When the miseries entailed by intemperance on men, women, and children are considered in their true and horrible proportions, there is little reason to wonder that sheer desperation drives so many excellent people to seek a remedy for them in a forcible. suppression of the liquor traffic. If no liquor or intoxicating drink of any sort were sold at all, none could be consumed, unless each consumer undertook to manufacture his own; and this could be done only by a very few, Hence it appears to multitudes of persons that the most radical cure for intemperance, and the wretchedness, pauperism, and crime it is well known to cause, is to prohibit by statute the sale of alcohol in all its forms. This course is thought to aim a fatal blow at the very heart of the evil; and the adoption of it is considered so clear a duty that whoever distrusts the efficiency of the prohibitory method runs a great risk of being ranked among the open or secret enemies of the temperance reform. Nevertheless, we ask candid attention to some thoughts on this subject which, at least to one mind, seem true, and therefore entitled to great weight.

I. It is the abuse, and not the use, of alcohol which constitutes the evil of intemperance. Experience does not confirm the opinion that the drinking of a glass of pure wine, or pure beer, or pure liquor, is a sin per se. The great danger of the habitnal use even of perfectly pure drinks of an intoxicating character may, and should, be admitted; but the tendency of use to run into abuse does not destroy the distinction between them. At least, thousands of the best people believe this, and their views cannot be sneered or exclaimed down.

2. The prohibitory principle aims to suppress the use as well as the abuse of alcoholic beverages, or must tend to produce this effect, even if not designed. That such beverages are used without being abused by many persons, is a fact which only a fatatic will deny. Yet the prohibitory principle can make no discrimination between users and abusers; the obstacles it interposes to the sale of these beverages operate equally against both classes; and it therefore punishes the users in order to prevent the abusers from becoming subjects of punishment. There is inherent injustice in such a principle as this, and it will make itself felt as surely as human nature is human nature.

3. The crime of intemperance, with which alone society has the right to deal, is the abuse, and not the use, of alcohol: if it were always used without being abused, no one would venture to claim the right to suppress the sale of it. The right of suppression is supposed to be grounded on the right to prevent the causes of crime in order to prevent crime itself; and the cause of intemperance is supposed to be the simple fact of drinking. Now if the mere drinking always led to drunkenness, society would have an undoubted right to prevent the mere drinking. But it does not always lead to it. In attempting to suppress all drinking of alcohol, therefore, by making it unobtainable for drinking purposes, prohibition attempts to suppress drinking which does not, as well as that which does, lead to drunkenness. Those personswho never drink to excess, never become guilty of the crime of intemperance, and therefore never become amenable to society for any criminal consequences of drinking, with which alone in themselves or in their causes society has the right to deal, feel naturally enough that soclety is infringing on their personal liberty; and the plea that it is done to prevent crime is felt to be worthless, because it is evident that, while drinking which leads to crime may be justly suppressed, drinking which does not lead to crime is beyond society's jurisdiction. It is perfectly true that there is a possibility of any drinking leading to crime; but since not all drinking actually leads to it, society suppresses more than the cause of crime when it suppresses all drinking, and this "more" is personal liberty. A man has a right to drink, so far as society is concerned, if he never drinks so much as to be guilty of intemperance; he may or may not be wise In doing it, but he never becomes amenable to society till he violates the rights of some other person or persons. Consequently, when the prohibitory principle declares that he shall never drink alcohol at all, regardless of whether he uses or abuses it, he properly considers his reserved rights invaded, and will feel himself aggrieved.

4. It is as an earnest friend of true temperance that we deplore the results of thus arraying one of the most powerful and most sacred instincts of humaniity, the love of freedom, against the temperance reform. Unless the temperance reform can so shape its measures as to respect this instinct to the uttermost, it can never succeed. The personal liberty of the whole community cannot be permanently sacrificed. even to secure the abolition of the most frightful evils; for no evil is more frightful than this very sacrifice, which brings uncounted other evils in its The reaction against all measures which detrain mand it will be as sure as gravitation, and as mighty. However temporarily successful, the prohibitory principle transcends the limits of free individuality, and will excite resistance in proportion to the strength of the liberty-loving spirit. In coarse or ignorant people, this resistance will take coarse or ignorant shapes. One of the worst of these is the defiant determination to drink, simply because prohibited. Experience shows plainly enough that the prohibitory principle is never carried out, because men will not submit to dictation with regard to matters so purely per-sonal as eating and drinking; and, if driven to do their drinking in secret, and in violation of law, the danger of their becoming intemperate is increased tenfold. You may denounce this defiant spirit as much as you please; but it exists inevitably wherever prohibition prevails. The worst of it is that its root is a good one-resentment against injustice and infringement of personal rights; and temperance reformers have themselves to blame when this good root bears such svil fruit. The progress of their reform is delayed and stopped, when they are so rash or so over-eager as to crush the freedom of the individual under the votes of the majority. No good man can see his fellows plunging into the gulf of intemperance without deep sorrow; but no good man can see them driven to this sulcidal course by illjudging philanthropy without still deeper sorrow. It must surely be possible to find a remedy for this monstrous evil without trampling on the sense of ersonal freedom. If not, there is no remedy for it; for this will never cure it.

Dannin Google

258

5. The prohibitory principle treats the liquor-seller as the criminal; whereas, if drunkenness is the crime, the criminal is the drunkard. Under certain circumstances, liquor-selling may be indeed a crime; as when liquor is sold to a man already half-intoxicated. But there will be no real temperance reform till public opinion stamps its unqualified reprobation on drunkenness itself, and holds every man to a rigorous responsibility for the preservation of his rationality at all times. If the drinker never forgot the duty he owes to himself, to his family, to society, he would never be a drunkard, and no one would dream of condemning the seller. Is an act of sale made a crime by the use afterwards made of the article sold? Unless the seller knows or suspects the buyer's No. intent to be criminal at the time, he is guiltless; and the guilt belongs to the buyer alone. Not the sale, but the purchase, -not the seller, but the purchaser,ought to be condemned, if the transaction is wrong perse; and the prohibitory principle, even if it were justifiable in treating the transaction as a crime in itself, lays it at the door of the wrong party, when it punishes the liquor-seller rather than the liquordrinker. The greater expediency or feasibility of this course is no justification of it.

6. The truth is that no temperance reform can be permanent or general till the people themselves resolve to be temperate. You may try to make it impossible for them to get drunk by abolishing the liquor-traffic; but you will fall just so long as the people are determined to buy the liquor. This reliance on external safeguards as a substitute for internal self-restraint is what prevents the true principle of temperance-selfgovernment under all circumstances by conscience and reason-from making real headway. There is no such thing as a short cut to universal temperance, -no such thing as a speedy abolition of all intemperance. It is a matter of slow and painful growth to eradicate so inveterate a disease from the social system; and we should be wise to face this fact calmly and fully. A new public opinion must be formed ; a new habit of self-government must be cultivated ; a new reverence for reason and conscience must be created and fostered. All this takes time,-yes, a great deal of time. Intemperance is at least as old as human history, and one must be more enthusiastic than wise to expect that any political measure whatever can take the place of a universal elevation of moral motives. Not prohibitory laws, not the establishment of woman suffrage (though sanguine womansuffragists expect incredible efficacy from that measure), will make any appreciable reduction in the long run in the amount of drunkenness. The dissemination of true principles on the subject, and reliance on tter education, together with such indirect external helps as the providing of cheap and innocent amusements for the people and the establishment of equity in social and industrial relations, will do all that can be done to drive this demon of inebriation from the homes and haunts of men. But all this is a slow process, which cannot but be retarded by enlisting noble sentiments like the love of freedom on the wrong side. We deeply sympathize with the desire of prohibitionists to protect wives and mothers and helpless children from the woes of the drunkard's home; yet we believe that the method of coercion, whether applied in the form of stringent statutes or in the milder form of "praying" intrusion and religious brow-beating, will fail totally of its object in the final upshot. The actual condition of human nature must be taken into the account; and one of the surcet ways to defeat reform is to create a protest against it on the score of personal liberty.

CREMATION.

The subject of cremation is plainly destined to occupy a fair share of attention in America. The most intelligent people are interested in the discussion, and their interest is of the serious kind that betokens active conviction, and looks to practical achievement. The society in New York, though of recent formation, as yet unincorporated, and engaged in preliminary inquiries, officered too by quiet, unobtrusive men, who have confined themselves to private or quasi-private efforts, numbered, three weeks ago, more than eighty members; among them men of different professions, lawyers, physicians, clergymen, merchants, and of religious opinions running all the way from Episcopacy to bald rationalism. By this time the list must be much longer. It is designed to secure an act of incorporation. In a week or two, the subject will be presented to the community at a public meeting, to be addressed by speakers fully acquainted with all the aspects of the question; and then the attempt will probably be made to raise funds for the purpose of instituting the practice for all such as approve of it.

It is particularly desirable that the custom of burning instead of burying the dead, if worthy of adoption, should be adopted as soon as may be in a new country like ours, in order that the evils of interment, so disastrously feit in oil countries, may be prevented. Already, in our more populous cities, they are painfully apparent, and populous cities grow in our climate very rapidly. No municipal limits contain the people long; they overrun the country like grasshoppers; the interval between the city of the living and the city of the dead shrinks visibly; the cemetery in the fields is a cemetery in the town before we think of it; and the intramural mischief is upon us almost without warning. There is a small district in New York City that is never free from disease. The health inspector naively reports "eight vacant lots occupied as coal-yards, storage for lumber, etc.," as "In fair sanitary condi-The rest of the quarter is unhealthy, with a tion.' large and constant elckness-rate. In the summer months diarrhoea, dysentery, and cholera-infantum prevall. Purulent ophthalmia continually exists. In this district, forty feet under the ground, is an old negro burial ground. That the sickliness of the dis-trict is chiefly or largely due to this old burial place cannot be affirmed, for it is in other respects a filthy, miserable quarter, inhabited by the least caring and cared for part of the community; and the poisons of the old cemetery are perhaps, by this time, dis-charged. But who knows whether they have been or At all events, before they were discharged, not? they must have been responsible for a good deal of the same kind of sickness as prevails now. A single cometery of Brooklyn,-Calvary,-the principal cemetery of the Roman Catholic Church,-there were, in a single year, nine thousand interments,-about forty per cent. of the whole city dead. The procession of bearses thither is incessant. The ground is not a large one, and the dead lie there in layers three or four deep in places, the upper ones being so near the surface that the effluvium taints the air. Yet the medical inspector who gives the numbers contents himself with remarking: "The records of this city of the dead exhibit singularly instructive records of the nationalities and ages of the decedents belonging to that religious denomination !" That here is a pressing danger who will deny? That other cities of the Union are exposed to similar dangers who can doubt? If prevention be better than cure, and we know that it is, then the subject of cremation is of as much importance here as in old countries, so far as the future is concerned; and we should be stimulated to its practice by the consideration that by timely measures we may wholly escape evils that elsewhere cannot even be remedied.

To religious reformers the subject of cremation ought to be peculiarly interesting, for it comes under the head of their general reform. The practice of interment is associated with the popular notions of resurrection, and these imply a theory of immortality that we regard as irrational. The alteration of the custom would indirectly effect our alteration in the belief. The doctrine of the resurrection of the body may be reconciled with the practice of burning as well as with the practice of burying. But it is not so reconciled at present, in any but enlightened minds. The ignorant will, for many a day, refuse to believe that fire does not render a resurrection in form impossible, the resemblance between dust and ashes being beyond their appreciation. They who perceive the resemblance, and frankly concede the equal possibility of ascension from the pyre as from the mound, probably entertain a conception of the risen form more than usually spiritual, and, in consequence, anticipate a more spiritual future. As the matter stands with the multitude, the substitution of burning for burying would imply the substitution of a new faith for an old one. The practice of interment in the refuge of superstition. With the practice the superstition will cease. If the arguments against cremation, on sanitary and social grounds, should be found stronger than the arguments in its favor, this last consideration will of course have no weight. But should cremation commend itself on sanitary and social grounds, the fact that it discourages superstition, and lends support to more rational views on an important subject, will whet the interest of reformers in it, and make them actively favor its adoption.

0, B. F.

THE THEATRE AS A MORAL FORCE.

The papers announce that the Globe Theatre is to be rebuilt, owned, and managed by gentlemen of high standing. Is it a vain hope that they will give us a theatre which shall do justice to the drama as a fine art, as well as a great educational force in the State?

It is the imagination which excites and directs the passions, and we can no more place ourselves under its away and revel in its delights without being affected by the thoughts, the sentiments, the emotions it presents to us, than we can breathe the atmosphere without being strengthened and elevated, or enervated and weakened, or even fatally poisoned by it.

ed and weakened, or even fatally poisoned by it. A miscellaneous audience of men and women, many of them young and impressible, cannot listen to the gross sensuality and meaningless absurdities of an opera bouffé, applauding the worst portions and calling for a repetition of the coarsest scenes, without being debased and degraded by the influence that fills the theatre. Compare the sound of the applanse, the tone of the voices which cry encore, with that of some audience lifted to enthusiasm by a generous sentiment, and the ear will detect the difference of discernment which animates them.

We might take the "New Magdalen" as the type of another class of drama which deeply affects an audience, and whose moral influence is perhaps of a mixed character. The play abounds in excellent sentiments; and it is said that many desolate and unhappy women have written to thank the accomplished actress for her admirable representation of the reformed sinner, which has given them strength and hope to atruggle upward. This is a great good. But yet who has not felt, in witnessing the play, its want of truth to nature and to life, and that the hopes it would excite might prove wholly unreal in the hour of trial?

It is not the beautiful, gifted girl only, driven to wrong by outside influences impossible to resist, and aided by the most devoted admiration and love, when the struggle comes, that needs help and assistance. It is the poor, wretched one, whose own weakness is her worst enemy, and whose progress upward must be slow and painful, that requires our help.

If the drama, or any form of art, quits its own ground of influence by simply elevating and ennobling the whole being, and attempts to work out a distinct moral problem, it must then take all the conditions of the problem, and stand the test of the political economist and the moralist, as well as its own-

This is not quite the service we demand of the drama. We do not ask it to enlighten the understanding or direct the conscience, but to elevate and purify the imagination, so that it will hate vice for its grossness, and shrink from the discord of evil for its own sake.

How simple are the situations in Beethoven's one-opera of "Fidelio" | The sentiments of loyalty, of filial duty, of pure love, have no novelty to recommend them; but they are set to a music which thrills us through and through with all the grandeur which virtue can give to human nature. There are souls which can resist such influences (as we once knew a young man to insult a most respectable colored woman as he was coming out from hearing the "Messiah"); but the mass of appreciative hearers are at least for the time lifted up into a mood of sublimity and heroism which is never wholly forgotten. And the pleasant comedy, pure and sparkling, loving and genial, kindles a glow of good feeling and human love which refreshes the tired brain, lightens the weary heart, and makes us love each other the better for the pleasure we have enjoyed.

But there is one thing absolutely necessary to the success of a theatre in any effort to raise its performances above the present low standard; and that is the coöperation of the public. Our politics are corrupt, because the best men abstain from politics; our theatres are low, because those who can enjoy better things do not make their proper demand for them. The former proprietor of the Globe Theatre gave us Shakspeare's charming "As You Like It," without great leading stars, but with a grace and beauty which sulted that lovely work of art. He would gladly have continued the experiment by putting on the stage all of Shakspeare's best comedies in the same admirable style; but, alas, the receipts did not warrant it. The theatre must pay, and the apathy of the public too often compelled him to take the second best, the burlesque or the sensational drama, that would fill the house, though it did not gratify his own taste or elevate that of the public.

This influence of the theatre for good or for evil is greatly increased by the prevailing fashion of private theatricals. Wisely conducted, this amusement is admirable for its physical training of voice and gesture, for its exercise of the memory and the inventive powers; it gives a great amount of innocent pleasure, and is often successfully connected with interest in philanthropic work. But it is exceedingly difficult to find any play simple enough for the narrow conveniences of the private stage, which is not either vapid in its sentimentalism or coarse and low in its tone. Many attempts have been made to supply this want; but the plays usually lack all the higher qualities of wit, sentiment, or imagination, and fail to attract the public. If we could get the good qualities of French comedy, its simplicity of scene, its naturalness of acting, its sparkling vivacity, without its conventional immorality and covert coarseness, we should have nearly what we want. Some of the French plays written for schools are very simple and charming; but we must have an original growth from our own soil. It is always difficult to transfer any work from another language with perfect success.

If the many gifted women who look to literature as an intellectual resource or a profession would turn their thoughts seriously to supplying this need, they might achieve a great success for themselves, and do a great service to the public. E. D. C.

FREE BELIGIOUS ASSOCIATION.

The SEVENTH ANNUAL MEETING of the Free Religious Association is to be held in Boston on the 28th and 29th of May. The meeting will open with a session for business and addresses on Thursday evening, the 25th, at 7 3-4 o'clock, in Horticultural Hall (lower). At this session the following Amendments to the Constitution are to be acted upon :-

1. In the statement of the objects of the Associa tion in the First Article, to change the phraseology so as to read thus: "Its objects being to promote the practical interests of pure religion, to increase fellowship in the spirit, and to encourage the scientific study of man's religious nature and history."

2. To change the number of Directors, now limited by the Second Article to "six," so that the number shall be "not less than six nor more than ten.

At this session brief addresses are also expected, on various local and special phases of the FREE religious movement, from Mrs. E. D. Cheney, Rowland Connor, Rabbi Sonneschein, R. H. Ranney, and others.

On Friday, the 29th, there will be sessions at 110 A. M. and 3 P. M., in the upper Horticultural Hall. The morning session will be opened by an address from the President, O. B. Frothingham, on "The Validity and Necessity of the Free Religious Plat-form." Speeches will follow from S. R. Calthrop, T. form." W. Higginson, and F. E. Abbot. The three latter speakers are to represent, respectively, the "Chris-tian," the "Extra-Christian," and the "Anti-Christian" attitude of believers in religious freedom. At the opening of the afternoon session, Rev. Dr. Bartol will read an essay on "The Religious Signs of the Times;" addresses expected from Rabbi S. H. Sonneschein, Bishop Ferrette, and C. G. Ames. In the evening, at the new Parker Memorial Hall, a Social Donation Festival is to be held. Brief addresses, music, conversation and refreshments will be provided for, and donations are hoped for from the friends of the Association.

WILLIAM J. POTTER, Secretary.

Communications.

N. B.—Correspondents must run the risk of typographical rors. The utmost cars will be taken to avoid thom; but reafter no space will be spared to Errata. N. B.-

N. B.-Articles for this department should be SHORT, and written only on one side of the shoet. N. B.—Regibly written articles stand a very poor chance of publication.

N. B.—No responsibility will be assumed for unused manu-scripts.

THE PROHIBITION OF THE LIQUOR TRAFFIC.

OZAEK, Mo., April 18, 1874.

OZARK, MO., April 18, 1874. MR. ABBOT: Dear Sir, --In THE INDEX of April 9, under the caption "The Praying Crusade," you criticise the late outburst of religious fanalicism in attempting to sup-press the ilquor traffic in a spirit and style which I consider characteristic of a rational thinker. Had you not alluded disparagingly to another method which has been employed to extirpate the debasing vice of intemperance, I should have read your article among the many expressions of truth which I receive from THE INDEX. In speaking of the "Crusade" you say: "It is only a new phase of the prohibitory movement-prohibi-tion taking a religious instead of a statutory form. Much as we respect the motives of many prohibition-sits, their principle seems to us to begin at the wrong end of human nature." What your objections to prohibition are, not having heard you express your views on the subject, I do not know; but that you deem a legal interdiction of the sale of intoxicating indows indequate to the prevention of intemperance, is patent to my understanding, or I do not compre-hend the meaning of "prohibition." That intemper-prevention should be sought by every friend of human happiness, all readers of THE INDEX must think you believe. But since you teach the supremacy of rea-son in the rulinge of society, and know that those prevention should be sought by every inlead of inlink you happiness, all readers of This INDEX must think you believe. But since you teach the supremacy of rea-son in the rulings of society, and know that those who yield to the siren voice of intemperance are per-sons in whom the rational sovereign has been sup-planted by s blind and reckless appetite, I cannot conceive how you can consistently oppose the force-able prohibition of a traffic which indulges a de-praved passion whose victims confess themselves in-capable of sverting their own doom. Is it rational or philanthropic in the class of society capable of self-government to suffer temptations to be alluringly placed before the ignorant, weak, and vitia-ted, who have not the moral power to resist them? Do we not protect our children from evil by force, and does not the State owe the same protection to its helpless subjects? What treatment of this vice does rationalism dictate? Yours truly, H. CLAY NEVILLE.

H. CLAY NEVILLE.

"THE PRAYING CRUSADE."

Yours truly,

TIPPECANOE CITY, O., April 16, 1874.

MR. EDITOR:

or cause to be bought any more intoxicating drinks, to be sold or given away as a beverage in or about your premise your premises. "2nd. That from this time forward you will not sell or give away, or cause to be sold or given away, any intoxicating drinks whatever, except in strict compli-ance with law. "3d. That, as soon as your present stocks are ex-hansted or sold according to law, you will quit the business entirely, never to resume it again in this place.

business entirely, never to resume it again in this place. "We simply ask your promise to the above requests. We ask the above of you, our brothers, because the business you follow is sending to our homes intoxi-cated husbands and fathers, unfit members of any family. The places you keep are decoys to our little sone, leading them to destruction. We ask this be-cause intemperance is a disease which becomes hered-itary, thus endangering every family in all our land.

ġ

:1

S S TI TO

ほけん

9

5

We ask it because it may sometime come to your own homes in a most crushing reality. We propose to sing and pray with you occasionally, until we have your answers, or until we are satisfied our efforts in this way will be unavailing." The result was, in less than two weeks every sa-loon-keeper gave a favorable answer, and three of them quit the business sooner than requested, with stocks of liquor on hand. The leaders of the league have made two festivals in honor of, and for the ben-est of these comprising with their requests.

have made two festivals in honor of, and for the ben-efit of, those complying with their requests. The festivals were very largely attended, and a more cordial, social, and affectionate gathering was never before seen in our town. Victors and van-quished clasped each others' hands in friendship. Mr. Editor, do you think "supersition" did all this? Don't you think there was a suitable adapta-tion of means to the end? Free Religionists, of all people in the world, I think, should shout Amen to such means and such results. And don't you think the results will be more lasting than if crushed by law? E. L. CRANE.

There can be no objection to private appeals to the reason and conscience of any one. But the threat (for it was one) to "sing and pray" with the saloonkeepers until they yielded or proved hopelessly obdarate, whatever its immediate success, is but a transient expedient little likely to produce lasting effects. It is much too soon as yet to talk of the "success" of this "crusade." Whatever really tends to reduce the evil of intemperance, provided it does not create other evils as grave, we heartily wish well to; but the evils entailed by too great reliance on coercion, even that form of it which consists in overwhelming the individual with a resistless weight of public opinion. are too subtile to be immediately apparent. Especially do we distrust the permanency of the results attained by revivalistic furor. We certainly cannot "shout Amen" to the firing-off of a volley of prayers at any man's head, for the purpose of coercing him against his will to change his business. Prayer put to such uses may be "efficacious" at first, but it is superstitious nevertheless; and we suspect that praying will itself be worse hurt than liquor-selling in the end.-ED.]

LABOR THE ONLY GROUND OF PRICE.

BT JOSIAH WARREN.

It is folly to expect that men will prefer starved, ragged, insulted labor, however useful it may be, rather than an easy situation with a sufficient income and the respect of their fellow-men. It is not sur-prising that the ranks of the respected pursuits are crowded till their followers are tempted to live by fraud—that we are overrun with speculators, thieves, defaulters, counterfeiters, burglars, robbers, murder-ers, incendiaries, rapacious officials, and other vaga-bonde; or that the Bible is tortured into the defence of slavery and poverty by those who are reveiling in ers, incendiaries, rapicious omriais, and other vage-bonds; or that the Bible is tortured into the defence of slavery and poverty by those who are revelling in idleness and luxury; or that, when the opportunities for speculations and office-holding opened by one war are all filled, the next step is to appeal to "patriot-ism" to get up another war. This pandemonium of ours miscalled society will continue, in spite of all conscience, all preaching, and all law-making, as long as men are tempted to live by profitable crimes rather than to starve in useful pursuits. The immense advantages derived from the division and exchange of labor are so overwhelming that they have almost extinguished the idea of people in the midst of them making everything that they use; we depend on buying all our aupplies with money from those who can produce them to better advantage. Hence money is the all-in-all—the pivot upon which morey.

<text><text><text><text><text><text>

he is not equitably entitled to pay for a discovery which has cost him nothing. If he undertakes to lay it out into lots, and to sell them, he is equitably en-titled to pay according to the costs of his labor com-pared with other labors, and all contingent expenses; and these being paid, there is no just ground for any further price or compensation. If an acre in that city would make a desirable home for a nabob, he should give for it only as much of his own labor as it has cost. If some other one wishes to possess it after the nabob has fixed his mind upon it and nefter if to any other situation, he can equito possess it after the nabob has fixed his mind upon it, and prefers it to any other situation, he can equi-lably consider what would compensate him for the cost or sacrifice he might incur in parting with it; but he cannot equitably have any reference to the eaks of the lot to the applicant, or what he might artori from the "demand" or necessities of the pur-cheser.

Thus far, then, we have found no equitable ground of price, except labor, or costs incurred.

THE BEVIVAL MOVEMENT IN SCOTLAND AND THE REV. GEORGE GILFILLAN.

As a result of the visit to Scotland of Messre, Moody and Sankey, the famous "American revival-ists" great religious excitement has, for upwards of six months, prevailed in that country. The culmi-nating point of this so-called "revival movement," ist," great religious excitement has, for upwards of six months, prevailed in that country. The culmi-nating point of this so-called "revival movement," however, seems to have been reached during the carly part of March, when an address, signed by about two hundred ministers of various denomina-tions, was issued for the purpose of calling upon the receiptents thereof to participate in a proposed week of nuited prayer on behalf of the young men of Scot-land. This address (which was of considerable length) was somewhat peculiar in its phraseology, and contained not a few absurdities. It commenced with these words: "The Lord has visited the land. What shall we render to Him for His mercy? He has grationaly rebuked the scepticism of the age and given token that, of a truth, He is the answerer of prayer." An enumeration, from a believer's stand-point, of the leading features of the movement was given as proof that (to quote the words of the address) "the efficacy of the heavenly influence has been evinced," and this was followed by these remarks: "Surely, it is matter for glowing thankfulness to min-ister, office-bearers in churches, parents and Chris-tian philanthropists, that such a glorious tidd in the direction of our dear young men has set in. Is it not the part of true wisdom to make the most of the pres-ent oportunity?" It then stated that, "amongst other arpedients," it had been "suggested by our brethen from America, who have so lovingly, un-sparingly, and successfully labored amongst us, that a united cry should go up from congregations and families for a migby blessing to come down on the young men, not of one city alone, but of all Scot-land." The importance of "believingly turning the golden hour to best account." was urged, said the ad-dress, by "the beneficial effects to be looked for, from "--amongst other things-"the Christianization of society at large," and "the evangelization of the world by the life and service of Scottish merchants, "gnineer, planters, artisans, fararers, soldiers, se of society at large," and "the evangelization of the synchesization of the synches in the synchesizatis is the synches in the synches in the synches in the sync lieve they have showed more sense than many of their satellites, I decidedly disapprove of the general sys-tem they have followed, and look upon the results they have produced, as I did upon those of their pre-decessors, with very little faith or expectation, and I am not alone, by hundreds of Scotch ministers I know, in thinking so. I believe every one who did not ap-prove of their measure has to signify the same by let-ter, else allence might have implied consent-I have seted on this hint, although some have thought it an attempt to ateal a march upon all Scotland." It remains to be seen what action, if any, the Rev. genteman's preabytery, or sect, will take in the mat-ter of such suspicious utterances; but that the odium theologicum has been invoked by the revivalists may be inferred from the report of an evangelical meeting conducted by Messre. Dunn and Scrogie. Accord-ing to the Harwich Express, Mr. Scroggie said, speak-ing of Mr. Gilfillan :-"If there was any one dared to express differ-ent views [from those of Mr. Gilfillan], no one would be more ready to resent such an insult." W. B. G.

W. B. G. LIBERALISM-HOW TO SPREAD IT.

ST. JOSEPH, Mo., May 5, 1874.

ST. JOSEPH, Mo., May 5, 1874. ME. F. E. ABBOT: Dear Six, --After finishing reading Mr. Stevens' very satisfactory address on "Free Religion" in last week's INDEX, I could not but think with regret of the very limited circulation and influence of such noble and elevating opinions, especially in view of the fact that thousands are hungry, yes, suffering, for just such food, who have escaped from the pale of Ortho-dox, but who have not gained manhood enough to avow their opposition to its tyranny; who dare not place themselves on record as heretics. For example, in this township there is a population of some three thousand; and I know that not more than one-half are in the habit of attending church, and many that do are freethinkers; yet such is the in-fluence of the Church that very few could be induced to sustain such a paper as THE INDEX. Nor do I be-liver that this locality is peculiar. To meet the cases of such-to train or educate them in independence, -it seems to me it would be wise in our liberal writers to make use of our independent journals having large circulations-cas much as pos-sible auch as the New York Tribune, Chicago Tribune, and Times, New York World, etc., etc. The paper above mentioned publish the sermons of the most liberal preachers, as well as others, weekly. They offer a fine field for the criticisms of Liberals. MR. F. E. ABBOT:

weekly.

weekly. They offer a fine field for the criticisms of Liberals, and one, if possible, that should be reaped. If the anti-Christian sentiment of our people of all shades-of opinion were fully known, and the holders thereof could be counted, in my opinion it would astonish Liberals almost as much as it would the Obucch

INSPIBATION.

EDITOR OF THE INDEX: Dear Sir,-Will you permit me to make one single remark on Mr. Hoover's letter in your issue of 30th April? Inspiration, though claimed for the histori-cal writers of the Old and New Testaments, is not claimed by even one of them. To the truthful historian, inspiration is superflu-ous since it cannot make truth more true, or window

To the truthful historian, inspiration is superflu-ous, since it cannot make truth more true, or wisdom more wise; and it is useless to the untruthful histori-san, as it cannot change fiction into fact, folly into wisdom. The introduction of the absurd, the mar-vellous, the improbable, is primd-facie evidence against historical veracity; hence the claim for his-torical inspiration is an ingenious invention to en-sure belief in the absurd, the foolish, the incredible, —none of which can have been "inspired" by divine wisdom and truth. D. E. DS L. P.S.—Neither the writings of the prophets nor the epistles are historical.

DO THEY BELIEVE IT?

EDITOR OF THE INDEX :-

EDITOR OF THE INDEX:-I clip the following from a report of the articles adopted at the meeting of the ministers of the Evan-gelical Ministers' Association of Boston:-"Art. 2. The doctrinal basis of this Association is the broad, historical, evangelical, catholic ground, which has been occupied by all vital Christians from the beginning; embracing the belief in the Divine Human Person and the Atoning Work of Our Lord ad Saviour Jesus Christ, and the personality, and the regenerating and sanctifying offices of the Holy Spirit, as the only source of salvation, and the centre of all true Christian union and fellowship." This plainly means a belief in the doctrines of the trinity and of the Atonement, and also in the doc-trine that no one, unless he believes in them, can be saved. The commonly received idea of salvation is that of eternal future bappiness; the lack of such salvation, the eternal misery of human beinge. Nor W wish to ask, Do they bruity believe all that their words imply? Do they believe that the larger much lass believed, these doctrin es, are to be eternally miserable? Do they believe that the larger much as believed, these doctrin es, are to be eternally miserable? Do they believe that the barden, some to eternal punishment? The the Old South Church Covenant, there is, or was a few years ago (the statement was made recently by one of their number that their platform had not been changed for two hundred years), a phrase of this im-port: "The children of elect parents may be saved." Do they believe, as this phrase would seem to imply, that the largest part of those who die in infancy are forever miserable? If they believe in an eternal hell for infants and heathen, let them say so plainly. But if they believe that heaven and hell are condi-tions of the mind, and that the uncouverted heathen and others may never attain to that degree of good-ness and happiness that others more privileged may reach, is it honest or truthful to use such phrases as are used to express their belief? HONESTY.

THE EMPEROR JULIAN.

<text><section-header><text>

MORE "HORSE-CAR RELIGION."

NEW YORK, March 26, 1874.

New York, March 26, 1874. DEAR MR. ABOT:-I sent you a while since a tract handed me by a printed in THE INDEX. Yesterday he gave me an-other. The person who thus goes about doing good, as he thinks, lives in a neighboring town, but has business in New York, and always carries these tracts with him. He buys them himself, and, wherever he goes, takes up his cross and tries to save souls. I talked with him a little yesterday. He is terribly in earnest. He believes every word he says. I asked him if he believed that those who did not take Christ as a Savior would go to hell eternally; and he said emphatically, "I do." I asked him if he thought he could ever enjoy the delight of heaven while any dear companion, as good perbaps as he, was bolling and baking and suffocating in the sulphurous pit; and he avaid through the battements of hell, help to put the fire, and set loose the victims. He thought me a poor, deluded sinner. M. L. H.

WHERE ARE OUR DOMESTIC PORTS?—Here is a theme which they have strangely neglected,—one on which the tears flow faster than the verses. On one of those bitter cold sunsets, last week, little four-year-old got leave of mother to go towards the woods and meet his father, who was chopping. Father took another route home, and little four-year-old wandered on into the darkness. Bitter, bitter cold! Father at once turned back to the woods. Forty neighbors promptly took pity and started too. That was a night to be remembered. Warm hearts, but all else as cold as death. Now a cheery shout of strong men, and again all silent as the grave. Here and there a torch, and the shadow on the snow of a grim old pine; the rest all black. Help never reached the little fellow silve. Discouraged at calling his father so long with-out an answer,—tired, lonesome, and drowsy with-out an answer,—tired, lonesome, and drowsy with-out an answer,—tired, sone to sleep forever,— Transcript. Transcript.

"WHERE ARE YOU going?" said a young gentle-man to an elderly one in a white cravat, whom he overtook a few miles from Litle Rock. "I am going to heaven, my son. I have been on the way eighteen years." "Well, good-by, old fellow; if you have been traveling toward heaven eighteen years, and got no nearer to it than Arkansas, I'll take another route!"

TH

of the fully so will be with its mediur its pat

or "blu

tisemento be fi

Tas l will in i

Advertisements.	GOOD PHOTOGRAPHS	1
LE PATRONAGE	LEADING INDEX WRITERS. Including	5.5
liberal advertising public is respect- olicited for THE INDEX. The attempt a honestly made to keep the advertis-	T W FIGONSON	A ges of THE INDEX in entire harmony s general character and principles, and o furnish to the public an advertising	and the second of the second sec	182
m which shall be not only profitable to rons, but also worthy of their most us support. To this end, all improper	F. W. NEWMAN,	FR
nd" advertisements, all quack adver- nts, and all advertisements believed raudulent or unjust to any one, will be	A. W. STEVENS, ed from these columns. No cuts will litted. INDEX must not be held responsible	F. E. ABBOT, Are now for sale at the office of THE INDEX,	INDI
v statement made by advertisers, who all cases accept the responsibility for wn statements.	and will be mailed postpaid to any address on receipt of price. Single Photographs, 25 cants each; complete Set of Eight Photo-	No
ADVERTISING RATES.	graphs, $1.50.
to 12 Insertions, 10c per line. 1 25 11 10 10 10 10 10 10 10 10 10 10 10 10	Address, THE INDEX, No. 1 Tremont Place, Boston, Mass.	FRA

NDEX TRACTS. I

On half-column advertisements, a discount of 10 per cent. will be made; on full-column advertisements, a discount of 25 per cent. On all advertisements for which cash is paid in advance, a further discount of 25 per cent. on the total, as above calculated, will be made. FRANCIS E. ABBOT, Editor.

CIRCULATE ! Circulate ! ! Circu-late TROSE PETITIONS. Don't feel satis-fied when your petition is a yard long, unless you have asked every one to sign it. Get good, influ-ential names.

GET EVERYBODY.

Don't neglect to show the petition to any one, ecause he is a stockholder in some church, or ther exampled property as many such persons finit the justice of the demand; and those who ill not should be made to take the responsibility admit the band be made to take the set will not should be made to take the of refusing to sign it. Don't delay! We want the petitions return Don't delay!

Per order of EXEC. COMM. of the BOSTON LIBERAL LEAGUE.

CULTURED FREE THOUGHT.

The Index Association,

OFFICE, NO. 1 TREMONT PL., BOSTON, sen organized with a capital stock fixed at ONE HUNDRED THOUSAND dollars, for the purpose of publishing Tracts, Books, and

THE INDEX.

A Weekly Paper devoted to Free and Rational Religion.

It is the object of THE INDEX to give public attelance to the boldest, most cultivated, and best matured thought of the age on all religious questions, and to apply it directly to the social ad political amelioration of society.

It is edited by FRANCISE. ABBOT, assisted by ABRAM W. STEVENS, with the following list of Editorial Contributors :-

O. B. PROTHINGHAM, New York City. THOMAS W. HIGGINSON, Newport, R.I. WILLIAM J. POTTER, New Bedford, Mass. WILLIAM H. SPENCER, Haverhul, Mass. RICHARD P. HALLOWELL, Boston, Mass. MRS. E. D. CHENEY, Jamaica Plain, Mass. REV. CHARLES VOYSEY, London, England.

PROF. FRANCIS W. NEWMAN, London, Eng. Every liberal should subscribe for THE INDEX. as the best popular exponent of Religious Liberalism. Every Christian minister, and every thinking church-member, should subscribe for it, as the clearest, most candid, and most scholarly exposition of the differences between Free Thought and Evangelical Christianity, and as the best means of becoming well informed of the arguments and the movements which the Church will have to meet in the future.

Almost every number contains a discourse or leading article, which alone is worth the price of one year's subscription.

Prof. MAX MUELLER, of Oxford, England, in a letter to the Editor published in THE INDEX for January 4, 1973, says: "That the want of a Journal entirely devoted to Beligiou in the wides eense of the word should be felt in America-that such a journal should have been started and so powerfully supported by the best minds of your country,-is a good sign of the times. There is no such journal in England, France, or Germany; though the number of so-called religious or theological periodicals is, as you know, very large." And istor still: "I read the numbers of your IN-DEX with increasing interest."

Send $3.00 for one year, or 75 cents for three months on trial.

Address

No. I Tremont Place, Bort

THE INDET

No. 1.-Truihs for the Times, by F. E. Abbot, contains the "Fifty Affirmations" and "Modern Principles." MR. CHARLES DARWIN, author of "The Origin of Species," says, in a letter to the editor not orig-inally intended for publication, but subsequently authorized to be used : "I have not quentity authorized to be used: "I nave now read "TRUTHS FOR THE TIMES, and I admire them from my inmost heart; and I agree to almost every word." New Edition. Price 16 cents; 12 copies $1.00.

to. 1.-Fear of the Living God, by 0. B. Frothingham, exposes the debasing char-acter of the popular notions of God, and presents conceptions of him that are worthy of the nineteenth century. New Edi-tion. Price 5 cents; 12 copies 50 cents.

No. 3.- Lecture on the Bible, by the Rev. Charles Voysey, of England, is an over-whelming demonstration of the imperfections and errors of the Bible, both in the Old and the New Testaments. New Edition. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00.

No. 4.-Christian Propagandism, by P. E. Abbot, is an exposure of the weakness costliness, and inefficiency of the System of Foreign Missions. Full of Figures, Faci and Interesting Extracts. Price 10 cent 12 copies $1.00. s. Racts

No. 5.-"God in the Constitution," by Rev. Arthur B. Bradford, opposes the pro-posed Theological Amendment to the Unit-ed States Constitution. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00.

No. 6.-""The Sabbath," by Parker Pills-bury, denounces Sabbatarian superstition. New Edition. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00.

to. 7.-""Compulsory Education," by F. E. Abbot, maintains the right of every child to be educated, and the duty of the State to ensure it an education. Price 5 No. 7.cents; 12 copies 50 cents.

No. 8.-The Present Heaven, by O. B. Frothingham, treats of a subject that interests everybody. New Edition. Price 5 cents; 12 copies 50 cents.

No. 9.-The Christian Amendment, by W. S. - The Universitian Amendment, by F. E. Abbot, shows the dangerous charac-ter of the attempt to interpolate the Evan-gelical Christian Creed in the U. S. Consti-tution. Price 5 cents; 12 copies 60 cents.

No. 10 .- The Impeachment of Christi (o. 10.—The imposed means of Unitar-anity, by F.E. Abbot. Fourth Ten Thou-sand. Sent for free distribution to any one who will distribute it, in packages of from five to one hundred copies.

No 11 .- The God of Science, by F. E. Ab-bot, attempts to show the real influence of modern science upon the ides of God. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00.

No. 12.-Is Romanism Real Christianity? Two essays by Francis W. Newman and F. E. Abbot. Price 10 cents; 12 copier $1.00.

No. 13.-On the Vision of Heaven, by Prof. F. W. Newman, of England, analyzes the Christian conception of Heaven. Price 5 cents; 12 copies 50 cents.

No. 14. - A Study of Religion: The Name and the Thing, by F. E. Abbot, attempts to show that the popular deriva-tion of the word Religion is incorrect; that the popular conceptions of Religion itself are inadequate; and that a new conception of it, based on the Law of Evolution, con-sistent with absolute Freedom of Thought, and independent even of belief in God, is the necessary condition of the perpetuity of Religion among men. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00. Address THE INDEX, 1 TREMONT PLACE,

Roston, Mass.

EX ASSOCIATION, AT

> nt Ph e, Boston . 1 Tren RDITOR:

ANCIS ELLINGWOOD ABBOT. ASSOCIATE EDITOR: ABRAM WALTER STEVENS.

EDITORIAL CONTRIBUTORS:

O. B. FROTHINGHAM, New York City. T. W. HIGGINSON, Newport, R.I.

W. J. POTTER, New Bedford, Mass.

R. P. HALLOWELL, Boston, Mass.

MRS. E. D. CHENEY, Jamaica Plain, Mass

F. W. NEWMAN, England. CHARLES VOYSEY, England.

THE INDEX alma-

To increase general intelligence with respe to religion :

To foster a nobler spirit and quicken a higher purpose, both in society and in the indi-vidual:

To substitute knowledge for ignorance, right for wrong, truth for superstition, freedom for slavery, character for creed, catholicity for bigotry, love for hate, humanitarianism for sectarianism, devotion to universal ends for absorption in selfish schemes.

In brief, to hasten the day when Free Relign prior, to masten the day when sree Helig-ion shall take the place of dogmatism and ecclesisaticism throughout the world, and when the welfare of humanity here and now shall be the aim of all private and public activities.

In addition to its general objects, the pr tical object to which THE INDEX is speci ly devoted is the ORGANIZATION OF THE LIBERALS OF THE COUNTRY, for th o pur pose of securing the more complete and con-sistent secularization of the political and edacational institutions of the United Stat The Church must give place to the Republic in the affections of the people. The last vestiges of ecclesiastical control must be wiped out of the Constitutions and Statutes of the several States in order to bring then into harmony with the National Constitution To accomplish this object, the Liberals must make a united demand, and present an un-broken front, and the chief practical aim of THE INDEX will be henceforth to organize a great NATIONAL PARTY OF FREEDOM Let every one who believes in this movement give it direct aid by helping to increase the circulation of THE INDEX.

SPECIAL FRATURES.

The publication of a valuable leading pa per or easay of a thoughtful character, in such issue, will continue to be one of the most marked features of THE INDEX.

Regular editorial contributions will con-inue to be furnished by the well-known sminent writers who have already done so much to give to THE INDEX its present high po-sition. Mr. Voysky has kindly consented to furnish every fortnight a LONDON LETTER containing matters of general interest to rad-leal readers. Other interesting correspond-ence, communications, extracts from valuable books and periodicals, and miscellaneous articles, will also be published; and such improvements will be made from time as circumstances shall render possible.

AGENTS.

Local Agents for THE INDEX are wanted in every city and town throughout the coun-try. The most liberal terms are offered.

TERMS.

The price of THE INDEX is Three Dol. lars a year, payable in advance; and at the same rate for shorter periods. All remittances of money must be at the sender's risk, unless forwarded by cheque, registered letwith address in full, must be accompanied with the money in each case. Address

THE INDEX, No. 1 Tremont Place, Boston.

PUBLICATIONS.

OF THE

FREE

RELIGIOUS

ASSOCIATION.

Report of the Addresses and other Proceedings of the Original Meet-ing in 1867, at which the Pree Beligious Association was Organ-ized. Containing addresses by 0. B Froth-ingham, Henry Bianchard, Luoretia Mott Robert Dale Owen, John Weiss, Oliver Johnion, F. E. Abbot, D. A. Wasson, T. W. Hig-ginson, and Ralph Waldo Emerson.

(This pamphlet has not been ou sale for a number of years, and many persons who have all of the Annual Beports succeeding do not s this.) Price 50 cents seedings of Second Annual Meet-Julia Ward Howe on "Freedom and Re-straint in Religion," and by David A. Wasson on "The Relation of Social Science to Religion," and speeches by O. B. Frothing-ham, Jesse H. Jones, F. E. Abbot, Wm. Denton, R. W. Emerson, Mary Grew, C. A. Bar-tol, A. M. Powell, H. B. Blackwell, Bowland Connor, Lucy Stone, Horace Beaver, and others; with an appendix on "Outlines of Judaism" by Rabbi Wise.

Proceedings of Third Annual Meet-ing, 1870. 50 cents. Contains essays by O. B. Frothingham on the "Idea of the by O. B. Frothingham on the "Idea of the Free Religious Association," followed by addresses by D. A. Wasson on "The Nature of Religion," by Mrs. E. D. Cheney on "Re-ligion as a Social Force, especially in rela-tion to Philanthropy and Beform," and by F. E. Abbot on "The Future of Beligious Organization as affectant by the Societ of Organization, as affected by the Spirit of "The Age;" an essay by Samuel Johnson on "The Natural Sympathy of Religions," fol-lowed by Babbi Wise on "The Permanent and Progressive Elements of Judaism," by T. W. Higginson on "Mohammedaniam," by Wm. H. Channing on "The Beligions of China," and Wm. J. Potier on "Religion Old and New in India;" also abstract of a discussion on "The Bible in the Public Schools," by Thos. Vickers, S. R. Calthrop, Rabbi Wise, and others.

Proceedings of Fifth Annual Meet-ing, 1872. Stents. (Four or more, St cents each.) Contains essays by J. W. Chadwick on "Liberty and the Church is America," by C. D. B. Mills on "Religion as the Expression of A Demonstration of Contents the Expression of a Permanent Sentiment of the Human Mind," and by O. B. Frothingham on "The Beligion of Humanity," with addresses by Rowland Connor, Cella Burleigh, Lucretia Mott, A. B. Alcott, C. A. Bartol, Horace Seaver, Alexander Loos, and others.

Proceedings of Sixth Annual Meet-ing, 1873. Steents. (Four or more, St cents each.) Contains essays by Samuel Johnson on "Freedom in Religion," and by John Weiss on "Religion in Freedom," addresses by Wm. C. Gunnett, Robert Dale Owen, T. W. Higginson, Samuel Longfel-low, J. S. Thomson, F. E. Abbot, and Lulow, J. S. Thom cretia Mott.

Sympathy of Beligions, by T. W. Hig-ginson. 25 cents.

Religions of China, by Wm. H. Channing, 25 cents.

Beason and Revelation, by William J. Potter. 10 cents.

Taxation of Church Property, by Jas. Parton. 10 cents, singly; package of ten, 80 cents; of one hundred, $5.

These publications are for sale at the office of the Free Religious Association, No. 1 Tremont Place, Boston. The Annual Reports for 1868 and 1871 cannot be supplied, and the supply of others previous to that of 1872 is quite limited. Orders by mail may be addressed either "Free Religious Association, No. 1 Tremont Place, Boston," or to the Secretary, New Bedford, Mass.

WM. J. POTTER, Sec. F. R. A.

THE INDEX-MAY 28, 1874.

263

1.60

tus to Charlemagne. 2 vols ..... 6.00

TAINE'S (H. A.) History of English Litera-ture, 2 vola The Ulass-Room Taine, History of English Literature, Abridged and Edited by John Fister. 2.0 TENNYSON'S (ALFRED) Poems ...... 1.76

TRACKERATS (W.M.) Novels, Household Edition. Complete in 6 volumes. Per vol., 1.25 Vanity Fair. The Newcomes. Adventures of Philip. Pendemis.

4,00 1,50 1,50 2,00 2,00

1.25

.78

- 1.50

2.50 1.25 1.25 1.50 2.25 1.0

1.50

4.50

9.50

6.00

vol. 1.25

The virginians. Expond, and Lovel the Widower. Miscellanceous Writings. Honeshold Edi-tion. Uniform with the Novels. Com-plete in 3 vols. With new Portrait. Per vol. plete in 3 vols. With new Portrait. Per vol. puctod D vola. With new Portrait. Per vol. 1.22 This edition includes all the matter in the lat-t English editions, with many additions, thus aking it, with the noreins, the chaspest and most majories Thackery in the market. 1 Barry Lyndon, Hoggarty Diamond, &c. 8 Snobe, Stertchea, Denis Duval, &c. 4. Pour Georges, Humorias, &c. 5. Catherine, Christmas Books, and Uure-printed Pieces.

K I	printed Pieces.
1	THAXTER'S (MRS. CELIA) Among the Isles of Shoals	1.59
	Letters A Yankee in Canada A Week on the Concord and Merrimac	2.00 2.00 2.00 2.00
	TYLOR (EDWARD B.) The Early Ristory of Mankind Frimitive Culture. 2 vols	1.50
	TYNDALL (JOHN). Paraday as a Discov- erer. Fragments of Science for Unscientific Peo-	1.00
2000	piet and Electricity Hours of Exercise in the Alpe Heat as a Mode of Motion. On Sound Eadlant Heat. Forms of Water Lectures on Light Proceedings at the Farewell Eauquet to Frof. Ty dokall.	2.00 2.00 5.00 1.50 1.00 5.00
2	VOY3EY (REV. CHARLES.) The Bling and the Stone. Vols. I. and V., each. Vols III. IV. and V., each. The Voyeey Appeal. Voyeey's Defance at York	1.00 1.75 .50
2	WARNER'S (CHARLES D.) My Summer in a Garden. Sannteringe Back-Log Studies. WEISS (JOHN.) American Bellgion Life of Theodore Parker. 2 vols	1.00 1.50 2.00
2	WHIPPLE'S (E. P.) Literature and Life Enarys and Raviewa. Character and Characteristic Men The Literature of the Age of Elizabeth. Success and its Conditions Washington and the Revolution	1.50 3.00 1.50 1.50
2	WHITNEY'S (Mns. A. D. T.) A Summer in Leelle Goldhwalte's Life	1.50
1	WHITTIEE'S (JOHN G.) Poems. 2 vols	6.00

ADDR. BBB:

I Tremont Place, Boston. A FEW COPIES ONLY Of an excellent Photograph (Cubinet Size) of Rev. MUNCURE D. CONWAY, of London, can be had at the office of THE INDEX. Price 50 cents.

THE REFORMATOR.

A WEERLY JOURNAL,

For the dissemination of useful knowledge, and the chlightenment of the people on political, religious, and so-cial subjects, with a view to reform,

Published in the German language ev-ory Saturday, at Adrian, Mith.

Principal offices at Adrian, Mich., to which di letters and communications must be ad-iressed. au

C. LOHMANN & SON, Pub's. C. LOHMANN, EDITOR.

The REFORMATOR circulates in all the principal cities and villages in the United States and Territories, and presents an excellent medium for advertising.

Terms of Subscription-$2 per annum. Ad-vertisements inserted at liberal rates. Subscription and advertisements must be paid in advance.

AT PUBLISHERS' PRICES!

POPULAR BOOKS

SENT BY MAIL

ORDERS PROMPTLY FILLED.

OBTAINABLE BOOK that may be desired, will be forwarded as promptly as possible on receipt

3.00

1.50
1.50
1.50
1.00
1.00
1.00
1.76

2.00

1.75

2.00

.50

.50

.25

2.50

SO EXTRA CHARGE FOR POSTAGE. ANY BOOK in the subjoined List, or any other of orders accompanied with the CASH. Orders are respectfully solicited fro all friends of THE INDEX. ALCOTT (LOUISA M), Little Women, Two vola Rospital Biotches and Camp and Fireside Biories An Oid-Fashioned Giri Bories An Old-Pashloned Girl. Little Men. My Boys, &c. Shawl-Straps. Work: A Story of Experience. ARABIAN NIGHTS' ENTERTAINMENTS. 1.50 ABNOLD'S (MATTHEW) Essays in Criti-New Poems.... Literature and Dogma..... BACON'S Emsays ..... 1.00 BAIN (ALEXANDER). Mental Science: A Compendium of Psychology and History of Philosophy-Moral Science: A Compedidum of Ethics. BABTLETT'S Familiar Quotations ...... 2.00 BASTIAN (H. CHARLTON), The Beginmage of Late. 1 7058. BIBLE in the Public Schools. Besoris, Arguments, and Deckson in the ease of John D. Minor et al. es. the Board of Education of the oily of Cincinnail: et al. in the Supreme Court of the City of Cincinnail. Cincinnal: An analytic court of she biry of Arguments of Ramoy, Sage and King in favor of the use of the Bibr and Matheve Arguments as of the Bibr and Matheve The Opinion and Declaion of the Supreme Court of Ohie in the above case BROOKS' (CHARLES T.) Translations. The Layman's Breviary..... The World-Priest The Tall Student..... ..... BUCHNER'S Force and Matter ..... BUCKLE (HENRY THOMAS). History of Gviliantion in England and France, Spain and Scotlaud. New edition of the entire work, with a complete index. 2 vols..... BUCELE'S Essays; with a Biography of the Author. Fine portrait. Author. Fine portrail. GAELYLE'S Works. Cheap odition. Compris-ing the following: Miccellaneous Essays, 7 rols.; French Revolution. 3 wein.; Factors, Sc., 3 vois.; Sartor Henaritus, 1 voi.; John Storing, 1 voi.; Lafo of Schiller, i voi.; Pact and Freest, 1 voi.; Heroes and Hero Wor-ship, 1 voi.; Latter Day Pamphiets, 1 voi. Any volume sold separately. 31 vois. Lon-don, 151-3. Per voi CHANNING (WM. ELLERY, D.D). The Per-fect Life. In Twelve Discourses. Edited from his manuscripts by his nephew, Wm. Heury Channing. CHANNING (WM. ELLERY). Thorean: The Post Naturalist. With Memorial Verse. 2.00 District of resultance. With a common a version and of the second CLARKE (JAMES FREEMAN). Ten Great

3.00 on-Seuse in Religion..... CLARKE (Dr. E. H.) Sex in Education ...... 1.25

CLODD (EDWARD). The Childhood of the World .75

OOBBE (PBANCES FOWER). Studies Na-and Oil, of Ethical and Social Subject Darwiniam in Morals, and other Essays.... The Beligious Demands of the Age..... CONWAY (MONCURE D.) The Earthward

LEWES Physiology of Common Life, 2 rols, 160 Biographical History of Philosophy, from its Origin in Greece down to the Present Day, 7 rols. Problems of Life and Mind. The Founds-tions of a Creed. Comprising-Adam Bode. Adam Bede, Bomola. The Mill on the Floss, Feltz Holt. Silas Marner and Scenes of Cierical Life. The Same. Library Edition. 2 vols..... Middlemarch. 2 vols..... Middlemarch. 2 vols..... Middlemarch. 2 vols..... How Las Loved the King. LEWES (G. H.) The Story of Goothe's Life, 1.50 LEWIN (REV. RAPHAEL, D'C). What is Ju-daism ? or, a Few Words to the Jews...... 1.00 LONGFELLOW'S (H. W.) Poems. Portreit. 2 vols. Prose Works. Portrait. 4.00 LOWELL'S (J. B.) Posms. 2 vola ... The Biglow Papers. First Series... The Biglow Papers. Second Series Among uny Hooks... My Study Windows... How Liss Loved the King. CMERSON'S (E. W.) Essays. First Beries. Basays. Second Sories. Miscellanies. Espresentative Men. English Traits. Conduct of the Portrait. Manas. With Perfection Manas. With Perfection Manas. With Perfection Manas. With Perfection Manas. Blue and Gold Prose Works. 2 vols. Boclety and Solitude 2.00 LOWELL (Mns. A. C.) Postes for Children. .75 2.00 2.00 2.00 2.00 1.50 1.50 5.00 MACDONALD (GEORGE.) The Vicar's Daughter. 1.00 Boclety and Boundary EVANS (E. P., Ph. D). First Historical Transformations of Christianity. From the French of Athanase Coquerel, the Younger The Life and Works of Gotthoid Ephraim Lessing. Translated from the German of Adolf Beahr. 2 vols. Thoughts Selected from the Writings of Horace Mann 8.00 FABBAR'S Critical History of Free Thought, in reference to the Christian Religion...... 2.00 FEUERBACH (LUDWIG.) The Essence of Christianity. "George Ellot's" translation. 3.00 FISEE'S (JOHN) Myths and Myth-Makers. 2.00 MAURICE (REV. F. D.) The Ground and Object of Hope for Mankind BOTHINGHAM (O. B.) Beligion of Hu-MERIVALE'S (CHABLES) Conversion of the Roman Empire. Conversion of the Northern Nations..... manity Bellefs of the Unballevers ... Child's Book of Raligion .... Life of Theodors Parker.... 1.30 .21 tion.... The Subjection of Women... Beasay on Liberty. Representative Government. Autobiography. Memorial Volume. His Life and Works... Creed of Christendom 9,00 2.00 1.25 GROTE'S LIFE. Compiled from Family Doo-uments, Private Memoranda, and Original Letters to and from Various Friends. By Man, Grote. Second Edition. With Por-MOULTON (LOUISE CHANDLER.) Bed-HAMEBTON (PHILIP G.) A Painter's Camp. Book I. In England. Book II. In Socialad. Book II. In France. Thoughts about Art. The Unknown River. The Intellectual Mfs. Chapters on Animals. Multicle (MAX, M.A.) Lectures on the Science of Language. First Bories. The Samo. Second Series. Chips from a German Workshop. Vol. L. Exasys on the Science of Relifyon, Vol. II. Zessys on Mythology, Traditions, and Customa. Vol. III. Zessys on Lit-ersture, Biography and Antiquities. Three vol., Frice per volume. Lectures on the Science of Religion..... 2.00 6.00 2.00 8.00 HAMILTON (GAIL). Child World. Part Seo 1.00 (ASBY (PETROLEUM V). Swingin' Round the Cirkle 3.50 Exceed from Restury. DEWMAN (FRANCIS W.) & History of the Hebraw Monarchy. Phases of Faith; or, l'assages from the History of my Greed. The Soul, its Sorrow and its Aspirations. Catholic Union: Exasys towards a Church of the Future. as the Organization of of the Future. The Soul (Jourse Sections of Frotestantism. Against Hero-Making in Bellgion. AWTHORNE'S (NATHANIEL) Works New Illustrated Library Edition. Nine vola er vol. Twice-Told Takes. Mosses from so Oid Manse. The Scarlet Letter, and The Blithedale Romance. Romance. The Scarlot Letter, and The Buttern Romance. The House of the Seven Gables, and The Snow Image. The Marile Faun. The Kinglish Note-Books. The American Note-Books. The American Note-Books. The American Note-Books. The Prench and Italian Note-Books. Our Old Home, and Septimiza Felton. BIGGINSON'S (T. W.) Out-Door Papers ... Malbone, An Oldport Romance..... Army Life in a Black Regiment Atlantic Exessys. Oldport Days ..... 1.50 2.00 2.00 2.00 2.00 1.50 HUGO'S (V.) New Novel, " 'Ninety-Three",, 1.75 INGELOW'S (JEAN) Prose. Off the Skel-Norman Starting Starting Child, First and Second Series and Second Secon 1.75 1.25 JERROLD (DOUGLAS). Fireside Saints, Mr. Claude's Breakfust Talk, and other Papers. 1.50 JOHNSON'S (SAMULL) Oriental Beligions, and their Relation to Universal Religion. India JOWETT, The Dialognes of Plato. Trans. KERR (ORPHEUS C). Versatilities, Poems, Patriotic, Sentimental and Humprous..... 2.00 LECKY (W. E. H.) History of the Rise and Influence of the Spirit of Rationalism in Europe, 2 vols. History of European Morals from Augus-

13 THE INDEX, 1.50 .60 PARSONS (THEOPHILUS.) The Infinite 1.00 and the finite HELPS'S (ELIZABETH STUART.) The Guide Alar. The Toticy Book Mon, Wonien, and Ghosts Horiged in The Stient Partner. What to Wearf.

from Kentucky.....

PROCTER'S (ADELAIDE A.) Poems, Por-trait, Calduct Edition. 2.00 ROSSETTI (CHRISTINA G.) A Shadow of Scretlern (H.) Spectrum Analysis, in its Application to Terrestrial Substances, and the Physical Constitution of the Heavenly Bodies.

- 54

SCOTT'S (THOMAS) The English Life of Jeaus. Second Edition 9.00 SMILES'S (SAMUEL.) Self-Help ..... 1.30

SPENCER (HERBERT.) Education, Intel-lectual, Moral, and Physical.

2.50

BPINOZA (RENEDICT DE.) Tractatus The-

2.50 2.00

Demoids Google

SPENCER (HERLIGHT, 1) Physical lectural, Morral, and Physical. Pirst Principles Distribution of Conversal Programs. A Se-lection of its hort Papers. Social Sufficies, or, The Conditions Essen-tial to Hurnan Happiness Specified, and the Up to f them heveloped. The Principles of Physical System. Philosophy of Siles. Science, Philosophy, and Borals. Now and enlarged edition. Socials Sufficience Physical Systems and Borals. Now and enlarged edition. 4.00

ond Child World. Part First...... HAMILTON'S Lectures. 1. Metaphysical Lectures ....... 2. Logical Lectures ......

80

NONPAREIL Farm Feed, Bone, u, and Hand-grinding MILLS. Ten Also Cotton-Seed Hullers. Illustrat-phiets free. Address J. SEDGEBEER, Painesville, Ohio. Ais 81 od pamph CHEAP OFFERI A A COMPLETE SET of INDEX TRACTS, from No. 1 to 14 inclusive, will be malled i any address on the prepayment of 75 oznra.

THE INDEX, Address No. 1 Tremont Place, Boston, Mass

No. 1 Tremont Place, Boston, Muss Description, Muss 20 SAVED! FLOHENCE 1 of the FLOHENCE SEWING MACHINE CO. Graver & Baker Companies, involving over 253,000, is finally decided by the Supreme Court of the United States in favor of the FLOHENCE, which alone has Eroken the Monopoly of High Prices, THE NEW FLOHENCE is the ONLY machine that sews FLOHENCE, Chappes, Bost, Solid for cash only. Special terms to Clubs and bealers. FLORENCE, Mass., April, 1874.

THE AMERICAN EDITION OF

MONCURE D. CONWAT'S

SACRED ANTHOLOGY, A BOOK OF ETHNICAL SCRIPTURES, has just been published, and will be sen postpaid on receipt of the price, $4.00.

Address

THE INDEX. 1 TREMONT PLACE, Boston, Mass.

SAVE FIFTY DOLLARS!

THE NEW FLORENCE.

PRICE, $20 below | any other First-VALUE, $30 above | class Sew's Mach. SAVED, $50 by buying the Florence.

> Every machine warranted. Special terms to clubs and dealers. Send for circulars to the Florence S. M. Co., Florence, Man.

or TIS Washington Street, Boston, Mass.

METROPOLITAN

SERMONS, By prominent and popular preachers in New York and vicinity, among whom are: York and vicibity, among whom are: HENRY WARD BEECHER, Bey, Drs. WASHBUENE, FAIROHILD, CROBY, SOUDER, StURMS, CUYLES, StURMS, CUYLES, Bev, Dr. W. ADAMS (Farewill Sermon in full) CHAPIN, CUMMINS, SCHENCE, MCARTBUE, TAYLOH, POTTER, PATTON, HARBIS, FOS, DIX. Bev. Dr. W. & ADAMS (Farwell Sermon la fall) CHAPLN, CUMMINS, SUIRNOK, MOAREDE, TAYLON, POTTER, PATON, HABBIS, FOSS, DIX, Revs. O. B. FROTHINGRAM, J. W. CHADWICK, Archbishop MCCLOSKEY, Rabbi VIDAVER. W. A ALORE, JAMES FREMAN CLARKE, and othern, exceeding forty in all, are published in

THE TRIBUNE EXTRA, No. 17,

NOW READY. Price 10 cents; pamphlet form, 20 cents; 7 Tor $1. THE EVANGELICAL ALLIANCE, EXTR (32 DARMA) 25 CERTS.

pages), 25 cents. BEECHER'S YALE LECTURES (Nos. 6 and 7), 20 cents. The BROOKLYN CONGREGATIONAL COUNCIL

THE BROOKLYN CORDENSATION (No. 16), 10 cents. Thefive Extras named above to any address in the United States for 50 cents. Circulars giving full details of the contents of each Tribune Extra mailed free to any ad-dress. Address. THE TRIBUNE, New York.

DITSON & CO.'S

Home Musical Library. Price of each Book in Boards, $2.50; Cloth, $1; Full Gilt, $4.

MUSICAL TREASURE. Vocal. SILVER CHORD. Vocal. WREATH OF GEMS. Vocal. GEMS OF SACRED SONG. Vocal. GEMS OF GERMAN SONG. Vocal. GEMS OF GERMAN SONG. Vocal. OEMS OF SCOTTISH SONG. Vocal. OPERATIC FEARLS. Vocal. SHOWER OF FEARLS. Vocal Ducts. ORGAN AT HOME. Reed Organ Music, Instrumental. GEMS OF STRAUSS. Instrumental. HOME CIRCLE, VOL. I. Instrumental. HOME CIRCLE, VOL. II. Instrumental.

PIANIST'S ALBUM. Instrumental. PIANOFORTE GEMS. Instrumental.

Large, splendid books of bound music, two bundred to two hundred and fifty pages, full sheet music size, and contain a very large proportion of all the good sheet music ever published.

Sold by all dealers. Either book sent post-paid for retail price. OLIVER DITSON & CO.,

BOOTON.

I held at HOSPITALLER HALL, 583 Washing-ton Struct, Boston, every Sunday, at 10% A.M., 2% and 7% P.M. All inter relates to the Beligious, Folitcai, and Social interests of mankind consti-tute the subjects for discussion. This INDEX and Index Tracts are for sale every Sunday at Hospitalizer Hall.

THE BOUND INDEX FOR 1873

The bound volume of THE INDEX for 1873 (Volume 4) will be promptly forwarded to any address on receipt of $3, by express, at the purchaser's express. A complete file for the year can be farmished in no other form. Address THE INDEX, 1 Tremont Place, Boston.

CHARLES SUMNER

A fine likeness of Mussachusetts' great Sen ator, the copy of a recent Photograph by Black, is for sale at THE INNEX office, and will be sent by mail to any address on receip of the price-fifty cents. Address THE INDEX, 1 Tremont Place, Bosto

TO NEWSPAPER

PUBLISHERS.

Having conveniences for doing the best of newspaper printing at reasonable prices, 1 should like to contract for composition alone, or one or more weekly papers. Best of references given, and satisfactory work guaranteed. 7 Tremont Place, Boston.

TO BOOK-BUYERS.

Please examine the revised list of POPU-LAR BOOKS on the opposite side of this page. Any OBTAINABLE BOOK NOT IN THIS LIST will be furnished to order. Readers of THE INDEX who desire to pur-chase English, German, or French Books, on who wish for information as to the price, So., of any American or Foreign Book, can have their orders promptly filled and their inqui-ries answered by addressing THE INDEX, 1 Tremont Place, Boston.

BOUND VOLUMES OF THE

Bound volumes of THE INDEX for 1871, Bound volumes of THE INDEX for 1871, 1873, and 1873, will be sent by express (at the purchaser's expense) on receipt of $2.50, $2. of asch other; for the important essays and other articles they contain are of permanent interest, and will furnish as instructive read-ing twenty years hence as to-day. No more valuable present could be made to a friend struggling out of Orthodoxy than one of these volumes. Address THE INDEX,

Add	reas	1	Trer	nont	Place	, Bot	ston.	6
W	A	R	R	E	1	N	,	s
T	RUE		Ce 50			101	N.
PI	RACT	TIC.	AL	DI	ETA	IL	s,
	showl	ng th	e wo	rking	to a	the
C	0 8 1	P	RI	NC	IP	LE	÷.
For	ale by		ce 25	cente
s .	H		М	0	R	S	E	,
	35 B	omi	leid	8£.,	Bost	on.
B	U	8		т		0		F
	HEO		BY				R ,
	511	ME	YH	. m	1021	3.

Dignity, reversence, sweetness, vigor, equi-poise, breather through the clay; the artist has so filled his own heart with appreciation of that noble life that he has been able oun-ningly to mould it into those delicate lifnes which the character had wrought on the liy-ing fibre. We are tempted to exclain, as we stand beside it, as the old artist did to his perfected work, "Speak then!"-Hanwah K. Stevenson.

All the characteristics of my husband are in the bust,—bis greatness, his goodness, bis tenderness, his love. You cannot give life to clay or marble; but you can represent it, and this Mr. Morse has done.—Lydia D. Parker to Hannah E. Stevenson.

The eyes, though but of clay, are gleaning with possible indignation, with possible tears; the lips are set firm with the resolution of him who, like Paul, could "fights a good fight" as well as "give a reason."—Samuel Longfel-low.

The first time I have seen Theodore Parker since he died.-Wm. Sparrell.

The best representation of Mr. Parker ever xecuted in clay,-Boston Daily Globe.

The face is strong and noble as it should be The likeness is good—Boston Daily Advertiser Nothing appears for beauty alone, or finish, or to show the vanity of the artist. All is forgotten in the man-the true, real, Yankee man, Theodore Parker.-L. S. H. in the Golden

Copies of this Bust, finely finished a plas Copies of this Bust, uneity nuiseed a plas-ter, $10 each. Boxing for transportation, $1 extra. Freight or expressage paid by party sending order. Weight of box about fifty pounds. Orders may be sent to 8. H. MORSE,

Room 13, 25 Bromfield St., Boston, Mass.

FREE DISCUSSION BOSTON LIBERAL LEAGUE. Our organization some time since decided to diect its efforts for the present towards securing

Repeal of the Laws

whereby church and other corporate property is unjustly exempted from its share of the burder of taxation.

As a means to this end, we have publis general circulation several thousand copies of a on Church Exemption, being the article by Mr. Abbot which appeared in THE INDEE of Nov. 27. The adition was made as large as our fund would allow; but, so great has been the demand t is sirendy usarly exhausted. Our next edition ought to be large enough to place a copy in the hands of

TBACT

EVEBY VOTER IN THE STATE,

and generously to supply the calls for them in other States.

To do this, we need funds; for, alth neve made arrangements for printing the Tract at very low cost, it is impossible for the Boston League, with its various other expenses, to beau the entire expense alone. Will not then.

All Friends of the Movement

ome forward and help us with liberal donat We frequently receive com ications fro parties wishing tracts to distribute, asking bow much they shall pay. To such we reply that the cost to us is about $2.50 per thousand, and we shall be pleased to furnish them at this price per thousand, or 10 cents per hundred, to all who will circulate them. But all additional donations will be gratefully received for the purpose of circuating them gratuitonsly throughout the country. To many of the subscribers of THE INDEX and others whose names have been furnished us as probable friends of the movement, copies of the Tract, together with Petitions asking the re-

With the Hope

peal of the Exemption Laws, have been sent, that such friends will try to secure as many signatures to the petition as possible in their locality We respectfully ask those who are unable to attend to the matter themselves to place the petitions in the hands of those who will. Lot un

BOLL UP THE LIST!

Lat our united voices be heard! And let it be done NOW1

We would say, also that we feel deeply the

Other Organizations

in this State, to cooperate with us in securing equality and justice, by pressing the "Demands of Liberalism." If, in any locality, there are those who are inclined to

Form a Liberal League,

we are ready to render such assistance as lies in our power.

LIBERALSI

No. 9. If all will units and work, the results sought can be accomplished. Address

BOSTON LIBERAL LEAGUE.

NO. 1 TREMONT PLACE, BOSTON. Per order of the EXBOUTIVE COMMITTEE.

$25 per day guaranteed using our WELL AUGER and Drills. Catalogue W. W. GILES, St. Louis, Mo. L. HENDERSON & CO., G.

BANKERS,

LEROY, MINN.

Money invested on short time, or for a term of years, on unincumbered improved farms, at 12 per cect. Interest per anoun, payable semi-atnually. Perfect title ample security guaranteed. All expenses for abstract of title and recording morrage and abstract of title and recording morrage and by borrower. We collect and remain to any part of the United States free of charge.

BEFFERENCES. - First National Bank, Mo-Gregor, Iowa; First National Bank, Austin Minn: Miwaukee National Bank, Austin kee, Wis; City National Bank, Chicago, III., Allen, Stevens & Co., Bankers, New York City; Morris Altman.

REAL ESTATE SECURITIES, paying 6 to 16 per cent. interest, or Invasiments in Heal Estate in Chicago and vicinity, if judiciously made, are the best and safest modes of employing capital. The old

Real Estate and Loan Agency

ERNST PRUSSING, 143 RANDOLPH STREET Chicago (Established 1863),

Guarantees perfect title and ample security in all its Real Estate Loans. Firstclass securities always on hand. In-terest and principal collected without charge. Real Estate Investments made on commission or on shares; taxes paid, &c. Orders of capitalists and real estate own-ers respectfully solicited.

REASONS FOR USING THE

EUREKA SPOOL SILK.

It is full length. It is full size. It is smooth and elastic, and is equally adapted to hand or machine use.

Many kinds of apool silk are a pe fraud, being not only shorter in length, but a much finer size than they are represented to be, and of so poor a quality as to be unfit for use. The ladies will always find the Roreks Silk exactly as represented. Every spool is warranted, and the manufacturar's name indelibly branded on every spool. Call for It.

HALF-HOUR RECREATIONS

-18-

POPULAR SCIENCE. EDITED BY DANA INTES.

The growing demand in this coustry for books on popular science encourages the ed-itor and publishers to iasue this series of papers, compiled from the works of the most opular scientific writers.

25 cts. per Part; $2.50 for twelve consecutive Parts.

No.1. STRANGE DISCOVERIES RESPECTING THE

No. 2. THE CRANIAL APPINITIES OF MAR AND THE APE. By Prof. Rudolph Virobow, of Berlin, author of Cellular Pathology

No. 3. SPECTRUM ANALYSIS EXPLAINED, and its Uses to Science Illustrated. With a colored plate and several wood-cuts.

No. 4. SPROTRUM ANALYSIS DISCOVERIES, showing its Application in Microscopic Re-search, and to Discoveries of the Physical Constitution and Movements of the Heav-enly Bodies. From the works of Schellen, Young, Roscoe, Lockyer, Huggins, and oth-

No. 5. NEBULE, METBORIO SHOWERS, AND

No. 6. UNCONSCIOUS ACTION OF THE BRAD

No. 7. THE GEOLOGY OF THE STARS. By Prof. A. Winchell, of the University of Michigan, author of Sketches of Creation.

No. 8. ON YEAST. By Prof. Huxley, F.R.S.

IO. 9. THE CIECULATION OF THE WATERS OF THE FACE OF THE EASTH. By Prof. H. W.

No. 10. THE STONE AGE, PAST AND PRESENT

No. 11. THE BELATION BETWEEN MATTER

manning Google

AND FORCE. By Prof. John H. Tice, of St.

THE INDEX.

I Tremont Place, Bost

By Edward B. Tylor, author of Primition lations, Human Physiology, etc.

AND EPIDEMIC DELUSIONS. By Dr. Carpenter, author of The Microscope and its Ba Fully illustrated.

ars.

COMPTS.

Dove.

Oulture.

Louis.

For sale by

AUBORA AND RECENT SOLAR RESEABORING. By Richard A. Proctor, F.R.A.S.

Three Dollars a Year.

LIBERTY AND LIGHT.

VOLUME 5.

ORGANIZE!

THE DEMANDS OF LIBERALISM.

THE DEMANDS OF LIBERALISM. 1. We demand that churches and other ecclesiastical property shall no longer be exempt from just taxation. 2. We demand that the employment of chaplains in Con-gress, in State Legislatures, in the navy and militia, and in priscin, asymms, and all other institutions supported by public money, shall be discontinued. 3. We demand that all public appropriations for educa-tional and charitable institutions of a sectarian character that cease.

constant onertained instructions of a sociarian character shall deas.
4. We demand that all religions services now sustained by the government shall be abolished; and especially that the use of the Bible in the public schools, whether estensible as a text-book or avowelly as a book of religious workhy, shall be prohibited.
5. We demand that the appointment, by the President of the United States or by the Government shall be abolished, and the courts and mall other departments of the government shall be abolished, and that simple affirmation nuder the pains and penalties of performant that all laws directly or indirectly enforcing the observance of Sunday as the Subbash shall be repealed.
6. We demand that all laws looking to the anforcement of the superstance of Sunday as the Subbash shall be repealed.

a We demand that all laws looking to the enforcement of "Christian" morality shall be abrogated, and that all laws shall be conformed to the requirements of natural morality, equal right, and impartial liberty.
9. We demand that not only in the Constitutions of the practical administration of the same, no privilege or advantage shall be conceded to Christianity or any other special right; that our entire political system shall be founded and administration of a purely acular basis; and that prove necessary to this each shall be consistently, unfinchingly, and promptly made.

A FORM OF LOCAL ORGANIZATION.

Whereas, It is our profound conviction that the safety of republican institutions is imperilled, the advance of civili-sation impeded, and the most sacred rights of man in-fringed, by the least interference of the State in matters of religion; and caligion; and Horous. Certain grave inconsistencies with the general spiri of the United States Constitution still mark the prac-tical administration of our political system, threatening the perjetuity of religious liberty, the existence of free public schools, and the piece and prosperity of the entire land; THEREFORE, We, the undersigned, hereby associate our-selves together under the following

ABTICLES OF AGREEMENT.

ART. 1,-The name of this Association shall be THE LIB-

Air. 4.—Such measures shall be adopted for raising funds or the League as shall be prescribed in the By-Laws by a wo-thirds vote of the members.

Ast, &-Any person may become a member of the League subscribing his or her name to these Articles of Agreeby m ment. Art. 5.-The Officers of the League shall be a President, Avio President, a Scoretary, a Treasurer, and an Execu-tive Committee of three members; and their duties shall be hose commonly pertaining to these offices. The President and Scoreary shall be ex-officio delegates to the Natural Convention of Liberal Leagues when called together. Art. 7.-These Articles of Agreement may be amended by a three-fourths yote of the members present at any reg-airs meeting, provided due notice of the proposed amend-ments shall have been sent to every member at least two weeks previous to such meeting.

So far as I am concerned, the above is the platform of Tan impur. I believe in it without reserve; I believe that it will yet be accepted universally by the American people, as the only platform consistent with religious liberty. A Description of the second sec as the only platform consistent with religious neers, a Liberal League ought to be formed to carry out its princi-ples wherever half a dozen carnest and resolute Liberals can be got together. Being convinced that the movement to secure compliance with these just "Demands" must W secure compliance with these just "Demands" must surely, even if slowly, spread, i hope to make THE INDEX a means of furthering it; and I ask the assistance and settive co-operation of every man and every woman who be-lieves in it. Multiply Liberal Leagues everywhere, and re-port promptly the names of their Presidents and Secre-taries. Intolerance and bigotry will tremble in proportion as that list grows. If freedom, justice, and reason are right, let their organized voice be heard like the sound of many waters. many waters.

BOWTON, Bept. 1, 1875.

FRANCIS E. ABBOT, Editor.

BOSTON, MASS., THURSDAY, JUNE 4, 1874.

For List of Liberal Leagues, see next page. RELIGIOUS FREEDOM AMENDMENT:

PROPOSED AS A SUBSTITUTE FOR THE FIRST AMENDMENT TO THE UNITED STATES CON-STITUTION.

ARTICLE 1.

ATTICLE 1. SECTION 1.—Congress shall make no law respecting an es-tablishment of religion, or favoring any particular form of religion, or prohibiting the free exercise thereof; or abridg-ing the freedom of speech or of the press, or the right of the people peaceabily to assemble and to potition the Gov-ernment for a redress of grievances. BEOTON 2.—NO State shall make any law respecting an of religion, or prohibiting the free exercise thereof; or abridging the freedom of speech or of the press, or the right of the people peaceabily to assemble and to petition the Government for a redress of grievances. No religions that lever be required as a condition of suffrage, or as and and person shall ever in any State be deprived of any of religitor, the origone of any public or private duty, or ren-der the consequence of any public or private duty, or ren-dered incompetent to give evidence in any court of law or or the aubject of religion. BEOTON 5.—Congress shall have power to enforce the pro-risions of the second section of this Article by appropri-ate legialation.

NOTES AND COMMENTS. -----

THE MASSACHUSETTS State Constabulary has been abolished. Well, we haven't felt any less safe since

MR. A. B. Alcort has a Club of young men, which he calls "Our Club," and which he treats to some of his charming Conversations.

PROFESSOR SWING has swung out of the Presbyterian Church. For his sake, we hope he will keep swinging until he lands in free religion.

THOMAS CARLYLE is in very poor health. It is difficult for us to conceive that the author of Sartor Resartus can ever be frail and feeble enough to die.

EVERYBODY in sympathy with the Free Religious As-sociation, especially, seemed of the opinion that its meetings this year were very successful and satisfactory.

THE FIRST instalment of American Catholic pilgrims a hundred strong-have followed the example of Captain We wish them a plea Kidd. They have "sailed." voyage and a good time.

Among other destinies to which Col. Higginson was born was that of presiding at a Free Religious Festival. We know of no one who could have done it more gracefully and happily than he did on Friday evening of Anniversary week.

"ONE species of red ant," says the London Spectator, "does no work for itself, but makes slaves of a black kind, which then do everything for their masters." It is antonishing how accurately these insects were able to ant-icipate the ways of men!

IT IS A pleasant place of information, to which we are treated by Mr. Alcott, that Mr. Emerson keeps a diary. This doesn't make us cease to wish that the Concord sage may "live long and prosper;" but we do hope that his diary may sometime be published.

THE LARGE REFORM LEAGUE had some excellent meetings in Codman Hall, during Anniversary week. Good audiences and good speaking were the rule at these gatherings. We were unable to attend the Convention of the Eight Hour League; but we understand it was both successful and satisfactory.

THE serene and spiritual face of the venerable Mrs. Lucretia Mott was deeply missed by many from the meetings of the Free Religious Association, this year. Her very presence on these occasions has been always a benediction to those assembled; and her words have been full of gracious wisdom and instruction.

REV. EDWARD EVERETT HALE appeared and spoke at the F. R. A. Festival, in Parker Memorial Hall, last Friday evening, and seemed to feel as much at home as if he had been among his own Unitarians. Indeed, Mr. Hale has the feline facility of being able to come down on his feet wherever circumstances conspire to toss him.

MR. WILLIAM WARREN, the great actor, recently remarked to us that he finds an argument that God designed that actors should live, in the fact that he is able, in half an hour's time, to entirely recall any part which he ever played, though he had not been able to repeat a complete sentence of it previously for a dozen years, or more. Any one who has ever seen Mr. Warren play cannot doubt that he, at least, has a divine commis don to walk the Stage.

Single Copies Seven Cents.

WHOLE NO. 232.

"WHERE two or three are met together, there will I be in the midst of them," said Jesus. We think that the Spirit of Wisdom does not best like crowds and dressed-up occasions; but in the quiet and unpretending circle, wh kind-hearted men and women meet simply and frankly, it drops down and brings the blessedness of pleasant and profitable conversation. There is not too much art in society, but not art enough-art carried so far as to forget itself, and become natural.

As an illustration of the way in which, in some of the old countries, capital is snatching from labor the privi-lege of securing a home, it may be stated that, as appears from a document just presented to Parliament, nearly one half of Scotland is owned by one hundred and six families, no one of these holding so little as 20,000 acres, and fifty-two of which own over 50,000 acres each. The estate of the Duke of Sutherland, for instance, embraced 1,176,848 acres; and his wife owns beside about 150,000

THE NEW YORK Tribune famishes one or two dellcious specimens of the literary and artistic appreciative-ness of European royalty. The late Austrian Emperor said gravely to Lisst, who had been playing before him: "I have heard Hirtz and Thalberg and Chopin; but I have never seen any one perspire like you." And when Landseer went to Portugal, the King sent for him in order to compliment the great painter of animals. "Ah, Sir Edwin," said the King, "I am glad to see you. I am so fond of beasts."

THE WOMAN SUFFRAGISTS were not behind all others in holding interesting meetings last week. What with their regular Annual Convention, their delightful Festival, and their Cinb Lunch on Saturday, they amply filled up the measure of their useful and agreeable Anniversary activities. On the whole, we are glad to believe that our struggling sisters get no little solid satisfaction and pleasure out of their industrious efforts to secure the rights which, if all had our mind, they would be put in ion of straightway.

"THE WORLD is becoming convinced," says the Jewish Times, "that the only religious creed which can be recon-ciled with the growing aspirations of reason and intellect, which presents no dogma that need be rejected by logic and by comparison of the world of ideals with the world of realities, is the Jewish religion." That is claiming a great deal, is it not? Christians match this claim with one precisely similar for their religion. The difficulty, in both cases, is to tell what is Judaism, and what Chris-tianity. Is Judaism exactly what Moses and the Prophets taught, or is it what the Times represents? If the former, it most certainly will not be the religion of the future any more than will Christianity, if that is exactly what Christ taught. To our mind it appears plain that man is not going to be dependent alone upon the past for his religion, or upon any great dead or great living man's word; but that the future will develop a religion of its own, as the past has done, and as the present is doing.

A COPY of the first issue of a paper called The Prisoner's Friend is laid on our deak, and receives our warm welcome and cordial sympathy. It is published by Mr. John F. Augustus, No. 147 Tremont Street, Boston, at $2.00 a year. Mr. Augustus says, in his prospectus: "We shall aim to advance the cause of humanity in its broadest sense; to awaken a more active spirit to prevent crime, and more pity for the erring and the guilty, without ever losing sight of the best interests of the whole community." We believe that Mr. Augustus is somewhat aided, in publishing and editing his paper, by Mr. James H. Cotier. Both of these gentlemen have had special reason to sympathize with prisoners, and special opportunity to know their needs and understand their We believe both of them to be deeply in earcondition. nest in doing whatsoever good they can in this particular direction, as well as in every other; and we heartily commend them and their enterprise to the sympathy and support of all true philanthropists.

LIFT OF LIBERAL LEAGUES

BT. LOUIS, MO.-M. A. McCord, President; P. A. Lofgreen, L. La Grille, Searcharles. BOSTON, MASS.-F. E. Abbot, President; J. P. Titcomb, G. A. Bacon, Secretaries. JENFERSON, OHIO.-W. H. Crowell, President; A. Giddings, Bacraisen, OHIO.-W. H. Crowell, P Becretary. AN Jost, CAL.-A. J. Spencer, President; J. L. Hatch, Becretary Secretary. TOLEDO, IOWA .-- J. Reedy, Freeident; E. S. Beckley, Secre tary. VINELAND, N. J.-John Gage, President; Sue M. Clute, Secretary. Becretary.
 Becretary.
 J. W. Eastman, President; Bie M. Cinte, Becretary.
 CLATHE, KAN-S. B. S. Wilson, President; H. A. Griffin, Becretary.
 Berneyutila, Mich.-A. G. Eastman, President; F. R. Knowles, Secretary.
 Osuzotary.
 Mich.-A. G. Eastman, President; F. R. Knowles, Secretary.
 Osuzota, Mo.-R. F. Thompson, President; M. Roderick, Becretary. T. F. G. Barker, President; C. Bhodes, Secretary, Wis.-President, J. D. Walters; Secretary, E. M. BATS, ME-R BEBLIN, WIS. Bridgman. Washingron, D.C. - George M. Wood, President; J. E. Crawford, Scoretary. A DEDRN, OHIO. - John Fish, President; G. W. Barnes, Treasauser. MINERAPOLIS, MINN.-President, J. B. Bassett; Secretary, Anton Grethen. New Yonk, N.Y.-J. B. Brown, President; D. M. Bennett, Secretary, MO.-P. V. Wise, President; T. H. Kennedy, Secretary.

 ST. JOSEPH, MO.-F. V. When Flesholds, J. Links, M. Scoretary, EAU CLAINE, WIS.-President, S. J. Dickson; Secretary, W. Kennedy.
 BALBEO, IND.-President, T. Gray; Secretary, W. Allen.
 New OLLEANS, LA.-President, E. Vorster; Secretary, J. E. Wallace.
 BAY CITY, MIOH.-President, S. M. Green; Secretary, S. M. Johnson. BAY

(For THE INDEX.)

Causes of the Increase of Crime.

BY HON. GEORGE F. TALBOT, OF PORTLAND, ME.

The Judiciary Committee of the Maine Legislature,

<text><text><text><text><text>

ly obedience. It must be remembered, too, that the crimes that have chiefly abounded have been those of fraud and violence, which have been provoked, not so much by hot blood and vindictive temper as by ara-rice and the lust of money, acting upon a mind capa-ble of cunning and hardened to crueity-temptations from which soldiers are more aloof than common men. men

My own opinion has for some time been that the accesse of crime in New England communities is atincrease of crime in New England communities is at-tributable to two causes—one material, the other moral; one operating in the way of increasing temp-tation, the other in the way of weakening the power to resist it. I do not wish to undervalue the force of two factors that 'enter largely into the product of crime—intemperance and ignorance. These agencies have been too frequently discussed in ethical investi-gations to require to be here restated. Besides, since we have to consider an increase of crime in spite of an increased temperance and a more decidedly in-creased intellectual culture, it is evident we must look for causes strong enough to overcome the effects of both temperance and education. What may be called the material cause of the in-crease of crime is connected with the great increase of luxury among those who have suddenly become rich, with an increase of the cost of living among those who have become relatively poor. Within the pres-ent century the population of New England was made up largely of people employed in agriculture, living in detached farm-houses, and only here and there aggregated in villages. Every man had his farm, his stock of cattle, and his tools and produc-tions, and met his neighbors in the huge barn of a meeting, house on Sundays, and in town meetings, on terms of social equality; the only difference in their social condition being the advantage which health, industry, and temperance. Nobody made plans for getting rich, nobody thought of selling his orchard for house lots, of speculating in timber lands, or of investing in stocks or bonds. Longfellow has fitly described these primitive rural communities:-Thms dwat together in love, these simple Acadian farmers, Dweit in the love of God and of man. Allke were they free from

From Fear, that reigns with the tyrant, and envy, the vice of re-publics. Neither locks had they to their doors, nor bars to their win-dows;

dows; But their dwellings were open as day and the hearts of the owners; There the richest was poor, and the poorest lived in abun-dance.

There the releases was poor, and the poorest lived in abun-dance. The first devil to enter this paradise was the specu-lating devil of 1835-38. He asked the farmers what it by had to show for the toil of half a century. He told them how money was to be made buying farms in the neighborhood of cities by the acre, and selling them by the foot. On his advice farmers bonded their homesteads, removed to the cities and to the far West, betook themselves to trading, lumbering, man-mfacturing, and speculating. When all was settled, after the bankruptcy of 1837, there was a great shrink-age in the numbers of the land-owning yeomanry; a great excess in the numbers of the trading, artisan, and laboring classes. Just such disastrous good lines befell the country about once in a decade afterwards, though with less marked social effects, until the coup de gräce was given to the old order of things, when the United States government made its irredeemable notes a legal tender, and in so doing doubled the money value of the necessaries of life, and rendered the conditions of living, for more than half the people, difficult and precarious. It has not been hard for the prudeet and thrifty, for him who had capital or could produce any commodity, in the enhanced competi-tion, to hold his way, and even to make money. Ac-cordingly, never in our history, or in the history of any people, have there been such instances of the situation, relatively to the greatly increased luxury of the thrifty classes, vastly deteriorated, and, relatively to the former status of their own class, absolutely de-teriorated. In a democracy where there are no orders of soci-the thrifty classes, vasily deteriorated, and, relatively to the former status of their own class, absolutely de-teriorated. In a democracy where there are no orders of soci-ety, where the richest man is remembered as having been poor, where a universal education teaches every child that he is as good as every other child, and where all the prevalent political and religious max-ims emphasize the doctrine of human equality, there is no barrier to the influence of the pride of the rich, or the envy of the poor. The luxury of dress, of dwelling, of furniture, and of equipage, everywhere ostentationsly and without delicacy exhibited by the men who have suddenly made fortunes, falls upon the raw, rude greedheas and envy of those who have been compelied to forego such indulgences, with an effect difficult to exaggerate. If they were in another rank, their feeling would be that euch fine things were not for them; they might even come like the English peasantry to be proud of the magnificence of their landlords; if they were uneducated, they might feel that such fortune was due to superior culture. But, conscious in many instances of an intelligence superior to that of more prosperous neighbors, how can they reconcile themselves to such a capricious distribution of the gains of life? The constant spec-tacle of the luxury of the rich indelicately thrust upon the sight stimulates the acquisitiveness of the poor. The new hardships of their situation suggest cunning and violence as methods of refrees more cer-tain than economy and industry; and the stories esgerly told, and invidiously credited, though perhaps mainly slanderous, of fortunes built on frauds gain for fradulent practices a kind of respectability. But this view finds in poverty the great incentive to crime, and loads upon the unfortunate the added reproach of wickedness. However it may wound our natural pity, and although it may contradict a theory which has the weighty authority of the most revered of human teachers, it secues to me hardly possible, in t natural pity, and although it may contradict a theory which has the weighty authority of the most revered of human teachers, it seems to me hardly possible, in the face of obvious facts, to deny that a condition of poverty is not a condition most congenial to virtue. Early hardship and privation stimulate industry, and teach self-control; but continued reverses, the long-delayed reward of patient endurance, discourage, madden, and exasperate. Still Nature always has her revenges, and there is a law by which evil done to others reacts upon the doer. The greater number of thrifty men find it difficult to shake off the habits of economy and temperance by which they were able to acquire wealth. But the children of the rich do not learn virtue from any such hard experiences. They never speak or think of la-bor, but as physical exercise. Self-indulgence be-comes with them a necessity. They enter upon the freedom of maturity with appetites that have never known restraint, and begin the universal competition for the good things of life without giving to society that universal and sufficient bond for good behavior—

the unwritten obligation of earning their livelihood so from this class many fall from vices into crime, and so send their full quots to the dock, the prison, and the gallows

the gallows. How justly to equalize the conditions of the strug-gle of life, and so lessen the temptation to crime, is a question for social science and legislation to settle. But in the midst of temptations, the will of man, controlled by motives acting upon his reason and con-science, can resolutely practise virtue. Among the cherished beliefs that operate powerfully in deterring men from evil conduct is the belief in the punish-ment of sin after death. A similar, and perhaps greater, influence is wrought by the fear of legal pun-ter and a peneral reputance to the shame and ment of an act is wrought by the fear of legal pun-ishment, and a general repugnance to the shame and diagrace which the reputation of evil conduct fires as a social penalty upon many kinds of crime. Neither of these two influences has been considerably modi-fied. Legal punishments, though less severe, are on the whole more certain than they were a hundred years ago, and the public reproach of criminal conduct is quite as intense as it was then, and finds, through the universality of modern news-reporting, a far more emphatic expression. But the belief in punishment after death has, with-in that time, suffered a great modification, and it is fair to find in this fact a moral cause for the increase of crime.

In that time, suffered a great modification, and it is far to find in this fact a moral cause for the increase of crime.
John Stuart Mill, in his Autobiography, gives sad expression to his disappointment in seeing "many of the opinions of his youth obtain general recognition, and many of the reforms in institutions for which he had through his life contended either effected, or in course of being so, with much less benefit to human well-being than he had formerly anticipated, because they had produced very little improvement in that which all the real ameiloration in the lot of mankind depends on—their intellectual and moral state." He adds: "I am now convinced that no great improvements in the lot of mankind are possible, until a great change takes place in the fundamental constitution of their modes of thought. When the philosophic minds of the world can no longer believe its religion, or can only believe it with modifications amouning to an easential change of its character, a transitional period commences of weak convictions, paralyzed intellects, and growing laxity of principle, which cannot terminate until a renovation has been effected in the basis of their belief, leading to the evolution of some faith, whether religious or merely ham, which they can really believe; and when things are in this state, all thinking or writing which does not tend to promote such a renovation is of very little use beyond the moment."
Snee we have the suthority of this sagacious general thinker for beliering that the character of men, is samely the does not end to principle, either for belier or worse, in human soclety as it has fallen under our observation, is mainly shaped by the fundamental constitution of their modes of the upt or worse, in human soclety as it has fallen under our observation, it will be proper to consider what fundamental lenet of eligion has suffered change at the same time.

religion has suffered change at the same time. Fifty years ago there was a general belief in bell. There were sceptics and disbelievers, as there have been through the whole Christian era, who rejected this, and other tenets of the popular theology; but the expectation that some permanent and terrible consequences of bad actions would follow and in volve men beyond the grave was as universal as any of the common notions of mankind, and exerted upon conduct as much influence as such a motive was capable of. We must not exaggerate the power of such a mo-of the common notions of mankind, and excited upon conduct as much influence as such a mo-tive. History compels us to believe that the doctrine of a hell has been a feature of all the great world religions, unleas we except the Hebrew religion dur-ing its primitive periods, and yet the dread of such a catastrophe has not been sufficient to reatrain men-from crimes, nor even to induce repentance in multi-tudes of men, who were sure that they might avoid so dreadful a doom upon such easy terms as repent-ance and a sacrificial explation. The reason of this phenomenon is to be found in the fact that hell, as terrible an evil as it has been depicted, seems to the sensual and limited mind of men a remote and con-tingent evil. It is the vice of the savage and barbar-ous etates that men will not provide against wants and sufferings, however intense, which are only pro-spective. They will not make preparations for iood and ehelter for the winter, which they know is ap-proaching, nor in fruitful seasons for the years of scarcity which they and their fathers have experi-enced. They will do more to avoid a present incon-venience than they will no avid extreme torture that will begin thirty years hence, and after they are dead. Future punishment is a motive power to which New-ton's law of gravitation will nearly apply, and oper-ates upon conduct inversely as the square of the distance in time to the event dreaded. As, however, men become thoughtful and forecasting through cir-ilization, they begin to be influenced by remote and contingent considerations. They make plans about their burial, provisions for their heirs, and become willing to work and think with reference to posterity. The natural effect of increased civilization would be to make this motive more potent in controlling human conduct, instead of which we have to account for the The natural effect of increased civilization would be to make this motive more potent in controlling human conduct, instead of which we have to account for the fact that the belief itself in hell, a belief nearly co-eval with human history, has everywhere auddenly given way. This is because the horrors which have gradually been added to it, to compensate for its fee-ble influence through remoteness and contingency, had made it absolutely insupportable to sensitive minds, and partly because within the last century there has arisen a achool of religious teachers in this country and in Europe who have undertaken to eliminate from the creed of Christendom the dogma of post-mortuary punishment for ein. Had these men reasons for their positive assurance upon this matter of the fortunes after death of the an an an

SAN HAITS

SE.

14.7 .....

ŝ h. 21 upon this matter of the fortunes after death of the spirits of bad men; and is the change they have grad-ually wrought in the religious belief of the age alto-gethers satutary one? Before answering these que-tions, we must consider where man had, with such general consent, obtained his ideal of hell; whether it is a nightmare of supersultion, or had its basis in manner here indicated is evidenced from the influ-

<text><text><text><text>

"Talk not of reigning in this dolorons gloom, Not think value words,' be cried, 'can ease my doom. Rather I choose iaboriounly to bear A weight of woes, and breathe the vital air, A slave to some poor hind that tolks for bread, Than reign the scopired monarch of the dead."

The Persians and the Egyptians had hells in which

<text><text><text><text><text>

"Her rash hand, in evil hour, Forth reaching to the fruit, she plucked, she eat, Earth felt the wound, and Nature from her seat, Sighing through all her works, gave signs of woe That all was lost."

Doubtless there is much evil and suffering flowing om conditions of existence outside of man's immefrom conditions of existence outside of man's man's diate will and choice, which are caused by man's breach of the divise order. There are climatic con-ditions due to his bad husbandry of the planet on which he lives. There are destructive diseases which had their origin in uncleanly practices, or in the fetid effluvia of battle fields; and ignorant or reckless defiance of heat, frost, wind, sea, and the rage of norious animals have occasioned a vast amount of pain, mutilation, and premature death to the human race. But beyond the utmost scope of man's direct or indirect volition, the traces of evil in Nature are too palpable to be overlooked. The world was full of suffering and violence before man sinned, and before man appeared upon it. The monumental rocks, whose strailled tablets preserve the blietory of the primeral habits of living creatures, tell us in fos-sil claw and fang of science from their commission, looks upon them with tolerance, and envies the satisfactions he imagines them to afford. In this connection it may be re-marked that the virid and terrible language in which hell is described in our Scriptures, and in all Script-ures, is due to the fact that it is hell as considered from the point of view of the good and holy man, and so is full of the repulsiveness which evil has only to a few rare and pure souls. And doubtless we should more correctly interpret thoses Scripture delineations if we should think of hell as a condition of vague and indefinite evil, rather than, taking the Scriptural interpretations in a literal and dogmatic import, try to fill out the features of a deplorable and terrible fate; as if there were something in the physical con-ditions of the universe to correspond to shapes and praguely to express the instinctive dread of evil in the buman conscience, and the cultivated repugnance to evil in the soul that had acquired the love and habit of virtue. It is only here that we are prepared to answer the question some time ago proposed. Had the modern mild school of theologians reasons for an absolute denial of punishment to evil-doing after death, and was the change they have gradually wought in the religious bellef of the times a wholy salutary one? Some modification of a tenest that had become absalutary one? Some modification of a tenet that had become ab

"The dragons of the prime, That tore each other in their slime."

<text>

Some modification of a tenet that had become ab-horrent to the refined feelings and cultivated reason of a future life. The belief that there, yawned im-mediately beneath the world a chasm into which the great majority of men were constantly failing and listely beneath the world a chasm into which the senditre bodies of men, kept alive and kept senditry by a some divine aloves and the trivial and capture divine aloves and the trivial and apprictous modes of a further title and kept senditry by some divine aloves and the trivial and apprictous modes by which such a terrible fate might be avoided-such as professing a creat, professing after any human idea of a divine love; and the trivial and apprictous modes by which such a terrible fate might be avoided-such as professing a creately rofessing and the probability of the trivial and apprictous modes by which such a terrible fate might be avoided-such as professing a creately rofessing after in which no change of character or desert was in-volved, only made the ripusitoe and crucity of God estimation of a space of the trivial the trivial difference with which the great multitude of wicked and frivolous men accommodated themseives to this bear solved only such a terrible chance of calmity; and yet it neither saddened their lives nor actionary restricts of the kingdom of heaven. They should have been told there is no hell in the thought and plan of God. There is a hell as a fact of human apprince. It is only rom the point of view of an ideal holiness. It is punitory and remedial, and plan of God. There is a hell as a fact of human apprince. It is only provide the view row and idea flore is to make evil reputave, and drive is to ropontance. It is only provide that which is not apprince. It is only provide that which is not apprince. It is only provide the trivich the frozent and holiness. It is puttory and remedial, and plan of God. There is a hell as a fact of human frozent the best on the early Universities to the potention of the kernitory and chrose to roponta fest lessening of restraint to wickedness and crime on the part of men that acknowledge themselves to be

Test lessening of restant to where the part of men that acknowledge themselves to be irreligions. Shall we go back to the creed of the last century ? Shall we reinstate the bell, whose fierce flames have cooled to a comfortable warmth, in all its ancient fierceness and terror? This is neither possible nor desirable. The world has stolen a march, broken into the Divine Arcana, and vulgarized their secret intelligence. It has got access again to the tree of knowledge of good and evil, and its eyes are open, prematurely, to see as gods. A man may use a faith or a fear to control his personal conduct; he cannot use it to control his personal conduct; he cannot mage may corner a man in his pew, and threaten him with hell fire. He will not have the man wholly at advantage with such a weapon, if he can look out the window across the street and almost hear the accents of Dr. Chapin, in a devout and reverent spirit, and advantage with such a weapon, if he can look out the window across the street and almost hear the accents of Dr. Chapin, in a devout and reverent spirit, and with a strong assurance, asserting the absolute love of God and the forgiveness of sin. The weekly assem-blage of a half-dozen congregations, embracing the filte of the intelligence, virtue, and practical religion of a great city, is a fetter upon the tongue of our fer-rid Orthodox divine. What he has on his conscience to say about hell he would prefer to say in the base-ment of his meeting-house, in the privacy of a few kindred spirits,—as a Catholic in England during the last century would go to some secret chamber to per-form his Mass, and as a Druid, after England has embraced Christianity, would betake himself to a goomy forest to perform his incantations. The instate any superstitious fears in the minds of evil-disposed men as a means of restraining them from reiseful a sanctions which must take the place of the secular sanctions which must take the place of the secular sanctions which must take the place of the secular sup the less certain or less severe those and to make any the less certain or less severe those and to make any the less certain or less severe those and to make any the less certain or less severe those and to make any the less certain or less severe those and to make any the less certain or less severe those and to make any the less certain or less severe those and to make any the less certain or less severe those and to make any the less certain or less severe those and to make any the less certain or less severe those and to make any the less certain or less severe those and to make any the less certain or less severe those and to make any the less certain or less severe those and to make any the less certain or less severe those and to make any the less certain or less severe those and to make any the less certain or less severe those and to make any the less certain or less severe those and to make any the less certain or l

[Specially Reported for THE INDEX.]

SEVENTH ANNUAL MEETING OF THE FREE RELIGIOUS ASSOCIATION,

BY S. H. MORSE.

The seventh annual meeting of the Free Religious Association was held in Horticultural Hall, Thurs-day evening, May 28th, and on Friday morning and afternoon of May 28th. The reports of the Secretary and Treasurer were read, and officers were elected for the ensuing year. The verbal amendments of the constitution of the Association, advertised in THE INDEX, were proposed by the Executive Committee and accepted by a unani-mous vote.

Association, advertised in THE INDEX, were proposed by the Executive Committee and accepted by a unani-mous vote. Rev. Rowland Connor, of Florence, Mass., respond-ed to an invitation to give some account of the estab-lishment at Florence of the Free Congregational Soci-ety, of which he is the resident minister. Mr. Connor's report was exceedingly interesting to the large majority of those present, to whom the growth and prosperity of such a society outside the limits of Boston was some-thing hardly expected. In a comparatively small vil-lage, by the untiring energy of a few people at the beginning, a strong free society had been gathered—s society composed of men and women schooled in re-spect and toleration for everyshade of honest opinion or conviction. They had learned to welcome all sides of every question. Their custom had been to invite to their platform men and women representing all the religious sects, and those of no sect. The topics dis-cussed covered the wide range of religion, politics, and morals—philosophy, poetry, and science. They embraced whatever was of import to the every-day life of the people. It was the habit of the society to expect that any one who desired would feel at liberty to question or dissent from the speaker, after the dis-course had concluded. Mr. Connor gave some ac-count of the new hall the society had recently erected —Cosmin Hail. On the desk, with a copy of the Bible, was Mr. Conway's Sacred Anthology, from which Scripture lessons could be read, or any one was st liberty to bring his own book to read from. The society was some nineteen years old. It had already accomplished a good work, but looked forward to still greater achievements.

society was sold in the part of the sold. It has already accomplished a good work, but looked forward to still greater achievements. Rabbi S. H. Sonneschein, of St. Louis, was next introduced, and spoke with a great deal of enthusiasm of the new departure of the Jews, of their coming forward to take their place with all other people in the great progressive march of the world. When he thought of what the world had achieved, he was amazed that so much had been done. But when he turned to the wonderful future, and contemplated even some portion of what remained for the welfare and happiness of the children of men, all that had been won in the past, in comparison, dwindled into insignificance. His speech was warmly received and much applauded. The Treasurer reported that the receipts of the As-sociation for the past year were $2,557.02, and the disbursements $2,016.77; leaving $540.25 balance in the treasury.

the treasury.

The President, Mr. Frothingham, opened the morn-ing session of May 29 with a carefully prepared state-ment of the purposes of the Association. He re-marked that he had done a similar thing year after year, and he or some one else would probably do the same for years to come, so difficult did it seem to be for the public generally to understand the position the Association had assumed. Its purpose was to re-

1874.

stra-Christian, and one was anti-Christian. He in-troduced Rev. Mr. Calthrop, of Syracuse, who would interpret Free Religion from the Christian stand-ord. Mr. Calthrop, on taking the stand, said be regarded the Free Religions platform as simply an opportunity, it was not christian; he would not have it so, if he ould; he would not so insuit those who were reared under the helps and influences of other religions. It says not extra-Christian, nor was it anti-Christian, But it was sacred ground for all honest differences, a face for the comparison of views and convictions. We live, he said, by affirmation, not denial. The wrecognize a power that can give you all that is, some from disturbing prejudices, and colid listen to other. We live, he said, by affirmation, not denial. The wrecognize a power that can give you all that is, some from disturbing ore platform as more explains the relity of growth. Stars grow, galaxies grow, strate grow, plants, animals, men grow. Two things rel-ting capable of evolving all. Modern scientific hough takes up the old affirmation and explains the relity of growth. Stars grow, galaxies grow, strate grow, plants, animals, men grow. Two things re-he universe, acted on and developed by it. There would be no eye but for the light of the sun. So no and developed it. There is the universal bitotry, and and evoloped it. There is the universal bitotry acting the universal. We cannot escape from our special is not to be lost in the universal, but each special is end to be lost in the universal, but each special is end to be lost in the universal, but each special is end to be lost in the universal, but each special is end to be lost in the universal, but sinterpretation whether we know it or not. Every race in its growth whether we know it or not. Every race in this growth of thistian tradition. We have to accept this inherit-intic di neur blood a legacy we must and to accept whether we head, you wipe out your civilization. We obtain tradition is the tractage of the taken the short-com felt his obligations to truth as he saw it to be super-or to all other claims. The first question to ask is, "What is Christianity, and who shall define it?" Shall we go to the here-tics of Christendom for definitions of Christianity? Or shall we take the record of the Christian Church —the Church by its universal consensus? For one, he did not venture to make a definition. He took what he found. He would abide by the record. He accepted all the good; was ready to recognize and applaud it. But there was the other side, and he could not overlook that, because it was not an error or evil now and then appearing, but a permanent and persistent force antagonistic to the freedom and prog-ress of mankind. Taken as a whole, the net influ-ence of Christianity has been to repress and not de-velop the freedom of the mind. Its mission is not a quest for truth and greater light, but it is a voice of authority seeking to seal up investigation and en-slave. It was rebellion against this spirit that gave birth to Protestantism. Every Protestant, to the de-

Google Google

IN.

41256

836

1931

448324838

21-25-

1.2.4

E

11

<text>

decaying trunk or wind-wafted seed of the Radical, as that perhaps from the Dial planted forty years ago, the editor makes a conscience of science. Pilate's question, "What is truth ?" still disintegrates every system, dissolves institutions, and turns the solid globe into passing smoke before the searching soul. This terrible solvent we must have of spiritual chemistry. We rejoice in sincerity more than in any discovery. The worst of party is compromise, that sacrifice of conviction to uniform and drill, which is blaspheny against the Holy Ghost. I cannot faster the radical literature with the registry of any great accomplish-ment. The new theology has not arisen yet out of the "fifty affirmations," "impeachments," "liberal leagues," or excluding God and Christ from the Con-stitution; but how much rubbish of error has been removed that occupied the room where the precious to general laws. There is a noble honesty in this position worthy of all praise; a sublimity in the abnegation of a beaven to dwell in, or a God to adore, that cannot be proved to the yearning, hoping mind. But iet us have not only the courage of our opinions, but some breadth in the opinions. It is the poetry that atomes for the boldness in the book of Job. Let us have beauty beyond the baid, bare prose of logic and life. Politics was a sign, especially what is called Butlerthat atomes for the boldness in the bock of Job. Lei us have beauty beyond the baid, bare prose of logic and life. Tolitics was a sign, especially what is called Butler-ism. We spend our breath on the man. He is but a symbol. We talk of the sovereign people to whom we will appeal. Is it an honest nation? It rejoices in the government of the majority, without thinking of a possible majority of rascals and thieves. Intel-ligent men in business and professional life refuse to do their civil duty, and call politics a pool they will not dirty their hands in. Congress and the Legisla-tures represent their constituents. What is the cause? We have plenty of religion in this country, such as it is. Why is the common consecence so blunt? Gen-eral guil fears the whole brood of derile. I hall the Radicalism and the Free Religion which is not a sentimental spasm of a few elect at a camp-meeting, or in an ill-ventilated vestry, but a revival of the body politic. Dr. Bartol spoke of Spiritualism as a sign. Count-ing its millions it is not likely to be disposed of by rideule. Every establishment is a miniature of truth and error. Spiritualism is evolution and reaction from Orthodoxy. But he who listens for the echo guts blindness on our vision to keep us to the load. Sight not your stint. That our duty may be fully done, it is best those gates be partly closed. Dr. Bartol spoke, in conclusion, of Socialism as motobated if she should be allowed to speak. But marriage must be discussed. Is it sensitive, then it is sore. It is importance only increases the desire to probe any evil. Its unquestionably sincere assailant, we Woodhull, has offered no working plan, only wild scream for freedom, and vague doctrine of solu-tion in its stead. Meantime, let any mischlef it covars e endured for its sake, and that of all it involves.

The evening festival at the Parker Memorial-rooms was largely attended, and proved to be, as was true the year before, a most fitting and enjoyable termina-tion of the day.

An ARTICLE on Unitarianism in the Christian Union closes as follows: "Still another reason for its comparative failure is its lack of intellectual consist-ency and courage. It is logically committed to ra-tionalism. When it put reason above Scripture, by making it the judge of what is revelation and what is true, it virtually made Christianity one religion of many, even though the best of all; and when it de-nied the proper divinity of Christ, it virtually reduced him to the level of humanity, however it may bave exalted him in moral qualities and character. The common sense of Christendom has always looked upon its attempts to hold a half-way position be-tween Orthodoxy and Rationalism as illogical and cowardly, and thousands have refused to go its one mile because it has always lacked the courage to go takes care of its own, the unchurched masses neither heed its invitations nor recognize its essential accord with their own views. It is just far enough away from the evangelical churches to be cut off from their fellowship and sympathy, but is not far enough re-moved to attract the unchurched masses to its stand-ard."

EARLY LAST FALL a protracted meeting was held at Northville by Revs. Mr. Chapin and Mrs. Dawson. During this meeting Mrs. Dawson related as story of a certain family composed of father, mother, and an only child. She stated that they attended a protract-ed meeting, and resisted all appeals to reverse their conduct in life and become followers of the precepts of Holy Writ. The mother soon after became a raving maniae, and died in that condition. Mrs. Dawson said that there might and probably would be a similar case at that place, but mentioned no names. A Mrs. George Taylor, of Northville, being present, took these words as a direct application to herself and family, there being only three in the family. The re-sult was that she became insane, and was sent to an asylum in Utica, and there died. Her remains were brought home and deposited in the burying ground at Northville. She was an unusually robust young woman, sound of mind, and in the best of health until after hearing that story. As to the cause of her death, we leave our readers to decide.—Northeast Sun.

Boetry.

(For Tas INDEL.)

THE NEGRO BURYING-GROUND. BY WILLIAM C. GANNETT.

- Here in the shadows the slaves would hide As they dropped the hoe at death's release;
- And leave no sign but a sinking mound To show where they passed on their way to peace.
- This was the Gate-there was none but this
- To a Happy Land where men were men; The dusky fugitives, one by one, Stole in from the bruise of the prison-pen,—
- When, lo! in the distance boomed the guns, The bruise was over and "Massa" had field But Death is a "Massa" that never flees; To the oaks they still bore forth the dead.
- "Twas at set of sun; a tattered troop
- Of the children circled an open grave, Chanting an anthem rich to them As ever pealed in cathedral-nave,

The A, B, C, that the lips below

- Had learnt, at their side, in the school to shout; Over and over they sung it low, Crooning a mystic meaning out.
- Just A, B, C, D, E. F. G.
- Just A, B; C; D, C; F; G; Down solemn alphabets they swept; The oaks leaned close; the moss swang low; What strange new sound among them crept!
- The holiest hymn that the children knew! It was dreams made real and heaven made near; It was light, and liberty, and joy, And "white-folks-sense," and God right here!
- Over and over; they dimly felt This was the charm could make black white,
- This was the secret of "Massa's" pride, And this, unknown, made the negro-night.
- What could they sing of sweeter cheer To speed on her unseen way the friend? The children were facing the mystery Death
- With the deepest prayer that their hearts could send.
- Children still, and the mysteries last!
- We are but comrades with them there, tammering over a meaning vast, Crooning our guesses of how and where.

- But the singers were right with their A, B, C; In our stammering guess so much we say! And the children were happy,— and so are we; Though we miss at the spelling, He knows what we pray.

NEW SUBSCRIPTIONS TO INDEX STOCK.

Mrs. F. W. Christern, Richard B. Westbrook	New York City,	One al	iare,	$100 100
R. C. Spencer,	Milwaukee, Wis.	Two	H	200
R. W. Howes,	Boston, Mass.	One		100
Chas. W. Story,	Boston, Mass.			100
E. W. Meddaugh,	Detroit, Mich.	Five		800
Jacob Hoffner,	Cumminsville, O.	Ope	66	100
John Weiss,	Boston, Mass.	"		100
W. C. Russel,	Ithaca, N. Y.		44	100
A. W. Leggett,	Detroit, Mich.		14.	100
B. F. Dyer,	Boston, Mass.		44	300
James Purinton,	Lynn, Mass.	84	- 44	100
F. A. Nichols,	Lowell, Mass.		. 44	100
J. S. Palmer,	Portland, Me.		64	100
Robt. Ormiston,	Brooklyn, N.Y.			100
Mrs. A. L. Richmond.	Lowell, Mass.			100
Mrs. Benj. Ireson,	Lynn, Mass.	- 44		100
J. E. Oliver,	Ithaca, N.Y.			100
E. H. Aldrich,	Providence, R.I.	44	- 64	100
Geo. L. Clark,	Providence, R.I.			100
W. M. Jackson,	Providence, R.I.	Two		208
Mre. E. B. Chase,	Valley Falls, R.I.	11		160
L. F. Garvin,	Lonsdale, H.I.	One		105
James Damon.	Ipswich, Mass.		44	300
Joseph A. Barker,	Providence, R.I.			100

CASH RECEIPTS.

FOR THE WEEK ENDING MAT 30.

FOR THE WERE ENDING MAT 30. Mary Rhoades, $3; W. H. Coffin, $3; Geo. J. Adams, $3; Simeon Nixon, $3:60; T. W. Robbins, 75 cents; A. Klebe, 75 cents; David Thom, f0 cents; T. Lees, $1:30; Joseph Marsh $1; Geo. Albs, 90 cents; N. J. Frice, $1; J. G. Dodge, $1:50; H. E. Raymond, $3; Chas. Robinson, $1; J. S. Pont, $5; W. S. Burton, $3; T. Van Tassal, 25 cents; N. J. Stubba, $1:50; E. C. Alphonso, $1; M. N. Adams, $12; Caspar Webber, $5; D. R. Sparks, $15; W. C. Gannett, $100; A. A. Enight, $30; A. Hall, $210; F. W. Christern, $100; S. Griffiths Morgan, $40; Joseph A. Barker, $20; M. Hovey, $02:50; Francis V. Halch, $2; Wm. Dudgeon, $20; John M. Forbes, $200; Wesley Hest, $10; F. R. Association, $30. All precints of cash will be acknowledged as above, and Westey Hest, #10; F. E. Association, 500. All receipts of cash will be acknowledged as above, and no other receipt sont unless specially requested. Persons who do not see their remittances acknowledged within three weeks after sending, will please notify us. N. B.—Please remit by post-office money-order, by regis-tered letter, or by draft on Boston or New York. Checks on interfor banks are liable to discount, and the term of subscription will be proportionally shortened in the oredit. N. B.—Orders for Tracts or single armhers of Twe Yes.

- N. B.-Orders for Tracts or single numbers of THE Is-DEX which are not on hand will, if of small amount, be oth-erwise filled to the same amount without further notice.
- N.B.—Postage on The INDEX is five cents per quarter, dating from receipt of the first number, payable in ad-vance at the place of delivery.
  N.B.—When writing about a former remittance, always give the date of such remittance as exactly as possible.
  N.B.—Please examine the ADDRESS and DATE on your INDEX mail-tag, and report at once any error in either.

269

THE INDEX ASSOCIATION.

NO. 1 TREMONT PLACE, BOSTON. Toledo Office: No. 55 MONBOR STREET. Julius T. Frey, Agent and Clerk.

BOSTON, JUNE 4, 1874.

NOTICE.

The Third Annual Meeting of the Stockholders of the Index Association will be held in Toledo, Ohio, at No. 48 Summit Street, on Saturday, June 6, 1874, at 10 o'clock, A.M., in accordance with the articles of incorporation.

GLIMPSES.

CORRESPONDENTS will please take notice that we shall be absent from Boston several days, in order to attend the stockholders' meeting in Toledo.

SPECIAL ATTENTION is invited to the list of lectures by Mr. Welss, on our last page. Lyceums and radical societies will do well to make an early engagement with him.

RABBI SONNESCHEIN, of St. Louis, has become as. sociated with Rabbi Wise, of Cincinnati, in the editorial conduct of the Israelite, and the name of the paper will be changed to American Israelite. The design is to make it the leading representative of Judaism in this country. The Rabbi made some capital speeches at the Free Religious Convention, and left a most pleasant impression on all minds.

MR. J. S. THOMSON, who has just resigned his position as lecturer for the Free Religious Association of Binghamton, N. Y., and for the Associations of New Milford and Harford, Pa., will lecture in the West during the next three months. His address for the present is Binghamton, N. Y. He is a brave and sincere speaker, and will doubtless prove himself an efficient worker in the cause of true liberalism.

THE SEVENTH ANNUAL CONVENTION of the Free Religious Association was held last week according to announcement, and proved to be at least as successful and interesting an occasion as on previous years. Mr. Frothingham presided at the first three sessions of the Convention, while Col. Higginson presided at the Social Festival on Friday evening; and the experience, tact, and address of these gentlemen, as presiding officers, contributed not a little to the general result. An excellent condensed report of the meetings, specially prepared for THE INDEX by Mr. Morse, will be found on a previous page. This will give our friends at a distance a good idea of the proceedings, and prepare the way for the Association's fuller report in pamphlet form in the early autumn.

THE FOLLOWING PARAGRAPH from the New Bedford Mercury shows how faithfully Mr. Potter's society stand by him at this juncture ; "Notice was given from the pulpit of the First Congregational Church last Sunday, that the house would be closed for the next three months, for the purpose of completing the repairs and improvements which the society propose to make in the interior of the church. Services will be held in the chapel until the summer vacation. At a parish meeting held last week, it was unanimously voted by the members of the society to increase the salary of the Rev. Mr. Potter five hundred dollars, a tangible expression of their warm personal regard for their pastor and for the preacher, whose eloquent discourses in the highest interests of humanity they most cordially appreciate."

MB. MUMFORD, editor of the Unitarian Christian Register, generously and truly says: "After all the recent scrutiny and criticism, it does not seem to have occurred to anybody that the name of Rev. A. W. Stevens is not now contained in the Year Book list of Unitarian ministers. Mr. Stevens is a gentleman of fine character and excellent ability. He is associated with Mr. Abbot in editing THE INDEX, and, like Messrs. Abbot and Frothingham, he accepts the sit-uation." Probably the reason why the omission of Mr. Stevens' name has not been noticed is that, when interrogated by Mr. Fox, the Assistant Secretary, he expressed a willingness to have his name omitted.

But Mr. Potter "accepts the situation" quite as chcerfully as his comrades. He simply declined to relieve the denomination from the responsibility of defining the terms of its own fellowship; and he humorously remarked at the Social Festival of Friday evening that he had never received so much attention in Boston as he had had this week! We venture to say that he has shed no more tears in private than in public.

THE SOMEWHAT tardy report of the Joint Special Committee of the Massachusetts Legislature on the subject of the exemption of church property from taxation has been rendered as follows, as reported in the Boston dailles of May 29: "The majority of the Committee on Just and Equal Taxation reported in favor of appointing a Commission to sit during the recess of the Legislature, to examine fully into the questions presented for their consideration, especially that of the taxation of church and educational property. A resolve accompanied the report, providing for the appointment of the proposed Commission of three persons, with power to call witnesses. Mr. Whiting, of Pembroke, dissented from the report, and presented a bill providing for the taxation of the property of musical, agricultural and educational institutions after January 1, 1875; all other property of religious and charitable corporations now exempt to be taxed, except $5000 for each religious association, besides the amount actually used by such corporations for strictly religious and charitable purposes, the Board of State Charities and the Tax Commissloners to decide upon vexed questions. Mr. Morss, of the committee, differed from all his fellow-committee men, and advocated referring the question to the next General Court, presenting the arguments at great length." It remains to be seen what action will be taken on this report by the Legislature, before making any comments upon it here.

THE AGITATION of the prison reform question in Boston during the past few months has resulted in the issue of the first number of a new paper, called the Prisoner's Friend, dated Boston, June 6, and published by Mr. John F. Augustus, who was himself discharged from the State Prison last antumn. The name of no editor is given, and the contents are somewhat miscellaneous; but the paper contains considerable information, and will probably contain more in the future. Mr. Augustus says in his "Introductory": "We design now to plainly set forth the inside workings of our prison system, with a view to its improvement, and the development of every good germ that may be found in the system or in the men subjected to its conditions. . . . A separate prison for women-will be persistently urged; and we desire to create a deeper interest in the future welfare of the discharged convict." There are some valuable suggestions in the articles published, such as that of an 'Involuntary Industrial" for professional beggars and confirmed drunkards which shall to some extent take the place of poor-houses and penal institutions by giving employment to the incorrigibly idle. What is wanted is exact information, practical bints, and definite, judicious plans. We hope that writers who have knowledge of the subject will give us these things in order to command the attention and respect of the public; and that a future of solid prosperity and real usefulness awaits the Prisoner's Friend. Subscription price, $2.00 a year, to be sent to Mr. Augustus, Room 2, 147 Tremont street, Boston.

THE following note was sent to the Free Religious Festival by Mrs. L. M. Child, one of the Vice-Presidents of the Association :-

WAYLAND, May 20, 1874. FRIEND HALLOWELL :-

WAYLAND, May 20, 18/4. FRIEND HALLOWELL:--I wish I could meet with the members of the Free Religious Association, at their Festival on the 29th. The printed reports of their meetings, though but echoes of the living voices, always make me more certain of the world's progress, and more hopeful of its future. May your approaching gathering prove even more than usually strengthening and refreshing to your own soils, and helpful to the world. No labor is more arduous than that of removing the old boundary-posts of theology. Men have always been prone to invest them with the flowers and fruit to fiteir own moral and inkellectual growth, and then to mistake them for trees with a living root, whose natural produce is such fruit and flowers; and any hand that seeks to dismantle them is deemed sacri-legions.

hand that screage to dismance them is detailed the legions. But these boundary-marks are subject to the uni-versal law of decay; and signs multiply that many of them are worm-eaten at the centre. Carlyle says: "It is surprising how long a rotten post will stand, provided you don't shake it." It is the mission of the Free Religious Association to shake all rotten posts, and show their inward hollowness. May you do this work with vigor and diligence, and thus prepare the world for better things. Yours cordially, L. MABIA CHILD. P. S.-I enclose $10.

THE ORDEAL OF UNITARIANISM

Our readers will remember the correspondence between Mr. Fox, Assistant Secretary of the American Unitarian Association, and Mr. Potter, when the former dropped the latter's name from the official list of Unitarian ministers in the Year Book for 1874. The reason of this action was Mr. Potter's statement that he did not now call himself a "Unitarian Christian." Whoever is interested will find the original correspondence in THE INDEX of January 1, 1874.

Out of this official action has grown much contro-versy in the Unitarian papers of late, as the annual meeting of the Association was drawing near. Our opinion that there was a "Unitarian Crisis" at hand has been abundantly justified by events. On Tuesday, May 20, the annual meeting was held, and the chief business was a consideration of the question whether the action of the Assistant Secretary (afterwards approved by the Executive Committee) should be finally. sanctioned by the Association itself. Of course, it is not the comparatively trivial matter of dropping or retaining an individual name in a dry catalogue that has made the breeze; although no name in that catalogue has commanded more wide or profound respect. than Mr. Potter's. The real question at issue concerns the terms of Unitarian fellowship, and the principles on which the list is to be made up. Isthere to be any deliberate and avowed exclusion from this fellowship on account of opinion, or not? That is the question; and it was impossible that such a question, forced at last upon the Association for unequivocal decision, should fail to excite deepcommotion in a denomination which has claimed to reconcile Christianity with perfect spiritual freedom.

From the day when the National Unitarian Conference refused at Syracuse, in 1860, to affirm the principle of perfect spiritual freedom, but did affirm unequivocally its allegiance to the "Lord Jesus Christ" and Christlanity, we have believed that the question was substantially settled; and that time would sooner or later prove the fact. The proof has now come in a form so emphatic that we do not see how any mind, at once clear and candid, can fail to see it. The matter has an interest extending far beyond the limits of the small denomination known as Unitarian; it must be shared by all who would study Christianity philosophically, as manifesting its innermost nature in the acts of its organized institutions. Whether the Christian religion is or is not really reconcilable with the principle of unlimited freedom of thought, is surely a problem deserving of the profoundest attention from all students of religion; and it is a problem which must be studied where Christianity and civilization make their nearest approach to a junction, namely, in "Liberal Christianity," If Unitarianism cannot succeed in reconciling the two opposing principles of Christian faith and spiritual freedom, no form of Christianity can do it; its failure must result simply from the absolute irreconcilability of the principles themselves. For this reason we attended the whole of the discussion in the Association, for different reasons feeling no little sympathy for each side. Nothing could have been better in the main than the spirit manifested by both partles, though we regret to say that in the heat of debate a few things were let fall, both with reference to Mr. Fox and Mr. Potter, that were wholly undeserved, and would far better have been left unsaid. To question the motives of either gentleman was as unnecessary as it was unjust; and of this probably every one is satisfied on cool reflection. But the situation was such as to command sympathy for each side : for the conservatives, because, they were battling for what they saw clearly to be essential to the honestly Christian attitude of the Association-for the radicals, because they were striving gallantly to make this attitude both Christian and free at the same time. The latter, however, conceding at the start that they were as willing and determined to bear the Christian name as were the other side, fought under a terrible disadvantage, and their defeat was predestined; for the logic of Christlanity was wholly on the side of the conservatives, while the logic of freedom was not on the side of the radicals. Once more, therefore, has it been demonstrated that freedom cannot win her cause under Christian colors.

The case was this. If in any way, directly or indirectly, the Association voted to restore Mr. Potter's name to the authoritative list of Unitarian ministers, then the name Unitarian would thereby be authoritatively declared to cover both Christians and non-Christians; the Unitarian denomination would have sacrificed its Christianity to its freedom, and no explanation or protest whatever could possibly have wiped ont this fact. If, however, the Association voted to ratify the action of their officials, then they would deliberately indorse the exclusion of one of their most respected members because of his speculative opinions alone; the Unitarian denomination would have sacrificed its freedom to its Christianity, and no explanation or protest could wipe out this fact, either. Lastly, if the Association did neither of these things, but cunningly evaded the issue, they would reap the reputation of cowardics and want of honesty, and deserve it, too. We are glad to say that the majority seemed anxious to face the issue bravely and settle it honestly in one way or the other.

The whole subject having been brought up in the Secretary's Report, it was regularly introduced to the assembly by Rev. George L. Chaney, who moved that the Year Book list should contain the name of no one "who is not Christian," regardless of what he calls himself; and he seemed to consider Mr. Potter a Christian in spite of his disavowal. This was generous; but the assembly wisely shrank from taking sponsibility of forcing the Christian name on those who would not accept it.

Rev. Edward H. Hall considered that the Executive Committee had exceeded their authority, and moved that their action be "declared null." But then what was to be done with Mr. Potter's name, after all?

Mr. Talbot moved to restore the omitted name, on the ground that Mr. Potter called himself a Christian when he was ordained, and had not outgrown the broad meaning he then gave to the word. But if he cannot call himself a Christian now, this motion would still make a Christian list include non-Christian names. It was only a shrewd evasion of the real difficulty.

Rev. Mr. Horton moved that the omitted name be restored, but that a statement should be prefixed to the list that all the names of ministers it contains are supposed to be there with their consent, and to represent Unitarian Christlanity. But, if that statement was to head the list, how could the Association proceed to vote Mr. Potter's name into it, when they all knew he did not represent "Unitarian Christiani-Would they shirk the responsibility of excludtv"? ing him, and "put him on his honor" by first showing that they were not "on honor" themselves? The mus" was on the Association's shoulders, where it properly belonged; and Mr. Horton certainly did not perceive the full bearings of his own proposal.

Rev. Mr. Cordner moved explicitly to ratify the action of the Executive Committee. This was frankly to give up unlimited freedom of thought for the sake of Christianity.

Professor Everett moved that the list should at least contain the names of all ordained ministers actually settled over Unitarian parishes. But what, then, are "Unitarian" parishes? Would Professor Everett call by that name one that would settle or keep a non-Christian minister? If so, the Christian basis of Unitarianism is gone! If Unitarianism is determined to be Christian, it must disfellowship both the minister and the parish that are non-Christian; Professor Everett's resolution only shoved the difficulty one step back, and it must at last be met.

Rev. Mr. Bixby moved that the whole subject be referred to the National Conference; to which, indeed, it seems properly to belong, though there is no reason whatever to think that it would or could be settled by that body in any other manner.

Dr. Clarke moved that, if any minister disowned publicly the Christian name, he should be asked whether he wanted his own name continued in this Christian list, or not; and that the officials should do just as he said! We should say that any minister who would answer, "Yes," ought to be disfellowshipped on moral grounds as a sneak, unfit to associate with honorable men; that any minister who would answer, "No," would probably withdraw unasked; but that any minister who, like Mr. Potter, should decline to answer at all, would still oblige the Association to exclude him because he did not call himself a Christian. The escape from the necessity of exclusion for opinion's sake would be seeming only; and this course would be less manly than to drop his name without pretending to get his consent beforehand.

All these various attempts to save its Christian character without infringing on freedom of thought show how liberal is the spirit of the Unitarian denomination; but they also show how inextricably embarrassed the denomination is by a self-contradictory position. So long as it is bound to be Christian at all, Mr. Cordner's resolution was the manliest offered; and we are glad that this was adopted at last, simply because it enables us to respect the fidelity of the Association to its Christian professions.

The issue came up squarely between Christianity and freedom; the Association stood squarely by its Christian professions; and it only remains now to give up by universal consent the claim of standing squarely by freedom also. It is not we, but truth itself, that demands this frank admission; and we ask the defeated radicals to consider calmly, and without prejudice, the actual results of the Association's action. It was impossible not to be drawn towards them irresistibly by their manifest yearning to retain a creedless fellowship without sacrificing their Christian loyalty; yet the hard fact bluntly asserts itself that no one of the expedients proposed could, even if success-ful, have accomplished this. The question being once raised, Mr. Potter must be either fellowshipped or disfellowshipped deliberately by the denomination ; but it must be avowedly as a non-Christian in either case. In the former case, the denomination must waive its Christian consistency; in the latter case, its loyalty to freedom. Now that the question is settled by his deliberate exclusion, these are the consequences :-

1. Every minister on that list must now not only be a Christian, but must also say he is one. He is liable at any time to be interrogated by the Assistant Secretary as to his opinions on a vital point, and must answer correctly according to a denominational stand-ard of orthodoxy, on pain of being practically excommunicated. His ministerial liberty of thought and speech beyond certain clearly defined limits is destroyed.

2. Every congregation is also directly assailed in its congregational independence. If it elects or sustains a non-Christian minister, it is now put in the humillating position of a society whose minister is disfellowshipped by the denomination to which it belongs. It becomes a suspicious body, whose loyalty to the denomination is distrusted by those who do not yet dare openly to cut it off. But the next logical slep will be to disfellowship every such congregation, for the very same reasons that operate against its minister. The "First Congregational Society" in New Bedford has never, we believe, called itself either Christian or Unitarian, though it is classed in the Year Book among Unitarian societies. Why should it not now be obliged to accept these names explicitfy? Its connection with the denomination under existing circumstances would seem to require this; and the Assistant Secretary, in making up the Year Book, should be as scrupulous concerning societies as concerning ministers. Henceforth it will be his duty to interrogate closely all doubtful cases of either kind, if he is to make an "honest directory" of the "Unitarian Christian denomination." Why not?

3. A new and most important ecclesiastical officer has been practically appointed, who is to decide upon the orthodoxy of the individual ministers, and before long upon that of the congregations themselves. The lists, if honest, must be limited to "Unitarian Christlans," whether ministers or congregations; and a new tribunal, never before heard of in Unitarian circles, has been in fact erected. How insidious, how dangerous to liberty, is the ecclesiastical tendency, when it once gets fairly under way!

4. Ever since the Waterloo of Unitarian radicalism at Syracuse, the radicals have met defeat after defeat. because they have still lingered within the enemy's lines. Their position obliges them to yield at the start the proud right to assert their perfect liberty of speech and thought, inasmuch as they are obliged to plant themselves on Christian ground. Conservatives and radicals are doubtless equally true to their convictions, and for this we equally honor them; but the conservatives are true to the logic of Christianity, while the radicals are true neither to the logic of Christianity nor to that of freedom. The "irrepressible conflict" has broken out once more. "Choose ye this day whom ye will serve."

5. No organized body of Christians, profoundly imbued with love of the Christian faith, has ever yet got together and so acted in concert as to respect perfect individual or congregational liberty. Their deepest convictions forbid. No matter how loudly they protest their love of freedom, their action will always crucify it. The reason is that they act under a necessity, which has now proved itself for the thousandth time. If the American Unitarian Association, for instance, should defend Mr. Potter's right to think and speak as he must about Christianity, and should deliberately retain his name on its list. It could not claim to be a Christian body without calling forth a roar of derision from the keen-eyed world. But now that it has deliberately stricken out his name because he does not think and speak of Christianity as itself approves, it cannot claim to be a free body without equal absurdity. The fact of being Christian is the necessity of curtailing liberty. This truth will be seen as never before in consequence of the recent action. Logic may be despised by religion, but it wins in every conflict at last.

We do not say these things in any harsh or unfriendly spirit, but simply because it is a duty to tell such truth as it falls to our lot to discern. The fellowship of humanity, which alone we believe in, knows no barrier of Christian and non-Christian; and the attractiveness of character was never more powerful than as we listened to some of the earnest speeches on both sides of this question of the Year Book list. More gallant or loyal spirits could not be found than these; and, set what limits they may to their ecclesiastical fellowship, they cannot get out or shut out from the fellowship of man.

THE CATHOLIC CHURCH AND FREE RE-LIGION.

A copy of THE INDEX, in which was printed a letter from a Catholic priest on the subject of conscience in belief, was shown to the writer of it. far from being annoyed by the publication, he rather expressed satisfaction by putting it in the hands of his Catholic friends, priests of course, and asking their opinion on its contents. They, as I learn, after reading it carefully, declared their full concurrence with the exposition given, as conveying a correct statement of the true Catholic doctrine. That it is the doctrine held by all the teachers of the Church in the past, or in the present, is not claimed; but that it is the authorized doctrine is, as will be seen from the subjoined letter, asserted, in the face of Mr. De-Lara's letter printed in THE INDEX of April 30. In the Roman Church, as in every other, there are, it seems, two schools of opinion-an old school and a new, a conservative school and a liberal; and here, as often elsewhere, the new school is the oldest, the liberal school has the most venerable authorities on its side. The mature, well-seasoned Catholics, who have become mellow with time, entertain the generous opinion. The new converts, ex-heretics, parvenus in the Church, like the conductors of the Catholic World and the Freeman's Journal, are disposed to draw lines of exclusion, and make more of the antipathles than of the sympathles of faith. It is to be hoped that, in this country, the generous view has the best promise of the future. For the future has no interest more grand than that of religious harmony. The destruction of the sectarian principle is a great concern. The Protestant sects defend it, and cling to it as the bulwark of the Gospel. If the enlightened part of the Catholic Church, the Church hitherto so closely associated with exclusiveness, repudiates it, several things will be gained; the great Church of Christendom will vindicate its title to be called "Catholic,"-the pretensions of Protestantism to be regarded as the champion of religious liberty will be exposed, -- a powerful ally will be found on the side of spiritual largeness, -- the connection between ancient reverence and modern intellect will be maintained,-and the promise of peace and goodwill will be brighter.

Here is the second communication of our Catholic friend. It was written hastily in a lawyer's office where Mr. DeLara's reply to his first letter was shown him.

MY DEAR FRIEND :-

MY DEAR FRIEND:--I notice a communication in THE INDEX of the 30th April, desiring to find a way of reconciling the Catholic doctrine upon the rights of conscience and the terms of an oath said to have been required in former days of some Hungarian converts to the Church. To you, indeed, there is no need of expla-nation in regard to this or any similar point. But as others may not have the same light, I will simply say that the universal Church is not responsible for the action or principles of any party or faction of individothers may not have the same light, I will simply say that the universal Church is not responsible for the action or principles of any party or faction of individ-uals within her fold. She allows, nay, requires, more individual liberty than is generally conceded by those outside. If many of her priests and bishops pervert her sublime doctrine of human freedom, or substi-tute their own narrow notions for the divine law, her human element may be weak enough to let pass what should be reproved; but she herself, speaking au-thoritatively, can never be found approving anything contrary to the doctrine which she promulgates by her occumenical decrees on faith and morals, and which we find expounded in the writings of the fathers regarding the inviolable dignity and freedom of conscience, such as I concisely stated to you in my first note. If all the bishops of Hungary erred in matters of doctrine, the Church could not be justly held responsible for the error, much less when there is question only of a small point of discipline. Even the Church herself does not claim infallibility in matters of discipline. This applies also to the Coun-cil of Trent. Hence, I think the difficulty of Mr. De-Lars will not appear very formidable, even to him, when he takes this into consideration. As to the anathematizing or cursing exercises to which he alludes, there is no reason why a good Catholic might not doubt the taste of that custom, which began, in-deed, very early in the days of the apostles. As to his historical quotations he will, no doubt, see the propriety of doubting their accuracy, when he learns that Cardinal de Lorraine was not at any time "pre-siding officer" of the session of the Council of Trent to which he refers. The expressions adduced by him from the Catholic World and the Freeman's Journal Learnet as theological conundrums, whose solution regard as theological conundrums, whose solution he able editors of these publications are best able to ŵ. afford.

1

afford. It may be added, in conclusion, that to discuss a principle or doctrine involving in its exposition a thorough understanding of kindred subjects, requir-ing deep and varied study, is a task of no easy accom-plishment in a short newspaper communication. In-telligent and candid readers will therefore see the difficulty, if not the impossibility, of my being able to supply an antidote against all doubt and obscurity in the minds of others, on the point which I first ex-plained, as I am pleased to find, to your entire satis-faction.

LONDON LETTER.

To THE EDITOR OF THE INDEX.

Sir,-A discussion is going on in the columns of the Examiner, on the subject of the punishment of criminals, more especially as to the use of the "cat." The question of the morality or immorality of inflicting torture is not so easily disposed of as some persons would fain make us believe. There is really very much to be said both for and against the practice.

Let me ask the following questions: Is it not the right and duty of governments to use such methods of punishment as will tend most to the prevention of a repetition of crime and to the moral improvement of the criminal? Is not venyeance pure and simple to be rigidly avoided and excluded from our prisons? Cannot punishments be inflicted without the idea of vengeance or retaliation being mixed up with them? Is punishment possible without inflicting some kind of pain, mental or bodily? Is not the infliction of pain by the "cat" the same in principle as the infliction of pain by solitary confinement, enforced labor, compulsory and perpetual silence?

Now, at present, the opponents of "flogging" have not raised a single objection to the other modes of punishing criminals. They all admit the morality of, as well as the necessity for, depriving the criminal of his liberty, compelling him to hard labor, making his heart heavy with silence, and lowering his whole tone by prison fare and prison discipline.

All these forms of punishment are degrees of tor ture, less acute, probably, than the infliction of a flogging, but still very painful.

Rightly or wrongly, then, the principle of torture is admitted, and the only question left for discussion is where the line is to be drawn between allowed and forbidden tortures.

Now, if we adopt the canon that government is bound to use such modes of punishment as will best prevent repetition of the crime and improve the criminal, we are at once brought face to face with a fresh difficulty, in the fact that criminals, like other men, are not all alike; that a degree of severity which would benefit and correct one offender would injure and exasperate another. This is the real difficulty in the whole case, and manifests more plainly than anything else the awful difference between a prison and a home.

A wise parent will not allow himself to be fettered by arbitrary codes of law and penalty, but be ever guided by the individual interests and peculiarities of his children. He may wisely use even the rod, before a certain age is reached, and under special circumstances; but he will not tie himself down always to use it in every case of the same offence. In a prison, however, this discrimination is impossible. A magasterial or judicial sentence has been passed already which determines the number of lashes and the times at which they are to be inflicted. Whether the poor criminal be obdurate or tender, still bent on violence or heartily repentant, it makes no difference-the horrible torture and shame must be endured. Hence it is that there is danger lest the end in this be de feated, lest the criminal should be hardened instead of being improved, and his evil propensities be aggravated instead of being checked,

I see no other ground on which the "cat" can be justly objected to, and on this ground we might equally object to all the minor degrees of torture involved in imprisonment.

But, on the other hand, it must be admitted that, as men must be grievously below the ordinary level of human feeling before they can deliberately injure for life a harmless stranger for the sake of a gold watch and a few sovereigns, so this class of criminals is more likely to be benefited by severe torture than those of a higher type of humanity. I can well imagine that the fiend who has beaten and kicked his defenceless wife for God knows how long would be less likely to do it again after being well flogged in prison; and if there is a tolerable certainty that such an effect would follow, the use of the "cat" in such a case becomes a duty.

The limit to be put upon the degree of torture inflicted on criminals must be determined on purely humane principles. We have struck out retaliation, and we retain only correction. Then that correction must be made as effective as possible, consistently with safety to the health and sanity of the sufferer. The presence of a medical officer is invariable when the "cat" is used, and he has it in his power to arrest the torture at any moment when he perceives it to be dangerous or unbearable.

Much has been said about the brutalizing effects of the operation upon the operator. I am informed that nothing is more ill-founded than this objection. The warders upon whom the wretched task is laid approach it with quivering lips and beating hearts, and leave it with swimming eyes and audible groans. Work, even of this excruciatingly painful kind, does not degrade, when done in the lawful discharge of one's duty, and with only feelings of pity and commiseration for the criminal. I have seen something of these men myself; and, if there is anything more remarkable about a prison warder than about another officer in the same rank outside, it is the wonderful tenderness, softness, and susceptibility which he displays, and which may be traced in a great measure to the intensely sad scenes in which he lives and toils. The very necessity for a stern and firm demeanor towards those whom he pities calls into unusual activity sentiments of tenderness and sympathy towards the unhappy creatures under his control.

On the whole, I am inclined to the belief that flogging for certain offences is perfectly consistent with our holiest idea of punishment; and that the possible misapplication of it might be considerably avoided by giving discretionary power to the governor of the prison to withhold the infliction in such cases as he deemed it likely to prove morally injurious. We have not yet arrived at the promised land, in which pains and penalties will no longer be wanted because the crimes to be punished by them will no longer exist. Our present system is at best but a choice of evils. and we can but make the best use of it in our power.

I am, sir, very truly yours, CHARLES VOYSEY.

CAMDEN HOUSE, Dulwich, S. E., May 18, 1874.

Communications.

THE "LOWER ARCH."

"Oppress not to the utmost a single soul."

[Quoted by Charles Summer from the Oriental.] [Quoted by Charles Summer from the Oriental.] "How," asks Warden Haynes, in his able States Prison Report of 1887, "shall the necessary discipline in a prison be enforced?... Various kinds of punish-ments are resorted to, in the different States, to ac-complish the end, but all are, to a greater or less ex-tent, objectionable. "In Maine. The dark cell and lash not prohibited, though never need. "In War Harmehing. The same cases, the lash. "Rhode Island. The dark cell. "Connecticut. Dark cell and lash. "New York. Dark cell, shower bath, shaving the head, iron cap, bucking, and poke, or crucifix. "In Massachusetts. The dark cell has been the only punishment for the last ten years. This in all cases has been found unficient, and is doubtless the least objectionable of any avietem of unpishment power. cases has been found sufficient, and is doubtless the least objectionable of any system of punishment now in use. I disapprove of it, however, for the following reasons: First, that in darkening the cells you neces-sarily exclude the air, and destroy the ventilation; the constitution of the convict who is frequently, or for any length of time, subjected to this discipline must unavoidably become impaired. Secondly, the labor for the time he is shut up is lost to the State. To find a substitute that will prove effective and free from the above objections is certainly very desirable. I have given much thought and attention to the sub-ject, and have come to the conclusion that a system of supersede all other punishments."

"'In New Hampshire. The same. "Vermont. Dark cell, iron jacket, and, in some cases, the lash.

marks can be introduced that will, in a great measure, supersede all other punishments." Sir W. Crofton, developer of the famous Irish sys-tem, observes: "I can record from actual experience that the marks are of the utmost value; that they are the means of acting upon a man as an individual, and of realizing to him his own position, and his own means of progress. I know of no other way in which you can produce that effect upon him. I am quite satisfied that, wherever the system of marks is tried, it will succeed."

It will succeed." Dr. A. B. Bancroft, for many years physician of the Massachusetts State Prison, in his Report of 1859, thus gives his testimony in regard to the sanitary in-expediency of solitary confinement: "The employ-ment of solitary confinement, as a punishment, although I do not propose to call in question its neces-sity, tends strongly, when protracted (and the charac-ter of the offender often renders this unavoidable), to sity, tends strongly, when protracted (and the charac-ter of the offender often renders this unavoidable), to undermine the constitution and favor the develop-ment of tubercular disease." As, in spite of these protests, solitary confinement is still recognized as a necessity in the prison system of Massachusetts, and probably will be until an ef-fective substitute for it can be devised (and that seems, at present, "mast praying for"), it would appear to be the immediate duty of the State to guard, so far as is possible, this necessary evil from such abuse as re-sults from the additional mischlef of total darkness, dampness, lack of ventilation, and the inhuman prac-tice of chaining the offender; and, by the inaugura-tice of chaining the offender; and, by the inaugura-tice of prison authorities. Public attention would seem to be particularly called to the subject at this time, by the spology of no less a person than a prison chaplain for that most miserable of dungeons, the "Lower Arch," in which the reverend gentleman makes this remarkable state-ment: "No man has ever died while in prison [mean-ing, it is inferred, the Massachusetts State Prison, as the article in question is written in defence of its War-

the article in question is written in defence of its War-den] that had ever been in the Arch, with one excep-tion, —and he died of consumption, some sitteen months after his confinement, which lasted only too tion,—and he died of consumption, some sizteen months after his confinement, which lasted only two days."

Having in my possession the Massachusetts State Prison Reports from 1855 down to 1874, and so much of its history as is contained in that valuable and interesting work of ex-Warden Haynes, entitled Pietures of Prison Life, I am able to lay before the public a few simple facts in controversion of this absurdly false statement. I quote first from Pictures of Prison Life, chapter IL, page eighty-one:— "In the Lower Arch," says Mr. Haynes, "or dungen, I found a man by the name of Lynch. He was one of the ten already referred to. He was placed here as a punishment for breaking and destroying his bedstead and bedding, and had been there about a week." This was April 1, 1858. Here follows a description of the place: "The cell in which he was confined was about six feet by eight, perfectly dark; night and day were both alike to him; a board and blanket his bed, bread and water in limited quantities his diet. Here he had been for a week, and here he was determined to remain for the next seven months. I saw him occasionally till the 14th of the month." Having expressly stated that Lynch had been kept there for a week, Mr. Haynes says that he was not released till he 14th of the same month. He relates the dircumstances of his recommitment to the prison, and says that he died there in the hospital, August 3, 1860; which of course disposes at once of the statement that he is the one man who "died of consumption sixteen months after his confinement," which "only lasted two days." Turing to the Reports of Dr. Bancroft, before monthe, it actions the core woo have supervision of the prison, and its othose who have supervision of the prison and its officers, that a history of each fatal case, and the as to those who have supervision of the prison and its officers, that a history of each fatal case, and the cause of death, should appear with somewhat of mi-nuteness of detail in the Annual Report. By so doing, I likewise induige the hope that these papers may not prove entirely worthless to the future medi-cal explorer." Thus he reports the case of Lynch and the cause of his death: "Michael Lynch died August 8, of pulmonary consumption; aged 26. He en-tered the hospital June 16, 1860, and the prison De-cember 6, 1858. This map, on account of his dangerous impulses, was for a long time in close confine-ment, which developed, if it did not initiate, his disease."

disease." In Dr. Bancroft's Report of 1859, the following case is stated: "Charles Green was sentenced to the State Prison in November 1856, for burglary. During the first five or six months he applied himself to work in the stone-sheed, with tolerable diligence, but early ex-hibited restlessness under restraint. By his indo-lence he soon brought himself under the animadver-sion of his overseer. His indolence and stubbornness became at last so obnoxious that he was placed in sol-itary confinement. Punishment producing no im-pression upon him, and symptoms of disordered in-tellect beginning to manifest themselves, he was transferred to the hospital, where he remained under the observation of the physician, until his noise ren-dered his removal to another place" [the Arch] "nec-essary. As there was no apartment suitable for him in the unsettled condition of his mind, he was con-reyed to a comfortable room under the Arch, until his mental state should assume a more decided char-acter. No alteration was noticeable in his case up to the period of his death. The turnkey, on entering his cell in the morning of April 12, found that he had committed suicide by hanging." In his Report of 1864, Dr. Bancroft describes in de-tall the case of Thomas Doyle; it is long, and I quote only so much of it as bears on the point in ques-tion:— "He had been in close confinement for an assault In Dr. Bancroft's Report of 1859, the following case

tion

tion :--"He had been in close confinement for an assault upon an officer, and, being a dangerous man, for four-teen months... November 9 I was requested to see him, as he had refused to eat... The paleness and emaciation noticed at the previous visit were now more marked; there was also a frequent and feeble pulse... Doyle was immediately removed to the hospital, and put upon as generous a diet, with such stimulants, as he could bear. Possibly he may have taken a larger quantity of food than his stomach could digest, for the day after his admission he had a diarrhege which, although soon checked, resulted in could digest, for the day after his admission he had a diarrhera which, although soon checked, resulted in his death November 13." In the Report for 1865, it is stated that James Hur-ley was found dead Monday forenoon, August 6. "Being a dangerous man, he was confined apart from the other prisoners. . . . His disease was perito-hitis, or inflammation of the serous membrane which lines the abdominal cavity. In his case it was com-plicated with strumous tubercles. Treatment in cases of this disease is unavailing, as they always terminate fatally." "William Connolley entered prison November S. ... For obstinately refusing to work, he was kept upon bread and water, and endured this treatment for seven weeks without flinching. ... Finally, symp-toms of scurvy appearing, he was transferred to the heapital, and placed upon appropriate treatment. ... He died September 9; the left lung was completely disorganized."

manning Google

<text>

CAN AN ATHEIST CLAIM TO BE A CHRIS-

CAN AN ATHEIST CLAIM TO BE A CHRIS-TIAN? The Investigator, and I think THE INDEX, says that an atheist cannot claim to be a Christian without be-ing a bypocrite. It seems to me that he can. There are many definitions of Christianity, some of them be-generative comprehensive. Robertson defines it as "self-sacrifice." Cannot an athelist be self-sacrific-ing? Some define it as the effort after perfection. Cannot an atheist strive after perfection? Of course, if an atheist defines Christianity in such a way that it connotes theism, he cannot truthfully claim to be a Christian; but Christianity does not necessarily connote theism. It is not a theological but historical term. It has no strict meaning, but an ever-varying, changing meaning. That meaning may include the-ism, and may not. It may include a reference to Jesus, and may not. Even if i does include a refer-ence to Jesus, that does not exclude the stheist; for, though the atheist may not believe that Jesus is God, he may still believe that he is a perfect man, a teach-er, a master, an authority in religion, and then he is a Christian according to James Freeman Clarke's definition. He may reject the idea of God, but not necessarily the idea of authority. Comte did not. Any one who acknowledges Jesus as authority in re-ligion, in the same way that he acknowledges Newton as an authority in mathematics, is by Clarke's defin-tion a good Christian. Clarke does not insist upon beism; he only insists upon Jesus. I have heard orthodox Christians say that Jesus was all the God whore worship. Is not this stheism? We believe that inte-tenths of Orthodox, when we get to the heart of it, is founded on atheism. It is the worship of man as God.

of man as God. So there are, it strikes me, many modes of thought by which an atheist can be a Christian. There are many definitions of "Christianity," from Robertson to Clarke, wherein an atheist can find comfortable quarters. For my part, I do not wish to define Chris-tlanity so as to keep out any noble soul; I would de-fine it, therefore, as the effort after a grand ideal, that ideal growing out of one's own heart and life. This does not exclude the atheist. S. P. PUTRAM.

S. P. PUTNAM.

[We do not remember making the remark in question, and do not believe we ever made it. Christianity, however, in our view of it (which is the common view), certainly includes theism. But eccentricity is not hypocrisy, and there may be persons who call themselves Christians and atheists at the same time; without being bypocrites, either.-ED.]

AMERICAN UNITARIAN ASSOCIATION.

ANNUAL MEETING, YESTERDAY-A LIVELY DISCUS-BION ON THE "YEAR BOOK"-RESOLUTIONS, BE-PORTS, AND REMARKS.

stor ON THE "YEAR BOOK" - RESOLUTIONS, HE-PORTS, AND REMARKS. The annual meeting of this Association was held at the Bulfinch Place Chapel, Tuesday, May 25. The Hon. John Wells, of Boston, presided. The report of the Treasurer showed: Balance last year, $3,515.21; Teceipts, $67,063.96; expenditures, $68,315.58; present balance, $2,203.64. The total of permanent funds is $105,840. The report of the Secretary stated that the financial losses to the community by the Boston and Chicago fires had produced some diminution of con-tributions, and some increase of necessilies of various societies. The missionary work has been well main-tained, and not only in this country, but in India, Italy, Hungary, Germany, Iceland, and Japan some-thing had been done in promoting the spread of lib-eral Christianity. Various details of the missionary work at the West were given, and it was recommended that a travelling missionary be procured to serve un-der the direction of the Western Conference. The Rev. Edward E. Hals offered the following resolution, which he prefaced with an argument in favor of presenting some practical and tanglule object when appealing to the laity for funds for the Associa-tion:-Resolved. That it is desirable to establish new con-

Resolved, That it is desirable to establish new con-gregations in six of the principal cities, or centres of opinion, in which there are now no Unitarian churches.

opinion, in which there are now no Onitatian churches. After a discussion, in which some expressed ap-prehension that a diminution of local work might be the consequence, the resolution was passed. The Rev. Mr. Barber, of Somerville, offered a reso-lution that a copy of the works of Channing be pre-sented to every settled minister in America. This was adopted. This subject of the Fear Book was then taken up. This had been referred to in the Secretary's report. A practical difficulty had arisen in regard to placing certain churches and ministers on the list. The par-ticular case referred to in this part of the report was understood to be that of Mr. Potter, of New Bedford, and on account of his letter, declaring himself a Uni-tarian but not a Christian, the Executive Committee were forced to elect from the following three choices: Either that the denomination is not based on Chris-tianity; or, professing Christianity, if is willing to publied a list of ministers not correct in fact, by in-cluding those not Christians, or that the writer, Mr. Potter, is a Christian, notwithstanding his disavowal. The Rev. George L. Chaney offered the following: Resolved, That the word Unitarian, as used among

Resolved, That the word Unitarian, as used among us, means Unitarian Christians, and that no list of Unitarian ministers is correct which contains the name of any person who is not Christian Amendments were then offered as follows: By the Rev. Mr. Hall, of Worcester :--

Amendments were then offered as follows: By the Rev. Mr. Hail, of Worcester:--Resolved, That in omitting from the Year Book of 1874 the name of a minister who had not requested the omission of his name, the Executive Committee have assumed a responsibility too great to be borne bay any but the Association itself, and such action of the Executive Committee is hereby declared null. By Mr. Talbot:-By Mr. Horton, of Leominster:-By the New, Mr. Horton, of Leominster:-Christlans.

Christians. By the Rev. Mr. Horton, of Leominster:— Resolved, That the name of the Rev. W. J. Potter be replaced on the Year Book of our denomination, and that we, as members of the American Unitarian Association, would accompany the above resolution with the following declaration: That all names of ministers appearing on the official Year Book are presupposed, by their consent, to be representatives of Unitarian Christianity, and we hereby instruct the Executive Committee to prefix this statement to the annual list.

of Unitarian Christianity, and we hereby instruct the Executive Committee to prefix this statement to the annual list. By the Rev. Mr. Cordner, of Montreal:— Resolved, That inasmuch as the term Unitarian, as used in the title of this Association and its publica-tions, has always been held to carry a distinctively Christian meaning, our Unitarian ministers being held and regarded by us as public teachers of the Christian religion; and as the action of the Assistant Secretary, sustained by the Executive Committee, in omitting from the catalogue the name of a minister who says he is no longer a Christian, has been in harmony with this common usage of the term among us, therefore the action be now and hereby is ap-proved and ratified. By the Rev. C. C. Everett, of Cambridge:— Resolved, That in the opinion of this Association, whatever else the list of ministers in the Year Book may or may not contain, it should contain the names of all ordained ministers actually settled over Uni-tarian parishes. By the Rev. Mr. Bixby, of Watertown:— WHEREAS, As A mere matter of convenience to the public, the American Unitarian Association, through its regular officers has, hitherto, annually prepared and published a list of those supposed to be generally accepted as Unitarian ministers; and WHEREAS, The correctness of this list has now been brought into question, and certain ones consider themselves aggrieved thereby; and WHEREAS, This Association is not an authorized representative of the churches of the denomination, but only an association of individuals, acting in their private capacity for missionary and other purposes; therefore Resolved, That this Association claims no right to active the the the the to he core the no oright to

Resolved, That this Association claims no right to decide who is or who is not to be considered as right-ly belonging to the ranks of the Unitarian ministry, and declines to adjudicate upon the question; com-mending it and also the future preparation of a con-thorized representatives of our churches at the next meeting in the National Conference. At the opening of the afternoon session, the Rev. Mr. Hale withdrew his motion in favor of that of Mr. Everett, and it was finally placed in the position of an amendment to Mr. Chaney's resolution, and Mr. Horton's amendment. The Rev. James Freeman Clarke offered the follow-ing:-

ing:-Resolved, That in preparing the catalogue of Uni-tarian ministers contained in the Year Book, when-ever it shall appear that any person whose name has hitherto been contained therein shall have publicly declared himself to be no longer a Unitarian, no long-er a Christian, the officers of the Association shall in-quire whether he wishes his name continued in the catalogue. If he replies that he does, it shall be still printed therein; otherwise it shall be omitted. After much discussion, the resolution against the recognition of such men as Mr. Potter in the Unita-rian ranks prevailed, and so a fruitful source of de-bate came to an end.-Boston Globe,

ON ONE OCCASION Hon. Jereniah Mason went into Charles Sumper's office, and found him writing an address to be delivered before a peace society. After a little good-natured defence of his views by Mr. Summer, the former, rising to take his leave, said: "Well, Summer, you may be right, but I should just as soon think of joining a society for the suppression of thunder and lightning as a society for the suppres-sion of war."

Inguized by Google

274	THE INDEX-	JUNE 4, 1874.
Advertisements.	GOOD PHOTOGRAPHS		D D B L I C A T I O N
THE PATRONAGE	LEADING INDEX WHITERS. Including	THE INDEX,	FREE
of the liberal advertising public is respectfully solicited for THE INDEX. The attempt will be honestly made to keep the advertising pages of THE INDEX in entire harmony with its general character and principies, and these to furnish to the public an advertising generics, but also worthy of their most generous support. To this end, all improper or "blind" advertisements, and advertisements believed to be fraadulent or work of the advertisements believed to be fraadulent or work of one, will be	O. B. FEOTHINGHAM, T. W. HIGGINSON, W. J. POTTER,	A Weekly Journal	RELIGIOUS
medium which shall be not only profitable to its patrons, but also worthy of their most generous support. To this end, all improper or "blind" advertisements, all quack adver- tisements, and all advertisements believed	W. H. SPENCER, F. W. NEWMAN, CHAS. VOYSEY,	FREE RELIGION. PUBLISHED BY THE	ASSOCIATIO
to be fraudulent or unjust to any one, will be arcluded from these columns. No cuts will be admitted. THE HOEX must not be held responsible for any statement made by advertisers, who will in all cases accept the responsibility for	A. W. STEVENS, F. E. ABBOT, Are now for sale at the office of THE INDEX, and will be mailed postpaid to any address	INDEX ASSOCIATION,	Report of the Addresses and of Proceedings of the Original Me ing in 1867, at which the F Heligious Association was Org
ADVERTISING RATES.	on receipt of price. Single Photographs, 25 cents each; complete Set of Eight Photo- graphs, $1.50.	No. 1 Tremont Place, Boston. EDITOR:	iged. Containing addresses by 0. B Fr ingham, Henry Blanchard, Locretia M Bobert Dale Owen, John Weizs, Oliver Jo son, F. E. Abbot, D. A. Wasson, T. W. 1
For 1 to 12 Insertions, 10c per line. 11 13 11 25 14 8 14 14 11 26 15 14 6 14 14 11 25 14 15 14 15 14 11 25 14 15 14 15 14 15 14 15 14 15 15 15 15 15 15 15 15 15 15 15 15 15	Address, THE INDEX, No. 1 Tremont Place, Boston, Mass.	FRANCIS ELLINGWOOD ABBOT. ASSOCIATE EDITOR:	ginson, and Ralph Waldo Emerson.
On half-column advertisements, a discount of 10 per cent. will be made; on full-column	INDEX TRACTS.	ABRAM WALTER STEVENS.	(This pamphlet has not been on sale f number of years, and many persons who all of the Annual Reports succeeding do advertisements, a discount of 25 per cent. On all advertisements for which cash is paid in advance, a further discount of 25 per sent. on the total, as above calculated, will be made. FRANCIS & ABBOT, Editor.	No. 1Truths for the Times, by F. E. Abbot, contains the "Fifty Affirmations" and "Modern Principles." MR. CHARLES	BDITORIAL CONTRIBUTORS: 0. B. FROTHINGHAM, New York City.	possess this.) Price 50 cents.
CIRCULATE   Circulate     Circu-	DARWIN, author of "The Origin of Spe- cies," says, in a letter to the editor not orig- inally intended for publication, but subse-	T. W. HIGGINSON, Newport, B.I. W. J. POTTER, New Bedford, Mass. R. P. HALLOWELL, Boston, Mass.	Proceedings of Second Annual M ing, 1889. 50 cents. Contains essay Julia Ward Howe on "Freedom and
V late THOSE PETITIONS. Don't feel satis- led when your petition is a yard long, unless you have maked every one to sign it. Gef good, influ- ential names.	quently authorized to be used: "I have now read "Taurus FOR THE TIMES,' and I admire them from my inmost heart; and I agree to	MES. E. D. CHENEY, Jamaica Plain, Mass. F. W. NEWMAN, England.	straint in Religion," and by David A. 7 son on "The Relation of Social Science Religion," and speeches by O. B. Froth
GET EVERYBODY.	almost every word." New Edition. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00.	CHARLES VOYSEY, England.	ham, Jesse H. Jones, F. E. Abbot, Wm. I ton, R. W. Emerson, Mary Grew, ('. A. I tol, A. M. Powell, H. B. Blackwell, Bowl
Don't neglect to show the petition to any one, because be is a stockholder in some church, or other exempled property as many such persons admit the justice of the demand; and those who will not should be made to take the responsibility of fortuning to sign it. why to the start the petitions returned why to be the start of the s	No. 2.—Fear of the Living God, by O. B. Frothingham, exposes the debasing char- acter of the popular notions of God, and presents conceptions of him that are wor-	THE INDEX sims- To increase general intelligence with respect to religion:	Connor, Lucy Stone, Horace Seaver, others; with an appendix on "Outline Judaiam" by Babbi Wise.
sarly. Per order of EXEC. CONM. of the BOSTON LIBEBAL LEAGUE.	thy of the nineteenth century. New Edi- tion. Price 5 cents; 12 copies 50 cents.	To foster a nobler spirit and quicken a higher purpose, both in society and in the indi- vidual:	Proceedings of Third Annual II ing, 1870. 50 cents. Contains es
CULTURED FREE THOUGHT.	No. 3Lecture on the Bible, by the Rev. Charles Voysey, of England, is an over- whelming demonstration of the imperfec-	To substitute knowledge for ignorance, right for wrong, truth for superstition, freedom	by O. B. Frothingham on the "Idea of Free Religious Association," followed addresses by D. A. Wasson on "The Na
The Index Association,	tions and errors of the Bible, both in the Old and the New Testaments. New Edition. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00.	for slavery, character for creed, catholicity for bigotry, love for hate, humanitarianism for sectarianism, devotion to universal ends	of Religion," by Mrs. E. D. Cheney on " ligion as a Social Force, especially in p tion to Philanthropy and Reform," an
OFFICE, NO. 1 TREMONT PL., BOSTON, as been organized with a capital stock fixed at	No. 4Christian Propagandism, by F. E. Abbot, is an exposure of the weakness,	for absorption in selfish schemes. In brief, to hasten the day when Free Belig-	F. E. Abbot on "The Future of Belig Organization, as affected by the Spiri the Age;" an essay by Samuel Johnso
ONE BUNDRED THOUSAND dollars, for the surpose of publishing Tracis, Books, and	costliness, and inefficiency of the System of Foreign Missions. Full of Figures, Facts,	ion shall take the place of dogmatism and ecclesiasticism throughout the world, and when the welfare of humanity here and	"The Natural Sympathy of Beligions," lowed by Rabbi Wise on "The Perma
THE INDEX,	and Interesting Extracts. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00.	now shall be the aim of all private and public activities.	and Progressive Elements of Judaism, T. W. Higginson on "Mohammedani
Weekly Paper devoted to Free and Rational Religion.	No. 5"God in the Constitution," by Rev. Arthur B. Bradford, opposes the pro-	In addition to its general objects, the prac- tical object to which THE INDEX is special-	by Wm. H. Channing on "The Religion China," and Wm. J. Potier on "Reli
It is the object of THE INDEX to give public therance to the boldest, most cultivated, and	posed Theological Amendment to the Unit- ed States Constitution. Price 10 cents; 12 copies §1.00.	iy devoted is the ORGANIZATION OF THE LIBERALS OF THE COUNTRY, for the pur- pose of securing the more complete and con-	Old and New in India;" also abstract discussion on "The Bible in the Pr Schools," by Thos. Vickers, S. R. Calth Rabbi Wise, and others.
est matured thought of the age on all religious meetions, and to apply it directly to the social and political amelioration of society.	No. 6	sistent secularization of the political and ed- ucational institutions of the United States. The Church must give place to the Republic	Proceedings of Fifth Annual M
It is edited by FRANCIS E. ABBOT, assisted by BRAM W. STEVENS, with the following list of Altorial Contributors:	§1.00. No. 7''Compulsory Education," by F. E. Abbot, maintains the right of every	in the affections of the people. The last vestiges of ecclesiastical control must be wiped out of the Constitutions and Statutes of the several States in order to bring them	cents each.) Contains essays by 5 Chadwick on "Liberty and the Churc America." by C. D. B. Mills on "Religio
O. B. FROTHINGHAM, New York City.	child to be educated, and the duty of the State to ensure it an education. Price 5	into harmony with the National Constitution.	the Expression of a Permanent Sentis

THOMAS W. HIGGINSON, Newport, R.I. WILLIAM J. POTTER, New Bedford, Mass WILLIAM H. SPENCER, Haverhill, Mass. RICHARD P. HALLOWELL, Boston, Mass. MRS. E. D. CHENEY, Jamaica Plain, Mass. REV. CHARLES VOYSEY, London, England. PROF. FRANCIS W. NEWMAN, London, Eng.

Every liberal should subscribe for THE INDEX. as the best popular exponent of Religious Liberalism. Every Christian minister, and every thinking church-member, should subscribe for it, as the clearest, most candid, and most scholarly exposition of the differences between Free Thought and Evangelical Christianity, and as the best means of becoming well informed of the arguments and the movements which the Church will have to meet in the future.

Almost every number contains a dis 11768 01 leading article, which alone is worth the price of one year's subscription.

Prof. MAX MUELLER, of Oxford, England in a letter to the Editor published in THE INDEX for Jaquary 4, 1873, says: "That the want of a journal entirely devoted to Religion in the widest sense of the word should be fait in America-that such a journal should have been started and so powerfully supported by the best minds of your country,-is a good sign of the times. There is no such journal in England, France, or Germany; though the number of so-called religious or theological periodicals is, as you know, very large." And later still: "I read the numbers of your IN-DEX with increasing interest."

Send $3.00 for one year, or 75 cents for three months on trial.

Address

THE INDEX. No. | Tremont Piace, Boston. State to ensure it an education. Price  $\delta$  To accomplish this object, the Liberals must

o. 8.-The Present Heaven, by O. B. Frothingham, treats of a subject that in-No terests everybody. New Edition. Price 5 cents; 12 copies 50 cents.

No. 9.—The Christian Amendment, by F. E. Abbot, shows the fingerous charac-ter of the attempt to interpolate the Evangelical Christian Creed in the U. S. Constitution. Price 5 cents; 12 copies 50 cents

No. 10 .- The Impeachment of Christianity, by F. E. Abbot. Fourth Ten Thon-sand. Sent for free distribution to any one who will distribute it, in packages of from five to one hundred copies.

No 11.-The God of Science, by F. E. Ab-bot, attempts to show the real influence of modern science upon the idea of God, Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00.

No. 12.-Is Romanism Real Christian-ity? Two essays by Francis W. Newman and F. E. Abbot. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00.

No. 13 .- On the Vision of Heaven, by Prof. F. W. Newman, of England, analyzes the Christian conception of Heaven. Price 5 cents; 12 copies 50 cents.

No. 14. - A Study of Heligien: The Name and the Thing, by F. E. Abbot, attempts to show that the popular deriva-tion of the word Religion is incorrect; that the popular conceptions of Religion itself are inadequate; and that a new conception of it, based on the Law of Evolution, con-sistent with absolute Freedom of Thought, and independent even of belief in God, is the necessary condition of the perpetuity of Religion among men. Price 10 conts; 12 copies $1.00. Address

THE INDEX, I TREMONT PLACE,

Boston, Mass.

Address

with the money in each case. THE INDEX. No. I Tremont Place, Boston, adilas

make a united demand, and present an un-broken front, and the chief practical aim of THE INDEX will be henceforth to organize a great NATIONAL PARTY OF FREEDOM.

Let every one who believes in this movement give it direct aid by helping to increase the circulation of THE INDEX.

SPECIAL FEATURES.

The publication of a valuable leading paper or easy of a thoughtful character, in each issue, will continue to be one of the most marked features of THE INDEX.

Regular editorial contributions will continue to be furnished by the well-known em-inent writers who have already done so much to give to THE INDEX its present high po-sition. Mr. VOYSEY has kindly consented to furnish every fortnight a LONDON LETTER containing matters of general interest to rad-ical readers. Other interesting correspond-ence, communications, extracts from value-ble books and periodicals, and miscellaneous articles, will also be published; and such improvements will be made from time to AGENTS.

TERMS.

Inre a year, payable in advance; and at the same rate for shorter periods. All remit-tances of money must be at the sender's risk, unless forwarded by cheque, registered let-ter, or post-office money order. The name, with address in full, must be accompanied

The price of THE INDEX is Three Dol-

Local Agents for THE INDEX are wanted in every city and town throughout the coun-try. The most liberal terms are offered.

time as circumstances shall render p

DN.

thar Sec-Toth-John-Hig

for a have o pot

Meet-ays by d Ba-. Was-nos to thing-. Den-. Bar-wiand ; and 105 0

Heelessays of the d by ature "Bo relaigious ligious irit of on on anent n," by ons of ligion t of a ublic throp fieetore, 35 J. W. ch in ion as of the Human Mind," and by O. B. Frothingham on "The Religion of Rumanity," with addresses by Rowland Connor, Cella Burleigh, Lucreita Mott, A. B. Alcott, C. A. Bartol, Horace Seaver, Alexander Loos, and others.

Proceedings of Sixth Annual Meet-ing, 1873. 36 cents. (Four or more, 26 cents each.) Contains essays by Samuel Johnson on "Freedom in Religion," and by John Weiss on "Religion in Freedom," with addresses by Wm. C. Gannett, Robert Dale Owen, T. W. Rigginson, Samuel Longfei-low, J. S. Thomson, F. E. Abbot, and Lucretia Mott.

Sympathy of Beligions, by T. W. Hig-ginson. 25 cents.

Beligions of China, by Wm. H. Chan-ning. 25 cents.

Beason and Revelation, by William J. Potter. 10 cents.

Taxation of Church Property, by Jan. Parton. 10 cents, singly; package 60 cents; of one hundred, $3.

These publications are for sale at the office of the Free Religious Association, No. 1 Tremont Place, Boston. The Annual Reports for 1865 and 1871 cannot be supplied, and the supply of others previous to that of 1872 is quite limited. Orders by mail may be addressed either "Free Beligious Association, No. 1 Tremont Place, Boston," or to the Secretary, New Bedford, Mass.

WM. J. POTTER, Sec. F. R. A.

Google

THE INDEX-JUNE 4, 1874.

1.50

1.00

275

1.76

vol. 1.25

the second se
POPULAR BOOKS,	Historical Pictures Estonched; a Volume of Miscollanios. In two parts. Part L. "Studies, Pictures, and Panciety The Life of Dr. Marie Zakrzewska, John a Practical Illustration of "Woman's Highs to Labor"
SENT BY MAIL	The Life of Dr. Marie Zakrzewska, being a Practical Hinstration of "Woman's Rights to Labor"
17	The Descent of Man. 2 yola
PUBLISHERS' PRICES!	Journal of Researches. Emotional Expression of Man and the Low- er Animals. The Variation of Animals and Flants under Domestication. 2 vols. illustrated
ORDERS PROMPTLY FILLED.	Domestication. 2 vola. Illustrated DESCARTES (RENE.) Discourse on the Method of Rightly conducting the Reason and Seeking Trath in the Sciences
NO EXTRA CHARGE FOR POSTAGE.	DICKENS' Child's History of England DURRING (JULIA.) Philosophers and Fools. A Study
ANY BOOK in the subjoined List, or any other OBTAINABLE BOOK that may be desired, will be forwarded as promptly as possible ou receipt of orders accompanied with the CASH.	LIGUTS (GEORGE) Novels. Housenold Edi- tion. 5 vols., each Comptising- Adam Bede. Romola. The Mill on the Floes.
Orders are respectfully solicited from all friends of THE INDEX.	Feilt Holt. Sligs Marner and Scenes of Clerical Life. The Same. Library Edition. 2 vols Middlemarch. 2 vols. Wit and Wisdom of The Spanish Gypsy. How Liss Loved the King
LOOTT (A. BEONSON). Tablets. Proc. Descrit Days Resords of a School, A new edition. 1.50 Records of a School, A new edition. 1.50 ALOOTT (LOUISA M). Little Women. Two Beepital Sketches and Camp and Pireside 1.60	EMERSON'S (B. W.) Essays. First Series Essays. Second Series Representative Man. English Traitz Conduct of Life Pooms. With Portrait.
Borgial Skotches and Camp and Firesuce Skotce 1.50 Ac 016-Pashioned Girl. 1.50 Little Man. 1.50 Ny Boys, &c. 1.60 Shawi-Extra Carpor Experience 1.50 Work: A Skory of Experience 1.55 	Representative Man. English Traits. Conduct of Life. Fooms. With Portrait. May-day and Other Pieces. Essays. Blue and Gold. Poers. Blue and Gold. Proce Works. 2 vols. Bociety and Solitude.
	Transformations of Christianity. From
ARNOLD'S (MATTHEW) Essays in Oriti- cism	Younger
AURRACH (BERTHOLD). On the Heights. 1.50 Vills Zden; The Country-House on the Rhine	In reference to the Christian Beligion
Khille Edelweiss	PEUERBACH (LUDWIG.) The Essence of Christianity. "George Elict's" translation. FISKE'S (JOHN) Myths and Myth-Makers.
BACON'S Emays	FROTRINGHAM (O. B.) Belleton of Hu-
BAIN (ALEXANDER). Mental Science: A	manily Bellefs of the Uubellevers Child's Book of Religion Life of Theodors Farker
Moral Science: A Compendium of Ethics.	FULLER'S (MARGARET) Complete Works, including Memoirs by Emerson, Channing, and others. A new edition. 6 vois
tion. 1 vol	GALTON (FRANCIS.) Hereditary Genius. An Inquiry into its Laws and Conse- quances
BARTOL (Rev. C. A). Eadlesl Problems 2.00 The Rising Faith	GOETHE'S Faurt. Translated into English Vares by Bayard Taylor. 2 vols. Par vol Elective Affinities. Translated by Thomas Wilhelm Melater. Translated by Thomas Horizon of Dischart Goethe. 2 vols.
BASTIAN (H. CHARLTON). The Begin- nings of Life, 2 vols	Wilhelm Meister. Translated by Thomas Carlyle, Portrait of Goethe. 3 rols Herman and Derothes. Translated by El- len Frothingham
BIBLE in the Pablic Schools. Becords, Arguments, and Decision in the ease of John D. Minor et al. st. the Board of Education of the oity of Chuckanati: et al. In the Supreme Court of the City of Incidnati.	GREG'S (W. R.) Enigmas of Life Literary and Social Judgments Greed of Christendon
Gueinatt. 240 Arguments of Manney, Bage and King in favor of the use of the fible	uments, Private Memoranda, and Original Letters to and from Various Friends. By Mrs. Grote, Second Edition, With Por- trait
BRACKETT (ANNA C.) The Education of American Girls	HAMERTON (PHILIP G.) A Painter s Camp. Book I. In England. Book II. In Scotland. Book III. In France. Thoughts about Art.
BEOORES'(UHARLEST.) Translations. The Lyrnno's Beviar. 2.23 The World-Priset. 75 The Thil Student. 75 BUCHNR'S Force and Matter. 2.25	Thoughts about Art. The Unknown Biver. The Intellectual Life. Chapters on Animals. HAMILTON (GAIL). Child World. Part Sec- ond.
BUCHLARKY FOTOS and Matterner, and BUCHLE (HENRY THOMAS). History of Civilization in England and France, Spain and Scotland. New edition of the entire work, with a complete index. 2 vola 5.00	Child World. Part First and Scotland. New edition of the entire work, with a complete index. 2 vols 6.00	1. Metaphysical Lectures 2. Logical Lectures HAWTHORNESS (NATHANIEL) Works. New Blustrated Library Edition. Nine vols.
CAELYLE'S Works. Chesp edition. Compris- ing the following: Miscellaneoum Essays, 7 yels.; Freuch Bavolation, 3 vols.; Freder- ick the Great, 10 vols.; Cromwell's Letters, 4c., $vols.; Sattor Resartius, 1 vol.; John Steiling, 1 vol.; Life of Schiller, 1 vol.; Past sed Present, 1 vol.; Mice of Schiller, 1 vol. Any volume sold separately. Ji vols. Lon- don, 181-3. Per vol.	Twice-Told Tales. Mosses from an Old Manse. The Scarlet Letter, and The Blithedale and Present, I vol.; Haroos and Hero Wor- ship, I vol.; Latter Day Panphletz, I vol. Any volume sold separately. 31 vols. Lon-	The House of the Seven Oables and The don, 1871-J. Per vol	Allow Image. The Marble Paul. The English Note-Rooks. The American Note-Books. The American Note-Books. The American Note-Books.
CLEPENTER (Da. W. B.) The Principles of Mantal Physiology, with their Applica- tions to be Training and Discipline of the Mid, and the Study of its Morbid Condi- toss	Our Old Homs, and Septimius Feiton. HIGGINSON'S (T. W.) Out-Door Papers Malbons. An Oldport Romance. Army Life in a Black Regiment
CEEVANTES' Don Quincte	Oldport Days
mary commungererererererererererererererererererer	HOWELLS'S (WILLIAM D.) Their Wed- ding Journey Suburban Skokches Venetian Life
CHANNING (WM. ELLERY). Thoreau: The Post Naturalist, With Memorial Verse, 3.00 CHENET (Mus. E. D), Patience. A Series	Italian Journeys. Δ Chance Acquaintance HUGO'S (V.) New Novel, "Ninety-Three"
GHENET (Mus. E. D). Patiance. A Series of Thiry Games for the Fireside	HUGO'S (Y.) New Noval, " Runsy - Lines HUMBOLDT (ALEXANDER VON). Life of Translated from the German. 2 vols., with three portraits
OLAREE (JAMES FREEMAN). Ten Great Religiona	HUME'S (DAVID) Essays and Life HUMT'S (MES. HELEN). Vorses Bits of Travel
ULABEE (Dr. E. H.) Sex in Education 1.25	Bits of Travel
GLODD (EDWAED). The Childhood of the World	More Criticlems on Darwin and Adminis- trative Ninliam A Manual of the Anatomy of Vertebrated Animals Lay Sermons, Addresses, and Reviews
COBBE (FRANCES POWEB). Studies New and Old, of Exhical and Social Subjects. 3.00 Darwhism in Morals, and other Essays	Lay Sermons, Addresses, and Beviews INGELOW'S (JEAN) Foems The Monitions of the Unseen
MPPPT APTON	Songs of Seven
balts, Mayer, Faraday, Liebig and Carpen- ter: with an Introduction by Edward L. Youmans, M.D. 1 vol.	Studies for Stories
LIPE; Its True Aims and Requirements.	Saries. A Sister's Bye-Hours Mopsa the Fair: A Btory. Poor Matt; or, The Clouded Intellect
	INTERNATIONAL SCIENTIFIC SERIES. No. L. Forms of Water, in Clouds, Rain, Rivers, Ice, and Glaciers. By John Tyu- dall.
DALL (Mus. CARCOLINE E). The College, be Market, and the Court; or, Woman's Relation to Education. Employment, and Citizenship	dail II. Physics and Politics; or, Thoughts on the Application of the Principles of "Natural Belection," and "Inheritance" to Political Society. By Walter Engeliot.

Б<sub>11</sub>

X

(RENE.) Discourse on the Rightly conducting the Reason g Trath in the Sciences. de. on the Flore.
 10 07,000
 10 07,000
 100 100

 0.000 Like King
 100 100 100

 0.000 Series
 2.00
 2.00
 2.00

 1.000 Series
 2.00
 2.00
 2.00

 1.000 Series
 2.00
 1.00
 1.00

 1.000 Series
 2.00
 1.00
 1.00

 1.000 Series
 2.00
 1.00
 1.00

 1.000 Series
 1.00
 1.00
 1.00

 1.001 Solitude
 1.00
 1.00
 1.00
 P., Ph. D). First Historical ations of Christianity. From of Athanase Coquerei the d Works of Gotthold Ephraim Translated from the German of hr. 1 vols 5.00 britical History of Free Thought, a to the Christian Heligion...... 2.00 HN) Myths and Myth-Makers., 2.0 MAEGARET) Complete Works, lemoirs by Emerson, Channing, A new edition. 8 vois ...... RANCIS.) Hereditary Genius. 'anst. Translated into English ayard Taylor. 2 vols. Per vol 5.00 Inities. 1.25 7E. Compiled from Family Doo-vate Memoranda, and Original and from Various Friends. By Second Edition. With Por-(PHILIP G.) A Painter s Camp. England. Book II, In Scotland. ingland, Book II, In Scotlas Prance Jout Art. wn Biver tual Life Animals. 1.80 2.00 6.00 2.00 4.00 GAIL). Child World. Part Sec-. Part First..... 1.00 E'S (NATHANIEL) Works. Led Library Edition. Nine vols. 2.00 d Tales. om an Old Manse. et Letter, and The Blithedale of the Seven Gables, and The lo Fan. lo Fan. sh Note-Books. rican Note-Books. ch and Italian Note-Books. Toms, and Septimius Feiton. (WILLIAM D.) Their Wed. (WILLIAM D.) Their Wed. 2.00 New Novel. " 'Ninety-Three"., 1.75 s, Addresses, and Beviews..... 1.75 (JEAN) Prose. Off the Skel-1.75 to a Child. First and Secon 1.25 1.25 1.25 .60 ye-Hours alry: A Story. or, The Clouded Intellect..... ONAL SCIENTIFIC SERIES. ms of Water, in Clouds, Rain, e, and Giaciers. By John Tyu-1.50

BOSSETTI (CHRISTINA G.) A Shadow of Dante JOHNSON'S (SAMUEL) Oriental Religions, and their Relation to Universal Religion, India JOWETT. The Dialognes of Plato. Trans-RERR (ORPHEUS C). Versatilities, Poems, Patriotic, Sentimental and Humprons...... 2.00 LECKY (W. E. H.) History of the Rise and Influence of the Spirit of Rationalism in SMILLES'S (SAMTEL) Self-Help ..... 1.50 tus to Charlemagne. 2 vols ..... 6.00 LEWES' Physiology of Common Life, 1 yots, 200 Biographical History of Philosophy, from its Origin in Greece down to the Fresont Day, 7 yols, 400 Problems of Life and Mind. The Founda-tions of a Greed. SPINOZA (BENEDICT DE.) Trastatus The-LEWES (G. H.) The Story of Goethe's Life. 1.50 LEWIN (BEV. RAPHAEL, D'C). What is Ju-daism? or, a Few Words to the Jews..... 1.00 LONGPELLOW'S (H. W.) Poems. Fortrait. STRAUSS (D. F.) The Old Faith and the New Life of Josus. Authorized transla-tion. 2 vois TAINE'S (H. A.) History of English Litera-ture. 2 vole The Class-Room Taine, Elstory of English Internative. Abridged and Edited by John Fiske TENNYSON'S (ALFRED) Poems ...... 1.75 THACKERAY'S (W.M.) Novels, Household Edition. Complete las volumes. Per vol., 1.25 Vanity Fair. The Newcomes. Adventures of Philip. Fundemais. MACDONALD (GEOEGE.) The Vicar's Daughter. 1.50 The Virginians. Esmond, and Lovel the Widower. Inscellancous, Writings, Household Edi-tion. Uniform with the Novels. Com-pleteins yols. With new Fortrait. Per vol. Horace Mann. 1.25 MARTINEAU (JAMES.) Essays, Philosoph-ical and Theological. 2 vols. Fer vol. 2.50 The New Amalibus of Faith. 25 This edition includes all the matter in the lat-est English editions, with many additions, thus making it, with the novies, the cheapest and most complete Thackeray in the market. MAUBICE (Ezv. F. D.) The Ground and Object of Hope for Mankind Barry Lyndon, Hoggarty Diamond, &c.
 Parfa, and Irish Skoich-Books, &c.
 Snobe, Sketchee, Donle Duval, &c.
 Four Georgee, Humorista, &c.
 Catherine, Christmas Booka, and Uure-printed Pieces. .75 Object of Hope for Mankind...... MERIVALE'S (CHARLES) Conversion of the Roman Empire...... Conversion of the Northern Nations...... 1.50 HOREAU'S (H. D.) Walden; or, Life in FROREAD'S (H. D.). Walden; or, Life in 2.00

 Excursions in Field and Forest.
 Portrail.

 The Maine Woods
 2.00

 Cape Cod.
 5.00

 Leiters
 5.00

 A Yaukee in Canada
 3.00

 A Week on the Concord and Merrimac
 2.00

 Elvers
 2.00
 TYNDALL (JOHN). Faraday as a Discov-Programents of Science for Unscientific Peo-ASBY (PETROLEUM V). Swingin' Round the Cirkle Ekkoes from Kentucky.....
 YOTSEY (REV. CHARLES.) The Sling and the Stone. Vols. I and V. esch.
 3.00

 Vols HL TV. and YI. esch.
 3.75

 The Vorsey Appeal.
 50

 Vorsey's Detence at York
 50
 1.50 Excess from Asshabited and a sensitive and a s 4.5 WARNER'S (CHARLES D.) My Summer in 2.00 1.75 4.25 .25 .25 WEISS (JOHN.) American Religion ...... 1.50 Life of Theodore Farker. 2 yols....... 5.00 WHITNEYS (Mrs. 4. D. T.) A Summer in Lealis Goldhwatte's Life. We Other a. Home Story The Other Girls. The Other Girls. 1.50 1.50 1.50 1.59 1.59 and the Finite PHELPS'S (ELIZABETH STUART.) The Gates Ajar The Troity Book Men, Women, and Ghosts Medged in The The Slient Partner What to Wear?

INDEX, T HE 1 Trement Pince, Boston Tunner Google

ADDRESSI

NONPAREIL Farm Feed, Bone, Drug, and Hand grindlug MILLS. Teu Sizes. Also Colton-Beed Hullers. Illustrat-ed pamphlets free. Address J. SEDGEBEER, Painesville, Ohio. SAVE FIFTY DOLLARS! THE NEW FLORENCE. PRICE, $90 below | any other First-SAVED, $50 by buying the Florence. Svery machine warranted

Special terms to clubs and dealers Bend for circulars to the Florence S. M. Co., Florence, Mass., or T18 Washington Street, Boston, Mass.

S

HAPTER C FROM

The Bible of the Ages.

FOURTEEN CHAPTERS.

FOURTEEN CHAPTERS. Belected from Hindu Vedas, Buddhs, Con-fucius, Egyptian Divine Pymander, Zoroas-ter, Talmuds, Bible, Plato, Pythsgoras, Mar-cus Aurelius, Epicteus, Al Koran, Luther, Scanditavian Eddas, Benan, Taliesin, Mi-ton, Penn, Adam Clarke, Mary Fletcher, F. W. Newman, Tyndall, Max Müller, Elias Hicks, Channing, Garrison, M. C. Wright, Lu-cietia Mort, Higginson, T. Shar King, Bush-nell, Parker, Davis, Emma Hardinge, Emer-son, Denton, Tuttie, Abbot, Frothingham, and others.

Gospels and Inspirations from m Conturies and Peoples.

"Slowly the Bible of the race is writ, Each age, each kindred, adds a verse to it." Edited and Compiled by

GILES B. STEBBINS.

Four bundred pages; bound in cloth; price $1.50. No Extra Charge for Postage. Address No. 1 Tremont Place, Boston.

CHARLES SUMNER'S

GREAT WORK.

PROPHETIC VOICES

CONCERNING AMERICA.

By CHARLES SUMMER.

Fine Edition, Tinted Paper, with Steel Portrait, Crown Syo., Cloth extra, $2.

Aside from its literary and historical merits, this volume has a special interest, from the fact that it was the last work on which Mr. Summer was engaged before his death, "PROPERTIC VOICES" will be found of great value to all who take an interest in the bistory of our country, so full is it of passager in which the unexampled prosperity of our land has been foretold by philosophers, poets, statesmen, and orators, of whom the lament-ed author has also given interesting sketches. Sent, post-paid, on receipt of price,

Address		THE INDEX,
		at Place, Boston.
RADICA	L AND	LITERARY
LI	ECTU	RES

JOHN WEISS.

BADICAL LECTURES.

The Idea of Hereafter. An Act of Faith. Intelligence in Religion. Religion and Science. Heart in Religion.

SHAKSPEARIAN LECTURES. FIRST SERIES.

- 1. Cause of Laughter.
- Irony and Humor.
   Dogberry, Malvolio, Bottom, Touchstone.
   Ajax in Troilus and Cressida: The Porter in Macbeth: The Fool in Lear.
- 5. Falstaff.
- 8. Hamlet.
- SECOND SERIES.
- 1. The Women of Shakspeare. 2. Portia
- Ophelia.
   Macbeth and Lady Macbeth.
- 6. Contrast in Shakspeare's Characters. Address
  - JOHN WEISS, 32 E. Brookline St., Boston.

E. is held at HOSPITALLEE HALL, Set Weahington Street, Boston, every Sunday, at 10% A.M., 25% and 7% P.M. All that relates to the Belligious, Political, and Social interests of manifind constitute the subjects for discussion. The HONX and Index Tracts are for sale every Sunday at Hospitalier Hall.

THE BOUND INDEX FOR 1873

The bound volume of THE INDEX for 1873 (Volume 4) will be promptly forwarded to any address on receipt of $3, by express, at the purchase's express. A complete file for the year can be furnished in no other form. Address 1 Tremont Place, Boston.

A fine likeness of Massachneetts' great Sen-stor, the copy of a recent Photograph by Black, is for sale at THE INDEX office, and will be sent by mail to any address on receipt of the price-fifty cents. Address THE INDEX.

THE INDEX, 1 Tremont Place, Boston TO NEWSPAPER

PUBLISHERS.

Having conveniences for doing the beat of newspaper printing at reasonable prices, I should like to contract for composition slone, or for composition, press-work, and mailing, for one or more weekly papers. Best of references given, and satisfactory work guaranteed. Y Tremont Place, Boston.

TO'BOOK-BUYERS.

Please examine the revised list of POPU-LAR BOOKS on the opposite side of this page. Any OBTAINABLE BOOK NOT IN THIS LIST will be furnished to order. Readers of THE INDEX who desire to pur-chase English, German, or French Books, or who wish for information as to the price, &c., of any American or Foreign Book, can have their orders prompily filled and their inqui-ries answered by addressing. THE INDEX, 1 Tremont Place, Boston.

BOUND VOLUMES OF THE

Bound volumes of THE INDEX for 1871, 1873, and 1873, will be sent by express (at the purchaser's express) on receipt of $2.50, $2.50, 82.50, and $3.00 respectively. These volumes are exceedingly valuable singly, irrespective of each other; for the important essays and other articles they contain are of permanent interest, and will furnish as instructive read-ing twenty years hence as, to-day. No more valuable present could be made to a friend thrugging out of Orthodoxy than one of these volumes.

Add	1036	1	Trem	TH opt Pl	E INI lace, B	EX,	n.
W	A	R	R	E	N	1	8
T	RUE		VII.		TI	DN.
PI	ACT	CIC.	L	DE'	TAL	LS,
	showl	ng th	e worl	dings	of the
C	OST	P	RII	VCI	PL	E.
		Prie	e 25 c	ents.
Por	ale by
S .	H		M	0	RS	5 I	Ξ,
	95 Br	romf	eld S	t., B	oston
B	U	s	T		(	)	F
T	HEO.	DOI	E.	PAI	RKF	R,
	SII	NET	BY H.	MOR	RSE.	1
poise, has so of tha ningly	to mouthe cha	e thruis own life t	n hear hat he luto	the cl t with has h hose	lay; the appropriate appropriate appropriate approximate approxima	eciat	tist ion un-which the character had wrought on the liv-ing fibre. We are tempted to exclaim, as we stand beside it, as the old artist did to his perfected work, "Speak then!"-Hannah E. perfected Stewart

Stevenson. All the characteristics of my bushand are in the bust,—his greatnese, his goodnese, his tendernese, his love. You cannot give life to clay or marble; but you can represent it, and this Mr. Morre has done.—Lydta D. Parker to Hannah E. Stevenson,

The eyes, though but of clay, are gleaning with possible indignation, with possible tears, the liys are set firm with the resolution of him who, like Paul, could "fight a good fight" as well as "give a reason."—Samuel Longfel-lore.

The first time I have seen Theodore Parker since he died .- Wm. Sparrell.

The best representation of Mr. Parker even xecuted in clay.-Boston Daily Globe.

The face is strong and noble as it should be. The likeness is good.—Boston Daily Advertiser. I ne nkeness is good.—Boaton bait y Advertiser. Nothing appears for beauty advertiser. Not o show the vanity of the artist. All is forgotten in the man—the true, real, Yankee man, Theodore Parker.—L. S. H. in the Golden Age.

" Copies of this Bust, finely finished n play ter, $10 each. Boxing for transportation, $1 extra. Freight or expressage paid by party sending order. Weight of box about fifty pounds. Orders may be sent to

S. H. MORSE, Boom 13, 25 Bromfield St., Boston, Mass.

FREE DISCUSSION BOSTON LIBERAL LEAGUE. on decided to di Our organization some time a rect its efforts for the present towards securing

Repeal of the Laws

whereby church and other corporate property is unjustly exempted from its share of the burdes of taxation.

As a means to this end, we have published for anaral circulation several thousand copies of a

TRACT

on Church Exemption, being the article by Mr. Abbot which appeared in THE INDEX of Nov. 27 The edition was made as large as our fund ould allow; but, so great has been the demand, It is already nearly exhausted. Our next edition ought to be large enough t blace a copy in the hands of

EVERY VOTER IN THE STATE, d generously to supply the calls for them in other States. To do this, we need funds; for, although w have made arrangements for printing the Tract at very low cost, it is impossible for the Boston Loague, with its various other expenses, to beau the entire expense alone. Will not, then.

All Friends of the Movement

ne forward and help us with liberal donat We frequently receive communications from parties wishing tracts to distribute, asking how much they shall pay. To such we reply that the cost to us is about $2.50 per thousand, and we shall be pleased to furnish them at this price per thousand, or 20 cents per hundred, to all who will circulate them. But all additional donations will s gratefully received for the purpose of circuting them gratultously throughout the country. To many of the subscribers of THE INDS w nd others whose names have been furnished u a probable friends of the movement, copies of he Tract, together with Petitions asking the recal of the Exemption Laws, have been seat,

With the Hope

hat such friends will try to secure as many sig atures to the petition as possible in their locality We respectfully ask those who are unable to atend to the matter themselves to place the petiions in the hands of those who will. Lot us

BOLL UP THE LIST!

fraud, being not only shorter in length, but a much finer size than they are represented to be, and of so poor a quality as to be unit for use. The ladies will always find the Eu-reka Silk exactly as represented. Every spool is warranted, and the manufacturer's et our united voices be heard ! And let it be done NOW1

We would say, also that we feel deeply the to bee

Other Organizations

in this State, to cooperate with us in securing equality and justice, by pressing the "Domanda of Liberalism." If, in any locality, there are those who are inclined to we are ready to render such assistance our power.

Form a Liberal League.

LIBERALSI

If all will anite and work, the results sought can be accomplished Address Large, splendid books of bound music, two hundred to two hundred and fifty pages, full sheet music size, and contain a very large proportion of all the good sheet music over published. Sold by all dealers. Either book sent post-paid for retail price.

BOSTON LIBERAL LEAGUE.

NO. 1 TREMONT PLACE, BOSTON. Per order of the EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE

Of an excellent Photograph (Cabinet Size) of Rev. MONCURE D. CONWAY, of London, can be had at the office of THE INDEX. Price 50 cents. CHEAP OFFER! A A COMPLETE SET of INDEX TRACTS, from No. 1 to 14 inclusive, will be maile any address on the prepayment of 75 crorts. ress THE INDEX, No. 1 Tremont Place, Boston, Mass Address THE AMERICAN EDITION OF MONCURE D. CONWAYS SACRED ANTHOLOGY, A BOOK OF ETENICAL SCRIPTURES. has just been published, and will be sent postpaid on receipt of the price, $4.00. THE INDEX, Address I TREMONT PLACE Boston, Mass

A FEW COPIES ONLY

G. L. HENDERSON & CO.,

BANKEBS, LEROY, MINN.

Money invested on short time, or for a term of years, on unincumbered improved farms, at 12 per cent, laterest per annum, payable semi-ai nually. Perfect title and ample security guaranteed. All expenses for ab-tract of title and recording mortgage paid by borrower. We collect and remit to any part of the United States free of charge.

part of the United States free of charge, REFRERNCES. - First National Bank, Mo-Gregor, Iows; First National Bank, Austin Minn.: Milwaukee National Bank, Misma-kee, Wis; City National Bank, Chicago, IL; Allen, Stevens & Co., Bankere, New York City; Morris Altman.

REAL ESTATE SECURITIES, paying 8 to 10 per cent.

Investments in Real Estate in Chicage and vicinity, if judiciously made, are the best and safeet modes of employing capital. The old

Real Estate and Loan Agency

OF ERNST PRUSSING, 143 RANDOLPH STREET Chicago (Established 1853),

Guarantees perfect tille and ample security in all its Real Estate Loans. Firstchass securities always on hand. In-terest and principal collected without charge, Real Estate Investments made on commission or on shares; taxes paid, &c. Orders of capitalists and real estate own-ers respectfully solicited.

REASONS FOR USING THE

EUREKA SPOOL SILK.

It is full length. It is full cise. It is smooth and elastic, and is equally adapted to hand or machine use.

Many kinds of spool silk are a perfect

ame indelibly branded on every spool. Call

Home Musical Library.

Price of each Book in Boards, $3.50; Cloth, $3; Full Gilt, $4.

C 0.'S

Vocal.

DITSON &

MUSICAL TREASURE. Vocal.

GEMS OF SACKED SONG. Vocal. GEMS OF GERMAN SONG. Vocal.

GEMS OF SCOTTISH SONG. Vocal. OFERATIC PEARLS. Vocal. SHOWER OF PEARLS. Vocal Ducts.

GEMS OF STRAUSS. Instrumental.

PIANIST'S ALBUM. Instrumental. PIANOFORTE GEMS. Instrumental.

HOME CIRCLE, VOL. I. Instrumental. HOME CIRCLE, VOL. II. Instrumental.

OLIVER DITSON & CO.,

Google Google

BOSTON.

ORGAN AT HOME. Reed Organ Music. In-

SILVER CHORD. Vocal.

WREATH OF GEMS. Vocal.

GEMS OF SACRED SONG.

strumental.

for it.

Three Dollars a Year.

LIBERTY AND LIGHT.

BOSTON, MASS., THURSDAY, JUNE 11, 1874.

Single Copies Seven Cents.

WHOLE NO. 233.

VOLUME 5.

1

1. F. W

e - 7

4

34

ORGANIZE!

THE DEMANDS OF LIBERALISM.

1. We demand that churches and other ecclesiastical reporty shall no longer be exempt from just taxation.

property shall no longer be descripted on the state of th A We demand that all public appropriations for educa-ional and charitable institutions of a sectarian character hall case.

ahall cease. 4. We demand that all religious services now sustained by the povernment shall be abolished; and especially that the use of the Bible in the public schools, whether catenai-by as text-book or avowedly as a book of religious wor-able, shall be prohibited. 5. We demand that the appointment, by the President of the United Biates or by the Governors of the various States, of all religious festivals and fasts shall wholly cease.

of all religious festivals and masts shall wholly cease. 6. We demand that the judicial oath in the courts and in all other departments of the government shall be abol-ianed, and that simple affirmation under the pains and pen-aluse of perjury shall be established in its stead.

7. We demand that all laws directly or indirectly enforo-ing the observance of Sunday as the Sabbath shall be re-

The indicates of the second se

A FORM OF LOCAL ORGANIZATION.

Whereas, it is our profound conviction that the safety of republican institutions is imperiled, the advapted of civili-sation impeded, and the most sacred rights of man in-fringed, by the least interference of the State in matters of religion; and religion; and Whereas, Certain grave inconsistencies with the general spirit of the United States Constitution still mark the prac-tical administration of our political system, threatening the perpetuity of religious liberty, the existence of free public schools, and the peace and prosperity of the entire land; THESEFORE, We, the undersigned, hereby associate our-elves together under the following

ARTICLES OF AGREEMENT.

ART. 1.-The name of this Association shall be THE LIB-

ART. 4.—Such measures shall be adopted for raising funds for the League as shall be prescribed in the By-Laws by a two-thirds vote of the members.

Asr. 5.—Any person may become a member of the League by subscribing his or her name to these Articles of Agreement. Ant. 6.-The Officers of the League shall be a President, a Vice Fresident, a Secretary, a Treasurer, and an Excou-tive Committee of three members; and their duties shall be these commonly pertaining to these offices. The President and Secretary shall be account celegates to the National Convention of Liberal Leagues when called together.

Convention of Liberal Leagues when cannot together. Asr. (.-These Articles of Agreement may be amended by a three-fourths vote of the members present at any reg-ular meeting, provided due notice of the proposed amend-ments shall have been sent to every member at least two weeks previous to such meeting.

Bo far as I am concerned, the above is the platform of THE LYDER. I believe in it without reserve; I believe that it will yet be accepted universally by the American people, as the only platform consistent with religious liberty. A Liberal League ought to be formed to carry out its princi-ples wherever half a dozen earnest and resolute Liberals can be got together. Being convinced that the movement to secure compliance with these just "Demands" must surely, even if slowly, spread, I hope to make THE LYDER a means of furthering it; and I ask the assistance and active co-operation of every man and every woman who be-lieves in it. Multiply Liberal Leagues everywhere, and re-port promptly the names of their Presidents and Secre-taries. Intolerance and bigotry will tremble in proportion as that list grows. If freedom, justice, and reason are many waters. many waters.

Bosros, Sept. 1, 1873.

FRANCIS E. ABBOT, Editor.

For List of Liberal Leagues, see next page. RELIGIOUS FREEDOM AMENDMENT:

PROPOSED AS A SUBSTITUTE FOR THE FIRST AMENDMENT TO THE UNITED STATES CON-STITUTION.

ABTICLE 1.

ABTIGLE 1. SECTION 1.—Congress shall make no law respecting an es-tablishment of religion, or favoring any particular form of pilgion, or prohibiting the free exercise hereof; or abridg-ing the freedom of apsech or of the press, or the right of the people pesoeably to assemble and to petition the dov-ment for a redress of grievances. Bootrow 2.—NO State shall make any law respecting an of religion, or prohibiting the free exercise thereof; or shight of the people pesceably to assemble and to petition the government for a redress of grievances. No religious and no person shall ever in any State be deprived of any for the sore of any office or public or private duty, or ren-drof the sore of any office or she deprived of any for the performance of any public or private duty, or ren-drof the sould be ever in any fullic or a set or she may hold or the performance of any public or private duty, or ren-drof the sould be develowed of any for the performance of any public or private duty, or ren-droft of the second section of the Article by appropri-ate legislation.

NOTES AND COMMENTS.

BY A. W. B.

WE HAVE just read of a man in Pennsylvania, who is the father of forty-one children. Shade of Malthus, have mercy upon us!

HENNI ROCHEFORT, who is in this country, is both much praised and censured by the Press. We hope he is an able to bear the one as the other treatment.

MR. ALCOTT'S "Our Club" had a picnic at his house in Concord, last week Thursday, and Mr. Emerson's presence into the bargain. Dr. Bartol read an essay. Of course, it was a graceful and charming occasion.

THE women-crusaders of Philadelphia have established a Drunkard's Home, where they take in their converts, and care for them until they are able successfully to resist temptation. This is both sensible and kind.

THE CITY Registrar shows that the current mortality of Boston is 28.45 in a thousand-a larger death-rate, with one or two exceptions, than has been reached for the last twenty-five years. The mortality throughout Massachusetts is about 28 in a thousand.

IT 13 A fare occurrence when a platform-speaker speaks out his or her mind with thorough fulness and candor. Desire to adapt one's thought to the average audience, and win sympathy and response from the public, too often "quenches the spirit" in both speaker and hearer. Hence conventions which hang upon platforms are rarely very inspiring or profitable.

"BURLEIOH" of the Boston Journal says "that the facilities of travel are such that a man may go to China and not be missed, or go round the globe without notifying his wife or his creditors." There are a great many men who might go almost anywhere without being missed; and some actually do go without notifying either wife or creditors. But such can well be spared.

THE Woman's Journal suggests that we have "not studied the reformatory bearings [on politics] of Woman Suffrage." Perhaps not, as much as some have; it may be not as much as tos ought to have. But we propose to keep on studying all interesting subjects, so far as we can, as long as we live; and, we take it, the best way to study any subject is to keep our eyes open to all sides of it, and not become a blind partisan of any cause.

Cor. HIGGINSON well says: "The man of education is the natural leader of American affairs; everybody wishes him to lead, nobody grudges it. He has nominally but one vote, and he certainly needs but one, for practically he has a thousand. . . . But the educated American holds this power on one simple condition: that he should be faithful to the fundamental principle of the government, even as Lincoln defined it-'of the people, by the people, and for the people.' "

WE HEAR that it is said by some of the promine members of the First Radical Club that that delightful little company has probably held its last meeting. Well, It has had its day of distinguished usefulness and rare in-Well. tellectual felicity, by the grace of the hospitable Chestnut-Street mansions where it was used to be entertained; and, if it should never assemble again, it will live long and ntly in the memories of many who have been privlleged to enjoy its meetings.

BEN. BUTLER has had the collc. One of the cons ouences is that he has somewhat loosened his pripe on the politics of the country, and begins to think that may be he doesn't care to be governor after all. It is even said that his friend Mr. Grant is going to make a minister of him-s foreign one, of course. Well, the Hon. Benjamin has some good points, not the least one of which is that he is no worse a man than he seems to be. His badness all comes out, and we know just how bad it is.

ELIZABETH GARRETT ANDRESON, in the Fortnightly Review, controverts the position of Dr. Clarke in Sez in Mind and Education. She insists that greater mischief accrues to young women from wearing heavy skirts than from hard study. She says: "It certainly shakes our faith in Dr. Clarke's acumen to find him attributing les direct influence to them than to mental occupation. Our own notion would be that, till American girls wear light dresses and thick boots, and spend as much time out of doors as their brothers, no one knows how many examinations they could pass, not only without injury, but with positive benefit to their health and spirits."

WE WERE TALKING, the other day, with a very sensible and successful Boston business man, and in the course of the conversation he expressed the opinion that business throughout the country would not materially improve until Congress had adjourned. He said it would be bet-ter for the business of the nation if Congress, and the State legislatures, did not meet more than once in two or three years, instead of every year; that we had too much legislation, too many laws, -especially when we consid-ered what sort of men our legislators were, and how little they had at heart the real welfare of the people. The opinion of this gentleman may go for what it is worth; and yet we can but think that it is worth a good deal. The Jeffersonian maxim, that "the world is governed too much," is slowly growing into the comprehension of mankind; and faith in human nature is attaining a root and vitality which augurs well for the future.

IT IS A VEBY great mistake which Christians make in thinking that all who decline to call themselves Christisns have an antipathy to Jesus. For we know it is a fact that some of those who have been Christians, but who are now extra-Christian, feel the deepest sympathy with Jesus as a man, a brother, a prophet, and a spiritual reformer. Even in their free religion, their infidelity, they hall him as a true heart-friend and genial fellow spirit. His essential character they are deeply in love with; his sublimest, most universal utterances awaken live responses in their souls; they burn with a glow of kindred enthusiasm when they observe a touch of real, carnest, human, manly life in him; and they rejoice with exceeding great joy in all the abandon of his loving, spir-ltual nature. It is only when he is wrested out of all his naturalness by stupid theological misinterpretation,—or when he himself lapses from his great personal inspira-tion into his inherited conceit of Messianism,—that the true radical fails to clasp firm hands with him, and admire him as sublimely great among great souls GRAVETARDS have never been favorite places of resort with us, although we have naturally expected sometime to have plenty of leisure for testing the desirability of their situation. But if any frequenter of Boston is ever weary of the din and tumult of the street, or of the varing cares and labors of the office or of any scene of business, let him quistly step into the still retreat of the Athenseum, and contemplate from its ample windows the cool, calm and contemplate from its ample windows needed, calm repose of the old burying-ground that lies contiguous thereto. The very sight of that spot so ascred to solitude and silence in the midst of noisy, thronging crowds, of the dumb tomb-stones gray with age, of the mounds that cover assield lips, of the grand old trees that stand such and soliton without for the deed of the soneras shy flow. speechless sentinels for the dead, of the sparse shy flow-ers that bloom and make no noise, -- the very sight of all ers that bloom and make no house, who very sight of all this lovely, quiet, solemn scene brings to the beholder a benediction, a pax vobiscum that sends him away soothed, refreshed, and purified. Although inclined to be a "cremationist," we say, Let the graveyards of Bos-ton remain forever undisturbed by the greedy spirit of business-spaces of beautiful silence amid all the hurry and unreat of the great city.

Google

LIST OF LIBERAL LEAGUES

278

 BT. LOUIS, MO.-M. A. McCord, President; P. A. Lofgreen, L. La Grille, Secretaries.
 BOWTON, MASS.-F. E. Abbot, President; J. P. Titcomb, G. A. Bacon, Secretaries.
 JEFFERSON, OHIO.-W. H. Crowell, President; A. Giddings, Recording. Chilo.-W. H. Crowell, President; A. Giddings, Secretary. BAN JOSE, Cal.-A. J. Spencer, President; J. L. Hatch, Secretary Secretary. TOLEDO, IOWA .- J. Reedy, President; E. S. Beckley, Secretary. INELAND, N. J.-John Gage, President; Sue M. Clute, Secretary. VINE Becretary. JUNCTIONVILLE, NEB.-J. W. Eastman, President; B. L. Easley, Becretary. OLATUK, KAN-S. B. S. Wilson, President; H. A. Griffin, Secretary. Bertary, Mich. - W. R. Hill, President; M. T. Garretson, Secretary.
 BERDSVILLE, MicH. - A. G. Eastman, President; F. R. Knowles, Secretary.
 OROSOLA, MO.-R. F. Thompson, President; M. Boderick, Response. 000 OBCORDA, MOLLA, M. Secretary, B. Secretary, B. Secretary, M. S. Secretary, M. S. Secretary, E. M. Bridgman.
WAMELTON, D.C. - George M. Wood, Prebldent; J. E. Crawford, Secretary.
Crawford, Secretary.
A DENDRY, OHIO. - John Fish, President; G. W. Barnes, Treasury, Child, Secretary. urer. MINNEAPOLIS, MINN.-President, J. B. Bassett; Secretary, Anton Grothen. New YORK, N.Y.-J. B. Brown, President; D. M. Bennett, Danvetary. Secretary. ST. JOSSPH, MO .- P. V. Wise, President; T. H. Kennedy, ST. JOSEPH, MO.-P. V. Wise, President; T. H. Kennedy, Secretary.
Ean CLAIRE, Wis.-President, S. J. Dickson; Secretary, W. Kennedy.
BALBEO, IND.-President, T. Gray; Secretary, W. Allen.
NEW ORLEANS, LA.-President, E. Vonter; Secretary, J. E. Wallace.
BAY Cirty, MicH.-President, S. M. Green; Secretary, S. M. Johnson.

[For THE INDEL.] Theodore Parker.

A DISCOURSE DELIVERED IN EAST LEXINGTON, MASSACHU-SETTS, ON THE FOURTEENTH ANNIVERSARY OF PAREER'S DEATH.

BY REV. EDWIN S. ELDER.

In the southerly part of this town, less than three miles from here, may be seen by the roadside a block of granite upon which is the following inscription :----

BIRTH-PLACE

THEODORE PARKER.

1810.

1810. In the little Protestant cemetery outside the walls of Plorence, in Italy, there stands a monument of gray mar-ble, on which may be read, "Theodore Parker: born at Lex-ington, United States of America, August the 24th, 1810; died at Florence, May the 14th, 1860.

Just fourteen years ago to-day, at the age of forty-uine years and nine months, the great heart of Lez-ington's most noted son cessed to beat. In view of his reputation, world-wide and increas-ing; in view of the deepening influence of his deas, his worth, and his example, is it not meet that he should be remembered in the home of his child-hood and early manhood? Is it not worth while to inquire how a boy, born

Is it not worth while to inquire how a boy, born and brought up on one of the little farms in this town, raised himself to such a height, and came to exert so deep and lasting an influence on the religious thought of our times, and, while forgetting himself, called forth so much love and enthusiasm in his own head 10°

<text><text><text><text>

this we shall find the explanation of his attitude tow-ards tradition and authority. He who hears God in the still, small voice will neither follow nor fear the minimum of the state of t whirlwind.

whiriwind. Parker's early opportunities for education would not be considered very favorable in these days. After his eighth year, he attended the district school only in winter—not more than fifteen weeks during the year. Yet he was early distinguished as a scholar by his thirst for knowledge and his remarkable memory. There was a scarcity of books for the young in his day, compared with the injurious abundance of to-day.

day. In his hunger for knowledge, he devoured what-ever came in his way; nor was his thirst for knowl-edge confined to books. The absence of books left him opportunity to observe. Not being compelled to see everything through the printed page, he came in immediate contact with things; these he studied. He observed the stars, the trees, plants, rocks; he approached Nature through the understanding rather then through sympathy or imagination. As a boy and youth his conduct and character then through sympathy or imagination. As a boy and youth, his conduct and character were without reproach. Even while a boy, his real life was intellectual. He lived more in his few books than in the games of his playmates or the labor of the farm. Rahoy days and long winter evenings afforded some opportunity for study. The work of his hands was made to contribute to the increase of knowledge. At twelve he wants a Latin dictionary; to obtain it he picks berries and sells them. He sarna four doi-lars to pay his tuition for one term at the academy in Lexington. At seventeen he begins to teach school in a neighboring district, and the larger portion of the next six years is devoted to teaching. One day, before he was twenty years old, he left next six years is devoted to teaching. One day, before he was twenty years old, he left home in the morning without telling any one where he was going. On his return in the evening he told his father that he had entered Harrard College. "But I cannot afford the expense," said his father. "I will stay at home and keep up with my class," was the reply. He did this for a year. He left his home at twenty, carrying with him a hearty and reverent ap-preciation of the value of that influence that flowed out of his home. In after years, he gave his father and mother, and the labor-compelling necessities of his childhood and early manhood, full credit for the great good he derived from them. Sneaking of his childhood. Parker asys: "Wy early his childhood and early manhood, full credit for the great good he derived from them. Speaking of his childhood, Parker says: "My early education was not coetly, as men count expense by dollars; it was erceeding precious. Great pains were taken with my moral and religious culture. I was taught to respect the instituctive promptings of con-science, to speak the truth without evasion or con-cealment, to love justice and conform to it, to rever-ence merit in all men regardless of their rank or repu-tation, and, above all, I was taught to love and trust the dear God. I was taught self-reliance. Inquiry was encouraged in all directions. In early boyhood I FELT that I was to be a minister." But when the time comes for him to choose his life-work, he finds the profession of the ministry not very inviting. He is attracted toward law as a profession, but he feels that be can never help to shield the guilty nor to ald injustice; he hesitates between the two: he soon comes to feel that he can be more true to his convic-tions of right in the ministry then In law. Before he decides, he asks himself these questions: "Can you seek what is sternally true, and not be blinded by the opinions of any sect? Can you tell that truth you learn, even when it is unpopular and hated? Can you seek the eternal right, and not be blinded by the statutes and customs of men, and can you declare that eternal right, though it bring you into painful rela-tions with men? Can you represent in your life that truth of the intellect and that right of the con-science?" His confident answer was, "I can." He decides to become a minister. At the age of twenty-four, he enters the Cambridge Divinity School. Here was the fullest opportunity for study and growth. Then, as now, Cambridge Divinity School. Here was tha fullest opportunity for study and growth. Then, as now, Cambridge Divinity School was catholic. It encouraged thorough inquiry. It had no fears that conscientious truth-seeking would lead the young men toward dangerous hereesies. The Facul had no fears that conscientious truth-seeking would lead the young men toward dangerous heresies. The Faculty had confidence in the motives and aims of the students, and treated their convictions with the utmost respect and their doubts with kindness. There were no traditional or sectarian limitations. The teachers devoted themselves to the religious, not less then the mental, culture of the students. Their examples were not less beneficial than their instruc-tion. Parker filled the days and nights with study. All his energies were directed toward fitting himself for his life-work. He read incessantly, his tenacious memory held all he read: every day, every hour, added to his knowledge. Within a year after his graduation he was married, and settled over the soci-ety in West RoxDury. Heretofore he has been a learner; he is now to be-

Heretofore he has been a learner: he is now to be gin to teach

In order to understand his work, or that part of it that he did as a preacher, it will be necessary to glance at the prevailing ideas and tendencies of that sect into which he was born. He inherited the tradi-tions of Unitarianism; but he was destined to be not so much a priest of the old traditions as a prophet of the new dispensation. The great Unitarian or anti-Trinitarian controversy was at an end. The denomi-nation was small, but respectable; its representative men were among the first scholars in the country. As compared with all other sects, it was broad, toler-ant, and liberal; and, what was better, it contained within itself certain ideas and tendencies that would make it progressive. It was not a finality. It was susceptible of growth. It represented an essential step from those negations of Calvinism necessitated by the dogma of human depravity, and those affirma-tions of the reality and trustworthiness of the spirit-had been thought to depend. The increasing spiri-usality of the times was rapidly coming to feel that the supreme thing in Jesus was his natural, human religiousness. At the time that Parker entered upon his work as a preacher, scientific criticism had not been applied in this country; at least to the determination of the genuineness and authenticity of the different books of the New Testament; nor had that grandly relig-loue transcendentalism of which Emerson is the al-most ideal representative been applied to the tradi-tional religiousness of the times. Into the presence of that religion which had been so long associated with tradition and supernatural-ism, Theodore Parker brought a natural, earnest, en-thusiastic religiousness that was in no way dependent upon Hebrew texts. He was a religious man before he became a theologian. Indeed, his natural relig-iousness was so hearty and healtby that even the study of theology did not lessen it. He very naturally emphasized pure religion rather than those accidents with which it had happened to be associated. Deeply conscious that religion, in all its height and depth, was not dependent upon any in-stitution, rite, ceremony, legend, or event, he felt perfectly free to criticles all institutions, creeds, and persons, and he di criticise and deny; but his deni-als and criticisms were in the interest of affirmation. What had been accepted by others as a source of re-ligion, as a means of revelation, was with him but an accident of religion. It was no easy matter for him to understand others' dependence upon tradi-tion; it was impossible for others to comprehend how he could be a Christian (which he always claimed to be) while discrediting the Christian tradi-tions.

<text><text><text><text><text><text>

tions. It is to be remembered that the traditional acci-dents of Christianity, as the miraculous element of the Christian faith, were then considered far more essential by Unitarians than they are to-day by the liberal Orthodox.

liberal Orthodox. Christianity was declared, by the ablest Unitarian preachers, "to be nothing without the miracles." Tendencies so opposite were certain, sconer or later, to lead to an open rupture between the prophet of the new thought and the representatives of the inher-ited and time-honored opinions. Let us draw a little nearer Mr. Parker. Let us listen to his own words as he discourses upon "The Transient and Perma-nent in Christianity." On the 19th of May, 1841, he preaches the ordination sermon of Mr. Shackford, in South Boston. His text hs: "Heaven and earth aball pass away, but my words shall not pass away." We may not understand how a sermon so religious as this was, whose truths are so obvious to us of to-day, should have disturbed any one. But an ac-quaintance with this sermon, and the feeling which it aroused, and the results to which it contributed, will help us to realize how rapid and significant has been the movement in religious thought within the last third of a century. A class of sentiments which, thirty-three years ago, disturbed the community, and frightened many whose trembling failh foresaw the destruction of Christianity, has become the common-place convictions of a majority of liberal pulpits. The main points of the sermon are the following:--"Jesus of Nazareth believed that the religion he tanght would be eternal. His words have become the breath of the good, the hope of the wise, the joy of the piona.

taught would be eternal. His words have become the breach of the good, the hope of the wise, the joy of the plous. "It is these words that still work wonders to which the first recorded miracles were nothing in grandeur and utility. Nothing appears more fixed and certain than the real Christianity that Jesus taught. But, looking at the history of what men call Christianity, nothing seems more uncertain and perishable. The theological doctrines derived from our fathers seem to have come from Judaism, heathenlem, and the ca-prices of philosophers far more than from the princi-ple and sentiment of Christianity. On the authority of the written word, man was taught to believe im-possible legends, to take fiction for fact, an Oriental poem for a grave history. "Modern criticism is fast breaking to pleces this idol which men have made out of the Scriptures. Almost every sect makes Christianity [he means by "Christianity" of Jesus, and not on the immutable truth of the doctrines themselves. Yet it seems dif-ficult to conceive any reason why moral and religious truths should rest for their support on the personal authority of their revealer any more than the truths of science should rest on the authority of him who made them known. "Measure Jesus by the world's greatest sons, how of science includes the world's greatest sons, how "Measure Jesus by the world's greatest sons, how poor they are! Try him by the best of men, how lit-tle they appear! Exat him as much as we may, we shall yet come short of the mark. But still was he not our brother? the son of man, as we are? the Son "I cont like oursaless?

not our brother? the son or man, as we are that son of God, like ourselves? "In an age of corruption, Jesus stood and looked up to God. There was nothing between him and the Father of all. And we never are Christians as he was the Christ until we worship as Jesus did—with no mediator, with nothing between us and the Father of all." of all.

It will be difficult for us to discover the heresy of this sermon. It is eminently religious; it appeals to religion as a sentiment and life, but not to religion as a set of inherited opinions. It affirms the immediate-ness of those relations between God and man. It sends the soul, as did Jesus himself, to God. It ex-presses the conviction that God is as near to man to day as at any time in the past; and because of the nearness of God to us, it would do away with those things that so long have stood between the human soul and the Infinite Soul. Yet this sermon marks an era in the life of Theodore Parker. It excited as much criticism as did the address of Mr. Emerson a few years earlier.

<text><text><text><text>

t sought to pull down, but to build up; to remove e rabbish of human invention from the fair temple divine truth, that men may enter its shining gates Bot and be blessed forevermore." The aim of this book was the aim of his life. It was to this that he de-voted his extensive acquirements, his extraordinary powers. Almost inspired with a religious enthusi-asm, he forgot himself and consumed himself in his tireless endeavor to communicate the religioneness of his own soul to his fellow-men. He was not only a representative and mouth-piece of religion-he was a fountain of faith to all who thirsted for the living waters. His religious convictions were not at the mercy of Biblical criticism; they were no more de-pendent upon texts than is the sunlight dependent upon a theory of light. The great differences between Parker and his Uni-tarian brethren was this: With Parker, Christianity was identical with absolute religion. It was natural -native to the human soul. He applied (very Illogically) the personal, official name Christian to those elements of universal and absolute religion that are to be found in the religious-ness of Jesus. His own spiritual and moral sense recognized the spirituality of Jesus, and the truth of his spiritual utterances. In the mind of Parker, Christianity, or absolute religion, was human, natu-ral. It no more needed miraculous credentials than the sun needs, a voice to announce his rising. It was his opiritual utterances. In the mind of Parker, Christianity, or absolute religion, was buman, natu-ral. It no more needed miraculous credentials than the sun needs, a voice to announce his rising. It was its own authority, its own evidence, and could have on other. To his spiritual sense spiritual truth was of all truth the most obvious. It bore the same rela-tion to the spiritual faculties that light bears to the eye. It was to this spiritual a faculty, this religious sentiment, that he appealed. Most of his contempo-raries insisted that Christianity, as the highest con-ceivable religiousness, was supernatural and super-human in its origin and manifestation. It was to be accepted upon authority. The teaching of Jesus must be true, because he was sent of God. His mira-cles were the credentials of his mission. Parker claimed, insisted indeed, that he was a Christian. Many of his contemporaries denied this. The real question at issue was, What is Christianity? Parker applied the name to the universel ele-ment of what was called the Christian religion which dis-tion that which was universal, absolute. To the vast majority of Unitarian, of forty years ago, the personal, historical significance. Parker in other words, to that which was universal, absolute. To the wast majority of Unitarian, and security accidents of Christian its origion of the christian forty per-argo, the personal, historical seculiar, and superna-tural accidents of value in the religion of person-trady that was of value in the religion. On the words, to that which was universal, absolute. To the wast majority of Unitarian, so if orty years ago, the personal, historical, percular, and superna-tural accidents of christianity, were among the essen-tials of religion; to ignore these elements was to de-stroy all that was of value in the religion. On pietness of Parker's religious convictions raised him shove all conscious dependence upon authority. He fit himself so near to God and God so near to him have e since vice that the otrolese obedient. It was natural that he who felt himself so near to God, who so clearly perceived the right, who so strongly felt the truths of religion, should be impa-tient with the unwieldly machinery of superhuman supernaturalism. His faith in God, his human sym-pathy, his confident expectation of immortality, had no need of authority. Unconscious of this need himself, he failed to recognize its necessity in others. It was this that put him in antagonism with the inherited religions traditions of his times. It was this that shut the Boston pulpits from him until, in January, 1845, a company of men resolved "that Theodore Parker should have a chance to be heard in Boston."

Roston

Incodore rayer anomin neve a chance of our reald in Boston." His labors commenced as an experiment. Before the end of the year it was found to be more than a success. He was installed pastor of the Twenty-eighth Congregational Society. In his installation sermon, he gave his idea of the Christian Church. He defined the Christian Church as "a body of men and women united together in common desire of re-ligious excellence, and with a common regard for Jesus of Nazareth, regarding him as the noblest ex-ample of morality and religion." He declared that "the Christian Church should be means of reform-ing the world after the pattern of Christian ideas." It should lead the environt for the public education of the people. "It should lead the civilization of the age." For fifteen years he devoted himself to the realization of his ideal of a church. He wore himself out in his endeavors to create and inspire such a society.

himself out in his endeavors to create and inspire such a society. His preaching was practical; his sympathies were broad and active; his love of his fellow-men was deep and strong; he was naturally devout. Every sermon had a purpose, and that purpose was not to amuse or please, but to inspire, to instruct; he appealed to the highest sentiments. He held his thousands, year after year, in Music Hall, not by the arts of ora-tory, not by an ear-pleasing rhetoric, not by faultiess elocution, not by that cheapest of pulpit vices—san-sationalism. He held his audience, Sunday after Sunday, and year after year, by his sympathies, by his moral earnestness, by the strength of his convic-tions, by the reality and naturalness of his religion, by his sincerity and devotion. His aspirations and unselfish living kept him close to God; his human sympathies kept him near the people. He preached out of his life, and reached the lives of others. He spoke out of his heart, and thus kindled others' af-fections. He preached because he had something to say that he deemed of great value to men: What he belleved to be true he gladly proclaimed; what was right he advocated; what he believed to be wrong he denounced. His inspiration was from within. The same volce that the little boy heeded in the field the man obeyed in his study, on the platform, and in the pulpit. Free from personal ambition, neither fearing unpopularity nor desiring fame nor fortune, he was free to obey the volce of God in his soul. This he did until he became a conscience incarnate. He did not devote his energies to the service of a party, or to the creation of a sect. He devoted himself to the service of the poor, the ignorant, and the ensisted. He not only preached philanthropy—he was a philan-thropist.

service of the poor, the Ignorant, and the ensiaved. He not only preached philanthropy—he was a philan-thropis. In life-work was religious (he insisted that it was Christian), moral, and humane. His religiousness was so great, his moral feeling so strong, his love of man so carnest, that it could not and did not find ex-pression in the sermon alone. His daily life was full of religion, as was his sermon. He never feit that he had any rights that the poor, the oppressed, the en-alaved, were bound to respect. Whoever needed his advice, his service, received it. He sought opportu-nities for doing good; scholar and student as he was, he lived ocess to the people. With him culture was not a luxury to be enjoyed, but a means whereby hu-man welfare might be promoted. In averemarked that Theodore Parker was the em-bitical conscience, not a sectarian conscience; not a po-litical conscience, not a sectarian conscience, not a time-serving conscience, but an absolute conscience, that asks what is right and just, and insists upon the immediate application of the right and just to all the concerns of life. When this moral sense and humane feeling confronts Theodore Parker with the slave power, what will be do? The slave power was the supreme in politics. Trade and commerce were its servants. The great statesmen were its defenders. The Christian pulpit was its apologist. The religion of the Church declared that it was a divine institu-tion. The Old Testament justified it. Nowhere in the New Testament was it condemned. The com-merce of the North was largely interested in its pro-perity. Manufacturing interests were largely de-pendent upon its products. Folticians sought pool-ion by its defence, and insisted that upon it depend-ed the preservation of the Union and the very exist-ence of the Republic. The Constitution recognized to the laws of Congress and the measures of the overnment protected its interests, and provided for its retainson.

<text><text><text><text>

Jumma Google

nism with all laws, customs, habits, that in any way harmed mankind. He was indifferent to nothing that affected human welfare. He was the uncom-promising enemy of mammon, slavery, demagogism, in politics, and dishonesty in trade. He was the hearty friend of the oppressed, the poor, the ignorant, the criminal. Of course, his motives were misrepre-sented, his character was assailed, he was censured by those who ought to have been his friends. Not-withstanding the purity of his private life, the obvi-ous unselfishness of his motives, his devotion to the cause of humanity, his unhesitating obedience to the dictates of conscience, his loyalty to the religion of Jesus, he was called infidel, atheist, biasphemer. Prayers were offered in his behalf. The Lord was informed of his heresies, and it was suggested that if He did not see fit to convert him that He would take him out of this word. That Theodore Parker should make many bitter make friends of those with whom he intimately as-sociated than he. He was thoroughly sincere, genu-ine, affectionate, with all a woman's tenderness; but these very qualities made him intolerant of insincer-ing affectionate, with all a woman's tenderness; but these very qualities made him intolerant of his more pathy made him bitter toward those who in any way caused suffering; his sympathy with the persecuted matagonistic feeling which he acrossed are to be found both in himself and in the relation of his natural re-ligionances to the inherited theology of his time. Between the prophet of the scol and the priest of tring did not help him to discriminate; for want of discriminations his denunciations were often unjust. His own individuality and personality were so strong that it was no easy task to put himself in another's place.

that it was no easy task to put number in another a place. His moral and religious convictions were so posi-tive, so deeply rooted in his own being, that it was impossible for him to look upon them from another's stand-point. They were of the nature of intuitions. His humane sympathles and enthnaisam, in behalf of ideas that constituted the motive power of his life, took him out of that many-slided, philosophical medi-tation that sees so much truth in the errors of the world, and so much error in its accepted truths, that it comes at last to feel but little difference between truth and error.

<text><text><text><text><text><text><text><text>

[For THE INDEX.]

THE RECTORSHIP OF GLASGOW UNIVER-SITY

BY A GLASGOW GRADUATE.

The announcement in this country that Ralph Waldo Emerson has been nominated for the Lord Rectorable of Glasgow University has created con-siderable interest, and there may be some of the read-ers of Tur INDER who would be glad to learn some-thing of the nature of the office, and the manner of appointment to it. Having taken a share in these election contests more than once, to gratify these readers will be to me something like the luxury to the old soldier of "fighting his battles o'er again," as he describes them to his friends and neighbors around bls quiet fireside.

readers will be to me something itse the end, " as he describes them to his friends and neighbors around his quiet fireaide. Since the year 1862, when many changes were in-troduced into the administration of the Scottish Uni-versities, in consequence of the recommendations of a royal commission appointed to inquire into their condition, all the Universities of Scotland have the privilege of appointing Lord Rectors, who are, ez officio, presidents of the University Council—the high-est ruling power in the several colleges;—and have be-sides the right of nominating another member of council—the council in each University consisting of eight or nine members. Previous to 1862, the stu-dents of Glasgow alone had the appointment of a Rector in their hands—at which time the Rectorship was an honor merely, the only recognized duties of the office being the delivery of an address to the atu-dents, and the offer of a prize for an essay on some theme selected by the Lord Rector. And it is very much in this light still that the office is regarded. For although considerable power now attaches to the office, the gentlemen selected to fill it, usually living at a distance and being engrossed in other duties, sel-dorm attend the meetings of council except on the great occasion of their delivering their inaugural ad-dresses. But the honor of the Glasgow Rectorship has long been recognized as not the least valuable among those which await distinguished men, not in letters merely, although the majority of Rectors have been literary men, but in various walks of life. One of the female novelists of the last generation—Mrs. Trollope or one of her contemporaries—playfully re-marked in one of her works that the great object of her ambition was the Rectorship of Glasgow Uni-versity.

Tollope of one of her works that the great object of her ambition was the Rectorship of Glasgow Uni-versity. As before remarked, the appointment lies in the hands of the students, and the contests are conducted wholly by them. There exist among them two Clubs -a Conservative and a Liberal, --which each nominate a candidate, and work hard to secure hisreturn. Oc-casionally, a minority in one or both of these clubs, disastisfied with the nominees, or having some other cause of quarrel with their respective majorities, will "bolt," and form a third Independent Club, whose programme is the selection of a candidate on the ground of merit alone, irrespective of any considera-tion regarding his political views orstanding. Strong efforts have at different times been made to ensure the permanency of this third organization; but up to the time at which the writer was connected with the Uni-versity, all these had failed. But it is of this club, as we learn from the papers, that Mr. Emerson is the nominee. We do not know who his competitors are, and cannot therefore speculate on his chances of suc-cess. But if he is returned on election day, it will be a most signal proof of his popularity with the stu-dents, as the party who are running him are, by a long way, inferior to the other two in organization, re-sources, and power to influence the voting. And a large majority of votes Mr. Emerson must have, if he is to be successful; although, were he a Conservative, the nominee of the Conservative club, it would not even be necessary to have a majority at all, strange as this may appear. For the voting by tribes. The students, according to their place of birth, are divided into four nations. The majority of votes in each nation determines the vote of the whole nation; and as the nations are by no means equal in ucced after the old Koman fashion of voting by tribes. The students, according to their place of birth, are divided into four nations. The majority of votes in each nation determines the vote of the whole nation; and as the nations are by no means equal in numbers, some of them more than doubling others, it is easy to see that a majority of nations does not imply a majority of votes. But the Conservatives do not need, and seldom succeed in their attempt to ob-tain, even a majority of nations. For, in case of a tie, two nations against two, the casting vote lies with the Chancellor of the University, the Duke of Montrose; a staunch Conservative, who never fails his party in their need. And so it comes to pass that, although the Conservatives are almost always in a minority at Glasgow, three-fourths of the time they succeed in electing their man, through bending all their energies to secure a majority in the two least populous nations, and then leaving the result to their Providence, the Duke of Montrose. The Liberals, and of course the Independents too, can only elect their candidate by securing a majority in there nations. So, it will be seen, Mr. Emerson has to fight against odds. The constituency who are to decide whether Mr. Emerson shall be Rector of Glasgow number about thirteen or fourteen hundred, composed of the fol-lowing classes: Divinity atudents, eighty to one hun-dred in number, preparing for the ministry of the Established Church of Scotland, who have all pre-viously passed through the Arts Course; young men over twenty-one years of age, conservative to a man. Probably not one of these will vote for Mr. Emerson (on the ground of his being the nominee of the Inde-pendent Cluh), although the majority of them will know his works well, and admire them warmly. One hundred and fifty to two hundred law students, most-ly liberals, averaging in age about twenty-one years, as do also the medical students, who number four or five hundred.

ly liberals, averaging in age about twenty-one years, as do also the medical students, who number four or five hundred. In our day, the Independents were five facts warranted. The students look to the Rector they elect to repsy them for the appreciation they have shown for him by taking pains to make the address he delivers a masterpiece of its kind. The subject of this need not be education. In fact, the students think they hear so much of this that they would rather any other subject were chosen; and, were they consulted, would undoubtedly indicate their wish to hear each man di-lete on the aubient which he hear words his restil

1874.

Indoubtedly indicate their wish to hear each man di-late on the subject which he has made his special study in life. In fine, we may say that we shall feel as giad as any American can to see Mr. Emerson inducted into the Lord Rector's chair of our ancient alma mater.

PRESIDENT ELIOT'S ADDRESS ON CHURCH TAXATION.

DELIVERED BEFORE THE YOUNG MEN'S CHEISTIAN UNION, BOSTON, MAY 27.

<text><text><text><text><text>

The Church has a public as well as a private func-tion. It should be not only protected, but honored and fostered by the State—honored by the glad so-knowledgment that it is essential to the life of the State, and fostered by a well-guarded exemption from taxation, which amounts only to this, that the State

280

A HARTFORD BRICK-LAYER let fall a brick from a fourth story upon the shoulder of a man passing beneath. The man paused for a moment, and then with a voice trembling with emotion, shouted: "Hil' you dropped a brick." The brick-layer, who was looking over the edge of the scaffold to see if the brick was damaged, was pleased to find that it was not hurt, and cheerfully answered: "All right; you needn't mind bringing it up."

abstains from applying any portion of the income of church property to other than religious uses. The religious use is preciminently a public use, and no part of the income of property which a former generation or the present generation has devoted for-ever to this particular public uses. That is the real significance of the exemption of any endowment from taration. This exemption is a perfectly unobjection-able mode of giving government support, for it fos-ters public split instead of repressing it, works auto-matically, needs no special legislation, and does not trammel the independent action of the associations alded.

aided. One often hears it urged now-a-days that the State should do nothing but protect life, liberty, and proper-ty. My friends, that is a great deal more than a free State can do without the help of the Church as a moulder of private and national character. There is no innate virtue in laws and constitutions; they are no wiser than the people who made them, and they do not execute themaelves, but need honest people to recent them. cute them not execute themaerses, due need honor property execute them. I noticed that the facts and illustrations used to support the doctrine that churches should be taxed were mostly drawn from the rich towns and cities of the Commonwealth, not from the poor country vil-lages. The advisability of taxing churches does not seem to suggest itself until the community gets very rich, nutil its territory is at a great price per square foot. Surely this rich and generous Boston does not mean to act as if she put her material wealth above her intellectual and moral worth. There are things which are worth more to a city or a nation than all its taxable property.

foot. Surely this rich and genārous Boston does not men no act as if ahe put her material wealth above her intellectual and moral worth. There are things which are worth more to a city or a nation than all its tarable property. Great men, great deeds, great memories of noble times,-these are the springs of wealth and honor; these are what a city or a nation may worthilly be content to live for. Underlying this proposition to the are what a city or a nation may worthilly be content to live for. Underlying this proposition to the are hurches, is there not an opinion the opposite of this, as undefined belief that property is the real basis of the State? I recommend to you as a subject of one of your next whiter debates this pregnant.sen-tence of Emerson's: "The reliance on property, in-ciding the reliance on governments which protect it, is a wait of self-reliance." We are living at a time which will hereafter be mown as a remarkable period of many and great endowments. Millions of private property in this country are every year devoled to public uses of re-ligion, education, and charity. I am rejoiced to see that his Union is getting endowed. These endow-mat are doing good work for the present generation, and are likely to do nothing but good to many genera-tions to come. Yet there is in the public mind a selonsy of endowments, as if they did harm, or threatened to become harmful. We have not waited hour. We frequenity read success and flings at these serve their money to religious, educational, or charita-be anes. Sometimes the injury gets beyond words, as when one branch of the Masschuaetts Legisla-ture vote the other day that the barren listand where Apassiz established, at the cost of his life, a summer submit to a single fact. I am persuaded that the tar-stion of anatural history should be taxable. We have not time now to go into the question of the use and abuse of endowments; but let me call your at-tention to a single fact. I am persuaded that the tax-stion on a single fact. I am persuaded that

When ranked with his competitors who had recytigat on such deduction.
One day, a certain amiable and learned professor, who never could keep order in his lecture room, lost patience with his turbulent class, and exclaimed:
"Gentiemen, I shall certainly have to give you a de-duction all round!" That is precisely the kind of dis-cipline by which some of our Evangelical brethren would willingly see the State attempt to check the growth of the Roman Catholic Church.
If we recall for a moment the flerce persecutions, bloody wars, wholesale confiscations, foul internal diseases, social and political revolutions, and whirl-winds of scepticism through which the Romish Church has come bravely down to these our days. I think we shall agree that that vigorous organization will bear quite as much discipline of the kind pro-posed as any other branch of the Christian Church. It can probably stand a deduction all round. After all, is it reasonable that the Protestants of this coun-try should be very much afraid of one-tenth their namber of Catholics?
Some theorists maintain that churches are, to be sure, necessary, but that the community would be sure, necessary.

sure, necessary, but that the community would be better off if churches were fewer and poorer. In the Complete absence of experience to support this asser-tion, let us not try rash experiments with the vital parts of the body politic, particularly if we have no better motive than a desire to increase the tax gath-erer's resources. Even civil liberty is not an end in itself, but a means of developing noble human char-acter. The work of churches is a direct work upon human character. Hear Channing upon this matter: "I proceed to show that civil or political liberty is little worth, but as it springs from, expresses, and in-vigorates (this] spiritual freedom. I account civil liberty as the chief good of States, because it accords with, and ministers to, energy and clevation of mind." Young men, seek always, by every means within your reach, in your clurches, in this Union, and in your daily work, this spiritual freedom, this energy and elevation of mind. In so doing you build well, not only for your own lives, but for that of the nation.—Boston Journal.

TAXING ENDOWMENTS.

<text><section-header><text><text> ton Post, May 30.

MAN'S UNSELFISH PRIEND.

MAN'S UNRELIFIENT PRIEND.

panied him upon his walks about the village. Mr. Bryant was lost in the disaster, and so were many of the dog's friends. It is said no human being ever ex-prosessed a deeper sense of sadness than he. His movements, even in the bustle and confusion, were noticeable. He would go to the schoolhouse on Sun-day, but come almost directly home. He intraded himself upon the domain of the family, was in every part of the house sulfing about. An old pair of os did articles of clothing. Sunday afternoon he started out, and followed the searchers for bodies on Miller's flats pawing in the sand, which caused an in-quiry, and when he was visited it was found he had dug quite a trenct. In this corenoon he was seen on Miller's flats pawing in the sand, which caused an in-quiry, and when he was visited it was found he had dug quite a trenct. In this corenoon he was exposed to be meatow lands. This forenoon he was exposed to resature's vigorous efforts and his barking was jumb, the toes of the boots being uptured. They could hardly have been more than half-way exposed or ever when the dog discovered them. The as the workmen prosecuted their digging form and the body, the dog lay down at their feet. As the face was exposed, he seemed for a second over-pied form and the removal was begun, the noble creature seemed bowed with grief, and followed sul-rest half hour revealed was begun, the noble restarter seemed bowed with grief, and followed sul-rest half hour hese remains. It is hard, possible any human being would have found the big form and the romoval was begun, the noble restarte seemed bowed with grief, and followed sul-restarte seemed bowed with grief, and foll

Hoetry.

SUMMER DAYS.

O gladness of sweet summer days that will not leave off

- ainging! A passion softened into peace, fresh joy forever bringing To children, mad with mirth, who seem so tireless fond of
- playing, erring souls, all tempest-tossed, for whom the Christ is praying.

A breath from Adam's paradise the caraless breeze is flinging; An scho from an angel's harp a joyous bird is singing. Earth lieth still in restfulnces, save passing thrills s-quiver, As tangled sunbaums kult and break across a mighty river. As tangled sunbe

- Between the tangle of the leaves the broken sunshine dances, While close beside it on the grass the shade its light an-
- ha wealth of fragrance weighs the air, so subtly sweet per-
- radin That we forget the gentle flowers, whose life it is, are fading

Oh, earth to us is very sweet, when on her children smiling; With charming wiles, in varied moods, our human hearts beguiling. 'Sleep soft," she whispers, when we rest; or, "Wake with me to singing;" ad in our bearts her loving call will never leave off ringing.

CRIPTENS TO INDEX STOCK.

-New York Tribuns.

Mrs. F. W. Christern	New York City,	One al
Richard B. Westbroo	ok, Sonman, Pa.			100
R. C. Spencer,	Milwaukee, Wis.	Two		900
R. W. Howes,	Boston, Mass.	One		100
Chas. W. Story,	Boston, Mass.	64		100
E. W. Meddaugh,	Detroit, Mich.	Five	63	600
Jacob Hoffner,	Cumminsville, O.	One	.44	100
John Weiss,	Boston, Mass.		.84	300
W. C. Russel,	Ithaca, N. Y.		64	100
A. W. Leggett,	Detroit, Mich.		14	100
B. F. Dyer,	Boston, Mass.	44	14	100
James Purinton,	Lynn, Mass.			100
F. A. Nichola,	Lowell, Mass.	44		100
J. S. Palmer,	Portland, Me.	-44	H	100
Robt. Ormiston,	Brooklyn, N.Y.			100
Mrs. A. L. Richmond			- 14	100
Mrs. Benj. Ireson,	Lynn, Mass.	- 44	H	100
J. E. Oliver,	Itbaca, N.Y.	.44		100
E. H. Aldrich,	Providence, R.I.		- 14	100
Geo. L. Clark,	Providence, R.I.	44	M	100
W. M. Jackson,	Providence, R.I.	Two	4	310
Mrs. E. B. Chase,	Valley Falls, R.I.		24	100
MIN. E. B. Chase,	Lonsdale, R.I.	Oue	. 44	100
L. F. Garvin,	Ipswich, Mass.		11	100
James Damon, Joseph A. Barker,	Providence, H.L.			100

CASE RECEIPTS.

FOR THE WEEK ENDING JUNE 6.

FOR THE WEER ENDING JUNE 6. Jackson Bros., $1; M. H. Duley, $3; Rowland Comnor, $3; Richard Scales, $1; Geo. Young, $5; Perry Thayer, 75 cts.; L. S. Stratton, 75 cts.; A. H. French, $5; Nathaniel T. Al-len, $1; C. W. Scaver, $3; Oliver A. Balley, $2,35; Mary A. Ross, $3,16; H. Bitropy Thomas, $5; A. R. Hincher, $1,50; W. C. Little, $4; R. D. Israel, $1; Southard Poiter, $1, Henry A. Dean, $1; Monroe Carpenter, $3; W. A. Whiting, $5; H. Brutis, $4; Z. L. Hungerford, $4,50; H. G. Gale, $5; J. R. Tuttle, $4; Z. L. Hungerford, $4,50; H. G. Gale, $5; A. R. Tuttle, $4; Y. W. Abbot, $5; J. M. Holmes, $5; F. French, $5; P. U. Yatson, $1,35; Daniel Powers, $5; G. C. Corbin, $5; P. Y. Watson, $1,35; Daniel Powers, $5; G. B. Corbin, $5; P. K. Watson, $16; P. R. Sibley, $6; W. Sharman, $1; C. Cassin, $5; Mrs. Benj, Cummings, $30; G. H. Foster, $13,59; J. W. Schepard, $16; P. R. Sibley, $5; J. T. Brady, $10; Jame Z. Angel, $1; W. Greens, $10; Mulford Threo, W. Nobbins, 76 cts.; J. K. Hallock, 15 cts.; Theo. W. Robbins, 76 cts.; J. J. Hallow, 26 cts.; Abbit L. Stovans, $1,60; Cassi, $5; Mins Blair, 22 cts.; (Geo, B. Barton, 76 cts.; J. S. Ketcham, 26 cts.; Robt. Arery, 16 cts.; Mary A. Wellman, 50 cts.; R. A. Skues, 10 cts.; A Lamb, 50 cts.; Jone. Z. Peek, 50 cts.

All receipts of cash will be acknowledged as above, and o other receipt sent unless specially requested. Persons the do not see their remittances acknowledged within tree weeks after sending, will please notify us.

Google

THE INDEX ASSOCIATION,

47 NO. 1 TREMONT PLACE, BOSTON.

Toledo Office: No. 35 MONBOR STREEF. Julius T. Frey, Agent and Clerk.

THE INDEX accepts every result of science and cound learning, without seeking to harmonize it with the Bible. It recognizes no authority but that of reason and right. It believes in Truth, Freedom, Frogress, Equal Rights, and Brotherly Love.

N. B.-No writer in THE INDEX, editorial or otherwise, is responsible for anything published in its columns except for his or her own individual statements. Editorial contri-butions will in severy case be distinguished by the name or initials of the writer.

BOSTON, JUNE 11, 1874.

GLIMPSES.

JOHN WEISS goes down in the Boston Directory as "F. R." lecturer; which, being interpreted, signifieth "Free Religious." Lest any fat-witted individual should sound the alarm of a "new sect," this joke on the Directory man is solemnly labelled in due form.

REV. CHARLES MONTGOMERY advertises his gospel preaching with the announcement: "Turn or Burn, Sinner! Which shall it be? If you do not turn to God, you must burn , throughout eternity." It is no novelty in cookery to teach that-

Without frequent turning, No cake escapes burning.

IN A RECENT "Allocution," the Pope recommended his cardinals to implore the mercy of "the Immaculate Virgin, whose prayers to her Son have in some sort the nature of a command"! Considering that her Son is the Second Person of the Trinity, one is tempted to conjecture that some important discovery is about to be made in the science of Mariolatry.

A SUBSCRIBER in Missouri writes that the "indignation of the fanatics" has been aroused in his town by the distribution of the "Impeachment of Christianity," and adds: "The chief fanatic of the place has declared that the man who wrote the 'Impeach-ment' will most certainly go to hell." What a virt-nous pastime it is to "deal damnation round the land"! Is it not about time to make a new "deal"?

PROFESSOR E. S. MORSE, of Salem, a well-known advocate of the evolution philosophy, has received an appointment as instructor on mollusca at the Anderson School of Natural History at Penikese Island. The younger Agassiz is also believed to favor the same philosophy. On whose shoulders is to descend the mantle of his illustrious father as "defender of the faith," if Penikese is thus delivered over to the enemy?

THE Young Men's Christian Association of Boston have issued cards with this legend: "Do you, as an Evangelical Christian, realize the activity of the triends of Infidelity, Irreligion, and Free Religion in Boston? They seek the very life-blood of the young, from the Christian homes of New England, now resident in this city. Fancuil Hall is open Wednesday evenings, for religious services. Will you help to crowd it to overflowing? We invite you to attend with an unconverted friend. Reader, if you are out of Christ, come! Pass this to your friend."

A QUEER old satire, called the "Shyp of Fooles," has just been republished in Edinburgh in the English metrical version of Alexander Barclay. It illustrates the period immediately preceding the Reformation, and the first edition of Barclay was printed by Pynson in 1509. In this curious performance we find what is now the slang use of "mighty" as an adverb anticipated thus :--

"Some thynke them gode, inst, and excellent, Myghty stronge, and worthy of permynence, etc." This is one more illustration of the fact that modern slang is frequently a survival of the good usage of other days.

THE CONSTITUTION of the American Missionary Association, which was incorporated in 1849 and is one of the largest missionary bodies in active operation, states its doctrinal basis as follows: "By evangelical sentiments we understand, among others, a belief in the guilty and lost condition of all men without a Savior; the Supreme Deity, Incarnation, and Atoning Sacrifice of Jesus Christ, the only Savior of the world; the necessity of regeneration by the Holy Spirit, repentance, faith, and holy obedience, in order to salvation ; the immortality of the soul ; and the retributions of the judgment in the eternal punishment of the wicked, and salvation of the rightcous."

A WRITER in the New York World estimates the "Cost of a Sot" to the community. He considers that boys very rarely come under the influence of liquor before the age of fifteen years. At this age he reckons that each boy has cost his family and the State, at a low figure, fully $5,000. If a boy becomes a drunkard at eighteen, his chances are good for becoming a pauper at thirty and for dying at thirty-five; in which case, calculating the loss of his labor for seventeen years and the loss of twenty-seven years more of which he deprives the community by dying before his time, the total loss to the community is put at $37,648. If at thirty he had also become a felon, this loss is increased to $38,132. Such calculations may only approximate the truth; yet they are enough to startle even those who consider intemperance in its economic relations alone.

A PAPER usually so sensible as the Detroit Tribun which stands high among the Western dailies in point of influence and character, can reason in a most undemocratic way in favor of "recognizing God in the Constitution." The argument is of no value except as an indication of the progress making by the Christian Amendment party. The Tribune thus expatiates on the beauties of their plan :-

"We cannot conceive how the simple acknowledgment of the existence and government of a Supreme Being trenches in any objectionable manner upon the religious liberty or conviction of any one. The num-ber of those who do not believe in a God must be very ber of those who do not believe in a God must be very small, if Indeed there be any at all, and we see no reason why the sentiment of an overwhelming ma-jority of the people should be refused its simplest ex-pression in deference to the views of an exceedingly small minority—if any such there be—who may choose to assert their total disbelief. The latter are in no possible sense bound by any such expression. In every part of the Constitution exceep its preamble, the adoption of the views of a majority compels the minority to be absolutely governed by the prevailing opinion. But in the case of the preamble no such fact exists. No man is obliged to square his conduct to its declarations. It does not touch his utmost freedom of thought or action."

IT is the Western Methodist, not THE INDEX, that writes in this reckless style about one of the reverend and ornamental officials whom the whole country is taxed to support: "Chaplain Sunderland, of Washington city, is a sort of heavenly wire-puller. He excels that North Pole prayer-builder, his predecessor, Chaplain Newman. It seems that, somewhere in the funeral services of Senator Sumner, Chaplain Sunderland ventured to ask blessings upon the officers of the government, and then, on the way toward Boston to the burial, it occurred to the distinguished petitioner to the Throne of Grace that he had forgotten the Vice-President. No doubt the Lord would have overlooked any little omission like that, but Sunderland's prayer was directed to the newspapers as well as to heaven; indeed, possibly, rather more toward the press than the Throne. And, ruminating upon the look of the thing in print, rather than expecting an answer from the skies, Chaplain Sunderland telegraphed horizontally to Washington city to the printers to type in the Vice-President. Whether he sent in the same supplementary petition vertically in such way as to overtake the New Jernsalem message is not known."

A WRITER in the Diocesan Record, of Vicksburg, Miss., thus accounts for the languishing condition of the Episcopal Church in that region, which it has been proposed to remedy by appointing an Assistant Bishop : "The fact is that there is a marked decadence in that class of the population among whom our institutions once flourished, and these who are left, from being the wealthiest, are fast becoming the poorest people in the country. And it is the worst kind of poverty, for it is mingled with pride. They are being annually reduced lower and lower by an effort to maintain their old manner of life, are being harassed by hostile legislation and pitiless creditors, and annoyed so by thriftless laborers that they are hardly to be reached by the moral sussion of the Gospel. The truth is that many of them think the issue of the war gave them just grounds of quarrel with Almighty God, and many, if not most of them, are disposed to indulge this spirit, and as a general rule take little or no interest in any kind of religion. Again, go where you will, through the section where these people live, and where once elegance and opulence had its abode, now ruin, dilapidation and desolation meet the eye on every side. It is in this state of things that our difficulties lie, and not in a lack of Bishops."

PRESIDENT ELIOT ON CHURCH TAXA-TION.

President Eliot, of Harvard College, made an address at the anniversary of the Boston Young Men's Christian Union, on May 27, which deserves especial attention in these pages. He chose for his subject the proposed taxation of church property; and his remarks derive a peculiar claim to attention from the speaker's high position as head of the oldest and best university of the country. It were to be wished that his great influence had been thrown on the side of equity and religious freedom; but no man's influence can permanently postpone the triumph of a righteous cause in a land where the people think for themselves, and have the power of embodying their thought in legislative form. Being anxious that our readers should see the arguments on both sides of this as of all other questions which are discussed in THE INDEX, we publish President Eliot's address in another column, and now make the following comments upon it.

1. "I can speak on the subject with disinterestedness and freedom," says President Eliot, "because I am a layman, and, more than that, a layman many years of whose life have been devoted to studying and teaching natural science." It is true that the fact of his being a layman may free him from the pecullar prejudices of the clerical profession; but thousands of laymen, nevertheless, are so strongly prejadiced in favor of the churches to which they belong that the mere fact of not being a clergyman is no sufficient guarantee of impartiality. There is no reason to consider those who sustain the churches as any less biassed in their favor than those who administer them, Furthermore, President Eliot is the head of an institution possessing millions of dollars of exempted property, and having the strongest conceivable interest in perpetuating its own privileges; and it. is not at all disrespectful to him to say that it is far from probable that his mind should be wholly uninfluenced or unwarped by a consideration which would disqualify him for sitting as judge or juror in a case involving this question. The exemption of ecclesias-tical, charitable, and educational institutions from taxation rests on the same statute; and the abolition of tax-exemption by a repeal of this statute would affect them all alike. It is a mark of sagacity rather than of disinterestedness to defend the privileges of Harvard College indirectly by ostensibly defending the similar privileges of the churches. A good general will not underrate the importance of any position which commands his own; and the wisdom of appointing President Eliot to his high post is now conspicuously shown by his prompt, shrewd, and vigorous defence of a policy which he believes, though we do not, to be vitally connected with the welfare of the venerable university over which he presides. Taxation of churches would threaten taxation of colleges; hence he hastens to strengthen and protect the outworks of his fortifications by justifying the tax-exemption of churches. But the plea of a special disinterestedness will probably not add much force to his argument.

Neither is the well-known fact of President Ellot's excellence as a student and teacher of natural science entitled to much weight, as indicating any peculiar freedom from bias on this question. So long as multitudes of the best scientific men are devotedly attached to the church in some form or other, because they fail to apply to religious subjects the same disciplined powers which have earned for them preëminence in science, the mere fact of scientific attainment proves nothing as to impartiality on this If President Eliot had studied the ethics of point. church-taxation with the same thoroughness with which he has pursued mathematics and chemistry, his conclusions would have been very different. Undoubtedly he is unconscious of any bias in favor of the churches; yet it appears in some of his statements, which he himself would hasten to correct on better knowledge of the proposal he controverts. For instance, he says: "Underlying this proposition to tax churches, is there not . . . . an undefined belief that property is the real basis of the State?" And again: "Let us not try rash experiments with the vital parts of the body politic, particularly if we have no better motive than a desire to increase the tax-gatherer's resources." Such sentences as these, casting a slur on the motives of those who have advocated the taxation of the churches, President Eliot would precipitately erase from his speech, if he should take proper pains to inform himself of their real motives; for he is a gentleman incapable, we are glad to believe, of any ungentlemanly insinuation. We call attention to these very inaccurate conjectures as to motives, not to express any displeasure or resentment on account of them, but to show the absence of that disinterested impartiality which President Eliot conceives himself to possess. The real motives in question are a desire to be relieved from the obligation to pay indirect taxes for the support of religious societies of which the tax-payer is not a member,-a desire to see religious freedom respected and justice secured,-a desire to complete the separation of Church and State, and thereby carry to a higher fulfilment the great American idea of a purely secular government "of the people, by the people, for the people." Are not these motives entitled at least to the respect of every good man?

Google Google

282

2. "Was built, did I say? Massachusetts is built to-day upon the churches, as all free States are. There are people who hope more for the future of States from secular education than from religion. But it was the Protestant church, the church of the individual conscience, which gave rise to the common school, and not the common school to the church." In such statements as these there is no little confusion of thought. Is everything that is done by Protestants done by the Protestant church, as such? Would President Ellot claim that the Protestant church built the railroads, the telegraphs, the bridges, the cities and towns, and all the institutions that have been created in the United States? Even Protestants can do some things as simple men and women, without invoking their Protestantism to account for them all. The fact is that the "Protestant church" did not give rise to the common school, but rather a growing conviction of the necessity of education to republican institutions, which would just as certainly have been forced upon a republic of athelats. Credit something, at least, to the productive power of humanity itself, without irrationally attributing every good thing done by man to the power of the Christian gospel. Such a wild philosophy of causes bears no mark of the activity of faculties trained in the school of "natural science," but is manifestly the result of inherited partiality to the prevalent religion.

"All free States are built upon the churches"! Every free State stands upon its own foundation in the social nature of mankind; and it is free in proportion as it is not built upon the churches. Wherover the churches are indeed the basis of the State, the State is anything but free-as the most careless reading of history shows. So long as the leading idea, the fundamental principle, of the Church is obedience to authority, it is trifling with intelligence to speak of political freedom as based upon it. & "The Church," says President Eliot, "should be not only protected, but honored and fostered by the State-honored by the glad acknowledgment that it is essential to the life of the State, and fostered by a well-guarded exemption from taxation, etc." The State should not only refrain from taxing the Church, but also "acknowledge" that it is essential to its own life! Is it an American citizen who utters such words as these? Is the principle of the separation of Church and State, on which this republic was founded, already obsolete among us? And are the Presidents of our universities to take the lead in promulgating the ideas of the Christian Amendment fanatics ? At the late convention of the Free Religious Association, a distinguished speaker ridiculed the notion that the Christian Amendment movement had any seed of danger in it; yet, less than two days before, the President of Harvard College was publicly preaching doctrines which justify its essential purpose! When we see our best educated men either directly propagating beliefs whose practical outcome mut be a Christianized Constitution and the disfranchisement of all non-Christians (it will make little difference whether they call themselves "extra" or "anti"), or else smoothing the way for these results by putting to sleep again the half-awakened suspicions of the people, we see clearly enough that the preservation of religious liberty depends on the perhaps uncultivated masses that are quick to be jealous for it, and not reluctant to take up the rugged duty of fighting Christian darkness with Radical light. The central ideas of the Church and of the Republic are locked in deadly combat,-none the less so because the battle-ground to-day is the invisible field of thought. To-morrow the struggle will be in the arena of politics, and then no eye will be so blind as not to see it. Verily, THE INDEX has a "mission." it lightens its belt, and stands by its guns.

4. "Exemption from taxation," says President Eliot, "amounts only to this, that the State abstains from applying any portion of the income of church property to other than religious uses." So, when a favored passenger travels over a railroad on a free pass, the Company abstalns from applying any portion of his income to other than his private uses; it simply omits to make him pay his fare. But somebody pays it. The Company must pay it, if he does not. Just so is it with the Church. When the State "deadheads" it over the public road, the State (that is, you and we and all the people together) pays its fare out of the public pocket. That is what exemption from taxation "amounts to." A great deal depends on the form of statement.

5. "The religious use [of church-income] is preeminently a public use, and no part of the income of property which a former generation or the present eneration has devoted forever to this particular public use should be diverted by the State to other public uses." What is the "public use" of church-income? Is it not paying the necessary expenses of the churches? The money paid out by the churches to minis-ters, sextons, choirs, coal-dealers, gas-companies, and so forth, is not "diverted" from its proper object. Very well: the cost of the protection afforded to the churches by the State is simply one item of these necessary expenses; and the payment of the State's bill is no more "diverting" the funds than is the payment of a bill for a new carpet on the church aisles. It is futile to cover up or ignore or deny the plain fact that some party or other must pay the cost of the protection given; it is exactly as futile to put it forward as a just claim that the whole community should foot the bill. So long as the State Statutes forbid the direct taxing of any man for the support of a religious society in which he is not a member, just so long is it a grievance to tax all men indirectly for the same purpose. There is no question of "diversion of funds;" there is a question of the rightfulness of robbing unbelievers for the benefit of the churches.

6. "One often hears it urged now-a-days that the State should do nothing but protect life, liberty, and property. My friends, that is a great deal more than a free State can do without the help of the Church as a moulder of private and national character." President Ellot does not mean by "the Church" the Christian Church alone, but "the aggregate of religious institutions" of all kinds. This is a broad and liberal use of the word, and shows that he is no narrow sectarlan; yet the intended inference that the State should exempt the Church from taxation is a complete non sequitur. Admitting that religious institutions are necessary to the finest national character, it would not follow that they should not be taxed. The wisdom and necessity, in a free State, of separating State and Church is rapidly becoming an axiom of modern political philosophy; and the tendency in Europe is all in the direction of putting it more completely into practice. If the State is to teach religion, it must either teach some particular religion or else impartially teach all religions. The former is religlous tyranny; the latter is religious idlocy. Hence the State, according to American ideas at least, should teach no religion, but leave the people to support such religious institutions as they please, without government support. Church-exemption to-day survives only because the people do not perceive that it is one form of church-establishment. President Eliot's premises would take him a great deal farther than he would cheerfully go. Given a State that cannot discharge its essential function of protection to life, liberty, and property without a State-supported church, the right of the State to punish heresy and irreligion as a crime cannot be gainsaid ; and, before we get through with the argument, we shall find ourselves landed in Romanism. It is a dangerous path to which President Ellot opens the gate; it is the interest of his heretic college to shut it again without unnecessary delay.

7. In his closing parsgraph, the President eloquently inculcates "energy and elevation of mind." It is a good lesson, well worthy to be laid to heart; and we would fain apply it, as a loyal son of Harvard College, to the case of our Alma Mater. Let her rise to such "elevation of mind" as to seek her own higheet welfare, not by insisting on an unjust and invidious privilege, but by postponing her own apparent and merely temporary interests to the real and permanent interests of the whole people. Mankind have no interest so transcendently important as the universal prevalence of just and free principles; let not Harvard College stand in their way. Whatever pecuniary resources she might lose for a time by sur rendering the right to be a State pauper, she would gain a thousand times over in moral dignity and selfrespect. Let her frankly accept the situation; if she prefers being a private corporation rather than a State institution, let her be ashamed to sue, as she did last winter, for favors not equally granted to all other private corporations. It is humiliating for a proud-spirited alumnus of the university to hear the complaints made by citizens of Cambridge that they are obliged to pay the expenses of her street improvementa! Let her spurn the price of her own degradation in the public eye, pay her own taxes, and thus manifest the "elevation of mind" so eloquently culogized by her able President.

THE CHRISTIAN SPIRIT.

By religious journals of good standing it is assumed that, as people depart from the Christian faith and fall into one or another error-rationalism, positivism, materialism, free religion,-they lose the sweetness of their temper, become uncharitable, morose, acrid, intemperate in thought and expression. It is not directly claimed that a belief in the Christian doctrines ensures kindness and courtesy, but as much is implied in the frequent intimation that no others do. To show how much of truth there is in this impression, I print the following epistolary performance which was sent to me two or three days ago. Similar missives come with varying frequency, on an average of one in a month perhaps. All are not as vulgar as this one, but some are more so. The manuscript is usually disgulsed to make it appear a dripping from the pen of an illiterate person, as often it is; but not seldom 't is well formed; occasionally it is elegant, indicating the practised writer. The letter that preceded this came from a man of education, and apparently from a clergyman, for clergymen are not alays above doing mean things. Here is the letter :-

"You SCOUNDREL, HUMBUG, LIAE, FRAUD:--"You are leading men to hell as fast as you can; and, if the devil picks any bones, he'll have yours, unless you repent and stop preaching such ungodly doctrines. Repent! Repent! I am, sir, "A NEAR NEIGHBOR."

Of course there are a great many Orthodox Christians to whom the above note will seem as disgustingly indecent as it is, and as cowardly, too. But it is not the ardor of their faith that will make it seem so. The writer of the felicitous document is, no question, a pious, though coarse, Christian bellever; and that ature of him was not inconsistent with this piece of bigoted poltroonery. It is not inconsistent with similar baseness in men of much greater refinement than he. Possibly a Free Religious man may be so lost to all self-respect as to write in like strain to Mr. Fulton or Mr. Murray, to Dr. John Hall or Stephen Higginson Tyng. Perhaps the amiable and forbearing edi-tor of the Christian Register may have in his secret drawer some equally good specimen of rationalistic amenity which his unwillingness to hurt the feelings of his neighbors has made him suppress hitherto. If he has, we beg him to bring it forth, and convict us of an equal intolerance. Let us see which will come out best in a trial of courtesy. The gentleman need not be a Christian, but the Christian should be a gentleman. It is cheerfully conceded that Christianity and sectarianism are different things, and that such rubbish as the above comes from sectarianism, not from the religion it degrades. But until Christianity can repudiate sectarianism, the odium of all this vulgarity will eling to it. O. B. F.

LETTER FROM D. A. WASSON.

The following letter, addressed to a member of the Festival Committee, was intended to be read at the recent Annual Meeting of the Free Religious Association, but was crowded out for want of time. I send it to THE INDEX, knowing that it will be read with hearty interest by many friends of Mr. Wasson In his native land. W. J. P.

In his native land. W. J. P. 5 ALLEEN STRASSE, STUTTOART, May 8, 1874. MY DEAR MR. WHIPPLE:-It was a pleasure to me to see the circular of the Free Religious Association, which has just now come to hand, and to be reminded by it of the country, the coadjutors and friends, that, with less perhaps of partiality, I hold only dearer as years increase. I see in that Association, not the nucleus of a new sect, one more sect added to the overplus we have already, but an institute for discussion of the largest problems in the largest spirit. As such, it should be welcome to all those who know in what age they live. I have, for my own part, no quarrel with Christianity, but recognize in it an ideal of goodness, that is in its way unsurpassable, as nothing can be more golden than gold itself. Some antiquated dogmas, again, of Christian theology seem to me adumbrations of truths that many have cast away along with their ob-solete forms, and that will have to be recovered, re-stated, and made familiar to the modern mind. But also its seems to me idle to pretend that, after Newton and Darwin, after Nieburhr and Baur, we are just where we were before, and need to inquire only with-in the limits of formal Christianity. Farther, I can-not but think it mischlevous, almost criminal, to in-

Google

284 husiness has decayed; the enterprising, daring minds and ease lowing stay, with those who are detained by tender considerations of kindred, domestic ties, etc. The town remains, but grows sommolest. A with said that Newport is Newburyport without the bury. The ecclesiastical institution, Augustine's "City of God," has come to have much bury about it. Look for the daring activities, and you find them in some ampant. Chicago, itself not perfectly pleasing to the mind, but "going ahead," and making the future. It is time that this state of things was recognized. Without preaching a crusaid eagainst the old towns, so-webody should look after the Chicagos, give them sortiety of thought, moral texture and tone, the fine spirit of culture, the deep spirit of reverence, -should share with them the old truth, and make it new; and share with them the old truth, and make it new; and share with them the old truth, and make it new; and share with them the old truth, and make it new; and share with them the old truth, and make it new; and share with them the old truth, and make it new; and share with them the old truth, and make it new; and share with them the set on the exponent of an exclusive modernizm, and cheap because exclusive, as if nobody had though until our day. He that shuts would shut up religion in that apirit exclusively, are imply rival jailors, opposite and alike. The merely modern mind has its own limitations, some of them wery stringent ones. There can be too much spirit of all ages,—all that has made civilization and that su-stilizers which force the land without feeding it; there is a crop for this year and an exhausted soil for the mere. Moderniz-for an example of his limitation— is trying to get more out of liberty than there is in it. Liberty, simply as such, is inorganic, indeterminate; not structure, but mere let alone. At best, it is buit field before you get your ship or childer. But your president, I see, has the last white been emphasiz-ing the word disciptine. That was to me a cheerful toke around, gypsy-fashion. Well, I do not say, Stay in the old homestead; that is tumbling down. But I do say, Gets whole thought about the new one, and mean etructure, with the liberation of human virtue within it; not Bedouin freedom, that liberates the beast to ensiave the man. You do not need my counsel, but I offer what I have; and if the gnest at my table has as good diebes at home, so much the better. Give my greetings to your friends and mine, and as-sure them that, in my own way, I am working as sin-cerely as they, or as any, for the new time; and not working without good hope, though aware that, as erer, courageous hearts and clear heads can alone give hope its fruition. I am conservative, no doubt of it, and mean to be so, as Nature is; being of opinion that without a good deal of conserving our world would not probably be here. Only I have no intention to conserve rotten wood; and if a resolution to see when the wood is rotten be radicalism, count on me servative or radical. The conservative principles that go into a good wall are a good thing, and the radical-ism that means building solidly, at the right time and place, is another good thing. Your Association means both, I trust. Faithfully yours, D. A. WABSON.

Communications.

TEMPEBANCE-THE CRUSADERS AND THE LIBERAL PRESS.

TEMPERANCE-THE CRUSADES AND THE LINE ALL PRESS.
MY DEAR M. ABOY.The davantages of temperance are so great and obtinue that no sane man will deal are spread on this point, there is a great variety of views as to the individual or to society. But while all are spread on this point, there is a great variety of views are to a be monormally constitutes temperance; what means are the most incomprouse elements; to find the most liberal individual or to society. But while all are spread at to see the ultra-radius with the most Orthodox; to see the ultra-radius on one and the same platform, meeting in the weil-known story of the two-colored the same of the most incomption and the same platform, meeting in the weil-known story of the two-colored the set "liberal," yes, ultra-radical, journals, such as the best "liberal, "yes, ultra-radical, platform, and the set of the two-colored the set "liberal," yes, ultra-radical, platform, and the set of the two-colored the set "liberal," yes, ultra-radical, journals, such as the platform, "The end sanctifies the means." This hy have done over and over sain, as well in ddirect in maxim, "The end sanctifies the means." This hy have done over and over sain, as well in ddirect in maxim, "The end sanctifies the means." This hy have done over and over sain, as well in ddirect in maxim, "The end sanctifies the means." This hy have done over and over sain, as well in ddirect in maxim, "The end sanctifies the me ing and misconstruction of this much-abused term, 1 believe, that lie at the bottom of the evil I complain of. "Habitual moderation in regard to the indulgences of natural appetites and passions," asys Webster. This I consider a very judicious and comprehensive answer to the above question, recognizing as it does answer to the above question, recognizing as it does appetite, a passion, as do the temperance advocates. Nor does it interdict all and every indulgence of the appetites and passions, but-and this is the true es-sence of temperance-it demands merely that the in-dulgence be moderate (temperate), and habitually ao. Now, as we have a correct and authoritative defini-tion of temperance, let us apply it to temperance as commonly understood, and more especially as under-stood by these praying and crusading women; and their error will immediately become apparent. The appetite for liquor I will, for argument's sake, allow to be as had and dangerous as it is commonly repre-sented to be; and I will further allow that, on this account, the unconditional and absolute prohibition of its indulgence is rational and wise enough to justi-fy the zeal (but not all the measures) of those calling themselves temperance men and women. But, sir, if I allow all this, and if it all were true and correct, themselves temperance men and women. But, sir, if I allow all this, and if it all were true and correct, their limited temperance forms but a small part of that comprehensive temperance which governs all the appetites and passions. There are yet other appetites and passions just as strong, and their immoderate in-temperate indulgence is just as pernicious and ruin-ous. What of these? Prejudice or fanaticism may single out this particular one and attempt its sup-pression, or arrogate its regulation in the usual way of fanaticism; i.e., by all fair or foul means. But shall rational men imitate them, and make common cause with them? Or shall they endeavor to "habit ually moderate" this and all other appetites and pa-sions, in themselves and others, by all rational and just means? By which course would true and real temperance be best promoted, by the former or by the latter?

The sense of the sense of the sense of all relations in a measure of the sense of t often the sum and substance of all their riches, and their only means to make a living for themselves and their poor little ones. But, my dear Mr. Abbot, do not from the foregoing misjudge me, and conclude that I am an opponent to temperance. I am only opposed to the fanaticism of those who arrogate to themselves the championship of temperance, sometimes to conceal under its cloak their own insincerity and intemperance. I am, in-deed, not only a friend to temperance, but a very temperate man myself; much more so, in all respects, than the average temperance man, albeit I drink a glass or two of good grape wine or lager-beer, when I think best, but never any liquor. This makes me speak of yet another aspect of the temperance fanaticism, before I close my article. It is neither the least folly nor the least mischief of it, not to discriminate between polsoned, injurious lig-

This makes me speak of yet another aspect of the temperance fanaticism, before I close my article. It is neither the least folly nor the least mischief of it, not to discriminate between poisoned, injurious liq-uor and pure grape wine or nourishing, healthy lager-beer; or I might even say genuine, pure liquor, if it could be had in this country. But as the liquor usually drunk in America are, almost without excep-tion, adulterated, and consumed to excess, it is espe-cially they that make the most drunkards, and cause the most harm. This being a notorious fact, I should think the exertions of the real friend of temperance would be mainly directed against the use of these liquors as a common beverage, to abolish the custom of liquor-drinking. This gained, a great deal would be gained in the cause of temperance. But by what means could this important step be surer gained than by generalizing beer-drinking? The beer-glaas would, more than all fanatical measures, all prolibilory lass, banish the whiskey-glass. It would diminish at less, if not allogether suppress, liquor-drinking. "But hager-beer, too, is intoxicating," crice out the fanat-ical and prejudiced temperance saint. So it is, when drunk to excess,-when taken in very great quanti-ties; but when drunk, as the large majority do drink it, moderately, only a glass or two at a time, fi is healthy, nourishing, strength-giving, while liquor in any quantity is injurious. Even in the very worst case, when one gets intoxicated on lager-beer, it is physically not nearly as bad as when he gets drunk on bad liquor; for he does not get so crazed by it as in the latter case. Besides, a man has to drink a much greater, often a very great, quantity of liquor will make him drunk. Why, then, shall the ground, and this healthy and invigorating beverage be classed with and put under the same ban as poisoned liquor? It is certainly only fanaticism and blind prejndice that can do it. "There are aventill some who do drink lager-beer as thillower and the same who do drink la liquor? It is certainly only fanaticism and bind prejudice that can do it. "But," easys the temperance-man par excellence again, "There are still some who do drink lager-beer to excess, and get habitually drunk on it." True; but there are also those who will eat to excess and be made almost habitually sick by it, -who labor, study, do almost every other good thing to excess. Will you, on their account, prohibit also eating, labor, study?

meneniny GOOGIC

<text><text><text><text>

RALANDORN

2

IN ALL

Ti la

52123

10

11 24 60

n,

perance. Yours for true and rational temperance, MORRIS EINSTEIN,

TITUSVILLE, Pa., May 24, 1874.

[If our usually accurate correspondent can point out a single word of our writing, either in THE INDEX or out of it, that even seems to "defend and encour-age the fanatical "Crusaders," including their praying," he will astonish us still more than he has done by not comprehending our very explicit language on the whole subject of temperance. There is nothing new in the idea of temperance above set forth, which we have not only advocated for years, but heard ad-vocated by a great many Americans as a matter of commonplace; and Mr. Einstein's opinion of the good influence of a general use of wine or beer in diminishing intemperance is shared by thousands of them. We should really be obliged to him if he would quote the passages which have given him the curious impression that we favor the "praying crusade." Such an impression on the part of a good friend, who usually understands us and always means to, is, we confess, not a little surprising .- ED. ]

THE TRUE VIATIOUM.

On the first page of THE INDEX of May 7, I find a brief notice of the death of Austin Holyoake, closing with these words: "He held to his atheistic bellef to the end, but died with caluncess and resignation." Would it not have been better to use and instead of "but" in this sentence? It is not to be supposed for a moment that "A. W. S." shares the Orthodox con-cit that an intelligence of the sentence of the se "but" in this sentence? It is not to be supposed for a moment that "A. W. S." shares the Orthodox con-ceit that an intelligent and conscientious man is like-ity to fail in calmess and resignation at the approach of a personal origin and government of the universe, which may be taken to be the meaning of the phrase "atheistic belief" in this instance. "But" was prob-ably written in allusion to the false state of mind prevalent on this point through church influences. And would have expressed the natural state of the case, and have stered clear of the religious night-mare on the subject of death. How sad it is that this last solemn passage of mortality should still be invested with a factitious gloom and hortor so little in keeping with its real character, and with the inev-table reliation are now to a great extend keep in the background, or presented in very modified aspects, where they are not yet abandoned, and have very clearly jost the hold which they once had on the genuine belief of educated and uneducated alike; reverse, and thout which it is neither ask nor re-pectable to die or to be buried. And yst, one would this, it should long ago have been apparent to re-flecting men, that when a mind has ceased to attribute induces a ortion of the importance of a magical preparation without which it is neither ask on the genuine belief to a buried. And yst, one would this, it should long ago have been apparent to re-flecting men, that when a mind has ceased to attribute its world with all its evit on an Arbitrary Cause, that mind has arrived at the very point where calimeas and resignation set in and become abiding qualities. It all the wrong and suffering we see around us here be in pursuance of the inservatable designs of a ruling Will above, why may it not be so, or infinitely worse, hereafter? With such a faith, accompanied with the protection of individual immortality, magic indeed hardly any magic can be relied on to secure the covet-of salvation. Thus it is that theism commits us to experiaturalism. By its one unreasonable assump-tion it makes Builer's Analogy unanswerable, justifies are saved, and gives Albert Barnes good reason for the melancholy view of human desting arowed in his published correspondence with Mr. Gerrit Smith. It is visionary belief, and not unbelief, that misreads of high and readers their contemplation appauling. The lesson of Mr. Holyoxke's last hours but through conscientiounces and a study of the prites at the end. In reading of such a death, am moved to sympath's and respect; for during twenty for that fell split which works amain to render the death-bed, that should be curtained with holiness and possible to excite, and of the most cruci and humili-ting terrors that Superstition has ever brough the possible to excite, and of the most erust and humili-ting terrors that Superstition has very brough and the possible to excite, and of the most erust and humili-ting terrors that Superstition has very brough and the science of the most intensified selfahness it is possible to excite, and of the most erust and humili-ting terrors that Superstition has very brough and the science of the most intensified selfahness it possible to excite, and of the most erust and humili-ting terrors that Superstition has very brough and the science of the most intensified selfahness it possible to excite, and of the most erust and humili-ting terrors that Superstition has ever brough and the science of the most intensified selfahness it possible to excite, and of the most erust and and humili-ting terrors that Superstition has ever brough the spossible to excite, and of the most erust and and humili-ting terrors that Superstition has ever brough the spossible to be and the science of the most intensified selfahness it is possible to be and the science of the most intensifi

BALTIMORE, May, 1874.

GOD IN THE CONSTITUTION.

Another convention has been held of late, at Pitta-burg, for the purpose of waking up the people of the United States to the importance, indeed the impera-tive necessity, of amending the Constitution, so that it shall recognize God as the sovereign of the uni-orres, Jasue Christ as the rule of the nation, and the Bible as the revelation of all human law. The rer-end gentlemen who took a prominent part in the deliberations of the convention seem to think that used an amendment would cure all our national forobles, put us on the highway of prosperity, and secure for us national grandeur and perpetuity. They disclaim all intention of uniting Church and State; they hold up both hands in horror at such an unpholy alliance; they only wish to honor God and perpetuate our liberties. We distrust all this. They musthold innumerable conventions, and read through that gold spectacles countless thousands of disquis-tions on the honor and glory of God, before they will continue the plain, common-sense American clitzen that there is not a cat of the very largest size under that there is not a cat of the very largest size under that there is not a cat of the very largest size under that there is not a cat of the very largest size under that there is not a cat of the very largest size under the food who gave them sense sufficient to frame 1t, if God is so easily honored, if they think him jeased with such triffes, why do not these genitemen make for dall orer their clothing, and stamp it on every arti-cle of furniture and every implement of labor? Let imm do so, if they see fit; but it is to be hoped that ""we the people" have more sense. These Constitu-tion-tinkers would have us believe that the grand object of government should be the defences and pro-motion of religion; ther religion. They are not con-tent to enjoy it themselves, and defend the govern-ment this guarantees them enjoyment of the right to soverhip God according to the dictate of their own oronship God according to the dictate of the relight of the plo every man shall pay for and also atchd public wor-ship?? Last year a convention was held in the city of New York for the purpose of securing this "religious amendment." At that meeting a doctor of divinity, speaking of Jews, Deists, Seventh-Day Bapitats, and Athelsts, said: "These all are, for the occasion, and so far as our amendment is concerned, one class.

They use the same arguments and the same tactica against us. They must be counted together, which we very much regret, but which we cannot help." How would the reverend doctor treat them? He said: "What are the rights of the Atheist? I would toler-ate him as I would tolerate a poor lunatic. I would tolerate him as I would a conspirator. He may live ind go free, hold his lands and enjoy his home; he may even vote; but for any higher, more advanced citizenship, he is, as I hold, utterly disqualified." "He may even vote; may select his candidate." Is it not passing strange that men are so apt to consider all who do not agree with them as to religion lunatics or fools?

who do not agree with them as to religion lunatics or fools? We have a glorious Constitution securing liberty and equality to all. Let us jealously guard it, and keep it from the power of that worst of all enemies of the human race, religious fanaticiem. Under the Constitution we have become a mighty nation. True, we have been cursed by slavery, and as a consequence accurged by war; fraternal blood has flowed like water, and every family in the land has flowed like water, and every family in the land has been clothed in the sable babiliments of woe; but the broken fet-ters of the slave now rust in the graves of our fallen heroes. Liberty has been proclaimed throughout the ball the inhabitants thereof, and one cannot belp thinking that, if the clergy of the United States had been half as anxious in years long gone to get alavery out of the Constitution as some of them are now to get God and the Bible into it, we should have had no war. Gentlemen of the convention, do what you can to propagate true and undefied religion, love to God and good will to man; but, for God and hu-manity's sake, be good enough to let the Constitution of the United States alone. KINO. A

THE CONDITION OF OUR PRISONS.

THE ONDERSIDE STORE THE CONDITION OF OUR PRISONS. The Condition of States is remembered with so much pleasure and satisfaction by all who had the pleasure of meeting and hearing her, has recently addressed to the Prison Association of New York a very interesting letter, giving the results of her observations upon the condition of our prisons, so many of which she visited. Mise Carpenter begins by laying down the true principles of prison discipline and the conditions requisite other successful operation, and concludes with observations and suggestions concerning the various pripties of prison discipline and the protection of society, deprive of liberty any person, man or woman, who is doing an lujury to it by breach of the laws. But, in thus depriving him of his liberty, the State has not work and religious—in every way consistent with he optice of his imprisonment, which is the protection of society and the minimizing of crime. This of the societ of his imprisonment, which is the protection of society and the minimizing of crime. This of the societ of his imprisonment. If the shortness of his sentence of detention renders the first prisonation of his offence and the prevention of his future erime into a conduct, which may therefore be regarded as the interdent of the societ, he and for the treatment of chis moles character, he adder object of his imprisonment. The short has bound to provide for his well-being—physical, intellect, he adder object of his imprisonment. The first store and the prevention of his future erime into a conduct, which may therefore be regarded as the interdent of the prison when he treatment of this principle, and for the right treatment of chis hey private, he adder of his interdent of the short hey adder as the privation of a bis state the condition of all they person, when hey the be appointed in eve annually in rotation, but shall be eligible to reflec-tion. That the board shall have power to enforce the adoption, in places of detention (jails, policestations, and reformatories), of the general conditions appointed by the State for such places. That the board shall have power to appoint the chief officer of the State institutions, subject to the approval of the Governor and Council of the State; such officers (warden, and religious and moral in-structors) being irremovable except for misconduct or inability; and that it (the board) must sanction the appointment, by local authorities, of such officers in county jails or reformatories and all places of legal detention under voluntary management; auch officers being irremovable as above. That the board shall appoint inspectors, who shall whenever it may appear desirable, all jails and other places of legal detention, all persons in detention having the power of laying any grievance before them; and that the inspectors shall is a monthly re-port before the board. The inspectors of all female jails and institutions to be ladies, who shall recom-mend to the board for approval all the chief female officials. The board should present annually a complete re-officials, The board should present annually a complete re-

The board should present annuary a compressive port to the Legislature. Until some such boards as this are established, with the powers here briefly specified, there will be no se-curity for the due protection of persons whose liberty has been forfelted by the State from serious injury, physical and moral, arising from bad system, im-proper treatment, and the misconduct or neglect of officials.—Liberal Christian, April 25.

Innineer by Google

286	COD DECESSION INTO	1 8 7 4.	PUBLICATIONS.
Advertisements.	GOOD PHOTOGRAPHS	1  8  -7  4.	OF THE
THE PATRONAGE	LEADING INDEX WRITERS.	THE INDEX,	FREE
of the liberal advertising public is respect- tuly solicited for THE INDEX. The attempt will be honestly made to keep the advertis- ing pages of THE INDEX in entire harmony	Including O. B. FROTHINGHAM, T. W. HIGGINSON,	A Weekly Journal	RELIGIOUS
rith its general character and principles, and hus to furnish to the public an advertising medium which shall be not only profitable to te patrons, but also worthy of their most generous support. To this end, all improper r "blind" advertisemente, all quack adver-	W. J. POTTER, W. H. SPENCER, F. W. NEWMAN, CHAS. VOYSET,	FREE RELIGION.	ASSOCIATION isements, and all advertisements believed o be fraudulent or unjust to any one, will be acluded from these columns. No cuts will be admitted. THE INDEX must not be held responsible	A. W. STEVENS, F. E. ABBOT, Are now for sale at the office of THE INDEX,	PUBLISHED BY THE INDEX ASSOCIATION,	Beport of the Addresses and other Proceedings of the Original Meet ing in 1867, at which the Pro Beligious Association was Organ or any statement made by advertisers, who full in all cases accept the responsibility for belr own statements, ADVERTISING RATES.	and will be malled postpaid to any address on receipt of price. Single Photographs, 25 cents each; complete Set of Eight Photo- graphs, $1.50.	AT No. 1 Tremont Place, Boston. EDITOR:	ized. Containing addresses by O. B Froth ingham, Henry Blanchard, Lucretiz Mor Bobert Dale Owen, John Weiss, Oliver John son, F. E. Abbot, D. A. Wasson, T. W. Hg
7 1 1 1 2 1 3 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1	Address, THE INDEX, No. 1 Tremont Place, Boston, Mass. TNDEXTRACTS.	FRANCIS ELLINGWOOD ABBOT. ASSOCIATE EDITOR:	ginson, and Ralph Waldo Emerson. (This pamphlet has not been on sale for
On an alt-column avertisements, a discount i 10 per cent, will be made; on full-column dvertisements, a discount of 25 per cent. On all advertisements for which cash is aid in advance, a further discount of 25 per ent. on the total, as above calculated, will e made. FRANCIS E. ABBOT, Editor.	No. 1Truthe for the Times, by F. E. Abbot, contains the "Fifty Affirmations" and "Modern Principles." Ma. CHARLES	ABRAM WALTER STEVENS. EDITORIAL CONTRIBUTORS: O. B. FROTHINGHAM, New York City.	number of years, and many persons who hav all of the Annual Beports succeeding do no possess this.) Price 50 cents.
Be made. FRANCIS E. ABBOT, Editor. CIRCULATE I Circulate I I Circu- late THOSE PETITIONS. Don't feel satis- tiod when your petition is a yard long, unless you more asked swary one to sign it. Get good, minu- mer asked swary one to sign it. Get good, minu-	DARWIN, author of "The Origin of Spe- cles," says, in a letter to the editor not orig- inally intended for publication, but subse- quently authorized to be used: "I have now	T. W. HIGGINSON, Newport, B.I. W. J. POTTER, New Bedford, Mass. R. P. HALLOWELL, Boston, Mass. Mass. E. D. CHENEY, Jamaica Plain, Mass.	Proceedings of Second Annual Meet ing, 1869. 50 cents. Contains easys b Julia Ward Howe on "Freedom and Re straint in Religion," and by David A. Was
GET EVERYBODY.	read "IBUTES FOR THE TIMES," and I admire them from my inmost heart; and I agree to almost every word." New Edition. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00.	F. W. NEWMAN, England. CHARLES VOYSEY, England.	son on "The Relation of Social Science i Religion," and speeches by O. B. Frohing ham, Jesse H. Jones, F. E. Abbot, Wm. Der ton, R. W. Emerson, Mary Grew, C. A. Bai tol, A. M. Powell, H. B. Blackweil, Rowlan
Don't neglect to show the petition to any one, ecause he is a stockholder in some church, or ther szempted property, as many such persons fimit the justice of the demand; and those who ill not should be made to take the responsibility t refusing to sign it. Don't delay! We want the petitions returned	No. 2Fear of the Living God, by O. B. Frothingham, exposes the dobasing char- acter of the popular notions of God, and presents conceptions of him that are wor-	THE INDEX aims- To increase general intelligence with respect to religion :	Connor, Lucy Stone, Horace Seaver, an others; with an appendix on "Outlines Judaism" by Rabbi Wise.
arly. Fer order of EXEC. CONN. of the BOSTON LIBERAL LEAGUE.	thy of the nineteenth century. New Edi- tion. Price 5 cents; 12 copies 50 cents.	To foster a nobler spirit and quicken a higher purpose, both in society and in the indi-	Proceedings of Third Annual Meeting, 1870. 50 cents. Contains essa
JULTURED FREE THOUGHT.	No. 3Lecture on the Bible, by the Rev. Charles Voyaey, of England, is an over- wheiming demonstration of the imperfec- tions and errors of the Bible, both in the	vidual: To substitute knowledge for ignorance, right for wrong, truth for superstition, freedom for slavery, character for creed, catholicity	by O. B. Frothingham on the "Idea of the Free Religious Association," followed the addresses by D. A. Wasson on "The Name of Religion," by Mrs. E. D. Cheney on "R
The Index Association, OFFICE, NO. 1 TREMONT PL., BOSTON,	Old and the New Testaments. New Edition. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00.	for bigotry, love for hate, humanitarianism for sectarianism, devotion to universal enda for absorption in selfish schemes.	ilgion as a Social Force, especially in rel tion to Philanthropy and Reform," and I F. E. Abbot on "The Fature of Heligio as been organized with a capital stock fixed at NE RUNDRED THOUSAND dollars, for the prose of publishing Tracts, Books, and	No. 4.—Christian Propagandiam, by F. E. Abbot, is an exposure of the weakness, costliness, and inefficiency of the System of Poreign Missions. Full of Figures, Facts, and Interesting Extracts. Price 10 cents;	In brief, to hasten the day when Free Relig- ion shall take the place of dogmatiam and ecclesiasticism throughout the world, and when the welfare of humanity here and	Organization, as affected by the Spirit the Age;" an essay by Samuel Johnson "The Natural Sympathy of Religions," fo lowed by Rabbi Wise on "The Permane and Progressive Elements of Judaism," I
THE INDEX,	12 copies $1.00.	now shall be the aim of all private and public activities.	T. W. Higginson on "Mohammedaniam
Weekly Paper devoted to Free and Rational Religion. It is the object of THE INDEX to give public ferance to the boldest, most cultivated, and	No. 5"God in the Constitution," by Rev. Arthur B. Bradford, opposes the pro- posed Theological Amendment to the Unit- ed States Constitution. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00.	In addition to its general objects, the prac- tical object to which THE INDEX is special- ly devoted is the ORGANIZATION OF THE LIBERALS OF THE COUNTRY, for the pur-	by Wm. H. Channing on "The Religions Chins," and Wm. J. Potler on "Religi- Old and New in India;" also abstract of discussion on "The Bible in the Publ Schools," by Thos. Vickers, S. R. Calthro et matured thought of the age on all religious metions, and to apply it directly to the social ad political amelioration of society.	No. 64"The Sabbath," by Parker Pills- bury, denounces Sabbatarian superstition. New Edition. Price 10 cents; 12 copies	pose of securing the more complete and con- sistent secularization of the political and ed- neational institutions of the United States. The Church must give place to the Bepublic	Rabbi Wise, and others. Proceedings of Fifth Annual Meeting, 1872. S5 cents. (Four or more,
It is edited by FRANCISE. ABBOT, assisted by BRAM W. STEVENS, with the following list of litorial Contributors :	$1.00. No. 7Compulsory Education," by F. E. Abbot, maintains the right of every child to be educated, and the duty of the	in the affections of the people. The last vestiges of ecclesiastical control must be wiped out of the Constitutions and Statutes of the several States in order to bring them	cents each.) Contains essays by J. 1 Chadwick on "Liberty and the Church America," by C. D. B. Mills on "Religion the Expression of a Permanent Sentime
O. B. FROTHINGHAM, New York City. THOMAS W. HIGGINSON, Newport, B. I. WILLIAM J. POTTEB, New Bedford, Mass.	chuid to be caucated, and the duty of the State to ensure it an aducation. Price 5 cents; 12 copies 50 cents. No. 8.—The Present Heaven, by O. B.	into harmony with the National Constitution. To accomplish this object, the Liberals must make a united demand, and present an un- broken front, and the chief practical aim of	of the Human Mind," and by O. B. From ingham on "The Religion of Humanity with addresses by Rowland Connor, Cal
WILLIAM H. SPENCEB, Haverhill, Mass. SICHARD P. HALLOWELL, Boston, Mass. MBS. E. D. CHENET, Jamaics Plain, Mass.	No. 8.— Ine arcsent statement, by O. B. Frothingham, treats of a subject that in- terests everybody. New Edition. Price 5 cents; 12 copies 50 cents.	THE INDEX will be henceforth to organize a great NATIONAL PARTY OF FREEDOM. Let every one who believes in this movement	Burleigh, Lucretia Mott, A. B. Alcott, C. Bartol, Horace Seaver, Alexander Lo and others.
HEV. CHARLES VOTSEY, London, England, PROF. FEANCIS W. NEWMAN, London, Eng. Every liberal abould subscribes for THE INDEX, the best results of the State of the S	No. 9The Christian Amendment, by F. E. Abbot, shows the dangerous charac- ter of the attempt to interpolate the Evan- celled Christian Coard in the U.S. Coard	give it direct ald by helping to increase the circulation of THE INDEX. SPECIAL FEATURES.	Proceedings of Sixth Annual Meeting, 1873. 35 cents. (Four or more, cents each.) Contains essays by Samu
the best popular exponent of Religious Liber- sm. Every Christian minister, and every think- g church-member, should subscribe for it, as e clearest, most candid, and most scholarly ex-	gelical Christian Creed in the U. S. Consti- tution. Price 5 cents; 12 copies 50 cents. No. 10.—The Impeachment of Christi- anity, by F. E. Abbot. Fourth Ten Thou-	The publication of a valuable leading pa- per or essay of a thoughtful obaracter, in each issue, will continue to be one of the most marked features of THE INDEX. Reputs adjustic contributions will com-	Johnson on "Freedom in Religion," and John Weiss on "Religion in Freedom," w addresses by Wm. C. Gannett, Robert D. Owen T. W. Higginson, Samuel Longf sition of the differences between Free Thought d Evangelical Christianity, and as the best mans of becoming well informed of the argu-	nand. Sent for free distribution to any one who will distribute it, in packages of from five to one hundred copies.	Regular solitorial contributions will con- tinue to be furnished by the well-known em- inent writers who have already done so much to give to THE INDEX its present high po-	low, J. S. Thomson, F. E. Abbot, and I cretia Mott. Sympathy of Religious, by T. W. E
ents and the movements which the Church will we to meet in the future. Almost every number contains a discourse or	No 11The God of Science, by F. E. Ab- bot, attempts to show the real influence of modern science upon the idea of God. Price 10 cents, 12 copies $1.00.	sition. Mr. VOYSEY has kindly consented to furnish every fortnight a LONDON LETTER containing matters of general interest to rad- ical readers. Other Interest interest to rad-	Sympathy of Beligions, by 1. W ginson. 25 cents. Religions of China, by Wm. H. Chi ading srticle, which slove is worth the price of to year's subscription. Prof. MAX MUELLER, of Oxford, England, in	No. 12 Is Romanism Real Christian- ity? Two essays by Francis W. Newman and F. E. Abbot. Price 10 cents; 12 copies	Ical readers. Other interesting correspond- ence, communications, extracts from valua- ble books and periodicals, and miscellaneous articles, will also be published; and such	ning. 25 cents. Reason and Revelation, by William letter to the Editor published in THE INDEX	$1.00.	improvements will be made from time to time as circumstances shall render possible.	Potter. 10 cents.

4 a letter to the Editor published in THE INDEX for January 4, 1873, says: "That the want of a fournal entirely devoted to Religion in the widest sense of the word should be felt in America-that such a journal should have been started and so powerfully supported by the best minds of your country,-is a good sign of the times. There is no such journal in England, France, or Germany; though the number of so-called religious or theelogical periodicals is, as you know, very large." And later still: "I read the numbers of your IN-DEX with increasing interest."

Send $2.00 for one year, or 75 cents for three months on trial.

Address

THE INDEX. No. I Tremont Place, Boston.

$1.00. No.13.-On the Vision of Heaven, by Prof. F. W. Newman, of England, analyzes the Christian conception of Heaven. Price 5 cents; 12 copies 50 cents.

No. 14. - A Study of Heligion: The Name and the Thing, by F. E. Abbot, attempts to show that the popular deriva-tion of the word Religion is incorrect; that the popular conceptions of Religion itself are inadequate; and that a new conception of it, based on the Law of Evolution, con-sistent with absolute Freedom of Thought, and independent even of belief in God, is the necessary condition of the perpetuity of Religion among mea. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00. Address. THE INDEX, 1 TREMONT PLACE,

Boston, Mass.

Address

AGENTS.

TERMS.

The price of THE INDEX is Three Dol-lars a year, payable in advance; and at the same rate for shorter periods. All remit-tances of money must be at the sender's risk, unless forwarded by cheque, registered letter, or post-office money order. The name, with address in full, must be accompanied with the money in each case.

THE INDEX,

No. 1 Tremont Place, Boston.

Local Agents for THE INDEX are wanted in every city and town throughout the coun-try. The most liberal terms are offered.

WM. J. POTTER, Sec. F. R. A.

Taxation of Church Property, by Jas. Parton. 10 cents, singly; package of ten, 60 cents; of one hundred, §3.

These publications are for sale at the office of the Free Religious Association, No. 1 Tremont Place, Boston. The Annual Reports for 1868 and 1871 cannot be supplied, and the supply of others previous to that of 1873 is quite limited. Orders by mall may be addressed either "Free Religious Association,

No. 1 Tremont Place, Boston," or to the Secretary, New Bedford, Mass.

THE INDEX-JUNE 11, 1874.

287

2.00

1.76

4.50

3.00

w of 2.60

Other Worlds

urs. A Baring

Analysis, in its

L Science for Lesure Joint Panillar Easyston Belevilla Subjects, tural Phenomena ye on Astronomy: A Series of Papers Planets and Mcteers, the Sun, etc., h 10 Flates and 24 Woodcuts. Moon, her Motions, Aspecta Secury, Moon, her Motions, Aspecta Secury, nse of Heaven. BOSETTI (CHRISTINA G.) A Sh Dante SCHELLEN (H.) Spectrum Analys Application to Terrestrial Substan the Physical Constitution of the H Bodies.

PROCTOR (RICHARD A.) than Oura: the Phyrality of led under the Light of R Researches. With Colore Light Science for Leiaure H

Light of F Nati Essay on 1 With

The Expa

Th

	THEITNDE
POPULAR BOOKS,	Historical Pictures Retouched; a Voli
SENT BY MAIL	Historical Pictures Retouched; a Vol of Miscellanies. In two parts, Par "Studies, Pictures, and Pancies" The Life of Dr. Maris Zakrzewska, b a Practical Illustration of "Wom Bights to Labor"
AT	Rights to Labor". DABWIN'S Origin of Species
PUBLISHERS' PRICES!	Journal of Researches er Animais The Variation of Animais and Piants in Domestication. 2 vola, illustrated
ORDERS PROMPTLY FILLED.	Method of Rightly conducting the Res and Seeking Truth In the Sciences
NO EXTRA CHARGE FOR POSTAGE.	DICKENS' Child's History of England . DUHEING (JULIA.) Philosophers Fools. A Study
ANY BOOK in the subjoined List, or any other OBTAINABLE BOOK that may be desired, will	ELIOT'S (GEORGE) Novels. Household tion. 5 vois., each Comprising-oBTAINADAS bromply as possible on receipt af orders accompanied with the CASH.	Adam Bede. Bomola, The Mill on the Floss.
orders are respectfully solicited from all friends of THE INDEX.	Bills Marner and Scenes of Cierical 1 The Same. Library Edition. 2 vois
ALCOTT (A. BRONSON). Tablets 1.50 Ocacord Days	EMERSON'S (R. W.) Essays. First Series Essays. Second Series Miscellanies
Tittle Woman, Two	Representative Men. English Traits. Conduct of Life
vola	Representative Mea. English Traits. Conduct of Life Poema. With Portrait. May-day and Other Pisces Emasys. Bias and Cold Poema. Bius and Gold Press Works. 2 vols. Boclety and Sollande.
An Old-Fachlaned Girl	Poems. Blue and Gold Prose Works. 2 vols
Hospital Sketches and Carop and Fireston Skories An Old -Fashionsd Girl	BYANS (E. P., Ph. D). First Histor Transformations of Christianity. F the French of Athanase Coquerel
ARABIAN NIGHTS' ENTERTAINMENTS. 1.50	the French of Athanase Coquerel Younger
Claman Phanes	The Life and Works of Gotthold Ephn Lessing. Translated from the Germa Adolf Stahr, 2 vols
A UERBACH (BERTHOLD). On the Heights. 1.50	FARRAR'S Critical History of Free Thou In reference to the Christian Religion.
Lizerature and Dogma	FEUERBACH (LUDWIG.) The Essent Christianity. "George Ellot's" translat
RACON'S Empys 1.00	FISEE'S (JOHN) Myths and Myth-Make
BAGEHOT on the English Constitution 2.25 Physics and Politics	FROTHINGHAM (O. B.) Religion of manity
BAIN (ALEXANDER). Mental Science: A	manity Beliefs of the Unbelievers Child's Book of Beligion Life of Theodore Parker.
Composition of Fychology and Instate of 1.78 Moral Science: A Composition of Ethics. 1 rol	FULLER'S (MARGARET) Complete Wo including Memoirs by Emerson, Chann and others. A new edition. 6 yols
tion. 1 vol	GALTON (FRANCIS.) Hereditary Gen An Inquiry into its Laws and Co
BARTLETT'S Familiar Quotations 2.60
BARTOL (Rav. C. A). Badical Problems 2.00 The Bieing Faith	GOETHE'S Faust. Translated into En Verse by Bayard Taylor. 2 vols. Per Elective Affilied. Wilhelm Meister. Translated by Tho Cariyle. Portrait of Goethe. 2 vols Herman and Durothes. Translated by Ion Frothingham
BASTIAN (H. CHARLTON). The Begin- nings of Life. 2 vols	Carlyle. Portrait of Goethe. 2 vola Herman and Dorothes. Trauslated by len Frothingham
BIBLE in the Public Schools. Beends, Arguments, and Docision in the case of John D. Minor et al. rs. the Board	GREG'S (W. R.) Enigmas of Life Literary and Social Judgments Creed of Christendom.
of Education of the city of Cincinnam: a al. in the Supreme Court of the City of Cincional
BIBLE in the Fublic Schools. Resords, Arguments, and Decision in the case of John D. Milor et al. st. the Board of Education of the ofty of Cincinnati a d. in the Supreme Court of the City of Cincinnati	GBOTE'S LIFE. Compiled from Family 1 mmeats, Private Memoranda, and Oris Letters to and from Various Frienda. Mrs. Grote. Second Edition. With signing the use of the Bible	LTBIG all and a constant and the stand and t
BRACKETT (ANNA C.) The Education of American Girls	Book I. In England, Book II. In Scoti Book III. In France. Thoughts about Art
BROOKS'(CHARLEST.) Translations. The Layman's Broviery. 2.25 The World-Priest. 2.25 The Yall Student	HAMERTON (PHILIP G.) A Painter a Ca Book [I, in England, Book II, in Section Book II, in France Thoughts about Art. The Unknown River The Intellectual Life Chapters on Animals
The World-Priest	HAMILTON (GAIL). Child World. Part
BUCHNER'S Force and Matter	Child World. Fart First HAMILTON'S Lectures.
BUCKLE (HENRY THOMAS). History of Grullastion in England and France, Spain and Scolland, New edition of the entire work, with a complete index. 2 vols	1. Metaphysical Lectures 2. Logical Lectures
Call VIE'S Works. Cheap edition. Compria- ing the following: Miscellancouts Essays, 7 rols.; French Revolution, 3 vois.; Freder- tek the Orest, 10 vois.; Cromwell's Letters, &c. Svois.; Bartor Resartus, 1. voi.; John Sterling, 1 voi.; Life of Schiller, 1 voi.; John Sterling, 1 voi.; Life of Schiller, 1 voi.; John Sterling, 1 voi.; Life of Schiller, 1 voi.; John Sterling, 1 voi.; Lattor Day Pamphilets, 1 vol. Any volume sold separately. 31 vols. Lon- don, 1871-1. Per vol.	HAWTHORNE'S (NATHANIEL) We New Illustrated Library Edition. Nine Per vol
vols.; French Revolution, 3 vols.; Freder- ick the Orest, 10 vols.; Cromwell's Letters, dc. 5 vols.; Sartor Resartus, 1. vol.; John	Per vol. Twice-Told Tales. Mozes from an Old Manse. The Scarlet Letter, and The Blith
Sterling, I vol.; Life of Schiller, I vol.; Pass and Present, I vol.; Heroes and Hero Wor- abio. I vol.; Latter Day Pamphlets, I vol.	The House of the Savan Gables and
Any volume sold separately. 31 vols. Lon- don, 1871-3. Per vol	The Route of and Series Guides, and Snow Image. The Marbie Fan. The Kanglish Note-Books. The American Note-Books. The French and Italian Note-Books. Our Old Home, and Septimius Feltor
CARPENTER (Dn. W. E.) The Principles of Mentai Physiology, with their Applica- tions to the Training and Discipline of the Mind, and the Study of its Morbid Condi-	The Franch and Italian Note-Books. Our Old Home, and Septimius Felton
Mind, and the Study of its Morbid Condi-	HIGGINSON'S (T. W.) Out-Door Fapes Malbone. An Oldport Romance Army Life in a Black Regiment Atlantic Essays Oldport Days
CERVANTES' Don Quizote	Army Life in a Black Begiment Atlantic Essays Oldport Days
CHANNING (WM. ELLERY, D.D). The Per- fect Life. In Twelve Discourses. Edited from his manuscripts by his nephew, Wm. Beary Channing.	HOWELLS'S (WILLIAM D.) Their V
CHANNING (WM. ELLERY), Thoreau: The Post Naturalist, With Memorial Verse, 2.09	ding Journey Subarban Sketches Venetian Life Italian Journeys
OHENEY (MRS. E. D). Patience. A Series of Thirty Games for the Firealds	A Chance Acquaintance HUGO'S (V.) New Novel, " 'Ninety-Thro
Social Games. A new Series of Games for Parties, uniform with Patience	HUMBOLDT (ALEXANDER VON). Lif Translated from the German, 2 yols., three portraits.
CLARRE (JAMES FREEMAN), Ten Great Baligions	HUME'S (DAVID) Easays and Life HUMT'S (Mas. HELEN). Verses Bits of Travel
CLARER (Dr. E. H.) Sex in Education 1.25	Bits of Travel
CLODD (EDWARD). The Childhood of the World	RUXLEY'S Man's Place in Nature On the Origin of Species More Criticisms on Darwin and Adm trative Nibilism
00BBE (FRANCES POWER). Studies New and Old, of Ethical and Social Subjects. 2.00 Daswinsum in Morals, and other Essays 5.00 The Religious Demands of the Age	A Manual of the Anatomy of Vertebr A Manual of the Anatomy of Vertebr Animals. Lay Sermons, Addresses, and Reviews
The Beligious Demands of the Age	The Monitons of the Unseen
CONWAY (MONCURE D.) The Earthward Pugrimage	INGELOW'S (JEAN) Prose. Off the S
CORMELLATION and Conservation of Forces: A Series of Expositions by Grove, Melm- bolt, Mayer Expositions of Grove, Science Ser. with an Introduction by Edward L. Youmans, M.D., 1901.	Bindles for Stories Staties for Stories Stories told to a Child, First and Se
Youmans, M.D. 1 vol. 2.00	A Sistor's Bye-Hours Mopsa the Mairy: A Story, Poor Matt; or, The Clouded Intellect.
LIFE; Its True Aims and Requirements A Series of Addresses. By Tyndall, Huz-	Poor Matt; or, The Clouded Intellect.
CULTURE DEMANDED BY MODERN LIFE, Its True Aims and Requirements A Series of Addresses. By Tynidell, Huz- ler, Whawell, Faraday, Spencer, Draper, Masson, Lysil, etc. Edited by Edward L. Toumans	INTERNATIONAL SCIENTIFIC SER No. I. Porms of Water, in Clouds, I Rivers, Ice, and Glaciers. By John
the Market, and the Court; or, Woman's	dall. II. Physics and Politics; or, Though the Application of the Principla "Natural Selection," and "Inherita to Political Society. By Walter Bag
Citizenship 1.09	"Natural Selection," and "Inherita to Political Society. By Walter Bag

10

•

X

482852

	00111 11, 10/1.
; a Volume	III. Foods. By Dr. Edward Smith 1.75
ts. Part L.	III. Foods. By Dr. Edward Smith
Woman's	V. The Study of Sociology. By Herbert
The state of the s	VL The New Chemistry, By Josiah P.
2.90	VII. The Conservation of Energy. By Bal-
nd the Low-	ing of the Vital and Mental Applications
Piants under	of the Doctrine
Calcod 0.00	of the Doctrine
the Reason acces 2.25	IX. Responsibility in Mental Disease. By Henry Maudaley, M.D., 1.50
3069 2.25	JERROLD (DOUGLAS). Fireside Saints, Mr.
gland 1.50	JERROLD (DOUGLAS). Fireside Saints, Mr. Claude's Breakfast Talk, and other Papers, 1.56
phers and 2.00	JOHNSON'S (SAMUEL) Oriental Beligions, and their Relation to Universal Rollgion. India
asebold Edi-
	JOSEPHUS. The whole Works of Flavius Josephus, the Jewish Historian
	JOWETT, The Dialognes of Plato. Trans-lerical Life.	lated into English, with Analysis and Intro- ductions by B. Jowett, M.A., Master of Bailtol College, Oxford, and Reglus Pro- fessor of Greek. Four yols vole 3.50	Balilol College, Oxford, and Regius Pro-
8.50 1.25 1.30	KERR (ORPHEUS C). Versatilities, Postas.
1.50	KERR (ORPHEUS C). Versatilities, Poems, Patriotic, Sentimental and Humprous 2.00
rst Berice 2.00	LECKY (W. E. H.) History of the Riss and Influence of the Spirit of Rationaliam in Europe. 2 vols. 4,00
2.00	Europe. 2 vols. 4.00 History of European Morals from Augus-
2.00	tus to Charlemagne. 2 vols
1.00	LEGGE'S Confucius' Life and Teachings 4.00
1.50	Confuctus and Chinese Classics
1.50	LESSING'S (G. E.) Nathan the Wiss. Trans- lated by Ellen Frothingham 1.59
2.00	LEWES' Physiology of Common Life, 2 vois. 1.00
t Historical lity. From	LEWES' Physiology of Common Life, 2 vols. 1.00 Biographical History of Philesophy, from its Origin in Greece down to the Present Day. 2 vols.
1.64	Problems of Life and Mind. The Founda- tions of a Creed. 3.00 old Ephraim e German of	Des robiene of Life and Mind. The Founda- tions of Life and Mind. The Founda- tions of Life and Mind. The Founda- tions of a Creed
5.00	LEWIN (REV. RAPHAEL, D'C). What is Juee Thought, aligion 2.00	LEWIN (REV, RAPHAEL, D'C). What is Ju- dalant 7 or, a Few Words to the Jews 1.00
Essence of	LONGFELLOW'S (H. W.) Poems. Fortrait. 4.00
translation. 3.00	Prose Works. Portrait 4.00
th-Makers., 2.00 don of Hu-	LOWELL'S (J. R.) Poems. 2 vols
1.50	Among my Books 2.00
1.00	My Study Windows
lata Works	LOWELL (MES. A. C.) Posice for Children15 LUBBOCK (SIR JOHN). Origin of Civiliza-
, Channing, vols 9.00	LUBBOCK (SIR JOHN). Origin of Civiliza- tion, and the Primitive Condition of Man 2.00 Pre-historic Times
ary Genius. and Conse-	LTELL'S Principles of Geology. 2 vols 8.00 Elements of Geology
$.00	MICDONIID (OFODOF) The Vierde into English Is. Per vol 5.00 1.25	Daughter 1.30
by Thomas	MANN (HORACE). The Life of Horace 3.00
by Thomas vola	MANN (HORACE). The Life of Horace 3.00 Mann. By his Wife
	1848 Thoughts Selected from the Writings of Horace Mann. 1.25
1.00 2.00 1.95	WARTINEAU (JAMES.) Essays, Philosoph-
Family Doo-	MARTINEAU (JAMES.) Eassys, Philosoph- ical and Theological. 2 vols. Per vol 2.50 The New Amnilies of Faith nd Original Friends. By With Por-	MAURICE (REV. F. D.) The Ground and
With Por- 6.00
ntor a Camu.	MERIVALE'S (CHARLES) Conversion of the Roman Empire
In Scotland.	MILL (JOHN STUART.) Dissertations and
6.00	MILL (JOHN STUART.) Dissertations and Discussions. 4 vols., each. 225 The Examination of the Philosophy of Sir William Hamilton. 2 vols., each. 226 The Positive Philosophy of Augusté Cornte. L50 Political Economy. New and revised certe. L50 Hon. 2.50
6.00 2.00 4.00	William Hamilton, 2 vola., each
d. Part Sec-	Political Economy. New and revised edi- tion
1.00	tion. 2.50 The Subjection of Women. 1.23 Easesy on Liberty. 1.25 Representative Government. 1.59 Autoblography. 213 Memorial Volume. His Life and Works. 1.0
3.50	Autobiography
	MILLER (JOAQUIN.) Songe of the Slerras, 1.50
L) Works. a. Nine vols. 2.00	Songs of the Sun Lands 1.50
	MIVART (ST. GEO.) On the Genesis of 1.75
e Blithedale	MORLEY (PROF. JOHN.) Voltaire 2.00
ies, and The	Rousscau, 2 vols
Books.	MUELLER (MAX, M.A.) Loctures on the Belence of Language. First Series
-Books. s Felton.	The Same. Second Series or Papers 1.80	Essays on the Science of Heligion, Vol. 11, Essays on Mythology, Traditions.
1.50 15 1.50 2.00	and Customs. Vol. III, Essays on Lit- erature, Biography and Antiquities.
Their Wed-	Three vols. Price per volume
2.00	NASBY (PETROLEUM V). Swingin' Round
2.00 2.00 2.00 2.00 2.00 2.00
1.50	NEWMAN (FRANCIS W.) A History of the Hebrew Monarchy
ty-Three" 1.75	Phases of Faith; or, Passages from the History of my Creed
N). Life of. 2 yols., with	NEW MAN (FRANCIS W.) A History of the Hobrew Monarchy of the Future, as the Organization of Philanthropy Theism, Doctrinal and Practical
bē 1.25 1.50	Againat Hero-Making in Religion
re 1.25 1.00	PARKER (THEODORE.) A Discourse of Matters Pertaining to Religion
d Adminia-	Speeches, Addresses, and Occasional Ser- 4.30 mons. 3 vols
Vertebrated 2.50 Reviews 1.75	Additional Speeches, Addresses, and Sec. 3.00 sional Sermons, 2 vols
Neviowe 1.75	Ristoric Americans,-Franklin, Washing-
2.25	troduction by Rev. O. B. Frothingham 1.50
ff the Skel-	demeanor of a Speech is Fancuil Hall acting Kidnapolog; with the Defence 1.50
1.75	against Aldmapping, when the stations, -A.D. L. and MDCCLV, A Christmas Story and Second 1.25	PARSONS (THEOPHILUS.) Ins Indune
1.25	and the Finite
tellect if	PHELPS'S (ELIZABETH STUART.) The Gates Ajar       1.40         The Totly Book       1.40         Mon, Womes, and Ghosts       1.40         Hedgod in       1.40         The Silent Partner.       1.40         What to West 7.       1.00
iouds, Rain, y John Tyu-	Gates Ajar
y John Tyn-	Hedged in 1.30 The Silent Partner. 1.40
Thoughts ou rinciples of uheritance"	PROCTER'S (ADELAIDE A.) Poems. Porter Bagehot, 1.50	PROCTER'S (ADELAIDE A.) Poems. Por- trait. Cabinet Edition

The Silent Partner	1.00
PBOCTER'S (ADELAIDE A.) Poems. Por- trait. Cabinet Edition

1. Introductory, By I	rof, Huz	loy, F.R.	8
SCIENCE PRIMERS 1. Introductory, By J 2. Chemistry, By Paris, 3. Physics, By Balls, 4. Instructions 4. Physical Geograph kie, LL.D., F.R.S., 1 SCOTTER W.	y. By An	rt. Wit	h 11- .50
SCOTT'S Waverley No	vols. 25	oth	50
Jesus. Second Edi	The Eng	lish Life	0.2 2.00
MILES'S (SAMUEL	Self-He	atton Tr	1.50
SPENCER (BERBER lectual, Moral, and P First Principles Hindrations of Univ lection of his best Social Statics; or. T tial to Human Hay the Frat of them I The Principles of His Philosophy of Style. Recont Discussions New H Sociology	hysical		1.35
litustrations of Univ lection of his beat	cal, and a ereal Pro	gress. A	Be- 2.50
Social Statics; or, T tial to Human Ha	he Condi	tions Es	and
The Principles of Bi	ology. 2	vola.	8,00
Philosophy of Style. Recent Discussions I	n Science	Philoso	phy, ologico-Politicus
ologico-Politicus Life, Correspondence	and Eth	Ca	···· 9.00
White Tyranny			1.50
New Life of Jesus.	e Old Pi	ath and	the 3.00
MOD. & VOLETTIN			A
TAINE'S (H. A.) Hist ture, 2 vols The Class-Room Tai Literature, Abridg Make	ory of En	glish Lit	01.T -110
The Class-Room Tai Literature, Abridg	ne. Histo	ited by J	ohn 2.50
TENNYSON'S (ALFR	ED) Poen		1.75	1
THACKERAY'S (W. M	L.) Novela	House	hold rol., 1.25	1
Vaulty Fair. The Newcomes. Adventures of Phi Pendeopis	11-
T ODGORGANS.			5
The Virginians, Esmond, and Love Miscellaneous Writ- tion. Uniform wi- plete in 3 vois. Wit-	the Wid	ower.	Rdition. Uniform wi plete in 3 vois. With	th the N	ovela. (	vol. 1.28
This edition include	with man	natter in	the lat-
1. Barry Lyndon, I 2. Paris, and Irish 3. Snobs, Sketches 4. Four Georges, F 5. Catherine, Chri printed Pieces.	Sketch-B Denis D	looks, &c	i, &c.
4. Pour Georges, H 5. Catherine, Chri printed Pleces.	umorists stmas B	, dec. ooks, an	d Unro-president a rougent				÷.,
Iales of Shouls
THOREAU'S (H. D.) the Woods	Walden	; or, Lif	e in 2.00
the Woods Excursions in Field The Msino Woods Cape Cod Letters	and Pores		2.00
A Yankee in Cauada A Week on the C	onsord a		2.00
4947010			Sector Blog
of Mankind Primitive Culture.	2 vola	Sarry In	10ry 2.50
TYNDALL (JOHN).	Faraday	as a Di	1007-
	e for Un	scientific	Quer
Fragments of Science ple Light and Electricit Hoars of Exercise in Heat as a Mode of M On Sound Radiant Heat Forms of Water Loctures on Light.	the Alp	· · · · · · · · · · · · · · · · · · ·	2,60
On Sound	10000		2.00
Forms of Water Loctures on Light Proceedings at the	Farewel	Renon	1.00 at to Prof. Tyndall
TYTLER (SARAH.) Pictures Modern Fainters an
VOYSEY (REV. CHA	RLES.)	The Slin	gand
VOYSEY (BEV. CHA the Stone. Vols. L. Vols III. IV. and VI The Voysey Appeal Voysey's Defence a	, each	MCh	1.00
Voysey's Defeace a	York
WARNER'S (CHABL a Garten Saunterioge	ES D.) #	ty same	1.00 1.00
Hack-Log Studies			TUTE ANY
WEISS (JOHN.) Am Life of Theodore Pa	arker. 2	vola	8.00
WHIPPLE'S (E. P.) L Essays and Reviews	Iterature	and Life	1.50 3.00 1.50
WHIPPLE'S (E. P.) L Essays and Reviews Character and Char The Literature of th Success and its Con-	titions	Elizabet	h 1.50
WHITNEY'S (MRS. / Lealle Goldthwaite') We Girls: A Home !	Life		1.50
Real Folks The Other Girls Panales. A volume
WHITTIER'S (JOHN	G.) Poen	us. 2 vol	8 4.00
Child Life			3.00
1 1 2
AI	DRESS	1.3
THE	I N	DE	Χ,	÷

Google

ad Bona	FREE DISCUSSION	BOSTON LIBERAL LEAGUE.	A FEW COPIES ONLY
ed, Bone, LLS. Ten Mustrat-	F is held at HOSPITALLER HALL, 83 Washing- ton Street, Boston, every Sunday, at 10% A.M., 3% and 7% P.M. All that relates to the Religious. Political, and Social interests of manifold consti- Political, and Social interests of manifold consti-	Our organization some time since decided to di-	Of an excellent Photograph (Cabinet Size) of Rev. MONCURE D. CONWAY, of London, can be had at the office of THE INDEX. Fries
LARS!	and Index Tracts are for sale every Sunday at Hospitaller Hall.	rect its efforts for the present towards scenring the	60 centa.
NCE.	THE BOUND INDEX FOR 1873. The bound volume of THE INDEX for 1873	Repeal of the Laws	A CHEAP OFFER! A COMPLETE SET of INDEX TRACTS.
ber First-	address on receipt of $3, by express, at	whereby church and other corporate property is	from No. 1 to 14 inclusive, will be mailed to any address on the prepayment of 75 cmsrs.
lorence.	the purchaser's expense. A conter form. the year can be furnished in no other form. Address 1 Tremont Place, Boston.	unjustly exempted from its share of the burden of taxation.	Address THE INDEX, No. 1 Tremont Place, Boston, Mass
l. alers.	CHARLES SUMNER.	As a means to this end, we have published for general circulation several thousand copies of a	THE AMERICAN EDITION
aic ra.	A fine likeness of Massachusetts' great Ben- stor, the copy of a recent Photograph by Black, is for sale at THE INDEX office, and	TRACT	07
Мам., т. Мам.	of the price-fifty cents.		MONCURE D. CONWATS SACRED ANTHOLOGY,
R B	Address 1 Tremont Place, Boston.	on Church Exemption, being the article by Mr. Abbot which appeared in THE LEDEX of Nov. 77.	A BOOK OF ETHNICAL SCRIPTURES,
	TO NEWSPAPER	The edition was made as large as our funds would allow; but, so great has been the demand,	has just been published, and will be sent postpaid on receipt of the price, $4.00.
Ages.	PUBLISHERS.	it is already nearly exhausted. Our next edition ought to be large enough to	Address THE INDEX, uddha, Con-	Having conveniences for doing the best of newspaper printing at reasonable prices, I should like to contract for composition alone, or for composition, press-work, and mailing,	place a copy in the hands of	1 TEEMOST PLACE, Boston, Mass.
agoras, Mar- ma, Luther, allesin, Mil-	for one or more weekly papers. Best of references given, and satisfactory work guaranteed. GEO. H. ELLIS,	EVERY VOTER IN THE STATE,	G. L. HENDERSON & CO.,
Fletcher, F. Iuller, Elias Wright, Lu- King, Bush-	7 Tremont Place, Boston.	and generously to supply the calls for them in other States.	BANKERS, LEROY, MINN.
king, Bush- inge, Emer- rothingham,	Places aroming the revised list of POPU-	To do this, we need funds; for, although we	Money invested on abort time, or for a rom many	LAR BOOKS on the opposite side of this page. Any OBTAINABLE BOOK NOT IN THIS LIST will be furnished to order.	have made arrangements for printing the Tract at very low cost, it is impossible for the Boston	payable semi-annually. Perfect title and ample security guaranteed. All expenses for writ, verse to it."	chase English, German, or French Books, or who wish for information as to the price. &c.,	League, with its various other expenses, to bear the entire expense alone.	by borrower. We collect and remit to any
v	of any American or Foreign Book, can have their orders promptly filled and their inqui- ries answered by addressing THE INDEX,	Will not, then,	part of the United States free of charge. REFEBENCES. — First National Bank, Mo- Gregor, Iowa; First National Bank, Austin
INS. cloth; price.	I Tremont Place, Boston.	All Friends of the Movement	Minn.; Milwaukee National Bank, Milwan- kee, Wis.; City National Bank, Chicago, II.; Allen, Stevens & Co., Bankers, New York
Postage. E INDEX, ace, Boston.	BOUND VOLUMES OF THE	come forward and help us with liberal domations ?	City; Morris Altman.
NER'S	Bound volumes of THE INDEX for 1871, 1872, and 1873, will be sent by express (at the purchaser's expense) on receipt of $2.50, $2	We frequently receive communications from parties wishing tracts to distribute, saking how	REAL ESTATE SECURITIES, paying 8 to 10 per cent. Interest, or
к.	buchaser's expense) on receipt of $2.50, $2 50, and $3.00 respectively. These volumes are exceedingly valuable singly, irrespective of each other; for the important essays and	much they shall pay. To such we reply that the cost to us is about $2.50 per thousand, and we	Investments in Real Estate in Chicage and vicinity, other articles they contain are of permanent	shall be pleased to furnish them at this price per	if judiciously made, are the best and safest modes of employing capital. The old
DICES	ing twenty years hence as to-day. No more valuable present could be made to a friend struggling out of Orthodoxy than one of	thousand, or 30 cents per hundred, to all who will circulate them. But all additional donations will	Real Estate and Loan Agency
RICA.	Address THE INDEX, 1 Tremont Place, Boston.	be gratefully received for the purpose of circu- sting them gratuitously throughout the country.	ERNST PRUSSING, 143 RANDOLPH STREET
	WABBEN'S	To many of the subscribers of THE INDEX and others whose names have been furnished us	Chicago (Established 1853), Guarantees perfect title and ample security
h Steel Por- tra, $2.	TRUE CIVILIZATION.	as probable friends of the movement, copies of the Tract, together with Petitions asking the re-	in all its Real Estate Loans. Firstclass securities always on hand. In- terest and principal collected without charge.
torical mar-	Price 50 cents.	peal of the Exemption Laws, have been sent,	Real Estate Investments made on commission or on shares; taxes paid, &c. Orders of capitalists and real estate own-
rk on which his death. and of great	FRACTICAL DETAILS,	With the Hope	REASONS FOR USING THE
in the his- of passages	showing the workings of the COST PRINCIPLE.	that such friends will try to secure as many sig-	· · · · · · · · · · · · · · · · · · ·
perity of our phers, poets,	Price 25 cents, For sale by	natures to the petition as possible in their locality We respectfully ask these who are unable to at-	EUREKA SPOOL SILK.
ing sketches.		tend to the matter themselves to place the peti- tions in the hands of those who will.	It is full longth. It is full size. It is smooth and clastic, and is equally
INDEX,	25 Bromfield St., Boston.	Lot us	adapted to hand or machine use.
ce, Boston.	BUST OF THEODORE PARKER,	BOLL UP THE LIST:	Many kinds of spool slik are a perfect fraud, being not only shorter in length, but
TERARY	SIDNEY H. MORSE.	Let our united volces be heard   And let it be	a much finer size than they are represented to be, and of so poor a quality as to be unfit
E S	Dignity, reverence, sweetness, vigor, equi-	done NOW! ' We would say, also that we feel deeply the	for use. The ladies will always find the Eu- reka Silk exactly as represented. Every spool is warranted, and the manufacturer's
100	polse, breathe through the clay; the artist has so filled his own heart with appreciation of that noble life that he has been able cur-	need of	name indelibiy branded on every spool. Call for it.
ISS,	ningly to mould it into those delicate lines	Other Organizations	DITSON & CO.'S
RES.	ing fibre. We are tempted to exclaim, as we stand beside it, as the old artist did to his perfected work, "Speak then!"-Hannah E. Stevenson.	in this State, to cooperate with us in securing	Home Musical Library.
	All the characteristics of my husband are in the bust,—his greatness, his goodness, his tenderness, his love. You cannot give life to	annality and instice by presiden the Imagine to	Price of each Book in Boards, $3.50; Cloth, $3; Full Gilt, $4.
	clay or marble; but you can represent it, and this Mr. Morse has doneLydia D. Parker to Hannah E. Stewner.	those who are inclined to	MUSICAL TREASURE, Vocal.
	The eyes, though but of clay, are gleaning with possible indignation, with possible tears the lips are set firm with the resolution of him who, like Paul, could "fight a good fight" as well as "give a reason."—Samuel Longfel- tear	Form a Liberal League,	WREATH OF GEMS. Vocal. GEMS OF SACRED SONG. Vocal. GEMS OF GERMAN SONG. Vocal.
CTURES.	him who, like Paul, could "fight a good fight" as well as "give a reason."-Samuel Longlei-	we are ready to render such assistance as lies in	GEMS OF SCOTTISH SONG. Vocal. OPERATIC FEARLS. Vocal.
	low. The first time I have seen Theodore Parker since he died.—Wm. Sparrell.	AND NAMES	SHOWER OF PEARLS. Vocal Duets, ORGAN AT HOME. Beed Organ Music, In-
Touchstone.	The best representation of Mr. Parker ever executed in clayRoston Dally Globs.	TIDEDATCI	strumental. GEMS OF STRAUSS. Instrumental.
ur.	The face is strong and noble as it should be. The likeness is good Boston Daily Advertiser. Nathing angears for beauty along or failed		HOME CIRCLE, VOL. I. Instrumental. HOME CIRCLE, VOL. II. Instrumental. PIANIST'S ALBUM. Instrumental.
	or to show the vanity of the artist. All is forgotten in the man-the true, real, Vankee man, Theodore ParkerL. S. H. in the Golden	If all will unite and work, the results sought can be accomplished	PIANOFORTE GEMS, Instrumental
	Aye.	Addibbe	Large, splendid books of bound music, two hundred to two hundred and fifty pages, full
4	Copies of this Bust, finely finished n plas- ter, $10 each. Boxing for transportation, $1 extra. Freight or expressage paid by party	ROSTON LIRERAL LEACHE	proportion of all the good sheet music ever
haracters.	sending order. Weight of box about fifty pounds. Orders may be sent to	the second se	Sold by all dealers. Either book sent post- paid for retail price.
WEISS, St., Boston.	8. H. MORSE, Boom 13, 25 Bromfield St., Boston, Mass.	Per order of the EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE.	OLIVER DITSON & CO., BOSTON.
			arry a press

NONPAREIL Farm Fee Drug, and Hand-grinding MI Bizes. Also Cotton-Seed Hullers of pamphlota free. Address J. SEDGEBEER, Painesy

288

SAVE FIFTY DOL

PHICE, $30 below | any ou VALUE, $30 above | class Se SAVED, 650 by buying the F

Beery machine warrantee

Special terms to clubs and de

Send for circulars to the

Florence S. M. Co., Florence, or 775 Washington Street, Bosto

CHAPTH

FROM The Bible of the LIGT DIVIS OF LOG 1 FORTERS ORAFTERS. Belected from Hindu Vedas, Bu forcius, Egyptian Divise Pyman ter, Talmuda, Bible, Fisio, Fytha cus Aurellus, Epicterias, Al Kor Scandinavian Eddas, Renan, Ta ten, Peon, Adam Clarke, Mary J W. Newman, Tyndall, Max Mi Hicks, Channing, Garrison, R. C. cretis Mott, Higginson, T. Starr R. nell, Parker, Davis, Emma Hardl son, Denton, Tutile, Abbot, Fr dothers.

Gospels and Inspirations for Centuries and People

"Slowly the Bible of the race is Each age, each kindred, adds a Edited and Compiled t

GILES B. STEBB

Four hundred pages; bound in $1.50. No Extra Charge for THI No.1 Tremont PL

CHARLES SUM GREAT WOR

PROPHETIC VI

CONCERNING AMEL

By CHARLES SURNER

Fine Edition, Tinted Paper, with trait, Crown 8vo., Cloth ex

Aside from its literary and his Its, this volume has a special in the fact that it was the last wo Mr. Summer was engaged before "PROPHETIC VOICES" will be for value to all who take an interest tory of our country, so full is it in which the unexampled prosp land has been forefold by philosop statesmen, and orators, of whom ed author has also given interest

Sent, post-paid, on receipt of Address THE

No. 1 Tremont Pla RADICAL AND LI

LECTURE BY JOHN WE

RADICAL LECTU

The Idea of Hereafter. An Act of Faith. Intelligence in Religion. Religion and Science. Heart in Religion.

SHARSPEARIAN LEG FIRST SERIES.

- 1. Cause of Laughter.

- Cause of Languer.
   Irony and Humor.
   Dogberry, Malvolio, Bottom,
   Ajax in Trollus and Cressid
- ter in Macbeth: The Fool in Les
  5. Faistaff.
  6. Hamlet,
- SECOND SERIES.
- 1. The Women of Shakspeare.

- 6. Contrast in Shakspeare's Cl
- Address JOHN
  - 32 E. Brookline

THE INDEX -- JUNE 11, 1874.

THE NEW FLORE!

Three Dollars a Year.

LIBERTY AND LIGHT.

Index.

Single Copies Seven Cents.

VOLUME 5.

BOSTON, MASS., THURSDAY, JUNE 18, 1874.

WHOLE NO. 234.

ORGANIZE!

THE DEMANDS OF LIBERALISM.

1. We demand that churches and other coolesiastical property shall no longer be example from just taxation. 2. We demand that the employment of chaptains in Con-gress, in State Legislatures, in the navy and militis, and in prisons, systimus, and all other institutions supported by public money, shall be discontinued. 3. We demand that all while a We demand that all public appropriations for educa-ional and charitable institutions of a sectarian character hall case.

100AL BIG CLEATED & LARGE VALUE AND ALL SUBJECT OF THE SUBJECT OF THE ADDRESS OF THE ADDRESS

1. We demand that all laws directly or indirectly enforc-ing the observance of Sunday as the Sabbath shall be re-nealed.

a to contract the second sec

A FORM OF LOCAL ORGANIZATION.

Whereas, it is our profound conviction that the safety of republican institutions is imperilled, the advance of civili-nation impeded, and the most sacred rights of man in-ringed, by the least interference of the State in matters of religion; and

Finged, by the black interfactor to the set of the set

ABTICLES OF AGBREMENT. Ast. 1.-The name of this Association shall be THE LIBsountry in scouring the needed reforms. Any, 3.-The means employed in working for these objects shall be regular local meetings, free discussions, loctures, addresses, convections, the platform and the press in gen-eral, and all such other means as are pescesable, orderly, and right.

Asr. 4.—Such measures shall be adopted for raising funds for the League as shall be prescribed in the By-Laws by a two-thirds yots of the members.

Ant. 5. Any person may become a member of the League y subscribing his or her name to these Articles of Agreement. Arr. 6.-The Officers of the League shall be a President, a Vice President, a Secretary, a Tressurer, and an Excou-iers Committee of three members; and their duties shall be those commonly pertaining to these offices. The President and Secretary shall be accedied oblegates to the National Convention of Liberal Leagues when called together.

Ast. 7.-These Articles of Agreement may be amended by a knee-fourthe woke of the members present at any reg-ular meeting, provided due notices of the proposed amend-ments thal have been sent to every member at least two weeks perfous to such meeting.

So far as I am concerned, the above is the platform of Bo far as I am concerned, the above is the platform of Tam inner. I believe in it without reserve; I believe that it will yet be accepted universally by the American people, as the only platform consistent with religious ilberty. A liberal League ought to be formed to carry out its princi-ples wherever half a dozen carnest and resolute Liberals can be got together. Being convinced that the movement is more compliance with these inter "Demands" must can us got together. Being convinced that the movement to secure compliance with these just "Demands" must surely, even if slowly, spread, I hope to make THE INDEX a means of furthering it; and I ask the assistance and active co-operation of every man and every woman who be-lieves in it. Multiply Liberal Leagues everywhere, and re-port promptly the names of their Presidents and Secre-taries. Intolerance and bigotry will tremble in proportion taries. Intolerance and bigotry will tremble in proportion as that list grows. If freedom, justice, and reason are right, let their organized voice be heard like the sound of many waters. FRANCIS E. ABBOT, Editor. Boston, Sept. 1, 1873.

For List of Liberal Leagues, see next page. RELIGIOUS FREEDOM AMENDMENT: PROPOSED AS A SUBSTITUTE FOR THE FIRST AMENDMENT TO THE UNITED STATES CON-STITUTION.

ABTICLE 1.

AFTICLE 1. Section 1.—Congress shall make no isw respecting an es-tablishment of religion, or favoring any particular form of religion, or yrohibiting the free exercise thereof; or abridg-ing tha freedom of speech or of the press, or the right of the people peaceably to assemble and to petition the Gov-erament for a redress of grifevances. Szortov 2.—No State shall make any law respecting an establishment of religion, or favoring any particular form of religion, or prohibiting the free exercise thereof; or abridging the freedom of speech or of the press, or the right of the people peaceably to assemble and to petition the Government for a redress of grievances. No religious a qualification to any office or public trust, in any State; and no perior shall ever in any State be deprived of any of the is or her rights, privilages, or capacities, or disqualified for the performance of any public or private duty, or ren-dered incompetent to give evidence in any court of law or populy. Consequence of any public or so rise the subject of religion. — Sectors 3.—Congress shall have power to enforce the pro-risions of the second section of this Article by appropri-ties the subject of religion.

NOTES AND COMMENTS. BY A. W. B.

MRS. AGASSIZ is soon to give the world a biography of her great, lamented, deceased husband.

THE CITY of London, England, has a population of 4,025,800 souls. It also has 1800 churches, and 4500 drinking saloons.

THERE has been some talk about Professor Huxley succeeding Professor Agaseiz, at Harvard. We fear this suggestion is too good to ultimately prove true.

PROFESSOR TYNDALL has demonstrated, by recent experiments, that water in a vaporous form mingled with air is the real enemy to the transmission of sound; and this may exist on days of surprising clearness.

THE INTERESTING ESSAY which appeared in THE IN-DEX of June 4, entitled "Causes of the Increase of Crime," by Mr. Talbot of Portland, Maine, was read to the Second Radical Club at its last meeting but one of the son, at the house of Rev. John T. Sargent.

IT IS ESTIMATED that the amount of indebtedness owed by the Nation, by States, municipalities, corporations, and individuals of the country is about eight billions. The amount of gold in the United States, at the present time, is said to be not over one hundred and fifty millions.

MR. SEDLEY TAYLOR, of the University of Cambridge, England, has recently given a lecture on Galileo before the Royal Institution in London; and he says that the story about that gentleman's saying, under certain sup-posed historical circumstances, "The world does move," is a myth! We should just like to know if it is a fact or not, that anybody ever said anything ?

THE LONDON Speciator tells us that "ants are very fond of the honey-dew which is formed by the Aphide and have been seen to tap the Aphides with their antennze, as if to induce them to emit some of the sweet secretion." It is an art worth any one's learning of the ants, to be able to tap those with whom they come in contact, and draw out the "sweetness and light" which every real character contains.

PERHAPS no passage in Mr. Curtis' Music-Hall oration was finer, or more heartily applauded by the andience, than the following: "The sure foundations of the State are faid in knowledge, not in ignorance; and every sneer at education, at culture, at book-learning, which is the recorded wisdom of the experience of mankind, is the demagogue's sneer at intelligent liberty, inviting national degeneracy and ruin."

THE Free Religious Society of Milford, Pennsylvania, is without a minister, or lecturer, at the present time; and it wishes to obtain one. Its officers inform us that the Society would like to open a correspondence with some man of ability, who desires a situation as lecturer where free thought and free speech can obtain a reason-able support. Mr. Cyrus Barlow, New Milford, Pennsylvania, can be addressed for further information.

THE Christian Union speaks well of Mr. Conway's Eacred Anthology. But it says: "For ourselves we are bound to say frankly that a reading of it enforces upon us one conclusion which, probably, Mr. Conway would not be very anxious to maintain; to wit, that placed in close contact and comparison with the choicest sentences taken from all the sthnical Scriptures, the moral dignity, the concentrated intellectual power, and the literary merit of the book which we are still inclined to call the Bible appear to us to be matchless."

THE METHODIST clergy of New York City have regular "Monday Meetings" for talk and discussion; and some times the truth meets with them. At a recent session, Rev. Professor Blyden, of Liberia, pronounced a sulogy upon Mohammedan morals. He thought that, in many respects, they were superior to the "Christian" article. Liquor, he said, was sometimes drunk in Liberis; but never among the Mohammedans. It was in fact, he af-firmed, the Mohammedan religion that thus far had protected central and pagan Africa from the introduction of "Christian" rum!

THE RADICAL CLUB, of Philadelphia, is a most vigorons and enterprising organization. It does not confine itself to speculations about the infinite, but grapples with finite and sublunary affairs; and does it, too, in a very direct, forcible, and sensible manner. At the last meeting for the season, Wednesday, June 10, it discussed "Dress Reform," and the President's late financial "Memorandum." Mrs. Lucretia Mott was present, and took part in the former discussion; while the Chairman, Mr. E. M. Davis, who has his own thoughtful views on finance, reviewed and criticised those of the President on the same subject. The Club then adjourned till next September the 16th.

IT APPEARS that Professor Swing is not the only new heretic in Chicago. A Roman Catholic priest shares his blushing honors with him. Father Terry is his name; and he has recently terrified his church by saying that Genesis is all a fiction, or rather a grand epic, and the stories of "creation" and man's "fall" are poems; that science has overturned the dogmas of the church! In a few days after Father Terry preached this eccentric sermon, or gave this iconoclastic lecture, his bishop-Bishop Foley-dropped him a laconic but significant little note, telling him that his "services" in that diocese were no longer needed. And so Father Terry is at large! We give him our congratulations on his emancipation.

GEOEGE WILLIAM CURTIS' eulogy on Charles Summer, at Munic Hall, last week Tuesday, was characterized by all the oratorical grace, scholarly style, and fervent elo-quence for which he is so well and widely known. If it was not altogether so masterly a performance as that of Senator Schurz-as we are free to say we do not think it was-it should be remembered that Mr. Curtis labored under some disadvantage in comparison with Mr. Schurz' relation to the same subject, his oration coming after that of the latter gentleman, who had so thoroughly, vividly, and adequately treated the life and character of Mr. Sum ner. But it was wall to have both of these grand orations on our great Senator, inasmuch as they came from men who occupied quite different political relations to the one whose portrait they both so faithfully and finely drew.

JAMES FREEMAN CLARKE has an article in the Independent, of June 11, on "Christianity as Name and Thing." Much of it is devoted to comments on the dision in the late convention of the Free Religious Association between Messrs. Abbot, Calthrop, and Higginson, on the Christian, anti-Christian, and extra-Christian positions. Of Mr. Abbot Dr. Clarke says: "I admired Mr. Abbot's evident honesty and sincerity. I felt, while he spoke, that he was himself one of the pure and sweet spoke, that he was himself due of the part probably on products of Christianity. I thought that probably on the last day the great Master of us all would say: Well done, good and faithful servant? and he would be astonished at finding that he had been a good Christian all the time, without knowing it. Not a word dropped from the time, without knowing it. Not a word dropped from his lips, which had any touch of bittarness, of egotism, of wilfolness in it." It is astoniahing how ready Christians are to claim all goodness, sweetness, and purity of life as the result of Christian teaching and influence! But all this seems to us human rather than Christian. A Mo-hummedan might as well claim it as a Christian. But it belongs to neither; it simply belongs to humanity and to God.

Marson by Google

290

ST. LOUIS, MO.-M. A. McCord, President; P. A. Lofgreen, L. La Grille, Secretaries.
BOSTON, MASS.-F. E. Abbot, President; J. P. Titcomb, G. A. Bacon, Secretaries.
JEFFERSON, OHIO.-W. H. Crowell, President; A. Giddings, Secretary.
San JOSE, CAL.-A. J. Spencer, President; J. L. Hatch, Benrelary. ToLEDO, IOWA .-- J. Reedy, President; E. S. Beckley, Secre-VINELAND, N. J.- John Gage, Fresident; Sue M. Clute, Becretary. JUNCTIONVILLE, NEH.-J. W. Eastman, President; B. L. Easley, Secretary. OLATHE, KAN.-S. B. S. Wilson, President; H. A. Griffin, Secretary. Martis, R.A., S. B. S. Wilson Freshent, H. & Ginstein, Beerstary, Mich. - W. B. Hill, President; A. T. Garretson, Secretary.
 BERENSVILLE, MICH. - A. G. Eastman, President; W. R. Knowles, Secretary.
 OSUBOLA, MO.-R. F. Thompson, President; M. Boderick, Secretary. Secretary. BATH, ME.-F. G. Barker, President; M. Roderick, BRELIN, ME.-F. G. Barker, President; C. Rhodes, Secretary, Bridgman. Bridgman, M.S.-President, J. D. Walters; Secretary, E. M. Washinorow, D.C.-Conternational Statements of Conternational S Bridgman. 7AMBINGTON, D.C. – George M. Wood, President; J. E. Crawford, Secretary. UBURN, OHIO. – John Fish, President; G. W. Barnes, Treas-

MINNEAPOLIS, MINN .- President, J. B. Bassott; Secretary, Anton Grethen. Naw Youx, N.Y.-J. B. Brown, President; D. M. Bennett, Secretary. ST. Joszru, Mo.-P. V. Wise, President; T. H. Kennedy, ST. JOSTH, MO.-F. V. WISS, Freedom, T. H. Kehnedy, Secretary.

 EAU CLAIME, WIS.-President, S. J. Dickson; Secretary, W. Kennedy, BALBEO, IND.-President, T. Gray; Secretary, W. Allen.
 New OBLEANS, LA.-President, E. Vorster; Secretary, J. E. Wallace.
 BAY CITY, MICH.-President, S. M. Green; Secretary, S. M. Johnson

Johnson. CLEARFIELD, PA.-S. Widemire, President; H. Hoover, Secretary.

[For THE INDEX.] Herbert Spencer

AS & MATHEMATICIAN, & METAPHYSICIAN, AND & DISPUTANT ON BELIGION.

BY PROFESSOR F. W. NEWMAN.

BY PROFESSOR F. W. NEWMAN. Although our editor, who takes mental science as his special sphere, has written an elaborate paper concerning Herbert Spencer's metaphysics, I do not think this supersedes other argument on the same topic. Hence I am Induced to offer to him a paper which has long been written, but has lain by, with-out seeing the light. The name of Herbert Spencer, as a writer on phys-ics, has attained respect and admiration in Europe and America. But physics, metaphysics, and relig-ion differ greatly in their methods. Mr. Spencer writes as confidently on logic, and metaphysics, and history, and mathematics, and the logic of religion, as on physics. If we are to concede that ability in physics makes a man arbiter in religion, we may as well give up religion as a lost affair; for it is certain that no religion worth having can be constructed out of mere physics. Personally, I esteem Mr. Spencer, as well as admire his talents; but the tone which he assumes on religion forces one into opposition. It is the more to be regretted; for if he had cut off the First Part of his First Principles I believe that no one would have missed it. In the "Fragments of Logic," published in my Miscellanies, I have adverted to Mr. Spencer's dog-mutrue, because one cannot "conceive" it thing as-serted. Mr. J. Stuart Mill had a controversy with in on this point, and could not convince him. Mr. Spencer does not seem to know what I have written against his dogma (Miscellanies, p. 20), and it is not predient to repeat it here to the letter. But I shall need to touch on this, when the topic comes up. I around the print.

need to touch on this, when the topic comes up. am commenting on the First Part of his First Prin specient to repeat it here to the letter. But I shall need to touch on this, when the topic comes up. I an commenting on the First Part of his First Parta. The second sec of both knowledge and Ignorance—the contrast of the clear and the dim—is as needful to religion as to painting. Of course, every sound mind is aware that it knows some things with a certainty sufficient for practical life, concerning many other things has an opinion weaker or stronger, and is totally ignorant concerning an infinitude beyond. But, except by a play of words, science cannot be identified with the knowledge which is justly regarded as practically certain. By universal agreement, science means a been tested and confirmed by methods appropriate to the subject. Each science generates its own logic. To call the antithesis to this nescience is a mon-atrons fallacy and falsity. Rather, popular knowl-edge is the antithesis. To allot to religion nescience as its sphere might seem merely a bitter sarcasm; but Mr. Spencer evidently supposes that he has got upon a philosophic track, and does not mean to be insolent. insolent insolent. I wish here in passing to enter my protest against the jargon of using think as an active verb, in the monstrous verbals thinkable, unthinkable. I believe they are in fact mere slavish translations from Ger-man. Conceivable, imaginable, are classical, intelli-gible English. "Thinkable" is an unintelligible epi-thet, and a disgrace to our recent literature. To Thish here its passing to enter any procession.

The jargo of naing think as an active verb, in the monstrous verbals thinkable, unthinkable. I believe they are in fact mere slavish translations from German. Conceivable, imaginable, are classical, intelligible English. "Thinkable" is an unitelligible epidet, and a diagrace to our recent literature. To think a man, to think a word, to think a sentence, are alike nonsense. Of course we may have a cognate accusative after a neuter verb, as, to think a the nonsense. Of course we may have a cognate accusative only. The verse three verbally intelligible suppositions may be made" (he certainly means only three); "that it is self-existent; or that it is created by an external agency." In passing, I say that the third is not to me intelligible, but self-contradictory; for to the universe nothing is external. If Mr. Spencer does not exclude from the universe the God of the pantheist, there is no reason to exclude from it the God of the theist. The early Hebrew theists undoubtedly regarded God to be internal to his own universe and to all his creatures. The spirit of God was in the human intellect and in "the hinds which calved." He identifies his first hypothesis with athelism (p. Sl), and declares it to be "unthinkable," because (he says) it is similarly incapable of being represented in thought" (whatever that means). Next (in p. S3), we find, "There remains to be examined the commonly received or theistic hypothesis—creation by external agency." If we say the world was made by God, be will retort upon us, "How came there to be an external agency." If we say the vorld was made by God, be will retor upon us, "How came there to be an external agency." If we are the says in a conception of a past extinence is rigorously inconceivable. . . Thus these three different suppositions respecting the origin of the marker to be an external agency." If we say the world was made by God, be will retor upon us, "How came there to be an external agency." If we say the world wa cannot conceive How it was; which is simply ridica-loas. Moreover, if his three hypotheses are logically ex-haustive, to disprove two out of the three establishes the third. Either one of his refutations is false, or the three do not exhaust the possibilities of the case. If none of the three have any meaning, it is nonsense to say that they are the only admissible hypotheses. But to my mind he has offered no refutation of any of the three. To believe that an eternity is past is not peculiar to atheism. Again, what does he mean by "represent in thought"? Does he mean "set be-fore the mind a pictorial representation"? If "rep-resent an assertion," he takes a great liberty with other men's intellects, in simply telling us all round that we do not understand what we say, and regard-ing his reproof as equivalent to proof. While he thinks he has refuted athefam, he estab-nations. He argues: Self-existence implies past eter-nity; past eternity is inconceivable; what is incon-ceivable is vicious and inadmissible; therefore a self-existent God Is inadmissible. But no theist now recognizes any God but one self-existent. Yet Mr. Spencer fancies he has refuted atheism as well as theism! If his arguments have any weight, he estab-

thelemini If this arguments have any weight, he establishes what the biss must regard as atheim.
This object here seems to be to conjute the human, mind (Baely as incapable of "conceiving" these vast topics. But in this way it is not religion only that the reduces to nescience, but science too. Self, space, time, motion are all involved in metaphysical timpurate of the human thought; but has no more to do with religion than with astronomy, or geology, or chemistry. He himself tells us (p. 48) that "time and space are unthinkable." If so, what can it comments in mage of unbounded space." But I do not used to the assertion is, that they are minited, have no outline, and therefore "we can have no metal image of 1. I have no metal image of electricity, or of gravitation, or of oxygen, or of hydrogen; yet these works enter actione, and alt form sentences assuredly intelligible enough for practice. Mr. Spencer talls us (p. 25) that it is impossible to "conceive" it is wholly needless. Certainly we can reason accurately concerning a huge sphere as casily as concerning a little one; and unless we understood clearly what we were asying, we could not reason with certainty. Hence he does but heap up refraction of his dogma that "inability to conceive" it is impossible to assert it is is impossible to assert any whether, the statement on the same throw any the statement on the sentence of an astronomic treatise. Would not the sentence of an astronomic treatise. Would not electron with a sphere in the statement on the sentence of an astronomic treatise. Would not electron with a sphere state complicated digguines, it is sphere in the sentence of the sentence. How any the state is the sentence of an astronomic treatise. Would not electron in the sentence of an astronomic treatise. Would not electron in the sentence of an astronomic treatise and therefore asame by "electricity in conceiving of a state or one set electricity in the set end or intervers. Those who annot induce the process without the set is not induce sometimes is much easier. I can understand without (what he calls) conception. Mr. Spencer rather arrogantly (p. 51) contradicts all our greatest mathematicians, who with one voice speak of discontinuous velocity; but he merely shows his own false notions on elementary mathematical thought. Imagine a point to describe a line  $A \ F B$ with varying velocity; and that it approaches P from the side A with a velocity estimated as 2 (as two inches in a second); but that in starting from P to-wards B it receives a sudden increase as by impact, making the velocity suddenly 4 (say four inches in a second); then mathematicians call the velocity at P discontinuous, because of its sudden finite increase. Or again, it may be suddenly diminished from 4 to 2 yr some obstacle, as by collidous What says Mr. Spencer to this? "The body must then be moving with relacities and 2 at the same instant: relacion to the same instant relation of the same instant relation of the same instant relation to the same instant of the same instant same instant of the same instant same in us to make religion a problem of physics. He will have us assail the problem from the most arduous of walking in at the open gate. Every religion, ac-oreas, If ma, "is an spriori theory of the uni-abled him "to conceive how mait they have add not of outling," which, he ass, is "in real mystery" (p. 34); and asks us (p. 55), "How came there to be an External Agency T" (which is his gratuitous phrase for a God.) He treats believers in God as similar to orealize the treats believers in God as similar to orealize the treats believers in God as similar to orealize the treats believers in the station of the treat of religion, on the contrary, accuse religious persons deve undobtedly nanhiter that the King of Dahomey has massacred many of his subjects, I suppose Mr. Spencer will not diabeling of the subjects, I suppose Mr. Spencer will not diabeling? How tail is he? Wy did he massacre, stc. F and so on. Because I claim ine, and in all men, and in all the one proves and acts in thereby bound to explain to Mr. Spencer the origin of matter, or any other natural mystery, cosmogony, generation, or evolution. So far as my theim is con-cerred, nothing hinders my replying that, for aught I know, matter is coval with God; but concerning the remote past it is obviously as impossible to know anything, as concerning the remotest depths of hear-wers the fundamental question of religion. He will have us stat from a nabet correling in the your words." Just as reasonably he might claim that we will start from a nabet correling the two will start from a nabet claitance the spectra or all wores the fundamental question of the spect of all wores of the spin of the space to arplain what is now going on there, instead of beginning physics from an infinite distance the space to arplain what is now going on there, instead of beginning physics from an infinite distance the space to arplain what is now going on there, instead of beginning the words. The same spin of the space to arplain and bellef of apirtual power Algher than man, ma

Tanana, Google

<text><text><text>

CHRISTIANITY AS NAME AND THING.

BY JAMES FREEMAN CLARKE, D.D.

<text><text><text><text><text><text>

manna Google

292 THEE

<text><text><text><text><text>

tian, but as one standing outside of Christlanity. But he proved, very conclusively, as against Mr. Ab-bot, that it would be a great loss to mankind if Chris-tianity should perish, and that nothing could supply its place. The needs of the beart and soul, which re-ligion meets, could never be supplied by science. The North American Review and the New York Nation could hardly, said he, take the place of the Christian Church. In truth, liberty of opinion is the ability of Output

<text><text>

THE NAME AND THE THING.

What is Christianity? is the question which Dr. J. F. Clarke saks once more in another column. What sort of a man may properly be called a Christian? So far as we can make out from Dr. Clarke's en so iar as we can make out from Dr. Clarke's ex-tremely figurative and analogical answer, Cbristiani-ty is very like a lordly oak, and it is very like civiliza-tion, and, for aught we know, it may be like a whale or a weasel. What we want to know is not what it is like, but what it is.

But we must not seem to do our able correspondent injustice. He tells us that, "as we call science or knowledge the source and essence of civilization, so Injustice. He tells us that, "as we call science or knowledge the source and essence of civilization, so we may call love the source and essence of Christian-ity." And again: "It is the principle of love which, flowing from the life of Jesus, has made all things new in the world." This seems to come a little nearer to the point, for we would give more for two lines of definition than for a page of simile. We think we catch Dr. Clarke's idea, then, when we de-fine the Christian as the man who controls his life by love-by love to such beings as he knows anything about and believes in,-love to parots and goats if he be a Crusce and they are his companions; love to men if he happens to be thrown among them; love to some God if he happens to know of or believe in any God. And Christianity, as we understand him, is the abstract of this concrete, is the living under the law of love, if it be not rather (for we are not sure) the Golden Ruis itself reduced to the single word "Love." In accordance with this, Dr. Clarke calls Mr. Abbot "a good Christian without knowing it," and tells us that "all men regard Mr. Potter," anoth-er man who protests that he is no Christian, "as a worthy Christian minister in his faith, spirit, and iffe," worthy Christlan minister in his faith, spirit, and life," But according to this definition what has Christ to do with Christlanity? He was an excellent Chris-tian, doubtless, but certainly not the inventor of love. His Golden Rule he quoted from Moses. He gave an impetus to the principle of love and was a shining ex-ample of it, but was not its "source." Are Chris-tianity and love identical? We cannot think so. When Messrs. Abbot and Potter tell us they are no Christians, they seem to us to be right; for Christianity is as truly a doctrine as a life. We do not mean by this to say that the doc-trine is as important as the life, nor that the doctrine does not produce the life. We prefer Penelope to Queen Catharine, Socrates to Pope John XII. We believe that Abraham and David aud Isaiah were no Christians, but were much better than many Chris-tians, and true children of God. We rejoice to believe that many a pagan, who could not know of Christ nor believe in him, has seen the invisible things of God, and lived a plous life. We rejoice to hope that others who have heard of Christ, but who, through some error of teaching or some misfortune of their mental structure, could not believe in him, or perhaps even in God, have yet lived according to the light they had, and have pleased God. Such men (we will not refuse to take Dr. Clarke's word for it) may be Mr. Potter and Mr. Abbot, although when the latter shall show more candor and charitableness toward Christian missions he will exhibit more signs of it.

toward Christian missions he will exhibit more signs of it. Christianity has a historical sense. It means that system of faith and morals which Christ taught, or, to be more severely accurate, which Christ taught, or, to be more severely accurate, which Christendom has an all its ages and sects agreed in believing that Christ taught. It includes a claim of mastership or lordship on his part, and of salvation through his death. In the narrower and stricter sense, that man is a Christian who accepts Christ's theology and eth-ics, as that man is a Platonlet who accepts Plato's ethics and philosophy. In its fuller and better sense, that man is a Christian who not only accepts these notions, but governs himself by the ethicsi principles laid down in Christ's teachings, and exemplified in his life. But, in historical fact, right living atme be-fore Christianity. To identify right living with Christianity is a corterminous definition is to abuse language. The attempt to folts this new meaning on Christianity is a very modern one, made by a few men who like the term, and are enamored of the moral teachings embodied in the system, but who re-ject the atonement of Christ and discipleship to him as Master, which are what makes Christianity some-thing different from the lofty morality of Socrates or of Buddha. of Buddha.

Although we must utterly dissent from the defini-tions of Christianity made by Mr. Abbot and Mr. Potter, we cannot but believe that in rejecting the Scripture teachings in reference to Christ they have acted honeatly in giving up a name so honored. In agreeing with them, as against Dr. Clarke, that they are not Christians, we mean no opprobrium, but only to stand fast by history and etymology. We are not denying that they may be as good men as Dr. Clarke says they are—better than many Christians; nor that God may see more to approve in them than in many who claim the name which they reject; but they are as much outside of Christianity as any godly Pagan or Mohammedan, and it is a mistaken charity to try to keep them where they know they do not belong.— Independent, June 11.

COMPULSORY EDUCATION IN NEW YORK STATE.

FOURTEEN WEEKS' INSTRUCTION IN EACH TRAB-EMPLOYMENT OF CHILDREN REGULATED-VIOLA-TIONS PUNISHABLE BY FINES-TEXT-BOOKS FREE TO POOR CHILDREN-THE LAW TO TAKE EFFECT JANUARY 1, 1875.

ALBANY, May 14.—The following is the text of the Compulsory Education Act, approved by the Governor on Tuesday last, which will be read with interest by the parents of children and the friends of duration education.

An act to secure to children the benefits of elementary education ;-

MUST BE INSTRUCTED.

MUST BE INSTRUCTED. SEC. 1. All parents and those who have the care of children shall instruct them or cause them to be in-structed in spelling, reading, writing, English gram-mar, geography, and arithmetic; and every parent, guardian, or other person having control and charge of any child, between the ages of eight and fourteen years, shall cause such child to attend some public or private day school, at least fourteen weeks in each year, eight weeks of which altendance shall be consecu-tive, or to be instructed regularly at home at least fourteen weeks in each year in spelling, reading, writing, English grammar, geography, and arithme-tic, unless the physical or mental condition of the child is such as to render such attendance or instruc-tion inexpedient or impracticable. tion inexpedient or impracticable.

BELATIVE TO EMPLOYMENT OF CHILDREN.

BELATIVE TO EMPLOYMENT OF CHILDREN. BEC. 2. No child under the age of fourteen years shall be employed by any person to labor in any busi-ness whatever during the school hours of any school-day of the school term of the public school in the school district or the city where such child is, unless such child shall have attended some public or private day-school, where instruction was given by a teacher gualified to instruct in spelling, reading, writing, ge-ography, English grammar, and arithmetic, or shall have been regularly instructed in said branches by some person qualified to instruct in the same, at least fourteen of the fifty-two weeks next preceding any and every year in which such child shall be em-ployed, and shall at the time of such employment de-liver to the employer a certificate in writing, signed by a teacher or school truzte of a district or of a school, certifying to such attendance or instruction; by a teacher or school trustee of a district or of a school, certifying to such attendance or instruction; and any person who shall employ any child, contrary to the provisions of this section, shall, for each of-fence, forfeit and pay a penalty of $50 to the tream-urer, or chief fiscal officer of the city or supervisor of the town in which such offence shall occur, the said sum or penalty, when so paid, to be added to the public school money of the school district in which the offence occurred.

TO BE EXAMINED.

SEC. 3. It shall be the duty of the trustee or trus-tees of every school district, or public school, or union school in every town and city, in the months of September and of February of each year, to exam-

THE INDEX-JUNE 18, 1874.

Ine into the situation of the children employed in all manufacturing establishments in such achool dis-trict; and in case any town or city is not divided into school districts, it shall, for the purposes of the ex-amination provided for in this section, be divided by the school suthorities thereof into districts, and the said trustees notified of their respective districts, on or before the first day of January of each year; and the said trustees trustees shall ascertain whether all the provisions of this act are duly observed, and re-port all violations thereof to the treasurer or chief fis-cal officer of said city or supervision of said town. On mach examination, the proprietor, superintendent, or manager of said establishment shall, on demand, ex-hibit to said establishment shall, on demand, ex-hibit to said establishment, with the said certifi-cates of attendance on school or of instruction.

i ca

a hand a had

杨氏属

12213

「日本のない」

1443

でにというので

902 20

6-

THE

CHILDREN DISCHARGED FROM EMPLOYMENT.

CHILDREN DISCHARGED FROM EMPLOYMENT. SEC. 4. Every parent, guardian, or other person having control or charge of any child, between the sages of sight and fourteen years, who has been tem-portily discharged from employment in any busi-ress, in order to be afforded an opportunity to receiv-instruction or schooling, shall send such child to some public or private school, or shall cause such child to be regularly instructed as aforesaid at home, for the period for which such child may have been so discharged, to the extent of at least fourteen weeks in sil, in each year, unless the physical or mental condition of the child is such as to render such an at-tendance or instruction interpolent or impracticable. PEXALTER

PENALTIES.

PEXALTIES. SEC. 5. The trustee or trustees of any school dis-trict, or public school, or the president of any union school, or in case there is no such officer, then such officer as the board of education of said city or town may designate, is hereby authorized and empowered to see that Sections 1, 2, 3, 4, and 5 of this Act are en-forced, and to report in writing all violations thereof to the treasurer or chief fiscal officer of his city, or to the supervisor of his town. Any person who shall writing all violations thereof to the treasurer or chief fiscal officer of his city, or to the supervisor of his town. Any person who shall writen notice of such violation from out of the school officers above named, forfeit, for the first offence, the sum of $1; and after such first offence shall, for each succeeding offence in the same year, forfeit and pay to the treasurer of said city, or supervisor of said town, the sum of $6 for each and every week, not exceeding thirteen weeks in any one year, during which he, after written notice from said school officer, shall have failed to comply with any of said provisions. The said penalties to be added to the public school moneys of said school district in which the offence occurred.

TEXT-BOOKS FREE FOR CHILDREN OF POOR PARENTS.

TETT-BOOKS FREE FOR CHILDREN OF POOR PARENTS. BEC. 6. In every case arising under this Act, where the parent, guardian, or other person having the con-trol of any child, between the said ages of eight and fouriern wears, is unable to provide such child for said fouriern weaks with the text-books required to be furnished, to enable such child to attend school for said period, and shall so state in writing to the said trustee, the said trustee shall provide said text-books for said fourteen weeks, at the public school, for the use of such child, and the expense of the same shall be paid by the treasurer of said city or the supervisor of said town, on the certificate of the said trustee, specifying the items furnished for the use of such child. trustee, spe

TRUANTS.

BEC. 7. In case any person having the control of any child, between the ages of eight and fourteen years, is unable to induce said child to attend school, and shall as state in writing to said trustee, the said child shall, from and after the date of the delivery to said trustee of said statement in writing, be deemed and dealt with as an habitual truant, and said person shall be relieved of all penalties incurred for said year after said date, under Sections 1, 4, and 5 of this Act.

STREET CHILDREN TO BE CARED FOR.

after said date, under Sections 1, 4, and 5 of this Act. STREET CHILDHEN TO BE CARED FOR. Sc. 8. The board of education or public instruc-for (by whatever name it may be called in each city) what is trustees of the school districts and union who of the school districts and union the trustees of the school districts and union the called for this purpose, are hereby authorized and regulations concerning habitual truants, and the nake all needful provisions, arrangements, who may be found wandering about the streets of age, who may be found wandering about the school hours of the school day of the term of the public phole places of such city or town, during the school hours of the school day of the term of the public school of said city or town, having no lawfol occupation of the school day of the term of the public here of the school day of the term of the public phole of said city or town, having no lawfol occupation of school school day of the such as aball, in the school of said city or town, when becessary, of or business, and growing up in ignorance, and instruction and confinement, when becessary, of or business, and the good order of such city or town, when the school about the stere of the school school school of the school of the school instruction and confinement, when be consensed to the school instruction and confinement, when be consensed to be when the school day of the school district or public or union instruction and confinement, when be done is school when the school district in which said city or town, who shall is the school district in the school district or public or union is the school district or public or union is the school district or public or union is the school beas i in each city or town may be amended or revised an nually in the month of December.

JURISDICTION.

SEC 9. Justices of the peace, civil justices, and police justices shall have jurisdiction, within their respective towns and cities, of all offences, and of all actions for penalties or fines described in this act. EVENING SCHOOLS.

SEC. 10. Two weeks' attendance at a half-time or evening school, shall, for all purposes of this sct, be counted as one week at a day school.

TO TAKE EFFECT JAN. 1, 1875. SEC. 11. This act shall take effect on the 1st day of January, 1875.-Brooklyn Argus.

THE DOGMA OF PAPAL INFALLIBILITY.

[In view of the great interest felt in the struggle of the German Empire with the Romish Church, our readers will like to read the following translation of the concluding portion of Chapter IV. De Capite Ecclesia, promulgated by the famous (Ecumenical Council of 1870.-ED.]

Council of 1870.-En.] "Wherefore, we, adhering faithfully to the tradi-tion, which dates from the commencement of Chris-tianity, for the glory of God our Saviour, for the ex-altation of the Catholic religion and the salvation of Christian peoples, we teach and define, with appro-bation of the Sacred Council, as a dogma, divinely revealed: That the Roman Pontiff, when he speaks 'ex cathedra'-that is to say, when discharging the functions of pastor and doctor of all the faithful by virtue of his supreme apostolic authority,-he defines a doctrine of faith or morals to be held by the Uni-functions of pastor and doctor of all the faithful by virtue of his supreme apostolic authority,-he defines a doctrine of faith or morals to be held by the Uni-failibility which our Divine Redeemer intended His Church should be endowed with when defining any-thing concerning faith and morals; or consequently such definitions of the Roman Pontiff are of them-selves irreformable, independent of any consent of the Church. "If a no eshall presume, which may God forbid, to contradict this our definition, let him be anathe-ma." In connection with the above, the following trans-

[In connection with the above, the following trans-lation from the Berlin Volks-Zeitung, showing that the dogma of infallibility is by no means a mere abstraction without practical bearings, will also be of Interest.-ED.]

the dogma of infallibility is by no means a mere ab-straction without practical bearings, will also be of interest.—ED.] "We have received the following communication from Rome, which we publish unabbrevisted: 'Your about the question of the personal infallibility of the Pope, but none of them has defined the true point of vip, probably, because they are badly informed, and to now their caries before the proper time is come. For eighteen years the Jesuits have been pursuing a since the conviction has forced itself upon them that the temporal power of the Pope is approaching its end with irresistible rapidity. New pecuniary re-sources had to be found to supply the place of these which would be closed to the Holy Chair by such an event. Now all the possessions of the Jesuits belong to the whole Order. Nothing is the peculiar property of a special mission, monaster, stc. The General areant. Now all the power over all the pecuniary re-sources of the Jesuits, which he disposes of accord-ing to the wants of the time, and can recall and divide a different manner when, by so doing, he hopes to this is not the case with the rest of the property of the Schurch. It belongs to certain chapters, monas-tary, sillened to renounce their possessions in the advest inclined to renounce their possessions in a pro-purpose, and they never do so without reluctance and resistance. This is to be changed. All ciercal purpose, and they never do so without reluctance and resistance. This is to be changed in the pro-sole of the means of securing this end. When it is not for them to assert their claims to the aeparate en-purpose, after all, only shampers of infallibility is only the means of securing this end. When it is no idealists; they have always practical ends in the shand of a single person. The dogma of infallibility is only the means of securing this end. When it is no idealists; they have always practical ends in the shand of a single person the dostion which resonater, after all, only sham fights. The Jesuits are no ideal

THE CHURCH ALMANAC of 1874 gives the follow-ing summary of the Episcopal Church in the United States: Dioceses, 41; missionary jurisdictions, 9; bishops, 52; other clergy, 3,042; ordinations of dea-cons, 147; priests, 113; candidates for orders, 840; churches consecrated, 66; baptisms, 39,044; confirma-tions, 23,515; communicants, 200,000.

Hoetry.

"THE LIGHT WHICH LIGHTETH EVERT MAN.

WRITTEN FOR THE SPEER RELIGIOUS PERIVAL, BOSTON, MAT 29, 1874, BY SAMUEL LONGFELLOW.

O Life that maketh all things new,

- The blooming carth, the thoughts of men!

- Ine blooming carts, the thoughts of ment Our pligting fact, we wich thy daw, In gladness hither turn again. From hand to hand the greeting flows, From eye to eye the signals run, From heart to heart the bright hope glows; The lovers of the Light are one
- One in the freedom of the Truth, One in the joy of paths untrod, One in the soul's perennial youth, One in the larger thought of God. The freer step, the fuller breath,

- The wide horizon's grander view, The sense of life that knows no death,
- The Life that maketh all things new.

NEW SUBSCRIPTIONS TO INDEX STOCK.

Mrs. F. W. Christern,	New York City,	·One al	DATO,
Bichard B. Westbrook	, Sonman, Pa.			100
R. C. Spencer,	Milwaukee, Wis.	Two		200
R. W. Howes,	Boston, Mass.	One		100
Chas. W. Story,	Boston, Mass.		66	100
E. W. Meddaugh,	Detroit, Mich.	Five		800
Jacob Hoffner,	Cumminsville, O.	Obe		100
John Weiss,	Boston, Mass.		66	100
W. C. Russel,	Ithaca, N. Y.	F		100
A. W. Leggett,	Detroit, Mich.		66	100
B. F. Dyer,	Boston, Mass.	- 14	. 67	100
James Purinton,	Lynn, Mass.		H -	100
F. A. Nichola,	Lowell, Mass.	. 66	44	100
J. S. Palmer,	Portland, Mo.	. 64	44	100
Bobt, Ormiston,	Brooklyn, N.V.		44	100
Mrs. A. L. Richmond,	Lowell, Mass.		44	100
Mrs. Benj. Ireson,	Lynn, Mass.			100
J. E. Oliver,	Ithaca, N.Y.			100
E. H. Aldrich.	Providence, R.I.	44	44	100
Geo. L. Clark,	Providence, R.I.	86		100
W. M. Jackson,	Providence, R.I.	Two		200
Mrs. E. B. Chase,	Valley Falls, R.I.		44	100
L. F. Garvin,	Lonsdale, R.L.	One	44	100
James Damon.	Ipswich, Mass.	- Cha
Joseph A. Barker,	Providence, E.I.		24	100

CASH BECRIPTS.

FOR THE WEEK ENDING JUNE 12.

Chas. Parsons, $3; Hobt. Mochrie, $1:50; Thos. Tasker, $3; D. G. Crandon, $4; Wm. H. Bisbee, $3; James S. Dodgs, $4; Geo. P. Mayhew, $2; Geo. J. Adama, $1; C. Neumaz, $3; D. G. Shullock, $1:50; Jao. Blain, $11,20; M. S. Rogers, $3; Jas. Boyd, $5; J. G. Holtswarth, $6; W. Clark, $5; Jas. Bilnn, $5; J. Gist, $4; Sam'l Egalf, $3; R. McIntosh, $1; John S. Cox, $3; J. M. Hall, $1; B. B. Griswold, $1:75; Ja-seph Gitakey, $3; Herman Baumbach, $3; Jacob Romeis, $5; Joseph Knight, $3:20; Mary Sbannon, $250; Mary C. Shannon, $50; A. S. Latty, $70; Mary E. Bird, $10; G. H. Foster, $0 centa; G. H. Talbot, $2; Geo. Lewis, $3 cents; Alex. Lemacke, $6 cents.

All receipts of cash will be acknowledged as above, and no other receipts ent unless specially requested. Persons who do not see their remittances acknowledged within three weeks after sending, will please notify us.

N. B.-Please remit by post-office money-order, by regis-tered letter, or by draft on Boston or New York. Checks on interior banks are liable to discount, and the term of subscription will be proportionally shortened in the credit.

N. B .- Orders for Tracts or single numbers of THE Im-DEX which are not on hand will, if of small amount, be oth-erwise filled to the same amount without further notice.

N.B.-Postage on THE INDEX is five cents per quarter, dating from receipt of the first number, payable in ad-vance at the place of delivery.

N. B .- When writing about a former remittance, always give the date of such remittance as exactly as possible. N. E .- Please examine the ADDRESS and DATE on your INDEX mail-tag, and report at once any error in either.

RECEIVED.

- Hooks. JOSEPH TUCKREMAN ON THE ELEVATION OF THE POOL. A Selection from his Reports as Minister as Large in Bos-orts Brothers. 1874. Sta Arno BHORE. A Collection of Poems. Boston: Rob-orts Brothers. 1874. Some Women's HEARTS. By Louise Chandler Moulton, au-thor of "Bed-Time Stories." Boston: Roberts Brothers. 1874. PARA'S OWN GIRL. A North District.

- AFA's OWN GIEL. A Novel. By Marie Howland, New York: John P. Jewett. 1874.

Pamphlets and Periodicals.

- Pamphlets and Periodicals. / THE PENTATENCE In CONTENT with the Science and Morah, Sense of our Age. By a Physician. Part IV.-Dg. CAR-PENTER AT StOR COLLEGE; or, The View of Miracles Tak-en by Men of Science.-Published by Thomas Scott, Esq., No. 11, The Terrace, Farquines Bood, Upper Norwood, London, S. E. 1874. THE ARSOLUTE SUFFICIENCY OF NATURAL BELIGION as a Revelation from God, Examined in the Light of Reason and the Bible. By A. B. Bradford, Salen, Ohio; Wal-ton. 1874.

- No. 1074. NINETRIA ANNAL REPORT Of the Board of Directors of the St. Louis Public Schools, for the Year Ending August 1, 1872. St. Louis 1874. The UNITABLAN REVIEW AND RELIGIOUS MAGAZINE. JUDS, 1874. Boston I. C. Bowles, 23 Tremont Place. OLD AND NEW. JUNC, 1874. Hoston: Roberts Brothers, 143 Washington Street. THE PENN MONTHLY. June, 1874. Philadelphis: 506 Wal-put Street.
- nut Street. LADIES' OWN MAGAZINE, June, 1874. New York and Chi-

293

The Index. PUBLISHED EVERT THORSDAT

THE INDEX ASSOCIATION.

NO. 1 TREMONT PLACE, BOSTON. Toledo Office: No. 35 Monmos STREET. Julius T. Frey, Agent and Clerk.

THE INDEX accepts every result of science and sound learning, without seeking to harmonize it with the Bible. It recognizes no authority but that of reason and right. It believes in Truth, Freedom, Frogress, Equal Rights, and Brotherly Love.

Brotherly Love. N. B.-No writer in THE INDEX, editorial or otherwise, is responsible for anything published in its columns except for his or her own individual statements. Editorial contributions will in every case be distinguished by the name or initials of the writer.

BOSTON, JUNE 18, 1874.

GLIMPSES.

THE SECRETARY of the "Clearfield County Freethought Association," in Pennsylvania, writes that he is instructed by that Association to report it to us as a Liberal League. The President is Mr. Samuel Widemire, and the Secretary is Mr. Harry Hoover.

THE Occasional Observer, a very small sheet of four pages, has appeared in Lynn, Massachusetts, as we "prophesied" two or three weeks ago, in defence of the essay by Mr. Augustine Jones on Quakerism. It says that THE INDEX "misunderstands both the essay and its friends;" but as it fails to point out in what, we are none the wiser and can make no reparation.

THE LANSING (MICHIGAN) State Republican has this paragraph: "The crussding women at Pittsburg to the number of forty, and at Cincinnati to the number of forty-three, have been arrested and tried in the Police Court for violation of the, ordinance against obstructing sidewalks. There is no doubt of their technical infraction of the law, and the authoritices seem determined to enforce it. In Michigan there has been comparatively little of this style of warfare carried on, and the facts will show that greater progress has been made in checking the liquor traffic here than among the more excitable people of Southern Ohio, where the crussde began with streetprayers and hymns,—or that more of the work stays done here."

THE THIRD ANNUAL MEETING of the Stockholders of the Index Association was held at Toledo, Ohio, on Saturday, June 6. A majority of votable shares was represented, and the following gentlemen were elected Directors for the ensuing year: William J. Potter, A. E. Macomber, Frank J. Scott, E. W. Meddaugh, R. H. Ranney, G. W. Park, H. K. Oliver, Jr., A. W. Stevens, F. E. Abbot. In the evening a delightful re-union of our old friends was held at the hospitable residence of Mr. Macomber, and it was a pleasure indeed to meet them after a year's absence. Next day we delivered a lecture on "The Coming Religion" in Odeon Hall, and found the same indulgent audience with which that Hall is so pleasantly associated in our memory. Toledo is growing at a wonderful rate, two hundred new houses (so we were informed) being now in process of erection in a single ward of the city. THE INDEX has many warm friends there, and wishes them all the utmost possible measure of prosperity and happiness.

HERE IS a parody on Orthodox mysticism, entitled "The Cosmic Egg," which is as trustworthy a cosmogony as that in vogue :---

Upon the Rock yet uncreate, Amid a Chaos inchoate, An uncreated Being sato-Beneath Him Rock, Above Him Cloud, And the Cloud was Rock,

And the Bock was Cloud.

The Rock soon growing moist and warm, The Cloud began to take a Form, As though a Something would be Born-A Form chaotic, yast, and yague, Which issued in The Commic Egg.

Then the Being uncreate Upon The Egg did Incubate, And thus became the Incubator; And of The Egg did Allegate, And thus became the Allegator; And the Incubator was Potentate, But the Allegator was Potentator.

"RELIGION AND SCIENCE."

A thoughtful communication in another column makes inquiries as to the meaning of "scientific religion." Mr. Potter's very able treatment of this subject, in the first portion of his Horticultural Hall lecture (published in THE INDEX of March 26), is the best answer to some of these inquiries; but the theme is of perennial interest, and fresh statements are continually necessary.

1. Science is rightly considered by Mr. Adams to be "knowledge which is varified, proven, or capable of verification and proof by processes of the logical mind." But religion, at least as we conceive it, is something more than "a natural sentiment, an inherent feeling of wonderment, reverence, or worship," whether dependent upon or independent of knowledge (science). It must aim at the symmetrical and highest possible development of all human faculties, If it is to maintain its place as the chief interest of man. To adopt a narrower view is to shear it of its greatest dignity and importance, and make it the special culture of certain faculties rather than a universal enlargement and elevation of our whole being. If its main alm is to make us conversant with "subjects outside of and above Nature," then a naturalistic philosophy which identifies Nature with the totality of all that is real must shelve religion as the chief superstition that has survived the early barbarism of man. The dualism of natural and supernatural cannot co-exist with the modern conception of Nature as the all-inclusive unity of the universe.

2. The common distinction between "the knowable and the unknowable" rests on the contradiction that we know nothing at all of that of which we nevertheless do know that it cannot be known. It is an inherent inconsistency to talk of "the unknowable,"-as if we could in advance pronounce upon the attributes of what has never yet come within the range of our faculties. . Who can venture to say that the unknown is unknowable, when this very statement itself assumes a certain knowledge of it? It is a fallacy to account for the bare fact of human ignorance by postulating a fictitious quality of necessary incomprehensibleness in objective being. It is the business of science to learn all it can, but not to excuse its own failure to learn everything all at once by the shallow device of pretending that this, that, or the other "cannot be known." Stellar chemistry was once considered a part of "the unknowable;" let us learn wisdom by experience, and be more modest than to arrogate knowledge to ourselves in the very act of disclaiming it. True science is content to teach what it has learned, to learn as fast as it can, and to teach nothing about what it has learned nothing. But its motto must be-nil desperandum.

3. The intellect alone affirms or denies, constructs propositions, connects subject and predicate. The verb is the expression of a purely intellectual act. There is immense confusion on this subject. A man is conscious of certain emotions and sentiments; he has feelings of reverence, awe, worship; he exclaims, "God must exist !" and he jumps to the conclusion that his "heart," that is, his emotional nature, makes this affirmation. Not at all, Feeling affirms nothing: only thought affirms. The intellect may make affirmation on good or bad or even no appreciable evidence; but the mental act by which connection is made between any subject and its predicate is purely intellectual, and we deceive ourselves if we fancy that any bellef which can be stated rests on any other ground than this intellectual act. Now the scientific method simply requires that religious opinions shall be formed with as scrupulous deference to the laws of the intellect as any other opinions ; that they shall be grounded on genuine facts and constructed on logical principles. Without this conscious regulation of belief by the natural laws of thought, religion degenerates inevitably into superstition. Sentiments may be the sole data on which many a religious opinion is built; but intellect is the builder, and it is a vast mistake to think that any opinions may be true in defiance of logic. Science, when mature, must recognize all facts, including those of pure sentiment; but the conclusions it draws from them must be drawn in strictest conformity with scientific method. The moment you have stated your belief in the form of a sentence or proposition, you have brought it within the jurisdiction of this method ; and what you cannot state in that form is not entitled to be called a belief at all. This is what we mean by "scientific religion": not religion which is independent of sentiment or emotion, but religion whose thought concerning sentiment or amotion is in harmony with the laws of all thought and the facts of all being. So far as religion includes thought or belief at all, it is amenableto logic; and if any one fancies otherwise, he is like the man who talked proze all his life without suspecting it. The only way to escape from the jurisdiction of the logical intellect is to stop thinking altogether; and the unsatisfactory character of intuitionalism results from its attempt to carry on thinking to which the laws of thought do not apply. Just so far as the knowledge of truth is an element of religion, just so far must religion submit to obey the laws of scientific inquiry: it cannot afford to despise these laws without becoming a teacher of the imaginary or the false. All truth that is known is known by the intellect, and it is a simple confusion of terms to speak of knowing anything by feeling or sentiment—by the "heart."

4. There is no tendency in what we have said to disparage the "heart." We only say that it is not. the "heart" which thinks, believes, or knows, but rather the "head," the intellect. Feeling untranslated into thought is not belief or knowledge at all; the moment it becomes thought, it comes within the domain of science; but feeling nevertheless constitutes a large part of our life, and a very important. part. Religion includes it quite as really as it includes belief or knowledge: and no one who is devoid of the deepest and finest feeling is qualified to study religion in the truly scientific spirit. Religiousfeeling as such must be shared in order to be understood or criticised intelligently, and mere familiarity with physics, astronomy, or chemistry does not qualify one to be a scientific student of religion. It takes a very broad and deep sympathy, an intense and profound experience, to fit any one for the critical and strictly scientific investigation of religion as an historical and spiritual reality. But it also takes a perfectly clear comprehension of what constitutes scientific method, and a thorough conviction of the necessity of conforming all religious thought to the requirements of the most rigorous logic. Mr. Adams very excellently expresses our meaning when he says: "I suspect that by the term 'scientific religion' you mean, not religion springing out of science, but religion somehow made conformable to the largest and truest knowledge." Religion does not spring out of science; it is the whole of human life directed towards the highest ideal aims, and science is simply the intellectual side of it. Taken as synonymous with the sum-total of human knowledge of the universe we inhabit, science is a part of religion, as the perfection of man's intellectual nature; while at the same time religion in its entirety is itself the highest subject of scientific study and investigation.

5. Of course it follows from what we have said that we can have no "exact and final knowledge" of what is "beyond the grasp and comprehension of the knowing powers." There is no such knowledge as that. Neither science nor religion, in any acceptation of the words, can furnish it. The pretensions of religion to teach "inscrutable mysteries" are summarily abated, when the scientific method is accepted as the only means of attaining real knowledge; and. the attempt to make "intuitional assumptions scientific" is speedly abandoned by it. Science cannot assume God in order to explain the universe; but it can and does reverently study the universe to learn what it has to teach about God. There is an immense difference between these two positions and objects, and it is the difference between the intuitional and the scientific schools of religious thought.

NOT QUITE SO.

In a recent number of the Liberal Christian, in aneditorial article on the Unitarian "Year Book Controversy" (wherein decided ground is taken against the action of the Assistant Secretary, since endorsed by the Unitarian Association), an incidental misstatement is made which seems worth correcting-The writer says that, after Mr. Frothingham (the President of the Free Religious Association) had requested that his name should be omitted from the list of ministers, it was only a simple act of courtesy on the part of the compiler of the Year Book to conault the wishes of "the only other member of that Association whose name appeared in the book." That part of this statement which I have put in quotationmarks is incorrect, though, of course, accidental-ly so. As a matter of fact, there are some thirty names still enrolled in the Year Book list of Unitarian ministers, that are also duly recorded, or have been within the last two years, in the membership of the Free Religious Association,-not to speak of a number of others, recognized in the Year Book as Unitarian ministers, who are active cooperators with the Free Religions Association, though not formally putting their names to its list of members. And at the time Mr. Fox began the Fear Book correspondence there were, besides Mr. Frothingham's, three names on the Executive Committee of the Free Religions Association that were also in the Fear Book list of ministers. Two of these still remain on the Committee, and on the accredited list of ministers.

I state these facts simply to correct the accidental error into which the Liberal Christian has fallen, and not to draw any inference from them,-excepting this, that those specially interested in the free religlous movement have from the outset refused to consider it as a secession from Unitarianism or from any sect, or as in itself the organization of a new sect. From the beginning, the Second Article of the Constitution of the Free Religious Association has said, "Membership in this Association shall leave each individual responsible for his own opinions alone, and affect in no degree his relations to other associa-The Free Religious Association does not tions." therefore exclude from its membership those 'who may be connected with any of the sects; and it has actually among its members not only many who are accounted good Unitarians, but Quakers, Jews, Spiritualists, and even a few Orthodox Christians, as well as those who give no name to their faith. If the names of the thirty Unitarian ministers that are in its membership were to be printed, the fact of some of them being there would probably be a surprise to their brethren. W. J. P.

PRESIDENT ELIOT'S POSITION.

The skill and ingenuity of President Eliot are well known, but he never showed these qualities more conspicuously than in his address before the Christian Union on the taxation of church property. It seems to me that General Butler himself never achieved a feat of more brilliant audacity than when the President of an untaxed corporation of enormous wealth, like Harvard College, stood before the community with the claim that he spoke on the subject of tax-exemption "with disinterestedness and freedom," because he was a layman and had been a professor of chemistry! Yet I am grateful for this amazing stroke of daring, since it has helped to convince me, at least, of what I had before doubted .that the principle of tax-exemption is precisely the same whether applied to churches or colleges, and that so long as either class is exempt it will help to shield the other from taxation. This is one inevita ble inference from President Ellot's position. The other is, that he is utterly inconsistent in his opposition to President White, of Cornell, in regard to State education. President White maintains that the State should have a share both in the endowment and the control of universities. President Eliot claims the right to tax the community for their support; but says, "Hands off !" in respect to their control.

AN ENGLISH VIEW OF FREE LOVE.

T. W. H.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE INDEX:

My dear Sir,-The letter from Mr. Voysey which has provoked a reply from Mrs. Woodhull and a comment from Mr. Morse is unfortunate for the interesta of truth, if discussion is to stop here. After your words expressing desire that "the subject may rest here at present," Mr. Voysey may be silent; yet silence seems to leave an unfair slur on him. His letter had my sympathy and general approval, as soon as I read it in your columns, although I had absolutely no knowledge of the facts concerning Dr. Nichols, and only imperfect knowledge concerning Mrs. Woodhall. I now see that what he writes, up to the mention of Mrs. Woodhull's name, has no proper application to Mrs. Woodbull personally. My present letter aims at clearing up confusion, with the least possible pretension of advocacy or judicial decision. But if you think that to admit this letter will open the door to too lengthy discussion, I beg you to suppress It :- not but that I believe this question of free love to be of far greater importance than the discussions in dozens of your columns.

1. Mr. Voysey himself avows that he does not understand Mrs. Woodhull; for he says, "She must blame herself, if we cannot guess what she is driving at." i.e., if we are perplexed as to her designs and wishes. It is evident that he did not understand her; nor did I; but now all is plain. She says she "sees clearly, in the near future [manifest] with hope and approbation], that the question to be asked of mothers will be, What is the status, physically, mentally, and morally of your child? and not, Who is its father ?"

2. Mrs. Woodhull further speaks with disparage ment of keeping man and woman together "one and one." Her words are: "In the strife to keep ONE AND ONE tled together, their offspring are forgotten." Add to this her implication that it is of secondary importance "who is the father," and it seems beyond question that a truthful lady must utterly disapprove of any marriage vow of faithfulness to one husband. She does aim, therefore, "to go backward" into the state which preceded the institution of legal marriage. She may complain of the moral coloring in the word sawage ; but she ought to admit, as a fact, that she desires to go back into savage freedom. Instead of being affronted at what Mr. Voysey says about adultery, ought she not to reply that his argument is out of place? For it implies that a vow of exclusive union to one husband has been made; which is the very thing that she deprecates.

S. Since I discern in Mrs. Woodbull the enthusiast for ideas (certainly not the apologist of vice). I conclude her to desire to put the union of parents on the same moral footing as the union (say) of sisters. If two sisters have lived together thirty years in great harmony, a breach and separation may be as painful as the separation of the parents of a family. Mrs. Woodhull may lament, as deeply as Mr. Voysey, that a wife should leave her husband or a husband his wife after long and intimate union, and may think that this, as in the case of two sisters, will rarely happen without very grave moral cause; but she maintains (if I understand her) that the right of judging whether there is adequate cause must be retained jealously by the individual, and never be delegated to a legal tribunal. She would have the [unmarried] pair legally as free as the two sisters; and in a case of separation she would approve or disapprove, not by a general formula of morals, but by considering the details of fact.

4. Thus it appears that Mrs. Woodhull can find little in the public law of marriage to censure; the great weakness (from her point of view) is in women themselves, who, when they are capable of feeding themselves and a young family, are so foolish as to enter into vows of faithfulness to one man. If a lady of fortune choose to invite one gentleman after another, of suitable age, to be her temporary chamber-friend, and she thus produces to the community a troop of remarkably fine children, Mrs. Woodhull is indignant that such a lady should receive moral censure, or be excluded from society. If the children are physically thriving, we must hope well for "their moral and mental status." But the law would leave to the mother the sole control of the children, and sole responsibility for them, and would not acknowledge the smallest right of any of her lovers over her person or her property, any more than over the children. No change in the law is needed, in so far, but only a refusal of women to put their heads into a noose.

5. I gather that Mrs. Woodhull thinks that both law and custom are unjust to women in making it artificially hard for them to maintain themselves. So think I; so probably thinks Mr. Voysey, and thousands of those who shudder at Mrs. Woodhull's theories. But while everything should be done which can be done, by reform of law and customs, to give full justice to women as to employments and remuneration, Mrs. Woodhull will hardly shut her eyes to the fact that, after all, few women out of a great nation will be competent to rear a family (if it were just to put the whole burden on the mother), much less to put them forward in life; hence the tendency of her efforts is to induce a pecuniary bargain, that the lover chosen by the lady shall make a large payment, partly positive and partly conditional. The moral results of such a relation must on no account be thrown out of sight; but I do not here discuss them.

6. When Mrs. Woodhull says that "to marry for a home is not a whit better than prostitution,—indeed, is prostitution," she seems hardly to understand the true meaning of that ugly word,—which is, "presenting oneself for public or indiscriminate sale." It is to be lamented that any woman should marry either chiefly or solely for a home; yet oftentimes such a marriage is far from unhappy, and to confound it with prostitution is surely extravagant; but I write now solely to recall attention to the true meaning of this word. A kept mistress or concubine is not a prostitute, though, alas I she is too often on the road towards becoming one.

7. Mr. Voysey's question: "Are we men, or are we beasts?" and his phrase "bestiality" have exasperated Mrs. Woodbull; and certainly the color of the last word must be deprecated. But she differs little as to fact. Her own words in reply are that she "is determined to rise to the level of the female brute," and in fact she makes the freedom of the brute the goal of her aim, as far as appears. If she merely insisted that no woman whatever, married or unmarried, should forfeit her control over her own person, I (for one) heartily agree, and have in print maintained the need of changing our laws of marriage on this very matter; moreover, I find the analogy from the brutes of value as strengthening the female right of Veto,-though I wish all the facts were clearer. But it is one thing to say that marriage ought not to give to a husband compulsory powers over a wife; another thing to say that no legal marriage ought to exist at all. All antiquity regarded marriage by law as the beginning of civilization,stitution is to go back to the state of brutes. Mrs. Woodhull desires "the physical, moral, and mental status" of children to be improved; brutes have no care for the moral and mental state of offspring. Herein consists their difference from us: else those in which the sexes are numerically about equal would be entirely a pattern for us.

8. Mrs. Woodbull writes as if it were certain scientific fact that children are now "born murderers, drunkards, and other criminals." If she allude to the enormity of drunken fathers, she touches on what is abominable, but exceptional. Evil rights given by the law to husbands are open to her attack. But an overthrow of marriage does not remove the evil. It is too notorious to us in England that intoxicating drink, above all other things, carries men into sexual debauchery. On the other hand, she must not expect us to believe, on the word of some medical practitioners, that vice and crime exist solely or chiefly through hereditary transmission.

9. Some strong passages that Mr. Voysey has written apply to phases of sexual liberty different from that claimed by Mrs. Woodhull; especially the right of having, besides one's wife or husband, a spiritual wife or husband. The spiritually married are supposed to have an unlimited mental and moral intimacy, including a frequent companionship and interchange of sentiment. This is that which will only too often cause people to fall "over a precipice." I think Mr. Voysey will modify his epithet, "nasty theories," and the phrase bestiality, without at all weakening his deep disapproval of the theories, as tending to the overthrow of family life and to entire social licentiousness.

It is impossible now not to discuss these matters, and in the circles which are free from religious authority they will be most faithfully and usefully discussed.

FRANCIS WILLIAM NEWMAN.

[If "silence" on Mr. Voysey's partshould "seem to leave an unfair slur upon him," it would be both unjust and unkind to avail ourself of Professor Newman's generous permission to "suppress" the above letter. But we have not the slightest wish to "suppress" it. On the contrary, we are very glad to publish it, if for no other reason than to present a notable instance of the discussion of a very delicate subject in a style at once fearless, frank, courteous, and totally free from personal reflections of an invidious nature. Professor Newman has set a noble example of the true way, and the only effective way, of criticising views which are too often met with an irrelevant torrent of abuse; and what he has said on the subject we consider eminently fitting and forcible. Mr. Voysey's letter, as we understand it, was not at all designed to cast any reflections on personal character; but we saw with regret that it would almost inevitably be considered to do so, and our only effort has been to avoid getting THE INDEX involved in profitless personal controversies. If he feels desirous to rectify any misunderstanding of his words or his intent, he will not hesitate to do it; for we trust no one, least of all Mr. Voysey, supposes that we meant to intimate any wish to the contrary. Our own dis-approval of the "Free Love" theory is every whit as emphatic as that of Mr. Voysey or Professor Newman; but the latter's opinion of Mrs. Woodhull as an "enthusiast for ideas [of a very crude and one-sided nature), certainly not the apologist of vice," is also We add that we agree to every word of the ours. closing sentence of the above letter; and discussion of the "social question" in these columns is just as much in order as that of any other, provided it be conducted with the same dignity and decorum that mark this letter throughout.-ED.]

Dinitized by GOOG C

LONDON LETTER.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE INDEX :-Sir,-Changes occur so slowly in our old institutions here that we hall with delight any kind of innovation in the right direction. I have to record a very plessant episode in church matters which occurred here a few days ago. The Rev. Dr. Parker, calling himself a Congregationalist, and representing a sort of Evangelical type of Dissenters, has recently had built for him a very large chapel, called the City Temple, abutting on the Holborn Viaduct. He is a very popular preacher, second only to Mr. Spurgeon among the Nonconformists; but I believe he is considered "Broad," if not yet absolutely unsound. Things have so changed even among Orthodox Dissenters that it is not considered "unsound" to drop heli-fire out of the teaching, and to have very mystical and Maurician views of the atonement. I know nothing but by hearsay of Dr. Parker's preaching, and therefore make no imputations of heresy against him. But he has performed an act which, from our side of the hedge, is a credit to him, and gives promise of still better things.

At the opening of the Temple there was, of course, the inevitable cold collation, to which the Lord May or had been invited, with many other persons of civic distinction. But Dr. Parker, in a happy moment, invited also the Dean of Westminster, who, from a rigidly Orthodox point of view, is the best-hated man in the English Church; and but for his personal will towards Dissenters would be as much an object of aversion to them. Not all his reticence and caution, nor all his occasional Orthodox professions, have saved him from suspicion of heresy; and the "safer" he has made himself, the more he is doctrinally distrusted. Apart from religious views, however, no man is more loved and honored within and without the Church. He is goodness, tenderness, and charity blended. His great learning commands the respect even of his most bitter assallants, while his position in the Church and his connection with the Royal Household give him a greater prestige than he already derived from being the son of a late Bishop of Norwich and a member of the family of the Stanleys of Alderley. The charm of the man is that he regards all his great gifts and advantages as a trust for the benefit of his age-for his country, his church, and his fellow-men. Hence it is that he is always found on the weaker side, in defence of it against the strong. Whether it be a harassed cause or a persecuted man, he gives his right hand to the defence. Such a man may have but little direct influence upon doctrines and opinions, but he has all the more upon the characters and lives of those who witness his example.

When I began my letter, I did not intend to praise him as I have involuntarily done, but I wished to point out how such action as he invariably takes in public and in private tends to lead to free thought, and of necessity sets men thinking for themselves, and putting less value than they once did on their venerable but exclusive dogmas.

The Dean's speech was quite up to the level of his own breadth of mind and sense of justice. He is a gentleman, and therefore incapable of patronizing the Dissenters, who had invited him to their table. But he spoke out from an honest recognition of rights which have been too long disputed, and he claimed as a duty and a privilege what in former days had been regarded not only as a condescension but a sin.

Now, if our forefathers (not all dead yet, remember) were right in their horror of contact with Nonconformists,-were justified in their apprehension of danger to their own close creeds if they consorted with Dissenters, and were wise in their generation for their rigid exclusiveness,-it must follow that the Dean of Westminster's frank confraternity with them must do some harm to the Orthodoxy of one side or the And this is absolutely true. Such interother. course does result in both parties separating with less reverential awe of their own special beliefs than they felt before they socially met.

Two men radically asunder on such a point as that of the resurrection, or atonement, or hell-fire, having found each other out to be "downright good fellows," will not, cannot, attach the same importance as before to the points on which they differ. The very atmosphere of true sociability seems fatal to dogmatism and assumptions of infallibility. A man's rigid Orthodoxy receives a fatal shock under the subtile influence of humane and brotherly intercourse with a heretic. Let not a word about any doctrines be spoken, the "mischlef" is done before it can be detected. Thus amor vincit must still be the motto for all who wish to be scientifically guided in their opinions and lives. True fraternity is the pathway to a higher Rough faith; it widens and levels by being trodden. places are made plane, and thorns and briars get trampled under foot, when they cease to impede and to annov.

As a freethinker, I think we want a little more of the Dean's spirit of coalescence-even with the Orthodox. Sooner or later we shall suffer for our isolation, and put off the time of liberation for those whom we deem enthralled.

Some may answer: "Very true, but it is no fault of ours; the antipathy and seclusion are on the side of the Orthodox." There is some truth in this, but there would be less, if we were less proud, and not so unwilling to be snubbed or reproached in our first endeavors after social union. At all events, the example of the Dean of Westminster is a most wholesome one, and, as I said before, though his written words may be of little value in the mighty controversy between the old and the new religions, his noble actions and kind, genial, and most just speeches will do more to break up the old traditions, and to place church-and-chapel-bound men on a field of liberty, than all the fierce words of warfare which jealous disputants have hurled at each others' creeds.

I am, sir, very truly yours, CHARLES VOYBEY.

CAMDEN HOUSE, Dulwich, S. E., May 80, 1874.

Communications.

RELIGION AND SCIENCE.

EDITOR OF THE INDEX:

I perceive the question is arged upon you often, and from many different quarters, as to your views of re-ligion and science; and, if I understand you, you claim that there is a scientific religion, a scientific Idea of God.

I dea of God. I am interested to know what this scientific religion is. By science we understand the knowledge which is verified, proven, or capable of verification and proof by processes of the logical mind. It is knowl-edge, not belief; at least, such ideas and conceptions of knowledge as stand the tests of comparison and in-ductive reasoning. But knowledge does not a trreas of knowledge as stand the tests of comparison and in-ductive reasoning. But knowledge does not express the whole of human life and experience. We live quite as much in feeling, in believing, in aspiration, as in knowing, or knowledge. Religion appears as a natural sentiment, an inherent feeling of wonder-ment, reverence, or worship, not at all dependent upon knowledge, but existing and bearing away inde-pendently, sometimes in spite, of knowledge. I do not quite see how science has anything to do with re-ligion, except by modifying its superstitions and giv-ing it another form of belief or expression. Bellgion, being a sentiment or passion, incites to some belief about the uneen, the unknown, the mysterious subjects outside of and above Nature, which cannot, in the nature of the case, be known scientifically. The mind may suppose or conjecture what it will; it can prove nothing, except within the realm of the knowable. knowable.

Now excuse, I pray, the apparent dogmatism of these statements. I make them only for the sake of the argument, and in order to get at the truth, if posthe argument, and in order to get at the irath, if pos-sible. I am troubled to see how we can have a scien-tific religion, or how science can have a God and a worship. That science may modify and culture the form or expression of religion is easy to understand; but how, unless we assume or admit some intuitional authority, some clairvoyant vision, we are to say we know the Infinite, the Absolute, I am not able to per-ceive. Obviously we can only know what is finite, limited in time and space. We call that infinite which is only indefinite. We call that absolute which is only relative. Theology has assumed to declare a knowledge of the Infinite and Absolute, but where is it to be found? Nature is perhaps practically infi-nite, though we know it only as the finite; while sci-ence has only to do with the limited, with what can be positively known. The border-land of the indefi-nite belongs to religion, to the sentiment of wonder and worship.

nite belongs to religion, to the sentiment or wonder and worship. Religion implies the supernatural; a God separate from and greater than Nature, who has a personal will and character. The pantheistic God of the aci-entist does not satisfy the higher demands of reason and the moral sense. There must be some personal will-power outside of and greater than the Nature which he creates; else he can have no supreme claim to the soul's allectance and love.

which he creates; else he can have no supreme claim to the soul's allegiance and love. • Worship of the sun, as a representative of Nature's life-giving and sustaining force, appears as an emi-nently rational worship from the scientific or panthe-istic point of view. Might we not say that the Parsee religion is more scientific than the Christian? Can that be scientific which has no property of fixedness, which is undergoing modification and change from age to age? age to age?

age to age? Eract knowledge does not appear to be the condi-tion or concomitant of religion. In fact, worship ap-pears to be in an inverse ratio to verified knowl-edge. "Ignorance is the mother of devotion," is the common and universal observation. I auspect that by the terms scientific religion you mean, not religion springing out of science, but relig-ion somehow made conformable to the largest and truest knowledge. No doubt there is some sense in which the sentiment of religion, worship of the mysterious, is not antagonistic to the scientific knowledge of Nature; but is it not more by way of accommoda-tion than it is exact truth to speak of a scientific religion?

How, I repeat, are we to know that we have eract and final knowledge of what is objectively absolute,-beyond the grasp and comprehension of the knowing powers? That there may be a conscious projection into ob-jectivity, a delification, of one's subjective conceptions or self-hood, I am not unaware; but where is the ground or test of certitude? How can we make this intuitional assumption scientific, as we understand scientific knowledge? I write for information, wishing to be set solu-

In the scientific knowledge? I write for information, wishing to be set right where I may be wrong, and to cherish such a faith as shall not be inconsistent with science and phi-basenby. A. H. ADAMS. FAIR HAVEN, VL.

BOLTING.

"A bolt is always in order," said James Freeman Clarke at the Worcester Convention. Would that this gentleman's perceptions were always as clear in a Unitarian conference! A bolt is always in order there, when one sees a greater field of good ontside. Such a time always comes when his freedom is in-fringed. The doctrine that it is best to stay in an or-ganization as long as one can is a delusion and a enare, both false in theory and pernicious in practice. Nothing is more damaging to the minds of young men than this playing fast and loose with principles. Nothing meets with a more pronounced and open protest from the past, for the whole glory of our colo-nial and Puritan history has come from those who "bolted."

Nothing meets with a more pronounced and open protest from the past, for the whole glory of our colo-nial and Puritan history has come from those who "bolted." Such newspapers as the Independent and the Chris-tian Union are practical frauds upon the community, heighing to maintain creeds and organizations they do not believe in, and counselling freemen to remain shaves or become hypocrites. "Our whole personal in a national life would be higher and holler, our re-ligion would be purer, our politice more hones, if organizations whose creeds and platforms we do not accept, whose government is inksome, and whose doctrines we have outgrown. Staying in and pro-testing is of little avail; going out, declaring our in-dependence, and hoisting an honest flag, doubles our power while it increases our virtue." We rather ad-mire and respect the action of the Unitarians in reject-ing Mr. Potter. However they may dodge a defini-tion and shun an impartial application of it upon such men as Battol, and Alger, and Ames, and Chadwick, there can be now no doubt what they mean by the own Christian. Twice in doubt as to the compatibility of threast fellowship, or whether they can longer call bencher and Bowen we do not andorse. We prefer much more that of Professor Swing. Had they bolted in would have been much more healthy for free sould to breathe. But with our Unitarian friends young ago, the religious atmosphere in their commun-tion would have been much more healthy for free sould to breathe. But with our Unitarian friends young ago, the religious atmosphere in their commun-tion would have been much more healthy for free young was it that "a bolt is always in oder;" pencially so is it when liberty is manger. THE "NEGATIONS" OF LIEREHALIEM.

THE "NEGATIONS" OF LIBEBALISM.

CHELSEA, Mass., May 25, 1874.

<text><text><text><text><text><text>

of many good people, not thought; for if they did really think sufficiently, they would see that, while rejecting many of the ecclesiastical doctrines, liber-als are not chiefly remarkable for their negations. They do not beliers less than Christians, but more. Back of every negation is a greater affirmation, and the things they hold to and advocate with intense conviction outweigh by far those things which they reject.

conviction outwards -reject. Now I wish THE INDEX writers would emphasize alltile more what they belleve; for, you know, such papers as yours are few and far between, and it has to act as a pioneer as well as a cultivator. In short, what I want is to spread the "glad tid-ings" of radical religion faster, Yours truly, DANIEL G. CRANDON.

11298 205

29.92

N T B

町北京

12 13

2

1 2 8

[We wish it were possible to correct the misconception that Mr. Crandon so well points out; but, no matter how emphatically the great ideas of liberalism are asserted, the "church people" see and hear nothing but the negation of their own negations. For instance, they declare that man has one Savior, and only one; which is denying that man can save himself. Liberalism declares that man can and must save himself from evil, if he is to be saved at all; which is denying that he has only one Savior. Both deny; but which denial is the worse? Now we must stand stoutly by our own, and prove it; that is the only way to show that the negation of church negations is itself affirmation. But, frankly, we do not care a fig whether the truth is negative or affirmative; that is a mere matter of form of statement, while the substance of truth is always positive. This question of true or false is alone important; and we are weary of trying to convince the Christian believer that we affirm rather than deny. Prove your denial, and then he can see your affirmation .- ED. ]

MODERN ETHICS VS. ANCIENT THEOLOGY.

OZARK, Mo., April 29, 1874.

<text><text><text><text><text>

heathen. I think the defenders of "Orthodoxy" would mani-fest discretion by using the "law and the prophets" with discrimination in Sunday-school, if they would avoid a collision between their theology and modern ethics, Truly yours, H. CLAY NEVILLE. 100 avoid a collision betw ethics,

UNIVERSAL HARMONY.

"All Nature is but art, unknown to thee; All chance, direction which thou canst not see; All discord, harmony not understood; All partial evil, universal good."

How sublimely philosophical was Pope's faith! In contrast with the cringing superstition of Orthodox creeds, this fearless trust in universal Nature is nobly contrast with the cringing superstition of Orthodox creeds, this fearless trust in universal Nature is nobly rational. We have been taught to believe that Nat-ure is at war with itself,—that there is an eternal an-tagonism between certain principles in the universe, —until we cannot think of a universal harmony un-marred by devils and hells. The God of religious creeds, a being wrought by weak, ignorant, human conceptions, is too monstrous to excite the worship of love; we fall before his throne, and, with service incantations, seek to avert from ourselves the thun-derboits of wrath with which we suppose the Divine Ruler defends his own peculiar dominions against the sucroachments of his incorrigible enemies. Fettered by such narrow and debasing ideas of the nature of things, when the mind attempts to catch a train of the universal symphony the discord of some minor key strikes the ear, and the music is pro-nounced imperfect. Our faith is yet weak and pue-ties that fail under present observation, and mourne over the transient evils of to-day, instead of looking up to the grand procession of universal laws, which with unerring certainty guide the eternal evolution of life. Ignorance and superstition still command us to

Ignorance and superstition still command us to appease their gods and fear their devils. The infi-nice perfection of Nature is arraigned before bigoted creeds. Our faith is now struggling to free itself from the bondage of superstition and selfshness, and rise to the loftier heights of knowledge and universal love. We are learning to regard the whole with trust and reverence, instead of a part with fear and hatred. We begin to hear the universal harmony above the partial discord, and live in serene hope where we trembled in fitful despair. H. CLAY NEVILLE.

REPLECTIONS BY A NEO-CHBISTIAN.

Many thoughtful persons are now asking, "What will be the result of our non-acceptance of so-called fundamental Christian doctrines? Will it go hard with us if we do not believe the 'essentials' of the Orthodox pulpit and press? That all men are respon-sible for their treatment of truth, none can deny; but as all cannot clearly see what the truth is, who is to decide respecting our responsibility, and declare us false?"

as all cannot clearly see what the truth is, who is to decide respecting our responsibility, and declare us false?" How do men come to the possession of truth? Truth, it is clear, is apprehended by all in the same way; but by none to the same extent. Moreover, each ray of truth, as it penetrates the human mind, is affected by the medium through which it passes. Some, also, see more or less than others. Truth is grasped by two faculties—first, probably, by the in-tellectual, and secondly by the moral. That which the moral lays hold upon must needs be different in its effects from that which the intellectual nature seizes. Besides, it is generally allowed that moral truths are self-evident. If a man does not see that putiy and honesty and honor are better than their opposites, no arguments can do him much good. Hence all codes of moral law have been set before mankind in the form of commands. After the com-mand is seen to be right, then, all men conclude that moral truth is good and becautiful and binding, and ignorance of its positive statements does not ex-cuse disregard of them. Accordingly, we punish the ingoost the moral instincts of society and man-sen a law ordering him to be otherwise. The wrong-doer is made to suffer because he outrages and offends the moral instincts of society and man-progress of good society is secured by punishment of moral delinquents, retribution is approved, even if it our all delinquents, retribution is approved, even if it our all delinquents, retribution is approved, even if the command, the form so the os server. But when we come to deal with truth that is de-duced from speculative thought, and is always de-progress of good society is secured by punishment of moral delinquents, retribution is approved, even if the command, "Thou shalt not steal," may not saw a man from prison; but surely ignorance respecting the nature of the First Great Cause, and inability to see in that Cause the Trinity of the Orthodox beliser, should scarcely subject any to the condemantion of cash should scarcely subject any to the condemnation of Christlans.

Christians, Then, again, in some manner or other, all men are convinced by experience that one act is related to an-other, and that all our actions have a moral, we may say a retributive, effect. But does such an intellect-ual belief necessitate the reception of faith in never-ending torments and a materialistic hell? The infer-ence is certainly hardly as necessary as the moral in-stinct from which it is deduced.

stinct from which it is deduced. Suppose, again, that it should be held that the Cre-ator, by his volitive act, should have forever fixed the condition of things, and that in his kingdom there is no change. From our views of divine perfection this seems clear. Yet from such an intellectual considerkor, by his voltave ac, shout have here here here and consider at the shall we leap to the conclusion that evil is to be a never-ending power in the universe, and Satan is God? Is Calvinism a fact because it fits in with the theories of a law-system in creation? The maximum of the conclusion that evil is to be a never-ending power in the universe, and Satan is God? Is Calvinism a fact because it fits in with the theories of a law-system in creation? The maximum of the conclusion that evil is to be a never-ending power in the universe, and Satan is God? Is Calvinism a fact because it fits in with the theories of a law-system in creation? The maximum of the conclusion of the divine words that four his lips, and love, reverence, and imitate fail from his lips, and love, reverence, and imitate the the Son of God in a peculiarly unique sense, but do not see him to be what popular teachers of a may cal atonement make him out to be? Their moral that is purity, sweetness, grace, gentleness, and you has the intervent in his purity, sweetness, grace, gentleness, and you has the second of the seem of limitate importance to some farst in his purity, sweetness, grace, gentleness, and the seems of conset on the practical inference of the seems of limitate importance to some analysis and fearfully alarmed spirits in the respecting too long. Let us briefly deal with other to each soul of man seems different to each. But we are the whole argument. The word is a set ong Calvinistic divine with his for the ord statistic divine with his for the ord statistic instructor wrong. Immediately the source of a follower of Arminius, who is sure that the theory of that great teacher is right, and the exceptions of the Calvinistic instructor wrong. Immediately the source our salvation, we hear one set, "Stay?" and ho, there stands by our side seeds the document and complex such as the ideas of the afore the source our salvation, we hear one set, "Stay?" and ho, there stands by our side seeds the non-belisvers in the corruption of primiti gians and Methodists, all having something to say against each other and to us; to persuade us to be-lieve them in full possession of truth, and to lead us to conclude we are in danger, if we do not instantly join their ranks and accept their dogmas. Now we can find no fault with this state of things, for it is the result of human weakness and strength, and shows the living, combative power of truth. Much of it is painful, but all pain is not eril, and much health of soul may result from the pangs of suffering minds and hearts. Every sect of men, Christian and non-Christian, suppose they have got all the truth in their keeping; or at least more than anybody else has. Yot this idea is hardly wiser than his who fills a mighty set of china cups with water from the ocean, and then turns complacently to you, and says, "I've drained the ocean dry." when he sees a small basin is empiled in order to fill his teacups. You hardly think so, when yon hear the sound of seething waters, and see the create of mighty waves white with foam. But he has logic to show be its right, and because you object of hose who fill their theological teacups, and call them a system of theology, and then say, "We have ex-hausted the ocean of truth; take away one of these uge will be the result." Shall any then believe that the great ocean of Ge struth roles not on, fresh and juli as ever, even though systems of teacups even to be full of its tide? What, then, should be the outcome of all our thought? Shall any be indifferent to any view of uge will be the result." Shall any then centere that the great ocean of God's truth rolls not on, fresh and full as ever, even though systems of teacups seem to be full of its tide? What, then, should be the outcome of all our thought? Shall any be indifferent to any view of truth presented for his consideration? Nay. Indif-ferent to truth no sane, right-minded man ever should be. But all men should be tolerant and full of chari-ty. Unkind and rancorous words should never flow forth from the lips of those who profess to love the Divine Teacher of truth. He never expected his foi-lowers to have the same ideas respecting his aims and doctrines—or, if he did, never dealt with his disciples as though he did. He is a fitting teacher of all who would deal righteously with truth and truth-seekers; when they shall act as he ever did, there shall be per-fect religious freedom and a really united church. There shall then be one flock and one Shepherd. He never trified with truth, or spoke as one who let if ap-pear that he though it mattered not what a man be-lieved. Yet one thing he ever did, and that was to frow on him who was false to his convictions and untrue to his light. Orthodox pharisees he despised; but zeeking lawyers he commended. He never stood aloof from one who differed in religious opinion, but called that man strong in faith who appeared outside the Jewish Church. He turns away only from those who are morally wrong,—who are inhuman, unmind-ful of present daily duties, of the hungry, sick, and sufforing,—who fail to discharge the claims made by common human beings on each other. Those who could neglect and forget thoses who wept in lonely denselves; not because they were unsound divines, or meagre theologians, not because they had no rounded view of fundamental dogmas, as they are de-scibed in approved text-books, or were sceptics, ra-tionalists, or any other fast; may, but in consequence of their want of fastith in the goodness, beauty, and will call brother? God fortid. Let man damn him and us f unwillingness to do it may harm thy soul forever. THE UERLESSNESS OF PRAYER.—To the Editor of the "National Reformer,"—In your issue of Novem-ber 9th, J. McGrigor Allan, after alluding amongst other topics to the usefulness of prayer, says: "Any one of us may be compelled to go the longest of all journeys at a moment's notice, as in the case of the sudden death of Bishop Wilberforce." I wonder if it has ever struck this or any other Orthodoxis, that the "adden death" of this dignitary is, and must re-main, a lasting example of the uselessness of prayer. Here is an individual—well on to, if not fally, threes score and ten, and in "holy orders" to bost—who had been during the whole of his professional life, if not from his earliest years, putting up that petition, in the Litany, which says: "From battle and murder, and from sudden death, good Lord deliver us," mur-dered, in the long run, by his horse pitching him over its head, and breaking his neck so effectually that he must have died almost as instantaneously as if head been then and there slain by a stroke of lightning. Can we, sir, have a more convincing proof of the utter futility of such a practice than this stunning re-buke, for rebuke it must be called, if we have at the helm of affairs such a Being as a prayer-hearing and a prayer-answering God? And yet, if we are to judge of the future by the past, such is the blindness-and such the infatuation of "believers" that it is to be feared that this, and all other supplications to be found in the Book of Common Prayer, or that father-less bleeds can by hook orcrook invent, will continue to be feared that this, and all other supplications to be found in the Book of common Prayer, or that father-less bleeds can by hook orcrook invent, will continue to be feared that this, and all other supplications to be found in the Book of common Prayer, or that father-less bleeds can by hook or crook invent, will continue found in the Book of Common Prayer, or that father-less bloeds can by hook or crook invent, will continue to be presumptiously made to "God the Father in Heaven," in the vain hope that he may be impor-tuned or worried into sooner or later granting them. Lengthy comment on the fate of this spiritual peer-and his prayers is unnecessary, as the catastrophe speaks trumpet-tongued for itself to those who have ears to hear; so with a view to not encroaching further on your valuable space, I beg to at once sub-scribe myself, Yours truly, G. R. N-

No. 10 .- The Impeachment of Christianity, by F. E. Abbot. Fourth Ten Thousand. Sent for free distribution to any one who will distribute it, in packages of from

No 11.-The God of Science, by F. E. Ab-bot, attempts to show the real influence of modern science upon the idea of God. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00.

No. 12.—Is Bomaniam Heal Christianity; Two essays by Francis W. Newman and F. E. Abbot. Price 10 cents; 12 copies

No. 15 .- On the Vision of Heaven, by Prof. F. W. Newman, of England, analyzes the Christian conception of Heaven. Price

No. 14. - A Study of Bellgion : The Name and the Thing, by F. E. Abbot attempts to show that the popular derivation of the word Religion is incorrect; that the popular conceptions of Religion itself are inadequate; and that a new conception of it, based on the Law of Evolution, con-sistent with absolute Freedom of Thought, and independent even of belief in God, is the necessary condition of the perpetuity of Religion among men. Frice 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00. Address

THE INDEX, 1 TREMONT PLACE,

Roston, Mass.

five to one hundred copies

5 cents; 12 copies 50 cents

$1.00.

1

298	THE INDEX-
Advertisement § .	GOOD PHOTOGRAPHS
THE PATRONAGE	LEADING INDEX WRITERS.
· · · · · · · · · · · · · · · · · · ·	Including O. B. EROTHINGHAM, of the liberal advertising public is respect- fully solicited for THE INDEX. The attempt will be bonesity made to keep the advertis-
rully solution for THE INDEX. The strength will be honestly made to keep the sdvertis- ing pages of THE INDEX in entire harmony with its general character and principles, and thus to furnish to the public an advertising madium which shall be not only nonfituble to	W. J. POTTER, thus to furnish to the public an advertising	W. H. SPENCER, and in which shall be not only profitable to its patrons, but also worthy of their most generous support. To this end, all improper with a state of the state of the state of the state of the	F. W. NEWMAN, generous support. To this end, all improper	CHAS. VOYSEY, tisements, and all advertisements believed	A. W. STEVENS, generous support. To this end, all improper or "blind" advertisements, all quack adver- tisements, and all advertisements believed to be frandulent or unjust to any one, will be excluded from these columns. No cuts will	F. E. ABBOT,
THE INDEX must not be held responsible	Are now for sale at the office of THE INDEX, for any statement made by advertisers, who will in all cases accept the responsibility for their own statements.	and will be mailed postpaid to any address on receipt of prios. Single Photographs, 25 cents each; complets Set of Eight Photo-
ADVERTISING RATES.	graphs, $1.50.
For 1 to 12 Insertions, 10c per line. (13 (125 (15 16 8 (16 16 16 16 16 16 16 16 16 16 16 16 16 1	Address, THE INDEX, No. 1 Tremont Place, Boston, Mass.
* 52  5 ** **
On half-column advertisements, a discount of 10 per cent, will be made; on full-column advertisements, a discount of 25 per cent.	1
	No. 1Truths for the Times, by F. E. Abbot, contains the "Fifty Affirmations" paid in advance, a further discount of 25 per cent. on the total, as above calculated, will be made. FRANCIS E. ABBOT, Editor.	and "Modern Principles." MB. CHARLES be made. FRANCIS E. ABBOT, Eduor.	DARWIN, author of "The Origin of Spe-
CIECULE ATE   Cimulate     Circul	cles," says, in a letter to the editor not orig- mally intended for publication, but subse-
CIRCULATE   Circulate     Circu- iste THOSE PETITIONS. Don't feel estis-	quently authorized to be used : "I have now
late THOSE PETITIONS. Don't feel astia- fied when your petition is a yard long, unless you have asked every one to sign it. Get good, influ-	read 'TEUTHS FOR THE TIMES,' and I admire
GET EVERVBODY.	them from my inmost heart; and I agree to almost every word." New Edition. Price
	10 cente; 12 copies $1.00.
Don't neglect to show the petition to any one, because he is a stockholder in some church, or other exempted property as many such persons admit the justice of the demand; and those who will not should be made to take the responsibility	No. 2Fear of the Living God, by O. B. Frothingham, exposes the debasing char-
of refusing to sign it. Don't delay! We want the petitions returned	acter of the popular notions of God, and presents conceptions of him that are wor-
early.	thy of the nineteenth century. New Edi-
Per order of EXEC. COMM. of the BOSTON LIBEBAL LEAGUE.	tion. Price 5 cents; 12 copies 50 cents.
CULTURED FREE THOUGHT.	No. 8Lecture on the Hible, by the Rov. Charles Voysey, of England, is an over- whelming demonstration of the imperfec- tions and errors of the Bible, both in the
The Index Association,	Old and the New Testaments. New Edition.
OFFICE, NO. 1 TREMONT PL., BOSTON,	Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00. No. 4Christian Propagandism, by F.
has been organized with a capital stock fixed at	E. Abbot, is an exposure of the weakness,
ONE HUNDRED THOUSAND dollars, for the	costliness, and inefficiency of the System purpose of publishing Tracts, Books, and	of Foreign Missions. Full of Figures, Facts, and Interesting Extracts. Price 10 cents;
THE INDEX,	13 copies $1.00.
A Wookly Paper devoted to Free and Rational Religion.	No. 5""God in the Constitution," by Rev. Arthur B. Bradford, opposes the pro- posed Theological Amendment to the Unit-
It is the object of THE INDEX to give public	ed States Constitution. Price 10 cents; 12
atterance to the boldest, most cultivated, and	copies $1.00.
best matured thought of the age on all religious	No. 6 ""The Sabbath," by Parker Pills-questions, and to apply it directly to the social	bury, denounces Sabbatarian superstition.
and political amelioration of society. It is edited by FRANCISE. ABBOT, assisted by	New Edition. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00.
ABRAM W. STEVENS, with the following list of	No. 7"Compulsory Education," by Editorial Contributors :-	F. E. Abbot, maintains the right of every
O. B. FROTHINGHAM, New York City.	child to be educated, and the duty of the
THOMAS W. HIGGINSON, Newport, R.I.	State to ensure it an education. Price 5 cents; 12 copies 50 cents.
WILLIAM J. POTTER, New Bedford, Mass.	the second second second second second second second
WILLIAM H. SPENCER, Haverbill, Mass.	No. 8The Present Reaven, by O. B. Frothingham, treats of a subject that in-
RICHARD P. HALLOWELL, Boston, Mass.	terests everybody. New Edition. Price 5
MES. E. D. CHENEY, Jamaics Plain, Mass. REV. CHARLES VOYSEY, London, England,	centa; 12 copies 50 cents.
PROF. FRANCIS W. NEWMAN, London, Eng.	No. 9 The Christian Amendment, by Every liberal should subscribe for THE INDEX.	F. E. Abbot, shows the dangerous charac- ter of the attempt to interpolate the Evan-as the best popular exponent of Beligious Liber-	gelical Christian Creed in the U. S. Consti- tution. Price 5 cents: 12 contes 50 cents.

Every lib as the best popular exponent of Religious Liberalism. Every Christian minister, and every thinking church-member, should subscribe for it, as the cloarest, most candid, and most scholarly exposition of the differences between Free Thought and Evangelical Christianity, and as the best means of becoming well informed of the arguments and the movements which the Church will have to meet in the future.

Almost every number contains a discourse or leading article, which alone is worth the price of one year's subscription.

Prof. MAX MUELLER, of Oxford, England, in a letter to the Editor published in THE INDEX for January 4, 1672, says: "That the want of a journal entirely devoted to Religion in the widest sense of the word should be felt in America -that such a journal should have been started and so powerfully supported by the best minds of your country,-is a good sign of the times. There is no such journal in England, France, or Germany; though the number of so-called religious or theological periodicals is, as you know, very large." And later still: "I read the numbers of your IN-DEX with increasing interest."

Send $3.00 for one year, or 75 cents for three months on trial. Address

THE INDEX,

No. 1 Tremont Place, Be

INDEX ASSOCIATION, AT No. 1 Tremont Place, Boston.

THE INDEX.

A Weekly Journal

DEVOTED TO

FREE RELIGION.

PUBLISHED BY THE

 $\overline{7}$

8

4.

EDITOR: FRANCIS ELLINGWOOD ABBOT.

ASSOCIATE EDITOR: ABRAM WALTER STEVENS.

EDITORIAL CONTRIBUTORS: O. B. FROTHINGHAM, New York City.

T. W. HIGGINSON, Newport, R.I.

W. J. POTTER, New Bedford, Mass.

B. P. HALLOWELL, Boston, Mass. MRS. E. D. CHENEY, Jamaica Plain, Mass.

F. W. NEWMAN, England.

CHARLES VOYSEY, England.

THE INDEX aims-

To increase general intelligence with respec to religion :

To foster a nobler spirit and quicken a higher purpose, both in society and in the indi-vidual:

To substitute knowledge for ignorance, right for wrong, truth for superstition, freedom for alavery, character for creed, catholicity for bigotry, love for hate, humanitarianis for sectarianism, devotion to universal ends for absorption in selfish schemes.

In brief, to hasten the day when Free Religion shall take the place of dogmatism and sociesiasticism throughout the world, and when the welfare of humanity here and now shall be the aim of all private and public activities.

In addition to its general objects, the prac-tical object to which THE INDEX is specially devoted is the ORGANIZATION OF THE LIBERALS OF THE COUNTRY, for the purpose of securing the more complete and con-sistent secularization of the political and ed-ucational institutions of the United States. The Church must give place to the Republic in the affections of the people. The last vestiges of ecclesiastical control must be wiped out of the Constitutions and Staintes of the several States in order to bring them into harmony with the National Constitution To accomplish this object, the Liberals must make a united domand, and present an un-broken front, and the chief practical aim of Broken Front, and the carler practical and to THE INDEX will be henceforth to organize a great NATIONAL PARTY OF FREEDOM. Let every one who believes in this movement give it direct aid by helping to increase the circulation of THE INDEX.

SPECIAL PRATURES.

The publication of a valuable leading pa per or essay of a thoughtful character, in each issue, will continue to be one of the most marked features of THE INDEX. Regular editorial contributions will con-tinue to be furnished by the well-known emineut writers who have already done so much to give to THE INDEX its present high position. Mr. VOYSEY has kindly consented to sition. Mr. VOYBET has kindly consented to furnish every fortnight a LONDON LETTER containing matters of general interest to rad-ical readers. Other interesting correspond-ence, communications, extracts from value-ble books and periodicals, and miscellaneous articles, will also be published; and such improvements will be made from time to time as circumstances aball render possible time as circumstances shall render possible.

AGENTS

Local Agents for THE INDEX are wanted in every city and town throughout the country. The most liberal terms are offered.

TERMS.

The price of THE INDEX is Three Dol lars a year, payable in advance; and at the same rate for shorter periods. All remittances of money must be at the sender's risk, unless forwarded by cheque, registered letter, or post-office money order. The name, with address in full, must be accompanied with the money in each case. Address

THE INDEX. No. 1 Tremont Place, Boston.

PUBLICATIONS. FREE :

RELIGIOUS

ASSOCIATION.

Leport of the Addres es and oth Proceedings of the Original Meet-Froceedings of the Original meet-ing in 1867, at which the Free Beligions Association was Organ-ized. Containing addresses by 0. BFroth-ingham, Henry Blanchard, Lucretia Mott Robert Dale Owen, John Weiss, Oliver John-son, F. E. Abbot, D. A. Wasson, T. W. Hig-ginson, and Ralph Waldo Emerson.

"This pamphlet has not been on sale for a (in paints in a many persons who have all of the Annual Reports succeeding do not possess this.) Price 50 cents.

lings of Second Annual Me img, 1869. 50 cents. Contains essays by Julia Ward Howe on "Freedom and Re-straint in Religion," and by David A. Wason on "The Relation of Social Science to Religion," and speeches by O. B. Frothing-ham, Jesse H. Jones, F. E. Abbot, Wm. Denton, R. W. Emerson, Mary Grew, C. A. Bar-tol, A. M. Powell, H. B. Blackwell, Rowland Connor, Lucy Stone, Horace Seaver, an others; with an appendix on "Outlines of Judaism" by Rabbi Wise.

Proceedings of Third Annual Meet-ing, 1870. 50 cents. Contains essays by O. B. Frothingham on the "Idea of the e Beligious Association," followed by Free Beligious Association," followed by addresses by D. A. Wasson on "The Nature of Religion," by Mrs. E. D. Cheney on "Re-ligion as a Social Force, especially in rela-tion to Philanthropy and Reform," and by F. E. Abbot on "The Fature of Beligious F. E. ADDOT ON "In a reture of Bongton Organization, as affected by the Spirit of the Age;" an essay by Samuel Johnson on "The Natural Sympathy of Religions," fol-lowed by Rabbi Wise on "The Permanent and Progressive Elements of Judaism," by T. W. Higginson on "Mohammedani by Wm. H. Channing on "The Religions of China," and Wm. J. Potler on "Religion Old and New in India;" also abstract of a discussion on "The Bible in the Public Schools," by Thos. Vickers, S. R. Calthrop, Rabbi Wise, and others.

Proceedings of Fifth Annual Meet-ing, 1872. Scents. (Four or more, Sc cents each.) Contains essays by J. W. Chadwick on "Liberty and the Church in America," by C. D. B. Mills on "Religion as the Expression of a Permanent Sentiment of the Human Mind," and by O. B. Froth-ingham on "The Religion of Humanity," with adversars by Rowing Connor. Cella with addresses by Rowland Connor, Cella Burleigh, Lucretia Mott, A. B. Alcott, C. A. Bartol, Horace Scaver, Alexander Loos, and others.

Proceedings of Sixth Annual Moeling, 1873. 35 cents. (Four or more, 25 cents each.) Contains essays by Samuel Johnson on "Frpedom in Beligion," and by Johnson on "Freedom in Religion," and by John Weiss on "Religion in Freedom," with addresses by Wm. C. Gannett, Robert Dale Owen, T. W. Higginson, Samuel Longfel-low, J. S. Thomson, F. E. Abbot, and Lulow, J. S. Thor cretis Mott.

Sympathy of Religions, by T. W. Hig-ginson. 25 cents.

Beligions of Chins, by Wm. H. Channing. 25 cents.

on and Revelation, by William J. Potter. 10 cents.

Taxation of Church Property, by Jas. Parton. 10 cents, singly; par 60 cents; of one hundred, $5. ckage of ten,

These publications are for sale at the office of the Free Religious Association, No. 1 Tremont Place, Boston. The Annual Reports for 1868 and 1871 cannot be supplied, and the supply of others previous to that of 1872 is quite limited. Orders by mail may be addressed either "Free Religious Association, No. 1 Tremont Place, Boston," or to the Secretary, New Bedford, Mass.

WM. J. POTTER, Sec. F. R. A.

POPULAR BOOKS, Intorical Pictures Betouched; a Volume of Miscellanics. In two parts. Part I., "Studies, Pictures, and Fandies" "he Life of Dr. Maric Zakrzewska, being a Practical Illuaration of "Woman's Rights to Labor" The SENT BY MAIL AT PUBLISHERS' PRICES! ORDERS PROMPTLY FILLED. ESCARTES (RENE.) Discourse on the Method of Rightly conducting the Resson and Seeking Truth in the Sciences...... NO EXTRA CHARGE FOR POSTAGE. ANY BOOK in the subjoined List, or any other OBTAINABLE BOOK that may be desired, will be forwarded as promptly as possible on receipt of orders accompanied with the CASE. orders are respectfully solicited fro all friends of THE INDEX. Energy, Becond Berles, Marketter, Miscellandes, Explaint Traits, Conduct of Life Poema, With Portrait, May-day and Othor Picces, Escaya, Blue and Gold, Poema, Blue and Gold, Pores Works, 2 vola Society and Solitude Miscella Represent ALCOTT (LOUISA M). Little Woman, Two ALCOTTLUCUISA M.). Little Woman. Two
 1.00

 Roptini Exectors and Camp and Eireside
 1.00

 Billis Manager Strand
 1.00

 Didi-Fashioned Girl.
 1.00

 Didi-Fashioned Girl.
 1.00

 Bhawl-Strape
 1.00

 Work, & Suprof Experiences
 1.78

 Work, & Suprof Experiences
 1.78
 EVANS (E. P., Ph. D). First Historical Transformations of Christianity. From the Prouser. The Life and Works of Gotthold Ephraim Lesaing. Translated from the German of Adolf Stafr. 2 vols. ARABIAN NIGHTS' ENTERTAINMENTS. 1.50 ARNOLD'S (MATTHEW) Essays in Criti-ARRAR'S Critical History of Free Thought, in reference to the Christian Beligion..... 1.00 FEUERBACH (LUDWIG.) The Essence of Christianity. "George Ellot's" translation, 3.00 FISEE'S (JOHN) Myths and Myth-Makers.. 2.00 BACON'S Essays ..... 1.00 FROTHINGHAM (O. B.) Beligion of Bumanity Bellefs of the Unbellevers Child's Book of Religion Life of Theodors Parker...... Physics and Politics BAIN (ALEXANDER), Montal Science: A Compendium of Psychology sud filetory of Moral Science: A Compendium of Ethics, 1 vol. The Senses and the Intellect. Third sci-tion. 1 vol. SULLER'S (MARGARET) Complete Works, including Memoirs by Emerson, Channing, and others. A new edition. 8 vols ...... 1.70 GALTON (FRANCIS.) Hereditary Genius. An inquiry into its Laws and Conse-quences..... BARTLETT'S Dictionary of Americaniams. 2.50 JABTLETT'S Pamiliar Quotations ...... 3,00 JARTOL (REV. C. A). Radical Problems... 2.00 The Bising Faith ..... 2.00 GROTE'S LIFE. Compiled from Family Doc-uments, Private Memorands, and Original Letters to and from Various Prionds. By Mrs. Grote. Second Edition. With Por-tralt e al. in the Supreme Court of the Chry of Cincinnal, Hanney, Sago and King in Favor of the use of the Bible... Arguments of Stallo, Howley and Mathews against the use of the Silve the Supreme Court of Ohio in the shore case N 50 HAMIERTON (PHILIP G.) A Painter s Camp. Book II. In England. Book IL In Scotland. Book II. In France. Thoughts about Art. The Unknown River. The Unknown River. The Intellectual Life. Chapters on Animals. .04 RACKETT (ANNA C.) The Education of American Girls..... HAMILTON (GAIL). Child World. Part Sec TECHNER'S Force and Matter ...... 3.22 JCKLE (HENRY THOMAS). History of hviltantion in England and France, Spain and Scotland. New edition of the entire rort, with a complete index. 2 vols....... 6.00 Metaphysical Locures
 Logion
 Logion
 Loginal Locures
 Logina Locures
 Loginal Locures 2.00 ANNING (WM. ELLERY). Thoreas: as Post Naturalist. With Memorial Verse. 2.06 BUGO'S (V.) New Novel, " 'Ninety-Three".. 1.75 HUME'S (DAVID) Essays and Life ..... 1.7 BE (PBANCES POWER). Studies New 1 Old, of Ethical and Social Subjects. rwinism in Morals, and other Essays..... Beligious Demands of the Age..... WAY (MONCURE D.) The Earthward 1.70 Bongs of Seven..... INGELOW'S (JEAN) Prose. Off the Skellign tudies for Stories Stories told to a Child. First and Second Berles. A Sister's Bye-Bours. Mopea the Fairy: A Story. Poor Matt; or, The Clouded Intellect...... L (Mas. CAROLINE H). The College, Market, and the Court: or, Woman's ation to Education, Employment, and Isnahlp.

And the second s

2 96 ERROLD (DOUGLAS). Pireside Saints, Mr. Claude's Breakfast Talk, and other Papers. 1.5 RERR (ORPHEUS C). Versatilities, Poems, Patriotic, Sentimental and Humprous..... 2.0 LECKY (W. E. H.) History of the Hiss and Influence of the Spirit of Rationalism in 2.00 Influence of the Spirit or resource Europe. 2 vola History of European Morals from Augustus to Charlemagne. 2 vols...... 6.00 LEWES (G. H.). The Story of Goethe's Life. 1.20 LEWIN (REV. BAPHAEL, D'C). What is Ju-daism 7 or, a Few Words to the Jews...... 1.00 LONGFELLOW'S (H. W.) Poems. Portrait, 2 vols Prose Works. Portrait. 4.00 4.00 MACDONALD (GEORGE.) The Vicar's Daughter. 1.50 Daughter MANN (HORACE). The Life of Horace Mann. Hy his Wife. Lectures and Annual Reports on Education. 1.00 Annual Reports on Education. Tom 1839 to 1848 Thoughts Selected from the Writings of Horace Mann. 5.00 2.50 1.00 MARTINEAU (JAMES.) Essays, Philosoph-Ical and Theological. 2 vols. Per vol..... The New Affinities of Faith ...... 2.50 MAURICE (REV. F. D.) The Ground and Object of Hope for Mankind 1.50 MILL (JOHN STUART.) Dissortations and Discussions. 4 vols., each. The Examination of the Philosophy of Sir William Hamilton. 2 vols., each. The Positive Philosophy of Auguste Comics. Political Economy. New and revised edi-tion. 2.05 2.25 2.50 1.25 1.25 1.50 2.25 1.0 tion..... The Subjection of Women...... Easay on Liberty. Representative Government. Autobiography........ Memorial Volume. His Life and Works... Time Stories. MUELLER (MAX, M.A.) Loctures on the Science of Language. First Series...... The Same, Socoul Series........ Chips from a German of Religion. Vol. L. Essays on Mythology. Traditions, and Constorme. Vol. III. Essays on 14t-erature, Hiography and Antiquities. Three vols. Price per volume....... Lectures on the Science of Keligion...... 3.00 2.00 2.00 2.00 2.00 ASBY (PETROLEUM V). Swingin' Round the Cirkle. Ekkees from Kentucky. 1.5 Ekkees from Kantucky... grawn An (FRA NCIS W.) A History of thu Hebrow Monaroby... Phases of Faith, or, Passeges from the History of my Ureed... The Soul, its Borrows and its Aspirations... Catholic Union: Easays Lowards & Church of the Future, as the Organization of Philanthropy... Interactions of Provided the Constitution of the Source as the Organization of Philanthropy... Interactions of Provided the Aspinst Hero-Making in Religion... 10.00 1.75 PARSONS (THEOPHILUS.) The Infinite

2.50 2.50 2.00 1.75 1.50 HE INDEX, T 1 Tremont Place, Boston.

1.75 BOSSETTI (CHRISTINA G.) A Shadow of Dants SCRELLEN (H.) Spectrum Analysis, in its Application to Terrestrial Bubances, and the Physical Constitution of the Heavenly Bodiss. SCIENCE PRIMERS. 1. Introductory, By Prof. Ruxley, P.E.S. 2. Chemistry, By Prof. Roscos. 3. Physics. By Halou Siswart. With il-lustrations. 4. Physical Geography. By Archibal Geo-kie, I.L.D., F.R.S., flexible cloth...... .50 SMILES'S (SAMUEL) Self-Help...... 1.50 SPINOZA (BENEDICT DE.) Tractatus The-THACKERAT'S (W. M.) Novels, Household Edition. Complete in 6 volumes. Per vol. 125 Vanity Fair. The New comes. Adventures of Philip, Pendemuls. The Virginians. Esmood, and Lovel the Widower. Biocellaneous Writings. Household Edi-tion. Datform with the Novels. Com-plete in Svols. With new Portrait. Per vol. 1.25 plete in Svols. With new Portrait. For vol. 1.25 This edition includes all the matter in the iat-at English editions, with many additions, thus making it, with the novels, the chespest and most complete Thackersy in the market. Barry Lyndon, Hoggarty Diamond, &c.
 Paris, and Iriab Skotch-Books, &c.
 Snohs, Sketches, Donis Duval, &c.
 Soons, Sketches, Donis Duval, &c.
 Catherine, Unristmas Books, and Unreprinted Pieces. THOREAU'S (H. D.) Walden; or, Life in the Woods Excursions in Field and Forest. Portreit. The Maine Woods. Cape Cod. Cape Cod 1.00 Letters 2.00 A Yankee in Canada 2.00 A Week on the Couvord and Merrimac 1.00 Bivers 1.00 TYNDALL (JOHN). Faraday as a Discoverer. 1.00 Pragments of Science for Unscientific Paor maguants of Science for Unscientific Peo-ple Light and Electricity Hours of Enercise In the Alpa Heat as a Mode of Motion. On Sound Radiant Heat. Forms of Water Lectures on Light. Proceedings at the Parewell Banquet to Proc. Tyndail. 2.00 1.25 10 TYTLER (SARAH.) Old Masters and their Pictures Modern Painters and their Paintings..... 'OYSEY (REV. CHABLES.) The Sling and the Stone. Vois. I and V., esch. Vois III. IV. and VI., esch. The Voysey Appeal Voysey's Defence at York. WARNER'S (CHARLES D.) My Summer in Saunterings. Back-Log Studies Washington and the involution WEITNEY'S (Miss, A. D. T.) A Summer in Lealle Goldthwalte's Life. We Olvie: A Home Story The Other Girls The Other Girls Pannics. A volume of Foems. 1.50 1.50 1.50 1.50 WHITTIER'S (JOHN G.) Poenus. 2 vols .... 4.00

Immedia Google

ADDRESS:

300	THE INDEX	JUNE 18, 1874.
NONPAREIL Farm Feed, Bone, Drug, and Hand-grinding MILLS. Ten Bisse, Also Cotton-Seed Hullers. Illustrat- ed pamphetes free. Address J. SEDGEBEER, Painesville, Ohio.	A FEW COPIES ONLY Of an excellent Photograph (Cabinet Size) of Rev. MONCURE D. CONWAY, of London, can be had at the office of THE INDEX. Price	BOSTON LIBERAL LEAGUE.	A CHEAP OFFER A COMPLETE SET of INDEX TRACTS, from No. 1 to 14 inclusive, will be malled to any address on the prepayment of 16 currs.
SAVE FIFTY DOLLABS!	FREE DISCUSSION	the	Address THE INDEX, No.1 Tremont Place, Boston, Mana
THE NEW FLORENCE. PRICE, $20 below   any other First- VALUE, $30 above   class Sew's Mach.	1. I. D. B. D. I. O. C. C. S. Washing- is beid at HOSPITALLER HALL, 657 Washing- too Street, Boston, every Sunday, at 10% A.M., 3% and 7% P.M. All that relates to the Exciptone, 70 ditical, and Scolal interests of manking consti- tute the subjects for discussion. THE INDEX and Index Tracts are for asle overy Sunday at	Repeal of the Laws whereby church and other corporate property is unjustly exempted from its share of the burden	THE AMERICAN EDITION OF MONCURE D. CONWAYS
SAVED, 850 by buying the Florence. Every machine warranted.	Hospitaller Hall. THE BOUND INDEX FOR 1873.	of taxation. As a means to this end, we have published for	SACRED ANTHOLOGY,
Special terms to clubs and dealers.	The bound rolume of THE INDEX for 1873	general circulation several thousand copies of a	A BOOK OF ETHNICAL SCRIPTURES,
Send for circulars to the	(Volume 4) will be promptly for wat derives, at address on receipt of $3, by express, at	TBACT	has just been published, and will be sent postpaid on receipt of the price, $4.00.
Florence S. M. Co., Florence, Mass., or T18 Washington Street, Boston, Mass.	the year can be furnished in no other form. Address THE INDEX, 1 Tremont Place, Boston.		Address THE INDEX,
CHARLES SUMNER'S	CHARLES SUMNER.	on Church Exemption, being the article by Mr. Abbot which appeared in THE INDEX of Nov. 27.	1 TERMONT PLACE, Boston, Mass.
GREAT WORK.	A fine likeness of Massachusetts' great Sen-	The edition was made as large as our funds	G. L. HENDERSON & CO.,
PROPHETIC VOICES	A difference of a recent Photograph by Black, is for sale at THE INDEX office, and will be aent by mail to any address on receipt of the price-fifty cents. Address THE INDEX, 1 Tremont Place, Boston.	would allow; but, so great has been the demand, it is already nearly exhausted. Our next edition ought to be large enough to place a copy in the hands of	BANKERS, LEROY, MINN. Money invested on short time, or for a
By CHABLES SUMNER. Fine Edition, Tinted Paper, with Steel Por-	TO NEWSPAPER	EVERY VOTER IN THE STATE,	term of years, on unincumbered improved farms, at 12 per cent, interest per annum, payable semi-ar, maily. Parfect title
trait, Crown svo., Cloth extra, $2. Aside from its literary and historical mer- lts, this volume has a special interest, from	PUBLISHEES. Having conveniences for doing the best of	and generously to supply the calls for them in	tarms, at 12 per cent, interest per anom, payable semi-arnually. Perfect tills and ample security guaranteed. All expenses for abstract of tills and recording motrgap paid by borrower. We collect and remit to any part of the United States free of charge.
the fact that it was the last work on which Mr. Sumner was engaged before his death.	newspaper printing at reasonable prices, 1 should like to contract for composition alone,	other States. To do this, we need funds; for, although we	Gregor, Iowa : First National Bank, Mo-
Mr. Summer was engaged before and "Baormetro Yonces" will be found of great value to all who take an interest in the his- tory of our country, so full is it of passages in which the unexampled prosperity of our	or for composition, press-work, and mailing, for one or more weekly papers. Best of references given, and satisfactory work guaranteed. GEO. H. ELLIS, 7 Tremont Place, Buston.	have made arrangements for printing the Tract at very low cost, it is impossible for the Boston League, with its various other expenses, to bear	Atlant; Bulwankee National Bank, Milwan, kee, Wis; City National Bank, Chicago, III; Allen, Stevens & Co., Bankers, New York City; Morris Altman.
In which the unexampled prosperity of out land has been foretold by philosophere, poets, statesmen, and orators, of whom the lament-	TO BOOK-BUYERS.	the entire expense alone. Will not, then,	REAL ESTATE SECURITIES, paying 8 to 10 per cent. interest, or
ed author has also given interesting sketches.	Please examine the revised list of POPU- LAR BOOKS on the opposite side of this page. Any OBTAINABLE BOOK NOT IN THIS LIST will be furnished to order.		Investments in Real Estate in Chicage and vicinity,
Sent, post-pald, on receipt of price. Address THE INDEX, No. 1 Trement Place, Buston.	chase English, German, or French Books, or	All Friends of the Movement	if judiciously made, are the best and safest modes of employing capital. The old
H A V E W E	who wish for information as to the price, &c., of any American or Foreign Book, can have their orders promptly filled and their inqui-	come forward and help as with liberal donations ? We frequently receive communications from	Real Estate and Loan Agency
TWO BRAINS 1 Dr. C. E. Brown-Sequard.	their orders promptly filled and their inqui- ries answered by addressing THE INDEX, 1 Tremont Place, Boston.	parties wishing tracts to distribute, saking how much they shall pay. To such we reply that the	ERNST PRUSSING, 145 BANDOLPS STREET
IS ALCOHOL & POI 40N1 Dr. Wm. A. Hammond.	BOUND VOLUMES OF THE	cost to us is about $2.50 per thousand, and we	Chicago (Established 1853),
THE POET LONGFELLOW. James T. Fields.	Bound volumes of THE INDEX for 1871,	shall be pleased to furnish them at this price per thousand, or 30 cents per hundred, to all who will	Gnarantees perfect tills and ample security in all its Real Estate Loans. Firstclass securities always on hand. In- terest and principal collected without charge.
U. M. SURVEY OF THE WEST. (With Map.) Under Lieut, G. M. Wheeler.	1872, and 1873, will be sent by express (at the purchaser's expense) on receipt of $2.50, $2 50, and $3.00 respectively. These volumes are exceedingly valuable singly, irrespective of each other: for the important escars and	circulate them. But all additional donations will be gratefully received for the purpose of circu-	or on shares; taxes paid, &c.
THE RORSE IN AMERICA. (Illust'd.) Discoveries by Prof. O. C. Marsh.	are exceedingly valuable singly, irrespective of each other; for the important essays and other articles they contain are of permanent	ating them gratuitously throughout the country. To many of the subscribers of THE INDEX	Orders of capitalists and real estate own- ers respectfully solicited.
SAFETY AT BEA. (Illust'd.) IBON STEAMERS THAT WILL NOT	interest, and will furnish as instructive read- ing twenty years hence as to-day. No more	and others whose names have been furnished us	REASONS FOR USING THE
SINK. These interesting Lectures and Letters,	valuable present could be made to a friend struggling out of Orthodoxy than one of these volumes.	as probable friends of the movement, copies of the Tract, together with Petitions saking the re-	EUREKA SPOOL SILK.
with a careful report of the important papers read at the April meeting of the National Academy of Sciences at Washington, and at the May meeting of the American Oriental	Address THE INDEX, 1 Tremont Place, Boston.	peal of the Exemption Laws, have been sant,	It is full length. It is full size. It is
Society at Boston, are published in full in THE TRIBUNE EXTRA, No. 19. Price, in sheet form, 10 cents; in pamphlet, 20 cents; or seven for $1.	WARREN'S TRUE CIVILIZATION.	With the Hope	smooth and elastic, and is equally adapted to hand or machine use.
Circulars, giving full details of the con- tents of all THE TRIBUNE EXTRAS, free by mail.	Prico 50 cents.	that such friends will try to secure as many sig- natures to the petition as possible in their locality We respectfully ask those who are unable to at-	Many kinds of spool silk are a perfect fraud, being not only shorter in length, but a much finer size than they are represented
THE WEEKLY TRIBUNE, THE FARMER'S FAVORITE PAPER.	PRACTICAL DETAILS,	tend to the matter themselves to place the peti-	to be, and of so poor a quality as to be unit for use. The ladies will always find the Eu-
nntil January 1, 1875, for $1. Address THE TRIBUNE, New York.	showing the workings of the COST PRINCIPLE.	tions in the hands of those who will. Let us	reka Silk exactly as represented. Every spool is warranted, and the manufacturar's
B U S T O F THEODORE PARKER.	Price 25 cents. For sale by	BOLL UP THE LIST:	name indelibly branded on every spool. Call for it.
SIDNEY H. MORSE.	S. H. MORSE, 25 Bromfield St., Baston.	Let our united voices be heard! And let it be done NOW!	RADICAL AND LITERARY
Dignity, reverence, sweetness, vigor, equi- poise, breathe through the clay; the artist has so filled his own heart with appreciation	POPULAR COLLECTIONS OF	We would may, also that we feel deeply the need of	LECTURES of that noble life that he has been able cun- ningly to mould it into those delicate lines which the character had wrought on the liv-	ORGAN MUSIC!		JOHN WEISS,
ing fibre. We are tempted to exclaim, as we stand beside it, as the old artist did to his perfected work, "Speak then!"-Hannah E.	FOR PIPE ORGANS. Organ Gems. Davenport. $2.50	Other Organizations
All the characteristics of my husband are	Batiste's Organ Voluntaries. 2.50 50 Pieces for Organ, Batiste. 2.50	in this State, to cooperate with us in securing equality and justice, by pressing the "Demands	RADICAL LECTURES. The idea of Hereafter.
in the bust,-big greatness, his goodness, his tenderness, his love. You cannot give life to clay or marble; but you can represent it, and this Mr. Morse has doneLydia D. Parker to Hannah E. Stevenson.	Clarke's Short Voluntaries. 1.50 Organist's Portfolio, Elmbault, 2 Vols., each 3.00 Hile's Short Voluntaries. 9 Nos.,	of Liberalism." If, in any locality, there are those who are inclined to	An Act of Faith. Intelligence in Religion. Religion and Science.
The eyes, though but of clay, are gleaming with possible indignation, with possible tears; the lips are set firm with the resolution of him who, like Paul, could "fight a good fight" as well as "give a reason."Samuel Longfal-	Zenner's Voluntaries. Complete, 3.00 250 Easy Voluntaries. Zundel. 2.00	Form a Liberal League,	Heart in Religion.
tow. The first time I have seen Theodore Parker	NEW CHUBOH MUSIC BOOK NEARLY HEADY.	we are ready to render such assistance as lies in our power.	FIRST SERIES.
since he died Wm. Sparrell. The best representation of Mr. Parker ever	FOR REED ORGANS. Organ at Home, 2.50		1. Cause of Laughter. 2. Irony and Humor.
executed in clayBoston Daily Globe. The face is strong and noble as it should be. The likeness is goodBoston Daily Advertiser.	Becreations for Cabinet (Reed) Or- gaus. 1.50	LIBERALSI	<ol> <li>Dogberry, Malvolio, Bottom, Touchstone.</li> <li>Ajax in Troilus and Cressida: The Por-</li> </ol>
Nothing appears for bonutivelune as Halph	Clarke's Short Voluntaries. 1.50 Clarke's Reed Organ Companion, 2.00	If all will units and work, the results sought	ter in Macbeth: The Fool in Lear. 5. Falstaff.
or to show the vanity of the artist, All is forgoiten in the man-the true, real, Yankee man, Theodore ParkerL. S. H. in the Golden Age.	Fine collections of Pieces, Songs, and Tunes may also be found in Emerson's New Method. Clarke's New Method, and in Root's School for Cabinet Organs.	an be accomplished Address	6. Hamlet. SECOND SERIES. 1. The Women of Shakspeare.
Copies of this Bust, finely finished n plas- ter, $10 each. Boxing for transportation, $1	NEW CHURCH MUSIC BOOK IN AUGUST.	BOSTON LIBERAL LEAGUE.	2. Portia. 3. Ophelia.
extra. Freight or expressage paid by party sending order. Weight of hor about fifty	Either of the above books sent, post-paid, for retail price.		4. Macbeth and Lady Macbeth. 5. " " " "
B. H. MORSE.	OLIVER DITSON & CO.,	NO. 1 TREMONT PLACE, BOSTON.	<ol> <li>Contrast in Shakspeare's Characters.</li> <li>Address</li> <li>JOHN WEISS,</li> </ol>
Room 13, 25 Bromfield St., Boston, Mass.	BOSTON,	Per order of the EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE.	32 E. Brookline St., Boston-

manuan Google

Three Dollars a Year.

LIBERTY AND LIGHT.

Single Copies Seven Cents.

VOLUME 5.

1

12448421 ħ .01

TO D, U

I.

54

4

0440

14.4

41024

-

WHOLE NO. 235.

ORGANIZE!

THE DEMANDS OF LIBERALISM.

We demand that churches and other sociesiastical roperty shall no longer be exempt from just isaxion.
 We demand that the employment of chaplains in Con-ress, in State Legislatures, in the navy and militia, and in risons, saylums, and all other institutions supported by unlic money, shall be discontinued.

s. We demand that all public appropriations for educa-ional and charitable institutions of a sectarian character shall coase. 4. We demand that all religious services now sustained by the government shall be aboliahed; and especially that the use of the Bible in the public schools, whether costensi-bly as a tert-book or arrowedly as a book of religious wor-ship, shall be prohibited. 5. We demand that the appointment, by the President of the United States or by the Governors of the various States, of all religious festivals and fasts shall wholly cease. 4. We demand the huddel bath in the count and by the function of the full state of the second public the united States of the full state of the second public the full states of the full state of the second public second states of the full state of the second public the second state states and fasts shall wholly cease.

of all religious festivals and fasts shall wholly cease. 6. We demand that the judicial oath in the courts and in all other departments of the government shall be shol-shed, and that simple affirmation under the pains and pen-alities of perjury shall be established in its atsad. 7. We demand that all laws directly or indirectly enforc-ing the observance of Sunday as the Sabbath shall be re-pealed.

in the second second

A FORM OF LOCAL ORGANIZATION.

Whereas, It is our profound conviction that the safety of republican institutions is imperilled, the advance of civil-sation impeded, and the most sacred rights of man in-fringed, by the least interference of the State in matters of religion; and

religion; and Whereas, Certain grave inconsistencies with the general spirit of the United States Constitution still mark the prao-tical administration of our political system, threatening the perpetuity of religious liberty, the existence of free public schools, and the peace and prosperity of the entire land;

THELEFORE, We, the undersigned, hereby associate our-

ARTICLES OF AGREEMENT.

ART. 1.- The name of this Association shall be THE LIB-

TRAL LEAGUE OF ______. ART. 1.—The object of the Liberal League shall be to se-care practical compliance with the "Demands of Liberal-im" throughout the country, and especially in _____: Also, as soon as five bundred such Liberal Leagues shall have been formed in different places, to send two delegates to a Naional Convention of Liberal Leagues, to be hereaf-ter called, in order to co-operate with all the liberals of the covary in securing the needed reforms. Liberal - The means employed in working for these places consety in securing the needed reforms. ART. 8.—The means employed in working for these objects shall be regular local meetings, free discussions, lectures, addresses, conventions, the platform and the press in gen-eral, and all such other means as are peaceable, orderly, and right.

Ast. 4.—Such measures shall be adopted for raising funds for the Lesgue as shall be prescribed in the By-Laws by a two-thirds vote of the members.

ART. 5.—Any person may become a member of the League y subscribing his or her name to these Articles of Agree-

Asr. 8.—The Officers of the League shall be a President, Wice President, a Scoretary, a Treasurer, and an Ercon-tre Committee of three members; and their druites shall be hose commonly pertaining to these offices. The President and Scoretary shall be arcofficie delegates to the Nati. mai Doavention of Liberal Leagues when called together. and B

ART. T. These Articles of Agreement may be amended by a three-fourths voice of the members present at any reg-nar meeting, provided due notice of the proposed amend-ments shall have been sent to every member at least two weeks provious to such meeting.

So far as I am concerned, the above is the platform of The INDER. I believe in it without reserve; I believe that it will yet be accepted universally by the American people, as the only platform consistent with religious liberty. A Liberal League ought to be formed to carry out its princi-ples wherever half a dozen carnest and resolute Liberals and be got together. Being convinced that the movement is asserved. to searce compliance with these just "Demands" must surally, even if slowly, spread, I hope to make THE INDER amans of furthering it; and I ask the assistance and active co-operation of every man and every woman who be-lieves in st. Multiply Liberal Leagues everywhere, and re-port promptly the names of their Presidents and Secre-taries. Intolerance and bigotry will tremble in assessment taries. Intolerance and bigotry will tremble in proportion as that list grows. If freedom, justice, and reason are right, let their organised voice be heard like the sound of right, let their

TRANCIS E. ABBOT. Editor. BONTON, Sept. 1, 1878.

÷

For List of Liberal Leagues, see next page. RELIGIOUS FREEDOM AMENDMENT:

PROPOSED AS A SUBSTITUTE FOR THE FIRST AMENDMENT TO THE UNITED STATES CON-STITUTION.

ARTICLE 1.

ARTICLE 1. SECTION 1.—CONGRESS shall make no law respecting an es-sablishmant of religion, or favoring any particular form of religion, or prohibiling the free exercise thereof; or abridg-ing the freedom of speech or of the press, or the right of the people peaceably to assemble and to petition the Gov-ernment for a redress of grievances. BECTION 3.—NO State shall make any law respecting an stabilshment of religion, or favoring any particular form of religion, or prohibiling the free exercise thereof; or abridging the freedom of speech or of the press, or the right of the people peaceably to assemble and to petition the Government for a redress of grievances. No religions a qualification to any office or public trust, in any State; and no person shall ever in any State be deprived of any of rights of the sorie of any office or rebuild or suffrage; or res-der the consequence of any public or private duty, or ren-der the consequence of any public or site duty, or ren-dered incompetent to give evidence in any court of law or requirty, in consequence of any public or private duty, or ren-dered in competent to give evidence in any control faw or requirty. In consequences and have power to enforce the pro-misons of the second section of this Article by appropri-tions of the second section of this Article by appropri-tions.

NOTES AND COMMENTS. BT A. W. B.

THE SUMNER-MEMORIAL Committee, of Boston, wish to raise fifty thousand dollars (less than half that sum is In their hands already); and with that amount they pro-pose to secure a statue of Mr. Sumner.

JAMES RUSSELL LOWELL will come home from Europe a degree more in the estimation of his admirers than when he went ont-because the University of Cambridge, Eugland, has recently conferred upon him an LL.D.

AN ENGLISH paper suggests that smoking be allowed during divine service, "as a means of increasing the at-tendance at church." In old times there used to be the "deacons' pew;" in modern times we may have the smokers' pew.

THE THEATRES of Boston, it is said by good authority, have done a better business during the past season than those of any other city in the Union. Edwin Booth and Miss Clara Morris, it is also asserted, have been the best paying "stars" of the season.

MRS. E. D. CHENEY recently addressed the Free Religious Society in Providence. Her subject was, "Love, Duty, and their relations to each other; and how Free Beligion helps to adjust these relations." A good and timely theme; and, doubtless, well treated.

"THE FRIENDS of Human Progress" held their twentysixth Annual Meeting in Waterloo, N.Y., on the 18th and 14th of June. Mrs. Lucy N. Colaman was chosen Presi-dent, and H. L. Green and Miss Prudence Linton Secre-"The Friends" indulged themselves in a free taries. discussion on Temperance, Religion, Capital and Labor, and the Equality of the Sexes. Some good speeches appear to have been made on all these subjects-none better than those of C. D. B. Mills, of Syracuse, who always speaks earnestly and well on all subjects that interest him.

SPIRITUALISTS have occasion to congratulate them selves on the endorsement which Spiritualism has lately received from Mr. Alfred Wallace, the distinguished English naturalist. In a recent number of the Fort-nightly Review Mr. Wallace has an article entitled "Defence of Modern Spiritualism," in which the following explicit and pronounced statement occurs: "The facts of Spiritualism are ubiquitous in their occurrence, and of so indisputable a nature as to compel conviction in every earnest inquirer." Spiritualiam has long been regarded as a heresy by the Church, and a delusion and superstition by Science; yet who knows but out of this very "Nazareth" may come the long-hoped for demonstration of immortality?

SOUTH CAROLINA is a sadly misgoverned State. Knavery and vagabondism are in political ascendancy there, and hold the keys of office. The latest revised list of officials indicted and waiting trial are one governor, three county treasurers, two sheriffs, one school commissioner, one trial justice, twenty-four county commissioneral This does not include the much larger list of officials who deserve indictment and conviction. Verily it would com that, since Federal intervention in State affairs is a doctrine highly orthodox in Washington at present, South Carolina presents an excellent case for Congres-sional and Administrative treatment. But Federal inter-vention appears to mean, in most cases, getting States into difficulty but not getting them out of it.

AND NOW Mr. Beecher has said another startling thing. Recently, in a sermon, he held out that the story of the Garden of Eden was a parable, and that the view that we are held responsible for what Adam and his wife did is so contradictory of God's justice, that no man should regard it but with repugnance. The men, too, he said, who believe that the world was made in six days are brothers of Egyptian mummies, and the mummies are the best men of the two! Only a little while ago he said that it has not been the Church that has preserved re-ligion, but religion that has preserved the Church; and that organized Christianity has been the pooreit part of religion! Really, another Council ought to be called, which should make short work with Brother Bescher.

THE JEWISH element, in the business interests of the city of Richmond, Virginia, is said to be very conspicu-ous and enterprising. Jews occupy many of the largest stores in that portion of the city which has been rebuilt since the war's devastation laid it low, and they contriband the war is deviatation and it low, and iney contrib-nte much to the material prosperity of the former Con-federate capital. Not only pecuniarily, but intellectually and religiously, the Jews are "looking up" in this coun-try, remarkably. We hall the omen! Our "Christian" civilization will be all the better when it becomes more Auman than "Christian;" when all elements of all na-tionalities and religions will combine to make this country-however geographically limited-as large as the world in its mental and moral sympathies and charities.

GORTHE is said, on his death-bed, to have uttered these words: "More light! More light!" This is what the real truth-seeker is always saying, living or dying. No man, not a dogmatist, supposes that he has at any time all possible light upon any subject; he never presumes, for instance, that he knows certainly either that there is or is not a God, that immortality is a truth or a fiction. Belief in what are called "spiritual things" is largely a matter of temperament and education; but a truly liberal man will believe or not believe in all modesty, well knowing that it becomes him not to dogmatize on any point where demonstration is, and ever may be, lacking. Yet he is always desiring, and always grateful for, "more light" on any and every subject, let it come from whatsoever source it may.

THE SECOND RADICAL CLUB are to have their Picnic, next Sunday the 28th, on the banks of the Charles River near Waltham. The members are invited to bring their baskets of refreshments, which a common table will receive. Buildings are on the ground sufficient to prote the entire company, in case of rain. The excursion will be by cars and boat. Cars leave Fitchburg depôt at 9:45 A.M., and 1 P.M. Return from Waltham at 6 P.M. Tickets for the round trip are, for adults, sixty cents; children, thirty cents. Tickets may be obtained at this office, or at the Fitchburg station after 9 of clock on Sun-day. The wives and children of members are to go along; also invited friends. The "good time coming," it is expected, will be found to have arrived with this occa-

THE TIME of "Vacations" is near at hand. Schoolteachers worn out with much teaching, and scholars equally worn out with being much taught; men weary of confinement in stores, offices, and shops; women op-pressed with home cares and duties; clergymen exhausted with the strain of pulpit and vestry labors, and church-goers crammed to repletion with an over-dose of preaching and praying,-all are beginning to look with longing to the season of respite and emancipation, when they may slip off the harness of labor and the burden of routine and monotony, and flee away to the cool breezes of the sea, the bracing air of the mountains, the refreshing of summer scenes and occupations in the country, where they shall have a better chance to get at God's blessing and at Nature's divine serenity and prace. We are heartily glad that they can go; and we give them each and all our best wishes for a good and beantiful, a reviving and happy, time!

BOSTON, MASS., THURSDAY, JUNE 25, 1874.

LIST OF LIBERAL LEAGUES.

 LOUDS, MO.-M. A. McCord, President; P. A. Lofgreen, L. La Grille, Secretaries.
 Boerow, Mass.-F. & Abbot, President; J. P. Titcomb, G. A. Bacon, Secretaries.
 JEWERSON, OLIO.-W. H. Crowell, President; A. Giddings, BAYEBOON, OBIO.-W. H. Crowen, a second state of the second state of the second state of the second state of the second second second state of the second sec tary. INELAND, N. J.-John Gage, President; Sue M. Clute, Socratary. VINE Secretary. JUNGTIONVILLE, NEB.-J. W. Eastman, President; B. L. Easley, Secretary. OLATHE, KAM.-S. B. S. Wilson, President; H. A. Griffin, Secretary. DETROIT, MICH.-W. R. HIL, President; A. T. Garretson, Secretary. Bartela, Mich., Mich., A. G. Eastman, President; F. R. Encould, Socretary. Coccols, MC.-R. F. Thompson, President; M. Eoderick, Secretary. F. G. Barker, President; C. Rhodes, Secretary. Bartis, Wis.-President, J. D. Walters; Secretary, E. M. Bridgman. Washinoron, D.C. - George M. Wood, Fresident; J. E. Crawford, Scoretary. AUBURN, OHIO, -John Fish, Fresident; G. W. Barnes, Treas-MINNEAPOLIS, MINN.-President, J. B. Bassett; Secretary, Anton Grethen. NEW YOBR, N.Y.-J. B. Brown, President; D. M. Bennett, Secretary. ST. JOSEPH, MO.-P. V. Wise, President; T. H. Kennedy, Secretary. EAU CLAIDS, WIS.-President, S. J. Dickson; Secretary, W. Kennedy. BALDEG, NED.-President, T. Gray; Secretary, W. Allen. New ORLEANS, LA.-President, E. Vorster; Secretary, J. E. Wallace. Bay Crry, Mion.-President, S. M. Green; Secretary, S. M. Johnson.

CLEABFIELD, PA.-S. Widemire, President; H. Hoover,

Dr. Carpenter at Sion College; 02 THE VIEW OF MIRACLES TAKEN BY

MEN OF SOLENCE.

REPRINTED FROM & TRACT PUBLISHED BY THOMAS SOOTT, ZBQ., IN LONDON.

The following correspondence originated from the sending to a divinity professor the copy of a notice which appeared in Tus INDEX, a short time shoc, of on "The Reign of Law," particularly in relation to the efficacy of prayer, before an audience two-thirds been taken to the notice referred to by some who were resent at the meeting, on the ground that it was not strictly accurate, it may be well to give the reader an authoritative summary of the doctor's line of thought, by way of introduction to the general discussion of officials of Sion College. It may just be premised, further, that while the lecture went to show that which acqueres, that no evidence exists of the officials of Sion College. It may just be premised, further, that while the lecture went to show that a sequence, that no evidence exists of the prayer. Dr. Carpenter left his heleast at of the further, and interfaces being in the least stread by rayer. Dr. Carpenter left his heleast at the time, the source of physical Nature ever having been there while a sequence. The any cause whatsoever, the latter principle underlies the whole argument of the latter principle underlies the principle underlies the structure of it, to be incompatible with the occurrence of physical miracle; and the investigation of this the physica

b) principle will be chiefly kept in view by the present writer.
Dr. Carpenter began by expressing his entire agreement with Dr. Chalmers and other theologians, who have known what science means, in regarding "the laws of Nature" as simply our expressions of the uniformities observable in the phenomena of the uniformities of our action in the world proceeds upon the assumption of this uniformity; and whilst he did not question that the Deity could depart from that the scheme of creation." argued Dr. Carpenter, "has been devised with a view to the highest happiness and welfare of God's creatures, any departure from that scheme must be for the torse. And so, if I ask God for something that I think would be better for me, it must be at the expense (even supposing that I should really be the better for it) of God would shrink from importunity of God would shrink from importunity of any change that he may desire for himself; just as much as a child who trusts implicitly in the wisdom and affection of an earthly father will abstain from importuning him, when told that what he asks would be bad for him."
"To importune God for any departure from his uniform tourse of action seems to me tantamount to the phenomene."

be bad for him." "To importune God for any departure from his uniform course of action seems to me tantamount to saying either that we know better than he does what is good for us, or that, knowing that his way is best in the end, we prefer the immediate gratification of our own selfish desires." "In earlier times, pestilences were supposed to be punishments inflicted by the vengeance of an of-fended Deity, who was to be propitiated by prayers and sacrifices. Now, we regard them as the result of habitual violations of the laws which God enables us to read in the course of Nature; and when such occur, we set ourselves to find out the misdoing and endeav-or to correct is."

to read in the course of Nature; and when such occur, we set ourselves to find out the misdoing and endeav-or to correct it." The doctor then narrated a very remarkable case, which occurred at Baltimore in the cholera epidemic of 1849. "Though the poor house," he said, "was supposed to have been free from any special liability to its attack, and there was no prevalence of cholera in the town, yet at two or three miles' distance from Baltimore, and in an open, salubrious situation, there was a most fearful outbreak in this poor-house, thirty dying in a day out of about eight hundred. This was traced to a defect of drainage, which was at once rectified, and immediately the plague was stayed." With reference to this Dr. Carpenter asked: "Does any gentieman in this room believe that, if all Baltimore had gone down on its knees for a week, God would have been moved to avert the visitation?" His argument was that, "in regard to the course of Nature, it is for the man of science to study the uni-formities of the Divine action, and to bring down his own into accordance with it." He drew, however, "a broad line between the action of Deity in the phys-ical universe and his spiritual agency on the mind of man." "The religious experience of ages," he said, "sanctions the idea that prayer for enlightenment to know the will of God, and for strength to enable us to do or bear it, has an effect—how or why we cannot tell," and to this view he gave his entire assent. "Such prayer," he maintained, "is in accordance with the deepest religious institucts, and is expressed in the noblest passages of sacred literature." "But, in regard to the work of life," he contended "that iaborare (on the highest principles of action) est orar." One clergyman said, at the close of the lecture, that if Dr. Carpenter's position were correct he might ordre." One clergyman said, at the close of the lecture, that if Dr. Carpenter's position were correct he might as well shut up his church. He said: "I ask God for things I want, and I expect to get them." But this did not seem the general impression, which was, that "prayer does not change the course of Nature, but that, in the ordination of Divine Providence, prayer is a condition of our obtaining what we ask."

prayer is a condition of our obtaining what we ask." In a letter written afterwards by Dr. Carpenter to a friend, containing comments on this latter view of prayer, he says: "This is as much as to say that if we did not ask we should not receive (yet we are told that material blessings are bestowed alike on the just and the unjust, on the thankful and the unthankful). I should call this the mechanical theory of prayer. It puts us in the condition of children just learning to talk, who are made to say "Ta!" for a cake or a sweetie; and it seems to me to lower the spiritual value of prayer to the material, instead of raising the material to the spiritual—or, as Miss Cobbe said to me, to bring God down to us, instead of trying to lift ourselves to God."

ourselves to God." "Mr. Lleweilyn Davies expressed his general ac-cordance with me; and I had subsequent communi-cations from other clergymen to the same effect. I believe that liberal and thoughtful men generally would accept these conclusions, if not trammelled by the letter of Scripture. Many have revolted at the parables of the unjust judge, and the importunate widow, and of the friend who yields to importunity what he will not give to friendship, as conveying a low idea of the Divine Fatherhood. Their best in-terpretation has, I think, been given by Robert Coll-yer (of Chicago), in an admirable sermon entitled Knocking at the Gate of Heaven,—their lesson being that nothing good or great can be got without persevering effort."

Letter from the Rev. Dr. ____, Professor of Theology, to Mr. ____.

- COLLEGE, 14 March, 1874.

MY DEAR MR. M-

—— COLLEGE, 14 March, 1874.
MY DEAR MR. M—————
If the report [from THE INDEX] of which you have kindly sent me a copy be correct, ... there must have been a most melancholy exhibition of bigotry, narrowness, and fanaticism... What a god in knowledge Dr. Carpenter must be to be able to use such words as: "Nature represents a kingdom of orderly evolution which has never been inwaded by anything preternatural or supernatural; and all liturgles, litanles, collects, and prayers that were ever uitered never have influenced — never could influence — the course of this universe, nor mankind, nor a single individual in the slightest degree."<sup>8</sup>
Do you really think Dr. Carpenter knows the entire history of Nature and humanity from the beginning down to this time so exactly as to be able of knowl-edge to affirm that? If he do not, such a statement, scientifically considered, is the product either of ignorance or fanaticism. If this be what is called "truth, whatever be the consequences," the so-called scientists are as self-deluded as they are fanatical—viewed from the point of view of sober science. The paper you have sent has supplied me with another proof that there are no men more narrow and incapable of reasoning outside their own limited department than the "scientists." They are constantly protesting against metaphysics, philosophy, faith, etc., and yet they are perpetually making a system of the universe out of the wee bit of earch to which they have devoted special attention. Speaking solely from the projenter sare as unscientific and fanatical as the crudest assertions ever enunciated by a preacher. Inte Dr. Carpenter's are as unscientific and fanatical as the crudest assertions ever enunciated by a preacher. There is now far more real scientific sobriety and caution in believing than in unbelieving circles. Fa-naticism is fast becoming—as has been foretold—the specially of those who do not believe. Excuse me ex-pressing myself plainly. I do so as a thinking man, not as a Christian teacher. Wishing that you yourself may soon again pass from darkness to the true light of life in Christ, I am, etc.,

• These words are cited from the notice in THE INDEE.

Letter from Mr. M- to Dr. -B-, 19 March, 1874. MY DEAR DR. - ment" respecting "the will of God" and "strength to do or bear it." Now one point is clear. Dr. Carpenter practically recognizes interference with the uniform operation of the laws of Nature as a conception at variance with the perfect wisdom and beneficence he would atti-bute to the Deity; for he says in his own account of the lecture written to a correspondent: "If the whole scheme of creation has been devised with a view to the highest welfare of God's creatures, any depar-ure from that scheme must be for the worse." In this view I entirely concur, notwithstanding the epithets with which you gratuitously bespatter the lecturer present, their uneasiness under the statements to which they listened is far from unaccountable. They are not accustomed to be contradicted by their people, and perhaps many of them had not imagined that it was possible for their fond traditions and de-yout faith in the miraculous to receive so rude a shock from the inexorable conclusions of science. Such conclusions tended to disturb their faith, which is usually felt by them to be consoling and atrong in proportion sa it is not subjected to the test of biatoric is usually felt by them to be consoling and strong in proportion as it is not subjected to the test of historic criticism and to the anti-supernatural analyses of hamelessiy practised and justified because calculated to dvance the material and external interests of the Christian faith. A hundred years from the death of the oldest apostie was surely a sufficiently long apace-under such lax ideas of honesty as then pre-valled among Christian writers-to bring to maturity a considerable crop of fictitious narratives; and it is will known that tales of this kind abounded in those times, respecting Jeaus and his immediate followers. A distinguished Church of England theologian writes: "Books, countless in number, were written [in post-apostolic times], professing to give a history of seus and his apostles. The authorship of these was attributed to Christ himself, or to some of his apostles and their companions; our four gospels were subsy selected ? When were they selected? Why were they selected? Let Mosheim answer these guestions. "As to the time when, and the persons by whom, the books of the New Testament were collected into one books of the New Testament were collected into one books of the learned; for the subject is attended with present and incepticable difficulties to us of these latter ince."" do not occur till the time of Irenœus (A.D. 180), Clement of Alexandris (A.D. 220), and Origen (A.D. 280). The accepted doctrine of the New Testament, as containing a supernatural revelation, then, seems simply "to have had its origin in tradition for at least the first hundred and seventy years of the Chris-tian era; for the following one hundred and thirty years if was a matter of speculation, among men whose ignorance was only equalled by their supersti-tions credulity; and, finally, it was decreed to be a divine truth by a majority of votas in one of those urbulent assembiles of bishops, which too often had to be dispersed by military force, after terrible rlot-ing, which was sometimes attended with bloodshed." Until the third Council of Carthage (A.D. 307), nu-merous gospels and epistles were in circulation and use among the Christians, all claiming equally to be of inspired authority. By the bishops assembled at that Council a catalogue of the books to be chosen and recognized as canonical was drawn up and passed, because found to serve best the ends of the heological party then in power. All other books that seemed to clash with the dogmas of this ruling party were promptly burned. I. After much episcopal wrangling at the Council on the subject, the number of gospels to be included in the Canon was limited to four, with the consent of the majority of the blabops, for the following ingenious reason, which proved to be irresistibly conclusive to their Orthodox mindal reasen usar exported to have said, two centuries be-fore : "It is impossible that there acculd have been more or less than four. For there are four climates, and four cardinal winds, and the church is spread origen the Whole earth; but the gospel is the pillar and foundation of the Church, and its breath of life. The Church, therefore, was to have four pillars, blowing immortality from every quarter, and giving life to more sites and forty or fourscore: Tet on the foundation of this arbitrary, conflicting, orthodox friends expect Dr. Carp the miracles ascribed to Jesus and his colleagues; and fontician" because he rejects all pask accounts of miracles as improbable. We, who are called railonation, to introduce and interpolation, were such to individual or sentine (1) because there does not exist in support of religions miracles, or any other sort of miracles, any proof to satisfy a mind free ontering interpolation of the satisfy a mind free ontering interpolation and interpolation, were all the sort of miracles, any proof to satisfy a mind free out will be all the sort of miracles of the satisfy and individual or setting into a setting into the satisfy and individual or setting in the satisfy andividual or setting in the satisfy and the satisf rave disadvantage of being encompassed by no ster-oniarge human thought and inspire a lood and whole-some love of "truth, regardless of consequences"!!! Thare steen, is my time, a good deal of philosoph-"experience," as used by Hume in relation to the subject of miracles. But I have yet to find the di-lemma in which that philosopher put ble suppernatu-ralist critics effectually answered by them. "It is more probable (said he) that human testimony should be faise than that a miracle should be true," or as false repeats Hume's objection: "It is contrary to experience that a miracle should be true," or as false repeats Hume's objection: "It is contrary to experience that a miracle should be true, but not con-trary to experience that it estimony should be false." This objection to miracles advanced by Hume before science had, has never been really confused by theolo-gy, but, on the other hand, has been confirmed by the ever-acumulating verifies of science. Both on the principles, then, of true philosophy-the philosophy of science, and on the princi-ples of scholarly, historical criticism, the fairly intelli-gent mild of our day, apart from traditional preju-ultes of scholarly, historical criticism, the fairly intell-ultes, cannot but have a predisposition to trust the order of the universe as an uniform whole, and as all-umition the principles, then, of true philosophy-ray history asys nothing, and of whom contempo-ray history asys nothing, and of whom contempo-terms and hole neuron the vertified? when any class of men maintain that our escape from ternal misery or our reception of yague and unvertifiable allegation about events avowedly contrary to the known they of Na happiness How di of eternal power, mother of all order, security, and happiness." How different this view from the persistent at-tempts of the guardians of ecclesiastical interests ev-erywhere, who can with difficulty be got to apeak kindly of the most disinterested and reverent at-tempts to unreli the operation of natural law, unless the scientific student happen to profess unquestion-ing belief in their metaphysical speculations at the same time. It has rather been the habit of Ortho-doxy to refer to the framework of life around us as God-forsaken, or as containing, at best, a cold, marred, distant, and unsatisfying revelation of the First Cause; and this disposition of prietas to under-value revelations of universal law through science has usually been associated with a tendency on their part to be most dogmatic and earnest about things that are most inscrutable—most confident in their hair-eplitting definitions of what is most indefinable. One of your ablest theological colleagues, I remember some time ago, charged diabelievers in his view of

<text>

Coogle

* Ecclesiastical History, vol. 1., p. 93. Art. Smith's Dictionary of the Bible, vol. 11., p. 506. 1 Draper's History of the Intellectual Development of Eu-ope, vol. 1., pp. 301-302.

mannin Google

303

304

The supernatural with "imprisoning God within a vast and immovable system of natural laws." A strange and, I fear I must say, an ungrateful conception for any man to have of the system of the universe as based upon law,—so constant, progressive, and infinite in its evolutions. Might we not, with some propriety, reply: "Orthodox theologians have imprisoned God in a narrow creed, and represented him as if he were a mere impersonation of dogmatic theology, or a president of an eccleaisatical assembly?" Any one who considers the movements of the hinghty as unnaturally restrained because directed by invariable laws indicates a state of mind very becoming, perhaps, a retained connsei defending a case in which he has some substantial interest; but, in my indgment, neither philosophical nor religions. The very principle of undeviating uniformity which you and your friends oppose the loftiest scientific minds units in acknowledging to be the highest mark of infite wisdom and goodness. Without it prudent forethought in the conduct of human affairs would be impossible. Have you ever been conscious of any experience, material, intellectual, or epiritani, that can be proved to be above and beyond the direction of fixed natural law? Your birth, your education, your preligious convictions, the influences you have exercted and received in your intercourse with your fellow-rotal law? And have you felt the more on that account your legitimate freedom and happiness influences in the sperience, in these respects, upon an infinite scale, form some idea (remote, I admit, but sufficiently dies for the purpose of the present argument) of the the free two enquiles drow, of natural law, upon coöperation, when which the true regeneration of churchism has any endit way as the religion of churchism have heids, if the principles of natural morality head any sheld sway as the religion of churchism have heids, if accence and beyond the sphere of thomeselves less shout what is beyond the sphere of whom some ides gradution; better sanitary regi the supernatural with "imprisoning God within a wast and immovable system of natural laws." A hetters, a livelier sense of mutual obligations between capital and labor, between the governing and alloc, between the governing and stored uncolled. All others, and a worther allocation of research and severe presents and a worther allocation of research and severe presents and severe the severe and a worther and obligation of used. An overlap and the severe presents and the severe and th

The series of the series and the series of t

IS74: it include saying to one's mother, when she has failed to appreciate him, "Woman, what have I to do with thee? Mine hour is not yet come"? Does it mean that we are to tell women of other districts, when they ask for our benevolence, "It is not meet to lake the meat of the children and cast it to the dog"? Does it include that we are to exercise our powen to destroy two hundred swine belonging to an unoffend-ing man? Or does it mean that we are to be so little the friends of tamperance as to produce two hundred gallons of good whe for our guests "after they have al-ready well drunk"?" Whatever view, therefore, we take of "life in Christ," we shall meet with grave difficulties in forming a clear and definite idea of what it means; and that consideration, if there were no other, is sufficient to show that areligion soerten-ficting interpretations, was never intended to be as an organized and a storeotyped system the supreme, final, and exhaustive revealably environd that I undervalue the elevated tone of spirituality and con-secration attributed to Jesus in the goepel. He, it all events, seems, above most, to have lived up to his lights. Human life is incalculably enriched by many of the sayings and doings ascribed to him in the New Testament. But as far as these sayings are wise and good, they contain nothing original; and as far as the doings are noble and historically true, they are not without parallel. There is something even hroader and more in harmony with the devout and cultured aspirations of humanity, as a whole, than "life is ind teachere necessary to the full discipline and development of my intellect, conscience, heat, and will; but while profoundly grateful for the instru-tions of all great and good mee, I bind myself to as-cept implicitly and without qualification the teach-ing of none. Under the guidance of the best judy-ment and sense I can command, I a trive to discrimi-mate and arrive at a just conviction. The higher lights of the ninetements century enable me to see de-ferets in ment and sense I can command, I strive to discrimi-nate and arrive at a just conviction. The higher lights of the nineteenth century enable me to see de-fects in the utterances and conduct of the greatest sages of antiquity which their standard of things-necessarily vague-preclude them from detecting. I believe in the gradual evolution of knowledge, and the gradual uplifting of the race in every department, through human agency and in harmony with fixed law. Owing to the natural limitation of men's facel-ties, right views in one direction will be mixed up with wrong views in another direction, in the most valuable contributions to human enlightenment and progress. But assertion, hypothesis, and theory in the valuable contributions to human enlightenment and progress. But assertion, hypothesis, and theory in the advancement of knowledge are slitted and improred upon by successive great minds from age to age, and thus the revelation of law, in its manifold applica-tions, goes on; man's recognition of the vital impor-tance of law is quickened and deepened, and the gen-eral improvement of mankind is the result. Life, ac-cording to the most philosophical understanding and practice of law in its varied relations and bearings, is a far more healthful, rational, and useful kind of life than the "life" which is limited by what was thought, said, or done by "Christ," or by any other single man, be he are no great or good. be he ever so great or good. Yours, &c., M. M.

[For THE INDEL.] ANOTHER OF PRESIDENT ELIOTS HIS-TAKES.

"We are living at a time which will hereafter be known as a remarkable period of many and great endowments. ... These endowments are doing good work for the present generations to come. Tet there is in the public mind jealousy of endowments, as if they did harm, or threatened to become harmful. We have not waited to be hurt, but have cried out with apprehensions of hort." -Kee frestient Elito's didress, quoted in The INDER of June 11, p. 281.) The last represent mean the second structure to the

The last remark may be true of this country. Being the series of address, quoted in The Instead of June 1, 281.] The last remark may be true of this country. Being to reigner, comparatively unacquainted with first or and institutions, we do not pretend to dispute the series of the workings of an original to a series of the workings of an original to a series of the workings of an original to a series of the workings of an original to a series of the workings of a feet pricked with shame for the doings of his country in series of the workings of the series of the workings of the series of the workings of the working of the series of the workings of the series of the workings of the series of the series of the workings of the series of the series of the series of the workings of the series of the series proved. Are the thinking portion of the English people quite in the wrong in this matter, or has President Eliot not fully considered all the bearings of the case?

* The Impossibility of Knowing what is ( hristianity, p. 12.

Google

<text><text><text>

EXTRACTS FROM A SPRECH BY REV. M. J. SAVAGE,

AT THE UNITABIAN FESTIVAL, BOSTON, MAY 27.

AT THE UNITABIAN FESTIVAL, BOSTON, MAY 27. AT THE UNITABIAN FESTIVAL, BOSTON, MAY 27. It was not waiting for the applause; I was waiting for so how many of you would do just as I should if here down there; that is, get up and go. I hope them if do say that I get fearfully tired of hearing pople talk; the great wonder with me, as a minister, here it do say that I get fearfully tired of hearing pople talk; the great wonder with me, as a minister, here it do say that I get fearfully tired of hearing pople talk; the great wonder with me, as a minister, here it do say that I get fearfully tired of hearing pople talk; the great wonder with me, as a minister, here it do say that I get fearfully tired of hearing pople talk; the great wonder with me, as a minister, here it do say that I get fearfully tired of hearing pople talk; the great wonder with me, as a minister, here work it do say that the the sone with a lat; but pople talk; the great wonder here in this hall; but here wonder the string just as short as possible. I with the lates of the string just as short as possible. I with the lates of the string just as short as possible. I with the lates of the string just as short as possible. I with the lates of the string just as short as possible. I with the lates of the past is but a history of here and of the string just as short as possible. I with the whole history of the past is but a history of here and so there to night, the world has tried, over here wonder here to night, the world has tried, or what and were again, to build itself some stable foundation to reare again, to build itself some stable foundation to shifteren something better than they have yet and set them additioner more. The mill pardon me to night if I speak of a per-ter and matter, because it is more forcible illustration.

lion of this idea that I can think of. I do not know that any of you have heard of it; it is a secret to a large part of the world, judging by the number of conversion tary ear ago (I do not speak to-night in the interest of the publishers; I hope you will not take it as an advertisement), and the papers all over the conntry—such papers, will of them, until I became a Unitarian, thought the book was good Orthodoxy; they endored it all over an advertisement, and elear through. I was an emper of the Orthodox Church at the ilme the book was printed; but THE KINEX, here in Boston, came out and reviewed it, and as I read that review, it fairly took my breakt waws. It is made the statement, to me vary starling, that the essential idea of Christianity which was precisely identical with the idea of Christianity which was precisely identical with the idea of Christianity which was precisely identical with the idea of Christianity which was held and taugit thirty years ago in this city by Theodore Parker. I had preached against him agreest deal. (Laughter, ) I wont on the principle of Sydney Smith. You will remember that old storr, how a friend came in one day, and found him writing a review of a book; and he saked him if he had read it. He said, No, he had never read Theodore Parker; and, I may as well confess it, my training had been usch that I hardly dared to read him, because even if what I read had secured reasonable to me, and I had diffed out into the advent it. I have secure at home now with very sever demunciations of him in it. I am going to furne above. I used to preach against him, and preach had, is also in the site with the idea is one with very save demunciations of him in it. I am going to burn it after I get bordow. This is not an inspiration from above. I used to preach against him, and preach against him set world have the orthodox papers of the country though was good Orthodox in 1872-4 was thought bad hereey enough to be kicked out of Unitarianian infinity. If we world, in a set we could are dive

THE Church Herald takes a glowing view of our condition. It thinks that the cause of Christianity does not advance; that the material progress upon which we pride ourselves is tending daily more and more to keep God out of our sight, until he is all but clean forgotten in the world. Never since England was Christian was he so entirely ignored as now. In-fidelity increases, and brings in its train a levelling democracy, which threatens to engulf our remaining institutions. The Herald thinks that the only way to stem this tide of evil is to reassert the principles of Catholicism and Toryism; and though it believes itself to be alone amongst English newspapers, it is determined to continue in the good work.—London Graphic. Graphic.

THERE IS A GOOD story of a little boy who, going into a bookstore with his mother, crept up to the juvenile of the establishment with the sly query, "Say, have you got any books for boys that ain't got any religion in 'em ?"

Hoetry.

(For THE INDER.)

TRINGS HARD TO BEAR. BY MRS. D. H. CLARK.

The changing into dust of the old faces (Hapity a baby's, sweet to look upon)— (Hapity a baby's, sweet to look upon)— (The sounds of singing in their empty places, While the gay laughter of the world goes on, And heeds not they are gone!

Dashes of winter rain in torrents cruel, Out in the dark night, on a little grave, The close-scaled casket of our unpriced jewel, Which we with moaning to the chill earth gave, And bade our hearts be brave!

The faded violet of a bygone summer,

Whose pale leaves, starting into sudden view, Becall the rifled sweets—the careless comer, Who prized it only for its challoed dew; Then left the flower—and you!

Hoping 'gainst hope, for dead Love's resurrection, Slain by the pride whose mourning comes too late; The bitter yearning for the lost affection, Which flows not back-although we weep and wait,-Beating against our fate!

The gulf impassable we may not lessen By one truth-telling glance,—one faintest word Or sigh! The schooled pulse, the dumb repressio Of the soul's music, which must not be heard, Though all its deeps be stirred,-

Though all its chords be swept in smothered walling! Saddeat of all, the lapsing to dull clay Of that which formed our idols! Unavailing The wild regret for what has passed away— The gold that shifts to gray!

NORTHUMBERLAND, Pa.

NEW SUBSCRIPTIONS TO INDEX STOCK.

Mrs. F. W. Christern, Richard B. Westbrook	New York City,	One al	hare,	$100 100
R. C. Spencer,	Milwaukee, Wis.	Therein		200
R. W. Howes,		Two
Chas. W. Story,	Boston, Mass.	One		100
Guns. W. Buory,	Boston, Mass.			100
E. W. Meddaugh,	Detroit, Mich.	Five		500
Jacob Hoffner,	Cumminsville, O.	One		100
John Welas,	Boston, Mass.	44	-94	100
W. C. Russel,	Ithaca, N. Y.	44	4	100
A. W. Leggett,	Detroit, Mich.	44	44	100
B. F. Dver.	Boston, Mass.		41	100
James Purinton.	Lynn, Mass.		- 44	100
F. A. Nichols,	Lowell, Mass,		44	100
J. S. Palmer,	Portland, Me.		- 44	100
Robt. Ormiston,	Brooklyn, N.Y.		44	108
Mrs. A. L. Richmond,	Lowell, Mass,			100
Mrs. Benj. Ireson,	Lynn, Mass.	44		100
J. E. Oliver,	Lynn, mass.
J. B. Oliver,	Ithaca, N.Y.			160
E. H. Aldrich,	Providence, R.I.			100
Geo, L. Clark,	Providence, R.I.	41	44	109
W. M. Jackson,	Providence, R.I.	Two		206
Mrs. E. B. Chase,	Valley Falls, R.I.		40	108
L. F. Garvin,	Lonsdale, R.I.	One		100
James Damon,	Ipswich, Mass.	"	44	100
Joseph A. Barker,	Providence, R.I.	#6		100

CASH RECEIPTS.

FOR THE WELK ENDING JUNE 20

NOE THE WERE ENDING JUNE 20.
C. B. Thompson, $1; J. Jackson, $2; M. E. Martin, 50 ets.; M. L. Commings, $3; A. Miller, $350; H. W. Beach, $35 Chauncy Morse, $1,50; Dyer D. Lum, $4; Chas. Fritz, $3; E. B. McKenzle, $1,50; Theodore Weile, $4; Caroline B. Kingman, $5; H. B. Bestwick, $3; F. H. Cooper, $6; L. Kingma, $4; Rufus Tucker, $3; James Ruddle, $3,20; H. Molineaux, $1; Calvin Griswold; $3; L. F. C. Garvin, $3; W. C. Kelley, $3; M. A. Patrick, $1; John Lamden, 75 ets.; Henry N. Webb, $60 ets.; Laura M. Fleming, $1,16; Jacob Beede, $1; J. F. Johnston, 50 ets.; Marcus T. Janes, $3; Jahas Elverson, $1,00; Wm. Hazelwood; $1; Andrew Ash-ton, $3; John Whitaker, $3; S. F. Shaw, $1,25; Chas. E. Fratt, $3; E. S. Elder, $60 ets.; O. S. Barr, 10 ets.; $60, M. Wood, 50 ets.; W. Wickesham, 20 ets.; W. R. Gray, 50 ets.; U. W. Billingsley, 50 ets.; N. F. Halloweil, $1,12; Kobt. Mor-rison, 60 ets.; Alex. Risk, 50 ets.; J. Shema, $1,28; C. Tow-era, $1,50; B. F. Underwood, $2; J. T. Dickens, $9,75; J. Merritt, $1.

Merrits, $1. All receipts of cash will be acknowledged as above, and no other receipt aent unless apecially requested. Persons who do not see their renittances acknowledged within three works after sending, will please notify us. N. B.-Please remit by post-office money-order, by regis-tered letter, or by draft on Boston or New York. Chocks on interior banks are liable to discount, and the term of subscription will be proportionally shortened in the credit. N. B.-When writing about a former remittance, alwaya give the date of such remittance as exactly as possible. N. B.-Blease examine the ADDEFSS and DATE on TONE

N. B.-Please examine the ADDRESS and DATE on your INDEX mail-tag, and report at once any error in either.

RECEIVED.

- HECCHVED. Paraphere and Periodicale. Standard Residence of the second standard sta

二、二日本のないのに、二日本の日本日本

NAT OF

三日日に

0:3 471. inge Ene

SEC: 2 日田の大学

12 -Te -

語行の法

行い

R

11

305

The Inder.

THE INDEX ASSOCIATION,

NO. 1 TREMONT PLACE, BOSTON. Toledo Office: No. 35 Morroz STREET, Julius T. Frey, Agent and Clerk.

THE INDEX accepts every result of science and sound learning, without seeking to harmonize it with the Bible. If recognizes no authority but that of reason and right. It believes in Truth, Freedom, Progress, Equal Rights, and Brotherly Love.

Brotherly Lore. N. B.—No writer in THE INDEX, editorial or otherwise, is responsible for anything published in its columns except for his or her own individual statements. Editorial contributions will in every case be distinguished by the name or initials of the writer.

BOSTON, JUNE 25, 1874.

SUNDAY LECTURES.-The Editors of THE INDEX will ecture occasionally on Sundays, if desired, within a convenient distance of Boston.

N.B.—Any person whose name is now on our mail-list will receive a second copy of THE IN-DEX, mailed to the same address, for a year, on pre-payment of One Dollar. This offer is made to accommodate those of our subscribers who wish to increase our circulation by sending extra copies as samples to their friends.

GLIMPSES.

"METHODISM might be shortly defined as "hysterical Christianity."

"IN NEW YORK CITY there are more than sixty thousand children of the school age who never enter a schoolhouse of any kind." So says the Liberal Christian. It is greatly to be hoped that the new "Compulsory Education Act" will prove to be something better than a dead-letter law.

WHEN A MINISTER prayed the Lord, at a prayermeeting, to keep him "humble and poor," his deacon responded in the next prayer as follows: "O Lord, if thou wilt keep him humble, we'll keep him poor!" The human intellect fares no better in the hands of the Church, which in fact has no way of keeping it humble except by keeping it poor.

MR. MORRIS EINSTEIN, in a very pleasant letter, says he has "overhauled his numbers of THE INDEX from January 1 to this last number" without discovering a single passage favoring the "praying crusade;" and he makes a very handsome acknowledgment of his mistake in supposing that we favored it. When a misunderstanding is so frankly and honorably corrected, it is almost a pleasure to be misunderstood!

MR. DEXTER A. HAWKINS, author of the admirable Report on Compulsory Education which was republished in THE INDEX several weeks ago, drafted the bill on that subject which has recently become a law in New York State. His Report caused floods of petitions for compulsory education to be poured into the Assembly at Albany, which drowned out the objections of the conservatives. Mr. Hawkins is a public benefactor of a high order.

A CORBESPONDENT of the Boston Investigator of June 8 complains of Mr. Connor for making no mention of "Infidels and Atheists," in enumerating at the Free Religious Convention the supporters of the Florence society. The answer of Mr. Seaver, the editor, is a model of good sense and good feeling, and evinces a freedom from captiousness and small carping which several of his contributors would do well to imitate. Mr. Seaver says: "We have to say to our friend, what he probably knew before, that Infidels and Atheists are always in favor of meetings that are free and liberal. This is the case in all places, and Cosmian Hall is no exception. One of its chief officers and as good a man as it can boast of, and there is no better man in the town, is an open and avowed Atheist; while our other subscribers there, who are probably similar in sentiment with himself, are also supporters of the Free Religious Hall. Why Mr. Connor did not allude to the fact, or mention them as well as others, we do not know. Perhaps he forgot it, or there was not sufficient time at the meeting. We can hardly impute the omission to any other Causes."

THE FUTURE OF THEISM.

Those of our readers who have taken any pains to follow our thought regarding the deeper religious questions of the time will not need to be reminded that we see no likelihood of the permanence of theism, as a universal belief of the future, unless the scientific method of thinking, applied with the strictness and exactitude which mark all its applications to the problems of physical science, shall be found to lead naturally to that conclusion. On this point we entertain no doubt whatever. Since authority in all its forms, whether as exemplified by the Christian reliance on an external revelation or by the intuitional reliance on an internal revelation, has wholly ceased to retain the allegiance of the strongest and clearest intellects of the age, nothing remains in the nature of things but the appeal to free reason, dealing directly with all the authenticated facts of existence as the only legitimate grounds of religious opinion. In other words, the method of the Church has failed; the method of intuitional or transcendental philosophy has failed; and their failure must sooner or later be the failure of theism, unless the method of science shall prove to be more successful than these collapsed methods of the past. It is high time for theists, if they hold their theism as an infinitely precious possession of mind and heart, to discern the signs of the age, and address themselves in live earnest, with all their intellectual energy, to the task of grappling with the real difficulties of their situation. Among those who are agreed, the restless and disquieting endeavor to pry into the grounds of belief may be waived by common consent, or even repressed in Its outward manifestations; but the great thinking world is not agreed, and there never was a time when this endeavor was more determined or irrepressible. Such a battle over the fundamental ideas of religious faith as the history of thought cannot parallel is now imminent,-nay, is already upon us; and, for one, instead of shrinking from it (as many do) with dismay and alarm, we hall it with joy as the inevitable precursor of a new, stable, and general theistic conviction. As we wrote eight years ago, in the now discontinued Christian Examiner : "Theism and atheism are in the scales, and science holds the balance." The experience of these later years has only confirmed this interpretation of the times. We deprecate the sluggishness or timidity of those who profess to be deeply convinced of the truth of theism, yet compel a doubt of their own professions by not lifting a finger in its defence, and by keeping up the old cry of "hands off !" when those who see its danger grasp it boldly to prevent its fall. This fetichistic tenderness for an idea which, like every other, is a natural product of the human mind, will bring upon it the fate of all other fetiches In a thinking age, unless theists come out of their shells and plead their case openly before the bar of science. It is easy to say that "God needs no proof," and so shirk the duty of meeting respectfully the rapidly growing doubt of his existence. Of course, no human discussions can affect objective being. But man's belief in God does need proof, as any one knows who ventures to commune sincerely with the active minds of this day. The next generation will have precious little faith in God, unless the present generation discharges its duty to truth better than it is now discharging it. We affirm unequivocally that the future of theism depends on the strength of its argument; and the "heart" will prove itself a sad blunderer, if it now obstructs or embarrasses the "head."

Our confessed belief that the truth of theism is an "open question" for the present generation of religious thinkers has seemed to some to imply that we are a disguised atheist without the "courage of his opinion;" while to others it has seemed to imply that we are a theist who theoretically advocates the scientific method, but inconsistently practises the method of intuitionalism, Both are mistaken. On the contrary, we doubt if any radical of the period can be found who holds to theism more firmly than we do; or who does it with a firmer adhesion to the scientific method, as he understands it. As to the "disguise" question, we have little to say: our readers have by this time had ample opportunity to judge for themselves whether we are one of the reformers that dissemble their real convictions. Nothing that we could now say would change the opinion of any one who ranks us in that estimable class; and we are far too indifferent to his opinion to make the attempt. But, although it is of the smallest possible conse quence to the public what any particular individual thinks on this, that, or the other question, it is of great consequence to know whether it is a fact that one can consistently and in good faith accept the scientific method without thereby abandoning the ballef in theism. If the two are really incompatible, we say explicitly that we should hold to the former at the expense of the latter; for we are more sure of the absolute necessity of the scientific method than we are of the correctness of our own application of it. We mean to be understood : whether science shall lead to theism or to atheism, we go with science unhesitatingly, preferring deliberately the most unwelcome truth to the most charming and consolstory delusion. This deliberate preference, which has now become a fixed principle, gives us confidence that we have not surrendered the rein to sentiment when we purposed to follow reason, and that our theism has really its root in a scientific rather than in an intuitional philosophy of religion.

To all who perceive that the intellectual beliefs of the future must be what the increasing light of knowledge (science) shall necessitate, the main question whether the scientific method really leads to theism is of surpassing interest. What reasons are there for holding the opinion that it does?

To go into an analysis of the religious bearings of scientific discoveries or ideas is beyond the scope of this article; a condensed treatment of that subject is already before the public in the Index Tract entitled "The God of Science." But in a brief general way we desire to point out a few considerations which have weight in our own mind, as indicating that larger and deeper drift of thought which escapes the notice of superficial observers of the age.

1. The great power of theism (as we conceive it). regarded merely as a philosophy of the universe, consists in the fact that it makes the universe a unit, a whole, a cosmos pervaded by one law, one end, one cause. But this is also the unmistakable tendency of science itself. The two seem to lead to undistinguishable conclusions. It is chiefly this common tendency to unite all phenomena in thought, and to find their unity in substantially the same ideas, that satisfies our own mind of the non-existence of a real antagonism between theism and science. Physical science teaches unity of law and of force; and universal science, studying these two in the light of the evolution theory, seems to teach the unity of both inmind. That is, the scientific method, when applied to all facts whatever, leads to conclusions which are essentially theistic.

2. It was inevitable that science should first occupy itself with the visible, the ponderable, the mensura-ble; that is, with matter. But it was also inevitable that the physical sciences should conduct to the social, psychological, and other still more complex sciences, to which the determinations of weight and measure are inapplicable. The method employed, however, is really the same, consisting in the authentication and classification of observed facts, and the discovery of their largest relations by combined induction and deduction. Hence astronomy, chemistry, geology, etc., have been supplemented with sociology, psychology, ethics, the sciences of language, of religion, etc. This necessary progress of investigation from the physical to the mental constitutes one of the "tendencies of modern science" which has not yet received the attention it is entitled to, as an indication of the drift of human thought. These higher sciences must be! far more advanced than at present before the bearings of the scientific method on the mental (theistic) interpretation of Nature can be definitely settled ; yet we have little doubt, judging from the past, that the disproportionate development of the purely physical sciences, which gives a materialistic coloring to the very word science to-day, will be rectified by the growth of the higher mental sciences; and this must have a great effect in counterbalancing the present materialistic influenceof science on thought. While prepared, therefore, to concede that the current of scientific speculation is to-day away from theism, we see a reason for it which appears to have mostly eluded attention; and we consider that the current will inevitably set in the opposite direction, when science itself has become more mature. In other words, we look for a gradual change in the influence of science upon religious thinking, and anticipate that it will become more and more favorable to theistic conclusions.

3. There is another fact which strengthens these anticipations in no small degree. There is a striking coincidence between this tendency of science to advance from the physical to the mental, and the general tendency of civilization at large to lay a more marked emphasis on the higher interests of mankind. The development of material resources now absorbs a chief share of the thought of the civilized world.

306

and will continue for a long time to do so; but humanitarian ideas, nevertheless, are acquiring a greater controlling power in the evolution of society. The spiritual part of man is asserting itself as never be fore; his rights and his duties, the needs of his highar nature, the cultivation of his finer faculties, are making themselves respected and appreciated far more than formerly. Education, literature, art, science, religion, never made such claims as they make to-day, or were so widely recognized to be paramount in importance to the more obtrusive interests of the race. Here, then, is a general tendency towards the emphasis of humanitarianism in its highest sense which closely tallies with the tendency to theism above noted on the part of science, and which thus helps to corroborate it. Whatever tends to bring out the immense spiritual value of man tends also to confirm the spiritual interpretation of Nature; for, man and Nature being no longer regarded as separable, the interests of humanitarianism and of theism are identical. In fact, theism is the humanitarian philosophy of the universe. Whoever reverances human nature most profoundly is most likely to favor the humanitarian or theistic interpretation of Nature as a whole; and vice versa. For it is really one and the same insight which appreciates the spiritual in Nature and in man. Thus one indication of the theistic tendency of science is to be found in the fact that the tendencies of civilization in general are so strongly in the direction of that very humanitarianism of which theism is the natural product.

Such reflections as these might be indefinitely extended, but our space gives out. They will appear vague and unsatisfactory to those who are not accustomed to take bird's-eye views of large movements in thought and in history. But we trust they may prove suggestive to those that incline to study our relation to the great wholes of which we are all a part. If they shall attract the attention of any to the real lause on which the future of theism must depend, the purpose of this article will have been accomnlished.

ABSTINENCE VERSUS MODERATION. WESTON SUPER MARE, May 25, 1874.

To the Editor of The Index:

My dear Sir,-I have noticed in THE INDEX on many occasions remarks unfavorable to teetotalism and to other engagements of total abstinence; but no one has come forward on the opposite side. As I believe a threefold abstinence — from intoxicating drinks, from tobacco and similar narcotics, and from feah-meat-to be of extreme importance to the welfars of all the great communities of Christendom; since also I should account it as of evil augury, if the members of the Free Religious Society collectively oppose such abstinence, —I hope you will allow me to write at moderate length in favor both of abstinence and of societies professing it.

The only topic on the side of what is called "moderation " which I remember in THE INDEX is the general assertion that education ought to teach us to avoid excess, and that this is a higher state than that of abstinence. Such an assertion appears to me totally to mistake the point at issue, and the main facts of society. To fix ideas, take first my own case as one side. From childhood I perceived that neither I nor my brothers and sisters liked any strong drink for its strength, i.e., for its alcohol. I certainly liked sweetened negus or liqueurs with a delicate flavor in spite of the alcohol; but beer, ale, and porter I disliked as bitter and nauseous, and wine as burning. Hence, regarding these drinks as unnatural, I grew up an abstainer, long before temperate societies were heard of, though both my parents drank as other people; but I never in my life at a solitary meal partook of these drinks, except once or twice in village inns, by way of experiment, to see whether ale or beer would quench thirst, in long summer walks. I came to the conclusion that on the contrary it excites thirst. It was long the fashion to drink healths in company, and I was used to make a sham, by largely diluting the wine, and just slpping it; for I had no conscientious scruple as to tasting. I was several times ordered by physicians to take porter or wine; but never found any good from either, and before long left off. When the temperance and testotal movements began, I insisted that I was not a tectotalor, and that, for anything I knew, I might take to wine hereafter; for I then believed the silly aphorism current in the medical faculty, that "wine is the milk of old age." Even after I had been for seven or eight years a member of our political society, the U. K. Ale, which sims to overthrow the existing licensed traffic in intoricating drink, I refused the title teetotaler until the year 1861. Then first I learned the experiments made at Paris by an eminent chemist in company with two physiologists (all wine-drinkers), and their unanimous, decisive conclusion, that alco hol in the stomach disintegrates the gastric juice, srrests digestion, hardens the food, and makes afterdigestion by new gastric juice more difficult; therefore it ought never to be taken with a meal, and ought to be strictly used only as a medicine in the few cases where a wise physician will order it. (In every museum we see how animal fibre is hardened by immersion in spirits.) After this I made sure that I should never need wine in old age as an addition to food, and thought it high time to call myself on principle a testotaler. Surely this was not in me a moral fall; I am not brought on to a lower plane by it.

Next, on the opposite side, is the case of those who unhappily have acquired habits of excess, and are enslaved to intoxicating drink. Immense experience shows that for such persons there is no safety but in total abstinence. The partial indulgence, gratuitous-ly called "moderation," so kindles their desire, and so steals away their resolution, that they are apt not to know how much they are taking. Great numbers of our working classes are necessarily often in contact with drink-shops, and either for "the good of the house" or from the habits of companions are tempted to drink, when no drink is wanted. The uniform and positive testimony of philanthropists who have spent the whole leisure of their lives to convert drunkards is that no convert can be safe, if he even sip the fatal liquor. Even our lexicographer, Dr. Samuel Johnson, whom no one called a drunkard, is reported to have said to a lady: "Madam, I can be abstinent, but I cannot be moderate." I grant to you that this is a lower state than to be capable of drinking one glass without being enticed to more; that is the penalty on having once contracted an unnatural and pernicious taste,-love of the burning liquor. But the individual is elevated in the only way to him practicable; or, if exceptional individuals may be recovered into a normal state, yet certainly the class of drinkers are elevated in the only way safe and sure to themselves as a class. And not only so, but what is more decisive still, total abstinence is the only way by which a corrupt community can recover that natural childish distasts for the liquors which is our best security, and the state of normal man. Universally, it is the highest virtue to be not even tempted by evil, but to disdain it. At present, the bad habits of society transmit the destructive vice by engendering the dangerous taste. After two generations of total abstainers,-after the drink has been put down as sternly in Christendom as in Islam, - a third generation will grow up, wholly free from all evil hankerings; meanwhile public opinion, enforced by law, will crush out the trade which enriches itself by pandering to and intensifying the national vice.

But after this happy consummation, ought the nation to go back to what our opponents complacent-"moderation," and "use," as opposed to ly call abuse,-assuming by such phrases the very point to be proved? Just as much as, and no more than, a nation of oplum-saters, when cured by a suppression of the drug for two generations, ought to go back to "moderate" oplum-eating, and talk grandly of "moderation" being the higher state, and a regulated use better than disuse. Unnatural substances, which damage nutrition and tamper with the stomach and the blood, ought not to be taken into the system at all. Let the wine-loving doctors refute the physiologists, if they can; but they have no right to ignore them, and go on (as they do) inculcating the opposite, by talk about "moderation," and entitling wine "generous" and "supporting." No medical man at present stands higher in London than Sir Henry Thompson, who last year addressed a letter to the Archbishop of Canterbury, declaring that what is called "moderation" deteriorates both the body and the intellect; the fact being that "moderation" means each man's fancy. It has no other definition. I knew a gentleman who believed himself exemplary in moderation, and certainly never showed any sign of excess; yet when he died—and that prematurely,— the physician called his disease "drunkard's-liver"! Sir Henry Thompson has recently experimented on total abstinence himself, and announces that he finds It to be just the right thing. Of course, it must be, if the tendency of alcohol is to mar the gastric juice, and corrupt the nature of the blood, as the physiologists decisively pronounce.

Nor only so; but it is abundantly attested that if an operation of great delicacy is to be performed, even a single glass of wine may lessen the accuracy of a surgeon's hand. It is further notorious that wine which is not sufficient to produce any visible excitement lessens grave men's modesty, so that they tell tales and make remarks of which they would be wholly ashamed except after the wine. The apcients, who were keen observers, declars that after moderate drinking men betray secrets; and what is worst of all, our judges testify that the worst crime is committed, not by men who are drunk, but by men who have been drinking; that is, by men who fancy themselves "moderate," and cannot be pronounced otherwise. Moderate drink, so-called, is thought to comfort a man; in fact, short of visible excess, it changes his state of sentiment; it makes some more lavish in giving (hence the use of charity dinners !); it makes some vain and loquacious, and more figent in speech, but not wiser; it makes some irritable and easily offended, leading them to hasty words and angry deeds; in many it stimulates lust, and many it drives into crime. With some danger from it to the mind, and pure mischief to the body, where is the good sense of drinking it at all? Opponents speak of testotalers as wishing to impose their taste on others! Nay, but testotalers believe in experience and science, and wish mankind to abide in the normal taste, which alone is safe and natural.

Philanthropists have long since discovered that the weak will of the drunkard needs support by sympathy, and that nothing so aids him as the promise of another person to abstain, if he will abstain. Numbers of good men and women have taken a pledge of abstinence solely from this motive,-to aid the viclous; and, as they attest, with immense result. Surely it is entirely away from the facts to remark upon this: "They ought not to take a vow of abstinence; for to be moderate without a vow is the highar state." They were moderate (or abstinent) previously without a pledge; only for the benefit of a weaker brother, they consented to limit their own freedom : does this act of charity bring them on to a "lower plane"? All such censures proceed on misconception,

Our business is not solely with ourselves. "Non nobls solum nati sunus." We see a national curse widely spread over all Christendom, fostered by wealthy traders and (alas!) by governments whom it enriches,—short-sighted as they are to touch gains made from vice. If happily we have personally retained a freedom from this vile temptation, it is not enough that we maintain our own virtue; we are bound to break down, if we can, the evil customs and laws which flood the land with misery. We are helpless as individuals against social usages; only by combining into societies can we hope to affect them; that is our sufficient justification of association against the drink.

All the talk about "education" as the cure is misplaced, and implies ignorance of fact, or inattention. If by education is meant intellectual knowledge and information, it is quite inadequate to contend with a depraved taste. The senators of England in the last century, and your members of Congress now, are more highly educated (in this sense) than the millions of Christendom can be for another century; yes our senators were very apt to be drunk, and you cannot trust yours with wine in the halls of Congress. Scotland is better educated than England can become for fifty years; yet Scotland complains more bitterly than England of the drink traffic, and according to our opponents is very drunken. We have in every class of life calamitous drunkenness; as far as possible, it is hushed up among the richer classes, who can more easily conceal it; but it exists, and it increases with increasing facilities for getting the liquor, in spite of education. In fine, these habits are themselves the greatest impediment to intellectual culture ; to cure them by it is like catching sparrows by putting salt on their tails. But if education is to include training to good habits (which alone is to the purpose), the beginning of better habits is to lay aside the drink which captivates.

Many of the same topics apply to the use of tobacco, opium, and other narcotics, but of course less vehemently, because they do not lead to violent crime, but only in extreme cases to destitution, neglect of duty, and virtual insanity or bodily ruin. Among our physicians there are some who actually extol tobacco-smoking for adults; yet even these with astonishing unanimity condemn it in young persons. Dr. Augustus Murray, a great chanter of the virtues of tobacco, says that no one under twenty-five shall amoke, and it is better if not before thirty-five. Of course, in the present state of society youths will smoke, if they see mature men smoking; so that it is impossible to solve the problem by separating ages. But even if "moderate" indulgence in alcoholic drinks and in tobacco did no other harm to a nation, it does this grievous harm,-it absorbs in needless sensual and selfish pleasure those means which the heads of families ought to devote to their wives and children. Thus it indefinitely retards mental cultivation and refinement, and causes a population to live on the edge of starvation, who might be in abundance. I add here this last argument (as applicable in England) against the use of flesh-meat. Space does not permit any further notice of the great vegetarian question. When an English artisan, of no pecultar talent, has strength of mind to practise the triple abstinence, with his wife to back him up,even in bad times they rear a family and thrive well; they can afford refinements and can bestow charity on other artisans who earn higher wages; nor do our peasants ever show less muscle and less endurance from the small quantity of fiesh-meat which they get. Grant that you, with your vast lands, may easily afford yourselves flesh-meat. We are past that stage; therefore our poorer orders need to be taught not to covet that form of food.

Distantin Google

FRANCIS W. NEWMAN.

Communications.

BLOOD OF JESUS VS. INWARD LIGHT. BY CHARLES E. PRATT.

BY CHARLES E. PRATT. The Quakers are a small but not insignificant sect. Beyond Luther and the Reformers, beyond Calvin and the Dissenters, beyond any religious body of peo-ple of the seventcenth century, went they in assert-ing individual freedom of conscience and religious liberty. Freedom of speech, freedom of conduct, freedom of thought, freedom for superstilions,--these they taught not only in formulas but in lives of suffering. They thrust at the heart of priestly and -corrupt religions. They were the Radicals of their time, so far as they could be Radicals and keep, the mame and the character of Christians. "Get the writings of John Woolman by heart, and Bearn to love the early Quakers," said Charles Lamb. Read the Apology of Robert Barclay, and learn to respect them, say I. For its solid logic, its close rea-soning, its scholarly exposition, and its trenchant treatment of theological errors, it will repay reading by the thoughtilest reader of THE INDEX: and its chapter on the "Universal Saving Light" would almost the service as a Free Belicous tract. Were Bereley treatment of theological errors, it will repay reading by the thoughtfulest reader of THE INDEX; and its chapter on the "Universal Saving Light" would almost pass muster as a Free Religious tract. Were Barclay living now, he would doubtless write differently. He would see some of his premises slip away from hin; and the society of which he has been the acknowl-edged exponent for nearly two hundred years might be justified in laying his book aside with their "plain" coats and bonnets, and ask their apologist to mount the syllogisms of two centuries of progress, and make a statement of principles en rapport with the honest, intelligent convictions of his party to-day. Those for whom he wrote numbered ten thousand in the city of London alone. They refused to be called by any sec-tarian name, but called themselves Friends; they de-mied "authority" in Pope or Church; they counted the Bible no more "sacred" or "inspired" than other writings might be, or than the words of a godly min-dister, aud refrained from speaking of it as the "Word of God," they denied the Orthodox doctrine of the Sunday (Sabbath), and said all days were alike holy; they rejected the necessity of belief in any "creed," and taught that obedience to the light within him would be sufficient on his part for the salvation of any man, whether he ever heard of Jesus or not. I think George Fox would have subscribed to all the "Demands of Liberalism," except perhaps the eighth. The successors of this peculiar people are divided eighth. The successors of this peculiar people are divided into two branches, rather inaccurately called the Orthodox and the Unitarian; and there are several Orthodox and the Unitarian; and there are several minor divisions. In the Orthodox branch quite a controversy has lately arisen, the objective cause being a lecture de-livered in Boston last winter, and since published as an essay; and curlously enough the point of the con-troversy centres in their doctrine of the Inward Light. This controversy was noticed editorially in THE MORE of May 28, in a very candid and appreciative manner: * and if the editor of the tentative Occa-sional Observer thinks "THE INDEX misunderstands both the essay and its friends," the essaysist and some of his friends do not share that opinion. Perhaps the Observer says it for a purpose, knowing that many of its readers would be suspicious of truth itself, seen in "a radical paper." The essay in question is, as THE INDEX ingenuous-ty says, "a calm and winning presentation of the doctrine of the Inward Light of Christ, universal in all men, and saving all who are obedient to it." George Fox and his confrieres heid this light to be supernatural, separk of divine kindling, within and above all natural faculties and endowments, leading, if obeyed, to truth and happiness. They also heid it to be special in its influence to particular deeds and thoughts, and not general. In these two particulars Socrates and Plato, Jesus and Paul, and Fox and Barciay are not far apart. Barclay are not far apart. This view is suiled to minds prone to a mystical philosophy, like that of Bochmen; and also to simple, pure-minded, enthusiastic converts to religion. Not the early Friends alone, but the early Methodists, and smaller sects that dot these eighteen centuries, are examples of this. The father teaches his child that God made him and sends him those favors and wel-come experiences which he calls bleasings; and the crudely informed boy believes it. So the humble con-vert aces special Providence in every striking occur-rence, and the ardent exhorter or minister looks or waits for some sign of divine direction as to what and when. It is doubtless the best recognition of this inward light that it infuses itself into every mental state and action. And the supernatural view might have to give way to the natural in the last analysis. But to recognize and assert the supernatural view as a cardinal principle in religious matters was a long, brave step, and still requires courage. The tendency of the churches is to hang the key to a situation upon some peg of observance of ordinances, or penance, or belief in some dogmatic statement or historic fact.

*The trifling innocuracies may be corrected as follows: The Friend's Review refused to publish an advertising notice, not "the lecture"; Thomas Aimber, not "Kimbali," and John G. Whittier cordially and entirely approves the essay, not "parily," as do most of the best thinkers of the Bociety.

The tendency of the tend there are note of ordinances, or penance, or belief in some dogmatic statement or historic fact. The targedy of Calvary affords so much that is dramatic and pathetic, and is so ingeniously wrought up with the mysterious, that it transhase the "revivalist" and the "evangelist" with the best of themes for stirring the emotions of people; and I think it is matter of observation that a tendency to this emotional phase of religion, this special me of the Calvary sacrifice to the end of causing sudden conversion and exist ic faith, which has acquired with many the name of "Methodistic religion," is seen wherever any sect has spread very rapidly of late years. It seems to fourish most in the West, and in rural communities. The large increase in numbers and in activity of the Society of Friends in the West and South within the last ten years has either been due to, or has developed exceedingly, this emotional and "Methodistic rule in the West and South within the last ten years has either been due to, or has developed exceedingly, this emotional and "Methodistic tendency. It is in reality a part of the great swerving toward ritualism of one part, whilst the other part is drawn toward rationalism. Thus there harse been among the Quakers two modes of belief, two parties, the other beliefing that knowledge of and faith in the outward sacrifice of Christ is necessary to being saved from perdition, and that andeen conversion and redemption by the blood of Jecus is the only door to heaven. There is a little pamphlet entitled The Blood of Jecus is the only door to the audit the same branch of the Church, until an able man has directed a core they salt party is bistorically and philosophically on the right basis as Friends, but not so easy to see in what the matter will result. As Mr. Abbot says: "The staid Friends are getting profoundly stirred up about it;" and the morement is not without considerable interest to the friends of freedom, justice, and reason.

est to the friends of freedom, justice, and reason. Boston, June 19, 1874.

A FORECAST INTO THE MORALS OF THE FUTURE,

TO THE EDITOR OF THE INDEX:

FUTURE, To THE EDITOR OF THE INDEX: Dear Sir,—II is to be presumed that the readers of The INDEX are conversant with the fact that the morality of the present day (theoretic, I mean, not practical), although doubtless vasily superior to that of any preceding age, is yet very far from approach-ing perfection. Up to the present time, morals have been only, or at least chiefly, just what the derivation of the word imports—manuers, customs, reating on public opinion as their basis,—that being right which the majority of people in a given place and time sarre to consider right; whence has sprung the puzzling anomaly of one and the same action, or course of action, being regarded in one place or at one time as right, and in another place or at another time as wrong; whereas all who can see below the surface of things and opinions clearly perceive that true morality must rest on the sure and stable rock of fact, not on the shifting quicksand of opinion, and that, there-for for a moment doubtful. It is, as I should say, willitarianism; or as you, I believe, prefer to express it, the the necessary relations subsisting between the individual and his surroundings; which seems to me only another way of stating the same thing, com-pliance with necessary conditions being, I take it, necessariju utilitarianism, or the necessary relations of the individual, determines as the only proper course, all gifted with the deeperinsight spoken of will readi-phe present spractice, of morality is no proof, no pre-sumption even, of a desire to impugn morality, al-moust present spractice, of sourcas, and the desire to impugn morality, shi hough all the adherents of traditional morality will assert so; as they did, to mention but one memorable though all the adherents of traditional morality will assert so; as they did, to mention but one memorable instance, in the case of Socrates. Although my present purpose is not to do either of the two things above referred to, yet in what follows I may seem to some to be unnecessarily disturbing the received conceptions of morality. After the very just and reasonable rebuke, however, which Mr. Morse lately administered to Mr. Voysey though your columns, I am not without hope that, if your readers ahould peruse these lines, they will bear in mind throughout that, our present notions of morality being

<page-header><text><text><text><text>

The product when a new product when a new product of the product o

*In the last INDEX, just received, we notice that Dr. Bartol mentions it as one of the "signs of the times" in the essay he read before the Free Religious Association. Not having been able to attend that seesion, the passing men-tion in Tur INDEX gives all the information we are poe-sessed of, as to the doctor's views or what he said upon this sublect.

Densor Google

and wife who cannot live happily together, even though no immorality of any kind can be attributed to either, are fully entitled to separate, and retain their fair reputation unblemished, even in the event of their contracting another alliance. The sanctity of the marriage institution is thus taking its way tow-ards that limbo where the divine right of kings, and other holy superstitions of mau's past, rest in pescoful forgottenness. Nor do we feel frightened by the slarmist cry of impending license, and universal prostitution, and the disruption of society. We know that our marriage system has not been from eventsting. The same commotion must have been raised by the adherents of the precixiting sys-sem, when our system began to take its place. And if we have not, we at least ought to have, outgrown the childish apprehension of "after us the deluge." And what if, to our current notions, the state of so-detive to bring about look like that primeval state defore marriage was? Have we not already learned the to bring about look like that primeval state defore marriage to built be accurrent swing of the pendulum, but the lark's ever-upriang, spiral coll, which although continually retracing the same circle on the earth's surface is yet at every circuit soaring marr unto heaven? We may rest assumed that the momore like those of the past than Huxley's agnos-tion is like the aavage's unsuspected ignorance of an extramundance power. Te one point more. Modern philosophers, moral-have the or and practice of sexual relations will be no more like those of the past than Huxley's agnos-tism is like the savage's unsuspected ignorance of any extra mundane power. To one point more. Modern philosophers, moral-ing the seman generically, to include both male and female—will be, among other things, a being of strong passions, subject, of course, to the control of a strong will. And they imply—or, whether they im-ply it or not, the implication is there—that strong pas-sions justify an equivalent indulgence. "Subject to a strong will. And they imply—or, whether they im-ply it or not, the implication is there—that strong pas-sions justify an equivalent indulgence. "Subject to a control of a strong will" means, of course, in-digence in conformity with the requirements of morality. But, again, it must be remembered that the "strong passions" have to be taken into account as essential factors in working out the equation of the morality of the future. Already the old idea of the intrinsic virtue of virginity, in and for itself, as contrasted with the imperfect purity of the married soutrasted with the imperfect purity of the married soutrasted with the imperfect purity of the married take, is completely idead; and, doubtlets, the whole body of the Christian world would consider it mon-strous to require any man to make of himself, literal-ly, "an ennuch for the kingdom of heaven's sake," bind to the fact that it compels thousands to make themselves, metaphorically, ennuchs for its defective morality's sake. It is matter of common remark that, from any and various reasons, some good, some bad, mean are every day becoming less inclined to contract the matrimonial relations now in rogue. And if it be solection that the present code of morality de-prives thousands of women of the enjoyment of what seems to us undoubtedly a natural right." There may be some women who will feel it a point of honor where it has the reply cannot be urged against the objection that the present code of morality de-prive what we regard the unreasonable depreciation by an-tiquity of the honorableness of lawful wedlock. A variety of considerations might be adduced to il-iustrate and corroborate the conclusion here shad-owed forth. Others may be glad to contribute tow-ands this end, or to rebut the views here advanced. To any well-considered communication your columns, doubless, would be open. We must limit ourselves to stating in definite form the conclusion to which the foregoing considerations lead ns, which is: That, according to our reading of the indications which pre-sent currents of thought and feeling afford regarding the sexual morality of the future, much greater free-dom than is now tolerated will be regarded as just and proper-freedom, however, which shall in no single instance degenerate into license, but in every case preserve a reverent loyalty to the laws of a high-er, shall we say a perfect, morality. Finally, the writer desires to state that the change in moral sentiment and practice which in his opinion present symptoms indicate as likely to occur in the future, he does not regard with any enthusiasm, nor, on the other hand, does he spend over it any fraitless of the necessary sequence of cause and effect) of al-regrets. His creed is not the "What will be, will be' of the fatalist, although some may be unable to dis-inguish it from this, but the growth and develop-ment (necessary sequence of cause and effect) of al-ready existent principles—the blossom of every to already existent principles—the blossom of mor-als is an advance on the former, and that, therefore, the state of society he discerns, if he discern aright and that state come to pass, will help on the welfare and progress of humanity; for himself, should it

A paper has just come to hand in which I find the statement that, in England alone, there are, in round numbers, three millions and a half of numarried women. In proportion to the population, the case is known to be somewhat similar in New England.

come to pass in his day, he has no desire, nor does he anticipate he ever will have a desire, to avail himself of the larger liberty it will allow. And believing, as he does, that a premature birth is closely allied to an abortion, assuredly he does not seek to advocate the adoption of this change now. He merely calls at-tention to what he regards as an impending event; and, in doing so, he trusts every candid reader will see that he is neither more nor less moral, although certainly less reliable, than the astronomer in predict-ing an eclipse of the sun. ZERO.

[That the marriage institution may be greatly modified hereafter, is to be admitted without much debate; but that it will ever be "evolved" out of existence, we for one do not believe.-ED.]

REFLECTIONS AT LARGE.

When we listen to the speeches or read the reports of political, religious, or medical ineetings, we find that a great deal of time is wasted. Politicians tell us what they are going to do for the welfare of the greatest number, and think of "number one;" they depreciate and villfy other parties, when they would occupy their time better by explaining their own principles.

occupy their time better by explaining their own principles. Theologians quibble about another world, or a heav-en and hell, and neglect the reality—this life. The members of that sect which has the most diluted form of Christian dogmatism have their Christianity so much attenuated that they needed a long discus-tion whether a man who honestly avows that he is not a Christian belongs to their Association, or not. Every one of them tries to manufacture his own form of Christianity. If we should receive a really honest avowal of thought from all Christian ministers, as to whether they believe in the "divine Christ" or in the "Lord and Master Jesus," we think there would be only a small number who could consistently profess that faith. How many would sceept and agree with Jesus, if he should be the editor of a religious paper, or come to the Anniversary meetings? Some would try to "maintain liberal Christianity," others Ortho-doxy, etc., etc.

try to "maintain liberal Unristianity," others or and doxy, etc., etc., etc., etc. In medical meetings we find often that those who assume the most are considered the prominent mem-bers. They relate great cures, and cannot cure them-selves. Just as we have a great many religious dis-cussions among theologians without religion, we have among medical men discussions concerning systems, yet without system. Can any one of those physicians who relate their great cure-stories state upon honor that he either ever cured, or never cured, a single patient?

Schiller must have been impressed by observing royalty, aristocracy, the honorables, D.D.'s, LL.D.'s, and M.D.'s, when he wrote:--

"It is dangerous to awake the lion; Destructive is the tiger's tooth; But the most horrid of all horrors-That is a man in his conceit!"

But the most horid of all horrors— That is a man in his conceit!" The most prominent among the lawyers are those who can turn and twist the law to the best advantage of their own selfsh ends. The so-called great men among theologians are those who mystify religion, or dilute it the most. Shining lights in the medical pro-fession tell us, post fexture or post moriem, how the cure would have been made, if they had been called; or how they performed the cure, when the patient happens to recover. But if they have the same dis-ease and cannot cure themselves, their disease is then as extraordinary, complicated, and uncurable as their own speculations! Suppose we could reanimate the good and true men who are gone, and they should become editors of Ohristian or of radical papers, is it not likely that the first opposition to their earnest and honest en-deavors would come from those who now worship or eulogize them? Allow me to point out one living ex-ample: that is the earnest and bonest INDEX. With due credit to both editors and to the various contrib-utors, we challenge any map or woman to name a journal so free and candid as THE INDEX. But we cannot help expressing our surprise that the force of buch logical reasonings as those of Mr. Abbot should be so little feit.

cannot help expressing our surprise that the force of such logical reasonings as those of Mr. Abbot should be so little felt. Mr. Higginson, whom we consider an able and true friend and a faithful laborer in the radical cause, is reported to have said: "He thought the dispute be-tween the Christian and anti-Christian was concern-ing the cradie in which both were born. What to do with the cradie? Mr. Calthrop wanted to stay in the cradie. Mr. Abbot wanted to smash it. Anyone who has really outgrown Christianity is incorrectly termed an anti-Christian." Neither Mr. Abbot nor any one who comprehends his situation outside of Christianity has a desire to smash the cradie; we all acknowledge the good which historical religions have done; but we are Protestants, and our reason compels us to protest against everything, whether it comes from THE IN-DEX, Bethlehem, or Rome, which interferes with the development of universal liberty. We respect all who sincerely believe in one or the other form of re-ligion; but many of those who claim to be religious taschers do not seem to care so much for the cradie as they do for the pap! Even many excellent scholars and free men, governors, presidents, and professors of colleges, who should crave more manly food, are not entirely weande. Dr. C. A. Bartol makes by the side of epiendid re-marks the following: "I cannot flatter the radical ilterature with any great accomplianment. The new theology has not arisen yet out of the 'Fifty Affirroa-tions," Impeachments,' "Liberal Leagues,' or exclud-ing God and Christ from the Constitution." When Jesus preached his Sermon on the Mount, and when

DOVER, N.H., June 15, 1874.

DISTRIBUTING TRACTS.

I had been to a conference; had heard various min-

I had been to a conference; had heard various ministers and professional persons relate their experience trends with a bealing beart to incidents of conversion argued by the wayside, picked up by drunken men, or read by lots and erring street boys; had listened to row cance up forty miles of rapids to obtain one millions of pages had been circulated on the cost of of the faguimaux; read incidents of conversion argued and pondered by the proprietors of said to the errection of a street show on a converting the statistics showing how and the creations of a street show on a converting the statistics and the proprietors of said bear circulated on the bury show on the creater should be all the statistics and the creation of a street show on a converting the statistics and the creater should be all the show of the proprietors of said bear circulated on the bury show on the creater should be felt, with a beating heart and many a philamthropic that I might be all ready for business when in the opportunity. At length one presented itself-a, and pondered by the proprietors of said the way feeling very benevolent and looking for an any a philamthropic on portunity. At length one presented itself-a, and index the show of the date of the date of the statistic show the strend in the way feeling very benevolent and looking for an any condities fellows came up to me, sarjing. "Please, if the should meet."
The should meet.
The should meet on the should meet on the shoul

THE INDEX-JUNE 25, 1874. 310 GOOD PHOTOGRAPHS 1 PUBLICATIONS. 8 Advertisements. OF OF THE LEADING INDEX WBITEBS. THE INDEX, THE PATRONAGE FREE of the liberal advertising public is respect-fully solicited for THE KNOX. The attempt will be honestly made to keep the advertis-ing pages of THE INDEX in entire harmony with its general character and principles, and thus to furnish to the public an advertising medium which shall be not only profitable to its patrons, but also worthy of their most generous support. To this end, all improper or "blind" advertisements, all quack adver-tisements, and all advertisements believed to be fraudulent or unjust to any one, will be excluded from these columns. No outs will be admitted. The INDEX must not be held responsible for any statement and by advections, whill be for any statement. ADVERTIGING RATES. Including O. B. FROTHINGHAM A Weekly Journal T. W. HIGGINSON, RELIGIOUS W. J. POTTER, DEVOTED TO W. H. SPENCER, ASSOCIATION. F. W. NEWMAN, FREE RELIGION. CHAS. VOYSEY, PUBLISHED BY THE Asport of the Addresses and other Proceedings of the Original Mest-ing in 1867, at which the Pres Beligious Association was Organ-ized. Containing addresses by 0.8 Froth-ingham, Henry Blanchard, Lucretis Moti-Potert Dala Organ, John Weils, Ottar John A. W. STEVENS, Report of the Addres F. E. ABBOT. INDEX ASSOCIATION, are now for sale at the office of THE INDEX. and will be mailed postpaid to any address on receipt of price. Single Photographs, 22 AT. No. 1 Tremont Pla ce, Beston cents each; complete Set of Eight Photo ADVERTISING RATES. Robert Dale Owen, John Weiss, Oliver John-son, F. E. Abbot, D. A. Wasson, T. W. Hig-ginson, and Ralph Waldo Emerson. graphs, $1.50. EDITOR: For 1 to 12 Insertions, 10c per line, 13 (i 25 (i 8 5 i 6 (i 26 (i 51 (i 6 6 i 6 (i 52 (i 5 1 (i 6 i 6 5 (i 6 i 6))))) THE INDEX. Address, FRANCIS ELLINGWOOD ABBOT. No. 1 Tremont Place, Boston, Mass. ASSOCIATE EDITOR: On half-column advertisements, a discount of 10 per cent. will be made; on full-column advertisements, a discount of 25 per cent. On all advertisements for which cash is raid in advance, a further discount of 25 per cent. on the total, as above calculated, will be made. FRANCIS E. ABBOT, Editor. (This pamphlet has not been on sale for a NDEX TRACTS. I ABRAM WALTER STEVENS. number of years, and many persons who have all of the Annual Reports succeeding do not possess this.) Price 50 cents. No. 1.-Truths for the Times, by F. E. Abbot, contains the "Fifty Affirmations" and "Modern Principles." Ms. CHARLES DARWIN, author of "The Origin of Spe-cies," any, in a latter to the adjustment of No. 1.-Truths for the Tim EDITORIAL CONTRIBUTORS: O. B. FROTHINGHAM, New York City. T. W. HIGGINSON, Newport, R.I. dings of Second Annual Meetimg, 1869. 50 cents. Contains essays by Julia Ward Hows on "Freedom and Recles," says, in a letter to the editor not orig-mally intended for publication, but subse-quently authorized to be used: "I have now W. J. POTTER, New Bedford, Mass. CIRCULATE ! Circulate ! ! Circu-net THORE PETITIONS. Don't feel atta-fed when your petition is a pard long, unless you have asked every one to sign it. Get good, infla-ential names. R. P. HALLOWELL, Boston, Mass. etraint in Religion," and by David A. Wasson on "The Relation of Social Science to MRS. E. D. CHENEY, Jamaica Plain, Mass. read 'TBUTHS FOR THE TIMES,' and I admired them from my inmost heart; and I agree to almost every word." New Edition. Price F. W. NEWMAN, England. Beligion," and speeches by O. B. Frothing-ham, Jesse H. Jones, F. E. Abbot, Wm. Des-ton, R. W. Emerson, Mary Grew, C. A. Bar-GET EVERYBODY. CHARLES VOYSEY, England. 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00. Don't neglect to show the petition to any one, because he is a stockholder in some church, or other exempted property, as maximum supersons will the plantice of the domand; and those who are not be able to be lake the responsibility of refusience as in it. tol. A. M. Powell, H. B. Blackwell, Bowland to. 1.-Fear of the Living God, by O. THE INDEX sims-Connor, Lucy Stone, Horace Seaver, and B. Frothingham, expose the debasing char-acter of the popular notions of God, and presents conceptions of him that are wor-thy of the nineteenth century. New Edi-tion. Price 5 cents; 12 copies 50 cents. admit the Justice and to take in the second of the second of refusing to sign it. Don't delay! We want the petitions returned To increase general intelligence with resp to religion: others; with an appendix on "Outlines of Judaism" by Babbi Wise. Proceedings of Third Annual Mesi-ing, 1870. 56 cents. Contains essay by O. B. Frothingham on the "Ides of the Free Religions Association," followed by addresses by D. A. Wasson on "The Nature of Beligion," by Mrs. E. D. Cheney on "Ka-ligion as a Social Force, especially in rela-tion to Philanthropy and Retorm," and by F. E. Abbot on "The Future of Beligions Organization, as affected by the Spirit of the Age;" an essay by Samuel Johnson en "The Natural Sympathy of Beligions, "fo-lowed by Rabbi Wise on "The Permanent and Progressive Elements of Judaism," by T. W. Higginson on "Mohammedianism," by Wm. H. Channing on "The Beligions of To foster a nobler spirit and quicken a higher purpose, both in society and in the indi-vidual: Per order of EXEC. COMM. of the BOSTON LIBERAL LEAGUE. No. 3. -Lecture on the Bible, by the Rev. CULTURED FREE THOUGHT. To substitute knowledge for ignorance, right for wrong, truth for superstition, freedom for slavery, character for creed, catholicity Charles Voysey, of England, is an over-whelming demonstration of the imperfec-tions and errors of the Bible, both in the Old and the New Testaments. New Edition. for bigotry, love for hate, humanitarianism for sectarianism, devotion to universal ends The Index Association. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00. OFFICE, NO. 1 TREMONT PL., BOSTON, for absorption in selfish schemes. No. 4.—Christian Propagandism, by F. E. Abbot, is an exposure of the weakness, costliness, and inefficiency of the System of Foreign Missions. Full of Figures, Facts, In brief, to hasten the day when Free Relighas been organized with a capital stock fixed at in brief, to have here the day when Free Hang-ion shall take the place of dogmathm and ecclesiasticism throughout the world, and when the welfare of humanity here and now shall be the aim of all private and mubble estimates ONE BUNDRED THOUSAND dollars, for the ose of publishing Tracts, Books, and and Interesting Extracts. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00. THE INDEX, public activities. No. 5.-""God in the Constitution," by Bev. Arthur B. Bradford, opposed the pro-posed Theological Amendment to the Unit-A Weekly Paper devoted to Free and Rationa by Wm. H. Channing on "The Religions of Chins," and Wm. J. Potier on "Religion Old and New in India;" also abstract of a In addition to its general objects, the pra-tical object to which THE INDEX is specia Religion. It is the object of THE INDEX to give public ly devoted is the ORGANIZATION OF THE ed States Constitution. Price 10 cents; 19 discussion on "The Bible in the Public Schools," by Thos. Vickers, S. E. Calthrop, LIBERALS OF THE COUNTRY, for th niterance to the boldest, most cultivated, and pur copies $1.00 pose of securing the more complete and con-sistent secularization of the political and ed-ucational unstitutions of the United States. The Church must give place to the Republic best matured thought of the age on all religious No. 5.-<sup>16</sup>The Sabbath," by Parker Pills-bury, denounces Sabbatarian superstition. New Edition. Price 10 cents; 12 copies Rabbi Wise, and others. questions, and to apply it directly to the social Proceedings of Fifth Annual Meet-ing, 1872. 35 cents. (Four or more, S cents each.) Contains essays by J. W. Chadwick on "Liberty and the Church in America," by C. D. B. Mills on "Religion as the Expression of a Permanent Sentiment of the Human Mind," and by O. B. Frob-ingham on "The Religion of Humanity," with addresses by Fowland Compor. Cells and political amelioration of society. It is edited by FRANCIS E. ABBOT, assisted by in the affections of the people. The last vestiges of ecclesiastical control must be wiped out of the Constitutions and Statutes $1.00. ABRAM W. STEVENS, with the following list of No. 7.-6*Compulsory Education," by F. E. Abbot, maintains the right of every child to be educated, and the duty of the State to ensure it an education. Price 5 Editorial Contributors: of the several States in order to bring them O. B. FROTHINGHAM, New York City. into harmony with the National Constitution. To accomplish this object, the Liberals must THOMAS W. HIGGINSON, Newport, B.I. cents; 12 copies 50 cents, make a united demand, and present an un-broken front, and the chief practical aim of THE INDEX will be henceforth to organize WILLIAM J. POTTER, New Bedford, Maan with addresses by Rowland Connor, Cella Burleigh, Lucretia Mott, A. B. Alcott, C.A. No. 8 .- The Present Heaven, by O. B. Frothingham, trents of a subject that in-WILLIAM H. SPENCER, Haverhill, Mass. RICHARD P. HALLOWELL, Boston, Mass. Bartol, Horace Seaver, Alexander Loos, terests everybody. New Edition. Price 5 cents; 12 copies 50 cents. a great NATIONAL PARTY OF FREEDOM. MRS. E. D. CHENEY, Jamaica Plain, Mass. Let every one who believes in this movement give it direct aid by helping to increase the and others, REV. CHARLES VOYSEY, London, England. No. 9.-The Christian Amendment, by PROF. FRANCIS W. NEWMAN, London, Eng. Proceedings of Sixth Annual Meet-ing, 1878. Scents. (Four or more, S cents each.) Contains essays by Samuel Johnson on "Freedom in Religion," and by circulation of THE INDEX. F. E. Abbot, shows the dangerous charac-ter of the attempt to interpolate the Evan-Every liberal should subscribe for THE INDEX, SPECIAL FEATURES. as the best popular exponent of Religious Libergelical Christian Creed in the U. S. Consti The publication of a valuable leading pa alism. Every Christian minister, and every thinktution. Price 5 cents; 12 copies 50 cents per or essay of a thoughtful character, in each issue, will continue to be one of the most marked features of THE INDEX. dom," with No. 10.- The Impeachment of Christi-anity, by P. E. Abbot. Fourth Ten Thou-sand. Sent for free distribution to any one who will distribute U, in packages of from John Weiss on "Religion in Free John Weiss on "Religion in Freedom," win addresses by Wm. C. Gannett, Robert Dale Owen, T. W. Higginson, Samuel Longfel-low, J. S. Thomson, F. E. Abbot, and Lu-cretia Mott. ing church-member, should subscribe for it, as the clearest, most candid, and most scholarly ex-Regular editorial contributions will con-tinue to be furnished by the well-known emposition of the differences between Free Thought and Evangelical Christianity, and as the best inent writers who have already done so much to give to THE INDEX its present high po-sition. Mr. Voysey has kindly consented to means of becoming well informed of the argufive to one hundred copies. No 11.-The God of Science, by F. E. Ab-bot, attempts to show the real influence of Sympathy of Religious, by T. W. Eig-ginson. 25 cents. ments and the movements which the Church will have to meet in the future. furnish every fortnight a LONDON LETTER modern science upon the idea of God. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00. containing matters of general interest to rad-ical readers. Other interesting correspond-ence, communications, extracts from valua-Almost every number contains a discourse of Religions of China, by Wm. H. Chan-ning. 25 cents. leading article, which alone is worth the price of No. 12.—Is Romanism Real Christian-ity? Two essays by Francis W. Newman and F. E. Abbot. Price 10 cents; 12 copies one year's subscription ble books and periodicals, and miscellaneous articles, will also be published; and such Prof. MAX MUELLER, of Oxford, England, in Beason and Revelation, by William J. Potter. 10 cents. a letter to the Editor published in THE INDEX $1.00. improvements will be made from time to time as circumstances shall render possible. for January 4, 1873, says: "That the want of a No. 13. On the Vision of Heaven, by Taxation of Church Property, by Jas. Parton. 10 cents, singly; package of ten, 60 cents; of one hundred, $3. journal entirely devoted to Religion in the widest Prof. F. W. Newman, of England, analyzes the Christian conception of Heaven. Price 5 cents; 12 copies 50 cents. AGENTS. sense of the word should be felt in America-that Local Agents for THE INDEX are wanted such a journal should have been started and so in every city and town throughout the country. The most liberal terms arc offered. No. 14. - A Study of Beligion: The Name and the Thing, by F. E. Abbot, attempts to show that the popular deriva-tion of the word Beligion is incorrect; that the popular conceptions of Beligion itself are inadequate; and that a new conception of the band on the Law of Evolution, conpowerfully supported by the best minds of your These publications are for sale at the office country,-is a good sign of the times. There is no TEBMS. such journal in England, France, or Germany; of the Free Beligious Association, No. 1 Tra-The price of THE INDEX is Three Dolthough the number of so-called religious or the-The price of THE INDEX is Three Bole-lars a year, payable in advance; and at the same rate for aborter periods. All remit-tances of money must be at the sender's risk, unless forwarded by cheque, registered let-ter, or post-office money order. The name, with address in full, must be accompanied with the money in acch case. mont Place, Boston. The Annual Reports ological periodicals is, as you know, very large." for 1988 and 1871 cannot be supplied, and the And later still: "I read the numbers of your INals inducture; and that a new conception of it, based on the Law of Evolution, con-sistent with absolute Freedom of Thought, and independent even of belief in God, is the necessary condition of the perpetuity of Beligion among mon. Frice 10 cents; 12 copies $1,00. Address supply of others previous to that of 1872 is DEX with increasing interest." quite limited. Orders by mail may be addressed either "Free Religious Association, with the money in each case

THE INDEX.

No. 1 Tremont Place, Boston

Address

THE INDEX, 1 TREMORT PLACE,

Boston, Mass.

No. 1 Tremont Place, Boston," or to the

WM. J. POTTER, Sec. F. R. A.

Secretary, New Bedford, Mass.

manny Google

Send $3.00 for one year, or 75 cents for three months on trial Address THE INDER,

No. | Tremont Place, Boston.

THE INDEX-JUNE 25, 1874.

POPULAR BOOKS, SENT BY MAIL

PUBLISHERS' PRICES!

ORDERS PROMPTLY FILLED.

NO ETTRA CHABGE FOR POSTAGE.

ANY BOOK in the subjoined List, or any other OBTANABLE BOOK that may be desired, will be forwarded as promptly as possible on receipt be forwarded as promptly as possible of of orders accompanied with the CASH.

Orders are respectfully solicited from all friends of THE INDEX.

ALCOTT (LOUISA M). Littie Women. Two 3.00 Loop Transformer and Camp and Fireside Burines An Old -Pashlonned Girl. Liste Man My Bors, &c. Shawi-Straps Workt, A Story of Experience Nosp Sto 1.50 1.50 1.00 1.00 1.75 ARABIAN NIGHTS' ENTERTAINMENTS. 1.59 AUERBACH (BERTHOLD). On the Heights. 1.50 Villa Eden; The Country-House on the BACON'S Essays ..... 1.90 BAGEHOT on the English Constitution..... 2.25 Physics and Politics ..... 1.50 BABTLETTS Familiar Quotations .......... 2.00 BARTOL (Rsv. O. A). Radical Problems... 2.00 The Rising Faith 2.00 BRACKETT (ANNA C.) The Education of American Girls. BROOKS'(CHARLEST.) Translations. The Layman's Breviary. 2.23 The World-Priest. 2.33 The Tall Student. 75 BUECHNER'S Force and Matter ...... 8.25 work, with a complete index. I vola... ORLITLE'S Works. Obsep edition. Compris-ing the following: Miscellanceus Emays, i rula; Franch Revolution, J vola; Preder-het the Grass, 10 vola; Gromwell's Letters, de., s vola; Sartor Resertus, I vol; John Stering, I vol; Life of Schiller, I vol; Past and Present, I vol; Herces and Hero Woz-ship, I vol; Life of Schiller, I vol; Past Any volume sold separately. 3 vola: Lon-don, Hil-3. Per vol. CARPENTER (Dz. W. B.) The Principles of Mental Physiology, with their Applica-Heas to the Training and Decipline of the Mind, and the Study of its Morbid Condi-tion: ********* CEBVANTES' Don Quixote ..... 1.50 CHANNING (WM. ELLERY. D.D). The Per-fect Life. In Twelve Discourses. Edited from his manuscripts by his nephew, Wm. Hanry Chanalog. OHANNING (WM. ELLERY). Thoreau: The Poet Naturalist, With Memorial Verse, 2.00 CHENEY (MRS. E. D). Pationce. A Series of Thirty Games for the Firsdds. 1.00 Social Games. A user Series of Games for Parties, nulform with Patience. 1.00 Sally Williams, the Mountain Girl. Disp. 1.30 CLARRE (JAMES FREEMAN). Ten Great

CLARKE (Dr. E. H.) Sex in Education ..... 1.20

CONWAY (MONCURE D.) The Earthward

Platinage. Lib OOERELA TION and Conservation of Forces: A Series of Exposition by Grove, Hein-bolts, Mayor, Faraday, Liebig and Carpen-str. with an Introduction by Edward L. Younnas, M.D. 1 vol. OULTURE DEMANDED BY MODERN LIPE: Its True Aims and Requirements A Series of Addressen, By Tyndail, Hux-by, Whowell, Faraday, Spencer, Draper, Samon, Lycell, etc. Edited by Edward L. Younnas.

DALL (Mas. CAROLINE H). The College, has Markat, and the Court; or, Woman's Relation to Education, Employment, and Olimonahlo.

Bistorical Pictures Retouched; a Volume of Miscollanies. In two parts. Part I., "Studies, Pictures, and Fancies" The Life of Dr. Marie Zakrzewska, being a Practical Illustration of "Woman's Rights to Labor". 1.8 The Descent of Man. : You Journal of Beserches. Encodual Expression of Man and the Low-er out and the Animals and Plants under The Variation of Animals and Plants under Douestication. 7 vols. Illustrated on the 2.00 1.50 8.00 DESCARTES (RENE.) Discourse on the Method of Rightly conducting the Reason and Seeking Trath in the Sciences...... 9.94 Adam Bede. Atian Bede, Bomole Theo Mill on the Floss. Fells Holt, Silas Marner and Scanes of Clorical Life, The Same. Library Edition. 2 vols Middlemarch. 2 Now Link Lovad the King. MUREBON'S R. W. Exays. First Series. Exays. Second Series. Histollanised Series. Beprosentative Mon. English Train. Conduct of Life. Poemas. With Portrait. May-day and Other Piecos Esays. Blue and Gold. Poetas. Blue and Gold. 2.00 2.00 2.00 2.00 2.00 2.00 1.50 1.50 5.00 2.05 Society and Solitude Transformations of Christianity. From the Frence of Athanase Coupered the Yourger. The Life and Works of Gotthold Ephraim Lessing. Translated from the German of Adolf Stafr. 2 vols. 5,00 FARRAR'S Critical History of Free Thought, In reference to the Christian Baligion..... 2.00 FEUERBACH (LUDWIG.) The Essence of Christianity. "George Ellot's" translation, 1.00 FISKE'S (JOHN) Myths and Myth-Makers., 2.00 FBOTHINGHAM (O. B.) Beligion of Hu-manity Bediefs of the Unbelievers Child's Book of Religion Life of Theodore Parker .20 GREG'S (W. R.) Enigmas of Life..... Literary and Social Judgments..... Croed of Christendom..... GROTE'S LIFE. Compiled from Family Doc-uments, Private Memorands, and Original Letters to and from Various Friends. By Mrs. Grote, Scoond Edition. With Por-irait BAMERTON (PHILIP G.) A Painter s Camp. Book I. In England. Book II. In Scottana. Book II. In France. Thought about Art The Unknown River. The Intellectual Life. Chapters on Animals. 2.00 HAMILTON (GAIL), Child World. Part Bec-Oldport Days BOWELLS'S (WILLIAM D.) Their Wed-ding Journey Buburban Sketches Yennian Life. Italian Journey A Chance Acquisiniance 2.00 2.00 2.00 2.00 1.50 HUGO'S (V.) New Novel. " 'Ninety-Three'., 1.75 HUMBOLDT (ALEXANDER VON). Life of, Translated from the German. I vols., with three portraits. HUME'S (DAVID) Essays and Life ...... 1.78 INGELOW'S (JEAN) Prose. Off the Skel-1.75 dics for Stories tories told to a Child. First and Second

H. Foods. By Dr. Edward Smith. 1.75
H. Mind and Body. The Theories of their Relations. By Alex. Bain. 1.09
The Study of Sociology. By Herbert 1.9
The Advance Chemistry. By Jostah P. 200
Yil. The Conservation of Energy in Proceedings of the Order of the Price of the Price

JERBOLD (DOUGLAS). Fireside Saints, Mr. Claude's Breakfast Talk, and other Papers, 1.50 JOHNSON'S (SAMUEL) Oriental Religions, and their Relation to Universal Religion. India

JOSEPHUS. The whole Works of Flavius Josephus, the Jawish Historian. JOWETT. The Dialognes of Pisto. Trans-

BERR (ORPHEUS C). Versatilities, Poems, Patriotic, Sentimental and Humprons...... 2.90

LECKY (W. E. H.) History of the Rise and Influence of the Spirit of Rationalism in Influence of the Spirit of Rationalism in Enrope. 2 vols. 4.00 History of European Morals from Augustus to Charlemagne. 2 vols...... 6.00

LEWES / Publicator of Common Life, 2 vois, 1.00 Biographical History of Philosophy, from its Origin in Greece down to the Present Day, 2 voin Greece down to the Present thong of Life and Mind. The Founda-tions of Life and Mind. The Founda-

LEWES (G. H.) The Story of Goethe's Life, 1.50 LEWIN (REV. BAPHAEL, D'C). What is Ju-dalam? or, a Few Words to the Jews...... 1.00

4.00 1.50 1.50 2.00 2.00

LOWELL'S (J. R.) Poema, 2 vols .... The Biglow Papers. First Series .... The Biglow Papers. Second Series ... Among my Hooks ..... My Study Windows.

LOWELL (MES. A. C.) Posies for Childron. 75 LUBBOCE (SIE JOHN). Origin of Civiliza-Hon, and the Primitive Condition of Man., 200 Pre-historic Times. 5.09

MANN (HOEACE), The Life of Horace Mang, By his Wife, ports on Education, 3.00 Annual Reports on Education, 3.00 Annual Reports on Education, from 189 to 1848 Horace Mann. from the Writings of Horace Mann. 125

MAURICE (REV. F. D.) The Ground and Object of Hope for Mankind .78

MERIVALE'S (CHARLES) Conversion of the Roman Empire. Conversion of the Northern Nations...... 1.50

MOULTON (LOUISE CHANDLER.) Bed-

(ASBY (PETROLEUM V), Swingin' Round the Cirkle

Ekkoes from kentucky. 1.0 NEWMAN, (FRANCIS W.) A History of the Habrow Monarchy. 4.50 Phanese of Path; or, Passagee from the History of my Greed. 2.00 Catholic Union: Essays towards a Charch of the Yature, as the Organization at Theism, Doci whether a the Organization at Theism, Doci Weshers of Frotestantism. 25 Against Hero-Making in Religion. 25

SMILES'S (SAMTEL.) Self-Help ..... 1.50 PENCER (HERBERT.) Education, Intel-lectual, Moral, and Physical......

PROCTOR (RICHARD A.) Other Word's than Ours: the Finrality of Word's stud-led under the Light of Racing Stud-led under the Light of Racing Stud-light Science for Leisure Mours. A Series of Familiar Exeasys on Scientific Subjects, Natural Phenomers' A Series of Papers Basys on Astronomy: A Series of Papers Basys on Astronomy: A Series of Papers With 10 Fains and 21 WS, the Sun, str. With 10 Fains and 21 WS, the Sun, str. The Moon, her Motions, Aspects, Switch and Physical Conditions, with Three La-nar Photographs and many Plates, Charts, etc... The Expanse of Heaven

CHELLEN (H.) Spectrum Analysis, in its Application to Terrestrial Substances, and the Physical Constitution of the Heavenly Bodies.

SCIENCE PRIMERS: 1. Introductory. By Frot. Huxley, F.E.S... 2. Chemistry. By Prot. Boscoe... 1. Physics. By Balfour Stewart, With B-Instructions

lustrations Physical Geography. By Archibald Gei-kle, LL.D., F.R.S., fictible cloth......

SPINOZA (BENEDICT DE.) Tractates The-

TRAUSS (D. F.) The Old Faith and the TAINETS (E. A.) History of English Litera-ture. 2 vols The Class-Room Taine, History of English Literature. Abridged and Edited by John Flake. 7.50

2.50 TENNYSON'S (ALFRED) Poems ...... 1.75

THACKERAY'S (W.M.) Novels. Household Edition. Complete in 8 volumes. Per vol., 1.25. Vanity Fair, The Newcomes. Adventures of Philip. Pendennis.

Pendennis, The Virginians. Eamond, and Lovel the Widower. Missellaneous Writings. Household Edi-tion. Uniform with the Novels. Com-plete in 5 vols. With new Forirait. Far vol., 128 This edition includes all the matter in the lat-sting it, with the novels, the cheapense and mose scing it, with the novels, the cheapense and mose omplete Thackcray in the market. 1. Barry Lyndon, Hogynsrty Diamond, &c. 2. Paris, and Irish Sketco-Books, &c. 4. Souds, Sketches, Donks Mar. 6. Catherlee, Christmas Books, and Unre-printed Places.

THOREAU'S (II. D.) Walden; or, Life in the Woods in Pield and Forest, Portrait. The Maine Woods. Cape Cod	2.00 2.00 2.00 2.00 2.00
TYLOR (EDWARD B.) The Early History of Mankind. Primitive Culture. 2 volu.	1 50
TTYDALL (JOHN). Faraday as a Discov- ered resource of Science for Unscientific Feo- physics and Electricity Hours of Exercise in the Alga Heat as a Mode of Motion. On Sound Radiant Heat. Forms of Wakar Lectures on Light. Trocceedings at the Faraveril Banquet to	1,00 2,00 1,25 2,00 2,00 2,00 5,00 1,50
Prof. Tyndall TYTLER (SARAH.) Old Masters and their Pictures Modern Painters and their Paintings
VOYBEY (REV. CHARLES.) The Sling and the Stone. Vols. L and V., each. Vols III, IV. and V., each. The Voysey Appeal. Yoysey's Defence at York.	3.00
WARNER'S (CHARLES D.) My Summer in 8 Garden Sannterings Back-Log Studies	1.00
WEISS (JOHN.) American Bellgion	1.60-
WHIPPLE'S (E. P.) Literature and Life, Examps and Reviews. Character and Characteristic Men The Literature of the Age of Elizabeth Buccess and its Conditions Washington and the Revolution	1.50 3.00 1.50 1.50
WHITNEY'S (Mas. A. D. T.) A Summer in Leslie Goldthwalle's Life. We Giris: A Home Story Beal Folks The Other Giris	1.56

ADDRESS

INDEX, HE

1 Tremont Place, Boston

T

1.78.

	NONPAREIL Farm Feed, Bone, Drug, and Hand-grinding MILLS. Ten	A FEW COPIES ONLY	BOSTON LIBERAL LEAGUE.	A CHEAP OFFERI
<text></text>	Bisse. Also Cotton-Seed Hullers, Illustrat-	Of an excellent Photograph (Cabinet Size) of Rev. MONCURE D. CONWAY, of London,		A COMPLETE SET of INDEX TRACTS,
<text></text>	J. SEDGEBEER, Painesville, Ohio.	can be had at the office of THE INDEX. Price 50 cents.		Address The
	R	FREE DISCUSSION		INC. I Fremont Place, Boston, Mans
<text><text><text><text><text><text><text><text><text><text></text></text></text></text></text></text></text></text></text></text>		to Birest, Boston, every Sunday, at 10% A.M.,	hopest of the Latte	THE AMERICAN EDITION
<text><text><text><text><text><text><text><text><text><text></text></text></text></text></text></text></text></text></text></text>	PRICE, $50 below   any other First- VALUE, $30 above   class Bow's Hach.	2% and 7% P.M. All that reacts of mankind consti- Political, and Social Interests of mankind consti- tute the subjects for discussion. The INDEX		MONCURE D. CONTRACTO
<text><text><text><text><text><text><text><text><text><text></text></text></text></text></text></text></text></text></text></text>	SAVED, $50 by buying the Florence.	Hospitaller Hall.	the state of the s	SACRED ANTHOLOGY
<text><text><text><text><text><text><text><text><text><text></text></text></text></text></text></text></text></text></text></text>	the second se			A BOOK OF ETHNICAL SCRIPTIPES
		The bound volume of THE INDEA for 1813 (Volume i) will be promptly forwarded to any	Senaral circulation several circulation colors on a	has just been published, and any <text></text>			TBACT	posspalu on receipt of the price, $4.00.
<text></text>	or TB Washington Street, Boston, Mass.	Address Ing Ind In Day	on Church Respection being the article by Mr.
<text></text>	CHARLES SUMNER'S	CHARLES SUMNER.	Abbot which appeared in THE INDEX of Nov. 27.	Boston, Mass.
		A fine likeness of Massachusetts' great Sep-
	PROPHETIC VOICES	will be sent by mail to any sudress on receipt	it is already nearly exhausted.
		Address THE INDEX.
<text></text>		TO AT TO HE O DI A D P D		term of years, on unincumbered improved farms, at 12 per cent. interest per anony
<text></text>	trait, Crown Svo., Cloth extra, $2.		EVERY VOTER IN THE STATE,	ample security guaranteed. All expenses for <text></text>	Aside from its literary and historical mer-			by borrower. We collect and remit to any the fact that it was the last work on which	should like to contract for composition alone,		Gregor, Iowa: First National Bank, Ma
	"PROPHETIC VOICES" will be found of great	for one or more weekly papers.	have made arrangements for printing the Tract	kee, Wis.; City National Bank, Chicago Di-value to all who take an interest in the bis- tory of our country, so full is it of passages	Best of references given, and satisfactory work guaranteed. GEO. H. ELLIS,	I Unated and the second second and the second se	ALICUI DICTUINS OF CO., BADNATE, NAW Vort
The superpendicular structure is a structure in the struct	in which the unexampled prosperity of our		the entire expense alone.	REAL ESTATE SECURITIES.
$ \begin{array}{c} \text{All prime} \\ \hline \textbf{N} \\ \textbf{N} $	statesmen, and orators, of whom the lament-	Please examine the revised list of POPU-	Will not, then,
Addies       The NUMEX.       The NUMEX.       The NUMEX.       The NUMEX.       The NUMEX.       The Nume of the Num of the Nume of the Num of the Num of the Nume of the Num of the Num of the Num	Bent, post-paid, on receipt of price.	page. Any OBTAINABLE BOOK NOT IN	All Friends of the Movement	and vicinity,
H       V       E         H       V       E       We have a later at a different at a later by the price different at a differen		Readers of THE INDEX who desire to pur-	an arrends of the horomout	modes of employing capital. The old
Dr. C. & Drock Specified		who wish for information as to the price, &c.,	and the second	Real Estate and Loan Agency
Dr. C. & Drock Specified		their orders promptly filled and their inqui- ries answered by addressing		OF
Pr. Wn. A. Hammond.       BOUND VOLUMES OF THE       Bound of the Standard of	Dr. C. E. Brown-Sequard.	1 Tremont Place, Boston.	much they shall pay. To such we reply that the	the second se
<ul> <li>Tansar T. Friedda.</li> <li>A. RUBYEY MAT.</li> <li>Will Kap, Under Liefelda. M. Windert</li> <li>Wahr and Kap, Under Liefelda.</li> <li>Wahr and Wahr and Wah</li></ul>	Dr. Wm. A. Hammond.	BOUND VOLUMES OF THE	and the second	Guarantees perfect title and ample security
<ul> <li>T. A. RUNY P. OF FILL VERSE.</li> <li>THE NORSE IN A SERVICE</li> <li>THE NORSE IN A</li></ul>		Bound volumes of THE INDEX for 1871,		Firstclass securities always on hand. In-
$ \begin{array}{l} \label{eq:constraints} \\ \mbox{approx} \mbox{products} \mbox{approx} \mbox{products} \mbox{approx} \mbox} \mbox{approx} \mbox{approx} $		purchaser's expense) on receipt of \$2.00, \$2. 50, and \$3.00 respectively. These volumes	The second se	Real Estate Investments made on commission or on shares; taxes paid, &c.
$ \begin{array}{c} \label{eq:product} \end{tabular} \\ \en$	THE HORSE IN AMERICA.	of each other; for the important essays and		Orders of capitalists and real estate own- ers respectfully solicited.
<ul> <li>These interesting Lectures and Leiter, we are interesting Lectures and Leiter of Examples Lectures and Leiter of Examples Lectures and Leiter of the Stations of the option approach leave, have been and, being the result of the Stations of the option approach leave that we can be a fride of the station of the st</li></ul>	BAFETY AT SEA.	interest, and will furnish as instructive read-		REASONS FOR USING THE
THE ATTAL TOPORTS IN PRODUCT ALL PROVIDE ATTALLY, TARKEN DEVICE TO TRUE ALL PARKEN, THE THE VERTEAL XO, IF, ITERCONTREAL PARKEN, THE THE VERTEAL XO, ITERCONTREAL PARKEN, THE THE VERTEAL PARKEN, THE THE VERTEAL XO, ITERCONTREAL PARKEN, THE THE VERTEAL PARKEN PARKAN VERTURE PARKEN, THE VERTURE PARKEN PARKEN PARKEN PAR	SINK.	struggling out of Orthodoxy than one of
<ul> <li>The May interfug of Lie Advanced on Advanced on Operating of Lie Advanced on Advanced on Advanced on Advanced on Advanced on Advanced on Operating of Lie Advanced on Advanced on Operating of Lie Advanced on Advanced</li></ul>	with a careful report of the important papers read at the April meeting of the National Academy of Sciences at Washington, and at	Address THE INDEX, 1 Tremont Place, Boston.	and the story of the state of t	EUREKA SPOOL SILK.
<ul> <li>ar even for 8:</li> <li>ar even for 8:</li> <li>brain of all functions of a first status of the order of the fi</li></ul>	Bociety at Boston, are published in full in THE TRIBUNE EXTRA, No. 19. Price, in	WABBEN'S	With the Hope	It is full length. It is full size. It is smooth and elastic, and is equally adapted to hand or mashine use.
by sail.       THE WEEKLY TRIBUTS.       The ALBERS FAVORITS PAPER.       The ALBERS FAVORITS PAPE	or seven for $1.	TRUE UIVILLATION.	that such friends will try to secure as many sig-	Many kinds of spool silk are a perfect
<ul> <li>The state of the s</li></ul>	by mall.	E rice av centa.	and the second	frand, being not only shorter in length, but
<ul> <li>address</li> &lt;</ul>	the second se	PRACTICAL DETAILS,	C. C. C. Schler M. H. M. Karlow, S.	to be, and of so poor a quality as to be unit
B       U       S       T       O       File 25 cents.         B       U       S       T       O       File 25 cents.	until January 1, 1875, for $1.		and the second se	reka Silk exactly as represented. Every
THEODORE PARKER,       Drom 20 Control.       For sale by         Str       Str       For sale by       For			141 0	spool is warranted, and the manufacturer's name indelibly branded on every spool. Call
SIDNEY H_MORSE. Dignity, revertnes, seechnes, rigor, equip the clay; the aritis as of alled his, mesters. Dignity, revertnes, seechnes, rigor, equip the aritis as the above half of the aritis as of alled his, mesters. Dignity, revertnes, seechnes, rigor, equip the aritis as the above half of the aritis and the did the synthesist it has the above half of the aritis and the did the synthesist it has the above half of the aritis and the did the synthesist it has the above half of the aritis and the did the synthesist it has the above half of the aritis and the did the synthesist it has the above half of the aritis and the did the synthesist it has the above half of the aritis and the did the synthesist it has the above half of the aritis and the did the synthesist it has the above half of the aritis and the did the synthesist it has the above half of the aritis and the did the synthesist it has the above half of the aritis and the did the synthesist it has the above half of the aritis and the did the synthesist it has the aritis and the did the synthesist it has the aritis and the did the synthesist it has the aritis and the did the synthesist it has the aritis and the did the synthesist it has the aritis and the did the synthesist it has the aritis and the did the synthesist it has the aritis and the did the synthesist it has the aritis and the did the synthesist it has the aritis and the did the synthesist it has the aritis and the did the synthesist it has the aritis and the did the synthesist it has the aritis and the did the synthesist it has the aritis and the did the aritis and the did the synthesist it has the aritis and the synthesist and the did the synthesist it has the aritis and the synthesist and the did the synthesist it has the aritis and the synthesist and the synthesist and the synthesist it has the aritis and the synthesist it has the aritis and the synthesist and the synthesist it has the aritis and the synthesist it has the aritis and the synthesis and the aritis and the aritis and the synt	the second se		BOLL UP THE LIST!
billing and best of the set house of the mass. The second set of the mass of the set house of the mass. The descender may be end to be set the mass. The second set the mass. The second set the set house of the mass. The second set the set house of the mass. The second set the set house of the mass. The second set the set house of the mass. The second set the set house of the mass. The second set the set house as the second set the set house as the second set the set house as the second set the set house. The second set the set house as the second set the set house. The second set the set house as the set of the mass. The second set the set house as the set of the set house as the set of the set house as the set of the set house. The second set the set house as the set of the set house as the set of the set of the set house the set of the set house the set of the set the set the set of the set of the set	BY	S. H. MORSE,	Latons polici voices he heard! And lat it he	RADICAL AND LITEBARY poles, bristhe through the clay, the sole anegot the as colled line or has been about the process the sole anegot the mage of the sole anegot the process the sole and the process the process the sole and process the sole and the sole and the sole and the process the process the sole and process the sole and the process t			The state of the second s	TROWTRES
Out and nonle inst name in a base of able curve in the inst nonleting three intervention of the strate in the inst nonleting three intervention of the strate in the inst nonleting three interventions in three interventions in three inst nonleting three interventions in the inst nonleting three interventions interventions interventing three interventions interventing three in	Dolle, Dreathe Inrough the clay; the artist	POLUDAN OUDDEUTIONS OF	the second s
<ul> <li>The hear acter had wrought on the live in grow are tempted to actiant did to hit protection of the hear acter lide of artist did to hit protection of the hear acter lide of artist did to hit protection.</li> <li>All the character lide of artist did to hit protection of the hear acter lide of artist did to hit protection.</li> <li>All the character lide of artist did to hit protection.</li> <li>All the character lide of artist did to hit protection.</li> <li>All the character lide of artist did to hit protection.</li> <li>All the character lide of artist did to hit protection.</li> <li>All the character lide of artist did to hit protection.</li> <li>All the character lide of artist did to hit protection.</li> <li>All the character lide of artist did to hit protection.</li> <li>All the character lide of artist did to hit protection.</li> <li>All the character lide of artist did to hit protection.</li> <li>All the character lide of artist did to hit protection.</li> <li>All the character lide of artist did to hit protection.</li> <li>All the character lide of artist did to hit protection.</li> <li>All the character lide of artist did to hit protection.</li> <li>All the character lide of artist did to hit protection.</li> <li>All the character lide of artist did to hit protection.</li> <li>All the character lide of artist did to hit protection.</li> <li>All the character lide of artist did to hit protection.</li> <li>All the character lide of artist did to hit protection.</li> <li>All the character lide of artist did to hit protection.</li> <li>All the character lide of artist did to hit protection.</li> <li>All the character lide of artist did to hit protection.</li> <li>All the character lide of artist did to hit protection.</li> <li>All the character lide of artist did to hit protection.</li> <li>All the character lide of artist did to hit protection.</li> <li>All the character lide of artist did to hit protection.</li> <li>All the character lide of artist did to hit protection.</li> <li>All the charact</li></ul>	or that noble life that he has been able cun-	ORGAN MUSICI
Particled work, "Speak theil"-Harnach K.       Bailsto's Organ Voluntaries.       2.0         All the characteristics of my husband are in the stat ling returnes, his governes, his over the transmit of the state ling returnes, his over the transmit of the state ling returnes, his over the transmit of the state Ling returnes, his over the state of returnes, his over the state of the state Ling returnes, his over the state of the state Ling returnes, his over the state of the state Ling returnes, his over the state of the state Ling returnes, his over the state of the state Ling returnes, his over the state of the state Ling returnes, his over the state of the state Ling returnes, his over the state of the state Ling returnes, his over the state of the state Ling returnes, his over the state of the state Ling returnes, his over the state Ling returnes the state	which the character had wrought on the liv- ing fibre. We are tempted to exclaim, as we	and the second se	Other Organizations	JUHN WEISS.
All the characteristics of my humband arg in the bust, most shared to the many bust of the second provide it and the second provide it at the second provide at the second provide at the second provide at the second provid	perfected work, "Speak then!"-Hannah R.			RADICAL LECTURES.
ienderneess, his love. You can projectify to life to day or many file jour you can projectify to an projectify to an operator it, and his Mr. Morre has done.—Lydia D. Farkerson it will you show to can you can project to the show to any be constituted to the show have inclined to       of Liberalium." If, in any locality, there are those who are inclined to       An Act of Faith.         The eyes, though but of clay, are gleaming with possible targers, the life as its found in "fight a good fight" the life as reased. "-Samuel Longdet.       Show to unitaries. Complete. S.00 250 Easy Voluntaries. Zundel. 2.00 New Causer's Voluntaries. Zundel. 2.00 New Causer Voluntaries. 2.00 Eases Voluntaries. 2.00 Eases Voluntaries. 2.00 Clarke's Boort Voluntaries. 1.00 Clarke's Boort Voluntaries. 1.00 Clarke's Boort Voluntaries. 1.00 Clarke's Boort Voluntaries. 2.00 Fine collections of Pieces, Songs, and many, Theodore Parker.—L. S. & the food off for retail price.       I I BERALESI Market PEARLS I L I BERALS I L I BERALS I I all will units and work, the results sought and be accompliabed Adress       I. Cause of Langhter. 2. Fortia. 3. Optiers: All due to an in Booty school for Cabinet Organs. New Cause Music Book.—Ix Augure. School for Cabinet Organs. School for cabinet forgan. School for Cabinet Organs. School for Cabinet Organs. School for Cabinet Organs. School for cabinet forgan. School for Cabinet Organs. School for Cabinet Organs. School for cabinet Organs. School for Cabinet Organs. School for	All the characteristics of my husband are	50 Pleces for Organ. Batiste. 2.50		[1] S. M. W. M. S. M. W. D. S. Miller, "A strain of the
<ul> <li>Index solutions, Streamenton, S</li></ul>	tenderness, his love. You cannot give life to	and the second
<ul> <li>The syster, Sto each. Boain for transportation, with possible tealfy and poss</li></ul>	Hannah E. Stevenson.	much anort volumeries. 9 Nos.,	those who are inclined to	Beligion and Science.
<ul> <li>Im who, like Paul, could "right a good fight" low.</li> <li>Im who, like Paul, could "right a good fight" low.</li> <li>Im who, like Paul, could "right a good fight" low.</li> <li>Im who, like Paul, could "right a good fight" low.</li> <li>Im who, like Paul, could "right a good fight" low.</li> <li>Im who, like Paul, could "right a good fight" low.</li> <li>Im who, like Paul, could "right a good fight" low.</li> <li>Im who, like Paul, could "right a good fight" low.</li> <li>Im who, like Paul, could "right a good fight" low.</li> <li>Im who, like Paul, could "right a good fight" low.</li> <li>Im who, like Paul, could "right a good fight" low.</li> <li>Im who, like Paul, could "right a good fight" low.</li> <li>Im who, like Paul, could "right a good fight" low.</li> <li>Im who, like Paul, could "right a good fight" low.</li> <li>Im who, like Paul, could "right a good fight" low.</li> <li>Im who, like Paul, could "right a good fight" low.</li> <li>Im who, like Paul, could "right a good fight" low.</li> <li>Im who, like Paul, could "right a good fight" low.</li> <li>Im who, like Paul, could "right a good fight" low.</li> <li>Im who, like Paul, could "right a good fight" low.</li> <li>Im who, like Paul, could "right a good fight" low.</li> <li>Im who, like Paul, could "right a good fight" low.</li> <li>Im who, like Paul, could "right a good fight" low.</li> <li>Im who, like Paul, could "right a good fight" low and the low of the above books sent, post-paid, for retail price.</li> <li>Im who, like Paul, could "right a good fight" low and the good "right" low and the</li></ul>	The eyes, though but of clay, are gleaning with possible indignation, with possible tears; the lines are set firm with the resolution of	Zenner's Voluntaries, Complete, 3.00	Form a Liberal League,	Lears in heigion.
The first time I have seen Theodors Parker since he died.—Wrn. Sparrell. The hest representation of Mr. Parker ever servertied in clay.—Boston Daily Advertiser. The increase is good.—Boston Daily Advertiser. Nothing appears for beauty alone, or finish, or to show the vanity of the artist. All is from the time real. Yanker Short Voluntaries. Nothing appears for beauty alone, or finish, or to show the vanity of the artist. All is from the time real. Yanker Short Voluntaries. Corptes of this Bust, finely finished n plas- ter, $10 each. Bosting for transportation, $1 extra. Freight or expressage paid by party ending order. Weight of box about fifty pounds. Orders may seen to S. H. MORSE, Homm 15 07 Bust for the above books sent, post-paid, Prom 15 07 Bust for the above to S. H. MORSE, Prom 15 07 Bust for the above to S. H. MORSE, Prom 15 07 Bust for the short Volunt for the above to S. H. MORSE, Prom 15 07 Bust for the short of the above to books sent, post-paid, Prom 15 07 Bust for the above to S. H. MORSE, Prom 15 07 Bust for the short of the above to books sent, post-paid, S. H. MORSE, Prom 15 07 Bust for the short of the above to books sent, post-paid, Prom 15 07 Bust for the short of the above to books sent, post-paid, Prom 15 07 Bust for the short for the above to books sent, post-paid, Prom 15 07 Bust for the short for the above to books sent, post-paid, Prom 15 07 Bust for the short for the above to books sent, post-paid, Prom 15 07 Bust for the short for the above to books sent, post-paid, Prom 15 07 Bust for the short for the above to books sent, post-paid, Prom 15 07 Bust for the short for the above to books sent, post-paid, Prom 15 07 Bust for the short for the above to books sent, post-paid, Prom 15 07 Bust for the short for the above to books sent, post-paid, Prom 15 07 Bust for the short for the above to books sent, post-paid, Prom 15 07 Bust for the short for the	him who, like Paul, could "light a good fight" as well as "give a reason."-Samuel Longisl-	and the second		SHAKSPEARIAN LECTURES.
The best representation of Mr. Parker ever executed in clay.—Boston Daily Globs. The face is strong and noble as it should be the likeness is good.—Boston Daily Advertiser. To show the vanity of the artist. All is or to show the vanity of the artist. All is or to show the vanity of the artist. All is or to show the vanity of the artist. All is or gooten to the man.—the true, real, Vankee Mage. Coples of this Bust, finely finished n plas- ter, Silo each. Boxing for transportation, si extra. Freight or expressage paid by party sending order, weight of box about fifty pounds. Orders may be sent to S. H. MORSE, Boom 15 05 Demus 105 Demus 2000 about fifty pounds. Orders may be sent to S. H. MORSE,	The first time I have seen Theodore Parker
<ul> <li>Executed in clayBoston Daily Globs. The face is strong and noble as it should be The likeness is goodBoston Daily Advertiser. Nothing appears for beauty alone, or finis, or to show the vanity of the artist. All is forgetion in the man-the true, real, Yankee Boston to fally divertiser. New Cause's Bloot Voluntaries. Colarke's Bloot Companion. 200 Fine collections of Fleece, Songs, and Tunes may also be found in Emerson's New Age. Coples of this Bust, finely finished n plas- textra. Freight or expressage paid by party sending order. Weight of box ahout fifty pounds. Orders may be sent to S. H. MORSE, Boston 13 05 Demonstration. S. H. MORSE, Boston 13 05 Demonstration. S. H. MORSE, Boston 14 05 Demonstration. S. H. MORSE, Boston 15 05 Demonstration. Boston 15 05 Demonstration. Boston 15 05 Demonstration. Boston 15 05 Demonstration. Boston 15 05 Demonstratin Shakappares Charasotem. Boston 15 05 Demonstration. Boston</li></ul>	The best representation of Mr. Parker ever			2. Irony and Humor.
The interesting good Mozon Daity Adverture.       Clarke's Short Volumetaries.       1.60         Nothing appears for beauty alone, of finish.       Clarke's Beed Organ Companies.       1.60         Or to show the vanity of the artist. All is forgotten in the man-the true, real, Yanke of the analytic of the	The face is strong and noble as it should be.	grama, 1.50	LIBERALSI	5. Dogberry, Malvolio, Bottom, Touchstons. 4. Ajax in Troilus and Cressida: The Por-
Torgotten in the man-the true, real, Yankee man, Theodore Parker.—L. S. B. in the Golder, Joe. Copies of this Bust, fuely finished n plass for, $10 each. Boxing for transportation, $1 extra. Freight or expressage paid by party sending order, Weight of box about fifty pounds. Orders may be sent to S. H. MORSE, Boom 15 05 Demoks Sent to S. H. MORSE, S. H.	Nothing appears for beauty alone, or finish.	Clarke's Road Orman Companyion 900	and a star of the set	ter in Macbeth: The Fool in Lear.
Copies of this Bust, finely finished n plas- ter, $10 each. Boxing for transportation, $1 extra. Freight or expressage paid by party pounds. Orders may be sent to S. H. MORSE, Box Marke's New Method, and in Boot's School for Cabinet Organs. New Churke's New Method, and in Boot's School for Cabinet Organs. New Churke's New Method, and in Boot's School for Cabinet Organs. New Churke's New Method, and in Boot's School for Cabinet Organs. New Churke's New Method, and in Boot's School for Cabinet Organs. New Churke's New Method, and in Boot's School for Cabinet Organs. New Churke's New Method, and in Boot's School for Cabinet Organs. New Churke's New Method, and in Boot's School for Cabinet Organs. New Churke's New Method, and in Boot's New Churke's Method, and in Boot's New Churke's Method, and in Boot's School for Cabinet Organs. New Churke's New Method, and in Boot's School for Cabinet Organs. New Churke's Method, and Indeges School for Cabinet Organs. School for Cabinet Organs. School for Cab	forgotten in the man-the true, real, Vankee	Fine collections of Pieces, Songs, and		6. Hamlet.
Copies of this Bust, finely finlahed n plas- ter, $10 each. Boxing for transportation, $1 extra. Freight or expressage paid by party pounds. Orders may be sent to S. H. MORSE, Boom 15 05 Demonstration S. H. MORSE, Boom 15		method, Clarke's New Method, and in Root's	It is a second and the second s	the second se extra. Freight or expressage paid by party sending order. Weight of box about fifty pounds. Orders may be sent to S. H. MORSE, Box 13 20 20 20 20 20 20 20 20 20 20 20 20 20	Copies of this Bust, finely finished n plas- ter, $10 each. Boxing for transportation	and the second	POSTON LIDEDAL LELOUE	2. Portia.
pounds. Orders may be sent to S. H. MORSE, Bermits of Dury Lace, BOBTON. 6. Contrast in Shakspeare's Characters. Address JOHN WEISS,	extra. Freight or expressage haid by narty		DUSTUN LIBERAL LEAGUE,	4. Macbeth and Lady Macbeth.
S. H. MORSE, ULIVER DITSON & CO., Per moder of the Address JOHN WEISS,	pounds. Orders may be sent to	for resau price.	NO. 1 TREMONT PLACE, BOSTON.	6. Contrast in Shakspeare's Characters.
ALEGUTIVE COMMITTER, I SI E. Brooking Sk, Br	S. H. MORSE, Room 13, 25 Bromfield St., Boston, Mass.	A COMPANY AND A REAL OF A COMPANY AND A REAL PROPERTY OF	Per order of the
			· ····································	. BE IN MUVERING SHI STRATE

manus Google

312

THEINDER - ULA MAR, ...,

Three Dollars a Year.

LIBERTY AND LIGHT.

BOSTON, MASS., THURSDAY, JULY 2, 1874.

Single Copies Seven Cents.

WHOLE NO. 236.

VOLUME 5.

24

÷. 10 tra 1

2

a.

ł

ORGANIZE!

THE DEMANDS OF LIBERALISM.

1. We demand that churches and other ecclesization property shall no longer be exempt from just taration. 3. We demand that the employment of obaplains in Con-gress, in State Legislarares, in the navy and militia, and in prisons, synimas, and all other institutions supported by public money, shall be discontinued.

& We demand that all public appropriations for aduca-tional and charitable institutions of a sectarian character chall cease.

shall cease. 4. We demand that all religious services now sustained by the government shall be abolished; and especially that the use of the Bible in the public schools, whether ceitensi-bly as text-book or arowedly as a book of religious wor-ship, shall be prohibited.

by a still be prohibited. a We demand that the appointment, by the President of the United States or by the Governors of the various States, of all religious festivals and fasts shall wholly cease. 6. We demand that the judicial oath in the courts and in all other departments of the government shall be abol-lated, and that simple saffirmation under the pains and pen-alties of perjury shall be established in its stead. 7. We demand that laws directly or indirectly enforc-ing the observance of Sunday as the Sabbath shall be re-ing the observation of the server of the enforcement of .8. We demand that all laws looking to the enforcement of "Christias" morally shall be shrogated, and that all laws shall be conformed to the requirements of natural morality, equal rights, and impartial liberty. 9. We demand that not only in the Constitutions of the United States and of the several States, but also in the practical administration of the same, no privilege or ad-rantage shall be conceeded to Christianity or any other spe-cial religion; that our entire political system shall be found-ted administrated on a purely secular basis; and that whatever changes shall prove nocesary to this end shall be consistently, unfinchingly, and promptly made.

A FORM OF LOCAL ORGANIZATION.

Whereas, it is our profound conviction that the safety of republicant institutions is imperiled, the advance of civil-saion impeded, and the most sacred rights of man in-thinged, by the least interference of the State in matters of religion; and religion; and Wherear, Cartain grave inconsistencies with the general print of the United States Constitution still mark the prac-tical administration of our political system, threatening the perpetuity of religious liberty, the existence of free public schools, and the peace and prosperity of the entire land; TERREPORE, We, the undersigned, hereby associate our ABTIOLES OF AGREEMENT.

MAIL LEAGUE OF ______. ART. 3.—The object of the Liberal League shall be to se-curs practical compliance with the "Demands of Liberal-ism" throughout the country, and especially in ______. Also, as soon as five bundred such Liberal Leagues shall have been formed in different places, to send two delegates to a National Convention of Liberal Leagues, to be heread-ier called, in order to co-operate with all the liberals of the country in securing the needed reforms. Art. 3.—The means employed in working for these objects country in securing the needed reforms. Arr. 3.-The means employed in working for these objects shall be regular local meetings, free discussions, lectures, addresses, conventions, the pistform and the press in gen-eral, and all such other means as are peaceable, orderly, ad right.

accurate. Asr. 4.—Such measures shall be adopted for raising funds for he League as shall be prescribed in the By-Laws by a two-birds rote of the members. Asr. 6.—Any person may become a member of the League by subscribing his or her name to these Articles of Agree-ment.

Ment. Air. 6.—The Officers of the League shall be a President, a Vice President, a Secretary, a Treasurer, and an Excou-tive Committee of three members; and their duties shall be those commonly pertaining to these offices. The President and Berrelary shall be ex-officio delegates to the National Coroniton of Liberal Leagues whom called together. Art. 7.—These Articles of Agreement may be ananded by a three-fourth rote of the members present at any reg-ular mosting, provided due notice of the proposed amend-ments shall have been sent to every member at least two weeks previous to such meeting.

So far as I am concerned, the above is the platform of Tax impar. I believe in it without reserve; I believe that it will yet be accepted universally by the American people, A the only platform consistent with religions liberty. A Liberal League ought to be formed to carry out its princi-ples wherever haif a dozen earnest and resolute Liberals ples wherever half a dozen earnest and resolute Liberals can be got together. Being convinced that the movement to secure compliance with these just "Demands" must sarshy, even if slowly, spread, I hope to make Tam Libbar a means of furthering it; and I ask the assistance and source cooperation of every man and every womas who be lives in it. Multiply Liberal Leagues every womas who be jeet promptly the names of their Presidents and Socre-taries. Intolerance and bigotry will tremble in proportion at that list grows. If freedom, justice, and reason are right, let their organized volce be heard like the sound of many waters. FRANCIS & ABBOT. Editor.

FRANCIS & ABBOT, Editor. Bowrow, Bept. 1, 1873,

For List of Liberal Longues, see next page, RELIGIOUS FREEDOM AMENDMENT:

PROPOSED AS A SUBSTITUTS FOR THE FIRST AMENDMENT TO THE UNITED STATES CON-STITUTION.

ATTICLE 1. BATTICLE 1. Substrate of the state of the second sec

NOTES AND COMMENTS.

BY A. W. S.

"CHRISTIANITY is Christlikeness." This is a definition contributed by the Christian Union.

THE ENGLISH Punch assumes for itself a cla character in the funny literature of the times. In the issue of June 6, it speaks of itself as-

"Punch, England's Socrates, so grave and gay, Teaches the world wise langhter, Whose happy echoes will be heard hereafter."

TREBS is an old lady in Boston, in her one hundredth year, who lives on Chambers Street in a house which she has inhabited and owned for seventy years. Another tenement, adjoining hers, and which she also owns, she has rented to the same occupants for seventy years in auccession.

MR. S. H. MORSE has finished his large bust of The dore Parker, and is holding it (in plaster cast) on exhibition at his rooms, 25 Bromfield Street, during this week. The success which attended the artist in his moulding of the smaller bust of Mr. Parker, in greater degree has crowned his efforts with this larger one.

CHARLES BRADLAUGH has a column in his National Reformer headed, "To Correspondents." In this column, in the issue of May 17, we find the following sen-tentious paragraph: "One anonymous Christian threatens us with personal violence. We advise him, for his own sake, not to try,-unless, indeed, he is taller and stronger than we are."

C. P. CRANCE has a fine poem in the Independent of June 25, on "The Old South Meeting-House," the last few lines of which are as follows :--

"Ab, let us hope some generous hands may save The proud old building from its grave; Bome nobler faith best back the encrosching creed Whose central law is Self, whose god is Greed!"

WE HAVE received copies of two sermons-one entitled A Plea for the Human Element in Religion, by Rev. George Batchelor of Salem, Mass.; and the other, Piety and Morality, by Rev. W. T. Clarke of New York,-for which we return our thanks to the authors. Both discourses are very interesting, full of vigorous thought and freah Idens.

THE SPECTATOR is the name of a little folio paper which comes to us from Worcester, Mass. It "is pub-lished occasionally" by John Francis Smith. Among its editorial spice it says that "there is no place in popular esteem for a man who has a conscience." We hope that it will be proven both that Mr. Smith has a conscience, and that his little Spectator will secure a place in the popular esteem.

MR. SPURGEON thinks that "God must change before he will let a sinner perish, who trusts in Christ." But how will it be with one who trusts in Buddhs, or Mahomet, or Confucius? To our benighted mind a sinner is a sinner, and a saint a saint, no matter whom he trusts in. Is it possible that God thinks any more of a Christian sinner than he does of a Buddhist, a Mohammedan, or a Chinese? If he does, then we should say he needs "change."

A CORRESPONDENT writing to us says: "As for religion, I have none, and don't want any; but I have faith in the goodness and justice of God." Well, for the want of any better, we should say that this faith in God might pass very well for a religion for our friend. It is a pretty good faith to have, on the whole, if one can hold on to it in reason. Without some such confidence in God, or Nature, or the integrity of the universe itself, the bottom would seem to fall out of things pretty generally.

THE POPE has long been called Pius, but it appears now that he is also benevolent. During his late severe illness, "when he was too ill to rise," says the Catholic Revise, "he remembered the afflictions of the lunatics in the Roman asylum, and sent them a large present of oranges, lemons, and other fruits, from the gardens of the Vatican, as well as a quantity of bright flowers." Kind old man! It is 'by their fruits ye shall know them;" and, among his others, let us remember these oranges and lemons of the venerable Pio Nono.

THE GROVE-MEETING, or Picnic, of the Second Radical Club, at Waltham, last Sunday, was a very successful and enjoyable affair. The weather was propitious, the Charles River never more gentle and beautiful, the Picnio grounds were delightful, and the members of the Club very jolly and happy. No accident occurred to teach us that it was wicked to have a Picnic on Sunday, and every one seemed to be on good terms with the universe. Gen-eral Banks, from Waltham, dropped quistly in on the scene; and, when speaking-time came, he said enough to show that he had a cordial and friendly feeling towards the occasion and its participants.

THE Brooklyn Argus (which, by the way, is a most spicy and readable daily) says that "Charles Sunner never reliabed a joke." The Argus is mistaken. A friend of ours, who is an inveterate and irresistible joker, once related to us how, in Mr. Snmner's own house in Washington, he "tried a joke" on the Senator, who received it with the most hearty and sympathetic laughter; and, moreover, replied to it in the same vein. We are glad to be able, of our own knowledge, to correct the drgue in this statement; as, otherwise, we confess, our admiration for Mr. Summer would be modified somewhat. We are airaid and distrustful of that man who has no sense of humor in him; in other words, who "never relishes a joke."

THE Christian Union is the most rational and sensible Orthodox paper that we know anything about. It is as liberal as any Christian might desire, and often comes very near to being as free-religious as any one could wish. In its issue of June 24, the editorial leader is on "A Great Hercey." It says: "There is one form of error so fatal, so persistent, so wide-spread, that it fairly may be called the great herery. Its essence is this: Men re-gard religion as in some way a substitute for right living, gard religion as in some way a scientific to the higher may instead of the highest form of right living." And after anlarging upon what it calls true religion, it says: "True religion, in a word, brings transcendent motives, and appeals to the noblest capacities and highest energies of buman nature, all centering in this: that men are set upon the most earnest effort towards goodness."

THE BECENT death of Rev. Charles Lowe, of Somerville, has filled the hearts of his friends-and they were mady-with very deep sorrow. It was our privilege to have known Mr. Lowe, with some degree of intimecy, for several years. While he was serving his long term as Secretary of the American Unitarian Association, we were a member of its Board of Directors for two years, and had frequent occasions of meeting him and testing and had irequent occasions of meeting him and testing the genlianess, courtesy, and nobility of his nature. Though of decidedly conservative convictions, he was most broad, generous, and liberal in his spirit-always, as an officer of the Association, in practical mattern, dis-posed to go far in toleration of the radicals of his denom-nation. Will domain to wards are in this ination. His demeanor towards ns, in this respect, we Instion. His demeanor towards us, in this respect, we shall always remember with the most appreciative con-sideration. We over found him an eminently true and sincere man, and as open and frank as the day. In spirits and character, as well as in faithful and valuable service, he was one of the brightest ornaments and most useful members of the Unitarian denomination in America.

Donast to Google

LIST OF LIBEBAL LEAGUES.

Sr. LOUIS, MO.-M. A. McCord, President; P. A. Lofgreen, L. La Grille, Secretaries.
BOSTON, MASS.-F. E. Abbot, President; J. P. Titcomb, G. A. Bacon, Socretaries.
JENFERSON, ORIO.-W. H. Crowell, President; A. Giddings, Secretary.
Secretary.
Secretary.
Secretary.
Secretary. Secretary. ToLEDO, IOWA.-J. Reedy, President; E. S. Beokley, Secre-tary. tary. VINELAND, N. J. -- John Gage, President; Sue M. Clute, VINELAND, N. J. - John Gage, Freedmin; Suc M. Onde, Secretary. JUNCTIONVILLE, NEB.- J. W. Eastman, President; E. L. Easloy, Secretary. OLATHE, KAM.-S. B. S. Wilson, President; H. A. Griffin, Secretary. DETROIT, MICH.-W. R. Hill, Freedent; A. T. Garretson, Secretary. BEREDEVILLE, MICH.-A. G. Eastman, President; T. R. Knowles, Secretary. Secretary. Onconta, M. - M. B. Lampson, I toutour, M. Scoretary, Scoretary, M. - F. G. Barker, President; C. Rhodes, Scoretary, BARLIN, Wis, - President, J. D. Walters; Scoretary, E. M. Bridgman, Waaningrow, D.C. - George M. Wood, President; J. E. Crawford, Scoretary, UBURN, OHIO. - John Fish, President; G. W. Barnes, Treas-ner. urer. MINEMPOLIS, MINN.-President, J. B. Bassett; Secretary, Anton Grethen. Nuw Yong, N.Y.-J. B. Brown, President; D. M. Bennett, Secretary. Secretary. Sr. Joseph, Mo .- P. V. Wise, President; T. H. Kennedy,

Becretary. EAO CLAINE, WIS.-President, S. J. Dickson; Secretary, W. Kennedy. BALSEO, LND.-President, T. Gray; Secretary, W. Allen. NEW OBLEANS, LA.-President, E. Vorster; Secretary, J. E. Wallace. BAY Crrv, Mixon.-President, S. M. Green; Secretary, S. M. Johnson

Johnson. CLEARFIELD, PA.-S. Widemire, President; H. Hoover, Secretary.

Why go to Church?

A SERMON IN LYRIO GALL, NEW YORE, FEDEUARY 8, 1874. BY O. B. FROTHINGHAM.

I propose to discuss the claims of our Sunday ser-vices on intelligent people who are outside of the sects. That the discussion may have interest and point, let us begin it by putting and meeting the plain question: Why should such people attend them? Why go to church? To technical Christians such a question would have no meaning, would be pertinent to nothing. Why go to church it he Catholic would say. Because the Church is the ordained means of election a divine institution planted and inspired question would have no meaning, would be pertinent to nothing. Why go to church! the Catholic would say. Because the Church is the ordained means of salvation; a divine institution, planted and inspired in order that human beings may be rescued from the "Prince of the World" and brought into the house-hold of God. Going to church is entering the gate to heaven. Who would not go? Who but reckless, abandoned people refuse or neglect to go? The altar of ancrifice, the blessed sacraments, the rites and or-dinances filled with healing virtue, the priests ex-dowed with reconciling powers, are altogether a gracious arrangement devised by Heaven for the ben-efit of fallen man, which none but fools will turn away from. Why go to church! exclaims the Prot-estant. Because it is the place where the gospel is preached to sinful, dying me; the goopel of redemp-tion—the only gospel by which we are saved. "Who-sover shall call on the name of the Lord shall be saved. But how shall they call on him in whom they have not believed ? and how shall they believe in him of whom they have not heard ? and how shall they hear without a preacher?" So it is written. To support the preaching of the gospel is a duty laid down in the Bible, which we are not neglect if we would. It is not for us to pass judgment on the gos-pel, but to welcome it. The message is for our bene-it; the terms of acceptance are simple. It better be-comes beneficiaries such as we are to take gratefully what is offered them, than to turn sulkily away be-cause the boon might have been presented in a shape more attractive to their carnal reason. To those who reason thus I have nothing here to say. But the people whom I have in mind reason differ-ently. If they go to church it is because it is the cure

To those who reason thus I have nothing here wear, But the people whom I have in mind reason differ-ently. If they go to church it is because it is the cua-tom, or because it is social, or because they see their friends there, or because the preacher is eloquent, or because they find a commercial interest in it; or, per-because they have nothing better to do. It is the second secon

E INDEX JULY 2, 1

Prominent, and its indicate no less inighty on the heart. Another means of performing our task is the read-ing of Scriptures, which contain the antique wisdom of the race; not the Hebrew and Christian Scriptures only, but the Scriptures of old Asia, India, Egypt, China; of Persian sages and Greek bards, whose volces utter the solemn convictions of their ages and peoples. Time has sanctified these deep words; cen-turies have pollshed and set them; they are round and smooth as stones which the eternal ocean has wrought into perfect shapes on the sandy beaches. Sentences as wise and weighty might be collected from modern writers: from Shakapeare, Bacon, Goethe, Emerson. But the best of these are chaste and vener-able; all associations with personal weakness, with infirmities of character and accidents of fortune have

Beneration. But the best of these are chaste and vener-able; all associations with personal weakness, with infirmities of character and accidents of fortune have been rubbed out; they bear no private mark of indi-vidual, of age, or of nation, but are interchangeable all over the world. To read them calls up the think-ing, feeling, houging, suffering, aspiring generations, gives a strong background to our trembling thought, orifles with the attestation of departed centuries the attempts we make to steady our minds amid the cur-rents of speculation and emotion. Third agency we employ is prayer. This also is invorting we make to steady our minds amid the cur-rents of speculation and emotion. Third agency we employ is prayer. This also is involved and thirst for divine things. Of course no one is to suppose that we employ it as religious people in so dottaining favors from a divine being, of estab-hishing private relations with a patron deity—no such support and thirst for divine things. Of course no one is to suppose that we employ it as religious people insto dottaining favors from a divine being, of estab-hishing private relations with a patron deity—no such supplice afters our mind. We offer no petition; we supplice to run boon, not seven a spiritual one; we address ourselves to no person who dwells in another supplice to run boon, not seven a spiritual one; we supplice for no boon, not seven a spiritual one; we supplice for no boon, not seven a spiritual one; we supplice for no boon, not seven a spiritual one; we supplice for an instant, as supremely desirable and in the out answer. The desire is its own satisfaction; the peti-tion is own answer. The desire is nothing for the weat if does not exist. It is a deliberate effort to call up and hold in thew, for an instant, as supremely desirable and isonic texists; an uttered wish for it when it does not exist. The act may be genuine and sincere—as which, nevertheless, seem to us sweetly and glorious-ithich are remote from our daily experience; which we d but even so, it is better than in it were not performent at all. To come now to the sermon. The general aim of this is precisely the same as of the other parts; that is to say, it is the transport of minds to higher regions of thought. But here the sgency is directly intellec-ual. The sermon is addressed, not to the emotions or sentiments, but to the understanding. Your preacher does not claim to be a scientific instructor, or a master in speculative philosophy. He does not, like the Romish priest or the Protestant divine, arro-gate a special inspiration by virtue of ordination or consecration through the imposition of hands. He is the apostle of no revelation, he announces no gespel of redemption, he brings no message of deliverance. He asserts for himself no divine commission, he asks for his word no authority, he affects to possess no peof redemption, he brings no message of deliverance. He asserts for himself no divine commission, he asks for his word no authority, he affects to possess no pe-culiar knowledge or wisdom above other men, he puts on no airs of superiority by virtue of his position. He concedes to the editor, the lecturer, the platform speaker, the scientific professor his utmost of due. The only office he claims to discharge is that of a stim-ulator of the highest intellect. He is the priest of ideas, the minister of intelligence, the month-piece of immaterial mind. The sole title to respect or con-sideration is his fidelity in discharging this fine func-tion--the right to discharge which is forfeited by theological dogmatism, as well as by an undue inter-est in other matters that are out of his sphere. To him it seems that there are subjects which peo-ple cannot afford to forget; which they need to hold in earnest remembrance, and require to have pre-sented to them statedly, for the reason that their or-dinary daily life tends to keep them out of mind. Modern exiltence has to be to such an extent devoted to basiness, politics, society, that the aspects which are not wanted by head to head the very Modern existence has to be to such an extent devoted to business, politics, society, that the aspects which are not palpably visible are concealed, and the very worth of them is doubted. Material uses make such demand on the intellect that no other uses are thought of. The intellect comes to be regarded as an instrument of material uses, and its ideal faculties of reflection, contemplation, meditation, insight into truth, fall into neglect and are discredited. The subjects I allude to are not theological, not technically Christian, not professional in the usual sense. I have not in mind Trinity, deity of Christ, atonement, man fallen and redeemed, the misery of the present or the felicity of the future state. I am not thinking of the articles of faith in their attenu-ated form; not of the sanctity of the Scriptures, the character of Jesus, the excellences of Christianity, the importance of minding the soul's concerns, the me.

ated form; not of the sanctify of the Scriptures, the character of Jesus, the excellences of Christianity, the importance of minding the soul's concerns, the mys-tery and a wfulness of the life immortal. My thought is fixed on themes of more universal interest, that should be engaging to people who have detached themselves from personal Associations with all organ-ized and instituted faith. The purely human rela-tions which men sustain to each other by virtue of their human nature, the qualities implied in these relations, the duties comprised in them, the social changes they involve, the ites they weave, the respon-sibilities they impose, are matters with which it is his province to deal. The capacities and possibilities of man, the reach of his hopes, the range of his dealers, the worth of his expansion and elevation, come within the scope of his treatment. The significance of the ancient words God, Immortality, Life, Death, it is for him to measure and announce. All that is con-veyed in the terms worship, adoration, reverence, plety—terms as old as humanity, and as new as the last-coined phrase, —he makes it his duty to estimate. Man's effort to perfect himself, the longing of the finite mind to communicate with the Infinite mind, with the hundred matters of interest that follow from it—this concerns him primarily, as it concerns also every reflecting person. Topics like these do not fall within the consideration of other teachers. The man of science has nothing to do with them; the philoso-pher deals with them abstractly. The man of letters avoids them as unsuited to his sends; the journaliat is oocupied with problems of less permanent interest. It is the preacher's office to bring them directly before the people as questions of vital concernment; to inseeds and occupations of the hour. The material account of the hour protocol the hour protocol of th forefeeling reason, had played no mean part in the history of discovery. And I think you would be per-suaded that this faculty had no mean part yet to play. Exclude ideas, sentiments, intuitions, prophe-cies of the imagination, the previsions of faith, from the domain of truth, and you leave the domain deso-late indeed. The effect would be the same as if you were to exclude poetry from literature, or were to re-duce art to the function of map-drawing and chart-making. You would simply take the glory, yes the inspiration, out of the world; and with the glory and inspiration the impulse and the joy of movement, the charm of progress, the spring of hope, the winged bound of enthusiasm. Now this method of the poet, which accomplishes inspiration, out of the world; and with the glory and inspiration the impulse and the joy of movement, the charm of progress, the spring of hope, the winged bound of enthusiasm. Now this method of the poet, which accomplishes such beautiful results, which achieves such wonder-ful triumphs of discovery, which illumines so finely the obscure regions where knowledge has neither eyes to see nor feet to tread,—this method of intui-tion, of neight, is also that of the preacher and teacher of religion. He follows the poetic laws; he is in his way a poet, not in the sense of being a maker of verses, but in the sense of being a ser, an interpreter, a discerner of subtle analogies, a "reader between the lines" of the divine manuscript of be-ing. He starts with a few primary assumptions or first principles; faith in order, iaw, harmony, beauty, faith in causes, in the persistency and purpose and final goodness, faith in creative, ruling, and presiding love; and these leading assumptions he brings to bear and applies on all occasions and to all subjects whatsoever; doing his best to justify his faith to himself and others, and to show how, in accordances with it, the facts of existence become intelligible. That he does this successfully, in all cases or any case, is not the question; that he does it with any distinguished ability or skill, is not the question. All preachers and teachers of religion are not great, by distingerished more than comparison of their minds, are predexistence bears of religion have this offleo, and try to discharge it, in most cases, with such tal-ent and conscience as are given them. They are usually men who, by the constitution of their minds, are predexistend to this calling. Their special taidles prepare them for it; the companionship of books, the familiarity with great minds, the commerce with high thoughts, the intercourse with natures of gen-us like their own, the admiring love of the noblest examples of humanity, all conspire to aid them. They lead quiet, secluded lives, free from th progressive. Their Messiah was a dream, but it was a spiendid one. Their New Jerusalem always stayed in the clouds, never came down; their regenerated earth never appeared; their happy human state kept receding before them. But the vision answered its purpose; the heavenly city had foundations in faith; in hope the regenerated earth did exist; and the deathless principles of human kindness still predict-ed that the perfect human condition would be ob-tained.

Google

<text><text><text><text>

Jasus made vivid and beautiful to his contempora-fies the vision of the kingdom of heaven, and laid down the ethics of the Millennium in the Sermon on heavied, despairing people; the ethies of the Millen-minum are read reveningly, in faith, by millions who heavied, despairing people; the ethies of the Millen never think of living up to them, could not live up to heavied, despairing people; the ethies of the Millen never think of living up to them, could not live up to heavied, despairing people; the ethies of the Millen never think of living up to them, could not live up to heavier, believe that they express profoundest truths. It is often objected to the Sunday preachers that they are dreamers—that they hope too much, believe foo passionately, trust so obsolutely, have a wild, fantastical faith in human nature, are flighty enthu-inats for abstract principles, are good architects of probably true, and ls it not to their credit that it hould be true? Have not visions their place? Has not dreaming its use? If the prophecy comes from nobleness, generosity, kindness, love; if it is the an-ticipation of the single heart, guilelesu, uneffish-true to its best intuition, is it not good to listen to it and take it home? Though in our time, and in time or prove that the ours, it may not be fulfiled, may not faith in it hasten the time when it shall be ful-filed? May not the entertainment of it enable hon-est, pain people to promote the coming of auch at thingdom who believe in a Kingdom to be worked for? Will any toil less patiently at laying the long tore prove that the best practical work is done by base who cherich the highest aspirations. Thus, in entire frankness, I state my view of the sophetely, and often, in the majority of cases, pos-sibly, cannot be recognized at all, is honestly though to allow, the ardited. And I am more than willing to allow, it is somethic work for that my conception of what it uoght to be. That it is somethan will hot tous for deny avervices to be what it should be cretaind to hong

IN ONE of his political rages, Victor Hugo alludes to a class of Frenchmen whose piety usually takes the form of a prayer to the Virgin to inflict bankrupt-cy upon the shop over the way.

manung Google

RITUALISM.—The annual meeting of the Church Association has just been held. The report states that the Ritualistic movement, which at the outset seemed confined to a mere question of rites and ru-brics, has developed into an overt attempt to build up the alien Church of Rome upon the ruins of the Church of England. One by one, nearly every doc-trine and ceremony of Popery has been adopted, until it has become almost impossible to distinguish the churches and books under the direction of the Jesuits from those under the control of the Ritualists.—Lon-don Graphic.

AUSTIN HOLYOAKE.

BY GEORGE JACOB HOLYOAKE.

<text>

Long after we were separated, I sent him for publica-tion my high estimate of him, and whenever I wrote of him in public it has been to his honor. I say this to show that it is not his leath alone, but his life, that in public of research and result I write how to snow that it is not mis near atome, out his me, that inspires the words of respect and regret I write now. A great merit of his was, that he would do whatever he could to cause Freethought to command influence. He cared for its future credit more than its immediate the could work due to a state to do not within he could to cause Freethought to command influence. He cared for its future credit more than its immediate success. He would work day or night to do, within needful time or with greater taste, something or other we thought useful to issue. I should never have at-tempted what I did at Fleet Street, had I not been sure of his coöperation; and all I take most pride in of what was done there could never have been sccom-plished without his aid. It never occurred to him to evade work, nor to ask himself how little he might do of that which outside publicists asked him to help them in; his first thought was how much more could he do, and how much better, if possible, than it was being done. Military or social enterprises were allke to him, if promise of help appeared in them for those who struggled for independence; whether patriots, or women, or slaves. My brother entered into every-thing within his mange, and gave time to a starming, more of what he could do than of himself, and so wore himself out by generous exertions before his time; and whatever may be given now in the way that may fairly be recognized rather as an act of jus-tice than of charity. Parts of his "Sick Room Thoughts," the last thing he wrote, are proof that he had increasing and origi-nal power, and, had he reserved to himself more leisthat may fairly be recognized rather as an Act of Jus-tice than of charity. Parts of his "Sick Room Thoughts," the last thing he wrote, are proof that he had increasing and origi-nal power, and, had he reserved to himelf more leis-ure, he had the capacity of doing greater service than he had already rendered. The last time I saw him I told him that opinions we had long ago maintained together were now meeting with admission in quar-ters where neither he nor I expected to live to see their truth recognized; and I repeated to him that the Bishop of Manchester had recently said that "he did not himself believe that mistakes which did not arise from perversity of the will, but from incapacity of understanding, or it might possibly be from the truth never having been put before the mind very wisely or philosophically—he did not believe that mistakes of a speculative kind, mistakes in doctrine or in dogma, even if they were upon what were some-times considered vital points, would shut a man out of the Kingdom of God. . . . It was his distinct belief that heaven would be forfeited by no man on account of his theological opinions, unless those opinions had had a mischievons influence upon his conduct, and he had allowed the speculations of his brain to blind and distort the directions of his conscience." My brother had a conscience was security for self-respect and peace of mind; but I knew he would be glad to hear that prelates took courage, and followed their con-sciences too, and that the differences between honest men were diminishing day by day. My brother ful-filled the observation of Spinoza, that "a free man thinks of nothing so little as death, and his wisdom is to think of life and not of death." To my mind my brother did not of death." To my mind my brother did not of death." To my mind filled the observation of Spinoza, that "a free man thinks of nothing so little as death, and his wiedom is to think of life and not of death." To my mind my brother did not think enough of life. The base care of yourself which leads to refusing stout help to others who need it is certainly to be despised; but some regard to the conditions of a man's own life is reasonable, and even commendable, if he is good for anything. After Death had looked in upon my brother, and given him fair notice of calling again if pretext arose, I could hear of him being two hours in close, hot lecture-rooms at night, and afterwards set-ting out miles over country in an open vehicle; and later he would be in the chair at an enervating, crowded meeting when he ought to have been in bed. But this work. The last book I sent to him was Prince Florestan, which I had mentioned to him, and it was the last read to him. His "Sick Room Thoughts" showed to him. His "Sick Room Thoughts" showed all the threads to superseding error, since it is never destroyed until it is replaced by new truth. But we all know that ignorant Christians think that the truth of opinions is best seen by what a man thinks of them in the face of death. As Miss Cobbe has said, in a generous notice of my brother's death in the Examiner, many Christians imagine that the soundness of their case will be most favorably seen when disease has weakened a man's power of exam-ning it.* My brother did as conspicuous a dying service as man ever rendered, in correcting the im-pression that Christian error could not be seen to be error in death as plainly as in life. Clear, calm, pa-tient, knowing well that death was waiting near at hand, he shot a bolt, as it were, from the other side he grave, at superstilon's strongest popular preten-sion. He was free of all ostentation; but when a hing had to be done which ought to be done, he had the dash in him which did it. He fallfilled Professor Blackie's preacription of conduct:--

"Wear your heart not on your sleeve, But on just occasion Let men know what you believe With breezy ventilation."

And he did this with his last breath, when few men

And he did this with his hast breath, when few men think of doing anything. He will be long and honorably remembered as one of the forces on the side of Freethought progress among the people. I sometimes think that Death, presiding at the great portal through which dead na-tions have passed, is wearled at times at the monoto-ny of admitting the commonplace crowds, whom ig-

•I am told that Dr. Maurice Davies has also written in the London Sun a very fairly-stated account of my broth-er's burial, and references to bis principles.

norance and vice, ambition and baseness, silliness and sin so copiously deliver there—and himself de-lights to allure noble travellers to his dominions by holding out to them the high temptations of truth, or freedom, or art, or genius, or duty, or service; and thus he makes his kingdom richer as he makes us poorer here.—London National Reformer, May 10, 1874.

PAINE HALL AND INVESTIGATOR HOMEL

We now have the pleasure to announce to our read-ers, and to all others interested, that a lot of land has been secured and the first payment on it made, for the much-talked-of Paine Hall and *Home for the Intes*function that and the first and the for the integration of Tremont Street, in the immediate vicinity of Parker Memorial Hall, Odd Fellows' Hall, and Berkeley Street Church, and is considered by parties who have been on the premises, and who are our friends, to be a very good location, and the purchase well made.

We shall at once proceed to erect a building of brick, with stone trimmings, of the most durable and solid structure, which will be a standing memorial in coming years to the merits and services of Thomas Paine, the author-hero of the American Revolution, and political and solidious and services and show coming years to the merits and services of Thomas Paine, the author-hero of the American Revolution, and political and religious reformer; and also be a permanent home for the Boston Intestigator, which has so long, earnestly, and devotedly labored to show to the world that the patriot Palne is worthy to be gratefully remembered with other American revolu-tionary patriots, and that the slanders told of him and repeated with so much zest every year are base fabrications of religious bigots and ignorant fanatics. We intend to have this Palne Memorial Hall com-pleted by January 29, 1875, and as our funds are not enough at present to pay all the expense of building, we earnestly call on all friends of the cause to come forward with their means to help on the movement. Those who have sent us their names with pledges for stated sums are reminded that we now want the money, and we ask them to send all they have prom-ised at as early a day as possible. Let us for once take as an example the zeal di-played by our religious opponents in doing busines, and every one contribute to the extent of his or her mens. In behalf of the Trustees.

means. In behalf of the Trustees, T.P. MENDI HORACE SEAVER, Committee, T. L. SAVAGE, BOSTON, May 30, 1874.

-Boston Investigator.

INTELLECTUAL HONESTY.

<text><section-header><section-header><text><text><text>

Literation to GOOgle

they profess were written to teach. The people at large regard them with suspicion if they do not open-ity accuse them of cowardice and hypocrisy. They are in a false position, which goes far to neutralize their influence for good. It would be vastly better if they could come to terms with themselves and with each other, stop playing hide-and-go-seek with doc-trines they explain by explaining away, and readjust their statements to their altered convictions. A good square talk on the subject in the denominational con-ventions would be vastly better than endlessly beat-ing about the bush. For there is nothing that people so much respect, and that wears so well in the long run, as upright and dowuright honesty in opinions as well as in acts.—New York Graphic.

÷.

EARL HUSSELL ON THE PAPACY.

A well is in acts, 2-res 4 or a property of the second sec for the Roman Catholic, the Protestant Dissenter, and the Jew, bind me to protest against a conspiracy which aims at confining the German Empire in chain never, it is hoped, to be shaken off. I hasten to declare, with all friends of freedom, and, I trust, with the great majority of the English nation, that I could no longer call myself a lover of civil and relig-dous liberty were I not to proclaim my sympathy with the Emperor of Germany in the noble struggle in which he is engaged. We have nothing to do with the details of the German laws; thay may be just, they may be harsh; we can only leave it to the Ger-man people to decide for themselves as we have de-cided for ourselves. At all events, we are able to see that the cause of the German Emperor is the cause of slavery." slavery.

PROHIBITION DISCUSSION.

The town hall at Hyde Park, Mass., was filled to overflowing last week to hear the discussion between Dio Lewis and Rev. Dr. Miner on prohibition. The following sketch of the debate is from the Adver-following sketch of the debate is from the Adver-tiver :-Dr. Lewis gave an account of a debate with Judge Lawrence, of Ohio, on prohibition, in which he re-plied to a statement of the judge that liquor-selling is worse than horse-stealing by the remark that if the person injured by drink was composementis—if he has a free mind, with a right to think, speak, choose, and act for himself like other men, and he goes to the rum-seller and asks for drink, knowing just what he will get, and the liquor-dealer, under such circum-stances, sells him drink,—then if you say that the liquor-dealer has committed a crime at all in the sense that stealing a horse is a crime, I do not agree with you; and if you do not make a distinction be-tween vices and crimes, the former of which are to be cured by moral sussion, and the latter to be treated with legal sussion, then you cannot understand why it is that in Boston, the most law-abiding of all large cities, we cannot enforce the prohibitory law. Bos-ton is powerles.

cities, we cannot enforce the prohibitory law. Bos-ton is powerless. Dr. Miner's opinion of the law was that it was a plece of heaven put into the hands of man to use, and to næfrightly; and if men who formed legislatures had half the desire for carrying out the grand princi-ples contained in the laws, especially in the prohibi-tory law now under discussion, that they had for votes, Roston would not to-day be called powerless. The chief of police needed but the word from those in authority, and his six hundred men would soon show whether Boston was strong or weak. It was not the law that was at fault. The law was grand. It was the men to whom was confided the applying

<text><text><text><text>

MODERN CHRISTIANITY.

MODERN CHRISTIANTY. Yesterday, in company with the doctor, we visited the deaf and dumb man who is dying in the doorless, windowless hut we described once before. Thanks to Mr. Isham Cooper, we were enabled to take over a good supply of provisions for the poor people. The dumb man was in bed. The old woman says "he has to stay there to keep warm." We asked her the following questions, which we give with her answers:--"How old are you?" "To nigh on to seventy-five. I can't say positive. I left my age in South Carolina, whar I was riz." "How did you live before we came to see you?" "The Lor' only knows; but some of the neighbore is very kind, and though they're right poor, they helps me." "Do no belong to any church?" "Yes, bless the Lor', I'm a Methodist. Sometimes I adies used to come here and tak on a slate with my son about the state of his soul, and they think he'll be asved." We could not help thinking how considerate and Christian-like it was in these ladies (?) to volunteer such a generous opinios. "Dot here give you any church is ready and they think he'll be aved."

We could not help thinking how considerate and Christian-like it was in these ladies (?) to volunteer such a generous opinion. "Did they give you any clothing or food?" "Oh! no, eli. They just come to talk about John's soul; and, blees the Lor', I think he'll be saved." "Who is your minister?" "Mr. S., of the church up the hill. I uster go thar; but I'm very old, an' I ain't had no warm clothes this winter." "Did Mr. S. ever help you?" "Did Mr. S. ever help you?" "Did is ever bring you food or clothing?" "No, sir; but he thinks John's soul's right." The reader must pardon us; but at this point it re-quired an effort to suppress a tendency to sweat, which we imagined we left off at the close of the war. "Have you no clothing but these?" we saked, pointing to the thin cotton garments that clung like damp rags to her shrunken limbs. "No, sir; but I've put the flannel things you sent me on John. I can git along; we ain't got long to live, no how, friend; an' when the boy was able he tried to keer for me." "You must be saving of what we bring you, old lady; and while God gives us a little, we will try to keep you warm and fed." Poor thing is to keep up the work which a few generous hearts have helped us in.-Columbus, O., Inquirer.

HOW MANY APPLES did our first parents sat in the Garden of Eden? Eve 8 and Adam 2.

Hoetry.

[For THE INDER.]

THE FILGRIM OF LIFE.

"Pligrim, with thy staff and pack, Resting by the rained wall, Art thou tempted to turn back, Ere the night begins to fall?

"Cold the mountain heights appear, And the paths that neward lead Well may make thee ask with fear, 'Have I strength for such a deed?'

"Yonder steep and narrow path, Winding upward, dost thou see? Only room enough it bath Singly to be climbed by thee;

"Fame, ambition, pleasure, pride,

Thou canst not with these asce: They must all be cast aside; Make thy staff thy only friend. nd :

"Pligrim, turn thy radiant eye Back upon these fields of green, On the stream that murmurs by Through this fair and pesceful scene.

"Wilt thou leave these pleasant ways, For the mountain's distant height Spend thy young and hopeful days Tolling upward out of eight?"

But he heedeth me no more; From his shoulders, broad and straight. Slips the heavy pack he bors, As he turns unto his fate.

Like a spirit's shines his face Like a star his blue eye gleams, As he walks with steady pace Toward the object of his dream

And I watch him upward stride "Till the mist, so dark and cold, Greeping up the mountain side, Wraps the Pilgrim in its fold.

Farewell, brave and blameless knight! Though the mists that round thes clo Hide thes from the world's dim sight, "On each height there dwells repo ...

JENNIE PERRINE.

NEW SUBSCRIPTIONS TO INDEX STOCK.

Mrs. F. W. Christern,	New York City,	One si
Richard B. Westbrook,	Nonman, Pa	iii a	uare,	100
R. C. Spencer,	Milwaukee, Wis.	Two		200
R. W. Howes,	Boston, Mass.	One	44	100
Chas. W. Story,	Boston, Mass.	14	44	100
E. W. Meddaugh,	Detroit, Mich,	Fivo	40	690
Jacob Hoffner,	Cumminsville, O.	One		100
John Weiss,	Boston, Mass.	10	64	100
W. C. Russel,	Itbaca, N. Y.		. 66	100
A. W. Leggett,	Detroit, Mich.			100
B. F. Dver.	Boston, Mass.		- 66	100
James Purinton.	Lynn, Mass.	44	. 84	100
F. A. Nichols,	Lowell, Mass.	44		100
J. S. Palmer.	Portland, Me.			100
Robt, Ormiston,	Brooklyn, N.Y.	62	. 66	106
Mrs. A. L. Richmond.	Lowell, Mass.		44	100
Mrs. Benj. Ireson,	Lynn, Mass.	- 86		100
J. E. Oliver,	Ithaca, N.Y.		40	100
E. H. Aldrich.	Providence, R.I.	81		100
Geo. L. Clark,	Providence, R.I.	24		100
W. M. Jackson,	Providence, R.I.	Two	- 11	200
Mrs. E. B. Chase,	Valley Falls, R.I.	KE.		100
L. F. Garvin,	Lonsdale, R.I.	One		100
James Damon,	Ipswich, Mass.		44	100
Joseph A. Barker,	Providence, R.1.	66	44	100

CASH BECEIPTS.

FOR THE WREE ENDING JUNE 27.

FOR THE WHEN ENDING JUNE 27. H. Heyerman, $4; Lewis Bontelle, $3; E. Meidenrich, 25 cts.; Wm. Becker, $3; Wm. Sunith, $4.60; A. Pritokard, $3; Bernard Shipp, $6; Aona T. Wood, $3; E. & L. Marshall, $3; Rob. Bailey, $3; Wm. L. Garisan, Jr., $3; Wm. W. Ba-ker, $5; John Logan, $5; Benj. Breed, $1.60; Geo. B. Wheel-r, $5; John Logan, $5; Benj. Breed, $1.60; Geo. B. Wheel-said, R. C. Bassett, $1.75; Emanuel Rider, $3; B. Bateman, $33; F. C. Bassett, $1.75; Emanuel Rider, $3; B. Bateman, $33; Fhilena Carkin, $3; John Hendril, $3; Wm. Tasker, $1.60; A. H. Jewett, $1; Nathan Tabor, $3; G. H. Poster, $2, Logi, H. S. Mason, $1; Olive N. Preaton, $3; G. H. Poster, $2, cts.; John Verity, $1.60; E. G. Van Dalsen, 20 cts.; L. W. Billingly, 90 cts.; Welson Thwing, 50 cts.; John Livesey, 50; cts.; Jelses Sinth, $5.20; Oliver Diston, $3; Bet-field & Stone, $2; etc.; W. H. Spencer, $40; D. I. Hastian, $1; Fred Beck, $20.

Beld & Stone, we de.; w. R. opencer, wy. D. r. Hanner, Si; Fred Beck, S2.
All receipts of cash will be acknowledged as above, and no other receipts each naless specially requested. Persons who do not see their remittances acknowledged within the second sector of the second sector second second sector second sector second sector seco

Contractor Google

The Index. PUBLISHED EVERY THURSDAY

BY THE INDEX ASSOCIATION.

AT NO. 1 TREMONT PLACE, BOSTON. Toledo Office: No. 35 Mormon Stanner. Julius T. Frey, Agent and Clerk.

THE INDEX accepts every result of science and sound learning, without seeking to harmonize it with the Bible. It recognizes no authority but that of reason and right. It believes in Truth, Freedom, Progress, Equal Rights, and Brotherly Love.

Brotherly Love. N. B.-No writer in THE INDEX, editorial or otherwise, is responsible for anything published in its columns except for his or her own individual statements. Editorial contri-butions will in every case be distinguished by the name or initials of the writer.

BOSTON, JULY 2, 1874.

SUNDAY LECTURES .- The Editors of THE INDER will ecture occasionally on Sundays, if desired, within a con-vanient distance of Boston.

N.B .- Any person whose name is now on our mail-list will receive a second copy of THE IN-DEX. mailed to the same address, for a year, on pre-payment of One Dollar. This offer is made to accommodate those of our subscribers who wish to increase our circulation by sending extra copies as samples to their friends.

GLIMPSES.

AN ABTICLE from the Boston Investigator on another page, which escaped our notice until very recently, shows that the Paine Hall project is on the high tide of success. We are heartily glad of it, and congratulate our esteemed neighbors on the pleasant prospect before them.

THE CLOSING of the academic year at Harvard was signalized this season by the dedication of the new and magnificent Memorial Hall. The grandeur of the structure and the lofty purpose that built it atoned for the dry and tame oration of Charles Francis Adams. Gen. Bartlett was the real orator of the week. What splendid inspirations of patriotism and high resolve, what proud traditions of heroism and consecration to liberty, will haunt that Hall and stimulate young hearts to noble deeds!

THE FOLLOWING DESPATCH shows that the Biblein-schools question is irrepressible. Some bold spirit has struck the right chord in Toledo :-

TOLEDO, June 18. Indications are that the ques-tion of reading the Bible in the public schools is to be agitated here. In the Board of Education last

That the following resolution was offered :---That the reading from any version of the book, commonly known as the Bible, the singing of hymns, commonly known as religious hymns, and the religtors action, commonly known as rengious symmes, and the teng-ions action, commonly known as prayer, shall not hereafter be any part of the exercises in any of the public schools under the control of the Board, and the same are hereby prohibited. No action was taken on the resolution.

THE FOLLOWING NOTICE is sent us for publication by the Woman's Journal, and we commend it to the special attention of all its friends: "Woman Suffrage, on Fourth of July, in Harmony Grove, South Framingham, will attract a large attendance. Mary A. Livermore will deliver an Orstion. Poems, by Julis Ward Howe, and Henry B. Blackwell. Brief Addresses, by William Lloyd Garrison, Lucy Stone, James Freeman Clarke, Charles W. Slack, Samuel B. Noyes, and others. An Original Woman Suffrage Song, written by Kate True. Music by Hall's Boston Brass Band. A special excursion train from Boston, and reduced fares on all railroads."

JOSEPH MAZZINI has this thoughtful and elevated assage in an article on "Renan and France," published in the Fortnightly Review for last February: "Every existence has an aim. Life, human life, has achieved the consciousness of this fact; life is, then, for a mission-the mission of reaching the aim; it consists in incessant activity upon the path towards it, and a perennial battle against the obstacles it encounters upon that path. The Ideal is not within, but be-yond us and supreme over us; It is not the creation, but the gradual discovery of the human intellect, The law which directs the discovery is named Progress; the method by which progress is achieved is Association-the association of all the human faculties and forces. The ultimate discovery of the aim of life is assured by Providential design, but time and space are given to achieve it, and are therefore the field of liberty and responsibility to each and all of us. One choice lies between evil, which is egotism, and good, which is love and sacrifice for the sake of our fellow-men. The faculty of choice, of discerning the path of progress, having been bestowed upon us, social institutions are the means by which we incarnate our thought in action, and advance towards the realization of the providential design."

BISHOP BORGESS, of Detroit, not long since issued a circular which shows the utter hostility of the Catholic Church to our public school system. We quote from the Detroit Post of Nov. 26, 1878 :-

"A Catholic school must be established in every parish or mission at the earliest practicable moment, if the strict economy of the revenues and other reparish or mission at the earliest practicable moment, if the strict economy of the revenues and other re-sources of the congregation can possibly justify it. It is a question, and admitting of no apology or excuse, with which the consciences of the pastor and people are charged, and both must answer to God for the guilt, if they have neglected their duty toward the immortal souls of the children intrusted to their charge immortal soule of the children intrusted to their charge. "If a Catholic school is attached to the congrega-tion, the pastor or missionary shall not admit a child to prepare for its first Holy Communion which does not attend the parish school, nor in any case admit a child until it is in its twelfth year of age. This rule shall take effect in January of the year 1874, and be observed thereafter. "The pastor or missionary shall have the entire control of the school, and the teachers, and engage or discharge them according to the dictates of his con-science, subject only to the judgment of the Bishop. "The pastor shall only introduce, or allow to be used, the 'text-books,' accepted and approved for the use of parochial schools in this diocese. In the uni-formity of text-book in all schools the interests of both the children and parents are served."

A coup d'état has taken place in the office of THE The editor is driven into exile for the INDEX. month of July by a band of determined conspirators, and not only forbidden to write a line for these columns, but also to speak, whisper, or even think the word INDEX. As a consequence of this atroclous outrage on the freedom of the press, he is condemned for four mortal weeks to roam over the face of the earth like the Wandering Jew; and the readers of THE INDEX will please imagine him in Terra del Fuego, or Thibet, or Greenland, or anywhere but in this "Hub of the Universe." Whatever heresies may creep into this eminently conservative sheet in his absence, they will acquit him of all responsibility for them; and no rash or wild utterances in its columns must be permitted to tarnish that reputation for unblemished Orthodoxy on which he so complacently prides himself. In short (not to put too fine a point upon it), he owes a month's vacation to the unexpected and resolute kindness of two friends, who will not even allow him the small satisfaction of naming them. They think he needs a little rest after many years of almost unintermitted labor; and during this month, therefore, THE INDEX will be under the editorial charge of Mr. Stevens, with their efficient assistance.

IT IS TIME TO speak. The letter of Mr. Tilton to Dr. Bacon, in the Golden Age of June 27, is known to all, at least as to its substance; and we are constrained to say, with the utmost deliberation, that, although we have steadfastly considered Henry Ward Beecher innocent until he should be proved guilty, we must now consider him guilty until he shall be proved innocent; and that, while it may be possible to explain away some of the points made in this letter, we see no possibility of acquitting him at the very least of cruel wrongs against Theodore Tilton. Nor is this all. It is as clear as noonday that Plymouth Church, through its chief officers, has conspired to crush an innocent man, and to ride roughshod over his ruined reputation in order to save the reputation of a man who, in words of pathetic despair, has confessed himself not to be innocent. Against this every generous nature must indignantly protest. Justice first, and pity afterwards. Mr. Tilton's letter has impressed us as deeply by its moral dignity and noble self-restraint as by its serried demonstrations. We grieve for Mr. Beecher, for whose good name we have been jealous, but who now appears to have been driven by his misery and want of courage into inexcusable treachery towards one against whom he has confessedly committed some unnamed outrage. We grieve still more for Mr. Tilton, whom a great Christian congregation, backed by a great Christian council, has tried to grind into the dust; and now, if anything we have ever said in these columns has added a feather's weight to this great load of injustice, we ask his pardon for our unmeant complicity with his oppressors.

"STIRPICULTURE" VS. "SOCIAL FREE-10075.22

An article by Dr. Clarkson among our "Communications" this week, written in a wholly unexceptionable manner on the free-love question, gives a fitting occasion for making some remarks on this subject which we have long had in mind. Like those of every other institution, the fundamental ideas of marriage are to-day undergoing a searching scrutiny, which in the end must result in establishing more firmly whatever is good in that institution, and in reforming whatever in it is bad. We have not the faintest bellef that free discussion on this topic can do any harm; and it is in the highest sense expedient that it should be conducted in such a manner as shall be in harmony with the most genuine purity of thought and expression. To confine it to disreputable publicationswould be a suicidal policy; and we are more than willing that THE INDEX, which, in advocating Free Religion, advocates whatever shall prove really beneficial to mankind, should occasionally devote part of its space to this exceedingly important question. Without designing specially to reply to Mr. Clarkson's article, we wish now to offer some general conelderations suggested by it, postponing to some future occasion the presentation of various other thoughts. which cannot be compressed into the limits of the present article.

A great deal has been said in some quarters about the "new science of stirpiculture;" by which is meant the application to mankind of laws which are well known to be successfully followed by breeders of cattle, horses, dogs, fowls, pigeons, etc., in developing improved races of the animals inferior to man. By mating such individuals of any species as possess peculiar or exceptionally fine qualities, these qualities can be intensified in the offspring produced, until new varieties are established which are characterized by them in an extraordinary degree. The inference is drawn, and doubtless correctly, that the human species is susceptible of similar modification by judicious "selection;" and the hope is entertained that society may be induced to submit to some system by which in this way the human species shall be greatly improved. This hope, as is well known, is at least as old as Plato.

Now the fulfilment of this hope hinges on the possibility of persuading mankind to accept and put intooperation some such system; and we confess that this possibility appears to us exceedingly slight. There is a vast difference between independent haman beings and dependent animals, the latter being subjected to an arbitrary control to which the former would never submit. Only the sternest despotism could accomplish such a result as the famous Potsdam regiment of gigantic grenadiers. The only possible way of carrying out the theory of the stirpiculturists would be to entrust some special Commission or official Board with the power of deciding who should or should not form sexual unions, and with. what parties; and such a Commission would be as unsuccessful as it would certainly be intolerable, unless it should embody an amount of scientific knowledge which at present does not exist.

What is very surprising is that the same persons should be found to advocate "stirpiculture" and "social freedom;" for the success of the one would depend on the destruction of the other. The more highly intellectual and moral should be the individual members of society, the less willing would they befor any reason to delegate to others, least of all to an official authority, the choice of their partners. Such choice is now made freely, under the marriage system so much objected to by the advocates of freelove; whereas, under the system of stirpiculture which they also advocate, no results could possibly be attained in the direction sought, unless the individual should surrender to a scientific State Commission one of the most precious of all human rights. This is sufficiently clear-that, whether "stirpiculture" or "social freedom" is the more desirable, they cannot both be had together. You cannot have your cake, and eat it too.

It is not, of course, to be denied that the main idea. of stirpiculture contains a great deal of truth, and very important truth too. The laws of heredity, of temperamental adaptation, and so forth, necessarily exert a vast influence in determining the character of offspring; and they ought to be scrupulously heeded, so far as they are intelligible or can be intelligently applied. It can scarcely be doubted, for instance, that seriously diseased persons ought not to marry-But to form a sexual union originally in order to car ry out the stirpicultural notion, and to pay no heed to the deep and pure love which is Nature's best.

Google

318

practical guide to a fitting union, would be essentially immoral, and would defeat the very object sought. If it be said that love is itself to be the true stirpicultural test, then we reply that all talk about the "science" of stirpiculture is arrant humbug. True marriage has always been based on love, and by this test stirpiculture would be reduced to the merest iteration of what everybody has known from time immemorial. Unless this alleged "science" can formulate laws in general terms, and regulate its own experiments by general principles, it is no science at all, and can add nothing to the wisdom needed for the practical conduct of life. It is certainly untrue that love is an unerring indication of complete fitness for union between two parties; many a love-made match has ended in unhappiness, and produced very unfortunate offspring; and no one is so quick to assert these things as the advocate of the free-love theory, which rectifies by separation the mistakes that love so frequently commits. If "stirpiculture" simply sets up love as on the whole the best practical determinant of fitness for union, it teaches no more than mankind have long since found out under the existing marriage system; and it has no claim whatever to be considered a science,-least of all a new one. But if it admits other determinants of this fitness than love, then it directly overthrows the entire free-love or social freedom theory, by causing other considerations than love to be regarded as entitled to decide the propriety of union. In the only sense really worthy of attention, stirplculture is the science of the laws of reproduction, so far as known and applicable to the improvement of the human species; but it brings many other factors than mere love into the question, and strikes the deadliest blow at the whole free-love doctrine. It should discover and regulate all the conditions affecting the conception, the birth, the development, and the character of offepring; but any attempt to secure a general improvement of the race by enforcing arbitrarily all these conditions would involve a degree of control over the individual which would not only annihilate the "social freedom" now contended for, but rouse instantaneous resistance from all free citizens who believe in marriage. Men are not machines; they are not puppets; they will not submit to be experimented with for the general good; and the only way to render stirpiculture anything better than a dream or a despotism is to discover and disseminate truth on this subject for the guidance of such as desire to be guided by truth. What we now wish specially to point out is the utter inconsistency between the free-love theory and the true stirpicultural theory that an improved race must be reared by studying and obeying laws involving many complex conditions besides the mere fact of Free-love surrenders the rein to sentiment or love. desire; while stirpiculture, if it is ever to be a real science, must become such by making reason su-Dreme.

THE DANGER OF DEAD-LETTER LAWS.

On the evening of Oct. 6, 1872, Michael Connelly was crossing South Boston bridge, on his way to meet a man from whom he desired to obtain employment. The draw of the bridge was off for repairs, and the city had neglected to provide lights or other safeguards to prevent accidents to travellers. When at the draw, Connelly perceived no danger, and walked off into the water, sustaining serious injuries by the fall and narrowly escaping drowning. On recovering from these injuries, he sued the city; and the case has just been decided in the Superior Court against the plaintiff. The counsel for the city requested the court to rule that the action could not be maintained, as it appeared that the evening in guestion was Bunday, and that the travelling was not "for charity" or a "work of necessity;" which is the only travelling legally permitted by the enlightened State of Massa chusetts on that particular day. The court ruled that the action could not be maintained, and gave a verdict for the city. Thus the poor fellow was cheated of the redress which he ought to have received for injuries occasioned by gross neglect on the part of the city; and another count is added to the long indictment which humanity has drawn up against superstition.

There is no pretence at this day of enforcing the prohibition against travelling on Sunday for other than charitable or necessary purposes; the people come and go as they please, paying no heed what-ever to this obsolete restriction. But it now appears that they have been doing so at their own peril. If Connelly had tumbled off the bridge on Saturday, he would have recovered handsome damages from the city; but because another twenty-four hours had rolled over his head, the city shirked all responsibility for its neglect by raking up this disregarded statut and holding that the poor man's impiety cancelled all his claims to the protection of this super-religious community. Here, in Boston, the self-styled Athens of America, the great intellectual and moral centre of the Western hemisphere, the blind bigotry of the Puritans (which too complaisant liberalism still suffers to disfigure the statute book with its insensate jargon) reaches its long arm down to the year of grace 1874, and robs a poor laborer of the money which is his due by reason of unpardonable remissness on the part of city officials, and the pain, confinement, and loss of wages entailed upon him by it. Nobody pretends that the difference between Saturday and Sunday is any just ground for withholding damages; nobody now-a-days supposes that it is worse to travel on one day than on another, provided the errand be innocent. Even church-members, deacons, and ministers take their Sunday walks for refreshment or recreation, and feel no qualms of conscience as if guilty of desecrating a holy day. But the gloomy asceticism of the Puritans still survives in laws that very few really respect but everybody is afraid or reluctant to wipe out. The result of sufforing such dead-letter laws to remain unrepealed is the occasional commission of some disgraceful act of public injustice, and the constant exposure of us all to the danger of becoming ourselves the victims. Church-people would battle stoutly for the retention of all such laws, not because they really want them enforced, but because Christianity thus receives at least verbal recognition in a public way and derives a certain authority or influence accordingly; while liberals are indisposed for many reasons (not always creditable) to enter into or awaken controversies on this class of subjects. Hence dangerous weapons remain sheathed in the law-books of all the States, ready to be drawn for the assassination of justice and freedom whenever the Church shall stretch out her hand to grasp them. Worse wrongs than Connelly's may easily be perpetrated by their means, and the only wise course is to agitate for a thorough purification of constitutions and statutes in the light of secular principles. To do this work well will require arduous labor and organizations specially fitted to perform it; and in this fact is found a reason for the formation of Liberal Leagues which time will show by-and-by in its real strength.

MR. BEECHER'S CREED.

It has been objected that in my account of Theodore Parker as a preacher I did injustice to the power and influence of Mr. Beecher. That I did not will be seen from the subjoined account of a christening which took place in his church in Brooklyn a few weeks ago. It is taken from the New York Sun of May 4:-

few weeks ago. It is taken from the New York Sun of May 4:--One hundred and two persons were made members of Plymouth Church yesterday. The pulpit and choir gallery were nearly covered with flowers and green leaves, and the rush of attendants was far great-er than naual. Thus the plain old interior was made to show at a glance that the occasion was inordinate. The candidates, seated in the front pews, were first briefly addressed by Mr. Beecher. "You have separated yourselves from this congre-most momenious yet joyful acts of your life. You will never cease to feel the effect of the dedication you now make. Should you cling affectionately to that Redeemer whom you are about to openly avouch, you will ever rejoice that you were brought to this hour; but if your soul shall draw back, and you shall put Christ to an open shame, this deed shall be an everlasting witness against you. Yet we do not cast down. Thoogh we have thought meet to admonsh you, it is with a cheerful hope that He who in love has called you will never forsake you until you shall each of you will never forsake you until you shall end in Zion and before God." The articles of faith were then read. They are pe-cular to Plymouth Church, Mr. Beecher being their author, and are as follows:-We believe that the Father, the Son, and the bet each of a sovereign and unchangeable, infinite in power, wisdom, and goodness. We believe the Script-res of the Old and New Testaments to be inspired of God, to contain a revelation of his will, and to be the author; and are as follows:-We believe that the Father, the Son, and the Hoy flow are revealed in the Scriptures as artisting, in re-spect to attributes, character, and office, as three per-united, and are, in a proper sense, one God. We believe that all their posterity are not only prove to ain, but do become sinful and guilty before cod. We believe that all their posterity are not only prove to sin, but do become sinful and guilty before to sin, but do become sinful and guilty before tor.

We believe that God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten Son to die for it; that Christ ap-peared in the fiesh; that he set forth a perfect ar-ample of obedience; that he purely taught the truths needful for our salvation; that he suffered in our stead, the just for the unjust; that he died to atone for our elos, and to purify us therefrom; and that he rose from the dead and ascended into heaven, where he over liveth to make intercession for us. We believe that God offers full forgiveness and everlasiting life to all who will heartify repent and be-lieve in the Lord Jesus Christ; while those who do not believe, but persevere in sin, shall finally perish. We believe in the resurrection of all the deal; in a final and general judgment, upon the awards of which the wicked shall go into sverlasting punish-ment and the righteons into life eternal. "Do you thus believe?" asked Mr. Beecher, after he had finished reading, and the candidates bowed. Then he asked them to rise, and continued:--Do you now avouch the Lord Jehovah to be your God; Jesus Christ to be your Cavic, the Holy Spirit to be your Sanctifler? Henonucing the dominion of his word over you, do you consectate your whole soul and body to the service of God? Do you receive his word as the rule of your life, and, by his grace as-sisting you, will you persevere in this consecration unto the end? The candidates bowed assent, and sat down. Thirty of them were then baptized, the pastor touching their forcheads with wetted fingers, and re-neating the customary words. The ceremony con-

The candidates bowed assent, and sat down. Thirty of them were then baptized, the pastor touching their foreheads with wetted fingers, and re-peating the customary words. The ceremony con-cluded with the rising of all the members of the church, and an implied assent to the following covenant: covenant:-

covenant:---We, then, the members of this church, do joyfully, and cordially receive you into our number. We promise to bear with you, to love, to edify, and by all means in our power to advance you in the divine life.

means in our power to advance you in the divine inte-Amen. Mr. Beecher's aermon was a presentment of the possibility and propriety of happiness in Christian life in opposition to the generally accepted and som-bre conceptions. Two of those who united with the church were im-mersed by Mr. Beecher in the baptistry under his pulpit on Friday evening. Mr. Beecher's olive-wood pulpit furniture was removed, and in a long, priestly robe he descended the steps and dipped the candi-dates just under the surface of the tepid water. The congregation sang "Shall Jesus bear the cross alone?" and when the second person—a hady—had been immersed, Mr. Beecher lifted his hands, the water streaming from his flowing sleeves, and with a benediction dismissed those who had gathered.

This account is particularly interesting in connection with a remarkable sermon recently preached, in which Mr. Beecher treated the second article of the above creed, that respecting the Old and New Testaments, as freely as any rationalist might do. I said in my criticism that while Mr. Parker instructed the community Mr. Beecher entertained it. The entertainment is not what Mr. Barnum would call "perfectly moral," but snrely such performances as that of the christening cannot be classed under the head of instructive, while the broad discourse above referred to must in this view be classed with amuse-0. B. F. ments.

DIVINE PROVIDENCE IN CALAMITIES.

I heard of a clergyman the other day speaking of the Mill River calamity as an awful warning, which had been specially sent by the Almighty, to show the uncertainty of all earthly affairs and the need of accepting the plan of redemption offered by Jesus, in order to escape a worse perdition hereafter. And there are probably thousands and tens of thousands of people in America who read this as the chief lesson of that dreadful casualty, though it is interesting and encouraging to note that the secular, and the abler class of religious, newspapers have been pointing out in emphatic language that the whole disaster is due to the natural cause of a defective dam. That in the primitive stages of society mankind should have been prone to look for a manifestation of Divine Power in exceptional and terrible events, rather than in the ordinary processes of Nature and common life, may not be strange; but it does seem strange that this disposition should so persistently survive in this enlightened and scientific age. There are thousands of people to-day who see God in a terrific storm, but not in the daily sunshine; who see him in a sudden tempest that hurls a ship to destruction beneath the sea, but not in the gentler winds that carry it safely across the waves to its destined haven; who see him in a Vesuvius eruption burying towns and their inhabitants in a general ruln, but not in the serene and steady forces that have been reclothing that desolation with fruitful vineyards and a happy population ; who see him in death and a desolated home, but not in the joyous affections and daily service of a happy and healthful household ; who see him in a Boston or Chicago fire, but not in the human bravery and skill that can master a confisgration, and in the human knowledge that can build so as to prevent one; who see him in a Louisiana inundation or in a catastrophe like that at Mill River, but do not see him in the human inventive art, the fruit of learning and skill, which, in the kingdom of Holland, has said to the ses, "Thus far, and no farther," and, not to be enticed by any impatience or avarice into careless workmanship, has bidden the population of a nation live in security below the surface of the tides. Even in this reading and thinking age, the clergyman to whom I alluded has many followers-people who never think of Divine Providence as capable of manifestation through the ordinary industry, and home life, and neighborly intercourse, and the activity of natural forces and natural human faculties displayed in a population like that of the Mill-River valley, but who, when a heart-rending calamity comes by which in a few hours two or three villages are swept away by a flood, peaceful homes, and families, and dumb creatures are whirled suddenly together in promiscuous destruction, a hundred and fifty human beings lose their lives, and a beautiful valley and its industry are blotted out together in one spring morning, are startled to cry out, "Behold the hand of God !"

Distanting Google

Well, in a sense, and in a very momentous sense, not for a moment to be lost sight of, the Almighty Power was in this and every similar disaster; in it just as it was in the Chicago fire, or the last coal-mine explosion, or the last railroad or steamboat catastrophe. Some law of Nature had been violated, some force of Nature had been pushed ignorantly or heedlessly beyond its legitimate limit, or had been allowed by human negligence to slip beyond human control; and hence the calamity. It is the Natural conse-quence of the violated or neglected law-the natural retribution for the violation. And since it is the Almighty Power, which most people in Christendom call God, that works in these laws of Nature, it is true that this Power is manifest, and manifest for a special purpose, when these laws are broken. In the loss and suffering that ensue, the Infinite Power cries out against the fracture-cries out against the ignorance, or the carelessness, or the haste, or the avarice, or the inhumanity that has thus risked the lives of human beings, and the most precious happiness of hundreds of hearts, upon the possible chance that the limit of Nature's laws may be played with and the player not be thrown over the verge into the gulf of inevitable disaster. To this extent and in this way the hand of Divine Providence is in all such casualties as that at Williamsburg; and the enforced lesson is, "Learn Nature's laws and obey them." Let man put himself into harmony with Nature's forces, if he would have the benefit of her strength. Let him rightly use the natural resources and facultles that are already given to his keeping, if he would learn how divine power is to be manifested in human affairs. Let him build a ship by the best principles of mechanics and the most honest workmanship, and put it in charge of the wisest captaincy and the bravest seamanship, if he would attract the Providence that is to carry it across the ocean in safety. Will he learn how Omnipotence would display its power in a Williamsburg reservoir? Let him hold back the flood by a feat of engineering that shall master all the possibilities of an inundation. If he cannot find mathematicians, engineers, mechanics, who can solve that problem with perfect certainty, then let him permit Nature's water-courses to take their own way unobstructed, and not for greed of gain transform them into traps for the destruction of innocent human beings. When we come to look at these great calamities from some such point of view as this, then we shall begin to see indeed the ways of Providence in them.

And there is another way, and that also a perfectly natural way, by which divine power is manifest in connection with such catastrophes. According to the fine Old Testament legend of Elijah, Jehovah ap-peared to him not in the "whirlwind" nor "earthquake" nor "fire," but in the "still, small voice" that came after these terrific phenomens. So to-day the power of God is not so much in these desolating forces that bring the disasters themselves, terrible and mighty though these may seem, as it is in the gentle, hushed voice of human sympathy and charity, which, after the woe of flood or tempest or fire, sends to the anfferers greetings of fraternity and help. He is not so much in the cry of terror and anguish-for these are rather the tokens of some attempt to do without his power or to violate it-as in the "still, small e" of brotherly love that speaks hope and healing into the terrified and stricken hearts. W. J. P.

Some PRETENSIONS to Christianity remind us of the reply of Scott's De Bracy to the disguised monk, who asked if he was at last safe, and in Christian keeping: "Safe thou art, and for Christianity here is the stout Baron Reginald Front de Bœnf, whose utter abomination is a Jew, and the good knight-templar Brian de Bois-Guibert, whose trade it is to slay Sara-cens. If these are not good marks of Christianity, I know no others which they bear about them."

Communications.

THE SECRET OF REPOSE.

BALTIMORE, June 6, 1874.

BALTIMORE, Julie 0, 1044. MESSES. EDITORS:--I have read with a wondering interest the "Last Thoughts" of Mr. Austin Holyoake; and, while the article is very clear upon the subject of what he did not believe, it fails to tell us what was the peculiar phase of faith which, for more than twenty years, had given to him "the perfect mental repose" he claims (and I see honestly) to have possessed. No one can be without some faith regarding the great future. Did his rest on annihilation? Or was it rather the great loying trust of a pure heart which, recognizing the creating Power, rests reverently upon it, blding the decree of Nature, and leaving all to her? Should the National Reformer furtish something more, I shall hall it gladly. Being a diligent reader of THE INDEX, I approve of much I see within its columns, and therefore wish it in all things to make its journey in the right direction. MESSES. EDITORS in the right direction. Yours very truly,

AN INOUTRER.

[Whatever directions may be wrong, that surely is right which leads to the conclusion that the secret of spiritual repose is utter fidelity to the voice of conscience. His is a clear, calm, and self-contained spirit who, despite all surface-rufflings and untoward circumstances, knows that he supremely loves and faithfully obeys the highest law he can comprehend. It matters not what he believes or disbelieves, if he prizes truth above profit and substance above show. We suppose that Austin Holyoake was "without some faith regarding the great future." If that future holds continuance of individual being, as we sturdily hope in the absence of all disproof, he is still wiser now than when he was wise enough to know his own ignorance. But now, as before, he must still find his peace in brave simplicity and lofty love of truth and right. Read in another column what George Jacob Holyoake says of his brother, and judge whether such a man stood in need of any doctrine to give him courage and self-possession in the presence of Death .- ED. ]

SLAVE-HOLDING CHBISTIANITY.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE INDEX :-

To THE EDITOR OF THE INDEX:-In conversation with a young Unitarian minister not long since, he expressed to me great astonlahment when I spoke of our Christianity as the apologist and abettor of chattel-slavery. And when I told him that members of churches and ministers, and even par-ishes and churches, in corporate capacity, were abso-lute owners of slaves, and that the Northern Evangel-ical church generally countenanced them in the crime, and welcomed them to pulpit and communion table, he became excited, if not angry, and refused to hold farther talk with me. He was at his college during the four Rebellion years, a part of the time in Germany, and probably knew little of the "Thirty Years' War" of the Abolitionists with the slave sys-tem and with the Church on account of it, before that Liberator. Liberator.

I sometimes think that could you, in your conflict with the spiritual powers that be, in the name of a religion called Christianity, only disclose the history of that religion and its ministry as connected with American slavery, your work and warfare would be done

For there is not on earth, there never was on earth, a more hateful, horrible system of religious faith, practice, worship, than that could be shown to be, judged wholly out of its own mouth! A system at sight of which all humanity must stand aghast, and before whose terrors all true men and noble women would retire!

before whose terrors an true men and none women would retire 1 Before me are two books of sermons and other re-ligious literature, designed and used by Southern Evangelical dergymen for the use and instruction of masters, mistresses, and slaves. One, for which I am indebted to my friend Mr. Samuel Brooks, of Ohio (a native Virginian), is entitled: "Sermons ad-dressed to Masters and Servants, by Rev. Thomas Bacon, Minister of the Protestant Episcopal Church in Maryland--with other Tracts and Dialognes; now republished, and recommended to all Masters and Mistresses, to be used in their Families, by the Rev. William Meade,"--since, as I am told, the eminent Bishop Meade, of Virginia. The book was published many years since, at Winchester, in that State, by John Heiskell. The other volume, entitled: "Sermons Preached on

John Heiskell. The other volume, entitled: "Sermons Preached on Plantations to Congregations of Negroes, by Rev. Alexander Glennie, Rector of All Saints Parish, Wac-camaw, S. C.," was published in Charleston, in the same State, in 1844, by A. E. Miller. Christianity, as judged by you through its theories, doctrines, and general history, presents most frightful aspects. But I think its connection with American chattel-layery, for more then a half century storms doctrines, and general history, presents most frightful aspects. But I think its connection with American chattel-slavery, for more than a half century, stamps it with an audacity of wickedness in practice unpar-alleded in the annals of human depravity. The two volumes I have named, together with the contemporaneous civil code regulating slavery in the slave States and District of Columbia (city of Wash-ington with the rest of the "Ten Miles Square" 1), and the laws and proceedings, acts and resolutions, of the Southern churches on the same unbiast could the laws and proceedings, acts and resolutions, of the Southern churches on the same subject, would form a work that should be in the hands of every young minister and candidate for the ministry in the nation. It would be indeed a testimony which should and would blast American Christianity with odium forever and ever. And yet this chapter of our national history, to al-

And yet this chapter or our national nistory, to al-most all the young—ministers, as well as others—is a chapter unread and unknown. Might not THE Is-DEX, as part of its argument against the tyrany of Christianity, point a little in that most remarkable direction? PARKEE PILLSBURY.

We should be greatly obliged to Mr. Pillsbury, if he would do this greatly needed work in our columns; for no one is better acquainted with the facts than he, A series of articles on this subject, with exact references and full proofs of the statements made, would be very valuable. Let the truth be told, calmly but with unsparing fidelity .- ED.]

TO THE BADICALS OF THE UNITED STATES.

Will the efforts now being made in this country in behalf of free thought, and all its concomitants, bed any permanent use to our people? Are you, Mr. Abbot, and your associates, not wasting your time and abilities in the up-hill work of emancipating the minds of your countrymen from the degrading bond-age of error? Will not your children, when you are dead and gone, and when they sum up the results of your life, say that if their father had expended his energies in some money-making business, instead of fighting the entrenched superstitions of the Church, and offering the people a freedom they did not want, they would be better off in the world, and the world would be no worse off than it is now? One hundred years ago there was as much free they would be better off in the world, and the world would be no worse off than it is now? One hundred years ago there was as much free thought in this country, in proportion to its popula-tion, as there is now, and probably more. The char-acter of the Constitution and government of the United States proves that the moulding influence, the controlling mind, of our fathers was what the Church in her ignorance now calls "wifidel." The ecclestati-cal power, for the first time in the history of States, was manifestly subordinate to the political, and the political was wielded by men who were nearly all free thinkers in religion—deists—theists—who be-lieved in natural religion, but who did not believe in the divine authority of either the Bible or the Church. Is not this true without doubt? Yet, with such a fair stat—with such a vantage ground as no nation ever before had to permeate all the people with their radical opinions,—flity years did not elapse before the leading men of that day g-nominiously succumbed to the arrogant power of the Church, so that their sons acted as if they were either ashamed or afraid of their opinions. In an article published in THE INDEX a few years ago, I showed that this humiliating retrogression, so cowardly in its appearance, was caused mainly by two men—John Wesley and George Whitfield. The first was the founder and organizer of the Methodist Church, whose influence in the country is mighty, and every-where. The second organized no church; but by his amazing eloquence as an evangelist, he travelide all over the land preaching and giving tone and numbers whose influence in the country is mighty, and every-where. The second organized no church; but, by his amazing eloquence as an evangelist, he travelled all over the land preaching and giving tone and numbers to the Presbyterian. Episcopal, Baptist, and Lutheran Churches, which were just beginning their existence, but which now, with the rest of the sects, form the grand army of the Perslans that has encamped on the plains of Marathon, waiting to see if any heretical Miltiades will abow a phalanx of opposition. It is true that science now renders the cause of Radicalism a service which it never did before; but, after all, what are our labore but a mere doing over again what our fathers did a century ago? Indeed, all along through the past generations, from the be-ginning of the Christian Era, there were protestants against the Church and her religion, who fough bat-tles and gained victories on the field of debate. But they never amounted to anything; so that each age they never amounted to anything; so that each age had the same old battle to fight over and over again, just as we are now doing. If I had a voice of thunder. I would peal it into the ears of the Radicals of the United States that this If I had a voice of thunder. I would peal it into the ears of the Radicals of the United States that this work of Sisyphus they are now doing—rolling the rock to the top of the hill at tremendous labor and expense, only to see it turn and roll back again to the bottom—is the punishment of heaven upon them for their folly is not organizing their success, and thus preserving and transmitting what they have gained. Folly is that which is done by s/ool; and a fool is a person who does not adapt means to ends, but blun-ders along as if there were no relation between cause and effect. He puts money, earned with infinite pains, into one end of his purse, forgetful altogether that there is a hole in the other end; and so he is etermally poor, and has nothing. This is just what the Radicals have always been doing, and are now doing. The stupidest and wildest sect in Christen-dom is usies when compared to the Radicals; for when they make half a dozen converts, they organize them into a church to perpetuate and extend their in-fluence. But the Radicals hatch out their chickens, and then leave them to be fed and cooped by any one fluence. But the Radicals hatch out their chickens, and then leave them to be fed and cooped by any one who pleases. When the helpleas little things are scattered in the grass, peeping mournfully for food and the cluck of their mother, a Sunday-school teach-er hears them, gathers them into her apron, and takes them to the Church pen, where, being well nursed, they soon grow up, and learn to despise their parent-age. A distinguished Radical some time ago died. I know not how many of his sons and daughters have joined the very church that treated him as a wild beast. beast.

beast. Now if the Radicals of this day and country wish to save and use the results of their bard and self-de-nying labors, and not have the work to be done all over again in the next generation, and at similar ex-pense, they must throw away their folly, and OROAN-

TER-hold stated meetings for lectures and discus-sion. They must attack, instead of standing forever on the defensive. The late speech of Robert Inger-oil before a magnificent audience at Chicago, which cheered the most radical portions of it to the echo, shows that the people of the West, at least, are ready to hear and to cooperate in the work of opening the cyres of the blind millions who are still priest-ridden. His tone is not timorous and apologetic, thus invit-ing the Church either to spit on him in contempt or to pather foot on him to crush him. He attacks the Church and her creeds, tells her she is a harlot se-ducing the people from lives of integrity and of in-dependent thought; and, as proof that this is the right policy, the Church listens, turns pale, and is afraid to strike. Ingersoll has the courage of his ophions.

affaid to strike. Ingerson has the courage of the opinions. If the Church did not organize round her creed, and set up a ministry to preach its dogmas, and establish boards of publication to print and circulate tracts in order to gain the people, how long do you suppose she could stand on the strength of her dogmas and comminies? Not a year. Protestant Germany would to day be as radical and as churchless as the Free Religionists of this country, were it not that it is or-ganized, and draws its support from the coffers of the State. In a battle the army that is organized, disci-plined, and courageous, even if it be small, can put to flight the largest army of undisciplined men whose ranks are broken by an excessive and foolish indi-viduality.

io flight the largest army of undisciplined men whose ranks are broken by an excessive and foolish indi-viduality. In the moral warfare now going on between Truth and Error, in waging which we repudiate the use of carnal waspons, we, Radicais, are not only in a mi-nority, but we are unorganized, each man fighting when he pleases, as he pleases, or not at all (as is the case with most of us). We seem to think that the Malakoff of superstition can be battered down by the pop-guns of individuals; and, if not, that it may stand forever. The Church, our great opponent, is not only in the majorify, but is as well organized as the Pressien army was in her late war with France, and has the prestige of centuries of victory. It is firmly believed by many that with the aid of the Young Mon's Christian Association, which is to Protestantism what Jesuitism is to the Catholic Church, she will make, in due time, when her plans are all completed and understood by her agents, a Herculean effort to incorporate the religious amend-ment into the Constitution of the United States. And when we see what amazing power au eloquent and zealous man, like Henry Ward Beecher, can ex-ert on the masses of Church people, the thought is alarming that a dozen such, coöperating with each other, might revolutionize the religious public, and Christ, and the Bible into the Constitution, or to die in the sttempt. In view, khen, of the fact that natural religionists Christ, and the Bible into the Constitution, or to die in the attempt. In view, then, of the fact that natural religionists in all ages have entirely lost the fruits of their labors because they did not organize; in view of the fact that the strength of the Church in all her sects now consists in her organization, and not in her creeds, which would fall to the ground in the presence of logic and the facts of science,—is it where in us to re-main unorganized, and consequently helpless? Is there no Mittades in our ranks who will take our un-disciplined men, and form them into an army, and scatter the best forces of our enemies on the plains of Marsthon? Marathon ?

Marathon? What must we think of those conceited and selfish mea who fancy they see more danger in the Radicals, if organized, turning into creed-bound, persecuting churches than they do in the service hosts of the Church, who flaunts her banners in our faces, and tells us that she means to put us down? Will we go on in our folly until the future historian, indignant at the results of it, shall say, in giving an account of us to our posterity, that we "were a set of consum-mate fools"? A are there not, especially in the East, many Radicals who are such only esthetically, and because Radicalism is the bighest type of cultivated fullowmen to the superstitions of the Church? and have they ever done a thing to bring them out into the glorious liberty of the sons of God which they themselves enjoy? The Radicals are open to the charge of coldness and selfshness. Would to God that in the holy cause of intellectual and spiritual freedom for all markind they had a little of the zeal and missionary spirit which the Church displays in promoting her own ends! VINDEX. What must we think of those conceited and selfish

There is an immense force in the above view of the situation. Substantially, we agree to every one of these flery words. That is why we have done our utmost to form Liberal Leagues for aggressive work; and that is why we pleaded the cause of Anti-Christianity at the late convention of the Free Religious Association. The weapons of this warfare are not muskets and mortars, but brains, tongues, pens, and votes. Let superstition be driven out of its strongholds, and compelled to face the soldiers of truth in the open field. Now for one plain word, none the less kind for being plain. Our correspondent by implication censures us for not doing more to "organize" the Radicals. We have done all that one mind and heart can do, without forgetting that no mind or heart is to ape the leadership which Radicalism must forever spew out of its month. We have put our name openly to public appeals for organization, and risked all consequences, whether of ridicule or wrath. Does our correspondent suppose that this battle can be won by incognitos and noms de plume? His words are excellent, and full of power. But their earnestness would be tenfold more powerful, if he did not shrink from writing his own name at their end. When a dozen well-known, resolute, able, strong men shall unitedly join in a standing appeal to "Organize!" the Radicals will be roused from their spathy. But we do not blame them for keeping cool and quiet, when masked trumpeters blow an anonymous bugle.-ED.]

"SOCIAL FREEDOM."

"SOCIAL PERENDOM." DITOR OF THE INDEX:— Tour evident desire to sncourage a full, if imper-sonal, discussion of the free-love question will per-sonal, discussion of the free-love question will per-ber that the abrupt departure of Pilate, after aub-mitting his proposition, deprived posterity of any ti-umination upon this point from the eminent author-ity with whom he was holding converse. Although differing from Prof. Newman in our understanding of the moral bearing of free-love theories, we half with deep satisfaction the advent of an opponent who can sink personalities in the desire to get at the truth. That there is much radically wrong in the old sys-tems upon which acciety is at present organized, no nore will deny. The only hope for its improvement will come through a frank and fearless treatment of has subject. Humanity is the only product of Nat-wer that has not been pruned, grafted, cultivated, or phas shown the result of persevering and skifful ma-nipulation. The whole human family may be said "grown the result of persevering and skifful ma-nipulation. The whole human family may be said "grown the result of evoted so much skill and novel dege to the development of improved races of portain to humanity were not understood, bu-sing bleation to humanity were not understood, whi is upplication to humanity were not understood, whi is upplication to humanity were not understood, whi is point to result of persevering and skifful and nowledge to the development of improved races of portain work of perfecting the buman race; and he is the wide of the development of improved races of portain work of perfecting the human race; and he is the shift to humanity were not understood, bu-manition, the stremely perfect government will and nowledge to the development of improved races of portain work of perfecting the human race; and he is the wide of the stremely perfect government will and nowledge to the development of improved races of portain work of perfecting the human race; and he portain work of should enjoy, if these rules should be applied to man-kind. We wish briefly to notice some of the points in Prof. Newman's letter. Under the second head, he concludes that, as Mrs. Woodhull "must utterly disapprove of any marriage vow of faithfulness to one husband," she does aim, therefore, to "go backward into the state which pre-ceded legal marriage," which he claims to be "savage freedom." Such may possibly be fairly deducible as an opinion, but we do not think it logical. It would hardly be admitted by radicals that they had, in de-claring their freedom from mental bondage and creeds, relapsed into the condition of ante-Christian savagery, because they disclaimed any bellef in the atoning power of Christ. Mental freedom is the nat-ural outgrowth of liberal, advanced Christianity, which was in its order evolved from crude forms and systems of worship. Yet he whose present stage is evangelical Christianity sees only heathenism and in-fidelity in free thought. We regard free love as the natural outgrowth of the marriage system, looking upon it as progression and not retrogression. We think all the logic is on this side of the question— always distinguishing between free love and free lust, which is its antithesis; as we should between sinceri-ty and hypocrisy in discussing the merits of Chris-tianity. Prof. Newman understands free-love theories to always distinguishing between free love and free lust, which is its antithesis; as we should between sinceri-ty and hypocrisy in discussing the merits of Chris-tianity. Prof. Newman understands free-love theories to maintain that the right of judging "whether there is adequate cause for separation must be retained jeal-ously by the individual, and never be delegated to a legal tribunal." Pray, why should it not be so? What is a legal tribunal? It is a man, or a body of men, whom society, the people (men only, women not being a portion of the people (men only, women not being a portion of the people in making laws, yet still being bound to obey them), have chosen finally to them. The opinion of this man, or body of men, is all we get, when we have the "decision of the legal tribunal." We will still further suppose it to be the opinion of the larger body of men who have made the laws; yet does it follow that we have reached the truth? or that justice has been done? The deci-sions npon the questions under discussion would in the greater portion of this country be in favor of the monogamic marriage; in some other countries in favor of polygamy. We desire to find absolutes, if any which happens to be in the ascendency, its standard will be constantly changing. If there is an absolute standard of right and justice, the decision of a legal tribunal will make no difference. It will not do to claim that courts do enforce right, as law is liable to be changed to-morrow by the accession to power of the minority of to-day. Do we individually acknowl-affairs? Every one considers himself competent to decide what his life shall be. Law and courts, like the Orthodox hell, are for averybody except ourselves and our immediate families.

decide what his life shall be. Law and courts, like the Orthodox hell, are for everybody except ourselves and our immediate familles. The fourth and eighth divisions of Prof. Newman's letter treat of collateral issues, and depend upon the decision of the truth of the principles of social free-dom. One thing is certain: truth does not exist by reason of our belief or disbelief, our knowledge or ig-norance. Eternal laws operate just the same, wheth-er we are cognizant of the fact or not. Nor will a knowledge of the truth by us change the operation of Nature's laws, which will continue to produce their results just the same after we comprehend them as before. It is none of our concern where truth shall lead us; we think some of the present conclusions of radicals would have shocked our sensibilities, if we could have seen them fully evolved, when we were first breaking away from mental slavery.

radicals would have shocked our sensibilities, if we could have seen them fully evolved, when we were first breaking away from mental slavery. Prof. Newman gives a rather arbitrary definition of prositution. "Fresenting oneself for indiscrim-inate sale" is a special application of the word, and does not comprise its full signification. There is no such thing as sex in prostitution. Mon and women may prostitute their bodies or faculties in various ways, and for other reasons than gain. Mrs. Woodhull claims that the woman who marries for a home, and thereby sells herself for a limited period. Is not this true, whether we define it to be prostitution in both cases or not? In the one case at the sale is the other it punishes, as a crime, a less demorsilizing act. We do not care what term is used to designate the condition; we only want to show that whatever offence against good morals may be involved is fully as flagrant in one case as in the other. We think Mrs. Woodhull shows a commendable spirit, in her "determination to raise woman to the level of the brute?' however much it may grieve us to acknowledge the fact, it is true that in all respects pertaining to the reproduction of the race humanity is below the subject. No female brate is in such abject alavery as to have maternity forced upon her; nor do they prostitute their sexual functions to other progeny possible. "Brutes have no care for the mor-al and mental state of their offspring." Tet man, observing the laws of reproduction, and respecting and changes the natural disposition, and produces desirable traits of character in the original stock. How much more ought to be expected from the hu-man intelect, so much more plastic than it at of the source? Prof. Newman's proposition "that all antiquity re-garded marriages as the beginning of civilization."

man intellect, so much more plastic than that of the brute? Prof. Newman's proposition "that all antiquity re-garded marriage as the beginning of civilization," and that "to outgrow it is to go back to the state of the brutes," will not amount to evidence, unless it can be verified and proven by results. It would be just as fair for Christians to claim, as they do, that Christianity was the beginning of civilization, and the abandoning of that for something which we deem a higher and more comprehensive faith is to go back to heatheniam. Christianity, marriage, and civilization were evolved from previous preparatory conditions, neither being the cause of the other, but all the outgrowth of the necessities of humanity. The difficulty comes from regarding them as ultimate conditions, rather than way-stations in human prog-ress.

ress. Mrs. Woodhull writes, says Prof. Newman, "as if it were a certain scientific fact that children were born murderers, drunkards, and other criminals;" to this he apparently takes exception. We think that born murderers, drunkards, and other criminals." to this he apparently takes exception. We think that scientific minds are all agreed upon this point: that all these traits of character are transmissible, and that the new life partskes largely of the idlosyncra-cles of the parents. One thing is self-crident; name-ly, that better children will result from the observa-tion of the laws governing reproduction than from a total disregard of their application.

ples shall have been determined. Prof. Newman presents a sort of mongrel theory that cannot possibly be classed as a bellef-"the right of having, besides one's wife or huaband, a spir-fluad wife or huaband." This is one part monogamy and one part social freedom, neither wholly one nor the other, consequently not belonging to either; and the advocate of this theory cannot be classed with monogamists or with believers in social freedom, because he is trying to live on different theories at the same time. He is no consistent disciple of social freedom. any more than one who while professing to the same time. He is no consistent disciple of social freedom, any more than one who while professing to follow Christ goes in an opposite direction six days of the week is a genuine Christian. Abuses will grow out of every system; but they furnish no evi-dence of its not being valuable. These ideas will not be adopted any faster than humanity shall be fitted to benefit by them. Old forms, laws, and customs still have a work to do, a mission to perform, which will never be fully accom-plished until humanity shall be so generated as not to need regeneration after they come to years of un-derstanding. J. T. CLARKSON. AMESBURY, Mass.

nemon Google

THE INDEX-JULY 2, 1874.

No. 1 Tremont Place, Boston. EDITOR:

FRANCIS ELLINGWOOD ABBOT.

ASSOCIATE EDITOR:

ABRAM WALTER STEVENS.

EDITORIAL CONTRIBUTORS:

O. B. FEOTHINGHAM, New York City.

MES. E. D. CHENEY, Jamaics Plain, Mass.

To increase general intelligence with respect

To foster a nobler spirit and quicken a higher

To substitute knowledge for ignorance, right for wrong, truth for superstition, free for slavery, character for creed, catholicity for bigotry, love for hate, humanitarianism for sectarianism, devotion to universal end

In brief, to hasten the day when Free Relig-ion shall take the place of dogmatism and ecclesiasticism throughout the world, and when the welfare of humanity here and now shall be the aim of all private and

In addition to its general objects, the prac-tical object to which THE INDEX is specially devoted is the ORGANIZATION OF THE LIBERALS OF THE COUNTRY, for the purpose of securing the more complete and con-sistent secularization of the political and ed-ucational institutions of the United States.

The Church musigive place to the Republic in the affections of the people. The last vestiges of ecclesiastical control must be wiped out of the Constitutions and Statutes of the several States in order to bring them into harmony with the National Constitution

To accomplish this object, the Liberals must make a united demand, and present an unfor absorption in selfish schemes

ose, both in society and in the indi-

T. W. HIGGINSON, Newport, B.I.

W. J. POTTER, New Bedford, Mass.

R. P. HALLOWELL, Boston, Mass.

F. W. NEWMAN, England.

THE INDEX sims-

public activities.

to religion :

purpose vidual:

CHARLES VOYSEY, England.

Advertisements.	Go
THE PATRONAGE	LEA
of the liberal advertising public is respect- fully solicited for TRE INDEX. The attempt will be honesity maile to keep the advertis- ing pages of THE INDEX in entire harmony with its general character and principles, and thus to furnish to the public an advertising modium which shall be not only profitable to its patrons, but also worthy of their most generous support. To this end, all improper or "blind" advertisements, all quack adver- tisements, and all advertisements believed to be fraudulent or unjust to any one, will be excluded from these columns. No cuts will be admitted.	0. B. I T.
The NDEX must not be held responsible for any statement made by advertisers, who will in all cases accept the responsibility for their own statements.	Are n and w on rec
ADVERTISING RATES.	graph
For 1 to 12 Insertions, 10c per line,	A

For 1 to	12	Insertions,	100	Per "	Hine.
66 26 54	ŝĩ	55	ě.	66	56
44 52		66	5	66	$6

Un nair-column advertisements, a discount of 10 per cent. will be made; on full-column advertisements, a discount of 25 per cent. On all advertisements for which cash is paid in advance, a further discount of 25 per cent, on the total, as above calculated, will be made. FRANCIS E. ABBOT, Editor.

CIRCULATE | Circulate | ! Circu-field when your petition is a yard tong, unless you have asked every one to sign it. Get good, influ-ential names.

GET EVERYBODY.

Don't neglect to show the petition to any one, because he is a stockholder in some church, or other exempted property, as many much persons admit the justice of the domand; and these who will not should be made to take the responsibility of refueling to sign it. Don't delay! We want the petitious returned sariy.

Per order of EXEC. COMM. of the ROSTON LIBERAL LEAGUE.

CULTURED FREE THOUGHT.

The Index Association,

OFFICE, NO. 1 TREMONT PL., BOSTON,

en organized with a capital stock fixed at ONE HUNDRED THOUSAND dollars, for the purpose of publishing Tracts, Books, and

THE INDEX,

A Weekly Paper devoted to Free and Rational Religion.

It is the object of THE INDEX to give public utterance to the boldest, most cultivated, and best matured thought of the age on all religious questions, and to apply it directly to the social and political amelioration of acclety.

It is edited by FRANCISE. ABBOT, assisted by ABRAM W. STEVENS, with the following list of Editorial Contributors :-

O. B. FROTHINGHAM, New York City. THOMAS W. HIGGINSON, Newport, B.1. WILLIAM J. POTTER, New Bedford, Mass. WILLIAM H. SPENCER, Haverhill, Mass. RICHARD P. HALLOWELL, Boston, Mass. MRS. E. D. CHENEY, Jamaica Plain, Mass. REV. CHARLES VOYSEY, London, England. PROF. FRANCIS W. NEWMAN, London, Eng.

Every liberal abould subscribe for THE INDEX, as the best popular exponent of Beligious Liberalism. Every Christian minister, and every thinking church-member, should subscribe for it, as the clearest, most candid, and most scholarly exposition of the differences between Free Thought and Evangelical Christianity, and as the best means of becoming well informed of the arguments and the movements which the Church will have to meet in the future.

Almost every number contains a disc leading article, which alone is worth the price of one year's subscription.

Prof. MAX MUELLER, of Oxford, England, in a letter to the Editor published in THE INDEX for January 4, 1873, says: "That the want of a journal entirely devoted to Religion in the wides sense of the word should be felt in America-that such a journal should have been started and so powerfully supported by the best minds of your country,-is a good sign of the times. There is no such journal in England, France, or Germany; though the number of so-called religious or theological periodicals is, as you know, very large." And later still: "I read the numbers of your IN-DEX with increasing interest."

Send $3.00 for one year, or 75 cents for three months on trial.

Address

THE INDEX. No. 1 Tremont Place, Boston.

OOD PHOTOGRAPHS	1 8 7 4.
OF ADING INDEX WRITERS. Including	THE INDEX,
. FROTHINGHAM, T. W. HIGGINSON,	A Weekly Journal
W. J. POTTER, W. H. SPENCER,	DEVOTED TO
P. W. NEWMAN, CHAS. VOYSEY, A. W. STEVENS,	FREE RELIGION. PUBLISHED BY THE
F. E. ABBOT, now for sale at the office of THE INDEX,	INDEX ASSOCIATION,
Now for sale the owtpaid to any address receipt of price. Single Photographs, 25 ts each; complete Set of Eight Photo- ph. 31.50	AT No. 1 Tremont Place, Boston.

graphs, $1.50. Address,			THE INDEX,
	1	No. 1	T	emont	Pla	ce,	Bost	COD,	Ma	88.
ī	N	D	E	x	T	R	A	C	т	8.

No. 1.-Truths for the Times, by F. E. Abbot, contains the "Fifty Affirmations" and "Modern Frinciples." Ma. CHARLES DAEWIN, author of "The Origin of Spe-cies," says, in a letter to the editor not origcies," says, in a letter to the entrop not orige inally intended for publication, but subse-quently authorized to be used: "I have now read TRUTHS FOR THE TIMES, and I admire them from my inmost heart; and I agree to almost every word." New Edition. Price almost every word." 10 cents; 12 coples $1.00.

0. 2.-Fear of the Living God, by O. B. Frothingham, exposes the debasing char-B. Fromingnam, exposes the debasing character of the popular notions of God, and presents conceptions of him that are worthy of the nineteenth century. New Edition. Price 5 cents; 12 copies 50 cents.

No. 3.-Lecture on the Bible, by the Rev. Charles Voysey, of England, is an over-wheiming demonstration of the imperfections and errors of the Bible, both in the Old and the New Testaments. New Edition. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00.

No. 4.-Christian Propagandism, by F. E. Abbot, is an exposure of the weakness, costliness, and inefficiency of the System of Foreign Missions. Full of Figures, Facts, and Interesting Extracts. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00

No. 5.-"God in the Constitution," by Rev. Arthur B. Bradford, opposes the pro-posed Theological Amendment to the United States Constitution. Price 10 cente; 12 copies $1.00.

No. 6 .- "The Sabbath," by Parker Pillsbury, denounces Sabbatarian superstition. New Edition. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00.

No. 7.-"Compulsory Education," by F. E. Abbot, maintains the right of every child to be educated, and the duty of the State to ensure it an education. Price 5 cents; 12 copies 50 cents.

No. 8.-The Present Heaven, by O. B. Frothingham, treats of a subject that in-terests everybody. New Edition. Price 5 cents; 12 copies 50 cents.

No. 9.-The Christian Amendment, by F. E. Abbot, shows the dangerous charac-ter of the attempt to interpolate the Evangelical Christian Creed in the U. S. Constiation. Price 5 cents; 12 copies 50 cents.

No. 10 .- The Impeachment of Christie anity, by F. E. Abbot. Fourth Ten Thou-sand. Sent for free distribution to any one who will distribute it, in packages of from five to one hundred copies.

No 11.-The God of Science, by F. E. Ab-bot, attempts to show the real influence of modern science upon the idea of God. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00.

No. 12-Is Romanism Real Christians 1191 Two essays by Francis W. Newman and F. E. Abbot. Price 10 cents; 12 copies 1197 $1.00.

No. 13.-On the Vision of Heaven, by Prof. F. W. Newman, of England, analyzes the Christian conception of Heaven. Price 5 cents; 12 copies 50 cents.

No. 14. - A Sindy of Religion: The Name and the Thing, by F. E. Abbot, attempts to show that the popular deriva-tion of the word Religion is incorrect; that the popular conceptions of Religion itself are inadequate; and that a new conception of it, based on the Law of Evolution, con-sistent with absolute Freedom of Thought, and independent even of belief in God, is the necessary condition of the perpetuity of Religion among men. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00. Address broken front, and the chief practical aim of THE INDEX will be henceforth to organize a great NATIONAL PARTY OF FREEDOM. Let every one who believes in this movement give it direct aid by helping to increase the circulation of THE INDEX. SPECIAL FEATURES The publication of a valuable leading paper or essay of a thoughtful character, i each issue, will continue to be one of the most marked features of THE INDEX.

THE INDEX, 1 TERMONT PLACE, Boston, Mass.

Regular editorial contributions will continue to be furnished by the well-known em-inent writers who have already done so much to give to THE INDEX its present high position. Mr. Voysky has kindly consented to furnish every fortnight a LONDON LETTER containing matters of general interest to radical readers. Other interesting correspondence, communications, extracts from valua-ble books and periodicals, and miscellaneous articles, will also be published; and such improvements will be made from time to time as circumstances shall render possible.

AGENTS.

Local Agents for THE INDEX are wanted in every city and town throughout the country. The most liberal terms are offered.

TEEMS.

The price of THE INDEX is Three D lars a year, payable in advance; and at the same rate for shorter periods. All remit-tances of money must be at the sender's risk, unless forwarded by cheque, registered letter, or post-office money order. The name, with address in full, must be accompanied with the money in each case. Address THE INDEX.

No. 1 Tremont Place, Boston.

Diamon by COQUE

FREE

OFTER

4. PUBLICATIONS.

RELIGIOUS

ASSOCIATION.

Report of the Addresses and other Proceedings of the Original Mest-ing in 1867, at which the Pres Beligious Association was Organ-ized. Containing addresses by 0. B Froth-ingham, Henry Bianchard, Lucretia Mott-Robert Dale Owen, John Weiss, Oliver Johnson, F. E. Abbot, D. A. Wasson, T. W. Hig-ginson, and Halph Waldo Emerson.

(This pamphlet has not been on sale for a number of years, and many persons who have all of the Annual Reports succeeding do not se this.) Price 50 cents.

Proceedings of Second Annual Meet-ing, 1869. 50 cents. Contains essays by Julia Ward Howe on "Freedom and Restraint in Religion," and by David A. Was-son on "The Relation of Social Science to Beligion," and speeches by O. B. Frothing-ham, Jesse H. Jones, F. E. Abbot, Wm. Denton, R. W. Emerson, Mary Grew, C. A. Ba-tol, A. M. Powell, H. B. Blackwell, Rowland Connor, Lucy Stone, Horace Seaver, and others; with an appendix on "Outlines of Judaism" by Rabbi Wise.

Proceedings of Third Annual Meet-ing, 1870. 50 cents. Contains essays by O. B. Frothingham on the "Idea of the by O. B. Frothingham on the "Idea of the Free Religious Association," followed by addresses by D. A. Wasson on "The Nature of Religion," by Mrs. E. D. Cheney on "Re-ligion as a Social Force, especially in rei-tion to Philanthropy and Reform," and by Jr. E. Abbot on "The Future of Religious Organization. as affected by the Spirit of F. E. Abbot on "The Future of Resignois Organization, as affected by the Spirit of the Age," an essay by Samuel Johnson on "The Natural Sympathy of Religions," fol-lowed by Babbi Wise on "The Permanent and Progressive Elements of Judaiam," by T. W. Higginson on "Mohammedaniam," by Wm. H. Channing on "The Edigions of Chins," and Wm. J. Potier on "Religion Old and New in India;" also abstract of a discussion on "The Bible in the Public Schools," by Thos. Vickers, S. R. Calthrop, Rabbi Wise, and others.

dings of Fifth Annual Meet-Proceedings of Fifth Annual Meet-ing, 1872. 35 cents. (Four or more, 35 cents each.) Contains essays by J. W. Chadwick on "Liberty and the Church in America," by C. D. B. Mills on "Religion as the Expression of a Permanent Sentiment of the Human Mind," and by O. B. Frob-ingham on "The Religion of Humanity," with addresses by Rowland Connor, Cella Burleigh, Lucretia Mott, A. B. Alcott, C.A. Barkol, Horace Seaver, Alexander Loos, and others. Proces and others.

Proceedings of Sixth Annual Meet-ing, 1973. 35 cents. (Four or more, 35 cents each.) Contains essays by Samuel Johnson on "Freedom in Religion," and by Johnson on "Freedom in Kenguo, " John Weiss on "Religion in Freedom," with addressee by Wm. C. Gannett, Robert Dale Owen, T. W. Higginson, Samuel Longfel-low, J. S. Thomson, F. E. Abbot, and Lucretia Mott.

ir

Sympathy of Religions, by T. W. Hig-ginson, 25 cents.

Beligions of China, by Wm. H. Channing. 25 cents.

Beason and Hevelation, by William J. Potter, 10 cents.

Taxation of Church Property, by Jan. Parton. 10 cents, singly; package of ten, 60 cents; of one hundred, $3.

These publications are for sale at the office of the Free Religious Association, No. 1 Tremont Place, Boston. The Annual Reports for 1868 and 1871 cannot be supplied, and the supply of others previous to that of 1873 is quite limited. Orders by mail may be addressed either "Free Religious Association, No. 1 Tremont Place, Boston," or to the Secretary, New Bedford, Mass.

WM, J. POTTER, Sec. F. R. d.

THE	INDEX	JULY	2.	1874

POPULAR BOOKS SENT BY MAIL AT

PUBLISHERS' PRICES!

ORDERS PROMPTLY FILLED.

VO ETTRA CHARGE FOR POSTAGE.

ANY BOOK in the subjoined List, or any other OBTAINABLE BOOK that may be desired, will be forwarded as promptly as possible on receipt of orders scoompanied with the CASH.

Deders are respectfully solicited from all friends of THE INDEX.

ALCOTT (LODISA M). Little Women. Two vola. Bospital Sketches and Camp and Fireside Stories 3.00 1.50 1.50 1.60 1.00 1.90 Stories An Old-Fashioned Girl. Little Men. My Boys, &c. Shawl-Straps. Work; A Story of Experience. ARABIAN NIGHTS' ENTERTAINMENTS. LO

ARNOLD'S (MATTHEW) Essays in Oriti-Now Poems. Literature and Dogma.

BARTLETT'S Dictionary of Americanisms. 2.30

BRACKETT (ANNA C.) The Education of American Girls.....

BUECHNER'S Force and Matter ...... 5.22 SUCKLE (HENRY THOMAS). History of Civilization in England and France, Spain and Scotland. New edition of the entire work, with a complete index. Fools...... 5.00 work, with a complete index. 3 vols...... CARLTLE'S Works. Cheap edition. Compris-ing the following: Miacalianeous Reaway, 7 vols.; Prouch Rovolution, 8 vols.; Freder-ick the Great, 10 vols.; Crouwell B. Letters, &., 8 vols.; Sartor Resartus, 1 vol.; John Steiling, 1 vol.; Life of Schiller, 1 vol.; Past and Present, 1 vol.; Herces and Herc Wor-ship, 1 vol.; Latter Day Pasnphieter, 1 vol. Any volume and separately, 21 vols. Lon-don, 151-4. Fer vol. CARPENTER (DR. W. B.) The Frinciples of Mental Hysiology, with their Applica-tions to the Training and Discipline of the Mind, and the Study of its Morbid Condi-tions.

*

CERVANTES' Don Quixote ...... 1.56

CRANNING (WM. ELLERY). Thoreau : The Poet Naturalist. With Memorial Verse. 2.00

CLARKE (JAMES FREEMAN). Ten Great Baligions

CLARKE (Dr. E. H.) Sor in Education ..... 1.2 CLODD (EDWARD). The Childhood of the World

.78

DALL (MER. CAROLINE H). The College, the Market, and the Court; or, Woman's Relation & Sincation, Employment, and Citizenship.

Journal of Resourches Emotional Expression of Man and the Low-er Animals. 9.00 The Variation of Animals and Plants under The Variation of Animals and Plants under Domestication. 2 vols. illustrated DESCARTES (RENE) Discourse on the Method of Rightly conducting the Reason and Beeking Trath in the Sciences...... 3,50 6.00 9.94 tion. 4 vois, each. Comprising acch. Adam Bede, Romoia. The Mill on the Flons. Felix Hoit. Silas Marner and Scence of Clerical Life. The Same. Library Edition. T vois Wit and Which J vois With and Which J vois With and Which J vois With and Which J vois 1.00 1.30 2.00 2.00 2.00 2.00 2.00 2.00 2.00 1.50 1.50 5.00 FEUERBACH (LUDWIG.) The Essence of Christianity. "George Ellot's" translation. 2.00 FISKE'S (JOHN) Myths and Myth-Makers., 2.00 27 FROTHINGHAM (O. B.) Religion of Hu-manity Beliefs of the Unbelievers Child's Book of Religion Life of Theodors Parker. 1.8 ULLER'S (MARGARET) Complete Works, Including Memoirs by Emerson, Channing, and others. A new edition. 5 vols ...... GALTON (FRANCIS.) Hereditary Ganius, An Inquiry into its Laws and Conse-guences 3.00 Quences JOSTHE'S Paust. Transisted into English Verse by Bayard Taylor. 2 vols. Per vol Elective Arinities. Wilhelm Melater. Transisted by Thomas Carlyle, Portrait of Goethe. 2 vols. Horman and Dorothes. Translated by El-len Frohingham. 8.00 3.00 1.00 GBEG'S (W. R.) Enigmas of Life..... Literary and Social Judgments ..... Creed of Christendom..... Diversity and Social Judgments Creed of Christeadom. droin Family Dec-uments, Private Memorands, and Original Letters to and from Various Friends. By Mrs. Grote, Second Edition. With For-trait trait BAMEBTON (PHILLP G.) A Painter s Camp. Book I. Ju England. Book III. In Sociand. Book III. In France. Thoughts about Art. The Unknown Biver. The Intellectual Life. Chapters on Animais. 1.50 2.00 8.00 2.00 4.00 HAMILTON (GAIL). Child World, Part Sec-Child World. Part First...... 1.50 HIGGINSON'S (T. W.) Out-Door Papers. 1.30 Maibone. An Oldport Romance. 1.30 Army Life in a Black Regiment. 1.30 Atlantic Beasys. 700 Oldport Days. 2.50 HUGO'S (V.) New Novel, " 'Ninety-Three"., 1.75 HUME'S (DAVID) Essays and Life ...... 1.75 Autor of the Antony of Vertebrated Antonia of the Anatomy of Vertebrated Antonia of the Anatomy of Vertebrated Antonia of the Anatomy of Vertebrated Antonia 16 the Anatomy of Vertebrated Ana INGELOW'S (JEAN) Prose. Of the Skel-1.75 1.25 1.25 1.25 .80

1.00

ERROLD (DOUGLAS), Fireside Saints, Mr. Claude's Breakfast Talk, and other Papers, 1.50

JOHNSON'S (SAMUEL) Oriental Religions, and their Relation to Universal Religion. India

lated into English, with Analysis and Infro-ductions by B. Jowett, M.A., Master of Baltiol College, Oxford, and Regius Pro-fessor of Greek. Four vols.

17.00 EERR (ORPHEUS C). Versatilities, Poems, Patriotic, Santimental and Humprous...... 2.00

LESSING'S (G. E.) Nathan the Wise. Trans-lated by Ellen Frothingham. 1.50

Leves' Physiology of Common Life, 2 vols. 2.0 Biographical History of Philosophy, from the start of the second second second second to the second second second second second Problems of Life and Mind. The Founda-tions of a Greed. 3.00

LEWES (G. H.) The Story of Goethe's Life. 1.00

LEWIN (REV. RAPHAEL, D'C). What is Ju-daism? or, a Few Words to the Jews...... 1.00

LONGFELLOW'S (H. W.) Posms. Portralt. se Works. Portrait ..... 4.00

 Prose works. Format.
 400

 LOWELLY GJ. R. Postnes.
 1701

 The Biglow Papers.
 1701

 The Biglow Papers.
 100

 The Biglow Papers.
 100

 Manage inty Hooks.
 200

 My Stady Windows.
 200

 LOWELL (MES. A. 0.)
 Poster for Children.

 Low ELL (MES. A. 0.)
 Poster for Children.

 Jona and the Primitive Condition of Man.
 200

 Pre-bistoric Times.
 300

MARTINEAU (JAMES.) Essays, Philosoph-leal and Theological. 2 vola. Fer vol..... The New Affinities of Faith 2.50

MAURICE (REV. F. D.) The Ground and Object of Hope for Mankind

.78

MIVART (ST. GEO.) On the Genesis of MOULTON (LOUISE CHANDLER.) Bed-

NASBY (PETROLEUM V). Swingin' Round the Cirkle Ekkces from Kentuck

1.50 Ekkoes from Kentucky. NEWMAN, (PRANCIS W.) A History of the Hobrew Monarchy. Phases of Faith; or, Passages from the History of my Creed. The Soul, its Sorrows and its Aspirations. Catholic Union: Easays towards a Church of the Future, as the Organization of Philanthropy. In Reduction work more of Protostantian. Against Hero-Making in Religion. 4.50 2,00

PHELPS'S (ELIZABETH STUART.) The Gates Ajsr. The Trotty Book Men, Women, and Ghosts. Hedged In The Silent Partner. What to Wear f. 1.50 1.50 1.50 1.50 1.50 1.50

PROCTER'S (ADELAIDE A.) Poems, Por-trait Cabinet Edition. 2.00

SMILES'S (SAMDEL.) Self-Help ...... 1. SPENCER (HERBERT.) Education, Intel-lectual, Moral, and Physical. First Principles. SPINOZA (BENEDICT DE.) Tractatus The-THACKERAY'S (W. M.) Novels. Household Edition. Con (W. M.) Novels. Household Fallicon. Con (W. M.) Novels. Per vol.. 13 The New comes. Adventures of Philip. Pendennis. Pendannis. The Virginians. Esmond, and Lovel the Widower. Misocellancous. Writings. Household Edi-tion. Uniform with the Novela. Com-pletein Svols. With new Portrait. Per vol. 128 This edition includes all the matter in the lat-estimation includes all the matter in the lat-estimation of the second second second second schurg it, whith the novels, the changest and most omplete Thackersy in the market. Barry Lyndon, Hoggarty Diamond, &c. mplete Thackeray in the market. 1. Barry Lyndon, Hoggarty Diamond, &c. 2. Paris, and Drish Skeich-Books, &c. 3. Soulos, Skeiches, Denis Duval, &c. 4. Four Gorgos, Humorists, &c. 5. Catherine, Christmas Books, and Unre-prioted Pieces. THAXTER'S (MRS. CELIA) Among the nac 2.00 TYLOR (EDWARD B.) The Early History of Mankind Primitive Culture, 2 vols..... TYNDALL (JOHN). Faraday as a Discov-Fragments of Science for Unscientific Peo-2.00 1.35 2.00 2.00 5.00 1.50 1.50

Programming of Science for Unscientific Fac-light and Miceriricity. Alga Hours of Exercise in the Alga Hest as a Mode of Motion. Ou Sound Badlant Heat. Forms of Water. Lectures on Light. Proc. ryodall. - 14 TYTLER (SARAH.) Old Masters and their Pictures Modern Painters and their Paintings...... 1.56 WARNER'S (CHARLES D.) My Summer in a Garden....

ADDEMOST T HE INDEX,

1 Tremont Piace, Boston.

....

PROCTOR (RICHARD A.) Other Worlds than Ours: the Flurality of Worlds stud-led under the Light of Recent Scientific Researches. With Colored Plates..... Light Science for Leisurg Hours. A Series of Familiar Resears on Scientific Subjects, Naturel Phenomena....

Natural Phonomena. Basys on Phonomena. Basys on Phanets and your of the of Papers on Phanets and your of the source of the With 10 Phates and 2 source of the source of the The Moon, her Motions, Aspecta Scenary, and Physical Conditions, with Three Lu-nar Pholographs and many Plates Charts, etc.

the Physical Constitution of the Heavenly Bodies. SCIENCE PRIMERS: 1. Iniroductory, By Frof. Hurley, F.B.S... 2. Chemistry, By Frof. Roscoe. 3. Physics, J. By Frof. Roscoe. 3. Physics, J. Balfour Stewart. With H-Instructions of Balfour Stewart. With H-Hurtrations of Balfour Stewart. With H-Hurtrations of Balfour Stewart. With H-Research Congraphy. By Archibald Gel-kie, LL.D., F.E.S., Eastble clobk.

nar Photographs and many Pla etc. The Expanse of Heaven......

TTTTT-

Diminity Google

THE INDEX-JULY 2, 1874.

NONPAREIL Farm Feed, Bone, Drog, and Hand-grinding MILLS. 700 Bizes. Also Cotton-Seed Hullers. Illustrat-de pumphlets free. Address SEDGEBERS, SHEPARD & MILLER, 181 East Front Street, Cincinnati, Obio.

324

SAVE FIFTY DOLLARS

THE NEW FLORENCE.

PRICE, $90 below | any other First-VALUE, $10 shove | class Sew'g Mach SAVED, $50 by buying the Floren

Every machine warranted.

Speelal terms to clubs and dealers. Send for circulars to the

Florence S. M. Co., Florence, Mass., or 776 Washington Street, Boston, Mass

CHARLES SUMNER'S GREAT WORK.

PROPHETIC VOICES CONCERNING AMERICA.

By CHARLES SCANER. Fine Edition, Tinted Paper, with Steel Por-trait, Crown Svo., Cloth extra, $2.

Aside from its literary and historical mer-its, this volume has a special interest, from the fact that it was the last work on which Mr. Sumner was engaged before his death. "PROPRETIC VOICES" will be found of great value to all who take an interest in the history of our country, so full is it of passages in which the unexampled prosperity of our land has been forefold by philosophers, posts, statesmen, and orators, of whom the lamented author has also given interesting sketches. Sent, post-paid, on receipt of pri

THE INDEX. Address

No. 1 Tremont Place, Boston. V E W E H A

TWO BRAINS! Dr. C. E. Brown-Sequard.

18 ALCOHOL A POISON 1 Dr. Wm. A. Hammond. THE POET LUNGFELLOW.

James T. Fields.

U. SUBVEY OF THE WEST.

(With Map.) Under Lleut. G. M. Wheeler. THE HORSE IN AMENICA. (Illust'd.) Discoveries by Prof. O. C. Marsh. SAFETY AT SEA.

(Illust'd.) IBON STEAMERS TELAT WILL NOT SINK.

SINK. SINK. These interesting Lectures and Letters, with a careful report of the important papers read at the Auril meeting of the National Academy of Sciences at Washington, and at the May meeting of the American Oriental Boelety at Boston, are published in full in after TRIBUNE EXTRA, No. 19. Price, in sheet form, 10 cents; in pamphlet, 20 cents; or seven for $1. Circulars, giving full details of the con-tents of all THE TRUMENTS. Circulars, giving full details of the con-tents of all THE TRIBUNE EXTRAS, free by mail.

THE WEEKLY TRIBUNE.

THE PARMER'S FAVORITE PAPER, until January 1, 1875, for $1. Address THE TRIBUNE, New York.

UST 0 F в THEODORE PARKER,

SIDNEY H. MORSE.

Dignity, reverence, sweetness, vigor, equi-poise, breathe through the clary; the artist has so filled his own heart with appreciation of that noile life that he has been able cun-ningly to mould it into those delicate lines which the character had wrought on the liv-ing fibre. We are tempted to exclaim, as we stand beside it, as the old artist did to his perfected work, "Speak then!"-Hannah S. Stevenson.

Stevenson. All the characteristics of my husband are in the bnat,—his greatness, bis goodness, his tenderness, his love. You cannot give life to clay or marble, but you can represent it, and this Mr. Morse has done.—Lydia D. Parker to Hannah E. Stevenson.

The eyes, though but of clay, are gleaning with possible indignation, with possible tears the lips are set firm with the resolution of him who, like Paul, could "fight a good fight" as well as "give a reason."—Samuel Longfe-lote.

The first time I have seen Theodore Parker since be died,- Wm. Sparroll.

The best representation of Mr. Parker even executed in clay.-Boston Daily Globe.

The face is strong and noble as it should be. The face is strong and noble as it should be. Thelikeness is good. - Boston Datly Advertuer. Nothing appears for heauty alone, or finish, or to show the vanity of the artist. All in forgotten in the man-the true, real, Yankee man, Theodore Parker.-L. S.H. in the Golden doe. Age

Copies of this Bust, fluely finished n plas-ter, $10 each. Boxing for transportation, $1 extra. Freight or expressage paid by party sending order. Weight of box about fifty pounds. Orders may be sont to S. H. MORSE.

Room 13, 25 Bromfield St., Boston, Mass.

]	COPIES ONLY	FEW
	t Photograph (Cabinet Size) of RE D. CONWAY, of London,	n excellent

Ber can be had at the office of THE INDEX. Price 50 cents CONSTANT EMPLOYMENT.

A

01 1

At home, male or female, 100 a week war ranted. No capital required. Particular and valuable sample sent free, Address with six-cent return stamp. C. RUSS, Williamsburg, N. Y.

FREE DISCUSSION

I is held at HOSPITALLER HALL, 553 Washington Street, Boston, every Sunday, at 165 A.M., 554 and 75 P.M. All bat relates to the Edigious, Political, and Social interests of mankind constitute the subjects for discussion. The INDEX and Index Tracts are for sale every Bunday at Hospitaller Hall.

CHARLES SUMNER.

A fine likeness of Massachusetts' great Sen-stor, the copy of a recent Photograph by Black, is for sale at THE INDEX office, and will be sent by mail to any address on receipt of the price-fifty cents. Address THE INDEX.

THE INDEX, 1 Tremont Place, Boston. TO NEWSPAPER

26	v	*1	~		~	-	 ~	_
				I S

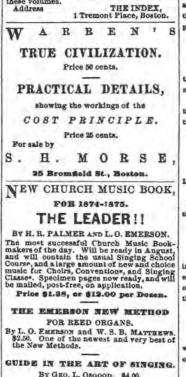

Having conveniences for doing the best of newspaper printing at reasonable prices, 1 should like to contract for composition alone, or for composition, press-work, and mailing, for one or more weekly papers. Best of references given, and astifactory work guaranteed. Tremont Place, Boston.

The second	0	в	0	0	К-	в	U	x	Е	в	8
A

Please examine the revised list of POPU-LAB BOOKS on the opposite side of this page. Any OBTAINABLE BOOK NOT IN THIS LIST will be furnished to order. Readers of THE INDEX who desire to pur-chase English, German, or French Books, on who wish for information as to the price, &c., of any American or Foreign Book, can have their orders promptly filled and their inqui-ries answered by addressing THE INDEX, 1 Tremont Place, Boston.

	1 Tremont Pl	ace, B	oston.
BOUND INDEX.	VOLUMES	OF	THE

NDEX. Bound volumes of THE INDEX for 1871, 1872, and 1873, will be sent by express (st he purchaser's expense) on receipt of $2.50, $2.-50, and $5.00 respectively. These volumes are exceedingly valuable singly, irrespective of each other; for the important essays and other articles they contain are of permanent interest, and will furnish as instructive read-ing twenty years hence as to-day. No more valuable present could be made to a friend struggling out of Orthodoxy than one of these volumes.

By GEO. L. OSGOOD. $4.00. New and very superios book for Voice Training

BICHTEB'S MANUAL OF HARMONY. Translated from the EIGHTH German edition by J. C. D. PABKER. Price $2.00.

Prepared expressly for the Leipsic Con-servatory, and is a complete and reliable Grammar of Composition.

ROSTON LIBERAL LEAGUE. Our organization some time since decided to direct its afforts for the present towards a the

Repeal of the Laws

whereby church and other corporate property is unjustly exempted from its share of the burden

As a means to this end, we have published for general circulation several thousand copies of a

TRACT

on Church Exemption, being the article by Mr. Abbot which appeared in THE INDEX of Nov. 27. The edition was made as large as our funds rould allow : but, so great has been the dema It is already nearly enhanced.

Our next edition ought to be large shough to place a copy in the hands of id generously to supply the calls for them in her States.

EVERY VOTER IN THE STATE.

To do this, we need funds; for, although we have made arrangements for printing the Tract at very low cost, it is impossible for the Boston League, with its various other expenses, to bear the entire expense alone. Will not, then, forward and help us with liberal donations? We frequently receive communications from parties wishing tracts to distribute, asking how much they shall pay. To such we reply that the cost to us is about $2.50 per thousand, and we shall be pleased to furnish them at this price per thousand, or 10 cents per hundred, to all who will circulate them. But all additional donations will be gratefully received for the purpose of circuating them gratuitously throughout the country.

All Friends of the Movement

To many of the subscribers of THE INDEX and others whose names have been furnished as as probable friends of the movement, copies of the Tract, together with Petitions asking the repeal of the Exemption Laws, have been sent,

With the Hope

that such friends will try to secure as many sig natures to the petition as possible in their locality We respectfully ask those who are unable to attend to the matter themselves to place the petitions in the hands of those who will. Lot us

BOLL UP THE LIST!

Let our united voices be heard! And let it be done NOW! We would say, also that we feel deeply the

Other Organizations

in this State, to cooperate with us in securing equality and justice, by pressing the "Demands of Liberalism." If, in any locality, there are those who are inclined to Form a Liberal League.

we are ready to render such assistance as lies in our power.

LIBERALSI

If all will units and work, the results sought can be accompliabed Address

BOSTON LIBERAL LEAGUE.

NO. 1 TREMONT PLACE, BOSTON. Per order of the RESCUTIVE COMMITTEE, CHEAP OFFERI A A COMPLETE SET of INDEX TRACTS, from No. 1 to 14 inclusive, will be any address on the prepayment of 75 carry mailed to Address THE INDEX, No. 1 Tremont Place, Boston, Mass THE AMERICAN EDITION 07 MONCURE D. CONWAYS SACRED ANTHOLOGY. A BOOK OF ETHNICAL SCRIPTURES, has just been published, and will be sent postpaid on receipt of the price, $4.00. Address THE INDEX. 1 TREMONT PLACE, Boston, Mass. G. L. HENDERSON & CO., BANRERS,

LEROY, MINN.

LEROT, MINN. Money invested on short time, or for a term of years, on unincumbered improved farmas, at 12 per cent, interest per annum, garable seemi-azunality. Perfect title and ample security guaranteed. All expenses for abstract of title and recording morigace paid by borrower. We collect and remit to a by borrower. We collect and remit for morigant of the United States free of charge. REFERENCES, -First National Bank, Mor-Gregor, lowa; Pirst National Bank, Minna-kee, Wis.; Oity National Bank, Chicago, IL; Allen, Stevens & Co., Bankers, New York City; Morris Altman.

REAL ESTATE SECURITIES, paying 8 to 10 per cent. interest, or Investments in Real Estate in Chings if judiciously made, are the best and safest modes of employing capital. The old

Real Estate and Loan Agency OF

ERNST PRUSSING, 143 RANDOLPH STREET Chicago (Established 1858),

Guarantees perfect title and ample scoutity in all its Real Estate Loans. Firstciases securities always on hand, In-terest and principal collected without charge. Real Estate Investments made on commission or on shares; taxes paid, &c. Orders of conjutalists and real estate own-ers respectfully solicited.

REASONS FOR USING THE

EUREKA SPOOL SILK.

It is full lougth. It is full size. It is smooth and elastic, and is equally adapted to hand or machine use.

Many kinds of spool silk are a perfect rand, being not only shorter in length, but fraud, a much finer size than they are represented to be, and of so poor a quality as to be unit for use. The ladies will always find the Eureka Silk exactly as represented. Every spool is warranted, and the manufacturer's ame indelibly branded on every spool. Call for it.

RADICAL AND LITERABY LECTURES

BY

JOHN WEISS,

BADICAL LECTURES.

SHAKSPEABIAN LECTURES.

FIRST SERIES.

Dogberry, Malvolio, Bottom, Touchstons.
 Ajax in Troilus and Cressida: The Porter in Macbeth: The Fool in Lear.

SECOND SERIES.

1. The Women of Shakspeare,

4. Macbeth and Lady Macbeth.

(Binaland b) Google

6. Contrast in Shakspeare's Characters.

JOHN WEISS,

32 E. Brookline St., Boston.

The Idea of Hereafter. An Act of Faith Intelligence in Beligion. Religion and Science. Heart in Religion.

1. Cause of Laughter.

2. Irony and Humor.

5. Falstaff. 8. Hamlet.

2. Portis 3. Ophelia.

Address

Three Dollars a Year.

LIBERTY AND LIGHT.

Index.

Single Copies Seven Cents.

VOLUME D.

WHOLE NO. 237.

ORGANIZE!

THE DEMANDS OF LIBERALISM

1. We demand that oburches and other coclesiastical property ahall no longer be exempt from just taxation. 2. We demand that the employment of chaplains in Con-gress, in State Legislatures, in the navy and militia, and in prisons, sylums, and all other institutions supported by public money, shall be discontinued. 3. We demand that all supply

3. We domand that all public appropriations for educa-tional and charitable institutions of a sectarian character shall cesso.

tional and onaritable institutions of a sectarian character shall cease.
4. We demand that all religious services now sustained by the government shall be abolished; and especially that the use of the Bible in the public schools, whether octanishy shall be prohibited.
4. We demand that the appointment, by the President of the United States or by the Governors of the various States, of all religious features and fasts shall wholly cease.
5. We demand that the judicial oath in the courts and mail other departments of the government shall be solutioned, and that simple schemation under the plans and penalties of print shall be established in its stated.
7. We demand that all laws directly or indirectly enforcing the observance of Sunday as the Sabbath shall be repealed.

Ne demand that all laws looking to the suforcement of "Christian" morality shall be abrogated, and that all laws shall be conformed to the requirements of natural morality, equal rights, and impartial liberty.
We demand that not only in the Constitutions of the United States and of the several States, but also in the practical administration of the same, no privilege or advantage shall be conceded to Christianity or any other special religion; that our online political system shall be founded and administered on a purely secular basis; and that whatever changes shall prove necessary to this end shall be consistently, unfil proven seesary to this end shall be consistently, unfil proven seesary to this end shall be consistently, unfil proven seesary to this end shall be consistently.

A FORM OF LOCAL ORGANIZATION.

Whereas, it is our profound conviction that the safety of republican institutions is imperiable, the advance of civili-sation impeded, and the most sacred rights of man in-fringed, by the least interference of the State in matters of religion; and religion; and Whereas, Cortain grave inconsistencies with the general spirit of the United States Constitution still mark the prac-tical administration of our political system, threatening the perpetuity of religious liberty, the existence of free public schools, and the peace and prosperity of the entire land; THEREFORM, We, the undersigned, hereby associate our-selves together under the following and right. Ast. 4.—Such measures shall be adopted for raising funda for the League as shall be prescribed in the By-Laws by a two-thirds vote of the members.

ART. 5.—Any person may become a member of the League y subscribing his or her name to these Articles of Agreement. ART. 6.-The Officers of the League shall be a President, a Vice President, a Secretary, a Treasurer, and an Excen-tive Committee of three members : and their duties shall be these commonly pertaining to these offices. The President and Secretary shall be ex-officio delegates to the National Convention of Liberal Leagues when called together. ART. 7.-These Articles of Agreement may be amended by a three-fourths vote of the members present at any reg-ular meeting, provided due notice of the proposed amend-ments shall have been sent to every member at least two weeks previous to such meeting.

Bo far as I am concerned, the above is the platform of THE HORX. I believe in it without reserve; I believe that it will yet be accepted universally by the American people, as the only platform consistent with religious liberty. A Liberal League ought to be formed to carry out its princi-ples wherever haif a dozen sarnest and resolute Liberals an be got together. Being contineed that the movement to secure compliance with these just "Demands" must surely, even if slowly, spread, I hope to make THE INDEX a means of furthering it; and I ask the assistance and active co-operation of every man and every woman who be-lives in f. Multiply Liberal Leagues everywhere, and re-property with rembis in proportion at that list grows. If freedom, justice, and reason are that their organized vice be heard like the sound of them. FRANCIS E. ABBOT, Editor.

BORTON, Sept. 1, 1878.

FRANCIS E. ABBOT, Editor.

For List of Liberal Longues, see next page. RELIGIOUS FREEDOM AMENDMENT:

PROPOSED AS A SUMPTITUTE FOR THE FIRST AMENDMENT TO THE UNITED STATES CON-STITUTION.

ABTICLE 1.

ATTICLE 1. SOUTHON 1.—CONGINESS SHALL MAKE NO LAW RESPECTING AN OB-siblishment of religion, or favoring any particular form of the paole peaceably to assemble and to petition the Gov-anneat for a redress of grievances. Berton 2.—NO State shall make any law respecting an stabilishment of religion, or favoring any particular form of religion, or prohibiting the free exercise thereof; or a properties of grievances. Berton 2.—NO State shall make any law respecting an of religion, or prohibiting the free exercise thereof; or a properties of the people peaceably to assemble and to put any State be deprived of any of the or her rights, privileges, or as pacities, or as and no perion shall ever to required as condition of suffrage or as any fails of the register of any public or private duty, or ren-deput to the religion. Berton and the second section of this Article by appropri-ations of the second section of this Article by appropri-ation.

NOTES AND COMMENTS.

BT A. W. S.

THE LAST USE of the chromo-premium business, of which we have heard, is that of a disgusted Milwauke fisherman, who offers a chromo to every fish that will take the bait.

WE MORTALS are soon, without being translated, to have an opportunity of breathing calestial air; for the comet which is cavorting in the heavens threatens to enwrap the earth in its nebulous tail, while its has still be proudly lifted among the stars. Our astrono-mers are getting their spectroscopes ready, and mean to capture a deal of knowledge from this unusual visitor.

JOHN STERLING once said (Carlyle's Life of John Sterling): "What we are going to is abundantly ob-scure; but what all men are going from is very plain." But all thoughtful and truth-loving minds are content with this condition; for of one thing they are certain, which is that their final goal is the truth,-since, though they wander long, they cannot wander from this, that like a great magnet draws us all slowly towards it.

LAROY SUNDERLAND, in the Commonwealth, mays: "Health comes to those who will it; to those who seek for it more than for hidden treasure. It comes only to those who are in EARNEST, who make it their first b ness, their first duty, to be well. And, to those who thus will and no the work which health commands, her reward is sweet and pure." Now, such as are sick will please take notice, and govern themselves accordingly.

IN AN ADDRESS delivered at the Baptist Anniversaries, in England, Rev. Hugh Stowell Brown said that, alin England, hev. Hugh Stowal Blown blown and they though the belief in witchcraft, unlucky days, and other common superstitions had well nigh died out, there is to-day more superstition in England than there was one hundred years ago. He thought some of the prevalent religious doctrines wore a strange medley of Paganism, Judaism, and Christianlty. A very frank Christian is Mr. Brown, indeed!

ONE OF THE INDEX subscribers writes to us, and says: "I am far advanced in the ninth decade of my existence, and I cherish THE INDEX as no dubious light in my path for the short period before reaching the dark terminus." for the short period before reaching the dark terminds." We are very glad if this paper is able in the least degree to enlighten the way which our aged friend is travelling. His own "inner light," we should judge, shines with no unstinted ray; and may that grow brighter and brighter until the darkness itself, which he anticipates, hencement (it preshib) a reprior deat becomes (if possible) a perfect day!

THE NEW YORK Tribune is aggravating enough to state that, in many of the mountain counties in Virginia, West Virginia, and Pennsylvania, where picturesque ary and good country fare may be found, "board plentiful and good can be obtained for twelve dollars a What an inscrutable fate it is that has made month !" these counties so remote from Boston, where the stay-athomers cannot reach them at night by horse and steam-

ALL INTELLIGENT and sensible people are determined that women shall have as good a chance as man to perfect themselves and to be useful; and therefore they will not long allow any Supreme Court, or City School Comnot long mow any supreme court, or city demot com-mittee, to keep women out of those places to which they are eminently adapted and have been elected by an en-lightened constituency. We are sorry that Boston, of all places, has not been foremost in placing on her School Committee the wise and noble women who are available to her need.

THE BIGHLY cultured and distinguished chief editress of the Woman's Journal has a sense of humor in her; she not only can write able essays and fine poems for the cause she has espoused, but is disposed to enliven the vigorous contest with her foes by well-put and time-ly witticisms. Here is one she fashes at Solicitor Healy, who recently argued before the Supreme Court against the eligibility of women to serve on the Boston School Committee:-

Wby must all women remain the inferiors of Solicitor Healy? Answer-Because, being women, they cannot expect to rate (expectorate) as he does.

Among Mrs. Howe's other flowers of speech, this last may be called her Healyotrope.

THE CORNER-STONE of the new Paine Memorial Hall was laid, in this city, on the Fourth of July. Appropri-ate services were held on the site of the proposed building, and in the Parker Memorial Hall clo se by; at which Horace Seaver, J. P. Mendum, B. F. Underwood, and others made addresses. The whole occasion is reported as having been an enceedingly interesting one. We gratefully acknowledge the receipt of a card of admission to the services from our Investigator friends, and only regret that unavoidable circumstances prevented us from attending. We heartily wish for the enterprise of the new building the most eminent success. In another column will be found a report of the exercises, copied from the Transcript.

REV. DE. PORTEOUS, of Brooklyn, N. Y., says that "America is a nation of tendencies, while England is a "America is a nation of fendencies, while England 18 s nation of results." This remark, as well as some others which this gentleman has made, shows that he has a dis-criminating mind. But inasmuch as he, being an Eng-lishman, left his native country and came to America to live, we presume that he prefers "a nation of tendencies" to "a nation of results." We certainly do. It is better to be moving on than to be standing still,—if the motion is inspired by the courage of ideas, and the rest prompt-ed by the cowardice that abrinks from necessary change and natural progress. America is a new country; it has a new country's faults and defects, and lacks the finish and culture of some of the older nations. But it has this very courage of ideas which is so desirable; it is not afraid of innovations and reforms, and new statements of troth. It will pardon much to a man who is in sar-nest for freedom, and who believes in the rights of the individual as against the tyranny of majorities. And whatever else America lacks, it has got far on the road towards accompliahing three results; namely, political, religions, and social freedom.

THE EDITOR of the Banner of Light is "moved to predict that, before another year is rolled up in the ever-winding acroll of time, Spiritualism will become, in effect, the popular religion of the day." Perhaps it will; we are by no means prepared to say it will not. Indeed, it is quite popular to-day, if one may believe the claims made in its behalf. But why this itching desire for pop-ularity, any way? When any doctrines, institutions, or marity, any way? when any doctrines, institutions, of customs become "popular," they are largely obsolets to all thoughtful, far-seeing, progressive minds. We do not expect the truth ever to become popular; it will always be too "new" and "radical" for any but the bravest and most rational minds to receive. The truth always goes before us; we never can catch it and detain it in any form or formula. The radicals of this age will be th conservatives of the next; and a fresh brood of radicals must be hatched from age to age. It always has been so, and it always will be so. The real radical will never stop to consider whether he is popular, or his trath is popular; but he will utter what he believes, and try to live it, whether popularity or unpopularity attend on him or it. What we all need, more than anything also, is the COURAGE OF TRUTE.

5 H

· 01: a participation ED: N E CONTIN THOLE Ling C MI R. I :805 t Bi Bi 57. SCIE. skho tet nis 13 100 XUR 1 10. 22 D R L.) 12(72) 2000 1000 NO T III. 175 * 120 11

3.

ARTICLES OF AGREBHENT.

ART. 1 .- The name of this Association shall be THE LIB-

LIST OF LISEBAL LEAGUES.

ST. LOUIS, MO.-M. A. McCord, President; P. A. Lofgreen, L. La Grille, Scorstaries. BOSTON, MASS.-F. E. Abbot, President; J. P. Titcomb, G. A. Bacon, Secretaries. G. A. Bacon, Secretaries. JEVYERSON, OBLO. W. H. Crowell, President; A. Giddings, JEVYERSON, OBLO. W. H. Crowell, President, J. L. Hatch, Becretary. San Joss, Cal.-A. J. Spencer, President; J. L. Hatch, Secretary. Secretary. TOLEDO, 10WA .- J. Roedy, President; E. S. Beckley, Secre-VINELAND, N. J.-John Gage, President; Sue M. Clute, Secretary, R.S. J. W. Eastman, President; B. L. Easter, Secretary, OLATER, HAN.-S. B. & Wilson, President; H. A. Griffin, Becretary, Mich.-W. R. Hill, President; A. T. Garretson, DETROIT, Secretary. BEREDAVILLE, MICH. - A. G. Rastman, President; F. B. Knowles, Secretary. OSCEDLA, MO.-R. F. Thompson, President; M. Roderick, Decretary, Mc.-R. F. Housson Fresident; C. Rhodes, Secretary, Barris, Mz.-F. G. Barker, President; C. Rhodes, Secretary, Barlow, W.R.-Fresident; J. D. Walter; Secretary, E. H. Bridgman, Washisorow, D.C.-George M. Wood, President; J. E. Orawford, Secretary, Austral, Calco.-John Fish, President; G. W. Barbes, Treas-tonsor, Galto.-John Fish, President; G. W. Barbes, Treas-MINNEAPOLIS, MINN .- President, J. B. Bassett; Secretary, Antos Grethen, N.Y.-J. B. Brown, President; D. M. Bennett, Secretary. NEW YORE, N.I.-J. B. Brown, President; D. M. Bennett, Secretary. ST. JOERPH, MO.-P. V. Wise, President; T. H. Kennedy, Construction Beoretary, Beoretary, L. CLARKE, WHS.-President, S. J. Dickson; Secretary, W. M. J. D. J. J. Schneder, T. Gray; Secretary, W. Allen. New OnLEANS, LA.-President, E. Vorster; Secretary, J. E. Wallace. By Crit, Mice.-President, S. M. Green; Secretary, S. M. Johnen

CLEARFIELD, PA.-S. Widemire, President; H. Hoover, Secretary.

For THE INDEX.] Bible-Views of Nature,

BY W. C. GANNETT.

THREE WAYS TO BATIONALIZE OLD REVERENCE.

THESE WAYS TO BATIONALIZE OLD REVERENCE. When a thing that has long been held in religious reverence, —a god, a ritual, a doctrine, a book, —losse that reverence as minds outgrow their earlier belief into one more rational, there are three ways of treat-ing what is given up. One is to banish it with flat denial, or even perhaps to willfy it. Thus in the first Christian days men treated the delites of the old faith, the Greek and Roman gods. They became demone, powers of dark-ness and evil. Thus at the reformation men in Northern Europe treated the ritual of the mother church. Down came the images and pictures. The Northern Europe treated the ritual of the mother church. Down came the images and pictures. The inside of cathedrais, as far as might be, became white-washed barns. Our Puritan forefathers for a long while would not even read the Scripture in church-garvice, nor make a prayer at funeral, because that would savor too much of the Catholic superstition. And thus some men to-day are wont to treat the Bible. It holds much that is absurd and cruel,— therefore they throw the Bible to the winds. This way of rationalism sees no good in the old thing that was reverenced. reverenced.

was reverenced. The second way sees no bad in it. If the first vili-fies to destroy it, the second mystifies to save it. At the renatisance, for instance, when the love of classic lore revived, the scholars of the fifteenth century thus treated Homer, and Plato, and Moses, and Christ, in order to reconcile them all with each other. All were so beautiful, so true,—and yet with such a difference! How explain away that difference? Only by leaving the common-sense of each author, and diving below the sentences to find an inner sense, some diviner meaning in which they might agree. Of course by allegory, by twofold, threefold, fourfold interpreta-tions, they could find anything they wished; and all was easily smoothed out into harmony and beauty. Thus, too, do some men treat the Bible now. Gene-sia and geology are in stubborn opposition. But let the creation-days be an allegory for spochs, let Jeaus' promise of his second advent be mere allegory for the destruction of Jerusalem and the gradual triumph of Christianity in the world, and all is rationalized, if this de rational. The third method of rationalizen is not reactible -- destruction of Jerusalem and the gradual triumph of Christianity in the world, and all is rationalized, if this be rational. The third method of rationalism is not possible un-til what is called "the historic sense" is born; which recognizes that all religions grow, and that any given idea or morality must be set back in its native time and place before it can be fairly judged. When thus set back, it recognizes both good and seti in each old sanctity. It sees plainly that there is much to keep, and keeps it. It does not vility, it does not mystify. Things true and admirable are true and admirable. The crudities are crudities, the crueities are crudities; at the same time these may be real, historic germs of other truth and beautyin which we moderns live, and move, and have our moral being. This is the way in which men to-day are trying to rationalize the ancient faiths; and in the presence of this method both the other methods seem crudities themselves. In this spirit I am going to speak of our Bible,— though not now of the bad in it so much as of a cer-tain good quality it has. There is very much in it to be criticised and unsparingly condemned from our stand-point in knowledge and ethical ideal. The Tom Paine-work is honorable, helpful, necessary— and extremely easy. It is instructive to oneself—mu-til one has accepted the instructive to meself—mu-til one has accepted the instructive to do exerting which, who love by preference, for their own which, will be despened, whose lives will be bettered by opening their eyes to see their misplaced rever-ence, Tom Paine-work, made delicate, is still instruc-tive. But they who love by preference, for their own wakes, to point fingern at the poornees of the book, whose personal taste it is to decry the Bible, make one think of Voltaire reviling Shakspeare because he believed in witchcraft,---"There was that witch-scene in Macbeth I"--make one think of men who at the name of Kepler would remember, "That fellow who calculated horoscopes, and wrote a vile prophesying almanac," who of Newton would say, "Yes, he dab-bled in alchemy and wrote a big book on Daniel's prophecies," of Luther, "Yes, he scoffed at the thought of the earth's going round the sun, and threw his inkstand at the devil :" instead of thinking dest and most of the grand henefits for which each thought of the earth's going round the sun, and threw his inkstand at the devil;" instead of thinking first and most of the grand benefits for which each name is rightly famed. Their misplaced emphasis recalls those Protestants who emptied and white-washed their cathedrals. To-day we Protestants of Protestants bring back our images (for we have saints) and pictures to the walls, and court the charm of music and of color, and wonder at those graceless, albeit staiwart, forefathers of ours. The Bible to us is no such book as it is in almost all the churches. It never again can be. But I believe, as our faith ripens, we shall probably turn back for certain things that we have dropped in the haste of first escape; will turn to the Bible again, and to Jesus, somewhat as we go back to the love of picture and cathedrals, not to take them at their old valuations, but at their real, intrinsic values, and honor them for much high worth which now we are spit to overlook; and that, in some of the darkest dogmas of Orthodoxy now de-cried, we shall see noble Intents, foreshadowings of trath. trath.

THE BIBLE AS A PICTURE-BOOK.

THE BIBLE AS A PICTURE-BOOK. In these summer days we live out of doors all we can. We watch the sunsets, and some of us the sun-rises. We sit on the doorsteps in the evening wind. We wander in the fields, and listen to the music in the grass, and think how the broad, green continent stira all over with the life of leaves. The voice of the mountain and the voice of the sea seem calling to us. The showers and the shinings rhyme to each other. The mornings and the nights move on like the verses of a perfect poem. Let us spend our half-hour with-in reach of these summer-sights and sounds, by open-ing the Bible and glancing at the views of out-door

The mornings and the highly move on like the verses of a perfect poem. Let us spend our half-hour whih-in reach of these summer-sights and sounds, by open-ing the Bible and glancing at the views of out-door Nature that lie upon its pages. Whatever else it is, the Bible is a sketch-book, a portfolio of fine pictures, a book of Eastern photo-graphs. The old monks, copying its chapters before the printing-press was born, used to illuminate their manuscripts with glowing letters and quaint devices set among the words in goid and purple and crimson. But the color and the grace are there already for those who have fresh eyes for the old book. It is self-illuminated, one of the great picture-books of literature. I know none more fit than parts of it for billside reading, and for woody walks. One reason of this picturesqueness is simply be-cause it is an old book, written-much of it--in the childhood of the race. The farther we trace man back toward the early times, the closer do we find his eye and ear to Nature. Earth-the solid, painted, sounding earth-that lies about him his infancy, is giving his senses that experience which only slowly through the ages ripens into abstract and general ideas. Many things betray this early attitude of man. The very letters of our alphabet began as rough pictures of the object that gave them their first names; although the pictures were long ago so clipped and chipped that now in our conventional A B c the old likeness is almost entirely rubbed off, and it is hard for one who has not gone back to their roots, are found to be mere imitations of Nature's sounds, or attempts to imitate by sound the impression which hastory. So too with the words which the letters spell. Many of our spoken words, traced back to their roots, are found to be mere imitations of Nature's sounds, or attempts to imitate by sound the impression which hastor's sights make on us. They are echoes, sound pictures. Our Webster's Unabridged is a kind of vast

Many of our spoken words, traced back to their roots, are found to be mere imitations of Nature's sounds, or attempts to imitate by sound the impression which Nature's sights make on us. They are echoes, sound pictures. Our Webster's Unabridged is a kind of rast whispering-gallery, hundreds of generations long, with the roar of old oceans, and the rush of old storms, and the creash of rocks, and the cries of an-cient animals, at the other far-off end of it. We have the grand instrument lying quietly on our study-table, and call it our family dictionary! Thus it is also with the whole of early literatures. They are picture-books. To read the first books of the earth is like looking from an open window, like listening in the fields. The ideas translate them-selves into sight and sound. They gleam and gloom; they shout, and sling, and clatter. Each thought is a thing. Each event is an act. Little abstraction, lit-tic apeculation. Principles are personified. If there be a theory, it is given in concrete analogies. If there be moralizing, it is given in fable and parable, such as you tell your child. The metaphysics lie in one-lined proverbs, or pithy sentences, wrapping some mystic meaning in a symbol. Discussion all turns into drams. Feeling is always stronger than thought, and the language is full of imagery. All this reminds us of our nurseries, where the children dramatize, and improvise, and symbolize. And this is why nearly all the mational literatures begin with poems. Sober prose comes afterwards. Homer comes before the Hindu metaphysics. And our own old Norse and German accestors bequest ht our stheir Edda songs, the epic of the Nibelungs, the romances of King Arthur and Charlemagne; and little else. Now our Bible, whatever else it be, is mother of these early picture-books of Nature. Its paalms and prophecies, its history, its science, its biographies, its ethics, are written very largely in pictures, and some of these we will turn and look at, if you will.

ethics, are written very largely in pictures, a of these we will turn and look at, if you will.

ITS TWO PARTS, HEBREW AND GREEK.

Properly speaking, however, the Bible should not be called a book. It is a literature containing many books, of many dates, and on many themes; and the first thing of all to notice is that it has two parts, a Hebrew and a Greek part. Nor does the division fall where we are wont to put it, and where it does fall in the language used, between the Old and the New Tea-tamemts; but rather, if we seek it in any one place, between Luke and John. Emerson says that Europe extends to the Alleghanies, and only there does Amer-ica begin, so strongly has the Atlantic alope, where the first settlements were made, retained the Old World character. If we cross the great basin and the plains to the Pacific coast, we find in California an-other strip whose men and manners, being largely Eastern born, are again more European than the men and manners of the central cities are. It is some-what thus with the Bible. That break between the languages of the Old Testament and the New begulies us. The Hebrew part, instead of ending there, rang over. The first three gospels, Matthew, Mark, and Luke, though preserved to us in Greek, are still works of the Hebrew mind. At John's gospel Greek thought begins, and most (not all) of the Epistles thought begins, and most (for each out all iffer mingled with the Hebrew influence. Then again, at the end of the book, we find another bright Hebrew Jerusalem. ernsalem.

THE PICTURES LIE IN THE HEBBEW PART.

THE PICTURES LIE IN THE HERBEW PART. The first thing of all is to notice this fact about the two parts, because in respect to picturesqueness there is a great difference between them. The out-door poetry, the hymns and songs, the landscapes with the idyls of home and country life, the parable scenes, the dramatic appeals to national feeling,—nearly all of these lie in the Old Testament and the Hebrew portion of the New. On the other hand, subjective ideas, abstract doctrine, belong to the Greek and not to the Hebrew. Take out one or two books from the earlier collection, and almost the only formal doc-trines left are affirmations that there is but one God. Greator, and Provider; that good and evil get their due reward, and that Israel is the chosen nation,—an idea which blossoms into the Messianic faith by go-pel times. Grand themes, Indeed, are these, on which grand music bursts out from jubliant hearts, and is wrung out from breaking or indignant ones. But that is it; all turn at once to music and imagery. All is objective. There is a long-argued specu-iation in Job. But these very enceptions illustrate the general character I speak of. That Old Testa-ment "wisdom" is usually personified as a woman who crieth at the city gates and through the strest on some of man; and from the niches of Job's high speculation, we gaze on starry skies, and on sea-waves and storma, and watch the war-borse pawing, and the aspeculation, we date the left of the strest of the some of man; and from the niches of Job's high speculation, we gaze on starry skies, and on sea-waves and storma, and watch the war-borse pawing, and the aspeculation, we gaze on starry skies, and on sea-waves and storma, and Leviathan making the deep to boil like ap. The first thing of all is to notice this fact about the Begie on her crag, and Behemoth lying under the sedie on her crag. and Behemoth lying under the stady trees, and Leviathan making the deep to boil its a pot.

In the New Testament, no idyl is more beautiful than that of Jesus' birthright; but this is one of those due to the Hebrew facty. No drama more interest than that in which the avenging angels and the brew also. There is even a Genesis in the New Testament; for the Bible ends, as it begins, with a story of creation. At the beginning, the heavens and east th to which God aid, "Let Here be light' and light was!" At the end, new heavens and a meereation. But even here, although it is a vision of first dream and the last atin to the very difference we were noticing; in the laster there is less of Nature, ore of man. The first earth was country; this second a city, "the New Jerusalem." The first prevalement we have a and y were a wandering among them. The laster there is less of Nature, the story smells of the fresh earth all through; the did seen kings' palaces. And this change from the story smells of the fresh earth all through; the other gleams with gens, as if the man who farcied is diver earth which gens, as if the man who farcied is diver earth with gens, as if the man who farcied is not conception to the other hints the whole long story of conception to the story and civilization that second a civilization that show be used the store whole one play and the store whole long story of the complex society and civilization that show the story should be the store whole long story of gleams with gens, as if the man who farcied is not conception to the the fresh earth all through; the other beams who farcied is not conception to the the the the shole long story of more difference.

ABSTRACT DOGMA IN THE GREEK PART.

ABSTRACT DOOMA IN THE GREEK PART. On the other hand, subjective ideas have their home in the Greek parts of the New Testament. We go in and enter human nature when we approach the themes of sin and redemption as they are treated in Paul's episties. Not that they are very abstractly treated even here. Dramatically, rather; but it is a transcendential drama of the soul: the scene is laid not that the difference is wholly due to Greek influ-ence, although Paul was a man Greek by birthplace and half-Greek by education. By no means. As just hinted, it was partly due to time. The Hebrew thought also was growing more abstract in those rather in Jernesiem, the teachers at whose feet Paul sat, talking on his themes of grace and faith-response the stonement, justification, the great dogmas his letters and in John; and when one plants the parts that grow to such dogmas, his thoughts are transcharted not expect to find the landscepe tow. We would not expect to find the landscepe tow. not.

As before, there are exceptions to this general char-acter, and as before they are such as illustrate the character. There are psalms in Paul's letters, but they are no longer of green fields and rocky hills.

They are those passages in which Paul, having dimbed up his steep argument, stands on his conclu-sion as on a mountain-top, and looking out over the bin glory of the future chants how Christ has brought life and light into human darkness; how he has made men free with the liberty of the children of God; how nothing can separate us from that mighty before that far more exceeding and sternal weight of fory. That is the kind of pain we have in the weight of the fourth of II. Corinthians; and as well, and see his lighted face. But it is not David's form the sent as if we could hear Paul's voice werel, and see his lighted face. But it is not David's for nor David's face. Paul looks upon a different were nor David's face. Paul hear the sight of how no the sent is lighted face. But it is not David's to en on David's face. Paul hear the site of the server of the sent as a face of the to some of the sent stand to corruption, it is raised in heorruption." Yet one only needs to turn away from these to some mosphere where the song reflects presenting the sent man nature and ideas of history, and gone into an incomplete where the song reflects are more closely. David's to feel that he has left an intellectual at mosphere where the song reflects present far more closely to an anture and ideas of history, and gone into an incomplete where the song reflects are seen into an incomplete where the song reflects are seen into an incomplete where the song reflects are seen into an incomplete where the song reflects are seen into an incomplete where the song reflects are seen into an incomplete where the song reflects are seen into an incomplete where the song reflects are seen into an incomplete where the song reflects are seen into an into an inter where the song reflects are seen into an incomplete where the song reflects are seen into an into an inter and ideas of history, and gone into an into a seen into a seen into an into a seen into an into a seen into a seen into an into a seen into an into a seen into a seen into a seen

JESUS A COUNTRY-BOY.

the outward impressions of eye and ear. JEUR A COUNTER-BOY. Or compare Jesus with Paul, and judge which of them loves Nature best. Took know a man's talk be-trays his origin and occupation. If I come among you speaking of cows, and birds, and trees, you say I for the country. Talk of books, and shows, and treetile, would mark me from the city. Have you ever noticed how many little aigns there are in Jesus' talk that show he was a country-boy f and that he on the friends who followed him were men of the comon people? His speech is a perfect mosaic of pictures, and nearly every one is a country-picture. In the parables we see farmers ploughing, sowing seed, drassing their grape-rines, wondering at the weeds in the wheat-field, manuring their fig-trees, shired hands, and having a quartel when they pay in feeds swine, and his tather fastens caives. Another in feeds swine, and his tather fastens caives. Another in feeds swine, and his tather fastens caives. Or to feeds swine, and his tather fastens caives. Or to feeds swine, and his tather fastens caives. Another in feeds and particle in the substation of the distrement of the parables we see the weep from the goats on a noteer is filling old bottle-skins with new wine. Or will sides, and dividing the sheep from the goats on a the feeds swine, and his tather fastens caives on the feeds awine, and he sheep from the goats on a proteer is filling old bottle-skins with new wine. Or will sides, and dividing the sheep from the goats on a the particular the is a gimpase of while harvestedid, and market-day. In other parables fishermen are and market-day. In other parables fishermen are the mill. There is a gimpase of while harvestedid, a bother is hered to rise, and ginding meal at the time to Part There is the torm the tow the tow the tow the sheep form its noise; or and the sheep from its noise; or the sheep form the goat the tow tow the tow the tow tow tow the sheep form the tow the tow tow the tow tow tow the sheep form the tow

PAUL A MAN OF THE CITY.

grass, and the lilles, and the birds flying overhead. PAUL A MAN OF THE CITY. Now listen to Paul. There is hardly a word like these in his letters. I can remember only some half-dozen allusions to out-door Nature in all he wrote. But on the other hand he abounds in illustrations fraw from city-life, the business, weapons, trum-pt, fighting the good fight, and winning the crown, and pulling strongholds down. As a model for the earnest Christian he draws the picture of a Roman solider in full armor standing solidly at his post. We catch hints of the foot-race, the wrestiling-match, the gladiator in training, the slave that leads rich men's sons to their school, -all these being scenes from the streets, and circnes, and gymnasis of Greek viran extra the draws the picture of a Roman solider in full armor standing solidly at his post. We catch hints of the foot-race, the wrestiling-match, the size the school, -all these being scenes from the streets, and circnes, and gymnasis of Greek viran we would aspect from Paul of Tarsus, "no man city" in that day; from the missionary who took the Christ-faith out of Judaism and photoks and Rome. As he speaks to andiences that who took the Christ-faith out of Judaism and photoks and forthe faith he proched, he speaks in photoks and the life is the achoirs in that days in the strange syllogisms. They must be there, for his is what we find the the upon his lips, and wover the blocks are all the time upon his lips, and wover the blocks are all the time upon his lips, and wover the blocks are all the time upon his lips, and wover the blocks are all the time upon his lips, and wover the blocks are all do service; Eve and Sarah and Hagar of Elas all do service; Eve and Sarah and Hagar on the the vilderness experience is received, and the sheel, too. Many an incident of the escape photok files all do service; Eve and Sarah and Hagar on the is paraliels and contrast: issae and Javos and Rachel, too. Many an incident of the escape in the stall, Pather.

Pather. Such quotations were not far from Jesus' lips, either. Still, from all this, may we not feel sure that Jesus was a country-boy, one who knew well the hill-tops and the fields, one perhaps who loved to lie upon the grass alone, and think, and bend over the flowers, and watch for their coming in the spring? And that, compared with him, Paul was a student, and a theorizer, and a man of the world, the busy clip-world?

THE OLD TESTAMENT (1.) REFLECTS THE LAND-SCAPE AND THE PEOPLE.

SCAPE AND THE PEOPLE. But we are lingering too long in this newer por-tion of the Bible which, after all, does not contain the most or the grandest of its views of Nature. They lie in the older portion; and we find them there for the two reasons that it is the older, and that it is all Hebrew. Here we do nothing but ramble through cones of Nature and life. We lose much, it is true, in a translation. They will as, who know, that the Hebrew is one of the most smarkable of those echo-languages I spoke of, and

E INDEEX JULIX 9, 1
Statistics of the second strength of t

(2.) IT PERSONIFIES AND DRAMATIZES NATURE.

(2.) IT PERSONIFIES AND DRAMATIZES NATURE. This actual reflection of the landscape is not the only thing which gives the Old Testament its picturesqueness. We are startled at the boldness with which everything, the most inanimate, is personlifed and pressed into dramatic action. "The morning stars shout for joy." "The floods clap their hands," and the trees clap theirs. Here is a summer scene: "The little hills rejoice on every side, the pastures are clothed with flocks, the valleys also are covered over with corn. They shout for joy, they also sing." Here is one of a different kind, an earthquake, perhaps: "What allest thee, O sea, that thou fieldest? Ye mountains that ye skipped like rams, and ye little hills like lambs?" All things are made to speak, and feel, and grandly sympathize with Israel. If he be on him and disaster, then storm, and rocks, and priar repeat his woe. The captivity of the people is the desolation of Nature, and their return makes the solitary place giad, the heavense drop down, the wolf and the lamb lie down together, and the children "die a hundred years old."

(8.) IT FILLS NATURE WITH ONE MIGHTY FIGURE.

(8.) IT FILLS NATURE WITH ONE MIGHTY FIGURE. Such expression is foreign to our sober way of looking at things, though we find it beautiful and impressive when we read it in the Bible. Our hearts are near enough to Nature to understand and like such follow-feeling with it. To the Hebrews it was most instruction of the world was the great working-place of Jehovah. He was outside of it, they thought, building it in the beginning, and carrying on its operations ever since. All was of his will, the immediate operation of his hand, or the mediated operation of his purpose. This belief strews the book with a third set of bright illuminations, the most important of all for us on the watch for the picturesque. It underlies every page of a book of modern science, It was the Hebrew's conception of the universe, —not poetry to them, but fact. It was their science, so far as they had any, and it is most unjust to them to allegorize it all away into modern meanings to make the Bible tally with our science. They were more sincere than that, and doubtless spoke the best they knew, and what they literally believed, in their stories of creation and intervention from on high. To them it was no unusual intervention. Nature was full of the comings, and goings, and speakings, and direct doings of Jebovah.

Direct doings of yenovan.
"Sweet were the days when Thon didst lodge with Lot, Struggie with Jacob, sit with Gidson, Advise with Abraham, when Thy power could not Encounter Moses' strong complaints and moan.
"One might have sought and found Thee presently At some fair oak, or bush, or cave, as well; Is my God this way? No, they would reply, He is to Sinsi gone, as we beard tell. List, ye may hear great Aaron's bell."

He is a similar box, as we heard tell." List, yo may bear great Aaron's bell." We smile at George Herbert's verses, but hey-would not have smiled. It is this belief, even mo-than the reflection of the sky and hills in the flowin chapters, even more than the quickening of those hills into frisking lambs, and that sky into a singer's face, that impresses us so much in the Bible-view of Nature. Everything stands for God, is from him, and for him, and is his! One great hand possesses all, does all. "The trees of the Lord are full of sap." —how homelike that sounds, as if the earth were God's cottage-door. "The hills of the Lord are full of strength." "The sea is his,—he made it, and his hands formed the dryland." "He counteth the stars, and callet them all by name." The light is "his garment," and the clouds "his chariot." The thun-der is "his voice, shaking the wilderness and making tebanon to skip." He sends the lightnings: "they yo and asy unto him, Here we are." The snimals are his and asy into bim, Here we are." The snimals are his and asy in the lack of meat." Man, too, though little lower than the angels, is his,—"He is one God, and we are the poople of his pasture, and the sheep of his hand." HE HEREW'S SECIENT.

THE BERREW'S SECRET.

<text><text><text><text>

WE ARE HEBREWS STILL.

WE ARE HEBREWS STILL. No wonder, then, that the Bible, the holy literature of that little Asian tribe, is still a holy book for Eu-rops and America, the length and breadth of conti-nents. Its vision of the God in Nature is still the vision which religiousness confesses. And as one likes to meet a man more religious than himself, and hows before him, even if simple and ignorant and queet, because the religion makes his queerness poet-ry, and his simpleness a kind of greatness—so we feel strengthened and upborne by thinking about our Blue Hills as "hills of the Lord," about our apple trees as As trees, about Ais lightnings in the akies, and Ais locusts in the humming fields of our New England summer, though the phrase is odd as well as holy to nineteenth century ear. Mo to the head either, save in those middle moods between a deep thought and a shallow thought. The despest and the lightest thinking seem to agree in re-fering all to "God." Neither the savage nor the man of ripest life and science is apt to fancy himself an athelst. Eastern travellers tell us that the Araba, who are modern cousine of the Hebrews, still talk in the Old Teatament atyle of their rave. If a meatian athelst. Eastern travellers tell us that the Araba, who are modern cousins of the Hebrews, still talk in the Old Testament style of their race. If a pesti-lence comes among them, or if their flocks increase more than usual, if their crops prosper or fail above the common measure, if the storm is revy violent, or the rain comes out of season, the outstretched hand of God is in it. One dreams a dream. In the morning he tells his friends that God spoke to him in a vision of the night, saying, "Do thus and so." And an Arab historian still would fill his book with tales like those in Joshua, of God helping Israel to win heithe field. battle-fields.

nummin Google

an Arab historian still would fill his book with tales like those in Joshna, of God helping Iarael to win battle-fields. Are we not Arabs yet among ourselves? What ardent belief in miracle, and special providence, and private inspiration still! Men pray yet for rain. Men pray yet that heretics may be silenced. In war both armles pray for victory, and King William would give the glory to the God who has prospered German soldiers. Perhaps we would neither pray nor send such telegrams. But when the sudden joy, the audden woe-a baby's birth, a death-comes into the life of any of us; when it is our boy who goes to battle, and stays there; or when we sud-ently see great beauty in a face or in a mountain to be playing out its eternal life through the spaces of the universe,—does not every one know how the instinct hidden in his heart leaps in the old way to his lips, and words the words "My God"—words them, because that names not the feeling ouly but the flash of conviction. The One Life is in it, the One Will is somehow working there. Theodore Parker was accounted a rationalist; but they say who knew him that he nevers saw a new thing strik-new he such the though "My Father in Heav-en" was his greeting to it. Diderot was called the friend, he plucked an ear of corn, and fell a-musing over it. "What are you doing " skeed the friend. "Listening," was the reply: "Who is speaking to you?" "God." "Well, what does he say?" "He peakes Hebrew. The heart comprehends, but the un-derstanding is at fault." It was the oid Hebrew in these men, or rather it is the dim child-of-God sense in them, and in the Hebrew, and in us all. these men, or rather it is the dim child-of in them, and in the Hebrew, and in us all.

BUT WITH A DIFFERENCE.

<text>

BELATION OF THE BRAHMO SOMAJ TO HINDUISM AND CHRISTIANITY.

(From the Theistic Annual of the Brahmo Somaj.)

If, from what I have said, it be understood that the

If, from what I have said, it be understood that the whole system of religion recognized by the Brahmo Somaj is made up of borrowed ideas from different systems of belieft, there cannot be graver minapprehension. There has been an originality of religious genus in the Somaj, and adpth of spiritual development among its followers, which alone could easile them to find the deep principles and experiences of their souls crystallized within other systems of religious produced by conflicting schools of theory in the sould be accounted by conflicting schools of theory in the sould be accounted by conflicting schools of theory in the sould be accounted by conflicting schools of theory in the sould be accounted by conflicting schools of theory in the sould be accounted by conflicting schools of theory in the sould be accounted by conflicting schools of the sould of the sould be accounted by conflicting schools of the sould of the sould be accounted by conflicting schools of the sould be accounted by conflicting schools of the sould be accounted by conflicting schools of the sould be accounted by examining the tendencies of the Brahmo Somaj ( neight school by examining the tendencies of the Brahmo Somaj ( neight school by examining the tendencies of the Brahmo Somaj ( neight school by examining the tendencies of the Brahmo Somaj ( neight school by examining the tendencies of the Brahmo Somaj ( neight school by examining the tendencies of the Brahmo Somaj ( neight school by examining the tendencies of the Brahmo Somaj ( neight school by examining the tendencies of the Brahmo Somaj ( neight school by examining the tendencies of the Brahmo Somaj ( neight school by examining the tendencies the chary school by examining the tendencies of the Brahmo Somaj ( neight school by examining the tendencies the Brahmo Somaj ( neight school by examining the tendencies of the school by school by examining the tendencies of the Brahmo Somaj ( neight school by examining the tendencies the school by examining the tendencies the school s

Will those leaders of what is called the Conserva-tive Somaj, who have taken upon themselves to prove that the whole religion of the Somaj is derived from Hinduism, be good enough to answer whether in much they have written they have caught their in-spiration not from Vyas and Shunbeer, but from Cousin and Kant? Is not much of the best of their productions often only a transcript of the ideas of certain European and Christian philosophers, whose books they have read at second hand as translated into English? I personally know this to be a fact; every Brahmo knows it, though everyone will not ad-mit it. There is no shame in confessing a fact, but there is great dishonesty in wilduly concesiing it. Let these men freely acknowledge what they have got from Christian Europe, and what from Hindu India. Let them, let us all, vindicate our own con-science, and honestly acknowledge the mixed origin, the catholic ideas, and universal principles of the in-stitution which some, in their unfortunate frenzy, would fain identify as a Hindu sect.

THE NEW CATECHISM.

CHAPTER L

THE CHRISTIAN RELIGION.

<section-header><section-header><section-header><section-header><section-header><text><text><text><text><text><text><text><text><text><text><text><text><text><text><text>

THE USE OF BELIGION.

BY COLONEL THOMAS W. HIGGINSON.

<text><text>

nemants Google

<text><text><text>

THE PAINE MEMORIAL.

<section-header><section-header><section-header><text><text><text>

P. Mendum, who gave a brief history of the lite or he investigator. A meeting was held several years ago by the friends if Thomas Paine, and stock subscribed to the amount of $70,000 for a building to his memory. They ap-iled to the Legislature for a charter, but were unable o obtain it, and the society gradually fell off; and in $89, when Mr. Abner Kneeland left Boston, the acci-ty had entirely broken up. In 1844, the Infidel Soci-ty had entirely broken up. In 1844, the Infidel Soci-ty had entirely broken up. In 1844, the Infidel Soci-ty was formed, and held regular weekly meetings, and soon numbered eighty members. This society rospered for several years. They, also, sought a harter and were refused. A few years later, in larch, 1871, a circular was issued to friends of the use, and now they are to have a building of their wn. The hall is to be free to all, subject to no creed relass, and any party can have it upon reasonable arges. It was called "The Paine Memorial Hall" y request of Mr. James Lick, of San Francisco, Call-rnia, who has liberally helped the cause, and by whose last contribution of $20,000 it has been menced.

Mose last contribution of $20,000 it has been com-menced. A song, "Thomas Paine, the Patriot of 1776," writ-ten for the occasion, was sung by the Charlestown Quartette Club in a fine manner; after which Mr. Horace Seaver delivered a short address on Thomas Paine. An ode, "The Anthor-Hero of the Revolu-tion," was sung by the quartette, and addresses made by B. F. Underwood, Mrs. Laurs Cuppy Smith, Mr. Jamieson, G. L. Henderson, of Minnesota, and Dr. Brown, of New York. The address of Mr. Jamieson was very radical, he asserting that he did not believe in God, Jesus Christ, or the Bible. The exercises closed soon after twelve o'clock by a song, "The Freeman's Shout," by the company, with an accompaniment by the band, --Bos-ton Transcript, July 6.

CHINESE SENTENCES.

TROM CONFUCIUS.

THOM CONFUCIUS.
Sincerity is the way of heaven. The attainment of sincerity is the way for men. To this attainment there are requisite the extensive study of what is good, accurate inquiry about it, careful reflection on it, the clear discrimination of it, and the exrnest practice of it. Let a man proceed in this way, and, though dul, he will surely become intelligent; though weak, he will surely become intelligent; though the deal is though the Deity were present. If my mind is not engaged in my worship, it is as though I worshipped not.
—Lear there be daily renovation. What truly is within will be manifested without. By nature, men are nearly allke; by practice, they get to be wide apart.
—Is there one word which may serve as a rule of apart. —Is there one word which may serve as a rule of practice for one's life? Is not reciprocity such a word? What you do not want done to yourself, do not do to othere.

-He who speaks without modesty will find it diffi-cult to make his words good. -If one cannot rectify himself, what has he to do

-If one cannot rectify himself, what has ne to up with rectifying others? -A man should say, I am not concerned that I have no place-I am concerned that I am not known-I seek to make myself worthy to be known. -Virtue is not left to stand alone, -he who prac-tises it will have neighbors. -To see what is right and not to do it, is want of conrage.

ines it will have neighbors.
—To see what is right and not to do it, is want of conrage.
—Fine words and an insinuating appearance are seldom associated with true virtue. Recompense injury with justice, and kindness with kindness.
—Employ the upright and put aside the crooked: so can the crooked be made to be upright.
—Heaven penetrates to the bottom of our hearts like light into a dark chamber. We must conform ourselves to it till we are like two instruments of music tuned to the same pitch. We must join ourselves with it like two tablets which appear but one. We must receive its gifts the very moment its hand is open to bestow. Our irregular passions shut up the door of our souls against 60d.
—With coarse rice to est, with water to drink, and my bended arm for a pillow,—I have still joy in the midst of these things. But riches and honors acquired by unrighteousness are to me as a floating cloud.

cloud. —Is virtue a thing remote? I wish to be virtuous, and lo, virtue is at hand ! —They who know the truth are not equal to those who love it; and they who love it are still below those who find delight in the practice of it.

FROM MENCIUS.

-The great man does not think beforehand of his words that they may be sincere, nor of his actions that they may be resolute; he simply speaks and does what is right. The great man is he who does not lose his child-beart. --Wherever the superior man passes through, transformation follows; wherever he abides, his in-fluence is of a spiritual nature. It flows abroad, above, and beneath, like that of heaven and earth.

THERE WAS an old preacher into whose hymn-book a bad boy pasted the old song:--"Old Grimes is dead, that good old man, We ne'er shall see him more."

We never shall see him more." On opening the book one day, before sermon, his eyes fell on this production. He gave out the first verse and then paused with surprise. He wiped his spectacles, read it again, and said, solemnly: "Breth-ren, I have been singing out of this book for forty years; I have never recognized this as a hymn before; but it's Aere, and I ain't agoing to go back on my book now; so please raise the tune, and we'll put it through, if it kills us." A great many theological dogmas are held and persisted in on precisely the same principle.

PUBCHASE IN THE CHURCH.—The rector of Mer-thyr Tydvil has been preaching on this subject. He described the traffic, and stated that it extended to 6,000, or about one-bail, of the parishes in England. Looked at from a spiritual polat of view it was a frightful, an abominable, and a ridiculous thing. There was really nothing to prevent a joint-stock company of Higb Churchmen, Low Churchmen, Broad Churchmen, or aven Jaws, from buying the advowsons and next presentations of more than half of all the livings in England and Wales, and so in one day take steps to secure to themselves and their own views 6,000 parishes.—London Graphic.

Hoetry.

THE PACES ON THE STREET.

BY STELLA OF LACKAWANNA.

There is hunger in the faces That we meet-That we meet-Helpless hunger in the faces On the street; Not for bread, or wins from Albion, 'Cross the seas, Not for juises, richly flavored-

None of the There is sadness in the faces

Up and down-Wistful adness in the faces Of the town;

Of the town; Is it poverty, or losees, Or regret, Born of unsuccessful struggles

Bravely met

There is sunshine in the faces That we meet-Sunshine in the children's faces

On the street;

Though our lives but gather shadows As the pight, In the faces of the children There is light.

There are cager, questioning faces On the street:

How they probe our thin disguises When we meet! How they startle-how they stir us-

Passing by! Till we turn, and watch, and linger, With a sigh.

There are flushed and radiant faces Sweeping past, With each rose-tint ever deeper Than the last;

Oh the love, and light, and laughter, Breaking through 1 Oh the nearness of Elysium To their view!

There are white and suffering faces That we meet

Pushing through the nameleas tumuit On the street; Shall we follow?--see how hollow!

See how wan!

While our eyes with pity glisten, They are gone

There are faces that invite us,

And begulle Haif our fancy's sad divining With a smile; Fair, bewildering, tender faces

On the street.

That impel a daring homage When we meet.

There are faces-bow they haunt us

As song, When no more we hear the music Ring along; How they float along the dusky Waves of thought--How they trouble us by coming, Ali nanonchil

All unsought!

There are faces all around us

Full of care, . And the grooves that tears have hollowed

Slowly there;

Is it penury-or struggle Or defeat?-

All this hunger in the faces On the street?

CASH BECEIPTS.

FOR THE WEEK ENDING JULY 4.

FOR THE WEEE ENDING JULY 4. John A. Lowe, $150; Scott Stivers, $3; Jacob Beedy, $3; J. B. Anstine, 50 cts.; Chas. A. Gould, $1.00; H. T. Appleby, $4; A. N. Adame, $1; B. A. Ballou, $3; John Gardner, $3; Henry Appleton, $3; J. J. Hoopes, $2,75; Myron Child, $5; T. T. Starr, $3; Abuer Forbes, $1.55; J. C. Fargo, $1; John Wirth, To cts.; Augusta Seeger, $1.50; D. F. Henderson, $1.80; J. T. Clarkow, $1.00; L. F. Ichen, for Cota.; D. W. Parse, $3; E. J. Leonsrd, $2; Sarah Woodworth, $0 cts.; G. H. Fostor, $0 cts.; N. R. Waters, 20 cts.; J. H. Sawyer, 50 cts.; H. Clay Neville, 25 cts.; P. S. Sherman, $1; A. O. Soott, $0 cts.; Jas. Leonard, $4. Mi roscipts of cash will be acknowledged as above, and no other receipt sent unless specially requested. Persons who do not see their remittances acknowledged within three weeks after sending, will please notify us. N. B. -Please remit by post-office money-order, by regis-tored letter, or by draft on Boston or New York. Checks on interior banks are liable to dincount, and the term of subscription will be proportionally shortened in the credit. N. B. -Driess for Tracts or single numbers of The Is-ner, which are not on Acad will, if of annali amount, be other. N. B. -Postage on The INFER is five cents per quarter, dating from receipt of the first number, payable in ad-rations the place of delivery. M. B.-When writing about a formor remittance, always give the dates of such remittance as exactly as possible. M. B.-Please examine the ADDRESS and DATE or your for the site of such remittance and DATE or your for the site of such remittance and DATE or your for the diste of such remittance so craotly as possible.

N. B .- Please examine the ADDRESS and DATE on your INDEX mail-tag, and report at once any error in either.

330

The Inder.

BT TRE INDEX ASSOCIATION, AT NO. 1 TREMONT PLACE, BOSTON.

Toledo Office: No. 35 MONEOE STREET. Julius T. Frey, Agent and Clerk.

THE INDEX accepts every result of science and sound learning, without seeking to harmonize it with the Bible. If recognizes no authority but that of reason and right. It believes in Truth, Freedom, Frogress, Equal Rights, and Brotherly Love.

Brotherjy Love. N. B.-No writer in THE INDEX, editorial or otherwise, is responsible for anything published in its columns except for his or her own individual statements. Editorial contributions will in every case be distinguished by the name or initials of the writer.

BOSTON, JULY 9, 1874.

SUNDAY LECTURES.-The Editors of THE INDEX will lecture occasionally on Sundays, if desired, within a convenient distance of Boston.

N.B.—Any person whose name is now on our mail-list will receive a second copy of THE IN-DEX, mailed to the same address, for a year, on pre-payment of One Dollar. This offer is made to accommodate those of our subscribers who wish to increase our circulation by sending extra copies as samples to their friends.

PARAGRAPHS.

BY W. J. P.

KARL RUDOLF HAGENBACH, one of Germany's first theological scholars, died last month, at the age of seventy-three. He was the author of several books, mostly pertaining to ecclesiastical history; the one best known, perhaps, being the History of Doctrines.

AT THE RECENT graduating exercises of the Divinity School, in Cambridge, there appears to have been nothing specially marked either for ability or for heresy. The class is considered a safe one, theologically. But real theological studies are sometimes just entered upon when theological students begin the practice of the ministry. The end, therefore, is not yet; and prediction is uncertain.

FATHER HYACINTHE holds fast to his reformed Catholic faith. A report having been started that he had gone to Rome to be reconciled with the Pope, he silences it by saying: "With a willing heart I would be reconciled with the Pontiff,—but upon two conditions; first, that the Holy Father should consent to renounce his personal infallibility; and, secondly, that he should consent to bless the cradle of my child."

THE FREE Religious Society which was organized in Providence a few months ago has prospered thus far beyond the expectation of those who were most interested in its formation. It has continued to hold meetings on Sunday afternoon up to the end of June, and means to resume them again in September. Its pleasant little hall is well filled with a company of earnest hearers, who are also, we believe, earnest doers of the word.

ON A preceding page will be found some interesting selections from an article on the "Relation of the Brahmo-Somaj to Hinduism and Christfanity," published in the Theistic Annual for 1878, issued under the anspices of the Somaj. It will be seen that the same parties, and the same arguments, with only the necessary change of names, appear in India as in America. The parallelism is striking, and may throw some light on the question now becoming familiar here, How far can those who have been born and bred in the Christian religion change and develop their religious ideas, and still call themselves Christians?

PROF. L. T. TOWNSEND, of the School of Theology in Boston University, has been giving a series of sermons in New Bedford, on the doctrine of future punishment, which have startled, by the vividness of their presentation of the old horrors of a literal and eternal hell, even some of his Orthodox hearers. It is evident that this dogma is not yet wholly out of date, though few ministers have the temerity to give it to their audiences in such undiluted form as does Prof. Townsend. In these days of mild Orthodoxy there is something to be admired both in the administering and the receiving of this old heroic method of spiritual treatment.

IN A GENERAL miscellaneous procession in one of our cities, on the Fourth of July, a pleasant and happy feature of the demonstration was the children of the public schools conveyed in large excursion wagons profusely decorated with flowers. But the courtesy and liberality of the occasion were marred by one of the wagons bearing the motto, "Keep the Bible in our Public Schools." Many Catholic children were in the wagons, Catholic men were in other parts of the procession, and many Catholic citizens were looking on from the sidewalks; yet some one, probably some sectarian teacher, had the ill manners to hoist this sectarian device, in utter forgetfulness of the principles of liberty which the day and the celebration signified. It would not be strange if the Catholics should now be disposed to take up the challenge thus flaunted in their faces.

Among the performances of the graduating class at the recent Commencement exercises at Cambridge was an oration on Pantheism and in defence of it, which has called forth high praise from competent critics for its ability and reverent earnestness, and which was received by the audience with an enthusiasm rarely witnessed as the genuine result of a "Commencement part." The orator was Mr. E. F. Fenoilosa, of Salem, Mass., a young man of fine metaphysical talent, as this address bore witness; and he spoke evidently from thought and conviction, and not simply to perform a "part" which college rank had chanced to assign to him. It is a good sign of progress in the college and in the community that such an essay, touching upon delicate questions of theology, should be allowed to be spoken on Commencement day. Formerly such a topic was unknown on the occasion, and for a student to advocate pantheism would have been regarded as almost a sufficient cause for withholding from him his degree.

Among those who received a diploma of graduation from the Harvard University Law School, at the recent Commencement in Cambridge, was a young Japanese gentleman, Mr. Ennouye. He came to this country several years ago, when a mere boy, under the care of American missionaries. Being put into an Evangelical school, where special efforts were made to indoctrinate him in the miracles and peculiar Orthodox dogmas of Christianity, his reason was aroused in protest, and he was found to be a difficult subject for conversion. As he said in a recent conversation, he could see no reason why he should abandon an enlightened view of his own religion for a superstitious conception of Christianity, nor why his instructors should convert him more than he them. He has a keen, analytic mind; and, besides carrying on the study of law at Cambridge, has found time for mastering the works of Herbert Spencer, Tylor, Lubbock, and other modern writers, on the subject of the development of religious ideas. He now returns to Japan a believer in Free Religion.

BY THE DEATH of Charles Lowe one of the rare souls has passed away. Although mention of this event was made in THE INDEX of last week, yet too many testimonies cannot be given to such a man's worth : not that such character needs the testimonies, but that friends need for their own satisfaction to utter them. Mr. Lowe began his professional work twenty-two years ago this month, as associate pastor. of the First Congregational Society at New Bedford. He remained with the society only a year, his health thus early failing; but in that short time he won the love of hearts that through all the succeeding years of separation he retained. And his work during that year, especially in the Sunday-school, and in private homes, left an impress which has not vanished. Clear in thought, pure in heart, energetic and self-sacrificing in action, so he has nobly performed and no-bly finished his life's service. So fair was he to all opinions, so just to others' motives, so true to the right, so filled with the spirit of good-will, that I think he never made an enemy, and attracted constant friends wherever his lot called him to live. Compelled to fight an insidious disease from the very beginning of his public work, he yet by sheer strength of will and spirit, seemed to keep the forces of dissolution at bay, so that he did apparently a well man's tasks. And, though he has now died at forty-five, he was one of those of whom we may repeat the words, "Honorable age is not that which standeth in length of time, nor that is measured by number of years. But wisdom is the gray hair unto men, and an unspotted life is old age." Blessed be the memory of the man when dead, who by his life blessed so many souls!

The world seems never to have been troubled in determining the real significance and proper application of certain words,-like heathen, pagan, Jew, infidel, sceptic, etc. They have been flung out as carelessly as army mules used to fling out their hind feet; and, like the latter, they have always left a dirty spot where they struck. But how much trouble some people are having just now to determine whether this or that man shall be called "Unitarian," and "Christian." Are these words, indeed, such precious things that we should court them in long. columns of newspapers, from one year's end to another, chase them through all Anniversary Week, and get ourselves so very uncomfortable with sweat and dust at nearly every convention of "Unitarian and other Christian Churches"? The alabaster-box that held the precious ointment was no doubt a quite costly box; but when the ointment was spilt we have no evidence that the disciples crowded around, jostled and disputed with one another as to who should have the box. When you get away from Boston, a good deal of the precious ointment is spilt out of the "Unitarian" name; and, among a large portion of our Western people, the name "Christian" has a decidedly bad odor. Don't imagine, dear Bostonians, that we are so very anxious to possess ourselves of your old oily "Christian" or "Unitarian" olntment-boxes!

In the farce of Box and Cox, these gentlemen gotinto a hot dispute as to which of them should have the hand of Penelope Ann, when a fortune was believed to go with it; and then they disputed as angrily as to which should not have her hand, when it was rumored that she had lost her fortune. Bostonpeople are in the first scene of this farce. "Christian" Penelope Ann is apparently the admired of all the Unitarian Boxes and Coxes in Massachusetts. They court her, lavish their best gifts upon her, are willing to endow her with all their own worldly goods, and also all the goodly virtues of all other religious peoples; swear that she is altogether the loveliest, divinest creature that ever was or ever can be; that without her they and the world are ruined-simply because they suppose that Miss "Christian" P. A. is the possessor of a handsome fortune in her own right and title. But in many parts of the West, I am happy to say, the farce has progressed to the second scene. Box and Cox have just discovered that the reputed heiress is heiress only of a name; that some of her forefathers were very respectable gentlemen, and some were bigots and fanatics, llars, thieves, and murderers of innocent women and children. Her royal birth and great fortune are fictions. She is nothing more than plain Penelope Ann, obliged to associate on terms of equality with infidel and Jew, extra-Christian and anti-Christian, and altogether treated like one born among us. She has her admirers, it is true; but it is equally true that there are plenty of people one meets every day who would feel grossly insulted if it were reported they were in lova with "Christian" Penclope Ann.

I hope that before the next great Council all Council of Unitarians at Saratogs, when they expect to ring in the whole known world (except Hepworth), they will have reached the second scene in this Box and Cox controversy; and in the course of the century we may hope to see an end to the farce.

When Mr. Trowbridge was ordered by Mr. Mc-Cormick to get up and go right straight out of the office of the Interior, in Chicago, Prof. Swing was so affected by the cruel scene, that, under the title of "Expelled from Paradise," he poured forth his soul in the sublime strains of Milton:--

"Oh, unexpected stroke, worse than death! Must I thus leave thee, Paradise? thus leave Thee, native soll? these happy walks and shades, Fli haunt of gods? where I had hoped to speud, Quiet though sad, the respite of that day."

These words involuntarily came to our mind when we saw the gate called "Christian," that leads into the Unitarian Paradise, slammed by Dr. Cordner, Dr. Hedge, and others, in the face of Mr. Potter, at the last Anniversary meetings.

Oh, if we were only Christians-no, if we were heathens and could call ourselves "Christians,"-then we could enter in through the narrow way to the select company of "Unitarian Christians," we could have our names printed every year in the Year Book, and eat of the cold tongue and ice-cream at their great Annual Festival in Music Hall, and hear the regular proud mention of the names of the great men who once were Unitarians-now dead,-and how Unitarianism is leavening all science and literature, and feel rejoiced that we were born among the great, if not born great, and get "enthused" to go out

NAMES.

West and plant apple-trees ahead of civilization. But, as it is, we are banished from this beautiful Paradise, and have no place to live in except the outside world-chilly! plenty of light, but no heat! What's in a name? Why, all these aforeasid things in the Unitarian Paradise! What's banishment, but being sent away from all these forever?

创

34

35

G

70

2

a ik:

4è

34

2

1

(2)

15

24

11

iie.

But, seriously, it is amusing to watch from a distance, and the stand-point of an outsider, this running fire kept up in the Unitarian ranks over the proper application of the names "Unitarian" and "Christian." Men seem to clutch them with a death-grip, as though the very universe would go to pieces if they should loose their hold on these. Now these names, no doubt, are very respectable and useful in many places of the East and West. In some places they would be the best rallying words one could employ. But I am satisfied that there is no name so popular, no name that will attract so many people and diverse opinions, as the name "Independent." Attempt to establish a society as a Universalist, and you will fail; try it as a Unitarian, and you will fail; but take the name "Independent," and your chances to succeed are doubled or trebled. The fact is, the names Universalist and Unitarian only stand for a partial, limited freedom in the West. They have a decidedly sectarian flavor about them. They are no broader than the name Christian. They do not take in the Jew, nor German rationalists, nor Spiritualists, of whom there are a great many of the unsectarian kind in the West ready to be organized. They are not Christians, and will not be called Christian; but they can be organized under the name "Independent." I know of one society in Wisconsin, only two months old, with over seventy families already, and more than one hundred members in the Sunday-school, that is organized under the name "Independent." In this society there are a few Universalists, some six families of Jews by birth, as many families of German freethinkers (some of whom belonged to the Frei Gemeinde in the fatherland), several first-rate atheists, a good many firstclass infidels, a large squad of Spiritualists, besides a good number of nondescripts, in the rank and file. Now these people are united to "promote truth and true religion;" not as Christians, Jews, Unitarians, Universalists, radicals, theists, or atheists, but as Independents. I am satisfied that no name less broad could have drawn so many together. The Universalists attempted and failed. The Unitarians and Spiritualists would likewise have failed. There seems to be no name that is so free from sectarian narrowness, covering so many, uniting all, and cutting off none, as the name chosen. If it is by the Unitarian name that they can conquer in Boston, let them keep it; but they will find it is not big enough, broad enough, free enough, to rally many in the West; and, besides, it is getting smaller every year. W. H. S.

THE MEANING OF IT.

There seems to have been a pretty general impres sion, among those who were present at the dedication of the great Memorial Hall, at Cambridge, that the exercises were inadequate to the demands of the occasion. There was sufficient variety in the programme to keep up the interest of the anditors, at least of those who were near enough to the platform to be really auditors, and the commendable brevity of the parts prevented their becoming tedious, perhaps, even to those who could not hear. But in neither the oration, nor prayer, nor in Dr. Holmes' hymn, was any great sentiment so grandly said as to stir the heart of the assembly there, or to be remembered afterwards. We may say that all was good, but nothing was great. The prayer of Dr. Bellows was too ornate and artificial to suit the feeling of the hour. We can but think that he would have expressed this feeling better if he had trusted himself to the inspiration of the occasion instead of reading, as he did, a prayer which he had previously written. Dr. Holmes' verses were unexceptionable-except that they did not reach the height of the demand. They were well constructed, but probably he would not himself claim for them the divine affiatus. They were beautiful, rather than grand ; and their inadequacy was especially felt when they were sung to the tune of Old Hundred. Mr. Adams, upon whom the chief burden of the services rested, was wise perhaps in not attempting more than he did. As it was impossible that his voice should reach more than a quarter or third of the people assembled in the Hall, an elaborate oration of the usual dimensions would have become very tiresome, besides prolonging the exercises to an unwarrantable length. Yet it would seem that an orator might have been found in the country who, even in the time which he used (a half-hour). could have said something more befitting the great opportunity. Lincoln's Gettysburg address was but ten minutes long, but it is one of the immortal utterances. Vast as have been Mr. Adams' services to the country, and however much some of us, because of his ability, experience, and character, would like to see him in the highest office of the republic, evidently he was not quite the man to speak the chief word on that occasion. The great diplomatist of the war, perhaps by reason of the very character of his service, and of his temperament which fitted him for that, was not the fittest spokesman for the memory of the soldiers in whose honor Memorial Hall has been built.

Yet we must not be too critical. There is no man living, probably, who would not have felt his littleness, his inadequacy to the height of the demand, standing in that magnificent structure, before that multitude of people, to utter the words of dedication. Nothing but a rare and mighty inspiration could have given the fitting utterance. And such inspiration does not come at the summons of committees, nor at the suggestion of critics. And, though no single utterance struck the high key of the occasion, nor responded fully to what was struggling for expression in the hearts of the vast assembly, still it must be said that the services, by their variety and general interest, and a significance that was felt, though not spoken, had a genuine animation and vitality. The ammoth procession of Alumni and others interested in the college, the mighty multitude of auditors that seemed to fill the Hall when the procession entered it. the impressive grandeur of the Hall itself, the choral music, the gathering of so many who had done military service in the war, the votive tablets to their dead comrades, the presence of hundreds of soldiers' mothers, wives, sisters, to honor the memory of their dead, or still living, heroes, - these were the things that made the occasion memorable, amply covering the short-coming of any individual utterance, and expressing the real dedicatory sentiment of the hour.

But more noteworthy than any failure of individual speakers to reach the full height of the opportunity, and more open to criticism, too, was a general tone of timidity in what was said-a tone amounting almost to spology for the act of building the Hall. Mr. Adams' address, in particular, was in its general tenor a defence of the project of erecting such a Hall in the midst of a University devoted to peaceful pursuits, and intended to be open to young men from all sections of the country. And it was a kind of apologetic defence which seemed to betray that the author did not feel his case to be a very strong one, and to which some at least of his hearers felt he did not bring much ardor of heart. Something of the same timid, defensive tone was apparent throughout the exercises, and was detectable in much that was said at the dinner of the Alumni the next day. In private conversation it was heard still more; and there are not wanting those who openly declare that the University ought never to have allowed the erection of a building to perpetuate the memory of a civil strife, since it has graduates who fell on both sides of the strife, and still makes its appeal for students from both parts of the country engaged in the contest. The truth is, some nine or ten years have elapsed since Dr. Walker, in his Alumni Address, made the impressive suggestion of some memorial structure on the college grounds in honor of the graduates who had died in the Union army; and during these years the Northern people have passed in a great degree out of the sentiment which then made the old First Church at Cambridge ring with the echoes of spplause that greeted that suggestion. We have come now to the era of reconciliation; and, because we have come to this era, we are in danger, in our desire and efforts for reconciliation, of forgetting the real differences that made the conflict inevitable, and that gave the glory to the actions of those whom by monumental stone or hall we would commemorate. It is from this spirit of peace-making that so much is now said of the equal heroism, bravery, self-sacrifice, and sincerity of conviction on the side of the South as on the side of the North. And since, so far at least as the two armies were concerned, there was the same fidelity to conviction, the same soldierly valor, the same genuine manhood on both sides, why, many minds are asking, should we not honor the dead of both armies allke?

And, certainly, we should honor them both alike, if to commemorate valor, and heroism, and sincerity, without reference to the cause in which they were displayed, be the sole object of our memorial structares. If the Cambridge Memorial Hall were designed aimply to perpetuate the remembrance of those graduates of Harvard who died honestly and bravely in our great war, then there is no valid reason why it should not include the memory of those graduates who periahed in their honest devotion to the Sonthern cause. If this be all, then what a Sonthern gradnate of the college said, after the dedicatory exercises at Cambridge the other day, may become a reality-that he expected to live to see the day when tablets in honor of those graduates who had died in the Confederate sorvice would be placed in the Hall side by side with the honored dead of the Northern army; and if heroism be all that we honor in that Hall, this expectation ought to be realized.

But every body who has had anything to do with the erection and dedication of the Hall would probably shrink back from such an action as that. And this hesitation to accept the logical consequence of this theory of the Hall shows that it is not the real theory on which it has been built. It is, indeed, to empty the magnificent structure of all its real and best significance, to claim that it represents only our reverence for manly heroism and valor. Let the surviving Union soldiers on Decoration Day drop flowers, if they will, on the graves of such of their old Confederate enemies as chance to have been buried in Northern cometeries. This is but a passing act of generosity and of soldierly regard for a brave and fallen foe, the meaning of which is not likely to be misunderstood. But even this custom were to be deprecated, should it cause us to forget and confound the vital distinctions in aim that separated the heroic combatants. We may be magnanimous and forgiving. But let us not stultify our own past record and empty the war of its moral significance by any action that seems to imply that we deem the actors of the South as worthy of honor as those of the North. There was a difference of cause which is never to be forgotten, however equal may have been the devotion and the herolam on the two sides; and to overlook this difference is to confound and overturn the grandest lesson of modern history.

It is true the talk at Cambridge did not go to this extent; but much of it tended in this direction. The phrase of Mr. Adams, that the Hall honors only "the purity of the motive that inspired these noble young men in a holy cause," is a general statement that, in his own mind, covered probably the very distinction to which we have referred. But unfortunately it is a statement so general that, without some specification of what made the motive "pure" and the cause "holy," it will be claimed to characterize the Southern soldier as well as the Northern. And the specifications which were made in other parts of the address were not such as would necessarily make a cause "holy." In one brief sentence Mr. Adams alludes, indeed, to the institution of slavery as the "remote origin" of the war, but dismisses it with the remark that it was a practice "which no one in the present day will be found likely to defend, and for the inception of which in America neither side was responsible." The things that he does specify and dwell upon as rendering the devotion of the young men to whose memory the Hall has been built worthy of honor, are that they risked all "for the single object of aiding to uphold the fundamental laws of the land;" that they "devoted all their powers to the one patriotic end of helping to hold up the honored institutions of the land ;" in a word, it is in patriotism, or in the sentiment that impels to the defence of one's country and its established institutions, that Mr. Adams finds the pure motive and the holy cause that are to be commemorated. But a doctrine like this might exclude from honor those earlier sons of Harvard who bore a noble part in the Revolution. against what was then politically their country, Great Britain. Or, if to uphold the governmental institutions of the land be the only honorable thing, then, if the slave-holding party of the South, as well nigh happened, had got control of the government at Washington just before the actual outbreak of hostilities, our Northern citizen-soldiers could have had no honor in resisting their schemes. It is evident that patriotism, wherever it is worth honoring by a perpetual memorial, must mean something more than the defence of one's country and its laws and insti-tutions, whatever these may chance to be. And here in our country patriotism must mean liberty, justice, equal rights for all, or else it presents no motive worthy of respect.

And any survey of our war of the Rebellion which overlooks the fact that it was a contest on one side in the interest of slavery, and on the other in the interest of liberty, omits the one fact that is the strong defence and the most lasting honor of the Northern side. Even though it be admitted that few of our soldiers had at first any appreciation of this issue, they nevertheless did understand that the blow which had been struck against the country was in behalf of alavery, and they felt instinctively that this object of the blow enhanced its criminality; and as the war went on, they came to see clearly that this was the issue, and they accepted it; thenceforward their flag meant, not only secretly but openly, a full application of the principle of liberty to all inhabitants of the land, and the consequent emancipation of the slave was the crowning glory as it will be the historic vin-dication of the war. We should have little to be proud of, little for which to build memorial halls, if the valor of our soldiers, the blood of our Harvard brothers, had only served to restore the Union as it was, with slavery still in existence, and all its constitutional guarantees still binding. But it is because those votive tablets commemorate a self-devotion not only to country, not only to a conviction of duty, but devotion to a country and duty which meant also justice, freedom, equality of rights, and of opportunity to even the lowest in the land, that the grand Me morial Hall at Cambridge will stand as a perpetual fountain of noble inspiration to the young men who shall be there educated.

Edout/See

algor

And we are glad to note, in closing, that at the Commencement dinner, on the day following the dedication, both President Ellot and General Bartlett in their speeches plainly alluded to these higher objects which distinguished the cause of the North from the cause of the South. The latter well summed up the difference, and indicated the true ground of reconciliation, in saying that the time would come when Southern young men would not stay away from the college because of this Memorial Hall with its tablets in special honor of graduates who were loyal to the Union; but would come there to say, These men fought for our flag, and died for our country, and we can honor them because they saved our country-not that they fought more brave ly, or died more heroically than their hostile brothers in the South, but that they had a juster aim and a holier cause. W. J. P.

· LETTER FROM KESHUB CHUNDER SEN.

The following letter addressed to the Secretary of the Free Religious Association, and read at the late Annual Meeting of the Association, is presented to the readers of THE INDEX in advance of the Annual Report -W. J. P.

<text><text><text><text>

some new tokens of his love. Sweet is it to glorify the God of Love. Let us, then, brother, join hands and hearts to sing the glory of our common Father, and further the cause of truth in the world. Believe me, yours affectionately, KESHUB CHUNDER SEN.

LONDON LETTER.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE INDEX : Sir,-The tone of your article on "The Ordeal of Unitarianism," in THE INDEX of June 4, so delights me that I cannot forbear to add a few thoughts of my own upon the present position of the Unitarian body, as exemplified here in England. With yourself, I go heart and soul in feelings of respect towards a church which has for so many years literally "stood in the breach" in the conflict with the worst superstitions of Orthodox Christianity. Like you, I hold in dear friendship many Unitarian ministers and laymen, and I should accuse myself of the deepest ingratitude were I ever to forget the kind welcome which they extended to me on every side, when driven from my benefice and church at Healaugh.

All this, however, cannot shut our eyes to what we believe to be a fundamental error in the course which the conservative Unitarians are endeavoring to take. I say "endeavoring," because the issue is by no means settled as yet. It is true that, in America, they have been victorious in the matter of excluding Mr. Potter's name from their list of ministers, for his refusal to be labelled a "Christian." It is true that, here in England, the London District Association had succeeded in voting out the Rev. Peter Dean from Clerkenwell Chapel, on account of his theistic tendencies, and his implied allenation from Christianity. But the voting-out in this case has been compromised, or cancelled; and Mr. Dean will still remain to carry on a most successful ministry in that locality. Moreover, the London District Association were so divided in opinion that they prudently based the vote of dismissal upon financial grounds, in order to avoid committing themselves to a direct charge of heresy against Mr. Dean. The subject was well dis-cussed in the Inquirer, and the Board began to think twice about their decision, which has now been rescinded. This is but one incident, out of many, to show that the Unitarian Church is yet in a state of solution on this great question, and that many-perhaps nearly a majority-are unwilling to cast the die which shall seal their fate. Mr. Alfred Preston, one of a long line of honored Unitarians, made a most manly protest in reference to the agitation, and his sentiments were warmly received.

On several occasions I have received private expre sions of sympathy from Unitarian ministers, coupled with the sad confession that they were too fettered to speak as openly themselves. I have not the smallest doubt that, were the opinions to be taken by ballot, the vast majority of Unitarian ministers and laymen would vote for "going forward," for leaving the Christian name optional, and for the utter riddance of all spoken or implied fetters upon perfect freedom.

I see no way for the saving of the Unitarian Church as a separate organization, but in a prompt renunciation of badges which carry more or less distinctive dogmas. The sect is being rapidly disintegrated by departures on either side, to Orthodoxy, or to theism. The illogical position of quasi-Christian is more and more keenly perceived; the hopelessness of establishing the Unitarian sense of Christlanity for the Catholic sense is more and more deeply felt. At present, therefore, thoughtful men amongst them have no choice but to embrace Christianity proper, as Maurice did; or to join the Theistic Assemblies wherever they can be found. If this process of emigration be kept up much longer, the Unitarian Church will follow the fate of English Quakerism, which is rapidly disappearing. Clearly, then, the only chance of self-preservation consists in carrying out the principle of liberty on which the society was at first erected. It is true that the early Unitarians no more dreamed of not being or calling themselves Christians, than of being circumcised ; but, in so far as it was deemed necessary, they claimed liberty to the fullest extent, and won by that alone, inch by inch, their subsequent triumphs. Why, then, do they not waive the obligation to be called Christians, and let their ministers and members do as they like? Why do they wish to append any more adjectives to their title, when those adjectives are ambiguous, and claimed alike, by others with whom Unitarians can have no sympathy? I fear that the name "Christian" has a fascination for them, owing to the longcherished pride with which it has been used in Christendom. No doubt, at its origin, it stood for much more that was noble and beautiful than for what was mean and revolting. But this is no longer the case; and a name with such fearful associations as those which history has fastened to it may now be bonorably repudiated by those who most revere the prophet of Nazareth.

I fear also that there is even among Unitarians a superstitious regard for Jesus, -superstitious only because they have an ideal Jesus present to their minds, and not the real historical one. We are, I think, quite as little justified in describing him as perfect and faultless, as we should be in speaking of him without high regard. Both extremes of detraction and adoration are unjustifiable. Certain it is that Arianism still lingers in the body which started with the New Testament as a divine revelation; and until Arianism be expelled it will be difficult, if not impossible, for the Church to advance beyond its present boundaries.

In all probability I should have become a Unitarian minister, but for the evident fact that their boasted liberty was very much less than was claimed, and for the too manifest Arianism which was, till very lately, the fashion among the Unitarians. Had I gone over to them in their condition three years ago, I should have been soon embrolled in endless controversies, been accused of compromising the sect, and perhaps found myself a subject of a fresh lawsult concerning violated deeds of trust, 120

Mr. Potter's manly stand against the efforts to cripple his liberty is only the "beginning of the end," and I may venture to predict that the Unitarian Church in America, no more than the Unitarian Church in England, can long withstand the powerful moulding influences of modern religious thought. The religion of the future will certainly not be, nor will it be called, Christianity.

I am, sir, very truly yours, CHABLES VOYSEY. CAMDEN HOUSE, Dulwich, June 17, 1874.

Communications.

THEOLOGICAL ANTIPATHIES.

It may be truly said that no controversies are char-acterized by such relentless animosity as those arising from different religious views. We all have known, since we received our first lesson in "sacred history" since we received our first lesson in "sacred history" from the old illustrated family Bible, the kind of sr-guments used in religious disputes in ancient times, and the summary fate inflicted on the vanquished. Those sanguinary conflicts, which some suppose were fought under the approbation of God to vindicate his eternal right to man's homage, have chilled the hap-py and loving heart of many a child, who has been denied its wonted sports in the fragmant air and genial sunshine of pleasant Sundays, and immured in that gloomy youth's prison called "in religions home," to receive the pions instruction which its misguided parents deemed proper for the "hallowed Sabbath parents deemed proper for the "hallowed Sabbath day." Many can remember how hard they tried to believe that the Jews did right in the indiscriminate slaughter of their religious opponents, and how their childish instinct recoiled from the justification of such inhuman deeds.

But the cruel ennity of religious persecutions is not confined to the dark ages of antiquity. The hor-rors of the inquisition are fresh as historic facts, and the burning of "heretics," a few centuries sco, was as fashionable as cremation is likely to become in a generation hence. Even in the recent history of our own country, we find the same malignant perse-cution seeking to exterminate the germ of free thought. A small number of religionists, who are not permitted to worship God according to the in-clinations of conscience, fiee from their native coun-try, and seek a home in the untamed forests of the new world, where no established church or creed can tyrannize over their sacred rights. But soon the irre-pressible tendency to free inquiry produces a dissentpressible tendency to free inquiry produces a dissen-er in their midst, and the same men who have en-countered such perils and privations to secure the boon of religious freedom for themselves refuse to most it to other grant it to others; and the meek, unoffending Roger Williams is driven into an inhospitable wilderness to dwell among savages, because his religious views are not bounded by the narrow horizon of his bigoted felnot bounded by the narrow horizon of his bigoted re-low-countrymen. I often have been surprised at the enmity with which the churches treat those who dissent from their creads. On all other subjects persons will dif-fer more amicably than on the subject of religion. The whole domain of scientific inquiry is traversed by theories radically conflicting; yet their respective advocates do not assail each other with the hostility that relieves teachers manifest toward one who may advocates do not assail each other with the hostility that religious teachers manifest toward one who may not be able to accept their imperious dogmas. One may believe, or deny, that the moon exerts an influ-ence in producing the tidal phenomenon; that phre-nology is a true science; or, indeed, he may take either side of any controversy outside of religion, and receive from his opponents the credit of having hon-est convictions: but if he enter the pale of theological belief, and attempt to point out what he considers neuricing a errors, many cre out. "Hear him not; he belief, and attempt to point out what he considers permicious errors, many cry out, "Hear him not; he hath a devil?"

This spirit of rigid intolerance, which would pro-Digilized by COOQIC

bibit free thinking on religious subjects, must arise from the assumption of an infailible revelation of divine truth, which is the foundation of all Chris-tian churches. While the Church claims to be guiddivine truth, which is the foundation of all Chris-tian churches. While the Church claims to be guid-ed by a perfect and unerring inspiration, the perse-enting of "heretics" will naturally follow. "Divine rights," whether assumed by king or priest, have always become tyrannies; and liberty has not suf-fered more from this false idea on the throne than in the church. The acceptance of a creed formulated far back in the venerable past, and sanctioned by long nasges, is so accommodating to the mental stu-por of persons untrained in the exercise of original thinking, that they gladly receive and adhere to ideas thus obtained, rather than endure the labor and un-rest necessary to free their minds from traditional rubbish, and build a new structure of bellef from their own resources of thought. And from a law as universal as mankind, that a common experience in any condition or pursuit of life produces a fraternal tion to tolerate those who have thought least in obtaining their views will have the least inclina-uion to tolerate those who differ from them. While he traditions of the churches are received as infalli-ble authority, and the generous exercise of free-theoret dended to the meaned is in but the inspirable the traditions of the churches are received as infalli-ble authority, and the generous exercise of free-hought denied to the masses, it is but the invitable logic of such a condition of things that religious in-tolerance must continue. It is that earnest and humble seeking after truth, when we have divested ourselves of the pretensions of all party and denominational distinctions, which diverse us of arrogance, and cultivates in us respect for the opinions of others. And when theology abandons its dogma of infailibility, and investigates religions truth on scientific principles, then, if the millennium of agreement does not follow, intolerance will certainly cease. H. CLAY NEVILLE. OZARE, MO.

PROBUBITION.

12

> 'n ĩ, 18 51 D.

> > * 2

12

á

DEAR INDEX:--DEAR INDEX:--With many others, I have been pained to notice your position taken in the matter of Prohibition. The bill aboliabing the State Constabulary, passed by your venal legislature, was heralded in THE IN-bourt at once; but when vatoed by acting Governor Talbot no mention, so far as I have noticed, has been made of it. The course pursued may please the Germans, but will not be sceeptable, I hope and be-lieve, to Free Religionists generally. I am not able to appress my views as they should be on this subject, but am giad that Professor Newman has come up so fully to the work. Free Religion does not mean free run, any where in my acquaintance. It satisfies me when you publish both sides. Let truth and error grapple. The subject of Prohibition is one which presses more and more upon all thought-fal persons. Fraternally yours, Fraternally yours, PULASKI CARTER. PPOVIDENCE, Pa.

[Our correspondent is certainly right in supposing that THE INDEX is willing to "publish both sides" of any and every subject which is discussed at all in its columns; and so fair-minded a man as Mr. Carter will certainly not condemn THE INDEX for having its own opinion even in opposition to those of some of its readers.-A. W. 8.]

TOTAL ABSTINENCE AND PROHIBITION.

MR. EDITOR :-

MR. EDTTOR:--Some who write on the temperance reform fail to distinguish clearly between the simple propriety and wisdom of abstaining from alcoholic stimulants, and the prohibition of the same by law. Questions, to be intelligibly and profitably discussed, should be clearly and definitely stated. The right of individuals to abstain from the use of immune the same area of the same to the same the same to the same to an an area of the same to the same to the same to an area of the same to the same to the same to an area of the same to the same to the same to an area of the same to the same to the same to an area of the same to the same to the same to an area of the same to the same

The right of individuals to abstain from the use of stimulants no same person will question. The desira-bleness of such abstinence generally few, if any, will deny. Even they who are accustomed to the moder-site use of liquors and wines, and who think that in some cases they may be used beneficially, must admit, in view of the prevalence of drunkenness, and of the fact that many cannot use stimulants at all without using them to excess, that great good would result from the universal adoption of the principle of total abstinence.

from the universal adoption of the principle of total abstinence. But whether it is right and proper for the State to prohibit by law the sale of alcoholic stimulants, is in other and entirely different question. Many of the warmest advocates of temperance think it is not. Admitting and deploring the svills of drunkenness, and recognizing the importance of going to the foun-dation and trying, by all moral means, to diminish how earlies a state of the svills of drunkenness, and recognizing the importance of going to the foun-dation and trying, by all moral means, to diminish how could be allowed to be allowed to the foun-not only alcoholic drinks, but all stimulants and nar-otics, such as tes, coffee, tobacco, and opium,-which lead to intemperance, they yet claim that any awa which prohibits the sale of liquors, or any of the imidants and narcotics named, and virtually forbids in oderation, involves a principle that is fatal to per-onal liberty, and dangerous to free institutions. On pel a minority to forego any pleasure, abstain from any habit, or conform to any nasge, which the for-hose who think thus I conferes myself one. I would no sconer vote for a law absolutely prohibiting the all of tea, coffee, and tobacco. Yet I should not ike to be considered an enemy of temperance, or an openant of total abstinence.

seems to me, do not sufficiently consider the principle which is involved in them, and which, if fully carried out by an intolerant majority, would restore the days of Puritanism.

"FREE SPIRITUALISTS,"

platto

The following will serve to show where we stand :

PREAMBLE AND RESOLUTIONS.

At a regular meeting of Primary Council No. 1, of Boston, Mass., of the Universal Association of Spir-itusiists, the following resolutions were discussed, and unanimously adopted:--Deeply regretting that the time should ever arrive that, in order to give any important question its fair and proper consideration, it would become necessary to step outside of any organization of Spiritualists; and and to step outside of any organization of Spiritualists; and Whereas, The discussion of the social question is either wholly or partially forbidden in many such organizations, thus rendering it necessary for the friends of such discussion, in order to give that ques-tion the prominence it deserves, to organize outside of societies of which we are members; and Whereas, Most of such societies are defining their positions on this subject,-we, the First Primary Council of the Universal Association of Spiritualista of Boston, in order to place ourselves squarely on the record, define our position. Resolved, That Spiritualism, having already dem-onstrated to us the fact of a continued and progres-sive existence after this life, our true mission is the salvation of humanity from whatever cause. Resolved, That, as Spiritualists, we should be rec-reant to the great trust imposed upon us as recipi-ents from the higher life, aided by the divine prompt-ings in our own souls, did we not make common-cause with the down-trodden, whether by political, religions, or social oppression. Besolved, That true Spiritualists are preëminently the people to grapple with these questions, and their platform the very place on which they should be dis-cussed. Resolved, That, in the case of any organization of

Resolved. That, in the case of any organization of Spiritualists "so pure," "so respectable," or "so rational," that they can be injured by the discussion of the social or any other live question of the day, their speedy dissolution will be a blessing to the op-pressed. Their fitting epitaph—"Died of the dry we "

Voted, That the above resolutions be forwarded to the Spiritual and liberal journals, with request to publish. JOHN HABDY, Cor. Sec<sup>4</sup>y.

I have the pleasure to announce that the Rev. Dr. C. A. Bartol will lecture for us at the above Hall, Sunday afternoon, July 12. Subject, "The Claims of Spiritualism." Yours for freedom, JOHN HARDT.

BOSTON, July 4, 1874.

The storms from the Atlantic break with great fury on the coast of Cornwall. There was a sollary inn upon a cold, exposed spot, in a hamlet, on a cliff near the sea, whither one dark night during a tre-mendous storm of wind, thunder, and lightining, which rocked the houses to their foundations, the terrified inhabitants resorted. The walls were thick, and the landlady was a kind of village oracle. The tempest increasing, terror was upon every face. At length somebody proposed that prayers should be read, and a lad of all work in the service of the land-lady—the only one of the party who could read tol-erably—fetched a book and began, the rest falling on their knees. He proceeded for a little time uninter-ruptedly, until he came to the words, "And his man Friday," when the mistress called out, "Why, Jan, these art reading Robinson Cruscel" Being piqued at the remark, the boy replied, "An' if I be, missis, I s'pose Robinson Crusce will keep away the thunder as well as 'tother book?" There were but two vol-umes in the house, and Jan, in his hurry, had brought DeFoels novel instead of the prayer-book.

The Working Church (Brother Tyng, Junior) has a long editorial on the irrepressible Cheney-Whitehouse-Tucker-Littlejohn controversy, and comes to the con-clusion that it is time to amend the Prayer Book, and insert a versicle in the Litany: "From bigotry and all meanness, good Lord, deliver us."

THE WORS OF PROSPERITY.

DEAR MADAM:-Date of the second of consolation for such as I? En-couragement I do not hope for. I have lived long enough to see nearly all my hopes and aspiration come the disadvantages of an imperfect education by study at home; but, alsa's such schemes have always failed, and now, at thirty-two, I am hopeless of accomplish-ing anything, and am often distressed at the utter uselessness of my life, and far from being recordied to my own mediocrity--if, indeed, I reach even that ond palpitation often make my few and light duties inksome to me. I was born in an affluent home. We have many luxuries, a fine plano, horses, carriages, etc.; but that home is in a remote country place, where there is absolutely no society. Church-going, of necessity, is the exception, not the rule. If the shocked to find my youth gone, and nothing before me but the same useless, unsalistatory life. I have some qualities necessary to that vocation; but with all my efforts I am well aware I bould not pass eram-nation. I am sure, dear madam, you will decide that his is an agravated case of shiftlessness; but how can I get the energy and ambition, perhaps I hould also say ability, which I so much need for succes. Jutta. DEAR MADAN:

<text>

THERE IS A VULGAR expression, more common formerly than now, "By Jingo!" or "By the living Jingo!" The first verse of the translation of Genesis into Basque shows us that Jainko is the Basque name for the Deity. Miss Carolins, Wilhelmina Amelia Skeggs, in the Vicar of Wakefield, was probably un-aware of this when she used the term.

33

TH

of the l fully so will be will be ing pag with its thus to medium medium its patr generor or "blin tisemen to be fr exclude be adm

THE I for any will in their or

AME PLATE OR ALCONALDUME     Definition     Definition <td< th=""><th>34</th><th></th><th>-JULY 9, 1874.</th><th></th></td<>	34		-JULY 9, 1874.
	Advertisements.	GOOD PHOTOGRAPHS	$1 8_7 4.$	PUBLICATIONS,
<text></text>			THE INDEX,	100 M 100
<text></text>	e honestly made to keep the advertis- ges of THE INDEX in entire harmony	O. B. FROTHINGHAM, T. W. HIGGINSON,	A Weekly Journal
<ul> <li>A. T. CHARLEN, D. Y. T. A. MUCH.</li> <li>A. T. C. A. MUCH.</li> <li>A. T. C. T. C. C. T. C. T. C. C. C. T. C. C. MUCH.</li> <li>A. T. C. T. C. C. C. T. C. T. C. C. C. MUCH.</li> <li>A. C. C. T. C. C. MUCH.</li> <li>A. T. C. T. C. C. C. T. C. T. C. C. C. MUCH.</li> <li>A. C. C. T. C. C. C. MUCH.</li> <li>A. C. C. C. MUCH.</li> <li>A. C. C. C. MUCH.</li> <li>A. C. C. MUCH.</li> <li>A. C. C. MUCH.</li> <li>A. MUCH.</li> <li>A. C. MUCH.</li> <li>A. MUCH.</li> <li></li></ul>	is general character and principles, and o furnish to the public an advertising m which shall be not only profitable to rons, but also worthy of their most us support. To this end, all improper	W. H. SPENCER, F. W. NEWMAN,	FREE RELIGION.	ASSOCIATION,
<ul> <li>Hardmann and Theorem Landshow of the second s</li></ul>	na advortisements, al quece advor- nat, and all advertisements believed raudulent or unjust to any one, will be ed from these columns. No cuts will ditted. Invax must not be held responsible	A. W. STEVENS, F. E. ABBOT, Are now for sale at the office of THE INDEX,		Report of the Addresses and other Proceedings of the Original Meet- ing in 1867, at which the Free
<ul> <li>Address, THE INDEX, March 2010, 201</li></ul>	statement made by advertisers, who all cases accept the responsibility for wn statements. ADVERTISING RATES.	and will be mailed postpaid to any address on receipt of price. Single Photographs, 35 cents each; complete Set of Eight Photo- graphs, $1.50.		ined. Containing addresses by 0. B Freih- ingham, Henry Blanchard, Lucretia Nott Robert Dale Owen, John Weiss, Oliver John-
<ul> <li>The standard of the induct of the induced of the indu</li></ul>	E 2	Address, THE INDEX, No. 1 Tremont Place, Boston, Mass.	FRANCIS ELLINGWOOD ABBOT. ASSOCIATE EDITOR:	son, F. E. Abbot, D. A. Wasson, T. W. Hig- ginson, and Ralph Waldo Emerson. (This pamphlet has not been on sale for a
<ul> <li>definition of a regin in a totter to the sality motion of the sality matched of probabilish, or how sality in a first of probabilish, or how sality in a first of the sality matched of t</li></ul>	er cent, will be made; on full-column isements, a discount of 25 per cent. Il advertisements for which cash is advance, a further discount of 25 per	No. 1Truths for the Times, by F. Z. Abbot, contains the "Fifty Affirmations" and "Modern Principles." MR. CHARLES	EDITORIAL CONTRIBUTORS: O. B. FROTHINGHAM, New York City.
<ul> <li>usages to built be setting of the same during the same setting of the sam</li></ul>	CULATE   Circulate     Circu- orHOSE PETITIONS. Don't feel satis- en your petition is a yard long, unless you ked every one to sign it. Get good, initu- ames.	DARWIN, author of "The Origin of Spe- cies," says, in a letter to the editor not orig- maily intended for publication, but subse- quently authorized to be used: "There now read "TRUTHS FOR THE THERS," and I admire them from my inmost heart; and I agree to	W. J. POTTER, New Bedford, Mass. E. P. HALLOWELL, Boston, Mass. Mass. E. D. CHENEY, Jamaica Plain, Mass. F. W. NEWMAN, England.	ing, 1869. 80 cents. Contains sears by Julia Ward Howe on "Freedom and ka- straint in Beligion," and by David A. Was- son on "The Belation of Social Science to Religion," and speeches by O. B. Frothing- ham, Jesse H. Jones, F. E. Abbot, Wm. Des-
<ul> <li>Description of the second secon</li></ul>	neglect to show the pedition to any one, he is a stockholder in some church, or campted property as many such persons is justice of the demand; and those who should be made to take the responsibility ing to aim it. delay! We want the petitions returned	10 cents; 12 copies $1.00. No. 2.—Fear of the Living God, by O. B. Frothingham, exposes the debasing char- acter of the popular notions of God, and presents conceptions of him that are wor-	THE INDEX sime- To increase general intelligence with respect to religion :	ton, E. W. Emerson, Mary Grew, C. A Bas- tal, A. M. Powell, H. B. Blachwell, Rowland Connor, Lucy Stone, Horace Seaver, and others; with an appendix on "Oulling of Judziam" by Eabbi Wiss.
<ul> <li>The Index Association, Rescalation of the Statistical Control on the Statistical Control</li></ul>		tion. Price 5 cents; 12 copies 50 cents.	purpose, both in society and in the indi- vidual:	ing, 1870. 60 cents. Contains easy
<ul> <li>Jr. No. 1 TREMONT PL., BOSTON, V. No. 4 - Christian Programation is a continue of the system of the solution contained and the day when sheet and the solution. The solution is and the day when sheet anday when sheet and the day when sheet and the day when sheet</li></ul>	ne Index Association,	Charles Voysey, of England, is an over- whelming demonstration of the imperfec- tions and errors of the Bible, both in the Old and the New Testaments. New Edition.	for wrong, truth for superstition, freedom for slavery, character for creed, catholicity for bigotry, love for hate, humanitarianism for sectarianism, devotion to universal ends	Free Religions Association," Journal of addresses by D. A. Wasson on "The Natur of Estigion," by Mrs. E. D. Cheney on "Re ligion as a Social Force, especially in reli-
<ul> <li>by Part devoted to Prev and Rationar Dy Religion.</li> <li>by Station of The School, "Artistra B. material devolution, Trice 3 of the School," by Thos. Yields on Old and New H India, "a hos on the boldet, most outbrack, and the school of a city," and Ym. J. Channing on "like Dy School," by Thos. Yields on Old and New H India, "a hos on the boldet, most outbrack, and the school of a city," and Ym. J. Potter on Old and New H India, "a hos on the boldet, most outbrack, and the school of a city," and Ym. J. Potter on Old and New H India, "a hos on the school," by Thos. Yields on Old and New H India, "a hos on the school of a city," and Ym. J. Potter on Old and New H India, "a hos on the school," by Thos. Yields on Old and New H India, "a hos on the school," by Thos. Yields on Old and New H India, The School," by Thos. Yields on Old and New H India, "a hos on the school of a city," and Ym. J. Potter. Distributions of the school of a city, "and Ym. J. Potters, B. Labor, maintain the right of the School," by Thos. Yields on Old and New H India, "a hos on the School," by Thos. Yields on School, "by Thos. Yields on School, "by Thos. Yields on School," by Thos. Yields on School, "by These Albor, maintain the right of the School, "by These Albor, maintain the right of the School, and the dity of the School, and the school of the School, and the school of the School, New Zillon, "Brother, Tork School, Branch, The School, Scho</li></ul>	a organized with a capital stock fixed at UNDRED THOUSAND dollars, for the of publishing Tracts, Books, and	No. 4.—Christian Propagandism, by F. E. Abbot, is an exposure of the weakness, costliness, and inefficiency of the System of Foreign Missions. Full of Figures, Facts, and Interesting Extraols. Price 10 cents;	In brief, to hasten the day when Free Relig- ion shall take the place of dogmatism and ecclesiasticiam throughout the world, and when the welfare of humanity here and now shall be the aim of all private and	F. E. Abbot on "The Future or magno Organization, as affected by the Spirit the Age;" an easa by Bannel Johnson "The Natural Sympathy of Beligions." fo lowed by Rabbi Wise on "The Fernance and Progressive Elements of Judsim," 1 "The Natural Sympathy on "Mohamedaniam"."
<ul> <li>Ideal analitorshion of society.</li> <li>Ideal analitorship and society.</li> <li>Ideal analitorship analitorship analitorship analitor</li></ul>	Religion. e object of THE INDEX to give public e to the boldest, most cultivated, and ured thought of the age on all religious	Eev. Arthur B. Bradford, opposes the pro- posed Theological Amandment to the Unit- ed States Constitution. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00. No. 6	In addition to its general objects, the prac- tical object to which THE INDEX is special- ly devoted is the ORGANIZATION OF THE LIBERALS OF THE COUNTRY, for the pur- pose of securing the more complete and con- sistent secularization of the political and ed-	by Wm. H. Channing on "The Meligiou China," and Wm. J. Potter on "Raligi Old and New in India;" also abstract of discussion on "The Bible in the Publ Schools," by Thos. Vickers, S. R. Calthro Rabbi Wise, and others.
<ul> <li>The section of the stream of th</li></ul>	teal ameliorston of society. ited by FRANCIS E. ABBOT, assisted by W. STEVENS, with the following list of Contributors : BOTHINGHAM, New York City. AS W. HIGGINSON, Newport, B.I. IAM J. POTTER, New Bedford, Mass. IAM H. SPENCEB, Havenill, Mass. IB P. HALLOWELL, Boston, Mass.	New Edition. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00. No. 744Compulsory Education, <sup>75</sup> by F. E. Abbot, maintains the right of every child to be educated, and the duty of the State to ensure it an education. Price 5 cents; 12 copies 50 cents. No. 8The Present Heaven, by O. B. Frothingham, treats of a subject that in- terests everybody. New Edition. Price 5	The Church must give place to the Republic in the affections of the people. The last vestiges of ecclesiastical control must be wiped out of the Constitutions and Statutes of the several States in order to bring them into harmony with the National Constitution. To accomplish this object, the Liberals must make a united domand, and present an un- broken front, and the chief practical aim of THE INDEx will be henceforth to organize a great NATIONAL PARTY OF FREEDOM.	Proceedings of Fifth Annual Mee- ing, 1872. 35 cents. (Four or more, cents each.) Contains essays by J. V. Chadwick on "Liberty and the Church I America," by C. D. B. Mills on "Religion of the Expression of a Permanent Sentimes of the Human Mind," and by O. B. Froi Ingham on "The Religion of Humanity with addresses by Rowiand Connor, Cel Burleigh, Lucretia Mott, A. B. Alcott, C., Bartol, Horace Seaver, Alexander Loc
<ul> <li>Sympathy of Heligions, by Wm.</li> <li>Sympathy of China, by Wm.</li> <li>Sympathy</li></ul>	HARLES VOYSEY, Loudon, England. FRANCIS W. NEWMAN, London, Eng. liberal should subscribe for THE INDEX, set popular exponent of Religious Liber- very Christian minister, and every think-	No. 3.—The Christian Amendment, by F. E. Abbot, shows the dangerous charac- ter of the attempt to interpolate the Evan- gelical Christian Creed in the U. S. Consti-	give it direct aid by helping to increase the circulation of THE INDEX. SPECIAL FEATURES. The publication of a valuable leading pa-	Proceedings of Sixth Annual Me- ing, 1373. 35 cents. (Four or more, cents acch.) Contains essays by Sam Johnson on "Freedom in Beligion," and at be morements which the Church will beet is the future. No 11.—The God of Science, by F. E. Ab- bot, attempts to show the real influence of severy number contains a discourse or ridel, which slone is worth the price of a sebecription. LAX MUELLEE, of Orford, England, in the word should be felt in America.that the Christian conception of Heaven, price the C	ch-momber, should subscribe for it, as wat, most candid, and most scholarly er- of the differences between Free Thought agelical Christianity, and as the best becoming well informed of the argu-	No. 10The Impeachment of Christi- anity, by F. E. Abbot. Fourth Tan Thou- sand. Sent for free distribution to any one who will distribute it, in packages of from	each issue, will continue to be one of the most marked features of THE INDEX. Regular editorial contributions will con- tinue to be furnished by the well-known em- inent writers who have already done so much	John Weiss on "Religion Interface addreases by Wm. C. Gannöt, Robert D. Owen, T. W. Higginson, Samuel Long low, J. S. Thomson, F. E. Abbot, and I cretia Mott.
<ul> <li>Inder Sealers, Other Interesting Corresponder is worth the price of 's subscription.</li> <li>No. 12.—Is Romanism Real Obristians the altor published is THE INDEX are subscription.</li> <li>No. 12.—Is Romanism Real Obristians the altor published is THE INDEX are subscription.</li> <li>No. 12.—Is Romanism Real Obristians the altor published is THE INDEX are subscription.</li> <li>No. 12.—Is Romanism Real Obristians the altor published is THE INDEX are subscription.</li> <li>No. 12.—Is Romanism Real Obristians the altor published is THE INDEX are subscription.</li> <li>No. 12.—Is Romanism Real Obristians the altor published is THE INDEX are subscription.</li> <li>No. 13.—On the Vision of Heaven, by mitriely deviced to Beligion in the widet the word should be felt in America. that the wait of a metric formation of Chairch Properties the Christian conception of Heaven. Price</li> <li>Local Agents for THE INDEX are wanted</li> </ul>	at the movements which the Church will neet in the future.	bot, attempts to show the real influence of modern science upon the idea of God.	sition. Mr. Voyser has kindly consented to furnish every fortnight a LONDON LETTER containing matters of general interest to rad-	ginson. 20 cents.
any 4. 1876, says: "That the want of a not in the Vision of Heaven, by time as circumstances shall render possible." For a contrast of the vision of Church Proper the word should be felt in America. that the Christian conception of Heaven. Price Local Agents for THE INDEX are wanted Parton. 10 cents, singly; packa	rticle, which alone is worth the price of a sabscription. IAX MUELLER, of Oxford, England, in	No. 12Is Homanism Real Ohristian- ityi Two essays by Francis W. Newman and F. E. Abbot. Price 10 cents; 12 copies	ence, communications, extracts from valua- ble books and periodicals, and miscellaneous articles, will also be published; and such	Beason and Revelation, by William by supported by the best minds of your No. 14 - A Study of Religion ; The try. The most liberal terms are offered.	ary 4, 1878, says: "That the want of a intirely devoted to Boligion in the widest the word should be felt in America—that surnal should have been started and so	No. 13On the Vision of Heaven, by Prof. F. W. Newman, of England, analyzes the Christian conception of Heaven. Price 5 cents; 15 copies 50 cents.	time as circumstances shall render possible. AGENTS. Local Agents for THE INDEX are wanted in every city and town throughout the coun-	Potter. 10 cents. Taxation of Church Property, by J Parton. 10 cents, singly; package of u 60 cents; of one hundred, $5.

quite limited. Orders by mail may be addressed either "Free Religious Association, No. 1 Tremont Place, Boston," or to the tion of the word Meligion is incorrect; that the popular conceptions of Beligion itself are inadequate; and that a new conception of it, based on the Law of Evolution, con-sistent with absolute Freedom of Thought; and independent even of belief in God, is the necessary condition of the perpetuity of Beligion among men. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00. Address THE INDEX, 1 TREMONT PLACE,

Boston, Mass.

Name and the Thing, by F. E. Abbot, attempts to show that the popular deriva-tion of the word Beligion is incorrect; that

Address

TEBMS.

The price of THE INDEX is Three Dol-Inrespice of The INDEX is Three Bol-lars ayear, payable in advance; and at the same rate for shorter periods. All remit-tances of money must be at the sender's risk, unless forwarded by cheque, registered letter, or post-office money order. The name, with address in full, must be accompanied with the money in each case. THE INDEX.

No. 1 Tremont Place, Boston.

These publications are for sale at the office of the Free Religious Association, No. 1 Tremont Place, Boston. The Annual Reports for 1888 and 1871 cannot be supplied, and the supply of others previous to that of 1872 is

Secretary, New Bedford, Mass. WM. J. POTTER, Sec. F. R. A. Demoides Google

On ha of 10 pe adverti On al paid in cent. or CIRC fied who have as ential n

61

Don't i because other ex admit th will not of refus Don't i carly.

Per orde Bosto

CUL

Th

OFFIC

has been ONE BI purpose

A Week

It is the atterance bost mat question and polit

It's ad ABRAM Editorial

0. B. P THOM WILLT WILLI RICHA MRS. E Bav. C PROF.

Every ! as the be aliam. E ing char the close delon a 104 and Eva means of monis as have to n

Almost leading a one year'

Prof. M a letter to for Janua Journal e sense of a such a jo powerfully supported by the best minds of your No. 14 - A Study of Religion : The ountry,-is a good sign of the times. There is no such journal in England, France, or Germany; though the number of so-called religious or theological periodicals is, as you know, very large." And later still: "I read the numbers of your IN-DEX with increasing interest."

Sand $1.08 for one year, or 75 cents for three months on trial. Address

THE INDEX,

No. 1 Tremont Place, Boston.

POPULAR BOOKS.

SENT BY MAIL

AT PUBLISHERS' PRICES!

ORDERS PROMPTLY FILLED.

38

NO EXTRA CHARGE FOR POSTAGE.

DCar ANY BOOK in the subjoined List, or any other OBTAINABLE BOOK that may be desired, will be forwarded as promptly as possible on receipt at orders accompanied with the CASH. 「「「「「」」 Orders are respectfully solicited for A LE MAN all friends of THE INDEX. -ALCOTT (LOUISA M), Little Women. Two rols in the state of the state Inst ARABIAN NIGHTS' ENTERTAINMENTS. 1.50 n îm. Scăla 10.1% Line () See () A UKRBACH (BERTHOLD). On the Heights. 1.50 Villa Eden; The Country-House on the Ehine. 1.60 German Tales. 1.60 deta 10 in: 11 in: BACON'S Emays ..... 1.0 BAIN (ALEXANDER). Mental Science: A Compendium of Psychology and History of 1072) (0722) Compendium of Psychology and History of Philosophy. A Compendium of Ethics, 175 The Seases and the Intellect. Third edi-tion, 1 vol. 14 12 -SARTLETT'S Dictionary of Americanisms, 2.50 SABTLETT'S Familiar Quotations .......... 1.00 655 The Bising Faith. 2.00 BASTIAN (H. CHARLTON), The Begin-mings of Life, 2 vols. BIBLE in the Public Schools. Becords, Arguments, and Decision in the case of John D. Millow et al. st. the Board of Education of the city of Cincinnati et al. in the Suprame Court of the City of Cincinnati. 2.00 -126 142 in 18 31 a set is the set of th 12 253 BRACKETT (ANNA C.) The Education of American Giris. BEOOKS' (CHARLES T.) Translations. The Layman's Breviary. The World-Pricet The Thai Student. 1 SUECHNER'S Force and Matter ...... $.25 BUCKLE (HENRY THOMAS). History of Civilization in England and France, Spain and Sectland. New edition of the satire work, with a complete index. 2 vols..... work, while a compares noder. I vola. CARLYLIPS Works. Chesneldino. Compris-ing the following: Miscellaneous Essays, T vols.; Franch Revolution, 3 vols.; Freder-let the Great, 10 vols.; Cromwell's Letters, &c., 5 vols.; Bartor Remartins, 1 vol.; John Sterting, 1 vol.; Life of Schiller, 1 vol.; Pasti sud Present, 1 vol.; Horces and Heror Wor-ship, 1 vol.; Latter Day Pamphiets, 1 vol., Any volume sold separately. Sl vols. Lon-don, 1671-3. Per vol. CARPENTER (DE. W. B.) The Principles of Mental Physiology, with their Applica-tions to the Training and Discipline of the Mind, and the Budy of its Morbid Condi-tions CERVANTES' Dop Quirate CERVANTES' Don Quixote...... 1.50 CHANNING (WM. ELLERY, D.D). The Per-fect Life. in Tweive Discourses. Edited from his manascripts by his nephew, Wm. Haary Channing. CHANNING (WM. ELLERY). Thorsan: The Poet Naturalist, With Momorial Verse, 2.00 CLAREE (JAMES FREEMAN). Ten Great Seligions CLARKE (Dr. E. H.) Sex in Education ..... 1.20

COLTURE DEMANDED BY MODERN LIFE: Iss True Aims and Requirements A series of Addresses. By Tyndall, Hur-ley, Whewell, Paraday Spancer, Drapar, Masson, Lyuli, etc. Edited by Edward L. Tournars. 200

DALL (MES. OAROLINE H). The College, the Markot, and the Court: or, Woman's Relation to Education, Employment, and Otherscher

Historical Pictures Retouched; a Volume of Miscellanics. In two parts. Part I., "Studies, Pictures, and Fancies" The Life of Dr. Mario Zakraswsku, being a Practical Illestration of "Woman's Rights to Labor" 1.50 DICKENS' Child's History of England ...... 130 DUBRING (JULIA.) Philosophers and Fools. A Study. Adam noce. Eomoia. The Mill on the Floss. The Mill on the Floss. Silas Marnor and Scones of Clerical Life. The Same. Library Edition. 2 vols Middlemarch. 2 vols Wit and Wisdom of The Spanish Gypsy. How Liss Loved the King. Start Sartas. 1.20 2.00 2.00 2.00 2.00 2.00 2.00 2.00 1.50 1.50 5.00 2.00 EVANS (E. P., Ph. D). First Histori Transformations of Christianity. Fr the French of Athanase Coquerel the Frence of Anthrophysics of Gotthold Ephraim The Life and Works of Gotthold Ephraim Lessing, Translated from the German of Adolf Embr. 2 vols...... 8.00 FAREAE'S Critical History of Free Thought, in reference to the Unristian Baligion ...... 2.00 FEUERBACH (LUDWIG.) The Essence of Christianity. "George Ellot" translation, 1.00 FISRE'S (JOHN) Myths and Myth-Makers.. 2.00 FROTHINGHAM (O. B.) Beligion of Ha-manity Beliefs of the Unbelievers Child's Book of Religion Life of Theodore Parker. 1.60 FULLER'S (MARGARET) Complete Works, including Memoirs by Emerson, Channing, and others. A new edition. 6 yola ...... GALTON (FRANCIS.) Hereditary Genius. An Inquiry into its Laws and Conse-quences. GBEG'S (W. R.) Enigmas of Life..... Literary and Social Judgmanta..... Creed of Christendom..... 2.00 GBOTE'S LIFE. Complied from Family Dec-uments, Private Memoranda, and Original Letters to and from Various Friends. By Mrs. Grote. Second Edition. With Por-trait BANERTON (PHILIP G.) A Painter s Camp. Book I. in England. Book II. in Scotiana. Book II. In France. Theogha about Art. The Onknown River. The Unknown River. HAMILTON (GAIL). Child World. Part Sec-HAMILTON'S Lectures. 1. Metaphysical Lectures 2. Logical Lectures 3,50 HAWTHORNE'S (NATEANIEL) Works, New Hundraided Lörary Edition. Nice vola. Per vol. Twice-Toid Tales. Mosses from an Old Manee. The Scarlet Letter, and The Bithedale Bomance. 2.00 The Bosriet Letter, and The BRUNDELLE BONARCE, the Beven Gables, and The Snow Image. The Marbie Fann. The English Note-Books. The American Note-Books. The Jrench and Italian Note-Books. Our Old Home, and Septimias Felton. douglot bay douglourney Buburban Sketches Vonetian Life. Italiau Journeys. A Chance Acqualitance 2.00 2.00 2.00 1.20 HUGO'S (V.) New Novel, " 'Ninety-Three". 1.75 HUME'S (DAVID) Essays and Life ...... 1.78 INGELOW'S (JEAN) From. Off the Skel-1.75

.50

.36

195

3.00

1.50

JERBOLD (DOUGLAS). Fireside Saints, Mr. Claude's Breakfast Talk, and other Papers. LM JOHNSON'S (SAMUEL) Oriental Religions, and their Relation to Universal Religion. India

4.00

JOWETT. The Dialoga as of Plato. Transductions by B. Jowett, M.A. Master of fashed into English, with A majer and Intro-ductions by B. Jowett, M.A. Master of fessor of Greek. Four vola-

KERB (OEPHEUS C). Versatilities, Poems, Patriotic, Sentimental and Humprons.....

ECKY (W. E. H.) History of the Rise and Influence of the Spirit of Rationalism in

tus to Charlemagne. 2 vols..... 5.00

Lew ES' Previology of Common Life. 3 vols. 1.00 Blographical History of Philosophy, from its Origin in Greece down to the Present Day. 7 vols. Problems of Life and Mind. The Founds-Lons of a Creed.

LEWES (G. H.) The Story of Goethe's Life. 1.40 LEWIN (REV. RAPHAEL, D'C). What is Ju-daism? or, a Few Words to the Jews...... 1.00

MACDONALD (GEORGE.) The Vicar's

MANN (HORACE), The Life of Horace in Mann. By his Wile, Lectures and Annual Reports on Education, 340 Annual Reports on Education, from 188 to 1848 Thoughts Selected from the Writings of Horace Mann.

MAURICE (REV. F. D.) The Ground and Object of Hope for Mankind MERIVALE'S (CHABLES) Conversion of the Roman Emple-Conversion of the Northern Nations..... 1.50

.75

MILL (JOHN STUAET, Dissertations and MILL (JOHN STUAET, Dissertations and Discussions. 4 vols, each. 225 The Examination of the Philosophy of Siz William Hamilton. 2 vols, each. 225 The Positive Philosophy of Auguste Comits. 150 Political Economy. New and revised soil-tion

2.50

2.50 ASBY (PETROLEUM V). Swingin' Round the Cirkle Ekkees from Kentucky......

1.40

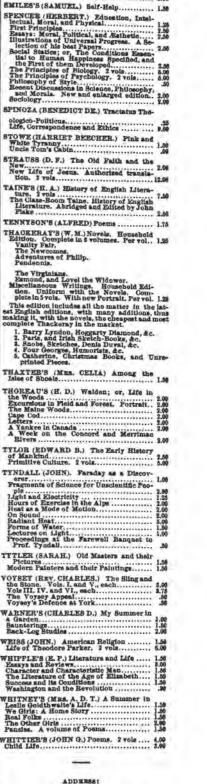

2,00

Ekkees from Kentucky. NEWMAN (FRANCIS W.) A History of the Hebrew Monarchy. Phases of Faith; or, Passages from the History of no Cress. The soul, its Sorrows and its Aspirations. Catholic Union: Easays lowards a Church of the Future, as the Organization of Philasthropy. Thelam, Destrinal and Practical. The Beilgious Weskness of Protostismitism. Against Hero-Making in Beligion.

And the Fillio PHELPS? (ELIZABETH STUART.) The Galos Ajar The Troity Book 1.00 Men, Women, and Ghosis 1.00 Hedged in striner. 1.00 The Bilant Partner. 1.00 What to Weart 1.00

THE INDEX,

I Tremont Place, B

3.64

1.76

8.50

.50

30

.50

PROCTOR (RICHARD A.) Other Worlds than Ours: the Florality of Worlds stud-Researches. Whit of Recent Scientific Researches. Whit of Recent Scientific Science for Leasure Hourses. Lines of Paralilar Memays on Scientific Subjects. Naturel Phenomena. Seven Science of Papers of Paralilar Memays on Scientific Subjects. Resays on Astronomy: A Series of Papers of Parality Phenomena. Besays on Astronomy: A Series of Papers of Parality Phenomena. Besays on Astronomy: A Series of Papers of Parality Phenomena. The Moon, her Motions. Astronom. The Moon, her Motions. Astronom. The Moon, her Motions. Astronom. The Science of Heaven. BossErtri (CHRISTIN A. G.) A Shadow of SORELLEN (H.) Spectrum Analysis, in its Application to Tarrostrial Substances, and the Physical Constitution of the Heavenly Rodies.....

Instructions 4. Physical Geography. By Archibald Gei-kie, I.L.D., F.B.S., flexible cloth.

SMILES'S (SAMUEL) Self-Help ...... 1.50

336		-JULY 9, 1874.
TONDADELL Form Feed Bone.	STUDENTS FITTED for any College.	BOSTON LIBERAL LEAGUE.	A CHEAP OFFER!
NONPAREIL Farm Feed, Bone, Drug, and Hand-grinding MILLS. Ten Bizes. Also Cotton-Seed Hullers. Illustrat-	Please address RMILY J. LEONARD,	Land and the second states and the	A COMPLETE SET of INDEX TRACTS, from No. 1 to 14 inclusive, will be malled to ed pamphiets ires. Address & WILLER.	Meriden, Conn.	Our organization some time since decided to di- rect its efforts for the present towards securing	any such as on the prepayment of 75 CENTS.
181 East Front Street, Cincinnati, Ohio. SAVE FIFTY DOLLARS!	CONSTANT EMPLOYMENT	the	Address THE INDEX, No. 1 Tremont Place, Boston, Mass
		Repeal of the Laws	THE AMERICAN EDITION
THE NEW FLORENCE.	ranted. No capital required. Factoreas, and valuable sample sent free. Address, with six-cent return stamp. C. BOSS, Williamsburg, N. Y.		T OF EDITION
PRICE, 250 below! any other First- VALUE, 550 above   class Sew's Mach.	FREE DISCUSSION	whereby church and other corporate property is unjustly exempted from its share of the burden	MONCURE D. CONWAY'S
SAVED, $50 by buying the Florence.	In baid at HORPITALLEE HALL, 694 Washing- ton Street, Boston, every Sunday, at 10% A.M., 15% and 7% P.M. All that relates to the Bellgions, Pollicial, and Social Interests of manifold consti- pute the subjects for discussion. The INDEX	of taxation.	SACRED ANTHOLOGY,
Every machine warranted.	254 and 754 P.M. All that relates to the Edugious, Political, and Social interests of mankind consti- rute the subjects for discussion. THE INDEX tute the subjects for mile every Sunday at	As a means to this end, we have published for general circulation several thousand copies of a	A BOOK OF ETHNICAL SCRIPTURES.
Special terms to clubs and dealers.	tute the subjects for discussion. The labor and Index Tracts are for sale every Sunday at Hospitalier Hall.		has just been published, and will be sent postpaid on receipt of the price, $4.09.
Bond for circulars to the Florence B. M. Co., Florence, Mass.,	CHARLES SUMNER.	TBACT	Address THE INDEX, or TIS Washington Street, Boston, Mass.	A fine likeness of Massachusetts' great Sen-	on Church Examption, being the article by Mr.	1 TREMONT PLACE
CHARLES SUMNER'S	Black, is for shie at this table on receipt	Abbot which appeared in THE INDEX of Nov. 77. The edition was made as large as our funds	G. L. HENDERSON & CO.,
GREAT WORK.	of the price-dity cents. Address THE INDEX, 1 Tremont Place, Boston.	would allow; but, so great has been the demand,
PROPHETIC VOICES		it is already nearly exhausted. Our next edition ought to be large enough to	BANKERS, LEROY, MINN.
CONCERNING AMERICA.	TO NEWSPAPER	place a copy in the hands of	Money invested on short time, or for a
By CHARLES SUMPERS.	PUBLISHERS.	EVERY VOTER IN THE STATE,	farms, at 12 per cent, interest per annum, payable semi-annually. Perfect tile and ample security guaranteed. All expenses for abstract of tile and recording on the set of
Fine Edition, Tinted Paper, with Steel Por- trait, Crown Svo., Cloth extra, $2.	Having conveniences for doing the best of newspaper printing at reasonable prices, I should like to contract for composition alone,	EVENI VOTER IN THE STATE,	ample security guaranteed. All expenses for abstract of title and recording mortgage neid
Aside from its literary and historical mer- its, this volume has a special interest, from	or for composition, press-work, and maning,	and generously to supply the calls for them in other States.	abstract of tile and recording mortgage paid by borrower. We collect and remit to any part of the United States free of charge, the fact that it was the last work on which Mr. Sumner was engaged before his death.	Best of references given, and satiafactory work guaranteed. GRO. H. ELLIS,	To do this, we need funds; for, although we	Gregor, Iowa; First National Bank, Mo-
"PROPHETIC VOICES" will be found of great	7 Tremont Flace, Boston.	have made arrangements for printing the Tract at very low cost, it is impossible for the Boston.	kee, Wis.; City National Bank, Chicago Di value to all who take an interest in the his- tory of our country, so fall is it of passages	TO BOOK-BUYERS. Please examine the revised list of POPU-	League, with its various other expenses, to bear	Allen, Stèvens & Co., Bankers, New York City; Morris Altman.
in which the unexampled prosperity of our land has been foretold by philosophers, poets,	LAR BOOKS on the opposite side of this	the entire expense alone. Will not, then,	REAL ESTATE SECURITIES, paying 8 to 10 per cenk interest, or etatesmen, and orators, of whom the lament- od author has also given interesting sketches.	THIS LIST WIII De furnished to order.		Investments in Real Estate in China
Seat, post-paid, on receipt of price.	chase English, German, or French Books, or	All Friends of the Movement	and vicinity, if judiciously made, are the best and sifest
Address THE INDEX, No. 1 Tremont Place, Boston.	of any American or Foreign Book, can have their orders promply filled and their inqui- ries answered by addressing THE INDEX,		mouse or employing capital. The old
H A V E W E	THE INDEX, 1 Tremont Place, Boston.	come forward and help us with liberal donations ? We frequently receive communications from	Real Estate and Loan Agency
TWO BRAINS!	DOUND VOLUMES OF THE	parties wishing tracts to distribute, asking how	ERNST PRUSSING, 143 RANDOLPH STREET
Dr. C. E. Brown-Sequard. 18 ALCOHOL A POISON :	BOUND VOLUMES OF THE INDEX. Bound volumes of THE INDEX for 1871,	much they shall pay. To such we reply that the cost to us is about $2.50 per thousand, and we	Chicago (Established 1833),
Dr. Wm. A. Hammond. THE POET LONGFELLOW.	1972 and 1972 will be sent by arnress (at the	shall be pleased to furnish them at this price per	Guarantees perfect title and ample security in all its Real Estate Loans,
James T. Fields. U. A. SUBVEY OF THE WEST.	purchaser's expense) on receipt of $2.50, $2 60, and $3.00 respectively. These volumes are exceedingly valuable singly, irrespective	thousand, or 20 cents per hundred, to all who will circulate them. But all additional donations will	Firstclass securities always on hand. In- terest and principal collected without charge. Beal Estate Investments made on commission
(With Map.) Under Lieut. G. M. Wheeler.	of each other; for the important essays and other articles they contain are of permanent interest, and will furnish as instructive read-	be gratefully received for the purpose of circu-	or on shares; taxes paid, &c. Orders of capitalists and real estate own-
THE HORSE IN AMERICA. (Illust'd.) Discoveries by Prof. O. C. Marsh.	ing twenty years hence as to-day. No more valuable present could be made to a friend	ating them gratuitously throughout the country. To many of the subscribers of THE LEDEX	era respectfully solicited.
(Illust'd.) IBON STEAMERS THAT WILL NOT	struggling out of Orthodoxy than one of these volumes. Address THE INDEX,	and others whose names have been furnished us as probable friends of the movement, copies of	REASONS FOR USING THE
SINK. These interesting Lectures and Letters,	1 Tremont Place, Boston.	the Tract, together with Petitions asking the re-	EUREKA SPOOL SILK.
These interesting to the important papers with a careful report of the important papers read at the April meeting of the National Academy of Belences at Washington, and at the May meeting of the American Oriental	WABBEN'S	peal of the Exemption Laws, have been sant,	CUNERA STUDE SILK.
the May meeting of the American Oriental Society at Boston, are published in full in THE TRIBUNE EXTRA, No. 19. Price, in	TRUE CIVILIZATION.	With the Hope	It is full longth. It is full size. It is smooth and elastic, and is squally sheet form, 10 cents; in pamphlet, 20 cents;	Price 50 cents.		adapted to hand or machine use.
Circulars, giving full details of the con- tents of all THE TRIBUNE EXTRAS, free	PRACTICAL DETAILS,	that such friends will try to secure as many sig-	Many kinds of spool allk are a perfect fraud, being not only shorter in length, but
THE WEEKLY TRIBUNE.	showing the workings of the	matures to the petition as possible in their locality We respectfully ask those who are unable to at-	a much finer size than they are represented
THE FARMER'S FAVORITE PAPER,	COST PRINCIPLE.	tend to the matter themselves to place the peti- tions in the hands of those who will.	to be, and of so poor a quality as to be unit for use. The ladies will klways find the Eu-until January 1, 1875, for $1. Address THE TRIBUNE, New York.	Price 25 cents.	Let us	reks Silk exactly as represented. Every spool is warranted, and the manufacturer's
B U S T O F	For sale by		name indelibly branded on every spool. Call for it.
THEODORE PARKER,	S. H. MORSE, 25 Bromfield St., Reston.	BOLL UP THE LIST!
SIDNEY H. MORSE.	NEW CHURCH MUSIC BOOK,	Let our united volces be heard ! And let it be	RADICAL AND LITERARY
Dignity, reverance, sweetness, vigor, equi-	FOB 1974-1975.	done NOW! We would say, also that we feel deeply the	LECTURES
polse, breathe through the clay; the artist has so filled his own heart with appreciation of that noble life that he has been able cun-	THE LEADER !!	need of	BT
ningly to mould it into those delicate lines which the character had wrought on the liv-	BY H. R. PALMER AND L. O. EMERSON.	Othen Organizations	JOHN WEISS,
ing fibre. We are tempted to exclaim, as we stand beside it, as the old artist did to his perfected work, "Speak then!"-Hannah E. Stevenson.	The most successful Church Music Book- makers of the day. Will be ready in August, and will contain the usual Singing School	Other Organizations
berrected work, "Speak then!"-Hannah E.	and will contain the usual Singing School Course, and slarge amount of new and choice music for Choirs, Conventions, and Singing Classes. Specimen pages now ready, and will	in this State, to cooperate with us in securing	RADICAL LECTURES.
All the characteristics of my husband are in the bust,—his greatness, his goodness, his tenderness, his love. You cannot give life to	Classer. Specimen pages now ready, and will be malled, post-free, on application.	equality and justice, by pressing the "Demands of Liberalism." If, in any locality, there are clay or marble; but you can represent it, and this Mr. Morse has doneLydia D. Parker to	Price $1.36, or $19.00 per Dozen.	those who are inclined to	Intelligence in Religion. Religion and Science.
Hannah E. Slevenson. The eyes, though but of clay, are gleaming	THE EMERSON NEW METHOD	Form a Liberal Lawrence	Heart in Beligion.
The eyes, though but of clay, are gleaning with possible indignation, with possible tears; the lips are set firm with the resolution of him who, like Paul, could "fight a good right" as well as "give a reason." "Samuel Longfet-	FOR REED ORGANS. By L. O. EMERSON and W. S. B. MATTHEWS.	Form a Liberal League,	SHARSPEARIAN LECTURES.
as well as "give a reason."-Samuel Longfel-	$2.50. One of the newest and very best of the New Methods.	we are ready to render such assistance as lies in
The first time I have seen Theodore Parker since he diedWm. Sparrell.	GUIDE IN THE ABT OF SINGING.	our power.	1. Cause of Laughter.
The best representation of Mr. Parker ever executed in clayBoston Daily Globe.	By GEO. L. OSGOOD. $4.00. New and very superior book for Voice	LIDEDALCU	2. Irony and Humor. 3. Dogberry, Malvolio, Bottom, Touchstone.
The face is strong and noble as it should be, The likeness is good -Boston Daily Advertiser.	Training.	LIBERALSI	4. Ajar in Trollus and Cressida: The Por- ter in Macbeth: The Fool in Lear.
Nothing appears for beauty alone, or finish.	BICHTER'S MANUAL OF HARMONY	If all will units and work, the results sought	5. Falstaff.
or to show the vanity of the artist. All is forgotten in the man-the true, real, Yankee man, Theodore ParkerL. S. H. in the Golden Age.		can be accomplished	6. Hamlet. SECOND SERIES.
Copies of this Bust, finely finished a plac-	Prepared expressly for the Leipsic Con- servatory, and is a complete and reliable Grammar of Composition.		1. The Women of Shakspeare. 2. Portia.
ter, $10 each. Boxing for transportation, $1	18 : 영향 영화 (h ~ 16 : 17 : 17 : 17	BOSTON LIBERAL LEAGUE,	5. Ophelia.
extra. Freight or expressage paid by party sending order. Weight of box about fifty			4. Macbeth and Lady Macbeth. 5. " " " " pounds. Orders may be sent to S. H. MORSE.	CHAS. H. DITSON & CO.,	NO. 1 TREMONT PLACE, BOSTON.	6. Contrast in Shakspeare's Characters. Address JOHN WEISS,
, Boom 15, 25 Bromfield St., Boston, Mass.	711 BROADWAY, NEW YORE.	Per order of the EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE,	22 E. Brookline St., Boston.

Google_ ÷

Three Dollars a Year.

LIBERTY AND LIGHT.

BOSTON, MASS., THURSDAY, JULY 16, 1874.

Index.

Single Copies Seven Cents.

WHOLE NO. 238.

VOLUME 5.

1

ORGANIZE!

THE DEMANDS OF LIBERALISM.

THE DESCRAPS OF LIBERALISM. 1. We demand that churches and other ecclesiastical property shall no longers be exempt from just taxation. 3. We demand that the employment of chaplains in Con-grees, in State Legislatures, in the navy and militis, and in grees, saylums, and all other institutions supported by public momey, shall be discontinued. 3. We demand that all public appropriations for educa-tional and charitable institutions of a sectarian character shall comes.

shall cease. 4. We domand that all religious services now sustained by the government shall be abolished; and especially that the use of the Bible in the public schools, whether estensi-bly as tert-book or avowedly as a book of religious wor-ship, shall be prohibited.

b) yas all be prolibited.
all , shall be prolibited.
all , shall be prolibited.
b We demand that the appointment, by the President of the United States of the States o

T. We ding the o

ing the observance of Subtay as the choose of the enforcement of select. S. We demand that all have looking to the enforcement of "Christian" morality shall be abrogated, and that all laws shall be conformed to the requirements of natural morality, equal rights, and impartial liberty. 9. We demand that not only in the Constitutions of the Drated States and of the several States, but also in the Drated States and of the several States, but also in the practical schnistration of the same, no privilege or ad-vantage shall be conceded to Christianity or any other spe-cial religion; that our entire political system shall be found-ed and administered on a purely secular basis; and that whatever changes shall prove necessary to this end shall be consistently, unfinchingly, and promptly made.

A FORM OF LOCAL ORGANIZATION.

Whereas, It is our profound conviction that the safety of republican institutions is imperilud, the advance of civil-sation impeded, and the most sacred rights of man in-fringed, by the least interference of the Biate in matters of religion; and religion; and Whereas, Certain grave inconsistencies with the gen spirit of the United States Constitution still mark the p tical administration of our political system, threatening perpetuity of religious liberty, the existence of free pu schools, and the peace and prosperity of the entire land THEREFORE, We, the undersigned, hereby associate our-country in securing the needed reforms. Arr, 3.—The means employed in working for these objects shall be regular local meetings, free discussions, lectures, addresses, conventions, the platform and the press in gen-sral, and all such other means as are pesceable, orderly, ad right.

ABTICLES OF AGREEMENT.

Asr. 4.-Such measures shall be adopted for raising funds for the League as shall be prescribed in the By-Laws by a two-thirds vote of the mambers.

Alt. 5.-Any person may become a member of the League by subscribing his or her name to these Articles of Agreement. Aur. 8.—The Officers of the League shall be a President, a Vice President, a Secretary, a Treasurer, and an Execu-tive Committee of three members; and their duties shall be those commonly pertaining to these offices. The President and Secretary shall be excitted delegates to the National Convention of Liberal Leagues when called together. Air. 7.—These Articles of Agreement may be amended by a three-fourths vote of the members present at any reg-ments shall have been sent to every member at least two weeks previous to such meeting.

Bo far as I am concerned, the above is the platform of The larger. I believe in it without reserve; I believe that it will yet be accepted universally by the Amarican people, as the only platform consistent with religious liberty. A Liberal League ought to be formed to carry out its princi-ples wherever half a dozen carneast and resolute Liberals can be got together. Being convinced that the movement to secure compliance with these just "Demands" must avarely, even if slowly, spread, I hope to make first linear a means of furthering it; and I ask the assistance and active co-operation of every man and every woman who be-lieves in it. Multiply Liberal Leagues everywhere, and re-port promptly the names of their Presidents and Scoreport promptly the names of their Presidents and Scoretaries. Intolerance and bigotry will tremble in proportion as that list grows. If freedom, justice, and reason are right, let their organized voice be heard like the sound of BADY WELOTE

FRANCIS E. ABBOT, Editor. BORTON, Bopt. 1, 1873.

For List of Liberal Leagues, see next page. RELIGIOUS FREEDOM AMENDMENT:

PROPOSED AS & SUBSTITUTE FOR THE FIRST AMENDMENT TO THE UNITED STATES CON-STITUTION.

ARTICLE 1.

ABTICLE 1. Bectrow 1.—Congress shall make no law respecting an es-triblehment of religion, or favoring any particular form of preligion, or prohibiting the free exercise thereof; or abridge the people peaceably to assemble and to petition the dov-ment for a redress of grievances. The previous 2.—No State shall make may particular form of religion, or prohibiting the free exercise thereof; or right of the people peaceably to assemble and to petition the of religion, or prohibiting the free exercise thereof; or right of the people peaceably to assemble and to petition the people peaceably to assemble and to petition test shall ever be required as a condition of suffrage, or any and no person aball ever in any State be deprived of any of religion, or prohibiting the free exercises thereof; or and no person aball ever in any faile or private duty, or rea-gent in consequence of any public or private duty, or rea-dered incompetent to give evidence in any court of law pol-on the subject of religion. — Brates do the second section of this Article by appropri-tions of the second section of this Article by appropri-tions of the second section of this Article by appropri-tions of the second section of this Article by appropri-tions of the second section of this Article by appropri-tions of the second section of this Article by appropri-and and performance of any public or private duty, or pro-dent approximation of the second section of the second section of the second test and and performance of any public or private duty, or rea-dent approximation of the second section of the second second section of the second test and approximation of the second second section of the second s

NOTES AND COMMENTS.

BT A. W. B.

A CORRESPONDENT writes us that we are all wrong shout the last use of the chromo-premium business; and says that, at a little town in New Hampshire, at the weekly prayer-meeting, a chromo was offered to all who would "come forward."

THE Golden Age has been doubled in size, and Mr. W. T. Clarke is announced as its "sole owner and chief editor," Mr. Tilton retiring from both proprietorship and editorship of the paper. Mr. Clarke, who is a host in himself, will have Mr. Tilton's assistance as an editorial contributor.

BAYARD TAYLOB is in Egypt; and it is said that, some-DATABLY LATION 14 In Egypt; and it is said that, some-how, he has been able to get possession of all the love-letters which passed between Joseph and Mrs. Polphari Well, we hope Mr. Taylor will severely disappoint the prurient public, by refusing to give to the printers this interesting supplement to the Book of Genesia.

DUBING the last twenty-five years, Belgium has almost entirely relinquished the infliction of capital punishment; and now it is officially stated that "the commission of grave crimes is everywhere diminishing in Belgium, and it is a noteworthy circumstance that for nearly sleven years no execution has taken place in the country."

REV. BOWLAND CONNOR will relinquish his charge of the Free Congregational Society in Florence, Mass., on the first of August. He has been its resident minister, we bellove, for two years; and during this time the So-clety has vigorously flourished and prospered. It will now return to the itinerant method of supplying its palpit.

THE HEBREW paper hitherto called The Israelite, published in Cincinnati, Ohio, is hereafter to be called The American Israelite ; and Bey. Dr. Sonneschein, who spoke so acceptably at the late Annual Meeting of the Free Religious Association in this city, is to be as-sociated with Dr. Wise in its editorship. The paper in sociated with Dr. Wise in its editorship. The paper in the future, undoubtedly, will more than maintain its previous reputation for ability.

THE VENERABLE Investigator solemnly declares that "Col. Higginson, if we can understand him, is a Christian"! Well, it would seem to be of little use for a man to try to define his position, or to assume or refuse any denominational name. "Christian" is a title that just now is "lying around loose," and the best man is liable to have it applied to him, as well as taken from him. So we trust Col. Higginson will not be distressed by the hard impeachment of the Investigator.

ONE HUNDRED of the "locked-out" farm laborers, in England, have been going through the agricultural dis-tricts pleading their cause in the principal large towns. This means business to some purpose, in the way of re-form; and is much better than "strikes" and other questionable methods of securing the rights of labor. Let the laborer make his appeal to the intelligent sense of justice in men, as against injustice and tyranny; and though his cause may progress more slowly, it will progreas more surely.

ME. CHARLES BRADLAUGH, since his return to England, has been having debates with various "Christian" gentlemen. In one which he held recently with Eev. Brewin Grant, on the "Relative Merits of Secularism and Christianity," Mr. Bradlaugh felt called upon to say to that gentleman, in reference to a statement which Mr. Grant had made, "That is a lie; a deliberate lie!" The provocation seems to have been considerable; but we submit to Mr. Bradlaugh that the cause of truth can hardly gain much by his debating with men whom he is obliged to reply to in this way.

THE NEW YORK World enters into an elaborate calculation to show how much "vacations" cost our people annually. And, "in round numbers," it says, "ninety miltions of dollars are distributed by tourists and pleasureseekers, during the summer, among the country land-lords and landladies, and the railroads." Well, this vast sum is well spent; for, without vacations-which interrupt haste, divert ambition, cool off passion, tranquillize agitation, pacify strife, and elevate worldliness,—our peo-ple would be more insne and superficial and prossic than at present; and that, indeed, would be too bad.

ONE SAYS: "I am always impressed with the cleanness of the country. Let Nature slone, and she never gets filthy; but as soon as human hands lay hold of her, how vile she becomes!" The truth is, Nature knows no such thing as fifth or vileness. Nothing is unclean in her eyes, because she utilizes everything. The mud at the bottom of the pool, and the illy that blooms on the surface, are both parts of her beauty; because both are parts of her order, and both are in their place. When man becomes as wise as Nature, he too will come to see all things to be good, because he will see everything in its time and place. We need to have a great patience with the slow evolution of things, and learn to discern the necessary place. relations between one degree of evolution and another. "Dirt is matter out of place," it is said. Let us learn how to keep our social house in order, and then we shall discover no dirt anywhere; because everybody and everything will be in right relations.

MRS. WOODBULL'S Weekly is four years old this month. The "two principal corner-stones" upon which the Weskly is founded are declared to be "political equality with man for woman, and sexual emancipation of woman from her virtual ownership by man." In the advocacy of the first of these demands the Weekly vigorously participates with many other journals; and it is safe to say that the growing sentiment of the nation en-As to the second demand, we believe that the dorses it. increasing intelligence, the developing conscience of the community, with its deepening respect for all the rights of woman, will sooner or later insist that this also be met and accorded. Any and every kind of slavery to which woman is subject, and which hinders the development of her fair and gracious womanhood, she should be smancid from. But the precise nature and significance of this demand should be well understood, and its advocacy should be most wisely and judiciously conducted.

COUNT DE CHAMBORD, in his late manifesto to Frenchmen, tells them: "My birth made me your king." How obsolete and passe in his notions the count must be, to utter such a sentiment as this; and how puerile it sounds to American ears! Who can conceive of Gen. Grant demanding of the people a third election to the Presi-dency? He may desire it, and scheme for it, and posannoy r ise may desire it, and southe for is and post sibly he may obtain it by political manourering; but if he were to claim it as his special prerogative he would be hooted out of the back door of the White House. Gov. Chase once said to us, in his private office in Columbus, Ohio, that he thought the nomination to the Presidency Ohio, that he thought the nomination to the Presidency was due to him from the Republican Party for his long service in the cause of liberty. But John C. Fremont was nominated instead; and Gov. Chase lived long enough to learn that the American people consult their own mind as to the man they will put into the Presidency. We hope the French people will teach Count de Chambord some such lesson; for whether the people choose well or choose ill, theirs only is the right of abolce.

Innerency Google

LIST OF LIBERAL LEAGUES.

338

 ST. LOUIS, MO.-M. A. McCord, President; P. A. Lofgreen, L. La Grille, Secretaries.
 BOBTON, MASS.-F. E. Abbot, President; J. P. Titcomb, G. A. Bacon, Secretaries.
 JEFREMON, OBIO.-W. H. Crowell, President; A. Giddings, Secretary. SAN Jose, Cal.-A. J. Spencer, President; J. L. Hatch, Secretary. ToLEDO, IOWA .-- J. Reedy, President; E. S. Beckley, Secre-DELAND, N. J. - John Gage, President; Sue M. Clute, VIII Secretary. JUNOTIONVILLE, NEB.-J. W. Eastman, President; B. L. Easter, Secretary. OKATER, KAN.-S. B. S. Wilson, President; H. A. Griffin, Secretary. Becretary. DETHOIT, MICH.-W. R. Hill, President; A. T. Garretson, Repretary. retary. Deville, MIOH. - A. G. Eastman, President; F. E. Wiles, Scretary. MA, MO. - R. F. Thompson, President; M. Roderick, BREE Osciel 7. .-F. G. Barker, President; C. Rhodes, Secretary. Vis.-President, J. D. Walters; Secretary, E. M. BATH, MR.-H BERLIN, WIS. Bridgman. WABHINGTON, D.C. - George M. Wood, President; J. E. Orawford, Secretary. AUBURN, OHIO. - John Fish, President; G. W. Barnes, Trans-MINAZAPOLIS, MINN .- President, J. B. Bassett; Secretary, Abton Grethen. Naw York, N.Y.-J. B. Brown, President; D. M. Bennett, Secretary. Br. Joseff, Mo.-P. V. Wise, President; T. H. Kennedy, ST. JOSEPH, MO.-P. V. Wise, President; T. H. Kennedy, Beuretary. Eav Clains, Wis.-President, S. J. Dickson; Secretary, W. Kennedy. BALBEC, IND.-President, T. Gray; Secretary, W. Allen. NEW ORLEARS, LA.-President, E. Vorter; Secretary, J. E. Wallace. BAY Crrv, Mich.-President, S. M. Green; Secretary, S. M. Johnson. CLEARVIELD, PA.-S. Widemire, President; H. Hoover, Secretary.

[For THE INDEX.]

Social Amusements

AS RELATED TO PUBLIC AND PRIVATE VIRTUE. A DISCOURSE GIVEN IN THE FIRST CONGREGATIONAL CHUECH,

NEW BEDFOED, MAM.

BY WILLIAM J. POTTER.

<text><section-header><section-header><text><text>

E INDEX-JULY 16, babbling voice that will soon fill the house again with its overflow of joy. Not lambs nor kittens are more filled with the spirit of glee than they. Note, too, how largely their plays are mimic work. How they take the serious services of life, its deepest and lottiest axperiences, its tragedies, even, and drama-tize them, and act them out in their childish way. And thus by their plays are they being educated and trained for the great realities of existence: that which gives them joy to-day is preparing them also for service in after years. The lowest types of savage men that still exist, we shall probably not find any apparent increase in the capacity for amusement, at least in the expres-sion of it, over the bighest species of animals. And how is this, if it is the true that the capacity for enjoy-ment increases as intelligence increases? We may explain it in part, I believe, by the very probable fact that at the first awakening of an intelligence that could properly be called human there would naturally come with it the sense of a necessary con-fiet with the powers of Nature,—an intenser sense of personality, indeed, of a power which, properly used, may cope with Nature; yet for this very reason the sense also of responsibility, the sense of being obliged a threadness, and energy, in order to win success in the struggle for existence. Even in a very primitive state of mankind there must have been some such feeling that was the forerunner of moral responsibili-ty, but which at first we may conceive to have been little more than the sense of power, and of conse-event appression in a intelligent being, against the external powers of Nature, in shaping one's own ca-reer. And when such a consciousness first come, it must necessarily give to life a grave aspect. The ne-cessity of struggle, not the opportunity for enjoy-ment, is the sensation that will be uppermost. We see how this is to-day, even under conditions of civil-ization, in the transition state from youth to the re-sponsibilit see how this is to-day, even under conditions of civil-ization, in the transition state from youth to the re-sponsibilities of manhood and womanhood,—which usually, perhaps we might say always, in rightly de-veloping lives is the most individually solemn and serious, and often the most gloomy, period in the whole course of life's experience. So it need not surprise us if, when that step was made, in whatever way it was made, from the brute species of animals to the organism of human intelligence, there should have been in the newly formed race less manifesta-tion of joyousness than in lower races that had pre-ceded. The faculty for joy was there, though appar-ently awed for a time into silence by the more com-manding voices of responsible power. The capability of delight with which Nature seems to have stocked not ceased, but, like all other powers that had been transmitted to this new-born intelligence, was wait-ing for the new form of derelopment which the exi-gencies of this higher existence should require. For, whatever may be the cause of the gravity and seriouness of main in the primitive aswage state, it is certain that as he has become civilized, as he has progressed in knowledge and culture, his faculty for joy and for expressing joy seems to increase as intel-ligence increases, so it has been in the history of amusement has also developed. Just as in the grades of the lower races of animals the capacity for joy and for expressing joy seems to increase as intel-ligence increases, so it has been in the history of mankind. The culture of the faculty for amuse-ment, and the improvement of means for satisfying the desire for amusement, have kept pretty even pace with the progress of man in mental enlighten-ment and in social civilization generally. It may be said, to be sure, that the degree to which the capacity for amusement exists in different peoples is largely a matter of race and temperament. But race and tem-perament are to a great extent dependent on external conditions, on the outward exigencies of life, and these outward exigencies have been dominant agen-cies in the process of civilization. Therefore do we find even in the savage state more expression of joy-ousness, more playfulness of nature, among a people living in a tropical climate than in a people who have to struggle for existence against the severities of a cold climate. The hard contest for life which Nat-ure compels represses the joy, and makes existence ure compets represses the joy, and makes existence bard and forbidding. The tropical African has a native sunniness of nature which flows out like the fertile sunshine around him, in jets of fun and easy native subsiding. The which flows out like the fertile sunshine around him, in jets of fun and easy good-humor, and which not even years and centuries of slavery in our Southern States have been able wholly to repress. The North American Indian is severe, sullen, treacherous, subject to sudden change of mood, like the climate in which he has lived. His is a wintry, not a joyous, summer nature. Go far-ther north, to Siberia, to the arctic regions, and it is a wonder that the natives ever smile. The cold seems to have frozen out of them the very capacity for amusement, as it has the capacity for civilization and culture. But differences of climate will not ac-count for all differences in the progress and charac-cur of civilization, and must not be pressed too far. Civilization is the complex result of many agencies acting and interacting for ages. So also are the dif-ferences among races and nations. The ancient Greeks and the Romans flourished not very far apart in time, and were nearly in the same latitude, and were of the same old Indo-European stock. They both had their amusements. Yet they were nations of very different temperaments, and their amuse-ments were he naturally gay, and their amuse-ments were he naturally gay, and their amuse-ments were scordingly very different in character. The Greeks were naturally gay, and their amuse-ments were the natural expression of their gayety of temper. The Romans were severe, stern, and their amiaements more ceremonious and artificial. A sim-liar difference exists between the French and English today. I eaw the Chinese at North Adame playing a same of ball. They were boys and young men from gixteen to twenty-one. Yet they did not play with the sweating earnestness and labor of Yankee boys, nor with much apparent system or aim. It was raiker with the fun and frolicsomeness of children. It was recreation, play, not work. Still, in spite of all differences of race, tempera-ment, and surroundings, the sense of humor, the love of amusement, the faculty to provide enjoyment for the mere sake of enjoyment, asserts itself as an in-herent part of human nature, and its demand must be recognized as a legitimate demand, and be sup-plied. And if we ask for the philosophy of such a demand, if we ask why man should seek to do some things for no other satisfaction, and which have in themselves no other use than simply the enjoyment of doing them, I know no better answer than that which I gave at the outset: that through this capaci-ning, not merely resting, but literally re-creation, ex-hilaration, and ultimate increase of power, to the other and higher faculties of our natures. What may seem at first sight to be waste of force and time, is therefore saving. What seems expenditure for mere vanity, is really solid income. Nature, we may be sure, knows her own aim. She beguiles the jour-ney with wit, and story, and laughter, that our mu-teles may not discover the length and tediouness of the way, and may be in better trim for the serious tasks that are expected of them. Amusement stands to the grave business of life precisely as beauty in the outer world stands to mere use and service. Form may be useful that have no comeliness nor grace; pet we feel that a higher art is reached when beauty outer world stands to mere use and service. Forms may be useful that have no comeliness nor grace; yet we feel that a higher art is reached when beauty mingles with use, as in all the more grand and mag-nificent processes and forms of Nature it does, Looking at utility merely, or utility in its roughest, barest outline, we might say that it would be better for man, that is, more convenient, if wood abould grow in square timbers, and boards ready for build-ing his house, or in sticks suitably shaped for his fire. But who, for that object, would lose the gracful beauty of a living tree, or the grand majesty of a for-est? Utility, too, has higher aspects. Who can es-timate all the material and mental needs of man est? Utility, too, has higher aspects. Who can es-timate all the material and mental needs of man which in subtle ways a growing tree supplies to his organism? The very inspiration and expiration of its foliage affects the atmosphere he breathes, affects the fertility and products of the soil out of which his organism is sustained, and his brain is made the in-strument of thought. So of the subtle relation be-tween the capacity for amusement and the capacity for service, between joy and labor, between play and work. A higher utility than any we can see by a mere casual observation binds the two together. The relationship goes down into the profoundest depths of character. It touches the most secret springs of virtue. It penetrates the finest work of man's intellect. Nay, we have not learned the inner-most experiences of religion, unless we have discor-ered that delight and serving, that worship and en-joyment, are one,--unless we are ready to say that we will be 'glad in the Lord.'' and actually feel the gladness of communion with the superabounding life that flows through Nature, and pulsates in the mental and moral conaciousness of humanity. But we are speaking in this discourse not of the will be "glad in the Lord," and actually feel the gladness of communion with the superabounding life that flows through Nature, and pulsates in the mental and moral consciouncess of humanity. But we are speaking in this discourse not of the special form of enjoyment which is sought as an end in itself (though it may indirectly serve some other which is sought as an end in itself (though it may indirectly serve some other on itself (though it may indirectly serve some other who its legitimate that, if we can. And one way in which we can have to end the end of the sought as an end in itself (though it may indirectly serve some other on itself (though it may indirectly serve some other who its legitimate; is by noting the evil results that we come to character, the defects and deformity that have been produced, when the desire for amutement has been unnaturally suppressed in any way, the there were been glouin consequences with all sorts of corruption. But human net we would not be permanently mutilated. The pass of how all loss the permanently mutilated in consequence with all sorts of corruption. And even Calve and lovableness, and would have been provide and true in character, yet would have had sometimes forgitten income of unstanding expiritual zeal had sometimes forgitten infagging apiritual zeal had sometimes forgitten itself in a good hearty enjoyment of some of the very broud of them; we are glad to have had such for the state, men and women of such and women of the stuff of which marry are made, me we very glad and proud that we of Massachusett can be were y type of them is passing away. They are exceeden the full for the set of the set of the even the fourther of a some of the stuff of which marry are and even for the stuff of which marry are and even for the stuff of which marry are and even its for the set of them is passing away. They are exceeden the full the country. But we should not help their resurrection to make our fave their full we have the indirect ye set all cohars of a common work of the numming Google

<page-header>Trees

Standar .

199742 Ja

市政に行

44

112 Lex XI CONTRACTOR

N S S S S S

御法王白山

は出き 回日の何のと

32.0

gloomy pilgrimse through a vale of tears, and not a gloomy pilgrimse through a vale of tears, and not a gloomy pilgrimse through a vale of tears, and not a green and home of God. A standard of the second and sadness of this religions faith, which sought to crush out the joyous side of human intro, still cast their shadow over the popular theoigical belief of New England and of America. There are thousands of people brought up in the popular churches, who look with disfavor on the thear, who reckon dancing a sing who think billiards and card-playing are but enticements of Satan to recreat the inhabitants of his flery abode, —people who will not distinguish abuse of amusement from its use, and who seem unable to comprehend how religion an that lugubrions quality of delight which manistic is taked the brayer-meeting. I remember once reading the biography of a disting labed Calvinistic clergyman—Dr. Payson—noted in the first quarter of this century in New England for his learning and his pulpit eloquence; and seldom were I read a more melancholy record of human experience. In all the good mar's life there was scarcely a spark of genuine joy. He did not believe in joy far there to feel this woe the more keenly. And in by of a king scale to read in the bad greet success) he was so afraid the burden of the world's sinful and lost condition on him; and that he ought rather to feel the burden of the world's sinful and lost condition who is mean Catholic style of the old time, he shut himself in his room for hours, remaining on him; and that he ought rather to feel this were the more keenly. And in actually abstalmed from all food, one day of a himse form all food, one day of the second resource the and scale port as most people whom which is bearing and occurrent, amounting the second resource the source of the world's sinful and lost condition of the the stark, and that he cought rather to feel this were the more keenly. And in actually abstalmed from all food, one day of a his in genember where the sevent of a musemen bracing atmosphere. But this kind of plety is happily passing away. No sect would now countenance it to this extent,— ness, perhaps, the Roman Catholics, and they not so much as once. The Catholics, too, have generally been wiser than Evangelical Protestants in that they have recognized the need of amusements for the mass of the people. The saints could dispense with them, but few were called to be saints. To the outside world amusements could be allowed. But Protes-tants are now coming to the same conclusion, and some even go farther. They begin to admit that even saints, so long at least as they are on earth, have bodies, and that plety is perfectly consistent with a reasonable degree of temporal enjoyment. The Young Men's Christian Associations, in some of the large cities, are providing in their buildings means for amusement as well as for religious exercises. It

INDEX JULX 16, 1Will not much surprise me, if, before long, they oper their doors to dramatic performances. And why denomination, do not discourge anusements a they oper the specific to their Evangelical brether of the specific to their Evangelical brether of the specific to the characteristic to the social good time, and who had equal period to the social good time, and who had equal genits for a for all information. And the same breach, and find no incompation of the rest and the social good time, and who had equal genits for all information. Any one who we period to the theater. In fact, he dramatice piet, and hence. Any one who we period to the theater. In fact, he dramatice piet, and the social good time, and who had equal genits for all information. Any one who we period to the theater. In fact, he dramatice piet, and the social good to hear him process. The period will understand why the same breach, and the social good to the theater. In fact, he dramatice piet, and the social dance. The four words of a genuin drams. The Social for all informs one of the word in grain or words or the theater for anusces. The negroes in the South, it is a finder of the word of a genuin drams. The Social for the distribution of the activation of the meeting. But the prise of dramatic performances, or of a social dance, had for the social of the word in grain who had est and the source is the distribution of the activation of the distribution of the distribution of the distribution of the distribution of the social dance, had for distribution of the distribution of the social dance, had for the social dance, who for distribution of the distribution of the amenent any entertainment what is may is the total the second seven an indirect seven and most emphatically, that I would not as even an indirect senction of the abuses, immoralities, licentiousness, intemperance, that do now, alas, so often go along with this class of social ammaements. And I would say to young men—there by oung wene, but I would say to young men—there by oung wene, but I would say to young men—there by oung wene, but I would say to young men—there by oung wene, but I would say to young men—there by oung wene, but I would say to young men—there by oung wene, but I would say to young men—there by oung wene, but I would say to young men—there by oung wene, but I would say to young men. Better a thousand times let go the amusements than soil young where depravity is encouraged and made to resist the positive temptations of the place, but you should make it a polut of honor not to patronize an entertainment where you would be ashamed to be seen by your mothers and slaters. Nor would I say on word that should be deemed an encouragement for those thearical indecencies which some of our city theatres have presented in these latter years with so much sensationalism, and to which even reputable No. I plead not for amusements as they are, but for amusements as they and might be,—for musements directed and sustained by an enlightened, cultivated, refined, and moral public sentiment, would have them taken out of their vicious surroundings, put in connection with moral associations and influences, and in some way brought under the owned in feel their moral accountability to the community. And this end will not be secured until all resolutely frown upon all immoralities connected with public amusements, and refuse their patronage all the patronage all immoralities connected with public amusements, and refuse their patronage all the patronage and the patronage and the patronage and the patronage and influences.

The second secon

efforts that are made to purify and elevate such en

<text><text><text>

THE INTERNAL REVENUE OFFICER, when a gen-tleman made his income return, said, "You swear that this statement by you made is correct according to your best knowledge and belief?" "No," said the honest man, "I swear it is correct to the fraction of a cent !" We ought to add, perhaps, that the assessor told us that our friend was the only man in Boston that ever took such a forcible oath.—Investigator.

Contractor Google

AN ADDRESS TO THE FRIENDS OF RADICAL REFORM THROUGHOUT THE UNION.

(For THE INDEL.)

AN ADDRESS TO THE FRIENDS OF RADICAL REFORM THEOGHOUT THE UNION. Neither of the old corrupt political parties can be relied upon to fulfil the promises of reform which their leaders invariably make when elections are ap-proaching, but which are as invariably broken when they have elected thair tickets and divided the booty. The means of wheedling phrases and fine promises, the political wire-pullers generally succeed in induc-ing the voters to cast their ballots for them; but when they occupy their seats in the Legislature or in Congress, whence the people cannot recall them for one, two, four, or six years by any effectual legal process, most of them lack the strength of character to resist the monopolists and their millions, who iterest of the selfah moneyed men. The "Liberal Reform Party" did not realize the ex-pectations of their honest adherenta, because they es-chewed the application of thorough radical remedies to the existing evils, expecting salvation from the action of a single man, who was to be intrusted with a powerful office; when they should have known, from history, that governments which depend upon the ability and good-will of a single individual are lable to be sbased to the detriment or even the de-struction of the people. The public mind is more trustworthy than the forklemind of most individuals, and the law of self-preservation will be sure to guide the people to dow may to be entirely avoided. Therefore all govern-mental institutions should be framed so as to be as not entirely avoided. Therefore all govern-mental institutions should be framed so as to be as have not be entirely avoided. Therefore all govern-mental institutions should be framed so as to be as have not be entirely avoided. Therefore all govern-mental institutions should be framed so as to be as have not be entirely avoided. Therefore all govern-mental institutions should be framed so as to be as have not be entirely ton the influence of the changeable mind of individuals

<text><text><text><text><text><text>

sens, The RADICAL DEMOCRACY propose a series of re-forms in regard to the right of suffrage; capital and labor; public lands; monopolies, privileges, and duties; civil and criminal law; justice free of ex-pense; a higher degree of public instruction; relig-lous liberty, and so forth, — which must all receive due consideration in the event of a revision of the constitutions. But among all reformatory measures the following five appear the most important at pres-ent: ent ent:--First, and above all, the constitutional right of the Voters to recall Members of the Legislatures and of Congress, if they do not conform to the demands of their constituents, or in any other way neglect to do their duy. Some members of our party propose the Referendum; that is, the subjection of all laws to the direct ratifying vote of the people. Perhaps the two propositions might be combined. Second, the Abolition of the Aristocratic Senate. The Senate, besides being anti-democratic, is of itself superfluous. The will of the majority of the people can only be expressed by the assemblage of delegates, or representatives, elected and commissioned directly by the people.

can only be expressed by the assemblage of delegates, or representatives, elected and commissioned directly by the people. Third, the Abolition of the Presidency, with its dangerous royal prerogatives. The Executive should consist of a responsible Executive Council, chosen, controlled, and revocable by Congress; an institution similar to that of the Swiss Republic. Fourth, Equal Tazation, and the repeal of all ex-emption-laws without exception. The friends of reform are reminded and warned that notwithstanding they may succeed in electing honest men to various offices, by extraordinary exer-tions, now and then, the great evile of which the peo-ple are justly complaining will ever recur unless the Reform Party enforce the application of the only remedy which will insure a permanent reform; that is, the Radical Revision of the Constitutions. True patriots i make this the watchword of your cam-paigns; and form Radical Democratic Clubs in all parts of the country! The details of the Platform of the RADICAL DE-MOCRACY can be elaborated at the National Conven-tion, to be called in due time. But the patriots who earnestly wish to see our republican institutions puri-fied of defects under which the people are constantly suffering; those whose independence of thought is not trammelied by selfish aims or a morbid desire for immediate results; those who have the courage to oppose the united force and tricks of the political demagogues and charlatans, and to bear the attacks of short-sighted conservatism; and those who would have our country stand forth as a complete justifica-tion of the republican principle, encouraging the en-slaved nations of the globe to throw of the incubas of despotism,—let them all unite without delay, and then march in solid phalanx upon the camers of the public word the march in solid phalanx upon the camers of the public weifare! public welfare !

public welfare! Until the National Convention of the RADICAL DEMOGRACY assemble, all notices of the formation of Clubs and other communications are to be directed to CARL DOEBFLINGER, Secretary National Executive Committee, 56 Onelda Street, Milwankee, Wis. P.S.-Every independent newspaper is requested to copy this address, and discuss the propositions contained therein.

[For THE INDEX.] WALLACE'S "DEFENCE OF MODERN SPIR-ITUALISM."

ITUALISM." When a physiologist like Dr. Carpenter shows, as he does, that many of the phenomena of Mezmerism and Spiritualism may be accounted for subjectively by "unconscious cerebration," or "expectant atten-tion," or the influence of a "dominant idea," the most convinced Spiritualist must needs attend re-spectfully, and learn somewhat. When, on the other hand, a naturalist, who shares with Darwin the honor of discovering the principle of "natural selection," becomes an ardent Spiritualist as the result of long and patient investigation, the most determined scep-tic must needs attend respectfully. In late numbers of the Portnightly Review, Mr. A. R. Wallace has given reasons for the faith now his. He arraigns the men of science and their public for their unscientif-ically hostile attitude. He complains that those who have devoted much time to the investigation are al-most denied a hearing by the public, while it listens, ically hostile attitude. He complains that those who have devoted much time to the investigation are al-meet denied a hearing by the public, while it listens, as to an oracle, to those who have given little time to it, and are almost ignorant of the researches of oth-ers,-men who end their examinations and explana-tions with phenomena on which no thoughtful Spir-itualist relies as tests; who, because they have en-countered people easily deceived, think all Spiritual-ists are life them; who insist on prescribing condi-tions of experimentation to Nature, though aware that in all other branches of research Nature, and not the seeker, determines the essential conditions; and who are so firmly convinced, on à priori grounds, that the more remarkable phenomena said to happen do not really happen, that they believe all the eye-wit-messes, some of them having high scientific reputs-tion, are victims of some mysterions delusion. Dr. Carpenter confesses that he and his compers have "no place in the existing fabric of their thought into which such facts can be fitted," so Wallace sets to work to modify their "fabric of thought" itself by showing how wide and varied is the evidence, and how remarkably the separate lines of inquiry con-verge to one uniform conclusion. An historical sketch shows how Spiritualism has won its way, in a quarter century, against doubt, and srs, under circumstances which seem to preclude all chance of delusion, have obtained results on their pates that "establish as a scientific fact the objective existence of invisible human forms, and definite in-visible actinic images." The real strength of his ar-ticle, of course, lies in this exhibition of testimony, and an impressive catalogue summarizes the wonders, both physical and mental. The Banner of Light has reprinted the whole article in a pamphlet, which can be easily obtained. At the close, the answers the cut bono question with great enthusiasm. In the first place, history is strewn with historical phenomena which science can-not deal with, but which Splritualism explains. Spiritualism rehabilitates Socrates as a same man, his demon being no mental litusion. It allows us to be-lieve that the oracles of antiquity were not all im-postures. It makes credible the miracles of the Oid and New Testaments (even the three men unsiged in the flery furnace, and the water turned to wine, and the multiplication of loaves), and of the medies and the multiplication of loaves, and of the medies and the multiplication of loaves, and of the medies application of the facts in witchcraft, of second sight, of occult disturbances like "Bealings Bells, &c." And it perfectly solves the question of the sight, of occult disturbances like "Bealings Bells, &c." And it perfectly solves the question of the sight, of nearly. The perfect simplicity, faith by mondless charity and goodness, of George Miller, have enlisted in bla cause beings of a like nature and his mediumistic powers have enabled them to money, food, and clothes, all arriving, as we should asy, just in the nick of time." Witness the sudder, uncontrollable imputes" which the far-off donor often cuestion.

minds it has been born with Spiritualiam, we have no doub. A science of human nature, which is founded on observed facts; which appeals only to facts and er-periments; which takes no beliefs on trust; which inculcates investigation and self-reliance as the first duties of intelligent beings; which teaches that bap-ping the self of the utmost the higher faculities of our intellectual and moral nature, and by no other method,—is and must be the natural enemy of all superstition. Spiritualism is an experimental sci-ence, and affords the only sure foundation for a true philosophy, and a pure religion. It abolishes the terms "supernatural" and "miracle" by an extension of the sphere of iaw and the realm of Nature; and, in doing so, it takes up and explains whatever is true in the superstitions and so-called miracles of all ages. It, and it alone, is able to harmonize conflicting mankind in the matter of religion, which has for so mankind in the matter of religion, which has for so mankind in the matter of the teaching which men-tarate the source of muce of faith, and sub-strate the source of muce instead of faith, and sub-strate the source of muce instead of faith, and sub-strate the source of muce of the teaching which men-tary ages been the source of the teaching which men-tary ages been the source of the teaching which men-tary ages been the source of the teaching which men-tary the source of muce of the teaching which men-tary ages been the source of the teaching which men-tary the source of muce both the teaching which men-tary the source of muce do the teaching which men-tary the source of muce of the teaching which men-tary the source of muce of the teaching which men-tary the source of muce do the teaching which men-tary the source of muce do the teaching which men-tary the source of muce do the teaching which men-tary the source of muce do the teaching which men-tary the source of muce do the teaching which men-tary the source of muce do the teaching which men-tary the source of muce

Google

A SCOTCH PARSON had a farming neighbor who was in the habit of shooting on Sundays, but after a while this Sabbath-breaker joined the church. One day the minister to whose church he belonged met a friend of the farmer, and said: "Do you see any dif-ference in Mr. P—— since he joined the church?" "Oh, yes," replied the friend, "a great difference. Before, when he went out to shoot on Sunday, he carried his gun over his shoulder; but now he carries it under his cost."—Transcript.

ASA GRAY ON CHARLES DARWIN,

before

be confident that they have all been duly considered before. "In the single instance in which Brown and Dar-win took the same subject in hand, the explanation of the insect-forms of some orchideous flowers, and other extraordinary structures, as well as of the ar-rangement of blossoms in general, and even the very meaning and need of sexual propagation, were left to be supplied by the latter. The aphoriam 'Nature abhors a vacuum' is a characteristic specimen of the science of the Middle Ages. The aphoriam 'Nature abhore close fertilization,' and the demonstration of the principle, belong to our age, and to Mr. Darwin. To have originated this, and also the principle of natural selection—the truthfulness and importance of which are explicit these principles to the systems of Nature in such a manner as to make, within a dozen years, a deeper impression upon natural history than has been made since Linneus, is ample title for one man's fame. These less known essays upon the va-riowar for the climbing of plants, and the like, may, before long, as we have heard, be reprinted in a vol-um. "Appropos to these papers, which formish arcellent before long, as we have heard, be reprinted in a vor-ume. "Apropos to these papers, which furnish excellent illustrations of it, let us recognize Darwin's great service to natural science, in bringing back to it tele-ology; so that instead of morphology versus teleology, we shall have morphology wedded to teleology. In many, no doubt, evolutionary teleology comes in such a questionable shape, as to seem shorn of all its goodness: but they will think better of it in time, when their ideas become adjusted, and they see what an impetus the new doctrines have given to investi-gation. They are much mistaken who suppose that Darwinism is only of speculative importance, and perhaps transient interest. In its working applica-tion it has proved to be a new power, eminently prac-tical and fruitful.

tical and fruitful. "And Mr. Darwin not only points out the road, but labors upon it indefatigably and unceasingly. A most commendable noblesse oblige, assures us that he will go on while strength (would we could add health) remains. The vast amount of such work he has already accomplished might overtax the strong-est. That it could have been done at all under con-stant infirm health, is most wonderful."

NATIONAL VITALITY AND THAINED MEN.

NATIONAL VITALITY AND THAINED MEN.A. Gaiton, in his work on Hereilitary Genius,which the systematic destruction and expatriationby the Inquisition or the religious intolerance of thevisation of the religious intolerance of thesystematic destruction and expatriationpoint in the estimation of the religious intolerance of thevisation of the religious workers, in generalmontal and political decline of the three great Latinthe optimized only to a few thousands everyvisation of the population; the men whoreoptimized only to a few thousands everyvisation of the population; the men whorevisation of the population. The picture of thetwo population to reveal in the oscience of andwhore which here are all to be sourced on thevisation of the visit and in the case of the two fistwo which keeps the mess in motion, which may case in the march of civilization. The picture andwhose influence enabled the State to keep in the march of civilization. The picture andthe target which is would, most probably, if we could have a state and whose influence and the constant in the religious presented on of the second in the march of civilization. The picture and the picture and the picture and the second in the secon

A INDEX -JULY 16, and the second state of the second state second state

MAN IS AS A stream whose source is hidden. Our being is descending into us from we know not whence. The most exact calculator has no pre-science that somewhat incalculable may not balk the very next moment. I am constrained every moment to acknowledge a higher origin for events than the will I call mine

Network of the second secon

According to the following information con-tained in a letter reprinted in Littel's Living Age, the world is likely soon to know, it seems, which is the true religion :

THE ABCHBISHOP OF CANTERBURY lately preached a missionary sermon, at St. Peter's Church, Thanet, in which he said that though "the population in In-dia, subject to the British crown, or more or less con-nected with it, is about 180,000,000 of persons, and though great efforts have been made of inte years, to bring the influence of missionaries to bear upon those whom formerly they could not reach, still, with all efforts, not above $18,000 Protestant converts have as yet been made from these native populations.

Hoetrn.

THE SOUL'S REPLY,

BY STELLA OF LACEAWANNA.

I have questioned, I have queried,

Soul of mine, till I am wearled; Pondered many a day, and wondered, with an undisguised desire, As the stately suns sank slowly to their western couch of

- fire
- And the tardy twilights lingered till the midnight moon And the tardy twinghts impered thit the manight moon climbed higher, If the gods-with gifts o'erflowing-In their rich and rare bestowing. Should but offer, should but proffer one among the magic

- three,-Love, or Fame, or Gold, unstinted,-which of all thy choice uld be?

Which could rouse thee into waking

From the damb and dreary aching-From the sorrow of to-morrow, or the griering of to-day, From the stopor and the torpor, wearing thy sweet life away,-Love, or Fame, or Gold-oh answer! which the conried guerdon, say?

- Gold ! a wondrons winard, surely, Shining in the dark so purely,— Luring willing souls to madness with its glamour, with its
- glare;
- Clasping gemmed and jeweled baubies 'round each skele-ton of care, Till their ghastliness break lightly into beauty everywhere:

- Gold the tempter to a the tempter to a the treatures Gold the tempter to a the treatures It should buy thee, and the pleasures,— Delicate and dainty offerings from a hundred spicy isles, Adulation from the many, and bewilderment of smiles; Dreams too beautiful should woo thee,

Should pursue, perchance undo thee;

Every star should glow a promise; every bud on flower and Flush with hope's unspoken splendor, flesting, cheating, though it be ;--Deign response, oh soul of silence. which the tempting gift for thee?

Or if gold yet lack the nower

To beguile life's little hour-If its glitter fall to charm thee, or thy being would'st not CTAVE

What the world's great thousands toll for, moll for, to the last a slave, Till the wild norest sinks breathless to an uncomplaining grave,- Yonder, like a fire-fly dancing,

Now retreating, now advancing, In and out the hazy shadows, with a grace 'twere sweet to name, Radiant garlands deftly wreathing, waits the gifted goddess

Many a soul hath drained the chalice

Foaming in her glittering palace-Many another knelt in rapture but to press her garment's of them?

Yet no flutter, yet no waking From the dumb and dreary aching-From the sorrow of to-morrow, or the grieving of to-day, From the stupor and the torpor, wearing thy sweet life

What shall rouse thee, what shall save thee from this wasting slumber, pray? Lovg it must be-thought hath guessed it, For a sigh of thine expressed it,

And a stirful throbbing creepeth through each limp and languid vein, Till the ruddy life-tide leapeth swiftly on its course again;

Though thy pride so silent made thee, Love's sweet mention hath betrayed these. Gold may dash thy sky with rainbows where its met flash and fall, Fame may hold thee and enfold thee in her fascinating thrall, But 'tis Love's magnetic mystery that enslaves thes more than all.

CASE BECRIPTS.

FOR THE WEEK ENDING JULY 11.

FOR THE WHER ENDING JULY 11.
J. B. Davenport, $3; E. Leedham, $1; A. Williams, $6,44;
Washington (ross, $3; H. G. Norton, $1,60; Henry Shreve, $3; J. G. Forlong, $4.04; E. Crosby, $3; S. W. Neison, $6,50;
E. W. Wellington, $3; G. T. Stevens, $6; Henry Kennard, $2; B. F. Dyer, $3; M. A. Kurnheedt, $4; J. G. Dodge, $1; $6; Chas, J. Ryder, $3; R. S. Barker, $5; Anna P. Dixwell, $4,50; R. P. Maynard, $1,50; J. K. Wight, $5; J. Smith, $1; $4,50; R. P. Maynard, $1,50; J. E. Wight, $5; J. Smith, $1; $4,50; R. P. Maynard, $1,50; J. E. Wight, $5; J. Smith, $1; C. Stever, $5; Charles Storm, $00; J. Liena, $46; J. Oddimari, $10; J. H. Hill $100; W. T. Allena, $46; J. Odidmari, $10; S. L. Hill, $100; W. T. Allena, $15; A. A. Bell, $1; D. Williams, 20 ots; Wm. Willcott, 40 ots; Wm. B. Taylor, 30 ots; F. Fisk, $2; G. E. Foster, $1,50; A. K. Loring, 64 cts; Cash, $3,44; F. B. Stibley, 30 cts; Lizzie Martin, 30 cts.

Sibley, 25 cts.; Lizzie Martin, 25 cts. All receipts of cash will be acknowledged as above, and no other receipt sent unless specially requested. Persons who do not see their remittances acknowledged within three weeks after sending, will please notify us. N. B.—When writing about a former remittance, slways give the date of such remittance as exactly as possible. N. B.—Please examine the ADDRESS and DATE on your INDEX mail-tag, and report at once any error in either.

Diminuto Google

BOSTON, JULY 16, 1874.

PARAGRAPHS.

BY W. J. P.

Among the sins of Congress none was worse than its failure to pass the Civil Rights Bill. So long as it postpones that measure of justice it conspires with hotel keepers, and railroad and steamboat managers, to insult several of its own members, who, because of their color, are not allowed to travel as if they were gentlemen, on their way to their Congressional duties.

A BOOK which will most certainly attract and reward the attention of all students of the Science of Religion, and which has for some time been promjeed, is announced as soon to be published. It is Mr. George H. Felt's Kaballah of the Egyptians, and the Greek Canon of Proportion,-a work which is the result of years of laborious and patient study. Investigations into the meaning of the Egyptian hieroglyphics, and into the connection of the Egyptian and Hebrew religions, are a part of its contents. It is to be published by J. W. Bonton, of New York, in ten parts, at $2.50 each; and the completed work is to be a quarto of 640 pages, abundantly illustrated.

MB. CONWAT'S Sacred Anthology receives from the Nation a very appreciative notice-unusually so for that paper. It says: "Thanks are due Mr. Conway for the admirable book which he has compiled. It may be described as a mass of well-arranged excerpts from the bibles of all nations, and from some other writings as well. These quotations relate to the whole of human character and duty, and embody much of the deepest and best-tried wisdom. A better book as a companion it would be hard to find." And this praise is deserved ; for though the critically disposed may doubtless find some fault with the -as, for instance, that the selections are not albook ways arranged with perfect success under the chosen titles, or that some good things are not there, and that some not so good are. - yet it is, notwithstanding this possible slight criticism, excellent. A number of ministers already have found it of valuable service in their pulpit readings.

THE Proceedings of the Pennsylvania Yearly Meeting of Progressive Friends, held in June, at Longwood, have been published in a pamphlet of thirty-four pages, and show the meeting to have been one of interest and vitality. Oliver Johnson, who has been clerk of the meeting for eighteen years, and one of its most active members from the time of its organization, twenty-one years ago, was necessarily absent, and Charles G. Ames was made clerk in his The sessions continued from the 11th to the place. 14th of the month, and a great variety of topics came up for discussion. The pamphlet gives only a brief hint of the course of the discussions, but contains the "Testimonies" which gave rise to the discussions in full. These are entitled, "Religion," "Treatment of Hired Men and Women," "Political Equality of Women," "Capital and Labor," "Legal Holidays," "Reform in Woman's Dress," "Child Education and the Kindergarten," "Political Duties," "Treatment of Criminals," "Temperance," "Pesce." Another, on "Sexual Hollness," presented by Nicholas E. Boyd, was directed to be printed in the pamphlet "for information and serious consideration," though "neither adopted nor rejected by the meeting." An interesting letter from Oliver Johnson, and a reply from the meeting, complete the Report. The Progressive Friends of this Longwood meeting are a live body, though they meet but once a year; and during the twenty-one years of their organization have had a marked influence on public opinion in southeastern Pennsylvania. It is especially noteworthy that the "Hicksite Quakers" in that section of the State, from whom the "Progressive Friends" separated, have latterly been advancing towards them, and that some individual meetings have progressed so far that a number of the "Progressives" have felt free to rejoin the old society, and have been received without any conditions as to the past or future

IT IS PLEASANT to notice that picnic-excursions for the poor children of some of our large cities are again being provided, and that funds are requested for the purpose. Money can hardly be given for a better object, and should be plenteously bestowed. Every large city which has a class of street children should be doing something of this kind. The regret has been expressed that this charity should not have been instituted by the churches. It may be just cause for shame to the Christian Church that it should have been left to a secular newspaper to start this benevolent work. But we think it is much better that the charity should be in unecclesiastical hands. Many of the children who now have the enjoyment of the excursions are at least nominally connected with the Roman Catholic Church; and were Protestant churches to take up the work, a good many of this class of children might be deprived of the privilege through the suspicions of the Catholic priests that some ecclesiastical motive might be hidden under the charity. And if the Catholic Church should undertake it-which it is hardly likely to do-suspicions of sectarian narrowness and manœuvering would be still stronger. Even if all the children were of Catholic parentage, it would be better that such a charity should not be Catholic; for that church does already too much for its members on the paternal theory of taking care of them-too much for their best good. It is far better for the children and for society that the children should see that they owe this good time to the general good-will of society rather than to any church. It is a part of the natural punishment of churches, indeed, for their past bigotry and sectarianism, that they cannot now do to the best advantage many good works which they have it in their heart to do. And it will require an atonement of many years of practice in simple, undogmatic, human righteousness, before they can be accepted as the natural almoners of society.

BACCALAUREATE sermons have been numerous for the last month. Most of the colleges in the coun-try now have a discourse, on the Sunday preceding their graduating exercises, specially directed to the graduating class. Since the young men who are to graduate-and we can now, happily, of some colleges say also the young women-are on the point of going out into the world to begin their life's work, or are to enter on some special professional study, it presents a fine opportunity for wise men to utter wise advice,-an opportunity, however, which not all who are called to speak are able to meet. The young men who are just on the eve of leaving college are generally in an earnest and coutemplative mood. They see the untried path of life before them, and feel the weight of responsibility that is soon to devolve upon themselves for their success or failure, as they have never felt it before. Even those who have been reckless in their college days, and shown little disposition to improve their opportunities, are apt to have serious moments as they are about to take the step out from the care of instructors and parents into the world, to hold their careers in their own hands. We well remember the words of wise Dr. James Walker on such an occasion at Cambridge, addressed to this mood of the young man,-particularly the impressive point when he said that careless and immoral students had not infrequently made graduation-day the real Commencement-day of a new life, but that this was generally the last opportunity for a change of moral habit which circumstances would offer; that in ninety-nine cases out of a hundred the moral direction which men took on leaving college would determine their course through life. Not all preachers may have the capacity of presenting considerations like these with the impressiveness of Dr. Walker, but it would be well if this mood of the young men on the occasion of Baccalaureate sermons were more borne in mind by the preachers. It is noticeable, however, that most of them (judging from reports of a number of sermons this year that have come under our notice) aim at this kind of practical discourse, to show the importance of sound character; and that comparatively little attention is given to inculcating "sound theology,"

MUSTERY IN RELIGION.

Two tendencies are seen in all live systems of religious thought,-a tendency to definition of ideas, and a tendency to mystery. The creeds define, but never for long time is escape towards creedlessness untried by some earnest man, and he often heads a party. The doctrine, at first valued for its sharp outline, gets blunted at the points, its meanings multiply, a halo gathers round it, and presently this multiplicity of meanings, shading off into the light of common-sense, is what gives the doctrine half its worth to those who love it most. The truth at the centre is still truth to them, but it has become a mystery. It wins, perhaps, an ampler recognition than before, but they see that what they look at passes definition. Even where the creeds are still clear-cut, the most Orthodox deep-thinking confesses willingly that they at bottom rest on mysteries, Nothing surer than transubstantiation,-but it is a mystery! Than trinity and incarnation, than election and vicarious atonement, for "there they stand. facts by the Bible-word." Yet, confessedly, nothing more mysterious than these same facts. The deepest fact of all, that Life which men call God, through all the ranges of their thought, whether he be a fe tish-stump or an unseen spirit, a myriad or One, has always represented mystery. The idol is but symbol, the incarnation is but a vouchsafed concretizing of some Absolute; and no high theism, however "personal," that does not affirm itself in some degree as pantheism.

We can renounce a given dogma, but we can never renounce mystery. Some improved theory, a certain self-contradiction, this or that special immorality in the articles, we abandon; but the fact that we thereby approach is stranger than all the fictions. If we flee the Three-In-One, it is to face the All-in-One: is it more intelligible? If we flee the single Incarnation, it is to pronounce a wider incarnation each time we say "Our Father." We can fiee from Calvinian, but the Calvinist will turn round on us, and safely dare us to fully solve by reason the Calvinism of Nature-the problems of evil, and suffering, and evident inheritance, and partial fate. We can give up theism; and if we do, it is to acknowledge either that which its modern prophet specifically names the power "Unknowable,"-the mystery to which all thinking leads, but in which it is forever lost,-or else the mystery "Matter," a great What-is-it ? still.

Instead of trying to escape from definition, or from mystery, we do well to accept both tendencies as nat-ural. Both belong in us. We cannot help defining. The mind craves distinct conceptions, and works to get them. Feeling rises best when rooted in them. The conscience gets most loyalty from the will when it utters firmly, "Thou shalt," and "Thou shalt not." No principle of Free Religion debars our having definite beliefs, affirmative as well as negative; and to have an enthusiastic faith is not necessarily to be credulous. But we cannot help mystifying either. The mind craves room for the free play of imagination also; feeling soon withers, unless fed at the leaves of suggestion, as well as at the root of conviction; and the will demands that the "Thon shalt" shall have the strength of the universe to back it. Nor is this tendency mere scepticism, any more than the other is credulity. It is of the nature of affirmstion rather than denial; and for that reason, doubtless, the two seeming opposites harmonize so easily in us. We distrust the outlines of our truth, because it is part of our bellef that the truth we see is greater than we see. It is a part of our wisdom to know that we are, as children or as prophets, speaking in a ligure wiser things than we yet understand. We are conscious believers and conscious mystics at once; and the best type of religiousness seems to be found where each half of this double consciousness erists in high degree. God is most personal,-it is less than true to phrase otherwise the deep belief; but most personal,-what is that? and the belief greatens as it loses outline. God is incarnate - and a man at his sins, and the brute, and very dust, is reverend with the fact that so transcends the thought that recognizes it. The universe is righteous: that faith seems to underlie all others in us; but we are mystics when we say it, and confess that we only see But, in part. Our will is free. We shall live on. though reasons for both beliefs are strong, we know our confidence is a confidence amid ignorance.

It matters little what we call this tendency. It matters much if we do not have it strongly in us, and give the impulse exercise. Like the other, like any tendency, it is wise to suspect it, as well as to trust

Digitzad III GOOGLE

it. But those who suspect it most, as possibly endangering reason's right to eminent domain, often have it in no small degree. Where it is not present manifestly in a party of religious thinkers, that party inevitably seems cold, and dogmatic, whether it be one that has a creed and catechism, or one with none at all, and scouting them. Where it is present manifestly, the mind or the party is quite certainly "religjous" in feeling, even when not wise in creed. For this escape from outlines is contact with the universal. By it the bellefs themselves change, and grow, and greaten. Our poetry, our lifts called "inspiraour idealizations, our natural worshippings, tion.' are due to it. Because we see so dimly the features of historic saints, the "transparent shadows" stay with us as saints forever. Because God's face, too, is an ideal face, the purest pure never can outgrow the vision. Because we have not known another life than this, the generations have never ceased building fairer and fairer heavens as earth grew better, and our friends there have been all that we would have them. In our best moods, the impulse is sure to be in exercise. Things unrim and halos begin to play, and the halos make the things not less real, but more real. All persons have it in them, more or less. For those who have it at its best, all common things are seen partaking in the eternal and the infinite to which all really do belong.

Speaking for most of us, one may say, then, that we cannot avoid mysticlem, and had better not try to altogether if we can. But one choice we can We can choose what grandeur we will face in make. being mystics. The ardent Catholic is a mystic before his Church; the ardent Protestant a mystic before the Bible: the Swedenborgian a mystic before his prophet; the Quaker a mystic before the lighted moods of his own mind. To-day men are becoming mystics before Nature, and to science belongs the praise.

The same physical science that is so hardly spoken of because its tendency is thought to be just the other way, and all the other way; that which limits. and defines, and sets all fast. It brings all to fixed laws, and physical forces, and material atoms, and makes the universe a vast mechanism. And this is true; but just as truly it fosters the other tendency in us, that which recognizes mystery. Men know more than ever before, and never did they know they knew so little, as to-day. We set out to track home some commonplace fact; as we follow, paths open on all sides to tempt us, and our triffe is seen to interlace with others,-till the cloverhead, or the atom, is found to need the universe to account for it, and we learn that we never fully explain anything. "Little flower," says Tennyson, "If I could understand what you are, root and all, and all in all, I should know what God and man is." But its new secrets dawn so But its new secrets dawn so fast as we gaze at it! Nearly sixty years ago, a French botanist began what he hoped to make a de-French botanist began what us hopes to mandeon taking scription of all plants. His son and grandson taking up his work have just stopped it, still unfinished, a the end of seventeen volumes, "lest the undertaking should kill off the third race of botanists." In the elder's time, one could elaborate at the rate of ten species a day; under the modern requirements of knowledge, only at the rate of one! And that is but a type of what is happening in all fields of research. Never seemed the Universe so vast as now. Never have its time and space so fast stretched their bounds -both ways, towards the infinitely great, and towards the infinitely little, -as before our eyes. Never has it seemed so veritably a Uni-verse as now, when the terms of religion-monothelem, omnipresence, omnipotence-have almost become tested realities of physics. The persistence and correlation of forces; the ether that "goeth and passeth through all things," the sun-stir, transforming itself into all motions on the earth; the starry constitutions, like that of our home-planet; the gravitation, everywhere attracting and shaping all things by all others; the various phases of the evolution-fact-nebular hypothesis, origin of species, uniformity of law in human history,-are so many illustrations, the best that religion has, that in One all things live, and move, and have their being. "The hard gravel of materialism," this! Yes, but the atoms become finer atoms, and the ethers subtler ethers, as we sound our dim way through them; and there is no end: the two worlds-"matter," "spirit"-seem to become one mystery, and man, the microcosm, becomes a wonder more unguessed than ever. If our knowledge thus reveals our ignorance, it would seem as if the tremblers before such knowledge might be grateful. That very slur oddly turns to grace, when we remember that William Blake's verse about the gravel is the prose of science to-day :-

"To see a world in a grain of sand, And a heaven in a wild-flower; To hold infinity in the palm of your hand, And eternity in an hour."

What is more, after physical science has thus intensified the wondrousness of everything, she crowns her gift of mystery by reminding us that, after all, she never touches being, buly phenomens, -never the source, but only the methods.

A double debt religion owes her, then. She does define, and build fixed frameworks for our large conceptions; and yet in all she does she fills us with a sense of mystery. From this latter contribution, also, we are winning our richer poetry, our deepening reverence, our nobler religiousness. She fosters both the tendencies on which religious thinking thrives, W. C. G.

A SIGNIFICANT SPRECH.

On the Commencement occasion at Hamilton College, on Sunday evening, June 28, Dr. Philip Schaff, of Union Theological Seminary, delivered an address before the Society of Christian Research, in which, while advocating the separation of Church and State, as established in this country, he contended that the State is bound to maintain four things based upon Christianity: 1, Monogamy, 2. The quiet and order of the Sabbath. 3. The Bible in the schools. 4. The exemption of church property from taxation.

Dr. Schaff, it is well known, is a learned, able, and determined man. It is not, perhaps, as well known that he is a man of remarkable moderation. Clear in the Orthodoxy of his opinions, firm in his conviction of their truth, exceedingly tenacious of the main positions of the Evangelical faith, a strong polemic, a keen controversialist, a stubborn foe to rationalism, -he understands the arts of prudent compromise on non-essential points, and is as well recognized a lover of peace in the "Christian" camp as a valiant soldier against the general enemy. He has, moreover, a very extensive acquaintance among the different ranks and orders of the "Christian" community. His correspondence has been large; he has travelled; he has been a good deal sought and advised with, and should be particularly well acquainted with the sentiment of leading minds on leading subjects. Besides all this, Dr. Schaff is a man of uncommon practical energy as an executive mind. To him, more than to any other, the Evangelical Alliance owes its eminence. In its dogmatical basis, its working constitution, its arrangement for periodical meetings, his hand may be traced. But for his patient endeavors, the convocation of last October, in New York, might, probably would, never have been held. He has the power of inspiring others, as well as of tolling himself. The confidence placed in him, the admiration for his learning, the respect for his character, make him in some sort a representative person.

The above declaration, therefore, as coming from one so intelligent, able, and discreet, is especially significant. It may not be formidable. It may not indicate a compact or wide-spread organization to further the specified ends. It may not foreshadow the coming victory, or even the coming onset, of the "Christian" host. The manifesto seems to us a proof of blind infatuation, rather than of moral power. The writer of these lines cannot believe that there is any real danger of either of the catastrophes that Dr. Schaff evidently anticipates with pleasure. The only effect of such declarations as he puts forth will be the awakening of a deplorable controversy that may be attended by more deplorable excite-We have reason to think that the multitudes ment. (and there are multitudes) outside of "Christian" communities are susceptible of very intense emotion on just those four points,-we will say on the last three of them. The Germans and French-in general, the Europeans-require but little urging to be-come flercely axcited over them. Let the "Christian" Amendment of the Constitution be proposed along with them-as it certainly will be, for it belongs in the same category,-and seeds of dissension will be sown that may bear a bitter harvest. In the tumultuous West-in Kansas, in Texas, for example,-rebellion against the assumptions of "Christianity" is avowed and aggressive. As contrasted with their attitude, that of the cultivated Eastern radicals is conservative. Dr. Schaff and his friends may be well acquainted with the sentiment of the "Christian" community; but with the sentiment of the extra-Christian and anti-Christian community they must be lamentably ignorant, if they imagine it will quietly submit to the imposition of any ecclesiastical rules whatever. Mr. Abbot and his friends wish, we presume, to avert such calamity as must ensue from the unseemly pressure of these preposterous claims, and, by timely warning, to put the public so completely on its guard that the attempt cannot be made. They may be, after all, the emissaries of peace rather than the instigators of war; and they who do not share the fears they profess may yet thank them for the peace they ensure. 0. B. F.

Literary Hotices.

THE ATLANTIC MONTHLY THANSFORMED.

THE ATLANTIC MONTELLY THANSFORMED. There was a time, during the existence of the Rad-ical, when that periodical and another, called, let us say, the Church Magazine, were habitually bound as the same office. By ili-luck or good-luck, the whole monthly issue of each once got into the covers des-tined for one. And in looking at the July number of the Atlantic it would be easy to guess that it had un-dergone a similar interchange of covers with the Overland. It is not merely that Harte, and Miller, and Stoddard (C. W.), appear as contributors. It is not merely that, as the publishers claim, there is a new class of writers in the Atlantic. But the other claim of the publishers, that "the famous names throughout the East" still appear in the Atlantic pagee, is singularly set aside by this number. We see in it the consummation of the change which, under Mr. Howells' guidance, has been gradually going on. It is not merely that every one of the old recognized staff of writers is eliminated; but there is not, so far-se I know, an article in this number (except that of Mr. Sauborn, a new contributor) which bears the brade ther of a New England man, or of a college-bred man. This will be generally recognized as quite a change from the earlier traditions of the Atlantic. Were this the whole of the alteration, it would be a secondary matter; for the important then is in the secondary meters.

bred man. This will be generally recognized as quite a change from the earlier traditions of the Atlantic. Were this the whole of the alteration, it would be a secondary matter; for the important thing is to have good writing, no matter whence it comes. Unfortu-nately, the effect of the change has thus far been to take the Atlantic entirely aside from its old ground--cultivated talent, --and to transfer it to a new ground, which the Overland has so well preoccupied that com-petition is almost useless; namely, talent in the rough. This, if anything, is the literary supply yielded by De Mille and Baker, by Stoddard, and Harney, and Dem-ing. Joaquin Miller, in the present number, certain-ity shows talent, and is more pollshed and less imits-tive than usual. Harte, on the other hand, takes up the imitative manner; and Miller never suggested Byron or Swinburne more strongly than Harte's "For the King" recalls Browning's "The Statue and the Bust" (in Men and Women). The metre, the situations, and even the Images—as "the body's some power, and so do some of the prose writers. If is we could forgive Miller for saying that the ship in the desert is "Some like a grand, sweet woman," and such eccentricities. We could forgive the threaome requirence of the stock figures of the Border-State style of romance, where the hero is introduced in some such way as this: "A great wad of tobacco dis-fiort spat carefully into his hand, and then threw into the grate." ("Katy's Fortune," p. S7.) In a new country, with a wholly new literature, a good deal style of romance, where the rea is introduced in some such way as the market, that we must devote sto this work what was once our best magazine? I sit sking too much to wish that there might be one cor-ner left in American itterature for cultivated talent, as well as for crude talent; a place somewhere for "Profesor" De Mille, and "Will Wallece Harney" T that is all. That is all.

"Professor" De Mille, and "Will Wallace Harney"? That is all. I have no wish to speak too roughly of a writer se pleasing as Mr. Howells; and have tried to convince myself that an impression of tameness and feeble-ness in the opening of his new story may be the re-sult of my own obtuseness. Yet is it not singular-that when Mr. Howells colos a word, which he not-infrequently does, it should be usually some new phrase for weakness, and not a phrase that errs on the side of atrength? His ladies give "a fraidlab-start." His mother is "fragilely unlike her daugh-ter." Even the oriole's note, the most inspiring and vigorous of all bird-notes (unless it be the crowing of the cock), suggests no rousing appeal to Mr. Howells, but only plaintive memories, such as the delicate-warble of the blue-bird might be supposed to bring back. His poem, "While the Oriole Sings," is soft and graceful; but is so remote from all the emotions-naturally suggested by the bird, that it is not surpris-ing when the Western papers assure us that Mr. Howells never really lived by the "biue Miami," and" that there is not a "cottonwood" within two hundrees miles of that stream.

that there is not a "cottonwood" within two hundres" miles of that stream. These things seem to indicate a certain want of fibre in Mr. Howells' intellectual composition; and this accounts not merely for the lavish admirations which he first, on coming East, was wont to heap on smooth poets like Longfellow; but for the reaction-which now drives him away from cultivated power; and bids him seek crude power only in his writers, in the hope apparently of making the Atlantic into a second Overland. Yet is there any real hope for our litersture, unless our editors can steer somewhere be-tween the extremes, and can give us a mode of writ-ing that shall be cultivated and vigorous at the same-time?

Communications.

CO-OPERATION AND THE LABOR MOVE-MENT.

F. A. HINCKLEY VERSUS "C. M."

<text><text><text><text><text><text><text>

for agitating this subject, and hope it will not end here.

here. Let me in conclusion ask "C. M." if he seriously affirms (as he says) that "poverty is entirely due to non-production and non-accumulation?" If so, is it entirely the fault of the poor that they do not accu-mulate? mulate mulate? That labor must work ont its own salvation, and that knowledge is its only savior, is self-evident. How to read aright Nature's laws, discriminating be-tween them and those cutatoms and habits which, from age, have become a second nature, is the prob-lem. Dogmatic assertions will never solve it. By little and little, as the rock are worn away, in "the reformation of selfishness, and the education of ig-norance," will the reconciliation come. Who can lead the struggling poor to a point in knowledge they have not yet attained, to an intelli-gent cooperation which shall be indeed the dawn of a new era? P. ulater That labor must work out its own salvation, gent coöperation w a new era? New OBLEANS.

INDIVIDUAL NATURE AND HUMAN NATURE.

A writer in THE INDEX SAYS: "We are constrained to say with the utmost deliberation that, although we have steadfastly considered Henry Ward Beecher in-nocent nutil be should be proved guilty, we must now consider him guilty until he shall be proved in-nocent." That expresses our mind also; and every lover of fair play, of truth, and of pures and undefiled there. The current statements to date lead to ex-setly that. But why keep agitating the matter, say some? So long as innocence may be buried under débris, men will work asking no pay. There are times when to "assume a virtue if you have it not" will not answer. The real article is required now; the note is presented for redemption—specie, or bankruptey. The "Beecher scandal" may be briefly summed up funs: A story was printed and circulated, which, though undoubtedly false as currently reported, has my. Beecher, if it could have been spoken, would have settled the matter; that word has been, wisely or unwisely, withheld. Then followed proceedings which need not here be referred to, including the found the Plymouth Church, and the Congregational Council; and they have all been in the interest of becher—to protect his reputation, not to get at the tothe settle the matter is the council, under the lead of Council; and they have all been in the interest of Beecher-to protect his reputation, not to get at the trutb. It is probable that the Council, under the lead of the Rev. Leonard Bacon, had for its object something higher; but it was "euchred" by the action of Ply-mouth Church. The course pursued by lovers of Beecher, or lovers of that church, rather than lovers of truth, might, under some circumstances, be politic and wise; but when it included injustice or ruin to another, who had certainly the right to suppose him-self also worth saving, then the truth, and nothing less than the truth, must be spoken, though the heavens fall. It is not so certain that the heavens would fall, even if Plymouth Church should. As the matter stands, Titon winces under their combined pressure—who would not, if innocent and suffering for the guilty?--and he writes a letter, an admirable letter, which speaks for itself. Some have called that letter indefinite; but the tragedy con-nected with it is so current that his letter may be properly considered a definite one; and it indicated forbearance, moderation, grief, and a reservation of force that may yet find expression. This is briefly as explain your words, no appeal to your past life, or to an assumed magnanimity, can exempt you from the legitimate construction which we must put you your written apology to Theodore Tilton;" and we think that this is so or putil. It is always unpleasant to find clay in any part of the structure of our gods. There are certainly symp-toms of it in Mr. Beecher in this connection. We that this is cor populi. It is always unpleasant to find clay in any part of the structure of our gods. There are certainly symp-toms of it in Mr. Beecher in this connection. We hope for disappointment for the sake of civilization and religion; but the common-sense of mankind is not going into eclipse for the sake of saving a great soul from death, and hiding a multitude of sins. The world will forgive and forget any fraility in Mr. Beecher, if any be proved, and possibly waive re-pentance; but dodging the issue, or cowardlee, will kill him as dead as Colfax. Suppose the scandal to be more or less true, and that supposition is proper as the case now stands, what a complex thing a human being is! How ex-tremes meet in some men! Is there any correlation, accidental or otherwise, between passional and intel-iectual vigor? Is the intellect clear and cold; and, to move the hearts of the masses, must there be a power behind it, that is earthly and sensual (not nec-essarily devilish), to warm it with magnetism, to make it effectual? Can a man be a consistent relig-ious power if corrupt in his life? And then again what is virtue? Shall a man who has transcendent gifus for the elevation of his fellows be speechless, because, like Origen, he finds his spirit willing but this fiesh weak? We would like to carry out these thoughts, but content ourselves by quoting a passage trom Burns:---

"One point must still be greatly dark, The moving why they do it; And just as lamely can ye mark How far perhaps they rue it."

Burns was not a minister; but he was a religious teacher, nevertheless, and full of that power that draws hearts upward, and the world still listens to him. Do his life's abort-comings detract from his thought? The tenderest truths he so beautifully set in words that they have become signs in the heart's zodiac. I have been made better, and the world has been made better, for Burns' unsurpassed poetry. It is a pity he was morally weak; but could we spare his immortal words? We would have liked them from a pure fountal; but we take them gladly with all their associations. The question will come up, Could he have produced the immortal thoughts that shine in his writings, had his life been other than it was? Is the Illy's fragrance necessarily born of miasmatic pools? The Primer based upon the Bible says-85.78-

"Uriah's beauteons wife Made David seek his life."

"Bays-" "Uriah's beantsons wife_ Mide David seek his life." But we forget the king who robbed the Hittite of his wife, and we remember the psalmist who touched his harp and filled the world with songs of piety. Now we like the truth if we can get it. We lore the psalms none the 'less because David had some im-perfections in his character. We sympathize with him in his repentance, and feel that we are all more or less human. We think Uriah, or his griefs, would have got a better hearing to-day than then; but we are satisfied as it is, for justice was done." Now if the facts of the Beecher-Tilton matter are has said enough to enable us eventually to find out has a site on the skin than when they are hidden in the blood. We are not prepared yet to do away with our marriage is ws, but we can very easily conceive of con-ditions under them that will apologize for much this a stepped aside and been human, that there may be excuse enough to take the curse of in the sight of god and man. But, unleas he prove himself imma-or fear that professed godliness shall suffer. We do in itend to intimate that Mr. Beecher; and his strongly that he has not been a Joseph, and his surrough that he has not been a somet, and efforts at whitewashing will make his case worse than it really to we feel impressed that he is not; we feel also surrough that he has not been a Joseph, and his surrough that he has not been a somet, and efforts at whitewashing will make his case worse than it really to work the whether when he speaks than he is now.

church will fall to make him one, and efforts at whitewashing will make his case worse than it really is. He will be whiter when he speaks than he is now. The mass of the people are averse to seeing church-se, or individuals, put on airs, and claiming to be hey really are. Does any one wonder that so many are indifferent to church institutions, or at least that hey mix common-sense with their religion, diluting it so that the sulphurous tasts is wholy gone, and had be and better than the general average, miles of the the sulphurous tasts is wholy gone, and had be an order that so the state is a work of a milder character than formerly, and that even the saving of are more for aocial intercourse and worldly proper it? Their distinctive features are kept up, but without regard to logic or consistency; no one can bell the difference between saints and sinners, eccl-siastically speaking, in the daily walks of life. If of the Young Men's Christian Association. The new who open libraries on Sundays, and tax churchs and the one, and do not tax the other. They comes the Beecher scandal, showing sign fold mahogany. What if the pine should be exposed and the regard to Beecher and Tilton, may the runt the regard to Beecher and Tilton, may the runt come out, and justice be done; and Hi respect human nature, and be astonished at the capabilities even of proves weak it will only help, like everything and the outside world, with the help of science and ra-tional religion, will eventually be brought on to a logist many while eventually be brought on to a logist pine than even the church formerly occupied and to this end, may Liberal Leagues and Radica into the send, may Liberal Leagues and Radica into the send, may Liberal Leagues and Radica and to this end, may Liberal Leagues and Radica

Now AND THEN we are reminded of the blackness of superstition which once brooded over the world, but from which civilized nations have now largely escaped. The following, which comes from Merico, on the 18th inst., sounds as if it had been extracted from the terrible and bloody records of the thirteenth centure :-- on the four inst., sounds as if it has been extracted from the terrible and bloody records of the thirteenth "Senor Castilla, Alcalde of Jacobo, in the State of Sinalos, has officially reported to the prefect of his district that on April 4th he arrested, tried, and burned alive Jose Maria Bonilla and his wife Diega for sorcery, it having been proved that they had be witched one Silvestre Zacarias. The day before the excution citizen Porras, as a final test, made Zacarias take three awallows of the blessed water, whereupon the latter vomited fragments of a blanket and bun-dles of hair. The Alcalde states that the people were exasperated against the sorcerers, and demand-ed that they be burned. The sentence was executed with his approval, and he adds that he has his eye on other sorcerers against whom complaints have been made by citizens. The official Diario of this city confirms the report of the outrage, and says azereal families in the town have compelled the officer to burn another old woman and her son for the same canse." cause canse." This comes from a so-called Christian State, where churches and monasteries are numerous, where peo-ple look with ill-concealed contempt on the ignorant heathen. But no more unholy deed was ever com-mitted by the most abject pagan.—Liberal Christian.

MOST EVERYBODY will sympathize with the St. Johnsbury (Vt.) boy who lately had some teeth filled by a dentist, and who expressively declared that "it was like driving a crow-bar into frozen ground."

BABLY EGYPTIAN LITERATURE.

+24

1:00 ing. * Pansa

120

4:101 140

243 NE:

ųż: N. 2.28 1510

A TAL STOR

24.4

53 15

19.19

From Bayard Taylor's Correspondence to the New York

ring from pure realism to the highest pinnacle of spintral aspiration; and individual souls, or classes of souls, rest at the height which corresponds to their antity. We must have been written, chanted, or responds to the reaction of the sould t

HYMN TO THE SUN.

HYMAY ROUGH SUNCE SUNCE

A thorough poetic spirit breathes through the mysticism of this chant. The beginning half sug-gests the invocation of Ossian, but has a freehness and simplicity far beyond the sentimental resonance of the latter. Behind the material sun which is ad-dressed one distinctly feels the principle of good, of light and intelligence, which its orb symbolizes. The next quotation I shall make is from a tablet celebrating the victories of Thothmes III., which was chiselled for the great temple of Karnak. This monarch, one of the greats two ruled in Egypt, was the fourth successor of Amosis, who overthrew the Hyksos, and lived in the seventeenth century be-fore Christ. He was a famous conqueror; during his reign, according to an inscription atili azisting, "Egypt set her frontiers wherever she pleased." He subjected Nubla, Syris, Mesopotamia, and perhaps a part of Asia Minor; and it was apparently toward the close of his reign, on the occasion of some zolemn celebration of his victories, that the chant of praise was written. It is a poem, in the true sense of the word, not an historical document, and its author was perhaps some priestly Theban laureate. It repre-sents a period two thousand years later than the opening is a welcome given by the god, Amun Ra (the Jupiter Ammon of the Greeks), "the lord of the through thine advations; my heart dilates to thy welcome in my temple. I enfold thy limbs with mine arms, to give them beatth and life. Pleasant are thy favors to me, through the image which thou has tset up for me in my sanctuary. It is I who compensate thee; it is I who give thee power and victory over all the nation; it is I who cause the knowledge and the fear of thes to be upon all coun-tries, and that the terror of thee resclase even unto the four supports of the harter of the transe the favors to the starter form has reiting which thou has test up for me in my sanctuary. It is I who compensate thee; it is I who give the power and victory over all the nations; it is I who cause the knowledge and the far of the transe the transe the start the the terror of the transe the avenues. It seems to me that the Hebrew literature draws its style and character as directly from the Egyptian

It seems to me that the Hebrew literature draws its style and character as directly from the Egyptian as the Latin does from the Greek. If the lofty the-ism preserved as a mystery in the sanctuaries of the temples struck a far profounder root in Israel, during its free and glorious ages, and blossomed in the high-est and divinest forms of spiritual aspiration, the tone and cadence of its expression suggest none the less the language of the Nile. Who shall say, in-deed, whether the chief element of Faith, purified by the inspired genius of Moses, was not originally the same?

the set of language of the Nike. Who shall say, in-deed, whether the chief element of Falth, purfiled by same? If a collection were made of similar or equivalent expressions, in Egyptian and Hobrew, it would sur-by be richer and more striking than is now generally supposed. Beginning with an ancient inscription on the temple of Sais, "I am who is, has been, and ever shall be," we should doubtless find a long series of reverential phrases, which are already familiar to our series. Mariette says that the following, from one quently on acide and tombe that we are justified in myboing it to be part of a daily prayer: "Through my love have I drawn near to God. I have given bread to him who was hungry, water to him who was of sheiter to the abanoned." One more passage, in which an historical event is marrated both in a poelic and dramatic fashion, must on sheiter to the abanoned." One more passage, in which an historical event is marrated both in a poelic and dramatic fashion, must be of sheiter to the abanoned." The more passage, in which an historical event is marrated both in a poelic and dramatic fashion, must of sheiter to the abanoned." The scripture of the exterior will of the image pylon at Luxor. Some Egyptologists call it the "Foem of Pen-ta-our," but I am unable to say an exploit of Ramaes. It. (Secsotria), toward the rebellom occurred throughout the regions con-rover thoroughly overcome. They stood at the Egyp-in difference of section years itso and idou be ordered throughout the regions con-rover horoughly overcome. They stood at the bad whether that is reign, in marching upon the specifier alled in the insertpicion "the ville race of which (Aradue, Patasa, Kashisch, Cherobe, etc.) in the fifth year of its reign, in marching upon the various of the ville these, she as along the borders of which (Aradue, Patasa, Kashisch, Cherobe, etc.) in the sith we not she zerory, and suddenly out himself alone, surrounded by the Bedou-ins, whom the Khetas is have as along the orders. What then happened is thar r ships traverse the ses, and carry to thes the tributes of the nations. I invoke thee, O my father! I am in the midst of throngs of unknown people, and I am alone before thee; no one is beside me. My bowmen and my horsemen abandoned me when I crited to them; not one of them heard me when I called them to my aid. But I choose Ammon rather than thou-sands of bowmen, than thousands of horsemen, than myriads of young herces, even were they all assem-bled together!" The god anewers:-- sands of bowmen, than thousands of horsemen, than myriads of young heroes, even were they all assem-bled together?" The god answers:— "The yords have resounded in Hermonthis, O Rameses! I am near thee, I am thy father, the Sun: my hand is with thee, and I count more to thee than, millions of men assembled together! The two thou-and five hundred chariots, when I shall be in their midst, shall be broken before thy horses. The bearts of thine enemies shall grow weak within their sides, and all their members shall be relaxed. They shall fail to discharge their arrows, and shall have no-courage to hold the lance. I shall cause them to-plange into the waters, even as the crocodile plunges; they shall be thrown one upon the other, and they behind in: he that falls shall not rise again." Six times Rameses drives his chariot through the hostile ranks, slaying many of their best warrior. Then some of his generals and horsemen come to bis asistance, and are greeted with a sharp reprod, which, indeed, they seem to have well deserved. In the due to the dauntless heating the whole end fighter, thou of the dauntless heating the substance, thou hast effaced the country of the korse-men. Son of the god Tioum, formed out of his own substance, thou hast effaced the country of the korse-men. Son of the god Tioum, formed out of his own substance, thou hast effaced the country of the Khe-stes, who fighteth for thy soldiers on the day of bat-tie. Thou, king of the great heat, art the first in-the combat; thon art first of the valiant before thine-tie. Thou, king of the great heat, art the first in-the combat; thou art first of the valiant before thine-tie. The we have the wole world risen againsti-the." "No one of you hath well one in abandoning me army, in the face of the whole world risen against thee." Rameses replies to them :--"No one of you hath well done in abandoning me thus, alone among mine enemies. The princes and the captains have not joined their hands to mine. I have fought, I have repulsed thousands of the triber, and I was alone. The horses which carried me were: Power in the Thebaid and Repose in the Superior Re-gion. They are they which my hand found when I was alone among mine enemies. I order that corn shall be served to them before the god Phra, each day, when I shall again be within my royal pylona." The eargerstitons of the poet and the conventional honors he accords to the king do not prevent us from repognizing some of the features of an actual occur-rence. Rameses on doubt fell into an ambuscade, and possessing superior arms, armor, and horses, de-fended himself gailantly until assistance arrived. The fattery is not much more excessive than in most modern paintings of battles, wherein the crowned bead is always represented as halting or riding for-ward, under the heaviest fire of the enemy. These fragments belong to the earliest literature of the unman race; for the last of them, just quote-ward written while Mozes was yet a child.

The second secon IT IS VEBY CLEAR that now that English

CAUTIOUS.—The caution of the New Englander, in giving an answer to a direct question, was illustrated to me, says a correspondent, the other day, when I asked an Eastern friend of mine, whoes family were not noted for vary active habits, "Was not your fa-ther's death very sudden?" Slowly drawing one hand from his pocket, and pulling down his beard, the interrogated cautionsly replied, "Waal, rather sudden, for him."—New York Express.

Daniest of Google

THE INDEX-JULY 16, 1874.

Advertisements.	ŀ
THE PATRONAGE	ľ
of the liberal advertising public is respect- fully solicited for THE INDEX. The sitempt will be honeatly made to keep the advertis- ing pages of THE INDEX in suffice harmony with its general character and principles, and thus to furnish to the public an advertising medium which shall be not only profitable to is patrons, but also worthy of their most generous support. To this end, all improper or "blind" advertisements, all quack adver- tisements, and all advertisements believed to be fraudulent or nujust to any one, will be excluded from these columns. No cuts will be admitted.
THE HOREX must not be held responsible for any statement made by advertisers, who will in all cases accept the responsibility for their own statements.	1

ADVERTISING RATES.

For 1 to	12	Insertions,	100	Por	line.
66 QR 66	51	66	å	- 66	66
 52		66	š	16	66
De bell	1.00	and a discontinuity	1000	1 213	1000

On half-column advertisements, a discount et 10 per cent, will be made; on fall-column advertisements, a discount of 25 per cent. On all advertisements for which cash is paid in advance, a further discount of 25 per cent. on the total, as above calculated, will be made. FRANCIS E. ABBOT, Editor.

CIRCULATE ! Circulate ! ! Circufield when your petition is a yard long, miles you have aaked every one to sign it. Get good, influ-ential mana.

GET EVERYBODY.

Don't neglect to show the petition to any one, because he is a stockholder in some church, or other exempted property, as many such persons admit the justice of the domand; and those who will not should be made to take the responsibility of refusing to sign it. Don't delay! We want the petitions returned early.

Per order of EXEC. CONM. of the BOSTON LIBERAL LEAGUE.

JULTURED FREE THOUGHT.

The Index Association.

OFFICE, NO. 1 TREMONT PL., BOSTON.

has been organized with a capital stock fixed at ONE HUNDRED THOUSAND dollars, for the purpose of publishing Tracts, Books, and

THE INDEX,

A. Weekly Paper devoted to Free and Ratio Religion.

It is the object of THE INDEX to give public atterance to the boldest, most cultivated, and test matured thought of the age on all religious questions, and to apply it directly to the social and political amelioration of society.

It is edited by FRANCIS E. ABBOT, assisted by A. NAM W. STEVENS, with the following list of Editorial Contributora :-

O. B. FROTHINGHAM, New York City. THOMAS W. HIGGINSON, Newport, B.I.

WILLIAM J. POTTER, New Bedford, Mass. WILLIAM H. SPENCER, Haverbill, Mass. BICHARD P. HALLOWELL, Boston, Mass. MRS. E. D. CHENEY, Jamaica Plain, Mass. REV. CHARLES VOYSEY, London, England.

PROF. FRANCIS W. NEWMAN, London, Eng. Every liberal should subscribe for THE INDEX. as the best popular exponent of Religious Liberalism. Every Christian minister, and every thinking church-member, should subscribe for it, as the clearest, most candid, and most scholarly exposition of the differences between Free Thought and Evangelical Christianity, and as the best means of becoming well informed of the arguments and the movements which the Church will have to meet in the future.

Almost every number contains a discourse of deading article, which slone is worth the price of one year's subscription

Prof. MAX MUELLER, of Oxford, England, in a letter to the Editor published in THE INDEX for January 6, 1873, says: "That the want of a Journal entirely devoted to Beligion in the widest sense of the word should be felt in America-that such a journal abould have been started and so powerfully supported by the best minds of your country,-is s good sign of the times. There is no such journal in England, France, or Germany; though the number of so-called religious or theological periodicals is, as you know, very large." And later still: "I read the numbers of your IN-DEX with increasing interest."

Send $3.00 for one year, or 75 cents for three months on trial.

Address THE INDEX. 7

No. 1 Tramont Place, Boston.

100D PHOTOGRAPHS 1 EADING INDEX WRITERS. Including B. FROTHINGHAM, T. W. HIGGINSON, W. J. POTTER, W. H. SPENCER, F. W. NEWMAN, CHAS. VOYSEY, A. W. STEVENS, F. E. ABBOT, re now for sale at the office of THE INDEX.

and will be malled postpaid to any address on receipt of price. Single Photographs, 25 cents each; complete Set of Eight Photographs, $1.50. THE INDEX.

No. 1 Tremont			Place, Boston, Mass					88.
	T	N	D	E	х	т	R	A	C	т	8.

I. No. 1.—Truths for the Times, by F. E. Abbot, contains the "Fifty Afirmations" and "Modern Principles." MR. ORARLES DAEWIN, author of "The Origin of Spe-des," says, in a letter to the editor not orig-inally intended for publication, but subse-quently authorized to be used: "I have now wead 'Durar now Thurk." and I edimine read 'TRUTHS FOR THE TIMES,' and I admire them from my inmost heart; and I agree to almost every word." New Edition. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00.

No. 2.-Fear of the Living God, by 0. B. Frothingham, exposes the debasing char-acter of the popular notions of God, and presents conceptions of him that are wor thy of the nineteenth century. New Edi-tion. Price 5 cents; 12 copies 50 cents.

No. 5.-Lecture on the Bible, by the Rev. Charles Voysey, of England, is an over-whelming demonstration of the imperfections and errors of the Bible, both in the Old and the New Testaments. New Edition. Price 10 cents : 12 copies $1.00.

No. 4.-Christian Propagandism, by F. E. Abboi, is an exposure of the weakness, costliness, and inefficiency of the System of Poreign Missions. Full of Figures, Facts, and Interesting Extracts. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00.

No. 5 .- "God in the Constitution," by Rev. Arthur B. Bradford, opposes the pro-posed Theological Amendment to the Unit-ed States Constitution. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00.

No. 6 .- "The Sabbath," by Parker Pills-bury, denounces Sabbatarian superstition. Edition. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00.

No. 7.-4*Compulsory Education," by F. E. Abbot, maintains the right of every child to be educated, and the duty of the State to ensure it an education. Price 5 cents; 12 copies 50 cents.

No. 8.-The Present Heaven, by O. B. Frothingham, treats of a subject that in-terests everybody. New Edition. Price 5 cents; 12 copies 50 cents.

-The Christian Amendment, by F. E. Abbot, shows the dangerous obara ter of the attempt to interpolate the Evan-gelical Christian Creed in the U. S. Constitution. Price 5 cents; 12 copies 50 cents.

No. 10.-The Impeachment of Christi-anity, by F. E. Abbot. Fourth Ten Thou-sand. Sent for free distribution to any one who will distribute U, in packages of from five to one hundred copies

No 11.-The God of Science, by F. E. Ab-bot, attempts to show the real infinence of modern science upon the idea of God. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00.

No. 12.-Is Homaniam Real Christian ity? Two essays by Francis W. Newman and F. E. Abbot. Price 10 cents; 12 copies 81.00.

No. 18 .- On the Vision of Heaven, by Prof. F. W. Newman, of England, analy the Christian conception of Heaven. Price 5 cents; 12 copies 50 cents.

No. 14. - A Study of Religion: The Name and the Thing, by F. E. Abbot, attempts to show that the popular deriva-tion of the word Religion is incorrect; that the popular conceptions of Religion (taelf are inadequate; and that a new conception of it, based on the Law of Evolution conare insolequate; and that a new conception of it, based on the Law of Evolution, con-sistent with absolute Fasedom of Thought, and independent even of belief in God, is the necessary condition of the perpetuity of Religion among men. Frice 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00. Address THE INDEX, 1 TREMONT PLACE,

Boston, Mass.

THE INDEX. A Weekly Journal DEVOTED TO FREE RELIGION. PUBLISHED BY THE INDEX ASSOCIATION,

8

AT

No. 1 Tremont Place, Boston. EDITOR:

FRANCIS ELLINGWOOD ABBOT. ASSOCIATE EDITOR: ABRAM WALTER STEVENS.

RDITORIAL CONTRIBUTORS: O. B. FROTHINGHAM, New York City.

T. W. HIGGINSON, Newport, B.I.

W. J. POTTER, New Bedford, Mass

R. P. HALLOWELL, Boston, Mass. MES. E. D. CHENEY, Jamaica Plain, Mass

F. W. NEWMAN, England.

CHARLES VOYSEY, England.

THE INDEX aims-

To increase general intelligence with respect to religion :

To foster a nobler spirit and quicken a higher purpose, both in society and in the indi-vidual:

To substitute knowledge for ignors for wrong, truth for superstition, freedom for slavery, character for creed, catholicity for bigotry, love for hate, humanitarianism for sectarianism, devotion to universal ends for absorption in selfish scheme

In Brief, to hasten the day when Free Relig-ion shall take the place of dogmatism and ecclesiasticism throughout the world, and when the welfare of humanity here and now shall be the aim of all private and public activities.

In addition to its general objects, the prac-tical object to which THE INDEX is specially devoted is the ORGANIZATION OF THE LIBERALS OF THE COUNTRY, for the purpose of securing the more complete and con-sistent secularization of the political and ed ucational institutions of the United States ucational institutions of the United States. The Church must give place to the Bepublic in the affections of the people. The last vestiges of ecclesistical control must be wiped out of the Constitutions and Statutes of the several States in order to bring them into harmony with the National Constitution. To accompilab this object, the Liberals must make a united demand, and present an un-broken front, and the chief practical aim of THE INDEX will be henceforth to organize a great NATIONAL PARTY OF FREEDOM. Let every one who believes in this movement give it direct ald by helping to increase the circulation of THE INDEX.

SPECIAL FEATURES.

The publication of a valuable leading pa-per or essay of a thoughtful character, in each issue, will continue to be one of the most marked features of THE INDEX. Regular editorial contributions will con-innet to be furnished by the well-known em-inent writers who have already doneso much to give to THE INDEX its present high position. Mr. VOYSEY has kindly consented to furnish every fortnight a LONDON LETTER containing matters of general interest to rad-ical readers. Other interesting correspond-ence, communications, extracts from values-ble books and periodicals, and miscellaneous articles, will also be published; and each improvements will be made from time to time as circumstances shall render possible.

AGENTS.

Local Agents for THE INDEX are wanted in every city and town throughout the coun-try. The most liberal terms are offered.

TERMS.

The price of THE INDEX is Three Dollars a year, payable in advance; and at the same rate for shorter periods. All remit-tances of money must be at the sender's risk, unless forwarded by cheque, registered let-ter, or post-office money order. The name, with address in full, must be accompanied with the money in each case, Address THE INDEX.

No. 1 Tremont Place, Boston.

ASSOCIA Report of the Addres Proceedings of the Original .....

OF THE

RELIGIOUS

12

PUBLICA

4.

FREE

ing in 1867, at which the Religious Association was 0 - 98 Religious Association was 0 ized. Containing addresses by 0. B rothingham, Henry Blanchard, Lucretta Mott Robert Dale Owen, John Weise, Oliver Johnson, F. E. Abbot, D. A. Wasson, T. W. Hig-ginson, and Ralph Waldo Emerson.

(This pamphlet has not been on sale for a number of years, and many persons who have all of the Annual Reports succeeding do not possess this.) Price 50 cents.

Proceedings of Second Annual Meet-ing, 1869. 50 cents. Contains essays by Julia Ward Howe on "Freedom and Re-straint in Religion," and by David A. Wason "The Relation of Social Science to Beligion," and speeches by O. B. Frothing-ham, Jesse H. Jones, F. E. Abbot, Wm. Depton, R. W. Emerson, Mary Grew, C. A. Bar-tol, A. M. Powell, H. B. Blackwell, Rowland Connor, Lucy Stone, Horace Seaver, and others; with an appendix on "Outlines of Judaism" by Rabbi Wise.

Proceedings of Third Annual Meet-ing, 1870. 50 cents. Contains essays by O. B. Frothingham on the "Ides of the Free Religious Association," followed by addresses by D. A. Wasson on "The Nature of Beligion," by Mrs. E. D. Cheney on "Re-ligion as a Social Force, especially in rela-tion to Philanthropy and Reform," and by F. E. Abbot on "The Fature of Beligious Organization, as affected by the Spirit of the Age;" an essay by Samuel John the Age," an essay of samuel contact of "The Natural Sympathy of Beligions," fol-lowed by Rabbi Wise on "The Fermanni and Progressive Elements of Judaism," by and Progressive Elements of Junami, by T. W. Eligginson on "Mohammedianiam," by Wm. H. Channing on "The Religions of Chins," and Wm. J. Potier on "Religion Old and New in India;" also abstrate of a discussion on "The Bible in the Public Schools," by Thos. Vickers, S. R. Calthrop, Rabbi Wise, and others.

Proceedings of Fifth Annual Meci-ing, 1873. Scents. (Four or mote, M cents each.) Contains ceasys by J. W. Chadwick on "Liberty and the Church in America," by C. D. B. Mills on "Religion & the Expression of a Permanent Sentiment of the Human Mind," and by C. B. Freiingham on "The Religion of Humanity," with addresses by Rowland Connor, Cells Burleigh, Lucretis Mott, A. B. Alcott, C. A. Bartol, Horace Seaver, Alexander Loos, and others.

Proceedings of Sixth Annual Meet-ing, 1873. 35 cents. (Four or more, 25 cents each.) Contains essays by Samuel Johnson on "Freedom in Religion," and by Johnson on "Freedom in Keligion," and by John Welss on "Religion in Freedom," with addresses by Wm. C. Gannett, Robert Dals Owen, T. W. Higginson, Samuel Longfel-low, J. S. Thomson, F. E. Abbot, and Lucretia Mott.

Sympathy of Religions, by T. W. Higginson. 25 cent

Rollgions of China, by Wm. B. Chan-ning. 25 cents.

Beason and Revelation, by William J. Potter, 10 cents,

Faration of Church Property, by Jas. Parton. 10 cents, singly; package of ten, 60 cents; of one hundred, $3.

These publications are for sale at the office of the Free Religious Association, No. 1 Tramont Place, Boston. The Annual Reports for 1868 and 1671 cannot be supplied, and the supply of others previous to that of 1872 is quite limited. Orders by mail may be addressed either "Free Religious Association, No. 1 Tremont Place, Boston," or to the Secretary, New Bedford, Mass.

WM. J. POTTER, Sec. F. R. A.

TTTT -YL 16, 1874.

	TITE IN DEX -	JULY 16,
POPULAR BOOKS.	Historical Inter
SENT BY MAIL	a suborcal Fietures Retouched; s Volume "" Mineellanies In two parts. Part I., "The Lifes, Joures, and Fancies" " The Lifes, Joures, and Fancies" a Practical Illustration of "Woman" Rights to Labor" DAEWING Order. 10	V. The Study of Sociology Spancer, Esq. VI. The New Chemistry.
PUBLISHERS' PRICES!	The Descent of Man. 1 yola	VII. The Conservation of Er four Stewart, with an Ap
ORDERS PROMPTLY FILLED.	The Variation of Animals and Plants under	VIII. Animal Locomotion; Swimming, and Flying, with
NO EXTRA CHARGE FOR POSTAGE.	DESCARTES (RENE.) Discurse on the Method of Rightly conducting the Resson and Septing Truth in the Sciences	JERBOLD (DOUGLAS). Fired
ANY BOOK in the subjoined List, or any other	Fools. A Study	JOHNSON'S (SAMUEL) Orles
ORTAINABLE BOOK that may be desired, will be forwarded as promply as possible on reould of orders accompanied with the CASH.	comprising -	Jowephus, the Jewish Histori JOWETT. The Dialognes of 1
Orders are respectfully solicited from all friends of THE INDEX.	Silas Marner and Scenes of Clerical Life. The Same, Library Edition, 2 vols	lated into English, with Analy ductions by B. Jowett, M.J. Ballioi College, Oxford, and fessor of Greek. Four vols.
ALCOTT (A. BRONSON). Tablets 1.50	The Spanish Grpsy. 1.2 How Lins Loved the King. 1.5 How Lins Loved the King. 1.5 EMERSON'S (E. W.) Essays. First Barles. 2.9 Easays. Second Series. 2.0 Miacellanice. 2.0	Patriotic, Sentimental and H
Concord Days. 1.50 Records of a School. A new edition 1.50 ALCOTT (LOUISA M). Little Women. Two
Fornital Sketches and Camp and Fireside	Representative Mon	LEGGE'S Confucius' Life and Confucius and Chinese Class
Biories 1.60 An Old-Fashloned Girl. 1.50 Little Men 1.50 My Boys, do. 1.60	Poems, Blue and Gold	LESSING'S (G. E.) Nathan the lated by Ellen Frothingham
My Boys, &c. 1.00 Shawi-Burger Work: A Story of Experience	EVANS (E. P., Ph. D). Pirst Electrical Transformations of Christianity, From the French of Athanase Coquers! the	LEWES' Physiology of Commo Biographical History of Phil its Origin in Greece down i Day, 7 vois Problems of Life and Mind, tions of a Crowd
ADVOLD'S (MATTHEW) Essays in Criti-	the French of Athanase Coquerel the Younger The Life and Works of Gotthold Enhysics	Day. 2 vois Problems of Life and Mind. tions of a Creed cism	Younger and Works of Gotthold Ephraim Lessing. Transisted from the German of Adolf Stahr. 2 vols	LEWES (G. H.) The Story of (
AUKRBACH (BERTHOLD). On the Heights. 1.20 Villa Eden; The Country-House on the Bhine	in reference to the Christian Religion 2.00	LEWIN (REV. RAPHAEL, D'C) dalam ? or, a Faw Words to th LONGFELLOW'S (E. W.) Poer
German Tales	FEUERBACH (LUDWIG.) The Essence of Christianity. "George Eliot's" transistion. 1.09 FISKE'S (JOHN) Myths and Myth-Makers., 2.00	2 vols Prose Works. Portrait
BACON'S Empre. 1.00 BAGEHOT on the English Constitution 2.25 Physics and Politics	FROTHINGRAM (O. R.) Reliden of W-	LOWELL'S (J. R.) Poems. 2 vo The Biglow Papers. First Se The Biglow Papers. Second Among my Books
BAIN (ALEXANDER). Mental Science: A	manity 1.60 the Unbollevers 1.60 Beliefs of the Unbollevers	Among my Books. My Study Windows. LOWELL (MES. A. C.) Posiss
Philosophy	FULLER'S (MARGARET) Complete Works, including Memoirs by Emerson, Channing, and others. A new edition. 6 vols	LUBBOCK (SIR JOHN). Origi tion, and the Primitive Condi Pre-historic Times
Hon. 1 vol 5.80 BARTLETT'S Dictionary of Americaniams. 3.50	GALTON (FRANCIS.) Hereditary Genius. An inquiry into its Laws and Conse-	LYELL'S Principles of Geology Elements of Geology
BARTLETT'S Familiar Quotations 3.00 BARTOL (REV. C. A). Badical Problems 2.00	Quences	MACDONALD (GEORGE.) Daughter
BARTOL(REV.C.A), Radical Problems2.00 The Rising Faith	GOETHE'S Faust. Translated into English Verse by Bayard Taylor. 2 vols. Per vol 5.00 Elective Affinities. 22 Wilhelm Meister. Translated by Thormas Carlyle, Fortrait of Goethe. 2 vols	MANN (HORACE). The Lift Mann. By his Wife Lectures and Annual Reports
		Annual Reports on Education 1848 Thoughts Selected from the Horace Mann
Records, Arguments, and Decision in the case of John D. Minor et al. es, the Board of Education of the city of Cincinnai: d al. in the Supreme Court of the City of Continuent	GREG'S (W. R.) Enigmas of Life	MARTINEAU (JAMES.) Essay ical and Theological. 2 vols. The New Affinities of Faith .
Chechnast	GROTE'S LIFE. Compiled from Family Doc- uments, Private Menoranda, and Original Letters to and from Various Friends. By Mrs. Grote. Second Edition. With Por-	The New Admittee of Faith . MAURICE (REV. F. D.) The Object of Hope for Mankind.
against the use of the Bible	LTHIE	MERIVALE'S (CHARLES) C
BRACKETT (ANNA C.) The Education of American Girls.	BAMERTON (PHILIP G.) A Painter s Camp. Bools I. In England. Book II. In Scotland. Book III. In France. 1.50 Thoughts about Art. 200	the Boman Empire Conversion of the Northern M MILL (JOHN STUART.) Diss
BROOKS' (CHARLES T.) Translations. The Layman's Breviary	Thoughts about Art. 2.00 The Unknown River. 6.00 The Intellectual Life. 2.00 Chapters on Animais. 4.00	Discussions, 4 vols., each The Eramination of the Phili William Hamilton. 2 vols., The Positive Philosophy of Au Political Economy. New and the positive Philosophy of Social Science, New and
BUECHNER'S Force and Matter	HAMILTON (GAIL). Child World. Part Sec- ond	Political Economy, New and tion
BUCKLE (HENBY THOMAS). History of Civilization in England and France, Spain and Scotland. New edition of the entire work, with a complete index. 2 vola	BAMTLTON'S Lectures. 1. Metaphysical Lectures	tion. The Subjection of Women Basay on Liberty Representative Government. Autoblography Memorial Volume. His Life a work, with a complete index. 2 vols 6.00 CARLYLE'S Works. Cheap edition. Compris-	HAWTHORNE'S (NATHANIEL) Works,	Memorial Volume. His Life a MILLER (JOAQUIN.) Songs of Songs of the Sun Lands
OABLYLE'S Works, Cheap edition. Compris- ing the following: Miscellaneous Essays, 7 rols.; Fronch Revolation, 3 vols.; Preder- lek the Great, 4 vols.; (Drouwell's Letters, 4c., 3 vols.; Bartor Resartus, 1 vol.; John Strilig.; 1 vol.; Life of Schiller, 1 vol.; John Strilig.; 1 vol.; Life of Schiller, 1 vol.; John Strilig.; 1 vol.; Life of Schiller, 1 vol.; John And Present, 1 vol.; Heroes and Hero Wor- ship, 1 vol.; Life of Schiller, 1 vol.; Lon- don, 1871-3. Per vol	Per vol. 2.00 Twice-Told Tales. Mosses from an Old Manse. The Scarlet Lotter, and The Blithedale Romance.	MIVART (ST. GEO.) On the Species
Starting, I vol.; Life of Schiller, I vol.; Past and Present, I vol.; Heroes and Hero Wor- able, I vol.; Action Day Parmolate, I vol.	The House of the Seven Oables, and The	MORLEY (PROF. JOHN.) Volt Rousseau, 2 vols
Any volume sold separately. Il vols. Lon- don, 1871-3. Per vol	Snow Image. The Marble Faun. The English Note-Books.	MOULTON (LOUISE CHAND Time Stories
CARPENTER (D.R. W. B.) The Principles of Mentai Physiology, with their Applica- tions to the Training and Discipline of the Mind, and the Study of its Morbid Condi-	The French and Italian Note-Books. Our Old Home, and Septimins Felton.	MUELLER (MAX, M.A.) Lect Science of Language. First S The Same. Second Series Chips from a German Works
tions	BIGGINSON'S (T. W.) Out-Door Papers 1.50 Malbone. An Oldport Bomance	Essays on the Science of Be II. Essays on Mythology, and Customs. Vol. III. Es
CHANNING (WM. ELLERT, D.D.). The Per-	Oldport Days 2.50	erature, Biography and Three vols, Price per volum Lectures on the Science of Rei
nem's omenning	HOWELLS'S (WILLIAM D.) Their Wed- ding Journey	NASBY (PETROLEUM V). Swi the Cirkle
OHANNING (WM. BLLERY). Thoreas; The FostNeturalist. With Memorial Yorse. 2.08 OHENRY (MES. E. D). Patience. A Series of Thirty Games for the Fireade	A Chance Acqualatance	NEWMAN (FBANCIS W.) A H
	HUGO'S (V.) New Novel, " 'Ninety-Three" 1.75 HUMBOLDT (ALEXANDER VON). Life of.	NEWMAN (FBANCIS W.) A H. Hebrew Monarchy. Phases of Faith; or, Passage History of my Greed The Soul, its Sorrows and its A Catholic Union: Easays toward of the Future, as the Org Philandbrow.
CLAREP (JAMES FREEMAN) Tan Great	Translated from the German. 2 vola., with three portraits	Catholic Union: Essays toward of the Future, as the Orga Philanthropy
Common-Sense in Religion	BUNT'S (MRS. HELEN). Verses	Philantbropy Theiam, Doctrinal and Practic The Religious Weakness of Pr Against Hero-Making in Religi
OLARKE (Dr. E. H.) Ser in Education, 1.25 CLODD (EDWARD). The Childhood of the World	HUXLEY'S Man's Place in Nature	PARKER (THEODORE.) A D
World	A Manual of the Anatomy of Vertebrated	Matters Fertaining to Beligion Speeches, Addressee, and Occ mons. 3 vols. Additional Speeches, Addressee nional Sermons. 7 vols Critical and Miscetlaneous Wri Bistoric Americans Franklin too, Adams, and Jofferson. Broduction by Kav. O. D. Broduction by Kav. O. D. Horderton of a Speech for Assingtion of a Speech for Assingtion of a Speech for Assingtion of a Speech for Christiana Colobratic and MDCCCLY. A Christman
The Religious Demands of the Age	Animals	Critical and Miscellaneous Wri Historic Americans, -Franklin ton, Adams, and Jefferson,
CORPT A TON - 40	Songe of Seven 2.00	The Trial of Theodore Parker demeanor of a Speech in F
DORBELATION and Conservation of Forces: 1 A Series of Expeditions by Grove, Hain- boits, Mayor, Farday, Idebig and Carpen- ies: with an Instance in by Edward L. Youmans, M.D. Vol.	lige	The two Christmas Celebratic and MDCCCLV. A Christma
JULTURE DEMANDED BY MODERN	Series	and the Finite
Masson Lucil, Faraday, Spencer, Draper,	Poor Matt; or, The Clouded Intellect	PHELPS'S (ELIZABE'II STU. Gates Ajar. The Trotty Book Men, Women, and Ghosts
	Rivers, Ice, and Giaciars. By John Tyn- dail II. Physics and Politics; or, Thoughts on	The Silent Partner
ALL (MRS. CAROLINE H). The College, the Market, and the Court; or, Woman's Relation to Education, Employment, and Ottaemahly	dail	What to Wear ? PROCTEE'S (ADELAIDE A.) Po trait. Cabinet Edition

	017
ods. By Dr. Edward Smith 1.70 ad and Body. The Theories of	PROCTOR (RICHARD A.) Other Worlds
ods. By Dr. Edward Smith 1.72 nd and Body. The Theories of Relations. By Alex. Baia 1.86 Study of Sociology. By Herbert ar. Eag	Researches, With Column the e New Chemistry, By Josish B	Light Science for Leisure Hours. A Series of Familiar Essays on Scientific Bubjecta
. J. . J. . J.	Natural Phenomena
Detrine	Natural riefformena
aloronautics. By J. Bell Pettigrew. 1.76	oto the state of the state of a state of the
Maudaley, M.D 1.80	The Expanse of Heaven
D (DOUGLAS). Fireside Saints, Mr. Breakfast Talk, and other Papers. 1.56	BOSSETTI (CERISTINA G.) A Shadow of Dante
N'S (SAMUEL) Oriental Religions, ir Relation to Universal Religion.	Application to Terrestrial Subalysis, in its
Anterbarenesses and an anterbare and an and an and the state of the st	Bodies Lio
US. The whole Works of Flavius is, the Jewish Historian	SCIENCE PRIMERS: 1. Introductory. By Prof. Huxley, F.R.S
o English, with Analysis and Intro-	3. Physics. By Balfour Stewart. With il- lustrations to English, with Analysis and Intro- s by B. Jowett, M.A., Master of Colloge, Oxford, and Regius Pro- if Greek. Four vols	4. Physical Geography. By Archibald Gei- kie, LL.D., F.R.S., fortble cloth
RPHEUS C). Versatilities, Poems, c, Sentimental and Humprous 3.00	1 to Tar being rovers, 20 vols
W. E. H.) History of the Rise and	Jesus. Second Edition 2.00
W. E. H.) History of the Rise and te of the Spirit of Rationalism in 2 vola
Charlamagne. 2 vols 6.00	Plant Defectable and rayaical
Confucius' Life and Teachings 4.00 us and Chinese Classics	Essay: Moral, Political, and Estbelic
'S (G. E.) Nathan the Wise. Trans- y Ellen Frothingham 1.30	set to munum mappiness specified, and
Physiology of Common Life. 2 vole. 3.90	The Principles of Riology. 2 vols
Physiology of Common Life. 2 vois. 3.00 hical History of Philosophy, from gin in Greece down to the Present 2 vois	The Principles of Physhology, 2 vols and the second sec
3. H.) The Story of Goethe's Life. 1.30	SPINOZA (BENEDICT DE.) Tractatus The-
Rev. RAPHAEL, D'C). What is Ju- or, a Faw Words to the Jews 1.00	Life, Correspondence and Ethics
LLOW'S (E. W.) Poems. Portrait. 6.00 erks. Portrait	STOWE (HARRIET BEECHER.) Pink and White Tyranny
8 (J. R.) Poems. 2 vols	STRATTER (D. P.) The Old Palat and the ow Papers. Second Series 1.50	New Life of Jesus, Authorized transla- tion. 2 vola
	TAINE'S (H. A.) Bistory of English Liters-
(SIR JOHN). Origin of Civiliza-	TAINE'S (H. A.) History of English Litera- ture 1 vols The Class-Room Taine. History of English Literature. Abridged and Edited by John Piske. 2,00
the Primitive Condition of Man. 2.00 oric Times 5.00	Plake
Principles of Geology. 2 vols 8.00 s of Geology	THACKERAY'S (W. M.) Novels, Household
ALD (GEOBGE.) The Vicar's	THACKERAY'S (W. M.) Novels. Household Edition. Complete in 8 rolumes. Fer vol 1.25- The News. Adventures of Philip. Pendonois.
ORACE). The Life of Horace By his Wife	Adventures of Philip, Pendennis, seports on Education, from 1849 to	The Virginians. Esmond, and Loyal the Widower.
a Selected from the Writings of Mann	Barond, and Lovel the Widower. Miscellaneous Writings. Household Edi- tion. Uniform with the Novels. Com- plete th 5 vols. With new Portrait. Per vol. 1.28
AU (JAMES.) Essays, Philosoph-
AU (JAMES.) Essays, Philosoph- Theological. 2 vols. Per vol 2.50 Affinities of Faith	making it, with the novel, the cheapest and most
(REV. F. D.) The Ground and Hope for Mankind	<ol> <li>Barry Lyndon, Hoggnrty Diamond, &amp;c.</li> <li>Paris, and Irish Skeich-Books, &amp;c.</li> <li>Gous, Eketchon, Denis Durai, &amp;c.</li> <li>Gous, Eketchon, Denis Durai, &amp;c.</li> <li>Catherine, C. Humoriss, &amp;c.</li> <li>Catherine, C. Humoriss, and Unre- printed Piezes.</li> </ol>
B'S (CHARLES) Conversion of an Empire	<ol> <li>Snobs, Sketches, Denis Duvai, &amp;c.</li> <li>Four Georges, Humorists, &amp;c.</li> </ol>
IN STUART   Dissartations and nination of the Philosophy of Sir	THAXTER'S (MBS. CELIA) Among the Islee of Shoals
a Hamilton. 2 vols., each	THOREAU'S (H. D.) Walden; or, Life in 2.00 action of Warman 165	the Woods
tative Government	Cape Cod. 1.00 Cape Cod. 2.00 A Yankee in Canada. 2.00 A Week on the Concord and Merriman Rivers. 2.00
I VOIDER. DIS LITS MILL WOLES, I.V	A Week on the Concord and Merrimac Rivers
JOAQUIN.) Songs of the Sierras. 1.50 the Sun Lands	TYLOR (EDWARD B.) The Early History
(ST. GEO.) On the Genesis of 1.75	of Mankind. 2.00 Primitive Culture. 2 vola. 5.00 TYNDALL (JOHN). Faraday as a Discov-
PROF. JOHN.) Voltaire	Brer
(LOUISE CHANDLER.) Bed-	ple 2.00 Light and Electricity 2.00 Hours of Exercises in the Alps 2.00 Hest as a Mode of Motion 2.00 Ou Sound 2.00
(MAX, M.A.) Lectures on the f Language, First Series 2.50	Hours of Exercise in the Alpe
a. Second Series	Badiant Heat. 5.00 Forms of Water. 1.50
166 (MAX, M.A.) Lectures on the f Language. First Series	Hesi aa a Mode of Motion
Biography and Antiquities.	TYTLER (BARAH.) Old Masters and their on the Science of Religion 2.00 ETROLEUM V). Swingin' Round	Pictures om Kentucky	VOYSEY (REV. CHARLES.) The Sling and the Stone. Vois I, and V., such (FBANCIS W.) A History of the ionarchy freed and the state of my treed and the state state of the state of th	Vols III. IV. and VI., each of my Creed	WARNER'S (OFARLES D.) My Summer in Its Serrows and its Aspirations 2,00 Julon: Essays towards a Church Future, as the Ormanization of	s Garden propy 1.75 Doctrinal and Practical	WEISS (JOHN.) American Bellgion 1.50 Life of Theodore Parker. 2 vols 5.00
ero-Making in Religion	WHIPPLE'S (E. P.) Literature and Life 1.50 Easys and Reviews
THEODORE.) A Discourse of	WHIPPLE'S (E. P.) Literature and Lifs 1.50 Easays and Reviews
Addresses, and Occasional Ser-	Success and its Conditions
ertaining to Heligon	WHITNEY'S (MES. A. D. T.) A Summer in Lealie Goldthwaite's Life
Americans, Franklin, Washing- ims, and Jefferzon. With an In-	We Girls: A Home Story on by Rev. O. B. Frothingham 1.30 of Theodore Parker for the Mis- or of a Speech in Fanentil Hall	Real Polits 1.50 The Other Girls 2.00 Pansies. A volume of Poems
Kidnapping; with the Defence 1.50 Christmas Celebrations,-A.D. I.	WHITTIER'S (JOHN G.) Poems. 2 vols 4,00 Chuld Life 3,00
CCCLV. A Christmas Story60 (THEOPHILUS.) The Infinite
nite Loy	ADDRESS
(ELIZABEIH STUART.) The 5 Book
	THE INDEX,
Partuer

mont Place, Bo 1 Tre

ems. Por- 2.00

one,	STUDENTS FITTED for any	BOSTON LIBERAL LEAGUE.	A CHEAP OFFER!
Ten trat-	Please address	Our organization some time since decided to di-	A COMPLETE SET of INDEX TRACTS,
lo.	Meriden, Conn.	rect its efforts for the present towards socuring	a set of propayment of 76 CERTS.
R.	CONSTANT EMPLOYMENT At home, male or female, 540 a week war- ranted. No capital required. Particulars franted. Address, address	the	No. 1 Tremont Place, Boston, Mass
Sen- b by and	ranted. No capital required. Failures, and valuable sample sent free. Address, with six-cent return stamp. C. ROSS, Williameburg, N. Y.	Repeal of the Laws	THE AMERICAN EDITION
ceipt	FREE DISCUSSION	whereby church and other corporate property is	40
ón.	FREE DISCUSSION	unjustly exempted from its share of the burden of taration.	MONCURE D. CONWATS
RS!	I held at HOSPITALLER HALL, 63 Washing- ton Street, Bouton, every Sunday, at 10% A.M., 3% and 7% F.M. All interests of manking consti- rolitical, and focts for discussion. THE INDEX and Index Tracts are for sale every Sunday at	As a means to this end, we have published for	SACRED ANTHOLOGY,
	Political, and Social interests of mainting constru- tute the subjects for discussion. THE INDEX	general circulation several thousand copies of a	A BOOK OF ETHNICAL SCRIPTURES, tute the subjects for discussion. This folds and index Tracts are for asle every Sunday at Hospitaller Hall.	TRACT	has just been published, and will be sent postpaid on receipt of the price, $4.00.
ach,	WEST NEWTON ENGLISH		Address THE INDEX
De.	W AND CLASSICAL SCHOOL The twenty- first school year of this Family and Day School, FOB BOTR SEXES, will begin Wednes-	on Church Exemption, being the article by Mr.	1 THEMOST PLACE, Boston, Mass.
	day, September 16, 1874. For particulars address NATH'L T. ALLEN, Principal,	Abbot which appeared in THE INDEX of Nov. 27. The edition was made as large as our funds	G. L. HENDERSON & CO.,
	West Newton, Mass. At home Saturdays.	would allow; but, so great has been the demand,	BANKEBS,
1	TO NEWSPAPER	It is already nearly exhausted. Our next edition ought to be large enough to	LEROY, MINN.
-	PUBLISHERS.	place a copy in the hands of	Money invested on short time, or for a term of years, on unincumbered improved
'S	- 17, 2, 2, 2, 22, 2, 2, 2, 1, 1, 1, 1, 1, 1, 1, 1, 1, 1, 1, 1, 1,	EVERY VOTER IN THE STATE,	payable semi-annually. Perfect title and
	Having conveniences for doing the best of newspaper printing at reasonable prices, 1 should like to contract for composition alone,		terms of years, on unincumbered improved farms, at 12 per cent. interest per anoun payable semi-annually. Perfect title and ample security guaranteed. All stypense for abstract of title and recording morigage has by borrower. We collect and remit to any part of the United States free of charge.
ES	or for composition, press-work, and maning,	and generously to supply the calls for them in other States.	part of the United States free of charge.
	Best of references given, and satisfactory work guaranteed. GEO. H. ELLIS, 7 Tremont Place, Boston.	To do this, we need funds; for, although we	REFERENCES First National Bank, Mo- Gregor, Iowa; First National Bank, Austin Minn.; Milwaukee National Bank, Austin Mine, City National Bank, Milwan- kee, Wis, City National Bank, Milwan-
Por-		have made arrangements for printing the Tract at very low cost, it is impossible for the Boston	Allen, Stevens & Co., Bankers, New Var
	A measured at the sector list of POPIL-	League, with its various other expenses, to bear	city i morris Artman.
mer-	LAE BOOKS on the opposite side of this page, Any OBTAINABLE BOOK NOT IN THIS LIST will be furnished to order.	the entire expense alone. Will not, then,	REAL ESTATE SECURITIES, paying 8 to 10 per cent. interest, or hich th.			Investments in Real Estate in Chings
his-	chase English, German, or French Books, or who wish for information as to the price, &c.,	All Friends of the Movement	if judiciously made, are the best and estant ages	of any American or Foreign Book, can have their orders promply filled and their inqui- ries answered by addressing THE INDEX,		modes of employing capital. The old oete,	THE INDEX, 1 Tremont Place, Boston.	come forward and help us with liberal donations ? We frequently receive communications from	Real Estate and Loan Agency
ches.	BOUND VOLUMES OF THE	parties wishing tracts to distribute, saking how	ERNST PRUSSING, 145 RANDOLPH BIRLEY
	Bound volumes of THE INDEX for 1871,	much they shall pay. To such we reply that the cost to us is about $2.50 per thousand, and we	Chicago (Established 1853),
on.	1872, and 1873, will be sent by express (at the purchaser's expense) on receipt of $2.50, $2	shall be pleased to furnish them at this price par	Guarantees perfect title and ample security in all its Real Estate Loans.
S	busy and busy and object of supervised at the set of supervised at the supervised of the set of supervised at the set of	thousand, or 30 cents per hundred, to all who will circulate them. But all additional donations will	Firstclass securities always on hand. In- terest and principal collected without charge. Real Estate Investments made on commission
	Interest, and will furnish as instructive read-	be gratefully received for the purpose of circu- ating them gratuitously throughout the country.	Orders of capitalists and real setate owning twenty years hence as to-day. No more valuable present could be made to a friend	To many of the subscribers of THE INDEX	ers respectfully solicited.
Con- roas- Mar-	struggling out of Orthodoxy than one of these volumes. Address THE INDEX,	and others whose names have been furnished us as probable friends of the movement, copies of	REASONS FOR USING THE ther, Mil-	1 Tremont Place, Boston.	the Tract, together with Fetitions asking the re-	EUREKA SPOOL SILK.
r, F. Elias	WARBEN'S	peal of the Exemption Laws, have been cent,	CONCAN SPOUL SILA.
, Lu- ush- mer- ham,	TRUE CIVILIZATION. Price 50 cents.	With the Hope	It is full length. It is full size. It is smooth and elastic, and is equally adapted to hand or machine use.
any	PRACTICAL DETAILS.	that such friends will try to secure as many sig-	Many kinds of spool silk are a perfect
11."	showing the workings of the	natures to the petition as possible in their locality We respectfully ask those who are unable to at-	fraud, being not only shorter in length, but a much finer size than they are represented
20	COST PRINCIPLE.	tend to the matter themselves to place the peti-	to be, and of so poor a quality as to be unit for use. The ladies will always find the Eu-
orice	Price 25 cents.	tions in the hands of those who will. Let us	reks Silk exactly as represented. Every spool is warranted, and the manufacturer's on.	For sale by		name indelibly branded on every spool. Call
F	S. H. MORSE, 95 Bromfield St., Boston.	HOLL UP THE LIST!	for it.
611	NEW SINGING BOOKS!	Let our unlied voices be heard ! And let it be	RADICAL AND LITERABY
	THE LEADER!!	done NOW! We would say, also that we feel deeply the	LECTUBES qui-	INE LEADER !! By E. B. PALMER, assisted by L. O. EMKESON.	need of	BY rtist tion cun-	Choirs, Conventions, and Singing Classes will welcome this new Church Music-Book.	Other Orest the	JOHN WEISS, lines	filled with new tunes, anthems, chants, etc., etc., all of the best quality.	Other Organizations	이 이 이 아이 프로그램이 하다.
his his h E.	Price $1.28, or $19.00 per Dozen.	in this State, to cooperate with us in securing	RADICAL LECTURES.
are	The Song Monarch!!	equality and justice, by pressing the "Demands of Liberalism." If, in any locality, there are	The idea of Hereafter. An Act of Faith.
his to	By H. E. PALMER, assisted by L. O. EMERSON. Especially for Binging Classes. First 86	those who are inclined to	Intelligence in Religion. Beligion and Solence.
and	Especially for Binging Classes. First 86 pages contain the elementary course, the same as that in the LEADER, which course is followed by more than 100 pages filled with	Form a Tibert	Heart in Beligion ning	the most interesting Secular and Sacred Mu- sic for practice. Equal to the Song King in	Form a Liberal League,	SHAKSPEARIAN LECTURES.
ars; n of ght"	Price 75 cts., or $7.50 per dozen.	we are ready to render such assistance as lice in	FIRST SERIES.
gfel-	AMERICAN	our power.	1. Cause of Laughter.
rker	School Music Readers.	LIPEPALO	2. Irony and Humor. 8. Dogberry, Malvolio, Bottom, Touchsteins.
over	Three carefully graded Song Books for Com- mon Schools, by L. O. EMERSON and W. S. TILDEN.	LIBERALSI	4. Ajax in Trollus and Cressida: The Por- ter in Macbeth: The Fool in Lear.
d be.	Book 1st. For Primary Schools. Price 35 cts. Book 2d. For Lower "Grammar" Classes.	If all will units and work, the results sought	5. Falstaff.
nish, 11 is	Book 3d. For Higher "Grammar" Classes.	can be accomplianed	6. Hamlet. SECOND SERIES.
ukee Iden	Price 60 cts. The Course is easy, progressive, interest- ing, and has been thoroughly tested in schools	an dibas	1. The Women of Shakepeare. 2. Portia.
plas-	near Boston.	BOSTON LIBERAL LEAGUE,	3. Ophelia.
n, $1	OLIVER DITSON & CO.,		4. Maobeth and Lady Maobeth. 5. " " " "
fifty	DOPTON. CHAS. E. DITSON & CO.,	NO. 1 TREMONT PLACE, BOSTON. Par order of the	8. Contrast in Shakapeare's Characters. Address JOHN WEISS,
6 8.	711 BROADWAY, NEW YORK.	ERECUTIVE COMMITTEE,	ME. Brookline St., Boston.

Google

THE INDEX -- JULY 16, 1874.

NONPAREIL Farm Feed, Bo Drog, and Hand-grinding MILLS. Sizes. Also Cotton-Seed Hullers. Illus ed pamphiets free. Address SEDGEBEER, SHEPARD & MILLER 181 East Front Street, Cincinnati, Oh CHARLES SUMNE

348

A fine likeness of Massachusetts great ator, tae copy of a recent Photograph Black, is for sale at THE INDEX office, will be sentby mail to any address on rec of the price-fifty conts. Address THE INDEX

THE INDEX I Tremont Place, Bost

SAVE FIFTY DOLLAR

THE NEW FLORENCE.

PRICE, $20 below | any other Fi VALUE, $30 above | class Sew'g M SAVED, $50 by buying the Floren

> Every machine warranted. Special terms to clubs and dealers. Send for circulars to the Florence S. M. Co., Florence, Mass., or 178 Washington Street, Boston, Mass CHARLES SUMNER GREAT WORK.

PROPHETIC VOIC CONCERNING AMERICA.

By CHARLES SUMMES. Fine Edition, Tinted Paper, with Steel trait, Crown Svo., Cloth extra, $2.

trait, crown geo., clost alla, geo Aside from its literary and historical i its, this volume has a special interest, i the fact that it was the hast work on w Mr. Summer was engaged before bis dea "Paoprartic Voices" will be found of g value to all who take an interest in the tory of our country, so full is it of pass in which the unexampled prosperity of in which the unstampled prosperity of land has been foretoid by philosophers, pr statesmen, and orators, of whom the lam ed author has also given interesting alcot Sent, post-paid, on receipt of price. Address THE INDEX No. 1 Tremont Place, Bost

CHAPTER

FROM The Bible of the Ages. FOURTEEN CHAPTERS.

FOURTEEN CHAPTERS. Selected from Hindu Vedas, Buddha, d fucius, Egyptian Divine Pymander, Zor ter, Talmuds, Bible, Flato, Pythagoras, J cus Aurelius, Epictotus, Al Koran, Lui Scandinavian Eddas, Henan, Taliesin, ton, Penn, Adam Clarke, Mary Fletches W. Newman, Tyndall, Max Muller, F Hicks, Channing, Garrison, H. C. Wright, Hicks, Channing, Garrison, H. C. Wright, son, Denton, Tutile, Abbot, Frothing and others. Gospels and Inspirations from ma and others. Gospels and Inspirations from m Centuries and Peoples. "Slowly the Bible of the race is writ, Each age, each kindred, adds a verse to Edited and Compiled by GILES B. STEBBINS.

Four hundred pages; bound in cloth; ; $1.50. No Extra Charge for Postage Address No. 1 Tree INDE2 No. 1 Tremont Place, Bost υ S т B 0 THEODORE PARKER SIDNEY H. MORSE.

Dignity, reverence, sweetness, rigor, e poise, breathe through the clay; the a has so filled his own heart with apprecia of that noble life that he has been able mingly to mould it into those delicate 1 which the character had wrought on the ling fibre. We are tempted to exclaim, a stand beside it, as the old artist did to perfected work, "Speak then !"-Harma Stevenson.

Stevenson. All the characteristics of my husband in the buat, -his greatness, his goodness, benderness, his love. You cannot give lif olay or marble; but you can represent it, this Mr. Morne has done.-Lydda D. Park Hannah E. Stevenson. The eyes, though but of clay, are glean with possible indignation, with possible to the lips are set firm with the resolution him who, like Paul, could "fight a good fig as well as "give a reason."-Samuel Lon-low.

ne. The first time I have seen Theodors Pa ince he died.— Wm. Sparrell.

The best representation of Mr. Parker succuted in clay.—Boston Dasily Globe. The face is strong and noble as it shoul. The likeness is good.—Boston Datly Advert

Nothing appears for beauty alone, or fit or to show the vanity of the artist. A forgotten in the man-the true, real, Ya man, Theodore Parker.-L. S. H. in the Ge

Copies of this Bust, finely finished n p ter, $10 each. Boxing for transportation catra. Freight or aspressage paid by p sending order. Weight of box about pounds. Orders may be sont to B. H. MORSE Boom 13, 25 Bromfield St., Boston, Ma

Three Dollars a Year.

LIBERTY AND LIGHT.

Single Copies Seven Cents.

VOLUME 5.

BOSTON, MASS., THURSDAY, JULY 23, 1874.

WHOLE NO. 239.

ORGANIZE!

THE DEMANDS OF LIBERALISM.

I. We demand that churches and other ecclesisation property shall no longer be arempt from just taxation. 2. We demand that the employment of chapitains in Con-gress, in State Legislatures, in the navy and millita, and in prisons, asylums, and all other institutions supported by public money, shall be discontinued.

3. We demand that all public appropriations for educa-tional and charitable institutions of a sectarian character shall cease.

shall cease. 4. We demand that all religious services now sustained by the government shall be abolished; and especially that the use of the Bible in the public schools, whether ostensi-bly as a text-book or a wowedly as a book of religious wor-ship, shall be prohibited.

ship, shall be prohibited.
b. We demand that the appointment, by the President of the United States or by the Governors of the various States, of all religious festivals and fasts shall wholly cease.
c. We demand that the judicial oath in the courts and in all other departments of the government shall be aboliahed, and that simple affirmation under the pains and penalties of penjury shall be established in its stead.
f. We demand that all laws directly or indirectly enforce-ing the observance of Sunday as the Babbath shall be re-pealed.

ing the observance of ridually as the observant periperiod.
& We demand that all laws looking to the enforcement of vChristian" morality shall be abrogated, and that all laws aball be conformed to the requirements of natural morality, equal rights, and impartial liberty.
9. We demand that not only in the Constitutions of the United States and of the several States, but also in the variant state of a state of the same, no privilege or advantage shall be conceded to Christianity or any other special rights; that our entire political system shall be founded and administered on a purely secular basis; and that whatever changes shall prove necessary to this end shall be consistently, undinchingly, and promptly made.

A FORM OF LOCAL OBGANIZATION.

Fhereas, It is our profound conviction that the safety of republican institutions is imperflued, the safety of civili-sation impeded, and the most sacred rights of man in-fringed, by the least interference of the State in matters of religion; and religion; and Whereas, Certain grave inconsistencies with the general spiri of the United States Constitution still mark the prac-ical administration of our political system, threatening the perpenity of religious liberty, the existence of free public schools, and the peace and prosperity of the ontire land; THEREFORM, We, the undersigued, hereby associate our-selves together under the following

ABTICLES OF AGREEMENT.

ARTICLES OF AGREEMENT. Art. 1.—The name of this Association shall be THE LIB-ter and the second s and right. ART. 4.—Buch measures shall be adopted for raising funds for the League as shall be prescribed in the By-Laws by a ivo-thirds vote of the members. ART. 5.—Any person may become a member of the League by subscribing his or her name to these Articles of Agree-ment.

seed. Arr. 5.-The Officers of the League shall be a President, a Vice President, a Secretary, a Treasurer, and an Execu-tive Committee of three members; and their duties shall be those commonly pertaining to these offices. The President and Secretary shall be ex-officie delegates to the National Convention of Liberal Leagues when called together. Air. 7.-These Articles of Agreement may be amended by a three-fourths vote of the members present at any reg-diat meeting, provided due notice of the proposed amend-ment shall have been sent to every member at least two weeks previous to such meeting.

So far as I am concerned, the above is the platform of THE INDEX. I believe in it without reserve; I believe that it will yet be accepted universally by the American people, It will yet be accepted universally by the American people, as the only platform consistent with religious liberty. A Liberal League ought to be formed to carry out its princi-ples wherever half a dosen earnest and resolute Liberals can be got together. Being convinced that the movement to secure compliance with these just "Demands" must a means of turthering it; and I ask the assistance and active co-operation of every man and every woman who be-lisres in t. Muitiply Liberal Leagues everywhere, and re-port promptly the names of thair Presidents and Secre-taries, intolerance and bigotry will tremble in proportion as that list grows. If freedom, justice, and reason are right, let their organized voice be heard like the sound of man waters.

TRANCIS &. ABBOT, Editor. BOSTON, BOPL 1, 1873.

For List of Liberal Lengues, see next page. RELIGIOUS FREEDOM AMENDMENT:

PROPOSED AS A SUBSTITUTE FOR THE FIRST AMENDMENT TO THE UNITED STATES CON-STITUTION.

ABTICLE 1.

ARTICLE 1. SECTION 1.—CONGRESS SHAll make no law respecting an as-sablishment of religion, or favoring any particular form of the people senceably to assemble and to petition the Gov-ernment for a redress of grievances. SECTION 2.—NO State shall make any law respecting an stablishment of religion, or favoring any particular form of religion, or prohibiliting the free cuercies thereof; or stablishment of religion, or favoring any particular form of religion, or prohibiliting the free cuercies thereof; religion of prohibiliting the free cuercies thereof; or stablishment of religion, or favoring any particular form of religion, or prohibiliting the free cuercies thereof; or stablishment of a redress of grievances. No religious a qualification to any office or public trust, in any State; and no person shall ever in any State be deprived of any of the so ther rights, privileges, or capacities, or disqualified or the performance of any public or private duty, or ren-dered incompetent to give evidence in any court of law or requirity, in consequence of any public or private duty, or ren-dered incompetent to give avidence in any court of law of the subject of religion. Barons 3.—Congrees. The subject of the presence of any subject of religion.

NOTES AND COMMENTS.

BY A. W. O.

GEORGE WILLIAM CURTIS is nominated by the New York Tribune as United States Senator, from New York, to succeed R. E. Fenton. It is certainly a nomination fit to be made.

WE HAVE BEARD several excellent citizens of Rhode Island express the wish that Col. Higginson might be elected to the United States Senate from that State, in place of Mr. Sprague whose term soon expires.

IN THE CRISIS which is on the Unitarian Denomina. tion, Dr. Bartol's trumpet gives no uncertain sound,-as may be known by reading his communication in another part of this paper.

MR. BEECHER explains that "Christianity takes us out of the leading strings of times, and seasons, and rites, and bids us walk in liberty, using our own faculties." Well, if Christianity does that, we have no quarrel with it. Mr. Beecher's Christianity, no doubt, does; but is he sure that the Christianity of the Christian Church does this?

REV. SAMUEL LONGFELLOW has been preaching for several Sundays in Baraboo, Wisconsin. A correspond-ent writing from there, says: "We are enjoying Mr. Longfellow's visit here very much, but are at a loss to know what we shall do when he leaves us." We hope some other man, or woman, next as good, may succe Mr. Longfellow at Baraboo, and give our friends there a living gospel.

WE THINK that many readers of THE LYDEX will agree with us, that the essay of Mr. Frothingham, in this num-ber-entitled "Tide Levels"—is a most inspiring one. It breathes a deep spirit of hope of man, of faith in human progress. It inculcates a large patience with the slow process of evolution, a broad charity for every human short-coming and imperfection. We may also say that we find Mr. Frothingham, in his article on "Organization," expressing our own views almost to completion. Another view, however, is expressed by Mr. Holland, in the department of "Communications," which will doubtless better please some others.

OUR NEIGHBORS the Congregationalists, in their handsome building opposite THE INDEX office, on Beacon Street, have some fine show-windows, in which they keep on exhibition their elegant books and pictures Although disliking some of their doctrines, we do not neglect the opportunity to regale our eyes with the sight of whatever is beautiful which they have to display. The other day we saw a queer combination of prints in their window. The centre piece was the picture of some red-headed, sanguinary-looking game-cocks in the attl-tude of competing for the field; just above was a gilded card bearing the motto, "Be gentle unto all;" just below was a picture of a woman clinging to the cross; while at the left was another picture of the Christ-child. We could but admire the striking contrasts which the ingenuity of our neighbors contrived to exhibit, albeit we wondered a little if they equally endorsed all the lessons conveyed thereby to the innocent spectator

THE FREE RELIGIOUS SOCIETY of Providence, R. L. recently had a very pleasant Picnic, which, in some sort, was the termination of their season of lectures, that has been so successful. The Picnic was held on the grounds of Mrs. Elizabeth B. Chace, in Valley Fails, near Providence. The "exercises" consisted in luxurions longing on green grass under shady trees, delightful strolling on great grass under snady trees, delighting strolling and chatting, a most appetising lunch in the green woods, and some capital after-dinner speeches by mem-bers of the Society; who proved that they not only can be intelligent auditors of others, but accellent talkers themselves. It was our privilege to be present on this occasion, and we know whereof we speak. The Society has had nineteen lectures during the sesson; and will resums its meetings next fail. In the meanine, it holds occasional meetings, which are addressed by its own members. We wish many other places might follow the example of Providence, and inaugurate free religious Sunday meetings.

ONE WHO has just been reading Plato's Banquet asks: "Why do we not have such talks now-s-days?" We suppose the chief reason is that we have no Plato now, and no Socrates. And yet we can remember, in the early and palmy days of the First Badical Club, having heard some talks among its members, which at least re-minded us of the conversations between the Athenian sage and his friends. Emerson, Alcott, Bartol, Wasson, Welas, Higginson, Mrs. Choney, and others were no mean substitutes for the old Greek conversationalists; and we can imagine that, in the circle which Margaret Fuller used to draw around her, there was much high talk on high themes. For a truly great and memorable conversation, it is required, not merely that great minds should be present, but sincere, candid, patient truthscelars, who shall speak as they are inspired, without prejudice, without fear, without haste, without self-ref-orance. In such a quiet circle, the truth comes oftener and fuller to view than on the platform, or in the public convention.

Among the memorable events which occurred in the year 1774, was the discovery of oxygen by Dr. Joseph Priestley, It is well known that Dr. Priestley spent the later years of his eventful life in this country, living, and dying, in the town of Northumberland in Pennsylvania. It is proposed, in commemmoration of the remarkable discovery by Dr. Priestley, as well as of his own not less remarkable character as a man, to have a reunion of American chemists in Northumberland, on the 31st of July, for mutual exchange of ideas and observations, and for fostering a feeling of fraternity among the mem-bers of the profession. Addresses and essays will be de-livered and read, a "loan exhibition" will be held for the display of apparatus, books, manuscripts, and so forth, belonging to Dr. Priestley, and of objects illustrating the history of chemistry; and a social time generally will be indulged in. Arrangements are already completed for this reunion, and it promises to be a very successful affair.

"Nonquitt" is the name of a new sea-side resort, which is located about six miles below New Bedford. It is reached by land, or by water, from New Bedford, and is one of the most delightfully natural and charmingly beantiful places we ever visited by the sea-coast. Aside from the uncommon natural attractions of the place itself, its social peculiarity is that it is possessed and occupied almost exclusively by radicals, who most numer-ously hall from Rev. Mr. Potter's Society, in New Bedford. They have bought over five hundred acres of land at Nonquitt, which they have laid out into house-lots, and upon which they have projected many improvements. We do not suppose that this radical summer community would not suppose that this rankat summer commuty would refuse, by any means, to receive good, moral Orthodox people; and yet, in their social character, they cannot help making it, as it really is, especially attractive to radically-inclined persons. We passed a very pleasant Sunday at Nonquitt, quite recently; and our pleasant was so great while there, that it seemed to us that we had found the "promised land" spoken of in Scripture,which, no doubt, was intended by the Lord to be occupied mainly by radicals! ____

LIST OF LIBERAL LEAGUES

ST. LOUIS, MO.-M. A. McCord, President; P. A. Lafgreen, L. La Grille, Scoretarics. BORTON, MASS.-F. E. Abbot, President; J. P. Titcomb, G. A. Bacon, Scoretarics. JEFFERSON, OHIO.-W. H. Crowell, President; A. Giddings, Econolistic, Control Science, Control Sc Secretary. Bas Joss, Cal.-A. J. Spencer, President; J. L. Hatch, Secretary. Beoretary. TOLEDO, LOWA .- J. Reedy, President; E. S. Bookley, Secre-tary. TAFJ. N. J. - John Gage, President; Sue M. Clute, Becretary. JUNCTION FULLE, NEB.-J. W. Eastman, President; B. L. Easley, Secretary. OLATHE, MAX.-S. B. S. Wilson, President; H. A. Griffin, Secretary. oretary. Roll, Mion.-W. B. Hill, President; A. T. Garretz cretary. DETE Secretary. BRENEVILLE, MICH. - A. G. Eastman, President; F. R. Knowles, Socretary. Osciola, MO.-R. F. Thompson, President; M. Roderick, Secretary. B. F. Thompson, President; M. Roderick, Barrs, ME.-F. G. Barker, President; C. Rhodes, Secretary, Buntar, Wis.-President, J. D. Walters; Secretary, E. H. Bridgman. WAMENOTON, D.C.-Gauter Bridgman. WASHINGTON, D.C.-George M. Wood, President; J. E. Orawford, Secretary. Ausoran, Ozno.-John Fish, President; G. W. Barnes, Treas-MINNEAPOLIS, MINN .- President, J. B. Bassett; Socretary, Anton Grethen. NEW YORK, N.Y.-J. B. Brown, President; D. M. Bennett, Secretary. Fr. Joserff, Mo.-P. V. Wise, President; T. H. Kennedy, ST. JOSEFH, MO.-P. V. Wise, President; T. H. Kennedy, Becretary.
 Ear CLAIRE, WIS.-President, S. J. Dickson; Secretary, W. Kennedy.
 BALESC, IND.-President, T. Gray; Secretary, W. Allen.
 NEW ORLEARS, LA.-President, E. Vorster; Secretary, J. E. Wallace.
 BAY CITY, MICH.-President, S. M. Green; Secretary, S. M. Johnson. CLEARFIELD, PA.-S. Widemire, President; H. Hoover, Secretary.

[For THE INDEX.]

Tide Levels. BY O. B. FROTHINGHAM.

<text><section-header><text><text>

seem futile; the course of existence a pilgrimage over wastes of sand. Except to those who trust in the saving grace of the Church,—that reservation must be borne in mind. From the consequences of the doctrine of depravity there is always this one occap—true CHURCH. The members of the Church avoid the curse and the doom. They are safe, and they are guided. Their minds are anightened; their feelings are purified; their deeds are just. They have found in the wilderness the deli-tion dates, the sparkling fountains, the grateful she ripe dates, the sparkling fountains, the grateful hade of the palms, the soft grass, the music of fal-ing water. The blistering sands no longer scorely, builder is weakness; inside is faith, outside is deceily, disinterestedness, heroism, outside is poltroonery, hard-heartedness, heroism, outside is the abundan harvest of goodness, outside are the husts fit for the wine to east. This is the theory, and a good deal of ingenuity is spent in the effort to bend facts to it. The common ecclesiastical opinion is merciful to the churchman and harsh to the schismatic. The be-liever is credited with every virtue; the "infidel" is suspected of every vice. It is thought a large, and by some a dangerous, liberality to utter that a sceptic may be a good man; and so it is, for the admission renounces the whole theory which claims that good-ness is a supernatural grace, communicated through the sacraments and credences, and, of course, with-held from those by whom the sacraments are neglect-ed, and the credences denied. If a church member commits a fault, it is palliated, excused, explained away. David was not a good man: he was a seducer, a traitor, and an assassin; but, as a pillar of the Jew-ish church, he was charitably credited with the soul of goodness, and declared to be a man "after God's own heart," in spite of his incidental wickedness. Mr. R. W. Emerson, a man of stainless character and irreproachable life, innocent and humane, is a ration-alist. His excellence, therefore, is challenged. A undas Iscariot. This rough, undiscerning, unscrupulous standard of judgment's acted on where the ballef in denenting

Dida Incariot.
This rough, undicerning, unscruppious standard of judgment is acted on where the belief in depravity is repudiated. We detect its presence in miscellancous masses of opinion. As the churchman's hope of society rises and falls with the supparent increase or diminution of his own communion, the safety of the human race being staked on the fortunes of his own ark, which, as the only properly built and duly commissioned vessel, will alone outlive the tempest, and land the children of God on terra firma, or, going down, will carry to the bottom every form of promise, on the politician, reformer, social theoriet, is certain that the elect are in his organization, and that, outside of it, all are simpletone or knaves. The saint becomes a sinner on leaving the carp; the sinner who enters it is alnted. Each party-organ reviles the leaders of the opposing clan—the very same men, perhaps, whom it had accredited wilh every virtue once,—and actois to the skies the moral qualities of its opecial fuglemen, whom it had, under different ircumstances, overwheimed with abuse. To be on our side is to be of the regenerate; to be on the other side, or on no side, is to be of the regrest of the opposite. All are loss are the few who have succeeded in reaching my deck. The country is ruined, unless my prescription is taken. A genileman once, with tragic face, announced to me his intention of investing his funds in foreign escurities, and living abroad, if Mr. Greeley was choesen President; and the should do so if he was not. This is the old doctrine of human deparavity in a new form; the doctrine of general distribution is the societ of other parchading are they that the lower confident that their church is to be accepted, their device to be approved; the desponding are they that be compared averting a syntex retering the indeparity, and the should do so if he mean on the should be accepted to helice former y secular. It is plain that this ancient fiction of natural deparity in the feet course is any

<text>

manning Google

tows de force. Thousands of sweet-souled Hebrews were growing on the same soil, mellowing in the same sun, softening and expanding in the same air with him. The same sap was in their veins; the same in-tellectual currents flowed through their minds; the same great national emotions throbbed in their hearts; the same tides of conviction rose and fell in their consciences; the same dews of grace fell upon the soil of their souls,—but in his case there was an unknown something that made all these influences singularly operative; a peculiar receptivity, perhaps, a writness of apprehension, a facility of retention and combination, a glft at extracting essences, a spiritual reproductiveness as it were, that rendered him a mar-rel while the others remained no extraordinary men. Bat such rare combinations are not to be expected, or planned for, or forciold. They are not to be counted in the averages. They show the sudden possibilities of the human elements, but they do not exhibit the normal standard; they do not mark the line of solid attainment. The rising tide will sometimes throw a jet of spiray to the green top of a crag fifty feet show the ocean level, but the high-water mark is never overpased. The the natural order of development, perfect men which a single eminent saint has touched, but at the point which the great multitude of ordinary men and women have scarcely reached,—a point of course very much lower, but also very much deeper and more strongly marked. We cannot fairly require that sill mankind shall be on a level with some picked and exaited soul; that all professing Christians shall be brethren of Jesus; that all politicians shall be rivals of Washington; that all reformers shall match Gar-rison; that all radicals in religion shall be peers of Parker and Emerson. We measure the ocean, not some separate wave.

rison; that all radicals in religion shall be peers of Parker and Emerson. We measure the ocean, not some separate way. This is the ground of strong and deep satisfaction. It is easy to find fault with things as they are; the ability to find fault shows gain in the perception of virtue. It is easy to dream of things as they ought to be; the power of so dreaming implies a clearer vision. But the real question is: Does the moral tide rise? Is conviction stronger? Is feeling more sensi-tive? It is easing the properties the source of the that it is. To argue such a point is superfluous. The moment our immediate sensations cases to tyr-annize over us, we become aware of enormous gains. But we are the victims of our immediate sensations. At the watering-place, where I spent a portion of the summer, nothing indicated a high state of civili-ration. There were no books; conversation was triv-ial; pursults were idle; sven amusements were iname. The men iounged the hours away. The women were absorbed in the consideration of dress. The crown of ladyhood there made it the end and aim of here existence to dress four times a day, and present her-self to the admiration of here worshippers. It was not elevated; it was hardly worthy of elegant people, the pillars and ornaments of the social world; but they were amiable, affable, pleasant. There was a time when such as these me to plot indecency and mature scandal. Innocence is better than malevo-lence. lence they were amiable, affable, pleasant. There was a time when such as these met to plot indecency and mature scandal. Innocence is better than malevo-lence. Many admirable minds received a shock when a favorite opera singer chose to be married in West-minster Abbey, and drew thither crowds of festive people, in the brightness of summer array, with flowers and jewels, converting the solemn fane into a fashionable saloon. It seemed a singular triumph of worldliness, a strange audacity of the pleasure-sekers, an appailing want of decorum, almost an implety, for these gandy creatures of the sumshine to take possession of the most impressive shrine in Lon-don, to break the silence of those awful memo-rices by the twitterings of their curiosity, and trip in their satin slippers over the floors be-neath which sleeps the dust of kings and queens, of conqueerors and herces in war, of statesmen, phi-lauthropiats, poets, philosophers, who had glorified history, built up society, enlightened and elevated mankind. But all the ashes buried there is not holy. There are monuments there to men and women with whom the pretty songstress and her lovely friends would, were they alive, hold no intercourse, from shame; men and women whose works are a soil on ilterature, whose lives were a scandal to decency, whose characters were a reproach to goodness. Con-greve is there, one of the most corrupt playwrights of a corrupt generation; St. Everemond is there, the wicked French wit; Chiffinch is there, the odious payers and opera singers would reluse to tread the boarde. The grey old Abbey, that opened its doors to the bridal party and the wedding gnests, would close then strongly now to such as these. The generation that buried in its most glorious church men like the fnamous Villers, descrated the fane a thousand times more than did the generation that wedded there an innocent girl, whose aim was to furnish a charm-ing recreation to ber fellow-creatures. The popular playwright boasts of his immense for-time singe to the house w osophy are prized more and more, and the sage's best word finds hearing across the continent, is the glory of the time. This most successful playwright laughs at the idea that the stage is an educator, or has any noble call, or important influence. Its place, he says, is not to instruct, or edify, but simply to amuse. And for this purpose the silliest plays are the best. The the-atrical world applauds and pays for trash. A terrible confession of decrepitude and decadence, some will masion of the drama. But it is something that the trash is harmless. It was not always so; it is not now everywhere so. Innocence, though of the weak-set and silliest, is a step out of indecency. The peo-ple who will not respond to high-flown sentiments, and go to sleep under fine moralities, stay away from the bestalities of a coarset time. Our politics are cheap and base; the party organs are vulgar; reckless vituperation and abuse seem to characterize them all. Was there ever so much scan-dal and falsehood? It seems so because we are in the midt of it. As compared with the politics of an earlier day, ours are genite and humanizing. When Washington and Adams were the candidates— men whose names we honor, whose characters we re-segain, —personalities reached a pitch of ferocity that would shame our meanest partisan. If our papers tell lies they feel bound to establish them. The war is, after all, a war of words; the mud does not stick; and when the strife is over the great humanities are found to be rather strengthened than impaired. Intemperance is said to be apreading among the were such wear and tear of organization as now, never so much craving of stimulant to repair the waste and keep up the fagging powers; but it is certainly decreasing among the comfortable, inteill-gent, refined, and responsible. It is doubted wheth-er there was ever a time in the history of the world when there was so much groes intemperance as there is at present. But in the history of the world there was never a time when so many were temperate on principle, when intemperance had so little control over the ruling brain and conscience of communities. The tailest heads are above the surface of that deep. Pauperism is an awful danger-wice is a fearful peril; crime is as yet an unmanageable power. But these evils are noted and studied, and all the intelli-gent and moral force there is bends itself with ut-most energy to comprehend, limit, and remove them. Atheism was never so wide-spread, but atheism was never so humble, reverential, or kind. Materialism was never so thoughtful, delicate, or sensi-tive. It makes all the difference whether we are facing Tailant was hever so thoughtful, dendate, or sensi-tive. It makes all the difference whether we are facing one point or another. Two men may be precisely on a line, but if they are moving in opposite directions their position is by no means the same. The one may be facing the night, the other may be fronting the day. Admit the worst facts, accept the reading of the Calvinist, allow the truth of the pessimist's pict-ure, the question is: How do we face? A re we going into evil, or coming out of it? Are we sinking or as-cending? It is our privilege to believe that we are ascending. This single fact of interpretation puts a new aspect on the world. In the mere circumstance of believing that evil is crudeness not depravity; the effect of immaturity, not the result of fall; that we are outgrowing it, not sinking under it, --there is majestic power.

The second secon scionsness

year a larger area of the Rock of Ages is rescued from the borrid abyss of chaos, this is a transporting con-sciousness. There is solid ground of satisfaction in the assur-ance that we may trust our new order of beliefs; that our paradise is not behind us but before; that our savior beckons us from the future; that our best Script-ures are yet unwritten; that the true is our friend; that the law of predestination presses us forward in-stead of pushing us down; that the law of solidarity in the race, which the theologian used to drag the whole line of mankind into the chasm into which datm slipped, is a law that makesmankind a unit for deliverance and not a unit for doom. There is boundless cheer in the conviction that we are have confidence in a new order of moral senti-ments; that the heart can open itself to the morning light; that we may have done with slighings over a lost estate, with regrete, remorses, humillations, per-tential confessions of sin, bitter groanings over de-partity, frantic cries for mercy and redemption; that we can bravely commit ourselves to the grandest hu-man qualities, self-respect, self-culture, self-reliance, intro the dest, but seeing it accrue to the benefit of these that are to come after us. There is endless inspiration in hope. A bright hope makes the desrifest present tolerable. The pli-grim on the way to Jernsalem, passing through the Valley of Baca, found it a well, with pools of rain. The pligrim to a nobler city hears the widerness sing, and the solitary place rejoice, as he goes on from strength to strength.

THINTY-EIGHT years ago, Abner Kneeland, the founder of the Boston Investigator, an infidel paper, still published there, was convicted of blasphemy in a Massachusetts court, and sent to prison for uttering these words: "The Universalists believe in a God which I do not, but I believe that their God (aside from Nature) is only a chimera of their own imagina-tion." Dr. Channing saw clearly, as many men more Orthodor than he did, also, that this attempt to pun-ish a man for nttering his opinions was not only con-trary to the fundamental principles of American liberty, but at war with the spirit of Christianity, and adapted to bring it into reproach; and by his efforts and those of other good men, Mr. Kneeland was speedily liberated. For sught that we can remember, the statute under which Mr. Kneeland was created to be also the woold on the store of the emains unrepealed to this day; but any attempt to enforce it against those now holding his view would excite the scorn of the whole community. We have found a better way to oppose infidelity than to fine and imprison its champions. The Protestant world is farther from Rome than it was thirty-sight years ago.—Christian Union.

manning Google

THE CHRISTIAN PROGRESS OF A GEN-

(Extracts from a Discourse by Rev. Rufus Ellis, D.D., printed in the "Unitarian Review and Religious Magazine" for July.)

<text>

<text><text>

besittingly received, and only wonders that with uch a persuation they can asy, as so many of them did, that the dead rise to did, that the dead rise to did, that the dead rise to did by the distingth of the did by the distingth of the distingth of the distingth distingth distingth of the distingth of the distingth of the distingth distingth of the distingth of the distingth of the distingth distingth of the distingth of the distingth of the distingth distingth of the distingth of the distingth of the distingth distingth of the distingth of the distingth of the distingth distingth of the distingth of the distingth of the distingth distingth of the distingth of the distingth of the distingth distingth of the distingth of the distingth of the distingth distingth of the distingth of the distingth of the distingth distingth of the distingth of the distingth of the distingth distingth of the distingth of the distingth of the distingth distingth

III. I find yet another gain in the necessity which is laid upon us in our religious times to accept our maining of the our soulds and our world. We are coming to a more intelligent and deeper apprehension of the old teaching that God took upon himself, not simply the nature of one man a teast the beginning of the consummation of that deepen in the nature of all men; our nature. It was a teast the beginning of the consummation of that deepen in purpose which runs through the age, lawish and Gentile alike—only in the Jewish dispersation more complexously,—so wondrously hidden at the deepen of the consummation of the teaching which runs through the age, and it is the Lord's day evermore. We understand Chieta the Lord's the a failure when it is comes and which is never to be retraced, a continuous failer, within a few months of the Lord's ministry, but as a step forward and upward in the education of man, which is never to be retraced, a continuous fais in the Church. Our religion is the mind of Christ in was the perfect light. Our relight was in Jeaus, the worl is in the Church. Our religion is the mind of Christ in the transcendent way a consciounces of God way, and the be old succed dialogue between God it must find, not serven sacraments only, but serven way still seeking to she down with him in heavenly intege arthly to become the beread and the whe age. It is a resure boy to be complexed the specifies the statistory to note. This a state of a divine life. "It is a line of light threading the age. The sace share the consumine of the age. Statistory to note that our chief and more range are to have retride the an were the individe the individe the individe the set and the distore of the set and the man of a regulation which him the set. This a streame of a regulation with a state of a state of the flate on the set and the set of the set with him the set of the draw and the set or every the prophetery and more the set of the s

IT CAN SCARCELT be regarded as a part of the "eternal fitness of things" to express approval of what is said in church with "three cheers and a tiger." Yet it happened recently in Ireland. During high mass in the little church at Glentariff, three ladies of the Protestant faith were obliged to take shelter there from a heavy shower. The officiating priest, knowing who they were, and wishing to be respectful to them, stooped down to his attendant, who was on his knees, and whispered, "Three chairs for the Protestant ladies." The man, who was rather ignorant, stood up and shouted, "Three cheers for the Protestant ladies." which were given with a hearty good will by the congregation, while the poor priest stood dumbfounded. It will happen so some-times.-Harper's Magazine.

THE LONDON Saturday Review discusses "Singu-larity" in its customary philosophic spirit, and reaches this rather conventional result: "Any kind of singularity implies of necessity a certain discharge of vital force. The wheels of life run smoothly just in proportion as we are ready to take a large number of things for granted, and to accept established con-ventions for no other reason than that they are estab-lished. As soon as anybody acts on principles pecul-iar to himself, even in the smallest trifles, a certain amount of friction is set up, and frequently a dispro-portionate waste of thought and temper."

A GENTLEMAN late one evening met his servant. "Hallo! where are you going at this time of night?-for no good, I'll warrant!" "I was going for you, sir."

THERE IS A vegetarian hymn-book in existence, in which one hymn begins :--"Mest-esters, did ye only know What torments ye inflict."

TRUE AND FALSE CONSCIENCE.

shall not prevail against her, and not to each indi-vidual Christian." That is true Catholic doctrine; nor can we bring purselves to believe very heartily in the existence of New York priest in good standing, "a learned and oner, claiming to deny in good faith the authority of he teaching Church, that he could not, in his capaci-oner, claiming to deny in good faith the authority of he teaching Church, that he could not, in his capaci-oner, claiming to deny in good faith the suthority of he teaching Church, that he could not be lost." Such iteacher would have been much more likely to in-ulire by what process the voice of that right con-cience which speaks to all the baptized, and even to hose who, being beyond the reach of the eacraments, are been careful never to disobey the dictates of the aw which is written in the hearts of all men, had sen overpowered and silenced. Those who have ot the law, asys the Apostle Paul, "are a law unto hemselves." But with auct a person, the anony-lous priest of THE INDEX had not to do, but with ne baptized and reared in the Church, and amenable o her authority. Such a person should have known hat to wilfully entertain and yield to donbts concerning the dogmas of the faith is to commit mortal sin; and should have known, also, that it is impossible in the state of mortal sin to "love the supreme good." "Without faith," says St. Faul, "it is impossible to please God," and hence, to love Him.—Catholic Re-view. June 20 view, June 30.

JOHN STERLING FACING DEATH.

JOHN STERLING FACING DEATH. Seeing how it was, then, Sterling earnestly gath-ared all his strength to do this last act of his tragedy, an andu manner. As I believe, we can say he did, few men, in any time, more ploualy or manfully. For about situ months he sai looking steadfastly, at all moments, into the eyes of death; he, too, who had yer to see death, and the terrors, and eternities; and aurely it was with perfect courses and plety, and val-ant simplicity of heart, that he bore himself, and did, more terrible than the usual death of men. All strength left to him he still employed in working; day bd ay the end came nearer, but day by day, also, some new portion of his adjustments was completed; by some small stage his task was nearer done. . . He till even wrote a good deal. To his eldest boy, who had mored to the Maurices since the beginning of or nine weeks, a letter. These letters I have lately read; they give, beyond any he has written, a noble mange of the intrinsic Sterling. One little excerpt, not the best, but the fittest for its neighborhood here. "My dear Boy,..... It seems as If, in some france way, London were a part of me, or I of Lon-dons, and confusion, but as something silent, grand, and confusion, but as s dust, and confusion, but as something silent, grand, and everlasting. "When I fancy how you are walking in the same streets, and moving along the same river, that I nsed to watch so intently, as if in a dream, when younger than you are, -I could gladly burst into tears, not of grief, but with a feeling that there is no name for. Everything is so wonderful, great, and holy, so sad and yet not bitter, so full of death, and so bordering on Heaven. Can you understand anything of this? If you can, you will begin to know what a serious matter our life is; how unworthy and stupid it is to trific it away without heed; what a wretched, insig-nificant, worthless creature any one comes to be, who does not as soon as possible bend his whole strength, as in stringing a stiff bow, to doing whatever task lies first before him." One other letter I must give:--

One other letter I must give :--

One other letter I must give;--"My dear Carlyle,-For the first time for many months, it seems possible to send you a few words; mersily, however, for remembrance and farewell. On higher matters, there is nothing to say. I tread the common road into the great darkness, without any thought of fear, and with very much of hope. Cer-tainty, indeed, I have none. With regard to you and me I cannot begin to write; having nothing for it but to keep shut the lid of those secrets with all the iron weights that are in my power. Towards me it is still more true than towards England, that no man has been and done like you. Heaven bless you! If I can lend a hand when rinking, that will not be want-ing. It is all very strange, but not one hundredth part so and as it seems to the standers-by. "Your wife knows my mind towards her, and will believe it without asseverations." "Yours to the last, "JOHN STERLING." It was a bright Sunday morning when this letter

"JOHN STERLING." It was a bright Sunday morning when this letter came to me; if in the great cathedral of immensity I did no worship that day, the fault surely was my own. Sterling affectionately refused to see me; which also was kind and wise. And four days before his death, there are some stanzas of verse for me-written as if in star-fire aid immortal tears,-which are among my sacred possessions, to be kept for my-self alone. His bunkness with the sould

His business with the world was done: the one His business with the world was done; the one business now to await silently what may lie in other grander worlds. "God is great," he was wont to say: "God is great." The Maurices were now constantly near him; Mrs. Maurice assiduously watching over him. ... One evening, suddenly, about eleven o'clock, there came a summons and alarm; ... and, in a short while more, the faint last struggle was ended; and all those struggles and strenuous, often-folled endeavors of eight-and-thirty years lay hushed in death.—From Carlyle's "Life of John Stering."

It is a custom with the English House of Lords that the youngest of the prelates offers up prayers. Once an old Bishop of Durham, learned and lazy, lounged into the House, when, being the only mem-ber of the episcopate present, he was invited to per-form the easy office of chaplain. Disgusted, he re-treated and thus explained his injury to an in-going peer: "No young bishops there! Hang 'em! do they think that I am going to do their dirty work for 'em? Not I, sit I not I," Familiarity had brought contempt with a vengeance. He had come to regard prayer as common, routine work, only fit for inferior parsons.

A DARKEY WAS ONCE attempting to steal a goose, but a dog raised an objection, and Sambo retired. The next night, during a thunder shower, he at-tempted it again, and just as he was on the point of getting away with the fowl, the lightning struck close by, and the noise nearly frightened the poor fellow to death. Dropping the goose, he started away, mutter-ing, "Peers to me der am a mighty lot of fuse msde 'bout a common goose."

Hoetry.

JAMIE'S FABLE.

BY MISS E. N. BATHEWAY,

AUNTY: sure; amie, what has happened to you? Tell me where you have been so long, see your apron, so solled and torn! I fear my boy has been doing wrong. Se

JAMES :

- (Antr: I was only playing out in the yard, Building some houses all in a row, And a bear walked through the garden gate, And said "Good-morning !" growling just so.
- He tore this hole with his paw, I guesa; And I struck him then with a great big stick! I almost broke his back, I s'pect, For I tell you, Aunty, he went off quick.

AUNTY:

Justry: Jamie, look at Maggie's new doll, With her rosy chosks and bright blue eyes. What do you think should be done to her If she should speak and tell naughty lies?

AMR: If Dolly should over tell naughty lies, Her head abould be out right off, I think! What do you b'lieve is's stuffed with? say. My knife would do it quick as a wink!

AUNTT:

user: And what should be done to a little boy Who tolk his sunt a story so wild? No bear could say "Good-morning!" to you, Then why do you talk in this way, my child?

JAMIE:

AMORY: Don't you 'member the other day You read me a story about some bears? And they talked together like anything, And slept in some beds, and sat up in chairs.

AUNTY: But Jamie, that was a fable I read; I told you then that it wasn't true.

JAMIE: Well, Aunty, that's the matter with this: My bear is a fable story too.

-The Independent.

NEW SUBSCRIPTIONS TO INDEX STOCK.

Mrs. F. W. Christern, No.
The starte working 110	w York City,	One sh	are,	$100
Bichard B. Westbrook, So	nman, Pa.		- 64	100
	lwaukee, Wis.	Two		300
	eton, Mass.	One		100
Chas. W. Story, Bo	ston, Mass.		44	100
	troit, Mich.	Five	- 44	500
Jacob Hoffner, Cu	mminsville, O.	One		108
John Weiss, Bo	ston, Mass.		44	100
W. C. Russel, Ith	aca, N. Y.	44		100
A. W. Leggett, De	trolt, Mich.	- 64	44	100
B. F. Dyer, Bo	ston, Mass.	44		100
James Purinton, Ly	DD, MASS.		64	100
	well, Mass.	-64	44	100
J. S. Palmer, Po	rtland, Me.	44	-14	100
Robt. Ormiston, Br	ooklyn, N.Y.		44	100
Mrs. A. L. Richmond, Lo	well, Mass.	44	- 14	100
Mrs. Benj. Ireson, Ly	nn, Mass.	44	44	100
J. E. Oliver, Ith	IRCA, N.Y.		-	100
E. H. Aldrich, Pr	ovidence, R.I.		14	100
	ovidence, R.I.	- 88		100
W. M. Jackson, Pr	ovidence, B.1.	Two	44	200
	lley Falls, R.I.	"	54	100
L.F. Garvin, Lo	nsdale, B.I.	One		100
James Damon, Ip	swich, Mass.	11	-84	100
	ovidence, R.I.			100

OASH BECEIPTS.

FOR THE WEEK ENDING JULY 18. Nina Moore, $3.28; John D. White, $2; Fred. Ebell, $1.60; J. R. Kawley, $5.00; C. A. Day, $3; A. J. Davis, $1.60; J. C. Delano, $3; John Carleton, $2; J. B. Gray, $1.60; J. C. Delano, $3; John Carleton, $2; J. B. Gray, $1.60; H. L. Houghton, $1; J. Petters, $3; L. Adams, $1.75; H. Ledbet-ter, $3; W. B. Studiey, $3; W. B. Sawyer, 75 eta.; Rob't G. Titoomb, $3; Anton Brasach, $1; Wm. Gardner, $3; H. Kindervater, $3; J. Tinney, $1.60; J. F. Müller, $3; D. Miller, $3; O. D. Van Yechten, $2; John W. Stewart, $3; Samuel Cole, $3; American News Co, $60; E. F. Blisdell, $3; Fred. Miller, $3; Carl Doerflinger, $1.66; L. M. Fatter-son, 60 ets.; N. Littledield, 20 ets.; A. A. Fatrick, 50 ets. N. B.-Please ramit by post-office money-order, by regis-bered leiter, or by draft on Boston or New York. Checks on interior banks are liable to discount, and the term of subscription will be proportionally shortened in the credit. N. B.-Orders for Tracts or single numbers of Ture Is-berwhen inde to the same amount without further notice. M. B.-Poetage on Twe INDEX is five cents per quarter, heating to mercedin to the first number, availatin and the sterm son the first number of the first number.

erwise filled to the same amount without further notice. N. B.-Fostage on THE INDEX is five cents per quarter, dating from receipt of the first number, payable in ad-vance at the place of delivery. All receipts of cash will be acknowledged as above, and no other receipt sent unless specially requested. Parsons who do not see their remittances acknowledged within three weeks after sending, will please notify us. N. B.-When writing about a former remittance, always give the date of such remittances as exactly as possible. N. B.-Please examine the ADDRESS and DATE on your INDEX mail-tag, and report at once any error in either.

SUNDAY LECTURES.—The Editors of THE INDEX will lecture occasionally on Sundays, if desired, within a convenient distance of Boston.

PARAGRAPHS.

-----

THE LEADERS of French Protestantism, Nicholas, Réville, Coquerel, and others, have begun a new monthly, the Revue Progressive. For twenty frances a year one will get a great deal of free religious thought, and historic criticism of the Orthodox thought and of the Bible, besides discussions of literature, and art, and politics.

THE IRISH UNITARIANS have lately been in hot debate whether or not their Associations shall fill orders for theistic works, like Theodore Parker's. In the "Society for the Diffusion of Knowledge," the country conservatives carried the day—or rather the night, for the struggle lasted into the small hours. In the Northern Sunday School Association, the Belfast liberals, after a similar struggle, decided the other way; and the defeated party talk about secession.

THE COUNTRY PICNIC for the poor children of large cities is the way last evolved to love your neighbor as yourself, in July. Already one or two humble experiments betoken what the next variety will be,the providing of cheap country-homes where at least a few of the overstrained women of the workshop, the convalescents of the tenement-house, the oldfaced city bables, can have a longer chance than a single summer's day to test the virtue of green fields and clean, strong air. Some one in the Unitarian Review has just been writing earnestly about it. Let "Wayside Homes of Rest," she urges, be established. A few rich people, or two or three churches, might together buy a roomy, sunny house, a few miles out of town, inland or near the sea, with land attached for garden, and a patch of woods,-the whole, with simple furniture, costing from four to seven thousand dollars. A matron with two or more assistants would be needed, but much of the light work could be done by the inmates. The visite thither should be free to some, and paid for in part by others. This is the season at which to "talk up" the idea against another year, and find the house Many a girl for herself, many a mother for an ailing child, or a band of relatives for some feeble one of their number, would be able and glad to pay two or three dollars a week for a fortnight or a month of such country freshening. Many a happy, well-to-do family, escaping to the seaside or the mountains for a long vacation, would gladly give up a few of their rides to save the means by which a poorer friend might visit such a "Rest." Promise a country-fortnight as a prize to the best five children in a public school, who would otherwise spend the hot, long season among the bricks, and take their country on the door-step. Or If you object to stirring rivalries, ask the teacher to tell you whom to send. Your family doctor will be only too thankful to name you three or four from among his poorer patients. Persons yet better off would, perhaps, furnish a free-room for the season, or a church might thus look after its unmonied invalids, or a group of neighbors living in a block of "freestone fronts" could combine to do so. Who will start it? Pass the idea round, you friends in the country boarding-houses.

A LITTLE BOOK comes to us from some Dutch Liberals, through an English translator—The Bible for Young People,—for which a good word should be spoken in THE INDEX. The Bible holds many selfcontradictions, and absurdities, and cruelties, but the very fact that they are so plain makes it hardly worth the while to spend one's time in picking them out and arranging them in lists: "Three hundred contradictions in the Old Testament," etc. Anybody can write those books; and the criticism which ends with that is almost as shallow, --yes, all things con-sidered, probably shallower than the "literal inspira-tion" at which it scoffs. There are men who, because they are scholars, can count up more of these things than we, and who speak out loud about them as frankly as Tom Paine himself, but whose look goes deeper. They sound, and dredge, and compare widely, where we only sall over the top reef-hunting. Then let a man like Tyndall come, who will put the results of the scientific search in popular form,-he is the man who helps us to know what the Bible truly is. The Bible for Young People is Tyndallwork applied to Bible-criticism. It is no scoffer's book. People never scoff at anything which they come to really know. The authors reverence most heartily that which they treat so freely, and always point to its religious spirit and intent. But they analyze the old legends of creation-Eden, Flood, Babel, and the rest-and compare them with the cognate myths of other races, and show us how they reflect the crude ideas of the time about Nature, and morality, and God. They try to untwist the mixed, contradictory stories which have been woven together by later story-tellers into their present form,-detecting in Genesis, for instance, at least three separate strands of narrative. They show how the patriarchal names and incidents hold hints of tribal fortunes; and how the genealogies are constructed to suit a preconceived system of chronology; and how the history of Israel is the history of a barbaric, polytheistic tribe, slowly consolidating, through a great law-giver's religious impress, and through constant conflict, into a strong-featured nation. We heartily recommend the book to those who care to study the romance of such a history,-for the Bible studied with such help becomes a most romantic chapter in the history of civilization. The book comes out in monthly parts, of which at least the first ten can be obtained of John Kneeland, 7 Tremont Place, Boston; or of J. L. Jones, Janesville, Wisconsin.

TO BE IMPRESSED with the mighty intellectual stir which keeps the brain of the world in active exerclae, look over the exchanges of a newspaper for a single week. See the unheard-of papers that turn up from unexpected places. Note the more thoughtful ones, each representing a separate line of ideas, designed to find a special set of renders,-ideas and readers with which, perhaps, you have almost nothing in common. You feel as if you stood on a mountain, and saw the rivers of an unexplored land start forth, each to run through its own tribes, and nourish its own settlements. Or glance through a single one. Here is Nature from London; see the list of society-meetings, with their essay-subjects, naming unknown worlds to you, which the some bodies over there are going to talk about so wisely. Or consider what an amount of brain-food is ground up and made ready for the general public, each week. by such papers as the Independent, the Christian Union, the Golden Age, of New York. We made a study of their issue for the second week in July. The Independent had five editorials, and twelve original contributed articles, six poems, eight pages of paragraphs on all sorts of themes, besides its market, financial, farming, and selected matter. The Christian Union had five editorials, twelve contributed articles, five poems, and over five pages of paragraphs. The Golden Age had five, seven, three, and over six, respectively. Old folks, young folks, sober folks and slight folks, newsy folks, sentimental folks, political and financial folks, all have their taste catered for with special dishes. The paragraphs are the most impressive feature,-notes on literature, science, art, education, religion, politics, persons. To get them, men have gone gleaning through five hundred other papers, and magazines, and books. Yet not mere scissorings. Some of them are little dwarf editorials. But mainly they are borrowings, stamped over with some added thought, or set in fresh relations,-often witty hits, sometimes a little box packed full with a fact, sometimes a single crystal of fancy, sometimes a nugget of argument, often mere gossip, sometimes a mean insult passed on, sometimes a lie. This racy paragraphing is a special art. The fortune of a popular paper depends on it almost as much as on strong editorials. For success at it one must not be over-scrupulous about authorities or feelings. "Je prends mon bien où je le trouve." and "a curse on him who has said my good things before me !" The large proportion of room given to the tit-bits is suggestive. We read magazines, not books, it is said. But we hardly read the magazines. Here they are boned, and compressed, and sliced off for us in single mouthfuls. This suits Americans on the bolt. And it accounts for some of our allings.

BROAD CRURCHISM.

On another page will be found a reprint of the main portion of an interesting and noteworthy discourse by Rev. Rufus Ellis, minister of the First Church (Unitarian) in Boston. The discourse, which was read recently before a ministerial conference, is interesting because it is the testimony of a sincere man, and a practical preacher of long experience, concerning the effect of the New England transcendental movement on his own views, and on Unitarianism in general. As a young man just on the point of entering the theological school, Mr. Ellis heard the famous address of Ralph Waldo Emerson before the graduating class of the Divisity School at Cambridge, In 1838, which was the first public utterance of note of transcendentalism in America; and the reminiscence he gives of the impression made by that address on himself and other young men of the day, is not only interesting, but valuable, The discourse, too, as coming from one who has been usually reckoned as an extreme conservative among Unitarians, is noteworthy for its breadth and liberality of view. The concessions which it makes to the results of rational criticism of the Bible, and of the traditional Orthodox interpretations of Christianity, are remarkable, and indicate the progress which is taking place in Christian theology, not only among Liberal Christians, but in more Orthodox communions

The sermon, of course, is not radical; to many readers of THE INDEX it will seem perhaps very conservative, and some may wonder why it should be reprinted in these columns. Mr. Ellis is a believer in the special and miraculous incarnation of the Divine nature in Jesus, and to him Christianity is the crowning culmination of all religious history, ample for all human needs for all time. But the liberal interpretation of these doctrines, from one so conservative as Mr. Ellis has been deemed, is what gives the discourse its note. For, as we have just said, he has been regarded as one of the most conservative of Unitarian preachers. It has been common to classify him with Dr. Peabody and Dr. Robbins, as on the extreme right wing of Unitarianism,-as too conservative, in fact, to act very harmoniously with the denomination, and as just ready to drop into Orthodoxy.

Yet, in our opinion, Mr. Ellis has not been correctly classed there. We have previously found, in his published writings, an element of liberality both in respect to doctrine and spirit which those with whom he has been classed do not appear to possess. This liberality comes from the emphasis which he has been wont to place on the Spirit, as the source and centre of all vital religion. He has habitually subordinated the letter, whether of dogma, or Scripture, or ecclesiastical rite, to the Spirit,-holding a view of the Spirit, not unlike the old Quaker doctrine of the Inner Light. However highly he may value the Bible and the historical Christ, he has yet made it clear that he regards the present Spirit as the sustaining power of the Christian Church. And this doctrine of the supremacy of the Spirit over every form of the letter, which he has expressed very boldly in the discourse under notice, has given a liberal atmosphere to his thought and writings, and made many points of sympathy between his position and that of even quite extreme radicals, whose views he could not conscientiously accept. And, probably, he has held aloof from some of the forms of Unitarian denominational activity quite as much from an aversion to all exclusive sectarian action as from a fear of the radical tendencies of the Unitarian body. He is essentially a Broad Churchman. He represents real Broad Churchism in America much more than do some Episcopal clergymen who are said to do so. In the Episcopal Church in this country there is actually no Broad-Church party like that which is so powerful in England. There are a few individual preachers who may be called Broad-Church, but the two parties in the American Episcopal denomination are High-Church and Low-Church. In America, the Broad Church is made up of portions of many denominations. For in almost all the denominations there are some preachers who care more for the presentation of religion on broad and general grounds, than for any denominational propagandism; and, among Unitarians, Mr. Ellis may be said to be one of these.

And in this discourse he states very well the principles of this Broad-Church party,—its central principle being the superiority of the present power of the Spirit to any ecclesiastical dogma or institution of the past, and even to the Bible. Mr. Ellis states unmistakably—as unmistakably as Mr. Emerson did in 1838-that the power of the Church to-day must be found in a vital power that is within the souls of men and women living to-day,-that it is not to be found in the Bible, or in traditions, or in established ecclesiastical institutions, except so far as these are illustrations and examples of the capability of the Spirit in the past; but is to be looked for in the presant activity of the same Divine energy that produced these old results. The pervading doctrine of the discourse is that the Spirit of the Highest has not de parted from mankind, nor revealed itself once for all during the few years of the life of one being in Palestine; but is actively revealing itself to-day, in and through the Christian Church especially, but also, now as in the past, to some extent in humanity else where. And this may be said to be the central principle of Broad Churchism in Christendom.

manning Google

This central principle in Mr. Ellis' discourse takes shape in three subordinate propositions: First, that the New Testament is not the fountain whence the Christian Church draws its inspiration, but only an incidental and necessarily fallible result of that high tide of spiritual life which attended the advent of Jesus,-of precious interest and value to the Church, but not its foundation, and not even necessary to its continued existence. Secondly, that Jesus was an entirely human being, a complete man, and that the incarnation of the Divine nature in him, though perfect in degree, was yet of the same kind as that which takes place to some extent in other men, and that the revelation given in Christianity does not differ in kind, but only in degree from that given in other religions. Thirdly, that Christianity is a progressive revelation,-that it was not all manifested at once even by Jesus, or perhaps to him; but, under the infigence of the continued inspiration of the Spirit, is a continuous evolving of new views of spiritual truth, new institutions, new forms of human activity,hence, that it adapts itself to the improved intelligence of mankind, and the changing exigencies of human affairs in successive generations.

The only narrowness in these statements is, that they are statements of Broad-Church principles, from a Christian point of view, and that the point of view does not quite include the full breadth of a universal church. They are, as we have said, representative statements of the Broad Church of Christendom. The position of Mr. Ellis, and of other Christian Broad Churchmen is that, since Christianity is this progressive revelation of Divine power in human history, it can go on adapting itself to human needs of every age and country ; and that, therefore, there is no reason for abandoning it, and no possibility of mankind outgrowing it; and this conclusion Mr. Ellis draws in the closing part of his address, omitted in the reprint, for want of space. But there is a Broad-Church party outside of the churches in nominal Christendom, and a Broad-Church party in other religions besides the Christian; and these people will naturally question whether Christianity so predominatingly and exclusively marks the track of Divine revelation in humanity as this position implies. The course of Mr. Ellis' argument, indeed, and his assertion that the Divine Spirit is continuously active, and has revealed itself to some extent, however feebly, in all religions, suggest the inquiry whether he has himself drawn the logical conclusion from his own premises. If the Spirit has been the inspiring source of all religious history; if one man and one religion, however superior, differ not in kind, but only in degree, from other genuine religious revelations; and if this same Spirit, which has been the creator of religious literatures and institutions, and the inspirer of divine life in the past, is still actively and creatively revealing itself in the thought and life of Christianity to-day, and Christianity under its power is a progressive rev elation not yet completed-since all thus depends apon the continuous and ever-present agency of this power called the Spirit,-why may it not be that, in the education of mankind, the guiding Spirit has now brought the race to that point when the authority of all special religions, Christianity with the rest, is to be seen to have been provisional and temporary only; and that now, in this new era of the world, when the religions are being brought more into outward contact, and are coming to understand each other better, they are all to advance to conditions of higher intelligence and closer spiritual fellowship, and that some new form of religious thought, activity, and association, must eventually result, which shall not be Chris tianity, nor Judaiam, nor Hinduism, nor any other specific faith that the past has known, but a new and more universal development of religious life from the vitalizing spirit that is common to them all? Can we not trust the spiritual energy which has been so potent in the past, and which is asserted to be full of power to-day, to do its own work? Shall we seek to limit its activity, or confess our distrust of it by attempting to authenticate it by certain definitions and names?

Every one of the great religions has now a Broad-Church party,-the party of the Spirit rather than the letter. And if the contral principle of this party, which is belief, or trust, in the Spirit, were to be consistently followed out, no attempt being made even to define what is the nature or origin of the Spirit, or what its method of operation, we should have a Broad-Church movement and fellowship overlapping and obliterating the boundaries that have separated the religions of the world, and conterminous with at least the progressive and enlightened portions of the human race. It should not be thought necessary either to define this Spirit, on the one hand, as a power distinct from man, or, on the other hand, as the manifestation of man's own highest intelligence. improving and advancing through the ages. It is the sufficient and natural bond of fellowship that religion in all its forms is in itself a confession of man's relation to a Power, whether we call it person, or call it force, which works in the world of matter and the world of man, and which "makes for righteousness." Not even so much statement as this is requisite for the fellowship of the true Broad Church. The bond of association really lies in the fact of a common sentiment and a common movement, with no injunctions upon the intellect limiting inquiry, nor upon the tongue as to pronouncing a shibboleth. When the Broad Churchism of Christendom reaches this ground, there are many religious radicals who now, outside of all churches, are watching its advance with sympathy, who will then gladly join it, and give it their active cooperation. W. J. P.

ORGANIZATION.

A word about organization. It is true, that no point is ever carried without it; but it is also true that, until there is a point to be carried, it cannot exist. People never organize for the sake of organizing. They never organize except in view of a contingency, and the contingency must be near and ingent for the organization to be effective.

Government is only a group of organizations for a multitude of immediate objects which demand instant attention. As soon as any one of them ceases to demand instant attention-ceases, that is, to be s vital object,-the organization formed to meet it fails asunder; the machinery becomes useless. The Church is an organization for the supply of certain general and permanent wants. Each new want calls for a special mode of organization to supply it. The central organization of the Church is many hundreds. we may say many thousands, of years old, and is good for its purposes; but, when special exigencies arise, it will not serve. We are prone to think of the Christian Church as a compact body, drilled and equipped for all emergencies. It is drilled and equipped for all the general emergencies of religious administration, but it must bring new methods to When Protestantism appeared, meet new cases. Loyola organized the Society of Jesus to oppose it. When Rationalism threatened, Orthodox Protestantism organized Young Men's Christian Associations to put it down. When the free religious spirit showed strength, Unitarianism organized the National Conference to suppress it. The advance of the foe calls into existence the army. Every government keeps up a permanent military organization, even in times of peace; for war is a permanent pos sibility. But if no war threatens, the military organization exists hardly more than in name. Even in France, a military nation, the army was entirely unprepared for the war of 1870, though Prussia was regarded as a threatening neighbor. How utterly we were unprepared for our own last war all remember. To say that we were unorganized for such an emergency, is to say little. We had lost the idea of organization, and did not know what it meant. The crisis brought the crystallizing force at the very moment of need, but not a moment sooner. For five or six years, war had been predicted. For five or six years, it had seemed to discerning minds inevitable. But the shot at Sumter was needed to rouse and consolidate the apathetic North. Then the emergency was felt, and then the clash of the closing ranks was heard.

It is of no use to preach organization before the need of it is, as men say, realized. Enlighten people in regard to the condition of affairs; point out danger; clear up ideas; throw out warnings; preach the truth as far as it is discernible,--organization will come at the last moment, but not before. It will me when a danger becomes imminent to all men. It may be that danger threatens distantly from the purpose to protect by more stringent laws the puritan Sabbath, to enforce the reading of the Bible in the public schools, to insart into the preamble of the National Constitution the essential articles of the Christian bellef. But the danger is, at present, so remote, that attempts to organize, in view of resisting it, meet with no encouragement. The cloud is hardly as big as a man's hand, and the family umbrellas repose in their cases. To say that while the radicals are unorganized their adversaries are drilled, and massed, and ready for the battle, is not quite true. The Orthodox community is by no means united in. purpose, or even in sentiment, on all or either of the above mentioned points. Opinion is much divided. The conspicuous champions are few. The powerful leaders do not lend their aid; and, if the time comes when they do, the persuasion of the people at large must be their first concern. The general, permanent. organizations for distributing Bibles and tracts, holding councils, ordaining ministers, maintaining missionaries, conducting seminaries, and so forth, cannot be used to much effect in furthering these new ends. The special exigency will have to be specially provided for, and it may be fairly doubted whether the radicals are not to the full as well prepared as their adversaries. Their minds are as quick of apprehension; their bearts are as hot with feeling; their determination is as clear; they are doing what they can to cast discredit on the proposed innovations. If they do no more, it is because they do not feel the need of doing any more. But let the danger become imminent, and the closing of the ranks will. be sudden, and the resistance firm.

It may be unfortunate that people will not so faranticipate perils as to prevent them; but they will not. Ideal perils are none; real perils alone stir the blood. Ought we to regret this? Is it not better, on the whole, that the demonstration of force should be reserved till it is actually required? that power should not be squandered in fruitless anxiety? Let the seers proclaim their vision; let the prophets disclose their presentiments; let the preachers be faithful to their light. Then, if the storm gathers, the elements will be in readiness to combine and beat it back. The age of discussion must terminate before should not yet reached its culmination.

LONDON LETTER.

0. B. F.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE INDEX:

Sir, —A little commotion has been made here lately about caricatures, owing to a prosecution for libel brought by Sir William Carroll against an artist who had made cruel sport of his infirmities, and had ridiculed his son.

It does not require much magnanimity to see oneself good-naturedly caricatured; but there is a surprising difference between the various ways in which one's face, or peculiarities, may be made food for laughter. There is a good-natured, and there is a spiteful, way of indulging in this branch of skill. It seems to be a gross outrage on humanity, and on good taste, to make fun of any natural defect—such as a curvature of the spine, or of a limb swollen by gout, or dropsy. The jury in the case allude to must have felt this in awarding damages.

Another, and still more cruel, form of caricaturing, is where the artist fastens upon some abnormal condition of his subject, and turns it into more than a suggestion of intemperance or vice. During the time that Pellegrine was absent from the office of Vanity Fair, his place was occupied by an artist who, either out of mischlevous fun, or from pure ill-nature, inflicted a cruel wrong upon the family and friends of a gentleman who favored him with a sitting. The gentleman was suffering from an eruption in the face, caused entirely by a severe strain upon his nervous system, owing to certain well-known public events in which he was deeply concerned. He was a man of strictly temperate and pure habits; but the caricature. represented him as simply a drunkard, with a touch of licentiousness suggestive of even worse vice. He had the good sense, however, to bear the smart without remonstrance; nor would he have cared about its at all, but for the feelings of his family and friends.

It is clear, then, that this art of caricaturing may be frightfully abused; and the subject teaches us a lesson in morals not to be overlooked.

So long as fun is pure fun, it may be freely indulged; but the moment it is sought for at the expense of other people's feelings, it is immoral; and, because it tends to a breach of the peace, the law ought certainly to be enforced against those who would provide entertainment at such a cost.

Google

There is, unfortunately, an immense amount of cruelty-wanton and coarse cruelty-among men of mature age; and I think it is largely due to the great defects in our training of boys. Our public schools, though far more humane than formerly, are still scenes of much wanton cruelty. I dany the necessity for this. All boys are not alike, and the difference between them is more due to their early training at home than to their native characters. On no other ground can we account for many dear, amiable boys, generous and kind at heart, amenable to any judicious remonstrance, taking part along with boys of very inferior characters in tormenting some defenceless animal, or some weak and ungainly schoolfellow. The fact is, that where training for character is most wanted our schools provide none at all. I am no advocate for having a system of police in our play-grounds, or for never leaving children to themselves. This would be an error in the opposite direction; but I strenuously arge that masters should be appointed to take some supervision of our playgrounds, who would be willing to join in the sports, and to exercise, not so much control, as healthy influence in setting a high tone of generosity, and justice, and uniform kindness. The elightest approach to oppression, or to make sport of another's infirmities, should be then and there, not punished, but denounced with stern and righteous indignation. Let boys be taught by daily training how mean and low it is to be cruel and unkind. Let them be impressed, all their youth up, with the manliness of a true chivalry and of especial tenderness towards the weak; and then we should hear no more of cruel sports among men, of the ungenerous ridicule of some unlucky messmate who is unpopular, of rude, practical joking, of the coarse hilarity which break out now and then upon the Stock-Exchange, nor of any of the hundred forms in which persons of mature age sink back into the most shameful habits and feelings of their boyhood, and exchange their good manmers for pure savagery.

Caricaturing is one of these forms, when done in wanton mischief or in ill-will. Nor is it only with the pencil, but also with the pen, that evil-minded men inflict deep injuries. The "personal sketches, which are growing so popular, abound in the ferocity of illegitimate caricaturing, and perhaps cause deeper wounds than the fulsome cartoon

Editors cannot always help themselves. They are at the mercy of the agents they employ. But the en-gagement of such agents ought surely to form one of the sacraments of life. A man who undertakes to report what he sees, or hears, ought to make truthfulness his religion, and to be ready to cut off his right hand rather than let it write down falsebood. The lies and slanders which go up and down the land, blighting fair fames, impeding holy causes, and doing the devil's work of perpetuating evil, will take decades of years to undo. And on the authors of those misrepresentations will lie the heaviest guiltthe guilt of perverting good to evil, of wantonly turning the best instrument of truth to the base service of falsehood, and of betraying the confidence reposed in them, and thus weakening trust between man and man all the world over.

A poor but dishonest woman, having obtained four shillings from a clergyman by false pretences, was brought to a proper sense of her guilt by this reproach: "You have not injured me; you have not injured the generous hearts who were ready to give you ten times as much,-but you have inflicted a fearful injury npon every poor person around you, by exciting suspicion and destroying confidence. 'relief, will have to go without it - through your fraud." Hundreds of them, perhaps deserving and needing

Let untruthful reporters take this story to heart, and bear in mind that they never depart from veraci-'ty without doing irreparable wrong to thousands of their fellow-men.

I am, sir, very truly yours, CHARLES VOYSEY. CAMDEN HOUSE, Dulwich, June 29, 1874.

TRUTH IS ALWAYS consistent with itself, and needs nothing to help it out; it is slways near at hand, sits on our lips, and is ready to drop out before we are aware; a lie is troublesome, and sets a man's inven-tion on the rack, and one trick needs a great many more to make it good. It is like building on a false foundation, which continually stands in need of props to shore it up, and proves at last more charge-able than to have raised a substantial building at thret on a true and solid foundation.—Addison.

Communications.

THE LATEST SECT.

MR. EDITOB :- Will you accept a word, without heat, friendly

<text><text><text><text><text><text><text><text><text><text><table-row>

CHATTEL SLAVERY AND THE CHURCH. EDITOR OF THE INDEX:

practised by the American church and pulpit, from Maine to Mexico. First, then, as to what our slave system really was, under law and constitution.

Inder law, as to waite our system reality way, inder law, as to waite our system reality way. It is commonly held that no nation is better than its laws. At any rate, no law is enacted until needed, or supposed to be needed. Under the law of slavery, a slave was put completely in the power of the mas-ter to whom he or she belonged; was simply "goods and chattels," bred with and like other plantation "Ilve stock;" could be appraised, attached, devised, bought, sold, leased, mortgaged, rafled, gambled, or given away. Whatever masters or mistresses might do with horses, mules, sheep, swine, or dogs, just that they could do to slaves, or do with or by slaves, except to butcher them. And if any slave, male or female, resisted violently any demand of the master, such slave could be lawfully killed on the spot. I have read of slave girls killed by masters and overseers for defending their chastity. It might have been so. Again; it was a crime to teach slaves to read any book, or to sell or give them any book-Bible, Testa-ment, or catechism not excepted. Margaret Doug-lass, a young white woman, was fined and imprisoned under Virginia statute, and that in slavery's last years, for teaching, not slaves, but free colored chil-dren, to read. And a colporteur of the Bible Society was once arrested and tried for the suppendous crime of giving a Testament to a slave family in Alabamal Pleading ignorance of the law, and promising solemm-y not to offend again in that manner, he was gra-ciously forgiven that time, after suffering some severe exermonizing from the magistrate, whose own name was black. It is commonly held that no nation is better than Marriage among slaves, or the family relation, was to the statute-book of slavery a thing unknown.

Some owners might respect it; but such must ds, might fail in business, and then away went they property to auction, or to market,—horrs, asse, sheep, swine, slaves, and all; and mariage relation was known or unknown to all, exactly allke! A slave mother had no child in izue, more than any brue. As slave, she was a brute, a beast; no more! So the child was but pig or puppy, colt or calf, in the ledge, the appraisal bill, or on the auction block. And in alwe-breeding districts the number of female slave was always much larger than of males. Such were two or three prominent features of alwery, seen in its own statute books, newspaper, and the records of its courts. Such too, was alwery as sanctioned and sanctified by the Bible interpra-tors, prayers, sermons, and sacraments of the churches—Southern, Northern, Catholie, and Pro-restant—seen in their actual, constant practice, and restant—seen in their actual, constant practice, and restant—seen in the land, for a period many, I know not how many, years. Such, sursly, Dater PLAREE PLAEEDER.

[We hope that Mr. Pillsbury, through the columns of THE INDEX, will further inform and instruct its readers in regard to the relation of the Christian Church to American slavery .- A. W. S.]

BELIEF IN HELL AS A MEANS OF SAFETY.

BELIEF IN HELL AS A MEANS OF SAFET. Probably, in the experience of many of the radeal readers of THE INDEX, when attempting to show some Orthodox Christian the falsity and absurdity of the doctrine of hell, they have often been met with a plea substantially as follows:--"It is true, the doctrine of hell does seem to con-filt with reason, and our conception of the justes and goodness of God; but we ought not, on that so-count, to reject it. Is man to be so presumptions at to call in question God's actions? We must remem-ber that 'God's ways are not our ways,' and acts, that may seem wrong to us fallible, human creatures, may be in strict accordance with divine windom and goodness. Even if it be false, I lose nothing by the bellef; and since it may be true, how much safer is my condition than yours!" To many, it may seem idle to give such an argu-ment serious consideration; but, as so many seem to tely upon its cogency for their faith, let us eramine it for a moment, and see what the effect will be of thus rejecting our human ideas of justice and monil-ty, as well as the laws of evidence, on grounds of personal safety. Sometime minee, a little tract fell into my hadi

Thus rejecting our human ideas of justics and morality, as well as the laws of evidence, on grounds of personal safety.
Sometime since, a little tract fell into my hands entitled, "No Salvation without Baptism. Immersion the only true Baptism." Of course, it is useless to consider whether or not the body of the tract proced this cheerful dogm, since in either case it may be true; and safety, of course, demands that we should all be Baptists!
The Church of Rome has declared that, unless we accept entire the faith of the only "true apostolic church," we shall, "without doubt, periasi everiastingly." As it may be so, we must to insure salvation, fly to the arms of the Church 1
But, says the Mohammedan: "Infidel Christian dogs i unless you accept our faith, the gates of Paradise shall be closed against you!" So again we must yield; become Mussulmans, profess the unity of God, acknowledge Mohammed as his prophet, pray five times a day, fast one month in the year, go to Mecsion cit may be true!
Thus, in turn, arise Brahmanism, Mormonism, and many other systems of faith, and demand acceptance under penalty of eternal damnation. And since ham a reason is deemed impotent to decide the validity of acknowledge is done to the decide the validity of acknowledge is done in a size of this prophet, para five times a day, fast one month in the year, go to Mecsion ce in a lifetime.

many other systems of rath, and demand acceptation under penalty of eternal damnation. And since hu-man reason is deemed impotent to decide the validity of each of these claims, safety requires the accept-ance of all of, them, however contradictory they may be. That being done, are we surely safe? Have we a full guarantee of salvation? "Yea," we are told, "God has so promised!" But have we any certainty that he will fulf bli promise? What if he chooses not to do so? Who knows what God, in his "inscrutable wisdom," may see fit to do? "God's ways stre not our ways." re-member! Who can tell but it is a part of the "divise plan" to save the un-believers, and it is the believers, after all, who are to be damaed ? Certainly, it is no more in conflict with human plan" to save the un-believers, and it is the believer, after all, who are to be dammed? Certainly, it is no more in conflict with human instice to thus punish the believer, than the honest unbeliever; and, even if it were, "is man to be so presumptuous as to question God's actions," and hold him to human standards of justice, and human ideas of the moral obligation of pledges? Alas, we find that rejecting our reason does not, after all, give un any assurance of salvation; and has belief in a doctrine can do no harm, even though it be false. But what have we but our reason to pro-tour thighest ideas of justice and morality, and our reasoning faculties, may, it is true, be far from per-fect; but let us not, on that account, reject hight we have. Our only safety is to be true to that light. And, in proportion as we are true to it, will our with eternal truth and justice. But when I hear persons rejecting their own stand-stor all the Bivine Being, I think of the following scathing words of the lamented late John Stuart Mill:--

"To say God's goodness may be different in kind from man's goodness, what is it but saying, with a slight change of phraseology, that God may possibly not be good? To assert in words what we do not think in meaning, is as suitable a definition as can be given of a moral falsehood. . . . If I am informed that the world is ruled by a being whose attributes are infinite, but what they are we cannot learn, nor what are the principles of his government, except that the highest human morality which we are capa-ble of conceiving does not sanction them, --convince me of it, and I will bear my fate as I may. But when I am told that I must believe this, and at the same time call this being by the names which express the highest human morality, I say in plain terms, I will not. Whatever power such a being may have over me, there is one thing he shall not do—he shall not compel me to worship him. I will call no being good, who is not what I mean when I apply that epi-thet to my fellow-creatures; and if such a being can sentence me to hell for not calling him so, to hell I will go."

Google

THE INDEX-JULY 23, 1874.

Charlen or the bar and the UTION & I MA idg:  $\pi_{ij}$ 1010 4742: a a a star. 10 10 1 27. 1 PSE. nn' a ICX 3 275 154 10:0 dins. ti in s > a : 4.1es 14.2

> 221 232

12

東に行い

8.8

WHY WE DO NOT ORGANIZE.

• WHY WE BO NOT ORGANIZE.
• WHY WE BO NOT ORGANIZE.
• THE INDEX, for July 2, has a very good article, addressed "To the Radicals of the United States," and beginning: "Will the efforts now being made in this country, in proportion to its population, as there is now, and probably more. ... Each age had the same of battle to fight over and over again, just as we are now doing. ... Natural religionist, in all age, have entirely lost the fruits of their labora because they did not organize. ... The Radicals are open to the charge of coldness and selfahness, would to God that, in the holy cause of intellectual and spiritual freedom for all mankind, they had a little of the zeal and missionary spirit which the Church instant freedom for all mankind, they had a little of the zeal and missionary spirit which the Church instal a share of their means is contributed by the millions of Radicals towards the circulation of Transform to be so fettered. The failures of the lectures in the fold to use and be by the hearers of the lectures in the fold to sustain themselves, the smalless of the contributions made by the hearers of the lectures of the load to use they being a Liberal." It would and the direct the maxes is contributed by the horizon to be so fettered. The failures of the lectures of the load to use who boasted that he "saved one manded dollars syear by being a Liberal." It would are cost him that much to belong to any set.
So reas to the criticht of the size disorganizing attractions is the basis of American Religion." Weise spressed it when he said: "The escredenses of the individual is too narrow a basis for a sole and weight of the individual is too narrow a basis of American Religion." The sacremense of the individual is too narrow a basis of a merican Belgion. The sacremense of the individual is too narrow a basis of a merican Belgion. The sacremense of the individual is too narrow a basis of a merican Belgion. The sacremense of the individual is too narrow a basis of a merican Belgion.

n pa 271

The INDEX began by announcing "Fifty Affirma-tions," one of the principal of which was that "Re-ligion is the conscious effort of man to perfect him-ef." If my main business in life is to perfect my-definitely, is not THE LEDEX, or the Free Religious Association. It is Thorean's sharty on Walden Pond. We must remember gratefully Mr. Emerson's im-mense services to our cause; but we must look elsewhere for the proper basis on which that cause can be so organized as to endure. We shall find no such basis until we can say with Fénelon: "I prefer my family to myself, my country to my family, and markind to my country." It is easy for mon whose ideal is not the perfection of the individual, but the salvation of the world, to organize firmly, and pour out money like water for missionary victories. Much as we may blame secta-rianism, we have no right to call it narrower or more selfish than individualism. But it is not necessary to be either a sectarian or missionary victories. Much as we may blame sectarianism, we have no right to call it narrower or more selifs than individualism. But it is not necessary to be either a sectarian or an individualist. Kenelon was no sectarian, and it is possible to take as broad a view as his, without looking out from any church. We could adopt the Positivist maxim. "Live for Others".-without the machinery which Comte devised for its promulgation. For such a maxim, encess in organizing would come spontaneously. Or, without any help from Positivist, maxim, encess in organizing would come spontaneously. Or without any help from Positivism, we might learn from Strauss that "All moral action arises from the individual's acting in consonance with the idea of kind. To realize this in the fact on arises from the individual's acting in consonance with the idea of kind. To realize this in the obliging concord with the idea and the destiny of mankind, is the essence of the duties which man by the cobperation of men."

<text><text><text><text><text>

If we could realize this, and belleve with William the loftest idea of all morality, so long as he can be content to regard himself and others as distinct and isolated," we should find it easy to organize firmly and contribute freely for the common good. And if any one fears that, by organizing for this end, we in "greatest happiness of the greatest number," and the importance of attaining this end "by the general culture."
When the new philosophy takes the place of transitient of nodiverses of the duties become utilitarians induced allow and the individualist, theory, and not ill then, shall we care enough for the general welfare to form organizations worthy of our cause. The INDEX has done much of late to promote this transfiguration of adicalism; but more layet to do.

PRESENT RELIGIOUS VITALITY.

PRESENT RELIGIOUS VITALITY. The relations of the soul to the divine spirit are so pure, that it is profane to seek to interpose helps. It must be that when God speaketh he should commu-nicate, not one thing, but all things; should fill the world with his voice; should scatter forth light, nat-ure, time, souls, from the centre of the present thought; and new create the whole. Whenever a mind is simple, and new create the whole. Whenever a mind is simple, and new create the whole. Whenever a mind is simple, and receives a divine wisdom, old things pass away,—means, teachers, texts, temples fall; it lives now, and absorbe past and future into the present hour. All things are made scred by relation to it,—one as much as another. All things are dissolved to their centre by their cause, and, in the universal miracle, petty and particular miracles disappear. If, therefore, a man claims to the phraseology of some old mouldered nation, in another country, in another world, believe him not. Is the acorn better than the oak, which is its fullness and completion? Is the paret better than the chilinto whom he has cast his ripened being? Whence, then, this worehip of the past? The centuries are soul. Time and space are but physiological colors which the eye makes, but the soul is light; where it is, is day; where it was, is night; and history is an impertinence and an injury, if it be anything more and cherdiu apologue or parable of my being and to come.

is, is day; where it was is night; and history is an impertinence and an injury, if it be anything more than a cheerful apologue or parable of my being and becoming. Man is timid and apologetic; he is no longer up-right; he dares not say. "I think," "I am." but quotes some saint or sage. He is salamed before the blade of grass or the blowing rose. These roses or to better ones; they are for what they are; they arist with God to-day. There is no time to them. There is simply the rose; it is perfect in every mo-ment of its existence. Before a leaf bud has burst, its whole life acts,—in the full blown flower there is no more; in the leafless root there is no leas. Its nature is satisfied, and it satisfies Nature, in all mo-ments alike. But man postpones or remembers; he does not live in the present, but with reverted eye iaments the past, or, heedless of the riches that sur-round him, stands on tiptoe to foresee the future. He cannot be happy and strong until he too lives in the praseology of I know not what David, or Jeremiab, or Paul. We shall not always set so great a price on a few texts, or a few lives. We are like children, who repeat by rote the sam-ter, of the men of talents and character they charce to see, painfully recollecting the exact words they grow old-er, of the men of talents and character they charce to see, painfully recollecting the exact words they grow old-er, of the men of talents and character they charce to see, painfully recollecting the exact words they enole; atterwards, when they come into the point of view which those had who uttered these saying, they un-derstand them and are willing to let the words go; for, at any time, they can use words as good when oc-casion comes. If we live truly we shall see truly. It is as easy for the strong man to be strong, as it is for the weak to be weak. When we have new perception, we shall gladly disburden the memory of its hoarded treasures as old rubblah. When a man lives with God, his voice shall be as sweet as the murmur of the brook and the rustle of the corn.-Emerson's "Sef-

THOMAS JEFFERSON ON BELIGION.

commission of that offence by whipping, and the second by earlie or deach in fure. See this law in the Digest, Lib. 45, tit. 19, § 28, 3; and Lipsius, Lib. 2, de cruce. cap. 2. "These questions are examined in the books I have mentioned, under the head of religion, and several others. They will assist you in your inquiries; but keep your reason firmly on the watch in reading them all. Do not be frightened from this inquiry by any fear of its consequences. If it end in a belief that there is no God, you will find incitements to virtue in, the comfort and pleasantness you feel in its exercise, and the love of others which it will procure you. If you find reason to believe there is a God, a consciousness that you are acting under his eye, and that here be a future state, the hope of a happy existence in that increases the appetite to deserve it; if that Jesus was also a God, you will be comforted by a belief of his aid and love. In fine, I repeat, you must lay aside all prejudice on both fides, and neither believe nor reject anything because any other person, or description of persons, have rejected or believed it. Your own reason is the only oracle given you by Heaven; and you are answerable, not for the rightmest, but uprightness, of the declaio... "Torgot to observe, when speaking of the New Crista, as well of those of whom a connell of eccleations as those they named erangelists. Because those pseudo-erangelists pretended to inspiration, as much as tho others, and not by the reason of those of whom a connell of eccleations by your own reason, and not by the reason of those of whom a connell of eccleations by our own reason, and not by the reason of those of whom a connell of work of these are lost. There are some, however, still extant, collected by Fabricius, which I will endeavor to get and not."

MARK TWAIN created no small amusement at a dinner to which he was invited lately. In the course of the proceedings, his health was drunk with enthu-sissm. The fact, although he had been notified of it beforehand, appeared to take him utterly by surprise. In response, he rose, and, drawing from his pocket a huge roll of foolscap—come thirty pages—began to read, slowly and with difficulty—reading that he was taken entirely by surprise; that he was wholly un-prepared to reply; that, had he known the honor in store for him, he would have come prepared with a suitable speech, etc. Of course, the joke was taken, and the applause was uproarlous. Google

8

7

358	T.127
Advertisements.	GOOD
THE PATRONAGE	LEADING
of the liberal advertising public is respect- fully solicited for TRN INDEX. The attempt will be honesity made to keep the advertis- ing pages of TRN INDEX in entire harmony with its general character and principles, and chas to furnish to the public an advertising medium which shall be not only profitable to its patrons, but also worthy of their most generous support. To this end, all improper of "blind" advertisements, all quack adver- tisements, and all advertisements believed to be fraudient or unjust to any one, will be excluded from these columns. No cuts will be admitted.	O. B. FBOTH T. W. HIG W. J. W.
THE INDEX must not be held responsible for any statement made by advertisers, who will in all cases accept the responsibility for their own statements.	Are now for an and will be n on receipt of cents each;
ADVERTISING RATES. For 1 to 12 Insertions, 10c per line.	graphs, $1.50. Address,
113 (1 25 (1 8 (1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1	No. 1 T
On half-column advertisements, a discount of 10 per cent, will be made; on full-column advertisements, a discount of 25 per cent. On all advertisements for which cash is paid in advance, a further discount of 25 per cent, on the total, as above calculated, will be made. FRANCIS E. ABBOT, Editor,	INDE No. 1Truth Abbot, cont and "Moder DARWIN, c cies," says, i

CIRCULATE | Circulate | | Circuate THOSE PETITIONS. Don't feel satis-when your petition is a yard long, unless you saked every one to sign it. Get good, influ-

GET EVERYBODY.

Don't neglect to show the petition to any one, because he is a stockholder in some church, or other szempted property, as many such persons admit the justice of the domand; and those who will not should be made to take the responsibility will not should be made to take the responsionary of refusing to sign it. Don't delay! We want the petitions returned

Per order of EXEC. COMM. of the BOSTON LIBERAL LEAGUE.

CULTURED FREE THOUGHT.

The Index Association,

OFFICE, NO. 1 TREMONT PL., BOSTON, has been organized with a capital stock fixed at ONE HUNDRED THOUSAND dollars, for the e of publishing Tracts, Books, and

THE INDEX.

d Weskly Paper devoted to Free and Ratio Religion.

It is the object of THE INDEX to give public witerance to the boldest, most cultivated, and at matured thought of the age on all religions questions, and to apply it directly to the social and political amelioration of society.

It is edited by FRANCIS E. ABBOT, assisted by ABRAM W. STEVENS, with the following list of Editorial Contributors :-

O. B. FROTHINGHAM, New York City. THOMAS W. HIGGINSON, Newport, R.L. WILLIAM J. POTTER, New Bedford, Mass WILLIAM H. SPENCER, Haverhol, Mass. BICHARD P. HALLOWELL, Boston, Mass. MES. E. D. CHENEY, Jamaica Plain, Mass. REV. CHARLES VOYSEY, London, England. PROF. FRANCIS W. NEWMAN, London, Eng.

Every liberal should subscribe for THE INDEX, as the best popular exponent of Religious Liberalism. Every Christian minister, and every thinking church-member, should subscribe for it, as the clearest, most candid, and most scholarly exation of the differences between Free Thought and Evangelical Christianity, and as the best ans of becoming well informed of the arguents and the movements which the Church will have to meet in the future.

Almost every number contains a discourse of leading article, which alone is worth the price of one year's subscription

Prof. MAX MUELLER, of Oxford, England, in s letter to the Editor published in THE INDEX for January 4, 1873, says: "That the want of a journal entirely devoted to Beligion in the widest sense of the word should be felt in America-that such a journal should have been started and so owarfully supported by the best minds of your country,-is a good sign of the times. There is no such journal in England, France, or Germany; though the number of so-called religious or theological periodicals is, as you know, very large." And later still: "I read the numbers of your IN-DEX with increasing interest."

Send $3.00 for one year, or 75 cents for three months on trial

Address THE INDEX.

No. I Tremont Place, Boston.

D PHOTOGRAPHS	1
OF
ING INDEX WRITERS.
Including
OTHINGHAM,	A.V
HIGGINSON,	A.V
V. J. POTTER,
W. H. SPENCER,
F. W. NEWMAN,	FRE
CHAS. VOYSEY,	1.0.6
A. W. STEVENS,	E
F. E. ABBOT,	INDEX
for sale at the office of THE INDEX, be malled postpaid to any address	INDEZ
ot of price. Single Photographs, 25 ch; complete Set of Eight Photo-	No. 1

THE INDEX. Premont Place, Boston, Mass.

	ī	N	D	Е	x	т	R	Δ	C	т	8
41	50	1.0				18.1	-		1.00

the for the Times, by F. E. tains the "Fifty Affirmations" orn Principles." Mr. OHARLES author of "The Origin of Species," says, in a letter to the editor not orig-mally intended for publication, but subsequently authorized to be used : "I have now read 'TRUTHS FOR THE TIMES,' and I admire them from my inmost heart; and I agree to almost every word." New Edition. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00.

No. 2.-Fear of the Living God, by O. B. Frothingham, exposes the debasing char-acter of the popular notions of God, and presents conceptions of him that are wor-thy of the ninetsenth century. New Edi-tion. Price 5 cents; 12 copies 50 cents.

No. 8.-Lecture on the Bible, by the Rev. Charles Voysey, of England, is an over-wheiming demonstration of the imperfections and errors of the Bible, both in the Old and the New Testaments. New Edition. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00.

No. 4.—Christian Propagandism, by F. E. Abbot, is an exposure of the weakness, costliness, and inefficiency of the System of Poreign Missions. Pull of Physics, Factor, and Interesting Extracts. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00.

No. 5.-"God in the Constitution," by Rev. Arthur B. Bradford, opposes the pro posed Theological Amendment to the Unit ed States Constitution. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00.

No. 6 .- "The Sabbath," by Parker Pillsbury, denounces Sabbstarian superstition Edition. Price 10 cents; 12 copie No $1.00.

No. 7.-"Compulsory Education," by F. E. Abbot, maintains the right of every child to be educated, and the duty of the State to ensure it an education. Price cents; 12 copies 50 cents.

No. 8.-The Present Heaven, by O. B. Frothingham, treats of a subject that in-terests everybody. New Edition. Price 5 cents; 12 copies 50 cents.

No. 9.-The Christian Amendment, by F. E. Abbot, shows the dangerons char ter of the attempt to interpolate the Ev gelical Christian Creed in the U. S. Constitution. Price 5 cents; 12 copies 50 cents

No. 10.- The Impeachment of Christi-anity, by F. E. Abbot. Fourth Teu Thou-sand. Sent for free distribution to any one who will distribute it, in packages of from five to one hundred copies

No 11.-The God of Science, by F. E. Ab-bot, attempts to show the real influence of modern science upon the idea of God Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00.

No. 12 .-- Is Romaniam Real Christian ity? Two essays by Francis W. Newman and F. E. Abbot. Price 10 cents; 12 copies ity? To $1.00.

No. 13. On the Vision of Heaven, by Prof. F. W. Newman, of England, analy the Christian conception of Heaven. Price 5 cents; 12 copies 50 cents.

No. 14 - A Study of Beligion: The Name and the Thing, by F. E. Abbot, attempts to show that the popular derivation of the word Religion is incorrect; that the popular conceptions of Beligion itself are inadequate; and that a new conception are insidequate; and that a new conception of it, based on the Law of Evolution, con-sistent with absolute Freedom of Thought, and independent even of belief in God, is the necessary condition of the perpetuity of Religion among men. Frice 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00. Address THE INDEX, 1 TREMONT PLACE,

Boston, Mass.

THE INDEX. FREE Veekly Journal DEVOTED TO E RELIGION. PUBLISHED BY THE . ASSOCIATION, AT Tremont Place, Boston. EDITOR: FRANCIS ELLINGWOOD ABBOT. ASSOCIATE EDITOR: ABRAM WALTER STEVENS. EDITORIAL CONTRIBUTORS: O. B. FROTHINGHAM, New York City. T. W. HIGGINSON, Newport, R.I. W. J. POTTER, New Bedford, Mass R. P. HALLOWELL, Boston, Mass. MRS. E. D. CHENEY, Jamaica Plain, Mass. F. W. NEWMAN, England. CHARLES VOYSEY, England: THE INDEX sims-To increase general intelligence with respec to religion : To foster a nobler spirit and quicken a high purpose, both in society and in the indi-vidual: To substitute knowledge for ignora ce, right for wrong, truth for superstition, freedom for alavery, character for creed, catholicity for bigotry, love for hate, humanitarianism for sectarianism, devotion to universal ends

for absorption in selfish scheme In brief, to hasten the day when Free Relig ion shall take the place of dogmatism and ecclesiasticism throughout the world, and when the welfare of humanity here and now shall be the aim of all private and public activities.

In addition to its general objects, the prac-tical object to which THE INDEX is special inl. ly devoted is the ORGANIZATION OF THE LIBERALS OF THE COUNTRY, for the par ose of securing the more complete and con istent secularization of the political and ed ucational institutions of the United States The Church must give place to the Republic in the affections of the people. The last vestiges of ecclesiastical control must be wiped out of the Constitutions and Statutes of the several States in order to bring them into harmony with the National Constitution. To accompilsh this object, the Liberals must make a united demand, and present an unbroken front, and the chief practical aim of Broken front, and the chief practical aim of THE INDEX will be henceforth to organize a great NATIONAL PARTY OF FREEDOM. Let every one who believes in this movement give it direct aid by beiping to increase the circulation of THE INDEX.

SPECIAL FEATURES.

The publication of a valuable leading pa-per or essay of a thoughtful character, in each issue, will continue to be one of the nost marked features of THE INDER

Regular editorial contributions will continue to be furnished by the well-known em-inent writers who have already done so much to give to THE INDEX its present high poalth n. Mr. VOYSEY has kindly consented to furnish every fortnight a LONDON LETTER containing matters of general interest to radcontaining matters of general interest to rad-ical readers. Other interesting correspond-ence, communications, extracts from valua-ble books and periodicals, and misocilaneous articles, will also be published; and such improvements will be made from time to time as circumstances shall rander nossible.

AGENTS.

Local Agents for THE INDEX are wanted in every city and town throughout the coun-try. The most liberal terms are offered.

TERMS.

The price of THE INDEX is Three Dollars a year, payable in advance; and at the same rate for shorter periods. All remit-tances of money must be at the sender's risk, unless forwarded by cheque, registered let-ter, or post-office money order. The name, with address in full, must be accompanied with the money in each case. Address THE INDEX.

No. 1 Tremont Place, Boston.

Distribution by GOOQIC

OFTER

RELIGIOUS

4. PUBLICATIONS.

ASSOCIATION.

Report of the Addresses and other Report of the Addresses and other Proceedings of the Original Meet-ing in 1867, at which the Free Beligious Association was Organ-ized. Containing addresses by 0. Broth-ingham, Henry Blanchard, Lucretia Mott Eobert Dale Owen, John Weiss, Oliver John-son, F. E. Abbot, D. A. Wasson, T. W. Hig-mann and Bubb Waldo Emergan on, and Balph Waldo Emer

(This pamphlet has not been on sale for a number of years, and many persons who have all of the Annual Reports succeeding do not possess this.) Price 50 cents.

Proceedings of Second Annual Meeting, 1869. 60 cents. Contains essays by Julia Ward Howe on "Freedom and Re-straint in Religion," and by David A. Wason on "The Relation of Social Science to Religion," and speeches by O. B. Frothing-ham, Jesse H. Jones, F. E. Abbot, Wm. Depton, R. W. Emerson, Mary Grew, C. A. Bar-tol, A. M. Powell, H. B. Blackwell, Rowland Connor, Lucy Stone, Horace Seaver, and others; with an appendix on "Outlines of Judaiam" by Babbi Wise.

Proceedings of Third Annual Mess-ing, 1870. 50 cents. Contains mays by O. B. Frothingham on the "Ides of the by O. B. Frothingham on the "ldss of the Free Religious Association," followed by addressees by D. A. Wasson on "The Nature of Religion," by Mrs. E. D. Cheney on "Es-ligion as a Social Force, especially in rela-tion to Philanthropy and Beform," and by F. E. Abbot on "The Future of Religious Description on "The Future of Religious Organization, as affected by the Spirit of organization, as allected by the Spirit of the Age;" an easay by Samuel Johnson on "The Natural Sympathy of Religions," foi-lowed by Rabbi Wiles on "The Fermineni and Progressive Elements of Judaism," by T. W. Higginson on "Mohammedanism," by Wm. H. Channing on "The Beligions of China," and Wm. J. Potier on "Beligion Old and New in India;" also abstract of a discussion on "The Bible in the Public Schools," by Thos. Vickers, S. B. Calthrop, Rabbi Wise, and others.

Proceedings of Fifth Annual Meet-ing, 1872. 35 cents. (Four or more, M cents each.) Contains essays by J. W. Chadwick on "Liberty and the Church in America," by C. D. B. Mills on "Religion as the Expression of a Permanent Services. the Expression of a Permanent Sentiment of the Human Mind," and by O. B. Frohingham on "The Religion of Humanity," with addresses by Rowland Connor, Cella Burleigh, Lucretia Mott, A. B. Alcott, C.A. Bartol, Horace Seaver, Alexander Loos, and others.

Proceedings of Sixth Annual Meet-ing, 1873. 35 cents. (Four or more, S cents each.) Contains essays by Samel Johnson on "Freedom in Religion," and by. John Weiss on "Religion in Freedom," with addresses by Wm. C. Gannett, Robert Dals Owen, T. W. Higginson, Samuel Longfellow, J. S. Thomson, F. E. Abbot, and Lucretia Mott.

Sympathy of Heligions, by T. W. Hig-ginson. 25 cents.

Beligions of China, by Wm. H. Channing. 25 cents.

Reason and Revelation, by William J. Potter, 10 cents,

Taxation of Church Property, by Jas. Parton. 10 cents, singly; pa-60 cents; of one hundred, $8. ackage of ten,

These publications are for sale at the office of the Free Religious Association, No. 1 Tremont Place, Boston. The Annual Reports for 1868 and 1871 cannot be supplied, and the supply of others previous to that of 1872 is quite limited. Orders by mail may be addressed either "Free Religious Association, No. 1 Tremont Place, Boston," or to the Secretary, New Bedford, Mass.

WM. J. POTTER, Sec. F. R. A.

THE	INDEX-	JULY	23.	1874

SCOTT'S Waveney Dovate. Second Science (TROMAS) The English Life of Jesus. Second Edition. 7.08.

SMILES'S (SAMUEL.) Self-Help ...... 1.50.

STRAUSS (D. F.) The Old Faith and the New Life of Jesus. Authorized transla-tion. 2 vols.

THACKERAYS (M.M.) Novels. Household Edition. Complete is & volumes. Per vol. 1.24. Vanity Fair. The Newcomes. Adventures of Philip. Pendeunis.

picto in 5 vols. With new Fortrait, Per vol. 1,28 This addition incidence all the matter in the las-est English additions, with many additions, thus making it, with the novels, the chaspest and most complete Theckersy in the market. 1. Barry Lyndon, Heggarty Diamond, &c. 2. Snobe, Sketches, Denis Duros, &c. 4. Four Georges, Humorist, &c. 6. Catherine, Christmas Books, and Unre-printed Pieces.

Olgooo a basiling

1.00 1.35 2.00 2.00 2.00 5.00 1.50

.50

1.50

3.80 3.75 .30 .59

1.58 1.50 1.50 2.00 1.50

1.75

		JULY 23, 1874.	359
POPULAR BOOKS	Historical Pictures Retouched; a Volume of Miscellanica. In two parts. Part I., "Btudies, Pictures, and Pancies" The Life of Dr. Marie Zakrawska, being a Practical Illustration of "Woman's Bights to Labor"	III. Foods. By Dr. Edward Smith 1.75 IV. Mind and Body. The Theories of 1. their Belations. By Jarz Back of 1. V. The Stady of Sociology. By Herbert 1. Sponcer, Esg.	PROCTOR (RICHARD A.) Other Worlds
SENT BY MAIL	The Life of Dr. Marie Zakraewaka, being a Practical Illustration of "Woman's	V. The Study of Sociology. By Herbert Sponcer, Eso.	PEOCTOB (RICHARD A.) Other Worlds than Ours: the Furality of Worlds stud- led under the Light of Recent Sciencible Researches. Wilk Colored Piates. Light Science for Leisure Hours. A Series of Familiar Resays on Scientific Subjects, Natural Phenomens.
AT	DARWIN'S Origin of Species	<ul> <li>Spencer, Esq.</li> <li>VI. The New Chemistry. By Josiah P.</li> <li>Cooke, Jr.</li> <li>2.00</li> </ul>	Lager octance for Leisure Hours. A Barlow
PUBLISHERS' PRICES!	Emotional Francisco 2.0	Ing of the Vitel and Monthly Lioni-	Essays on Astronomy: A Series of Papers on Planets and Metcors, the Son
	The Variation of Animals and Plants under	<ul> <li>of the Doctrine</li></ul>	With is Plates and 24 Woodcuts The Moon, her Motions, Aspects, Scenery, and Physical Conditions, of the Westerney,
ORDERS PROMPTLY FILLED.	Domestication, 2 vols., illustrated 6.0 DESCARTES (RENE.) Discourse on the	of the Dectrine	nar Photographs and many Plates, Charis, etc
	DESCARTES (RENE.) Discourse on the Method of Rightly conducting the Reason and Seeking Truth in the Sciences	Henry Maudaley, M.D L50	BOSSETTI (CHRISTINA G.) A Shadow of Danta
NO EXTRA CHARGE FOR POSTAGE
ANY BOOK in the subjoined List, or any othe	ELIOT'S (GEORGE) Novels, Household Edi	India	SCHELLEN (H.) Spectrum Analysis, in its Application to Torrestrial Substances, and the Physical Constitution of the Heavenly Bodies
OBTAINABLE BOOK that may be desired, will	Comprising-	JOSEPHUS. The whole Works of Flarius Josephus, the Jewish Historian	SCIENCE DEVICE
be forwarded as promptly as possible on receip of orders accompanied with the CASH.	"Homola.	JOWETT, The Dislognes of Plath, Trans-	2. Chemistry. By Prof. Roscos
Orders are respectfully solicited from	Puilt Holt and Floss. Siles Holt, and Sesses of Clerical Life. The Sama. Liber & Edition. 2 vois	lated into English, with Analysis and Intro- ductions by B. Jowett, M.A., Master of Balliol College, Oxford, and Regius Pro- g fessor of Greak. Four yols	<ol> <li>rayaics. By Balfour Stewart. With Il- lustrations.</li> <li>Physical Geography. By Archibald Gei- kie, LL.D., F.B.S., farible doth</li></ol>
all frieads of THE INDEX.	Middlemarch. 1 vois	fessor of Greek. Four vols	kle, LL.D., F.E.S., faxible cloth
아님이 아들은 아이지?	How Liss Loved the King	Patriotic, Sentimental and Humprons 2.00	SCOTT'S (THOMAS) The English Life of Jesus. Becond Edition
ALCOTT (A. BRONSON). Tablets 1.5	EMERSON'S (R. W.) Eassys. First Series., 2.0	LECKY (W. E. H.) History of the Bige and	PART WOID A LANTING
Concord Days	Representative Men	Bistory of European Morals from Augus-	SPENCER (HEBBERT.) Education, Intel-
Fourtai Skatches and Camp and Fireside	Poems. With Portrait	tus to Charlemagne. 2 vols	Essays: Moral, Political, and Esthetic.
Stories	Basaya, Blue and Gold.	Confucius and Chinese Classics	lection of his best Papers. A Se-
Little Men			betton of his best Fapers. A Be- Bocial Statics; or, The Conditions Essen- tial to Human Happipess Specified, and the First of them Daveloped. The Finciples of Biology, 2 vois
Shawi-Straps	EVANS (E. P., Ph. D). First Historical	<ul> <li>LEWES' Physiology of Common Life. 2 vols. 3.09 Biographical Bistory of Philosophy, from its Origin in Greece down to the Present the Problem at Life and Mind. The Foundation Biome of Creek and Mind. The Foundation</li> </ul>	The First of them Developed. The Finciples of Floidgy, 3 vols. Philorinciples of Paychology, 2 vols. Philorinciples of Paychology, 2 vols. Recent Die of Style. Recent Die of Style. Science, Philosophy. Sociology.
RNOLD'S (MATTHEW) Beenys in Criti-	the French of Athanase Coquers! the Younger	Day. 2 vols	Recent Discussions in Science, Philosophy and Morals. New and enlarged edition.
Clem	Younger	LEWES (G. H.) The Story of Goethe's Life. 1.50	BORIOLOGY
UERBACH (BERTHOLD). On the Heights, 1.M Villa Eden; The Country-House on the		LEWIN (REV. BAPHAEL, D'C). What is Ju-	ologino, Politicana
Rhind 2.00		LONGFELLOW'S (H. W.) Poems, Portrait	Life, Correspondence and Ethics
Edelweiss	THE OF THE A TO THE A TO THE AT A TO THE A	Prose Works. Portrait 4.00	Uncle Tom's Cabin
ACON'S Essays	FROTHINGHAM (O. B.) Religion of Hu-	LOWELL'S (J. R.) Poema. 2 vols	STRAUSS (D. F.) The Old Faith and the New Life of Jesus. Authorized transla-
Physics and Politics 1.50	manity	Among my Books. 200	Stott & Yoursectoresteresteresteresteresteresteresteres
AIN (ALEIANDER). Mental Science: A Compandium of Psychology and History of Philosophy. 1.76 Moral Science: A Compendium of Ethics.	Lare of Theodore Parker.	LOWELL (MHS. A. C.) Posice for Children, 75	ture. I vola
Moral Science: A Compendium of Ethics. 1 vol. The Senses and the Intellect, Third edi-	FULLEB'S (MARGABET) Complete Works, including Memoirs by Emerson, Channing, and others. A new edition. 6 vols	LUBBOCK (SIE JOHN). Origin of Civilia- tion, and the Primitive Condition of Man 2.00	tare. 1 vois The Class-Room Taine, History of English Literature. Abridged and Edited by John Fiske
tion. 1 +01 5.00	GALTON (FRANCIS.) Hereditary Genius,	LYELL'S Principles of Geology 2 vols 600	TENNYSON'S (ALFRED) Pooms
ABTLETT'S Dictionary of Americanisms. 2.30 ABTLETT'S Familiar Quotations		memeries or Geology 3,50	THACKERAY'S (W. M.) Novels. Household Edition. Complete in 6 volumes. Per vol Vanity Fair.
ABTOL (BEV. C. A). Badical Problems 2.00 The Bising Faith	Verse by Rayard Taylor. 2 vols. Per vol 5.00	MANN (HORACE). The Life of Horace	The Newcomes, Adventures of Philip.
ASTIAN (H. CHARLTON). The Begin- nings of Life. 2 vola	Wilhelm Meister. Translated by Thomas Carlyle. Portrait of Goethe. 2 vola	Mann. By his Wife	Pendeunia, The Virginiana,
REP in the Public Schools	the state of the second state of the state of the second state of	The second secon
Records, Arguments, and Decision in the mesor of John D. Minor et al. vs. the Board of Ednacian of the city of Cincinnati: et al. in the Supreme Court of the City of	GREG'S (W. R.) Enigmas of Life	Horace Mann 1.25	Miscollaneous Writings. Household Edi- tion. Uniform with the Novels. Com- plete in 5 vols. With new Portrait. Per vol.
at aL in the Supreme Court of the City of Cincinnati. 2.00	ADATHS 198 America from the State	MARTINEAU (JAMES.) Essays, Philosoph- ical and Theological, 2 vois. Per vol	This edition includes all the matter in the est English editions, with many additions, making it, with the novels, the chespest and complete Thattarn is the provent and
Cincinnati. 1 Ramsoy, Sage and King in Arguments of Ramsoy, Sage and King in favor of the use of the Hible	uments, Privite Memoranda, and Original Letters to and from Various Friends. By Mrs. Grote. Second Edition, With Por-	MAURICE (REV. F. D.) The Ground and Object of Hope for Mankind
The Oninion and Decision of the Supreme	kraft	MERIVALE'S (OHARLES) Conversion of	9 Ducks Dissister Desit Desiter and
Court of Ohio in the above case	BAMERTON (PHILIP G.) A Painter s Camp. Book I. In England, Book II. In Sootland, Book III. In France	<ul> <li>the Roman Empire</li></ul>	5. Catherine, Christmas Books, and D
Amarican Giris	Thoughta about Art. 2.00 The Unknown Biver. 6.00	MILL (JOHN STUART.) Dissertations and Discussions. 4 vols., sach	THAXTER'S (MRS. CELIA) Among the
Layman's Breviary	The Intellectual Life	The Examination of the Philosophy of Sir William Hamilton. 1 vois, each	Inles of Shoals
The Tall Studeut	HAMILTON (GAIL). Child World. Part Sec- ond	Political Economy. New and revised edi- tion
UCKLE (HENRY THOMAS). History of	ond 1.00 Child World. Part First 1.00 HAMILTON'S Lectures.	The Subjection of Women. 1.25 Essay on Liberty. 1.25 Representative Government. 1.50	Care Cod
Civilization in England and France, Spain and Scotland. New edition of the entire work, with a complete indez. I vols 5.00	1. Metaphysical Lectures	Autobiography	Letters A Yankee in Canada A Week on the Concord and Merrimae
ARLYLE'S Works, Cheap edition. Compris-	HAWTHORNE'S (NATHANIEL) Works.		AMAYELS ATTACATATATATATATATATATATATATATATATATAT
ALVLE'S Works, Cheap edition. Compris- ing the following: Milaceliancous Easays, 7 rols, i French Revolution, 8 vols.; Freder- ck the Great, 10 vols.; Cromwell's Letters, 8c., 3 vols.; Sarior Rossartus, 1 vol.; John Berling, 1 vol.; Lafte of Schiller, 1 vol.; Past and Tresent, 1 vol.; Heros and Hero Wor- hilp, 1 vol.; Latter Day Famphleta, 1 vol. Any rolume sold separately. 31 vols. Lon- ion, 151-3. Per vol	HAWTHORNE'S (NATHANIEL) Works. New Illustrated Library Edition. Nins vols. Per vol. 2.00 Twice-Told Tales.	MIVART (ST. GEO.) On the Genesis of	TYLOR (EDWARD B.) The Early History of Mankind. Frimitive Culture. 2 vols.
tc., 5 vols.; Sartor Resartus. 1 vol.; John Sterling, 1 vol.; Life of Schiller, 1 vol.; Past	Mossee from an Old Manso, The Scarlet Letter, and The Blithedale Romance.	Species	TYNDALL (JOHN). Faraday as a Discov-
hip, I vol.; Latter Day Famphleta, I vol.	The House of the Seven Gables, and The Snow Image.	Bousseau, 2 vols	Fragments of Science for Unscientific Peo- ple
ion, 1871-3. Per vol	Snow Image. The Marble Faun. The English Noto-Books. The American Note-Books. The French and Italian Note-Books. Our Oid Home, and Beptimius Felton.	Time Stories 1.30	ple Light and Electricity Hours of Exercise in the Alpe Heat as a Mode of Motion
ARPENTER (DE. W. B.) The Principles of Mental Physiology, with their Applica- dons to the Training and Discipline of the	The French and Italian Note-Books. Our Old Home, and Septimius Falton.	MUELLER (MAX, M.A.) Lectures on the Science of Language. First Series	On Sound Radiaut Hest
Mind, and the Study of its Morbid Condi-	HIGGINSON'S (T. W.) Out-Door Papers 1.56 Malbone. An Oldport Romance	Chips from a German Workshop. Vol. I. Essays on the Science of Religion. Vol.	Forms of Water. Lectures on Light. Proceedings at the Farewell Banquet to
EVANTES' Don Quirote 1,50	Atlantic Besays 2.00	and Customs. Vol. III. Essays on Lit- erature. Biography and Antiputties	Prof. Ty dall
ANNING (WM. ELLERY, D.D.). The Per- ect Life. In Twelve Discourses. Edited rom his manuscripts by his nephew, Wm.	Oldport Days	erature, Biography and Antiquities, Three vols. Price per volume	TYTLER (SARAR.) Old Masters and their Pictures Modern Painters and their Paintings
lenry Channing 1.50	ding Journey	NASBY (PETROLEUM V), Swingin' Round	VOYSEY (REV. CHARLES.) The Sling and
ANNING (WM. ELLERY). Thoreau: he Poet Naturaliat, With Memorial Verse. 2.00	Venetian Life	the Cirkle	VOYSEY (REV. CHARLES.) The Sling and the Stone. Vols. I. and V., each. Vols III. IV. and VI., each The Voysey Appeal.
ENEY (Mas. E. D), Patience, A Beries f Thirty Games for the Fireside	HUGO'S (V.) New Novel, " 'Ninety-Three' 1.78	NEWMAN (FRANCIS W.) A History of the Hebrew Monarchy	The Voyacy Appeal. Voyacy's Defence at York. WARNER'S (CHARLES D.) My Summer in
Parties, uniform with Patience. 1.00 Parties, uniform with Patience. 1.00 ally Williams, the Mountain Girl. Illus-	HUMBOLDT (ALEXANDER VON). Life of. Translated from the German. 2 vols., with	History of my Creed. 2.00 The Soni, its Borrows and its Aspirations. 2.00	a Garde5
Language in the second se	three portraits	of the Future, as the Organization of Philanthropy.	Back-Log Studies
ABKE (JAMES FREEMAN). Ten Great eligions 5.00 ommon-Sense in Religion	HUME'S (DAVID) Essays and Life 1.75 HUNT'S (MRS. HELEN). Verses 1.25	Philanthropy	Life of Theodore Parker. 2 vols
ARKE (Dr. E. H.) Ser in Education 1.25	Bits of Travel 1.50		WHIPPLE'S (E. P.) Literature and Life Essays and Reviews
World	HUXLEY'S Man's Place in Nature	PARKER (THEODORE.) A Discourse of Matters Pertaining to Religion. 1.50 Speeches, Addresses, and Occasional Ser- mons. 3 703. Additional Speeches, Addresses, and Occa-	The Literature of the Age of Elizabeth Success and its Conditions Washington and the Revolution
BE (FRANCES FOWER). Studies New d Old, of Ethical and Social Subjects. 1.00 availant in Morals, and other Eccays 5.00 he Bullform Dermarks of the Accays 5.00	A Manual of the Anatomy of Variabrated	Additional Speeches, Addresses, and Occa- alogal Servona. 2 vols.	Washington and the Revolution
arwinism in Morals, and other Essays 5.00 he Religious Demands of the Age	Animals	Additional Speeches, Addrasses, and Occa- sional Sectmons. 2 vola	Leslie Goldthwaite's Life We Girls: A Home Story
NWAY (MONCURE D.) The Earthward 1.75	INGELOW'S (JEAN) Poems	ton, Adams, and Jefferson. With an In- troduction by Rev. O. B. Prothingham 1.50	WHITNEY'S (MRs. A. D. T.) A Bummer in Leallo Goldhwalto's Life We Girls: A Home Storr Real Folks The Other Girls Pansies. A volume of Poems
BRELATION and Conservation of Forces:	INGELOW'S (JEAN) Press. Off the Skal-	demeanor of a Speech in Fanouii Hall against Kidnapping; with the Defence. 1.50	WHITTIER'S (JOHN G.) Poems. 2 vola
beries of Expositions by Grove, Helm-	liga Studies for Stories	demeanor of a Speech to Fancoil Hall sealnat Kidnapping; with the Defence 1.50 The two Christmas Celebrations	Child Life
oumans, M.D. 1 vol 1.00	Stories told to a Child, First and Second Series	PARSONS (THEOPHILUS.) The Infinite and the Finite
LTURE DEMANDED BY MODERN IFE; Its True Aims and Requirements Barles of Addressee. By Tyndall Mus-	Foor Matt. or. The Clouded Intellect	DETET DOL OF 17 AB UPU OTTABT THA	ADDR.Rait t
y, Whewall, Faraday, Spencer, Draper,	INTERNATIONAL SCIENTIFIC SERIES. No. I. Forms of Water, in Clouds, Rain, Rivers, Ice, and Glaciers. By John Tyn-	Gaue Alst
dumane	Rivers, Ice, and Glaciers. By John Tyn-	Hedged In 1.50 The Silent Partner 1.50	INE INDEX
LT (Mas di Dot Die en	If Physics and Politics: or Thoughts on
LL (MRS. CAROLINE H). The College, be Markot, and the Court; or, Woman's ission to Education, Employment, and lizenship	Alvers, 100, and Foldies, or Thoughts of dall	What to Wear 7	I Tremont Place, Boston.

070	STUDENTS FITTED for any	BOSTON LIBERAL LEAGUE.	A CHEAP OFFERI
Teu strat-	Please address FMILY J LEONARD.	The second state of the second state of the	A COMPLETE SET of INDEX TRACTS,
alo.	Meriden, Conn.	Our organization some time since decided to di- rect its efforts for the present towards securing	and and out the prepayment of 75 CENTE.
R.	CONSTANT EMPLOYMENT At home, male or female, 50 a week war- ranted. No capital required. Particulars	the	No. 1 Tremont Place, Boston, Mass
Sen- b by , and	and valuable sample sent free. Address, with six-cent return stamp. C. ROSS, Williamsburg, N. Y.	Repeal of the Laws	THE AMERICAN EDITION
calpt		whereby church and other corporate property is	10
c, ion.		unjustly exempted from its share of the burden of taxation.	MONCURE D. CONWAY'S
RSI	L is held at HOSPITALLER HALL, 550 Washing- ton Street, Boston, every Sunday, at 10% A.M., Joi and 7% P.M. All that relates to the Beligious, Political, and Social interests of manking consti- tute the subjects for discussion. The INDEX and Index Tracts are for sale every Sunday at Woodballer Hall.	As a means to this end, we have published for	SACRED ANTHOLOGY, A BOOK OF ETHNICAL SCRIPTURES, rute the subjects for discussion. THE INDEX and Index Tracts are for sale every Sunday at	general circulation several thousand copies of a	has just been published, and new be
-181	Hospitalor Dani	TBACT	postpaid on receipt of the price, $4.00.
ach.	WEST NEWTON ENGLISH		Address THE INDEX, 1 TREMONT PLACE,
OF.	first school year of this Family and Day School, FOR BOTH SEXES, will begin Wednes-	on Church Exemption, being the article by Mr. Abbot which appeared in THE INDEX of Nov. 27.	Boston, Mass.
	Ary, September 16, 1874. For particulars address NATH'L T. ALLEN, Principal, West Newton, Mass.	The edition was made as large as our funds	G. L. HENDERSON & CO.,
	West Newton, Mass. At home Saturdays.	would allow; but, so great has been the demand, it is already nearly exhausted.	BANKERS,
6.1	TO NEWSPAPER	Our next edition ought to be large enough to place a copy in the hands of	LEROY, MINN. Money invested on short time, or for a
a's	PUBLISHERS.	pince a copy in the hands of	farms, at 12 per cent. interest per annum
		EVERY VOTER IN THE STATE,	ample security guaranteed. All expenses for
	Having conveniences for doing the best of newspaper printing at reasonable prices, I should like to contract for composition alone,	and generously to supply the calls for them in	term of years, on unincoumbered improved farms, at 12 per cent, interest por annum, payable semi-annually. Perfect tille and ample security guaranteed. All expenses for abstract of tille and record mortgage paid by borrower. We collect and remit to any part of the United States free of charge.
ES	or for composition, press-work, and mailing, for one or more weekly papers.	other States. To do this, we need funds; for, although we	REFREENCES First National Bank, Me-
23	Best of references given, and satisfactory work guaranteed. GEO. H. ELLIS, 7 Tremont Place, Boston.	have made arrangements for printing the Tract	kee, Wis ; City National Bank, Milwan-
Por-	DENN MEDICAL UNIVERSITY,	at very low cost, it is impossible for the Boston League, with its various other expenses, to bear	Allen, Stevens & Co., Bankers, New York City; Morris Altman.
mer- from	OF PHILADELPHIA.	the entire expense alone.	REAL ESTATE SECURITIES, hich	The regular course of Lectures in this In- stitution will commence on the first Monday	Will not, then,	Investments in Real Estate in Chinese
th. great	in October, and is open to both sexes. The	All Friends of the Movement	BOG VICINICY, his-	school is liberal and progressive, and thor- ough in its teachings. For announcement giving terms and other particulars, address		if judicionaly made, are the best and safest modes of employing capital. The old oets,	giving terms and other particulars, address E. D. BUCKMAN, M.D., DEAN, No. 1030 Spring Garden St.	come forward and help us with liberal donations ?	Real Estate and Loan Agency
ches.	BOUND VOLUMES OF THE	We frequently receive communications from parties wishing tracts to distribute, asking how	OF ERNST PRUSSING, 143 RANDOLPH STREET'
	Bound volumes of THE INDEX for 1871.	much they shall pay. To such we reply that the	Chicago (Established 1853),
on.	1672, and 1873, will be sent by express (at the purchaser's expense) on receipt of $2.50, $2 50, and $3.00 respectively. These volumes	cost to us is about $2.50 per thousand, and we shall be pleased to furnish them at this price per	Guarantees perfect title and ample security in all its Real Estate Loans.
8	are exceedingly valuable singly, irrespective of each other; for the important essays and	thousand, or 10 cents per hundred, to all who will circulate them. But all additional donations will	Firstclass securities always on hand. In-
1	other articles they contain are of permanent interest, and will furnish as instructive read-	be gratefully received for the purpose of circu-	or on shares; taxes paid, Ac.
	ing twenty years hence as to-day. No more valuable present could be made to a friend struggling out of Orthodoxy than one of	sting them gratuitously throughout the country. To many of the subscribers of THE INDEX	Orders of capitalists and real estate own- ers respectfully solicited.
Con-	Address THE INDEX,	and others whose names have been furnished as	REASONS FOR USING THE
Mar- ther, Mil-	1 Tremont Place, Boston.	as probable friends of the movement, copies of the Tract, together with Petitions asking the re-er, F. Ellas	WARREN'S	peal of the Exemption Laws, have been sent,	EUREKA SPOOL SILK.
bam,	TRUE CIVILIZATION. Price 50 cents.	With the Hope	It is full length. It is full size. It is smooth and elastic, and is equally adapted to hand or machine use.
any	PRACTICAL DETAILS,	that such friends will try to secure as many sig-	Many kinds of spool silk are a perfect
16."	showing the workings of the	natures to the petition as possible in their locality We respectfully ask those who are unable to at-	fraud, being not only shorter in length, but a much finer size than they are represented
	COST PRINCIPLE.	tend to the matter themselves to place the peti-	to be, and of so poor a quality as to be unfit for use. The ladies will always find the Eu-
price	Price 25 cents.	tions in the hands of those who will. Let us	reks Silk exactly as represented. Every
K,	S. H. MORSE,		spool is warranted, and the manufacturer's name indelibly branded on overy spool. Call
F	S. H. MOASE, 36 Bromfield St., Boston.	BOLL UP THE LIST!	for it,
	NEW SINGING BOOKS!	Let our united voices be heard! And let it be	RADICAL AND LITEBABY
		done NOWI	LECTURES
qui-	THE LEADER!!	We would say, also that we feel deeply the need of	BT
tion cun-	By H. R. PALMER, assisted by L. O. EMMESON. Choirs, Conventions, and Singing Classes		JOHN WEISS, lines a liv-	will welcome this new Church Music-Book, filled with new tunes, anthems, chants, etc., etc., all of the best quality.	Other Organizations
b we	Price $1.38, or $13.00 per Dozen.	in this State, to cooperate with as in securing	RADICAL LECTURES.
LA B.	The Song Monarch !!	equality and justice, by pressing the "Demands	The Idea of Hereafter. An Act of Faith.
his te to	By H. R. PALMEH, assisted by L. O. EMERSON. Especially for Singing Classes. First 56	of Liberalism." If, in any locality, there are those who are inclined to	Intelligence in Religion.
and	pages contain the elementary course, the same as that in the LEADER, which course is		Beligion and Science. Heart in Religion.
ning	followed by more than 100 pages filled with the most interesting Secular and Sacred Mu- sic for practice. Equal to the Sono Kino in	Form a Liberal League,	SHAKSPEARIAN LECTURES.
n of ght"	Price 75 cts., or $7.50 per dozen.	we are ready to render such assistance as lies in	FIRST SERIES.
afel-	AMEBICAN	our power.	1. Cause of Laughter.
rker	School Music Readers. Three carefully graded Song Books for Com-	LIDDD	2. Irony and Humor. 3. Degberry, Malvolio, Bottom, Touchstons.
over	mon Schools, by L. O. EMERSON and W. S. TILDEN.	LIBERALSI	4. Ajax in Trollus and Cressida; The Por- ter in Macbeth; The Fool in Lear.
d be. tiser.	Book 1st. For Primary Schools. Price 35 cts. Book 2d. For Lower "Grammar" Classes	If all will units and work, the results sought	5. Falstaff, nish, Ul is	Book 3d. For Higher "Grammar" Classes.	can be accomplished	6. Hamlet. SECOND SERIES.
nkee	Price 60 cte. The Course is easy, progressive, interest- ing, and has been thoroughly tested in schools	Address	1. The Women of Shakspeare. 2. Portia.
plas-	near Boston.	BOSTON LIBERAL LEAGUE,	3. Ophelia.
n, $1 party	OLIVER DITSON & CO.,		4. Macbeth and Lady Macbeth. 5. """"
Afty .	BOSTOR. CHAS. H. DITSON & CO.,	NO. 1 TREMONT PLACE, BOSTON.	6. Contrast in Shakspeare's Characters. Address JOHN WEISS, s,	TIL BROADWAY, NEW YORK.	Per order of the EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE.	E Brookline St., Boston.

Coogle

360

NONPAREIL Farm Feed, B. Bizes. Also Cotton-Seed Hullers. Illus ed pamphlets free. Address SEDGEBEER, SHEPARD & MILLEE 181 East Front Street, Cincinnati, Ot

CHARLES SUMNE

A fine likeness of Massachusetts' great ator, tae copy of a recent Photograp Black, is for all at THE INDEX office will be sent by mail to any address on re of the price-fifty cents. Address THE INDEX THE INDER 1 Tremont Place, Bost

SAVE FIFTY DOLLA

THE NEW FLORENCE.

PRICE, $30 below | any other Fi VALUE, $30 above | class Sew'g M SAVED, $50 by buying the Floren

> Every machine warranted. Special terms to clubs and dealers.

Send for circulars to the Florence S. M. Co., Plorence, Mass.,

or 178 Washington Street, Boston, Mass CHARLES SUMNER

GREAT WORK.

PROPHETIC VOIC CONCERNING AMERICA.

By CHARLES SCHNER. Fine Edition, Tinted Paper, with Steel trait, Grown Syo., Cloth extra, $2.

Aside from its literary and historical its, this volume has a special interest, the fact that it was the last work on v

r. Sumner was engaged before his der "PROPHETIC VOICES" will be found of value to all who take an interest in the tory of our country, so fall is it of pass is which the unexampled prosperity of land has been forctold by philosophers, p statesmen, and orators, of whom the lan ed author has also given interesting sket

Sent, post-paid, on receipt of prio Address THE IN THE INDEX No. 1 Tremont Place, Bost

CHAPTER FROM

The Bible of the Ages.

THE Hible of the Ages. FOURTEEN ONAPTERS. Selected from Hindu Vedas, Baddba, 4 fucius, Expritan Divine Fymander, Zor ter, Talmuda, Bible, Plato, Pythagoras, 1 cus Aurelius, Epictetus, Al Kornn, Lai Scandinavian Eddas, Renan, Tallesin, ton, Penn, Adam Clarke, Mary Fletche, W. Newman, Typdall, Max Müller, E Hicks, Channing, Gartison, H. C. Wright, cretia Mott, Higginson, T. Starr King, Bi nell, Parker, Davis, Emma Hardinge, En soo, Deaton, Tuttle, Abbot, Frothingh and others.

Gespels and Inspirations from n Centuries and Peoples.

"Slowly the Bible of the race is writ, "Each age, each kindred, adds a verse to Ediled and Compiled by GILES B. STEBBINS.

Four hundred pages; bound in cloth; $1.50. No Extra Charge for Postage Address No. 1 Tremont Place, Bost

B UST 0 THEODORE PARKER SIDNEY H. MORSE.

Dignity, reverence, sweetness, vigor, e poise, breathe through the clay the a has so filled his own heart with apprecia of that noble life that he has been able mingly to mould it into those delicate 1 which the character had wrought on the sing fibre. We are tempted to exclaim, a stand beside it, as the old artist did to perfected work, "Speak then !"-Hanna Blevenson.

Blevenson. All the characteristics of my husband in the bust,-bis greatness, his goodness cenderness, his love. You cannot give hi clay or marble; but you can represent it, this Mr. More has done.-Lydda D. Fark Hannah E. Stevenson. The eyes, though but of clay, are glean with possible indignation, with possible te the lips are set firm with the resolution the who, like Paul, could "fight a good fit as well as "give a reason."-Samuel Lon toos.

The first time I have seen Theodore Pa since he died.—Wm. Sparrell. The best representation of Mr. Parker executed in clay.—Boston Daily Globe.

The face is strong and noble as it shoul The likeness is good—Soston Daily Adver Nothing appears for beauty along, or fi or to abow the vanity of the artist. A dorgotten in the man-the true, real, Ya man, Theodore Parker.-L.S. H. in the 60

Copies of this Bust, finely finished n ; ter, $10 each. Boxing for transportatio extra. Freight or expressage paid by p sending order. Weight of box about pounds. Orders may be sent to B. H. MOESE Boom 15, 25 Bromfield St., Boston, Ma

THE INDEX-JULY 23, 1874.

Three Dollars a Year.

VOLUME 5.

LIBERTY AND LIGHT.

BOSTON, MASS., THURSDAY, JULY 30, 1874.

Index.

Single Copies Seven Cents.

WHOLE NO. 240.

ORGANIZE!

For List of Liberal Leagues, see next page. RELIGIOUS FREEDOM AMENDMENT:

PROPOSED AS A SUBSTITUTE FOR THE FIRST AMENDMENT TO THE UNITED STATES CON-STITUTION.

ABTIOLE 1.

ABTOLE 1. BETTOLE 1. SECTION 1.—Congress shall make no law respecting an es-tablishment of religion, or favoring any particular form of religion, or prohibiting the free exercise hereof; or a bridg-ing the freedom of speech or of the press, or the right of the people peaceably to assemble and to petition the dow-ernment for a redress of grievances. SECTON 2.—NO State shall make any particular form of religion, or prohibiting the free exercise thereof; or approximation or prohibiting the free exercise thereof; or or bridging the freedom of speech or of the press, or the right of the people peaceably to assemble and to petition the dowernment for a redress of grievances. No religious and no person shall ever in any State be depirived of any of ris or her rights, privileges, or capacities, or disqualified for the performance of any public or private duty, or ren-dered incompetent to give evidence in any court of law or or quity, in consequence of any opinions he or she may hold on the subject of religion. BECTON 3.—Congress shall have power to enforce the pro-risions of the second section of this Article by appropri-and the subject of religion.

NOTES AND COMMENTS.

BT A. W. H.

"COLUMBIA is the gem of"-Saratoga Lake.

JOAQUIN MILLER says that "Vesuvius is an incessant Rev. George Trask ought to send it one of his amoker." anti-tobacco tracts.

ANOTHER Indian war is threatening. And who is to blame this time-the Christian, or the savage? Some who know "the savage" best think he is the least savage of the two.

THE BROOKLYN Argus says that "they have a tradition In the Catakill Mountains that, when an Albany deacon goes there for trout, the fish require him to produce a certificate of good character before they will bite." It strikes us that this is a biting sarcasm on Albany

THE Christian Union says that "the Christian observance of the Lord's day rests on the real excellence and asefulness of the institution," - which appears to us to be a very good basis. The Second Radical Club, of Boston, found the "Lord's day" "real excellent and useful" for a Picnic. Mr. Beecher, did they do right?

IN THE RECENT Saratoga Regatta there was a row in nore senses of the word than one. Between the crews of Harvard and Yale, fair and generous rivalry lapsed into angry and spiteful antagonism. The boys of both colleges should learn and heed the nursery rhyme-

"Let dogs delight To bark and bite," etc.

IN REPLY to a correspondent in Kansas, Mr. Beecher, in the Christian Union, informs him that "the balance of power in New York City was never in the hands of professed infidels;" and adds: "Our rogues all claim to be good Christians of one sort or other." A candid admission surely. And yet we should not dare to claim that it applied in all cases. We do not balieve that all rogues are "Christians," as we most certainly do not that all "Christians" are rogues. Strange as it may seem, it is not likely that all "infidels" are perfect; a little of the "Old Adam" still lurks in a few of them. When shall we learn to disregard the distinctions which sectarian names suggest, and come to have a great, patient, all-charitable faith in human nature?

GEORGE FRANCIS TRAIN has taken to eating vegetables instead of meat; and, as the result of this more spiritual diet, he has discovered, and now declares, that many deeds of his past life, "which he formerly supposed he was enacting out of some grand principle for the benefit of humanity, had no higher motive than that thing they call fame, ambition, popularity, self, or a morbid love of notoriety." And he now appeals to the press to drop his name into the gulf of oblivion, promising never again to speak in public, print another book, or write another letter to a newspaper. Sensible Train, at last! We apologize to him for mentioning his name now; and do h ereby and henceforth let it drop, as he desires. Would that many more might eat vegetables, who are inflicting, or proposing to inflict, upon the public books, essays, and writings that are eminently entitled to that oblivion which the above unnamable gentleman courts!

THE REPUBLICAN PARTY, through the Address of its Congressional Committee, has asked of the people of this nation a continued and indefinite lease of power. It does so on the ground of its assumed ability to manage the affairs of the country better than the Democratic Party can. Now, we do not care to discuss this heroic pretension here; but content ourselves with saying, that, so long as we must have "politics,"-so long as we must have the "ins" and "onts" of political parties and administrations .- it seems to us desirable that these "ins" and "outs" should change places often, and that no party and the should be allowed vary long to monopolize power. For it is matter of history that any party which retains pos-session of the Government for any great length of time invariably becomes corrupt, and an offence to the intelligence and virtue of the nation. Therefore, as one of "the people," we respectfully ask for a "new deal."

THE Nation, of July 16, closes an excellent article on "Why people like to live Abroad," with these words: "The colleges of the country, and the railroads, and, in-deed, everything that depends on private enterprise, are rapidly becoming objects of pride; but a good deal needs to be done by the Government, to prevent its being a source of shame." The query which naturally arises from this is, if the Government succeeds so poorly, and private enter prise so well, in producing the desirable results of civilization, would it not be better to detach more and more of our interests and our affairs from the Government, and commit them directly into the hands of private en-terprise? What is called "the Government" is fast coming to be, not a source of benefit, but of actual demoral-ization, to the people, and a burden on American sociaty, occasioning the gravest anxiety to all thoughtful persons. It would seem that either we must commit more interests to Government, and make it more absolute, or that we must much circumscribe its power, and reduce it to its lowest terms.

IT is sain that the musical concert-pitch has been gradually rising, until it is now nearly a full tone higher than it was one hundred years ago; but recently, at Drury-Lane Theatre, London, the pitch was lowered, by the munical director, a half tone. Now, the pitch of our social life has been rising rapidly, for a good many years; that is, the life of society has been growing faster and faster, becoming more and more intense and arcited. The result is that a great majority of our people are living, to-day, for mere pleasure, for fame, or for fortune. We are, indeed, "on the bolt." We bolt averything,food, education, literature, politics, religion. Conse-quently, we digest comparatively nothing. Consequently, the social man is dyspeptic to-day, --in body, mind, and apirit. We need to learn how to live slowly, calmly, We must live less in public, and more in priquietly. vate. We must mind our own business more, and other people's less. We must cultivate the genius of character, and let other geniuses take care of themselves. Let us heed the beautiful text of the old Scripture: "BE STILL, and know that I am God."

WHEN MEN do wrong, or commit some great sin against their moral nature, why abould we be so sur-prised, so angry, so disgusted? Is it not human to err? Does it not belong to our finite state to be short-coming and transgressing in many things? Who is so good that he is not sometimes bad? Who is so rightcout that he is not sometimes unrighteous? Who is so strong that he is not sometimes weak? What one man is able or fit to judge another, or all the rest, and make due allowance for circumstances? Where is the man without sin, that the office becomes him to cast stones at his fellow-men? The law of evolution teaches na-even as history does that we are all becoming, that none of us has yet arrived at the infallible state. While we are growing, and learning to grow, - while we are getting out of the animal into the spiritual, out of the earth into the heavens, we must expect every condition that is incident to the process of development. We should be surprised at nothing; nei-ther about we be impatient nor condemnatory. The race, and every individual in it, is bound to succeed in the effort after perfection-for the perfection of all is the destiny of all. We can afford to wait; we can afford to be patient; we can afford to be charitable. Then let us be

We demand that churches and other ecclesiastical property shall no longer be exempt from just taxation. We demand that the employment of chaplains in Con-gress, in State Legislatures, in the navy and militia, and in prisons, asylums, and all other institutions supported by public money, shall be discontinued. 3. We demand that all public appropriations for educa-tional and charitable institutions of a sectarian character

donal and charitable institutions of a sectarian character shall cease.
4. We demand that all religious services now sustained by the government shall be abolished; and especially that the use of the Bible in the public schools, whather calensibly as a text-book or avowedly as a book of religious worthly, shall be prohibited.
6. We demand that the appointment, by the President of the United States or by the Governors of the various States, of all religious festivals and fasts shall wholly cease.
6. We demand that the indicial onth in the courts and in all other departments of the government shall be abolished, and that simple adirmation under the pains and penalities of priory ball be established in its stead.
7. We demand that all laws directly or indirectly enforcing the observance of Sundy as the Sabbath shall be replaced.

THE DEMANDS OF LIBERALISM.

B. We demand that all laws looking to the enforcement of "Christian" morality shall be abrogated, and that all laws thall be conformed to the requirements of natural morality, equal rights, and inpartial liberty.
B. We demand that not only in the Constitutions of the United States and of the several States, but also in the protokal administration of the same, no privilege or advantage shall be conceded to Christianity or any other special religion; that our entire political system shall be founded and administration for the scalar shall be founded and administration of the scalar shall be founded and administration of the scalar shall be founded and administered on a porely scalar basis; and that whatever changes shall prove necessary to this end shall be consistently, unlinchingly, and promptly made.

A FORM OF LOCAL ORGANIZATION.

Whereast, It is our profound conviction that the safety of regulticant institutions is importingled, the advance of civil-sation impeded, and the most sacred rights of man in-fringed, by the least interference of the State in matters of religion; and

religion', and Whereas, Certain grave inconsistencies with the general spirit of the United States Constitution still mark the prac-tical administration of our political system, threatening the perpetuity of religious liberty, the existence of free public schools, and the peace and prosperity of the suite land; TERERFORM, We, the undersigned, hereby associate our-selves together under the following

ARTICLES OF AGREEMENT.

The name of this Association shall be THE LIB-ART. 1.-The DAIL

ART. 4.—Such measures shall be adopted for raising fun-for the League as shall be prescribed in the By-Laws by two-thirds vote of the members.

AB7. 5.-Any person may become a member of the League y subscribing his or her name to these Articles of Agreement. Ant. 6.—The Officers of the League shall be a President, a Vice President, a Secretary, a Treasurer, and an Excou-tive Committee of three members; and their duties shall be those commonly pertaining to these offices. The President and Secretary shall be ar-officie delegates to the National Convention of Liberal Leagues when called together. Asr. 7.—These Articles of Agreement may be amended by a three-fourths vote of the members present at any reg-ular meeting, provided due notice of the proposed amend-ments shall have been sent to every member at least two weeks previous to such meeting.

So far as I am concerned, the above is the platform of THE RNER. I believe in it without reserve; I believe that it will yot be accepted universally by the American people, as the only platform consistent with religious liberty. A Liberal League ought to be formed to carry out its princi-ples wherever half a dozan earnest and resolute Liberal can be got together. Being convinced that the movement to secure compliance with these just "Demands" must a means of furthering it; and I ask the masistance add active co-operation of every man and every woman who be-leves in it. Multiply Liberal Leagues everywhere, and re-port promptly the names of their Presidents and Secre-taries. Intolerance and bigotry will remible in proportion as that list grows. If freedom, justice, and reason are visid, let their organized visce be heard like the sound of many waters. BORDOR, Sept 1. 1872.

FRANCIS & ABBOT, Editor. BOSTOR, Sept. 1, 1873.

362

LIST OF LIBERAL LEAGUES.

ST. LOUIS, MO.-M. A. McCord, President; P. A. Lofgreen, L. La Grille, Secretaries. Borrow, Mass.-F. & Abbot, President; J. P. Titcomb, G. A. Bacon, Secretaries. JEWFERSON, OHIO.-W. H. Crowell, President; A. Giddings, Beoretary. Saw Jose, CAL.-A. J. Spencer, President; J. L. Hatch, Beoretary. Becretary. TOLEDO, LOWA.-J. Reedy, President; E. S. Beckley, Secre-tary. ANDI N. J. - John Gage, President; Sue M. Clute, Becretary.
 JUNOTONVILLE, NEB. J. W. Eastman, President; B. L. Esaley, Secretary.
 GLATER, KAM. S. B. S. Wilson, President; H. A. Griffin, Becretary.
 DETROIT, MICH.-W. R. Hill, President. Becretary.
 DFINOIT, MIOH.-W. R. Bill, President; A. T. Garretson, Secretary.
 BERDEVILLE, MIOH.-A. G. Eastman, President; F. R. Knowles, Secretary.
 ORDELA, MO.-R. F. Thompson, President; M. Roderick, OBOSOLA, MO.-R. F. HOMPSON, Fleature, M. Secretary, Secretary. G. Barker, President; C. Rhodes, Secretary, BarLin, Wis.-President, J. D. Walters; Socretary, E. M. Bridgman. Washingron, D.O.-George M. Wood, President; J. E. Crawford, Secretary. Juncon, OBIO.-John Fish, President; G. W. Barnes, Treas-ner. nrer. MINNEAPOLIS, MINN.--President, J. B. Bassett; Secretary, Aston Grethen. NEW YORK, N.Y.-J. B. Brown, President; D. M. Bennett, Secretary. 87. JOSEFH, MO.-F. V. Wise, President; T. H. Kennedy, Secretary.

Soretary.
 Secretary.
 Beretary.
 Beretary.
 Barbady.
 BalbBol. IND. - President, S. J. Dickson; Secretary, W. Allen.
 New Onleans, LA. - President, E. Vorster; Secretary, J. B. Wallace.
 BAY Cirv. Mich. - President, S. M. Green; Secretary, S. M. Johnson

BAT Johnson. CLEARFIELD, PA.-S. Widemire, President; H. Hoover, Secretary.

(For THE INDEX.)

The Relations of Moral and Æsthetic Life.

BY JOHN W. CHADWICK.

The relation of art to morals, art to religion, art to life, has latterly been scrutinized by many different writers; and many different conclusions have been reached, two of which have attained an evil prominence

He has latterly been scrutinized by many different withers; and many different conclusions have been reached, two of which have attained an evil prominence.
One of these is the conclusion that between art and morals there is no natural relation. The artist, we are told, must never be a preacher. When he becomes a preacher, be either cases to be an artist, or fatally mars his work. Beauty must be sought for its own sake, with no ulterior purpose. The distinguished apostle of this theory is Henri Tains, the great French critic; so great that his works, though vitiated, cannot be spolled, by any theory that he parabeter, and have arrived by any theory that he parabeter, and have arrived at the conclusion that beauty is so far from being the ally and servant of vitue that it is its actual suemy; so that no one can choose them both. To choose vitue is to surrender beauty. To choose beauty its to bid vitus a respectrat, some max consigning of religion. Go back far enough, and we find that the various arts had no existence on their own account; that they were all her children, and her willing servants, —as were many children of their parents in the former times. The earliest posme service, and laws, in the work of building temples in which to bouse the stateme of the gods, and africe art. The modern drama, too, originated which they stood. That the Greek drama had a figure, was for the sole purpose of making attened of dramatic art. The modern drama, too, originated which they stood. That the Greek drama had a religious origin is well known to every student of regulations of the gods, and afrine which they stood. That the Greek drama had a religious origin. Bu the work of building temples in which to bouse the stateme of the gods, and afrine of religion. "In the work of suilding temples in which the stood. That the formet songer of any set and the sole on the stateme of the gods. The Greek architecture also had its force, so and which we have all heard so much, is not any new thing, but an instance of "surri her inspiration.

her inspiration. That it has been so, thus far in the world's history, would be easy to determine from the most casual re-view of it. Shakspeare, the greatest of all artists, would at first glance seem the most independent of religion; but "himself from God he could not free," any more than Phidias, or Angelico. His dramas are related to Gothic architecture, just exactly as the drames of Eschylus and Sophocles are related to the Parthenon. In Greece, temple and drama were alike expressions of religion—finished expressions, without mystery, statuesque and cold. Hamlet, on the contrary, impresses us precisely as does a Gothic catchedral. Its grandeur and its gloom are there; its infinite suggestiveness, its divine longing and dissatisfaction, its music sweet and sad, deep chants and solem miserres, its pictured windows all aglow with saintly and angelic companies. We cannot allow that Gothic architecture is an expression of religious sentiment, without allowing Hamlet to have been the same.

INDEX-JULY 30, 1
As for his moral sentiments, Shakspeare had no right, as a dramatic writer, to express them in his productions. He is not careful to have allowing they do not do so in life; and his object was to hold a mirror up to Nature. But he does a great deal betre. He always gives to virtue an inherent beauty, and an authoritative charm, quite independent of all consequences. Isoo, though triumphant and erulting, would be just as hateful to us as if utterly disgraced and rule. Opticia's virtue shines the brighter for the clouds it plerces with its wondrous ray. The crowning glory of Shakspeare is the silent homage which he always pays to truth and righteousness, and always wins from us.
The dramatic poet cannot be formally didactic; but many other artists may be, and without prejudicing their power and influence. They can be teachers and preachers without being a whit less artists.
"The perfection of beauty" is reached only by ergressing or suggesting moral height or purity.
The rowning sort height or purity.
The dramatic poet cannot be formally didactic; but many other artists may be, and without prejudicing their power and influence. They can be teachers and preachers without being a whit less artists.
"The perfection of beauty" is reached only by ergression.
The transmite that inspired its architects to lay its deep foundations and its deep foundations and to lift its tapering spires into the silent and astonished air. That "frozen music" lures the heart to deeps compared with which the ocean's deepest bed is shallowness; to heights whereto the highest mountains have not climbed-no, nor the stars, that seem more distant seen from their domes and pinnacles. All beauty, whether of God's or man's creation, in its essential quality has a religious or an ethical attraction. In its very nature it is infinite, relatively, at least, to human apprehen-sion. As yet, no man has laid the line upon it. No man can tell us the why and wherefore of the beauti-ful. If your friend cannot, looking straight through his own eyes, see that the picture, or the statue, or the landscape, is beautiful, you will hardly convince him by the most cogent arguments. They will be more apt to prove to him your own unloveliness, than the beauty of the object in dispute. Goethe says: "The beautiful is a manifestation of secret laws of Nature, which, but for this appearance, would be forever concealed." But this explains noth-ing. It is only a confession of the mystery. And because beauty is thus fathomless, thus infinite, it leads the soul into the presence of the infinite One. It is essentially religious. "The light that never was on sea or land"

"The light that never was on sea or land"

It is seentially religions. "The light that never was on saw or land" is reflected from all beautiful objects ; and this it is fast makes our eyes swim with auch happy, bealing tasks when we are gazing on any picture, or land-scape, or living face and form, that has this nameless honor; this it is that lifts our hearts above the trees-to any picture, or land-scape, or living face and form, that has this nameless honor; this it is that lifts our hearts above the trees-to any picture, or land-scape, or living face and form, that has this nameless honor; this it is that lifts our hearts above the trees-to any the mountains into more peerless allittags, built have in the finest essence of prayer. The beauty is no absolute quality is asserted on the ground that things considered beautiful at one other time, and by another people. The same argi-ment is used to prove that goodness is a crotchet of heres in the inmost quality of actions, and characters, heres in the inmost quality of actions, and characters, heres in the inmost quality of actions, and characters, heres in the inmost quality of actions and characters, here is used to prove that goodness is a crotchet of heres in the inmost quality of actions, and characters, heres in the inmost quality of actions, and there are here the assolute character of the them from the here the assolute character of the them from the here the absolute character of the done, any here the absolute character of the dones whosy here the absolute character of the fashion" is here the effect of beauty. There is creating a bit, when here here thinks feit to be more important than to be beauty the defines feit to be more important than to be aver here thinks feit were one such thing as beauty. And Dary here thinks, if every one were cast in the same do beauty here the inflect of beauty. The be and the same term of here would be no such thing as beauty. And Dary here the inflect of beauty. Here the same the other is here would be no such thing 1874.

"Nature is made better by no mean, But Nature makes that mean. Over that art Which you say adds to Nature is an art That Nature makes."

But Nature makes that mean. Giver that sit That Nature makes." When Jesus said to his disciples, "Be ye perfect, seen as your Father in Heaven is perfect," he adopt-ed at into the Christian family. For art is an at-tempt to reproduce, and to perpetuate, the beauty of the outward universe, and the inward life of man. It is the soul's cry for permanence; its hunger for the bread of immortality. No single form of art is com-petent to the reproduction of the multiformity of Nature and of life. Architecture is called "frozen music," and painting is called "silent poetry," and poetry "speaking painting;" but these figures of speech tend to mislead us. Tyndall could express sound in terms of color, but only to a limited extent; enough, however, to lead us to imagine what a sim-phony, or rather symchromy, of color we should have if Beethoven's seventh symphony, for example, could be thus translated. But, like sound and color, the different arts are only to a slight degree convertible. They are not duplicates, but complements. Scuipt-ure can only represent the moment; the epic poem may be crammed with years of joy, and pain, and vitory. The painter dares not attempt to float of upon the palette the fine gold of the start; but the of our inexpressible thought, of our emotion deeper the values with brighter and more spiritual ray. These are the exquisite revenges with which the si-ter arts repay their special limitations. When all the start are and the bears us on its tides of harmory into the havens of ineffable delight and glory. Mu-sic is man's best gift to God of all things beaulful. The iandscape is more beautiful than any painting; the human form than any statue; the Alpe than any cathedral. But music is a new creation, where only the first hint is taken from the external school of sture. No bird that flies is master of the simplet melody. Did not God work in us, and all our work and joy revert at last to him, it would seem that here, for once, the creature had "surpasse

In a book called Music and Morals, the author tries to show the mutual relation of these two com-manding facts. Of course, he sees that music cannot be didactic, in the sense of formulating rules of con-duct. It can do no thinking. It can express no thought. When it is set to certain words, it can by itself suggest the thought embodied in those words; but this suggestion is not expression. Music is the vehicle of emotion, and, as such, the same music is capable of holding many varieties of emotion. But music is also the creator of emotion; and it can cre-ate emotion of a great many different kinds,-now dreamy and languid, now yague and realless, now vigorous and inspired, now yearning and aspiring. now deep and calm. The odes with which Tyrisus fired the Spartan heart to courage and resolve, de-pended much upon the words for their effect, no doubt; but had they been sung to dreamy, sensuous music, the music would have neutralized the words; and the Spartans would have been anervated by the singing, rather than inspired. Do you suppose the dance-music of Strauss ever awakened a generous emotion in any human breast; that any one erer found it a fit vehicle for any generous emotion that already stirred within him; that it ever made a listen-er even happy with a noble and invigorating happi-pens? Do you suppose that, if the German people had been largely fed upon such music for the ist half century, they would have been able to roll back the tide of French invasion, and turn it into uter rout, and rum, and dismay? And if music, which, alone of all the art, is limit-

<text><text><text>

In antevered near." But the moral is the measure of the finest health to which the artist can attain. That is the greatest picture, or statue, or poem, which does not merely rest us from our weariness, does not only quicken in us an ecstasy of pure and simple joy, but which sends us back upon our deepest thought and hollest intui-tion; which aummons us to a more natural and ele-vated disposition; which rebukes our mean ambitions and our pality aims, and awakens us to a sense of grand and awful poesibility. There are artists who have done this, and who can do it still; who, being dead, yet speak to us; who, still alive, address us from their spiritual thrones with words of loftlest encouragement. Taine may argue, and Swinburne and his crew may rave, against them; but they are seated all too firmly on their thrones to be thus easily ismounted. Their thrones are the affections of humanity, which is so grateful for no other service as for that which broadens its horizon, and makes its noral sense more stern and exigent.

aumanity, which is so grateful for no other service as for that which broadens its horizon, and makes its noral sense more stern and exigent. "Blessed are the eyes that see the things that yee "well may the preacher say, in these last days, to 'people, the province of whose esthetic life has been o taddenly and so generously enlarged. Since the un bas turned copyist for us, men of the most modurate income can afford to grace their walls with etter pictures than a king could purchase fifty years go. With the help of the photographer, we can take our houses temples, and worship may become one an bourly exercise of inward need and satisfaction. Close to my house, the church bells ever and non clang out, during the Lenten days, their invitation. My pictures are my psalm, my prayer, yi litany, my glad Te Deum, and my Gloria in Ezcele. I rise from my books, and go about and look at tem. I wonder if the liturgy in the church yonder leps as fresh, and yields new meanings with such ordigality I go back to my books angle, impressed its with the tenderness and glory of our mortal life. "How fails a lot to fill."

"How fair a lot to fill Is left to each man still."

be mysteries of Nature and of life, of beauty and of ve, of self-devotion and self-sacrifice, have been the in upon my heart with healing, sanctifying

"Heard are the voices, Heard are the sages, The worlds and the ages; Choose well,-your choice is Brief and yet endless.

"Here eyes do regard you In eternity's stillness, Here is all fullness, Ye brave, to reward yon: Work, and despair not."

t of the perfection of beauty God hath shined. s it not well worth while, think you, to build in our homes an altar to the beautiful, and to serve with a tender assiduity from day to day? Shall we t of uses, and forget the spiritual uses of such joys art can quicken? Are there not many other things that we can better afford to live without, than without music, and pictures, and poetry, and such high things as these? Are we wise to let the butcher, and the grocer, and the tailor, and the milliner, have always the first chance at our resources, and give only what is left after their raiding to the painter and mu-sleian? Are we wise to spend so much money upon merely pretty things — things merely ornamental, things which really interfere with use, as beauty nev-er should—when we might spend the same money for comething really beautiful, something that would be a perpetual friend and monitor? It is well for us that the most beautiful things of all are so free to all; that that

"There is no price set on the lavish summer, And June may be had by the poorest comer."

There is no price set on the layish summer, "And June may be had by the poorest come." The the love of ar reacts upon the love of Nature, of our books and pictures are gateways which is react to the boundless hospitality of the see or sky, and the best of all the beauty man has made has, is to the boundless hospitality of the see or sky, and the best of all the beauty man has made has, but would seem, the lowest market value. There is a superficial and misleading. We can buy Shakspeare's works for a few dollars. But this market price appeared works," though they were in the first folio speare's works for a few dollars were, as odd all more, that we would stead the cost of all the beauty man has made has, is a store for a few dollars. But this market price appeared works, "though they were in the first folio do and precious to and the works," though they were in the first folio do and great and misleading are speared as each state. That coats more, agod deal more, the works of the seart way is be and the seare of the seare the first folio do and precious to a few dollars. But this market price are the first folio do and precious to a few dollars are speared as the seare with their spiritual contents. That coats there of the seare the first folio do and precious to a few dollars are seare when a bundred years provide the seare when the people east in their great, roofless when the people east in their great, roofless of the base of the seare the inhele the seare of the base of the base of the seare the hore of the base of the seare the wires do, or the base of the seare the wires do the base of the base of the base of the base of the seare the wires do, or the base of the seare the wires do the seare the wires do, or the base of the seare the wires do the seare the wires do the seare the wires do the base of the base of the seare the wires the the seare the wires do the base of the seare the wire the seare the badde the where other wire the base of the opinions about art may be the sign that God has some better things in store for us than we have ever yet achieved. If only America could cry out to God for beauty, as now she cries to him for wealth; if only Pluto would abdicate, and Apollo would ascend his throne,---things would be very different from what they are. But we have much to learn between that time and now. One may fill his house with pictures by great artists, and have less enjoyment of beauty than the child whose colored picture-books demand the tribute of his unaffected admiration. "Verily, I say unto you, Unless ye be converted and become as little children, ye can in nowise enter the kingdom of" the beautiful. If there is any future for this kingdom in America, its promise must be looked for, not in the valger patronage of the devotees of fashion, but in the honest aspirations of the whole community. In short, we must be a great people before we can produce a beauty that shall have enduring grace and power. There must be a great people before we can produce a beauty that shall have enduring graces and power. There must be a great people before we can produce a beauty that shall have enduring for an ampler demonstration, and, now and then, a volce that shall enliven with its rounded utterance this "passion play" which is to be a spectacle for men and angels. To-day, the great majority are in a state of doubt or half-belief. From such a state can come no glorious achievement. The great ages always have been, and always must be, ages of faith. But the faith of the future cannot be the faith of the past, resuscitated by the help of tepid baths of sentiment, or apostolical manipulation. It must be a new faith in God, in man, in the life which now is, in charac-ter, in labor and sincerity. And when this faith arrives, and is the order of the day, there will be a corresponding art, the form of which no mas can prophesy.

corresponding art, the form of which no man can prophesy. Till then, and always, the supreme beauty is that of the sincere and loving soul. Where this is pres-ent, it will light up any face, behind which it resides, with a bewitching splendor. It could make the puffy face of Socrates appear to the young men of Athens more beautiful than their carved Apollos, or their living Theodotas. It could make Sidney's face, for all its want of comeliness, the resting place of the Eternal. This is the perfection of beauty, and God shines out of it forever. "Fear God," says Emerson,

"and where you go men shall think they walk in hal-lowed cathedrais."

"Largess, from seven-fold heavens, I pray descend On all who toll for beauty! Never feet Grow weary, that have done har bidding sweet About the careleas world! For she is friend And darling of the universe; and day by day She comes and goes, but never dies, So precious is she in the eternal cyes. Oh, dost thou scorn her seeing, what fins way Shel dott avenget For heaven, because of her, Shell one day hnd the fitter. How old hours Of star-rapt night about thy heart had curied— And thou hadst felt the morning's golden stir, And the appealing loveliness of the world!"

THE TOMBS OF THEBES.

(Extracts from a Letter of Rev. J. E. Carpenter to the "Unitarian Herald," England.)

The new on our return voyage, after having the series are never full of the deepest interest at Thebes; and I will ask you to communicate, to any riteria wave full ask you to communicate, to any riteria wave full ask you to communicate, to any riteria wave full ask you to communicate, to any riteria wave full ask you to communicate, to any riteria wave full ask you to an elid citile; past the series of the length elist past and you and the series of the length elist past and you and you and you are to hear, you and you and you are to hear, you are to hear, you are to hear, you are to hear, you are the line, you are the series and you are the line, you are the series of the order of the ore to rest among the noble dead; he had been proved unworthy, and was dismissed to wander an unburied

The second secon

ers, and leopard-skin rugs; there were ploughing, sowing, and reaping; cabinet making, with its con-nected arta; the carving of a colossus, glass blowing, hunting and fishing, goldsmith's work, social pict-ures of festive scenes,—are all among the subjects selected by which to adorn the tombs. Their prepa-ration must have occupied many years. Not the least interesting parts of some of the royal sepulchres were the unfinished, to which their occupant was brought ere they were complete. In some the walls were merely rough hewn, and made ready for the plaster on which the design was drawn. Elsewhere the draughtsman had been there with his red pencil, and the master had come and corrected in black his faulty outlines. And then come the tidings that the royal owner is dead; and when once he is laid in his "everlasting habitation" he must not be disturbed by the intrusion of the painter, or the noise of the sculp-tor's chisel. There is something inexpressibly affect-ing in the care thus bestowed upon the dead. Strange is it, too, by the side of conceptions so spirit-ual as those which seem to underlie the symbolism by which they were expressed. Doubless, the was Strange is it, too, by the side of conceptions so spirit-mal as those which seem to underlie the symbolism by which they were expressed. Doubless, the vast proportion of the people knew little of the profound ideas which were wrapped up in the Egyptian system. But at least the faith of immortality was strong with them, however incomprehensible their sublime mono-thelem may have been to the masses. How Moese could have been brought up in the midst of it with-out sharing it, or how, sharing it, he could refrain from communicating it to his countrymen, is one of the historical difficulties which must remain forever unsolved. But, looking at the great works which so early distinguished the Egyptians—their canals, their pyramids, their colossal statues, their temples, which reveal so much command of material wealth and resource; looking at their monarchy which lasted two millenniums and s half, and was so rooted in the hearts of the people that the sovereign might be away in foreign lands nine years, and come back and find everything the same; looking at their works of art and the remains of their once noble literature,— one must admit that they were the most wonderful people of antiquity, and laid deep and strong the foundations of our modern civilization. Only imag-ine what it would be, if Greece could have been blotted out of history. But Athens was said to have been an Egyptian colony; and the wisest of her chil-dren were content to learn from the priests of Sais and of On. We left Thebes with regret,—who, induced, could been an Egyptian colony; and the wisest of her chil-dren were content to learn from the priests of Sals and of On. We left Thebes with regret,—who, indeed, could part from such memorials of the past without a sigh? The rising Nile now flood the temples which three thousand years ago stood above its reach; the two colossi in the plain are slowly being surrounded by its mud. Seven feet thick it has accumulated already; how long off is the day when wheat will grow on the top of the great obelisk at Karnak, and the hall of columns lie beneath the beans! The old contest is continually going on between the river and the desert; but it is the river that gains ground, and slowly extends the blessings of its soil upon the sand that bounds the plain on either hand. Unique in its natural features, it was not surprising that Egypt should also enjoy a singular eminence for its social system. If it was rigid, so were the rocks that bound the valley; if its lines of demarcation between class and class were strongly marked, so were those which parted the desert and the meadow. How much in-tiuence the conformation and the climate of the coun-try exerted on the gradual development of Egyptian civilization, it is impossible now to trace with minute-neas. But, at any rate, it was not inconsiderable, and it appears in their architecture and their art, as well as in their government and their art, as well as in their government and the religion. their government and their religion.

MACMITLAN & Co. have published a new and en-larged edition of Dr. Maudaley's Body and Mind; a work of special interest and value, as presenting the latest results of physiological and psychological in-vestigations. The new volume contains Dr. Mauda-ley's lecture on "Conscience and its Organization," and essays on "Hamlet" and "Swedenborg," The former presents novel views, from which most ethical writers will dissent. But the papers on Hamlet and Swedenborg deserve careful reading for their learned and able handling of the nice and profound questions involved, and for the light of medical and psychological science they throw back over characters which have been microscopically, but are still variously, explained. science they throw back over characters which have been microscopically, but are still variously, explained. He thinks the insanity that Hamlet exhibits is not of a simple character. There is actual feigning, as he himself confesses; but there is beneath it all a real melancholls mood of mind, a genuine morbid subjec-tivity. Even in his feigned exhibitions of madness there are sincere outbreaks of this excitable disposi-tion. When he would feign, he is so genuinely moved that he falls out of his character, and speaks with such sincerity and significance that the king tion. When he would feign, he is so genuinely moved that he falls out of his character, and speaks with such sincerity and significance that the king rightly suspects the plot. He spoils the part he should play, because he is too much interested in the events, and cannot lay aside his personality. In many important respects, Dr. Maudaley thinks Ham-let represents Shakspeare's own thoughts and feel-ings. He finds that poetic justice does not get done on earth, and he does not degrade his art to represent it. He thinks that all Swedenborg's revelations to-gether do not show so much intellectual power as one of Shakspeare's great dramas, and the heaven with which he professes to have been so familiar does not compare, in point of vividness and ideal representa-tion, with Dante's hell. One was the creation of a mind under hallucination, the other of a mind in a state of health, working according to law. But be-cause a man's mind is unsound all that he says is not necessarily folly. It is a vulgar and mischievous error to suppose that a person who speaks rationally and behaves with propriety cannot be mad, as it is also to suppose madmen necessarily incapable of ra-tional intellectual exertion.—Golden Aye.

BIBLE-BEADINGS.

GOD AS CREATOR, PERVADEE, ALL-SUSTAINER.

(1.) There is an Infinite Being which existed before heav-There is an infinite Being which existed before heav-en and earth. How calm it is! How free! It lives alone. It changeth not. It moveth every-where but never andfers. We may look on it as the Mother of the Universe.

I,--I know not its name. To give it a title, I call it the Way. When I try to give it a name, I call it Great. After calling it Great, I call it Fugitive. After calling it Fugitive, I call it Distant. After calling it Distant, I say, It comes back to me,

The reason which can be reasoned is not the Eternal Reason.

The name which can be named is not the Eternal Name

- Name. Would you go before it, you cannot see its face: Would you go behind it, you cannot see its face: If you look at it, there is nothing to fill the eye: If you listen to it, there is nothing to fill the eye: But if you use it, it is inexhaustible! For Great Reason is all-pervading. It can be on the right hand, and at the same time on the left. It may be named with the greatest: it may be named with the smallest. In love it nourisheth all things. All wait upon it for life, and it refuseth none. All things return home to it, but it does not lord it over them. This Spirit I call the Abyss-Mother. —Lao-Taze.

- (2.) Know that that which does not see by the eye, but by

Know that that which does not see by the eye, but by which the eyes see, is Brahma. Know that that which does not hear by the ear, but by which the ears hear, is Brahma. Know that that which does not breathe by breath, but by which the breath is breathed, is Brahma. By him who thinks that Brahma is not comprehended, by him he is comprehended. He who thinks Brahma is comprehended, —he does not know him. bim. -The Talavakara Upanishad.

(3.)

Varuna, the Lord of these worlds, sees as if he were near.

- near. If a man stands, or walks, or rides, if he goes to lie down or get up, --what two people sitting togeth-er whisper, --King Varuns knows it; he is there as a third.
- The two seas (sky and ocean) are the loins of Varuna: he is also contained in this small drop - variant: he is also contained in this shall dop of water.
   e who should flee far beyond the sky, even he would not be rid of Varuna the king. And he has counted the twinklings of our eyes.
   Atharva-Veda. (cf. Ps. cxxxix.)

- b) Sk thee, tell me the truth, O Ahural Who was, from the beginning, the Father of the pure creat-ure? Who has made a path for the sun and the stars? Who but thou makes the moon to war and to wane?
- and to wane? I ask thes, tell me the truth, O Ahura! Who holds the earth and the clouds that they do not fall? Who holds the sea and the trees? Who has given swiftness to the wind and the clouds? Who is the Creator of the good spirit? I ask thee, tell me the truth, O Ahura! Who has made the kindly light and the darkness? Who has made the kindly sleep and the swaking? Who has made the mornings, the noons, and the nights? Who has made him who ponders on the measure of the laws? -Zendavesta (cf. Job xxxvii-xxviii, Is. xl; Ps. civ.)

I am that which has been, which is, which will be: and no one yet has lifted the veil that covers me. -Egyptian.

- (6.) When they shall say to me, What is his name? what shall I say unto them? And God said unto Moses, I AM THAT I AM: And he said, Thus shalt thou say unto the children of Israel, I AM hath sent me unto you. Lord, thou hast been our dwelling-place in all genera-tions?
- tions.

- tions. Before the mountains were brought forth, or ever thou hadst formed the earth and the world, even from everlasting to everlasting, thou art God. Of old hast thou laid the foundation of the earth: and the heavens are the work of thy hands. They shall perish, but thou shalt endure: yea, all of them shall wax old like a garment; as a vesture shalt thou change them, and they shall be changed: changed: But thou art the same, and thy years shall have no

- end. Canst thou, by searching, find out God? canst thou find out the Almighty unto perfection? It is as high as heaven; what canst thou do? deeper than hell; what canst thou know? Behold, I go forward, but he is not there; and back-ward, but I cannot perceive him: On the left hand, where he doth work, but I cannot behold him: he bideth himself on the right hand, that I cannot see him:

that I cannot see him : But he knoweth the way that I take. --Old Testament.

Dauger, Google

(7.) Full of Zeus are all the streets, all the markets of men; full of him is the sea and the harbors,— and we also are his offspring. tratus. (cf. Acts xvii-28.)

(8.) Has Deity any throne besides earth, sea, air, beavens, and virtue? Why do we seek the gods beyond? Jupiter is all you see, is all you have moved.

(9.) Jupiter, the guardian and ruler of the universe, the soul and spirit, the Lord and Master of this earthly sphere, the cause of causes, upon whom all things hang; whose wisdom oversees the world, that it may move uncontrolled in its course; from whom all things proceed, by whose spirit we live, who comprises all we see.

(10.) This motionless cause of motion is a necessary being; and, by virtue of such necessity, is the all-perfect being. This all-pervading principle penetrates heaven and all Nature. It possesses sternal, per-fect happiness, and its happiness is in action. The mood of the divine existence is essential energy, and as such it is a life most excellent, bleased, everlasting. It is thought thinking itself, the activity of pure intelligence,—such is the perfect, eternal life of God. The primal cause of change, this absolute perfection, moves the world by the universal desire for the absolute good; by the attraction exercised upon it by the aternal mind. —Arvitolle. Aristotle.

(11.)

- (11.)
  The paths to God are more in number than the breathings of created beings. Whatever road I take joins the highway that leads to thee.
  Ride thou on for eternity through the empyrean, mounted on thy ideal, --thou shalt not stride beyond his threshold! Soar thou beyond all limit to the roof of the universe, thou shalt behold one tile of his dwelling, --one tile, no more.
  Yet God hath made all atoms in space mirrors, and printeth each one with his perfect face.
  Wonld'st know where I found the Supreme? One step beyond myself. Behind the vell of self shines unseen the beauty of the Loved One.
  Which is the great name of God? Communicate to me his least name, and I will return to thee his greatest. All nations and languages repeat the name of God; even infancy lisps it, Allah, Taugari, Yezdán, Elohim. Yet cannot his priase be duly expressed by mortal till the dumb man shall be eloquent, and stocks and stones find voice; till the silent universe rejoices in languages
  Wording Persion Posts

gaage -Mediceval Persian Poets.

(12.) Him who dare name And yet proclaim-"Yes,-I believe"? Who that can feel His heart can steel To say-"I disbelieve"? The All-Embracer, All-Sustainer To say - 1 disorieve 'f' The All-Embracer, All-Sustainer, Doth he not embrace, sustain, Thee, me, Himself? Lifts not the Heaven his dome above? Doth not the firm-set earth beneath us lie? And, beaming tenderly with looks of love, Climb not the everlasting stars on high? Are we not gazing in each other's eyes? Nature's impenetrable agencies, Are they not thronging on thy heart and brain, Viswless, or visible, to mortal ken, Around thee wearing their mysterious reign? Fill thence thy heart, how large soe'er it be, --And in the feeling, when thou art wholly blest, Then call it what thou wilt,--Bliss! Heart! Love! God! Lhave no name for it,--'tis feeling all.

God 1 I have no name for it,—'tis feeling all. Name is but sound and smoke Shrouding the glow of Heaven. —Goethe.

(13.)

I have felt A presence that disturbs me with the joy Of elerated thoughts; a sense subline Of something far more deeply interfused, Whose dwelling is the light of setting suns, And the round ocean, and the living sir, And the blue sty, and in the mind of men : A motion and a spirit, that impels All thinking things, all objects of all thought, And rolls through all things. -Wordsworth.

- (14.) The sun, the moon, the stars, the seas, the hills, and the plains-a not these, O Soul, the Vision of Him who Are reigna
- Is not the Vision He? though He be not that which He seems?
- Dreams are true while they last, and do we not live in dreams?
- Earth, these solid stars, this weight of body and limb, Are they not sign and symbol of thy division from Him?

- Dark is the world to thee: thyself art the reason why; For is he not all but thou, that hast power to feel "I am I!"
- Glory about thee, without thee: and thou fulfillest thy doom, Making Him broken gleams, and a stifled splendor and gloom.
- Speak to Him thou, for He hears, and Spirit with Spirit can meet-Spirit can meet-Closer is He than breathing, and nearer than hands and feet.
- God is law, say the wise, O Soul, and let us rejoice, For if He thunder by law, the thunder is yet His voice.
- Law is God, say some: no God at all, says the fool; For all we have power to see is a straight staff bent in a pool;
- And the ear of man cannot hear, and the eye of man
- cannot see; But if we could see and hear, this Vision-were it not He? Alfred Tennyson.

GERMAN NOTIONS IN BEGABD TO TEM-PERANCE AND THE SABBATH.

GERMAN NOTIONS IN DEGABD TO TEM-PERANCE AND THE SABBATH.

oppressive, who could expect them to think other-wise? Secondly, the Germans in America complain that they are compelled by law to observe the Sunday in the American way. They have their doctrine of the day, which is that of the Christian Church in their native country; they land upon our shores, find a church with a different doctrine, and find, moreover, that they are compelled to conform to it by the civil law. Assume, now, that the American doctrine is theologically the right one; that the Sunday is in our sense holy time; that its observance as such is matter of religious duty; and that those who fail at this point commit a sin, for which they will surely be pun-ished hereafter,—Is it, however, the business of the State to enforce religious duties as such? Is it the business of the State to decide between different theo-logical conceptions, espouse one as against another, State to enforce religious duties as such ? Is it the business of the State to decide between different theo-logical conceptions, espouse one as against another, and bring the strong arm of the law to its support? Here is a distinction between what is right as theo-logical doctrine, and what is right as an exercise of civil authority, which our people too commonly over-look. So long as the Germansrest from labor, do not disturb the civil order, do nothing but what is inno-cent from the purely civil point of view, the Com-monwealth should hold them as citizens guildess, however heretical otherwise their conception and use of the day may be. Undoubtedly our laws go further, and contemplate the legal enforcement of the Sunday as a religious day. The German citizens cannot un-derstand this. What they have been tanght from youth up, and by Christian teachers, to regard as in-inocent before God and man, is found to be prohibited by law, and prohibited beyond dispute on theological grounds; and this, too, in the very country they have come to expecting to find a perfect separation of Church and State. They are offended, irritated,----quite without grounds, shall we say ?--D. A. Was-son's Stutigart Correspondence to the "Boston Dathy Advertiser."

AT SHREWSBURY, ENGLAND, a poor old man, when dying, made use of an extraordinary figure of speech to express his gratitude to a Mr. Polehampton, the clergyman who attended him: "Ahlsir, I'm going first, buit we shall meet again; and won't 1 jump up and flap my old wings when I see you a coming through them chrystial gates!" He had the Ortho-dox expectation, described by Coleridge, of becoming "a sort of celestial poultry."

Hoetrn.

"THE FIVE KNAVES." AN OBLEFTAL TALE! BY JOHN G. BAIR.

Once on a time, in Indostan, Once on a time, in Indostan, A thief conceived a cranning plan (So potent is the voice of Hope) To save his throttle from the rope, Though now the day was drawing nigh When he by law was doomed to die. He bade the jaller tell the King He fain would show a wondrous thing— A precious secret fairly worth The car of any prince on earth. The ear of any prince on earth. And now the culprit, being led Into the royal presence, said : "This golden coin which here you see, If planted, will become a tree Whose fruit-increased a hundred fold-Will be, like this, the purest gold. I pray your majesty to try If this be true before I die." With this the king and courtlers went Into the garden with intent To plant the curious coin of gold. But now, when all was ready, "Hold !" Exclaimed the thief, "this band of mind Would surely spoil our whole design; The hand that plants the gold must be (Else all is naught) entirely free From stain of fraud; and so I pray From stain of rrating and so t pray Your gracious majesty will lay The seed in earch." "Yes—no—in sooth," The King replied, "for in my youth I pilfered from my sire; some stain, For all my sorrow, may remain. My good prime minister is here; His hand, no doubt, is wholly clear Of any taint." "Nay," he replied, of any tank: "May," he replied, "That's more than I can well decide; As tax-receiver-now-I may Hare kept a trifle. So I pray To be excussed, for pradence' sake; And let our commissary take The coin in hand. Sure that were best, For he. no doubt, can strand the start " For he, no doubt, can stand the test." "Faith," said the commissary, "I Would rather not. I can't deny My good intent; but since I pay Large sums of money every day For soldiers, sallors, and a herd Of spies-I wouldn't give my word I have not kept a small amount Not entered in my book account. Since then an error-e'en the least-Would spoil the charm, pray let the priest Proceed to plant the coin of gold." "Nay, that I fear would be o'er bold," Replied his reverence; "I deal In tithes and sacrificial dues; And so I beg you will excuse My sharing in a work like this, Where nothing must be done amiss." "Then," said the thief, "since no man here, As we have learned, is wholly clear Of knavish tricks, I ask you whether We should not all be hung together? The monarch, laughing, made reply : "Why, yes, if every rogue must die! Well, since we are five knaves confe-I pardon you, and spare the rest!"

NEW SUBSCRIPTIONS TO INDEX STOCK.

Mrs. F. W. Christern, Richard B. Westbrook	New York City,	One al	hare,
		Two		108
R. C. Spencer,	Milwaukee, Wis.		44	200
R. W. Rowes,	Boston, Mass.	One	÷й.	109
Chas. W. Story,	Boston, Mass,			109
E. W. Meddaugh,	Detroit, Mich.	Five		.590
Jacob Hoffner,	Cumminsville, Q.	One	46	100
John Welse,	Boston, Mass.		46	100
W. C. Russel,	Ithacs, N. Y.		M	100
A. W. Leggett,	Detroit, Mich.	46	44	100
B. F. Dyer,	Boston, Mass.	61	46	100
James Purinton,	Lynn, Mass,	44	44	100
F. A. Nichols,	Lowell, Mass.	#6	14	100
J. S. Palmer.	Portland, Mo.		66	100
Robt. Ormiston,	Brooklyn, N.Y.			100
Mrs. A. L. Richmond,	Lowell, Mass.		84	100
	LATWOIL, MIMSO,	N	+4	100
Mrs. Benj. Ireson,	Lynn, Mass.
J. E. Oliver,	Ithaca, N.Y.		#	100
E. H. Aldrich,	Providence, R.I.			100
Geo. L. Clark,	Providence, R.I.			100
W. M. Jackson,	Providence, R.I.	Two		200
Mrs. E. B. Chase,	Valley Falls, R.I.			100
L. F. Garvin,	Lonsdale, R.L.	One	M	100
James Damon,	Ipswich, Mass.	46	- 14	100
Joseph A. Barker,	Providence, R.I.			100

CASH RECEIPTS.

NORT MENCHIPTS. NOR THE WERE ENDING JULT 25. David Tenney, $3; J. A. J. Wilcox, $3; J. W. Scott, $1.50; Wm. Rotch, $3; Geo. Allen, $5; T. Lees, $1.60; J. Lamborn, $3; F. H. Buchanan, $1; R. D. Inrael, $3.20; Hugo Leon-hard, $3; J. H. Howland, $3; E. F. Underwood, $3; K. W. Frazer, $3; C. H. Chace, $1.50; W. C. Kelly, $1; Geo. Plum-mer, $1.50; M. O'Connell, $1; W. A. Lombard, $3; J. G. Dodge, $1; John Bentley, $3; A. A. Bell, $4; R. Humphrey, $1.60; R. G. Pell, 60 cts.; I. A. Bell, $4; R. Humphrey, $1.60; R. G. Pell, 60 cts.; A. A. Edl, $4; R. Humphrey, $1.60; R. G. Pell, 60 cts.; A. K. Loring, 40 cts.; G. H. Foster, $1.30. All receipts of cash will be schward.

Foster, $1.30. All receipts of cash will be acknowledged as above, and no other receipt sont nniese specially requested. Persons who do not see their remittances acknowledged within three weeks after sending, will please notify us.

. B.-Orders for Tracts or single numbers of THE IN-twhich are not on Asand will, if of small amount, be oth-ise filled to the same amount without further notice.

BOSTON, JULY 30, 1874.

SUNDAY LECTURES .-- The Editors of THE INDEX will lecture occasionally on Sundays, if desired, within a convenient distance of Boston.

PARAGRAPHS.

BY W. J. P.

THE QUESTION of allowing entire liberty of worship is agitated in Chill. A large number of members of the Chilian Congress have signed a motion for that object. Like other South American States, Chili is not much more than nominally a republic; else it would have found out before now that in a republic there can be no State-religion.

IT IS REPORTED that the aggregate of "religious charities" in England last year amounted to more than $8,000,000 in gold. It would be well if the statistics would also tell us what proportion of this sum had been given for purely humane and philanthropic objects, and what for ecclesiastical propagandism. It is becoming a question whether the bestowing of money to build up any form of sectarianism can rightly be reckoned as a charity.

DEAN STANLEY'S latest heresy is his saying at the Bunyan Festival in England, that "the Nonconformists have a splendid literature of their own, and we must remember that literature may be a channel of grace no less spiritual than sacraments or doctrines, chapels or churches." Good literature is indeed the good news of this age to thousands of souls—the only gospel that reaches them. Some of it bears the stamp of an inspiration genuinely divine, and will go into the Bible of coming ages. And that a dean should come so near saying this, shows that this literature is doing its good work in the church, too.

BISHOP CUMMINS has at length been formally deposed from the ministry of the Episcopal Church, by an official council of bishops; but, having once had the sacred hands laid upon him, he will still claim the office of bishop in his Reformed Church. One of the Episcopal churches of Louisville, Ky., has withdrawn from its old fellowship, and given its adhesion to the Reform movement. But the reform does not appear to have as yet much strength. It is neither broad nor deep enough. To change a few phrases in the Service-Book is not a reformation that can incite a large, popular following, nor does it meet the problems that demand the attention of scholars.

AN EVANGELICAL Almanac has been published, under the auspices of Dr. Cullis and his "Work of Faith," which contains some passage of Scripture for each day in the year. Dr. Cullis recommends the book to the public by eiting the following illustration of its usefulness:-

Conversions of sinful debtors to what Dr. Cullis calls gospel faith may be expected in large numbers, if it can be utilized by Yankee shrewdness in this way.

REV. JAMES MARTINEAU, who for thirty-three years has been President of Manchester New College, London, has resigned that position. A year ago he gave up the pastorate of his chapel in London; and it is now announced that he will devote his remaining years to the preparation of his writings for publication. Mr. Martineau has been in some respects the Channing of English Unitarianism, though his views approach very nearly those of Theodore Parker. He has been, however, less of a religious propagandist than either Channing or Parker. His temperament and studies have rather characterized him as a religious philosopher. And as one of the most liberal, able, and cultivated defenders of the intuitional philosophy as applied to religion, all theological scholars must hall the announcement of his collected writings with satisfaction. One of his latest pieces of work is an elaborate article, just published in the August number of Old and New, against the common traditional opinion that the Fourth Gospel is the production of the disciple John. It is a lucid and strong array of the arguments which show, in our opinion conclusively, that this remarkable book appeared in the second century, and is the bigoraphy of an ideal rather than an actual personage.

DE. EWELD, the eminent German scholar, and author of the History of Israel, has been sentenced to three months' imprisonment for an alleged libel on Prince Bismarck, in comparing him, in a magazine article, to Frederick II. and Napoleon III. The learned doctor, as a Hanoverian, has probably never cordially accepted the reconstruction of Germany under the leadership of Prussia; but it is more than doubtful whether German unity more than German freedom is to be permanently helped by such forcible repression of free speech. Another Catholic clergy-man, too, has been imprisoned in Prussia for obeying his Church rather than his government. In a contest between Catholicism and Protestantism, every lover of free thought would naturally side with the latter; yet when the contest goes so far that Catholics are sent to prison for conscience' sake, there is danger of awakening a reactionary sympathy for them as representing a persecuted cause. If Bismarck is great and far-seeing in his sagacity, he will bring this contest as soon as possible where it will be seen to be a conflict, not between two kinds of ecclesiastic authority, but between ecclesiastical repression of individual liberty as represented by the Roman Catholic Church on the one side, and the State standing for freedom of thought and conscience on the other.

THE Liberal Christian has begun editorially to prepare its readers for the next National Conference of Unitarians, to be held at Saratoga in September. Although it has latterly taken decided ground against the action of the Unitarian Association in the "Year-Book controversy," yet it deprecates any attempt to reopen that controversy at the Conference; and having heard a rumor that a proposition might be made for dropping the objectionable theological phrases from the preamble to the constitution of the Conference, and so getting rid of that long controversy, it puts itself beforehand into an attitude of energetic resistance to any such attempt. It says: "The historical party in our denomination have made the last sacrifices to the intuitionalists," and proposes as the only practical way of settling the denominational differences in the Conference this rather novel plan: that those who object to the theology of the preamble, yet "know that they sympathize fully with the spirit and general purposes of the Unitarian body," shall attend the Conference not as delegates but as friends, and perhaps be permitted, within certain defined limits, to take part in its proceedings-"as Jews and Catholic priests might be." The "practical" objection to this ingenious plan will probably be, that it is a "practical way" of putting those who attend simply in the capacity of "friends" outside of "the Unitarian body" in the category of another denomination.

A warren in the July number of the Unitarian Review and Religious Magazine, Mr. J. E. Walton, in an article on "Spiritual Gilts," takes up again with great earnestness and a good deal of vigor the question of the Prayer-Test as, not first raised, but introduced to the public, by Prof. Tyndall. Mr. Walton thinks that the Christian Church has shown great weakness and timidity by not accepting this challenge from science. He believes that the Bible is explicit on the subject, distinctly declaring that "the prayer of faith shall save the sick," giving numerous illustrations of such healing-power, and setting no limit in time for the cessation of the power; and he thinks that the proposed test was substantially, though perhaps not in form, a perfectly legitimate one. His theory, which has a Swedenborgian flavor, is that the divine forces act through the human mental organism, and that genuine prayer so changes the conditions of this organism that the divine energy can flow into it and work through it more freely, The Church, he says, has lost ground by giving up its faith in, and its practice of, this kind of miracle; and since the form of Prof. Tyndall's test, the selection of one ward at some hospital for the prayer-remedy, may be objectionable because of the difficulty of thus making a real application of it, he proposes as a fairer, and, it must be admitted, a severer form of test,-the establishment of a Prayer-Hospital for patients who have been pronounced by competent medical authority to be incurable by the ordinary medical treatment. He would have this hospital put under the charge of persons who believe in the prayer-cure, and no other remedy should be permitted ; then, if in such circumstances the patients should get well, as he believes, under a perfect fulfilment of the conditions, they would, to prayer must the credit be given. He admits that where science can cure, it may be the divine method; but man's extremity is God's opportunity: so, he says, where science confesses its impotence there let prayer be tried. This does seem a better test than that endorsed by Prof. Tyndall. But even if it should succeed, the question might arise, how much physical magnetism and the power of the patient's will had to do with the cure; for that these forces operate medicinally is a well-astested fact. Still, if the prayer-remedy can cure well-authenticated cases of cancer, and consumption, and other diseases declared medically incurable by a board of scientific physicians, the result (aside from its immediate humaneness) would furnish new and most interesting facts for physiological and psychological science to deal with, even though possible mental conditions of the patient might vitiate the experiment as a test of the efficacy of prayer. Why should not the Christian Church establish such an institution?

"THE OLD GIANT INTOLERANCE."

Dean Stanley has given several pointed lessons in religious charity to the ecclesiastic mind of England. His last was to go down to Bedford, and make the speech at the unveiling of the statue of John Bunyan,-Baptist tinker, preacher, "prisoner of the Lord," and author of Pilgrim's Progress, two handred years ago; and he used the occasion, as well be might, to note that the world was a gentler world than when John made lace, and wrote his book in Bedford Jail. In Pilgrim-phrase he said: The old Giant Intolerance, at that time so stout and hearty, now sits at the mouth of his cave with joints stiff and crazy, and can only grin at the heretics as they pass by. "But let us not rejoice prematurely," he adds; "the old giant is still alive. He may be seen in many shapes, on all sides, with many voices." As if to echo the warning, the same papers that report the speech bring word of some poor creatures just the other day burnt to death as witches in Catholic Mexico, and tell us of the Catholic bishops fined and imprisoned by Bismarck, who would forestall Church-Intolerance aiming at the State by State-Intolerance almed at the Church.

But the Christian world, especially the Anglo-Saxon portion of it, has indeed made progress in religious freedom since Bunyan's day; and while we still protest against our light afflictions which remain, it is worth while now and then to look back through even the Protestant centuries, and count the far more exceeding glory of our gains.

The great chiefe of Protestantism were by no means identical with the early advocates of "Free Religion." These latter were oftener exiles whom those chiefs had chased away, or recluse idealists and scholars housed in some rich protector's mansion, or obscure fanatics. When their book of praise is written, it will pass by Luther, and Calvin, and Knox, to honor less familiar names, - the Swiss Zwingli; Castellio, the Frenchman, who denounced the murder of Servetus at the time, and, first in modern Christendom, preached the innocence of intellectual error, and the duty of absolute toleration; Acontio, the Italian, perhaps the carliest to emphasize the principle of "few fundamentals in religion," through which, as through a gate, Reason has so often won its way into the strongholds of Christian bigotry; the two Socini, whose name was fastened revilingly to "toleration," and lifted up in literature upon it like blasphemers on a shameful cross,-"Toleration, that Socinian dogma;" that noble line, stretching a whole century, of Dutch Arminian teachers, whose light-bearing words went out through all the lands around them; some humble Baptists, too, and Quakers, will claim place, and John Goodwin, the Arminian Independent of London, who, isolated from all parties, took the open field against the Parliament and the ministers, in behalf of salvation even for pagans, and of toleration even for Jews, and Turks, and Papists, and prophesied to his enemies that he one day should be "had in honor for those very opinions" for which they threatened to make the name of Goodwin "an abhorring to the generations;" and among the rest to take high rank will stand those primitive Broad-Churchmen of England, of whom Tuiloch has lately written, the men who first used our English tongue to expound broadly and systematically this principle of religious toleration.

Diministry Google

 $\mathbf{s}_{i}$

N.C

 $\tilde{a}_{1}$

Ð,

33

h

5

З,

3

庵

7-12

ì,

 $\overline{\mathbf{x}}$

The common-place of to-day, that religion is one thing and the theologies another, was the rare vision in the century of the Reformation, and a very slowly dawning vision in the century after that. Men could cease to be Roman Catholics, but could not give up the Catholic idea that uniformity of doctrine, and of worship, a unified State-Church, in short, was essential to religion. The duty of stamping out papacy on the one hand, and heresy on the other, was believed in by all the principal reformers except Zwingli and Socinus, was enrolled in several of the new Confessions, was practised by every one of the Protestant governments, "Intolerance was the deadly original sin of the Reformed churches,"-inherited from its mother: "At the end of the sixteenth century the simple proposition that men for holding or declaring heterodox opinions in religion should not be burned alive, or otherwise put to death, was itself little else than a sort of heterodoxy,"-so Hallam writes. In the Church of England, Henry VIII. burned Baptists, Edward VI. burned Baptists, Elizabeth banished Bap tists, and imprisoned Presbyterians wholesale, and hung some Brownists ; even James I, burned two men for denying Christ's divinity. When the Presbyterians came to power, they not only put down prelacy, but passed their Draconic ordinance, bristling with death-penalties and life-imprisonments, against what they regarded as the most impious of the swarming sects and schisms. The ordinance was too savage to be executed. The "old Giant" had already lost his teeth, and could only snap his gums, and fill his dun-Then the Independents took their turn at geons. rule. Even as exiles they had shown their quality. Browne and Barrowe, hounded forth from the English Church as damnable heretics, as soon as they found breathing-space abroad, mounted-these gentle Comeouters !- the little platform of their own infallibility, to proclaim the right of compulsory conformity; and the first Independent Confession, published by a church of English exiles in Holland, 1596, maintained, "It is the duty of magistrates to root out all false ministries, voluntary religions, and counterfeit worships of God." As rulers, although they were the first party to grant anything like religions liberty, it was largely forced from them by the indignant spurring of Cromwell, to whom they voted the right to veto bills touching liberty of conscience, but not those suppressing heresies! As it was, three thousand Quakers went to prison while they held the power of the keys. And of alleged witches, Lecky says, there is reason to think more perished in England during the few years of the Commonwealth than in the whole period before or since; but witches lay outside of all men's tolerance, and Puritan theology only brought the belief and panic to the climax. When the Bishop's church returned with the Restoration, and the Dissenters were again prostrate under "Uniformity," "Conventicle," and "Five-Mile Acts," not a few among them actually preferred the persecution to any indulgence that would ease the hated Papists as well as themselves.

How slowly the idea of complete toleration won its way in men's minds is seen still more signally in the exceptions which the most advanced emancipators made in their schemes of toleration. Harrington, author of the Oceana, would exclude Papists, Jews, and Idolaters from his ideal State. Milton would exclude Papists as idolaters; and for a better reason even William Penn and Locke were against tolerating them-for Bismarck's reason,-because the Papists were themselves professed and principled intolerants. No wonder they felt so, for the Vaudols massacres had been renewed, and the London streets were paced by many a French Huguenot just driven from his home by the revocation of the Edict of Nantes. Jeremy Taylor, who contributed so much to the cause of freedom by his Liberty of Prophesying, is said to have found out, as Irish bishop, that certain Presbyterian parsons could be too troublesome to be allowed his neighborhood. Baxter and Bunyan himself, at least in his younger days, heartily hated the Quakers,-"in whom," our brave John Goodwin wrote, "there is little question that the devil dwelleth bodily." Finally, when William's Toleration Act was passed in 1689, Catholics and Unitarians were wholly excluded from its benefits, while Corporation and Test Acts still remained to disable from civil rights the members of the four tolerated sects, — disabilities that lingered, growing milder, till within our own memory.

Such was English toleration in Bunyan's day! But what advance is this from that pictured in Hallam's sentence for the sixteenth century, when men had just escaped from Rome! Still in England the Established Church carries privilege, and Dissent carries burdens; still Established Churches are the rule among the lands; still in Massachusefts the Statutebook has Sunday-laws whose ghosts can be "materialized" on mean occasion; still we have much freedom to work out in thought and life, while "religion" hinders us as well as helps us; but what great advance is ours beyond that seventeenth century, when men were just escaping from the little Romes of Protestantism! Save in special local cases, the only martyrdom for religious opinion a man can suffer now, among ourselves, is social martyrdom. His penalties are a church-trial, or the loaing of a school or a par-lsh, or being dropped from a Year Book, or bearing slurs and misrepresentations. What improvement in New England, even, since the Unitarian controversy fifty years ago! Indeed, the party of the heterodox and the indifferent are so strong, and so disposed to use their strength, that the most resounding wordblows are quite as likely to be those they give, not take,-illustrating the fact that liberty and equality abound long before fraternity.

To-day, no pilgrim who dares come out and pass by is greatly hurt by "the old Giant." They who do not dare are the ones who suffer most from him. they who still live in old communions where he sits grinning at the mouth of his empty caves, and where, half-unconsciously, the old feeling of subjection is still strong; as the negroes still said "Massa" to the white man after emancipation. Not among the heterodox, but among the Orthodox, we find his victims. Like the Pope, he has lost temporal sovereignty, but he keeps spiritual sovereignty over the faithful. His fetters now are on the mind and tongue; on the mind narrowing its range of thought and doubt, on the tongue muffling clear expression. Who strains a new meaning into an old creed rather than speak the fresh, strong meaning out; who uses an old form dead to the user though not to others: who clings to an old name for the comfort of its wonted sound; men who sacrifice distinctness of mental perception, and lower their standard of ethics from all sorts of half-good motives which sum up in this-that the consequence of their clearest thought and their exactest utterance would be too disastrons, perhaps to others even more than to themselves, in the present state of society .- these are the Giant's real victims to-day. A spiritual tyranny. He hurts only those who fear him, and hurts them inwardly.

Many influences are helping to break down even this rule. Among others an influence very strong will be the theory of evolution which science has been urging so impressively of late. When that theory is still better understood, still more widely impressed and trusted, when it is organized into our mental processes so as to become part of the way in which we look at things, then the day, not of this or that radical theology, indeed, but of Free Religion, will be at hand. For to one party it will give the courage of their thought as a natural growth; to the other it will give sympathy with traditions as natural roots; and to both a better undertanding of each other, and more charity. Again a scientific idea doing good to religion. W. C. O.

THE FOURTH GOSPEL.

The following paragraphs are the conclusion of Rev. James Martineau's essay on the Fourth Gospel, published in Old and New, and referred to in another column :--

From all quarters, then, does evidence flow in, that the only gospel which is composed and not merely compiled and edited, and for which, therefore, a single writer is responsible, has its birthday in the middie of the second century, and is not the work of a witness at all. Nor, in the moulding of it, does the author proceed, under the control of an historical purpose, to tell objective facts in the order and the form of the best accredited tradition. His animating motive is doctrinal, as he himself declares,—to convince his readers that Jesus is "the Son of God," in the transcendent sense which this phrase bore to his own thought; and he had so long looked at the evangelical biographies through the glorifying haze of that idea, that whistever would not take its richer light dropped into the shade and disappeared, and those elements alone stood out on which the heavenly tints would lie. As the story had transfigured itself to him, so did he present it transfigured to his readers; in a form true, as he held, with a deeper truth than that of ontward circumstance; rendering, if not the very words as they were heard, the inner meaning that they carried; and comprising nothing but that which might have been, and the equivalent of which could hardly fail to be, when such a nature was moving on such a scene. This kind of historical drama is full of interest as an exponent of its own time, but is not a new witness for the time of which it speaks.

time, but is not a new witness for the state of Jesus, exis speaks. For our knowledge, then, of the life of Jesus, except so far as certain features of it are assumed in some of the Epistles and the Apocalypse, we are thrown upon the remains of popular tradition collected by our synopties, --remains which are doubtless rich in fragments original and true; but which are assuredly of mixed character and worth, and cannot pretend to carry the guaranty of known and namable eye-witnesses. Priceless as sources of probable history, they are uncerviceable for a theory of documentary authority.

CHRISTOPHER COLUMBUS is threatened with eclipse at our centennial, just when his fame should shine the brightest. It is said that on July 4, 1876, the Scandinavians of the United States are going to erect a statue in Madison, Wis., to Leif Erikson as the discoverer of the American continent. Erikson is the sea-king credited with having spent the winter of A.D. 1000 at Fall River, Mass. It is also rumored that at Rome they mean to canonize Columbus because, "by an act little less than that of inspiration," he enlarged the boundaries of the Christian world. Which is to say, according to the knowing ones, the Pope is thinking—

"Beligion stands a-tiptoe in our land, And soon will pass to the American strand."

(We suspect that, infallible as he is, he has quoted that wrongly.) But it is hard for Columbus. The discoverer's ship was worth more to him than the saintship will be. The Norweglans even claim his inspiration, too; for they say that he visited Iceland in 1447, and borrowed it there from the Sagas and traditions about Erikson's voyage. W. C. G.

DR. DREMS, a Methodist, speaks of "the two Meth-odisms of the United States,"-the Methodist Episcopal Church North, and the Methodist Episcopal Church South. Not so, says the Methodist Protestant; these two are one, but besides that one there are four others. Not right yet, says the Methodist Recorder ; there are at least three more in the United States, all organized bodies, - and there may be still others. The Catholics and Mr. Alcott were right; you can choose between one church of so many million members, or Mr. Alcott's so many million churches of one member each. We are used to the rubric Y. M. C. A. The Convention last month reported nine hundred and forty-five associations on the roll. Now, New York is going to have a Y. M. H. A. The H stands for Hebrew; but there are to be a reading-room, a library, lectures, entertainments, and free classes, just as if they were good Christians. Perhaps, sometime, we shall be rich enough to have a Y. M. F. R. A., and there will be again a reading-room, and library, lectures, entertainments, and free classes. The thirst is the same, the water is the same; but the syrup is the all-important thing, and makes the difference. So we must all have separate cups. Well, perhaps no one is to blame. But it will not always be so; and the paradox is that Mr. Alcott's kind of church will is to blame. bring the brotherhood. W. C. G.

A RELIGIOUS WASHERWOMAN, who always abstained from work on Sundays, by industry contrived to earn enough money to build a snuglittle house and barn. There occurred a terrible storm which destroyed the latter and smashed part of the former. Her indignation was at first unspeakable, but at last she sobbed out, "Never mind! I'll pay for this! 1'll wash on Sundays!" Providence is supposed to have met its match.

AN IBISHMAN was once taken to see the wonders of Niagars Falls. He did not seem to think it tremendous after all. His friend asked him, "Don't you think it is a wonderful thing?" "Why is it a wonderful thing?" asked the Irishman. "Don't you see," said his friend, "that immense body of water rolling down this precipice?" Says he, "What's to hinder it?"—N. Y. Observer.

Demonster Google

It is GENERALLT pretty well understood that the Patrons of Husbandry, or Grangers, of the West are, like the Internationals of the East, opposed to what they call "middlemen," and propose to dispense with their services as fast as possible. A few days ago, a man prostrated by disease, and with little hopes of recovery, was asked by his friends if they should not seend for a minister of the goapel. He prompty answered: "No, I am a Granger, and opposed to middlemen; and if I go to heaven, I propose to go direct, without the intervention of any sleek-coated middleman who makes his living off of the hard-working producer."

Communications.

WHAT IS ATHEISM?

"Be not frightened by names. There is no athe-ist, save he who disbelieves in cause and effect. To believe in a cause of all things, is to believe in a God. Respecting the nature of that cause, it is not only lawful, but necessary, to differ, until determined by positive evidence, derived from a due comprehension of its effects; that is, of Nature. The real athelists, now adays, are those who would banish God from the iving present to a dead past." (From "By-and-By," by Edward Maitlund; author of "The Filyrim and the Shrine," etc.) "Atheism profensed is only rejection of some defi-nition." (C. A. Burlol.) "The proof of the existence of a God, derived from the external universe as perceived through the senses, is impossible and contradictory." (Fichle.) "The absurdity of the a posteriori argument for a God consists in the assumption that what we call order, harmony, and adaptation, are evidence of de-sign; when it is evident that, whether there be a God or nof, order, harmony, and adaptation must have existend from all eternity, and are not, therefore, necessary proof of a designing cause." (B. F. Un-derwood.) "If what " have been saying is of real value, it will "Be not frightened by names. There is no athe derwood.) "If what ' have been saying is of real value, it will "If what have been saying is of real value, it will appear that . • two great discoveries of modern sci-ence-the co. • rvation of force, and the law of evo-lution-must eventually give to it a vast impulse in the direction of religious inquiry. The one estab-lishes the unity of the universe in respect to force; the other establishes the unity of the universe in re-spect to law. One force rules throughout space; one law rules throughout time,-mand the force and the law are themselves explicable, as one, only as mind. To this conclusion I believe that modern science is cantionaly but surely approaching.

law rules throughout time, --and the force and the law are themselves explicable, as one, only as mind. To this conclusion I believe that modern science is cautionaly but surely approaching. "But I shall be met at once with the rebuff that these two discoveries, and especially the evolutional theory as applied to biology, have forever disposed of the old argument from design. Prof. Huzley, in his Ldy Sermons (pp. 301-304), argues that 'teleology, as commonly understood, had received its death-blow at Ar. Darwin's hands.' I admit it; for the argument from design is usually limited to the special adapta-tions of organ to function, for which a non-teleo-logical cause is found in the law of natural selec-tion. But the adaptation of the universal environ-ment to the evolution of universal organic life admits algoed why the net result of all events, taken as a whole, should be what it is—why all influences should so wonderfully conspire to davelop a cosmos out of chaos, and a magnificent fauna and flora out of protoplasmic samenes,—why the system of Nat-ure should not have been otherwise, I reply that this must is the very thing to be explained. Nature might have been forever, for anght we know, a huge, seeth-ing cauldron of warring elements, tending to no peace, and productive of no result. Why must it have been what it is, rather than that? Scientific men cheat themselves if they swallow that must as an antidote to the discomfort of puzzling queries. The queries cannot be thus quieted.'' (Extract from Index Tract, No. 11.) Trom no desire to escape from the epithet of athe-fist have I asked the question at the head of this arti-cle. Considering the fact that most, if not all, of class of their fellow-men who have thrust upon the world (under the pretext of authority) pictures and ideas of deity revolting in every sense, some dis-criminating title became really necessary. But it is does not follow that the correct name has been ap-piled by the one side, oraccepted by the other. For it must be evident to

In the foregoing quotations it is noticeable that while methods which would lead some to theism are rejected by others, yet no positive denial is made of the existence of God.

It has been said that "science knows but three states of mind,-denial, conviction, and the vast in-terval between the two, which is not belief, but the suspension of judgment." The suspension of judg-ment is not atheism.

ment is not athelism. In a recent lecture before the Free Religious Socie-ty of Chicago, Mr. Underwood well illustrates the state of mind between denial and conviction, by a quotation from Goethe's Faust, as follows:--Margaret.--''Mo you believe in God ?'' Faust.--''My dear, who can say, 'I believe in a God'? Ask priest or philosopher, and the answer is like mockery.''

God'? Ask priest or philosopher, and the answer is like mockery." Margaret.—"Then you do not belleve Him?" Faust.—"Mistake me not, you angel; who dare name Him? And who can say. 'I belleve in Him'? Who that feels dare say, 'I have no God'? The All-embracer, the All-sustainer, does He not surround you, me, himself? Is not the earth firm beneath us? Do we not see each other eye to eye, and does not all existence rise to your head and heart, and float in infinite majesty before you? Let your heart, big as it is, be full of the great idea; and when you are per-fectly happy in the thought, name it what yon will,— good, heart, love, god. I have no name for it. The feeling is all-in-all; the name is but noise and smoke, clouding celestial glory." If the rejection of some definition constitutes athe-ism, then are all the sects atheists to each other; for

It the rejection of some definition constitutes atne-ism, then are all the sects atheists to each other; for it is notorious that no two of them have precisely the same ideas or conceptions of deity. What a babel of confusion would we then have in the use of the word! It would straightway lose all its distinctive meaning, if it has not already. I see no way in which to reclaim the word for any legitimate or intelligible use, except by adopting the meaning given by the author of By-and-By; namely: "There is no atheist, save he who disbelieves in cause and effect;" and that "to believe in a cause of all things, is to believe in a God." It is not what the so-called atheists like to be called income the theory in the Twy serve title) nor is things, is to believe in a God." It is not what the so-called atheists like to be called (some of whom glory in that very vague title), nor is it what priest or clergy would like to call them: but, how far have their negations actually carried them? Have they, any one of them, yet denied, for intelli-gent effects, an intelligent cause? If so, their philos-ophy must be of that easy, good-natured, lazy sort, which animated the immortal Topsy in Uncle Tom's Cabin, who, when asked, "Who made you?" replied, "Dunno; I 'spect I growed." Herbert Spencer condemns athelam as "an absurd and unthinkable view of the universe." I suppose he means by that expression, that he cannot think of effects without causes, even though the Infinite Cause seems to him the "unknowable." I prefer to say, the Reality known in part. To ex-pect to analyze fully the Infinite Cause, when we cannot yet analyze our finite selves, were folly. We can daily learn something more of the nature of that cause from its effects in universal Nature. Shall our inability to grasp the whole lead us to blank negation? Surely, that were as unreasonable as to assert that we know all. Enough is already known to suggest far more; and I, for one, can walt. The "musts" of the unknown will then take care of them-selves. In the light of scientific thelam, all athelam, real or

"musts" of the unknown will then take the orthogonal selves. In the light of scientific theism, all atheism, real or supposed, must fade away. The contest is rapidly taking new shape. At least, let the readers of The INDEX understand something of the nature of their powerful weapons for attack and defence, - the claims of the scientific method so forcibly shown in the In-dex tract from which I have quoted. The ground there taken is broad enough for all new light which science will add. No longer limited to the purely physical, all questions relating eren to man's spiritual nature must pass in review before that ordeal which recognizes no authority but universally established truth. W. F. P.

NEW ORLEANS, La., July 9, 1874.

INITIATORY FORCES.

In Nature we may often note vast potentialities lying dormant for long periods, until some force, in-significant in amount, but of the proper kind or in-tensity, suddenly initiates action on an immense tensity, suddenly initiates action on an immense scale. Thus a prairie or forest may be dried up by drought, until leaves and twigs are brittle and nearly dead; but all is quiet until a chance spark from a locomotive, or a tobacco-pipe, inaugurates a confla-gration devastating square miles. And this necessity for an outside initiatory force is generally associated with great power of maintaining action once begun. The element carbon is a striking illustration of this. The processes of crystalization are much fa-cilitated by the entrance of crystal, ready made, and sometimes cannot be formed without this impulse. And, very curiously, a new surgical method for cov-ering a wound with skin employs as nucleus a tiny morsel supplied from elsewhere. In photography it has been discovered that blue light may begin an im-pression which red or yellow may finish, but finish only. The magneto-electric machines must always have magnets as an essential, in the production of an electric current from mechanical motion. The force of the magnet may be a trife, and the results of the apparatus gigantic; but still the little initiatory mag-net cannot be dispensed with. A fallacy has often led men to suppose that effects apparatus gigantic; but still the little initiatory mag-net cannot be dispensed with. A fallacy has often led men to suppose that effects exceeded causes in amount, because they looked at initiatory forces, and not at the much greater re-served forces they liberated. Sof in working for a result, mechanical, sociologi-cal, or otherwise, an indispensable provision is the proper initiatory force, without which great power may lie idle and useless. J. G. H.

DUTY, NOT SENTIMENT.

To do our plain, simple duty, day by day; to help one another with deeds, not mere words; to be hon-est, sincere, and free, -this is the veritable greatness of human life, and the extreme difficulty of it. Feeling does not always accompany duty. We must do our duty, whether we feel like it or not; and do it continuously, not by fits and starts. Duty is be-yond our mere preference, higher and deeper than sentiment. It comes in darknoss and stillness at times, now wonderfully radiant, then a cold and beckoning hand; but one always to be followed. It is the imperial light of the soul, that hangs over it with a vaster sublimity than the starry heavens. It is man's best gospel, sweet even in exceeding bitter-ness, and bearing a wreath of glory in its most pierc-ing thorns. thorns.

ing thorns. Sentiment that ministers to duty, and makes it more vivid and imperative, and is the kindling radi-ance of sincere obscience, is right. But sentiment that subverts duty, or makes it a secondary thing, is that subverts duty, or makes it a secondary thing, is fatally wrong. There is too much of that faise religious sentiment, which puts ecstatic visions and loud prayers in the place of hard and honorable work; which lifts one so high that he forgets that he owes his neighbor this or that; which makes honesty, and purity, and justice, of comparatively little account. Sentiment, like "the baseless fabric of a dream." too often takes the place of real duty in the experience of many. They think if the heart glows, and the brain burns, all is right. They neglect to choose and act. How seldom does the Orthodox revivalist appeal to the sense of duty-almost always to the passions,—to hope, fear, and the desire of reward l But the golden of casting.

desire of reward! But the golden colors of sentiment are beautiful only when they spring from the expanding character, the varied and noble activities of the soul. We can-not be flung into heaven on any tide of feeling. We must climb, before the intense vision will burst upon us. S. P. PUTNAM.

WHAT IS PRAYER, AND WHAT ITS OB-JECT !

EDITOR INDEX:

EDITOR INDEX:--Mr. Frothingham, in THE INDEX of July 2, in his essay "Why go to Church?" says: "I propose to dis-cuss the claims of our Sunday services on intelligent people who are outside the sects." This is the class to which I claim to belong, if he means, by "whe sects," the Christian denominations. Of the question, "Why go to Church?" Mr. Froth-ingham says: "To technical Christians such a ques-tion would have no meaning." So I conclude he is speaking especially to non-Christians, and therefore accept his discourse as spoken to me. There are many things I would like to say of it, but will confine myself to his definition and object of prayer. He says:-- many things I would like to say of it, but will confine myself to his definition and object of prayer. He says:--"There is no religion without prayer. Religion without prayer is inconcelvable. To prayer we re-store its original meaning; for prayer is the heart's desire for unattained, and, by ordinary means, unat-tainable, good; it is hunger and thirst for divine things. Of course, no one is to suppose that we em-ploy it, as religious people generally do, as a means of propitiating higher powers; of obtaining favors of a divine being; of establishing private relations with a patron deity; no such thought enters our mind. We offer no petition; we supplicate no boom, not even a spiritual one; we address ourselves to no person who dwells in another sphere, and we expect nothing in return for the act--not so much as an ethereal infla-ence shed upon our mind. The desire is its own sat-isfaction; the petition its own answer. Prayer, with us, is the breathing forth of an emotion of longing for heavenly gifts. It is a conscious entertainment of such longing; a declaration of it when it exists; an uttered wish for it when it does not exist. It is a deliberate effort to call up and hold in view, for an instant, as supremely desirable and beautiful, qual-ties of goodness, nobility, purity, and lovelines, which are remote from our daily experience; which we do not posses, doubit, perhaps, whether we ever shall possess, despair, possibly, of ever possessing; can only dream of, admire, long for; but which, are-etheless, seem to us sweetly and gloriously human-the mere occasional thought whereof gladdens, ele-vates, and consoles." It would seem, then, that Mr. Frothingham's idee for prayer is that it consists in the indulgence in cer-tain pleasant wishes, desires, aspirations, longing, reveries, fancies, dreams, imaginations, and so forth,--to indulge in which, even for an instant, ele-vates and consoles our feelings, even though we never explicit to have any of these wishes realized. I can well understand the ple

"I love, at evening's mild and tranquil hour, To rove in silence by some crystal strumms. There to Indige in Tancy's plaesing power, Where ripples dance beneath the moun's pale beams."

To roote in silence by some crystal atoms," There to Indulge in Tancy's pleasing yowar." Where ripples dance beneast in the moun's pile beams." But I am opposed to all shams, and therefore I ob-prayer. Let us call things by their proper names, this time, to soften down the old repulsive doctines, and even to deny that they ever existed in their most private to the the share of the source of the thermost private is petition addressed to some power for favors, which expectation of receiving glifts in consequence of the prayers. I do not object to Mr. Frothingham's indulging in the kind of dreaming which he describes, which is "no petition." No soupplication for a boon," historing to him, as I do reading much that he asys through TIRE INDEX; but do not let us anti-Chris-which is "no petition." You soupplication for a boon, which is "defressed to no person," and for which no ray of preaching to ourselves." This would seem to be Mr. Frothingham's idea of it. Practically, I have of doubt, this is true; but, just so far as it is fur-ray of preaching to ourselves, and pretend we are prevendend and the seed of the seares of the observes, to courselves, and pretend we are prevendend of the sources, and petidend and the beat. Frothingham's idea of it, an admitted sham. In one case, we pretend to be addressing God, when we are cally addressed to ourselves, and pretend we are prevendend of the sources and petides. The source are expected to reselves, and pretend we are prevendend of the sources and petides. The sources are explanation of it, an admitted sham. In one case, we pretend to be addressing God, when we are prevendend and the sources and petides. The source and in doding it the true surfared in the lower is to thus is and leaves and pretend we are prevendend and the audience, and calls this "preven-tion boon," "expectantoling, "but, nevertheres of the the is addience, and calls this "insert." Mr. The addressee nobody, makes "mo petition," to himself or his audience, and calls this "insert." Mr. The addressee of than from any true use of language. But desire is not prayer until it is expressed in some way in the form of petition. Prayer is petition to some being for some favor, and nothing else. All the derotional sentiment, so frequently expressed with the prayers of Christians, is simply sentiment and derotion, but no part of prayer itself. For this is always petition-the craving of a favor from some power, the begging for something which we expect or hope to get in return for the "act" of praying; and any other kind of prayer is sham prayer—is no prayer at all. But Mr. Frothingham says: "To prayer we restore its original meaning." Let me ask, When did prayer not mean petition for favors, but the holding up to view of beautiful ideas to gladden, elevate, and con-sole? But even if it did originally mean what he says it does, and which original meaning he now "restores." It is not the meaning accepted by any-body now, except a few quart Christian religion, but who yest strangely try to hold on to its name and its outgrown forms, by so modifying them that they estainly look like new creations. And here is just be point I wish to make; namely, to show the fool-anger coat the repulaire and absurd doctrines of Christianity that they may be swallowed without may true sense, but anti-Christian, believe Chris-tianity to be a vast, organized system of error; and yet some of ne would seem to be giving it conne-tions of an swould seem to be giving it conne-tions and apport, by our conformity to its rites and ensume and apport, by our conformity to its rites and parts and apport, by our conformity to its rites and parts on the would seem to be giving it connet-tions and apport, by our conformity to its rites and ensume while we know they have no real significance or trath. for truth entoms while we know they have no real significance for trath. Those Christians who belleve that whatsoever they sak of God in faith they will surely receive, thus far act consistently with the Scriptures they profess to take as their guide; which Scriptures teach that whatever they ask in the name of Jesus, belleving, it shall be done for them, even to the removing of mountains. But for those of us who are able to see that it is impossible for any thing of the kind to take place; to see that if God were to grant the petitions of finite beings, it must necessarily produce the great-est confusion, and that no rational and consistent mind could ever place full confidence in him or his laws afterwards,—it would be the sheerest pretending and hypocrisy to offer any such petitions. And, to me, it seems that those who see what the truth is, and yet "cook up" definitions by which they make a show of clinging to the old forms of Christian wor-ably, while they virtually deny, as much as anybody, the truth of the whole system called Christianity,—I say, to me, such do not seem to be doing the best pos-sible service to the truth. And it seems to me, further, that, if anti-Christian we take the truth.

sible service to the truth. And it seems to me, further, that, if anti-Christians go to church at all, they should go for the same rea-son that some Christians occasionally risk themselves-inside a free-thought hall; that is, to learn what is being done and taught there, to be the better able to meet and expose what to them seems error: or, as a sanitary commission visits the dens of vice and squalor in clites, to study the desperate case, and learn how the better to apply suitable remedies. D. K. HOUTTELLE.

D. K. BOUTELLE. LASE CITY, Minn., July 11, 1874.

SIGNIFICANCE OF THE UNKNOWN.

LARE CITY, MIN., July 11, 1874. SIGNIFICANCE OF THE UNKNOWN. "My heart and ny flesh crieth out for the living fod," says the Peaimist. How true an expression for it is not merely the desire after a tamiliar shrine -not only a craving for some avenging strength--not only a craving for some avenging strength-is space that the inmost reality of existence is mething not utterly foreign to the affections of the source that the power of the mysical element religion can ever be accounted for, apart from some adding substance in which all things are one. Our provide the positive element which it implies. And the result of our whole argument is that this morance is not such as to make the consciousness of the source is not such as to make the consciousness of morance is not such as to make the consciousness of morance is not such as to make the consciousness of the source is not such as to make the consciousness of morance is not such as to make the consciousness of morance is not such as to make the consciousness of the showing of Hair Willies in increase. The source is not such as to make the consciousness of morance is not such as to make the consciousness of morance is not such as to make the consciousness of the showing of Hair Willies in increase. The source is not such as to make the consciousness of morance is not such as to make the consciousness of morance is not such as to make the consciousness of the showing of Hair Willies in increase. The source is not such as to make the consciousness more increase of the second which increases of citeral source is not such as to prove the affection while a the showing of self to purposes grander than the showing the nore yithout, but also and more the one hand, nor plaubile materiality only the showing the work of the grant master. "Going the same remark would apply to the contradi-tion the same remark would apply the contradi-tion the same remark would apply the contradi-tion bare as all necessarily imporease infinite in the

i.

tribute to it is inconceivable. And that Life is incon-ceivable just because it comprehends all modes of be-ing, all possibilities of spontaneous energy in one, and is, as it were, the apotheosis of modes in the modeless Infinite at which they hint. As in a narrow lise whatever path we follow it soon ends in the pathless sea, and all movements have one destiny, so in our narrow life thought never travels far before it looks out on that which it cannot measure or define; which was, and is no come. This, the Everlasting, is the only Substance, of which all things are phenomena. This is the abiding Power of which the recurrent sequences of natural law are fragmentary manifestations.

which all things are phenomena. This is the adding Power of which the recurrent sequences of natural law are fragmentary manifestations. This is the all-pervaling life, which makes the heavens to smile, and the twinkling leaves to dance, and the clouds to frown, and the winds and the waves to sing their "song which is wild and slow." In any scientific sense, nay, in any but the vaguest intellect-uls sense, that Being is in itself unknown, unknow-able. Yet the inevitable fascination with which it draws the dumb, pleading desire of all noblest souls, is a burning fact that shines through all the history of man, and which, were there no adequate signifi-cance within it, would convict the universe of vanity and lies. As to the nature of that significance, we have given some suggestions; but it is a matter that is best treated by itself. Meanwhile, when we ac-knowledge that unspeakable majesty as in itself un-known, unknowable, we have insisted that this igno-rance should not, cannot be interpreted as describing absolute nonentity of perception or apprehension; for that cannot with any reason be affirmed of any-thing that is an essential element in all rational thought, and the inspiration of the purest passion. It is no mere paradox to affirm that this very igno-trance is itself knowledge, in so far as it implies the existence of an incomprehensible object. For we cannot think far in any direction without coming upon that which is more than all our knowledge,— something that is and must be in itself unknown, not because it is uncertain, but because it is far too real for our superficial faculties. We cannot mark phenomens without thinking of substance.

We cannot mark phenomena without thinking of substance. We cannot admire the ordered system of the uni-verse without aspiring in imagination to law above law, until, at the topmost height, one inconcelvable stream of force springs into a myriad channels of harmonious action. We cannot feel the world's heart beat in the ceaseless energy of living things without adoring an all-pervading life. Yet substance, law, power, and life, are only names of the unutterable; the last nurmurs upon the lip when different paths of knowledge open on those measureless contemplations which command the worship of silence.-J. Allanson Picton.

THE INFORMING POWER OF THE SOUL.

BY MRS. S. C. HALLOWELL.

Some timid people are much disturbed of late at the rapid strides of the new philosophy of science. "Will they leave nothing untouched?" is the cry. "They have set back creation's dawn, the creation of our early leasons, for such cons of years that the mind aches in the retrospect. They question the very dust of which we are made, and force it to give up its reluctant screats of the tiger and the gorilla. And now they would assail our strong tower of prayer with the battery of statistics—so many hospit-al-wards prayed for; so many not prayed for; result, Q.E.D."

The new they would assalt our stabilg tower of prayer with the battery of statistics—so many hospital-wards prayed for; so many not prayed for; result, Q.E.D."
Shall we join these alarmists, and hide our heads in the sands of Egypt? Are we so afraid to trust for which his world? Or must we still insist that it be shaped after our preconceived patterns?
Why not reverently admit that, to every age and to revery ime, God grants some revelation of his mysteries? To one age, a deep, spiritual insight, and string, God grants some revelation of his mysteries?
To one age, a deep, spiritual insight, and strong, winged aspirations; to another, a kindling or cokes and rainbows makes a grand, harmonious sympton, ready to burst upon our even the statistic of the sense so easy now with Gailleo to stamp one's foot, and say, "It does move, after all." And yet in the morement of to day, are we, or are we not, of the Cailleo party?
But the distress manifested is not entirely because the removal of the old landmarks, and the substitution of floating buoys, which rise with the tides of hor of change. It is the diread of the materialism, which the new theories seem to bring in their wake. If we are to be proven to be not only of "such stuff, buoght. It is something deeper than the mere hor or of odering buoys, which rise with the tides of which the new theories seem to bring in their wake. If we are to be proven to be not only of "such stuff."
It as the oak a soul which impels it to toss its lofty are of its bright leaves, and tiny acorn-cups, the fulling of the undying soul of man?
The the strong west wind, and to drink into each full the substitute fish, rising where yone mainds to these a lift of the universe?
The may consciousness in the graceful shell that anchors taself to the ocean-floor, and lives a lift of many colored mystery beneath the wave? Where would from highest or the ones the physican do the substitie for the order of the all-creating, all undits? Swept away and wholly responsible being; that in his veins, in his nerves, lies the fatal force that impels him on the downward road. Or, again, that this man of mag-netic power, this orator, or statesman, or general, ia different from other men by a grain of iron, more or less, in his blood. It is well to remember, at moments when our light burns low, the thunder of Fusell's reply to the in-guisitive being who asked him about the soul. With a might oath, "I don't know whether you have a soul; but"-another forcible affirmation---"I know that I have!"

quisitive being who asked him about the soul. With a mighty oath, "I don't know whether you have a soul; but"—another forcible affirmation—"I know that I have !"
There may be men and women who have never felt within them the strong upswelling of a power which we can call by no other name. After a moment of awful sacrifice, in which self has been trampled unge foot; or a season of patient fulfilment of some painful duty; after a struggle which has called forth the two grand powers of humanity, heroism, and humility, the flood-tide somes; we are pervaded, lifted, and folded in—there is no other name for it—the near presence of God In our souls.
If it be yet to come to those waiting men and women, rest assured that it will come, when the soul's gates open unto it in some sacrificial hour.
And this presence—this pervading and informing power—is there no record of it, save in the hallowed witnesses throughout all ages and many lands. Not more sincerely is "the dyer's hand subdued to what it works in," than is the human countenance a graven record of experience and thought. If mind and thought the but the working of electric wires, material in their substance, here we see mind and thought reacting upon matter, and shaping it to its own. Has he led a little life, of sordid care and ignoble aims, see how his face has kept the record! It is written all over it. The frank brow of boyhood is narrowed and furrowed; the eyes are contracted as the man's thought, self and cunning are in their sharp denarity and around the mouth the tell-tale.
With hat logal tenderness with which Thackersy regards all good women, he speaks once of the transfiguration which is not of this work, which comes into the awful mystery drawing near; while with untring hands their help and sympaty enfold the sufference, who reast securely there.
If the soult, thus working from within, can stamp the arhves to the soult in gravely, emobiling and enlightening the harkest outlines and rudest features of material truth? In the limitations of ancient creeds, men had come to regard their souls as something to be brought out on Sabbath or holy-days; as precious jewels worn on high occasions; something for which consecrated mysterics had built a casket which shut it out from the median model mysteries had built a casket which shut it out from the working world. When we come to know that this soul, this living moral force in us, cannot be shut up, but works as it is fed—grows and expands, or shrivels and dwindles, in the space we leave for it in our lives; that it pho-tographs itself, lofty and noble, or pinched and starv-ing, on our daily deeds and our daily looks,—shall we not give it reverent heed? Shall we not have faith in it, as in our eyes for see-ing, and our cars for hearing, to apprehend spiritual truth?

truth?

truth? It is not an embalmed mystery, laid up for us against our death, and removed in its sanctity from the wear and tear of business and the world, but the breach of our inner lives, kindling and quickening soul in man. Traditions may go, —creeds may be swept away as creeds have been; but before the divine in man, Sci-ence must pause in listening reverence. Withhold not thyself, O Soul, from her glance! She has taught these to climb to the stars; show her, in return. of thy essence, which itself outshines the stars.—Christian Union.

Let Science, with advancing stride, displace this ancient laudmark, or efface, with honest finger, that time-honored inscription on the wall: humanity re-mains with its grand central truth of the in-dwelling soul in man.

"How MUCH BETTER It would have been to have shaken hands, and allowed it was all a mistake," said a Detroit judge. "Then the lion and the lamb would have lain down together, and white-robed Peace would have fanned you with her wings and elevated you with her smiles of approbation. But, no; you went to clawing and biting and rolling in the mud, and here you are. It's $5 aplece."

"BE BRIEF, GENTLEMEN," is the good advice given to clergymen by the Congregationalist, the editor of which tells of a minister who prayed forty minutes at a funeral. "Forty minutes," kays the editor, "is a long while. Not Solomon in all his glory would have prayed at this length, had he dedicated a hundred temples."

HORSE-THIEVES in Texas, now-a-days, go in gangs, headed by a pretended clergyman, who gets up pro-tracted meetings, and while the people are at the houses of worship, the rank and file of the gang go for the stablefor the stables.

manna Google

Advertisements.	GOOD PHOTOGRAPHS	1 8 7 4.	Pυ
THE PATRONAGE of the liberal advertising public is respec- fully solicited for THE INDEX. The attempt will be honestly made to keep the advertis- for pages of THE INDEX is entire harmony with its general character and principles, and thus to furnish to the public an advertising medium which shall be not only profitable to	Including O. B. FEOTHINGHAM, T. W. HIGGINSON, W. J. POTTER, W. H. SPENCER,	THE INDEX, A Weekly Journal	FREE the patrons, but also worthy of their most generous support. To this end, all improper or "blind" sdvertisements, all quack adver- tisements, and all advertisements believed to be frautiduent or unjust to any one, will be excluded from these columns. No cuts will be admitted. Tak INDEX must not be held responsible for any statement made by advertisers, who will in all cases accept the responsibility for their own statements. I will be advertisers, who will in all cases accept the responsibility for their own statements.	CHAS. VOYSEY, A. W. STEVENS, F. E. ABBOT, Are now for sale at the office of THE INDEX,	FREE RELIGION. PUBLISHED BY THE INDEX ASSOCIATION, AT No. 1 Tremont Place, Boston. EDITOR:	Heport Process ing in Religi ized. ( ingham, Robert )
For 1 to 12 Insertions, 10c per line. (13 (12 to 12 t	Address, THE INDEX, No. 1 Tremont Place, Boston, Mass.	EDITOR: FRANCIS ELLINGWOOD ABBOT. ASSOCIATE EDITOR: ABRAM WALTER STEVENS. EDITORIAL CONTRIBUTORS: O. B. FROTHINGHAM, New York City. T. W. HIGGINSON, Newport, B.I.	son, F. ginson, (This punder of all of the possess the

cles," says, in a letter to the editor not orig-inally intended for publication, but subse-CIRCULATE | Circulate | | Circulate THOSE PETITIONS. Don't feel satis-fied when your petition is a yard long, unless you have asked every one to sign it. Get good, influ-Quenty authorized to be used: "A nave now read "Taurns roz rate Tanza," and I admire them from my inmost heart; and I agree to almost every word." New Edition. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00.

GET EVERYRODY.

Don't neglect to show the petition to any one, because he is a stockholder in some church, or other exampled property, as many such persons admit the justice of the demand; and these who will not should be made to take the responsibility Don't deay! We want the petitions returned early.

Per order of EXEC. COMM. of the BOSTON LIBEBAL LEAGUE.

CULTURED FREE THOUGHT.

The Index Association,

OFFICE, NO. 1 TREMONT PL., BOSTON. has been ormanized with a capital stock fixed at

ONE HUNDRED THOUSAND dollars, for the purpose of publishing Tracts, Books, and

THE INDEX.

A Weekly Paper devoted to Free and Rational Religion.

It is the object of THE INDEX to give public utterance to the boldest, most cultivated, and best matured thought of the age on all religious questions, and to apply it directly to the social and political amelloration of society.

It is edited by FRANCIS E. ABBOT, assisted by ABRAM W. STEVENS, with the following list of Editorial Contributors:

O. B. FROTHINGHAM, New York City.

THOMAS W. HIGGINSON, Newport, B.L. WILLIAM J. POTTER, New Bedford, Mass. WILLIAM H. SPENCER, Haverbill, Mass. RICHARD P. RALLOWELL, Boston, Mass. MRS. E. D. OHENEY, Jamaica Plain, Mass.

REV. CHARLES VOYSEY, London, England. PROF. FRANCIS W. NEWMAN, London, Eng. Every liberal should subscribe for THE INDEX. as the best popular exponent of Religious Liber alism. Every Christian minister, and every thinking church-member, should subscribe for it, as the clearest, most candid, and most scholarly er position of the differences between Free Thought and Evangelical Christianity, and as the best means of becoming well informed of the arguments and the movements which the Church will have to most in the future.

Almost every number contains a discourse of leading article, which alone is worth the price of one year's subscription.

Prof. MAX MUELLER, of Oxford, England, in a letter to the Editor published in THE INDEX for January 4, 1873, says: "That the want of a journal entirely devoted to Beligion in the widest sense of the word should be felt in America-that such a journal should have been started and so powerfully supported by the best minds of your country,-la a good sign of the times. There is no such journal in England, France, or Germany; though the number of so-called religious or theological periodicals is, as you know, very large." And later still : "I read the numbers of your IN-DEX with increasing interest."

Send $2.00 for one year, or 75 cents for three months on trial.

Address

No. | Tremont Place, Boston.

THE INDEX.

No. 4.—Christian Propagandism, by F. E. Abbot, is an exposure of the weakness, costliness, and inefficiency of the System of Foreign Missions. Full of Figures, Facts, and Interesting Extracts. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00.

quently authorized to be used : "I have now

No. 2.-Fear of the Living God, by O.

B. Frothingham, exposes the debasing char-acter of the popular notions of God, and presents conceptions of him that are wor-thy of the nineteenth century. New Edi-tion. Price 5 cents; 12 copies 50 cents.

No. 3.-Lecture on the Hible, by the Rev

Charles Voysey, of England, is an over whelming demonstration of the imperfect tions and errors of the Bible, both in the

New Edition

Old and the New Testaments. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00.

No. 5.-"God in the Constitution," by Rev. Arthur B. Bradford, opposes the pro-posed Theological Amendment to the Unit-ed States Constitution. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00.

0.6.-"The Sabbath," by Parker Pills bury, denounces Sabba terla a superstition Edition. Price 10 cents; 12 copies Nav

State to ensure it an education. Price 5 cents; 12 copies 50 cents.

No. 8.-The Present Heaven, by O. B. Frothingham, treats of a subject that in-Frothingham, treats of a subject that in-terests everybody. New Edition. Price 5 cents; 12 copies 50 cents.

o. 9.-The Christian Amendment, by F. E. Abbot, shows the dangerous charac-ter of the attempt to interpolate the Evan-gelloal Christian Creed in the U. S. Constitution. Price 5 cents; 12 copies 50 cents.

to. 10.-The Impeachment of Christi anity, by F. E. Abbot. Fourth Ten Thon sand. Sent for free distribution to any one who will distribute it, in packages of from five to one hundred copies

No 11.-The God of Science, by F. E. Ab-bot, attempts to show the real influence of modern science upon the idea of God. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00.

No. 12.-Is Romanism Real Christian ity Two easays by Francis W. Newman and F. E. Abbot. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00.

to, 13.-On the Vision of Heaven, by Prof. F. W. Newman, of England, analy the Christian conception of Heaven. Price 5 cents; 12 copies 50 cents.

No. 14. - A Study of Heligion : The Name and the Thing, by F. E. Abbot, attempts to show that the popular deriva-tion of the word Religion is incorrect; that the popular conceptions of Religion itself are inadequate; and that a new conception are inadequate; and that a new conception of it, based on the Law of Evolution, con-sistent with absolute Freedom of Thought, and independent even of belief in God, is the necessary condition of the perpetuity of Beligion among men. Frice 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00. Address

THE INDEX, 1 TREMONT PLACE, Boston, Mass. W. J. POTTER, New Bedford, Mass

E. P. HALLOWELL, Boston, Mass

MRS. E. D. CHENEY, Jamaics Plain, Mass.

F. W. NEWMAN, England. CHARLES VOYSEY, England.

THE INDEX aims-

To increase general intelligence with resp to religion :

To foster a pobler spirit and quicken a higher ose, both in society and in the individual:

o substitute knowledge for ignoran e, right for wrong, truth for superstition, freedom for slavery, character for creed, catholicity for bigotry, love for hate, humanitaria for sectarianism, devotion to universal ends for absorption in selfish sche

In brief, to hasten the day when Free Relig ion shall take the place of dogmatism and ecclesiasticism throughout the world, and when the welfare of humanity here and now shall be the aim of all private and public activities.

In addition to its general objects, the practical object to which THE INDEX is special ly devoted is the ORGANIZATION OF THI ly devoted is the ORGANIZATION OF THE LIBERALS OF THE COUNTRY, for the part se of securing the more complete and con tent secularization of the political and ed acational institutions of the United State The Church must give place to the Republic in the affections of the people. The last vestiges of ecclesiastical control must be d out of the Constitutions and Statute wip of the several States in order to bring then into harmony with the National Constitution To accomplish this object, the Liberals must make a united demand, and present an un broken front, and the chief practical aim of THE INDEX will be henceforth to organize a great NATIONAL PARTY OF FREEDOM Let every one who believes in this movemen give it direct aid by helping to increase the circulation of THE INDEX.

SPECIAL FEATURES.

The publication of a valuable leading paper or essay of a thoughtful character In each issue, will continue to be one of the most marked features of THE INDEX.

Regular editorial contributions will con to be furnished by the well-known em tinne inent writers who have already done so much to give to THE INDEX its present high position. Mr. Voyagy has kindly concented to furnish every fortnight a London Lerres containing matters of general interest to rads. Other interesting correspondfcul reade ce, communications, extracts from value ble books and periodicals, and miscellaneon articles, will also be published; and such improvements will be made from time to time as circumstances shall render possible.

AGENTS.

Local Agents for THE INDEX are wanted in every city and town throughout the cour try. The most liberal terms are offered.

TERMS.

The price of THE INDEX is Three Dollars a year, payable in advance; and at the same rate for shorter periods. All remit-tances of money must be at the sender's risk, unless forwarded by cheque, registered let-ter, or post-office money order. The name, with address in full, must be accompanied with the money in each case

THE INDEX. Address No. 1 Tremont Place, Boston.

BLICATIONS.

OFTHE

RELIGIOUS

ASSOCIATION.

t of the Addresses and other sedings of the Original Meet-a 1867, at which the Free flous Association was Organtous Association was Organ-Containing addresses by O. B From-, Henry Blanchard, La ott Dale Owen, John Weins, Oliver John-E. Abbot, D. A. Wasson, T. W. Hirand Ralph Waldo Eme amphiet has not been on sale for a of years, and many persons whe e Annual Reports succeeding ( this.) Price 50 cents. eding do not dings of Second Annual Meeting, 1869. 50 cents. Contains easys by Julia Ward Howe on "Freedom and Restraint in Religion," and by David A. Wasn on "The Relation of Social Science to Religion," and speeches by O. B. Frothing-ham, Jesse H. Jones, F. E. Abbot, Wm. Denton, B. W. Emerson, Mary Grew, C. A. Bar-tol, A. M. Powell, H. B. Blackwell, Rowland Connor, Lucy Stone, Horace Seaver, and others; with an appendix on "Outlines of Judalem" by Rabbi Wise.

coedings of Third Annual Meeting, 1870. 50 cents. Contains essays by O. B. Frothingham on the "Idea of the SAVE Free Religious Association," followed by addresses by D. A. Wasson on "The Nature of Religion," by Mrs. E. D. Cheney on "Re-ligion as a Social Force, especially in rela-tion to Philanthropy and Reform," and by F. E. Abbot on "The Future of Religious Organization, as affected by the Spirit of the Age;" an essay by Samuel Johnson on "The Natural Sympathy of Beligions," fol-lowed by Rabbi Wise on "The Permanent and Progressive Elements of Judalam," by and Progressive Linning on "Mohammedanim," by Wm. H. Channing on "The Religions of China," and Wm. J. Potler on "Beligion Old and New in Indis;" also abstract of a discussion on "The Bible in the Public Schools," by Thos. Vickers, S. R. Calthrop, Rabbi Wise, and others.

Proceedings of Fifth Annual Meet ing, 1872. 35 cents. (Four or more, M cents each.) Contains essays by J. W. Chadwick on "Liberty and the Church is merica," by C. D. B. Mills on "Religion as the Expression of a Permanent Sen timent of the Human Mind," and by O. B. Froth ingham on "The Religion of Humanity," with addresses by Rowland Connor, Cella Burleigh, Lucretia Mott, A. B. Alcott, C.A. Bartol, Horace Seaver, Alexander Loos, and others.

Proceedings of Sixth Annual Meet-ing, 1673. 35 cents. (Four or more, S cents each.) Contains essays by Samuel Johnson on "Freedom in Religion," and by John Weiss on "Religion in Freedom," with addresses by Wm. C. Gannett, Robert Dale Owen, T. W. Higginson, Samuel Longfel-low, J. S. Thomson, F. E. Abbot, and Lumatia Mott.

Sympathy of Religions, by T. W. Higginson. 25 cents.

Religious of China, by Wm. H. Channing. 25 cer

Beason and Hevelation, by William J. Potter. 10 cents.

Taxation of Church Property, by Jas. Parton. 10 cents, singly; package of ten, 60 cents; of one hundred, $3.

These publications are for sale at the office of the Free Religious Association, No. 1 Tremont Place, Boston. The Annual Reports for 1868 and 1871 cannot be supplied, and the supply of others previous to that of 1873 is quite limited. Orders by mail may be addrassed either "Free Religious Association, No. 1 Tremont Place, Boston," or to the Secretary, New Bedford, Mass.

WM. J. POTTER, Sec. F. R. A.

Google

POPULAR BOOKS.

SENT BY MAIL

AT

PUBLISHERS' PRICES!

ORDERS PROMPTLY FILLED.

NO EXTRA CHARGE FOR POSTAGE.

ANY BOOK in the subjoined List, or any other OBTAINABLE BOOK that may be desired, will be forwarded as promptly as possible on receipt af orders accompanied with the CASH.

Orders are respectfully solicited fr all friends of THE INDEX.

ALCOTT (LOUISA M). Little Women. Two ARABIAN NIGHTS' ENTERTAINMENTS. 1.50 ARNOLD'S (MATTHEW) Eassys in Criti-Cimp. 2.00 New Poems. 2.00 Literature and Dogma. 1.69 BACON'S Essays ..... 1.0 BAIN (ALETANDER). Mental Science: A Compandium of Psychology and History of Philosophy. Moral Science: A Compendium of Ethics. 1.75 BARTLETT'S Dictionary of Amaricanisms. 2.50 BARTLETT'S Familiar Quotations ...... 8.00 BEACKETT (ANNA C.) The Education of American Girls. BEOOKEY (CHARLEST.) Translations. The Lavman's Bravian-AUGRLE (HENRY THOMAS). History of (Willisation in England and France, Spain and Scotland, New edition of the entire work, with a complete index. 2 vols...... 5.00 Weis, with a Works, Cheapedition. Compris-ing the following: Miscellaneous Essays, T vois, French Revolution, 3 vois, Freder-leit the Great, 10 vols.; Cromvell's Letters, c., 5 vois, Sactor Resartiss, 1 voi.; John Barling, i voi.; Laite of Schiller, I voi.; Fast and Prasent, I voi.; Herces and Herce Wor-ship, 1 voi.; Laiter Day Pamphilets, I voi. Any volume sold separately. 31 vois. Lon-don, 1871-3. Per voi CARPENTER (Dz. W. B.) The Principles of Menial Physiology, with their Applica-tions to the Training and Disciplina of the Mind, and the Study of its Morbid Condi-tions. CERVANTES' Don Quixote ...... 1,50 OHANNING (WM. ELLERY, D.D.). The Per-fect Life. In Twelve Discourses. Edited from his manuscripts by his nephew, Wm. Henry Channing. 1.50 CHANNING (WM. ELLERY). Thorsau: The Post Naturalist. With Memorial Verse. 2.09 LABEE (JAMES FREEMAN). Ten Great Common Sections

CONWAT (MONCURE D.) The Earthward Pilgrimage.

Pugrimage OOBRELATION and Conservation of Forces: A Sorise of Expositions by Grove, Helm-beltz, Mayor, Faraday, Liebig and Carpen-ter: with an Introduction by Edward L. Toumana, M.D. 1 vol. CULTURE DEMANDED BY MODERN LIFE; its True Alms and Requirements A Sorise of Addresses. By Tyndail, Huz-by, Whawell, Faraday, Spancer, Draper, Kasson, Lycell, etc. Edited by Edward L. Youmana. 2.00

DALL (MRS. CAROLINE B). The College, be Market, and the Court; or, Woman's Belation to Education, Employment, and Oktisenably.

Historical Pictures Retouched; a Volume of Miscellanies. In two parts. Part I., "Studies. Pictures, and Fancies" The Life of Dr. Mario Zakrawska, being a Practical Innstration of "Worman's Rights to Labor" 1.00 Journal of Researches. Emotional Expression of Man and the Low-er Auimais... The Variation of Animals and Flants under Domestication. 2 vols. illustrated DISSCARTES (RENE.) Discourse on the Method of Rightly conducting the Reason and Seeking Truth in the Sciences... 2.00 8.00 Fools. A Study.
 2.00

 ELIOT'S (GEOS GE) Novels. Household Edi-tion. 3 vols., each.
 1.00

 Gouprising.
 1.00

 Adam Bode.
 1.00

 The Mill on the Floss.
 Felix Holt.

 Silas Marter and Scence of Clerical Life.
 3.00

 Witt Smarth. 2 vols
 5.00

 Witt Smarth. 2 vols
 5.00

 The Spanish Organ
 1.20

 How Itals Low of the King.
 50

 Huerson's (R. W.) Essay.
 50
 MERSON'S (R. W.) Essays. First Series Essays. Second Series 2.00 2.00 2.00 2.00 2.00 2.00 3.00 1.50 1.50 2.01 2.01 MERSON'S (E. W.) Essay Essays. Second Series. Miscellandes Heprosentative Man. English Traits. Conduct of Life...... May-day and Ohner Man. May-day and Ohner Man. Essays. Bine and Gold. Poorma. Bine and Gold. Prose Works. 3 vois... Society and Solitude... EVANS (E. P., Pb. D). First Historical Transformations of Ciristianity. From the French of Athanase Course? the Younger The Life and Works of Gotthold Ephraim Lesing. Translated from the German of Adolf Etahr. I vols... FARBAR'S Critical History of Free Thought, In reference to the Christian Religion..... 2.0 FEUERBACH (LUDWIG.) The Essence of Christianity. "George Eliot's" translation. 1.00 FISKE'S (JOHN) Myths and Myth-Makers., 2,00 FROTHINGHAM (O. B.) Beligton of Hu-manity. Beliess of the Unbelievers. Child's Book of Religion Life of Theodore Parker. FULLER'S (MARGARET) Complete Works, including Memoirs by Emerson, Channing, and others. A new edition. 5 vols GREG'S (W. R.) Enigmas of Life..... Liberary and Social Judgments...... Creed of Christendom..... 2.00 GROTE'S LIFE. Compiled from Family Doc-uments, Private Memoranda, and Original Latters to and from Various Frienda. By Mrs. Grote, Second Edition, With Por-trait HAMERTON (PHILIP G.) A Painter # Camp. Book I. In England. Book II. In Soutland. Book II. In France. Thoughts about Art. The Onknown River. The Intellectual Life Chapters on Animals. 1.60 2.00 8.00 2.00 4.00 HAMILTON (GAIL), Child World, Part Sec ond 1.00 Child World. Part First...... 1.50 Ar attaining Library Edition. And the filter of the filter .... 2.00 2.00 2.00 2.00 2.00 1.50 HUGO'S (V.) New Novel, " 'Ninety-Three". 1.75

NGELOW'S (JEAN) Prose. Of the Skellign tudies for Stories Stories told to a Child, First and Second

1.75

Poor Mat; or, The Cloaden Intensec..... INTERNATIONAL SCIENTFIC SERIES, Rivers, Ice, and Glaciers. By John Tyn-Rivers, Ice, and Glaciers. By John Tyn-dialers. By John Charles, By John Tyn-H, Physics and Polltics; or, Thoughts on H, Physics and Polltics; or, Thoughts on "Natural Sciention," and "Inheritance" to Polltical Society. By Walter Bagehot,

JOHNSON'S (SAMDEL) Oriental Religions, and their Relation to Universal Religion. India

JOSEPHUS. The whole Works of Flavius Josephus, the Jewish Historian. 7.50

Josephus, the Jowiah Historian, JOWERT. The Dialogness of Plato. Trans-lated the English, with Analysis and Intro-ductions by B. Jowett, M.A. Mastor of Balliol College, Oxford, and Regius Pro-fessor of Greek. Four vols.

. 12.0 EERR (ORPHEUS C). Versatilities, Poems, Patriotic, Sentimental and Humprous...... 3.6

4.00

tus to Charlemagne. 2 vols ...... 5.00

LEWES (G. H.) The Story of Goethe's Life. 1.50 LEWIN (REV. RAPHAEL, D'C). What is Ju-daism? or, a Few Words to the Jews...... 1.00

LONGFELLOW'S (E. W.) Poems. Portrait. 2 vols Prose Works. Portrait

LOWELL'S (J. E.) Poems. 2 vols The Biglow Papers. First Series... The Biglow Papers. Second Series Among my Books... My Study Windows...

LOWELL (Mus. A. C.) Postes for Children. .78

MANN (HORACE). The Life of Horace Mann. By his Wire. 1.00 Lectures and Annual Reports on Education. 3.00 Annual Reports on Education, from 1839 to 1846 Thonghis Selected from the Writings of Horace Mann. 123

MAURICE (REV. F. D.) The Ground and Object of Hope for Mankind..... .75

tion The Subjection of Women...... Easay on Liberty A

MOULTON (LOUISE CHANDLES.) Bed-

Time Stories. MUELLER (MAX, M.A.) Lectures on the Science of Language. First Series...... The Same. Scond Series...... Des is on the Science of Religion. Vol. I. U. L. Essays on Mythology, Traditions. and Cateforms. Vol. III. Essays on Id-erature, Biography and Antiquities. Three vols. Frice per volume....... Lectures on the Science of Religion....... 2.50

2,50

ASBY (PETROLEUM V). Swingin' Round the Cirkle Ekcom from Kentucky......

1.50

4.60 3.00

Against Bero-Making in Heilgion. PARKER (THEODORE) A Discourse of Matters Pertaining to Religion. Epocohas, Addresses, and Occasional Ber-Additional Specches, Addresses, and Occa-ational Sermons. 2 vols. Critical and Miscellanceous Writings. Bistoric Americans, --Pranklin, Washing-ton, Adams, and Jefferson. With a un-troduction by Rev. O. B. Stribingham, demonstor of a Speech in FAnewill Hall against Kidnapping; with the Defonce. The two Christinas Citobrailus, A.D.I. and MDCCCLV, A Christinas Story... ABSONS. (THEOPHILUS). The Induite 1.50

1.50 1.50 1.50 1.50 1.50 and the Finite PHELPS'S (ELIZABETH STUART.) The Gates Alar. The Troity Book. Men, Women, and Ghoats. Hedgrd In The Silent Partner. What to Wear7.

SPINOZA (BENEDICT DE.) Tractatus The-

SCHELLEN (H.) Reportrum Analysis, in its Application to Terrestrial Substances, and the Physical Constitution of the Heavenly Bodies.

SCIENCE PRIMERS: 1. Introductory. By Frof. Huxley, F.B.S. 2. Chemistry. By Frof. Roccon. 3. Physics. By Balfour Stewart. With il-iustrations.

SMILES'S (SAMUEL.) Self-Help, ...... 1.50

TRAUSS (D. F.) The Old Paith and the TAINE'S (S. A.) History of English Litters-ture. 2 vols. The Class-Room Taine. History of English literature. Abridged and Edited by John Flake. 250 TENNYSON'S (ALFRED) Poems ...... 1.75

HACKERAY'S (W. M.) Novels. Household Edition. Complete in 6 volumes. For vol.. 1.25 Vanity Fair, The Newcomes. Adventures of Fhilip. Pendomis.

The Virginians. Esmond, and Lovel the Widower. Miscellaneous Writings. Household Edi-tion. Unitorn with the Novels. Com-plete in 5 vols. With new Portrait, Fer vol. 135 This edition includes all the matter in the lat-the section of the section of the section of the sec-there is a section of the section of t

Barry Lyndon, Hoggarty Diamond, &c.
 Paris, and Iriah Sketch-Books, &c.
 Snobs, Sketches, Bonis Duval, &c.
 Four Georges, Humorists, &c.
 Catherine, Uhristmas Books, and Unreprinted Pieces.

THOREAU'S (H. D.) Walden; c the Woods Excursions in Field and Forest. The Msine Woods. Cape Cod. Lettern	Morrimae	2.00 2.00 2.00 2.00 2.00 2.00
A Yankee in Canada A Week on the Concord and Rivers		2.00
of Maukind. Primitive Culture. 7 yols		2.50
TYNDALL (JOHN). Faraday as erer. Fragments of Science for Unscie ple	a Discov-	1.00
Light and Electricity Hours of Encrise in the Alpe on Sound Mode of Motion Badiant Heat Forms of Water. Lectures on Light. Proceedings at the Farewell B Trof. Tyndall.	anquet to	2.00
TYTLER (SARAH.) Old Masters Pictures Modern Painters and their Paint	and their	1.50
VOYSEY (Rzv. CHARLES.) The the Stone. Vols. I. and V., each. Vols III. IV. and VI., each. The Voysey Appeal. Voysey a Defence at York	8ling and	1.00 5.75 ,50
WABNER'S (CHARLES D.) My S a Garden. Saunterings Back-Log Studies		.00
WE188 (JOHN.) American Bellgin Life of Theodore Parker. 2 vola	on i	.50
WHIPPLE'S (E. P.) Literature and Essays and Reviews. Character and Characteristic Men The Literature of the Age of Elin Success and its Conditions. Washington and the Revolution.	abeth	50,50,50,50,50,50,50,50,50,50,50,50,50,5
WHITNEY'S (MRS. A. D. T.) & Su Leslie Goldhwaite's Life. We Girls: A Home Story Beal Folks The Other Girls Pansics. A volume of Poems		.50 .50 .50
WHITTIER'S (JOHN G.) Posms. Child Life		.00

INDE HE 1 Tramont Place, Boston.

Т

ADDRESS

371

1.75

.50

372	and the second se	JULY 30, 1874.
TONPARELL Farm Feed, Bone,	STUDENTS FITTED for any	BOSTON LIBERAL LEAGUE.	A CHEAP OFFERI
NONPAREIL Farm Feed, Bone, Drug, and Hand-grinding MILLS. Ten Sizes. Also Cotton-Seed Hullers. Illustrat-	College. Please address EMILY J. LEONARD,		A COMPLETE SET of INDEX TRACTS, from No. 1 to 14 inclusive, will be mailed to
ed pamphiets iree. Address & MILLER.	Meriden, Conn.	Our organization some time since decided to di- rect its efforts for the present towards securing	any success on the prepayment of 75 owner.
EDGEBEER, SHEPARD & HOL. 181 East Front Street, Cincinnat, Obio. CHARLES SUMNER.	CONSTANT EMPLOYMENT	the	Address THE INDEX, No. 1 Tremont Place, Boston, Mass
	ranted. No capital required. Particulars	Repeal of the Laws ator, the copy of a reconting office, and	with six-cent return stamp. C. ROSS, Williamsburg, N. Y.	and here are not seen to	THE AMERICAN EDITION of the price-fifty cents. THE INDEX,	FREE DISCUSSION	whereby church and other corporate property is unjustly exempted from its share of the burden	MONCURE D. CONWAT'S
Address 1 Tremont Place, Boston.	is held at HOSPITALLER HALL, 593 Washing-	of taxation.	SACRED ANTHOLOGY,
SAVE FIFTY DOLLARS!		As a means to this end, we have published for general circulation several thousand copies of a	A BOOK OF ETHNICAL SCRIPTURES,
THE NEW FLORENCE.	tute the subjects for discussion. THE INDEX and index Tracts are for sale every Sunday at Hospitaller Hall.	Rentine current on person and an and an and	has just been published, and will be
PRICE, $20 below   any other First- VALUE, $30 above   class Sew'g Mach.	WEST NEWTON ENGLISH	TBACT	postpaid on receipt of the price, $4.00, Address THE INDEX,
SAVED, $50 by baying the Florence.	W AND CLASSICAL SCHOOLThe twenty- first school year of this Family and Day School, FOR BOTH SEXES, will begin Wednes-	on Church Exemption, being the article by Mr.	1 TREMONT PLACE.
Every machine warranted.	School, FOR BOTH SEXES, will begin Wednes- day, September 16, 1874. For particulars address	Abbot which appeared in THE INDEE of Nov. 27.	G. L. HENDERSON & CO.,
Special terms to clubs and dealers.	NATH'L T. ALLEN, Principal, West Newton, Mass.	The edition was made as large as our funds would allow; but, so great has been the demand,
Send for circulars to the	At home Saturdays.	it is already nearly exhausted.	BANKERS, LEROY, MINN.
Florence S. M. Co., Plorence. Mass., or 778 Washington Street, Boston, Mass.	TO NEWSPAPER	Our next edition ought to be large enough to place a copy in the hands of	Money invested on short time, or for a term of years, on unincumbered improved
CHARLES SUMNER'S	PUBLISHERS.		farms, at 12 per cent. Interest per annum,
GREAT WORK.	Having conveniences for doing the best of newspaper printing at reasonable prices, I should like to contract for composition alone,	EVERY VOTER IN THE STATE,	Tarina, at 12 per cent, interest per annum, payable semi-arinually. Perfect utile and ample security guaranteed. All expenses for abstract of title and recording mortgage paid by borrower. We collect and recording and should like to contract for composition alone, or for composition, press-work, and mailing, for one or more weekly papers.	and generously to supply the calls for them in	part of the United States free of at to any
PROPHETIC VOICES CONCERNING AMERICA.	work guaranteed. GEO. H. ELLIS,	other States. To do this, we need funds; for, although we	REFERENCES First National Bank, Mo- Gregor, Iowa; First National Bank, Mo- Minn.; Milwaukce National Bank, Milwau- kee, Wis; City National Bank, Milwau-
By CHARLES SUMNER.	7 Tremont Place, Boston.	have made arrangements for printing the Tract	Minn.; Milwaukee National Bank, Milwau- kee, Wis.; City National Bank, Chicago, IL; Allen, Stevens & Co., Bankers, New York
Fine Edition, Tinted Paper, with Steel Por- trait, Crown Svo., Cloth extra, $2.	TO BOOK-BUYERS.	st very low cost, it is impossible for the Boston League, with its various other expenses, to bear	City; Morris Altman.
Aside from its literary and historical mer- its, this volume has a special interest, from	Please examine the revised list of POPU- LAR BOOKS on the opposite side of this page. Any OBTAINABLE BOOK NOT IN	the entire expense alone.	REAL ESTATE SECURITIES, paying 8 to 10 per cent. interest, or the fact that it was the last work on which	THIS LIST will be furnished to order. Readers of THE INDEX who desire to pur- chase English, German, or French Books, or	Will not, then,	Investments in Real Estate in Chicage and violatity,
r. Summer was engaged before his death. "PROPHETIC VOICES" will be found of great	who wish for information as to the price, dcc.,	All Friends of the Movement	and vicinity, value to all who take an interest in the his- tory of our country, so full is it of passages	of any American or Foreign Book, can have their orders promptly filled and their inqui- ries answered by addressing		if judiciously made, are the best and safest modes of employing capital. The old in which the unexampled prosperity of our land has been foretold by philosophers, posts,	THE INDEX, 1 Tremont Place, Boston.	come forward and help us with liberal donations ?	Real Estate and Loan Agency statesmen, and orators, of whom the lament-	BOUND VOLUMES OF THE	We frequently receive communications from parties wishing tracts to distribute, saking how	ERNST PRUSSING, 143 RANDOLPH STERET
ed author has also given interesting aketches. Sent, post-paid, on receipt of price, .	D INDEX. Bound volumes of THE INDEX for 1871,	much they shall pay. To such we reply that the	Chicago (Established 1853),
Address THE INDEX, No. 1 Tremont Place, Boston.	1872, and 1873, will be sent by express (at the purchaser's expense) on receipt of $2.50, $2 50, and $3.00 respectively. These volumes	cost to us is about $2.50 per thousand, and we shall be pleased to furnish them at this price per	Guarantees perfect title and ample security in all its Real Estate Loans.
CHAPTERS	50, and $3.00 respectively. These voluines are exceedingly valuable singly, irrespective of each other; for the important essays and	thousand, or 30 cents per hundred, to all who will circulate them. But all additional donations will	Firetclass securities always on hand. In-
FROM -	other articles they contain are of permanent interest, and will furnish as instructive read-	be gratefally received for the purpose of circu-	or on shares; taxes naid &c
The Bible of the Ages.	ing twenty years hence as to-day. No more valuable present could be made to a friend	ating them gratuitously throughout the country. To many of the subscribers of THE INDEX	Orders of capitalists and real estate own- ers respectfully solicited.
Colored from Gindy Volce Buddha, Con-	struggling out of Orthodoxy than one of these volumes.	and others whose names have been furnished us	REASONS FOR USING THE
fucins, Egyptian Divine Pymander, Zoroas- ter, Talmuds, Bible, Plato, Pythagoras, Mar- cus Aurelius, Epictetus, Al Koran, Luther,	Address THE INDEX, 1 Tremont Place, Boston.	as probable friends of the movement, copies of
	WARREN'S	the Tract, together with Petitions asking the re- peal of the Exemption Laws, have been sant,	EUREKA SPOOL SILK.
Scalumevian Econe, Nary Fletcher, F. W. Newman, Tyndall, Max Müllor, Elias Hicks, Chambug, Garrison, H. C. Wright, Lu- enetia Mott, Higginson, T. Starr King, Bush- enetia Mott, Higginson, T. Starr King, Bush- metia Mott, Higginson, T. Starr King, Bush- Starr Starr St	TRUE CIVILIZATION.		It is full longth. It is full size. It is
nell, Parker, Davis, Emma Hardinge, Emer-	Price 50 cents.	With the Hope	smooth and elastic, and is equally adapted to hand or machine use.
Gospels and Inspirations from many	DRIGHTOLT DRIVER	that such friends will try to secure as many sig-	Many kinds of spool silk are a perfect
Slowly the Bible of the race is writ.	PRACTICAL DETAILS,	natures to the petition as possible in their locality	fraud, being not only aborter in length, but
Each age, each kindred, adds a verse to it." Edited and Compiled by	showing the workings of the	We respectfully ask those who are unable to at- tend to the matter themselves to place the peti-	a much finer size than they are represented to be, and of so poor a quality as to be unit
GILES B. STEBBINS. Four hundred pages; bound in cloth; price	COST PRINCIPLE. Price 25 cents.	tions in the hands of those who will.	for use. The ladies will always find the Eu- reka Silk exactly as represented. Every
$1.5C. No Extra Charle for Postage. Address THE INDEX.	For sale by	Let us	spool is warranted, and the manufacture's name indelibly branded on every spool. Call
RUST OF	S. H. MORSE,	BOLL UP THE LIST!	for it.
B U S T O F THEODORE PARKER,	25 Bromfield St., Boston,		RADICAL AND LITERARY
THEODORE FARRER, BY	NEW SINGING BOOKS!	Let our united volces be heard! And let it be done NOW!
SIDNEY H. MORSE.	THE LEADER !!	We would say, also that we feel deeply the	LECTURES
Dignity, reverence, sweetness, vigor, equi- polse, breathe through the clay; the artist	By H. R. PALMER, assisted by L. O. EMERSON.	need of	ВУ has so filled his own heart with appreciation of that noble life that he has been able cun-	Choirs, Conventions, and Singing Classes will welcome this new Church Music-Book,	Other Organizations	JOHN WEISS, aingly to mould it into those delicate lines which the character had wrought on the liv-	filled with new tunes, anthems, chants, etc., etc., all of the best quality,	Other Organizations
ing fibre. We are tempted to exclaim, as we stand beside it, as the old artist did to his perfected work, "Speak then!"—Hannah E.	Price $1.38, or $19.00 per Dozen.	in this State, to cooperate with us in securing	RADICAL LECTURES.
All the characteristics of my husband are	The Song Monarch !! By H. R. PALMER, assisted by L. O. EMERSON.	equality and justice, by pressing the "Domands of Liberslism." If, in any locality, there are	The Idea of Hereafter. An Act of Faith.
n the bust,-bis greatness, his goodness, his enderness, his love. You cannot give life to slay or marble; but you can represent it, and	Especially for Singing Classes. First 86 pages contain the elementary course, the same as that in the LEADER, which course is	those who are inclined to	Intelligence in Religion. Religion and Science.
day or marble; but you can represent it, and this Mr. Morse has done.—Lydia D. Parker to Hannah E. Stevenson.	followed by more than 100 pages filled with	Form a Liberal League,	Heart in Religion.
The eyes, though but of clay, are gleaming	the most interesting Secular and Sacred Mu- sic for practice. Equal to the Song King in	roim a Liberal League,	SHARSPEARIAN LECTURES.
with possible indignation, with possible tears the lips are set firm with the resolution of nim who, like Paul, could "light a good light" as well as "give a reason."—Samuel Longfel-	Price 75 cts., or $7.50 per dozen.	we are ready to render such assistance as lies in	FIRST SERIES.
as well as "give a reason."-Samuel Longfel-	AMEBICAN	our power,	1. Cause of Laughter.
The first time I have seen Theodore Parker since he died Wm, Sparrell.	School Music Readers.	LIPEDATO	<ol> <li>Irony and Humor.</li> <li>Dogberry, Malvolio, Bottom, Touchstons.</li> </ol>
The best representation of Mr. Parker ever executed in clayBoston Daily Globe.	Three carefully graded Song Books for Com- mon Schools, by L. O. EMERSON and W. S. TILDEN.	LIBERALSI	4. Ajax in Troilus and Cressids; The Por- ter in Macbeth; The Fool in Lear.
The face is strong and noble as it should be. The likeness is good.—Boston Daily Advertiser.	Rook 1st. For Primary Schools. Price 35 cts. Book 2d. For Lower "Grammar" Classes. Price 50 cts.	If all will units and work, the results sought	5. Falstaff.
Nothing appears for beauty alone, or finish, or to show the vanity of the artist. All is	Book 3d. For Higher "Grammar" Classes.	can be accomplished	6. Hamlet. SECOND SERIES.
man, Theodore ParkerL. S. H. in the Golden	Price 60 cts. The Course is easy, progressive, interest- ing, and has been thoroughly tested in schools	Address	1. The Women of Shakspeare.
Contes of this Boat double dutabad a plan	ing, and has been thoroughly tested in schools near Boston.	BOSTON LIBERAL LEAGUE.	2. Portia. 3. Ophelia.
entra. Freight or expressing paid by party anding order. Weight of hox about fifty	OLIVER DITSON & CO.,	SOUTON LIDENAL LLAUVE,	4. Mucbeth and Lady Macbeth.
pounda. Orders may be sent to	BOSTON.	NO. I TREMONT PLACE, BOSTON.	6. Contrast in Shakspeare's Characters,
S. H. MORSE, Boom 13, 25 Bromfield St., Boston, Mass.	CHAS. H. DITSON & CO., 711 BROADWAY, NEW YORE.	Per order of the EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE	Address JOHA Walley

Google

Three Dollars a Year.

LIBERTY AND LIGHT.

Single Copies Seven Cents.

VOLUME 5.

 $\hat{x}_i$ ŝ 2.4

δ.

R

BOSTON, MASS., THURSDAY, AUGUST 6, 1874.

For List of Liberal Leagues, see next page.

WHOLE NO. 241.

ORGANIZE!

THE DEMANDS OF LIBERALISM.

THE DEMANDS OF LIBERALISM. 1. We demand that churches and other ecclesiastical property shall no longer be exempt from just taxation. 2. We demand that the employment of chaplains in Con-grees, in State Legislatures, in the navy and millitia, and in prisons, asylums, and all other institutions supported by public money, shall be discontinued. 3. We demand that all public appropriations for educa-tional and charitable institutions of a sectarian character shall cease.

ahall coase. 6. We demand that all religious services now sustained by the government shall be abolished; and especially that the use of the Bible in the public schools, whether estenai-bly as a text-book or arowedly as a book of religious wor-ship, shall be prohibited.

ahly, shall be prohibited. 5. We demand that the appointment, by the President of the United States or by the Governors of the various States, of all religious feativals and fasts shall wholly coase. 6. We demand that the judicial oath in the courts and nall other departments of the government shall be abol-ished, and that simple affirmation under the pains and pen-alities of perjury shall be established in its stead. 7. We demand that all laws directly or indirectly enforc-ing the observance of Sunday as the Sabbath shall be re-pended.

by the demand that all laws looking to the enforcement of "Christian" morality shall be abrogated, and that all laws shall be conformed to the requirements of natural morality, equal rights, and impartial liberty.
9. We demand that not only in the Constitutions of the United States and of the several States, but also in the practical administration of the same, no privilege or advantage shall be conceded to Christianity or any other special religion; that our entire political system shall be founded and administered on a purely secular basis; and that whatever changes shall prove necessary to this end shall be consistently, unflinchingly, and promptly made.

A FORM OF LOCAL ORGANIZATION.

Whereas, It is our profound conviction that the safety of republican institutions is imperilled, the advance of civili-mation impeded, and the most sacred rights of man in-fringed, by the least interference of the State in matters of religion; and

religion; and Whereas, Certain grave inconsistencies with the general spirit of the United States Constitution still mark the prac-tical administration of our political system, threatening the perpetuity of religious liberty, the existence of free public schools, and the peace and prosperity of the entire land; THERMORE, We, the undersigned, hereby associate our-seives together under the following

ARTICLES OF AGREEMENT.

-The name of this Association shall be THE LIE-ART. 1.-The na.

ART. 2.-The object of the Liberal League shall be to se-cure practical compliance with the "Demands of Liberal-iam" throughout the country, and especially in —: Also, as soon as five thindred quot Liberal Leagues shall have been formed in different places, to send two delegates to a National Convention of Liberal Leagues, to be hereaf-ter called, in order to co-operate with all the liberals of the sountry in securing the needed reforms. ART, 3.-The means employed in working for these shifts

Asr. 3.— The means employed in working for these objects shall be regular local meetings, free discussions, lectures, addresses, conventions, the platform and the press in gen-eral, and all such other means as are peaceable, orderly, and right

Ant. 4.—Such measures shall be adopted for raising funds for the League as shall be prescribed in the By-Laws by a two-thirds yote of the members.

ABT. 5.—Any person may become a member of the League subscribing his or har name to these Articles of Agreement. Age: 6.—The Officers of the League shall be a President, a Vice President, a Secretary a Treasurer, and an Execu-tive committee of three members; and their duties shall be these commonly pertaining to these offices. The President and Secretary shall be an explored delegates to the National Convention of Liberal Leagues when called together. Age: 1.—These Articles of Agreement may be amended by a three-fourths vote of the members present at any reg-ular meeting, provided due notice of the proposed amend-ments shall have been sont to every member at least two weeks previous to such meeting.

Bo far as I am concerned, the above is the platform of THE LEDEX. I believe in it without reserve; I believe that it will yet be accepted universally by the American people, as the only platform consistent with religious liberty. A Liberal League ought to be formed to carry out its princi-ples wherever half a dozen earnest and resolute Liberals ples wherever half a dozen earnest and resolute Liberals can be got together. Being convinced that the movement to secure compliance with these just "Demands" must surely, even if slowly, spread, I hope to make Tax Innex a means of furthering it; and I ask the assistance and active co-operation of every man and every woman who be-lieves in st. Multiply Liberal Leagues everywhere, and re-port promptly the names of their Freedents and Secre-taries. Intolerance and bigotry will tremble in proportion as that list grows. If freedom, justice, and reason are wight, list their organized voice be heard like the sound of many waters. many waters.

FRANCIS E. ABBOT, Solder. BOWTON, Bept. 1, 1875.

NOTES AND COMMENTS. BY A. W. S.

THE "GOVERNMENT" of this nation is scattared "all along shore," from Long Branch to Bys Basch.

EIGHTEEN THOUSAND women, in England, have just petitioned Mr. Disraell for Woman Suffrage. How can he resist such a winsome appeal!

THERE is an "Independent Tract Society" in Clinton, Massachusetts, which issues some cheap liberal docu ments pertaining to reform in politics and religion. A. Briggs Davis is the manager of it.

WE ARE GLAD to learn that Prof. F. W. Clarke, late of Howard University, Washington, D. C., has been ap-pointed to the chair of Chemistry in the Cincinnati Uni-versity. Mr. Clarke is a member of the Parker Fraternity, and carries his principles with him wherever he goes.

WENDELL PHILLIPS is one of the Commissioners of lunacy in this State, -having recently been appointed by Gov. Talbot. His long experience as a "fanatic" may be of some use to him in this new position; for fanati and lunacy have, by all conservatives, been considered to mean pretty much the same thing.

IT IS ASTONISHING how near hearts may come togeth er, even when the heads above them widely differ! We met, the other day, a venerable Doctor of Divinity, of the Unitarian persuasion, whom we had not seen for a long time; and his cordial "God bless you!" was as sweet to us as it could have been were we not an "awful heretic."

THE "centennial of chemistry," or the celebration of Joseph Priestley's discovery of oxygen one hundred years ago, was held in Northumberland, Pa., last Friday. A large number of the most prominent chemiats in America were present. On the following day, in Birmingham, England, a marble statue representing Priestley discovering oxygen was unvelled and presented to the town by Professor Hurley.

REV. DE. BARTOL has his summer residence in Man chester, in this State. And it would seem that he has some theatrical neighbors; for Mr. and Mrs. F. B. Conway, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Proctor, Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Booth, Mr. and Mrs. John Gilbert, Mrs. D. P. Bowere, and others, have also summer residences in the same place. We have no doubt that liberal religion and the drama are able to live amicably together.

REV. W. M. BAKER writes to the Independent about "Peculiar Boston;" and he says: "The exact trouble in Boston, as in every other camp of unbellef, lies in this: that not a soul therein has anything to suggest as a substitute for Christianity; no, not the ghost of an available suggestion." We are much airaid that Mr. Baker does not improve his mind by reading THE INDEX. If he did, he would know that natural religion is modestly suggested as a substitute for Christianity.

THE POPE has got a new private chaplain, his former one having recently died. But what need at all has the pope of a private chaplain? Is he not a priest himself, and can he not say his own prayers? Or is the job of doing his private praying so enormous, that his holiness requires an assistant therein? The pope is the vicar of God, the representative of the second person in the Trini-ty, and yet he must have a man to help him do his praying! We cannot see through it. If the infallible prope needs praying for, ought we not to offer a few pray-ers for God himself?

THE COMET has come and gone, and done it all so silently, too. While it was the occasion of a prodigious deal of talk in some circles on earth, and of no little curiosity and excitament beside, it held screnely on its way as though conscious of a destiny to fulfil. It came within twenty-six millions of miles of us, was the glory of our night-skies for a few evenings, and then quistly ed on. We thank it for having lifted up our eyes to the calm, deep heavens even for so brief a time, and for stirring up in our minds a wonder about the great mysteries that are concealed in the stellar spaces. We are glad that man does not know everything, and that the universe is full of impressive secretz before must ever wonder, and adore, and be humble. crets before which we

ENGLAND, it appears, has all along been giving aid and comfort to the Carlist rebels against the Spaniak republic; even as she did, in the time of our civil war, to the Southern rebeis against the American Union. As in the former, so in the present case, her greed combined with her instinctive hatred of republicaniam has led her to sell English-manufactured arms and ammunition to the plotters against popular government and free institu-tions in Spain; and the Carlists have prosecuted the warfare, which lately they have made so inhuman, largely through the assistance received from England. But England's day of judgment will come to her. Bradiaugh is on his native heath, and he means republicanism in Bradiaugh England. Let us hope that that may come to pass by a aceful revolution. D0

THE Liberal Christian says: "If anything is certain in the Unitarian body, it is that it means to be and is a Christian denomination." What an endless and needless "rumpus" there is about this word "Christian"! It is as hard to define as a white-black-bird. It will not stay defined; but now means one thing, and now another. Some men try in vain to get rid of it, and still some others appear to be in agony (as the Liberal Christian) lest it be taken away from them. The name is as trouble-some to many as mosquito. But for our part we do not intend to lose any sleep by it. If it lights on ns, we will brush it off; and if it comes back, we will go about our business all the same. By-and-by it will become extinct, preserved only as a historic fossil; and then no-body will be annoyed by it; but all will observe it with what degree of interest may belong to it. In the mean-time, let us be as patient of it, and tender with it, as may be,

THE COMMITTEE of the Agricultural Laborers' Union, in England, are negotiating easy terms of emigration to Canada for the "locked-out" farm laborers. What a sulcldsi policy is England purshing in virtually compelling these yeomen of the nation,—its very bone and sinew,— to leave her shores forever! The time must surely come when she will bitterly ros her blind selfishness in this matter. The House of Commons has just voted an an-nual grant of $75,000 to Prince Leopold, "whose health," the prime minister said, "prevented him from adopting a. profession,"--and at the same time hundreds and thou-sands of these poor farm laborers are in a state of semistarvation, and are preparing to fies from their native shores to find even a chance to earn their own living! Princes must live in ease and affinence, says Christian England, but poor people may starve and dis! Very good; England makes her choice. She chooses pauper princes, and drives from her soll her honest laborers. In the long ran, the laborers can stand it better than she

IT 18 A YEAR, lacking one month, since we have furnished "notes and comments" for these columns. During this time, whatever thought has suggested itself to whatever has been said or done by others within the range of our observation, which we considered to have any bearing on radical problems, we have here remarked apon; and whatever theme or event we have felt moved ach week gravely or humorously to speak of to the dircle of INDEX readers, it is here, for the most part, that we have so spoken to them. We confess we have en-joyed this weakly chat with the readers of THE INDEX, and we venture to hope that it has not been wholly uninteresting to them. The making of good and readable paragraphs is a high art which we dare not presume to have mastered in any distinguished degree, -since it re-quires the rare shility to be brief, and at the same time pointed, lucid, and sententious; but, according to our op-portunity and capacity, we have done the best we could. We shall not, however, undertake this task any longer, inasmuch as the increase of our clerical duties in the office will make it inconvenient for us hereafter to give onnee will make is inconvenient for in hereafter to give the time to the reading of exchanges, and so forth, which has been required in the preparation of these "notes and comments." But, in occasional editorials, we hope still to keep up our communication with the readers of Tax. INDEX.

LIST OF LIBEBAL LEAGUES.

St. LOUIS, MO.-M. A. McCord, President; P. A. Lofgreen, L. La Grille, Secretaries, BOBTON, MARS.-F. E. Abbot, President; J. P. Titcomb, G. A. Bacon, Secretaries, JEFFERSON, ORIO.-W. H. Growell, President; A. Giddings, Secretary.
SAN JOSE, CAL.-A. J. Spencer, President; J. L. Hatch, Secretary. Secretary. TOLEDO, LOWA.-J. Reedy, Fresident; E. S. Bockley, Secre-tary. ViriliAND' N. J.-John Gage, President; Sue M. Clute, Secretary. JUNCTIONVILLE, NEB.-J. W. Eastman, President; B. L. Easley, Socretary. OLATHE, KAN.-S. B. S. Wilson, President; H. A. Griffin, Secretary. Beretary. Beretary. Beretary. MIDE - A. G. Eastman, President; F. R. Knowles, Secretary. OBOSOLA, MO.-R. F. Thompson, President; M. Roderick, OBUSULA, MO.-M. F. Thompson, President; M. Roderick, Secretary. Barn, M.-F. G. Barker, President; C. Rhodes, Secretary, Bmain, Wis.-Fresident, J. D. Walters; Secretary, E. M. Bridgman. Bridgman. Waszinorow, D.C. - George M. Wood, President; J. E. Orawford, Secretary. Augeran, Onio, --John Fish, President; G. W. Barnes, Treas-ness. urer. MINERAPOLIS, MINN.-Fresident; G. W. Baroes, Freak-MINERAPOLIS, MINN.-Fresident, J. B. Bassett; Secretary, Anton Grethen. NEW YORR, N.Y.-J. B. Brown, President; D. M. Bennett, Secretary. St. JOSEFH, MO.-P. V. Wise, President; T. H. Kennedy, Secretary. Barberg, Wis.-President, S. J. Dickson; Secretary, W. Kennedy. President, T. Gray; Secretary, W. Allen.
 Naw Ontaxas, La.-President, E. Vorster; Secretary, J. E. Wallace.
 Wallace.
 Manuelland, Manuelland, S. M. Green; Secretary, S. M. Johnson. CLEARFIELD, PA.-S. Widemire, President; H. Hoover, Scoretary Secretary. BAUK CITY, WIS.-Chr. Spiehr, President; Robert Cunradi, Secretary.

[For THE INDEL.]

Deed and Doctrine.

A DISCOURSE GIVEN IN THE FIRST CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH,

NEW BEDFORD, MASS.

BY WILLIAM J. POTTER.

<text><section-header><section-header><text> that thus comes to modify the voice of conscience itself? Does it not come from the increase of knowl-edge, from the greater supremacy of reason, from more broad and cultivated views? In a word, is it not clear that human conscience changes, progresses, grows, takes its character and gives its commands, according to the condition, as to ignorance or knowl-edge, breadth or narrowness, rationality or supersti-tion, of the human intellect? It is evident from these questions, and the argu-

edge, breadth or narrowness, rationality of supersit-tion, of the human intellect? It is evident from these questions, and the argu-ment included under them, that when it is said that the law of conscience is prior and superior to the thought or opinion of the intellect, the statement cannot be made in any such absolute sense as that conscience is, and ought to be, wholly independent of reason and culture. There is certainly no such thing in human history as an absolutely infallible con-science. Conscience is changeable, progressive, sub-ject to light and darkness, like all other human fac-ulties. We may say that conscience is the highest guide that man has, and that whatever the voice of any man's conscience may dictate, that voice, for the time, to that man is supreme, and must be fol-lowed,—we may say this, and yet not say that any human conscience is the highest guide in the uni-verse. The best human conscience, the finite moral sense that voices itself under the best possible condi-tions, can make only an approximation to the absohuman conscience is the highest guide in the universe. The best human conscience, the finite moral sense that voices itself under the best possible conditions, can make only an approximation to the absolute and eternal right. Whatever opens the intellect, emancipates reason, enlarges the bounds of knowledge, widens the sympathies, broadens the vision, quickens the heart, that also elevates, refines, improves the conscience. Conscience is no immutable, everiasting law, pronouncing the same commands yesterday, to-day, and forever, subject to "no variableness nor shadow of turning"; but conscience in man, both in the individual and in the race, is a progressive, improvable, growing faculty. This must certainly be admitted. And when it is said that, "if we do the will of God, we shall come to know the doctrine," it must not be understood that knowing has nothing to do with our doing; that acting does not depend at all on thinking; that morality may be safely divorced from reason; that, if a man says he must follow his conscience, and his conscience directs him thus and so, he has no further responsibility for his conduct, but may let his conscience remain unclivated, narrow, bigoted, so only he follow it. There is at least one kind of knowledge that a man must have before he can do the divine will. He must know something of what that will is. He must have some perception of the divine thought and purpose. And, though it may not require so much close thinking and reasoning to understand a divine purpose and aim as it does to grasp some definite doctrine of the divine nature, yet who will venture to say that a porfere pico of what we call the Divine Will; in other words, into our perception of those laws, tendencies, moral gravitations, which we observe in Nature and thumanity, and which with we observe is a faculty that say do the right,—and go otherwise at your peri. Yet, to determine what is the right, knowledge, culture reason, thought, must be called to the aid of the ordina sense. Conscience must gove the government may be enlightened and just in the broadest sense. The statement, then, that the law of conscience is prior and superior to the law of intellect, must be thus explained and modified. If in one sense doing is a necessary condition of knowing, in another sense knowing is a necessary condition of doing. There is a mutual relation between the two—between doing the right and knowing the truth—between correct conduct and correct knowledge; and we cannot say that either is absolutely independent of the other. Yet there is a very important sense in which this statement of the supremacy, not its absolute inde-pendence; a very important sense in which it is true that the perception of the right precedes and com-mands intellectual perception, and in which the doing of the right opens the way to a clearer understanding of truth. And in the principle which we here touch lies one of the most assuring and comforting facts connected with the history and experience of man-kind.

lies one of the most assuring and comforting facts connected with the bistory and experience of man-kind. Let me, then, illustrate what I mean by the su-premacy of moral perception over intellectual percep-tion. Take, for example, the moral sentiment of human brotherhood,—the sentiment that fraternal love and good-will should be the bond of human ac-ciety. The first important fact to note is that we find some expression of this sentiment under the most diverse forms of thought, philosophy, religion, race. This central principle of society, though it may not yet have anywhere come to full fruition, does not seem to have been dependent on any specific doctrines of religion or system of philosophy. You find it in the far East where Confuctus said that "in the word reciprocity we have a rule of practice for all one's life," and one of his disciples added, "The chief thing is in having the heart right, and in lov-ing one's neighbor as oneself." Pythagoras pro-claimed "the love of all to all." Zoroaster thought the same in Persta. The old Hebrew lawgiver wrote, "Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself?" and Jesus endorsed, emphasized, and specially illustrated the same truth. Cicero taught it, when he said, "The law imprinted in the heart of all men is to love the members of society as themselves?" and Seneca, in the declaration "that Nature planted in us a mutual love, and fitted us for a social life. We whole." So this grand, moral sentiment of human brotherhood appears in connection with the most va-tions theological beliefs, in connection with the most va-tions theological beliefs, in connection with the most va-appears ages apart, and in countries reparated by thousands of miles; in heathenism, Jodaiam, Christianity, in monotheism and polythesim; in connection with dreadful idolatries and supersitions, and in countries goal ages, it difference, looking at different feedback, and appearing the contrast age of the second and the second appears. There is not a goal age, it difference, looking at difference, bistorically, in the realization of the idea of humane, historically, in the realization of the idea of humane, historically, every form of belief of which we have any historical second. Here, certainly, is one point where an more sample following that and idea itself has found expression in the second s justice, love and charity. It is infidelity like this that the young—and, alas, too many of the old—need to be most warned against to-day. To lose faith in Providence may be sad; to lose faith in the moral law

Google-

1 5

> ŝą 20 Ç,

> > 10

2.00

なななるる ñ

923 8.

21.17.0

日にはな

22400

<text>

For THE INDER.] "THE PHENIX SAYS 'NO."

<text><text><text><text><text>

Dr. Bartol, sconer or later pronounces her emphatic "No." It seems evident that all efforts at reform, not based on this underlying nature of things, must in the end prove fuille. Few, if any, of the benevolent exer-tions for the improvement of society seem to be grounded on this Foundation Rock. There seems to be a pressing need that attention should be more and more directed into this channel of inquiry, and of action based upon it. The only hope for the realiza-tion in time to come of the highest of which man-kind is capable lies in the fact that the generations, as they rise, shall be so thoroughly instructed in the principles of universal, unchangeable law, and shall be made to see so clearly the impossibility that trans-gression should not be followed by evil and misery, that the motives for conformity will far outweigh any temptations to what must of necessity be only a self-ducty but their pleasure and highest interest, to chime in harmoniconaly with those perfect laws whose ob-servance would constitute a music of humanity vastly more grand than that imagined of the spheres of heaven. A. H.

A REMARKABLE CHURCH.

COSMIAN HALL IN FLORENCE, MASS.

SOCIETY WHICH PERMITS ABSOLUTE FREEDOM OF RELIGIOUS BELIEF-BUT ONE COVENANT OF UNION -UNIFORMITY OF THEOLOGICAL BELIEF NEITHER DEMANDED NOE EXPECTED-A MEDLEY OF SPIRIT-UALISTS, MATERIALISTS, AND FORMER ORTHODOX CHUBCH MEMBERS-ITS LIST OF MINISTERS AND TOPICS DISCUSSED.

TOPICS DISCUSSED. About a generation ago, an epidemic of Socialism ran through various parts of the United States. The famous Brook Farm, near Boston, from which Haw-thorne took the idea of his Bitthedale Romance, is a well-known illustration. But it is not, perhaps, gen-erally known that elsewhere throughout the country were originated many stuliar movements, lees known of course, as they had less celebrated participators; but none the less interesting to one who happens to stumble upon their remains. The associations or communities themselves have almost wholly disap-peared, but they have frequently been the progenitors of remarkable children; and, in not a few towns in New England, very many traces of their influence may be seen, either in still existing customs or, as is more common, in the general intellectual and moral tone which pervades the whole society of the place.

A COMMUNITY THAT FELL TO PIECES.

A COMMUNITY THAT FELL TO PIECES. A little more than thirty years ago a community, under the name of "The Association of Education and Industry," purchased a large tract of land in the town of Northampton, Mass., and began once more the establishment of the kingdom of heaven on earth. In a sheltered valley of this tract of land, on the edge of a small stream, stood a large, ill-looking, brick building, now part of a cotton factory, built originally for the manufacture of sewing-silk. Of this building the community took possession, nearly all the mem-bers living within its walls, in one large, happy fami-ly, and continuing the manufacture of sewing-silk, while a few of the members lived outside, carrying on farming, and others experimented in the raising of mulberry trees for silk-worms. A very few years only, not more than four or five, the association lasted. Then the serpent, or more properly a number of ser-pents, in the form of various dissensions, entered the

<text><text><text><text>

AN ORIGINAL CLASS OF THINKERS LEFT.

<text><text><text><text>

Condition by Google

as to the conditions and rights of membership in this society on account of sex, or color, or nationality." This does not read much like the Westminster Con-fession, or the Thirty-nine Articles; but on this creed, if creed it can be called, was organized "The Free Congregational Society of Florence," the society which, after a successful decade of life, has just com-pleted the handsome building spoken of above. The above article of agreement is inscribed on a slab of white marble, and inserted in the wall within the porch and just over the large entrance doors.

A SUNDAY-SCHOOL WHERE SCIENCE IS TAUGHT.

porch and just over the large entrance doors. A SUNDAY-SCHOOL WHERE SCHENCE IS TAUGHT. But the practical working of the society is, of course, the point of real interest. And this is truly more peculiar than anything else about it, and stampa spects, in the country. Two sessions, or services, or meetings, are held each Sunday—one in the morning, a Sunday-school for the children, and one in the after-noon for the older people. Upon a recent visit to the Sunday-school, I could not see that it differed greatly in appearance from many other Sunday-schools which I have seen elsewhere. The superintendent, a lady, a teacher in one of the town schools, played upon the melodeon, led the singing of the children, real les-sons, and attended to the other usual duties of a su-pentition of the older in the attention of the town schools, played upon the sons, and attended to the other usual duties of a su-pentition of the older singing of the children, real les-sons, and attended to the other usual duties of a su-moral semtiments in unison, declaimed pieces, etc. But the class exercises are unlike those of other schools. There is no catechism, or other lesson-book, anywhere in use. The teachers read storles to the poinger scholars I found one class of girls reciting in physiology, and another in botany; a class of boys studying phonography, under the tuition of a lawyer; a large class of young ladies and gentlemen, called the datic class, the members of which discuss all kinds of social and theological questions, especially the sa gentleman whose philocophy evidently borders closely on materialism, and I think most church members would probably call him an infield. To a casual visitor the most striking feature of the school a negative one, —the absence of any prayer or bene-cionel ni form.

<text>

A SOCIETY OF THE UNORTHODOX.

Many were thus cast out, or came out, thirty odd years ago or more, when Anti-Slavery sentiments first began to invade the quiet of the churches. Largely, of course, they were members of the Orthodox Con-gregational churches of Massachusetts and Connectigregational churches of Massachusetts and Connecti-cut, but many were Baptists—the President of the Society is an ex-Baptist deacon,—others were Quakers, some of the Church of England, a few Roman Catho-lles, and one couple, at least, were brought up by, and ran away from, the Shakers. Eccentric charac-ters abound, quite as a matter of course. A brisk, shrewd-looking old gentleman is a fanatic on the sub-ject of tobacco. The remotest allusion to tobacco in a public meeting is sure to bring the old man to his feet with a ready fling against the weed. Another rather curious character is a man who was imprisoned in Kentucky for seventeen years, for assisting a fugi-tive slave. When released by the coming of the Northern army, he naturally gravitated to Florence, where he opened a baker's shop. One of the leaders of the Society is a vegetarian, who for many years has not tasted meat, tea, coffee, cocoa, or alcoholic drink of any kind. His children have been brought up in harmony with the teachings of vegetarianism, and in his household is dispensed a charming hospitality, which if not spiritual is certainly not animal. These and other assemblies characters of course do not which if not spiritual is certainly not animal. These and other eccentric characters, of course, do not represent the average member of the Society, who is, for all the world, just like the average member of any other society. The officiating minister enters and takes his seat in the data as in provider of the society of the seat in other society. The officiating minister enters and takes his seat in the desk, as in any church, and here we note at once a peculiarity. He may be the regular minister of the Society, or a stranger from any part of the country. The regular minister of the Society, or resident-speaker, as he is called, does not speak regularly; formerly he did not speak more than one-quarter or one-half the time, but lately this proportion has been increased to about three-fourths. The remaining Sundays are given to any person who has, or who is supposed to have, something to say which the Society may desire to hear. Although the speakers are en-gaged by an Executive Committee, chosen annually, yet an intimation from any member that he or she would like to hear a certain person is usually suffi-cient to secure the presence of that person, provided he is willing to come. In connection with this, I can-not do better than give an extract from a published report of the Executive Committee of a few years aso:-

ago:-"During the past year our resident-minister has occupied the desk on twenty Sundays. The Society has also been favored with the services of the follow-

be noted also that only a portion of the above names belong to ordained ministers. RESIDENT-MINISTERS, MEN AND WOMEN. The first resident-speaker of the Society, Chas. C. Burleigh, who occupied that position for many years, was never ordained as a minister at all. Brother of the poet, Wm. H. Burleigh, educated for a lawyer, a man of remarkably logical mind, a ready speaker and good scholar, he forsook law in early years to join the Anti-Slavery movement, and became one of the ploneer leaders of the Abolitionists, coming to Florence first to speak on his favorite subject. A man of strong sympathies, thoroughly respected by all who know him, he might nevertheless well head the list of eccentric characters to be seen here. By his slovenly inattention to the requirements of civil-ized dress he has doubtless done much to injure his own influence and increase local prejudice against the Society. He adds to this misfortune another eccentricity in the style of wearing his hair, which he parts in the middle and allows to flow down to his shoulders in a profusion of ringlets which many a nis appearance at times is singularly striking. When washed and dressed, it is claimed by his friends that he presents a remarkable resemblance. A year ago Mr. Burleigh went West, and ha senemies, of course, accuse him of aping the resemblance. A year ago Mr. Burleigh went West, and is now preaching for an independent society in Bloomington, Ill. Associated with Mr. Burleigh for a year, as assistant resident-speaker, was Miss Powell, formerly a teacher in Va-sar College, who, before her year was out, lost her heart to a young lawyer, and forsook the pulpit for matimony. Miss Powell, formerly a teacher in Va-sar College, who, before her year was out, lost her heart to a young lawyer, and forsook the pulpit for matimony. Miss Powell, sorter, the was at one oblivion of private life. The present resident-speaker is a young man med Rowland Counor, brought up in New York City, and a graduate, I believe, of the Gollege of the City of New Yor

INFORMAL WAY OF CONDUCTING SERVICES.

years ago. INFORMAL WAY OF CONDUCTING SERVICES. The exerclass begin in any way the speaker may choose. This is literally true. There is no such thing as a regular order of services. Of course the resident-speakers have had their ways, from which they did not as a rule greatly depart. But, never-theless, it is true that any order of exercises is wholly in order which may be agreeable to the speaker. It is the favorite boast of the Society that it maintains an absolutely free platform, and any speaker whom they consider worthy to invite to occupy it is con-sidered to understand best what he may wish to say or do, and is free to prepare his own order withoun direction on the part of the Society. To illustrate this, the present resident-speaker relates the follow-ing: When he visited Florence for the first time, a number of years ago, he arrived in the village late Saturday evening, having accepted an invitation to speak the following day. Accustomed to the formal-ity of Sunday observances in Boston, he naturally in-quired of his host concerning the order of Sunday service. "Whatever you may desire," was the puz-zling answer. "But have you no regular order?"

1874. "No, none at all." Not quite satisfied, as may well be "You have reading from the Bible, I suppose?" "You have reading from the Bible, I suppose?" "Sometimes we do; you will find a Bible in the deak you wish to use one." "Do you have prayer offered?" "You can offer prayer. If you wish" "You have hymns sung, certainly?" "We have a profered?" "You can offer prayer. If you wish offered?" "You can offer prayer. If you wish "You have hymns sung, certainly?" "We have a the second of the best of the society with re-are a second of the second of the society with re-are a second of the second of the society with re-are a second of the second of the society with re-are a stall; he may offer prayer, or omit prayer entires have from the Bible, or from some other book, or not read at all; he may offer prayer, or omit prayer entires have for the Bible of from some other book, or not read at all; he may offer prayer, or omit prayer entires have for the Bible of from some other book, or not read at all; he may offer prayer, or omit prayer entires have for the subscription of the choir, in these cases in the second of the subscription of the second have the speaker from the embarrasement of open have of the naual Scripture reading may be given in have of the naual Scripture reading it is not under the discourses there is a wide departure, of counts, the discourse the may offer prayer, it is not under he discourses there is a wide departure of coundities of the subscl read of the Execute Coundities of the subscl read successed by these speakers may have discourse; Origin and Antecedents of the frictin Alses; Worman Suffrage; National Affairs offician Isan; Kevivals; The Evils of Indiscription, the solution. Zonool System; The Church, buc to be the word for the second curve to of overty; The Defect on the word in sides of the great question of the men at the by whom these questions were discussed, its

When we remember the names of the men and women by whom these questions were discussed, it is evident that strong intellectual digestion must be needed to attend regularly the weekly meetings of this Society.

FREEDOM OF SPEECH AND OF DEBATE.

<text><text><text><text>

unnue Google

flect upon this strange society. Is it only Paritanism gone to seed ?--or is it the legitimate outcome of Protestant free thought and religious liberty? This last is the claim of the Society itself, a claim, of course, which will be derided by an immense majority of the religious people of the country. Whatever it is, it seems to be now a strong, earnest, active exist-ence, which cannot be blown away by ridicule. I commend this religious curiosity to the attention of those competent to deal with the problems it presents. R. W. L.

FLORENCE, Mass, July 11, 1874. -N. Y. Tribune.

THE PLACE OF SENTIMENT IN PHI-LOSOPHY.

BY G. H. LEWES.

<text>

does not feel? Happily there is no such man. There are only men who feel less vividly than others; none are whol-ly without the feelings. And it is on this foundation that a moral science is possible; which proceeds, like physical science, by an exact classification of the ob-served facts, and their coördination. The facts are more complex, the coördination is more delicate and difficult; but thair analysis and sympathies, if accu-rately performed, must yield results of equal validity. All depends, therefore, on the interpretation of the facts. fact

The inconsiderate way in which sentiment is suf-facts. The inconsiderate way in which sentiment is suf-fered to mingle with and percert rational research, in matters'beyond its jurisdiction (as when geological or biological inquiries have been arrested or perverted by alarmed theology or national prejudice), has given rise to an impatient distrust of its admission any-where in philosophy. Not only is the physicist justi-fably indignant at the idea of his procedures being controlled by appeals to feelings which are not direct-ly implicated in his researches—not only does he reject all personal considerations as irrelevant to the impersonal relations ha is considering,—but by the vio-lence of reaction against this foolish interference he is swung into the opposite foolishness of altogether denying a place to sentiment in philosophy. He in-sists that sentiment be excluded from the laboratory; and this is wise. But he also often insists that it be excluded from the teacher's chair; and this is unwise. Limiting his conception of science to its procedures, and not taking into account its social inspiration and its social purpose, he divorces it from religion, and from all connection with sentiment; although such a divorce at once abdicates the highest position, con-verting science into the sheer occupation of an un-social curiosity, and leaving religion to teachers who pretend to explain the universe without the aid of positive knowledge.

MARGARET FULLER.

A LITTLE BOY IN Georgetown ran into the house the other day, crying at the top of his voice because another little boy wouldn't let him put mud on his head with a shingle. Some children are just like their parents; no accommodation about them.—N. Y.

Hoetry.

[FOR THE INDEX.] SIXTY-SEVEN JUNE 14, 1874.

Three score and seven! What unguessed thoughts of love From lips thou see'st not sike, what blessings move To grown thy tresses gray!

While on far memories of early years Thy musing spirit dwells, And, in the inward closet hid, with tears Love's sacred resary tells:

While, lone with thy dear dead, thou dost no more Commune with things of senso, Reverent and still, I stand outside the door, To greet thee issuing thence,

And be a messenger of living love, That circles thes about, And whispers of a Tenderness above That finds each weeper out.

The human loves that blossom into life In these poor souls of ours,-Father and mother, husband, child, and wife,

These are God's garden flowers;

And one, full-blown and vigorous and sweet, Dew-laden to the brim,--The Gardener bids me lay it at thy feet, A message mute from Him !

ASTERISE.

377

CASH RECEIPTS.

FOR THE WHEE ENDING AUGUST 1. John W. Sullings, $23; Chas. Putnam, $3; Harmony Club, 25 cents; E. Harmar, 25 cents; W. S. Camp, $3; Ella Groot, 20 cents; A. O. Ferkins, 14 cents; J. E. Wight, 10 cents; R. G. Macgill, $10.75; Wm. J. Carleton, 35: 36; A. M. Howland, $400; John C. Haynes, $210; W. Q. Mansfield, $3; Geo. H. Young, 50 cents; J. Pabe B. Dean, $2; Jaw. Wof-findin, $1; Alfred Warren, 70 cents; Jaw. Mackenzie, $1.80; A. F. Herver, $2; J. Fisher, $3; Geo. C. Davis, $3; A. W. Kelaey, $3; S. E. Sewall, $350; Emma Phipson, $2.58; I. M. Thurston, 25 cents; T. F. Neville, 25 cents; Geo. Scole, 50 cents; A. E. Loring, $40 cents; Geo. H. Foster, 56 cents; Cash, $1.10.

All receipts of cash will be acknowledged as above, and no other receipts net nnless specially requested. Persons who do not see their remittances acknowledged within three weeks after sending, will please notify us.

Laree weeks after sending, will please nonly us.
N. B.—Please remit by post-office money-order, by registered letter, or by draft on Boston or Now York. Checks subscription will be proportionally shortened in the credit.
N. B.—Orders for Tracts or single numbers of The Igs which are not a cheard will, If of small amount, be otherwise filled to the same amount without further notice.

erwise filled to the same amount without further notice.
N. B., — Portage on The LINEX is five cents per quarter, dating from receipt of the first number, payable in advance at the place of delivery.
N. B., — When writing about a former remittance, always give the date of such remittance as exactly as possible.

N. B .-- Please examine the ADDRESS and DATE on your INDEX mail-tag, and report at once any error in either.

BECEIVED.

Books,

EBOOKA, THE GODS, AND OTHER LEGTURES. BY Robert G. Ingersoll. Provis, Illinois: 1874. In Maxe. A Story of the Wahlenses, Seven Hundred Years Ago. By E. Elsie, Nosion: Boberts Bros, 1874. THE CLERGY A SOURCE OF DANGER TO THE AMERICAN Em-public. By W.F. Jamleson. Becond Reliton. Chicago: 1873. Scortiste CHAF-BOOES. By John Framer. Part I. No-

1873. COTING CHAP-BOOKS. By John Fraser. Part II. New York: H. L. Hinton. 1873. [$1.25: for sale by Estes & Lauriat, Boston.]

Pamphlets and Periodicals.

<text><section-header><section-header>

THE INDEX ASSOCIATION.

NO. 1 TREMONT PLACE, BOSTON. Toledo Office: No. 55 MONROE STREET. Julius T. Frey, Agent and Clerk.

THE INDEX accepts every result of science and sound learning, without seeking to harmonize it with the Bible. It recognizes no authority but that of reason and right. It believes in Truth, Freedom, Progress, Equal Rights, and Brotherly Love.

N. B.-No writer in THE INDEX, editorial or otherwise, is responsible for anything published in its columns except for his or her own individual statements. Editorial contri-butions will in every case be distinguished by the name or initials of the writer.

BOSTON, AUGUST 6, 1874.

SUNDAY LECTURES .- The Editors of THE INDEX will isionally on Sundays, if desired, within a convenient distance of Boston.

FOR THE LAST FOUR WEEES, we have had nothing whatever to do with editing THE INDEX, and now return to the harness with a greatly improved physical condition; also with a suspicion that our readers would vote us a permanent vacation, if they could thereby secure the continued services of the same able substitutes.

THE PRESIDENT AND SECRETARY of the "Sauk County Freie Gemeinde," in a communication dated Sauk County, Wisconsin, July 23, state that they "are instructed to report to you [THE INDEX] that association as a Liberal League." We are vary glad to add it to our standing list of Liberal Leagues. We take this opportunity of requesting notice of all changes of officers that may occur in any of these Leagues, as well as information regarding any active work they may undertake. A Liberal League is worthless unless it works.

THE Free-Thinker, a "leaflet published semi-occasionally" (as it states in its own words) formerly at Eau Clair and now at St. Paul, announced the formation of two new Liberal Leagues in its issue of June 1. One was at Augusta (Wisconsin?), with Mr. Davis Jackson for President and Mr. George P. Vaux for Secretary. The other was at Vanville, but no names are given. When authorized to do so by the receipt of fuller information, we shall be glad to add these new Leagues to our standing list. The Free Thinker is a spicy and able little sheet.

"UNBELIEF IN Boston," says the Independent, "has not for years been so weak as to-day; the Parker Fraternity and the Twenty-eighth Congregational Society are feeble enough; the Horticultural Hall meetings have been abandoned; and if THE INDEX Influences anybody at all, it is only the unlettered scep-tics of the West." The Horticultural Hall meetings are only held in the winter and spring for a special course of lectures, and will be resumed next season as usual. The other statements of the Independent are equally ignorant and untrue.

MRS. J. R. WALKER, of New Orleans, who has several times contributed excellent articles to THE INDEX, informs us that she has now ready for publication a volume in memory of Captain Joseph Fry, commander of the ill-starred Virginius. The book is to be published and sold exclusively for the benefit of his destitute widow and seven children. It includes a biography of Captain Fry compiled from family papers, letters, journals, etc. ; a review of Cuban history; and a sketch of Perry's expedition to Japan drawn from Captain Fry's private journal of the cruise. Mrs. Sarah A. Dorsey, an author of some repute, communicates to the New Orleans Bulletin a very favorable notice of Mrs. Walker's book, which she describes as "a work of purely disinterested friendship on the part of Mrs. Walker, which she hopes may realize something for Mrs. Fry and her children." We venture to commend it in advance to our readers, both on account of the laudable object for which it is published and also of the high anticipations we have formed of its intrinsic character. Mrs. Walker may be addressed at Napoleon Avenue, New Orleans, La.

A THOUGHTFUL and cultivated lady, renewing recently her subscription to THE INDEX, wrote as follows: "In conversing with Orthodox people, I am continually met by the assertion that the divine origin of Christianity is proved by the superior enlightenment of the countries where it prevails. To me the reading of history proves that religion is far more the product of surrounding civilization than the latter is the product of the former, though each depends measurably upon the other. I wish a few succinct articles making this somewhat clear could be written for the paper; they would enlighten some. I am often told that the religions books of the Hindu and Mohammedan systems are many of them such that 'no decent man will translate them.' I should like to know if there is really very much more in them of this questionable tendency to impurity than there is in the Hebrew Scriptures. With a warm heart for THE INDEX and its work, I am traly yours." To the last inquiry only a profound oriental scholar could give a trustworthy answer. To the earlier suggestion we would reply that the first three essays (editorial) of the second volume of THE INDEX were specially devoted to the relation between Christianity and civilization, and that till the first of September we will send this volume as a premium to any one who will forward the name of a new subscriber and three dollars at the same time.

THE NEW YORK Liberal Christian of August 1, in an editorial article on the late communication of Dr. Bartol to THE INDEX, regards it as "common sense" that he advises "those who desire to take a non-Christian or extra-Christian or anti-Christian position to leave the Unitarian denomination." The Boston Christian Register of the same date, commenting on the same communication, thinks Dr. Bartol inconsistent because he many years ago blamed Theodore Parker, who claimed to be a Christian, for not withdrawing voluntarily from the Unitarian denomination, while he praises Mr. Potter, who does not even call himself a Christian, for the very same thing; though we are not aware that Dr. Bartol has surrendered the right to change his opinions in the light of fresh experience, or that he has praised Mr. Potter in this matter for any other reason than that he so manifestly obeys his own conscience. But this is plain, that both of the Unitarian journals consider Dr. Bartol's advice to the radicals to "quit" as wise and manly; and in this we agree with them, having acted on the same plan more than six years ago. If the radicals, however, decline still to "quit," we shall have no reproaches for them; it is as much as we can do to direct our own course, without aspiring to direct that of others.

Some TIME AGO we referred to the court-martialling of General Howard for alleged misconduct of a grave nature. We take our earliest opportunity, though somewhat late, to republish the following paragraph from the Nation of July 9, which shows that he was too severely condemned at first on the discovery of mismanagement and knavery in matters under his responsible charge :-

discovery of mismanagement and knavery in matters under his responsible charge :--The findings of the court-martial in General How-ard's case have been published. They declare that the General did not knowingly violate any law of Congress, or rule of the army or of the navy, and did devote all his time and energy to the work entrusted to him, and has made a satisfactory accounting to the Treasury, and that in those cases in which improper investments had been made of the funds of the Bu-reau, it was done under the advice and opinion of the Second Comptroller, and General Howard was there-fore not to be biamed for it. The court was not unanimous on all the points, but was on the main conclusion. General Holt, the Judge-Advocate, has, however, reviewed the finding in a way which Gen-eral Howard will hardly enjoy. Heholds that, though it could not be said that he violated laws or rules with bed intent, yet he did violate them in point of fact, and, if in ignorance, it was ignorance for which there is no excuss; that, when General Howard took charge of the funds of the Bureau, instead of adopting proper precautions for their safe management, he laid aside some safeguards already in use; that he adopt-ed systems of account which did not explain them-selves; that he converted public money into bonds, in violation of positive law, on the advice of a sub-ordinate officer of the Treasury, and without refer-ring his action, as in duty bound, to the Secretary, his superior officer; that he also failed to inform this account for the year's interest; and that he presented one account in which a charge of $16,000 was made against the Treasury which had already been paid out of other public money. These and various other omissions, errors, and disorders, General Holt admits, were doubles the results of ignorance or careless-ness; but he would not have it go forth that such ignorance or carelessness in an officer of General Howard's standing is excusable. The President, who seems to have a never-failing tenderness fo seems to have a never-falling tenderness for a man on whom an investigation of any kind has fallen heavily, at once appointed General Howard to the command of the Department of Columbia.

THE GREAT PREACHER'S ORDEAL

When (according to the ancient legend) King David had been guilty of adultery with Bathsheba and of murderous treachery towards her husband, he repented bitterly on being charged with his crimes by the prophet Nathan; and he poured out his sorrow and contrition in strains that have thrilled the world's heart with pity from that day to this. "I acknowledge my transgressions," he cried, "and my sin is ever before me. . . . Behold, thou desirest truth in the inward parts. . . . Create in me a clean heart, O God, and renew a right spirit within me. . . . The sacrifices of God are a broken spirit; a broken and a contrite heart, O God, thou wilt not despise."

Notwithstanding the atrocity of his deeds, David has conquered forgiveness from mankind by the depth and intensity of his repentance, and the mighty vehemence with which his better nature struggled out of the mire that was pollnting it. That his mbsequent life was a saintly one, at least by modern standards, no one claims; but it is true, nevertheless, that he has kept a marvellous hold upon the human heart by the passionate contrition with which he confessed and repudiated his own evil acts. Mankind have justly compassionated and pardoned him, because he turned away from his own past with loathing and hatred and gigantic wrestlings against the enemy in his own soul; and when some moral pigmy, incapable doubtless of David's great crimes, but equally incapable of his magnificant penitence, sneers at this "man after God's own heart," and throws it at the Christian Church as a reproach that his spiendid poems are still its most precious and prized outbreathings of the religious sentiment, disgust and contempt must contend for mastery in the mind of every magnanimous anti-Christian. "Non tall au-tillo." The great battle of freedom with Christianity can never be won by spiritual obtuseness: the arrow that bears death to Gesler will fly from the bow of no squint-eved Tell.

Why we have thus alluded to David requires, unhappily, but little explanation. Henry Ward Beecher and Mrs. Elizabeth R. Tilton have been publicly charged with adultery by the husband of the latter; and they have both publicly denied the charge. Until the case has been tried by a proper and legal tribunal (not by a committee of air appointed by one of the parties accused from among his warmest personal friends), the truth or falsehood of this accusation cannot be judicially determined; yet it must be admitted that the heaviest and most distressing evidence against the accused is their own published and not disavowed letters, which contradict flatly, in spirit and tone, their formal denials. The fifty-first Psalm is not more pervaded by a consciousness of gailt than are these letters; it, too, contains no formal confession of any particular act. The piteous undertone sighing through them cannot be drowned by the horrid uproar of the "Scandal;" and he who reads them, not in idle curiosity or in pruriency, but with intense and painful anxiety to learn whether the greatest living preacher of America, the patriot, the reformer, the utterer of grand and searching truths, is still entitled to be respected as a pure and truthful man, will rise from the perusal with the sad conviction that Henry Ward Beecher does not state the truth in his "Card of July 22, when he says: "My published correspondence on this subject comprises but two elements,the expression of my grief and that of my desire to shield the honor of a pure and innocent woman."

If that is all,---if the language he uses in describing the "power of the great darkness in which [he] spends much of [his] time," and in portraying with profound pathos his own life as passed "on the ragged edge of anxiety, remorse, fear, despair," has in it no consciousness of sin,-if his letters testify to no overwhelming sense of having committed some great wrong against others which bows him down with contrition as well as sorrow,-then we are devoid of all delicacy of spiritual perception, and confound simple grief with bitter self-reproach. The cause of this consciousness of sin may be other than that alleged; this remains to be proved. But that a most pathetic consciousness which reminds one irresistibly of the penitential Psalms, and which is neither grief nor concern for another, runs through Mr. Beecher's letters, seems very clear; and it must be explained before confidence can be restored. Unless some real offence against morality lies back of the letters both of Mr. Beecher and of Mrs. Tilton, then both of them must be credited with an excess of morbid exaggeration and over-statement which is scarcely credible on the part of any person; and the necessity of assuming such an exceptional excess on the part of two persons more than doubles the difficulty of the assumption. Be this offence what it may, it is improbable in the highest degree that none exists; and the case must seem grave to any one whose spiritual experience has not been very shallow.

11

i.

12:

121

'by

In 119

K,

ŧ.

3:, 10

12

Liz

34

122

14

3;

29

花り

12

4 line

123

1.4

 $\partial Z$

12

n:

1.76

100

÷.

82

20

R.

10

11

42 à

2

3

Moreover, while Mr. Beecher, in his "Card," disclaims all passionate regard for Mrs. Tilton, she, in her letter of June 29, 1871, confesses a love that grew to a "passion," which love she "felt and received;" and when she declares that her father's "head would be bowed indeed to the grave," if her "life was to be made known" to him, how are we to reconcile her language with Mr. Beecher's?

With all possible desire to retain a belief in his innocence, we are confounded by such contradictions. Of one thing only are we sure: that, unless Mr. Beecher shall now make good his denial before a court of law, and satisfactorily explain what seems to be a third element in his already published words,namely, a manifest self-accusation in the court of his own conscience,-his influence for good is turned to infection, and his great fame to greater infamy. The day for candid confession is past; he must now make good his denial. He cannot appeal now, like David, to the world's generous forgiveness of a guilty passion bitterly repented of; he must clear his skirts beyond all cavil, or stand before all eyes as the vilest clerical hypocrite that ever preyed on an unsuspecting community. May he indeed pass safely through this ordeal by fire, and live to do a nobler work than ever before! But his innocence can never be satisfactorily established now except through the open court, where testimony can be slited and witnesses compelled to attend. "Dignified silence" has proved a most disastrous policy thus far; cunning evasion will prove a still worse one in the fature. If Henry Ward Beecher is indeed an innocent man, and has any friends who would wisely defend him, this farce of an "Investigating Committee" will be dropped at once. Closed doors, secret sessions, garbled and doctored reports, manifest special pleading, refusal of offered testimony and ostensible inability to obtain testimony which is known to be most vitally important-all these things have destroyed in advance, for all but the credulous and pre-convinced, the whole value of this whitewashing committee's verdict. Let Mr. Beecher submit to the common lot, and no longer affect to stand above the level of common men; let him put no trust now in his general reputation, but go at once where alone his purity can be thoroughly vindicated in all eyes-to the public courts of his native land. Time was when a single frank word would have killed this hateful scandal; to-day nothing will kill it but the verdict of an impartial jury of twelve men, rendered according to due forms of law.

THE CHURCH TAXATION QUESTION.

The Boston Liberal League, as the readers of THE INDEX know, determined early in 1878 to devote their efforts to the repeal of the laws in this State which exempt church property from taxation. In the autumn it circulated a free tract on the subject to the extent of twelve or fifteen thousand copies, obtained many thousands of signatures to a petition to the Legislature, and through its Executive Committee asisting at that time of Messrs. R. H. Ranney, H. B. Storer, and F. E. Abbot), with the efficient cooperation of the Hon. Moses Kimball, secured the appointment of a Joint Special Committee on the sub-ject from the two Houses. This Legislative Committecheld a series of seven public hearings, which were fully reported in THE INDEX; and, on the strength of their report, the Legislature passed a resolve authorizing the Governor and Council to appoint a commission of three persons, "to inquire into the expediency of revising and amending the laws of the State relating to taxation and the exemptions therefrom." Under this resolve the following gentlemen have recently been appointed Commissioners: Mr. Thomas Hills, Chairman of the Assessors of the city of Boston, Professor Julius H. Seelye, of Amherst College, and Mr. James M. Barker, of Pittsfield. These Commissioners sit during the recess of the Legislature, have authority to call witnesses, and are to report during the first week of the next session. A sum not exceeding $5,000 is provided to meet expenses in taking evidence; and proper compensation of the Commissioners is fixed by the Governor and Council. The last Legislature also directed that new and authentic returns should be made of the ratable value of all property in the State now exempted from taxation, on or before the first of October; and that these returns should be incorporated in his next annual report by the State Tax Commissioner. The reports of the Commissioner and of the special Commission above named will be awaited with great interest.

THOUGHTS BY THE SEA-SIDE.

DEAR MR. EDITOR :-- YORK, Me., July 21, 1874.

I have been very neglectful of THE INDEX of late, amid a pressure of other cares; and now, in the relaxed indolence of the sea-shore, will you accept a gossipping letter which will not tax your readers' brains during the dog-days? We radicals keep on the stretch a little too much, and it does not hurt us to lie down on the rocks, and let the tides of Nature flow in and around us at their own sweet will.

It is easy to feel a trust in our precious doctrine of the immanent God, as we look out over these soft, green hills, or on the broad expanse of the blue waters; and the rest and strength we thus gain will help us to keep our faith, when we renew our struggle with the squalor of cities, and the dark problems of our social life.

What a happy time the children have on the beach ! That infinity of sand is priceless wealth to them, out of which everything can be made. It is like the unknown life before them; every good is possible, and, though each hoped-for joy may be swept away as relentlessly as the tide destroys the forts and weils so carefully built or dug, yet, like them, each has helped to build us up in health and strength, and we have the real value and power of many a purpose and hope which seemed to come to maught.

Roaming over the hills and in the barren fields, we find the raspberries reddening and the blueberries ripening for our refreshment. Emerson says: "Think-est thou no wisdom to our berries went?" It may be a childish feeling; but I never pluck a berry by the way-side but I taste in it the motherly goodness of God, scattering these precious globules of healthful pleasure so broadcast, that there is not a country child in all New England who cannot partake of this dainty feast. "Not corn and meat alone for my hardworking children," says bountiful Nature, "but beauty and sweetness." God bless the wise philanthropists who are taking the poor children of the city out into grove and field, for at least one draught of the waters of life which Nature pours out so lavishly. It seems to me no one can honestly enjoy his vaca tion by mountain or sea who has not contributed his share to this thoughtful, loving charity.

Yet it is but "short vacation" that each of us needs to come back to work with fresh hope and energy. Too long a period of lounging and dissipation enervates the mind and relaxes the nerves. A new impulse, a fresh reception of knowledge, is often a better tonic than even mountain air, or sea-bathing. We believe that many a weary teacher is getting more from her summer at Penikese, or her studies in the botanical garden at Cambridge, than aimless rambling among the fairest scenes of Nature could ever give her. There is a snare in the love of beauty, unless it is combined either with adaptation to use or the expression of great truths; either human good or artistic meaning must keep enjoyment sound and bracing, or it becomes, like all pleasure, relaxing to the will. The love of exciting scenery may become a craving for mental stimulus, which grows more and more exacting, like the gourmand's demand for wine and spices. But if we climb the mountain to search out the hidden truths of Nature, or fathom the spiritual secret which it symbolizes, or even make it the highway to errands of humanity, we shall get the beauty and the sublimity in fuller measure, because we have made it, as God does, the resulting harmony, not the primary aim of our efforts. "The moonlight is not so fair," says Emerson, "when we go to seek The it, as when it shines on a necessary journey." worker, the lover, the naturalist, the artist, will get from Nature both the secret and the joy of communion with her; but the mere dilettante will find her fairest scenes pall upon him, and her richest fruits turn to ashes.

Vacation schools are proposed for the poor who cannot leave the city for a summer rest. We wish all the young people who can have the great privilege of a summer amid the beautiful scenes of Nature could learn how to make these golden months truly a vacation school which would fit them for nobler and higher life throughout the year. E. D. C.

LONDON LETTER.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE INDEX:

Sir,--I think your readers will greet with satisfaction what one may call the first fruits of the recent efforts made to resist the spirit of dogmatism and exclusiveness in the Unitarian body.

Three independent and typical cases have aroused the attention of all parties, and elicited some able and temperate discussion. I allude to the Belfast disputes, to the case of the Rev. Peter Dean, in this country, and to the omission of the Rev. W. J. Potter's name from the Year Book of the Unitarian ministers in America. These cases are so well known that it is needless to recapitulate the details. They have tended to separate more widely the conservative from the liberal party; but only, it is to be hoped, for a time.

Already there are signs of a coming reconciliation; and a flag of truce has already been held out by that most conservative of papers, the Inquirer.

I have the privilege of knowing personally the editor of that paper and his family; and a more lovable man it would be hard to find. In private intercourse his own predilections are always swept ont of sight by the flow of genial and charitable feeling, which I do not think he could possibly withhold from his bittorest antagonist. Were it not for this beautiful amiability and largeness of heart, his "Orthodoxy" would be provoking. For to one standing in my position he seems quite as Orthodox as many clergymen of. the Church of England.

I do not think he has wavered in his own religiousopinions for a moment, or that he cesses to regard Christ as superhuman, and the name of Christian asthe proudest title men can wear.

But this fact only adds weight and value to the eirentcon which he issues in the Inguirer of the 11th July. He inscribes over his article, "A Plea for Union among Liberal Thinkers," and I, for one, ownthat it is a very strong "plea," not to be rejected by the Unitarians but at their peril as a church. Herein the editor of the Inguirer, without abandoning his own right to think as he pleases, and to call himself by any name he may select, frankly concedes that every one else within the Unitarian body has an equalright to do the same. He repudiates all mutual dictation on these points as suicidal, as subversive of the great principles on which Unitarianism waß founded, and which alone justify its continuance.

I hope you will find room in your columns to print the article in extense; I will, therefore, trouble you only with one quotation: "The interests of truth, humanity, and progress are of more importance than the retention of any name that is given among men. When any name is erected into a barrier between men animated by a common purpose; when it is made the badge of a party; when exclusive resolutionsclaim its sanction, it becomes an avil, a hindrance, howaver sacred the associations historically connected with that name. And the sacred name of Christ is no exception to this general principle."

You will agree with me, sir, in regarding this utterance as charmingly significant of what may be fairly expected from the whole of that body, when this is spoken by the most conservative of its organs. It would not surprise us if it were to elicit some protests more or less feverish from the older school; butthey will be more than counterbalanced by the hearty assent of a more liberal majority.

It has come to me in more ways than one, that Unitarians were surprised and vexed that I did not at once join them on my leaving my benefice. I can well believe this,-not from any idea of my personal value, but from the publicity of my ecclesiastical Yet I would ask those who shared this feeling trial. of disappointment, how in the name of peace and liberty was it possible for me-just after my escape. from bondage-to plunge myself into new fetters, and expose myself to the taunt of compromising their sect! At every turn of the wheel, with every fresh announcement of my alienation from Christian traditions, I should have brought on my head a second, and not any milder, edition of theological abuse, and have been possibly requested to withdraw from the community whose liberal principles I had so greatly miscalculated.

Now, if the tone set by the Inquirer, in the article alluded to, be taken up and adopted practically by the whole body of Unitarians, there is no reason yet. apparent why any of us should be excluded, or should exclude ourselves, from corporate action and sympathy with them.

If union is strength—and this cannot be denied, while uniformity is decay and death, and that union be based on "the acknowledged supremacy of individual reason and individual conscience," surely all who aim at the discovery of truth and real human progress would become far more powerful in an acknowledged combination than they would be if they remained isolated or detached.

Here, then, is a chance for those who call themselves Unitarians to live or to perish. On the old terms of a pseudo-Orthodoxy, of a tacit recognition. of the authority of the New Testament or of Christ, Unitarianism is doomed to perish. In so far as it is "Christian," in the ordinary sense of that term, it is moribuad. In so far as it contains within its borders the living thoughts of living men, determined to ex-change withered leaves for mellow fruit, it is ally the living thoughts of living men, determined to ex-change withered leaves for mellow fruit, it is alive and ready for a new spring. Some may part with their old, revered name in deep regretfulness; but time will teach them to feel the greater nobility of the name which Nature has bestowed, and to live worthily of which is man's highest bonor. As Lessing teaches us in Nathan the Wise: "Come, we must be friendel Despise my people as thou wilt—we have not either of us chosen our people! What is a people? Are Christians and are Jews more Christians, Jews, than men? Oh that I may have found in thee one more who is contented are Jews more Christians, Jews, than men? On that I may have found in thee one more who is contented with the name of man!" Most truly yours, CHARLES VOYSEY. CAMDEN HOUSE, Dulwich, July 18, 1874.

Communications.

"WOODHULLISM:" WHAT IT IS AND WHAT IT IS NOT.

CHARLTON DEPOT, Mass., June 29, 1874.

To THE EDITOR OF THE INDEX:-Rev. Mr. Voyaey's article in condemnation of the social theories of Mrs. Woodhull has provoked a good deal of discussion among liberal religionists, and I have read with close attention the critical letter of

[The essence of the "free love" theory is its demand for the abolition of "legal marriage." Mar riage is a religious sacrament in the Catholic Church; but "legal marriage" is simply a civil contract. As things are to-day, nobody is obliged to enter into this contract with anybody; Professor Newman truly ar-gues that women are entirely free to avoid it, and that, if they do avoid it, they are as free as Mrs. Woodhull would have them. But society (and we think with great reason) holds that sexual unions outside of the marriage contract are injurious to its own best interests; and therefore it defends the marriage institution as the corner-stone of social welfare. That the mutual rights and duties of husbands and wives need to be better understood and more faithfully respected, is true enough; but so long as the advocates of "free love" are perfectly free to remain unmarried, the abolition of marriage would be an interference with the liberty of those who prefer to marry. A contract is a contract, and to preach that it is of no obligation is ridiculous. Society has a perfect right to protect jealously the marriage contract, without which the permanence of the home would be greatly endangered, if not destroyed; and every reasonable demand of the "free love" believers would be fully met by the universal recognition of marriage itself as the freely formed union of equals, with all the mutual obligations of a contract between equals. It is a mistake to suppose that ownership of the wife by the husband is the "chief corner-stone" of legal marriage: the fact of a mutual contract is its cornerstone, and the notion of a contract without mutual obligations is the great hallucination of some social philosophers. Elevate and purify marriage as much as you please; this will be the best possible result of the "free love" agitation .- ED.]

FREE LOVE: WHAT WE MEAN BY IT.

MR. ABBOT:--Perhaps it is not strange that our English friends do not exactly understand our position on the subject

Perhaps it is not strange that our English friends do not exactly understand our position on the subject of love and marriage. The only essential meaning of free love is, with us, the sexual emancipation of woman. It is to give woman the absolute and entire control of her sexual relations, and to protect her in that control as well in so out of marriage. We insist that, if there be such a thing as natural rights for men or women, the right of each woman to choose the father of her children is clear, and should never be violated. We believe that in a perfect state of society each woman will retain and take that right during her adult life. Woman alone should decide whether and when also will bear children. While the order of society re-mains nearly as it now is, we insist that the rake shall bear the same disgrace as the prostitute. Free love gives the human female more freedom, and the male. I think, on the whole, less. We agree further; that, if our race were designed, in their highest and best estate, for exclusively dual or monogamic conjugal relations, such freedom such is though the insane to attempt always to hold the ince by law to it. The nature of woman in freedom must finally settle this point. WHERE WE DIFFER.

WHERE WE DIFFER.

WHERE WE DIFFER. Mrs. Woodhull and a large class of free lovers be-lleve that monogamy will be the final and perfect or-der. The writer, with many others, believes that more or less of a variety is natural to man and woman in their highest and most perfect growth and development. Hence these believe that women's freedom will so ultimate., We have never seen a free lover who believed in promiscuity, socially or sexually.

Many superior minds insist that coition is never proper except for the pro-creation of children. But all agree that woman in freedom shall settle all such ouestions.

all agree that woman in freedom shall settle all such questions. All free lovers agree that the order of love relations is less important than the pure and elevating spirit that should control them. On a low or lustful plane, the amative instinct and selfab sentiments control too much the higher man—in any and every order of action. On a high or pure love plane, the amative will be under the control of the top brain— benevolence and justice—as these are enlightened by the intellect. AUSTIN KENT. STOCKHOLM, N.Y., June 22, 1874.

[The best way to refute a repulsive theory is sometimes to let its advocates state it in all its repulsiveness. On this principle we publish the above article. which is decorous enough in language and more than disgusting enough in idea. It means that woman, when she chooses her husband, has not necessarily chosen the "father of her children," but should be free to disregard all marriage obligations in favor of any one whom she comes to prefer; and that, when she attains "her highest and most perfect growth and development," she will prefer a "variety" (which is to all intents and purposes "promisculty," Mr. Kent to the contrary notwithstanding). This is the coveted "sexual emancipation of woman," which means her emancipation from the self-imposed restraints of a faithful, undying love for a freely chosen husband. In fact, the word husband has no significance on this theory but that of a temporary partner incapable of retaining permanently the woman's affection. Verily, Mr. Kent is ahead of Mrs. Woodhull herself; for the latter advocates the faithful and permanent union of one with one on the basis of mutual love, if not of mutual obligation recognized by law. The strong language of Mr. Voysey is quite inadequate to characterize fitly Mr. Kent's philosophy; let it stand in uncharacterized hideousness

It need not be added that every true husband reverences his wife, and accords her unquestioned control of her own person. He will not go to the champions of "free love" to learn respect for woman. That alone is a real marriage in which the legal obligations of the marriage contract, though acknowledged, are quite forgotten in the proud and happy fidelity of a union that never grows old .- ED.]

" PROHIBITION."

EDITOR OF THE INDEX:

EDITOR OF THE INDEX: Dear Sir,—Claiming to be a philanthropist, I am deeply interested in whatever effects for weal or wee the human family. And now that slavery no longer rears its hydra head in our midst, I regard the liquor traffic as "the sum of all villanies" (excuse the lib-erty of application, but facts and figures justify it). Consequently, I have anxiously watched to see the direction taken by the current of free-thought on the emblact of temperance, or prohibition. I have read erty of application, but facts and figures justify it). Consequently, I have anxiously watched to see the direction taken by the current of free-thought on the subject of temperance, or prohibition. I have read with solicitude the articles of Meesrs. Einstein, Frothingham, and Underwood, as well as your own remarks entitled "The Prohibitory Principle," and, while I admire and respect you each and all, my fealty to the cause of temperance compels me to say that the tendency of your articles is to "damn with faint praise," rather than encourage and assist the few friends of the cause who are struggling, against fearful odds, to stem the tide of intemperance that annually sweeps thousands of this generation into untimely graves, and entails untold misery on inno-cent thousands of the next. You undoubtedly, equally with myself, deplore the evils named; we only differ as to the remedy. Tou all favor temperance, but disapprove of prohibition. Let me inquire, Can the former be secured without the latter? If it can be, I am silent. (On this point permit me to auggest a reperusal of Prof. Newman's article on "Abstinence vs. Moderation," in TB I Ix-mex of June 25, 1874.) But if it cannot, what then? I take the liberty to make a few quotations. "En-forced temperance, is a very untrustworthy and all-pery virtue" (Abbol). "One thing is demonstrated; it is thia: the attempt to suppress Nature under any of is forms, so it be Nature that is suppressed, is futile" (Frothingham). "These sumptuary laws are a flat contradiction of the primary principles of free-dom in citizenship" (Banner of Lafot, as quoded by Friend Underwood). Is this all true? If it is, then is our penal code a relic of Puritaniem, or worse, the age of the Inquisiton, and ought to give place to the new gospel of moral sussion. The "prohibitory" wexis against piracy, robbery, seduction, and muder, "involve a principle that is fatal to personal libery and dangerous to free institutions," and ought to be forthwith consigned to the limbo of the past. Am I t gain is a crime, and one sgainst which society has a right to discriminate. I do not desire to be misunderstood. I am a radi-cal of the ultra type. I believe in freeing ourselves as fast as possible from the superstitions and tyran-nies of the past. But I do not think it wise to ignore the facts of the present. One of these facts is the partial depravity of human nature. I would restrain the criminal, until he can be taught that liberty is not license, and that to secure his own rights he must reapect the richts of others.

not incense, and that to secure in own inguts it allow respect the rights of others. Moral suasion is a powerful lever in the regenera-tion of mankind, but it is not of universal applica-tion. The millennium is not yet inaugurated, and, until it is, penal laws in some form will have an office until it is, penal laws in some form will have an office to perform. I yield to none in devotion to personal liberty. I believe in "the largest liberty of the individual com-patible with the good of society;" but I believe that in some things the rights of society are superior to those of the individual. I would not be deemed captions, if I regard it as a curious fact that all of the above-named gentlemen, who are ordinarily so jeal-ous of personal rights, are, I believe, ardent advo-cates of the free-school system, which compels a man without children to educate other people's children. Some of them (and I honor them for it) are even now advocating "compulsory education." But how they manage to ride both horses at once is not so appar-ent. Will some of you gentlemen "rise and ex-plain"? Yours for prohibition, HARRY HOOVER. CURWENSVILLE, Clearfield Co., Pa., July 16, 1874.

[Two points in the above candid letter we wish to note briefly. 1. "Drinking liquor may be a vice, but selling it for gain is a crime." If this is true,-if liquor-selling for gain is a crime per se,-then the apothecary who sells it for medicine is as much a criminal as the saloon-keeper who sells it for a beverage; and the State that licenses the sale of it for any purpose licenses a crime against society. But if the apothecary is not a criminal, then "selling liquor for gain" is not a crime; and the only crime in the case is the subsequent abuse of the liquor sold. Of course, if the liquor-seller knows or believes that the liquor will be abused, he becomes an accomplice in the crime; but this does not justify society in punishing him simply for selling. There is no getting over or round or under this fact.

2. The supposed contradiction between advocating "compulsory education" and opposing "prohibition" does not exist. The same principle that society has no right to coerce the individual except for its own protection covers both. The childless man is taxed for schools without injustice, because he would be taxed still more to suppress crimes, if the schools were abandoned : he must contribute his share of the necessary expense of maintaining public order, by which he profits as much as his neighbor who has children; and the ground of taxation is the right of soclety to do what its own self-protection demands. That is why we advocate compulsory education. And we oppose prohibition because society has no right to do more than its own self-protection demands; which it does do when it punishes as a crime what is not a crime. One and the same principle requires compulsory education, and forbids prohibi-tion: namely, the right of society to coerce the individual for its own protection, but for nothing else.-ED.]

Chanceri by 100

いいち ちんい

A & 1.1

設施 z,

i.

28228

11 ŝ

ţ,

ł, L:

Ц.

TEETOTALISM THE ONLY SAFETY.

ITHACA, N. Y., May 30, 1874.

If ever I was heart-sick and saddened, it is by the position you take in THE INDEX, May 28, in regard to temperance.

<text><text><text><text><text>

[We hope that the readers of THE INDEX will not mistake our opposition to the policy of prohibition for advocacy of free indulgence of the appetite for liquor. What society has a right to do is one thing; what the individual had better do or not do is quite another.

1. Society has a right to suppress crime on the simple ground of self-protection; but the use of alcohol which does not lead to crime does not come under its jurisdiction. If such use of alcohol creates other evils than crime, they should be remedied by other means than punitive legislation.

2. The danger of excess in the use of alcohol is so great that testotalism is the wisest policy on the part of all who are not really masters of themselves. We applaud those who, conscious of an infirm will, adopt this policy. But while no one has any right to criti-cise the individual who thus protects himself against possible excess, no one has any right to compel all to teetotaliam because some freely choose it.

3. What we deprecate is the attempt to substitute State laws for private virtue. This attempt must fail. Outside of actual crime, the moral evils of intemperance ought to be opposed by moral means alone. Teach children the immense danger and disaster of intemperance, and train them to habits of self-control by enlightened reason; and then they will be safe everywhere without prohibitory laws. That parent condemns himself who demands such laws for his children's safety .- ED.]

THE ARGUMENTUM AD HOMINEM.

THE ABGUMENTUM AD HOMINEM. EDITOR OF THE INDEX:-The Rev. Dr. Miner, a leading Universalist preach-recently bad a debale at Hyde Park with Dr. Dio levis on the subject of prohibition, in the course of which Dr. Miner deliberately and repeatedly took the ground that, "if any religious views are entertained in society which, in the judgment of the Legislature, tend to produce as much harm as rum does, it would be the bounden duty of such Legislature to prohibit such views." The account given of it in the Chris-tian Statesman, where I read it, says that on the an-nouncement of this proposition "intense excitament pervaded the audience." Mr. Editor, no wonder an intelligent audience would be deeply moved by such an utterance; for in it Dr. Miner laid down a principle of action very far-reaching, and very terrible in its effects upon human interests. A principle is a very ticklish thing, either in mechanics, in religion, inmorals, or in government; for it is either good and sale, or bad and dangerous. Dr. Miner has adopted the principle of the Vice-Presidents optimisme they tend to produce as much harm as rum does. Dr. Miner is one of the Vice-Presidents of the "National Association for the United States." On this account his opinions as to the pow-ers and functions of the Constitution of the United States." On this account his opinions as to the pow-ers and functions of the civil government in regard to orthy of notice. I propose to trace briefly Dr. Miner as well after death as the staints, you convert higher, and lead them to believe that sinners or higher, and lead them to believe that sinners or higher, and lead them to believe that sinners or higher, and lead them to believe that sinners or higher, and lead them to believe that sinners or higher, and lead them to believe that sinners or higher, and lead them to believe that sinners or higher, and lead them to believe that sinners or higher, and lead them to believe that sinners or higher, and lead them to believe

A new suppressing the Sunnay interances of Differences of Miner, and his Universalist brethren throughout the State, and his Universalist brethren throughout the State, and his universalist brethren throughout the State, and the preachers to jail; that would be giving the Doctor a taste of his own medicine which might, or might not, work well. On the contrary, it is alleged by the belerodox churches that the "tendency" of Orthodox doctrines is to produce the worst results on society. To teach children in Sunday-school, as the Rev. Mr. Clarke, in the Golden. Age of the 11th July, says is done in the Third Presbyterian Church of Albany, that they are children of the devil—children of wrath—incapable of, and indisposed to, any good thought, word, or iquity—doomed to s fate from which they cannot be rescued by any act of their own, is to train them up to lives of self-disrespect, meanness, and crime.

What can be more crushing, they say, to the energies and hopes of young persons of either sex than to tell them they are totally depraved—that the rottenness and siench, external and internal, and the utter wesk-

The nopes of young persons of either sex than to tell show how are totally depræved—that the rottenness ness of a small-pox patient fitly represents their moral loathsomeness and inability in the sight of God? What is a criminal breaker of all laws but a man who takes the Orthodox creed at its word, and illustrates in life the damning and damnable doctrine of total pravity? What motive has a man to fight against his destiny and the purpose of God in creating him a cose of dishonor and destruction? Are not the pris-ous of the land full of the victims of such training? Now, if the Legislature of a State where radical and heterodox convictions prevail, should believe that Calvinistic "views" "tred" to gross immorality, and should shut up all the Presbyterian Churches which is imits, and put their ministers under bonds to hold their peace. Dr. Miner and his little handful do hold their peace, Dr. Miner and his little handful do hold their peace. Dr. Miner and his little handful do hold their peace. Dr. Miner, and of the sects, and would adopt this principle, the victims of it, so far card it as the institution of the devil. Bost might go the grand round of the sects, and how that upon Dr. Miner's principle each one of them holds "views" which, in the everchanging dagerons to the morals of society, and sharing position by virtue of his being an officer of the Na-tional Association, and to qualify himself for efficient wind the United States as a test, we ought to that him for his candor. He is at home among the revo-tion is the and to qualify himself for efficient in for his candor. He is at home among the revo-tion is the candor. He is at home among the revo-tion of the United States as a test, we ought to that him for his candor. He is at home among the revo-tion of his candor. He is at home among the revo-tion is the and will need watching. Minister, and will need watching.

ATHEISM AND INSPIRATION.

"It is impossible," says C. A. Bartol in a late IN-DEX, "that the denial or disallowance of fresh inspi-ration, which is the principle of atheism, should be adopted with slavish content by any who hope for their new " DEX. their race.

I just wish to say that atheiam as now held to, al-though it recognizes no inspiration, old or fresh, in the theological sense, does most emphatically recog-nize the powers, forces, and influences which inexact writera frequently refer to as inspiration. That civil-lzation, society, ethics, language, and even man him-nings all atheiats now believe. That there have been causes equal to these results they do not donbt. That evolution under natural law will go on for ages in the future as it has done in the past, giving higher and better intellectual and moral conditions, they believe equally with the liberal religionists. Why this fling, then, at atheism? I do not see that athelam involves the "denial" or "disallowance" of anything the recognition of which is essential to confidence and hope in humanity. For one, I look forward hopefully to the future of my race; but I should not have this consolation if I thought the vacue at "fresh inspiration" or special impulse from a supernatural Being, every once in a while. B. F. UNNETWOOD. I just wish to say that atheism as now held to, al-other.

ANOTHER GERM.

other." With many assurances of esteem, I have the honor to subscribe myself most respectfully yours, A. C. Folsow.

Demoid in Google

/ PROP. FRANCIS

ATTGUST 6. 1874. 1111

382	THE INDEX-4	LUGUST 6,
Advertisements.	GOOD PHOTOGRAPHS	1 8 _ 7
THE PATRONAGE	LEADING INDEX WEITERS. Including	THE INDE
of the liberal advertising public is respect- fully solicited for THE INDEX. The attempt will be honestly made to keep the advertis- ing pages of THE INDEX in entire harmony with its general character and principles, and thus to fornish to the public an advertising	O. B. FROTHINGHAM, T. W. HIGGINSON,	A Weekly Jo
thus to form is to the public an advertising medium which shall be not only profitable to its patrone, but also worthy of their most generous support. To this end, all improper or "blind" advertisements, all quack adver- tisements, and all advertisements believed to be fraudulent or unjust to any one, will be	W. H. SPENCER, F. W. NEWMAN, CHAS. VOYSEY, A. W. STEVENS,	FREE RELI
excluded from these columns. No cuts will be admitted. THE INDEX must not be held responsible for any statement made by advertisers, who will in all cases accept the responsibility for their own statements.	F. E. ABBOT, Are now for sale at the office of THE INDEX, and will be mailed postpaid to any address on receipt of price. Single Photographs, 25 cents each; complete Set of Eight Photo-	INDEX ASSOCI
ADVERTISING RATES.	graphs, $1.50. Address, THE INDEX,	EDITOR: FRANCIS ELLINGWOO
For 1 to 12 Insertions, 10c per line. (13 14 25 15 12 15 12 15 15 15 15 15 15 15 15 15 15 15 15 15	No. 1 Tremont Place, Hoston, Mass.	ASSOCIATE EDI
On and contain a verification of a per cent, will be made; on full-column advertisements, a discount of 25 per cent. On all advertisements for which cash is guid in advance, a further discount of 25 per cent. on the total, as above calculated, will be made. FRANCIS E. ABBOT, Editor.	I. No. 1.—Truths for the Times, by F. E. Abbot, contains the "Fifty Affirmations" and "Modern Principles." MR. ORABLES DARWIN, author of "The Origin of Spe- cies," says, in a letter to the editor not orig-	ABRAM WALTER ST EDITORIAL CONTRIJ O. B. FROTHINGHAM, New T. W. HIGGINSON, Newport, W. J. POTTER, New Bedford,
CIRCULATE ! Circulate ! ! Circu- late THOSE PETITIONS. Don't feel asta- feed when your polition is a yard long, unless you have asked every oue to sign it. Get good, influ- estial names.	mally intended for publication, but subse- quently authorized to be used: "Thave now read "Taurns you run Thurs," and I admire them from my inmost heart; and I agree to almost every word." New Edition. Price	R. P. HALLOWELL, Boston, MES. E. D. CHENEY, Jamaics F. W. NEWMAN, England. CHARLES VOYSEY, England.
GET EVEBYBODY. Don't neglect to show the petition to any one, because he is a stockholder in some church, or	10 cents; 12 copies $1.00. No. 2Fear of the Living God, by O.	THE INDEX aims-
Don't neglect to show the petition to any one, because he is a stockholder in some church, or other exempted property, as many such persons admit the justice of the demand; and these who will not should be made to take the responsibility of refusing to sign it. Don't delay! We want the petitions returned arriy. Per order of EXEC. COME. of the BOSTON LINERAL LEADUR.	B. Frothingham, exposes the debasing char- acter of the popular notions of God, and presents conceptions of him that are wor- thy of the nineteenth century. New Edi- tion. Price 5 cents; 12 copies 50 cents.	To increase general intelligen to religion: To foster a nobler spirit and q purpose, both in society an
CULTURED FREE THOUGHT.	No. 3Lecture on the Bible, by the Rev. Charles Voysey, of England, is an over-	vidual: To substitute knowledge for i
The Index Association,	whelming demonstration of the imperfec- tions and errors of the Bible, both in the Old and the New Tostaments. New Edition. Frice 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00.	for wrong, truth for supers for slavery, character for or for bigotry, love for hate, hu for sectarianism, devotion to
OFFICE, NO. 1 TERMONT PL., BOSTON, aas been organized with a capital stock fixed at ONE HUNDRED THOUSAND dollars, for the purpose of publishing Tracts, Books, and THE INDEX,	No. 4.—Christian Propagandism, by F. E. Abbot, is an exposure of the weakness, costliness, and inefficiency of the System of Foreign Missions. Full of Figures, Facts, and Interesting Extracts. Frice 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00.	for absorption in selfah sch In brief, to hasten the day wh ion shall take the place of ecclesiasticism throughout when the welfare of hum now shall be the aim of a public activities.
A Weekly Paper devoted to Free and Rational Religion. It is the object of THE INDEX to give public	No. 54*God in the Constitution, by Eev. Arthur B. Bradford, opposes the pro- posed Theological Amendment to the Unit-	In addition to its general ob tical object to which THE IN ly devoted is the ORGANIZA
atterance to the boldest, most cultivated, and best matured thought of the age on all religious questions, and to apply it directly to the social and political amelioration of society.	ed States Constitution. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00. No. 5""The Sabbash," by Parker Pills- bury, denounces Sabbastarian superstition. New Edition. Price 10 cents; 12 copies	LIBERALS OF THE COUNTY pose of securing the more con sistent secularisation of the p neational institutions of the The Church must give place to
It is edited by FRANCIS R. ABBOT, and sted by ABRAM W. STEVENS, with the following list of Editorial Contributors: O. B. FROTHINGHAM, New York City. THOMAS W. HIGGINSON, Newport, B.I.	$1.00. No. 74 <sup>4</sup> Compulsory Education, <sup>37</sup> by F. E. Abbot, maintains the right of every child to be educated, and the duty of the State to ensure it an education. Price 5 cents; 12 copies 50 cents.	in the affections of the pec vestiges of eccleanatical co wiped out of the Constitution of the several States in order into harmony with the Nation To accomplish this object, the
WILLIAM J. POTTER, New Bodford, Mass. WILLIAM H. SPERCER, Ravorbill, Mass. BICHARD P. HALLOWELL, Boston, Mass. Mas. E. D. CHENEY, Jamaics Plain, Mass. Rav. CHARLES VOYSEY, London, England.	No. 5The Present Heaven, by O. B. Frothingham, treats of a subject that in- terests everybody. New Edition. Price 5 cents; 12 copies 50 cents.	make a united demand, and y broken front, and the chief y THE INDEX will be beneefor a great NATIONAL PARTY ( Let every one who believes in the if direct of the believes in
PROP. FRANCIS W. NEWMAN, London, Eng. Every liberal should subscribe for THE INDEX, as the best popular exponent of Religious Liber- alism. Every Christian minister, and every think-	No. 9.—The Christian Amendment, by F. E. Abbot, shows the diagerous charac- ter of the attempt to interpolate the Evan- gelical Christian Creed in the U. S. Consti- tution. Price 5 cents; 12 copies 50 cents.	give it direct aid by helping it circulation of THE INDEX. SPECIAL FRATU The publication of a valuat per or essay of a thoughtful
ing church-member, abould subscribe for it, as the clearest, most candid, and most scholarly sz- position of the differences between Free Thought and Evangelical Christianity, and as the best	No. 10 The Impeachment of Christi- anity, by F. E. Abbot. Fourth Ten Thou- sand. Sent for free distribution to any one who will distribute it, in packages of from five to one hundred copies.	each issue, will continue to most marked features of THE Regular editorial contribu- tinue to be furnished by the w inent writers who have alread means of becoming well informed of the argu- ments and the movements which the Church will have to meet in the future.	No 11The God of Science, by F. E. Ab- bot, attempts to show the real influence of modern science upon the idea of God.	to give to THE INDEX its pr sition. Mr. VOYSEY has kind furnish every fortnight a La containing matters of general
Almost every number contains a discourse or leading article, which alone is worth the price of one year's subscription. Frof. MAX MUELLER, of Oxford, England, in sister to the Editor antibility in the price of the section of the Science and the section of the s	Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00. No. 12Is Bomanism Heal Christian- ity? Two essays by Francis W. Nowman and F. E. Abbot. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00.	ical readers. Other interestin ence, communications, extrace ble books and periodicals, and articles, will also be publial improvements will be made a letter to the Editor published in THE INDEX for January 4, 1873, says: "That the want of a		time as circumstances shall re a letter to the Editor for January 4, 1873, says: "That the want of a No. 15.—On the Vision of Heaven, by Journal entirely devoted to Religion in the widest Prof. F. W. Newman, of England, analyzes journal entirely devoted to Religion in the widest sense of the word should be felt in America-that such a journal should have been started and so gowerfally supported by the best minds of your country,-is a good sign of the times. There is no such journal in England, France, or Germany; though the number of so-called religious or the ological periodicals is, as you know, very large." And later still: "I read the numbers of your IN-DEX with increasing interest."

Send $3.00 for one year, or 75 cents for three months on trial.

Address

No. I Tres ont Place, Boston,

THE INDEX

14

the Christian conception of Heaven. Price

5 cents; 12 copies 50 cents. No. 14. - A Study of Beligion : The Name and the Thing, by F. E. Abbot, attempts to show that the popular derivation of the word Religion is incorrect; that the popular conceptions of Religion itself are inadequate; and that a new conception and inscreptions; and that a new conception of it, based on the Law of Evolution, con-sistent with absolute Freedom of Thought, and independent even of belief in God, is the necessary condition of the perpetuity of Religion among men. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00. Address

THE INDEX, I TREMOUT PLACE, Boston, Mass. X, ournal

GION. THE

IATION,

, Boston.

OD ABBOT. TOR:

RITTORS:

t. R.I.

d, Mass.

Mass.

nce with respect

quicken a higher and in the indi-ignorance, right stition, freedom umanitarianis to universal ends bames.

hen Free Bellg dogmatiam and the world, and anity here and all private and bjects, the prac-TION OF THE RY, for the purmplete and con olitical and ad-United Stat to the Republic sople. The last control must be ons and Statutes to bring them nal Constitution e Liberals must present an un-practical aim of of FREEDOM. to increase the ble leading pa-ul character, in be one of the E INDEX.

VBES.

ations will conwell-known emdy done so much present high po-dly consented to NDON LETTER I interest to rading correspond-ets from valuad miscellansons shed; and such e from time to ces shall render possible.

AGENTS.

Local Agents for THE INDEX are wanted in every city and town throughout the coun-try. The most liberal terms are offered.

TEBMS.

The price of THE INDEX is Three Dolhars a year, payable in advance; and at the same rate for shorter periods. All remit-tances of money must be at the sender's risk, unless forwarded by cheque, registered letter, or post-office money order. The name with address in full, must be accompanies companied with the money in each case. Address

THE INDEX. No.1 Tremont Place, Boston,

4. PUBLICATIONS. OF THE FREE

RELIGIOUS

ASSOCIATION.

Report of the Addresses and other Seport of the Addresses and other Proceedings of the Original Meet-ing in 1867, at which the Pree Religious Association was organ-ized. Containing addresses by 0. Brou-ingham, Henry Blanchard, Lucretis Mot Robert Dale Owen, John Weiss, Oliver John-son, F. E. Abbot, D. A. Wasson, T. W. Elg-ginson, and Ralph Waldo Emerson.

(This pamphiet has not been on sale for a umber of years, and many persons who have all of the Annual Reports succeeding do not possess this.) Price 60 cents.

Proceedings of Second Annual Meet-ing, 1869. 50 cents. Contains essays by Julia Ward Hows on "Freedom and Restraint in Religion," and by David A. Was-son on "The Relation of Social Science to Religion," and speeches by O. B. Frothing-ham, Jesse H. Jones, F. E. Abbot, Wm. Des-ton, R. W. Emerson, Mary Grew, C. A. Bar-tol, A. M. Powell, H. B. Biackwell, Eowland Connor, Lucy Stone, Horace Seaver, and others; with an appendix on "Outlines of Judaism" by Rabbi Wise.

Proceedings of Third Annual Meet-ing, 1870. 50 cents. Contains easys by O. B. Frothingham on the "Idea of the Free Religious Association," followed by Free Religious Association, 'Johnwal of addresses by D. A. Wasson on 'The Nature of Religion," by Mrs. E. D. Cheney on "Re-ligion as a Social Force, especially in rela-tion to Fhilanthropy and Reform," and by F. E. Abbot on "The Future of Religious Organization, as affected by the Split of the Age;" an essay by Samuel Johnson on "The Natural Sympathy of Beligions," followed by Rabbi Wise on "The Fermanent and Progressive Elements of Judaiam," by T. W. Higginson on "Mohammedanism," by Wm. H. Channing on "The Beligions of China," and Wm. J. Potier on "Beligion Old and New in India;" also abstract of a discussion on "The Bible in the Public Schools," by Thos. Vickers, S. B. Calibrop, Rabbi Wise, and others.

Proceedings of Fifth Annual Meet-ing, 1872. St cents. (Four or more, S cents each.) Contains easys by J. W. Chadwick on "Liberty and the Church in America," by C. D. B. Mills on "Religion as the Expression of a Permanent Sentiment of the Human Mind," and by O. B. Froth-ingham on "The Beligion of Humanity," ingnam on "The Religion of Humany, with addresses by Rowland Connor, Cella Burleigh, Lucretia Mott, A. B. Alcott, C. A. Bartol, Horace Scaver, Alexander Loos, and others.

Proceedings of Sixth Annual Meetreceedings of Sixth Annual meet-ing, 1873. 35 conts, (Four or more, 26 conts each.) Contains essays by Samed Johnson on "Freedom in Beligion," and by John Weiss on "Religion in Freedom," with addresses by Wm. C. Gannett, Robert Dals Owen, T. W. Higginson, Samuel Longfel-low, J. S. Thomson, F. E. Abbot, and Lacretia Mott.

Sympathy of Religions, by T. W. Hig-ginson. 25 cents.

Boligions of China, by Wm. H. Channing. 25 cents.

Season and Revelation, by William J. Potter. 10 cents.

Partation of Church Property, by Jas-Parton. 10 cents, singly; package of ten, 60 cents; of one hundred, $3.

These publications are for sale at the office of the Free Religious Association, No. 1 Tremont Place, Boston. The Annual Reports for 1868 and 1871 cannot be supplied, and the supply of others previous to that of 1878 is quite limited. Orders by mail may be adased either "Free Religious Association, dra No. 1 Tremont Place, Boston," or to the Becretary, New Bedford, Mass.

WM. J. POTTER, Bas. F. B. A.

TEVENS.

York City.

a Plain, Mass.

ıd.

THE INDEX-AUGUST 6, 1874.

ROSSETTI (CHRISTINA G.) A Shadow of Last JERBOLD (DOUGLAS). Fireside Saints, Mr. Claude's Breakfast Talk, and other Papers, 1.50 JOHNSON'S (SAMUEL) Oriental Bellgiona, and their Belsion to Universal Bellgion. India. SERR (ORPHEUS C), Versatilities, Poems, Patriotic, Sentimental and Humorons, 2.00 LECEY (W. E. H.) History of the Rise and Influence of the Spirit of Bationalism in Europe, 2 vols. History of European Morals from Augus-SMILES'S (SAMUEL) Seit-Heip. 1.26 SPENCER (HERBERT.) Education, Intel-lectual, Moral, and Physical. 2.26 Paras Principles Resays: Moral, Political, and Asthetic. 2.46 Illustrations of Universal Frogress. A Se-lection of his best Papers. 2.46 Bocial Statics; or, The Conditions Essen-tial to Human Happiness Specified, and the Pirat of them Developed. 2.46 The Piraciples of Hoychology. 2 vols. 5.00 The Piraciples of Paychology. 2 vols. 5.00 The Piraciples of Paychology. 2 vols. 5.00 Second Consultation Science, Philosophy, 30 Second Second Science, Philosophy, 30 Second Second Science, Philosophy, 30 Second Second Second Science, Philosophy, 30 Second tus to Charlomagne. 2 vols...... 6.00 LESSING'S (G. E.) Nathan the Wise. Trans-lated by Eilen Frothingham. 1.50 LEWES (G. H.) The Story of Goethe's Life. 1.60 LEWIN (BRV. BAPHAEL, D'C). What is Ju-dalam T or, a Few Words to the Jews...... 1.00 LONGFELLOW'S (H. W.) Poems. Portrait. 2 vols. Prose Works. Portrait. 6.00 LUBBOCK (SIR JOHN). Origin of Civilian don, and the Printive Condition of Man. 200 Fre-historic Times LUEL'S Principles of Geology. 2 vols. 5.0 LYELL'S Principles of Geology. 5.0 THACKERAY'S (W. M.) Novels. Household Edition. Complete in 5 volumes. Per vol., 1.25 Vanity Fair. The Newcource. Adventures of Philip. Fendennis. Personnes. The Virginians. Earnond, and Lovel the Wildower. Earnond, and Lovel the Wildower. House the second second second second picture of the second second second second picture of the second second second second the second nupsets Inscretzy in the market. 1. Barry Lyndon, Hoggariy Dismond, &c. 2. Paris, and Iriah Skritch-Hooks, &c. 4. Rooth, Skritche, Bours, Dura, &c. 4. Rooth, Skritche, Bunnorista, &c. 6. Catherine, Unristmas Books, and Unre-printed Pieces. .78 THOREAU'S (H. D.) Walden; or, Life in the Woods FHOREAU'S (H. D.) Walden; or, Life in 1.00

 ba Wools
 2.00

 Excursions in Field and Forest, Fortrait.
 2.00

 The Maine Woods
 2.00

 Cape Cod
 2.00

 Lattern
 2.00

 A Yankce in Canada
 2.00

 A Week on the Concord and Merrimac
 2.00

 Livers
 2.00

 A Week on the Concord and Merrimac
 2.00

 TYNDALL (JOHN). Faraday as a Discov-6787.
 1.06-Pragments of Science for Unscientific Feo-100

 Ight and Electricity .
 1.26

 Uguts and Electricity .
 1.26

 Hours of Exercise in the Alps
 2.00

 On a same Mode of Modean
 2.00

 Forms of Water
 1.50

 Perceceding at the Fareweil Banquet to Prof. Tyndail.
 .00

 TYTLEE (SARAH.) Old Masters and their Pictures
 1.50

 Modern Fainters and their Faintings
 1.50

 Modern Fainters and their Faintings
 1.50

 YOYSESY (Ray. CHARLES.) The Sling and seminary
 1.50

 TYNDALL (JOHN). Faraday as a Discov-VOYSEY (BEV. OHARLES.) The Sling and the Stone. Vols. Land V., each. Vols III. IV. and VI., each. The Voysey Appeal. Voysey's Detence at York. WARNER'S (OHABLES D.) My Summer in a Garden Baunterings Back-Log Studies WEI88 (JOHN.) American Religion ...... 1.50 Life of Theodore Parker. 2 vols.......... 5.00 1.00 WHITTIER'S (JOHN G.) Poems. 2 vols .... 4.00 Child Life ADDINAST 1.50 1.50 1.50 1.50 1.50 1.50

p
POPULAR BOOKS,	Historical Pictures Retouched; s Volume of Miscellanies. In two parts. Part I., "Studies, Pictures, and Pancies"
SENT BY MAIL	"Studios, Pictures, and Fancies" 1.50 The Life of Dr. Marie Zakrzewska, being a. Fractical Hiustration of "Woman's
AT	Rights to Labor"
PUBLISHERS' PRICES!	Doutinal of Researches.
	er Animais
ORDERS PROMPTLY FILLED.	Demostication, 2 vols., illustrated 6.00 DESCARTES (RENE.) Discourse on the DESCARTES (RENE.) Discourse on the Method of Rightly conducting the Reason and Seeking Truth in the Sciences
NO EXTRA CHARGE FOR POSTAGE.	DICKENS' Child's History of England 1,50 DUIIRING (JULIA.) Philosophers and
ANY BOOK in the subjoined List, or any other	KLIOT'E(@ECRGE) Novels. Household Edi- tion. 5 vols., each
ANY BOOK IN BOOK that may be desired, will OBTAINABLE BOOK that may be desired, will be forwarded as promptly as possible on receipt	Adam Bede.
of orders accompanied with the CASH.	Romola. The Mill on the Floss. Felix Holt.
Orders are respectfully solicited from	Silas Marner and Scenes of Clerical Life. The Same. Library Edition. 2 vols 3.50
all friends of THE INDEX.	Middlemarch, 2 vola
Price	EMERSON'S (R. W.) Fasaya, First Series 200
ALCOTT (A. BRONSON). Tablets 1.50 Onecord Days	Easays. Second Series
ILCOTT (LOUISA M). Little Women. Two	Bepresentative Men. 2.00 English Traits. 2.00 Conduct of Life . 2.00
Touthal Skatches and Camp and Fircelde	Poems. With Portrait. 2.00 May-day and Other Pieces. 2.00
Biories 1.50 Biories 1.50 An Old-Frashloned Girl. 1.50 Little Man 1.50	Bepresontative Man.     9.00       English Traits.     2.00       Conduct of Life     2.00       Postna.     2.00       Essays     2.00       Bussys.     Single Sin
Little Man. 1.00 My Boys, &c
ARABIAN NIGHTS' ENTERTAINMENTS. 1.50	EVANS (E. P., Ph. D). First Historical Transformations of Unristianity. From the French of Athanase Coquerei the
ABNOLD'S (MATTHEW) Essays in Criti- clam	The Life and Works of Gotthold Enhraim
AUERBACH (BEETHOLD). On the Heights. 1.50 Vills Eden; The Country-House on the Rhine. 2.00	FARRAR'S Critical History of Pres Thought, in reference to the Christian Religion 2.00
Kaine Edelweiss German Tales	FEUERBACH (LUDWIG.) The Essence of Christianity. "George Eliot's" translation. 3.00
BACON'S Emnys 1.00	FISKE'S (JORN) Myths and Myth-Makers. 2.00 FROTHINGHAM (O. B.) Baligion of Hu-
BAGEHOT on the English Constitution 2.25 Physics and Politics 1.50	Ballafa of the Unbellayers 20
BAIN (ALEXANDER). Mental Science: A Compandium of Psychology and History of Philosophy. 1.78	Life of Theodore Parker 3.00
Moral Selence: A Compendium of Ethics.	FULLER'S (MARGARET) Complete Works, including Memoirs by Emarson, Channing, and others. A new edition. 5 vols
1 vol 1.76 The Senses and the Phtelloct, Third edi- tion. 1 vol 5.00	GALTON (FRANCIS.) Hereditary Genius. An Inquiry into its Laws and Conse-
BARTLETT'S Dictionary of Americanisms, 2.50 BARTLETT'S Familiar Quotations	Q08D008
DARTOL (REV. C. A). Radical Problems 2.00	GOETHE'S Paust. Translated into English Verse by Bayani Taylor. 2 vols. Per vol 5.00 Elective Affinities. Wilhelm Meister. Translated by Thomas Carlyle, Portrait of Goethe 2 vols
The Rising Faith	Wilheim Melater. Translated by Thomas Carlyle. Persrait of Goethe. 2 yels 3.59
	ich Proteinignand
Biblic in the France Schools. Records, Arguments, and Bocision in the case of John D. Minor et al. es. the Board of Education of the city of Cinchanadi g. al. in the Supreme Court of the City of 200	GREO'S (W. R.) Enigmas of Life
g al. in the Supreme Court of the City of Cincinnati	ODOTENTIVE Compliad from Family Day favor of the use of the Hible	uments, Private Momoranda, and Original Letters to and from Various Friends. By Mrs. Grote. Second Edition. With Por-
2.00 Arguments of Nanney, Sare and King in favor of the use of the Mble	LEAU
BRACKETT (ANNA C.) The Education of	HAMERTON (PHILIP G.) A Painter s Camp. Book I. In England. Book II. In Scotiand. Book III. In France
American Gills. The Translations. The	The Unknown Biver. 5.00 The Unknown Biver. 5.00 The Intellectual Life. 2.09
Layman's Breviary	Chapters on Animals 4.09 HAMILTON (GAIL). Uhild World. Part Sec-
SUECHNRE'S Force and Matter 3.25	ond
BUCKLE (HENRY THOMAS). History of Guillation in England and France, Spain and Southand, New edition of the entire work, with a complete index. 2 vols 5.00	HAMILTON'S Lectures. 1. Metaphysical Lectures work, with a complete indax. 2 vols 5.00	2. Logical Lectures
CARLYLE'S Works. Chesp edition. Compris- ing the following: Miscellaneous Essays, 7 vols, French Revolution, 3 vols.; Freder- ick the Great, 10 vols.; Gromwell's Lettors, 2c., 3 vols.; Bartor Resartus, 1 vol.; John Sterling, 1 vol.; Lift of Schiller, 1 vol.; Past and Present, 1 vol.; Heroes and Hero Wor- ship, 1 vol.; Latter Day Pamphieta, 1 vol. Any volume sold separatoly. 3 vols. Lon- ton, [51]-J. Per vol	New Blustrated Library Edition. Nine vols. Per vol
ick the Great, 10 vols.; Cromwell's Letters, 2c., 5 vols.; Sartor Resartus, 1 vol.; John	Moases from an Old Manse. The Scarlet Letter, and The Blithedale and Present, I vol.; Heroes and Hero Wor- this, I vol.; Latter Day Pamphlets, I vol.	The House of the Seven Gables, and The
Any volume sold separately. I vols, Lon- don, 1871-3. Per vol	The Marble Fann. The English Note-Books,
CARPENTER (DR. W. B.) The Principles of Mental Physiology, with their Applica- tions to the Training and Discipline of the Mind, and the Study of its Morbid Condi-	Buow Image. Tha Marble Fann. The English Note-Books. The American Note-Books. The French and Italian Note-Books. Our Old Mome, and Septimize Felton.
tions to the Training and Discipline of the Mind, and the Study of its Morbid Condi- tions	BIGGINSON'S (T. W.) Out-Door Papers 1.50
CERVANTES' Don Quixote 1.50	HIGGINSON'S (T. W.) Out-Door Papars 1.40 Malbono. An Oldport Romance
CHANNING (WM. ELLERY, D.D). The Per- fect Life. In Twelve Discourses. Edited from his manuscripts by his nephew, Wm.	Oldport Days
debry couldness,	HOWELLS'S (WILLIAM D.) 1001 1002 2.00 Suburban Sketches 2.00 Venetian Life. 2.00 Italian Journeys 2.00 1.00 Italian Journeys 2.00
CHANNING (WM. ELLERY), Thoreau: The Post Naturalist, With Memoria) Verse, 2.06	Venetian Life
CHENEY (Mus. E. D). Patience. A Series of Thirty Games for the Fireside 1.00	HUGO'S (V.) New Novel," "Ninety-Three"., 1.75
Social Games. A new Series of Games for Parties, uniform with Patience	HUMBOLDT (ALEXANDER VON). Life of. Translated from the German. 2 vols., with three portraits
United	HUME'S (DAVID) Essays and Life 1.75
Beligions	BUNT'S (MRs. HELEN). Verses
CLARKE (Dr. E. H.) Ser in Education 1.29	BUXLEY'S Man's Place in Nature
CLODD (EDWARD). The Childhood of the World	traive Ninnan
COBBE (FRANCES POWER). Studies New and Old, of Ethical and Social Bublects. 1.00 Darwinsmin Morals, and other Essays	Animals
The Religious Demands of the Age	The Monitions of the Unseen
BORDUT CHICAGE AND	INGELOW'S (JEAN) Prose, Off the Skel- ligs 1.25 Studies for Stories 1.25 Stories told to a Child. First and Second 1.25
OORRELATION and Conservation of Forces: A Series of Expositions by Grave, Helm- buits, Mayor, Faraday, Liebiz and Carpen-
A Series of Expositions by Grove, Heim- built, Mayor, Faraday, Liebig and Carpen- ber: with an Introduction by Edward L. Youmans, M.D. i vol	Stories told to a Child. First and Section 125 Series. 125 A Sister's Byte Hours. 125 Mopsa the Fairy: A Story. 125 Poor Matt; or, The Clouded Intellect. 50 Processories (Four Gill The God and Other
LIFE Its True Aims and Requirements	INGERSOLL STROBILOU ING 4 10 2.00
ULTURE DEMANDED BY MODERN LIFE; Its True Alms and Requirements A Series of Addresses, By Tyndall, Huz- by, Whewell, Faraday, Spencer, Draper, Hasson, Lyell, etc. Edited by Edward L. Tommas. 2.00	INTERNATIONAL SCIENTIFIC SERIES. No. I. Former of Water, in Clonds, Rain, Rivers, Ice, and Glaclers. By John Tya- 1.50
100mana	Rivers, Ice, and Giaciera. by sould 19th 1.50

Political Economy. New and revised edi-tion. 2.0 The Subjection of Women. 2.0 Easy of Liberty 125 Representative Government. 1.0 Autobiography. 225 Memorial Volume. His Life and Works... 1.0
 Time Stories.
 1.30

 MUELLER (MAX, M.A.) Lectures on the Science of Language. First Series.
 2.50

 The Same. Second Series.
 2.50

 The Same. Second Series.
 1.40

 Easays on the Sterie or Withop.
 1.40

 It. Baseys on Colling From Workshop.
 1.41

 Easays on the Sterie or Traditions.
 1.40

 Three volume.
 2.60

 Three volume.
 2.60

 Lectures on the Science of Heilgton.
 2.60

 MABY (PETROLEUM V). Swingin' Bound the Circle.
 1.60

 Ekces from Kantuky.
 1.60

 Extra Struct Struct Structure of the

and the Finite PHELPE'S (ELIZADETH STUART.) The Gates Alar... The Troity Book Men, Women, and Gheets Hedged In The Silent Partner. What to Wear T

manua Google

INDEX

1 Trement Place, Bo

HE

i from Family Doc-ands, and Original rious Friends. By dition. With Por-6,00 MAURICE (REV. F. D.) The Ground and Object of Hope for Mankind A Painter a Camp. ok II. In Scotland. 1.50 2.00 5.00 3.00 4.09 ld World. Part Sec-1.00 3.50 1.50 HANIEL) Works. Edition, Nine vols. 2.00 anse. and The Blithedale on Gables, and The

2.00 TENTIFIC SERIES. tor, in Clouds, Rain, clore. By John Tyn-ics; or Thoughts on the Principles of " and "Inheritance" 1.59 By Waltar Bagehot. 1.59 dall II. Physics the Applic "Natural to Political

$25 A DAY GUABANTEED aning our WELL AUGEBAND DRILL in good territory. HIGHEST TERTHONIALS	STUDENTS FITTED for any	BOSTON LIBERAL LEAGUE.	NONPAREIL Farm Feed, Bone, Drog, and Hand-grinding Millis. Tec Sizes. Also Cotton-Seed Hullers. Bustrat- ed pamphlets free. Address. Bustrat-
	D College. Please address EMILY J. LEONARD, Meriden, Conn.	Our organization some time since decided to di-
DAKOTA. UKtalogues 1100. St. Louis, Mo.	CONSTANT EMPLOYMENT.	rect its efforts for the present towards securing	- Ohio.
CHARLES SUMNER.	As nome, male of renarized Particulars	the state is an a	THE AMERICAN EDITION
A fine likeness of Massachusetts' great Sen- ator, the copy of a recent Photograph by Black, is for sale at TAM INDEX office, and	and valuable sample sent free. Address, with six-cent return stamp. C. ROSS, Williamsburg, N. Y.	Repeal of the Laws	MONCURE D. CONWAPS of the price-fifty cents.		whereby church and other corporate property is	SACRED ANTHOLOGY,
Address 1 Tremont Place, Boston.		unjustly exempted from its share of the burden of taxation.	A BOOK OF ETHNICAL SCRIPTURES.
SAVE FIFTY DOLLARS!	ton Street, Boston, every Sunday, at 10% A.M., 3% and 7% P.M. All that relates to the Religious, Polytical and Social interests of mankind consti-	As a means to this end, we have published for	has just been published, and will be sent postpaid on raceipt of the price, $4.00.
THE NEW FLORENCE.	L: is held at HOSPITATLEE HALL, 594 Washing- ton Street, Boston, every Bunday, at 10% A.M., 3% and 7% P.M. All thair relates to the Beligious, Folitical, and Social interests of mankind counti- tute the subjects for discussion. THE INDEX and Index Tracts are for make every Sunday at Hospitalney Hall.	general circulation several thousand copies of a	Address THE INDEX.
PRICE, $20 below   any other First- VALUE, $30 above   class Bow'g Mach.	WEST NEWTON ENGLISH	THACT	1 THEMONT PLACE, Boston, Mass.
SAVED, 850 by buying the Florence.	AND CLASSICAL SCHOOLThe twenty-	on Church Exemption, being the article by Mr.	G. L. HENDERSON & CO.,
Svery machine warranted.	School, FOR BOTH SEXES, will begin weanes-	Abbot which appeared in THE INDEX of Nov. 37.	BANKERS,
Special terms to clubs and dealers.	For particulars address NATH'L T. ALLEN, Principal, West Newton, Mass.	The edition was made as large as our funds would allow; but, so great has been the demand,	LEBOY, MINN.
Send for circulars to the Florence S. M. Co., Florence, Mass.,	At home Saturdays.	it is already nearly exhausted. Our next edition ought to be large enough to	Money invested on short time, or tor a term of years, on unincumbered improved or 778 Washington Street, Boston, Mass.	PENN MEDICAL UNIVERSITY, OF PHILADELPHIA.	place a copy in the hands of	term of years, on unindumbered improved farms, at 12 per cost, interest per anna, payable semi-annualy. Perfect title and ample security guaranteed. All expenses for abstract of title and recording mortuge paid by borrower. We collect and recording paid
CHARLES SUMNER'S	The regular course of Lectures in this In-	EVERT VOTER IN THE STATE,	abstract of title and recording mortgage paid by borrower. We collect and remit for
GREAT WORK.	schedulor will commence on the serves. The school is liberal and progressive, and thor- ough in its leaching. For announcement giving terms and other particulars, address D. B. UCKMAN, M.D., Daswigs		by borrower. We collect and remli to any part of the United States free of charge. REVERENCES First National Bark W.
PROPHETIC VOICES	ough in its teachings. For announcement giving terms and other particulars, address	and generously to supply the calls for them in other States.	REFERENCES First National Bank, Mo- Gregor, Iowa; First National Bank, Ausin Minn.; Milwankee National Bank, Ausin Minn.; Milwankee National Bank, Milwan- tea, Wie - Citz Netional Bank, Milwan-
CONCERNING AMERICA.	No. 1030 Spring Garden St.	To do this, we need funds; for, although we	kee, Wis.; City National Bank, Chicago, II.; Allen, Stevens & Co., Bankers, New York City; Morris Altman.
By CHABLES SCHNER. Fine Edition, Tinted Paper, with Steel Por-	TO NEWSPAPER	have made arrangements for printing the Tract at very low cost, it is impossible for the Boston
Aside from its literary and historical mer-	PUBLISHERS.	League, with its various other expenses, to bear the entire expense alone,	REAL ESTATE SECURITIES, paying 8 to 19 per cent. interest, or its, this volume has a special interest, from the fact that it was the last work on which	Having conveniences for doing the best of newspaper printing at reasonable prices, I should like to contract for composition alone,	Will not, then,	Investments in Real Estate in Chicage and vicinity,
r. Sumner was engaged before his death. "PROPRETIC VOICES" will be found of great	should like to contract for composition alone, or for composition, press-work, and mailing, for one or more weekly papers.	111 Falanda of the Manager	if judicionaly made, are the best and safest modes of employing capital. The old value to all who take an interest in the his-	Best of references given, and satisfactory work guaranteed. GEO. H. ELLIS,	All Friends of the Movement	Real Estate and Loan Agency
tory of our country, so full is it of passages in which the unexampled prosperity of our	7 Tremont Place, Boston.	come forward and help us with liberal donations ?	OF land has been foretold by philosophers, poets, statesmen, and orators, of whom the lament-	BOUND VOLUMES OF THE	We frequently receive communications from parties wishing tracts to distribute, asking how	ERNST PRUSSING, 143 RANDOLPS STREET
ed author has also given interesting sketches. Sent, post-paid, on receipt of price.	Bound volumes of THE INDEX for 1871,	much they shall pay. To such we reply that the	Guarantees perfect title and ample security in all its Real Estate Loans.
Address THE INDEX, No. 1 Tremont Place, Boston.	purchaser's expense) on receipt of $2.50, $2 50, and $3.00 respectively. These volumes are exceedingly valuable singly, irrespective	cost to us is about $2.50 per thousand, and we shall be pleased to furnish them at this price per	Firstclass securities always on hand, In-
C H A P T E B S	of each other; for the important essays and	thousand, or 30 cents per hundred, to all who will	terest and principal collected without chara. Beal Estate Investments made on commission or on shares; taxes paid, &c.
PROM	interest, and will furnish as instructive read- ing twenty years hence as to-day. No more valuable present could be made to a friend	circulate them. But all additional donations will be gratefully received for the purpose of circu-	Orders of capitalists and real estate orp- era respectfully solicited.
The Bible of the Ages. POUBTEEN CHAPTERS.	struggling out of Orthodoxy than one of these volumes.	ating them gratuitously throughout the country. To many of the subscribers of THE INDEX	REASONS FOR USING THE
Selected from Hindu Vedas, Buddha, Con-	Address THE INDEX, 1 Tremont Place, Boston.	and others whose names have been furnished us fucius, Egyptian Divins Pymander, Zoross- ter, Talmuds, Bible, Plato, Pythagoras, Mar- cus Aurellus, Epictetus, Al Koran, Luther, Scandinavian, Eddas, Ronan, Taliesin, Mil-	WARBEN'S	as probable friends of the movement, copies of the Tract, together with Petitions asking the re-	EUREKA SPOOL SILK.
ton, Penn, Adam Clarke, Mary Fletcher, F. W. Newman, Tyndall, Max Müller, Ellas Hicks, Channing, Garrison, H. C. Wright, Lu- cietla Mott, Higginson, T. Starr King, Bush-	TRUE CIVILIZATION.	peal of the Exemption Laws, have been sent,	It is full longth. It is full size. It is
Hicks, Channing, Garrison, H. C. Wright, Lu- cietia Mott, Higginson, T. Starr King, Bush- nell, Parker, Davis, Emma Hardinge, Emer-	Price 50 cents.	With the Hope	smooth and elastic, and is equally adapted to hand or machine use.
son, Denton, Tuttle, Abbot, Frothingham, and others.	PRACTICAL DETAILS,	within the hope	Many kinds of spool silk are a perfect
Gospels and Inspirations from many Centuries and Peoples.	showing the workings of the	that such friends will try to secure as many sig-	fraud, being not only shorter in length, but a much finer size than they are represented
"Slowly the Bible of the race is writ, Each age, each kindred, adds a verse to it."	COST PRINCIPLE.	natures to the petition as possible in their locality We respectfully ask these who are unable to at-	to be, and of so poor a quality as to be unit for use. The ladies will always find the Re-
Edited and Compiled by GILES B. STEBBINS.	Price 25 cents.	tend to the matter themselves to place the peti- tions in the hands of those who will.	roka Silk exactly as represented. Every spool is warranted, and the manufactura's
Four hundred pages; bound in cloth; price $1.50. No Extra Charge for Postage. Address THE INDEX,	Forsals by S. H. MORSE,	Lot us	name indelibly branded on every spool. Call
No. 1 Tremont Pince, Boston,	36 Bromfield St., Boston.	BOLL UP THE LIST!	for it.
B U S T O F	MUSIC BOOKS FOR SCHOOLS.	BOULD OF THEIR MADE.	RADICAL AND LITERARY
THEODORE PARKER,	HOUR OF SINGING.	Let our united volces be heard! And let it be done NOW!	LECTURES
SIDNEY H. MORSE.	Price $1.00. For High Schools. Well proved, highly popular, practical and	We would say, also that we feel deeply the	LECIULIS,
Dignity, reverence, sweetness, vigor, equipolae, breathe through the clay; the artist has so filled his own heart with appreciation	useful book. BY EMERSON & TILDEN.	to been	LOUN WELSS of that noble life that he has been able cun-	American School Music Reader.	Other Organizations	JOHN WEISS, ningly to mould it into those delicate lines which the character had wrought on the liv- ing fibre. We are tempted to exclaim, as we	BOOK I, PRICE 35 CENTS.		BADICAL LECTURES.
stand beside it, as the old artist did to his perfected work, "Speak then!"-Hannah E.	This charming number is for Primary Schools; has full directions for teachers (in fine print) and delightful little graded exer-	in this State, to cooperate with us in securing equality and justice, by pressing the "Demands	The Idea of Hereafter.
Stevenson. All the characteristics of my husband are in the bust,-his greatness, his goodness, his	cises and songs for the children.	of Liberalism." If, in any locality, there are	An Act of Faith. Intelligence in Religion.
tendenese, his love. You cannot give life to clay or marble; but you can represent it, and this Mr. Morse has done.—Lydia D. Parker to	American School Music Reader. BOOK II. PRICE 50 CENTS.	those who are inclined to	Beligion and Science. Heart in Beligion.
Hannah E. Stevenson.	For the Schools and Classes next above Primary Schools. Advances well into the el- ements.	Form a Liberal League,
The eyes, though but of clay, are gleaming with possible indignation, with possible tears; the lips are set firm with the resolution of	American School Music Beader.	we are ready to render such assistance as lies in	SHAKSPEARIAN LECTURES. FIRST SERIES.
him who, like Paul, could "fight a good fight" as well as "give a reason."-Samuel Longiel-	BOOK III. PRICE 60 CENTS. For the higher classes of common schools.	our power.	I. Cause of Laughter.
low. The first time I have seen Theodore Parker since he died Wm. Sparrell.	The above books are by EMERSON & TIL- DEN, are thorough, well arranged, practical,		2. Irony and Rumor.
The best representation of Mr. Parker ever executed in clayBoston Daily Globe.	pleasing, and useful.	LIBERALSI	4. Ajax in Trollus and Cressida: The Por- ter in Macbeth: The Fool in Lear.
The face is strong and noble as it should be. The likeness is good Boston Daily Advertiser.	CHEERFUL VOICES. PRICE 50 CENTS.	If all will unite and work, the results sought	5. Falstaff.
Nothing appears for beauty alone, or finish, or to show the vanity of the artist. All is forgotten in the man-the true, real, Yankee	In much downed, and to and the back	can be accompliabed	6. Hamlet. SECOND SERIES.
forgotten in the man-the true, real, Yankee man, Theodore ParkerL. S. H. in the Golden Age.	BY L. O. EMERSON. The above books sent post-paid, on receipt	Address	1. The Women of Shakspeare. 2. Portis.
Copies of this Bust, finaly finished n plas-	of retail price.	BOSTON LIBERAL LEAGUE,	3. Ophella. 4. Macbeth and Lady Macbeth.
	OLIVEB DITSON & CO.,		5. " " " " " Contraction
atra. Freight or expressive paid by party sonding order. Weight of box about fifty pounds. Orders may be sent to S. H. MOESE.	BOSTON.	NO. 1 TREMONT PLACE, BOSTON. Par order of the	JOHN WEINNY
Become the owner of the state of the state	CHAS. H. DITSON & CO.,
Room 15, 25 Bromfield St., Boston, Mass.	OHAS. H. DITSON & CO., ' 711 BROADWAY, NEW YORE.	REBUTIVE COMMITTEE,	E. Brookline St., Boston.
moom 13, 26 Bromheld St., Boston, Mass.	VALADI AL DALIOUN & UUN		2 E. Brookline St., accure
Moom 15, 30 Bromfield St., Boston, Mass.	VALADI AL DALIOUN & UUN		S2 E. Brookline St., steame
Room 15, 36 Bromfield St., Boston, Mass.	VALADI AL DALIOUN & UUN	REBUTTIVE COMMITTEE.	Google

THE INDEX - AUGUST 6, 1874.

.

.

384

Three Dollars a Year.

LIBERTY AND LIGHT.

Single Copies Seven Cents.

VOLUME 5.

"E's

Dal T

In 620 10

14

12 12. 20

5,

4

5-2025eg

NA472

121 1

-90

10

1 In 11

110

BOSTON, MASS., THURSDAY, AUGUST 13, 1874.

WHOLE NO. 242.

ORGANIZE!

THE DEMANDS OF LIBERALISM.

1. We demand that churches and other occlesiastical roperty shall no longer be exempt from just taxation.

We defined that the support from just taxation.
 We demand that the employment of chaplains in Congress, in State Legislatures, in the navy and militia, and in prisons, asylmms, and all other institutions supported by public money, shall be discontinued.
 We demand that all public appropriations for educational such charitable institutions is sectian character shall cease.

shall cease.
4. We demand that all religious services now sustained by the government shall be abolished; and especially that the use of the Bible in the public schools, whether estensi-bly as a tert-book or arowedly as a book of religious wor-able, shall be prohibited.
5. We demand that the appointment, by the President of the United States or by the Governors of the various States, of all religious feativals and fasts shall wholly cease.

of all religious festivals and fasts shall wholly cease. & We demand that the judicial oath in the courts and and other departments of the government shall be abol-tabed, and that simple affirmation under the pains and pen-alties of perfury shall be established in its stead. 7. We demand that all laws directly or indirectly enforce-ing the observance of Sunday as the Sabbath shall be re-pealed.

pealed.
8. We demand that all laws looking to the enforcement of "Christian" morality shall be abrogated, and that all laws shall be conformed to the requirements of natural morality, equal rights and inpartial liberty.
9. We domand that not only in the Constitutions of the United States and of the several States, but also in the United States and the several States, but also in the United States and the several States, but also in the United States and of the same, no privilege or advantage shall be conceled to Christianity or any other special rolling; that our enline political system shall be founded and administration of a purely secular basis; and that whatever changes shall prove necessary to this end shall be consistently, unflinchingly, and promptly made.

A FORM OF LOCAL OBGANIZATION.

Whereas, It is our profound conviction that it is a republican institutions is imperilled, the advance of civili-tation impeded, and the most sacred rights of man in-fringed, by the least interference of the State in matters of religion; and religion; and Theread, Certain grave inconsistencies with the general spirie of the United States Constitution still mark the prac-tical administration of our political system, threatoning the perpetuity of religious liberty, the existence of free public schools, and the peace and prospectry of the onlire land; Turnarycar, We, the undersigned, hereby associate our-selves together under the following

ABTICLES OF AGREEMENT.

ART. 1.-The name of this Association shall be THE LIB-

TEAL LEAGUE OF _____. ART. 2.-The object of the Liberal League shall be to se-cure practical compliance with the "Demande of Liberal-ism" throughout the country, and especially in _____. Also, as soon as five hundred such Liberal Leagues shall have been formed in different places, to send two delegates to a National Convention of Liberal Leagues, to be hereaf-ter called, in order to co-operate with all the liberals of the country in securing the needed reforms. ART. 3.-The means employed in working for these objects shall be regular local meetings, free discussions, lectures, addresses, conventions, the platform and the press in gen-eral, and all such other means as are peaceable, orderly, and right.

Art. 4.—Such measures shall be adopted for raising funds or the League as shall be prescribed in the By-Laws by a wo-thirds vote of the members.

Arr. 6.-Any person may become a member of the League by subscribing his or her name to these Articles of Agree-

Art. &-The Officers of the League shall be a Freeident, Art. &-The Officers of the League shall be a Freeident, a Vice Freeident, a Secretary, a Treasurer, and an Execu-tive Committee of three mombers; and their duties shall be those commonly pertaining to these offices. The Fresident and Becretary shall be ex-officio delegates to the Natkan Convention of Liberal Leagues when called together. Art. 7.-These Articles of A greement may be amended by a three-fourths yote of the members present at any reg-ular meeting, provided due notice of the proposed amend-ments shall have been sent to every member at least two weeks previous to such meeting.

Bo far as I am concerned, the above is the platform of THE LEDEX. I believe in it without reserve; I believe that it will yst be accepted universally by the American people, as the only platform consistent with religions liberty. A Liberal League ought to be formed to carry out its princible wherever half a dozen earned to carry out its Find-ple wherever half a dozen earned and resolute Liberals can be got together. Being convinced that the movement to secure compliance with these just "Demands" must surely, even if slowly, spread, I hope to make THE INDEX a means of furthering it; and I ask the assistance and active co-operation of every man and every woman who be-leters in it. Which is there it is a strike a set of the set of litere in it. Multiply Liberal Leagues everywhere, and re-port promptly the names of their Presidents and Secre-taries. Intolerance and bigotry will tremble in proportion as that list grows. If freedom, justice, and reason are right, let their organized voice be heard like the sound of many waters.

FRANCIS E. ABBOT, Editor. Bowrow, Bept. 1, 1878.

For List of Liberal Leagues, see next page. RELIGIOUS FREEDOM AMENDMENT:

PROPOSED AS A SUBSTITUTE FOR THE FIRST AMENDMENT TO THE UNITED STATES CON-STITUTION.

ABTICLE 1.

ARTICLE 1. SECTION 1.—CONFTENT SHAll make no law respecting an es-sublishment of religion, or favoring any particular form of religion, or prohibiting the free exercise thereof; or abridg-ing the freedom of speech or of the press, or the right of the people peaceably to assemble and to petition the dor-ernment for a redress of grievances. Becrins J.—NO State shall make any law respecting an of religion, or prohibiting the free exercise thereof; or abultation of religion, or favoring any particular form of religion, or prohibiting the free exercise thereof; or right of the people peaceably to assemble and to petition the government for a redress of grievances. No religious a qualification to any office or public trust, in any Biase; and no person shall ever in any Othico or fuelting, or any for the performance of any public or private duty, or ren-dor the performance of any public or private duty, or ren-dor the subject of religion. — Section 3.—Congressed. Have power to enforce the pro-risions of the second section of this Article by appropri-tions of the second section of this Article by appropri-tions of the second section of this Article by appropri-and the second section of the second section.

GLIMPSES.

BY F. E. A.

COMMISSIONER BAIRD shows that the fisheries of this country are rapidly decreasing in productiveness, owing to over-fishing. This is a hint to sea-side loiterers.

THE Christian Statesman thinks that the late frequent and terrible disasters in this country are "warnings of heavier judgments to come, if the nation continues impenitent."

AUSTRIA has 856,980 soldiers; Russia, 1,401,510; Italy, 605,200; Germany, 2,261,160; France, 977,600; England, 478,820. Total 6,580,260,-as against 3,808,-150 in 1859. And this is European civilization !

MR. RUSKIN vigorously lampoons the lecture-system. He says that "your modern fire-working, smooth-downy-curry-and - strawberry - Ice - and - milkpunch-altogether lecture is an entirely pestilent and abominable vanity." So he refuses to beam on a Glasgow audience.

THE ULTRAMONTANES are the disunionists and rebels of Germany, and aim to subvert the Empire in order to set up the Church in its place. Why treat self-preservation as persecution? The Empire is not what we hope for in Germany; but nevertheless we say, success to Bismarck!

REV. WILLIAM F. BAKER, in the Independent, relieves himself of the opinion that Boston is a "camp of unbelief," and is busily trying to "invent another and better Christ." It was the cheerful voice of Mr. Baker that the poet Campbell had in mind, when he feelingly referred to-

"The wolf's long howl from Oonalaska's shore."

THE BEACTION against the "praying crusade" has begun, and liquor saloons are again on the increase The Richmond' (Indiana) Independent says that "today there is more whiskey, ale, and beer sold and drunk in Richmond than before the crusade com-Similar reports reach us from other menced." quarters.

THE INTERNATIONAL PENITENTIARY COMMISSION has just held its first meeting in Brussels. Much is to be hoped from the deliberations of such a gathering, especially as the results reached are to be published broadcast. M. Beltrani-Scalia is to edit monthly an International Bulletin for the Study of Penitentiary Reform, in French, as the organ of the Commission.

THE Christian Statesman admires old Dr. Parish, who preached in 1810 before the Massachusetts Legislature against the treaty between the United States and France. "The atheists of France and the Puritans of New England-was ever an alliance so monstrous ?' The Statesman sees a lesson for the times in the old gentleman's paroxysms, and all radicals know what to expect if the Statesman has its way.

BRET HARTE, in the July Atlantic, tells in rhyme a story of Northern Mexico of two hundred years ago which is a not wholly untruthful picture of that country to-day, as the following bit of satire shows :-

"Por el Rey." What matters indeed, if King or President succeed To a country haggard with sloth and greed,

As long as one granary is fat, And youder priest, in a shovel hat, Peeps out from the bin like a sleek, brown rat!

THERE IS NO END to the abuse by which the Indians are stung into reprisal (of course after their own bloody sort) on our frontiers. This last ontbreak is reported officially to be due to such abuse. The "old, old story"-shall we never cease to do evil and then to hush up the complaint by destroying the complainant? America is little better than ancient Rome; It is ravenous with "earth-hunger," and relishes its meal none the less that it is seasoned with human blood. The Indians must depend on themselves for justice, or go without it: they will get none in Washington.

THE SUPREME COURT of this State has decided, in the case of Mrs. Feital (who was injured by a railroad accident on a Sunday), that Spiritualism is a religion; that Spiritualist camp-meetings are "religious meetings," and that Spiritualists are entitled to protection as much as any other class of religious worshippers. This is perfectly just, as far as it goes; the next step is to abolish the absurd law which grants protection on Sunday only to those who are engaged in works of charity or necessity, or ingoing to or from religious meetings. People of all classes should be as efficiently protected on Sunday as on any other day.

BY THE KINDNESS Of Mr. Thomas S. Murray, Saperintendent of Public Instruction in Douglas County, Kansas, we have received a copy of the "Amendments to School Laws," passed by the Kansas Leg-islature in the session of 1874. Chapter CXXIII. enacts that every child in that State between the ages of eight and fourteen years, unless excused for good reason by the school board, shall be required to attend school at least twelve weeks yearly, six of which must be consecutive. It is most encouraging and hopeful to see the States one by one coming to embrace the principle of "compulsory" or universal education.

THE FIRST "Council of the Union of American Hebrew Congregations," held recently at Cleveland, Ohio, is pronounced by the American Israelite "a perfect success." It acted on the questions of cheap Bibles, Sabbath (Saturday?) schools, circuit preach-ing, the Hebrew Union College at Cincinnati (which is to be opened by October, 1875, and will cost at least $500,000 or $600,000). Fifty-six congregations joined in the Council; and the glowing enthusiasm with which the Israelite depicts the prospect of a "resurrection of Hebrew literature and philosophy" and religion is catching. The Jews are good citizens; may they prosper abundantly !

THE Catholic Review of August 4 intimates that the sympathies of the Christian Statesman are "more inclined toward THE INDEX or the Independent than to any of the really 'Orthodox' journals." This is a specimen of the Review's fairness. The Christian Statesman is an honorable and high-minded opponent of THE INDEX, as its critic well knows, and is specially devoted to the advocacy of the Christian Amendment. We take this opportunity to express once more our most sincere respect for the fair and just spirit which never fails to make itself felt in the Statesman, though we seldom agree with its opinions or sympathize with its objects.

LIST OF LIBEBAL LEAGUES.

386

 LOUIS, MO.-M. A. McCord, President; P. A. Lofgreen, L. La Grille, Secretaries.
 BOSTON, MASS.-F. K. Abbot, President; J. P. Titcomb, G. A. Bacon, Secretaries.
 JENTERSON, OHIO.-W. H. Crowell, President; A. Giddings, Secretary. Sar Josz, Cal.-A. J. Spencer, President; J. L. Hatch, Secretary. Secretary. TOLEDO, IOWA .- J. Reedy, President; E. S. Beckley, Secre TOLEBO, IÓWA.-J. Reedy, President; E. S. Beckley, Secretary.
 TRELARD' N. J. - John Gage, President; Sue M. Clute, Secretary.
 JUNOTIONVILLE, NEB.-J. W. Eastman, President; B. L. Easley, Secretary.
 OLATER, KAM.-S. B. S. Wilson, President; H. A. Griffin, Secretary.
 DETROIT, MICH.-W. R. Hill, President; A. T. Garretson, Secretary.
 BERDSVILLE, MICH.-A. G. Eastman, President; F. R. Knowles, Becretary.
 OSOKOLA, MO.-R. F. Thompson, President; M. Roderick, Secretary. Secretary. ATE, ME.-F. G. Barker, President; C. Rhodes, Secretary. ZELIN, Wis.-President, J. D. Walters; Secretary, E. M. Bridgman. Wasmiworow, D.C. – George M. Wood, President; J. E. Crawford, Secretary. AUBURN, OHIO. – John Fish, President; G. W. Barnes, Treas-ATBUEN, ORIO.-John Fish, President; G. W. Barnes, Freas-ter. MINNMEAPOLIS, MINN.-President; J. B. Bassett; Secretary, Anton Grethen. Secretary. Scretary. Scretary. Bard CLAIME, WIS.-President; S. J. Dickson; Secretary, W. Konnedy. BLIBEG, IND.-President, S. J. Dickson; Secretary, W. Konnedy. BLIBEG, IND.-President, S. J. Dickson; Secretary, J. E. URLANS, LA.-President, E. Yorster; Secretary, J. E. Wallace, BAT CITY, MIGH.-President, S. M. Green; Secretary, S. M. Johnson, P. W. Willing, President; H. Moyar, B. M. Borne, P. Wilson, President; M. Green; Secretary, S. M.

CLEARFIELD, PA.-8. Widemire, President; H. Hoover, Secretary. SAUE CTTY, WIS .- Chr. Spiehr, President; Robert Cunradi, Secretary.

[For THE INDEX.]

The Church and the State.

AN ADDRESS DELIVERED AT MADISON BEFORE THE ALUMNI OF THE WINCOMSIN STATE UNIVERSITY, JUNE 17, 1874.

BY W. H. SPENCER.

ALUMNI OF THE STATE UNIVERSITY OF WISCONSIN,

ALUMNI OF THE STATE UNIVERSITY OF WISCONSIN, FRIENDS, AND FELLOW-CITIZENS:-The subject which I have chosen for my remarks this evening is "The Relation of Church and State, as it has been, as it is, and as it should be." I have selected this subject simply because I think it is a practical one, and should interest us as citizens of the State and alumni of a State school. I hope I may be able to approach the question in a spirit of fairness, as well as fearlessness, with a love only for justice and equality, without any of what Herbert. Spencer calls the theological or "anti-theological bias" to dis-tort my vision and warp my judgment. Emerson says that "men as naturally make a State or a Church as caterpillars a web." When this web ing process began may ever remain a matter of spec-ulation. Ethnology and philology, perhaps archeol-ogy, may assist to approximate the day when the state-idea and the Church-idea first broke forth into consciousness, but as yet they point with indefinite

<text><text><text><text><text><text>

ence of a tribe, clan, or State depended on its dis-tinctive powers,—on the size of its teeth and the length of its claws. Strength to kill was the cardinal virue; might was right. Now, since strenyth was the great desideratum, everything would bend to that. Unions would be formed because in union is strength. Men, families, and tribes would combine for purposes of offence and defence. Thus we see how the exigency of the times, the need of self-preservation itself, would force men into social compacts. The watchword then was not "liberty and union," but union; union not for liberty, bat for life. The primary want of mankind must have been something that would bring and bind men together more and better. Powerful chiefs, acquiring author-ity by virtue of superior personal strength and prow-eas, would arise and subject the many to one will and purpose, and so, gradually, what Bagehot calls the "legal fibre"—that is, the ingrained idea of and re-spect for law—would come to exert its power in ce-into a strong, compact commonwealth. At such a time, when the very existence of a peo-ple demended on their somblined strength and prov-menting the wild and naturally rebellious individuals into a strong, compact commonwealth. At such a time, when the very existence of a peo-ple depended on their combined atrenth; depended on the size and stability of the union; depended on the quantity rather than quality of government, --we readily understand how no division of power in the State could be endured without imminent danger of disintegration and destruction. It was then a political necessity that whatever power there was in Church and State should be united, that it might speak with one voice and strike with one arm; "the priest must not teach one thing and the king another; king must be priest, and prophet king." As the pio-neers of the West; surrounded with danger, walked and slept with a bowie-knife in one side of their belt and a Derringer in the other, so the early governments smong men as the chief or ruler carrying on his which afterwards arose between "political penalties," and "social consistion political penalties," and "social con-sure," were all one then; all power to reward or pun-ish centered in the despote will of the priest-king; Church and State were united.

Church and State were united. Thus we should conclude, from a priori reasoning alone, that all ancient religions must have been "State religions," and turning to history we find our assumptions verified. Look at the Jewish religion, for example. We find that Moges is a priest-king, or, if you please, a king-priest, and his law is a Mo-saic of the articles of a creed and the sections of a statute. State and Church were as indissolubly bound together as the Slamese twins; the blood of each flowed in the other's veins. As a matter of fact, history shows, what our reasoning had led us to conclude, that all ancient religions were State re-ligions. It is true of the Egyptian, Hindu, Persian, Chinese, Greek, Roman, and Scandinsvian religions. They were every one of them what might properly be called State religions. Now the question arises, Was It well that Church be called State religions. Now the question arises, Was It well that Church and State should be united? At first, it was unques-tionably right, because it was a vital necessity. They had not yet arrived at that stage of social evolution when the differentiation of office and function was practicable, if even possible. Wherever there has been an arrested development we see, even to-day, the primitive condition of government. The author of Ancient Law tells us "that Braminical India has not yet passed beyond a stage which occurs in the history of all the families of mankind, the stage at which a rule of law is not yet discriminated from a rule of religion. The members of anch a society con-sider that the transgression of a religious ordinance should be punished by civil penalties, and that the violation of a civil duty exposes the delinquent to divine correction. In China, this point has been past; but progress seems to have been then arrested, because the civil laws are coextensive with all the ideas of which the race is capable." We see, then, that although it was necessary to the first step in the progress of the human race that king and priest, State and Church, should be united, yet it was just as necessary to a further step that they should be dis-united; and wherever this second step has not been taken, and, as Mr. Maine expresses it, a "rule of new is not yet discriminated from a rule of religion," in that nation there has been an arrested development. Let us rejoice that the western world has gone beyond the first step. Europe and America have for Now the question arises, Was it well that Church and State should be united? At first, it was unquesthat nation there has been an arrested development. Let us rejoice that the western world has gone beyond the first step. Europe and America have for centuries been passing slowly through a series of po-litical metamorphoses, and "each step has been an onward one," each process has been a progress; and still the respective functions of Church and State are coming out into clearer lines of divergence and dis-tinction; and I, for one, believe the time is not far distant when Church and State shall be completely divorced and independent of each other. The logic of events leads to it; the signs of the times point to it. We are dwelling in the midst of the "age of dis-cussion." No subject is exempt. The great verifies of religion, as they are called, are stretched out on the dissecting table of science; the high priests of the Church are summoned to court. No belief is so heary or sacred as to flud exemption from this mod-the Church are summoned to court. No belief is so hoary or sacred as to find exemption from this mod-ern inquisition. The relation of Church and State must be discussed and decided anew. What the ver-dict will be few can doubt who have watched the direction which the current of event has been tak-ing for three centuries. There are small counter cur-rents, and local and temporary eddles of opinion, it is a been flowing steadily in one direction, and that direction you cannot mistake if you take a bird's eye view of several centuries. Look at the relation of Church and State as it was, compare it with what that relation fe to-day, and you will see clearly what current is bearing us on, the direction of its flow, and rent is bearing us on, the direction of its flow, and what its goal. You all know that the history of the Christian Church is largely a history of the strife between ec-clesiastical and civil rulers over their respective juri-diction and authority. Almost from the time that Constantine mounted the throne of the Crease down to the last Catholic Geumenical Council and the Protestant Constitution Amendment Convention, there have been waged wars of words and wars of swords to settle the relation of Church and State. At first, it appears that the Church asknowledged the supremacy of the civil ruler. For three or four cent-uries the Bishops of Rome (now called Popes) re-perors of Constantinopie, and paid them tribute; but it was long regarded by the Popes as a kind of mock homage; a traditional form of flattery; a bowing to the shadow of a king, rather than a right exacted by an acknowledged superior. In the eighth century this fiction of Byzantine authority was completely dissipated by the brilliant schievements of the rising French Kingdom in the Weet. Charles Martel struck his hammer on the crust of Europe, and the mage that evoked a half-million soldiers to drive back the gaunt apectres of Asiatic anthority over the western Church. Then, for the first time, arces into prom-hound rule State, or State should rule Church. For five centuries the Church came forward with it hands full of pseudo-Isadorian degretais, and all sorts of forgeries, to establish its right of universal domin-tion, of dispensing subjects from their osthe and de-posing kings. Thom Gregory VII, to Gregory IX, the Church claimed abacute domination over the State. the the hands full of pseudo-Isadorian decretals, and all sora of forgeries, to establish its right of universal domin-ion, of dispensing subjects from their oaths and de-polag kings. From Gregory VII, to Gregory IX, the Church claimed absolute domination over the State; that the Pope is lord and master of the whole world; in the ianguage of Innocent III., that "the papal power is to the imperial and royal as the sun to the moon, which last has only a borrowed light," and, what seems still more strange, we see kings bowing before this papal assumption, ceding vast estates to the Church, crowned by Popes, and trembling bafore their threattenings like whipped spanles before the master. And then at another turn of the kaleidoecope of history we see kings dominant, carrying away captive Popes, and reenthroning them at their sorr-eign will. For several centuries all was unsetted and chaotic as respects the relation of Church and State. The Church idea of papal absolution and the growing State idea of imperial sovereignty were contending for the mastery. Those who believed in the supremacy of the vicar of Christ were matched against those who believed in the divine right of kings. Long and eavage was the context; but slowly and surely the civil power has been driving the ecclesiasi-cal forces from the old/battle-fields. Every century the latter have been retreating into some new and nu-rower line of defence, and what is the status of the Catholic Church ho-day! A king without a kingtom. The Church has alipped from her grasp, and we see the abspict to be all awept away by the fination grants of private right and rule any day. The papal thunder-bolts carry no lightning now. The encyclical letter, while the last decade has seen the repeal of the Austrian Concordat, the expulsion of the in-tright glesuits, the wholesale conflocation of Church property in France, Italy, Mexico, and Turkey, and other measures looking toward the complete divore-ment of Church and State. This is true of the Chris-hie hastherma excite only d estant Church we shall see that the same process of secularization of State has been at work there. Look for a moment at the state of things at the Reformation. "The reformers opposed, on the one hand, the employed of the secular rule to "this state, and they opposed, on the other band, an above if an of ecclesiastical power in the State, such as the Greek Empire in Christian ages." But apparently they found it impossible to realize their idea of Church independence, for we find afterwards that the rote of the Church. All through Germany the civil rulers compelled villages and cities to support preaches it in the State. State, such as the Greek Empire in Christian ages." But apparently they found it impossible to realize their idea of Church independence, for we find afterwards that the relies compelled villages and cities to support preaches it into the Church. All through Germany the civil rulers compelled villages and cities to support preaches the Protestant princes within their respective at the Protestant princes within their respective that a nation, like a family, must profess but one fait, and, at the Diet of Augaburg, the Protestand prince was not head of the Church. Here the prince was not head of the Church. Here the prince was not head of the Church, Here the prince was not head of the Church, but the preacher was head of the State is bound to cooperate with the Church in fostering the was to be decide what was hereas; and derest of State is the heid to a certain independence of Church was governor of a Genevan theoremy, and State is the heid to a certain independence of church and state is some to compare with the Church in the state is bound to cooperate with the Church in fostering the beilt of a certain independence of the cate hereas; and State is the new to compare the the Church in the state is minitar to the state is the religion of the state is the prince was not head of the Church in the state is the prince was not be decided what was hereeway. and State is the prince was not head of the in Europe under Constantine. The king was head of the Church, a State Pope; and to-day the ruling monarch is nominally head of the English Church, and fills by appointment all high ecclesisatical offices, while the government clergy are supported by general terration.

Google -

while the government clergy are supported by general taxation. The Puritans in this country, it may be, intended to establish an independent Church in a free State; but, by their banishment of herstics, by their decree-ing that the right of suffrage, and of holding civil office, should be contingent upon membership with some church, they really established on this western continent a kind of theocracy. It took no deep root, however, for our democratic soil was not congenial to such an erotic. However, as we shall see, this thing still puts out a few leaves, though it is dead at the top.

still puts out a row reason, shough it is used as the top. Since the days of Luther and Calvin, Henry VIII. and Roger Williams have changed the relation of the Protestant State to the Protestant Church. In the late contest with the Romish Church, the spirit of modern Germany is expressed by these words of Bismarck, the man of "blood and Iron" visage: "In Germany there can be but one sovereignty, and that uniform and absolute, the sovereignty of the laws. This is a constitutional, not confessional, gov-ernment."

that uniform and absolute, the sovereignty of the laws. This is a constitutional, not confessional, gov-crament." The State has taken the education of her children out of the hands of the clergy, and has also made marriage a purely civil contract. The citizen may enjoy his religion at the Kirche or at the beer-garden, as he pleases; and, it must be confessed, most Prus-sians prefer the latter place. Whether you belleve in free religion or the free without religion, the govern-ment protects you. It fosters no clurch; it protects all equally. Such is the land of scholars, which even under Protestantiam once decreed that your religion must be the religion which happened to be held by the reigning prince. In England, thirty years ago, Mr. Gladstone wrote a book on the relation of Church and State, wherein he holds "that the State is a moral person, bound to act to the name of Christ and for the glory of God, and to make religion the paramount end in guiding and governing the nation;" and yet the man who said this thirty years ago has lent his powerful influ-ence as Prime Minister of England, lately, to a meas-ure for the disestabilishment of the English Church in Ireland, which was carried,—an indication of a remarkable progress toward Church independences among that conservative people. The late movement toward the secularization of the schools evinces a establishment of the Church in England, and the re-duction of the function of government to what Ma-caulay add it should be, the "protection of life and property."

Bat perhaps nowhere more than in the United States have we seen in two centuries a more rapid progress in the line of a complete separation of Church and State.

States have we seen in two centuries a more rapid progress in the line of a complete separation of Church and State. No longer here is the right of suffrage and eligibili-ty to office dependent upon communion with some church; no longer does the titheman notify you of your "parish dues," which you must pay, willing or unwilling; no longer does the beadle drive you to church, nor disturb your slumbers there. The times have changed. An avowed athelist may vote; an in-fidel may be elected to office; any one may enjoy a nap in almost any church, without annoyance from beadles or loss of respectability,--just as it should be. The liberal founders of our government provided a safeguard against religious intolerance in the first amendment to the Constitution of the United States, icclaring that "Congress shall make no law respect-ing the establishment of religious opinion and wor-bip. Thus we see, from a rapid survey of the Prot-stant and Catholic Church, in its relation to the tate, that there have been great changes, and that here changes have all been in the direction of Church and they have all been does the states force upon ne the conclusion that the time is near approaching be the Church and State shall be completely sep-rated, and stand free and independent of each other. In this brings me to the next part of my subject,---we relation of Church and State as it is and as it tould be.

ic relation of Church and Diase as in jould be. When so much religious freedom is granted as in When so much religious freedom is granted as in the source of the state of the source of When so much religious freedom is granted as in is country, it may be asked what more could be anted. Where perfect liketry is accorded to every a by the State, to worship God according to the trace of his conscience, or to worship one hundred is, if he please; or to worship himself, as many do; to worship edited the contists, to worship edited by the State? I answer that it is not more edon that we demand, it is more justice; and I am worship that we demand, it is more justice; and I am worship that we demand, it is more justice; and I am worship to the the worship himself, as many do; to worship the state? I answer that it is not more edon that we demand, it is more justice; and I am worship that the relation of Church and State is yet what it should be, nor what it will be, unless development as a nation is arrested before this eration is gone.
ook into the last United States statistics and you find that there are three hundred and eighty-four they four board of doing to ecclesiastical es, that is not tared one cent to support the gornent that protects it. You will find that in this eatons there are nearly five millions of dollars in efforts. You are thus competing a part of the property. You are thus comediant and the property which is both incomediant and more the property.

just. The State has no right to know any difference between property for religious and property for non-religious purposes. All property that does not belong to the State should be taxed. Whatever the State gives, whether to ecclesiastical, benevolent, or educa-tional institutions, should be given by direct appro-priations, that the people of the State may see and know how much they give, where they give, when they give, and for what they give. I am happy to say that this subject of taxation of church property has been up before the legislature of this State. I hope it will be introduced sgain at the next session, and every session thereafter, till just and equal taxa-tion becomes the law in this State, as it is in Call-fornia. just. The State has no right to know any difference fornia.

tion becomes the law in this State, as it is in Call-fornia. It seems to me that there is no principle of political ethics plainer than this, that since in exempting ec-cleaisstical property from taxation you must over-tax all other property by just the amount exempted, you are thereby committing a legal robbery upon every tax-payer in this State; and doing it in the name of religion cannot sanctify the injustics. There are thousands of people in this State, intelli-gent, moral, industrious, law-abding citizens, who do not believe in any church institutions whatever, and who object to taxation for what they have no in-terest in, and are perhaps strongly opposed to; and in the name of political justice and religious liberty. I wish to put on record my protest against such taxa-tion. "Do not suppose, friends, that I advocate this meas-are in a spirit of hostility to the churches. Not at all I speak simply for justice and equal rights. If I may be allowed to be personal, I may asy that I be-long to that class of men whose interest is supposed to be identified with the fortunes of the Church ; but, as an independent man, preaching before a soclety that is proud to call itself Independent, we demand that the State shall no longer exempt us and tax sothers for our support. We cannot see why the par-son age should go scot free of taxes, while the home of the poor mechanic across the way is compelled to bear its tax-burdens, local, county, and State. It is a kind of vicarious suffering we are unwilling to im-pose. "America," says Mr. Parton, "has been the para-pose. "America," says Mr. Parton, "has been the para-dise of dead-liceds." True; and since Congressmen have been forced to pay for their postage, paper, and peaknivee, the biggest dead-beads are the preachers.

Yes, us preachers. Yes, us preachers. Go into the store to buy a paper collar, and the clerk dead-heads you by selling it at one cent under retail price. The very railroads issuit you by classing you with children under twelve, and run you through

Go into the store to buy a paper collar, and the clerk dead-heads yon by selling it at one cent under retail price. The very railroade insult you by classing you with children under twelre, and run you through on halt-fare. If we preachers are anything, we are men first, and preachers next; and as men. 1, for one, beseech the State, and all corporations and individuals, to treat us, not as children or charity-subjects, but as men able and willing to pay full fare through this world, like other men. I have always thought it consistent with self-respect to decline all dead-head tickets on railroads, and I want the law-makers of the State to understand that there is no church, up at Sparta, in this State, that declines to accept its dead-head taration tickets. I am opposed to this whole dead-head system, from beginning to end; opposed to it because it makes the preacher a beggar at the fee of society, and pauper-izes the Church itself; but opposed to it principally because it is unjust to compel the extra and anti-Church people of the State to pay taxes on property belonging to the Church people. By exempting from taxation this elegant church across the way, every Jew in Milwaukee, every Ger-man rationalist in Madison, every mechanic in Ra-cine, every farmer in Rock, every lead-miner in Iowa County, is entra taxed. It matters not how much. A three-penny tax on tea was enough to precipitate the American Revolution. It is not the amount, but the injustice, of the tax wherein lies the evil and the grievance. Just so long as Church property is the supporting a State Church in this country. But it is said, in objection, that the churches ought not to be taxed, because they are a benefit to the com-munity, as they denote and promote the morsis of th people. Granted! Does this give them title to exemption? Are there not a great many other insti-tutions that might claim exemption on the ground of their service to the public? As I understand it, bash-houses, a well-tuned hand-organ, contribute some-what to the deve then should their halls be taxed? And our nowspapers surely do something to con-serve good morals, those that always tell the truth, and our resvings banks that pay back what they take over the counter, and our railroads that carry passen-gers for three cents a mile, and many other institu-tions are either directly or indirectly promoters of the morals as well as the comfort and happiness of the public. If we exempt all institutions which benefit society in some way, pray what would be left to tax except gambling-saloons, rum-holes, and brothels? The plea that exempts the Church exempts all; the justice that taxes one must tax all. If it be urged that religious institutions ought not

Justice that taxes one must tax all. If it be urged that religious institutions ought not to be taxed because they yield no pecuniary returns, we reply that a great deal of personal property and real estate is unproductive, which is nevertheless of the parlor in the city, to the sandy land in the counties of Juneau and Jackson. Property is taxed not because it is productive, but because it is protect-ed, and where there is no taxation there can be counties of Juneau and Jackson. Property is taxed not because it is productive, but because it is protect-ed, and where there is no taxaion there can be claimed no protection. But it is urged again that to tax the churches is in-expedient, as it would kill ont a great many of the poorer and weaker ones. Perhaps it would. Many churches are already staggering under all they can carry, and an additional tax-burden might crush them. So, many a farmer I know, who would gladly turn his yearly tax toward lifting the morigage that is pressing heavily on bis farm; but he knows the State must be paid or his farm; but he knows the State must be paid or his farm; but he knows the farmer? No doubt some churches could not survive taxaion, but if their existence is dependent on State favors or appropriations, or what amounts to the same thing, the remittance of their taxes, then is it not time that these clurches give place to something that can live by virtue of its own vigor and vitailty? 's it not true that we have about double the number of church edifices required to seat the church-going public? Half of the religious societies nearly are superfluous, but they live, as Parton says, "because they cannot quite succeed in dying. They hold on and will hold on as long as it is possible for the an-nual expenses to be met. The law of the survival of the fittest hungers for their extinction, but that be-neficent law is balked and frustrated by exemption from taxation." But while taxation would kill the weaker, it would strengthen the stronger churches. It would prune sway the off-shoots and send the asp circulating up the main trunk. It would be a check-mate on their sectarianism that divides churches by splitting thee-logical hairs. It would remand a good many preach-ers to the real places to which God cailed them, and leave the pulpit to the competition of talent that might adorn it. And while taxation might be a source of ruin to the smaller, it would be a source of ruin to the smaller, it would be a source of ruin to t ers to the real places to which God called them, and leave the pulpit to the competition of talent that might adorn it. And while taxation might be a source of ruin to the smaller, it would be a source of revenue from the large and wealthy societies. Millions of dollars are expended for religious luxuries, plous vanities, theo-logical shows, confectionary religion, by the wealth and fashion of the age; ought this not to be taxed ? In New York City the wealth invested in Jewish synagogues, Catholic and Protestant churches, is fab-uious. It is estimated that the property belonging to the Catholic Church alone in New York cannot be less than eighty millions of dollars, and still Catho-lics are greedy for more dead-head property. They exhibit commendable enterprise, energy, and tact in preëmpting the best building sites and erecting struct-ures that seem to be built for eternity. I do not for a moment fancy that they will ever absorb one-balf of the State, as they did in England in the fourteenth century, or two-fiths of it as they did in France in the last. I have no great fear that any kind of eccle-siasticism will monopolize our domain and force the State to take refuge in conficcation, as they have done in Mexico; for we have too many public achools for that, and are too far away from the dark ages,—but I do hold that just and equal taxation demand that these millions of dollars, belonging to Catholic, Jew-ish, and Protestant sects and societies be taxed for the support of the government that protects them. The State has no right to impose an extra tax on my neighbor's property to support my church. Let me enjow my religion as I please, but let me pay for it. Let him enjoy his as he will, reading on Sundays at home, riding in the country, walking in the woods, sailing on the lake-so long as he pays just and equal taxes, and obeys the civil laws, the State has no busi-nes to institute an inquisition into his religion, mo-rax him one cent to support a religion which is the private property of his neighbor

I demand that the State snan have the support. If the gospel I believe in has not enough back-bone to stand alone, stand without leaning against the State, then let it go down. If it does not so appeal to the reason and the conscious wants of men as to receive their voluntary support, then let the poor thing die. If it has not vitality sufficient to hold its own in the struggle of ideas, then it is either born before its time, or has outlived its time, and in either case should be supplanted by ideas that are stronger and better adapted to the changing wants of a growing age.

case should be supplanted by ideas that are stronger and better adapted to the changing wants of a grow-ing age. It is not the function of the State to "protect" re-ligion any more than it is to protect our manufactures. "Hands off," we say to the State. A fair competi-tion, an even chance, is all the Church ought to ask or ought to have. I have unbounded faith in the common sense of humanity; I have faith also in a common sense of humanity; I have faith also in a common sense of humanity; I have faith also in a common sense of humanity; I have faith also in a common sense of humanity; I have faith also in a common sense of humanity; I have faith also in a cont of the way. I believe, too, in a religion that can bear the sunlight and the storm; that needs not to be kept under glass cases, like wax flowers, to keep it from soiling, or preserved in napths, like potassium, to prevent oxidation. Such a delicate valetudinarian religion is too frail for the bracing atmosphere of our institutions. It had better emigrate. If the Church in America is to survive, it must pull its own oar and be ready to take the stroke. It must become too proud to go begging of the State; too robust and in-dependent to need government ald; too just to de-mand it; too honest to accept it. When it takes this attitude, then we may see an independent Church within a free State, and not till theo. In the early stages of "mation making," the union of Church and State, as I have pointed out, was nec-essary to the progress of each; but that stage has been passed, and we have now reached the point in our political development when a further more sea

LIST OF LIBERAL LEAGUES.

suce of a triba clan on State desended on its die I must to bearden

388

THE INDEX-AUGUST 13, 1874.

raised, and pursue independently their special lines of diversion year and to this end ict all ecclestatical, brown the set and to this end ict all ecclestatical, brown to be taxed, and I believe also the weil-far or the Charch, would result from it. At the rish of wearjing your patience I will call the rish of wearjing your patience I. will call the rish of the set of th

Bible reading as a religious service in our public schools. Catholics, Jews, and Infidels are taxed to support these schools. They must send their children to them, or incur additional expense by educating them in pri-vate schools. To many of these people, the custom of reading from the Bible in schools is offensive. Now it seems to me that to compel such persons to listen to a ceremony in schools which they are com-pelled to support is vary like a Protestant persecution of a petty sort, which we ought to be ashamed of. If you asy that such people ought to get rid of their prejudices against Bible reading, they might retort that we ought to get rid of our prejudices for it. To the Jew the New Testament is a record of a false Messiah, and contains the religion of a people who have persecuted him in every land save this since the Christian era. He is a stirct monothelst, and abhors the doctrine of the trinity of the God of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob. The book is, therefore, to him not sucred; it may be obnoxious to see it treat-

*The law in Wisconsin does not now require Bible read-ing in public schools, though the practice is still observed ed as such. He has a right to his opinion, and we ought to respect it. To the Catholic, the Bible, as read in public by a layman, a schoolmaster, one un-anointed, has been for three centuries a bated symbol anointed, has been for three centuries a hated symbol of Protestantiam. To see such a man read it is perhaps as obnoxious to him as the performance of the mass by a priest in the public school would be to a Protestant. Is it sites, it is tright thus to outrage his feelings? If you would realize how he feels, just put yoursell in his place. Imagine, you Protestants, that your children were compelled to the view of the symbol which that is called the school. You would not submit to it. Yet what harm in a little crean every thing the school in the symbol which that is crean your stands for that is hateful to you; and just even include bottome. Now, set Would not submit to it. Yet what harm in a little school is obsolved to them. Now, set Would not have the symbol of Protestant to remove his holy libble. Let us banks from such places everything that can excite hoseility and opposition to our public schools. We must preserve them. The weifare of the sate must teach the Bible in order to preserve its foundation. If this were true, then the bible is foundation. If the were true, then the bible is not its work of the source of the sate work of our might and shield of our libbry. The source of the sate is a source of our public schools is the source of use and the source of the sate as a source of use is our dependence. It is happen that the very man who would have the subset in our dependence. It is a source of our republical institutions. The source of the sate specially, you to where do you find differy so would be source of our republical institutions. The source of the sate source of our republical institutions at here the work of a source of our republical institutions in the source of the sate source of our republical institutions is the source of the sate source of our republical institutions. The source of the source of the source of our republica schools is th public-school building, "Positively no admittance is the Church here," and enforce that rule to the letter. I have already told you what, in my opinion, that rule includes. I do not for a moment flatter myself that most of you will agree with me in what I have said. I think forever keep a "discreet silence," because it is un-pleasant to find fault; built I fondly hope that there are others here who, realizing that it is necessary to find fault with terong before you can right the trong, will be willing, for the good they may do, to play the until they learn, as Mr. Maine says, "to discriminate between a rule of law and a rule of religion?" to pro-vide for just and equal taxation, and make Church and State independent. This they can do adwill do. That the entire separation of Church and State will be the final issue of this process of political sof religious fermentation and segregation going on for three centuries, I cannot for a moment doubt. All see the arrows on the map of bistory indicate the span of the times point to it. Look at the sin-see the arrows on the map of bistory indicate the would say, "Providence has willed if," because, as the provide say, "It is in harmony with the spini of our broad guil-stream, toward the final and complete sparation and independence of Church and State. There says, "It is in harmony with the spini of our laws," because, as the political ortor says. "It is manifest destiny," because, as the modern philoso-but I am not one of those of which the New Yor Nation speaks, who believe "that all will come out preason of some good luck with which Providence has endowed the race. This is the optimism of the say are of indolence or indifference. The optimism of the say, and be himself a which believes that thing will work together for good if man util work logether indicates of sold of od the streic, and an important one, in the milk of God that grind ao slow and fine. If, friends, I have set to work a little human ma-civilized man is that which believes that thing will work tog

<text>

[For THE INDEX.] CHABACTER INDEPENDENT OF BELIEF.

A BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCH OF PROFESSOE PETER ENGELMANN, OF MILWAUKEE.

ENGELMANN, OF MILWAUKEE. The time was when the acknowledgment of scepti-cism in religion was the signal for social ostracim. Avowed atheism was not only stigmatized as an opin-ion, but popular prejudice rendered impossible the avowed atheist's bueiness success. "Be politic, at least," was the advice of a church-member to a so-called infidel, some thirty years ago: "Subscribe to the church, if you cannot to its creed. It is a bread-and-butter consideration." "Better poverty than pol-icy," was the reply. "Let them hunt me down, will not be a hypocrite." And poverty was his por-tion. He was looked upon as an enemy to societ; an object of pity or boly horror; a subject of prayer, sibeit his attitude as a citizen was above reprach-bis moral integrity above suspicion. It was a bread-man or woman, then, who dared advance free thought in a Christian community. It is compare slvely easy boulay to take sides with a redoubtable have long disbelieved in the Christian dogmas, but it would not pay to say so."

"The thoughts of men are widening with the process of the would not pay to say so."

"The thoughts of men are widening with the process of the sans."
This now common to be true to conviction. The spopic of the hour cares little for the contumely cast spon him by the religionist. He steadfastly goes on, satabilishing character instead of substantiating creed, and wins at last a recognition of this apart from any church consideration. He elicits approval of deeds are trom professions, —of principle spart from professions, —it seems simply just to the cause of freedom to pay them a fitting tribute; when notable examples of auch heroism and of such recognition are known to us, who hold likerty of thought as the dearest of boons, —all the more precious for its high cost, —it seems simply just to the cause of freedom to pay them a fitting tribute; when there is the dearest of boons, —all the more precious for its high cost, —it seems simply just to the cause of freedom to pay them a fitting tribute; when there is an other to carry conviction, if possible, to the precision to the cause of the dearest of boons, —all the more precise to the curches, and that avowed "infidelity" is not inconsistent with the purest integrity; where all, in the desire to encourage, by these exemplars, all free-religionist to speak and to live their here to the dure. If need be, for the freedom they here the here the got to a substantion of the deare.
The an exemplar was the late Professor Peter Enformant, founder and principal of the German and provide dear.
Torde and free thought—always in the vanguade doarest thought; here religioned to such area the late wand read way and against the tide of public opinion, —ae worthy of winding results, may the conclusion be drawn that its provide a sow the same adding the scholarly, unselfab, where he wand the laured was also and the laured was and the laured was a sow the vanguade of this beloved teacher, this unitr taking charge of several children of whe family where be boarded. His parents were pious people, and all his sur-roundings were religious. Still, though much at-tached to his family, and gratefully attached to the clergyman of his native rilisge, he very early in life began to doubt the Christian dogmas. He was con-tinually perplexing his teachers of religion at the va-rious schools with questions like "Why?" "How could that be?" and pointing out the contradictions and impossibilities of the religious teachings. For this reason his school certificates, of various grades, always first-class and full of praise in regard to his conduct and moral character, generally contained the wish and hope that he "might become more interset-ed in matters of religious belief." Even in youth, as ever alterward, h spoke frankly whatever he thought. This outspokenness was his prominent characteristic. He entered the University of Berlin in 1343, where he studied mathematics, astronomy, and the natural sciences generally, with excellent success. The noted astronomer, Professor Encke, seems to have been favorably disposed toward him, as he employed Englemann with calculations for the Berlin Astro-nomical Annals. He was a favorite with all his schoolmates, as he was kind and generous in disposi-tion, amiable in social intercourse, and unselfish in the highest degree. He was always enthusiastically devoted to the nomical Annals. He was a favorite with all his scholmates, as he was kind and generous in disposi-tion, amiable in social intercourse, and unselfish in the highest degree. The was always enthusiastically devoted to the fause of the mential and political liberation of man-kind; and when the revolution of 1848 approached, he was one of the first agitators for liberty. He gave up the career that stood open before him, if he re-mined loyal to despotism, and published a revolu-tionary paper, which was for a time printed in an old taw mill near the Rhine. After the failure of this erolution, he, with a number of radical friends, em-igrated to the "sweet land of liberty." Trofessor Engelmann found himself working on a fin than for others who have attempted it. In 1850, he came to Milwaukee, and taught a district school bouth of the city for awhile, and then founded the Milwaukee German and English Academy. In this institution he unselfishly and devotedly labored until within a few days of his death. His labors have reaped a rich harvest in this field. In the school, and bis connection with the "National German-Amer-ican Teachers' Union," as well as by many atticles and lectures, he has done a great deal to introduce more rational methods of teaching youth, according in Petalozzi's and Frozbel's Ideas. He desired the instruction in natural science, natural history. In fact, all instruction, to be "object teaching." For the was also about to prepare a teacher's manual of mathematics. His loses to the rising generation, in this direction, can scarcely be estimated, inasmuch as his methods of teaching partock greatly of his own rational views. The results of these methods proved and strict in his classes, never, it is said, was teacher him, nor need it. And more, he has achieved a sure immortality in the thoughts of his fellow-men. The other is a secret which death's hand alone holds.

<text><text><text><text><text>

"A whisper there, a whisper here, Confirms the hope to which we cling, But still we grasp at anything, And sometimes hope, and sometimes fear.

And sometimes nope, and sometimes rear-While writing this, another sudden stroke has reached the city's heart in the death of one of its old-est, most respected citizens-Sidney L. Rood. Al-though not occupying any public position, this man has been so identified with the growth and well-being of the city that his life may worthily be compared to the one we have tried to sketch above, as he too lived and died without religions belief. It is a proof of the progress of freedom that, in a consecrated church, this man received the commendations awarded to his character with no commendations for his lack of be-lief. It is a step forward when a large-hearted,

<text>

AMBLIA A. WILLIAMS. MILWAUREE, July 10, 1874.

Hoetry.

[For THE INDEX.]

"UT AMERIS, AMABILIS ESTO."

TRANSLATED FROM THE RUSSLAN OF OZBONHALES. BY A. W. KELSEY.

The Law of Love, which long ago was given unto man, Still lives-in books | But what a need Of loving life, in word and deed, And true espound of that creed Which Christ expounded then |

Oh, that the Foundar of the Faith would come another time I hat the Founder of the Faith would co-What stern rebukes he would bestow On forms, lip-service, and the show Which lets one.Sunday's homage go As purge for six days' crime!

mockery-the Christian Church-is seen on every hand; The rich man's Lord is worshipped there; The house of God, the place of prayer, Alas, is but a plous snare Which money can command.

The Laws of Trade are held to be above the Laws Divine;

Expediency, worldly wise, A cover for deceit and lies, Is still the same, and sneering cries-"These man have drunk new wine."

Ah God, is it for ends like these that thou didst place us here ?

If Code or Pandect be a guide For hearts that would with thee abide, Christ's sermon on the mountain-side

We do not need to hear.

who live not in your belief, know this as wholly true: "Though ye have prophesied through ME, And in my name wrought wondrously, Yet will my last just sentence be, Your works I never knew."

CASH RECEIPTS.

FOR THE WEEK ENDING AUGUST B.

FOR THE WEEK ENDING AUGUST 5. E. J. Miller, 10 cents; Wm. Brunsen, 10 cents; Jno. Hen-drie, 10 cents; Wm. Brunsen, 10 cents; Jno. Hen-frey Gundrum, $3; Geo. H. Barton, 75 cents; J. W. Soam-mall, $1; Julius Kirschbaum, 75 cents; L. M. Boamison, $3; Wiley Britton, $1; H. D. Bennett, $5; J. J. Hoopes, 25 cents; McKean & Forest, 25 cents; H. D. Roman, 75 cents; W. W. Justice, $1; A. Starbird, $3; H. P. Marshall, $3; Stoger Sherman, $5; Thomas Carleton, $3; S. R. Kochler, $3; C. D. Von Vechter, $1; Jonas Hilton, $4.50; L. Kingma, $3; J. S. Kearns, $1.50; W. D. LeSeur, $1; Reuben Tomlin-son, $3; Geo. Mannfeld, $3; A. W. Kelsey, $1; A. Staphan, $5; Thomas Nye, $3; M. S. Wetimore, $3; J. R. Buchanan, $5; Thomas Nye, $3; M. S. Wetimore, $1.50; Merritt Pechaam, $3; H. S. Ware, $3; Jane Wood, $4; O. B. Froth-ingham, $30; Wm. Wiley, $10.

lightam, soo; wm. wiley, sio. All receipts of cash will be acknowledged as above, and no other receipt sent unless specially requested. Persons who do not see their remittances acknowledged within three weeks after sending, will please notify us.

who do not see their remittances acknowledged within three weeks after sending, will please notify us. N. B.--Please remit by post-office money-order, by regis-tered letter, or by draft on Boston or New York. Checks on interior banks are liable to discount, and the torm of subscription will be proportionally shortened in the credit. N. B.--Driers for Tracts or single numbers of THE In-pux which are not on hand will, if of small amount, be oth-erwise filled to the same amount without further notice. N. B.--Postage on THE HEREX is five cents per quarter, dating from receipt of the first number, payable in ad-vances at the place of delivery. N. B.--Please of delivery. N. B.--Please examine the ADDRESS and DATE on your INDEX mail-teg, and report at once any error in sither.

Google

THE INDEX-AUGUST 13, 1874.

BOSTON, AUGUST 13, 1874.

SUNDAY LECTURES .-- The Editors of THE INDEX will lecture occasionally on Sundays, if desired, within a con-venient distance of Boston.

REFERBING TO Mr. Gannett's recent striking article on "Mystery in Religion," the Independent of July 30 says: "On the whole, Mr. Gannett thinks that we had better stick to our science, and yet make up our minds not to decry mystery. We need both, and shall get along poorly enough without either. It is a most same word from the ranks of the Radicals, 12

THE AMOUNT OF FAIRNESS invested in the attacks on Free Religion that meet our eye is usually so cco-nomical, that we feel like the countryman who stopped at the Maxwell House, Nashville, for dinner. The waiter inquired what he would order, and was told to bring "something of what he had." The waiter brought him a regular dinner upon unusually small dishes, and set them round his plate. The countryman surveyed them thoughtfully for a moment, and then drily remarked, "Well, I like your samples; now bring me a dinner!"

THESE NAUGHTY RESOLUTIONS, passed by the little boys of a Pennsylvania city, show that the "spirit of '76" still breathes in the people of that doughty State, and prove that it is the right place in which to hold our banner, inscribed "Free Vacation and Boys' Rights." Second—We will go in swimming whenever we darn please, and won't come any extra shenanigan about getting our hair dry to sell the folks at home; and that we will have shirts to wear so that the big fellows won't langh at us when we are undressing and making our toilets by the sad river waves. Third—We are willing to do the square thing by our parents, but an't cut out for tending to babies, and we won't do any manual or girlual labor about home that does not properly come within boys' sphere, and not that if it interferes with the hours of play, which health demands boys should have; namely, between seven o'clock in the forenoon and nine in the after-noon, with necessary intermissions for meals. Fourth—And be it enacted that neither straps and taws, nor cowhides, nor yet slippers, will have any ef-fect in this rebellion. It they try that game, it will be good-by, John, for errands, and we shall ever pray. That's the kind of halr-pins that we are.

Recoived, That we put our best foot foremost in this great cause, and fling to the roaring hurricane our banner, inscribed "Free Vacation and Boys' Rights."

THE RECENT ATTEMPT to assassinate Prince Bismarck by a Catholic was paralleled in this country by a similar attempt by another Catholic very nearly at the same time. Rev. Henry Miller, D.D., pastor of the Fifty-first Street Baptist Church, New York, while he sat at his study desk, writing, on Sunday evening, July 19, had two pistol shots fired at him, and nar-rowly escaped with his life. He had not long before said in a sermon that the Catholics aimed a blow at his religion in trying to prevent Bible-reading in the schools; and this sermon, reported in the daily papers and attacked editorially in the New York Tablet and other Catholic publications, was the undoubted cause of the assault. We commend this terrible incident to the attention of those who believe that all danger from religious fanaticism in this country has passed by forever. Human passions are to-day exactly what they always have been; and so long as superstition survives, so long will it be willing to shed blood in its own defence. Grave questions between the Church and the Republic still remain to be settled; and he is a sanguine man, sanguine even to the verge of insanity, who believes that they can be settled without inflaming the passions of the ignorant and superstitious to a most dangerous pitch. The only hope of freedom in its struggle with Christianity lies in a quiet but inflexible resolve, cost what it may, to handcuff superstition by depriving it of all legal privilege. Look to your Liberal Leagues, you who mean to hand down to posterity the priceless inheritance of religious liberty.

THE "NEW SOCIAL REPUBLIC."

There is comparatively little danger to a staunch ship, however severe the storm, provided it has plenty of sea-room; the danger is in approaching the coast. There is comparatively little danger to any truth or trae institution, however wild the billows of free disenssion, provided it is not wrecked by the timidity that would steer it upon the rock of a fancied immunity from all examination. In this age of universal scepticism, it was to be expected that not only all political and religious, but also all social, principles and institutions would be challenged, doubted, and rejected by many. Church and State, with their fundamental ideas and their visible social ramifications, are and will be exposed to the most searching scrutiny; whatever is good will survive, whatever is evil will sooner or later perish. The foundations of morals are to be tested quite as severely as the foundations of theology or philosophy, and whatever cannot stand the test will disappear. This is all right and wise and beneficial; and no one need feel the least alarm. Where thought and speech are free, and where government is only the expression of the public will, it is idlocy to be quaking with dread lest somehow two and two shall cease to make four, or lest adultery shall be transfigured into a virtue. Truth will be truth, and good morals will be good morals, to the end of the chapter; and they will be so regarded until mankind goes "clean daft" in a lump. Let us not think the world is upside down because a few people, either viciously, conscientiously, or whimsically, choose to stand on their heads. There will necessarily be some rough weather in the voyage of free thought; but, if we are old salts, let us not get sea-sick. At all events, let us not imagine the good ship Reason is going to the bottom, or starting for the moon, merely because the motion makes green-hands giddy.

Such thoughts as these flash into the mind, when an unsuccessful war frightens France back into Catholicism, or when a great scandal case is trumpeted as the inauguration of the "new social republic." While thousands and thousands of the best citizens, both radicals and conservatives, are grieving inexpressibly at the dark cloud hanging over the head of one of America's most honored sons, we hear one voice exulting in the prospect that now the great genius and vast influence of Henry Ward Beecher will be driven to declare for "free love," and thereby carry the whole world forward into the precious millennium which that phrase suggests. We quote from a journal which probably is not seen by many of our subscribers, the Woodhull and Claffin's Weekly of August 8: "I have the power, I think, to compel Mr. Beecher to go forward and to do the duty for humanity from which he shrinks; and I should myself be false to the truth, if I were to shrink from compelling him. Whether he sinks or swims in the flery trial, the agitation by which truth is evolved will have been promoted. And I believe that he will not only survive, but that, when forced to the encounter, he will rise to the full height of the great enterprise, and will astound and convince the world of the new gospel of freedom by the depth of his experiences and the force of his argument. . . . I know, too, by inti-mate intercourse, the opinions, and, to a great extent, the lives of nearly all the leading reformatory men and women in the land; and I know that Mr. Beecher, passing through this crucial ordeal, retrieving himself and standing upon the most radical platform, need not stand alone for an hour, but that an army of glorious and emancipated spirits will gather spontaneously and instantaneously around him, and that the new social republic will have been forever established."

If we can make anything out of this hazy effusion of enthusiasm and felicitation over what, if a fact, is the most damning social disgrace of our age, it means that, if Mr. Beecher should come out boldly and defend adultery, in the abstract and the concrete, as the normal and ideal thing, he would carry the world by storm and convince all mankind that faithful, wedded love is a superstition of the past; and that a vast swarm of now timid reformers would rally about him to preach the same glorious gospel, and carry its salvation to every shore. If this is not what the Weekly means, we can make nothing out of it whatever. Now we are not unfamiliar with the spectacle of reformers somewhat pale and qualmish under the influence of the heavy ground-swell of free thought; we have occasionally witnessed very distressing scenes of spasmodic ill-health on board the stout ship Radicalism, as it ploughs its way across the ocean. But, we confeas, Mrs. Woodhull's beatific vision of the "new social republic" is the most aggravated case of sea-sickness on record. There never was, and probably never will be, a case more extreme; for she distinctly pronounces Mrs. Tilton's assumed "tender, loving, romanly concessiveness" to Mr. Beecher to be the "best and most beautiful of things, the lovellest and most divine of things which belong to the patrimony of mankind." She declares explicitly that "passional starvation" (which is her synonyme for chastity) would be in the case of such a nature as Mr. Beech-er's a "horrid cruelty." Enough!

Let no squeamish reader exclaim that utterances which are so shameless, if judged by any tolerable standard of morals, ought not to be quoted in any respectable journal. That is not true. Here is the mirror unconsciously held up to "free love," in which it may discern its own hideous features unmasked. Here is adultery held up for sympathy and admintion and applause, as a thing "divine"-yes, that is Mrs. Woodbull's own word. Here, in the face of all the unspeakable misery entailed upon all the parties to this fathomless scandal, is a challenge to the world to sanction and enact its cause as the organic law of a "new social republic." Your children and mine must grow up to hear and read such teachings on every hand; and accursed be the fastidiousness which forbears to brand them openly as devilish! While every pure heart in the land is saddened, sickened, asphyxiated, by the fetid exhalations now steaming up from the pit, it is fatuity to withhold the word of execration on the social philosophy that would foster them. Mrs. Woodhull may be personally an angel of purity, and spotless as the driven snow: we know nothing against her, and make no attack upon her character. But when she exultingly points to adultery as intrinsically "divine," and sure to be made fashionable by the assumed example of a great man (although she forgets how this same great man found himself without a follower, even in his own church, when he undertook to defend President Johnson in his treason to humanity); when she hails the bunting of a foul social ulcer as heralding the permanent and general establishment of "free love," and thus holds up universal ulcerism as the normal condition of social health,-it is time to tell her and all her sympathizers that the true name of her "new social republic" is HELL

THE BIBLE SOCIETY IN THE CAPITOL.

The fifty-eighth anniversary of the American Bible Society was held in Washington, D.C., on the evening of May 17, in the hall of the House of Representatives; which would doubtless be refused to the Free Religious Association for the holding of one of their conventions, though their claim would be quite as The receipts for the past year were $664,436.just. 06; the entire number of volumes issued during fiftyeight years was 30,972,786. Speaker Blaine opened the meeting, to add to the semi-governmental ap-pearance of the celebration. Hon, Horace Maynard called attention to the fact that a Bible lay on the Speaker's desk, and said that "the Speaker thus had for his threefold guide a copy of the Bible, a copy of the laws of the United States, and a set of rules gor-erning the House of Representatives." Professor Julius H. Seelye, D.D., of Massachusetts, who has just been appointed one of the three Commissioners in this State to report to the next Legislature on the subject of church taxation, proved his eminent fitness for this duty by saying, with reference to the statue of the Goddess of Liberty on the dome of the National Capitol, that "this statue was the real symbol of the cause of the Confederacy: the Cross was the true symbol of liberty." Such was the evident desire of this powerful Society to obtain, as far as possible, a practical recognition and indorsement of Christianity from the government of the United States-a desire, moreover, which is certainly increasing among the Protestant sects of this country.

Sprely it requires very little penetration to discern that the tendency illustrated so significantly by this meeting of the Bible Society must gain immense strength, whenever it comes into open and conscious collision with the rapidly intensifying purpose of the people to secularize the government more completely. Substantially, this growing desire of the sects to secure a governmental recognition of Christianity is identical with the avowed object of the Christian Amendment party; and it will take only a slight cause to precipitate a direct struggle between the giant forces of orthodoxy and the spirit of religious liberty for possession of the government. The Christianizers are far-seeing; they are manœuvring to occupy the commanding strategic positions in advance; and, although they are so far ahead of the main body of the orthodox army as to seem unsupported by il, events will yet prove the contrary. Protestantism will yet discera the necessity either of protecting its own vanguard or of suffering a total and annihilating When the Bible Society claims for the Bible defeat the first place among the three guides of the Speaker of the national House of Representatives, and boldly declares that the statue of Liberty ought to give place to the Cross on the dome of the Capitol, it utters the heart of the whole Protestant Church; and what are such claims and declarations but a substantial demand for the recognition of God, Christ and the Bible in the United States Constitution? Orthodory must yet unite in that explicit demand, or be extinguished in America; and when it comes to this, who doubts its choice? Yes, the Goddess of Liberty or the Cross of Christ-that is the Issuel And so long as the organized followers of the Cross hold high jubilee in the halls of Congress, while the followers of Liberty have not yet learned to stand side by side anywhere, the omens are not propitious.

390

a.

24

è,

12

35

Ł,

12

2.2

2

 $\Sigma_{i}$

25

12.

÷Ð

A CASE FOR SOCIAL SCIENCE.

What shall be done with the boy-murderer, Pomeroy, is now a question agitating the Massachusetts That the excited populace, after the discovpublic. ery of his having murdered a little girl a month be-fore he tortured to death the boy Millen, for which he is now awaiting trial, could hardly have refrained from applying Lynch law to his case, if they could have got possession of him, is doubtless true; yet it can hardly be supposed that the State of Massachusetts will deliberately hang a boy of fourteen. To do so, if not a violation of law, would be a disgrace to the enlightenment of the State and the civilization of the age. Nor ought it to be supposable that after a few years of ordinary imprisonment he will be allowed to go free. An attempt is being made, indeed, to prove that he is not a responsible agent; that he is a moral lunatic, a victim of a strange hallucination; that he is pushed to the dreadful outrages he has committed by something that may well be called a demon possessing him. A plausible story of prenatal influence was told, which seemed to bring good evidence to show that his monstrous propensity to inflict cruel torture on helpless children was impressed upon his nature before birth by the condition and acts of his mother. But this story has been completely overturned by the straightforward testimony of the mother, at the coroner's inquest, and the only thing put in the place of it is her rather fanciful belief, or surmise, that vaccination of the boy in his infancy, which appears to have produced at the time a serious and strange disease, also infected his mental nature with a kind of animal ferocity.

But even if it could be shown that Pomeroy is not a responsible being, it would not follow, as some people seem to infer, that society has no right to do anything with him. On the old theory that society punishes for crimes, such an inference might be drawn; for, where there is no moral responsibility, there can be no guilt, no crime, and no rightful punishment. But on the truer theory of dealing with criminals, which is coming into vogue, the State does not punish-at least, in any sense of awarding retribution,-but alms to protect society against harm from the criminal, and, if possible, to reform him. To say, therefore, that a human being is not a morally responsible agent, because of some defect of mental organism, does not in the least deprive society of the right of dealing with him for acts against its safety. Indeed, if a man ever loses responsibility for himself, then responsibility for him devolves upon society. At the very point where he ceases to be accountable for his own conduct, the accountability of society for his conduct begins. If there are moral lunatics, then society must take charge of them, as it does of mental lunatics, so that other persons may suffer no harm from them. And if young Pomeroy belongs to this class, he is certainly to be kept under restraint quite as much as if there were no doubt of his moral responsibility. His own plea when arrest-ed, "Put me where I cannot do such things," indicates the solution of the question, What shall be done with him ?

Yet to shut up a boy of fourteen in solitary confinement for the rest of his life, or even to put him under ordinary prison treatment, with no attempt to reform his nature, would be almost as much of a disgrace to the civilization and enlightenment of the age as it would be to take away his life. Were he a raving maniac, then, unfortunately, nothing more might be possible. But he is very far from being a raving maniac. He is described as cool, self-possessed, and as not at all lacking in intelligence. Until he made confession of his crimes, he showed a good deal of mental keenness in defending himself from the accusations made against him. And he confessed, as he says, so that his mother and brother might not be regarded as implicated in his guilt,-showing that he has some natural affection and a sense of honor. Except in the one feature of his monstrous propensity to inflict torture and death on unoffending children there appears no sign of mania or insanity about him, or even of anything strange in his nature. And that even this propensity, abnormal and horrible as it is, is not uncontrollable, is shown by his record at the Westborough Reform School. That record clearly proves that he is not wanting in mental and moral capacity, and it ought to be well considered before any theory of his moral unaccountableness be adopted. His conduct in that institution was exceptionally good, and his ability as a scholar such that he became first in his class. It was on the ground of his good conduct and his good scholarship, as Mr. Tuits, agent of the State Board of Charities, has said in his printed card, that the trustees unanimously decided that he was fit to be released. They were mistaken in this opinion, not knowing how deep seated and strong his depraved propensity was. But the grounds on which they gave their opinion-whether he was playing a part in order to secure his release, or whether, as is more likely, his good record was the result of the restraining influences of his surroundings, and of the awakening of better desires within him-show in either case that his nature is capable of being controlled by rational motives.

What, then, is the plain inference? Is it not that he should not only be put under restraint, so that he cannot gratify his strangely demoniacal disposition to cruelty, but that he should also be put under such training that the good and useful faculties of his nature may be brought into constant exercise, and, if possible, so cultivated as gradually to smother and destroy his evil passion? It is a case interesting to biological science as well as to philanthropy. If the condition of Laura Bridgman, and the possibility of educating her through the one sense of touch, excited not only the sympathy of philanthropists but the interest of philosophers, as involving important questions of psychology, so should the case of Jesse Pomeroy call forth a like twofold interest. How much can change of surroundings do towards changing the nature of such an exceptional case of depravity? Can this demon that possesses him be exorcised-not by prayer and miracle, but by scientific methods of education? Can his mental and moral nature be freed from bondage to the evil propensity that now enslaves it? Can the power of external moral influence, of personal magnetism, of appeals to worthy desires and ambitions,-in short, all the appliances of a wise mental and moral culture, be so brought to bear upon him that he can be trained from depravity to rectitude? Can he be put, not only where he "cannot do such things," but where the very desire to do them shall be extinguished and killed? These are the questions involved in his case; and they are questions not more momentous to him than they are to society. If they can be answered affirmatively, not only is he benefited, but great light will be thrown on the general problems of moral education and the treatment of .criminals, and the civilization of the race will be advanced. Let the Social Science Assoclation take him in charge with a view to answering these questions. It is at least a case for treatment according to principles of social science; a case not for ordinary policemen, nor for a purely sentimental philanthropist to deal with, but a case for philan-thropy working by scientific methods. An enlightened State should certainly by this time be able to do better for humanity than to be obliged, for the safety of society, to kill such a boy because of his crimes, or to shut him up for life as an irreclaimable monster, with no attempt to reform him. Science and civilization, no less than philanthropy, are interested in the problem of his possible reformation. W. J. P.

PARKER AND POTTER.

The following note from Dr. Bartol needs no introduction :-

MR. EDITOR:

MR. EDITOR:--I ask pardon of the living and the dead (now more alive) for this repeated conjunction of already coup-led names. But I am taken to task as judging the two men by a diverse rule, blaming Mr. Parker for refusing to go, and not Mr. Potter for inclining to

The difference is that Mr. Potter for including to stay. The difference is that Mr. Potter's name is cut off. At the time of the Parker controversy, I told my brethren, if he were expelled, I was expelled with him. In fact he continued, with occasional attend-ance, a member of the "Boton Association of Con-gregational Ministers" to the end of his days; and a resolution of special sympathy with him in his illness was debated, though not passed, at a meeting of the Theological Alumni, at which I was not present, in Cambridge; not passed because other sick clergymen of the brotherhood were thought to have equal claim. I did regret Mr. Parker's perhaps politic use of his spoke to in my sermon after his death was whether is was graceful in the circumstances to remain in a company which, by the withdrawal of its Orthodom members, had lost its proper ecclesiantical character, and become a sort of club; while the point, in Mr. Potter's case, was of membership in the entire Uni-tarian hody. Unwelcome I could nowhere a skide, nor, I think, could Mr. Potter; and his is the first exclusion by a formal act. Mr. Potteris extrusion are not the same.

tary going and Mr. Potter's extrusion are not the same. All cases are distinguished; and I need not mem-tion the many distinctions in those which my heading suggests. Mr. Parker was a born soldier. He as-sailed and ridiculed what he deemed the Christian superstitions, laughed at the "Lord's Supper," pot en "the whole armor" of trony, and was personal in the extreme. He was a politician; he was a power; he struck some unfair blows; he had an overweening schoolmaster's opinion of his own strength. Yet he was an honest man, and did a great and glorious who does not sneer or scold, strive or cry, or let his voice be heard in the streets, who neither despises nor disowns Christianity, however not culling himself Christian, and who has more scientific justness than had Mr. Parker in his theology. Mr. Potter I shrink from describing, as he would from being described. Eugénie de Guéris says: "When my brother suffers, I have a paln in my side." I know my friend would shun my praise. C. A. BAETOL

CHRISTIANITY AND, SELF-RESPECT.

This paragraph appeared in the Golden Age of July 11:-

the Hebrew religion as the Christian," Inustrating this by reference to passages in Job and Isalah. He further contends Mr. Abbot's assertion will not be proved by history, for "we have a pretty accurate ac-quaintance with John Knox. Oliver Cromwell, Siz Harry Vane, and many other Puritans who were high Calvinists, and accepted in their fulness, as dis proved by history, for "we have a pretty accurate so-quaintance with John Knox, Oliver Cromwell, Sir Harry Vane, and many other Puritans who were high Calvinists, and accepted in their fulness, as did Luther and Calvin, the doctrine so offensive to Mr. Abbot; but it does not at all appear to have lessened their manliness, or made high virtue impossible to them." Mr. Newman holds it is unreasonable for man to try to justify himself before God, but reason-able that he should be abashed by his moral imper-fections. "To put our hands on our mouths, and our mouths in the dust before Him," not in dread of pum-ishment, but in moral contrition, appears to be the gressors outwardly more guilty than ourselves. The foundation of this was hald in Judaism; Christianity has signally built upon it. has signally built upon it.

The fact that Protestants, who by our theory are only half-Christian, imperfectly illustrate the effects of Christianity in its full strength, does not at all militate against that theory; while the further fact (which Professor Newman might have stated also) that even Catholics have often shown a high degree of manliness would not militate against it, since no artificial religion can wholly crush out human nature. It remains true, nevertheless, that Christianity destroys self-respect in the exact proportion that its fundamental doctrines are consistently embodied in conviction and character; and volumes might easily be filled with slavish and pitiable professions of utter worthlessness from the llps of Christians. If Pro-fessor Newman "holds that it is unreasonable for man to try to justify himself before God," and that a grovelling attitude even before him is anything but dishonor to human nature itself, we must (with entire respect for Professor Newman) hold the contrary opinion that all human conduct which is justifiable at all is as justifiable before God as before man; and that every form of religion, Christian, Hebrew, or Pagan, which teaches men that all their "righteous ness is as filthy rags," saps the very foundation of genuine manhood, and is so far a curse to the race.

Google

Titerary Hotices.

THEODORE PARKER: A Biography. By Octavius Brooks Frothingham. Boston: J. R. Osgood & Co. 1874.

Brooks Frothingham. Boston: J. R. Osgood & Co. 1874. I had reserved for my summer reading Mr. Froth-ingham's life of Theodore Parker, and, although the book has been perhaps abundantly reviewed and criti-cised. I feel tempted to say a word on one or two points, because I think everything which helps us to a more intimate acquaintance with a life so genuine and so religious is a real good to our souls. I feel grateful to Mr. Frothingham for the review of those years, so full of work and thought and love, which show how grand life may be in any epoch and under any circumstances. And yet, when I feel how inadequate is the por-trait,—how, even in the hands of such men as Mr. Weiss and Mr. Frothingham, with every qualification for the task, and with sbundant material, a biography so poorly represents the living, acting man we once whole value of history, and to question whether we really have any genuine apprehension of Socrates, or Jesus, or Michaei Angelo, or Luther. Or does time really distil from out the heterogeneous materials of a biography the true essence of a man, so that we do know the true hero of the past better than our own contemporaries? Mr. Frothingham's work is most scrupulously fair;

<text>

Communications.

IS SUFFRACE A NATURAL BIGHT?

If the suffrage is a natural right, can the exclusion from its enjoyment of minors, foreigners, paupers, imbedies, and criminals, or any of them, be defended ? If so, on what ground? If THE INDEX believes the suffrage is not a natural right, on what ground of expediency does it favor woman suffrage, while opposing the God-in-the-Con-stitution amendment; since women constitute the mass of Christians, a class which, so far as it includes the favorers of that amendment, is identical with them?

I am not alone in considering what is duty in rela-tion to matters above suggested. JOHN FRANCIS SMITH.

WORCESTER, Mass., July 18, 1874.

[1. The right of suffrage is a "natural right," not in the sense of inhering inalienably in the individual, but in the sense of resulting necessarily from the nature of free institutions. A free country is one that is governed by the free will of the people; this will must be expressed; and suffrage in whatever form is the expression of it. But "the people" must include all who are endowed with the ordinary faculties of humanity, reason, and conscience, developed to the ordinary degree; while it cannot include any not so endowed. It is, therefore, no more irrational or unjust to withhold the ballot from children, or lunatics, or criminals, than it is to withhold it from horses; they do not possess reason and conscience sufficiently developed to give them this right. The disfranchisement of paupers and foreigners may or may not be justifiable; we cannot now discuss doubtful points, but only broad principles. It must also be admitted to be a delicate question just where to fix the practical limit between the sufficient and the insufficient development of reason and conscience. It is enough to say now that there must be some practical limit, and that the "natural right" to vote depends on the possession of a certain amount of reason and conscience. Inasmuch as this right results from the very nature of free institutions, which we all believe in as the best, it seems proper to call it a "natural" right.

2. Whether women should vote or not is a question depending on another : have they the requisite degree of reason and conscience? If so, they have a "natural right" to vote; and (for one) we concede the point at once. In candor we must confess that the majority of women would probably favor the Christian Amendment; but that is no more reason for disfranchising them than for disfranchising the male advocates of that pernicious measure. Liberty must perish in this country, unless the majority of the people, men and women together, love it enough to preserve it. If they want to be slaves, slaves let them be. We aim solely to show them what liberty is and requires, and to arouse a deeper love of it; but we would not crush the Christian Amendment movement itself by disfranchising its advocates. They would certainly disfranchise and disqualify us; but not so would we do to them. Our trust is in truth and justice alone; if it proves a broken reed, it shall not be because we have been false to it, or because we dare not grant the liberty we demand. Women have a right to vote, and that is enough, whether they use or abuse the right. It seems strange that so clear and simple a principle should not be better understood.-Ep.]

MARRIAGE CONTRACTS.

TARHIAGE CONTHACTS. To THE EDITOR OF THE INDEX:-In your remarks in THE INDEX of the 6th inst., you say: "So long as the advocates of 'free love' are perfectly free to remain unmarried, the abolition of marriage would be an interference with the liberty of these who prefer to marry." This is a mistake, as you will see upon further con-sideration. If free lovers were to demand that a law be passed forbidding marriage contracts, your re-marks would be timely and just; but they do not do have to compel contracts in marriage; which is vir-tually done by existing ensattments, which render pople who cohabit, without having contracted legally. iable to a criminal prosecution. Surely you cannot they to a criminal prosecution. Surely you cannot they there is a what free lovers are perfectly inable to a criminal prosecution. They demand that there shall be no laws affecting the relations of the sazes, thus leaving the whole matter to reg-ulate ideal under the common law of contracts, and the people to make just such contracts as they worked the same lays the sheler choice; and such a modification of public sentiment as will accord to all contracts, and to people living together without con-tracts, the same degree of respectability. [1. We are aware of no "existing ensciments" which directly or indirectly operate to "compel contracts in marriage." ' If an unmarried man and woman choose to live together, we know of no "criminal prosecution" to which they are liable; and in at least one instance we know of such a couple having lived together unmolested by the law, if not by public opinion, till just before the man's death they voluntarily married. The instances of Goethe and Christiane, and of G. H. Lewes and "George Ellot," seem to show that in Europe, also, there is no legal penalty for such an irregular connection. Why, then, should it not be said that "free-lovers are perfectly free to remain unmarried"? It is only necessary on this point to quote this sentence from Mrs. Woodhull's own "Principles of Social Freedom": "It is true that there is no enacted law compelling people to marry."

[1. We are aware of no "existing enactments"

2. But it is demanded that "there shall be no laws affecting the relations of the sexes." This is to "pass a law forbidding marriage" in effect; and we emphatically repeat that it is a direct interference with the liberty of those who prefer to marry. The abolition of any institution, of course, is the universal and most effectual prohibition of all its benefits. The marriage contract is of such a peculiar nature that it cannot be sufficiently covered or protected by any general laws of contract, inasmuch as no other contract involves the birth of new beings. There must be special laws relating to this special result of the marriage contract, to abolish which would be to inflict great wrong on all who desire this special protection,-to interfere most tyrannically with liberty in the name of liberty itself. Well might Madame Roland exclaim on the scaffold, "O Liberty, what crimes are committed in thy name!" The free-lovers, it seems, are not satisfied with their own freedom; they insist on despoiling others of theirs.

3. But the free-lovers go farther still. They "demand" such a "modification of public sentiment" as shall accord to themselves the "same degree of respectability" which is accorded to the married. Truly, a modest demand! One's opinion, it appears, is not his own; it must obey the dictates of the free-lovers. One is not allowed even the freedom of his own thought and speech by them; he must think that to be "respectable" which they declare to be such! Is there no further "demand" to be made upon us, beaides this triffing requirement to think and speak just as we are bidden? We suspect that there are some intractables who will demur at this summons to throw up their hats in honor of Mrs. Woodhull's discovery of the divine right of adultery (vide quotations in the editorial columns). They hold that, in order to be thought respectable, people should be respectable; and that the homsge paid to pure and noble lives can be diverted by no "demand" whatever to lives which are impure or ignoble. If you would be respected, extort respect by the crystalline purity of your life itself; it comes not at beck or call.-ED.]

WHAT IS REAL "FREE SPIRITUALISM !"

EDITOR INDEX :-

EDITOR INDEX:—
In your journal of July 9 is a communication headed "Free Spiritualism," signed by John Hardy, of Boston, and mainly made up of a series of resolutions passed at "Primary Council, No. 1, of University Association of Spiritualists," in that city. I have no personal acquaintance with Mr. Hardy, and only have to do with the spirit and tenor of the resolver squoted in the article, which seem to imply that many council.
The "social question" seems the great lasse in these resolvers.
To an epeak for our own part of the country when the state of liberty of speech in the minds of leave rights, as well as speakers, and surely an addience draw the large majority of the Spiritualists are to resolver.
To can epeak for our own part of the country when the seat of liberty of the Spiritualist are dissusted with this question, as discussed from the "Woodhuil" standpoint. Audiences heave rights, as well as speakers, and surely an addience to say anything, anywhere, anyhow, and at any impropriety, and an absence of vulgarity in such may for instance, not long ago I was at a large meeting of Spiritualists and other liberal people, and a woman, wo resent, and was asked to speak by the officers of the meeting,—who did not approve her views, but wey resent, and was asked to speak by the officers of the meeting,—who did not approve her views, but wey resent, and was asked to speak by the officers of the meeting,—who did not approve her views, but wey resent, and was asked to speak by the officers of the meeting,—who did not approve her views, but wey and an absence of addressing heavy resent, and was asked to speak by the officers of the meeting,—who did not approve her views, but wey and an absence of a mariage laws, but by coarse and vulgariant and and the riber of the state of the state of the state of the meeting, and who approve her views, but wey and an absence of a mariage laws, but by coarse and vulgariant and the resolves of the state of the state of the state of the state of the guage, simply any means to the Spiritualists are not now I assert that while the Spiritualists are not faultless by any means, for they are human, yet they have no wish or aim to narrow or dwarf real freedom of discussion; but, in many cases, they will not sub-ject themselves to hear coarse and vulgar language, or independent savitiments.

ject themserves to near tous of the you published THE Indecent sentiments. You can remember that, while you published THE INDEX at Toledo, you were repeatedly asked by so-

392

A CLERGYMAN went to a hotel to order a dinner for a number of clerical friends. "May I ask, air," demanded the waiter gravely, "whether the party is High Church or Low Church?" "Now, what on earth," cried the clergyman, "do my friends' opinions matter to yon?" "A great deal, sir," rejoined the waiter." If High Church, I must provide more wines; if Low Church, more wittles."

cieties of Spiritualists to address them, and freely give your opinions; for they expected of you dignity, propriety, and earnestness. Had you galned a repu-tation for vulgar coarseness, you would have had no such invitations; and societies will discriminate in that way, and should. I have heard the whole ques-tion of marriage and parentage freely and searchingly discussed in meetings of Spiritualists, years ago, by Henry C. Wright and others; but in a reverent and lofty spirit, above all vulgar thought, or immoral tendency. In any audience of a like kind, I think a like discussion would be welcomed to-day; but that is one thing, and the crude and coarse speech of later self-styled "social reformers" is another. The claim to be eminently "pure" or "respectable" made in the resolutions, against such as do not care to encourage or endorse what they hold to be not only erromeous in idea but exceptionable and faulty in its presenta-sion, needs only to be put in its true light to be seen as shallow and ill-timed. Tour limited space calls for brevity, and I bear this

221227222

A A A

05 「日本 ١h., ie. $25 B

123 100 117 8-TN r

14 in in

ite

ile-

05

112

4:1 6. Ū. Ver 3.14 Ma 702 13  $\mathcal{C}_1$ 05 3

1.5

11

(h)35 1,2

12

As shallow and ill-timed. Your limited space calls for brevity, and I bear this in mind, and have condensed in briefest possible lan-guage my refutation of these grave and mistaken charges in the resolves you publisb. Yours truly, G. B. STEBBINS. DETROIT, Mich., July 26, 1874.

JUSTICE TO MRS. WOODHULL.

BEAVER, BEAVEB Co., Pa., June 23, 1874.

IDURTICE TO MARS, WOULDARD, 1999.
IDURTICE TO MARS, 1999.
IDURTICE TO MARS,

[We very carefully read Mrs. Woodhull's Principles of Social Freedom, when first published, and we have derived our understanding of her theories from herself, as will appear from the editorial columns,--ED.]

DID CHURCHES OWN SLAVES?

EDITOR OF THE INDEX:

DID CHURCHES OWN SLAVES' EDITOR OF THE INDEX:--One of your readers asked me what I meant, in a former letter, by churches owning slaves? This only, slavery telling its own story. A slave-holder's journal of best repute, the Charleston, S.C., Courier, of February 12, 1836, contained the following Illumining advertisement:--"Field Negroes-by Thomas Gadsden.-On Tuesday, the 17th instant, will be sold at the north of the Ex-change, at ten o'clock A. M., a prime gang of TwEN-TY-SEVEN NEGBOES, accustomed to the culture of cotton and provisions, belonging to the Independent Church in Christ Church parish." The Savannah, Ga., Republican, of March 13, 1845, advertised a sale of slaves which ended thus:--"Also, at the same time and place, the following negro slaves: Charles, Peggy, Antoinette, Dary, Ma-ria, Jenny, and Issac, levied on as the property of Henry T. Hall, to satisfy a mortgage, f. f.a, issued of Directors of the Theological Seminary of the Saynd of Directors of the Theological Seminary of the Saynd of South Carolina and Georgia versus said Henry T. Hall. Conditions of sale cash. (Signed) "C. O'NEAL," "Deputy Sheriff of McIntosh County." It was Pani, I think, writing to some Corinthian synod or presbytery, who asked: "Dare any of you, having a matter against another, go to law before the migat"" But what would Faul asy to a suit like this, brought by the uirectors of a theological semi-nary, involving a seven-fold sale of their Lord Jesus Christ in the persons of seven of his weak and help-less children! Rev. J. Cable, writing to the Mercer Luminary (I motor from a book, not having the paper at hand from less children! Rev. J. Cable, writing to the Mercer Luminary (I quote from a book, not having the paper at hand from which to date), says he lived eight years in Virginia, received his college education at Hampden Sydney College and Union Theological Seminary, and that "the college church held slaves enough to pay their pastor a thousand dollars a year, the church members paying not one cent." The slaves, he said, had been left by a pious mother in Israel, and had increased so as to be a large and still accumulating fund. These slaves were let out on Christmas days, for the ensuing year, to the high-est bidder, whose interest of course was, as was un-deratood, to get what work was possible out of them at least expense. Mr. Cable gave also the names of four other churches and their pastors, in that peighborhood, who were supported in whole or in part in similar man-ner; in one of which churches a Mr. Turner preached, "and used to electrify the State with his eloquence." I have other instances of this church economy by brokerage in the blood and bones, bodles and souls of slaves, it o support the gospel and buy baker's bread and grocer's wine for sacramental suppers; but these will suffice for the present. My next letter may give some account of what our Southern slave system was by its own testimony: its is aws and its own newspapers, political and religious, being the principal witnesses. PARKER PILLSBURY. CONCORD, N. H., August, 1874.

PARKER PILLSBURY.

CONCORD, N. H., August, 1874.

A DEBATE IN HOSPITALLEB HALL

No one has seen all the "institutions" of Boston who has not visited the Hospitaller-Hall Sunday debates.

There, or at some similar place, have the lovers of polemics weekly met for upwards of forty years, and engaged in the discussion of all manner of subjects, especially those pertaining to religion and philosophy. It thrives alike summer and winter, and no day is too stormy, too warm, or too cold to prevent the attend-ance of enough of the staunch and sturdy controver-sialists, or the securing of a successful meeting. For the last five or six weeks, one of the sessions each Sunday has been devoted to the discussion of the question whether or not the study of science leads to the rejection of Christianity. Feeling an interest in the subject, I have attended these discussions quite regularly, being curious to see how Christianity would deal with its most formidable foe. There, or at some similar place, have the lovers of foe

Christianity was defined by the leading debater on the Christian side as "belief in the divine inspiration

Among the points made by them, I noticed the fol-lowing:— I. That the Bible states explicitly that God "made light," and, after having done so, "divided it from the darkness;" while science has shown that darkness is but the absence of light, and, since they were never united, they never could have been divided. 2. That the Bible states that "God made the firma-ment, and divided the waters which were under the firmament from the waters which were above the firmament." etc.; while science has shown that there is no such firmament.

firmament," etc.; while science has shown that there is no such firmament. 3. That the Bible teaches that the sun, moon, and stars had none of them an existence until after the earth was formed; while science bas shown that many of them existed long anterior to the earth. 4. That the Bible states that there were three days of successive light and darkness on the earth before the sun, moon, and stars had an existence; while sci-ence teaches us that no such days could occur with-out the sup. out the sun.

That the Bible states that the sun, moon, and stars were made for the purpose of giving light upon the earth; while science has shown that many of the stars are so remote as to be perceived only by power-the earth; while science has shown that many of the stars are so remote as to be perceived only by power-ful telescopes. B. That the Bible states that grass, herbs, and fruit-trees flourished upon the earth before the sun had an existence? while science has shown that such prod-ucts are dependent on the sun for their existence. 7. That the Bible teaches that every kind of vege-table life that ever existed on the "face of the earth" was made before fish and fowls, and every kind of fish and fowl before beasts and cattle, and every kind of beast before man; while all scientific men agrees that such was not the case. For instance, there are epecies, genera, and orders of plants that could not have existed until animal life had been upon this planet thousands of years; and new species of all classes of organic life have been continuously appéar-ing from time to time, being sither the result of many special acts of creation ordersolopments from previous existing species. Authorities: Hugh Miller, Dawson, Hitchcock, Lyell, and others. 8. That the Bible teaches that the race of man has been upon this planet less than six thousand years; while science teaches that the first woman was made from a rib of the first man; while no scientist will admit the truth of the statement. 10. That the Bible teaches that there was a univer-sal deluge on the face of the earth, which dentroyed "everything wherein was the breath of life," except

10. That the Biole ceaches that there was a univer-sal deluge on the face of the earth, which destroyed "everything wherein was the breath of life," except Noah and those who were with him in the ark; while science teaches that there was no such deluge. An-thorities: Burkland, Pye Smith, Miller, Hitchcock, and othere.

thorities: Burkland, Pye Smith, miner, intertoca, and others. 11. That the Bible teaches that either the sun or the earth, or both, stood still at Joshua's bidding, that the day might be lengthened to complete the slaughter of a hostile army; while science shows that no such event could have occurred without disarrang-ing the whole order of the universe. Authorities: Tyndall, and others. 12. That the Bible teaches miracle and the efficacy of prayer; while both doctrines are being abandoned for that of the eternity and immutability of law. Authorities: Tyndall, Huxley, Carpenter, and many others. others.

These are some of the more important points made by the radical side of the house, though not by any means all that were made; being the first to recur te my mind they will serve as a sample of what the Christian defenders had to meet.

means all that were made; being the first to recur te my mind they will serve as a sample of what the Christian defenders had to meet. It devolved upon them, of course, either to deny what their opponents claimed the Bible taught, or deny what they claimed science taught, in each of show some raitonal mode of harmonizing them, of course it is not fair to expect impossibilities; but must confees that I felt disappointed that the defend-ers of the "divinely inspired Book" did not at least and the "divinely inspired Book" did not at least source pursued by them was quietly to ignore these sill continue to call themselves Christiane, notwith-sing capital out of the fact that may scientific mea-tify reject that probably no same man would depute. Such scientists as Prof. Carpenter, who ut-ter y reject that probably no same man would depute. Such scientists as Prof. Carpenter, who ut-ter y reject miracle, were named by even the most orthodox of the Christian speakers, to show that the slift of science had not led them from Christianity. Toristian defenders," and by all implifiedly, that be-blef in the story of the misculous power and divine and errors which had "clustered around," this tan defenders," and by all implifiedly, that be-slift and errors which had "clustered around," this tain world shall have accepted this position, and and errors which had "clustered around," this tain world shall have accepted this position, and and errors which had "clustered around," this tain world shall have accepted this position, and and errors which had "clustered around," this tain world shall have accepted this position, and and errors which had "clustered around," this tain world shall have accepted this position, and and errors which have divine the fourt, and the first the tait is and the first and the story of the single chains and the story of

IS PRAYER RATIONAL?

"He prayeth best who loveth best All things both great and small; For the dear God who loveth us, He made and loveth all."

Represent heat who loveth best All things both great and small; Both the made and loveth all." Is prayer a rational act? It is of no use to attempt for make it rational to the intellect; a man who lives in heart does not — it feels the truth. A Being answer-ing to an Infinite Intelligence has never revealed himself to the human intellect. One of Mr. Froth-ingham's critics assays: "It would seem, then, that his opposed to all shams, and therefore I object to this not prayer consists in the indugence of certain opposed to all shams, and therefore I object to this ind of pleasant musing being called prayer." "Do not," says he again, "let us call this pleasant indu-gence in emotions, when there is no petition, no sup-ind from which no favors are expected in return, do not let us call this prayer." Well, "a rose by any other and from which no favors are expected in return, do not let us call this prayer." Well, "a rose by any other and will smell as aweet." the heat will be performed; it is instituetive to pray. The heart will pray to the intermediate in the universe! How the intellect pricks in the laws of the universe! How the intellect pricks in the laws of the universe! How the intellect pricks are will smell as aweet." the act will be performed; in the laws of the universe! How the intellect pricks are the word de avoid of reality. "To not. There is something the realises in the souther were thick and our duman nature, where how do not getit, or do not expect it, or always have had it, and know we ahall get it whether we sake of it or not. There is something that prompt the intellect roots. "It puts on no airs, offers no expla-mand do heave to thes? Or hast thou seen the south we do not getit, or do not expect it, or always have had it, and know we ahall get it whether we sake of the morning since thy days, and caused the dayspring to know its place? Have the gates of dayspring to know its place? Have the gates of dayspring to know its place? Have the gates of dayspring to know its place? Have the gates of "Help me, Cassius, or I sink." The arisen world, that is, the world of spirits still active in mundane matters, are still on praying ground, if they are "over the river;" and some see a rationality in prayer in that connection who would not otherwise. It would be pleasant to extend this paper into that department, but that would, and per-haps may, make an article of itself. J. WETHERBER.

THE INDEX -- AUGUST 13, 1874.

Advertisements. THE PATRONAGE LEADING INDEX WRITERS.

A the liberal advertising public is respect-tickly solicited for This INDEX. The attempt will be honestly made to keep the advertis-ing pages of The INDEX in entire harmony which its general character and principles, and these to furnish to the public an advertising mediam which shall be not only profitable to be parones, but also worthy of their most profile advertisements, all quack adver-tements, and all advertisements believed be be fraudulent or unjust to any one, will be excluded from these columns. No cuts will be admitted. This INDEX must not be held responsible will in all cases accept the responsibility for Det own statements.

ADVERTISING RATES.

-	12		-	·	10-		-
12	54	10	12	Insertions,	800	Per	11 He.
86	30	66	51	56	6	64	86
46	52			66	5	6.6	66

On half-column advertisements, a discount of to per cent. will be made; on full-column advertisements, a discount of 25 per cent. On all advertisements for which cash is paid in advance, a further discount of 25 per cent. on the total, as above calculated, will be made. FRANCIS E. ABBOT, Editor.

CIRCULATE | Circulate ! | Circu-Viate THOSE PETITIONS. Don't feel satis-feel when your petition is a yard long, unless you have aaked every one to sign it. Get good, influ-within pamea.

GET EVERYBODY.

Don't neglect to show the petition to any one, because he is a stockholder in some church, or wher exempted property, as many such persons simil the justice of the demand; and those who will not should be made to take the responsibility Don't delay! We want the petitions returned writy. rly

Fer order of EXEC. COMM. of the BOSTON LIBEBAL LEAGUE.

ULTURED FREE THOUGHT.

The Index Association,

OFFICE, NO. 1 TREMONT PL., BOSTON, has been organized with a capital stock fixed at ONE HUNDRED THOUSAND dollars, for the of publishing Tracts, Books, and

THE INDEX,

A Weskly Paper devoted to Free and Ration Religion.

It is the object of THE INDEX to give public atterance to the boldest, most cultivated, and hest matured thought of the age on all religions questions, and to apply it directly to the social and political amelioration of society.

It is edited by FRANCISE. ABBOT, assisted by ABRAM W. STEVENS, with the following list of Laitertal Contributors :-

D. B. FROTHINGHAM, New York City. THOMAS W. HIGGINSON, Newport, R.I. WILLIAM J. POTTER, New Bedford, Mass WILLIAM H. SPENCER, Haverhill, Mass. RICHARD P. HALLOWELL, Boston, Mass. Hies. E. D. CHENEY, Jamaica Plain, Mass. ZEV. CHARLES VOYSEY, London, England. FROF. FRANCIS W. NEWMAN, London, Eng.

Every liberal should subscribe for THE INDEX, as the best popular exponent of Religious Liberalum. Every Christian minister, and every thinkmg church-member, should subscribe for it, as the clearest, most candid, and most scholarly exposition of the differences between Free Thought and Evangelical Christianity, and as the beat means of becoming well informed of the arguests and the movements which the Church will lave to meet in the future.

Almost every number contains a discourse or eding article, which alone is worth the price of sme year's subscription.

Prof. MAX MUELLER, of Oxford, England, in a letter to the Editor published in THE INDEX for January 4, 1872, says: "That the want of a journal entirely devoted to Beligion in the wideet sonse of the word should be feit in America-that such a journal should have been started and so worfully supported by the best minds of your mtry,-is a good sign of the times. There is no such journal in England, France, or Germany; sugh the number of so-called religious or themogical periodicals is, as you know, very large." and later still : "I read the numbers of your IN-DEX with increasing interest."

Send $3.00 for one year, or 75 cents for three months on trial. Address

THE INDEX. No. 1 Tremont Place, Boston. GOOD PHOTOGRAPHS 1 07 O. B. FROTHINGHAM, T. W. HIGGINSON, W. J. POTTER, W. H. SPENCER, F. W. NEWMAN,

CHAS. VOYSEY, A. W. STEVENS, F. E. ABBOT,

Are now for sale at the office of THE INDEX. are now for sale at the once of THE INDEX, and will be mailed postpaid to any address on receipt of price. Single Photographs, 20 cents each; complete Set of Eight Photographs, $1.50. THE INDEX. Address.

•		20	ares	ю,				10 11
1		1	No.	1 T	remon	t PL	ace,	Bost	ton,	Ma	85.
	T	N	D	F	x	т	R	A	C	Т	8.

No. 1.-Truths for the Times, by F. E. Abbot, contains the "Fifty Affirmations" and "Modern Principles." Ma. CHARLES DARWIN, author of "The Origin of Specles," says, in a letter to the editor not orig-inally intended for publication, but subsequently authorized to be used : "I have now quently authorized to be used: "I nave now read "Inuths FOR THE TIMES, and I admire them from my inmost heart; and I agree to almost every word." New Edition. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00.

No. 2.-Fear of the Living God, by 0. B. Frothingham, exposes the debasing char-acter of the popular notions of God, and presents conceptions of him that are wor thy of the nineteenth century. New Edi-tion. Price 5 cents; 12 copies 50 cents.

No. 8.-Lecture on the Bible, by the Rev. Charles Voysey, of England, is an over-wheiming demonstration of the imperfections and errors of the Bible, both in the Old and the New Testaments. New Edition. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00.

No. 4.—Christian Propagandiam, by F. E. Abbot, is an exposure of the weakness, costliness, and inefficiency of the System of Foreign Missions. Full of Figures, Facts, and Interesting, Extracts. Price 19 cents; 12 copies $1.00.

No. 5 .- "God in the Constitution," by Rev. Arthur B. Bradford, opposes the pro-posed Theological Amendment to the Unit-ed States Constitution. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00.

No. 6.-""The Sabbath," by Parker Pillsbury, denounces Sabbatarian superstition New Edition. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00.

No. 7.-44Compulsory Education,<sup>33</sup> by F. E. Abbot, maintains the right of every child to be educated, and the duty of the State to ensure it an education. Price 5 cents; 12 copies 50 cents.

No. 8.-The Present Heaven, by O. B. Frothingham, treats of a subject that in-terasts everybody. New Edition. Price 5 cents; 12 copies 50 cents.

No. 9.—The Christian Amendment, by F. E. Abbot, shows the dangerous charac-ter of the attempt to interpolate the Evan-gelical Christian Creed in the U. S. Constitution. Price 5 cents; 12 copies 50 cents.

No. 10.-The Impeachment of Christi-anity, by F. E. Abbot. Fourth Ten Thou-sand. Sent for free distribution to any one who will distribute it, in packages of from five to one hundred copies.

No 11 .- The God of Science, by F. E. Ab-bot, attempts to show the real influence of modern science upon the idea of God. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00.

No. 12.-Is Romanism Beal Christianity1 Two essays by Francis W. Newman and F. E. Abbot. Price 19 cents; 12 copies $1.00.

No. 13 .- On the Vision of Heaven, by Prof. F. W. Newman, of England, analyz the Christian conception of Heaven. Price 5 cents; 12 copies 50 cents.

No. 14. - A Study of Beligion: The Name and the Thing, by F. E. Abbot, attempts to show that the popular deriva-tion of the word Beligion is incorrect; that the popular conceptions of Beligion itself are inadequate; and that a new conception of it based on the Law of Evolution, comare insucequize; and that a new conception of it, based on the Law of Evolution, con-sistent with absolute Freedom of Thought; and independent even of belief in God, is the necessary condition of the perpetuity of Religion among men. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00. Address

THE INDEX, 1 TREMONT PLACE, Boston, Mass.

THE INDEX. A Weekly Journal

7

DEVOTED TO

FREE RELIGION. PUBLISHED BY THE INDEX ASSOCIATION,

> 4.7 No. 1 Tremont Place, Bost

EDITOR: FRANCIS ELLINGWOOD ABBOT. ASSOCIATE EDITOR:

ABRAM WALTER STEVENS. EDITORIAL CONTRIBUTORS:

O. B. FROTHINGHAM, New York City. T. W. HIGGINSON, Newport, B.I.

W. J. POTTER, New Bedford, Mass.

R. P. HALLOWELL, Boston, Mass. MRS. E. D. CHENEY, Jamaica Plain, Mass.

F. W. NEWMAN, England.

CHARLES VOYSEY, England.

THE INDEX aims-

To increase general intelligence with respect to religion :

To foster a nobler spirit and quicken a higher purpose, both in society and in the indi-vidual:

To substitute knowledge for ignorance, right for wrong, truth for experstition, free for alwey, character for creed, catholicity for bigotry, love for hate, humanitarianism for sectarianism, devotion to universal ends for absorption in selfish schemes

In brief, to hasten the day when Free Relig-ion shall take the place of dogmatism and ecclesisaticism throughout the world, and when the welfare of humanity here and now shall be the aim of all private and public activities.

In addition to its general objects, the prac-tical object to which THE INDEX is specially devoted in the ORGANIZATION OF THE LIBERALS OF THE COUNTRY, for the purpose of securing the more complete and con-sistent secularization of the political and ed-ucational matitutions of the United States. The Church must give place to the Republic in the affections of the people. The last vestiges of ecclesiasiteal control must be wiped out of the Constitutions and Statutes of the several States in order to bring them into harmony with the National Constitution. To accomplish this theore, the Themas To accomplish this object, the Liberals must make a united demand, and present an unbroken front, and the chief practical aim of THE INDEX will be henceforth to organize a great NATIONAL PARTY OF FREEDOM. Let every one who believes in this movement give it direct aid by helping to increase the circulation of THE INDEX.

SPECIAL FEATURES.

The publication of a valuable leading p per or essay of a thoughtful character, in each issue, will continue to be one of the most marked features of THE INDEX. Regular editorial contributions will continue to be furnished by the well-known em-inent writers who have already done so much inent writers who have already done so much to give to THE INDEX its present high position. Mr. Voyser has kindly connected to furnish every fortnight a LONDON LETTER containing matters of general interest to rad-ical readers. Other interesting correspond-ence, communications, extracts from value-ble books and periodicals, and miscellaneous articles, will also be published; and such improvements will be made from time to time as circumstances shall render possible.

AGENTS.

Local Agents for THE INDEX are wanted in every city and town throughout the coun-try. The most liberal terms are offered.

TERMS.

The price of THE INDEX is Three Dol-The price of THE INDEX IS Three Bon-lars a year, payable in advance; and at the same rate for shorter periods. All remit-tances of money must be at the sender's risk, unless forwarded by cheque, registered lot-ter, or post-office money order. The name, with address in full, must be accompanied with the money in acch case with the money in each case. Address THE INDEX.

No. 1 Tramunt Place, Boston.

PUBLICATIONS. 4.

OF THE

FREE

RELIGIOUS

ASSOCIATION.

Report of the Addresses and other Proceedings of the Original Way Report of the Addresses and other Proceedings of the Original Meet-ing in 1867, at which the Free Heligious Association was organ-ized. Containing addresses by 0. Broch-ingham, Henry Blanchard, Lucretis Mett Robert Dale Owen, John Weiss, Oliver John-son, F. E. Abbot, D. A. Wasson, T. W. Hig-ginson, and Ralph Waldo Emerson.

(This pamphlet has not been on sale for a number of years, and many persons who have all of the Annual Reports succeeding do not possess this.) Price 50 cents.

Proceedings of Second Annual Meet-ing, 1869. 50 cents. Contains essays by Julia Ward Howe on "Freedom and Bestraint in Religion," and by David A. Was-son on "The Relation of Social Science to Beligion," and speeches by O. B. Frothing-ham, Jesse H. Jones, F. E. Abbot, Wm. Den-ton, R. W. Emerson, Mary Grew, C. A. Bartol, A. M. Powell, H. B. Blackwell, Rowland Connor, Lucy Stone, Horace Seaver, and others; with an appendix on "Outlines of Judaism" by Rabbi Wise.

Proceedings of Third Annual Meet-ing, 1870. 80 cents. Contains essays by O. B. Frothingham on the "Idea of the Free Religious Association," followed by addresses by D. A. Wasson on "The Nature of Beligion," by Mrs. E. D. Cheney on "Es-ligion as a Social Force, especially in relation to Philanthropy and Reform," and by F. E. Abbot on "The Future of Religious r. E. ADDOT ON "THE FURTHE OF REINOUS Organization, as affected by the Spirit of the Age;" an easay by Samuel Johnson on "The Natural Sympathy of Religions," fol-lowed by Rabbi Wise on "The Permanent and Progressive Elements of Judaism," by T. W. Higginson on "Mohammedanism," T. W. Higginson on "Mohammedanism," by Wm. H. Channing on "The Religions of China," and Wm. J. Potier on "Religion Old and New in India;" also abstract of a discussion on "The Bible in the Fublic Schools," by Thos. Vickers, S. R. Calthrop, Rabbi Wise, and others.

Proceedings of Fifth Annual Meet-ing, 1872. 35 cents. (Four or more, 25 cents each.) Contains easays by J. W. Chadwick on "Liberty and the Church in America," by C. D. B. Mills on "Religion as America," by C. D. B. Mills on "Religion as the Expression of a Permanent Sentiment of the Human Mind," and by O. B. Froth-ingham on "The Religion of Humanity," with addresses by Rowland Connor, Cella Burleigh, Lucretia Mott, A. B. Alcott, C.A. Bartol, Horace Seaver, Alexander Loos, and others and others.

Proceedings of Sixth Annual Meet-ing, 1873. 35 cents. (Four or more, 26 cents esoh.) Contains essays by Samuel Johnson on "Freedom in Religion," and by John Weiss on "Religion in Freedom," with addresses by Wm. C. Gannett, Robert Dale Owen, T. W. Higginson, Samuel Longfel-low, J. S. Thomson, F. E. Abbot, and Lu-oratis Meet. cretia Mott.

Sympathy of Beligions, by T. W. Hig-ginson. 25 cents.

Religions of China, by Wm. H. Chapning. 25 cents.

Season and Revelation, by William J. Potter. 10 cents.

Taxation of Church Property, by Jas. Parton. 10 cents, singly; package of ten, 60 cents; of one hundred, $3.

These publications are for sale at the office of the Free Religious Association, No. 1 Tremont Place, Boston. The Annual Reports for 1868 and 1871 cannot be supplied, and the supply of others previous to that of 1873 is quite limited. Orders by mail may be addressed either "Free Religious Association, No. 1 Tremont Place, Boston," or to the Secretary, New Bedford, Mass. WM. J. POTTER, Sec. F. R. J.

POFULAR BOOKS. SENT BY MAIL AT

PUBLISHERS' PRICES!

ORDERS PROMPTLY FILLED.

NO EXTRA CHARGE FOR POSTAGE.

ANT BOOK in the subjoined List, or any other OBTAINABLE BOOK that may be desired, will be forwarded as promptly as possible on receipt of orders accompanied with the CASH.

are respectfully selicited for

all friends of THE INDEX.

LCOTT (LOUISA M). Little Women. Two ARABIAN NIGHTS' ENTERTAINMENTS. 1.50 ARNOLD'S (MATTHEW) Besays in Oriti-cism. New Pooms. Litersture and Dogma. . 2.00 AUGREACH (BERTROLD), On the Heights. 1.20 Ville Zden; The Country-House on the Bhine. 1.00 Edsiwelse. 1.00 German Tales. 1.00 BACON'S Essays ..... 1.00 BARTLETT'S Familiar Quotations ...... 1.00 2.00 -34 -51 .08 CERVANTES' Don Quizote...... 1.5 CHANNING (WM. ELLERY). Thoreau: The Post Naturalist, With Memorial Verse, 2.06 1.50 CLARRE (JAMES FREEMAN), Ten Great Religions Common.Renas in Religion Religions 2.00 Common-Sense in Religion...... 2.00 CLARKE (Dr. E. H.) Sex in Education...... 1,23 .72

1.75

OON WAY I (MONCURE D.) The Earthward Pligrinage. OORRELATION and Conservation of Forces: A Series of Expositions by Grove, Helm-bels, Mayer, Paraday, Liebig and Carpen-ter: with an Introduction by Edward L. Toumans, M.D. 1vol.

CULTURE DEMANDED BY MODERN LIFE, its True Aims and Requirements A Series of Addresses. By Tyndsil, Hux-ley, Whewell, Faraday, Spencer, Draper, Masson, Lyell, etc. Edited by Edward La Tournand.

DALL (Mas. CAROLINE H), The College, the Market, and the Court: or, Woman's Relation to Education, Employment, and Gitsenship.

1.1

Historical Pictures Elatonabed; a Volume of Mianulanios. In byo paris. Part L. "Studies, Pictures, and Pancies" The Life of Dr. Marie Zakrzewska, being s. Practical Illustration of "Woman's Bights to Labor". How Line Loved Lie King. IMERSON'S (R. W.) Resays. First Series. Messys. Second Series. Miscellanies Experiment and the Conduct of Life. Poetna. With Portrait. May-day and Char Piecos. Escays. Blue and Gold. Poetna. Wite and Gold. Prose Works. 3 vols. Bociety and Solitude EVANS (E. P., Ph. D). Pirst Historical Transformations of Christianity. From the Franch of Athanase Coquerei the Younger. The Life and Works of Gotthold Ephraim The Life and Works of Gotthold Ephraim Leasing. Translated from the German of Adolf Bishr. 2 vol. FARBAR'S Oritical History of Free Thought, in reference to the Christian Religion ...... 2 FEUERBACH (LUDWIG.) The Essence of Christiaulty. "George Ellot's" translation, 3.00 FISKE'S (JOHN) Myths and Myth-Makers.. 2.00 PROTHINGHAM (O. B.) Religion of Humanity Beliefs of the Unbelievers Oblid's Book of Religion Life of Theodore Parker..... FULLER'S (MABGARET) Complete Works, including Memoirs by Emerson, Channing, and others. A new edition. 5 vois GALTON (FRANCIS.) Hereditary Genius, An Inquiry into its Laws and Conse-quences..... GROTE'S LIFE. Complied from Family Doc-uments, Private Memorands, and Original Letters to and from Various Friends. By Mrs. Grots. Second Edition, With Por-trait BAMERTON (PHILIP G.) A Painter s Camp. Book II. In England. Book II. In Bootland. Book III. In France. Thoughts about Art. The Unknown River. The Intelloctual Life Chapters on Animals. 1.00 2.00 8.00 2.00 HAMILTON (GAIL), Child World, Part Sec. A LOGICAL LOCURES HA WTHORNE'S (NATHANIEL) Works. New Ulinstrated Library Edition. Nine yols. Yer yol Yer yol Twice-Toid Tales. Mosses from an Old Manses. The Scarlet Letter, and The Bithedale Bornace. The BCarles Letter, and an entry Romance to the Seven Gables, and The Snow Imagn. The Marble Faun. The English Noto-Books. The American Noto-Books. The Frank and Italian Note-Books. Our Old Home, and Septimizs Felton. HIGGINSON'S (T. W.) Out-Door Papers ... Malbons. An Oldport Romance........ Army Life in a Black Regiment ....... Oldport Days 2.00 HUGO'S (V.) New Novel. " 'Ninety-Three"., 1.75
 Stadlase for Stories
 1.23

 Shorles told to a Child. First and Second 1.23
 1.24

 Boorles told to a Child. First and Second 1.24
 1.24

 Mopsa the Fairy A Story
 1.25

 Poor Matt; or, The Clouded Intellect
 .60

 INGERSOLL'S (ROBT, G.)
 The Gods and Other Lectures

 2.00
 .00

JOHNSON'S (SAMUEL) Oriental Religions, and their Relation to Universal Religion. India 8.00

JOSEPHUS. The whole Works of Flavius Josephus, the Jewish Historian. JOWETT. The Disiognes of Plato. Trans-1.0

lated into English, with Analysis and Iniro-ductions by H. Jowett, M.A., Master of Balliol College, Oxford, and Regus Pro-fessor of Greak. Four vols. REBR (ORPREUS C). Versatlittes, Poems, Patriotic, Sentimental and Humprons..... 2.00

tus to Charlemagne, 2 vols ..... 6.00

3.00 LEWES (G. R.) The Story of Goethe's Life. 1.50

LEWIN (REV. BAPHAEL, D'C). What is Ju-daism 7 or, a Few Words to the Jowe...... 1.00

LOWELL (MES. A. C.) Posies for Children. 78 LUBBOCK (SIR JOHN). Origin of Civilia-tion, and the Primity's Condition of Man. 200 Fre-bistoric Times. 500

YELL'S Principles of Geology. 2 vols...... 8.00 Elements of Geology

MACDONALD (GEORGE.) The Vicar's Daughter. 1.50

Daughter Construction of the set of Horses 1.50 MANN (HORACE). The Life of Horses 2.00 Lectures and Annual Reports on Education, 5.00 Annual Reports on Education, from 1858 to 1846. Reports on Education, from 1858 to 1846. Horses Mann.

MAURICE (REV. F. D.) The Ground and Object of Hope for Mankind

MERIVALE'S (CHARLES) Conversion of the Roman Empire. Conversion of the Northern Nations..... . 1.50

MILLER (JOAQUIN.) Songs of the Sierras. 1.50 Bongs of the Sun Lands. 1.50 s from Kentucky.....

the Cirkle 140 Exkoss from Kentucky. 140 NEWMAN (FEANCIS W.) A History of the Habrow Wonnrohy. 140 Habrow Wonnrohy. 140 Habrow Younrohy. 140 The Soul, its Sorrows and its Aspirations. 200 Catholic Union. Essays towards is Church of the Future, as the Organization of Philanthropy. 170 The Kellford Making in Religion. 170 Makters Fertaining to Religion. 170 Makters Fertaining to Religion. 180 Makters Addresses, and Occasional Ber-monn. 1908. 1908. Addresses and Occasional Ser-monn. 1908. 1908. 1908. 1908. 1908. 1908. Speeches, Addresses, and Occasional Ber-monn. 1908. 1908. 1908. 1908. 1908. Speeches, Addresses, and Occasional Ber-monn. 1908. 1908. 1908. 1908. 1908. Cirtical and Miscellaneous Writings. 1908. The Trial of Thesedore Parker for the Mis-demesnor of a Speech in Mentul Hall. 190 The Trial of Thesedore Parker Stortheomer. 400 PARSONS. (THEOPHILUS.) The Infinite parking Cirticological Story. 400 PARSONS. (THEOPHILUS.) The Infinite PARSONS (THEOPHILUS.) The Infinite and the Finite .....

PHELPS'S (ELIZABETH STUART.) The Gates Ajar.

		Gates Ajsr 1.50
INTERNATIONAL SCIENTIFIC SERIES No. I. Forms of Water, in Clouds, Rain		The Trotty Book
Rivers, Ice, and Olaciers. By John Tyn- dall	1.50	Redged In
II. Physics and Politics; or, Thoughts or the Application of the Principles of		What to Wear 7
"Natural Selection," and "Inheritance" to Political Society. By Walter Bagahot	1.60	trait. Cabinet Edition

2.58 1.75

COSSETTI (CHRISTINA G.) A Shedow of

CHELLEN (H.) Spectrum Analysis, in its Application to Terrestrial Substances, and the Physical Constitution of the Heavenly Purities

Bothes. ICIENCE PRIMERS: 1. Infroductory, By Frof. Huxley, F.B.S., 39 2. Chemistry, By Frof. Roncon. 48 8. Physics. By Balfour Siewart. With H-instrutions 4. Physics. By Balfour Siewart. 4. Physics. 4. Physic

SMILES'S (SAMTEL.) Solf-Help ..... 1.3

SPINOZA (BENEDICT DE.) Tractatus The-

STRAUSS (D. F.) The Old Faith and the THACK EERA TS (W. M.) Novels. Honsehold Billion. Complete in 6 volumes. Par vol. 1.30 Vanity Parlete in 6 volumes. Par vol. 1.30 Adventures of Phillip. Pendennis.

Pendanais. The Virginians. Exmond, and Lovel the Widowar. Miscellaneous Writings. Household Edi-tion. Uniform with the Norela. Coin-pletain Svois. With new Portrait, Parvol. 138 This edition includes all the matter in the last-est English editions, with many additions, thus making it, with the norveis, the chespeet sud mosi complete Thackeray in the market. 1. Barry Lyndon, Hoggarty Diamond, &c. 2. Paris, and Lriah Sketch-Books, &c. 4. Sour Georges, Humoriata, &c. 5. Ochtherine, Christmas Books, and Unro-printed Pieces.

HAXTER'S (MRS. CELIA) Among the

.75

THOREAU'S (H. D.) Walden; or, Life in Cape Cod. La Yankoe In Canada A Work on the Concord and Merrimac Rivers Rivers 2.00 2.10 Rivers. TYLOR (EDWARD B.) The Early History of Mankind Primitve Culture. 2 vols. 2.50 TYNDALL (JOHN). Faraday as a Discov-1.00 ments of Science for Unscientific Peo-

Fragments of Science for UnReleasting Peo-phone of Exercises in the Alps. Hours of Exercises in the Alps. Heat as a Mode of Motion. Ou Sound Releast Mode of Motion. Badiant Heat. Forms of Waker. Lectures on Light. Proc. Tyodal. 2.00 1.35 2.00 2.00 2.00 1.50 1.60

Washington and the Revolution WHITNEY'S (Mxs. A. D. T.) A Summer in Lealle Goldthwalte's Life. We Girls: A House Story Real Folks The Other Girls The Other Girls Panales. A volume of Foems....... 2.0

WHITTIER'S (JOHN G.) Posma. 2 vola .... 4.00

ADDBESS HE INDEX.

1 Tremont Place, Boston.

T

WERE IN DIEX - AVG GUST 15, 1574

THE INDEX-AUGUST 13, 1874.

$25 A DAY GUARANTEED a good territory. HIGHEST TESTINONIALS THOM GOVERNOES OF IOWA, AREANAS AND BAKOTA. Catalogues free. W. GILES, St. Louis, Mo.

CHARLES SUMNER.

A fine likeness of Massachusetts' great Sen-ator, tae copy of a receau Photograph by Bisek, is for sale at THE INDEX office, and will be sent by mail to any address on receipt of the price-fifty cents. Address ty cents. 1 Tremont Place, Boston Address

SAVE FIFTY DOLLARS!

THE NEW FLORENCE.

FRICE, $20 below! any other First-VALUE, $30 above | class Sow'g Mach BAVED, $50 by haying the Florence.

Every machine warranted.

Aperial terms to clubs and dealers.

Send for circulars to the Florence S. M. Co., Florence, Mass.

or 778 Washington Street, Boston, Mass TO ADVERTISERS

The following states the experience of a mocessful Bookseller who has advertised in

TAL INDEX:-TOLEDO, Ohio, Sept. 20, 1872.

THE INDEX: TO THE INDEX Asso., Toledo, O.; Gentlemen,-Having had occasion to adver-tise in your paper during the past two years quite largely, I take pleasure in static: that I have always obtained very satisfactory re-turns-better in fact than from book adver-tisements in any other paper I have adver-tised in. Not only have I obtained immedi-ate results, but orders have frequently been advertisement, showing that your paper is hept on file and referred to by your readers. HENRY S. STEBDING.

Special arrangements will be made at re-fuced terms for long-time or extended ad-vertisements. Address THE INDEX,

NO. 1 TREMONT PLACE,

Boston.

CHARLES SUMNER'S GREAT WORK.

PROPHETIC VOICES CONCERNING AMERICA.

By CHABLES SCHNER. Fine Edition, Tinted Paper, with Steel Por-trait, Crown Svo., Cloth extra, $2.

Aside from its literary and historical meris, this volume has a special interest, from the fact that it was the last work on which

r. Summer was engaged before his death, "PROPHETIC VOICES" will be found of great value to all who take an interest in the his-bury of our country, so full is it of passages is which the unexampled prosperity of our had has been forecold by philosophers, posts, statesinen, and orators, of whom the lament ed anthor has also given interesting sketches. Sent, post-paid, on receipt of price, Address THE INDEX,

No. 1 Tremont Place, Boston

U 'S T O F B THEODORE PARKER,

SIDNEY H. MORSE.

Dignity, reverence, sweetness, vigor, equi-nose, breathe through the clay; the artist has so filled his own heart with appreciation of that noble life that he has been able cou-ningly to mould it into those delicate lines which the character hal wrought on the liv-ing fibre. We are tempted to exclaim, as we stand beside it, as the old artist did to his perfected work, "Speak then!"-Hannah E. Miswenson. 10

All the characteristics of my husband are in the bust,—his greatness, his goodness, his menderness, his love. You cannot give life to shay or marble; but you can represent it, and this Mr. Morse has done.—Lydka D. Parker to Mromak E. Stevenson.

moman E. Stevenson. The eyes, though but of clay, are gleaming with possible indignation, with possible tears the lips are set firm with the resolution of him who, like Paul, could "fights agood fight" as well as "give a reason."—Samuel Longfel-ber.

The first time I have seen Theodore Parker since he died.—Wm. Sparrell. The best representation of Mr. Parker ever answard in clay.—Boston Dally Globe.

The face is strong and noble as it should be. The likeness is good.—Boston Daily Advertiser.

Nothing appears for beauty alone, or finish, or to show the vanity of the artist. All is Suggitten in the man-the true, real, Tankee man, Theodore Parker.-L. S. H. in the Golden by

Copies of this Bust, finely finished n plas-br. 10 each. Boxing for transportation, $1 suca. Freight or expressing paid by party penning order. Weight of box about fity pennes. Orders may be sent to S. H. MORSE, Boom 15, 25 Bromfield St., Buston, Mass.

STUDENTS FITTED for any BOSTON LIBERAL LEAGUE. College. Please address EMILY J. LEONARD, Meriden, Conn

CONSTANT EMPLOYMENT. At home, male or fomale, 330 a week war-ranted. No capital required. Particulars and valuable sample sent free, Address, with six-cept return stamp. C. ROSS, Williamsburg, N. Y.

FREE DISCUSSION

is held at HOSPITALLER HALL, 665 Washing-ton Street, Eoston, svery Sunday, at 104, A.M., 24 and 74 P.M. All that relates to the Bellgious, Folitical, and Social interests of mankind consti-tute the subjects for discussion. THE INDEX and Index Tracts are for sale every Sunday at Hospitalier Hall.

WEST NEWTON ENGLISH AND CLASSICAL SCHOOL - The twenty-first achool year of this Family and Day School, rook Born scrite, will begin Wednes-day, September 16, 1374. For particulars address School, FOR day, September 16, 1874. For particulars address NATH'L T. ALLEN, Principal, West Newton, Mass

DENN MEDICAL UNIVERSITY.

OF PHILADELPHIA.

OF PHILADELPHIA. The requilar course of Lectures in this In stitution will commence on the first Monda in October, and is open to both sexes. The ough in its teachings. For announcemen giving terms and other particulars, address E. D. BUCK MAN, M.D. DEAN, No. 1030 Spring Garden St. nday The

-	0	N	E	w	S	γ	A	P	E	B
Т		T	-							1
1.1	PU	в	ы.	1 5	, ,	п.	L 1	n )	ο.	60.1

Having conveniences for doing the best of newspaper printing at reasonable prices, 1 should like to contract for composition alone, or for composition, press. work, and malling, for one or more weekly papers. Best of references given, and satisfactory work guaranteed. (GEO, H. ELLIS, "Tremont Place, Boston.

BOUND VOLUMES OF THE

B INDEX. Bound volumes of THE INDEX for 1871, 1873, and 1873, will be sent by arpress (at the purchaner's expense) on receipt of $2.50, $2.-60, and $3.00 respectively. These volumes are exceedingly valuable singly, irrespective of each other; for the important essays and other articles they contain are of permanent interset, and will furnish as instructive read-ing twenty years hence as to day. No more valuable present could be made to a friend strugglieg out of Orthodoxy than one of these volumes. Address THE INDEX. THE INDEX,

Addre

	- 42		rieme	Jue z i	tace, r	000000	••
W	A	R	R	E	N	1	8
T	RUE	CI	VIL	IZA	TI	ON.
		Price	60 ce	nts.
		100	-	1		2.2
PI	RACT	ICA	L	DE'	TAI	LS,
	showi	ng the	work	ings	of the
C	OST	P	RIN	CI	PL	E.
		Pric	a 25 ce	nts.
For	sale by				1.1
S .	H	. 1	M	0	R S	5 E	Ι,
	25 Br
s,	1.55						g

MUSIC BOOKS FOR SCHOOLS. HOUR OF SINGING.

Price $1.00, For High Schools.

Well proved, highly popular, practical and useful book. BY EMERSON & TILDEN.

American School Music Reader.

BOOK I. PRICE 35 CENTS.

This charming number is for Frimary Schools; has full directions for teachars (it ine print) and delightfin little graded exer cises and songs for the children.

American School Music Reader. BOOK II. PRICE 50 CENTS. For the Schools and Classes next above Primary Schools. Advances well into the el-

American School Music Reader.

BOOK 111. PRICE 60 CENTS. For the higher classes of common schools.

The above books are by EMERSON & TIL-DEN, are thorough, well arranged, practical, pleasing, and useful.

CHEERFUL VOICES. PRICE 50 CENTS.

In great demand, and is one of the best collections of School Songs ever published. By L. O. EMERSON.

The above books sent post-paid, on receipt of retail price.

OLIVER DITSON & CO., BOSTON.

CHAS. R. DITSON & CO., 711 BROADWAY, NEW YORK.

NONPAREIL Farm Feed, Bone, Drug, and Hand-grinding Milles. Ten Sizes. Also Cotton-Seed Hullers. Hustrat-ed pamphelist free. Address SEDGEBEER, SHEPAED & MILLER, 181 East Front Street, Cincinnati, Ohio. rect is efforts for the present towards a the me time since decided to di THE AMERICAN EDITION

> 01 MONCURE D. CONWAY'S

A BOOK OF ETHNICAL SCRIPTURES,

G. L. HENDERSON & CO.

BANKERS,

LEBOY, MINN.

Money invested on short time, or for a term of years, on unincumbered improved farms, at 12 per cent, interest per annum, psyable security guaranteed. All expenses for ample security guaranteed. All expenses for abstract of title and recording mortgage paid by borrower. We collect and remit to any part of the United States free of charge.

EXPERENCES. - First National Bank, Mo-Gregor, Iowa; First National Bank, Mo-Minna; Milwaukee National Bank, Muwan-kee, Wis; City National Bank, Chicago, III; Allen, Stevens & Co., Bankerr, New York City; Morris Altman.

REAL ESTATE SECURITIES,

if judiciously made, are the best and safest modes of employing capital. The old

Real Estate and Loan Agency'

07

ERNST PRUSSING, 143 RANDOLPS STREET

Chicago (Established 1853).

Guarantees perfect title and ample security in all its Beal Estate Loans. Firstclass securities always on hand, In-terest and principal collected without charge. Real Estate investments made on commission or on shares; taxes paid, drc. Orders of capitalists and real setate own-ers respectfully solicited.

REASONS FOR USING THE

EUREKA SPOOL SILK.

It is full length. It is full size, It is amooth, and elastic, and is equally adapted to hand or machine use.

Many kinds of spool silk are a perfect frand, being not only shorter in length, but a much finer size than they are represented to be, and of so poor a quality as to be unfit for use. The ladies will always find the Su-reka Silk exactly as represented. Every spool is warranted, and the manufacturer's ame indelibly branded on every spool. Call

RADICAL AND LITERABY

LECTURES

JOHN WEISS,

RADICAL LECTURES.

SHAKSPEABIAN LECTURES.

FIRST SERIES.

8. Dogberry, Malvolio, Bottom, Touchstone. 4. Ajaz in Trollus and Cressida: The Porter in Macbeth : The Fool in Lear.

SECOND SERIES.

1. The Women of Shakspeare.

4. Macbeth and Lady Macbeth.

manning Google

6. Contrast in Shakspeare's Characters.

JOHN WEISS,

32 E. Brookline St., Boston-

The Idea of Hereafter.

An Act of Faith. Intelligence in Beligion. Religion and Science.

Heart in Religion.

1. Cause of Laughter.

2. Irony and Humor.

5. Falstaff,

6. Hamlet.

2. Portia.

Address

Б.

S. Ophella.

for it.

paying 8 to 10 per cent. in Investments in Real Estate in Chicage and vicinity,

THE INDEX.

1 TREMONT PLACE,

Boston, Mass.

Address

Repeal of the Laws

whereby church and other corporate property is unjustly exempted from its share of the burden of taxation. SACRED ANTHOLOGY,

As a means to this end, we have published for eneral circulation several thousand copies of a has just been published, and will be sent postpaid on receipt of the price, $4.00, on Church Exemption, being the article by Mr. Abbot which appeared in THE INDEX of Nov. 37. We have already issued three editions, the last of which is nearly exhausted.

TRACT

We desire soon to is Another Large Edition of this and other tracts on the subject, so that we can place a copy in the hands of

EVERY VOTER IN THE STATE.

and generously to supply the calls for them in other States.

To do this, we need funds; for, although we As not know we need runks; for, sithough we have made arrangements for printing the Tract at very low cost, it is impossible for the Boston Lasgue, with its various other expenses, to bear the entire expense alone. Will got them Will not, then,

All Friends of the Movement

come forward and help us with liberal donations f We frequently receive communications from parties wishing tracts to distribute, asking how much they shah pay. To such we reply that the cost to us is about $2.50 per thousand, and we shall be pleased to furnish them at this price pe anall be pleased to furnish them at this price per thousand, or 20 cents per hundred, to all who will circulate them. But all additional donations will be gratefully received for the purpose of circu-ating them gratuitously throughout the country. Last winter this subject was brought before the Legislature of the State, and many petitions were presented asking a repeal of these unjust laws.

The matter is still in their hands, and at the ext session will undoubtedly be acted upon Meanwhile the

Voice of the People,

favoring justice and equity, should be distinctly heard. We shall soon be ready to send out

BLANK PETITIONS AGAIN.

thus giving an opportunity to those who have done not already done s continued wrong. so, to protest against this Let us make it ever presented to our legislative body. Will those willing to assist in circulating these petitions please SEND IN THEIR NAMES?

THE LARGEST PETITION

We would say, also that we feel deeply the need of

Other Organizations

in this State, to cooperate with us in securing equality and justice, by pressing the "Demands of Liberalism." If, in any locality, there are those who are inclined to Form a Liberal League,

we are ready to render such assistance as lies in

LIBERALS!

If all will units and work, the results sought can be accomplished Address

BOSTON LIBERAL LEAGUE.

NO. 1 TREMONT PLACE, BOSTON. Par order of the

Three Dollars a Year.

LIBERTY AND LIGHT.

Single Copies Seven Cents.

VOLUME 5.

BOSTON, MASS., THURSDAY, AUGUST 20, 1874.

WHOLE NO. 243.

ORGANIZE!

THE DEMANDS OF LIBERALISM.

THE DEMANDS OF LIBERALISM. 1. We demand that churches and other ecclesiastical property shall no longer be exempt from just taxation. 2. We demand that the employment of cheplains in Con-gress, in State Legislatures, in the navy and militin, and in prisons, asylums, and all other institutions supported by public money, shall be discontinued. 3. We demand that all public appropriations for educa-tional and charitable institutions of a sectarian character while cease.

hall cease. 4. We demand that all religious services now sustained by the government shall be aboliabed; and especially that he use of the Bible in the public schools, whether ostensi-by as a text-book or arowedly as a book of religious wor-hip, shall be prohibited. bly ship, shall be prohibited. 6. We demand that the appointment, by the Prosident of the United States or by the Governors of the various States, of all religious festivals and fasts shall wholly coase. 6. We demand that the judicial oath in the courts and in all other departments of the government shall be abol-ished, and that simple affirmation under the pains and pon-ailies of perjury shall be established in its stead. 7. We demand that all laws directly or indirectly enforc-ment bestrance of Sunday as the Sabbath shall be re-peated.

a the destruction of the second sec

A FORM OF LOCAL ORGANIZATION.

Whereas, It is our profound conviction that the safety of republican institutions is imperilled, the advance of civili-sation impeded, and the most sacred rights of man in-fringed, by the least interference of the State in matters of religion; and religion; and Whereas, Certain grave inconsistencies with the general spirt of the United States Constitution still mark the prac-deal administration of our political system, threatening the perpetuity of religious liberty, the existence of free public schools, and the peace and prosperity of the entire land; THEREFORE, We, the undersigned, hereby associate our-selves together under the following

ARTICLES OF AGREEMENT.

ART. 1.- The name of this Association shall be THE LIB-

ART. 4.—Such measures shall be reased at the second all other and all such other means as a peaceable, orderly, and all such other means a second with the "Demands of Liberal inse the formed in different places, to send two delegates to a National Convention of Liberal Leagues, to be hereaf-ter called in order to co-operate with all the liberals of the country in securing the needed reforms.

and right. ART. 4.—Such measures shall be adopted for raising funds for the League as shall be prescribed in the By-Laws by a two-thirds vote of the members. ART. 6.—Any person may become a member of the League by subscribing his or her name to these Articles of Agree-rest

Ment. Age, a. The Officers of the League shall be a President, a Yics President, a Secretary, a Treasurer, and an Execu-tive Committee of three members; and their duties shall be those commonly pertaining to these offices. The President and Secretary shall be az-officio delegates to the National Correction of Liberal Loagues when called together. ABT, T.-These Articles of Agreement may be amended by a three-fourths vote of the members present at any reg-diar meeting, provided due notice of the proposed amend-ments shall have been sent to every member at least two weeks previous to such meeting.

So far as I am concerned, the above is the platform of THE INDEX. I believe in it without reserve; I believe that it will get be accepted universally by the American people, as the only platform consistent with religious liberty. A Liberal League ought to be formed to carry out its princi-ples wherever half a dozen earnest and resolute Liberals ples wherever half a dozen sarnest and resolute Laberau can be got together. Being convinced that the movement to secure compliance with these just "Demands" must surely, even if slowly, spread, I hope to make THE LYDEX 3 means of furthering it; and I ask the assistance and active co-operation of every man and every woman who be-lieves in st. Multiply Liberal Leagues everywhere, and re-but promotive the presence of their President a and Secure port promptly the names of their Presidents and Secre-taries. Intolerance and bigotry will tremble in proportion as that list grows. If freedom, justice, and reason are right, let their organized voice be heard like the sound of

FRANCIS E. ABBOT, Editor. BOSTON, Sept. 1, 1878.

For List of Liberal Leagues, see next page. RELIGIOUS FREEDOM AMENDMENT: FROPOSED AS A SUBSTITUTE FOR THE FIRST AMENDMENT TO THE UNITED STATES CON-

STITUTION.

APTTOLE 1.

ABTIOLE 1. SECTION 1.—Congress shall make no law respecting an es-tablishment of religion, or favoring any particular form of religion, or prohibiting the free exercise beread, i or the right of the people panceably to assemble and to petition the dow-ment for a redress of grievances. By the treedom of speech or of the press, or the right of religion, or prohibiting the free exercise thereads; or any freedom of speech or of the press, or the specific or prohibiting the free exercise thereads; or religion, or prohibiting the free exercise thereads; or religion or prohibiting the free exercise thereads; or religion or prohibiting the free exercise thereads; or religit of the people peaceably to assemble and to petition the so ther rights, privileges, or expanding, or sufficient or the performance of any public or private duty, or read-red incompetent to give eridence in any court of law or outher aubject of religion. By the source of any public or private duty, or read-red in consequence of any public or private duty, or read-red in consequence of any public or private duty, or read-red in consequence of any public or private duty, or read-red in consequence of any public or private duty, or read-red in consequence of any public or private duty, or read-red in consequence of any public or private duty, or read-red in consequence of any public or private duty, or read-red in consequence of any public or private duty, or read-red in consequence of any public or private duty, or read-ments — Congress hall have power to enforce the pro-tions of the second section of this Article by appropri-and the subject of religion.

GLIMPSES.

BY F. E. A.

EVERY NOW AND THEN & "safe" robbery is reported. But if the robber is caught, what sort of a robbery is it then?

A CORRESPONDENT of the New York Nation says that the famous "Blue Laws" of Connecticut were an invention of the Rev. Samuel Peters, a Connecticut Tory, who was driven from the State at the beginning of the Revolutionary War, and who revenged himself by publishing in London, in 1781, a fabulous General History of Connecticut ; and that the historian of Massachusetts, Hutchinson, does not give one of these pretended laws. Is there anything to be said in favor of the genuineness of the "Blue Laws"?

THE AMERICAN ASSOCIATION FOR THE ADVANCE-MENT OF SCIENCE began its twenty-third annual meeting at Hartford, Connecticut, on August 12. President LeConte, in his opening address, is reported as saying: "Already it is proved that, should the largest comet strike the earth, no possible harm could This declaration contradicts flatly the stateensue." ment of M. Faye, quoted in another paragraph on this page. Science has its open questions still, it seems, but Dr. LeConte does not propose to serve M. Faye as Calvin served Servetus.

IN JULY a farmer living in Warren County, New Jersey, publicly offered to give to some poor sewinggirl of New York free board for ten or twenty days, and to send the amount of her fares to and from his farm, if the officers of the St. John's Guild would select the girl to receive the kindness. This offer, published in a New York paper, gives the hint of a most useful form of philauthropy. Thousands of farmers could afford to give a little vacation to the poor, overworked sewing-girls of our large cities, or at least to ask no other remuneration than a little help from the visitor in household affairs; and this would be most cheerfully given. Honor to the kind heart that conceived this plan! It ought to be widely acted on, and we hope it will be.

M. FAYE, in a recent lecture published in Nature, calculates that, "if the nucleus of our comet had directly encountered the earth, with its mass of 25,600 millions of millions of kilogrammes, and its relative speed of seventeen leagues per second (seven for the earth and ten in an opposite direction for this retrograde comet), the actual energy of the shock would be enormous; I calculated that its transformation into heat would immediately generate fifty-one million calorics per square metre of the hemisphere which enstained the shock. It would be enough to shatter, dissolve, and volatilize a part of the solid crust of our globe. No living being could survive such a catastrophe. Happily the probability of such an encounter is excessively small; and, indeed, the most remote geological ages do not bear any traces of such an adventure.

Index.

THE Nation of August 6 has a thoughtful and in the main excellent article on "Evidence about Character." It shows that the rules of evidence, as enforced in the courts, are not adapted to bring forward all facts logically bearing on a case, and therefore do not help to establish the full truth in cases involving reputation. It holds that there is "only one good reason" for carrying the Beecher case into court, namely, that the courts can compel the attendance of witnesses. There is, however, one other. In this country, at least, the decision of a legal tribunal is acquiesced in almost universally in such cases. If Mr. Beecher is exonerated by it, his accusers will be at least effectually silenced; and there is little doubt that enough evidence would be elicited to show with sufficient certainty whether the Brooklyn preacher is guilty or innocent on the main charge.

As A DEFENCE against the charge of adultery, Mr. Beecher's "statement" and "cross-examination" are very strong as the case now stands, though not abso-Intely conclusive. The explanation he gives of the letters which cast such a gloom over the right-minded portion of the community is exceedingly probable, considering his peculiar nature; and it certainly dissi-pates the dark presumption they created. So far every unprejudiced person must unfeignedly rejoice. But the reason of this favorable change in the state of the case as respects the main charge lies in a fact which bears unfavorably on Mr. Beecher's candor, and which therefore weakens his testimony to that extent. In his card of July 22, he declared that his "published correspondence on this subject comprises but two elements, namely, the expression of my grief and that of my desire to shield the honor of a pure and innocent woman;" and the evident intent of this declaration was to deny the existence in that correspondence of any expression of deep-seated consciousness of wrong-doing. The opinion of the more thoughtful part of the public was adverse to the admission of this denial; which opinion is now con-firmed by this last statement of Mr. Beecher. The whole strength of his present defence consists in its assigning an adequate cause for the profound selfaccusation contained in the letters referred to-for the undenlable "third element" which we pointed out in them two weeks ago. He now confesses that "there was much that weighed heavily on my heart and conscience, which now weighs only on my heart;" and this burden on his conscience he satisfactorily explains, when he says that (although under a delusion) he "felt convicted of slander in its meanest form." The story now told makes the self-accusation perfectly intelligible without assuming adultery as its cause; and it is such a relief to turn the flank of this horrible assumption that the public will gladly believe the story, unless new and stronger evidences of guilt are hereafter brought up. Mr. Beecher, however, seems to have been singularly weak, and singularly devoid of moral courage and directness, in dealing with the parties he depicts in such an odious light; and it is clear that a new estimate of his character must be formed in many respects. He can no longer be regarded by any one as the great apostle of American manliness. If ever the folly of "dignified silence," the ruinous impolicy of meeting known slanders by trying to hush them up rather than by overwhelming them with the truth, has been demonstrated, it is now. The only way to treat a great calumny is to seize it by the throat and strangle it on the spot; and the timidity, vacillation, and wretched diplomacy of Mr. Beecher himself must bear a large part of the blame for the horrible suspicions of his purity which are now, we trust, scattered to the four winds of beaven.

Tunner Google

LIST OF LIBERAL LEAGUES

 BT. LOUIS, MO.-M. A. McCord, President; P. A. Lofgreen, L. La Grille, Secretaries.
 BORTON, MASS.-F. Z. Abbot, President; J. P. Titcomb, G. A. Bacon, Secretaries.
 JWFFERON, OHIO.-W. H. Crowell, President; A. Giddinge, Reconstruction. Becretary. Sam Joss, Cal.-A. J. Spencer, President; J. L. Hatch, Secretary. Tolspo, IowA.-J. Reedy, Fresident; E. S. Beckley, Secretary. VigeLAND' N. J.-John Gage, President; Sue M. Clute, BELARD N. J. - John Gage, Frendent; Sue M. Clute, Becretary.
 Becretary.
 CLATER, KAN.-B. B. S. Wilson, President; H. A. Griffin, Becretary.
 DETROT, MICH.-W. B. Hill, President; A. T. Garretson, Becretary.
 MICH.-W. B. Hill, President; A. T. Garretson, Becretary.
 Detrotary.
 MICH.-A. G. Eastman, President; F. R. Thowles, Sccretary.
 OBOELA, MO.-E. F. Thompson, President; M. Roderick, Secretary. Secretary. Bran, M. - F. G. Barker, President; C. Rhodss, Secretary, Brania, Wis. - President, J. D. Walters; Secretary, E. M. Bridgman, WASHINGTON, D.C. - George M. Wood, President; J. E. Orawford, Secretary, Pish, President; G. W. Barnes, Treas-users, Ohio. - John Pish, President; G. W. Barnes, Treas-AUSUME, ORIO.-John Fish, President; G. W. Barnes, Treas-nrer. MINTMAPOLIS, MINN.-President, J. B. Bassett; Scoretary, Anton Grethen. New YORS, NY.-J. B. Brown, President; D. M. Bennett, Scoretary. St. JOSEFH, MO.-P. V. Wise, President; T. H. Kennedy, Scoretary. Balasci, IND.-President, S. J. Dickson; Secretary, W. Kennedy. Balasci, IND.-President, T. Gray; Socretary, W. Allen. New Onlawns, LA.-President, E. Vorster; Secretary, J. E. Wallace. Ray Cirty, Mind.-President, S. M. Green; Secretary, S. M. Johnson, P. & Widemire, President; H. Royest. CLEASFIELD, PA.-S. Widemire, President; H. Hoover, Secretary. Satu Cirv, Wis.-Chr. Spiehr, President; Robert Cunradi, Secretary.

(For THE INDEX.)

Temperance and Total Abstinence. THE THIRD FREE LEOTORE IN THE CITY HALL, DOVER, N. H., SUNDAY EVENINO, DECEMBER 12, 18

BY FRANCIS E. ABBOT.

<page-header> cording to the law of God in his own soul, and the equal duty of non-interference by society except for say, I would unflinchingly apply to the Temperance question and every other great question that comes up for settlement. More mischief than benefit must come in the long run from disregard of these princi-ples; and I count it a terrible mistake to say that good principles must not be "carried far enough: and he does true service to his race who seeks to straighten out the crooked paths of human action by carrying good principles to their extremes. Taking it, there-fore, as a moral axiom that every individual has a right to be at perfect liberty until he violates the equal liberty of his fellow-men, we shall find our-selves not a little enlightened as to our duty with ref-erence to the Temperance question. First of all, lot us make quite clear what we mean by "Temperance." In its largest use, this word sig-mifies complete self-mastery, perfect control of out-ward conduct by an inward law. He is the truly temperate man who is in all things master of himself, and in all things guides himself by reason and com-mender of else held in check by the strong band of the disciplined will,-mothing less than this fill out the true conception of Temperance. The soul must keep

INDEX - AUGUST 20

The includes all other sins, against which I would fail sincludes all other sins, against which I would fail strengthen my fellow-men to the utmost extent of my ower.
But, while hating the vice of Intemperance with the very heartiest of its hater, I have never been able to act with what claims to be the party of Temperance. Alike in politics, religion, and reform, I have never been able to act with what claims to be the party of Temperance. Alike in politics, religion, and reform, I have never been able to act with what claims to be the party of Temperance. Alike in politics, religion, and reform, I have for protect against their shortcomings or inconsistencies, and to side only with universal principles. Until parties follow right principles, no true man can follow give a solution of practical problems must for a long time to come be in a minority, and contentially only and consistently, universal and engintened principles. Those who seel in the logic of these a key to the solution of practical problems must for a long time to come be in a minority, and contentially only and consistently, universal and engintened principles. Those who seel in the chief principles, I cannot act with the Temperance party.
The first and chief reason is, that the chief principles of the Temperance party is not a Temperance principle. If we may judge of the mind of the party by the votes of its conventions, it holds the drinking of alcoholic beverages to be universally a sin, and complet abstinence from. them to be universally a duty. This does not appear to me to be a true Temperance principle. It is not possible, in my opinion, to lay down absolute rules concerning particular acts without regard to motives. It is the motive that without regard to motives. It is the motive that without regard to motives a sinner to that extent; and to pass so sweeping a judgment on every person with taskes an act a sin; and who shall undertake to judge of the actors is concerned; shald if the moral teaching of Jesus had one trait

<text><text><text> things, lies in the strengthening of conscience and the tenderest deference to its least behasts. If we ware really unable to govern ourselves,—if we find by experience that use itself is dangerous and is creating a habit whose power begins to make itself felt,—then there is no eafety but to abstain, wholly and contin-ously. I can only appland that man who says,—"for myself, I choose to abstain; but to others I concels an equal liberty of choice." I am not by any means advising to use intoricating beverages; far from it. I simply say, Temperance is use. Intemperance is abuse; and he fulfils his duty in this matter who publicly and privately temperate. What I contend for and insist upon is the right of individual liberty of action; the right of every man to be respected so long as he obeys his own conscience, without being branded by vehement partiasas as "the worst enemy of the Temperance cause." What is temperance for so long as he obeys his own conscience, without being particular acts. The universal rules concerning particular acts. The universal rules concerning particular acts. The universal and absolute obliga-tion of all men to be "temperance for al. Indi-vidual differences of temperance for al. Indi-vidual differences of temperance for al. Indi-vidual differences of temperance, must be respec-ed; and the Temperance causes will never proper until they are respected. 2. Another great reason why I cannot set with the Temperance party is the excessive and unwise conf-dence it puts on the efficacy of the piedge. For my ed; and the Temperance canse will never proper until they are respected. 2. Another great reason why I cannot act with the Temperance party is the excessive and unwise confi-dence it puts on the efficacy of the pledge. For my-self, I disbelieve in pledges, except as a last resort. The practical results of the pledge are quile as often. I fear, evil as good. Its defensive power is not great, except with a few persons. This I have heard said by some teetotallers themselves, who were well qual-fied by actual experience and observation to bear wit-nees on the point. A strong, free nature, even if once induced to take the pledge, is seldom easy under the yoke, and sometimes is so galled by it as to resort to any measures to break loose. Even a self-imposed fetter tends to destroy the sense of moral freedom, and to create a sense of constraint which often be-promos who are greatly tempted to do what they are prohibited from doing; and sometimes they go and do it just to get rid of the offensive prohibition. To be sure, there is nothing noble in this, but there is a great deal of human nature in it; and sofar the pra-tical power of the pledge is weakened. Even where he do do it rikes conscience and will are strong, the pledge will not be kept; and the strength which seems to comes in the pledge is, after all, only the strength of conscience and will, at bottom. On the power of he pledge itself a sufficient protection; a sense of a sense of its south the promos lean on the pledge is as in itself a sufficient protection; a sense of itself security is created, conscience falls asleep, in some moment of temptation the prog yreas way, and to false security succeeds an agony of despair. The pledge once broken, the sacred sentiment of cell-respect is so fearfully injured that many a poor fellow straightway rushes headlong into the wildest erceased, believing that all hope of salvation is gone. The

manua Google

> 20 325 hers in Francis

105 ŴŻ. 日本に

13.2.4 1261 1 mz

12112

「日本のいい

NDHX - AUGUST 20 mily against it? But if there was danger in the der," why say there was only grape-juice it? With sophistry similar to that of Dr. Miner, Dr. Maning, at the New England Christian Convention before referred to, tried to explain away the miracle is the sophistry similar to that of Dr. Miner, Dr. Maning, at the New England Christian Convention before referred to, tried to explain away the miracle is the sophistry similar to that of Dr. Miner, Dr. Maning, at the New England Christian Convention before referred to, tried to explain away the miracle is the sophistry similar to the feast said it, not being when but the governor of the feast said it, not being when but the governor of the feast said it, not being the but the governor of the feast said it, not being when and the wine at the feast sanctioned by the presence and miracle of Jeaus must have been some hing stronger than grape-juice. But, admitting that become wine, or else deny the miracle altogether. Maning must either admit that the water do be-confess that Jeaus sanctioned moderate drinking. To me, it matters nothing what the example or pre-to fasy teacher is; I judge for myself on the mering to fasy teacher is; I judge for myself on the mering to the one and faithfully as 1 know hore; and if is against me; I am content to use the faculties for the strat. Jeaus he does not dark honesity to addite the the Scriptures are against him. For myself, it hat the Scriptures are against him. For myself, and use as faithfully as 1 know hore; and if is agiven me as faithfully as 1 know hore; and if is agiven me as faithfully as 1 know hore; and if is agiven me as faithfully as 1 know hore; and if is agiven me as faithfully as 1 know hore; and if is agiven me as faithfully as 1 know hore; and if is agiven me as faithfully as 1 know hore; and if is agiven me as faithfully as 1 know hore; and if is agiven me as faithfully as 1 know hore; and if is agiven me as faithfully as 1 know hore; and if is agiven me as fai

THE STRENGTH OF UNBELIEF.

To our editorial note last week concerning the weakness of unbelief in Boston, Colonel T. W. Hig-ginson, whom we respect above all the rest of the Free Religionists, acnds us this reply :--

To our editorial note last weak concerning the weakness of unbelief in Boston, Colonel T. W. Hig-ginson, whom we respect above all the rest of the Free Religionists, sends us this reply:— To THE EDITOR OF THE INDERSIDENT:— I have been accustomed to claim for the Independent a good deal of fairness and candor in dealing with those whom it regards as unbelievers; and I therefore read with surprise what seemed to me a series of very incorrect editorial attements in the last leave. The second paragraph of "Editorial Notes" makes the following affirmation:— "Undefiel In Boston has not for years been a weak sto-day. The Parker Fraternity and the Twenty-sight Congregational Society are feeble enough; it is only the unlettered sceptics of the West." The first assertion belongs to a class which I must leave your contributor, Rev. Augnstus Blauvelt, to any every feeble. As the Twenty-eighth Congregational Society (of which the Parker Fraternity is only an offshoot) has proved itself strong enough, in this take wenty-eighth congregation does realized sceptics of the West." The first assertion belongs to a class which I must feave your contributor, Rev. Augnstus Blauvelt, to any offshoot) has proved itself strong enough, in this the twenty-eighth year of its existence, to erect and dedicate a building of its own, the "Parker Memorial Meeting-House," and as it holds meetings in this to lightly in this day and most respectable congregation, the epithet "weble" seems to be most singularly misspelled. It was generally predicted that this society could not spize fourten years ato: "How how were these meetings abandoned?" As one of the committee having them in charge, I can only say that I have never heard to the Independent? and it The INDEX. If i am not mistaken, the last year was the first time that these lectures proved self-supporting; and it is to be hoped that the next winter's fourten years of the West?" They have never heard their abandonned? As one of the West, 'it occurs to ment mistaken, the karpit the, it works o

Conservatives. NEWFORT, R. I., July S0, 1874.

We are not able to see why our statement was not essentially correct. Dr. Blauvelt's views of the strength of unbellef are not precisely ours, and we trust the Free Religionists will not flatter themselves that other Evangelical apologists who have made as deep investigation into the current doubt of the times are as alarmed as he. It is true that the Twenty-eighth Congregational Society has lately erected a meeting-house, and since this their single temple can depend for preachers upon a large body of unoccupied radicals—Colonel Higginson, John Weiss, Samuel Johnson, F. E. Abbot, William R. Alger, and other able men,—It would be strange if a respectable andi-ence did not attend it. But Theodore Parker used to preach to three thousand people. Did his successors, b. A. Wasson and J. Vila Blake, gather as many hundreds, and do as many hundreds now meet regu-larly every Sunday morning? Parker's three thou-sand listened to a man whose belief in God, con-science, personal immortality, was as firm as Jonathan Edwards's. The congregations who hear his suc-cessors are apt to find rhapsedy instead of prayer, the memory of a good life instead of immortality, the ocsmoe instead of God. And if it has taken twenty-eight years to build one permanent building for radi-cal worship, how long will it be 'fore unbelief out-numbers the twenty-five or thirty Christian Unitarian unches now so utterly abandoned by Mr. Parker's successors? We are giad to get the information from Colonel churches now so utterly abandoned by Mr. Parker's successors? We are glad to get the information from Colonel Higginson that the Horticultural Hall meetings were held last winter; but we confess that as news of them did not reach our ears, which in previous years had heard their coming from afar, we were hasty enough to conclude that what we did not hear gave no sound.

As for the culture of THE INDEX and its readers, Concol Higginson, bimself one of the best examples America can show of the highest culture, must know that for seventy-five years we have had an "unlet-berd" and ignorant class of sceptics, neglectual alike of all churches, liberal or conservative, and ready to send recruits to this and that infidel ism or spiritual-istic delaukon. Unitarianism sixty years age was the secession of some of the inset culturated men and churches of the most culturated of American denomi-nations; some of the later Free Religionist seceders from Unitarianism have sloo been of the highest in-tellectual attainments; but now-s-days Mr. Abbot and Colongel Higginson find themselves hedged about with followers whose doubt is that of sheer intellect-uual inability to comprehend faith, and whose screeds, as they appear eide by elds with finished editorial or demirable "T. W. H." contributions in THE INDEX, leave an impression of pity for the men they simost should be their company. An ignorant man has as good a right to his religion as a scholar; Christianity has always had thousands of the illiterate in its ranks; but theirs is the contact with culture in the majority of its followers is very slight, and that its influence, like that of the Intestington, more the solution. The second is the structive features would be far distant. The says in general, without "misstating or un-der distant. The ason in general, without "misstating or un-dimented in the erest reading of a journal to would be ra distant. The ason of Free Religion within the past ten or which he now lends one of its few sturctive features whole more Evangelied of our opponents, that, how-ere it may be with aimple unbelef, we cannot see any or mode of Free Religions within the past ten or whole more Evangelied, of free form diesital stati, the no consequence of the feeblenes and disast-ination in consequence of the feeblenes and disast-ination in consequence of the feeblenes and disast-ination in consequence of th ing regular pastoral charge whom we know to have advanced to or near the platform of the Free Relig-ions Association-Dr. Cyrus A. Bartol, of Boston; Dr. William H. Furness, of Philadelphia; John W. Chadwick, of Brooklyn, and William T. Clarke, of New York; and of these Dr. Furness and Dr. Bartol'a spirituality is such that from their radical influence the school of THE INDEX has little to hope. These facts seem to indicate that whenever a man tran-scends Christian church, he is apt to fall out of regular religions work of any kind. And thus it is that "un-bellet" in any phase which claims to be "religions," not only in Boston but everywhere else, has gained little of late. There is unbelief at the present day, we admit, both pervasive and potent; but not of the strength of direct consistency. But with the unbe-lief of materialistic athelem. That has the strength of direct consistency. But with the unbe-lief which proclaims itself religious while denying the basis of religion we need give ourselves little con-cern.-New York Independent.

Orginated by Google

THE SUNDAY QUESTION IN AMERICA.

THE SUNDAY QUESTION IN AMERICA. SPACE SUNDAY QUESTION IN AMERICA. ALL S. S., IN THE LONDON "FREE SUNDAY ADVO-CATE" OF JUNE 1, 1874. Then the western districts of Notting Hill and Kenigton were visited, some time since, by the Rev. Bee Wright and friends, who, for a brief period, gel-anized into life the long defunct sct of Charles II, of pious memory. I remember hearing some very strong expressions from the Inhabitants, while they are smarting under the sting of the Rev. Bee. Bas as these petty persecutions were, it has been reserved for one of the American States to furnish at least a memory of the Sunday question under American in-fuences. When I hay American influences I do not include cowhiding, or tar and feathers. I should con-sider these undue influences, and likely to prejudice the mind of a student; but this being at the presen-tion of the question, I must content myself by index the genit to set me down in Boston, that I mences. When I knock, published in Boston, that I mences. When I way a the infraction of the first study the Sunday question for infraction of the state append of a student; but this being at the presen-time ont of the question, I must content myself by index they in Brookline, Massachusetts, which has heady been briefly mentioned in these columns (Thri-brond y law, in Brookline, Massachusetts, which has pool the dispassionate exposure of the disprace throw pool the disprace of the propose, he was just foot hanging up the vine, when a pollecman, E. C. Carté these wife in transferring a passion-flower from stated his wife in transferring a passion-flower from stated his wife he did not stop. Mr. Wilther stopped how into a water spout for the purpose, he was just foot hanging up the vine, when a pollecman, E. C. Carté there a consultation with a lawyer. The po-prima next day compl

one dollar and sixty cents. From this judgment Mr. Walther appealed. "These irritating proceedings naturally excited the indignation of the fellow-citizens of the victim; and a petition signed by eighteen of the most influential of them was presented by Mr. Bowditch to the Select-men of Brookline, together with a circumstantial statement by himself of the whole matter. These petitioner requested the town anthorities to use that statement by himself of the whole matter. These petitioners requested the town authorities to see that the fine and costs should be paid by the town itself, or to assess them upon the petitioners; to stay the proceedings where they were; and to forbid the police for the future to make any further voluntary com-plaints on account of infraction of the Sunday law. To this petition the Selectmen returned answer by the Town Clerk, a few days later, that they had 'vot-ed that it is inexpedient to take any action upon the subject.'"

But the state of t forbid the police thus to make complaints for viola-tions of the Sunday law. But the writer of the arti-cle says — "The real evil lies further back, in the Sunday law itself. The only radical reform must consist in the expunding of this law from the Statute Book. Until the is done, there can be no real security against the repetition of the vexatious and bigoted prosecution complained of. No law is really "obsolete" as long as it stands unrepealed : it is always liable to be revived by any party in power which may choose to make use of it. Dead-letter laws are mischlevous in many waya— creating contempt of all laws so long as they remain merely nominally in force, and becoming instruments of oppression if, as in this case, brought unexpectedly into operation. The only safe and wise course is to repeal every law which the advancing enlightenment of the age pronounces unworthy of itself. "With this bellet, we respectfully but carneetly recommend to the protestants against this absurd and iyrannical prosecution that they make it the ground of a vigorous movement in the next Legislature of Massachusetts for the immediate repeal of the Sunday law. It is this law which for ten years has defeated the beneficent measure of opening the Boston Pub-lic Library on Sunday; and it is a great mistake to treat it as in any sense a dead letter. Let the

INDEX - AUGUST 20

What other mockery i are the last on a constraint with the Reformation, but with the rise of puritanism Sunday liberty was lost. The same spirit of reaction, or revolt of common sense, which slowly but surely broke the despotic sway of the dominant church of the past, is abroad to day, searching, questioning, collecting facts regard-leas of consequences—regardless, so long as the truth is gained, how many, or how few, preconceived no-tions and priestly "Thou shalts" are relegated to their place with other exploded shams. When I started I expressed a wish to be set down in Boston by the ald of Aladdin's lamp; but I have wandered "on the saddle of a thought" into Greece before the birth of Socrates, and some four centuries before the birth of the Founder of Christianity, whose religion, as Mr. Graham tells us, was a life and not a creed. A life of low. We know too well what it has done as a creed. Would that humanity could even now reduce it to a life.

A life or love. We know too well what it has done as a creed. Would that humanity could even now reduce it to a life. I have been riding, as it were, in a circle, and have come back to the point I started from,-Emancipate Sunday. Yes, that is a work in which the reader must help as well as the writer. Sunday freedom once gained in London will speedily be obtained in the provinces.

the provinces. Boston, though oppressed by sabbatic laws, is yet the centre of religious freethought in America; as Wendell Holmes tells us, "Boston has opened, and kept open, more turnpikes that lead straight to free thought, and free speech, and free deeds, than any other city of live men or dead men, I don't care how broad their streets are, nor how high their steeples."

THE REAL BEVELATION.

BY W. A. LEONARD, IN THE LONDON "UNITARIAN HERALD" OF JUNE 19, 1874.

HERALD" OF JUNE 19, 1874. Most of our readers know there are two schools of philosophy—the one called experiential, or utilitari-an, refers all moral judgments to experiences of utili-ty; while the other, known as the intuitional, reduces all moral obligation to the principle of an inexplica-ble constitution of the human mind. The former is the objective school, and claims amongst its adherents such men as the late J. S. Mill and Mr. Herbert Spencer. The latter is subjective, and numbers its supporters from among such thinkers as Miss Cobbe and Mr. Lecky. It would seem apparent formation.

supporters from among such thinkers as Miss Cobbe and Mr. Lecky. It would seem apparent, from the oft-quoted max-im, "Extremes meet," that there must be, could we only flud it, some ground on which the deep thinkers on both sides could agree. Where such opposite views are held by thinkers of the mental calibre of those just named, it is but reasonable to conclude each side must have some warrant for its belief, and, as is usual in such cases, the common ground must be one where each side is fairly represented, and where a compromise harmonizes the previously con-flicting opinions. flicting opinions. And, indeed, it is a matter of supreme importance that a third school, embracing the truths held by the other two, and avoiding their errors, should be formed as soon as possible. For, first, let us see the great error that both the experientialist and the intuition-alist teach; their final result discovers a purely sub-jectine principle. With the experientialist the asso-ciation of ideas, whether acquired or inherited, is the sole reason of all morality; that is, our present ideas of morality are nothing else but an accumulation of generalized experiences from observations of the dif-ferent effects of different actions upon human happi-ness; and hence the morale of our action is to be judged, not by an objective standard of morality, but by its apparent utility. According to the intuitionalist, on the other hand, men "derive the first principles of their duties from intuition," hence to a man's "conscience" must the final appeal be made in matters of morality. It re-quires but a moment's reflection to show that man's "conscience" varies with the agge, and also with the various stages of civilization at which the race may have arrived; therefore, what seems right at one period and to one community may appear wrong at another time and to another civilization. Thousant will be made non-absolute, instead of the absolute and eternal Reality we hope and believe it is, and to the attainment of which we press forward as to a long-desired and much-valued goal! We have been led into these remarks by a singularly able paper in the Boston (U. S.) INDEX, written by the editor, Mr. F. E. Aboto.

The dotted for the set of the most outspoken of the Boston (U. S.) INDEX, written by the editor, Mr. F. E. Abbot.
The INDEX is one of the most outspoken of the American newspapers on subjects connected with religion, and might perhaps by some (as it is, indeed, by the editor, not the negative side of the religious question. There can be no doubt, however, that this remarkable paper fully vindicates its uprightness as well as its righteousness, condemning both the utilitarian and the intuitional schools as being saily deficient in that they make the final authority rest in the subjective; the mind or the conscience is the supreme autority. Though, says Mr. Abbot, the insepable association of certain ideas, as well as the character of any and every institution, depend entirely upon the action of this Obligation in consciousness, while the "two combined as endless action and reaction be tween the mind and the Nature of Things give the due to the Moral History of Man, which is explained only by the law of evolution." (thus furnishing acomption by the law of evolution to this remarkable paper induction by the tween the utilitation and Intuitional philosophies severally claim our allegiance. Their arguments are often so plausible that it is difficult to game are often so plausible that it is difficult to game are often so plausible that it is difficult to game and the subjective is the utilitation and Intuitional philosophies aeverally claim our allegiance. Their arguments are often so plausible that it is difficult to game and the subjective is an out as the character of a set of the subjective is the subjective and the subjective is an other of the subjective.

SIASCONSET.

<text><section-header><text><text><text><text>

-

27.

12

dr.H.S.

4 10 1

乾

1220

54 S. B.

12/12 17

10.5

all furniabed, for fifty or sixty dollars a season, and either keep house or take their meals at one of the prior keep house or take their meals at one of the prior keep house or take their meals at one of the hand. Hesides these cotages, there are two hotels, hand. Hesides these cotages, there are two hotels, band. Hesides these cotages, there are two hotels, band. Hesides these cotages, there are two hotels, band. Hesides these cotages, there are two hotels, band the same competent hand was visible in the near rooms, opening on a breezy plazza and commanding fascinating views. Visions sometimes pays this hotel, expecting pleasanter quarters nearer the shore; but I can only say that they may go farther say this hotel, expecting pleasanter quarters nearer the shore; but I can only say that they may go farther say this take of Slasconset I. What should be they are so near the sea, there is little to choose in point of locality, and the dist to the blue sea beyon. The pursest sea air on the coast. The prevailing finance is not reduced, by any means, the south west. Slasconset gets this wind fresh winds result is not reduced, by any means, the south west. Sinconset to breathe. It is worth the south west, when all drink it is. There is no danger from the undertow so long at atom ming the tach a chief and to be a single. There would the other way, will be the ore tow. Hold fast to the rower, on a strong the stating on batting at the is and; the way fashing to be had for the trying. Scup and strong the sail and for the trying. Scup and strong the sail and for the trying. Scup and strong they are south shore, if any shall no the end of it were now and they are shall shall be want of muscale and and can be and in the sail and the sail which the wave show to hold to.

LEGAL TREATMENT OF EMOTIONAL IN-SANITY.

The legal relations of morbid impulse are of vast importance to society. My own opinion in regard to the manner in which the law should deal with indi-viduals thus affected will easily be ascertained by the following :-

purpos

purpose. 2. The individual who is clearly shown to have yielded to a previously unfelt impulse to commit crime, and who accordingly perpetrates an otherwise motiveless offence, or one which in his normal con-dition would evidently not have been committed, is too dangerous to society to be allowed to go at large. He ought to be placed under permanent restraint. I say permanent, because experience shows that this form of mental aberration is exceedingly apt to recur. Sereral of the cases I have cited are illustrations of crime committed after the discharge from confine-ment, and there are hundreds of similar instances on record.

ment, and there are hundreds of summer record. 3. Those morbidly constituted individuals who commit crimes because it is pleasant for them to do to, such as Helen Isgado, Dumollard, Pomeroy, and others whom I might mention, should be treated ex-actly like other offenders of the laws. The apparent absence of motive is apparent only. The fact that the criminal experiences pleasure from the committal

Of the act is as strong a motive as any other that can be alleged, and is entitled to no more externating force than the pleasure of revenge, acquisitiveness, or other passions. "Lord, how I do love thieving!" said a London vagabond; "if I had all the riches of the world, I would still be a thief."
4. The fact that a murder has been committed in order that the perpetrator might secure his own execution is not a palliating circumstance. Those who contend that it is—and I am sorry to find Dr. Maudsley among them—seem to be actuated by the errone-ous idea that suicide is necessarily the act of an in-same person. The desire to be executed may be evidence of a morbid mind, but not necessarily of an insame one; and if we are going to excuse every crime notoriety-loving people, we might as well close our courts at once.
6. A morbid impulse to crime experienced by an insame person—and by an insame person I mean one who exhibits other evidences of insanity beside the morbid impulse, and who would be considered by competent judges to be insame, even if no such impulse existed—demands continued sequestration.
8. But the plea "I could not help it" is one which are member of the criminal classes can urge with as would be absolutely disregarded by juries and judges. —W. A. Hammond, M.D., th the "Heraid of Health".

Bold be absolutely divergarded by juries and judges, -W. A. Hammond, M.D., in the "Herald of Health" for July.
MUSCULAR CHRISTIANITY was once so popular at Mr. Kingsley and his imitators presented us with a vast number of clerical heroes, each of whom was six feet high, could preach three sermons, walk twensy fore miles, administer thirty-three baptisms, visit seventeen sick persons, and thrash seventeen impentance of the seventeen in pentance of the seventeen in the course of one Sunday's work. The dot and the sevent of the seventeen in pentance of the seventeen in pentance of the seventeen in the course of one Sunday's work. The dot sevent seve

Leeds (Eng.) Telegraph. THE Pail Mall Gazette reproduces from an Italian correspondent of the Neue Freie Prese the follow-ing incidents in reference to Garibald. Befores the General resided in Caprera, it rarely happened that a ship bouched at the island, while during the past three years no fewer than one hundred and fifty steamera have stopped there. Four Neapolitan vessels have been presented, chiefly by Americans, with agricultu-ral implements to the value of from 14,000 to 16,000 lire. He has also received other presents, consisting of money, jewelry, etc., to the value of about 1,000,000 lire, but he has returned them all to the senders. Garibaldi is honorary citizen of ninety towns, vil-lages, and districts, and honorary president of one hundred and twenty societies; he has twenty-one swords of honor, eleven of which have been sent him from abroad, and airce 1871 he has received upwards of five thousand addresses of sympathy from various quarters. The island of Caprera brings in to the Gen-eral a net income of about 3,000 lire. A lire is about nine and one half pence English. nine and one half pence English.

THE ELIZABETH Herald says: "On Monday the little son of one of our citizens, while playing with his sister, a bright, sweet child of five summers, got hold of his father's gun, which had been carelessly left standing in the kitchen by the thoughtless parent, pointed the gun at his playmate, and saying, jokingly, 'I'll kill you,' pulled the trigger. What must have been that boy's feelings when he found that he had lied, that the gun was not loaded, and that his innocent little sister had knocked a portion of his nose off with a stick of wood."

Hoetry.

401

IDLING ONE DAY IN JUNE.

BY JOHN W. CHADWICK.

Idling one day in June, my aimless feet, Forbidden, crossed the threshold of that fane By grateful Harvard built for her dear slain, Thom Freedom counted for her service meet.

Above me rose the glorious sheaf of towers, As on the anowy tablets, slow, I read The names of all the generous-hearted dead Who were our chivalry's most perfect flowers.

There were the names of men whom all the land Halled as the greatest in these dreadful days; There, too, their names whose only meed of praise Was the deep sense of doing God's command.

And one I read which off I used to speak, In loving-wise, as friend doth speak with friend: Brave, ardent spirit! whoresoever tend Thy restless feet, show dost the highest seek.

And, as I gazed, with dimmer sight I saw, Upon rude stagings high above my head, The workmen painting words that shall be read Through countless years of Liberty and Law;

unding words of that melodious tongue

Which Tully spoke and Virgii sang so well; But nonght of all their meaning could they tell, Who on the wall their various colors flung.

And some there were who worked in sombre hues, While others bravely did illinminate With red and gold some word of greater weight; But all alike the meaning all did lose.

Behold, I thought, a parable of those Whose names are graven on these tablets cold; They did their work, yet little could have told Of meanings wast which only Heaven knows.

Behold, I thought, a parable of all Who do mee's work upon this mortal strand; Great meanings which they cannot understand They paint and grave on Time's memorial wall.

There are who work in colors dull and cold; There are who work in characters of flame: It matters not, the glory is the same; For only thus the tale is fitly told,

Which He can read who builds all seas above, Bo strong that nothing can destroy or mar, In every sun, in every circling star, The everiasting temple of Bis love.

Christian Union

NEW SUBSCRIPTIONS TO INDEX STOCK.

share,	$100
16	200
	100
44	100
	500 100
44	100
44	108
46	100
	108 100
16	100
	100 100
	109
+1	100
	100 100
41	100
44	200
	100 100
86	100
	100
	48. 86

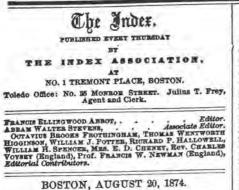

CASH BECEIPTS.

FOR THE WERE ENDING AUGUST 15. Lewis Scott, $3; P. S. Crowell, $3; Homer Chapman, $3; J. C. Fargo, $125; H. S. Heberling, 75 cents; Benj, R. Tuck-er, $1.50; A. H. Wimbish, $1.50; R. C. Baasett, 75 cents; R. A. Ballou, $2; James Knights, $3; G. F. Barret, $3; James G. Richardson, $3; B. F. George, $2.50; James Wood, $4; Mrs. George R. Russell, $1.50; W. C. Moore, $6 cents; Samuel Brook, 14 cents; M. Pechin, 75 cents; H. N. Spaan, Co. G. Steele, 50 cents; G. B. Baymond, 50 cents; George W. Shoch, $2; Mrs. Mary Westphal, $13; P. Stew-art, $6; J. S. Lyon, $5; Mrs. W. F. Bowman, 75 cents; W. Allen, $2; E. W. Hooper, $5; Mrs. K. Switzer, $1.75; J. E. Follett, $30; George H. Foster, $0 cents; A. K. Lor-ing, $2 cents; Charles E. Fratt, 75 cents. All receipts of cash will be acknowledged as above, and no other receipt sent unless opeically requested. Persons who do not see their romittances acknowledged within three weaks after sending, will please notify us. FOR THE WEEK ENDING AUGUST 15.

who do not see their remittances acknowledge and three works after sending, will please notify us. N. B. —Please remit by post-office money-order, by regis-tered letter, or by draft on Beston or New York. Checks on interior banks are liable to discount, and the tarm of subscription will be proportionally shortened in the credit. N. B. —Ordera for Tracts or single numbers of Tim In-pax which are not on hand will, if of small amount, be other erwise filed to the same amount without forther notice. N. B. —Orderage on Tim INDEX is five cents per quarter, dating from receipt of the first number, jayable in ad-vance at the place of delivery. N. B. —When writing about a former remittance, always give the date of such remittance as caudy as possible. N. B. —Please examine the ADDRESS and DATE on your INDEX mail-tag, and report at once any error in either.

Toolda by Google

THE INDEX-AUGUST 20, 1874.

SUNDAY LECTURES .- The Editors of THE INDEX will lecture occasionally on Sundays, if desired, within a convenient distance of Boston.

COMMUNICATIONS come in much faster than they can be printed; but we do our best to give every clear-headed writer a chance to be read.

AN ESSAY on the temperance question will be found in this issue of THE INDEX, written several years ago, but expressing our present convictions on that subject.

SENATOR WINDOM, of Minnesota, has discovered that "very few" of his constituents are in favor of inflation. A similar discovery awaits, we trust, the other inflationists of the last Congress.

A CHARMING DESCRIPTION of Sissconset, reprinted on another page, will show our readers where we spent several days of the vacation for which we are under such delightful obligation to our kind friends. It is written by one of our companions at the time.

MR. PILLSBURY'S articles on the record of the Christian Church with reference to African slavery ought not to be overlooked by anybody. The more facts, dates, quotations, and exact references he gives on this subject, the greater will be the obligation he lays on the readers of THE INDEX and its editor.

MR. C. E. NORTON, of Cambridge, has set a useful example by publicly cautioning everybody against the railroad between Shelburne Falls and the Hoosac Tunnel, on account of the bad condition of the road, which has led to several accidents of late, and nearly cost him his own life recently. If every person who escapes from a railroad accident would do the same, and so prevent the hushing-up policy that too largely prevalle, the railroad companies would soon be taught to exercise less economy at the expense of human life.

SOON AFTER his return from America to England, Mr. Bradlaugh, in describing this country, fell into some mistakes not to be wondered at in consideration of his short stay and necessarily hasty observations. We wish, for instance, that he drew a true picture when he says: "There the Bible cannot be thrust by force down the throats of the school children." "The Americans, at present, have positively refused to allow the Catholic priesthood to tamper with their school system." The day will come when we shall have earned this commendation.

A LETTER from New Orleans, recently received by Mr. Underwood from the Secretary of the Liberal League in that city, states that there is a "very large liberal element in Louisiana," but (as elsewhere) it is very hard to unite them for vigorous work. The Catholics are numerous and strong; the negroes are nearly all Protestants, but "superstitious in the extreme." Thus far the New Orleans League has "worked sliently," for the purpose of getting themselves accustomed to combined action before undertaking public meetings. "Please see Mr. Abbot for me," says the writer, "and let him know that the Demands of Liberalism will not be likely to take with the negro population. The word Liberal will kill it at once in their estimation throughout the South. As a whole they can be made to understand only the first Demand. It must be borne in mind that they are now citizens and voters, but very ignorant and superstitious. Nothing will go down with them unless the names 'Republican' and 'Union' are ingredients in it. . . . I am trying to persuade Mr. --, editor of -, to place the first Demand of Liberalism at the head of his columns, as a plank in his future platform. . . . My advice is that you at once organize a colored Liberal League in Boston, prepare suitable circulars showing that Lincoln, Sumner, etc., were in favor of the movement, and get them to circulate these among the leading negroes all over the South."

"THE STRENGTH OF UNBELIEF."

In another column will be found an article with the above caption copied from the New York Independent of August 6. Some characteristic criticisms by this paper on "unbellef in Boston" drew out, it seems, a courteous remonstrance from Colonel Higginson, to which the editor courteously replies by clinching his former misrepresentations as well as he is able, though not with as much success as determination. It may not be a waste of ink to print a little more on the subject than was contained in our casual mention of these misrepresentations in THE INDEX of the same date. But we have not the ghost of a suspicion that the infallible Independent will curtail a comma of its published misstatements; for we notice that, whenever it has cyphered that two times two are seventeen, it invariably sticks to its cyphering in the face of all the Arithmetics in the country, and justifies its name by being gloriously "independent" of the multiplication table.

1. This heroic "defender of the faith" of Henry C. Bowen (who is the only editor the public is permitted to know) institutes a comparison between the Boston of Theodore Parker's time and the Boston of to-day, with reference to their relative "strength of unbe-As is well known, Parker stood almost absollef." lutely alone in New England, as the representative of religious radicalism, and was cast out with horror by the Unitarians; to-day he ranks side by side with Channing in the saints' calendar of that denomination, and speaks through the lips of a large proportion of its ministers. His "three thousand" hearers have become many times three thousand admirers and co-believers; and his type of "unbelief" is to-day comparative conservatism. The Parker Memorial Hall is finished and occupied by a fine audience; the Paine Hall will soon be so likewise. The Free Religious Association hold their largely attended conventions not only in Boston, but in many other leading cities, New York itself not excepted; they sustain every winter a course of lectures in Horticultural Hall which is one of the established institutions of the city; and they are making a fair beginning as a publishing association. The Radical Club has been for years one of the most famous features of Boston. exerting a wide and incalculable influence; and the Second Radical Club bids fair to become equally influential, if its future career is not to fall behind its past. The Liberal League has made itself quietly but most powerfully feit in Boston the past year on the question of church taxation, and intends to resume its peculiar work of "unbelief" (we forbear to criticise this nickname for strong, positive convictions) with redoubled energy. The Spiritualists have several flourishing organizations, and have just been holding successful camp-meetings very largely attended: and Hospitaller Hall has its own stout corps of sappers and miners, which will by no means disband in order to accommodate the Independent. The Investigator and the Banner of Light are both thriving and doing excellent service in what its critic considers so "weak" a cause; and THE INDEX has been already published a year in Boston. This is enough to show that Rev. Mr. Baker was not far out of the way when he styled Boston a "camp of unbelief;" and if the Independent is not sagacious enough to recognize the Cassandra of Orthodoxy in its at present somewhat discredited Blauvelt, experience will come in by and by to supplement its sagacity and secure for that genulne seer a modicum of honor in his own country. Dr. Blauvelt is right: Christianity was never in such danger as it is to-day; and our happy New York ostrich may be left to get the sand out of its eyes at its leisure. Even so far as organization alone is concerned, the "unbelievers" (that is, those who believe too much truth to believe in the half-truths of the Independent) were never so strong in Boston as they are to-day.

2. But the fact is that this penetrating critic, in its anxiety to prove the "unbelievers" a very "feeble folk," measures them by the only yardstick it understands-denominational statistics; and the result is what might be expected. It practically confesses that it knows nothing of social and intellectual forces which it cannot do up in pound packages and peddle out at retail; it stares bewildered at all forms of belief which do not run a parish, build a three hundred thousand dollar meeting-house, and point triumphantly to the religious pyrotechnics of sensational ministers and operatic choirs. There is but meagre intelligence in the attempt to reckon the "strength of unbelief" by the table of avoirdupois weight, or to estimate the influence of radical ideas by means of the grocer's scales. Dr. Blauvelt falls into no such blunder. He knows that the Christianity is "weak" which cannot command the respect of the trained modern intellect, and beholds with alarm the Church's neglect of intellectual self-protection. The Independent runs through a list of radical speakers and writers who were once ministers and are now something else, and concludes that radicalism is "weak" in proportion as it abandons methods fitted only for the uses of conservatism-that the religion is dead which does not "preach." Perhaps it is; but it is a lively corpse. "We cannot see any great gain of Free Re-ligion," says the Independent, "within the past ten or twenty years." Ten years ago the very name was unknown : what now makes it used so constantly and conspicuously? Do such names come up without a cause or justification in existing facts? It is sometimes convenient not to "see;" but those who have eyes and use them see that there are great multitudes of the best educated and most earnestly humanitarian people of our time who are coming to recognize in religion a mighty and indispensable force for good, yet are driven by intellectual honesty to seek it outside of Christianity. That this movement has not yet taken any decided, organized form, we are the first to admit; but whoever argues that the move-ment is "weak" because it sports no sectarian Year Book excites the quiet mirth of the well-informed.

8. We cannot help wondering whether Colonel Higginson's good opinion of the Independent's "canwill receive any modification from its statement dor" with reference to the Horticultural Hall meetings of last winter, that "news of them did not reach our ears." Several of the lectures there delivered were printed in THE INDEX, which also frequently mentioned them; THE INDEX has exchanged for several years with the Independent ; and that the Independent read THE INDEX last winter was proved by its own columns. Considering the other sources of knowledge of those meetings, which were sufficiently abun-dant in other journals, it must be reluctantly conceded either that the Independent remembers more than it chooses to acknowledge or else that something was the matter with its "ears."

4. The sneers of the Independent at the intellectual character of our associates and contributors are beneath contempt. That we are ever tempted to feel "shamed by their company," or that they confer anything but honor upon us, we deny with as much in-dignation as such irresponsible, petty, and guess-work slander is capable of exciting-which is not much. The fact that we have come to know hundreds of our subscribers personally, and thousands of them by letter, justifies us in saying that for culture, education, native vigor of mind, purity and earnestness of aspiration, private and public worth, and honorable standing in the communities where they reside, we believe them to be the peers of the constituency of any paper in the land-the Independent most certainly not excepted. Nothing but the intensest and deusest ignorance, alming a shaft at random, could have originated a calumny so absurd. We have to thank THE INDEX for bringing us into relation with some of the finest, sweetest, purest, and most thoroughly cultivated people of the nation, some occupying high and responsible positions and others moving quietly in the retired places of life. If we were ashamed of our company, we should have cause to be ashamed indeed.

5. We have but a brief word to say respecting the "influence" of THE INDEX, and the class over which it is assumed by the Independent to be exercised; and this is to acknowledge the chivalry of Colonel Higginson's defence of it. Certainly the influence of THE INDEX on such a man must be very slight; and he would probably have thought little of it, were it. not that, being constitutionally impelled to thrust himself between any injustice and its victim, he was eager to make the most of this little under the circumstances. Further than to hint our gratitude for this generous defence, we have nothing to say of the charge that prompted it. What, or how great, or over whom exercised, is the influence of THE INDES. we do not know; let others determine. It will take a great deal more "influence" than the Independent can exert to tempt us into any foolishness on that point. It is our business to speak what we believe, with a conscience towards man and towards our own soul; but it is none of our business to be looking after our shadow, or standing up to be measured with other people. Of course we hope to exert a real influence, and for good; else we should not work so hard for THE INDEX. But the looker on sees most of the game, and we by no means assume that we accomplish what we seek. Nor is it of much moment, after all. Life is short, but humanity lives on; and the best that the best can do is to lay one stone of the rising temple of Truth. It is the empty-headed only who gets conceited or testy about his "influence"; and it is the empty-hearted only who cares more for it than for doing some needed service for his fellow-men. Of one thing we are sure : that a man's best influence is precisely that which he knows least about. So be The moral for us all is that there is a great deal 14. of genuine religion in minding our own business, and not feeling our own pulse too tenderly or too much.

Digitized by CaOO

210

402

1.5

2 Ν.,

е,

5

ź

20 10 τ.

17

2 72

ŝ.

5

6. It only remains to say that THE INDEX is not our private "organ," but the organ of all who write in it, and above all the organ of ideas held by thousands of earnest minds.

VACATION JOTTINGS.

I hope that every reader of THE INDEX has had, is having, or is going to have a vacation during this delicious summer-time. Whether you live in town or country, whether you work with hand or brain, you need a season of rest, in which to think a calm thought, to experience an utterly peaceful feeling, to breathe a deep, free breath, to get an attitude of repose towards Nature and all the world. For a few weeks, or at least for a few days, you men must stop money-making, you women must stop house-keeping, you care-takers and laborers must stop worrying and working, and each and all seek a new scene, a new environment, and a new vocation. Go to the mountains or the sea; go to the sweet, clean country; go to the farm-house on the hill-side, or to that one situate in the broad, open valley, in the cool shadow of trees, near the deep-flowing stream, -go anywhere away from noise, away from haste, away from work and care, away from business and fashion, where the wonderful pure eye of Nature may look you through and through; where the breath of her love may infuse your whole being, soften, warm, and kindle your soul; where her grandeur, majesty, strength, and great repose may impress you, and where all her simple, charming, rural sights and sounds may interest. amuse, and instruct you, and make you, too, simple and natural, full of delightful self-unconsciousness, innocent, artless, and winsome as in childhood.

The kind fortune which unexpectedly brought to me a week's vacation has appointed that I should spend it by the sea; and thoroughly blessed am I in such appointment, -for, though I love the mountains, I am an equal lover of the ocean, and am "perfectly happy with either, when t'other dear charmer's away." The place where I am is an old one to Nature, but a new one to man ; and, as yet, Nature has it as she likes it,-man has not succeeded in spoiling it. I do not propose, either, to write it up now in the interest of any company or association, or solicit for it the favor of the public; for I fear it is destined all too fast and too soon to become popular, and, alas, fashionable. But at present it is a quiet, beautiful, and very pleasant retreat, the resort only of those who used to camp here in vacation time, and of such of their friends and acquaintances as have gradually been invited and attracted to the spot. Only, now, instead of the score or so of white tents that formerly glistened in a picturesque semi-circle near the shore as many modest summer cottages dot the cleared lawn that slopes from the wide woods to the wider sea, and one large hotel spreads its ample roof and porch, inviting to its low-priced hospitality all such as do not wish to "sleep and eat themselves." Here, on the west shore of Buzzard's Bay, in plain sight of Martha's Vineyard, Penikese, Cuttyhunk, and numerous other islands, with a fine bay and ocean view -view from beetling bluff and sandy beach and grassy upland and tide-washed rock,-shone on at night by seven beacon lights that are eyes to the mariner in the darkness, and which from different distant points send tremulous shafts of light across the water to our very door,-all day warmed by the sun and fanned by ocean breeze, which are so kindly mutual as to produce a temperature that all enjoy, and which the doctor of this little community professionally recommends .- here the kind fates have led me: here in this lovely spot, and in a life that is simple, natural, free, jolly, and deliciously idle, my vacation days are delightfully and all too rapidly passing, but leaving for me results which I gratefully feel to be enriching to body, mind, and spirit.

The art of taking, or rather spending, vacations is truly worth learning. I have seen many a vacation spent and utterly frittered away by those who did not know how to use them when they had got them. Sometimes circumstances conspire to defeat the real object of a vacation. That is truly unfortunate. But one soon learns how to avoid or take advantage of such circumstances. It does not require much money to have a good vacation. It does require good sense, good judgment, and good company. One of the best vacations I ever had was spent in "camping out" with a friend; and that, too, when I was half sick. Nature is both physician and nurse, and to those who love her and trust her she is wonderfully kind. On that occasion I gave myself to her in weakness, and she made me strong. Now again I have given myself to her in loving confidence, and I find she is blessing me every hour of the day and the night. Plain food, easy dressing, outdoor living, an unfretting soul, pleasant companions who know how to combine fun with sense, hilarity with intellectuality,-it is astonishing how invigorating and recreative all these are!

The life I am living here is the next best thing to camp life. The doors and windows of our cottag are continually open, and at all hours of the night and day the whole premises are searched through and through, and swept clean of every impure breath, by the saline air of the sea and the soft, sweet breezes from the woods. Nobody can resist the constant invitation into the open weather. The children hardly can be coaxed to bed, or won to sit long enough at table to east their food. As soon as possible after sleeping and eating, the house is deserted by man and woman, child and servant; and Nature, whose children we all are, overcomes us with her sweet seduction, and leads us whithersoever she will,-now to this hannt and sport and then to that, we not knowing in which we find most delight.

All this day, for instance, I have been reclining on the grass, under a red-cedar tree, close to the brow of the cliff, reading, writing, talking, dreaming, idly gazing, and getting thoroughly permeated with the spiritual-sensuous influence of all these surroundings. What a variety of sights I have seen, and sounds I have heard, and emotions I have experienced, since I sought this delightful spot this morning! "The sea is His, and He made it?" Yes, and all this blessed day He has spread the sea out before my eyes, and I have feasted soul and sense on its beauty, its versatility, its sublimity, its mystery. This morning, only the faintest breath of wind stirred its surface, and scarce any noise came from it but the low, monotonous, yet pleasant "swash" of the waves on the rocks In a little while, a boat glided out from below me. the shore, filled with some ambitious juvenile fishermen accompanied by one older head for a sort of ballast, whose voices I heard as they went coasting about for the best "ground" for fishing. All at once, there crossed the line of my vision a noble ship, with all sails set, bearing out to sea. A long voyage is before her. She is a whaler, and is just started on a cruise that may last two, three, or four years. Where bound? Round Cape Horn,-for the Pacific Ocean,-Behring Straits. My eyes and my heart followed her as far as the one could see, and the other imagine. What partings have been said by those on board; what histories they carry, and what they leave behind | What possible tragedies of hearts and fortunes depend upon the voyage which this ship is now beginning! Not all who go out in her may live to return : and even if they should, some of those at home who bade them good-by may not be there to say them welcome. And yet, who knows? All may go well and prosperously. At any rate, here's to the safe voyage of this noble ship, and her sure return!

She is hardly gone out of sight before the bathers appear, men and women, boys and girls. What a merry making is now! Splashing and dashing, diving and ducking, bobbing up and down so comically, tearing of mad-caps round the beach, screaming, shouting, laughing, talking, chattering! All sorts of costumes appear, whole ones and semi-ones,- the boys wearing the latter, and looking like so many plump little cupids without wings. Here is one girl who goes boldly off in a boat into deep water, and dives, coming up to the surface and striking off with a swimmer's good stroke. She is quite pretty, too, which makes her accomplishment all the more interesting.

At last the bathers are gone, and all is still again. Only, the wind has risen now, and the red cedar sighs sonorously, and the sea has deep wrinkles over all its broad face. The terns fly anxiously about, piping to one another, every now and then dashing into the water and bearing off their prey. They are better fishers than we are, for they were brought up to the business. Manya craft comes and goes over the bay, and clusters of afternoon strollers begin to appear on the rocks, and roam along the shore, watching the sails, listening to the surf, and getting infinite enjoyment from doing much of nothing and a little of everything.

Thus the day wears to a close, and the sun has gone back from the sea, across to the woods, and soon will touch with his last glory the clouds in the west-ern sky. Then the night will come down, as I have seen it every time this week, bringing the great dark-ness over the great deep—the deep below answering to the deep above—and the stars will come out, and the beacon lights will shine. And then, as so many times before, I shall be impressed anew with the mighty mystery of the occan, because its mystery will be doubled by the marriage thereof to the mighty mystery of the night! The nights here are even more irresistible than the days. We stay out in them until sheer sleepiness drives us to bed. How deeper grows the stillness, how more impressive becomes the calm! We sit or lie on the rocks, sometimes, in long spells of silence, arives us to bed. How deeper grows the stillness, how more impressive becomes the calm 1 We sit or lie on the rocks, sometimes, in long spells of silence, too religiously reverent in the great cathedral of the night to speak a word. At other times we sing hymns, and try to chime in with the grand music of the sea. Then again, the influence of the night is exhilarating and exciting to us, and we dance about and frolic like weird spirits in the darkness. And, when at last we repair to our couches, the waves sing to us their iullaby, and we fall asleep with the low, musical rote of the shore sounding in our ears. There is a great deal of natural religion in this way of passing our vacation days and nights. This little community of Nonquit is probably prayerless, as the Church would term it. Perhaps we get through with our vacation without thinking of Christ. We know no difference here between Sunday and any oth-er day. And yet I have never met men more truly religious than some of these right-down radicals that congregate here from year to year. They know truth and goodness when they see them embodied in char-acter, and reverence them in the unostentations life. They are sensitive to all the fine influences of these beautiful surroundings, and give gentle heed to all the holy ministries of Nature. I have passed hours here in their company, as filled with worshipful thoughts and feelings as any I ever spent in church; and I shall leave this place, feeling that it has been and our human nature; and to find our enjoyment and our human nature; and to find our enjoyment and our human nature; and to find our enjoyment and our human nature; and to find our enjoy and our duty in all those ways wherein our seeks spontaneous and natural action. A. w enjoyment being A. W. 8.

Literary Hotices.

BOOKS FOR CHILDREN AND YOUNG PERSONS. Book X. The Sight of Hell. By the Rev. I. Furniss, C. S. S. R. Dublin. 1871. Price one penny. Many persons who have won for themselves, or been so blessed as to receive by inheritance, religious views untainted by the horrible superstitions which disgrace the Christian as well as all other dog-matic churches excuse themselves from taking any active part in the work of promoting enlightened views of theology and religion, by laying "the flatter-ing unction to their souls" that these old beliefs are already dead, and are not now active agents for evil ing unction to their souls" that these old beliefs are already dead, and are not now active agents for evil in our community. Because they can attend a Cath-olic mass and only feel the beauty of the music, or listen to an Orthodox sermon as they would to an Eastern legend, they do not realize that the fearful visions of sin and hell are terrible realities to many souls, and work upon the sensitive nerves of timid men, women, and children, to torture and blast their whole lives. Many a physician can tell of the baleful influence of the revival excitement on his young and sensitive patients, and many a man can look back and see how his youthful energies have been wasted in the strug-gle to escape from the chains which have been bound around him in youth. The Roman Catholics have suffered such cruel per-secutions and unjust restrictions in England and Ire-

The Roman Catholics have suffered such cruel per-secutions and unjust restrictions in England and Ire-land, that our sympathies go with them in their efforts after political rights; but this fact should not blind our eyes to the real nature of the doctrines that they teach. When we remember that it is that church which specially claims that religious instruction is to be the only basis of public education, it behooves us to see what it is that they propose to teach to "chil-drem and young persons." This little book is a speci-its atatements, and so may show our "liberal" Bible worshippers what lessons the teacher may draw from its pages. its page its pages. The whole book is a picture, painted in the liveliest colors which exaggeration can use, of the horrors of hell. After saying that hell is in the middle of the earth, and describing how St. Gregory looked down the burning moustain of Stromboli and saw the Em-peror Theodoric going into the fire, the writer com-putes the actual distance to hell as four thomaand miles, and enjoins it as a duty to go down and look at it while yet alive, that we may escape it after death. death.

Now imagine the effect of this teaching upon the Now imagine the effect of this teaching upon the child I tis no shadowy realm, but an actual place measured by miles, which will become more real to his imagination than Paris or Rome. The fire, the darkness, the smoke, the noise, and the smell are there described with every accompaniment that can intensify their effect; and, to crown all, the devil is painted in minute detail, with every possible horror. It ends: "One of the saints who saw the devil asid she would rather be burned for a thousand years than look at the devil for one moment." Then the business of this devil consists in tempting souls, and there are enumerated as among the sins for which men will be condemned to this fearful torture: "Biaspheming, or impurity, or stealing, or drunken-which men will be concerned to the tearth of the. "Blaspheming, or impurity, or stealing, or drunken-ness, or not hearing mass on Sundays, or not going to the sacraments," etc. "Now the devil opens his mouth. He gives out the tremendous sentence on

Dinimesta GOOGC

<page-header><text><text><text><text>

Communications.

"NATURAL MORALITY" AND SPIRITU-ALISM.

<text><text><text><text><text><text><text>

"Nature's divine revelations" will never become unfashionable

"Antures divine revenuences with here's decome the But note Wallace's express denial of the super-natural and miraculous. It is because he fluds this "theory of a future state" so "in harmony with the whole order of Nature" that he regards it as reliable, adde from "the long series of demonstrative facts" which he has given. He says: "Contrast this system of natural and inevitable rewards and pullshments de-pendent on stated acts and beliefs only, as set forth in all dogmatic religions." Is it not the latter (the ar-bitrary and dogmatic), clashing against the beautiful order of Nature, which points to "delusion and im-posture"? And does not the former, by its very har-mony with so much of natural law as we know, offer an argument in its favor, even if it does not negative the objection?

an argument in its favor, even if it does not negative the objection? Why, then, suggest the old idea of a revelation of divine authority, when it seems to be the object of Wallace to present the claims of a natural revelation, coming to us through the scientific method? Of the demonstrative facts themselves he says: "When it is considered that the mediums of all grades, whether intelligent or ignorant, and having communications given through them in various direct and indirect ways, are absolutely in accord as to the gross misstatement that nothing is given through me-diums but what they know and believe themselves? The mediums have, almost all, been brought up in some of the usual Orthodox notions of heaven are never confirmed through them?" "In the scores of yol-umes and pamphlets of spiritual literature I have read, I have found no statement of a spirit describing 'winged abgels,' or 'golden harps,' or the 'throne of God,' to which the humblest Orthodox Christian thinks he will be introduced if he goes to heaven at all. There is no more startling and radical opposi-tion to be found between the most diverse religions creeds than that between the beliefs in which the majority of mediums have been brought up and the doctrines as to a future life that are delivered through them; there is nothing more marvelious in the histo-ry of the buman mind than the fact that, whether in them; there is nothing more marvellous in the histo-ry of the human mind than the fact that, whether in the backwoods of America or in the country towns of England, ignorant men and women, having almost all been brought up in the usual sectarian notions of heaven and hell, should, the moment they become seized by the strange power of mediumship, give forth teachings on this subject which are philosophi-cal rather than religious, and which differ wholly from what had been so deeply ingrained into their minds.<sup>21</sup> minds."

"unconscious cerebration" is compelled to father If "unconscious cerebration" is compelled to father all this unsettling of religious beliefs, then has it in-deed a fearful responsibility. Of what use is any conscious religious instruction if some "unconscious" action steps in to negative it all? However, the clergy, to save their pet idea of the devil, will never favor the idea of "unconscious cerebration." A very conscious devil will alone satisfy them, while science is hard at work solving the question. How much of this is the result of an intelligence other than our own? own?

own? A movement so universal as Spiritualism should, I sincerely believe, have larger notice in the columns of THE INDEX. It is not simply an "ism," or a re-ligion, but a science. That portion of humanity emancipated by it, true to the instinct of "natural morality," feels a debt of gratitude, and cannot for-get the friend who opened the prison doors and bade them go hence. Spiritualism represents to them cer-tain claims and principles which they do not find in-culcated with the same emphasis outside of their own organizations. Hence they will continue to do so until the truths of this science are absorbed by the old re-ligious bodies. ligious bodies. The Free Religious movement I have looked upon ligious bodies. The Free Religious movement I have looked upon s a basis broad enough for Spiritualists; and many Free Religionists, as well as some of the officers of that Association, are Spiritualists. Yet, until some larger recognition is made of the special claims of Spiritualiste, they will, I believe, continue to organ-ize outside the Free Religious movement. What are these special as well as general claims? More than twenty years ago, Mr. A. E. Newton, of Boston, drew up a paper "defining modern Spirit-ualism, theoretically and practically."* Two years ago, the Spiritualists of this city drew up a "Declaration of Principles" from this paper, with some slight alterations. I believe the readers of THE INDEX can get no better idea of the claims of Spiritualism than from this Declaration, and hence I offer it for publication. The main points in it are corroborated by Wallace in his summing up, under the head of "Moral Teachings," the language in some places being almost identical. This is a strik-ing proof that the teachings of Spiritualism have not varied in twenty years. Time has simp brought it round to the arbitrament of science. Then let the readers of THE INDEX decide whether Spiritualism in harmony with "natural morality." MW CRLEANS, La., July 22, 1874. DECLARATION OF PRINCIPLES. L THEOREMENT.

DECLARATION OF PRINCIPLES.

I. THROBETCAL. 1. That man has aspiritual as well as a corporeal nature; a other words, that the real man is a spirit, which spirit as an organized form, composed of spiritual substance, ith parts and organs corresponding to those of the cor-oreal body. with with parts and organs corresponding to those of the cor-poreal body. 2. That man as a spirit is immortal. Being found to sur-vive that change called physical death, it may be reason-bly supposed that he will survive all future violssitudes. 3. That there is a spirit world, or state, with its substan-tial realities, objective as well as subjective. 4. That the process of physical death in no way essentially a supposed that the support of the substantransforms the mental constitution or the moral character of those who experience it. 5. That happiness or suffering in the apirit world, as in this, depends not on arbitrary decree or perceis provision, but on character, appirations, and degree of harmonization, or of perisonal conformity to universal and divine law. 6. Hence that the experiences and attainments of the present life lay the foundation on which the next com-mence.

* Published by the American Liberal Tract Society.

or of personal conformity to universal and divine law.
6. Bence that the experiences and attainments of the present life lay the foundation on which the next commence.
7. That store growth is the law of the human being in the present life in an since the process called death is in fait advantages gained in the experiences of this life.
7. That store growth is the law of the human being in the present life, into another condition of life, retaining all the advantages gained in the experiences of this life.
8. That the spirit world is in close proximity to as, and hence that we are constantly under the conjusance of spiritual beings.
9. That communications from the spirit world in all stages of measure from this to the spirit foculdes all grades of character, from the lowest to the hence that for any other mode of the imperiation, or any other mode of transmission, are not necessarily infailible truth: but, on the spirit world by of the imperiation of the contrary, partake unavoidably of the imperiation of the divide store mode of the mode of transmission, are not necessarily infailible truth: but, on the mode of the spirit world, the spirit world is the operation of the divide store of the divi

II. TRACTICAL
II. PRACTICAL
II. PRACTICAL
II. PRACTICAL
II. The bearty and inhelingent conviction of these truths, indicate and spiritual aspirations. To spirot from painful fears of death, and dread of imaging-verse consequent thereupon, us well as to prevent indicate the present worthell.
To the a rational and inviting conception of the afternation of the present and worthing the present and worthell the present is the sould be present and worthell the present of the present and worthell the present of the present of the the present of the there there the present of the there the

[Mr. Perkins' articles are always welcome to the pages of THE INDEX, none the less so when he administers a kindly rebuke for its supposed shortcomings; and we know he will read our present remarks in the same friendly spirit with which they are written.

1. The very essence of "Natural Morality" is its absolute independence of all that relates to the pasi or to the future, since it results necessarily from the actually existing relations of the present. Given intelligent beings in a state of society, the laws of ethics are involved necessarily in the mere existence of their mutual moral relations. These laws are precisely the same in fact, whether understood or notwhether taught or mistaught-whether sanctioned by this system or that, or repudiated by all systems. Unless this is fully comprehended, there is no comprehension of Natural Morality; and it shows that Natural Morality has absolutely no connection whatever with Christianity, or Spiritualism, or any other system of belief. These systems may teach their own peculiar morality, which, however, is nothing but an imperfect reflection of natural ethical law, and must be measured by it at last. All that concerns the scientific moralist is to get at the real relations of human life and the real laws that govern them: it is his chief endeavor to disentangle these realities from all theories of past revelation or future modes of existence, and get rid of the confusing and darkening effects of all such theories, which, whether true or false, have nothing whatever to do with his science. We must frankly say that Mr. Wallace's chapter on the "Moral Teachings of Spiritualism," whether true or false, has as little to do with Natural Morality as it has with astronomy. It unfolds a met-aphysical theory of human nature and destiny, and its supposed influence on human conduct; but it has nothing to say concerning the determination of rights and duties, in which all morality consists. His work is of value only as bearing on the truth or error of the

Distantin Google

Spiritualist hypothesis; it has no value as bearing on the science of Natural Morality, and indeed no connection with it.

2. As to the claims of Spiritualism to be a true philosophy and a demonstration of immortality, we have no motive for controverting them, but still less for urging them. Spiritualists are usually warm-hearted and liberal-minded people, and enter heartily into liberal movements; and we count many valued friends among them. Their belief is not bigoted, because not based on infallible authority; and so we have not the slightest wish to oppose it. But we do not share it, and recognize no obligation, after many very unrewarding attempts, to abandon positive duties in order to hant up "convincing proofs." So far as Spiritualists sympathize with the effort to free the human mind from the bondage of dogma and church, they are our natural allies; but surely they themselves would little relish a disposition to conciliate them by feigning a belief we have not. Let us cheerfully differ, and work earnestly together for such ends as we have in common.

 As to "some larger recognition of the special claims of Spiritualism" in THE INDEX, our files will show great multitudes of articles advocating them in these columns. We let Spiritualism urge its own claims for itself: what more can we do? We cannot arge them, surely, when we do not believe them. Our whole work is to hold up the universal claims of freedom, truth, justice, intelligence, virtue, brotherhood ; we have nothing to do with any special claims whatever. If Mr. Perkins has the will to do so, he could doubtless write most excellent articles in promotion of his belief, which we should be very glad to print, if of reasonable length. We wish and mean to be fair to all phases of liberal thought; but this seems to be acccomplished by giving a fair and courteous hearing to each.-En.]

"WHAT WAS AMERICAN SLAVERY !"

TO THE EDITOR OF THE INDEX :-

<text><text><text><text><text><text><text><text><text><text>

Columbia included, marriage among elaves was just as nugatory, just as impossible, as among Mr. Gholson's "mares." And here again the Church sancti-fied what the State sanctioned and supported. For instance: In 1835, some pious persons in the Georgia Baptist churches were exercised in mind about this wholesale havoc of the marriage institu-tion, and brought the question before the Savannah River Baptist Association in this form :--"Whether, in a case of involuntary separation, of such a character as to preclude all prospect of future intercourse, the parties ought to be shlowed to marry again?"

Answer:--"That such a separation, among persons situated as our slaves are, is civily a separation by death, and they believe that, in the sight of God, it would be so viewed. To forbid second marriages in such cases would be to expose the parties, not only to stronger hardships, and strong temptation, but to church cen-sure, for acting in obedience to their masters, who cannot be expected to acquiesce in a regulation at variance with justice to the slaves and to the spirit of that command which regulates marriage among Christiane. The slaves are not free agents, and a dis-solution by death is not more entirely without their consent; and beyond their control, than by such sepa-ration."

ration." And what was true of the Baptist churches of Georgia was true of all the churches there; and what was true of Georgia was true of all the Southern States. And the churches and pulpits of the North-ern States were participants and accomplices in what-ever abomination was enacted, perpetrated, or sancti-fied at the South. They were of one Lord, one Faith, one Practice.

fied at the South. They were of one Lord, one Faith, one Practice. And this was and is Christianity; the religion we are combating with arguments! Let us not forget, at the same time, to tell the world what the Christian religion has done in our day, in our nation, and, from all that has yet appeared, would gladly do again. PARKER PILLSHURY. CONCORD, N. H., August, 1874.

"FREE LOVE OR ENFORCED LUST."

"FREE LOVE OR ENFORCED LUST."
EDITOR OF THE INDEX:—
Tree love may be defined as meaning the abolition of marriage, so far as any civil or religious ceremony is required by law or public opinion to sanction the under of two individuals of different seres. The advocates of this theory, in order to make it effective, must first prove to the general satisfaction of society that marriage, as it exists among civilized nations at present, is more of an evil than a good to humanity. This proof, it is quite unnecessary to say, it is impossible for them to present.
Brash of the two many millions of obscure but authentic instances of reasonable conjugal felicity and the lower or middle classes, the advocates of free love confine their attention, and exercise their magination, almost exclusively upon the too frequent cases of marriages which occur among the uper or wealthier grades of society. From this inadequate, partial, and entirely unscientific and unphilosophical stand-point, a few sincere sentimentalists, and a much larger number of mercemary charlatans, or thoroughly vicious and depraved characters of obsteases, unite in an absurd assault of indecent invective against the experience of past ages, the less of reasons of history, the facts of physiology, the dictates of society against the experience of past ages, the less of reason, the elements of human nature, and the used of end of the distance of the son of the distance of the son, the distance of human nature, and the market of merceling the lower of a society of the distance of the distance of the son of the distance of the distance of reasons, the elements of physiology, the interve-sol reasons, the elements of human nature, and the wisdom of God. The principle involved in this question is not merely "the right of a woman to self-ownership,"— that point is conceded by the most bigoted and old-fashioned believer in permanent, indissoluble, and monogamous marriage. The true theory of marriage necessitates the assumption that no woman ought to marry until she flucks an unmarried man to whom she desires to give herself; and assumes likewise that such a man exists. Now (without reference to relig-ious belief, or existing customs, habits, laws, or insti-tutions) accepting only the greatest good of the great-est number of human beings, past, present, and to come, as the ultimate test by which marriage must stand or fall, what facts can be advanced to invali-date the assertion that more happiness than misery, more pleasare than pain, and thus more good than evil, result to society at large as the not aggregate of the institution of marriage? The only statistics of much account on this subject must be found either in the proportional number of divorces to marriages, or in the comparative amount of criminal cases of a cer-tain class,—as adultary, cruelty, infanticide, abortion, murder, etc.,—which can be traced either directly or indirectly to the permanent and binding nature of the marriage contract, and would not probably have oc-curred if no obligation had existed for more than a transient union.

marriage contract, and would not probably have oc-curred if no obligation had existed for more than a transient union. Selecting the Roman Catholics as one large class of our American communities among whom, divorce being almost impossible, marriage is most rigid in its body, we find the number of crimes mentioned above, and perpetrated as the result of matrimony, to be immensely less than among the Protestants, who have more frequent recourse to divorce. Not many Catholic wives and mothers can be justly charged with the crimes of infanticide or abortion, for in-stance. Crossing over to Europe, let us select the Jews of the various nations, and contrast them with the English Protestants in the same particulars, and again we find similar results. Wherever we examine the question narrowly, it will be found that, in pro-portion as the bonds of wedlock are relaxed, the sense of mutual dependence and consequent responsi-lity becomes weakened, and immorality increases. The remedy for the various vices and crimes which form the staple of the free lover's abuse of marriage would thus appear to be in making the escape from a marriage once duly solemnized so nearly impossible that few people would dare enter upon so grand an

<text>

ALDERT WARREN KELSEY. ST. LOUIS, Mo., May 20, 1874.

My FIRST VIEW OF A FARO BANK.—I was a ploue youth in search of knowledge. Any bad places? Yes, there is a faro bank over there. I was educated to look upon a gambler as a thief, a blackleg, a plun, an informer. How little my grandmother knew what was respectable and what was not. Noble old lady! She was as innocent of crime as a babe; she did not know that the first people of the land kept their mis-tresses better dressed than their wives, and gambled till late in the morning. I expected to find a rat-hole of low persons. Imagine how wide I opened my eyes to see the élite round that brilliantly lighted den. There was a young man who that night lost $60,000. I looked on and wondered. I only get $56 a year as a grocer's boy. My grandmother said it was wrong for me to play fox and geese with Frank Kittredge, and here were the chiefs of finance, polltics, and fashion gambling all night long. Gambling is re-spectable now. The man who gets drunk, and swears the hardest, and runs away with another man's wife, and can play well at faro, will grow up as a proud ex-ample to the young men, a good Christian and re-former, and a hundred carriages will follow him to the grave, for he is a prince in trade, and gave to chardles.—Exchange.

THE PENAL LAWS are sadly deficient if they pro-vide no remedy for an eating-house keeper against the fiend in human form who evinces his enmity to his kind by scraping the label off a tomato catsup bottle, leaving it to read, in its mullated form, thus: "Tom **Cats.**"—Independent.

ormaneta Google

Advertisements.	GOOD PHOTOGRAPHS	$1 \ 8 \ - \ 7 \ 4.$	Рυв
THE PATRONAGE of the liberal advertising public is respect- fully solicited for THE LYDEX. The attempt will be honestly made to keen the advertis- ing pages of The LYDEX in endire barmony with its general character and principles, and thus to furnish to the public an advertising medium which shall be not only profitable to	Including O. B. FROTHINGHAM, T. W. HIGGINSON, W. J. POTTER, W. H. SPENCER,	A Weekly Journal	FREE RE its patrons, but also worthy of their most generous support. To this end, all improper or "blind" advertisements, all qoack adver- tisements, and all advertisements belleved to be fraudulent or unjust to any one, will be excluded from these columns. No cuts will be admitted. THE INDEX must not be held responsible for any statement made by advertisers, who will in all cases accept the responsibility for their own statements. ADVERTISING BATES.	F. W. NEWMAN, CHAS. VOYSEY, A. W. STEVENS, F. E. ABBOT, Are now for sale at the office of THE INDEX, and will be mailed postpaid to any address on receipt of price. Single Photographs, 25 cents each; complete Set of Eight Photo- graphs, $1.59.	FREE RELIGION. PUBLISHED BY THE INDEX ASSOCIATION, AT No. 1 Tremont Place, Boston. EDITOR:	Report of Proceed ing in Religion ized. Co ingham, B Bobert Da son, F. E.
For 1 to 12 Insertions, 10c per line, (* 13 is 25 if a sector of the se	Address, THE INDEX, No. 1 Tremont Place, Boston, Mass. INDEXTRACTS. No. 1Truths for the Times, by F. E. Abbot, contains the "Fifty Affirmations" and "Modern Principles." Mz. CHARLES DARWIN, suthor of "The Origin of Spe- cies." says, in a letter to the editor not orig-	FRANCIS ELLINGWOOD ABBOT. ASSOCIATE SDITOR: ABRAM WALTER STEVENS. EDITORIAL CONTRIBUTORS: O. B. FEOTHINGHAM, New York City. T. W. HIGGINSON, Newport, B.I. W. J. POTTER. New Bedford, Mass.	(This pam number of y all of the A possess this Proceedin ing, 186

inally intended for publication, but subse quently authorized to be used: "I have now

read 'TRUTHS FOR THE TIMES,' and I admire them from my inmost heart; and I agree to almost every word." New Edition. Price

o. 2.-Fear of the Living God, by O.

B. Frothingham, exposes the debasing character of the popular notions of God, and presents conceptions of him that are worthy of the nineteenth century. New Edi-

Charles Voysey, of England, is an over-whelming demonstration of the imperfec-tions and errors of the Bible, both in the Old and the New Testaments. New Edition

to. t.-Christian Propagandiam, by F.

E. Abbot, is an exposure of the weakness, costliness, and inefficiency of the System of Foreign Missions. Full of Figures, Facts

No. 6.-""God in the constitution," ..., Rev. Arthur B. Bradford, opposes the pro-posed Theological Amendment to the Unit-ed States Constitution. Price 10 cents; 19

No. 6.-""The Sabbath." by Parker Pills

New Edition. Price 10 cents; 12 copies

c. 7.-"Compulsory Education," by F. E. Abbot, maintains the right of every child to be educated, and the duty of the State to ensure it an education. Price 5

No. 8.-The Present Heaven, by O. B.

Frothingham, treats of a subject that interests everybody. New Edition. Price 5 cents; 12 copies 50 cents.

cents; 12 copies 50 cents.

ting Extracts. Price 10 cents atarian superstition.

Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00

and Inte

12 copies $1.00.

copies $1.00.

bury, d

#1.00.

F. R.

n. Price 5 cents; 12 copies 50 cents. No. 3.-Lecture on the Bible, by the Ber.

10 canta; 12 copies $1.00.

CIRCULATE | Circulate | | Circulate THOSE PETITIONS. Don't feel satis-fied when your petition is a yard long, unless you have asked every one to sign it. Get good, infu-ential names.

GET EVERYBODY.

Don't neglect to show the petition to any one, because he is a stockholder in some church, or other exempted property, as many such persons admit the justice of the demand; and those who will not should be made to take the responsibility will no of ref Don' t should be made to take the responsibility using to sign it. t delay! We want the petitions retarned

Per order of EXEC. COMM. of the BOSTON LIBERAL LRAGUE.

CULTURED FREE THOUGHT.

The Index Association,

OFFICE, NO. 1 TREMONT PL., BOSTON, en organized with a capital stock fixed at ONE HUNDRED THOUSAND dollars, for the purpose of publishing Tracts, Books, and

THE INDEX.

No. 5.-"God in the Constitution," by A Weekly Paper devoted to Free and Rational Religion.

It is the object of THE INDEX to give public atterance to the boldest, most cultivated, and best matured thought of the age on all religious questions, and to apply it directly to the social and political amelioration of society.

It is edited by FRANCISE. ABBOT, assisted by ABRAM W. STEVENS, with the following list of Editorial Contributors :-

O. B. FROTHINGHAM, New York City

THOMAS W. HIGGINSON, Newport, R.I. WILLIAM J. POTTER, New Bedford, Maan. WILLIAM H. SPENCER, Raverbill, Mass. RICHARD P. HALLOWELL, Boston, Mass. MRS. E. D. CHENEY, Jamaica Plain, Mass. REV. CHARLES VOTSEY, London, England.

PROF. FRANCIS W. NEWMAN, London, Eng. Every liberal should subscribe for THE INDEX. as the best popular exponent of Religious Liberalism. Every Christian minister, and every thinking church-member, should subscribe for it, as the clearest, most candid, and most scholarly expesition of the differences between Free Thought and Evangelical Christianity, and as the best means of becoming well informed of the arguments and the movements which the Church will have to meet in the future.

Almost every number contains a discourse or leading article, which alone is worth the price of one year's subscription.

Prof. MAX MUELLER, of Oxford, England, in s letter to the Editor published in THE INDEX for January 4, 1875, says: "That the want of a journal entirely devoted to Religion in the widest sease of the word should be feit in America-that such a journal should have been started and so powerfully supported by the best minds of your country .- is a good sign of the times. There is no such journal in England, France, or Germany; though the number of so-called religious or theological periodicals is, as you know, very large." And later still : "I read the numbers of your IN-DEX with increasing interest."

Send $3.00 for one year, or 75 cents for three months on trial.

Address

THE INDEX No. 1 Tremont Place, Bost

R. P. HALLOWELL, Boston, Mass. MRS. E. D. CHENEY, Jamaica Plain, Mass.

F. W. NEWMAN, England. CHARLES VOYSEY, England.

THE INDEX sime

To increase general intelligence with respect to religion :

To foster a nobler spirit and quicken a high purpose, both in society and in the indi-vidual:

To substitute knowledge for ignorance, right for wrong, truth for superstition, freedom for alavery, character for creed, catholicity for bigotry, love for hate, humanitarianim for sectarianism, devotion to universal ends for absorption in selfish schemes.

In brief, to hasten the day when Free Religion shall take the place of dogmatism and ecclesiasticism throughout the world, and when the weifare of humanity here and shall be the aim of all private and public activities.

In addition to its general objects, the protical object to which THE INDEX is sp cial ly devoted is the ORGANIZATION OF THE LIBERALS OF THE COUNTRY, for th e pur pose of securing the more complete and c sistent secularization of the political and educational institutions of the United State The Church must give place to the Republic in the affections of the people. The last vestiges of ecclesiastical control must be wiped out of the Constitutions and Statutes of the several States in order to bring them into harmony with the National Constitution. To accomplish this object, the Liberals must make a united demand, and present an un-broken front, and the chief practical aim of THE INDEX will be henceforth to organize great NATIONAL PARTY OF FREEDOM. Let every one who believes in this movement give it direct aid by helping to increase the circulation of THE INDEX.

The publication of a valuable leading pa-per or essay of a thoughtful character, in each issue, will continue to be one of the most marked features of THE INDEX.

Regular editorial contributions will con-tinue to be furnished by the well-known eminent writers who have already done so much give to THE INDEX its present high position. Mr. VOYSEY has kindly consented to furnish every fortnight a LONDON LETTER containing matters of general interest to rad ical readers. Other interesting correspond-ence, communications, extracts from valua-ble books and periodicals, and miscellaneous articles, will also be published; and such improvements will be made from time ne as circumstances shall render possible.

AGENTS

Local Agents for THE INDEX are wanted in every city and town throughout the coun-try. The most liberal terms are offered.

TEBMS.

The price of THE INDEX is Three Bollars a year, payable in advance; and at the same rate for shorter periods. All remit-tances of money must be at the sender's risk, unless forwarded by cheque, registered letter, or post-office money order. The name with address in full, must be accompanied with the money in each case.

THE INDEX.

UBLICATIONS. OFTER

RELIGIOUS

ASSOCIATION.

port of the Addresses and other rocceedings of the Original Mest-ag in 1867, at which the Free cligfoux Association was Organ-zed. Containing addresses by O. B Frothgham, Henry Blanchard, Lucretia Motti obert Dale Owen, John Weiss, Oliver John-m, F. E. Abbot, D. A. Wasseon, T. W. Hig-inson, and Ralph Waldo Emerson.

This pamphlet has not been on sale for a aber of years, and many persons who have of the Annual Reports succeeding do not sees this.) Price 50 cents.

dings of Second Annual Mee ing, 1869. 50 cents. Contains essays by Julia Ward Howe on "Freedom and Es-straint in Religion," and by David A. Wasson on "The Relation of Social Science to Religion," and speeches by O. B. Frothing-ham, Jesse H. Jones, F. E. Abbot, Wm. Deston, R. W. Emerson, Mary Grew, C. A. Bartol, A. M. Powell, H. B. Blackwell, Bo wind Connor, Lucy Stone, Horace Seaver, and others; with an appendix on "Outlines of Judaism" by Rabbi Wise.

Proceedings of Third Annual Meet-ing, 1870. 50 cents. Contains emays by O. B. Frothingham on the "Idea of the Free Religious Association," followed by addresses by D. A. Wasson on "The Nature of Religion," by Mrs. E. D. Cheney on "Religion as a Social Force, especially in rela-tion to Philanthropy and Reform," and by F. E. Abbot on "The Future of Religious Organization, as affected by the Spirit of the Age;" an essay by Samuel Johnson on "The Natural Sympathy of Religions," fol-lowed by Rabbi Wise on "The Permanent and Progressive Elements of Judaism," by T. W. Higginson on "Mohammedanis by Wm. H. Channing on "The Religions of China," and Wm. J. Potter on "Religion Old and New in India;" also abstract of a discussion on "The Bible in the Public Schools," by Thos. Vickers, S. R. Calthrop, Rabbi Wise, and others, dings of Pifth Annual Meeting, 1872. 35 cents. (Four or more, 35 cents each.) Contains essays by J. W. Chadwick on "Liberty and the Church in America," by C. D. B. Mills on "Religion as the Expression of a Permanent Sentiment of the Human Mind," and by O. B. Frothingham on "The Religion of Humanity," with addresses by Rowland Connor, Cella Burleigh, Lucretia Mott, A. B. Alcott, C.A. Bartol, Horace Seaver, Alexander Loos, and others.

Proceedings of Sixth Annual Mesi-ing, 1873. 35 cents. (Four or more, 35 cents each.) Contains essays by Samuel Johnson on "Freedom in Religion," and by John Weiss on "Religion in Freedom, addresses by Wm. C. Gannett, Robert Dale Owen, T. W. Higginson, Samuel Longfel-low, J. 8. Thomson, F. E. Abbot, and Lucretia Mott.

Sympathy of Beligions, by T. W. Hg-

Religions of China, by Wm. H. Channing. 25 cents

Bosson and Revelation, by William J. Potter. 10 cents.

Taxation of Church Property, by Jas. Parton. 10 cents, singly; package of 1 60 cents; of one hundred, $3.

These publications are for sale at the office of the Free Religious Association, No. 1 Tremont Place, Boston. The Annual Reports for 1968 and 1871 cannot be supplied, and the supply of others previous to that of 1872 is quite limited. Orders by mail may be addressed either "Free Religious Association, No. 1 Tremont Place, Boston," or to the Secretary, New Bedford, Mass.

WM. J. POTTER, Sec. F. E. A.

Denards Google

Address

No. 1 Tremont Place, Boston.

No. 9.—The Christian Amendment, by bbot, shows the dangerous chara ter of the attempt to interpolate the Evan-gelical Christian Creed in the U. S. Consti-SPECIAL FRATURES.

tution. Price 5 cents; 12 copies 50 cents. No. 10 .- The Impeachment of Christianity, by F. E. Abbot. Fourth Ten Thou-sand. Sent for free distribution to any one who will distribute it, in packages of f five to one hundred copies. No 11.-The God of Science, by F. E. Ab-bot, attempts to show the real influence of modern science upon the idea of God. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00.

No. 12.-Is Romaniam Boal Christianity? Two essays by Francis W. Newman and F. E. Abbot. Price 10 cents; 12 copies B1.00.

No. 18 .- On the Vision of Heaven, by Prof. F. W. Newman, of England, analyzes the Christian conception of Heaven. Price 5 cents; 12 copies 50 cents.

No. 14. - A Study of Beligion ; The Name and the Thing, by F. E. Abbot attempts to show that the popular derivae popular deriva tion of the word Religion is incorrect; that the popular conceptions of Religion itself are inadequate; and that a new conception of it, based on the Law of Evolution, con-sistent with absolute Freedom of Thought, and independent even of belief in God, in the necessary condition of the perpetuity of Religion among men. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00. Address

THE INDEX, 1 TREMONT PLACE. Boston, Mass. THE INDEX-AUGUST 20, 1874.

POPULAR BOOKS. SENT BY MAIL

AT PUBLISHERS' PRICES!

ORDERS PROMPTLY FILLED.

NO EXTRA CHARGE FOR POSTAGE.

TIQ

144

南部の

助

×.

23

40

16

Ei

344

5

Sec.

14

37

1.9

36

12

15

ANY BOOK in the subjoined List, or any other OBTAINABLE BOOK that may be desired, will be forwarded as prompily as possible on receipt of orders accompanied with the CASH,

Orders are respectfully solicited from all friends of THE INDEX. ALCOTT (LOUISA M). Little Women. Two 2.00 Bospital Skatshes and Camp and Fireside Booplist Sketches and Camp and Firseld Stories An Old-Fashioned Girl. Little Mon. My Boys, &c. Shawi-Straps. Work; A Story of Experience. . 1.50 . 1.50 . 1.90 . 1.00 . 1.00 ARABIAN NIGHTS' ENTERTAINMENTS. 1.50 AUKRBACH (BERTHOLD). On the Heights. 140 Villa Eden; The Country-House on the Ehine. 140 Eddiweiss. 140 German Talee. 140 EACON'S Essays ..... 1.00 BAIN (ALEXANDER). Mental Science: A Compendium of Psychology and Elistory of Philosophy. Moral Science: A Compendium of Ethics. BARTLETT'S Dictionary of Americaniams, 2.60 BARTLETT'S Familiar Quotations ........... 3.00 BARTOL (REV. C. A). Radical Problems... 2.00 Chainsti of barrow Gare and King in Argument of the met for the Solar Internet for the use of the Solar Argument Stall, Reality and Mathews Argument Stall, Reality and Mathews The Opling and Decision of the Sopreme Court of Ohio in the above case .50 .60 .98 BRACKETT (ANNA C.) The Education of American Girls. BBOOKS'(CHARLES T.) Transistions. The Iayman's Braviary. The World-Pricet. The Tail Student. . 2.25 BUECHNER'S Force and Matter ..... SUCKLE (HENRY THOMAS). History of Givilization in England and France, Spain and Scotland. New edition of the entirk work, with a complete indox. Tvois......

CARPENTER (D.R. W. B.) The Principles of Montal Physiology, with their Applica-tions to the Training and Discipline of the Mind, and the Study of its Morbid Condi-tions.....

OHANNING (WM. ELLERY, D.D.). The Fer-fect Life. In Twelve Discourses, Edited from his maouscripts by his nephew, Wm. Heary Channing.

OHANNING (WM. ELLERY). Thoreau: The Poet Naturalist, With Memorial Verse, 2.09

CLARKE (JAMES FREEMAN). Ten Great

OLARKE (Dr. E. H.) Sex in Education ..... 1.25

CLODD (EDWARD). The Childhood of the World

OOBBE (FRANCES POWER). Studies New and Old, of Ethical and Social Subjects. Darwinism in Morsels, and other Essays.... The Beligious Demands of the Age.....

JALL (Mus. CAROLINE H). The College, the Market, and the Court; or, Woman's Relation to Education, Employment, and Olimenship.

Ristorical Pictures Retouched; a Volume of Miscellanies. In two parts. Part I., "Studies, Pictures, and Fancies" The Life of Dr. Marie Zakrsewska, being a Precisal Illustration of "Woman's Nights to Labor" 3.50 ..... 3.2

EMERSON'S (E. W.) Essays, First Sarias

EMERSON'S (E. W.) Essays. First Berics	9.05
Essays, Second Series	9.00
Miscellanies	2.00
Representative Men English Traite	2.00
Conduct of Life	9.00
Poems, with Portrait	2.00
Msy-day and Other Pieces	2.00
Essays. Blue and Gold	1.50
Prose Works, 2 vola	5.00
Society and Solitude	2.00

EVANS (E. P., Ph. D). First Historical Transformations of Christianity. From the Frauch of Athanase Coquerel the Younger. The Life and Works of Gotthold Ephraim Lossing. Transisted from the German of Adolf Bushr. 1 rols. 1.54

PARRAR'S Critical History of Free Thought, in reference to the Christian Religion..... Christianity. "George Ellot's" translation, 3.00

FISKE'S (JOHN) Myths and Myth-Makers., 2.00

FROTHINGHAM (O. B.) Religion of Hu-manity Reliefs of the Unbellevers Child's Book of Bellgion Life of Theodore Parker.

ULLER'S (MARGARET) Complete Works, including Memoirs by Emerson, Channing, and others, A new edition. § vols ......

An Inquiry Into its Laws and Conse-

AMERTON (PHILIP G.) A Painter s Camp. Book I. In England. Book II. In Scotland. Book III. In France. Thoughts about Art. The Unknown River. The Unknown River. The Intellectual Life Chapters on Animals.

BAMILTON (GAIL). Child World. Part Be

Ond 1.00 Child World. Part First...... 1.50

IGGINSON'S (T. W.) Out-Door Papers ... Malbons. An Oldport Romance....... Army Life in a Black Regiment. Atlantic Seasya... Oldport Days 2.00

2.00 HUGO'S (V.) New Noval, " 'Ninety-Three". 1.70

Lay Bermons, Addresses, and Hevlewa.... INORLOW'S (JEAN) Poems.... Bongs of Seven... Bongs of Seven... INORLOW'S (JEAN) Prose. Off the Skel-ligs Studies for Stories Stories told to a Child. First and Second Series

1.75

Biories to Scories - 125 Biories toil to a Child. First and Becond 125 Biories toil to a Child. First and Becond 125 A Sistor's Dye-Bours - 125 Mopas the Fairy A Story - 125 Poor Mari, co., The Clouded Intellect. - 59 INGERSOLL'S (ROBT. G.) The Gods and Other Lectures. - 20

407

1.76

2.30

.10

......

PROCTOR (RICHARD A.) Other Worlds than Ours: the Fluxality of Worlds stud-led nuder the Light of Tax Worlds stud-led nuder the Light of Tax Wills Colored Pissonnillo Researches. Will Colored Pissonnillo Light Science for Leduce Hours. A Series of Familiar Easays on Science of Papers On Flamets and Meteors, the Sun, etc. The Moor, here and 24 Woodcats. The Moor, here and 25 Woodcats. The Moor, here and 28 Woodcats. The Moor, here and 28 Woodcats.

BOSSETTI (CHRISTINA G.) A Shadow of Danie

Danse SOHELLEN (H.) Spectrum Analysis, in ite Application to Torrestrial Substances, and the Physical Constitution of the Heavenly Bodies. SOLENCE PRIMERS: 1. Introductory, By Frof, Huzley, F.B.S. C. Chemistry, By Frof, Huzley, F.B.S. C. Chemistry, By Frof, Roscoe. S. Physics. By Balfour Stewart. With ill-lustrations.

Lusirations Physical Geography. By Archibald Gei-rie, LL.D., F.R.S., flexible cloth.....

SMILES'S (SAM JEL.) Self-Help...... 1.50

SPINOZA (BENEDICT DE.) Tractatus Tho-

TAINE'S (H. A.) Elistory of English Liters-ture. 2 vols The Class-Room Taine, History of English Literstore. Abridged and Edited by John Fake. 2.20

"HACKERAY'S (W. M.) Novels. Household. Edition. Complete in 6 volumes. Per vol., 1.25 Vanity Fair. The Newcomes. Adventures of Philip. Pendeunia.

The Virginians. Esmond, and Lovel the Widower. Miscellaneous Writings. Household Edi-tiou. Unitorm with the Norels. Com-picted in 3 vols. With new Portrait. For vol. 1.25 in the interview of the matter in the inter-plete in 3 vols. With new Portrait. Per vol. 135 This edition incides all the matter in the lat-ext English editions, with many additions, thus making it, with the novels, the cheapenst and nost complete Thacksray in the market. I. Barry Fyndon, Hoggarty Dismond, &c. 2. Sanots, and Linkb Sketch-Books, &c. 4. Sanots, and Kinho Besks Daval, &c. 4. Sanots, Christmas Books, and Unre-printed Pieces.

THAXTER'S (MRS. CELIA) Among the

Une Woods 2.09 Excursions in Field and Forest. Portrait. 2.09 The Mislice Woods 2.09 Cape Cod. 2.0 Lattern 2.09

Cape God. 20 Leiters A Yunce in Canada 40 A Wucke on the Concord and Merrimac 1.00 Rivers. 1.00

ments of Science for Unscientific Peo-

TYNDALL (JOHN). Faraday as & Discov-

Light and Electricity Hours of Exercise in the Alps Heat as a Mode of Motion. On Sound Radiant Heat. Porms of Water. Lectures on Light. Proceedings at the Farewell Banquet to Prof. Tyndall.

Prof. Tyndall. TYTLEB (SARAH.) Old Masters and their Pictures and their Paintings......

WARNER'S (CHARLES D.) My Summer in a Garden. Sauterings. Back-Log Studies.

WEISS (JOHN.) American Religion ...... 1.50 Life of Theodore Parker. 2 vols.......... 6.00

Washington and use aryonada WHTNEYS (MR8/A.D.T.) A Summer In Lealle Goldhawaite's Life, We Girls: A Home Story Real Folks. The Other Girls. Fansies. A volume of Poens.

ADDRESS

1 Tremont Place, Boston

INDEX.

Google Google

THOREAU'S (H. D.) Walden; or, Life in

ERROLD (DOUGLAS). Fireside Saints, Mr. Claude's Breakfast Talk, and other Papers. 1.50

OHNSON'S (SAMUEL) Oriental Religions, and their Relation to Universal Religion, India..... 3.00

JOWETT. The Dialognes of Plato, Trans

EER (ORPHEUS C). Versatilities, Poems, Patriotic, Sentimental and Humprous...... 2.00

ECKY (W.E. H.) History of the Bise and Influence of the Spirit of Rationalism in 4.00

LEWES' Physiology of Common Life. 2 vols. 1.00 Elegraphical History of Philosophy, from its Origin in Groece down to the Present Day. 7 vols. Problems of Life and Mind. The Founds. 1.00 Froblems of Life and Mind. The Founds. 1.00

3.00 LEWES (G. B.) The Story of Goethe's Life, 1.50

dalam f or, a Few Words to the Jews. 1.00

4.00 1.50 1.50 2.00 2.00

LOWELL'S (J. R.) Poems. 2 vols ...... The fliglow Papers. First Series.... The Biglow Papers. Second Series .... Among my Books...... My Study Windows.....

LOWELL (MRS. A. C.) Postes for Children. .75

LYELL'S Principles of Geology. 2 vols...... 5.09 Elements of Geology. 2.40

MANN (HORACE). The Life of Horace Mann. By his Wife. Lectures and Annual Reports on Education. 5.00 Annual Reports on Education, from 1539 to 1943

Horace Mann. MARTINEAU (JAMES.) Essays, Philosoph-ical and Theological. 2 vois. Per vol.... The New Affinities of Faith ... 2.50

MAURICE (BEY, F. D.) The Ground and Object of Hope for Mankind MERIVALE'S (CHARLES) Conversion of the Roman Empire Conversion of his Northern Nations.....

.75

2.25

1.5

1.50 1.50 1.50 1.50 1.00 T

HE

Frag

1.50

MOULTON (LOUISE CHANDLER.) Bed-1.50

2.50

NASBY (PETROLEUM V). Swingin' Round the Cirkle. Ekkoes from Kenbucky.....

PARSONS (THEOPHILUS.) The Infinite

PHELPS'S (ELIZABETH STUART.) The Ontes Ajar The Troity Book Men, Women, and Ghosts Hedged in The BUent, Partner. What to Wear T

PROCTER'S (ADELAIDE A.) Forme. Potral. Cableet Edition.

A FEW COPIES ONLY	STUDENTS FITTED for any College.	BOSTON LIBERAL LEAGUE.	NONPAREIL Farm Feed, Bone Sizes. Also Cotton-Seed Hulles. The ed pamphiets free. Address. Illustration
M an excellent Photograph (Cabinet Size) of Ber. MONCURE D. CONWAY, of London,	D College. Plesse address EMILY J. LEONARD, Meriden, Conn.	Our organization some time since decided to di-	ed pamphlets free. Address SEDGEBEER, SHEPARD & MILLER 181 East Front Street, Cincinnati, Oho, an be had at the office of THE INDEX. THE	CONSTANT EMPLOYMENT	rect its efforts for the present towards securing the	THE AMERICAN EDITION
CHARLES SUMNER.	At home, mais or female, 20 a week war- ranted. No capital required. Particulars and valuable sample sent free. Address, with six cent return starp. C. BOSS, williamsburg, N. Y.	Repeal of the Laws	OF
A fine likeness of Massachusetts' great Sen- ster, as copy of a recent Photograph by Black, is for sale at THE INDEX office, and will be sant by mail to any address on receipt	FREE DISCUSSION	whereby church and other corporate property is unjustly exempted from its share of the burden	MONCURE D. CONWAYS SACRED ANTHOLOGY
	I held at HOSPITALLER HALL, SH Washing- ton Street, Boston, every Sunday, at 10% A.M., 2% and 7% P.M. All that relates to the Religious. Political, and Social Interests of mankind consti- Political, and hearts for discussion. THE INDEX	of taxation. As a means to this end, we have published for	A BOOK OF ETHNICAL SCRIPTURES.
TE DOUTE HERE	2% and 7% P.M. All that relates to the kenglous. Political, and Social interests of mankind consti- tute the subjects for discussion. The INDEX and Index Tracts are for sale every Sunday at	general circulation several thousand copies of a	has just been published, and will be se postpaid on receipt of the price, $4.00.
The bound volume of THE INDEX for 1873	Hospitaller Hall.	TBACT	Address THE INDEX, 1 TREMOST PLACE,
Waiting 4) will be provided of $3, by express, at ddress on receipt of $3, by express, at the parchaser's expense, A complete file for the year can be furnished in no other form. Advass	W AND CLASSICAL SCHOOLThe twenty- first school year of this Family and Day School, FOE BOTH SETES, will begin Wednes-	on Church Exemption, being the article by Mr. Abbot which appeared in THE INDEX of Nov. W.	G. L. HENDERSON & CO
Address 1 Tremont Place, Boston.	day, September 16, 1874. For particulars address NATH'L T. ALLEN, Principal,	We have already issued three editions, the last of which is nearly exhausted.	BANKEBS,
A COMPLETE SET of INDEX TRACTS, been No. 1 to 14 inclusive, will be mailed to	At home Saturdays.	We desire soon to issue Another Large Edition	LEROY, MINN.
ay address on the prepayment of to CENTS.	TO NEWSPAPER	of this and other tracts on the subject, so	Money invested on short time, or fo term of years, on unincumbered impro- farms, at 12 per cent. Interest per an payable semi-armually. Perfect title
No. 1 Tremont Place, Boston, Mass	PUBLISHERS.	that we can place a copy in the hands of .	ample security guarance ed. All expenses abstract of title and recording mortgage by borrower. We collect and remit to part of the United States free of the
TO ADVERTISERS.	Having conveniences for doing the best of newspaper printing at reasonable prices, I should like to contract for composition alone, or for composition, press, work, and mailing.	EVEBY VOTER IN THE STATE,	REPERSION - Piret National D.
The following states the experience of a maccasful Bookseller who has advertised in fur input:-	or for composition, press-work, and mailing, for one or more weekly papers. Best of references given, and satisfactory work guaranteed. GEO, H. ELLIS,	and generously to supply the calls for them in other States.	Minn.; Milwaukee National Bank, Milw
TOLEDO, ONIO, SEDE. 20, 1012.	TTemont Place, Boston.	To do this, we need funds; for, although we have made arrangements for printing the Tract at very low cost, it is impossible for the Boston	Allen, Stevens & Co., Bankers, New T City; Morris Altman.
dae in your paper during the past two years raite largely, I take pleasure in stating that	Please examine the revised list of POPU-	League, with its various other expenses, to bear the entire expense alone.	REAL ESTATE SECURITI paying 8 to 10 per cent. interest, o
isements in any other paper I have adver-	LAR BOOKS on the opposite side of this page. Any OBTAINABLE BOOK NOT IN THIS LIST will be furnished to order. Readers of THE INDEX who desire to pur-	Will not, then,	Investments in Real Estate in Chie and vicinity, to results, but orders have frequently been	chase English, German, or French Books, or	All Friends of the Movement	if judiciously made, are the best and si modes of employing capital. The old
tept on file and referred to by your readers. Yours truly, HENRY S. STEBBINS,	of any American or Foreign Book, can have their orders promply filled and their inqui- ries answered by addressing. THE INDEX,	come forward and help us with liberal donations ?	Real Estate and Loan Agen
Special arrangements will be made at re- foced terms for long-time or extended ad-	1 Tremont Place, Boston.	We frequently receive communications from parties wishing tracts to distribute, asking how much they shall pay. To such we reply that the	RENST PRUSSING, 143 RANDOLFE ST rertisements. Address THE INDEX, NO. 1 TERMONT PLACE,	BOUND VOLUMES OF THE Bound volumes of THE INDEX for 1871,	cost to us is about $2.50 per thousand, and we shall be pleased to furnish them at this price per	Chicago (Established 1883), Guarantees perfect title and ample see
Boston.	1872, and 1873, will be sent by express (at the purchaser's expense) on receipt of $2.50, $2 50, and $3.00 respectively. These volumes	thousand, or 20 cents per hundred, to all who will circulate them. But all additional donations will be gratefully received for the purpose of circu-	in all its Real Estate Loans. Firstclass securities always on hand, terest and principal collected without ch Real Estate Investments made on commis
CHARLES SUMNER'S GREAT WORK.	are exceedingly valuable singly, irrespective of each other; for the important essays and other articles they contain are of permanent	ating them gratuitously throughout the country. Last winter this subject was brought be-	or on shares; taxes paid, &c. Orders of capitalists and real estate era respectfully solicited.
PROPHETIC VOICES	interest, and will furnish as instructive read- ing twenty years hence as to-day. No more valuable present could be made to a friend	fore the Legislature of the State, and many petitions were presented asking a repeal, of	REASONS FOR USING T
CONCERNING AMERICA.	struggling out of Orthodoxy than one of these volumes, Address THE INDEX,	these unjust laws. The matter is still in their hands, and at the next session will undonbtedly be acted upon.
By CHARLES SUMMER. Fine Edition, Tinted Paper, with Steel Por- trait, Crown Svo., Cloth extra, $2.	WAREN'S	Meanwhile the	EUREKA SPOOL SILK.
Aside from its literary and historical mer-	TRUE CIVILIZATION.	Voice of the People,	It is full length. It is full size. smooth and elastic, and is equ
the fact that it was the last work on which r. Sumner was engaged before his death.	Price 50 cents.	favoring justice and equity, should be dis- tinctly heard. We shall soon be ready to send out	adapted to hand or machine ass
"PROPHETIC VOICES" will be found of great ratue to all who take an interest in the his- ory of our country, so full is it of passages	PRACTICAL DETAILS, showing the workings of the	BLANK PETITIONS AGAIN,	Many kinds of spool allk are a pe fraud, being not only shorter in length a much finer size than they are repres
a which the unexampled prosperity of our and has been foretold by philosophere, poets,	COST PRINCIPLE.	thus giving an opportunity to those who have	to be, and of so poor a quality as to be for use. The ladies will always find the tatesmen, and orators, of whom the lament- id author has also given interesting sketches.	Price 25 cents. For sale by	not already done so, to protest against this continued wrong.	reka Silk exactly as represented. I spool is warranted, and the manufact
Seut, post-paid, on receipt of price. Address THE INDEX, No. 1 Tremont Place, Boston.	S. H. MORSE,	Let us make it THE LARGEST PETITION	name indelibly branded on every spool. for it.
BUSTOF	FOR SINGING CLASSES!	ever presented to our legislative body.	RADICAL AND LITERA
THEODORE PARKER,	THE	Will those willing to assist in circulating these petitions please	LECTURES
SIDNEY H. MORSE.	SONG MONARCH !!	SEND IN THEIR NAMES?	BY
Dignity, reverence, sweetness, vigor, equi- point, breathe through the clay; the artist as so filled his own heart with appreciation	By H. R. PALMER, assisted by L. O. EMERSON. A book admirably fitted for the use of Sing-	We would say, also that we feel deeply the need of	JOHN WEIS af that noble life that he has been able cun- aingly to mould it into those delicate lines which the character had wrought on the liv-	ing School Teachers, having, in addition to a compact theoretical course, more than 180 pages filled with Glees. Onartettes, Airs,	Other Organizations	RADICAL LECTURES
ng fibre. We are tempted to exclaim, as we stand beside it, as the old artist did to his perfected work, "Speak then!"—Hannah E. Stovenson.	pages filled with Glees, Quartettes, Airs, Tunes, &c., &c., pleasant to sing anywhere, and constituting a most agreeable course of study. A good book also for College Choirs, for Samburdes and Scale Singer		The Idea of Hereafter.
Stormann. All the characteristics of my husband are in the hust,-his greatness, his goodness, his renderness, his love. You cannot give life to	Price 75 cts., or $7.50 per dozen.	equality and justice, by pressing the "Damanda of Liberalism." If, in any locality, there are	Intelligence in Religion.
this Mr. Morse has doneLydia D. Parker to	FOR CHOIRS AND CONVENTIONS. THE LEADER!!	these who are inclined to	Heart in Beligion.
		Form a Liberal League,	SHAKSPEARIAN LECTUR
The eyes, though but of clay, are glearning with possible indignation, with possible tears; the lips are set firm with the resolution of him who, like Paul, could "fight a good fight" as well as "give a reason."—Samuel Longfel- low.	of a character that cannot be excelled. By H. R. PALMER, of Chicago, assisted by L. O. EMERSON, of Boston,	we are ready to render such easistance as lies in our power.	FIRST SERIES.
ine. The first time I have seen Theodore Parker since he diedWm. Sparrell.	of large numbers of American Music writ-		2. Irony and Humor.
The heat representation of Mr. Parker ever arecuted in clay,-Boston Daily Globe.	ers. For CONVENTIONS, CHOIRS and SINGING CLASSES.	LIBERALSI	4. Ajax in Troilus and Cressida: 100 ter in Macbeth: The Fool in Lear,
The face is strong and noble as it should be. The likeness is good.—Boston Daily Advertiser. Nothing appears for beauty alone, or finish,	The LEADER has 66 pages of Singing School Music, the same as that in the Song Mon-	If all will units and work, the results sought	5. Faistaff. 8. Hamlet.
for to show the vanity of the artist. All is forgotten in the man-the true, real, Yankee man, Theodore ParkerL. S. H. in the Golden	Anthems, all by the best composers. Price $1.38, or $12.00 per dozen.	Address	SECOND SERIES. 1. The Women of Shakspeare.
Apr.	post-paid, for retail price.	BOSTON LIBERAL LEAGUE,	2. Portia. 3. Ophelia. 4. Macbeth and Lady Macbeth.
Confes of this Bust, finely finlshed n plas- ber, $10 each. Boxing for transportation, $1 stran. Freight or expressage paid by party scaling order. Weight of box about fifty pomula. Orders may be sent to	OLIVER DITSON & CO.,	NO. 1 TREMONT PLACE, BOSTON	5. 4 " Character's Character
Boomids. Orders may be sent to S. H. MORSE, Boom 13, 25 Bromfield St., Boston, Mass.	CILLAD, M. DIAGOUT OF CO.	Pur order of the	Address JOHN WEIS
and an anounced bt, boston, Mass,	711 BEOADWAY, NEW YORK.	EXBOUTIVE COMMITTEE.	A B. DIOULING WHY

x

Three Dollars a Year.

LIBERTY AND LIGHT.

Single Copies Seven Cents.

VOLUME 5.

107.7

24 Pin 14  $\mathbb{R}^{2}$

> 141 18 2

٩, 1

1 20

25000

122.50

43.

2

 $\mathbf{F}$

20

BOSTON, MASS., THURSDAY, AUGUST 27, 1874

WHOLE NO. 244.

ORGANIZE!

THE DEMANDS OF LIBERALISM.

1. We demand that churches and other ecclesisatical roperty shall no longer be exempt from just taxation.

We demand that all relicious articles notice to be a sensitive of the sensitiv shall cease. 4. We demand that all religious services now sustained by the government shall be abolished; and especially that the use of the Bible in the public schools, whether estensi-bly as a ter-book or avowedly as a book of religious wor-ship, shall be prolibited. A We demand that the annointment, by the President of allp, shall be prohibited. 5. We demand that the appointment, by the President of the United States or by the Governors of the various States, of all religious festivals and fasts shall wholly cease. 8. We demand that the judicial oath in the courts and m all other departments of the government shall be abolished, and that simple affirmation under the pains and pendities of perjury shall be established in its stead.

7. We demand that all laws directly or indirectly enforc-og the observance of Sunday as the Sabbath shall be re-sealed. 8. We demand that all laws looking to the enforcement of "Christian" morality shall be abrogated, and that all laws thal be conformed to the requirements of natural morality, squal rights, and impartial liberty.

equal rights, and impartial liberty. 9. We demand that not only in the Constitutions of the United States and of the several States, but also in the practical administration of the same, no privilege or ad-vantage shall be conceeded to Christianity or any other spe-cial religion; that our entire political system shall be found-ed and administered on a purely scular basis; and that whatever changes shall prove necessary to this end shall be consistently, unflinchingly, and promptly made.

A FORM OF LOCAL ORGANIZATION.

Whereas, it is our profound conviction that the safety of republican institutions is imperilled, the advance of civili-ration impeded, and the most sacred rights of man in-fringed, by the least interforence of the State in matters of religion; and

religion; and Whereas, Certain grave inconsistencies with the general spirit of the United States-Constitution still mark the prac-tical administration of our political system, threatening the perpetuty of religious liberty, the existence of free public schools, and the peace and prosperity of the entire land; THEREFORE, We, the undersigned, hereby associate our-selves together under the following

ARTICLES OF AGREEMENT.

ART. 1 .- The name of this Association shall be THE LIB-

Ast. 3.-The means employed in working for these objects thall be regular local meetings, free discussions, lectures, addresses, conventions, the platform and the press in gen-sral, and all such other means as are peaceable, orderly, and right.

ART. 4.—Such measures shall be adopted for raising funds for the League as shall be prescribed in the By-Laws by a two-thirds vote of the members.

ART. 5.—Any person may become a member of the League y subscribing his or her name to these Articles of Agree-by substituing in or her induc to close whitets of agree-ment. Ant. 5.—The Officers of the League shall be a President, a Vice President, a Secretary, a Treasurer, and an Execu-tive Committee of three members; and their duties shall be hose commonly pertaining to these offices. The President and Secretary shall be ex-officio delegates to the Nativaal Convention of Liberal Leagues when called togother. Ant. 7.—These Articles of Agreement may be amended by a three-fourths vote of the members present at any reg-tar meeting, provided due notice of the proposed amend-ments shall have been sent to every member at least two weeks previous to such meeting.

So far as I am concerned, the above is the platform of Tur INDEX. I believe in it without reserve; I believe that h will yet be accepted universally by the American people, as the only platform consistent with religious liberty. A Liberal League ought to be formed to carry out its principles wherever half a dozen earnest and resolute Liberals tan be got together. Being convinced that the movement to secure compliance with these just "Demands" must Discure compliance with these just "Demands" must surnly, even if slowly, spread, I hope to make THE INDER a means of furthering it; and I ask the assistance and active co-operation of every man and every woman who be-lieves in it. Multiply Liberal Leagues everywhere, and re-port promptly the names of their Presidents and Secre-taries. Intolerance and bigotry will tremble in proportion as that list grows. If freedom, justice, and reason are Moht, let their organized voice be heard like the sound of many waters. ny waters.

FRANCIS E. ABBOT, Editor. Bosroz, Bept. 1, 1875.

For List of Liberal Leagues, see next page. RELIGIOUS FREEDOM AMENDMENT:

PROPOSED AS A SUBSTITUTS FOR THE FIRST AMENDMENT TO THE UNITED STATES CON-STITUTION.

ARTIOLE 1.

ARTICLE 1. SECTION 1.—CONGRESS Shall make no law respecting an es-tablishment of religion, or favoring any particular form es-til the problem passes of the press, or the right of the people peaceably to assemble and to patition the dow-ment for a redress of grievances. Bornor 2.—NO State shall make any law respecting an stablishment of religion, or favoring any particular form of religion, or prohibiting the free exercise thereof; or the people peaceably to assemble and to petition the stablishment of religion, or favoring any particular for any religion or prohibiting the free exercise thereof; or the people peaceably to assemble and to petition the people peaceably to assemble and to petition the government for a redress of grievances. No religious and no person shall ever in any State be deprived of any for the period ever in any State be deprived of any for the performance of any public or private duty, or ren-dent in conacquere of any public or private duty, or ren-dent in conacquere of any public or private duty, or ren-dent in conacquere of any public or private duty, or ren-dent in conacqueres and have power to enforce the pro-missions of the second section of this Article by appropri-tions of the second section of this Article by appropri-tions.—

GLIMPSES.

BY F. E. A.

THE GOVERNOR of South Carolina has won fame as "the robber Moses" and "the great South Carolina thief." Can human ambition soar higher than that?

THE NEW YORK Independent recently styled you the "unlettered sceptics of the West;" while the Brooklyn Catholic Review compliments you as the "Sacred Congregation of The Index." Brooklyn is at least three lengths shead.

AN ANONYMOUS correspondent of the Golden Age says that "patient study and thought" are "precisely what the Free Religionists lack." The inference we draw from this dictum is that we are not a "Free Re-ligionist." The results of our "study and thought" may not be valuable, but their patience we would modestly testify to.

HON. H. C. ROBINSON said at Hartford, in his welcoming address to the American Association for the Advancement of Science : "We would not underrate metaphysical studies; but it requires no deep insight to see that speculative philosophy has been forced to step down from her throne and yield to science." This merely means that philosophy must be reformed by the scientific method.

IT IS ASSERTED by the Cleveland Herald that "there is no doubt the Roman Catholic manifesto of last Sunday defeated the new constitution" of Ohio. It says: "The priests told their followers to vote against the constitution. The Roman Catholics could do that, and still vote for license. They unquestionably, if not forbidden by their priests, would have voted for the new constitution." Such statements as these may well awaken uneasiness in all who love free institutions.

THE SONNEBERG LUTHER FESTIVAL must have been a quaint occasion. Tetzel and his Dominicans selling indulgences, Luther and his comrades driving them off and capturing their money-chest, and monks, reformers, peasants, and soldiers all reproduced in the style of three and a half centuries ago, it was a curious revival of the old struggle on the old spot. Meanwhile the same contest goes on the world over, and will see no end till Christianity has faded away to make room for the religion of humanity.

A LAWYER in Keokak, Iowa, writes: "Unitarianism is in a flourishing condition here, the society having just completed a fine church edifice; but there are hundreds of other liberals who have what may be called private liberal views-who live within themselves for fear of public opinion, and who for reasons of business policy hide their light under a bushel." Private liberal views! Commend us to the men who have red blood in their arteries, and refuse to be blackmailed into support of the church, even by sllence. Truth, once known, conscripts every gallant spirit into her service. Noblesse oblige !

PROFESSOR HUXLEY'S address at the unveiling of the Priestley statue at Birmingham was a fine production. All true reformers must applaud the sentiments he expressed, when he said that he "could entirely sympathize with him [Priestley], if he held the duties of his manhood and of his citizenship to be vastly superior to his philosophership, and if he thought that the securing of that freedom which is the essential condition of the progress of science and the progress of the human race was a vastly more important matter than advancing knowledge in this direction or that direction-wast as was the importance of that progress itself."

A CORRESPONDENT of the London Daily News tells a story of petty bigotry which it would be pleasant to disbelieve. Some years ago John Stuart Mill ascended the Ventoux, a mountain in the Vaudois country. In descending he was caught in a violent storm, and applied for shelter to the curé of Brantes, a village on the northern slope of the mountain. "Who's there?" called the master of the house. "An excursionist seeking shelter," said Mr. Mill in good French, but with an English accent. "Oh," responded the curé, 'you're an Englishman, and therefore a Protestant. Get along with you, for I'm not going to let you in." This story is told by the curé's successor.

THE Golden Age, referring to a supposed desire on the part of some to repeal certain phrases in the Preamble of the constitution of the Unitarian Conference, to be held in Saratoga on September 15, says: "Mr. Abbot and his anti-Christian sympathizers, if we rightly understand them, do not so much object to the Christian name as to the Christian thing the name stands for and represents." True! And we are glad that at last somebody has found this out. We object above all things to rallying about a person instead of a principle, a man instead of an idea. The Christian name means always and everywhere this Christian thing; and we disown the name simply because it means the thing.

THE CHICAGO Interior is commended by the Christian Statesman, because on the question of the salva-tion of moral heathens it "declined discussion on the abstract question, and challenged debate on the facts." When Socrates and Seneca were instanced, it fell upon these poor pagans tooth and nail, until (in the language of the vigorously-minded) neither "hide nor hair" could be found of either. And this Jesuitism ia held up as deserving the "thanks of all believers in the Christian religion" ! We respectfully aubmit that the whole question is an "abstract" one, and can be put into a nutshell thus : Is faith in Christ as the Savior necessary to salvation ? Will the Statesman venture to say that this question cannot be answered yes or no? And will it refuse to give an hon-est yes or no answer to it? We "pause for a reply."

IT is anxiously to be hoped that the white people of the South, in their efforts to secure "honest government," will accept more sincercly than hitherto the principle of equal human rights before the law, and give convincing proof of this by treating all well-behaved negroes as fellow-citizens on equal terms. Honest administration is vitally important; but honest political principles are even more so. Stealing money is bad enough; but stealing rights is worse. In vain will the whites of the South look to the North for sympathy, until they drop the infernal cry of a "white man's government," and stop the present alarming efforts to array the races against each other. All talk of "reconciliation" and "clasping hands" is sheerest buncombe, until this stern lesson of the war is learned by heart; and the sooner it is learned, the sooner will true reconciliation be effected. Justice first, and sentiment afterwards.

Thoused by Google

410

THE INDEX-AUGUST 27, 1874.

LIST OF LIBEBAL LEAGUES.

ST. LOUIS, MO.-M. A. McCord, President; P. A. Lofgreen, L. La Grille, Secretaries. BOSTON, MASS.-F. E. Abbot, President; J. P. Titoomb, G. A. Bacon, Secretaries. JEFFERSON, OHIO.-W. H. Crowell, President; A. Giddings, Secretaries. Becretary. Bax Joss, Cal.-A. J. Spencer, President; J. L. Hatch, TOLEDO, IOWA .- J. Reedy, President; E. S. Beckley, Secretary. VINELAND' N. J.-John Gage, President; Sue M. Clute, BOCTOLATY.
 Secretary. BATH, ME .- F. G. Barker, President; C. Ebodes, Secretary. BEELLN, WIS.--President, J. D. Walters; Secretary, E. M. Bridgman. WASHINGTON, D.C. - George M. Wood, President; J. E. Crawford, Secretary. AUDORN, OHIO. - John Fish, President; G. W. Barnes, Treasurer. MINNEAPOLIS, MINN,-President, J. B. Bassett; Secretary, Anton Greihen. Naw YOBK, N.Y.-J. B. Brown, President; D. M. Bennett, Secretary. BT. JOSEFH, MO.-P. V. Wise, President; T. H. Kennedy, BT. JOSKPH, MO.-P. V. Wise, President; T. H. Kennedy, Becretary.
EAU CLAIBE, WIB.-President, S. J. Dickson; Secretary, W. Kennedy.
BALBCO, IND.-President, T. Gray; Secretary, W. Allen.
NEW OBLEANS, LA.-President, M. Vorster; Secretary, J. E. Wallace.
BAT CITY, MICH.-President, S. M. Green; Becretary, S. M. Johnson. 8T. CLEARFIELD, PA.-S. Widemire, President; H. Hoover, Secretary. BAUK CITY, WIS.-Chr. Spiehr, President; Robert Cunradi, Secretary.

(For TAS INDEX.) Society a Factor in the Development of Man.

A DISCOURSE PREACHED IN CHARLESTON, SOUTH CAROLINA, JANUARY 19, 1873.

BY JAMES BOYD.

"And the Lord God said, It is not good that the man should be alone."- GEN. 11., 18.

<section-header><section-header><text><text><text> of outward Nature conduces to the education of man; to day I wish to suggest to you, by a few hints thrown out in that direction, THE EDUCATING INFLUENCES OF SOCIETY UPON THE INDIVIDUAL. And, to begin at the lowest point, we may observe that, except in and by means of society, civilization would have been impossible: alone, man would have remained a savage forever. It will help us to some conception of this truth if we consider for a moment, in regard to the mechanical appliances or artificial products which on all sides around us minister to our wants or comforts, the protracted and complicated conception of this truth if we consider for a moment, in regard to the mechanical appliances or artificial products which on all sides around us minister to our wants or comforts, the protracted and complicated development through which they have passed before they could assume their present shape—the thousand additions of here a little and there a little, from this inventor or that improver, by which the familiar things, which familiarity leads us to value too lightly, have grown into being and been adapted to use. Take a well-appointed modern dwelling-house, and trace back the many thoughts of many minds which have gone towards elaborating such sproduct to re-place the caves of the earth, which even now afford their only shelter to some of the low races of man-kind. Think of the widely separated countries whence have been derived the materials of which it is composed—the wood, the iron, the stone, the glass; think of the labor, the skill, the tools and engines by which these are procured and prepared; think of all that preceded the possibility of the introduction of the water, the gas, the heated air with which every room is supplied; of all the ingenuity that has been expended upon the manufacture of the carpet which we spread beneath our feet, of the elegance of de-sign which renders the necessary articles of furniture objects not merely of use but of ornament, of the intensity and severity of brainwork which has been put into the masterpieces of coloring that adorn our walls, or the books that line our shelves; think seven of the innumerable inventions, and discoveries, and processes of manufacture, apart from the author's labor, which are involved in the production of such a world as we each of us possess within the four walls of our homes? And we do not need to draw on our imagination for an answer. We have only to look at those tribes

<text>

<text><text><text><text>

when we say that, without language, which only the society of his fellows can develop, man would nerry have grown into what we imply by the phrase, "a callonal creature." Lastly, that power in virtue of the possession of which man claims to tower above the animal, and to all his nature even with that of the Supreme, that power which he denominates, and truly, the divisity within—conscience—is a social product. There is probably no subject in the world on which people in general entertain more erroneous conceptions that its of conscience, and but few which, from the earlier of a conscience, and but few which, from the earlier of a conscience, and but few which, from the earlier of a conscience, and but few which from the earlier of a conscience, in a social product. There is prove times, have more exercised or divided philoso phers themselves. Most people seem to fancy that it is an intuitive power, implanted in the human breast form infancy in all its full-blown maturity and spie-tor infance, in any set of circumstances, however complexed, of deciding, at once and infallibly, whis the max who holds it into a printon inevitably hurls the max who holds it into a printon inevitably hurls the max who holds it into a printon intervitably and what actions are wrong. Such an opinion inevitably hurls the max who holds it into the blankest and most utter scepticism, when he gos abrod in the world, and makes bimelf acquained with the varying sentiments and opinions of different to a male and approved elsewhere. With his river of contradictory deliverances, he is forced to believe hit is a misleading guide—an ignis fatures a will o're when fight or wrong just as men choose to call them of the sight, be reperience under God's own teaching. It is not by the conscience nor any other, which can teil him beforehand what things are right and what wrong. He has to learn that by a slow, and generally is only the general of a course is conscience of own teaching. It is only by the conscience and my other, which car neer teils in

<text><text><text><text>

(For THE INDEL.)

THE OXYGEN CENTENNIAL AT NORTH-UMBERLAND.

BY REV. DAVID H. CLARE.

The readers of THE INDEX will doubtless have read reports of the recent scientific gathering at Northumberland, Pennsyivania, before this reaches them. Its rare significance and interest, neverthe-less, will justify this additional notice in its columns, even at the risk of some repetition. While the eccle-siatical world is just now endeavoring to revive the superstitions custom of pligrimages to fabulous shrines, it is pleasant to record this visitation of the devotees of science to the tomb of one of that long line of worthles whose memory the Church has ever sought to make infamous, but whose practical service to mankind has been greater than any or all of the saints in the calendar. A very interesting circumstance in connection with to manking has been greater than any or all of the saints in the calendar. A very interesting circumstance in connection with the svent was the intelligence of a simultaneous dem-onstration, including the dedication of a statue to Priestley, at Birmingham, England, whence, eighty years before, he had fied, escaping from persecution, a lurious and fanatical mob, and his burning dwelling, to find refuge amidst the wilds of Pennsylvania. Such is human life, its strange ingratitude and incon-sistency. We spure our benefactors and cover them with ignominy in their day; but when they have passed beyond the reach of our cruelty we celebrate their merits and schlevements, and lavish upon their graves our eminent honors. Well did President Coppie ob-serve, in his eloquent address in the little hill-side cemetery at Priestley's grave, that if its permitted those who have departed this life to know what is transpiring here, his martyr soul must be gladdened by this scene and commemoration of his labors and wittes. virtues.

by this seeme and commemoration of his labors and virtues. It came to light in the course of the meeting that he original suggestion from which the celebration prang into effect came from a woman, Professor fachel L. Bodley, of the Woman's College of Phila-delphia, now on a tour of scientific exploration in the West, a lady who has gained some distinction through her enthusiasm in such pursuits. It was the cause of unfavorable comment that her letter of regret for absence, which was pronounced by those who saw it to be eminently worthy of the occasion, should not have been read with others of the same character. Why was it not? Was it because it is much easier for acientists to analyze the properties of matter, and decompose their compound gases, than it is to under-vised their own mental characteristics, or free their own minds from prejudice and intolerance? The admirable and delightful success in which it veretiand their and delightful success in which it vertically culminated belongs chiefly, however, to Mines, Columbia College. In a communication to the American Chemist, from this gentleman, some two or three months since, the year 1774 was men-tioned as memorable for a number of important discoveries in chemistry, especially that of oxygen gas, by Dr. Joseph Priestiey; and the practicability of an appropriate commemoration of the one hundredth anniversary of the latter event was urged for the first of August, the present summer. It was initiated that it might partake of the nature of a centennial celebration of progress in the branch of science with which the name of Priestley is imperiabably associ-ated; and, moreover, as there has been a feeling of late years among the chemista of the country that their special pursuit did not secure the interest or recognition it is entitled to among the general and necessarily somewhat hasty consideration of subjects at the meedings of the American Association for the Advancement of Science, it was thought that the oc-canon might afford an opportunity for the better ex-change of ideas among chemists, besides increasing the spirit of cooperation and fraternity among them. The suggestion met with a very favorable reception, and a circular containing a more direct appeal in re-gard to it received at once the signatures of many of the most distinguished chemists of the country, in-cluding upwards of fifty professors of colleges, as an assurance of their hearts privation of his lift there; but was forced through persecution in old age to flee to this country. He spent his last yearn at North-umberland, Pennsylvanis, the place of his burial. It proposed commemoration should occur on the spot that is thus identified with his illustrious name and labors. The selection, apart from these consid-erations, was admirable in itself. The town, which contains a population of about two thousand five hundred, is charmingly situated on the wast branch of the Suqueshnans, in Central Pennsylvania, and consery that in picturesquences and beauty is scaredly unpassed anywhere. It presents a staid and com-fortable appearance to the eye of the visitor, without anything particularity calculated externally to arrest his distention, or remind him of the great man whose harote and b

The performance of your readers may have seen it before:— "I have been chosen by my fellow-citizens to offer to the learned and distinguished men and women, who have gathered here to commemorate a grand dis-covery, a brief but earnest welcome. We cannot fol-low you through the wide realms of science, nor ex-plore very deeply the mysteries of Nature, for we know more about oxen than oxygen, and more about the whey of milk than the milky way; but we can move with equal step in paying a tribute of respect and reverence to the illustrious man who eighty years ago found among the rude forefathers of this hamlet a quiet home, and seventy years ago an homored grave. While in the lapse of everlasting time all human names must be forgotien, many ages will have come and gone, and left their eilent footmarks on the earth, before the name of Priestley will pass from the memories and the records of his fellow-men. He has written it in letters of light and glory upon the high-est and broadest pillar of the universe. By the right of genius and labor he takes rank with the dead bin their urns. Like the eagle, he built his eyrie upon the mountain's top, inaccessible to vulgar intrusions. In that pure atmosphere he dweit not above human apite, jealousy, and detraction; for it is easier to get below than above their annoyances. The shafts of bigots and fools were simed at him, but they could not penetrate the triple armor which enthusiasm, philosophy, and truth had thrown around him. Like you, gentlemen, he made science his mistress, and with a pure heart and an untiring mind he wor-shipped her "through long days of labor and nights devoid of case;" and to-day he stands with Galileo, Newton, Harvey, Franklin, Faraday, and Humboldt, grand, colossal, and enduring, one of the great high priests in the boundless and beautiful temple of Nature.

priests in the boundless and beautiful temple of Nature. "A brutal English mob could burn his dwelling, and in an hour of political madness and religious frenzy destroy the work of years; but it could not stay the indomitable energy of his genius, nor dim the lustre of his well-carned renown. While the mis-erable wretches who composed that mob have long ago given back to the great element which he discov-ered seventy-five per cent of their worthless carcases, more than eighty years afterwards his name is a talls-man to draw to this quite trillage many of the most renowned knowledge-gatherers of the nation, and from Canada and New Jersey an aristocracy of learn-ing and intellect that can afford to look down from its high citadels of thought and achievement with pity, if not contempt, upon the more rulgar aristocracy of illiterate wealth.

It not contempt, upon the more vingar ansisteracy of bilind accident, the painted caterpillars of illiterate wealth. "In conclusion, I would merely reiterate to you, men and women of sense and science, in behalf of all my neighbors, a very sincere and unfeigned welcome to our homes and hearts; and let me assure you most carnestly that we are not only willing, but anxious, to do all things possible to make you remember with pleasure your well-timed pligrimage to the home and grave of the greatest discoverer of his time." Among the particularly interesting occurrences of the first day's proceedings was the exchange of the following telegrams by ocean cable:— "To the American Chemists assembled at North-umberland, Pa.: Our marble statue, representing Priestley discovering oxygen, will be unveiled to-morrow, presented by the abscribers, through Pro-fessor Huxley, to the town, and accepted by the memory of a great and good man." This was algued by the Priestley Memorial Com-mittee, Birmingham, England. The salutation from Northumberland was in these words:— "The brother chemists at the grave, to their broth-

<text><text><text><text>

NORTHUMBERLAND, Dec. 20, 1797.

NORTHUMBERLAND, JAB. 7, 1789.

manua Google

DEAL SIE:-You say you wish I were as zealous a friend of America sa Mr. Hone is of France. Both Mr. Hone and myself, as well as Dr. Price and many others, were as zealous in the cause of America as he now is in that of France. If I had

<text><text><text><text><text><text>

NORTHUMBERLAND, Dec. 12, 1789.

NORTHUMBRELARD, Dec. 12, 1799. DEAR SIR:-Two was peculiarly welcome, for, in truth, I was shift you would have revolted at my politice, as you were on violent a Federalist and I auch a democrat. Since, how-ment as and you the second by this post, and then you will and the worst of me. Though Porcupine's abuse had no effect on you, it had mean others; and even in this part of the country I was provided as a dangeroue perion. For in this coun-try it is not one person in a hundred that knows anything of my writings or my history. I was frequently called an athelat. Forcupine's paper was taken by all the most re-propagated augleted my notes on all the books of first I du ot intend to meddle with, as there is possible of the to interfere without omitting even Solomon's Song, which at first I du ot intend to meddle with, as there is possed on by my cutor. There completed my experience in defence of the doc-

That is a second second

DEAR STR:-Locking into my Institutes, I find I have said all that I know, and I believe all that is known, about the devil; and, in the way of argument, I should now only say that I be-lieve with Mr. Palmer (now in Botany Bay) that the failen angels of Peter and Jude were the descendants of Seth, who perished in the deluge. (See the Theological Reposito-ry, vol. 5, 0. 166). As to an historical article, I could not find material for one.... I am, dear sir, yours sincerely. J. PRIESTLET.

NORTHUMBERLAND, March 1, 1799.

NORTHUMBERLAND, Feb. 20, 1800. ...Ilately sent to Mr. Smith, by Mr. Campbell, some copies of a chemical tract in defence of the doctrine of phlogitator. Though you are not a chemist, you may, per-haps, find something to annuse and I hope to piezze you in the preface, etc. I am writing a,dissertation on the knowledge of a future state among the ancient Hebrews. I have been used to think there were no traces of it in the Old Testament, but i now think it furnishes me a demonstration of it. I wish I could submit it to your inspection. I shall transcribe it in a few days, and if I have a good opportunity I will send it to you.

NORTHUMMERLAND, Jan. 7, 1800. ... J often wish I could see you in myshed, as it is called. But it is too much out of your way in going or returning from Cougress, and besides we have not yet any stage-coach to this place. With every good wish, etc.

JANDARY 23, 1800. JANDARY 23, 1800. cal work, which I entitled The Doctrine of Phiopston Estab-lished, and that of the Composition of Water Refuted. You will wonder at my confidence when almost all the world is against me. But I have cautiously examined the ground, and think I stand very firm. I do not think the Allted Powers have now the same confidence in the contest with France.

MAECH 6, 1900. ... I am engaged in a promising train of experiment, and everything in this way is much more expensive than in England. But I cannot be idle. You see that, rather than do nothing, I write on politics, of which you Federalists will say I know nothing at all.

MARON 30, 1800. ... I wish you could read the dedication and preface to my last tract on phicgiston.... Were you here, I should not despair of exciting your attention to other things be-sides theology or metaphysics, though these are certainly of the first consequence, and I give most of my time to them.

them. The "Loan Exhibition," as it was called, was a peculiarly attractive feature of the celebration. It consisted of a large collection of philosophical and chemical apparatus, books, manuscripts, engravings, paintings, etc., that belonged to Priestley or were of interest in connection with the history of chemical science, some being supplied by the town, and some temporarily loaned for this purpose. Many of these afforded curious illustrations of the disadvantages which the earlier experimenters labored under, and the changes, which science has undergone even in modern times in the appliances of these pursuits. At the afternoon session on Friday, Professor T. Berry Hunt, of Boston, gave an address entitled, "A Beview of the Century's Progress in Theoretical

INDEX-AUGUST 21StateAugustThe laster part of the eighteenth certarilyto the had discovered the composition of carrierto the had discovered the composition of carrierto the had discovered the composition of anyto the heat of the auphouric acid, coal, etc., were shown as marked ex-amples of the benefits reaped from the labors of chemistry. The concluding paper was read by Professor Ben-jamin Silliman, of Yale College. It was an essay on "American Contributions to Chemistry," and con-tained succinct references to all those who have been specially conspicuous in chemical science in this country, with an account of their achievements. On Sunday, John Fretwell, Jr., of England, gave a discourse on Priestley from the European stand-point, in the Unitarian church of the town which he founded. A number of visitors who had remained over were present. It is not improbable that some of these would have feit themselves leas in sympathy with the place, if they had known that this same body of worshippers, descendants of the brave iconoclast to whom they had come to render their honors, not two years before had subjected their own minister to a cast him out of their pulpit, after four years of faithful service, because, like him, he was unwilling to suppress at their bidding the declaration of his honest convictions.

HUXLEY ON PRIESTLEY.

A BOLD AND CLEAR ESTIMATE OF DR. PEIESTLEY AND HIS WORK,

A BOLD AND CLEAR ESTIMATE OF DR. PRIESTLEY AND HIS WORK. The centenary of the discovery of oxygen by Dr. Priestley was celebrated at Birmingham, on Satur-day, by the unvelling of a statue of the great chem-ist. Eighty-three years ago, Joseph Priestley, then the minister of the principal Unitarian congregation in Birmingham, was ignominiously driven from the town, amid the executions of a mob who saw in him only the theological controversialist and the spologist of the French revolutionists. The statue, which is the work of Mr. F. J. Williamson, a pupil of Foley, is eight feet six inches in height. The Doctor, hab-ited in the coatume of his period, with wig, ruffles, knee-breeches, buckled shoes, and large-cuffed and lappeted coat, is represented in the act of making the experiment which resulted in the discovery of oxygen gas. In his right hand is a lens, or burning-glass, the focus of which is directed upon a little tube and dish resting upon a rustic pedestal at his left hand, and containing presumably the red precipitate of mercury, from which he first succeeded in evolving "dephlogisticated air." The attitude is graceful, easy, and expressive, and the face, modelled from an authentic portrait, is considered by members of the Priestley family an excellent likeness.

The unveiling ceremony was beld at one o'clock on Sturday, in the presence of a large assembly, when Professor Huxley, in the name of the subscribes, formally and briefly presented the statue to the two, and the cheers of the spectators. The mayor (Alderman Chamberlain) having acknowledged the gift on the part of the corporation, the party adjourned to the town Hall, for the purpose of bearing an address from Professor Huxley on the life and albors of Dr. Priestley. Letters of apology for non-attendance from the borough members, Professor Tyndall and Morley, Sir Bartle Free, Dr. B. Ridmar, Prefessor Huxley in this town. He learned from Leeds that like honor was being paid to Priestley's memory in that great and important city, and he knew that in the United States large preparations had been making for the celebration of that anniversary. It might be proper, therefore, to ask their patience for a short time while be laid before them the grounds and considerations which had led the fellow-countymen of Priestley, after a lapse of seventy years from the time of his dealth, to do this honor to a sman who was not infact one of those to whom making grow raidy delighted to erect statuse either before or after their dealth. He imagined if they could have aked Priestley himself what he considered to be his best claim—if, indeed, he had any, for the man was mot of eason, of that particular hypothesis respecting he sacrificed that consideration for his endprise, the sacrificed these raids that it was because he had been the champion and the defender and propagator, in season and out of eason, of chat particular hypothesis respecting the sacrificed the transition of posterity, he would have assort of the particular dotrine as precised the the order to progagate these rises he sacrificed the transition of opsterity, he would have assort of the particular dotrine of which Friedley. The second provide the man was motion the particular dotrines of which had been the champion and the defender and propagator, in season and out o by in the minite of his the was inded in the oral of a campion.

Side by side with those tendencies, however, had swakened a scientific proclivity. Undoubtedly what error of scientific taste lay in him was fostered and encouraged to a very great degree by his meeting with Benjamin Franklin (cheers), who was at that time is your of the scientific taste lay in him, you was still be benjamin franklin (cheers), who was still be benjamin franklin (cheers), while resident at course of inquiry while resident at course of inquiry while resident at the first place, we of the scientific pursuits. He was indicated the first place, went to London, but there, he was sorry to easy, met with the cold be bendler, even from those who should have been his blick on the blinged. Discovering the scient is discovering and was no longer a place in which he could pursue his philosophical occupations, he migrated to the scient to which he belonged. Discovering the mate to the scient of the bendler, even from those who should have been his blick on the philosophical occupations, he migrated to always the the tree of the scient at the delonged. Discovering the mate the scient is philosophical occupations, he migrated to the scient at the scint at the scint at the scient at t 1804

Having made this brief summary of the conditions

Molennin GOOgle

THEE ander which Priestley worked, Professor Huxley said he wished briefly to put before the meeting what was the value of his life's work to those who look upon it from outside the region of the particular denomina-tion to which he belonged. [Hear.] Priestley was a man of almost endless energy and versatility. He was vigorous controversialist, and in the midde of all his chemical, philosophical, and political sparks flying away from his anvil, he was constantly raining a shower of blows on priest or bishop. [Laughter.] Professor Huxley was, however, convinced that the good doctor struck those blows with the same entire abover of blows an priest or bishop. [Laughter.] Professor Huxley was, however, convinced that the good doctor struck those blows with the same entire abover of passion as the blacksmith when he was smiting his iron. But if the iron could speak it would probably take a different view of the matter must recollect that the blahops whom Priestley at-tered could speak, and had very lond volces. [Re-mewed laughter.] Priestley had been constantly re-proached for not confining himself to his philosophi-cance, capable of increasing knowledge to any extent why dida't yon confine yourself to that pursuit for which all men will reverence you, and in which you encetainly add to the sum of human knowledge ad bappiness, without awakening this hatred and in the first place, and a clitzer in the second place; and Professor Huxley could himself entirely symp-phic with him if he held the duties of his manhood is philosophersible, and if he though that the second place was a was the importance of that progress of the progress of science and the progress of the is philosophersible, and if he though that the second place is discondered which is the cententian thatter than do has citizenship to be vastly superior to those of is philosophersible, and if he to log that freedom which is the conduction of the progress of science and the progress of the is man and will be held the duties of his manhood and philosoph edit. Triestley's principal lines of activity might be divided in the third place he was a man of vided in the the triest and in the third place he was a politician. But he proposed to put before them those considerations that struck him line ach of the theorem of the second place be was a politician. But he proposed to put before them those considerations that struck him line ach of the maint carry them back to the last century and show them what was then the condition of the ancients that air, water, and the are elements was then the condition of the ancients that air, water, and the are elements was then that the doctrines of the ancients that air, water, and the are elements was then the condition of the ancients that air, water, and the are elements was then there than true. The researches of Boyle and tended to show that there were different thinds; but there were different that there were different thinds; but there were different thinds; but there were different thinds; but there were any shift of the last century, about the year of the second half of the last century, about the year of the second half of the last century, the astroked doctor of the second half of the last century, the astroked doctor of the second half of the last century, the second half of the last century, the second play the composed to a centralizing the strongesi all, and that this pare the way for an air like body apart of a mother dy the composed to a century, the second play the second play the composed the the the was a man do second bar of the second the different the weak the was and the second play the composed to the second play the composed to the second play the composed to the second play the second

<text><text><text>

ing, as Priestley did, the ultimate perfectibility of mankind. Now, looking at the present state of affairs in this nineteenth century, as compared with the eighteenth century, he did not think it could be denied that this state of things was distinctly, in many obvious respects, far better than that. [Hear, hear,] It would be absurd, at present, to speak of bribery and corruption as being dominant in the government. Members of Parliament assuredly were not to be bought by money bribes, and even constituents now were getting some serious lessons, and were told to look upon rabbits, tes, and cake with suspicion, which certainly never would have entered the minds of contemporaries of Priestley. In conclusion, Professor Huxley proceeded to point ont where Priestley's value lay. It lay, he said, exactly in this: that he was the exponent of all those tendencies which had brought about the present state of things; that in all respects, on all occasions, he was the champion of the restrictions on ecclesiatical encroachments, the champion of political freedom, and the champion and great advancer of physical eci-nece. Indeed, it was to him, and to such men as he, the speaker fearlessly asserted, that this great and undoubtedly beneficent change [hear, hear] which

THE PITTSBURG Leader, in an article entitled "Does the Explanation Explain?" says one of the popular clergymen of that city has been "improving the occasion" of the temperance crusade to expound to his flock the true exposition of the elements used at the first Lord's Supper. It was not fermented, that is, intoxicating, whe which our Savior used on that occasion, but only the "freshly-pressed jules of the grape." The reverend gentleman, says our con-temporary, should have pushed his exegests a little further, and told us where the "fresh grapes" came from that were just "pressed" in the saken of Esster. Were they miraculously preserved from the viniage of the previous autumn, or were there hot-houses in Palestine in those days?

Hoetry.

(For TER INDER.) AT MEETING.

BY C. APLIN I see afar the city's spires; And, as the light winds dally, The distant music of the bells Comes foating down the valley. Here on the billside as I lie I see the flower-bells swaying, And through the rustling forest leaves The soft June breath is playing.

There, pillared arch and spreading dome, There, pulset area has spreamy of And faces through gunder. The sound of anthem and of psalm, The organ's mellow thunder: Here, song of bird and hum of bee, The wild-dowers' iridescence,

The golden light, and over all God's still, all-hallowing presence.

I wist not that the Father's love

I wist not that the Father's love Knows aught of times or places, Or that one reverent soul that seeks Through Nature's myriad faces Shall miss His love. More grateful hymn No temple-choir upraises, Then here goes up among the birds, The grass-cuims, and the daisies.

Here all is truth: no hollow form

Here all is truth: no hollow form Calm Nature's thought paplenes; No many creed, no tangled text, Distorts her fine reflexes. God's love and peace fill all the air With sermon, song, and story; Silent I rest and share nwhile The gladness and the glory.

PROVIDENCE, R. I.

NEW SUBSCRIPTIONS TO INDEX STOCK.

Mrs. F. W. Christern, Richard B. Westbrook	New York City, Sonman, Pa.	One al	hare,
R. C. Spencer,	Milwaukee, Wis.			100
R. W. Howes,		Two		200
Chas. W. Story,	Boston, Mass.	One	-	100
CHER. W. Story,	Boston, Mass.		44	100
E. W. Meddaugh,	Detroit, Mich.	Five		500
Jacob Hoffner,	Cumminsville, O.	One		100
John Weiss,	Boston, Mass.	14	64	100
W. C. Russel,	Ithaca, N. Y.		44	100
A. W. Leggett,	Detroit, Mich.	6.0	66	100
B. F. Dyer,	Boston, Mass.		4	100.
James Purinton,	Lynn, Mass.	- 14	-	100
F. A. Nichols,	Lowell, Mass.	44	66	100
J. S. Palmer,	Portland, Me.	44	- 64	100
Robt. Ormiston,	Brooklyn, N.Y.	- 44	N	100
Mrs. A. L. Richmond,	Lowell, Mass.		R	100
Mrs. Benj. Ireson,	Lynn, Mass.	44	64	100
J. E. Oliver,	Ithaca, N.Y.		- 11	100
E. H. Aldrich,	Providence, R.I.	#4	. 16	108
Geo. L. Clark,	Providence, R.I.		44	100
W. M. Jackson,	Providence, R.I.	Two		200
Mrs. E. B. Chase,	Valley Falls, R.I.		166	100
L. F. Garvin,	Lonsdale, R.I.	One		100
James Damon,	Ipswich, Mass.	4	**
Joseph A. Barker,	Providence, R.I.		44	100
AOSODU T. DELECT.	FIGVIGENCE, R.I.			100

CASH RECEIPTS.

FOR TER WEEE ENDING AUGUST 22.

POB THE WEEK ENDING AGOUST 22. Arthur M. Loe, 10 cents; Mrs. J. E. Walker, 60 cents; Abram Young, 25 cents; L. T. Powers, 19 cents; Harriet O. Griffin, 40 cents; G. H. Poster, 60 cents; P. B. Sibley, 42; Mrs. C. Howard, $1.00; Thomas Sharpe, 43; C. W. Filimore, $3; Amos Eddredge, $2; W. C. Masdonald, $5; E. M. Ste-venson, $5; T. W. Robbins, 75 cents; A. A. Bell, 92; Mrs. C. G. Atherion, 26 cents; Mas. L. Munyan, $3; C. H. Wheel-er, $5; S. K. Filley, $3; W. A. Bates, $5; Rowland Conner, $2; D. Ayers, $70; G. H. Foster, 76 cents; A. W. Kelser, 50 cents; A. K. Loring, 40 cents; Miss Hedge, $3; O. F. Mar-ris, $5; James Lyons, $4; R. Wilkin, $5; Ann A. Chapman, $1,20; Joho Stevenson, $5; Harver Birow, $2; W. C. Ful-ler, $3; Jonathan Heisiand, $1; J. F. Wilson, $1,26.

RECEIVED.

Books.

Books. WILD FLOWERS OF THE WERT, Or, Gleanings from the Stub-ble by an Old Prairie Hen. Chicagq: H. H. Frary. 1874. Pamphlets and Periodicals. NATURAL RELIGION VERSOR REVEALED RELIGIONS. By MIR. A. Beaant.-OBTHODOX THEORIES OF PRAYER. By a Bar-rister.-THE NEED OF DOGMA'S IN RELIGION. A LEVER to Thomas Scott by Sars S. Hennell.-ON REFORMEDITY. By the late Rev. James Cranbrook.-THE TWO THEREMS. By Professor F. W. Newman. [Copied without acknowl-edgment from THE INDEX, with elight alterations.]-SLONG OF THE TIMES.-All published by Thomas Scott, Eaq. 11, The Terrace, Farqueer Road, Upper Nerwood, London 8.E.

The Terrace, Farquhar Road, Ujper Nerwood, London, S.E. SERMORS by the Rev. Charles Voysey, at St. George's Half, London. "Pathence": July 6. ---Wildshiry in Christen-dom": July 12.--"The Peace of God": July 19.--"Media-tion and Intercession": July 19.--"Media-tion and Intercession": July 19.--"Media-tion and Intercession": July 19.--"Media-tion and Intercession": July 25. MEMORIAL DAY EXERCISES of Charles Russell Lowell En-campment, Post 7, G. A. R., May, 1574. Sermon by C. A. Bartol. Gration by J. L. Stackpole. Boston: J. A. Cum-mings & Co. 1874. PROTECTION OF ANIMALS. By Geerge T. Angell. Boston: American Social Science Association. 1574. The QUARER DOCTEINE OF THE INNER LIGHT VIDIOATEM. By Charles E. Pratt. Lynn, Mass. : Geo. C. Elevbert. 1874. REFORT OF THE LIBEL SCIT, LJOWellyn POWER 48. Theodore Cury. Houlton, Me.: 1814. MALPHOUE REGRATIONS IN FOFULAR SCIENCE. NO, 12. Circulation of the Waters, by H. W. DOVE. What is Act-inism? Boston: Esters & Lauriat. 1874. AT EXPONTION OF SOCIAL FREEDOM." By the author of Magnetic Fidal Cwre, etc. Boston: 1874. ALANTIO MONTRILY for September. Boston: 16. O. Hough-Ion.

ton. UNITAMIAN REVIEW for August. Boston: L. C. Bowles. OLD AND NEW for September. Boston: Roberts Brothers. MEDICAL MIRBOR for August. New York: A. K. Butts & Co.

CO. PENN MONTHLY for September. Philadelphia: 606 Walnuk Street. SANITABLAN for September. New York: 204 Broadway.

413

.

The Index. PUBLISHED EVERY THUBSDAT

THE INDEX ASSOCIATION.

AT NO. 1 TREMONT PLACE, BOSTON. Toledo Office: No. 35 MONEOE STREET. Julius T. Frey, Agent and Clerk.

THE INDEX accepts every result of science and sound learning, without seeking to harmonize it with the Bible. It recognizes no authority but that of reason and right. It believes in Truth, Freedom, Progress, Equal Rights, and Brotherly Love. N. B.-No writer in THE INDEX, editorial or otherwise, is responsible for anything published in its columns except for his or her own individual statements. Editorial contri-butions will in every case be distinguished by the name or initials of the writer.

PRANCIS ELLING WOOD A BEOT, ABRAM WALTEN STEVENS, OUTAVIOS BROOKS FROTHINGRAM, THORAS WENTWORTH HOGINSON, WILLIAM J. FOTTER, RICHARD P, HALLOWELL, WILLIAM H. SPENCER, MUSS. E. D. CHEEVE, Rev. CHABLES VOYSEY (England), FOL FRANCIS W. NEWMAN (England), Editorial Contributors.

TO VOLUNTARY CONTRIBUTORS .- Only Short Arti-cles desired. Unused Manuscripts not returned.

BOSTON, AUGUST 27, 1874.

SUNDAY LECTURES .- The Editors of THE INDEX will SUNDAY LECTURES. The Markets of desired, within a con-sectore occasionally on Sundays, if desired, within a con-venient distance of Boston.

BREVITY IS a great recommendation in articles for the press. Don't send us communications which are four hours in passing a given "point"!

MANY DISTINGUISHED astronomers were absent from the Hartford scientific reunion, in order to observe the transit of Venus, the great astronomical event of the year.

ONE LUXURY is within the reach of every man who is not afraid of poverty-the luxury of speaking his own thought instead of echoing another's. It is the only luxury that enriches.

THE PROHIBITIONIST CLEEGYMAN of Pittafield, Maine, who sends us a communication in which he exclaims, "Please tells us if you are such a fool as to be sincere when you say, etc., etc.," and has no argument but similar expressions, is reminded that any cause is weak which is forced to resort to ungentlemanly language in self-defence. We forbear to publish an article which would tend to bring his profession into disrepute with sensible persons, and even with most of those who are not sensible.

IT IS NECESSARY to say that we cannot undertake to return any unused manuscripts, and must request all correspondents either to retain copies of their communications (if they wish to preserve them) or else to withhold them altogether. This is from no unwillingness to oblige, but solely on account of the trouble caused by the request to return them. It is impossible in most cases to decide in advance whether a given article will be printed or not, and we wish to be spared the necessity of burdening our memory, which is usually overtaxed, with such commissions.

MR. AARON M. POWELL, formerly editor of the Anti-Slavery Standard, is to edit the Northampton Journal, beginning September 12. The paper is to be a weekly of eight pages, at two dollars a year, and will discuss politics, reform, etc., besides the local interests of Western Massachusetts. Mr. Powell is well and very favorably known to the "original abolitionists"that is, to those that have not become "original" since the war; and his many friends will doubtless combine to give him a handsome subscription list to We shall look with interest for his first start with. issue, and hope that his enterprise will abundantly prosper.

WHEN THE Golden Age says that "no change in the phraseology of a Preamble will draw them [the anti-Christians| back into the fellowship of the [Unitarian] denomination, so long as its whole substance and spirit are profoundly and characteristically Christian. we are constrained, notwithstanding our high regard for the individual members of that fellowship, to assent without qualification. There was a time when such a change as is alluded to would have retained us in that denomination, perhaps permanently; but going back is quite another thing. We have learned too much since 1866. Liberal Unitarianism will yet come forward to Free Religion; but Free Religion will not go back to Unitarianism, no matter how "liberal" it may be. If Unitarianism is bound to be Christian, let it keep its Preamble; if it is bound to be free, let it do a great deal more than 'to repeal that. The issue has at last been made before the world, and compromise is henceforth impossible.

JUDGING CHARACTER BY OPINIONS.

Two letters came to us very recently, and by a singular coincidence on the same day, which teach a lesson so serious and so grave that it ought not to be buried in our own heart. For the sake of one of the profoundest and most needed truths of Free Religion, we must repeat it here,

1. One of these letters says! "Your remarks in THE INDEX of August 13 on the Woodhull miscreant are almost good. What is wonderful is that you 'know nothing against her,' and that she 'may be an angel of purity, and spotless as the driven snow,' after showing that she exultingly points to adultery as intrinsically 'divine.' " This is quite as much as we can quote; it would be more than we could quote, were it not that we have something to say which would be unintelligible without it.

The attacks on Mrs. Woodhull's personal character which the writer of this letter subsequently alludes to, and indorses, are perfectly well known to us. What we do not know is whether they are true; and we suspect that the writer knows just as little as we. When we said that "we know nothing against her," we meant just what we said; for every reader of the daily papers, not to mention the particular attacks referred to, must have heard a great deal against her. But we have also heard a great deal in her favor, and know that some of the purest people of the land have been her enthusiastic encomiasts. Who are we to sit in judgment on any one, in the absence of all certified facts of actual conduct? Is it so easy a thing to detect the calm, low voice of truth in the deafening noises of conflicting rumors? Is it so easy to be om niscient, to penetrate the secret motives of the heart, to fathom the inner purposes and read the hidden depths of any human soul? Especially in the case of a character which, be it good or bad, has stimulated assault and defence in a remarkable degree, it is the barest justice to express no opinion except on the basis of knowledge beyond dispute. We must repeat it more deliberately and emphatically than ever, that we know nothing against Mrs. Woodhull's personal character, and make no attack upon it. Further, we declare that she has uttered some of the finest, noblest, and truest things about human love that can anywhere be found. But nevertheless we consider her theory of "free love" in the main as false in principle, demoralizing in practice, and absolutely infernal in its certain effects upon society, if it should be carried out in social and legislative form. Between the woman and her words, we insist that distinction should be made-the one to be judged by the laws of morals, and the other to be judged by the laws of. thought. Others may do as they please; but we refuse to strike an opponent, above all a woman, until the last ounce of brain shall have oozed out of our empty skull, and left us no argument but a blow.

"But she pronounces adultery divine! Is not that enough ?" No!

Two pictures seem to be before us: one of a vile woman seeking to drag her whole sex down to her own level, and gifted with intellect enough to seek it. by propagating a theory sufficiently sophistical and plausible to delude many acute and well-intentioned followers,-the other of a wronged wife stung by her own sufferings to advocate the cause of women by passionately and enthusiastically pleading an extreme theory of their rights, however exaggerated it may be, however extravagant, however sure to be ruinous to their happiness, however sure to make them at last worse slaves than even in the days of barbarism; a woman so exasperated by the too numerous infidelities of husbands as to lose out of sight the sanctity of the marriage bond itself, and see no shame in the total denial of an obligation which sits so lightly on the consciences of men. Which of these two pictures is the life-likeness, if either, we do not know; nor is it at all necessary to determine. Our concern is with ideas, not with persons. We have lived long enough to learn that truth suffers a deplorable obscuration whenever the personality of any one attracts all eyes. The free-love theory will be neither more nor less true, whether Victoria C. Woodhull proves to be the Satan or the Christ of womankind. They who have outgrown equally the Satans and the Christs must come back at last to principles; and it is high time that radicals should prove themselves superior to the temptation to seek victory by dodging the question at issue and assailing the personal characters of the disputants. Victories so valueless are not worth the winning.

2. The other of the two letters we must quote at greater length. It is from one against whom we have no armor-from an Evangelical Christian whose wounding injustice is but proof of the depth, strength, and honesty of his religion, and could never have proceeded from his unperverted nature. Whatever might betray the authorship is carefully withheld. The letter is as follows: ". . . You are very wide of the mark in supposing I desire to repulse any affection; I need it enough, God knows. But it is right that you should understand that your course necessarily forfeits the respect of your friends; and without respect no hearty and cordial intimate intercourse is possible. It is a great sorrow to me, as it has been to your other friends, both living and dead, that you have not yet in all your changes and theories perceived-what common sense teaches the majority of mankindthat man has not infinite knowledge and infinite powers of appreciating the infinite universe; in other words, that without faith a man is as trudy blind mentally, as he is physically without eyes. Certain truths, and those the greatest, can only be perceived in the attitude of a little child. I wish I could make you see how you are allowing a few bad men to play you off (as they would pull the wires of a jumpingjack) into supporting views and opinions which only lead to such developments as have lately come to light in Brooklyn, when practically adopted by the average of mankind. Thank God, you are safe yourself from such results, from the remaining effects of your early instruction and from the influences of your home; but you are unwittingly allowing yourself to throw your influence on that side. Few things would give me more pleasure than to have you wake up to this, as ---- always believed would ultimately be the case, as you grow older. You may think this an unkind letter, but it is not so intended. I believe it reflects truly the feeling of your best friends, although many of them hesitate to tell you so openly. ... Can you reconcile it to your conscience to put such a paper as THE INDEX into the hands of your fine boys to corrupt their whole future life?" We have not quoted these extracts to make any defence or reply. What needs defence is the spirit, fortered by the Christian religion, that prompts to such cruelty of injustice. But the injustice is not the writer's. Where faith is the supreme grace and virtue, want of it is the chief sin; and no consistent Christian who is imbued with the real spirit of the New Testament could hold a different opinion of any free thinker than the above. None the less drearily and sadly false is it, and none the less painfully unjust; to hold that the free thinker "necessarily forfeits respect." The new and better religion renders impossible such wretched, though conscientious, pharisaism. Respect belongs to every one whose life is nobly obedient to its own highest ideal, however imperfect it may be; and we are guilty of a great and grievous wrong to impute as sin to any one, man or woman, the inferences we draw from mere belief, s if they were actual deeds of evil. Christianity always does this-always assumes a bad moral or spin itual state as the necessary cause of "religious error," i. e. rational belief. But could there be a greater blunder or a more monstrous injustice? To teach the innocence and virtuouaness of the love of truth, no matter whether it leads to "Reason or Rome,"to teach that the ground of respect lies in the fidelity with which truth, however apprehended, is daily and hourly applied to the conduct of life,-to teach that man can commit no more heinons outrage against his brother than to hold him guilty for following in singleness of heart the best light that may be in him, and that, if there be a "sin against the Holy Ghost," It is verily this sin against human charity and fraternity,-these teachings have been ours from the beginning; and if they bring loss of respect, even so must it be. The injustice, having no remedy, must be endured. Nevertheless, while carrying a sense of being deeply wronged by one dearly loved, it is suddenly suggested that we turn about and inflict the same great wrong upon another! Shall we justify the pharisalc judgment passed upon us solely because of our belief, by passing a similar judgment upon Mrs. Woodhull solely because of hers? Or shall the radicals justify the course of the Church from time immemorial in branding them as vile and wicked on account of their opinions, by branding Mrs. Woodhull as such for no better reason? If there is direct evidence of immoral conduct on her part, that is a very different thing; we would interpose no shield between any one and the consequences of his own acts, and we have no squeamishness or sentimentality that would soften deserved retribution in the case of proved misconduct. But if there is no stronger evidence sgainst Mrs. Woodhull than her published opinions, then to condemn her for those is to destroy the very corner-stone of radicalism. Con-damn the opinions as much as you please, if they are false; but to make them the ground of personal censure is a great crime against freedom of thought and universal humanity. By this principle must we abide, as the only principle that will for a moment protect any one in the utterance of unpopular views-the principle that character must be judged by deeds alone, or by words that are themselves deeds. Opinion must be free, and without blame; and because we have had too much reason to feel keenly the injustice of an opposite principle, we refuse to be guilty of this injustice towards another.

414

F. B. A. ANNUAL REPORT.

The Report of the Proceedings of the last Annual Meeting of the Free Religious Association (1874) has been printed in pamphlet form, and is now ready for distribution.

It contains the annual report of the Secretary, and verbalim reports of President Frothingham's address on "The Validity of the Free Religious Platform," of Dr. Bartol's essay on "The Religious Signs of the Times," of Rabbi Sonneschein's speech on "Reformed Judaism," and of the statements by Messre. Calthrop, Abbot, and Higginson of their respective attitudes with regard to Christianity,-as "Christian," "Anti-Christian," and "Extra-Christian."

Members of the Association are entitled to the tract gratis. Price to others, single copy, 35 cents; package of four or more, 25 cents each. It can be ob-tained in Boston at A. Williams & Co.'s, and at the office of the Association, No. 1 Tremont Place. Applications for it from abroad may be sent to the office in Boston, or to the Secretary, New Bedford, Mass. WM. J. POTTER, Secretary.

LONDON LETTER.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE INDEX:

Sir,-It is not very encouraging to take up the pen on board an Edinburgh steamboat, and to have to contend more with idle and restless thoughts than with the difficulties incident to literary pursuits carried on at sea

But I must write now or I know not when, and ask your readers to show me some indulgence under the circumstances.

An event of great public importance enabled me to leave London with a lighter heart, and, being full of it. I must say something about it.

The Public Worship Regulation Bill has passed through the Committee of the House of Commons, and cannot again be tampered with.

Various kinds of tactics were in valu tried to overthrow it or defeat its principle.

For the benefit of those who are too ignorant of, or to indiffent to what is passing in the English Church, I may explain that the object of the bill is to give greater facility for the enforcement of the law, especially those laws which regulate, or are supposed to regulate, the conduct of divine worship in our churches.

By this measure the tediousness, uncertainty, and expense of the older machinery will be greatly modifled, if not altogether obviated.

The immediate purpose of the bill is to restrain the illegal innovations of the ritualist party in the Church; and it was in a large measure owing to Mr. Disraeli's hold avowal that it was intended to "put down ritualism" that the crowded House carried the second reading of the bill by acclamation.

Among the most useful and determined supporter of the measure were Mr. Russell Gurney and Sir William Vernon Harcourt (known also as "Historicus" of the Times newspaper). Driving his adversaries back with their own weapons, he "smote them hip and thigh with a great slaughter," and made Englishmen feel that this was not a mere question of vestments and candles and incense, but of the supremacy of Church over State, "That fetched them," as the author of Hans Breitmann would have said. The representatives in Parliament have risen like one man to declare that priestcraft shall not reign over them. And this it is which makes my heart glad today.

Now I think it is due to liberals to justify this exultation at the crippling of the libertles of those who do not agree with us. At first sight, it seems to be only a new form of bigotry, an unpardonable inconsistency in one who has himself suffered a kind of persecution, to be advocating the exercise of legal restraints upon others.

And I fully grant that, were it merely a question of tolerating elaborate ritual, and all sorts of fantastic mummeries in religious worship, even when those mummeries symbolize a set of doctrines against which it was the very constitution of the English Church to protest, even then, I say, it would be contrary to all the axioms of religious liberty to interfere with them, or to put them under pains and penalties.

Be it remembered, however, that this is not the head and front of the ritualists' offending. They are in league to overthrow and to supersede the civil power, or to reduce it to a state of complete subordination to what they please to call "the Church."

I had grave fears that the people of this country had sunk into a complete torpor on this vital point. I saw with increasing alarm the spread of that doctrine of laissez-faire in matters of religion and ecclesiasticism, which was giving so vast an opportunity to the boldness and arrogance of these priestlings. But the success of this bill and the overwhelming expression of downright Protestantism by the House of Commons have once more reassured me that England is not going to be sold back into Romanism, ancient or modern, genuine or spurious.

Mr. Gladstone, I also rejoice to say, took a step in favor of ritualism and sacerdotalism which has cost him his proud position as leader of the liberals in this country. I have more than once in your columns expressed my distrust of that very slow man on all points connected with religion; and, in an evil hour for himself, he showed his true colors and got what he deserved-the prompt desertion of the best and the most of his deluded followers. Sacerdotalism in the Established Church of England is a much more serious and dangerons foe to liberty than the same thing is outside its borders. We are not afraid of Rome, whose priests and hlerarchy are fearlessly tolerated among us, and allowed to practise their propagandism to the utmost of their power. We permit them to remain amongst us on the condition of behaving as if they believed that the State is above the Church. On that tenure they are unmolested, and rightly so. But for us to erect by our own carelessness or indifference an imperium in imperio, and suffer the great wealth and prestige of our clergy and churches to be used in undermining our Protestantism, and in efforts to place the Crown beneath the feet of the Church, would have been an act of surpassing folly and self-destruction. While we have a Church we must, for very life and liberty, put a curb into the mouths of the priests, and ride them with a strong hand. Meanwhile, all our other energies must be directed to the repeated exposure of the priestly fallacies, and to the elevation of the people who are still under their influence to a position of independence which they are entitled to assume. I am, sir, very truly yours,

CHARLES VOYSEY.

JULY 80, 1874.

CHURCH TAXATION IN THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA.

It was stated a few months ago by a Washington correspondent of the press that a poor man in that city, owning a small brick house valued at $5,000 on G street, between Eighth and Ninth streets, was obliged to see it sold to pay the tax of $6,000 for street improvements, while the Catholic society which owned all the rest of the street escaped paying anything in consequence of church exemption from taxation. A more grievous case of infustice could not be imagined; and Mr. Ranney wrote to the Secretary of the Liberal League in Washington to learn if the statement was correct. The Secretary, Mr. Wood, replied that he could not ascertain that the story was true, but he added: "In the case of the special assessments levied here for street improvements the injustice of exempting church property was so manifest that the local press unanimously took ground for its taxation; and during the discussion of the question reference was made, I recollect, to cases like the one mentioned in the paragraph you enclose."

Mr. Wood also gives the following information on the same subject: "You will see by the Congressional Record that the bill (H. R. 3680) introduced by Mr. Wilson, of Indiana, on Wednesday, June 17, which ssed the Senate on the 18th, provides for the taxation of all real estate, including church property, in the District for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1875. On the 19th, in the Senate (see Record dated 20th) a motion to reconsider was made by Mr. Boreman, because the bill included church property, which Mr. B. said was not generally understood at the time of the passage of the bill; but the motion was defeated. Church property in the District is therefore taxed during the current fiscal year, at least."

It will be remembered by our readers that, on May 18, Hon. George F. Hoar, of Massachusetts, presented in the House of Representatives a petition of 5,481 names, collected and forwarded by THE INDEX in response to blank petitions which it had disseminated at its own expense throughout the country, in favor of the repeal of the Act of June 17, 1870,-the Act which has exempted church property in the District. since that date. This petition was, printed in full at the time in the Congressional Record ; and it is reasonable to suppose that this petition had some influence in producing the legislation above described by Mr. Wood. Such, at least, is the obvious suggestion of the facts themselves; and it ought to encourage all who are willing to work, and not merely to talk, to make renewed exertions for the abolition of the great injustice of tax-exemption.

THE BRUTE BALLOT AGAINST THE TRUTH.

The backers that the provential the object of the term and accuracy neighbor to veracity; both of a though the term and the provential the order of the term and the provential the term and the term and the term and the provential the term and the term and the provential the term and the ter

The set of the set of

is to be shut out because he no longer calls himself a Christian. I hope, my friend, you are not going to be afraid to come through "Chestnut street." You will find plenty of Orthodoxy there to neutralize my heresy. Ivy, or dogwood, or sumach, does not poison some prisons; and I do not think you would contract any disease in my house or study, where you are welcome to the best we can set before you. In our humble fare for body or mind. As to infallibility of the Pope, which you suspect me of pretending to let me quietly rest under the imputed guilt of assuming it for my-self, so far as it is indeed implied in presuming to have and express an opinion that some things are have and express an opinion that some things are really against the truth! But wheever takes part in that duci fights with an enemy "not subject to casu-alty;" and, with all my zeal, I have no anxious conthat duci fights with an enemy "not subject to casu-alty;" and, with all my zeal, I have no anxious con-cern for the result. To my phrase, therefore, brute ballot against the truth, with its application, despite your last advices, I feel bound to adhere. I trust in the Conference what it refers to may be modified or revised. If by those whom in religion I have loved and honcred that should be confirmed, I shall be unable to respect their course, however not doubting their honesty, and still prizing their good-will. We shall have come to a parting of the ways! At whatever cost of being ac-cused of arrogance, I am obliged to characterize such a conclusion as was come to in Bulfinch Street Chapet as illustrating the general evil of unenlightened suf-frage in this land, and not a true "ministry at large," None will regret more than I to have the Unitarian prestige become, if I may invent a word, postige— as he bade, conscience into what they did, were after-wards never beat. We cannot settle truth by voting; yet let us put both conscience and aclence into our conduct and speech. With eithe hore acclesistical dissent and personal yet let us put both constants conduct and speech. With alike hearty ecclesiastical dissent and personal regard, praying not to be compelled to trespass further on your columns, I am (not technically your's but) C. A. BARTOL.

Christian Register.

THE BIBLE IS VERY hard to digest for most stom-achs. Even a codish has tried it in vain. A copy of the book, bound in calf, according to the Edinburgh Scotancr., was lately found in the stomach of a cod-fish, and hore the name of William Sim, and the date 1830. It has been learned that Sim was a sailor of Dundee, who went to sea in 1834 and has not been heard from since. The supposition is that everything appertaining to him was devoured by this fish which had been tormented for forty years with an indigesti-ble Bible in its stomach.—Globe.

IT HAS BEEN decided by an Iowa judge that it is necessary to health to chop wood on Sunday—if a family has any to chop.

managed by Google

Communications.

"THE MAN AFTER GOD'S OWN HEART." MAPLEVILLE, R. I., Aug. 10, 1874.

MAPLEVILLE, R. I., Aug. 10, 1874. Mapleville, R. I., Aug. 10, 1874. Dear Sir, -On reading your article on the "Great Preacher's Ordeal," nearly every word of which I approve, I could not but object to the way in which you allude to the "man after God's own heart." I think a good many of your anti-Christian readers, and not a few of your Christian readers, will have a different feeling from that of "disgust or contempt," when the atrocities of the psalm-singing monarch of Israel are pointed out. Taking the narratives as they stand, I find David represented in the Old Testament as a ruthless, blood-thirsty, lustful villain, and at the same time a sound churchman and exectable hypo-crite. His death was worthy of his life. Wicked-ness was in his mind, and cursing and bitterness were, on his tongue. How it is that you can find anything to admire in such a type of fanaticism and immorality is what puzzles me. Yours respectfully, JAMES RUDDLE. MR. ABBOT:

Yours respectfully, JAMES RUDDLE.

[King David must be judged by the moral ideas of his own times, not of ours. He was only a barbarian of genius. But Mr. Ruddle has mistaken our mean-ing to some extent. We made no general eulogium on this Captain Jack of the Old Testament; though his crimes do not wipe out the beauty of his friendship for Jonathan, the magnanimity with which he spared Saul when in his power, or the noble dignity with which he refused to drink the water brought to him from the well of Bethlehem at the partil of his followers' lives. What we commended was the in-. tensity and depth of his sorrow over his own wickedness, which showed that he was better than his deeds. Every generous man forgives the crime that is repeated of; and he will be ashamed to reproach the Church for prizing the poems in which David pours out his penitence and aspiration for a nobler We are no friend to the Church, believing that life. it is the implactive for of free thought; but we are incapable i blaming it for accepting the contrition of bne whose atrocities it condemns as much as we.-ED.]

SETTLING PREMISES.

Mr. A BOOT:--The would be pleasant, now that the discussion of his historia in your columns is coming to a focus, if the right of the State to forbid the sale of intoxication of all the rational minds among your readers. The first step in the direction of so bapps an event for the sale of intoxication of all the rational minds among your readers. The first step in the direction of so bapps an event for the sale of intoxication of all the rational minds among your readers. The first step in the direction of so bapps an event for the sole of the sale of intoxication of all the rational minds among your readers. The first step in the direction of so bapps an event for the first step in the direction of so bapps an event for the first step in the direction of so bapps an event for the first step in the direction of so bapps an event for the first step in the direction of so bapps an event for the first step in the direction of so bapps an event for the first step in the direction of sole by an editor of the sole by an edit of the sole by an edit sole of the sole by taxation, then "compulsory edit for the sale of emoving that ignorance is the mainten at every part of a chois by taxation, then "compulsory edit is the first in the state of observe the sole be come as a criminal. The simple quest was not, an the same principle, a law be made for the state sole is a sole of the sole be come as a criminal. The simple quest is the sole be come as a criminal. The simple quest is the sole be sole we may see that the sole be come as a criminal. The simple quest was been the sole be come as a sole of the sole be reader we may see the thereby become as a criminal. The simple quest is the sole be come as a crime we here argument to its first readers will be required in the status of the sole be as a sole of obsecent eliter to the state of the state of the sole be as a sole of obsecent eliter and pictures, none of which injure societ we may be the the sole be sole we may sole the the sole be as a sole of obsecent eliter an

[This proposal to settle premises is a "word fitly spoken."

1. The "protection of society" should first of all be understood to mean simply the protection of all the rights of all the members of society ; and this universal protection of individual rights should be subject only to the limitations involved in their necessary coexistence. So considered, the greatest freedom of each compatible with the equal freedom of all would be the realization of the end sought. We must carefully avoid treating "society" as an entity distinct from the individuals that compose it; and we must remember that these individuals are "protected" in the only true sense when they are freed from unnecessary interference with their freedom.

2. The "legislature" usurps power, and becomes the chief assailant of private liberty, if it presumes to do more than to enact such laws as shall secure the unimpeded enjoyment of the maximum of private liberty. Its action should be strictly guided by the principles of Scientific Ethics, or it will become a nuisance to be abated. It would not do to concede to It the right to carry out the whims of its own members, irrespective of this universal standard. In short, it is only an agent, a tool, and not a sovereign power; and it is entitled to do nothing which conflicts with the right of each individual to be unmeddled with in his private life, unless he first meddles with others. This jealousy for the individual is the corner-stone of republicanism.

3. In its full meaning, "society" includes children as well as adults; and no adjudication of rights is equitable which ignores them. "Compulsory education" is simply a recognition of the rights of children, as entitled to full protection; and it means that the most vital interests of children shall not be sacrificed to the selfishness or ignorance of their parents.

4. No individual should be deprived of his rights who has not forfeited them by crime of some sort. The majority have no just authority for treating the innocent as guilty, or for punishing the innocent in order to punish the guilty.

5. All drinking saloons which are really nulsances may justly be held amenable to the laws. So may all public nuisances. Private individuals have a right not to be needlessly annoyed by other private Individuals, for this is a direct infringement of their rights. But this principle does not apply to all drinking saloons, unless all drinking saloons can be shown reasonably to be nulsances; and the word nuisance cannot be loosely or arbitrarily defined.

Are we all agreed on these premises to begin with ? -ED.]

PROHIBITION VS. COERCION.

EDITOR INDEX:--It is not to be expected that an editor's views will meet with the approval of all his readers; hence it is not surprising that we should have such communica-tions as appear in the last number of THE INDEX. Like one writer, I am made to feel sad by the position you take, and like another I am unable to reconcile an opposition to "prohibition" with advocacy of "compulsory education." The position is taken that society has a right to coerce the individual for its own protection; yet this rule insisted upon in the one case is ignored in the other. Ignorance and crime are no more inseparable than drinking and crime; and I am not sure that the evil to society in the latter case does not exceed tenfold that arising from the former. If it be just to tax the childless man for the cause of education, in order to prevent possible crime; it is scarcely just that the temperate man should be taxed to pay for the results of intemperance. If the selling of liquor is not a crime per se, neither is ignorance; and the probabilities are doubtless in favor of the lat-ter. However, it is not a question of which is the greater evil, for that does not affect the principle; but I can see no reason for making the wide distinction in the cases except that under some circumstances ilquor is believed by most persons to be useful, which is not claimed for ignorance. But, though a believer in temperance, I am by no means a prohibitionlet, and feel grateful to Dr. Lewis

B tenefet of gnorance. But, though a believer in temperance, I am by no means a prohibitionist, and feel grateful to Dr. Lewis for taking the stand that a man has a right to eat, drink, and think as he pleases, so far as the law ia concerned. It is with compulsory education that I am more concerned; and ifgrieves me to see professed liberals advocating this measure, so that I exclaim, After all this flourish of trumpets it is only a ques-tion of who shall be our master! Now I a rraigu compulsory education before the bar of reason upon the following indictment: That its premises are un-sound,—that it is a bad example to the Orthodox,— that it is placing a powerful weapon in the hands of our enemies,—and, lastly, if all that its advocates could wish, it is still wrong as a principle of govern-ment. ment

ment. On the first count I deny that there is any certain ratio between crime and ignorance; certainly not in individuals, and probably not in communities; for those who prey most upon society have intelligence sufficient to evade the law. Just here it may be men-tioned that in our prison not two squares away lie two murderers; one of whom, it is reported, has taught school, and the other committed his crime while un-der the infinence of liquor. der the influence of liquor.

school, and the other committed his crime while un-der the influence of liquor. In the next place, prison statistics would doubtless show that the criminals had not been attenders of church, and therefore we should have compulsory church attendance. It is moral culture we need, and according to the views of the majority the Bible being the great teacher of morality we must by no means dispense with it in our achoots. In the third place, it may be stated that society is fifterentiating; and, while many are becoming more fiberal, a greater number are growing more conserva-tive. As the struggle between the two parties be-comes more open, the majority, believing in their right to rule, and that people should be forced to do whatever is for their own good, will not hesitate to do their own good. Will not hesitate to for the advancement of their own yiew. But he most important point is the falsity of the position that government should compel people to act for the town good. This would justify all religions persecution, for all other considerations are trivial compared with eternal happiness; and beside this, the question of what is good will always be very much a matter of opinion and liable to variation. If we had an infallible government, the case would be different; but under the present condition of affairs, the idea of forcing ourselves by legislative enaciments to be good or wise is like trying to invent perpetual

The table of rorcing ourselves by legislative enactments to be good or wise is like trying to invent perpetual motion.
It has been said that in religion we must choose between Rome and Reason; to which 1 would add that in our ideal government there is no logical position between one which exercises a supervision over every act of our lives and one which, doing nothing toward directing the energies of the citizen, merely secures to all an equal chance in the pursuit of happines. If education should be supplied, so should food and citizen should be supplied, so should food and citizen should be supplied, so should food and could be supplied, so should food and there no certain rule as to what departments the government should assume, but likewise no possible guide as to how much shall be done in any one of the means. On the same principle, we should send missionaries to China as a protective measure except in a circuitous way, in which the end does not justify the means. On the same principle, we should send missionaries to China as a protection against adulter ated tea. State education is one of the steps toward centralization of power, and now we have propositions in some States for the adoption of a uniform series of text-books. This is but the logical out. The suppose that this is written in any other than a spirit of friendship; and if my views are not clearly expressed, let not that be an additional argument in favor of compulsory education.
MEST CHERETER, Pa., Aug. 8, 1874.

It always gives us pleasure to find our views criticised in a spirit of fairness, as in the above letter. We are no pope, even in our own opinion, and recognize the fullest right of our readers to "have their say" in return. For the present, however, we must postpone a further discussion of the relation between "prohibition" and "compulsory education," contenting ourself with advising all interested in that question to re-peruse John Stuart Mill's Essay on Liberty. But we think all who accept the principles on which our public school system is based will sooner or later accept also the principle of "compulsory" educationa most unfortunate name for what would be far better termed universal or guaranteed education.-ED.]

WHAT WAS SLAVERY

EDITOR OF THE INDEX :-

Voltaire somewhere asks very pertinently of certain Hebrew sins or shames: "If they were never perpe-trated, why were laws enacted severely punishing them?"

Perhaps your readers may not care to read, nor you to print, a statute from South Carolina like the fol-lowing; but as a law, it is part of slavery's history in that State, and need not be lost:--- that State, and need not be lost — "If any person shall wilfully cut ont the tongue, put out the eye, castrate, or cruelly scald, burn, or deprive any slave of any limb or member, or shall inflict any other cruel punishment, other than by whipping, or beating with a horse-whip, cow-skin, switch, or small stick, or by putting irons on, or con-fining, or imprisoning such slave, such person shall, for every such offence, forfeit the sum of one hundred nonnet.

pounds, current money." True, this is an old law; but it stood good while slavery stood. Nor did it contemplate crucities any worse than thousands of slaves suffered in every slave worse than thousands of slaves suffered in overy slave State till slavery was no more. I once astonished an audience by declaring that slaves were bunted with bloodhounds trained to the business, and advertised, and shot dead like wolves; and that the laws of some, if not all, of the slave States, legalized such horrible munder. A sea-captain pre-ent disputed me, saying be had traded much at the South and knew better. He offered to bet ten dollare that much work and the offered to be ten dollare that my statement could not be proved. Ano sea capiain, who knew me better, accepted the wa and the money was deposited; not, however, Another ed the wager with my approval. I then asked what evidence would be sufficient? My opponent answered gruffly, "None that you can produce."

I then put into his hand a North Carolina newspa-per containing the following official proclamation and advertisement:---

"Two HUNDRED DOLLARS REWARD,-Run away from the subscriber, a certain negro man named Ben (commonly known by the name of Ben Fox). Also, one other negro, by the name of Rigdon, who ran away on the Sth of this month." The advertisement is absident one other negro, by the name of Rigdon, who ran away on the Sth of this month." The advertisement is abridged out of respect to your short columns. But the captain read the whole and gave up the controversy. He insisted on paying the bet of ten dollare, but the other captain refused to take it, saying that he only accepted the wager to ace the case fairly met, though with no thought of taking the money. The other said the money was well won, and should go to the anti-slavery cause. So he gave it on the spot. I could send you similar advertisements to the above, and more revolting in some respects, from Georgia, Florida, and South as well as North Caro-lina, and perhaps other States; but so many are enough for to-day. Such was the slavery that Christian ministers, dea-cons, and members, both men and women, practised and defended from their Sacred Scriptures, Old Testa-ment, New Testament, and Apocrypha to boot. PAREE PILLEBURY. CONCORD, N. H., August, 1874.

CONCORD, N. H., August, 1874.

[Our "short columns" shall be stretched to their atmost capacity to admit authentic records on this subject.-ED.]

MISSIONABIES IN OREGON.

HUMBOLDT BASIN, Oregon, Feb. 12, 1874.

EDFTON OF THE INDEX:-Among the proceedings of a board of missions that met in New York last fall, a report was read from the Missionary Bishop of Oregon, showing the prog-ress of missions in this State, and calling upon the Christians in the fast not to forget those in the far West, as the missionaries in the far West have to contend with infidelity, paganism, and Indian hea-thenism. As I live in Oregon, where there is as much infidelity, paganism, and Indian heathenism in proportion to the number of inhabitants as in any other part of the State, it may interest your readers, if not those who contribute to support missions, to learn what progress missionaries make in combating the erils above mentioned. EDITOR OF THE INDEX :-

learn what progress missionaries make in combating the evils above mentioned. The last missionary here said: "There is a hell, for the word of God distinctly proclaims it; but 1 hale to preach of it, though it is my duty to do so." This announcement from one who had recently come from the East to beat back the inroads of infidelity took his hearers by surprise, for they expected, after the announcement of so important a statement as the existence of hell, he would proceed to demonstrate that a wise, just, and merciful God had, out of the depths of his love, justice, and mercy, created hell for man's benefit. This shown, they would have been prepared to hear him say, "It is a pleasure to preach of hell, for it is God's word, and I am one of his chosen ones to proclaim it." As it was, need it be wondered at that there ware those who though the had his doubts of the existence of hell as strong as any of us?

had his doubts of the existence of hell as strong as any of us? He took occasion, also, to speak alightingly of "Tom Paine." This was unfortunate, for some of the infi-dels here had read Paine's Address to the Theophil-anthropists of France, and one of them said to me that the reading of this address had done more to ar-rest a growing tendency toward athefsm on his 'part than all the preaching he had heard in a quarter of a century. How unwise to disparage the life of one whose writings arrest what is considered the worst form of infidelity. As our missionary proceeded with his discourse he whose writings arrest what is considered the worst form of indicity. As our missionary proceeded with his discourse he seemed to feel the want of power to handle his sub-ject; for he wished that he had the eloquence of a preacher he had recently heard preach in Iowa. Said he: "if I had, I would throw a barrel full over your heads." This wish had an unfortunate difect. Infi-dels, Indians, and Pagans are alike here surrounded by objects of large proportions. All around us glant mountains lift their huge, bald heads well up toward heaven. Valleys start from their very summit, and wander off a thousand miles toward the shore of the great Pacific. Now, had our missionary wished for enough of this preacher's eloquence to cover one of these mountains, or for enough to fill one of these valleys, so that the people living here would be illum-ined for a thousand years; the wish then would have been commensurate with our surroundings. But to wish for an amount that could be confined within wooden staves and hoops seemed meagre and discour-

been commensurate with our surroundings. But to wooden staves and hoops seemed meagre and discour-ging to the last degree. This account here will show somewhat the progress of the combat against infidely. I have not heard of any missionary effort in behalf of the pagans who is all around us. Indeed, it seems to me that it would be embarrassing in the extreme to approach the origination of the origination of the second among them, and he, when drunkest, exclaims: "Me on wall same as Melican man." This is equivalent to asying "all same as Christian drunkard there. The pagan might say to the missionary that there is not a christian nation? I wish it could be said that there is only one Orthodox Christian drunkard there. The pagan might say to the missionary that there is not a urial place around here in which there is not one or least by those brought up under Christian londneres; whereas it would be rare to find in one of them a Pa-gan or a Christian murdered by a pagan. Would not be pagan look to our graveyards for an explansition of the Bible declaration that "whose sheddeth man"s blood, by man shall his blood be shed"? The schere around were strange things do. Said a sum to me once: "If I thought the blood of Christ could not wash out my sins, I should be in despair, and not know which way to turn for help." Yet this man was one of the worst desparadoes I have ever known in nearly thirty years of border life. He had ex-hansted every form of dissipation, had killed one man in cool blood, and was afterward hung for murdering a second. As he had pienty of time to call upon Christ and beseach his forgiveness, he doubtless be-lieved that the last struggle upon the gallows would raise him to the realms of eternal bliss, where all his ains would be blotted out and forgiven. Forgiven I Will the souls which he had sent prematurely to their graves (and according to Orthodox teaching to hell) forgive him while hell last? Blotted out! Better teach that the sun and stare will be blotted from the heavens as soon as the least event of our lives. As a stone thrown into a lake will send a ripple to the fur-thest extremity, so will agood or bad action thrown out work on eternally. Faithfully yours, SAMUEL COLT.

THE ETHICS OF "SPECULATION."

To THE EDITOR OF THE INDEX :-To THE EDITOR OF THE INDEX :-To the cudge! In defence of Mr. Hinchley's visions on stay of arguing. He charges me with avelue, "in sub-ting of the cudge! In defence of Mr. Hinchley's visions of the cudge! In defence of Mr. Hinchley's visions of the cudge is a defence of Mr. Hinchley's visions of the charges he quotes from my commanication to the charge he quotes from my commanication to the present diverse of the present divi-prior diverse is the state of the present divi-prior diverse of the state that the sys-prior diverse of the present divi-prior diverse system, with its legislative privileges that diverse system, with its legislative privileges that diverse the system, with its legislative privileges that a system, branching me with a system. The present system, with its legislative privileges that a system, branching me with a system. The division of diverse the system with a system induces and only by that old gentleman the system in out of the way places until the price ad-synced '''. Would ''P.'' have had him buy only thim buy useful things only when the were high and the system in out of the way places until the price ad-synced ''P. Would ''P.'' have had him buy only the distant divide more the community in the system system with the second system divide the system system has equalled only by that used a scope of 'P.'' the distant districts or foreign countries is checked the system, and with a more the community at the state subseq society. Hud 'P.'' horoughly an-his do acquaintance did nothing more than whish is of acquaintance did nothing more than shark

And does "P." not believe that there is sufficient sympathy for the sufferings of others in ordinary human nature to insure from the voluntary contributions of individuals all—nay, more than all—that is necessary to supply the real wants of every one in any way entitled to charity, without the intervention of either Church or State? Does he believe in the dispensation of charity as a means of making prose-lytes to religious sectarianism, or securing votes to s political party? Can he point out a better disposition to be made by the State of all useful things produced and accumulated by any one than to leave them in the hands of those who produce and accumulate them, or of those to whom these transfer them for an equivalent freely agreed upon between the sellers an equivalent freely agreed upon between the sellers and the buyers? Does he believe that it is injurious to humanity that those who do not labor and produces shall know want and suffering? C. M. NEW YORK.

THE OLD ARGUMENT-"STOP MY PAPER !"

LOCKPORT, N. Y., Aug. 8, 1874.

LOCKPORT, N. Y., Aug. 8, 1014. EDITOR INDEX:--There is whiskey enough drank in my family; I don't need your paper as an inciter in that direction. I don't think your views on the question will meet the approval of high-minded, noble infidels--or per-haps I have formed too exalted an opinion of them. Rum-guzzling belongs to the Dark Agcs, Bible herees, etc. Men who like to drink whiskey like to make others think it can't be stopped, and that It is road for them.

I'll stick to the Investigator, which will at least at-tempt to stop my family from the rulns of drunkenness neas. Enclosed find fifty cents, which I think will pay all indebtedness, and please stop it. Yours for sobriety, _____ Wm. C. MOOBE.

* NEW BEDFORD, Aug. 11, 1874.

MR. ABBOT:

MR. ABBOT: Dear Sir, --Please discontinue my paper sent here to New Bedford. The reason I think you ought to be made acquainted with: It is the very captious way you have of treating the social question. It is hard-ly with that degree of fairness we had expected from such a quarter. So please stop it, when the year is out. out, Respectfully yours, JOHN W. HIGGINS.

[In justice to our subscribers we ought to say that the above are the only letters of the kind we have received for a long time. But they show how much some liberals have yet to learn of the elements of true liberalism.-ED.]

ORTHODOXY A SUICIDE.

NEWPORT, R. I., July 8, 1874. F. E. ABBOT, ESQ.: Dear Sir,-We are hearing almost daily this, that, or the other dogma of the Church discarded by emi-pent diving.

nent divines. It would be interesting to see a list in tabular form of the rejected dogmas with the name of the dissen-tient affixed to each, if possible in his own words, and then see how much of Orthodoxy would be left, supposing them all to have the truth. Yours, SAMUEL R. HONEY. nent divines

[Such a list would be a curiosity in religious Atera ture. Who will take the trouble to complie it ?-ED.]

MR. M. D. CONWAY has an almost infallible tactin putting into his letters from London just what the people hereabouts would like to read. In his latest, he refers to a rumor which had reached him in Lonprovide receasories from London just what the people hereabouts would like to read. In his latest, he refers to a rumor which had reached him in London concerning a lecturer who has recently traversed Ohio, speaking against Darwinism, and resorting to the method of contemptuous personal allusions to Mr. Darwin himself. The lecturer has described Mr. Darwin as of so mean and degraded a presence as to justify the hypothesis that he may himself be the veritable missing link of his own philosophy. Besides, the comic pictorial papers in England have sereral times encouraged such an idea by depicting Mr. Darwin she attende to the body of an ape. In reply to all such representations Mr. Conway thinks it worth while to mention that the great writer is a man of the most impressive personal appearance. "Large and noble in figure, he has a head and face much more likely to remind one who sees him of Michael Angelo's magnificent bust of Moses, in Rome, han of any inferior being. Mr. Darwin has not, indeed, any aoft, pink-white beauty; but his massive forchead, his dome-like head, his blonde complexion, his long, flowing beard, are such as a physiognomic would pick out among a thousand as belonging to a man of mark." When Colonel Higginson saw Darwin belongs to one of the oldest families in England, and in it, for many generations, there have been weath, refinement, and the love of intellectual purvations of improvement. The English have a word which they use in a very definite sense. It is the word 'geniteman." It is the word by which they use in a very definite sense. It is the word which hay use in a very definite sense. It is the word 'geniteman." It is the word by which they use in a very definite sense. It is the word 'geniteman."

A LITTLE now that went to church was cautioned to remember the text, which was: "Why stand ye all the day idle? Go into my vineyard, and whatscever is right I will pay thee." Johnny came home and was asked to repeat the text. He thought it over a, while, and then cried out: "What d'ye stand round here doin' nofin' for? Go into my barnyard and work; I'll make it all right with you," bave se

CIRCULATE | Circulate | | Circu

GET EVERYBODY.

Don't neglect to show the petition to any one, because he is a stockholder in some church, or other zermpted property, as many such persons admit the justice of the demand; and those who will not should be made to take the responsibility admit the justice of the demand; and these who will not should be made to take the responsibility of refusing to sign it. Don't delay! We want the petitions returned

CULTURED FREE THOUGHT.

The Index Association.

OFFICE, NO. 1 TREMONT PL., BOSTON.

has been organized with a capital stock fixed at ONE HUNDRED THOUSAND dollars, for the

THE INDEX.

A Weekly Paper devoted to Free and Rational Religion.

It is the object of THE INDEX to give public atterance to the boldest, most cultivated, and best matured thought of the age on all religious questions, and to apply it directly to the social

Editorial Contributors :-

have to meet in the future.

one year's subscription.

Almost every number contains a discourse or

Prof. MAX MUELLER, of Oxford, England, in a letter to the Editor published in THE INDEX for January 4, 1873, says: "That the want of a journal antirely devoted to Religion in the widest such a journal should have been started and so powerfully supported by the best minds of your such journal in England, France, or Germany;

though the number of so-called religious or theological periodicals is, as you know, very large."

And later still: "I read the numbers of your IN-

Bend $3.00 for one year, or 78 cents for three months on trial.

THE INDEX

No. 1 Tremont Place, Boston,

DEX with increasing interest."

Address

e of the word should be felt in America-that ntry,-is s good sign of the times. There is no teading article, which alone is worth the price of

purpose of publishing Tracts, Books, and

Per order of EXEC. COMM. of the BOSTON LIBERAL LEAGUE.

late THOSE PETITIONS. Don't feel satis-when your petition is a yard long, unless you e asked every one to sign it. Get good, influ-

Advertisements.	GOOD PHOTOGRAPHS	1 8 7
THE PATRONAGE	LEADING INDEX WRITERS. Including	THE INDEX, of the likeral advertising public is respect- fully solidied for TRE NDEX. The attempt will be honeaily made to keep the advertis- ing pages of THE INDEX in entire harmony with its general character and principles, and thus to furnish to the public an advertising	T. W. HIGGINSON, W. J. POTTER,	A Weekly JOI
medium which shall be not only profitable to its patrons, but also worthy of their most generous support. To this end, all improper or "blind" advertisements, all quack adver- tisement-, and all advertisements believed to be fraudulent or unjust to any one, will be	F. W. NEWMAN, CHAS. VOYSEY, A. W. STEVENS,	FREE RELIG
excluded from these columns. No cats will be admitted. THE INDEX must not be held responsible for any statement made by advertisers, who will in all cases accept the responsibility for their own statements.	F. E. ABBOT, Are now for sale at the office of THE INDEX, and will be mailed postpaid to any address on receipt of price. Single Photographa, 25 cents each; complete Set of Eight Photo-	INDEX ASSOCIA
ADVERTISING RATES. Por 1 to 12 Insertions, 10c per line. (1 1 to 12 Insertions, 10c per line. (1 26 1 51 4 6 4 4	graphs, 81.80. Address, THE INDEX, No. 1 Tremont Place, Boston, Mass.	RDITOR: FRANCIS ELLINGWOOD
ti 52 ti 5 ti ti On half-column advertisements, a discount of 10 per cent. will be made; on full-column advertisements, a discount of 25 per cent. On all advertisements for which cash is paid in advarte, a further discount of 25 per cent. on the total, as above calculated, will be made. FRANCIS E. ABBOT, Editor.	N D E X T R A C T S. No. 1Truths for the Times, by F. E. Abbot, contains the "Fifty Affirmations" and "Modern Frinciples." Ms. CHARLES DARWIN, author of "The Origin of Spe-	ASSOCIATE EDITO ABRAM WALTER STEV EDITORIAL CONTRIBU O. B. FROTHINGHAM, New Yo T. W. HIGGINSON, Newport, B and "Modern Principles." MB. CHARLES DARWIN, author of "The Origin of Species," says, in a letter to the editor not orig-inally intended for publication, but subse-quently anthorized to be nsed: "I have now quently authorized to be need: "I have now read "TRUTHS FOR THE TIMES, and I admire them from my inmost heart; and I agree to almost every word." New Edition. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00.

No. 1.-Fear of the Living God, by O. B. Frothingham, exposes the debasing char-acter of the popular notions of God, and presents conceptions of him that are worthy of the nineteenth century. New Edi-tion. Price 5 cents; 12 copies 50 cents.

No. 3.-Lecture on the Bible, by the Rev. Charles Voysey, of England, is an over-whelming demonstration of the imperfec-tions and errors of the Bible, both in the Old and the New Testaments. New Edition. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00.

No. 4.-Christian Propagandism, by F. E. Abbot, is an exposure of the weakness, costliness, and inefficiency of the System of Foreign Missions. Full of Figures, Facts, and Interesting Extracts. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00.

No. 5.-""God in the Constitution," by Hev. Arthur B. Bradford, opposes the pro-posed Theological Amendment to the Unit-ed States Constitution. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00.

No. 6,-""The Sabbath," by Parker Pills bury, denounces Sabbatarian superstition. New Edition. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00

No. 7.-4'Compulsory Education," by F. E. Abbot, maintains the right of every child to be educated, and the duty of the State to ensure it an education. Price 5 cents; 12 copies 50 cents.

Frothingham, treats of a subject that interests everybody. New Edition. Price 5 cents; 12 copies 50 cents.

No. 9.—The Christian Amendment, by F. E. Abbot, shows the dangerous charac-ter of the attempt to interpolate the Evangelical Christian Creed in the U. S. Constiition. Price 5 cents; 12 copies 50 cents.

anity, by F. E. Abbot. Fourth Ten Thou-sand. Sent for free distribution to any one who will distribute it, in packages of from five to one hundred copies.

No 11 .-- The God of Science, by F. E. Ab-bot, attempts to show the real influence of modern science upon the ides of God. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00.

No. 12.-Is Romaniam Real Christian-Two essays by Francis W. Newman Ity? and F. E. Abbot. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00.

No. 13.-On the Vision of Heaven, by Prof. F. W. Newman, of England, analyzes the Christian conception of Heaven. Price 5 cents; 12 copies 50 cents.

Name and the Thing, by F. E. Abbot, attempts to show that the popular deriva-tion of the word Religion is incorrect; that the popular conceptions of Religion itself are inadequate; and that a new conception are inadequate; and that a new conception of it, based on the Law of Evolution; con-alistent with absolute Freedom of Thought, and independent even of belief in God, is the necessary condition of the perpetuity of Religion among men. Frice 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00. Address

THE INDEX, I TREMONT PLACE,

FREE ournal GION. THE IATION, , Boston. DD ABBOT. TOR: EVENS. BUTORS: York City. T. W. HIGGINSON, Newport, B.L. W. J. POTTER, New Bedford, Mass R. P. HALLOWELL, Boston, Mass. MES. E. D. CHENEY, Jamaica Plain, Mass. F. W. NEWMAN, England, CHARLES VOYSEY, England. THE INDEX Ams-To increase general intelligence with respect to religion : To foster a nobler spirit and quicken a higher purpose, both in society and in the indi-vidual: To substitute knowledge for ignorance, right for wrong, truth for superstition, freedom for slavery, character for creed, catholicity for bigotry, love for hate, humanitarianism for sectarianism, devotion to universal ends for absorption in selfish schemes.

In brief, to hasten the day when Free Relig-ion shall take the place of dogmatism and ecclesiasticism throughout the world, and when the welfare of humanity here and shall be the aim of all private and public activities.

In addition to its general objects, the prac-tical object to which THE INDEX is specially devoted is the ORGANIZATION OF THE LIBERALS OF THE COUNTRY, for th pur pose of securing the more complete and con-sistent secularization of the political and ed-ucational institutions of the United States. The Church must give place to the Republic in the affections of the people. The last vestiges of *ecclesiastical control must be wiped out of the Constitutions and Statutes of the several States in order to bring them into harmony with the National Constitution. To accomplish this object, the Liberals must make a united domand, and present an un-broken front, and the chief practical aim of THE INDEX will be henceforth to organize s great NATIONAL PARTY OF FREEDOM. Let every one who believes in this movement give it direct aid by helping to increase the circulation of THE INDEX.

SPECIAL FEATURES.

The publication of a valuable leading paper or easay of a thoughtful character, in each issue, will continue to be one of the most marked features of THE INDEX.

Regular editorial contributions will con-tinue to be furnished by the well-known em-inent writers who have slready done so much to give to THE INDEX its present high po-sition. Mr. VOYSEY has kindly consented to furnish every fortnight a LONDON LETTER containing matters of general interest to rad-ical readers. Other interesting correspondence, communications, extracts from valuable books and periodicals, and miscellaneous articles, will also be published; and such improvements will be made from time to e as circumstances shall render possible. tim

AGESTR.

Local Agents for THE INDEX are wanted in every city and town throughout the coun-try. The most liberal terms are offered.

TERMS.

The price of THE INDEX is Three Dollars a year, payable in advance; and at the same rate for shorter periods. All remit-tances of money must be at the sender's risk, unless forwarded by cheque, registered letter, or post-office money order. The name. with address in full, must be accompanied with the money in each case Address

THE INDEX, No. 1 Tremont Place, Boston.

RELIGIOUS

OF THE

4. PUBLICATIONS.

ASSOCIATION.

Beport of the Addresses and other Proceedings of the Original Most-Proceedings of the Original Mess-ing in 1867, at which the Pres Religious Association was Organ-ized. Containing addresses by 0. 3 Froth-ingham, Henry Blanchard, Lucretis Mott Robert Dale Owen, John Weiss, Oliver John-son, F. E. Abbot, D. A. Wassen, T. W. Sig-ginson, and Balph Waldo Emerson.

(This pamphlet has not been on sale for a number of years, and many persons who have all of the Annual Reports succeeding do not possess this.) Price 50 cents.

Proceedings of Second Annual Meet-ing, 1869. 50 cents. Contains essays by Julia Ward Howe on "Freedom and Be-straint in Beligion," and by David A. Wasson on "The Relation of Social Science to Religion," and speeches by O. B. Frothing-ham, Jesse H. Jones, F. E. Abbot, Wm. Depton, H. W. Emerson, Mary Grew, C. A. Bar-tol, A. M. Powell, H. B. Blackwell, Rowland Connor, Lucy Stone, Horace Beaver, and others; with an appendix on "Outlines of Judaism" by Rabbi Wise.

coodings of Third Annual Meeting, 1870. 50 cents. Contains eesay by O. B. Frothingham on the "Idea of the Free Religious Association," followed by addresses by D. A. Wasson on "The Nature of Beligion," by Mrs. E. D. Cheney on "Beof Heligion," by Mrs. E. D. Cheny on "he-ligion as a Social Force, especially in rela-tion to Philanthropy and Reform," and by F. E. Abbot on "The Future of Religious Organization, as affected by the Spirit of the Age;" an essay by Samuel Johnson on Organization, as affected by the Spirit of the Args," an essay by Samuel Johnson on "The Natural Sympathy of Religions," fol-lowed by Rabbl Wise on "The Permanent and Progressive Elements of Joalann," by T. W. Higginson on "Mohammedanism," by Wm. H. Channing on "The Beligions of China," and Wm. J. Potter on "Beligion Old and New in India;" also abstract of a discussion on "The Bible in the Public Schools," by Thos. Vickers, S. R. Calthrop, Rabbi Wise, and others.

Proceedings of Fifth Annual Meet-ing, 1672. 35 cents. (Four or more, S cents each.) Contains essays by J. W. Chadwick on "Liberty and the Church in America," by C. D. B. Mills on "Heligion at America," by C. D. B. Mills on "Heligion at the Expression of a Permanent Sentin the Expression of a Permanent centation of the Human Mind(" and by O. B. Froth-ingham on "The Religion of Humanity," with addresses by Rowland Connor, Cells Burleigh, Lucretia Mott, A. B. Alcott, C. A. Bartol, Horace Seaver, Alexander Loos, and others dings of Sixth Annual Meet-Proceedings of Sixth Annual mee-ing, 1873. 35 cents. (Four or more, 2 cents each.) Contains essays by Sameel Johnson on "Freedom in Religion," and by John Welss on "Religion in Freedom," with addressees by Wm. C. Gannett, Robert Dale Owen, T. W. Higginson, Samuel Longfei-low, J. S. Thomson, F. E. Abbot, and Laetla Mott.

Sympathy of Beligions, by T. W. Higginson. 25 cents.

Religions of China, by Wm. H. Channing. 25 cent

Heason and Revelation, by William J. Potter. 10 cents.

Taxation of Church Property, by Jas. Parton. 10 cents, singly; package of ten, 50 cants; of one hundred, $3.

These publications are for sale at the office of the Free Religious Association, No. 1 Tremont Place, Boston. The Annual Reports for 1868 and 1871 cannot be supplied, and the supply of others previous to that of 1872 is guite limited. Orders by mail may be addressed either "Free Religious Association, No. 1 Tremont Place, Boston," or to the Secretary, New Bedford, Mass.

WM. J. POTTER, Sec. F. E. A.

Transformity GOOGLE

and political amelioration of society. It is edited by FRANCISE. ABBOT, assisted by ABRAM W. STEVENS, with the following list of O. B. FROTHINGHAM, New York City THOMAS W. HIGGINSON, Newport, R.I. WILLIAM J. POTTER, New Bodford, Mass. 8 .-. The Present Heaven, by O. B. WILLIAM H. SPENCER, Haverhill, Mass. RICHARD P. HALLOWELL, Boston, Mass. MRS. E. D. CHENEY, Jamaica Plain, Mass. REV. CHARLES VOYSEY, London, England. PROF. FRANCIS W. NEWMAN, London, Eng Every liberal should subscribe for THE INDEX, as the best popular exponent of Religious Liberallam. Every Christian ministor, and every thinking church-member, should subscribe for it, as No. 10.-The Impeachment of Christithe clearest, most candid, and most scholarly exposition of the differences between Free Thought and Evangelical Christianity, and as the best means of becoming well informed of the arguments and the movements which the Church will

No. 14. - A Study of Religion : The

Boston, Mass.

INDEX-AU

JE

JO

13 1.50

LQ

L	HE INDEX-AU
POPULAR BOOKS,	Historical Pictures Rejouched; a Volume
SENT BY MAIL	Historical Pictures Retouched; s Volume of Miscellanies. In two parts. Part I., "Studies, Pictures, and Fancies" 1.50 The Life of Dr. Marie Zakrzewska, being s Prastical Illustration of "Woman's Rights to Labor"
PUBLISHERS' PRICES!	The Descent of Man. 2 vola Journal of Researches
ORDERS PROMPTLY FILLED.	Emotional Expression of Man and the Low- or Animals
NO EXTRA CHARGE FOR POSTAGE.	DICKENS' Child's History of England 1.50 DURRING (JULIA.) Philosophers and J. Fools. A Study
ANY BOOK in the subjoined List, or any other OBTAINABLE BOOK that may be destred, will be forwarded as promphy as possible on receipt of orders accompanied with the CASH.	ZLIOT'S (GEURGE) Novels. Honsehold Edi- tion. 5 vols. each
Orders are respectfully solicited from all friends of THE INDEX.	Bilss Marner and Scenes of Cierical Life. The Same. Library Edition. 2 vols
ALCOTT (A. BRONSON). Tablets	EMERSON'S (R. W.) Essays. First Series. 2.00 I Essays. Socond Series. 2.00 Representative Men. 2.00 Conduct of Life
ARABIAN NIGHTS' ENTERTAINMENTS. 1.20 ARNOLD'S (MATTHEW) Essays in Criti- cian	The Life and Works of Gotthold Ephraim Lessing. Translated from the German of Adolf Stahr. 2 vols
A UEBBACH (BERTHOLD). On the Heights. 1.80 Villa Eden; The Country-House on the Rhito	FARAR'S Critical History of Free Thought, in reference to the Uhristian Beligion
BAGENOT on the English Constitution	FEGOTHINGHAM (O. B.) Beligion of Humanity       1.80         Ballors of the Unbellevers       .30         Othid's Book of Beligion       1.00         Life of Theodore Parker       .300         FULLER'S (MAEGARET) Complete Works,       1.00         including Memoirs by Emerson, Channing,       and others. A new edition. 5 vois
The Beiling Path. 200 BARTLETT'S Dictionary of Americanians. 2.60 BARTLETT'S Familiar Quotations	BALTON (FRANCIS.) Herreditary Genius. An Inquiry into its Laws and Conse- quences
BIBLE in the Fublic Schools. Bacords, Arguments, and Decision in the case of John D. Miaors is A. w. the Board of Education of the city of Cincinnati: at A. in the Suprems Court of the City of Cincinnati	BREG'S (W. R.) Enigmas of Life
BRACENTT (ANNA C.) The Education of American Girls BBOOKS' (OHARLES T.) Translations. The Large of Lericat. 2.25	HAMEBTON (PHILIP G.) A Painter s Camp. Book I. In England. Book II. In Sociland. Book II. In France
The Tail Student	Image: State in the state of the s
OARLYLE'S Works. Cheapedition. Compris- ing the following: Miscellancous Essays, 7 rols.; French Revolution, 4 vols.; Freder- lex the Greak, 10 vols.; Cromwell's Letters, &c., b vols.; Sartor Resartus, 1 vol.; John Starling, 1 vol.; Lido 6 Schiller, 1 vol.; John Bterling, 1 vol.; Lido 6 Schiller, 1 vol.; Past and Present, 1 vol.; Herces and Hero Wor- ship, 1 vol.; Latter Day Paraphilets, 1 vol. Any volume sold separately. 31 vols. Lon- don, 1511-2. Per vol.	New Illustrated Library Edition. Nine vols. Per vol 2.00 Monases from an Old Mannee. The Boarist Letter, and The Bithedale Bomance. The House of the Seven Gables, and The Show Image. The Marble Faun. The English Note-Books.
CARPENTER (D. W. B.) The Principles of Manual Physiology, with their Applica- tions to the Training and Discipline of the Mind, and the Study of its Morbid Condi- tions	The American Note-Books. The French and Balan Note-Books. Our Old Home, and Septimizar Felson. HIGGINSON'S (T. W.) Out-Door Papers 1.50 Malbone. An Oldport Bonance
OHANNING (WM. ELLERY, D.D.). The Per- fect Life. In Twelve Discourses. Edited from his manuscripts by lin nephew, Wm. Henry Chauning	HOWELLS'S (WILLIAM D.) Their Wed- ding Journey 2.00
OHENEY (MES. E. D.) Patience. A Sories of Thirty Games for the Firedea	<ul> <li>HUGO'S (V.) New Novel, "'Ninety-Three", 1.75</li> <li>HUMBOLDT (ALEXANDER VON), Life of. Translated from the German. S vola., with three potraits</li></ul>
CLARKE (JAMES FREEMAN). Ten Great Ballgions Common-Sense in Ballgion	5 On the Origin of Species
World	Lay Sermons, Addresses, and Berlews 1.75 GINGELOW'S (JEAN) Poena
Puprimage. OORBELA TION and Conservation of Forces: A Series of Expeditions by Grove, Helm- bolts, Mayer, Faraday, Liebiz and Carpen- ter: with an Introduction by Edward L. Youmang, M.D. 1 vol	Budies for Stories
CULTURE DEMANDED BY MODERN LIFE, its True Aims and Requirements A Series of Addreases. By Tyndail, Hux- ley, Whewell, Faraday, Byencer, Draper, Massou, Lycal, etc. Edited by Edward L. Youmans	Lectures. INTERNATIONAL SCIENTIFIC SERIES. No. 1. Forms of Water, in Clouds, Rain, No. 1. Forms of Water, in Clouds, Rain,
DALL (MES. DAROLINE H). The College, the Market, and the Court; or, Woman's Belation to Education, Employment, and Glitzenship	<ul> <li>Bivers, 100, and Galeria. By Solution 1.40</li> <li>II. Physics and Politics; or Thoughts on the Application of the Principles of "Natural Solection," and "Inheritance" to Political Society. By Walter Bagabot, 1.50</li> </ul> datt; or, The Clouded Intented and Other SOLL'S (ROBT.G.) The Gods and Other 2.00 LIGERGOIDE SCHORTS, AND THE UNDER MARKET, SON PHELPS'S (ELIZABETH STUA Gates Alar The Toty Book Rivers, Ice, and Gates B. John Tyn-dall... I. Physics and Politics; or. Thoughts on the Application of the Phetoples of "Natural Selection," and "Inheritance" to Political Society. By Waiter Bagebot, 1.60

	-	-	1	*
C	JGUST	27.	1874.	419
	III. Foods. By Dr. E IV. Mind and Body. their Belations. By . Spencer, Esq. The Study of Sac Spencer, Esq. VI. The New Chemi Gooke, Jr. Will, The Conservation four Stowart, with u ing of the Visia and of the Dectrine YIII. Asimal Locom Swimming, and Riv	stry. By Ja of Energy. an Appendix Montal Appl	By Bal- t, treat- leations	PROCTOR (RICHARD A.) Other Worlds than Ours: the Furzility of Worlds stud- ied under the Light of Recent Scientific Researches, With Colored Plates of the Doctrine YIII, Animai Locom Swimming, and. Flyb tion on Asronautics. IX. Responsibility in Henry Maudeley, M.J ERROLD (DOUGLAS). Claude's Breakfast Ta	Fireside Sal	Papers, 1,50	etc
J	OHNSON'S (SAMUEL and their Relation to India OSEPHUS. The whol Josephus, the Jewish J	e Works of	Flavios	BCHELLEN (H.) Sportrum Analysis, in its Application to Terrentrial Substances, and the Physical Constitution of the Beavoolr Bodies
	OWETT. The Dialogu- isted into English, with ductions by B. Jowe Balliol College, Oxfor fessor of Greek. Fou	h Analysis at tt, M.A., Mu d, and Beg grools	nd Intro- mater of lus Pro- 12.00	<ol> <li>Physical Geography. By Archibald Gei- kie, LL.D., F.R.S., daxible cloth</li></ol>
	KERR (ORPHEUS C). Patriotic, Sentimental LECKY (W. E. H.) Hist Influence of the Spir Europe. 2 vois History of European			SCOTTS (THOMAS) The English Life of Jesus. Second Edition
1	tus to Charlemagne LEGGE'S Confucius' Li Confucius and Chines LESSING'S (G. E.) Nati lated by Ellen Froth	te and Tesal e Classics han the Wise dogham	6.00 hings 4.00 2.00 . Trans- 1.50	BY EACEH (HISEREAT)     120       Bertus, Moral, and Physical     120       Brazys, Moral, Political, and Exthetic.     120       Dilastrationa of Universal Frogramsa. A Se- lection of his best Papers.     2.50       Social Statics; or, The Conditions Exson- tial to Hunan Happiness Besched, and the First of them Developed.     2.30       The Frinciples of Hiology. 2 vola.     5.00       The Frinciples of Hiology. 2 vola.     5.00
1	LEWES' Physiology of Biographical Bistory its Origin in Greece Day. 7 vols Problems of Life and tions of a Creed LEWES (G. H.) The St	Mind. The	rounda- 1.00 ho's Life, 1.50	Recent Discussions in Science, Philosophy, and Morals. New and enlarged edition. 2.00 SplingT
ľ	LEWIN (REV. RAPHA) daism? or, a Few Wo LONGFELLOW'S (H. V 2 vols Prose Works. Portra	W.) Poema. It	Portrait. 4.00	Life, Correspondence and Etales
Ŀ	LOWELL'S (J. R.) Poer The Biglow Papers. The Biglow Papers. Among my Books My Study Windows LOWELL (MBS. A. C.)	Postes for	Children78	New Life of Jeaus. Authorisod transla- tion. 7 vols
ľ	LUBBOCK (SIR JOHN tion, and the Primitiv Pro-historic Times LYELL'S Principles of Elements of Geology	Geology. 2	vols 8.00	MENNYGONIS / AT EDETN Poorps 1.75
L	MACDONALD (GEO) Daughter MANN (HORACE). Mann, By bis Wife, Lectures and Annual Annual Reports on E 1848	The Life o Reports on E ducation, fro	f Rorace sucation. 1.00 om 1855 to	Pendandis. The Virginians. Esmond, and Lovel the Widower.
	Thoughts Belected 1 Horace Mann MARTINEAU (JAME: ical and Theological. The New Amniles of MAURICE (Rsv. F. D Object of Hope for M	S.) Essays, F 2 vols. Por f Faith	r vol 2.50	This edition includes all the matter in the lat- est English editions, with many additions, thus making it, with the novels, the cheapest and most approximation the matter is the matter.
	MERIVALE'S (CHAE the Roman Empire., Conversion of the N	LES) Couv	eraion of 1,50	<ol> <li>Baobs, Sketches, Denis Duval, &amp;c.</li> <li>Four Georges, Humorists, &amp;c.</li> <li>Catherine. Christmas Books, and Unre- printed Pieces.</li> </ol>
	MILL (JOHN STUAR Discussions. 4 vols., The Examination of William Hamilton. The Positive Philosop Political Economy. Hon. The Subjection of W. Essay on Liberty. Representative Govi	the Philoso 2 vols., each phy of Augu New and re omen	1.22	Cape Cod
	Memorial Volume. MILLER (JOAQUIN.) Songs of the Sun La	His Life and Songs of the	Works 1.0 be Sierras. 1.56 1.56	A Week on the Concord and Merrimae Bivers. 2.49 of Mankind. 2.46 Primitive Culture. 1 vola. 5.69
	MORLEY (PROF. JOE Rousseau, 2 vols MOULTON, (LOUISE	IN.) Voltati	(6	0 erer. 100 9 Fragments of Science for Unscientific Poo- ple 2.00 1. Light and Electricity 1.25 2.00
2000	Time Stores MUELLEE (MAX, M Science of Language The Same. Second Chips from a Gern Easays on the Soli I. Easays on M and Customs. Yo erature, Biograpi Three vols. Frice Lectures on the Soli	s. First Sar Series	ies	a On Sound
0000	the Cirkle	M V). BWIII	1.5	the Stone, Vols. I. and V., each 1.00
5 0 5	Etkoos from Kenton NEWMAN (FRANCIS Hobrew Monarchy-, Phases of Path; t Hintory of my Cre The Soul, its Sorrow Catholic Union; Ess of the Future, as Philaschrop,	w.) A His or, Passages ed (s and its As ays towards the Organ	from the 1.0 pirations. 2.0 A Church instice of 1.7	WARNER'S (CHARLES D.) My Summor In a Garden
50 50 0	Matters Pertaining	a Religion	1.1	<ul> <li>WHIPPLE'S (E. P.) Literature and Life</li></ul>
05 5000 5	Speeches, Addresse mons. Yols Additional Speeches sional Sermons Critical and Miscelli Historic Americanu ton, Adams, and - croduction by Rev The Trial of Theod demeentor of a S segamst Kidnappic The two Christiange and MDCCCLV.	s, Addressen rvols "-Franklin, iefferson, V r. O. H. Frottore ore Parker f	, and Occa- ings	Washington and the Revolution           Washington and the Revolution
5 555
0 TO	PARSONS (THEOF and the Finite PHELPS'S (ELIZAR Gates Ajar	SETH STUA	ET.) The	ADDEN861

DENO ems. Por-1 Tremont Place, Boston.

TOWER LATE OUNTROP
ROWLAND CONNOR
