; Samuel Poynter, 720; Peter Wagner, 185; J. B. Sorrell, 176; J. E. Russell, 22; J. R. Foulger, P.Z. 177; Gilbert, Janitor. The chapter was opened in due form, and the minutes of the last convocation were read and confirmed. The ballot was then taken for Bro. Edward H. Lidbury. It being unanimously in his favour, and Bro. Lidbury being present, he was duly exalted to the Supreme Degree of Holy Royal Arch Masonry. The election of officers for the ensuing year was proceeded with, the result of the ballot being in favour of Comp. George Newman, M.E.Z.; F. D. R. Copestick, H.; Henry Birdseye, J.; Edward J. Jones, S.N.; Francis Fellowes, S.E.; Charles Arkell, P.S.; George Kenning, Treas.; Gilbert, Janitor. It was then proposed, seconded, and carried that the Audit Committee should consist of the Present and Past Officers, also Comps. Joseph Copestick, John Kent, and T. Burdett Yeoman. It was also proposed, seconded and carried, that the bye-laws of the chapter should be printed and circulated amongst the members. Comp. F. D. R. Copestick proposed Bro. Charles Tustin, of the Gresham Lodge, for exaltation at the next meeting. Comp. Charles Arkell proposed Bro. George G. Potter, A.I.A., of the Domestic Lodge, for exaltation at the next meeting. The chapter was then duly closed, and adjourned to January, 1876. The companions dined together. The usual loyal and Masonic toasts were duly proposed and honoured. The evening was enlivened by recitations and songs, Comp. Henry Mugeridge giving the "Balaklava Charge." Some good vocal music was rendered by Comps. Poynter, Foulger, Fellowes, Chapman, Arkell, and Birdseye.

IPSWICH.—St. Luke's Chapter (No. 225).—On the 22nd ult. the usual quarterly meeting of the St. Luke's Royal Arch Chapter was held at the Coach and Horses Hotel, Ipswich. Present—Comps. Emma Holmes, M.E.Z.; J. Turner, P.Z., as H.; Dr. Mills, P.Z., as J.; G. Abbott, P.S.; A. Barber, Scribe E.; J. Whitehead, and others. The minutes of last meeting were read and confirmed. Comp. Barber called attention to the fact that several brethren were very much in arrears with their subscriptions; and it was resolved that all members more than three years in arrears should be struck off, due notice being given. Comp. Turner moved that Comp. Findley be elected an honorary member of this chapter, which was carried unanimously. Comp. Findley, who has been a very faithful member of the Craft for many years, is now bed ridden, and never likely to enter a Masonic meeting again. He has lately been elected a pensioner of the Institution for Aged Freemasons, and it was a graceful act of the chapter to elect one of the oldest and most respected P.Z.'s an honorary member of the chapter. The other business of the chapter having been transacted, Comp. Mills gave the exordium. The chapter was duly closed, and the companions partook of the customary frugal fare provided for the chapter.

WINDSOR.—Windsor Castle Chapter (No. 771).—The installation meeting of this chapter was held on Thursday, Oct. 21st, at the Masonic Hall. Present: Comps. J. Stevens, M.E.Z.; H. H. Hodges, H.; J. Tolley, J.; E. Grisbrook, S.E.; G. W. Dixon, S.N.; G. H. Powell, First A.S.; J. Strange, Second A.S.; J. Devereux, P.Z.; J. Reid, P.Z.; W. S. Cantrell, J. H. S. Reid, and others; with the Rev. R. J. Simpson, P.Z., and Lewis Birjett, S.N. 834, visitors. Bros. Stocken and Barton were duly exalted into the Holy Royal Arch by the M.E.Z. Comp. J. Reid, P.Z., then installed the following Principals for the ensuing year, viz., Comps. H. Hodges, M.E.Z.; J. Tolley, H.; E. Grisbrook, J. The M.E.Z. then invested his officers as follows:—Comps. J. Devereux, P.Z., Treas.; G. W. Dixon, S.E.; G. H. Powell, S.N.; F. Fleck, P.S. (by proxy); Nowell, Janitor. Comp. Devereux then rose and commented in most appropriate terms upon the zeal and assiduity with which Comp. J. Stevens, I.P.Z., had ruled over the chapter as M.E.Z. during the three years he had held that important office, and proposed that some suitable recognition be made to him, and that the sum of ten guineas be voted from the funds of the chapter for that purpose, and that a committee consisting of Comps. Hodges, M.E.Z.; J. Tolley, H.; E. Grisbrook, J.; G. W. Dixon, S.E.; G. H. Powell, S.N., and Devereux, P.Z., be formed to decide as to the form of the testimonial, &c. Comp. Stevens expressed his thanks to the companions, and assured them of his continued interest in the chapter. A cordial vote of thanks was then given to Comp. John Reid, P.Z., for the services he had rendered to the chapter. Comp. Reid having replied in suitable terms, the chapter was closed according to ancient rite.

INSTRUCTION.

THE METROPOLITAN ROYAL ARCH CHAPTER OF IMPROVEMENT.—The first meeting of the session was held at the Jamaica Coffee House, St. Michael's Alley, Cornhill, on Tuesday, the 5th of October. Comp. Brett, the much-esteemed Preceptor, was unable to attend, but the other permanent officers, namely, Comp. John Boyd, Treas., and Comps. Thomas William White and J. Rumsey, S.E.'s, were in their places. Comp. Boyd, as the senior officer present, assumed the chair of M.E.Z., and appointed the following companions to the various offices for the evening:—E. Gouthail, H.; John Wyer, J.; Thomas William White and J. Rumsey, S.E.'s; A. H. Lilly, S.N.; E. Gilbert, P.S. In addition to whom there were also present Comps. R. Wyatt, W. H. Kempster, G. K. Lemann, J. Allsopp, William Stephens, R. W. Goddard, &c. The business of the evening was commenced by completely rehearsing the ceremony of exaltation, Comp. Lemann acting as candidate. At the conclusion of the addresses the audit committee was elected, and Comp. Edward S. Norris, who was unavoidably absent, was appointed Assistant S.E., in the room of Comp. E. H. Finney, jun., whose decease was recently noted with sincere regret in our obituary column. By the time the officers for the ensuing fortnight had been elected, half-past eight had nearly arrived. The chapter was, therefore, closed with the customary forms, and adjourned to the following Tuesday evening at half-past six. It would be well to remind Royal Arch Masons that this chapter meets every Tuesday during the Masonic season, and every companion is welcome who can satisfy the officers that he is entitled to enter. It must be a matter of considerable gratification to Comp. Brett and his colleagues that the Treasurer has been enabled during the past year to hand over the sum of twenty-five guineas to the Masonic charities, and it is to be hoped that the small balance in his hands will be considerably augmented between now and next May. As to the "working" it is only necessary to say that it is Companion Brett's, with which every Arch Mason is, or ought to be acquainted.

SOUTH MOLTON.—The Fortescue Lodge (No. 9) held its monthly meeting on Monday Oct. 18, at the Masonic Hall. Present: Bros. Sanders, W.M.; Brewer, Prov. S.W.; J. T. Shapland, J.W.; E. Galliford, Wood, and Widgery, Overseers; Bros. Galliford, Sec.; Cole, I.G., and other brethren. Bro. J. T. Shapland, J.W., was unanimously elected W.M. for the year ensuing; Bro. J. Galliford, Treas.; and Bro. Richard Kingdon, Tyler. Bro. Arden A. Shapland, a member of the lodge and son of the W.M. elect, having been recently accidentally drowned at Teignmouth whilst bathing, it was unanimously resolved on the motion of Bro. Wood, P.M., seconded by Bro. Brewer, that the sympathy and condolence of the lodge be given to Bro. J. T. Shapland and his family for the severe loss they had sustained. Bro. Hancock, W.M., and Bro. Huxtable, P.M., both of Lodge No. 1135, Ilfracombe, were proposed for advancement.

MELTON MOWBRAY.—Howe Lodge (No. 21).—The autumn meeting of this lodge was held on the 14th inst., when there was a fair attendance. Bro. J. C. Duncombe, W.M., presided. The candidates did not come for advancement, so, after routine business was ended, Bro.

R. Boughton Smith, S.W., was complimented on having got in much of the arrears of the subscriptions which had been owing for several years. The lodge, which has not done much for some time, seems to be looking up again under the able Mastership of Bro. Duncombe, who does not scruple to travel 20 miles to attend any Masonic gathering.

GLASGOW.—Lodge St. John (No. 34).—he regular meeting of this lodge was held in their hall, 213, Buchanan-street, on Tuesday, the 19th inst. Bro. Wm. Bell, R.W.M., presided, supported by his office-bearers, together with a large number of members and visiting brethren. Bro. J. Dick, Sec., at the request of the R.W.M., read the minutes of the previous meeting, which were confirmed. Applications were then read from Messrs Thos. H. Kirk and James Orr, craving to be received into the Order through Lodge St. John, No. 34. The applications being sustained they were prepared, and received the E.A. Degree, the R.W.M. officiating. After spending a pleasant and profitable hour in harmony, the lodge was recalled to labour, and closed in due and ancient form.

GLASGOW.—Thistle and Rose Lodge (No. 73).—The fortnightly meeting of this lodge was held in the Masonic Hall, 170, Buchanan-street, on Tuesday evening, 19th inst., Bro. George McDonald, R.W.M., in the chair, supported by Bros. G. Weston, I.P.M.; J. Bannerman, D.M.; the Wardens, and other office-bearers, in their proper places. Among the visiting brethren were Bros. David Reid, R.W.M. 465; Wm. Ferguson, R.W.M. 543; J. M. Oliver, S.W. 360; J. Adams, 360; John M. Innes, S.W. 408; E. Arthur, Mother Kilwinning, &c. The lodge having been opened in the First or E.A. Degree, the minutes of last meeting were read and confirmed. An application was read from Mr. John Wright, who was admitted, and received the E.A. Degree at the hands of Bro. Wm. Ferguson, R.W.M. 543. The lodge was then raised to the Fellow Craft Degree, and from the Fellow Craft to the Master Mason Degree, when Bros. Sigismund Gentile, of Lodge Union, 332, and Robert Smith Cross were raised to the Sublime Degree of Master Mason by Bro. G. McDonald, R.W.M. The lodge was then reduced to the E.A. Degree, and closed in due and ancient form.

GLASGOW.—Lodge Thistle (No. 87).—The regular meeting of this lodge was held in the Freemasons' Hall, 30, Hope-street, on Tuesday, the 19th inst. Bro. Jas. Burns, R.W.M., presided, and was supported by Bros. J. Booth, S.W.; W. Wilson, J. W.; J. Fraser, P.M.; J. Miller, P.M.; J. Love, S.M.; D. H. Miller, P.M. 102; H. W. Jackman, S.W. 571; W. Sivewright, J.W. 571; and others. The lodge was opened in due form, when the minutes of the previous meeting were read and confirmed. Applications for admittance into the Order were read from Messrs. A. McLachlan and A. Mundi, who were approved and received the E.A. degree, Bro. J. Booth, S.W., officiating. The lodge was raised to the Sublime Degree of M.M., when Bros. Troop and Fraser were put in possession of that degree, Bro. John Miller, P.M., officiating. This formed the working part of the business before the lodge. The remaining business was the question of raising the fees. This was introduced by the Chairman, Bro. James W. Burns, R.W.M., who reminded the brethren that it had been an understood thing when they came to their present quarters, the hall of Lodge Commercial, No. 360, that their fees should be raised to the level of that lodge—that is to say, from £2 15s., as at present, to three guineas. He would now say that the matter should be considered as early as possible. Bro. John Fraser, P.M., said he really did think that the fees were much too small for a lodge holding the position of No. 87, and that the time had now come for an advance. Independently of Lodge Commercial altogether this should be done. All throughout the province there was a tendency in this direction; and at the last meeting of Lodge St. John, 34, they had raised their scale to five guineas. It was not for the mere sake of raising the fees, by itself, but it would increase their power of giving away in charity, of making larger grants, and thus enable them to assist in confuting the cry which was all over the United Kingdom that Scotland had nothing to show in the way of charity. The Chairman having briefly endorsed the spirit of Bro. Fraser's remarks, Bro. Miller, P.M., moved that the fees of the lodge be raised to three guineas, and Bro. Fraser seconded the motion. Bro. James Love, D.M., then moved that they be raised to £3 10s., which was seconded by Bro. Best. Finally, Bro. Wm. Wilson, J.W., moved that the annual test fee of the lodge be 10s., which was seconded by Bro. Love. The respective motions will be put before the lodge for decision in due course.

GLASGOW.—Lodge Union and Crown (No. 103).—A special meeting of this lodge was held on Friday evening, 24th inst., in honour of Bro. Alexander Bain, a respected Past Master of the lodge, and also present B.B. of the Provincial Grand Lodge of Glasgow. Rarely, if ever, has there been a larger number of brethren congregated with the walls of the Masonic Hall at No. 170, Buchanan-street, which was filled almost to discomfort by an attendance mostly of members of No. 103, gathered together to testify to the respect in which they held their Past Master. The chair was occupied by the R.W.M., Bro. Andrew M. Wright; other office-bearers of the lodge present being Bros. Geo. Muir, D.M.; David Murray, S.M.; Wm. Thomson, S.W.; Robert Munro, J.W.; Neil Cameron, Treas.; and James Gillies, Sec. There were also present, among affiliated and visiting brethren, Bros. George Sinclair, Treas. of P.G. Benevolent Fund; James Thomson, P.M. 362; Thomas Fletcher, I.P.M. 34; John Morgan, R.W.M. 219; John Cunningham, R.W.M. 347; John Johnston, &c. and others. The lodge having been opened in the First Degree was thereafter adjourned to refreshment, at which the R.W.M. presided. After the standard, loyal, and Masonic toast were duly honoured, the Chairman gave the toasts of the evening—namely, "The Health of Bro. Bain, P.M. of Lodge Union and Crown, No. 103." This he did in brief but well-chosen and most cordial terms; and in concluding presented Bro. Bain, on behalf of the lodge, with a valuable gold watch, gold Albert, and locket, as a small testimony of the esteem in which he was universally held amongst the brethren. Bro. Bain acknowledged the compliment in a feeling reply, in concluding which he said that he loved Masonry, he loved its principles, and he loved all deserving Masons. It would ever be a source of great happiness to him to think that he enjoyed the good wishes of his brethren; and he could only thank most sincerely all who had contributed to the magnificent testimonial he had received that evening. The remainder of the evening was passed most harmoniously and agreeably in every way.

PARTICK.—St. Mary's Lodge (No. 117).—The fortnightly meeting of this lodge was held in St. Mary's Hall, Partick, on Wednesday evening, 20th inst., Bro. William Wylie, R.W.M., in the chair; D. Peacock, S.W.; Andrew Agnew, J.W. Present: Andrew Brunton, P.M.; John Bain, D.M.; Thos. Granger, P.M.; Wm. Borland, P.M.; John Wylie, Treas.; and John Maitland, Sec.; Wm. Ferguson, R.W.M. 543, and a number of visiting brethren. The lodge was opened, and the minutes of last two meetings were read and adopted. An application was read from G. S. Rowling, master mariner, was favourably received, and he was admitted and initiated into the E.A. Degree of Freemasonry by Bro. John Bain in a very careful manner. The lodge was then raised to the E.C. Degree, when Bro. George W. Kean was passed to the square degree of Fellow Craft, Bro. Wm. Borland officiating. The lodge was then closed in due and proper form.

GLASGOW.—Lodge Commercial (No. 360).—The regular fortnightly meeting of this lodge was held in their hall, 30, Hope-street, Glasgow, on Friday, the 15th inst., Bro. J. Monro, R.W.M., presiding; Bros. A. Morton, P.M.; D. Lamb, D.M.; J. M. Oliver, S.W.; Finlay, Treas.; Bickerton, Sec.; and the remaining officers in their respective places. The lodge was opened, and the minutes read and confirmed. The R.W.M. then called upon the Secretary to read the names of the brethren who had been recommended for office for the ensuing year at the meeting of the 8th inst. for the approval of the lodge. There being no objection raised, the R.W.M. declared the officers, whose names had been read and met with their approval, duly nominated. The lodge was then raised to the degree of Fellow Craft. Bro. Colquhoun was then passed to this degree, Bro. John Monro, R.W.M., officiating. This brought the business to a close.

GLASGOW.—Lodge Dramatic (No. 571).—The regular meeting of this lodge was held in the Freemasons' Hall, (St. Mark's), 213, Buchanan-street, on Wednesday, the 20th inst., at 3 o'clock. Bro. J. E. Dobson, R.W.M. presided, supported by Bros. H. W. Jackman, S.W.; W. Sivewright, J.W., and the other office-bearers. Among the visiting brethren were J. Burns, R.W.M. 87; J. Booth, S.W. 87; W. Phillips, R.W.M. 556; J. M. Oliver, S.W. 360; D. Lamb, D.M. 360; W. H. Bickerton, Sec. 360, and others. The minutes of the previous meeting were read and confirmed. The lodge was raised to the F.C. Degree, when Bro. Donald Noble received that, the R.W.M. officiating. This was all the business before the lodge, and it was closed in due form.

GLASGOW.—Lodge Clydesdale (No. 556).—The regular fortnightly meeting of this lodge was held in their hall, 106, Rose-street, S.S., on Monday evening, 18th inst., Bro. Wm. Phillips, R.W.M., in the chair; Bros. T. Russell, D.M.; J. McNaught, S.M.; T. Phillips, acting S.W.; Jackman, 571, acting J.W., and the other office-bearers in their places. There were also present Bros. G. C. H. McNaught, P.M. 275; Wm. Ferguson, R.W.M. 543; and a number of visiting brethren. The lodge was opened in the First Degree, and the minutes of last meeting were read and approved of, after which applications were read from the following gentlemen, and favourably received, they were admitted, and initiated into the E.A. Degree by the R.W.M., viz.:—Robert Paterson, William Wallace, and William Riddall. The lodge was then opened in the Second Degree, and raised to the M.M. Degree, when Bros. A. Malcolm and J. Ferguson were raised to the Sublime Degree of M.M., the R.W.M. officiating. The lodge was then closed in ancient form.

GLASGOW.—Glasgow Chapter (No. 50).—This chapter met in the Masonic Hall, 213, Buchanan-street, on the 14th inst., when the office-bearers for the ensuing year were installed by Comp. G. W. Wheeler, Z. of No. 73, in a very elaborate and graceful manner, and that ceremony ended, a deputation from the P.G. Chapter was received, consisting of Comps. F. A. Barrow, P.G. Supt.; A. McTaggart, M.A., P.G.S.E.; T. Halket, P.G., Treas.; J. Balfour, J. Miller, P.G. Director of Music, and others. Comp. Barrow expressed himself highly pleased with the condition of the chapter books, and said he was very much gratified at the success which had attended the chapter during the past year, and which he hoped would continue with them during the year now commenced. Comp. Miller, Z., then thanked the P.G. Superintendent for his friendly report and good wishes, and shortly afterwards the chapter was closed. The Mark Masters' Lodge was afterwards opened, and that degree conferred on a worthy brother, and while that degree was being wrought in the large hall, Comp. A. Barrow, assisted by Comps. T. Halket and J. Balfour, conferred the degree of Installed J. on Comp. James Louttit in the adjoining room. The office-bearers for the ensuing year are Z. John Millar, H.; Wm. Bell, J.; James Louttit, S.E.; Robert Morrison, S.N.; Walter Robertson, Treas.; Peter Agnew, First Soj;

Colin McKenzie, Second Soj.; George Gourlie, Third Soj.; John Wright, Superintendent of Works; Daniel Leeds, Janitor; Robert Gardner; Messrs. John Baikie and Andrew Holmes were appointed Auditors.

PRESENTATION AND DINNER TO BRO. JAS. B. WALKER.—On Thursday evening, the 14th inst., a meeting of members of Lodge St. John, No. 34, was held in the large hall of Middleton's Restaurant, Trongate, Glasgow, to do honour to their much esteemed Past Master, Bro. J. B. Walker, on occasion of his leaving the province to take up his residence in Edinburgh. The R.W.M. of the lodge, Bro. William Bell, presided; and in addition to the guest of the evening there were present Past Masters Gavin Park, John Baird, Jas. McMillan, and Thos. Fletcher—the latter of whom officiated as croupier. There were also present Bros. James Steel, P.M. No. 4 (Glasgow Kilwinning); Archd. McTaggart, P.M. No. 27 (St. Mungo) and P.G. Secretary; George Sinclair, P.M. No. 27 and Treasurer P.G. Benevolent Fund; Jas. Thomson, P.M. No. 362 (St. Clair), &c. Amongst brethren unavoidably absent was Bro. W. Montgomery Neilson, R.W.P.G.M., and one of the subscribers to the presentation. The Chairman gave in order the usual loyal and Masonic toasts, which were duly honoured. The Croupier then proposed "The Lord Provost and Magistrates of Glasgow." In so doing he referred, inter alia, to the work done by the City Improvement Trust in clearing away "rookeries" in various districts—which, he said, was so far good, but he was only sorry to see that they were now raising up structures which were not much better. The Chairman then presented Bro. Walker with an address which had been drawn up on behalf of the lodge and, with a gold watch and appendages. A beautiful gold brooch and ear-rings for Mrs. Walker, of exquisite design and workmanship, were afterwards presented by the Croupier (Bro. Fletcher), with whom Bro. Walker had been intimate from boyhood. Bro. Walker replied in fitting terms. A number of toasts were afterwards given, and at intervals in the course of the evening the proceedings were agreeably varied by song and recitation, contributed by Bros. Beveridge, Leitch, Thomson, Park, and Lockhart.

SUPREME GRAND CHAPTER.

The following is the agenda paper of the Supreme Grand Chapter of Royal Arch Masons of England, to be held next Wednesday evening at Freemasons' Hall:—

The Minutes of the last Quarterly Convocation to be read for confirmation.

The Report of the Committee of General Purposes to the Supreme Grand Chapter of Royal Arch Masons of England:—

"The Committee of General Purposes beg to report that they have examined the accounts from the 22nd July, 1875, to the 19th October, 1875, both inclusive, which they find to be as follow:—

To Balance Grand Chapter	£308 0 3
" Unappropriated Account	146 18 11
" Subsequent Receipts	244 11 0
	£699 10 1

By Purchase of £200 Consols at 94½ and Commission	£189 5 0
" Disbursements during the Quarter	304 8 7
" Balance	149 10 7
" " in Unappropriated Account	156 5 11
	£699 10 1

which balance is in the hands of Messrs. Willis, Percival, and Co., bankers of the Grand Treasurer."

The Committee have likewise to report that they have received the following petitions:—

From Companions Robert Margrave as Z., Aaron Stone as H., John Beavan Phillips as J., and six others, for a chapter to be attached to the Prince of Wales' Lodge, No. 671, Llanelly, for a chapter to be called "The St. Eliw Chapter," and to meet at the Masonic Rooms, Llanelly, in the county of Carmarthen.

From Companions Benbow Backhouse Marson as Z., Joseph Bell as H., Richard Brown as J., and eight others for a chapter to be attached to the De Grey and Ripon Lodge, No. 1356, Liverpool, to be called "The De Grey and Ripon Chapter," and to meet at the Masonic Hall, Liverpool, Lancashire.

From Companions Richard Charles Elise as Z., Alfred Thrale Perkins as H., Edward Bath as J., and eight others for a chapter to be attached to the Benevolent Lodge, No. 446, Wells, to be called "The Avalon Chapter," and to meet at the Town Hall, Wells, in the county of Somerset.

From Companions Horatio Lloyd as Z., John Chesworth Robinson as H., John Oswald Bury as J., and seven others for a chapter to be attached to the Cestrian Lodge, No. 425, Chester, to be called "The Cestrian Chapter," and to meet at the Grosvenor Hotel, Chester.

From Companions Richard Arnaud Brooke as Z., Robert Hooker as H., Myles Haslam as J., and eleven others for a chapter to be attached to the Hindpool Lodge, No. 1225, Barrow-in-Furness, to be called "The Abbey Chapter," and to meet at the Hartington Hotel, Barrow-in-Furness, Lancashire.

From Companions the Earl of Bective as Z., William Dodd as H., John Talbot as J., and fourteen others for a chapter to be attached to the Underley Lodge, No. 1074, Kirkby Lonsdale, to be called "The Bective Chapter," and to meet at the Masonic Rooms, Kirkby Lonsdale, in the county of Westmoreland.

From Companions Edward Thomas Inskip as Z., William Burbank Stocker as H., Frederick William Fisher as J., and six others for a chapter to be attached to the Royal Lebanon Lodge, No. 493, Gloucester, to be called "The Royal Lebanon Chapter," and to meet at the Spread Eagle Hotel, in the city of Gloucester.

The foregoing petitions being in all respects regular, the Committee recommend that the prayers thereof be respectively granted.

(Signed)

JOHN SAVAGE,
President.

Masonic and General Tidings.

THE SKEAF CONCERT IN LIVERPOOL.—The complimentary concert to Bro. Joseph Skeaf, P.M. 216, P.G. Organist, organised and carried out by the brethren of West Lancashire, especially by those resident in Liverpool, promises to be one of the most successful and brilliant public Masonic gatherings which Liverpool has ever witnessed. Bro. Skeaf's ability and zeal in Masonry are well-known in the province, and it has been considered that a concert, liberally supported, would be a fitting recognition of the valuable services he has so ably and cheerfully rendered to the Craft generally and to many other charitable institutions. The scheme has been submitted to the Right Worshipful Provincial Grand Master, numerous Provincial Grand Officers, Past and Present, and many of the influential brethren in this and the adjoining provinces, and has met with cordial approval and promises of valuable support. A dispensation has been granted, permitting the brethren to appear at the concert in the clothing and insignia of the various Masonic Orders, and the arrangements entered into are calculated to render the gathering truly Masonic, in every way successful and honourable to the Craft generally, and a significant compliment to a worthy brother. The concert is fixed for the 23rd November, at the Philharmonic Hall, Liverpool, and Madame Liebhart's concert party has been specially retained.

THE DUKE OF ABERCORN.—We extract the following from the "World":—"The social aspect of affairs under which, in 1874, the Duke of Abercorn was induced once more to resume the position that he had occupied from 1866 to 1868 was decidedly critical. When, in the former of these years, he was appointed to the august post—the first Conservative Minister for seven years—it was unanimously declared by those Irishmen who were competent to speak on the subject that Lord Abercorn was the only man who could possibly occupy the office which a Tory noble like Lord Eglinton had filled with such splendid efficiency. When, in 1874, Mr. Disraeli was called upon to nominate a Lord-Lieutenant for Ireland, the same tribunal was unanimous in its protestation that the only nobleman who could reign where Lord Abercorn had reigned six years ago was none other than the Duke of Abercorn himself. Reluctantly, he was prevailed upon to accept the proffered honour, which could indeed be esteemed no new honour to him. Magnificently, at great expense and with great self-sacrifice, he has discharged its duties. The Viceroy's official salary is £20,000 a year; the Duke of Abercorn's official expenses cannot be less than £40,000; and though his Grace is not badly off even for a duke, the fiftieth part of a million is a fair slice out of the statist's incomes. . . . The Duke of Abercorn is an ornament to the peerage, from his presence, his manner, his position, and his resources. But he is also one of its bulwarks. He is a brilliant instance of the truth that to be a handsome and polished patrician need not mean to be a fribble, and that a capacity hitherto undreamed of may be hidden under a brow that wears the strawberry leaf."

The Fifteen Sections will be worked by the members of the Camden Lodge of Instruction, on Monday next, at 7 o'clock, at the Stanhope Arms, James-street, Camden Town.

The Fifteen Sections will be worked on Tuesday next at the Constitutional Lodge of Instruction.

STATISTICS.—Bro. Drummond's table of statistics shows that in 48 American Grand Lodges there are 985,269 members. There have been raised within the year 37,984, and admitted 17,091. There have been dimitted 18,472, expelled 1,117, suspended 563, suspended for non-payment of dues 12,620. The number of deaths reported was 6357, and of rejections 8871. In England and her colonies there are 91,750 Masons; in Scotland, 21,000; in Ireland, 18,400; in Prussia, 35,193; in Italy, 12,053; in Spain, 4200; in Portugal, 2800; in France, 10,800; in Belgium, 2185; in Switzerland, 1800, and in Norway and Sweden 10,800. Total, 210,981. From this it appears that American Freemasonry exceeds all these countries in strength and influence.

Captain Matthew Webb, the celebrated swimmer, was been proposed for initiation in the Neptune Lodge on Thursday last.

The Lord Mayor presided over the final meeting of the Executive Committee of the fund for the relief of the distress caused by the French inundations. The total amount of the subscriptions was £26,497, of which a balance of £716 remaining in hand was ordered to be sent to Madame MacMahon for distribution by the local committee.

A Royal Proclamation appears in the "Gazette" further proroguing Parliament to the 15th December, and Convocation to the following day.

It is announced that General Sir James Alexander, K.C.B., has joined the board of directors of the Briton Life Association, and that Dr. William Henry Pilkington, J.P., Clayton de Moors, Lancashire, and Mr. James H. Clarke, Nottingham, have become extraordinary directors of the same association.

A telegram from Milan says that on Friday, the 22nd inst., His Majesty the Emperor of Germany received the Freemasons, who presented an address to him from the representatives of all the Italian lodges. He expressed his deep sense of the importance of Masonic institutions, and asked for minute details respecting the Italian lodges. The brethren were enchanted with his genial cordiality.

Bro. the Rev. A. G. Shears, for some time Masonic editor of Loomis' "Musical and Masonic Journal," Hartford, Connecticut, has retired on account of infirmities and domestic cares.

The Memphis "Jewel" is endeavouring to stir up the brethren of Tennessee to a proper sense of duty, in urging upon them the necessity of completing the Masonic Hall at Memphis, and the establishment of a Masonic Home.

Visiting the Museum of the Guildhall we were struck by the improved lighting of that underground and hitherto gas-lit apartment, due to the "Luminarum" reflectors of Mr. Chappuis, of 69, Fleet-street, that have recently been fixed outside the windows. These reflectors, which throw in a quantity of daylight from the narrow area allotted to lighting, are placed at two angles, the object of this arrangement being that the upper and flatter part of the reflector reflects the light of the sky to the further side of the Museum, and the under portion, which is at a steeper angle, reflects the rays on the floor and upon the cases.

Bro. Emma Holmes' articles on the Freemasons and Architecture appear to be attracting some attention outside the Masonic pale, particularly as regards his suggestion that the Grand Lodge of England should contribute towards the restoration, or rather completion, of St. Paul's. The leading organ of the Civil Service, our clever contemporary the "Civilian," notices the proposal with approval, so do the "Suffolk Chronicle," the "Peterborough Advertiser" of the 16th inst., the "Essex Standard" of the 22nd, and the "Sunderland Times" of the same date. The last named paper, however, in quoting Bro. Holmes' strictures on the apathy of the north country Masons, says, "Mr. Holmes does not seem to be aware that during the past twelve months the Freemasons of this province (Durham) have placed a window in Durham Cathedral to commemorate the completion of a quarter of a century as Prov. Grand Master by John Fawcett, Esq."

BALAKLAVA BANQUET.—Mr. Pennington, "the brave soldier," and now "eminent tragedian and gentleman," who recited Tennyson's "Charge of the Light Brigade," is a brother Mason, rank M.M. of the Royal Alfred Lodge 780.

The "Voice of Masonry" says: "It is an astonishing, and not a flattering fact, that of the 600,000 members of the Craft in the United States of America, not a hundred thousand have an interest to fully know the history of the Order to which they belong."

The Prince Frederick William Chapter of Instruction in Royal Arch Freemasonry, held at Lord's Hotel, St. John's Wood, will for the future meet every week on Thursdays, at 8 p.m., and so give extended opportunity for officers of chapters and other companions to practise their duties. The instruction chapter has all requisite furniture, and companions can minutely go through the working of the various offices, and perfect themselves for their chapter duties, which must give confidence, and enable them to perform their duties more efficiently.

Bro. the Rt. Hon. Lord Skelmersdale, D.G.M., has laid the foundation-stone of some new Church schools at Roby, near Liverpool. His Lordship expressed a wish to see children compelled to pass in a certain standard before they could be employed.

On Tuesday the Lady Mayoress held her last reception at the Mansion House.

The King of Greece has conferred the Grand Cordon of the Order of the Saviour upon the Duke of Sutherland, Sir Bartle Frere, and Bro. Lord Suffield; the grade of Grand Commander upon Lord Alfred Paget and General Probyn; and that of Commander upon Bro. Knollys and Dr. Fayer. Bro. Lord Aylesford, Bro. Lord Charles Beresford, Colonel Williams, and Canon Duckworth have been created Officers, and Captain Fitz-George, Mr. Grey, and Mr. Hall, Knights of the Order.

At the Cheshire Quarter Sessions, held at Knutsford on Monday week, Bro. Horatio Lloyd, P.G.S.W. of Cheshire, Recorder of Chester, was appointed Chairman of Quarter Session. The name of Bro. G. W. Latham, Past G.S.B. of England, was also proposed, but at his own request his name was withdrawn, Bro. Latham intimating that he should retire from the County Bench. This intimation will be received with great regret throughout the county, as he has long been greatly respected, both by magistrates and the public.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS: Good spirits.—Every one has frequently experienced sudden personal changes from gaiety to gloom. The weather oftentimes receives the blame, when a faulty digestion is alone the cause of the depression. Holloway's Pills can be honestly recommended for regulating a disordered stomach, and improving digestion. They entirely remove the sense of fullness and oppression after eating. They clear the furred tongue, and act as a wholesome stimulant to the liver and as a gentle aperient to the bowels. They healthfully rouse both body and mind. Holloway's Pills are the best known antidotes for want of appetite, nausea, flatulency, heartburn, languor, depression, and that apathy so characteristic of chronic derangement of the digestion.—Adv.

The Freemason,

SATURDAY, OCT. 30, 1875.

OUR ROYAL GRAND MASTER'S VISIT TO INDIA.

H.R.H. the Prince of Wales took leave of the King and Queen of Greece off Hydra, and entered Port Said at 8.10 a.m. on the 23rd, where the Khedive's son and General Stanton came on board, amid salutes of cannon. The Prince of Wales, with his suite, was transferred to the Royal Yacht Osborne, and proceeded at 10.30 to Ismailia by the canal, where they landed at five o'clock. A guard of honour received the Prince, to whom great honours were offered. A special train conveyed the Royal party to Cairo, where they arrived at nine and had a magnificent reception. The Khedive was at the station with his Ministers and the English and foreign Consuls, while vast crowds of people were gathered outside. Military regiments were drawn up, and the bands played "God Save the Queen." At Zagazig, near Ismailia, the Prince received a reply to a telegram sent to the Princess from Port Said. On the 24th Divine service was performed. On the 25th there was an investiture of the Star of India and later an illumination of the Pyramids. H.R.H. invested Prince Teufik with the Star of India in the presence of the Khedive with great éclat. The Serapis left Suez at 8.10 on the 26th, after a brilliant reception. All well. The "Times of India" of Oct. 4, thus refers to the preparations making for the Prince's visit: "Preparations for the Prince's visit still occupy public attention, especially in Bombay, as the western capital is to have the honour of welcoming the Prince to India. It has been arranged to have a grand Freemasons' ball in the Town Hall, and the Byculla Club will give one to the officers of the Flying Squadron, at which the Prince has promised to be present, if only for a short time, during the evening. The visit to Poona has been decided upon, and we believe Ahmedabad is also to have the honour of receiving the Prince. In Calcutta and Madras addresses are being prepared and arrangements for his Highness's reception matured. The committee appointed at Madras to draw up the address have fixed upon a very chaste design for the casket which is to hold it. The casket will be made of ivory, ornamented with gold, engraved after the swami pattern. The whole will be supported by four elephants made of gold. A Hyderabad nobleman is having a gorgeous palanquin and two tonjons constructed for presentation to his Royal Highness. The palanquin is painted in imitation of gold, and lined with rich velvet to match, and bears on the panels the coat of arms of the giver. When completed, with silver mountings, &c., it promises to be a very handsome piece of workmanship. Preparations on an extensive scale are being made for the visit of the Nizam to Bombay to welcome the Prince. It is expected that fifteen Hyderabad rajahs will accompany the Nizam to Bombay. His Highness will have an escort of four hundred cavalry of the re-formed troops, and two thousand retainers. The rajahs rajahlings, and chiefs in India are contributing most liberally towards the reception of the Prince. The largest contribution from a native Prince towards the visit is that of the Maharajah of Benares, who gave 25,000 rupees towards founding a hospital in that city to commemorate the Prince's visit. The Maharajah of Vizianagram gave 15,000 rupees on that occasion. But the Zemindar of Ettapooram, in the Tinnivelly district, though yet a minor, has signified his intention to the collector to expend 30,000 rupees on the occasion of his Royal Highness's visit to Tuticorin." Admiral Drummond reports that the engines of the Serapis now work in the most satisfactory manner.

A PRECEDENT.

We beg most earnestly to invite the attention of all our brethren to a little matter which affects the constitutional interests of Freemasonry, and the present and future welfare of our great Metropolitan Educational Institutions. It has been contended that a Provincial Grand Lodge, and, of course, "a fortiori" of Grand Lodge, has the power of passing a resolution which would tend either to inquire into the government, the expenditure, or the internal economy of these voluntary Masonic institutions. We have always contended, and always shall contend, that such a motion is unconstitutional and altogether "ultra vires." We are happy to find that our humble view of the matter is fully confirmed by the expressed and deliberate opinion of our quondam, noble, and admirable ruler, Lord Zetland. At the Quarterly Communication of March 3rd, 1858, our distinguished Bro. Beach, M.P., and now P.G.M. for Hampshire, raised a point of order as to the refusal of the Board of Masters to receive a resolution proposed to be submitted to Grand Lodge, relative to the examination of the children in the two Freemasons' Schools. What are our admirable old chief's wise remarks, remarks which we venture to press on the constitutional feelings and Masonic principles of a great many excellent brethren, who do not for once seem to apprehend the vital principles at issue? The M.W.G.M. said, that he believed the question of Bro. Beach arose out of the fact that the Chairman of the Board of Masters had refused to receive a notice of motion referring to two of the Masonic charities. In his opinion the Chairman of the Board was perfectly right in taking that course. It was a motion, as he had already stated, having reference to two of the Masonic charities, with which "Grand Lodge had nothing more to do than as subscribers. If a notice proposing to interfere with the British Orphan Asylum at Clapham had been put before the Board of Masters there could be no doubt that they would be justified in refusing to receive it. Grand Lodge had little more to do with the Masonic charities than with the British Orphan Asylum; that was to say, that it had nothing more to do with them than had any individual subscriber." This decision, Ex cathedra, by our lamented and constitutional G.M., Lord Zetland, will, we think, influence many whom our own inferior authority has not naturally convinced. Thus, then, the proper course, and the only proper course, for complainant and complaint, is to go before the House Committee, or the Quarterly Court; and no other proposal or proceeding can be anything else but a "brutum fulmen," or a step taken unadvisedly in entire ignorance of the true position of the Masonic Schools, towards the constituted bodies of our Masonic system. We have but one interest to serve, the interest of the Craft; and we trust we may be credited for being actuated in all that we put forward in the "Freemason" by a fervent desire to uphold the proper constitutional precedents of our valuable Order on the one hand, and the real interests and permanent welfare of our great educational institutions on the other.

MASONIC MEMORIES.

We all of us at times go back in the spirit of our minds to other days and ancient friends. For in Freemasonry, like in every thing else, Time, the great disturber and destroyer of all mundane institutions, often lays its heavy hand on us and the lodge, where we have spent so many happy hours. Change or sickness, absence or business, take us away for a short time from the company of contemporaries, and the gatherings of our confederates, and like as in some tale of the genii, in the meanwhile, a magic transformation has taken place. The old friends we knew so well have gone. Bro. Jones is sick and suffering, Bro. Brown has gone to live in the country, Bro. Simpson can't leave home of an evening, Bro. Barker has got tired of Freemasonry, Bro. Pogson is advised by his doctor not to face the night air, one or two have become married men, one or two have migrated elsewhere, and lo and behold, the whole personnel of the lodge is completely metamorphosed. We enter the lodge once again as of yore, we find the external appearances unchanged, and the old Tyler greets us with a smile, and nod, and a few words of fraternal welcome, "Long time since we have seen you, Bro. Cropper, where have you been? And then we approach the mystic sanctum, and find ourselves once more in a well-known seat. All looks as it ever did, except that array of faces, the greater part of which is actually unknown to us. Oh, we say, "Quando mutatus ab illo" is the lodge of to-day, from that good old assembly in which in happier hours we wiled innocently away a few sunny hours of life, amid the calls of duty, or the labours of refreshment. And then we almost start. No more good old P.M. Jones with his dogmatism and his lectures, his laying down the law, his infallible authority, his ready utterance, and his good memory. No; all is changed. A young P.M., excessively well got up, very civil, very pleasant, and very fluent, repeats those cherished formulæ which we have heard so often from friendly lips of old, from the brave, the true, the warm-hearted, and the most fraternal alike in speech and heart, and which we know so well, and have been acquainted with so long. The old lodge is the same in some respects to us, as it, indeed, must be, and yet it is not the same. We miss the smiling faces and warm hearts of the past; we miss friendship that never wavered, and fraternal feelings that never changed; we miss the old familiar companions of many an hour of work, of many a merry re-union; and, like ghosts in an assembly of the living, we are like strangers in a home which once was ours, and new comers in a lodge room which we aided to establish and adorn. And all we can say is, "Such is life." Time and change come to us all in turn; they dim the after hours of life with lowering clouds, they undermine friendship, and they deaden affection. The world is moving on, and we are growing old, and the "postnati" are getting the advantage of us, and think that we are not quite go-a-head enough for them. Like Masonic philosophers, let us accept calmly then, the inevitable and the actual. We have worked our work, we have done our duty, we have laughed at old Jowler, and cheered Pat Maguire's song, and have declared that our W.M. is a "jolly good fellow, which nobody can deny—ny." We have upheld the cause of Masonic order, or have furthered the claims of Masonic benevolence, and as every dog as its day, we have had ours. But still the memories of the past will supervene to whisper to us of many pleasant hours and happy gatherings, and to remember us of that good old lodge "quorum pars," once upon a time "magna fuimus."

RECENT PROVINCIAL GRAND LODGES.

We have had to report the meetings of several of our important Provincial Grand Lodges lately, and as a general rule they all display much Masonic activity, and a happy and peaceful and constitutional progress, on the good old foundations and according to the safe old landmarks of Freemasonry. In one Provincial Grand Lodge, indeed, which shall here be nameless, the brethren were told to report nothing to the press, and the so-called official report is alike meagre and unsatisfactory. Any alarm or jealousy of the Masonic Press, which only caters for the information of the Craft at large, is alike unworthy of our age and our Order. In West Lancashire, under the presidency of our active and distinguished Deputy Grand Master, the P.G. Lodge, in accordance with the powers of the Book of Constitutions, has unanimously resolved to tax all the lodges in West Yorkshire for the purposes of benevolence, and in order to aid the charities. No doubt this may appear, and probably will be, a heavy burden on some lodges which are not so prosperous as others, but it is a step which we venture to deem greatly calculated to promote the cause and real end of Freemasonry. For one thing is quite clear even to the most careless observer of the current claims and work of our great Masonic Institutions, that what they want is the general support of the Order at large. We do not say—because we know that our brotherhood, despite the opinion of some, is not a rich body—that every brother should subscribe alike, but we do contend that more yet might be done by our lodges and chapters, and by our brethren, if not individually, on the principle of association and co-operation. For if a certain number of brethren cannot afford properly each to be a Life Governor and Steward, they can club together and endow some of the chairs of the lodge, or offices of the lodge with a perpetual Life Governorship. People sometimes talk as if every member of the 91,700 Freemasons who are said to belong to our English Constitution at home and in the colonies could each become a Life Governor of our metropolitan charities. But this is an impossibility from the simple fact, that a large proportion at any rate of our Order have only fixed and limited incomes to deal with. When then this is the case, the principle of association and co-operation comes in. What you cannot do singly you can do combined with others, and we therefore urge on all our readers to make an election of one of the charities for 1876, and give it either personal or conjoint support. There can be no doubt that, if the example of West Lancashire is generally followed, the provinces will have a larger sum to deal with in support of the charities or of local benevolence than they have ever had before, and as the great aim and object of Freemasonry are ever said to be the active principle of fraternal benevolence, of aid to the distressed, of succour to the needy, of protection to the orphan, we are glad to call attention to the unanimous action of a very distinguished province under its noble and amiable head, and to note its hearty and truly Masonic proceedings, for the information of our readers, and the imitation of other provinces.

THE GRAND ORIENT OF FRANCE.

The annual meeting of this body is over for 1875, after a long and laborious session, beginning Monday, September the 13th, and ending Saturday the 18th. There does not seem to have been any matters of very great importance decided at this annual assembly, that is for those who are extra to French Freemasonry. The one point about which there seems to have been most discussion, and considerable excitement, was the proposal to enable the "Conseil de l'Ordre" to deal judicially with the case of a Master or an Orator, where the lodge had been led into irregularities of one kind or another, and which were opposed to the laws and regulations of the Grand Orient. As this was a departure from the normal condition of affairs, from the actual "Regime Maconnique," it led to much opposition, and was finally rejected. It was then a defeat for the Conseil de l'Ordre which formally proposed the alteration. The object, no doubt, was to strengthen the hands of the Conseil de l'Ordre in dealing instantaneously with some aberrations and vagaries, of which individual Masters and lodges have been guilty, and which may occur again, and to repress any deviations from the neutral and unpolitical path, which ought ever to be that of Freemasonry. But whether or no, the Grand Orient thought it better "stare super vias antiquas," we know not, but it unmistakably objected to and rejected the proposition. Beyond this we see little to note, as most of the business transacted was purely interesting to our brethren under the French Constitution. The Grand Orient took a very decided line as to the dissident chapters, and it is quite clear that the present anomalous arrangement will be perpetuated for some time longer. If we may venture to express an opinion on the matter, we should say, let the Grand Orient govern Craft or symbolic lodges, and a High Grade Metropolitan Chapter the High Grade Chapters. Our distinguished Bro. St. Jean has been re-elected President of the Conseil de l'Ordre; Bro. Cousin, Vice-President; Bro. Armand, Vice-President; and Bros. Caubet and Poule, Secretaries. The following brethren were also elected members of the Conseil:—Poule, Bremond, Roche, Loubatieres, Doué, De Heredia, Duhamel, Andrieux, Lagache, Bruand, André Rouselle, Marchal, Blanchon. We had prepared a translation of Bro. Pinchinat's oration at the close of the meeting for the week before last, but the great press of Masonic reports and correspondence has compelled us to abandon the project, and it will appear in the December "Masonic Magazine."

INTERNATIONAL EXHIBITION AT PHILADELPHIA.

Pressure in our columns of Masonic matters prevents us alluding to this subject, as we said last week.

THE FREEMASONS' BOYS' SCHOOL.

To the Editor of the Freemason.

Dear Sir and Brother,—

I observe in your notice of the proceedings at the last General Court of this Institution I am reported as having suggested that the time had arrived when the school building at Wood Green should be enlarged. Now, this is altogether so different from the import of the few words I ventured to address to the committee that I ask for space to be allowed to say, I attended the Court on purpose to point out that the very small number of boys which it was proposed to elect seemed not to be proportioned to the very large amount of Masonic benevolence which had been entrusted to the Committee of the Boys' School during the past and preceding years, and also to urge, in view of the continued support given to the institution, that a greater number of poor Masonic children should be provided for; and I pointed out that in consequence of so small a number being elected it requires such an enormous number of votes to be collected as to render it a distressing task to any poor widow to undertake a canvass, unless supported by influential Masonic friends or some powerful Provincial Lodge.

It is possible my diffidence in addressing so large a body of Governors may have rendered my meaning not quite plain, but it is a great stretch of imagination to interpret my remarks into a suggestion for increasing the building of the Boys' School: considering the large amount which has been expended on its erection, it appears to me improbable that it could not be made to accommodate a considerable number of children beyond those now under its roofs.

I remain, dear Sir and Brother, yours fraternally,

ALFRED LAYTON.

THE PROVINCE OF WEST YORKSHIRE AND THE BOYS' SCHOOL.

To the Editor of the Freemason.

Dear Sir and Brother,—

A few explanatory corrections in continuation of mine in your last week's number, in reply to Messrs. Tew and Perrott.

At p. 29 we have the expenditure under the head "Grants, Outfits, Gratuities," most strongly animadverted upon, it being stated that "the amount so expended in 1872, 1873, and 1874 is £114 5s. 0s." Quite right, but from this should be deducted £9, £4 10s., and £5 in the three years as gratuities of 10s. each to boys on leaving, and which Mr. Perrott knew was given to each boy personally by the chairman, and therefore could not appear in the tables, and of £1 5s. for silver medal in 1874 "most unaccountably" (I admit) charged under the wrong head of expenditure. This leaves £294 10s., thus made up:

" " 1874	62	10	0

Of this the "Reply" states only £294 10 0

Leaving "unaccounted for" £122 0 0

(with the £19 15s. = £141 15s.) "of which no account is rendered." The inference is obvious. Pray attend to the annexed statement:—

In the Report for 1873, published in 1874, the total accounted for on p. 37 is	50	0	0
" " p. 40 is	75	0	0

Deduct clerical errors, "Duplicate Entries,"

4, Collingwood Howe, Recknell, Holme, at £5 20 0 0

Deduct, paid in 1871, because the table really shows results commencing in the year 1871

55 0 0

And add, as shown on p. 48, Report 1875, because absolutely paid in 1874 47 10 0

And you have a sum £297 10 0 covering the whole amount paid in the three years, instead of a deficit of £122 (141 15s.) "of which no account is rendered."

It may be urged that this account is not readily intelligible, nor perhaps is it so, without explanation. The tables—pp. 37-40 in Report for 1873 (or those in previous Reports)—were not intended to serve any other purpose than that of showing

- That certain boys had left the institution.
- Date of leaving.
- Amount of grant on obtaining situation.
- Calling or occupation.

e.g. Samuel Collingwood left the institution in 1868. Obtained a situation in 1871. Was granted £5 on June 6, 1873, which was paid on 20th June, 1873.

I give this as an instance proving the impossibility of comparing the tables with the amount expended in any given year as shown in the balance sheet, and contend that it is quite sufficient for the information of the subscribers to set forth the manner in which boys on leaving the institution are assisted from time to time.

It is for the Audit Committee to examine and to satisfy themselves that the money granted by the General Committee has been properly expended, and, having done so, to certify the fact in the published balance sheet. And this has been done most scrupulously with reference to every shilling of expenditure.

To this statement, on behalf of the Audit Committee, I challenge contradiction.

This does not permit an examination sufficiently minute or careful to discover the cause of the discrepancy of £3, but it will be ascertained, while every grant and payment can be verified by reference to minute and cash book.

My paramount anxiety being to set myself right on money questions, I trouble you no further at present, leaving other misstatements for future correction.

If, however, simple integrity and common honesty are to be ruthlessly destroyed by the reckless attacks of self-constituted censors, whose reputation will be safe? I confidently rely on the qualified members of the Order to show unmistakably that personal spleen shall not be gratified at the expense of private character, or by the sacrifice of the interests of a noble institution, which already has suffered much at the hands of one who for eighteen months unfortunately interfered considerably with its usefulness, and who now, under the guise of an exponent of abuses, seems to be labouring as far as his petty power extends to produce its ruin.

I am, dear Sir and Brother, yours faithfully and fraternally,

FREDERICK BINCKES, Secretary.

LODGES OF EMERGENCY.

To the Editor of the Freemason.

Dear Sir and Brother,—

The Book of Constitutions, page 64, says that "a lodge of emergency may at any time be called by the authority of the Master," provided "the business to be transacted at such lodge of emergency shall be expressed in the summons, recorded on the minutes, and no other business shall be entered upon."

Further, at page 84, it says, "In cases of emergency" such and such points are to be attended to, "and the circumstances which cause the emergency" are to be stated.

I have ever been in doubt what latitude the Master of a lodge has in calling a lodge of emergency. I have initiated candidates at a lodge of emergency who have been going abroad at short notice, and conferred other degrees on properly qualified candidates who have come across the seas and who were not able to stay for a regular lodge, but I have always hesitated to do more than this.

It has been put to me that I can call a lodge of emergency at any time to initiate, pass, and raise brethren, provided they are elected at a regular lodge and the due time has elapsed between the degrees.

That is, supposing I did not find it convenient to confer degrees at a regular lodge, I could call a lodge of emergency the next week, if I pleased, and do the work. If this latitude be allowed by the Book of Constitutions I am sorry for it, and shall be glad of information thereon.

I am, dear Sir and Brother, yours fraternally,
HENRY JEFFS,
P.M. and W.M. No. 493.

MASONIC JEWELS.

To the Editor of the Freemason.

Dear Sir and Brother,—

In answer to the question of "An Enquiring M.M." as to his right to wear the "five-pointed star," as a jewel of the Third Degree, I must confess I do not think he is entitled to wear it. Certainly the rule laid down in the Book of Constitutions is rather vague, but we have no intimation, either in the ritual or elsewhere, that I know of, that that jewel in any way appertains to the Third Degree.

The only jewel I know of that could be legally worn in a Craft lodge, besides those specified in the Book of Constitutions, are the Charity jewel and R.A., and I cannot understand how they came to be omitted among the legal jewels.

Surely "An Enquiring M.M." might be content with the "badge" which fully designates his rank.

I am, yours fraternally,
E. Y. NEPEAN, P.M. 1373,
P.P.G.C. Hants and Isle of Wight.

FREEMASONRY IN THE NORTH OF ENGLAND.

To the Editor of the Freemason.

Dear Sir and Brother,—

I shall be very pleased to assist Bro. George Markham Tweddell in the compilation of a History of Freemasonry in the North of England.

The work is an extensive one, and at present I am not aware what materials Bro. Tweddell has collected, but if he will communicate with me, and explain his intentions as to the History, what information he lacks, &c., &c., I shall be delighted to supply all in my power, so as to render his work as complete and accurate as all the previous productions from his pen, and I feel sure Bro. the Rev. A. F. A. Woodford, M.A., will also gladly assist.

Yours fraternally,
WILLIAM JAMES HUGHAN,
Truro, 23rd Oct., 1875.

A CORRECTION.

To the Editor of the Freemason.

Dear Sir and Brother,—

Allow me to correct a slight mistake which was published in your valuable paper the "Freemason" of last week. I had the pleasure of visiting King Harold Lodge, No. 1327, to the installation meeting and banquet. The mistake is in the name. The name in your paper is McLucy, of No. 60, instead of McLevy, of Widow Son Lodge, No. 60, Charlottesville, Va., U.S. of America. By putting this correctly in your valuable paper next week, you will greatly oblige.

I am, dear Sir and Brother, yours faithfully, and fraternally,

McLEVY.

BRO. NORTON.

To the Editor of the Freemason.

Dear Sir and Brother,—

Referring to the memorial you so kindly inserted on my behalf, I find my address was omitted when the brethren signed the paper. I now hasten to repair the oversight, informing the Craft I shall be most happy to give full particulars of any distressing case on receipt of stamped directed envelope to,

Hopefully yours,

B. S. NORTON.

Tettenhall, Wolverhampton.

MASONIC JURISPRUDENCE.

To the Editor of the Freemason.

Dear Sir and Brother,—

A brother, in a fit of pique, writes to the W.M. that he will never enter the lodge again. The W.M. writes to him to ask whether the letter is intended as a resignation, but receives no answer. He then calls, and by word of mouth receives the reply that it may be taken in that light if the W.M. likes. My opinion is, that the letter did not imply resignation of membership; and that, therefore, no verbal communication, even if it amounted to resignation, outside the lodge, could justify the W.M. in having the brother's name taken off the books. I should like to hear the opinion of some of the many brethren, (your correspondents), who are much older and more experienced Masons than myself, as to the matter.

I remain, yours fraternally,

SIGILLUM.

THE MARK DEGREE.

To the Editor of the Freemason.

Sir,—

Your answer to "An Enquiring M.M." in your last issue is that rather of a hostile, than of a friendly informant. Permit me to supplement your replies.

1. Is the Mark Degree a recognized Masonic Order, i.e. by the Craft Grand Lodge?

It is not, any more than the 33° and the Temple, of which the Prince of Wales is G.M. But it is recognized by the 33°, by the Temple, by the Grand Chapters of Canada and the United States, and virtually by the Grand Chapter of Ireland.

2. Does it support the Masonic Charities?

The Mark Grand Lodge is a Vice-President of the Boys' and Girls' Schools, as are several of its Provincial Grand Lodges.

3. Their origin? In the 17th century Mother Kilwinning Lodge made members choose their marks, and charged them a fee of four shillings.

On January 7th, 1778, the Banff Operative Lodge laid down regulations for taking the degrees of Mark Man and Mark Master.

Mark lodges existed in England under the York Constitution; the minutes of the St. John's Mark Lodge at Bolton, dating from 1779.

The English Mark Lodges formed themselves into a Mark Grand Lodge under Lord Leigh in 1856, who was succeeded in 1860 by the Earl of Carnarvon, M.W. Pro Grand Master of the Craft.

4. Is the Mark Degree a necessary preliminary to the Royal Arch? Not in England, but in Scotland, Ireland, Canada, and the United States, no one can be a Royal Arch Mason unless he is a Mark Master; and an English R.A. Mason, unless he were a Mark Master, would find himself debarred from entering a chapter in these countries where any work was going on.

Yours fraternally,
[We do not see how we have incurred the animadversions of "A Mark Master." We were asked as to the Grand Lodge of England alone, and we answered accordingly, exactly as "A Mark Master" has answered with reference to England. We answered bona fide to the best of our knowledge and belief, and "A Mark Master" has himself shown that we were perfectly correct. We disclaim any hostility.—ED.]

A MARK MASTER.

A QUERY.

To the Editor of the Freemason.

Dear Sir and Brother,—

I see a paragraph in a Sheffield paper, in the account of the meeting of the Provincial Grand Lodge of West Yorkshire, in that town, on the 20th, which sounds to me rather oddly. In the Sheffield "Daily Telegraph" of October 21st these words which follow are reported as forming part of the speech of our estimable P.G.M. "These efforts have resulted in the election of the two girls, and one boy also has got in. For this we have to thank our Bros. Thomas Tew, D.P.G.M.; Thomas Hill, Chairman of our Charity Committee; H. Smith, our P. G. Secretary, and Bro. Simpson, of St. Oswald's Lodge, who acted as scrutineer." In the first place, may I ask what a "scrutineer" has to do with the election, since it is his duty to hold himself entirely aloof from any questions of voting? And in the next place, may I respectfully inquire what Bro. Thomas Tew, D.P.G.M., had to do with the election? Was he even present? And lastly, is it too presumptuous to ask, to whom is our excellent P.G.M. indebted for this garbled version of the real facts of the case? Can our worthy Bro. Hill say, as the presiding representative of West Yorkshire, that such a version given of P.G.M., who no doubt spoke to the P.G. Lodge in all good faith, as he always does, is a correct one in any way?

I am, dear Sir and Brother, yours fraternally,
PALMAN QUI MERUIT FERAT, W.Y.

THE BYE-LAWS OF THE YORK LODGE, 226.

We have been greatly pleased with this little book, which has been edited for this well-known lodge by Bro. Wm. Cowling, P.M., and P.P.S.G.W. West Yorkshire, and by Bro. Joseph Todd, P.M., P.P.G.O. It is a very admirable addition to our lodge histories, and to Masonic archaeology generally. For, in addition to a very lucid history of the York Lodge itself, it contains a very animated account of Freemasonry at York, and both these papers do great credit to the two able brethren who have respectively compiled them. The little work also contains a photograph of the oldest known Masonic picture in the world, that is of Sir Walter Hawksworth, G.M. of the ancient Grand Lodge of York from 1711 to 1713. We only regret that our pages, full now to repletion, will not allow of a longer review, but as we understand that a full review of this acceptable lodge history, admirably printed as it is, will appear in the "Masonic Magazine" for December, we must refer our readers to that serial for further particulars and a more detailed review. We can only congratulate the York Lodge and Bro. P.M.'s Cowling and Todd on this happily completed "labour of love," and we take this opportunity of adding, that the spirit in which the York Lodge has ever treated the question of its own valuable records is in the highest degree creditable to the lodge and brethren, because based on the true principles of general courtesy, and the Masonic characteristics of liberality and consideration to all. W.

AN OLD STORY. By S. C. HALL, Esq.

We have before us a very neatly printed and prettily got up story in aid of the cause of Temperance. As Freemasons we always endeavour, or ought to do so, to be temperate in all things, and, therefore, anything which will help forward a very praiseworthy endeavour after reformation in respect of evil habits or untoward excess deserves, and will command our friendly approval. We do not presume to be dogmatic or dictatorial, or to lay down the law on the matter, for, to say the truth, we are no admirers of the laws of Maine on this subject. But we gladly welcome all persuasive words and kindly efforts, whether in prose or verse, to improve defective habits, to restrain unhappy tendencies, and to point out to all, old or young, the healthful, and wholesome, and pressing claims of temperance on all who love their country, their families, their children, their neighbours, and their friends. We, therefore very readily commend Bro. Hall's poetic little tale to the kindly notice and perusal of our many readers at home and abroad.

W.

THE INDIAN GRAPHIC.

We have been much pleased with this extra issue of the "Graphic." It is well got up, and reflects credit on its enterprising publishers. The visit of our Grand Master to India makes all that relates to India just now very interesting to Freemasons and to Englishmen. We fancy this extra number will have a large sale.

MASONIC MUSIC.

"The Craft that has Weathered the Storm." By Bro. SHERWIN.—George Kenning.

We commend this sprightly and effective little song, alike eloquent in words and harmonious in melody, to the notice of our many musical brethren. It will suitably increase their own "repertoire," and greatly please their auditors.

PROVINCIAL GRAND LODGE OF STAFFORDSHIRE.

For the first time, the annual gathering of Freemasons of the Province of Staffordshire has been held at Lichfield, and the old city was on Tuesday aroused from its ordinary quietude by the assembling of nearly 200 brethren of the Craft. The Provincial Grand Lodge was opened about one o'clock in the St. John's Lodge-room, at the George Hotel, when the Right Worshipful Bro. the Earl of Shrewsbury, Provincial Grand Master, accompanied by the Very Worshipful Bro. Frank James, Deputy Provincial Grand Master, the officers of Grand Lodge, and a large number of Past Provincial Officers entered the lodge-room, and took their respective positions, the R.W. the Provincial Grand Master, &c., being saluted and received by the brethren Masonically. The other officers of Grand Lodge present were H. Wilson, 456, P.J.G.W.; the Revs. S. T. Tozer, 347, and T. B. Mundy, 1039, P.G. Chaplains; John Bodenham, 726, P.G. Treas.; W. Cartwright, 460, P.G. Sec.; E. Scrivener, 460, P.S.G.D.; James Watkin, 490, P.J.G.D.; S. Hill, 546, P.G.D.C.; Benjamin Love, 549, P.M. and P.G.A.D.C.; Thomas Bedmore, W.M. 1039, P.G.O.; Sampson Bennett, 91, P.G.S.B.; Herbert Russell, 1039; John Fowler, I.G. 1039; J. H. Henry, Sec. 1039; W. H. Durrad, 1039; J. Turnock, 1039; Chas. Lomas, 1039, P.G. Stewards; and H. Baggeley, 460, P.G. Tyler. The following Past Provincial Grand Officers also inscribed their names in the Tyler's book, viz.:—John Burton, 539, P.D.P.G.M.; Jos. Newman, 539, P. Prov. J.G.W.; George Singleton Tutor, P.D. P.G.M.; James Downess, 539, P.P.G. Chaplain; James Symons, 539, P.M. and P.P.G.S.B.; W. Bayliss, 539, P.M. and P. Prov. J.G.D.; J. W. Hancock, 1068, P.M. and P. Prov. G.P.; T. A. Jackson, 353 and 624, P.M. and P. Prov. S.G.D.; George Charles Richards, 301, P.M. and P.P.S.G.D.; J. C. McLean, 1039, P.P.G.P.; George Higham, 526, P.M. and P.P.G. Superintendent of Works; W. J. Gothard, 624, P.M. and P.P.G. Superintendent of Works; J. S. Witham, 850, P.M. and P.P. G.S.B.; James Rodgers, 418, P.P.G.S.D.; W. W. Burton, 731, S.W. and P.P.G.P. Derbyshire; Charles Matthews, P.M. and P.P.J. G.W.; George Spilsbury, 726, P.M. and P.P. S.G.W.; Clement Marsh, 463, P.P.S.G.W.; Sampson Bennett, 98, P.M. and P.G.S.B.; Henry Parker, 451, P.M. and P.P.J.G.W.; A. G. Prince, 546, P.P.J.G.D.; J. Webberley, 546, P.P.G.P.; Henry Kilner, 526, P.G. R.; W. J. Whittall, 482, P.M., P.G.R.; Jas. F. Wileman, 586, P.P.J.G.T.; Frederick P. Derry, 482, P.M. 1551, and P.P.G.W.; Thos. Taylor, 418, P.M., and P.P.G.S.W.; R. Bindley, 1060, P.M. and P.P.G.P.; John L. Gibbons, 425, P.M. and P.P.S. of Derbyshire; M. W. Wilson, 794, P.P.S.G.W. Warwickshire; George Cooper, 456, P.P.G.P., and a large number of officers and members of the various lodges in the province.

The lodge having been opened in due form, the R.W.P.G.M. requested Brother Cartwright, P.G. Secretary, to read the minutes of the last Provincial Grand Lodge, which was held in the Talbot Gallery at Alton Towers, and also the minutes of the three quarterly meetings which had taken place at Cannock, Longton, and Handsworth, and these were subsequently confirmed. Brother J. Bodenham, P.G. Treasurer, reported that the receipts to Grand Lodge for the year amounted to £115 16s., and the disbursements to £80 15s. 10d., leaving a balance of £105 1s. 2d., in addition to £110 belonging the Shrewsbury Benevolent Fund. The report was received and confirmed, and on the proposition of the R.W.P.G. Master, who referred to the deep indebtedness of the province for the work he had done, seconded by the V.W.D.P.G. Master, Brother Bodenham, was unanimously re-elected Tyler for the 39th time. These two offices are the only ones in connection with which the lodge has power to exercise their choice of selection.

Letters of apology were read from Brother Col. Vernon, P.P.G.M., and Brother Howells, P.P.G. Treasurer, the latter conveying his thanks to the brethren for the presentation of a jewel ordered by the last P.G. Lodge.

The R.W. the P.G. Master then proceeded to the appointment of his officers for the ensuing year, prefacing his selection by a few terse observations on his endeavours to confer the various appointments on those who Masonically merited them. After a few words of strong commendation, the R.W.P.G. Master re-appointed Brother Frank James, 539, as D.P.G.M., and re-invested him with the jewel of office.

The following is a list of the Provincial Grand Officers for the ensuing year.—

Frank James, 539	Prov. D.G.M.
Charles Trigg, 1039	Prov. G.S.W.
J. F. Wileman, 546	Prov. G.J.W.
Rev. Brooke Lambert	Prov. G. Chaplain.
Rev. Charles Lea, 526	Prov. G. Chaplain.
Francis Chaddick, 662	Prov. G. Reg.
J. Bodenham, 726	Prov. G. Treas.
W. Cartwright, 460	Prov. G. Sec.
Thomas Moore, 726	Prov. G.S.D.
John Waterson, 482	Prov. G.J.D.
W. Jones, 1520	Prov. G.S. Wks.
S. Hill, 546	Prov. G.D.C.
J. Payne Hall, 456	Prov. P.G.A.D.
John Lucas, 624	Prov. G. Swd. B.
T. Bedmore, 1030	Prov. G. Org.
T. R. Bettely, 482	Prov. G. Purst.
Richard Booth, 657	Prov. G. Std. B.
H. Bagguley	Prov. G. Tyler.

The R.W.P.G. Master, on presenting each jewel, accompanied it with some commendatory remark—in the case of Bro. T. Moore, as S.D., he said “as a near neighbour I have had the pleasure of seeing the manner in which you have conducted the duties of your lodge, and I give you this jewel feeling that you richly deserve it;” and to Bro. W. Jones, as Superintendent of Works, he observed, “you well deserve honour as the originator and first Master of the Shrewsbury Lodge.”

Some discussion then took place on the subject of the Shrewsbury fund, and suggestions were made as to the advisableness of concentrating the voting power of the Province, the result being the unanimous adoption of a resolution, earnestly recommending W.M.'s of lodges and also individual subscribers to forward their votes to the Committee of the Masonic Charities Association as the most likely method of concentrating and making effective the voting power of the Province.

The business of the lodge was then suspended and a procession took place to the Cathedral, headed by the band of the 1st Staffordshire Militia, the brethren wearing their respective jewels and Masonic clothing. Prayers only were read, in consequence of some established regulation by the Dean and Chapter, that none but prebends or clergymen connected with the cathedral are permitted to preach there. The Rev. Bro. Tozer, P.G. Chaplain, who had been selected by the R.W.P.G.M. to preach, not having any local standing in connection with the sacred edifice, it was ruled by his lordship that the sermon should be delivered on the return of the brethren to the lodge-room, and this was subsequently done after the usual evening service and anthem at the cathedral. Before leaving the latter place a collection of £21 was made, and this amount was voted by the brethren, on their return to the lodge-room, in the following way:—£5 5s. to the organ fund of St. Mary's Church; £5 5s. to the Rev. Bro. Tozer's schools; and £10 10s. to the Shrewsbury Benevolent Fund. £30 was also voted from Provincial Grand Lodge to the Institution for Aged Freemasons and Widows; and £11 was granted to pay off the balance due to the fund raised by the late Bro.

J. Pilling, for the purpose of providing Staffordshire ware to the Royal Institution for Boys, and also as a mark of respect to his memory.

The P.G. Lodge was subsequently closed, and the brethren “retired from labour to refreshment.”

The banquet took place at St. George's Hall, which was decorated with banners, &c., belonging to various lodges in the province. The tables were arranged so that the brethren of each lodge had their respective positions assigned to them, the R.W.P.G. Master and several Past Provincial Officers being seated at a cross-table at the head of the hall, immediately in front of the stage or platform. The choristers of the cathedral, under the presidency of Bro. Bedmore, who accompanied on the piano, occupied the stage, and interested the company with singing several pieces; and in the galleries were a large number of ladies, who appeared to take a deep interest in the proceedings, and to whom the Provincial Stewards served cake and wine.

The dinner was served by Bro. J. Owen, of the George Hotel.

“Non nobis Domine” having been sung by the choristers, the R.W.P.G. Master proposed, in suitable and loyal terms, the toast of “The Queen and the Craft,” “The Princess of Wales and the rest of the Royal Family,” “His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales, Most Worshipful Grand Master of England;” “The Right Hon. the Earl of Carnarvon, R.W. Pro Grand Master;” “Lark Skelmersdale, Deputy Grand Master, and the Officers of Grand Lodge, Present and Past.” These were all drunk with enthusiasm.

This was followed by the V.W.D.P.G. Master proposing “The Health of the Right Worshipful the Earl of Shrewsbury, Provincial Grand Master of Staffordshire,” referring in the most flattering terms to his deep solicitude for the furtherance of true Masonic principles in the province, to the interest he evinced in affording every facility for the brethren at the Albert Hall on the occasion of the installation of his Royal Highness the Prince of Wales, and to the influence and assistance he had given to the Masonic charities in presiding at their annual festivals.

The V.W.D.P.G. Master then alluded in happy terms to the marriage of the noble earl's daughter, Lady Theresa Talbot, and stated that a substantial proof of the love and respect of the brethren of the province for their noble chief had been shown by the handsome present to his daughter, now Lady Castlereagh.—The R.W.P.G. Master feelingly acknowledged the toast, expressing the pride he felt in wearing the medal which had been presented to him in connection with the Masonic charities, and his desire that every Mason in the province should carry out the tenets of the Craft. It was a gratification to him and his family to receive such numberless instances of kindly feeling on the occasion of his daughter's marriage. But lately he had received a large deputation from his tenantry, whilst the school children, the servants, in fact everybody, seemed to be vying with each other in expressions of kindness and good-will.

The toast of “The Very Worshipful Bro. Frank James, D.P.G.M.,” was next humourously proposed by Bro. Dr. Burton, P.P.D.G.M., and responded to by Bro. James in his usually practical and eloquent manner. This was followed by the toasts of “The Provincial Grand Wardens and other Officers of Provincial Grand Lodge,” “The Worshipful Masters of Lodges in the Province,” “The Visitors,” acknowledged by the Rev. R. Bigge, P.M. of 146; “The Provincial Grand Stewards,” and “The Ladies,” acknowledged by Bro. James Rodgers. “The Tyler's” toast closed the festival.

PROVINCIAL GRAND LODGE OF WEST YORKSHIRE.

On Wednesday, 20th inst., notwithstanding a steady down-pour of rain the whole day, a goodly number of the brethren of West Yorkshire assembled at the Cutler's Hall, Sheffield, in connection with the above lodge, about 50 out of 61 lodges being represented. The preliminary lodge was opened by the W.M., Bro. F. M. Tindall, and officers of the Wentworth Lodge, No. 1239.

Provincial Grand Lodge having been opened, it was presided over by Colonel Sir H. Edwards, who, after the customary salutation, said it afforded him much pleasure to meet the brethren that day, the first time the Wentworth banner had borne the honour. It afforded him an additional pleasure because of the unmistakeable loyalty the brethren had displayed on the occasion of the recent visit of H.R.H. the Grand Master of England and his amiable Princess in August last. He wished to express his gratitude to those who had lent them the use of the building for their meeting, and he was glad to learn that the brethren of Sheffield were contemplating the enlarging and improving of their own hall. He trusted the time was not far distant when every lodge in the province would hold their meetings in a building dedicated to Masonry. He next addressed the brethren on the subject of the Masonic Charities, and congratulated the province on the great accession of voting power it had attained this year. In the province of West Yorkshire no less a sum than £2000 had been subscribed during 1875 for the three great charities; but this amount has been contributed by only 174 brethren, leaving 2600 who had not directly contributed. As the Marquis of Ripon had often said, so must he—that he always found the same names in the list of subscribers. The province of West Yorkshire should do more. Never had such great exertions been required as at the recent elections in London, when the province secured the victory for their two girls and one boy. Referring to the growth of Freemasonry, the Prov. Grand Master said as admissions into Freemasonry were greatly on the increase, especially in this province, he earnestly urged W.M.'s of lodges to use the greatest care as to who were admitted into the Order; several Masonic clubs, he said, had been established in various towns by members of lodges, and he recommended that, whatever was the hour for closing public-houses in those places, that hour ought to be adopted for closing those clubs, as any later hour in opposition to the laws of the country tended to bring Freemasonry into disrepute. The Right Worshipful Prov. Grand Master, before concluding, passed a high eulogium on the ability of the late Bro. Freeman, of Huddersfield, who had died since the last meeting, and paid a high tribute to his memory.

The Deputy Prov. Grand Master having been saluted, briefly responded, after which the routine business of the meeting was proceeded with.

Bro. Thos. Hill then made a report of the Charity Committee, and stated that in order to secure the election of a second girl the brethren of Huddersfield, from which district the girl came, had subscribed the handsome sum of 200 guineas.

The next subject brought before the meeting was one which engrossed the interest of all the brethren present; it was a resolution brought forward by Bro. J. Cawthorn, P.M., on the subject of the management of the Masonic Boys' School.

Bro. Cawthorn said he came there as no man's champion, nor at the instigation of any one. He felt a deep interest in the educational work of the charities, as well as in the number of candidates who had from time to time been refused admission, and it was as their champion that he stood before that meeting. He contended that the sum of £67 per annum per boy looked exorbitantly high, and if the Prov. Grand Lodge, by adopting his resolution, were instrumental in securing the same advantages for £37 which they now got for £67, and so secure a greater number of admissions to the school, they would attain a great work. He moved, “That this Prov. Grand Lodge of West Yorkshire take into consideration the necessity of thoroughly investigating the management and expenditure of the Royal Masonic Institution for Boys, to the end that a more economic system of collecting and dispensing the funds of this institution may be arrived at, so that candidates who from time to time are excluded from its benefits by reason of the present system may, by a more judicious and less expensive management, be enabled to participate in the benefits of the charity.”

Bro. Isaac Booth, of Halifax, seconded the resolution, and in the course of an effective speech contrasted the excessively large and extravagant expenditure of the Boys' School with some other institutions of which he personally knew something. The Masonic Boys' School at Wood Green cost £52 per annum per boy, exclusive of interest for capital; whilst the London Orphan Asylum, which afforded as good an education, cost under £32; the Manchester Orphan Asylum a fraction over £34; and the "costly" Halifax Orphanage, with a far superior education, cost £27 7s. 10d. This year the number of applicants who were unable to gain admission was about 60, and the margin between the London Orphanage and the Masonic Boys' School was sufficient to clothe, maintain, and educate more than double that number.

After other brethren had expressed their opinion, much in the same strain, the resolution was put and carried, with only one dissentient.

Other resolutions in support of the various charities were then considered, after which the Prov. Grand Lodge was duly closed.

About 130 of the brethren afterwards partook of an excellent banquet, served in the dining room of the Cutlers' Hall. Mr. Robert Brookes, of High-street, Sheffield, was the purveyor.

The usual loyal and Masonic toasts were heartily given and received, and an enjoyable few hours were spent.

PROVINCIAL GRAND LODGE OF NORTH WALES.

By direction of Bro. Sir Watkin Williams Wynn, Bart., M.P., a Provincial Grand Lodge of Freemasons for the Province of North Wales and Shropshire was held at Bangor on Friday, the 22nd inst. The Grand Lodge was opened in the Penrhyn Hall, which was extemporised as a lodge-room, being tastefully fitted up under the direction of Bros. T. Hathaway, P.M.; John Jones, W.M.; T. Purvis, and Evan Evans, of St. David's (Bangor) Lodge, 384. The brethren, who mustered very strongly, proceeded to the cathedral, where Divine service was held at four o'clock. The procession entered the cathedral by the great west door under Bishop Skeffington's tower, the brethren appearing in full Craft Masonic clothing and jewels. The service was full choral, and was intoned by the Rev. D. H. Ellis, Mus. Bac., and Bro. the Rev. J. R. Walters, Chaplain of the Segontium (Carnarvon) Lodge. The anthem was Dr. Wesley's "Blessed be the God," which, with the other portions of the service, was magnificently sung by the cathedral choir. Brother Roland Rogers, Mus. Doc., Oxon, organist of the cathedral, presided at the organ. The sermon was preached by the Lord Bishop of Bangor, and at the close of the service, which attracted a large congregation, a collection was made in aid of the Masonic and local charities. The local arrangements were admirably carried out by Bro. R. Roberts, S.W., and other members of the Bangor Lodge. The banquet was served at the Castle Hotel, and was provided by Mr. Denman.

Obituary.

LATE BRO. D. D. BECK.

We regret to announce the death of Bro. David Davison Beck, which occurred on the 13th inst. Bro. Beck was initiated into Freemasonry in the Industry Lodge, 186, London, on the 25th February, 1868, and he became Master of the same lodge in 1874. He was also a member of the Royal Arch, and was First Principal Elect of the Industry Chapter, in which office he was to have been installed last Tuesday. He was one of the principal founders of the St. John of Wapping Lodge, No. 1,306, and was inducted in its chair in 1872. In the following year he installed his successor, and was presented on that occasion with a very handsome gold watch, besides a ten guinea jewel, in recognition of his services. At the time of his death Bro. Beck was forty-eight years of age. His loss will be deeply deplored by a large circle of friends and brethren, by whom he was admired for his genial qualities. He leaves a widow and five children, the eldest of whom is only fifteen years of age. His remains were interred in Nunhead Cemetery on Monday last, and were followed to their last earthly resting-place by a numerous concourse of brethren.

Felton and Sons' (of Albermarle-street) "Spécialité" sherry has now maintained its reputation more than three years. Comparing an analysis which we made recently with the analysis of three years ago, we are glad to see that it is still an honest, sound wine, free from acid, and of excellent quality. It has attained and deserves a great medical reputation.—"Medical Record."

GRAND LODGE OF NEW BRUNSWICK.

We have received from Bro. Graham the address of the Grand Master, of which the following is an abstract.

Officers and Brothers,--

The time for the annual meeting of Grand Lodge is a time for self-examination on the part of the Grand Master. He is called upon to review his own acts; to consider whether he has been faithful and diligent in the discharge of his duties, and whether he has laboured as zealously as he ought to have laboured in the interests committed to his care. Whilst I will not say that I have wilfully neglected any important duties, I must confess my consciousness of many lost opportunities to do good, for which I invoke your consideration towards myself.

In the kind feeling and harmony that prevail in our jurisdiction you will recognize the handiwork of the Great Architect of the Universe, and return Him thanks for this and all His other blessings bestowed upon us.

The installation of His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales as Grand Master of England was an event that caused much interest, not only among the Freemasons in the Empire, but among all classes of people. The exalted position of the Prince of Wales, the magnificence of the ceremonial of his installation, the demonstration of warm affection excited by his appearance in Grand Lodge, the admirable spirit of his address on assuming his official station, and his own acknowledgment of attachment to our time-honoured fraternity, and of his determination to further its objects, are sufficient to make this event one of the most important in the annals of Freemasonry in the British Empire, and it is one that I trust will shed a lustre, not only upon the institution, but upon our distinguished brother.

Another striking Masonic event was the dedication in the city of Rome of a magnificent suite of apartments for the uses of the Craft—a ceremony in which nearly one thousand brothers united, and the public celebration of which demonstrates the Masonic unity now prevailing in Italy, as well as the growth of liberty in the Eternal City.

The dedication of the fine new Masonic Temple in New York was an event of more than ordinary interest. The Grand Master of that State courteously extended to the G.M. and other prominent officers of this Grand Lodge an invitation to be present and participate in the ceremonies. The Deputy Grand Master and the Grand Secretary concurred with me in the idea that the occasion was one to call for the congratulations of the entire Craft in the Province, and we, therefore, sent the following telegram to the Grand Lodge of New York:—

St John, New Brunswick, June 4, 1875.
To Ellwood E. Thorne, Grand Master:

The Grand Lodge of New Brunswick fraternally greets the Grand Lodge of New York, and congratulates the fraternity of the Empire State on the great events of the week. May the Hall just dedicated ever be the abode of brotherly love, and the projected Asylum soon be an accomplished fact—a monument testifying alike to the great principles of our institution and of the devotion of New York Masonry to those principles.

John V. Ellis, Grand Master,
Robert Marshall, Deputy Grand Master,
Wm. F. Bunting, Grand Secretary.

With all the Masonic jurisdictions with which we are in fraternal communication the most kindly relations prevail.

Commissions have issued to W. Bro. W. W. Estabrooks, Past Grand Chaplain of the Lodge of Iowa, and a native of this province, as our representative at that Grand Lodge; and to Bro. Christopher Dhal as our representative at the Grand Lodge of Utah.

MASONIC BENEVOLENT ASSOCIATIONS.

It is a pleasing sign of the times that lodges of instruction, besides the contributions which the members give in their subscriptions to the charities, have instituted and are instituting Masonic Benevolent Associations for the purpose of making members of the Craft, their wives, sons, and daughters Life Governors of the institutions. One is in full working in the St. James's Union, and a new one is to be started next week in connection with the Metropolitan Lodge of Instruction, which is held at the Portugal Hotel, Fleet-street, every Friday at 7 o'clock. The members pay a shilling a week, but the non-Masons take no part in the government of the association. The President is Bro. P.M. Stacey, 180; the Vice-President, Bro. John While, W.M. 228; and the committee are: Bros. Squirell, 206; Skelton, J.W. 1056; W. P. Webb, 985; Abell, 55; Collett, 190; F. Caton, 1349; J. Caton, 765; Dodson, 55; J. Rowlands, 1098 and 1541; Monroe (of the Rifle Lodge, Edinburgh). Bro. Bingham is the Treasurer, and Bro. Snelling, 180, the secretary.

The New Concord Lodge of Instruction, meeting at the Rosemary Branch, Hoxton, has started a similar one for obtaining a Life Governorship in one of the charities. The officers are:—

PRESIDENT, Bro. Pearcey, 228.

VICE-PRESIDENT, Bro. Vanderling, 199.

TREASURER, Bro. Halford, 228.

COMMITTEE: Bros. W. H. Main, 813; Hobbs, 749; Braine, 65; Sadler, 1471; Cook, 65; Hickman, 228; Killick, 228; Isaac, 188; Stock, 1178; Knight, 1366; Trewinnard, 228; Madders, 1309.

HON. SECRETARY, Bro. Casworth.

THE AMERICAN WATCH COMPANY.

WALTHAM BUILDINGS, HOLBORN CIRCUS, LONDON, E.C.

ROBBINS AND APPLETON, GENERAL AGENTS.

The new offices of this leading American Watch Company have been specially fitted up to meet the demands of increasing business. Watches manufactured by this Company are guaranteed to give satisfaction, not being subject to the disarrangements attending the old style timekeeper. The best and cheapest watches in the market are manufactured by this Company.

Writing upon this subject, Sir Edmund Beckett (late Mr. E. B. Denison) says:—"Although labour is dearer in America than here, this machinery enables them to undersell English watches of the same quality." Vide page 322. The same authority also remarks, "There can be no doubt in the mind of any one who understands machinery that this is the best as well as the cheapest way of making machines which require precision and uniformity."

AMERICAN "WALTHAM" WATCHES

can be obtained of all respectable Retail Jewellers in the United Kingdom and Abroad.

RAILWAY ACCIDENTS.

A RAILWAY ACCIDENT to any particular person is a (theoretically) remote contingency; but as it may happen, as a matter of fact, the very next journey undertaken, and as the sum at which it will be seen the risk (in a pecuniary sense) may be extinguished FOR LIFE is almost absurdly small, it is not too much to say that the insurance is an OBVIOUS DUTY in the case of most travellers. £1000 if killed, with liberal allowances if injured, for a single payment of £3, covering the whole life. Smaller amounts in proportion.—RAILWAY ACCIDENT MUTUAL ASSURANCE COMPANY (Limited). RESERVE FUND AND GUARANTEE, £14,000. No. 42, Poultry, London.—For Forms, &c., apply to Mr. W. Burr, F.S.S., Manager.

RUPTURES—BY ROYAL LETTERS PATENT.

WHITE'S MOC-MAIN LEVER TRUSS

Is allowed by upwards of 500 Medical Men to be the most effective invention in the curative treatment of HERNIA. The use of a steel spring, so often baneful in its effects, is here avoided; a soft bandage being worn round the body, while the requisite resisting power is supplied by the MOC-MAIN PAD and PATENT LEVER, fitting with so much ease and closeness that it cannot be detected, and may be worn during sleep. A descriptive circular may be had, and the Truss, which cannot fail to fit, forwarded by post, on the circumference of the body, two inches below the hips, being sent to the INSURANCE NOTICE. THE RAILWAY ACCIDENT MUTUAL ASSURANCE COMPANY (LIMITED).

IMPORTANT TO THE PUBLIC.

A GOOD INVESTMENT.—On the 7th October last a gentleman belonging to Manchester paid the new Railway Accident Mutual Office in the Poultry, London, three pounds for a Whole Life Policy. On the 28th December he received a serious concussion in one of the Railway Accidents so plentiful about that time. He has since been entirely unable until very recently to attend to business, and for his small outlay (£3) with the Company he has been paid an allowance of £102, while his Insurance remains as good as ever for the rest of his life, without further payment.—Manchester Weekly Times.

100,000 ACRES OF THE FINEST FARMING LAND IN AMERICA FOR SALE.

IN LOTS TO SUIT PURCHASERS.
AT FROM £3 TO £4 PER ACRE.

THE LAND is situated in SOUTH-WESTERN MINNESOTA, and is open, rolling prairie of unsurpassed fertility, and all ready for the plough. The climate is as healthy as any known, so much so as to have made the state a resort for invalids.

Very unusual opportunities are now presented for profitable farming and investment in this portion of the State.

Droughts, which are such a frequent cause of loss to farmers in the West, have never been known in this region. The country is interspersed with beautiful lakes, which abound in fish, and wild fowl are plentiful. The land can be made to pay from £8 to £12 per acre, with certain crops recently introduced, or say a profit of from 100 to 200 per cent. on the total outlay, so that with £1000 capital, properly managed, from £1000 to £2000 per year can be realised, a proportionately larger amounts of capital; as to which full particulars, giving details of the farming, &c., will be furnished to applicants but no one is advised to attempt the business with less than £500 capital.

Concerning the land, &c., applicants will be referred to His Excellency the Governor of the State, and to prominent Bankers, Merchants, and others in London, Liverpool, New York, Saint Paul, and elsewhere; and as to the profitability of farming there, to parties who have purchased land and are now working their farms.

METROPOLITAN.

PYTHAGOREAN LODGE (No. 79).—This lodge held its second meeting of the season at the Ship Hotel, Greenwich, on Monday the 25th ult., and there were present Bros. Charles Munyard, W.M.; Roberts, P.M. as I.P.M.; Charles Nash, P.M. as Sec.; Shaw, S.W.; J. J. Hooper, Wilkins, J.W.; Dussek, S.D.; Thompson, J.D.; Partridge, I.G., and several other brethren. The minutes of the previous lodge were read and confirmed. A petition was then presented from a distressed brother, and on the motion of Bro. Wilkins, seconded by Bro. Dussek, a sum of three guineas was voted to him from the benevolent fund of the lodge, and it was also moved and seconded by the same brethren that a petition in his favour be signed for presentation to the Lodge of Benevolence, and the motion being unanimously carried, the petition was signed accordingly. The lodge was then closed and adjourned until the last Monday in the ensuing month.

ZETLAND LODGE (No. 511).—A meeting of this lodge was held on Wednesday evening, at Anderson's Hotel. Bro. S. Pardoe, W.M., presided. Bros. Southron, Channon, Everett, and Woolf were raised, and Bros. Shute and Brown passed. Bro. G. Read, P.M. and Secretary, installed Bro. W. J. Russell as W.M., who appointed as his officers Bros. S. Pardoe, I.P.M.; Whitlock, S.W.; Elborn, J.W.; A. Barfield, P.M., Treas.; G. Read, P.M., Sec.; Avery, S.D.; Webber, J.D.; Ward, I.G.; Schofield, P.M., M.C.; and Cole, W.S. Bro. S. Pardoe was presented with a very handsome P.M.'s jewel. £20 was given to the Royal Masonic Benevolent Institution, and thirty guineas to the Girls' School. Nearly 120 brethren sat down to banquet. Bros. Hodges, Vaughan, and Channon responded for the initiates, and Bro. Dixon, P.G.D. Berks and Bucks, for the visitors, of whom there were twenty-eight present. Bro. Knight Smith having presided at the organ during the evening, and also favoured the company with some excellent singing, was also complimented with a special vote of thanks in a speech from the W.M.

ROYAL OAK LODGE (No. 871).—The regular meeting of this well established lodge was held at the White Swan Tavern, 217, High-street, Deptford, on Thursday, October 28th. Bro. S. O. Lewin, W.M., presided. There were present Bros. H. J. Tison, J. J. Pakes, J.W.; F. Walters, P.P.G.P. Middlesex, P.M., and forty members. The visitors were Bros. C. Horsley, P.P.G.R. Middlesex, P.M. 33, &c.; H. P. Steil, 781; J. T. Adams, 1326; T. W. Crout, 1326; W. Bardman, I.G. 1531; J. Marking, 879; H. R. Harker, 79; J. Triptree, 13; H. W. Wieland, 1428; J. Topp, 913, and others whose names we were unable to ascertain. Bro. S. O. Lewin, W.M., opened the lodge in the several degrees. Bro. J. Andrews, I.P.M., in a perfect manner passed T. W. Crout, 1326, and H. W. Wieland, 1423, to the degree of a Fellow Craft Freemason. He raised Bros. J. McDonald, and J. T. Adams, 1326, to the Master Masons Degree. By a large majority being but four dissentients it was resolved that the lodge from its funds reimburse Bro. S. Andrews, P.M., the cost of the jewel worn by him as one who assisted as Steward at the Installation of H.R.H. the Prince of Wales. Bro. J. Baxter Langley, J.D., was elected as Steward to represent the lodge at the annual festival, to be held for the Royal Benevolent Institution Festival in 1876. All business being ended, the lodge was closed. The next meeting will be held on Thursday, November 25th. An important notice of motion was given by the Secretary, Bro. F. Walters, to revise the bye-laws. A good supper was served.

ASAPH LODGE (No. 1319).—On Monday last the annual installation meeting of this lodge was held at Freemasons' Hall, in the beautiful room which is adorned with Sir Godfrey Kneller's painting of Sir Christopher Wren, Master of the Old St. Paul's Lodge, (now Lodge of Antiquity), in 1685. This meeting of the Lodge of Asaph, is the only one in the year at which there is a banquet, all its other meetings, (and there are eight of them) being devoted to work only. At all the meetings there is a large attendance of brethren, the lodge, which was founded for the convenience of members of the theatrical and musical professions, meeting in the day time, generally at two or three o'clock, and leaving the evenings open for the fulfilment of professional engagements. On the occasion of the installation the lodge meets at two o'clock, and in conformity with the usual custom this was the case last Monday. Immediately after two the lodge was opened by the W.M., Bro. Edwin Frewin, assisted by Bros. C. S. Jekyll, S.W.; W. A. Tinney, J.W.; E. Stanton Jones, P.M. Sec.; E. Terry, S.D.; George Buckland, J.D.; Henry J. Tinney, I.G.; Charles Coote, P.M.; James Weaver, P.M.; Edward Swanborough, D.C.; John Read, A. A. Pendlebury, H. Massey ("Freemason"), John Boatwright, George Tyler, W. F. Cremer, Steward; Henry Baker, Thomas W. Gough, Joseph Perry, George Horton, John M. Ball, Henry Snyders, Julian Egerton, John Strachan, William Graves, Joseph Horton, John Friskney Hutchins, Olaf Svendsen, Henry Lazarus, Gustavus R. Egerton, Frederick Kendall, William Lewis Barrett, James Greenhill, James Romberg Poulter, Arthur Thomas, Harry Cox, and several others. In the course of the afternoon several other members and visitors were present; among the former being Bros. Cox, C. H. Stephenson, A. Swanborough, Wellard, Henson, Soutar, Coles, Maclean, and Wand; and among the latter Bros. Charles Dickens, W.M. of the Maybury Lodge, 969; F. Binckes, P.G.S.; A. Kirseborn, St. Olaf's, Christiana; R. J. Spiers, P.M. 10; J. White, S.D. 860; J. Finch, P.M. 173; C. F. Hogard, P.M. 205; J. Poole, 1050; J. Sugg, S.W. 862; J. Strachan, P.P.G.W. 24; J. Barnett, S.W. 185; V. Tussaud, 231; Carter, 382; Thomas Lawler, 92; J. Goucher, 1017; H. Mackintosh, 4; W. Hilton, P.M. 780 and 1351; J. Large, 771; and H. Buckland, 9. The minutes, which had been very carefully prepared by Bro. E. Stanton Jones, were read by him and confirmed; and the statement of accounts shewed a balance of nearly £60 in the treasurer's hands. The accounts of the Benevolent Fund attached to the lodge (Bro. E. S. Jones, President) exhibited the total sum of £143 invested, a result which was hailed with great applause on its being announced. The work of installation of a new Master was thus inaugurated under most cheering circumstances, and at the request of the W.M., Bro. Frewin, Bro. James Weaver, I.P.M., took the chair, and opened the lodge in the Second Degree. Bro. Frewin then presented to Bro. Weaver Bro. C. S. Jekyll, S.W. and W.M. elect, and with all due formalities Bro. Jekyll was installed W.W. of the Asaph Lodge. Bro. Frewin was invested as I.P.M., and the offices of the lodge were distributed among the following brethren:—Bros. W. A. Tinney, S.W.; E. Terry, J.W.; Charles Coote, jun., Treas.; E. Stanton Jones, P.M., Sec.; George Buckland, S.D.; Edward Swanborough, J.D.; C. Wellard, I.G.; Cox, D.C.; C. H. Stephenson, W.S.; Gustavus R. Egerton, Organist; and Gilbert, Tyler. After the delivery of the addresses, Bro. E. Terry, J.W., proposed, and Bro. Weaver, P.M., seconded the transmission of a letter of condolence, in the name of the brethren of the lodge, to Bro. Frederick Burgess, on the loss of his son. The motion was unanimously adopted; and a similar motion on the sudden death of Bro. Ambrose Austin's wife, was proposed by Bro. Charles Coote, P.M., seconded by Bro. Frewin, I.P.M., and also adopted nem. con. Lodge was then closed, and the whole party adjourned to Freemasons' Tavern, where a splendid banquet was prepared for them by Bro. C. E. Francatelli. On the removal of the cloth the toasts were proposed. There being no Grand or Past Grand Officer present, Bro. Binckes responded for the "The Grand Officers," and explained that in the absence of Grand Officers he had high authority in the Order for saying that a Grand or Past Grand Steward was the proper brother to reply to the toast. He thought that in such an assembly he would have their indulgence, because he might be looked upon in a managerial point of view as a general utility man, who, when a star of some brilliancy had been engaged and had disappointed the manager, was called on to fill his place. Speaking as a general utility man, in the absence of Lord Skelmersdale, he would say of that nobleman that he had youth, zeal, energy, and ability on his side to occupy such an exalted position with. Masons hailed the advent of such Grand Officers to rank and dignity with delight, and it was on behalf of such brethren that he returned sincere thanks to this lodge for having remembered them. The W.M. next proposed "Prosperity to the Benevolent Fund of the Asaph Lodge." At these annual banquets the W.M. appealed to the members of the lodge to support this fund. It was not much in want of means, but the brethren must remember that the subscriptions to the lodge were small, and as it was only once a year the W.M. asked for support of the fund, he hoped they would not forget that which was the distinguishing characteristic of a Freemason's heart, and as liberally as they could support the Benevolent Fund. Bro. E. Stanton Jones said he felt it a high honour to have his name associated again with this toast, not that he could do justice to it, but because it gave him an opportunity to bring the fund again before their notice, and to ask them to support it. He wished he had Bro. Binckes's power of speech or his ability, as he would then be able to show the brethren better how they should subscribe. But they were all acquainted with the object for which the fund was started, and in a lodge like that, comprising the professors of the sister arts of the drama and music, it would only be necessary to mention the word charity to obtain from them the means of devoting a sum of money on behalf of an object of distress, not only a brother in distress, but his wife or family. To those who were in affluent means, or so considered themselves, he would say "Give to the fund, I am sure you will not regret supporting it." To those who might not be so well off he would say "give." If it was only from a selfish motive he would say "give," for the proper time to give was now. When adversity met a man and he asked for assistance from this fund, the committee received the application, and certainly did justice to the fund itself by distributing it according to the manner in which each brother had contributed towards that fund. He hoped the fund would now have a very liberal addition. The brethren were to be congratulated on the very steady manner in which the fund, though small, was progressing. This was due to the prosperity of the members of the lodge, and he sincerely wished that that prosperity might ever continue. But if they went on at the present rate it would take twenty-eight years to place the fund on what he might consider a stable basis. He would therefore ask the brethren now to give to the utmost of their ability. The W.M. then rose to present a Past Master's jewel, value ten guineas, to Bro. Frewin, I.P.M., and said that those brethren who had been present in lodge were aware of the very satisfactory manner in which Bro. Frewin had discharged the duties of the chair. The lodge had therefore been pleased to vote him a small recognition of his services in the shape of a jewel. On it was the superscription,—"Presented to Bro. Edwin Frewin, Past Master of the Asaph Lodge, No. 1319, in recognition of his very efficient services as W.M., and one of the founders of the lodge, 1874-5." He (the W.M.) sincerely trusted that Bro. Frewin might be spared for many years to come to the lodge and take his seat as a P.M. Bro. Frewin said that as it had always been a rule in the Asaph Lodge not to make long speeches he would not break that rule, but he might say that he felt a little bit proud that night—as a distinguished statesman of the present day would say—for three especial reasons; 1st, because the jewel belonged to Freemasonry; 2nd, because it was an emblem of the lodge; and 3rd, because of the lodge from whence it came. 1st. Ever since he had the honour and pleasure of becoming a Mason he had used his best endeavours to act really and truly as a Mason. 2ndly. If it had not been for the peculiarity of the Asaph Lodge—meeting in the day-time—it would have been impossible to have ever obtained the honourable position he held that night. Lastly, he was proud of the jewel, because the brethren of this lodge had given it him. Many of the brethren he had known ever since they were boys. He and they had been boys together; they had grown together in their professional duties, and now they had presented him with this jewel. On this account, too, he was proud of it; it was a mark of their respect and esteem for him, and a little memento that the brethren had been satisfied with his endeavours to do his duty during the year. He had now a much more pleasing task than to return thanks for himself—to propose "The Health of the W.M." They had known him in the lodge in the various offices which he had filled in a style that warranted their selection of him as their W.M. His year of office would be a prosperous one for the lodge, even more so than previous years. It was pleasing to have to remark that they never had one word of contention in the lodge, and they expected to be as happy under Bro. Jekyll. The W.M. responded. It was a proud thing to be Master of the Asaph Lodge, and he thanked the brethren for electing him to that office. He would endeavour to carry out his duties in an able way. The Asaph Lodge was purely a working lodge. The brethren met during the year purely for the objects of Masonry, and they were satisfied with one banquet during the year. He hoped that that would always be their rule, and he also trusted that the way in which he performed his duties would meet with the approbation of the brethren. Bro. E. Stanton Jones here announced that the contributions that evening to the Benevolent Fund amounted to £20 6s. 6d. Bro. Charles Dickens, in reply to the toast of "The Visitors," said,—It is, I confess, with feelings of no little disappointment that I rise to return thanks for my brother visitors on this occasion—not with a feeling that comes of being disappointed in the expectation of a pleasant evening, because that, I think, I can speak for them—certainly I can speak for myself—we have enjoyed to the full, not only in those material blessings for which the Freemasons' Tavern is, we will say, more or less distinguished, but also for those sweeter pleasures for which this lodge has been so long held in so honourable a reputation, a reputation which I am sure we can go away and confirm by our own experience. But my disappointment is a personal matter, notwithstanding. I was certainly in hopes when I took my seat at this hospitable board and saw so distinguished a Mason present as our Bro. Binckes, that at all events there was no chance of my being called upon to make any sort of speech at all; but that Bro. Binckes would, if he would allow me to say so, be selected as the scapegoat on this occasion, and would carry our thanks and compliments to you into a species of oratorical wilderness, in which he is so much at home. But, W.M. and brethren, a cold shudder came over me when I suddenly reflected that my Bro. Binckes was so high and distinguished in the Craft that he would be selected to respond for "The Grand Officers," and when I heard him "perorating" in that manner I wished that I had the art of doing it. I felt at least that I should have very possibly to say something to you, and I have been endeavouring to frame some little formula of thanks which would convey to you a portion of what I, and I am sure what my brethren around me feel, for your kindness to us this evening. My Brother Spiers and I have taken counsel together on this point, and we have come to the conclusion that the heartiest thanks we can give you will be summed up in the words, "We thank you most sincerely." We claim your indulgence when I say there is a peculiar fitness in the scheme which produces the Master of the Maybury Lodge as the representative of the visitors to your lodge, our two lodges not only bind brethren together by those ties of brotherhood by which all Freemasons are united, but ours are what we may call sister lodges. We have, besides our Masonic affinity, a greater affinity still—we are fellows and kindred in art. The Maybury Lodge, as you are doubtless all aware, was founded by the most esteemed, I may go so far as to say most distinguished, actor of our time—Benjamin Webster. It consists at this moment, and among its ranks are to be found many of the most distinguished exponents of the drama. Therefore, as representing them, I can assure you it is a particular pleasure to me, and one which I shall not fail to report to them, that I have had the honour of sitting at the board, where I have had the honour of seeing so many well known faces around me. I can say again I thank you for the visitors for the great kindness you have shown to us to-day, and in the name of the brethren of the Maybury Lodge "I greet you well." Bro. Charles Coote, P.M., replying for the "P.M.'s," said that as each succeeding Master took possession of the chair he felt he was getting somewhat older, and lower down in the lodge. He had the honour of being a very old P.M.; he did not mean in years, because a man of thirty might be an old P.M.; but he would like to begin again being the Master of the lodge, and go on and come back again. In all his Masonic career he had never felt anything equal to the pleasure he had had in being one of the founders of the lodge. It was a body which brought men together who were associated in their professional duties. He could endorse what the W.M. had said that there had been no contention among the brethren. They were doing their work as well as any lodge in existence. The brethren enjoyed themselves whenever they had a banquet, which was once a year, and they devoted their money to what he would call the essence of Freemasonry, the institutions. He did not like the use of the word "charity;" it ought not to be introduced. Freemasons subscribed to that which might be of some use to them in adversity. This lodge showed how much pleasure brethren who did not indulge in banquets had in the fruits of their abstinence. They ought to meet for truly Masonic purposes; but still he would be very sorry to see the day come when they could not meet for social enjoyment, as they had that evening. Bro. Jones and Bro. Weaver also replied, and Bros. W. A. Tinney, S.W., and C. Coote, jun., Treas., responded to the toast of "The Officers." The brethren then separated. In the course of the evening some beautiful vocal and instrumental music was performed, in which Bros. Buckland, Lawler, E. S. Jones, W. J. Ward, George Tyler, H. J. and W. A. Tinney, John Read, and several others took part.

CHAUCER LODGE (No. 1540).—The regular meeting of this late addition to the muster roll of lodges was held on Wednesday evening last at the Bridge House Hotel, Southwark (Bro. Spencer's), but from unavoidable causes the two principal officers were absent. Bro. T. J. Sabine, the W.M., as Grand Sec. to the Provincial Grand Mark Lodge of Sussex, was, in virtue of his office, obliged to attend the behests of his Provincial Grand Master at Hastings, while Bro. Catley Mason was prevented from assuming the Senior Warden's chair in consequence of the death of his father, whose funeral was to take place on the following day. The lodge was called for six o'clock, but Bro. F. Walters, the Sec., who had been appointed by the W.M. to preside, did not attend until ten minutes to seven. This worthy and veteran brother had no doubt good reasons for being so late, but he did not state what they were, although he apologised to the lodge. Naturally the brethren were impatient at this long delay, and we sincerely hope that such a hitch will not again occur. However, everything in this sublimity abode must come to an end, and as we have said, Bro. Walters formally opened the lodge at ten minutes to seven. There were present Bro. J. J. Hooper Wilkins, acting as I.P.M. and Sec.; the Senior and Junior Deacons and the Inner Guard. There were five candidates for passing, viz., Bros. E. Emanuel, J. Emanuel, Worster, Willats, and Crosbie, and the acting W.M. performed the ceremony in his usual clear and impressive style. In the absence of the W.M. the bye-laws of the lodge were left over for further consideration. There being no further business, the lodge was closed in due form, and the brethren shortly afterwards separated.

PROVINCIAL.

ROCHDALE.—Probity and Freedom Lodge (No. 367).—A meeting of this lodge was held at the Bull's Head Hotel, Smallbridge, Rochdale, on Oct. 21st. The lodge was opened in due form at 7.15 p.m. by Bro. J. J. Ashworth, W.M. The minutes of last meeting were read and declared correctly recorded. The lodge was opened to the Second Degree, when Bro. Henry Ashworth was passed to the degree of Fellow Craft by Bro. Jones, P.M. The lodge was then opened in the Third Degree, and Bro. Swift was raised to the Sublime Degree of a Master Mason by Bro. T. Baker Ashworth, P.M. The lodge was closed in peace and harmony at 9.15 p.m. by the W.M. The brethren and visitors afterwards sat down to banquet.

ORMSKIRK.—West Lancashire Lodge (No. 1403).—On Wednesday week the brethren of the West Lancashire Lodge, No. 1403, celebrated the festival of St. John, at the Commercial Hotel, Ormskirk, when the installation of P.M. Bro. John Batty Lambert, P.P.G.S.D., East Lancashire, the W.M. elect, took place. The career of the lodge, which was consecrated three years ago, has been of the most satisfactory character, and on the present occasion the brethren of the "mystic tie" mustered in good force to do honour to the pleasing event. The lodge was opened according to ancient custom by Bro. Philip B. Forshaw, W.M., who was supported by Bros. John Prescott, P.P.G.J.W.; J. Baxendale, P.P.G.J.W.; S. Wyld, P.M.; W. C. Edge, P.M.; G. Gould, J.W.; H. Ashmore, W.M. 1325, as S.W.; J. B. Forshaw, Treas.; P. Draper, Sec.; R. Chamberlain, S.D.; J. Winstanley, J.D.; J. B. Lambert, P.M., D.C.; and W. G. Watts, Tyler. Amongst the visiting brethren were Bros. E. Ashton, W.M. 580; J. Fogg, 580; J. Taylor, St. Helen's; Geo. Barton, St. Helen's, &c. The minutes of the previous lodge meeting having been read and confirmed, the W.M., Bro. P. B. Forshaw, being in the chair, the lodge was opened in the Second Degree, when the W.M. elect, Bro. J. B. Lambert, made the necessary declaration as prescribed previous to his installation as W.M. for the ensuing year. The lodge was then opened in the Third Degree. After the prescribed exits, Bro. P. B. Forshaw proceeded to install Bro. J. B. Lambert as the W.M. of the lodge, the ceremony being performed by him in a most masterly and effective manner, characterised by great taste and impressiveness. The ceremony of installation being completed, the newly-installed W.M. invested the following brethren as his officers: Bros. P. B. Forshaw, I.P.M.; Geo. Gould, S.W.; P. H. Ryder, J.W.; J. B. Forshaw, Treas.; P. Draper, Sec.; J. Winstanley, S.D.; W. G. Watts, J.D.; J. Grundy, I.G.; J. J. Nunnerley, Tyler; and Joseph Robinson and James Hiram Taylor, Stewards; and S. Wyld, P.M., D. of C. The lodge was then closed down to the First Degree, and a candidate was initiated by the newly-installed W.M. After the lodge ceremonies had been brought to a successful issue, Bro. J. Prescott presented the lodge with a portrait of H.R.H. the Prince of Wales, in his official costume as M.W.G.M., in a beautiful gilt frame, and on the motion of Bro. P.M. P. B. Forshaw, seconded by Bro. P. M. Wyld, a unanimous vote of thanks was tendered to Bro. Prescott for his handsome present. After the lodge had been finally closed the brethren sat down to a sumptuous banquet, which had been provided by Bro. H. Brown, of the Commercial Hotel. The chair was occupied by Bro. J. B. Lambert, W.M., who gave the usual toasts in a very pleasing and talented manner. During the evening a very handsome P.M.'s jewel was presented to Bro. P. B. Forshaw, I.P.M., to whom the W.M. paid a very high compliment, not only for the able manner in which he had conducted the business of the lodge during the past year, but for the able manner in which he had discharged the difficult duties of Installing Officer, and which was attended with the very unusual incident of the Installing Officer having to install a brother as W.M. who had himself had the pleasing duty of raising the Installing Officer into the mysteries of the Craft. The evening's proceedings were interspersed with songs, &c., which were ably given by Bros. G. Barton, J. Holt, G. Gould, J. Fogg, and Taylor, who were accompanied on the pianoforte by Bro. J. H. Watts, Organist.

HAMPTON.—Hemming Lodge (No. 1512).—The installation meeting of this young lodge took place at the lodge-room, Lion Hotel, Hampton, Province of Middlesex, on Thursday, the 21st Oct., when Bro. E. Hopwood, P.M. 141, &c., W.M. elect, was duly installed into the chair of King Solomon by the First Master of the Hemming Lodge, Bro. W. Hammond, P.M. 201 and 1326, P.G.J.D. Middlesex, W.M. The officers present were, in addition to the W.M. and the W.M. elect, Bros. S. Hill, P.M., J.W.; J. Hurst, S.D.; T. W. Ockenden, acting J.D.; T. Wheeler, I.G.; D. B. Raw, P.M., Treas.; J. Hammond, P.M., Sec.; B. Gutteridge, D.C. The lay members were Bros. Jessett, Tagg, Phillips, T. W. Kent, Hiscox, Hunt, and, later in the evening, T. C. Walls. The visitors were Bros. J. Wilson, P.M. 209; W. Platt, P.M. 144 and 176; W. Snowden, W.M., and J. W. Mitchell, S.D. of the Duke of Connaught Lodge, 1558; A. Nuthall, 889; and Steven Fane, 1158. Previously to the installation of the W.M. elect, and immediately after the routine work presented by the agenda, the W.M. initiated Mr. Benjamin Richard Aston into the mysteries of the Order, and passed Bros. Hunt and Hiscox to the Second Degree. Bro. John Bond, S.W. 889, was also duly balloted for and unanimously elected a member of the Hemming Lodge, and during the ceremonies formally entered upon his position in the lodge. The W.M. now appointed his Wardens for the installation ceremony, viz.: Bros. Samuel Hill, being a W.M., to retain his post as J.W.; and W. Platt, to replace the W.M. elect in the chair of the S.W. He added that the office of D.C., although a very important one on many occasions, was generally filled by a junior member, or at all events by an aspirant only for a junior office; he should therefore ask Bro. Past Master Wilson to act in that position pro tem., as it must be occupied by a P.M. for the installation. The D.C. thus appointed then presented Bro. Edward Hopwood, P.M. 141, S.W. 1512, and W.M. elect, for the benefit of installation by his predecessor, the better to fit him for the high duties of that important trust, remarking at length upon his adaptability for the discharge of those duties, not only as evidenced by the unanimous election by the Master, Wardens, and fellows in open lodge assembled, but by the able assistance he had rendered the W.M. in successfully launching this lodge on the smooth water of prosperity, and in the conduct of the onerous duties of the first year of its existence—that his amiability of temperament, firmness of purpose, and career in a similar position already achieved, commended him particularly to an installing officer, more especially to the W.M., than whom no one was better able to appreciate these services. Bro. Hammond made a suitable reference to the qualifications as enumerated by the D.C., and addressed the lodge Masonically upon the essential qualifications of candidates for the Master's chair, and Bro. Hopwood in particular, in whom they had already so patiently shone. Having completed the usual lodge portion of the ceremony, the Installing Master requested the usual retirement of members below the degree of Installed Master, and constituted the Board, when, to use the words of the W.M., "our esteemed Bro. Hopwood" was installed into the chair of King Solomon in ancient form, and the members of the Board invited to encircle him for the purpose of salutation. The admission of members in the prescribed form, with the ceremonials of each degree, was then proceeded with under the proper arrangements by the D.C., and the officers were installed according to form in the following order:—Bros. Saul Hill, P.M., S.W.; J. Hurst, J.W.; D. B. Raw, P.M. 282, Treas.; John Hammond, P.M. 201, Sec.; T. Wheeler, S.D.; C. W. Fox, J.D.; J. C. Jessett, I.G.; T. W. Ockenden, D.C.; B. Gutteridge, Steward; J. Gilbert, Prov. G. Tyler, Tyler; leaving the office of Assistant Steward to be subsequently filled, the first step in the honourable road to office. The addresses to the Master, Wardens, and brethren were very effectively and eloquently rendered by Bro. Wilson. The W.M., before rising for propositions, stated that he had a very pleasing duty to perform—that of presenting the first Master of the lodge with a P.M.'s jewel. This he did with extra pleasure because it was so well earned. The manner in which the arduous duties of the first W.M. had been carried out had commanded the esteem and admiration of the entire members. The chaste rendering of the ceremonies during his year of office was really depicted in the neat and elegant jewel, which had been designed as a model for the future jewels of the lodge for similar services, and which he now placed upon the breast of the I.P.M. The jewel consists of the coat of arms of the late Dr. Hemming, engraven in solid gold in the centre of the blue ribbon of the Order, with Euclid's forty-seventh proposition pendent thereto, also in solid gold. The following is the inscription on the back thereof:—"Presented by the members of the Hemming Lodge, No. 1512, to Bro. William Hammond, P.M. 201 and 1326, and P.G.J.D. Middlesex, the founder of the lodge, as a token of esteem for the zeal, ability, and courtesy displayed by him while presiding over the lodge as first W.M. October, 1875." Past Master Hammond rose and said,—"Worshipful Sir, brother Wardens, and brethren,—I esteem it a very great honour to have been intrusted by our M.W. G.M. with the guidance and direction of this new lodge during the first year of its existence; but there is a still greater satisfaction arising from this substantial indication of your unanimous approbation at the manner in which the duties of that high and responsible office have been carried out. While I thank you most heartily for this token of your regard, I must, without for one moment disparaging the motives which influenced and brought forth this kind expression of gratification, revert to the circumstances attending the first announcement in the lodge. I then stated that it would personally have given me much greater delight to have had the satisfaction of handing over the cost of this splendid piece of workmanship to one of the Masonic charities, as I had done the five guineas after my year's labours in the Jordan Lodge, and the ten guineas after my two years' similar services in the Lebanon. You, brethren, overruled that desire, and I was bound to submit to the general wish of the lodge. I now trust the effect which you anticipated will be most fully realised, that this honour I now so gratefully receive will form a wholesome stimulus to perseverance in the younger members of the lodge to emulate the exertions and secure the reward of those who have travelled before them. I thank you most sincerely. The lodge next unanimously resolved that the late Treasurer, Bro. H. Jepson, become an honorary member of the Hemming Lodge, and the Secretary was instructed to convey to the worthy brother the deep fraternal respect entertained for him by the members, and the satisfaction it would afford them to meet him as frequently in lodge as his professional duties would admit. Dr. Jepson was initiated in the lodge room in which the brethren were now assembled, and by Dr. Hemming himself, whose name the lodge has taken. The report of the Permanent Committee on the audit of the accounts for the first year was of a very satisfactory nature, and was ordered to be entered on the minutes. The ordinary business of the lodge having been resumed, several propositions were recorded for the ensuing meeting, the third Thursday in November, and the W.M., the work having absorbed about three hours' time, called upon the brethren to assist him to close the lodge. At 6.30 the members and visitors sat down to an excellent banquet provided by Bro. Hiscox, after which the rest of the evening was spent in that Masonic decorum and interchange of thought which ever characterise gatherings of the fraternity. The W.M. dilated upon the advantages likely to arise to both the mother country and to India by the visit of our M.W.G.M., His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales, a matter which specially interested the W.M., he having been born in India, and having spent his early boyhood among the hills and dales and the enchantingly varied scenes of that extensive portion of our empire. Bros. Wilson, Snowden, and Mitchell responded to the toast of "The Visitors," the first making a happy reference to the graceful manner in which the W.M. had acknowledged the kind services rendered by Bro. Wilson during the ceremonies, and Bro. Snowden assuring the brethren that however fully they might participate in the sanguine anticipations of the W.M. as to the efficient working of the Hemming Lodge, metaphorically they would ere long see the Duke of Connaught, No. 1558, quietly stemming the current up the Thames in close proximity with 1512. A most enjoyable evening was spent, which was further enhanced by the vocal abilities of many of the brethren, interspersed by Masonic recitations of other s.

Royal Arch.

MOUNT LEBANON CHAPTER (No. 73) held its regular meeting on Thursday, 14th of October, 1875, at the Bridge House Hotel, Borough High Street, Southwark. There were present Comps. Edward Harris, M.E.Z.; Frederick Walters, P.Z., as H.; James William Baldwin, J.; Frederick Walters, S.E.; Benjamin Isaacs, P.S.; and many others. The visitors were Comps. H. Potter, P.Z. 11; E. Gilbert, P.S. 1326; J. B. Shackleton, 1326, and others. The chapter was opened by the M.E.Z., F. Walters, P.Z., S.E., as H.; J. W. Baldwin, J.; and others. The minutes were read and unanimously confirmed. The ballots for exaltations were unanimous in favour of all the candidates. Apologies were received from all the candidates excusing and regretting non-attendance. Propositions were received for candidates for exaltation at next meeting. The chapter was closed until Thursday, November 11th, at half-past six o'clock. The usual banquet followed.

BARNSTABLE.—Chapter of Loyalty and Virtue (No. 251).—This old chapter held its usual quarterly meeting on Wednesday last. Present—Comps. C. Whilshire, Z.; Elsworth, H.; W. Britton, J.; J. T. Shapland, P.S.; H. Hancock, Assist. S.; List, Treas.; Oliver, Sec.; Nicklin, Org.; together with a large number of other companions, some of the chapter, and others visitors. This chapter is vastly improving in every respect. Bro. Day was exalted, and five other brethren were proposed for exaltation. It will very shortly become one of the largest and best working chapters in the neighbourhood.

Mark Masonry.

ST. MARK'S LODGE (No. 1).—A meeting of the above lodge was held at Bro. Gosden's, Masons' Hall, on Tuesday last. Present—Bros. Rev. E. J. Brette, D.D., W.M.; Charles Horsley, S.W.; E. H. Thielay, J.W.; H. Dubois, M.O.; George Newman, S.O.; W. T. Howe, J.O.; H. C. Levander, Treas.; R. W. Little, Sec.; T. Burdett Yeoman, I.P.M.; George Kenning, P.M.; John Boyd, Frederick Walters, and others. Two candidates were advanced to the Degree of Mark Master. Bro. T. B. Yeoman was presented with a valuable jewel, in recognition of his services as Worshipful Master for the past year. Several names having been proposed for advancement at the next meeting, the lodge was closed in due form. The brethren afterwards dined together, the usual toasts being ably proposed by the Worshipful Master and duly acknowledged.

MANCHESTER.—St. Andrew's Lodge (No. 34).—The regular meeting of this lodge was held on Thursday, 28th October, and was largely attended by the members, who had invited many visitors to assist them in receiving the Deputy G.M. Master of England, Bro. W. Romaine Callender, M.P., Prov. G.M.M. Lancashire. The lodge was punctually opened at 6 o'clock by the W.M., Bro. Rome, Prov. G. Reg., assisted by his officers, Bros. W. C. Gilles, S.W.; Arensberg, J.W.; Milligan, Bennett, Richardson, Miller, &c., and Bros. Sallon, Treas., and Green, Sec. The minutes were read and confirmed, and the usual routine business transacted, after which several candidates were elected. The announcement was then made that the D.G.M.M. of England was in the ante-room and desired admission. The W.M. requested the Deacons, Overseers, Wardens, and two Past Masters to conduct the D.G.M.M. to the lodge. This was accordingly done, and the procession entered in the following order:—Bros. W. O. Walker, P.G.D.; J. R. Goepel, P.G.O.; G. P. Brockbank, P.G.W.; C. F. Matier, P.G.W.; Thomas Entwisle, P. Prov. G.M.M.; W. Romaine Callender, D.G.M.M. On arriving at the East the procession halted, and the chair was assumed by the D.G.M., who was saluted by the brethren under the direction of Bro. W. H. Hopkins, Prov. G.M.O., as D.C. The gavel was then restored to the W.M., Bro. Rome, and the following brethren were admitted to the degree of Mark Mason, and afterwards to that of Mark Master—Bros. Harvey, Middleton, and Weddle. We have seldom seen the ritual more accurately rendered than on this occasion by the W.M. and the officers, all of whom were, without exception, perfect in the ceremony, the impressiveness of which was much increased by the chants and music, presided over by Bro. H. T. Robberds, P.M. The D.G.M., then rose and said that since his entrance into the lodge he had been requested to undertake a very pleasing duty, that of presenting, in the name of the lodge, a massive gold P.M.'s jewel to their first Worshipful Master, Bro. C. F. Matier, whose services in the cause, not only of Mark Masonry, but of every other degree, he had much pleasure in recognising. Bro. Callender then gave a most interesting account of the rise and progress of the degree in Lancashire, especially as connected with the St. Andrew's Lodge, and their founder, Bro. Matier, and concluded by affixing the jewel to his breast, with the hearty wish that he might long have the honour and pleasure of wearing it among the brethren of the lodge. Bro. Matier was then saluted as a P.G.W. of England by the brethren, and thanked them for the great honour conferred on him in a few brief remarks. The business being concluded, the procession retired in the same order as it entered, and the lodge was closed according to ancient custom. The brethren then proceeded to supper, under the presidency of the W.M., Bro. Rome, who was supported by the distinguished brethren already mentioned, and the following visitors and Prov. Grand Officers. Bros. Richard Dewhouse, Prov. G. Sec. Cheshire and North Wales; J. L. Hine, P.P.G.S.W.; J. W. Petty, P.P.G.S.D.; Alex. Andrews, Dublin Mark Lodge; Benj. Smith, W.M. elect, Union M.L.; and many others whose names we had not the opportunity of learning. The toasts of "The Queen and Mark Masonry," "H.R.H. the Prince of Wales and the rest of the Royal Family," and "The M.W.G.M., the Earl of Limerick," were proposed by the W.M. Bro. Matier then asked the brethren to drink the toast of the evening, and said that in many cases where the health of the chief rulers of the Order was proposed it seemed to the brethren words and nothing besides, but in the province of Lancashire they were highly honoured by having in one and the same person the D.G.M.M. of England, and their own well-beloved and esteemed Prov. G.M. The name of Bro. Callender was in Lancashire a tower of strength and a household word, and he begged to congratulate the St. Andrew's Lodge that they were the first lodge who were thus honoured by Bro. Callender since his elevation to the dignity of Deputy Grand Mark Master of England. He begged to assure Bro. Callender, in the name of the lodge, of the high appreciation they placed on his visit, and trusted they would again be honoured on some future occasion. The health was drank with great enthusiasm and loud cheers from the brethren, which were repeated when the D.G.M. arose to reply, which he did in some brief and well chosen sentences, apologising for not making a long speech on the ground of the Prov. Grand meeting at Liverpool taking place the following day. The next toast, "The Grand Officers, Present and Past," was responded to by Bro. Entwisle, P. Prov. G.M.M. of Lancashire; and "Lord Skelmersdale, D.P.G.M.M., and the Provincial Grand Officers of Lancashire," by Bro. Goepel, P.G.O. The remaining toasts were "The W.M.," proposed by Bro. Callender; "The P.M.'s," by Bro. Brockbank, and responded to Bro. Robberds; "The Visitors," by Bro. Hopkins, P.M., and replied to by Bro. Petty, as representing England, and Bro. Andrews, from Ireland. "The Candidates" was proposed by the S.W., Bro. Gilles, P. Prov. G.D.; "The Masonic Charities," by Bro. Matier, and replied to by Bro. Hine, Chairman of the Charity Committee. The Tyler's toast brought a delightful evening to an end, and the brethren separated at an early hour.

PLYMOUTH.—Sincerity Lodge (No. 35).—The regular meeting of this lodge was held at St. George's Hall, Plymouth, on the 1st inst. Bro. J. G. Shanks, R.M., F.R.G.S., Captain Royal Marines Light Infantry, was duly installed as W.M. The beautiful ceremony of installation was performed by Bro. Elliott, Deputy Provincial Grand Master of Devon, in a most impressive manner. Bro. Shanks then appointed the following officers:—Bros. Curteis, I.P.M.; Tester, S.W.; A. Latimer, J.W.; Rev. Bellamy, Chaplain; Rae, P.M., Sec.; Bayly, P.M., Treas.; Col. Fitzgerald, M.O.; Rev. T. Lemon, S.O.; Croydon, J.O.; Evans, S.D.; Dr. Griffiths, J.D.; Horton, I.G.

Red Cross of Constantine.

LIVERPOOL.—Liverpool Conclave (No. 55).—The usual meeting of this Conclave was held on Thursday week at the Masonic Hall, Liverpool. Gen. Sir Knight J. E. Jackson, M.P.S., occupied the post of honour, and the other Knights of the conclave present were Sir Knights G. H. Turner, V.E.; J. Capell, J.G.; R. Washington, H.P.; J. Wood, Treas.; H. Burrows, Prefect; H. James, St. B.; P. Armstrong, Orator; T. McWean, Herald; P. Thomson, I. W. Robinson, J. W. McWean, T. Roberts, and W. Doyle, P.S. Sir Knight H. Nelson, P.S. 77, was the only visitor present. Bros. Cook and Archdeacon were installed Knights of the Order. It was resolved to have the meetings of the conclave every two months, instead of quarterly, at the Masonic Hall, this being the first meeting there.

CAMBRIDGE.—The University Conclave (No. 128).—The above named conclave was consecrated on Wednesday, 27th ult., by Sir Knight Robert Wentworth Little, assisted by Sir Knights Colonel Burdett, Colonel Peters, Rev. P.M. Holden, John Boyd, H. C. Levander, Thomas Cubitt, A. B. Cook, J. L. Thomas, Dr. E. Brette, Rev. J. M. Vaughan, W. E. Gumbleton, and others from London. Sir Knight Edward Amphlett was installed the First Sovereign.

PROVINCIAL GRAND LODGE OF GLASGOW.

The quarterly meeting of this Provincial Grand Lodge was held in St. Mark's Masonic Hall, 213, Buchanan-street, Glasgow, on Thursday, evening 28th October, 1875, Bro. Frederick A. Barrow, Deputy P.G. Master, in the chair; Bro. Wm. Bell, R.W.M. St. John's, 34, acting P.G.S.W.; George McDonald, R.W.M., Thistle and Rose Lodge, 73, acting P.G.J.W. There were also present Bros. A. McTaggart, P.G. Sec.; J. B. Walker, P.G. Treas.; George Sinclair, P.G. Treas. and Convenor of Benevolent Fund; J. Gillies, P.G.S.D.; R. Robb, P. G. Marshal, J. Fraser, Assistant P.G. Marshal; J. Balfour, P.G. Director of Ceremonies; Wm. Phillips, P.G. Sword Bearer; J. W. Burns, R.W.M., Thistle Lodge, 87, acting P.G. Inner Guard. There were present, among other Masters and Past Masters, Bros. John Campbell, R.W.M., St. John's Shettleston 128; James S. Scott, R.W.M. Neptune Lodge 419; David Reid, R.W.M., St. Andrew's Lodge, 465; John McNaught, D.M. Clydesdale Lodge, 556; David Peacock, S.W. St. Mary's Lodge, Partick, 117; John Horn, Sec. Shamrock and Thistle, 275, with a very large number of brethren from the province. The Provincial Grand Lodge was opened on the E. A. Degree, and Bro. McTaggart, P.G. Sec., read the minutes of previous meetings, which were confirmed. Bro. George Sinclair, Treas. and Convenor of Benevolent Fund, also read minutes of Benevolent Committee (which showed that a large number of sums, varying from £1 to £5 had been paid during the last quarter, towards charitable purposes), which were also approved of. The D.P.G.M. intimated to the brethren that in consequence of the Edinburgh Sacrament falling on Sunday, immediately preceding the first Monday of November, the meeting of the Grand Lodge of Scotland would not be held until Monday, 8th November. A good deal of business was then gone through, and after a number of questions had been asked, and answered satisfactorily from the chair, the lodge was closed in due and ancient form by the D.P.G.M.

GLASGOW.—Lodge St. John (No. 34).—An emergency meeting of this lodge was held in their hall, 213, Buchanan-street, on the 26th ult. Bro. Wm. Bell, R.W.M., took the chair, supported by the following office-bearers: F. Fletcher, I.P.M.; D. Horn, J.W.; P. Brownlee, S.D.; Robt. Dalglish, Treas.; John Dink, Sec., &c. The meeting was well attended. It was expected that the business would have commenced with initiation, but that was postponed through the unavoidable absence of the candidates. The lodge was therefore passed from E.A. to that of F.C., when Bros. John Davidson (gas manager), A. M. Morrison (writer), Thos. H. Kirk (writer), Robert McNab (traveller), and James Orr (mariner), received that degree. The lodge was then raised to the Sublime Degree of M.M., when the same brethren were intrusted with that degree, after which the lodge was called to refreshment, when a pleasant and profitable hour was spent. Being again called to labour, they closed in due and ancient form.

GLASGOW.—Lodge St. Mungo (No. 102).—The regular meeting of this lodge took place on the 25th ult., in their hall, 213, Buchanan-street. The meeting was well attended, and the business was excellently gone through. Bro. James F. Mitchell, R.W.M., presided, supported by his Wardens. Among others present were Bros. A. C. Lindsay Gray, D.M.; D. A. Miller, P.M.; T. Halkit, P.M.; W. Bell, R.W.M. 34; John Smith, Sec.; A. C. Paterson, Treas.; D. J. Forsyth, Director of Music, &c. The minutes of the previous meeting were read and confirmed, and an application read from Mr. John C. Shand, craving admittance into Freemasonry. He passed the ballot clear, and received the E.A. degree, the R.W.M. officiating. The lodge was then raised to the F.C. Degree, when Bro. Neill Campbell and David Macrae received that degree, the R.W.M. again officiating with his accustomed ability. There being no further business before the lodge, it was accordingly closed in due and ancient form.

GLASGOW.—Lodge Union and Crown (No. 103).—The regular meeting of this lodge was held on the 25th ult., in the Masonic Hall, 170, Buchanan-street. The meeting was exceedingly large, probably owing to the nomination of office-bearers having to take place that night. The chair was occupied by Bro. Alexander Bain, P.M., who was supported by the following able brethren:—G. Muir, D.M.; D. Murray, S.M.; W. Thomas, S.W.; R. Munro, J.W.; James Gilles, P.M. and Sec.; Neill Cameron, Treas.; W. Anderson, S.D.; J. W. Pollock, J.D.; also W. Bell, R.W.M. 34; J. Campbell, R.W.M. 128, and many other distinguished brethren. The lodge being opened for the dispatch of business, the Secretary read the minutes of the previous meeting. They were pronounced correct, and were confirmed. The nomination of office-bearers for the next year was then proceeded with. The whole of the members seemed to take a deep interest in the matter, and the competition for the various offices was very keen. The result was the nomination of the following:—For R.W.M., Bros. George Muir and David Murray; for S.M., Bros. D. Murray and W. Gibson; for S.W., Bro. W. Thomas; for J.W., Bro. W. Forsyth; for Treasurer, Bro. Neill Cameron; for Secretary, Bro. J. Gilles (P.M.); for Chaplain, Bro. the Rev. J. C. Stewart; for S.D., Bro. J. W. Pollock and William Anderson; for J.D., Bros. Archd. Gray and J. W. Pollock; for B.B., Bro. Peter Cullen; for Jeweller, Bro. James Cameron; for S.S., Bro. John Derry; for J.S., Bro. George McLuckie; for Standard-Bearer, Bro. James Kennedy; for P.G.S., Bro. Collin Robertson; for I.G., Bro. James Gray; for O.G., Bro. Robert Boyd. The lodge was then passed to the degree of Fellow Craft, when Bros. George Waters and Joseph Ferguson were intrusted with that degree, Bro. G. Muir, D.M., officiating. From this the lodge was raised to the Sublime Degree of Master Mason, when the following brethren were raised to that degree by Bro. Bain, P.M., in his own able and clear style of working the various degrees of Masonry. This brought a heavy night's work to a harmonious termination, and the lodge was closed in due and ancient form.

POLLOKSHAW.—Lodge Royal Arch (No. 153).—The regular meeting of this lodge was held in their new lodge room, Cogan-street, on the 29th ult. The meeting was exceedingly well attended. Bro. John Peters, R.W.M., took the chair, and was supported by Bros. Wm. McGeorge, Adam, D.M.; W. M. Paton, S.W.; James Black, J.W.; Wm. Johnston, Sec.; D. Allan, Treas.; J. M. Oliver, S.W. 360; G. B. Adams, Mother Kilwinning (No. 6). The Secretary was called upon by the R.W.M. to read the minutes of the previous meeting, which were confirmed. A communication was then read from St. John's Operative Lodge (No. 347), Rutherglen, asking a deputation from the Lodge Royal Arch, Pollokshaws, to be present at the consecration of their new hall, which will take place on Friday, 12th November, at 7 p.m. A deputation was made up, and the invitation accepted. A circular from Bro. G. Kenning was also read, asking for a return of the number of copies of the new "Scottish Masonic Calendar for 1876," that would be required by the Lodge Royal Arch (No. 153). On the fly leaf of the circular is a form to be filled up, and returned to 9, Howard-street, Glasgow. In the form there is space for the names of the newly-elected office-bearers; and each lodge taking 100 copies of the "Calendar," at 3d. each, will have a full page for the names of their office-bearers. The matter was left over till after the election of office-bearers. The R.W.M. then said they were all aware that the nomination of office-bearers must take place that night, and they would now proceed with that duty. The result was the nomination of the following:—R.W.M., Bros. John Peters, D.M.; W.M. Paxton and Lem, S.M., James Peters; S.W., James Black; J.W., James Hart; R.C., Lynas; S.D., D. McNaught; J.D., Alex. Magee and James Hart; S.S., Bradford; J.S., Tommie; Std. B., Wood; (Marshall), Baird; Director of Music, Wm. M. G. Adam; (B.B.), James Hart; I.G., Campbell; O.G., no change; Jeweller, Macrae; Sec., Baird and Johnston; Treas., Allan; Auditors, John McFarlane and R. C. Lynas. This finished the business before the lodge, and it was closed in due and ancient form.

GLASGOW.—Lodge Star (No. 219).—The regular bi-monthly meeting of this lodge was held in their hall, No. 12, Trongate, Glasgow, on the 25th ult., Bro. J. Morgan, R.W.M., presiding, supported by Bros. J. Garth, S.W.; Jas. Horn, J.W.; B. Smart, Treas.; J. Crawford, Sec.; and the other office-bearers in their respective places. The lodge was opened by Bro. John Morgan, R.W.M., and the minutes of previous meetings read and confirmed. The names of three candidates for admission into the Order of Freemasonry were then submitted to the brethren for their approval, and if no objection be raised before or at next regular meeting they will be admitted and receive the E.A. Degree. The lodge was then raised to the degree of M.M., when Bros. Colin McNiven, Peter Kennedy, and Wm. McNicoll received this Sublime Degree, Bro. John Morgan, R.W.M., officiating in a very suitable manner. There being no other business, the lodge was closed in due form.

RUTHERGLEN.—St. John's Operative Lodge (No. 347).—The regular monthly meeting of this prosperous lodge was held in their new Masonic hall, Rutherglen, on Friday evening, 29th Oct. Bro. John Cunningham, R.W.M., occupied the chair, supported by Bros. Samuel Abbot, D.M.; David Smart, S.M.; John Murdoch, S.W.; Thomas Alston, J.W.; Alexander Warnock, Sec.; William Gardner, P.M.; Thomas Brodie, S.D.; John McCallum, S.S., with the other office-bearers in their respective places, and a large number of members and visiting brethren present, numbering in all about sixty. Among the visiting brethren were Bros. David Reid, R.W.M. St. Andrew's Lodge; William Phillips, R.W.M. Clydesdale Lodge; William Fergusson, 543; James Scott, 116; Findlay Sinclair, 108; William Galbraith, 557; John Sharp, 413; Alex. Lockhart, 176; John Templeton, 180; J. Bairnsfather, 7; Robert McLellan, 128; George Cunningham, Dugald Ritchie, and Hugh McFarlane. The lodge was opened in the first, or E.A. Degree. Bro. Warnock, Sec., read minutes of the last regular and two special meetings, which were approved of. Bro. Smart, S.M., then brought forward a motion he made at last regular meeting, to have their annual festival in the month of February in the new hall, which was unanimously agreed to, and a committee was appointed to make the necessary arrangements. Two applications for admission into the Order were then read and favourably received. The candidates being forward, were admitted, and received the E.A. Degree at the hands of the R.W.M. in a careful and impressive manner, viz., Messrs. William Morrison and Thomas Simpson. The R.W.M. then intimated to the brethren that the next business before the lodge was the nomination of office-bearers for the ensuing year, and in the course of a few remarks he thanked the office-bearers and members of the lodge for the hearty support they gave him during his term of office, being now R.W.M. of the lodge four years in succession. The nomination of office-bearers was then proceeded with, after which the lodge was closed in due and ancient form by the R.W.M.

GLASGOW.—Lodge Commercial (No. 360).—A special meeting of this lodge was held in their hall, 30, Hope-street, Glasgow, on Thursday evening, 28th inst. Bro. J. M. Oliver, S.W., occupied the chair, in the unavoidable absence of Bro. J. Munro, R.W.M.; Wm. Findlay, acting S.W.; T. Graham, acting J.W.; with the other office-bearers and a number of brethren present. The lodge was opened on the E.A. Degree. Applications were read from two gentlemen, viz., Messrs. John Mitchell and John Clark, and the same having been formally balloted for, were admitted and initiated into the First Degree of Freemasonry by Bro. J. M. Oliver, the acting R.W.M. No further business being brought forward, the lodge was closed in due and ancient form.

GLASGOW.—Lodge Athol (No. 413).—The regular meeting of this lodge was held in St. Mark's Hall, 213, Buchanan-street, on the 26th ult. The meeting was well attended, and a goodly number of visiting brethren were present. Bro. J. Wallace, R.W.M., presided, supported by Bros. Colin McKenzie, S.W.; J. Louttit, acting J.W.; J. W. Stevenson, Sec.; P. Agnew, Treas., and others. On the lodge being opened the minutes of the previous meeting were read by the Sec., and confirmed. The case of a brother who had been shipwrecked was then brought up, with a view to assist him a little in his present difficulties. The brother, it appeared, was a member of Glasgow Kilwinning Lodge, No. 4. A sum of money was at once granted him to relieve his immediate wants. An application was read from Mr. David Jameson for initiation into Freemasonry. He was proposed and seconded by Bros. Robert Jameson and Robert Barr, both members of the lodge. On the ballot being found clear in his favour, he was prepared and received the E.A. Degree, the R.W.M. officiating. The lodge was then passed to that of F.C., when Bros. Geo. Strathearn, David Jameson, Duncan McPherson, and Chas. McIver received that degree, Bro. Louttit officiating. There being no further business, the lodge was closed in due and ancient form.

MARYHILL.—Lodge Maryhill (No. 510).—The brethren of this lodge held their regular fortnightly meeting in the Masonic Hall, 167, Main-street, Maryhill, on Wednesday evening, 27th ult. Bro. John McKay, D.M., in the unavoidable absence of Bro. John Lockhart, R.W.M., occupied the chair. Bros. M. Carey, S.W.; D. McLachlan, J.W.; with the other office-bearers and a large number of brethren present. The lodge was opened in the E.A. Degree, and the minutes of last meeting, which showed that 15 Fellow Craft were raised to the Sublime Degree of Master Mason, were read and adopted. Two candidates who were proposed and seconded at last meeting were then balloted for, admitted, and received the E.A. Degree at the hands of Bro. J. McKay, D.M., in a careful manner, viz., Messrs. John Fisher and Andrew Lithgow. There being no further business, the lodge was closed in due and ancient form.

CROSSHILL.—Lodge Marie Stuart (No. 541).—The regular meeting of this lodge was held in their hall, in Prince of Wales Terrace, Crosshill, on Monday evening, 25th ult. In the unavoidable absence of Bro. Julius Brodie, R.W.M., the chair was occupied by Bro. J. Munro, R.W.M., Commercial Lodge, No. 360, Glasgow, supported by Bros. W. Mc G. Mason, S.W.; Samuel Findlator, J.W.; and the other office-bearers in their respective places. The lodge was opened in the E.A. Degree, and the Secretary read the minutes of last meeting, which were adopted. The election of office-bearers for the ensuing year was then proceeded with, when the following brethren were duly elected, viz., Bros. W. Mc G. Mason, R.W.M.; Julius Brodie, I.P.M.; William Gillies, D.M.; Samuel Findlator, S.M.; John Fraser, S.W.; Andrew Hillcot, J.W.; R. A. Buchanan, Treas.; Robert Walker, jun., Sec.;

Robert Walker, sen., Chaplain; James Murray, S.D.; Charles Rutteray, J.D.; John Thomson, I.C.; and James Mimmoch, Tyler. There being no other business, the lodge was closed in due and ancient form.

DALMUIR.—Lodge St. John (No. 543).—The fortnightly meeting of this lodge was held in their new Masonic Hall, at Dalmuir, on Tuesday evening, 26th ult., Bro. Wm. Ferguson, R.W.M., in the chair, supported by Bros. T. T. Johnstone, D.M.; John Crawford, S.M.; James Barrie, S.W.; Robert Struthers, J.W.; Thomas Scott, Treas.; Samuel Leckie, Sec.; and the other office-bearers in their places, with a large number of brethren present. The Secretary read the minutes of last meeting, which were confirmed. Bro. A. McDougall, E.A., then presented himself to be passed to the Fellow Craft Degree, and after having passed that degree was raised to the Sublime Degree of M.M., he having to leave this country in a few days, the R.W.M. officiating in his usual careful manner. The lodge was then reduced to the E.A. Degree, and after the usual routine business, was closed in due and proper form. The brethren then retired to refreshment, when the usual loyal, Masonic, and patriotic toasts were given and responded to, and after spending a short time in song and sentiment the brethren separated, happy to meet, sorry to part, and happy to meet again.

GLASGOW.—Cathedral Chapter (No. 67).—The regular monthly meeting of this chapter was held in the chapter-room, situated at 22, Struthers-street, on the 26th ult. Comp. J. Duthie, P.Z., presided, and was supported by Comps. Rirdie, P.H.; Ronald, P.J.; the office-bearers, with three exceptions, being all present, together with a large number of companions. A lodge of Mark Masters was opened, and the minutes of the previous meeting read and confirmed. An application from Bro. May, M.M. of Lodge 441, for admittance into the Holy Royal Arch. There being no objection to him, he was admitted, and received the degree of Mark Master. The lodge was then raised to that of Excellent Master, and the aforementioned brother was advanced to that degree. The lodge was now closed, and a chapter of Royal Arch Masonry was constituted, when Bro. May was exalted to the R.A. degrees, and accepted as a companion of the chapter on the R.A. Degree. The companions now prepared to receive a visit from a deputation of the Prov. Supreme G.R.A. Chapter for Lanarkshire, which was headed by F. A. Barrow, P.G. Superintendent. The deputation, after carefully going over the accounts and books of the chapter, Comp. A. McTaggart, P.G.S.E., read their report to the companions, in which the Chapter "Cathedral" was highly complimented for the correct manner in which everything had been transacted during the past year, and congratulated the P.Z. and companions of the chapter on their prosperity. The M.E.Z., in most graceful terms, returned thanks for the visit and the kind way in which they had been pleased to speak of them. He said he was glad to inform them that the chapter had neither debts nor creditors, but a fair balance in their favour on hand. The chapter was then closed in due and ancient form.

DEDICATION OF A MASONIC HALL AT BIDEFORD.

Greatly to the credit of the people of Bideford, they can now boast of the most commodious and finest public rooms in North Devon, and a building, also, which should arouse a feeling of jealousy on the part of the sister towns of Barnstaple. Some years ago, seeing that Bideford was neglected in the matter of public entertainments, and believing also that, if better accommodation were provided, a superior class of entertainment would occasionally be given, some gentlemen of the town and neighbourhood decided to form a company for the purpose of erecting a suitable building, which would also include other wants. This has now been accomplished, with the exception of a part of the interior and frontage. The rooms, which are situated in Bridgeland-street, comprise several compartments of different sizes, lodgings for the curator, and cloak and retiring rooms, with large double entrance-doors. One of the extra rooms has been selected by the Lodge of Benevolence of Ancient Free and Accepted Masons (No. 489, Bideford) as their Masonic Hall. It is situated in the front of the building, and is nicely and comfortably furnished. On the entablature of the centre window, facing the street, are the carved square and compasses, to show the purposes for which the room is used. The architects for the building are Messrs. R. D. Gould and Son, of Barnstaple, the contractor being Mr. Hookway, of Bideford, and their work has been executed in a very creditable manner. In addition to the present accommodation, it is probable that a waste spot of ground at the back of the building will be utilised for the purposes of a billiard-room. The ceremony of the dedication of the Masonic Hall took place on Wednesday at one o'clock by the Rt. Worshipful Brother, the Rev. J. Huyshe, P.G.C., Provincial Grand Master of Devon. The ceremony commenced by the Right Worshipful the P.G.M., the D.P.G.M., and officers of the Provincial Grand Lodge, entering in procession. The P.G.M. and his Wardens took their chairs, and the Provincial Grand Lodge was opened in the First Degree by the W.M. of the Lodge of Benevolence. The W.M. of the Lodge of Benevolence requested the P.G.M. to dedicate the Masonic Hall agreeably to ancient form, and the P.G.M. signified his assent, and directed the P.G. Chaplain to commence the ceremony proper by reading 1st Kings, viii. 22 to 30 inclusive. After that the anthem commencing "Hail! Universal Lord!" was sung. A procession was then formed, the P.G.M. proceeding round the room, the D.P.G.M. and the P.G. Wardens following and bearing the elements of dedication. Solemn music was played at intervals; and the P.G.M. having returned to the east, the

D.P.G.M. presented him with the vessel containing corn—which he scattered over the lodge—the P.G. Chaplain reading, at the same time, Psalm lxxvii. 16. The first prayer having been pronounced by the P.G.M., and the hall solemnly dedicated to Masonry, the brethren chanted "Glory be to Thee, Most High God," &c. The second circuit was then formed, and the Provincial Senior Grand Warden presented the vessel containing wine. The P.G.M. poured it upon the lodge, while the P.G. Chaplain read Numbers xv. 7. The second prayer having been pronounced by the P.G.M., the hall was then solemnly dedicated to "Virtue." The brethren again chanted, and the third circuit was made; and the vessel containing oil was presented, and poured by the P.G.M. upon the lodge, while the P.G. Chaplain read Exodus xxx. 25 and 26. The third prayer was then pronounced, and the hall was dedicated to "Benevolence and Charity." The brethren again chanted, and the P.G. Chaplain offered up the dedication prayer, the brethren all standing. The remaining part of the ceremony having been gone through, the grand honours concluded the ceremony. Bro. J. Edwards, P.P. Grand Organist, presided at the harmonium. Amongst those present at the ceremony were:—The Right Worshipful John Huyshe, P.G.C., P.G.M. of Devon; and Bros. L. P. Metham, D.P.G.M. Devon; J. Davey, P.P.S.G.W. Devon; Rev. Thomas Russell, J.G.W. Devon; P.P.G.C. Oxon, W.M.; C. Smale, 489, P.M. and Org.; T. Elsworth, 251, P.M.; W. E. Stone, P.P.G.W.; W. G. Rogers, 112, P.G.S.; W. Haynes, 106, P.M. and P.Z.; W. Cole, 421, P.M., P.P.G.P.; J. T. Shapland, 421, P.M.; J. Hill, 251, P.M.; W. Parker, 847, P.G.R.; T. Hancock, 1135, W.M.; W. C. Oliver, 251, S.W.; W. Britton, 251, P.M.; Joseph Harper (Mayor of Barnstaple), 251, P.M., P.G.S.; W. Hyne Haycock, 251, I.P.M., P.G.S.D.; T. Higgs, 106, W.M.; H. Woodgate, 847, W.M.; J. Mills, 1125, P.P.G.O., P.M.; W. Cocks, 106; J. Hancock, P.M., P.P.Z.; W. Wilmott, P.M., P.P.Z.; B. Wills, 1135, J.D.; J. Atwood, 1135, P.G.P.; J. Chadwick, 444, P.M.; Thos. Wadham, P. D. Michelmore, 1138, P.M., P.G. Steward; W. H. Anthony, 105, P.M.; J. R. Chanter, P.P.S.G.; H. Storke, 1396, S.W.; F. J. Pratt, 1396, W.M.; J. Heywood, 1136; Charles Willshire, 251, P.P.G.D.C., P.M.; Samuel Jones, 112, P.M., &c.; W. Vellacott, P.G.M.; and P. S. Blanchard, 444, acting as Grand Tyler. At the dedication ceremony the W.M. (Rev. Thomas Russell) delivered a vigorous oration on the defence of Freemasonry, principally with reference to the objections urged against it on the points of secrecy and its position with regard to religious faith. At half-past three o'clock a grand banquet was held in the large room, at which about a hundred sat down. The table and room were prettily decorated with flowers, &c., a profusion of banners hanging from the ceiling. The dinner was provided by Bro. Ascott, of the New Inn, Bideford. In the evening a Masonic soiree and conversazione were held, the programme comprising vocal and instrumental music, readings, and recitations, exhibitions of microscopes, dissolving views, and curiosities and objects of general interest, the latter of which were so plentiful and unique as to give the room the appearance of a museum. Tea and coffee were served at 9.30, and at 10 o'clock a special train ran to Barnstaple with the contingent from that town, and at 10.45 a similar train ran to Torrington.

CONSECRATION OF THE ARCHITECT CHAPTER, No. 1375, AT DIDSBURY.

The consecration and first convocation of this chapter was held at the Didsbury Hotel, Didsbury, on Wednesday, Oct. 13th, at two p.m.

The ceremony of consecration was conducted by the Right Hon. Lord Skelmersdale, Second Grand Principal of England, and Provincial Grand Superintendent of West Lancashire, assisted by the Provincial Grand Officers.

A chapter was opened by Lord Skelmersdale, as Z.; Comp. A. Stephens, P.G.H., as H.; and Comp. J. McKune, as J. There were also present Comps. H. S. Alpass, P.G. S.E.; R. Wylie, P. Prov. G.D.C.; T. Armstrong, P.G.T.; T. Buxton, P.G.A.S.; J. Skeaf, P.G.O.; P. Ball, P.G.J.; J. A. Birch, P.G.J. of East Lancashire, and P. Prov. G.J. of Cheshire; J. Hall, P.G.P.S. East Lancashire; C. T. Sergeant, Z. 203; D. Jones, P.Z. 216; C. E. Austin, Z. 152; and several others.

The imposing ceremony of consecration was then proceeded with, Comp. J. Skeaf, P.G.O., performing the appropriate music.

The installation of Comps. George Davenport Pochin, as Z.; Carl Götz, as H.; and Joseph Mackie, as J., was performed by Comps. Wylie and McKune.

After the ceremony the companions below this rank were again admitted to the chapter.

The following companions were then proposed and duly elected:—Comps. E. B. Harding, as Treas.; J. A. Elliott, E.; J. Gilman, N.; T. J. Broome, as P.S.

The M.E.Z. proposed eleven brethren for exaltation.

The chapter was then closed in due form, and the companions adjourned to dinner, which took place at 5 o'clock, and did the utmost credit to Bro. Lugton and his good lady, everything giving the greatest satisfaction.

After dinner the M.E.Z. proposed "The Queen," which was heartily responded to. He afterwards gave "The Health of His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales, First Grand Principal, and the rest of the Grand Officers," expressing the pleasure they all felt at the presence of the Second Grand Principal among them that day.

The Right Hon. Lord Skelmersdale returned thanks. It gave him great pleasure in assisting at the consecration of the chapter, and he thought from the admirable manner everything had been arranged that day that it augured well for its success. Before sitting down he begged to propose a toast, although not on the programme, which was "Health and Prosperity to the Three Principals of the Architect Chapter."

The M.E.Z. first returned thanks, saying he had great faith in the prosperity of the chapter, and would use his utmost endeavours to make the working second to none in this or any other province, and felt certain that the other Principals and officers of the chapter would support him.

Comp. Götz, H., also responded.

Comp. Mackie, J., had but little to add to what had been already said, except to return his sincere thanks for the very kind way in which his name had been received, and to assure them, as the W.M. of the lodge, he would do all in his power to assist the chapter.

"The Principals of Chapters in the adjoining Provinces" was then proposed by Comp. Mackie, and responded to by Comp. J. A. Birch, P.G.J. of East Lancashire.

"The Visitors" was responded to by Comp. J. Brooks, and "The Ladies" by Comp. T. J. Broome.

Many of the toasts were necessarily brief, as his lordship and the Provincial Grand Officers had to leave by train. Altogether a most agreeable afternoon and evening were spent.

CONSECRATION OF THE ROSSLYN LODGE, NO. 1543, AT DUNMOW.

An addition has been made to the Essex Lodges of Ancient Free and Accepted Masons by the consecration on Wednesday, the 27th ult., under the most favourable auspices, of a new lodge at Dunmow.

The brethren, who included twenty P.M.'s, and several Grand Officers, assembled in the Town Hall, where the ceremony was ably and impressively performed by the V.W. Bro. the Rev. C. J. Martyn, Past Grand Chaplain, assisted by V.W. Bro. the Rev. Spencer R. Wigram, Grand Chaplain, and by special permission of the Earl of Rosslyn, P.G.M. Scotland, and representative of G.L. England, the lodge was designated the "Rosslyn Lodge," numbered 1543 on the Registry of the Grand Lodge of England.

Bro. the Rev. F. B. Shepherd, P.P.G.C. and P.P.S.G.W., P.M. and P.Z. 276, was installed as the first W.M.; and he appointed as his Wardens Bro. G. D. Clapham and Bro. F. J. Snell. At the conclusion of the ceremony, about forty brethren adjourned to the Saracen's Head, and partook of a sumptuous and well-served banquet, which was followed by the usual Masonic toasts. Among those present during the day were—Bros. Matthew E. Clark, Deputy Provincial Grand Master; John Wright Carr, P.G. Secretary; Joseph Burton, P.G. Treas.; Andrew Durrant, P.G.S.G.W.; James Nicholl, S.P.G.J.W.; Frank Whitmore, W.M. 276; Harold E. Stidolph, 276; P.P.G.O.; Alfred F. Ginn, 276; D.M.B. Wheeler, 276; W. Johnson, 1312; W. Cook, 1312; E. Shed, 276; Percy W. Taylor, P.M. 409; John S. Taylor, S.D. 409; Rev. C. J. Martyn, P.M. 1224, P.G.C.; W. D. Merritt, 1000; Thos. Smece, P.M. 276, P.G.S.D.; A. C. Veley, P.M. 276, P.P.G.J.W.; Rev. S. R. Wigram, 1000, G.C.; Alfred Jones, W.M. 1280, P.J.G.W.; Percy Leith, 1118, P.S.G.D.; C. A. Harker, 1280; John Gilling, I.G. 1280; William Spicer, 1280; Joseph Bell, P.M. 1280, P.P.G.J.W.; Arthur Goodchild, P.M. 276, P.P.G.J.D.; Matthew H. Winder, 1280; Joseph Hills, 1224, P.P.G.J.W. (Suffolk); H. C. Bocking, 34; Fred. Wheeler, P.M. 1224; George H. Grimwood, W.M. 1224; and the following members of the new Rosslyn Lodge—Rev. F. B. Shepherd, P.M. 276; George Dixon Clapham, Fred. J. Snell, H. J. Burt, George F. Skill, J. H. Beaman, John B. Frankham, and Joseph F. Bott, P.M. 276.

PROVINCIAL GRAND MARK LODGE OF LANCASHIRE.

By command of the Right Worshipful Provincial Grand Master, Bro. Wm. Romaine Callender, M.P., a Provincial Grand Lodge of Mark Master Masons belonging to the County Palatine of Lancaster was held at the new Masonic Hall, Liverpool, on Friday, the 20th ult.

There was a good attendance of brethren. A Mark Masters' Lodge was opened at half-past two o'clock by Bro. H. Nelson, as W.M.; Bro. W. Shortis, S.W.; Bro. Henry Jackson, J.W.; assisted by other officers.

A procession was then formed, and Bro. W. Romaine Callender, Prov. G.M.M., entered, and took the chair, accompanied by Bro. H. S. Alpass, acting D.P.G.M.M.; Bro. W. H. Prince, P.G.S.W.; Bro. J. R. Goepel, P.G.J.W.; Bro. John Chadwick, P.G.S.; and others.

Bro. Lord Skelmersdale, D.P.G.M.M., was in the building, but did not enter the lodge-room, as he had a most important engagement to fulfil.

The roll of lodges was called over, and letters of apology were read from absent Prov. Grand Officers.

The minutes of the previous Prov. Grand Mark Lodge meeting at Oldham, on the 30th Nov., 1874, were read and unanimously confirmed.

The sum of ten guineas was voted from the funds on behalf of the Royal Masonic Educational Institution for Boys.

Bro. W. Romaine Callender, R.W.P.G.M.M., subsequently appointed the following as his officers for the ensuing year:—

Lord Skelmersdale.....	D. Prov. G.M.M.
W. O. Walker.....	Prov. G.S.W.

Henry Jackson.....	Prov. G. Steward.
Henry Burrows.....	Prov. G. Steward.
R. Cain.....	Prov. G. Steward.
J. Sly.....	Prov. G. Tyler.

After the transaction of some formal business the lodge was closed, and the majority of the brethren sat down to banquet, under the presidency of Bro. W. Romaine Callender, M.P. The catering of Bro. W. S. Vines was of the highest quality, and was the subject of universal commendation.

The usual loyal and Masonic toasts were briefly given and cordially responded to, and the brethren separated at an early hour, after having spent a pleasant evening.

THE ORDER OF THE TEMPLE.

A Convent General of the United Religious and Military Orders of the Temple and of St. John of Jerusalem, Palestine, Rhodes, and Malta was held at the City Terminus Hotel, on the 29th October, when Sir Knight the Earl of Limerick acted as Most Eminent Supreme Grand Master in place of His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales, Grand Master. Among the other Sir Knights present were Sir Knt. S. Rawson, as First Superintendent; Sir Knt. Capt. Philips, as Lieutenant Superintendent; Sir Knt. General Doherty, Aide-de-camp; Sir Knts. H. D. Sandeman, Sir Patrick Mac C. de Colquhoun, Chevalier Colquhoun, Gooldeen, A. H. Royds, R. J. Spiers, Major Barlow, Chas. H. Gregory, Charles Horsley, Rev. Luke Rivington, Wilhelm Ganz, Malcolm O. Sim, Alex. Ridgway, George Lambert, Warden of Regalia; Joseph Starkey, W. Tinkler, Vice-Chancellor; Cruickshanks, the Rev. Dr. Ringlands, and Dr. J. F. Townshend, Arch-Chancellor.

After the formal opening of the convent, and the reading and confirmation of the minutes of former convents,

The Earl of Limerick reported that the Committee of the Council had recommended an address to H.R.H. the Prince of Wales on his departure for the East.

Sir Knt. Colquhoun then brought the motion forward and read the address, the motion being that the address be embossed and illuminated on vellum and sent to Marlborough House, and a copy of the address be forwarded to H.R.H. in India.

The Grand Seneschal seconded the motion, which was put and carried.

The Earl of Limerick next withdrew the motion, notice of which stood in his name on the paper of business.

Sir Knt. Capt. Philips afterwards withdrew the motion, notice of which stood in his name, referring to an Order of Merit, or Star, to be instituted in consequence of the abolition of Past Grand Rank.

Sir Knt. Dr. Townshend, Arch Chancellor, read a letter from an Irish Knight, requesting permission of Grand Council to withdraw his notice of motion also.

Upon this a discussion arose as to the competency of any Sir Knight to withdraw a motion of which he had given notice, on the ground that it prevented the due discussion of the subject of which the Sir Knights had had full notice, and in regard to which many might have travelled a considerable distance to attend Convent General. After several Sir Knights had spoken,

Sir Knt. Ridgway suggested that the matter was not one either of right or of courtesy, but a plain question of fact—the Knight was not there present to move the resolution of which he had given notice, and as a matter of fact it fell to the ground.

Sir Knt. Ridgway further suggested that if the question were to be raised at all it should be raised upon the withdrawal of the notice by Sir Knt. Philips, who was there present in his place, and quite able to propose the motion, were it considered right and courteous to the Grand Convent General that it should be brought forward, for it appeared eminently inconvenient as a matter of principle that Convent General should be thus taken by surprise by the withdrawal of a notice which Sir Knights had come prepared to discuss.

The Earl of Limerick, however, ruled that it was competent to a Sir Knt. to withdraw his motion.

No further discussion, therefore, on the point took place.

Sir Knt. A. H. Royds asked permission to introduce a motion, the effect of which was the abrogation of the recent laws relating to past rank.

After some discussion, it was ruled that as Sir Knt. Royds had not given notice of this motion at the last Convent General the matter could only be received as a notice now, and must stand over to the next Convent General.

The Treasurer's accounts were then read.

Sir Knt. George Lambert thereupon rose, and in a few terse and stringent words reflected in the strongest manner upon the unsatisfactory character of those accounts, pointedly observing that when a public officer openly admitted in Convent General that his accounts were, to use his own words, in a muddle and a jumble, it was quite time that some other officer should be appointed in his place. He was happy to say that he did not know who was Grand Treasurer, and he desired not to know; but whoever he was, he moved that his name be not brought forward again for the appointment.

Sir Knt. Gooldeen, Grand Vice Treasurer, was then nominated as Grand Treasurer, whereupon the name of Viscount Newry was also proposed; but upon a show of hands being taken, Sir Knt. Gooldeen was elected by a large majority. Sir Knt. Gooldeen was then duly appointed Grand Treasurer. Sir Knt. G. Lambert asked whether it would not be advisable for Convent General to appoint a paid auditor, but Sir Knt. Gooldeen stated that he would immediately look into the accounts, and he felt that there would be no necessity for such an office.

Sir Knt. Colquhoun proposed Sir Knt. Ridgway as auditor, considering that as a man of business, and a banker of considerable Masonic experience, Sir Knt. Ridgway would be the right man in the right place.

Sir Knt. Ridgway intimated that he would accept the office if it was the wish of Convent General.

Sir Knt. de Burgh, representing Ireland, was proposed as a second auditor.

Sir Knt. Captain Philips proposed Sir Knt. S. Rawson.

Sir Knt. S. Rawson declined, and the nominations were confirmed.

Sir Knt. the Rev. Dr. Ringlands proposed that power should be given to the Provincial Priors to dispense with the rule laid down regarding clothing and arms in the statutes, in consequence of some of the preceptories being held in proclaimed districts.

This resolution being seconded, after an amendment to it had been rejected, was duly passed, and some other business having been transacted, Convent General was closed, and the Sir Knights adjourned to banquet.

Masonic and General Tidings.

The Ellington Lodge, No. 1566, will be consecrated, and the Worshipful Master, Bro. Wm. Berry Farr, P.M. 825, P.G.S.W. Bengal, installed, on Wednesday, the 10th inst., at the lodge rooms, Maidenhead. The proceedings will commence at 2.30. R.W. Bro. the Rev. J. Studholme Brownrigg, D.P.G.M. for Berks and Bucks, will work the ceremonies. It is expected that several officers of the Grand Lodge and the Provincial Grand Lodge will be present.

Bro. the Rev. A. F. A. Woodford, P.G.C., has been appointed Past Grand Warden of the Grand Lodge of Greece.

The new Masonic Hall at Bridlington will be dedicated and the officers of the Lonsborough Lodge, No. 734, installed by the Worshipful Deputy Provincial Grand Master, on Tuesday, the 7th proximo.

The Aldershot Camp Lodge and the Aldershot Chapter met on Thursday, but too late for a report in our impression of this week. A full report will appear in our next.

The installation meeting of the Francis Burdett Lodge, No. 1503, will take place on Wednesday next, at the Albany Hotel, Twickenham. Col. Wigginton, P.M. 902, and 1298, P.P.G.D.C., Worcestershire, will be re-installed as W.M. by Bro. R. Wentworth Little, Prov. G.S.W., Middlesex. It is requested that Provincial Grand Officers will appear in full dress to receive the R.W. Provincial Grand Master.

The St. Luke's Lodge of Instruction will in future be held at the Commercial Tavern, King's-road, Chelsea, every Friday evening, at seven o'clock, instead of 86, Fulham-road.

The Provincial Grand Chapter of West Yorkshire will be held at Dewsbury, November 10th, when our distinguished Bro. Bentley-Shaw, J.P., and P.P.D.G.M. for West Yorkshire, will be installed P.G. Superintendent of West Yorkshire by Bro. John Hervey, Grand Scribe E.

DALHOUSIE LODGE OF INSTRUCTION (No. 860).—The Fifteen Sections were worked in this Lodge of Instruction by Bro. Marx Gross in a very satisfactory manner, assisted by the following brethren:—Bros. Brand, Ellis, Berry, Lowe, H. Lloyd, Pinder, Gilchrist, Cambridge, Musto, Austin, Lee, Wallington, Brown, and Perrin. There was a large attendance of brethren.

The Directors of the Briton Life Association announce that they will proceed with the allotment of shares on the 10th inst.

The Albert Edward Lodge, No. 1560, will be solemnly constituted in due form on Tuesday, 9th inst., the birthday of H.R.H. the Prince of Wales, M.W.G.M., in honour of whom the lodge has been named. R.W. Bro. Kelly, P. Prov. G.M., assisted by the Provincial Grand Officers, will perform the ceremony, and afterwards install the Provincial Grand Master, the Right Hon. Earl Ferrers, P.M. 779, as W.M. The Rev. Canon Burfield, P. Prov. G. Chaplain West Yorkshire, will be the S.W., and Dr. Hunt, P. Prov. G.A.D.C., J.W.

The New York "Square" infers from the character of the last meeting of the Grand Lodge of Canada, that Masonry in that jurisdiction is in a highly encouraging condition.

The Grand Lodge of Dakota Territory was duly constituted on the 21st July last, with the following Principal Grand Officers:—M.W. Bro. Thomas H. Brown, Grand Master; R.W. Bros. F. J. Dewitt, D.G.M.; C. G. Shaw, G.S.W.; H. H. Blair, G.J.W.; G. H. Hand, Grand Treas.; Mark W. Bailey Canton, Grand Sec.

The first meeting of the Owl Club at its new quarters was most successful. It will be noticed in our next.

DAYLIGHT reflected in dark rooms. Gas superseded in day time. Health, comfort, and economy promoted by adopting Chappuis' Patent Daylight Reflectors,—Manufactory, 69, Fleet-street, London.

PROVINCIAL GRAND LODGE OF DERBYSHIRE.

A meeting of the Provincial Grand Lodge of Derbyshire was held at the Masonic Hall, Derby, on Tuesday, the 26th inst., under the presidency of Bro. H. C. Okeover, Past Grand Warden of England, the Acting Provincial Grand Master of the Province. There was a large muster of the Craft, the more distant parts of the province being well represented.

The Provincial Grand Lodge was opened at 1.30 in firm, prayer being offered up by the P.P.G. Chaplain (the Rev. A. A. Bagshawe, M.A., vicar of Wormhill, Buxton, P.Prov. G.S.W.)

After the roll of officers had been called over, the minutes of the previous Provincial Grand Lodge were read and confirmed; the Worshipful Masters of Craft lodges presented their reports.

The reports of the Masonic Hall Committee and the Charity Committee were read and confirmed. The Acting P.G.M. appointed and invested the following officers for the ensuing year:—

W. H. Marsden	Prov. S.G.W.
H. E. Diamond	Prov. J.G.W.
Rev. W. J. M. Ellison	Prov. G. Chaplain.
Thomas Cox, P.P.S.G.W.	Prov. G. Treas.
John Maxwell	Prov. G.R.
William Naylor, P.P.S.G.W.	Prov. G. Sec.
G. E. Cox	Prov. S.G.D.
E. Grindrod	Prov. J.G.D.
John Howill	Prov. G.S. of W.
J. C. Merry	Prov. G.D. of C.
H. T. Bobart	Prov. G.A.D. of C.
W. Clark	Prov. G.S.B.
G. Marsden	Prov. G.O.
H. Cooper	Prov. G.P.
W. Lannox	Prov. G. St. B.
Thomas Slinn	Prov. G. Tyler.

Bros. W. C. Watson, F. J. Robinson, William Whitaker, Alex. Frazer, Joseph Shaw, and George Pipes were appointed Provincial Grand Stewards. After the lodge was closed the brethren, to the number of fifty, sat down to a sumptuous banquet, provided by Bro. Low, in the Lower Hall, and a very pleasant evening was spent, the A.P.G.M. occupying the chair.

PROVINCIAL GRAND LODGE OF WEST YORKSHIRE.

In addition to our last report, we have been requested to publish the following shorthand writer's notes of the proceedings and speeches, which we very readily do:—

At the outset a letter was read from Bro. Bentley Shaw, D.L. (late Deputy Prov. G.M. of the Province), regretting his inability to attend, and advising, in reference to the proposed discussion on the subject of the Royal Masonic Boys' School, that the form of the proposed resolution was objectionable, unconstitutional, and such as he thought rendered it impossible for it to be received. He therefore hoped it would not be put in the shape in which it stood, however desirable an enquiry might be.

Bro. Cawthorne, who had given notice of motion, was then called upon. In introducing the resolution he said he came there as no man's champion, but as a Mason who had for many years taken great interest in their noble charities. He felt that the circumstances which had recently arisen rendered it especially important, as well for the interests of the school itself as in the interests of justice, that an enquiry should be instituted. Without going into the merits of the various questions which had been raised, he therefore asked that the Prov. G. Lodge of W. Yorkshire should use its influence in bringing about such an enquiry as would be satisfactory to the brethren. If the results of the enquiry showed that the institution could be placed on a better footing, so as to render it more extensively useful, a great good would have been achieved by the agitation which had been raised; but if, on the other hand, the charges which had been made against the present management were groundless, it were surely better that this should be at once made clear, in order that the institution might not suffer from the imputations which had been made. For his own part, he could not think the committee of the institution would be against the enquiry; in fact, they would, he should suppose, court investigation, and he hoped if any such steps were decided upon the enquiry would be conducted with good feeling on both sides.

Bro. Cawthorne, however, is submitting the motion, obtained leave to omit the words after "benefits of the charity," so that it now contained no reference to Grand Lodge.

Bro. Isaac Booth, in seconding the motion, argued that apart from the questions which had been raised elsewhere, as to the disputes between the Secretary of the institution and the late Head Master, there was abundant reason for an enquiry, as there was evidently an extravagant expenditure, which demanded the serious attention of all supporters of the charity. He instanced the Crossley Orphanage, where the expenditure per head was £27 7s.; another well managed institution in Manchester, where the expenditure was £34 per head; and the London Orphan Asylum, where the cost per head was £34, as showing that something ought to be done to reduce what he considered the extravagant sum of £52 7s. per head, which was being spent on the boys in the Royal Masonic Institution, apart from any calculation as to amounts of interest on expended capital, &c., and this without any exceptional advantages to the boys themselves, as in one case he had mentioned even a better education was offered, besides providing well for the comfort of the boys. He thought the sooner an enquiry was made, the better it would be for the charity itself.

Bro. Moss asked whether the matter had yet been brought under the notice of the Charity Committee attached to Prov. Grand Lodge, and Bro. Hill, (the Chairman of the committee) replied that it had not.

Bro. Brittain, Prov. G. Warden, supported the motion for an enquiry, provided no unconstitutional measures were resorted to, as he thought the damaging statements which had been put forward, whether true or not, were such as could not be allowed to remain unnoticed, and the sooner the reproach could be removed the better it would be for all the charities.

Bro. Captain John Wordsworth (a member of the House Committee of the R.M.B.I.) said he believed the committee of the school would be only too glad of a strict investigation, though he felt sure the charges which had been made would be proved utterly groundless. He did not believe in nigardiness, and would never support such a policy, but he denied that there was any undue extravagance.

The resolution, as amended, was carried with only one dissentient.

Bro. Chalmers, P. Prov. G. Chaplain, then proposed and Bro. Drury, P. Prov. G. Warden, seconded a resolution to the effect, that a committee be appointed to take steps for instituting an enquiry, such committee to consist of six members to be nominated by Prov. Grand Lodge, and six members to be nominated by the Charity Committee.

Bro. Moss proposed that the appointment of the committee be left in the hands of the Charity Committee. This was seconded by Bro. Cawthorne, and supported by several other brethren.

Bro. Ridal supported the appointment of a committee of enquiry, but protested against the idea of £52 a head per year being considered too extravagant.

On being put to the vote, Bro. Chalmers' resolution was carried.

The nomination of the six members on behalf of the Prov. Grand Lodge was left in the hands of the Prov. G. Master (Sir Henry Edwards).

GRAND CHAPTER.

The Quarterly Meeting of the Supreme Grand Chapter of Royal Arch Masons of England was held on Wednesday evening in the Zetland Room, Freemasons' Hall. Notwithstanding there was so little business before Grand Chapter, there was a large attendance of companions. Comp. S. Rawson presided as Z.; Comp. Sandeman as H.; and Comp. Capt. Platt as J.; Comp. John Hervey, S.E.; Comp. Major Creaton as S.N.; Comp. Rucker, P.S.; Comp. W. Speed, 1st Asst. S.; Comp. Grey, 2nd Asst. S.; Comp. T. Fenn, Sword Bearer; Comp. A. J. McIntyre, Q.C., G.R.; Comp. Joseph Smith, as D.C. Other P.G. Officers: Benj. Head, N. Bradford, A. Holman, Joshua Nunn, H. J. P. Dumas, H. Muggeridge, Jas. Glaisher, J. Percy Leith, F. A. Philbrick, Q.C.; Robt. Hollom, and Hyde Pullen.

There were also present Comps. W. S. Gover, H. Massey (Freemason), John Boyd, J. M. Case, G. Newman, Thomas W. White, Chas. F. Hogard, G. Lemann, W. Stephens, Herbert Dicketts, W. Hammond, W. F. Nettleship, Alex. Ridgway, W. Young, Thomas Cochrane, C. W. Noehmer, John Seax, James Lewis Thomas, Richard Spencer, George Lambert, H. G. Buss, A. A. Pendlebury, and C. B. Payne.

After the reading and confirmation of the minutes, the report of the Committee of General Purposes, published in the "Freemason" last week, was taken as read.

Comp. Major Creaton, S.N., moved, and Comp. Joseph Smith, D.C., seconded, the granting of the petition for a chapter to be attached to the Prince of Wales's Lodge, No. 671, Llanelly, to be called "The St. Elli Chapter," and to meet at the Masonic Rooms, Llanelly, Carmarthen. The petition was granted.

Major Creaton S.N., moved, and Comp. Joshua Nunn, P.G.S.B., seconded the granting of a charter for a chapter to be attached to the De Grey and Ripon Lodge, No. 1356, Liverpool, to be called "The De Grey and Ripon Chapter," to meet at the Masonic Hall, Liverpool. The petition was granted.

Comp. Philbrick asked who had the control over the names to be given to chapters, as he thought it was rather a thing of the past to give this chapter its name, and he questioned whether it was desirable to perpetuate things of the past any longer.

Comp. Joseph Smith, D.C., said it was customary to give chapters the names contained in the petitions. If there was nothing objectionable in the name the warrant was granted for the chapter under the name applied for, unless an amendment was moved.

Comp. Philbrick said he did not move an amendment; he only asked for information.

The M.E.Z. said if Comp. Philbrick had any objection his objection came too late, as the warrant was granted.

Comp. Philbrick replied that he made no objection.

Col. Alex. Ridgway, P. Prov. G.J. Deacon, reminded the companions that the name was a very worthy one in the Craft, and well deserving of being perpetuated.

Comp. Major Creaton, S.N., moved, and Comp. Joseph Smith, D.C., seconded the granting of the petition for a chapter to be attached to the Benevolent Lodge, No. 446, Wells, to be called "The Avalon Chapter," to meet at the Town Hall, Wells, Somerset. The motion was carried.

Comp. Major Creaton, S.N., moved, and Comp. Joseph Smith, D.C., seconded, the granting of a charter for a chapter to be attached to the Cestrian Lodge, No. 425, Chester, to be called "The Cestrian Chapter," and to meet at the Grosvenor Hotel, Chester. The motion was carried.

Comp. Major Creaton, S.N., proposed, and Comp. Joshua Nunn, P.G.S.B. seconded, the granting of the petition from companions for a chapter to be attached to the Hindpool Lodge, No. 1225, Barrow-in-Furness, to be called "The Abbey Chapter," to meet at the Hartington Hotel, Barrow-in-Furness, Lancashire. The petition was granted.

Comp. Major Creaton, S.N., proposed, and Comp. Joseph Smith, D.C., seconded, the granting of the petition from companions for a chapter to be attached to the Underley Lodge, No. 1074, Kirkby Lonsdale, to be called "The Bective Chapter," and to meet at the Masonic Rooms, Kirkby Lonsdale, Westmorland. The motion was carried.

Comp. Major Creaton, S.N., proposed, and Comp. Joshua Nunn, P.G.S.B., seconded, the granting of the petition for a chapter to be attached to The Royal Lebanon Lodge, No. 493, Gloucester, to be called "The Royal Lebanon Chapter," and to meet at the Spread Eagle Hotel, Gloucester. This petition also was granted, and Grand Chapter was then closed.

GRAND LODGE OF NEW BRUNSWICK.

The Grand Lodge of Hungary has asked for an exchange of representatives; we have not, however, entered into fraternal relations with that body, and whilst the fraternity in Hungary continues in its present divided condition it is advisable that our present attitude should not be changed.

The lodges in Prince Edward Island united in the formation of a Grand Lodge for that province of the Dominion, and a courteous request was sent to me and to the officers of Grand Lodge to attend on the 24th of June to instal the Grand Master and other officers of Grand Lodge. Satisfied with the regularity of their proceedings, the movement of the Freemasons in Prince Edward Island was one that met with my hearty concurrence, as I have no doubt it will with yours, and I readily accepted the invitation.

I attended the new Grand Lodge, and installed M.W. Bro. Yeo the Grand Master, and the other officers.

The Grand Secretary will lay before you the papers connected with the formation of a Grand Lodge in the province of Manitoba, together with the official application for a recognition. I have looked through the report of the proceedings, and I believe you will find the action taken to have been perfectly regular, and the new Grand Lodge entitled to our warmest fraternal regard and sympathy.

The transactions of our sister Grand Lodges record the death, during the year, of many eminent and distinguished brothers. In the number is included the Past Grand Master of the Grand Lodge of Pennsylvania, R.W. Bros. John Meredith Reed, Lucius H. Scott, and James Paige; M.W. Past Grand Master John N. McJilton, of Maryland; and Past Grand Master John H. Anthon, of New York. The Craft in Massachusetts recently sustained a severe loss in the death of Past Grand Master Winslow Lewis, not only a devoted and active Mason up to the time when death closed his illustrious career, but a citizen and a man adorned with the graces of mind and character which made him eminent in society, and in the State generally useful to his fellow man.

In our own Dominion the death of M.W. Bro. Wm. Mercer Wilson, the Grand Master of the Grand Lodge of Canada, excited deep and general sympathy. When I was made a Mason in the city of Montreal, nearly twenty years ago, Bro. Wilson was then at the head of the Grand Lodge of Canada, and for several times, at various intervals, he has been called to the same position, the duties of which he discharged with discretion, zeal, and ability.

In our own jurisdiction we have to mourn the death of R.W. Bro. W. P. Flewelling, who died at Clifton on March 26th, at the age of sixty years. For many years Bro. Flewelling was an active member of the Midian Lodge, in which he filled nearly every important office, and of which he was Treasurer at the time of his death. He took an active interest in the formation of our Grand Lodge, and was its first Senior Grand Warden.

The reports of the Board of General Purposes and of the Grand Secretary and Grand Treasurer will show the Craft in this jurisdiction to be in a satisfactory condition. If we are not making as rapid progress in increase of members and in wealth as some of the more ardent of our brethren would desire, the returns will show that there is a healthy increase; and that there are no discordant elements at work to disturb the harmony that should be the great characteristic of all Masonic bodies. The Grand Master or the Board has not been called upon to settle any important disputes between lodges or members, and we can all heartily exclaim "how good and how pleasant it is for brethren to dwell together in unity."

When advice has been asked by lodges or brethren on any question it has been freely given, through the Grand Secretary; but I have made no decisions of particular importance to the Craft generally. In one case, where an enquiry was made as to whether a brother could hold office in a lodge of which he was not a member, an answer was returned in the negative, for although there is no constitutional enactment on the subject, it would seem to be opposed to common sense to allow a brother to be an officer where he was not a member; and the absence of any regulation might be taken as a proof that no regulation was thought to be necessary. Of course, the case of a Tyler, who is a serving brother, and whose duties are entirely different from those of any other officer, is entirely exceptional, custom as well as necessity permitting one brother to serve many lodges. In another case, the Grand Secretary advised a lodge that it was contrary to sound Masonic policy to initiate in 1875, without a fresh ballot, a person who had been accepted in 1871. The reasons are obvious. In that number of years many persons might be initiated into the lodge who would not be willing to receive the candidate, whilst, in the four years, his own character and habits might unfortunately have undergone changes which would unfit him to be made a Mason. Every lodge by its by-laws ought to provide that a candidate neglecting to come forward within a reasonable period after his election, should have his election set aside. A lodge asked whether it could rent its lodge-room to another society. Of course, with the control of the property of private lodges the Grand Master has no power, or even desire, to interfere; but the enquiring lodge was advised that the interests of the Craft would be best served by reserving its lodge room for its own exclusive use. I am aware that in some places throughout the country, lodges cannot help a common tenancy with other societies, in places where Masonic halls have been erected by the joint action of the lodge and the community the lodge room is used for various purposes. It should be the aim of every lodge, however, to secure as soon as possible its own room for its own exclusive use. A lodge enquired whether objection would be taken to its holding a "Masonic Gift Enterprise" in aid of its Hall fund. The Grand Secretary fraternally advised the lodge to abandon the idea, as the whole feeling and spirit of the Craft is against undertakings of this kind—and they have been positively condemned by many Grand Lodges. The advice was at once acted upon in the most commendable spirit by the lodge—a circumstance that I note with pleasure, for the burden entailed upon it by the fine hall it is erecting is very great, and the "Gift Enterprise" seemed a very easy way of financing. A lodge was also advised that a native of this province, who has resided many years in California, and returns on a short visit to his friends, is to be regarded as a sojourner merely.

At the last session of Grand Lodge a resolution was adopted making the production of a Grand Lodge certificate a pre-requisite for examination, from brothers hailing from another jurisdiction, desirous to be received as visitors into lodges in this province. I invite Grand Lodge to a further and fuller consideration of this subject. If it is desirable to continue this regulation it should be made a constitutional enactment; and it appears to me that if continued it should be made to apply to brothers hailing from lodges in our own province, as well as to those coming from other jurisdictions. The European practice is to insist upon the production of a Grand Lodge certificate, as a proof that the applicant has been made a Mason in a regular lodge. On this continent the production of the certificate is not generally required, though it is in some places. However, the brethren have now had several months' experience of the practice, and they ought to be able to say whether its continuance is or is not desirable.

The Constitution of Grand Lodge provides for the existence of a Charity Fund, to be styled the "Fund of Benevolence," for the relief of poor and distressed brethren, or the widows and orphans of deceased brethren in good standing, upon the request of Grand Lodge. Up to the present time this fund exists only in name, and I earnestly urge upon Grand Lodge to consider whether some practical steps cannot be taken towards the creation of the fund. If we begin in ever so humble a manner something even then will be achieved. Out of the surplus now on hand at least 200 dol. might be funded and placed at interest for this purpose. I sincerely believe that a fund created for such a laudable object will rapidly grow, and will commend itself to the warm consideration of charitable and well-disposed brothers; but until a commencement is made by Grand Lodge the "donations" contemplated by the Constitution are not likely to be received from individuals. The establishment of the fund itself is a duty the performance of which we ought no longer to postpone.

In Fredericton, last winter, Solomon's Lodge and St. Andrew's Lodge united in the formation of a Lodge of Instruction, principally upon the model of "Emulation Lodge of Instruction," held in St. John by the Grand Secretary, and which proved of great benefit to the Craft here. The lodge at Fredericton worked very satisfactorily. St. George's Lodge, No. 60, recently gave its permission to a number of its members resident in Pennfield to hold a Lodge of Instruction in the Temperance Hall at that place; but I have asked the lodge not to act upon its resolution until your opinion is given upon the subject. It appears to me that a very important principle is involved. With the desire of the brothers at Pennfield to receive Masonic instruction we must all heartily sympathise; but we must consider the effect of allowing a Lodge of Instruction to be worked elsewhere than in the village where the lodge itself is held, and in a different place of meeting from the lodge room, away, perhaps, from the control of the Master. If a lodge may authorize such a Lodge of Instruction in one place, may it not authorize a similar lodge in another; and what limit is thereupon its powers in this respect? I ask your serious consideration of this important matter.

A complaint was received from Alley Lodge, No.—, to the effect that Lewey Island Lodge of Princeton, Maine, had refused to examine or receive in any way as a visitor Bro.—, of that lodge. It did not appear, however, that Lewey Island Lodge declined to receive as visitors all of the members of Alley Lodge. The objection appears to have been made simply to an individual brother, and recognizing as I do the right of a lodge to refuse admission to a visitor who may be objectionable, I did not deem it advisable to interfere. Of course, it is our duty to secure for our subordinate lodges, from the Masonic powers with which we are in amity, every right to which they are entitled; and whilst it is sometimes difficult to prevent differences among lodges of different jurisdictions whose territory is contiguous, yet our relations with the Grand Lodge of Maine are of the most satisfactory kind, and we can rely on its best efforts in aid of our own to promote peace and harmony.

In conclusion, I have to thank the various officers of Grand Lodge and the Board of General Purposes, and many members of the Craft, of every station and rank, for the advice or assistance rendered me, as I have asked it, in the discharge of my official duties. The courtesy and kindness shown towards me personally I gratefully appreciate. Whilst the cheerfulness with which assistance has been rendered me has not only lightened my own labours, and made the performance of them very pleasant, it has also shown to me what must be equally pleasing to you all, the deep and hearty interest that is felt by so many of our brothers in the welfare of this ancient and honourable fraternity.

"The History and Antiquities of Freemasonry." Bro. G. J. FORT, Putnam, Philadelphia.—Sampson, Low, Son, and Marston, London.

We welcome this and all other like contributions to Masonic history and archæology. The history is well got up, and most carefully put together, and reflects the greatest credit on the industry and research of the author. The novelty of his treatment of an "oft-told tale" consists in this, that Bro. Fort takes back Freemasonry practically to the Scandinavian mysteries, and also seems to think that it is of Byzantine origin, with a Judaic colouring, and came into Lombardy, via Venice, soon after that the Roman Empire became Christian. As we understand his work, he accepts the operative basis as one side of the true history of the Order, and takes Bro. Findel's view of a 12th century creation, ignoring any question of the Roman guilds; but he also subjoins a theory of an occult side to the teachings of Freemasonry, a counterpart of which is found in the Scandinavian and other mysteries.

Among other peculiarities of his theory is that which looks upon the Locke MS., as it is called, as authentic, upon "internal" evidence too. Now this we do not profess to understand. The whole history of the so-called MS. is so full of suspicion that it is impossible to accept the statements respecting it. This is an English formula, said to have been re-translated from a German pamphlet, which professes to have been published at Frankfurt in 1748. But no one has ever yet seen the German pamphlet, nor the English MS. of which it was an alleged translation.

About 1756 this so-called MS. appeared in the "Gentleman's Magazine," as a translation from the German, or, rather, a translation of a German book translated originally from the English. Who was the author of this ingenious mystification nowhere appears, probably one of that Rosicrucian fraternity, then very busy and restless.

From its internal evidence alone it has long been given up by all English students of MSS. Its archaisms are not the archaisms of Henry VI., and are evidently, it is said, archaisms for a purpose. We regret that Bro. Fort should, in the face of all critical studies in this country, boldly announce that from "internal evidence" he accepts the document. All, we think, that can be said of it possibly is this, that it represents an old Masonic catechism, of some sort, but garbled and added to, and greatly expanded, by the "fraus pia" of some ingenious mystifier. As an evidence of any value we must reject it utterly. Bro. Fort, we see, places Pius VII. in 1738, an anachronism which may be a typographical error, and we might take exception to one or two statements, or, rather, perhaps deductions, drawn from a mistaken view of the force of certain evidence. But it is useless our going over the same ground again, as our views are well known. Bro. Fort seems to think that it is now pretty clear that the Anglo-Saxon guild system is not a perpetuation of the Roman one, but if he accepts, as we do, the Anglo-Saxon guild system as the precursor of the mediæval guilds, so, to be consistent, he must go back to the Roman and pre-Christian guilds for the origin of the Anglo-Saxon guilds. But though we do not agree with all Bro. Fort's views, we have read his work with much pleasure, and can conscientiously commend it to all Masonic students. Bro. Fort writes clearly and agreeably, and if he does not always convince, at any rate he always pleases. His book cannot have been put together without much of thought, care, and study, and we are glad to note that in the United States so many valuable works are now appearing, all tending to prove that there is much literary activity amongst our intelligent brethren in America. HOLLOWAY'S PILLS AND OINTMENT.—The seeds of disease are often unconsciously sown by some neglect of those precautions which are so necessary in this changeable climate of ours. The earlier symptoms of deranged health are often neglected, and hence another great source of after consequences of a serious character arises. Amongst the precautions, most necessary at the change of season, is that of attention to the clothing, and to the advent of any cough or throat disorder, which should at once be treated by these remedies, which will quickly remove all chance of their taking hold of the system and producing consumptive symptoms. A few doses of these Pills are the best remedy for all hepatic and dyspeptic symptoms.—ADVT.

OUR ROYAL GRAND MASTER'S VISIT TO INDIA.

We learn from the "Times" that His Royal Highness the Prince received and answered an address at Aden, Nov. 1, inspected the 2nd Grenadiers, the Borderers, the Garrison, and the Tanks, and received and rewarded the Arab chiefs. He lunched with the Resident. There was a great reception and much rejoicing. The weather was fine, and the Prince and his suite were all well. The Sultan of Lahej received a medal and ring of honour at the hands of the Prince of Wales, after a "levée" attended by all the military, civil, and Consular residents. At 4.30 the Prince embarked again, and at 7 received the Resident and a small party at dinner, the town and port being brightly illuminated. His Royal Highness expressed great pleasure at the reception he had received. A telegram was received from Sandringham in reply to the announcement of his arrival here. The Serapis, with His Royal Highness on board, sailed from Aden at 10 o'clock, Nov. 1st. The "Times of India," received by the overland mail on Monday, says:—"It is understood here that the Prince will visit the capital of the Nizam before leaving India, and an official letter which has been published regarding the dress to be worn by officials at the Residency during the visit seems to confirm the rumour. A correspondent writing from Hyderabad, says:—"Preparations and presents on magnificent scales are being got ready for the occasion; carriages, jewellery, and novel trinkets of Hyderabad manufacture are being prepared for presentation to the Prince. The city of Hyderabad is, so to speak, alive with workmen of every description. Nothing seems to be wanting on the part of the Prime Minister, Sir Salar Jung, G.C.S.I., to do homage to our future King and Emperor on behalf of his young master, His Highness the Nizam." The following description of the railway arrangements for Madras is taken from one of the local papers:—"Seventeen carriages in all will form the Royal train—viz., two saloon carriages, six first-class, and nine second-class carriages. The hangings of the saloon carriages are of crimson silk, with cords and tassels to match. Two full-length mirrors decorate each extremity of these carriages, and the mouldings and metal fastenings are richly gilt. The accommodations for lavatory and other purposes will be in strict keeping with the furniture of the State apartments, and nothing is omitted in the way both of luxury and convenience which can be missed by the most fastidious. Elegance, simplicity, and taste have been very happily blended in the arrangements now rapidly carried out by Perambore workshop authorities for the ease and comfort of his Royal Highness. Bunting is being prepared, we hear, to a large extent to flutter forth its welcome to our future King. It is expected that the Prince of Wales and party, including the Staff, will number thirty, with 37 European servants and postillions. The lowest estimate formed of the native establishments is 40 jemadars and kitmutgars, 100 personal servants, 100 horses, 9 carriages, 159 attendants on horses, and 12 coachmen and postillions. The above do not include local officers, who will accompany the prince through the districts. Four Arab horses—very handsome animals—have been purchased at Bangalore, and were forwarded by rail to Poona for the use of the Prince of Wales. The Rajah of Cochin will meet the Prince at Madras. The following K.C.I.'s are to be invested at Calcutta:—Maharajah Punna Rajah Nahun Kashee Rao, Holkar's brother; Ranodeep Sing, of Nepaul; Gunputram Kirkey, Dewan of Gwalior; Faiz Ali Khan, Minister of Kotah. Maharajahs Scindiah and Holkar are making great preparations for the reception of the Prince when he visits their capitals."

COLOURED LODGES IN THE UNITED STATES.

It seems from a letter we publish elsewhere, that an article of ours, October 23rd, has sadly discomposed our good Bro. J. G. Findel, of Leipsic. He writes, as will be seen, in a very hasty and, to say the least, not a little intemperate strain, upon a subject which requires calmness of temper, courtesy of treatment, and, above all, a judicial frame of mind in its treatment. And for this reason, that it is not a question of colour or sentiment, but a simple, hard, dry matter-of-fact question of vital Masonic law which has to be decided between us. We pass over in silence the personal accusations of ignorance and incompetence, which we laugh at, we overlook historical misstatements and petulant apostrophes, and we come "au fait." What we stated on October 23rd we repeat to-day, equally distinctly and a little more fully. The Prince Hall Lodge was originally warranted at Boston from the English Grand Lodge in 1784, by a lodge charter, or warrant, granted by the Earl of Effingham, Acting G.M. under the Duke of Cumberland, G.M., to Prince Hall, Boston Smith, and Thomas Sanderson, and others there, these brethren being respectively the first W.M. and the first two Wardens. We do not now go into the question how far in 1784 the English Grand Lodge had a right to grant a warrant for a district where another Grand Lodge is said to have existed, for that is a point which we do not feel, at this moment well enough posted up in to argue. But we go simply upon this known normal constitutional position of all English warranted lodges. The grant of a warrant implies two things—first, that the Grand Lodge recognizes a certain lodge as belonging to its roll; and, secondly, the warranted lodge takes upon itself certain obligations, on the fulfilment of which the validity and vitality of its warrant depend. If for instance, a lodge makes no returns and pays no annual fees, and becomes dormant, it forfeits its active character, and after a time, if not revived by the payment of back reckonings and a fresh understanding with its mother Grand lodge, it is erased from the roll of lodges, and nothing under that warrant can call it into activity again. It is, as far as the Grand Lodge of England is concerned, Masonically defunct, and its warrant is forfeited. Such we apprehend to be, as far as our English law is concerned, the position of the Prince Hall Lodge. But, in addition to this, the warrant only gave authority to do known Masonic acts, and it is impossible to base on it any authority to open other lodges, much less to form a Grand Lodge! Thus, then, we have this anomaly: a lodge is dormant and defunct, not having complied with the conditions on which the warrant was originally granted, and it is revived without any legal Masonic authority whatever, and without any reference to the granter of the warrant, who alone could revive the dormant lodge. This lodge, brought into activity proprio motu, proceeds to commence Masonic working, to open other lodges, and eventually to form a Grand Lodge! All these acts are "ultra vires," and, as far as English Masonic law is concerned, utterly null and void. We must, therefore, beg respectfully to adhere to our expressed opinion, that on the facts of the case historically, and on the broad basis of English Masonic law, the position of the Prince Hall Grand Lodge is utterly vicious and unsound. Bro. Findel in the ardour of his advocacy ventures to place the Prince Hall Grand Lodge on the same footing as our English Grand Lodge. Now on this point much confusion of ideas exists in the minds of many continental brethren, and Bro. Findel seems to share in it. With us a Grand Lodge is an aggregate of private lodges, forming themselves by conjoint action into a corporate body, with a central Masonic authority. Abroad, many Grand Lodges were originally, and some still are, only private lodges which have assumed to themselves unmasonically the title of a Grand Lodge, but without any authority of aggregation, or any principle of delegation or representation to warrant such an appellation. The English Grand Lodge is the result of those four old lodges, who originally met, and very properly and very naturally formed themselves into a Grand Lodge, over which they nominated a speculative brother as first Grand Master of the revived Grand Lodge. And it is on this principle we contend, and only on this principle, that a Grand Lodge can properly or Masonically ever be formed. Bro. Findel dogmatically declares that the four old lodges were all operative. Where does he find any authority for such a misleading statement? In 1717, 1718, 1719, a speculative Mason was elected Grand Master, and there is no proof whatever of such an assertion, as far as we are aware of. The author of "Multa Paucis" tells us, "au contraire," that Captain Elliott was one of the Grand Wardens for 1717. The truth is that good Bro. Findel is a little angry at one of his hobbies being questioned by us audacious chaps in England, and, like angry people, he writes without that clearness and Masonic knowledge which mostly distinguish his writings. We confess that we have understated and undervalued unintentionally the amount of German recognition and of German opinion on the subject, but we had not looked very clearly into the facts of the case until our attention was called to them from America, and we had regarded the matter as more a question of feeling, than, as it now turns out to be one, of Masonic law. Our brethren in Germany are so free-spoken and honest themselves that they will, we feel sure, credit us with speaking frankly and fearlessly on the subject, on which, begging Bro. Findel's pardon, and despite his depreciatory estimate of ourselves, we are as competent to form an opinion as he is.

THE BOYS' SCHOOL.

Some questions having arisen with reference to the power of a P.G. Lodge, and of G. Lodge, to pass a resolution affecting the outward government of the Boys' School, we thought it right and due to our readers in our issues of the 23rd and 30th ult., respectively, to express our opinion, and to quote a precedent with respect to the abstract point at issue. Our view, as originally expressed, has been more than confirmed by the unimpeachable and exalted authority of our good old and faithful G. Master, Lord Zetland, and we can, therefore, afford to smile at the pretentious impertinence of the sciolist or the illogical aberrations of the unmasonic. The point at issue is this: Can a Provincial G. Lodge, or G. Lodge, pass a resolution as a corporate body affirming the necessity of an enquiry into any matter connected with the school and appoint a committee of investigation? We say no; and Lord Zetland said no on a former occasion. A very distinguished brother of our Order, Bro. Beach, P.G.M. for Hampshire, had submitted a resolution to the Board of Masters for discussion in G. Lodge. This was an abstract resolution, enforcing the advisability of an annual examination for the two schools. The Board of Masters declined to allow the resolution to appear on the agenda paper, on the ground that G. Lodge was incompetent to pass such a resolution. On appeal by Bro. Beach to the G.M., he sustained the action of the Board of Masters, and for this reason:—The G. Lodge gives £150 per annum to the schools. Such an annual payment only placed it in the category of subscribers. The only course open to subscribers was to pass a resolution to that effect either at a Quarterly General Court or Special General Court, or at a General Committee. Lord Zetland's dictum goes to this effect, that G. Lodge, through its annual gift of £150, has no exceptional privileges as none are accorded to it by the laws of the Institutions, and that therefore all such resolutions can only be moved by individual subscribers, not by the G. Lodge or P.G. Lodges, or lodges as separate bodies. This is the common sense view of dealing with the matter, the practice and course of all similar institutions. Any one who has the hardihood to assert the contrary, in a Masonic or profane print, or is so perverse as to seek to mislead others, either through crass ignorance or jesuitical evasions, has no claim to be listened to, and is out of court altogether. One should pay no more attention to his remarks than if they had been never penned, put forth, as such silly animadversions evidently are, in a spirit of childish opposition, and in a way which shows limited acquaintance with Masonic teaching. The distinguished Province of West Yorkshire has passed an abstract resolution (much altered from the original matter in the P.G.L. agenda paper,) affirming the need of enquiry into the present condition of the school in all respects, and has also passed a resolution for a West Yorkshire Committee of Investigation of twelve members. This is a fact, though for some reason kept back in a report sent to us from W. Yorkshire, but we give elsewhere the shorthand writer's notes of the actual speeches and resolutions. We are, then, distinctly of opinion that on Lord Zetland's dictum the resolution so carried and the action so taken are ultra vires and can have no practical effect. If any body has any complaint to make, or grievance to expose, or wrong to redress, he must act legally and give notice of a motion that the General Committee shall call a Special General Court to devise a special resolution on the subject. Had the P.G. Lodge of West Yorkshire passed a resolution calling upon the General Committee to convoke a Special General Court to consider a certain resolution to be brought forward relative to the administration of the Institution, (though even in such a course it would be going beyond its constitutional right), yet considering all West Yorkshire has undoubtedly done for the Boys' School, the General Committee would, we think, probably have acceded to such a request. But as it is, the action of West Yorkshire threatens the very independence of our great educational institutions, is altogether taken in ignorance or forgetfulness of the constitutional position of the P.G. Lodge in the matter, and cannot be sustained by any who have the real and lasting interests of the Boys' School at heart.

MASONIC JEWELS.

Some controversy has been going on lately in our pages as to what jewels may or may not be worn in lodge, and we therefore think it well to call attention to a subject which has a special interest for many and a general interest for all. It is quite clear in the first place that all jewels or decorations which belong to the Christian grades in Mark Masonry are not wearable in a Craft Lodge, or P. Lodge, or G. Lodge. The Book of Constitutions distinctly lays down the normal regulation of English Freemasonry in the provisions of its pages, but all tending to the same one point and end. At page 18 it is said "Nor shall any member be permitted to wear in the lodge or in any private lodge any jewel, medal, or decoration belonging or appertaining to any order or degree not recognised by the G. Lodge of England as part of pure antient Masonry." The G. Lodge having decided that "pure antient Masonry" consists of the three Craft Degrees and the R. Arch, necessarily in limine forbids absolutely all "jewels, medals or decorations" in Craft Lodges which belong to any grade or degree except these four. But "Ex converso" "jewels, medals and decorations" belonging to such recognised degrees may be worn in Craft Lodges. Here the question arises, what are the "jewels, medals, and decorations" belonging to such recognised degrees as may properly be worn in lodge? And here we confess we feel much difficulty in answering the question. In two other places in the Book of Constitutions G. Lodge has dealt with the question, in addition to the section just specified, and we must go to them to see what G. Lodge really says on the matter. At page 68, sect. 22, we find these further words—"No jewel shall be worn in a lodge other than those specified for the officers, except such honorary or other jewels as shall be consistent with those degrees recognised by the G. Lodge as part of antient Masonry." Thus, having previously said "belonging or appertaining to" the Book of Constitutions now adds "consistent with." At page 118, sect. 2, the G. Lodge thus further deals with the matter: "No honorary or other jewel or emblem shall be worn in the G. Lodge which shall not appertain to or be consistent with those degrees which are recognised and acknowledged by and are under the control of the G. Lodge as part of pure and antient Masonry." Thus we see all jewels, emblems, medals, or devices which are not consistent with and do not belong or appertain to one of the degrees acknowledged and recognised and under the control of G. Lodge are illegal. At first sight this last section would seem to exclude R.A. jewels, which belong to a grade not actually under the control of G. Lodge, but as the three sections quoted are based upon and all allude to the recognition of the Grand Lodge of certain degrees, as forming true and antient Masonry, we are led back to the Articles of Union for 1813, in which the three degrees including the Royal Arch are acknowledged and declared to be such. The Royal Arch jewels are worn under the direction of the regulations for Royal Arch Masons, and we do not feel quite sure, despite custom, that a strict interpretation of the words "under the control of Grand Lodge" might not even exclude them from a Craft or blue lodge. It seems too that the general idea of the Book of Constitutions is to be very chary indeed of jewels at all, and that the only jewels it actually recognizes, in addition to the jewels pendant to collars, and significant of rank, are such honorary or other jewels as shall be consistent with the three degrees it recognizes. The Book of Constitutions recognizes centenary jewels, and it mentions, as we have seen, honorary jewels, whatever they may be, but it does not allude to the charity medal, nor does it apparently give any authority for any dispensation for any other kind of jewel. Still, as often happens, custom is more powerful than law, and "mos est lex." We wear in our lodges many honorary jewels, medals, emblems, and devices, such as those of P.M., the five-pointed star, &c.; and some lodges, though very few, have a lodge jewel granted by special authorisation of the Grand Master. The number of lodges having a lodge jewel is so small that it cannot, we fancy, exceed a dozen, if so many. Now, we believe that under the law all devices, emblems, medals, or honorary jewels, which are consistent with the degrees recognized by the Grand Lodge, may be worn legally. An Entered Apprentice might wear a jewel on which were represented the working tools of the First Degree, for instance, and so too, as regards the Second Degree, and in respect of the Third Degree, either the five-pointed star, its emblem, or a jewel with its working tools, might constitutionally, we apprehend, be worn in lodge, and for this reason—if not, what emblems, devices, jewels, or medals are legal? The jewels specified by the Book of Constitutions belong actually to officers, not to degrees; and if the Book of Constitutions admits that, other honorary jewels, emblems, devices, or medals may be worn, if consistent "with the recognized degrees." What are they? The word "degrees" cannot by any possibility be strained so as to mean "degrees of rank," so that it can only refer to the three Craft Degrees, including the Royal Arch. Why should it not then be stated what jewels, &c., may be actually worn in lodge? Why should not the charity medal come under the same law as the centenary jewel? And hence the question naturally almost arises, would it not be well to modify the law, and settle it fully and finally, and once for all. Why should not each lodge have its own lodge jewel, by sanction of the Grand Master, and by regulation of the proper authorities, and by the provisions of the Book of Constitutions? Each lodge would then keep up its own "esprit de corps" by the possession of its distinguishing badge, and a very large sum might be raised for the Fund of Benevolence, which, if the present strain on it continues, will want ere long increased supplies. We have spoken simply, and we trust clearly, and we venture to think what we have advanced may be worthy of a little consideration by those who we know well have ever the best interests of our great Order most truly and loyally at heart.

THE WESTMINSTER GAZETTE AGAIN.

The proceedings and deliverances of the Roman Catholic body in this country would be very saddening were they not so very ludicrous. Here is a religious organization of great power and greater influence, agitated and troubled about Freemasons and Freemasonry to a degree we could hardly have thought possible or credible. We have never in the history of the past, or in the controversies of the present, witnessed an excitement so silly, or a fear so craven. Day by day, in one form or other, the various publications of the Ultramontane school are pouring forth the most childish invectives, and the most venomous diatribes. There is nothing too hard or too bad to say of Freemasons and Freemasonry. We are accustomed to the violence of foreign Roman Catholic journals and ecclesiastics, but we confess we are not prepared for this absolute manqué of all "égards" of politeness, even for this unscrupulous use of perverse calumny, the "suppressio veri," and the "suggestio falsi," which we have to encounter in free-spoken, truth-loving England. But we fear, after a certain correspondence at Hastings that has appeared in the public prints, that we may expect anything at the hands of some Ultramontane partizans which violence can suggest or vulgarity inspire. Sir Geo. Bowyer in his kindness, attempts an appeal ad misericordiam, and asks us all not to judge of the many by the few, but, alas "facta" are more powerful than "verba," and at this moment some of the more violent and the least scrupulous of ultramontane writers have got the bit between their teeth, and words of moderation and counsels of restraint are worse than vain. The "Westminster Gazette," a sober Roman Catholic journal, in its issue of October 20th, puts forward an article entitled "The Secret Societies and their Aims," which we deplore, protest against, and laugh at at the same time. We deplore it in the interests of religion and of truth; we protest against it on behalf of a peaceful, loyal, and unrevolutionary society; we laugh at it because it simply displays at this moment the Ultramontane monomania, and as regards Freemasonry is a burlesque on fact, and a mockery of common sense. Any Roman Catholic taking up the article, or a non-Roman Catholic, for the matter of that, would believe that the whole of Freemasonry is simply a camp of secret conspiracy, a focus of revolutionary, socialistic, communistic, irreligious intrigue, a dangerous and destructive combination against all order, law, government, morality, and religion.

A REFERENCE.

With respect to the quotation in our last issue from the printed reports of the Quarterly Communication, March 3rd, 1858, we beg to refer our readers to the "Freemasons' Magazine and Masonic Mirror," vol. from January to June, 1858, p. 453, and to the "Masonic Observer" for March 20th, 1858, p. 5. We understand that the official minutes are naturally more condensed, but our readers will see who collate the reports of the "Masonic Magazine" and the "Masonic Observer" that they are almost identically the same, word for word.

A WORD OF WARNING.

We publish, as we promised, in another column a letter which came too late for insertion last week, relative to the Boys' School, and signed by Bros. Tew and Perrott. We have printed the letter at the request of our two brethren, though we are fully sensible of the deep evil which may accrue to an excellent institution by Parthian attacks and a protracted controversy, affecting alike the character, work, and progress of the school. Still, as we are unwilling to close our pages to the real or supposed grievance of any brother, the more so as we have admitted Bro. Binckes's letters, we shall continue to publish such further correspondence as we may be favoured with on both sides, but minus personalities. We give fair notice to all who henceforth forward to us their "gravamina" or their rejoinders, that we shall rigorously excise all personal reflections, come from what quarter they may.

Original Correspondence.

[We do not hold ourselves responsible for, or even as approving of the opinions expressed by our correspondents, but we wish, in a spirit of fair play to all, to permit—within certain necessary limits—free discussion.—Ed.]

THE MASONIC BOYS' SCHOOL.

To the Editor of the Freemason.

Dear Sir and Brother,—

We note in your issue of Friday last a letter from the Secretary of the Boys' School with reference to our pamphlet, and we crave space in your columns for a brief reply.

For obvious reasons we pass by the Secretary's abuse, and go straight to the point. Bro. Binckes, unfortunately for himself, adduces the case of "James Gasson" to convict us of error, and assures the friends of the institution that all our statements—"mass of vindictive accusations"—may be as easily confuted.

The Secretary states that £5 was paid for an outfit on leaving in May, 1872. We find, however, that "James Gasson," according to a Report, 2nd edition, before us, did not attain the age for leaving, viz., fifteen, in 1872, till the 28th October of that year, and, as we are informed in a contemporary that "James Gasson" was "an orphan and entirely friendless," it is very strange he left the school six months before his time. Again, the Secretary states that £5 was paid at commencement of apprenticeship, which, according to the same authority, must have been in the year 1872. Why then is this second grant of £5 not shewn in the 1872 Report, where other grants of the same amount, as late as December, are duly recorded? Everything concerning "Gasson" is most perplexing: in two Reports, one reaching a second edition, we are informed that he left in December, 1871; in another that for 1865, "second edition with corrections," we are told in two places that "Gasson's" time for leaving would not be till the 28th October, 1872; and now the Secretary states that £5 was paid for his outfit on leaving in May, 1872. We fail to see how the Secretary has improved his case, which appears to us to be only more involved, and all we can say of the Reports for the last three years is, that they are thoroughly unreliable, and therefore worthless. The repetition in Report for 1873 of grants made in 1872 and previous years, is in direct contradiction to the heading, "With amount of grant not previously made or ascertained."

As regards numbers "in the institution," as the several lists are headed, and not on the Secretary's books, we see no reason for altering our verdict, which is, that they are all wrong; this we have shewn conclusively in our pamphlet, and it will hardly escape the notice of our readers, that Bro. Binckes offers none of his solutions for the other blunders, which, being made in two editions of the same Report, ought not to be explained away as "clerical blunders."

Since the issue of our pamphlet several other errors in these Reports have been brought to our notice by correspondents. What the Secretary means by the sum of £510 17s. from this source we do not know; and have only to remark concerning his salary and office expenses, that the total cost last year for the Clergy Orphan Schools under this head, for 210 orphans, amounted to only £802 5s. 10d., whereas at the Masonic Boys' School, with 170 inmates, the total cost was £1274 18s. 9d. In the matter of clothing too, our school compares unfavourably with the Clergy Orphan School, where the cost per head is only £5 10s.

44d., whilst each of our boys cost last year £7 11s. 7d. These are facts, and speak for themselves.

The till-now-unheard-of charge of "unparalleled tyranny and persecution," &c., against Bro. Perrott argues the extremity to which the Secretary is reduced, and it will strike your readers as most strange that, withal, Bro. Perrott was spontaneously offered by a sub-committee of the governing body, formally appointed to treat with him, an opportunity of withdrawing his previous resignation. The letters from the masters were sent in order that they might offer any suggestions for alterations in the different time-tables.

We are glad to observe that the Secretary has at length seen fit to admit, though doubtless with many mental afterbirth pangs, the paternity of the Matron's reply, characterised by a member of the House Committee as "highly improper." Its authorship was one of Bro. Perrott's crucial questions, which the Secretary three months ago publicly announced should be crucially answered, and its late constrained recognition does not say much for a parent's natural pride.

We are, dear Sir and Brother, yours fraternally,
THOMAS WM. TEW.
O. G. D. PERROTT, M.A.

Pontefract, Oct. 26th, 1875.

To the Editor of the Freemason.

Dear Sir and Brother,—

In the hurry of complying with the exigencies of the press, I copied from the uncorrected MS. a statement with reference to outfits, &c. The amount "paid in 1871" is £45 (instead of £55), and that appearing in Report 1875, "paid in 1874," is £37 10s. (instead of £47 10s.), the result not being affected. Regretting having thus to trouble you,

I am, dear Sir and Brother, yours faithfully and fraternally,
FREDERICK BINCKES.

MASONIC JEWELS.

To the Editor of the Freemason.

Dear Sir and Brother,—

In reply to your correspondent, "An Enquiring M.M.," I can assure him that the "five-pointed star" is a perfectly legitimate jewel, and may be worn by any M.M. I have many times worn it in Grand Lodge, but what is perhaps of more consequence, I wore it at the installation of H.R.H. the Prince of Wales as Grand Master, when I had the honour of acting as Steward, and when, as you are aware, every jewel was rigidly examined, so that nothing unorthodox should by any possibility be admitted. You, Sir, have already pointed out that such a jewel is not contrary to Masonic law (Craft), and I trust that "An Enquiring M.M." will rest satisfied that he is perfectly in order in wearing it. Should the W.M. and officers of his lodge make any objection, he has an appeal to the Board of General Purposes, when the question will be settled once for all, and I for one will gladly assist him in making such an appeal, if necessary.

I remain, dear Sir and Brother, your truly and fraternally,
J. J. HOOPER WILKINS, W.M. 73, &c.

To the Editor of the Freemason.

Dear Sir and Brother,—

In answer to Bro. the Rev. E. Y. Nepean, the jewels allowed to be worn in the Craft lodge include not only those specified in the "Book of Constitutions," and the charity and Royal Arch jewels (Principals, &c.), but also all special jewels, like those of the Lodge Antiquity ("Royal Medal"), and the Prince of Wales's Lodge.

I cannot myself see that the "five-pointed star" is a legal Masonic jewel, though it is just possible that the editor of the "Freemason" is correct, and that it comes under the definition of the "Book of Constitutions" as to decorations.

In addition to the foregoing there is the centenary jewel, a drawing of which appears now in the appendix to the "Constitutions." Many of these centenary jewels, however, are very handsome, the patterns formerly varying considerably, and the designs in many instances being most ornate. A brother may of course belong to twenty centennial lodges, and thus be entitled to wear as many centenary jewels, just as he may serve as Master of as many lodges, and be decorated with a corresponding number of Past Masters' jewels, but we are of the decided opinion that it would be ornamentation at the expense of common sense and a waste of money, much better turned into our charitable institutions.

WILLIAM JAMES HUGHAN.

COLOURED LODGES IN THE UNITED STATES.

To the Editor of the Freemason.

Dear Sir and Brother,—

In the "Freemason" of Oct. 23, p. 467, there is an article on the Coloured Lodges of the United States, and especially on Prince Hall G.L. of Boston, which, I cannot deny has astonished me very much, not only with regard to the want of information and care of the author, but still more because it is written in a most regardless and unbrotherly style. The author speaks there, that "a distinct opinion has been expressed thereanent by some writers and bodies in Germany." But if he is at all informed on the subject he touches upon, he will know that the "some" bodies are four independent lodges and the German Grand Lodge League, composed of all the Grand Masters and representatives of Grand Lodges, i. e., the whole fraternity of Germany. And the "some" writers are the publishers of the "Freimaurer-Zeitung," "Bauhütte," "Am Reissbrett," and "Hamburger Logenblatt," and their contributors (except one brother), i. e., again, the whole fraternity. I may ask the English brethren whether it is allowed in such a case to speak of "some" writers and bodies?

There is a very great difference between the course taken by the author of that article and the German bodies; for the first gives his statements only after an "unimpeachable everywhere. We can simply say that such an assertion is an utter falsehood, and a falsehood which is known to be a falsehood, deliberately persisted in, and calmly repeated without hesitation or regret. The writer makes no distinction between foreign and Anglo-Saxon Freemasonry, even supposing all his allegations against Freemasonry abroad be true, which they are not; and he simply lumps all Freemasons every where together under the appellation and character of a "horrible" society. Now, for the moment leaving out continental Freemasonry, in Great Britain, and the United States, and Canada, with our 800,000 or 900,000 Freemasons, the Roman Catholic authorities know as well as we do that we are entirely non-political, and a peaceful, loyal, benevolent, and religious brotherhood. Even Barruel, when he poured forth his bitter accusations against his compatriots and others, admitted that English Freemasonry had never adopted the "wild notions," he professed to discover in the continental system. And so it has ever been, so it still is, so it will ever be. Our great principles are still loyalty and charity, brotherly love, relief, and truth. Hence it is a very sad spirit of absolute mendacity which persists in ascribing to Anglo-Saxon Freemasonry any such revolutionary tendencies as these highly agitated Ultramontanes are ascribing in their nervousness and vexation to Freemasonry generally. And even abroad it is not true. The writer declares that the Freemasons are at the bottom of the German struggle, and of everything just now which does not go as Rome wishes, a fact which has never been proved, and which we believe to be an entire fiction, the result of a deceased Jesuit brain, or an overwrought Ultramontane imagination. That foolish Masons, (for all Masons are not wise,) and individual lodges may not have been discreet, and have put forth regrettable manifestoes, we do not deny, but we doubt if the governing body of any Masonic Grand Lodge or Grand Orient has ever endorsed such views, or publicly approved such proceedings. Even the Bishop of Orleans got no further than the acts of individual Masons and lodges, and we do not believe ourselves that anything more is proveable. To clinch his arguments, to drive his complaints home, the writer in the "Westminster Gazette" gives us the following passage of an anonymous Freemason in 1838, which we now present to our readers simply because, first, we doubt that any Freemason ever uttered such words, and secondly, because they are such a parody on our true teaching that we should ourselves be prepared, if really ever made, at once utterly to disavow them. Here they are, and we append the conclusion of the writer. "But let us listen again to the initiated Freemason of 1838, and our readers, we fancy, will almost believe with us that we are listening to the voice of a Bismarckian Prussian of 1875. Rising in his frenzy, he exclaims:—'Entice away the priest from the altar and from virtue; make him idle, or vain, or a patriot. He will then be better able to do our work than if the point of our dagger was blunted on his tanned skull. Corrupt the people by means of the clergy, and the clergy by our means. Such a demoralization will alone enable us to bury the Catholic Church. It is a noble aim, and fit for men of our stamp. Let us not be led astray from it by indulging in the miserable satisfactions of individual revenge. The best dagger for the assassination of the Church, the best blow at her heart, is demoralization. On, then, to our work.' It seems to us that Freemasonry, painted by itself, looks even more horrible than when it is painted by its enemies, and Freemasonry, to say the least, is as much condemned in the eyes of honest men by its own voice as it is by the voice of the Church." Do any of our readers believe that such words ever were spoken by a true Freemason? We do not; and we hope that the writer in the "Westminster Gazette" will give us a specific reference to the source whence he has obtained this passage. We see he speaks of an initiated of "Judice" writing from Castellamare to a fellow conspirator of the "Nubio," but in what actual publication did these words appear? We pause for a reply, as after the proof of the writer's absolute unfairness and mental aberration as regards Freemasonry, we are sorry to say we must decline to accept his statements, or credit his "ipse dixit."

authority," without the name of this "authority" to prove its value; the latter have decided the question, after having proved all documents and reasons pro and con. on the only authority of law, true Masonic principles, and justice. And from this standpoint four independent lodges of Germany, and the Grand Lodge League have acknowledged Prince Hall Grand Lodge as a just and perfect Masonic body. The Grand Lodge of Hungary and the Swiss Grand Lodge Alpina have done the same.

The highly-esteemed independent lodge, Baldwin zur Linde, at Leipzig (Worshipful Master Bro. Professor Dr. Marbach) has voted the acknowledgement after having heard a committee charged to prove all documents and writings, and has published the report of this committee in the "Reissbrett," a paper for Master Masons. It would be only right and just, if the "unimpeachable authority" of a writer should like, to translate that report, and to discuss the reasons laid down therein.

In the whole Masonic world the members of a dormant (not defunct) lodge have the right to resume the labour. The Prince Hall G.L. especially had this right, on the ground of the legal warrant still in its possession, and more, as Prince Hall, or African Lodge, regularly constituted from the G.L. of England, has not ceased the intercourse with London; but the Grand Lodge of England, as in so many other cases of olden time, has cared nothing for her daughter lodges, i.e., the mutual relations have gone asleep on both sides.

Indeed, I am very much astonished to find in an English Masonic paper such a boasting on the warrant, and the strict outer legal form. May the author and the "Freemason" first criticise the strict outer legal right of the existence of the Grand Lodge of England before moralizing other bodies? Has any other Grand Lodge warranted the first Grand Lodge of England? Had the four old lodges of London, without the other then existing lodges of England, an undeniable right to form a Grand Lodge and choose a Grand Master? Had they any strict legal right to convert simple operative lodges into pure symbolical lodges? Had they a right to put aside the Old Constitutions, and to vote the old charges of 1723? No, no, no; if the strict outer formal right is in question. And, further, if the author and the "Freemason" deny the legal existence of Prince Hall Grand Lodge as a just and perfect body, with the right to institute new lodges, it is not just and perfect for Freemasons to judge all Grand Lodges of the Universe with the same measure after the compass? Well, if this is done, then, with the exception of the newly-formed Grand Lodge of a recent date, scarcely a single Grand Lodge would have an undisputed right of acknowledgment, neither most of our German Grand Lodges, nor the Grand Orient of France, nor the Grand Lodge of Sweden, and others. But enough. The Prince Hall Grand Lodge of Boston is as much a just and perfect Grand Lodge as the Grand Lodge of England and other bodies, and all its members are true and lawful Masons.

I am, fraternally yours, J. G. FINDEL.

DANIEL O'CONNEL.

The original of the following appeared in the "Dublin Post, and is the best answer to "Enquirer" in last week's "Freemason." About five years ago the question was discussed in the "Freemason":—

"Sir— London, April 19, 1837.

A paragraph has been going the round of the Irish newspapers, purporting to have my sanction, and stating that I had been at one time Master of a Masonic Lodge in Dublin, and still continue to belong to that society.

"I have since received letters addressed to me as a Freemason, and I feel it incumbent on me to state the real facts.

"It is true that I was a Freemason, and a Master of a Lodge. It was at a very early period of my life, and either before an ecclesiastical censure had been published in the Catholic Church in Ireland prohibiting the taking of the Masonic Oaths, or, at least before I was aware of that censure. I now wish to state that, having become acquainted with it, I submitted to its influence, and many, very many years ago unequivocally renounced Freemasonry. I offered the late Archbishop Dr. Troy to make that renunciation public, but he deemed it unnecessary. I am sorry to have this opportunity of doing so.

"Freemasonry in Ireland may be said to have (apart from its oaths) no evil tendency, save as far as it may counteract in some degree the exertions of those most laudable and useful institutions—institutions deserving of every encouragement—the temperance societies.

"But the great, the important objection, is this. The profane taking in vain the awful name of the Deity, in the wanton and multiplied taking of oaths, of oaths administered on the book of God, either in mockery or derision, or with solemnity which renders the taking of them without any adequate motive only the more criminal. This objection, which, perhaps, I do not state strongly enough, is alone abundantly sufficient to prevent any serious Christian from belonging to that body.

"My name having been dragged before the public on this subject, it is, I think, my duty to prevent any person supposing that he was following my example in taking oaths which I now certainly would not take, and consequently becoming a Freemason, which I certainly would not now do.

"I have the honour to be your faithful servant,
"DANIEL O'CONNEL."

PROV. GRAND LODGE OF NORTH WALES.

To the Editor of the Freemason.

Dear Sir and Brother,—

Having read the short paragraph in the last week's "Freemason" of the proceedings of the above lodge, although short it contained a few trivial errors. It was at first arranged that the procession should proceed through High-street and enter the cathedral by the great west door under Bishop Sheffington's Tower and proceed along the nave to the transept. Owing to an oversight in the railway arrangements for the month, the R.W.P.G.M. and officers did not arrive by their appointed time, which caused a delay. At the last moment the order was given to proceed to the cathedral by the shortest way, which was just long enough to be able to form a procession before entering the cathedral, which they did by the north door, to the great disappointment of the inhabitants and visitors in not being allowed to have a glimpse of the R.W.P.G.M., their "Prince, in Wales." Bro. R. Roberts is not the S.W., but our respected P.M. and Sec.

I enclose you the sermon preached on the occasion by the Lord Bishop of the Diocese, to show the great contrast felt for the spiritual welfare of the Craft by the head of Christ Church in this diocese, and that of the so-called head of Christ Church at Rome. "Ye shall know them by their fruits" and "According to their deeds, accordingly he will repay."

Yours fraternally, R. O.

MARK MASONRY.

To the Editor of the Freemason.

Dear Sir and Brother,—

I am much interested in the Mark Degree, and have perused with interest the communication of a "Mark Master" in the "Freemason" of to-day on the subject.

1. As to the charities, I know one of its Provincial Mark Masters is a Vice-Patron of the Royal Masonic Institution for Boys, and numerous members of the degree are foremost in aiding our three Grand Institutions, but we need not surely present any defence of the degree in that respect?

2. What does "Mark Master" mean by saying "Mark Lodges existed in England under the York Constitution the minutes of the St. John's Mark Lodge at Bolton dating from 1779?" Are we to understand by York Constitution that of the "Grand Lodge of all England," held at York, for some years extinct? If so, I deny the statement, for it has never yet been proved that the York Masons worked the Mark Degree, and as to Bolton, there was not a lodge working there last century under the Grand Lodge of all England (York).

I shall be glad to know what "Mark Master" means by his statement, and though I feel sure the lodge in question was not of the York Constitution, yet I should be exceedingly gratified to see an account of its records from 1779 in the "Freemason."

Those of "Banff" chapter have already appeared in the "Freemason" from our friend Bro. Hughan.
Joppa, Oct. 30. P.M. OF MARK LODGE.

To the Editor of the Freemason.

Dear Sir and Brother,—

Your correspondent, a "Mark Master," is clever, and I am therefore justified in assuming that his letter is penned for effect. Pity he does not sign his name to his communications, in order that we may see who is who.

I will content myself by criticising the historical evidence he adduces in support of the genuine nature of the degree of Mark Master, because opinions may differ in regard to the value of a recognition of such a degree by the Order of the Temple, Ancient and Accepted Scottish Rite, and Red Cross of Rome and Constantine.

He is correct, no doubt, in regard to some degree called the "Mark" having been given at Banff and elsewhere at the close of last century, but when he adduces the instance of "Mother Kilwinning," I cannot help noticing that he is intelligent enough to know that he is only trying to hoodwink his readers. All the Kilwinning Lodge (or any other Scottish lodge) did was to record and register the Mark of the Apprentice Mason, a thing which the Scottish lodges were bound to do by an ordinance of the early part of the seventeenth century, and nearly two centuries before any degree of any kind called the Mark Degree existed anywhere.

Further, the York Constitution never did acknowledge the Mark or any analogous degree; they only recognised the Royal Arch, Knights Templar, and Priestly Order of Melchisedek.

Fraternally yours, JOHN YANKER.

To the Editor of the Freemason.

Dear Sir and Brother,—

I am W.M. elect of our Mark Master Masons' lodge. At our next meeting I shall have to be installed, and there are two candidates to be advanced. Will you, or some of your readers, kindly tell me which ceremony ought to take place first, and oblige, Very faithfully and fraternally yours, J. T. S.

ROYAL MASONIC INSTITUTION FOR GIRLS.

The General Committee of this institution met on Thursday at Freemasons' Hall, Bro. John A. Rucker, Vice-Patron, in the chair. Among the other brethren present were Bros. A. H. Tattershall, Richard Spencer, H. A. Dubois, R. B. Webster, George Kenning, F. Binckes, Walter Wellsman, H. M. Levy, H. W. Hemsworth, Henry Dubosc, Henry Moore, S. Rosenthal, W. F. C. Moutrie, John Boyd, Thos. Cubitt, and R. W. Little, (Sec.)

The minutes of the last General Committee were read and verified, and the minutes of the Quarterly Court and Audit Committee were read for information.

Five petitions were then read, of which four were approved and one was deferred. The committee then adjourned.

[The above appeared in our second edition last week].

PROVINCIAL GRAND CHAPTER OF HERTFORDSHIRE.

INSTALLATION OF COMP. HALSEY, M.P., AS PROVINCIAL GRAND SUPERINTENDENT.

After a lapse of eleven years the meetings of the Grand Chapter for the Province of Herts have been revived. The province has for some time been without a Provincial Superintendent, but Royal Arch Masonry has not hitherto been very flourishing in the province, and there has been very little for a Superintendent to do lately, however, the Order has become more numerous, and the holding of a Provincial Grand Chapter become a necessity. The office of Superintendent being vacant, it could not be conferred on a more worthy Comp. than the Provincial Grand Master, Bro. T. F. Halsey, M.P., a Past Z. of No. 404, a provincial chapter, a very popular chief, and one under whom the Craft in the province is flourishing considerably. His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales, Grand Z., therefore, appointed Comp. Halsey as Provincial Superintendent for Herts, and on Thursday last the installation of that companion was performed at the Masonic Hall, Watford, the first stone of which was laid by Comp. Halsey some time ago. There was a good attendance of companions at the installation, most of them, however, being, as might be expected, provincial companions.

The following is a list of the company:—Comps. John Hervey, G.S.E.; A. T. Brett, P.Z. 404; F. Davison, Z. 404; I. N. Edwards, 1385; R. T. Andrews, H. 403; T. S. Carter, Z. 1385, and J. 402; W. Marks, 1385; W. Cutbush, J. 1385; H. C. Finch, P.Z. 404; J. R. Cocks, P.Z. 403, S.E. 403, 1385; J. Lowthin, H. 1385; J. Livingston, 1385; H. C. Heart, Z. 403; G. P. Bernard, 404; G. Finch, P.Z. 403; H. Massey ("Freemason"); J. Terry, P.Z. 403, 1385; R. Horton Smith, P.Z. 404; A. J. Copeland, P.Z. 404; J. E. Dawson, 404; J. Wilkinson, 1248; H. Lloyd Thomas, P.Z. 403; J. Purrott, 1385; and H. F. Burchell Herne, P.Z. 404.

Comps. Hervey, as Z.; F. Davison, H.; Heard, J.; H. C. Finch, P.S.; G. R. Cocks, First A.; H. Lloyd Thomas, Second A.; Dr. Brett, N.; F. H. Wilson Iles, M.D., E.; J. Terry, D.C.; T. S. Carter, R. T. Andrews, J. Lowthin, G. Finch, H. Massey, and other P.P.s, opened the chapter, and the companions having been admitted, Comp. Hervey thus addressed them:—

You are all aware of the object for which we are met on the present occasion, and I may congratulate those members of the Province of Hertfordshire who have been deprived of a Grand Chapter so many years on having the opportunity of meeting together again as a Provincial Grand Chapter. I need hardly say that it has afforded me great pleasure to come down to-day to resuscitate the Grand Chapter of the Province of Hertfordshire, and I hope that now that there is a Grand Chapter established we shall find that the Order of the Royal Arch will increase in this province, and that instead of three chapters, as I believe is now the number in the province, we shall soon see double the number. I will not detain you longer now, because time unfortunately flies, rather too rapidly to suit many of us. I will not take up your time needlessly, but will now proceed to the business of the day, when I shall have the pleasure of placing one to preside over you in this province better than I, who am the exponent of the G.Z. on the present occasion. I shall leave you this evening with a head of your own, instead of being as you have been for some time without a ruler to govern and control the Order of Royal Arch Masonry in the province. The business was thereupon proceeded with by Comp. Iles, calling over the roll of chapters, the Hertford, 403; the Watford, 404, and the Gladsmuir, 1385, when the several companions, belonging to those chapters answered. Comp. Iles afterwards stated that the last meeting of the Provincial Grand Chapter, was held on the 9th Sept., 1864, when the officers for the province were appointed. At this point of the proceedings S.N. announced that the Provincial Grand Superintendent Designate was without the chapter, when the Z. requested that he would send in his patent. S.N. having obtained it, handed it to Comp. S.E., who read it aloud and handed it to the M.E.Z. for examination, and appointed a deputation consisting of Comps. Finch, Cocks, and Thomas (Sojourners), T. S. Carter, and James Terry, D.C., to introduce Comp. Halsey for the purpose of being installed. These companions retired, and afterwards returned, conducting Comp. Halsey into the chapter. The M.E.Z., addressing him, said:—I congratulate you, sir, on being appointed Prov. Grand Superintendent of this province. It must be a gratifying feeling to yourself to receive that appointment from so eminent a member of the Craft as the head of our Order now is. He, of course, is one who will be the general disseminator of honours on some future occasion for the realm at large. He now is the King, one may so denominate him, for the time, of Masonry, the exponent of all our principles, one who, I am sure, during the time that he has been at our head, has conducted himself in a manner to recommend him to every member of our Order, whether it be in Craft or R.A. Masonry. It must, therefore, be an additional pleasure to you to be appointed by so eminent a member of society; and it must also be gratifying to you that after the province has had a lapse, I may say of 21 years in Royal Arch Masonry, it is considered advisable to resuscitate the Grand Chapter of Hertfordshire, and that you, sir, are appointed to be at its head, in which position I hope you will not only resuscitate the province as a province, but likewise that it will be in your power so to disseminate the seeds of the Order that we shall see chapters springing up in other parts of the province than those which now possess them. I am sure that during the time that you preside over the Order you will do it with that diligence and with that desire not only to further the interests of the Order in general, but render yourself in Royal Arch Masonry, as you have done in the Craft, popular among its members and agreeable to the whole province. (Hear, hear and cheers). I may congratulate you on having done so during the time you have been Provincial Grand Master; and I am quite sure that if it should again be my lot to visit a chapter in this province, I shall have the same feeling of gratification that you were appointed to be at its head—a feeling of intense satisfaction that not only you are at its head, but that the Order of Royal Arch Masonry is increasing and multiplying. I will not detain you longer, sir, because I am sure the companions round this room will be much more gratified to see you in this chair than the individual who now occupies it. I am simply the instrument, I may say, the link between the province and yourself. That link will soon be cut off, and you will remain the head of the chain which will connect London and Watford. It affords me pleasure to have come down here to-day to install you in the chair of Grand Superintendent, as I had some time ago the pleasure of installing you in the Grand Master's chair of this province. As I have said before, the companions will be gratified to see you in the position you are about to occupy, and to feel that they have once more one at their head who will not only look after their interests, but do the best he can to promote the good of the Order in general and the Royal Arch in particular. It now only remains for me to enquire if you are willing to take the office. (Cheers.) Comp. Halsey having signified his assent, he was formally installed and invested, amidst much cheering. His first act was to appoint Comps. H. C. Finch, P.Z. 404, H.; J. R. Cocks, P.Z. 403, J.; F. H. Wilson, P.Z. and S.E. 404, S.E.; T. S. Carter, S.N.; F. Davison, 2, 404, P.S.; Heard, First Asst.; Lowthin, Second Asst.; Lumley Smith, G.R.; Andrews, S.B.; Foord, Std. B.; James Terry, D.C.; Dibdin, Org.; Thomas, Jan.; and Wright, Assistant J. Comp. T. S. Carter, S.N., proposed, and Comp. Thomas seconded, Comp. Copeland as Prov. G. Treasurer, which having been carried unanimously, the Grand Superintendent invested him accordingly, and complimented him on attaining that office. The Grand Superintendent afterwards said it would be advisable to have a committee appointed to frame the laws for the province; and Comp. Iles said it might be interesting to know what laws existed in the former Grand Chapter. The first meeting was held on the 22nd Sept., 1845, when a committee was appointed to frame a code of bye-laws. The committee met on the 17th Oct. that year, and resolved and recommended that the bye-laws of Grand Chapter were sufficient with the exception of some minor points. At the next meeting of the Provincial Grand Chapter on the 7th Sept., 1846, this report was read and confirmed. No meeting of the Provincial Grand Chapter was held from that time till the 19th Sept., 1864, when it was resolved that the payment of arrears of dues should not be enforced, but all dues should date from that meeting. (Laughter.) But no subsequent meeting had been held, and no money had been received, except £1, which the family of the late Comp. Tootal, Prov. G. Treasurer, had forwarded with his books to him (Comp. Iles). This £1 appeared to have been received at the last meeting eleven years ago. (Laughter.) Perhaps it would be as well to appoint a small committee. It was not necessary to frame any new bye-laws, but there might be questions arising in the province which it would be requisite to advise upon at next meeting. The Grand Superintendent said he also thought a small committee would be desirable. Of course some dues would be necessary to defray the expense of Grand Chapter, such as clothing, jewels and collars. Large contributions would be unnecessary.

Comp. Hervey remarked that there was one thing usual in Provincial Grand Chapters, a fee of honour on appointment to Grand Office, some trifling sum, which was graduated according to the office a companion filled. It did not press heavily on the individual, but it greatly assisted the province in meeting the expenses which necessarily fell upon it. This was a general rule prevailing in provinces for raising funds. Comp. Cocks, J., thought this suggestion a right one. The fee of honour with a small sum as a due from each member of the chapters in the province would raise quite sufficient. It might be left to the committee to fix what the amount should be, but for himself he thought as a member, the same as a brother in the Craft paid, would be a fair amount to fix. He mentioned this just in conversation, in order to get at the opinion of the companions in general, upon the subject. Comp. Thomas thought there would be no difficulty in getting a subscription from each member in the meantime to provide clothing. Comp. Horton Smith believed it would be better to appoint a committee, and leave it to them. He would propose the three Grand Principals, the S.E., and the Treasurer to form the committee who was to report to Grand Chapter. Comp. Terry, D.C., seconded the motion, which was carried unanimously. Comp. Iles, S.E., read communications regretting inability to attend from Comps. Sedgwick, D.P.G.M.; Humbert, Z. 404; Martin, J. 404; Goodliffe, 404; Fellows, and Lumley Smith, after which Grand Chapter was closed, and the companions sat down to a choice banquet provided in the banquet-hall by the proprietor of the Essex Arms. The usual toasts were subsequently proposed and drunk. The toast of "The Queen," as the mother of a Mason who presides ably over every branch of the Craft in this country, having been duly honoured, the Grand Superintendent next gave "The Prince of Wales, G.M.," and said that, as Comp. Hervey would vouch, the Prince of Wales was no mere show or ornamental Mason, but that he had the interests of the Craft at heart, that he was Grand Master and G.Z., not only in name, but in fact, and promised to be second to none of the previous Grand Masters of the Craft. They must all wish him success through his journey in India, and trust he would come back in safety to preside over Masonic meetings. The toast of "The Pro G.Z., the G.H., and G.J.," coupled with the name of Comp. Hervey, was next proposed and the Grand Superintendent, in giving it, referred to Comp. Hervey's performance of the ceremony that evening. It had made a deep impression upon him (the G.S.) which would last throughout the whole of his Masonic career. It was not the first time he had heard him, for Comp. Hervey had previously installed him as Provincial Grand Master. They were fortunate in having such a representative of Grand Officers present. He looked upon it as a white letter day in the history of the Craft and Royal Arch Masonry in the Province of Herts that the ceremony had been gone through so ably as it had been performed by the G.S.E. (Hear, hear).

Comp. Hervey said he was much honoured in having his name coupled with the names of the noblemen who held the three offices below the Prince of Wales. If England were sought through it would be difficult to find three men more devoted to the interests of the Craft, or who carried out the duties they had undertaken with more anxiety that they should be well performed. Lord Carnarvon was well known in every position in life, as a politician (which perhaps he ought not to mention there), as a man of letters, and in social and family life. So also with Lord Skelmersdale and Lord De Tabley, men who were distinguished as deserving well of their country and their Craft. For the kind feelings expressed towards himself, he (Comp. Hervey) felt very grateful to the Grand Superintendent, and to the companions for the way in which they had received them. He had come down to Watford with a great deal of pleasure to install the Grand Superintendent in the chair he now occupied, feeling that in doing so he was not only performing the duty which every Mason owed to the Craft—to do the best he could to forward its interests. He did not think he could have forwarded those interests better for Herts than by installing Comp. Halsey as Grand Superintendent. The duties he (Comp. Hervey) had performed had been very light. The ceremony was but a short one, and hence it was that there was little in it to attract brethren other than feeling that they were taking part in the ceremony of inducting the Grand Superintendent. The companion appointed to preside over them was one whom they respected as a neighbour, whom they looked upon as possessing high character and great ability, and whom they wished to see presiding over them, who they felt would carry out his duties to their satisfaction, and temper justice with mercy. He (Comp. Hervey) was sure that if the Grand Superintendent found it necessary to administer justice, he would not shrink from it. He hoped that during his term of office (which he trusted would be a lengthy one), he would have no cause to execute any particular or severe sentence as far as justice was concerned; but he must be a hopeful man who on becoming the head of any society, great or small, could look forward to filling that position without some little difficulties, drawbacks, and stumbling blocks in his way. That Comp. Halsey's course might be a smooth one he sincerely hoped, if he felt that the brethren around him would assist him in carrying out all the duties he had to perform, that they would lighten his labours as far as it was possible to do so, and that they would support him whenever he should require it. The companions were very much pleased at having him as their Superintendent, and they trusted he might long remain so. Comp. Hervey then congratulated the Prov. G. Superintendent, and hoped he would never have cause to regret the 28th Oct., 1875. He then proposed Comp. Halsey's health.

Comp. Halsey, in reply, thanked Comp. Hervey for the very flattering way in which he had spoken of him. He felt it a very great honour to have been called on to preside over the Province of Herts, which had laid dormant so long. He was much pleased that the Grand Z. had thought fit to revive it, and he hoped that, being revived, it would prosper. He remembered being present at the last meeting eleven years ago, one of the three meetings referred to by Comp. Iles. On that occasion there was only one chapter in the province, and the meeting of Grand Chapter was one of the ordinary chapter days of the Watford Chapter. The only difference was the special business was performed before the ordinary began. It was with satisfaction he found there were now three chapters in the province, and when the next Provincial Grand Chapter met he hoped to see more. He did not think they should be satisfied with the progress hitherto made. The companions no doubt looked upon the Royal Arch Degree as the necessary complement and fulfilment of the M.M. Degree, that until a Mason had taken that degree he had not really completed his Masonic career. He therefore hoped the day would come when they would see a Royal Arch Chapter attached to every lodge in the province which up to the present time had not got them. He was aware that there was a rule which prevented the younger lodges from having chapters, because it was customary not to grant a charter for a chapter until the lodge had been in existence a certain time. That was quite right, because from circumstances brethren were constantly changing their domicile, and many of them who had taken the Third Degree in Craft Masonry were not able to go on to the Royal Arch Degree. A lodge should therefore have a certain amount of stability by length of existence before it had a chapter. It was true that for Royal Arch purposes some of the lodges seemed tacitly to agree to unite together. In the Watford Chapter there were many brethren of the Berkhamstead Lodge and others; but at the same time it would be more appropriate and fitting that they should have a chapter connected with each lodge, because, as he had said before, the Royal Arch Degree was the complement and completion of the Third Degree, and if a brother having taken his Master Mason Degree, who was desirous to take the Royal Arch, should be able to do it in the chapter belonging to his own lodge. Especially should this be so in country districts, in scattered, rural places like the North Eastern parts of the province, where the brethren were comparatively out of reach of a chapter. (Hear, hear.) Craft Masonry was flourishing, and had been flourishing for a long time. New lodges were being formed, and it was only that day he had been informed of the probability of another Craft lodge being added to the roll of Herts. R. A. Masons of Herts had now set the ball rolling by reviving and resuscitating Prov. G. Chapter, and he sincerely hoped that this degree as well as the Craft would go on increasing. As long as he had the honour of presiding over the Order in the province, he would do all he could to support it, and he again appealed to the Companions to assist him. (Cheers.) "The Provincial Grand Officers" was the next toast, which was responded to by Comp. Finch, and "The Visitors" having been replied to by Comps. Wilkins and Massey, the janitor gave his toast, and the companions separated.

CONSECRATION OF THE CITY OF WESTMINSTER LODGE, No. 1563.

The City of Westminster Lodge, No. 1563, was consecrated on Friday week at the Regent Masonic Hall, Regent-street. The ceremony was performed by Bro. R. Wentworth Little, who was assisted by the Rev. P.M. Holden as Chaplain, Brus. C. A. Cottelbrune as D.C.; John Boyd, P.G.P.; W. Stephens; Colonel Burdett, Prov. G.M. Midx., and the following brethren:—Edward White, Benjamin Phillips, George Fowler, 1305; G. T. Carter, 145; John Hodges, 1319; G. Bubbs, P.M. 180; Thomas Lansdown, 813; T. Dayson, 382; A. Cameron, P.M. 180; W. H. Pope, 1305; W. E. Phillips, W.M. 435; G. J. Hill, S.W. 1336; John Hancock, 765; Thaddeus Wells, 205; J. Mason, 309; Theo. Distin 173; E. C. Woodward, W.M. 382; H. Massey ("Freemason"); Thomas Bull, P.M. 145; F. H. Cozens, Org. 907; Edward Moody, Sec. 1426; John Woodward, 1446; F. R. Gibson, 1446, 1460; A. Flately, P.M. 205; A. C. Burrell, 1446; W. Morphew, 1446; H. Reed, 733; J. T. Baker, 1305; J. L. Lucas; J. E. Shand, 1507; E. Farwig, 180; Thomas Pratt, 1446; A. Stewart, 1158; C. W. Wise, W.M. 1158; J. Waugh, 177; R. H. Morrison (Michigan) P.M. 297; A. B. Grabbam, P.M. 1494; James Kench, P.M. 538; C. Burmeister, 538; J. Marshall, 538; S. Willis, 177; James Morrell, P.M. 111; A. Bassington, I.G. 205; W. S. Lee, 120; E. M. Haigh, P.M. 29; and T. B. Yeoman, 1460. The W.M. designate was Bro. B. H. Swallow, P.M. 382; the S.W. designate, the Rev. P.M. Holden; and the J.W., Bro. Edward White. Bro. Little opened lodge at four o'clock in the handsome lodge-room, which, as may be imagined from a perusal of the above list of names, was full. The consecration was adorned with a beautiful musical accompaniment, which was provided by Bro. Thaddeus Wells, who also took part in the singing. Bro. F. H. Cozens presided at the organ; and the professional brethren who assisted were Bros. Hodges, G. T. Carter, and Theodore Distin. The ceremony of consecration was magnificently rendered, and the chants were given in splendid voice, and with exquisite taste. Bro. Holden, who delivered the oration, said,—Provincial Senior Grand Warden, Grand and Provincial Grand Officers, W.M., and brethren,—The occasion on which we meet together this day is, I conceive, interesting, not only to ourselves as Masons personally and individually, but to the Craft at large, inasmuch as it denotes the continued prosperity and vitality of our venerable Order, which like the famous Indian tree, the banana tree, perpetually renews itself in scions as vigorous and flourishing as the parent stem. To me, as you will readily understand, it is a particularly interesting occasion, inasmuch as in a short time I shall be invested with the S.W. collar of the lodge. And I assure you it is also a special gratification that I have been permitted to-day to assist and officiate as chaplain at so important a ceremony as the consecration of the City of Westminster Lodge, more especially as I feel convinced that those brethren who unite with me as founders of the lodge are eminently qualified to discharge the various duties of the high offices to which they have been appointed. They, it is true, have already made their mark in Masonry, and they have also won "golden opinions" for their zeal in its cause; and they are now, like myself, extremely anxious to devote their ability, time, and influence to the further advancement and development of so noble, so very interesting a science. It has been remarked, by a great and distinguished writer, of literary men, that they are a perpetual priesthood, standing forth from generation to generation as the dispensers and living types of God's everlasting wisdom; and the same remark, I think, may very fairly and properly be applied to the members of our enlightened Craft; and I rejoice to see so many worthy and talented men in the ranks of our fraternity. To their enfranchised minds Freemasonry unveils a universe of thought. To them it is and must be ever a keen source of delight to trace and to interpret those grand and solemn truths that were dimly foreshadowed in the mystic rites of the ancient world. Looking through the mists of ages, they behold the white-robed Athenians a kindred race. Amidst the darkness and gloom of occult ceremonies they discern a faint glimpse of the true light in which we all now rejoice. In every land they find tokens and traces innumerable graven by the hands of skilful Masons upon the walls of ruined fane and temples; and they establish the affinity of our Order with the society of Dionysian artificers, with the disciples of Pythagoras, with the College of Architects at Rome, and with the various operative associations of the Middle Ages. They demonstrate clearly that the great ethics of Freemasonry were known and taught by the very wisest sages of Greece, whose names are still honoured and revered by the whole civilized world. They prove that our Order, though often persecuted and often derided, has never yet passed, failed, or faltered in its sublime career, although meanwhile the mightiest and most powerful empires have been compelled to succumb to the destroying hand of conquest or to the effacing fingers of time. And I would ask what nobler exercise of the mental faculties can be found than a calm and earnest pursuit of Masonic knowledge, thus gleaming and gathering, as it were, in our onward path those rich treasures of wisdom which it unfolds to our view? But it is not merely to the intellectual pleasure to be derived from the study of Freemasonry that I would desire to direct your attention. Our institution possesses other and more practical claims upon our sympathy and support. Freemasonry is founded upon principles that are an honour and an ornament to human nature. It bids us hasten to the rescue of the young and helpless from the snares of poverty, ignorance and vice. It calls upon us to ameliorate the sad condition of those who in the decline of life require our assistance, consolation, and support. And I am proud to add, that English Freemasons have ever been highly distinguished, not merely for their zeal in promoting the welfare of our venerable Order, but for their large hearted benevolence and diffusive charity. The very best answer that can be given to the cavils and the sneers of the unenlightened world is to point to those excellent, those honourable institutions that have been raised for the culture, and nurture of the young, and the shelter of the old. I believe nearly a century has now passed away since the Masonic Girls' School was founded; and who shall venture to estimate the vast amount of good it has achieved? The Boy's School was established some ten years later, and the crowning act of our charitable undertakings was effected by the erection of a suitable building for those who, having borne the heat and burden of the day, and standing as it were on the very threshold of the Grand Lodge above, desire to end their days in peace and tranquillity. (Hear hear.) My brethren, it is our duty to prove to the world that Freemasonry is something more than a name, something infinitely better and higher than a mere excuse for social gatherings, be those social gatherings never so pleasant; it is our solemn duty to prove to the world that its principles are pure and lofty, its designs admirable and praiseworthy; and the best and the clearest and most logical way of convincing the scorner or the sceptic is by a steady and consistent practice of the beautiful precepts of our Order. Freemasonry will then not only present to the mind of the philosopher and the student a regularly-organised system of knowledge, unfolded in ritual and ceremonies known only to the initiated; but it would appear to mankind in general as a beneficent and beautiful institution, teaching and inculcating morality and visibly bearing the glorious fruits of charity and good will. May then the lodge which we inaugurate this day prove a conspicuous example of all those virtues that adorn and beautify the Masonic character; may it convey to distant posterity those grand, those august lessons that have been handed down from our forefathers; may it ever be the shrine of intellect and the temple of thought, the home of peace and the abode of joy, established, as I humbly hope it has been, by the hands of true, faithful, and devoted Masons; and resting upon the firm pillars of intelligence, may it remain as an imperishable memorial of its founders, growing year by year in happiness and prosperity, and shining brighter and still brighter in the glorious firmament of Masonic fame. (Applause.) After this oration, which was listened to with deep attention, the consecration ceremony was completed, and Bro. B. H. Swallow was installed as Master of the lodge. Bro. Cottebrune was invested as I.P.M., and the following brethren were appointed:—Bros. the Rev. P.M. Holden, S.W.; E. White, J.W.; C. A. Cottebrune, Treas. (unanimously elected); Scott, Sec.; Phillips, S.D.; Turner, J.D.; Parsons, I.G.; Potter, Tyler; Shand, D.C.; and Hutchinson, W.S. The addresses having been delivered Bro. Scott read a long list of brethren desiring to join the lodge, and of gentlemen wishing to be initiated. Col. Burdett was elected an honorary member, on the motion of the W.M., seconded by the S.W. The same compliment was also bestowed on Bros. Little and Cottebrune, and a vote of thanks to Bro. Little for consecrating the lodge and installing the W.M. was also adopted. This concluded the formalities of the day in open lodge, and the W.M. with the usual assistance closed down, and afterwards presided at a choice banquet. The Masonic toasts followed, and Colonel Burdett replied for "The Grand Officers," and expressed the pleasure he had experienced in being present at the consecration of a lodge which held out such promise of becoming distinguished. He then referred to the great progress made by the Order of late years. Going back only as far as five years, when he was at the consecration of a lodge numbered 1293, in the time that had elapsed since that event another 250 lodges had been added to the roll. That showed how Masonry was spreading throughout the world, and was creditable in every way to the Order. Masonry stood in a higher position now than it ever did, and from the high aims it had in view it was fully entitled to that position. The W.M., in the course of proposing "The Consecrating Officer, Bro. Little," made reference to the presence of Bro. Morrison, from America, and said he did not look on Americans as foreigners. He drew the brethren's attention to the occurrence of an event to an English brother when in America, who was stricken down by illness. Bro. Morrison took him to his home, and gave him not merely the right hand of fellowship, but the consolation and encouragement which a man in the circumstances of the sick man most required. Bro. Hill, who was the sick brother, was for months in Bro. Morrison's house, and when the latter brother came to this country his services were recognised in the Highgate Lodge and the Domatic Chapter by making him an honorary member. The more these great facts were known in connection with Freemasonry, the more we should see Freemasonry increase. (Cheers.) In reply to Bro. Little, who proposed "The W.M.," Bro. Swallow said that although it was nine months since the lodge was first started its promoters were quite satisfied with its success. He felt sure it would prosper. He was supported by good officers, he knew he would have many initiates, and he should suit their convenience by calling as many emergencies as possible. He hoped the lodge would be able to send the first W.M. as a Steward with a good sum for the charities. (Hear, hear.) Bro. Morrison (Michigan) replied as a "visitor." It afforded him a great deal of pleasure, he said, to respond and to acknowledge the kind courtesy extended to himself and the other visitors. That time the evening before he was ignorant of the fact that he should enjoy the pleasure of seeing a Masonic lodge consecrated by his respected Bro. Little, much less that he should see a lodge start with such prosperity before it. He had seen lodges consecrated before, and the ceremony performed with some ability, sometimes in places where there were less than half a dozen huts in the wide woods. When he came to think of Masonry in new tribes and countries, and under the jurisdiction of the Grand Lodge of England, and then came to the mother country, the home and cradle of Freemasonry, and witnessed such a consecration as he had that night, he could not but feel proud that he had been enabled to see, to his mind, one of the greatest contrasts there could be in the fraternity. But he was happy to say that Freemasonry in his own country was very successful. A town had a lodge where there were less than 200 inhabitants at the time, and now that the same town's population had increased to 30,000 it had five Masonic lodges, and two of them owned a hall creditable to any lodge outside the City of London. He then passed a high eulogium on the Masonic Institutions of London, and said that the Masons in London were favoured beyond most other Freemasons of the world in having such institutions. He certainly had had no comprehension of the extent and working of those charities, and he was proud to see that they were all extending their benefits. Before he visited England he thought the Masons of America were more benefited in their necessity than others; but he would frankly admit that he was deceived in that respect. There was no place he knew of where charity was so well bestowed as in the City of London. He would go back to America and tell his brethren with pride of what he had seen. (Hear, hear.) Bro. Boyd, P.G.P., P.M. 145, also replied. Bro. Cottebrune replied for "D.C.," and wished prosperity to the lodge. The officers responded to the toast drunk in their honour, and the brethren shortly afterwards retired. The musical brethren enlivened the proceedings with some capital singing.

FREEMAN'S CHLORODYNE.—The original and only genuine. Acts like a charm in Asthma, Bronchitis, Coughs, Neuralgia, Fevers, Cholera, Dysentery, Spasms, and all Nerve Pains. Lord Chancellor Selborne, Lord Justice James, Lord Justice Mellish, and Vice-Chancellor Sir W. Page Wood decided in favour of Freeman's Original Chlorodyne, and against Browne and Davenport, compelling them to pay all costs of the suits. See "Times" of July 24, 1873. Bottles, 1s. 1½d., 2s. 6d., 4s. 6d., 11s., and 20s. Sold by all Chemists.

MANAGER, or any Position of Trust.—A P.M. and P.G.W. is open to an Engagement where the experience of 20 years in active business pursuits can be made available. Thoroughly well up in every matter connected with business, financially and otherwise. Would have no objection to invest £500 or £1000 in any genuine concern.—H. K., Office of this Paper, 108, Fleet-street.

MESSRS. WOODMAN AND SONS, AUCTIONEERS, 5, STAMFORD-STREET, BLACK-FRIARS, beg to state that they have a large number of very genuine PUBLIC and BEER-HOUSES for DISPOSAL, requiring from £50 to £5000 cash, and will be pleased to send their "Monthly Pocket Register" free to any intending purchasers, and persons having businesses for disposal will do well to send particulars for insertion (free) in the next Edition as early as possible. Average distribution 3000 monthly.

THE WIDOW of a late Master Mason (a Lady by birth), in great distress, will be deeply grateful for a little assistance, pecuniary or otherwise. She wishes for a situation as Companion (to an invalid not objected to) or anything not menial, in which she could earn enough to support her children. Is cheerful, musical, and writes a clear hand. Age 32. References permitted to the Right Hon. the Lord Henniker, Grand Master of Suffolk, and others. For full particulars write to Mrs. G. L. B., 2, Athol Terrace, Dover.

REPORTS OF MASONIC MEETINGS.

Craft Masonry.

LODGE OF FAITH (No. 141).—An exceedingly strong meeting of this lodge was held at Anderton's Hotel, Fleet-street, on October 16th last. The lodge was opened by the W.M., Bro. Kennett, assisted by Bros. Waygood, S.W., and W.M. elect; Davis, J.W.; Mallett, S.D.; Fox, J.D.; Darcy, I.G.; Cater, P.M., Treas.; Stuart, P.M., Sec.; Themans, I.P.M.; Bye, W.S.; Davis, D.C.; Hopwood, P.M.; and Taylor, P.M. The minutes of the previous meeting having been read and confirmed, the report of the Auditors, Bros. Walls, Wilson, Hewlet, Bye, and Holland, was received and adopted. The W.M. then initiated Mr. F. A. Ormston into the mysteries of the Craft, and passed Bro. Martin. Bro. Kennett having vacated the chair, Bro. Themans, at his request, passed Bro. Politzer to the Sublime Degree. The whole of the ceremonies were most ably carried out. This being the night of installation, after the usual preliminaries a Board of Installed Masters was formed, and the S.W., Bro. Waygood, was duly and according to ancient form inducted into the chair of K.S. Upon the return of the brethren the ceremonial was proceeded with and brought to a satisfactory conclusion. The whole of the beautiful ceremony, including the investiture of the officers, was carried out by the retiring Master, Bro. Kennett. The officers appointed were as follows: Bros. Davis, S.W.; Mallett, J.W.; Fox, S.D.; Darcy, J.D.; Bye, I.G.; Davis, W.S.; Rumbold, D.C.; Carter, Treasurer; Stuart, Secretary; Longstaffe, Tyler. The lodge having closed, the brethren adjourned to the banquet, which was well served. Among the visitors were Bros. J. Hill, J.W. 228; Snare, S.D. 228; Cook, 382; Bull, 907; Simpson, 1178; and Dr. Heringer (Philadelphia). The Royal and Craft toasts were given briefly by the W.M. and well received. The "Health of the W.M." followed in due course and was heartily drunk. Bro. Waygood, in reply, stated that he hoped the brethren would excuse him from making a long speech that evening, as he was new to the position, but that at the next meeting he would endeavour to fully express how gratified he felt at having been elected to preside over so important a lodge as the "Faith." "The Health of the Initiate" (Bro. Ormston) was then given, and that brother made a most excellent reply. "The Visitors" toast having been duly honoured, Bros. Hill and Snare acknowledged the compliment on behalf of themselves and their visiting brethren. In proposing "The Health of the P.M.'s," the W.M. paid a high compliment to the I.P.M., whose attention and ability in the discharge of a very heavy year of office had been most praiseworthy; and with regard to the other Past Masters of No. 141, their abilities were too well known to the brethren to need any eulogy from him. Bros. Kennett and Stuart replied in well-set terms to the compliment passed them. Bro. Walls having recited the "Charge of the Light Brigade," "The Health of the Junior Officers of the Lodge" was then duly proposed and drunk, and Bro. Davis, the S.W., made a neat reply. The proceedings of the evening were enlivened by the instrumental and vocal contributions of Bros. Bird, Themans, and Walls. Bro. Longstaffe having given the concluding toast, the proceedings terminated.

LION AND LAMB LODGE (No. 192).—The regular meeting of this old lodge was held on the 4th inst., when there was a good gathering of brethren and visitors. The three Craft Degrees were on the summons, providing therefore the prospect of a full evening's work, but owing to the absence of the candidate for the passing the "work" was limited to the First and Third. The business in lodge, however, included some interesting proceedings, which it will not be out of place to mention. Bro. G. Newman, the W.M., presided, and was supported by the whole of his officers, with the exception of one who was absent through illness. There were present Bros. G. Abbott, I.P.M.; George Kenning, P.M.; T. Cohn, S.W.; C. Arkell, J.W.; J. G. Marsh, P.M. and Sec.; H. Legge, J.D.; F. Fellowes, I.G. The visitors included Bros. Captain G. J. Kain, P.M. of the Shakespear, and William Preston, and I.G.S. of the Provincial Grand Lodge of Warwickshire; J. F. Raalte, of the Cosmopolitan, No. 917; A. Morgan, of the South Middlesex, No. 858; W. Arnold of the Burgoyne, No.

902; T. J. Sterne, of the St. Marylebone, No. 1305; While, W.M. United Strength, No. 128, ("Freemason"); F. Walters, P.G.P. of Middlesex; G. T. Thorne, of the Lily, No. 820; G. Milton, of Peace and Harmony, No. 60; H. Dunn, of the Old King's Arms, No. 28; W. T. Smart, of the William Preston, No. 766; J. Bradley, of the New Zealand Pacific, No. 517; and Bro. J. Moore, of the Great City, 1426. Bros. E. C. Scholes and T. T. Hampton were raised to the dignity of M.M. by the W.M., who was ably assisted by his most efficient officers, the work being according to the teaching of Bro. Muggeridge. The ballot was then taken for four candidates for initiation, and the box showing in their favour, they are to present themselves for the ceremony at the next meeting. The ballot was also taken for the election of Bro. S. H. Roberts as a joining member with the like result. The W.M. then proposed, and Bro. Kenning seconded, that Bro. J. Hordern Jukes, P.M. of 120 and 892, P.P.J.G.W. of Herefordshire, should be an honorary member of the lodge. Bro. Jukes had placed the lodge under an obligation, for having come into possession of a very curious apron, and an old certificate of one Jonathan Smith, who was initiated in 1801, Bro. Jukes made diligent search after the lodge in which Jonathan Smith was initiated, and having identified the Lion and Lamb as that lodge, forthwith presented the apron and certificate to the lodge which now represents that to which Jonathan Smith owed his first knowledge of the Craft. It was for this kind service that it was now proposed to confer the honorary membership upon Bro. Jukes, and the proposal was carried with cordial unanimity. The I.P.M., Bro. Abbott, then announced that the W.M. had kindly acceded to a wish he had expressed to initiate Mr. W. Portch, the candidate of that evening, who was an old friend, and had been a companion from boyhood. Bro. Abbott, being invested as Master, then initiated Mr. Portch, and the work was perfectly rendered according to the language employed in what is termed the Muggeridge "work." It was brought to the notice of the lodge that when in April last, at the "emergency" meeting, it was resolved to present the W.M. with a Steward's jewel for attending the Grand Master's installation, the lodge had not the power to do it, and that the vote was informal. Bro. Abbott now proposed, and the S.W. seconded, that notice of motion should be given for a proposal to carry out the action of the emergency. The lodge, after the greetings of the visitors, was closed in perfect harmony, and the brethren then adjourned to the Pillar Hall, where an excellent banquet was served. The W.M. gave the toasts of "Loyalty to the Head of the State," and to "The Rulers in the Craft" in a few effective sentences, and his remarks were warmly received, and the toasts cordially accepted. Bro. Abbott then took the gavel, and proposed the toast of "The W.M.," for his own part thanking the Master for the cordiality with which he had assented to having part of his work of the day taken out of his hand by permitting Bro. Portch to be initiated by his old friend. He also bore testimony to the earnestness of the services which the W.M. gave the lodge, and said that the brethren were always glad to testify their appreciation of their Master in every possible way. The W.M., in reply, expressed himself as deeply gratified by the manner in which the toast had been proposed and received, and said he had besides to thank the lodge for the many honours the members had conferred upon him, not the least of which were electing him as Steward for the installation of the Grand Master, and then presenting him with the jewel. These jewels were, he said, limited in number, and he was sorry to say that the wearers had become lessened in number through death, no less than thirteen having died since the installation. The lodge had two members wearing them, Bro. P.M. Marsh, who, as a member of the Colonial Board, was a Steward, having one as well as himself. For himself, he should wear the jewel thus presented to him as one of the highest honour, and he could assure the members that he should always have the best interests of the lodge at heart. Some harmony was given by singing brethren, and the W.M. then proposed "The Health of the Initiate, Bro. Portch," who, in a short speech, thanked the brethren for having elected him a member of the brotherhood, and expressed his appreciation of the ceremony. The W.M. then proposed "The Visitors," and said the Lion and Lamb Lodge was always glad to see visitors, and often did see them, and having read the list of those present he coupled the toast with the names of Bros. Kain and F. Walters. The former bore testimony to the excellence of the work—even to the Fourth, and the latter, after recalling his memories of the lodge in bygone times, thanked his Brother Kenning for the opportunity of visiting the lodge that evening afforded to him. He also congratulated the lodge upon having as the Secretary a Provincial Grand Officer, whose earnest love of the Craft was shown by his busy work in many lodges. The W.M. then proposed the toast of the "Masonic Press," saying that to it the Order had much to be thankful for, and expressing his opinion that if the whole of the Craft became subscribers to the "Freemason" the members would be led to take a warmer interest in the work of the Order. He pointed out that in the columns of this journal were regularly recorded not only the proceedings of lodges over the kingdom, but reports were given, by authority, of the meeting of Grand Lodge and Grand Chapter, besides supplying the readers with the working of the Craft in all parts of the world. He coupled the toast with the name of Bro. While, as representing the "Freemason." The toast having been duly honoured, Bro. While, in responding, thanked the W.M. and the brethren for the compliment, and said that what the general press was to the public the Masonic press was to the Order. The time was when some small portion of the public of this country and Parliament were opposed to a free press, and the battle of that free press was fought for us by men who had left honoured names in our history. The battle for a free press in England had given us what we now claimed as a birthright, all who "speak the tongue which Shakespeare spake," looking to these prints for the daily history of our globe. The "Freemason" gave the Craft what the general paper gave the public. Grand Lodge was closed to the large body of the Craft, just as Parliament was closed to all but the representatives of the electors; yet the constituent body of the Craft could know all that was done by Grand Lodge, and all that was proposed to be done, and by reading the columns of the Craft organ the members of the Order would, besides acquiring knowledge of the work of the Craft over the world, become qualified to exercise the privilege of giving instructions to those who represented them in Grand Lodge. Whatever might be the prejudices in the minds of some against printing in regard to the affairs of the Craft, there should be none against a free and acknowledged organ, for no dangers could exist in regard to that, such as existed when the organs of opinion were without responsibility and character. After again thanking the W.M. and brethren for coupling his name with the toast, the speaker concluded by stating that the energy which had characterised the "Freemason" from the first would not be lacking to make it the worthy representative of the Craft. The W.M. then proposed "The Health of the Past Masters," and took occasion to call the attention of the brethren to the lamented deaths of two from their ranks, Bros. Trott and Goodyear. Of the former, he said, that having been disappointed in regard to a position which he looked to achieve he fell into a decline, which caused his death, and he had left several young children. The lodge had undertaken to endeavour to place a boy in the school, and as the boy could, from his age, only stand at one election, the utmost energies would be required, for 2000 votes would be required. Bro. Abbott, in reply, after acknowledging the toast, also warmly urged the claims of Bro. Trott's boy upon the brethren, and said that if the boy should not be elected it would be a great disappointment to the brethren, and a great calamity to the mother. The W.M. then proposed the toast of "The Officers," and spoke in warm terms of the support they gave him. The toast was responded to by the S.W., and by Bro. Marsh, the Secretary, who said that every brother was ready to render suit and service in the work of the Craft. The Tyler's toast brought the harmonious proceedings to a close.

LODGE OF UNITED STRENGTH (No. 228).—The usual meeting of this lodge was held on Tuesday, at the Gate of St. John of Jerusalem, St. John's Lane, Smithfield, Bro. While, W.M., presiding. The officers were Bros. Griggs, S.W.; J. Hill, J.W.; Snare, S.D.; Halford, J.D.; Pearey, I.G.; and Todd, Flaws, and Patmore. There was a good attendance of the brethren, both members of the lodge and visitors, among the latter being Bro. Dr. H. Dempster, W.M. of the Earl Spencer, 1420; Thomas Fox, P.M. of the Royal Athelstan, 19; Lane, of St. John the Baptist, 475; W. H. Main, P.M. of the New Concord, 813; Terry, P.M. of the West Kent, 1297; Edward Harty, S.D. of the Eclectic, 1201; and A. Smith, P.M. of the Royal Arthur, 1360. The lodge having been duly opened in the two degrees, Bro. Prof. Bartlett underwent the examination preliminary to the third. The lodge was opened in the Third Degree, and Bro. Bartlett was in due form raised to the Master Mason degree. The lodge was then resumed to the Second Degree, and Bro. Whiting was introduced as a candidate for the raising, and the ceremony was repeated. The working was greatly enhanced by the skill and ability with which Bro. Harty presided at the organ. The ballots were then taken for the election of five gentlemen for initiation, and for Bro. T. R. Bull, of the Southwark Park Lodge, and Bro. Dr. W. J. Hunter, of the Star Lodge, 219, Scotland, as joining members. The ballots were unanimous, and the new admissions to the Craft were Mr. G. C. Baker, Mr. Edward C. Adams, Mr. W. Stedman Gedge, Mr. George Bellott, and Mr. Edward Holmes. The repetition of the ceremony gave hard work to the W.M. and officers, and the whole was performed without a call off from beginning to end. In the concluding business of the lodge the W.M. moved that certain words be omitted in one of the by-laws, these words seeming to be contrary to the principle of equality, in asking the members, when electing a W.M., to prefer an initiated member of the lodge to a joining member. The proposition came hastily before the lodge, for time did not permit of its being fully discussed, and though the majority present did not vote for or against, the show of hands was in opposition to change. The lodge, on the motion of Bro. Halford, adopted resolutions to raise the initiation fee from five to seven guineas, the joining fee from two to three guineas, and the country members' subscription from ten shillings (the unaltered rate from bygone times) to a guinea, exclusive of the subscription to the Benevolent Fund. The lodge was then closed, and the brethren sat down to a very excellent banquet provided by the host, Bro. Gay. The W.M. was supported by the Secretary, Bro. P.M. Crump Bros. Winsland, P.M. and Treas.; Coulson, and Davies. After the loyal toasts, the loving cup went round in honour of the Grand Master's natal day, and he was followed in his journey by the good wishes of the brethren. The usual toasts as to the Grand Officers were given, and then P.M. Winsland proposed the toast of "The W.M.," remarking that this year had been one of the most prosperous the lodge had had, and that the balance to the good of the lodge stood in three good figures. The W.M. responded, and thanked the brethren, who, in support of the W.M.'s proposition that the individual members should make the lodge a Vice-President of the Benevolent Institution of which their Bro. Terry is the Secretary, and as a testimonial of appreciation to him as their twice Master, subscribed at once more than half the requisite funds to carry out the purpose. The W. Master then gave "The Visitors," and in the name of the lodge thanked Bro. Harty for the assistance he had given them at the organ, in the enforced absence of the Organist, Bro. Braid. Bro. Dr. Dempster responded for "The Visitors," and congratulated the lodge on the excellent working. He said the initiates and raised brethren would carry to their last hours the remembrance of the impressive ceremonies which had been so ably rendered. He thanked the brethren for their affable and kindly reception of the visitors in the lodge, and said that no stranger could have marked out the visitors from the initiated brethren of the lodge, such was the good feeling existing among all. Bro. Lane also responded, and invited the brethren of the lodge to Bedfordshire, an invitation they promised they would all accept. The initiates were warmly toasted; and Bros. Gedge, Bellott, and Holmes especially made excellent speeches, and they all convinced the brethren that they fully appreciated the ceremony. The P.M.'s had their healths proposed by the W.M., and Bro. Winsland responded. "The Health of the Host and Hostess" was given, and acknowledgment was made of the earnest endeavours of Bro. Gay to promote the happiness of the members of the lodge, and the visitors. The Tyler's toast concluded the evening's proceedings.

GREAT NORTHERN LODGE (No. 1287).—The first regular meeting of the season was held at Freemasons' Hall on Thursday, 21st ult. The lodge was summoned to transact the following business, viz.: To raise Bro. Short, to pass Bros. Stevenson and Trebbell, and to ballot for and, if approved of, initiate Messrs. Whewell, Fisher, Wymark, and Phillips. The W.M. was supported by I.P.M. Bro. Staton, and P.M.'s Webb (Treasurer) and Reed; Bros. E. Lancaster, J.W.; P. G. Jupp, Secretary; A. Christie, J.D.; G. West, I.G.; J. W. Robinson, D.C. In the absence of the S.W. (Bro. Bescoby) and the S.D. (Bro. Ritchie) their duties were undertaken by P.M. Reed and Bro. Robinson, respectively. The W.M. opened the lodge in the First Degree, when the minutes of the last regular meeting and those of the two emergency meetings, having been read and proving correct, were agreed to. Bro. Short not attending, the W.M. proceeded to examine Bros. Stevenson and Trebbell, and having been found efficient they were entrusted, and after the necessary preparation were passed to the degree of Fellow Craft. The ballot was then taken for the above-mentioned gentlemen, which proving satisfactory, the W.M. very carefully initiated them all into the mysteries of the Ancient Order. This having brought the business to a close, the W.M. rose for the first, second, and third time, which resulted in the resignation of the late S.W. being accepted; also that of P. M. Moody. It was decided the name of the late S.D. should be continued as a country member. The sum of £5 5s. was voted out of the lodge funds to pay for P.M. Webb's Installation jewel, he having acted as Steward on that occasion. The W.M. then closed the lodge in due form, and with the brethren adjourned to the banquet, which was served under the personal superintendence of Bro. Francatelli, and proved all that could be desired, both brethren and visitors expressing their hearty approval. Amongst the latter we may mention Past Masters Rogers, 193; Warne, 193; H. Webb, 72, 193, 390; Foster, 435; Mackney, 134; Izod, 169; and Bros. Paterson, Davison Foss, Peyler, Arkell, Middleton, Barnard, and others. Grace having been said the W.M. rose, and gave the accustomed loyal toasts, which were responded to with Great Northern fire. The toast of "The Initiates" was next given, P.M. Reed singing the E.A. song. The initiates (seven in number including those admitted last week) rose to reply, and gave their various ideas of the ceremony they had just gone through, and their reasons for joining the Craft, which would be superfluous to relate, although very amusing. "The Health of the Visitors" was next given. P.M.'s Rogers, Webb, and Mackney returned thanks, the latter in a manner peculiar to himself; whilst P.M. Webb, in a very telling speech, reviewed the past career of 1287, concluding by congratulating the members on their good fellowship and kindly hospitality. The I.P.M., handling the gavel, gave the toast of "The W.M.," which it is unnecessary to state was well received. Returning thanks for the same, the W.M. gave the toast of "The P.M.'s," which was replied to by those present. "The Health of the Officers" was given, the W.M. passing some kindly remarks. This having been replied to by Bro. Lancaster for himself and others, the Tyler gave his toast, and brought this very pleasant evening to a close. During the evening the pleasure of all was greatly enhanced by the songs and recitations of P.M.'s Mackney, H. Webb, S. Webb, Bros. Middleton, Jenkins, Schnerl, Barnard, Arkell, and Owen.

KENNINGTON LODGE (No. 1381).—The usual monthly meeting of this lodge was held on the 2nd inst. at the Surrey Club House, Kennington Oval. The lodge was opened at five o'clock by the W.M., Bro. Gardner, assisted by the following brethren, who, in the absence of the regularly-appointed officers, acted for them:—Bros. Wallis, S.W.; Webb, J.W.; Higgins, S.D.; Speedy, J.D.; Hayward, I.G. There were also present Bros. Koch, I.P.M.; Stuart, P.M., Secretary; Page, P.M., Treasurer; Mann, P.M.; Kohler, A.W.S. The visitors were Bros. Frampton, P.M. 87; Smith, W.M. 1360; Speedy, J.D. 742. The minutes of the previous meeting having been read and confirmed, the W.M., assisted by Bro. Stuart, P.M., raised Bro. Stranger, passed Bro. Brooke, and initiated Messrs. Saunders and Muller. A notice of motion by Bro. P.M. Mann, "that the fee for initiation be raised to £8 8s." was fully discussed and unanimously carried. The W.M.'s motion that the visiting fee, on partaking of refreshment, should be increased to 2s., and on installation nights to 1s., was also unanimously passed. The lodge having been closed in ancient form, the brethren adjourned to the banquet. Upon the removal of the cloth the W.M. gave "The Queen and Craft," which was well received. He then gave "The M.W.G.M., H.R.H. the Prince of Wales," and mentioned the great interest that attached to his Indian tour, and how gratifying it must be to those members of the Craft in India to have the "head ruler" of the English Freemasons amongst them, and that his Royal Highness's visit to that ancient abode of Freemasonry would be productive of great good to all classes of society. This toast was enthusiastically drunk. The rest of the toasts followed in quick succession. The I.P.M. having proposed "The Health of the W.M.," Bro. Gardner made a most excellent reply. The initiates, Bros. Saunders and Muller, were toasted, and each made a suitable response. Bros. Smith and Frampton replied on behalf of the visitors. The W.M. then gave "The Past Masters of the Lodge," and stated that without the attention, assistance, and advice of those worthy officers he would have found the duties and responsibilities of his position too onerous to bear. Bros. Koch, Mann, Page, and Stuart severally responded, and expressed the gratification they felt at witnessing the increasing prosperity of the lodge, and that no efforts should be wanting on their parts to still further enhance its interests. In proposing "The Health of the Junior Officers of the Lodge," the W.M. paid a very high compliment to those members, who had rendered him and the lodge great assistance by carrying out the duties of several officers who, through business and other causes, had been prevented from attending the "working of the lodge." This toast having been duly honoured, Bros. Walls and Webb briefly acknowledged the compliment on behalf of the subordinate officers present and absent. The Tyler having discharged his duty, the members adjourned until the first Tuesday in December.

PRINCE LEOPOLD LODGE (1445).—On Thursday, 4th November, the brethren of this lodge, fast growing into celebrity because of its superior working, met at that most worthy of hosts, Bro. Townsend's, the Lord Stanley, Sandringham Road, Hackney. Attached to this lodge is the Prince Leopold Lodge of Instruction, under that able preceptor, Bro. T. Austin. On this gathering there were two gentlemen for initiation, Messrs. Gilbert and Press. The initiatory working was performed in a splendid manner by the W.M., who was ably assisted by his officers, much to the satisfaction of all brethren, which was marked by their Masonic approbation. The following brethren belonging to the lodge were present:—Bros. Myers, W.M., P.M.; Wilkins S.W.; J. Pindar, J.W.; J. E. Simms, S.D.; J. Clark, J.D.; T. E. Goddard, I.G.; W. T. Howe, P.M., Treas.; G. E. Walton, Sec.; G. C. Young, Org.; Joshua Nunn, P.G.S.B.; F. Green, I.P.M.; Partridge, Hill, J. Clark, J. Badkin, Long, Ide, Vollum, Smith, F. Trebeck, Walker, Cambridge, Creed, and others. Visitors: T. Burdett Yeoman, 1460, 18; J. Byfield, 860; T. Trebeck, 30; G. C. Young, 820. The ceremony of initiation being finished, the lodge was closed in ancient form. After labour came a substantial English supper, which was served by Bro. Townsend. On the removal of the cloth, the usual principal toasts were given and drunk, with much heartiness, the speeches in response to the toasts causing rare hilarity from their brevity. During the evening some good singing was heard at the proper intervals. The Tyler's toast brought a pleasant meeting to a close.

SURREY MASONIC HALL LODGE (No. 1539).—The regular meeting of this lodge was held on Thursday, the 4th inst., at the Surrey Masonic Hall, Camberwell, when a very numerous number of brethren met together. The lodge was opened by the W.M., Bro. Larham, who at once proceeded to business, and initiated Mr. Albert Martin into the Order, passed Bro. J. A. Waterman, and raised Bro. J. A. Allen, all of which he executed in his usual masterly manner. After labour the brethren adjourned to the dining hall, where a very excellent supper was provided. Besides those already mentioned we noticed amongst those present Bros. Ramsey, S.W.; Oliver, Sec.; Clark, I.P.M.; S. G. Harvey, E. Pinder, Percival, E. Nairne, Soper, W. Chartres, A. Waterman, E. Seale, &c., and the following visiting brethren:—Bros. H. A. Dubois, P.P.G.D. C., Middlesex, P.M. 1423, W.M. 1326; W. Snowden, W.M. 1558; W. Mitchell, 1326; E. Akenhead, 176; E. Lidbury, 656; Morrell, 704; N. H. Parker, 1328; and A. W. Frankling, of the Unity Lodge, Sydney, N.S.W. After the supper the W.M. proposed and the brethren most heartily responded to the usual loyal honours to the rulers of the Craft, not forgetting H.R.H. the Prince of Wales, the G.M., and wishing him a prosperous and pleasant voyage; and Lord Selknersdale, the D.G.M., a brother who is never forgotten in this lodge, his lordship being present at the consecration, besides being a member of the lodge. This lodge fortunately possesses many musical brethren, and the toasts being varied by songs the brethren adjourned after spending a very pleasant evening. The following lodges, &c., already meet at the hall:—The Surrey Masonic Hall Lodge, the Duke of Connaught Lodge, the St. Mark's Lodge, the Peckham Lodge, the Sphinx Lodge, the St. Mark's R.A. Chapter, the Domestic Lodge of Instruction, and the United Pilgrims' Lodge of Instruction The Ivy Lodge, 1441, and several others are contemplating removal to this Hall.

CITY OF WESTMINSTER LODGE (No. 1563).—In the report of the consecration of this lodge in our last week's impression, an error occurred in ascribing to the W.M. the observations made respecting Bro. Robert H. Morrison, Attorney-General of Michigan. The remarks were made by Bro. Little, who from a long correspondence and acquaintance with American brethren had obtained the facts narrated, as well as many others in connection with the brethren of the new world, which are highly interesting, and greatly redound to their honour.

PROVINCIAL.

ALDERSHOT.—Aldershot Camp Lodge (No. 1331).—The brethren of this military lodge assembled on Thursday, the 4th inst., at the Assembly Rooms, Aldershot, for the purpose of witnessing the ceremony of the installation of Bro. F. Anderson in the W.M. chair. The gathering was very numerous, there being altogether about a hundred brethren present. The scene was a most effective one, the scarlet and blue uniforms, the usual Craft regalia, and the provincial purple, striking the eye as nothing short of gorgeous. The spacious dimensions of the room greatly assisted the beauty of the spectacle, the brethren not being crowded together, while the arrangement of banners over the platform supplied a background which harmonised well with the costumes, at the same time that it added a warmth of appearance to the chamber. These adjuncts to the Masonic furniture were well supplemented by a nicely-executed portrait of Her Majesty, when a youthful Queen, which has now hung at the head of the room for some years. It was apparent to all the brethren as they entered the lodge that the installation of Bro. Anderson would be a great success. Shortly after half-past four p.m., Bro. R. White, W.M., Sergeant-Major R.E. Train, P.G.P. Hants and I. of W., ascended the chair, and opened the lodge, when Bro. Usher Lucas, the Secretary, read the minutes, which were unanimously passed. He then read the accounts as reported by the Audit Committee, from which it appeared that the balance in the hands of the Treasurer was £63 19s. This report was thereupon adopted. The W.M. then proceeded to instal Bro. F. Anderson, Master Gunner R.A., S.W., and W.M. Elect., and performed his duties in true military style. After Bro. Anderson was installed he invested Bro. White as his I.P.M., and the following brethren were appointed officers for the year:—Bros. T. W. Mayer, late R.E., S.W.; John Smith, R.A., J.W.; Capt. Richardson, R.E., Treas.; E. Harper, A.S.C., Secretary; Usher Lucas, R.E.T., S.D.; Field, A.S.C., J.D.; Clisham, Gymnasium, I.G.; Edmonds, R.A., D.C., and Thompson, R.E.T., Tyler. The addresses followed these appointments, and Bro. White finished the ceremony with the same ability as he exhibited in commencing it. When he sat down he was loudly applauded, as well as congratulated on his achievement. The W.M. lost no time in exercising his functions, and therefore rose and said that his next duty was a very pleasing one, and was one in which he was sure all the brethren would concur. They had seen how ably the I.P.M. had done his work, and they would feel gratified at what was about to be done. He had to present their worthy Past Master with a Past Master's jewel. However, he need not dwell on the merits of Bro. White, or how well he had earned the jewel during the last twelve months. There had been 25 initiates in the year (and he wished they might have as many next year), and Bro. White therefore had had no very easy time of it. The jewel now presented to him it was to be hoped would remain an heirloom in the family for time immemorial. Bro. White said, in reply, that he thanked the brethren very sincerely for their kindness in presenting him with this mark of their approbation of the manner in which he had performed his duties while W.M. He hoped that as long as he lived he would always do his best to be a good Mason. The W.M. next rose and said he had still another pleasing duty to perform, to present Bro. Usher Lucas with a Past Secretary's jewel, in recognition of his services in that capacity for the last three years. The zeal he had displayed in his office, he (the W.M.) trusted he would also display in the new office which he had been called upon to fill. The brethren's knowledge of how he had fulfilled the duties of Secretary would relieve him (the W.M.) of the task of adding anything further. His merits were known to all. Bro. Lucas said he received the testimonial with great pride and pleasure. He would be proud to wear the jewel on every possible occasion. Bro. Richardson, I.P.M., proposed, and the W.M. seconded, a vote of thanks to the I.P.M. for performing the ceremony of installation, and the motion was carried unanimously amidst cheers. Bro. Richardson announced that at the next meeting they would be able to ballot for a Life Subscription to one of the Masonic institutions, and this announcement was also received with cheers. Lodge was then closed, and the whole party adjourned to the Royal Hotel, where a splendid banquet was provided. About half-past eight, as the banquet was drawing to a close, the Provincial Grand Master, Bro. W. Beach, was obliged to leave on account of the inconveniently early hours appointed for the trains. He therefore rose and said he wished to say a few words, and he would be failing in courtesy very much to the brethren if he did not thank them for the very hospitable way in which they had received him and the other Provincial Officers and brethren. He must, however, take that opportunity of expressing his extreme pleasure at having an opportunity of visiting the Aldershot Camp Lodge, though unfortunately he had not been able to get there in time to be present in the lodge during the ceremony of installation. He was very glad to hear that the work had been well and creditably performed by the I.P.M. of the lodge. It was a very gratifying circumstance that the lodge had within its own ranks a brother who was able to discharge the duties of Installing Master with credit to himself and satisfaction to the lodge. It was also highly pleasing to him (Bro. Beach), who had the gratification of consecrating this lodge, that he could congratulate it on the flourishing state in which it was at the present time. It had increased in numbers, but numbers would be nothing did it not bear within its ranks those principles which characterised the Craft. He was indeed glad that such was the case, because he thought they must look to this lodge to perform a great work in the future. It was of great importance that a lodge should carry out its work in its own immediate locality. But the Aldershot Camp Lodge had an important work to perform besides this. They knew the universality of Freemasonry. It extended throughout the world. Many members of this lodge might go to distant parts of the world. There they would be called upon to associate with other brethren in Freemasonry. They would no doubt meet with warm Masonic reception, but they would have to carry out there lessons learned in the Aldershot Camp Lodge. It was one thing to carry out the principle of Freemasonry and another thing to carry it out well. The principles of Masonry were nothing unless they were carried out thoroughly. They created a true and strong impression on those who observed them. Brethren who learned their lessons here, who had within their own breasts the firm resolve to act on those principles, and to do their best to make others act up to those principles, would do a good and strong work, creditable to the lodge in which they were brought up. Such, he was sure, would be the wish of the members of the Aldershot Camp Lodge. They would be, of course, called upon to do much of this; and from the proofs they had already given here he was sure they would not hesitate to adhere to those principles elsewhere. They had at present their Royal Master on a distant journey, and in India, to which he had gone, he would be called upon to visit many strange scenes. He would be called upon to receive many deputations and loyal addresses, and the offerings of many hearts; but he would receive probably a warmer reception from none than the Freemasons of India, who would offer to him the loyalty, not only which subjects owed to their future Sovereign, but which Masons owed to the head of their Order. He believed that the visit the Grand Master was paying in the East would have an important and no light effect on the future—important, not only with reference to our Order, but as drawing together those bonds of friendship between our Eastern fellow subjects and ourselves. He believed that in India there would be found no lack of loyal hearts, and when they found the Prince of Wales going out and showing himself among them, in oriental as well as English hearts there would be a feeling to give him a right royal reception. Again, he (Bro. Beach) would thank the brethren for their kind greeting, and he wished it was not imperative for him to depart. It was extremely annoying to him that the moment should arrive at which he was obliged to tear himself away. He had hoped to have the opportunity of remaining with the brethren much longer. He had to offer his apologies, and this he did while taking his leave. He, however, hoped to have an early opportunity of witnessing the ceremonies performed in the Aldershot Camp Lodge, which he had not had an opportunity of seeing that day. The Prov. G.M. then retired, the brethren rising while he did so, and cheering. Banquet was afterwards finished, and the toasts were proposed and drunk, and Bro. F. Binckes, P.G. Steward, replied to the toast of "The Provincial Grand Master, &c.," explaining that the Grand Stewards were in a curious position; they were not Grand Officers—in fact, "neither fish, flesh, fowl, nor good red herring," or like Mahomet's coffin. He then eulogised the Grand Officers, Lord Carnarvon, Lord Skelmersdale, and all below them, who did all they could to promote the dignity of the Order. Bro. Eve responded to the toast of "The Provincial Grand Master," mentioning the gratification the brethren of the province had of the Masonic government of the province. They had been much pleased with his visit to them, but were sorry that his numerous engagements rendered it impossible for him to stay longer. Speaking for the other provincial Grand Officers who were included in the toast, there were a great many of them, and he could safely say that none of them shrank from their duty. Bros. Lefevre and Hacker also replied. The toast of "The Masonic Charities" was next given by the W.M., who called upon the brethren to respond most liberally. He was informed, he said, by Bro. White that it was the intention of the lodge to send Stewards year by year to the festivals of the three institutions. He must thank them very much for their support hitherto. One candidate had been got into the Girls' School, and 327 votes had been obtained through this lodge. The brethren knew the work the institutions were doing; it was known to all; but he might add that at the last festival of the Boys' School £12,700 were collected. There was something being said now against the institution; but the matter would be before the committee on Saturday, when it would be grappled with. Bro. Binckes, in replying, said there were considerably over 200 persons on the funds of the Benevolent Institution; 177 boys in the Boys' School; and 153 girls in the Girls' School. Those figures spoke volumes for themselves. He only placed those figures before the brethren to show what an amount of work was being done through the medium of those institutions. It was but a comparatively small number of brethren that the subscriptions came from. This year it would be found that the subscriptions would not fall far short of £30,000. This was a large amount; but it was a great work, which every Mason might be proud of; and he might boast of it wherever and whenever he heard the Order criticised, as it was unquestionably by the outside world. Let them place that fact before the world and ask where were to be found three institutions supported by the same small number of people who subscribed as much. He reminded the brethren that every one could do something, and begged them to do it. He also thanked the Aldershot Camp Lodge for what it had hitherto done. He asked the brethren, when in the discharge of their duties they were called to other lands bearing the flag of England, that they would grasp in the other hand the flag of Freemasonry, whose watchwords were "Loyalty and Charity." Referring to the attacks that had been made upon himself recently, Bro. Binckes mentioned the phrase that had been used, "the plausible speeches of an extravagantly-paid official," and said that with respect to the words "plausible speeches," he had been plausible enough in fourteen years to find about £90,000 for the institution, which had enabled them to erect a building which now held 177 boys. As to the charge of being "extravagantly paid," he had always accepted the doctrine that the labourer was worthy of his hire. The Secretaries of all the institutions were bound to appeal to the Craft, and if they failed in their duty or shrank from placing the claims of their institutions before the Order properly, they fell short of their duty. Bro. H. Muggeridge thanked Bros. Eve and Hacker for supporting the Girls' School last year. The box was then sent round, and produced £4 4s. 6d. Bro. White proposed "The W.M." The W.M., in replying, said he should follow the example of his predecessor in endeavouring to make the Aldershot Camp Lodge what it was now and had hitherto been—famous for its prosperity and good working; in fact, keeping it up in accordance with the customs of Freemasonry. By what he saw that evening great honour had been paid him and the brethren of the lodge. There had been some most eminent Masons present; and this he thought ought to stimulate the members of the lodge to make it progress. The lodge was now 100 strong, and he hoped in 1876 it would be 50 more. Bro. Eve proposed "The I.P.M.," who had displayed his abilities particularly well that day. The lodge had prospered exceedingly under his Mastership, and as an old friend of his, it was very gratifying to think of it. Bro. White replied. The approbation he had met with was what he should never forget. After a few other remarks of a general character, Bro. White sat down greatly cheered. Some excellent singing was given during the evening by the brethren, and Bro. Muggeridge gave "The Charge of the Six Hundred." Among the brethren present were Bros. Major Durnford, Adjutant Irving, Army Service Corps; Asst. Com. Dolton, Captain Paymaster Richardson, R.E.; late Vet. Surgeon Mayer, Capt. Adjt. Coles, late R.E.; Quar. Master Cole, R.E.; Riding Master Gillon, R.E.; Usher Lucas, John Smith, T. H. Field, S. Cole, P.M., P.P.G.P.; A. MacKenzie, P.G.P.; W. Richardson, P.P.S.G.D.; John Clisam, W. Staley, T. Wally, W. F. Simmons, G. Faulconer, C. J. Monro, R. Hurst, W. Hepburn, W. Robinson, C. Munro, J. Harper, J. B. Tapell, E. Harper, R. Russell, J. Edmonds, J. Mount, Cudden, W. Duke, R. Duke, F. Binckes, H. Muggeridge, and H. Massey ("Freemason.")

CHIPPING SUDBURY.—Tyndall Lodge (No. 1363).—The installation meeting of this lodge was held on Wednesday, the 3rd inst., at the lodge-room, Town Hall, Chipping Sudbury, and was most numerously attended by members and visitors. The lodge was opened at three o'clock, Bro. John Dennis Brookes Trenfield, W.M. and P.G. Sword Bearer, presiding. Bro. Charles A. Bush, W.M. elect, S.W., and most of the subordinate officers were present. The minutes of the last meeting were read and confirmed. Bro. the Rev. C. R. Davy, P.G.C. of England, P.Prov.G.C. of Somersetshire, Wiltshire, and Gloucestershire, P.M. of 53, Bath, and 855, Wotton-under-Edge, then installed Bro. Charles A. Bush into the chair in a manner which elicited the highest commendations. After receiving the usual congratulations and salutes, the new W.M. appointed his officers as follows:—Bros. John Dennis Brookes Trenfield, I.P.M.; A. Sudlow, S.W.; C. M. Henn, J.W.; John Trenfield, Treas.; the Rev. J. J. Gardiner, Chaplain; James P. Curtis (for the third year), Secretary; F. Townsend, S.D.; Wm. Higgs, J.D.; Ed. Crossman, D.C.; W. H. Hartley and Wm. Taylor, Stewards; James Iles, Org.; J. Limbuck, I.G.; Ed. Holliday, Tyler. The W.M. and brethren complimented the I.P.M. very highly for the way he had discharged his duties, not only for the past year, but from the very commencement of the lodge, and from his gentlemanly manners and examples he had won the good opinion of all, not only as their Worshipful Master, but as a man. The lodge was then closed, and the brethren adjourned to the Grapes Hotel for refreshment, where a splendid banquet was served by Hostess Codrington in her usual style. The cloth having been drawn, the W.M. gave "The Queen and the Craft," which was drunk with great heartiness, and followed by the "National Anthem," Bro. Iles, Organist, taking the solo parts. The next toast, "The Most Worshipful Grand Master, His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales," was enthusiastically responded to, followed by the song of "God bless the Prince of Wales," after which Bro. J. P. Curtis sang the new verse, written by Bro. Hook, of the Great City Lodge, 1426, which was heartily applauded. The other usual toasts were afterwards given, concluding with the Tyler's. The harmony of the evening was much increased by the excellent songs of Bros. Watts, Iles, Curtis, Ilandy, and others. The whole business of the lodge and banquet table was carried out in the ablest and most kindly manner, and there was not present a single brother who did not thoroughly enjoy the whole proceedings of the day.

TWICKENHAM.—The Francis Burdett Lodge (No. 1505).—The installation meeting of this flourishing lodge was held on Wednesday, under the happiest auspices, at the Albany Hotel, Twickenham. The occasion was the re-installation of Bro. Colonel Wigginton, P.M. of 902 and 1298, P.P.G.D.C. of Worcestershire, P.G. Steward of Middlesex, who had been unanimously re-elected to the chair in this, the 2nd year of the lodge. There were present many distinguished Masons, who had attended to do honour to the much-esteemed R.W. Prov. G. Master, Colonel Burdett, and among others were Bro. C. Horsley, P.P.G. Registrar of Middlesex; Bro. Hammond, P.M. of Lodge of Lebanon; Bro. Buckland, P.M.; Bro. Williams, of the Apollo, 357; Bro. Dr. Seaton, P.M. of St. Mark's, 857; Bro. A. Clarke, P.M. of 255; Bro. Tudor Trevor, W.M. of 944. There were also present Bro. Court, of 946; Bro. White, W.M. of 228 ("The Freemason"); Bro. Artus, &c. The lodge was opened in the usual form, and the W.M. passed Bros. Briggs and Dawson to the Second Degree, and initiated two gentlemen who had been regularly balloted for and approved in open lodge. This work took the whole afternoon, and brought the lodge to the time when the ceremony of installation was to be performed by Bro. Little, Secretary of the Girls' School and S.G.W. of Middlesex. To the great disappointment of all, a telegram came from Bro. Little saying that he was suffering from a sore throat, and was therefore unable to be present. The R.W. Prov. Grand Master in the kindest manner possible undertook to instal the W.M., and he was then inducted into the chair as Installing Master, the other chairs being taken by Bros. A. Clarke and L. Artus. Bro. Horsley, P.P.G.R. of Middlesex, etc., then presented Bro. Wigginton to the Right Worshipful the Prov. Grand Master, and in making the presentation, Bro. Horsley, in an eloquent address, said that the performance of this task gave him the greatest possible pleasure, for he considered that the lodge had doubly honoured itself, first in having taken the name of him who at that moment graced the chair of the lodge as its Installing Master, and secondly in re-electing Bro. Wigginton. For this re-election the lodge paid the best tribute that could be paid to their Master of the past year for the eminently industrious, intellectual, and social qualifications he had displayed in his year of office as the first W.M. in the existence of the Francis Burdett Lodge. Such an honour as re-election was but very rarely conferred upon first Masters; but upon this occasion it had been given with an unanimity and brotherly affection which showed at once the real esteem and earnest regard in which Bro. Colonel Wigginton was held by his officers and his brethren in the lodge. The speaker went on to say that among the numerous lodges formed in Middlesex, there was none which had more than the Francis Burdett, which entirely devoted itself to the determination of promoting the good of the province, and furthering the objects of the Provincial Grand Master the enhancement and glory of the province—and he (Bro. Horsley); felt sure that in the new year of office of Bro. Colonel Wigginton these objects would be fully asserted and insured. With these remarks he begged to present Bro. Wigginton to the Provincial Grand Master, to receive at his hands the distinguished honour of installation, and added that the P.G.M. would not have a more efficient subject in his province, or one who would more devotedly carry out the purposes of the Craft, and the views of the head of Craft in the province. The R.W. the P.G. Master, replied that he had great pleasure in accepting the duty, which, unfortunately, Bro. Little was unable to carry out. Nothing, he assured the brethren, would give him greater pleasure than to see the lodge which bore his name prosperous in every sense of the word, and with such good and true men as he saw were entering the Craft by this lodge, he could not but hope that it would be one of the best in the many good lodges in the province. The formal proceedings preceding installation then ensued, and the lodge was closed against all but Installed Masters. The Board of Installed Masters was then formed, and Bro. Wigginton passed from his short lived rank of I.P.M. to that of Installed Master. He stated that it was not possible for him to appoint an I.P.M. for the year, or he should have had pleasure in appointing Bro. Horsley, but he should appoint that brother to the office meeting by meeting. Accordingly, Bro. Horsley was invested with the badge of I.P.M., and performed the work of that office on an occasion so arduous as that of installation. On the investment of officers, Bro. Horsley presented Bro. W. H. Saunders for re-appointment and investment as S.W. The W.M., addressing him, said it was with great pleasure, and if that could be reconciled, with a tinge of sorrow that he re-invested Bro. Saunders. The pleasure was with regard to his re-investment—his tinge of sorrow was from his regret that Bro. Saunders was not that day seated in the chair of the lodge. There were circumstances which had prevented this—circumstances, he was glad to say, which were not of a personal character, but they were circumstances which had relation to the work of the lodge, and, to the difficulties attending a young lodge; and it had been thought by the brethren that the hand which had hitherto piloted the ship should continue to do so. The brethren would receive with acclamation the re-appointment of Bro. Saunders, and, for his own part, the W.M. thanked Bro. Saunders for accepting the position, and promised him that he would give him all possible support if, as the W.M. hoped they would, the brethren elected him to fill the chair at the next regular period of election. Bro. Horsley then presented Bro. Tomlinson for re-investment as Junior Warden, and said that the brother by the acceptance of the office would feel himself doubly bound to the discharge of his duties in a better manner, if that indeed were possible, than in the previous year. The W.M., on re-investing Bro. Tomlinson, said the brother had no honour to gain on this occasion, but one to confer, for he conferred an honour on the Francis Burdett Lodge last year by accepting office, and had done so again this year. The W.M. hoped that the time would come when the Francis Burdett Lodge would confer an honour on Bro. Tomlinson, who had always been an earnest worker in the lodge. Bro. Sidney Knaggs was called by the W.M., who addressed him as the "first born" of the lodge, and congratulated as the re-elected Treasurer of the lodge. He was invested with the collar and badge of office, and the W.M., addressing him, said that when the lodge was poor, and in distress, Bro. Knaggs, who was the first brother initiated, consented to act as Treasurer. As Treasurer the lodge recognised his services by re-electing him, and the W.M. added that he heartily endorsed the election, and with pleasure invested Bro. Knaggs with the keys of office, hoping that he would give, as he had given, his best attention to the interests of the lodge as associated with "£ s. d., etc." Bro. Horsley then presented Bro. Court for investiture and appointment as Secretary, who, Bro. Horsley said, had always looked kindly upon the lodge, and had acted as he looked. The W.M. said he should be happy to invest Bro. Court, but he must first ask him if he had made up his mind to discharge the duty as he had discharged it during the time he had been Secretary pro tem. Bro. Court replied that he was quite willing to do so, for the W.M. had himself taken the lion's share of the duties. After the laughter which this incident gave rise to had subsided, the W.M. invested Bro. H. Court. Bro. Horsley then presented the Treasurer for the appointment of S.D., and the W.M., in investing him, said that the brother now invested had acted for a long time as J.D., and most efficiently, and the lodge would have every faith in the manner in which he would discharge his duty in future. Bro. Horsley then presented Bro. W. Taylor to the W.M. for "some mark of his favour." The W.M. said that Bro. Horsley seemed to lay stress upon the words some "mark of his favour." The W.M. had only to perform one duty in this case, and that was to look after those of the initiates of the lodge who "worked." Bro. Taylor had worked as a member of the Lodge of Emulation to be an officer; and he had had proof that Bro. Taylor was equal to the discharge of the duty which would devolve upon an officer of the lodge. The lodge looked to the initiates of the lodge to follow in regular succession to the chair, for it was felt that it would be a greater honour to a brother to take the chair of his mother lodge than to take any other chair. The Chaplains appointed were Bros. Rev. J. Simpson, P.G.C., M.A., and Rev. L. M. D'Orsey, M.A. The W.M. said he thought it was a matter of great thankfulness to him that the lodge had two Chaplains, one of whom was the Chaplain at the consecration, while the other, their Bro. D'Orsey, had been regularly initiated and passed in the lodge. Bros. F. Honeywell, and H. E. Sugg were appointed Organists; L. Artus as D.C.; J. N. Rogers as Steward; Dr. Palmer as W.S.; and G. F. Ewens as I.G. The last appointment made was that of Tyler, Bro. Howson being appointed to the office. The lodge was then closed, and the brethren adjourned to the banquetting room, where an excellent dinner was served. After the dinner, so long after dinner, in fact, that there was little time for speaking, the W.M. began a long list of toasts. In proposing the toast of "The Queen," the W.M. spoke warmly of the loyalty of the people of this country to Her Majesty, and as to the fealty owing to him by the Craft as their Sovereign, their patron, and the mother of their G.M. The next toast was that of "The Grand Master," of whom the W.M. spoke in the warmest terms, and reminded the brethren of the deep debt of gratitude they owed the Prince of Wales, for undertaking the Grand Mastership at a time when, from the circumstances attending the secession of the last G.M., the Order was under a sort of ban. The importance of the step which the Royal Highness thus took could not be over-estimated, and it had created the greatest sensation on the continent, and in other parts of the world. The toast like the preceding was accepted with all honours. The next toast was that of "Our Brothers in the Army, Navy, and Reserve Forces." The R.W. Prov. Grand Master responded for the Army, saying that the British pluck would ever be the same, and that the deeds of modern times by our army were no shame to the sons of the men who had fought in bygone times. Bro. Knaggs, the S.D. and Treas., responded for the Navy; Bro. Capt. Burchall responded for the Militia; and Bro. the J.W. for the Volunteers. The W.M. then proposed the toast of "The Pro Grand Master, the Deputy Grand Master, and the other Grand Officers, Past and Present." The toast was duly honoured, and it was followed by that of "The Provincial Grand Master," of whom the W.M. spoke as godfather of the lodge, in his having given it its name—a name, the W.M. said, which was beloved and revered. The Prov. Grand Master responded, and said he was most happy to see the position the province was taking in the Craft—for it was rising to the utmost eminence and was happy in having a most efficient number of officers. It was gratifying to see the great progress the province was making, too, for not only was it gaining a number of lodges, but those lodges were being constituted by the very best men in social life. He was happy indeed to see that the lodges in the Province were acting on the principle that it was not "quantity" but "quality" that was wanted, and the lodges would generally see that the best interests of the Order were not advanced by numbers joining the Craft as by a great discrimination being exercised in the selection of those who offered themselves as candidates. This lodge was doing this, and was in all respects doing good work, and he was glad to have had an opportunity to assist that day in its work. The W.M. followed this toast with that of "The Visitors," which was replied to by Bro. Hammond, of the Lebanon Lodge, and the name of Bro. While was associated with the toast of "The Masonic Press," he representing the "Freemason." Bro. C. Horsley, in happy terms, proposed the toast of "The W.M.," and the W.M. shortly responded, for the time of closing was now at hand. "The Initiates" were toasted, and Bro. Palmer replied, and "The Officers" having been given, the proceedings closed with the Tyler's toast. The lodge has to be congratulated on having several poets among the brethren, for two very excellent pieces, one anonymous, and one by the Colonel in command of the lodge, were sung by the brethren in the course of the long day's work.

Royal Arch.

ALDERSHOT.—Panmure Chapter (No. 723).—A convocation of this chapter was held on the 4th inst. at the Wellington Hotel, Aldershot. At the request of Comp. J. S. Hickley, M.E.Z., Comp. H. Muggeridge, P.Z., presided, with Comp. A. Mackenzie, H.; and Comp. H. Hacker, J. The other companions present were W. Sowdon, I.P.Z.; J. Smith, S.E.; C. C. Gold, S.N.; Samuel Cole, P.S.; H. Bridger, Second Asst.; G. Ambrose, Neild, Joseph Pomeroy, Sergeant Minnus, A. Richardson, W. Peterkin, H. Robson, and H. Massey ("Freemason"). Four brethren were candidates for exaltation, three of whom attended to take the degree—Bros. T. Anderson, W.M. elect of No. 1331, Aldershot Camp Lodge; James Mount, No. 1331; and W. J. Lendrim, No. 184. The work of Principal Sojourner was ably performed by Comp. S. Cole, and the onerous duties of the three chairs were all discharged by Comp. Muggeridge, who afforded a great treat to the companions assembled by giving uncurtailed the whole ceremony. At the conclusion of the conferring of the degree Comp. Muggeridge was warmly cheered, and the companions expressed their obligations to him for giving them so admirable a view of Royal Arch working. The chapter was afterwards formally closed and adjourned, and the companions proceeded to the Aldershot Camp Lodge to witness the installation of Comp. Anderson in the Worshipful Master's chair.

CLAPTON CHAPTER (No. 1365).—The ceremony of consecrating this new Royal Arch chapter was performed on the 4th inst., at the White Hart, Clapton, by Comp. R. Wentworth Little, who was assisted by Comp. Rumsey, No. 430, as H., and Comp. Wright, No. 22, as J. Comp. James Brett, P.Z., kindly lent the consecrating vessels for the occasion. Comp. Jones, 360, acted as P.S. Comp. W. Stephens, P.M. of the Clapton Lodge, and J. of the Whittington Chapter, 862, was, after the chapter had been consecrated, installed first as H., and afterwards as Z. Comp. Miles, also a P.M. of the Clapton Lodge, and companion of the Sincerity Chapter, 174, was installed first as J., and then as H., by Comp. Rumsey, Comp. W. Lutwyche, another P.M. of the Clapton Lodge, and also a companion of Chapter 174, was installed J. by Comp. W. Stephens, Z. Comp. Hastings Miller, Grand Organist Middlesex, was elected S.E. pro tem.; Comp. Joseph Hobbs, Scribe N.; and Comp. J. Simms, P.S. The rules for the government of the chapter were read in draft and unanimously adopted; and the chapter was then closed in ancient form. The companions afterwards partook of supper, and then honoured the usual toasts, the M.E.Z. observing, in proposing "The Health of the Prince of Wales," that all Masons wished His Royal Highness good health in his travels, and a speedy return home to occupy the distinguished position so long and worthily filled by his illustrious relatives, the late Dukes of Kent and Sussex. The thanks of the companions were conveyed to the consecrating officers, and to the visitors, and a most agreeable evening was brought to a close with the Janitor's toast. A long list of intending exaltees was read by Scribe E. during the course of the proceedings, and a favourable career was predicted for the new chapter.

Red Cross of Constantine.

CONSECRATION OF THE UNIVERSITY CONCLAVE, No. 128. In last week's "Freemason" we gave a brief account of the successful inauguration of this new conclave, but a more complete report of the proceedings will doubtless prove interesting to many of our readers. Upon reference to "A Sketch of the History and Records of the Order of Constantine," page 32, it will be found that a meeting of the Grand Council of the Order was held at Cambridge so far back as June, 1810, when the Rev. Wm. Gretton, D.D., and Rev. Robert Hole were installed Knights of the Grand Cross, and Bro. Joseph White was admitted to the First Grade. Bros. Okes, Burleigh, and Beales, from Cambridge, also appear to have joined the Order in London, on the 15th December, 1810. After the lapse of more than 65 years the Red Cross flag has again been hoisted in the famous seat of learning, and this time, we feel assured, it is destined to be upheld by zealous Knights and true for many years to come. The founders of the University Conclave, No. 128, Sir Knts. Edward Amphlett, of St. Peter's College; Cuthbert Edgar Peek, Pembroke College, and Frederick Woodin, Downing College, having issued invitations to all the members of the Imperial Council and to several Senators, the following Knights responded to the call, and assisted at the opening and other ceremonies, viz.:—Colonel Francis Burdett, G. Viceroy; W. E. Gumbleton, G.J. General; Rev. W. B. Church, G.H. Prelate; Rev. J. M. Vaughan, G.H. Prelate; H. C. Levander, G.H. Chancellor; R. Wentworth Little, G. Treas.; J. Boyd, G. Architect; J. Lewis Thomas, P.G. Architect; T. Cubitt, G. Marshall, G. Toller, G. Orator; Rev. Ernest Brette, D.D., G. Sub Prelate; Lieut. Col. J. Peters, G. Sub Almoner; also the Rev. A. Bruce Fraser, 330; Rev. Philip M. Holden, and Captain Arthur B. Cook. The conclave was opened by Sir Knt. Little, and the chair of Constantine was then filled by Sir Knt. E. Amphlett, P. Sov., and M.P.S. Designate, who then in a masterly manner installed the following candidates as Knights of the Order, viz.:—Bros. Rev. J. L. Paterson, R. Kallely Miller; J. H. Dickson, of St. Peter's College; J. A. Fowler, A. E. Caldicott, of Trinity; R. Mittra, St. Catherine's; R. Roy; C. H. Buckmaster, Downing; and W. D. Jones, Trinity. The new knights were installed, as the first business of the day, in order that they might witness the splendid ceremony of inaugurating and dedicating the conclave, which immediately followed their installation.

The prescribed procession having been formed, comprising in its ranks no less than six clergymen, Sir Knt. Little, assisted by Sir Knt. Rev. P.M. Holden, performed the dedication service, the oration and prayers being magnificently rendered by his clerical colleague, whose elocutionary powers are so well-known to the metropolitan brethren. The M.P.S., Sir Knt. Amphlett, was then inducted into the chair of Constantine, Sir Knt. Peek into that of Eusebius, and the rest of the officers were also invested. Sir Knts. A. J. Brogden, Downing; E. A. Maund, St. Peter's; W. E. Gordon Leith, Trinity Hall; Rev. A. B. Frazer, and Capt. A. B. Cook were elected joining members; Sir Knt. Brogden being elected Treasurer, and Gordon Leith appointed Recorder. Sir Knt. Brogden then presented to the conclave a richly chased silver cup, of enormous size and great value, to be used as a "loving cup" by the members. This gift having been suitably acknowledged, the rank of honorary members was conferred upon all the distinguished visitors who had attended the inauguration. A committee to draw up bye-laws was appointed, and the conclave was closed. A commandery of St. John was then opened, and several Red Cross Knights were created K.H.S., and Knights of St. John the Evangelist. The knights then adjourned from 294, Green-street, where the work was performed, to Downing College, where a sumptuous dinner awaited them, the entire expense of which was defrayed by Sir Knt. Brogden, Int. Gen., East Lancashire.

Nothing could exceed the preparations he had made for the comfort of his guests, except the superb style in which the whole entertainment was carried out. At one table the M.P.S., Sir Knt. Amphlett, presided, and Sir Knt. Brogden at the other. The toasts were given by each alternately, and the enthusiasm with which the names of Col. Burdett, R. Wentworth Little, the host himself, Sir Knt. Amphlett, and other prominent knights were received, simply baffles description. It was an occasion never to be forgotten by those who had the good fortune to be present, and the newly installed knights seemed to enjoy the meeting with a verve and zest which augur well for the future of the conclave in Cambridge. Sir Knt. Holden gave "The Charge of the Light Brigade" with his usual ability, and several other knights also contributed to the harmony of the evening. The party broke up about midnight, and the London visitors returned to the Bull Hotel, and left for the metropolis by an early train next morning. We must not omit to add that the knights unanimously recommended Sir Knt. Amphlett (nephew of Baron Amphlett) for the post of Intendant General for Cambridge, and that Sir Knt. Brogden undertook to represent the University Conclave as a Steward at the next festival of the Royal Masonic Institution for Girls, on the 10th May, and he expects to have a list of subscriptions worthy of the Order, and "Varsity" men in particular. It is reported that the townsmen of Cambridge will shortly send in a petition for a conclave, one brother's name having already been sent up to London for installation in a metropolitan conclave.

Scotland.

GRAND LODGE OF SCOTLAND.

The Quarterly Communication of the Grand Lodge of Scotland was held on Monday evening, the 8th inst., in the Freemasons' Hall, 98, George-street, Edinburgh. The throne was occupied by Bro. Colonel W. Montgomery Neilson, Provincial Grand Master of Glasgow, and supported by Bro. Major Hamilton Ramsay, of Garion, S.G. W.; W. Hay, acting J.G.W.; Rev. Dr. Gray, G. Chap.; A. Hay, G. Jeweller; D. Robertson, G. Bible Bearer; J. Coghill, Grand Director of Ceremonies; A. N. Clarke, acting Grand Secretary; Captain Colt, Grand Sword Bearer; A. T. Aphorpe, Grand Marshal; F. S. Melville, President of Grand Stewards; Wm. Officer, Lindsay Mackersy, and W. M. Bryce, Grand Tyler. There was a large number of brethren from the West of Scotland present, among whom were Bros. Wm. Bell, R.W.M. St. John's 33; Wm. Barr, R.W.M. Dumbaron, Kilwinning, 11; G. McDonald, R.W.M. Thistle and Rose, 73; J. W. Buras, R.W.M. Thistle, 87; A. Bain, P.M. Union and Crown 103; A. Brunton, P.M. St. Mary's Partick, 117; David Peacock, S.W. 117; Andrew Agnew, J.W. 117; G. C. H. McNaught, P.M., Shamrock and Thistle, No. 275; J. M. Oliver, S.W. 360; Wm. Ferguson, R.W.M. 543. The Grand Lodge was opened in due form in the Master Mason Degree, when the acting Grand Secretary read the minutes of last Quarterly Communication and minutes of Grand Committee meeting, which were adopted, and after the usual preliminary business, the nomination of Grand Office Bearers and Grand Stewards for the ensuing year was then proceeded with, viz., Sir M. R. Shaw Stewart, Bart., Most Worshipful Grand Master Mason. The Right Hon. the Earl of Rosslyn, R.W.P.G.M.; the Right Hon. Lord Balfour of Burleigh, R.W.S.G.M.; Major Hamilton Ramsay, of Garion, R.W.S.G.W.; the Right Hon. Lord Rosehill, R.W.J.G.W.; Samuel Hay, G. Treas.; John Lauri, G. Sec.; the Rev. W. H. Gray, D.D., and the Rev. A. Thomson Grant, V.W. joint G. Chaplains; William Hay, R.W.S.G.D.; David Kinnear, R.W.J.G.D.; D. Bryce, W.G. Architect; A. Hay, W.G. Jeweller; D. Robertson, W.G. Bible Bearer; J. Coghill, W.G. Director of Ceremonies; J. Ballantine, W.G. Bard; Captain G. F. R. Colt, of Gartsherrie, W.G. Sword Bearer; C. W. M. Muller, W. Grand Director of Music; R. Davidson, W. Grand Organist; M. McKenzie, W. Chief Grand Marshal; A. T. Aphorpe, W. Grand Marshal; W. M. Bryce, W. Grand Tyler; F. Baikie, W. Outer Guard; F. S. Melville, President of the Board of Grand Stewards; John Haig, Vice-President.

A petition for charter to Lodge St. Ninian, Nairn, was remitted to Grand Committee with powers. The appeal of Bro. James Wallace against sentence of suspension from Masonic privileges in the City of Glasgow, by the Provincial Grand Lodge of that district, and report of Grand Committee (per sub-committee) thereon was amicably arranged, by Bro. Wallace stating that he never intentionally meant anything out of place towards the said P.G. Lodge, and withdrawing any statements he may have made, which was received with much applause. The appointment of Sir Michael R. Shaw Stewart, Bart., a representative of the Grand Lodge of England, in room of the late Earl of Dalhousie, was confirmed. The resignation of the Hon. A. Jocelyn, as representative at the Grand Lodge of Ireland, was accepted, and the recommendation of Grand Committee that Major-General H. Darby Griffith, C.B., be successor, was also confirmed.

Arrangements for the Festival of St. Andrew, on the 30th Nov., were made. No further business of importance was transacted, and Grand Lodge was closed in due and ancient form.

GLASGOW.—Caledonian of Unity Chapter (No. 73).—The usual monthly meeting of this chapter was held in their chapter rooms, 170, Buchanan-street, on the evening of the 26th day of Oct., 1875. Present: Comps.

G. W. Wheeler, Z., in the chair, ably assisted by Comps. George McDonald, P.Z., acting as H.; John Kinnaird, J.; James Balfour, Scribe E.; John Bannerman, Treas.; Edward Arthur, Scribe N.; and others, a deputation from the Provincial Grand Royal Arch Chapter of Lanarkshire being present, consisting of the following office-bearers, viz., Comps. William Smith, P.G.P.J.; Archd. McTaggart, P.G. Scribe E.; John Fraser, P.G. Scribe N.; and George Thallon, P.G.C. After having carefully examined the various books, and read a minute to the effect that they had found everything correct, Comp. McTaggart explained the cause of absence through indisposition of our much respected Most Excellent Superintendent, Comp. F. A. Barrow. Comp. Smith made a few congratulatory remarks on the good workable condition of the Chapter No. 73, and trusted it would long continue to uphold the true principles of Royal Arch Masonry. Comp. Wheeler returned thanks to the deputation for their visit, and regretted very much the cause of absence of our Provincial Grand Superintendent. The deputation retired, and the chapter was afterwards closed and opened, to the Mark Degree, when Scribe E. read the minutes of the 28th Sept. and 6th Oct. which were adopted. An application was read from Bro. John Broadfoot, Master Mason of St. John's Lodge, 34, the application being favourably received, and the candidate being in attendance, he was admitted and received that degree. The Mark Lodge was then closed, and opened to the degrees of Excellent Master and Holy Royal Arch respectively, when the aforesaid candidate, along with Bro. David Anderson, mentioned in minute of the 28th Sept. last, received those degrees at the hands of Comp. Wheeler, ably assisted by Comp. Balfour, as First Sojourner, who, without flattery, is one of the best Sojourners in the province. This being all the business, the chapter was duly closed.

GLASGOW.—Govan Chapter (No. 117).—The regular meeting of this chapter was held on the 28th ult., in the Masonic Hall, Portland Buildings, Govan. Comp. John McFarlane, the retiring Z. of the chapter, presided, supported by his office-bearers, and opened a R.A. chapter. The minutes of the last meeting were read and confirmed. From these it was shown that the installation of the office-bearers for 1876, who had been elected, was the programme of the night's business. The companions elected for office were as follows, viz.:—Robert Muir, Z.; John Sutherland H.; John Hutcheson, J.; Robert Allan, S.E.; John Miller, S.N.; Robert Danlop, Treas.; William Ferguson, First Soj.; John Brown, Second Soj.; William Barr, Third Soj.; and John McIntyre, Janitor. A letter was read from Comp. F. A. Barrow, P.G. Superintendent for Lanarkshire, stating that he could not be present to instal the office-bearers on account of other pressing Masonic business, but suggesting that the installation should be proceeded with. The M.E.Z. then intimated that Comp. James Crabbe, P.Z. of Chapter 50, had kindly consented to perform that duty, which intimation was heartily received by the companions present. Comp. Crabbe then stepped forward to the altar, and proceeded to instal the newly-elected office-bearers who were present, viz.:—R. Muir, Z.; J. Sutherland, H.; R. Allan, S.E.; J. Miller, S.N.; W. Ferguson, First Soj.; and J. McIntyre, Janitor. At the close of the installation ceremony, Comp. Crabbe, in a short but very clear and able address, pointed out the great responsibility the office-bearers had taken upon themselves, and to the companions the duty they had to perform in supporting their office-bearers in all that would tend to the elevation and prosperity of Royal Arch Masonry. The M.E.Z. then proposed a vote of thanks to Comp. Crabbe for the services he had rendered to the chapter that night, and also to Comp. G. B. Adams, Chapter 50, for the assistance he had given, and also that they should be made honorary members of this Chapter, No. 117, as a mark of respect for their earnest endeavours to further Royal Arch Masonry. This was carried unanimously, and the two companions stepped to the altar and took the necessary obligation from the M.E.Z. Comps. Crabbe and Adams, in a few brief but well-chosen sentences, returned thanks for the great honour that had been conferred upon them that night. This finished the business of the evening, and the chapter was closed in due and ancient form.

The report of the Provincial Grand Lodge of Glasgow, and several other lodge reports, will appear next week.

CONSECRATION OF THE MORECAMBE LODGE, No. 1561.

The members of the ancient fraternity of Free and Accepted Masons resident in Morecambe and its vicinity, having the welfare of the Craft at heart, and having considered for some time past that the establishment of a lodge to be held at Morecambe would conduce much to the facility with which they could attend to their Masonic duties, and be a benefit to the Craft in general, decided to call a meeting of the resident Masons, &c., with a view to the consideration of what steps should be taken in furtherance of that object. Accordingly Bro. Dr. Moore was invited to attend a meeting held at the King's Arms Hotel, Morecambe, on Monday, the 14th June, 1875, when the following Masons were assembled, viz.: Bros. J. D. Moore, P.G.S.B. of England; W. Duff, Thomas Longmire, Henry Hartley, William Aspden, James Shaw, William Longmire, and others.

After some consideration it was resolved that it was advisable that a lodge should be established to meet in Morecambe, and that a petition be sent to the M.W.G.M., praying for a warrant of constitution. The petitioners agreed that the lodge should be called the Morecambe Lodge, and that Bro. Moore should be the first Master, and Bros. Duff and Thomas Longmire the first Wardens. It was also resolved that until other suitable premises could be provided the lodge should meet at the North Western Hotel, Morecambe.

A petition in due form was prepared and sent to the Provincial Grand Secretary for the approval of the R.W. Prov. Grand Master, and it was afterwards transmitted to the Grand Secretary of England, from whom the Worshipful Master Designate (Bro. Dr. Moore) received the warrant, under the sign manual of H.R.H. the Prince of Wales.

Several meetings were held with regard to Masonic and general arrangements, and on the 6th October the R.W. Provincial Grand Master appointed Tuesday, the 26th October, as the day for the consecration. Half-past twelve o'clock was the hour fixed for the ceremony, and for the convenience of those members of the Craft living in Lancaster, who wished to witness the consecration, it was arranged that a special train should leave the Green Area Station for Morecambe at twelve o'clock. The train started within a few minutes of the appointed time, and on the arrival of the brethren at Morecambe they at once proceeded to the North Western Hotel, where for the present the lodge will hold its meetings.

After a short delay, the brethren invested themselves in their Masonic clothing, and proceeded to the apartment set apart as the lodge-room, which was properly and appropriately furnished for the forthcoming ceremony.

Amongst the members of the Craft present were the Most Worshipful Prov. Grand Master, Lord Skelmersdale, D.G.M. of England; Charles Fryer (Mayor of Preston), Prov. S.G.W.; J. W. Morgan, Prov. G.C.; W. M. Deeley, Prov. J.G.W.; Thos. Armstrong, Prov. G.W.T.; H. S. Alpass, Prov. G. Sec.; Reuben Pearson, Prov. P.G.R.; Robert Wylie, Prov. P.G.S.D., and Grand Director of Ceremonies; Joseph Skeafe, Prov. G.O.; W. J. Sly, Prov. G. Purst.; J. Holme, P.P.G.J.W. (Cumberland and Westmoreland); J. Talbot, P.P.G.J.W. (C. and W.); W. Tattersall, P.P.S.W. (C. and W.); Dr. J. D. Moore, P.G.S.B. of England; E. Airey, I.P.M. 281; W. Duff, T. Longmire, W. Longmire, W. Aspden, J. Shaw, K. A. Stansfeld, J. J. Crookell, T. G. Thompson, W. S. Carr, W. H. Bagnall, P.M.; W. Heald, P.M. 1353; J. Acton, W.M. 1353; Joseph Barrow, W. Hall, P.M. 281; J. Taylor, W.M. 1051; J. L. Bradshaw, I.P.M. 1051, J. A. Baldwin (Dalton); T. Atkinson, S.W. 281, H. Longman, S.W. 1051; J. Simpson, 1353; J. M. Jameson, W.M.; W. Stewardson, P.M.; J. Gibson, P.M. and Treas.; and H. Rawes, 950; J. H. Charnley, E. Storey, P.M., and A. McRaith, 281; C. Heswell, 204; H. W. Johnson, P.M. 113; J. B. Macguire, and J. Hessep, 995; H. J. Atkinson, 1505; W. Parker, J. Ellershaw, R. Wolfenden, F. G. Dale, J.W.; E. Barsby, and S. Dobson, 1351; W. Fleming, P.M.; J. Jowitt, S.D.; E. Simpson, P.M.; W. Wearing, P.M.; James Hatch, P.M. and Treas.; R. Jervis, J. Atkinson, John Hatch, P.M.; W. Storey, P.M.; J. Fenton, P.M.; F. Dean, P.M.; R. Whiteside, J. B. R. Pilkington, and J. Stanley, I.G. 281; B. R. Stansfeld, 859; John Beeley, and John Watson, 281, Tylers.

The brethren being assembled in the lodge-room, Craft lodge was opened by Bro. Wylie, who appointed Bros. John Hatch, P.M. 281, S.W.; James Taylor, W.M. 1051, J.W.; John L. Bradshaw, I.P.M., S.D.; W. Hall, P.M. 281, J.D.; and J. Gibson, P.M. and Treas. 950, I.G. Shortly afterwards the Right Worshipful Provincial Grand Master, Lord Skelmersdale, D.G.M. of England, entered the lodge-room, preceded by the Provincial Grand Officers and the Worshipful Master designate, namely, Bros. Morgan, Fryer, Deeley, Armstrong, Alpass, Pearson, Sly, Skeafe, and Dr. Moore, a processional march being played whilst the R.W. Prov. G.M. took his place in the Master's chair.

On entering the lodge the R.W. Prov. G.M., as we have already stated, was conducted to the Grand Master's chair, when he appointed Bro.

Fryer to fill the chair of the S.W., and Bro. Deeley, J.W., the other officers remaining as before.

The Grand Director of Ceremonies then called upon the brethren to salute the Most Worshipful Provincial Grand Master according to ancient form, and the consecration of the lodge was proceeded with.

The Provincial Grand Chaplain (Bro. Morgan) read a portion of the Holy Writ, and then offered up prayer, after which an ode in honour of Masonry was sung.

Bro. Alpass, the Provincial Grand Secretary, then informed the Provincial Grand Master that the brethren desired to be formed into a new lodge, and read the petition, the dispensation, and the warrant or charter of constitution, which latter was attested by the sign manual of H.R.H. the Prince of Wales, by virtue of his office as Grand Master.

The brethren who intended to be formed into a new lodge were then required to stand up, and the Grand Master inquired if they approved of the officers nominated in the warrant to preside over them. Assent was signified in Masonic form, and the Grand Master then delivered an oration on the nature and design of the institution.

The lodge was then consecrated in ancient form, according to Masonic rites and ceremonies, the elements of consecration—the cornucopia, wine, oil, and salt—being carried three times around the lodge, amidst solemn music, by four Provincial Grand Officers, and afterwards the censer in like manner by the Chaplain.

The Worshipful Master designate was then presented to the Grand Master by Bros. Pearson and Armstrong, the latter saying, "Most Worshipful Grand Master, I present this my worthy brother to be installed Master of the lodge, whom I know to be of good morals and great skill, true and trusty, and a lover of the whole fraternity, whosoever dispersed over the face of the earth."

The Prov. G. Master having placed the candidate at his left hand, and asked and obtained the unanimous consent of all the members present, appointed him Master of the lodge. The Grand Director of Ceremonies then rehearsed the charges and regulations of a Master, to all of which the candidate signified his submission. The Grand Master then proceeded to instal the Worshipful Master into his office, but before doing so, those members who had not attained to the office of Past Masters were asked to retire and the installation was then performed with Masonic ceremonies. The members were then re-admitted, and the newly-installed Master was presented with the warrant of constitution, the lodge book, and the instruments of his office, one after another, receiving with each the customary charge.

The brethren then congratulated the newly-appointed Master, which having been acknowledged, he proceeded to invest his officers (presenting to each of them the instruments of their office) as follows:—Bros. William Duff, S.W.; Thomas Longmire, J.W.; William Longmire, Sec.; William Aspden, S.D.; James Shaw, I.G.; and K. A. Stansfeld, Steward. The investiture of the Treasurer was postponed on account of the illness of the candidate, Bro. R. Hartley. At the request of the Worshipful Master, Bro. E. Airey undertook to accept the office of Immediate Past Master.

The brethren having signified their obedience to the new Wardens, the lodge was then completely constituted, and registered in the Grand Master's book.

The Grand Director of Ceremonies then called for the accustomed vote of thanks, which were given in the manner peculiar to the Craft.

Two members were proposed, and the lodge was then closed in due and ancient form.

The R.W.P.G.M. performed the ceremony of consecration in an exceedingly impressive manner, in which he was ably seconded by his Provincial Grand Officers, the manner in which Bro. Wylie performed the duties pertaining to the office of Grand Director of Ceremonies being alike creditable to the Craft no less than to himself. The musical portion of the ceremony was ably performed by a trio under the direction of Bro. Skeafe, who presided at the harmonium.

CONSECRATION OF THE ELLIOT LODGE (No. 1567).

Last Saturday another lodge for the Province of Middlesex was consecrated at the Railway Hotel, Feltham. The consecrating officer was Bro. R. Wentworth Little, Provincial Grand S.W., who was assisted by the Rev. P. M. Holden, P.G.C., as Chaplain, and Bro. Thomas W. White, Past Grand Steward, as Director of Ceremonies. Colonel Burdett, Prov. G. Master, attended, as did also numerous other Grand and Provincial Grand Officers. The S.W. chair was occupied by Bro. John Hervey, Grand Secretary, and the J.W. chair by Bro. C. A. Cottebrune, Past Grand Pursuivant. Bro. W. I. Howe, Prov. Grand Steward, was I.G., and among the other brethren present were Bros. Lt.-Col. Peters, Prov. S.G.D. of Middlesex; H. G. Buss, Prov. G. Treasurer; P. F. Knight Smith, Organist, 1441; J. H. Pearson, Frank Green, W. Dunham, J. R. Nichols, T. W. Clark, Tudor Trevor, (944, Bombay), H. Massey ("Freemason"), D. W. Pearse, S.W. 1293; John Elliott, J.W. (1348, Ebury), C. A. Cottebrune, P.G.P.; Fred. Keily, W.M. 1293, P.G.S. Middlesex; T. W. Clarke, John Coutts, P.G.P., &c.; A. J. Iretton, F. A. Pemberton, 1348; Wm. Hale, P.M. 1351; S. Lovegreen, and C. B. Payne, G.T. of England. Bro. R. Stone, of the Thames Valley Lodge, also attended.

The brethren having been formally erected into a lodge, the ceremony of consecrating, constituting, and dedicating the Elliot Lodge was proceeded with according to ancient custom, and the Rev. P. M. Holden delivered the oration, in which he said that Freemasonry was an institution founded, not as the ignorant and uninstructed vainly imagine, upon unmeaning mysteries supported by mere good fellowship, but upon eternal reason and truth, whose deep recesses are the civilization of mankind, and whose everlasting glory it is to have the immovable support of those two mighty pillars, science and morality. In proof of this assertion and as appropriate to their illustrious gathering, let him touch on the antiquity, extent, and comprehensiveness of their mystic art, concluding with a few words as to its excellence and utility. First, then, with regard to its antiquity. Now, Masons were well informed that the building of King Solomon's Temple was an important era from whence they derived many mysteries of their art. Be it remembered that this great event, the building of King Solomon's Temple, took place 1000 years before the Christian era, and therefore a century before Homer, the first of the Grecian poets, wrote, and about five centuries before Pythagoras brought from the East his sublime system of truly Masonic instruction to enlighten our Western world. But, remote as this period unquestionably was, we dated not from thence the commencement of our art; for although it might owe to the wise and glorious and great King of Israel some of its many mystic forms and several of its hieroglyphic ceremonies, yet certainly the art itself was coeval with man, the great subject of it, nay, even with the Creation itself, when the Sovereign Architect raised, on strictly Masonic principles, this beautiful globe, and commanded that master science, geometry, to lay the line to the planetary world and regulate by its laws the whole stupendous system. And as Masonry was thus of remote antiquity, so was it also, as might readily be imagined, of boundless extent. We traced its footsteps amongst the most remote and distant ages of the world; we found it in the first and most celebrated civilizers of the East; we could trace it regularly from the first astronomers on the plains of Chaldea, to the wise and mystic kings and priests of Egypt, the sages of Greece, the philosophers of Rome, and even to the rude and Gothic builders of a dark and degenerate age, whose vast temples still remain among us as monuments of their attachment to the Masonic art, and as signal proofs of the taste which, however irregular, must always nevertheless be considered awful, beautiful, venerable, and sublime. In very truth, in no civilized age or country had Masonry ever been neglected. The most illustrious characters, kings and nobles, sages, legislators, authors and artists, warriors, statesmen and philosophers, had thought it their glory to advance, defend, protect, and honour it. And even at the present time, when our brotherhood is successfully established in every kingdom on the earth, Masons were proud and happy to include in that list names which did honour to their own, and which indeed have done honour to any age; and he could not but remark with infinite pleasure and satisfaction that in whatever else men might dispute and disagree, they were all, without exception, unanimity itself in their esteem and support of Freemasonry, which united all parties, conciliated all private opinions, and caused those who by their Almighty Father were made of one blood to be also of one heart and mind, brethren firmly bound together by that most indissoluble of all ties, the love of God and the love of their kind. And not only was it a great civilizer to the world, but it was as, Young described, a place where

"Christians, and Jews, and Turks and Pagans stand,
One blended throng, one undistinguished band."

This alone might be judged a sufficient reason for the extent and, if he might so say, the universality of the Craft, and when to all this was added the comprehensiveness of the institution, the vast circle of arts and sciences which it took in and embraced, then we could no longer for one single moment wonder at its vast extent, but must feel persuaded that it would ever keep pace and run parallel with the culture and civilization of mankind. Nay, we might pronounce with the strictest truth, that where Masonry was not, there civilization would never be found. And so in fact it appeared, for in those savage countries and barbarous climes where operative Masonry never laid the line or stretched the compass, where skilful architecture never reared the dome or planned the well-ordered columns, in those uncultured regions, without form and void, liberal science never softened nor did ingenious art exalt, refine, embellish, and beautify the mind. After these few and imperfect remarks could any man doubt for a single moment as to the excellence and utility of Freemasonry, thus deep in antiquity, boundless in extent, universal in its comprehension of every science, operative and speculative; thus, as it were, in its wide bosom embracing the whole circle of arts and morals. Allow me, then (continued the rev. gentleman), worshipful sir, to congratulate you and all those present upon the advancement and the present most flourishing state of our useful, ancient, and beautiful Masonic art. Allow me more particularly and especially to congratulate you, the founders, officers, promoters of the Elliot Lodge, upon the happy event of to-day, the consecration of your Masonic edifice, reared, I trust, upon a solid foundation, and which I hope will add stability and glory to Freemasonry in general, and to the province of Middlesex in particular. May the Craft always meet safe, happy, and secure within its sacred walls, and may it flourish for ever like the palm tree, may private friendship and public virtue distinguish and adorn the heart and character of every Mason who shall ever form and fill the sacred and Masonic lodge which we consecrate to-day to Freemasonry, to virtue, and to universal benevolence. May they adorn and ennoble the art they profess; and I would, after thanking you for listening to me, complete my remarks with some old lines which occur to me as applicable to the Order:—

If all the social virtues of the mind,
If an extensive love to all mankind,
If hospitable welcome to a guest,
And speedy charity to the distressed,
If due regard to liberties and laws,
Zeal for our house, and for our country's cause;
If these great principles deserve the name,
Let Masons then enjoy the praise they claim.
(Cheers.)

The ceremony of consecration was afterwards completed, and Bro. Little installed Bro. John Mason as W.M., on the presentation of Bro. Thomas W. White, D.C.

The brethren invested were Bros. Frank Green, S.W.; W. Dunham, J.W.; Elliott, Secretary; J. R. Nichols, S.D.; A. J. Iretton, J.D.; Pearson, I.G.; Samuel Love

Green, D.C.; T. W. Clarke, W.S.; and Potter, Tyler. After this, Bros. Little and Hervey delivered the charges. Bros. Col. Burdett, John Hervey, H. G. Buss, R. W. Little, Thomas W. White, Rev. P. M. Holden, Sir G. Elliot, Lt. Col. Peters, and C. A. Cottebrune were elected honorary members, on the proposition of the W.M., seconded by the S.W.; and the W.M., in addressing the newly elected brethren, said that he felt there was much work still to be done in the province, and he hoped that often when there was this work to do the new members of the lodge would be present.

(The continuation of this report will appear in our next.)

Masonic and General Tidings.

A new Masonic lodge, the "Zetland," No. 326, Toronto, Canada, was consecrated last month, M.W. Bro. J. K. Kerr, Grand Master, officiating, assisted by P.W. Bros. Spry, Stephens, and F. J. Menet.

A fine Masonic Hall is being built at Lexington, Missouri, U.S.A.

On the 10th of August the corner stone of the Union Agency building for the five largest nations of Indian Territory—the Cherokees, Choctaws, Creeks, Chickasaws, and Seminoles—was laid at Prospect Hill, near Muskogee, by the Masonic Grand Lodge of the Territory.

The monument to Fitz Greene Halleck, the poet, was dedicated on July 8th, 1869, at Guilford, Conn. New Haven Commandery, K.T., and St. Albans Lodge, No. 38, assisted.

In connection with our Royal Grand Master's visit to India, Bro. Matthews, an enterprising chemist of Camberwell, has discovered the means of composing a solution of lime which is considered to be an antidote against diarrhoea or dysentery. The profits of the medicine are to be given to the Masonic charities.

Bro. Alderman Hadley has received an address of congratulation from the London Coffee-house Keepers Benevolent Association.

On Tuesday last the Prince of Wales completed his thirty-fourth year, having been born on the 9th November, 1841. There were the usual celebrations in London, at Windsor, and at Sandringham.

Bro. George Abbott, of the City Terminus Hotel, Cannon-street, has been presented with a valuable gold watch and chain, by the members of the Railway Guards' Universal Friendly Society, in testimony of their esteem, and in recognition of the ability and zeal displayed by him while chairman of the General Committee for five years. The presentation was made at the society's usual monthly meeting at the Birkbeck Institute, on the 27th ult., and was accompanied with an address beautifully illuminated on vellum, expressive of the cordial esteem evinced to our brother by the members of the above society.

The Fifteen Sections will be worked, by a number of brethren from various lodges, in the St. John of Wapping Lodge of Instruction, on Tuesday, the 16th inst. The proceedings will commence at 7 o'clock.

Our readers will be glad to hear that Bro. Major Creation was gazetted on Tuesday night as Lieut.-Colonel.

The Islington Lodge of Instruction, No. 1471, is held at the Crown and Cushion, London Wall, every Wednesday evening, at 7.

The Provincial Grand Lodge of Norfolk, and the installation of Bro. Walpole as the new Provincial Grand Master in the room of the late Bro. B. B. Cabell, will take place at Norwich, next Saturday. Lord Skelmersdale will instal. It is expected that 500 Freemasons will attend the banquet, which will be held in St. Andrew's Hall.

Bro. Tom Jackson, P.S.W., was unanimously elected Worshipful Master for ensuing year of the Lodge of Truth, Huddersfield, 521.

The first meeting of the committee for making arrangements in connection with the forthcoming Masonic Ball in Liverpool, in aid of the West Lancashire Masonic Educational Institution, was held on Friday evening, the 5th inst., at the Masonic Hall, Hope-street. Bro. H. S. Alpass, P.G. Sec., will be the chairman of the ball committee; Bro. W. M. Chudley, P.M. 241, the vice-chairman; and Bro. H. Neilson, P.M. 673 and 1505, was elected the Secretary.

WIPE YOUR FEET.—The best Coco Nut Mats and Matting are made by Treloar & Sons, 69, Ludgate Hill.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS have been put fairly to the test of experience for more than thirty years. During that period their merits have powerfully contributed to give ease, health, strength, and longevity to mankind. This purifying and regulating medicine should occasionally be had recourse to during foggy, cold, and wet weather. These Pills are the best preventive of Hoarseness, Sore Throat, Diphtheria, Pleurisy, and Asthma, and are sure remedies for Congestion, Bronchitis, and Inflammation. Moderate attention to the directions round each box will enable every invalid to take the Pills in the most advantageous manner; they will thus be taught the proper doses and the circumstances under which these must be increased or diminished. Holloway's Pills act as alteratives, aperients, and tonics.—ADVT.

THE "COSMOPOLITAN MASONIC CALENDAR."—
London: Bro. GEORGE KENNING.

Twelve months ago a facetious contemporary chaffed us for reviewing the "Cosmo" because belonging to our own publisher. We did not see the force of his remarks, however pungent, then; we do not see it now. Our publisher has survived the chaff, so have we; and, as a proof of our vitality, we beg to announce the reappearance of the "Cosmo," and to recommend it to all our readers to-day. As of old, well got up and carefully compiled, it is a convenient and portable "vade mecum" for the Craft, and as we turn over its pages we are struck with the fact, so convincingly brought home to us, of the cosmopolitan character of our good Order. North and South, East and West, not merely as Præd sings, "The chains of Hymen jingle," but Freemasonry is established, lodges are many, and Freemasons are to be found. When George Canning said he meant to call a "new world into existence to redress the balance of the old," we feel almost certain now, in the light of after years, that he foresaw the spread of the Masonic body, and his words have already received a part fulfilment in that Freemasons in the new world are twofold more numerous, at the least, than those of the old. Bro. Kenning's Cosmopolitan Calendar takes us among them, tells us their local habitation and their name, so that the golden link of brotherhood, of which Masonic bards often write, unites us with many, many thousands of brethren across "Atlantic billows." Well, we thank Bro. Kenning for his "little stranger" of 1876, and we trust as this good year closes, and as the new year dawns upon us, the demands for it may be many, and the sale of it may be great. If any of our brotherhood are anxious to possess it, let them look in at any of Bro. Kenning's depôts in town or country, where their wants will be courteously attended to, and their requirements fully supplied. W.

"CASSELL'S DICTIONARY OF COOKERY," No. 1.
We are very much pleased indeed with this, the first number of a very useful work. We have long felt deeply how much improvement was needed in the great and necessary art of domestic cookery, and how far too severe and abstruse were many of the manuals in use. We, therefore, hail with pleasure this plainly written but perfectly understandable cook's vade mecum. We think it will be a very useful one, and a good present for that meritorious class of the community who are often expected to do a great deal on a very little. Now we all of us, say what we will, like a good dinner, and there is all the difference in the world between a well-cooked dinner and a bad one. Dyspepsia, indigestion, blue devils, bad temper, general uncomfotableness, personal disagreeableness, are the inevitable result of the latter state of things; while cheerfulness and amiability, bonhomie and good-health, comfort and satisfaction, are the wonted accompaniments of the former. We have no hesitation in saying that it makes all the difference possible, both to your digestion and your disposition, whether you eat a tough chop or a tender one, whether your fish is well fried, or your mutton well boiled, whether the omelette is really an omelette, whether your potatoes are mealy, or, as the Irishman said, "bursting from their beautiful skins." We feel, then, how important such a work is for our cooks, and how much good for us all alike might be the "outcome" of its clear directions and sensible maxims. If only our cooks will but attend to them what a blessing it would be for us all. Cooks are said to be not always good-tempered, but they have much to try them. They are very hardworking, for the most part, and they are most indispensable members of the Briton's domicile, where they kindly provide for the wants of Britons and Britonesses, and little Britons and little Britonesses, with great assiduity and plentifulness. If, then, they can be induced in their calmer moments to attend to Messrs. Cassell's Dictionary of Cookery all may yet be well, we feel, with our country, our constitution, with ourselves, with our appetites, our tempers, and our digestions, our household expenditure, and our banker's balance. We, therefore, recommend the work to our readers, and all who value the "savoir faire," and economical arrangement of a well-regulated kitchen, and the health, temper, and amiability of their own immediate family circle, and even—we say it deferentially—their own. FREEMASONRY IN INDIA.

The regular meeting of Lodge Concord, No. 757, E.C., was held in the Freemasons' Hall, Mazagon, on Saturday, the 18th Sept., 1875. Present: Wor. Bros. W. C. Rowe, W.M.; G. R. Henderson, I.P.M.; B. Robinson, P.M.; Bros. F. Burdett, as S.W.; W. Fearn, as J.W.; F. Burdett, Treas.; O. Tomlinson, Sec.; J. Spiers, S.D.; W. G. Davis, J.D.; J. Luke, D.C.; J. E. Tyers, Organist; J. F. Grew, Steward; L. Thomas, I.G.; J. W. Seager, Tyler; F. Lean, W. E. Craddock, J. May, John Widdle, E. Fuelling, J. Holt, W. Hobbs, C. J. Hall, H. Watson, W. W. Wilson, J. H. Burrett, and others.

The visitors were Bros. S. Counsell, W.M. 1100, E.C.; C. Parker, H. D. Summers, 563, S.C.; Horamjee Pestonjee, 1359, E.C.; and others.

The lodge was opened with prayer at 7 p.m.

The summons convening the meeting was read.

The minutes of the last regular meeting were read and confirmed.

The minutes of the last meeting of the Permanent Committee were read and adopted.

The ballot was then taken for Mr. John Armstrong as candidate for initiation, who was announced elected.

The Secretary then read a letter, dated the 10th Sept., from the D.G. Secretary, and was directed to lay the same before the Permanent Committee at their next meeting.

A letter to and endorsed by the Wor. Master, re Bro. W. W. Whittaker, S.W., was then read. It appears there has been some error in not writing Bro. W. W. Whittaker's name off the roll of the lodge since the 15th May inclusive, about which date he left for England in consequence of being invalided home, and is not likely to return to India.

Bro. W. C. Rowe, Wor. Master, proposed, and Bro. B. Robinson, P.M., seconded that Bro. W. W. Whittaker's name be taken off the roll of the lodge from the above date, his dues being paid up to the time he left India an invalid for England. Carried.

Mr. John Armstrong, properly prepared, was then duly admitted and initiated into the secrets and mysteries of ancient Freemasonry.

Bros. Ernest Fuelling and Dr. Joseph Gerson Da Cunha were then examined as to their qualifications to be passed to the Second Degree, and having passed a very creditable examination, were entrusted and passed out.

All below the rank of Fellow Craft were then requested to retire.

The lodge was then opened in the Second Degree.

Bro. Ernest Fuelling was then duly admitted and passed to the Second Degree.

Bro. Dr. Joseph Gerson Da Cunha was afterwards duly admitted and passed to the Second Degree.

The working tools were then presented, and their uses explained by the Worshipful Master to the newly passed brethren.

The lodge was then closed in the Second Degree, and resumed in the First Degree.

A letter from Bro. J. W. Seager, Tyler, returning thanks for the donation of fifty rupees, and requesting some kind brother would use his influence in obtaining for him employment, was then read.

Rupees three annas four was then taken from the charity box, and duly taken into account by the Treasurer.

There being no further business before the lodge, it was closed with solemn prayer at 9.10 p.m.

ROYAL ARCH MASONRY IN CONSTANTINOPLE.

A convocation of Leinster Chapter, No. 166 (I.C.), was held (in accordance with the laws and constitution of the Order) at the Masonic Temple, Hasskien, on Tuesday, the 28th Sept., there being an unusual attendance of companions, it being the installation of K. and officers for ensuing term.

The chapter was opened in due form, with solemn prayer, by Comp. R. MacGill, M.E.K., supported in council by W. Dorrell, H.P., and A. Noble, C.S.; the other officers present were Comps. J. Lindsay, C.H.; J. Rawe, S.T.; W. Teadstill, R.A.C.; T. Johnson, Capt. S. Veil, T. Dickenson, C.P.V.; J. Nock, C.B.V.; W. Webb, Reg. and Treas.; P. Flucker, Janitor; the chapter being honoured by the attendance of Comps. W. Harvey, M.E.Z., of the Thistle of the East Chapter, No. 107, (S.C.), accompanied by Comps. H. Arnold, P.Z., and W. S. Botler and W. Cadwallader, who, by request, assisted at the opening of chapter.

Minutes of last regular meeting were read, put to vote, and confirmed.

The business for the evening (as per circular) was the installation of K. and officers, and to hear and, if approved, adopt Auditors' report.

The M.E.K., in a very able manner, referred to the presence of the M.E.Z. and officers of the Thistle of the East Chapter, and called upon the companions to salute them as per ancient Irish custom.

The M.E.Z., W. Harvey, in most affectionate terms, complimented the Leinster companions upon their working, and duly acknowledging the honour paid him and his officers, called upon the companions of 107 to salute the K. as per ancient Scottish usage.

The Auditors were then called upon for their report, and Comp. J. Rawe, Senior Auditor, having laid the accounts before the chapter, congratulated them upon the progress made since last audit, and paid a flattering compliment to the Registrar upon the lucid manner in which they found the accounts kept. Upon due consideration the report as read was duly accepted, and a vote of thanks awarded the Registrar.

The time having arrived for a change of officers, the M.E.K. very ably referred to the working of the chapter during his term of office, stating that, however reluctantly, he may divest himself of the honourable badge of office, and however acceptable his services may have been, he felt that the change would be beneficial, as circumstances did not permit him to give the attention that was necessary, and which he felt in honour of the position as K. he ought to have given, and referring to the ability of Comp. W. Dorrell (his successor), and the staff of officers elected to assist him, he felt sure that the progress of the chapter was thus far guaranteed for some time to come. The sentiments of the M.E.K. were acquiesced in by the companions present. The installation ceremony commenced, and P. K. Arnold, acting as D.C., presented Comp. W. Dorrell, as the K. elect, for installation. The ancient charges having been read and duly assented to, the companions below the rank of K. retired, and Comp. W. Dorrell was duly installed in the council chair of K.S., the ceremony being carried out according to the constitution of the G.R.A.C. of Ireland.

The companions were readmitted, and being informed of the said installation of the K. elect, duly assembled and saluted the K. with the R.A. salute, as per ancient custom. The installation of K. being over, Comps. A. Noble, H.P. elect, and J. Rawe, C.S. elect, were presented and duly invested with the insignia of their office, and conducted to their seats in G. Council, thus forming the Principals of the chapter with full power to work the degrees of R.A. and Mark M.M.

The following officers were also duly presented and invested with the badges of their several offices, viz., W. Teadstill, C.H.; T. Johnson, S.T.; P. Flucker, R.A.C.; T. Dickenson, J. Nock, and J. Lindsay, Captains of the Three Veils; W. Ile, Janitor. Upon the officers taking their several stations, the I.P.K., R. MacGill, delivered to the newly installed K. the warrant from the G.R.A.C. of Ireland, the constitutions and the bye-laws of the chapter, and a true inventory of all furniture, jewels, clothing, &c., &c., belonging to the Chapter and Mark Lodge, and in the course of a few well-chosen remarks congratulated the chapter upon the election of its officers. The success of the chapter depending upon the efficient working of the officers, he charged them to, at all times, strictly adhere to the landmarks of the Order, and pay great attention to their several duties.

Upon the I.P.K. resuming his seat, the installed K. in a very able manner thanked the companions for the honour they had conferred in electing him into the exalted position which he now held, and assured them that their confidence should not be misplaced, and referring to the able manner the installation ceremony had been executed, he thanked the I.P.K., and assured him that the charges laid down should receive his attention, his aim being to propagate Arch Masonry in its true form. He also expressed feelings of gratitude for the large attendance of companions, visitors, and members, upon the auspicious occasion, and having declared that the officers now elected for the chapter would stand duly elected for the M.M. Lodge (as per constitution), it was his intention to hold a Lodge of Instruction every alternate Tuesday. The chapter was then closed in due form, in love, peace, and harmony. The companions subsequently adjourned to the large banquet hall, where a banquet was held, to celebrate the occasion, and several hours were spent, wherein the usual loyal and Masonic toasts were duly honoured, and "The Health of all P.M.s" being proposed and responded to (songs intervening toasts and speeches). The well-known Tyler's toast having brought the festival to a close, the companions separated, as the small hours were creeping in.

COLCHESTER.—Bro. Emra Holmes has been lecturing at Colchester. We cull the following from "The Essex Journal" of the 5th inst.:—"The subject was 'Tom Hood,' and the lecturer gave a very graphic and interesting account of his parentage, birth, and life, quoting some of Hood's gravest and most comical sayings, which alternately held the audience spellbound, and in irresistible roars of laughter. He paid high tribute to Hood's religious views, and very impressively delivered some of his choice compositions. Mr. H. S. Goody occupied the chair, and it appeared, from remarks made during the proposing the votes of thanks, that there was a misunderstanding as to the subject, it having been announced that the subject was to have been 'Wit and Humour.' In proposing a vote of thanks to Miss Lewis for presiding at the piano, however, Mr. D. C. Fraser accepted the entire responsibility of having been the cause of the mistake, and he felt sure that the audience would freely forgive him for the error, it virtually being the cause of their having enjoyed, unexpectedly, such a rare treat as that with which the lecturer served them that evening." We understand that the lecture will be shortly published in the pages of our contemporary, the "Masonic Magazine," in which paper Bro. Holmes' "Notes on the British Union Lodge" are about to appear.
