

The Index.

BL
2700
.I38
V.9

—A—

WEEKLY PAPER,

DEVOTED TO

FREE RELIGION.

VOLUME IX.

BOSTON, MASS:

INDEX ASSOCIATION, 231 WASHINGTON STREET.

1878.

TABLE OF CONTENTS.

ESSAYS AND OTHER LEADING ARTICLES.

Report on the Sunday Mail, Hon. Richard M. Johnson	2
Preamble and Resolutions, Adopted at a Meeting of the Citizens of New York, against the Passage of any Law Prohibiting the Transportation and Opening of the Mail on Sunday, Frederick Fish, Chairman	3
Church and State, Rev. M. J. Savage	14
The Effect of Doctrines on Character, Vindex	26
The Last Man, William Wicksam	26
The Relation of Woman to Church and State, Mrs. Celia P. Woolley	30
A Crumb for the "Modern Symposium," John Fiske	62
Fetichism, Lewis G. Jones	74
The Southern Question: Is It Settled? Reuben Tomlinson	76
The Plan of Salvation, Elmer Wright	98
The Soul of Culture, Samuel Johnson at Horticultural Hall, Boston, Jan. 12, 1878, Sidney H. Morse	110
The Assaults of Christianity, O. B. Frothingham	122
The Ethics of Jesus, John L. Stoddard	124
The Ethics of Jesus, Concluded.....	146
History of the National Reform Association.....	166
The Recent Controversy about Endless Punishment, David H. Clark	170
Christianity and Modern Civilization, William J. Potter	182
Madison's Protest against State Christianity.....	194
Free-Thought, "The Free-Thinker of Yesterday and the Free-Thinker of To-day," Rev. W. C. Gamett	206
The Growth of Communism, Augustus Mowbray	218
The Sovereignty of Ethics, Ralph Waldo Emerson	230
Growth of Religion.....	242
The Teachings of Free Religion, L. K. Washburn	254
Wisdom a Loving Spirit, O. B. Frothingham	266
Freedom in Religion. An Exposition of the Principles of the Free Religious Association, Hon. Nathaniel Holmes	278
The Genesis of the God-Idea, Lewis G. Jones	290
William Cullen Bryant.....	302
Honors to the Dead Poet. Funeral of William Cullen Bryant.....	314
Sketch of Michael Servetus, M. Mauria	326
The Church and State of the Future, Courlandt Palmer	338
Voltaire, Rev. John W. Chaderick	350
Voltaire, Concluded.....	362
Christianity and Other Religions, Lydia Maria Child	374
The Failure of Universal Suffrage, Francis Parkman	386
Ideal and Historical Christianity, A. W. Stevens	398
Modern Religious Sentiment, Sidney H. Morse	410
Victor Hugo's Oration on Voltaire, Translated by Charles Ellershaw	422
Cred Religions as Cultivators of Political Hypocrisy, Hon. Elmer Wright	434
Debate on Freedom of the Press by the National Liberal League, at the Centennial Congress of Liberals, held at Philadelphia, July 1 to July 4, 1876.....	446
Religion, L. K. Washburn	458
The Free-Religious Movement: Its Past and Future, Frederic A. Hinkley	470
Is the Reformer any Longer Needed? Hon. George W. Julian	482
Is the Reformer any Longer Needed? Concluded.....	494
An Answer to "The Index" Criticisms, T. B. Wakeman	506
Who are Christians? L. K. Washburn	518
Free Religion: The Ordination Address of Frederic A. Hinkley.....	530
The Liberty of Printing. An Address at the Second Annual Congress of the National Liberal League, on Saturday, Oct. 25, 1878, Hon. E. P. Herriot	542
The Liberal League: Its Objects and Conditions of Success, B. F. Underwood	554
Constitution of the National Liberal League of America.....	566
The Literature of German Materialism.....	578
The Future Church, Charles E. Perkins	590
The Faith of the Doubters.....	602
The Use and Abuse of Legislation, Frederic A. Hinkley	614

EDITORIALS.

Which Promotes Immorality—"Infidelity" or "Christianity?".....	6
Extracts and Notes, B. F. U.	7
An Orthodox Voice for Justice.....	7
"Parental Rights,"—"Obedient Parents".....	18
Gen. Walker's Letter on School Secularization.....	18
Extracts and Notes, B. F. U.	19
Inviolability of the Mail.....	20
Common Sense vs. Communism, A. W. K.	30
The Constitutional Crisis.....	42
The Something Better, W. J. P.	42
M. Fanvey on the "Truths for the Times".....	43
Shall the Constitution be Revolutionized?.....	54
The Dangers of Wit, E. W.	55
The Heywood Case.....	55
Understand before you Complain, B. F. Underwood	55
An Attack on Michigan University.....	66
Parker Pillsbury on the Sixteenth Amendment, Parker Pillsbury	67
Is the Liberal League Equivalent to the Church of Rationalism? D. H. C.	67
A French View of Free Religion.....	78
Mr. Frothingham on the "Assaults of Christianity".....	90
The New Discussion, W. J. P.	91
Shall we Charter Libertinism? A. W. K.	91
Kind Words from Mr. Frothingham.....	102
The Bible Amendment.....	102
The Petition Presented in Congress.....	103
"Run by Capital".....	114
A Just Christian.....	114
Individualism and Communism, A. W. K.	115
An Acknowledgment, D. H. C.	115
"Hatred of Jesus Christ".....	126
Capture of New Mexico by the Jesuits.....	136

The Revolutionists at Work in Washington.....	127
Temperance Reform by Moral Influences.....	127
Peering, F. E. A.	138
The Liberal League and the Women, E. W.	139
Persecution in Pennsylvania.....	139
National Reform Association.....	150
Theology in our Geographies, W. J. P.	150
Individualism and Communism, A. W. K.	151
No "Omission".....	162
A New Voice, E. W.	162
General Dix on Trinity Church.....	174
Democracy versus Communism, A. W. Kelcey	175
More about Trinity Church.....	186
About Meanness, E. W.	187
A Funeral Address, B. F. Underwood	187
Trinity Church asked to Arbitrate.....	198
Idealism, Wm. De Le Sueur	198
The Menace to the Constitution.....	199
Teaching Morality in the Schools.....	210
Reminiscences of Trinity Church, Clinton Roosevelt	210
History of Communism, Albert W. Kelcey	211
Johnson's Cyclopaedia.....	211
"Logic" and "Faith".....	222
The Gnostic Wisdom, C. D. B. M.	223
Is the Point Destroyed?.....	223
Colonel Ingersoll and the Petitions.....	234
The "International Sunday-School Lessons," D. H. C.	235
Timely Protest against the Bible Amendment.....	235
Culture.....	246
Annual Meeting of the Free Religious Association, W. J. Potter	235, 246, 258
Mr. Heywood's Questions.....	247
The F. R. A. Festival.....	247
The Parisian Commune, A. W. K.	247
Colonel Ingersoll and the Vampires of the Press.....	258
A Needed Tract, W. J. P.	258
"Two Sets of Precedents".....	258
A "Tribunal of Science".....	270
Christianity and Communism.....	270
The Relation of Bacon to Modern Science and Civilization, Wm. D. Le Sueur	271
The Two Sides of the Shield.....	282
A Correction by Colonel Ingersoll.....	283
The Waterloo Meeting, C. D. B. M.	283
Re-Definitions, A. W. K.	284
Christian Kidnapping.....	295
The Watkins Convention, H. L. Green	295
Victor Hugo.....	306
An Old Society in a New Work, W. J. P.	306
Law against Indecent Literature, B. F. U.	307
Mr. Underwood's Suggestion.....	307
The Heywood Case, and the Principles It Involves.....	318
Robbing a Mother for the Glory of God, E. W.	319
Rev. Mr. Gordon on Unitarianism.....	330
A View of the Situation, B. F. U.	331
D. M. Bennett's Confession.....	332
The Pope's Victory over the Queen.....	342
The Old and the New, E. W.	342
The Faneuil Hall Meeting.....	354
Is it True?.....	355
The Pope and Voltaire.....	355
The Difference.....	355
A Splendid Achievement for the Cause of Woman.....	368
A New Epoch for Woman, Elizabeth Cady Stanton	368
Liberal Sunday-schools.....	367
Ralph Waldo Emerson.....	378
Is it True? B. F. U.	379
Less Noise.....	390
Matter and Spirit, C. P. Orzech	391
Concerning Liberalism.....	402
Christian Weapons, L. K. Washburn	408
The Woman Question.....	418
Waifs, D. H. C.	415
A Note about Types and Higher Law, E. W.	416
Running Notes, L. K. W.	415
Catholicism in Canada.....	428
Abner Kneeland, D. H. C.	437
Majorities in Religion.....	438
The Atoneement a Bait for Crime, J. L. B.	439
The Watkins Convention, D. H. C.	439
A Card.....	450
Public Discussion vs. Secret Plots.....	450
In Memoriam, A. W. S.	451
Professor Oliver's Letter, J. E. O'neer	451
Two Phases of Espionage.....	452
"Repeal" or "Reform"—Which?.....	474
Mr. Wakeman's Letter.....	476
The Faneuil Hall Resolutions.....	476
Mr. Green's Position.....	476
The Relations of Government to Morality and Religion.....	488
The Liberal League: Its Past and Future.....	498
Notes from the Field, B. F. U.	499
Life Insurance Cheating, Elmer Wright	499
A Novel Ordination.....	500
An Orthodox Opinion.....	500
How not to "Answer".....	510
The Church of Free Religion, W. J. P.	512
Letter from Mr. Johnson, Samuel Johnson	512
The Theory of the Rochester Platform, J. E. O.	522
The Right of Discussion, Wm. D. Le Sueur	523
"What Fools these Mortals Be!" Albert Warren Kelcey	523
The Syracuse Congress.....	534
The Honey of Poison, E. W.	537
Has Liberalism a Mission?.....	546
A Card, Wm. J. Potter	547
A Card, J. E. O'neer	547
Significant Words.....	547
The Syracuse Congress, C. D. B. M.	547

The Struggle for Mastery.....	566
Mr. Wright's Letter of Acceptance.....	569
A Letter from Mr. Bradlaugh.....	569
Another Vote of Protest.....	569
The Meriden League, E. J. Leonard	569
Joseph Cook as "Devil's Advocate".....	570
Another Protest.....	571
Mr. Green's Card.....	571
The Albany League, Thos. Dugan, Secretary	571
The Bible at the Bar of Reason.....	583
"The Other Side," W. J. P.	583
Humanity in the Palace, E. W.	583
Mr. Savage's Last Book.....	584
"Repeal" and "Reform," B. F. U.	586
Mr. Underwood's Article.....	586
The Growth of a Great Nation.....	595
Social Science, A. W. K.	597
Fresh Testimonies, C. D. B. M.	597
Mr. Wason on Duties and Rights.....	618

COMMUNICATIONS.

Wisconsin Liberal Notes, Amelia W. Bates	7
"Freedom the Friend of Parity," Julius Ferrette	8
Useful Knowledge not Obscure, T. L. Brown	8
L. K. Washburn on "Free Religion," Wm. Emmette Coleman	8
The Liberal Education of Children, Sara A. Underwood	9
The Liberal League Platform, H. L. Green	9
Silver, F. S. C.	9
The Hope of Immortality, E. B. H.	16
The Nebular Theory, Harry Hoover	16
More about Communism, G. E. Tufts	17
The Equality of Woman, Elizabeth Oakes Smith	19
"Perverted Liberalism," Morris Einstein	20
More about Japan, G. S.	20
Ethan Allen's Daughter, Clarence Darrow	21
What is Religion? Charles Ellershaw	21
Byron and Alfieri, B. W. Ball	21
Mr. Neville on Materialism, D.	21
Theatre Reform, Isaac Le Mahieu	21
James W. Stillman, Ingersoll Lockwood	21
Rev. S. W. Sample, H. L. Green	21
The Rochester Congress, Taylor Archibald	21
The Science of Universology, Stephen Pearl Andrews	27
The American Metric System, Julius Ferrette	28
Centralization, H. C. Lockwood	31
Absolute Freedom of Press. Radical Free Lance.....	31
The Law against Obscenity, Mrs. E. L. Saxon	32
Definitions Desired, Theron C. Leland	33
Parentage at Onida, T. C. M.	33
Resolutions First Auxiliary Liberal League, Rochester, N.Y., J. H. W. Tooley	33
Immortality, Mrs. Sarah Bridges Stebbins	43
Free Religion, D. S. Grandin	44
Bees, Elizabeth Oakes Smith	44
"Life," W.	45
"Every Teacher a Church-Member," O. W. Newton	45
"Liberal Education of Children," C. K. Sherman	45
"Religious Instruction," Z.	45
Off the Track, E. M. Bennett, Theron C. Leland, Frank J. Hoar	56
"Plain Truths for Western Readers," A. J. Warner	57
Resurrection in England, Emily J. Leonard	57
New Liberal League at Florence, Iowa, E. O. Walker	57
Obscenity, F. S. C.	57
Rear-Admiral Maxse and Woman Suffrage, Caroline H. Dall	57
The Chelsea Liberal League, J. H. W. Tooley	59
"Silver" Again, F. S. C.	59
The Sex of Stn. Helen Louise Blackmer.....	60
"Free Religion," F. S. C.	60
The Science of Universology, Stephen Pearl Andrews	76
Liberal League Notes, H. L. Green	79
"A. W. K." on Communism, Theron C. Leland	80
Notes from Australia, B. E.	81
Pay your Postage like a Hero, Julius Ferrette	81
Definitions, F. S. C.	81
How Churches earn their Exemption, Kate N. Doggett	81
The Duty of the Hour, W. S. Ball	81
The Iowa Convention, E. O. Walker	89
Materialism or Spiritualism? G. B. Stebbins	93
Integralism, F. S. C.	93
A Protest against the "Tribune," G. D.	98
New York State Liberal League County Committee, H. L. Green	93
The "Bible Manual" Forced into Massachusetts Schools, A. Parent	93
A Liberal Worker, H. L. Green	93
"Republican Taxation," John Francis Smith	93
Friends in Utah, Wm. Ferguson	93
The Bank of England, J. M. A.	93
Clerical Treatment of Theologic Doubts, Charles K. Whipple	103
Don't Forget the Children! A Radical Mother.....	104
Christianity at West Point, Ingersoll Lockwood	104
Materialism Again, H. Clay Neville	104
"Mistaken Premises," E. J. L.	106
The Cause in Iowa, E. O. Walker	106
Practical Suggestions about Organizing, Charles Wash	106
A New Health Journal, S. H. Preston	108
A West Virginia Liberalist, Jas. W. Wagnon	108
Our Duty, Hugo Andrusen	112
No Government Protection for Children, A. B. Bradford	112
The Race Problem, Charles Ellershaw	116
Communism or Individualism? W. F. Allen	117
Aggressive Truthfulness, Daniel Conley	117
Mrs. Clara Neymann at Providence, G.	117
The Ethics and the Economy of Remonetization, Gm. A. J. Warner	123
The Hope of Immortality, E. B. H.	127
Abolition of the Presidency, George Schumm	128
Is it Worth Preserving? Mario A. Brown	128
The Science of Universology, Stephen Pearl Andrews	128
Intellectual Vagabondage, Julia E. Wright	129
The Editor's Oath, Julius Ferrette	129
The Purification of Liberalism, H. Clay Neville	129
The Iowa Convention, E. O. Walker	140
The Chelsea Liberal League, J. H. W. Tooley, Sec'y	140
Ool Ingersoll on Marriage, Laura Kendrick	140
The Temptations of Modern Society, T.	141
Blasphemy Laws, Chas. E. Gager	141
Christianizing Japan, A. S. Coffin	141
"The Blood of the Martyrs is the Seed of the Church," H. L. G.	141
A Word about our State Prisons, Ingersoll Lockwood	151
"The Southern Question," M. B.	152
Conservative Liberalism, H. Clay Neville	152
Walking in Truth, B. F. Hughes	152
On Liberal Leagues, R. Hassall	153
Pious Defenders, Kate N. Doggett	153
Reasonable Conservatism, Charles Ellershaw	153
Intuition, Z.	153
Direct Taxation and Wealth Limitation, E. P. Thomson	163

THE INDEX.

Pike on Idealism, J. G. Whyte.....	163
"Be Angry, and Sin Not," C. E. W.....	163
A. L. Worcester, F. S. C.....	163
The Silver Question, F. E. Nipher.....	164
Injustice—or Not? A. J. Warner.....	164
Imperative Wants, J. E. Oliver.....	164
The Claims of Philosophy, G. B. Stebbins.....	164
Dr. I. J. Russell, H. L. Green.....	165
The Denver Leader, Frank W. Ingelsoll, Sec'y.....	165
"What God Hath Made Pure, Call not Thon Impure." Ezra- bell Curtis.....	165
Cosmos, J. M. Felt, Jr., Esq., R. Tucker.....	165
Reason in Religion, O. Leonard, R. Tucker.....	165
The Eastern Question, Jean Panin.....	176
"La Religion Laïque," Bishop Perrette.....	176
Mrs. Besant's Trial, Campbell, Wheaton.....	177
New York State Organization, H. L. Green.....	177
Liberal Leagues, H. L. Green.....	177
Sunday Legislation in Louisiana, Emerson Bentley.....	177
Ladies' Convention, Henry Doty Maxson, R. G. T.....	177
The Science of Universology, Stephen Pearl Andrews.....	188
The Presidential System, H. C. Lockwood.....	188
"Purifying" Liberalism, A. B. B.....	189
The "Ethics of Jeems," Gordon A. Stewart.....	189
A Sign of the Times, L. B. Farrar, M.D.....	189
Free Masonry, L. Spaulding.....	189
An Appeal to Massachusetts Liberals, Mass. State Exec. Com. of Mr. Adams.....	19
The Reform Before Us—It Needs to Be Handled by Men The Principle of Communism—Its Universality, Theron C Leland.....	19
The "Southern Question," H. Jay, M.D.....	20
"Religious" vs. "sectarian," Jas. M. McDonald.....	20
An Earnest Young Liberal, H. L. Green.....	20
"A Balut" of Free Religion, T.....	201
The Liberal League on Cape Cod, J. H. W. Tooley.....	201
The Women's Demonstration, Gen. A. J. Warner.....	201
Obituary, C. H. H.....	202
Communism vs. the Commune, Theron C. Leland.....	212
The Index Symposium, G. E. Tufts.....	212
A New Liberal League, Clara Neymann.....	213
A Kernel Worth Planting, J. P. Nicomb.....	213
The Need of Dignity in the Advocacy of Liberalism, H. Clay Neville.....	213
Information Wanted, M. E. D.....	213
"Fair Play," H. B. Boswick.....	213
Another Liberal League, Clara Neymann.....	213
The "Faith Faculty," M. Long.....	224
The Metric Reform, Julius Ferretle.....	224
Right of Association and Free Speech, E. H. Heywood.....	225
In the Madeline Paris, Mrs. Sarah B. Stebbins.....	225
Social Science, F. S. C.....	225
How to Meet the Reproach, David Wright.....	225
A New Society, J. A. H. Colby.....	225
Mr. Potter's Discourse, A. B. Bradford, Wm. S. W. Sample.....	226
The Science of Universology, Stephen Pearl Andrews.....	226
Money and Value, F. S. C.....	237
Noah Webster on the Bible in Schools, E. J. Leonard.....	248
What Harm? Sara A. Underwood.....	248
The Free-Mason Orated, Wm. H. Eastman.....	249
Communism, E. C. Walker.....	249
Becular Geographies, Cyrus Lee.....	249
The Women's Liberal League, J. H. W. Tooley.....	249
A Correction, F. S. C.....	249
"A Christian Civilization," H. L. Green.....	249
The Mongolian Problem, Charles Ellershaw.....	280
Extracts and Comments, S. W. Sample.....	280
Shall Liberals be Reticent? C. C.....	280
The Third League of New York, Clara Neymann.....	281
The Liberal League Cause in Texas, H. L. Green.....	281
The Women's Convention, Stephen Pearl Andrews, R. G. T.....	281
Orthodoxy in St. Louis, Charles M. Oyler.....	281
A Word for "Dignity," J. W. Burckard.....	281
Darwinism, H. Clay Neville.....	281
Stop Working and Believe, Helen B. Boswick.....	281
Prof. Clark to Prof. Pierce, Peter H. Clark.....	271
The Science of Universology, Stephen Pearl Andrews.....	272
Moral Thoughtfulness, Charles Ellershaw.....	273
Spiritual Resolutions, D. B. Kayner.....	273
The Science of Universology, Stephen Pearl Andrews.....	273
A Rational Church Needed, H. Clay Neville.....	273
Principles, Methods, Men, John Orris.....	284
Elam's Attack on "Evolution," Daniel Cony.....	284
What is the Nebula? Conrad F. Stollmeyer.....	284
Definitions, F. S. C.....	285
Comments on the Question, Z.....	285
" " " " Horace L. Traubel.....	285
" " " " H. B. Boswick.....	285
The Mongolian Problem, Julius Ferretle.....	285
Bishop Ferretle's Metric System, Henry Doty Maxson.....	286
For Dignity in Disunion Still, H. Clay Neville.....	286
"A Rational Church Needed," E. C. Walker.....	286
Blaspheming the Universe, C. C.....	297
Investigating Spiritualism, O.....	297
Pomp, E. C. Walker.....	297
Absorption in the Whole, Sm.....	297
Oblivion, H. B. Boswick.....	297
Gleanings, F. S. C.....	297
The Bible and Conscience, I. J. Sims.....	297
Communism, F. S. C.....	297
Sentimentalism, H. L. E. B.....	297
Religion and Morality, Morris Estess.....	298
Principles, Methods, Men, John Orris.....	298
Eve, W. E. Copeland, H. L. Green.....	299
For Dignity in Disunion Still, H. Clay Neville.....	299
"A Rational Church Needed," E. C. Walker.....	299
Do Be-Definitions Define? F. S. C.....	320
Mrs. Besant and her Persecutors, Daniel Cony.....	321
Heywood's Imprisonment, J. A. J. Wilcox.....	321
The Third New York League, Clara Neymann.....	321
Brief, Campbell Wheaton.....	321
Local Liberal League, H. L. Green.....	321
Mr. George Milvart on Utilitarian Veracity, Charles Ellershaw.....	321
Unpublished Correspondence, W. R. Thorne.....	321
The Sobor League, S. C. Mason.....	333
Some Criticisms, E. C. Walker.....	333
Who are the Liberals? Carl H. Horach.....	333
No More Churches Needed, Cyrus Lee.....	343
Heywood's Sentence, J. Vila Blake.....	343
The Mongolian Problem, Charles Ellershaw.....	344
Who is at fault? Henry Appleton.....	344
The Clarke Institution for Deaf Mutes, at Northampton, Mass.....	344
Sergeant Cox's "Rational Science," U. C.....	344
"Free, Pure, and Rational," George W. Mead.....	345
The Watkins Convention Excursion Bates, H. L. Green.....	345
State Religion, E. C. Walker.....	345
Iron vs. Clay, Z.....	345
The Science of Universology, Stephen Pearl Andrews.....	356
Waiting for the Cars, F. M. H.....	357
The Watkins Convention—Railroad Reductions, H. L. Green.....	357
An Open Letter to B. Underwood, Carl H. Horach.....	357
The Five Points, F. M. H.....	357
Obscene Literature, C. A. Barlow.....	357
The Woman's Convention, Elizabeth Oakes Smith.....	357
Mallock's "New Republic," F. M. Holland.....	357
A Philosopher in the Sick-Room, Daniel Cony.....	358
Science and Religion, Julius Ashman.....	358
The Meaning of It, F. S. C.....	358
A New Way to Refute Thomas Aquinas, X.....	358
The Social Union, F. M. H.....	358
A Friendly Letter, Fred. Johnson.....	359
The Watkins Convention, Frederick Douglass.....	359
School-Books, Cyrus Lee.....	359
Lectures, W. E. Copeland.....	359
Letter from Oliver Johnson.....	359
A New Liberal League, O. F. B.....	359
The Watkins Convention, H. L. Green.....	359
Orthodoxy in St. Louis, Charles M. Oyler.....	359
Letter from Mrs. Denton.....	404
Wanted—What? Orthodox.....	416
Liberal Conference at South Place Chapel, London, L. K. Washburn.....	423
Open Letter to Mr. Blake, J. A. J. Wilcox.....	428
A Word on the Obscene Literature Question, H. Clay Neville.....	429
The Science of Universology, S. P. Adams.....	429
Jefferson's Cup of Tea, Charles Ellershaw.....	429
Woman and Christianity, William Jervis Wigg.....	429
Open Letter to W. W. Wood, William Jervis Wigg.....	429
School Meetings, Cyrus Lee.....	429
The Science of Government Founded on Natural Law, Hon. Clinton Roosevelt.....	436
Reply to Orthodox, K. F.....	437
Open Letter to Mr. Johnson, A. B. Bradford.....	440
The Rochester Resolutions, Harriet H. Robinson.....	441
The Watkins Convention, Clara Neymann.....	441
Excluding Atheists from the Watson-Standard, R. C. B.....	441
Trinity Church, L. Spaulding.....	441
Chicago, L. Spaulding.....	441
Milwaukee Liberal Notes, Annetta W. Bates.....	441
Universal Suffrage, R. G. T.....	452
The Cause of Woman, Elizabeth Oakes Smith.....	453
What and Why, F. S. C.....	453

The English Inquisition, Charles Ellershaw	453
Was it a Burlesque? D. S. G.	453
Wien, Deyreure's School, M. E. Dewey	453
Notice, X.	453
Aesthetic Sense of Animals, Wiley Britton	450
Principles, Methods, Man, John Orvis	464
A Word for K-arney, Thos. Dugan	465
The Woman Question, M. R. B.	465
A "Rational" Harsh, E. G. Thomas	465
Letter from Mr. Wakeman, T. B. Wakeman	476
Letter from Mr. Ell, Charles Ellis	477
Note from Mr. Heywood, Chas. H. Heywood	477
Acknowledgment, D. Goddard Crandon	477
Heywood's Gentle ex: and Liberty, An Open Letter to J. A. J. Wilcox, J. Via Blake	497
Letter from Mr. Wakeman, T. B. Wakeman	498
The Issue, at Natick, W. D. Corken, M. D.	498
The New Haven School Q-uestion, R. M. Sherman	498
Secularism and Religion, Horace L. Traubel	498
The New Reform, Frank J. Mead	498
Compulsory Church Taxation, Frank J. Mead	498
Infant Intelligence, E. B. B.	498
Direct Testimony to the Evil, Bm. F. Smith	498
The Religious Outlook in the West, An Ex-Baptist Clergyman	499
Louisiana Notes, Emerson Bentley	497
Censorship of the Press as Right of Private Judgment in Morals, Ezra Hoar Heywood	501
Free Speech about Free Love, J. G. Wylie	501
The Mystery of Money, Chas. E. Telf	501
Shall We have a Radical Church, Morris Emerson	513
Definition, Wanted, Charles Ellershaw	513
A Calamity Indeed, C. F. Woods	513
Was it Right? J. Via Blake	513
The Science of Universology, S. P. Andrews	524
Connecticut Church-and-State Laws From the Constitu- tion of the State of Connecticut.....	525
Extracts from a Lecture on Emotion and Intellect, Charles Ellis	525
Is it a New Move, Horace L. Traubel	525
An Important Opinion, The Connecticut Law Constitutional , George W. Park	527
Notes of Western Unitarianism, George W. Cook	527
A Few Plain Points, R. M. Sherman	527
Voices from the Local Liberal League.....	527
Aesthetic Sense of Animals, Wiley Britton	548
The Mystery of Money, Chas. E. Telf	548
Chicago Correspondence, Chas. P. Woolley	548
"The Woman Question," L. R.	549
"Birds of a Feather Flack Together," F. E. Nipher	549
The Great Danger, D. C.	549
Mr. Julian's Essay, Chas. J. Buell	549
The Desecration of the Sabbath, John C. Grierson	550
Bigotry Unites, Horace L. Traubel	550
Principles, Methods, Men, John Orvis	550
The New Reform, Primary Inspiration , H. Lyman	551
Public Enemy, D. C.	551
The American Inquisition, Charles Ellershaw	551
A Friendly Letter to "The Index," J. Carvite	551
Prof. "and" Newman on "The Atheistic Controversy," J. W.	557
Aesthetic Sense of Animals, Wiley Britton	571
Is the Position of Repeal Morally Indefensible? F. S. C.	571
A Query, A Subscriber	571
Judge Hubbard, Clara Neymann	571
Truth Prevails, S. W. Demas	573
The Science of Universology, S. P. Andrews	584
"Fas Est ab Hoste Doceri," F. S. C.	584
Silver and Gold, E. D. Stark	585
The Bible-in-Schools Question, D. B. M.	585
Mr. Bradlaugh's Correction, Charles Ellershaw	585
A Few Questions for the Liberal League of America, A Friend of the Lib.	585
The "Separation," Clara Neymann	596
Hardpan, F. S. C.	596
A Protest, Samuel K. Honey	597
Whose Turn Next? Parker Pillsbury	597
Resignation, Karl Heinzen	597
The Malden League, Francis Hinckley	597
Friendly Letters, W. Campbell	597
"....." E. L. Crane	597
"....." Mrs. E. E. Whitford	597
Aesthetic Sentiments of Primitive Man, Wiley Britton	608
Charles Sumner, L. Maria Chiff	608
Scientific Spiritualism, Ex-Reformer	608
First Liberal League of Boston, W. H. H.	609
Not a "Question of Morals," L. Moody	609
An "Irrepressible Conflict," H. Clay Nimitz	609
Notes and News, L. K. Washburn	610
Senior Sumner's Religion, F. W. Orms	610
Immortality, B. B.	620
The "Repeal" Pistol Unloads, Charles Ellis	620
Law vs. Laws.....	621
MISCELLANEOUS.
Plain Truths for Western Readers.....	3
A Morning with Comte.....	4
What Not to Read.....	4
What Makes a Storm.....	5
George W. Curtis.....	5
Senior Sumner's Religion, Wiley Britton	5
A Wild Western Delusion.....	28
Free Investigation, Wm. Lloyd Garrison	28
Radicalism in New York City.....	29
Taxing Church Property.....	40
Where Heat Came From.....	41
A Curious Will.....	41
The Heywood Trial.....	41
Is it the Fact?.....	42
Miss Clara Neymann's Defence.....	42
Nathan the Wise, M. D. Conway	53
Professor Oliver's Defence of the Liberal League.....	54
Ninety Cents for a Dollar.....	55
Poisonous Reading.....	56
Cook's Biology.....	78
The Great Awakening of 1740.....	101
The Decline in the Belief in Hell.....	112
M. U. Convention of the Liberal League.....	112
"Leaving the Emancipator".....	112
Ralph Waldo Emerson, "The Fortune of the Republic".....	113
How the Catholic Church Exalts Baseball.....	122
Free Religion in France.....	122
Is Modern Civilization the Product of Christianity?.....	137
After-Dinner Philosophy.....	147
The Future of England and Europe from a German Point of View, One of the German People	148
The Independent Liberal League.....	148
Free Thought and "Immortality," Allen Pringle	149
The New Mexico Question.....	151
The New York "Society for Ethical Culture".....	160
Eternal Punishment, Catherine E. Beecher	161
A Speculation in Miracles, Elie Reclus	173
Trinity Church Lease, S.	173
Jefferson's Religious Freedom Act.....	180
The End of the Liberal League.....	180
Observance of Sunday.....	190
The Seal of Harvard College, John O. Sargent	197
The Story of "Mary's Little Lamb,".....	197
Henry Thoreau.....	205
Dr. Kohler and Prof. Adler.....	225
Kohler and Adler.....	225
Emerson's Lecture.....	244
Beckwith vs. Moody, George Beckwith	244
The French and English Freemasonry.....	244
The Communism that is Dangerous.....	244
Spread-Eagle Philosophy.....	245
The Story of a Heroic Life.....	245
How the Silver Dollar became a National Creed.....	245
Distrust of Priestly Influence in Europe.....	245
Mr. Eakin on Drainage and Prayer.....	245
Come's System.....	245
John Ince and Prof. De-nard.....	245
Nathan the Wise.....	245
Colonel Robert G. Ingersoll.....	245
Schools for Citizenship.....	245
Massachusetts Children's Protective Society.....	245
Practical Dreaming.....	245
Mrs. Thompson.....	245
The Free Religious.....	245
The End of Christendom.....	245
An Historical Lesson on Liberty.....	245
The Bible for Learners.....	245
Mr. Holyoake on "Radicals".....	245
Four Hundred Little Victims.....	245
The Soul and the Hereafter.....	245
"A Modern Symposium".....	245
The Massachusetts Medical Society, and the "Pathies".....	245
A Story of "Caliban".....	245
The Socialistic Problem.....	245
Ingersoll.....	245

Count Cavour's Prediction of a New Religion.....	332
Confession of Liberal Thinkers.....	332
Victor Hugo on Voltaire, Col. T. W. Higginson	332
Joseph Cook.....	333
New Flying Machines.....	353
The Thirteen Leagues.....	353
Free-bought in Sympathy with no Kind of Indecency, B. F. Underwood	354
Victor Hugo's Lamentation of Voltaire.....	364
Free-thought and Secularism.....	364
What the Church can Do.....	3-5
Love-Troubles.....	312
San Francisco Communists.....	368
Russians and Turks Compared.....	369
Summer Vacations.....	381
Higher Education for Women.....	392
Hints for Vacation Reading, Charles Eliot Norton	392
Free Speech.....	393
Reading the Book.....	393
New England Literature.....	412
Their Ancient Customs and Beliefs.....	412
Anecdote of Thomas Paine.....	401
Society Talk.....	414
What Machinery has Done.....	404
The Aristocracy of Culture.....	404
English and French Dinners.....	405
Literature and Breadth.....	412
Chivalrous Deed by the Colored Senator.....	412
Woman's Household Duties.....	413
The Church, the Schoolers and Insurance Companies.....	413
Secularism and Marriage.....	417
Religious Belief of the Southern Negroes.....	424
Souls in Labor.....	425
Public Caution against Adulterations.....	425
Foreign Notes.....	427
Walls.....	429
Power of Congress over the Mails.....	448
Anthony Comstock, his Work and Ways.....	449
Mr. Sumner and the Fiscal Note.....	449
Therioting not Criminal, Oliver Johnson	461
Chiliasm.....	460
The Right of Free Speech.....	472
Oliver Johnson's Tribute to Eliza Wright.....	473
The Problem of the Universe.....	473
The Story of a Stone.....	473
The Mission of Free Religion.....	484
Pendell Phillips on the Chinese Question.....	484
Christianism Discarded.....	485
Fine Art in Bankruptcy.....	485
The Ignorance of Bees.....	489
Thurman on Summer.....	497
A Clerical Congress.....	509
There Need be no Fuss over this Question.....	509
Hallucinations.....	509
Christ's Second Coming.....	520
A Note-Political Important Issue.....	520
A Battle for Decency.....	521
Boussea.....	521
Bojourner Trath.....	521
Paral Supremacy.....	521
The Eclipses of the Eclipse.....	523
Victor Hugo and his Admirers.....	532
George Eliot at Home.....	532
Secularism in Holland.....	532
Salaries of the Press.....	533
The Sale of Church Livings in England.....	533
A Split in the Liberal League.....	544
Repeal—Amend.....	544
Mr. Conway on the True Love Fête.....	545
Catholic Worship in the Public Schools.....	545
The Bible in the Schools, A Peculiar Phase of the Question in New Haven.....	555
Take your Choice.....	555
Mr. Gladstone on the Reformation.....	556
Modern Judaism.....	557
A Revised Scripture, The Bible of To-day.....	557
Joseph Cook on the Syracuse Congress.....	568
A Promised Autobiography.....	569
Mr. Underwood's Philosophy.....	573
Aristocratic Racality.....	573
Misery's Pear-Tree, An Ancient Legend of Flanders.....	580
Mr. Parsons and Wm. E. F. L.....	580
What Christian Virtue.....	581
Author of the Marvellous.....	585
Theologians and Historians.....	591
Christ to Control the Government.....	592
Miss Helen Taylor on the Obligation of Veracity.....	592
A Free Press.....	593
Fair Agnes, A Romantic Legend of New England, R. H. Howard	593
Modern English Theology.....	594
Protechnical Rhetoric.....	594
Sins of Sodom.....	595
A Christian Pervert to Buddha.....	595
Why the Jews reject Christ.....	595
Certainty of the Power of the Catholic Episcopacy of the Country.....	616
Origin of the "Jingoes".....	616
Historic Hoaxes.....	616
George Henry Jones.....	617
Miss Helen Taylor and "Veracity".....	617
Endless Hell Torment.....	617
A Converted Editor.....	621
The Glasgow Bank and the Scotch Church.....	621
How to meet Heresy.....	621
POETRY.
Sweet Sixteen, Alph	5
To an Old Friend, George Martin	17
Nature, B. W. Ball	29
The Game of Life.....	41
Prayer, Ingersoll Lockwood	53
The March of the Ages, Horace L. Traubel	55
Where is God? Rev. M. J. Savage	55
At the Cross, Elizabeth Oakes Smith	107
"Ode to the Pifful," G. H. Avery	107
Unkind Words.....	113
Two Heavens, C. Apin	125
To Blamrack and Gladston, B. W. Ball	125
Morning Hymn, Kathleen Wright	137
"Peering," E. C. P.	149
The Hope of Immortality, S. P. Putnam	173
"Charity" or Justice, B. E.	185
A Baby Knight, Henrietta R. Elliot	189
The Idol, Rock Gale	208
Love, A. O.	233
I do not Know, J. Albert Wilson	233
Under the Trees, Kathleen Wright	245
Whither? M. B. S.	259
Truth, Horace L. Traubel	269
In the Crucible.....	281
Percy Bysshe Shelley to the Lord Chancellor, 1819.....	281
The Burial of Bryant.....	305
Academy, S. W. Sample	305
Sonnet to Voltaire, B. W. Ball	317
St. Peter—Mahomet, B. W. Ball	329
The River's Lesson, Sara A. Underwood	341
Iphigenia, B. W. Ball	353
Mr. Annie Beasant, George Martin	353
Sir G. George Jessel, George Martin	353
The Church, C. F. Cranch	359
Face Implore, Augustus Miller	403
A Merry Curiosity, William Boyd	413
On Receiving a Daisy from Scotland.....	425
Contemplation of Death, George Martin	437
The German Muse vs. the English, B. W. Ball	449
"True Love Casteth out Fear," Ysacide De Quella	461
Virgil's Sixth Book, B. W. Ball	473
Sonnet on Night, I. Bianco White	497
Life, J. A.	509
On the Sea, Boyd	509
When the Mists have Rolled Away.....	545
The Hindu's Search for Truth.....	557
The New Church Doctrine, Will Carlton	569
Unnamed, Horace L. Traubel	581
Lucretia Mott, J. W. C.	583
Question and Answer.....	595
Pierre Garde, Eliza Wright	595
Joseph, the New Peter.....	617
LITERARY NOTICES.
Publications Received.....
Protingham's Life of Gerrit Smith, Campbell	39
Hamley's "Voltaire," Justice	40
Dr. Hedge's New Book, Campbell	42
A New Publication, The Religion of Israel, C. A. W. Tooley	117
"Did He Rise?" The Resurrection of Jesus, J. A. W. Tooley	201
Woolsey's Police, Justice	243
Notes for Lecturers, W. C. Gannett	244
Publications Received.....	385
Literature, Mr. Protingham's Two Volumes.....	381
Book Notice, Hygiene of the Brain, and the Care of Nervousness. By M. L. Holbrook, M.D., New York, Campbell	561

The Index.

Three Dollars a Year.

LIBERTY AND LIGHT.

Single Copies Seven Cents.

VOLUME 9.

BOSTON, MASS., THURSDAY, JANUARY 3, 1878.

WHOLE NO. 419.

NATIONAL LIBERAL LEAGUE.

PLATFORM

For the Presidential Election of 1880,

ADOPTED AT ROCHESTER, N.Y., OCT. 26, 1877.

1. TOTAL SEPARATION OF CHURCH AND STATE, to be guaranteed by amendment of the United States Constitution: including the equitable taxation of church property, secularization of the public schools, abrogation of Sabbatarian laws, abolition of chaplaincies, prohibition of public appropriations for religious purposes, and all other measures necessary to the same general end.

2. NATIONAL PROTECTION FOR NATIONAL CITIZENS, in their equal civil, political, and religious rights: to be guaranteed by amendment of the United States Constitution, and afforded through the United States courts.

3. UNIVERSAL EDUCATION THE BASIS OF UNIVERSAL SUFFRAGE IN THIS SECULAR REPUBLIC: to be guaranteed by amendment of the United States Constitution, requiring every State to maintain a thoroughly secularized public school system, and to permit no child within its limits to grow up without a good elementary education.

N.B.—The nomination of candidates upon the above platform was postponed to a future Congress of the National Liberal League.

THE DEMANDS OF LIBERALISM.

1. We demand that churches and other ecclesiastical property shall no longer be exempt from just taxation.

2. We demand that the employment of chaplains in Congress, in State Legislatures, in the navy and militia, and in prisons, asylums, and all other institutions supported by public money, shall be discontinued.

3. We demand that all public appropriations for educational and charitable institutions of a sectarian character shall cease.

4. We demand that all religious services now sustained by the government shall be abolished; and especially that the use of the Bible in the public schools, whether ostensibly as a text-book or avowedly as a book of religious worship, shall be prohibited.

5. We demand that the appointment, by the President of the United States or by the Governors of the various States, of all religious festivals and fairs shall wholly cease.

6. We demand that the judicial oath in the courts and in all other departments of the government shall be abolished, and that simple affirmation under the pains and penalties of perjury shall be established in its stead.

7. We demand that all laws directly or indirectly enforcing the observance of Sunday as the Sabbath shall be repealed.

8. We demand that all laws looking to the enforcement of "Christian" morality shall be abrogated, and that all laws shall be conformed to the requirements of natural morality, equal rights, and impartial liberty.

9. We demand that not only in the Constitutions of the United States and of the several States, but also in the practical administration of the same, no privilege or advantage shall be conceded to Christianity or any other special religion; that our entire political system shall be founded and administered on a purely secular basis; and that whatever changes shall prove necessary to this end shall be consistently, unflinchingly, and promptly made.

The above is the platform of THE INDEX, so far as the editor is individually concerned. But no other person, and no organization, can be justly or truthfully held responsible for it without his or its explicit approval.

FRANCIS E. ABBOT.

RESOLUTION

ADOPTED BY THE NATIONAL LIBERAL LEAGUE, AT PHILADELPHIA, JULY 2, 1876.

Resolved, That we accept the offer of the Boston INDEX to be our official organ of communication with the public, for the publication of announcements, acknowledgments, and other official papers of the Board of Directors; but that we assume no responsibility for anything else published in its columns and claim no control or influence in its general editorial management.

GLIMPSSES.

A "HAPPY NEW YEAR" to all who do not seek their own happiness through the unhappiness of others!

THE CINCINNATI Methodist Conference has a preacher six feet and seven inches in stature. He ought to be well informed as to what transpires on high.

PROFESSOR HUXLEY describes Positivism as "a half-breed between science and theology; endowed, like most half-breeds, with the faults of both parents and the virtues of neither."

THE EXECUTIVE Sub-Committee of the National Liberal League for the State of New York, in which some changes have occurred, is as follows: H. L. Green, Salamanca; D. M. Bennett, New York; De L. Crittenden, Rochester; J. W. Truesdell, Syracuse; J. A. Wilson, Albany.

DR. J. C. MICHENER, representative of Iowa on the Executive Committee of the National Liberal League, has associated with himself the following persons, as a State Committee: J. H. Strong, Des Moines; P. L. Schmitz, Clinton; C. D. Roberts, Keokuk; E. C. Walker, Florence.

ARCHBISHOP TRENCH, of Dublin, in a recent charge to his clergy, takes a despondent view of the prospects of the English State Church. He thinks that the chief danger comes from the interference of the State, and says that "the State, as a political organism, is far less Christian than it used to be,—can hardly be said, as such, to be Christian at all."

THIS IS too good a joke to be lost: "At one of the club-dinners on Saturday a gentleman making a humorous speech read two extracts and then said, 'Gentlemen, one of these is cut from a lecture by Rev. Joseph Cook, and the other from Daniel Pratt's last circular, and I defy any one of you to tell which is which.' Singularly enough no one present was able to solve the riddle."

REV. M. J. SAVAGE is the most radical preacher in Boston, according to our own ideal of radicalism. He is clear, explicit, and bold; he talks to be understood, not to dazzle or make a display of verbal fireworks, and he talks because he has something to say. He does not think just as we do, and we would not give a pin to make him; but he thinks and says what he thinks, and his sermons command our admiration by their sturdy directness and moral force. One of the best of them is a recent discourse on "Church and State," which we shall share with our readers next week.

THE HORTICULTURAL HALL Lectures for 1878 will be as follows: Jan. 6, Octavius B. Frothingham; subject: "The Assaults of Christianity." Jan. 13, Samuel Johnson; subject: "The Soul of Culture." Jan. 20, John Weiss; subject: "Survival of the Fittest." Jan. 27, Reuben Tomlinson, of South Carolina; subject: "The Southern Question,—Is it settled?" Feb. 3, Samuel R. Calthrop; subject: "The Law of Evolution applied to the Hebrew Faith." Feb. 10, Carlos C. Carpenter; subject: "The History of the Sun in Human Thought"; illustrated by the Stereopticon. Feb. 17, Prof. Edward S. Morse; subject: "Japanese Ways." Feb. 24, Wendell Phillips. Mar. 3, William J. Potter; subject: "Is Modern Civilization the Product of Christianity?" Mar. 10, Prof. Alpheus Hyatt; subject: "Analysis of a Problem in Evolution"; illustrated by the Stereopticon. Lecture at 3 P.M. precisely. Tickets for sale at this office.

THE LIBERAL LEAGUE of Chelsea, Mass., at a recent meeting (of which we hope to receive a fuller report), passed the following resolutions:—

Resolved, That we, the members of the Chelsea Liberal League, cordially and emphatically indorse and ratify the action of the National Liberal League at its first Annual Congress, held in Rochester, N. Y., Oct. 26, 27, and 28, 1877, in adopting a political platform for the Presidential election of 1880.

Resolved, That we heartily accept the platform there adopted, as our own, and pledge ourselves to use every effort to secure the prevalence and supremacy of the principles and purposes therein enunciated and set forth.

Resolved, That we consider the aforesaid action of the National Liberal League, in Congress assembled, of vast significance and promise, and recognize in it the birth of a movement which will greatly hasten the time when the people will see and feel the limitations and inconsistencies of the liberty which now we boast,—when the rights claimed by all will be as readily conceded to all, and when this country shall be free in fact as it is now in theory.

THE OPENING PAPER of this first issue of the ninth volume of THE INDEX is one of the most important documents ever presented in the Congress of the United States—the famous Report on the Sunday Mail by the Honorable Richard M. Johnson, of Kentucky, January 19, 1829. Appended to this great State paper are the preamble and resolutions adopted at a citizens' meeting held in New York City, January 31, of the same year. Both these papers are conceived in the true spirit of the National Liberal League, and are pregnant with instruction for those who see no utility in such an organization as the latter. If the previous generation had been as apathetic on the great question of religious liberty and secular government as too many persons of to-day, the National Government would have been Christianized long before this, and we should have witnessed the melancholy failure of the grandest experiment ever tried to found a great nation on the natural rights of man. Well does it behoove the children to be as wise as the fathers, and to put an end forever to the machinations of the clerical party by adopting the Religious Freedom Amendment of the United States Constitution. Nobody can say without stultifying himself that there is no need of such a measure, when the still recent success of the Orthodox attempt to shut the Centennial Exhibition on Sundays is remembered. The clerical policy is strengthening every day, and it will triumph overwhelmingly at last, unless the Rochester platform is adopted, defended, and made victorious by the roused "conscience for liberty" of the American people.

WHAT LOVER of equal rights in religion can feel easy in his mind over the school question, when such cautious but emphatic declarations as this in favor of keeping the Bible at all costs in the public schools proceed from the great ecclesiastical bodies of the country? "Ex-President Woolsey of Yale, according to his paper read at the National Congregational Council, on 'The Bible in the Schools,' thinks that the question has gone beyond the possibility of a compromise with the Catholics. 'It will amount hereafter,' he says, 'to a plan to give up all mixed schools. The Catholics will join, until that time shall come, with all infidels and many political interests, in keeping religion out of schools, in whatever form it presents itself and asks for admittance.' His conclusions are: (1) that the formal teaching of morals should be a part of public school education; (2) that, unless a considerable minority in a school district object, the Bible should be used as the text-book in morals; (3) that, if the Bible is withdrawn, as a concession to objectors, other suitable books on practical morality should be substituted. The essay was referred to a committee, at the head of which was President Angell of Michigan University. The report of the committee (unanimously adopted) declared that, 'whatever system of schools is adopted by the State, there is a necessity and duty of teaching moral duties; that, in the practical teaching of such duties, ethics cannot be altogether dissociated from religion; that a division of school funds among sects is not to be thought of, and that we cannot abandon our school system on account of our difficulties with infidels or Roman Catholics.'

NATIONAL LIBERAL LEAGUE.

OFFICERS.

President.
FRANCIS E. ABBOT,.....Boston, Mass.

Vice-Presidents.
HON. E. P. HURLBUT,.....Albany, N. Y.
HON. SAMUEL E. SEWALL,.....Boston, Mass.
HON. NATHANIEL HOLMES,.....St. Louis, Mo.
HON. HENRY BOOTH,.....Chicago, Ill.
HON. GEORGE W. JULIAN,.....Irvington, Ind.
HON. ELIZUR WRIGHT,.....Boston, Mass.
MR. O. H. FRUTKINGHAM,.....New York, N. Y.
MR. W. J. POTTER,.....New Bedford, Mass.
MR. B. P. HOLLOWELL,.....Boston, Mass.
MR. JAMES PARTON,.....Newburyport, Mass.
MR. F. SCHUMMERMANN-POTT,.....San Francisco, Cal.
HON. ABRAHAM PAYNE,.....Providence, R. I.
REV. M. J. SAVAGE,.....Boston, Mass.
RABBI S. FRIEDMAN,.....Chicago, Ill.
REV. W. H. SPENCER,.....Sparta, Wis.
MR. SAMUEL L. HILL,.....Detroit, Mich.
MR. E. W. MEDDAUGH,.....Editor of "The Pioneer," Boston.
MR. KARL HEINZ,.....Editor of "The Investigator," Boston.
MR. HORACE SEAYER,.....Editor of "The American Israelite," Cincinnati.
RABBI ISAAC WISE,.....Editor of "The Jewish Voice," New York.
MR. D. M. BENNETT,.....Editor of "The Truth Seeker," New York.
MR. MORITZ ELLINGER,.....Editor of "Jewish Times," New York.
MR. B. F. UNDERWOOD,.....Thorndike, Mass.
REV. ROBERT COLLIER,.....Chicago, Ill.
COL. ROBERT C. INGERSOLL,.....Franklin, Pa.
DR. T. L. BROWN,.....Binghamton, N. Y.
HON. B. S. MCCORMICK,.....Mount Lebanon, N. Y.
MR. F. W. EVANS,.....Rochester, N. Y.
MR. ELIZABETH THOMPSON,.....New York City.
MR. AMY POST,.....Rochester, N. Y.
MR. ELIZABETH OADY STANTON,.....Tennafy, Va.
MISS SALLIE HOLLEY,.....Lottsburgh, N. J.

Secretary.
W. H. HAMLEN,.....231 Washington Street, Boston, Mass.

Assistant Secretary.
Miss JANE P. TITOMB,.....143 Chandler St., Boston.

Treasurer.
J. A. J. WILCOX,.....3 Pemberton Square, Boston.

Board of Directors.
F. E. ABBOT,.....W. H. HAMLEN.
J. A. J. WILCOX,.....H. L. GREEN.
D. G. CRANDON.

Executive Committee.
Alabama.....J. H. HALLEY, Selma.
Arkansas.....JOHN ABBOTT, Monticello.
California.....H. MOULIN, San Francisco.
Colorado.....DAVID T. BEALS, Granada.
Connecticut.....GEORGE W. BALDWIN, Bridgeport.
Delaware.....JOSEPH D. GALT, Greenville.
Florida.....T. D. GIDDINGS, Enterprise.
Georgia.....DR. A. A. BELL, Madison.
Illinois.....ERNEST PRUSSING, Chicago.
Indiana.....L. O. UNDERWOOD, Indianapolis.
Iowa.....J. C. HIGGINS, Adel.
Kansas.....JOHN F. BARNES, Fort Scott.
Kentucky.....S. B. CLARK, Wilmore.
Louisiana.....EMERSON BENTLEY, New Orleans.
Maine.....M. A. BLANCHARD, Portland.
Maryland.....J. S. RUSSELL, New Market.
Massachusetts.....W. H. BAYARD, Boston.
Michigan.....D. C. HAUHURST, Battle Creek.
Minnesota.....J. B. BARNETT, Minneapolis.
Missouri.....J. S. BOYDEN, St. Louis.
Nebraska.....W. BILLINGSLEY, Lincoln.
New Hampshire.....WILLIAM LITTLE, Manchester.
New York.....H. L. GREEN (chairman), Salamanca.
North Carolina.....J. W. THORNE, Warren.
Ohio.....E. D. STARK, Cleveland.
Oregon.....SAMUEL COLT, Humboldt Bays.
Pennsylvania.....G. W. BALDWIN, Lancaster.
Rhode Island.....GEORGE LEWIS, Providence.
South Carolina.....P. W. FULLER, Columbia.
Tennessee.....DR. E. H. PAION, Chattanooga.
Texas.....DR. A. DUNBAR, Greenville.
Vermont.....E. L. HAUGHTON, North Bennington.
Virginia.....S. SPALDING, Norfolk.
West Virginia.....A. M. DENT, Weston.
Wisconsin.....ROBERT C. SPENCER, Milwaukee.
Wyoming.....D. P. WILCOX, Jackson.
District of Columbia.....W. H. DOOLITTLE, Washington.
Washington.....W. FERGUSON, Prosser Creek.
Wyoming.....NORMAN S. FORTER.

Finance Committee.
D. G. CRANDON, Chairman,.....Chelsea, Mass.
MISS SARAH B. OTIS,.....157 Warren Avenue, Boston.
HARLAN P. HYDE,.....231 Washington St., Boston.

LOCAL AUXILIARY LIBERAL LEAGUES

To which Charters have been issued by the National Liberal League.

LINCOLN, NEBRASKA.—President, D. A. Cline; Secretary, Dr. A. S. von Mansfelde.
Issued to L. W. Billingsley, D. A. Cline, A. S. von Mansfelde, Julius Phisterer, Joseph Wittman, W. E. Copeland, Benj. F. Fisher, Sidney Lyons, L. Meyer, G. E. Church, and others.
JACKSONVILLE, ILLINOIS.—[Officers not reported.]
Issued to A. W. Cadman, Mrs. D. M. Cadman, S. W. Sample, David Prince, B. A. Nance, C. H. Dunbrack, W. Hackman, Jennie W. Meek, Emma Meek, Hattie E. Hammond, and others.
PHILADELPHIA, PENNSYLVANIA.—President, Carrie B. Kilgore; Secretary, Joseph Bohrer.
Issued to the President and Secretary on behalf of the Philadelphia Liberal League.
MINNEAPOLIS, MINNESOTA.—President, Lauriston Damon; Secretary, Anton Braasch.
Issued to Anton Braasch, Fred. Clausen, J. Runge, Jr., Louis Zander, S. Damon, Ferd. Heyroth, Louis Heyroth, Fred. Zander, Fred. Halberg, Ernst Clusen, and Fred. Braasch.
CHELSEA, MASSACHUSETTS.—President, D. Goddard Crandon; Secretary, J. H. W. Toohy.
Issued to the President and Secretary on behalf of the Chelsea Liberal League.
STOCKTON, CALIFORNIA.—[Officers not reported.]
Issued to Chas. Haas, G. C. Hyatt, F. C. Lawrence, A. T. Hudson, Chas. Williams, W. F. Freeman, J. Grundike, J. Harrison, T. C. Mallon, A. F. Lochead, and others.
DENVER, COLORADO.—President, Orson Brooks; Secretary, J. H. Cotton.
Issued to the President and Secretary on behalf of the Liberal League of Denver.
PAINE HALL, BOSTON.—President, John S. Verity; Secretary, Robert Cooper.
Issued to Horace Seaver, J. P. Mendum, Elizar Wright, B. F. Underwood, David Kirkwood, James Harris, G. H. Foster, H. F. Hyde, Robert Cooper, S. E. Urbino, John S. Verity.
PALMYRA, NEW YORK.—President, J. M. Jones; Secretary, C. C. Everson.
Issued to J. M. Jones, C. C. Everson, Henry M. North, A. R. Sherman, Joseph Fritts, L. B. Keeler, J. J. White, E. H. Sherman, Henry Gardner, Samuel Cosad, and others.
BOSTON, MASSACHUSETTS.—President, F. E. ABBOT; Secretary, Miss J. P. Titcomb.
Issued to the President and Secretary on behalf of the First Liberal League of Boston, Mass.
NEW PHILADELPHIA, OHIO.—President, George Riker; Secretary, C. M. Rittenhouse.
Issued to C. M. Rittenhouse, George Riker, J. C.

Price, Daniel Korn, P. W. Himes, John Arn, Philip Gintz, A. H. Brown, Jacob Miller, L. A. Cornet.
TITUSVILLE, PENNSYLVANIA.—President, William Barnard; Secretary, C. M. Hayes.
Issued to the President and Secretary on behalf of the Titusville Liberal League.
HUDSON, MICHIGAN.—President, Dr. Levi R. Peirson; Secretary, Dr. F. O. Baker.
Issued to Levi R. Peirson, A. D. Armstrong, James S. Bedel, Miles C. Beach, W. R. Norris, E. H. Armstrong, R. W. S. Johnson, E. M. Brown, G. L. Harceron, Philip Sewall.

CATTARAUGUS COUNTY, NEW YORK.—President, H. L. Green; Corresponding Secretary, John Hammond.
Issued to the President and Secretary on behalf of the Cattaraugus County Liberal League.

NEW HAVEN, CONNECTICUT.—[Officers not yet reported.]
Issued to R. M. Sherman, W. W. Stow, F. A. Hermance, T. F. Hamilton, D. M. Hamilton, W. F. Hopson, E. R. Whiting, E. E. Seaman, A. C. Harrison, R. F. P. Shepard, and others.

ST. JOSEPH, MISSOURI.—President, P. V. Wise; Secretary, H. Brumling.
Issued to the President and Secretary on behalf of the St. Joseph Liberal League.

NEW YORK, NEW YORK.—President, Hugh B. Brown; Secretary, A. L. Rawson.
Issued to T. B. Wakeman, Henry Evans, A. L. Rawson, Hugh B. Brown, E. Langerfeld, D. S. Plumb, O. E. Browning, Mrs. Ellis Irving, Miss E. W. McAdams, Mrs. O. E. Langerfeld, on behalf of the Society of Humanity.

ROCHESTER, NEW YORK.—President, Mrs. Amy Post; Secretary, Willet E. Post.
Issued to Benj. Greeng, Mrs. Amy Post, Willet E. Post, Emily G. Beebe, Dr. Sherman, Mrs. Barker, Clement Austin, Wm. H. Gibbs, Dr. C. D. Dake, and others.

TOMPKINS COUNTY, NEW YORK.—President, Dr. John Winslow; Secretary, Myron E. Bishop.
Issued to C. W. Ames, Wm. A. Anthony, Geo. Arnold, M. E. Bishop, H. B. B. Dennis, Isaac Flagg, B. W. Franklin, C. Gardner, W. Hutchins, and others.

NEW YORK, NEW YORK.—President, A. L. Rawson; Secretary, Porter C. Bliss.
Issued to the President and Secretary on behalf of the Manhattan Liberal Club.

CLEVELAND, OHIO.—President, E. D. Stark; Secretary, Mrs. M. B. Ambler.
Issued to E. D. Stark, Mrs. Louisa Southworth, B. White, W. A. Madison, S. E. Adams, Daniel R. Tilden, W. Galen Smith, Walter F. Johnson, Thomas Jones, and Mrs. M. B. Ambler.

MILWAUKEE, WISCONSIN.—President, Robert C. Spencer; Secretary, William A. Boyd.
Issued to the President and Secretary on behalf of the First Liberal League of Milwaukee.

[N. B.—Many new local Liberal Leagues have been formed which have neglected to take out charters, and therefore are not entitled to representation.]

RELIGIOUS FREEDOM AMENDMENT:

PROPOSED AS A SUBSTITUTE FOR THE FIRST AMENDMENT TO THE U. S. CONSTITUTION.

ARTICLE I.
SECTION 1.—Neither Congress nor any State shall make any law respecting an establishment of religion, or favoring any particular form of religion, or prohibiting the free exercise thereof; or permitting in any degree a union of Church and State, or granting any special privilege, immunity, or advantage to any sect or religious body, or to any number of sects or religious bodies; or taxing the people of any State, either directly or indirectly, for the support of any sect or religious body, or of any number of sects or religious bodies; or abridging the freedom of speech or of the press, or the right of the people peaceably to assemble and to petition the Government for a redress of grievances.

SECTION 2.—No religious test shall ever be required as a condition of suffrage, or as a qualification for any office or public trust, in any State. No person shall ever be deprived of any of his or her rights, privileges or capacities, or disqualified for the performance of any public or private duty, or rendered incompetent to give evidence in any court of law or equity, in consequence of any opinions he or she may hold on the subject of religion. No person shall ever be required by law to contribute directly or indirectly to the support of any religious society or body of which he or she is not a voluntary member.

SECTION 3.—Neither the United States, nor any State, Territory, municipality, or any civil division of any State or Territory, shall levy any tax, or make any gift, grant, or appropriation, for the support, or in aid, of any church, religious sect, or denomination, or any school, seminary, or institution of learning, in which the faith or doctrines of any religious order or sect shall be taught or inculcated, or in which religious rites shall be observed; or for the support, or in aid, of any religious charity or purpose of any sect, order, or denomination whatsoever.

SECTION 4.—Congress shall have power to enforce the various provisions of this Article by appropriate legislation.

WEBSTER, as Secretary of State under Harrison, had a worrisome time about the President's Inaugural Message. He wrote one out himself, and endeavored to make Harrison accept it, but that worthy was obdurate; he had prepared his own and was determined to read it. Webster told his friend Harvey, that he was annoyed because the Message was, according to his judgment and taste, so inappropriate. It entered largely into Roman history, and had a great deal to say about the States of antiquity and the Roman proconsuls and various matters of that kind. Indeed, the word "proconsul" was repeated in it a great many times. When he found, says Mr. Harvey, that the President was bent upon using his own inaugural, Mr. Webster said that his desire was to modify it, for as it then stood, he said, it had no more to do with the affairs of the American Government and people than a chapter in the Koran. General Harrison rather reluctantly consented to let him take it. Mr. Webster spent a portion of the next day in modifying the Message. Mrs. Seaton remarked to him, when he came home rather late that day, that he looked fatigued and worried. Said she, "I really hope nothing has happened." "You would think that something had happened," he replied, "if you knew what I have done. I have killed seventeen Roman proconsuls as dead as smelts, every one of them."

THERE ARE QUEER nooks and corners left in old England. A visitor to a country parson tells how, when he accompanied him lately to take the duty in a remote parish, the sexton said: "Perhaps your reverence won't mind preaching from the chancel, for we've got a duck a sittin' in the pulpit."

Report on the Sunday Mail.

BY HON. RICHARD M. JOHNSON.

IN SENATE OF THE UNITED STATES, January 10, 1878.—Ordered, That, in addition to the usual number, three thousand copies be printed.

Mr. JOHNSON, of Kentucky, made the following REPORT.

That some respite is required from the ordinary vocations of life is an established principle, sanctioned by the usages of all nations, whether Christian or Pagan. One day in seven has also been determined upon as the proportion of time; and in conformity with the wishes of the great majority of citizens of this country, the first day of the week, commonly called Sunday, has been set apart to that object. The principle has received the sanction of the national legislature, so far as to admit a suspension of all public business on that day, except in cases of absolute necessity, or of great public utility. This principle the committee would not wish to disturb. If kept within its legitimate sphere of action, no injury can result from its observance. It should, however, be kept in mind that the proper object of government is to protect all persons in the enjoyment of their religious, as well as civil rights, and not to determine for any whether they shall esteem one day above another, or esteem all days alike holy.

We are aware that a variety of sentiment exists among the good citizens of this nation on the subject of the Sabbath day; and our government is designed for the protection of one as much as for another. The Jews, who in this country are as free as Christians, and entitled to the same protection from the laws, derive their obligation to keep the Sabbath day from the fourth commandment of their decalogue; and in conformity with that injunction pay religious homage to the seventh day of the week, which we call Saturday. One denomination of Christians among us, justly celebrated for their piety, and certainly as good citizens as any other class, agree with the Jews in the moral obligation of the Sabbath, and observe the same day. There are also many Christians among us who derive not their obligation to observe the Sabbath from the decalogue, but regard the Jewish Sabbath as abrogated. From the example of the Apostles of Christ, they have chosen the first day of the week, instead of that day set apart in the decalogue, for their religious devotions. These have generally regarded the observance of the day as a devotional exercise, and would not more readily enforce it upon others than they would enforce secret prayer or devout meditations. Urging the fact, that neither their Lord nor his disciples, though often censured by their accusers for a violation of the Sabbath, ever enjoined its observance, they regard it as a subject on which every person should be fully persuaded in his own mind, and not coerce others to act upon his persuasion. Many Christians again differ from these, professing to derive their obligation to observe the Sabbath from the fourth commandment of the Jewish decalogue, and bring the example of the Apostles, who appear to have held their public meetings for worship on the first day of the week, as authority for so far changing the decalogue, as to substitute that day for the seventh. The Jewish government was a theocracy, which enforced religious observances; and though the committee would hope that no portion of the citizens of our country could willingly introduce a system of religious coercion in our civil institutions, the example of other nations should admonish us to watch carefully against its earliest indication.

With these different religious views, the committee are of opinion that Congress cannot interfere. It is not the legitimate province of the legislature to determine what religion is true, or what false. Our government is a civil, and not a religious institution. Our Constitution recognizes in every person the right to choose his own religion, and to enjoy it freely, without molestation. Whatever may be the religious sentiments of citizens, and however variant, they are alike entitled to protection from the government, so long as they do not invade the rights of others.

The transportation of the mail on the first day of the week, it is believed, does not interfere with the rights of conscience. The petitioners for its discontinuance appear to be actuated from a religious zeal, which may be commendable if confined to its proper sphere; but they assume a position better suited to an ecclesiastical than to a civil institution. They appear, in many instances, to lay it down as an axiom that the practice is a violation of the law of God. Should Congress, in their legislative capacity, adopt the sentiment, it would establish the principle that the Legislature is a proper tribunal to determine what are the laws of God. It would involve a legislative decision in a religious controversy; and on a point in which good citizens may honestly differ in opinion, without disturbing the peace of society or endangering its liberties. If this principle is once introduced, it will be impossible to define its bounds. Among all the religious persecutions with which almost every page of modern history is stained, no victim ever suffered but for the violation of what government denominated the law of God. To prevent a similar train of evils in this country, the Constitution has wisely withheld from our government the power of defining the Divine Law. It is a right reserved to each citizen; and while he respects the equal rights of others, he cannot be held amenable to any human tribunal for his conclusions.

Extensive religious combinations to effect a political object are, in the opinion of the committee, always dangerous. This first effort of the kind calls for the establishment of a principle, which, in the opinion of the committee, would lay the foundation for dangerous innovations upon the spirit of the Constitution, and upon the religious rights of the citizens. If admitted, it may be justly apprehended that the future measures of government will be strongly marked, if not eventually controlled by the same influence. All religious despotism commences by combination and influence; and when that influence begins to operate upon the political institutions of a country, the civil power soon bends under it; and the catastrophe of other nations furnishes an awful warning of the consequence.

Under the present regulations of the post-office department, the rights of conscience are not invaded. Every agent enters voluntarily, and it is presumed conscientiously, into the discharge of his duties, without intermeddling with the conscience of another. Post-offices are so regulated as that but a small proportion of the first day of the week is required to be occupied in official business. In the transportation of the mail on that day, no one agent is employed many hours. Religious persons enter into the business without violating their own consciences or imposing any restraints upon others. Passengers in the mail-stages are free to rest during the first day of the week, or to pursue their journeys at their own pleasure. While the mail is transported on Saturday, the Jew and the Sabbatarian may abstain from any agency in carrying it, from conscientious scruples. While it is transported on the first day of the week, another class may abstain, from the same religious scruples. The obligation of government is the same to both of these classes; and the committee can discover no principle on which the claims of one should be more respected than those of the other, unless it should be admitted that the consciences of the minority are less sacred than those of the majority.

It is the opinion of the committee that the subject should be regarded simply as a question of expediency, irrespective of its religious bearing. In this light it has hitherto been considered. Congress have never legislated upon the subject. It rests, as it ever has done, in the legal discretion of the Postmaster-General, under the repeated refusals of Congress to discontinue the Sabbath mails. His knowledge and judgment, in all the concerns of that department, will not be questioned. His intense labors and assiduity have resulted in the highest improvement of every branch of his department. It is practiced only on the great leading mail routes, and such others as are necessary to maintain their connections. To prevent this would, in the opinion of the committee, be productive of immense injury, both in its commercial, political, and in its moral bearings.

The various departments of government require, frequently in peace, always in war, the speediest intercourse with the remotest parts of the country; and one important object of the mail establishment is to furnish the greatest and most economical facilities for such intercourse. The delay of the mails one whole day in seven, would require the employment of special expresses, at great expense, and sometimes with great uncertainty.

The commercial, manufacturing, and agricultural interests of our country are so intimately connected as to require a constant and the most expeditious correspondence betwixt all our seaports, and betwixt them and the most interior settlements. The delay of the mails during the Sunday would give occasion to the employment of private expresses to such an amount that probably ten riders would be employed where one mail-stage is now running on that day, thus diverting the revenue of that department into another channel, and sinking the establishment into a state of puellability incompatible with the dignity of the government of which it is a department.

Passengers in the mail stages, if the mails are not permitted to proceed on Sunday, will be expected to spend that day at a tavern upon the road, generally under circumstances not friendly to devotion, and at an expense which many are poorly able to encounter. To obviate these difficulties, many will employ extra carriages for their conveyance, and become the bearers of correspondence, as more expeditious than the mail. The stage proprietors will themselves often furnish the travellers with those means of conveyance; so that the effect will ultimately be only to stop the mail, while the vehicle which conveys it will continue, and its passengers become the special messengers for conveying a considerable proportion of what would otherwise constitute the contents of the mail.

Nor can the committee discover where the system could consistently end. If the observance of a holy day becomes incorporated in our institutions, shall we not forbid the movement of an army; prohibit an assault in time of war; and lay an injunction upon our naval officers to lie in the wind while upon the ocean on that day? Consistency would seem to require it. Nor is it certain that we should stop here. If the principle is once established that religion or religious observances shall be interwoven with our legislative acts, we must pursue it to its ultimatum. We shall, if consistent, provide for the erection of edifices for the worship of the Creator, and for the support of Christian ministers, if we believe such measures will promote the interests of Christianity. It is the settled conviction of the committee that the only method of avoiding these consequences, with their attendant train of evils, is to adhere strictly to the spirit of the Constitution, which regards the general government in no other light than that of a civil institution, wholly destitute of religious authority.

What other nations call religious toleration, we call religious rights. They are not exercised in virtue of governmental indulgence, but as rights, of which government cannot deprive any portion of citizens, however small. Despotism power may invade those rights, but justice still confirms them. Let the national legislature once perform an act which involves the decision of a religious controversy, and it will have passed its legitimate bounds. The precedent will then be established, and the foundation laid for that usurpation of the divine prerogative in this country which has been the desolating scourge to the fairest portions of the Old World. Our Constitution recognizes no other power than that of persuasion for enforcing religious observances. Let the professors of Christianity recommend their religion by deeds of benevolence, by Christian meekness, by lives of temperance and holiness. Let them combine their efforts to instruct the ignorant, to relieve the widow and the orphan, to promulgate to the world the gospel of their Savior, recommending its precepts by their habitual example; government will find its legitimate object in protecting them. It cannot oppose them, and they will need its aid. Their moral influence will then do infinitely more to advance the true interests of religion than any measures which they may call on Congress to enact.

The petitioners do not complain of any infringement upon their own rights. They enjoy all that Christians ought to ask at the hand of any government,—protection from all molestation in the exercise of their religious sentiments.

Resolved, That the committee be discharged from the further consideration of the subject.

PREAMBLE AND RESOLUTIONS, ADOPTED AT A MEETING OF THE CITIZENS OF NEW YORK, AGAINST THE PASSAGE OF ANY LAW PROHIBITING THE TRANSPORTATION AND OPENING OF THE MAIL ON SUNDAY.

UNITED STATES SENATE, February 9, 1829.—Ordered, To lie on the table and be printed.

TO THE PRESIDENT OF THE SENATE OF THE UNITED STATES:

Sir,—I have been directed by a public meeting of the citizens of this place, to forward to you the enclosed preamble and resolutions, unanimously adopted by said meeting, and to request the favor of you to lay the same before the honorable body over which you preside. Respectfully your friend,

PRESERVED FISH.

At a very large and respectable meeting of the citizens of New York, at Tammany Hall, on Saturday evening, January 31, 1829, convened for the purpose of expressing their sentiments on the proposition now before the Congress of the United States, to stop the transportation of the public mails and the opening of the post-offices on Sunday:

PRESERVED FISH, Esq., was called to the chair, and ELISHA TIBBITS and DANIEL JACKSON, Esqs., were appointed Secretaries.

The following preamble and resolutions were then presented by Saul Alley, Esq., prefaced by some pertinent remarks, and, after having been read, were unanimously adopted:—

Whereas, This meeting has witnessed with mingled emotions of regret and alarm the exertions of a certain portion of our citizens to influence the Congress of the United States, by their memorials, "so to amend the existing laws regulating the post-office department, as to prevent the transportation and opening of mails, and delivery of letters, newspapers, and packages, on the day which is almost universally acknowledged as the Christian Sabbath"; and inasmuch as they appear to have lost sight of the precepts and genuine character of the religion which they profess, by supposing it requires the aid of civil government for its support, and that the Congress possess the power to favor any particular class of citizens, in propagating their peculiar views, either of the doctrines or duties of religion, this alarm is excited by the attempts which have been made, and are now making, to influence and control the public opinion, to make all our literary and benevolent institutions subservient to sectarian purposes; and more especially by the recent extensive concerted and simultaneous measures to induce the national legislature (by a multitude of memorials and petitions) to enact laws which would violate a fundamental principle of the federal constitution; and,

Whereas, This meeting considers it the unalienable right of every man to worship Almighty God when, and where, and in what manner it may accord with the convictions of his own understanding; and that the only legitimate course to be pursued by every religious sect which wishes to increase its numbers and influence is to accomplish it by the example of piety, benevolence, and liberality, rather than by coercive measures; convinced of the correctness of these views, this meeting would respectfully remonstrate, not only against the proposed change of the existing laws regulating the post-office department, but also against the passage of any law having for its object the regulation of religious duties, or which may, in any way, interfere with what properly belongs to the conscience of each individual. Therefore,

Resolved, That this meeting highly disapproves of the recent attempts of certain religious sects, who have combined to influence the National Legislature to pass an act which would favor their own peculiar views of religious duty, as being not only contrary to the letter and spirit of the Constitution which guarantees freedom of opinions to every citizen, but fraught with the most pernicious and dangerous consequences to our civil and religious liberties, and calculated to prepare the way for the final establishment of a national religion.

Resolved, That the late able report of the committee on post-offices, etc., to the Senate of the United States, receives the fullest approbation of this meeting, and that we feel particular satisfaction in observing the prompt manner in which it was adopted by that honorable body.

Resolved, That, in the opinion of this meeting, it is the duty of every good citizen to frown with indignation upon every attempt on the part of any religious sect or denomination of Christians, as such, to obtain influence in the councils of the nation, whereby would be endangered the great and fundamental principles of religious and civil liberty, guaranteed to us by the Constitution.

Resolved, That we have witnessed with great regret the recent adjournment of the Assembly of this State to join in a fast, not emanating with the authorities of the State, but at the special request of a sectarian congregation in Albany: thus exhibiting a fatal example of devotion to sectarian influence, and hazarding the interests of this State, by interrupting public business at the call of any Synod who may order a similar fast; and this fact, in connection with the attempt to stop the mails on Sunday, creates just apprehensions, that, if religious partisans of any particular sect shall succeed in making the laws of the land tributary to their doctrines, it will be a signal for dangerous innovations on the civil and religious rights of the people, and we shall be called upon to surrender these inestimable blessings which were secured to us by the valor and fidelity of our fathers.

Resolved, That the thanks of this meeting be presented to the editors of the New York Enquirer, Evening Post, and the American, for their patriotic and independent opposition to the proposed restrictions on the transportation of the public mails.

Resolved, That the proceedings of this meeting be signed by the Chairman and Secretaries, and published in newspapers in this city, and a copy thereof sent to the President of the Senate of the United States and the Speaker of the House of Representatives.

PRESERVED FISH, Chairman.

ELISHA TIBBITS, } Secretaries.
DANIEL JACKSON, }

PLAIN TRUTHS FOR WESTERN READERS.

To intelligent men at the East, it seems a most amazing thing that there is so great an indifference at the West as to the public credit. For the South there is some excuse. The debt was created in suppressing rebellion. But the Western States were intensely and vigorously loyal. They gave without stint of their best blood to sustain the Union. How can it be that the people of those States care so little for the honor of the nation preserved so largely by Western fidelity and heroism? Yet Pendletonism suddenly became so strong in that region, at one time, that few Republican statesmen had the manhood to combat it. Inflation swept over that section, like a prairie fire, in 1874. The demand for repeal of the Resumption Act was resented with difficulty in any Western State in 1875 and 1876. Now the silver delusion, coming swiftly like a nightmare, has driven crazy nearly every public man and journal at the West. And yet the people of that region are personally not devoid of honesty nor of common sense. How is it that every sort of raid upon the public honor prevails there so easily?

Is it in part because the people of the West do not comprehend how public prosperity depends upon public credit? Daily experience has not familiarized them with the effects of credit upon commerce and industry. Crops can be raised, whether capital is alarmed or not. But merchants know that crops cannot be moved unless money can be borrowed to cover the cost while moving from the farm to the consumer. If capital is alarmed, if banks are in trouble, the movement is instantly checked; the producer has to sell at lower rate, in order to sell at all. The loss in price he feels; the disorder of the credit system, which is often the true cause, he rarely perceives. Why is capital alarmed, and why are the banks in trouble? The most necessary reserves of banks, savings banks, insurance and trust companies, and active capitalists, are kept in government bonds. Danger to them, or a decline in their price, instantly brings disorder to the whole money market, causes corporations and lenders to call in loans and refuse renewals, prevents the free employment of capital which is necessary for active business, and thus checks purchases and shipments. The producer suffers. Within the last two months, movement of crops has been checked by uncertainties in the money market, and Western and Southern producers have already lost millions of dollars because of the silver agitation.

The instant effect of public credit upon private prosperity is constantly felt at the East. Mines employing an hundred thousand men must stop work if the borrowing of money is checked by alarm of capital. Mills and factories employing workers by the hundred thousand are obliged to borrow constantly, and a week of alarm in the money market is a week of disaster to industry. Failures by the thousand result from every new raid upon the public credit. The alarm is not unreasonable. Not only the national banks, by which the greater part of commercial loans are made, but nearly all financial corporations wisely hold in public securities as large a part as possible of their surplus or reserve fund. Short loans are drawn in at once when there is alarm, and government bonds cannot be advantageously sold. In New England more than one person to each family is a depositor in a savings bank, and the least danger to these banks causes many to withdraw deposits. But these deposits amount to twelve hundred millions, and are largely employed in moving machinery, paying wages and carrying crops and other products to consumers. An alarm instantly checks the vast commerce and industry which depend upon freedom of borrowing.

The West and South have to pay a large share of the cost of all uncertainty or alarm in business,—in part, because unemployed hands cannot buy so freely of Western products; in part, because in times of uncertainty Eastern mills or merchants do not venture to carry as large stocks of cotton or wool or grain; in part, because the cost of articles imported or manufactured here is increased by uncertainty and stringency in the money market; and in part, because the West and South are always borrowing largely at the East, and have to pay more for money when there is fear of trouble. In these, and in many other ways, the great burdens which Western repudiators cause inevitably roll back in great part upon Western producers. Many millions, no man can tell how many, the agitation this fall has already cost. The West has assailed the public credit, and has thereby fleeced itself. The sale of bonds was stopped, and the price lowered; thousands of depositors were alarmed; hundreds of banks tried to protect themselves, and some failed; the money market was made uncertain and feverish. The cost is heavy, and the West pays its full share.—N. Y. Tribune.

A MORNING WITH COMTE.

Every scrap of information in regard to the opinions and personal characteristics of the distinguished author of the Positive Philosophy is read with interest. The November number of the Nineteenth Century has a brief article with the above title, which contains some new items. It is the sketch of a visit which Sir Erskine Perry paid him, Feb. 25, 1853, at his well-known rooms in Paris. It had been said that at this time he was living in great poverty, and his visitor called to ascertain the truth of the story and to relieve his necessities if there were occasion. Some time before this, Mr. Grote, Sir William Molesworth, and Mr. Ralphe Currie, through the influence of John Stuart Mill, had come to his assistance, and he was then (1853) living upon the contributions of his Positivist disciples, and devoting his whole strength to the elaboration of his philosophical analysis of society. Sir David Brewster clearly recognized in 1858, in the Edinburgh Review, the general accuracy of the great fundamental law which Comte professed to have discovered, and announced that the French philosopher's great object was to place social physics on the same positive basis which he had found to belong to physical science. It was John Stuart Mill who said that Auguste Comte had "alone arrived at any results truly scientific" in regard to sociology—a subject which Herbert Spencer is slowly elaborating,—and his strong sympathy with humanity and his lofty views of morality have attracted the attention of the most eminent thinkers of the day, not less than the clearness with which he enunciated his great fundamental idea of social law at the early age of twenty-four. He died in 1857, and was in the full enjoyment of his fame when Sir Erskine Perry called on him. While waiting for the philosopher to make his appearance, his visitor took a survey of the room. "On the mantelpiece," says Sir Erskine, "were a few books,—Don Quixote in French, L'imitation in Cornille's translation, Dante's Inferno in Italian. In the bookcases I noticed principally Descartes' works in eight volumes; Gibbon, Montucla's History of Mathematics, Aristotle in French, Fielding's works, several scientific works. All these were well bound, but all appeared as if little touched or consulted. Comte soon entered, a smallish, stooping man, in long dark tweed dressing-gown, much bloodshot in one eye, healthy, rosy tint, short black hair, small Celtic features, forehead unremarkable, agreeable physiognomy." In speaking of religion from his point of view, he said: "What I can't forgive in Christianity is its rupture with all preceding times; it destroyed the true continuity which binds mankind together. For, drawn clearly, it is the dead who govern the living. Homer, Aristotle, Plato, are always influencing us, and will continue so to influence us; but Catholicism severed itself entirely from the past; it worked solely through the masses and is essentially revolutionary. Protestantism has done still worse by erecting a personal standard; and the delusion of the last century is the worst of all, for it destroyed all authority, all reverence, and naturally produced that unbridled selfishness which is now prevalent everywhere." He gave his visitor the following interesting statement of his personal habits: "I rise every morning at five, and work the whole day except on Wednesdays, when I go out to preside over the Societe Positive (and on the evenings of which day, I may add, he paid a weekly visit to the tomb of Clotilde de Vaux), and except on Thursdays, when I conduct my correspondence and receive my friends. I receive also every evening from seven to eight, and if no one comes in I go to bed at eight. Thanks to my great temperance, my health is perfect, and you see (pulling a lock of his hair) I am not yet gray, for I have no ambition like all the rest. That is to say, I am ambitious; for I wish to found a school like Aristotle or St. Paul, and one that will probably be more important than both of those two joined together. And I am full of hope for the future and have not the slightest doubt thereupon." In regard to his home, Sir Erskine continues: "Seeing nothing but the empty, uncarpeted room in which he received me, the little drawing-room, consecrated by her presence, and by the sacraments, his bedroom, and one or two empty closets in which were a few books—copies of his Catechisme Positive, for instance,—I inquired with interest for his library, where he wrote. 'But it is the salon, where I receive you at any hour.' 'But,' I said, 'there are no books there.' He rejoined: 'I never read; reading interrupts thinking; it is necessary to begin with reading; but now I have given it up and don't read even scientific works. Fifteen years ago gave up reading newspapers, as I found it very injurious.' 'But how, then,' I asked, 'can you keep up with the history of the times?' 'Oh' said he, 'living at Paris, and seeing so many people as I do,

I hear of everything that occurs.' He then commenced a monologue on journalism, which he thought would some day be driven out of the field by placards posted against the wall; by which those, including government, who had anything to say to the world, would speak at the moment it was necessary; whereas at the present time writers for the press had to pour out a broadside day after day, whether they had anything to say or not. 'But I read poetry, books like those,' pointing to the volumes on the mantelpiece; 'every day I read a chapter in the Imitation, and I have a copy there in Cornille's beautiful translation,—I advise you to get it,' as I had thrown out that I never read a line in this celebrated work. In connection with this taste for poetry, I may also record that, in the course of this long conversation, he threw out that formerly he used to take a stall at the Italian opera, but had been compelled by his circumstances to give it up." His remark about newspapers recalls the saying of the late Thomas Brassey, the great railway contractor, "that he was too busy to read them, and that he depended on his friends for the news." Comte does not suffer by this sketch, and Sir Erskine Perry says of the interview, which was principally a monologue two hours and a half long: "The effect of it on my mind was to inspire me with warm regard for his benevolence and purity of views; with admiration for his profundity of ideas and brilliant elocution; but, above all, with wonder at the calm and well-assured self-complacency with which he regarded his own social theory to be as firmly established as any of the exact sciences which he had previously mastered."—Boston Herald.

WHAT NOT TO READ.

SERMON BY A REDEMPTORIST FATHER AT ST. PATRICK'S CHURCH.

This (Monday) morning, at half-past five, one of the Redemptorist fathers preached as follows in St. Patrick's Church:—

"The art of printing has been considered by some to be a great invention wherever it has been introduced; but, like all other things which are good in themselves, it has often been used for other purposes than those for which it was intended. It has been used for other purposes than disseminating sound doctrine and sound morals. I wish to speak to you this morning about the classes of literature you must not read; about bad books and bad papers. All bad books, or all books forbidden by the Church to be read by good Catholics, may be classed under three heads: first, those whose direct tendency is to destroy the doctrines of the Church; secondly, those whose influence destroys morals and doctrine indirectly; thirdly, those whose tendency is neither one nor the other, but to destroy faith. I would warn you, my children, against all such. First, infidel books, by which is meant books written against revelations and intended to destroy a belief in things supernatural—I may mention among these the works of Tom Paine, Darwin, Huxley, and such men,—accepting only the natural and disbelieving the supernatural. Such books are forbidden by the Church; even a priest is not permitted to read them, except by permission of the archbishop, who gets the permission from Rome. This permission is sometimes granted to those whose duty it is to refute them. Then there is another class which, while they cannot, strictly speaking, be called infidel, are heretical. Such books include

ALL PROTESTANT WORKS, BEGINNING FIRST WITH THE BIBLE.

If anybody asks me if the Bible is the Word of God, I answer: If they mean the Catholic Bible,—yes; if they mean the Protestant Bible,—no. The latter is the word of the devil, and is a lie, because written by the father of lies. When Luther left the Church he immediately changed the Bible to justify his actions; and they have been at it ever since, until now there are no less than four thousand variations in the Protestant Bible, consisting of texts left out, parts of texts suppressed, additions, and alterations in punctuation which change the meaning. This book Catholics are warned against. Do not think because the Church forbids the reading of it that she is a tyrant. If a mother saw her child have a razor in its hand would she not immediately take it away? Well, the Protestant Bible is a razor in the hand of a child; a man may use a razor because he knows how, and a priest may read by permission a Protestant Bible because his education is such as to not make it dangerous to him. Some will tell you a Catholic is not allowed to read any Bible; if anyone says a Catholic cannot read a Catholic Bible, tell him he is a liar,—tell him he is a jackass. Tell him for me—with my compliments—

HE IS A JACKASS.

This class of literature also comprises those newspapers and tracts of whatsoever kind that make fun of your religion. And I find that in this city are some which are not only forbidden by the fact that they ridicule your religion, but are also specially forbidden by the archbishop of this diocese; and yet I learn that some Catholics read them! How much better it would be for the Church if she were rid of such! A Catholic ought not to be ashamed of his religion and read a paper of this kind to escape the sneers of Protestants. He then becomes a lick-spittle of Protestants. When a lukewarm, milk-and-water Catholic like this comes to me and says he needs to on account of his business, I do hate such a Catholic; I feel like spitting in his face. Then, my children, I would warn you against all books of superstition, for they are against faith. All fortune-telling books are forbidden, because God only can foretell future events; even the angels are unable to do this; how much less men! Also all books of immoral tendencies purporting to be medical works and intended to encourage improper practices, especially those illustrated with improper cuts that a Catholic eye should never see. All novels and light reading. Now what is the duty of a Catholic when a book published by a Bible Society is placed in his hands, or when a lady with a blue veil and a reticule on her arm, looking like a potato taken from the cellar, where it has been for ten years, hands you a tract, or, if you won't take one, sticks it under the door or in at the window? Some of you are fond of the weed,—some of you smoke; then

JUST LIGHT YOUR PIPE OR CIGAR WITH IT, or let your wife make coffee with it. These tracts generally have four or five leaves, and are written by Methodist ministers, who have no money in their pockets, and it is done to make money and get a living. These tracts will perhaps tell you that works are not necessary to salvation, or tell you untrue stories about priests or nuns; burn them, and when you have any doubts about a publication, come and ask your father confessor. If you can read, buy Catholic books and papers; subscribe to them,—they will make a good Catholic of you, and you will be able to fight Protestants with your intellect as well as your fists; the former being a more effective way. —Montreal Daily Witness, Nov. 19, 1877.

WHAT MAKES A STORM.

Professor Elias Loomis, of Yale College, read a paper on "Contributions to Meteorology" at the recent meeting of the National Academy of Sciences in New York, part of which is as follows: The published volumes of the United States signal service (now covering a period of twenty-one months) show that the great storms of the United States usually begin near the Rocky Mountains. Of the few traced to the Pacific Ocean none come in the south of Oregon. A large proportion of our storms are developed within our national limits or near our borders. Thus we have many chances to observe the first development and gradual increase of a storm. The usual circumstances attending the first development are these: There is an area several hundred miles in diameter over which the barometer has about its mean height. On opposite sides of this region, generally about east and west, at a distance of some one thousand miles, areas of high barometer are formed where the pressure is from one-fourth to a whole inch above the mean. From these two opposite high-pressure areas the atmosphere moves toward the central area, the earth's rotation deflecting these currents to the right. There results a diminished pressure over the central area, causing a still greater inward flow of air, thus producing a still lower barometric pressure. Since the air tends to flow in on all sides toward this low-pressure area, it assumes an oval shape, sensibly circular if the winds are violent. The centrifugal force resulting from this circular movement causes a still further depression of the barometer. This partial vacuum would soon be filled, stopping the inward movement of the air, were it not for the upward escape of this air, carrying aqueous vapor. The whole is cooled, producing rain. The heat liberated in this condensation of vapor causes a further rarefaction of air, increasing the inward movement of wind. Rain is thus one circumstance which increases the force of a storm, but is not regarded as a cause of its origin. The observations prove an inward movement of the air before much precipitation of vapor takes place. The progress of an area of low barometer appears to be mainly determined by the same causes which determine the general system of circulation of the atmosphere. Except in the southern margin of the United States, the average annual progress of the wind is from west to east, and is determined by causes general in their operation. Local storms cannot permanently, but may temporarily, influence this progress, in which case it acquires increased power and will be reestablished in a few days at most, with a force proportioned to the time it was interrupted. The atmospheric disturbance due to storms is mainly confined to the lower half of the atmosphere. The force of this upper current from the west added to that of the lower half of the atmosphere pressing in upon the west side of a low-barometric area, tends to fill up the depression on that side. On the eastern side of the storm, the surface wind alone presses inward, while the upper portion of the atmosphere is still moving from the west. Moreover, the upward motion of the air takes place chiefly on the east side of the centre, as is indicated by the position of the rain areas. By this upward motion, the air which presses in upon the east side of the centre is prevented from restoring the equilibrium of the pressure on that side, while on the west of the centre there is usually little of this upward movement. Thus the low-pressure centre tends eastward, or the storm appears to travel to the east. If there should be a great precipitation of vapor on the west side of the storm centre, this must be accompanied by ascending currents of air on that side, which would oppose the establishment of the equilibrium of pressure on that side, and the storm centre may be held stationary, or even tend westward. A remarkable example of this occurred in March, 1874. This storm travelled from Montana to Nova Scotia at the rate of twenty-four miles per hour. At one time near Nova Scotia its rate was three miles an hour, then fifteen, then three, the storm centre oscillating to and fro. During this period of slow rate much snow fell to the west of the centre of low pressure. This snow-fall is believed to be the cause of the slow eastward progress. Other remarkable instances of this kind have occurred.—Boston Advertiser.

GEORGE W. CURTIS' MINISTRY.

The Church of the Redeemer at New Brighton, Staten Island, is a neat, gothic-frame structure, with a high-peaked roof, and a slender tower on the right in front. It stands back off Clinton Avenue, on the south side of the street, about five hundred yards from the water, in the centre of a lawn intersected by gravel-strewn paths. The interior is plain and tasteful. A double row of small, lancet-shaped windows of stained glass lights the sides. In a recess in the rear, lighted by a large rose window, is a sonorous organ. A black-walnut screen in front, hung with crimson cloth, conceals the choir from view. In front of this is the raised reading desk of oak, heavily cushioned in crimson velvet, and bearing the monogram, "I. H. S." A small iron baptismal font, painted white, stands on the left. The church is Unitarian. It was built by private subscription, and is out of debt. Formerly it had a minister at a salary of $3,000 per year, but two years ago he went away. The congregation then asked George William Curtis to conduct services for them until the vacancy could be filled. He complied, reading each Sunday a selected sermon from the productions of famous theologians, and has continued ever since to act as minister. Mr. Curtis does not confine himself to the writings of Unitarians exclusively, but treats his hearers to discourses produced by Episcopalians, Congregationalists, and clergymen of all denominations. "He has spoiled us so far as getting a minister is concerned," said one of the congregation to a Times reporter yesterday. "I don't think we could find one now who would satisfy us." When Mr. Curtis is ill or away, his place is temporarily filled by ministers from neighboring churches. He receives nothing for his services, and the revenues of the church, beyond its small expenses, are employed in assisting other congregations less favored. Last June, Sunday collections were discontinued, and the only receipts now are by voluntary contributions.

Yesterday morning, the polite, gray-haired sexton invited the Times reporter to "take a seat anywhere." At eleven o'clock Mr. Curtis entered and seated himself behind the reading-desk. He was attired in ministerial black. When the choir began the opening anthem, there were twenty-nine persons of all ages, by actual count, in the edifice. Subsequently, the number was swelled to about forty, and these almost half-filled the sittings. It was said that the bad weather and the absence of many persons in the country accounted for the small attendance. At the end of the anthem, Mr. Curtis adjusted his glasses, and rising, said in measured tones: "Let us read the psalm on the ninety-seventh page of the psalter." The congregation thereupon arose also, and the fifth psalm was recited, Mr. Curtis and the congregation reading aloud alternate verses. Mr. Curtis then gave out the thirteenth hymn, beginning, "Love divine, all love excelling," which he read to the end with exquisite elocutionary effect. The hymn was sung standing, Mr. Curtis joining. At its conclusion, Mr. Curtis read the thirty-second and thirty-fifth chapters of Isaiah. The choir then sang the anthem, "O Holy Spirit," and when they had ended Mr. Curtis read the twelfth chapter of the Epistle of Romans, and the fifth and sixth chapters of Matthew. The two hundred and first hymn, beginning, "Through all the various shifting scenes," was then sung by the congregation. Then Mr. Curtis read from a recent published volume a sermon by Rev. Starr King, the famous Boston and California Unitarian minister, on the text contained in the twenty-second verse of the fourth chapter of St. John. The discourse was a masterly exposition of the Unitarian doctrine and argument in favor of its soundness. Mr. Curtis' magnificent elocution threw its beauties into the strongest possible light. The audience listened intently from beginning to end, and there were times when all present held their breath, so effective was the rendering of the more brilliant passages. The sermon over, the choir intoned the Lord's prayer, the congregation bowing their heads and following silently. The one hundred and sixth hymn, beginning, "Thy presence, ever-living God," was then sung, and the services were closed shortly after noon by a fervent benediction, invoked by Mr. Curtis while the congregation remained standing.—N. Y. Times.

SENATOR SUMNER'S RELIGIOUS BELIEF.

One of the earliest and most attached friends and correspondents of Charles Sumner was his classmate, Jonathan F. Stearns, of Bedford, now pastor of a church in New York. N. J. He became, after graduating, a teacher in Greenfield, and on entering the seminary at Andover, as a theological student, he addressed to his friends an earnest letter of religious inquiry and appeal. This drew from Sumner the following reply, which we extract from the just published memoir:—

This letter is a reply to one from Stearns, then a student at the Andover Theological Seminary, in which he pressed the Christian faith on Sumner's attention, and began thus: "My knowledge of your candid temper, and the terms on which we have been long conversant with each other, encourage the belief that you will suffer me for once to address you with great plainness. The sentiments of friendship I have so long cherished towards you; the high respect I entertain for your character and talents; the extensive influence which I foresee you are to have in the community; and, more than these, the immortality to which we both are destined,—all forbid me to be silent."

CAMBRIDGE, Jan. 12, 1833.

My dear Friend,—I have received and am grateful for your letter. The interest you manifest in my welfare calls for my warmest acknowledgments. I do not know how I can better show myself worthy of your kindness than with all frankness and plainness to expose to you, in a few words, the state of my mind on the important subject upon which you addressed me.

The last time I saw you, you urged upon me the study of the proofs of Christianity, with an earnestness that flowed, I was conscious, from a sincere confidence in them yourself, and the consequent wish that all should believe, as in belief was sure salvation. I have had your last words and look often in my mind since. They have been not inconstant prompts to thought and speculation upon the proposed subject. I attended Bishop Hopkins' lectures, and gave to them a severe attention. I remained and still remain unconvinced that Christ was divinely commissioned to preach a revelation to men, and that he was intrusted with the power of working miracles. But when I make this declaration, I do not mean to deny that such a being as Christ lived and went about doing good, or that the body of precepts which have come down to us as delivered by him, were so delivered. I believe that Christ lived when and as the gospel says; that he was more than man—namely, above all men who had as yet lived,—and yet less than God; full of the strongest sense and knowledge, and of a virtue superior to any which we call Roman, or Grecian, or Stoic, and which we best denote when, borrowing his name, we call it Christian. I pray you not to believe that I am insensible to the goodness and greatness of his character. My idea of human nature is exalted, when I think that such a being lived and went as a man amongst men. And here, perhaps, the conscientious unbeliever may find good cause for glorifying his God; not because he sent his Son into the world to partake of its troubles and be the herald of glad tidings, but because he suffered a man to be born, in whom the world should see but one of themselves, endowed with qualities calculated to elevate the standard of attainable excellence.

I do not know that I can say more without betraying you into a controversy, in which I should be loath to engage, and from which I am convinced no good would result to either party. I do not think that I have a basis for faith to build upon. I am without religious feeling. I seldom refer my happiness or acquisitions to the Great Father from whose mercy they are derived. Of the first great commandment, then, upon which so much hangs, I live in perpetual unconscience.—I will not say disregard, for that, perhaps, would imply that it was present in my mind. I believe, though, that my love to my neighbor—namely, my anxiety that my fellow-creatures should be happy, and disposition to serve them in their honest endeavors—is pure and strong. Certainly, I do feel an affection for everything that God created; and this feeling is my religion.

"He prayeth well, who loveth well
Both man and bird and beast."

"He prayeth best, who loveth best
All things both great and small;
For the dear God who loveth us,
He made and loveth all."

I ask you not to imagine that I am led into the above sentiment by the lines I have just quoted,—the best of Coleridge's "Rime of the Ancient Mariner,"—but rather that I seize the lines to express and illustrate my feeling.

This communication is made in the fulness of friendship and confidence. To your charity and continued interest in my welfare, suffer me to commend myself as

Your affectionate friend,
CHARLES SUMNER.

A KIND-HEARTED she-elephant, while walking through the jungle where the spicy breezes blow soft o'er Ceylon's Isle, heedlessly set foot upon a partridge, which she crushed to death within a few inches of the nest containing its callow brood. "Poor little things," said the generous mammoth, "I have been a mother myself, and my affection shall atone for the fatal consequences of my neglect." So saying she sat down upon the orphaned birds. Moral: The above teaches us what home is without a mother; also, that it is not every person who should be intrusted with the care of an orphan asylum.—N. Y. World.

CASH RECEIPTS.

N.B.—Postage stamps are not included here, though credited on subscriptions, etc.

FOR THE WEEK ENDING DECEMBER 29.

Jehu Hlatt, $4; Chas. W. Bennett, 40 cents; William Jones, $3.70; S. P. Chamberlain, $3; C. S. Patrick, $3; Wm. H. Wood, $3.30; W. A. Culbert, 60 cents; C. B. Peckham, $3.30; James Nye, $3.30; Isabella Thomson, $10; E. M. Wilson, $3; W. C. Fuller, $3.30; Leonard Chandler, $3.30; Clark & Co., $11.11; H. H. Hatch, $3.30; T. A. Kinney, $4; A. P. Hulise, $3; S. W. Sample, $3.30; J. P. Quincy, $3.30; E. T. Billings, $5.70; M. C. Shannon, $3.30; A. E. Giles, $3.30; T. C. Leland, 25 cents; D. A. Oline, $3.30; William Filene, $3.30; John Verity, $3.30; Seth Hunt, $3.30; Clarence Vail, $1.00; J. L. Cutler, $3.30; H. W. Johnson, $3; W. J. Worden, $5; F. V. Smith, $3.30; Joseph Post, $5; Dr. E. H. Price, $1; S. L. Smith, $3.30; John Q. Mason, $2.30; Samuel B. Honey, $10; B. Davidson, $2.30; Mrs. Dr. B. Thomson, $3.30; John Dodge, $3; W. C. Fuller, $3.30; Alex. Foster, $1.25; Robert Cooper, $1.00; Osh, $1; L. Everett, $3.30; W. R. Sinton, $1; J. Brookway, $3.30; D. F. Henderson, $3; Fredk Goodfellow, $5; H. M. Todd, $2.50; John Sawyer, $3.30; Dr. John Winslow, $11; J. G. Whyte, $3; E. A. Billingsly, $11; W. H. Sayward, $3.30; Miss S. P. Beck, $3.30; R. H. Lamb, 10 cents; Aaron Skinner, $3; P. H. Clark, $3.30.

All receipts of cash will be acknowledged as above, and no other receipt sent unless specially requested. Persons who do not see their remittances acknowledged within three weeks after sending, will please notify us.

N.B.—Please remit by post-office money-order, by registered letter, or by draft on Boston or New York. Checks on interior banks are liable to discount, and the term of subscription will be proportionally shortened in the credit.

N.B.—Please examine the ADDRESS and DATE on your INDEX mail-tag, and report at once any error in either.

Poetry.

[FOR THE INDEX.]

"SWEET SIXTEEN."

Dear face, with happy, trustful eyes,
And lips so swift to kiss, to smile,
And soft brown hair that never lies
Too smooth to dread my touch the while,—
Dear eyes, so full of gentlest youth,
Of love so free from cloudy trace,
Of maiden modesty and truth,
Of wifely tenderness and grace!

'Tis twice eight years since we were wed,
Twice eight this rainy summer's day,
And yet your loving little head
This morn upon my arm you lay,
As if this were the very time
When first I bore its precious weight,—
As if it shone with girlhood's prime,
And "Sweet Sixteen" were still its date!

Ah more than dear! your guileless part
I match with guilelessness unfeigned,
And give you still an honest heart,
And loyal faith, and troth unstained.
Though streaming tears throughout our past
Have flowed our little graves between,
Each year is holier than the last,
And wedded love is "Sweet Sixteen."

ALPHA.

1875.

PUBLICATIONS RECEIVED.

Books.

AMERICAN ADDRESSING, with a Lecture on the Study of Biology. By T. H. Huxley. New York: D. Appleton & Co. LIGHT. By A. M. Mayer and Charles Barnard. New York: D. Appleton & Co. SOME GENERAL IDEAS CONCERNING MEDICAL REFORM. By David Hunt, M.D. Boston: A. Williams & Co. REMINISCENCES OF FRIEDRICH FROEHEL. By B. von Marrenholz-Büllow. Translated by Mrs. Horace Mann. Boston: Lee & Shepard. WHAT THINK YE OF CHRIST? By Gail Hamilton. Boston: Estes & Lauriat. ESSENTIALS AND NON-ESSENTIALS IN RELIGION. By James Freeman Clarke. Boston: American Unitarian Association. THE OFFICES OF THE OLD CATHOLIC PRAYER-BOOK. Oxford and London: James Parker & Co. CHRISTIANITY AND INFIDELITY. Humphrey-Bennett Discussion. New York: D. M. Bennett. POEMS OF THE LIFE BEYOND AND WITHIN. Compiled by Giles B. Stebbins. Boston: Colby & Rich. VISIONS OF THE BEYOND. Edited by Herman Snow. Boston: Colby & Rich. POEMS. By Louise Chandler Moulton. Boston: Roberts Brothers. PROMETHEUS. A Poem. By S. P. Putnam. New York: G. P. Putnam's Sons. THROUGH SOME ON. By N. R. Waters. New York: C. P. Somerby. TOM. A Home Story. By George L. Chaney. Boston: Roberts Brothers. THE SACRAMENT OF DESTINY. A Novel. By M. E. W. S. New York: D. Appleton & Co. THE CENSUS OF MASSACHUSETTS: 1875. Boston: State Printer.

Paper.

"CHERRY RIFE!" A Romance. New York: D. Appleton & Co. MY BONNIE LASS. By Mrs. C. V. Hamilton. Boston: Estes & Lauriat. ROMEO AND JULIET. A Tragedy. St. Louis: G. I. Jones & Co. THE PATTERN MAN. A Comedy. Albany: J. Munsell. GERARD'S MARRIAGE. By André Theuriet. New York: D. Appleton & Co. SPIRITS. By Théophile Gautier. New York: D. Appleton & Co. THE TOWER OF PERCEMONT. By George Sand. New York: D. Appleton & Co. META HOLDENESS. By Victor Charboulles. New York: D. Appleton & Co. SERMONS by the Rev. Charles Voysey, at Langham Hall, London, from June 3 to November 25, 1877. WHAT IS HUMANITY? By Karl Heinzen. Indianapolis: H. Lieber. WHY AM I A UNITARIAN? By J. F. Clarke. SERMONS by Rev. John W. Chadwick, of Brooklyn, from October to December, 1877. BEGGARS AND BEGGARY. By Rev. John C. Learned, of St. Louis. RELIGION, NOT HISTORY. By Prof. F. W. Newman. CATECHISM DU RATIONALISME. Paris. AN EPILOGUE OF THE POSITIVE PHILOSOPHY AND RELIGION. New York: Society of Humanity. POSITIVE PRAYER. By Joseph Lonchampt. Translated by John G. Mills. THE RELIGION OF GOD AND THE SCIENTIFIC PHILOSOPHY. By Joachim Kaspery. London: Free Thought Pub. Soc'y. PHILOSOPHIC IDEAS. By J. Wilmshurst. Boston: Colby & Rich. WHAT WAS HE? or, Jesus in the Light of the Nineteenth Century. By William Denton. Wellesey: W. Denton. ORANGISM, CATHOLICISM, and Sir Francis Hincks. By J. A. Allan. Toronto: Hart & Rawlinson. VINDICATION OF THOMAS PAINE. By R. G. Ingersoll. Boston: J. P. Mendum. RAILWAYS OF NEW SOUTH WALES. By John Rae. Sydney: Government Printer. NATURE OF THE PHYSICAL FORCES. By Edward Vogel. San Francisco: A. Roman & Co. THE ARGUMENT OF PRESIDENT WARREN on Admission of Girls to the Boston Latin School. REPORT OF NEW YORK Sabbath Committee, 1875-7. YEAR-BOOK OF THE Unitarian Denomination for 1878. APPLETON'S HAND-BOOK of Winter Resorts. FRIEDRICH ALMANACH für das Jahr 1878. CATHOLIC FAMILY ALMANACH for 1878. REPORT OF MASSACHUSETTS Institute of Technology, 1877-8. MILWAUKEE Public School Grounds and Parks.

Periodicals.

JOURNAL OF SPECULATIVE PHILOSOPHY. St. Louis. POPULAR SCIENCE MONTHLY. New York. RADICAL REVIEW. New Bedford. UNITARIAN REVIEW. Boston. CATHOLIC WORLD. New York. THE WESTERN. St. Louis. CANADIAN MONTHLY. Toronto. HERALD OF HEALTH. New York. THE SANITARIAN. New York. JOURNAL OF MICROSCOPY. New York. SEMI-TROPICAL. Jacksonville, Fla. LA RELIGION LAIQUE. Paris.

The Index.

BOSTON, JANUARY 3, 1878.

THE INDEX is published every Thursday by the INDEX ASSOCIATION, at No. 231 WASHINGTON STREET, BOSTON. TOLEDO Office, No. 35 Monroe Street: J. T. FRY, Agent and Clerk. All letters should be addressed to the Boston Office.

THE INDEX accepts every result of science and sound learning, without seeking to harmonize it with the Bible. It recognizes no authority but that of reason and right. It believes in Truth, Freedom, Progress, Equal Rights, and Brotherly Love.

N. B.—No contributor to THE INDEX, editorial or otherwise, is responsible for anything published in its columns except for his or her own individual statements. Editorial contributions will in every case be distinguished by the name or initials of the writer.

TO VOLUNTARY CONTRIBUTORS.—Only Short Articles desired. Unused Manuscripts not returned.

FRANCIS ELLINGWOOD ABBOT, Editor.
OCTAVIUS BROOKS FROTHINGHAM, WILLIAM J. POTTER, WILLIAM H. SPENCER, MRS. E. D. CHENEY, GEORGE JACOB HOLYOAKE (England), DAVID H. CLARK, MRS. ELIZABETH CARY STANTON, J. L. STODDARD, ELIZUR WRIGHT, C. D. B. MILLS, W. D. LE SUEUR, BENJ. F. UNDERWOOD, ALBERT WARREN KELSEY, Editorial Contributors.

A CARD.

The Committee on the better establishment of THE INDEX, appointed at a meeting of its subscribers and friends last May, wish to enlist all the assistance they can to lay its claims before every liberal man and woman in our country. They have prepared a circular setting forth the method, motives, and objects of their action, and wish the names of all who are willing to assist them in placing it where it will do good. Please address the Chairman of the Committee, "Elizur Wright, P. O. Box 109, Boston, Mass."

CLUB TERMS—TIME EXTENDED.

Until February 1, 1878, THE INDEX will be sent for a year to clubs of five or more NEW SUBSCRIBERS on receipt of $2.20 each, in advance, instead of $3.20, the regular cost of subscription. This is an excellent chance for all our friends to join in a vigorous effort to increase the circulation of the most earnestly radical journal in the United States, and thereby to advance the common cause. It is only just to show due public appreciation of the efforts of its friends, and we shall therefore (unless explicitly requested to the contrary) publish the names of all who send us clubs under the arrangement, with the number of new subscribers obtained by each. Shall there not be a little generous emulation to help forward the struggling cause of religious freedom?

F. E. ABBOT, Editor.

PREMIUMS FOR NEW SUBSCRIBERS.

The following premiums for NEW SUBSCRIBERS to THE INDEX are offered with the hope that its sincere co-laborers will vigorously aid in increasing its circulation among their personal friends. To receive these premiums, $3.20 must be remitted in advance with each name sent in. Please read the list carefully, and see if you cannot afford to earn one or more of the works here offered by a little labor in a good cause.

For One New Subscriber.

Either a complete set of Index Tracts; a bound copy of the Report of the "Centennial Congress of Liberals" at Philadelphia, July 4, 1876; any three Reports of the "Annual Meetings of the Free Religious Association" since 1871; Huxley's Origin of Species; John W. Chadwick's Book of Poems; or any obtainable book not costing over $1.

For Two New Subscribers.

Either a set of photographs of "leading INDEX writers"; a copy of Ingersoll's Lectures; a copy of Freedom and Fellowship in Religion—a collection of Essays and Addresses by O. B. Frothingham, W. J. Potter, John Weiss, T. W. Higginson, F. E. ABBOT, and others; Darwin's Origin of Species; Draper's Conflict between Religion and Science; Huxley's Lay Sermons; a bound copy of THE INDEX for 1871 or 1872; Renan's Life of Jesus; or any obtainable book not costing over $2.

For Three New Subscribers.

Either Longfellow's or Bryant's complete Poetical Works (illustrated); Darwin's Descent of Man; Tyndall's Fragments of Science; Lewes' Physical Basis of Mind; Frothingham's Transcendentalism in New England; Shakespeare's Complete Works; Frothingham's Life of Theodore Parker; or any obtainable book not costing over $3.

For Five New Subscribers.

Either Pierce's Memoirs and Letters of Charles Sumner; Emerson's Prose Works; Buckle's History of Civilization; Spencer's Psychology; Humboldt's Cosmos; Fluke's Cosmic Philosophy; Johnson's Oriental Religions. Vol. I., on "India"; Vol. II., on "China"; or any other obtainable book not costing over $5.

For Ten New Subscribers.

Either Webster's or Worcester's Dictionary (unabridged); Longfellow's Complete Works (300 illustrations, full gilt); either Dickens' or Waverley Novels, complete in six volumes, and illustrated; Strauss' New Life of Jesus; or any other book or books not costing over $12.

WHICH PROMOTES IMMORALITY— "INFIDELITY" OR CHRISTIANITY?

ASTOUNDING FACTS ABOUT TRINITY CHURCH.

By Christianity we mean the dogmatic, historical, and practical religion of the Christian Church, as codified and expounded in its creeds, preached in its pulpits, and illustrated in its own corporate acts and the acts of its members. We disregard all the minor differences of the sects, and consider only that in which they substantially agree; and we equally disregard all the attempts of confused, half-emancipated thinkers to invent a new definition of Christianity independent of its history and creeds. This religion is one of INFALLIBLE AUTHORITY, whether represented by the Pope, the Bible, or whatever else.

By Free Religion we mean what the churches mean by "Infidelity"—the unsystematized thought of those who resist the arrogant claims and pretensions of Infallible Authority in all its Protean shapes, and form their religious beliefs, whatever they may be, in accordance with the principle of FREE THOUGHT. Although we hold that, if judged by the respective degrees of their loyalty to truth, Free Religion is "Fidelity" and Christianity itself is "Infidelity," we will accept in this article the designation fastened by Christian bigotry and insolence on all who refuse to bend the knee to Christian dogmatism. Waiving for the present our objections to the word in itself, we simply propose to ask this question: Which actually promotes immorality—Christianity itself or what Christians call Infidelity?

We should like rather to ask which promotes morality; but that is not the way in which the subject is forced upon public attention. It is the deliberate, settled, immemorial policy of the Church to accuse Infidelity, in all its forms, of a tendency to promote immorality, and of an actual, necessary influence in that bad direction. An indictment is filed against Infidelity, which all who are included in the class covered by that nickname repel as a slander; they cannot change the indictment, but must meet it as it is. We propose first to show that this accusation of fostering immorality is actually brought against Infidelity, and then to show that, in at least one conspicuous case, it is true of Christianity alone.

1. One instance of this accusation, which will be found repeated more or less explicitly by almost every well-known apologist of Christianity, is as good as a thousand; and it will be enough, therefore, to quote from the St. Louis Christian Advocate, the chief organ of Southern Methodism, which in its issue of November 14 contained an editorial "Open Letter to a Disbeliever." The passages here selected are no more remarkable than thousands of others, equally strong, which might have been quoted from other sources:—

You boast of the rapid spread of infidelity among us and hail it as a happy omen. In this your boast is well-founded, but neither proper nor delicate. Infidelity is being spread rapidly,—a fact to which no observant mind can be oblivious and no candid man will deny. It is being spread, and permeates high places and low places, and is perverting or rotting out those principles in our common nature which form not only the basis of good morals, but of civil, social, and domestic happiness as well. . . . Alas! sir, infidelity is "spreading," and in exact proportion to its "spread" is the increase of crime among us. . . . But in closing this, allow the writer to suggest what you would really and certainly do by the abolition of Christianity, if such abolition could by any possibility be effected. You would free the world from its abhorrence of vice; you would take away the strongest possible incentive to virtue, and you would bring back the depraved and disgusting morality, or rather immorality, of paganism; you would rob mankind of a firm assurance of another life and thereby despoil them of their patience, their humanity, their veracity, their charity, their chastity, and of all those virtues which soften, meliorate, and sublime our natures, and in their stead you would a second time open the box of Pandora and fill the earth with violence and cruelty to an extent that would uproot civil society and convert the world into a bedlam.

Enough. This charge of promoting immorality is the great Krupp gun of Christianity in its desperate conflict with modern science; and, every time it is discharged, the stunned people imagine that so terrific an explosion must certainly prove fatal to Infidelity. But the real effect of the firing is confined to the mistaken and injurious impression, made on the thoughtless public, that free thought is dangerous to morality and is therefore an enemy to society. Fear of the supposed immoral consequences of Infidelity, if this should be allowed to prevail generally, keeps thousands and thousands of persons in terrified submission to creeds which they would otherwise discard gladly. Let us, then, take one conspicuous test-case, and learn what it has to teach as to the respective influences of Christianity and Infidelity on the public morals.

2. Every high-minded man or woman will admit without hesitation that justice is an essential part of morality—that profound respect for equal rights (which is only another name for the Golden Rule common to Christianity and other religions) enters necessarily into the composition of every really moral character. To establish and maintain justice between man and man is surely one of the chief and most sacred moral duties of society; whatever favors the discharge of this duty promotes public morality,—whatever hinders the discharge of this duty is an enemy to public morality. There can be little discussion, if any, on points so plain.

Very well: Christianity has seized and desperately defends certain great privileges and advantages in the government, in persistent defiance and contempt of justice between man and man. It arrogates the right to tax every citizen for the support of its own gospel, no matter whether he believes in this gospel or not. It persists stubbornly in this great injustice, refuses to hearken to any argument against it, consults its own selfish interest alone, robs every taxpayer in the community, and thus in a signal manner helps to demoralize society, of whose moral welfare it yet pretends to be the champion and bulwark!

On the other hand, Infidelity asks no privilege, favor, exemption, protection, or advantage at all; it cheerfully concedes the equal rights of Christianity, and would impose no disability on any one who bears its name; it asks nothing but to be released from the degrading and humiliating obligation of paying tribute to a religion which it believes in a large measure false. It advocates a kind of government which would establish justice between man and man, equal rights between Christian and Infidel, and thereby put public righteousness in the place of public oppression.

In this test-question of public justice, which of the two, Christianity or Infidelity, promotes immorality? Which of the two quickens, and which deadens, the public conscience? Which of the two shows a reverent heedfulness of the eternal laws of right and wrong, and is the more faithful observer of the Golden Rule?

3. But many persons are apparently unable to see clearly in any moral question which does not involve dollars and cents; they consider it very absurd and unreasonable that Infidels should object to being indirectly taxed for the support of Christianity, and jump to the conclusion that, because they cannot see the wrong, therefore no wrong has been done. For all such persons as cannot see any inherent wrong in the non-taxation of church-property, we now publish certain amazing and damning facts about Trinity Church in New York city, new at least to us, which ought to sweep away all church-exemptions in a sudden and irresistible whirlwind of public indignation. These facts we have learned on private testimony so direct and precise, and from a witness so careful, truthful, and honorable, that we are willing to vouch for the accuracy of what we now proceed to state, and to challenge denial from the Christian press of the country.

I. Trinity Church owns a vast amount of real estate in New York city, lying compactly between Broadway and the North River, and extending nearly two miles in length and from one-fourth to three-fourths of a mile in breadth. The whole district enclosed by a line running eastward from the North River through Cortland Street to Broadway, thence northward seven squares to Warren Street, thence one square westward to Church Street, thence eleven squares northward to Canal Street and (continuing on Green Street) seven squares still northward to Amity Street, thence six squares westward to Sixth Avenue, thence four squares northward to Greenwich Avenue, and thence seven squares south-westward on Christopher Street, where the line strikes the North River once more—all this immense district, lying in the most valuable part of the city, belongs to Trinity Church, together with considerable territory south of Cortland Street concerning the exact boundaries of which we are left in some doubt. The value of this enormous amount of real estate is, at a low valuation, fully Seventy Millions of Dollars; and, if we correctly understand our informant, Trinity Church pays no tax on the land itself, though the lessees pay taxes on the buildings they have erected upon it, under long leases.

II. Now it is worth while to inquire how this colossal property earns its exemption from taxation—how it pays to New York city an equivalent in "good moral influence" for the One and Three Quarters Millions of Dollars which it compels the rest of the city to pay as annual taxes in its stead! The great argument urged by all the defenders of church-exemption is that, by exempting churches from taxation, the community saves more in diminished expenses for courts and prisons than it relinquishes by remitting the taxes on church-property. It is plain, therefore, that Trinity Church must exert a prodigious moral influence in repressing drunkenness, licentiousness, etc., in New York, in order to save so vast a sum to the city annually.

What is the actual fact? This—that Trinity Church, by the use it permits to be made of the land it rents to its tenants, is the greatest feeder of vice in the whole city! According to the official records in the offices of the Chief of Police and the Excise Commissioners, the real estate of Trinity Church supports Seven Hundred and Sixty-Four Liquor Saloons, or "gin-mills," and Ninety-Six known Houses of Prostitution (ninety-two white and four colored), with many others suspected to be such! Who can estimate the annual expense entailed on the city by all these haunts of vice in its lowest forms? Not we, assuredly; but it must be simply enormous. Yet Trinity Church is exempted from taxation, forsooth, because it is a "bulwark of morality," and officiates in this capacity by pandering to the most depraved appetites of the worst classes of the city!

All this infamy is a legitimate result of the non-taxation of church-property; and similar or even worse results will certainly follow everywhere, if the original evil root out of which they grow is suffered to remain untouched. One wickedness begets another; the crime of robbing the whole people for the purpose of paying the just taxes of the Christian Church recalls with a long train of avenging curses on the head of the community which has committed and still commits it. If the churches raised their voices in favor of their own taxation, this just measure of redress for a grievous wrong could be carried at once; and then we should be the first to declare that they had rendered, by so disinterested an act, a great, noble, and conspicuous service to the public morals. But how is it? They first debauch the public conscience till it cannot distinguish right from wrong in this matter; and then they employ their ill-gotten gains, wrung from the great stupid public which submits in silence to be plundered and fleeced for Christ's sake, in squandering millions on luxurious church buildings, pampering the pride and exclusiveness of those who frequent these "religious club-houses," and making Christianity so exclusively a rich man's religion that the poor and the lowly turn away from it in bitterness of soul. Nay, let him who has accumulated a vast property go to Trinity Church to learn how Seventy Millions of Dollars can be made most effective in demoralizing the community, over whose morals it stands guard as the wolf stands guard over the lamb. Verily, the end of these iniquities is not doubtful. The world with its keen, cold eyes is quite able to see through all this nauseating hypocrisy; it is sure to penetrate the sham of a religion which makes its ostentatious zeal for "morality" the plea for getting exemption from taxation for its gin-mills and brothels. It is sure to ask for a better religion at last. Yes! If the churches are self-deluded in this matter, the big world outside has its own answer to the question: "Which promotes immorality, Christianity or Infidelity?" And its answer is not that of the churches!

EXTRACTS AND NOTES.

ASPASIA.

A talented and accomplished lady writes me thus:—"I find in Chambers' Encyclopædia that the common error in regard to Aspasia originated in the fact that foreign women (Aspasia was a native of Miletus), whatever their character, were without esteem in Athens; and their children, though begotten in wedlock, were held illegitimate. I have been moved to write, because of a passage in your lecture at Denver from which I inferred that you shared the common notion. Enough bad women have had illegitimate influence in politics; but, if Aspasia was worthy, let us not class her with such, even in our thoughts."

The above estimate of the moral character of Aspasia is sustained by Dr. Ernst Curtius, one of the most learned and most impartial of the historians of Greece. Of Aspasia, who was a citizen of Ionia, a Greek State in Asia Minor, he speaks thus:—

"She came to Athens at a time when everything new and extraordinary, everything which appeared to be an enlargement of the limits of ancient usage, a step forward, and a new acquisition, was joyously welcomed. Nor was it long before it was recognized that she enchanted the souls of men by no mere arts of deception. Hers was a lofty and richly-endowed nature, with a perfect sense of all that is beautiful, and a harmonious and felicitous development. For the first time the treasures of Hellenic culture were found in the possession of a woman, surrounded by the graces of her womanhood,—a phenomenon which all men looked upon with eyes of wonder. She was able to converse, with irresistible grace, on politics, philosophy, and art, so that the most serious Athenians—even such men as Socrates—sought her out in order to listen to her conversation. But her real importance for Athens began on the day when she made the acquaintance of Pericles and formed with him a connection of mutual love; for the association into which Pericles entered with her for life proves that it was not sensual love, or a passing excitement, upon which this connection was based. It was a real marriage, which only lacked the civil sanction because she was a foreigner; it was an alliance of the truest and tenderest affection, which death alone dissolved,—the endless source of a domestic felicity which no man needed more than the statesman who lived retired from all external recreation, and was unceasingly engaged in the labor of his life. Thus the foremost woman of her age lived in the society of the man whose superiority of mind had placed him at the head of the first city of the Hellenes, in loyal devotion to her friend and husband; and although the mocking spirit of Athens eagerly sought out every blemish which could be discovered in the life of Pericles, yet no calumny was ever able to vilify this rare union and to blacken its memory." (Hist. vol. 2, p. 508: edition Scribner & Co., 1871.)

But Lecky, speaking of the different classes of women in ancient Greece, says that "in general, the only women who attracted the notice of the people were the hetærae, or courtesans"; that "the most virtuous men habitually and openly entered into relations which would now be almost universally censured"; that "a concurrence of causes conspired to bring a certain section of courtesans into a position they have in no other society attained. . . . The courtesan was the one free woman of Athens, and she often availed herself of her freedom to acquire a degree of knowledge which enabled her to add to her other charms an intense intellectual fascination. Gathering around her the most brilliant artists, poets, historians, and philosophers, she flung herself unreservedly into the intellectual and æsthetic enthusiasms of her time, and soon became the centre of a literary society of matchless splendor. Aspasia, who was as famous for her genius as for her beauty, won the passionate love of Pericles. She is said to have instructed him in eloquence and to have composed some of his most famous orations. She was continually consulted on affairs of State; and Socrates, like other philosophers, attended her assemblies. Socrates himself has owned his deep obligations to a courtesan named Diotima."

Plutarch says that Aspasia's business was neither decent nor honorable. Grote mentions the statements of Plutarch and Athenæus as to this disreputable business, but fails to find any better evidence of their truth than a passage which one of them gives from one of the comedies of Aristophanes, about the reading of which passage there is some dispute.

B. F. U.

AN ORTHODOX VOICE FOR JUSTICE.

Under the heading, "Religious Liberty Violated," the National Baptist uttered a brave and noble protest against Sabbatarian legislation, which deserves especial honor from an Orthodox journal, and which we would recognize most cordially and admiringly. This is the article:—

In Crawford County, on the 16th of June, two citizens were prosecuted for working in the planing-mill, and for cultivating potatoes on Sunday, the 10th of June. The prosecution failed to show that any religious meeting was disturbed; in fact there was no meeting within several miles. It was shown by the defendants that they were connected with the Seventh-Day Baptists; that they religiously observed the seventh day as the Scripture Sabbath, abstaining on that day from all labor. It was further shown that in 1880 Congress refused to pass a law forbidding the transmission of mails on Sunday, alleging that it was because, as they say, "Sunday is not known in that instrument (the Constitution) as a holy day. The conscience of the Jew or Seventh-Day Baptist is as sacred as that of the first-day man; and the conscience of the individual is as sacred as that of the whole community. To pass such law would be legislating on religion, and therefore unconstitutional."

All in vain; the defendants, being Mr. Daniel Waldo, a most quiet and respectable citizen, and his hired man, Albert Wood, were fined $4 each, with imprisonment if the fine was not paid.

We need not say to our readers that here was a gross violation of religious liberty, the real principle of which is that each person shall enjoy to the full the right to follow his own conscience, or his inclination, or his judgment, in the matter of religious observance or non-observance, so as he do not interfere with the rights of his neighbors. These men did not in the least interfere with the rights of others. Had they run a planing-mill in the heart of a crowded city it would have been different. They had a right to observe the first day or not to observe it; they had a right to observe the seventh day or not to observe it.

Imagine the situation reversed. Imagine the Seventh-Day Baptists in the majority, and suppose that we were fined and imprisoned for working on Saturday. Suppose that we were in Turkey and were imprisoned for working on Friday. Suppose that we were in Spain and were punished for working on a Saint's day. The principle is the same.

We trust that at each association of Baptists the matter will come up, and that a united protest will proceed from all our people. We have ever demanded liberty of conscience, not for ourselves alone, but for all men, of whatever creed and of no creed. Let us urge the matter on our law-makers. We hope that another session of the Legislature will not pass before the oppressive and unjust law is swept from the statute-book.

Communications.

WISCONSIN LIBERAL NOTES.

As has already been noticed in THE INDEX, the Liberal League of Milwaukee is now auxiliary to the National League, having received a charter. A constitution has been framed, according in the main with the form suggested by the board of directors of the National League for the use of local auxiliary leagues, and this is now an organization ready to perform its legitimate work. The immediate work seems to indicate itself in the direction of church taxation, and prompt, active measures will be taken to bring the subject before the people and raise the question in legislation this winter. A discussion was held at the last meeting of the League with reference to the matter of memorializing the legislature. It was urged that possibly other methods than that of petitioning might be employed with better effect in influencing public sentiment, and also might bring more weight to bear upon the legislative body.

Public sentiment is undergoing rapid changes upon this subject, and the arguments in favor of church taxation appeal forcibly to persons whose sense of justice and common sense are not warped by self-interest.

Rev. G. E. Gordon, of this city, has prepared a paper upon the subject, which will soon be read at the Academy of Music, under the auspices of the Liberal League. This paper will also be pushed as far as practicable into the newspaper press of the State, together with such other matter as shall bear directly upon the subject, with the intention of influencing public sentiment to a degree that shall tell upon the legislative body at the coming session.

The clauses of the Constitution, approved by the National League, relating to social work were stricken out, not seeming to be practicable at present. I for one, however, have hope that the League will grow speedily to proportions which shall warrant the organization of fraternities, etc. The secularists of Milwaukee are an unnumbered multitude. It needs the rallying standard of active social effort to be able to number them and to count them in. The tendency of freethought is here, as elsewhere, toward isolation, individualism. The force of all movements to liberate thought is unavailing without united action. There is an almost stolid indifference with regard to the interests of the children of freethinkers. Some sort of ethical instruction combined with social activities seems imperative, and there is not a Sunday-school in our city which is up to the requirements of radical parents; not one where I, at least, could conscientiously send my children. Many parents, who entertain ultra opinions on religious questions, act very timidly and compromisingly with their children. Intellectual freedom is one thing for a man or for a woman, but quite another thing for the youth of the family. It would not appear to be a very difficult task to give to a child a clear idea of the Bible, for instance, as we ourselves see it, or a notion of the growth of religions of the revolution of goodness, etc., etc., and thereby save it from the confusions and uprootings to which the inquiring mind is always subject, when it comes to a consideration of such questions. I hope to see the ideal Sunday-school grow out of Liberal League Fraternities,—a Sunday school shorn of sickly sentiment, and promoting the finest ethical culture. Meanwhile we must be willing to do what can best be done, and do that with all our might.

It would be unjust to omit mention in this connection of the Annual Conference of Unitarian and Independent Churches, held in the city of Jamestown, commencing Tuesday, Dec. 18, and continuing three days, which I had the pleasure of attending. The doors of this conference were literally open for all who desired to take part in the services. Narrowness and bigotry were nowhere visible. The essays which were read covered a variety of subjects; and without any design—each essayist having chosen his own subject without reference to any general idea,—there was in each an emphasized expression of the theory of evolution,—William C. Gannett, of St. Paul, closing the list with one of his clear-cut, characteristic essays, in which he traced the growth of our nineteenth-century rationalism, from the sun-god and human sacrifices worship through its various stages of development, likening this growth to that of a plant, whose outcome was a fragrant flower. From rootlet to blossom, a unity; from Judaism to free religion, a unity.

At this conference, Rev. G. E. Gordon read his paper upon church taxation, and the following reso-itions were presented by him and adopted with enthusiasm, and without a single voice of dissent:—

WHEREAS, We believe that no part of the money raised by local or general taxation should be used for other than strictly public purposes; and,

WHEREAS, No institution can be considered public unless it is the property of, unless it is supported by, the State; and,

WHEREAS, Churches are not in any such sense public institutions; and,

WHEREAS, We believe that Church and State are forever divided in America; and,

WHEREAS, Exemption of churches from taxation is a modified form of a union of Church and State; and,

WHEREAS, We believe that all taxation finds its reason alone in the consent of the taxed; and,

WHEREAS, The forced indirect taxation of the whole people, for the support of institutions which do not represent this universal consent, is contrary to this equal foundation for just taxation; and,

WHEREAS, We believe that whatever the State protects should contribute to the expense of that protection; and,

WHEREAS, Churches do not contribute for the expenses of their protection, in tangible and understandable "value received"; and,

WHEREAS, We believe that exemption of churches from taxation is injurious to the best interests of religion; therefore,

Resolved, That the members of this Conference of Unitarian and Independent Societies, in their individual capacity, hereby express their belief that churches and church property should no longer be exempted from taxation.

Resolved, That a commission of five persons—consisting of Rev. G. E. Gordon, Milwaukee; Rev. H. M. Simmons, Kenosha; Mr. J. A. Treat, Sharon; Mr. E. B. Winslip, Racine; and A. M. Thayer, Sparta—be appointed to prepare and present to the next Legislature a memorial praying for a law ordering the taxation of all church, sectarian, and ecclesiastical property.

A committee of five was formed to carry out the spirit of the resolution. This comprised the main missionary work of the convention.

All Souls Church, where this conference was held, has no creed or formula of membership. It signified willingness to cooperate in all laudable efforts to promote the welfare of the society in all that is required. There is no celebration of the Lord's Supper, no rite of baptism. The so-called pastor speaks once on Sunday to a large audience upon topics of the times, and is oftentimes applauded with the enthusiasm sometimes manifest in a lecture-room. The parlors of the church are used for dancing, and the earnestness of these liberal people is acknowledged to exceed that of the most Orthodox societies in all social and charitable work. It is almost an ideal church you see, stamped withal by a most beautiful, or religious, or good (just as one pleases to call it) spirit.

I must mention also another society, which was represented at the conference by its leader,—a young man of broad notions and fine talents. The basis of this society is simply a few statements relative to the supremacy of reason, the importance of conduct; and the only bond uniting the society into a working organization is a recognition of these and an expressed determination to endeavor to elevate the standard of character.

Mrs. Celia P. Woolley, one of your most valuable correspondents, was in attendance, and read a fine paper upon "Woman's Relation to the Church and State."

I ought perhaps to beg pardon for taking so much space with these conference notes; but I cannot help fancying that such gatherings are quite significant of the rapid changes for the better in our liberal churches. This broadening of many of them stands out in bold relief, as contrasted with the narrowness of many others that still adhere to superstitious prejudices, while professedly announcing themselves as liberal Christian organizations. Symptoms of real healthy, religious growth are rare enough to deserve recognition, and find a place among our liberal notions.

I cannot close without just alluding to the Sunday Lecture Society of Milwaukee which this season has proved a success,—quite astonishing in the points of finance and of attendance. The Academy of Music is crowded each Sunday. The entertainments are purely of a popular character, not aiming at instruction. Only the most popular and successful talent is employed. High prices are paid for these, and the admission fee is but twenty cents; yet it pays all expenses. Money-making is not the object of the society. It is that of affording to a large class of people the choicest platform entertainments at a price which all can afford to pay. It is also doing a good deal to rid the community of puritanical and Sabbatarian nonsense, and giving refined recreation to the work-a-day people, whose Sunday is their only rest-day and holiday.

MILWAUKEE, Dec. 17.

"FREEDOM THE FRIEND OF PURITY."

TO THE EDITOR OF THE INDEX:

Dear Sir,—One of my many reasons for giving you a title which you do not claim, that of Christian (not, of course, in an ecclesiastical sense), is your gentlemanly regard for the feelings of the better part of our society in all matters related to chastity. On this subject the professions of many are, I am convinced, mere sham; but as for you, I sincerely believe that your inner feelings are even stronger than your words. You have kept THE INDEX singularly purer than many religious journals—from all sensational matter. If anything has ever appeared to which I must take strong exception, I have been satisfied that it had obtained a place in your columns on the ground of free discussion, but on the strict condition of speaking to the mind alone, and containing not the slightest appeal to animal passions. Your editorial article, "Freedom the Friend of Purity" (INDEX, Dec. 20, 1877), is a new proof of my having not misunderstood you; yet while I have praised our society, and you for upholding her decent feelings, I do not mean to imply that you or our society have a clear idea of the principle on which those decencies rest, or that the conclusions of both you and our society are correct in the sense of completeness.

Your long and valuable quotation from Mr. Comstock's Boston speech clearly proves two things at any rate. First, it reveals a frightful and universal unchastity among the male and female minors of the whole country. Secondly, it manifestly refutes your third conclusion, "that Anthony Comstock, having been proved unfit to exercise the great powers of his present appointment, . . . ought to be summarily dismissed." Evidently there is not in the United States a man whose labors we can less afford to spare, even if in some instances he has collared the wrong man. The reason why his efforts will fail is, that they do not take the evil in its source. The corruption which he depicts is not created by the trade by which the demands of that corruption are supplied. It is the trade that is called into existence by the corruption itself. The corruption, and the trade which it engenders, are the creature of our statutory laws on the condition of minors. This operation of our statutes, entirely unforeseen to the legislator, is clear as daylight to whosoever has the joint experience of the confessional and of residence among nations of a less artificial civilization. This blunder of our statutes, whose good intention I do not question, limits itself to two points, which being corrected the evil will disappear.

1. The first blunder consists in the power given to parents to put obstacles, more or less absolute according to the various American States or European countries, to the marriage of their puber children under twenty-one years of age. No law can morally give such power to parents or guardians, or to any one, over persons of such age as to be able by the fact and manifest intention of Nature, to love and be loved, to have children, and love and support them. Our laws granting such power to parents and guardians over free white citizens, whether male or female, are entirely parallel with the laws of the late slave States, the general effect of which was, with varieties of form and degree, to recognize no marriage of slaves which the master was bound to recognize or respect. The result was that, among the slaves debarred of legitimate satisfaction and honorable family ties, the most frightful immorality prevailed. The same cause, as your quotation of Mr. Comstock shows, produces exactly the same result among our minors of both sexes.

2. The second point, in our statutes, which requires immediate repeal, is the placing of puber minors under the control of their parents or guardians with regard to property matters. I do not speak of inherited property. I am in no hurry to allow a boy of fifteen to spend in revelry in two years the property which the wisdom of his ancestors has gathered in two hundred years; and should I recommend any amendment of our laws in this respect, it would be to prevent not only minors but anyone from squandering in useless expenses the capital amassed by others through years of a better conduct. But I want all pubers, minors and others, to have the free control of their labor and of its earnings. Without this second amendment of our statutes, the first amendment, allowing puber minors to marry, would in practice prove a delusion and a farce. To marry is to found a home. A home must be supported by the product of labor; the preparation of a home is the product of labor. A laborer, the products of whose labor another man can at any moment step in and confiscate, has no prospects of support on which to found a home. Until the law guarantees to him such prospects, what he wants is not a wife to make a pauper of, but a rifle to defend his rights; and puber boys who do not lay by their dimes to buy the rifle will lay them by for investment in such literature and such implements of which Mr. Comstock has raised the price by destroying of them twenty tons.

Of the two amendments which I propose, the joint effect will be to make early instead of late marriage the universal rule. Young puber people will, then as now, become fond of each other and wish to go to housekeeping together. The execution of this legitimate wish the law, instead of preventing, punishing, or obstructing, will simply record, by allowing any clergyman or proper officer to solemnize the marriage. But will that put a stop to all evils? Will all early marriages prove to have been suitable marriages? Will well-married people in all cases duly appreciate their happiness and never sin against it? Will young wives never grow old before their husbands, or young husbands before their wives? Will there remain no place for temptation and unlawful satisfaction?

There will still be temptation and sin, but, in the main, in another part of life, of different character, and with entirely different individual and social results. The early part of life will be generally pure. The married population will be composed not of reformed libertines, who once patronized the literature and manufactured articles which Mr. Comstock confiscates, but of persons who never knew what prurieny was, whose first becoming aware that they might have passions was a feeling of love for each other, an honorable feeling which has been gratified. Unlawful pleasures, if they ever come to be desired, will be the lot of a later part of life, a part of life when passions are less strong, and when the un-beauty of their only possible satisfaction will have an additional effect in deadening them. Fornication, adultery, and the kindred sins will be the foulsome appanage of dirty old men and dirty old women whom no number of years could ever teach to be wise. Pouch! They will be the scorn of youth. What blooming lassie, who can by her smiles induce a lad of her age to work and make a home for her, would ever become the prey of a dirty old man? What young man will ever think of taking for his wife a reformed rake who, during years of puber school-girlhood, has revelled in obscene books and plates and in disgusting physical satisfactions, when he can have direct from her mother's hand, and lead to God's altar, and thence to his manly home, a younger girl, a virgin undefiled? Yet, as I have admitted that there will be misfits here as in everything else, the following point at least will be secured, and in its social and lasting results I affirm its incalculable value: the children to be born will be the children of youth. These children of a pure bed will remain to continue the nation, even if, after their birth, their parents' wedded life, pure at first, has at last come to a shipwreck. As the production of offspring is not specially the aim of debauchees, those last dishonored years will wither away fruitless: blotted out of the book of life forever, as I have no doubt will be ultimately eliminated from mankind, through the survival of the fittest alone, the offspring of any person who before the birth of his children practiced unchastity in any form.

That the results of Mr. Comstock's efforts, incomplete and valuable as they are, should be obtained at such a cost as that of one of our most precious liberties, the liberty of the press, is a matter of as deep concern to me as to you. But there is a liberty more precious still than that of saying and printing what we think right: it is the liberty of doing what is right. This liberty our laws refuse to our puber minors, condemning them to a life of sin. Let us repeal those abominable laws, restore to Nature her rights, and we shall find "Freedom the friend of Purity." I am, dear sir, very truly yours,

JULIUS FERRETTE.

CAMBRIDGE, Dec. 21, 1877.

USEFUL KNOWLEDGE NOT OBSCENE.

MR. EDITOR:—

We have just read with profit your worthy article under the heading of "Freedom the Friend of Purity." You are right. A reliable teacher of bodily or mental health never has the least appearance of obscenity or blasphemy in his teachings.

A clear and correct distinction must be made, by competent authority, between the two classes,—the one fairly represented and protected, and the other prevented. To "index" is to "make known," to "point out" the facts as they occur. You faithfully do it. How can we be too radical? The actual state of society, fairly represented, is the basis of any reform it may need.

We want to be delivered from ignorance and its consequent oppression. Intelligence cannot be gained without fair comparison. The most radical reformers make the best contrast between fiction and fact, awaking the drones to action. Make men think, they will then act. We can trust the result. Real liberalism is to speak what you know to be truth, and assist others to do the same. Any person who is not ready to hear a plain statement of fact is not ready to reform. The true liberal desires knowledge on all subjects that lead to health, the type of holiness. Every person who cannot allow his pet ideas to be compared with those held by other teachers and thinkers, must not appear in a free meeting to exhibit them. Physiological teachers as a class are quite as moral and free from blasphemy or obscenity as the majority of professing Christians, who are too often ignorant of the proper use of their reproductive organs. Knowledge protects us from obscenity and blasphemy better than any other influence. Freedom of speech and freedom of the press are the best means of obtaining the necessary knowledge. No unjust, bigoted tool of anarchy should be the sole authority to prosecute anyone or everyone he may decoy, in a matter of so much importance. An educated man would not attempt to decoy any person. Honesty and justice wrong no person.

T. L. BROWN.

BINGHAMTON, N. Y., Dec. 22, 1877.

L. K. WASHBURN ON "FREE RELIGION."

EDITOR INDEX:—

Allow me to express my sincere thanks, in common, doubtless, with your thousands of readers, for the able and timely discourse on "Free Religion" by Rev. L. K. Washburn, appearing in THE INDEX of December 6. It presented cogently, clearly, and appositely the respective designs and ultimate aims of the two antagonistic phases of thought,—Christianity and Free Religion; and its strong, incisive, compact sentences, tersely and vigorously phrased, were aglow with words of wisdom, light, and spiritual beauty. Let the liberals of the land ponder well the indisputable truths embodied in the appended excerpts from this most excellent epitome of the religious status and the needs of the hour, and learn therefrom their duty in the crisis now dawning upon us:—

"The Christian's idea of religion is something that ought to suppress freethought and inquiry, get possession of the government, control legislation, govern the schools, regulate public libraries, and run the world generally. . . . The Christian is opposed to anybody else having anything to do with politics, literature, education, or religion."

"Free Religion stands for the eternal in religion, for the virtues that are common to all humanity. . . . It demands that all men shall have equal rights in the justice of man, and equal rights in the justice of God."

"I know that many regret that hard words are used against Christianity, and we regret that hard words must be used; but the hardness of the words is their truth. . . . This is the reason that Free Religion attacks Christianity: because the true interests of the soul demand it. It is the religious demand of the day, and we must not be false to truth out of respect to falsehood's gray hairs. THE ONLY SAFETY FOR LIBERTY AND TRUTH IS THE DOWNFALL OF CHRISTIANITY; AND THE ONLY WAY TO AVOID TAKING THE SWORD IN THEIR DEFENSE IN THE FUTURE IS BY BEING HONEST, AND FEARLESSLY SPEAKING THE TRUTH IN THE PRESENT. . . . Only the death of Christianity will give freedom to the world. Then our duty is to kill Christianity; kill it with a better religion; kill it with the truth,—that sword of God that sooner or later will sever every Christian church."

"Men say, 'Why attack the Church? Why say anything against Christianity? Wait, and everything will come out right.' But everything will not come out right, if we wait. . . . Shall we wait to do right? Is there any particular hour set apart for right-doing? Yes! It is this hour. . . . God never does man's work. Wait is not the word for earnest men, but Work. Let us have no compromise with wrong, no treaty with tyranny; but make wrong surrender to right, and tyranny abdicate in favor of justice."

"The religious demand of to-day is religious truth, and men who dare speak it. . . . If the truth should prove everything that we now hold holy and sacred false and base, we must still say, 'Let us have the truth.'"

WILLIAM EMMETTE COLEMAN.

PORT LEAVENWORTH, KAN., Dec. 11, 1877.

THE LIBERAL EDUCATION OF CHILDREN.

EDITOR INDEX:—

Liberalism, or freethought, in religion has never yet been so far organized that it could find the time it needs, and ought to give, to the proper religious education of the children of un-Orthodox parents. It has been so far too busy in its desperate hand-to-hand fight for liberty to speak its thoughts, to make any arrangements for the future.

But, nevertheless, this is one of the sub-questions which even now is sorely troubling many parental minds; and one of the questions which must take prominence in discussion whenever religious liberty is a real thing, and organization of free minds takes place. Those who remember dimly their own rigid bringing up in childhood have no desire to have their children's minds biased as were their own in the direction of orthodoxy. But they should beware, however, of falling into the opposite error of making liberalism, by the same means, as repugnant to these young minds by anything savoring of bigoted insistence on their children's acceptance of radical opinions upon religious subjects. From personal observation I sometimes fear that there are already, at this early stage of doubt of Christian dogmas, men who are so bitter in their opposition to Christianity as to be bigots in their unbelief, and so capable of doing wrong to their children by forcing them to accept their parents' disbelief on pain of parental displeasure without reference to the child's own proclivities or religious tendencies.

That the religious education of their children should be attended to by freethinkers of all grades is not a matter of doubt. To allow the churches to get the start of freethought in biasing these young minds is not to be thought of. But freethought and liberalism would be misnomers if the churches were not allowed an equal chance with such liberalism. It would, of course, be a more certain method of making bigoted, unreasoning opponents to Christianity to bring up children as far apart from all the influences of the Church as possible; to forbid the reading of the Bible, attendance at any church, or association with any rabidly religious person of any faith whatever; to allow no tracts or religious books, or stories filled with Christian thoughts to be read; to forbid attendance at revivals, Sunday-schools, or camp meetings. Such a course would most certainly tend to bring up a class of children to be men and women as bigoted, one-sided, and opinionative as the closest and most conservative Christian sect ever brought up in the blind bigotry of faith. But this is surely not one of the results we are striving for. I confess I fail to see any improvement in society which such a state of things could bring about. To exchange one rigid system for another is not, certainly, progression. I hope the liberals of to-day take a wider, more comprehensive view of things. The mission of freethought is not to make new ruts in old roads, as narrow and inconvenient as were the old, but rather to level all ruts into one broad road, wide enough and smooth enough for all to travel peaceably and happily thereon.

Therefore let the children be taught freely all systems, but let them be taught scientific fact as the test of all systems. Let them be their own judges as to the accuracy of those tests, and let the tests so made guide them whithersoever they will. Of course there are sure to be mistakes made; but these must be accepted with patience, for assuredly fewer mistakes will be made by this than by any other method, and the general effect will be to harmonize all religious ideas into one grand search for scientific truth.

Another thing is to be remembered. It is not the part of liberalism to make differences in beliefs, but rather to blend them all into one harmonious whole. To forbid the children of freethinkers (who are yet far in the minority) to mingle freely with the children of Christians in all their pursuits and aims, is to create social barriers, moral ostracisms, which will react in feelings of blind partisanship and embittered social relations. Let us do all we can to avoid exchanging the sweetness and innocence of childhood for feelings of enmity or ill-will because of different grooves of thought in the parents. Unless the freethinkers in a place become so far organized as to be able to sustain some kind of independent institution analogous to the Orthodox Sunday-schools, with all the attendant pleasures, let the little ones attend the Christian Sunday-school in company with their Christian playmates, and let the parents of such children bear their proportional part of the expense without grumbling. If the liberal parent has his children's welfare genuinely at heart, it will always be an interesting and profitable employment for him to inquire at the close of each Sunday into the teachings that have been inculcated in the lessons of the day, and point out all that is true and all that is fallacious in these teachings,—leaving the seed thus sown to germinate in its own time in the individual thought of the child. Better this course than to bring up a race of bigoted and precocious children, embittered against their fellows who chance to differ from them in opinion.

But as soon as liberalism has enough moral and financial strength to form itself into organizations, the children, who are to be the men and women of the future must not be forgotten. Liberal Sunday-schools must be organized for them with all the attractions which now win attendance at Christian Sunday-schools, and as much more as can be devised for giving truth in homeopathic doses, and "sugar-coated" withal. "Milk for babes, meat for strong men," is as true of the children of liberals as of Orthodox Christians. I have been not a little disgusted with most of the few attempts at liberal teaching to children. There has been, for the most part, such an utter lack of sympathy with the immature mind of childhood, such a bare, bald statement of things as could never win entrance to the imaginative, romantic idealism of childhood, that I have not been sorry that no real sympathy existed between the writers and the little ones for whom they wrote. It would be a horribly prosaic world if the children in it could swallow without a wry face such huge lumps of unseasoned wisdom. The intellect of infancy can no more digest or assimilate solid, un-garnished truths, than the stomach of childhood can digest the hearty, solid food of a strong, laboring man. Scientific truth to childhood must come as "the little leaven which leaveneth the whole lump," and the children's best teachers must be those who have something of the childlike spirit in them, as well as of intellectual acumen.

SARA A. UNDERWOOD.

THORNDIKE, MASS.

THE LIBERAL LEAGUE PLATFORM.

SOME SENSIBLE IDEAS IN RELATION TO IT BY A WESTERN UNITARIAN MINISTER.

EDITOR INDEX:—

Comparatively few persons as yet fully comprehend the breadth and depth of the National Liberal League platform. This is exemplified by the way some small section of the great liberal party takes it for granted that the platform was created for the especial benefit of its little clique, and therefore proceeds to appropriate it to its own use, excluding all others.

To-day I received an interesting letter from a leading Unitarian minister of the West, who has been the settled pastor of a respectable Unitarian society for a number of years, in which he says:—

"I understand that a movement looking towards the formation of a Liberal League here is already inaugurated by a few. No notice was sent to me or to my church, and so none of us were present. An attempt was made by some of the same to adopt a platform which would shut out all Spiritualists and Unitarians. So a materialist friend of mine told me to-day, and intimated that the proposition will be heavily 'sat down upon,' and that a league will be organized on the basis of the Rochester Platform, and that I shall be invited to participate in its organization."

"I am totally opposed to the union of Church and State in any respect, and believe most fully in the principles of the Rochester Platform. But my fear is that our Western 'liberals' are too illiberal and bigoted to unite on so sensible and practical a basis. I suppose the thing desired is to unite as far as possible all who are opposed to the Church and State idea. That will include not only Materialists, Atheists, and Spiritualists, but almost all Unitarians, many Universalists, and also many Baptists, Congregationalists, Christians, and some Presbyterians even in this city. I fear our liberals will not be wise enough to bring this about, chiefly because each will care more for his pet theory than for the main question whether we shall have the right to hold and to teach our individual opinions without interference from the State."

"There is more danger of State interference than most liberals are willing to admit. Point them to the signs of the times, and they laugh at you, and say: 'But see how the Orthodox churches are becoming liberalized! Lots and lots of the members don't believe in the creeds, and there won't be any orthodoxy in a few years.' The truth is, that the conclusions don't follow from the premises. These liberalized Orthodox people have no moral earnestness, or they would leave their church. Their liberalism amounts to nothing. By-and-by the earnest bigots will draw the lines tight, and these 'broad' ones will be whipped in to vote for the Church. There is certain to be a reaction, and the Church will demand more than ever before. I fear there is not moral earnestness enough in professed liberals to stand up for their rights when the struggle comes. It remains to be seen if they care enough for freedom to forget their personal dogmas in the fight for it."

"I don't know if the principles of the Rochester Convention are destined to succeed in America until liberals have felt the lash of ecclesiastical domination for a while. I feel confident that the principles will ultimately prevail, and I propose to stand for them to the best of my ability. I made as good a fight on the church taxation question as I could, last winter, when it was up before our legislature, but am bound to confess the liberals took little interest in the matter. They care more for party than for principle, or their votes belle them."

I think the above letter contains much truth worthy of the consideration of every professed liberal, and therefore I send it to THE INDEX for publication.

H. L. GREEN.

SILVER.

EDITOR INDEX:—

Although in our highly complex civilization all human questions are very much complicated in their practical or concrete aspect, the principles that underlie them are often simple when viewed in the abstract, and it is useful to recur to these fundamental laws.

In the last analysis, what ought money to do? Clearly, it ought to enable us to exchange labor or its products equitably.

What constitutes the exchangeable value of any product of labor? Evidently the amount of labor necessary to produce it.

What is it, then, that makes the exchangeable value of a bushel of wheat, for example, as many grains of gold as there are, say, in a gold dollar? Because, it is agreed, and so far as by our imperfect methods it can be, it is ascertained that it costs as many average hours of labor to produce a gold dollar as to raise a bushel of wheat. The reason, then, why a gold dollar has exchangeable value is, that it costs labor to produce it; and it is selected as a measure of the labor cost, or exchangeable value of other products, because it is supposed to be more uniform in its cost than other products of labor. There are other reasons why it is used for coining into money, which everybody knows.

But its use as a measure of the equitable value for exchange, of the products of labor, is only an approximation to exact justice; for no one product of labor can be a scientific, unvarying standard for the value of all other products or for labor itself. There is only one element that can be exactly measured; namely, the number of hours and parts of hours which make up the cost and the exchangeable value of any product of human labor.

It would take up too much space to enlarge on these axiomatic propositions; but we may apply them to the actual question of the use of silver as an additional factor in this already difficult financial problem of the hour.

Silver costs less in proportion to gold or wheat than formerly, because it takes less labor to produce it; and all the legislation of all the countries of the globe cannot alter this fact. I can understand the desire to do away altogether with the use of coin as money, for that is the tendency of the world's progress; and the more perfect the commerce and finance of any country becomes, the less use is made of the actual metals in proportion to the business done. Doubtless the time will come when all money will be purely representative, representing accurately and exchanging equitably labor and its products.

Meanwhile let us be consistent and honest. There is a vast amount of loose talk about the debtor and creditor classes, and the imputation made that the workingmen are the debtor class. Nothing could be further from the truth. Every manufacturer, every employer of labor, in city or country, is constantly indebted to his workmen for labor performed, in sums larger or smaller, according to how frequently pay-day comes round. The sums thus owed aggregate an enormous amount. Beside this great sum, large in the whole, and of immense consequence in its items, since it represents the daily bread, the life or death, in fact, of those to whom it is due, there are probably in this State alone not less than $100,000,000 owed by savings-banks to the workingmen.

To remonetize the silver dollar as it was, means giving these capitalist-debtors the power to pay these laborer-creditors nine-tenths of what they owe, and get a legal discharge. A worse robbery could not be devised. All prices would rise before wages would be increased to meet them, for wages are the last to feel inflation. When the adjustment finally came, the workingman would have suffered a large loss and be "as he was," so far as present food, clothes, and shelter are concerned.

It is true that to remonetize silver would put an enormous profit into the pockets of the silver-producing lords of Nevada if the United States would coin ninety cents' worth of bullion into dollars for them; and it would enable our emancipated nation to disgrace itself by paying its creditors in depreciated coin. But, if all the silver in the country were coined into dollars, it would not put any of them into empty pockets, or add one dollar to the circulation of the West. Neither would paying our bonds in silver put money in the pockets of those who own no bonds. Money either is actual capital (coin), or represents it. Countries which have capital, or saved labor, can have all the money or currency they need. Countries without saved capital can borrow if they have good credit, and may save capital, and have money of their own, if they have natural advantages, and if they work and spend less than they make. There is no other way.

F. S. C.

Advertisements.

THE PATRONAGE

of the liberal advertising public is respectfully solicited for THE INDEX. The attempt will be honestly made to keep the advertising pages of THE INDEX in entire harmony with its general character and principles, and thus to furnish to the public an advertising medium which shall be not only profitable to its patrons, but also worthy of their most generous support. To this end, all improper or "blind" advertisements, all quack advertisements, and all advertisements believed to be fraudulent or unjust to any one, will be excluded from these columns. No cuts will be admitted.

THE INDEX must not be held responsible for any statement made by advertisers, who will in all cases accept the responsibility for their own statements.

ADVERTISING RATES.

For 1 to 12 Insertions, 10c per line.	For 13 to 25 " "	For 26 to 50 " "	For 51 to 100 " "	For 101 to 200 " "	For 201 to 300 " "	For 301 to 400 " "	For 401 to 500 " "	For 501 to 600 " "	For 601 to 700 " "	For 701 to 800 " "	For 801 to 900 " "	For 901 to 1000 " "
10c	9c	8c	7c	6c	5c	4c	3c	2c	1c	1c	1c	1c

On half-column advertisements, a discount of 10 per cent. will be made; on full-column advertisements, a discount of 25 per cent.

On all advertisements for which cash is paid in advance, a further discount of 25 per cent. on the total, as above calculated, will be made. FRANCIS E. ABBOT, Editor.

TO ADVERTISERS.

The following states the experience of a successful Bookseller who has advertised in THE INDEX—

TOLEDO, Ohio, Sept. 26, 1873.

To THE INDEX ASSO., Toledo, O.:
Gentlemen,—Having had occasion to advertise in your paper during the past two years quite largely, I take pleasure in stating that I have always obtained very satisfactory returns—better in fact than from book advertisements in any other paper I have advertised in. Not only have I obtained immediate results, but orders have frequently been received months after the insertion of the advertisement, showing that your paper is kept on file and referred to by your readers.
Yours truly,
HENRY S. STEEDS.

Special arrangements will be made at reduced terms for long-time or extended advertisements. Address
THE INDEX,
No. 231 WASHINGTON STREET,
Boston.

CULTURED FREE THOUGHT.

The Index Association,

Office, No. 231 WASHINGTON ST., BOSTON, publish
THE INDEX,

A Weekly Paper devoted to Free and Rational Religion.

It is the object of THE INDEX to give public attention to the boldest, most cultivated, and best matured thought of the age on all religious questions, and to apply it directly to the social and political amelioration of society.

It is edited by FRANCIS E. ABBOT, with the following list of Editorial Contributors:—

O. B. FROTHINGHAM, New York City.
WILLIAM J. POTTER, New Bedford, Mass.
WILLIAM H. SPENCER, Haverhill, Mass.
Mrs. E. D. ORENEY, Jamaica Plain, Mass.
GEORGE JACOB HOLYOAKE, London, Eng.
DAVID H. CLARK, Florence, Mass.
Mrs. ELIZABETH CADY STANTON, Tena-ty, N.J.
J. L. STODDARD, Boston.
ELIZUR WRIGHT, Boston.
C. D. B. MILLS, Syracuse, N.Y.
W. D. L. SUEUR, Ottawa, Can.
BENJ. F. UNDERWOOD, Thorndike, Mass.
ALBERT WARREN KELSEY, St. Louis, Mo.

Every liberal should subscribe for THE INDEX as the best popular exponent of Religious Liberalism. Every Christian minister, and every thinking church-member, should subscribe for it, as the clearest, most candid, and most scholarly exposition of the differences between Free Thought and Evangelical Christianity, and as the best means of becoming well informed of the arguments and the movements which the Church will have to meet in the future.

Almost every number contains a discourse or editing article, which alone is worth the price of one year's subscription.

Prof. MAX MUELLER, of Oxford, England, in a letter to the Editor published in THE INDEX for January 4, 1873, says: "That the want of a journal entirely devoted to Religion in the widest sense of the word should be felt in America—that such a journal should have been started and so powerfully supported by the best minds of your country,—is a good sign of the times. There is no such journal in England, France, or Germany; though the number of so-called religious or theological periodicals is, as you know, very large." And later still "I read the numbers of your INDEX with increasing interest."

Send $3.50 for one year, including postage, or 6 cents for three months on trial.

Address THE INDEX,
No. 231 Washington Street, Boston.

PUBLICATIONS

FREE

RELIGIOUS

ASSOCIATION.

Freedom and Fellowship in Religion. A volume of ten essays upon speculative and practical problems of religion, by D. A. Wasson, Samuel Longfellow, Samuel Johnson, John Weiss, W. J. Potter, F. E. Abbot, O. B. Frothingham, J. W. Chadwick, T. W. Higginson, and Mrs. E. D. Cheney, and extracts from Addresses by Ralph Waldo Emerson, Lucretia Mott, Robert Dale Owen, Dr. Bartol, Wendell Phillips, Rabbi Wise, Horace Seaver, A. B. Alcott, Lucy Stone, Charles H. Malcom, Julia Ward Howe, and others,—all given on the platform of the Free Religious Association. Price (reduced) $1.50.

"One purpose of this volume is to give an answer to the question, What is the meaning of the Free Religious Association?"

Proceedings of Fifth Annual Meeting, 1873. 35 cents. (Four or more, 25 cents each.) Contains essays by J. W. Chadwick on "Liberty and the Church in America," by C. D. B. Mills on "Religion as the Expression of a Permanent Sentiment of the Human Mind," and by O. B. Frothingham on "The Religion of Humanity," with addresses by Rowland Connor, Celia Burleigh, Lucretia Mott, A. B. Alcott, O. A. Bartol, Horace Seaver, Alexander Loos, and others.

Proceedings of Sixth Annual Meeting, 1874. 35 cents. (Four or more, 25 cents each.) Contains essays by Samuel Johnson on "Freedom in Religion," and by John Weiss on "Religion in Freedom," with addresses by Wm. C. Gannett, Robert Dale Owen, T. W. Higginson, Samuel Longfellow, J. S. Thomson, F. E. Abbot, and Lucretia Mott.

Proceedings of Seventh Annual Meeting, 1874. 35 cents. (Four or more, 25 cents each.) Contains verbatim reports of President Frothingham's address on "The Validity of the Free Religious Platform," of Dr. Bartol's essay on "The Religious Signs of the Times," of Rabbi Sonnenschein's speech on "Reformed Judaism," and of the statements by Messrs. Calthrop, Abbot, and Higginson of their respective attitudes towards Christianity, as "Christian," "Anti-Christian," and "Extra-Christian,"—together with the Secretary's Annual Report, and letters from Keesh Chander Sen, Frederick Douglass, and D. A. Wasson.

Proceedings of Eighth Annual Meeting, 1875. 35 cents. (Four or more, 25 cents each.) Contains Essays by Wm. C. Gannett, on "The Present Constructive Tendencies in Religion," and by Francis E. Abbot, on "Construction and Destruction in Religion," and addresses by T. W. Higginson, Lucretia Mott, Chas. G. Ames, O. B. Frothingham, B. F. Underwood, S. P. Putnam, and E. S. Morse.

Proceedings of Ninth Annual Meeting, 1876. 40 cents. (Four or more, 25 cents each.) Contains a full abstract of the interesting discussion at the Business Meeting on the Practical Methods and Work of the Association; the annual report of the Executive Committee; address of the President, O. B. Frothingham; essay by James Parton, on "The Relation of Religion to the State" (or, as he styles it, "Cathedrals and Beer"), with addresses on the subject by Miss Susan H. Wixon and Rev. M. J. Savage; essay by Samuel Longfellow, on "The Relation of Free Religion to Churches," with the addresses that followed it by Prof. Felix Adler, Rev. Henry Blanchard, Rev. Brooke Herford, and John Weiss,—together with letters from Judge Doe, Rev. Joseph Cook, and others, invited to speak.

Proceedings of Tenth Annual Meeting, 1877. 40 cents. (Four or more, 25 cents each.) Contains Essays by Rev. Wm. B. Alger, on "Steps towards Religious Emancipation in Christendom," and by C. D. B. Mills, Esq., on "Internal Dangers to Free Thought and Free Religion"; Addresses by O. B. Frothingham, Wm. Henry Channing, Rabbi Lasker, Dr. J. L. Dudley, and T. W. Higginson; and tenth annual reports of the Executive Committee, Treasurer, etc.

For series of important Tracts see last page of THE INDEX.

These publications are for sale at the office of the Free Religious Association, 231 Washington Street, Boston. The Annual Reports for 1863 and 1871 cannot be supplied, and the supply of others previous to that of 1873 is quite limited. Orders by mail may be addressed either "Free Religious Association, 231 Washington Street, Boston," or to the Secretary, New Bedford, Mass.

WM. J. POTTER Sec. F. R. A.

INDEX TRACTS.

No. 1.—Truths for the Times, by F. E. Abbot, contains the "Fifty Affirmations" and "Modern Principles." Mr. CHARLES DARWIN, author of "The Origin of Species," says, in a letter to the editor not originally intended for publication, but subsequently authorized to be used: "I have now read 'TRUTHS FOR THE TIMES,' and I admire them from my inmost heart; and I agree to almost every word." New Edition. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00.

No. 2.—Fear of the Living God, by O. B. Frothingham, exposes the debasing character of the popular notions of God, and presents conceptions of him that are worthy of the nineteenth century. New Edition. Price 5 cents; 12 copies 50 cents.

No. 3.—Lecture on the Bible, by the Rev. Charles Voysey, of England, is an overwhelming demonstration of the imperfections and errors of the Bible, both in the Old and the New Testaments. New Edition. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.40.

No. 4.—Christian Propagandism, by F. E. Abbot, is an exposure of the weakness, costliness, and inefficiency of the System of Foreign Missions. Full of Figures, Facts, and Interesting Extracts. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00.

No. 5.—"God in the Constitution," by Rev. Arthur B. Bradford, opposes the proposed Theological Amendment to the United States Constitution. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00.

No. 6.—"The Sabbath," by Parker Pillsbury, denounces Sabbatarian superstition. New Edition. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00.

No. 7.—"Compulsory Education," by F. E. Abbot, maintains the right of every child to be educated, and the duty of the State to ensure it an education. Price 5 cents; 12 copies 50 cents.

No. 8.—The Present Heaven, by O. B. Frothingham, treats of a subject that interests everybody. New Edition. Price 5 cents; 12 copies 50 cents.

No. 9.—The Christian Amendment, by F. E. Abbot, shows the dangerous character of the attempt to interpolate the Evangelical Christian Creed in the U. S. Constitution. Price 5 cents; 12 copies 50 cents.

No. 10.—The Impeachment of Christianity, by F. E. Abbot. Fourth Ten Thousand. Sent for free distribution to any one who will distribute it, in packages of from five to one hundred copies.

No. 11.—The God of Science, by F. E. Abbot, attempts to show the real influence of modern science upon the idea of God. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00.

No. 12.—Is Romanism Real Christianity? Two essays by Francis W. Newman and F. E. Abbot. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00.

No. 13.—On the Vision of Heaven, by Prof. F. W. Newman, of England, analyses the Christian conception of Heaven. Price 5 cents; 12 copies 50 cents.

No. 14.—A Study of Religion: The Name and the Thing, by F. E. Abbot, attempts to show that the popular derivation of the word Religion is incorrect; that the popular conceptions of Religion itself are inadequate; and that a new conception of it, based on the Law of Evolution, consistent with absolute Freedom of Thought, and independent even of belief in God, is the necessary condition of the perpetuity of Religion among men. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00.

No. 15.—The Battle of Syracuse. Two Essays by Rev. James Freeman Clarke, D.D., and F. E. Abbot discussing the Authority of Christianity. Price 10 cents; 12 copies for $1.00. Address

THE INDEX, 231 WASHINGTON STREET,
Boston, Mass.

1 8 7 7.

THE INDEX, A Weekly Journal

DEVOTED TO
FREE RELIGION.
PUBLISHED BY THE
INDEX ASSOCIATION,

No. 231 Washington Street, Boston.

EDITOR:
FRANCIS ELLINGWOOD ABBOT.

EDITORIAL CONTRIBUTORS:
O. B. FROTHINGHAM, New York City.
W. J. POTTER, New Bedford, Mass.
W. H. SPENCER, Haverhill, Mass.
Mrs. E. D. ORENEY, Jamaica Plain, Mass.
GEORGE JACOB HOLYOAKE, England.
DAVID H. CLARK, Florence, Mass.
Mrs. ELIZABETH CADY STANTON, Tena-ty, N.J.
J. L. STODDARD, Boston.
ELIZUR WRIGHT, Boston.
C. D. B. MILLS, Syracuse, N.Y.
W. D. L. SUEUR, Ottawa, Can.
BENJ. F. UNDERWOOD, Thorndike, Mass.
ALBERT WARREN KELSEY, St. Louis, Mo.

THE INDEX aims—

To increase general intelligence with respect to religion:

To foster a nobler spirit and quicken a higher purpose, both in society and in the individual:

To substitute knowledge for ignorance, right for wrong, truth for superstition, freedom for slavery, character for creed, catholicity for bigotry, love for hate, humanitarianism for sectarianism, devotion to universal ends for absorption in selfish schemes.

In brief, to hasten the day when Free Religion shall take the place of dogmatism and ecclesiasticism throughout the world, and when the welfare of humanity here and now shall be the aim of all private and public activities.

In addition to its general objects, the practical object to which THE INDEX is specially devoted is the ORGANIZATION OF THE LIBERALS OF THE COUNTRY, for the purpose of securing the more complete and consistent secularization of the political and educational institutions of the United States. The Church must give place to the Republic in the affections of the people. The last vestiges of ecclesiastical control must be wiped out of the Constitutions and Statutes of the several States in order to bring them into harmony with the National Constitution. To accomplish this object, the Liberals must make a united demand, and present an unbroken front, and the chief practical aim of THE INDEX will be henceforth to organize a great NATIONAL PARTY OF FREEDOM. Let every one who believes in this movement give it direct aid by helping to increase the circulation of THE INDEX.

SPECIAL FEATURES.

The publication of a valuable leading paper or essay of a thoughtful character, in each issue, will continue to be one of the most marked features of THE INDEX.

Regular editorial contributions will continue to be furnished by the well-known eminent writers who have already done so much to give to THE INDEX its present high position. Other interesting correspondence, communications, extracts from valuable books and periodicals, and miscellaneous articles, will also be published; and such improvements will be made from time to time as circumstances shall render possible.

AGENTS.

Local Agents for THE INDEX are wanted in every city and town throughout the country. The most liberal terms are offered.

TERMS.

The price of THE INDEX is Three Dollars a year, payable in advance; and 20 cents postage for the year; and at the same rate for shorter periods. All remittances of money must be at the sender's risk, unless forwarded by cheque, registered letter, or post-office money order. The name, with address in full, must be accompanied with the money in each case.

Address THE INDEX,
No. 231 Washington Street, Boston.

POPULAR BOOKS,

SENT BY MAIL

A7

PUBLISHERS' PRICES!

ORDERS PROMPTLY FILLED.

NO EXTRA CHARGE FOR POSTAGE.

ANY BOOK in the subjoined List, or any other OBTAINABLE BOOK that may be desired, will be forwarded as promptly as possible on receipt of orders accompanied with the CASH.

Orders are respectfully solicited from all friends of THE INDEX.

	Price.
ALCOOTT (A. BRONSON). Tablets.....	1.50
Concord Days.....	1.50
Records of a School. A new edition.....	1.50
ALCOOTT (LOUISA M.). Little Women. Two vols.....	3.00
Hospital Sketches and Camp and Fireside Stories.....	1.50
An Old-Fashioned Girl.....	1.50
Little Men.....	1.50
My Boys, &c.....	1.50
Shawl-Straps.....	1.00
Work; A Story of Experience.....	1.75
ARABIAN NIGHTS' ENTERTAINMENTS.....	1.50
ARNOLD'S (MATTHEW) Essays in Criticism.....	2.00
New Poems.....	2.00
Literature and Dogma.....	1.50
ATREBAOCH (SMITHOLD). On the Heights. Vols. Eden; The Country-House on the Rhine.....	2.00
Edelweiss.....	1.00
German Tales.....	1.00
BACON'S Essays.....	1.25
BAGEHOT on the English Constitution.....	2.25
Physics and Politics.....	1.50
BAIN (ALEXANDER). Mental Science: A Compendium of Psychology and History of Philosophy.....	1.75
Moral Science: A Compendium of Ethics.....	1.75
The Senses and the Intellect. Third edition. 1 vol.....	5.00
BARTLETT'S Dictionary of Americanisms.....	2.50
BARTLETT'S Familiar Quotations.....	3.00
BARTOL (REV. O. A.). Radical Problems.....	2.00
The Rising Faith.....	2.00
BASTIAN (H. CHARLTON). The Beginnings of Life. 2 vols.....	5.00
BRACKETT (ANNA O.). The Education of American Girls.....	1.50
BROOKS (CHARLES T.). Translations. The Layman's breviary.....	1.25
The World-Priest.....	2.25
The Tall Student.....	.75
BUECHNER'S Force and Matter.....	3.25
BURKE (HENRY THOMAS). History of Civilization in England and France, Spain and Scotland. New edition of the entire work, with a complete index. 2 vols.....	6.00
CARLYLE'S Works. Cheap edition. Comprising the following: Miscellaneous Essays, 7 vols.; French Revolution, 3 vols.; Frederick the Great, 10 vols.; Cromwell's Letters, &c., 8 vols.; Sartor Resartus, 1 vol.; John Sterling, 1 vol.; Life of Schiller, 1 vol.; Past and Present, 1 vol.; Heroes and Hero Worship, 1 vol.; Latter Day Pamphlets, 1 vol. Any volume sold separately. 31 vols. London, 1871-3. Per vol.....	.90
CARPENTER (DR. W. B.). The Principles of Mental Physiology, with their Applications to the Training and Discipline of the Mind, and the Study of its Morbid Conditions.....	4.00
CHATELAIN'S Don Quixote.....	1.50
CHANNING (WM. ELLERY, D.D.). The Perfect Life. In Twelve Discourses. Edited from his manuscripts by his nephew, Wm. Henry Channing.....	1.50
CHANNING (WM. ELLERY). Thoreau: The Poet-Naturalist. With Memorial Verse.....	2.00
CHENEY (MRS. E. D.). Patience. A Series of Thirty Games for the Fireside.....	1.00
Comic Games. A new Series of Games for Parties, uniform with Patience.....	1.00
Billy Williams, the Mountain Girl. Illustrated.....	1.50
CLARKE (JAMES FREEMAN). Ten Great Religions.....	3.00
Common-Sense in Religion.....	2.00
CLARKE (DR. E. H.). Sex in Education.....	1.25
CLODD (EDWARD). The Childhood of the World.....	.75
COBBE (FRANCIS POWELL). Studies New and Old, of Ethical and Social Subjects. Darwinism in Morals, and other Essays.....	5.00
The Religious Demands of the Age.....	.50
CONWAY (MONOURE D.). The Earthward Pilgrimage.....	1.75
CORRELATION and Conservation of Forces: A Series of Expositions by Grove, Helmholtz, Mayer, Faraday, Liebig and Carpenter: with an Introduction by Edward L. Youmans, M.D. 1 vol.....	2.00
CULTURE DEMANDED BY MODERN LIFE: Its True Aims and Requirements. A Series of Addresses, by Tyndall, Huxley, Whewell, Faraday, Spencer, Draper, Youmans, Lyell, etc. Edited by Edward L. Youmans.....	2.00
DALL (MRS. CAROLINE H.). The College, the Market, and the Court; or, Woman's Relation to Education, Employment, and Citizenship.....	2.

Historical Pictures Retouched: a Volume of Miscellaneous. In two parts. Part I. "Studies, Pictures, and Fancies".....	1.
DARWIN'S Origin of Species.....	2.00
The Descent of Man. 2 vols.....	4.00
Journal of Researches.....	2.00
Emotional Expression of Man and the Lower Animals.....	3.50
The Variation of Animals and Plants under Domestication. 2 vols., illustrated.....	6.00
DESCARTES (RENE). Discourse on the Method of Rightly conducting the Reason and Seeking Truth in the Sciences.....	2.25
DICKENS' Child's History of England.....	1.50
DURING (JULIA). Philosophers and Fools. A Study.....	2.00
ELIOT'S (GEORGE) Novels. Household Edition. 3 vols., each.....	1.00
Compatriots.....	1.00
Adam Bede.....	1.00
Romola.....	1.00
The Mill on the Floss.....	1.00
Silas Marner and Scenes of Clerical Life.....	1.00
The Same. Library Edition. 2 vols.....	3.50
Middlemarch. 2 vols.....	3.50
Wife and Wisdom.....	1.25
The Spanish Gypsy.....	1.50
EMERSON'S (R. W.) Essays. First Series.....	1.50
Essays. Second Series.....	1.50
Miscellanies.....	1.50
Representative Man.....	1.50
English Traits.....	1.50
Conduct of Life.....	1.50
Poems. With Portrait.....	1.50
May-day and Other Pieces.....	1.50
Essays. Blue and Gold.....	1.25
Poems. Blue and Gold.....	1.25
Prose Works. 2 vols.....	5.00
Society and Solitude.....	1.50
EVANS (E. P., Ph. D.). First Historical Transformations of Christianity. From the French of Athanasius Coquerel the Younger.....	1.50
The Life and Works of Gotthold Ephraim Lessing. Translated from the German of Adolf Stahr. 2 vols.....	5.00
FARRAR'S Critical History of Free Thought, in reference to the Christian Religion.....	2.00
FRUERSAICH (LUDWIG). The Essence of Christianity. "George Eliot's" translation.....	3.00
FISKE'S (JOHN) Myths and Myth-Makers.....	2.00
Cosmic Philosophy.....	6.00
FROTHINGHAM (O. B.) Religion of Humanity.....	1.50
Child's Religion.....	1.00
Life of Theodore Parker.....	3.00
FULLER'S (MARGARET) Complete Works, including Memoirs by Emerson, Channing, and others. A new edition. 8 vols.....	9.00
GALTON (FRANCIS). Hereditary Genius. An Inquiry into its Laws and Consequences.....	2.00
GOETHE'S Faust. Translated into English Verse by Edward Taylor. 2 vols. Per vol.....	5.00
Elective Affinities.....	1.25
Wilhelm Meister. Translated by Thomas Carlyle. Portrait of Goethe. 2 vols.....	3.50
Herman and Dorothea. Translated by Ellen Frothingham.....	1.00
GREG'S (W. B.) Sentences of Life.....	2.00
Literary and Social Judgments.....	2.00
Creed of Christendom.....	7.00
GROTE'S LIFE. Compiled from Family Documents, Private Memoranda, and Original Letters to and from Various Friends. By Mrs. Grote. Second Edition. With Portrait.....	5.00
HAMERTON (PHILIP G.) A Painter's Camp. Book I. In England. Book II. In Scotland. Book III. In France.....	1.50
Thoughts about Art.....	2.00
The Unknown River.....	2.00
The Intellectual Life.....	2.00
Chapters on Animals.....	4.00
HAMILTON (GAIL). Child World. Part Second.....	1.00
Child World. Part First.....	1.50
HAMILTON'S Lectures.....	1.50
1. Metaphysical Lectures.....	3.50
2. Logical Lectures.....	3.50
HAWTHORNE'S (NATHANIEL) Works. New Illustrated Library Edition. Nine vols. Per vol.....	2.00
Twice-Told Tales.....	1.50
Mosses from an Old Manse.....	1.50
The Scarlet Letter, and The Blithedale Romance.....	1.50
The House of the Seven Gables, and The Snow Image.....	1.50
The Marble Faun.....	1.50
The English Note-Books.....	1.50
The American Note-Books.....	1.50
The French and Italian Note-Books.....	1.50
Our Old Home, and Septimus Felton.....	1.50
HIGGINSON'S (T. W.) On-Door Papers.....	1.50
Malbone. An Oldport Romance.....	1.50
Army Life in a Black Regiment.....	2.00
Atlantic Essays.....	2.00
Oldport Days.....	2.50
HOWELL'S (WILLIAM D.) Their Wedding Journey.....	2.00
Suburban Sketches.....	1.00
Venetian Life.....	2.00
Italian Journeys.....	2.00
A Chance Acquaintance.....	1.50
HUGO'S (V.) New Novel, "Ninety-Three".....	1.75
HUMBOLDT (ALEXANDER VON). Life of. Translated from the German. 2 vols., with three portraits.....	10.50
HUME'S (DAVID) Essays and Life.....	1.50
HUNT'S (MRS. HELEN). Verses.....	1.25
Bite of Travel.....	1.50
HUXLEY'S Man's Place in Nature.....	1.25
On the Origin of Species.....	1.00
More Criticisms on Darwin and Administrative Nihilism.....	.50
A Manual of the Anatomy of Vertebrate Animals.....	2.50
Lay Sermons, Addresses, and Reviews.....	1.75
INGELOW'S (JEAN) Poems.....	2.25
The Monitions of the Unseen.....	1.50
Songs of Seven.....	2.50
INGELOW'S (JEAN) Prose. Of the Skeltons.....	1.75
Stories for Stories.....	1.25
Stories told to a Child. First and Second Series.....	1.25
A Sister's Bye-Hours.....	1.25
Mopsy the Fairy: A Story.....	1.25
INGERSOLL'S (ROBT. G.) The Gods and Other Lectures.....	2.00
INTERNATIONAL SCIENTIFIC SERIES. No. I. Forms of Water, in Clouds, Rain, Rivers, Ice, and Glaciers. By John Tyndall.....	1.50
II. Physics and Politics; or, Thoughts on the Application of the Principles of "Natural Selection," and "Inheritance" to Political Society. By Walter Bagehot. I.

III. Woods. By Dr. Edward Smith.....	1.75
IV. Mind and Body. The Theories of their Relations. By Alex. Bain.....	1.50
V. The Study of Sociology. By Herbert Spencer, Esq.....	1.50
VI. The New Chemistry. By Josiah P. Cooke, Jr.....	2.00
VII. The Conservation of Energy. By Balfour Stewart, with an Appendix, treating of the Vital and Mental Applications of the Doctrine.....	1.50
VIII. Animal Locomotion; or, Walking, Swimming, and Flying, with a Dissertation on Aerostatics. By J. Helliott Pottgrew.....	1.75
IX. Responsibility in Mental Disease. By Henry Mandley, M.D.....	1.50
JERROLD (DOUGLAS). Fireside Salons. Mr. Chando's Breakfast Talk, and other Papers.....	1.50
JOHNSON'S (SAMUEL) Oriental Religions, and their Relation to Universal Religion. India.....	5.00
JOSEPHUS. The whole Works of Flavius Josephus, the Jewish Historian.....	2.50
JOWETT. The Dialogues of Plato. Translated into English, with Analysis and Introductions by B. Jowett, M.A., Master of Balliol College, Oxford, and Regius Professor of Greek. Four vols.....	12.00
KERE (ORPHEUS O.). Versifications, Poems, Patriotic, Sentimental and Humorous.....	2.00
LECKY (W. E. H.). History of the Rise and Influence of the Spirit of Rationalism in Europe. 2 vols.....	4.00
History of European Morals from Augustus to Charlemagne. 2 vols.....	6.00
LEGGE'S Confucius' Life and Teachings.....	2.00
Confucius and Chinese Classics.....	4.00
LESSING'S (G. E.) Nathan the Wise. Translated by Ellen Frothingham.....	1.50
LEWES' Physiology of Common Life. 2 vols. Biographical History of Philosophy, from its Origin in Greece down to the Present Day. 2 vols.....	1.00
Problems of Life and Mind. The Foundations of a Creed.....	3.00
LEWES (G. H.). The Story of Goethe's Life.....	1.50
LEWIN (REV. RAPHAEL, D.D.). What is Judaism? or, a Few Words to the Jews.....	1.00
LONGFELLOW'S (H. W.) Poems. Portrait.....	4.00
Prose Works. Portrait.....	4.00
LOWELL'S (J. R.) Poems. 2 vols.....	4.00
The Biglow Papers. First Series.....	1.50
The Biglow Papers. Second Series.....	1.50
Among my Books.....	2.00
My Study Windows.....	2.00
LOWELL (MRS. A. C.) Poems for Children.....	.75
LUBBOCK (SIR JOHN). Origin of Civilization, and the Primitive Condition of Man.. Pre-historic Times.....	2.00
LYELL'S Principles of Geology. 2 vols.....	8.00
MACDONALD (GEORGE) The Vicar's Daughter.....	1.50
MANN (HORACE). The Life of Horace Mann. By his Wife.....	3.00
Lectures and Annual Reports on Education. Annual Reports on Education, from 1839 to 1848.....	3.00
Thoughts Selected from the Writings of Horace Mann.....	1.25
MARTINEAU (JAMES) Essays, Philosophical and Theological. 2 vols. Per vol.....	2.50
MAURICE (REV. F. D.) The Ground and Object of Hope for Mankind.....	.75
MERIVALL'S (CHARLES) Conversion of the Roman Empire.....	1.50
Conversion of the Northern Nations.....	1.50
MILL (JOHN STUART). Dissertations and Discussions. 4 vols., each.....	2.25
The Examination of the Philosophy of Sir William Hamilton. 2 vols., each.....	2.25
The Positive Philosophy of Auguste Comte. Political Economy. New and revised edition.....	1.50
The Subjection of Women—Essay on Liberty—both in one vol.....	2.50
Representative Government.....	1.50
Autobiography.....	2.25
Memorial Volume. His Life and Works.....	1.0
Three Essays on Religion.....	2.50
MILKE (JOAQUIN) Songs of the Sierras.....	1.50
Songs of the Sun Lands.....	1.50
MIVART (ST. GEO.) On the Genesis of Species.....	1.75
MORLEY (PROF. JOHN). Voltaire.....	2.00
Bouscasson. 2 vols.....	5.00
MOULTON (LOUISE CHANDLER) Red-Time Stories.....	1.50
MUELLER (MAX, M.A.) Lectures on the Sciences of Language. First Series.....	2.50
The Same. Second Series.....	3.50
Chips from a German Workshop. Vol. I. Essays on the Science of Religion. Vol. II. Essays on Mythology, Traditions, and Customs. Vol. III. Essays on Literature, Biography and Antiquities. Three vols. Price per volume.....	2.50
Lectures on the Science of Religion.....	2.00
NASSBY (PETROLEUM V.) Swingin' Round the Circle.....	1.50
Mkroes from Kentucky.....	1.50
NEWMAN (FRANCIS W.) A History of the Hebrew Monarchy.....	4.50
Catholic Union: Essays towards a Church of the Future, and the Organization of Philanthropy.....	1.75
Theism, Doctrinal and Practical.....	4.25
PARKER (THEODORE) A Discourse of Matters Pertaining to Religion.....	1.50
Speeches, Addresses, and Occasional Sermons. 3 vols.....	4.50
Additional Speeches, Addresses, and Occasional Sermons. 3 vols.....	3.00
Critical and Miscellaneous Writings.....	1.50
Historic Americans. Franklin, Washington, Adams, and Jefferson. With an Introduction by Rev. O. B. Frothingham.....	1.50
The Trial of Theodore Parker for the Misdemeanor of a Speech in Faneuil Hall against Kidnapping; with the Defence.....	1.50
The two Christmas Celebrations.—A.D. I. and MDCCLV. A Christmas Story.....	.60
PARSONS (THEOPHILUS) The Infinite and the Finite.....	1.00
PHELPS'S (ELIZABETH STUART) The Gates Ajar.....	1.50
The Trolley Book.....	1.50
Men, Women, and Ghosts.....	1.50
Hedged In.....	1.50
The Silent Partner.....	1.50
What to Wear?.....	1.00
PROCTOR'S (ADELAIDE A.) Poems. Portrait, Cabinet Edition.....	2.00

PROCTOR (RICHARD A.) Other Worlds than Ours: the Plurality of Worlds studied under the Light of Recent Scientific Researches. With Colored Plates.....	2.50
Light Science for Leisure Hours. A Series of Familiar Essays on Scientific Subjects, Natural Phenomena.....	1.75
Essays on Astronomy: A Series of Papers on Planets and Meteors, the Sun, etc. With 10 Plates and 24 Woodcuts.....	4.50
The Moon, her Motions, Aspects, Scenery, and Physical Conditions, with Three Lunar Photographs and many Plates, Charts, etc.....	3.00
The Expansion of Heaven.....	2.00
RENAN'S Life of Jesus.....	1.75
ROSSETTI (CHRISTINA G.) A Shadow of Dante.....	2.50
SCHERLEN (H.) Spectrum Analysis, its Application to Terrestrial Substances, and the Physical Constitution of the Heavenly Bodies.....	6.00
SCIENCE PRIMERS: 1. Introductory. By Prof. Huxley, F.R.S.....	.50
2. Chemistry. By Prof. Boscawen.....	.50
3. Physics. By Balfour Stewart. With Illustrations.....	.50
4. Physical Geography. By Archibald Geikie, LL.D., F.R.S., flexible cloth.....	.50
SCOTT'S Waverley Novels. 23 vols.....	21.25
SCOTT'S (THOMAS) The English Life of Jesus. Second Edition.....	2.00
SMILES'S (SAMUEL) Self-Help.....	1.50
SPENCER (HERBERT) Education, Intellectual, Moral, and Physical.....	1.25
First Principles.....	1.50
Essays: Moral, Political, and Aesthetic.....	2.50
Illustrations of Universal Progress. A Selection of his best Papers.....	1.50
Social Statics; or, The Conditions Essential to Human Happiness Specified, and the First of them Developed.....	2.50
The Principles of Biology. 2 vols.....	3.00
The Principles of Psychology. 2 vols.....	5.00
Philosophy of Style.....	.50
Recent Discussions in Science, Philosophy, and Morals. New and enlarged edition.....	2.00
Sociology.....	1.50
Descriptive Sociology. Parts I, II, and III, each.....	1.00
Life, Correspondence and Ethics.....	4.00
Universal Progress.....	2.50
STOWE (HARRIET BEECHER) Pink and White Tyranny.....	1.50
Uncle Tom's Cabin.....	.50
STRAUSS (D. F.) The Old Faith and the New.....	1.00
New Life of Jesus. Authorized translation. 2 vols.....	12.00
TAINES'S (H. A.) History of English Literature. 2 vols.....	7.50
The Classic-Room Taine. History of English Literature. Abridged and Edited by John Fiske.....	2.50
TENNYSON'S (ALFRED) Poems.....	1.75
THACKERAY'S (W. M.) Novels. Household Edition, Complete in 6 volumes. Per vol.....	1.35
Vanity Fair.....	1.50
The Newcomes.....	1.50
Adventures of Philip Pendergast.....	1.50
The Virginians.....	1.50
Esmond, and Lovell the Widower.....	1.50
Miscellaneous Writings. Household Edition. Uniform with the Novels. Complete in 5 vols. With new Portrait. Per vol.....	2.50
This edition includes all the matter in the latest English editions, with many additions, thus making it, with the novels, the cheapest and most complete Thackeray in the market. 1. Barry Lyndon, Hogarty Diamond, &c. 2. Paris and Irish Sketch-Books, &c. 3. Snobs, Sketches, Denis Duval, &c. 4. Four Georges, Humors, &c. 5. Catherine, Christmas Books, and Unprinted Pieces.....
THAXTER'S (MRS. CELIA) Among the Isles of Shakspeare.....	1.50
THOREAU'S (H. D.) Walden; or, Life in the Woods.....	2.50
Excursions in Field and Forest. Portrait.....	2.00
The Maine Woods.....	2.50
Cape Cod.....	1.50
Lepidoptera.....	2.50
A Yankee in Canada.....	2.50
A Week on the Concord and Merrimack Rivers.....	2.00
TYLER (EDWARD B.) The Early History of Man.....	2.50
Primitive Culture. 3 vols.....	6.50
TYNDALL (JOHN). Faraday as a Discoverer.....	1.50
Fragment of Science for Unscientific People.....	2.50
Light and Electricity.....	1.25
Hours of Exercise in the Alps.....	2.50
Heat as a Mode of Motion.....	2.50
On Sound.....	2.50
Radiant Heat.....	5.00
Forms of Water.....	1.50
Lectures on Light.....	1.50
Proceedings at the Farewell Banquet to Prof. Tyndall.....	.50
Lessons in Electricity.....	1.50
Address before British Association at Belfast.....	.50
TITLER (SARAH) Old Masters and their Pictures.....	1.50
Modern Painters and their Paintings.....	1.50
VOYSEY (REV. CHARLES) The Slung and the Stone. Vols. I and V, each.....	3.00
Vols III, IV, and VI, each.....	2.75
WARNER'S (CHARLES D.) My Summer in a Garden.....	1.00
Bauntering.....	1.50
Back-Log Studies.....	2.00
WEISS (JOHN) American Religion.....	1.50
Life of Theodore Parker. 2 vols.....	6.00
WHIPPLE'S (E. F.) Literature and Life.....	1.50
Essays and Reviews.....	1.50
Character and Characteristic Men.....	1.50
The Literature of the Age of Elizabeth.....	1.50
Success and its Conditions.....	1.50
Washington and the Revolution.....	.30
WHITNEY'S (MRS. A. D. T.) A Summer in Leslie Goldwaite's Life.....	1.50
We Girls: A Home Story.....	1.50
Real Folks.....	1.50
The Other Girls.....	2.00
Pansies. A volume of Poems.....	1.50
WHITTIER'S (JOHN G.) Poems. 2 vols.....	4.00
Child Life.....	3.00

ADDRESSES:

THE INDEX.

391 Washington St., Boston.

POSITIVISM

AN EPITOME OF THE

Positive Philosophy and Religion,

Published by the Society of Humanity in the city of New York, contains the clearest statement of the subject ever made; also, Harriet Martineau's masterly defence of her religious convictions; and the Positive Classification of the Sciences, by T. B. Wakeman, etc., etc.

Send for it (enclosing 25 cents in postage stamps) to

HUGH BYRON BROWN,
President of the Society,
No. 141 8th St., N.Y. City.

A HOLIDAY OFFERING.

JUST PUBLISHED:

Poems of the Life Beyond and Within.

Voices from Many Lands and Centuries, saying—

"Man, Thou shalt never Die!"

By GILES B. STEBBINS.

Price, $1.50. For sale by THE INDEX, 231
Washington Street, Boston.

LECTURES AND SERMONS.

BY

JOHN W. CHADWICK.

THIRD SERIES.

1. The Simplicity of True Religion.
2. The Rising Faith.
3. Fate and Freedom.
4. The Child Jesus.

The following numbers of the first and second series can also be supplied: Thomas Paine, Best Use of Sunday, Higher Reverence, Self-Respect, God on Our Side, Economy and Waste, Piety of Modern Science, Immortal Life, Moral Aspects of Belief in Immortality, Idealizing the Real, The Coming Man, A Rational Church.

Sent to any address, postage paid, at 6 cents per copy, by

JAMES MILLER,
779 Broadway, New York.

A NOTABLE TREATISE.

WOMAN SUFFRAGE.

THE COUNTERFEIT AND THE TRUE:

Reasons for Opposing Both.

BY

REAR-ADMIRAL MAXSE,

Of the British Royal Navy.

This is a little book of 74 pages, with neat paper covers, published in London, and presenting the reasons why a cultivated English gentleman is opposed to Woman Suffrage. It ought to be read and pondered by all who are interested in that question, on either side. Price, 25 cents. For sale at the office of THE INDEX, 231 Washington St., Boston.

RADICAL FREETHOUGHT

LECTURES for 1878.

BY B. F. UNDERWOOD.

Positive and Constructive Lectures:

1. The Demands of Liberalism.
2. The Positive Side of Free Thought.
3. The Genesis and Nature of Religion, Considered as an "Element of Human Nature."
4. A Scientific and Philosophic View of Religious Revivals.
5. Christianity and Civilization.
6. The Triumph of Liberalism.
7. What Liberalism offers in the Place of the Christian Theology.
8. A True Man Better than a True Christian.
9. Judaism and Christianity Outgrowths of Preexistent Heathenism.
10. Origin and History of the Bible. (From one to six lectures.)
11. Buddha and Buddhism.
12. Ancient Egypt: Her Laws, Morality, and Religion.
13. The Theory of Evolution.
14. Darwinism: Its Principles Stated and Defended.
15. Natural Selection versus Design in Nature.
16. The Philosophy of Herbert Spencer.
17. Modern Scientific Materialism.
18. Instinct and Intuition: Organized Experiences of the Race.
19. Woman: Her Past and Present, Her Rights and Wrongs.
20. Paine, the Pioneer of Freethought in America.
21. The French Revolution: Its Causes and Consequences.

Critical Lectures:

22. The Fallacies of Rev. Joseph Cook regarding the Personality and Being of God.
23. Cook's Criticisms of Scientific Materialism examined.
24. Why I am an "Unbeliever."
25. Christianity and Intellectual Progress.
26. The Four Gospels Unhistorical and Unreliable.
27. The Evidence for the Divinity of the Bible examined.
28. Popular Assumptions Regarding the Bible and Christianity.
29. Popular Objection to Infidelity Answered.
30. The Crimes and Cruelties of Catholic and Protestant Christianity.
31. Bible Prophecies Falsified by the Facts of History.
32. The Proofs of a Personal Intelligent Deity examined.
33. The Pros and Cons of a Future State.

For terms, etc., address

B. F. UNDERWOOD,
Thorndike, Mass.

VINDICATION OF THOMAS

PAINE! Ingersoll's Reply to the New York Observer. Just issued. Clear—Concise—Vigorous—Logical—Eloquent—and Unanswerable! Just what every Liberal wants. Only 25 cents. Address E. O. WALKER, Box 39, Florence, Iowa.

A CHEAP OFFER.

A COMPLETE SET OF INDEX TRACTS, from No. 1 to 15 inclusive, will be mailed to any address on the prepayment of 80 CENTS.

Address THE INDEX,
No. 231 Washington St., Boston, Mass.

TO BOOK-BUYERS

Please examine the revised list of POPULAR BOOKS on the opposite side of this page. Any OBTAINABLE BOOK NOT IN THIS LIST will be furnished to order. Address THE INDEX, 231 Washington St., Boston.

WEST NEWTON

English and Classical School.

The twenty-fifth school year of this Family and Day School for both sexes will begin WEDNESDAY, Sept. 19, 1877. For Circular and information apply to
NATH'L T. ALLEN,
West Newton, Mass.

RADICAL LECTURES

By James W. Stillman.

1. THE UNKNOWN GOD.
2. WOMAN SUFFRAGE.
3. HERBERT SPENCER.
4. REFORM IN EDUCATION.

For terms, address

JAMES W. STILLMAN,
No. 128 Broadway, New York City.

CHRISTIANITY AND INFIDELITY!

A DISCUSSION BETWEEN

Rev. G. H. HUMPHREY, Presbyterian, New York, and

D. M. BENNETT, Editor of the Truth Seeker.

SUBJECTS DISCUSSED:

- Part I. The Relative Services of Christianity and Infidelity to American Independence.
- Part II. The Relative Services of Christianity to Learning and Science.
- Part III. Is there a stronger probability that the Bible is divine than that Infidelity is true?

A thick 12mo volume of over 500 pages, well bound, sent post-paid by mail for One Dollar. Address D. M. BENNETT, Publisher, 141 Eighth Street, New York.

FROTHINGHAM'S WORKS.

THE RELIGION OF HUMANITY. An Essay. Third Edition—Revised. Price $1.50.

"Nobody can peruse this book without respect for the learning, mental honesty and skill in the statement of his convictions, possessed by the author, and for the essential integrity and philanthropic tendency of his spirit."—Springfield Republican.

"A profoundly sincere book, the work of one who has read largely, studied thoroughly, reflected patiently.... It is a model of scholarly culture and of finished and vigorous style."—Boston Globe.

THE CHILD'S BOOK OF RELIGION. For Sunday-schools and Homes. Price $1.00.

THE SAFEST CREED, AND OTHER DISCOURSES. 12mo, Cloth, $1.50.

Not "food for babes," but full of suggestion for earnest and thoughtful men.

STORIES FROM THE LIPS OF THE TEACHER. With Frontispiece. Cloth, $1.00.

"The Parables are so re-told as to absorb the attention of the reader, and to fasten upon the mind what the writer believes to have been the impression the Saviour meant to convey. It is in style and thought a superior book, and will interest alike young and old."—Zion's Herald (Methodist).

STORIES OF THE PATRIARCHS. With Frontispiece. Cloth, $1.00.

"A work of culture and taste; it will be welcome to all ages, and gives the sublimest lessons of manhood in the simple language of a child."—Springfield Republican.

BELIEFS OF THE UNBELIEVERS. A Lecture. 12mo, Cloth, $1.00.

TRANSCENDENTALISM IN NEW ENGLAND. A History. With sketches and studies of Emerson, Alcott, Parker, Margaret Fuller, the Brook Farm Community, etc. 8vo, Cloth extra, with steel portrait of the author, $2.50.

THE LIFE OF THEODORE PARKER. 8vo. With Portrait, $3.00.

The New York Tribune closes a four and a half column review of this book by saying: "It holds up a remarkable specimen of robust manliness whose form and lineaments can be studied with equal advantage by friend and foe."

THE CRADLE OF THE CHRIST. A Study in Primitive Christianity, illustrating the prime importance of the Messianic Idea in the New Testament, as the key to the development of Christianity from Judaism. Octavo, Cloth, $1.75.

Mailed, post-paid, on receipt of price, by THE INDEX 231 Washington St., Boston.

MISS DEVEREUX' BOARD-

ING AND DAY SCHOOL FOR YOUNG LADIES AND CHILDREN, at Irvington-on-Hudson, will re-open on Monday, Sept. 17, 1877. Miss Devereux refers, among others, to the following gentlemen: Rev. Orville Dewey, Sheffield, Mass.; Mr. A. C. Richards, Irvington, N.Y.; Mr. H. B. Bishop, Irvington, N.Y.; Mr. John E. Williams, Pres. Met. Nat. Bank, N.Y.; Mr. Wm. H. Orton, Pres. W. U. Telegraph Co., N.Y.; Mr. Moses H. Grinnell, N.Y.

NATIONAL REFORMER,

Journal of Radicalism and Freethought.

EDITED BY

CHARLES BRADLAUGH.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY. PRICE TWOPENCE.

17 Johnson's Court, Fleet Street,
LONDON, ENGLAND.

Sent, post-free, for one year, on receipt of International Post-Office order, for $3.00.

MADAME FOY'S

CORSET SKIRT SUPPORTER

Increases in Popularity every year, And for HEALTH, COMFORT, and STYLE is acknowledged the BEST ARTICLE of the kind ever made. For sale by all leading jobbers and retailers. Beware of imitations and infringements.

MANUFACTURED SOLELY BY

FOY & HARMON,
New Haven, Conn.

A RE-ISSUE OF A FAMOUS

BOOK.

A DISCOURSE OF MATTERS PERTAINING TO RELIGION.

By THEODORE PARKER.

With a Biographical Sketch by HANNAH E. STEVENSON, and an Introduction by O. B. FROTHINGHAM.

12mo, Cloth extra, $1.50; in Paper Covers, $1.00.

The present volume contains a great number of Parker's best thoughts, expressed in his richest, freshest style; and it is believed that the old friends of the author, and many others who, since his time, have become interested in the progress of liberal opinions in religion, will welcome this new and attractive edition.

Sent post-paid on receipt of price by THE INDEX, 231 Washington St., Boston.

GOOD PHOTOGRAPHS

OF

O. B. FROTHINGHAM,

T. W. HIGGINSON,

W. J. POTTER,

W. H. SPENCER,

F. W. NEWMAN,

CHAS. VOYNEY,

A. W. STEVENS,

R. H. RANNEY,

F. R. ABBOT,

Are now for sale at the office of THE INDEX, and will be mailed postpaid to any address on receipt of price. Single Photographs, 25 cents each; complete Set of Nine Photographs, $1.50.

Address,

THE INDEX,

No. 231 Washington St., Boston, Mass.

FREE RELIGIOUS ASSOCIATION.

Send to Office at 231 Washington St., Boston, Mass., for TRAJECTS.

I. TAXATION OF CHURCH PROPERTY, by James Parton, 5 cts.; ten, 30 cts.; one hundred, $1.50.

II. THE BIBLE AND SCIENCE, by John Weiss.

III. THE SYMPATHY OF RELIGIONS, by T. W. Higginson. Enlarged edition.

IV. TRANSCENDENTALISM, by Theodore Parker. Never before published.

V. THE PUBLIC SCHOOL QUESTION, as understood by a Catholic American citizen (Bishop McQuaid) and by a Liberal American citizen (F. R. Abbot). (Two Horticultural Hall Lectures, Feb. 13 and 20, 1876.)

VI. HOW SHALL WE KEEP SUNDAY? An Answer in Four Parts: 1. Sunday in the Bible. 2. Sunday in Church History. 3. Sunday in the Massachusetts Laws. 4. The Workingman's Sunday. By Charles K. Whipple, Minot J. Savage, Charles E. Pratt, and Wm. C. Gannett.

Nos. II, III, IV, V, VI, 10 cts. each; ten for 90 cts.; one hundred, $3.

REASON AND REVELATION, by W. J. Potter. 10 cts. (Ten for 90 cts.; one hundred, $3.00.)

PROCEEDINGS OF THE F. R. A. ANNUAL MEETINGS for 1872, '73, '74, '75. 25 cts. each; for 1876 and '77 40 cents; four for $1.00.

FREEDOM AND FELLOWSHIP IN RELIGION, a volume of essays and addresses representing the F. R. A. platform. $1.50.

SEND ONE DOLLAR

For a handsome Certificate of Membership as an

ANNUAL MEMBER

of the NATIONAL LIBERAL LEAGUE.

For TWENTY-FIVE DOLLARS, a still larger Certificate of Membership as a

LIFE MEMBER,

Will be sent to any person; and individuals cannot render more efficient assistance to the National Liberal League than by making themselves Annual or Life Members of it.

The following extracts from the Constitution of the National Liberal League explain the privileges of membership:

ARTICLE IV.—Any person who shall pay one dollar into the treasury shall be entitled to a certificate, signed by the President and Secretary, as an annual member of the National Liberal League. Any person who shall pay twenty-five dollars or more into the treasury shall be entitled to a similar certificate as a life-member. All the persons present as members at the Centennial Congress of Liberals, at which this Constitution was adopted, are hereby declared permanent or charter-members of the National Liberal League.

ARTICLE V.—All charter-members and life-members of the National Liberal League, and all duly accredited delegates from local auxiliary Liberal Leagues organized in accordance with the provisions of this Constitution, shall be entitled to seats and votes in the Annual Congress. Annual members of the National Liberal League shall be entitled to seat, but not to votes, in the Annual Congress.

Address NATIONAL LIBERAL LEAGUE,
231 Washington Street, Boston.

ORGANIZE!

CHARTERS

For Local Auxiliary Liberal Leagues, conferring the privilege of representation by five delegates in the Annual Congress of the National Liberal League, will be promptly sent on application, according to the following provisions of Constitution of the same:—

LOCAL AUXILIARY LIBERAL LEAGUES.

ARTICLE XIII.—The Board of Directors shall have authority, as often as they receive a written application signed by ten or more persons and accompanied by ten dollars, to issue a charter for the formation of a local auxiliary Liberal League.

ARTICLE XIV.—Local auxiliary Liberal Leagues organized under charters issued by the Board of Directors shall be absolutely independent in the administration of their own local affairs. The effect of their charters shall be simply to unite them in cordial fellowship and efficient cooperation of the freest kind with the National Liberal League and with other local Leagues. All votes of the Annual Congress, and all communications of the Board of Directors, shall possess no more authority or influence over them than lies in the intrinsic wisdom of the words themselves.

ARTICLE XVI.—Every local auxiliary Liberal League organized in accordance with the provisions of this Constitution shall be entitled to send its President and Secretary and three other members as delegates to the Annual Congress.

These Charters are beautifully printed on the best of paper. Adorned with the handsome Seal of the National Liberal League, they will, if tastefully framed, make a fine ornament for any hall.

Address NATIONAL LIBERAL LEAGUE
231 Washington Street, Boston.

CIRCULATE IT

EVERYWHERE!

The new Liberal League Tract of 24 pages, entitled,

"PATRIOTIC ADDRESS,"

contains:

1. PATRIOTIC ADDRESS of the National Liberal League to the people of the United States.
2. CHIEF RESOLUTIONS of the League.
3. PROTEST of the League against shutting the International Exhibition on Sundays.
4. CONSTITUTION and List of Officers.
5. EXTRACTS from Approving Letters by Distinguished Citizens.

This is the Liberal's best CAMPAIGN DOCUMENT in the great impending contest over amending the Constitution of the United States with reference to the school question. It should be in the hands of EVERY VOTER, and has been published expressly for gratuitous distribution by earnest friends of State Secularization.

Local Liberal Leagues

Cannot do better than to order this Tract by the quantity, as an excellent auxiliary in their local agitation.

INDIVIDUAL LIBERALS

Cannot do better than to use them privately, as opportunity offers.

Promptly mailed, at the bare cost of paper, press-work, and postage, on the following terms:—

TEN COPIES,.....	15
TWENTY-FIVE COPIES,.....	40
FIFTY ".....	75
ONE HUNDRED ".....	1.25
TWO HUNDRED ".....	2.40
THREE HUNDRED ".....	3.60
FIVE HUNDRED ".....	6.00
ONE THOUSAND ".....	12.00

N. B.—Packages of over 100 copies will be sent by express at the expense of the purchaser, without any charge for postage.

Address NATIONAL LIBERAL LEAGUE
231 Washington Street, Boston.

The Index.

Three Dollars a Year.

LIBERTY AND LIGHT.

Single Copies Seven Cents.

VOLUME 9.

BOSTON, MASS., THURSDAY, JANUARY 17, 1878.

WHOLE No. 421.

NATIONAL LIBERAL LEAGUE.

PLATFORM

For the Presidential Election of 1880,

[ADOPTED AT ROCHESTER, N.Y., OCT. 26, 1877.]

1. TOTAL SEPARATION OF CHURCH AND STATE, to be guaranteed by amendment of the United States Constitution: including the equitable taxation of church property, secularization of the public schools, abrogation of Sabbatharian laws, abolition of chaplaincies, prohibition of public appropriations for religious purposes, and all other measures necessary to the same general end.

2. NATIONAL PROTECTION FOR NATIONAL CITIZENS, in their equal civil, political, and religious rights: to be guaranteed by amendment of the United States Constitution, and afforded through the United States courts.

3. UNIVERSAL EDUCATION THE BASIS OF UNIVERSAL SUFFRAGE IN THIS SECULAR REPUBLIC: to be guaranteed by amendment of the United States Constitution, requiring every State to maintain a thoroughly secularized public school system, and to permit no child within its limits to grow up without a good elementary education.

N. B.—The nomination of candidates upon the above platform was postponed to a future Congress of the National Liberal League.

THE DEMANDS OF LIBERALISM.

1. We demand that churches and other ecclesiastical property shall no longer be exempt from just taxation.

2. We demand that the employment of chaplains in Congress, in State Legislatures, in the navy and militia, and in prisons, asylums, and all other institutions supported by public money, shall be discontinued.

3. We demand that all public appropriations for educational and charitable institutions of a sectarian character shall cease.

4. We demand that all religious services now sustained by the government shall be abolished; and especially that the use of the Bible in the public schools, whether ostensibly as a text-book or avowedly as a book of religious worship, shall be prohibited.

5. We demand that the appointment, by the President of the United States or by the Governors of the various States, of all religious festivals and fasts shall wholly cease.

6. We demand that the judicial oath in the courts and in all other departments of the government shall be abolished, and that simple affirmation under the pains and penalties of perjury shall be established in its stead.

7. We demand that all laws directly or indirectly enforcing the observance of Sunday as the Sabbath shall be repealed.

8. We demand that all laws looking to the enforcement of "Christian" morality shall be abrogated, and that all laws shall be conformed to the requirements of natural morality, equal rights, and impartial liberty.

9. We demand that not only in the Constitutions of the United States and of the several States, but also in the practical administration of the same, no privilege or advantage shall be conceded to Christianity or any other special religion; that our entire political system shall be founded and administered on a purely secular basis; and that whatever changes shall prove necessary to this end shall be consistently, unflinchingly, and promptly made.

The above is the platform of THE INDEX, so far as the editor is individually concerned. But no other person, and no organization, can be justly or truthfully held responsible for it without his or its explicit approval.

FRANCIS E. ABBOT.

RESOLUTION

ADOPTED BY THE NATIONAL LIBERAL LEAGUE, AT PHILADELPHIA, JULY 3, 1876.

Resolved, That we accept the offer of the Boston INDEX to be our official organ of communication with the public, for the publication of announcements, acknowledgments, and other official papers of the Board of Directors; but that we assume no responsibility for anything else published in its columns and claim no control or influence in its general editorial management.

GLIMPSES.

MR. D. M. BENNETT has been discharged by United States Commissioner Shields, on the motion of District Attorney Woodford.

IN ADDITION to the lecture engagements mentioned last week, Mr. B. F. Underwood has others at Owen Sound, Ontario, Jan. 27, 28, 29, and at Lindsay, Feb. 1, 2, and 4.

VICTOR EMMANUEL's death closes a great chapter in the history of Italy. He was a liberal and patriotic monarch, and leaves a stately edifice where he found a pile of bricks.

THE MINNESOTA State Committee of the National Liberal League has been duly constituted as follows: J. B. Bassett, Minneapolis; J. W. Emery, Farmington; M. J. Severance, Mankato; R. B. Mitchell, Duluth; Dr. D. K. Bontelle, Lake City.

REV. J. R. BAKER, of Clarinda, Iowa, a Universalist minister, has carried his society with him over to radicalism. He writes to Mr. Green: "We propose to organize first a County Liberal League, and then we desire to form a District League for Southwestern Iowa for the purpose of coöperating with the National Liberal League."

THE LINESVILLE (Pa.) Liberal League proposes to celebrate the one hundred and forty-first anniversary of the birth of Thomas Paine, on the twenty-ninth of January. Rev. S. W. Sample, Judge R. S. McCormick, Dr. T. L. Brown, Mr. O. P. Kellogg, Mr. H. L. Green, and Prof. A. B. Brown are announced as speakers. It is to be a three-days' convention, beginning on Sunday, the 27th; and a ball is to be held in Opera Hall on the evening of the 29th.

THE VATICAN authorities to whom is entrusted the task of making new saints have refused to make Christopher Columbus a saint, on the ground that his Christian virtues have not been exemplified by any great deed; that, apart from his discovery of America, his public and private life were open to grave reproach; that, until now, nobody ever thought of regarding him as a saint, or invoking him as such; and, finally, that it is very doubtful whether he died a good Catholic.

MR. H. L. GREEN, who is indefatigably industrious as Chairman of the Executive Committee of the National Liberal League, suggests that, whenever a new local League is formed, a notice of that fact be sent to the nearest agent of the Associated Press, to be telegraphed over the country. Many new Leagues have been formed recently, but they will be both stronger locally and more useful nationally, if they join the national movement as auxiliary organizations. This, it must never be forgotten, does not in the least interfere with their absolute independence of action; but it will make them ten times as influential to stand shoulder to shoulder with kindred Leagues all over the land. The movement cannot exert a deep influence on public opinion unless this is done.

THE CASE of Father Stack, of Williamsport, Pa., against Bishop O'Hara, which has been in the courts for over six years, has been decided in favor of the priest. Judge Gamble, acting as chancellor in the Court of Common Pleas, filed an elaborate opinion, in which he maintains that the power exercised in the case by Bishop O'Hara is unwarranted by the canon laws; and that even if the disciples of the Church allow it, such power must, nevertheless, be condemned as contrary to the law of the land and prejudicial to the rights of citizenship. The superiority of civil over ecclesiastical law is expressly asserted. The decree accordingly declares, that the removal of Father Stack by Bishop O'Hara as punishment for a supposed offence was unlawful; that the prohibition forbidding Father Stack to exercise any priestly functions in Williamsport was unlawful. The decree of restoration, as asked for, is not granted, on the ground that it might be injudicious to disturb the present state of things in the congregation. This point, however, is an open question, if the bishop should appeal from the present decision to the Supreme Court.

MONSIGNOR CAPEL, an eminent Catholic dignitary of London, recently gave the following as the result of his observations and experience in England: "Two forces are now dividing England between them: Catholicism, and infidelity or freethinking,—in other words, pure belief, and the absence of all belief. These are the antagonistic forces; for Protestantism, as a power, is dead. I speak of it so far as regards the Anglican Church, for, undoubtedly, Methodism is a power still. For the most part, however, the intellectual men of the day are becoming either freethinkers or Roman Catholics—chiefly, I believe, freethinkers. It seems to me that more go to that extreme than to the other. I foresee a great struggle in Europe between these forces,—a struggle which will involve vast consequences for empires as well as for religions. In that contest I expect to see America play a great part; whatever may be her disposition, she cannot fail to exert a tremendous influence." How important, then, not to ourselves alone, but to all the world as well, that America's influence should be wise and good! If she fails to receive into her mind and heart the lofty principles of the Liberal League, she will strengthen the cause of ancient and tyrannical superstition, and, despite all contrary intentions or efforts, become the ally of Rome.

NOT FOR a long time have we met with so fine a piece of psychological analysis as is contained in the subjoined extract from a paper by George Eliot on "The Influence of Rationalism," in the Fortnightly Review for May, 1866. It is portraiture so startlingly life-like that it almost brings before us in living and breathing reality a number of our own critics of the last eight or ten years, whose common characteristic has been to confound our definiteness of conclusion and precision of statement with "dogmatism," and their own general mistiness and inconclusiveness with "liberality." We commend the extract to the profound study of all who object to the advocacy of anything in particular and to the agitation of any specific measure. This is what George Eliot wrote: "For the most part, the general reader of the present day does not exactly know what distance he goes: he only knows that he does not go 'too far.' Of any remarkable thinker whose writings have excited controversy, he likes to have it said that 'his errors are to be deplored,' leaving it not too certain what those errors are; he is fond of what may be called disembodied opinions, that float in vapory phrases above all systems of thought or action; he likes an undefined Christianity which opposes itself to nothing in particular, an undefined education of the people, an undefined amelioration of all things; in fact he likes sound views,—nothing extreme, but something between the excesses of the past and the excesses of the present. This modern type of the general reader may be known in conversation by the cordiality with which he assents to indistinct, blurred statements: say that black is black, he will shake his head and hardly think it; say that black is not so very black, he will reply, 'Exactly.' He has no hesitation, if you wish it, even to get up at a public meeting and express his conviction that at times, and within certain limits, the radii of a circle have a tendency to be equal; but on the other hand he would urge that the spirit of geometry may be carried a little too far. His only bigotry is a bigotry against any clearly defined opinion,—not in the least based on a scientific scepticism, but belonging to a lack of coherent thought, a spongy texture of mind, that gravitates strongly to nothing. The one thing he is staunch for, is the utmost liberty of private haziness."

NATIONAL LIBERAL LEAGUE. 'OFFICERS.

President.
FRANCIS E. ABBOT.....	Boston, Mass.
Vice-Presidents.
HON. E. P. HURLBUT.....	Albany, N. Y.
HON. SAMUEL E. BRWALL.....	Boston, Mass.
HON. NATHANIEL HOLMES.....	St. Louis, Mo.
HON. HENRY BOOTH.....	Chicago, Ill.
HON. GEORGE W. JULIAN.....	Irrington, Ind.
HON. ELIZUR WRIGHT.....	Boston, Mass.
MR. O. B. FROTHINGHAM.....	New York, N. Y.
MR. W. M. J. POTTER.....	New Bedford, Mass.
MR. R. P. HALLCOWELL.....	Boston, Mass.
MR. JAMES PARTON.....	Newburyport, Mass.
MR. F. SCHUBERT.....	San Francisco, Cal.
HON. ABRAHAM PAYNE.....	Providence, R. I.
REV. M. J. SAVAGE.....	Boston, Mass.
REVEREND B. F. SEXTON.....	Chicago, Ill.
REV. W. H. SPENCER.....	Sparta, Wis.
MR. SAMUEL L. HILL.....	Florence, Mass.
MR. E. W. MEDDAUGH.....	Detroit, Mich.
MR. KARL HEINZEN.....	Editor of "Der Pioneer," Boston.
MR. HORACE SEAY.....	Editor of the "Investigator," Boston.
MR. ISAAC WISE.....	Editor of "American Israelite," Cincinnati.
MR. D. W. BENNETT.....	Editor of the "Truth Seeker," New York.
MR. MORITZ ELLINGER.....	Editor of "Jewish Times," New York.
MR. B. F. UNDERWOOD.....	Thornhill, Mass.
REV. ROBERT COLLYER.....	Chicago, Ill.
COL. ROBERT G. INGERSOLL.....	Peoria, Ill.
DR. T. L. BROWN.....	Binghamton, N. Y.
HON. E. S. MCCORMICK.....	Franklin, Pa.
ELDER F. W. EVANS.....	Mount Lebanon, N. Y.
MRS. ELIZABETH THOMPSON.....	New York City.
MRS. AMY POST.....	Chester, N. Y.
MRS. ELIZABETH OGDY STANTON.....	Tenafly, N. Y.
MISS SALLIE HOLLEY.....	Loitaburg, Va.

Secretary.
W. H. HAMLEN.....	231 Washington Street, Boston, Mass.
Assistant Secretary.
MISS JANE P. TITCOMB.....	142 Chandler St., Boston.
Treasurer.
J. A. J. WILCOX.....	8 Pemberton Square, Boston.
Board of Directors.
F. E. ABBOT.....	W. H. HAMLEN.
J. A. J. WILCOX.....	H. L. GREEN.
D. G. CRANDON.

Executive Committee.
Alabama.....	J. H. HALLEY, Selma.
Arkansas.....	JOHN ANDREWS, Monticello.
California.....	J. L. HATCH, San Francisco.
Colorado.....	DAVID T. BIALS, Granada.
Connecticut.....	GEORGE W. BALDWIN, Bridgeport.
Delaware.....	JOSEPH D. GOBELT, Greenville.
Florida.....	T. D. GIDDINGS, Enterprise.
Georgia.....	DR. A. A. BELL, Macon.
Illinois.....	L. G. UNDERWOOD, Indianapolis.
Indiana.....	J. C. MICHAEL, Adel.
Iowa.....	JOHN FARNSWORTH, Fort Scott.
Kansas.....	B. B. CLARK, Wilsonville.
Kentucky.....	EMERSON BENTLEY, New Orleans.
Louisiana.....	DR. W. H. BROWN, Bangor.
Maine.....	J. H. RUSSELL, New Market.
Maryland.....	W. H. BAYARD, Boston.
Massachusetts.....	KARL SCHUMMERT, Detroit.
Michigan.....	J. B. BASSETT, Minneapolis.
Minnesota.....	St. Louis.
Missouri.....	L. W. BILLINGSLEY, Lincoln.
Nebraska.....	V. G. BARNETT, White Rock.
Nevada.....	WILLIAM LITTLE, Manchester.
New Hampshire.....	H. L. GREEN (chairman), Salamanca.
New York.....	J. W. THORNE, Warren.
North Carolina.....	ED. STARK, Cincinnati.
Ohio.....	SAMUEL COLT, Humboldt Basin.
Oregon.....	G. W. BALDWIN, Lincolnton.
Pennsylvania.....	GEORGE LEWIS, Providence.
Rhode Island.....	P. W. FULLER, Columbia.
South Carolina.....	DR. E. H. PRICE, Chattanooga.
Tennessee.....	DR. A. DUBBIE, Greenville.
Texas.....	E. L. HAUGSTON, North Bennington.
Vermont.....	S. SPALDING, Norfolk.
Virginia.....	A. M. DEWE, Weston.
West Virginia.....	ROBERT C. SPENCER, Milwaukee.
Wisconsin.....	D. P. WILCOX, Yankton.
District of Columbia.....	W. H. DOOLITTLE, Washington.
Utah.....	W. FERGUSON, Provo City.
Wyoming.....	NORMAN S. FORTNER.

Finance Committee.
D. G. CRANDON, Chairman.....	Chelsea, Mass.
MRS. SARAH B. OTIS.....	17 Warren Avenue, Boston.
MARLAN F. HYDE.....	21 Washington St., Boston.

LOCAL AUXILIARY LIBERAL LEAGUES

To which Charters have been issued by the National Liberal League.

LINCOLN, NEBRASKA.—President, D. A. Cline; Secretary, Dr. A. S. von Mansfeldt.
Issued to L. W. Billingsley, D. A. Cline, A. S. von Mansfeldt, Julius Plasterer, Joseph Wittman, W. E. Copeland, Benj. F. Fisher, Sidney Lyons, L. Meyer, G. E. Church, and others.
JACKSONVILLE, ILLINOIS.—[Officers not reported.]
Issued to A. W. Cadman, Mrs. D. M. Cadman, S. W. Sample, David Prince, B. A. Nance, C. H. Dunbrack, W. Hackman, Jennie W. Meek, Emma Meek, Hattie E. Hammond, and others.
PHILADELPHIA, PENNSYLVANIA.—President, Carrie B. Kilgore; Secretary, Joseph Hohrer.
Issued to the President and Secretary on behalf of the Philadelphia Liberal League.
MISHOORT, WISCONSIN.—President, Lauriston Damon; Secretary, Anton Braasch.
Issued to Anton Braasch, Fred. Claussen, J. Runge, Jr., Louis Zander, S. Damon, Ferd. Heyroth, Louis Heyroth, Fred. Zander, Fred. Halberg, Ernst Clusen, and Fred. Braasch.
CHELSEA, MASSACHUSETTS.—President, D. Goddard Crandon; Secretary, J. H. W. Toohy.
Issued to the President and Secretary on behalf of the Chelsea Liberal League.
STOCKTON, CALIFORNIA.—[Officers not reported.]
Issued to Chas. Haas, G. C. Hyatt, F. C. Lawrence, A. T. Hudson, Chas. Williams, W. F. Freeman, J. Grundike, J. Harrison, T. C. Mallon, A. F. Lochead, and others.
DENVER, COLORADO.—President, Orson Brooks; Secretary, J. H. Cotton.
Issued to the President and Secretary on behalf of the Liberal League of Denver.
PAINE HALL, BOSTON.—President, John S. Verity; Secretary, Robert Cooper.
Issued to Horace Seaver, J. P. Mendum, Elizur Wright, B. F. Underwood, David Kirkwood, James Harris, G. H. Foster, H. F. Hyde, Robert Cooper, S. E. Urbino, John S. Verity.
PALMYRA, NEW YORK.—President, J. M. Jones; Secretary, C. C. Everson.
Issued to J. M. Jones, C. C. Everson, Henry M. North, A. R. Sherman, Joseph Fritts, L. B. Keeler, J. J. White, E. H. Sherman, Henry Gardner, Samuel Cossad, and others.
BOSTON, MASSACHUSETTS.—President, F. E. ABBOT; Secretary, Miss J. P. Titcomb.
Issued to the President and Secretary on behalf of the First Liberal League of Boston, Mass.
NEW PHILADELPHIA, OHIO.—President, George Riker; Secretary, C. M. Rittenhouse.
Issued to C. M. Rittenhouse, George Riker, J. C.

Price, Daniel Korna, P. W. Himes, John Arn, Philip Gintz, A. H. Brown, Jacob Miller, L. A. Cornet.

TITUSVILLE, PENNSYLVANIA.—President, William Barnard; Secretary, C. M. Hayes.

Issued to the President and Secretary on behalf of the Titusville Liberal League.

Hudson, Michigan.—President, Dr. Levi E. Peirson; Secretary, Dr. F. O. Baker.

Issued to Levi E. Peirson, A. D. Armstrong, James S. Bedel, Miles C. Beach, W. R. Norris, H. R. Armstrong, R. W. S. Johnson, E. M. Brown, G. L. Harceron, Philip Sewall.

CATTARAUGUS COUNTY, NEW YORK.—President, H. L. Green; Corresponding Secretary, John Hammond.

Issued to the President and Secretary on behalf of the Cattaraugus County Liberal League.

NEW HAVEN, CONNECTICUT.—[Officers not yet reported.]

Issued to E. M. Sherman, W. W. Stow, F. A. Hermon, T. F. Hamilton, D. M. Hamilton, W. F. Bopson, E. R. Whiting, E. E. Seaman, A. C. Harrison, R. F. Shepard, and others.

St. Joseph, Missouri.—President, P. V. Wise; Secretary, H. Brunsing.

Issued to the President and Secretary on behalf of the St. Joseph Liberal League.

NEW YORK, NEW YORK.—President, Hugh B. Brown; Secretary, A. L. Rawson.

Issued to T. B. Wakeman, Henry Evans, A. L. Rawson, Hugh B. Brown, E. Langerfeld, D. S. Plumb, O. E. Browning, Mrs. Eliza Erving, Miss E. W. McAdams, Mrs. O. E. Langerfeld, on behalf of the Society of Humanity.

ROCHESTER, NEW YORK.—President, Mrs. Amy Post; Secretary, Willet E. Post.

Issued to Benj. Greeng, Mrs. Amy Post, Willet E. Post, Emily G. Beebe, Dr. Sherman, Mrs. Barker, Clement Austin, Wm. H. Gibbs, Dr. C. D. Dake, and others.

TOMPKINS COUNTY, NEW YORK.—President, Dr. John Winslow; Secretary, Myron E. Bishop.

Issued to C. W. Ames, Wm. A. Anthony, Geo. Arnold, M. E. Bishop, H. Boal, W. Dennis, Isaac Flagg, B. W. Franklin, C. Gardner, W. Hutchins, and others.

NEW YORK, NEW YORK.—President, A. L. Rawson; Secretary, Porter C. Bliss.

Issued to the President and Secretary on behalf of the Manhattan Liberal Club.

CLEVELAND, OHIO.—President, E. D. Stark; Secretary, Mrs. M. B. Ambler.

Issued to E. D. Stark, Mrs. Louisa Southworth, B. White, W. A. Madison, S. E. Adams, Daniel R. Tilden, W. Galen Smith, Walter F. Johnson, Thomas Jones, and Mrs. M. B. Ambler.

MILWAUKEE, WISCONSIN.—President, Robert C. Spencer; Secretary, William A. Boyd.

Issued to the President and Secretary on behalf of the First Liberal League of Milwaukee.

JEFFERSON LIBERAL LEAGUE, ROCHESTER, NEW YORK.—President, Moses Hays; Secretaries, Fred. Hebard and J. B. Pike.

Issued to L. Garson, N. O. Tiffany, Adolph Roth, J. W. Roberts, R. F. Smith, Julius Rothbult, A. C. Allen, C. B. Strong, De L. Crittenden, and F. Bush.

MINNEAPOLIS, MINNESOTA.—President, S. C. Gale; Secretary, Frank J. Mead.

Issued to the President, Vice-President, Secretary, and Treasurer, on behalf of the First Liberal League of Minneapolis.

[N. B.—Many new local Liberal Leagues have been formed which have neglected to take out charters, and therefore are not entitled to representation.]

RELIGIOUS FREEDOM AMENDMENT:

PROPOSED AS A SUBSTITUTE FOR THE FIRST AMENDMENT TO THE U. S. CONSTITUTION.

ARTICLE I.

SECTION 1.—Neither Congress nor any State shall make any law respecting an establishment of religion, or favoring any particular form of religion, or prohibiting the free exercise thereof; or permitting in any degree a union of Church and State, or granting any special privilege, immunity, or advantage to any sect or religious body, or to any number of sects or religious bodies; or taxing the people of any State, either directly or indirectly, for the support of any sect or religious body, or of any number of sects or religious bodies; or abridging the freedom of speech or of the press, or the right of the people peaceably to assemble and to petition the Government for a redress of grievances.

SECTION 2.—No religious test shall ever be required as a condition of suffrage, or as a qualification to any office or public trust, in any State. No person shall ever be deprived of any of his or her rights, privileges or capacities, or disqualified for the performance of any public or private duty, or rendered incompetent to give evidence in any court of law or equity, in consequence of any opinions he or she may hold on the subject of religion. No person shall ever be required by law to contribute directly or indirectly to the support of any religious society or body of which he or she is not a voluntary member.

SECTION 3.—Neither the United States, nor any State, Territory, municipality, or any civil division of any State or Territory, shall levy any tax, or make any gift, grant, or appropriation, for the support, or in aid, of any church, religious sect, or denomination, or any school, seminary, or institution of learning, in which the faith or doctrines of any religious order or sect shall be taught or inculcated, or in which religious rites shall be observed; or for the support, or in aid, of any religious charity or purpose of any sect, order, or denomination whatsoever.

SECTION 4.—Congress shall have power to enforce the various provisions of this Article by appropriate legislation.

A LITTLE MORE "religion" has been turned on at St. James' Church, Hatcham. On the first Sunday of this month Mr. Toohy's presence in the chancel was the signal for a skirmish. An attempt had been made to restore the effects of the Ritualistic mise-en-scène. An oak cross had been replaced on the chancel screen; a large cross flanked by unlighted candles appeared on the communion-table; and the high altar was draped with curtains. The church was crowded, and when Mr. MacColl entered the pulpit an effort was made to cough him down. As the congregation were leaving the church at the end of the service, which had been conducted by the former vicar, someone exclaimed that the candles ought not to remain on the communion-table, and a Protestant Leaguer made a dash for the chancel gate. The chorists attempted to keep him out, and there was a general struggle, during which the gate was broken. The police were called in and the church was cleared. While a line of constables was drawn up on the altar-steps to prevent further violence, two mobs of Christian worshippers gathered in the street to shout defiance and sing hymns. In one camp "Hold the Fort" was sung, and in the other, "The Church's One Foundation." The constables finally dispersed the pious rioters.—N.Y. Tribune, Dec. 20.

[FOR THE INDEX.]

The Last Man.

A SPECULATION.

BY WILLIAM WICKERSHAM.

IN THE INDEX of July 19, 1877, there is quite an interesting speculation, under the heading of "The Last Man," as to what shall be the final fate of our race, and especially of its last member thereof; and since any one person, however gifted, cannot be supposed to take every thing into the grasp of his imagination, and because I feel in my inner consciousness that the subject is not nearly exhausted yet, I will venture a few ideas. Indeed, to my thinking, there is a grander, a nobler catastrophe for our race than was suggested in the article above referred to, or advanced by any one as yet.

I have long since been aware of the terrible doom that awaits the highest type of animal on this planet, indeed of all animals on the land; and I have felt it to be a solemn duty to reveal the same to my fellow-men. But on account of a sort of innate perverseness of my nature, I suppressed the sense of duty, from time to time, and I suppose I felt exactly as Jonah did, when he was commanded to declare the destruction of that great city and all the hosts thereof. Jonah did not want to do it; and so I did not want to tell my brother man how all the multiplied millions of mankind are to be swept from the face of the earth; how first his life is to be blotted out, then his flesh to moulder in the dust, then his bones to settle in the mud; then how, after ages and ages, this mud containing his bones is to become solid rock, and the race only to be known as a fossil; and then how, after myriads of millions of ages shall have passed away, and all the stratified rock in every part of the earth which contained the remains of man shall have become metamorphosed into granite; so that in all the earth there will not be a single vestige left, there shall not be a single indication that there ever was such a race on this planet,—I say I did not want to tell this to my brother man, and I did not tell him! But my conscience would not let me rest. Some men's consciences will go to sleep when desired, and trouble them never more; but the more I tried to quiet my conscience the more it would not be quieted. So I said to my conscience: "I will obey, I will carry the message"; and oh the joy, the inexpressible joy, of this virtuous resolution! Now here I am writing the message of the final doom of all my fellow-men who inhabit the earth!

It is well known to scientists that, during the carboniferous period, there were no land animals; that the atmosphere was so highly charged with carbonic acid gas, that no land animal could possibly live; and that this period extended through millions of ages,—that is, ages of the saurian; for, be it known, he was the nearest approach to a land animal then existing; yet he did not at all depend upon the air for his breathing, as the oxygen which he got for the renovation of his blood was mainly extracted from the water, the same as the fishes.

But this state of things, though fatal to land animals, was very favorable to the growth of vegetation. The atmosphere was about twice as great as at present, which kept the earth much warmer than it is now; just as a greater amount of clothing keeps us warmer. The higher temperature of the earth would naturally make the evaporation larger, and the showers of rain would be greater and more frequent. All of these conditions favored the growth of vegetation; and under these favoring circumstances the coal-beds began to form, which gradually stored up the carbon that was held in the air in the form of carbonic acid gas. In this way, it has been thought, by many scholars, the atmosphere was prepared for the advent of land animals; and the coal-beds were accumulated sufficiently to account for the great change which took place from the condition in which no land animal could live to the present condition. The most learned scientists have appeared to be satisfied with this explanation.

But the atmosphere is equal in weight to thirty-three feet in depth of water, covering the entire surface of our planet; and the sum of all the coal-beds in the world would not amount to one ten-millionth of this in weight; so that, if all of them were burned, and the resultant carbonic acid gas were thrown into the air, it would hardly be perceptible, either by analysis or by the state of health of animal life.

Now since it is known that during the carboniferous period the air was so highly charged with carbonic acid that no land animal could live, and since the coal-beds are so inconsiderable in amount as to be entirely insufficient to account for the change in the air which we know has taken place, the question arises, Where in the great store-house of carbon which has been cleared from the air, rendering it fit for land animals to breathe?

One thing it is proper to mention here, although it is not important in this discussion; namely, the limestone and chalk beds. Considering the great quantity of carbonate of lime deposited in the earth, the carbon therein contained would certainly amount to more than that stored up in all the coal-beds; yet there is the best of evidence that all the carbonate of lime which now exists existed at the beginning of the carboniferous period, so that the limestone had nothing to do with clearing the air of those poisonous gases which prevented animal life on the land. So the question recurs again, What has become of the immense amount of carbon with which our atmosphere was charged?

Recently there has been a great deal of attention paid to dredging in the deep seas, in search for the plants and animals inhabiting the floor of the ocean; and by a new invention of great ingenuity, men have been able to dredge to the greatest depths.

[FOR THE INDEX.]

FROTHINGHAM'S LIFE OF GERRIT SMITH.

GERRIT SMITH. A Biography. By Octavius Brooks Frothingham. New York: G. P. Putnam's Sons, 1878.

Within the past two years, several notable biographies have been given to the public. A not unworthy curiosity to divine the secret of a great or noble life, and a growing eagerness to search out springs of action and decide what limitations held, or what forces urged onward, the man or woman whose way we watched, fill this generation with an endless why; which has never since the days of Boswell been so fully answered as now. To know thoroughly such men as Macaulay, Kingsley, and Sumner, or such women as Harriet Martineau, is a public boon; and the only regret lies in the fact that partial friends or relatives have done their work too tenderly, and given us a picture made up solely of high lights or faintly suggested shadows. The backgrounds have been miracles of patient, conscientious work. Each detail of life has been given with the loving minuteness of the old Dutch masters; but the central figure we have been forced to outline more or less distinctly for ourselves, and are fortunate if the luminous halo part sufficiently to give the underlying shadows. An artist has worked here also, but one under whose hand grows something more than rare color and delicate outlines. The skilled anatomist shows his power as well, and through careful drapery and perfect flesh, iron muscles do their will, and nerves thrill at the touch of a master hand.

The name of Gerrit Smith recalls at once a struggle, part of a past, already fading away, and with which he was identified heart and soul through years of persecution and obloquy, which the present generation can hardly understand. The book is specially valuable as history, evidence being so carefully weighed, and documents and correspondence so skillfully arranged as to leave little work for the future. It is always a question, given a mass of chaotic material, whether the biographer will present a skeleton or a genuine human being. In this case there is no doubt; and Gerrit Smith, the young man of splendid presence, abounding vitality, and overflowing humanity; the philanthropist, leader, schemer, agitator; a life so generous and many-sided, it is hard to compress it within the compass of these four hundred pages,—lives again. Born to an inheritance of what to the Northern mind seemed almost boundless wealth, and the representative of what would in England be termed the landed gentry, having no parallel in this country save in the South before the war, there was every danger that coming into such possessions at the age he did, would insure a certain degree of "riotous living"; a sowing of wild oats not always incompatible with another and better harvest in the future. A sound and healthy nature, a broad education, and an inheritance of the common-sense and wide knowledge of men which had helped old Peter Smith on his way to fortune, kept the son in the same path, and insured judicious handling of the thousands, familiar to him as other men's tens.

The opening chapters carry us easily and pleasantly to the time, when, at the age of twenty-two, Gerrit Smith had laid upon him, the burden of an estate measured not by acres but by square miles. The law had been his choice as a profession; but in the face of such obligations, the desire was put away, and he devoted himself quietly to a life of noiseless but unceasing application. Remote from the great centres of action, remote even from the small—Albany being the nearest accessible point of cultivation,—his days passed in a round of duty which resulted in his becoming one of the best business managers of the time; though unlike his father he filled the rôle of distributor rather than accumulator. The storm of 1837 passed over his head, leaving him unharmed, John Jacob Astor having aided him by a heavy loan in one of the severest crises—a loan made without security, quarter of a million having changed hands,—and waited Gerrit Smith's own time and convenience for note or bond. No such transaction has before or since been known to take place in this country; and in these days of general distrust none such would be possible.

This intense absorption in business, lasting in great degree to the close of his life, ended any further progress in personal culture. A fair student while in college, his bent toward literature was not sufficiently strong to make books a vital part of his life. His library was principally State Reports, Digests, and Official Documents, with an occasional volume of poetry or religious experience. A man of heart and feeling, but never a profound thinker, his outlook was always in one sense limited. He strove for conformity with the religious experiences he loved to read, measured himself by the Calvinistic standard, and mourned over lapses into sin, or sighed for personal holiness, through the pages of a diary lasting for forty years. As the claims of public life increased, the entries lessen, and become rather a record of profane and indiscriminate giving, which yet found its apology in his own statement, that, as much might have been wasted in high living, it was at least a nobler form of waste to give, without asking curious questions. Colleges, North and South, received his bounty; free libraries were endowed; papers and magazines supported; academies founded. His own village of Peterboro drew upon him at will for the means for beautifying and improving it; beneficence here working the usual result of unintelligent aid, and making the villagers disinclined to the slightest personal exertion in such directions. His daily life was singularly free from ostentation. A plain though large house, of equally plain appointments, was filled from day to day with as motley a crowd of guests as ever gathered under one roof. Black and white, rich and poor; the itinerant minister or Quaker preacher; men and women with "mis-

When they came to try it in the deeper oceans, they found, to their great surprise, that the lower portions of the deeper oceans are immense reservoirs of liquid carbonic acid,—not pure, however, but a liquid forty per cent. of which is carbonic acid. It immediately became a question of interest: how came this great sub-ocean of carbonic acid to exist, and what power holds it in its present position?

In explaining this, I will say that water has an affinity, in a small degree, for carbonic acid, and will, under favorable circumstances, absorb a small portion of it. Especially where the water percolates through decaying vegetation, it absorbs a portion of the acid resulting from such decay. This impregnated water finds its way to the ocean; and in this way nearly all the water passing from the land into the ocean has a small per cent. of carbonic acid.

Now it has been found by experiment that, under a given and very great pressure, carbonic acid can be held in a liquid state, especially if it is diluted with water; hence it would seem that, when the water of the ocean (all of which contains a small per cent. of carbonic acid) finds its way by the varied currents to a depth where the pressure is great enough to hold diluted carbonic acid in a state of fluidity, then the tendency is for the acid to remain at that depth, as it heavier than water. At that depth there is no tendency for it to go into the gaseous state, on account of the pressure; while the water which brought the acid there in solution will tend to leave for places of less depth, because it is lighter than the acid. Hence, ever since there have been parts of the ocean deep enough to hold carbonic acid in a fluid state by the superincumbent weight of water above it, the acid has been accumulating, until there had become an immense sub-oceanic reservoir of acid, and the air was sufficiently cleared of the acid to render it fit for land animals. At the same time, a sufficiency of the acid remained in the air for the purpose of vegetable growth.

This state of things probably resulted at the end of the carboniferous period, and then an equilibrium was established; that is, there was so small a per cent. of carbonic acid taken by the water and carried to the reservoir at the bottom of the ocean, that it just equalled that which would be carried away from the reservoir accidentally by currents and returned to the air. Thus the per cent. of carbonic acid in the air has remained stationary ever since. But is this state of equilibrium to continue? What can change or disturb it?

It is well known that continental changes have heretofore taken place; and these changes have probably been going on ever since the world began, if it had a beginning. That is, that part of the earth's surface which is now land was once the floor of the ocean; and that part which is now the bottom of the ocean has at some time been the earth's continents. There is the best of evidence that this reverse of land and ocean has taken place many times. Careless observers, and persons who have not thought on the subject, are often led to conclude that, whatever changes might have taken place heretofore, the land and the ocean have at last become fixed and stable, and will never change again. But it requires only a little careful observation and thought to show any one that a grand continental reverse is now taking place. The continents are sinking; and the bottom of the ocean is rising, probably at as great a rate as ever it did. The law by which these changes have heretofore been effected is as active and vigorous as ever it was; and the effect of this law can be calculated with as great certainty as the motions of the planets as to fact, though not as to time.

Now I will give a bird's-eye view of the operation of the forces by which continents subside beneath the sea, and the floor of the ocean rises to become continents. This is accomplished largely by the action of water, which operates in three separate ways.

First, the sea, with ceaseless waves lashing against the shores, is forever making inroads upon the land.

Secondly, the rain falling upon the land is continually washing its surface into the brooks and rivers, which carry it into the edge of the ocean, whence a portion of it is transported by the various currents to the interior, where it is distributed over the bottom in the form of mud, most of which, in process of time, hardens into stratified rock.

Thirdly, the water which falls upon the land does not all flow off over the surface, but a part of it percolates through the soil, and, constantly flowing downwards even through the hardest rocks, some of it finds its way into channels and comes to the surface again in the form of springs. But it largely sinks down to very great depths, and passes from the solid earth at the bottom of the ocean. In its passage it frequently meets with earth and minerals which are soluble; in which case it carries these minerals (to the extent of their solubility) along with it and discharges them into the ocean. In this way the continent is being undermined, and honey-combed throughout its interior, and often, probably, to a much greater depth than the deepest ocean.

One instance of this interior washing is to be seen in the Mammoth Cave of Kentucky, which is found in a very extensive bed of limestone from forty to sixty feet in thickness. Overlying this is a hard, stratified rock, about forty feet thick, composed of clay and silica. Now this great bed of limestone, extending over a portion of Ohio, Kentucky, and Tennessee, is honey-combed by hundreds of caverns similar to the Mammoth Cave; and you will see all over that part of the country what are called land sinks, where the overlying rock, by the great weight of earth above, has broken through into the cave below, leaving a cavity in the surface of the land.

Now these caves in the beds of limestone are brought about in this wise: the rain falling on the surface of the land (where in the summer time there is a constant decay of vegetable matter) absorbs the carbonic acid which this decaying vegetation produces; it then soaks through the soil and earth, and percolates through the overlying clay and silica rock, and into the limestone, where its carbonic acid converts a small portion of the limestone into bicarbonate of lime, making it thereby soluble. A minute portion of it is thus carried down to unknown depths and out into the bottom of the ocean, where it is forming immense beds of marble or limestone; and these cavernous excavations will continue as long as the water continues to flow through; that is, as long as there is any of the land above the ocean. But when the continent once becomes submerged, then the caverns no longer increase, but begin to fill up, and the ocean continues to increase in depth over the submerging continent until all the cavities below its surface are filled up. But while this submergence of the sinking continent is proceeding, and giving place for the ocean to flow and grow deeper over it, the continents which have just emerged from the oceans will continue to rise above the water, or rather the water will continue to sink away from them, as the depth increases over the submerging continents. These new continents just raised from the oceans will have new conditions. To a considerable depth their surface, which has not had time to harden into rock, will be mud, or clay, or in a soft state, whatever the material. Underneath this will be the stratified rock, which is merely mud which has had sufficient time, and been under sufficient pressure, to harden into rock. Below this is the uneven surface of the old continents, before they were submerged the last time; and the entire new continents would be solid earth, having no cavities in them.

Now the same process will commence with the new continent which led to the submergence of the old one. The rains will descend upon it, washing away its surface, and excavating caverns beneath its surface; and the sea will commence its ceaseless washing of the shores, and the washing would probably proceed rapidly at first, as the whole length and breadth of their surfaces would be mud. But the washing would be very unequal over the surface, for two reasons: first, where the creeks and rivers ran, the washing would be greatest, and deep channels would be cut; and, secondly, it is reasonable to suppose that while still under the sea, a great number of springs would rise up through the mud deposited in the bottom of the ocean. Many of these would contain silicious and other mineral matter, which would facilitate the hardening of the mud into solid rock; so that great mountains of hard rock would be formed in the mud in such manner that, when the floor of the ocean rises up and becomes a continent, and the mud or soft parts are washed away, these rocky mountains still stand,—the mountains of the continent; although, when the continent first rose up above the water, it may have had no mountains. The present uneven condition of New Hampshire and Vermont is owing to the fact that, where the mountains are, was the hardest or rocky parts, washed slowly; while the low lands were soft, and now washed away much more.

I have carried this discussion further than might be needful, except for the purpose of impressing upon the reader the law by which these continental and oceanic reverses take place,—a law as fixed and certain and universal in its operation as the law by which water evaporates by heat, and condenses by cold; a law which will continue its activity, continue to submerge old continents and to build up new ones, so long as water evaporates from the earth and rains descend thereon.

Now, seeing that the submergence of one continent under the sea, and the rising up of another out of the ocean is not accident, as has been sometimes thought, but is as much in accordance with a fixed law as the revolution of the earth around the sun; and seeing that continents become submerged under the ocean so deeply that the lower region of the ocean became a great storehouse for the superabundance of carbonic acid in our atmosphere by reason of its great depth; and seeing that by an inevitable law, constantly in operation, the bottoms of these deep oceans are being raised up to become again dry land, and thereby throw again those great reservoirs of carbonic acid into our atmosphere; and seeing that this carbonic acid was in the atmosphere before land animals could or did live,—the question is a very pertinent one: What is to become of the land animals when this poisonous acid is thrown into the air again? Nothing is more certain than that it will be. It will continue to occupy the atmospheric position for a period indefinitely great, measured only by millions of ages. So you see that our race (which I very much love) has its doom sealed. I cannot express my regret and sorrow in making known this catastrophe of the human family, since it will disappoint and turn into bitter ashes the sublimest hopes of the heart. I know that thousands and thousands of the best of men and women living entertain the highest hopes of the kingdom of heaven on earth,—a millennium wherein there shall be no more pain; a Paradise which shall embrace the whole earth; a state of beatitude for all the saints of the kingdom, which shall last forever and ever. Knowing, as I do, what a joy there is in this hope for the saints, it makes me very sorrowful to crush their hopes with a rude hand, as I am doing, by disclosing the fact that this world is to perish utterly!

A PUBLIC SPOUTER while making a speech, paused in the midst of it, and exclaimed, "Now, gentlemen, what do you think?" Instantly a man rose in the assembly, and with one eye partially closed, modestly replied, "I think, sir—I do, indeed, sir,—I think if you and I were to tramp the country together, we would tell more lies than any other two men in the country, sir! and I'd not say a word during the whole time, sir."

slons" or without, who wandered that way and claimed the always-ready hospitality; men of one idea and men of all ideas met, went, and came, unchallenged. In Washington it was much the same. And even the Southern hatred of abolitionism was not strong enough to withstand the charm of this magnetic presence, broad geniality, and the manners of a prince, the natural outgrowth of a princely nature.

The darkest shadow on Gerrit Smith's life falls from his connection with John Brown; and here Mr. Frothingham's work is seen at its best. With a delicacy which spares to the utmost the feelings of surviving friends, yet with the keenest sense of justice, and an unswerving honesty characteristic of all his work, the biographer makes plain the part which the great philanthropist took in this emergency,—in one sense the touchstone of his whole theory of life. That in spite of professions and assertions, the stamp of moral cowardice must rest upon his action at this crisis, is perhaps not the fault of the man, but of the insidious disease which for a time clouded all his powers, and forced his friends to place him under treatment in the asylum at Utica. For details the reader must refer to the volume itself, which will take permanent place as a brilliant and yet absolutely accurate record of a life the knowledge of which no American can afford to be without.

Not altogether great, not altogether wise or good, the name of Gerrit Smith is yet the synonym of beneficence and kindness. The opportunity came to him, as it comes to all masters of wealth; but in his case there was no evasion, no waiting for a problematical future. He seized it in its coming, welcomed and used it, and turned the stream of gold once for all into the channel of humanity.

CAMPBELL WHEATON.

NEW YORK.

[FOR THE INDEX.]

HAMLEY'S "VOLTAIRE."

VOLTAIRE. By General Hamley. Second volume of "Foreign Classics for English Readers," edited by Mrs. Oliphant. Edinburgh: Messrs. Blackwood & Sons. 1877.

Voltaire, atheist and infidel, scoffer and scorner of all things sacred; Voltaire, who in his last hours turned coward, and, making peace with Holy Mother Church, died in the odor of sanctity!

This, Mr. Editor, is the account given of the illustrious philosopher of Farnay, by those who desire to glorify the power of their creed at the expense of truth. Among scholars and men of letters we think there will be but one opinion regarding this contribution by General Hamley, not only to the series of foreign classics, but to literature generally.

Voltaire is, for the first time, here given to the reading public of to-day as he was.

To quote his biographer: "An infinitely better man than the religious bigots of his time. He believed, with far better effect on his practice than they could boast, in a Supreme Ruler. He was the untiring and eloquent advocate at the bar of the universe of the rights of humanity." Brave words these, even in the nineteenth century, in eulogy of a man whom the Church has for one hundred years branded as an outcast because he was the avowed enemy of sacerdotalism and priestcraft.

How could it be otherwise with his enthusiasm for humanity and its rights? How could he regard this body of men with other sentiments than those of horror and disgust when we remember their deeds? In 1768, sacerdotalism was rampant. Le Chevalier de Labarre, only eighteen years old, was burned at the stake because he did not salute a procession of Capuchin monks; and into the flames that consumed this unhappy victim of sacerdotal rage, the priests threw the philosophical works of that day, and among them Voltaire's famous Dictionnaire Philosophique. To his friend and fellow-worker on the "Encyclopædia," Diderot, Voltaire writes at this moment entreating him "to escape these tiger Jesuits and take refuge in Russia, and there under the protection of the Empress Catherine, far from his ungrateful country, achieve his work in peace, a work destined to be one of the glories of French literature." Voltaire with his illustrious contemporaries, Diderot, Rousseau, and d'Alembert, were in Orthodox opinion all tarred with the same brush. And why? Because, with all the might of a righteous wrath, these men sought to crush the beast Fanaticism. Ecrasez l'infame. This was Voltaire's famous watchword in his untiring struggle with the Jesuits, a motto which has been interpreted by the Church of to-day, "Down with Jesus Christ."

General Hamley says, "It is in writing to d'Alembert that Voltaire so frequently insists on the necessity of putting an end to what he designates as 'The Infamous.' I want you to crush the 'Infamous'; that is the great point. It must be reduced to the position that it holds in England; 'tis the greatest service that can be rendered to the human race. You will perceive that I speak only of superstition; as for religion I love and respect it as you do.'"

Voltaire, in the above sentence, paid a fine tribute to the character of the religious thought of England at that period. He was fortunate in meeting, during his exile here from persecution at home, those giants of freethought, Bolinbroke, Toland, Collins, etc. Men who are with us again to-day under other aspects, though it is a much less dangerous indulgence to express deism and theism now, than it was in the eighteenth century.

"England," (says our author), "appeared to him at once the land of reason and the paradise of men of letters. From the stand-point of these shores tyranny of all sorts in France wore a new aspect. There he had only dreamed of what a country might be if relieved from the domination of priests and despots; here he saw what it was. Liberty was no longer an idea but a fact; and thenceforth superstition, oppression, and ignorance were the 'Gorgons and Hydras and Chimeras dire' against which he vowed to wage perpetual war."

We quote this sentence in full not only because it places a much maligned man in his true light before the judgment-bar of humanity, but also as illustrative of the fine appreciative view of Voltaire's biographer, and of the literary excellence of style which is so striking a charm in General Hamley's work.

We halt a moment after reading Voltaire's verdict on English liberalism to think what he would have said of us to-day. We fear between then and now there has been a considerable amount of crab-like movement going on, from which many are only just beginning to rouse themselves. There are still too many of the Johnsonian and Boswellian type of mind who are divided in opinion as to which was the worse man of the two! Rousseau or Voltaire. Chap. I.—"Sir, do you think him as bad a man as Voltaire?" inquired Boswell. "Why, sir," returned the doctor, "it is difficult to settle the proportion of iniquity between them."

General Hamley in his translation from the Henriade, which he classes as "one of the great epics," shows himself complete master of the language, and possessed with a fine poetic instinct. We quote the following stanza as evidence of our author's powers, and because the sentiments expressed by the hero of the Henriade rebut of themselves the charge made against Voltaire that he was an "irreligious sceptic":—

"What is," said Henry, speaking to himself,
"The law supreme by God for mortals made?
Does he condemn them that they shut their eyes
To knowledge which himself has made obscure?
Does he an unjust master judge their acts
By code of Christians which they never knew?
No; He who made us means to save us all;
On all sides he instructs us, speaks to us;
Gravely on every heart a natural law
Alone unchangeable and ever pure.
Doubtless by this law the heathen judged;
They too are Christians if their hearts be right."

Yet for such unimpeachable sentiments as these was their author hunted from his country and hounded from society as an unorthodox and ungodly infidel.

Voltaire was simply a sceptic on religious grounds. He doubted that the hierarchy of the Church and its satellites were divinely commissioned by God to work the evil deeds done in his name. This sceptic's conception of Deity was too grand and reverent to accept the ideal of it offered by the Catholic Christian Church.

Voltaire and Diderot would be quite in fashion to-day with their Universalism; for is it not the creed of all liberal Christians? Dean Stanley, Principal Tulloch, and many eminent men on both sides the Atlantic, would extend the right hand of fellowship to such an illustrious example of toleration, one who declared in admiration, "that an Englishman goes to heaven like a free man, by the road that pleases him best" (p. 91).

If Voltaire said this of the England of 1700, he would undoubtedly say it of the America of to-day. To those who are about to honor this fearless pioneer of freedom of opinion, the birthright of man, we can offer no better suggestion in celebration of his centenary than to sow broadcast among their countrymen this work by General Hamley. From the labors of so competent a scholar and critic, the truth about Voltaire will thus be known.

Let priests and sacerdotalists fall foul if they list of one so immeasurably their superior, though it would be difficult even for such to brand with the titles of atheist and infidel that man who, as General Hamley relates, murmured with feeble lips this benediction over the grandson of your illustrious citizen, Benjamin Franklin, "God, Liberty, Tolerance."

LONDON, December, 1877.

RADICALISM IN NEW YORK CITY.

On Sunday all New York turns out and goes to church. No, not all. There is the large body of stay-at-homes, to whom allusion was made in a former article published in the Telegram, and who think they serve God just as well by lying a little late in bed, and sauntering lazily through the day, as they would by attending church in a lackadaisical and perfunctory manner. Then, in addition to the stay-at-homes, there is the by no means small number of people who, in the summer at least, spend Sunday out of doors, either at the Park or at one of the thousand and one suburban resorts, and in the winter take to skating, or sleighing, or visiting, as the best means of passing the Sabbath period. Still, the number of church-attenders is exceedingly large. The Roman Catholic and Protestant churches—which represent the two great religious bodies in this city—are full; and all the various sects and denominations outside of these are well represented. Any one who walks the streets of New York on Sunday from twelve to one o'clock, noon, will become convinced that we are a church-going people; and that, whether we have much religion or not, we certainly go through a great deal of the formula of worship.

THE CRY OF ATHEISM.

Nevertheless, a cry comes from the Orthodox pulpit that atheism and infidelity were never more rampant in New York than they now are. That pulpit points to three principal influences as the stimulus to this infidelity. One of them is the preaching of Mr. Frothingham; the second is the preaching of Professor Adler; and the third is to be found in the meetings held by the Spiritualists. Thus say the Orthodox. It must be borne in mind that the Telegram is not expressing its own opinion in the matter, but merely that of the denominations which hold to what Theodore Parker used to describe as the popular theology. Mr. Frothingham, as all know, preaches every Sunday morning in Masonic Hall, at the northeast corner of Sixth Avenue and Twenty-third Street, and he only preaches one sermon per week, which is quite enough, provided it be good. (It might be added, in passing, that Mr. Frothingham's sermons always are good.) Professor Adler, who was born a Jew, but who has emancipated himself from the traditions and beliefs of his race, is President of the Society of Ethical Culture, and preaches every Sunday morning in Standard Hall, at the north-east corner of Broadway and Fortieth Street. He is also a believer in but one sermon per week, and has just founded an ethical school, in which children are to be educated in the principles of morality apart from any set religious belief. It is a creedless school.

WHO, WHAT, AND WHERE.

There are several Spiritualists' rooms in the city where medium and trance-speakers hold forth from Sunday to Sunday. Each of the places we have thus mentioned is visited by many intelligent people. Some of the most intellectual men and women in New York attend the Sunday morning services of Mr. Frothingham. He is to some extent a favorite with actors and actresses, who find in him a finer and more delicate sympathy with their profession than they are likely to find among the Orthodox preachers. Many Jews, also, who no longer have any conscientious attachment to the religion of their fathers, go Sabbath after Sabbath to the Masonic Temple. Professor Adler's congregation is, to a large extent, made up of Jews, who desire a more positive light than that shed by the writings of Moses. The ensemble at Standard Hall is decidedly Hebraic; but here and there you encounter a Christian face, and the proportion of Christians is daily becoming larger. The intelligence of the congregations is beyond dispute. With respect to the assemblies of the Spiritualists, not quite so good an account can be given. Intelligence you will meet with, but intelligence does not predominate. So much eccentricity, so much ignorance, so much that is illogical and credulous and queer, are mixed together in the Spiritualist meetings, that a perfectly fair and liberal man cannot give them his unqualified admiration.

NO RELIGIOUS WAR PERCEPTIBLE.

It might, perhaps, be as well to remind the Orthodox world, that at none of the places thus specified would an acknowledgment of atheism be made. Certainly the man who addresses a prayer to a Supreme Being, as Mr. Frothingham and Professor Adler do, each Sunday, cannot justly be accused of atheism. The charge of infidelity may, perhaps, be sustained,—that is, unbelief in regard to certain tenets which are held as irrefutable by the Orthodox churches. As little can the accusation of atheism be sustained when brought against the Spiritualists. The belief that the spirits of the departed can and do revisit the earth, and hold communion with the living, is not tantamount to a disbelief in the existence of one Supreme Head. That the Orthodox churches should have no liking for the two thought-leaders that have been mentioned, and just as little liking for the various societies of Spiritualists, is natural. No thorough believer in the popular religion—that is, religion as it is taught in Roman Catholic and Protestant churches—could possibly give an approving hand-shake to Mr. Frothingham, Professor Adler, or to all the respective lights of Spiritualism. But, meanwhile, the various places where what has been felicitously called "the absolute religion" is taught, irrespective of creeds, are very well attended, and the amenities of the age permit no prospect of a religious war.—N. Y. Evening Telegram, Dec. 15, 1877.

TAXING CHURCH PROPERTY.

The leading editorial in THE INDEX of the 2d inst. is devoted to the discussion of the question, "Which Promotes Immorality—Infidelity or Christianity?" THE INDEX is the exponent of the views of a religious association which accepts every result of science and sound learning without seeking to harmonize it with the Bible; and recognizes no other authority than reason and right. It advocates the total separation of Church and State, the abrogation of Sabbatarian laws, the secularization of all public schools, and the equitable taxation of church property. It is edited by Francis E. Abbot, a man of culture and high moral worth, who is assisted by a corps of able contributors. The article referred to above seems to have been suggested by a recent publication in the St. Louis Christian Advocate of "An Open Letter to a Disbeliever," in which the statement is made that "infidelity is spreading, and in exact proportion to its spread is the increase of crime among us." The writer in THE INDEX denies the proposition, and insists that freethought is not dangerous to morality, and is therefore not an enemy to society. He argues that justice is the essential part of morality, and that Christianity has seized and desperately defends certain great privileges and advantages in the government in persistent defiance and contempt of justice between man and man. Among these unjust assumptions is that which permits ecclesiastical organizations the right to tax every citizen for the support of its own gospel, no matter whether he believes in that gospel or not. In other words, it exempts church property from taxation, and thus imposes the burden of its protection and guardianship upon the community at large, who have neither pecuniary nor personal interest in its maintenance. Thus every wealthy church which is exempt from the assessors' visitations by law, imposes upon the other property of the community where it exists a heavier load. If this exemption were in the interest of piety and virtue, if its end and object were to encourage men and women in a Christian life, the injustice would be less apparent, and the favoritism would have some show of reason. But when the exemption is in the interest of vice and criminality; when what the church organization saves in taxes is expended in the demoralization of the community, and in extending the boundaries and strengthening the stability of "Satan's kingdom,"—it becomes a crime against society, for the suppression of which legislation should provide either prevention or penalty. "For all such persons," says THE INDEX, "who cannot see any inherent wrong in the non-taxation of church property, we now publish certain amazing and damning facts about Trinity Church, in New York city, which ought to sweep away all church exemptions in a whirlwind of public indignation. These facts we have learned on private testimony so direct and precise, and from a witness so careful, truthful, and honorable, that we are willing to vouch for their accuracy, and to challenge denial from the Christian press of the country." THE INDEX then gives a list of the vast real estate possessions in New York city of the Trinity Church Corporation, amounting, at a low valuation, to fully $70,000,000; and states that the land under buildings covering more than forty squares, in the heart of the city, pays no tax, though the lessees pay taxes on the buildings they have erected upon it. Pursuing the inquiry, how this colossal property earns its exemption from taxation—how it pays to New York city in "good moral influence" for the $1,750,000 which it compels the rest of the city to pay as annual taxes in its stead.—It finds "from the official records in the offices of the Chief of Police and the Excise Commissioners, that the real estate of Trinity Church supports seven hundred and sixty-four liquor saloons and ninety-six known houses of prostitution (ninety-two white and four colored), with many others suspected to be such." This is rather a bad record for the wealthiest church in the country, the members of which profess to be followers of the humble Nazarene, who went about doing good, and from it THE INDEX deduces the moral that "all this infamy is the result of the non-taxation of church property; and that, if the churches raised their voices in favor of their own taxation, the just measure of redress for a grievous wrong could be carried at once, and thereby would be rendered a great, noble, and conspicuous service to the public morals."—Boston Herald, Jan. 7.

WHERE HEAT CAME FROM.

There has been a long dispute between the physicists and mathematicians on the one hand, and the geologists and biologists on the other, as to the age of the earth, or rather, since that is equally involved, the age of the sun. Dr. Croll, the distinguished Scotch geologist, has recently offered a theory which is not altogether new, but admits of some novel arguments, and which may serve all parties to the dispute. Beginning with a review of the different theories as to the sun's heat, he rejects the combustion theory as totally inadequate, since if the sun were all a mass of burning coal, it would not last over five thousand years; the chemical theory does not prolong the duration sufficiently; the meteoric theory will not serve; the only remaining explanation is the gravitation or condensation theory. This supposes that the materials of the solar system were originally a nebula, extending through a space many times greater than the orbit of Neptune. The falling together, the condensation of this amount of matter, it can be mathematically shown, would supply enough heat to keep the sun at its present temperature for twenty million years. Unfortunately, that period is not sufficient for the geologist. He demands at least one hundred million years for the changes of the earth's surface, and would prefer twice that length of time. The arguments of the geologist are almost unanswerable; those of the biologist who believes in evolution tend to the same point so far as they go. Prof. Croll says that there is a way out of this difficulty, by supposing that the nebula was not cold but hot. If you suppose it hot enough to start with, you will have heat enough to carry you through. Obviously it is just as easy to suppose a hot nebula as a cold one. But Prof. Croll proposes to provide for this original heat. If the solar system had originally consisted of two masses, each of half the density of the whole, at some immeasurable distance apart, and they fell foul of each other owing to their mutual gravitation, they would strike with a speed of two hundred and seventy-four miles per second. If their motion were stopped by the concussion, an amount of heat would be developed sufficient to convert the whole into a nebula that would take fifty million years to cool. This is decidedly an improvement on the cold nebula. But this supposes that the component halves, before they started on their way to a collision, had no motion. Let us suppose that they were moving beforehand at the rate of two hundred and two miles per second, and that this speed was added to what they got by gravitating toward each other; then we get, when they struck, a nebula extending beyond Neptune, and with heat enough for a sun of one hundred million years' duration. If you insist upon two hundred million, you must give the original masses a speed of six hundred and seventy-six miles per second, beforehand. It will be objected that no such motion has been observed in space. Even the planets do not make such fast time,—the earth, for instance, going only a thousand miles in a minute. The fixed stars whose motion has been ascertained travel very much slower. But Prof. Croll says the fixed stars are those that have gone through the collision process, and have lost their motion. The new hypothesis goes behind the ordinary nebular theory in point of time, giving an explanation for the formation of the nebulae. But it presupposes that there may be vast, cold, inviolable masses of matter rushing through space with such velocity that their mere touch would convert our globe into red-hot gases and distribute it through infinite space. The conception is not incompatible with the sudden flaming out of a new star and its conversion into a nebula, as seems to have been the case with the Schmidt star in Cygnus;

but the facts in that remarkable case were probably not known to Prof. Croll at the time his essay was written.—New York Tribune.

A CURIOUS WILL.

A farmer, named Rothgele, lately died in Gallipolis, Ohio, having left a will containing the curious provisions given below. These provisions the circuit court of Gallio County has forbidden the executors to carry into effect; and the case has been taken to the Supreme Court of the State. Judge J. B. Stallo, of Cincinnati, is attorney for the executors, and feels confident of success:—

"It is my will that a white marble monument three feet square, without taper, and six feet high, with the top dressed slightly conical, and the perpendicular angles bevelled with two faces about an inch wide, forming three equal angles to be set upon a granite base, if the same can be had without too much trouble and expense; if so, a rock of a durable kind in the vicinity may be taken, which base should be four and a half or five feet square, and two feet thick, to be set up upon the Brison hill, near my shop, if the same can be purchased; if not, the most suitable that can be had—not in a graveyard, and not far from the road, and in sight of the river will do,—and the following inscription engraven thereon in plain English letters, proportioned to the space on the monument, and the length of the inscription beginning on the side next to the road and not come lower down than necessary; which is to say:—

"The blue sky, with all things therein, is termed the universe, which is infinite in extent in all directions and eternal in duration. No definite thing in the universe is eternal of duration, all definite things being of a changeable nature, creation and destruction being the constant result. Life is natural to certain arrangements of matter and imponderable agents, and is a phenomenon of their peculiar chemical action upon each other. The earth is of great age—probably a million of years,—having been subject to both gradual and revolutionary changes, the great age being most certainly known from approximate calculations of the time necessary for the streams to carry away the rock which once filled their deep channels and wide valleys. The Bible is wholly of human origin, as an impartial critical reading will prove, and contains nothing which human invention could not produce.

"All the gods worshipped now and in times past are imaginary beings of as many forms and attributes as there are individuals to imagine. All the God there is in reality is in the operation of the laws of nature. Christ had a natural father as all other men; and, if Joseph was not his father, he was not the Christ. He did not really rise from the dead any more than did thousands of other men whose ghosts have been imaginarily seen by the most honest men. Strong faith and excitement cause the conception to exceed the senses in brightness; when imaginary objects are taken for real ones, of such as believed only saw them.

"Death is the eternal dissolution of the soul and body of men and the inferior animals,—the soul as the flame of a lamp blown out is no more, and the body decomposing never to be composed again."

"The inscription ends here. The monument I wish to be set up as soon as the proceeds of my farm are sufficient to pay the costs."—Missouri Republican, Dec. 16.

HERE IS A doleful story of "The Sabbath-Breaker and his End," taken from the Presbyterian, which is certain to put a sudden stop to all embarkations on Sunday for all time to come: "About twenty-five years ago, a very wealthy, but a very wicked merchant, was doing a prosperous business in the city of New York. Among his other sins against God, that of Sabbath-breaking seemed most manifest, and he appeared to take delight in violating the Lord's day. As he did business on a very large scale, he at one time gathered up one million and a half of money, all in the old Spanish milled dollars, which was considered the best currency to send to China, to which his trade had been directed; and as several vessels would be required to bring home the return cargo, he divided his million and a half dollars into seven parts, and putting it into seven ships, sent them to China. But to show his contempt for God and his law, he determined to send them to sea on seven consecutive Sabbaths, intending, perhaps, in this way to test the question as to who should rule, he or Jehovah. The ships went out safely with the money, and returned with the merchandise. They were neither engulfed in the ocean nor wrecked on a lee shore; but when the voyages were settled up, there was a loss of one-third of the money, one million being returned, and five hundred thousand sunk in the enterprise. Loss after loss succeeded, and in about four years after the rich merchant died a bankrupt. Now, was this Providence? Was it God's controversy with a wicked man? or was it a 'chance thing' that happened?"

HAPPILY, the faith which saves is attached to the saving doctrines in the Bible, which are very simple; not to its literary and scientific criticism, which is very hard. And no man is to be called "infidel" for his bad literary and scientific criticism of the Bible; but if he were, how dreadful would the state of our Orthodox theologians be! They themselves freely fling about this word "infidel" at all those who reject their literary and scientific criticism, which we see to be quite false. It would be but just to mete to them with their own measure, and to condemn them by their own rule; and, when they air their unsound criticism in public, to say indignantly, The bishop of So-and-so, the dean of So-and-so, and other infidel lecturers of the present day! or, That rampant infidel, the archdeacon of So-and-so, in his recent letter on the Athanasian Creed! or, The Rock, the Church Times, and the rest of the infidel press! or, The torrent of infidelity which pours every Sunday from our pulpits! Just it would be, and by no means inurbane; but hardly, perhaps, Christian. Therefore we will not permit ourselves to say it; but it is only kind to point out, in passing, to these loud and rash people to what they expose themselves at the hands of adversaries less scrupulous than we are.—Arnold's "Literature and Dogma."

Poetry.

THE GAME OF LIFE.

[Omar Khayyam, the "Astronomer-Poet" of Persia, was born in the latter half of the eleventh, and died within the first quarter of the twelfth, century. His epicurean audacity of thought and speech caused him to be regarded askance in his own time and country. The following stanzas, which we have taken the liberty to call "The Game of Life," are a sample of his singular poem entitled "Rubaiyat."—Prometheus.]

Strange, is it not? that of the myriads who
Before us pass'd the door of darkness through,
Not one returns to tell us of the road,
Which to discover we must travel too.

The Revelations of devout and learn'd,
Who rose before us, and as prophets burn'd,
Are all but stories which, awoke from sleep,
They told their fellows, and to sleep return'd.

I sent my soul through the invisible,
Some letter of that after-life to spell;
And by-and-by my soul returned to me
And answered, "I myself am heaven and hell."

Heaven but the vision of fulfill'd desire
And hell the shadow of a soul on fire,
Cast on the darkness into which ourselves,
So late emerged from, shall so soon expire.

We are no other than a moving row
Of magic shadow-shapes that come and go
Round with this sun-illumined lantern held
In midnight by the Master of the show.

Impotent pieces of the game He plays
Upon this chequer-board of nights and days;
Hither and thither moves, and checks, and slays,
And one by one back to the closet lays.

The ball no question makes of ayes and noes,
But right or left as strikes the player goes;
And He that toss'd you down into the field,
He knows about it all—He knows—He knows!

The Moving Finger writes; and, having writ,
Moves on; nor all your piety nor wit
Shall lure it back to cancel half a line,
Nor all your tears wash out a word of it.

And that inverted bowl they call the sky,
Whereunder crawling, cooped we live and die;
Lift not your hands to it for help—for it
As impotently rolls as you or I.

With earth's first clay they did the last man knead,
And there of the last harvest sow'd the seed;
And the first morning of creation wrote
What the last dawn of reckoning shall read.

Yesterday this Day's madness did prepare,
To-morrow's silence, triumph, or despair.
Drink! for you know not whence you came, nor why,
Drink! for you know not why you go, nor where.

CASH RECEIPTS.

N.B.—Postage stamps are not included here, though credited on subscriptions, etc.

FOR THE WEEK ENDING JANUARY 19.

F. H. Cooper, $12; D. Sandman, $3; H. B. McNair, $2.40; C. B. Hoffman, $1; A. Bate, $6.40; M. B. Linton, $3.45; G. F. Matthew, 25 cents; Nelson Thwing, $3.25; Henry T. Wright, $1.25; D. B. Dunning, 50 cents; Harry Grundy, $4; E. M. Wicks, $3.25; W. E. Harriman, $3; Mrs. M. A. Patrick, 75 cents; B. F. Chapman, $9.60; George N. Fletcher, $3.20; Julius Rosenthal, $6; Isaac May, $3; Smith Wright, $3.20; Clark & Co., $19.50; Dr. A. A. Bell, $6; C. Vonnegut, $10; Cary Brothers, $10; Miss S. King, $1; R. P. Thompson, $5; James W. White, $1; J. P. Eganey, $5.50; Mrs. M. A. Tripler, $3.50; Mrs. L. Maria Child, $3.20; W. H. Eastman, 80 cents; S. G. Morgan, $3.20; Wm. A. Wall, $3.20; George Stickney, $3.40; E. Brown, $10; William Inott, $3; Dr. C. W. Estabrook, $8; Joseph Barnadall, $3.20; J. T. Thornton, $3.20; Lewis G. James, $3.20; Rufus Perkins, $3.20; Rev. H. M. Simmons, $3.20; John H. Lull, $13.20; James McTurk, $3; James Underhill, $1; H. McVean, $2; F. W. Titus, $4.40; Rev. Flake Barrett, $3.20; J. C. Delano, $3.20; W. H. Thilghast, $1.60; Philena Carlin, $3.20; Mrs. R. Ireson, $10; Cash, $2; Dr. H. K. Oliver, $4.40; D. W. Hyde, $3.20; James Humphrey, $3.20; S. L. Hull, $6.40; S. H. Roper, $23.20; Richard Humphrey, $3.20; J. H. Butterfield, 25 cents; George Martin, 50 cents; R. L. Roys, $1; S. N. Allen, 20 cents; R. Refer, Jr., 50 cents; L. G. James, 10 cents; Dr. J. E. Jones, $1.75; P. Tavey, $2; John R. Thomas, $2; American News Co., $5.80; George Allen, $1.70; Jas. F. Richardson, $10; J. H. Morrison, $4.10; L. P. Babb, M.D., $3.20; Mrs. A. S. White, $3.20; W. N. Clark, $3.20; T. J. Atwood, $3.20; Mrs. Dr. Wm. H. Wilbur, $3.20; Mrs. S. R. Morgan, $6.40; S. L. Smith, $2.20; R. W. Love, $3.40; A. Frigman, $1.50; John C. Haynes, $3.20; George H. Foster, $2.20; Thomas S. Murray, $1.10; F. W. Evans, $3; Wm. H. Grose, $3.20; D. K. Boutelle, $3.20; Sarah F. Earle, $3; W. H. Badger, $3; Wm. J. D. Way, $3; S. Corner, $3; Myron Smith, $3.

All receipts of cash will be acknowledged as above, and no other receipt sent unless specially requested. Persons who do not see their remittances acknowledged within three weeks after sending, will please notify us.

N.B.—Please remit by post-office money-order, by registered letter, or by draft on Boston or New York. Checks on interior banks are liable to discount, and the term of subscription will be proportionally shortened in the credit.

N.B.—Orders for Tracts or single numbers of THE INDEX which are not on hand will, if of small amount, be otherwise filled to the same amount without further notice.

N.B.—Please examine the ADDRESS and DATE on your INDEX mail-tag, and report at once any error in either.

The Index.

BOSTON, JANUARY 24, 1878.

THE INDEX is published every Thursday by the INDEX ASSOCIATION, at No. 231 WASHINGTON STREET, BOSTON. TOLEDO OFFICE, No. 35 Monroe Street: J. T. FREY, Agent and Clerk. All letters should be addressed to the Boston Office.

N. B.—No contributor to THE INDEX, editorial or otherwise, is responsible for anything published in its columns except for his or her own individual statements. Editorial contributions will in every case be distinguished by the name or initials of the writer.

TO VOLUNTARY CONTRIBUTORS.—Only Short Articles desired. Unused Manuscripts not returned.

FRANCIS ELLINGWOOD ABBOT, Editor.
OTAVIUS BROOKS FROTHINGHAM, WILLIAM J. POTTER, WILLIAM H. SPENCER, MRS. E. D. CHESNEY, GEORGE JACOB HOLYOAKE (England), DAVID H. CLARK, MRS. ELIZABETH CADY STANTON, J. L. STODDARD, ELLIUS WRIGHT, C. D. B. MILLS, W. D. LE SOEUR, BENJ. F. UNDERWOOD, ALBERT WARREN KELSEY, Editorial Contributors.

A CARD.

The Committee on the better establishment of THE INDEX, appointed at a meeting of its subscribers and friends last May, wish to enlist all the assistance they can to lay its claims before every liberal man and woman in our country. They have prepared a circular setting forth the method, motives, and objects of their action, and wish the names of all who are willing to assist them in placing it where it will do good. Please address the Chairman of the Committee, "Ellisur Wright, P. O. Box 109, Boston, Mass."

A REQUEST TO LIBERAL EDITORS.

At a meeting of the Directors of the National Liberal League, held in this city on Friday, January 18, it was

Voted, To request the editors of liberal papers all over the country to publish the Directors' "Call to Organize" new Local Auxiliary Liberal Leagues on Washington's birthday,—also the "Card" of the Financial Committee, as follows:—

Call to Organize.

CITIZENS of the United States who indorse the appended political platform adopted in convention by the National Liberal League, at Rochester, N.Y., Oct. 26, 1877, are requested to meet in their respective cities and towns on Washington's Birthday, Feb. 22, 1878, for the purpose of organizing themselves into Local Auxiliary Liberal Leagues in accordance with the provisions of the National Liberal League Constitution. Copies of the latter and blanks for organization can be obtained from W. H. Hamlen, Secretary, 231 Washington Street, Boston, or from H. L. Green, Chairman of the Executive Committee, Salamanca, N.Y.

FRANCIS E. ABBOT,
WILLIAM H. HAMLEN,
J. A. J. WILCOX,
H. L. GREEN,
D. G. CRANDON,
Directors
N.L.L.

BOSTON, Jan. 18, 1878.

Platform of the National Liberal League.

1. TOTAL SEPARATION OF CHURCH AND STATE, to be guaranteed by amendment of the United States Constitution: including the equitable taxation of church property, secularization of the public schools, abrogation of Sabbatharian laws, abolition of chaplaincies, prohibition of public appropriations for religious purposes, and all other measures necessary to the same general end.

2. NATIONAL PROTECTION FOR NATIONAL CITIZENS, in their equal civil, political, and religious rights: to be guaranteed by amendment of the United States Constitution, and afforded through the United States courts.

3. UNIVERSAL EDUCATION THE BASIS OF UNIVERSAL SUFFRAGE IN THIS SECULAR REPUBLIC: to be guaranteed by amendment of the United States Constitution, requiring every State to maintain a thoroughly secularized public school system, and to permit no child within its limits to grow up without a good elementary education.

N.B.—The nomination of candidates upon the above platform was postponed to a future Congress of the National Liberal League.

A Card.

The Finance Committee of the National Liberal League, in consequence of the lack of funds in the Treasury, and of the fact that the Directors are able to do so little of the important work that ought to be done, appeal to all lovers of liberty for financial help, to enable them to publish and disseminate the views of able writers in behalf of the principles of the Rochester Platform, and to advance the common cause in other equally proper ways.

If earnest liberals throughout the United States will contribute one dollar apiece (with as much more as their generosity shall prompt or their means permit), in order to become Annual Members of the National Liberal League, they will furnish the requisite aid, and the work shall be done.

DANIEL G. CRANDON, } Financial
HARLAN P. HYDE, } Committee
SARAH B. OTIS, } N.L.L.

SPECIAL NOTICE.

Attention is specially called to a change in the advertisement of the Publications of the Free Religious Association. By a recent vote of the Executive Committee the Annual Reports of the Association, from the year 1872 to the year 1877 inclusive, are now offered at five cents each (and at the same rate for any larger number) to any body who will take the trouble to send for them, enclosing five cents in postage stamps. They will also be sold at the office for the same sum to any one calling for them there.

The Committee have put the pamphlets at this low rate, which hardly more than covers the cost of sending them by mail, with the hope that they may thereby be more extensively circulated. By referring to the advertisement describing their contents, it will be seen that they contain much matter of special interest on the most vital religious problems of the age. It is not too much to say that some of the most valuable contributions of the last five years to religious discussion may be found in these pamphlets. Let any one who wants to know what the Free Religious Association means, send for these Reports. And will not the members and friends of the Association take this opportunity to extend the knowledge of its principles?

WM. J. POTTER, Secretary F.R.A.

THE LIBERAL LEAGUE of Minneapolis, Minnesota, have just reorganized and voted to apply for a charter, which has been already forwarded. The new officers are—President, S. C. Gale; Vice-President, W. W. Ross; Secretary, Frank J. Mead; Treasurer, J. B. Bassett. Every such accession to the roll of affiliated Leagues adds strength to the national movement and gives encouragement to its friends. Mr. Mead (in whom the readers of THE INDEX will recognize an old friend) writes cheerily as follows: "We have reorganized and placed the League on a stronger and more enduring basis. Never has a greater interest been manifested in this city than at present in the movement for the entire secularization of the State."

HERE is one more significant indication of a stealthy march to political supremacy on the part of the Church-Power. Such signs of the times are constantly thrusting themselves on the notice of all who are not hopelessly unobservant. In the New York Tribune of January 19 is this brief mention of a new conspiracy against equal rights in religion: "A Sabbath Alliance has been formed in Philadelphia. Its objects are the enforcement of the existing Sunday laws, and the furthering of the enactment of a more precise Sunday law. Judge Porter is the President." Mark that! While the liberals slumber, the enemies of liberty are busily at work. It is not they who think Sunday laws, Bible-in-schools laws, church-exemption laws, etc., of too little consequence to make a fuss over; they perfectly well understand that these things give to Christianity political power, which is exactly what they want. No—it is only liberals who, being unconscious themselves of any wish to tyrannize or persecute, fancy that everybody else is equally so. This may be a proof of their own innocence—but it is an innocence which is the high road to slavery.

THE Christian Statesman quotes our account of the shameful uses to which Trinity Church puts its vast tax-exempted property (see THE INDEX of January 3), and says: "We sympathize fully with THE INDEX in the indignation which it expresses over these figures." But, while it favors the taxation of church property not actually used for religious purposes, it still maintains the right to exempt church property which is so used; and thus it continues to defend the gross immorality of taxing non-Christians for the support of Christianity. That is naked robbery, gentlemen of the Christian Statesman; and you are doing just as much to scandalize your Christian religion by apologizing for robbery as Trinity Church is doing by leasing its land for gin-mills and brothels. You cannot make Trinity Church your scape-goat. Robbery is as wicked as licentiousness or drunkenness, is it not—even by your own Bible? Then you might as well apologize for both these sins as for one. Do not make two bites of your cherry. We are looking to see how many Christians are honest enough to be ashamed of robbing "infidels" in this manner. There are a few such, we gladly acknowledge; but we shall have precious little respect for the honesty of modern Christianity, until we see a great many more. There is no use in dodging the point; you have got to stop taxing "infidels" to support the churches, or else take your seat, however ruefully, among robbers, pickpockets, and thieves. We are all ready to compare "natural morality" with yours: are you?

THE CONSTITUTIONAL CRISIS.

"THE PHILISTINES BE UPON THEE, SAMSON!"

Ever since the country's narrow escape in August, 1876, from an amendment of the United States Constitution which would prohibit sectarian appropriations in the abstract, but which at the same time would except from the effect of this prohibition the existing exemption of church property from taxation and the practice of Bible-reading in the public schools, we have repeatedly expressed the conviction that this measure would be sooner or later revived in Congress, and warned the country against the consequences of it, if passed. It would recognize by implication the Divine Authority of the Bible, destroy the great safeguard of religious liberty by breaking down the absolute secularity of the Constitution, and give to the "God-in-the-Constitution" party success in the worst and most dangerous portion of their programme. Few believed our prediction, it is evident, or the liberals would have showed greater readiness to defend their imperilled rights. But the crisis has come at last. The country, asleep and bound, is set upon by its enemies; and the cry goes forth, "The Philistines be upon thee, Samson!" Whether the announcement has come soon enough to do any good, who can say?

A brief editorial paragraph in the Boston Journal of January 15 was brought to our notice last Friday, as follows:—

The prohibition of appropriations for sectarian purposes, the taxation of church property, an unsectarian school system, the prohibition of ecclesiastical interference in civil affairs, will soon occupy the attention of the United States Senate.

Turning to the telegraphic dispatches, we read this meagre explanation of the item, dated Washington, January 14:—

A Sixteenth Amendment to the Constitution.

The Senate Committee on the Judiciary will tomorrow consider Senator Edmunds' proposition for a sixteenth amendment to the Constitution, prohibiting appropriations for sectarian purposes; and there will also be considered at the same time suggestions from gentlemen favoring the taxation of church property, an unsectarian free school system, the prohibition of ecclesiastical interference in civil affairs, and legislation in the interest of any one religious sect.

No other journal that we have seen mentions the fact, and further information cannot be got as yet; but this tells quite enough. The Committee of the Judiciary will soon report a bill or resolution proposing a new amendment to the Constitution; and this, in all probability, will include some smoothly-worded and apparently harmless recognition of Protestant Christianity, whose real effect, if adopted, will be to subvert and destroy the present complete secularity of the Constitution. Little as the people at large will comprehend at the time the ultimate and tremendous consequences of such a change, they will discover what these are to their own cost in the end.

A meeting of the Directors of the National Liberal League was immediately held, on the afternoon of Friday, January 18. The subject was discussed with deep interest, and the following vote was passed:—

Voted, That the President of the National Liberal League be instructed to write at once to the Chairman of the Judiciary Committee of the United States Senate, with reference to the pending amendment of the Constitution on the subject of sectarian appropriations; to urge the principles of the League on the attention of the Committee; and to forward on behalf of the League the petition for the Religious Freedom Amendment, to which 10,660 signatures have been received at this date.

Those wide-awake and earnest liberals by whose exertions the signatures to this petition have been collected deserve the gratitude of the entire liberal public, for having thus given proof, instantly available on short notice, that the great principle of secular government is dear to at least a few of the millions of American citizens. What a potent weapon it would have been, if the petition had indeed received "a million signatures," and not a paltry ten thousand! But, as it is, it will be of incalculable service in securing at least a measure of attention to the principles which ought to shape any Constitutional amendment on this momentous subject of Church and State. If these principles are sacrificed at last in the fierce rivalries of battling creeds, whom have we to blame but ourselves? While the husbandman slept, the enemy sowed tares; and now the harvest is coming up.

It is needless to say that the vote of the Directors of the National Liberal League, above quoted, has been carried out already, and that every practicable plan will be adopted by them for the furtherance of the common cause. Would that their resources were greater! But every liberal who is intelligent enough to comprehend that a great Constitutional crisis has begun in this country, involving the development or destruction of the traditional American ideal of a STATE TOTALLY INDEPENDENT OF THE CHURCH, and affecting tremendously the whole future of free thought and free religion in the greatest republic of the world, has a work to do without delay.

1. We respectfully but most earnestly recommend that every Local Liberal League in the country call immediately a public meeting in its own city or town,--advertise it well,--engage the best speakers possible,--pass resolutions affirming the paramount importance of the total separation of Church and State, and petitioning the Senate against any recognition of the Bible in the pending Constitutional amendment,--and forward this petition, duly certified, to one of the Senators from the State in which the meeting is held, with an urgent request to present it at a sitting time to the Senate.

2. Let reports of these meetings be carefully and fully prepared for the local papers, and published as widely as possible. If no meeting can be held, then let individual liberals write articles on the subject for the journals of their own neighborhood.

3. Let papers, documents, and especially private letters, be poured in upon the Senators by every one who values the priceless principles at stake. Make it clear, at least, that the people do not want and will not forgive any intrusion of theology, however disguised or sugar-coated, into the great charter of their equal rights and liberties. Depend upon it, the agents of the National Reform Association will be at work, as they were confessedly in 1876.

4. In brief, agitate, agitate, agitate! We who believe that radicalism has something more important to do at this crisis than dreaming or kite-flying, and who know that the Christianizing of the Constitution, artfully concealed, is the settled purpose of those who are hostile to the total separation of Church and State, must not shrink our duty now. Let our watchword be: ACT--ACT PROMPTLY--ACT TOGETHER!

THE SOMETHING BETTER.

Those who question whether Christianity is the absolute and permanent religion are sometimes challenged to show something better; and this apparently, among the critics of the liberal religious movement, is regarded as the one argument that clinches all the rest and is utterly unanswerable. I have been sometimes surprised to hear even those who believe that Christianity is no system of dogmas, nor ecclesiastical organization, nor worship of an historical personage, but a free spirit of life, falling into the same argument, and asking, with an air of triumph, if those who believe free religion not necessarily coterminous with Christianity, can show a finer character than Jesus or a richer religion than the Christian. Even admitting, they ask, that some of your objections to Christianity as popularly organized and interpreted are true, what have you to put in its place that will be so satisfying to mind and heart, and be, on the whole, so full of practical good? You must show the superiority of the new faith before you can expect people to move away from their old faith.

Now with large numbers of people, who are looking only for some immediate practical good, this is, of course, true. They will not leave any present possession, whether it be religion or anything else, until they can grasp the new thing that is to take the place of it, in pretty tangible form. But no new movement in religion, or in anything else of great moment to mankind, was ever able to meet the test required in this challenge; namely, that of immediately presenting something which shall appear to all holders of an old possession as complete and good as that. And if there were no courageous and aspiring spirits, conscious of a thirst within them for something better than any present possession, and ready to follow that thirst, that search, even at the cost of present disadvantage and pain, and though not knowing whither or to what it might lead, there would never be any religious movement at all, nor any progress in human society. The first Christians were entirely unable to show any very great or good results from their having broken with Judaism; nor could they prove to the satisfaction of anybody but themselves that Jesus was a greater character than Moses. And in Moses' time it took more even than his great leadership to convince the Israelites that they were any better off for having left the religious faith and practices of Egypt; and on the weary march of years and generations toward the something better in store for them, they longed often for the "flesh-pots" left behind. And we have always been taught that it was to the merit of old Abraham that "he went out seeking a country, not knowing whither he went." Of Martin Luther's wife, we are told that she was inclined to doubt whether they had so much religion in the debates and turmoil of the new era of Protestantism as they had in the quieter times under the old faith. But Luther and his compeers had faith in the possible spiritual riches that would come of seeking, and pushed the Reformation through.

These illustrations show the law of all important religious and social movements. They begin in an inward impulse, that may be hardly able to explain itself, rather than in any prudential consideration of outward conditions. They are not made outright complete,--no religion ever was; but they originate in a little seed of sentiment or thought, and they follow certain laws of growth; and it may be generations and centuries before they come to full maturity and fruitfulness. They begin in a desire for more complete spiritual satisfaction, in a search for more of truth; and those who are their first spokesmen are never able to justify their speech by showing the finished result. They may be able only to show that they are seekers, and that the after-building must take care of itself, or will certainly be cared for by the proper architects when the time for building comes. But it is enough for their justification, if they can show, for the better thing demands, the larger opportunity for satisfying man's invincible desire for truth.

W. J. P.

M. FAUVETY ON THE "TRUTHS FOR THE TIMES."

M. Fézandé has laid us under great obligation by kindly translating for our use a very thoughtful letter of the leading representative of the "Universal Religion of Humanity" in Paris. It is a new proof, if one were needed, that the modern world is becoming everywhere conscious of the possibility of a new religious synthesis on the ground of simple humanity, wholly independent of Christianity and all other special religions. We bespeak for M. Fauvety the sympathetic attention of our readers, and prefer to do it without intruding any explanations or comments of our own on his letter. It is enough to thank him for his appreciative criticisms, and to rejoice in the growth they indicate of that new "catholicism" which is yet destined to create a human fellowship coterminous with the globe itself.

PLAINFIELD, N.J., Jan. 8, 1878.

MR. F. E. ABBOT:

Dear Sir,--When your "Fifty Affirmations" and "Modern Principles" were republished in November I sent a translation of them to my friend, M. Charles Fauvety, the proprietor and editor of La Religion Laïque.

I receive from him a letter which is evidently not intended for publicity. Still I thought it might interest you to know the opinion and strain of ideas of your co-workers in Europe. I therefore take the liberty of sending you a translation of it, which you may use just as you please.

Your brother in the universal religion,

E. FÉZANDÉ.

The volume alluded to has not yet reached me. As soon as it comes, I will forward it to you.

Please have my subscription to THE INDEX continued for one year. I will send the money in February.

M. Fauvety's Letter.

I have read Mr. F. E. Abbot's "Affirmations," and I shall make use of them for the next number of La Religion Laïque (January 1). It is important that our readers should be made aware of the religious movement in America, and Mr. Abbot's manifesto is too strongly characterized to be silently passed over. I shall be much obliged to you if you will continue to send me the other productions of that Church, and of all other religious associations which are still where we ourselves are: that is, preparing the religion of the future. For you must have noticed that the religion which is forming is one and the same. Mr. Abbot, Mr. Frothingham, and ourselves are expressing the same views, the same ideas, and the same principles, and we speak the same language; a very remarkable fact in the midst of the confusion of tongues which exists in the free-thinking world outside of the religious idea. This is because at the period we have reached, there are already sufficient scientific elements to enable synthetic minds, by rising to a general conception, to meet in unity. Unity is there, indeed, and cannot be found when we limit ourselves to analysis or else to negation and criticism.

It is evident that, at the present day, all men who have reached a certain degree of light, form about the same idea of the visible world, through astronomy and the physical and natural sciences, and also agree upon the laws and conditions of social life and of the moral world. The result is, that when, with our data, we try to form an idea of the whole, we formulate nearly the same things concerning the end of life, liberty, progress, and the laws of the development of humanity, and that we also give about the same judgments upon the religions which to us have become forms of the past, and for which we have neither hatred nor love. This it is that enables us to be just and even grateful to Christianity, and to speak of it as does Mr. Abbot, and as does La Religion Laïque. Our language resembles neither that of those who still belong to Christianity, nor that of those who wage war against it, as was the case in the eighteenth century in France, and as is still the case with those who are mere deniers.

The first portion of Mr. Abbot's "Affirmations" will teach our readers nothing. We have already defined religion more clearly and more precisely; which is perhaps owing to our French language. His chapter on the "Relations of Judaism to Christianity" is also very incomplete, and does not give an adequate idea of those two great religious systems, and of the influence of the former upon the formation of the latter. The chapter on "Christianity" is better; but what is of most consequence, and what I shall publish in La Religion Laïque (if I lack space for the rest), is "Free Religion" from Article 32 to the end. This portion is truly remarkable. It is here, moreover, that the real definition of Mr. Abbot's Church is found.

It seems to me that free religion does not essentially differ from Mr. Frothingham's independent religion, unless it be that it more nearly resembles ours by making perfection the end of life, as I am forever repeating, and consequently by making progress the object of daily effort. This is the point upon which we must all insist. It is by this that all who labor at the social synthesis of the future, whether in France or America, belong to the same country and remain co-religionists, whatever may be the names they take to assert themselves in the face of a hostile past, and of a present which is too troubled to be anything but indifferent. . . .

However, whatever be the name which we provisionally give to our Church, it seems to me that the true name of the religion of the future is that taken by Christianity when its wish was to organize itself by including the whole world. Instead of speaking Greek, we shall speak French, or English, or German, or Italian, or Spanish, or Russian; but we shall call ourselves members of the Universal Religion of Humanity. . . .

If you know Mr. Abbot, pray send him my congratulations, and offer him the collection of La Religion Laïque which I mail to your address. He probably reads French. At all events I have been sending it to THE INDEX for some time.

CH. FAUVETY.

Communications.

IMMORTALITY.

There is no subject of thought more universal than that of immortality. It is now, it has always been, the question of the day. Men believe that they desire it without having considered the actuality of duration. They shrink so much from losing their personality that they would fain project themselves into continued existence, without endeavoring to realize the significance of eternity. They are excited, enthusiastic over a word, without pausing to reflect upon the illimitable scope of the idea. To be immortal is to be endless; and they often long for this as the fulfilment of conditions, desires, and outreachings, which, however far extended, are ultimately finite. To be forever--to go on, and on, in existence, and never, never to cease! The human mind cannot conceive it. Imagination may dream of cycles upon cycles, but it is always time, not eternity. Beyond limits, imagination sinks dizzy and stunned. Omniscience is not a power of humanity, and the most daring soul and highest faculty of fancy succumb to irrepressible awe before the everlasting immensities.

But to be individually immortal,--to be a personal, indestructible, separate self forever! Is it really desirable by pure reason, when the idea is stripped of all adjuncts of poetry, dogma, and hopes that have their boundaries in human intelligence? Indestructibility is terrifying. To think that nothing that is can ever be nothing is appalling; and to even approach any true sense of eternity must crush out of created spirit all mere emotional longing.

Man often becomes very weary of even his three-score years and ten; and it is not so much the belief in immortality which takes the sting from death, as the craving for change; and as none ever yearns for worse contingencies, the heart deems that in another state all things will be better, and fondly trusts that flesh and earthly circumstance will be no more hindrances to retard progress. But circumstance must environ all existence, and in each stage of futurity some necessary conditions of being must cause a corresponding feeling of limitation. We stand in trembling reverence before the wonders and majesty of the universe; astronomy has opened up to us sweeps and reaches of space that exact and extend comprehension to its utmost ability. But we know that these mighty systems of constellations revolving through the ages, and hung upon the invisible chain of inflexible law, will run their sublime course, and at last dissolve and reform under the sway of the inevitable; for no atom is ever annihilated, but remains created, whether in a state of chaotic disintegration, or in ordered conformation. And from the science of the stars we have the grandest statistical conception of time that may be, and of the enduring continuance of matter. Cannot we fancy that even inert matter, in all its protean shapes, must become tired of thus going on forever? And is there not a sort of pity in our souls for even the insensate that never rests and never ends?

And shall we, ethereal spirits though we may be, and adapted to receive and understand immeasurable truths, shall we never weary and despair at the incomprehensible ceaselessness?—for eternity is infinite, and only Omnipresent infinity can undisturbedly bear the awful burden of everlastingness. The created may be eternal, but it can never be individually infinite. And for what avail—to live forever?

To increase knowledge? To compass the unknowable, and then the still unknowable, and to keep on into inconceivable intellectual radiations? To have the ears opened to the harmony of the spheres, the revelation of the open vision, the boundless enlargement of comprehension? To learn and to garner up the Almighty secrets? And for what? What is the use at last? Every acquirement must be temporary, and superseded by the higher; and always there must be this one knowledge amid all others: that all that is already known is naught to the illimitable beyond. That which is gained drops behind as we mount higher; and the farther we go, the more and more must that which is attained be merely preparatory. What ultimate purpose can there be where there is no end? It is pouring water through a sieve, the very symbolical labor of the Danaiades. It would require a separate miracle for each aspiring soul to keep eternal interest forever unabated. Would there not come a weariness even of wisdom?

But the sentiment of humanity also looks beyond the grave to the reunion of kinships and affinities to the blessed experience of deathless and unconditional love. It is the fond thought of irresistible passion's first intenseness; it is the one consolation in unconquerable grief. It is an inculcated doctrine which has become almost inherent in the thought of civilized man. The ardent spirit loses itself in ideal contemplation of uninterrupted association, and believes that as the rapture of mortal emotion annihilates certain spaces of time, all immortal existence will be one beatific consciousness of equal joy, and that eternity will be but extension of an exquisite mood, whose duration will be unperceivable in the endless felicity. But love forgets that it is but one phase of human concern and development, and has no assurance that any being is so constituted as to be forever able to continue at the ecstatic altitude of unspeakable transport. Its supreme moment is high and holy enough to make a heaven and dwell therein. But there is a higher, holier, even more perfect impression than that, when in some hour of comprehending awe, we rise to an unsurpassable cognition and overpoweringly tender reverence for the first great cause, the inexpressible exaltation of natural worship for the unknown and inconceivable; for then the mind and heart and soul are all together at their utmost stretch, and exist for the time being only as an impersonal inspiration. And can love be certain that love only will be all in all to any complex conditioned entity? Love cannot fill the whole earth for even one man, or control an entire lifetime. How, then, for the immeasurable spaces for enlarged effort, and a hereafter of universal distractions? And who does not know, when the sight pierces through the mists of passion and sentiment, sad as the reflection unquestionably is, that there is no love that ever was born which cannot be slain by inexorable time? The morning glow lasts but a little while; the calm of evening affection slowly but imperceptibly perishes of its own placidity; and even the agonized clinging of bereaved devotion subsides into oblivion if only the time allowed be long enough. The very faces of the dead dim in the memory behind the temporal years; and memory is the very handmaid of love. Therefore, what warrant have we that those who go before us to "that other bourne," remain stationary in feeling and place until we join them? May not their state of spirituality, a matter which no one human being can penetrate or predicate of another, be so superior to our own that they may soar by it so far beyond us that we can never reach them? And vice versa as regards ourselves and them? For if we judge of things unseen by those that are known, this, and countless other forces, can separate beloved ones, or destroy interwoven content. So that, even as of knowledge, is there not possible also a terrible weariness of love, a point where the aimless endlessness of any experience will appear as mere vanity and vexation?

Many earnest and unsatisfied souls trust to the omnipotent future for the harmonizing of earthly dissonances, the completion of the imperfect, the justification of divinity in mundane management, which so often appears subject only to the infernal. And there is general credence, too, in the adjustment of balances; that Dives, who has had his good things on earth, shall languish of thirst in hell; and Lazarus, destitute and leprous, be received into the very bosom of Abraham; that the righteous shall be correspondingly rewarded, and the wicked punished.

If the interior vision was more open, knowledge more profound, the sympathetic intuition more keen, the horizon broader, of more liberal faith, might we not find underlying the surface-seeming of things, not only the inevitable foundations of appearances, but the exquisite order of contrivance? With our little span of sight which beholds universal activity within such narrow limits, how can we infer the purpose of the whole? To the ear of the Great Composer there is melodious unity in an entire symphony where parts violently separated from the all may sound meaningless and discordant to less privileged auditors. Imperfection, incompleteness! Can we who see only such a little way as these, apprehend the capabilities, the necessity of completion, or estimate the use of the imperfect? And the law of compensation, what do we know of it, who can never thoroughly enter into the spiritual solitude of our nearest and dearest? The worm that dieth not, and the fire that is not quenched, are they not carried secretly in the living breast of man? And does not every sin contain within itself the ripening germ of its own retribution? While in well-doing is there not a conscious blessing as equality of reward? Who shall estimate his brother's due, or fix the date of its payment? Why postpone present possibilities beyond possible need? And must it take the unrecordable spaces to weigh in the other scale against the atom of time which makes a human career? It is an over appraisal of valuation; an ocean's overwhelming of a single grain of sand; the almightiness of persistent power exerted against a pygmy! And shall we, who know not what evil is, or good, except according to our own autocratic definitions, shall we decide of the incomprehensible, as the Pharisees said of Christ, "Lo, it is by Beelzebub!" And how know we that we shall not deprecate Beelzebub instead of a Redeemer with our unmaterIALIZED eyes also? For from our own within we behold what is without. But to praise the Lord always, some say, is the chief end of immortality. Let us not have so small a conception of God as to incarnate Him in the selfishness that would demand and enjoy such fearful incense; which would surely degenerate from very monotony into hypocrisy or unmeaning habit. To praise God rightly, even acceptably to our inferior understanding, think what a mere instant we can possibly keep ourselves at the requisite height of sublime appreciation; think of the unsurmountable difficulty of suitable interpretation of this superhuman uplifting, and imagine if ought not equally infinite with the infinite could sustain such worthy strain throughout unend! For again let us repeat, the created cannot comprehend the everlastingness of eternity!

It is from self conceit, self-absorption, self-seeking that the prevailing idea of immortality arises. If by strong effort of will we can momentarily put these aside, and realize that endless finite existence is not altogether desirable, shall we then grudge to think it less magnificent to change our substance, spirit as well as matter, and to mingle with the universe, be received and dissolved in the one spirit of that universe from whence we sprang? And instead of the unsatisfactory progression of individual and personal immortality, be thus incorporated into the whole, and so at once become infinite and capable of eternity?

MRS. SARAH BRIDGES STEBBINS.

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 3, 1878.

FREE RELIGION.

MR. EDITOR:—

Free Religion, as I understand it, is the enjoyment and free expression of each one's religious thought or idea without being subjected to pains, penalties, or any disabilities, ecclesiastical, political, or social, on account of his opinion, judgment, or faith. Be it rational or irrational, sensible or absurd, the worship of one God or more or none, belief in Jesus or Moses or Mohammed, of Buddha or Zoroaster or Confucius,—every man, each according to his conscientious judgment, subject only to the laws of good citizenship under a secular Constitution, is entitled to these rights.

It is, therefore, neither necessary nor proper that I should attack any man's character, nor the character of his God or his teachers, living or dead, in upholding my own faith, judgment, or opinion, otherwise than in doing so incidentally and necessarily conflicts with what some other persons believe.

In advocating free religion, therefore, I am not justified in calling in question the filial and fraternal character of Jesus; whose doctrine requires that, for the sake of the truth, or what he believed and taught to be truth, a man should sunder all domestic and social ties rather than relinquish it; for to me it appears neither more nor less than a truism that he should do so.

One brought up and educated in the Christian religion, having discovered (as he supposes) that scientific truth and Christianity are irreconcilable, is bound to give up his former belief for the sake of the antagonistic truth which he has discovered, and should not be denounced with the epithets of apostate, heretic, renegade, infidel, turncoat, and similar damaging terms,—all of which indicate more of the spirit of persecution than real regard for truth. This being admitted, the zealous Jew who has become a zealous Christian, or the Christian or Buddhist who has become a Moslem, should not be judged a knave on account of such change, and the free-religionist or rationalist who cannot find a satisfactory foundation for his faith in rationalism is not to be judged harshly and unkindly because he becomes a Christian. Let us all advocate what we believe to be the truth, and maintain what we know, and try to convince our opponents if we can, and be ready to be convinced ourselves if we are wrong; but let us leave to our opponents the Jesuitical practice of throwing dirt, attacking character and motives, and "dealing damnation round the land" upon those who differ from US.

I do not wish to charge upon free thinkers such abuse of their opponents as they are accustomed to receive; and it is well if we can exercise so much self constraint as not to condemn ourselves in what we condemn in others, whatever the provocation may seem to be. "Let the dead bury their dead," and, if we cannot garnish their sepulchres, let them rest in their graves. THE INDEX has been singularly free from the vice here condemned; and it is hoped the few exceptions may become less and altogether disappear. Our purpose and policy must be conciliation; for we want a free, secular National Constitution and free, secular State Constitutions, whereby every man and woman shall enjoy the same rights in the things in which they differ as in the things wherein they agree. I would disfranchise only such as those who, while they claim the rights of citizenship, acknowledge a higher allegiance to a foreign power. Such persons ought not to be made citizens; and I would advocate such a change of the National Constitution as would deny them the benefit of such right, and refuse the franchise to every one who holds his citizenship secondary to his allegiance to another power.

Before we can secure the Religious Freedom Amendment, we have a mountain of difficulties to encounter; and it is as well to look the subject directly in the face. A majority of the Republicans would vote to day for the Christian amendment in behalf of Protestantism; while a majority of Democrats would oppose it and the Religious Freedom Amendment in behalf of Popery. And the Amendment proposing national protection to United States citizens everywhere would encounter unanimous opposition from a solid South, and partial opposition from a divided North; and no amendment whatever can be obtained for years to come. In the mean time, the advocates of impartial liberty will find abundant employment in striving to awake the dormant interest of those who profess themselves friends of equal rights and free religion.

D. S. GRANDIN.

UPPER GLOUCESTER, Me., Dec. 12, 1877.

BEES.

"There is more in heaven and earth than is dreamed of in our philosophy." I once kept bees, and studied their peculiarities. They have strong likes and dislikes, take to some and hate others. Is it because of the delicacy of their sense of smell? I think it most likely. Passing their lives amid the sweet aromas of flowers it would seem natural that they should revolt at any acrid or pungent odors. I was never stung by my bees; and on one occasion when a swarm came out on Sunday and alighted among the pea-vines, I gathered them in my uncovered hands into a fresh hive, sustaining no injury in so doing.

Bees are strenuously advocates for temperance. We had a neighbor, a moderate drinker, a mild, harmless man, but my bees would none of him. No sooner did he enter the garden than they were after him, collecting and buzzing around him till he was glad to make his escape. I one day had made use of some cologne which seemed to irritate and surprise them; but when I tossed the handkerchief into the bushes they were quieted.

I think they love children. They would alight on my babies' shoulders and arms, but never sting them. Their hum has a peculiar droning, sleepy sound when they are pleased, totally unlike their sharp buzz when irritated. A large beetle one day, in his clownish bumping around, alighted just inside the entrance to the hive, which had been made wider than it ought to have been. Immediately there was commotion and stir, and a council held. The result was the bees mostly flew away, and, returning before the beetle could realize his "corporal suffering," he was hermetically sealed up, and remained a lump of wax, a sort of insect Lot's wife transfixed for his curiosity.

I once had an antique skull over my desk in a city library, and one bright day was surprised to find myself surrounded by bees. They buzzed about as if seeking a place in which to deposit their sweets, and at length took possession of the skull, and built their cells within, coming and going through the open window with a still, soft companionship not at all displeasing. But when the weather grew cold they deserted me, probably returning to their old homes, from which they had so capriciously wandered.

These freakish movements, inherent in bees, have given rise to many pretty superstitions: such as, if a bee comes into the room, and singling out one from a group, flies and buzzes about that one's head, it is a sign of good news, or a letter, or the advent of a friend. This is as old as the times of Ovid, and has become almost a universal omen among those who will accept a little honey from the mass of exploded belief.

In observing my bees, I came to the conclusion that some advanced members of the community had a perception of color,—as I observed now and then one would be loitering among my flowers, even around those nearly or quite scentless, such as the geraniums; often coming into the windows, as the humming-birds did, who must have been attracted by the brilliancy of color. But the majority of bees were attracted to the white clover and buckwheat, both pale in color.

It may be that bees have exquisite enjoyment in their work; but any child who has been tortured into,—

"How doth the little busy bee, Improve each shining hour," as an incentive to industry, will be glad to believe that the bee is as ardent an idler and vagrant as the rest of us. I have been at pains to follow some of these models, and became convinced that they had a general good time, hiding in hollyhocks and peeping into trumpet-creepers, and pretending work round panes and roses, when they were simply luxuriating. Even a bee's brain and muscles would give out under perpetual tension; and I apprehend that all their hard-working congeners after all—the beaver (we are told to work like the beaver) and the ant (go to the ant, thou sluggard,) and the “busy bee,” all these torments to lazy humanity,—do not have all their lives devoted to toil, but love to lie off, like the rest of us, and slip here and there, sometimes dangerously, even of bitter absinthe and “herbs of grace”; but not without delight at a rest from honey sweets, to say nothing of a touch of a something strange and unrevealed.

ELIZABETH OAKES SMITH.

“LIFE.”

EDITOR INDEX:—

I read Mr. Andrews' articles on “Universology,” in THE INDEX, with great interest; and think that in mental force, deep philosophic insight, and keen analytical acumen he ranks with the best minds of the age. From our acquaintance, however, with the latest utterances of George H. Lewes, he attributes to that philosopher, in article No. XX., which appears in your issue of December 27, a definition of life which Mr. Lewes formulated so long ago as 1853, and which he has expressly declared was abandoned by him even before Herbert Spencer's criticism of it, referred to by Mr. Andrews, saw the light. I give his exact words, as taken from “The Physical Basis of Mind” (Problems of Life and Mind, Second Series): “In 1853, after reviewing the various attempts to express in a sentence what a volume could only approximately expound, I proposed the following: ‘Life is a series of definite and successive changes, both of structure and composition, which take place within an individual without destroying its identity.’ This has been criticised by Mr. Herbert Spencer and by Dr. Lionel Beale; and if I had not withdrawn it before their criticisms appeared, I should certainly have modified and enlarged it afterwards.”

Since the time that definition of life was given by Mr. Lewes nearly twenty-five years have elapsed; and his intellectual growth has meanwhile been very great, and in perfect harmony with the most advanced scientific thought and investigation in all matters pertaining to biology and psychology, necessitating, of course, considerable modification, if not entire reconstruction, of any views of life held in that almost pre-scientific age of a quarter of a century ago. I venture to assert that Mr. Lewes' matured thought in relation to this great subject will not meet with the same condemnation from Mr. Andrews that he visits upon his earlier views. And were Mr. Andrews to read the three published volumes of Problems of Life and Mind, he would see how utterly Mr. Lewes repudiates materialism, and how strongly he asserts that it fails to furnish the correct solution of those problems. One of the principal aims of the work is to show the untenableness of materialism, pure and simple; while at the same time he points out just how far Spiritualism falls short of giving a true solution of life's problems, and makes a grand effort to effect a reconciliation between the two, by showing how both have hold of the same truths, only viewed in different lights and from different standpoints, and that both views are necessary in order to a complete integral philosophy. The high aim of Mr. Lewes, like that of Mr. Andrews, is to show that there is a fundamental unity underlying all existences; and were the latter well acquainted with the former's recent writings he would probably not be slow to perceive the kinship of ideas and affinity of philosophic method which pervade “Universology” and the “Creed” whose foundations Mr. Lewes seeks to lay.

Let me now give the definition of life at present held by Mr. Lewes, and I think it will be found that it is not a “mere description of the manifestations of life,” and that it is not possible to make it apply to the “operation of building and repairing a house,” which are the criticisms brought by Mr. Andrews against the 1853 definition, and which are obviously valid and unanswerable so far as that definition is concerned, as Mr. Lewes would unquestionably admit. I quote again from the Physical Basis of Mind (p. 35, sec. 42): “Life is the functional activity of an organism in relation to its medium, as a synthesis of three terms: structure, allment, and instrument; it is the sum of functions which are the resultants of vitality; vitality being the sum of the properties of matter in the state of organization.”

In case it may be thought that the materialistic skeleton lurks in the definition of vitality as “the sum of the properties of matter in the state of organization, the definition of vital force, on p. 35, sec. 41, as a “symbol of the conditions of organized matter,” should be taken along with the main definition, as well as the whole of sec. 43, which, being brief, I also give: “Vital phenomena are the phenomena manifested in organisms when external agencies disturb their molecular equilibrium; and by organisms when they react on external objects. Thus everything done in an organism, or by an organism, is a vital act, although physical and chemical agencies may form essential components of the act. If I shrink when struck, or if I whip a horse, the blow is in each case physical; but the shrinking and the striking are vital. Every part of a living organism is therefore vital, as pertaining to life; but no part has this life when isolated; for life is the synthesis of all the parts,—a federation of the organs when the organism is complex, a federation of the organic substances when the organism is a simple cell.” (The italics are in all cases Mr. Lewes'.)

Mr. Andrews contrasts life and death with fine insight and wonderful subtlety; but wherein is there any great difference in his definition of life as “the activity or self-motivistic principle and phenomenon of the universe” and that of Mr. Lewes' which asserts that it “is the functional activity of an organism”? etc. Mr. Andrews will see that Mr. Lewes is at one with him in regard to the important part played by action or activity in defining life. The difference between them is one of degree rather than of kind. The American philosopher includes the universe in his definition; while his English brother is less ambitious in scope, and limits his attention to the domain of organisms. Whether Mr. Lewes would assent to Mr. Andrews' further elaboration of life as “a primal and creative factor in the production of the world,” I know not; but am inclined to think that he would be of the opinion that there are no facts accessible to the human reason that can establish such a proposition.

P.S.—By a singular coincidence, the Rev. Joseph Cook has just given his definition of life, and boldly claims that “life is the power which coordinates the movements of germinal matter”; and he defends this view of life with great acuteness and no little dialectical skill against what he, in common with Mr. Andrews, denominates the materialistic conceptions of Herbert Spencer and Dr. Maudeley. If Mr. Cook could only give us a sound scientific definition of the “power” which is the all-important term in his definition, scientific philosophers would have no great quarrel to pick with it. But who does not decry behind his term of power the Christian God, and plainly see that, with Mr. Cook, the two terms, power and God, are synonymous? Would not his real meaning be more accurately expressed by amending his definition thus? “God is the power which coordinates the movements of germinal matter in such a manner that life is the result.” But does this definition add anything to our knowledge, or make the mystery of life any clearer to us?

NEW YORK, Dec. 29, 1877.

“EVERY TEACHER A CHURCH-MEMBER.”

CASTLETON, Ill., Jan. 8, 1878.

EDITOR INDEX:—

I take the liberty to send you the following item, taken from the Chicago Inter-Ocean of the 3d instant, which, for significance and priestly craftiness, is not easy to beat:—

“President Lewis, in his address before the State Teachers' Association, having insisted that every teacher should be a church-member, Mr. Thorpe offered a resolution to the effect that that portion of the address be stricken from the records as opposed to the spirit of the age. This created a sensation; but the chair declined to entertain the resolution. The question came up again on Friday in the shape of the report of the committee, to whom the address of the President was referred. The committee recommended that the portion of the address objected to be stricken out. The Association took the position that the address was simply the expression of opinion, binding no one and hurting no one; and, after a stormy discussion, the report was tabled by a vote of 67 to 18.”

“Every teacher should be a church-member.” Is this intended as an inducement to every would-be teacher to join the Church in order to have a possible chance to become what freedom has never denied them? If this be the case, about how much will such membership be worth?—and it might be well to count the cost of enjoying the privilege of being a first-class hypocrite.

It seems somewhat premature just at present to “insist” upon this matter, for the reason that, when the God-in-the-Constitution party succeed in their object, it will be perfectly in order; and whatever else Christianity may have in view will then be secured, provided the “spirit of the age” does not prevent it. But what better evidence could be desired of that feeling of despair which Orthodox Christianity must have in order to have such an “opinion” from which the “insisting” part is the natural formality, having for its justification a belief that all souls must eventually embrace its faith or be damned?

Next in order for the Orthodox Christian to “insist” upon is, that the Church shall have the authority to dictate what books the pupil should study. This apparently will be an easy matter when the teacher becomes an attaché of the Church. The “insisting” part will then have nothing serious to contend against, and the education of our youth in the terms of salvation, of duties to the Church, and reverence for the priesthood in general, will take precedence of mathematics, grammar, or reading.

The facilities for saving souls are to be increased, legalized, formalized. In other words, the man of the future is to be patterned after the type of theological conception, moulded soul and body so that his exterior will serve the purpose of labelling. He must be a Christian; the teacher must be qualified to supervise over the metal furnished him; the State must furnish the metal, pay all charges, surrender all claims as to the premises, whenever the question of “rights” or “titles” is raised.

What more could a devotee of the Church of Rome ask? Is it not his ideal that has been borrowed, in order to insure posterity to the Orthodox conception of rewards and punishments, schemes of salvation and damnation? It is time for the Catholic to be jealous. The Pope is to be superseded; for what possibility is there that this functionary should get into our United States Constitution, as the legalized head and ruler among nations? Yet if some one else should get into that instrument as such, I can see no reason why such a precedent will not be an encouragement for any other acknowledged head to be similarly legalized. There seems a possible chance here for a controversy, during which we shall hear from both Jew and Gentile.

C. W. NEWTON.

“LIBERAL EDUCATION OF CHILDREN.”

EDITOR INDEX:—

The question as to what religious instruction unorthodox parents should give to their children, is perplexing the minds of many a freethinker. It is said that to exclude the children from the influences of the Church, to forbid the reading of the Bible, to separate them from rabidly religious persons would tend to make these children bigoted, unreasoning opponents to Christianity. Not necessarily so. I may forbid my child the Bible on the same grounds that I forbid him Shakespeare, or as I say to him, “You must study the Latin Grammar before you try to read Virgil.” I would exclude him from a rabidly religious person as I would from a nurse charged with ghost stories, or from one who delighted in stories of the horrible.

If the child hear continuous controversies upon religious subjects, if theological dogmas are continually discussed in his presence, and opinions expressed which are hostile to the popular faith, the child may hear only half truths and become a prejudiced bigot. But if he knows nothing of the pros and cons of religious controversy, has no more desire or aversion for the Sunday-school than he has for the dancing-school, there is no more danger that he will become an unreasoning opponent to Christianity than to Buddhism. He may be ignorant of and indifferent to both.

Is it necessary for a child's religious instruction that he be initiated into the unfathomable mysteries of the nature of God, of the Unity and the Trinity, of heaven and hell, and a hundred other topics generally included under the head of religious instruction? As yet he has not fathomed the “miracle of flowers and trees.” Let him go to the Sunday-school where that is taught. There are a thousand positive miracles to engage his mind before he comes to the questionable one of “loaves and fishes.” There is more danger of giving a child too much religious instruction than too little. He can see for himself adaptation and plan. He is no sceptic; he naturally asks who made it, at once believing in a Creator. Any instruction of ours can add nothing to his knowledge of a God, and we do well if it does not shake his faith. The devout Novalls somewhere says: “The too early and immoderate use of religion is extremely injurious to the growth of man, as brandy to the physical development.” By too great intemperance in this respect we lose the end desired. Glorious truths become trite, hackneyed phrases. This most wonderful of books becomes commonplace. We would not think of giving our children Shakespeare or Goethe or Plato, till they are in a measure ready for them; why give them the Bible, while they have neither eyes to see nor ears to hear? Richter says: “You flying teachers, who give children the draught earlier than the thirst, can you ever make good to them the great year, which they would have lived to see, had they, growing up like the new-created Adam, been able to turn round with their open, thirsty senses, in the glorious universe of spirits?”

C. E. SHERMAN.

CHICAGO, Ill.

“RELIGIOUS INSTRUCTION.”

EDITOR OF THE INDEX:—

We can as well teach children a good appetite as to teach them religion. “Religious instruction” is as absurd an expression to a freethinker's conception as joyous instruction would be to a young, healthy seater. We inherit from Christian theology a false issue in relation to this matter, which has given rise to much waste labor. As to this thing of religious instruction for children, it is the hateful legacy of a system which has its crowded nursery of future bigots in every church-vestry in the country. Every liberal should say of it as Macbeth said of physic, “Throw it to the dogs; I'll none of it.” What! no sugar-coat to the pill of science? Beg pardon, I did not say so. Just as palatable as it can be made. That is the test of one's skill as a teacher. Bring the children together. Amuse them by instruction, and instruct them by amusement; and when a truth excites their wonder, wonder with them; but beyond that, and between them and the invisible source of their delightful wonder, we have no business, for we do not know any more concerning that region than when we were children ourselves. So, if you please, “natural knowledge” seasoned to taste; but no “religious instruction.”

Z.

CANON FARRAR recently preached at Westminster Abbey a sermon which in all circles is considered a remarkable one, while the ecclesiastical circles are considerably exercised in regard to it. The sermon at last accounts had not been published, though there has been some inquiry for it. An outline of what it contained is given as follows in an English paper: “Taking those mysterious words in the First Epistle of Peter, about preaching to the spirits in prison, Canon Farrar denounced in the strongest terms the doctrine of eternal punishment as an offspring of bigotry and superstition. It was not to be supported even by isolated texts, for those usually cited had been misinterpreted; and the preacher went so far as to say that, if the revisers of the Bible did their duty, the words hell, damnation, and eternal would be omitted from the new translation. He was particularly severe upon St. Augustine and his material hell, which had thrown a dark stain on theology; in fact, the Canon's condemnation was nearly as strong as Mr. Lecky's famous chapter.” It is not expected that any action will be taken against Canon Farrar for his utterance of such views, for it is said that they are more generally held to than some people would suppose. At the same time it is suggested that for less decisive language than this, Professor Maurice lost his chair at King's College not many years ago.

Advertisements.

THE PATRONAGE

of the liberal advertising public is respectfully solicited for THE INDEX. The attempt will be honestly made to keep the advertising pages of THE INDEX in entire harmony with its general character and principles, and thus to furnish to the public an advertising medium which shall be not only profitable to its patrons, but also worthy of their most generous support. To this end, all improper or "blatant" advertisements, all quack advertisements, and all advertisements believed to be fraudulent or unjust to any one, will be excluded from these columns. No cuts will be admitted.

THE INDEX must not be held responsible for any statement made by advertisers, who will in all cases accept the responsibility for their own statements.

ADVERTISING RATES.

For 1 to 12 insertions, 10c per line.
 "13 " 25 " 8 " "
 "26 " 51 " 6 " "
 "52 " " 5 " "

On half-column advertisements, a discount of 10 per cent. will be made; on full-column advertisements, a discount of 25 per cent.

On all advertisements for which cash is paid in advance, a further discount of 25 per cent. on the total, as above calculated, will be made. FRANCIS E. ABBOT, Editor.

TO ADVERTISERS.

The following states the experience of a successful Bookseller who has advertised in THE INDEX:—

TOLKDO, Ohio, Sept. 20, 1872.
 To THE INDEX ASSO., Toledo, O.:
 Gentlemen,—Having had occasion to advertise in your paper during the past two years quite largely, I take pleasure in stating that I have always obtained very satisfactory returns—better in fact than from book advertisements in any other paper I have advertised in. Not only have I obtained immediate results, but orders have frequently been received months after the insertion of the advertisement, showing that your paper is kept on file and referred to by your readers.
 Yours truly,
 HENRY S. STEBBINS.

Special arrangements will be made at reduced terms for long-time or extended advertisements. Address

THE INDEX,
 No. 231 WASHINGTON STREET,
 Boston.

CULTURED FREE THOUGHT.

The Index Association,

Office, No. 231 WASHINGTON ST., BOSTON, publish

THE INDEX,

A Weekly Paper devoted to Free and Rational Religion.

It is the object of THE INDEX to give public utterance to the boldest, most cultivated, and best matured thought of the age on all religious questions, and to apply it directly to the social and political amelioration of society.

It is edited by FRANCIS E. ABBOT, with the following list of Editorial Contributors:—

O. B. FROTHINGHAM, New York City.
 WILLIAM J. POTTER, New Bedford, Mass.
 WILLIAM H. SPENCER, Haverhill, Mass.
 MRS. E. D. CHENEY, Jamaica Plain, Mass.
 GEORGE JACOB HOLYOAKE, London, Eng.
 DAVID H. CLARK, Florence, Mass.
 MRS. ELIZABETH CADY STANTON, Tenny, N.J.

J. L. STODDARD, Boston.
 ELIZUR WRIGHT, Boston.
 O. D. B. MILLS, Syracuse, N.Y.
 W. D. L. SUEUR, Ottawa, Can.
 BENJ. F. UNDERWOOD, Thorndike, Mass.
 ALBERT WARREN KELSEY, St. Louis, Mo.

Every liberal should subscribe for THE INDEX as the best popular exponent of Religious Liberalism. Every Christian minister, and every thinking church-member, should subscribe for it, as the clearest, most candid, and most scholarly exposition of the difference between Free Thought and Evangelical Christianity, and as the best means of becoming well informed of the arguments and the movements which the Church will have to meet in the future.

Almost every number contains a discourse or leading article, which alone is worth the price of one year's subscription.

Prof. MAX MUELLER, of Oxford, England, in a letter to the Editor published in THE INDEX for January 4, 1873, says: "That the want of a journal entirely devoted to Religion in the widest sense of the word should be felt in America—that such a journal should have been started and so powerfully supported by the best minds of your country,—is a good sign of the times. There is no such journal in England, France, or Germany; though the number of so-called religious or theological periodicals is, as you know, very large." And later still "I read the numbers of your INDEX with increasing interest."

Send $3.50 for one year, including postage, or 80 cents for three months on trial.

Address THE INDEX,
 No. 231 Washington Street, Boston.

PUBLICATIONS

OTHER

FREE

RELIGIOUS

ASSOCIATION.

Freedom and Fellowship in Religion. A volume of ten essays upon speculative and practical problems of religion, by D. A. Wasson, Samuel Longfellow, Samuel Johnson, John Weiss, W. J. Potter, F. E. Abbot, O. B. Frothingham, J. W. Chadwick, T. W. Higginson, and Mrs. E. D. Cheney, and extracts from Addresses by Ralph Waldo Emerson, Lucretia Mott, Robert Dale Owen, Dr. Bartol, Wendell Phillips, Rabbi Wise, Horace Seaver, A. B. Alcott, Lucy Stone, Charles H. Malcom, Julia Ward Howe, and others,—all given on the platform of the Free Religious Association. Price (reduced) $1.50.

"One purpose of this volume is to give an answer to the question, What is the meaning of the Free Religious Association?"

Proceedings of Fifth Annual Meeting, 1872. Contains essays by J. W. Chadwick on "Liberty and the Church in America," by O. D. B. Mills on "Religion as the Expression of a Permanent Sentiment of the Human Mind," and by O. B. Frothingham on "The Religion of Humanity," with addresses by Rowland Connor, Celia Burleigh, Lucretia Mott, A. B. Alcott, C. A. Bartol, Horace Seaver, Alexander Loos, and others.

Proceedings of Sixth Annual Meeting, 1873. Contains essays by Samuel Johnson on "Freedom in Religion," and by John Weiss on "Religion in Freedom," with addresses by Wm. C. Gannett, Robert Dale Owen, T. W. Higginson, Samuel Longfellow, J. S. Thomson, F. E. Abbot, and Lucretia Mott.

Proceedings of Seventh Annual Meeting, 1874. Contains verbatim reports of President Frothingham's address on "The Validity of the Free Religious Platform," of Dr. Bartol's essay on "The Religious Signs of the Times," of Rabbi Sonnenschein's speech on "Reformed Judaism," and of the statements by Messrs. Calthrop, Abbot, and Higginson of their respective attitudes towards Christianity,—as "Christian," "Anti-Christian," and "Extra-Christian,"—together with the Secretary's Annual Report, and letters from Kashub Chunder Sen, Frederick Douglass, and D. A. Wasson.

Proceedings of Eighth Annual Meeting, 1875. Contains Essays by Wm. C. Gannett, on "The Present Constructive Tendencies in Religion," and by Francis E. Abbot, on "Construction and Destruction in Religion," and addresses by T. W. Higginson, Lucretia Mott, Chas. G. Ames, O. B. Frothingham, B. F. Underwood, S. P. Putnam, and E. S. Morse.

Proceedings of Ninth Annual Meeting, 1876. Contains a full abstract of the interesting discussion at the Business Meeting on the Practical Methods and Work of the Association; the annual report of the Executive Committee; address of the President, O. B. Frothingham; essay by James Parton, on "The Relation of Religion to the State" (or, as he styles it, "Cathedrals and Beer"), with addresses on the subject by Miss Susan H. Wilson and Rev. M. J. Savage; essay by Samuel Longfellow, on "The Relation of Free Religion to Churches," with the addresses that followed it by Prof. Felix Adler, Rev. Henry Blanchard, Rev. Brooks Herford, and John Weiss,—together with letters from Judge Doe, Rev. Joseph Cook, and others, invited to speak.

Proceedings of Tenth Annual Meeting, 1877. Contains Essays by Rev. Wm. R. Alger, on "Steps towards Religious Emancipation in Christendom," and by O. D. B. Mills, Esq., on "Internal Dangers to Free Thought and Free Religion"; Addresses by O. B. Frothingham, Wm. Henry Channing, Rabbi Leasker, Dr. J. L. Dudley, and T. W. Higginson; and tenth annual reports of the Executive Committee, Treasurer, etc.

Any one of the above pamphlets of "PROCEEDINGS" sent to any address for Five cents received in postage stamps; and more at the same rate. Sold also for Five cents at the office.

For series of important Tracts see last page of THE INDEX.

These publications are for sale at the office of the Free Religious Association, 231 Washington Street, Boston. The Annual Reports for 1868 and 1871 cannot be supplied, and the supply of others previous to that of 1872 is quite limited and at special rates. Orders by mail may be addressed "Free Religious Association, 231 Washington Street, Boston, Mass."

WM. J. POTTER, Sec. F. R. A.

INDEX TRACTS.

No. 1.—Truths for the Times, by F. E. Abbot, contains the "Fifty Affirmations" and "Modern Principles." Mr. CHARLES DARWIN, author of "The Origin of Species," says, in a letter to the editor not originally intended for publication, but subsequently authorized to be used: "I have now read 'TRUTHS FOR THE TIMES,' and I admire them from my inmost heart; and I agree to almost every word." New Edition. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00.

No. 2.—Fear of the Living God, by O. B. Frothingham, exposes the debasing character of the popular notions of God, and presents conceptions of him that are worthy of the nineteenth century. New Edition. Price 5 cents; 12 copies 50 cents.

No. 3.—Lecture on the Bible, by the Rev. Charles Voysey, of England, is an overwhelming demonstration of the imperfections and errors of the Bible, both in the Old and the New Testaments. New Edition. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00.

No. 4.—Christian Propagandism, by F. E. Abbot, is an exposure of the weakness, costliness, and inefficiency of the System of Foreign Missions. Full of Figures, Facts, and Interesting Extracts. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00.

No. 5.—God in the Constitution, by Rev. Arthur B. Bradford, opposes the proposed Theological Amendment to the United States Constitution. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00.

No. 6.—The Sabbath, by Parker Pillsbury, denounces Sabbatarian superstition. New Edition. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00.

No. 7.—Compulsory Education, by F. E. Abbot, maintains the right of every child to be educated, and the duty of the State to ensure it an education. Price 5 cents; 12 copies 50 cents.

No. 8.—The Present Heaven, by O. B. Frothingham, treats of a subject that interests everybody. New Edition. Price 5 cents; 12 copies 50 cents.

No. 9.—The Christian Amendment, by F. E. Abbot, shows the dangerous character of the attempt to interpolate the Evangelical Christian Creed in the U. S. Constitution. Price 5 cents; 12 copies 50 cents.

No. 10.—The Impeachment of Christianity, by F. E. Abbot. Fourth Ten Thousand. Sent for free distribution to any one who will distribute it, in packages of from five to one hundred copies.

No. 11.—The God of Science, by F. E. Abbot, attempts to show the real influence of modern science upon the idea of God. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00.

No. 12.—Is Romanism Real Christianity? Two essays by Francis W. Newman and F. E. Abbot. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00.

No. 13.—On the Vision of Heaven, by Prof. F. W. Newman, of England, analyzes the Christian conception of Heaven. Price 5 cents; 12 copies 50 cents.

No. 14.—A Study of Religion: The Name and the Thing, by F. E. Abbot, attempts to show that the popular derivation of the word Religion is incorrect; that the popular conceptions of Religion itself are inadequate; and that a new conception of it, based on the Law of Evolution, consistent with absolute Freedom of Thought, and independent even of belief in God, is the necessary condition of the perpetuity of Religion among men. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00.

No. 15.—The Battle of Syracuse. Two Essays by Rev. James Freeman Clarke, D.D., and F. E. Abbot discussing the Authority of Christianity. Price 10 cents; 12 copies for $1.00. Address

THE INDEX, 231 WASHINGTON STREET,
 Boston, Mass.

1 8 7 8.

THE INDEX,
A Weekly Journal

DEVOTED TO

FREE RELIGION.

PUBLISHED BY THE

INDEX ASSOCIATION,

AT

No. 231 Washington Street, Boston.

EDITOR:

FRANCIS ELLINGWOOD ABBOT.

EDITORIAL CONTRIBUTORS:

O. B. FROTHINGHAM, New York City.
 W. J. POTTER, New Bedford, Mass.
 W. H. SPENCER, Haverhill, Mass.
 MRS. E. D. CHENEY, Jamaica Plain, Mass.
 GEORGE JACOB HOLYOAKE, England.
 DAVID H. CLARK, Florence, Mass.
 MRS. ELIZABETH CADY STANTON, Tenny, N.J.
 J. L. STODDARD, Boston.
 ELIZUR WRIGHT, Boston.
 C. D. B. MILLS, Syracuse, N.Y.
 W. D. L. SUEUR, Ottawa, Can.
 BENJ. F. UNDERWOOD, Thorndike, Mass.
 ALBERT WARREN KELSEY, St. Louis, Mo.

THE INDEX aims—

To increase general intelligence with respect to religion:

To foster a nobler spirit and quicken a higher purpose, both in society and in the individual:

To substitute knowledge for ignorance, right for wrong, truth for superstition, freedom for slavery, character for creed, catholicity for bigotry, love for hate, humanitarianism for sectarianism, devotion to universal ends for absorption in selfish schemes.

In brief, to hasten the day when Free Religion shall take the place of dogmatism and ecclesiasticism throughout the world, and when the welfare of humanity here and now shall be the aim of all private and public activities.

In addition to its general objects, the practical object to which THE INDEX is specially devoted is the ORGANIZATION OF THE LIBERALS OF THE COUNTRY, for the purpose of securing the more complete and consistent secularization of the political and educational institutions of the United States. The Church must give place to the Republic in the affections of the people. The last vestiges of ecclesiastical control must be wiped out of the Constitutions and Statutes of the several States in order to bring them into harmony with the National Constitution. To accomplish this object, the Liberals must make a united demand, and present an unbroken front, and the chief practical aim of THE INDEX will be henceforth to organize a great NATIONAL PARTY OF FREEDOM. Let every one who believes in this movement give it direct aid by helping to increase the circulation of THE INDEX.

SPECIAL FEATURES.

The publication of a valuable leading paper or essay of a thoughtful character, in each issue, will continue to be one of the most marked features of THE INDEX.

Regular editorial contributions will continue to be furnished by the well-known eminent writers who have already done so much to give to THE INDEX its present high position. Other interesting correspondence, communications, extracts from valuable books and periodicals, and miscellaneous articles, will also be published; and such improvements will be made from time to time as circumstances shall render possible.

AGENTS.

Local Agents for THE INDEX are wanted in every city and town throughout the country. The most liberal terms are offered.

TERMS.

The price of THE INDEX is Three Dollars a year, payable in advance; and 20 cents postage for the year; and at the same rate for shorter periods. All remittances of money must be at the sender's risk, unless forwarded by cheque, registered letter, or post-office money order. The name, with address in full, must be accompanied with the money in each case.

Address THE INDEX,
 No. 231 Washington Street, Boston.

POPULAR BOOKS,

SENT BY MAIL

AT

PUBLISHERS' PRICES!

ORDERS PROMPTLY FILLED.

NO EXTRA CHARGE FOR POSTAGE.

ANY BOOK in the subjoined List, or any other OBTAINABLE BOOK that may be desired, will be forwarded as promptly as possible on receipt of orders accompanied with the CASH.

Orders are respectfully solicited from

all friends of THE INDEX.

ALCOOTT (A. BRONSON). Tablets.....	1.50
Concord Days.....	1.50
Records of a School. A new edition.....	1.50
ALCOOTT (LOUISA M.). Little Women. Two vols.....	1.50
Hospital Sketches and Camp and Fireside Series.....	1.50
An Old-Fashioned Girl.....	1.50
Little Men.....	1.50
My Boys, &c.....	1.00
Shawl-Straps.....	1.00
Work; A Story of Experience.....	1.75
ARABIAN NIGHTS' ENTERTAINMENTS.....	1.50
ARNOLD'S (MATTHEW) Essays in Criticism.....	2.00
New Poems.....	2.00
Literature and Dogma.....	1.50
AUERBACH (BERTHOLD). On the Heights.....	1.50
Villa Eden; The Country-House on the Rhine.....	2.00
German Tales.....	1.00
BACON'S Essays.....	1.25
BAGEHOT on the English Constitution.....	1.25
Physics and Politics.....	2.50
AIN (ALEXANDER). Mental Science; A Compendium of Psychology and History of Philosophy.....	1.75
Moral Science; A Compendium of Ethics.....	1.75
The Science and the Intellect. Third edition. 1 vol.....	5.00
BARTLETT'S Dictionary of Americanisms.....	5.00
BARTLETT'S Familiar Quotations.....	3.00
BARTOL (REV. C. A.). Radical Problems.....	2.00
The Rising Faith.....	2.00
BASTIAN (H. CHARLTON). The Beginnings of Life. 2 vols.....	5.00
BRACKETT (ANNA C.). The Education of American Girls.....	2.00
BROOKS (CHARLES T.). Translations. The Layman's Breviary.....	2.25
The World-Friend.....	2.25
The Tall Student.....	.75
BURCKNER'S Force and Matter.....	2.25
BUCKLE (HENRY THOMAS). History of Civilization in England and France, Spain and Scotland. New edition of the entire work, with a complete index. 2 vols.....	5.00
CARLYLE'S Works. Cheap edition. Comprising the following: Miscellaneous Essays, 7 vols.; French Revolution, 3 vols.; Frederick the Great, 10 vols.; Cromwell's Letters, &c., 5 vols.; Sartor Resartus, 1 vol.; John Sterling, 1 vol.; Life of Schiller, 1 vol.; Past and Present, 1 vol.; Heroes and Hero Worship, 1 vol.; Latter Day Pamphlets, 1 vol. Any volume sold separately. 1 vol. London, 1871-3. Per vol.....	.90
CARPENTER (DR. W. B.). The Principles of Mental Physiology, with their Applications to the Training and Discipline of the Mind, and the Study of its Morbid Conditions.....	3.00
CERVANTES' Don Quixote.....	1.50
CHANNING (WM. ELLERY, D.D.). The Perfect Life. In Twelve Discourses. Edited from his manuscripts by his nephew, Wm. Henry Channing.....	1.50
CHANNING (WM. ELLERY). Thoreau: The Poet-Naturalist. With Memorial Verse.....	2.00
CHENEY (MRS. E. D.). Patience. A Series of Thirty Games for the Fireside. A Series of Social Games. A new Series of Games for Parties, uniform with Patience.....	1.00
Sally Williams, the Mountain Girl. Illustrated.....	1.50
CLARKE (JAMES FREEMAN). Ten Great Religions.....	2.00
Common-Sense in Religion.....	2.00
CLARKE (DR. E. H.). Sex in Education.....	1.25
CLODD (EDWARD). The Childhood of the World.....	.75
COBBE (FRANCES POWER). Studies New and Old, of Ethical and Social Subjects. Darwinism in Morals, and other Essays.....	3.00
The Religious Demands of the Age.....	.50
CONWAY (MONODRE D.). The Earthward Pilgrimage.....	1.75
CORRELATION and Conservation of Forces: A Series of Expositions by Grove, Helmholtz, Mayer, Faraday, Liebig and Carpenter: with an Introduction by Edward L. Youmans, M.D. 1 vol.....	2.00
CULTURE DEMANDED BY MODERN LIFE: Its True Aims and Requirements. A Series of Addresses. By Tyndall, Huxley, Whewell, Faraday, Spencer, Draper, Emerson, Lyell, &c. Edited by Edward L. Youmans.....	2.00
DALL (MRS. CAROLINE H.). The College, the Market, and the Court; or, Woman's Relation to Education, Employment, and Relationship.....	2.00

Historical Pictures Retouched; a Volume of Miscellaneous. In two parts. Part I, "Studies, Pictures, and Fancies".....	1.
DARWIN'S Origin of Species.....	2.00
The Descent of Man. 2 vols.....	4.00
Journal of Researches.....	3.00
Emotional Expression of Man and the Lower Animals.....	3.50
The Variation of Animals and Plants under Domestication. 2 vols., illustrated.....	6.00
DESCARTES (RENE). Discourse on the Method of Rightly conducting the Reason and Seeking Truth in the Sciences.....	2.25
DICKENS' Child's History of England.....	1.50
DURRING (JULIA). Philosophers and Fools. A Study.....	2.00
ELIOT'S (GEORGE) Novels. Household Edition. 5 vols., each.....	1.00
Comprising—Adam Bede, Romola, The Mill on the Floss, Felix Holt, Silas Marner and Scenes of Clerical Life. The Same. Library Edition. 2 vols.....	2.50
Middlemarch. 2 vols.....	2.50
Wit and Wisdom of.....	1.25
The Spanish Gypsy.....	1.50
EMERSON'S (R. W.) Essays. First Series.....	1.50
Essays. Second Series.....	1.50
Miscellaneous.....	1.50
Representative Men.....	1.50
English Traits.....	1.50
Conduct of Life.....	1.50
Poems. With Portrait.....	1.50
May-day and Other Pieces.....	1.50
Essays. Blue and Gold.....	1.25
Poems. Blue and Gold.....	1.25
Prose Works. 2 vols.....	5.00
Society and Solitude.....	1.50
EVANS (E. P., Ph. D.). First Historical Transformations of Christianity. From the French of Athanasius Coquerel the Younger.....	1.50
The Life and Works of Gotthold Ephraim Lessing. Translated from the German of Adolf Stahr. 2 vols.....	5.00
FARRAR'S Critical History of Free Thought, in reference to the Christian Religion.....	2.50
FEUERBACH (LUDWIG). The Essence of Christianity. "George Eliot's" translation.....	3.00
FISKE'S (JOHN) Myths and Myth-Makers. Cosmic Philosophy.....	2.00
6.00
FROTHINGHAM (O. B.) Religion of Humanity.....	1.50
Child's Book of Religion.....	.50
Life of Theodore Parker.....	2.00
FULLER'S (MARGARET) Complete Works, including Memoirs by Emerson, Whanning, and others. A new edition. 6 vols.....	9.00
GALTON (FRANCIS). Hereditary Genius. An Inquiry into its Laws and Consequences.....	2.00
GOETHE'S Faust. Translated into English Verse by Bayard Taylor. 2 vols. Per vol.....	5.00
Elective Affinities.....	1.25
Wilhelm Meister. Translated by Thomas Carlyle. Portrait of Goethe. 2 vols.....	3.50
Herman and Dorothea. Translated by Ellen Frothingham.....	1.00
GREG'S (W. R.) Enigmas of Life.....	2.00
Literary and Social Judgments.....	2.50
Creed of Christendom.....	7.00
GROTE'S LIFE. Compiled from Family Documents, Private Memoranda, and Original Letters to and from Various Friends. By Mrs. Grote. Second Edition. With Portrait.....	5.00
HAMILTON (PHILIP G.) A Painter's Camp. Book I. In England. Book II. In Scotland. Book III. In France.....	1.50
Thoughts about Art.....	2.00
The Unknown River.....	2.00
The Intellectual Life.....	2.00
Chapters on Animals.....	4.00
HAMILTON (GAIL). Child World. Part Second.....	1.00
Child World. Part First.....	1.50
HAMILTON'S Lectures.....	3.50
1. Metaphysical Lectures.....	3.50
2. Logical Lectures.....	3.50
HAWTHORNE'S (NATHANIEL) Works. New Illustrated Library Edition. Nine vols. Per vol.....	2.00
Twice-Told Tales.....	2.00
Mosses from an Old Manse.....	2.00
The Scarlet Letter, and The Blithedale Romance.....	2.00
The House of the Seven Gables, and The Snow Image.....	2.00
The Marble Faun.....	2.00
The English Note-Books.....	2.00
The American Note-Books.....	2.00
The French and Italian Note-Books.....	2.00
Our Old Home, and Septimus Felton.....	2.00
HIGGINSON'S (T. W.) Out-Door Papers.....	1.50
Malbone and Oldport Bonaparte.....	1.50
Army Life in a Black Regiment.....	1.50
Atlantic Essays.....	2.00
Oldport Days.....	2.50
HOWELL'S (WILLIAM D.) Their Wedding Journey.....	2.00
Suburban Sketches.....	2.00
Volcanic Life.....	2.00
Italian Journeys.....	2.00
A Chance Acquaintance.....	1.50
HUGO'S (V.) New Novel, "Ninety-Three".....	1.75
HUMBOLDT (ALEXANDER VON). Life of. Translated from the German. 2 vols., with three portraits.....	10.50
HUME'S (DAVID) Essays and Life.....	1.50
HUNT'S (MRS. HELEN). Verses.....	1.25
Bits of Travel.....	1.50
HUXLEY'S Man's Place in Nature.....	1.25
On the Origin of Species.....	1.00
More Criticisms on Darwin and Administrative Nihilism.....	.50
A Manual of the Anatomy of Vertebrate Animals.....	1.50
Lay Sermons, Addresses, and Reviews.....	1.75
INGELWORTH'S (JEAN) Poems.....	7.25
The Mouldings of the Unseen.....	1.50
Songs of Seven.....	2.50
INGELWORTH'S (JEAN) Prose. On the Skelton.....	1.75
Studies for Stories.....	1.25
Stories told to a Child. First and Second Series.....	1.25
A Sister's Bye-Bye.....	1.25
Mopse the Fairy: A Story.....	1.25
INGERSOLL'S (BOST. G.) The Gods and Other Lectures.....	2.00
INTERNATIONAL SCIENTIFIC SERIES. No. I. Forms of Water. In Clouds, Rain, Rivers, Ice, and Glaciers. By John Tyndall.....	1.50
No. II. Physics and Politics; or, Thoughts on the Application of the Principles of "Natural Selection," and "Inheritance" to Political Society. By Walter Bagehot.....	1.50

III. Foods. By Dr. Edward Smith.....	1.75
IV. Mind and Body. The Theories of their Relations. By Alex. Bain.....	1.50
V. The Study of Sociology. By Herbert Spencer, Esq.....	1.50
VI. The New Chemistry. By Josiah P. Cooke, Jr.....	2.00
VII. The Conservation of Energy. By Balfour Stewart, with an Appendix, treating of the Vital and Mental Applications of the Doctrine.....	1.50
VIII. Animal Locomotion; or, Walking, Swimming, and Flying, with a Dissertation on Aerostatics. By J. Bell Pettigrew.....	1.75
IX. Responsibility in Mental Disease. By Henry Maudsley, M.D.....	1.50
JERROLD (DOUGLAS). Fireside Saints, Mr. Claude's Breakfast Talk, and other Papers.....	1.50
JOHNSON'S (SAMUEL) Oriental Religions, and their Relation to Universal Religion. India.....	5.00
JOSEPHUS. The whole Works of Flavius Josephus, the Jewish Historian.....	2.50
JOWETT. The Dialogues of Plato. Translated into English, with Analysis and Introductions by B. Jowett, M.A., Master of Balliol College, Oxford, and Regius Professor of Greek. Four vols.....	12.00
KERR (ORPHEUS O.). Varieties, Poems, Patriotic, Sentimental and Humorous.....	2.00
LECKY (W. E. H.) History of the Rise and Influence of the Spirit of Rationalism in Europe. 2 vols.....	4.00
History of European Morals from Augustus to Charlemagne. 2 vols.....	6.00
LEGGE'S Confucius' Life and Teachings.....	4.00
Confucius and Chinese Classics.....	2.00
LESSING'S (G. E.) Nathan the Wise. Translated by Ellen Frothingham.....	1.50
LEWIS'S (G. H.) Physiology of Common Life. 2 vols.....	3.00
Biographical History of Philosophy, from its Origin in Greece down to the Present Day. 2 vols.....	4.00
Problems of Life and Mind. The Foundations of a Creed.....	2.00
LEWIS (G. H.) The Story of Goethe's Life.....	1.50
LEWIN (REV. RAPHAEL, D.O.). What is Judaism? or, Few Words to the Jews.....	1.00
LONGFELLOW'S (H. W.) Poems. Portrait.....	4.00
Prose Works. Portrait.....	4.00
LOWELL'S (J. B.) Poems. 2 vols.....	4.00
The Biglow Papers. First Series.....	1.50
The Biglow Papers. Second Series.....	1.50
Among my Books.....	2.00
My Study Windows.....	2.00
LOWELL (MRS. A. C.) Poems for Children.....	.75
LUBBOCK (SIR JOHN). Origin of Civilization, and the Primitive Condition of Man. Pre-historic Times.....	2.00
5.00
LYELL'S Principles of Geology. 2 vols.....	8.00
MACDONALD (GEORGE). The Vicar's Daughter.....	1.50
MANN (HORACE). The Life of Horace Mann. By his Wife.....	3.00
Lectures and Annual Reports on Education. Annual Reports on Education, from 1829 to 1868.....	2.00
Thoughts Selected from the Writings of Horace Mann.....	1.25
MARTINEAU (JAMES). Essays, Philosophical and Theological. 2 vols. Per vol.....	2.50
MAURICE (REV. F. D.) The Ground and Object of Hope for Mankind.....	.75
MERRIVALE'S (CHARLES) Conversion of the Roman Empire.....	1.50
Conversion of the Northern Nations.....	1.50
MILL (JOHN STUART). Dissertations and Discussions. 4 vols., each.....	2.25
The Examination of the Philosophy of Sir William Hamilton. 2 vols., each.....	2.25
The Positive Philosophy of Auguste Comte. Political Economy. New and revised edition.....	2.50
The Subjection of Women—Essay on Liberty—both in one vol.....	2.50
Representative Government.....	1.50
Autobiography.....	2.25
Memorial Volume. His Life and Works.....	1.5
Three Essays on Religion.....	2.50
MILLER (JOAQUIN). Songs of the Sierras.....	1.50
Songs of the Sun Lands.....	1.50
MIVART (ST. GEO.) On the Genesis of Species.....	1.75
MORLEY (PROF. JOHN). Voltaire.....	2.00
Rousseau, 2 vols.....	6.00
MOULTON (LOUISE CHANDLER). Bed-Time Stories.....	1.50
MUELLER (MAX, M.A.). Lectures on the Science of Language. First Series.....	2.50
The Same. Second Series.....	3.50
Chips from a German Workshop. Vol. I. Essays on the Science of Religion. Vol. II. Essays on Mythology, Traditions, and Customs. Vol. III. Essays on Literature, Biography and Antiquities.....	2.50
Three vols. Price per volume.....	2.50
Lectures on the Science of Religion.....	2.00
NASSY (PETROLEUM V.) Swingin' Round the Circle.....	1.50
Mekkes from Kentucky.....	1.50
NEWMAN (FRANCIS W.) A History of the Hebrew Monarchy.....	4.50
Catholic Union: Essays towards a Church of the Future, as the Organization of Philanthropy.....	1.75
Theism, Doctrinal and Practical.....	4.25
PARKER (THEODORE). A Discourse of Matters Pertaining to Religion.....	1.50
Speeches, Addresses, and Occasional Sermons. 3 vols.....	4.50
Additional Speeches, Addresses, and Occasional Sermons. 2 vols.....	2.00
Critical and Miscellaneous Writings.....	1.50
Historic Americans—Franklin, Washington, Adams, and Jefferson. With an Introduction by Rev. O. B. Frothingham.....	1.50
The two Christmas Celebrations—A.D. I. and MDCCLV. A Christmas Story.....	.50
PARSONS (THEOPHILUS). The Infinite and the Finite.....	1.00
PEELER'S (ELIZABETH STUART). The Gates ajar.....	1.50
The Trotty Book.....	1.50
Men, Women, and Ghosts.....	1.50
Hedged In.....	1.50
The Silent Partner.....	1.50
What to Wear?.....	1.00
PROCTOR'S (ADELAIDE A.) Poems. Portrait. Cabinet Edition.....	2.00

PROCTOR (RICHARD A.) Other Worlds than Ours: the Plurality of Worlds studied under the Light of Recent Scientific Researches. With Colored Plates.....	2.50
Light Science for Leisure Hours. A Series of Familiar Essays on Scientific Subjects, Natural Phenomena.....	1.75
Essays on Astronomy: A Series of Papers on Planets and Meteors, the Sun, &c. With 10 Plates and 24 Woodcuts.....	4.50
The Moon, her Motions, Aspects, Sonnetry, and Physical Conditions, with Three Lunar Photographs and many Plates, Charts, &c.....	5.00
The Expense of Heaven.....	2.00
RENAN'S Life of Jesus.....	1.75
ROSSSETTI (CHRISTINA G.) A Shadow of Dante.....	2.50
SCHILLER (H.) Spectrum Analysis, in its Application to Terrestrial Substances, and the Physical Constitution of the Heavenly Bodies.....	6.00
SCIENCE PRIMERS: 1. Introductory. By Prof. Huxley, F.R.S.....	.50
2. Chemistry. By Prof. Huxley.....	.50
3. Physics. By Balfour Stewart. With Illustrations.....	.50
4. Physical Geography. By Archibald Geikie, LL.D., F.R.S., flexible cloth.....	.50
SCOTT'S Waverley Novels. 25 vols.....	21.25
SCOTT'S (THOMAS) The English Life of Jesus. Second Edition.....	1.00
SMILES'S (SAMUEL) Self-Help.....	1.50
SPENCER (HERBERT). Education, Intellectual, Moral, and Physical.....	1.25
First Principles.....	.50
Essays: Moral, Political, and Aesthetic. Illustrations of Universal Progress. A Selection of his best Papers.....	2.50
Social Statics; or, The Conditions Essential to Human Happiness Specified, and the First of them Developed.....	2.50
The Principles of Biology. 2 vols.....	5.00
The Principles of Psychology. 2 vols.....	6.00
Philosophy of Style.....	.50
Recent Discussions in Science, Philosophy, and Morals. New and enlarged edition.....	2.50
Sociology.....	1.50
Descriptive Sociology. Parts I., II., and III., each.....	4.50
Life, Correspondence and Ethics.....	8.50
Universal Progress.....	2.50
STOWE (HARRIET BEECHE). Pink and White Tyranny.....	1.50
Uncle Tom's Cabin.....	.50
STRAUSS (D. F.) The Old Faith and the New.....	2.00
New Life of Jesus. Authorized translation. 2 vols.....	12.50
TAINES'S (H. A.) History of English Literature. 2 vols.....	7.50
The Classic-Room Taines. History of English Literature. Abridged and Edited by John Payne.....	2.50
TENNISON'S (ALFRED) Poems.....	1.75
THACKERAY'S (W. M.) Novels. Household Edition. Complete in 8 volumes. Per vol.....	1.50
Vanity Fair.....	1.50
The Newcomes.....	1.50
Adventures of Philip Pendennis.....	1.50
The Virginians.....	1.50
Edmond, and Lovell the Widower.....	1.50
Miscellaneous Writings. Household Edition. Uniform with the Novels. Complete in 5 vols. With new Portrait. Per vol.....	1.50
This edition includes all the matter in the latest English editions, with many additions, thus making it, with the novels, the cheapest and most complete Thackeray in the market. 1. Barry Lyndon, Hogarty Diamond, &c. 2. Paris, and Irish Sketches, &c. 3. No. 66, Sketches, Denis Duval, &c. 4. Four Georges, Humors, &c. 5. Catherine, Christmas Books, and Unprinted Pieces.....	1.50
THAYER'S (MRS. CELIA) Among the Isles of Rhé.....	1.50
THOREAU'S (H. D.) Walden; or, Life in the Woods.....	2.00
Excursions in Field and Forest. Portrait.....	2.50
The Maine Woods.....	2.50
Cape Cod.....	1.50
A Yankee in Canada.....	1.50
A Week on the Concord and Merrimack Rivers.....	3.00
TYLER (EDWARD B.) The Early History of Mankind.....	2.50
Primitive Culture. 2 vols.....	5.00
TYNDALL (JOHN). Faraday as a Discoverer.....	1.00
Fragments of Science for Unscientific People.....	2.50
Light and Electricity.....	1.50
Hours of Exercise in the Alps.....	1.50
Heat as a Mode of Motion.....	1.50
On Sound.....	1.50
Radiant Heat.....	1.50
Forms of Water.....	1.50
Lectures on Light.....	1.50
Proceedings at the Farewell Banquet to Prof. Tyndall.....	.50
Lessons in Electricity.....	1.00
Address before British Assoc'n at Belfast.....	.50
TYTLER (SARAH). Old Masters and their Pictures.....	1.50
Modern Painters and their Paintings.....	1.50
VOYSEY (REV. CHARLES). The Bible and the Stone. Vols. I. and V., each.....	3.00
Vols III. IV. and VI., each.....	2.75
WARNER'S (CHARLES D.) My Summer in Garden.....	1.00
Sauterlings.....	1.00
Back-Log Studies.....	2.00
WHISS (JOHN). American Religion.....	1.50
Life of Theodore Parker. 2 vols.....	6.00
WHIPPLE'S (E. P.) Literature and Life.....	1.50
Essays and Reviews.....	3.00
Character and Characteristic Man.....	1.00
The Literature of the Age of Elizabeth.....	1.50
Success and its Conditions.....	1.50
Washington and the Revolution.....	.50
WHITNEY'S (MRS. A. D. T.) A Summer in Leslie Goldthwaite's Life.....	1.50
We Girls: A Home Story.....	1.50
Real Folks.....	1.50
The Other Girls.....	2.00
Pantries. A volume of Poems.....	1.50
WHITTIER'S (JOHN G.) Poems. 2 vols.....	4.00
Child Life.....	3.00

ADDRESSES:

THE INDEX

321 Washington St., Boston.

The Index.

Three Dollars a Year.

LIBERTY AND LIGHT.

Single Copies Seven Cents.

VOLUME 9.

BOSTON, MASS., THURSDAY, JANUARY 31, 1878.

WHOLE NO. 423.

NATIONAL LIBERAL LEAGUE.

PLATFORM

For the Presidential Election of 1880,

(ADOPTED AT ROCHESTER, N.Y., OCT. 26, 1877.)

1. TOTAL SEPARATION OF CHURCH AND STATE, to be guaranteed by amendment of the United States Constitution: including the equitable taxation of church property, secularization of the public schools; abrogation of Sabbatarian laws, abolition of chaplaincies, prohibition of public appropriations for religious purposes, and all other measures necessary to the same general end.

2. NATIONAL PROTECTION FOR NATIONAL CITIZENS, in their equal civil, political, and religious rights: to be guaranteed by amendment of the United States Constitution, and afforded through the United States courts.

3. UNIVERSAL EDUCATION THE BASIS OF UNIVERSAL SUFFRAGE IN THIS SECULAR REPUBLIC: to be guaranteed by amendment of the United States Constitution, requiring every State to maintain a thoroughly secularized public school system, and to permit no child within its limits to grow up without a good elementary education.

N. B.—The nomination of candidates upon the above platform was postponed to a future Congress of the National Liberal League.

THE DEMANDS OF LIBERALISM.

1. We demand that churches and other ecclesiastical property shall no longer be exempt from just taxation.

2. We demand that the employment of chaplains in Congress, in State Legislatures, in the navy and militia, and in prisons, asylums, and all other institutions supported by public money, shall be discontinued.

3. We demand that all public appropriations for educational and charitable institutions of a sectarian character shall cease.

4. We demand that all religious services now sustained by the government shall be abolished; and especially that the use of the Bible in the public schools, whether ostensibly as a text-book or avowedly as a book of religious worship, shall be prohibited.

5. We demand that the appointment, by the President of the United States or by the Governors of the various States, of all religious festivals and fairs shall wholly cease.

6. We demand that the judicial oath in the courts and in all other departments of the government shall be abolished, and that simple affirmation under the pains and penalties of perjury shall be established in its stead.

7. We demand that all laws directly or indirectly enforcing the observance of Sunday as the Sabbath shall be repealed.

8. We demand that all laws looking to the enforcement of "Christian" morality shall be abrogated, and that all laws shall be conformed to the requirements of natural morality, equal rights, and impartial liberty.

9. We demand that not only in the Constitutions of the United States and of the several States, but also in the practical administration of the same, no privilege or advantage shall be conceded to Christianity or any other special religion; that our entire political system shall be founded and administered on a purely secular basis; and that whatever changes shall prove necessary to this end shall be consistently, unflinchingly, and promptly made.

The above is the platform of THE INDEX, so far as the editor is individually concerned. But no other person, and no organization, can be justly or truthfully held responsible for it without his or its explicit approval.

FRANCIS E. ABBOT.

RESOLUTION

ADOPTED BY THE NATIONAL LIBERAL LEAGUE, AT PHILADELPHIA, JULY 3, 1875.

Resolved, That we accept the offer of the Boston INDEX to be our official organ of communication with the public, for the publication of announcements, acknowledgments, and other official papers of the Board of Directors; but that we assume no responsibility for anything else published in its columns and claim no control or influence in its general editorial management.

GLIMPSES.

A NEW Liberal League has just been organized at West Meriden, Connecticut, in affiliation with the National League. The officers are—President, N. F. Griswold; Secretary, Emily J. Leonard; Treasurer, R. L. Roys.

ALL WHO have been interested by the radical sermons of Rev. M. J. Savage, occasionally reprinted here, will be glad to know that they will be hereafter published regularly in the Boston (Sunday) Times. The subscription price of this journal is two dollars a year.

MR. FRANK J. MEAD, of Minneapolis, writes to Mr. H. L. Green: "It is our purpose now to hold during the winter a State meeting of those in sympathy with the Liberal League movement. In case we should, it will result, I think, in adding several more Leagues to the movement."

ANOTHER NEW Liberal League has been formed at Florence, Iowa, to which a charter has been already sent. Officers—Byron McQuin, President; E. C. Walker, Secretary; A. M. Rogers, Assistant Secretary; Mrs. R. I. Wagner, Treasurer; Charles M. Rogers, Phil Wagner, Richard Merritt, and C. B. Hayden, Councillors. An account of its organization by the Secretary will be found on another page.

IN CONNECTION with the general celebration of Thomas Paine's birthday last Tuesday, the subjoined passage from a private letter which we recently received from a very bright lady in Washington, will be of interest to our readers. Speaking of Colonel Ingersoll's lecture on "Ghosts," delivered in that city on January 21, she says: "In enumerating and praising the few men of the past who have 'dared to think and to speak their thought,' when he came to the words, 'and I thank Thomas Paine'—the whole audience almost shouted: the cheers and wild applause held on for several minutes, and broke out again and yet again. . . . As the audience was sprinkled with Senators and Congressmen and people from all over the United States, the applause was of greater significance to me than it would have been in a Boston audience."

MR. BENJAMIN R. TUCKER deserves great praise and abundant encouragement in his efforts to establish the Radical Review. He has proved himself to be an able editor, and we hope that his devotion and self-sacrifice will not be thrown away by reason of the hard times. We print with pleasure his notice of the next number: Beginning with Vol. II., No. 1, the Radical Review will be issued bi-monthly. While the subscription price will remain the same, the price of single copies will be reduced from $1.50 to $1.00. The February number of the Radical Review will present the following Table of Contents: "The Decline of Churches," J. Vila Blake; "Musings upon Deity," Christopher P. Cranch; "Work and Wealth," J. K. Ingalls; "The Ethics of Jesus," John L. Stoddard; "To a Man about Town," a Reproach; "Emily E. Ford; "Chauncey Wright," John Fiske; "Some Considerations in Ethics," T. F. Brownell; "The Revolution," B. W. Ball; "System of Economical Contradictions. Chapter III. The Division of Labor," P. J. Proudhon. Editor's Translation; "Gold and Silver as Standards of Value: The Flagrant Cheat in Regard to Them," Lysander Spooner; "The Martyr's Vision," John L. Stoddard; "Current Literature": Simcox's Natural Law; Bolle's Conflict between Capital and Labor; Gill's Life of Edgar Allan Poe; Wakeman's Epitome of the Positive Philosophy and Religion; Frothingham's Cradle of the Christ; Phelps' Story of Avis; "Chips from my Studio," Sidney H. Morse. Benjamin R. Tucker, Publisher, New Bedford, Mass.

ACCORDING to the Boston Advertiser, the reactionists in New Haven have been at work: "The citizens of New Haven do not accept without a contest the action of their city board of education in the abolition of religious services in the public schools. Petitions of approval, as they are called, and counter-petitions for a reversal of the action were presented at the last meeting of the board on Friday evening. Among the two thousand people whose names followed the petition to stand by the action already taken, are ex-Governor Ingersoll, the Hon. Francis Wayland, dean of the Yale law school, Professors W. D. Whitney, W. G. Sumner, G. J. Brush, D. C. Eaton, T. R. Lounsbury, Francis Bacon, and A. E. Verrill. But the Yale faculty and the leading citizens are more numerous found among the thirty-six hundred who petition for a restoration of the Bible reading. Ex-President Woolsey, President Porter, Professors Dana, Silliman, Hopkin, and the Rev. Dr. Harris and others, most of whom made up the list of one hundred and twenty-three, largely composed of the faculty, represented the conservative element, and the weight of their names was reinforced by the leading clergymen and business men of the city. An unexpected fact about the petitions to reverse the action of the board was that they were signed not only by representatives of all Protestant denominations, but also by Catholics, Jews, and people of no religious faith whatever. Most of the signers were tax-payers; but some were women not paying taxes. No action was taken on these petitions, both being referred to a committee, to come up again after deliberation. If the contest on this question is to come up now in New England, it is well that it appears first in a city where there is a great readiness of trained men to enter the lists. The way it is decided in New Haven will necessarily have considerable influence throughout the smaller cities and country towns."

A GENTLEMAN of St. Louis whose character and intelligence render his approval especially valuable writes as follows under date of January 20: "Anthony Comstock has recently delivered in this city a private lecture to nearly all the clergymen of every denomination and many of our leading citizens. At the meeting he exhibited not merely obscene publications and pictures, but the tools of the professional seducers, together with private correspondence of such a character as to shut the mouth of every decent and moral man—liberal or bigot,—who might have objected to his crusade against obscenity, unless his so-called evidence is the most monstrous fiction invented by him as a pretext. I cannot possibly conceive how any one familiar with the facts can oppose the most stringent surveillance of the mails to prevent the transmission of the vilest instruments of debauchery for purposes of masturbation, etc., all of which he avowed were being made accessible to every female seminary in the land. You are altogether right in the stand you are making. 'Hold the Fort' for our children's sake." It is this nefarious business, this insufferable crime against the welfare of those whose immaturity and inexperience must make them defenceless victims unless protected by others, which should alone be suppressed by law. If the liberals should be betrayed into confounding the cause of free speech and a free press with the cause of malevolent and aggressive nastiness, they would deservedly array against themselves the self-preserving instincts of the whole community. They would be utter idiots to do this, and we will neither be coaxed, driven, nor fooled into helping crazy fanatics murder the cause of free thought by swamping it in the bog of free licentiousness. If there is not enough insight among the liberals to discover in due time the service which THE INDEX is doing them by its course in this matter, we shall be surprised indeed. But, appreciated or not, THE INDEX will not deviate by a hair's-breadth from the straight path it has pursued, defending at the same time the rights of free thought and of public morality.

NATIONAL LIBERAL LEAGUE. OFFICERS.

President.

FRANCIS E. ABBOT,.....Boston, Mass.

Vice-Presidents.

HON. E. P. HURLBUT,.....Albany, N. Y.
HON. SAMUEL E. SEWALL,.....Boston, Mass.
HON. NATHANIEL HOLMES,.....St. Louis, Mo.
HON. HENRY BOOTH,.....Chicago, Ill.
HON. GEORGE W. JULIAN,.....Irvington, Ind.
HON. ELIZUR WRIGHT,.....Boston, Mass.
MR. O. B. FRUTTINGHAM,.....New York.
MR. W. M. J. POTTER,.....New Bedford, Mass.
MR. F. P. HALLOWELL,.....Boston, Mass.
MR. JAMES PARTON,.....Newburyport, Mass.
MR. F. SCHUBENMANN,.....San Francisco, Cal.
HON. ABRAHAM PAYS,.....Providence, R. I.
REV. M. J. SAVAGE,.....Chicago, Ill.
REV. W. H. SPENCER,.....Sparta, Wis.
MR. SAMUEL L. HILL,.....Florence, Mass.
MR. E. W. MENDHAM,.....Detroit, Mich.
MR. KARL HEINZEN,.....Editor of "Der Pioneer," Boston.
MR. HORACE SEEVER,.....Editor of the "Investigator," Boston.
MR. ISAAC M. WISE,.....Editor of the "American Traveller," Cincinnati.
MR. D. M. BENNETT,.....Editor of the "Truth Seeker," New York.
MR. MORITZ KLINGER,.....Editor of the "Jewish Times," New York.
MR. E. F. UNDERWOOD,.....Thorncliffe, Mass.
REV. ROBERT COLLYER,.....Chicago, Ill.
COL. ROBERT G. INGERSOLL,.....Peoria, Ill.
DR. T. L. BROWN,.....Binghamton, N. Y.
HON. E. S. MCCORMICK,.....Franklin, Pa.
ELDER F. W. EVANS,.....Mount Lebanon, N. Y.
MR. ELIZABETH THOMPSON,.....New York City.
MR. AMY POST,.....Rochester, N. Y.
MR. ELIZABETH ADY STANTON,.....Tomball, N. Y.
MR. SALLIE HOLLEY,.....Litchfield, Va.

Secretary.

W. H. HAMLEN,.....221 Washington Street, Boston, Mass.

Assistant Secretary.

MISS JANE P. TITCOMB,.....142 Chandler St., Boston.

Treasurer.

J. A. J. WILCOX,.....3 Pemberton Square, Boston.

Board of Directors.

F. E. ABBOT,.....W. H. HAMLEN.
J. A. J. WILCOX,.....H. L. GREEN.
D. G. ORANDON.

Executive Committee.

Alabama.....J. H. HALLEY, Selma.
Arkansas.....JOHN A. BROWN, Monticello.
California.....J. L. HATCH, San Francisco.
Colorado.....DAVID T. BEALS, Granada.
Connecticut.....GEORGE W. BALDWIN, Bridgeport.
Delaware.....JOSEPH D. GOULT, Greenville.
Florida.....T. D. GIDDINGS, Enterprise.
Georgia.....DR. A. A. BELL, Madison.
Illinois.....L. C. UNDERWOOD, Indianapolis.
Indiana.....J. C. MICHEMER, Fort Scott.
Iowa.....J. B. CLARK, Waverly.
Kansas.....EMERSON BRIDLEY, New Orleans.
Louisiana.....DR. W. H. BROWN, Bangor.
Maine.....J. S. RUSSELL, New Market.
Maryland.....W. H. BAYWARD, Boston.
Massachusetts.....KARL SCHUMMANN, Detroit.
Michigan.....J. B. BASSETT, Minneapolis.
Minnesota.....J. W. MILLINGSBY, Lincoln.
Mississippi.....V. G. BARRETT, White Rock.
Missouri.....WILLIAM LITTLE, Manchester.
Montana.....H. L. GREEN, Salamanca.
Nebraska.....J. W. THORNE, Warren.
Nevada.....E. D. STARK, Cleveland.
New Hampshire.....SAMUEL COLE, Hammondsport.
New Jersey.....G. W. BALDWIN, Lansville.
New York.....GEORGE LAWIS, President.
North Carolina.....P. W. FULLER, Columbia.
Ohio.....DR. E. H. PRICE, Chantanooga.
Oregon.....DR. A. DUNBAR, Greenville.
Pennsylvania.....B. SPALDING, Norfolk.
Rhode Island.....A. M. DEET, Weston.
South Carolina.....ROBERT C. SPENCER, Milwaukee.
Tennessee.....D. P. WILCOX, Vanhook.
Texas.....W. H. DOOLITTLE, Washington.
Virginia.....W. FERGUSON, Provo City.
Washington.....NORMAN S. PORTER.
West Virginia.....
Wisconsin.....
Wyoming.....

Finance Committee.

D. G. ORANDON, Chairman,.....Chelsea, Mass.
MR. SARAH B. OTIS,.....151 Warren Avenue, Boston.
HARLAN P. HYDE,.....221 Washington St., Boston.

LOCAL AUXILIARY LIBERAL LEAGUES

To which Charters have been issued by the National Liberal League.

LINCOLN, NEBRASKA.—President, D. A. Oline; Secretary, Dr. A. S. von Mansfeld.
Issued to L. W. Billingsley, D. A. Oline, A. S. von Mansfeld, Julius Philstorer, Joseph Wittman, W. E. Copeland, Benj. F. Fisher, Sidney Lyons, L. Meyer, G. E. Church, and others.
JACKSONVILLE, ILLINOIS.—[Officers not reported.]
Issued to A. W. Cadman, Mrs. D. M. Cadman, S. W. Sample, David Prince, E. A. Nance, C. H. Danbrack, W. Hackman, Jennie W. Meek, Emma Meek, Hattie E. Hammond, and others.
PHILADELPHIA, PENNSYLVANIA.—President, Carrie B. Kilgore; Secretary, Joseph Bohrer.
Issued to the Presidents and Secretary on behalf of the Philadelphia Liberal League.
MILWAUKEE, WISCONSIN.—President, Lauriston Damon; Secretary, Anton Braasch.
Issued to Anton Braasch, Fred. Claussen, J. Runge, Jr., Louis Zander, S. Damon, Ferd. Heyroth, Louis Heyroth, Fred. Zander, Fred. Halberg, Ernst Clusen, and Fred. Braasch.
CHelsea, MASSACHUSETTS.—President, D. Goddard Orandon; Secretary, J. H. W. Toohy.
Issued to the President and Secretary on behalf of the Chelsea Liberal League.
STOCKTON, CALIFORNIA.—[Officers not reported.]
Issued to Chas. Haas, G. C. Hyatt, F. C. Lawrence, A. T. Hudson, Chas. Williams, W. F. Freeman, J. Grundke, J. Harrison, T. C. Mallon, A. P. Lochead, and others.
DENVER, COLORADO.—President, Orson Brooks; Secretary, J. H. Cotton.
Issued to the President and Secretary on behalf of the Liberal League of Denver.
PATHE HALL, BOSTON.—President, John S. Verity; Secretary, Robert Cooper.
Issued to Horace Seaver, J. P. Mendham, Eliza Wright, B. F. Underwood, David Kirkwood, James Harris, G. H. Foster, H. P. Hyde, Robert Cooper, S. R. Urbino, John S. Verity.
PALMYRA, NEW YORK.—President, J. M. Jones; Secretary, C. C. Everson.
Issued to J. M. Jones, C. C. Everson, Henry M. North, A. R. Sherman, Joseph Fritts, L. B. Keeler, J. J. White, R. H. Sherman, Henry Gardner, Samuel Cosad, and others.
BOSTON, MASSACHUSETTS.—President, F. E. Abbot; Secretary, Miss J. P. Titcomb.
Issued to the President and Secretary on behalf of the First Liberal League of Boston, Mass.
NEW PHILADELPHIA, OHIO.—President, George Riker; Secretary, C. M. Rittenhouse.
Issued to C. M. Rittenhouse, George Riker, J. C.

Price, Daniel Korna, P. W. Himes, John Arn, Philip Gintz, A. H. Brown, Jacob Miller, L. A. Cornet.
TITUSVILLE, PENNSYLVANIA.—President, William Barnsdall; Secretary, C. M. Hayes.
Issued to the President and Secretary on behalf of the Titusville Liberal League.
HUDSON, MICHIGAN.—President, Dr. Levi R. Peirson; Secretary, Dr. F. O. Baker.
Issued to Levi R. Peirson, A. D. Armstrong, James S. Bedel, Miles C. Beach, W. R. Norris, R. H. Armstrong, K. W. B. Johnson, E. M. Brown, G. L. Marceron, Philip Sewall.

CATTARAUGUS COUNTY, NEW YORK.—President, H. L. Green; Corresponding Secretary, John Hammond.
Issued to the Presidents and Secretary on behalf of the Cattaraugus County Liberal League.

NEW HAVEN, CONNECTICUT.—[Officers not yet reported.]
Issued to M. M. Sherman, W. W. Stow, F. A. Hermande, T. F. Hamilton, D. M. Hamilton, W. F. Hopson, E. R. Whiting, E. E. Seaman, A. C. Harrison, E. F. F. Sheppard, and others.

ST. JOSEPH, MISSOURI.—President, P. V. Wise; Secretary, H. Brunsing.
Issued to the President and Secretary on behalf of the St. Joseph Liberal League.

NEW YORK, NEW YORK.—President, Hugh B. Brown; Secretary, A. L. Rawson.

Issued to T. B. Wakeman, Henry Evans, A. L. Rawson, Hugh B. Brown, E. Langerfeld, D. S. Plumb, O. E. Browning, Mrs. Eliz. Erving, Miss E. W. McAdams, Mrs. O. E. Langerfeld, on behalf of the Society of Humanity.

ROCHESTER, NEW YORK.—President, Mrs. Amy Post; Secretary, Willet E. Post.

Issued to Benj. Gregg, Mrs. Amy Post, Willet E. Post, Emily G. Beebe, Dr. Sherman, Mrs. Barker, Clement Austin, Wm. H. Gibbs, Dr. C. D. Dake, and others.

TOMPKINS COUNTY, NEW YORK.—President, Dr. John Winalow; Secretary, Myron E. Bishop.
Issued to C. W. Ames, Wm. A. Anthony, Geo. Arnold, M. E. Bishop, H. Boal, W. Dennis, Isaac Flagg, B. W. Franklin, C. Gardner, W. Hutchins, and others.

NEW YORK, NEW YORK.—President, A. L. Rawson; Secretary, Porter C. Bliss.

Issued to the President and Secretary on behalf of the Manhattan Liberal Club.

CLEVELAND, OHIO.—President, E. D. Stark; Secretary, Mrs. M. B. Ambler.

Issued to E. D. Stark, Mrs. Louisa Southworth, B. White, W. A. Madison, S. E. Adams, Daniel R. Tilden, W. Galen Smith, Walter F. Johnson, Thomas Jones, and Mrs. M. B. Ambler.

MILWAUKEE, WISCONSIN.—President, Robert C. Spencer; Secretary, William A. Boyd.

Issued to the President and Secretary on behalf of the First Liberal League of Milwaukee.

JEFFERSON LIBERAL LEAGUE, ROCHESTER, NEW YORK.—President, Moses Hays; Secretaries, Fred. Hebard and J. B. Pike.

Issued to L. Garson, N. O. Tiffany, Adolph Roth, J. W. Roberts, R. F. Smith, Julius Kothholtz, A. C. Allen, C. B. Strong, De L. Crittenden, and F. Bush.

MINNEAPOLIS, MINNESOTA.—President, S. C. Gale; Secretary, Frank J. Mead.

Issued to the President, Vice-President, Secretary, and Treasurer, on behalf of the First Liberal League of Minneapolis.

FLORENCE, IOWA.—President, Byron McQuinn; Secretary, E. C. Walker.

Issued to the President and Secretary on behalf of the Liberal League of Florence, Iowa.

WEST MERIDEN, CONNECTICUT.—President, N. F. Griswold; Secretary, Miss Emily J. Leonard.

Issued to W. W. Lee, Edwin Dayton, E. L. Royce, C. C. Munn, N. W. Pomeroy, N. F. Griswold, Mrs. F. L. Lewis, Marion L. Pomeroy, Joseph Frankowski, Mrs. J. Frankowski, and Emily J. Leonard.

[N. B.—Many new local Liberal Leagues have been formed which have neglected to take out charters, and therefore are not entitled to representation.]

RELIGIOUS FREEDOM AMENDMENT:

PROPOSED AS A SUBSTITUTE FOR THE FIRST AMENDMENT TO THE U. S. CONSTITUTION.

ARTICLE I.

SECTION 1.—Neither Congress nor any State shall make any law respecting an establishment of religion, or favoring any particular form of religion, or prohibiting the free exercise thereof; or permitting in any degree a union of Church and State, or granting any special privilege, immunity, or advantage to any sect or religious body, or to any number of sects or religious bodies; or taxing the people of any State, either directly or indirectly, for the support of any sect or religious body, or of any number of sects or religious bodies; or abridging the freedom of speech or of the press, or the right of the people peaceably to assemble and to petition the Government for a redress of grievances.

SECTION 2.—No religious test shall ever be required as a condition of suffrage, or as a qualification to any office or public trust, in any State. No person shall ever be deprived of any of his or her rights, privileges or capacities, or disqualified for the performance of any public or private duty, or rendered incompetent to give evidence in any court of law or equity, in consequence of any opinions he or she may hold on the subject of religion. No person shall ever be required by law to contribute directly or indirectly to the support of any religious society or body of which he or she is not a voluntary member.

SECTION 3.—Neither the United States, nor any State, Territory, municipality, or any civil division of any State or Territory, shall levy any tax, or make any gift, grant, or appropriation, for the support, or in aid, of any church, religious sect, or denomination, or any school, seminary, or institution of learning, in which the faith or doctrine of any religious order or sect shall be taught or inculcated, or in which religious rites shall be observed; or for the support, or in aid, of any religious charity or purpose of any sect, order, or denomination whatsoever.

SECTION 4.—Congress shall have power to enforce the various provisions of this Article by appropriate legislation.

THE NEW YORK Times thus reports an interview with a learned Chinaman: "Do you believe in religion?" "Wall Ho!" "Yes," he said; "we are all alike. We all have the same God. We all pray to him the same,—the Chinaman, Turk, Englishman, and American. He is the same God all over the world, only each nation spells his name differently. We call him Joss; the Hindus call him Bramola; the Greeks call him Theos; the Italian, Deus; the American Indian, Great Spirit; the Frenchman, Dieu; the German, Gott; the American, God; and so on. Every nation has the same God, only they spell it differently. The same God in twenty-six different nations has the same attributes,—omniscience, omnipresence, potentiality. Every nation prays to him the same. You and I, though you call me a heathen, worship the same God. We believe precisely alike, except when we come to the prophets; and then all nations disagree."

[FOR THE INDEX.]

The Relation of Woman to Church and State.

AN ESSAY READ BEFORE THE CHICAGO WOMEN'S CLUB, OCT. 2, 1877.

BY MRS. CELIA P. WOOLLEY.

Two facts are broadly prominent with regard to the present position and influence of women. One relates to her political disability; the other is connected with her religious fanaticism. In the Church she is one of its chief instruments of power; in the State she is a nonentity. Such an anomalous position cannot but be fraught with dangerous tendencies; for though woman has come bitterly to appreciate the humiliating relation she sustains to the State, she has scarcely thought of severing or lessening the tie which holds her fast in the bonds of superstition. On the one hand she is demanding an increase of power; while on the other she is making it seriously evident how unfit she often is to wield what little influence she already possesses. Here has been a distorted growth, certain faculties having been pushed to an extreme development, while others have been left to wither and decay. In the present day, when new thoughts and fresh impulses are stirring in every mind, it naturally follows that the old womanly ideal is continually losing its power, and no longer commands the former degree of respect and admiration. The light of "woman's influence," so fondly thought to have led the world to its present stage of moral advancement, has been observed to flicker strangely at times, and cast weird shadows about; showing that it is no celestial thing, after all, which shines by its own burning, but, like the lights of mere human invention, must have good stuff to feed on.

What woman has lacked in scope she has endeavored to make up in intensity. She is a born enthusiast. What she does she does with her might, whether it is dressing for a ball or planning some new scheme of philanthropy. Once tickle her imagination with a new suggestion, and she tingles to the finger-tips to seize and execute it at once. How important it is then that this pent-up ardor and enthusiasm, this almost frantic zeal to be up and doing should be allowed to expend itself in a free and natural manner, to flow, if it chooses, in all directions at once, as a fountain scatters its sunlit drops on all sides. Before and during the middle ages, it was permitted to women to be either domestic or religious; and all down the succeeding centuries the case has only slowly altered for the better. It is said that mariolatry has done much to exalt and refine the world's notion of woman; and very likely this is true. But the kind of exaltation bestowed on woman through the worship of the Virgin was far more a recognition of certain distinctive "womanly traits," than the result of any candid consideration of her claims as a human being. The saintship in woman was revered and adored; but her common humanity was never once thought of. It was not the intellectual, but the emotional and religious parts of her nature which were enlarged upon and made typical. This error, which perhaps was not so much error as half accomplishment, has perpetuated itself to our own day. Though the early saints and religious have faded away into a twilight existence of romance and legend, the devoted Church-woman and ardent missionary still remain. The notion that, outside her home, the peculiar province of woman lies in the Sunday-school and church-society, and that her energies are most suitably engaged in some charitable and proselyting effort,—this notion still prevails, and smacks disagreeably of mediævalism. In the olden time women sought the cloister to spend the rest of their days in holy self-renunciation. The woman of to-day, more active and less contemplative, seeks not so much to absorb the spirit of religion as to impress its forms on all other enterprises and modes of thought with which she comes in contact. Passivity is no longer her distinguishing characteristic. She must make herself felt; and when not allowed to bring the force of a full and harmoniously developed intelligence to bear on the world's great movements, her only alternative is, to feebly bend and direct them according to the whim or prejudice of the moment.

We have heard much during late years of the enfranchisement of women. The subject has received careful attention, not only from reform-agitators, but from statesmen and philosophers as well. Woman suffrage from being a subject tabooed in polite circles, has come to be a natural and frequent topic of discussion among all educated and thinking people. Most of the objections to this projected innovation have proved mere ghosts of the objector's own apprehension. But perhaps the practice of fighting ghosts is not altogether unprofitable, and in this instance may have taught us how to overcome the more tangible difficulties which still confront us. Of such, those best worth considering hinge either on the general question of suffrage, or on woman's present unfitness, through a perverted mental training, for large political responsibility. The abuses recently made manifest in our election system have so cooled the admiration of many for republican institutions, that rather than extend the right of ballot any farther, they would limit it with many new restrictions. This aspect of the question is only indirectly connected with that we have at present under consideration, and is alluded to simply in parenthesis, and to suggest whether in the event of the adoption of these proposed restrictive measures, the reasons would not be still more paramount for admitting women to the class of eligible voters. If the right of suffrage were placed on an educational or property basis, there would be less excuse than ever for withholding it from those women who could comply with the conditions. Among another class of objections made up of various fears as to what woman will and will not do when once allowed to vote, there is one, touching on the relation she is likely to sustain to certain issues of theological-political order, which seems not wholly groundless.

A new note of alarm has been sounded by the secularists of the day, whose share in the work of human progress is to completely divest the functions of government from whatever sectarian ties they have been, or are likely to be, drawn into. The points of the objection here raised are, that women are notoriously bigoted and intolerant in their religious views; and that if suddenly endowed with political power they would pervert it in the direction of ecclesiastical oppression and undue spiritual domination. Let us look at it a moment: the confessional and other appliances of the Romish Church have long made us familiar with the intimacy of the relation between the Catholic clergy and laity. Among Protestants this clerical supervision is greatly diminished in extent, being exercised for the most part over the female portion of the congregation. Without pausing to enlarge upon this rather distasteful portion of my theme, or to illustrate it with extreme cases, it is sufficient to remark upon what has doubtless fallen within the observation of most of us, that an undue amount of influence is exerted by the average clergyman over the women of his church, who on their side manifest far too much receptivity towards this same spiritual guardianship. The habitual and sometimes extreme deference shown by women to their pastor, whom they are apt to endow with all manner of unearthly attributes, seeming to regard him as a mixture of saint and apostle, this, together with an obtrusive show of eagerness to promote the interests of "our church," has, as before said, been noted and unfavorably commented upon by the more astute of our thinkers. I think it was Goethe who said, "Activity without insight is a terrible thing." The present activity of woman seems in many instances to be of precisely this kind. So anxious is she to help on the world's great improvements that she gives herself little or no time to calmly think matters over, and learn what really needs to be done. She buzzes about over the surface of things, poising here and there in separate resting-spells on the social and intellectual troubles of the time, content to cover them with her glittering presence, but seldom setting solidly to work to remove them.

Turning our eyes now from the position of woman in the world of thought, let us glance at the nature and history of the institutions by which she is surrounded. We all know the dread significance of the words, "Church and State," and how it was in resistance to this dogma that our forefathers fitted up a little barque named the Mayflower, and set sail for Plymouth Rock. That passage across the sea which has become historic, and which we are accustomed to look back upon as a triumphal march, was looked at otherwise only a retreat.

What could a handful of austere-minded pietists do for themselves or their cause under the terrors of the Bloody Mary reign, the tyranny of Charles I., the invincible authority of an Archbishop Laud, and the wanton misrule of Charles II.? So one ship followed another, making one long line of light between Old and New England, like God's finger pointing the way. Here, at last, in Massachusetts, New Hampshire, and Connecticut men had found the opportunity so long coveted; and unmolested might worship God according to his conscience, and read and interpret the Bible when and how he chose. It would seem as if a small millennium had begun. But human nature, the bed-rock of all character, is forever cropping out in some new and unexpected manner. The Puritans evidently found a non-persecuted existence to be a very dull and spiritless affair, for no sooner had they fairly escaped martyrdom than they set about to make martyrs of each other. They belonged to that class of people, not yet extinct, to whom the zest of life consists in keeping its inconvenient side uppermost. You remember how that indefatigable hero, Mark Tapley, thought there was no credit in being jolly unless one had plenty of excuses for being miserable. So, in the judgment of many, virtue has no merit unless it is continually overcoming temptation; and religion is not religious unless it has been forcibly restrained from becoming infidelity. The Puritans seemed to think true piety could be attained only through intellectual constraint; and it was in accordance with this notion that such strenuous efforts were made by them to reconcile the obligations of an authoritative creed with a free republicanism in the State.

In New England the prevailing religion was Congregationalism,—at one time, says Hildreth, "so favored by the courts and legislature that it continued to enjoy the prerogatives of an Established Church." In the Southern colonies, particularly Virginia, the Episcopal Church was the one in favor, that part of the country having been settled by the aristocratic and cavalier element of the old English society. The Church was supported at public expense, and disbelieved in the popular religion punished with civil disability. So slow was Virginia in evincing a spirit of religious toleration, that James Parton quotes Madison as saying, that "if the Church of England had been established and endowed in all the colonies as it was in Virginia, the king would have had his way, and gradually reduced all America to subjection." But the abuses and errors of religious fanaticism were scarcely less in the more Northern colonies. We read that in some of these colonies, officers of State must be Protestants. In others, they must believe in a future state of rewards and punishments, or in the doctrine of the Trinity. Catholics and Quakers were alike denied the privileges of citizenship. From Jefferson's "Notes" we may learn much of the persecution of the last and most peaceable folk. According to an act of Virginia Assembly in 1706, "any person denying the tenets of the Protestant faith was punished on the first offence by incapacity to hold any office or employment, civil, ecclesiastical, or military; on the second, by disability to sue, to take any gift or legacy, to be guardian, executor, or administrator, and by three years' imprisonment without bail." This removal of the right of guardianship frequently served to deprive a father of the care of his own children, who might be taken from his custody and placed in more Orthodox hands. It was at this time that those strict Sabbatarian views were held, which made of Sunday, not indeed a warm, bright sun-day, but one of cold, dreariness, and gloom. It is impossible to sum up the entire meaning and history of the Sabbatarian question in a few sentences, and only passing allusion can be made to it in this connection. With regard to its character, it is sufficient to say that the doctrine which imputes special sacredness to the first day of the week can be traced for the most part no farther back than to the Puritan reaction against the excessive lawlessness practiced on that day by the Stuarts in England.

C. K. Whipple, writing on this subject, says: "The doctrine of the complete identification of the Sabbath with Sunday seems to have first been formally set forth by Rev. Dr. Bound, A.D. 1596, a divine of great authority among the Puritans of England." He then shows how it was afterward placed in Westminster Catechism and Confession and brought to this country by the Plymouth pilgrims. From a printed lecture by Rev. M. J. Savage, a few facts equally pertinent are obtained. Constantine was the first to set the day apart as one of public worship for the Christians, not forbidding, however, that the remaining portion of the day should be given to labor or recreation. The institution of the Sunday-Sabbath, so far as it was made a day for religious exercise, exclusively claims with Thanksgiving a Puritan origin.

Mr. Savage, after tracing the bearing of Scripture on this subject, shows how these early Sabbatarians were driven to apply the fourth commandment to the first, instead of the last day of the week, in order to find the Scriptural authority they wanted. Sabbath-breaking was defined to the minutest detail, and the slightest infraction of the law punished with heavy penalties. But this state of affairs could not last forever in a country where the population was continually increasing and changing about. Superstition is a plant of rapid growth, but it flourishes best in stagnant waters. If the different sects had been content to remain each in that section of country it had discovered and possessed, they might have continued to hedge themselves about with a bristling array of ecclesiastical statutes; but the Presbyterian must needs go down into Virginia, where he was not long in discovering how irksome it may become to be forced to contribute towards the propagation of a faith with which one has no sympathy. This feeling deepened, until, says Jefferson in his memoir, "The first republican legislature, which met in 1776, was crowded with petitions to abolish this spiritual tyranny." The repeal of only the most oppressive acts was obtained at first, it being 1778 before Jefferson's "Religious Freedom Bill" was passed.

I should be sorry in this resumé of our early religious history to incur the criticism of piling all my facts to one side. I fully appreciate the warning held up by one writer who says: "In judging of the Puritans of New England, and of the theocracy they established in the colonies of Massachusetts Bay and of New Haven, one must be careful not to ascribe to the spirit of the men nor to the influence of their faith, laws and measures which were due to the spirit of the age and to the political necessities of the hour." He adds that they acted as much against the spread of the Established Church, as in the interests of their own. But however that may be, and whether the actuating spirit was of the times or of the individuals, it was equally vicious, and contains a lesson of equal injustice and wrong.

This brief and imperfect sketch of some of the early dangers which beset our government has been given that we might arrive at a better understanding of the true character of that government, and of the respective duties of the various classes who participate or desire to participate in it. Many of these superstitions have died a natural death and will trouble the world no more; others maintain enough of a spectre-like existence to haunt the imagination with a very definite sense of ill. Just now a spirited controversy is going on between secularists and sectarians over what is called the Christianization of the State. A few years ago a National Reform Association was organized for the express purpose of effecting such changes in our national constitution as should make it the upholder and defender of one type of religion only. It is the aim of the zealous propagandists who originated this movement to make this nation appear before the world as one distinctively religious in character and aim.

Ignoring the fact that our population is composed of all sects as well as all nationalities, and that the government is one in which the whole people must have a voice, they are laboring to transform it into one in which the inference is, that the Christian shall have political preference over the Jew, the professed believer take precedence over the heretic and free thinker, and the evangelical legislate for the liberal and radical. The enterprise is a no less gigantic one than the complete remodelling of our government in the cast of sectarianism. By the side of this movement are others smaller in dimension but of similar import. The attempt to retain the Bible in the public schools is one, and to revive certain obsolete Sunday laws another. The secularist party has squarely braced itself for the issue, and through the instrumentality of a National Liberal League, organized the Centennial Fourth of July, its members hope to so arouse and enlighten public opinion that the last vestige of the atrocious doctrine of Church and State may be removed from the Constitution, and a broad and comprehensive "Free Religious Amendment" made to fill the gap.

The question for our special consideration, and to which we have been so long in arriving, is this: What is the prevailing opinion among women with regard to these projected changes in the governmental policy of our country, and how far, were they once endowed with political power, would they be likely to cast the weight of vote and influence on the side of liberty and justice? Viewed in the light of recent events, wherein women have taken a prominent and decided stand in favor of partial legislation, the prospect is not encouraging. Last summer, for example, some well-meaning women of Chicago, to further the cause of temperance, bethought themselves of the old and quite unsuccessful expedient of Sunday legislation. They circulated, chiefly among the churches, a petition to the Mayor and Common Council, praying that the saloons might be closed on Sunday. Is it in acts like these, with their narrow construction of law and imperfect apprehension of the real need at hand, that the obliquity of woman's moral sense is sadly apparent. Her mental vision seems cross-eyed,—hitting the thing at which it does not aim, and aiming where it does not hit. In their mistaken zeal these women did not pause to consider that it is only to a large minority, and not to the majority, that Sunday is a holy day. The clergy, with a kind of ecclesiastical logic, came very generally to their assistance, each preaching a sermon in which the evils of intemperance were glowingly set forth. Rev. L. T. Chamberlain, of New England Church, was a notable exception. He saw that beneath the good they wished to accomplish there lurked great evil in the manner of doing it, and warned the petitioners of the falsity of the principles on which they were working. He pointed out the gravity of mistake which religious organizations make when, as such, they interfere in political affairs. "The proper function of the Church," said he, "is to enlighten and persuade; never to legally constrain." It may be only just to suppose that the projectors of this movement were not impelled by doubleness of motive, and labored more in the interests of temperance than of sectarianism; yet, none the less, the measures they would have forced into execution were unlawful and tyrannical. Unconsciously they were attempting to subvert one of the fundamental principles of our government,—that which guarantees the right of private judgment with regard to the observance of all religious customs. The time has come when everybody feels disposed to follow Paul's injunction, and be "fully persuaded in his own mind" as to the manner of spending Sunday. Those who believe it to be a day specially sanctified and set apart for a ceaseless round of devotion and praise have a right both to the opinion and to an opportunity for a full and open expression of their views. On the other hand, those who choose to spend the day in social recreation, to seek amusement as well as, or in place of, instruction, have as undoubted a right to make that use of it. The Sabbath was made for man; and, like all other gifts and opportunities, must be left to his own free selection for abuse or profit.

The supreme law for Sunday as for week-day observance is non-interference. Last spring when another petition was circulated in Chicago, asking the Mayor to place women on the Board of Education, a prominent citizen and pronounced radical refused his signature, on the ground that the majority of women if placed in that position would favor the retention of the Bible in the schools. He expressed at the same time, if I remember aright, a general approval of the doctrine of equal rights; but declined in this instance to risk by a too hasty bestowal of power so serious a misuse of it. The position here taken may not have been altogether illogical, but was scarcely wise or rational. Those who take this line of argument are prone to forget that the art of blundering is one in which both sexes are alike proficient. They would admit women into politics only as they do into society: upon her acceptance of a higher standard of conduct than that held to by men. It is as inconsistent as it is ungenerous, to refuse the ballot to woman through fear that she will vote the wrong ticket or uphold unjust measures. This fear must go to the extent of foreseeing the probability that women will act en masse against the highest interests of the State, and will even attempt to overthrow its most cherished principles, and thus play a traitorous part to their government before it can reasonably be made the basis of withholding from her her just rights. But, setting aside its inconsistency, the objection here urged, and others like it, have great force; and it remains for woman to disprove them all by employing the interim of waiting for the bestowal of the rights she demands in educating herself into a new and broader comprehension of all such questions. Learning to look upon the public schools as part of the machinery of government, she will soon comprehend that so long as Catholic and Protestant, heretic and believer are alike taxed for their support, it is the very climax of wrong when the money of Romanist and Jew is used for instruction in Protestantism. The school is not the place for religious instruction. The conflicting theories of creeds and subtleties of theology are of too impracticable a nature to enter into the curriculum of the common school.

Woman may well ponder, with grave misgiving and doubt, whether, intellectually, her influence is extended towards the perpetuation of error, or the spread of a broader intelligence. If the former, her excuse is the same which has screened her from the full responsibility of all her shortcomings,—an imperfect education. Woman has never been taught thoroughness; and it is not strange if she cannot see on all sides of great questions at once. Never having studied the logic of human affairs, she naturally makes use of irrational methods in the attempt to straighten them. She feels more than she thinks, and, assisted by the assurances of men, has come to have unbounded faith in her own intuitions. She is exclusive, narrow, and critical. She takes up the right thing, but it is at the wrong end. She is grieved and troubled at the misery she sees all about her; but at the same time it repels her and makes her squeamish, for she is a creature of nerves, and sets about large jobs of social improvement in a rather delicate-fingered fashion. She makes a better philanthropist than reformer; liking not so much to dig up old roots as to snip off dead leaves and prop up decaying branches. Heretofore the Church has offered to woman her best opportunity and almost her only chance of usefulness. She has been obliged to work through its mediumship to make her wishes known and influence felt. With increased opportunities and a broadened culture, her sense of responsibility will broaden also. She will no longer look at everything from the single stand-point of some narrow and settled conviction. Where until recently she has given all her care and thought to the smaller incidents of life, she will come to bestow an increasing interest on the larger events of history, and will learn to take larger outlooks.

With reference, then, to woman's relation to Church and State, the final word is this: that the former should never be mistaken for, nor in any way affect, the latter. When once vested with the rights of citizenship, it will not be as Methodist, Baptist, Unitarian, or Freethinker that we shall be called upon to act; but as intelligent citizens, desirous only of the highest good of the State, and loyal to the fundamental principles of liberty and equality on which that State rests.

To the demand for the emancipation of woman I would add a plea for the complete secularization of her thought. With greater depth of insight and larger mental grasp, she will realize a fuller and higher type of womanhood. All this and more she will do. When we note how eagerly she is pressing on to a higher intellectuality, how noble are her impulses, how desirous she is to do the right thing, we may well be filled with exultation at the thought of her future. If at present she is a singular mixture of wisdom and folly, of pure and high aspirations, checked in their fulfillment by the absurdest of prejudices, she is day by day slowly dropping off her inconsistencies and leaving them forgotten by the roadside. We have said that woman was "exclusive, narrow, and critical"; but these traits may be explained and partially supplemented by others. Her exclusiveness comes largely from her consciousness of purity; she is narrow, but at the same time intense; and critical, because she is discerning. The "coming woman," whose advent the world affects to deplore, but secretly longs for, will not be less devoted in her aims because she is more philosophic in her method. She will unite the attributes of the types which have preceded her own, combining the majestic freedom and grand outlines of the ancient goddess with the tender grace and spirituality of the Madonna. Like Dante's Beatrice, she fixes her eyes on the eternal truth above; but, unlike that fair and cold divinity, she is all warm and human, filled with a throbbing sense of kinship to all the world.

THE HEYWOOD TRIAL.

UNITED STATES CIRCUIT COURT, before JUDGE CLARK.

United States vs. Ezra H. Heywood. Defendant, who is the well-known advocate of labor reform, free love, and other modern doctrines, was called up for trial on two indictments. These charge that defendant mailed at Princeton, addressed to "E. Edge-well, Squam Village, New Jersey," in September last, two publications of an obscene character. These publications, it was claimed in the opening argument of the District-Attorney, were of what is known as a "free-love" character. One of them also purported to be a medical work. They were entitled respectively Sexual Physiology and Cupid's Yokes. The Assistant District-Attorney, in opening the case, said that he should undertake to prove that defendant sent the books through the mails in response to letters, and that the books were of the character indicated in the form of indictment read. He commented upon the books; set forth the well-known doctrine of the Heywoods regarding social relations, which from time to time have been advanced in the free love conventions. The two questions for the Court and jury he claimed to be, Did the defendant mail the works as charged, and, Were they of an obscene character? He should object to the discussion of other questions, as he judged by the audience present there might be an attempt to discuss the peculiar tenets of the defendant.

Anthony Comstock, the complainant, was the first witness called. His business is that of Special Agent of the Post-office Department and Secretary of the New York Society for the Suppression of Vice. He testified that in September, 1877, he sent a letter to E. H. Heywood, asking for a copy of two books which the latter had advertised by circulars, being Sexual Physiology and Cupid's Yokes. Mr. Comstock produced the books and the wrappers, with the correspondence between himself and Heywood. Mr. Pickering objected to the books going to the jury for them to pass upon their character, as the defence claimed that the publications do not come within the provision of the statutes, not being obscene. Judge Clark then took the books and decided that the books should go to the jury.

On the cross-examination, Mr. Comstock said he received a salary from the Society for the Prevention of Vice, and not a cent from the Government. The examining counsel attempted to inquire into the knowledge of the witness regarding obscene books, and carried it to such length that the Court put a stop to it as discreditable to the Court. The book in question was to stand or fall by itself, as the law alone was to be taken to show the standing of the book, and the Court recognized no obscene book as a standard of obscenity. The attempt was to introduce a very low book as representing the class that the statute was made to prevent the circulation of. The examination then took a legitimate course, in the course of which the witness stated that he was officially notified by the Post-office Department that the books in question were passing through the mails and were of an obscene character. At the time he wrote the letter to Heywood he knew the books were advertised in The Word for general circulation. One book had been brought to him by a man who wanted to act as its agent in New York; and that person he had told if he attempted to circulate it he would be liable to be prosecuted. Counsel tried to show that this prosecution was an outgrowth of an attack made upon him in The Word or in one of the books, and asked questions of that nature. Witness replied he had not read or heard of the strictures published by Heywood when he commenced these proceedings. Witness was asked how many cases he had brought in court, and he replied one hundred and forty-three—convictions in all except four,—and three of those on account of a flaw in the indictments. Regarding publications, he had secured prosecutions by means of correspondence with parties, had sent his letters under different names and from places where he did not belong. (Counsel asked him if that was his idea of morality, but was stopped by the Court.) Counsel endeavored to ask the witness if the Attorney-General had decided that certain medical works were not obscene in order to classify the books in question; but the Court informed the counsel that the question need not be answered, as the Attorney-General's opinion was not needed in this Court; this case is to rest upon itself. The examination closed here.

David H. Gregory, postmaster at Princeton, testified in relation to Heywood's sending letters through the mails, and to an acquaintance with his handwriting by delivering to him registered packages. He then identified the writing on Comstock's packages as that of Heywood's; the package passed through his office. Cross-examined: Witness would only say that in his opinion the writing was by Heywood; he saw almost every day letters addressed in his handwriting; witness knew nothing against Mr. Heywood's moral character.

This substantially closed the Government evidence. Some eighteen or twenty witnesses for defence were called, and Messrs. Ellsbur Wright, Sidney Morse, A. E. Giles, and J. M. Bruce, M.D., successively took the witness-stand; but nothing definite in aid of the defence was elicited, as the Court excluded the line of interrogatory which counsel had proposed to follow. The testimony offered was held to be inadmissible, as it was but the expression of an opinion by the witnesses as to whether the books complained of were open to the objections alleged against them. That was the very question the jury had to decide, and the opinions of other men were not to govern them in their deliberations. Certain medical books, which counsel for defence had proposed to introduce, were also excluded, on the general ground that the questions as to whether other books, having more or less resemblance to these, were obscene or not, could not be passed upon by the jury. Mr. Pickering then began his argument for defence, and had not closed at the adjournment of the Court. His general view was that the defendant, being a man of education and of just repute as a reformer, was not likely to be engaged in any business open to the objections alleged in the indictment. He claimed that the Government had failed to prove that Mr. Heywood or his agent had deposited these books, and had proved at most that Comstock had received them. He defended the books as being of a useful and moral tendency, and as giving to readers medical information avoiding the use of technical terms. On trial, P. Cummings for the Government; J. F. Pickering and G. W. Park for defendant.—Boston Globe, Jan. 18.

Second Day.

United States vs. Ezra H. Heywood. At the opening of the Court yesterday morning, counsel for defendant continued with his closing address to the jury, speaking an hour and three-quarters; and elaborating the points previously suggested, and arguing especially that the question of the freedom of the press was involved; in other words, the question whether a censorship shall be maintained with one man, Comstock, as sole censor.

Mr. Cummings, in closing for the Government, said the argument of defendant's counsel had been devoted to Heywood's character, his reform work, and to defaming Comstock, and to the danger that we should not have a free press and free speech. All these things had nothing to do with the case. The whole case rested upon the books, and the question as to who sent them through the mails. The Government had proved that the defendant sent the books in question. He then considered the books, and commented upon the effect such pernicious doctrine would be likely to have upon boys and girls at school and others who had not reached the age of mature judgment, and read extracts from them to illustrate his point.

Judge Clark in his charge defined the law regarding the circulation of obscene matter by the use of the mails. Under this law the defendant had been twice indicted, there being two books described. It was a question for the jury whether he deposited either or both of the books, and they should answer upon each. It was equivalent to his personally putting the books in the mail if he caused others to so act. A book is obscene that is offensive to decency. A book is obscene in whole or in part comes within the meaning of the law. A book is obscene which excites impure or lewd thoughts or is of an immoral tendency. A book is obscene that would incite the practice of impure desires. It was in argument that Heywood's designs were honorable, but the Court instructed that his design had nothing to do with it. A man might be opposed to this doctrine maintained by defendant in his book, and use the text and pictures in arguing against the doctrine; but he could not be allowed to send the work through the mail. It was claimed that this book is no more immodest than other books (the Bible being suggested by counsel for the defendant), but the jury had no right to make any comparisons; these books were on trial. It was argued that these books would not incite impure thoughts with the jury. That was not a question. The books were not intended for men who would be likely to weigh the contents with mature judgment. They were to consider the case in its bearings upon the community, upon the home, upon happy children in the home. There are a thousand happy families where this book might come in, and they were to consider what might be the effect. The Judge quoted two paragraphs from one of the books, and asked the jury what could be more indecent than those. The case was given to the jury at 1:20 P.M., and at the adjournment of the Court had not returned a verdict. Instructions were given them to seal their verdict when reached and put it in custody of the officer, to be opened on Tuesday morning next, to which time the Court adjourned. The case proceeds under section 3893 of the Revised Statutes of the United States, which defines the act of mailing obscene matter as a misdemeanor, and makes it punishable with a fine of not less than $100 or more than $5000, and imprisonment at hard labor not less than one year or more than ten years, or by both fine and imprisonment at the discretion of the Court. Jury out. P. Cummings for the Government; J. F. Pickering and G. W. Park for defendant.—Boston Globe, Jan. 19.

The Verdict.

At the coming in of the United States Circuit Court this forenoon at eleven o'clock, Judge Clark sitting, the jury in the Ezra H. Heywood case made their report of the verdict agreed to in the jury-room Friday night last.

The clerk put the inquiry: "Mr. Foreman and gentlemen, what say you to the indictment charging Ezra H. Heywood, of Princeton, with depositing in the mails the book called Sexual Physiology,—is he guilty or not guilty?"

The foreman answered, "Guilty."

This made a little commotion among the friends of Heywood, who were out in force; and one of the jurors was desirous of saying something.

Judge Clark, noticing that there was some misunderstanding as to the meaning of the verdict, asked the jury if they had determined the character of the book, and whether it was obscene or indecent in their opinion or not. The foreman, with some hesitation, said they had decided it was not obscene.

The Judge then said, that he should receive the verdict as a general one of "not guilty on this indictment," and it was so entered.

Upon the other indictment against Ezra H. Heywood, the depositing of the book, Cupid's Yokes, in the mails, the jury returned a verdict of guilty, which answered also the question of the character of the book.

The Assistant District-Attorney then asked that sentence be passed upon Heywood; but the Court consented to withhold the sentence till two o'clock Wednesday, when defendant's counsel desires to file a motion.—Boston Journal, Jan. 22.

Postponement of Sentence.

In the case of Ezra H. Heywood the motion for a new trial and for arrest of judgment was withdrawn and a new motion for arrest of judgment filed, which will be heard before Judges Clifford and Clark at the May term.—Boston Advertiser, Jan. 25.

IS IT A SAFE POWER?

[The following article, copied from the Boston Globe of January 16, is admirable, and we approve every word of it.—ED.]

There are two prolific sources of evil which affect the moral, mental, and physical well-being of society, and produce deplorable results which are fully realized by very few people. Only those who have had exceptional means of observation, or have given the matter special attention and study, are aware of the demoralization that comes from these sources of pollution. One of them is the circulation of reading matter and pictorial representations of one kind and another, appealing to the sensual instincts and debauching the character of the young. It is a hard task for human beings to purify themselves, and exalt their thoughts and actions at all times to the standard of rigid virtue. There is enough of the beast in them to be all the time dragging them down into the mire; and it is only by proper culture and discipline that they can bring the senses into subjection. To keep the young from a tendency to vice is especially a matter of difficulty, which is greatly enhanced by the demon of all uncleanness that is actively trying to poison their thoughts and stimulate their passions until they lose all self-control. The iniquity of a clandestine circulation of obscene books and pictures, and the importance of putting a stop to it by every proper means, can hardly be overrated.

The other source of evil, even more prolific and destructive than this, and one that gives it most of its potency, is ignorance. The lack of knowledge among human beings of some of the most important functions of their nature, and of the duties which they owe to themselves, is simply appalling. From it comes the fostering of sensuality and all the secret abominations which have already sapped society of its moral stamina and degraded whole nations, physically and mentally. There has been an eager suppression of knowledge, from false views of delicacy, that has done more to degrade mankind than all the churches and Sunday-schools can undo. Every child, as it comes to an age when such knowledge is important to it, should be educated to know itself thoroughly; and unless it is so educated, it cannot know how to govern itself. This education should be judiciously conducted; but in the present state of ignorance among all classes and all ages, any means intended for enlightenment and the dissemination of needed information is better than none. There is the very widest distinction to be made between writings intended to debauch the mind and incite to vice, and those intended to produce the opposite result by the dissemination of knowledge and of sound ideas regarding the sexual nature. Classing the two together is a monstrous misjudgment. The suppression of any sober, candid discussion of questions that concern the well-being of society is not only mistaken as a matter of policy, but it abridges the freedom of speech and of the press which is guaranteed by the Constitution of the country.

There is upon the statute books of this country a law designed to prevent the dissemination through the mails, of those publications, prints, etc., of which we have spoken as an agency of evil. We cannot believe that it was intended at the same time to aid in the suppression of knowledge or the smothering of discussion on questions that affect the welfare of individuals, of families, and of society at large. Under that law an agent has been appointed, with a liberal salary and a degree of discretion that we do not believe it is safe to put in the hands of any man, however well-meaning. He has the power to overhaul the mails in search of suspected matter, to arrest men for depositing in the mails or taking therefrom, anything which in his individual opinion is improper, and to act as a spy and detective upon the whole postal service of the country. He can make arrests on his own discretion, and use the courts of the United States for prosecutions begun by his sole authority. It is more than questionable whether such power should be given for any purpose, however well defined; but when it is exercised at the discretion or caprice of the man clothed with it, it may become an instrument of oppression and evil to which it is not easy to place the limit. Interference with individual liberty should be sparingly permitted, and not at all at the discretion of some irresponsible man with more zeal than judgment. We want, by every possible means, to promote virtue and purity, and prevent vice and pollution; but the work is only hindered by sweeping legal enactments, the execution of which is given into the hands of the officious agent of some private association, with all the powers of the government at his command to use or abuse. Of course he can inflict no penalty without a conviction, and the court may revise his judgment as to what is improper; but he can interfere very seriously with the rights and liberties of innocent men.

MRS. CLARA NEYMANN AT PROVIDENCE.

The Free Religious Association was addressed by Mrs. Clara Neymann, of New York, on Sunday afternoon. The hall was well filled, and the audience was cordial in its expressions of approval of the lady, who is new to the American public. Mrs. Neymann is a very attractive speaker, of winning and refined appearance, clear thought, cultured expression, and pure and earnest feeling. She is not yet so familiar with the English pronunciation as to have lost that foreign accent, which, however troublesome it may be when the speech is obscured by bearded lips and softened by heavy masculine tones, is fascinating in a sweet-voiced woman.

The subject of the address was "German Scepticism." Mrs. Neymann introduced it by the statement that although she was a German, she was in heart and sympathy an American. For this reason, doubtless, she confined herself chiefly to German radicalism in this country. She said, in substance, although rare individuals have long reached by philosophic investigation the position of freethought in religion, such independence is of recent growth in the more ordinary minds. Now, however, among the German element in this country, radical societies are everywhere springing up. Many of them have regular speakers; own, or hire, pleasant rooms; and have interesting programmes of instruction and amusement for each winter. Discussions of serious problems, and the social culture of the members, are the two objects of these clubs. They have done a good work, but until recently have been too self-centred. Germans accustomed to having all governmental machinery fixed by powers superior to the individual, have not felt the importance of arousing and moulding public opinion in order to secure needed reforms. Germans are theorists, idealists. Americans, quick and practical in application. The two diverse gifts may be most useful to each other. Freethought owes a great debt to German philosophers and scientists, who, when the great minds of other nations were absorbed in more external matters, devoted themselves to the patient search for truth, which resulted in the contributions of Kant, Leibnitz, Schiller, Goethe, Herder, Lessing, Humboldt, and others, to knowledge and virtue. These great thinkers rested ethical laws on firmer foundations than the Bible or Church; on the human reason and the facts of life, and thus prepared the way for modern science to demonstrate the propositions they laid down. The influence of these minds on German thought has emancipated it from superstition. Americans, on the contrary, are still firmly bound to tradition. But distrust of accepted statements is undermining our social order. Doubt of non-essentials, stifled in expression by cowardice or self-seeking, results in such a deterioration in honesty and mental clearness that the end is a doubt of the essence of all religion and an inevitable breaking of all moral ties.

Liberals have, therefore, a great work before them, to teach humanity the laws of life. We must have a fixed standard of morals; and to this end the new religion must teach and expound the effects of sin and vice. The study of the real world has been too long neglected for appeals to prepare for an imaginary one. Scientific laws and their application to practical affairs, æsthetic culture, the social and moral needs of actual life, must be studied and knowledge popularized. Only the wise do good simply for the sake of good. The ignorant must be taught why they should sacrifice the baser and lower nature for the higher, and how they may become obedient to the dictates of an enlightened conscience.

As one movement tending toward practical effort in this direction, Mrs. Neymann instanced the "Union of the Radicals of North America," formed at Philadelphia in 1876. The Declaration of Principles of this "Union" contains the following sentiments: "The North American Republic boasts of the best Constitution, and has under it fostered the greatest political corruption and confusion."

"Permanent and thorough reform can only come from a decisive appeal to the dictates of reason to the natural rights of man, and to the fundamental principles of truly republican life." The principles of complete personal religious liberty and full secularization of the State, which are a strong and prominent feature in the Declaration of Principles, of this first German Association of Radicals, which aims at a practical effect on the government, these principles, Mrs. Neymann claims, are held by all her freethinking countrymen. Whatever may be their differences, they unitedly claim full religious liberty.

Mrs. Neymann closed with an earnest appeal to radicals to realize the magnitude and nobility of the work of public education, which may be for them, and the need of enthusiastic devotion to the principles of liberty and truth to which they stood pledged. —Providence Journal, Jan. 14.

THE NEW Canon of Westminster (Farrar) must have sent dismay through Pandemonium by his last utterance in the ancient Abbey. Having quoted from the Bible the words "hell," "damnation," "everlasting," he continued: "I say unhesitatingly; I say with the fullest right to speak and with the necessary knowledge; I say with the calmest and most unflinching sense of responsibility, standing here in the sight of God and our Saviour, and it may be of the angels and spirits of the dead, that not one of these words ought to stand any longer in our English Bible; and that, being in our present acceptance of them simply mistranslations, they most unquestionably will not stand in the revised version of the Bible, if the revisers have understood their duty. The verb 'to damn' in the Greek Testament is neither more nor less than the verb 'to condemn.' The word 'aiōnios,' translated 'everlastingly,' in its first sense means 'age-long'; in its second sense 'something above and beyond time.' The word rendered 'hell' is Tartarus, borrowed as the name for the prison of evil spirits. In five verses it is Hades, the world beyond the grave; in twelve places it is Gehenna, the Valley of Hinnom, outside Jerusalem, which after being polluted by corrupt practices was purified by fire,—the metaphor of purifying and correcting punishment, which, as we all believe, does await the impenitent sinner both here and beyond the grave." These statements are not new; but as they were uttered amid the very walls where the revisers of the English version are sitting, they may be regarded as an indication of some very important changes in the coming Bible. It may be doubted whether Westminster Abbey would ever have been built if those words now so solemnly denounced in it had not been taken in the received sense. It is very certain that a number of exhorters will find half their chapel "properties," as the theatre folk say, gone, if the new Bible compels them to substitute for the familiar Saxon "hell and damnation" ingenious interpretations of classic Tartarus and Oriental Hinnom. It may be that the old doctrine of hell, which the pious lady said would, if abolished, "take away half her religion," will be preserved only by the profane; for we can hardly expect they will in future bid people "Go to Tartary!" —M. D. Conway.

"IF YOU SHOULD see me speeding my horse on the Brighton road on Sunday afternoon, . . . you would not believe me when I prayed, 'O Lord, may we abstain from all appearance of evil!'" said the present pastor of the Park Street Church in his sermon last night; and the good deacons and the older members exchanged knowing looks, and smiled significantly as their thoughts took a twist into the almost forgotten past. —Boston Globe. This reminds us of a little story of the Rev. Dr. Stone, a pastor of Park Street Church back in "the almost forgotten past," which may have furnished the traditional basis for Dr. Withrow's allusion. Dr. Stone owned a pair of very pretty-matched horses, rather given to speed, which he drove in to church on Sunday, from his home in the Roxbury district. In his congregation was a dear, saintly old mother—a veritable mother in Israel,—who loved her pastor, and would not tolerate the thought that he could do anything wrong. As she was being jogged along the milldam road in the family carriage one Sunday morning, on her way to church, accompanied by her son, the pastor's team bore down upon them at a two-fifty gait—it being a little late,—and passed them like a flash, the doctor holding the reins. "That reckless man!" exclaimed the dim-sighted old lady,—"to be so unmindful of the Lord's day!" "Why, mother," answered the son, "that is Dr. Stone." "It is!" she said, in momentary confusion; but added, as her faith reasserted itself, "The dear man—I suppose he couldn't hold them!" —Golden Rule, Dec. 12.

Poetry.

PRAYER. [For THE INDEX.]

As Satan passed through heaven from
A walk on earth one day,
The Lord looked up and questioned him:
"Didst hear my creatures pray?"
"Ay, Lord, I heard their prayers resound
Whene'er I listening stood;
But, by my soul, not one of them
Prayed for his brother's good."
Then looked Jehovah fire and flame,
And spoke this fierce decree:
"Who makes a selfish prayer is thine;
The others come to me!"
Then all that night on heaven's walls
The Lord and Satan stood,
To see how many sons of men
Would pray for a brother's good.
Alas, they watched there many an hour,
And yet there came no sounds:
The poor they prayed for pennies, and
The rich they prayed for pounds;
The ugly prayed for beauty, and
The awkward prayed for grace;
The old ones prayed for youthful looks
To hide a wrinkled face,
The limping prayed for healthy joints,
The red-haired prayed for brown,
The short ones prayed for longer legs,
The long to be cut down.
The brown eyes prayed for blue ones, and
The cross-eyed prayed for straight;
The fat ones prayed for melting down,
The lean ones prayed for weight;
The doctor prayed for sickness, and
The undertaker death;
The captives prayed for sunshine, and
The phthisical for breath,
The maiden prayed for lover's vows,
The soldier prayed for war,
The beggar prayed for horse to ride,
The drunkard prayed for "more,"
The sick man prayed for break of day,
The thief for longer night,
The miser prayed for more of gold,
The blind man prayed for sight.
At last there came a fearful voice
Up to the starlit sky:
"Oh, may my uncle's soul this night Rest with the Lord on high."
"There's one for me!" Jehovah cried.
"Not so!" the devil said;
"He's heir to all his uncle's wealth,
Hence wants the old man dead."
Just then there came another voice
In supplicating tones:
"Oh may the grave be late to close O'er neighbor David's bones."
"There's surely one for me at last!"
But Satan cried: "Not yet!
He merely wants the man to live
Until he pays a debt."
And so they waited till the stars
Went out at break of day;
Then Satan seized his bag of souls
And sped his homeward way.
Upon high heaven's glittering wall
Long had they listening stood,
But not a mortal all that night,
Prayed for his brother's good.

INGEBOLL LOCKWOOD.

NEW YORK, Jan. 19, 1878.

CASH RECEIPTS.

N.B.—Postage stamps are not included here, though credited on subscriptions, etc.

FOR THE WEEK ENDING JANUARY 26.

Mrs. H. Grinnell, $1; Charles Robinson, $10; John T. Adams, $3.20; Mrs. Charles Goodredge, $7; Cash, $1; Oliver A. Bailey, $4.95; A. Dunbar, M.D., $5; W. C. McDonald, 80 cents; C. Folsom, $3.20; C. C. Biles, $11; George Johnson, $2.20; J. T. Brady, 25 cents; John Cowan, $3.20; Isaiah West, $3.20; Herman Werner, $3.20; Dr. Mergler, $3.25; A. R. Hinchey, $3.15; George Riker, $1.75; E. C. Stedman, $3.20; Wm. A. Butler, $3.20; B. M. Green, $3.20; F. O. Dorr, $3.20; S. W. Allen, $3.20; T. M. Hart, $3.20; A. W. Kelsey, $1; George Stokney, 10 cents; F. H. Galwitz, $2; S. B. Coleman, 10 cents; Samuel Colt, $3; J. R. Fletcher, $6.40; W. E. Bush, 10 cents; Theron C. Leland, 50 cents; Mary Montgomery Singleton, $3.71; J. M. Holmes, $2.10; W. R. James, $4; Thos. H. Matthews, $3.20; A. N. Adams, $3.20; P. C. Howland, $3.20; W. E. Mott, $3.20; Harry W. Smith, $3.74; Hugo Andriessen, $3.20; Aug. Brentano, Jr., $2.20; D. B. Humphrey, $3.20; Henry Klett, $3.20; Castle Baker, $11; M. E. Adams, $1; Johanna Ellenbas, $4; J. W. Springfield, 30 cents; C. J. Rader, $3.30; Harry Grundy, $2.50; N. Little, $10; E. A. Sawtelle, $3; Henry N. Stone, $3.20; Cash, $1.

All receipts of cash will be acknowledged as above, and no other receipt sent unless specially requested. Persons who do not see their remittances acknowledged within three weeks after sending, will please notify us.

N.B.—Please remit by post-office money-order, by registered letter, or by draft on Boston or New York. Checks on interior banks are liable to discount, and the term of subscription will be proportionally shortened in the credit.

N.B.—Orders for Tracts or single numbers of THE INDEX which are not on hand will, if of small amount, be otherwise filled to the same amount without further notice.

N.B.—Please examine the ADDRESS and DATE on your INDEX mail-tag, and report at once any error in either.

The Index.

BOSTON, JANUARY 31, 1878.

THE INDEX is published every Thursday by the INDEX ASSOCIATION, at No. 281 WASHINGTON STREET, BOSTON. TOLSON OFFICE, No. 35 MONROE STREET: J. T. FISK, Agent and Clerk. All letters should be addressed to the Boston Office.

THE INDEX accepts every result of science and sound learning, without seeking to harmonize it with the Bible. It recognizes no authority but that of reason and right. It believes in Truth, Freedom, Progress, Equal Rights, and Brotherly Love.

N. B.—No contributor to THE INDEX, editorial or otherwise, is responsible for anything published in its columns except for his or her own individual statements. Editorial contributions will in every case be distinguished by the name or initials of the writer.

FRANCIS ELLINGWOOD ABBOT, Editor.
OCTAVIUS BROOKS FROTHINGHAM, WILLIAM J. POTTER,
WILLIAM H. SPENCER, MRS. E. D. CHENEY, GEORGE JACOB
HOLYOAKE (England), DAVID H. CLARK, MRS. ELIZABETH
CARY STANTON, J. L. STODDARD, ELIZUR WRIGHT, C. D. B.
MILLS, W. D. LE SUEUR, BENJ. F. UNDERWOOD, ALBERT
WARREN KELSEY, Editorial Contributors.

THE RESULT of our late offer of club terms for THE INDEX has not been very encouraging; but we thank very sincerely the few who, as shown below, have made special exertions to increase our circulation. The promised list, not a long one, is as follows:

Sender of the Club. No. New Names.
D. A. ROBERTSON, Enon, Pa. 5
New York City. 5
DR. J. WINSLOW, Ithaca, N. Y. 5
E. A. BILLINGSLEY, Lincoln, Neb. 5
C. BAKER, Bay City, Mich. 5
DAVID H. CLARK, Florence, Mass. 5

A REQUEST TO LIBERAL EDITORS.

At a meeting of the Directors of the National Liberal League, held in this city on Friday, January 18, it was

Voted, To request the editors of liberal papers all over the country to publish the Directors' "Call to Organize" new Local Auxiliary Liberal Leagues on Washington's birthday,—also the "Card" of the Financial Committee, as follows:—

Call to Organize.

CITIZENS of the United States who indorse the appended political platform adopted in convention by the National Liberal League, at Rochester, N. Y., Oct. 26, 1877, are requested to meet in their respective cities and towns on Washington's Birthday, Feb. 22, 1878, for the purpose of organizing themselves into Local Auxiliary Liberal Leagues in accordance with the provisions of the National Liberal League Constitution. Copies of the latter and blanks for organization can be obtained from W. H. Hamlen, Secretary, 231 Washington Street, Boston, or from H. L. Green, Chairman of the Executive Committee, Salamanca, N. Y.

FRANCIS E. ABBOT,
WILLIAM H. HAMLEN, } Directors
J. A. J. WILCOX, } N. L. L.
H. L. GREEN,
D. G. CRANDON,

BOSTON, Jan. 18, 1878.

Platform of the National Liberal League.

1. TOTAL SEPARATION OF CHURCH AND STATE, to be guaranteed by amendment of the United States Constitution: including the equitable taxation of church property, secularization of the public schools, abrogation of Sabbatarian laws, abolition of chaplaincies, prohibition of public appropriations for religious purposes, and all other measures necessary to the same general end.

2. NATIONAL PROTECTION FOR NATIONAL CITIZENS, in their equal civil, political, and religious rights: to be guaranteed by amendment of the United States Constitution, and afforded through the United States courts.

3. UNIVERSAL EDUCATION THE BASIS OF UNIVERSAL SUFFRAGE IN THIS SECULAR REPUBLIC: to be guaranteed by amendment of the United States Constitution, requiring every State to maintain a thoroughly secularized public school system, and to permit no child within its limits to grow up without a good elementary education.

N. B.—The nomination of candidates upon the above platform was postponed to a future Congress of the National Liberal League.

A Card.

The Finance Committee of the National Liberal League, in consequence of the lack of funds in the Treasury, and of the fact that the Directors are able to do so little of the important work that ought to be done, appeal to all lovers of liberty for financial help, to enable them to publish and disseminate the views of able writers in behalf of the principles of the Rochester Platform, and to advance the common cause in other equally proper ways.

If earnest liberals throughout the United States will contribute one dollar apiece (with as much more as their generosity shall prompt or their means permit), in order to become Annual Members of the National Liberal League, they will furnish the requisite aid, and the work shall be done.

DANIEL G. CRANDON, } Financial
HARLAN P. HYDE, } Committee
SARAH B. OTIS, } N. L. L.

SPECIAL NOTICE.

Attention is specially called to a change in the advertisement of the Publications of the Free Religious Association. By a recent vote of the Executive Committee the Annual Reports of the Association, from the year 1872 to the year 1877 inclusive, are now offered at five cents each (and at the same rate for any larger number) to any body who will take the trouble to send for them, enclosing five cents in postage stamps. They will also be sold at the office for the same sum to any one calling for them there.

The Committee have put the pamphlets at this low rate, which hardly more than covers the cost of sending them by mail, with the hope that they may thereby be more extensively circulated. By referring to the advertisement describing their contents, it will be seen that they contain much matter of special interest on the most vital religious problems of the age. It is not too much to say that some of the most valuable contributions of the last five years to religious discussion may be found in these pamphlets. Let any one who wants to know what the Free Religious Association means, send for these Reports. And will not the members and friends of the Association take this opportunity to extend the knowledge of its principles?

WM. J. POTTER, Secretary F. R. A.

SHALL THE CONSTITUTION BE REVOLUTIONIZED?

Since our last issue, we have succeeded in obtaining a copy of the joint resolution proposing a Sixteenth Amendment of the United States Constitution, which has been already reported in the Senate by Hon. George F. Edmunds, of Vermont, Chairman of the Judiciary Committee. According to the Boston Globe, it was introduced into the Senate on January 10—three weeks ago; and yet so little comprehension is there of the significance, purport, or profoundly revolutionary effect of this measure, that it has attracted almost no attention. The text of the pending amendment is as follows:—

Section 1. No State shall make any law respecting an establishment of religion or prohibiting the free exercise thereof; and no religious test shall ever be required as a qualification to any office or public trust under any State. No public property and no public revenue of, nor any loan of credit by or under the authority of the United States or any State, Territory, district, or municipal corporation shall be appropriated to, or made use of, for the support of any school, educational or other institution under the control of any religious or anti-religious sect, organization, or denomination, or wherein the particular creed or tenets of any religious or anti-religious sect, organization, or denomination shall be taught; and no such particular creed or tenet shall be read or taught in any school or institution supported in whole or in part by such revenue or loan of credit; and no such appropriation or loan of credit shall be made to any religious or anti-religious sect, organization, or denomination, or to promote its interests or tenets. This article shall not be construed to prohibit the reading of the Bible in any school or institution, and it shall not have the effect to impair the rights of property already vested.

Section 2. Congress shall have power, by appropriate legislation, to provide for the prevention and punishment of violations of this article.

Never was there a more cunningly-devised attack on the religious liberties of the people—a more plausible or seemingly fair measure for the abrogation of their equal rights. Its object and effect must be to convert the Constitution of the United States into a charter of perpetual political supremacy to the Evangelical Protestant Christian churches. It would doubtless take time to develop this revolutionary tendency; the revolution would not come in the shape of an earthquake, but in that of a poisoning of the blood of the body politic, a slowly-working, invisible, deadly malaria. We ask the close and dispassionate attention of every real patriot and liberal, while we point out briefly just what this measure means.

1. The first section, down to the last four lines, simply lays down with great explicitness the general principle of no sectarian appropriations—a most excellent and just principle, essential to secular government. But then follows a proviso excepting from the operation of this general principle the practice of Bible-reading in the schools and the existing exemption of church property from taxation (for that is what is meant here by "the rights of property already vested").

Now on the face of it this proviso, to all who have thought on the subject, must appear to be a direct contradiction of the general principle itself—a ridiculous stultification of it, a glaring inconsistency with it, an astonishing denial of its applicability to cases where it ought eminently to apply. It may be imagined, therefore, to be an amusing illustration of the illogical character of Protestant Orthodoxy rather than a clause which would have a mischievous practical effect. Nothing could be more short-sighted than such a conclusion.

How would the Supreme Court interpret that proviso? As an inoperative and meaningless contradiction of the general principle enunciated, by which it would therefore be rendered null and void? Not at all. No Court could ever declare the fundamental law, which it has been created to interpret, to be in contradiction with itself; no Court could ever undertake on this ground to set aside any clause of the Constitution, since this would be declaring itself superior to the power which has created it. The Supreme Court, therefore, would be compelled to put such a construction on the Sixteenth Amendment, if adopted, as should render it consistent with itself. How could this be done?

Solely by deciding judicially that the proviso does not contradict the antecedent principle: that the practice of Bible-reading in the public schools is not a sectarian practice,—that the Bible is not a sectarian book,—that the Bible is the recognized religious law of the whole nation; that the exemption of church property from taxation is not a sectarian practice,—that the churches are not sectarian institutions,—that the churches, as "property already vested," have the "right" to be partially supported by the indirect taxation of the whole people.

In no other manner can the proposed Sixteenth Amendment be construed as logically consistent with itself; and in no other way, therefore, could the Supreme Court interpret it. Yet see to what monstrous conclusions it would thereby commit the government—how destructive to the equal rights of the citizens, how oppressive to all freethinkers! "The Bible, and the Bible only, is the religion of Protestants," declared old Chillingworth; and the proposed amendment would declare the Bible to be not a sectarian book, but the great and Constitutionally recognized religious authority of the whole people. In other words, the "religion of Protestants" would be declared to be, by the Constitution, the established religion of the United States and the supreme law of the land. Congress, it is true, cannot establish any such religion; but the people, by amending the Constitution, can. Shall they do that? Do they mean to do that? If not, they must see to it in season that the amendment shall not be adopted with this proviso; for, once adopted, they cannot prevent the logical consequences of their own action. Let that amendment once become part of the Constitution, and Church and State will have become indissolubly united; Christianity in its Protestant form will become the State Religion, and the Protestant churches will become the State Church. It will take time to reveal the full effect of their action, but that will be what the people will have permitted ecclesiastical ambition to do, if they slumber now.

2. The recognition of the Bible in the Constitution by name, as a book which the Constitution itself, representing the supreme authority of the national will, may not dare to exclude from the public schools, would be a fatal rupture of the hitherto unbroken secularity of that great instrument. A chain is broken if you break one of its links; and the secular Constitution, if this amendment passes, will be gone forever. There will be time enough to lament its destruction, when it is too late—time enough to deplore the indifference, stupidity, criminal neglect, which suffered priestcraft to cheat the great republic out of its birthright. One leak is enough to sink a ship; and if there is not enough skill in carpentry to prevent it, there will not be enough to stop it. There is no protection of the people's equal religious rights except the secularity of the Constitution; once shattered that and the struggle of the fiercely-contending sects for the political mastery of the nation will know no bound. Nothing but a bloody war could ever restore that secular Constitution which we now enjoy, but which—shame on our sluggish souls!—we do not know enough or care enough to protect. If this ill-omened amendment falls to become a part of the Constitution, it will only be because the Republican party is not now strong enough to force it through Congress; its failure will be due to partisan jealousy, not to the wisdom or virtue of the people, unless the people improve bravely on their own not creditable past.

3. The reason for the exception of the Bible from the operation of the otherwise general principle of the amendment, although not explicitly stated, is implicitly contained in this marvellously Jesuitical proviso. The proviso recognizes by necessary implication the right of the Bible to be in the public schools—a right so sacred that even the sovereign people may not dare to touch it. What is this right of the Bible in the schools which even the sovereign people may not question? The Divine Right of God's Holy Word, as the authoritative Revelation of his Will. That is the implication back of the smooth and seemingly innocent phraseology of the proviso. As Rev. George B. Cheever, D.D., of New York, expressed it in his book, The Right of the Bible in Our Public Schools:—

"The right to teach the Scriptures, and to have them read in the public schools, is founded on the fact that they are the Word of God for the instruction of mankind. A revelation from heaven for all mankind is the property of no sect, and cannot be called sectarian; consequently no sect has any right of conscience to object against it." [p. 13.]

"The Bible is of no sect, and belongs to none, and may not be ostracised or excommunicated by any, nor rightfully complained of in any presence, nor under any circumstances, as an oppression upon any conscience." [p. 72.]

It is these haughty, intolerant, and tyrannical principles, clearly expressed by Dr. Cheever, and covertly implied by the proviso, which will be found hereafter by the Supreme Court to be contained in this Sixteenth Amendment if it ever gets incorporated into the Constitution. Do you believe that these apparently remote and absurd logical consequences can never be judicially extorted from such brief and simple language as that of the Amendment? You know nothing of ecclesiastical cunning, nothing of clerical ambition, nothing of history or human experience or human nature, if you doubt it. The danger is not of sudden or bloody outbreak, of an outflaming civil war—we never expected that; but the danger is of a slow decay of republican institutions under the cancerous influence of triumphant clericalism. Give priestcraft an inch, and it seizes a mile. If there is any intelligent patriotism among the liberals of the United States, they will exert their utmost power, instantly, without delay, to nip this incipient revolution of the Constitution in the bud. "Resist the beginnings of evil"—for no man can foresee their outcome. America, like England, "expects every man to do his duty."

THE DANGERS OF WIT.

Freethinkers should be careful in this age of the world not to indulge too freely in humor and irony. Not all men are yet capable of receiving them. Bœotia in Greece was noted for being a country where wit was wasted. So is Philadelphia, probably from its neighborhood to Princeton, in our day. It is a sort of Scotland, where Sydney Smith, if he were alive, would have to carry a trephine in his pocket to get his jokes appreciated. A melancholy instance of the misapplication of wit on the part of natural philosophers, like Huxley and Tyndall, is to be found in the way that the Christian philosophers of Philadelphia understand them, as exemplified in the Penn Monthly for January, in an article on the question, Is Christianity on the wane? The writer, who gives his name as Robert Ellis Thompson, and is undoubtedly a fair sample of the most advanced and liberal Christians of the region he inhabits, discourses as follows on negations:—

The later utterances of Clifford, Haeckel, Tyndall, and Huxley cannot be surpassed in negation. That there is no God; that man is an automaton necessarily moved by natural forces, and by no other; that the freedom of the will is a weak delusion; and that the genus homo is properly no genus, but merely a species of the genus simia; that there is no such thing as necessary truth, for in other planets it may be that two and two do not make four, while two straight lines can enclose a space,—what is there to wait for after this? We have had the last word of scientific materialism, and last words are proverbially associated with death-beds. (It is only a Richard Baxter who is privileged, on finding his last words a marketable article, to give us a second batch of them.) And of the motley crowd who had attended these new hierophants of negation, no small number have begun to draw back on finding what is to be the end of the pilgrimage. So long as science seemed to have a quarrel with the theologians only, they applauded. But when they discovered that the moralist was to have even less quarter than the theologians, and that the denial of miracle led on, if not to the denial of human responsibility, at any rate to the rejection of the only intelligible reason for asserting it, they thought they had enough of science. We are not speaking at random, but from observation of a pretty large number of cases. The pendulum has already begun its rebound, and who can say how far it will swing to the other extreme?

It is Thompson who italicizes genus and species. The subsequent italics are mine.

Now men who cannot understand the irony contained in the supposition that in some other planet two straight lines may enclose a space, cannot be hurried. They must be waited for. They must be allowed still to imagine that men who are demonstrating the reality of necessary truth, or inevitable unconquerable necessity, are unhooping the universe and sending it back to chaos. Let them, however, be comforted with one thought: that while these dreadful men, "Clifford, Haeckel, Tyndall, and Huxley," are so busy looking into the nature of things, as things are, they cannot be burning up those who differ from them. When Mr. Robert Ellis Thompson shows us how much the world has been demoralized by the writings of Euclid, we shall know how much it is likely to be demoralized by the writings of the terrible men whose names he uses with almost no understanding of the meaning of their words or works. E. W.

THE HEYWOOD CASE.

The conviction of Mr. E. H. Heywood for sending Cupid's Yokes through the mails, under the statutes excluding from them "obscene" literature, is a flagrant violation of justice and common sense; and Judge Clark's decision as to what constitutes a book "obscene," in his charge to the jury, is a disgrace to the bench. In THE INDEX of December 3 and December 20, we pointed out the absolute necessity of observing the distinction in this respect between the main purpose and the incidental expressions of a book. For lack of a proper emphasis on this point, Judge Clark has blundered into a definition of obscenity which will condemn as unmarketable an immense proportion of the greatest works of human genius. Incidental obscenities, nay, passages and whole poems, fundamentally indecent, can be found in such writers as Shakespeare, Milton, Byron, Moore, and nearly every prominent name in English literature down to very recent times, not to mention classical and foreign literature; and no law can possibly stand which would suppress such works as these. The Bible itself, by Judge Clark's definition, is unfit to mail or to use; and if his decision is sustained, the hard common sense of the world will not long tolerate any arbitrary exception in the case of that or any other book.

Now the book for which Mr. Heywood has been condemned is as much repugnant to all our own tastes and opinions as it can possibly be to Judge Clark; we sympathize neither with its thought nor its style. All the more on this account, however, do we insist that Mr. Heywood shall not be judicially condemned for simply advocating his abstract moral theories, whether wise or unwise, in his own way. The theories are to us as hateful as the way is repulsive; but to confound his book with that vile class of literature which alone ought to be suppressed is a monstrous injustice, and we protest against it with irrepressible indignation. For Mr. Heywood himself, ill-balanced and disregarding of sound canons of propriety as we think he has shown himself in his writings, we entertain a very sincere personal respect; we know nothing whatever against his moral character, and have never heard it so much as doubted.

It is a burning wrong to remand him by a judicial sentence to the class of human hyenas who make it a business to deprave and pervert the passions of the young; and Judge Clark must be considered as having shown himself by his conduct of this trial unfit to preside in cases where personal rights and liberties and great principles of freedom are at stake. The law as he expounds it is an outrage on civilization and an insult to the public intelligence; and we would rather run all possible risks from the evil it was properly meant to remedy than see it continue on the statute-book as it is. What a blunder, in the name of purity, to drive the most earnest friends of combined purity and freedom to take such a position as that! But Judge Clark will in the end be overruled by an authority higher than himself—enlightened public opinion; and we hope fervently that this predestined countermanding of his decision will come soon enough to save Mr. Heywood from infamous injustice.

UNDERSTAND, BEFORE YOU COMPLAIN.

We used to imagine that straightforward statements, put into plain English and free from all sorts of ambiguity, could be understood by radical readers of THE INDEX, if not by the Christian public whose green spectacles might be fairly supposed to lend some verdancy to what they read in a free-thought journal. But we have changed our mind on this point. It is not in the power of the English language to state anything so unequivocally that some good radical soul will not vow that we said black when we said white, or no when we said yes. We have inexhaustible patience and good humor for criticisms of what we do say; but human nature itself is liable to give way, when protests against what we have not said come clamoring for publication. One man makes a string of blunders in reading his INDEX and publishes the whole string in the Truth Seeker; and over the wall go a crowd of others after him, like sheep after their bell-wether. We are getting tired of publishing such protests without a word of comment; we propose to accompany the new batch in this issue with some plain words.

What was the ground we took about legislation concerning "obscene literature"? Briefly this:—

1. That "the statutory phrase 'obscene literature' should be strictly confined to publications designed expressly to demoralize, pollute, and corrupt, by ministering to lewd passions for the sake of profit to publishers; and that it should not be construed to include any publications not so designed, even if they do contain incidental expressions liable to be adjudged obscene by an unprejudiced moral judgment."

2. That publications in this narrow sense "obscene" should be prohibited from passing through the mails by United States law; but not that anybody, for this or any other purpose, should have power to tamper with sealed letters or packages in the Post-office.

3. That the existing laws ought to be jealously revised, so as to be incapable of being wrested to the punishment of any publishers but those guilty of dealing in the nefarious stuff already mentioned.

4. That Anthony Comstock has been guilty of intolerable abuse of power, and ought to be summarily dismissed from the Post-office Department.

Under the heading, "Off the Track," we have elsewhere grouped three letters on this subject, and now make short notes on them here in succession.

Number I.

Mr. Bennett explains his use of the names of McKesson & Robbins on his circular. We drop that subject, not wishing to comment on his explanation.

The authorship of the petition he circulated is of no consequence; we neither know nor care who wrote it. The petition itself opposes all United States legislation against really obscene literature, and we approve it; that is reason enough for all that we said, and we have nothing to take back on that point. We have never defended the laws as they stand; we have expressly called for their radical and jealous revision; we have been and are strongly in favor of their "material modification," as Mr. Bennett well knows; and he does extremely wrong to intimate, or leave it to be inferred, that we are not in favor of such "modification." The real point of difference between us is that the petition he issued asks primarily for the total repeal of the United States laws, on the ground that the separate States should be left to "provide suitable remedies"—which they cannot do; while we would ask for radical modification, but not total repeal. How can he wonder at the position which we take on this subject, when he himself has been forced to take it at last, as proved by this sentence on the first page of the Truth Seeker of January 19: "SO FAR AS REAL OBSCENE BOOKS AND PRINTS WHICH ARE CALCULATED TO INFLAME THE PASSIONS ARE CONCERNED, THEIR CIRCULATION SHOULD BE PROHIBITED, BY MAIL AND ALL OTHER MODES OF TRANSPORTATION, BUT THE MAIN PROVISIONS OF THE SECTION ARE FAR TOO SWEEPING AND INDEFINITE." Exactly! That is precisely the ground we have taken and recommended. We congratulate Mr. Bennett on at last perceiving the utter folly of taking any other ground. The fact that he has been driven himself to assume a position against the recommendations of his own petition ought to make him ashamed of the miserable insinuations in the last part of his letter—to which we pay no further attention. We simply say that we spoke promptly and warmly in his defence when he was attacked by Comstock, and deserved better treatment than to be slandered and vilified by him, merely because we declined to take with him a false and ruinous position which he has himself been at last forced to abandon.

Number II.

We thank Mr. Leland for his kind opinion of our "pluck," etc., but venture to suggest that, as shown above, it is not our "Plevna" that has been captured! The question now is whether he himself will "move on with the rest of the Liberal army," as Mr. Bennett has been forced to do, or stay to share the fate of Osman Pasha.

Number III.

It moves our strong regret to see our good friend Mr. Mead so rashly and precipitately enlist under that "Radical Free Lance." Let us see what it is that he has so incautiously indorsed.

1. The "Lance" declares for "absolute freedom of expression, without compromise, without concealment." For instance, he would repeal all laws making false witness, perjury, libel, and slander indictable crimes, and leave every man and woman utterly defenceless against a species of cruelty and malice which is often more infamous than murder. We thought no intelligent radical could seriously lay down so extravagant and absurd a proposition. It is time to know that words are sometimes crimes, and that all crimes come within the strict province of government.

1. The "Lance" goes off into a ridiculous jeremiad over our "deserting freedom's brave champions," etc., as if, forsooth, it was deserting Mr. Bennett (whom we had already defended), to refuse to go in with a hip-hip-hurrah for a particular form of petition which Mr. Bennett himself has been compelled to contradict! Cannot a man believe in freedom of the press, unless he believes in exposing little children to infamous solicitations by mail which, if offered in person, would be fitly answered by nothing but a summary knock-down? This dreadfully silly stuff of "Free Lance," misrepresenting us from beginning to end, we did not think it worth while to accompany with even a single word of comment at the time; we did not believe there was one among our readers who would not see through its flimsiness. But to Mr. Mead the cobweb has proved a lasso!

Let us be understood, if such a thing is any longer possible on this earth. We are no more in favor of governmental supervision of the people's morals, as such, than Mr. Mead or his captor. But, in the name of all good thinking, what but "protection" of citizens in their rights is the object of government? We insist on the right of the children to be protected in theirs; and if that is the "paternal or protective principle," make the most of it. If governments are not founded to protect rights, will our good friend tell us what they are founded for? Is not taxation justifiable only on that ground of protection? Very well: we shall leave to him the delightful task of proving that children have no rights in this matter to be protected.

And this "tampering with the mails"—have we ever lisped a syllable in favor of it? Rub your eyes, friends; see what you are about. Before you send any more articles of misdirected protest, we beg you to take the very small trouble of understanding what you rush to criticize. For what we do say we hold ourselves strictly accountable; but we shall print no more communications, on this subject at least, which take us to task for what we have not said. That pastime is waxing tedious.

We will simply add a letter from Mr. Underwood, published in the Truth Seeker of January 19, and commend his sensible words to the careful attention of all:—

BRIGHTON, IOWA, Jan. 11, 1878.

DEAR BENNETT:—

From your statement in the Truth Seeker, I judge that you are not in danger of prosecution for "blasphemy and obscenity," on the information filed against you by Comstock. I congratulate you on your escaping the annoyance and trouble of a trial, with the worse results that would follow in case of conviction. How Comstock could expect a trial and conviction for blasphemy in a United States Court, I am still unable to see.

I think all Liberals should unite in petitioning Congress to modify that "obscenity act," so it cannot be made to apply to any publishers or persons except those who are engaged in spreading literature concerning the obscenity of which there can be no doubt. There is a class of books to which the word is applicable, and there is only one class of books to which it is applicable. Whether Congress has rightful authority to prohibit the transmission of such literature through the mails, seems to be a question on which there is a difference of opinion. Why not, then, have a petition which all Liberals can sign? There is no doubt that there should be legislation by some authority adopted to prevent the circulation of vile literature, the kind that is written to excite the passions and to corrupt the minds of youth. Whether Congress or the State deals with this matter, there must be something clear and definite as to what literature is included. Now, I don't think we should waste time or temper in disputing on a subject concerning which liberals are perhaps equally divided. Let us have a petition for such modification of that "obscenity act" as shall not render possible the arrest of honorable men by a narrow-minded and bigoted agent of the government, A. J. Comstock. The foregoing has been suggested by Mr. Abbot's articles, and by those in reply in subsequent numbers of the Truth Seeker. Why should the Truth Seeker and THE INDEX get into a dispute over this matter, especially where it is liable to degenerate into bad spirit and bitterness (as shown by the article of "H. B. B." in the Truth Seeker), and where it can do no good. Mr. Abbot is a hard worker in the cause of liberalism, and has been years arousing liberals to organize for defence against every infringement on their rights by orthodoxy. I know you, too, to be a warm-hearted lover and advocate of the same principles. Now what I want is to see you and Abbot, and the Investigator, Evolution, and Religio-Philosophical Journal, and other liberal papers, pulling together. Then we will have harmony in our ranks and something will be accomplished.

If you deem it necessary to retain the form of petition you have issued, do so for those who like it; but why not issue another form for those who believe there should be laws against the circulation of obscene literature through the United States mails, but who would gladly petition for a modification of the present foolish and unjust law as it now stands? Be assured that I have but one object in writing you this letter—which I write by way of suggestion only,—and that is to encourage unity and cooperation in working for an object in which all true Liberals are interested, and which is liable to be kept back by needless differences and disputes among us.

Fraternally yours, B. F. UNDERWOOD.

Communications.

OFF THE TRACK.

Number I.

EDITOR INDEX:—

Dear Sir,—In an editorial in your issue of the 17th, in quoting an advertisement from the Tribune, and in your subsequent remarks, you wrong me. Will you allow me space in your columns to explain?

I did not use the name of McKesson & Robbins without calling upon them and learning that, so far as the Comstock laws are believed to be unconstitutional and oppressive, they were in perfect sympathy with me. They also approved the effort to have the laws repealed. In one remark, Mr. Robbins said that they hardly wished their name used; to which I demurred, and asked what objection there could be to it. The circular only urged the signing of the petitions, which they approved; and as they were so widely known, I would be very glad to have their name to remain on. No objection was raised after this; and Mr. Robbins said, if another party named at the time would cooperate, they would also.

I left a copy of the petition with them as well as the circular, and they did not refuse at that time, nor for ten days afterwards, that I should let their name remain on; and it was not until Comstock and other Christians remonstrated with them that they forbade the use of their name, and then it was too late; several hundreds had gone out, and some by mistake were sent afterwards without their name being erased. I may have acted wrongly in the matter; but I thought I had their sympathy and their tacit consent. I certainly did not intend to act dishonorably, much less criminally.

It is hard to estimate the weight of Christian and Comstock pressure upon those who had consented their names might be used. I asked none to sign the circular. Comstock threatened them with a suit for libel if they did not say I used their names without authority. Some under such intimidation signed a paper to that effect.

In your remarks you got the petition and the circular somewhat confounded. I placed nobody's name to the petition, but only to the circular explanatory of the petition and the necessity of signing it. I left with each party whose name I used a copy with their name attached, and continued those only who expressed themselves in sympathy with what I was doing, and retained none who protested against the use of their names.

Let me assure you, that petition was not drafted by myself, but by as able and clear-headed a lawyer as this city affords, and as sound a liberal as this age can boast. I regard it as having scarcely a fault in it; and, for the life of me, I cannot see why you should raise such an objection against it,—just at the time, too, when thousands of them were being sent over the country for signatures, that you should write five columns in your paper in opposition to it,—that you should refuse to sign it, and also advise others not to sign. The laws are certainly very objectionable. They were passed in great haste and confusion, without due consideration. They were not called for by any considerable number of the American people; and their administration has been made extremely oppressive and cruel to hundreds of unsuspecting and well-meaning people.

It is clear to many minds that the good they have accomplished could easily have been effected without crushing the principles of individual right and personal liberty. Much ado has been made about the danger under the old regime of improper circulars being sent to children and pupils. It would be far better to have second and third-class mail-matter for such young people to be examined by parents, guardians, or teachers before delivered, without violating the Constitution and crushing out the very spirit of American liberty. If you will notice, the petition only asks for the repeal or material modification of the laws.

You seem to think those who favor a change of the present laws are in favor of obscenity. You could not make a greater mistake. I think nearly one hundred thousand persons have signed those petitions, and that they are as pure and high-minded men and women as this country produces. Those names will soon be laid before Congress, and it is to be hoped they will produce not a little effect in causing the repeal of some of those most odious and oppressive laws.

If you are pleased with Comstock's recent triumph in your city over E. H. Heywood, for publishing and mailing his pamphlet called Cupid's Yokes, you ought to be congratulated. So that respectability and purity are preserved, perhaps you care nothing for personal rights. Comstock ought to appreciate your defence of him. He may need it. He has many Christian defenders, but not many radicals or infidels. He ought to let you pass scot-free, while other liberal editors and publishers are sent to prison.

The ruling of Judge Blatchford in the lottery cases was familiar to my attorneys; and they deem there is a wide difference between a definite and well-understood crime, and those which are so indefinite and vague that different detectives, attorneys, juries, and judges who may chance to try cases brought before them will construe them differently. If immorality, indecency, and obscenity are crimes punishable with fines of $5000 and imprisonment for ten years, they ought at least to be clearly defined. This fact alone argues strongly in favor of a repeal or modification.

I have not been arrested yet for using the name of McKesson & Robbins, but know not how soon I may be. Truly yours, D. M. BENNETT.

NEW YORK, Jan. 19, 1878.

Number II.

NEW YORK, Jan. 18, 1878.

EDITOR OF THE INDEX:—

Dear Sir,—THE INDEX this week is a capital number. I admire your fairness and pluck in publishing so many charges of hot shot against your own positions. Any editor is a good editor who hears all sides. If you can maintain your ground, good; but I think your Plevna will be captured, and you will have to move on with the rest of the Liberal army. Comstock isn't a redoubt in the liberal lines worth halting the whole corps to defend; especially when there are such weak places in the defence as the McKesson & Robbins statement. Mr. Bennett called on several druggists, these gentlemen among the number, with a proof of his circular, and had a friendly talk with them, in which they entirely agreed with him that the Comstock enactments were bad laws and ought to be repealed. McKesson & Robbins said they had already spent $50 in efforts and movements to secure their repeal, and had written to members of Congress and influential persons, asking their aid and influence to that end. Some of the druggists gave Mr. Bennett full consent to use their names; some gave a quasi consent, or, at all events, did not refuse; and none objected, outright, or, if they did, they made only such objection as came from fear of what Comstock might do to them.

After the circular and petitions had been sent and distributed over the country, either Comstock or his agents went among the druggists, threatened, "bulldozed," and stirred them up to withdraw their names and influence from the support of Mr. Bennett. Neither did he refuse to strike any names from his circular. After the circular had gone abroad and entirely out of his hands, how could he strike off any names? Besides, they have not brought suit against Mr. Bennett for this or any other cause, as you credit the Tribune with stating. All these facts you should know, and let your readers know, in any treatment of Mr. Bennett's case.

I am much obliged for the publication of my protest against the old style morality. The "defining" shall begin on my part in due time; also I will try to pay my respects to "A. W. K." on Communism.

I began this as a hurried private letter, but some of it ought to be published.

Very sincerely yours,

THERON C. LELAND.

Number III.

DEAR MR. ABBOT:—

I desire to put on record my most cordial indorsement of the communication of "Radical Free Lance," entitled "Absolute Freedom of the Press," published in THE INDEX of Jan. 17. Such of your readers as have made a careful and thoughtful study of Buckle's History of Civilization will remember how uncompromisingly he wages warfare against the "paternal principle" in all things,—politics, religion, morals. His great work is not at hand, and so I shall not attempt to quote the language verbatim; but I distinctly remember how through this great historic masterpiece there runs a never-ceasing protest against the protective or paternal principle. In Dr. Draper's Intellectual Development of Europe, in Lecky's Morals and Rationalism, in Spencer's Social Science,—in short, whenever the pen of rationalism touches, we find the same protest. Sometimes with the calm argument of the philosopher and scientist, sometimes with the indignant outburst of the man who has suffered; but from the brain of radicalism always, in some form, this protest comes. In the hearty stroke of that "Free Lance" I discovered the ring of the true metal. Better license with liberty than no liberty! Infinitely better that the land should be flooded with obscene literature than that a man, or a church, or a society should be empowered to rifle the mails, and establish a paternal protectorate over the medium of thought-exchange in the land,—over the mind and conscience of one individual.

The effort of every fixed system is to repress the individual, and compel the race to grow in a certain given direction. Christianity is such a fixed system, and in so far as it has been successful in its effort at repression, just in that ratio has the growth of the race been prevented. What is wanted is absolute freedom of the individual,—no gyres and fetters on body or mind; no dictator in Church or State; no good father or kind mother standing guard over the morals or intellect of men and women; but simply a government that shall say, "Your freedom is assured from the wrong-doing of your neighbors; in return you must do no wrong to your neighbors."

It must surely be clear to the editor of THE INDEX that to grant permission to any man or body of men to tamper with the mails in any manner whatever, is opening a door dangerous to the liberties of the citi-

son; and I cannot yet see the force of the reasoning by which he defends his position. Therefore I am reluctantly—very reluctantly—compelled to take the position of "Free Lance," and conclude that on this question the usually courageous and clear-headed editor of THE INDEX has been betrayed into intellectual error by the logic of his sympathies, enlisted against a vicious trade in obscene books.

Yours very truly, FRANK J. MEAD.
MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., Jan. 20, 1878.

"PLAIN TRUTHS FOR WESTERN READERS."

TO THE EDITOR OF THE INDEX:—

In THE INDEX of January 8 is an article copied from the New York Tribune, entitled, "Plain Truths for Western Readers"; also an article on "Silver," by "F. S. C."

Permit me to say respecting the first, that there is very little truth in it. The substance of the article is an effort to show that money is withheld from business when there is danger of a general depreciation in the value of money. And the supposition is that the contrary of this would be true; namely, that when there is a prospect of money undergoing appreciation, the holders of money would be eager to loan it out or employ it in sustaining industries or in some way invest it. It needs but the plainest common-sense to understand that these suppositions are not true. When money is itself increasing in value, and, of course, other things decreasing, then it is profitable to hoard money and doubly precarious to invest it.

Take the experience of the past few years. A thousand dollars that were buried in the earth four years ago, if dug up now will buy very nearly, taking the average of things, twice as much as when it was buried. On the other hand, had the thousand dollars been invested in property, the investor would find now that he could realize but five hundred on it.

Would this be the case if money was itself undergoing depreciation and other things rising in value? Would it be the case either if prices were stable? It used to be thought necessary to first sow before one could reap; to strew before he could gather; but in these times when the great object seems to be to make money itself grow, not by use, but by the legal restriction of quantity to increase its unit value, it is the servant who buries his talent that gets the reward.

"F. S. C." starts out with a proposition that is not sound. Value does not depend solely on labor. A coined silver dollar of the mintage of 1793, if tested, will bring a hundred dollars. Is that because it has taken a hundred times as much labor to produce it as it did a dollar coined in some other year?

Dr. Linderman seemed to suppose in his recommendation to Congress to coin the trade dollar, that a bar of standard silver, if divided into pieces of 420 grains each, would exchange for more tea or silk than if the same bar was divided into pieces of 412½ grains each! And Congress, and a great many people, seem still to rest under the pleasant delusion. But there is no more truth in it as a question of fact than that a piece of leather cut into five pieces, as Locke illustrates it, will cover a larger ball than if cut into four.

Just as absurd is it to suppose that to remonetize silver would give a large profit to silver producers and bullionists, as Dr. Linderman, "F. S. C.," and so many others suppose. Suppose the old status of silver were restored—free coinage and unlimited tender,—will a bar of silver be worth any more when divided into pieces of 412½ grains, and the weight and fineness of such pieces certified by the stamp of the government, than as a silver bar, when any one holding it could have it so stamped free of charge? Would "F. S. C." or any one else give more grains of gold or more of anything else for the bar of silver after it was so divided and stamped than before, if he could have it so divided and stamped for himself for nothing?

Just as erroneous are the suppositions that labor will be paid less if silver were remonetized. Whether or not 412½ grains of silver, coined or uncoined, will exchange always for 23 23-100 grains of gold, involves quite other considerations,—considerations that neither the debtor nor creditor took into account when obligations were entered into.

This money question involves wider considerations than either of the articles embraced. It makes comparatively little difference whether both metals circulate together as money in every country; but it does make such difference whether one of the metals be removed from the coinage of the world or not, that civilization itself becomes involved.

Suppose for a moment the total mass of both metals in the world to be fused together, and in this form open to coinage throughout the world. In the United States 394 47-100 grains of the fused metals would make two dollars or two units. It is plain that the number of coins or units that could be made, and the value of each would depend on the quantity of the two metals. That was, in effect, the condition of things in 1872. The metals were not fused, but silver and gold were both money metals, and the number of units there could be depended not on one metal, but on both.

Now suppose a movement were set on foot to abolish half of the combined metals, and it were carried out, what would be the effect on the value of the remaining half? The effect of demonetizing half, when, not so combined, can be no different. Is the world prepared for such a step? Can it ever be?

We may be saddened by the plaintive mourning of men who purchased bonds, or bought debts, based upon a volume of money consisting of gold, silver, and inconvertible paper, aggregating at least ten thousand millions for the world, because after debts amounting to three times the total quantity of money in existence have been created, the people who must pay them are unwilling to abandon silver and have greenbacks destroyed, and the volume of legal tender money thereby reduced to $4,000,000,000 instead of $10,000,000,000; but it can only be at the moral conception that could prompt such a demand.

The most important principle in monetary science to be kept in view is the relation of quantity of money to quantity of commodities and transactions. It is this relation that determines prices. Any movement, therefore, to reduce volume of money, while commodities and transactions are increasing, as they should be with increasing population if intelligently undertaken, must be with no other view than to increase the value of money and decrease that of other things, and to thereby wrongfully change the relation of property and debts.

William Leekie, in summing up the effect of such measures in England, after showing the effect in England and throughout Europe, of first increasing the volume of money by paper issues and then reducing it again to metallic money (they did not undertake, either, at the same time they were trying to reduce the quantity of paper money to abolish half of the metallic money), also says: "No extensive country can even alter its currency from the precious metals to paper, and then back again to the precious metals without seriously affecting the value of property among its neighbors. These violent changes, in the degree in which they have lately been experienced in Europe and America, have defeated, in numerous instances, the very end and object for which men form themselves into societies; viz., for the mutual protection of their lives and properties. It is now, unfortunately, a matter of history, that hundreds and thousands of virtuous and industrious families have been reduced to ruin and beggary by the late changes in the value of money, who, from their own conduct and situation in life, had no reason to look for or to expect such a calamity." If this was true when written in 1841, how much more forcible is its application now. The people of the West are glad to have enlightenment on this question, and especially to have their moral sense quickened; but, really, would it not be well for the Eastern press to test its own ground a little more thoroughly before speaking with quite so much assurance? We want to believe that the editor of the New York Tribune works in a free harness; but if it be so, he is certainly open to the charge of writing a good deal that is very superficial.

A. J. WARNER.

MARIETTA, Ohio, Jan. 17, 1878.

RESUMPTION IN ENGLAND.

EDITOR OF THE INDEX:—

In all the discussion of the silver question, I do not remember to have seen any account of the experience of the Bank of England in resuming specie payments after a suspension of twenty-four years, from 1797 to 1821. Therefore, with your permission, I will give a few facts in relation to it.

When the question of resumption was under discussion in the British Parliament, Ricardo, the well-known political economist, then member of the House of Commons, gave it as his opinion that, as the Bank of England notes were then within four per cent. of gold, there would result only a four per cent. fall in prices, if the bank should return to specie payments.

Following his advice, to which his successful business career gave great weight, Parliament passed in 1819 the act commonly known as Peel's Act, to prepare the way for resumption. The result showed Ricardo in error. Prices fell over fifty per cent., and great distress was caused thereby among the manufacturers and other producing classes. Many failed, and others bore with great difficulty the heavy losses thus brought upon them. Then statesmen began to inquire into the causes of the financial troubles. It was ascertained that the great draft upon the gold stock of the world, consequent upon resumption in a single metal, had so appreciated the value of gold, as to cause a great fall in prices, measured in gold. And it was also discovered that the ratio of the difference between paper and hard money at the time resumption is determined upon, is no indication how great will be the fall of prices by the time resumption is an accomplished fact.

As we have now about $700,000,000 paper money in the United States (including National Bank notes), if we resume in gold, we shall need to draw from two to three hundred millions from the gold stock of Europe, which, with the $75,000,000 now in the treasury, destined to this use, will perhaps be sufficient.

How far this would raise the premium on gold, no one can foretell. This, however, seems safe to premise: if England, with all her wealth, had such a struggle merely to maintain the convertibility of Bank of England notes, the United States cannot have a less difficult task before her, if she attempts to withdraw from circulation—to redeem—as the Resumption Act provides, her $350,000,000 of greenbacks, and to maintain the convertibility of the National Bank notes.

How could our manufacturers endure the falling prices that would result from such an attempt? Production would seem to be impossible, save with loss. Wages would fall, men be thrown out of employment, tramps increase in numbers, taxes grow more burdensome, and social evils multiply.

I do not like to be a prophet of evil; but I do not see how it could be otherwise. The laws of Nature will act; and it is the part of wisdom in us to find out the laws on which our social fabric so largely depends. Let us be wise in season!

Yours, EMILY J. LEONARD.
W. MERIDEN, Jan. 8, 1878.

NEW LIBERAL LEAGUE AT FLORENCE, IOWA.

FRIEND ABBOT:—

On the evening of Saturday, Jan. 19, the liberals of Florence and vicinity met at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Phil Wagner, and organized the "Florence Liberal League," with a membership of nineteen. The following are our officers for the ensuing year: President, Byron McQuinn; Secretary, B. O. Walker; Assistant Secretary, Albert M. Rogers; Treasurer, Mrs. L. V. Morton; Councilors, Richard Merritt, Charles M. Rogers, Phil Wagner, and C. B. Hayden. Annual meetings for the election of officers to be held on the 19th of January of each year. Annual election for the selection of delegates to the Annual Congress will be held at such times as the Board of Directors shall designate. Monthly business meetings on the 19th of each month. Shall hold regular Sunday discussions, etc., at Wagner's Hall, at two P.M. Programme for Sunday afternoon, January 27th: Music; reading of "Demands of Liberalism," and other matter explanatory of the Liberal League movement. Statement of the local work of the Florence League. Discussion of the question: "Should all Laws Exempting Church Property from Taxation be Repealed?"

We intend to perfect arrangements for a Children's Fraternity as soon as possible. This must be one of the most important departments of our work. Our Constitution makes provision for the establishment of a Sunday reading-room as soon as the Board of Directors shall deem expedient. We mean to educate. Fellow liberals of Iowa and of the whole Union, the Florence Liberal League extends to you the right hand of cordial good-will and fraternal fellowship, and trusts that you will go and do likewise, where you have not already entered upon the good work. It is proposed to hold a State Mass Convention of the Liberals of Iowa, at Des Moines, sometime this winter. More about it soon. E. C. WALKER,
Sec'y of Florence Liberal League.

OBSCENITY.

EDITOR INDEX:—

It cannot be too often repeated, that there is nothing obscene or profane or wicked in sex in itself; and that there is nothing vile or immoral in the manifestations of sex in themselves.

The market for obscene literature depends upon the existence of ignorance and unbalanced organizations. The only permanent cure for any evil is "the absorbent substitution of the opposite good."

Let our children, then, be well-born, and well-taught, and there is an end to the trade in obscene books and pictures. All that is needed to put all those foul birds to flight, is liberty and light.

Repression never cured, and never can cure, any evil; and Comstockism can, at best, only palliate, if indeed it will not aggravate, the evil it pretends to oppose.

F. S. C.

[This is in the main true, and very well put. Repression never cured murder or any other crime; law against crime is a very imperfect protection at the best, though it accomplishes something; and it can never be too strongly urged upon parents that the chief protection of their children depends upon themselves. "Comstockism," however, is no argument against seeking to prevent by law, so far as law can be made efficient, those crimes against children which no parent can possibly prevent without the aid of society.—Ed.]

E. C. WALKER.

[Mr. Walker desires us to make the following announcement, which we gladly do for the advancement of the Liberal League movement, hoping that he will receive many invitations to lecture.—Ed.]

The Conflict between Church and State.

Lectures on the following topics are now ready for delivery:—

1. The National Reform Movement.
2. The State Secularization Movement.
3. Taxation, Republican and the opposite.
4. Religion in the School.
5. The State and the Sabbath.
6. National Protection for National Citizens.
7. Education and the State.
8. Who shall vote?
9. The Duties of Liberals.
10. The Liberal League and Politics.
11. The Modern Inquisition.
12. The Final Authority in Morals.

I will lecture on the above subjects in the West, until April 1, for actual expenses, and am especially desirous of assisting in the organization of Local Liberal Leagues. Address,

Florence, Iowa. E. C. WALKER,
Lock-Box B.

AT A MEETING in London to receive a report from the missionaries sent to discover the tribes of Israel, Lord H— was asked to take the chair. "I take," he replied, "a great interest in your researches, gentlemen. The fact is, I have borrowed money from all the Jews now known; and if you find a new set, I shall feel very much obliged."

AN ABSURD rumor prevailed at one time that the end of the world was at hand. The most practical suggestion mooted on the subject was the reply of an urchin who heard his mother talking with fear and trembling of the affair: "If it's true, mither, widna ye better tak' the bawbees out o' the savings bank?"

Advertisements.

THE PATRONAGE

of the liberal advertising public is respectfully solicited for THE INDEX. The attempt will be honestly made to keep the advertising pages of THE INDEX in entire harmony with its general character and principles, and thus to furnish to the public an advertising medium which shall be not only profitable to its patrons, but also worthy of their most generous support. To this end, all improper or "blind" advertisements, all quack advertisements, and all advertisements believed to be fraudulent or unjust to any one, will be excluded from these columns. No cuts will be admitted.

THE INDEX must not be held responsible for any statement made by advertisers, who will in all cases accept the responsibility for their own statements.

ADVERTISING RATES.

For 1 to 12 insertions, 10c per line.
 " 13 " 25 " " " "
 " 26 " 51 " " " "
 " 52 " " " " " "

On half-column advertisements, a discount of 10 per cent. will be made; on full-column advertisements, a discount of 25 per cent.

On all advertisements for which cash is paid in advance, a further discount of 25 per cent. on the total, as above calculated, will be made. FRANCIS E. ABBOT, Editor.

TO ADVERTISERS.

The following states the experience of a successful Bookseller who has advertised in THE INDEX:

TOLEDO, Ohio, Sept. 20, 1872.
 TO THE INDEX ASSO., Toledo, O.:
 Gentlemen,—Having had occasion to advertise in your paper during the past two years quite largely, I take pleasure in stating that I have always obtained very satisfactory returns—better in fact than from book advertisements in any other paper I have advertised in. Not only have I obtained immediate results, but orders have frequently been received months after the insertion of the advertisement, showing that your paper is kept on file and referred to by your readers.

Yours truly,
 HENRY S. SCHUBERT.
 Special arrangements will be made at reduced terms for long-time or extended advertisements. Address

THE INDEX,
 No. 231 WASHINGTON STREET,
 Boston.

CULTURED FREE THOUGHT.

The Index Association,
 OFFICE, No. 231 WASHINGTON ST., BOSTON, publish
THE INDEX,

A Weekly Paper devoted to Free and Rational Religion.

It is the object of THE INDEX to give public utterance to the boldest, most cultivated, and best matured thought of the age on all religious questions, and to apply it directly to the social and political amelioration of society.

It is edited by FRANCIS E. ABBOT, with the following list of Editorial Contributors:—

O. B. FROTHINGHAM, New York City.
 WILLIAM J. POTTER, New Bedford, Mass.
 WILLIAM H. SPENCER, Haverhill, Mass.
 Mrs. E. D. CHENEY, Jamaica Plain, Mass.
 GEORGE JACOB HOLYOAKE, London, Eng.
 DAVID H. CLARK, Florence, Mass.
 Mrs. ELIZABETH CADY STANTON, Tenny, N.J.
 J. L. STODDARD, Boston.
 ELIZUR WRIGHT, Boston.
 O. D. B. MILLS, Syracuse, N.Y.
 W. D. LE SUEUR, Ottawa, Can.
 BENJ. F. UNDERWOOD, Thorndike, Mass.
 ALBERT WARREN KELSEY, St. Louis, Mo.

Every liberal should subscribe for THE INDEX as the best popular exponent of Religious Liberalism. Every Christian minister, and every thinking church-member, should subscribe for it, as the clearest, most candid, and most scholarly exposition of the differences between Free Thought and Evangelical Christianity, and as the best means of becoming well informed of the arguments and the movements which the Church will have to meet in the future.

Almost every number contains a discourse or leading article, which alone is worth the price of one year's subscription.

Prof. MAX MUELLER, of Oxford, England, in a letter to the Editor published in THE INDEX for January 4, 1873, says: "That the want of a journal entirely devoted to Religion in the widest sense of the word should be felt in America—that such a journal should have been started and so powerfully supported by the best minds of your country—is a good sign of the times. There is no such journal in England, France, or Germany; though the number of so-called religious or theological periodicals is, as you know, very large." And later still "I read the numbers of your INDEX with increasing interest."

Send $3.20 for one year, including postage, or 6 cents for three months on trial.

Address THE INDEX,
 No. 231 Washington Street, Boston.

PUBLICATIONS INDEX TRACTS. 1 8 7 8.

FREE

RELIGIOUS

ASSOCIATION.

Freedom and Fellowship in Religion. A volume of ten essays upon speculative and practical problems of religion, by D. A. Wasson, Samuel Longfellow, Samuel Johnson, John Weiss, W. J. Potter, F. E. Abbot, O. B. Frothingham, J. W. Chadwick, T. W. Higginson, and Mrs. E. D. Cheney, and extracts from Addresses by Ralph Waldo Emerson, Lucretia Mott, Robert Dale Owen, Dr. Bartol, Wendell Phillips, Rabbi Wise, Horace Seaver, A. B. Alcott, Lucy Stone, Charles H. Malcom, Julia Ward Howe, and others,—all given on the platform of the Free Religious Association. Price (reduced) $1.50.

"One purpose of this volume is to give an answer to the question, What is the meaning of the Free Religious Association?"

Proceedings of Fifth Annual Meeting, 1872. Contains essays by J. W. Chadwick on "Liberty and the Church in America," by C. D. B. Mills on "Religion as the Expression of a Permanent Sentiment of the Human Mind," and by O. B. Frothingham on "The Religion of Humanity," with addresses by Rowland O'Connor, Oels Bursleigh, Lucretia Mott, A. B. Alcott, C. A. Bartol, Horace Seaver, Alexander Loos, and others.

Proceedings of Sixth Annual Meeting, 1873. Contains essays by Samuel Johnson on "Freedom in Religion," and by John Weiss on "Religion in Freedom," with addresses by Wm. O. Gannett, Robert Dale Owen, T. W. Higginson, Samuel Longfellow, J. S. Thomson, F. E. Abbot, and Lucretia Mott.

Proceedings of Seventh Annual Meeting, 1874. Contains various reports of President Frothingham's address on "The Validity of the Free Religious Platform," of Dr. Bartol's essay on "The Religious Signs of the Times," of Rabbi Soameschein's speech on "Reformed Judaism," and of the statements by Messrs. Calthrop, Abbot, and Higginson of their respective attitudes towards Christianity,—as "Christian," "Anti-Christian," and "Extra-Christian,"—together with the Secretary's Annual Report, and letters from Kenneth Chunder Ben, Frederick Douglass, and D. A. Wasson.

Proceedings of Eighth Annual Meeting, 1875. Contains Essays by Wm. O. Gannett, on "The Present Constructive Tendencies in Religion," and by Francis E. Abbot, on "Construction and Destruction in Religion," and addresses by T. W. Higginson, Lucretia Mott, Chas. G. Ames, O. B. Frothingham, B. F. Underwood, S. P. Putnam, and E. S. Morse.

Proceedings of Ninth Annual Meeting, 1876. Contains a full abstract of the interesting discussion at the Business Meeting on the Practical Methods and Work of the Executive Committee; address of the President, O. B. Frothingham; essay by James Parton, on "The Relation of Religion to the State" (or, as he styles it, "Cathedrals and Beer"), with addresses on the subject by Miss Susan H. Wixon and Rev. M. J. Savage; essay by Samuel Longfellow, on "The Relation of Free Religion to Churches," with the addresses that followed it by Prof. Felix Adler, Rev. Henry Blanchard, Rev. Brooke Herford, and John Weiss,—together with letters from Judge Doe, Rev. Joseph Cook, and others, invited to speak.

Proceedings of Tenth Annual Meeting, 1877. Contains Essays by Rev. Wm. R. Alger, on "Steps towards Religious Emancipation in Christendom," and by C. D. B. Mills, Esq., on "Internal Dangers to Free Thought and Free Religion"; Addresses by O. B. Frothingham, Wm. Henry Channing, Rabbi Lasker, Dr. J. L. Dudley, and T. W. Higginson; and tenth annual reports of the Executive Committee, Treasurer, etc.

Any one of the above pamphlets of "PROCEEDINGS" sent to any address for Five cents received in postage stamps; and more at the same rate. Sold also for Five cents at the office.

For series of important Tracts see last page of THE INDEX.

These publications are for sale at the office of the Free Religious Association, 231 Washington Street, Boston. The Annual Reports for 1868 and 1871 cannot be supplied, and the supply of others previous to that of 1872 is quite limited and at special rates. Orders by mail may be addressed "Free Religious Association, 231 Washington Street, Boston, Mass."

WM. J. POTTER, Sec. F. R. A.

No. 1.—Truths for the Times, by F. E. Abbot, contains the "Fifty Affirmations" and "Modern Principles." Mr. CHARLES DARWIN, author of "The Origin of Species," says, in a letter to the editor not originally intended for publication, but subsequently authorized to be used: "I have now read 'TRUTHS FOR THE TIMES,' and I admire them from my inmost heart; and I agree to almost every word." New Edition. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00.

No. 2.—Fear of the Living God, by O. B. Frothingham, exposes the debasing character of the popular notions of God, and presents conceptions of him that are worthy of the nineteenth century. New Edition. Price 5 cents; 12 copies 50 cents.

No. 3.—Lecture on the Bible, by the Rev. Charles Voysey, of England, is an overwhelming demonstration of the imperfections and errors of the Bible, both in the Old and the New Testaments. New Edition. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00.

No. 4.—Christian Propagandism, by F. E. Abbot, is an exposure of the weakness, costliness, and inefficiency of the System of Foreign Missions. Full of Figures, Facts, and Interesting Extracts. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00.

No. 5.—"God in the Constitution," by Rev. Arthur B. Bradford, opposes the proposed Theological Amendment to the United States Constitution. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00.

No. 6.—"The Sabbath," by Parker Pillsbury, denounces Sabbatarian superstition. New Edition. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00.

No. 7.—"Compulsory Education," by F. E. Abbot, maintains the right of every child to be educated, and the duty of the State to ensure it an education. Price 5 cents; 12 copies 50 cents.

No. 8.—The Present Heaven, by O. B. Frothingham, treats of a subject that interests everybody. New Edition. Price 5 cents; 12 copies 50 cents.

No. 9.—The Christian Amendment, by F. E. Abbot, shows the dangerous character of the attempt to interpolate the Evangelical Christian Creed in the U. S. Constitution. Price 5 cents; 12 copies 50 cents.

No. 10.—The Impeachment of Christianity, by F. E. Abbot. Fourth Ten Thousand. Sent for free distribution to any one who will distribute it, in packages of from five to one hundred copies.

No. 11.—The God of Science, by F. E. Abbot, attempts to show the real influence of modern science upon the idea of God. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00.

No. 12.—Is Romanism Real Christianity? Two essays by Francis W. Newman and F. E. Abbot. Price 15 cents; 12 copies $1.00.

No. 13.—On the Vision of Heaven, by Prof. F. W. Newman, of England, analyzes the Christian conception of Heaven. Price 5 cents; 12 copies 50 cents.

No. 14.—A Study of Religion: The Name and the Thing, by F. E. Abbot, attempts to show that the popular derivation of the word Religion is incorrect; that the popular conceptions of Religion itself are inadequate; and that a new conception of it, based on the Law of Evolution, consistent with absolute Freedom of Thought, and independent even of belief in God, is the necessary condition of the perpetuity of Religion among men. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00.

No. 15.—The Battle of Syracuse. Two Essays by Rev. James Freeman Clarke, D.D., and F. E. Abbot discussing the Authority of Christianity. Price 10 cents; 12 copies for $1.00. Address

THE INDEX, 231 WASHINGTON STREET,
 Boston, Mass.

THE INDEX,
A Weekly Journal

DEVOTED TO

FREE RELIGION.

PUBLISHED BY THE

INDEX ASSOCIATION,

AT

No. 231 Washington Street, Boston.

EDITOR:

FRANCIS ELLINGWOOD ABBOT.

EDITORIAL CONTRIBUTORS:

O. B. FROTHINGHAM, New York City.
 W. J. POTTER, New Bedford, Mass.
 W. H. SPENCER, Haverhill, Mass.
 Mrs. E. D. CHENEY, Jamaica Plain, Mass.
 GEORGE JACOB HOLYOAKE, England.
 DAVID H. CLARK, Florence, Mass.
 Mrs. ELIZABETH CADY STANTON, Tenny, N.J.
 J. L. STODDARD, Boston.
 ELIZUR WRIGHT, Boston.
 C. D. B. MILLS, Syracuse, N.Y.
 W. D. LE SUEUR, Ottawa, Can.
 BENJ. F. UNDERWOOD, Thorndike, Mass.
 ALBERT WARREN KELSEY, St. Louis, Mo.

THE INDEX aims—

To increase general intelligence with respect to religion;

To foster a nobler spirit and quicken a higher purpose, both in society and in the individual;

To substitute knowledge for ignorance, right for wrong, truth for superstition, freedom for slavery, character for creed, catholicity for bigotry, love for hate, humanitarianism for sectarianism, devotion to universal ends for absorption in selfish schemes.

In brief, to hasten the day when Free Religion shall take the place of dogmatism and ecclesiasticism throughout the world, and when the welfare of humanity here and now shall be the aim of all private and public activities.

In addition to its general objects, the practical object to which THE INDEX is specially devoted is the ORGANIZATION OF THE LIBERALS OF THE COUNTRY, for the purpose of securing the more complete and consistent secularization of the political and educational institutions of the United States. The Church must give place to the Republic in the affections of the people. The last vestiges of ecclesiastical control must be wiped out of the Constitutions and Statutes of the several States in order to bring them into harmony with the National Constitution. To accomplish this object, the Liberals must make a united demand, and present an unbroken front, and the chief practical aim of THE INDEX will be henceforth to organize a great NATIONAL PARTY OF FREEDOM. Let every one who believes in this movement give it direct aid by helping to increase the circulation of THE INDEX.

SPECIAL FEATURES.

The publication of a valuable leading paper or essay of a thoughtful character, in each issue, will continue to be one of the most marked features of THE INDEX.

Regular editorial contributions will continue to be furnished by the well-known eminent writers who have already done so much to give to THE INDEX its present high position. Other interesting correspondence, communications, extracts from valuable books and periodicals, and miscellaneous articles, will also be published; and such improvements will be made from time to time as circumstances shall render possible.

AGENTS.

Local Agents for THE INDEX are wanted in every city and town throughout the country. The most liberal terms are offered.

TERMS.

The price of THE INDEX is Three Dollars a year, payable in advance; and 20 cents postage for the year; and at the same rate for shorter periods. All remittances of money must be at the sender's risk, unless forwarded by cheque, registered letter, or post-office money order. The name, with address in full, must be accompanied with the money in each case.

Address THE INDEX,
 No. 231 Washington Street, Boston.

POPULAR BOOKS,

SENT BY MAIL

AT

PUBLISHERS' PRICES!

ORDERS PROMPTLY FILLED.

NO EXTRA CHARGE FOR POSTAGE.

ANY BOOK in the unjoined List, or any other OBTAINABLE BOOK that may be desired, will be forwarded as promptly as possible on receipt of orders accompanied with the CASH.

Orders are respectfully solicited from

all friends of THE INDEX.

ALLOTT (A. BRONSON). Tablets.....	1.50
Concord Days.....	1.50
Records of a School. A new edition.....	1.50
ALLOTT (LOUISE M.). Little Women. Two vols.....	2.00
Hospital Sketches and Camp and Fireside Stories.....	1.50
An Old-Fashioned Girl.....	1.50
Little Men.....	1.50
My Boys, &c.....	1.00
Shawl-Straps.....	1.00
Work; A Story of Experience.....	1.75
ARABIAN NIGHTS' ENTERTAINMENTS.....	1.50
ARNOLD'S (MATTHEW) Essays in Criticism.....	2.00
New Poems.....	2.00
Literature and Dogma.....	1.50
AUERBACH (BERTHOLD). On the Heights. Villa Eden; The Country-House on the Rhine.....	2.00
Edelweiss.....	1.00
German Tales.....	1.00
BACON'S Essays.....	1.25
BAGEHOT on the English Constitution.....	2.25
Physics and Politics.....	1.50
BAIN (ALEXANDER). Mental Science: A Compendium of Psychology and History of Philosophy.....	1.75
Moral Science: A Compendium of Ethics. 1 vol.....	1.75
The Senses and the Intellect. Third edition. 1 vol.....	5.00
BARTLETT'S Dictionary of Americanisms.....	2.50
BARTLETT'S Familiar Quotations.....	3.00
BARTOL (REV. C. A.). Radical Problems.....	2.00
The Rising Faith.....	2.00
BASTIAN (H. CHARLTON). The Beginnings of Life. 2 vols.....	5.00
BRACKETT (ANNA O.). The Education of American Girls.....	5.00
BROOKS (CHARLES T.). Translations. The Layman's Breviary.....	2.25
The World-Priest.....	2.25
The Tall Student.....	.75
BURCHEN'S Force and Matter.....	2.25
BUCKLE (HENRY THOMAS). History of Civilization in England and France, Spain and Scotland. New edition of the entire work, with a complete index. 3 vols.....	8.00
CARLYLE'S Works. Cheap edition. Comprising the following: Miscellaneous Essays, 7 vols.; French Revolution, 3 vols.; Frederick the Great, 10 vols.; Cromwell's Letters, &c., 5 vols.; Sartor Resartus, 1 vol.; John Sterling, 1 vol.; Life of Carlyle, 1 vol.; Past and Present, 1 vol.; Letters and Harp Words, 1 vol.; Latter Day Pamphlets, 1 vol. Any volume sold separately, 31 vols. London, 1871-3. Per vol.....	30
CARPENTER (DR. W. B.). The Principles of Mental Physiology, with their Applications to the Training and Discipline of the Mind, and the Study of its Morbid Conditions.....	3.00
CHERVANTES' Don Quixote.....	1.50
CHANNING (WM. ELLERY, D.D.). The Perfect Life. In Twelve Discourses. Edited from his manuscripts by his nephew, Wm. Henry Channing.....	1.50
CHANNING (WM. ELLERY). Thoreau: The Poet-Naturalist. With Memorial Verses.....	2.50
CHENEY (MRS. E. D.). Patience. A Series of Thirty Games for the Fireside. A Series of Social Games. A new Series of Games for Parties, uniform with Patience.....	1.00
Sally Williams, the Mountain Girl. Illustrated.....	1.50
CLARKE (JAMES FREEMAN). Ten Great Religions.....	3.00
Common-Sense in Religion.....	2.00
CLARKE (DR. E. H.). Sex in Education.....	1.25
CLODD (EDWARD). The Childhood of the World.....	.75
COBBE (FRANCES POWER). Studies New and Old, of Moral and Social Subjects. Darwinism in Morals, and other Essays.....	3.00
The Religious Demands of the Age.....	.50
COONWAY (MONCURE D.). The Earthward Pilgrimage.....	1.75
CORRELATION and Conservation of Forces: A Series of Expositions by Grove, Helmholtz, Mayer, Faraday, Leibig and Carpenter: with an Introduction by Edward L. Youmans, M.D. 1 vol.....	2.00
CULTURE DEMANDED BY MODERN LIFE: Its True Aims and Requirements: A Series of Addresses. By Tyndall, Huxley, Whewell, Faraday, Spencer, Draper, Masson, Lyell, etc. Edited by Edward L. Youmans.....	2.50
DALL (MRS. CAROLINE H.). The College, the Market, and the Court; or, Woman's Relation to Education, Employment, and Citizenship.....	2.00

Historical Pictures Retouched; a Volume of Miscellanies. In two parts. Part I, "Studies, Pictures, and Fancies".....	1.
DARWIN'S Origin of Species.....	3.00
The Descent of Man. 2 vols.....	4.00
Journal of Researches.....	3.00
Emotional Expression of Man and the Lower Animals.....	5.50
The Variation of Animals and Plants under Domestication. 3 vols., illustrated.....	6.00
DESCARTES (RENE). Discourse on the Method of Rightly conducting the Reason and Seeking Truth in the Sciences.....	2.25
DICKENS' Child's History of England.....	1.50
DUHRING (JULIA). Philosophers and Fools. A Study.....	2.00
ELIOT'S (GEORGE) Novels. Household Edition. 5 vols., each.....	1.00
Comprising—Adam Bede. Romola. The Mill on the Floss. Felix Holt. Silas Marner and Scenes of Clerical Life. The Same. Library Edition. 2 vols.....	3.50
Middlemarch. 3 vols.....	3.50
Wit and Wisdom of.....	1.25
The Spanish Gypsy.....	1.50
EMERSON'S (E. W.) Essays. First Series.....	1.50
Essays. Second Series.....	1.50
Miscellanies.....	1.50
Representative Men.....	1.50
English Traits.....	1.50
Conduct of Life.....	1.50
Poems. With Portrait.....	1.50
May-day and Other Pieces.....	1.50
Essays. Blue and Gold.....	1.25
Poems. Blue and Gold.....	1.25
Prose Works. 2 vols.....	5.00
Society and Solitude.....	1.50
EVANS (E. P., Ph. D.). First Historical Transformations of Christianity. From the French of Athanasius Coquerel the Younger.....	1.50
The Life and Works of Gotthold Ephraim Lessing. Translated from the German of Adolf Bahr. 3 vols.....	5.00
FARRAR'S Critical History of Free Thought, in reference to the Christian Religion.....	1.00
FEUERBACH (LUDWIG). The Essence of Christianity. "George Eliot's" translation.....	3.00
FISKE'S (JOHN) Myths and Myth-Makers.....	2.00
Cosmic Philosophy.....	6.00
FROTHINGHAM (O. B.) Religion of Humanity.....	1.50
Child's Book of Religion.....	1.00
Life of Theodore Parker.....	3.00
FULLER'S (MARGARET) Complete Works, including Memoirs by Emerson, Channing, and others. A new edition. 6 vols.....	9.00
GALTON (FRANÇOIS). Hereditary Genius. An Inquiry into its Laws and Consequences.....	2.00
GOETHE'S Faust. Translated into English Verse by Bayard Taylor. 2 vols. Per vol.....	5.00
Elective Affinities.....	1.25
Wilhelm Meister. Translated by Thomas Carlyle. Portrait of Goethe. 2 vols.....	2.00
Herman and Dorothea. Translated by Ellen Frothingham.....	1.00
GREG'S (W. B.) Enigmas of Life.....	2.00
Literary and Social Judgments.....	2.00
Creed of Christendom.....	7.00
GRÖTE'S LIFE. Compiled from Family Documents, Private Memoranda, and Original Letters to and from Various Friends. By Mrs. Grote. Second Edition. With Portrait.....	8.00
HAMERTON (PHILIP G.) A Painter's Camp. Book I. In England. Book II. In Scotland. Book III. In France.....	1.50
Thoughts about Art.....	2.00
The Unknown River.....	6.00
The Intellectual Life.....	2.00
Chapters on Animals.....	4.00
HAMILTON (GAIL). Child World. Part Second.....	1.00
Child World. Part First.....	1.50
HAMILTON'S Lectures.....	2.50
1. Metaphysical Lectures.....	2.50
2. Logical Lectures.....	2.50
HAWTHORNE'S (NATHANIEL) Works. New Illustrated Library Edition. Nine vols. Per vol.....	2.00
Twice-Told Tales.....	2.00
Mosses from an Old Manse.....	2.00
The Scarlet Letter, and The Blithedale Romance.....	2.00
The House of the Seven Gables, and The Snow Image.....	2.00
The Marble Faun.....	2.00
The English Note-Books.....	2.00
The American Note-Books.....	2.00
The French and Italian Note-Books.....	2.00
Our Old Home, and Septimus Felton.....	2.00
HIGGINSON'S (T. W.) Out-Door Papers.....	1.50
Malbone. An Old Port Romance.....	1.50
Army Life in a Black Regiment.....	1.50
Atlantic Essays.....	2.00
Oldport Days.....	2.50
HOWELL'S (WILLIAM D.) Their Wedding Journey.....	2.00
Suburban Sketches.....	2.00
Venetian Life.....	2.00
Italian Journeys.....	2.00
A Chance Acquaintance.....	1.50
HUGO'S (V.) New Novel, "Ninety-Three".....	1.75
HUMBOLDT (ALEXANDER VON). Life of. Translated from the German. 3 vols., with three portraits.....	10.00
HUME'S (DAVID) Essays and Life.....	1.50
HUNT'S (MRS. HELEN). Verses.....	1.25
Bits of Travel.....	1.50
HUXLEY'S Man's Place in Nature.....	1.25
On the Origin of Species.....	1.00
More Criticisms on Darwin and Administrative Nihilism.....	.50
A Manual of the Anatomy of Vertebrated Animals.....	2.50
Lay Sermons, Addresses, and Reviews.....	1.75
INGELW'S (JEAN) Poems.....	2.25
The Monitions of the Unseen.....	1.50
Songs of Seven.....	2.50
INGELW'S (JEAN) Prose. On the Skeelges.....	1.75
Stories told to a Child. First and Second Series.....	1.25
A Sister's Bye-Hours.....	1.25
A Sister's Fair: A Story.....	1.25
INGERSOLL'S (ROBT. G.) The Gods and Other Lectures.....	2.00
INTERNATIONAL SCIENTIFIC SERIES. No. 1. Forms of Water, in Clouds, Rain, Rivers, Ice, and Glaciers. By John Tyndall.....	1.50
No. 2. Physics and Politics; or, Thoughts on the Application of the Principles of "Natural Selection," and "Inheritance" to Political Society. By Walter Bagehot.....	1.50

III. Foods. By Dr. Edward Smith.....	1.75
IV. Mind and Body. The Theories of their Relations. By Alex. Bain.....	1.50
V. The Study of Sociology. By Herbert Spencer, Esq.....	1.50
VI. The New Chemistry. By Josiah P. Cooke, Jr.....	3.00
VII. The Conservation of Energy. By Balfour Stewart, with an Appendix, treating of the Vital and Mental Applications of the Doctrine.....	1.50
VIII. Animal Locomotion; or, Walking, Swimming, and Flying, with a Dissertation on Aeronautics. By J. Bell Pettigrew.....	1.75
IX. Responsibility in Mental Disease. By Henry Maudsley, M.D.....	1.50
JERROLD (DOUGLAS). Fireside Saints, Mr. Claude's Breakfast Talk, and other Papers.....	1.50
JOHNSON'S (SAMUEL) Oriental Religions, and their Relation to Universal Religion. India.....	3.00
JOSEPHUS. The whole Works of Flavius Josephus, the Jewish Historian.....	2.50
JOWETT. The Dialogues of Plato. Translated into English, with Analysis and Introductions. By J. Jowett, M.A., Master of Balliol College, Oxford, and Regius Professor of Greek.....	12.00
KEER (ORPHEUS O.). Versatilities, Poems, Patriotic, Sentimental and Humorous.....	2.00
LEBOY (W. E. H.) History of the Rise and Influence of the Spirit of Rationalism in Europe. 3 vols.....	4.00
History of European Morale from Augustine to Charlemagne. 2 vols.....	6.00
LEGGE'S Confucius' Life and Teachings.....	4.00
Confucius and Chinese Classics.....	2.00
LESSING'S (G. E.) Nathan the Wise. Translated by Ellen Frothingham.....	1.50
LEWIS' Physiology of Common Life. 2 vols.....	2.00
Biographical History of Philosophy, from its Origin in Greece down to the Present Day. 3 vols.....	1.00
Problems of Life and Mind. The Foundations of a Creed.....	3.00
LEWES (G. E.) The Story of Goethe's Life.....	1.50
LEWIN (REV. RAPHAEL D'O.). What is Judaism? or, a Few Words to the Jews.....	1.00
LONGFELLOW'S (H. W.) Poems. Portrait. 1 vol.....	4.00
Prose Works. Portrait.....	4.00
LOWELL'S (J. R.) Poems. 2 vols.....	4.00
The Biglow Papers. First Series.....	1.50
The Biglow Papers. Second Series.....	1.50
Among my Books.....	2.00
My Study Windows.....	2.00
LOWELL (MRS. A. O.) Poems for Children.....	.75
LUBBOCK (SIR JOHN). Origin of Civilization, and the Primitive Condition of Man. Pre-historic Times.....	2.00
LYELL'S Principles of Geology. 2 vols.....	6.00
MACDONALD (GEORGE) The Vicar's Daughter.....	1.50
MANN (HORACE). The Life of Horace Mann. By his Wife.....	2.00
Lectures and Annual Reports on Education. Annual Reports on Education, from 1839 to 1848.....	2.00
Thoughts Selected from the Writings of Horace Mann.....	1.25
MARTINEAU (JAMES) Essays, Philosophical and Theological. 2 vols. Per vol.....	2.50
MAURION (REV. F. D.) The Ground and Object of Hope for Mankind.....	.75
MERIVALE'S (CHARLES) Conversion of the Roman Empire.....	1.25
Conversion of the Northern Nations.....	1.50
MILL (JOHN STUART). Dissertations and Discussions. 4 vols., each.....	3.25
The Examination of the Philosophy of Sir William Hamilton. 2 vols., each.....	1.25
The Positive Philosophy of Auguste Comte.....	1.50
Political Economy. New and revised edition.....	2.50
The Subjection of Women—Essay on Liberty—both in one vol.....	2.50
Representative Government.....	1.00
Autobiography.....	2.25
Memorial Volume. His Life and Works.....	1.50
Three Essays on Religion.....	2.50
MILLER (JOAQUIN) Songs of the Sierras.....	1.50
Songs of the Sun Land.....	1.50
MIVART (ST. GEO.) On the Genesis of Species.....	1.75
MORLEY (PROF. JOHN). Voltaire.....	3.00
Rousseau, 2 vols.....	5.00
MOULTON (LOUISE CHANDLER). Bed-Time Stories.....	1.50
MUELLER (MAX, M.A.) Lectures on the Science of Language. First Series.....	2.50
The Same. Second Series.....	5.50
Chips from a German Workshop. Vol. I. Essays on the Science of Religion. Vol. II. Essays on Mythology, Traditions, and Customs. Vol. III. Essays on Literature, Biography and Antiquities.....	2.50
Three vols. Price per volume.....	3.00
Lectures on the Science of Religion.....	3.00
NABBY (PETROLEUM V.) Swingin' Round the Circle.....	1.50
Hickoe from Kentucky.....	1.50
NEWMAN (FRANÇOIS W.) A History of the Hebrew Monarchy.....	4.50
Catholic Union: Essays towards a Church of the Future, as the Organization of Philanthropy.....	1.75
Theism, Doctrinal and Practical.....	4.25
PARKER (THEODORE) A Discourse of Masters Pertaining to Religion.....	1.50
Speeches, Addresses, and Occasional Sermons. 3 vols.....	4.50
Additional Speeches, Addresses, and Occasional Sermons. 2 vols.....	3.00
Critical and Miscellaneous Writings.....	1.50
Historic Americans—Franklin, Washington, Adams, and Jefferson. With an Introduction by Rev. O. B. Frothingham.....	1.50
The two Christmas Celebrations. A.D. 1 and MDCCLV. A Christmas Story.....	.50
PARSONS (THEOPHILUS) The Infinite and the Finite.....	1.00
PHELPS'S (ELIZABETH STUART) The Gates Ajar.....	1.50
The Trotty Book.....	1.50
Men, Women, and Ghosts.....	1.50
Hedged In.....	1.50
The Silent Partner.....	1.50
What to Wear?.....	1.00
PROCTER'S (ADELAIDE A.) Poems. Portrait. Cabinet Edition.....	2.00

PROCTON (RICHARD A.) Other Worlds than Ours: the Plurality of Worlds suggested under the Light of Recent Scientific Researches. With Colored Plates.....	2.50
Light Science for Leisure Hours. A Series of Familiar Essays on Scientific Subjects, Natural Phenomena.....	1.75
Essays on Astronomy: A Series of Papers on Planets and Meteors, the Sun, &c., With 10 Plates and 24 Woodcuts.....	4.00
The Moon, her Motions, Aspects, Sonnet, and Physical Conditions, with Three Lunar Photographs and many Plates, Charts, etc.....	5.00
The Expanse of Heaven.....	2.50
RENNAN'S Life of Jesus.....	1.75
ROSSETTI (CHRISTINA G.) A Shadow of Dante.....	2.50
SOHELLER (H.) Spectrum Analysis, in its Application to Terrestrial Substances, and the Physical Constitution of the Heavenly Bodies.....	5.00
SCIENCE PRIMERS: 1. Introductory. By Prof. Huxley, F.R.S.....	.50
2. Chemistry. By Prof. Huxley.....	.50
3. Physics. By Balfour Stewart. With Illustrations.....	.50
4. Physical Geography. By Archibald Geikie, LL.D., F.R.S., F.G.S., F.G.S., F.G.S.....	.50
SCOTT'S (THOMAS) The English Life of Jesus. Second Edition.....	2.50
SMILES'S (SAMUEL) Self-Help.....	1.50
SPENCER (HERBERT) Education, Intellectual, Moral, and Physical.....	1.25
First Principles.....	2.25
Essays: Moral, Political, and Aesthetic. Illustrations of Universal Progress. A Selection of his best Papers.....	2.50
Social Statics; or, The Conditions Essential to Human Happiness Specified, and the First of them Developed.....	1.50
The Principles of Biology. 2 vols.....	5.00
The Principles of Psychology. 2 vols.....	5.00
Philosophy of Style.....	.50
Recent Discussions in Science, Philosophy, and Morals. New and enlarged edition.....	2.50
Sociology.....	1.50
Descriptive Sociology. Parts I, II, and III, each.....	4.00
Life, Correspondence and Ethics.....	2.50
Universal Progress.....	2.50
STOWE (HARRIET BEECHER) Fink and White Tyranny.....	1.50
Uncle Tom's Cabin.....	.50
STRAUSS (D. F.) The Old Faith and the New.....	1.00
New Life of Jesus. Authorized translation. 2 vols.....	12.00
TAINES'S (H. A.) History of English Literature. 2 vols.....	7.50
The Old Room Taines. History of English Literature. Abridged and Edited by John Fluke.....	2.50
TENNYSON'S (ALFRED) Poems.....	1.75
THACKERAY'S (W. M.) Novels. Household Edition. Complete in 6 volumes. Per vol.....	1.25
Vanity Fair.....	1.25
The Newcomes.....	1.25
Adventures of Philip.....	1.25
Pendennis.....	1.25
The Virginians.....	1.25
Esmond, and Lord the Widower.....	1.25
Miscellaneous Writings. Household Edition. Uniform with the Novels. Complete in 5 vols. With new Portrait. Per vol.....	2.50
This edition includes all the matter in the latest English editions, with many additions, thus making it, with the novels, the cheapest and most complete Thackeray in the market. 1. Barry Lyndon, Hogarty Diamond, &c. 2. Paris, and Irish Sketch-Books, &c. 3. Snobs, Sketches, Denis Duval, &c. 4. Four Georges, Humors, &c. 5. Catherine, Christmas Books, and Unreprinted Pieces.....	2.50
THAXTER'S (MRS. CELIA) Among the Isles of Shoals.....	1.50
THOREAU'S (H. D.) Walden; or, Life in the Woods.....	2.00
Excursions in Field and Forest.....	2.00
The Maine Woods.....	2.00
Cape Cod.....	2.00
Letters.....	2.00
A Yankee in Canada.....	2.00
A Week on the Concord and Merrimack Rivers.....	2.00
TYLER (EDWARD B.) The Early History of Mankind.....	2.50
Primitive Culture. 2 vols.....	5.00
TYNDALL (JOHN). Faraday as a Discoverer.....	1.00
Fragments of Science for Students.....	1.00
Light and Electricity.....	2.50
Hours of Exercise in the Alps.....	1.25
Heat as a Mode of Motion.....	2.00
On Sound.....	2.00
Electric Heat.....	5.00
Forms of Water.....	1.50
Lectures on Light.....	1.50
Proceedings at the Farwell Banquet to Prof. Tyndall.....	.50
Lessons in Electricity.....	1.00
Address before British Assoc'n at Belfast.....	.50
TYTLER (SARAH) Old Masters and their Pictures.....	1.50
Modern Painters and their Paintings.....	1.50
VOYSEY (REV. CHARLES) The Sling and the Stone. Vols. I and V, each.....	2.00
Vols. II, IV, and VI, each.....	2.75
WARNER'S (CHARLES D.) My Summer in a Garden.....	1.50
Baunters.....	1.50
Back-Log Studies.....	2.50
WEISS (JOHN) American Religion.....	1.50
Life of Theodore Parker. 2 vols.....	6.00
WHIPPLE'S (E. P.) Literature and Life.....	1.50
Essays and Reviews.....	1.50
Character and Characteristic Men.....	1.50
The Literature of the Age of Elizabeth.....	1.50
Success and its Conditions.....	1.50
Washington and the Revolution.....	.50
WHITNEY'S (MRS. A. D. T.) A Summer in Leslie Goldthwaite's Life.....	1.50
We Girls: A Home Story.....	1.50
Real Folk: A Home Story.....	1.50
The Other Girls.....	1.50
Fancies. A volume of Poems.....	1.50
WHITTIER'S (JOHN G.) Poems. 1 vol.....	1.50
Child Life.....	1.50

ADDRESS:

THE INDEX

321 Washington St., Boston.

$66 a week in your own town. Terms and $5 outfit free. Address H. HALLETT & Co., Portland, Maine.

$5 to $20 per day at home. Samples worth $5 free. Address STINSON & Co., Portland, Maine.

GOLD Any worker can make $12 a day at home. Costly Outfit free. Address TRUB & Co., Augusta, Maine.

CLARK & CO.,
281 Washington St., Boston, Mass.,

Attend to the collection of claims in all parts of the United States and Canada.
Send for scale of charges.

E. A. SAWTELLE,
PIANO-FORTE-TUNER.

Fifteen years' experience. Satisfaction warranted. Organs skillfully tuned and regulated. Orders left at THE INDEX office, or at Oliver Ditson & Co.'s, 451 Washington St., Boston.

WEST NEWTON

English and Classical School.
The twenty-fifth school year of this Family and Day School for both sexes will begin WEDNESDAY, Sept. 19, 1877. For Circular and information apply to
NATH'L T. ALLEN,
West Newton, Mass.

THE INDEX AS AN
ADVERTISING MEDIUM.

Testimony of one who has tried it.
FLORENCE, Iowa, Jan. 5, 1878.
... THE INDEX is the best advertising medium which I have tried.
E. C. WALKER.

PHOTOGRAPHS OF
COL. INGERSOLL!

Down to hard times prices. Cards, 15 cents each; 2 for 25 cents; 5 for 50 cents. Cabinet size, 35 cents each; 2 for 50 cents. Send stamp for club list of Free Thought and Scientific papers.
E. C. WALKER,
Lock-Box B, Florence, Iowa

THE BEST PORTRAIT OF
THOMAS PAINE.

Engraved by the famous W. Sharpe from Romney's celebrated portrait—

Heliotype Copy
by James R. Osgood & Co., of Boston. This is a beautiful work of art, and by all odds the very best likeness of Thomas Paine to be found. It is 10 1/2 inches in size, and will be mailed post-paid on receipt of $1.00. Address THE INDEX, 231 Washington Street, Boston.

RADICAL FREETHOUGHT
LECTURES for 1878.
By B. F. UNDERWOOD.

Festive and Constructive Lectures:

1. The Demands of Liberalism.
2. The Positive Side of Free Thought.
3. The Genesis and Nature of Religion, Considered as an "Element of Human Nature."
4. A Scientific and Philosophic View of Religious Revivals.
5. Christianity and Civilization.
6. The Triumphs of Liberalism.
7. What Liberalism offers in the Place of the Christian Theology.
8. A True Man Better than a True Christian.
9. Judaism and Christianity Outgrowths of Preexistent Heathenism.
10. Origin and History of the Bible. (From one to six lectures.)
11. Buddha and Buddhism.
12. Ancient Egypt: Her Laws, Morality, and Religion.
13. The Theory of Evolution.
14. Darwinism: Its Principles Stated and Defended.
15. Natural Selection versus Design in Nature.
16. The Philosophy of Herbert Spencer.
17. Modern Scientific Materialism.
18. Instinct and Intuition: Organized Experiences of the Race.
19. Woman: Her Past and Present, Her Rights and Wrongs.
20. Paine. The Pioneer of Freethought in America.
21. The French Revolution: Its Causes and Consequences.

Critical Lectures:

22. The Fallacies of Rev. Joseph Cook regarding the Personality and Being of God.
23. Cook's Criticisms of Scientific Materialism examined.
24. Why I am an "Unbeliever."
25. Christianity and Intellectual Progress.
26. The Four Gospels Unhistorical and Unreliable.
27. The Evidences for the Divinity of the Bible examined.
28. Popular Assumptions Regarding the Bible and Christianity.
29. Popular Objection to Infidelity Answered.
30. The Crimes and Cruelties of Catholic and Protestant Christianity.
31. Bible Prophecies Falsified by the Facts of History.
32. The Proofs of a Personal Intelligent Deity examined.
33. The Pros and Cons of a Future State.

For terms, etc., address
B. F. UNDERWOOD,
Thorndike, Mass.

GIRLS' nice perforated mottoes for fancy work 10 cts. J. W. RUSSELL, Newton, Mass.

MADAME FOY'S
CORSET SKIRT SUPPORTER

Increases in Popularity every year, And for HEALTH, COMFORT, and STYLE is acknowledged the BEST ARTICLE of the kind ever made. For sale by all leading jobbers and retailers. Beware of imitations and infringements.

MANUFACTURED SOLELY BY
FOY & HARMON,
New Haven, Conn.

NEWSUBSCRIBERS WANTED.
—
PREMIUMS

For NEW SUBSCRIBERS—$3.20 to be remitted in advance with each name sent in.

For One New Subscriber.
Either a complete set of Index Tracts; a bound copy of the Report of the "Centennial Congress of Liberals" at Philadelphia, July 4, 1876; any three Reports of the "Annual Meetings of the Free Religious Association" since 1871; Huxley's Origin of Species; John W. Chadwick's Book of Poems; or any obtainable book not costing over $1.

For Two New Subscribers.
Either a set of photographs of "leading Index writers"; a copy of Ingersoll's Letters; a copy of Freedom and Fellowship in Religion—a collection of Essays and Addresses by O. B. Frothingham, W. J. Potter, John Weiss, T. W. Higginson, F. E. Abbot, and others; Darwin's Origin of Species; Draper's Conflict between Religion and Science; Huxley's Lay Sermons; a bound copy of THE INDEX for 1871 or 1872; Renan's Life of Jesus; or any obtainable book not costing over $2.

For Three New Subscribers.
Either Longfellow's or Bryant's complete Poetical Works (illustrated); Darwin's Descent of Man; Tyndall's Fragments of Science; Lewes' Physical Basis of Mind; Frothingham's Transcendentalism in New England; Shakespeare's Complete Works; Frothingham's Life of Theodore Parker; or any obtainable book not costing over $3.

For Five New Subscribers.
Either Pierce's Memoirs and Letters of Charles Sumner; Emerson's Prose Works; Buckle's History of Civilization; Spencer's Psychology; Humboldt's Cosmos; Fluke's Cosmic Philosophy; Johnson's Oriental Religions. Vol. I., on "India"; Vol. II., on "China"; or any other obtainable book not costing over $5.

For Ten New Subscribers.
Either Webster's or Worcester's Dictionary (unabridged); Longfellow's Complete Works (300 illustrations, full gilt); either Dickens' or Waverley Novels, complete in six volumes, and illustrated; Strauss' New Life of Jesus; or any other book or books not costing over $12.

Address THE INDEX, 231 Washington Street, Boston.

FROTHINGHAM'S WORKS.

THE RELIGION OF HUMANITY. An Essay. Third Edition—Revised. Price $1.50.

"Nobody can peruse this book without respect for the learning, mental honesty and skill in the statement of his convictions, possessed by the author, and for the essential integrity and philanthropic tendency of his spirit."—Springfield Republican.

"A profoundly sincere book, the work of one who has read largely, studied thoroughly, reflected patiently. . . . It is a model of scholarly culture and of finished and vigorous style."—Boston Globe.

THE CHILD'S BOOK OF RELIGION. For Sunday-schools and Homes. Price $1.00.

THE SAFEST CREED, AND OTHER DISCOURSES. 12mo, Cloth, $1.50.

Not "food for babes," but full of suggestion for earnest and thoughtful men.

STORIES FROM THE LIPS OF THE TEACHER. With Frontispiece. Cloth, $1.00.

"The Parables are so re-told as to absorb the attention of the reader, and to fasten upon the mind what the writer believes to have been the impression the Saviour meant to convey. It is in style and thought a superior book, and will interest alike young and old."—Zion's Herald (Methodist).

STORIES OF THE PATRIARCHS. With Frontispiece. Cloth, $1.00.

"A work of culture and taste; it will be welcome to all ages, and gives the sublimest lessons of manhood in the simple language of a child."—Springfield Republican.

BELIEFS OF THE UNBELIEVERS. A Lecture. 12mo, Cloth, $1.00.

TRANSCENDENTALISM IN NEW ENGLAND. A History. With sketches and studies of Emerson, Alcott, Parker, Margaret Fuller, the Brook Farm Community, etc. 8vo, Cloth extra, with steel portrait of the author, $2.50.

THE LIFE OF THEODORE PARKER. 8vo. With Portrait, $3.00.

The New York Tribune closes a four and a half column review of this book by saying: "It holds up a remarkable specimen of robust manliness whose form and lineaments can be studied with equal advantage by friend and foe."

THE CRADLE OF THE CHRIST. A Study in Primitive Christianity, illustrating the prime importance of the Messianic Idea in the New Testament, as the key to the development of Christianity from Judaism. Octavo, Cloth, $1.75.

Mailed, post-paid, on receipt of price, by THE INDEX 231 Washington St., Boston.

MISS DEVEREUX' BOARDING AND DAY SCHOOL FOR YOUNG LADIES AND CHILDREN, at Irvington-on-Hudson, will re-open on Monday, Sept. 17, 1877. Miss Devereux refers, among others, to the following gentlemen: Rev. Orville Dewey, Sheffield, Mass.; Mr. A. C. Richards, Irvington, N.Y.; Mr. H. R. Bishop, Irvington, N.Y.; Mr. John E. Williams, Pres. Met. Nat. Bank, N.Y.; Mr. Wm. H. Orton, Pres. W. U. Telegraph Co., N.Y.; Mr. Moses H. Grinnell, N.Y.

POSITIVISM!
AN EPITOME OF THE Positive Philosophy and Religion,

Published by the Society of Humanity in the city of New York, contains the clearest statement of the subject ever made; also, Harriet Martineau's masterly defence of her religious convictions; and the Positive Classification of the Sciences, by T. B. Wakeman, etc., etc.

Send for it (enclosing 25 cents in postage stamps) to

HUGH BYRON BROWN,
President of the Society,
No. 141 8th St., N.Y. City.

LECTURES AND SERMONS.

BY
JOHN W. CHADWICK.

THIRD SERIES.

1. The Simplicity of True Religion.
2. The Rising Faith.
3. Fate and Freedom.
4. The Child Jesus.
5. The Angel Song.

The following numbers of the first and second series can also be supplied: Best Use of Sunday, Higher Reverence, Self-Respect, God on Our Side, Economy and Waste, Misery of Modern Science, Immortal Life, Moral Aspects of Belief in Immortality, Identifying the Real, The Coming Man, A Rational Church.

Send to any address, postage paid, at 5 cents per copy, by

JAMES MILLER,
779 Broadway, New York.

A NOTABLE TREATISE.
WOMAN SUFFRAGE.

THE COUNTERFEIT AND THE TRUE:

Reasons for Opposing Both.

BY

REAR-ADMIRAL MAXSE,

Of the British Royal Navy.

This is a little book of 74 pages, with neat paper covers, published in London, and presenting the reasons why a cultivated English gentleman is opposed to Woman Suffrage. It ought to be read and pondered by all who are interested in that question, on either side. Price, 25 cents. For sale at the office of THE INDEX, 231 Washington St., Boston.

GOOD PHOTOGRAPHS

OF

O. B. FROTHINGHAM,

T. W. HIGGINSON,

W. J. POTTER,

W. H. SPENCER,

F. W. NEWMAN,

CHAS. VOYSEY,

A. W. STEVENS,

R. H. RANNEY,

F. E. ABBOT,

Are now for sale at the office of THE INDEX, and will be mailed postpaid to any address on receipt of price. Single Photographs, 25 cents each; complete Set of Nine Photographs, $1.50.

Address, THE INDEX,
No. 231 Washington St., Boston, Mass.

FREE RELIGIOUS ASSOCIATION.

Send to Office at 231 Washington St., Boston, Mass., for

TRACTS.

I. TAXATION OF CHURCH PROPERTY, by James Parton. 5 cts.; ten, 20 cts.; one hundred, $1.50.

II. THE BIBLE AND SCIENCE, by John Weiss.

III. THE SYMPATHY OF RELIGIONS, by T. W. Higginson. Enlarged edition.

IV. TRANSCENDENTALISM, by Theodore Parker. Never before published.

V. THE PUBLIC SCHOOL QUESTION, as understood by a Catholic American citizen (Bishop McQuaid) and by a Liberal American citizen (F. E. Abbot). (Two Horticultural Hall Lectures, Feb. 18 and 20, 1876.)

VI. HOW SHALL WE KEEP SUNDAY? An Answer in Four Parts: 1. Sunday in the Bible. 2. Sunday in Church History. 3. Sunday in the Massachusetts Laws. 4. The Workingman's Sunday. By Charles E. Whipple, Minot J. Savage, Charles E. Pratt, and Wm. C. Gannett.

Nos. II., III., IV., V., VI., 10 cts. each; ten for 90 cts.; one hundred, $8.

REASON AND REVELATION, by W. J. Potter. 5 cts. (Ten for 30 cts.; one hundred, $1.50.)

PROCEEDINGS OF THE F. R. A. ANNUAL MEETINGS FOR 1872, '73, '74, '75, '76, and '77. Five cents each.

FREEDOM AND FELLOWSHIP IN RELIGION, a volume of essays and addresses representing the F. R. A. platform. $1.50.

SEND ONE DOLLAR

For a handsome Certificate of Membership as an

ANNUAL MEMBER
of the NATIONAL LIBERAL LEAGUE.

For TWENTY-FIVE DOLLARS, a still larger Certificate of Membership as a

LIFE MEMBER,

Will be sent to any person; and individuals cannot render more efficient assistance to the National Liberal League than by making themselves Annual or Life Members of it.

The following extracts from the Constitution of the National Liberal League explain the privileges of membership:—

ARTICLE IV.—Any person who shall pay one dollar into the treasury shall be entitled to a certificate, signed by the President and Secretary, as an annual member of the National Liberal League. Any person who shall pay twenty-five dollars or more into the treasury shall be entitled to a similar certificate as a life-member. All the persons present as members at the Centennial Congress of Liberals, at which this Constitution was adopted, are hereby declared permanent or charter-members of the National Liberal League.

ARTICLE V.—All charter-members and life-members of the National Liberal League, and all duly accredited delegates from local auxiliary Liberal Leagues organized in accordance with the provisions of this Constitution, shall be entitled to seats and votes in the Annual Congress. Annual members of the National Liberal League shall be entitled to seats, but not to votes, in the Annual Congress.

Address NATIONAL LIBERAL LEAGUE,
231 Washington Street, Boston.

ORGANIZE!

CHARTERS

For Local Auxiliary Liberal Leagues, conferring the privilege of representation by five delegates in the Annual Congress of the National Liberal League, will be promptly sent on application, according to the following provisions of Constitution of the same:—

LOCAL AUXILIARY LIBERAL LEAGUES.

ARTICLE XIII.—The Board of Directors shall have authority, as often as they receive a written application signed by ten or more persons and accompanied by ten dollars, to issue a charter for the formation of a local auxiliary Liberal League.

ARTICLE XIV.—Local auxiliary Liberal Leagues organized under charters issued by the Board of Directors shall be absolutely independent in the administration of their own local affairs. The effect of their charters shall be simply to unite them in cordial fellowship and efficient cooperation of the freest kind with the National Liberal League and with other local Leagues. All votes of the Annual Congress, and all communications of the Board of Directors, shall possess no more authority or influence over them than lies in the intimate wisdom of the words themselves.

ARTICLE XVI.—Every local auxiliary Liberal League organized in accordance with the provisions of this Constitution shall be entitled to send its President and Secretary and three other members as delegates to the Annual Congress.

These Charters are beautifully printed on the best of paper. Adorned with the handsome Seal of the National Liberal League, they will, if tastefully framed, make a fine ornament for any hall.

Address NATIONAL LIBERAL LEAGUE
231 Washington Street, Boston.

CIRCULATE IT
EVERYWHERE!

The new Liberal League Tract of 24 pages, entitled,

"PATRIOTIC ADDRESS,"

contains:

1. PATRIOTIC ADDRESS of the National Liberal League to the people of the United States.
2. CHIEF RESOLUTIONS of the League.
3. PROMOTER of the League against shutting the International Exhibition on Sundays.
4. CONSTITUTION and List of Officers.
5. EXTRACTS from Approving Letters by Distinguished Citizens.

This is the Liberal's best CAMPAIGN DOCUMENT in the great impending contest over amending the Constitution of the United States with reference to the school question. It should be in the hands of EVERY VOTER, and has been published expressly for gratuitous distribution by earnest friends of State Secularization.

Local Liberal Leagues

Cannot do better than to order this Tract by the quantity, as an excellent auxiliary in their local agitation.

INDIVIDUAL LIBERALS

Cannot do better than to use them privately, as opportunity offers.

Promptly mailed, at the bare cost of paper, press-work, and postage, on the following terms:—

TEN COPIES,	15
TWENTY-FIVE COPIES,	40
FIFTY "	75
ONE HUNDRED "	1.50
TWO HUNDRED "	2.50
THREE HUNDRED "	3.50
FIVE HUNDRED "	5.00
ONE THOUSAND "	12.00

N. B.—Packages of over 100 copies will be sent by express at the expense of the purchaser, without any charge for postage.

Address NATIONAL LIBERAL LEAGUE
231 Washington Street, Boston.

The Index.

Three Dollars a Year.

LIBERTY AND LIGHT.

Single Copies Seven Cents.

VOLUME 9.

BOSTON, MASS., THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 7, 1878.

WHOLE No. 424.

NATIONAL LIBERAL LEAGUE.

PLATFORM

For the Presidential Election of 1880,

(ADOPTED AT ROCHESTER, N.Y., OCT. 26, 1877.)

1. TOTAL SEPARATION OF CHURCH AND STATE, to be guaranteed by amendment of the United States Constitution: including the equitable taxation of church property, secularization of the public schools, abrogation of Sabbatarian laws, abolition of chaplaincies, prohibition of public appropriations for religious purposes, and all other measures necessary to the same general end.

2. NATIONAL PROTECTION FOR NATIONAL CITIZENS, in their equal civil, political, and religious rights: to be guaranteed by amendment of the United States Constitution, and afforded through the United States courts.

3. UNIVERSAL EDUCATION THE BASIS OF UNIVERSAL SUFFRAGE IN THIS SECULAR REPUBLIC: to be guaranteed by amendment of the United States Constitution, requiring every State to maintain a thoroughly secularized public school system, and to permit no child within its limits to grow up without a good elementary education.

N. B.—The nomination of candidates upon the above platform was postponed to a future Congress of the National Liberal League.

THE DEMANDS OF LIBERALISM.

1. We demand that churches and other ecclesiastical property shall no longer be exempt from just taxation.

2. We demand that the employment of chaplains in Congress, in State Legislatures, in the navy and militia, and in prisons, asylums, and all other institutions supported by public money, shall be discontinued.

3. We demand that all public appropriations for educational and charitable institutions of a sectarian character shall cease.

4. We demand that all religious services now sustained by the government shall be abolished; and especially that the use of the Bible in the public schools, whether ostensibly as a text-book or avowedly as a book of religious worship, shall be prohibited.

5. We demand that the appointment, by the President of the United States or by the Governors of the various States, of all religious festivals and fairs shall wholly cease.

6. We demand that the judicial oath in the courts and in all other departments of the government shall be abolished, and that simple affirmation under the pains and penalties of perjury shall be established in its stead.

7. We demand that all laws directly or indirectly enforcing the observance of Sunday as the Sabbath shall be repealed.

8. We demand that all laws looking to the enforcement of "Christian" morality shall be abrogated, and that all laws shall be conformed to the requirements of natural morality, equal rights, and impartial liberty.

9. We demand that not only in the Constitutions of the United States and of the several States, but also in the practical administration of the same, no privilege or advantage shall be conceded to Christianity or any other special religion; that our entire political system shall be founded and administered on a purely secular basis; and that whatever changes shall prove necessary to this end shall be consistently, unflinchingly, and promptly made.

The above is the platform of THE INDEX, so far as the editor is individually concerned. But no other person, and no organization, can be justly or truthfully held responsible for it without his or its explicit approval.

FRANCIS M. ABBOT.

RESOLUTION

ADOPTED BY THE NATIONAL LIBERAL LEAGUE, AT PHILADELPHIA, JULY 3, 1876.

Resolved, That we accept the offer of the Boston INDEX to be our official organ of communication with the public, for the publication of announcements, acknowledgments, and other official papers of the Board of Directors; but that we assume no responsibility for anything else published in its columns and claim no control or influence in its general editorial management.

GLIMPSES.

"I AM SURE," said Professor O. C. Marsh at Nashville, "I need offer here no argument for Evolution; since to doubt Evolution to-day is to doubt science, and science is only another name for truth."

Miss ELLEN M. WRIGHT will give an entertainment at Paine Hall, Friday evening, February 8, at 7½ P. M., consisting of imitations of celebrated actresses and some eccentric characters, for the benefit of the Hall.

"DURING a recent court-martial in Oregon," says the New York Evening Post of January 11, "the evidence of Colonel Cuvier Grover, brother of Senator Grover, of Oregon, was ruled out because of his expressed unbelief in a God."

IN SOME PLACES the Catholic laity are growing pleasingly rebellious to their priests on the school question: "A conflict over the school question has broken out at Newport between the Roman Catholic priests and some of their parishioners, because the latter, disregarding the injunctions of their spiritual guides, send their children to the public school, on account of the manifest inferiority of the Roman Catholic school. The priests retaliate by refusing these people the privilege of the confessional, and there is great dissatisfaction and complaint."

THE NEW HAVEN school question is settled exactly right, at least for the present: "Some time ago, the Board of Education of New Haven adopted the recommendation of its Committee on Schools and discontinued religious exercises in the public schools. Some excitement was created by this. Remonstrances and approvals numerous were presented. Friday evening the Committee on Schools, to which these were referred, presented a long report, in which they maintain the position they first took. This report was adopted by the Board. Three members of the Board presented a minority report. Both reports were ordered to be printed."

REV. S. P. PUTNAM, whose name is familiar to readers of THE INDEX, has published through G. P. Putnam's Sons, of New York, a striking poem entitled Prometheus. As a poem, it is not without faults of execution, though it is full of beauties and breathes the true poetic spirit; but, as a meditation on the great problem of duty, it is a remarkable production. No single quotation would do it justice; it must be studied and pondered as a whole in order to perceive or feel its power. No thoughtful and aspiring nature, capable of sympathy with a poetical interpretation of the eternal struggle of humanity towards its ideal, can fail, we think, to be deeply impressed with this little work. It is well worth buying and reading.

A "COUNTRY PARSON" writes to the New York Tribune that, if Congress coins a silver dollar worth ninety cents, he hopes they will "have the grace not to put 'In God we trust' on it," since Deuteronomy, xxv., 13, 15, declares: "Thou shalt not have in thy bag divers weights, a great and a small; but thou shalt have a perfect and just weight," etc. On the contrary, Congress ought to put that motto on this coin and no other, since it would mean, "Here are ninety cents—you must trust in God for the balance." Such an inscription as the latter would be in perfect harmony with the "God-in-the-Constitution" policy that would make the whole nation appear to profess a faith which, as is notorious, multitudes of them do not have.

IT IS GREATLY to be wished that the book of Hymns and Anthems in use at South Place Chapel, London, where Mr. Moncreux D. Conway holds his weekly religious services, might be cheaply republished on this side of the water. The first hundred and fifty hymns were arranged by Rev. William J. Fox, Mr. Conway's noble predecessor; and the present edition, with many additions, was superintended with his characteristic good taste by Mr. Conway himself. Such a book as this is a great desideratum in America, or would be, if liberal societies were more numerous. Exquisite poems are here, full of the most free, reverent, earnest humanitarianism of this age. If anything could sing away the woes and wrongs of earth, the sweet melodies of this little book would do it.

HIS LECTURESHIP COOK has got into the claws of a griffin, and been badly bitten. An anonymous writer in the New Englander for January, reviewing his book entitled Biology, has exposed without mercy the scientific emptiness and "philosophical charlatanism" of this would-be Cedipus Redivivus—whose portrait a caller at THE INDEX office the other day struck off in a flash of inspiration as "a religious Ben Butler." What could be wickeder than this thrust from the New Englander? "Throughout, 'the Lectureship' is synonymous with the lecturer, being a favorite device by which he may modestly speak of himself in the third person, and also imply that this person is an institution!" Now this remorseless munching-up by the griffin of the New Englander (an Orthodox periodical, be it remembered) so exasperated His Lectureship that he is reported to have denounced the author of the offensive article as a "scapecracker writer," and to have been not a little chafed on discovering that he had in his wrath applied the epithet to no less a person than Dr. Asa Gray, Professor of Natural History in Harvard University! The joke is too good to be lost.

THIS is the touching message that comes from one of our subscribers in Michigan,—one whom we have never seen, but whose poems, occasionally published in these columns, have revealed a sweet and noble nature: "Dear INDEX,—Please find enclosed two dollars to renew my subscription. I would send full amount for a year if I expected to be here to receive the paper. I am far along with pulmonary consumption, and the end is probably not distant. While I am here, I want to read THE INDEX." Such words as these hush for a moment the clamorous noises of the world. Brother, we send you a tender good-speed on your mysterious voyage. We know not its destination, but for such as you who could fear? With peacefulness and quiet dignity you gaze upon that future which fills the superstitious with idle alarms, and undismayed accept your lot in a universe of which so little is known to any. For each of us the same hour waits; and we thank you, brother, for showing with what unfeigned serenity the free thinker moves onward to meet it. You need no exhortations; but you will not despise the unasked sympathy with which your "dear INDEX" has received your calm and manly message, or the pleasure it feels because you wish its companionship to the last.

DISPATCHES from Washington on January 11 contained the following statement, which ought to set to thinking every citizen who has in any degree acquired that rare accomplishment: "The Board of Indian Commissioners met in this city to-day to receive reports of religious bodies who have the selection of agents and other work in connection with the Indian policy instituted by President Grant. Representatives of the Presbyterian, foreign and domestic missionary boards, Baptist Home Missionary Society, the several yearly meetings of Friends, American Board, American Missionary Association, and Unitarian Association were present. A report was received from the Episcopal Board. The Methodists and Roman Catholics sent no reports." Here we have officers of the government meeting in convention with representatives of ecclesiastical sects, to deliberate and act on questions of national policy; yet there are liberals utterly unable to see any peril to republican institutions from this glaringly evident union of Church and State! Every new precedent of this evil kind will only render the final struggle more fierce and desperate; for it is written in the book of fate that this great Republic shall be secularized at last.

NATIONAL LIBERAL LEAGUE. OFFICERS.

President.	RANCIS E. ABBOT, Boston, Mass.
Vice-Presidents.
HON. E. P. HURLBUT, Albany, N. Y.
HON. SAMUEL E. SEWALL, Boston, Mass.
HON. NATHANIEL HOLMES, St. Louis, Mo.
HON. HENRY BOOTH, Chicago, Ill.
HON. GEORGE W. JULIAN, Ipswich, Mass.
HON. ELIZUR WRIGHT, Boston, Mass.
MR. O. B. PROTHINGHAM, New York, N. Y.
MR. W. J. POTTER, New Bedford, Mass.
MR. E. P. HALLORAN, Newburyport, Mass.
MR. JAMES PARTON, San Francisco, Cal.
MR. F. SCHUENEMANN-POTT, Providence, R. I.
HON. ABRAHAM PAYNE, Boston, Mass.
REV. M. J. SAVAGE, Chicago, Ill.
RABBI B. F. ELSENTHAL, Sparta, Wis.
REV. W. H. SPENCER, Florence, Mass.
MR. SAMUEL L. HILL, Detroit, Mich.
MR. E. W. MEDDAUGH, Boston, Mass.
MR. KARL HEINZEN, Editor of the "Investigator," Boston.
MR. ROBERT A. WISE, Editor of "American Inquirer," Cincinnati.
MR. D. M. BENNETT, Editor of the "Truth Seeker," New York.
MR. MORITZ ELLINGER, Editor of the "Jewish Times," New York.
MR. B. F. UNDERWOOD, Thorndike, Mass.
REV. ROBERT COOLYER, Chicago, Ill.
MR. ROBERT G. INGERSOLL, Birmingham, N. Y.
DR. T. L. BROWN, Mount Lebanon, N. Y.
HON. E. B. MCGOWICK, New York City.
MR. ELIZABETH THOMPSON, Tenafly, N. J.
MRS. AMY POST, Lottsburgh, Va.
MRS. ELIZABETH CARY STANTON,
MISS SALLIE HOLLEY,

Secretary.	W. H. HAMLEN, 231 Washington Street, Boston, Mass.
Assistant Secretary.	MISS JANE P. TITCOMB, 142 Chandler St., Boston.
Treasurer.	J. A. J. WILCOX, 8 Pemberton Square, Boston.
Board of Directors.
F. E. ABBOT,	W. H. HAMLEN,
J. A. J. WILCOX,	H. L. GREEN,
	D. G. CRANDON,

Executive Committee.
Alabama,	J. H. RALLEY, Seaside.
Arkansas,	JOHN ANDERSON, Monticello.
California,	J. L. HAYES, San Francisco.
Colorado,	DAVID T. BEALE, Grenada.
Connecticut,	GEORGE W. BALDWIN, Bridgeport.
Delaware,	JOSEPH D. BULL, Grenada.
Florida,	T. D. BUDEN, Enterprise.
Georgia,	DE. A. A. BELL, Madison.
Illinois,	L. C. UNDERWOOD, Indianapolis.
Indiana,	J. C. MICHENER, Adel.
Iowa,	JOHN FARNSWORTH, Fort Scott.
Kansas,	N. H. CLARK, Winchester.
Kentucky,	EDWARD REELEY, Ashe.
Louisiana,	DR. W. H. BROWN, Longport.
Maine,	N. B. BELL, New Market.
Maryland,	W. H. SAWYARD, Boston.
Massachusetts,	KARL SCHMIDT, Detroit.
Michigan,	J. H. HARRIS, Minneapolis.
Minnesota,	ST. LOUIS.
Missouri,	L. W. BILLINGSLEY, Lancaster.
Nebraska,	V. G. BARRETT, White Rock.
Nevada,	WILLIAM LITTLE, Manchester.
New Hampshire,	H. L. GREEN, Salem.
New Jersey,	J. W. THORPE, Warren.
North Carolina,	E. D. STARK, Cleveland.
Ohio,	SAMUEL GALT, Hampden.
Oregon,	G. W. BALDWIN, Lincoln.
Pennsylvania,	GEORGE LEWIS, Providence.
Rhode Island,	P. W. FULLER, Columbia.
South Carolina,	DR. E. H. PRICE, Chattanooga.
Tennessee,	DR. A. L. BARNES, Greenville.
Texas,	H. L. HAYES, North.
Vermont,	L. SPACEDING, Norfolk.
West Virginia,	A. M. DENT, West.
Wisconsin,	ROBERT C. STERNER, Minneapolis.
District of Columbia,	D. F. WILCOX, Boston.
Idaho,	W. H. DOOLITTLE, Washington.
Wyoming,	W. VERDINE, Provo City.
	NORMAN S. FORTER,

Finance Committee.
D. G. CRANDON, Chairman, Chicago, Mass.
MISS SARAH B. OTIS, 137 Warren Avenue, Boston.
HARLAN P. HYDE, 211 Washington St., Boston.

LOCAL AUXILIARY LIBERAL LEAGUES

To which Charters have been issued by the National Liberal League.
LINCOLN, NEBRASKA. —President, D. A. Cline; Secretary, Dr. A. S. von Mansfeldt.
Issued to L. W. Billingsley, D. A. Cline, A. S. von Mansfeldt, Julius Plisterer, Joseph Wittman, W. E. Copeland, Benj. F. Fisher, Sidney Lyons, L. Meyer, G. E. Church, and others.
JACKSONVILLE, ILLINOIS. —[Officers not reported.]
Issued to W. A. Cadman, Mrs. D. M. Cadman, S. W. Sample, David Prince, E. A. Nance, C. H. Dunbrack, W. H. Cadman, Jennie W. Meek, Emma Meek, Hattie E. Hammond, and others.
PHILADELPHIA, PENNSYLVANIA. —President, Carrie B. Kilgore; Secretary, Joseph Bohrer.
Issued to the President and Secretary on behalf of the Philadelphia Liberal League.
MILWAUKEE, WISCONSIN. —President, Lauriston Damon; Secretary, Anton Braasch.
Issued to Anton Braasch, Fred. Clausen, J. Runge, Jr., Louis Zander, S. Damon, Ferd. Heyroth, Louis Heyroth, Fred. Zander, Fred. Halberg, Ernst Clusen, and Fred. Braasch.
CHELSEA, MASSACHUSETTS. —President, D. Goddard Crandon; Secretary, J. H. W. Tooley.
Issued to the President and Secretary on behalf of the Chelsea Liberal League.
BROCKTON, CALIFORNIA. —[Officers not reported.]
Issued to Chas. Haas, G. C. Hyatt, F. C. Lawrence, A. T. Hudson, Chas. Williams, W. F. Freeman, J. Grundike, J. Harrison, T. C. Mallon, A. F. Lochead, and others.
DENVER, COLORADO. —President, Orson Brooks; Secretary, J. H. Cotton.
Issued to the President and Secretary on behalf of the Liberal League of Denver.
PAINE HALL, BOSTON. —President, John S. Verity; Secretary, Robert Cooper.
Issued to Horace Seaver, J. P. Mendum, Elizur Wright, B. F. Underwood, David Kirkwood, James Harris, G. H. Foster, H. P. Hyde, Robert Cooper, S. R. Urbino, John S. Verity.
PALMYRA, NEW YORK. —President, J. M. Jones; Secretary, C. C. Everson.
Issued to J. M. Jones, C. C. Everson, Henry M. North, A. R. Sherman, Joseph Fritts, L. B. Keeler, J. J. White, R. H. Sherman, Henry Gardner, Samuel Cosad, and others.
BOSTON, MASSACHUSETTS. —President, F. E. ABBOT; Secretary, Miss J. P. Titcomb.
Issued to the President and Secretary on behalf of the First Liberal League of Boston, Mass.
NEW PHILADELPHIA, OHIO. —President, George Riker; Secretary, C. M. Rittenhouse.
Issued to C. M. Rittenhouse, George Riker, J. C.

Price, Daniel Korns, P. W. Himes, John Arn, Philip Glintz, A. H. Brown, Jacob Miller, L. A. Cornet.

SPRINGVILLE, PENNSYLVANIA.—President, William Barnard; Secretary, C. M. Hayes.

Issued to the President and Secretary on behalf of the Titusville Liberal League.

Hudson, MICHIGAN.—President, Dr. Levi R. Pearson; Secretary, Dr. F. O. Baker.

Issued to Levi R. Pearson, A. D. Armstrong, James S. Bedel, Miles C. Beach, W. R. Norris, R. H. Armstrong, R. W. S. Johnson, E. M. Brown, G. L. Harceron, Philip Sewall.

CATTARAUGUS COUNTY, NEW YORK.—President, H. L. Green; Corresponding Secretary, John Hammond.

Issued to the President and Secretary on behalf of the Cattaraugus County Liberal League.

NEW HAVEN, CONNECTICUT.—[Officers not yet reported.]

Issued to E. M. Sherman, W. W. Snow, F. A. Hermon, T. F. Hamilton, D. M. Hamilton, W. F. Hopson, E. R. Whiting, E. E. Seaman, A. C. Harrison, R. F. P. Sheppard, and others.

St. JOSEPH, MISSOURI.—President, P. V. Wise; Secretary, H. Bruning.

Issued to the President and Secretary on behalf of the St. Joseph Liberal League.

NEW YORK, NEW YORK.—President, Hugh B. Brown; Secretary, A. L. Rawson.

Issued to T. B. Wakeman, Henry Evans, A. L. Rawson, Hugh B. Brown, E. Langerfeld, D. S. Plumb, O. E. Brown, Mrs. Eliz. Erving, Miss E. W. McAdams, Mrs. O. E. Langerfeld, on behalf of the Society of Humanity.

ROCHESTER, NEW YORK.—President, Mrs. Amy Post; Secretary, Willet E. Post.

Issued to Benj. Greeng, Mrs. Amy Post, Willet E. Post, Emily G. Beebe, Dr. Sherman, Mrs. Barker, Clement Austin, Wm. H. Gibbs, Dr. C. D. Dake, and others.

TOMPKINS COUNTY, NEW YORK.—President, Dr. John Winslow; Secretary, Myron E. Bishop.

Issued to C. W. Ames, Wm. A. Anthony, Geo. Arnold, M. E. Bishop, H. Bool, W. Dennis, Isaac Flagg, B. W. Franklin, C. Gardner, W. Hutchins, and others.

NEW YORK, NEW YORK.—President, A. L. Rawson; Secretary, Porter C. Bliss.

Issued to the President and Secretary on behalf of the Manhattan Liberal Club.

CLEVELAND, OHIO.—President, E. D. Stark; Secretary, Mrs. M. B. Ambler.

Issued to E. D. Stark, Mrs. Louisa Southworth, B. White, W. A. Madison, S. E. Adams, Daniel R. Tilden, W. Galen Smith, Walter F. Johnson, Thomas Jones, and Mrs. M. B. Ambler.

MILWAUKEE, WISCONSIN.—President, Robert C. Spencer; Secretary, William A. Boyd.

Issued to the President and Secretary on behalf of the First Liberal League of Milwaukee.

JEFFERSON LIBERAL LEAGUE, ROCHESTER, NEW YORK.—President, Moses Hays; Secretaries, Fred. Hebard and J. B. Pike.

Issued to L. Garson, N. O. Tiffany, Adolph Roth, J. W. Roberts, R. F. Smith, Julius Rothbult, A. C. Allen, C. B. Strong, De L. Crittenden, and F. Bush.

MINNEAPOLIS, MINNESOTA.—President, S. C. Gale; Secretary, Frank J. Mead.

Issued to the President, Vice-President, Secretary, and Treasurer, on behalf of the First Liberal League of Minneapolis.

FLORENCE, IOWA.—President, Byron McQuinn; Secretary, E. C. Walker.

Issued to the President and Secretary on behalf of the Liberal League of Florence, Iowa.

WEST MERIDEN, CONNECTICUT.—President, N. F. Griswold; Secretary, Miss Emily J. Leonard.

Issued to W. P. Lee, Edwin Dayton, R. L. Roys, C. C. Munn, N. W. Pomeroy, N. F. Griswold, Mrs. F. Loomis, Marion L. Pomeroy, Joseph Frankowski, Mrs. J. Frankowski, and Emily J. Leonard.

[N. B.—Many new local Liberal Leagues have been formed which have neglected to take out charters, and therefore are not entitled to representation.]

RELIGIOUS FREEDOM AMENDMENT: PROPOSED AS A SUBSTITUTE FOR THE FIRST AMENDMENT TO THE U. S. CONSTITUTION.

SECTION 1.—Neither Congress nor any State shall make any law respecting an establishment of religion, or favoring any particular form of religion, or prohibiting the free exercise thereof; or permitting in any degree a union of Church and State, or granting any special privilege, immunity, or advantage to any sect or religious body, or to any number of sects or religious bodies; or taxing the people of any State, either directly or indirectly, for the support of any sect or religious body, or of any number of sects or religious bodies; or abridging the freedom of speech or of the press, or the right of the people peaceably to assemble and to petition the Government for a redress of grievances.

SECTION 2.—No religious test shall ever be required as a condition of suffrage, or as a qualification for any office or public trust, in any State. No person shall ever be deprived of any of his or her rights, privileges or capacities, or disqualified for the performance of any public or private duty, or rendered incompetent to give evidence in any court of law or equity, in consequence of any opinions he or she may hold on the subject of religion. No person shall ever be required by law to contribute directly or indirectly to the support of any religious society or body of which he or she is not a voluntary member.

SECTION 3.—Neither the United States, nor any State, Territory, municipality, or any civil division of any State or Territory, shall levy any tax, or make any gift, grant, or appropriation, for the support, or in aid, of any church, religious sect, or denomination, or any school, seminary, or institution of learning, in which the faith or doctrines of any religious order or sect shall be taught or inculcated, or in which religious rites shall be observed; or for the support, or in aid, of any religious charity or purpose of any sect, order, or denomination whatsoever.

SECTION 4.—Congress shall have power to enforce the various provisions of this Article by appropriate legislation.

A Crumb for the "Modern Symposium."

BY JOHN FISKE.

No one to whom the question of man's destiny is a matter of grave speculative concern can have read, without serious and solemn interest, the discussion lately called forth in England by Mr. Frederic Harrison's essay on "The Soul and Future Life." In no way, perhaps, could the darkness of incomprehensibility which enshrouds the problem be more thoroughly demonstrated than by the candid presentation of so many diverse views by ten writers of very different degrees of philosophic profundity, but all of them able and fair-minded, and all of them actuated—each in his own way—by a spirit of religious faith. This last clause will no doubt seem startling, if not paradoxical, to many who have not yet come to realize how true it is that there is often more real faith in honest scepticism than in languid or timorous assent to a half-understood creed. But no paradox is intended. I believe that there is as much of the true essence of religion—the spirit of trust in God that has ever borne men triumphantly through the perplexities and woes of the world, and the possession of which, in some degree, by most of its members, is the chief deferential attribute of the human race.—I believe that there is as much of this spirit exhibited in the remarks of Prof. Huxley as in those of Lord Balfour. In the serenity of mood with which the great scientific sceptic awaits the end, whatever it may prove to be; in the unflinching integrity with which his intellect refuses to entertain theories that do not seem properly accredited; in the glorious energy with which, accepting the world as it is, he performs with all his might and main the good work for which he is by nature fitted—in all this I can see the evidence of a trust in God no less real than that which makes it possible for his noble Christian friend to "believe because he is told." I am sure that I understand Prof. Huxley's attitude; I think I understand Lord Balfour's also; and it seems to me that the difference between the two attitudes, wide as it is, is still a purely intellectual difference. It has its roots in differently blended capacities of judgment and insight, and in nowise fundamentally affects the religious character. It will be well for the world when this lesson has been thoroughly learned, so as to leave no further room for misapprehension. That great progress has already been made in learning it, we need no other proof than the mere existence of this "Modern Symposium" on the subject of a future life. Three centuries ago it would have been in strict accordance with propriety for the ten disputants to have adjourned their symposium to some ecclesiastical court, preparatory to a final settlement at Smithfield. One century ago there would have been wholesale vituperation, attended with more or less imputation of unworthy motives; and very likely there would have been some Jesuitical paltering with truth. To-day, however, the tremendous question is discussed on all sides—alike by Protestant and Catholic, by transcendentalist, sceptic, and positivist—with evident candor and praiseworthy courtesy; for, in spite of Prof. Huxley's keen-edged wit and Mr. Harrison's fervent heat, there is no one so fortunate as to know these gentlemen who does not know that manly tenderness and good feeling are by no means incompatible with the ability to exchange good hard blows in a fair English fight.

It is with some diffidence that I venture to add my voice to a conversation carried on by such accomplished speakers; but the present seems to be a proper occasion for calling attention to some of the misconceptions which ordinarily cluster around the treatment of questions relating to the soul and a future life. In thus entering upon the discussion, I do not feel called upon to defend any particular solution of the main question at issue. Going by the "light of Nature" alone—to use the old-fashioned phrase,—it will be generally conceded that the problem of a future life is so abstruse and complicated that one is quite excusable for refraining from a dogmatic treatment of it. Nay, one is not only excusable, one is morally bound not to dogmatize unless one has a firmer basis to stand on than any of us are likely to find for some time to come. We may entertain hypotheses in private, but we are hardly entitled to urge them until we feel assured, in the first place, that we have duly fathomed the conditions requisite for a rational treatment of the problem. It would appear that some of the participants in the "Modern Symposium" have not sufficiently heeded this obvious maxim of philosophic caution. Loose talk about "materialism" is apt to imply loose thinking as to the manner in which the metaphysical relations of body and soul are to be apprehended. Perhaps Mr. Harrison, as a positivist, will say that he has nothing to do with apprehending the metaphysical relations between body and soul; but, however that may be, there is some laxity of thought exhibited in charging Prof. Huxley with "Materialism" because he speaks of "building up a physical theory of moral phenomena." At the same time, I think we must admit that Prof. Huxley is talking somewhat loosely when he uses such an expression. To try to explain conscience, with metaphysical strictness, as a result of the grouping of material molecules, is something which I am sure Prof. Huxley would never think of doing; but, unless I am entirely mistaken on this point, there is no ground for Mr. Harrison's charge of materialism.

To see Prof. Huxley charged with materialism, and in a reproachful tone withal, by a positivist who does not acknowledge the existence of a soul, save in some extremely Pickwickian sense, is a strange, not to say comical, spectacle. "What next?" one is inclined to ask. Positivists are apt to have, indeed, an ecclesiastical style of expression; and one would almost think, from his manner, that Mr. Harrison was making common cause with theologians. Into the explanation of this curious phenomenon I cannot here profitably enter. The reasons for it are somewhat recondite, and are subtly linked with the general incapacity under which positivists seem to labor, of understanding the real import of the doctrine of evolution. However this may be, the impression that the group of opinions represented by Mr. Spencer and Prof. Huxley are materialistic is so widely spread, that it is worth our while to spend a few moments in ascertaining what materialism is, and how far it is involved in recent scientific speculations. Is the present drift of scientific thought really setting toward materialism, or is it not?

*The articles are all reproduced in The Popular Science Monthly Supplement, Nos. 1, 2, 6, and 7.

No epithets are more familiarly used nowadays than "materialism" and "materialist"; but their ordinary function is vituperative rather than logical. As vague terms of abuse they are hurled about with a zeal that may be praiseworthy, but with an indifference that is scarcely commendable, being aimed, as often as not, at the heads of writers who doubt or deny the substantial existence of matter altogether! Such blunders show (among other things) how difficult metaphysical studies are, and indicate that a little more care expended upon analysis and definition would not be thrown away. It is true that something has already been said upon this point,—enough, one would think, to obviate the necessity of turning back to slay the resuscitated ghosts of thrice-slaughtered misconceptions. On the character of materialism as a philosophical hypothesis, Mr. Spencer has been tolerably explicit. Prof. Huxley has summed up the case with his customary felicity, at the close of that famous Edinburgh lecture which everybody is supposed to have read.* In my work on Cosmic Philosophy, I have devoted a very plain-spoken chapter to the subject. Nevertheless, as Mr. Freeman says, it is not a bad plan, when you have once got hold of a truth, to keep hammering it into people's heads on all occasions, even at the risk of being voted a tedious bore or a victim of crotchets. We live in a hurried and not over-intelligent world, wherein the wariest of us do not always pay due heed to what we are told, and the keenest do not always divine its sense; but, after we have heard it repeated fifty times that Alfred was an Englishman, and Charles the Great was not a Frenchman, we may perhaps succeed in waking up to the historical import of such statements. In this pithy, though somewhat cynical suggestion, I shall seek an excuse for recurring here to what I have said more than once already.†

From one point of view, materialism may be characterized as a system of opinions based on the assumption that matter is the only real existence. On this view the phenomena of conscious intelligence are supposed to be explicable, as momentary results of fleeting collocations of material particles, as when a discharge between two or more cells of gray cerebral tissue is accompanied by what we call a thought. It requires but little effort to see that materialism, as thus defined, does not comport well with the most advanced philosophy of our time. Materialism of this sort has plenty of defenders, no doubt, but not among those who are skilled in philosophy. The untrained thinker, who believes that the group of phenomena constituting the table on which he is writing, has an objective existence independent of consciousness, will probably find no difficulty in accepting this sort of materialism. If he is devoted to the study of nervous physiology, he will be very likely to adopt some such crude notion, and to proclaim it as zealously as Dr. Maudsley, for example, as if it were a very important truth, calculated to promote, in many ways, the welfare of mankind. The science of such a writer is very likely to be sound and valuable, and what he tells us about wourara-poison and frogs' legs, and acute mania, will probably be worthy of serious attention. But with his philosophy it is quite otherwise. When he has proceeded as far in subjective analysis as he has in the study of nerves, our materialist will find that it was demonstrated, a century ago, that the group of phenomena constituting the table has no real existence whatever in a philosophical sense. For by "reality" in philosophy is meant "persistence irrespective of particular conditions"; and the group of phenomena constituting the table persists only in so far as it is held together in cognition. Take away the cognizing mind, and the color, form, position, and hardness of the table—all the attributes, in short, that characterize it as matter,—at once disappear. That something remains we may grant; but this something is unknown and unknowable: it is certainly not the group of phenomena constituting the table. Apart from consciousness, there are no such things as color, form, position, or hardness, and there is no such thing as matter. This great truth, established by Berkeley, is the very foundation of modern scientific philosophy; and, though it has been misapprehended by many, no one has ever refuted it, and it is not likely that any one ever will. Concerning the value of Berkeley's idealism, when taken with all its ontological implications, there is plenty of room for disagreement; but his psychological analysis of the relation of consciousness to the external world is of such fundamental importance that, until one has mastered it, one has no right to speak on philosophical questions. It is not unfair to say that materialists, as a rule, have not mastered the Berkeleyan psychology, or given much attention to it. In general, their attention has been too much occupied with filaments and ganglia, to the neglect of that close subjective analysis which they unwisely stigmatize as dreamy meta-physic. Hence, on the whole, materialism does not represent anything of primary importance in modern philosophy; it represents rather the crude speculation of that large and increasing number of people who have acquired some knowledge of the truths of physical science, without possessing sufficient subtlety to apprehend their metaphysical bearings. Büchner, the favorite spokesman of this class of people, occupies a position precisely similar to that of Lamettrie in the last century, and will, no doubt, in the days of our grandchildren be as thoroughly forgotten as his predecessor; while the same barren platitudes will be echoed by some new writer in the scientific phraseology then current.

But there is another way of looking at materialism which makes it for a moment seem important, and which serves to explain, though not to justify, the alarm with which many excellent people contemplate the progress of modern science. A conspicuous characteristic of materialism is the endeavor to interpret mind as a product,—as the transient result of a certain specific aggregation of matter. To a person familiar with post-Berkeleyan psychology it seems clear that such an endeavor is quite hopeless, and that no such interpretation of mind can ever be made. But a multitude of very respectable readers, who are not so profoundly conversant with metaphysics as Spencer and Huxley, have taken it into their heads that the doctrine of evolution is advancing with rapid strides toward just such an interpretation of mind; and hence it is quite common to allude to Spencer and Huxley as "materialists," which, to my mind, is very much as if one were to allude to Mr. Wendell Phillips as a distinguished pro-slavery orator. The mistake, however, is not unnatural when we consider its causes. In point of fact the terminology of science is thoroughly materialistic, though probably not more so than the language of ordinary discourse. It is intensely materialistic for us to speak of the table as if it had some objective existence, independent of a cognizing mind; and yet, in common parlance, we invariably allude to the table in terms which imply or suggest such an independent existence. Just so in theoretical science. In describing the development of life upon the earth's surface, when we say that consciousness appeared on the scene pari passu with the appearance of nervous systems, it is not strange if we are supposed to mean that consciousness is somehow produced by a peculiar arrangement of nervous tissue,—that "spirit" is in some way or other evolved from "matter." In reality, however, nothing of the kind is intended. Laziness of speech is mainly responsible for the misapprehension. The evolutionist, in describing the course of life upon the earth, is simply imparting to us, so far as he is able, a piece of historical information. Through various complex and indirect processes of inference, he has become capable of telling us, with some probability, how things would have looked to us in the remote past if we had been there to see. He tells us that if we had been on hand in palaeozoic ages we should not have seen the phenomena of consciousness manifested in connection with a fragment of porphyry, or a handful of sand or a tree-fern, any more than we see such things to-day, but only in connection with animals endowed with nerves. In thus extending the results of present experience to the past, the element of sequence in time is introduced in such a way as to suggest the causation of consciousness by nerve-matter. Nevertheless the assertion of the evolutionist is purely historical in its import, and includes no hypothesis whatever as to the ultimate origin of consciousness; least of all is it intended to imply that consciousness was evolved from matter. It is not only inconceivable how mind should have been produced from matter, but it is inconceivable that it should have been produced from matter, unless matter possessed already the attributes of mind in embryo,—an alternative which it is difficult to invest with any real meaning. The problem is altogether too abstruse to be solved with our present resources. But it is curious to hear honest theologians gravely urging against Mr. Spencer that you cannot obtain mind from the "primordial fire-mist" unless the germs of mind were somehow present already. I hope I am not accrediting Mr. Spencer with any opinion he does not hold, and I speak subject to correction; but, if my memory serves me, I have more than once heard him in conversation urging this very objection to any materialistic interpretation of evolution. His wonderfully subtle chapter on "The Substance of Mind" contains, as I understand it, the same argument; but it is easy to miss an author's meaning sometimes when the point expounded is so formidably abstract and general. Be this as it may, we are not helped much by supposing the germs of mind to have been somehow latent in the primeval nebula. The notion is too vague to be of any use. The only point on which we can be clear is, that no mere collocation of material atoms could ever have evolved the phenomena of consciousness. Beyond this we cannot go. We are confronted with an insoluble metaphysical problem. Of the origin of mind we can give no scientific account, but only an historical one. We can say when (i.e., in connection with what material circumstances) mind came upon the scene of evolution; but we can neither say whence, nor how, nor why. In just the same way we see to-day that mind appears in connection with certain material circumstances; but we cannot see how or why it is so. Least of all can we say that the material circumstances produce mind; on the contrary, we can assert most positively that they do not.

The proof of this rather dogmatic assertion is to be found in the careful study of that very doctrine of the "correlation of forces" which superficial materialists have exultingly claimed as their own, and which their superficial opponents have foolishly comceded to them. We have been wont to hear this doctrine—the crowning achievement of modern science—decried as lending support to materialism. If this were really so, we anti-materialists would have a poor case, for the doctrine in question is established beyond all possibility of refutation. But it is not really so. On the contrary, the final and irretrievable discomfiture of materialism follows as a direct corollary from the discovery of the correlation of forces.

By the loose phrase, "correlation of forces," what is strictly meant is the transformation of one kind of motion into another kind. What used to be called the "physical forces"—such as light, heat, magnetism, and electricity—are now known to be peculiar kinds of motion among the imperceptible molecules of which perceptible bodies are composed. The discovery of the "correlation of forces" was the discovery of the fact that any one of these kinds of molecular motion is constantly liable to be transformed into any one of the other kinds, or, now and then, into the molar motion of a perceptible body. Heat is all the time being converted into light, or into electricity, or into the peculiar kind of undulatory motion known as "nerve-force"; and vice versa. And the law of the correlation is that, when any one of these species of motion appears, an equivalent amount of some other species disappears in producing it. Throughout the world the sum-total of motion is ever the same; but its distribution into heat-waves, light-waves, nerve-waves, etc., varies from moment to moment.

Let us now apply these principles to the case of an organism, such as the human body. All of the "force"—i.e., capacity of motion—present at any moment in the human body, is derived from the food that we eat and the air that we breathe. As food is turned into oxygenated blood and assimilated with the various tissues of the body—which themselves represent previously-assimilated food,—the molecular movements of the food-material become variously combined into molecular movements in tissue,—in muscular tissue, in adipose, in cellular, and in nerve-tissue, and so on. Every undulation that takes place among the molecules of a nerve represents some simpler form of molecular motion contained in food that has been assimilated; and, for every given quantity of the former kind of motion that appears, an equivalent quantity of the latter kind disappears in producing it. And so we may go on, keeping the account strictly balanced, until we reach the peculiar discharge of undulatory motion between cerebral ganglia that uniformly accompanies a feeling or state of consciousness. What now occurs? Along with this peculiar form of undulatory motion there occurs a feeling,—the primary element of a thought or of an emotion. But does the motion produce the feeling, in the same sense that heat produces light? Does a given quantity of motion disappear, to be replaced by an equivalent quantity of feeling? By no means. The nerve-motion, in disappearing, is simply distributed into other nerve-motions in various parts of the body, and these other nerve-motions, in their turn, become variously metamorphosed into motions of contraction in muscles, motions of secretion in glands, motions of assimilation in tissues generally, or into yet other nerve-motions. Nowhere is there such a thing as the metamorphosis of motion into feeling or of feeling into motion. Of course I do not mean that the circuit, as thus described, has ever been experimentally traced, or that it can be experimentally traced. What I mean is, that, if the law of the "correlation of forces" is to be applied at all to the physical processes which go on within the living organism, we are of necessity bound to render our whole account in terms of motion that can be quantitatively measured. Once admit into the circuit of metamorphosis some element—such as feeling—that does not allow of quantitative measurement, and the correlation can no longer be established; we are landed at once in absurdity and contradiction. So far as the correlation of forces has anything to do with it, the entire circle of transmutation, from the lowest physico-chemical motion, all the way up to the highest nerve-motion and all the way down again to the lowest physico-chemical motion, must be described in physical terms, and no account whatever can be taken of any such thing as feeling or consciousness.

On such grounds as these, I maintain that feeling is not a product of nerve-motion in anything like the sense that light is sometimes a product of heat, or that friction-electricity is a product of sensible motion. Instead of entering into the dynamic circuit of correlated physical motions, the phenomena of consciousness stand outside as utterly alien and disparate phenomena. They stand outside, but uniformly parallel to that segment of the circuit which consists of neural undulations. The relation between what goes on in consciousness and what goes on simultaneously in the nervous system may best be described as a relation of uniform concomitance. I agree with Prof. Huxley and Mr. Harrison that along with every act of consciousness there goes a molecular change in the substance of the brain, involving a waste of tissue. This is not materialism, nor does it alter a whit the position in which we were left by common-sense before nervous physiology was ever heard of. Everybody knows that, so long as we live on the earth, the activity of mind as a whole is accompanied by the activity of brain as a whole. What nervous physiology teaches is simply that each particular mental act is accompanied by a particular cerebral act. In proving this, the two sets of phenomena, mental and physical, are reduced each to its lowest terms; but not a step is taken toward confounding the one step with the other. On the contrary, the keener our analysis, the more clearly does it appear that the two can never be confounded. The relation of concomitance between them remains an ultimate and insoluble mystery.

I believe, therefore, that modern scientific philoso-

* "The Physical Basis of Life,"—Lay Sermons, p. 100.
† Outlines of Cosmic Philosophy, II., 79, 432-451. The Unseen World, 41-43.

* Principles of Psychology, Second Edition, II., 145-162.

phy, as represented by Spencer and Huxley, not only affords no support to materialism, but condemns it utterly, and drives it off the field altogether. I believe it is even clearer to-day than it was in the time of Descartes, that no possible analytic legerdemain can ever translate thought into extension, or extension into thought. The antithesis is of God's own making, and no wit of man can undo it.

The bearing of these arguments upon the question of a future life may be very briefly stated. So far as I can judge, I should say that, among highly-educated people, the belief in a continuance of conscious existence after death has visibly weakened during the present century. I infer this as much from the timorousness of conservative thinkers as from the aggressiveness of their radical opponents. In so far as this weakening of belief is due to an imperfect apprehension of the scientific discoveries which our age has witnessed in such bewildering rapidity, a word of caution may be out of place. For all that physiological psychology has achieved there is no more ground for doubt as to a future life to-day than there was in the time of Descartes: whatever grounds of belief were really valid then are equally valid now. The belief has never been one which could be maintained on scientific grounds. For science is but the codification of experience, and it is helpless without the data which experience furnishes. Now, science may easily demolish materialism and show that mind cannot be regarded as a product of matter; but the belief in a future life requires something more than this for its support. It requires evidence that the phenomena we class as mental can subsist apart from the phenomena we class as material; and such evidence, of course, cannot be furnished by science. It cannot be furnished until we have had some actual experimental knowledge of soul as dissociated from body; and under the conditions of the present life no such knowledge can possibly be obtained. But this undoubted fact has a two-fold import. While on the one hand it shuts us off from all scientific proof of immortality, on the other hand it shows that the absence of scientific proof affords no valid ground for a negative conclusion. If soul can exist when dissociated from body, we have no means for apprehending the fact; and therefore our inability to apprehend it does not entitle us to deny that soul may have some such independent existence. We cannot allow the materialist even this crumb of consolation,—that, although he cannot prove that consciousness ceases with death, nevertheless the presumption is with him, and the burden of proof upon his antagonists. Scientifically speaking, there is no presumption either way, and there is no burden of proof on either side. The question is simply one which science cannot touch. In the future, as in the past, I have no doubt it will be provisionally answered in different ways by different minds, on an estimate of what is called "moral probability," just as we see it diversely answered in the "Modern Symposium." For my own part, I should be better satisfied with an affirmative answer, as affording perhaps some unforeseen solution to the general mystery of life. But there is one thing which every true philosopher ought to dread even more than the prospect of annihilation; and that is, the unpardonable sin of letting preference tamper with his judgment. I have no sympathy with those who stigmatize the hope of immortal life as selfish or degrading; and with Mr. Harrison's proffered substitute I confess I have no patience whatever. This travesty of Christianity by positivism seems to me, as it does to Prof. Huxley, a very sorry business. On the other hand, I cannot agree with those who consider a dogmatic belief in another life essential to the proper discharge of our duty in this. Though we may not know what is to come hereafter, we have at any rate all the means of knowledge requisite for making our present lives pure and beautiful. It was Jehovah's cherished servant who declared in Holy Writ that his faith was stronger than death. There is something overwhelming in the thought that all our rich stores of spiritual acquisition may at any moment perish with us. But the wise man will cheerfully order his life, undaunted by the metaphysical snares that beset him; learning and learning afresh, as if all eternity lay before him—battling steadfastly for the right, as if this day were his last. "Disce ut semper victurus, vive ut cras moriturus."—North American Review for January-February, 1878.

NATHAN THE WISE.

It is a singular thing that two translations of Lessing's Nathan the Wise should have made their appearance simultaneously in competition for Christmas popularity. There are already two in America: one by Miss Frothingham; another by that charming poet, Charles T. Brooks. These translations of Lessing's great drama are unknown in this country; and there has been none hitherto accessible to those who cannot read German, except a very poor version by William Taylor, of Norwich, who died in 1836. Taylor could not understand Lessing, and he toned down the daring thoughts. I fear the same judgment must be partly applied to one of these new versions, that by Dr. Andrew Wood, of Edinburgh. In his introduction he says: "From the contemplation of the character of Nathan, albeit a Jew, though one whom we may term a Catholic Jew, and one who certainly was a virtuous, prudent, humble, generous, forgiving man, even the Christian may derive a lesson." It is amusing to find this unconscious assumption of even a liberally tending man that to be a Christian is more than to be virtuous, prudent, humble, generous, and forgiving, in the same volume with Sittah's words:—

"Their pride is to be Christians, and not men. For even that,—which, from their founder learnt, Seasons their superstition with what's human."

That not because 'tis human do they love,
But because Christ has taught it, and has done it.
'Tis well for them he was so good a man!
'Tis well for them that they on trust and faith
Can take his virtue! Yet what virtue? Not
His virtue, but his name must be wide-spread
Abroad throughout the world, and must the names
Of all good men degrade and swallow up:
'Tis with a name, and only with a name,
That they've to do."

The real version of Nathan, and that for which a career may be anticipated, is by Dr. Willis of whose valuable works on Spinoza and Servetus and Calvin I recently wrote. This newest of his work has in it heart and enthusiasm. It is evidently its translator's gospel, and he interprets it with appropriate reverence and with spiritual sympathy. The great charm of the drama is the apologue of the Three Rings. The Moslem Sultan Saladin, the Christian Knight Templar, and Nathan the Jew, are bound to each other by mutual services; but their "religions" mean mutual antagonisms. Saladin summons before him Nathan and asks him which faith seems to him truer, and why. The Jew tells him this story:

In the olden, olden time
There lived an Eastern Chief who owned a ring
Of priceless worth, had from the hands of one
He dearly loved. The stone, an opal, flashed
The broken light in hundred lovely hues
Upon the eye, and had the marvellous power
To make him loved alike of God and man,
Who, strong in this assurance, won the ring.
What wonder if this Eastern Lord
Ne'er left the treasure from his hand, and made
Such disposition as secured its passing
As heirloom in his house forever. He Leaving the ring to him among his sons
Whom he loved best, commanded that his heir
Should in his turn bequeath it to the one
Among his sons whom he most dearly loved;
And more: that the possessor of the ring,
Without regard to claims from prior birth,
In right of the ownership alone should rule
As lord of all. . . .
So came the ring
From sire to son, until at length it fell
To one, the father of three loving sons,
All dutiful alike, and all by him
C cherished with like regard. . . .
Each, in a word, seemed worthless of the ring;
And he, with pious weakness, promised each,
That he should have it. . . .
What could be done—how 'scape from the dilemma?
He summons privily a jeweler,
Of whom he orders two more opal rings. . . .
Exactly like his own. The artist triumphs:
The rings produced, the father cannot tell
Which of the three is his. Content, resigned,
He calls his sons in turn to his bed-side,
And gives to each his blessing and a ring,
And soon thereafter dies. . . .
The father dead, each son displays his ring
And would assert his place as lord of all;
Discussion follows, difference, dispute—
In vain! The true ring cannot now be known—
(Pause.)

As little known as 'mong ourselves this day
The true religion. . . .
Saladin—But the rings!
—And see you patter not with me in this!
Methought the three great Dispensations named
Were verily distinct from one another—
Distinct even to the meat and drink and garb
Of those professing them. . . .
Nathan—Return me to the story of our rings:
As said, the sons could come to no agreement;
Each swore in turn before the Judge that he
Had had his ring immediate from the hand
Of his dear father—and how true was this!
Thus spoke the Judge: "As ye do not—cannot—
Produce the father, I dismiss the suit.
What! think ye I am here to unravel riddles,
Or shall we stay until the true ring speaks?
But hold! the true ring has the power, 'tis said,
To make its owner loved of God and man;
This must decide. The counterfeits you'll own
Have no such virtue. Say then, as ye stand
Which of the three love two of you the most?
What—silent all! Each loved himself alone,
And ye are doubtless all alike deceived:
The rings ye wear must needs be counterfeits:
The magic ring was lost, as it would seem,
And, to conceal the loss, your loving father
Had those ye wear made like it."
Saladin—Excellent! Proceed, I pray!
Nathan—The Judge went on and said:
"If ye seek judgment and not counsel, go!
But would ye rather be advised, I'd say:
Content ye with the matter as it stands. . . .
'Tis possible your father willed to end
This sovereignty of one among his sons.
To me indeed 'twould plainly seem that he
Had loved you all alike, when he took steps
To agrieve no two by favoring one. Well, then!
Let each of you comfort him in such wise
As love unbribed commands; let each resolve
To show the world that in the ring he wears
He holds the prize, its virtues being shown
To Man in acts of Justice, Meekness, Mercy;
To God in thoughts of Love and heartfelt Trust.
And when a thousand thousand years have passed,—
When children's children's children wear the rings,
Come they anew before this judgment-seat,
One wiser than myself might then sit here,
And make the award." Thus spoke the righteous judge.
Saladin—My God! My God!
Nathan—Now, Sultan, if you feel
That you are he—the promised wiser judge—
Saladin—Who—I? I, dust! I, less than nothing! No—
Nathan—My sovereign, what is this?
Saladin—Dear Nathan, no!
The thousand thousand years of your wise judge
Have not yet passed; his seat is not the one
I fill. So leave me now: but be my friend.

This was the Bethlehem star under which the anti-theological and unsectarian religion of Germany was born. "Lessing," wrote Baur, "has the great merit of having been the first to apprehend in all its vast importance the question of the relation in which the Religion of Reason and the moral sense of man stand to the Religion of History." "In Nathan we have an Ideal of Religious Liberty," said Schwarz, historian of "Modern Theology" and Court-preacher of Saxe-Coburg-Gotha. "The Deity pervades every line of Nathan," says Kuno Fischer. "Nathan hastens the advent of the kingdom of God upon earth!" cried Strauss. It can hardly be that Nathan the Wise can ever be a popular stage-drama as it is in Germany, though it is probable that its fine situations will attract the attention of our clever adapters. But no poem ever written has more certainly before it a great future in England.—M. D. Conway.

PROFESSOR OLIVER'S DEFENCE OF THE LIBERAL LEAGUE.

[Every wise and earnest friend of the Liberal League movement must rejoice that it has found such spokesmen as Professor Oliver and his co-workers at Ithaca. We cannot be grateful enough to him for so fine and noble a vindication of our common cause as is presented below.—Ed.]

The Liberal League—Misapprehensions Corrected.

EDITOR OF THE ITHACAN:—

My attention has been called to a passage in Mr. McKoon's interesting sermon, published in the Ithacan of December 21; and, as the subject is not one of transient interest, a word of comment upon it may still be reasonable. I quote: ". . . the hidden rocks of atheism, which under the specious name of Liberal League, is seeking to change our organic law, trampling on the Sabbath, and for morality enthroned reason and exclude the Bible; banish God from the councils of the nation, and from all the States, schools, and courts supported by the nation or State. The tiger of human passions thus unchained would run riot," etc., etc.

Here, apparently, are seven distinct charges against the Liberal League movement. They are: first, that the movement is atheistic; second, that it seeks to change the spirit of the nation's organic law; third, that it would "trample on the Sabbath"; fourth, that it would "for morality enthroned reason"; fifth, that it would "exclude the Bible"; sixth, that it would "banish God" from the public councils, schools, and courts; seventh, that it tends to unchain "the tiger of human passions."

1. The Liberal League movement seeks nothing but equal justice for those holding all forms of religious belief and unbelief. Is it atheism to insist that this republic shall not be made a theocracy? Has not the Church yet outgrown her old policy of domination? Is she willing in this age to imply a doubt of the strength of her intellectual position, and to put herself at a disadvantage in her controversy with scepticism by an appeal to the support of the civil power? And will she now brand as atheists all who oppose such an alliance?

Partly to test this very question, we have organized the Liberal League of Tompkins County. It meddles with no one's religious faith, either to attack, to undermine, or to discuss it. But it does insist that the government, supported by the taxes, by the loyalty, and, if necessary, by the lives of us all, shall be absolutely uncommitted to any views concerning religion, and absolutely impartial as between those citizens who regard Christianity as the only divinely authorized religion, and the Bible as the one infallible fount of heavenly wisdom, and those equally intelligent, equally conscientious and exemplary citizens who think otherwise. It would have a government which every good citizen could support without thereby helping to sustain what he might regard as pernicious error; and under which no one could dictate as to the religious life of his neighbor. It would have taxes levied upon "sacred" and "secular" property alike; courts and State governments from which no one could be excluded by religious tests; and public schools where the instruction and the intentional influence should be confined to matters upon which the wise and good are substantially in agreement. In fine, it would have a completely secular government; that is, not one opposed or unfriendly to religion, but one in which the religious needs and scruples of all should be respected with impartial courtesy.

Now equally liberal Protestants, Romanists, and Freethinkers may agree to these principles in a general way, but differ as to their right application; and hence, not only for strength, but to protect itself against onesidedness, the League invites them all on equal terms to join and guide it. Especially does it invite Evangelical Protestants; for since it is in their supposed interest that certain religious abuses now linger in the State, it is important, for the sake of future good feeling, that the reform, which will surely come, be secured through their cooperation.

But is the League elsewhere thus catholic? Largely, I think that it is; and that our liberal Orthodox friends could make it wholly so. But if nearly the whole work is left to be done by Freethinkers, we must not complain if sometimes they do it in their own way.

2. The Constitution of the United States is already secular. That was secured to us by almost the same statesmen who had given us the Declaration of Independence. The Liberal League seeks merely to have the actual government administered in the spirit of this constitution, and to guarantee secularity to the State governments as well. But there is a party which, "under the specious name of" National Reform, "is seeking to change our organic law," and insert religious dogmas into the Constitution. For ten years has it perished in this endeavor to undo the grand work of the fathers, when the Liberal League was first thought of as a measure of self-defence.

3. Nobody wants to "trample on the Sabbath"; but why should A, who prefers to spend his Sabbath at church, trample on the rights of B, who would rather spend his Sunday at a library or art-gallery, or working quietly in his own garden? The Liberal Leagues are not committed to any details of Sabbath policy. Possibly most of them would say: "Let Sunday be always a quiet, legal holiday. Fill it with opportunities for religious, aesthetic, intellectual, social, and physical improvement and recreation; close then, and on all days, the haunts of vice and dissipation; prohibit noise, and perhaps all unnecessary public trade; let no one disturb his neighbor or needlessly force his neighbor to work; and for the rest, let each use the day as he prefers." Is the Puritan Sabbath nearer than this would be to the early Christian ideal?

4. "For morality enthroned reason." To this, I hope that we can all plead guilty. Is not our friend a little cruel toward his own form of faith, if he maintains that its morality is not based upon reason?

5. "Exclude the Bible." As Liberals we exclude nothing except exclusiveness. For the rest, some of us may see in the Bible a sufficient guide to all the duties of life; while others hold that, though certain great ethical principles have been nowhere more nobly stated, yet its precepts must be tested and supplemented by light from all other sources, and that the unreserved acceptance of a merely Scriptural morality would carry us back to mediæval darkness.

6. Banish God." What is God but the intelligence, beauty, goodness, which as most of us more or less distinctly feel is somehow at the root of all things,—though while some of us clothe it with a human-like personality, others, not less reverently, may refuse to give it even a name? To banish God from our thoughts would, as I think, rob our lives of their finest poetry and of their deepest meaning, though not of their sweetness and virtue. But can tax-exemption or other State patronage, the legal and social discouragement of dissent, the perfunctory use of bibles, creeds, prayers, and oaths recall a living God to our hearts? May they not even set up an idol in place of God, the conceit of respectable conformity?

7. "Unchain the tiger of human passions." Who has done this oftener than the Church herself, when, forgetting that hers is a spiritual kingdom and not of this world, she has become corrupted by state favoritism and undertaken to direct temporal power? What wars have been more bitter and bloody, what persecutions more unrelenting than those which she has waged? What abuses more intolerable have driven men to revolt than those in her behalf? And, to-day, by what monopoly of the purest morality, and of the most devoted and intelligent endeavor to make the world better, can she claim to be the only power that can restrain "the tiger of human passions"? Indeed, what spectacle can be more demoralizing than that she, the professed representative of man's highest interests, should set at naught justice, a fundamental principle of morality, and seek to stifle individual aspirations after the truth by denying them the atmosphere of freedom?

Respectfully,

J. E. O.

—Weekly Ithacan, Jan. 18.

NINETY CENTS FOR A DOLLAR.

[The following article from the Christian Statesman of Jan. 1, 1878, is, in our judgment, an excellent one. We can only wish that this same journal could see the dishonesty of robbing "infidels" to support the churches, as clearly as it sees the dishonesty of making the nation pay ninety cents on a dollar on its public debt.—ED.]

We have received the following letter in reference to the views we have repeatedly expressed in these pages:—

"Please explain in the Statesman on what ground you deny the right of our government to pay its debts in accordance with the terms of the contract with its creditors. Do not the bonds say on their face: 'Payable in coin of the United States'? President Hayes says the bonds issued since 1873 should be paid in gold, for the reason that silver was not a then legal tender, having been demonetized by Congress. Now, unfortunately for that position, the bonds all say, 'Payable in coin of current value in 1870.' Did not our currency in that year, and all preceding years consist of gold and silver? Need I say more? The whole West, almost to a man, is anxious for a return to specie payments, and feels assured that this is impossible without the aid of the silver dollar. I hope the Statesman will not be found among the enemies of a sound metallic currency."

In answer, we say: The silver dollar of 412½ grains, in which it is now proposed to pay the public debt of the United States and all private debts whatsoever, and which is only worth about ninety cents, was not current money in this country in 1870, nor for seventeen years previous to that time. Its history, as published again and again by the highest financial authorities, is briefly this: The discovery of gold in California in 1848, cheapened gold and increased the relative value of silver. A cheaper currency always drives out a dearer one. The premium on silver rose to 105, and soon the whole silver currency of the United States was exported, or melted into bullion. To meet the necessity for small change, Congress, in 1853, authorized the issue of small coins of reduced weight, about seven per cent. less in value than the silver dollar; and this is still the standard of our smaller silver coins. At the same time, it provided that they should not be a legal tender in sums of more than five dollars. No similar change was made in the silver dollar, and the gold dollar was allowed to take its place. From that day till the present, twenty-four years, the silver dollar has formed no part of the currency of the country. It has been exceedingly difficult to obtain even single specimens to complete sets for coin collectors. In 1873, there was a complete revision of the coinage laws of the United States, and as no silver dollars were in circulation, and there was no demand for them, no provision was made for their coinage.

Then came a change. Owing to increased production in the mines of Nevada, silver in turn became cheap. The fluctuation was so great that 412½ grains which had formerly been worth 105 cents in gold, sank to about 95. The German Empire, recognizing the unsuitableness of so unstable a medium as a basis of currency, "demonetized" silver, as the United States, and we believe Great Britain, had already done. This threw the silver currency of those nations on the market, and further depreciated it; so that the "dollar of our fathers" is now worth about 90 cents. This element in the situation has attracted the gaze of some of our sagacious statesmen, and they propose to "remonetize" silver, not by coining dollars with a dollar's worth of silver in them, but by re-issuing the "dollar of our fathers," and compelling every creditor of the nation and of individuals to accept it for his debt. The passage of such an act would be outrageous injustice. The giving of a legal tender quality to United States notes was a forced loan, justified only by the exigencies of a nation's struggle for its life. But the payment of those notes with silver, every ninety cents being stamped as a dollar, would be high-handed robbery. Patriotism, which cheerfully accepted and sustained the former act, would blush for the latter. The legal tender act affected only our own citizens, for government notes were issued only for their use; but this act proposes to pay foreign creditors who largely hold our bonds, at the rate of ninety cents on the dollar. Repudiation by separate States is sufficiently disgraceful. We hope we shall be spared this additional humiliation. It will be observed there is no proposition to coin silver dollars of full value. Such a measure would involve only one question,—the wisdom of adopting silver currency again while the most advanced nations are rejecting it. But the legislation now before Congress involves a moral question, and it is in this light that it becomes appropriate for discussion in these pages.

POISONOUS READING.

A recent issue of Puck has an admirable pictorial illustration of the effects of reading a certain kind of literature with which news-stands and circulating libraries are flooded. One page represents a youth fallen asleep in the midst of a small pool of this kind of trash, while the air around is filled with unreal and unhealthy characters and "situations," the dream-product of these pernicious mental stimulants. The other page shows a young man in convict's dress, sitting on his prison cot, his face buried in his hands, and his cell faintly illuminated by a few rays of light falling through the narrow, grated window in the stone wall.

To some persons these suggestive pictures may seem exaggerations; but we are inclined to think that if the full truth were known it would quite equal the fancy of the artist. There is a class of books and periodicals, more abundant in this country than in any other, which literally rots the mind and morals of the reader. They do not contain a single grain of valuable knowledge, and they do contain either open appeals to the lowest and basest passions, or views of life so false and foolish as to encourage the growth and gratification of these passions. Of the absolutely indecent publications we need not speak; but there is a vast number in which indecency is avoided that are scarcely less demoralizing. Indeed, we believe these publications which the law prohibits do far less damage in the aggregate than the others. A vile book or paper modestly at once rejects and throws aside; but a book or paper which, under the mask of sentimental and sensational fiction teaches ruinous lessons, is read unsuspectingly, and so plants its virus deep in the soul. And that virus is as certain to develop in the conduct as the opening of a vein brings blood. There are thousands and tens of thousands of families where a volume of Voltaire or Thomas Paine would be promptly thrown into the fire, which permit the younger members to indulge in a kind of reading as much worse, in its final effects, than anything Paine or Voltaire ever conceived as the devil is darker than an angel of light. The parents do not know this, of course; but they ought to know it, and would know it if they examined the food which goes into the mind as closely as they do that which goes into the stomach. The idea prevails that the boy or girl who is fond of reading must necessarily be furnishing the intellect at least with harmless amusement, if not with solid instruction. This idea might have been correct enough thirty years ago, but it is a wretched delusion now. There are quite as many, probably more, absolutely bad books than absolutely good ones; and as the bad books are usually more attractive to the youthful fancy than the good ones, they are much oftener read. The temperance movement now sweeping over the land is thought to be a blessing of magnificent dimensions; but a movement to improve the quality of the reading of the rising generation would be a much greater blessing to the nation and to individuals. But no such reform is likely to be set in motion, and so poor-houses, penitentiaries, morgues, and hangman's ropes are not likely to go out of fashion.—St. Louis Republican.

IN THE BROOKLYN Catholic Review of March 31, 1877, the following declarations of Pope Plus IX. respecting the principle of legitimacy and hereditary divine right to reign were quoted from the Catholic Record: "I am happy that on this occasion an opportunity is afforded to me to explain to you upon this theme the opinion of the Holy See. It is the wish of the Holy See that the governors of all nations should sincerely believe themselves installed by the will of the Almighty God into their position of authority. The Holy See has never framed a dogma upon the subject of legitimacy. The Holy See desires all nations to submit at all times to the dictates of the secular laws of their respective governments, provided their conscience and religious convictions should approve of the same; and urges also obedience to authorities. The Holy See does not extend any preference to any particular form of government. It rests content as long as religious education is imparted to the children, where no attempts are made in abolishing the holy sacraments, where no interference in dogmatical matters is caused. It desires that the rights of the Church be respected, and ecclesiastical authority be supported, in order to stimulate and strengthen in the hearts of men a veneration of Almighty God. Regents as well presidents of republics can bring this to pass. It is, therefore, upon these grounds that the Holy See consented to the recognition of both these forms of government, and has so acted, not from any selfish motive, but convinced of discharging thereby an important duty. Reigning families are just as likely to die out as any other family. In such an event it would depend entirely upon chances and circumstances as to who may be placed upon the throne as successor. These events most assuredly do never occur without the permission of the King of kings, and it is then for His Vicar on earth to defend the righteous. How many legitimate reigning families have not lost by the dispensation of Providence their claim to their throne! The principle of legitimacy is not at all to be considered; but are we not falling into an error in imposing its vindication, under any circumstances, upon the Pope, even then, when it was forfeited by reason of the wrongs done by such families; or, is it presumed that the functions of the bishops and priests differ in one state, whether monarchy or republic, from another?"

THE FOLLOWING story is told by General Harry Heth: "One day General (now senator) Gordon and I were ordered to attack General Grant's lines near Petersburg, and we accordingly moved out toward the front. Gordon, you know, is a preacher, and a man of pious, devotional habits. Just before the action began, he said, 'General, before we go into action, would it not be well to engage in prayer?' 'Certainly,' I replied; and he and his staff retired into a little building by the roadside, and I and my staff prepared to follow. Just then I caught sight of my brother, who was with some artillery a little way down the road, and thinking to have him join us, I called out to him by name. 'Come,' said I, pointing to the building we were just entering. 'No, thank you,' he answered; 'I have just had one.'"

THEOLOGY gets a little mixed in the youthful mind. "Who made you?" asked a teacher of a little girl. She answered, "God made me that length," putting her hands about twelve inches apart; "and I grewed the rest myself."

Poetry.

[For THE INDEX.]

THE MARCH OF THE AGES.

The brain that asks its nobler food,
The innate virtue that would last,
Must seek, revering all that's good,
And garner teachings from the past.

The darkened past was still not wise
'Mid all its wondrous deeds, and yet
It teaches to our searching eyes
A lesson that we can't forget.

The living present is not wise,
But, moving onward on its way,
Lends unto truth its aid, and dies
Ere Nature hails another day.

Thus march we on from age to age,
The babe is born, the young grow old,—
And every year adds but a page
Unto the tale that's never told.

HORACE L. TRAUBEL.

WHERE IS GOD?

BY REV. M. J. SAVAGE.

"Oh! where is the sea?" the fishes cried,
As they swam the crystal clearness through.
"We have heard from of old of the ocean's tide,
And we long to look on the waters blue.
The wise ones speak of the infinite sea,—
Oh! who can tell us if such there be?"

The lark flew up in the morning bright,
And sung and balanced on sunny wings;
And this was its song: "I see the light,
I look o'er a world of beautiful things;
But, flying and singing everywhere,
In vain I have searched to find the air."

CASH RECEIPTS.

N.B.—Postage stamps are not included here, though credited on subscriptions, etc.

FOR THE WEEK ENDING FEBRUARY 2.

J. Alfred Griffiths, $7.50; Miss Marian Hovey, $200; D. B. Grandin, $1.85; Geo. E. Jewett, $3.20; E. C. Alphonse, $4; John Casson, $3.20; Wm. L. Bowditch, $10; J. Van Raa, 10 cents; H. Clay Neville, $11.50; A. Howland, $3.20; New England News Co., $11.10; F. V. Balch, $3.20; U. H. Crocker, $3.20; A. Folsom, $3.20; D. Kirkwood, $1; L. B. Farrar, $2; Mrs. J. S. Kelly, $3; J. L. Batchelder, $1; F. H. Badger, $3.20; Geo. W. Park, $3.20; Mrs. A. B. Percival, $3.20; Dr. E. Wigglesworth, $3.20; F. H. Henshaw, $3.20; Caroline Wellington, $3.20; J. D. Atkins, $3.20; Dr. E. P. Gregory, $5.87; M. F. Dean, $2.20; Dr. L. F. Babb, 25 cents; J. F. Root, 5 cents; Samuel Keese, $2; D. R. Burt, $4.80; Rev. A. J. Belknap, $2.25; J. Aulbach, 10 cents; B. B. Tabor, $3; M. Block, 25 cents; George Stinson, $5; E. A. Lindsey, $3; A. A. Knight, $10; B. Manke, $3.20; B. B. Welch, $3.20; H. B. Sherwin, $2.20; Daniel D. Millet, $2.20; Nathaniel Cummings, $3.20; J. Chappell Smith, $3.20; Charles Graves, $3.20; Joseph Singer, $3.20; J. T. Brady, $3.20; William Sabine, $3.20; Dr. T. H. Everts, $3.20; Charles Collins, $3.20; Mrs. J. O. Mill, $3.20; S. G. Haynes, $3.20; Thomas H. Knowles, $3.20; L. Spaulding, $3.20; Hamilton Littlefield, $3.20; United States Military Post Library Association, $3.20; Mrs. M. M. Ballou, $3.20; William Howland, $4.40; Miss S. E. Dunn, $3.20; John Adams, $3.20; John L. Whitling, $3.20.

The Index.

BOSTON, FEBRUARY 7, 1878.

THE INDEX is published every Thursday by the INDEX ASSOCIATION, at No. 231 WASHINGTON STREET, BOSTON. TOLEDO OFFICE, No. 35 MORRIS STREET; J. T. FREY, Agent and Clerk. All letters should be addressed to the Boston Office.

THE INDEX accepts every result of science and sound learning, without seeking to harmonize it with the Bible. It recognizes no authority but that of reason and right. It believes in Truth, Freedom, Progress, Equal Rights, and Brotherly Love.

N. B.—No contributor to THE INDEX, editorial or otherwise, is responsible for anything published in its columns except for his or her own individual statements. Editorial contributions will in every case be distinguished by the name or initials of the writer.

FRANCIS ELLINGWOOD ABBOT, Editor.
OTAVIUS BROOKS FROTHINGHAM, WILLIAM J. POTTER,
WILLIAM H. SPENCER, MRS. E. D. CHERRY, GEORGE JACOB
HOLYOAKE (England), DAVID H. CLARK, MRS. ELIZABETH
CARY STANTON, J. L. STODDARD, ELIZUR WRIGHT, C. D. B.
MILLS, W. D. LE SUEUR, BENJ. F. UNDERWOOD, ALBERT
WARREN KELSEY, Editorial Contributors.

AS PLACES where the next Annual Congress of the National Liberal League may be held, Buffalo, Chicago, and St. Louis have been prominently mentioned. Of course the city which offers the most in the way of local aid and encouragement, financial and otherwise, will have the best chance. Our Buffalo friends are quite anxious to have the Congress there. The Directors desire only that which is best for the cause in general. What suggestions have the liberals to offer?

A REQUEST TO LIBERAL EDITORS.

At a meeting of the Directors of the National Liberal League, held in this city on Friday, January 18, it was

Voted, To request the editors of liberal papers all over the country to publish the Directors' "Call to Organize" new Local Auxiliary Liberal Leagues on Washington's birthday,—also the "Card" of the Financial Committee, as follows:—

Call to Organize.

CITIZENS of the United States who indorse the appended political platform adopted in convention by the National Liberal League, at Rochester, N.Y., Oct. 26, 1877, are requested to meet in their respective cities and towns on Washington's Birthday, Feb. 22, 1878, for the purpose of organizing themselves into Local Auxiliary Liberal Leagues in accordance with the provisions of the National Liberal League Constitution. Copies of the latter and blanks for organization can be obtained from W. H. Hamlen, Secretary, 231 Washington Street, Boston, or from H. L. Green, Chairman of the Executive Committee, Salamanca, N.Y.

FRANCIS E. ABBOT,
WILLIAM H. HAMLEN,
J. A. J. WILCOX,
H. L. GREEN,
D. G. CRANDON,
BOSTON, Jan. 18, 1878.

Directors
N.L.L.

Platform of the National Liberal League.

1. TOTAL SEPARATION OF CHURCH AND STATE, to be guaranteed by amendment of the United States Constitution: including the equitable taxation of church property, secularization of the public schools, abrogation of Sabbatarian laws, abolition of chaplaincies, prohibition of public appropriations for religious purposes, and all other measures necessary to the same general end.

2. NATIONAL PROTECTION FOR NATIONAL CITIZENS, in their equal civil, political, and religious rights: to be guaranteed by amendment of the United States Constitution, and afforded through the United States courts.

3. UNIVERSAL EDUCATION THE BASIS OF UNIVERSAL SUFFRAGE IN THIS SECULAR REPUBLIC: to be guaranteed by amendment of the United States Constitution, requiring every State to maintain a thoroughly secularized public school system, and to permit no child within its limits to grow up without a good elementary education.

N.B.—The nomination of candidates upon the above platform was postponed to a future Congress of the National Liberal League.

A Card.

The Finance Committee of the National Liberal League, in consequence of the lack of funds in the Treasury, and of the fact that the Directors are able to do so little of the important work that ought to be done, appeal to all lovers of liberty for financial help, to enable them to publish and disseminate the views of able writers in behalf of the principles of the Rochester Platform, and to advance the common cause in other equally proper ways.

If earnest liberals throughout the United States will contribute one dollar apiece (with as much more as their generosity shall prompt or their means permit), in order to become Annual Members of the National Liberal League, they will furnish the requisite aid, and the work shall be done.

DANIEL G. CRANDON, } Financial
HARLAN P. HYDE, } Committee
SARAH B. OTIS, } N.L.L.

SPECIAL NOTICE.

Attention is specially called to a change in the advertisement of the Publications of the Free Religious Association. By a recent vote of the Executive Committee the Annual Reports of the Association, from the year 1872 to the year 1877 inclusive, are now offered at five cents each (and at the same rate for any larger number) to any body who will take the trouble to send for them, enclosing five cents in postage stamps. They will also be sold at the office for the same sum to any one calling for them there.

The Committee have put the pamphlets at this low rate, which hardly more than covers the cost of sending them by mail, with the hope that they may thereby be more extensively circulated. By referring to the advertisement describing their contents, it will be seen that they contain much matter of special interest on the most vital religious problems of the age. It is not too much to say that some of the most valuable contributions of the last five years to religious discussion may be found in these pamphlets. Let any one who wants to know what the Free Religious Association means, send for these Reports. And will not the members and friends of the Association take this opportunity to extend the knowledge of its principles?

WM. J. POTTER,
Secretary F.R.A.

THE MILWAUKEE Common Council, on motion of Alderman Shaughnessy, lately adopted the following resolutions with only one dissenting vote:—

Whereas, The normal schools and universities of the State of Wisconsin are educational institutions, built and maintained in pursuance of our public school system, and are supported by general taxation: and

Whereas, The custom is known to prevail in the normal schools and State universities of inviting clergymen of various denominations to deliver moral or religious lectures to the students, of reading extracts from the Bible and other works of a religious character, and of daily opening school with the saying of prayers and singing of hymns; and

Whereas, The good of our school system and consequently the public welfare, demands that our public schools shall be wholly secular in their character; therefore be it

Resolved, That the people of Milwaukee, represented by the Common Council of the city, protest against these customs, believing them to be at variance with the spirit of our institutions and calculated to lessen public interest and confidence in our schools.

Resolved, That the Legislature of the State is hereby requested to enact such laws, during its coming session, as shall forever prohibit and prevent (1) the employment of a clergyman of any denomination, while engaged in such calling, in the capacity of principal, tutor, or moral instructor, in any of the public educational institutions in the State; (2) the saying of prayers, the reading of religious works, the singing of hymns, and the performance of all other sectarian or religious ceremonies.

Resolved, That the City Clerk be instructed to forward a copy of these resolutions to the secretary of the Milwaukee delegation, with a request that the necessary bill be introduced in the Legislature and supported by the members from this city.

REV. G. E. GORDON, of Milwaukee, lectured on "Church Taxation," under the auspices of the Liberal League of that city, at the Academy of Music, January 18. The lecture was a very able and forcible one, and at its close the following resolutions were adopted by the large audience:—

Whereas, In conformity to the fundamental principles of our government, the functions of the State are and ought to be purely secular; and

Whereas, The exemption of churches and church property from taxation, either in whole or in part, is in opposition to this principle, a violation of the spirit and letter of the Constitution, antagonistic to religious liberty and equality, detrimental to true morals and degrading to religion; therefore,

Resolved, That the laws and practices of the State should be made to strictly conform in every particular to the complete and thorough separation of religion and the State by taxing all church property, without distinction or abatement, on a basis of equality with all other taxable property.

Resolved, That we heartily endorse the late action of the Common Council of Milwaukee, embodied in a series of resolutions introduced by Alderman Shaughnessy, as being eminently wise and patriotic in spirit and substance, touching the relations of religion and the State in our public schools and State institutions.

Resolved, That the Common Council be and is hereby respectfully but earnestly requested to consistently carry out the principle of the resolutions by adopting a resolution instructing our members of Assembly to use their influence to secure such enactment as may be necessary to the equal and just taxation of all churches and church property.

Resolved, That copies of these resolutions be forwarded to the Common Council and to the Legislature.

AN ATTACK ON MICHIGAN UNIVERSITY.

Rev. Dr. Cocker, one of the leading Professors of the University of Michigan, made an address on December 12 at the inauguration of Rev. Dr. Fluke as President of Albion College, one of the petty sectarian institutions of that State. This address contained passages which directly impugn the whole policy of sustaining any college not controlled by the Christian Church; and it has not unnaturally stirred up the people of Michigan, who prize their noble educational institution at Ann Arbor. Dr. Cocker talked exactly like Bishop McQuaid, using almost the self-same words, as follows: "Education in the true sense is the legitimate work of the Christian parent, and of the concerted action of parents and churches in a Christian college. The State has not the constitutional authority nor the intellectual and moral competency to provide for and control the higher education." And again: "We believe that religious education is as essential to the welfare of the human race as scientific education on what is called 'the purely positive method.' The Christian Church is prepared to supply that religious education by 'voluntarism.' If the positivists believe that scientific education by their method is essential to the welfare of the human race, let them do the same. With 'a fair field and no favor' the truth will prevail." The Coldwater Republican calls these words a "thrust" at the State University. The Ypsilanti Sentinel points out that Dr. Cocker "takes similar ground with respect to States, colleges, and universities that the Catholics have long maintained toward the whole system of State education." The Marshall Expounder, an enemy to the University, upholds him in his views, and denounces bitterly the principle of State education. The Detroit Post and Tribune pertinently asks: "Does he believe that the University should be 'disestablished?' Does he wish to build up sectarian colleges at the expense of the University? Or were his remarks of a temporary, not to say temporizing character, put forth rather for the sake of harmonizing himself with the demands of the occasion, and made purposely ambiguous? He clearly ought to speak, since he did not speak clearly." A vigorous writer in the Detroit Free Press characterizes Dr. Cocker's remarks as "A Blow at the University," and points out that a "Christian College," as he uses the term, is a "sectarian college."—"In short, a thoroughly orthodox college"; and he truly and forcibly adds: "He [Dr. Cocker] manifestly means war upon the University of Michigan, if not upon the whole educational system of the State. . . . That these views prevail to a considerable extent among the clergy of one or two of the Protestant denominations, the public has had ample reason to believe. This belief has been induced mainly by acts of ill-concealed hostility to the University, by the discussions rather than the acts of ecclesiastical assemblies, and by the utterances of the religious press. The public expression of such views by a Professor of Mental and Moral Philosophy in the University, and the leading representative in that institution of a large and powerful denomination, is a fact of no small significance. It indicates that the time has come when patriotic and liberal-minded citizens of all shades of religious opinion should unite to defend the University against the insidious attacks of narrow and bigoted sacerdotalism."

From a private letter on this subject written by an eminent jurist of Michigan, whose name we are not authorized to use, but whose reputation would be a guarantee of the accuracy of his statements, we venture to quote the following extracts:—

"You are probably pretty well informed as to the character and history of the Michigan University. It was at the outset largely endowed in lands by the General Government, and has thus far had a reasonably successful career. It is strictly a State institution, supported in part by taxation, as are our primary schools. It is a part of the State system of educational institutions. It can, however, scarcely be regarded as a secular institution in the same sense and degree in which the inferior schools are; for, to appease the jealousy and hostility of religious sects, the governing body (the Regents) have at all times felt themselves compelled to make concessions in the matter of appointments to Professorships, etc., which have given to the religious and sacerdotal element what has seemed to me an undue control. Still it is as near an approach to a secular institution as any I know of, except Cornell University.

"There are several distinctly denominational institutions in the State called 'colleges'—one Baptist, one Congregationalist, and one Methodist. Albion College is a Methodist concern. They are all feeble institutions, having a hard struggle for existence in competition with the University, which completely overshadows them.

"Dr. Cocker is a Methodist clergyman and Professor of Moral and Intellectual Philosophy in the University, and has been for several years. He is in my judgment a thorough Jesuit, but has a commanding influence in his sect. Considering the position he occupies, the passages I refer you to in his 'charge' appear to me quite significant. There are other circumstances, tending to increase their significance, which I cannot now refer to in detail. The Baptists and Methodists, apparently acting in concert, have been for a long time and in various ways waging a half-concealed warfare upon the University, after the theological or sacerdotal fashion. Circumstances have induced me to observe what was going on quite closely. . . . The University will have to battle for its very existence very soon. Of this I am thoroughly persuaded; but the warfare upon it has been thus far so secret and Jesuitical that only now and then a person apprehends, or can be made to apprehend, the danger."

These facts are full of warning and instruction. Neither secular education nor secular government can long sustain itself anywhere, so long as Christianity retains the least share in political management; its own inextinguishable and insatiable lust of power makes it an eternal plotter against freedom. While the American people are sleeping, they are in great danger of losing that which has made them what they are. The secularity of their institutions cannot be maintained without making them still more rigorously secular. False security is the Republic's most deadly enemy.

PARKER PILLSBURY ON THE SIXTEENTH AMENDMENT.

When was this veteran soldier of liberty silent, if the love of liberty bade him speak? We rejoice that there are at least a few to comprehend the issue and the hour, and thank him for these strong and stirring words:—

The Edmunds Amendment.

CONCORD, N.H., Feb. 1, 1878.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE INDEX:—

I thank you, and all your readers should thank you, for your able, excellent, and timely words of warning and wisdom, in this week's INDEX, on the proposed Sixteenth Amendment to the Constitution.

Were you abroad among the people as I am, your heart would sink in absolute despair, when you see how the apathy, the indifference of the people prevent them from knowing or even seeing how fast their liberties are sliding from under their feet, were it not that you, like me, have long ago cast the words "Discouragement" and "Despair" out of your dictionary.

The people won't heed, nor, to any great extent, hear you. They won't hear the Eternal God, speaking trumpet-tongued through millions of pages of history, all down four thousand years!

The people wouldn't hear Garrison, nor Phillips, Theodore Parker, Abby Kelley, nor Lucy Stone. But they heard Fort Sumter and Bull Run; and the groans of half a million dead and dying men!

They won't hear you; but at your peril be it if you do not speak out! Another Sumter and Bull Run are in sight. When they come, as come they must and will, you will then be glad and thankful for your every utterance. Garrison and Phillips said no word too much; you cannot. But while they preached and warned and expostulated, the slaves increased from two million to four million! Your experience is not to be greatly unlike theirs. But take heart; they triumphed, and so at last shall you; for the eternal spirit of Truth and Right hath spoken it.

With your mortal sight you may not see the day as do they. But you shall surely triumph, as did they.

Again I thank you for the brave words on the "Edmunds Amendment," and am yours for the conflict, till death or victory, PARKER PILLSBURY.

IS THE LIBERAL LEAGUE EQUIVALENT TO THE CHURCH OF RATIONALISM?

In a recent number of THE INDEX, the present writer offered a plea for the initiation, and ultimate establishment, of a Church of Rationalism, which should sustain, as a transforming and quickening influence, a correspondent relation to the age of reason, upon which we have entered, to that which the existing Church has sustained to the ages of faith we are leaving behind us.

The communication was honored with a request from the editor for a statement of the "precise additions" considered necessary to constitute the Local Liberal League the Church of Rationalism proposed. "Such an attempt," on the part of its author, it was remarked, "will, we suspect, show him that he has hitherto imperfectly comprehended the breadth and fulness of the Liberal League movement."

Having been from the first an earnest sympathizer with the movement just referred to, and given to it the full measure of the influence we possess, of course we cannot be supposed to harbor any other than friendly feeling toward it in this case. But the Liberal League, we contend, does not and cannot take the place of the Church of Rationalism, which I aimed to suggest.

The design of the Local Liberal League is evidently to concentrate attention upon the principles of the National Liberal League in particular sections and communities, and thus secure those endeavors in their behalf, which shall result in putting them at length into effect throughout our whole political system and domain. What are the principles of the National Liberal League which are thus represented? What are its objects? A glance at the platform adopted at its recent convention at Rochester, N.Y., answers the question. It will be seen at once that they are purely of a political character. They pertain wholly to matters of civil polity, the rights and privileges of citizens. The special, distinctive aim of the Liberal League with respect to these, according to its own declaration, repeated again and again, is the detachment of ecclesiastical from civil affairs; in other words, "the separation of Church and State," so far as such a union can be shown to exist in our country. Now, supposing that all that is here implied were accomplished,—supposing complete religious freedom, according to the fullest conception, or interpretation, even, of the contemplated Religious Freedom Amendment to the Constitution, were secured for each and all of the citizens of the republic throughout the whole length and breadth of it,—all, in a word, which the Liberal League demands, would there not still remain a vast work for humanity to be done, of social improvement, moral and intellectual culture and progress? Must there not always be an ideal life toward which humanity may be pointed, and the possibility of providing favorable conditions and aids for quickening aspiration and promoting advancement toward it? Must there not always be, as the necessary result of the limitation of human faculties, and the circumstances of human life, a work of helpfulness for us to do for others, or of philanthropy? If such is the case, there will be a demand for the Church of Rationalism even when the Liberal League has fulfilled its mission. Nay, there is now, in conjunction with it, one which, if it should not precede the steps taken in that direction, should certainly not be allowed to lag far behind them. Indeed, we maintain that in the majority of instances when there is a collection of liberals sufficiently numerous for the organization of the one or the other, the Church of Rationalism is the most immediate need, the thing which should command the first attention. For while the grievances which the Liberal League aims to correct and remove are real and indisputable, they rest with comparative little weight upon people in general, and had better be entirely overlooked for a time, or left to the ameliorating and eradicating influences of progressive civilization, than the objects for which the Church of Rationalism would stand, and of which the Liberal League takes no direct cognizance, should be neglected.

There is, of course, just ground for complaint that churches are exempt from contributing to the public expenses; that chaplains in the army and navy, congress, and elsewhere, should be supported by the tax of the people, irrespective of their views as to the value of such services, or approval of the expenditure. But these, unjust as they unquestionably are in principle, do not fall very heavily upon the average citizen, and probably compare very unequally, as a direct drain upon the public treasury, with its continual depletion through government mismanagement and corrupt political practices. And so, also, in regard to the Bible in the public schools. Contrary as it is to the principles of a secular State, which we believe is the only kind a State has a right to be, practically it is of small importance compared to whether our children shall be wisely trained, in respect to the duties of life, in morals and character. The same may be affirmed in respect to unjust legal discriminations, on account of religious belief; admitting that they are gross outrages upon the liberty of the individual, it is only here and there one who is materially affected by them, or upon whom they press severely enough to know of their existence.

With all due allowance, then, for the significance and scope of the Liberal League movement, it will be seen that there are certain provisions and aims which we include in the conception of a church, even the most liberal or rationalistic one, which it does not pretend to include.

It is difficult to state the "precise additions" requisite to render the Liberal League a Church of Rationalism. It may be said, in brief, it can become such only by considerably enlarging the plan of its objects and changing its character. And this we believe might be done without any loss of its identity, or its effectiveness to the cause which it represents. Indeed, we believe that liberalism as a whole would be strengthened. It has got to begin with the education of its children and thus insure them from becoming the allies, hereafter, of effete creeds and benighting superstitions. This is more likely to be accomplished through the medium of a liberal Sunday-school, in most cases, than any other. In addition to this, as has been hitherto intimated, there should be regular Sunday meeting, social occasions, and various cultivating and philanthropic activities. Such a church would be a Liberal League so long as there is any occasion for one, and longer, and survive as an incalculable power in society and the life of man when the League and the cause it represents no longer have an existence.

In closing, we are impelled to say the Free Congregational Society of Florence, Mass., comes more nearly to the realization of the Church of Rationalism, as we conceive of it, than any organization with which we have an acquaintance. D. H. C.

[As we suspected, our valued contributor has forgotten that the Local Liberal League is designed to do all that any liberal society can do. For proof of this, we simply quote these articles from the "Form of Constitution for Local Auxiliary Liberal Leagues," recommended by the National Liberal League:—

ARTICLE II.—The objects of this association shall be, first, to cooperate with the National Liberal League in furtherance of the public objects, both general and specific, enumerated in its Constitution; and, secondly, to promote the welfare of our own members as a local liberal society, as provided in this Constitution.

ARTICLE V.—The officers of this League shall be a President, Secretary, Treasurer, and four Councillors. All these shall constitute the Board of Directors, which shall have general management of the affairs of the League, subject only to instruction by the League itself. They shall appoint from among the other members of the League committees on Public Work, on Public Discussion, on Social Affairs, and on Finance; and each Councillor shall be chairman of one of these four committees.

The committee on Public Work shall mature measures for cooperating efficiently in the common cause with the National Liberal League, especially in circulating its documents, petitions, appeals, etc., and carrying out locally the various objects of the Liberal League movement.

The committee on Public Discussion shall mature measures for sustaining regular Sunday meetings for public debates, lectures, etc.; and they shall be charged with the general conduct of the same.

The committee on Social Affairs shall mature measures for holding frequent social assemblies for the benefit of the younger members of the League; and also for regular Sunday meetings of a Children's Fraternity, to promote the moral instruction and social enjoyment of the children.

The committee on Finance shall mature measures for raising the funds necessary for these various objects; and also measures for establishing a Relief Fund to be devoted to the assistance of poor, sick, or distressed members.

All these measures shall be proposed to the Board of Directors, and, after being combined in a single general plan, shall be submitted by them to the League for approval.

All appropriations from the treasury shall be by vote of the Board of Directors; and all orders on the treasury shall be signed by the President and Secretary.

It will be seen that Mr. Clark has considered only half of the objects of the Local Liberal League.—ED.]

Communications.

REAR-ADMIRAL MAXSE AND WOMAN SUFFRAGE.

Of late years I have written little for the press on the subject of woman suffrage. This is not because my convictions upon the subject have changed, or my interest decreased. It is partly because my mind is widely known and my "matter" pretty thoroughly used by those who advocate this cause. Partly, also, because I do not approve of mixing this question with political issues; and believe that I can serve the world better by helping women to "higher education," to "home study," and other necessary preparations for an enfranchisement which is inevitable.

As a rule, what is inevitable need not be discussed; but my attention has been drawn to a lecture on "Woman Suffrage" by Rear-Admiral Maxse. If I have no means of judging of the Admiral's social or political weight, still less can I imagine what has obscured the issues and cobwebbed the eyes of the women of England, if the accounts he gives of their movements be true.

For many years I kept up an active correspondence with the women foremost in this demand, and watched their every step. Of late I have turned my attention to the work done by Josephine Butler and Octavia Hill; and meanwhile their position, or that of their successors, seems to have strangely changed.

What first put it into any woman's head to demand suffrage for single women alone? Certainly not the property-qualification merely, for there are in England, as in this country, a large number of married women entitled to rank as well as property in their own right. Certainly not the expectation of checking possible domestic dissension; for are those single women who possess property to be deprived of fathers, brothers, and lovers? I agree with Admiral Maxse, that this demand for partial woman suffrage is a base counterfeit.

In a note attached to the fourth page, the Admiral quotes a reply of Lydia Becker to Mr. Stephen, to the effect that the "percentage of women who lose their lives in the dangers incident to the profession of marriage exceeds the percentage of soldiers killed in battle!"

In what battle? Who furnished Miss Becker with these absurd statistics? Where did she learn that marriage was a profession? What physiology has she studied that she does not understand that marriage is natural to man and woman, and celibacy unnatural? that the perils of marriage are the perils of healthy human life, and of that only? It is hardly necessary to suggest to a sane mind that, whatever they are, they are voluntarily undertaken, and are not to be pleaded as an argument for any thing, least of all for suffrage.

According to Admiral Maxse, the women of England think to obtain complete suffrage by inserting the "thin end of this wedge"—the thin edge of spinster suffrage—into existing institutions.

If there are any men and women of adult years in an abnormal position, certainly these are the unmarried men and women; and of the two, unmarried men are very apt to have that wider experience which leads to charitable judgment and grave consideration, rather than unmarried women. The vices of a bachelor may make him considerate. The virtues of a spinster tend to narrow her judgment. I make this statement broadly, loving and honoring many single women as my wisest and dearest friends.

Does not every one know how, in cases of unequal or unhappy marriage, the judgment of a single woman is dreaded? It is the wife, not the spinster, who is qualified for the jury in such cases. It is the wife, not the spinster, who is qualified to arbitrate in a discordant household.

It is purely as a compromise to present public opinion, and not because of any special fitness in spinsters, that this enfranchisement is thought of. Let women have done with compromise. It does not become them; and I for one would never seek the franchise for those who are capable of it.

"A proposal to enfranchise married women would be scouted," says Mrs. Fawcett. Undoubtedly; and therefore Mrs. Fawcett and others should set themselves to work to create the public sentiment which will not allow that proposal to be scouted. They should not treacherously yield to it, by asking for the half-loaf which will content no one. Who will have the heart to contend for a measure which excludes the wife and mother from the polls? Surely none of those who understand the social and civil dangers of the young!

"The priest can more readily excite women than men against public measures," the Admiral thinks; and this is put as if it were the result of a certain weakness in women. That is possible; but it also grows out of that disinterested strength in women, which enables them to contend through life against evils which have never touched them personally. Among men it is only the "fanatic" who consents to such a struggle.

"Women are excluded from suffrage," says our author, "as they are excluded from the army,—without contempt." Of course they are; and nothing in the present conduct of the woman's cause is so ill-judged and vulgar as the creation of a false issue between men and women. Twenty years ago, rhetoric was endurable because men needed to be roused. We told them they were "tyrants," just as Garrison said slavery was the "sum of all villainies." But men have roused themselves; and although it is impossible to refrain from the expression of lofty womanly contempt for many things that they say—such things, for example, as the recent discussion of a Latin School for girls has brought out,—still, it is neither fair nor delicate to charge intentional injustice towards women upon the men of our generation.

The present state of things originated in the necessities of a barbarous society; was continued by the demands of feudal law and chivalrous breeding. Nor has there ever been a time, until recently, when women could safely have exercised the freedom now claimed. Let us be reasonable. I, at least, would rather trust the justice of the men of to-day than that of the women, taking both from the cultivated classes; and I challenge my own sex to make me ashamed of the admission as soon as they possibly can. I echo the Admiral's words, when he says that "women make themselves supremely ridiculous when they mimic Hampden by refusing to pay taxes and allowing their spoons to be sold."

My taxes protect my property, furnish me and the public with police, with reformatories, and public schools; they carry out measures concerning which all sane minds agree. The illogical reasoning, the foolish waste of property, exhibited by women in such resistance is not calculated to win the respect of legislators.

So far the Admiral touches what he truly calls a counterfeit movement. So far as his arguments against legitimate woman suffrage are concerned, they were all answered twenty years ago; and the question can no longer be considered one of opinion. It asks for an experimental basis. If the "more women interest themselves in politics, the better it will be for all of us," why not give them the legitimate foundation of all interest; namely, function? The only bridge which will ever span the Admiral's "dreary sea" is suffrage.

It is impossible to repress a smile, however, when our author goes on to say, "Marriage is as often slavery to the man as it is to the woman!"

Is there no difference in the servitude willingly yielded by affection, the result of individual weakness, or possibly a chivalrous mistake, and that compelled by legal disability?

I am very much ashamed of Mr. Goldwin Smith when he undertakes to answer for the women of France. Certainly, no woman ever did a sillier thing than that, for there is no possible basis of knowledge in the case. Equally foolish is it for any man to say that to command respect, the law must be "man-made."

The law is neither male nor female. Its seat and true birthplace into the world of man is, as Hooker long since said, "in the bosom of God."

The Admiral proceeds to talk of the "constitutional timidity" of woman in a way that I cannot understand. Taken at a venture, women are both physically and morally braver than men; and this courage is precisely what the legislation of the world has never shown. It does not follow that men have courage because they are more prompt to provoke war than women. All true courage lives side by side with endurance, and subsists also with caution.

The Admiral tells us that he writes of the average woman. Certainly the school-master cannot be abroad in the region he inhabits. The women we know here in America are made of different stuff, and will be so long as common schools exist. "The women who hate war and adore the army, who pity the plumage and forget the dying bird," are fortunately not very common with us.

For the first time, I perceive in this pamphlet a proof of the "constitutional timidity" of man. Should suffrage ever be granted to women, the Admiral thinks women will be in the majority; and then should their legislation prove oppressive nothing less than a rebellion will set man free! A little further on he claims that the inconveniences attending the serving of women on juries in Wyoming have caused the practice to be quietly abandoned. If this be true, which I doubt, one would think he could have trusted the commonsense of mankind to find the needful safety-valve. After all, there is no sharp battle between us. He believes "in the utmost practicable emancipation of women." So do we; but we seek it in our own way. When he finds fault with Charlotte Corday, Admiral Maxse shows that he moves with his century; but the Charlotte Cordays have been the women whom men have delighted to honor. The "hour has come and now is" when a far loftier womanhood challenges the public approval.

I pity the woman who wishes herself a man. It is quite possible, as the Admiral says, that she has masculine energies; but she certainly has but a poor conception of adequate womanhood.

This pamphlet holds a great deal of nonsense, which I had hoped never to see in print again; but part of it is quoted from women. God made men to be fathers, and women to be mothers; the one thing is about as dangerous to life as the other. That which involves the highest natural happiness of both sexes, as well as their highest spiritual development, is not to be named by sane people in connection with the unnatural horrors and sufferings of war.

In conclusion, I will repeat what I said the only time I ever had the honor to stand on the same platform with Julia Ward Howe: What noble women do shrink from, and yet that which, for woman's true education, they must unflinchingly endure, is the absurdity, weakness, and unwomanliness only too often inseparable from the management of the woman's cause in woman's hands.

"From my foes I will defend me,"
Cried the Spaniard, as he went;
"From your friends may God defend you,"
Was the answer Echo sent.

CAROLINE H. DALL.

THE CHELSEA LIBERAL LEAGUE.

EDITOR OF THE INDEX:—

On Tuesday evening, January 15, a goodly company of ladies and gentlemen assembled in the neatly furnished and spacious parlors of D. G. Crandon, 98 Bellingham Street, Chelsea, to celebrate the first anniversary of the Chelsea Liberal League. The company was more than usually large, most of the original members, with some new ones and invited guests from Boston, Cambridge, and Chelsea being present.

By eight o'clock the larger part of the company had arrived, and the conversation had become general. Cheerfulness and agreeability characterized the interchange of thought, while some occupied themselves in friendly discussion. The main interest, however, centred in the expected essay of the evening, as it was generally known that Mr. F. E. Abbot, of THE INDEX, was to favor the League with his services on this occasion.

At half-past eight o'clock the President, D. G. Crandon, invited attention to the business of the evening. The minutes of the previous meeting were read and approved, and Mr. Abbot, the essayist, was introduced.

Mr. Abbot, by way of introduction, remarked that the essay was not what he would submit to the League, did his already overtaxed time permit him to prepare another and more appropriate one.

It had already been delivered and published; but on further reflection, he considered the subject-matter too important to be laid aside with the once using.

Attention was then invited to 'Jesus and Socrates' as they appeared in 'The History of Religion.' He said a just comparison of the two loftiest moralists which humanity had yet produced, would be of great value in the settlement of living issues. Five centuries of theological conflict had been preparing the Christian world for a religious revolution. Hitherto Christianity has had for competitors only the inferior phases of historic religions. To-day it must meet the universal religion of humanity; for free religion is, briefly, religion itself freed from the limitations which cling to all its historic forms.

Religion in its infancy is under the authority of individual teachers or Messiahs; but in its maturity it becomes free faith in universal humanity. From childhood to manhood, from subjection to liberty, from persons to ideas, from Christianity to free religion; this is the order of Nature and the course of history.

The peculiarities and parallels of these distinguished characters were then detailed. Their beginnings and outlooks in "the work-shop," as "public teachers" and friends of "publicans and sinners," was placed in forcible contrast with their dislike of the aristocratic and political classes of their times, supporting, if not justifying the assumption of "their own divine mission." The illustrations were taken from every department of their lives, and alike true to character and history, doing justice to Socrates as well as to Jesus.

The conclusion reached by Mr. Abbot is so fundamental to the ethics of the League, and so forcibly illustrates the distance and difference that separates the moralism of history from the mere generalizations of the individual, that it is submitted verbatim. Mr. Abbot continued:—

"But we shall miss the chief lesson of our comparison, unless we set in contrast the great predominant aims of the two, and the methods which their aims required. These aims were wide apart as the northern from the southern pole. Jesus aimed to establish the kingdom of heaven upon earth; in which he himself, by the grace of God, was to wear the diadem of absolute power. This was the will of God, and to that he bowed with perfect submission. The conception that power over all things was his by divine appointment and divine right, which is conspicuous on every page of the gospels, was wholly free from all that could with propriety be called selfish, in any bad sense of the word; but it was, nevertheless, intensely egoistic. It pervaded his whole consciousness, lent a certain majestic dignity to his mien and tone, and clothed him with a spiritual royalty of demeanor that has scarcely been equalled before or since. It gave the peculiar coloring to his parables, so many of which represent the 'Son of Man' as a nobleman or king. It gave the peculiar character to his whole method of instruction; which is in the highest degree didactic, regal, and authoritative. Nowhere is this more strikingly evident than in the Sermon on the Mount, which is so often appealed to to prove his freedom from Messianic self-assertion. The simple statement at the end that he 'spoke as one having authority,' shows how completely the kingly consciousness had attained itself to the people, 'Verily, verily I say unto you,'—how frequent is that phrase upon his lips! Nor is its frequency explained by the theory that he was simply announcing his private intuitions on their own intrinsic authority. The true seer simply announces what he sees, and forgets himself; is false to his high office, if he emphasizes his own personality in the matter. He states the objective truth as he beholds it, and never obscures it by calling attention to his own eyes or lips. The seer-theory is no explanation of the ever-recurring, 'Verily, verily I say unto you.' That phrase is the Messianic equivalent of the legal prefix, 'Be it enacted.' It carries with it the whole authority of God, in whose name Jesus speaks. Declaring himself to be 'greater than Jonah and greater than Solomon' [Matt. xii., 41], Jesus, as a teacher, lays down the divine law,—he never argues. He states the truth, which must be accepted on his word. His entire method of instruction, therefore, is that of dogma,—the proclamation of eternal verities by one who is divinely authorized to proclaim them. He only once appeals to the active reason of man; he speaks to his receptive faculties,—deals out his gracious and benign truths, as he bestows the miraculous loaves and fishes on the starving multitude. It is all grand and beautiful and tender,—but he is surely blind who fails to recognize in all this that air and tone of dogma which has always been a peculiarity of the Christian Church, and has made 'salvation by belief' its most marked characteristic. The Church came honestly by it. It was an inheritance from its founder. We intend no reproach whatever to Jesus, when we say that the 'Verily, verily I' is the key-note of his whole religion. But truth itself, if accepted on the pure 'I say so' of a teacher, becomes falsehood in the end. It paralyzes, suffocates, kills. The vast sandy Sahara of the Middle Ages, when Christianity had the whole Western world at its feet, is the natural accompaniment of the sirocco-wind of dogma. Because spiritual royalty was the essential idea of Jesus' mission, dogma, pure and simple, was necessarily the method of his instruction; and he who sees no connection between his aim and his method must be blind to relations of cause and effect.

"But with Socrates, the case was the reverse of this. The divine mission which he believed to have been assigned him was not that of a Christ or King,—far from it. In his own metaphor, it was that of a gnat, stinging the noble but lazy horse of Athens into activity. [Plat. Apol. Soc. xviii.] Or, in a still homelier metaphor, which contains an allusion to his mother's occupation, he was sent to be the accoucheur of thoughts in the human mind,—to be the midwife of the pregnant intellect in the birth of its own off spring. [Plat. Theet. 17-22.] Stripped of all metaphors, the great aim of Socrates was, not to impart truths to his hearers outright, but by skillful questions and mortifying refutations so to develop the thinking faculties, as to enable his hearers to discover truths for themselves. In this view, therefore, his mission was, in the highest and noblest sense of the word, that of education,—the cultivation of germinal powers into conscious and vigorous maturity. Free development of the human mind,—that was the ideal end followed by Socrates with such untiring and unselfish zeal. More truly than any other human being, Socrates has earned the title of the GREAT EDUCATOR of the human race. He was the father of modern civilization as truly as of ancient philosophy, for his method was, and is, the only one that can develop the human mind. Dogmatism kills the mind; education brings it into life. These, however, are the two contrasted methods of Jesus and Socrates, viewed as moral instructors; the two contrasted methods, also, of Christianity and Free Religion. . . .

"To each of them, however, I would accord superiority in his own sphere. There is a tenderness and benignity and delicacy of spiritual perception in Jesus,—a wealth of sentiment and imagination,—a fervor of devotional life, and a profound consciousness of God, of which I find only hints in Socrates. Both were preeminently moral reformers; but they represent respectively the morality of the brain and the morality of the heart. To Socrates, virtue is knowledge; to Jesus, virtue is love. Hence from Socrates dates a great philosophic movement; from Jesus a great religious movement. Each occupies a partial standpoint, and the future must combine them both. The true morality is that which springs neither from brain nor heart alone, but is the outgrowth of the entire man. The true culture of humanity must be integral, inclusive both of Socrates and Jesus, the intellectual and the spiritual. For these two men are each one-sided; Socrates has too little of the woman in him, while Jesus has too much. Of the two, Socrates stands for the larger liberty,—Jesus for the larger love; and these must yet be joined forever in one, without sacrifice of either to the other. Free religion alone has the possibility of uniting in itself these diverse elements so long held to be contradictory in the Christian Church. It will yet prove that humanity, vaster than any man, is capable of a unity more powerful and more beautiful than the divinest vision of the divinest dreamer; and its root is no historic name or fame, but that universal soul which lives in you and in me and in all, but rises from unknown depths in the abysses of Eternal Being. Not to Jesus or to Socrates, of whom I must leave unsaid so much I would gladly say,—not to any single spirit of our race would I point for supreme guidance or perfect light; but rather to that great Soul of Humanity which throbs in all ages with the life of God, which fills our own arteries with the universal tide, and which makes of one brotherhood all the children of men."

At the close of the essay, the President said it was the custom of the League to discuss whatever was presented, and invited comment and criticism.

The Rev. Mr. Canfield was called on to take the lead, but declined in favor of the members of the League, as he might be prompted to controversy, though he appreciated the excellent spirit of the essay.

Mr. Abbot thought criticism rather than compliment would be in order.

Professor Toohy said the members of the League would no doubt agree with him in considering the analysis of the two highest developments of historic character very serviceable at the commencement of their second year. Strictly speaking, it did not come within the purposes of the League. Unfortunately, dogma was so mixed in one case, with otherwise good ethical teaching, that it was not easy to say whether principle or authority should rule. The Church is founded upon personality, Peter being authority, by the special selection of Jesus; and the Church of Rome from time immemorial has considered any and all religionists "thieves and robbers" who attempt to gain the heaven of right-doing by another means. The conclusion was no longer authority, however, and hence the need of the Liberal League and other unsectarian organizations. The lesson of the evening, therefore, was one of education, and a further realization of the need of separating dogma from principle. The rights of religionists must be recognized, but the rights of non-religionists must also be respected. Both have a common interest in recognizing individual right and the supremacy of secular law; for the one ignored the assumption of favoritism in ethics, and the other made partiality impossible before the law. Such education was the need of the hour, and came into the advent of a truer civilization to separate Church and State.

Rev. J. A. Canfield addressed some questions to Mr. Abbot, developing the thought that Jesus was as true to Nature and his conception of his personal mission as Socrates had been; and that there was no more egoism in the one than in the other. In fact, Jesus was but the embodiment of an idea, he being the mouthpiece of the Father. Under these circumstances, Mr. Canfield considered the assumptions and assertions of Jesus a necessary duty and an essential part of his office, and all the more, as he considered self-assertion a necessary part of the teacher's vocation. Egoism might be offensive; but that depended upon the character of the speaker and the nature of the occasion. The "Verily, verily I say unto you" of Jesus, therefore, might have been expressive of intended and solemn emphasis, rather than personal conceit; and as such should be exempt from the narrowness and selfishness of the common egoist. He did not accept these expressions, however, as the final or best phases of the divine character; nor did he consider Jesus as the ultimate development of the Father Spirit. On the contrary, he did not know but the time had come when Jesus must give place to other influences in the councils of men, though he had his doubts about it.

Mr. Abbot said that self-assertion and egoism were essential and necessary parts of the true character, and that no real and important work could be done in society without the use of one or both phases of such individuality. His objection to the egoism of Jesus, therefore, was because of the Messianic idea which gave it its peculiar character, and the consequences growing out of it, and saw no reason for modifying his criticism.

Mr. Canfield said he had no further objections to offer.

The president then informed the company they were invited to the back parlor to discuss the merits of, and inwardly digest, another kind of food supposed to be occasionally necessary. The doors were then opened, and the company became aware of the presence of a large extension-table tastefully dressed and most bountifully furnished with delicacies.

Later in the evening the "Sons of Joshua" found occasion to initiate some new members in an adjoining room, where everything went merrily.

But the time had passed and the evening had gone, and the next move was for home. It was a divided duty, however, for it was a pleasure to remain, though necessary to depart. A vote of thanks was passed for Mr. Abbot's address; friendly acknowledgments were made to Miss J. P. Titcomb and Mrs. D. G. Crandon for vocal and instrumental music, amid the general congratulations which were pressed upon the host and hostess for the very pleasant surprise of the evening. Thus opened the second year of the Chelsea Liberal League. J. H. W. TOOHEY, Secretary.

1874 BROADWAY, CHELSEA, Mass.

"SILVER" AGAIN.

EDITOR INDEX:—

It seems as if our silver-remonetizing friends see facts and principles by the shimmering silver moonlight, instead of the clear, golden sunlight of day. How else could A. J. Warner so misunderstand my meaning? I did not say, or mean to imply, that value depends solely on labor. The proposition I did make is true; namely, that the exchangeable value of merchandise (not works of art, curios, mementos, etc.) is regulated by its labor cost. I took it for granted that the "court knew some law," and did not deem it necessary to explain that I meant that the average price depends on the average cost.

No sophistry can do away with this plain fact, and no government or set of governments can, for any length of time, at this period of the world's history, fix an arbitrary price on any article of general production and use. No stamping of four hundred and twelve and one-half grains of silver worth in the markets of the world ninety-two one-hundredths of a gold dollar can make it permanently worth as much as the gold dollar, or more than ninety-two one-hundredths of it; but for a time long enough to inflict vast injury upon the working-classes, who are at all times in the aggregate the largest creditor class, to the extent, namely, of all the wages of labor, the owners of silver bullion, by having it coined at government expense, could with ninety-two dollars' worth of it, pay for one hundred dollars' worth of labor. Also, any debts could be paid with the dollar worth ninety-two one-hundredths of the gold dollar, and now worth less than the greenback.

Of late the advocates of unlimited silver seem to forget that in this country (as well as in all commercial countries) the volume of currency with which the business of the country is carried on is made up mainly of paper, or credits in some form, and that the tendency of progress is toward less and less use of the precious metals. The real basis of the currency is all the exchanging merchandise of the country, including the precious metals; and the more perfect the financial system becomes, the smaller the amount of gold and silver actually used as money in proportion to total transactions.

What Leckie says is true: "No extensive country can ever alter its currency from the precious metals to paper, and then back again to the precious metals, without seriously affecting the value of property among its neighbors." And so it would among its own people. The precious metals have not for the last fifty years at least been the currency of this country except to a very limited extent; and it would be utterly impossible to change to a metallic currency if we had a thousand times as much silver bullion as we have. Our currency has been mainly paper, and must continue so to be. The only question is, what sort of paper shall it be? Shall it be a promise to pay a dollar, universally agreed and believed to be a gold dollar (until the fall in the price of silver in the world's markets), which, owing to doubts about the ability or the willingness of the promisor, is not worth as much as the thing promised; or shall we have a currency or representative dollar, always worth as much as the gold it professes to represent?

It is as clear as that two and two make four, that if the silver bill passes, the greenback, instead of appreciating to the value of the gold dollar, will go back to be worth less than the silver dollar in which alone it would then be payable.

The remonetization of the four hundred and one-half grains dollar would be certain to drive all the gold out of the country, thus depriving us of far the largest part of the precious metals; and so far as that goes we should be worse off than we are now, for we should have but one kind of metallic money, and that silver. F. S. C.

THE SEX OF SIN.

"If she sin, does not her crime strike, not only a blow at the marriage relation, but also at the rights of property? And, therefore, does not a bad life in her tell worse upon society than a bad life in him? Is it desirable that offspring should be heirs of property? I contend that, as society is now organized, certain sins are worse in woman than in man."

The above, in THE INDEX of November 1, is from the pen of Elizabeth Oakes Smith, and indorsed by the editor. My sorrow that such sentiments should be uttered by a woman of influence was only equalled by my surprise at the indorsement.

That certain sins are worse in woman than in man is an old-time belief that should never have seen the light of this generation. This idea, advanced and acted upon by well-meaning, influential women, has made more libertines than the allurements of all the so-called fallen women.

We cannot expect men to object to being told that their evil deeds are only short-comings, while the same offence in woman "strikes a blow at the marriage relation." Many men like to hear that kind of talk,—it quiets a conscience ill at ease and gives them position in society where women, morally on the same plane, cannot enter.

So long as women teach their sons that crime is less a crime in them than in their sisters, so long will the brother define his sisters' social position, the lover betray and desert her who walks as uprightly as himself, and the husband prove recreant to the "marriage relation."

The property argument would be a forcible one if it would bear analyzing; and a good Christian argument, if God looks at sin with mercenary eyes. "Is it desirable that offspring should be heirs of property?" Certainly it is. But how is it in the case of the two families—the A's and B's? Mr. B is the father of Mrs. A's child. The property result is, Mr. A's property descends to the offspring of Mr. B. But to whom does Mr. B's descend? Not to his own child, ignored by him, yet tenderly cherished by the mother, whose crime is said to be greater than that of her guilty partner! She has caused property to be given to her child contrary to a law which she neither made nor sanctions; he has withheld property from his child that the laws of men have directed to be given it. Whose sin is the greater?

"It is to be fervently wished that the other sex should come up to our standard; not that we should go over to theirs."

I fully sympathize with Mrs. Smith in this wish. And yet it is hardly probable that the other sex will aspire to our standard, while taught from infancy that they may fall of reaching this high moral plane, and not be called to the same strict account for the failures that women are.

Let us who claim to love justice call sin sin,—whether committed by men or women; then we can consistently claim equality with "the other sex" we so much desire to elevate.

HELEN LOUISE BLACKMER.

[It was Mrs. Smith's teaching, as we understand it, that sins against chastity are, morally considered, equally reprehensible in man and in woman; but that, considered in their effects on society, they are "worse" in the latter. We think our correspondent has misapprehended Mrs. Smith; if she has not, we certainly did.—ED.]

"RESUMPTION IN ENGLAND."

EDITOR INDEX:—

It is a pity that Emily J. Leonard should prophesy evil on mistaken premises. The state of affairs in this country is very different from that of England in 1821. The bills of the Bank of England represent an equal amount of coin and bullion in the vaults.

Our currency never professed to do so; the gold or silver held by the banks was only a small portion of the amount of their bills issued; the basis, in fact, of the circulation being the merchandise of the country in the process of exchange.

The government cannot withdraw the circulation if it wishes. The moment the greenback is worth as much as a gold dollar, it will be preferred to the coin and will remain in circulation.

We certainly might have a much better system of banking than the present,—one which would give us a currency measured by the wants of business; but it must be one in which the dollar should be of the same value as the dollar recognized as honest and true by the civilized commercial nations with whom we deal. F. S. C.

A DRAG DRIVEN by an elegantly-attired lady, and with a trim and neatly-dressed colored boy perched on the footman's seat behind, was passing through the street, when it was espied by an old negro woman. "Bress de Lord!" she exclaimed, raising her hands as she spoke; "Bress de Lord, I never s'pected to see dat. Wonder whar dat cullud young gemman pays dat young white 'oman fur drivin' dat kerridge? I know'd it'd come, but never s'pected to lib to see it. Dis nigga's ready to go 'way now."

AS A SCHOOLMASTER was employed the other day, in Scotland, in his delightful task of teaching a sharp urchin to cipher on the slate, the precious pupil put the following question to his instructor: "Whaar dis a' the figures gang till when they're rabbit out?"

A CERTAIN little damsel, being aggravated beyond endurance by her big brother, fell down upon her knees, and cried: "Oh Lord! bless my brother Tom. He lies, he steals, he swears; all boys do; us girls don't. Amen."

Advertisements.

THE PATRONAGE

of the liberal advertising public is respectfully solicited for THE INDEX. The attempt will be honestly made to keep the advertising pages of THE INDEX in entire harmony with its general character and principles, and thus to furnish to the public an advertising medium which shall be not only profitable to its patrons, but also worthy of their most generous support. To this end, all improper or "blind" advertisements, all quack advertisements, and all advertisements believed to be fraudulent or unjust to any one, will be excluded from these columns.

THE INDEX must not be held responsible for any statement made by advertisers, who will in all cases accept the responsibility for their own statements.

ADVERTISING RATES.

For 1 to 12 insertions, 10c per line.
" 13 " 25 " "	8 " "
" 26 " 51 " "	6 " "
" 52 " " " "	5 " "

On half-column advertisements, a discount of 10 per cent. will be made; on full-column advertisements, a discount of 25 per cent.

On all advertisements for which cash is paid in advance, a further discount of 25 per cent. on the total, as above calculated, will be made. FRANCIS E. ABBOT, Editor.

TO ADVERTISERS.

The following states the experience of a successful Bookseller who has advertised in THE INDEX:

TOLEDO, Ohio, Sept. 20, 1872.

TO THE INDEX ASSO., Toledo, O.:
Gentlemen,—Having had occasion to advertise in your paper during the past two years quite largely, I take pleasure in stating that I have always obtained very satisfactory returns—better in fact than from book advertisements in any other paper I have advertised in. Not only have I obtained immediate results, but orders have frequently been received months after the insertion of the advertisement, showing that your paper is kept on file and referred to by your readers.

Yours truly,

HENRY S. STEBBINS.

Special arrangements will be made at reduced terms for long-time or extended advertisements. Address

THE INDEX,
No. 231 WASHINGTON STREET,
Boston.

CULTURED FREE THOUGHT.

The Index Association,

OFFICE, No. 231 WASHINGTON ST., BOSTON, publish

THE INDEX,

A Weekly Paper devoted to Free and Rational Religion.

It is the object of THE INDEX to give public utterance to the boldest, most cultivated, and best matured thought of the age on all religious questions, and to apply it directly to the social and political amelioration of society.

It is edited by FRANCIS E. ABBOT, with the following list of Editorial Contributors:—

O. B. FROTHINGHAM, New York City.
WILLIAM J. POTTER, New Bedford, Mass.
WILLIAM H. SPENCER, Haverhill, Mass.
MRS. E. D. CHENEY, Jamaica Plain, Mass.
GEORGE JACOB HOLYOAKE, London, Eng.
DAVID H. CLARK, Florence, Mass.
MRS. ELIZABETH CADY STANTON, Tena-
ly, N.J.
J. L. STODDARD, Boston.
ELIZUR WRIGHT, Boston.
O. D. B. MILLS, Syracuse, N.Y.
W. D. LE SUEUR, Ottawa, Can.
BENJ. F. UNDERWOOD, Thorndike, Mass.
ALBERT WARREN KELSEY, St. Louis, Mo.

Every liberal should subscribe for THE INDEX as the best popular exponent of Religious Liberalism. Every Christian minister, and every thinking church-member, should subscribe for it, as the clearest, most candid, and most scholarly exposition of the differences between Free Thought and Evangelical Christianity, and as the best means of becoming well informed of the arguments and the movements which the Church will have to meet in the future.

Almost every number contains a discourse or leading article, which alone is worth the price of one year's subscription.

Prof. MAX MUELLER, of Oxford, England, in a letter to the Editor published in THE INDEX for January 4, 1873, says: "That the want of a journal entirely devoted to Religion in the widest sense of the word should be felt in America—that such a journal should have been started and so powerfully supported by the best minds of your country,—is a good sign of the times. There is no such journal in England, France, or Germany; though the number of so-called religious or theological periodicals is, as you know, very large." And later still "I read the numbers of your INDEX with increasing interest."

Send $3.25 for one year, including postage, or 9 cents for three months on trial.

Address THE INDEX,
No. 231 Washington Street, Boston.

PUBLICATIONS INDEX TRACTS.

OTHER

FREE

RELIGIOUS

ASSOCIATION.

Freedom and Fellowship in Religion. A volume of ten essays upon speculative and practical problems of religion, by D. A. Wasson, Samuel Longfellow, Samuel Johnson, John Weiss, W. J. Potter, F. E. Abbot, O. B. Frothingham, J. W. Chadwick, T. W. Higginson, and Mrs. E. D. Cheney, and extracts from Addresses by Ralph Waldo Emerson, Lucretia Mott, Robert Dale Owen, Dr. Bartol, Wendell Phillips, Rabbi Wise, Horace Seaver, A. B. Alcott, Lucy Stone, Charles H. Malcom, Julia Ward Howe, and others,—all given on the platform of the Free Religious Association. Price (reduced) $1.50.

"One purpose of this volume is to give an answer to the question, What is the meaning of the Free Religious Association?"

Proceedings of Fifth Annual Meeting, 1872. Contains essays by J. W. Chadwick on "Liberty and the Church in America," by C. D. B. Mills on "Religion as the Expression of a Permanent Sentiment of the Human Mind," and by O. B. Frothingham on "The Religion of Humanity," with addresses by Rowland Connor, Calla Burleigh, Lucretia Mott, A. B. Alcott, C. A. Bartol, Horace Seaver, Alexander Loos, and others.

Proceedings of Sixth Annual Meeting, 1873. Contains essays by Samuel Johnson on "Freedom in Religion," and by John Weiss on "Religion in Freedom," with addresses by Wm. C. Gannett, Robert Dale Owen, T. W. Higginson, Samuel Longfellow, J. B. Thomson, F. E. Abbot, and Lucretia Mott.

Proceedings of Seventh Annual Meeting, 1874. Contains verbatim reports of President Frothingham's address on "The Validity of the Free Religious Platform," of Dr. Bartol's essay on "The Religious Signs of the Times," of Rabbi Sonnenschein's speech on "Reformed Judaism," and of the statements by Messrs. Galtrop, Abbot, and Higginson of their respective attitudes towards Christianity,—as "Christian," "Anti-Christian," and "Extra-Christian,"—together with the Secretary's Annual Report, and letters from Keshub Chunder Sen, Frederick Douglass, and D. A. Wasson.

Proceedings of Eighth Annual Meeting, 1875. Contains Essays by Wm. C. Gannett, on "The Present Constructive Tendencies in Religion," and by Francis E. Abbot, on "Construction and Destruction in Religion," and addresses by T. W. Higginson, Lucretia Mott, Chas. G. Ames, O. B. Frothingham, B. F. Underwood, S. P. Putnam, and E. S. Morse.

Proceedings of Ninth Annual Meeting, 1876. Contains a full abstract of the interesting discussion at the Business Meeting on the Practical Methods and Work of the Association; the annual report of the Executive Committee; address of the President, O. B. Frothingham; essay by James Parton, on "The Relation of Religion to the State" (or, as he styles it, "Cathedrals and Peer"), with addresses on the subject by Miss Susan H. Wixon and Rev. M. J. Savage; essay by Samuel Longfellow, on "The Relation of Free Religion to Churches," with the addresses that followed it by Prof. Felix Adler, Rev. Henry Blanchard, Rev. Brooke Herford, and John Weiss,—together with letters from Judge Doe, Rev. Joseph Cook, and others, invited to speak.

Proceedings of Tenth Annual Meeting, 1877. Contains Essays by Rev. Wm. B. Alger, on "Steps towards Religious Emancipation in Christendom," and by C. D. B. Mills, Esq., on "Internal Dangers to Free Thought and Free Religion"; Addresses by O. B. Frothingham, Wm. Henry Channing, Rabbi Laeher, Dr. J. L. Dudley, and T. W. Higginson; and tenth annual report of the Executive Committee, Treasurer, etc.

Any one of the above pamphlets of "PROCEEDINGS" sent to any address for five cents received in postage stamps; and more at the same rate. Sold also for five cents at the office.

For series of important Tracts see last page of THE INDEX.

These publications are for sale at the office of the Free Religious Association, 231 Washington Street, Boston. The Annual Reports for 1868 and 1871 cannot be supplied, and the supply of others previous to that of 1872 is quite limited and at special rates. Orders by mail may be addressed "Free Religious Association, 231 Washington Street, Boston, Mass."

WM. J. POTTER, Sec. F. R. A.

No. 1.—Truths for the Times, by F. E. Abbot, contains the "Fifty Affirmations" and "Modern Principles." MRS. CHARLES DARWIN, author of "The Origin of Species," says, in a letter to the editor not originally intended for publication, but subsequently authorized to be used: "I have now read 'TRUTHS FOR THE TIMES,' and I admire them from my inmost heart; and I agree to almost every word." New Edition. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00.

No. 2.—Fear of the Living God, by O. B. Frothingham, exposes the debasing character of the popular notions of God, and presents conceptions of him that are worthy of the nineteenth century. New Edition. Price 5 cents; 12 copies 50 cents.

No. 3.—Lecture on the Bible, by the Rev. Charles Voysey, of England, is an overwhelming demonstration of the imperfections and errors of the Bible, both in the Old and the New Testaments. New Edition. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00.

No. 4.—Christian Propagandism, by F. E. Abbot, is an exposure of the weakness, costliness, and inefficiency of the System of Foreign Missions. Full of Figures, Facts, and Interesting Extracts. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00.

No. 5.—"God in the Constitution", by Rev. Arthur B. Bradford, opposes the proposed Theological Amendment to the United States Constitution. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00.

No. 6.—"The Sabbath", by Parker Pillsbury, denounces Sabbatarian superstition. New Edition. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00.

No. 7.—"Compulsory Education", by F. E. Abbot, maintains the right of every child to be educated, and the duty of the State to ensure it an education. Price 5 cents; 12 copies 50 cents.

No. 8.—The Present Heaven, by O. B. Frothingham, treats of a subject that interests everybody. New Edition. Price 5 cents; 12 copies 50 cents.

No. 9.—The Christian Amendment, by F. E. Abbot, shows the dangerous character of the attempt to interpolate the Evangelical Christian Creed in the U. S. Constitution. Price 5 cents; 12 copies 50 cents.

No. 10.—The Impeachment of Christianity, by F. E. Abbot. Fourth Ten Thousand. Sent for free distribution to any one who will distribute it, in packages of from five to one hundred copies.

No. 11.—The God of Science, by F. E. Abbot, attempts to show the real influence of modern science upon the idea of God. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00.

No. 12.—Is Romanism Real Christianity? Two essays by Francis W. Newman and F. E. Abbot. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00.

No. 13.—On the Vision of Heaven, by Prof. F. W. Newman, of England, analyzes the Christian conception of Heaven. Price 5 cents; 12 copies 50 cents.

No. 14.—A Study of Religion: The Name and the Thing, by F. E. Abbot, attempts to show that the popular derivation of the word Religion is incorrect; that the popular conceptions of Religion itself are inadequate; and that a new conception of it, based on the Law of Evolution, consistent with absolute Freedom of Thought, and independent even of belief in God, is the necessary condition of the perpetuity of Religion among men. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00.

No. 15.—The Battle of Syracuse. Two Essays by Rev. James Freeman Clarke, D.D., and F. E. Abbot discussing the Authority of Christianity. Price 10 cents; 12 copies for $1.00. Address

THE INDEX, 231 WASHINGTON STREET,
Boston, Mass.

THE INDEX,
A Weekly Journal

DEVOTED TO

FREE RELIGION.

PUBLISHED BY THE

INDEX ASSOCIATION,

AT

No. 231 Washington Street, Boston.

EDITOR:

FRANCIS ELLINGWOOD ABBOT.

EDITORIAL CONTRIBUTORS:

O. B. FROTHINGHAM, New York City.
W. J. POTTER, New Bedford, Mass.
W. H. SPENCER, Haverhill, Mass.
MRS. E. D. CHENEY, Jamaica Plain, Mass.
GEORGE JACOB HOLYOAKE, England.
DAVID H. CLARK, Florence, Mass.
MRS. ELIZABETH CADY STANTON, Tena-
ly, N.J.
J. L. STODDARD, Boston.
ELIZUR WRIGHT, Boston.
C. D. B. MILLS, Syracuse, N.Y.
W. D. LE SUEUR, Ottawa, Can.
BENJ. F. UNDERWOOD, Thorndike, Mass.
ALBERT WARREN KELSEY, St. Louis, Mo.

THE INDEX aims—

To increase general intelligence with respect to religion:

To foster a nobler spirit and quicken a higher purpose, both in society and in the individual:

To substitute knowledge for ignorance, right for wrong, truth for superstition, freedom for slavery, character for creed, catholicity for bigotry, love for hate, humanitarianism for sectarianism, devotion to universal ends for absorption in selfish schemes.

In brief, to hasten the day when Free Religion shall take the place of dogmatism and ecclesiasticism throughout the world, and when the welfare of humanity here and now shall be the aim of all private and public activities.

In addition to its general objects, the practical object to which THE INDEX is specially devoted is the ORGANIZATION OF THE LIBERALS OF THE COUNTRY, for the purpose of securing the more complete and consistent secularization of the political and educational institutions of the United States. The Church must give place to the Republic in the affections of the people. The last vestiges of ecclesiastical control must be wiped out of the Constitutions and Statutes of the several States in order to bring them into harmony with the National Constitution. To accomplish this object, the Liberals must make a united demand, and present an unbroken front, and the chief practical aim of THE INDEX will be henceforth to organize a great NATIONAL PARTY OF FREEDOM. Let every one who believes in this movement give it direct aid by helping to increase the circulation of THE INDEX.

SPECIAL FEATURES.

The publication of a valuable leading paper or essay of a thoughtful character, in each issue, will continue to be one of the most marked features of THE INDEX.

Regular editorial contributions will continue to be furnished by the well-known eminent writers who have already done so much to give to THE INDEX its present high position. Other interesting correspondence, communications, extracts from valuable books and periodicals, and miscellaneous articles, will also be published; and such improvements will be made from time to time as circumstances shall render possible.

AGENTS.

Local Agents for THE INDEX are wanted in every city and town throughout the country. The most liberal terms are offered.

TERMS.

The price of THE INDEX is Three Dollars a year, payable in advance; and 30 cents postage for the year; and at the same rate for shorter periods. All remittances of money must be at the sender's risk, unless forwarded by cheque, registered letter, or post-office money order. The name, with address in full, must be accompanied with the money in each case.

Address THE INDEX,
No. 231 Washington Street, Boston.

POPULAR BOOKS,

SENT BY MAIL

AT

PUBLISHERS' PRICES!

ORDERS PROMPTLY FILLED.

NO EXTRA CHARGE FOR POSTAGE.

ANY BOOK in the subjoined List, or any other OBTAINABLE BOOK that may be desired, will be forwarded as promptly as possible on receipt of orders accompanied with the CASH.

Orders are respectfully solicited from

all friends of THE INDEX.

ALLOTT (A. BRONSON). Tablets.	1.50
Concord Days.	1.50
Records of a School. A new edition.	1.50
ALLOTT (LOUISA M.). Little Women. Two vols.	3.00
Hospital Sketches and Camp and Fireside Series.	1.50
An Old-Fashioned Girl.	1.50
Little Men.	1.50
My Boys, &c.	1.00
Shawl-Straps.	1.00
Work; A Story of Experience.	1.75
ARABIAN NIGHTS' ENTERTAINMENTS.	1.50
ARNOLD'S (MATTHEW) Essays in Criticism.	2.00
New Poems.	2.00
Literature and Dogma.	1.50
AUERBACH (BERTHOLD). On the Heights. Villa Eden; The Country-House on the Rhine.	2.00
Edelweiss.	1.50
German Tales.	1.50
BACON'S Essays.	1.25
BAGEHOT on the English Constitution.	2.25
Physics and Politics.	1.50
BAIN (ALEXANDER). Mental Science: A Compendium of Psychology and History of Philosophy.	1.75
Moral Science: A Compendium of Ethics. 1 vol.	1.75
The Senses and the Intellect. Third edition. 1 vol.	5.00
BARTLETT'S Dictionary of Americanisms.	2.50
BARTLETT'S Familiar Quotations.	3.00
BARTOL (REV. C. A.). Radical Problems.	2.00
The Rising Faith.	2.00
BASTIAN (H. CHARLTON). The Beginnings of Life. 2 vols.	3.50
BRACKETT (ANNA O.). The Education of American Girls.	2.00
BROOKS (CHARLES T.). Translations. The Layman's Breviary.	2.25
The World-Friest.	2.25
The Tall Student.75
BURCHER'S Force and Matter.	2.25
BUCKLE (HENRY THOMAS). History of Civilization in England and France, Spain and Scotland. New edition of the entire work, with a complete index. 2 vols.	5.00
CARLYLE'S Works. Cheap edition. Comprising the following: Miscellaneous Essays, 1 vol.; French Revolution, 3 vols.; Frederick the Great, 10 vols.; Cromwell's Letters, &c., 5 vols.; Sartor Resartus, 1 vol.; John Sterling, 1 vol.; Life of Schiller, 1 vol.; Past and Present, 1 vol.; Heroes and Hero Worship, 1 vol.; Latter Day Pamphlets, 1 vol. All volumes sold separately. 21 vols. London, 1871-3. Per vol.90
CARPENTER (DR. W. B.). The Principles of Mental Physiology, with their Applications to the Training and Discipline of the Mind, and the Study of its Morbid Conditions.	2.00
CERVANTES' Don Quixote.	1.50
CHANNING (WM. ELLERY, D.D.). The Perfect Life. In Twelve Discourses. Edited from his manuscripts by his nephew, Wm. Henry Channing.	1.50
CHANNING (WM. ELLERY). Thoreau: The Poet-Naturalist. With Memorial Verse.	2.50
CHENEY (MRS. E. D.). Patience. A Series of Thirty Games for the Fireside.	1.00
Social Games. A new Series of Games for Parties, uniform with Patience.	1.00
Sally Williams, the Mountain Girl. Illustrated.	1.50
CLARKE (JAMES FREEMAN). Ten Great Religions.	3.00
Common-Sense in Religion.	3.00
CLARKE (DR. E. H.). Sex in Education.	1.25
CLODD (EDWARD). The Childhood of the World.75
COBBE (FRANCES POWER). Studies New and Old, of Ethical and Social Subjects. Darwinism in Morals, and other Essays.	2.00
The Religious Demands of the Age.30
CONWAY (MONCURE D.). The Earthward Pilgrimage.	1.75
CORRELATION and Conservation of Forces: A Series of Expositions by Grove, Helmholtz, Mayer, Faraday, Leibig and Carpenter; with an Introduction by Edward L. Youmans, M.D. 1 vol.	2.50
CULTURE DEMANDED BY MODERN LIFE: Its True Aims and Requirements. A Series of Addresses. By Tyndall, Huxley, Whewell, Faraday, Spencer, Draper, Watson, Lyell, &c. Edited by Edward L. Youmans.	2.50
CALL (MRS. CAROLINE H.). The College, the Market, and the Court; or, Woman's Relation to Education, Employment, and Citizenship.	1.50

Historical Pictures Retouched; a Volume of Miscellanies. In two parts, Part I, "Studies, Pictures, and Fancies"	1.
DARWIN'S Origin of Species.	1.00
The Descent of Man.	1.00
Journal of Researches.	2.00
Emotional Expression of Man and the Lower Animals.	2.50
The Variation of Animals and Plants under Domestication. 2 vols., illustrated.	5.50
DESCARTES (RENE). Discourse on the Method of Rightly conducting the Reason and Seeking Truth in the Sciences.	2.25
DICKENS' Child's History of England.	1.50
DUHRING (JULIA) Philosophers and Fools. A Study.	2.00
ELIOT'S (GEORGE) Novels. Household Edition. 5 vols., each.	1.00
Comprising— Adam Bede.	1.00
Somerset.	1.00
The Mill on the Floss.	1.00
Eliza Harner and Scenes of Clerical Life. The Same. Library Edition. 2 vols.	3.50
Middlemarch. 2 vols.	3.50
Wit and Wisdom of	1.25
The Spanish Gypsy.	1.50
EMERSON'S (R. W.) Essays. First Series.	1.50
Essays. Second Series.	1.50
Miscellaneous.	1.50
Representative Men.	1.50
English Traits.	1.50
Conduct of Life.	1.50
Poems. With Portrait.	1.50
May-day and Other Poems.	1.50
Essays. Blue and Gold.	1.25
Poems. Blue and Gold.	1.25
Prose Works. 2 vols.	5.00
Society and Solitude.	1.50
EVANS (K. P., Ph. D.). First Historical Transformations of Christianity. From the French of Athanasius Coquerel the Younger.	1.50
The Life and Works of Gotthold Ephraim Lessing. Translated from the German of Adolf Bahr. 2 vols.	5.50
FARRAR'S Critical History of Free Thought, in reference to the Christian Religion.	2.50
FEUERBACH (LUDWIG). The Essence of Christianity. "George Eliot's" translation.	3.00
FISKE'S (JOHN) Myths and Myth-Makers. Cosmic Philosophy.	5.00
FROTHINGHAM (O. B.) Religion of Humanity.	1.50
Child's Book of Religion.	1.00
Life of Theodore Parker.	3.50
FULLER'S (MARGARET) Complete Works, including Memoirs by Emerson, Channing, and others. A new edition. 8 vols.	5.00
GALTON (FRANCIS). Hereditary Genius. An Inquiry into its Laws and Consequences.	2.00
GOETHE'S Faust. Translated into English Verse by Ralph Taylor. 2 vols. Per vol.	5.00
Elective Affinities. Translated by Thomas Wilhelm Meister.	1.25
Carlyle. Portrait of Goethe. 2 vols.	5.50
Herman and Dorothea. Translated by Ellen Frothingham.	1.00
GREG'S (W. B.) Esquisses of Life.	2.00
Literary and Social Judgments.	2.00
Creed of Christendom.	7.00
GRUTE'S LIFE. Compiled from Family Documents, Private Memoranda, and Original Letters to and from Various Friends. By Mrs. Grote. Second Edition. With Portrait.	5.00
HAMKERTON (PHILIP G.) A Painter's Camp. Book I. In England. Book II. In Scotland. Book III. In France.	1.50
Thoughts about Art.	2.50
The Unknown Future.	5.00
The Intellectual Life.	2.00
Chapters on Animals.	4.50
HAMILTON (GAIL). Child World. Part Second.	1.00
Child World. Part First.	1.50
HAMILTON'S Lectures.	2.50
1. Metaphysical Lectures.	2.50
2. Logical Lectures.	3.50
HAWTHORNE'S (NATHANIEL) Works. New Illustrated Library Edition. Nine vols. Per vol.	2.00
Twice-Told Tales.	2.00
Mosses from an Old Manse.	2.00
The Scarlet Letter, and The Blithedale Romance.	2.00
The House of the Seven Gables, and The Snow Image.	2.00
The Marble Faun.	2.00
The English Note-Books.	2.00
The American Note-Books.	2.00
The French and Italian Note-Books.	2.00
Our Old Home, and Septimius Felton.	2.00
HIGGINSON'S (T. W.) Out-Door Papers.	1.50
Malbone.	1.50
Army Life in a Black Regiment.	1.50
Atlantic Essays.	2.00
Oldport Days.	2.50
HOWELL'S (WILLIAM D.) Their Wedding Journey.	2.00
Suburban Sketches.	2.00
Italian Journey.	2.00
A Chance Acquaintance.	1.50
HUGO'S (V.) New Novel, "Ninety-Three".	1.75
HUMBOLDT (ALEXANDER VON). Life of. Translated from the German. 2 vols., with three portraits.	10.50
HUME'S (DAVID) Essays and Life.	1.50
HUNT'S (MRS. HELEN). Verses.	1.25
Rita of Travel.	1.50
HUXLEY'S Man's Place in Nature.	1.25
On the Origin of Species.	1.00
More Criticisms on Darwin and Administrative Nihilism.50
A Manual of the Anatomy of Vertebrate Animals.	2.50
Lay Sermons, Addresses, and Reviews.	1.75
INGELOW'S (JEAN) Poems.	2.25
The Monitions of the Unseen.	1.50
Songs of Seven.	2.50
INGELOW'S (JEAN) Prose. Off the Skelton.	1.75
Studies for Stories.	1.25
Stories told to a Child. First and Second Series.	1.25
A Sister's Bye-Hours.	1.25
Moses the Fairy: A Story.	1.25
INGERSOLL'S (ROBT. G.) The Gods and Other Lectures.	2.00
INTERNATIONAL SCIENTIFIC SERIES. No. I. Forms of Water, in Clouds, Rain, Rivers, Ice, and Glaciers. By John Tyndall.	1.50
No. II. Physics and Politics; or, Thoughts on the Application of the Principles of "Natural Selection," and "Inheritance" to Political Society. By Walter Bagehot.	1.50

III. Foods. By Dr. Edward Smith.	1.75
IV. Mind and Body. The Theories of their Relations. By Alex. Bain.	1.50
V. The Study of Sociology. By Herbert Spencer, Esq.	1.25
VI. The New Chemistry. By Josiah P. Cooke.	2.00
VII. The Conservation of Energy. By Balfour Stewart, with an Appendix setting out of the Vital and Mental Applications of the Doctrine.	1.50
VIII. Animal Locomotion; or, Walking, Swimming, and Flying, with a Dissertation on Aëronautics. By J. Bell Pettigrew.	1.75
IX. Responsibility in Mental Disease. By Henry Maudsley, M.D.	1.50
JERROLD (DOUGLAS). Fireside Saints, Mr. Claude's Breakfast Talk, and other Papers.	1.50
JOHNSON'S (SAMUEL) Oriental Religions, and their Relation to Universal Religion. India.	5.00
JOSEPHUS. The whole Works of Flavius Josephus, the Jewish Historian.	1.50
JOWETT. The Dialogues of Plato. Translated into English, with Analysis and Introductions by B. Jowett, M.A. Master of Balliol College, Oxford, and Regius Professor of Greek. Four vols.	12.00
KERR (ORPHEUS O.). Versatilities, Poems, Pastoral, Sentimental and Humorous.	2.00
LECKY (W. E. H.) History of the Rise and Influence of the Spirit of Rationalism in Europe. 2 vols.	4.00
History of European Morals from Augustus to Charlemagne. 2 vols.	6.00
LEGGE'S Confucius' Life and Teachings.	4.00
Confucius and Chinese Classics.	2.50
LESSING'S (G. E.) Nathan the Wise. Translated by Ellen Frothingham.	1.50
LEWES' Physiology of Common Life. 2 vols.	2.50
Biographical History of Philosophy, from its Origin in Greece down to the Present Day. 2 vols.	4.00
Problems of Life and Mind. The Foundations of a Creed.	2.50
LEWES (G. H.) The Story of Goethe's Life.	1.50
LEWIN (REV. RAPHAEL, D.D.). What is Judaism? or, a Few Words to the Jews.	1.00
LONGFELLOW'S (H. W.) Poems. Portrait. 2 vols.	4.00
Prose Works. Portrait.	4.00
LOWELL'S (J. R.) Poems. 2 vols.	4.00
The Biglow Papers. First Series.	1.50
The Biglow Papers. Second Series.	1.50
Among my Books.	2.00
My Study Windows.	2.00
LOWELL (MRS. A. C.) Poems for Children.75
LUBBOCK (SIR JOHN). Origin of Civilization, and the Primitive Condition of Man. Pre-historic Times.	2.00
LYELL'S Principles of Geology. 2 vols.	5.50
MACDONALD (GEORGE) The Vicar's Daughter.	1.50
MANN (HORACE). The Life of Horace Mann. By his Wife.	2.00
Lectures and Annual Reports on Education. Annual Reports on Education, from 1839 to 1848.	2.00
Thoughts Selected from the Writings of Horace Mann.	1.25
MARTINEAU (JAMES) Essays, Philosophical and Theological. 2 vols. Per vol.	2.50
MAURICE (REV. F. D.) The Ground and Object of Hope for Mankind.75
MERIVALE'S (CHARLES) Conversion of the Roman Empire.	1.50
Conversion of the Northern Nations.	1.50
MILL (JOHN STUART). Dissertations and Discussions. 4 vols., each.	2.25
The Examination of the Philosophy of Sir William Hamilton. 2 vols., each.	2.25
The Positive Philosophy of Auguste Comte. Political Economy. New and revised edition.	2.50
The Subjection of Women—Essay on Liberty—Both in one vol.	2.50
Representative Government.	1.50
Autobiography.	2.25
Memorial Volume. His Life and Works.	1.5
Three Essays on Religion.	2.50
MILLER (JOAQUIN). Songs of the Sierras.	1.50
Songs of the Sun Lands.	1.50
MIVART (ST. GEO.) On the Genesis of Species.	1.75
MORLEY (PROF. JOHN.) Voltaire.	2.00
Rousseau, 2 vols.	5.00
MOULTON (LOUISE CHANDLER). Bed-Time Stories.	1.50
MUELLER (MAX, M.A.) Lectures on the Science of Language. First Series.	2.50
The Same. Second Series.	3.50
Chips from a German Workshop. Vol. I. Essays on the Science of Religion. Vol. II. Essays on Mythology, Traditions, and Customs. Vol. III. Essays on Literature, Biography and Antiquities. Three vols. Price per volume.	2.50
Lectures on the Science of Religion.	3.50
NABBY (PETROLEUM V.) Swingin' Round the Circle.	1.50
Ekkoes from Kentucky.	1.50
NEWMAN (FRANCIS W.) A History of the Hebrew Monarchy.	4.50
Catholic Union: Essays towards a Church of the Future, as the Organization of Philanthropy.	1.75
Theism, Doctrinal and Practical.	4.25
PARKER (THEODORE) A Discourse of Matters Pertaining to Religion.	1.50
Speeches, Addresses, and Occasional Sermons. 4 vols.	6.50
Additional Speeches, Addresses, and Occasional Sermons. 2 vols.	2.50
Critical and Miscellaneous Writings. Historic Americans—Franklin, Washington, Adams, and Jefferson. With an Introduction by Rev. O. B. Frothingham.	1.50
The two Christmas Celebrations.—A.D. I. and MDCCLV. A Christmas Story.50
PARSONS (THEOPHILUS) The Infinite and the Finite.	1.00
PHELPS'S (ELIZABETH STUART) The Gates Ajar.	1.50
The Trolley Book.	1.50
Men, Women, and Ghosts.	1.50
Hedged In.	1.50
The Silent Partner.	1.50
What to Wear?	1.50
PROCTER'S (ADELAIDE A.) Poems. Portrait. Cabinet Edition.	2.50

PROCTOR (RICHARD A.) Other Worlds than Ours: the Plurality of Worlds studied under the Light of Recent Scientific Researches. With Colored Plates.	2.50
Light Science for Leisure Hours. A Series of Familiar Essays on Scientific Subjects, Natural Phenomena.	1.75
Essays on Astronomy: A Series of Papers on Planets and Meteors, the Sun, &c. With 10 Plates and 24 Woodcuts.	4.00
The Moon, her Motions, Aspects, Sonnetary, and Physical Conditions, with Three Lunar Photographs and many Plates, Charts, etc.	5.00
The Expanses of Heaven.	2.50
RENAN'S Life of Jesus.	1.75
ROSETTI (CHRISTINA G.) A Shadow of Dante.	2.50
SCHLLEN (H.) Spectrum Analysis, in its Application to Terrestrial Substances, and the Physical Constitution of the Heavenly Bodies.	5.00
SCIENCE PRIMERS: 1. Introductory. By Prof. Huxley, F.R.S.50
2. Chemistry. By Prof. Roscoe.50
3. Physics. By Balfour Stewart. With Illustrations.50
4. Physical Geography. By Archibald Geikie, LL.D., F.R.S., fable cloth.50
SCOTT'S Waverley Novels. 35 vols.	21.50
SCOTT'S (THOMAS) The English Life of Jews. Second Edition.	2.50
SMILES'S (SAMUEL) Self-Help.	1.50
SPENCER (HERBERT) Education, Intellectual, Moral, and Physical.	1.25
First Principles.	1.25
Essays: Moral, Political, and Aesthetic. Illustrations of Universal Progress. A Selection of his best Papers.	2.50
Social Statics; or, The Conditions Human to Human Happiness Specified, and the First of them Developed.	2.50
The Principles of Biology. 2 vols.	4.00
The Principles of Psychology. 2 vols.	4.00
Philosophy of Style.50
Recent Discussions in Science, Philosophy, and Morals. New and enlarged edition.	2.50
Sociology.	1.50
Descriptive Sociology. Parts I, II, and III, each.	4.00
Life, Correspondence and Ethics.	2.50
Universal Progress.	2.50
STOWE (HARRIET BEECHER) Pink and White Tyranny.	1.50
Uncle Tom's Cabin.50
STRAUSS (D. F.) The Old Faith and the New.	2.50
New Life of Jesus. Authorized translation. 2 vols.	12.00
TAINES'S (H. A.) History of English Literature. 2 vols.	7.50
The Class-Room Taines. History of English Literature. Abridged and Edited by John Fluke.	2.00
TENNYSON'S (ALFRED) Poems.	1.75
THACKERAY'S (W. M.) Novels. Household Edition. Complete in 6 volumes. Per vol.	1.25
Vanity Fair.	1.25
The Newcomes.	1.25
Adventures of Philip.	1.25
Pendennis.	1.25
The Virginians.	1.25
Edmond, and Lovell the Widower.	1.25
Miscellaneous Writings. Household Edition. Uniform with the Novels. Complete in 5 vols. With new Portrait. Per vol.	1.25
This edition includes all the matter in the latest English editions, with many additions, thus making it, with the novels, the cheapest and most complete Thackeray in the market.
1. Barry Lyndon, Hogarty Diamond, &c.	1.25
2. Paris, and Irish Sketch-Books, &c.	1.25
3. Sketches, Denis Duval, &c.	1.25
4. Four Georges, Humors, &c.	1.25
5. Catherine, Christmas Books, and Unpublished Pieces.	1.25
THAYER'S (MRS. OLIVIA) Among the Isles of Shells.	1.50
THOREAU'S (H. D.) Walden; or, Life in the Woods.	2.00
Excursions in Field and Forest. Portrait.	2.00
The Maine Woods.	2.00
Cape Cod.	2.00
A Yankee in Canada.	2.00
A Week on the Concord and Merrimack Rivers.	2.50
TYLER (EDWARD B.) The Early History of Mankind.	1.50
Primitive Culture. 2 vols.	5.00
TYNDALL (JOHN). Faraday as a Discoverer.	1.00
Fragments of Science for Unscientific People.	2.50
Light and Electricity.	1.25
Hours Exercise in the Alps.	2.50
Heat as a Mode of Motion.	2.50
On Sound.	2.50
Radiant Heat.	2.50
Forms of Water.	1.50
Lectures on Light.	1.50
Proceedings at the Farewell Banquet to Prof. Tyndall.50
Lessons in Electricity.	1.50
Address before British Assoc'n at Belfast.50
TYTLES (SARAH) Old Masters and their Pictures.	1.50
Modern Painters and their Paintings.	1.50
VOYSEY (REV. CHARLES) The Sing and the Stone. Vols. I. and V., each.	2.50
Vols III, IV, and VI, each.	2.75
WARNER'S (CHARLES D.) My Summer in a Garden.	1.50
Sauterlings.	1.50
Back-Log Studies.	2.50
WEISS (JOHN) American Religion.	1.50
Life of Theodore Parker. 3 vols.	5.50
WHIPPLE'S (E. P.) Literature and Life.	1.50
Essays and Reviews.	2.50
Character and Characteristic Men.	1.50
The Literature of the Age of Elizabeth.	1.50
Success and its Conditions.	1.50
Washington and the Revolution.50
WHITNEY'S (MRS. A. D. T.) A Summer in Leslie Goldthwaite's Life.	1.50
We Girls: A Home Story.	1.50
Real Folks.	1.50
The Other Girls.	2.50
Panacea. A volume of Poems.	1.50
WHITTIER'S (JOHN G.) Poems. 2 vols.	4.00
Child Life.	3.00

ADDRESS:

THE

$66 a week in your own town. Terms and $5 outfit free. Address H. HALLITT & Co., Portland, Maine.

$5 to $20 per day at home. Samples worth $3 free. Address STINSON & Co., Portland, Maine.

GOLD Any worker can make $11 a day at home. Costly outfit free. Address TRUS & Co., Augusta, Maine.

SENT FREE on application—BRIGGS & BEO'S Flower and Vegetable Catalogue. Our large crops enable us to SELL SEEDS LOW.

ROCHESTER, N.Y., or CHICAGO, ILLS.

CLARK & CO.,
281 Washington St., Boston, Mass.,

Attend to the collection of claims in all parts of the United States and Canada.
Send for scale of charges.

TO BOOK-BUYERS
Please examine the revised list of POPULAR BOOKS on the opposite side of this page. Any OBTAINABLE BOOK NOT IN THIS LIST will be furnished to order. Address THE INDEX, 281 Washington St., Boston.

E. A. SAWTELLE,
PIANO-FORTE TUNER.

Fifteen years' experience. Satisfaction warranted. Organs skillfully tuned and regulated. Orders left at THE INDEX office, or at Oliver Ditson & Co.'s, 451 Washington St., Boston.

WEST NEWTON
English and Classical School.

The twenty-fifth school year of this Family and Day School for both sexes will begin WEDNESDAY, Sept. 19, 1877. For Circular and information apply to
NATH'L T. ALLEN,
West Newton, Mass.

THE INDEX AS AN
ADVERTISING MEDIUM.
Testimony of one who has tried it.

FLORENCE, Iowa, Jan. 5, 1878.
... THE INDEX is the best advertising medium which I have tried.
E. C. WALKER.

PHOTOGRAPHS OF
COL. INGERSOLL!

Down to hard times prices. Cards, 16 cents each; 2 for 25 cents; 5 for 50 cents. Cabinet size, 30 cents each; 2 for 50 cents. Send stamp for club list of Free Thought and Scientific papers.
E. C. WALKER,
Lock-Box B, Florence, Iowa.

BOUND VOLUMES OF THE INDEX for
1 8 7 7,

Complete for the Past Year, are now ready for delivery at this Office. Sent by express at the purchaser's expense. Price $3.00, in advance. Address THE INDEX, 281 Washington Street, Boston.

THE INDEX
IN ENGLAND.

THE INDEX will be forwarded free by post to any part of the United Kingdom on receipt of an annual subscription of Fifteen Shillings. For Half Year, Eight Shillings. Remittances should be made by International P.O. Order payable to Francis Ellingwood Abbot.
Address THE INDEX,
281 Washington Street, Boston, U.S.A.

THE BEST PORTRAIT OF
THOMAS PAINE.

Engraved by the famous W. Sharpe from Romney's celebrated portrait—

Heliotype Copy

by James R. Osgood & Co., of Boston. This is a beautiful work of art, and by all odds the very best likeness of Thomas Paine to be found. It is 10x8 inches in size, and will be mailed post-paid on receipt of $1.00. Address THE INDEX, 281 Washington Street, Boston.

PROGRESSIVE EDUCATIONAL PAPERS.

Published by

HALLMANN & DOERFLINGER,

Milwaukee, Wis.

(German) "ERZIEHUNGS-BLÄTTER," monthly, per year, $2.12.

(English) "THE NEW EDUCATION," a monthly tract for parents and teachers, devoted to Kindergarten Culture and Educational Hygiene in Home and School. Per year, 50 cents.

(English) The "New Education" TRACTS. Nos. 1 and 2 ready. Six copies (of any one number, or assorted) sent to any address on receipt of a 3-cent stamp.

GIRLS'—5 nice perforated notions for fancy work 10 cts. J. W. RUSSELL, Newton, Mass.

THE THEOLOGICAL WORKS

—OF—

THOMAS PAINE.

Complete in one volume, and containing the "Age of Reason," the "Discourse to the Society of Theophilanthropists," the "Examination of Passages of the New Testament," the "Thoughts on a Future State," the "Reply to the Bishop of Landaff," etc., etc. Price, $2.40. Sent by mail on receipt of price by
THE INDEX,
281 Washington Street, Boston.

NEW SUBSCRIBERS WANTED.

PREMIUMS

for NEW SUBSCRIBERS—$5.30 to be remitted in advance with each name sent in.

For One New Subscriber.

Either a complete set of Index Tracts; a bound copy of the Report of the "Centennial Congress of Liberals" at Philadelphia, July 4, 1876; any three Reports of the "Annual Meetings of the Free Religious Association" since 1871; Huxley's Origin of Species; John W. Chadwick's Book of Poems; or any obtainable book not costing over $1.

For Two New Subscribers.

Either a set of photographs of "leading Index writers"; a copy of Ingersoll's Lectures; a copy of Freedom and Fellowship in Religion—a collection of Essays and Addresses by O. B. Frothingham, W. J. Potter, John Weiss, T. W. Higginson, F. E. Abbot, and others; Darwin's Origin of Species; Draper's Conflict between Religion and Science; Huxley's Lay Sermons; a bound copy of THE INDEX for 1871 or 1872; Renan's Life of Jesus; or any obtainable book not costing over $2.

For Three New Subscribers.

Either Longfellow's or Bryant's complete Poetical Works (illustrated); Darwin's Descent of Man; Tyndall's Fragments of Science; Logos: Physical Basis of Mind; Frothingham's Transcendentalism in New England; Shakespeare's Complete Works; Frothingham's Life of Theodore Parker; or any obtainable book not costing over $3.

For Five New Subscribers.

Either Pierce's Memories and Letters of Charles Sumner; Emerson's Prose Works; Buckle's History of Civilization; Spencer's Psychology; Humboldt's Cosmos; Fluke's Cosmic Philosophy; Johnson's Oriental Religions. Vol. I., on "India"; Vol. II., on "China"; or any other obtainable book not costing over $5.

For Ten New Subscribers.

Either Webster's or Worcester's Dictionary (unabridged); Longfellow's Complete Works (200 illustrations, full gilt); either Dickens or Waverley Novels, complete in six volumes, and illustrated; Strauss' New Life of Jesus; or any other book or books not costing over $12.

Address THE INDEX, 281 Washington Street, Boston.

FROTHINGHAM'S WORKS.

THE RELIGION OF HUMANITY. An Essay. Third Edition—Revised. Price $1.50.

"Nobody can peruse this book without respect for the learning, mental honesty and skill in the statement of his convictions, possessed by the author, and for the essential integrity and philanthropic tendency of his spirit."—Springfield Republican.

"A profoundly sincere book, the work of one who has read largely, studied thoroughly, reflected patiently. It is a model of scholarly culture and of finished and vigorous style."—Boston Globe.

THE CHILD'S BOOK OF RELIGION. For Sunday-schools and Homes. Price $1.00.

THE SAFEST CREED, AND OTHER DISCOURSES. 12mo, Cloth, $1.50.

Not "food for babes," but full of suggestion for earnest and thoughtful men.

STORIES FROM THE LIPS OF THE TEACHER. With Frontispiece. Cloth, $1.00.

"The Parables are so re-told as to absorb the attention of the reader, and to fasten upon the mind what the writer believes to have been the impression the Saviour meant to convey. It is in style and thought a superior book, and will interest alike young and old."—Zion's Herald (Methodist).

STORIES OF THE PATRIARCHS. With Frontispiece. Cloth, $1.00.

"A work of culture and taste; it will be welcome to all ages, and gives the sublime lessons of manhood in the simple language of a child."—Springfield Republican.

BELIEFS OF THE UNBELIEVERS. A Lecture. 12mo, Cloth, $1.00.

TRANSCENDENTALISM IN NEW ENGLAND. A History. With sketches and studies of Emerson, Alcott, Parker, Margaret Fuller, the Brook-Farm Community, etc. 8vo, Cloth extra, with steel portrait of the author, $2.50.

THE LIFE OF THEODORE PARKER. 8vo. With Portrait, $3.00.

The New York Tribune closes a four and a half column review of this book by saying: "It holds up a remarkable specimen of robust manliness whose form and lineaments can be studied with equal advantage by friend and foe."

THE ORACLE OF THE CHRIST. A Study in Primitive Christianity, illustrating the prime importance of the Messianic Idea in the New Testament, as the key to the development of Christianity from Judaism. Octavo, Cloth, $1.75.

Mailed, post-paid, on receipt of price, by THE INDEX 281 Washington St., Boston.

MISS DEVEREUX' BOARDING AND DAY SCHOOL FOR YOUNG LADIES AND CHILDREN, at Irvington-on-Hudson, will re-open on Monday, Sept. 17, 1877. Miss Devereux refers, among others, to the following gentlemen: Rev. Orville Dewey, Sheffield, Mass.; Mr. A. C. Richards, Irvington, N.Y.; Mr. H. R. Bishop, Irvington, N.Y.; Mr. John E. Williams, Pres. Met. Nat. Bank, N.Y.; Mr. Wm. H. Orton, Pres. W. U. Telegraph Co., N.Y.; Mr. Moses H. Grinnell, N.Y.

POSITIVISM
AN EPITOME OF THE
Positive Philosophy and Religion,

Published by the Society of Humanity in the city of New York, contains the clearest statement of the subject ever made; also, Harriet Martineau's masterly defence of her religious convictions; and the Positive Classification of the Sciences, by T. B. Wakeman, etc., etc.

Send for it (enclosing 25 cents in postage stamps) to
HUGH BYRON BROWN,
President of the Society,
No. 141 8th St., N.Y. City.

LECTURES AND SERMONS.

BY
JOHN W. CHADWICK.

THIRD SERIES.

1. The Simplicity of True Religion.
2. The Rising Faith.
3. Fate and Freedom.
4. The Child Jesus.
5. The Angel Song.

The following numbers of the first and second series can also be supplied: Best Use of Sunday, Higher Reverence, Self-Respect, God on Our Side, Economy and Waste, Piety of Modern Science, Immortal Life, Moral Aspects of Belief in Immortality, Idealizing the Real, The Coming Man, A Rational Church.
Sent to any address, postage paid, at 5 cents per copy, by
JAMES MILLER,
778 Broadway, New York.

A NOTABLE TREATISE.
WOMAN SUFFRAGE.

THE COUNTERFEIT AND THE TRUE:

Reasons for Opposing Both.

BY

REAR-ADMIRAL MAXSE,

Of the British Royal Navy.

This is a little book of 74 pages, with neat paper covers, published in London, and presenting the reasons why a cultivated English gentleman is opposed to Woman Suffrage. It ought to be read and pondered by all who are interested in that question, on either side. Price, 25 cents. For sale at the office of THE INDEX, 281 Washington St., Boston.

GOOD PHOTOGRAPHS

OF

O. B. FROTHINGHAM,

T. W. HIGGINSON,

W. J. POTTER,

W. H. SPENCER,

F. W. NEWMAN,

CHAS. VOYSEY,

A. W. STEVENS,

R. H. RANNEY,

F. E. ABBOT,

Are now for sale at the office of THE INDEX, and will be mailed postpaid to any address on receipt of price. Single Photographs, 25 cents each; complete Set of Nine Photographs, $1.50.

Address, THE INDEX,
No. 281 Washington St., Boston, Mass.

FREE RELIGIOUS ASSOCIATION.

Send to Office at 281 Washington St., Boston, Mass., for

TRACTS.

I. TAXATION OF CHURCH PROPERTY, by James Parton. 5 cts.; ten, 30 cts.; one hundred, $1.50.

II. THE BIBLE AND SCIENCE, by John Weiss.

III. THE SYMPATHY OF RELIGIONS, by T. W. Higginson. Enlarged edition.

IV. TRANSCENDENTALISM, by Theodore Parker. Never before published.

V. THE PUBLIC SCHOOL QUESTION, as understood by a Catholic American citizen (Bishop McQuaid) and by a Liberal American citizen (F. E. Abbot). (Two Horticultural Hall Lectures, Feb. 13 and 20, 1876.)

VI. HOW SHALL WE KEEP SUNDAY? An Answer in Four Parts: 1. Sunday in the Bible. 2. Sunday in Church History. 3. Sunday in the Massachusetts Laws. 4. The Workingman's Sunday. By Charles E. Whipple, Minot J. Savage, Charles E. Pratt, and Wm. C. Gannett.

Nos. II., III., IV., V., VI., 10 cts. each; ten for 90 cts.; one hundred, $3.

REASON AND REVELATION, by W. J. Potter. 5 cts. (Ten for 30 cts.; one hundred, $1.50.)

PROCEEDINGS OF THE F. R. A. ANNUAL MEETINGS FOR 1872, '73, '74, '75, and '77. Five cents each.

FREEDOM AND FELLOWSHIP IN RELIGION, a volume of essays and addresses representing the F. R. A. platform. $1.50.

SEND ONE DOLLAR

For a handsome Certificate of Membership as an
ANNUAL MEMBER

of the NATIONAL LIBERAL LEAGUE.
For TWENTY-FIVE DOLLARS, a still larger Certificate of Membership as a

LIFE MEMBER,

Will be sent to any person; and individuals cannot render more efficient assistance to the National Liberal League than by making themselves Annual or Life Members of it.

The following extracts from the Constitution of the National Liberal League explain the privileges of membership:—

ARTICLE IV.—Any person who shall pay one dollar into the treasury shall be entitled to a certificate, signed by the President and Secretary, as an annual member of the National Liberal League. Any person who shall pay twenty-five dollars or more into the treasury shall be entitled to a similar certificate as a life-member. All the persons present as members at the Centennial Congress of Liberals, at which this Constitution was adopted, are hereby declared permanent or charter-members of the National Liberal League.

ARTICLE V.—... All charter-members and life-members of the National Liberal League, and all duly accredited delegates from local auxiliary Liberal Leagues organized in accordance with the provisions of this Constitution, shall be entitled to seats and votes in the Annual Congress. Annual members of the National Liberal League shall be entitled to seats, but not to votes, in the Annual Congress.

Address NATIONAL LIBERAL LEAGUE,
281 Washington Street, Boston.

ORGANIZE
CHARTERS

For Local Auxiliary Liberal Leagues, conferring the privilege of representation by five delegates in the Annual Congress of the National Liberal League, will be promptly sent on application, according to the following provisions of Constitution of the same:—

LOCAL AUXILIARY LIBERAL LEAGUES.

ARTICLE XIII.—The Board of Directors shall have authority, as often as they receive a written application signed by ten or more persons and accompanied by ten dollars, to issue a charter for the formation of a local auxiliary Liberal League.

ARTICLE XV.—Local auxiliary Liberal Leagues organized under charters issued by the Board of Directors shall be absolutely independent in the administration of their own local affairs. The effect of their charters shall be simply to unite them in cordial fellowship and efficient cooperation of the freest kind with the National Liberal League and with other local Leagues. All votes of the Annual Congress, and all communications of the Board of Directors, shall possess no more authority or influence over them than lies in the intrinsic wisdom of the words themselves.

ARTICLE XVI.—Every local auxiliary Liberal League organized in accordance with the provisions of this Constitution shall be entitled to send its President and Secretary and three other members as delegates to the Annual Congress.

These Charters are beautifully printed on the best of paper. Adorned with the handsome Seal of the National Liberal League, they will, if tastefully framed, make a fine ornament for any hall.

Address NATIONAL LIBERAL LEAGUE
281 Washington Street, Boston.

CIRCULATE IT
EVERYWHERE!

The new Liberal League Tract of 34 pages, entitled,

"PATRIOTIC ADDRESS,"

contains:

1. PATRIOTIC ADDRESS of the National Liberal League to the people of the United States.
2. CHIEF RESOLUTIONS of the League.
3. PROTEST of the League against shutting the International Exhibition on Sundays.
4. CONSTITUTION and List of Officers.
5. EXTRACTS from Approving Letters by Distinguished Citizens.

This is the Liberal's best CAMPAIGN DOCUMENT in the great impending contest over amending the Constitution of the United States with reference to the school question. It should be in the hands of EVERY VOTER, and has been published expressly for gratuitous distribution by earnest friends of State Secularization.

Local Liberal Leagues

Cannot do better than to order this Tract by the quantity, as an excellent auxiliary in their local agitation.

INDIVIDUAL LIBERALS

Cannot do better than to use them privately, as opportunity offers.

Promptly mailed, at the bare cost of paper, press-work, and postage, on the following terms:—

TEN COPIES.....	.15
TWENTY-FIVE COPIES.....	.40
FIFTY.....	.75
ONE HUNDRED.....	1.25
TWO HUNDRED.....	2.40
THREE HUNDRED.....	3.60
FIVE HUNDRED.....	6.00
ONE THOUSAND.....	12.00

N. B.—Packages of over 100 copies will be sent by express at the expense of the purchaser, without any charge for postage.

Address NATIONAL LIBERAL LEAGUE
281 Washington Street, Boston.

The Index.

Three Dollars a Year.

LIBERTY AND LIGHT.

Single Copies Seven Cents.

VOLUME 9.

BOSTON, MASS., THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 14, 1878.

WHOLE NO. 425.

NATIONAL LIBERAL LEAGUE.

PLATFORM

For the Presidential Election of 1880,

ADOPTED AT ROCHESTER, N.Y., OCT. 26, 1877.

1. TOTAL SEPARATION OF CHURCH AND STATE, to be guaranteed by amendment of the United States Constitution; including the equitable taxation of church property, secularization of the public schools, abrogation of Sabbatarian laws, abolition of chaplaincies, prohibition of public appropriations for religious purposes, and all other measures necessary to the same general end.

2. NATIONAL PROTECTION FOR NATIONAL CITIZENS, in their equal civil, political, and religious rights: to be guaranteed by amendment of the United States Constitution, and afforded through the United States courts.

3. UNIVERSAL EDUCATION THE BASIS OF UNIVERSAL SUFFRAGE IN THIS SECULAR REPUBLIC: to be guaranteed by amendment of the United States Constitution, requiring every State to maintain a thoroughly secularized public school system, and to permit no child within its limits to grow up without a good elementary education.

N.B.—The nomination of candidates upon the above platform was postponed to a future Congress of the National Liberal League.

THE DEMANDS OF LIBERALISM.

1. We demand that churches and other ecclesiastical property shall no longer be exempt from just taxation.

2. We demand that the employment of chaplains in Congress, in State Legislatures, in the navy and militia, and in prisons, asylums, and all other institutions supported by public money, shall be discontinued.

3. We demand that all public appropriations for educational and charitable institutions of a sectarian character shall cease.

4. We demand that all religious services now sustained by the government shall be abolished; and especially that the use of the Bible in the public schools, whether ostensibly as a text-book or avowedly as a book of religious worship, shall be prohibited.

5. We demand that the appointment, by the President of the United States or by the Governors of the various States, of all religious festivals and fasts shall wholly cease.

6. We demand that the judicial oath in the courts and in all other departments of the government shall be abolished, and that simple affirmation under the pains and penalties of perjury shall be established in its stead.

7. We demand that all laws directly or indirectly enforcing the observance of Sunday as the Sabbath shall be repealed.

8. We demand that all laws looking to the enforcement of "Christian" morality shall be abrogated, and that all laws shall be conformed to the requirements of natural morality, equal rights, and impartial liberty.

9. We demand that not only in the Constitutions of the United States and of the several States, but also in the practical administration of the same, no privilege or advantage shall be conceded to Christianity or any other special religion; that our entire political system shall be founded and administered on a purely secular basis; and that whatever changes shall prove necessary to this end shall be consistently, unflinchingly, and promptly made.

The above is the platform of THE INDEX, so far as the editor is individually concerned. But no other person, and no organization, can be justly or truthfully held responsible for it without his or its explicit approval.

FRANCIS E. ABBOT.

RESOLUTION

ADOPTED BY THE NATIONAL LIBERAL LEAGUE AT PHILADELPHIA, JULY 3, 1876.

Resolved, That we accept the offer of the Boston INDEX to be our official organ of communication with the public, for the publication of announcements, acknowledgments, and other official papers of the Board of Directors; but that we assume no responsibility for anything else published in its columns and claim no control or influence in its general editorial management.

GLIMPSES.

ANOTHER LIBERAL LEAGUE has just been organized at Manitowoc, Wisconsin, in affiliation with the National League. President, John A. Smith; Secretary, George B. Byron.

MR. B. F. UNDERWOOD lectured recently in Albany and Utica, and has engagements as follows: Feb. 15, at Urbana, O.; Feb. 17, at Bourbon, Ind.; Feb. 19, 20, 21, at Danville,—Feb. 23, at Riverton,—Feb. 24, at Springfield,—Feb. 25 to Mar. 2, at Minier,—all in Illinois.

MRS. CLARA NEYMANN, of New York, will lecture at the Parker Memorial on Wednesday evening, February 20, at half-past seven o'clock. Subject: "What is Religion?" Tickets can be got at this office—price twenty-five cents. All who have heard her unite in her praise, and a full house is anticipated.

"A COUNT," says the New York Tribune, "has been made of the ministers of the Black River and St. Lawrence Congregational Association, with a view to the ascertaining of their belief as to future punishment. This Association is the largest in the State of New York. The Rev. W. D. Westervelt, who prosecuted the inquiry, reports: 'Of those consulted, every one believes the doctrine of eternal retribution. In fact, our Association is very earnestly Orthodox.'"

THAT THE LIBERAL LEAGUE movement is rapidly striking root, and extending itself in many directions, is very clear from the report of Mr. H. L. Green, the earnest and indefatigable chairman of the Executive Committee of the National League. We hope that the various signs of activity he reports will prove to be the forerunners of many new organizations. Remember the proverb that "Union is Strength"; the influence of this movement will be in proportion to the number of Local Leagues affiliated with the National League. We invite particular attention to Mr. Green's interesting and encouraging report on another page of this issue.

A NEW LIBERAL LEAGUE has been formed among the inmates of the National Home for Disabled Volunteer Soldiers, Montgomery County, Ohio. The officers are—President, A. McGill; Secretary, Jesse B. Barry; Delegates to the next Annual Congress of the National League, J. B. Barry, A. McGill, Benj. R. Pratt, William E. Bradshaw, Jacob Duschene. The Secretary writes: "As our chaplain is opposed to anything of the kind and has charge of all the meeting-rooms, we may have some difficulty in procuring a room; but as Dr. E. B. Wolcott, Vice-President of the Milwaukee League, is a member of our Board of Managers, I presume he will use his influence to have us accommodated."

THE POPE'S DEATH cannot fail to be followed by important events. The Jesuits are the Radicals of Catholicism, and would hold it rigorously to the logic of its own ideas; the moderate or so-called liberal party sacrifice logic to policy, and temporize to secure success. If we were a Catholic, we should devoutly pray for the triumph of the Jesuits over the liberals, since that would be the triumph of the religion we believed in; being a rationalist, we hope for the triumph of the Jesuits all the same, because that will all the sooner undeceive mankind and expose the deleterious influence of the Catholic religion. If a Catholic, be one in good earnest, and command respect by your sincerity; if a freethinker, the same advice is just as good.

WE MUST BESPEAK the indulgence of our occasional contributors, and beg to be spared inquiries as to whether and when their articles will appear. It is our wish to oblige all as far as is possible; but it is in most cases impossible to answer such inquiries beforehand. Usually there is a large number of communications on hand, many of which must be delayed, and some of which must be left unpublished from want of room; they cannot even be read immediately, but must wait their turn. Contributors should retain copies of their own articles, and remember the standing rule that "unused manuscripts are not returned." Good articles, especially if short, are always welcome; but we have no time for correspondence on the subject, and must positively decline it.

THE LYNCHING of Dr. Russell in Texas as an "infidel," by members of the Baptist Church, has intimidated Southern liberals, if we may judge by the following letter, recently received from Georgia: "Dear INDEX,—I have taken you for two years, and sent you around among my neighbors on missionary service. Recently a candidate, as you will see by enclosed papers, theological shells were burst around my head in every direction. Lest I may be the subject of a Christian Kuklux movement, I deem it prudent to discontinue THE INDEX for the present. They charged me with not believing in 'Jesus Christ or the Bible.' I replied that, if the whole earth was one Senatorial district, and I could be Senator thereof for saying that I believed that a book was anything more than a book or a man anything more than a man, I would not say it."

IN THE LONDON National Reformer of December 23, 1877, Mrs. Annie Besant gave an interesting account of a lecture by a woman, once a notorious champion of "Free Love," who has now left her own followers in the lurch: "On Friday last, I succeeded in hearing Mrs. Woodhull, having before made several vigorous but futile attempts to do so. Other engagements had claimed me on previous occasions; but at last I duly presented myself at St. James' Hall, and was conveyed to a front seat. There was a fairly large gathering of men and women when Mrs. Woodhull appeared. I was prepared to hear an orator, and a woman whom I respected for her courage, while differing much from her opinions: I heard an actress with some declamatory ability, and a woman who put herself on the side of the Christianity and social routine which she had made her name by attacking. The lady who, in America, had printed Obscenities of the Bible, walked on to the platform with an open Bible in her hand, and urged it as a rule of life, a holy, an inspired book. The lady whose doctrines of Free Love have startled the world disclaimed all meaning for the expression, except as it might be applied to the 'free love of God.' One can only presume that she reckoned on the ignorance of her English audience, few of whom would probably be acquainted with Woodhull and Claflin's Weekly; but to those who had read her writings and knew her doctrines, the disclaimer was revolting from its complete untruthfulness. Personally I have always opposed Free Love, believing it to be destructive of all true sexual dignity, as well as of home happiness; but, disagreeing with the teaching, I yet respected the moral courage with which Mrs. Woodhull had proclaimed what she believed to be true. I am only glad that Mrs. Woodhull appeals to the churches and to the clergy, and not to free-thinkers,—to 'elegant ladies and gentlemen,' and not to the people. The lecture was a long string of truisms and nothing more; 'good mothers would make good sons'; voilà tout. What mothers should do, what changes were requisite, what action we should take, on all this no information was vouchsafed to us; we were implored to 'help,' but were not told what help was wanted. Various passages were read from the Bible, and some ejaculatory prayers were uttered; but no strong thought, no new idea. Of Mrs. Woodhull's eloquence I cannot speak, as the lecture was recited from (apparently) printed slips, and was not extempore. The speaker was very nervous, and her delivery was hurried in the extreme. I can only confess to a profound disappointment, mingled with some irritation at what appeared to me to be the cant of the whole thing."

NATIONAL LIBERAL LEAGUE.

OFFICERS.

President.
RANDOLPH E. ABBOT,.....	Boston, Mass.
Vice-Presidents.
HON. E. P. HURLBUT,.....	Albany, N. Y.
HON. SAMUEL E. SEWALL,.....	Boston, Mass.
HON. NATHANIEL HOLMES,.....	St. Louis, Mo.
HON. HENRY BOOTH,.....	Chicago, Ill.
HON. GEORGE W. JULIAN,.....	Irrington, Ind.
HON. ELIZUR WRIGHT,.....	Boston, Mass.
MR. O. B. PROTHINGHAM,.....	New York
MR. W. M. J. POTTER,.....	New Bedford, Mass.
MR. E. P. HALLLOWELL,.....	Boston, Mass.
MR. JAMES PARTON,.....	Newburyport, Mass.
MR. F. SCHUEMANN-POTT,.....	San Francisco, Cal.
HON. ABRAHAM FAYNE,.....	Providence, R. I.
REV. M. J. SAVAGE,.....	Boston, Mass.
RABBI B. FELSANTHAL,.....	Chicago, Ill.
REV. W. H. SPENCER,.....	Sparta, Wis.
MR. SAMUEL L. HILL,.....	Florence, Mass.
MR. E. W. MEDDAUGH,.....	Detroit, Mich.
MR. KARL HEINZEN,.....	Editor of "Der Pioneer," Boston
MR. HORACE SEAYER,.....	Editor of the "Investigator," Boston
RABBI ISAAC M. WISE,.....	Editor of the "American Israelite," Cincinnati
MR. D. M. BENNETT,.....	Editor of the "Truth Seeker," New York
MR. MORITZ ELLINGER,.....	Editor of "Jewish Times," New York
MR. B. F. UNDERWOOD,.....	Thorndike, Mass.
REV. ROBERT COOLYER,.....	Chicago, Ill.
COL. ROBERT G. INGERSOLL,.....	Peoria, Ill.
DR. T. L. BROWN,.....	Binghamton, N. Y.
HON. R. S. MOOREWICK,.....	Franklin, Pa.
ELDER F. W. EVANS,.....	Mount Lebanon, N. Y.
MRS. ELIZABETH THOMPSON,.....	Rocky Hill, N. Y.
MRS. AMY POST,.....	Rocky Hill, N. Y.
MRS. ELIZABETH OADY STANTON,.....	Tenafly, N. J.
MISS SALLIE HOLLEY,.....	Lottsburg, Va.

Secretary.
W. H. HAMLEN,.....	231 Washington Street, Boston, Mass.
Assistant Secretary.
MISS JANE P. TITCOMB,.....	142 Chandler St., Boston
Treasurer.
J. A. J. WILCOX,.....	3 Pemberton Square, Boston.
Board of Directors.
F. E. ABBOT,.....	W. H. HAMLEN.
J. A. J. WILCOX,.....	H. L. GREEN.
D. G. CRANDON,.....

Executive Committee.
Alabama,.....	J. H. HALL, Selma.
Arkansas,.....	JOHN ABBOTT, Monticello.
California,.....	J. L. HATCH, San Francisco.
Colorado,.....	DAVID T. BEALS, Granada.
Connecticut,.....	GEORGE W. BALDWIN, Bridgeport.
Delaware,.....	JOSEPH D. GOBLT, Greenville.
Florida,.....	T. D. GIDDINGS, Enterprise.
Georgia,.....	DR. A. A. BELL, Madison.
Illinois,.....	L. C. UNDERWOOD, Chicago.
Indiana,.....	J. C. MICHELS, Indianapolis.
Iowa,.....	JOHN FARNSWORTH, Fort Scott.
Kansas,.....	S. B. CLARK, Wilsonville.
Kentucky,.....	EMERSON BENTLEY, New Orleans.
Louisiana,.....	J. S. RUSSELL, New Market.
Maine,.....	W. H. SAYWARD, Boston.
Maryland,.....	KARL SCHUEMANN, Detroit.
Massachusetts,.....	J. B. BASSETT, Minneapolis.
Michigan,.....	J. R. PETERSON, St. Louis.
Minnesota,.....	V. G. BARRETT, White Rock.
Missouri,.....	L. W. BILLINGSLEY, Lincoln.
Nebraska,.....	WILLIAM LITTLE, Manchester.
Nevada,.....	E. L. GREEN (chairman), Salamanca.
New Hampshire,.....	J. W. THORNE, Warren.
New York,.....	E. D. STARK, Cleveland.
North Carolina,.....	SAMUEL COIT, Hammond.
Ohio,.....	G. W. BALDWIN, Cincinnati.
Oregon,.....	GEORGE LEWIS, Providence.
Pennsylvania,.....	P. W. FULLER, Columbia.
Rhode Island,.....	DR. E. H. PRICE, Chattanooga.
South Carolina,.....	DR. A. DUNBAR, Greenville.
Tennessee,.....	E. L. HAUGHTON, North Bennington.
Texas,.....	L. SPAULDING, Norfolk.
Vermont,.....	A. M. DEET, Weston.
Virginia,.....	ROBERT C. SPENCER, Milwaukee.
West Virginia,.....	D. P. WILCOX, Yankton.
Wisconsin,.....	W. H. DOOLITTLE, Washington.
District of Columbia,.....	W. FREQUSON, Provo City.
Wyoming,.....	NORMAN S. FORTNE.

LOCAL AUXILIARY LIBERAL LEAGUES

To which Charters have been issued by the National Liberal League.

LINCOLN, NEBRASKA,.....	President, D. A. Cline; Secretary, Dr. A. S. von Mansfeld.
Issued to L. W. Billingsley, D. A. Cline, A. S. von Mansfeld, Julius Philster, Joseph Wittman, W. E. Copeland, Benj. F. Fisher, Sidney Lyons, L. Meyer, G. E. Church, and others.
JACKSONVILLE, ILLINOIS,.....	[Officers not reported.]
Issued to A. W. Cadman, Mrs. D. M. Cadman, S. W. Sample, David Prince, E. A. Nance, C. H. Dunbrook, W. Hackman, Jennie W. Meek, Emma Meek, Hattie E. Hammond, and others.
PHILADELPHIA, PENNSYLVANIA,.....	President, Carrie B. Kilgore; Secretary, Joseph Bohrer.
Issued to the President and Secretary on behalf of the Philadelphia Liberal League.
MINNEAPOLIS, MINNESOTA,.....	President, Lauriston Damon; Secretary, Anton Braasch.
Issued to Anton Braasch, Fred. Claussen, J. Runge, Jr., Louis Zander, S. Damon, Ferd. Heyroth, Louis Heyroth, Fred. Zander, Fred. Halberg, Ernst Clusen, and Fred. Braasch.
CHILSEA, MASSACHUSETTS,.....	President, D. Goddard Crandon; Secretary, J. H. W. Toohy.
Issued to the President and Secretary on behalf of the Chelsea Liberal League.
STOCKTON, CALIFORNIA,.....	[Officers not reported.]
Issued to Chas. Haas, G. C. Hyatt, F. C. Lawrence, A. T. Hudson, Chas. Williams, W. F. Freeman, J. Grundike, J. Harrison, T. C. Mallon, A. F. Lochead, and others.
DENVER, COLORADO,.....	President, Orson Brooks; Secretary, J. H. Cotton.
Issued to the President and Secretary on behalf of the Liberal League of Denver.
PAINE HALL, BOSTON,.....	President, John S. Verity; Secretary, Robert Cooper.
Issued to Horace Seaver, J. P. Mendum, Eliza Wright, B. F. Underwood, David Kirkwood, James Harris, G. H. Foster, H. P. Hyde, Robert Cooper, S. R. Urbino, John S. Verity.
PALMYRA, NEW YORK,.....	President, J. M. Jones; Secretary, C. C. Everson.
Issued to J. M. Jones, C. C. Everson, Henry M. North, A. R. Sherman, Joseph Fritts, L. B. Keeler, J. J. White, R. H. Sherman, Henry Gardner, Samuel Cosad, and others.
BOSTON, MASSACHUSETTS,.....	President, F. E. Abbot; Secretary, Miss J. P. Titcomb.
Issued to the President and Secretary on behalf of the First Liberal League of Boston, Mass.
NEW PHILADELPHIA, OHIO,.....	President, George Riker; Secretary, C. M. Rittenhouse.
Issued to C. M. Rittenhouse, George Riker, J. C.

Price, Daniel Korns, P. W. Himes, John Arn, Philip Gintz, A. H. Brown, Jacob Miller, L. A. Cornet.
TITUSVILLE, PENNSYLVANIA,.....	President, William Barnard; Secretary, C. M. Hayes.
Issued to the President and Secretary on behalf of the Titusville Liberal League.
HUDSON, MICHIGAN,.....	President, Dr. Levi R. Pearson; Secretary, Dr. F. O. Baker.
Issued to Levi R. Pearson, A. D. Armstrong, James B. Bedel, Miles C. Beach, W. R. Norris, R. H. Armstrong, R. W. S. Johnson, E. M. Brown, G. L. Harceron, Philip Sewall.
CATTARAUGUS COUNTY, NEW YORK,.....	President, H. L. Green; Corresponding Secretary, John Hammond.
Issued to the President and Secretary on behalf of the Cattaraugus County Liberal League.
NEW HAVEN, CONNECTICUT,.....	[Officers not yet reported.]
Issued to E. M. Sherman, W. W. Stow, F. A. Hermance, T. F. Hamilton, D. M. Hamilton, W. F. Hopson, E. R. Whiting, E. E. Seaman, A. C. Harrison, R. F. P. Sheppard, and others.
ST. JOSEPH, MISSOURI,.....	President, P. V. Wise; Secretary, H. Brunsing.
Issued to the President and Secretary on behalf of the St. Joseph Liberal League.
NEW YORK, NEW YORK,.....	President, Hugh B. Brown; Secretary, A. L. Rawson.
Issued to T. B. Wakeman, Henry Evans, A. L. Rawson, Hugh B. Brown, E. Langerfeld, D. S. Plumb, O. E. Browning, Mrs. Eliza Erving, Miss E. W. McDams, Mrs. O. E. Langerfeld, on behalf of the Society of Humanity.
ROCHESTER, NEW YORK,.....	President, Mrs. Amy Post; Secretary, Willet E. Post.
Issued to Benj. Gregg, Mrs. Amy Post, Willet E. Post, Emily G. Beebe, Dr. Sherman, Mrs. Barker, Clement Austin, Wm. H. Gibbs, Dr. C. D. Dake, and others.
TOMPKINS COUNTY, NEW YORK,.....	President, Dr. John Winslow; Secretary, Myron E. Bishop.
Issued to C. W. Ames, Wm. A. Anthony, Geo. Arnold, M. E. Bishop, H. Bool, W. Dennis, Isaac Flagg, B. W. Franklin, C. Gardner, W. Hutchins, and others.
NEW YORK, NEW YORK,.....	President, A. L. Rawson; Secretary, Porter C. Bliss.
Issued to the President and Secretary on behalf of the Manhattan Liberal Club.
CLEVELAND, OHIO,.....	President, E. D. Stark; Secretary, Mrs. M. B. Ambler.
Issued to E. D. Stark, Mrs. Louisa Southworth, B. White, W. A. Madison, S. E. Adams, Daniel R. Tilden, W. Galen Smith, Walter F. Johnson, Thomas Jones, and Mrs. M. B. Ambler.
MILWAUKEE, WISCONSIN,.....	President, Robert C. Spencer; Secretary, William A. Boyd.
Issued to the President and Secretary on behalf of the First Liberal League of Milwaukee.
JEFFERSON LIBERAL LEAGUE, ROCHESTER, NEW YORK,.....	President, Moses Hays; Secretaries, Fred. Hebard and J. B. Pike.
Issued to L. Garson, N. O. Tiffany, Adolph Roth, J. W. Roberts, R. F. Smith, Julius Rothhulz, A. C. Allen, C. B. Strong, De L. Crittenden, and F. Bush.
MINNEAPOLIS, MINNESOTA,.....	President, S. C. Gale; Secretary, Frank J. Mead.
Issued to the President, Vice-President, Secretary, and Treasurer, on behalf of the First Liberal League of Minneapolis.
FLORENCE, IOWA,.....	President, Byron McQuin; Secretary, E. C. Walker.
Issued to the President and Secretary on behalf of the Liberal League of Florence, Iowa.
WEST MERIDEN, CONNECTICUT,.....	President, N. F. Griswold; Secretary, Miss Emily J. Leonard.
Issued to W. W. Lee, Edwin Dayton, R. L. Roy, C. C. Munn, N. W. Pomeroy, N. F. Griswold, Mrs. F. Loomis, Marion L. Pomeroy, Joseph Frankowski, Mrs. J. Frankowski, and Emily J. Leonard.
MONTGOMERY COUNTY, OHIO,.....	President, A. McGill; Secretary, J. B. Barry.
Issued to the President and Secretary on behalf of the National Military Home Liberal League.
MANITOWOC, WISCONSIN,.....	President, John A. Smith; Secretary, George B. Byron.
Issued to J. A. Smith, L. Mendik, G. B. Byron, F. Heineman, F. Ransch, F. Kostomolatsky, F. Stirn, F. Kolinsky, J. Mendik, L. Oberland, and others.

[N. B.—Many new local Liberal Leagues have been formed which have neglected to take out charters, and therefore are not entitled to representation.]

RELIGIOUS FREEDOM AMENDMENT:

PROPOSED AS A SUBSTITUTE FOR THE

FIRST AMENDMENT TO THE U. S. CONSTITUTION.

ARTICLE I.

SECTION 1.—Neither Congress nor any State shall make any law respecting an establishment of religion, or favoring any particular form of religion, or prohibiting the free exercise thereof; or permitting in any degree a union of Church and State, or granting any special privilege, immunity, or advantage to any sect or religious body, or to any number of sects or religious bodies; or taxing the people of any State, either directly or indirectly, for the support of any sect or religious body, or of any number of sects or religious bodies; or abridging the freedom of speech or of the press, or the right of the people peaceably to assemble and to petition the Government for a redress of grievances.

SECTION 2.—No religious test shall ever be required as a condition of suffrage, or as a qualification to any office or public trust, in any State. No person shall ever be deprived of any of his or her rights, privileges or capacities, or disqualified for the performance of any public or private duty, or rendered incompetent to give evidence in any court of law or equity, in consequence of any opinions he or she may hold on the subject of religion. No person shall ever be required by law to contribute directly or indirectly to the support of any religious society or body of which he or she is not a voluntary member.

SECTION 3.—Neither the United States, nor any State, Territory, municipality, or any civil division of any State or Territory, shall levy any tax, or make any gift, grant, or appropriation, for the support, or in aid, of any church, religious sect, or denomination, or any school, seminary, or institution of learning, in which the faith or doctrines of any religious order or sect shall be taught or inculcated, or in which religious rites shall be observed; or for the support, or in aid, of any religious charity or purpose of any sect, order, or denomination whatsoever.

SECTION 4.—Congress shall have power to enforce the various provisions of this Article by appropriate legislation.

MIRACLES come when they are needed. They come not of fraud, but they come of an impassioned credulity which creates what it is determined to find. Given an enthusiastic desire that God should miraculously manifest himself, the religious imagination is never long at a loss for facts to prove that he has done so; and in proportion to the magnitude of the interests at stake is the scale of the miraculous interpolation.—Froude, in an article on Thomas Becket, in the Nineteenth Century.

[For THE INDEX.]

Fetichism;

WITH SOME ACCOUNT OF THE FETICH-WORSHIP OF THE EARLY HEBREWS, AS RECORDED IN THE BIBLE.

A PAPER READ BEFORE A MEETING OF SUNDAY-SCHOOL TEACHERS CONNECTED WITH THE SECOND UNITARIAN CHURCH, BROOKLYN, N.Y.

BY LEWIS G. JAMES.

The words "fetich" and "fetichism" are derived, from the Portuguese word "feticco," or "feticco," which means "magic, sorcery, charm, or artifice." This is, perhaps, connected with the Latin "fascinum," a bewitching, or "factitious," made by art, artificial. Fetichism is the worship of superstitious veneration of material things, living or dead, which are considered as the abodes of gods or spirits, or as endowed by them with the power to work beneficent or malevolent influences upon the lives and fortunes of men. It is the lowest form of worship, common among all peoples during the infancy of the race, but now existing as the predominant religion, chiefly among the barbarous tribes of negroes in Africa.* Various evidences of the survival of its influence, are, however, to be met with in connection with the religious rites of nearly every people.

It is probable that among all fetich-worshipping peoples there have been some who have considered the objects of their veneration to be symbols of powers and forces external to the fetiches; while the more ignorant and degraded have believed these powers or forces to inhere in the objects themselves. The selection of objects to be worshipped as fetiches seems usually to depend upon their usefulness or hurtfulness; or upon their representation of the effect of some powerful natural force or influence.

Fetiches are of two kinds: natural and artificial. Among the former are celebrated rocks, particularly high mountain-peaks where lightning is supposed to dwell; single trees and more frequently groves or whole forests; meteoric stones; many animals, as serpents, snails, crocodiles, horses, goats, sheep, etc. Certain tribes of negroes worship elephants' teeth; and the Druids worshipped the sacred oak, hyssop and vervain, and serpent's eggs, as well as objects of artificial construction.

Rocks and stones are among the most common and prominent natural fetiches, and have been worshipped as such in nearly every part of the world. They were the most useful of all natural objects. Out of them the earlier races made their weapons, their utensils, and their abodes. Their hardness and strength were manifestations of a power which was, to their worshippers, incomprehensible; and some, of meteoric origin, they deemed to have been brought to earth by gods or angels. The idol Manah, which was worshipped by the Arabian tribes of Hodhal and Khosaf, previous to the conversion of that people to Mohammedanism, was a large stone. Its name is said to have been derived from the verb "mana," "to flow," from the flowing of the blood of the victims sacrificed to this deity. This fetich was demolished by Saad, by order of Mohammed, in the year of the hegira.

The founders of the great spiritual religions have all denounced the worship of idols and fetiches, and endeavored to destroy it; but relics of these worships nevertheless remain. Such, among the Mohammedans, is the black stone of the Kaaba at Mecca, which is believed to have been brought from heaven by the Angel Gabriel. This seems to be either a piece of lava, or an ordinary aerolite. It is visited by thousands of pilgrims annually, and is worn smooth by the osculatory service of the worshippers. The pilgrims touch and kiss it with the highest veneration. Aerolitic stones were also worshipped by the Phœnicians. The Palladium of Troy, and the stone at Ephesus, which "fell down from Jupiter" (see Acts xix., 35), were also aerolites.

Another notable example of modern fetiches of this character is the celebrated "blarney stone," to kiss which is supposed to endow the devotee with the property of saying anything by way of coaxing, compliment, or praise, that is most agreeable to the hearer. The stone usually kissed is at the top of Blarney Castle, Ireland; but unfortunately for those who have taken the trouble to visit and salute it, this is not the true "blarney stone." That is imbedded in the castle wall, in such a position that in order to kiss it, one has to be held over the parapet by the heels.

Among trees, the oak, palm, terebinth, and mistletoe have been objects of worship. The Druids had their sacred groves of oak, and the "high places" of Phœnicia and Palestine, often mentioned in the Bible, were of this nature. Yahveh, or Jehovah, as well as the heathen gods, was worshipped in these "high places" in the early history of the Hebrews; and before him, El, or El Shaddai, their more ancient sun or fire-god. Into one of these groves Jacob was taken by Isaac when commanded by Yahveh to offer him up as a sacrifice; and here he sacrificed the ram which was said to have been providentially provided in the place of his son. The fetich Al Uzza, worshipped by the Arabian tribes of Koreish and Kanana, and a part of the tribe of Salim, was a tree called the Egyptian thorn, or acacia. Khaleb Ebu Walid cut it down and burnt it, and slew its priestess, by order of Mohammed. Its name, Al Uzza, signifies the same as that of the Hebrew deity, El Shaddai, "the most mighty god." This fetich-worship among the earlier Arabians, and many other peoples, was after awhile accompanied by some conceptions of a deity superior to and separate from their idols or fetiches. It was their custom when they planted fruit-trees or sowed a field, to divide it by a line into two parts; consecrating one to their fetiches or idols, and one to the unseen God.

* The Childhood of the World, by Edward Clodd, F.R.S.
† Lecture on Arabia and the Koran, by George Sale, Gent.
‡ Appletons' Cyclopædia; article "Blarney Stone."

Among the animals worshipped as fetiches, and supposed to be endowed with supernatural powers, the serpent holds a prominent place. The Hindus represent Vishnu as reposing upon the coils of an immense serpent; and this reptile is frequently sculptured in their sacred temples, and held in superstitious veneration. They are forbidden to take the life of a serpent, and consequently great numbers of them are found in many parts of India. Temples have been dedicated to their exclusive worship. Many tribes of negroes still hold them in great veneration; and one of them dedicates to its serpent-fetich a temple, in which serpents are kept as priestesses. The serpent was originally a symbol of wisdom; and its worship was originally not associated with the idea of malevolence which we are apt to connect with it. The Hebrews probably derived this fetich from the Egyptians, who represented the eternal spirit, Kneph, the author of all good, under the mythical form of that reptile. They understood the art of taming it, and embalmed it after death. In their symbolical alphabet the serpent represents subtlety or cunning, a low order of wisdom. In this character it is introduced to us in Genesis; and it is referred to by Jesus as a symbol of wisdom. (Matthew x., 16). The idea of the serpent as connected with that of the Devil, or a malevolent power, was derived by the Hebrews from Babylonia, at the time of the captivity.*

The seraph (Hebrew "śārāph") was originally a fiery serpent; but came afterwards to represent a mythological order of celestial beings with human forms, and three pairs of wings, who were supposed to stand above Yahveh, as he sat upon his throne. It was a śārāph, or fiery serpent, that Moses is said to have made by the command of Yahveh, and set upon a pole, that the Hebrews who had been bitten by the other śārāphs, sent also by the Lord to bite them as the legend says, might look upon it and live.

The Hebrew word meaning "enchanter" is derived also from a word meaning serpent. The rod of Moses is said to have turned into a serpent when he appeared before the Pharaoh to plead for the freedom of his people. So also did the rods of the Egyptian enchanters, which were swallowed by the more powerful fetich of Moses. These, if they are anything more than mere legends, are all examples of pure fetichism, and are said to have been sanctioned by the direct command of Yahveh.

The early Arabians worshipped as fetiches Wadd, which was represented in the form of a man; Sarva, as a woman; Yaghuth, in the shape of a lion (derived from the Arabic "ghutha," to help); Yaūk, a horse (from aka, to avert); and Nasr, an eagle. These are said to have been the antediluvian idols which Noah preached against before the flood; and Sarva is said to have been found lying under the water some time after the deluge, where it was discovered by the Devil, raised up and worshipped by the tribe of Hodhall, who instituted pilgrimages to it. Mohammed completed the work of Noah and the deluge by finally destroying this fetich.

All Semitic religions seem to have early taken the form of Sabalism, or the worship of the heavenly bodies; and many of the fetiches, idols, and superstitious customs of these people are traceable to and symbolic of this worship. In one way or another, it represented the origin of life, or the creative power in Nature; and out of it have grown many of the symbols and ritualistic practices of the Christian church. Fire-worship, burnt sacrifices, and altar-worship here originated, of which the modern censor and incense-burning are survivals.†

The name of the Chaldean city Ur, whence Abraham came, means "light" or "fire"; and it is said to have been a centre of sun or fire-worship. Moses is also said to have seen and worshipped Yahveh in the bush which "burned with fire, and was not consumed." Another relic of fetich-worship, which long survived the period of the grossest idolatry among the Hebrews, was the veneration of the Urim and Thummim. The name Urim, which means "light," would seem to suggest the origin of this fetich, also, in the forms of ancient sun or fire-worship. Thummim signifies "truth" or "perfection." The Urim and Thummim are variously stated to have been two images, hidden in the folds of the breastplate of the High Priest; or, by other authorities, four rows of brilliant stones, representing the twelve tribes of Israel. They were used in casting lots, in which operation Yahveh was supposed to control the result, and were consulted as oracles by the priests. In some cases an audible voice was said to issue from them in reply. In this way the priests claimed to derive authority from Yahveh for the government of the people. It is not known exactly when this custom ceased; but it was probably about the time of the first temple.‡ The stars and planets were worshipped by the early Arabians; and out of this grew the pseudo-science of astrology. Traces of the worship of the heavenly bodies are found all through the Bible, even in the New Testament; as in the legend of the Star of Bethlehem, and of the Magi, or wise men from the East, who are said to have visited the infant Jesus. A similar story is told of Sākya-Muni, or Buddha, after his birth.

Sun-worship and star-worship still shed their influences around us, and lend figures to the exuberant rhetoric of that brightest luminary of modern orthodoxy, Rev. Flavius Josephus Cook; as when he says, "The sun is rising in Germany, with God behind it"; and, "Whoever follows, for many years, the trend of the constellations, touches the hem of the garment of Almighty God."* Here he needs only to substitute an accurate translation, to reveal the name of El Shaddai, the ancient sun or fire-god of the Hebrews.

Baal, the god of the Phœnicians, who was also worshipped by the Hebrews when they forsook the covenant with Yahveh, and who is frequently mentioned in the Bible, was the sun-god, and his symbols or fetiches have reference to the creative power. The worship of Baal is of very ancient origin. He was represented as a man, with the head of a bull, holding in his arms an infant; and one of the artificial fetiches worshipped in his name was a form of the monolith or obelisk. The obelisk is also found in Egypt as an object of veneration and worship; likewise among the Druids, and the aboriginal tribes of Central America. Another early fetich, perhaps akin to the obelisk in its origin and signification, is the wand or rod. This was used by priests and necromancers, "magi" and wise men, among all the Eastern nations, and was thought to be endowed with remarkable and supernatural powers. The rods of Moses and Aaron will at once come to mind in this connection; the turning of rods into serpents; the smiting of the rock in the wilderness for water; and the upholding of the rod during battle for its supposed influence in favor of victory. Of course, all this is pure fetichism, which Moses, who was "learned in all the wisdom of the Egyptians," undoubtedly derived from the priests and magicians of Egypt. The rod of Aaron is said to have been preserved with religious care for a long period, and one account represents it as being carried in the sacred ark of the covenant. Out of this worship of the rod as a fetich, comes the modern superstition concerning the use of the divining rod, which is usually a stick of witch-hazel, and is supposed to possess supernatural power to indicate subterranean water-courses, veins of precious metal, etc.

Akin to the worship of the god Baal, was that of the goddess Ashoreth, or Astarte, "the Queen of Heaven." She was the principal female divinity of the Phœnicians, corresponding with the moon, as Baal with the sun. Her fetich was a white conical stone, or monolith, and was, in early Hebrew history, frequently set up in the "high places" of Palestine, together with the altars or symbols of Yahveh. What is known as the Asherah, mentioned in the Bible, and which was usually a simple stake of wood, driven into the earth, is said by some to have been a symbol of this goddess; but others, among them Kuenen,† considers it a separate fetich or deity. Ashoreth is thought to be identical with the Assyrian goddess Ishar, whose worship was connected with that of the planet Venus; and also, probably, with the Teutonic goddess Oestre, or Oestre, the goddess of the spring, or creative period in Nature, and the idea and symbolical meaning of whose worship were identical. The principal festivals of Oestre and Ishar occurred in the spring of the year, at the same time with the Christian festival of Easter, which grew out of this heathen celebration, and derives its name from that of this heathen goddess. What formerly commemorated the return of the sun and the resurrection of vegetation in the spring, has thus come to celebrate the resurrection of Christ.‡

The long robes worn by priests in many churches were first used in the worship of this goddess, Ashoreth, Ishar, or Astarte, "the Queen of Heaven." They were originally just what they appear to be: female costumes, assumed by the priests, out of compliment to the sex of the goddess. Among the Chaldean rites in the worship of Ishar, was the preparation of a sacred cake, known as a boun, in the form of a crescent, and sometimes of a cross, and sometimes stamped with the figure of a cross. These cakes were made of flour and honey, and were offered as a sacrifice to the goddess. In this rite we probably find the origin of our "hot-cross buns." It is alluded to in the Bible in Jeremiah vii., 18: "The children gather wood, the fathers kindle the fire, and the women knead dough, and make cakes to the Queen of Heaven."

We find also among the Arabs, that the tribe of Hanifer worshipped as a fetich a lump of dough; and, as Mr. George Sale says: "They used it with more respect than the papists do theirs, not presuming to eat it until compelled to by famine." The use of sacred cakes as offerings to the gods, is found in many of the ancient religions; and among the Aryan races we find the fermented juice of the soma, or moon-plant, was the chief offering to their deities. In the rites accompanying this offering it was raised in a wooden cup, precisely as the Roman Catholic priest elevates the consecrated bread called the "host" (from the Latin, hostia, a victim). In these customs, which are of sacrificial origin, we find a suggestion of the origin of the use of the bread and wine of the communion.

Out of the veneration of the monolith or obelisk as a symbol of creative power, came the religious use of the cross, in many nations, among various religions, centuries before Christ. The Greek cross, of four equal arms, is found on very ancient Assyrian tablets, on Egyptian and Persian monuments, Asiatic and Greek coins, and Etruscan pottery. The Latin cross is also found on coins, medals, and monuments anterior to Christ. In Scandinavian mythology, the cross, composed of the double hammer of Thor, was revered as a fetich, and used to bless marriage ceremonies. Cruciform hammers of stone of very ancient origin have been found in Denmark, and are supposed to have been used in sacrificing victims to Thor. The cross is also the sacred emblem of Vishnu, and one of the eight altar implements of the Buddhist. Mythic crosses are often found inscribed in the foot-soles of images of Buddha. The Spanish conquerors found crosses of stone or wood in Mexico, fetiches of the ancient religion of that country. In Roman catacombs have been found crosses of the second century, frequently accompanied by the dove, the serpent, and the fish.*

In Egypt, the crosses were used as nilometers, placed near the river to mark the height of its rise, during the overflow. Since the welfare and life of the people depended so largely upon the overflow of the Nile, it gradually came to be venerated and worshipped as a fetich, and the cross, or nilometer, was revered as its representative. As the people were saved from famine and death by this overflow, the idea of salvation by the cross thus entered largely into this worship of the Egyptians. The idea of sacrifice also seems to have been connected with it in some localities. There are legends of the crucifixion of Krishna, Prometheus, Esculapius, Wittoba, and Buddha, all of whom lived prior to the Christian era. I have, however, been unable to obtain sufficient data for determining whether these legends arose previous or subsequent to the time of Christ; and Orthodox authorities claim that the ideas of crucifixion as punishment, and of salvation, were not united in connection with the religious use of the cross, until after the time of Christ, though both are admitted to have existed separately before the Christian era.

Although the Hebrews were forbidden to make or worship any idol or image of Yahveh, yet their superstitious regard for the ark of the covenant seems to constitute it a true fetich. This ark, which we are informed (I. Kings viii., 9) contained nothing save the two tables of stone on which the law was written, is elsewhere said to have held also the rod of Aaron and a pot of manna. At a later period, the book of the law was also preserved in it. The Jews esteemed the ark especially sacred, and none were permitted to touch it save members of the tribe of Levi. We read of one, Uzzah, who violated this command, and immediately fell down dead.

In war-times, the ark accompanied the army, and was brought forward in critical junctures, and supposed to exert a miraculous power in favor of the Hebrews. On one occasion it was captured in battle by the Philistines, who took it and set it up by the side of their idol, Dagon, a being represented with the head and chest of a man, and the extremities of a fish. Then we are led to infer that sometime during the night a conflict ensued between the two fetiches, or their animating deities; for in the morning Dagon was found lying on his face before the ark; and, having been set up again, upon the next morning he was again found overthrown, and his head and the palms of his hands cut off. So the Philistines thought it best to return the ark to Israel.

In the descriptions of the ark, we find that above it were placed the two cherubim. These were by no means the plump, baby-faced angels of Raphael, nor anything which agrees with our modern conception of a cherub. They were winged monsters of the griffin order, and perhaps were not made in violation of the command against graven images, for they certainly were not "likenesses of anything in the heavens above, or the earth beneath, or the waters under the earth." Their earliest form was the body of a winged lion, and the head of an eagle. Their wings stretched on either side of the ark, and between them Yahveh was supposed to dwell.† The ark finally perished in the destruction of the temple by Nebuchadnezzar; and in the second temple, its place was supplied by another fetich—a sacred stone,—called, probably with reference to the ancient custom of "drink-offerings," "the stone of drinking."

The early Hebrews also possessed certain household idols called teraphim, which were supposed to be endowed with the power of fetiches or charms. We have (Genesis xxxi.) an account of Rachel stealing the teraphim of her father, Laban, and of his search for them.

The ceremonies of fetich-worship were various, and often exceedingly barbarous and immoral. They included sacrifices, burnt-offerings of sacred bread, wine, animals, and even of human beings. We have evidence that this practice survived among the Hebrews in their earlier history, as in the story of the sacrifice of Jephthah's daughter by her father, in obedience to his vow unto Yahveh; concluding with the words: "She returned unto her father who did with her according to his vow which he had vowed. . . . And it was a custom in Israel." The Arabs also frequently put their children to death, especially females, whom they vowed in sacrifice to their idols. Criminals and prisoners were often sacrificed in this worship.

During the early period when the tribe or family was the social unit, each family possessed its own fetich, and kings and princes had usually a large collection. They were often hereditary, and were set up or hung up in the dwelling. Sometimes they were small, and were worn about the neck or elsewhere, or fastened upon domestic animals. They were often provided with food, as if they were living beings. Prayers were offered to them; but if the prayers were not granted, they were sometimes beaten or thrown away.

It takes a long time for mankind to grow up to the conception of a truly spiritual religion. Abraham, Moses, the Prophets, and finally Jesus, mark the progress of the loftier minds among the Hebrews, from the lower forms of fetichism and polytheism, toward this high ideal. Yet even in our day, we see survivals of this old barbarism cropping out under the mantle of all the great religions. Buddhism, Christianity, and Mohammedanism have uttered powerful protests and commands against all forms of idolatry. Yet we still find devotees at the black stone of the Kaaba, the shrine of Buddha, and the cross of Rome.

* Demonology, by Moncure D. Conway.

† The Childhood of Religions, by Edward Clodd, F.R.A.S.

‡ Urim and Thummim, Smith's Bible Dictionary.

* German Rationalism, by Joseph Cook.

† History of the Religion of Israel, Kuenen.

‡ The Childhood of Religion, Clodd.

* Article "Cross," Appleton's Cyclopaedia.

† Article "Cherubim," Smith's Bible Dictionary.

Catholicism is full of the relics of fetish-worship. What else are their superstitious veneration of the cross; of relics of "the true cross," and of the saints; their use of the scapular as a charm; of holy water; their belief that the bread and wine of the communion are actually the body and blood of Christ? While I write, I find in the New York Sun of Nov. 16, 1877, an account of an instance of modern fetishism, which I have condensed from its columns:—

The Rev. Father Victor, of West Hoboken Heights, cures invalids by touching them with a silver reliquaire containing a piece of bone from one of the ribs of St. Paul of the cross, the founder and patron saint of the order of Passionist Fathers. Many sufferers attest miraculous cures by this means. A bit of bone two inches long is set in the lining of an oval silver reliquaire, with a glass lid. It is lined with white, silver-trimmed silk; and across the bone is a slip of paper inscribed "S. Paulus Crucis."

Nor are all Protestants, I fear, without their fetiches; finding them in the superstitious veneration of the Bible as the literal word of God; as a charm, in whose presence they feel safe; and in the formal repetition of set phrases, whether of Scripture, prayer, or litany, with the hope and expectation of thereby deriving some mysterious and supernatural benefit. That Mr. Beecher recognizes this tendency to use the Bible as a fetish, I infer from a recent sermon, wherein he is reported to have said of the man "who reads his Bible from mere force of habit": "He gets up in the morning, washes and dresses, and then sits down and reads a chapter in Corinthians, and then goes down to breakfast feeling very much like a man who has nailed a horse-shoe over the door to keep the witches from getting under it."

How long will it take mankind to grow to the comprehension of the statement of Jesus, that God is spirit, and his true worship is not in any kind of formalism, but to "worship him in spirit and in truth"? That greatest of modern Jews, Spinoza, has said: "To define God is to deny him"; and this axiom of intelligent theism harmonizes with the highest development of Hebrew and Christian thought as well as the loftier expressions of Buddhism; for these seek neither to represent the infinite one by images or sacred symbols, nor in the formal statements of an imperfect language.

But while we are thus seeking higher and more spiritual conceptions, we should not forget that these earlier manifestations of the religious faculty are all records of the efforts of men to reverence and comprehend the power and intelligence which are manifested in the universe. While it is true of great reformers, who teach truths in advance of the age, as the poet says, that "The demons of our sires become The saints that we adore," it is also true that the gods of our ancestors often become the demons of later generations. But viewing all in the spirit of a larger charity and a truer philosophy, we may seek knowledge and wisdom even in these lessons of the infancy of the race. Thus we learn to touch the ashes of a dead religion tenderly and reverently, as we would the outgrown and cast-off garments of childhood. This we may do, while yet we strive, as in our duty, to rise ourselves, and to help others to rise, utterly out of fetishism and idolatry and all superstition, into the perfect light and freedom of the truth.

(FOR THE INDEX.)

THE SCIENCE OF UNIVERSOLOGY.

BY STEPHEN PEARL ANDREWS.

No. XXII.

There remains something still to be said of Wakeman's classification. In the earlier edition, in which he introduced, tentatively, his aspectual or breadth-wise distribution, the catch-words—the real, the true, the good, and the beautiful—referring to universal being, appear in parentheses merely; while against them stand as equivalent terms, sensation, intellection, conation, and emotion, referring to subdivisions of the observing mind itself—to which last series the predominance was then given. In the later edition, this mental series of keys is omitted, and their more universal or cosmical equivalents are preferred. The question of predominance is not now important; but the admission and affirmation of the essential equivalence of these two series of discriminations is of importance, as indicating, still more conclusively, Wakeman's virtual adoption of scientific analogy, as the underlying ground of classification. How can these two series of ideal discriminations—one relating to subjective phenomena (of the human mind), and the other to objective phenomena (of the outer cosmos) repeat each other as equivalents, except upon the prior assumption, whether expressed, or sensed unconsciously, that the distributional schemes of the mind within, and of the material world without, are virtually identical,—which is precisely the universo logical conception; which is, in other words, the doctrine of a universal, underlying, all-governing, scientific analogy.

Here, again, by separating emotion from conation (effort, mental dynamics, and mental motion at large), the author converts the usual and accepted threefold division of mind—sensation (or feeling), intellection, and conation—into a fourfold distribution, as more convenient for his purposes. Let us restore the threefoldness, for the sake of simplicity, as we did for the other series, in comparing it with Elsberg's classification, in No. XXI.; and bring both series of key-words, as we then did the first series, into analogical relations with the other still more fundamental and governing series of such discriminations,—matter, form, and movement; or again, with substance, form, and force. The correlations with them stand as follows:—

1. Cosmical Distribution—
1. The Good, 2. The True, 3. The Beautiful.
2. Mental Distribution—
1. Feeling, 2. Intellect, 3. Conation (will).
3. Correlative Distribution—
1. Matter, 2. Form, 3. Movement.
(Substance.) (Eidos.) (Motion and Force.)

The significance and importance of this comparative exhibit of a fundamental distribution of the outer or objective world with the well-established and best recognized distribution of the inner or subjective world (the mind); and the virtual identification of the two distributions, in the two spheres, through correlation or scientific analogy; can hardly be over-estimated. To say that mind in one of its departments, the most objectively fundamental department—sensation or feeling,—is the matter of mind, and that there is, therefore, analogically, a matter of mind; or that mind has its own matter and thence its own form or forms, which are its ideas (and so of the intellect), may seem fanciful and visionary; but here we find Wakeman, arriving by empirical efforts at classification, at precisely this view; which is the prior affirmation, from a priori grounds, of universo logic itself. Indeed, precisely this correlated distribution of the outer world of matter, in its threefoldness, and of the inner world of mind, with its correspondential threefoldness—the one answering item for item to the other,—may be called the practically central universo logical doctrine. It is consigned to the formulae, IDENTITY OF LAW IN MATTER AND MIND; and THE TYPICAL REPRODUCTION OF THE SUBJECTIVE IN THE OBJECTIVE WORLD (Basic Outline of Universo logic, pp. 449, 498). And, more of late, John Stuart Stuart-Glennie, in a profound investigation into the true principles of scientific classification, in his work entitled In the Morningland; or, The Law of the Origin and Transformation of Christianity, p. 139, lays down, as the postulate of deductive verification, the principle that "there is correlation between the co-existences of Nature and the sequences of thought." This is a close approximation to the universo logical perception, but still an approximation merely. The radical universo logical statement is that there is correlation, or repetitious scientific analogy, between the co-existences of Nature and the co-existences of Mind, and between the co-sequences of Nature and the co-sequences of Mind—item for item, and point for point—throughout; from the broadest generalizations to the minutest particulars.

Stuart-Glennie has indeed had this very idea before his mind, and rejected it, without sufficiently comprehending it. Upon the page just quoted from, he says: "If there were identity between thought and nature, there would evidently be no need of deductive verification; for, in that case, if a thing were true in logic it would also be true in fact." His error here arises from his substituting thought and logic for the larger subjective world. This alone is Mind, of which the thought-domain is only a segment. Thought, or the logical field of mind being only a part of the subjective world at large, its analogies are only correlative with a part of the objective world; which is, then, the corresponding field in it. What is true in logic is true in that domain or aspect of the cosmos which illustrates logic. And—from the universo logical hypothesis—so perfect is the correlation, that deduction, verification, or rather objective test-verifications, of our deductions from the known a priori universo logical law remain necessary; and will remain necessary; only because of insufficient knowledge of the law, or lack of familiarity with its operations; and not from any defect in the completeness of the correlation between the subjective and the objective sphere.

I may also quote Stuart-Glennie, p. 140, to the effect that "nothing can more decisively mark the character of a philosophy than its classification of the sciences." I shall have occasion, subsequently, to give attention to his classification. Here, and as preliminary to such review, let us recur to Wakeman's standard or departmental series of the ordinary special sciences,—the backbone of his system. This results from subdividing and enlarging the basic distribution into the four kingdoms—mineral, vegetal, animal, and hominal,—until the series is made to include fourteen sciences, proceeding from an outermost or most objective, to an innermost or subjective point of view, in which order the series is called objective,—or inversely, when the series is called subjective, thus:—

Objective Order.	Hominal.	14	Psychology—(Mind-lore.)	1	Subjective Order.
		13	Linguistics—(Language-lore.)	2
		12	Æsthetics—(Beauty or Art-lore.)	3
		11	Ethics—(Department-lore.)	4
		10	Sociology—(Collective Man-lore.)	5
		9	Animal; Zoology—(Animal-lore.)	6
		8	Vegetal; Botany—(Plant-lore.)	7
		7	Protistology—(Origins-of-life-lore.)	8
		6	Protistology—(Substance-lore.)	9
		5	Chemistry—(Material appearance-lore.)	10
			(Light, sound, etc.)
		4	Astronomy—(Massive-body-lore.)	11
		3	Mathematics—(Science of Magnitudes.)	12
		2	Logic—(Science of Coordination.)	13
		1	Infinitology—(Science of the Undefined.)	14

Of these fourteen departmental sciences, the first and the fourteenth, the lowest and the highest, have something much in common with each other, and different from the remaining twelve. If the whole series be taken as a vertebral column, a characterization which Wakeman himself has bestowed upon it, then psychology (better mentology—mind-lore) is the skull, and metaphysics the sacrum. Fourier would have called the whole a series of twelve, with a pivot and sub-pivot added; and would have allied it, then, with the musical scale of twelve chromatic notes, resting upon the octave above and the octave below, as its abutments. This analogy, or figure, or fancy, as the reader may choose to regard it, will be recalled in the next article, in connection with Stuart-Glennie's and

Vander Weyde's classifications. The location of the science of mind within the skull is, at least, quite apropos. For the sake of easy reference to this columnar exhibit of departmental classification, I shall call it the Wakemanian vertebration. The aspectual adjunction, first of Elsberg, and now of Wakeman, will then accord with the limbs at the sides of the human or animal body; and the Spencerian basis—the discrimination between the concrete and the abstract—with the back and the face of the person, as previously indicated.

To change the analogy: the city of New York is laid out upon such a plan that the ways running north and south are called avenues; and those running east and west, and of course cutting the others at right angles, are called streets. Now let us suppose three different corps of topographical investigators entering upon the examination of the city of New York, with a view of classifying its most prominent characteristics, and reporting them to the outer world. Corps No. 1 begins with and confines itself to the vertical axis of the city's presentation, from mud-hills to capstones, or from sub-cellars to roofs, domes, and spires. By so doing, this corps discovers, and articulately defines, the VERTEBRAL COLUMN of the city's total structure,—the several stories of the buildings corresponding with, or being analogues of, the several vertebrae (of, for example, a human body, standing erect). Now, this may, for the practical purpose of living in the houses, be the central and most important style of information; but it is certainly not integral or universal; nor, from the integral or all-embracing and all-sided or every-aspected point of view, is it the most exact or scientific. The buildings are not constructed upon a uniform plan; their geometrical measures are irregular, fantastic, and whimsical (naturoid, or naturalistic). To gain anything exact or scientific, we must become transcendental, relatively to these heterogeneous phenomena; that is to say, go outside of and beyond them, and come upon the regular plan or outlay of the city by streets and avenues; in which department of affairs geometry has reigned supreme; and with reference to which the exactified aspects of the buildings themselves (a subdominant or minor quality with them) have been arranged.

In the next place, no amount of intercalation of minor discriminations, within this back-bone arrangement, will tend, in the slightest degree, to furnish the kind of information which is transcendental. To obtain it, with its broad-spread horizontalism, we must go where it is; we must abandon verticalism (mere observational empiricism), and enter, ex-professo, upon the study of the a priori outlay of the city. In other words, an understanding of the city plot is logically prior to the investigation of basements, parlors, and sleeping-rooms; and from the scientific point of view outranks this other more familiar, and in the usual sense of the term, more practical kind of knowledge; which last is the Comtist hierarchy of the sciences.

A second corps of our topographers enters upon one aspect of the transcendental beat of scientific research, and busies itself exclusively with the broad and prominent avenues, omitting still all consideration of the streets. This leads to the discrimination between the down-town region, at the lower ends of the avenues, with its dense crowd of houses and population—the concrete or compacted—and the up-town and country-aspecting region, at the upper and outer end of the avenues, the abstract, clear of obstructions, and out-drawn. This is the Spencerian classification of the sciences based wholly on the distinction between the concrete (the grown together) and the abstract (the drawn out).

The third corps of our topographers enters finally upon the investigation of the streets. This corresponds with the aspectual distribution of the sciences, of Elsberg; and now, also, as we have seen, arrived at by Wakeman. This is the breadth-wise outlay of the city; "the fashionable and unfashionable sides," etc. (the good, the true, and the beautiful).

Is it not high time that a central office of topography should be established, at which all the reports of the various corps of investigators should be reported and rearranged and INTEGRATED, or harmonized, as parts of one and the same system?

COOK'S BIOLOGY.

A CAUSTIC CRITICISM OF THE REVEREND LECTURER—HIS SCIENCE SMALL AND HIS ASSUMPTION LARGE.

The "Boston Monday Lectureship" promises to be a three years' wonder. Entirely unheard of till a year or two since, Mr. Cook is, now that his lectures are published in book-form, sure of having his words read and pondered among all sects of Evangelical orthodoxy throughout the country,—at any rate, his influence is no longer local. Moreover, the "lectureship" is now a business. A management has been organized, tickets are sold, and advertisements printed, and there are indications that another year it may "travel."

One of the chief "strategic points" of the Lectureship is to evoke hostile criticism. Its success, and even existence, depends on whether an audience of clients, eagerly applauding every coup of their protagonist against threatening and heretical "isms and 'ologies, can continue to believe that his shafts cause dismay among all orders of intellectual unregeneracy. Hence, in spite of the animosity with which Mr. Cook has here and there been assailed, many of his friends are beginning to complain of a "conspiracy of silence" on essential points. On the other hand, there are many of opposite bias who, urging his many misstatements of fact, his illicit inferences, the inadequate method with which the ultimate and outlying questions of all human knowledge are discussed, and the bad cookery (if so vile a pun may be quoted) with which scientific authorities are seasoned and served up, have also complained that thus far there has been no adequate and well-digested verdict respecting his work. The explanation is not far to seek. It is found in the growing belief that Mr. Cook is a sincere enthusiast who has questioned and doubted, and has reached at last the consolation—rare enough in these days—of unreserved conviction. Such a man, however crass or erratic his opinions, deserves a certain respect.

Again, he is comparatively unmolested, because his work is felt to be of significance for the culture of the New England clergy. He is liberalizing, if not even rationalizing, orthodoxy itself, by inoculating the most unscientific class of educated men with his small science. Now—thanks to his hardy courage,—rural clergymen and studious laymen may be seen every Monday at the libraries and bookstores of Boston asking for Beale, Draper, Carpenter, etc., with the laudable purpose of following out Mr. Cook's course of reading. Now, the most unsuspecting theological student may visit any German university, and even hospitum with Helmholtz, Wundt, and possibly Haeckel himself, if a few scores of Mr. Cook's prophylactic axioms are well graven upon his memory, without danger of becoming "un-Christianized or shaken in the temper of his faith." His creed, indeed, is as meagre, yet as unmistakable, as the tags nailed up in place of scenery on the early English stage, admonishing the audience never to forget that, although the language, costumes, and plot were contemporary, still all was really in ancient Roman. So, although we hear of "neural tremors," of "the white-gray keyboard of the brain," and are challenged to account for the "perfect eye of the trilobite," and taught why "variability of species is a lessening quality," we are constantly assured that all this is Christianity and not modern science, for "the microscope begins to have visions of immortality." "Everything scientific is biblical, and everything biblical is scientific." "Even the scientific method is of theological origin." Lotze, and even Helmholtz and Wundt, are "on their knees before a personal God." Of course all this is extremely vicious, much in the same way, indeed, as the infernal trappings on the stand of the early conjurers, who, instead of frankly acknowledging that all was the skilful sleight of human hands, appealed in puzzling abracadabras to extra-mundane agencies. Let us not be misunderstood. We do not propose to dispute, or even discuss, Mr. Cook's religious convictions, though probably none of his friends realize how subtly the processes of secularization are accelerated by his methods, or how many of the impediments of orthodoxy are one after another silently abandoned while a whole corps of the theological army is being mobilized. To have occasioned this wholesome ferment is a didactic triumph which a wiser, more learned, better poised mind could never have achieved.

Mr. Cook's science is exceedingly "small,"—for the most part, indeed, scarcely more than an advertisement of a department of research rapidly growing in importance, and which happens never to have been popularized in this country. His information on the subject of physiological psychology may be very briefly summarized; but to correct his errors and inconsistencies and make his crudeness patent to his hearers, would require nothing less than a well-digested text-book on the subject. His uncritical credulity towards scientific authorities upon his own side is seen in his naive acceptance of two of Ferrier's most conjectural statements; viz., "Physiological activity of the brain is not altogether co-extensive with its psychological function"; and "Mental operations are still capable of being carried on in their completeness through the agency of one hemisphere"; and of Beale's continued implication that psychic changes cause physical changes, and not the reverse.

That Mr. Cook is not well informed in physiological psychology is not surprising, and by no means so harmful as it would be in a scientific lecture-room. But what apology can we offer when he affirms that "the Boston Lectureship is abreast of the latest German investigations"? If he would only extend his reading beyond Carpenter—whose work he calls "the best discussion of the relation of mind and body in modern times,"—and a few others, to Wundt and Helmholtz, who are only names to him, and to Huxley, Jackson, Fechner, Vulpian, Schiff, Horwicz-Fleischl, and scores of others who have lately made original contributions towards the solution of the question of the relation between the nervous system and consciousness, and perhaps even discuss such subjects as aphasia, inhibition, muscular sense, Meynert's schematization, etc., all of which lie directly in his path, but of which he seems never to have heard, his pedagogics would be less incisive. Mr. Cook himself, and still more his unscientific audience, who respond by "applause," "sensation," and occasional "amens," to so many of his wildest assertions, grossly violate that good old precept of Coleridge; viz., be sure you are not ignorant of an author's understanding before you affect to understand his ignorance.

Of his studied forensic against Huxley's bathybius, which for five years caused men to "tremble before the strong negation of the supernatural," but which is now a "myth and byword of derision," it is enough to remember that Huxley has long since abandoned his invention, and that Mr. Cook grossly misquotes and misrepresents what he said about it. Yet in elaborating the thesis that everything organic, even "your molecular brain, is first woven by your bioplasma," he goes beyond even Beale's widest speculations, from whom his charts, facts, language, and deductions upon this subject are borrowed; forgetting Mr. Stirling's wholesome admonition, that if all life is identified in protoplasm, it must be differentiated in protoplasms. Whatever is meant by the phrase, "An involution must precede every evolution," it is hard to see how this compels the belief in a personal God or an immortal soul. The concessions of evolutionists are undiluted and familiar; so comprehensive a theory of the universe must long remain more or less provisional; it is a question of the balance of probabilities and not of exact demonstration. Yet, even if it be true, Mr. Cook thinks it worth while strategically to urge that the body of religious truth is in no way affected, and to insist that the teleological, which is the one of "thirty forms of the theory of evolution" that he prefers, is, like Darwin himself, probably theistic. Of course, in contemplating the ultimate questions of human knowledge respecting Nature or man, as revealed by the telescope, the microscope, and in the laboratory, the poetic faculties of men everywhere, as Mr. Shalrp has so well shown, are prone to mythologize. Aberglaube is often truly æsthetic, and religion, whatever else it may be, is always the poetry of life. This is well; far better, indeed, than the blank philosophy of necesse. But let us not confound poetry with science, nor forget that there is no adequate proof of the dicta of theology in Nature. Dogmatism in this direction may be more respectable, but it is certainly no more "educated" than the crass, obsolescent materialism whose decent corpse Mr. Cook takes pleasure in mutilating. This should be a wholesome warning to scientific men who are disposed to pass from their specialty, particularly in their more popular utterances, to speculations on the secrets of the universe; unless, indeed, they wish to be immortalized, as Comte has been by the socialists, for their vagaries. Such an apotheosis has already begun for the unfortunate Lotze. No writer can be more æsthetic, modest, fonder of the sacredness of "reposeful mental states," more averse not only to dogmatism but even to system-making, more anxious to make philosophy merely the "general expression of individual culture" than one who, "without assuming to arrive at fully demonstrated results, nevertheless finds in reflection and in conversation upon fundamental problems the noblest occupation of human life," and who, in the Mikrokosmos, takes great pains to contrast what he understands by the phrase, "personality of God," in every essential respect with human personality. We can hardly object if such a writer fancies the soul to live and move "in the fibreless parenchyma of the brain"; but the climax of absurdity is reached when Mr. Cook dramatically personates him as standing upon the Tremont Temple platform, swinging an apocalyptic mill-stone and rending materialism "thus—thus," as Mr. Cook tears his notes before a transported audience. The fact is, that Mr. Cook is a neologist, poorly trained in the history of philosophical thought, and still more crude in his psychological analyses. God, materialism, immortality, etc., are for him terms of fixed and exact connotation, to be used without fallacy in an endless chain of syllogisms, instead of exceedingly composite concepts, varying with every shade of individual intelligence and experience.

A man of such vigorous health and of such robust magnetic personality as Mr. Cook, of such assurance and florid eloquence, who lives in what Hegel wittily terms the animal kingdom of mind, can always gather about himself an organization of curious or undervalued women who love to be thrilled, of business and professional men who love to hear the best commonplaces about literature, politics, and religion, etc., and of somewhat uninstructed "good" people generally. Some such tendencies are already manifest in the "Lectureship," and whether it results in a new "society," or something altogether new and strange, we would by no means disparage the possible public usefulness of any such consummation. Although as dramatic performer Mr. Cook violates all Hamlet's advice to players, he still moves, and even thrills, his hearers. Though as philosopher his discussions seem more and more manufactured, they are still scarcely less than oracular for his disciples. We only hope the new departure which is inevitable will be well advised; and when he "settles"—which he should do before the heyday of his fame fades,—that it will be to work of a more permanent sort.—New York Nation.

THE GREAT AWAKENING OF 1740.—The present remarkable revival of religious interest in this city and elsewhere renders timely and interesting a brief survey of the extraordinary movement of 1740-42, which has taken its place in the religious history of New England as "the great awakening." The revival referred to began in connection with the labors of George Whitefield, the great Evangelist, who, after successful labors in the Middle and Southern States, came to New England in September, 1740. There had been already indications of a revival in connection with the preaching of Edwards and others, and Whitefield's coming fanned into a flame the religious feeling of the people. He preached first at Newport and Bristol, R. I.; and reached Boston September 18. He was received cordially by the Governor and the clergy. He preached the next day in the Brattle Street Church to "about four thousand," and the day after in the Old South to "about six thousand," and afterward on the Common to "about eight thousand." On Sunday he preached "in Mr. Foxcroft's meeting-house," located in Cornhill Square, and known as the "Old Brick." His estimates of his audiences need to be taken with some allowance, as it would be a physical impossibility to crowd into the Old South, for example, one-half the congregation which he records as assembled there. Nothing is easier than to over-estimate a crowd. The day following he preached to great congregations at the "New North" Church, and Mr. Checkley's in Summer Street,—the crowd at the latter place being so great as to occasion a panic in which five persons were trampled to death and many were injured. He preached with marked effect also in Cambridge, Roxbury, and elsewhere, both indoors and out, and received multitudes of inquirers at his lodgings. From September 20 to October 7 he was preaching in Marblehead, Salem, Ipswich, Newbury, Hampton, Portsmouth, and York, Me. Returning to Boston, his preaching was accompanied with even greater power than before. After visiting Northampton, Hadley, and other points in the interior, he left for New York and the South, and subsequently for England. After his departure, the work in Boston was carried on by the city clergy, assisted by Gilbert Tennent, and revivals manifested themselves in all directions through New England. Later, Rev. John Davenport entered on an active career as an Evangelist, and did much harm by his extreme and arbitrary course, his severe condemnations of the ministers and professing Christians, and the excesses which he encouraged. The revivals began to be marked by unpleasant manifestations,—outcries, faintings, convulsions, etc. Mr. Joseph Tracy, who wrote in 1840 a history of the great awakening of a century previous, gives a summary of the results. The members added to the Congregational churches are variously estimated from twenty-five thousand to fifty thousand; and there were also numerous accessions to the Presbyterian Church. In the twenty years following one hundred and fifty new Congregational churches were formed, and a considerable number of "Separatist"; and there were accessions to the Baptist churches also. But the effects of the revival are not adequately measured by these figures. Previous to the revival, it was a general practice among the Presbyterian and Congregational churches to admit to communion all persons of Orthodox belief and moral life, without requiring any evidence of conversion. The consequence was, that there were very many unconverted church-members, and not a few unconverted ministers. Multitudes of such members were converted, and in some cases the revival was almost wholly within the Church; and a large addition requires to be made on this score to the estimated number of conversions. Not less than twenty ministers in the vicinity of Boston ascribed their conversion to Whitefield. The population of the colonies at this time was about two million. Supposing the number of conversions to have been fifty thousand, a revival of proportionate power among our present population of forty million would result in the conversion of one million souls.

Poetry.

[For THE INDEX.]

AT THE CROSS.

BY ELIZABETH OAKES SMITH.

Before Thy Cross, dear Lord, I fall;
Out of the depths to Thee I call,
Oh, Friend and Helper, one and all.

Oh, dearest Lord, Thy tender eye
Rebukes, yet pities my lone cry,
When staggering 'neath my cross I lie.

Poor human heart, with human needs,
How many are its broken reeds,
Grasped till the hand in torture bleeds!

How many gourds have felt the blight!
How many stars have lost their light!
How many suns gone down in night!

All, all are gone like barks at sea,
Lost in the dread immensity;
And now I stand alone with Thee.

All prostrate at Thy Cross I kneel,
For Thou canst all our sorrows feel,
And Thy dear hand our wounds can heal.

No more I mark the dreary road
My bleeding feet so long have trod,—
Content to be alone with God.

CASH RECEIPTS.

N.B.—Postage stamps are not included here, though credited on subscriptions, etc.

FOR THE WEEK ENDING FEBRUARY 9.

A. M. Lathrop, $2; A. H. Roffe & Co., $2.20; Dr. John Winslow, $5.60; J. Aulbach, 10 cents; H. S. Bacon, $5.30; D. H. Clark, $18; W. C. Gannett, 25 cents; Parker Pillsbury, 10 cents; W. P. Taylor, $6.67; B. Greene, $10; W. E. Darwin, $1.21; Prof. F. E. Nipher, $2.30; Rev. J. S. Thompson, $3.20; Dr. H. B. Clark, $3.20; Joseph York, $3.20; L. Markham, $3.20; D. Muncy, $3.20; Marshall Pierce, $3.25; Alexander Fitz, $3.20; David Fey, $3.20; Mrs. H. S. Mason, $3.20; Henry Miller, $3.20; J. S. Palmer, $3.20; Verain Vorwats, $3.20; E. P. Wright, $3.20; J. H. Elliot, $3.20; Isaac Benham, $3.20; Geo. B. Young, $3.20; Otto Rothschild, $3.20; J. H. Clark, $3.20; Mrs. C. E. Serrill, $3.50; Nelson Thwing, $1.75; W. W. Justice, $9.60; William Archibald, 30 cents; Mary E. Bruner, $2.20; T. McWhorter, $3; J. E. Larimer, $9.60; Dr. Henry Baethig, $5.40; Theo. Frits, $3; F. M. Tate, $6.67; M. Michaels, $6.62; Henry A. Dean, $3.20; Mrs. Peter Phillips, $3.20; E. Elsing, $3.20; Nath'l Holmes, $3.20; B. Moore, $3.20; E. H. Doolittle, $5; Dr. W. M. McLawry, $3.70; Lucy H. Balch, $3.20; Ingersoll Lockwood, $1; J. H. Clark, $3.20; Jessie Wilcox, $3.20; A. Gebhard, 10 cents; Rev. A. M. Haakell, 50 cents; W. S. Babcock, $3; John C. Ramsey, 10 cents; O. C. Clogston, $5; W. H. Hamlen, $3.20; S. Webster, $3.20; N. C. Nash, $6.40; H. Stanton Curtis, $3.20; E. H. Hall, $1.35; G. H. Foster, $2.20; Julius K. Rose, $3; R. Tomlinson, $6; W. W. Moore, $6.40; T. M. Hart, 20 cents; Thomas Marshall, $3; M. H. Parker, 25 cents; Joseph E. Peck, $4; Huldah P. Robinson, $3.20; Thomas Goodall, $4.25; B. Lasker, $3.20; F. S. Newell, $3.20; Joseph Whitney, $3.20; Gardner Murphy, $13.20; R. P. Hallowell, $3.20; Cash, $2; Wm. P. Draper, $3.20; T. B. Wakeman, $7.04; Mrs. S. B. Stebbins, 25 cents; J. Bodge, 40 cents; D. Groesbeck, 50 cents.

All receipts of cash will be acknowledged as above, and no other receipt sent unless specially requested. Persons who do not see their remittances acknowledged within three weeks after sending, will please notify us.

N.B.—Orders for Tracts or single numbers of THE INDEX which are not on hand will, if of small amount, be otherwise filled to the same amount without further notice.

The Index.

BOSTON, FEBRUARY 14, 1878.

THE INDEX is published every Thursday by the INDEX ASSOCIATION, at No. 231 WASHINGTON STREET, BOSTON. TELEPHONE OFFICE, No. 35 MONROE STREET: J. T. FRY, Agent and Clerk. All letters should be addressed to the Boston Office.

THE INDEX accepts every result of science and sound learning, without seeking to harmonize it with the Bible. It recognizes no authority but that of reason and right. It believes in Truth, Freedom, Progress, Equal Rights, and Brotherly Love.

The transition from Christianity to Free Religion, through which the civilized world is now passing, but which it very little understands, is even more momentous in itself and in its consequences than the great transition of the Roman Empire from Paganism to Christianity. THE INDEX aims to make the character of this vast change intelligible in at least its leading features, and offers an opportunity for discussions on this subject which find no fitting place in other papers.

N. B.—No contributor to THE INDEX, editorial or otherwise, is responsible for anything published in its columns except for his or her own individual statements. Editorial contributions will in every case be distinguished by the name or initials of the writer.

TO VOLUNTARY CONTRIBUTORS.—Only Short Articles desired. Unused Manuscripts not returned.

FRANCIS ELLINGWOOD ABBOT, Editor.
OCTAVIUS BROOKS FROTHINGHAM, WILLIAM J. POTTER, WILLIAM H. SPENCER, MRS. E. D. CHERRY, GEORGE JACOB HOLYOAKE (England), DAVID H. CLARK, MRS. ELIZABETH CODY STANTON, J. L. STODDARD, ELIZUR WRIGHT, C. D. B. MILLS, W. D. LE SUEUR, BENJ. F. UNDERWOOD, ALBERT WARREN KELSEY, Editorial Contributors.

A REQUEST TO LIBERAL EDITORS.

At a meeting of the Directors of the National Liberal League, held in this city on Friday, January 18, it was

Voted, To request the editors of liberal papers all over the country to publish the Directors' "Call to Organize" new Local Auxiliary Liberal Leagues on Washington's birthday,—also the "Card" of the Financial Committee, as follows:—

Call to Organize.

CITIZENS of the United States who indorse the appended political platform adopted in convention by the National Liberal League, at Rochester, N.Y., Oct. 26, 1877, are requested to meet in their respective cities and towns on Washington's Birthday, Feb. 22, 1878, for the purpose of organizing themselves into Local Auxiliary Liberal Leagues in accordance with the provisions of the National Liberal League Constitution. Copies of the latter and blanks for organization can be obtained from W. H. Hamlen, Secretary, 231 Washington Street, Boston, or from H. L. Green, Chairman of the Executive Committee, Salamanca, N.Y.

FRANCIS E. ABBOT, }
WILLIAM H. HAMLEN, } Directors
J. A. J. WILCOX, } N.L.L.
H. L. GREEN, }
D. G. CRANDON, }

BOSTON, Jan. 18, 1878.

Platform of the National Liberal League.

1. TOTAL SEPARATION OF CHURCH AND STATE, to be guaranteed by amendment of the United States Constitution: including the equitable taxation of church property, secularization of the public schools, abrogation of Sabbatarian laws, abolition of chaplaincies, prohibition of public appropriations for religious purposes, and all other measures necessary to the same general end.

2. NATIONAL PROTECTION FOR NATIONAL CITIZENS, in their equal civil, political, and religious rights: to be guaranteed by amendment of the United States Constitution, and afforded through the United States courts.

3. UNIVERSAL EDUCATION THE BASIS OF UNIVERSAL SUFFRAGE IN THIS SECULAR REPUBLIC: to be guaranteed by amendment of the United States Constitution, requiring every State to maintain a thoroughly secularized public school system, and to permit no child within its limits to grow up without a good elementary education.

N.B.—The nomination of candidates upon the above platform was postponed to a future Congress of the National Liberal League.

A Card.

The Finance Committee of the National Liberal League, in consequence of the lack of funds in the Treasury, and of the fact that the Directors are able to do so little of the important work that ought to be done, appeal to all lovers of liberty for financial help, to enable them to publish and disseminate the views of able writers in behalf of the principles of the Rochester Platform, and to advance the common cause in other equally proper ways.

If earnest liberals throughout the United States will contribute one dollar apiece (with as much more as their generosity shall prompt or their means permit), in order to become Annual Members of the National Liberal League, they will furnish the requisite aid, and the work shall be done.

DANIEL G. CRANDON, } Financial
HARLAN P. HYDE, } Committee
SARAH B. OTIS, } N.L.L.

SPECIAL NOTICE.

Attention is specially called to a change in the advertisement of the Publications of the Free Religious Association. By a recent vote of the Executive Committee the Annual Reports of the Association, from the year 1872 to the year 1877 inclusive, are now offered at five cents each (and at the same rate for any larger number) to any body who will take the trouble to send for them, enclosing five cents in postage stamps. They will also be sold at the office for the same sum to any one calling for them there.

The Committee have put the pamphlets at this low rate, which hardly more than covers the cost of sending them by mail, with the hope that they may thereby be more extensively circulated. By referring to the advertisement describing their contents, it will be seen that they contain much matter of special interest on the most vital religious problems of the age. It is not too much to say that some of the most valuable contributions of the last five years to religious discussion may be found in these pamphlets. Let any one who wants to know what the Free Religious Association means, send for these Reports. And will not the members and friends of the Association take this opportunity to extend the knowledge of its principles?

WM. J. POTTER,
Secretary F.R.A.

A FRENCH VIEW OF FREE RELIGION.

La Religion Laïque is the name of a monthly magazine of thirty-two pages, edited and published at Clermont (Oise), with business offices at Paris and Asnières. Describing itself as an "Organ of Social Regeneration," and bearing as mottoes on the title-page—"Se gouverner soi-même, en marchant vers la perfection," "La Religion sans prêtres, sans mystères, sans miracles,"—it is now about a year and a half old. The editor is M. Charles Fauvety, to whom subscriptions (twelve francs a year) may be sent at "No. 8, Avenue Persaire, Asnières, France."

A letter addressed by M. Fauvety to M. Fezandlé, of Plainfield, N.J., was published through the kindness of the latter gentleman in THE INDEX of January 24. It contained a statement that use would be made of the "Fifty Affirmations" in the number of La Religion Laïque for January, which has been since received; and we have translated below the article referred to, partly to correct an error of our own in alluding at the time to M. Fauvety's position as "wholly independent of Christianity," and still more to present to our readers his criticisms on that very position of independence. It will be seen from this translation that the movement which M. Fauvety represents is nearly, if not quite, identical with the broadest and most liberal phrase of Unitarianism in this country; and some curiosity may be pardonable as to the connection of his movement with that of Dr. Channing and the late Athanasius Coquerel. Possibly no such connection may exist; but it is difficult not to recognize a certain spiritual, if not historical, affinity between the two movements. Without further preface we invite the attention of our readers to M. Fauvety's article, translated from La Religion Laïque for January, 1878.

Religious Movement in the United States.

THE "FREE RELIGION" OF M. FR. E. ABBOT.

A religious movement similar to that which La Religion Laïque represents in France exists in the United States. We have already spoken in this journal of the "Independent Church" of Rev. O. B. Frothingham, which suppresses all the sacraments and conserves no other dogmas than the fraternity of man, the existence of God, and the immortality of the soul. We shall speak a word to-day of another attempt not less advanced, and of a liberalism not less large, of which the initiative belongs to Mr. Francis E. Abbot. L'homme distingué who is at the head of this new Church* published in THE INDEX of November 1 a series of "Affirmations" in fifty articles, which will make sufficiently known the large and progressive spirit of Free Religion—such being the name which Mr. Abbot has given to his work. We shall translate literally those articles of the synopsis in which it is found defined. Those that precede give general expositions which will teach nothing to the readers of this Review. They are designed to establish the distinction that must be made between the universal, imperishable Religion which shares the general development of humanity and the particular religions (such as Judaism and the various forms of traditional Christianity) which are destined to perish when they shall have ceased to satisfy the religious needs of an enlightened and enlarged society.

*It is surely unnecessary to say to readers of THE INDEX that we regard Free Religion as "founded" by human nature itself on reaching a certain stage of development,—as having made its earliest historical appearance in Christendom at the Protestant Reformation,—as having derived the name it now bears from the Free Religious Association,—and as aiming to establish a free and universal fellowship in religion to which the word "church" would be quite inapplicable. There could not, therefore, be any individual "founder" of Free Religion.—ED. INDEX.

Of the earlier articles we shall mention only the first, which establishes between the work of Mr. Abbot and that which we ourselves pursue a community of aim that will suffice to make us regard as co-religionists the adherents of Free Religion. This first article is thus conceived:—

"Religion is the effort of Man to perfect himself."

This, then, is the manner in which the founder of Free Religion himself defines his work.*

FREE RELIGION.

32. The Protestant Reformation was the birth of Free Religion,—the beginning of the religious protest against authority within the confines of the Christian Church.

33. The history of Protestantism is the history of the growth of Free Religion at the expense of the Christian Religion. As love of freedom increases, reverence for authority decreases.

34. The completion of the religious protest against authority must be the extinction of faith in the Christian Confession.

35. Free Religion is emancipation from the outward law, and voluntary obedience to the inward law.

36. The great faith or moving power of Free Religion is faith in Man as a progressive being.

37. The great ideal end of Free Religion is the perfection or complete development of Man,—the race serving the individual, the individual serving the race.

38. The great practical means of Free Religion is the integral, continuous, and universal education of man.

39. The great law of Free Religion is the still, small voice of the private soul.

40. The great peace of Free Religion is spiritual oneness with the infinite One.

41. Free Religion is the natural outcome of every historical religion,—the final unity, therefore, towards which all historical religions slowly tend.

RELATION OF CHRISTIANITY TO FREE RELIGION.

42. Christianity is identical with Free Religion so far as its universal element is concerned,—antagonistic to it so far as its special element is concerned.

43. The corner-stone of Christianity is faith in the Christ. The corner-stone of Free Religion is faith in Human Nature.

44. The great institution of Christianity is the Christian Church, the will of the Christ being its supreme law. The great institution of Free Religion is the coming Republic of the world, or commonwealth of man, the universal conscience and reason of mankind being its supreme organic law or constitution.

45. The fellowship of Christianity is limited by the Christian Confession; its brotherhood includes all subjects of the Christ and excludes all others. The fellowship of Free Religion is universal and free; it proclaims the great Brotherhood of Man without limit or bound.

46. The practical work of Christianity is to Christianize the world,—to convert all souls to the Christ, and insure their salvation from the wrath of God. The practical work of Free Religion is to humanize the world,—to make the individual nobler here and now, and to convert the human race into a vast coöperative union devoted to universal ends.

47. The spiritual ideal of Christianity is the suppression of self and perfect imitation of Jesus the Christ. The spiritual ideal of Free Religion is the free development of self, and the harmonious education of all its powers to the highest possible degree.

48. The essential spirit of Christianity is that of self-humiliation at the feet of Jesus, and passionate devotion to his person. The essential spirit of Free Religion is that of self-respect and free self-devotion to great ideas. Christianity is prostrate on its face; Free Religion is erect on its feet.

49. The noblest fruit of Christianity is a self-sacrificing love of man for Jesus' sake. The noblest fruit of Free Religion is a self-sacrificing love of man for man's own sake.

50. Christianity is the faith of the soul's childhood; Free Religion is the faith of the soul's manhood. In the gradual growth of mankind out of Christianity into Free Religion, lies the only hope of the spiritual perfection of the individual and the spiritual unity of the race.

We will point out that, while agreeing with Mr. Abbot as to the aim of life and the object of religion, since he, like ourselves, finds the aim of life in perfection and the object of religion in the activity of constant self-improvement, we distinguish ourselves from him in the sense that, while he voluntarily places himself outside of Christianity, we by no means intend to separate ourselves from it. And why separate ourselves from it, when we can say of the Gospel what Jesus said of the Old Testament—that we "come not to destroy the law, but to fulfil it"? Yes, to fulfil it, to complete it, doing by the aid of a more precise science and a more comprehensive philosophy what could not be done eighteen centuries ago, in a less developed, less cultured, and generally less civilized environment than that in which we live.

*See preceding foot-note.

But, in order to avoid separating ourselves from the Christian tradition, it was necessary to take Christianity at its sources, and to interpret the gospel-word, as we have done, with a spirit of liberty, impartiality, and benevolence, and to know how to discover, under the veil of dogmas and symbols, the relative expression of eternal truth.

It was for this reason that, after having declared at the outset in the preface of our work (see the pamphlet entitled La Religion laïque et l'Eglise unitaire), that we assigned to life as its aim, not happiness, whether on earth or in heaven, but perfection in harmony and in fulness, we added that, so doing, we only obeyed the commandment of Jesus himself: "Be ye therefore perfect, even as your Father in Heaven is perfect." Thus we re-united ourselves at the outset to the Christian Ideal.

We have also tried in various articles, and especially in our "Conversations on the Christian Mysteries," to show that it is by a false interpretation of texts that theologians have extracted from the gospels frequently absurd and sometimes immoral and cruel doctrines, which they have imposed on the credulous and unenlightened plety of the world.

It is because Mr. Abbot has not taken account of this work of criticism and rational exposition of the Christian symbolism that he has failed to comprehend the identity existing between the religion of Christ and the religion of Humanity, and has omitted to take into account the perversion which, in the development of the Christian idea, has been caused by the invention of dogmas and the sacerdotal organization of the Church. To that extent the Christian Confession was open to all those who, ceasing to regard themselves as mutually divided by distinctions of class, sex, condition, or race, desired to become, by communion in the spirit of Christ, members of the body of Humanity.

We take up again to-day—we others, the religious men of all countries—with better chances of success, we trust, the humanitarian idea of the first founders of Christianity. And it is necessary to recognize clearly that, in this sense, we are only continuators of the work of Jesus.

Mr. Abbot does well to separate himself from that Christianity which, under pretext of imitating Jesus Christ, recommends the suppression of self and humiliation at the foot of the Cross. But is it quite true that that is the "ideal and spirit" of the Christian gospel? We do not believe it. These false notions cannot be extorted from the letter of the Scriptures except by misconstruing their spiritual sense.

The doctrine of the gospels is a doctrine of liberty, of equality, and of human solidarity. We have not to repudiate it, but to explain and complete it with the help of a social science which, in our days, will necessarily be more exact and positive, but cannot be more humane and fraternal. Ah! if the world would only understand that Jesus is not an individual, but the type of a perfected humanity of which all the members constitute only one body,—and that "Christ" is the desirable state in which the Humanity-Man has attained the life of a holy harmony with the universe, one with God,—it would see that the same idea is expressed, whether one says, with the gospel, that love of the neighbor must lead to a "self-sacrificing love of man for Jesus' sake," or whether one writes, with Mr. Abbot, that "the noblest fruit of Free Religion is a self-sacrificing love of man for man's own sake." (Article 49 of the series.)

Finally, if it were permitted to us to modify Article 50, which is as it were the summary of the "Affirmations," we should prefer to say:—

"If Christianity is the faith of the soul in its infancy, and if Free Religion is the faith of the soul arrived at manhood, the two religions make only one: both, rather, are the Religion of Humanity in its gradual approach towards the spiritual perfection or the individual and the race, through the social union of the human family and through communion of the human soul with the Divine soul."

Expressed in modern phrase, that is religion as Mr. Abbot understands it and as we ourselves understand it; and it is probable that the authors of the gospels did not understand it differently. They never intended to establish the idolatry of a God made Man; but it must be confessed that the gospel-myth, taken literally, could in an age of ignorance end in nothing else.

And now we are with Mr. Abbot when he tries to realize a more perfect form of religion than those which Christianity has inspired. It is evident that there is a better to be realized; but it is not therefore necessary to break with the Christian idea. It is sufficient to develop it by bringing the ideal of Perfection, "God within us," into harmony with modern thought.

That is the work which we have undertaken. The attempt of Mr. Abbot, like that of Mr. Frothingham and some others which have been made in recent times in America and England, prove one thing: namely, that the number of our co-religionists in the world is considerable.

There is evidently at this time a religion which is in process of revealing itself among men. Doubtless it is only one of the forms of the eternal religion, but its manifestations present themselves everywhere with identical characteristics, as if it had been drawn from the same sources and made of the same elements. It is like the multiplied and collective revelation of one and the same truth.

This phenomenon, of course, contains no element of supernaturalism. In order to explain it, it is sufficient to remark that we have arrived at one of those moments when it is possible to form an idea of our relations considered as a whole, and to raise ourselves to a general conception of the physical and moral worlds. If this conception is truly based upon science, there is no reason why it should not be substantially the same with all those who have acquired science. In our day there is a civilization which, though unequally distributed, is nevertheless quite similar among the enlightened classes of all countries. It follows that, when a philosophic and benevolent spirit desires to formulate a religious synthesis, his thought naturally finds a response in that of all thinkers who have arrived at the same degree of intellectual and moral development.

That is what the gospel meant to express by the descent of the Holy Spirit upon the apostles. They possessed from that time the gift of tongues,—that is to say, they made themselves understood by men of all countries, because there were in all countries men who, finding themselves in the same mental state, could spiritually commune with them in the light.

When such a phenomenon occurs, the misery of the Tower of Babel and of the confusion of tongues is nearly at an end. Hosanna!

On the foregoing article of M. Fauvety, whom we gratefully recognize as one of the most thoughtful and genuinely catholic critics it has ever been our good fortune to find, it will not be inappropriate to add a few brief comments.

1. "Why separate ourselves from Christianity?" For the same reason that the youth separates himself from the paternal roof: to do his own inevitable and imperative work in the world. Or (to turn in our favor M. Fauvety's own illustration,) for the same reason that Christianity, finding itself powerless to make Judaism the cosmopolitan religion of the Roman Empire, was compelled to separate itself from its mother-faith, and thereby to prove that Jesus had only the vaguest and most erroneous conception of the nature of his own work and the future of his own religion, when he declared that he came only to "fulfil" the law of Moses. For his own followers, he could not "fulfil" without "destroying" it.

2. "Not taken account of this work of criticism and rational exposition of the Christian symbolism," etc. O yes; we spent years in preaching that "rational exposition of the Christian symbolism," and were at last compelled to give it up as the work of self-deluding imagination rather than of reason. That task is the threshing of straw already threshed—a labor of which we at last grew weary. We must rather believe that M. Fauvety himself has not taken into account the immutable laws of history, when he treats as a mere "invention" of human perversity that necessary dogmatic and ecclesiastical development which was foreordained when Jesus first claimed to be the "Christ of God." There is an utter absence of the historical consciousness in any mind which can treat the history of Christianity for fifteen hundred years as the "corruption" of a primordial gospel, identical with the most highly elaborated religious philosophy of the nineteenth century. We venture to think that M. Fauvety himself will outgrow, as we have done, this forced inversion and negation of natural necessities. The "first founders of Christianity" had no "humanitarian idea" in the modern sense; their one great idea was the "Christ," as viceroy of the "kingdom of God." Hence the Church and the Pope were the inevitable fruit of the Messianic seed.

3. "The doctrine of the gospels is a doctrine of liberty, equality, and of human solidarity." Alas, no! That is the doctrine slowly worked out by well-nigh two thousand years of added world-experience, but nowhere as yet comprehended save by the really dechristianized intellect. It has never yet been comprehended by the Christian Church—much less illustrated or practised by it. For proof of this look at the history of the Church: is other argument needed?

4. "Jesus the type of a perfected humanity." We heartily sympathize with the substance of M. Fauvety's generous, humane, and liberal faith; but we find the type of its perfect work in the Ideal alone, which has never been realized in the past. The "Jesus" is, after all, only a foregleam of this Ideal in the glowing imagination of enthusiasm; it is only a beautiful dream striving vainly to insinuate itself among the grisly forms of history. Let the Ideal shine where it is—before us, and not behind!

5. We cannot accept the amended 50th article of the "Affirmations." Christianity and Free Religion remain two, after all; just as infancy and manhood are two, despite the persistence of personal identity. What is one is the HUMANITY which abides under all changes; religions are the stages of individual growth, successive and non-convertible.

6. "Not necessary to break with the Christian idea." But this was done at the Reformation, and the fracture is irreparable. The Christian idea is Empire; the modern idea is Freedom; the mischief is already done!

The movement of Free Religion is a great, forward positive movement of the human soul towards its own Ideal—towards that Perfection which lies nowhere but in its own Ideal. It is in vain to cling to the Christian idea, or drape it with beauties which are not its own, but borrowed unconsciously from Humanity. Free Religion has passed through the stage through which La Religion Laïque is passing to-day; and it will never return to it. But we recognize sympathetically the affinities which bind us to our large-minded and large-hearted "kinsmen in the spirit," whether trans-Atlantic or cis-Atlantic; and we extend a most cordial greeting to M. Fauvety and his fellow-laborers, with warm wishes for their success and happiness and for a better mutual acquaintance in the future.

Communications.

LIBERAL LEAGUE NOTES.

EDITOR INDEX:—

I have just returned home from two Liberal conventions. The first was held at Linesville, Pa., January 27, 28, and 29; the other at Corry, Pa., January 30 and 31.

The first one was called by the Linesville Liberal League as a celebration of Paine's birthday, and it proved a great success. Linesville is probably the most liberal town in the United States. I was surprised, when I arrived there, to notice a large show-bill, advertising the meeting, posted in the front window of nearly every business-house in the village; and the explanation was, that the proprietors were all freethinkers. G. W. Baldwin, Esq., our National Liberal League committee-man for Pennsylvania, is the editor of the paper of the place, and is also the President of the League.

The meeting was held in the Opera Hall, and was well filled at every session with an audience of from five to six hundred people. On the last evening, when the hall was crowded, on motion of Dr. Brown, of Binghamton, the audience by a unanimous vote, adopted the resolutions and platform of the National League. And the Linesville League has voted to apply for a charter from the National Liberal League. Your space will not allow of my giving any report of the able and earnest speeches delivered on the occasion.

Everybody was delighted with our eloquent young friend, Rev. S. W. Sample, of Meadville; and I am pleased to learn that he is speaking very often in behalf of the principles of the Liberal League. There are but few more able defenders of our platform. Mr. O. P. Kellogg, a Freethought and Spiritualist lecturer from Ohio, delivered on the last evening an eloquent, interesting, and instructive lecture, entitled "Justice to Paine." He is an interesting speaker, and is doing what he can for the League movement. Mr. A. B. Brown, of Worcester, gave a scholarly and well-written address on "Evolution." He is lecturing in that vicinity. Dr. Brown, of Binghamton, enlivened the audience with his wit and humor. The ladies of the League did themselves great credit in serving up a supper on the last evening, in the Universalist Church, that was partaken of by the multitude; after which a large and intelligent party enjoyed a grand dance.

From Linesville the "Two Browns," Mr. Sample, and myself went to Corry, Pa., where a Freethinkers' Convention was held which was well-attended, and passed off to the entire satisfaction of all present. Mr. William Barnsdall, President of the Titusville Liberal League, presided, assisted by a lady from Oil City, whose name I obtained, but regret to say have mislaid. This lady proved an important accession to the meeting. She is an intelligent woman and a fine speaker, and is preparing to take the lecture-field in behalf of the Liberal cause. She proposes to get up a Liberal League in Oil City at once. In my next communication, when I obtain her name, I will have more to say in relation to this new advocate of liberalism. At this meeting the Congregational minister attended and took part in the discussions, to the great satisfaction of our Liberal friends. This Congregational minister is evidently not far from the "kingdom." He insisted that your correspondent was a Christian, and I insisted he was not one. He concluded I was good enough for one, and I thought him too far advanced to be one. I was thankful for his good opinion.

Mr. Barnsdall made some very pertinent remarks in relation to the League movement, and says the Titusville League is to have a large meeting soon. And I must not forget to say that the meeting at Corry was gotten up by two Spiritualist ladies, who are entitled to great credit. They went around town before the meeting and raised money enough to pay for the hall. And it was as good a meeting as I ever attended. On my arrival home yesterday, I found many letters giving encouraging information in relation to the League movement. Allow me to quote some short extracts therefrom.

Edgar M. Sellon writes from Buffalo, N. Y., that the Liberals of that city are to meet the third Sunday in February to organize a League. He invited your correspondent to attend and address the meeting. Mr. Henry Stemiske, President of the Buffalo Free-thinkers' Association, writes me that that society will unite with the new organization.

Mr. E. C. Walker writes from Florence, Iowa: "It is proposed to hold a State Convention of the Liberals of Iowa at Des Moines, probably about the 7th of March. We hope to organize a State League, and should have had a call out before now, but Dr. J. C. Michener, chairman of our State committee, seems to think that we need be in no particular hurry. Our Local League is a live one, and we hold our first regular Sunday meeting the 27th instant." Mr. Walker appears to be in dead earnest in this movement, and I wish he could be kept constantly in the field.

Mr. Jesse B. Barry, a disabled soldier, writes that the inmates of the National Home for Disabled Volunteer Soldiers in Montgomery County, Ohio, propose to organize a League at once. That, it appears to me, is a very appropriate work for those who have been disabled in a warfare for liberty.

Dr. C. R. Nutt, of Houston, Texas, is in hopes an auxiliary Liberal League may be established there soon.

Mr. H. Butterfield, of Salem, Kansas, informs me that "the prospects are favorable to organize a League here. No trouble to get forty or more names."

Mr. M. B. Chambers, of Marshallton, Pa., is moving for a League in that place.

Miss Gibson, of Philadelphia, is lecturing there in favor of our cause.

Mr. D. Boynton, of Sandstone, Jackson County, Mich., writes for some instruction in relation to forming Leagues, and says a meeting will be called there soon to organize one.

Mr. E. D. Strong, of San Bernardino, Cal., sends word that a League is to be formed soon in the western town.

Mr. A. B. Register, of Granite Falls, Minn., is moving in behalf of a Liberal League in that town. He says: "That such a movement has become a necessity, no thinking man or woman can doubt. The churches at the present time are making a desperate effort to crush out freethought and liberal expression in every possible direction, while we, without organization, are powerless to defend ourselves."

Mr. F. R. Stagg, of Parkersburg, West Va., is confident a League can be organized in that town. He says the revivalist Hammond has been holding a "revival" there, and a League will be organized as the result of his labors. I wish that wherever Hammond goes he might produce such a result.

Mr. W. T. Kirby, of Sabattus, Me., has had his attention called to the League movement by the Banner of Light, and thinks a League can be organized in Sabattus.

Mr. T. F. Enslow, of Derby, Lucas, Co., writes he is a Spiritualist, and indorses the League movement, and says an effort will be made to organize immediately.

But, Mr. Editor, I will not further trespass upon your space, but only add that I am pleased to see that Miss Emily J. Leonard, of West Meriden, Ct., has succeeded in getting a League organized there. I hope other Liberal women will follow her noble example.

H. L. GREEN.

P.S.—In a private letter just received, I learn a new League has just been organized at Adel, Iowa. The officers are Hon. Benjamin Green, President; J. C. Michener, M.D., Secretary; and Miss J. Perkins, Treasurer. The Liberals of this State appear to be wide awake.

"A. W. K." ON COMMUNISM.

EDITOR OF THE INDEX:—

Your new editorial contributor must have drifted down from a sacerdotal age and lost his way. He seems like one who finds himself suddenly landed and awakened, wild and staring, in a strange camp. At all events he is not at home in the liberal one. He seems never to have heard of evolution, and the "development theory" has no meaning for him. No writer at all familiar with Darwin and Spencer, or with the literature to which their works have given rise, would make such a statement as this: "Our laws and institutions were originally established mainly for the better protection of the weaker and more defenceless members of society."

Now our laws and institutions never were "originally established." They grew up by degrees out of previous laws and institutions, shading away to originally mere customs or usages. Besides, when laws and institutions were gradually established, long after the origin and more or less organization of human society, they were established mainly for the better protection of the law-and-institution maker, and the stronger and more fit to survive; and laws and institutions are to this day established by lawyers and capitalists for the better protection of lawyers and capitalists, and only in a very minor way "for the better protection of the weaker and more defenceless members of society."

Again, no student of sociology, or close observer of the social movement from the earliest ages, would utter such a reversal of the facts as the following: "No good and sufficient reason can be given why, if communism be the best and most natural condition of humanity, the movement of society should have been steadily in the opposite direction."

Now, to give your contributor his choice of weapons in this contest, let me "coördinate" for him "all facts bearing upon the question at issue" and see what they teach,—or, if THE INDEX won't hold all the facts, then such fair specimens of them as will indicate the whole. Let us take a rapid trip back to the beginnings of social development. What was the shape of the first human dwelling? A cave in the earth, the hollow of a tree, or a nest in the branches. What shape did it take next? A few upright poles inclined together at the top, with leaves or skins thrown about them for a very rude roof. What next? A cabin of rough logs, laid up in approximate walls, thatched with branches, or fern-leaves, or straw. What next? The adobe hut. Long after that came burnt brick laid up squarely in four walls. Then improvement in the human dwelling went on more rapidly, and upper stories began to be added with substantial roofing. Then came fortresses and castles, abbeys and monasteries, sheltering and subsisting large numbers; till now the highest development of the human residence as far as we have gone is the apartment house, the French flat, and the family hotel in cities; "steadily" not "in the opposite direction" to communism.

Again, what was the first grouping of human residences? The neighborhood of caves, or hollows, or tree-tops. What next? The camp of lodges. What next? The hamlet of cabins. What next? The village of huts, developing into the central village or market-town of adobe houses. Somewhere along in this series also came the tents of shepherds and wandering tribes. What next? The city of wood and brick. And last of all the metropolis, or capital, with splendid residences, apartment houses, and hotels, built of brick, stone, iron, and marble. The gregarious, communistic, social instinct of the human race builds up these small and great aggregated centres, and population has always tended from the rural fields to the village, from the village to the town, and from the town to the city.

Naval architecture has gone through the same evolution, from the first raft of logs to the dugout, or bark-canoe; then to the boat with oars; then through the barque, the sloop, the schooner, the brig, the ship, clipper-ship, and frigate, to the great steamships of to-day, carrying hundreds for a crew, and thousands of passengers, in common mess-rooms, dining-rooms, dormitory, and cabins.

Look now at the development of the art of attack and defence,—or war. The first strife began between individuals with teeth and claws; then between neighborhoods, clans, and tribes; then between regions with rivers or mountains interposed; then between migratory and stationary people; and finally, between kingdoms, empires, and nations. Every step of the way, in this development, war has organized itself on a larger scale, with greater numbers and in grander proportions,—more and more communism, and more complete organization, regulated hierarchy, and socialism as development went on.

Glance now at the development of industry and the arts of subsistence,—each primitive man gathering his own fruits and nuts, then catching his own fish and fowl, then hunting in squads or fishing in crews. But I need not go over all the steps which have brought human industry to its present high development,—immense shops, great factories, colossal establishments; some of them employing thousands of men, women, and children,—more communism, growing step by step as human industry developed.

I have now traced in the most touch-and-go way, five great lines of evolutionary movement from primeval times,—every one of them telling one and the same common story, and every step in them all tending more and more towards masses, aggregation, social organization, and final communism.

The order and naming of the various stages of development may not be as accurate as the specialist in the various lines would make them; but they are sufficiently exact to exhibit the principle contended for.

Now what are the facts of the more differentiated and diversified industrial, educational, and reform movements of this century? It is impossible to take a step in any direction of reform without going straight towards socialism. Penalties for crime take the shape of prisons,—great buildings where numbers are confined, worked, fed, clothed, slept, and sheltered in common departments. The insane are gathered into great asylums; and so are the deaf-mute and the blind. Inebriates are sent to common homes for confinement and cure. Truant and vagrant children are sent to reformatories,—and now the tramp! What do you suppose those who can ride are proposing to do with him who goes afoot? Why, collect him miscellaneous into work-houses, set him at labor in communities, feed, clothe, and shelter him in common dwellings, where he can be supported at small cost, on account of the economies of the communal arrangement. There is a project of law with these and other provisions now before the legislature of this State. Homes for the aged, homes for the crippled soldier, homes for disabled seamen, are the order of the day. Philanthropy doesn't think of taking a step anywhere except in the direction of coöperation, communism, socialism.

Education takes the same familiar road,—first, instruction at the mother's knee; then under private tutors; then in the "select school" of a few; then at the district school of the many; and, finally, higher education carries the student on through the academy, the college, and the university, with common buildings, dining-rooms, laundry, and dormitory,—communism, socialism, all the way along.

Trade, commerce, business, first forms partnerships of two, then of three or four; and, finally, great corporations carry on the world's work and distribution. Trade in dry goods, thread, needles, and housekeeping began in the navigator's sloop along the coasts, and in the pedler's pack on land. Then it gathered into country stores; and now it brings up in palaces of merchandise, like Stewart's and Macy's, in great cities. I have myself worn shoes made at my father's fireside by the itinerant shoemaker. The progress of the times soon gathered him into the shops of the town, and now he is mostly working in immense factories at great centres of industry. Clothing has taken the same course, and the sewing-machine employs hundreds of hands in one establishment.

Now, having gathered this cumulative array of facts, to oblige your new editorial contributor, let me call his attention to one point, and rivet it there with all the emphasis of his own italics,—if it is possible to concentrate such vague, diffused outlook as he seems to have cast on the course of history. All these movements are converging branches of one great, all-receiving, unifying stream. They are all flowing now, to-day, as in the past, and all in the same direction, with increasing meaning and momentum. Where are these currents going to unite,—in what all-embracing ocean will they debouche? No other deduction from the facts can be made than that humanity will go on with its gradually gathered experiences and prepared materials to ages, millenniums, heavens, or whatever they may be called, of associated, interblended, social harmony. The circle, of which humanity has careered so appreciable a segment, and which socially scientific eyes can to-day see and measure and predict, will continue on to completion. The people, and the whole people, will yet be organized into industries which it will be their delight to pursue, and of which they themselves will receive the rewards; and will be housed in palaces, with appointments, conveniences, and luxurious furnishings, compared with which the residences of the vulgar and vastly rich of the present day will be as the shambles of the savages in an African jungle.

Of course this will not happen by the middle of next week, nor next year. But there is no hurry. There is plenty of time. There is an eternity to fill up, and humanity might get out of work if we do not go slow. The Infinite has taken infinite leisure to create what has been accomplished, and is not going to be hurried now. It depends upon man himself to accelerate this social work. He may aid but cannot much retard it. At all events, the few and rare people who dwell on heights, and get up early, can catch advance scintillations of the coming beams, order their lives thereby, and associate and commune, unscared by the howlings of any owl in the dark ravines of a river valley. This is what the people are doing in a tentative way at Guise in France, at Onelda, New Lebanon, and Icaria in America. These are differing forms of socialism, but the same in substance. They will do for the first rough models for future inventors to improve upon.

In one way or another, the social movement, as we see it evolving, will go on. There will be more and more coöperation, joining of hand to hand in labor, seeing of eye to eye, and standing of shoulder to shoulder, and more and more furtherance of each other's work as the race proceeds. The student of evolution has the right to prophesy because he fulfils the condition,—he knows. He has the key of the situation and can read the riddle of the movement. He is at the grand stand of the great Social Derby (history); saw the race start at the beginning; looked down on the speeding contestants as they passed the first stretch (savagery); scanned with eager vision the more exciting second heat (barbarism); observes now, in the third (civilization), that they are running well on the same course, and knows that they will not fly the track, but will arrive at the foreordained goal set before them. That goal is, and can be, no other than socialism—a thoroughly untitled, economized, and scientized social life in some form,—perfect liberty, security, and happiness of the individual, with complete justice, order, and harmony in the social whole.

This article is already long, but justice requires one further correction of intellectual strabismus in historical interpretation. In his previous article, your contributor wrote the word commune when he meant communism. In his present statement he devotes a paragraph to the commune, but writes about and don't use the word. The whole paragraph about the "restored column in the Place Vendôme" refers to the commune, not to communism; and it has no place in this discussion, any more than the word too would have in the proposition, two and two make four; or than a California grizzly would be referred to in those touching lines:—

"The lambs he carries in his arms
And in his bosom bears."

The similarity is one of sound merely, not of meaning. Communism and community are derived from the Latin, communis and communitas, uncorrupted by any special and local meaning which the word commune got in France. The commune in that country has only a very remote social meaning,—no more than the town in our political organization. In its origin, the commune was a defensive or fighting organization of burghers or citizens, in a limited territorial district,—a legalized arming of the people as opposed to the aggressions of the feudal lords. It was an organization for war and destruction,—very right and justifiable, no doubt, but still war; while communism is an organization for peace and production. The reader who would like to get a clear idea of the French commune will find it best treated in Louis Blanc's History of the French Revolution, where abundant authorities are cited. The socialistic meaning being taken out of the word, of course the dictum falls to the ground, that France "has twice within the past century attempted to reduce the socialistic theory to a practical working polity." THEOBON C. LELAND.

NEW YORK, Jan. 23, 1878.

NOTES FROM AUSTRALIA.

EDITOR OF THE INDEX:

An old London friend, now resident in Brooklyn, U. S. A., had sent me occasionally a copy of THE INDEX.

In 1876 he arranged that he should obtain and post to me here, monthly, sets of that paper, and I am receiving them pretty regularly.

I have been much gratified by the perusal of the general articles in THE INDEX; by those on morals and "freethought" in particular.

For politics, I have neither the taste nor the capacity necessary for the study and comprehension thereof; but I know that politics must be studied by some minds, if only to secure a place for the study of other sciences. Therefore I conclude—in opposition to the views of some of your subscribers—that articles and letters on politics should sometimes find a place in THE INDEX.

I have been so much and so pleasantly moved by some articles in THE INDEX, as frequently to wish that I could be allowed to collect such articles and reprint them in book form. And I was about to deal thus with the three lectures on "Socrates and Jesus," when I saw that I was not at liberty to do so without your permission; and also, that for the purpose of distribution only, perhaps I should be rendering more service to the work you have in hand—the emancipation of mind from the slavery of superstition—by sending for and circulating copies of THE INDEX, than by a reprint of the articles in question. Yet, as I think that many persons in Australia might read with approval nearly the whole of the lectures on "Socrates," if not also that of "Socrates and Jesus," while they would shrink from reading THE INDEX, I should be glad to see a separate publication of those lectures; and I find that I have at least one co-thinker on that subject in your correspondent "T." INDEX 25th January, page 45, under the heading "A New Book Suggested." You expressed an opinion, in reply to "T.," that no good publishing house would be willing to incur the pecuniary risks of such publication. If so—if no one in the States would undertake the work,—I venture to suggest that those three lectures be offered to the gentlemen in London who are endeavoring to arrange for the continuance of the Scott Series of Tracts, for republication in that series.

I lend THE INDEX to the few persons in my small circle who care to read it, and then post it to London or elsewhere.

I sent for and received a set of the photographic pictures of the chief contributors to THE INDEX, and thus have the pleasure of being face to face with you, dear sir, as I write. Will you do me the favor to send me one or two copies of the late Mr. R. H. Ranney's photographs?

I much regret the loss to us by the early death of so intelligent, so brave, and so good a man and worker as he was. But what sang the divine poet?

"Yes, the grave
Hath quenched that eye, and death's relentless frost
Withered that arm; but the unfading fame
Which Virtue hangs upon its votary's tomb
Shall never pass away."

In further proof of sympathy for your work I enclose draft on London for £5, say equal $25, which you can apply in whole or in part to THE INDEX fund, or to the posting to me a few sets of THE INDEX for all this year, at your discretion. If you decide for the latter, please take care to post in time to catch the monthly mail from San Francisco, and I will ask one of our booksellers to sell the papers. If sold I will remit proceeds to you; if not, I will distribute them.

One of my readers of THE INDEX here has sent me so charming, modest, and timorous a criticism on the article on "Socrates," that I have claimed her permission to send it to you. Not having time to copy it, I send the original, which I think will please you none the less that it questions a portion of the article, and that it is written in a foreign tongue. I place it at your disposal.

There is another article in THE INDEX to which I would especially refer,—"The March of Science toward God": INDEX February 22.

I am an old "freethinker," Mr. Editor,—old enough, at least, to claim George Jacob Holyoake as one of my "godfathers" at the baptismal font of "freethought."

I recall the famous lectures of Charles Southwell and G. J. Holyoake; and I well remember how I listened in wondrous, and at first half-terrified, excitement to the one, and in still wondrous, but pleasant and hopeful, emotion to the other.

Dear old teacher! How glad I am to see new life, new vigor restored to him. How strongly his mind is photographed in his Secular Review now before me. How clearly I behold him, with his terse, epigrammatic style in that article I have referred to—"The March of Science toward God."

It would ill-become an ill-educated man—and a pupil—to criticize the work of a scholar and a teacher; therefore I will only say that I am delighted with the article; that it gives me almost as much pleasure as did an article of his in the Reasoner, more than twenty-five years ago,—on "Moderation," I think it was.

For these, and for all other mercies of a kindred kind, Truth's holy name be blessed and praised.

But I am trespassing seriously on your space. My few notes have run into a long letter.

Offer to your fellow-workers and receive for yourself the assurance of my sympathy, gratitude, and respect.

Yours sincerely, B. R.

SYDNEY, N. S. Wales, June 1, 1877.

P. S.—There is not much show of freethought in these colonies; but I am told that there is a deep undercurrent of it; and I will send, or cause to be sent to you, a few notes occasionally, if you think they would interest your readers.

[We should be very glad to receive our generous friend's "Notes," even if, as in this case, they have to travel three times over the ocean to get to us, as happened to these by a misdirection of the letter. And we thank him gratefully for his liberality to THE INDEX, his £5 having been safely received.—ED.]

PAY YOUR POSTAGE LIKE A HERO.

THE EDITOR OF THE INDEX:

Dear Sir,—In your article on the "Inviolability of the Mails," you take a square position on a point on which I have for years done obscure battling, and which has been of late forcing itself into prominence under difficulties. I mean the difference of postage rate between manuscript and printed matter. I quote of you the following paragraph, page 30, column 3:—

"3. The notion that there is some divine sanctity in the mails, rendering it absolute sacrilege to open for any purpose whatever any package dropped into the post-office, is a species of superstitious fetish-worship which we did not suppose any radical could be capable of. Certain classes of mail-matter are charged a lower rate of postage if left open at one end of the package; and the purpose of this regulation is to enable the post-office officials to examine the package. What absurdity, then, when we have all acquiesced for years in the inspection of our mails to this extent, to befool ourselves with the fiction that some inexplicable sacredness hangs about a bundle of circulars or pamphlets! If this is so,—if it is a violation of our sacred rights for the post-office man to peep into our packages,—let us all heroically pay letter-postage, and our rights will be inviolable. It is ridiculously unheroic, to say the least, to barter away these precious rights merely for a few cents lower postage!"

The liberty of the press and the sanctity of the mails are important principles; and whether they should cover the printing and sending through the post-office obscene matter or other matter judged criminal, is an important and intricate question. But in the controversy which has lately been raised on these matters, the sturdy advocates of the variously opposite opinions seem, with the single exception of yourself, to forget the main relevant point, which is one of application of public money raised by taxation.

They assume, or seem to assume, that the post-office, in this country, is a mere public convenience administered on business principles, and used by individuals on the strict condition of adequately paying for the services which they receive. Were this the case, the post-office might say, and ought to say: "I have nothing to do with prying into the contents of the letters and other mail-matter entrusted to me. I read the address, weigh the parcel, see that the postage is right, and send to destination. I am bound to secrecy by my oath of office, and answer the questions of press-reporter and police-detective alike by showing them the door. Dynamite cans, torpedoes, etc., of course excepted. In case of the matter being objectionable in a moral-literary point of view, the police must stop it before it reaches my hands or after it leaves them."

This is, of course, what a serious post-office administration ought to be by law enabled to answer in any country where the post-office is a public convenience conducted on the business principle of self-support. But in the United States the post-office is not self-supporting in either fact or principle; but is, legally and intendedly, a great charitable and missionary institution, transporting at public expense, through half-free rates, both the literature which is to civilize the people, and, under the wings of that literature, the advertisements through which the commercial man who has the most money can crush his competitors out of existence. Those commercial men, no doubt, amply repay the nation for the gratuity they receive, by giving to Congress many a good advice, chiefly as to the financial policy to be pursued by the nation. But how can the literature proper repay the nation for the gratuity which it receives in the shape of privileged postal rates? By being what it is by law intended to be: civilizing, refining, moral, Christian in the Protestant sense,—the only sense in which the law in this country is acquainted with Christianity. There must be some agency to ascertain whether the press fulfils, in this sense, its high missionary purpose. Mr. Comstock is that agency, and must, like every executive officer, use his judgment in interpreting his duty, subject to the orders of his superiors and the revision of the courts. We cannot expect his judgment, or even that of the courts, to coincide in every case with that of every particular individual among us. But the worst mistake he or they could make would not be half so outrageous as the idea of the people carrying at charity rates, through the national post-office, immoral pamphlets.

I do not mean that our legislation on this subject, though I understand its working and appreciate its purpose, is all that I want it to be. I would rather say, Save all this trouble by conducting the post-office on strict business principles, charging for all mail-matter alike according to weight or bulk at one uniform rate, irrespective of manuscript or printed matter. If the matter be criminal, let it be dealt with as such before it reaches the hand of the post-office authorities, or after it leaves them. Even thus there would still be, to use the words of Mr. Comstock, "abundant means of detecting the vendors of vile literature without resorting to unlawful methods," as he shows is already the case with matter circulating at letter-postage rates.

But if the principle of a distinction between mail-matter to be transported at business and at charity rates is to be maintained, what we must demand is, not a less stringent but a more stringent application of the principle of discrimination between matter entitled to that charity rate or not entitled to it. Not only obscene literature, but all mercenary literature is injurious to the public interest and debasing to the public character. No obscene, copy-righted, or mercenary literature ought therefore to be transported through the mails except at full letter-postage rates. Nor ought any advertisement, covert or avowed, have the benefit of the charity rates; for though the advertisement may have, within a certain measure of decency, its legitimate place in commerce, it amounts to downright theft when, not content with crushing the many under the feet of the few through the beastly force of sheer money power, it must travel dead-head on the purse of the whole public.

I am, dear sir, very truly yours,

JULIUS FERRETTI.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Jan. 18, 1878.

DEFINITIONS.

EDITOR INDEX:—

Definitions are always in order, and especially among liberals who wish to be understood, and to understand each other. If "A. W. K." will define communism, in a sociological sense, or in a common-sense way, he will see that the persons who pulled down the ugly column in the Place Vendôme, erected to commemorate and perpetuate that love of military glory which has been so costly a curse to France, were not communists, but "communards," and he will know that their action has no more to do with socialism proper than with the man in the moon.

They would have done a great service to their country if they could have destroyed the insane love of which the column is a type; but sentiments cannot be changed by violence.

So far from their action being communistic, it was an illustration of the destructive form of individualism, where the rights of others are not recognized at all, but "what is mine is my own, and what is yours is mine." Communards and communists are not one and the same. F. S. C.

HOW CHURCHES EARN THEIR EXEMPTION.

CHICAGO, Jan. 21.

DEAR INDEX:—

Enclosed please find a couple of "announcements," the like of which appear almost daily in our papers the whole season through. These churches are built upon most desirable lots upon the finest residence street in the city. In the second one mentioned, I have "assisted" at church sociables, fairs, lectures, readings, a French play, a parlor opera, and concerts. Others could say the same of scores of other churches here; for all our new ones (and, as you know, the first made nearly all new,) have not only a pastor's study, but "elegant parlors," dining-room, kitchen, etc.

Yet these are the ecclesiastical buildings which, upon the plea of "religious use," are exempt from taxation. Yours, KATE N. DOGGETT.

Announcements.

Do not forget the grand exhibition of living statuary this evening at St. Paul's (Dr. Byder's) Church. There will be a dramatic entertainment in the parlors of the Church of Messiah, this evening. The comedy "Flower of the Family," will be presented.

THE DUTY OF THE HOUR.

Liberalism is born of freedom and intelligence, and seeks above all things else to establish and perpetuate for generations to come a still larger freedom and a still higher intelligence. What nobler impulse can move the human heart than the desire to enlighten mankind and clothe them with greater liberty? We certainly know of no cause that ever enlisted the head, heart, or hand of man that was nobler than this cause of freethought. And what better method for the reform of society can be instituted, in these "times that try men's souls," than that of organizing Liberal Leagues? In fact, this matter of forming Leagues seems to be the imperative duty of the hour. W. S. BELL.

THE FIRST THING is to make your sermon plain. Mr. Blomfield preached on the text, "The fool hath said in his heart, 'There is no God.'" Wishing to find out how it pleased his people, he called a poor foolish man to the pulpit and asked him how he liked the sermon. The reply, which made Blomfield a sadder and a wiser man, was: "Well, sir, I must say I can't agree with you. In spite of all you've said, I think there must be a God."

Advertisements.

THE PATRONAGE

of the liberal advertising public is respectfully solicited for THE INDEX. The attempt will be honestly made to keep the advertising pages of THE INDEX in entire harmony with its general character and principles, and thus to furnish to the public an advertising medium which shall be not only profitable to its patrons, but also worthy of their most generous support. To this end, all improper or "blind" advertisements, all quack advertisements, and all advertisements believed to be fraudulent or unjust to any one, will be excluded from these columns.

THE INDEX must not be held responsible for any statement made by advertisers, who will in all cases accept the responsibility for their own statements.

ADVERTISING RATES.

For 1 to 15 Insertions, 10c per line.	For 16 to 30 " "	For 31 to 45 " "	For 46 to 60 " "
" 18 " 25 "	" 26 " 33 "	" 34 " 41 "	" 42 " 49 "
" 50 " 57 "	" 58 " 65 "	" 66 " 73 "	" 74 " 81 "

On half-column advertisements, a discount of 10 per cent. will be made; on full-column advertisements, a discount of 25 per cent.

On all advertisements for which cash is paid in advance, a further discount of 25 per cent. on the total, as above calculated, will be made. FRANCIS E. ABBOT, Editor.

TO ADVERTISERS.

The following states the experience of a successful Bookseller who has advertised in THE INDEX:—

TOLEDO, Ohio, Sept. 20, 1872.

TO THE INDEX ASSO., Toledo, O.:
Gentlemen,—Having had occasion to advertise in your paper during the past two years quite largely, I take pleasure in stating that I have always obtained very satisfactory returns—better in fact than from book advertisements in any other paper I have advertised in. Not only have I obtained immediate results, but orders have frequently been received months after the insertion of the advertisement, showing that your paper is kept on file and referred to by your readers.

Yours truly,

HENRY S. STEBBINS.

Special arrangements will be made at reduced terms for long-time or extended advertisements. Address

THE INDEX,
No. 231 WASHINGTON STREET,
Boston.

CULTURED FREE THOUGHT.

The Index Association,

Office, No. 231 WASHINGTON ST., BOSTON, publish

THE INDEX,

A Weekly Paper devoted to Free and Rational Religion.

It is the object of THE INDEX to give public utterance to the boldest, most cultivated, and best matured thought of the age on all religious questions, and to apply it directly to the social and political amelioration of society.

It is edited by FRANCIS E. ABBOT, with the following list of Editorial Contributors:—

O. B. FROTHINGHAM, New York City.
WILLIAM J. POTTER, New Bedford, Mass.
WILLIAM H. SPENCER, Haverhill, Mass.
Mrs. E. D. CHENEY, Jamaica Plain, Mass.
GEORGE JACOB HOLYOAKE, London, Eng.
DAVID H. CLARK, Florence, Mass.
Mrs. ELIZABETH CADY STANTON, Tenny, N.J.
J. L. STODDARD, Boston.
ELIZUR WRIGHT, Boston.
O. D. B. MILLS, Syracuse, N.Y.
W. D. LE SUEUR, Ottawa, Can.
BENJ. F. UNDERWOOD, Thorndike, Mass.
ALBERT WARREN KELSEY, St. Louis, Mo.

Every liberal should subscribe for THE INDEX as the best popular exponent of Religious Liberalism. Every Christian minister, and every thinking church-member, should subscribe for it, as the clearest, most candid, and most scholarly exposition of the differences between Free Thought and Evangelical Christianity, and as the best means of becoming well informed of the arguments and the movements which the Church will have to meet in the future.

Almost every number contains a discourse or leading article, which alone is worth the price of one year's subscription.

Prof. MAX MUELLER, of Oxford, England, in a letter to the Editor published in THE INDEX for January 4, 1872, says: "That the want of a journal entirely devoted to Religion in the widest sense of the word should be felt in America—that such a journal should have been started and so powerfully supported by the best minds of your country,—is a good sign of the times. There is no such journal in England, France, or Germany; though the number of so-called religious or theological periodicals is, as you know, very large." And later still "I read the numbers of your INDEX with increasing interest."

Send $3.20 for one year, including postage, or 6 cents for three months on trial.

Address THE INDEX,
No. 231 Washington Street, Boston.

PUBLICATIONS INDEX TRACTS.

OF THE

FREE

RELIGIOUS

ASSOCIATION.

Freedom and Fellowship in Religion. A volume of ten essays upon speculative and practical problems of religion, by D. A. Wasson, Samuel Longfellow, Samuel Johnson, John Weiss, W. J. Potter, F. E. Abbot, O. B. Frothingham, J. W. Chadwick, T. W. Higginson, and Mrs. E. D. Cheney, and extracts from Addresses by Ralph Waldo Emerson, Lucretia Mott, Robert Dale Owen, Dr. Bartol, Wendell Phillips, Rabbi Wise, Horace Seaver, A. B. Alcott, Lucy Stone, Charles H. Malcom, Julia Ward Howe, and others,—all given on the platform of the Free Religious Association. Price (reduced) $1.50.

"One purpose of this volume is to give an answer to the question, What is the meaning of the Free Religious Association?"

Proceedings of Fifth Annual Meeting, 1873. Contains essays by J. W. Chadwick on "Liberty and the Church in America," by O. D. B. Mills on "Religion as the Expression of a Permanent Sentiment of the Human Mind," and by O. B. Frothingham on "The Religion of Humanity," with addresses by Rowland Connor, Oella Burleigh, Lucretia Mott, A. B. Alcott, C. A. Bartol, Horace Seaver, Alexander Loos, and others.

Proceedings of Sixth Annual Meeting, 1874. Contains essays by Samuel Johnson on "Freedom in Religion," and by John Weiss on "Religion in Freedom," with addresses by Wm. C. Gannett, Robert Dale Owen, T. W. Higginson, Samuel Longfellow, J. S. Thomson, F. E. Abbot, and Lucretia Mott.

Proceedings of Seventh Annual Meeting, 1874. Contains verbatim reports of President Frothingham's address on "The Validity of the Free Religious Platform," of Dr. Bartol's essay on "The Religious Signs of the Times," of Rabbi Bonnescheln's speech on "Reformed Judaism," and of the statements by Messrs. Calthrop, Abbot, and Higginson of their respective attitudes towards Christianity,—as "Christian," "Anti-Christian," and "Extra-Christian,"—together with the Secretary's Annual Report, and letters from Keshub Chunder Sen, Frederick Douglass, and D. A. Wasson.

Proceedings of Eighth Annual Meeting, 1875. Contains Essays by Wm. C. Gannett, on "The Present Constructive Tendencies in Religion," and by Francis E. Abbot, on "Construction and Destruction in Religion," and addresses by T. W. Higginson, Lucretia Mott, Chas. G. Ames, O. B. Frothingham, B. F. Underwood, S. P. Putnam, and E. S. Morse.

Proceedings of Ninth Annual Meeting, 1876. Contains a full abstract of the interesting discussion at the Business Meeting on the Practical Methods and Work of the Association; the annual report of the Executive Committee; address of the President, O. B. Frothingham; essay by James Parton, on "The Relation of Religion to the State" (or, as he styles it, "Cathedrals and Beer"), with addresses on the subject by Miss Susan H. Wilson and Rev. M. J. Savage; essay by Samuel Longfellow, on "The Relation of Free Religion to Churches," with the addresses that followed it by Prof. Felix Adler, Rev. Henry Blanchard, Rev. Brooke Herford, and John Weiss,—together with letters from Judge Doe, Rev. Joseph Cook, and others, invited to speak.

Proceedings of Tenth Annual Meeting, 1877. Contains Essays by Rev. Wm. R. Alger, on "Steps towards Religious Emancipation in Christendom," and by C. D. B. Mills, Esq., on "Internal Dangers to Free Thought and Free Religion"; Addresses by O. B. Frothingham, Wm. Henry Channing, Rabbi Lasker, Dr. J. L. Dudley, and T. W. Higginson; and tenth annual reports of the Executive Committee, Treasurer, etc.

Any one of the above pamphlets of "PROCEEDINGS" sent to any address for Five cents received in postage stamps; and more at the same rate. Sold also for Five cents at the office.

For series of important Tracts see last page of THE INDEX.

These publications are for sale at the office of the Free Religious Association, 231 Washington Street, Boston. The Annual Reports for 1868 and 1871 cannot be supplied, and the supply of others previous to that of 1872 is quite limited and at special rates. Orders by mail may be addressed "Free Religious Association, 231 Washington Street, Boston, Mass."

WM. J. POTTER, Sec. F. R. A.

No. 1.—Truths for the Times, by F. E. Abbot, contains the "Fifty Affirmations" and "Modern Principles." Mr. CHARLES DARWIN, author of "The Origin of Species," says, in a letter to the editor not originally intended for publication, but subsequently authorized to be used: "I have now read 'TRUTHS FOR THE TIMES,' and I admire them from my inmost heart; and I agree to almost every word." New Edition. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00.

No. 2.—Fear of the Living God, by O. B. Frothingham, exposes the debating character of the popular notions of God, and presents conceptions of him that are worthy of the nineteenth century. New Edition. Price 5 cents; 12 copies 50 cents.

No. 3.—Lecture on the Bible, by the Rev. Charles Voysey, of England, is an overwhelming demonstration of the imperfections and errors of the Bible, both in the Old and the New Testaments. New Edition. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00.

No. 4.—Christian Propagandism, by F. E. Abbot, is an exposure of the weakness, costliness, and inefficiency of the System of Foreign Missions. Full of Figures, Facts, and Interesting Extracts. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00.

No. 5.—"God in the Constitution," by Rev. Arthur B. Bradford, opposes the proposed Theological Amendment to the United States Constitution. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00.

No. 6.—"The Sabbath," by Parker Pillsbury, denounces Sabbatarian superstition. New Edition. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00.

No. 7.—"Compulsory Education," by F. E. Abbot, maintains the right of every child to be educated, and the duty of the State to ensure it an education. Price 5 cents; 12 copies 50 cents.

No. 8.—The Present Heaven, by O. B. Frothingham, treats of a subject that interests everybody. New Edition. Price 5 cents; 12 copies 50 cents.

No. 9.—The Christian Amendment, by F. E. Abbot, shows the dangerous character of the attempt to interpolate the Evangelical Christian Creed in the U. S. Constitution. Price 5 cents; 12 copies 50 cents.

No. 10.—The Impeachment of Christianity, by F. E. Abbot. Fourth Ten Thousand. Sent for free distribution to any one who will distribute it, in packages of from five to one hundred copies.

No. 11.—The God of Science, by F. E. Abbot, attempts to show the real influence of modern science upon the idea of God. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00.

No. 12.—Is Romanism Real Christianity? Two essays by Francis W. Newman and F. E. Abbot. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00.

No. 13.—On the Vision of Heaven, by Prof. F. W. Newman, of England, analyses the Christian conception of Heaven. Price 5 cents; 12 copies 50 cents.

No. 14.—A Study of Religion: The Name and the Thing, by F. E. Abbot, attempts to show that the popular derivation of the word Religion is incorrect; that the popular conceptions of Religion itself are inadequate; and that a new conception of it, based on the Law of Evolution, consistent with absolute Freedom of Thought, and independent even of belief in God, is the necessary condition of the perpetuity of Religion among men. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00.

No. 15.—The Battle of Syracuse. Two Essays by Rev. James Freeman Clarke, D.D., and F. E. Abbot discussing the Authority of Christianity. Price 10 cents; 12 copies for $1.00. Address

THE INDEX, 231 WASHINGTON STREET,
Boston, Mass.

1 8 7 8.

THE INDEX,
A Weekly Journal

DEVOTED TO

FREE RELIGION.

PUBLISHED BY THE

INDEX ASSOCIATION,

AT

No. 231 Washington Street, Boston.

EDITOR:

FRANCIS ELLINGWOOD ABBOT.

EDITORIAL CONTRIBUTORS:

O. B. FROTHINGHAM, New York City.
W. J. POTTER, New Bedford, Mass.
W. H. SPENCER, Haverhill, Mass.
Mrs. E. D. CHENEY, Jamaica Plain, Mass.
GEORGE JACOB HOLYOAKE, England.
DAVID H. CLARK, Florence, Mass.
Mrs. ELIZABETH CADY STANTON, Tenny, N.J.
J. L. STODDARD, Boston.
ELIZUR WRIGHT, Boston.
C. D. B. MILLS, Syracuse, N.Y.
W. D. LE SUEUR, Ottawa, Can.
BENJ. F. UNDERWOOD, Thorndike, Mass.
ALBERT WARREN KELSEY, St. Louis, Mo.

THE INDEX aims—

To increase general intelligence with respect to religion:

To foster a nobler spirit and quicken a higher purpose, both in society and in the individual:

To substitute knowledge for ignorance, right for wrong, truth for superstition, freedom for slavery, character for creed, catholicity for bigotry, love for hate, humanitarianism for sectarianism, devotion to universal ends for absorption in selfish schemes.

In brief, to hasten the day when Free Religion shall take the place of dogmatism and ecclesiasticism throughout the world, and when the welfare of humanity here and now shall be the aim of all private and public activities.

In addition to its general objects, the practical object to which THE INDEX is specially devoted is the ORGANIZATION OF THE LIBERALS OF THE COUNTRY, for the purpose of securing the more complete and consistent secularization of the political and educational institutions of the United States. The Church must give place to the Republic in the affections of the people. The last vestiges of ecclesiastical control must be wiped out of the Constitutions and Statutes of the several States in order to bring them into harmony with the National Constitution. To accomplish this object, the Liberals must make a united demand, and present an unbroken front, and the chief practical aim of THE INDEX will be henceforth to organize a GREAT NATIONAL PARTY OF FREEDOM. Let every one who believes in this movement give it direct aid by helping to increase the circulation of THE INDEX.

SPECIAL FEATURES.

The publication of a valuable leading paper or essay of a thoughtful character, in each issue, will continue to be one of the most marked features of THE INDEX.

Regular editorial contributions will continue to be furnished by the well-known eminent writers who have already done so much to give to THE INDEX its present high position. Other interesting correspondence, communications, extracts from valuable books and periodicals, and miscellaneous articles, will also be published; and such improvements will be made from time to time as circumstances shall render possible.

AGENTS.

Local Agents for THE INDEX are wanted in every city and town throughout the country. The most liberal terms are offered.

TERMS.

The price of THE INDEX is Three Dollars a year, payable in advance; and 20 cents postage for the year; and at the same rate for shorter periods. All remittances of money must be at the sender's risk, unless forwarded by cheque, registered letter, or post-office money order. The name, with address in full, must be accompanied with the money in each case.

Address THE INDEX,
No. 231 Washington Street, Boston.

POPULAR BOOKS,

SENT BY MAIL

AT

PUBLISHERS' PRICES!

ORDERS PROMPTLY FILLED.

NO EXTRA CHARGE FOR POSTAGE.

ANY BOOK in the subjoined List, or any other OBTAINABLE BOOK that may be desired, will be forwarded as promptly as possible on receipt of orders accompanied with the CASH.

Orders are respectfully solicited from all friends of THE INDEX.

	Price.
ALCOTT (A. BRONSON). Tablets.....	1.50
Concord Days.....	1.50
Records of a School. A new edition.....	1.50
ALCOTT (LOUISA M.). Little Women. Two vols.....	3.00
Hospital Sketches and Camp and Fireside Stories.....	1.50
An Old-Fashioned Girl.....	1.50
Little Men.....	1.00
My Boys, &c.....	1.00
Shawl-Straps.....	1.00
Work; A Story of Experience.....	1.75
ARABIAN NIGHTS' ENTERTAINMENTS.....	1.50
ARNOLD'S (MATTHEW) Essays in Criticism.....	2.00
New Poems.....	2.00
Literature and Dogma.....	1.50
AUERBACH (BERTHOLD). On the Heights. Villa Eden; The Country-House on the Rhine.....	1.50
Edelweiss.....	2.00
German Tales.....	1.00
BACON'S Essays.....	1.25
BAGEHOT on the English Constitution.....	2.25
Physics and Politics.....	1.50
BAIN (ALEXANDER). Mental Science: A Compendium of Psychology and History of Philosophy.....	1.75
Moral Science: A Compendium of Ethics. 1 vol.....	1.75
The Senses and the Intellect. Third edition. 1 vol.....	5.00
BARTLETT'S Dictionary of Americanisms.....	2.50
BARTLETT'S Familiar Quotations.....	3.00
BARTOL (REV. C. A.). Radical Problems.....	2.00
The Rising Faith.....	2.00
BASTIAN (H. CHARLTON). The Beginnings of Life. 2 vols.....	5.00
BRACKETT (ANNA C.). The Education of American Girls.....	3.00
BROOKS (CHARLES T.). Translations. The Layman's Bible.....	2.25
The World-Priest.....	2.25
The Tall Student.....	.75
BUCHNER'S Force and Matter.....	3.25
BUCKLE (HENRY THOMAS). History of Civilization in England and France, Spain and Scotland. New edition of the entire work, with a complete index. 2 vols.....	6.00
CARLYLE'S Works. Cheap edition. Comprising the following: Miscellaneous Essays, 7 vols.; French Revolution, 3 vols.; Frederick the Great, 10 vols.; Cromwell's Letters, &c., 5 vols.; Sartor Resartus, 1 vol.; John Sterling, 1 vol.; Life of Schiller, 1 vol.; East and West, 1 vol.; Heroes and Hero Worship, 1 vol.; Latter Day Pamphlets, 1 vol. Any volume sold separately. $1 vol. London, 1871-3. Per vol.....	.80
CARPENTER (DR. W. B.). The Principles of Mental Physiology, with their Applications to the Training and Discipline of the Mind, and the Study of its Morbid Conditions.....	3.00
CERVANTES' Don Quixote.....	1.50
CHANNING (WM. ELLERY, D.D.). The Perfect Life. In Twelve Discourses. Edited from his manuscripts by his nephew, Wm. Henry Channing.....	1.50
CHANNING (WM. ELLERY). Thoreau: The Poet-Naturalist. With Memorial Verse.....	2.00
CHERRY (MRS. E. D.). Patience. A Series of Thirty Games for the Fireside.....	1.00
Social Games. A new Series of Games for Parties, uniform with Patience.....	1.00
Sally Williams, the Mountain Girl. Illustrated.....	1.50
CLARKE (JAMES FREEMAN). Ten Great Religions.....	2.00
Common-Sense in Religion.....	2.00
CLARKE (DR. E. H.). Sex in Education.....	1.25
CLODD (EDWARD). The Childhood of the World.....	.75
COBBE (FRANCES POWER). Studies New and Old, of Ethical and Social Subjects. Darwinism in Morals, and other Essays.....	2.00
The Religious Demands of the Age.....	.20
CONWAY (MONSIEUR D.). The Earthward Pilgrimage.....	1.75
COBBLETON and Conservation of Forces: A Series of Expositions by Grove, Helmholtz, Mayer, Faraday, Liebig and Carpenter: with an Introduction by Edward L. Youmans, M.D. 1 vol.....	2.00
CULTURE DEMANDED BY MODERN LIFE: Its True Aims and Requirements. A Series of Addresses. By Tyndall, Huxley, Whewell, Faraday, Spencer, Draper, Mason, Lyell, etc. Edited by Edward L. Youmans.....	2.00
DALL (MRS. CAROLINE H.). The College, the Market, and the Court; or, Woman's Relation to Education, Employment, and Citizenship.....	2.00

Historical Pictures Retouched; a Volume of Miscellaneous. In two parts. Part I., "Studies, Pictures, and Fancies".....	1.
DARWIN'S Origin of Species.....	2.00
The Descent of Man. 2 vols.....	4.00
Journal of Research.....	2.50
Emotional Expression of Man and the Lower Animals.....	3.50
The Variation of Animals and Plants under Domestication. 2 vols., illustrated.....	6.00
DESCARTES (RENE). Discourse on the Method of Rightly conducting the Reason and Seeking Truth in the Sciences.....	2.25
DICKENS' Child's History of England.....	1.50
DUHRING (JULIA). Philosophers and Fools. A Study.....	2.00
ELLIOT'S (GEORGE) Novels. Household Edition. 5 vols., each.....	1.00
Adam Bede.....	1.00
Domby and Son.....	1.00
The Mill on the Floss.....	1.00
Felix Holt.....	1.00
Silas Marner and Scenes of Clerical Life. The Same. Library Edition. 2 vols.....	3.50
Middlemarch. 2 vols.....	3.50
Wit and Wisdom of.....	1.25
The Spanish Gypsy.....	1.50
EMERSON'S (E. W.) Essays. First Series.....	1.50
Essays. Second Series.....	1.50
Miscellaneous.....	1.50
Representative Men.....	1.50
English Traits.....	1.50
Conduct of Life.....	1.50
Poems. With Portrait.....	1.50
May-day and Other Pieces.....	1.50
Essays. Blue and Gold.....	1.25
Poems. Blue and Gold.....	1.25
Prose Works. 2 vols.....	6.00
Society and Solitude.....	1.50
EVANS (E. P., Ph. D.). First Historical Transformations of Christianity. From the French of Athanasius Coquerel the Younger.....	1.50
The Life and Works of Gotthold Ephraim Lessing. Translated from the German of Adolf Stahr. 2 vols.....	5.00
FARRAR'S Critical History of Free Thought, in reference to the Christian Religion.....	1.00
FEUERBACH (LUDWIG). The Essence of Christianity. "George Eliot's" translation.....	2.00
FISKE'S (JOHN) Myths and Myth-Makers.....	2.00
Cosmic Philosophy.....	4.00
FROTHINGHAM (O. B.) Religion of Humanity.....	1.50
Child's Book of Religion.....	1.00
Life of Theodore Parker.....	3.00
FULLER'S (MARGARET) Complete Works, including Memoirs by Emerson, Channing, and others. A new edition. 6 vols.....	9.00
GALTON (FRANCIS). Hereditary Genius. An Inquiry into its Laws and Consequences.....	2.00
GOETHE'S Faust. Translated into English Verse by Bayard Taylor. 2 vols. Per vol.....	5.00
Elective Affinities.....	1.25
Wilhelm Meister. Translated by Thomas Carlyle. Portraits of Goethe. 2 vols.....	3.50
Herman and Dorothea. Translated by Ellen Frothingham.....	1.00
GREG'S (W. R.) Enigmas of Life.....	2.00
Literary and Social Judgments.....	2.00
Creed of Christendom.....	7.00
GROTE'S LIFE. Compiled from Family Documents, Private Memoranda, and Original Letters to and from Various Friends. By Mrs. Grote. Second Edition. With Portrait.....	5.00
HAMERTON (PHILIP G.) A Painter's Camp. Book I. In England. Book II. In Scotland. Book III. In France.....	1.50
Thoughts about Art.....	2.00
The Unknown River.....	5.00
The Intellectual Life.....	2.00
Chapters on Animals.....	4.00
HAMILTON (GAIL). Child World. Part Second.....	1.00
Child World. Part First.....	1.50
HAMILTON'S Lectures.....	2.50
1. Metaphysical Lectures.....	2.50
2. Logical Lectures.....	2.50
HAWTHORNE'S (NATHANIEL) Works. New Illustrated Library Edition. Nine vols. Per vol.....	2.00
Twice-Told Tales.....	2.00
Mosses from an Old Manse.....	2.00
The Scarlet Letter, and The Blithedale Romance.....	2.00
The House of the Seven Gables, and The Snow Image.....	2.00
The English Note-Books.....	2.00
The American Note-Books.....	2.00
The French and Italian Note-Books.....	2.00
Our Old Home, and Septimus Felson.....	2.00
HIGGINSON'S (T. W.) Out-Door Papers.....	1.50
Malbone. An Oldport Romance.....	1.50
Army Life in a Black Regiment.....	1.50
Atlantic Essays.....	2.00
Oldport Days.....	2.50
HOWELL'S (WILLIAM D.) Their Wedding Journey.....	2.00
Suburban Sketches.....	2.00
Venetian Life.....	2.00
Italian Journeys.....	2.00
A Chance Acquaintance.....	1.50
HUGO'S (V.) New Novel, "Ninety-Three".....	1.75
HUMBOLDT (ALEXANDER VON). Life of. Translated from the German. 2 vols., with three portraits.....	10.50
HUME'S (DAVID) Essays and Life.....	1.50
HUNT'S (MRS. HELEN). Verses.....	1.25
Bits of Travel.....	1.50
HUXLEY'S Man's Place in Nature.....	1.25
On the Origin of Species.....	1.00
More Criticisms on Darwin and Administrative Nihilism.....	.50
A Manual of the Anatomy of Vertebrate Animals.....	2.50
Lay Sermons, Addresses, and Reviews.....	1.75
INGELOW'S (JEAN) Poems.....	2.25
The Monitions of the Unseen.....	1.50
Songs of Seven.....	2.50
INGELOW'S (JEAN) Prose. Of the Skelton.....	1.75
Studies for Stories.....	1.25
Stories told to a Child. First and Second Series.....	1.25
A Sister's Bye-Hours.....	1.25
Mopea the Fairy; A Story.....	1.25
INGEBOLL'S (ROBT. G.) The Gods and Other Lectures.....	2.00
INTERNATIONAL SCIENTIFIC SERIES. No. I. Forms of Water, in Clouds, Rain, Rivers, Ice, and Glaciers. By John Tyndall.....	1.50
II. Physics and Politics; or, Thoughts on the Application of the Principles of "Natural Selection," and "Inheritance" to Political Society. By Walter Bagehot.....	1.50

III. Foods. By Dr. Edward Smith.....	1.75
IV. Mind and Body. The Theories of their Relations. By Alex. Bain.....	1.50
V. The Study of Sociology. By Herbert Spencer, Esq.....	1.50
VI. The New Chemistry. By Josiah P. Cooke, Jr.....	2.00
VII. The Conservation of Energy. By Balfour Stewart, with an Appendix, treating of the Vital and Mental Applications of the Doctrine.....	1.50
VIII. Animal Locomotion; or, Walking, Swimming, and Flying, with a Dissertation on Aëronautics. By J. Bell Pettigrew.....	1.75
IX. Responsibility in Mental Disease. By Henry Maudsley, M.D.....	1.50
JERROLD (DOUGLAS). Fireside Saints, Mr. Claude's Breakfast Talk, and other Papers.....	1.50
JOHNSON'S (SAMUEL) Oriental Religions, and their Relation to Universal Religion. India.....	5.00
JOSEPHUS. The whole Works of Flavius Josephus, the Jewish Historian.....	2.50
JOWETT. The Dialogues of Plato. Translated into English, with Analysis and Introductions by B. Jowett, M.A., Master of Balliol College, Oxford, and Regius Professor of Greek. Four vols.....	12.00
KERR (ORPHEUS C.). Versatilities, Poems, Patriotic, Sentimental and Humorous.....	2.00
LECKY (W. E. H.). History of the Rise and Influence of the Spirit of Rationalism in Europe. 2 vols.....	4.00
History of European Morals from Augustus to Charlemagne. 2 vols.....	5.00
LEGGE'S Confucius' Life and Teachings.....	4.00
Confucius and Chinese Classics.....	2.00
LESSING'S (G. E.) Nathan the Wise. Translated by Ellen Frothingham.....	1.50
LEWIS' Physiology of Common Life. 2 vols.....	3.00
Biographical History of Philosophy, from its Origin in Greece down to the Present Day. 2 vols.....	4.00
Problems of Life and Mind. The Foundations of a Creed.....	2.00
LEWIS (G. H.). The Story of Goethe's Life.....	1.50
LEWIN (REV. RAPHAEL, D.O.). What is Judaism? or, a Few Words to the Jews.....	1.00
LONGFELLOW'S (H. W.) Poems. Portrait.....	4.00
Prose Works. Portrait.....	4.00
LOWELL'S (J. R.) Poems. 2 vols.....	4.00
The Biglow Papers. First Series.....	1.50
The Biglow Papers. Second Series.....	1.50
Among my Books.....	2.00
My Study Windows.....	.75
LOWELL (MRS. A. C.) Poems for Children.....	.75
LUBBOCK (SIR JOHN). Origin of Civilization, and the Primitive Condition of Man. Pre-historic Times.....	2.00
LYELL'S Principles of Geology. 2 vols.....	8.00
MACDONALD (GEORGE). The Vicar's Daughter.....	1.50
MANN (HORACE). The Life of Horace Mann. By his Wife.....	3.00
Lectures and Annual Reports on Education. Annual Reports on Education, from 1839 to 1848.....	3.00
Thoughts Selected from the Writings of Horace Mann.....	1.25
MARTINEAU (JAMES). Essays, Philosophical and Theological. 3 vols. Per vol.....	2.50
MAURICE (REV. F. D.). The Ground and Object of Hope for Mankind.....	.75
MERIVALE'S (CHARLES) Conversion of the Roman Empire.....	1.50
Conversion of the Northern Nations.....	1.50
MILL (JOHN STUART). Dissertations and Discussions. 10 vols. each.....	2.25
The Examination of the Philosophy of Sir William Hamilton. 2 vols., each.....	2.25
The Positive Philosophy of Auguste Comte. Political Economy. New and revised edition.....	2.50
The Subjection of Women—Essay on Liberty—both in one vol.....	2.50
Representative Government.....	1.50
Autobiography.....	2.25
Memorial Volume. His Life and Works.....	1.0
Three Essays on Religion.....	2.50
MILLER (JOAQUIN). Songs of the Sierras.....	1.50
Songs of the Sun Lands.....	1.50
MIVART (ST. GEO.) On the Genesis of Species.....	1.75
MORLEY (PROF. JOHN). Voltaire.....	2.00
Rousseau, 2 vols.....	5.00
MOUTON (LOUISE CHANDLER.) Bed-Time Stories.....	1.50
MUELLER (MAX, M.A.). Lectures on the Science of Language. First Series.....	2.50
The Same. Second Series.....	2.50
Chips from a German Workshop. Vol. I. Essays on the Science of Religion. Vol. II. Essays on Mythology, Traditions, and Customs. Vol. III. Essays on Literature, Biography and Antiquities.....	2.50
Three vols. Price per volume.....	2.50
Lectures on the Science of Religion.....	2.50
NASSBY (PETROLEUM V.) Swingin' Round the Circle.....	1.50
Kickoes from Kentucky.....	1.50
NEWMAN (FRANCIS W.) A History of the Hebrew Monarchy.....	4.50
Catholic Union: Essays towards a Church of the Future, as the Organisation of Philanthropy.....	1.75
Theism, Doctrinal and Practical.....	4.25
PARKER (THEODORE). A Discourse of Matters Pertaining to Religion.....	1.50
Speeches, Addresses, and Occasional Sermons. 3 vols.....	4.50
Additional Speeches, Addresses, and Occasional Sermons. 2 vols.....	2.00
Historical and Miscellaneous Writings.....	1.50
Historic Americans.—Franklin, Washington, Adams and Jefferson. With an Introduction by Rev. O. B. Frothingham.....	1.50
The two Christmas Celebrations.—A.D. I. and MDCCLV. A Christmas Story.....	.80
PARSONS (THEOPHILUS.) The Infinite and the Finite.....	1.00
PHELPS'S (ELIZABETH STUART.) The Gates Ajar.....	1.50
The Trolly Book.....	1.50
Men, Women, and Ghosts.....	1.50
Healed in Bed.....	1.50
The Silent Partner.....	1.50
What to Wear?.....	1.00
PROCTER'S (ADELAIDE A.) Poems. Portrait. Cabinet Edition.....	2.00

PROCTOR (RICHARD A.) Other Worlds than Ours: the Plurality of Worlds studied under the Light of Recent Scientific Researches. With Colored Plates.....	1.50
Light Science for Leisure Hours. A Series of Familiar Essays on Scientific Subjects, Natural Phenomena.....	1.75
Essays on Astronomy; A Series of Papers on Planets and Meteors, the Sun, &c. With 10 Plates and 24 Woodcuts.....	4.50
The Moon, her Motions, Aspects, Scenery, and Physical Conditions, with Three Lunar Photographs and many Plates, Charts, etc.....	1.00
The Expanses of Heaven.....	1.00
RENAN'S Life of Jesus.....	1.75
ROSSETTI (CHRISTINA G.) A Shadow of Dante.....	1.50
SCHERLEN (H.) Spectrum Analysis, in its Application to Terrestrial Substances, and the Physical Constitution of the Heavenly Bodies.....	5.00
SCIENCE PRIMERS: 1. Introductory. By Prof. Huxley, F.R.S.....	.50
2. Chemistry. By Prof. Roscoe.....	.50
3. Physics. By Balfour Stewart. With Illustrations.....	.50
4. Physical Geography. By Archibald Geikie, LL.D., F.R.S., flexible cloth.....	.50
SCOTT'S Waverley Novels. 25 vols.....	51.25
SCOTT'S (THOMAS) The English Life of Jesus. Second Edition.....	1.25
SMILES'S (SAMUEL) Self-Help.....	1.50
SPENCER (HERBERT.) Education, Intellectual, Moral, and Physical.....	1.50
First Principles.....	2.50
Essays: Moral, Political, and Aesthetic.....	2.50
Illustrations of Universal Progress. A Selection of his best Papers.....	2.50
Social Statics; or, The Conditions Essential to Human Happiness Specified, and the First of them Developed.....	2.50
The Principles of Biology. 2 vols.....	2.50
The Principles of Psychology. 2 vols.....	2.50
Philosophy of Style.....	.50
Recent Discussions in Science, Philosophy, and Morals. New and enlarged edition.....	1.50
Sociology.....	1.50
Descriptive Sociology. Parts I., II., and III. each.....	4.00
Law, Correspondence and Ethics.....	2.50
Universal Progress.....	2.50
STOWE (HARRIET BEECHER.) Pink and White Tyranny.....	1.50
Uncle Tom's Cabin.....	.50
STRAUSS (D. F.) The Old Faith and the New.....	2.50
New Life of Jesus. Authorized translation. 2 vols.....	12.00
TAINES'S (H. A.) History of English Literature. 3 vols.....	7.50
The Classic-Room Thine. History of English Literature. Abridged and Edited by John Pilske.....	5.50
TENNYSON'S (ALFRED) Poems.....	1.75
THACKERAY'S (W. M.) Novels. Household Edition. Complete in 5 volumes. Per vol.....	1.25
Vanity Fair.....	1.25
The Newcomes.....	1.25
Adventures of Philip Pendennis.....	1.25
The Virginians.....	1.25
Esmond, and Lovell the Widower.....	1.25
Miscellaneous Writings. Household Edition. Uniform with the Novels. Complete in 5 vols. With new Portrait. Per vol.....	1.25
This edition includes all the matter in the latest English editions, with many additions, thus making it, with the novels, the cheapest and most complete Thackeray in the market. 1. Barry Lyndon, Hogarty Diamond, &c. 2. Paris, and Irish Sketch-Books, &c. 3. Sketches, Sketches, Denis Duval, &c. 4. Four Georges, Humorous, &c. 5. Catherine, Christmas Books, and Unprinted Pieces.....	1.25
THAXTER'S (MRS. OLLIE) Among the Isles of Shoals.....	1.50
THOREAU'S (H. D.) Walden; or, Life in the Woods.....	2.00
Excursions in Field and Forest. Portrait.....	2.00
The Maine Woods.....	2.00
Cape Cod.....	2.00
Letters.....	2.00
A Yankee in Canada.....	2.00
A Week on the Concord and Merrimack Rivers.....	2.00
TYLER (EDWARD B.) The Early History of Mankind.....	2.50
Primitive Culture. 2 vols.....	5.00
TYNDALL (JOHN). Faraday as a Discoverer.....	1.50
Fragments of Science for Unscientific People.....	2.50
Light and Electricity.....	1.25
Hours of Exercise in the Alps.....	2.00
Heat as a Mode of Motion.....	2.00
On Sound.....	2.00
Radiant Heat.....	2.00
Forms of Water.....	1.50
Lectures on Light.....	1.50
Proceedings at the Farewell Banquet to Prof. Tyndall.....	.50
Lessons in Electricity.....	1.50
Address before British Ass'n at Belfast.....	.50
TYTLEB (SARAH.) Old Masters and their Pictures.....	1.50
Modern Painters and their Paintings.....	1.50
VOYSEY (REV. CHARLES.) The Sling and the Stone. Vols. I. and V., each.....	2.00
Vols III, IV, and VI, each.....	2.75
WARNER'S (CHARLES D.) My Summer in a Garden.....	1.00
Sauterlings.....	1.00
Back-Log Studies.....	1.00
WEISS (JOHN.) American Religion.....	1.50
Life of Theodore Parker. 2 vols.....	5.00
WHIPPLE'S (E. P.) Literature and Life.....	1.50
Essays and Reviews.....	1.50
Character and Characteristic Men.....	1.50
The Literature of the Age of Elizabeth.....	1.50
Success and its Conditions.....	1.50
Washington and the Revolution.....	.50
WHITNEY'S (MRS. A. D. T.) A Summer in Leslie Goldthwaite's Life.....	1.50
We Girls: A Home Story.....	1.50
Real Folks.....	1.50
The Other Girls.....	2.00
Pantries. A volume of Poems.....	1.50
WHITTIER'S (JOHN G.) Poems. 2 vols.....	4.00
Child Life.....	2.00

ADDRESS:

THE INDEX

331 Washington St., Boston.

Digitized by Google

$66 a week in your own town. Terms and $5 outfit free. Address H. HALLITT & Co., Portland, Maine.

$5 to $20 per day at home. Samples worth $5 free. Address STINSON & Co., Portland, Maine.

GOLD Any worker can make $12 a day at home. Costly outfit free. Address TRUE & Co., Augusta, Maine.

SENT FREE on application—BRIGGS & BROS. Flower and Vegetable Catalogue. Our large crops enable us to SELL SEEDS LOW. ROCHESTER, N.Y., or CHICAGO, ILLS.

CLARK & CO.,
231 Washington St., Boston, Mass.,

Attend to the collection of claims in all parts of the United States and Canada.

Send for scale of charges.

TO BOOK-BUYERS

Please examine the revised list of POPULAR BOOKS on the opposite side of this page. ANY OBTAINABLE BOOK NOT IN THIS LIST will be furnished to order. Address THE INDEX, 231 Washington St., Boston.

E. A. SAWTELLE,
PIANO-FORTE TUNER.

Fifteen years' experience. Satisfaction warranted. Organs skillfully tuned and regulated. Orders left at THE INDEX office, or at Oliver Ditson & Co.'s, 451 Washington St., Boston.

WEST NEWTON
English and Classical School.

The twenty-fifth school year of this Family and Day School for both sexes will begin WEDNESDAY, Sept. 19, 1877. For Circular and information apply to NATH'L T. ALLEN, West Newton, Mass.

THE INDEX AS AN ADVERTISING MEDIUM.

Testimony of one who has tried it.
FLORENCE, Iowa, Jan. 5, 1878.
... THE INDEX is the best advertising medium which I have tried.
E. C. WALKER.

PHOTOGRAPHS OF COL. INGERSOLL!

Down to hard times prices. Cards, 15 cents each; 2 for 25 cents; 5 for 50 cents. Cabinet size, 25 cents each; 2 for 40 cents. Send stamp for club list of Free Thought and Scientific papers.
E. C. WALKER,
Lock-Box B, Florence, Iowa.

BOUND VOLUMES OF THE INDEX for 1877.

Complete for the Past Year, are now ready for delivery at this Office. Sent by express at the purchaser's expense. Price $3.00, in advance. Address THE INDEX, 231 Washington Street, Boston.

THE INDEX IN ENGLAND.

THE INDEX will be forwarded free by post to any part of the United Kingdom on receipt of an annual subscription of Fifteen Shillings. For Half Year, Eight Shillings. Remittances should be made by International P.O. Order payable to Francis Ellingwood Abbot.

Address THE INDEX,
231 Washington Street, Boston, U.S.A.

THE BEST PORTRAIT OF THOMAS PAINE.

Engraved by the famous W. Sharpe from Romney's celebrated portrait—
Heliotype Copy

by James R. Osgood & Co., of Boston. This is a beautiful work of art, and by all odds the very best likeness of Thomas Paine to be found. It is 10x8 inches in size, and will be mailed post-paid on receipt of $1.00. Address THE INDEX, 231 Washington Street, Boston.

PROGRESSIVE EDUCATIONAL PAPERS.

Published by
HAILMANN & DOERFLINGER,
Milwaukee, Wis.

(German) "ERZIEHUNGS-BLÄTTER," monthly, per year, $2.12.

(English) "THE NEW EDUCATION," a monthly tract for parents and teachers, devoted to Kindergarten Culture and Educational Hygiene in Home and School. Per year, 50 cents.

(English) The "New Education" TRACTS. Nos. 1 and 2 ready. Six copies (of any one number, or assorted) sent to any address on receipt of a 3-cent stamp.

GIRLS'—5 nice perforated mottoes for fancy work 10 cts. J. W. RUSSELL, Newton, Mass.

MADAME FOY'S

CORSET SKIRT SUPPORTER

Increases in Popularity every year. And for HEALTH, COMFORT, and STYLE is acknowledged the BEST ARTICLE of the kind ever made. For sale by all leading jobbers and retailers. Beware of imitations and infringements.

MANUFACTURED SOLELY BY
FOY & HARMON,
New Haven, Conn.

NEW SUBSCRIBERS WANTED. PREMIUMS

For NEW SUBSCRIBERS—$3.20 to be remitted in advance with each name sent in.

For One New Subscriber.
Either a complete set of Index Tracts; a bound copy of the Report of the "Centennial Congress of Liberals" at Philadelphia, July 4, 1876; any three Reports of the "Annual Meetings of the Free Religious Association" since 1871; Huxley's Origin of Species; John W. Chadwick's Book of Poems; or any obtainable book not costing over $1.

For Two New Subscribers.
Either a set of photographs of "leading INDEX writers"; a copy of Ingersoll's Lectures; a copy of Freedom and Fellowship in Religion—a collection of Essays and Addresses by O. B. Frothingham, W. J. Potter, John Weiss, T. W. Higginson, F. E. Abbot, and others; Darwin's Origin of Species; Draper's Conflict between Religion and Science; Huxley's Lay Sermons; a bound copy of THE INDEX for 1871 or 1872; Renan's Life of Jesus; or any obtainable book not costing over $2.

For Three New Subscribers.
Either Longfellow's or Bryant's complete Poetical Works (illustrated); Darwin's Descent of Man; Tyndall's Fragments of Science; Lewes' Physical Basis of Mind; Frothingham's Transcendentalism in New England; Shakespeare's Complete Works; Frothingham's Life of Theodore Parker; or any obtainable book not costing over $3.

For Five New Subscribers.
Either Pierce's Memoirs and Letters of Charles Sumner; Emerson's Prose Works; Buckle's History of Civilization; Spencer's Psychology; Humboldt's Cosmos; Fluke's Cosmic Philosophy; Johnson's Oriental Religions. Vol. 1, on "India"; Vol. 11, on "China"; or any other obtainable book not costing over $5.

For Ten New Subscribers.
Either Webster's or Worcester's Dictionary (unabridged); Longfellow's Complete Works (800 illustrations, full gilt); either Dickens' or Waverley Novels, complete in six volumes, and illustrated; Strauss' New Life of Jesus; or any other book or books not costing over $12.

Address THE INDEX, 231 Washington Street, Boston.

FROTHINGHAM'S WORKS.

THE RELIGION OF HUMANITY. An Essay. Third Edition—Revised. Price $1.50.

"Nobody can peruse this book without respect for the learning, mental honesty and skill in the statement of his convictions, possessed by the author, and for the essential integrity and philanthropic tendency of his spirit."—Springfield Republican.

"A profoundly sincere book, the work of one who has read largely, studied thoroughly, reflected patiently. It is a model of scholarly culture and of finished and vigorous style."—Boston Globe.

THE CHILD'S BOOK OF RELIGION. For Sunday-schools and Homes. Price $1.00.

THE SAFEST CREED, AND OTHER DISCOURSES. 12mo, Cloth, $1.50.

Not "food for babes," but full of suggestion for earnest and thoughtful men.

STORIES FROM THE LIPS OF THE TEACHER. With Frontispiece. Cloth, $1.00.

"The Parables are so re-told as to absorb the attention of the reader, and to fasten upon the mind what the writer believes to have been the impression the Saviour meant to convey. It is in style and thought a superior book, and will interest alike young and old."—Zion's Herald (Methodist).

STORIES OF THE PATRIARCHS. With Frontispiece. Cloth, $1.00.

"A work of culture and taste; it will be welcome to all ages, and gives the sublimest lessons of manhood in the simple language of a child."—Springfield Republican.

BELIEFS OF THE UNBELIEVERS. A Lecture. 12mo, Cloth, $1.00.

TRANSCENDENTALISM IN NEW ENGLAND. A History. With sketches and studies of Emerson, Alcott, Parker, Margaret Fuller, the Brook-Farm Community, etc. 8vo, Cloth extra, with steel portrait of the author, $2.50.

THE LIFE OF THEODORE PARKER. 8vo. With Portrait, $3.00.

The New York Tribune closes a four and a half column review of this book by saying: "It holds up a remarkable specimen of robust manliness whose form and lineaments can be studied with equal advantage by friend and foe."

THE ORACLE OF THE CHRIST. A Study in Primitive Christianity, illustrating the prime importance of the Messianic Idea in the New Testament, as the key to the development of Christianity from Judaism. Octavo, Cloth, $1.75.

Mailed, post-paid, on receipt of price, by THE INDEX 231 Washington St., Boston.

MISS DEVEREUX' BOARDING AND DAY SCHOOL FOR YOUNG LADIES AND CHILDREN, at Irvington-on-Hudson, will re-open on Monday, Sept. 17, 1877. Miss Devereux refers, among others, to the following gentlemen: Rev. Orville Dewey, Sheffield, Mass.; Mr. A. C. Richards, Irvington, N.Y.; Mr. H. R. Bishop, Irvington, N.Y.; Mr. John E. Williams, Pres. Met. Nat. Bank, N.Y.; Mr. Wm. H. Orton, Pres. W. U. Telegraph Co., N.Y.; Mr. Moses H. Grinnell, N.Y.

POSITIVISM! AN EPITOME OF THE Positive Philosophy and Religion.

Published by the Society of Humanity in the city of New York, contains the clearest statement of the subject ever made; also, Harriet Martineau's masterly defence of her religious convictions; and the Positive Classification of the Sciences, by T. B. Wakeman, etc., etc.

Send for it (enclosing 25 cents in postage stamps) to

HUGH BYRON BROWN,
President of the Society,
No. 141 8th St., N.Y. City.

LECTURES AND SERMONS, BY JOHN W. CHADWICK.

THIRD SERIES.

1. The Simplicity of True Religion.
2. The Rising Faith.
3. Fate and Freedom.
4. The Child Jesus.
5. The Angel Song.

The following numbers of the first and second series can also be supplied: Best Use of Sunday; Higher Reverence. Self-Respect, God on Our Side, Economy and Waste, Piety of Modern Science, Immortal Life, Moral Aspects of Belief in Immortality, Idealizing the Real, The Coming Man, A Rational Church.

Sent to any address, postage paid, at 5 cents per copy, by

JAMES MILLER,
779 Broadway, New York.

A NOTABLE TREATISE. WOMAN SUFFRAGE.

THE COUNTERFEIT AND THE TRUE: Reasons for Opposing Both.

BY REAR-ADMIRAL MAXSE,

Of the British Royal Navy.

This is a little book of 74 pages, with neat paper covers, published in London, and presenting the reasons why a cultivated English gentleman is opposed to Woman Suffrage. It ought to be read and pondered by all who are interested in that question, on either side. Price, 25 cents. For sale at the office of THE INDEX, 231 Washington St., Boston.

GOOD PHOTOGRAPHS OF

O. B. FROTHINGHAM,

T. W. HIGGINSON,

W. J. POTTER,

W. H. SPENCER,

F. W. NEWMAN,

CHAS. VOYSEY,

A. W. STEVENS,

R. H. RANNEY,

F. E. ABBOT,

Are now for sale at the office of THE INDEX, and will be mailed postpaid to any address on receipt of price. Single Photographs, 25 cents each; complete Set of Nine Photographs, $1.50.

Address, THE INDEX,
No. 231 Washington St., Boston, Mass.

FREE RELIGIOUS ASSOCIATION.

Send to Office at 231 Washington St., Boston, Mass., for

TRACTS.

I. TAXATION OF CHURCH PROPERTY, by James Parton. 5 cts.; ten, 30 cts.; one hundred, $1.50.

II. THE BIBLE AND SCIENCE, by John Weiss. 5 cts.

III. THE SYMPATHY OF RELIGIONS, by T. W. Higginson. Enlarged edition. 5 cts.

IV. TRANSCENDENTALISM, by Theodore Parker. Never before published. 5 cts.

V. THE PUBLIC SCHOOL QUESTION, as understood by a Catholic American citizen (Bishop McQuaid) and by a Liberal American citizen (F. E. Abbot). (Two Horticultural Hall Lectures, Feb. 18 and 20, 1876.) 5 cts.

VI. HOW SHALL WE KEEP SUNDAY? An Answer in Four Parts: 1. Sunday in the Bible. 2. Sunday in Church History. 3. Sunday in the Massachusetts Laws. 4. The Workingman's Sunday. By Charles K. Whipple, Minot J. Savage, Charles E. Pratt, and Wm. C. Gannett. 10 cts. each; ten for 50 cts.; one hundred, $3.

REASON AND REVELATION, by W. J. Potter. 5 cts. (Ten for 30 cts.; one hundred, $1.50.)

PROCEEDINGS OF THE F. R. A. ANNUAL MEETINGS FOR 1873, '74, '75, '76, and '77. Five cents each.

FREEDOM AND FELLOWSHIP IN RELIGION, a volume of essays and addresses representing the F. R. A. platform. $1.50.

SEND ONE DOLLAR

For a handsome Certificate of Membership as an

ANNUAL MEMBER of the NATIONAL LIBERAL LEAGUE. For TWENTY-FIVE DOLLARS, a still larger Certificate of Membership as a

LIFE MEMBER,

Will be sent to any person; and individuals cannot render more efficient assistance to the National Liberal League than by making themselves Annual or Life Members of it.

The following extracts from the Constitution of the National Liberal League explain the privileges of membership:

ARTICLE IV.—Any person who shall pay one dollar into the treasury shall be entitled to a certificate, signed by the President and Secretary, as an annual member of the National Liberal League. Any person who shall pay twenty-five dollars or more into the treasury shall be entitled to a similar certificate as a life-member. All the persons present as members at the Centennial Congress of Liberals, at which this Constitution was adopted, are hereby declared permanent or charter-members of the National Liberal League.

ARTICLE V.—... All charter-members and life-members of the National Liberal League, and all duly accredited delegates from local auxiliary Liberal Leagues organized in accordance with the provisions of this Constitution, shall be entitled to seats and votes in the Annual Congress. Annual members of the National Liberal League shall be entitled to seats, but not to votes, in the Annual Congress.

Address NATIONAL LIBERAL LEAGUE,
231 Washington Street, Boston.

ORGANIZE! CHARTERS

For Local Auxiliary Liberal Leagues, conferring the privilege of representation by five delegates in the Annual Congress of the National Liberal League, will be promptly sent on application, according to the following provisions of Constitution of the same:

LOCAL AUXILIARY LIBERAL LEAGUES.

ARTICLE XIII.—The Board of Directors shall have authority, as often as they receive a written application signed by ten or more persons and accompanied by ten dollars, to issue a charter for the formation of a local auxiliary Liberal League.

ARTICLE XV.—Local auxiliary Liberal Leagues organized under charters issued by the Board of Directors shall be absolutely independent in the administration of their own local affairs. The effect of their charters shall be simply to unite them in cordial fellowship and efficient co-operation of the freest kind with the National Liberal League and with other local Leagues. All votes of the Annual Congress, and all communications of the Board of Directors, shall possess no more authority or influence over them than lies in the intrinsic wisdom of the words themselves.

ARTICLE XVI.—Every local auxiliary Liberal League organized in accordance with the provisions of this Constitution shall be entitled to send its President and Secretary and three other members as delegates to the Annual Congress.

These Charters are beautifully printed on the best of paper. Adorned with the handsome Seal of the National Liberal League, they will, if tastefully framed, make a fine ornament for any hall.

Address NATIONAL LIBERAL LEAGUE
231 Washington Street, Boston.

CIRCULATE IT EVERYWHERE!

The new Liberal League Tract of 24 pages, entitled,

"PATRIOTIC ADDRESS,"

contains:

1. PATRIOTIC ADDRESS of the National Liberal League to the people of the United States.

2. CHIEF RESOLUTIONS of the League.

3. PROTEST of the League against shutting the International Exhibition on Sundays.

4. CONSTITUTION and List of Officers.

5. EXTRACTS from Approving Letters by Distinguished Citizens.

This is the Liberal's best CAMPAIGN DOCUMENT in the great impending contest over amending the Constitution of the United States with reference to the school question. It should be in the hands of EVERY VOTER, and has been published expressly for gratuitous distribution by earnest friends of State Secularization.

Local Liberal Leagues

Cannot do better than to order this Tract by the quantity, as an excellent auxiliary in their local agitation.

INDIVIDUAL LIBERALS

Cannot do better than to use them privately, as opportunity offers.

Promptly mailed, at the bare cost of paper, press-work, and postage, on the following terms:

TEN COPIES, 15
TWENTY-FIVE COPIES, 40
FIFTY " 75
ONE HUNDRED " 1.50
TWO HUNDRED " 2.50
THREE HUNDRED " 3.50
FIVE HUNDRED " 6.00
ONE THOUSAND " 12.00

N. B.—Packages of over 100 copies will be sent by express at the expense of the purchaser, without any charge for postage.

Address NATIONAL LIBERAL LEAGUE
231 Washington Street, Boston.

The Index.

Three Dollars a Year.

LIBERTY AND LIGHT.

Single Copies Seven Cents.

VOLUME 9.

BOSTON, MASS., THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 21, 1878.

WHOLE NO. 426.

NATIONAL LIBERAL LEAGUE.

PLATFORM

For the Presidential Election of 1880,

ADOPTED AT ROCHESTER, N.Y., OCT. 26, 1877.

1. TOTAL SEPARATION OF CHURCH AND STATE, to be guaranteed by amendment of the United States Constitution: including the equitable taxation of church property, secularization of the public schools, abrogation of Sabbatarian laws, abolition of chaplaincies, prohibition of public appropriations for religious purposes, and all other measures necessary to the same general end.

2. NATIONAL PROTECTION FOR NATIONAL CITIZENS, in their equal civil, political, and religious rights: to be guaranteed by amendment of the United States Constitution, and afforded through the United States courts.

3. UNIVERSAL EDUCATION THE BASIS OF UNIVERSAL SUFFRAGE IN THIS SECULAR REPUBLIC: to be guaranteed by amendment of the United States Constitution, requiring every State to maintain a thoroughly secularized public school system, and to permit no child within its limits to grow up without a good elementary education.

N. B.—The nomination of candidates upon the above platform was postponed to a future Congress of the National Liberal League.

THE DEMANDS OF LIBERALISM.

1. We demand that churches and other ecclesiastical property shall no longer be exempt from just taxation.

2. We demand that the employment of chaplains in Congress, in State Legislatures, in the navy and militia, and in prisons, asylums, and all other institutions supported by public money, shall be discontinued.

3. We demand that all public appropriations for educational and charitable institutions of a sectarian character shall cease.

4. We demand that all religious services now sustained by the government shall be abolished; and especially that the use of the Bible in the public schools, whether ostensibly as a text-book or avowedly as a book of religious worship, shall be prohibited.

5. We demand that the appointment, by the President of the United States or by the Governors of the various States, of all religious festivals and fairs shall wholly cease.

6. We demand that the judicial oath in the courts and in all other departments of the government shall be abolished, and that simple affirmation under the pains and penalties of perjury shall be established in its stead.

7. We demand that all laws directly or indirectly enforcing the observance of Sunday as the Sabbath shall be repealed.

8. We demand that all laws looking to the enforcement of "Christian" morality shall be abrogated, and that all laws shall be conformed to the requirements of natural morality, equal rights, and impartial liberty.

9. We demand that not only in the Constitutions of the United States and of the several States, but also in the practical administration of the same, no privilege or advantage shall be conceded to Christianity or any other special religion; that our entire political system shall be founded and administered on a purely secular basis; and that whatever changes shall prove necessary to this end shall be consistently, unflinchingly, and promptly made.

The above is the platform of THE INDEX, so far as the editor is individually concerned. But no other person, and no organization, can be justly or truthfully held responsible for it without his or its explicit approval.

FRANCIS E. ABBOT.

RESOLUTION

ADOPTED BY THE NATIONAL LIBERAL LEAGUE, AT PHILADELPHIA, JULY 3, 1876.

Resolved, That we accept the offer of the Boston INDEX to be our official organ of communication with the public, for the publication of announcements, acknowledgments, and other official papers of the Board of Directors; but that we assume no responsibility for anything else published in its columns and claim no control or influence in its general editorial management.

GLIMPSSES:

THE DIRECTORS of the National Liberal League return their cordial thanks to all the liberal journals which have published their "Call to Organize."

COL. INGERSOLL has stirred up so much of a breeze about "Hell" that it threatens to put out the fires. In fact, his "revival" is about as popular as Moody and Sankey's—and considerably more useful.

THE ALBANY LIBERAL ASSOCIATION, which has about sixty members and is in a flourishing condition, has voted to become a Local Auxiliary Liberal League. President, Thomas J. Hennessey; Secretary, Thomas Dugan. A charter has already been forwarded to the Secretary. This action of the Association is encouraging, and will, we hope, stimulate other similar organizations to join in the national movement.

IN TRENT, Michigan, a "Free Religious Society" has been recently organized. A majority of them are Spiritualists, numbering about thirty; and a correspondent (himself not a Spiritualist) speaks warmly of their "efficient services in the cause of Free Religion." How good it would be, if a generous rivalry should spring up among the various schools of liberal thinkers as to which of them should render the most aid to the common cause!

A CORRESPONDENT in Iowa, whose name we are not permitted to use, has just written as follows, showing that there are Christians who are just enough to approve the principles of the Liberal League: "I like [THE INDEX], not for its religious, but for its political principles. I would dearly like to see them succeed. I suppose I ought to speak this softly, as I am a Congregationalist minister." We fervently wish there were more such Christians as that!

NOTHING CAN be learned by us respecting the prospects of the Edmunds Amendment of the Constitution in the Senate. Probably it will be taken up suddenly for action, and be as suddenly disposed of; for its advocates do not want it discussed. But discussion alone can reveal to the people the measureless mischief which, if adopted, that Amendment would accomplish. Where is the popular indignation which has been so confidently prophesied as certain to blaze forth at a real attempt to pass the Christian Amendment? Here is the Christian Amendment in all its essential features, and scarcely a voice is raised against it. And yet complacency still sings its little tune of "no danger!"

COLONEL INGERSOLL seems to be in a fair way to become a rival of Edward Kimball, the "church debt-raiser"! According to the Albany Express, he has been engaged by the pastor and trustees of a Baptist church in Binghamton, which is heavily in debt, to lecture in that town under their auspices, in order to raise money to pay off the debt. This is a more honest ambition than that of escaping just taxation; and if Colonel Ingersoll can only persuade this Baptist church to include among its just debts the taxes they have so long shirked, we shall regard him as a genuine missionary to the morally benighted Christians. The town of Binghamton ought to pass a vote of thanks to THE INDEX for this suggestion, if it thereby receives the taxes.

MR. T. C. LELAND sent not long since a decidedly pungent letter to the New York Tribune, in which occurred the following passage: "There is a little cloud now rising, not big enough for much of a shower as yet, and serving at present only as a shining mark for liberals to point their shafts of ridicule at. The National Liberal League has been organized to form a new political party and cast votes; and it needs only a few more acts of tyranny on the part of the Comstock crowd to swell that cloud into a storm altogether beyond the calculations of 'Old Probabilities'; and that will flash the conviction into what passes for the minds of the administration of this government that they had better adhere to the principles of the 'daddies,' whatever becomes of the dollars."

ACHMET VEFIK PASHA, the new prime minister of Turkey, according to a letter in the Independent by Rev. George Washburn, D.D., President of Robert College, Constantinople, has given a definition of a "good Mussulman" which is eminently worth noticing. He says: "Whoever believes that there is one God, to whom all men are responsible for their actions, that man is a good Mussulman." On this definition Dr. Washburn remarks: "He [the Pasha] declares himself a good Mussulman; but his definition of the faith of Islam is one that would include a good many who never thought of calling themselves Mussulmans." Of course! Everybody will see the absurdity of a definition that does not define. But this same absurdity is committed by those Liberal Christians who drop Christ out of their definition, just as Achmet drops Mohammed out of his. This careful suppression of the personal leadership which makes the heart of these two religions is exceedingly significant, as indicating an internal decay in both of them, and prophesying a final dying-out of both in the universality of Free Religion. We recommend to all friends of the latter to make a special note of these remarkable words of Achmet Vefik Pasha.

WE AGREE with Mr. Tomlinson, whose able lecture we print this week, that the "Southern Question" is not yet settled, and never will be settled except on the basis of "justice and freedom." We agree with him also when he says: "The country decided to give the Southern colored man the right to vote, and pledged itself to protect him in the exercise of that right"; and when he says: "I submit that the nation which wantonly repudiates its obligation to protect eight hundred thousand men in their right to vote freely, and calls it justice, cannot be expected to be very scrupulous as to the repudiation of its pecuniary obligations"; and when he says: "So far as the action of the government is concerned, there is nothing that we can do except to refuse to believe or say that that is just and final which we know to be neither just nor final, and to do all in our power [the italics are ours] to avert as much of the evil resulting from the new Southern policy as may be." But the practical question is now no longer of "the political rights of a race"; it is no longer possible for the nation to protect the negroes as a class; that is not "in our power." The question to-day is as to the RIGHTS OF THE CITIZEN AS SUCH, no matter whether those rights are political, civil, or religious; the question is whether the nation itself, as distinct from State or municipal governments, is under any obligation to protect EQUAL CITIZEN-RIGHTS. Say yes to that question, and you plant yourself on the second plank of the Rochester platform; say no to it, and you "abandon the negro." When we heard a strong advocate of the nation's duty to protect the freedmen recently declare himself opposed to that second plank of the Rochester platform, and yet at the same time profess not to "abandon the negro," it seemed to us the very acme of self-stultification: he "abandoned the negro" in that very declaration. Whoever means business when he talks of the "nation's duty to protect the negro" will be driven, whether he wishes it or not, to accept that second plank; for there is no "protection" to anybody in merely mourning over irreversible facts. It is time to take a forward step, and "protect the negro" by claiming from the nation itself protection for the fundamental rights of citizenship, regardless of race, color, condition, sex, or creed. Without that principle recognized in the Constitution and applied impartially to North, South, East, and West, nothing can be done for the disfranchised colored man; his fate is beyond the nation's control as things now are, and his only hope is in that great, just, and beneficent principle.

NATIONAL LIBERAL LEAGUE. OFFICERS.

President.
FRANCIS E. ABBOT	Boston, Mass.
Vice-Presidents.
HON. E. P. HURLBUT	Albany, N. Y.
HON. SAMUEL E. SEWALL	Boston, Mass.
HON. NATHANIEL HOLMES	St. Louis, Mo.
HON. HENRY BOOTH	Chicago, Ill.
HON. GEORGE W. JULIAN	Irrington, Ind.
HON. ELIZUR WRIGHT	Boston, Mass.
MR. O. W. FROTHINGHAM	New York, N. Y.
MR. W. M. J. POTTER	New Bedford, Mass.
MR. R. F. HALLLOWELL	Boston, Mass.
MR. JAMES PARTON	Newburyport, Mass.
MR. F. SCHUENEMANN-POTT	San Francisco, Cal.
HON. ABRAHAM PAYNE	Providence, R. I.
REV. M. J. NAVAGE	Boston, Mass.
HABIB B. FELSETHAL	Chicago, Ill.
REV. W. H. SPENCER	Sparta, Wis.
MR. SAMUEL L. HILL	Florence, Mass.
MR. E. W. MEDDAUGH	Detroit, Mich.
MR. KARL HEINER	Editor of "Der Pioneer," Boston.
MR. HORACE SEAYE	Editor of the "Investigator," Boston.
MR. ISAAC WISE	Editor of "American Israelite," Cincinnati.
MR. D. M. BENNETT	Editor of the "Truth Seeker," New York.
MR. MORITZ ELLINGER	Editor of the "Jewish Times," New York.
MR. B. F. UNDERWOOD	Thorndike, Mass.
REV. ROBERT COLLYER	Chicago, Ill.
COL. ROBERT G. INGERSOLL	Peoria, Ill.
DR. T. L. BROWN	Binghamton, N. Y.
HON. E. S. MCCORMICK	Franklin, Pa.
MR. ELIZABETH THOMPSON	Mount Lebanon, N. Y.
MRS. AMY POST	Roseton, N. Y.
MRS. ELIZABETH STANTON	Tenney, N. J.
MRS. SALLIE HOLLEY	Louisburgh, Va.
Secretary.
W. H. HAMLEN	231 Washington Street, Boston, Mass.
Assistant Secretary.
MISS JANE P. TITCOMB	141 Chandler St., Boston.
Treasurer.
J. A. J. WILCOX	5 Pemberton Square, Boston.
Board of Directors.
F. E. ABBOT	W. H. HAMLEN.
J. A. J. WILCOX	H. L. GREEN.
D. G. CRANDON
Executive Committees.
Alabama	J. H. HALLEY, Selma.
Arkansas	JOHN A. HARRIS, Monticello.
California	J. L. HATCH, San Francisco.
Colorado	DAVID T. BEARS, Grenada.
Connecticut	GEORGE W. BALDWIN, Bridgeport.
Delaware	JOSEPH D. G. HLT, Greenville.
Florida	T. D. GIDDINGS, Enterprise.
Georgia	DR. A. A. BELL, Chicago.
Illinois	L. G. UNDERWOOD, Indianapolis.
Indiana	J. O. MICHEERS, Adel.
Iowa	JOHN FARNSWORTH, Fort Scott.
Kansas	S. B. OLARK, Wilsonville.
Kentucky	EMERSON BENTLEY, New Orleans.
Louisiana	DR. W. H. BROWN, Bangor.
Maine	J. S. ROSS, New Market.
Maryland	W. H. SATTARD, Boston.
Massachusetts	KARL SCHUMAKER, Detroit.
Michigan	J. B. BASSETT, Minneapolis.
Minnesota	E. PETERSON, St. Louis.
Missouri	L. W. BILLINGSLEY, Lincoln.
Montana	V. G. BARRETT, White Rock.
Nebraska	WILLIAM LITTLE, Manchester.
New Hampshire	H. L. GREEN (chairman), Salamanca.
New York	J. W. THORNE, Warren.
North Carolina	D. STARK, Cleveland.
Ohio	SAMUEL DOLT, Humboldt Basin.
Oregon	G. W. BALDWIN, Leavenworth.
Pennsylvania	GEORGE LEWIS, Providence.
Rhode Island	P. W. FULLER, Columbia.
South Carolina	DR. A. DUNBAR, Greenville.
Tennessee	E. L. HAUGHTON, North Benning.
Texas	L. BRAUDING, Norfolk.
Vermont	A. M. DEWE, Waton.
Virginia	ROBERT O. SPENCER, Milwaukee.
West Virginia	D. P. WILCOX, Yonkers.
Wisconsin	W. H. DOOLITTLE, Washington.
Dakota	W. FERGUSON, Provo City.
Idaho	NORMAN S. PORTER.
Wyoming
Finance Committee.
D. G. CRANDON, Chairman	Chelsea, Mass.
MRS. SARAH E. OTIS	17 Warren Avenue, Boston.
HARLAN P. HYDE	231 Washington St., Boston.

LOCAL AUXILIARY LIBERAL LEAGUES

To which Charters have been issued by the National Liberal League.
LINCOLN, NEBRASKA.—President, D. A. Cline; Secretary, Dr. A. S. von Mansfeld.
Issued to L. W. Billingsley, D. A. Cline, A. S. von Mansfeld, Julius Philsterer, Joseph Wittman, W. E. Copeland, Benj. F. Fisher, Sidney Lyons, L. Meyer, G. E. Church, and others.
JACKSONVILLE, ILLINOIS.—[Officers not reported.]
Issued to A. W. Cadman, Mrs. D. M. Cadman, S. W. Sample, David Prince, E. A. Nance, C. H. Dunbrack, W. Hackman, Jennie W. Meek, Emma Meek, Hattie E. Hammond, and others.
PHILADELPHIA, PENNSYLVANIA.—President, Carrie B. Kilgore; Secretary, Joseph Bohrer.
Issued to the President and Secretary on behalf of the Philadelphia Liberal League.
MISHOCT, WISCONSIN.—President, Lauriston Damon; Secretary, Anton Braasch.
Issued to Anton Braasch, Fred. Claussen, J. Runge, Jr., Louis Zander, S. Damon, Ferd. Heyroth, Louis Heyroth, Fred. Zander, Fred. Halberg, Ernst Clusen, and Fred. Braasch.
CHILMARK, MASSACHUSETTS.—President, D. Goddard Crandon; Secretary, J. H. W. Toohy.
Issued to the President and Secretary on behalf of the Chelsea Liberal League.
STOCKTON, CALIFORNIA.—[Officers not reported.]
Issued to Chas. Haas, G. O. Hyatt, F. C. Lawrence, A. T. Hudson, Chas. Williams, W. F. Freeman, J. Grudiko, J. Harrison, T. O. Mallon, A. F. Lochead, and others.
DENVER, COLORADO.—President, Orson Brooks; Secretary, J. H. Cotton.
Issued to the President and Secretary on behalf of the Liberal League of Denver.
FAIR HALL, BOSTON.—President, John S. Verity; Secretary, Robert Cooper.
Issued to Horace Seaver, J. P. Mendum, Ellsbur Wright, R. F. Underwood, David Kirkwood, James Harris, G. H. Foster, H. P. Hyde, Robert Cooper, S. R. Urbino, John S. Verity.
PALMYRA, NEW YORK.—President, J. M. Jones; Secretary, C. C. Everson.
Issued to J. M. Jones, C. C. Everson, Henry M. North, A. R. Sherman, Joseph Fritts, L. E. Keeler, J. J. White, B. H. Sherman, Henry Gardner, Samuel Cosad, and others.
BOSTON, MASSACHUSETTS.—President, F. E. Abbot; Secretary, Miss J. P. Titcomb.
Issued to the President and Secretary on behalf of the First Liberal League of Boston, Mass.
NEW PHILADELPHIA, OHIO.—President, George Riker; Secretary, C. M. Rittenhouse.
Issued to C. M. Rittenhouse, George Riker, J. C.

Price, Daniel Korns, P. W. Himes, John Arn, Philip Gintz, A. H. Brown, Jacob Miller, L. A. Cornet.
TITUSVILLE, PENNSYLVANIA.—President, William Barnard; Secretary, C. M. Hayes.
Issued to the President and Secretary on behalf of the Titusville Liberal League.
HUBBARD, MICHIGAN.—President, Dr. Levi R. Peirson; Secretary, Dr. F. O. Baker.
Issued to Levi R. Peirson, A. D. Armstrong, James S. Bedel, Miles C. Beach, W. R. Norris, R. H. Armstrong, R. W. S. Johnson, E. M. Brown, G. L. Harcerson, Philip Sewall.
CATTARAUGUS COUNTY, NEW YORK.—President, H. L. Green; Corresponding Secretary, John Hammond.
Issued to the President and Secretary on behalf of the Cattaraugus County Liberal League.
NEW HAVEN, CONNECTICUT.—[Officers not yet reported.]
Issued to E. M. Sherman, W. W. Stow, F. A. Hermance, T. F. Hamilton, D. M. Hamilton, W. F. Hopson, E. R. Whiting, E. E. Seaman, A. C. Harrison, R. F. F. Sheard, and others.
ST. JOSEPH, MISSOURI.—President, P. V. Wise; Secretary, H. Brunsing.
Issued to the President and Secretary on behalf of the St. Joseph Liberal League.
NEW YORK, NEW YORK.—President, Hugh B. Brown; Secretary, A. L. Rawson.
Issued to T. B. Wakeman, Henry Evans, A. L. Rawson, Hugh B. Brown, E. Langerfeld, D. S. Plumb, O. E. Browning, Mrs. Ellis. Erving, Miss E. W. McAdams, Mrs. O. E. Langerfeld, on behalf of the Society of Humanity.
ROCHESTER, NEW YORK.—President, Mrs. Amy Post; Secretary, Willet E. Post.
Issued to Benj. Gregg, Mrs. Amy Post, Willet E. Post, Emily G. Beebe, Dr. Sherman, Mrs. Barker, Clement Austin, Wm. H. Gibbs, Dr. C. D. Dake, and others.
TOMPKINS COUNTY, NEW YORK.—President, Dr. John Winslow; Secretary, Myron E. Bishop.
Issued to C. W. Ames, Wm. A. Anthony, Geo. Arnold, M. E. Bishop, H. B. B. Dennis, Isaac Flagg, B. W. Franklin, C. Gardner, W. Hutchins, and others.
NEW YORK, NEW YORK.—President, A. L. Rawson; Secretary, Porter C. Biles.
Issued to the President and Secretary on behalf of the Manhattan Liberal Club.
CLEVELAND, OHIO.—President, E. D. Stark; Secretary, Mrs. M. B. Ambler.
Issued to E. D. Stark, Mrs. Louisa Southworth, B. White, W. A. Madison, S. E. Adams, Daniel R. Tilden, W. Galen Smith, Walter F. Johnson, Thomas Jones, and Mrs. M. B. Ambler.
MILWAUKEE, WISCONSIN.—President, Robert C. Spencer; Secretary, William A. Boyd.
Issued to the President and Secretary on behalf of the First Liberal League of Milwaukee.
JEFFERSON LIBERAL LEAGUE, ROCHESTER, NEW YORK.—President, Moses Hays; Secretaries, Fred. Hebard and J. B. Pike.
Issued to L. Garson, N. O. Tiffany, Adolph Roth, J. W. Roberts, R. F. Smith, Julius Rothbult, A. C. Allen, C. B. Strong, De L. Crittenden, and F. Bush.
MINNEAPOLIS, MINNESOTA.—President, S. C. Gale; Secretary, Frank J. Mead.
Issued to the President, Vice-President, Secretary, and Treasurer, on behalf of the First Liberal League of Minneapolis.
FLORENCE, IOWA.—President, Byron McQuinn; Secretary, E. C. Walker.
Issued to the President and Secretary on behalf of the Liberal League of Florence, Iowa.
WEST MERIDEN, CONNECTICUT.—President, N. F. Griswold; Secretary, Miss Emily J. Leonard.
Issued to W. W. Lee, Edwin Dayton, R. L. Roys, C. C. Munin, N. W. Pomeroy, N. F. Griswold, Mrs. F. L. mis, Marion L. Pomeroy, Joseph Frankowski, Mrs. J. Frankowski, and Emily J. Leonard.
MONTGOMERY COUNTY, OHIO.—President, A. McGill; Secretary, J. S. Barry.
Issued to the President and Secretary on behalf of the National Military Home Liberal League.
MANTOWOOD, WISCONSIN.—President, John A. Smith; Secretary, George B. Byron.
Issued to J. A. Smith, L. Mendlik, G. B. Byron, F. Heineman, F. Ransch, F. Kostomolatsky, F. Stirn, F. Kolinsky, J. Mendlik, L. Oberlander, and others.
ALBANY, NEW YORK.—President, Thomas J. Hennessey; Secretary, Thomas Dugan.
Issued to the President and Secretary on behalf of the Albany Liberal Association.

[N. B.—Many new local Liberal Leagues have been formed which have neglected to take out charters, and therefore are not entitled to representation.]

RELIGIOUS FREEDOM AMENDMENT:

PROPOSED AS A SUBSTITUTE FOR THE
FIRST AMENDMENT TO THE U. S. CONSTITUTION.

ARTICLE I.
SECTION 1.—Neither Congress nor any State shall make any law respecting an establishment of religion, or favoring any particular form of religion, or prohibiting the free exercise thereof; or permitting in any degree a union of Church and State, or granting any special privilege, immunity, or advantage to any sect or religious body, or to any number of sects or religious bodies; or taxing the people of any State, either directly or indirectly, for the support of any sect or religious body, or of any number of sects or religious bodies; or abridging the freedom of speech or of the press, or the right of the people peaceably to assemble and to petition the Government for a redress of grievances.

SECTION 2.—No religious test shall ever be required as a condition of suffrage, or as a qualification to any office or public trust, in any State. No person shall ever be deprived of any of his or her rights, privileges or capacities, or disqualified for the performance of any public or private duty, or rendered incompetent to give evidence in any court of law or equity, in consequence of any opinions he or she may hold on the subject of religion. No person shall ever be required by law to contribute directly or indirectly to the support of any religious society or body of which he or she is not a voluntary member.

SECTION 3.—Neither the United States, nor any State, Territory, municipality, or any civil division of any State or Territory, shall levy any tax, or make any gift, grant, or appropriation, for the support, or in aid, of any church, religious sect, or denomination, or any school, seminary, or institution of learning, in which the faith or doctrines of any religious order or sect shall be taught or inculcated, or in which religious rites shall be observed; or for the support, or in aid, of any religious charity or purpose of any sect, order, or denomination whatsoever.

SECTION 4.—Congress shall have power to enforce the various provisions of this Article by appropriate legislation.

ON THE FRONT OF Mr. Charles Reade's house, near London, has lately been painted in large letters the inscription, "Naboth's Vineyard." This is supposed to refer to a prevalent idea that some one covets the site, desiring to pull down the modest tenements and erect magnificent mansions.

[FOR THE INDEX.]

The Southern Question: Is it Settled?

A LECTURE DELIVERED IN HORTICULTURAL HALL, BOSTON, UNDER THE AUSPICES OF THE FREE RELIGIOUS ASSOCIATION, JANUARY 27, 1878.

BY REUBEN TOMLINSON, OF SOUTH CAROLINA.

In his report upon the condition of the South made to President Johnson in the autumn of 1865, Mr. Carl Schurz, after describing the disorders then existing in that part of the country, said:—

"In seeking remedies for such disorders, we ought to keep in view, above all, the nature of the problem which is to be solved. As to what is commonly termed 'reconstruction,' it is not only the political machinery of the States and their constitutional relations to the general government, but the whole organism of Southern society that must be reconstructed, or rather constructed anew, so as to bring it in harmony with the rest of American society."

This, as I understand it, is a concise statement of the Southern question as it stood in 1865; and we naturally ask ourselves, Has the problem been solved? Is "the whole organism of Southern society" to-day "in harmony with the rest of American society"? President Hayes says that it is so substantially; and that, for the complete settlement of the question, nothing is needed on the part of the North and of the government but an entire letting alone of the whole subject; unless, indeed, as we are left to infer, we may be able by appointments to office and by our general demeanor to convince the Southern white men that we heartily recognize their right to the exclusive political control of that portion of the country, and that we repent of the attempt by legislation and by governmental interference in pursuance of that legislation, to establish political equality among all classes.

In this opinion, the President is sustained by a large number of eminent men, journalists and others, who, until quite recently, advocated a policy directly the reverse of that which now obtains, and is known as the "Hayes Policy." Are these gentlemen, and the thousands that follow them, right in the new conclusions they have reached, and in the new policy adopted by them?

To answer this question satisfactorily let us consider briefly the course of reconstruction, from the cessation of active hostilities between the government and those in rebellion against it. The enforced abolition of slavery under the war power of the government did not change the opinion of the slaveholders, or of the thousands of non-slaveholders who had grown up under the influence of the system, as to its value as a social, financial, and political power. On the contrary, the very violence with which the claim of the master to his slave was overthrown, added to the spirit of domination which the long existence of the system had engendered in the minds of the ruling class, made it almost impossible for the latter to either think or act, justly and reasonably, with regard to their former bondmen. It was for the purpose of saving, aggrandizing, and perpetuating slavery that the South rebelled against the government; and the agony and humiliation of her defeat were increased a thousand-fold when she realized that the cherished institution for which she had ventured all was to be swept away forever. In the mind of the Southern white man, financial success, political power, social prestige, ancestral and State pride were all embodied in this system; and when it was gone, all was gone. Of course, after active hostilities had ceased among the great majority of Southern whites, the first and most important thought was of bread for their families, and of the best means of making good the losses of the war. But a very considerable, and, it must be admitted, a very influential class of Southern white men immediately set themselves to the work of devising plans by which the freedmen should be kept, as nearly as possible, in a state of slavery; and which, at the same time, should secure to the States lately in rebellion their former potential away over the destinies of the nation. To prove the substantial truth of this view, it is only necessary to recall the action of the Southern States under the provisional governments established by President Johnson. The "negro codes" of the different States, together with the systematic violence resorted to for the suppression of the spirit of independence that was gradually growing in the minds of the freedmen, convinced the most reluctant among those who were not actively in sympathy with the South, that the government could not safely surrender the extraordinary powers which, by the war and its attendant circumstances, it had been forced to assume and exercise.

In these days, when it is fashionable, and even an evidence of political virtue to denounce those who participated in the work of Southern reconstruction as "carpet-baggers" and "adventurers," it is worth while to remember what the temper of public opinion at the North at that time was upon the subject of interference with "local governments" at the South. That which is now considered prima facie evidence of a corrupt and degraded character was then lofty patriotism, to be cheered and encouraged by all good men and citizens. It is not to be denied that the bad conduct of many of the men engaged in the work of reconstruction is mainly the cause of this change of sentiment. On the other hand, it cannot be denied, I think, that the North, tired of waiting for the solution of the problem of reconstruction, has sought to justify its impatience at inevitable results, by credulously adopting as true, wholesale defamation of the character of the instruments it had selected for the work. This much on that subject in passing.

We all remember the impatience of the country to have the questions growing out of the war settled. Here and there among the true friends of the nation a voice was raised in deprecation of the haste with which the people were rushing to a conclusion in the matter of "reconstruction," and of warning that the population of the South, both black and white, was unfitted to be at once entrusted with the power of establishing State governments which would be no longer subject to the supervision and control of the general government. But the few who thus uttered warnings against hasty action were overwhelmed by the tide of feeling that demanded a speedy settlement of the questions growing out of the war. We wanted peace; we wanted the "erring sisters" to immediately resume their places in the family-circle, exercising all the rights, and demanding all the privileges belonging to States always loyal to the government. Accompanying this feeling were honest doubts and scruples as to constitutional power. "Once a State, always a State," and similar maxims perplexed and disturbed the constitutional conscience of the country. With curious inconsistency those of us who thought it a violation of constitutional principles to govern the rebellious States as Territories, did not hesitate to enforce the most radical changes in their State governments before allowing them to take their places again in the Union on terms of equality with the other States.

The distinguishing feature of the reconstruction measures as finally adopted, was the extension of the right of suffrage to the recently emancipated slaves. Of course other features of the plan were open to, and received a great deal of, criticism; but the central idea of the system was, in the language of that day, "negro suffrage." The negro was to vote in order to protect himself and assist in making the rebellious States thoroughly loyal members of the Union; and the plan contemplated the protection of his right to vote, until such time as the old ruling-class should both in theory and in practice cease to interfere with that right. The leading white men of the South and their allies at the North denounced that plan as not only unconstitutional, but as flagrantly oppressive and degrading to the Southern white population; and pointed out with great clearness that inasmuch as the native white element of the South, as a class, could and would take no part in establishing governments under the plan proposed, and as the great mass of the freedmen were incompetent for this task, the lead in the work would necessarily fall to the few native whites, who were ready to ally themselves with negroes and to the "Northern adventurers" (to use their phrase) who had been left in their midst by the fate of war; and that the governments thus built up, encountering inevitably the determined opposition of the property and intelligence of the South, would prove inefficient, corrupt, and subversive of the best interests of the country. I think it is not assuming too much to say that all thoughtful men at the North anticipated just such evils, if the white people should hold themselves aloof from the reconstruction movement. But the hope was cherished that reason would prevail, and that what seemed to us to be to the best interests of the South and of the country, would induce her leading men to take control of the movement, and by a prompt recognition of the colored man as a citizen, direct the exercise of his newly acquired rights generously and wisely. It were fruitless now to inquire why this was not done. It is enough to know, and to remember when we consider the present aspect of the question, that from that time to this, nowhere in the South has the old ruling white element practically recognized the right of the colored man to vote, in the same way and with the same freedom, as do men of its own class. In this attitude toward the colored man and the reconstruction policy, the South has received the consistent support of the Democratic party. In 1868, the year in which these new governments went into operation, the National Democratic Convention, which nominated Seymour and Blair, adopted a resolution introduced by the present Governor of South Carolina, declaring the reconstruction acts "unconstitutional, null, and void." And in pursuance of this declaration a campaign was organized in the South, and especially in South Carolina, with Hampton at the head of it, of precisely the same character as that which was organized to defeat Hayes and Chamberlain in 1876. In 1868, prior to the October elections in the North, a reign of terror existed in the upper and middle portions of South Carolina, which not even the presence of troops could wholly suppress. The result of the elections in the October States, however, did what the troops up to that time had not yet succeeded in doing; and an address was issued by Hampton as chairman of the State Democratic Committee, saying to his followers in substance that Grant would be elected anyhow; that the continued murder of Republicans in South Carolina could not prevent that result, and might bring great disasters upon themselves; and the murders were stopped until the next occasion arose. And let it be understood that at the time this bloody campaign was begun and carried on, the new government of South Carolina was not yet three months old, and that the jobbery and corruption which have since been made the pretext and justification for murder and outrage, and, finally, for a bloody and successful revolution, had not yet been consummated. Here, then, we have the reconstructed governments starting on their career with bankrupt treasuries, and with a large majority of the property-holding and intelligent classes in deadly opposition to them. All over the South the leaders of white public opinion announced that the true policy for them to pursue was to withhold all support from the new governments, and seek to make them so odious that they would break down of their own weight. In what I have further to say of the past of reconstruction, I shall confine myself to the State of South Carolina, being more familiar with the facts in her case, and for the additional reason that what is true of her is substantially true of all the other States.

I wish it understood that I recognize the fact that, during the whole period of reconstruction in South Carolina, there have been a very considerable number of peace-loving and law-abiding men who have in a quiet way deprecated and feared the results of the violence and lawlessness of which the friends of the government have been the victims. But to quote again from Mr. Schurz:—

"It must not be forgotten that in a community a majority of whose members is peaceably disposed, but not willing or not able to enforce peace and order, a comparatively small number of bold and lawless men can determine the character of the whole. The rebellion in itself in some of the Southern States furnished a striking illustration of this truth."

Without going into detail on this point, it is sufficient to say that at no period since the war has there been a determined effort on the part of those who claim to be lovers of peace, and in favor of an honest acceptance of the results of the war, to prevent or punish those outbreaks of violence which have occurred whenever the representative white politicians of the State have thought that the emergency demanded them. I also, for the argument's sake, am willing to admit all the jobbery and corruption that have been or may be charged against the Republican government of the State up to the beginning of Governor Chamberlain's administration in 1874. That in some cases these charges are exaggerated, must be evident to any one who is familiar with the methods of political warfare in this country. But the bare truth with regard to a part of the earlier administrations of that government is so disgraceful, that I do not care to quarrel over the instances of exaggeration. Nor do I think it wise or necessary to dwell upon the alleged fact, that some prominent Democrats were mixed up with almost all the jobs which disgraced that government. Even if this were true, it could not change the record of the Republican administration, or remove its share of responsibility for the misgovernment that existed.

It is worth while, however, in the light of the occurrences of the past year, to point out that the doctrine of the "white-liners," enunciated early in the history of reconstruction, "that the worse the negro governments were the sooner they would be overthrown," was consistently acted upon by the men who finally succeeded by means of violence and fraud on their own part, and by treachery on the part of others, in usurping the control of that government. The history of political affairs in South Carolina since the establishment of the reconstructed government in 1868, shows clearly that the alleged willingness on the part of the so-called Conservatives, to cooperate with the Republicans in behalf of good government was a mere sham, in so far as the men who have always controlled the councils of that class in political emergencies were concerned. In almost every instance where an alliance between the Democrats and Republicans was made at all, it was with the worst element of the latter party. These alliances, however, were more apparent than real, and had for their principal object the dividing and scattering of the Republican forces.

It may be asserted, then, that up to the time of the election of Governor Chamberlain, there had been no genuine cooperation of the conservative element with that class of Republicans who, it was admitted, had both the intelligence and character to achieve reform. With the advent of the Chamberlain administration, however, and as it became evident to the most incredulous of his opponents that he was in earnest, and was both willing and able to accomplish, in great measure, what he had pledged himself to do, a very different feeling began to show itself. The really conservative spirit that had been latent in the minds of large numbers of the white people of the State, made itself felt, and the Governor was the recipient of a series of eulogies and congratulations, which aroused the fears and jealousy of his own party, and would have turned the head of a man less wise and cautious than himself. Pledges of the firmest and most vigorous support were freely and publicly given to him by almost all the leading conservative politicians and citizens of the low country, and by many of the leading men of the middle and upper part of the State. Close observers, however, noticed as a significant fact, that the class of men, of whom the "Edgefield men" were the representative types, were either silent or coldly critical, in the midst of these congratulations. Indeed, many of the white leaders who honestly thought that the best interests of the State would most effectually be secured by the continuance in power of Governor Chamberlain during another term, did not hesitate to say privately, that they feared a determination on the part of the more active white Democrats to be satisfied with nothing less than "straight-out" Democratic or "white-line" nominations, believing that they would be able to overthrow the reconstructed government of South Carolina by the same means that had succeeded in Mississippi the year previous. In other words, these men did not want a reformed government nearly so much as they wanted Democratic success and the consequent practical disfranchisement of the colored voter. For while it may be true that the increased representation which the citizenship of the negro gives to the South would prevent his open disfranchisement, even if the power existed to accomplish that purpose, it is equally true that his exercise of that right is so offensive to the white people, that now that the control of the governments is in the hands of the whites, he will for years to come remain practically disfranchised.

I take it that no one, except for partisan purposes, will dispute the fact that, within three months after he became Governor of South Carolina, Mr. Chamberlain had the entire confidence of at least nine-tenths of the people of the State, of all classes. Of course I do not include in this statement the ring politicians of the Republican party, or the "white-line" leaders of the conservative party. By Senator Patterson and the men who trained with him, Mr. Chamberlain was accused of betraying the Republican party; and this accusation was credulously listened to by many leading Republicans at Washington and elsewhere. On the other hand, Butler, Gary, and other advocates of the "shot-gun" policy, both openly and covertly, denounced him as a treacherous hypocrite, who was simply playing a deep game for the purpose of keeping himself in power. But aside from these men, and the few who were directly under their influence, a great majority of the people of all classes, while not approving in detail all the acts of his administration, recognized and enthusiastically approved the earnestness and integrity of purpose which chiefly characterized Mr. Chamberlain's government. During his administration, up to the time of the Hamburg massacre in July, 1876, Mr. Chamberlain was looked upon by a majority of the people of the State as not only a true reformer of governmental abuses, but as the true reconciler of conflicting classes. He and those who cooperated with him at that time, did not suppose that conciliation meant the putting of one class under the feet of another, to be mercilessly jumped upon whenever they should attempt to rise. They did suppose that true reconciliation of conflicting classes would result from the recognition and rigid protection of the rights of all classes; and that if concession is due from any class to another, it is due from the intelligent to the ignorant, from the strong to the weak.

I assert, then, that under Governor Chamberlain's lead, reconstruction in South Carolina was rapidly securing what had not yet been secured in any other Southern State,—an honest and vigorous administration of governmental affairs, with the complete protection of the civil and political rights of every citizen of the State. In support of this statement, I might consume the hour allotted to me in citing proof; but must content myself with a brief summary of the abundant testimony. I will first condense the opinion of the State, as expressed through its newspapers and public speakers, during the year 1876. Let it be understood that I quote from Democratic papers and speakers scattered all over the State.

Let it also be understood that my purpose is not the vindication of Governor Chamberlain—his brave and unselfish performance of his duty is his sufficient vindication,—but to show that according to the utterances of those authorized to speak for the better class of the whites of the State, he was considered as all-sufficient to achieve those reforms which all united in considering desirable; and that the charge afterwards made that his surroundings were such as to preclude his doing what he had pledged himself to do, was an afterthought urged at the instance of those who were determined to rule or ruin; and that the attacks made, infamous as they were, were not so much against him personally, as against the cause he represented.

The Winnboro News, in June, 1876, said:—

"Governor Chamberlain is a necessity. He alone in the State has power at present to check frauds, foster honesty, and restore order out of chaos."

The Grange of January, 1876, said:—

"Governor Chamberlain is every day fulfilling the pledges made alike to conservatives and Republicans in his campaign."

From the Abbeville Press of August, 1876, I quote as follows:—

"The course of Governor Chamberlain, we think, commends itself to the cordial support of all the friends of good government in the State."

The Camden Journal of August, 1876, said:—

"Being the ablest and purest man in the dominant party, he has become a necessity to the welfare of the State; and it behooves all good citizens to stand by him while he seeks to secure for them good government."

The Columbia Phoenix of February, 1876, said:—

"The country is conscious that there is a steady hand at the helm of State affairs, and feels a renewal and an increase of confidence in the pilot."

The Horry News of September, 1876, said:—

"His history as Governor has been pure, unspotted, and unstained."

From the Charleston News and Courier of May, 1876, I quote as follows:—

"Governor Chamberlain richly deserves the confidence of the people of this State. The people of South Carolina who have all at stake, who hear and see what persons outside of the State cannot know, are satisfied with Governor Chamberlain's honesty. They believe in him, as well they may."

From a speech of General James Connor, Governor Hampton's first Attorney-General, delivered in Charleston, December, 1875, I quote as follows:—

"Governor Chamberlain stands out, bearing the wrath of his own party to maintain unbroken his pledges of reform. As he is true to his duty, let us be true to ours, and stand firmly and unitedly by him in support of the right."

Colonel B. F. Pressley, one of the oldest and most respected lawyers in the State, said at the same meeting:—

"There must be no mental reservations when we say we will stand by Governor Chamberlain. We mean it as our fathers meant it, when they pledged their lives, their fortunes, and their sacred honors."

The Barnwell Sentinel in November, 1876, said:—

"While the Governor does not abate one jot or tittle of his party fealty, he will not support any measure or policy that does not tend to advance the interests of South Carolina. This is true statesmanship, and is all we need to redeem the State."

I might continue to quote from other papers, but this must suffice to show in what manner the conservatives accepted Governor Chamberlain and his administration during its first year.

As early as February and March of 1876, the machinations of the "white-liners" had accomplished something toward creating a public sentiment adverse to him. This change of sentiment was shown chiefly by a cessation of eulogy on the part of some of the papers, and intimations that a united democracy was needed, not only to save the State from radicalism, but to assist in securing success to the National Democratic party in the contest then about to open. This reactionary conservative movement took more definite shape at the convention held in April, to elect delegates to the National Democratic Convention.

Notwithstanding this, however, the authorized exponents of the best conservative sentiment of the State were still fully and earnestly committed to the support of Mr. Chamberlain. I will now give some citations in support of this view.

From the Charleston News and Courier of January, 1876, I quote as follows:—

"Time has justified us, as it will justify Mr. Chamberlain. Time has shown that whoever else goes back, he will move steadily forward."

The same paper in February, of 1876, said:—

"We believe that without regard to consequences, to himself or to his party, he will go on to the end in the narrow path of right."

The following resolution was adopted at a meeting of conservatives, held at Barnwell, January, 1876:—

"We heartily indorse Governor Chamberlain in his efforts to redeem the State from plunder and degradation. And while he has been faithful to his own party, he has also been faithful to ours; and we hereby pledge ourselves to stand by and support him promptly, faithfully, fearlessly, and defiantly."

The following resolution was adopted at a meeting held at Sumter, January, 1876:—

"Governor D. H. Chamberlain has illustrated by his conduct the noble ends that may be achieved by a stranger who differs from many of us in matters of political faith, but who unites with good men of all views in measures of earnest reform; and this people will sustain him to the end."

Coming down to June and July, 1876, just before the nomination of Hampton, we have such expressions as these: Mr. George W. Williams, probably the wealthiest and most extensive business man in the State, wrote a letter, in which he said:—

"I honestly believe that Governor Chamberlain can do more for South Carolina, in and out of the State, than any other man."

The Charleston News and Courier, commenting upon this letter, said:—

"The most influential bankers and merchants in Charleston hold substantially, the same opinions as those expressed by Mr. Williams."

Again, the same paper said:—

"By supporting Mr. Chamberlain, the whole country will secure without revolution a government every way satisfactory. We hope that General Hampton will not be nominated, because we do not believe it possible to elect him."

The same paper on another occasion said:—

"The Democrats in South Carolina are in a minority, else they could and would as a party, obtain control of the State by their own efforts. Governor Chamberlain will probably be the candidate of the Republican party for reelection. The wilder the talk of the radical democracy, the greater is his strength as a commanding necessity to his party. In case that he be nominated he will have the undivided support of the radicals. There will be no bolt. Add to the solid Republican vote the power to obtain Federal troops as they may be needed, the executive appointment of Commissioners of Election, the broad and undefined power of the Board of State Canvassers, and what prospect is there that he could be defeated? It could be done only in one way: by armed force. For that the people are not ready; and if they were ready, such a course would end in disaster and ruin."

Here my citations must stop; and the importance of showing clearly what the state of feeling in South Carolina was, previous to the nomination of Hampton, which was the active beginning of a campaign of blood and outrage, must be my excuse for the copious extracts I have given. I have shown, I think, that a large majority of the thoughtful white people of the State were not only content with Mr. Chamberlain, but that they earnestly desired to secure his reelection. What I have quoted also shows that a majority of the white people were so fully and openly committed to his support that nothing less than a complete revolution in public sentiment with regard to him, could concentrate the white vote against him. Of this the "white-liners" were well aware; and their efforts had been steadily put forth for some time to produce that result.

The tone of the newspaper articles and resolutions I have quoted, shows that the moderate Democrats were fully alive to the character of the campaign, which the "straight-out" men proposed to conduct, and desired, if possible, to frustrate their plans. Hence, when the foundation of the campaign was laid by the Hamburg massacre, but few of the newspapers of the State had any apologies to offer for the murderers; and two or three of the leading papers went so far as to denounce the whole affair in strong terms.

This unusual state of things, however, lasted but a little while. Very soon the men who committed the crime, and those who sympathized with them, made themselves heard. In a Democratic convention held at Newberry, the Charleston News and Courier was repudiated for denouncing the bloody work at Hamburg; and the Edgefield democracy also adopted resolutions denouncing the same paper. In fact, as soon as Governor Chamberlain's letters to Senator

Robertson and President Grant, on the subject of the massacre, became public, the "Mississippi" and "shot-gun" policy declared itself openly and in full vigor. From that time until the meeting of the convention that nominated Hampton, every species of clamor and falsehood was resorted to for the purpose of creating prejudice in the minds of the whites against Mr. Chamberlain. Notwithstanding the leading papers of the State and of Georgia had given full accounts of the massacre, differing in no important particular from the statement made by the Governor, he was denounced in every part of the State as "a malignant slanderer of a high-toned people"; and the people were appealed to to hurl from power one who had thus vilified their character. These efforts to arouse the prejudices of the people were successful; and as soon as the Democratic convention, after a debate in secret session, decided to nominate a "straight-out" ticket, no Democratic paper or speaker in the State dared to do other than support the policy of the party, and denounce as unsparingly as they before had praised Governor Chamberlain and his administration. The leading men and newspapers who before the convention had asserted that the Republicans could only be defeated by the "shot-gun" policy, as if to vindicate the truth of their assertions, immediately became the most strenuous and malignant advocates of that policy.

From the rostrum and through the public prints, notice in effect was served upon every man in the State that to support Chamberlain was to put himself outside of the law and of the protection the law was supposed to give. Whatever doubts were felt on the subject at the North, no man in South Carolina doubted that we were in the midst of a revolution, the violence of which; on the part of the revolutionists, would be measured entirely by the necessities of the case.

Time will not permit me to do more than indicate the character of the campaign. The details of the murders; of the formation and drilling of "rifle-clubs"; of "night-riding"; of the intimidation of election officers; of fraud in its various forms,—are all to be found in the records of the Congressional Investigating Committees and of the United States Circuit Court, before which some of the conspirators and murderers were tried.

Any one who will take the trouble to familiarize himself with this testimony, will not fail to understand that the Democratic campaign in South Carolina in 1876, organized as it was in opposition to the judgment and wishes of a majority of the most thoughtful and well-disposed people of the State, was simply a campaign of murder, violence, and fraud; the real purpose of which was, not the securing of a good government (for that, it is clear, could have been obtained by peaceful means), but a government that should represent and be controlled exclusively by the white people of the State.

It is this result which a Republican administration has quietly permitted to be accomplished; and which, there is reason to believe, a large majority of the people of the North acquiesce in, even if they do not welcome it, as a just and final settlement of the Southern question. I know it is not a just, and therefore I cannot think it a final, settlement of that question. No special surprise need be expressed that Southern white men should resort to such means for overthrowing governments forced upon them in opposition to their wishes. With their feeling toward the colored man as a citizen, which they have never succeeded in concealing, and but seldom attempted to conceal, it is no matter of surprise that they should seize any and every means to extinguish him as a voter.

But it is matter of surprise that the North, which is yet endowing the misery and demoralization of a war, begun and waged in behalf of the domination of Southern white men, should approve of a policy which practically nullifies some of the most important results of that war, and assumes that a minority of the people of any State in the Union may at any time, and for any purpose, good or bad, rightfully seize the State government; and that the federal government has no right or power to intervene for the protection of those who may have thus been despoiled of their rights as citizens.

Our responsibility for abandoning the colored voter of the South cannot be escaped by assuming that he will be safe in his civil rights, and less liable to outrage from his white neighbor now that he has ceased to be a voter; or because that, as a voter, he did not prove a success. All these considerations would have been in order when the reconstruction measures were under discussion; but the country decided to give the Southern colored man the right to vote, and pledged itself to protect him in the exercise of that right; and this pledge was not made contingent upon the wise or unwise use of the ballot. It was based upon the idea that he must vote in order to secure his personal and civil rights, and assist in making the State in which he lives a loyal and firm supporter of the general government. We conferred the right of self-government upon him, knowing his ignorance, his weakness, and his habit of subordination to the dominant race; and because in his attempt to exercise that right he blundered, and became an easy prey to demagogues and to an unscrupulous and vigilant foe, we repudiate our obligation to protect him further, and remand him to time and the sense of justice supposed to be latent in the hearts of those who have oppressed him for generations. And this is called a just and final settlement of the Southern question; and those who refuse to consider that question a "dead issue" are called lovers of strife and discord.

Some of the most prominent advocates of the new Southern policy are now valiantly denouncing the dishonesty of repudiating the pecuniary obligations of the government. I go with him who goes farthest in such denunciation; but I submit that the nation which wantonly repudiates its obligation to protect eight hundred thousand men in their right to vote freely, and calls it justice, cannot be expected to be very scrupulous as to the repudiation of its pecuniary obligations. Many of the leading newspapers of the country that have been most clamorous in their support of the policy which has resulted in crushing out the colored voter at the South, are now very anxious at the prospect of a "solid South" in favor of financial repudiation. What reason have they to expect anything else? Has the South ever, in the history of the nation, heartily and unitedly supported a policy which had for its prime object the maintenance of the national honor? On the contrary, has it not always, with a greater or less degree of unity of purpose, according to the exigencies of the case, struggled for objects inconsistent with national unity and honor, and calculated only to enhance its sectional power at the expense of the whole country? What is there in its recent history to justify us in thinking that it will adopt a different policy, either now or in the near future? Absolutely nothing.

Precisely the same spirit which before the war tried to stifle the anti-slavery agitation by cries of danger to the Union, and injury to the business interests of the country, now seeks to quiet the conscience of the North by talk about a reconciliation that, whatever its intent may be, is, in fact, nothing but a carte blanche to the embittered Southern white man to exercise his own will, regardless of the rights of others, as he has done heretofore.

It will be understood, I trust, that I do not think that the system of reconstruction adopted by the country resulted in a very brilliant success. It was as successful, however, as we had any reason to suppose that it could be under the circumstances; and, notwithstanding its attendant evils, accomplished much good for the South and the nation. And if a little of the patience and fortitude which we expect from the negro under his trials, had been exercised by the intelligence of the country, we would, within a reasonable time, have witnessed a true pacification on a basis of justice and freedom. As it is, I do not see how any man in his senses, with eyes open and clear memory, can confidently assume that the Southern question is settled. If Mr. Schurz was right in 1865 in his statement of the problem which was to be solved, then certainly the question is not settled; for I take it that few men will be so bold as to say that "the whole organism of Southern society" is to-day "in harmony with the rest of American society." If we are to live in peace, this harmonious relation must be brought about; but it cannot be done by making believe that it is already accomplished, and denouncing as malcontents and disturbers of the peace those who cannot see in the supremacy of the "white-line" and "ku-klux" element at the South any promise of an early establishment of such relations between the two sections. I care nothing for the Republican party, except as it can assist in bringing about this and kindred results. I am not blind to the fact that many of its recognized leaders are self-seeking and unscrupulous politicians, who, by the merest accident, are on the side of justice and national honor. Nor am I insensible that much of the impatience of the country with the course of political affairs, and of apathy over the outrages in the South, are justly attributable to past misgovernment there as well as in the North. But I am also sensible of the truth that in this country no governmental abuses are without peaceful remedies; and that for the national government to permit revolutionary measures to be adopted and successfully carried out for the ostensible purpose of curing the evils of misgovernment, is a more fatal blow at the fundamental principles of our government and society than the effects of mere misgovernment, for a longer term of years than it has existed at the South, could possibly be.

But we are asked, in the language of "Boss Tweed," which since last March has been adopted by the self-constituted pacificators of the country, "What are you going to do about it?" "The thing is done," they say; "and it surely is not the part of wisdom to continue the agitation of a question which, so far as the action of the government is concerned, is practically settled." Therein in a great degree consisted the criminality of the act which overthrew the legal and equitable governments of South Carolina and Louisiana, and erected usurpations in their stead. That act—which at the time was asserted to be merely experimental—and its consequences can never be revoked, at least by the present administration.

Many excellent people stood doubtfully by, as they saw the President, under the plea that he was carrying out the pledges of the Republican party, scatter to the winds the rightful governments which were the choice of those whose votes made him President, and, stifling their doubts, acquiesced in his action. It was not long, however, before these same excellent people, when the President, in the excess of his desire to "conciliate" the South, fell into platitudes about "the great and good man" Hampton, and solved the problem of the war by the assertion that it was only a question as to which side had "the most Greeks," and appointed to the offices in the South men only who were satisfactory to the recently reconciled, began to think that he was going too far; and wanted to cry halt!! To my mind the conduct of the President is perfectly logical, and not to be condemned by those who supported his action last March. To condone and acquiesce in the seizure by force and fraud of the legitimate government of a State, is but little worse than to condone and acquiesce in rebellion against the general government; and the approval of the former act involves logically, at least, an apology for the latter. If "pacification" requires a surrender to the white leaders of the South of the essential features of the reconstruction policy, I cannot see but that it also requires that they shall be allowed to dictate the action of the administration, with regard to federal affairs within their States. Hence the President, if not faithful to the pledges made before, is at least logical in his action since he became President. It is not strange, then, that the supporters of this policy should say, "What are you going to do about it?" So far as the action of the government is concerned, there is nothing that we can do except to refuse to believe or say that that is just and final which we know to be neither just nor final; and to do all in our power to avert as much of the evil resulting from the new Southern policy as may be.

Because the action of the government is conclusive, so far as its own power is concerned, we are exhorted to acquiesce in it as the "consummate flower" of political wisdom and of patriotism. At first it was defended simply as a political necessity; now it is magnified by its supporters as a policy dictated by supreme wisdom, and based upon principles of equity and justice; and they who fail to recognize in it these qualities, are denounced by its supporters as desiring to foster hatred between the two sections of the country, or as the defenders of those men in the Republican party who by their corrupt practices made it impossible for the Democrats of the South to rely upon the ordinary methods for securing political evils, and thus drove them to revolution as a remedy.

I would not shut my eyes to the difficulties that have surrounded and still surround this question. Indeed, it is because I think I appreciate these difficulties fully that I am impatient with the precipitancy with which reconstruction in the South has been pronounced a failure, and, under the specious cries of "home rule" and "local government," the political rights of a race, so far as the power of the government to protect them extends, have been abandoned. "Home rule" and "local government," as understood by those who clamor for them in the South, mean simply the right of the minority because it is white, intelligent, and rich, and therefore strong, to govern the majority because it is black, ignorant, and poor, and therefore weak. Fortunately for the negro, his rights cannot be persistently outraged in the South without disturbing the peace of the whole country. In this fact lies his ultimate safety; though he will doubtless continue to suffer for some time to come, as he has done in the past; and the nation will be fortunate, indeed, if before the end of his trials is reached, it is not forced to pay dearly for its cowardly desertion of him.

In a speech, said by the newspapers to have been delivered on the evening of the 9th of November, 1878, when it was thought that Mr. Tilden was elected, Mr. Hayes stated with great earnestness his fears as to the fate of the colored man in the South, if Mr. Tilden should prove to be elected. Yet it would be difficult to conceive of any policy likely to have been adopted by Mr. Tilden toward the South much more sweeping or conclusive in its character than that adopted and put into active and continuing operation, by Mr. Hayes; and which has been pronounced to be just and wise by many of those honorable men who have heretofore been distinguished as the earnest friends of the colored man, and the untiring foes of his oppressors. When the judgment of such a man as Colonel Higginson, or of others of the same class, is given upon a question of this kind, I should be very slow to express a contrary opinion, were I not impelled by an overriding conviction of the unsoundness of their conclusion. Laboring under the excitement consequent upon the Hamburg massacre in 1876, Colonel Higginson felt very much as many of us feel to-day. In a letter to the New York Times, commenting upon that massacre, he said, among other things:—

"For one, I have been trying hard to convince myself that the Southern whites had accepted the results of the war, and that other questions might now come uppermost."

Some of us have tried to do this also, but have not succeeded so well as Colonel Higginson. We are unable to see anything since that massacre, which justifies the opinion that Southern white politicians will not again resort to the same means for the accomplishment of similar results; and the time will come, I think, when Colonel Higginson, who is always manly and honorable, will confess that he was hasty in approving of Mr. Hayes' surrender.

It is an ungracious task to interpose scepticism as to the intentions of the Southern whites, as a class, toward the colored man, at a time when nearly all the organs of public opinion are proclaiming the duty of faith in their professions of good-will as the most certain way of inducing them to live up to such professions.

Ungracious, however, as the task may seem, it is none the less a necessity of the hour. For now that the protecting arm of the government has been formally withdrawn, it becomes all the more important that the friends of the colored man and of permanent domestic peace should be active and vigilant. Whatever feeling in favor of justice to the colored man may be latent at the South, needs to be quickened into life and vigor by all proper influences that can be brought to bear for that purpose.

In my judgment, failure to adopt such methods for influencing public opinion at the South as may be at our command, because, forsooth, they may be interpreted as impertinent intermeddling with its affairs, will be criminal neglect of a duty which we owe to the colored people and to the nation, and which may not with safety remain undone. Here is a race which by our connivance was brought here, and has been kept in ignorance and degradation. That race must be lifted up, or remain forever an element of danger and discord to the whole country. Education in the broadest sense is the one sure means by which that danger can be averted. To expect that the South under existing circumstances will meet the immediately pressing necessities of the case, is to expect too much. It is no injustice to the white people of the South to say that adequate disposition and means are both wanting on their part. She is unquestionably poor, and when the matter of providing the means of education for all her children is under discussion, she feels poorer than she really is. In many portions of the South, notably in South Carolina, it is only quite recently that any considerable number of persons among the property-holding and educated classes have admitted that education is a good thing for what they term the "lower orders." With this disposition now that the political pressure is removed, it will not be surprising if the provision of public educational facilities should, as a whole, prove fitful and unsatisfactory, and that the tendency of things affecting the colored people should be backward rather than forward.

The Republican party in the South fell far short of its duty in the matter of education. Nevertheless, the tendency of the people as a whole was forward; and the safety of the country demands that that tendency shall be preserved and increased to the utmost.

I would do injustice to my own feelings if I did not disclaim any intention of indulging in indiscriminate denunciation of the motives and purposes of the white people of South Carolina and of the South. There are hundreds of men and women among them who in their hearts condemn the crimes that have been committed in the name of a desire to secure good government; and, if they dared, would make public proclamation of their abhorrence of such deeds. But these people are as powerless today to influence or withstand the overmastering political fury of the ambitious and unscrupulous men, who control public affairs, as they were to oppose the blind fury of secession. Whether in the future they will show greater independence and courage than in the past, is part of the problem yet to be solved.

I am as fully convinced as any one, that political action based upon the hatred of any special class of our citizens, or section of the country, must be ruinous in the long run, and is certain to be followed by a reaction; and I have never been, and am not now, governed by such a motive, in considering the Southern question. Insincerity may, however, prove as disastrous as hatred, in deciding upon and directing political action; I have therefore tried, during the hour you have asked me to use, to be perfectly sincere in my treatment of this subject.

I feel and appreciate fully the force of the circumstances which have seemed to justify the acquiescence of the people in the new policy adopted. But the power to resist and control circumstances when vital principles are at stake, is the sure test of the capacity of a people for self-government; and it seems to me that no amount of "guah" about "conciliation," "local governments," and "home-rule" can obliterate the fact that in this case we have failed in our duty, and that we will have to pay the penalty for such failure. In describing and condemning the revolutionary measures which, by the consent of the national government, overthrew and usurped the places of valid governments in the South, and thus, as I think, interposed serious obstacles to the progress of its people in the principles and practice of free government, as well as to their social advancement, I would not be understood as advocating revolutionary action in return, or as despairing of the ultimate solution of the problem of civil and political equality under our government. As I have before intimated, many important advantages were gained under the system of reconstruction; and the practical duty now is to see that those advantages are not wholly lost by the reactionary movement which seems to have set in.

The best course to be pursued in the future is one about which good men may honestly differ. But, while admitting that the action taken cannot be revoked, duty to the truth of history, and loyalty to the fundamental principles of our government seem to me to require that we should refuse to admit that that action was justified by considerations of either justice or necessity, and insist that this judgment of the policy adopted shall stand, whether the immediate apparent consequences of that policy be good or bad.

THE IOWA CONVENTION.

EDITOR INDEX:—

Please insert the following call in THE INDEX immediately. Can you get away from your editorial duties long enough to come out to Des Moines and tell us of the "impending conflict"?

Mrs. Mattie Hulett Parry and Mr. J. R. Baker will be present, and speak right well for truth and equal rights. Hope to have Mr. Underwood and Colonel Jamieson with us, and other good speakers besides. A most cordial invitation is extended to every one who possibly can be present. Our Des Moines brethren are making preparations for the accommodation of their visitors,—the particulars of which shall be sent ere long. Arrangements will be made with the railroad companies for a reduction of fares.

We desire to see every liberal in the State constitute himself a committee of one for the purpose of advertising the coming convention. Write up the subject for your local papers. Let your friends know of the proposed meeting. Every one attend the convention who can possibly come. We want to perfect a strong State organization, and to do so we must, each of us, do his or her individual duty. Now is the time to arouse ourselves and go to work. Let us compete in generous emulation with our co-workers in the East. On to Des Moines! E. C. WALKER.

[We wish we could accept the kind invitation above tendered, but it is impossible. The earnest liberals of Iowa do not need our aid, but they have our cordial sympathy in their efforts. Let the convention be a great and influential one, resulting in a large number of new local auxiliary Leagues.—ED.]

Freethinkers of the West.—Greeting.

MASS CONVENTION OF IOWA LIBERALS.

TO EACH FRIEND OF STATE SECULARIZATION, INDIVIDUALLY, THIS CALL IS ADDRESSED:—

We want you to attend and take part in a Mass Convention of the friends of National Unity, State Secularization, and Universal Education, which will convene at Des Moines, Iowa, Thursday, March 7, 1878, at ten o'clock A.M., and continue for two days, day and evening sessions. Mr. B. F. Underwood and other distinguished speakers from abroad are expected to be present. It is proposed to organize a State Association or League, and we hope that every county in the State will be represented. Liberals of adjoining States are cordially invited to attend.

We are approaching a crisis in the relations of Church and State. The signs of the times are portentous of coming trouble. The Church is encroaching slowly, but stealthily and surely, upon the domain of the State, and is remorselessly chiselling away the rights of the private citizen. The experience of all times and the lessons of history warn us to be on the alert to resist the first attempt to render the State subordinate to the Church. The attempt to Christianize the United States Government, the exemption of church property from taxation, the use of the Bible, of religious hymns, of sectarian textbooks, and the utterance of prayer in our common schools; the use of public school buildings as places of sectarian worship; the appointment of chaplains in the Army and Navy, and in State and National institutions, in public appropriations for educational and charitable institutions of a sectarian character; in the appointment by the President of the United States and by the Governors of the various States of religious feasts and festivals; in the use of the Judicial oath, in the enactment and enforcement of sabbatarian laws, and of laws intended to give to one class of religious believers any legal advantage or immunity which is not equally granted to all citizens,—these and countless other indications of the hold which the Church has upon the State call upon us to be up and doing.

Therefore we earnestly call upon every lover of equal rights and justice; upon every one who desires that ours shall be a land of civil and religious liberty in deed as well as name; upon every man and woman whose desire is that the magnificent heritage left us by the founders of our government shall not be stolen from us by the rapacious hand of an ecclesiastical hierarchy, and upon every one who believes in the natural equality of all men and in the right to follow in the footsteps of science by the enlightened reason of man; upon each and all of these do we call to take hold and help us at Des Moines. The agents of reaction and ecclesiasticism are at work in every nook and corner of Europe and America. Shall the soldiers of Freedom sleep while the fetters are forging which shall bind the limbs of their children in gyves of steel? This is the hour to work. We must not delay.

The call is alike to Materialists, Spiritualists, Free Religionists, Christians; to any and to all who are willing to work for the complete separation of Church and State. Let there be a full attendance. The arrangements made for the accommodation of visitors at Des Moines, the reduction in fare made by railroad companies for the occasion, the speakers engaged, the subjects on which they will speak, will be announced by the committee in due time. For any information on the subject address the members of the committee.

J. C. MICHENER, M.D., Chairman, Adel,
J. H. STRONG, Des Moines,
C. DEROBERTS, Red Oak,
E. C. WALKER, Florence,
E. H. GIBBS, Oskaloosa,
Iowa State Committee of the N. L. L.

Other papers please copy.

CASH RECEIPTS.

N.B.—Postage stamps are not included here, though credited on subscriptions, etc.

FOR THE WEEK ENDING FEBRUARY 16.

B. N. Allen, 25 cents; W. C. Head, 25 cents; M. B. Sherwin, $1; Joseph W. Wayne, $3.75; Rev. Charles Voyce, $4.75; L. M. Nicholson, $3; David Giddings, $3; Prof. W. C. Russell, $3.20; A. Ferandie, $3.20; E. C. Macgill, $3.20; Frederick Looser, $3.20; D. G. Francis, $3.20; Wm. J. Worden, $3.20; Killian Brothers, $3.20; G. A. & S. Hill, $3.20; H. Molineaux, $3.20; Prof. W. F. Allen, $3.20; Dr. O. G. Clark, $3.20; Rev. S. H. Winkley, $3.40; A. Hecht, $3.20; J. N. Lombard, $3.20; F. J. Humphrey, $1.75; A. H. Roffe & Co., 50 cents; D. B. Morey, $3.20; J. Ansbach, 10 cents; Judge A. S. Latty, $3.27; W. Carpenter, $1; Col. G. G. Minor, $2; D. B. Morton, $3; Dr. Jas. P. Atwater, $3.25; E. C. Hart, $3; E. D. Burleigh, $3.20; Mrs. Rosalie Hopper, $3.20; Mrs. Sara A. Underwood, 10 cents; Geo. E. Baxter, $3; H. W. Stanton, 10 cents; Mrs. Kate N. Doggett, $3; A. G. Boynton, $6.65; Dr. David Prince, $3; A. Shone, 10 cents; Prof. J. E. Oliver, $10; Samuel D. Bardwell, $6.40; H. Schoeppe, 10 cents; William Phillips, 50 cents; Edmond Prand, $3.20; Mrs. H. Judd, $3.20; John Gilles, $3.25; B. Hasall, $3.20; E. Racicot, $3.20; Rev. O. W. Wendte, $3.20; S. N. Allen, $1.60; S. Lydiard, $3.00.

All receipts of cash will be acknowledged as above, and no other receipt sent unless specially requested. Persons who do not see their remittances acknowledged within three weeks after sending, will please notify us.

N.B.—Please remit by post-office money-order, by registered letter, or by draft on Boston or New York. Checks on interior banks are liable to discount, and the term of subscription will be proportionally shortened in the credit.

N.B.—Orders for Tracts or single numbers of THE INDEX which are not on hand will, if of small amount, be otherwise filled to the same amount without further notice.

N.B.—Please examine the ADDRESS and DATE on your INDEX mail-tag, and report at once any error in either.

The Index.

BOSTON, FEBRUARY 21, 1878.

THE INDEX is published every Thursday by the INDEX ASSOCIATION, at No. 231 WASHINGTON STREET, BOSTON. TOLEDO Office, No. 36 Monroe Street; J. T. FRY, Agent and Clerk. All letters should be addressed to the Boston Office.

THE INDEX accepts every result of science and sound learning, without seeking to harmonize it with the Bible. It recognizes no authority but that of reason and right. It believes in Truth, Freedom, Progress, Equal Rights, and Brotherly Love.

The transition from Christianity to Free Religion, through which the civilized world is now passing, but which it very little understands, is even more momentous in itself and in its consequences than the great transition of the Roman Empire from Paganism to Christianity. THE INDEX aims to make the character of this vast change intelligible in at least its leading features, and offers an opportunity for discussions on this subject which find no fitting place in other papers.

N. B.—No contributor to THE INDEX, editorial or otherwise, is responsible for anything published in its columns except for his or her own individual statements. Editorial contributions will in every case be distinguished by the name or initials of the writer.

TO VOLUNTARY CONTRIBUTORS.—Only Short Articles desired. Unused Manuscripts not returned.

FRANCIS E. ABBOT, Editor.
OTAVIUS BROOKS FROTHINGHAM, WILLIAM J. POTTER, WILLIAM H. SPENCER, MRS. E. D. CHERNEY, GEORGE JACOB HOLYOAKE (England), DAVID H. CLARK, MRS. ELIZABETH CARY STANTON, J. L. STODDARD, ELIZUR WRIGHT, C. D. B. MILLS, W. D. LE SUEUR, BENJ. F. UNDERWOOD, ALBERT WARREN KELSEY, Editorial Contributors.

A REQUEST TO LIBERAL EDITORS.

At a meeting of the Directors of the National Liberal League, held in this city on Friday, January 18, it was

Voted, To request the editors of liberal papers all over the country to publish the Directors' "Call to Organize" new Local Auxiliary Liberal Leagues on Washington's birthday,—also the "Card" of the Financial Committee, as follows:—

Call to Organize.

CITIZENS of the United States who indorse the appended political platform adopted in convention by the National Liberal League, at Rochester, N.Y., Oct. 28, 1877, are requested to meet in their respective cities and towns on Washington's Birthday, Feb. 22, 1878, for the purpose of organizing themselves into Local Auxiliary Liberal Leagues in accordance with the provisions of the National Liberal League Constitution. Copies of the latter and blanks for organization can be obtained from W. H. Hamlen, Secretary, 231 Washington Street, Boston, or from H. L. Green, Chairman of the Executive Committee, Salamanca, N.Y.

FRANCIS E. ABBOT, }
WILLIAM H. HAMLEN, } Directors
J. A. J. WILCOX, } N.L.L.
H. L. GREEN, }
D. G. CRANDON, }

Boston, Jan. 18, 1878.

Platform of the National Liberal League.

1. TOTAL SEPARATION OF CHURCH AND STATE, to be guaranteed by amendment of the United States Constitution: including the equitable taxation of church property, secularization of the public schools, abrogation of Sabbatharian laws, abolition of chaplaincies, prohibition of public appropriations for religious purposes, and all other measures necessary to the same general end.

2. NATIONAL PROTECTION FOR NATIONAL CITIZENS, in their equal civil, political, and religious rights: to be guaranteed by amendment of the United States Constitution, and afforded through the United States courts.

3. UNIVERSAL EDUCATION THE BASIS OF UNIVERSAL SUFFRAGE IN THIS SECULAR REPUBLIC: to be guaranteed by amendment of the United States Constitution, requiring every State to maintain a thoroughly secularized public school system, and to permit no child within its limits to grow up without a good elementary education.

N.B.—The nomination of candidates upon the above platform was postponed to a future Congress of the National Liberal League.

A Card.

The Finance Committee of the National Liberal League, in consequence of the lack of funds in the Treasury, and of the fact that the Directors are able to do so little of the important work that ought to be done, appeal to all lovers of liberty for financial help, to enable them to publish and disseminate the views of able writers in behalf of the principles of the Rochester Platform, and to advance the common cause in other equally proper ways.

If earnest liberals throughout the United States will contribute one dollar apiece (with as much more as their generosity shall prompt or their means permit), in order to become Annual Members of the National Liberal League, they will furnish the requisite aid, and the work shall be done.

DANIEL G. CRANDON, } Financial
HARLAN P. HYDE, } Committee
SARAH B. OTIS, } N.L.L.

SPECIAL NOTICE.

Attention is specially called to a change in the advertisement of the Publications of the Free Religious Association. By a recent vote of the Executive Committee the Annual Reports of the Association, from the year 1872 to the year 1877 inclusive, are now offered at five cents each (and at the same rate for any larger number) to any body who will take the trouble to send for them, enclosing five cents in postage stamps. They will also be sold at the office for the same sum to any one calling for them there.

The Committee have put the pamphlets at this low rate, which hardly more than covers the cost of sending them by mail, with the hope that they may thereby be more extensively circulated. By referring to the advertisement describing their contents, it will be seen that they contain much matter of special interest on the most vital religious problems of the age. It is not too much to say that some of the most valuable contributions of the last five years to religious discussion may be found in these pamphlets. Let any one who wants to know what the Free Religious Association means, send for these Reports. And will not the members and friends of the Association take this opportunity to extend the knowledge of its principles?

WM. J. POTTER,
Secretary F.R.A.

MR. FROTHINGHAM ON "THE ASSAILANTS OF CHRISTIANITY."

Mr. Frothingham, as will be remembered by our readers, gave the opening lecture this winter (January 8) in the course of "Sunday Afternoon Lectures" at Horticultural Hall—his subject being "The Assaults of Christianity," of whom he chiefly instanced Celsus, Voltaire, Paine, and the editor of this journal. For literary reasons, he withheld it at present from publication. Having learned this fact accidentally (for we naturally felt debarred in this case from requesting the manuscript for THE INDEX), we obtained the favor of a private reading of the lecture, together with the unsolicited permission of making an abstract of it for these pages. To do this with any degree of fairness to Mr. Frothingham, however, would be a task beyond our opportunities, and we must content ourselves with the humbler work of jotting down a few thoughts suggested by his valuable monograph.

Let us frankly discharge a debt of gratitude at the outset. So far as the essential elements of our position respecting Christianity are concerned, Mr. Frothingham has sketched it with a wonderful fidelity and penetration. The causes, method, and spirit of our anti-Christianity are delineated with a truthfulness and generosity of recognition of which only such critics as Taine and Sainte-Beuve are capable—men who can enter with a delicate sympathy, for the time being, into minds and characters widely unlike their own, and thereby can seize the secret which is hidden from all but the Ariel-like imagination. We have often seen caricatures of our thought, but never before what we could honestly accept as its faithful portrait. In fact, Mr. Frothingham has put us into the condition of the man who, being asked by the artist who had painted his likeness what he thought of it, looked at it for a while, and then replied: "Very good—that is the face I shave."

But our chief interest in reading this lecture was to obtain light on the question how far Mr. Frothingham identified himself with the "assailants of Christianity" whom he was describing. On this point we think the following sentences will leave little doubt:—

"Should Christianity succeed in making head in America, the genius of American institutions must, in Mr. Abbot's view, be fatally compromised; and to prevent its thus succeeding is the object of an opposition as determined as was ever organized—more radical than Voltaire contemplated, and more earnest than Celsus proposed.

"In the judgment of this lecturer, Mr. Abbot's conception of the Christian system is substantially just. His criticism is warranted by history. His definitions are correct in the light of fair interpretation. Whether or no his apprehensions of the future are wise will be a matter of opinion. That it can be a matter of opinion among earnest men would seem to indicate some vagueness in the portents. . . . They who hold that the cause of Reason is not put in jeopardy or embarrassed by Christianity,—that Christianity, though essentially unreasonable, is, at this stage of knowledge and experience, too weak, too much divided, too far attenuated to be feared by the mature intellect,—are right in pursuing the quiet ways of culture, leaving the outworn system to fall away of itself. But they who believe that Christianity is opposed to Reason and is still strong enough to check its progress and thwart its aim, must agitate, speak, write, prophesy, edit papers, organize Leagues, leave no means untried to destroy its influence. It is not for them to celebrate its past achievements, to detail its services, to magnify its glories, to exalt its beauties. This properly falls to the duty of its champions. The assailant picks at the assailable points, marks the defective places in the line of wall, directs his aim at the arsenals that are its strength and the towers that are its pride, and does not hesitate to demolish its beauties if he can humble its renown. All we ask of him is fidelity to the laws of war. He must not be a sneak; he must not employ spies or dissemble with 'quaker guns.' The issue is too grave for sarcasm or dissembling. Candor, honor, sincerity, an indomitable love of truth, an invincible enthusiasm for humanity, are the qualities to be enlisted for this warfare. That these qualities are enlisted now,—that ridicule, scorn, vituperation, vulgar abuse, ignorant pretentiousness have been outgrown with the methods of bygone days, is the sure sign that the assault has reached the highest dignity, and has the best omen of success. When the dogmatic spirit shall be cast out,—when the exclusive claims to authority and supremacy shall be disallowed and disavowed,—when aspiration, spirituality, equity, kindness, human love, shall alone remain as the animating principles of the Christian Faith,—when the champions of the Church shall strike hands with the friends of Reason,—then, but not till then, will the assailants drop their weapons."

From these closing passages of Mr. Frothingham's lecture, it seems that those of his listeners were in error who (as some did) understood him to admit that the fairest interpretation of Christianity might possibly harmonize it with freedom, truth, and reason (Unitarianism). On the other hand, those who understood him to approve our own position unqualifiedly seem to have been scarcely less in error, and to have been misled by his extraordinary justice and fairness in stating it into imagining that he was describing our position as his own (anti-Christianity). If we apprehend his meaning correctly, Mr. Frothingham holds ground intermediate between these two positions, and to be neither Christian nor anti-Christian, but simply non-Christian. In other words, he conceives the only truthful interpretation of Christianity to be that which represents it as intrinsically and necessarily despotic in its nature, and hostile by its fundamental idea to freedom of thought and democratic institutions; while at the same time he believes that, at this late day, this despotic system has become so enfeebled by age and the growth of civilization as to be practically no longer dangerous to mental or political liberty, and therefore to be no longer a public enemy in any sense which would require emancipated minds to join actively the "assailants of Christianity." Such a view as this would lead, logically and legitimately and honestly, to pursuit of the "quiet ways of culture" rather than to any form of anti-Christian activity. This is the position of a large number of scientific, philosophic, and earnestly humanitarian spirits at the present day. They neither accept nor yet oppose Christianity; they criticize it, decline to acknowledge its authority or to bear its name, and devote themselves according to their individual tastes to such independent interests as they judge most worthy of their attention.

The only issue we could have with them would be one that concerns a question of fact; namely, is Christianity so far decayed and decrepit as to be practically innocuous to the highest interests of mankind? We believe that this is very far from being the real state of the case, and that a period of reaction is setting in which will show the dogmatic and ecclesiastical system of Christianity to be still enormously strong,—so strong and so vital as still to exert a most disastrous influence in keeping the human mind in darkness, and so aggressive as to demand great exertion on the part of the friends of secular government and secular education to prevent these priceless principles from being overwhelmed by the re-concentrating forces of their great enemy. This question of fact is one which events alone can fully answer. We claim no infallibility in our own view of the case, but must steadfastly adhere to it and act upon it just so long as it is our own. Meanwhile, we wish that those who hold the more optimistic view would soberly and seriously set themselves to explain the grounds on which it rests, and thoughtfully study the grounds of the opposite view.

THE NEW DISCUSSION.

It is a curious coincidence that, side by side with the popular agitation on the silver-money question, there has arisen in this country a new and widespread discussion of the old dogma of eternal punishment. It might be hard to say which question is sharing the greater portion of public interest. And perhaps there is a meaning in this coincidence. We might, at least, imagine a staunch believer both in honest money of one standard, and in the old doctrine of a material and endless hell, disposed to hint that a people who are trying to debase the money of their country will very naturally take to heresy on the matter of future punishment. And, on the other hand, there are some of us who do not now believe in the old doctrine of hell-torments, who yet would be inclined to look upon the doctrine with more tolerance, if our American Congress should succeed in the plan on which it seems madly bent, of repudiating a part of the national debt; for how otherwise could such a disgraceful crime be adequately dealt with? On the whole, therefore, it seems probable that neither side will be able to make much from the fact that these two discussions chance to come together. Everything depends upon the premises from which one starts.

But in this recent discussion of the dogma of eternal punishment, two very significant features appear: first, that the secular newspapers have entered the discussion so freely, or have, at least, been so eager to report what is said upon it elsewhere; and second, that the public press has ventured to treat the question with so much of humor and banter. The first of these facts is significant, as indicating that a question which was once regarded as exclusively in the province of the pulpit and the professional theologian, is now held to be open to popular debate. The secular newspaper writer may not have much knowledge of Biblical criticism, nor of metaphysical theology; yet his right to discuss the subject is not challenged. And if he can bring to the consideration of it arguments based on sound common sense and common humanity, he is likely to find more numerous and more docile hearers than will the Biblical and metaphysical theologian of the old days. And the second fact—that the public press has ventured to treat the question with so much of persiflage—is quite as significant. It hints that the old view of future retribution—of hell with its fire and brimstone and infinite ingenuity of never-ceasing physical torments—is fast becoming a superstition, which vast numbers of people in Christendom are not afraid to laugh at. Of course, in itself, the question of retribution in another world for human conduct in this world, is the most serious question that man can put to himself. And if people had a very deep belief in the doctrine of eternal punishment, we could hardly conceive of their being in a mood to trifle and banter on the subject. Nor, if the belief had the hold in the churches and among religious people that it once had, is it probable that secular newspapers, having a business eye upon their patronage, would venture to treat it with so much humorous levity. When a belief can be thus treated safely, it is an indication that what was once a solemn and general faith, is being discarded by the average common sense of society as a superstition. Thus has it been heretofore with the beliefs in witchcraft, in magic, in astrology,—beliefs which once held great sway in ecclesiastical circles. When large classes of people ventured to become humorous over such beliefs as these, the notions had passed irrevocably into the domain of superstition, nevermore to trouble rational intelligence.

The truth is, "hell" is beginning to be put into quotation-marks; and this is one of the signs of the times. The conception belongs to a past theology, and people are thus beginning to indicate it as traditional. Even a good many sound Orthodox people do not like to be committed to the word to-day without explanations. Believers in the doctrine are issuing new and revised editions of it,—much improved editions, too. Very few are willing to confess their belief in the literal, material, fiery hell of the ancients. The absolute deniers of the doctrine are more active and pronounced than ever. And the number of those who deign only to use against it the argument of ridicule is rapidly increasing. Colonel Ingersoll's lectures on the subject, from the so-called infidel stand-point, are attracting crowds. They are being sold by thousands on the streets and in the cars. The other day in Boston, at one of the most conspicuous points of Washington Street, a man was standing with the word Hell printed in large letters on a placard across his breast. That was the sole word on it, and it was an advertisement of Ingersoll's lecture which he was selling. If a man had ventured to do such a thing in our Puritan fathers' days, they would probably have sent him to the place in short order from a gibbet on Boston Common. Now, though a good many people might criticise his taste while buying the tract, he was, if molested at all, probably only moved on by the police for obstructing the sidewalk by the crowd that stopped to interpret his "strange device."

Evidently a more rational conception of "future punishment"—if that phrase is to be retained—is obtaining ground. Men can understand, and do understand, by their own reason and experience the law of moral retribution. They understand what delays and wretchedness and shame their mistakes and transgressions entail upon them in their course,—how they are turned aside from their goal and sink in pits by the wayside, almost in utter despair of the future. But they are learning that the suffering and the shame come as natural consequence of the error, and not for vengeance, but for warning: their end is to drive back to the better way. And thousands of people who never listened to a theological argument on the question one way or the other, are yet coming to see that the old dogma of eternal punishment for the moral failure of a few years on this planet, is as derogatory to the wisdom of the ruling power of the universe as it is to the mercy.

W. J. F.

SHALL WE CHARTER LIBERTINISM?

"What is wanted is absolute freedom of the individual,—no gyves and fetters on body or mind; no dictator in Church or State; no good father or kind mother standing guard over the morals or intellects of men and women; but simply a government that shall say, 'Your freedom is abused from the wrong-doing of your neighbors; in return you must do no wrong to your neighbors.'"

Thus writes an earnest and enthusiastic contributor to THE INDEX, deprecating the position its editor has felt compelled to assume in making a distinction between obscenity and morality. "Better license with liberty than no liberty! Infinitely better that the land should be flooded with obscene literature than that a man, or a church, or a society should be empowered to rifle the mails, and establish a paternal protectorate over the medium of thought-exchange in the land,—over the mind and conscience of one individual."

Does the author of the two quotations given above agree with the writer that the duty of each individual member of society is to subordinate his private and personal tastes and disposition within certain duly prescribed limits, out of deference to the "greatest good of the greatest number"? Does he accept the common rule of experience that it is always best of two evils to choose the lesser?

Unless he denies the validity of the utilitarian theory of mutual moral obligation between man and man; unless he would have innocent children destitute of essential safeguards,—he will find it difficult to maintain the position assumed in the above extracts.

Men need to be made to understand that the mistake of the nineteenth century has consisted in confounding the ideas of "liberty" and "happiness." Liberty is not the goal of human society, but only the means to the end it is sought to attain. All depends upon the use that mankind make of their liberty whether it becomes to them a blessing or a curse. Like fire, it may be said to be "a good servant, but a bad master."

So far it would appear as if even universal suffrage itself was only another name for placing the highest wisdom upon the same level with the grossest ignorance, politically; the most humane, beneficent, and philanthropic of humankind side by side with the most brutal, selfish, and unscrupulous members of society; or, as Fitz James Stephen well puts it, "the right to misgovern your immediate neighbors without being accountable for it to any one wiser than yourself."

Suppose, for instance, that some wise and just man should be invested with such supreme authority as to be able to institute laws commanding that all marriages should be postponed until the contracting parties should be able (as in some parts of Switzerland and Germany they are now required to do) to show evidence of their capacity for supporting the children to be brought into the world by them. Suppose that none but tax-payers and free-holders were permitted to vote upon all questions involving the contraction of loans and public indebtedness; that the suffrage should be restricted to the older and wiser citizens of either sex, none being permitted to vote for our governmental officials who had not attained the age of at least thirty-five,—that every child should be forced to learn some mechanical trade or art or profession, and none but secular schools permitted to train the American youth. Suppose that the immense sums of money now squandered in the multiplication of church edifices, were to be appropriated under the supervision of the national authorities to a better system of moral instruction, without reference to any particular religious creed, simply imparting to the youth of our country those world-wide axiomatic and rudimentary principles which tend to promote "the greatest good of the greatest number." Suppose that the telegraphs and express companies were administered pro bono publico under the same organization as our present postal service. Suppose work to be guaranteed to all applicants who were capable of working, and hospitals, asylums, and industrial schools provided for those physically incapable, and then condign punishment meted out to the wilfully indolent—thus doing away with any excuse for "tramps." Suppose "free trade and direct taxation" to be made a part of the national creed, and a system of rewards for good citizenship in the shape of public promotion adopted as a supplement to our present mode of threatening punishment for vicious habits, but leaving so many chances of escape through our method of trial by jury.

Most people will admit that some, if not all, of such changes would be for the benefit of the American people, even if in gaining these and similar reforms they resigned some small portion of their present privilege of oppressing one another by muddling through universal suffrage every legislative procedure that well-meaning politicians introduce in our Congress or State legislatures. The danger that threatens this nation to-day is simply Democratic-Republican principles reduced to their lowest terms: the vulgarization of the ballot-box by its being made supreme over all questions,—witness the present silver legislation! Ignorance always can outvote wisdom. The tyranny of a mob-majority being far more to be feared than that of any single individual,—if any process could be invented by which the personage best fitted to administer the details of any government of modern times, could be promptly singled out from the ordinary multitude, granted full powers, and forced to occupy the executive position, the problem of government would be vastly simplified. But merely to tell every American citizen, in the language of the contributor just quoted—"Your freedom is assured from the wrong-doing of your neighbors; in return you must do no wrong to your neighbors," would do no good unless the government should demonstrate to everybody's satisfaction,—first, that every good citizen was secure in his vested rights; and next that it had both the power and the will to promptly punish every attempt to infringe upon the laws protecting such rights. Infinitely better that all private correspondence should be submitted to the espionage of a governmental censor duly appointed, than that girls and boys in their teens should be subjected to the demoralizing influences of professional seducers.

Public opinion and individual sentiment unite in approving the instant destruction of rattlesnakes, wolves, sharks, tarantulas, and all other venomous or noxious reptiles, fishes, animals, and vermin; but most of our States pass laws to protect the increase of the more innocent and useful birds and beasts. Yet, on abstract grounds, the right of the first-named to existence is as good as that of the more favored. Just so with human beings; practically, our legislation must be so shaped as to distinguish between the good and the bad, the honest and the dishonest, the decent and the indecent. Anthony Comstock may be an evil; but the evidence shows him to be a necessary one.

A. W. H.

[We think Mr. Kelsey has inadvertently said more than he intended. At least, we feel constrained to say that the above is not our own position on this question, which is precisely the same that we first took. The freedom of the mails must be maintained within the recognized limit of all freedom (the prohibition of infringing upon the rights of others); and no other limit is necessary to exclude really obscene matter from the mails. Censorship of private correspondence would be insufferable for any cause; nor do we see any necessity of resorting to any principle in this matter not already recognized as the abc of radicalism.—Ed.]

Communications.

DR. HEDGE'S NEW BOOK.

WAYS OF THE SPIRIT. By Frederick H. Hedge, D.D.
Boston: Roberts Brothers, 12 mo. pp. 367.

Whoever takes up this latest book of Dr. Hedge's will experience, according to his "doxy" may be, very distinct and dissimilar sensations. The well-grounded, long-established orthodox reader, prepared to give fullest reason for the "nine points," whether singly or together, will rub his eyes and ponder over a line of statements, so in accord with his most cherished views as to make him at once convinced that Dr. Hedge has seen the error of his ways. But a few pages or paragraphs farther on and the radical element shows its head alert and smiling, and for a season has matters all its own way. Nor is this seeing, if the phrase may be allowed, in the least an indication of feeble purpose or uncertain motive. Far from it. Rather is it the calm toleration of the philosopher, who, looking quietly over the field of human effort, weighs causes and principles, balances results, and gives the compact, clearly-expressed decision in words absolutely void of all partisan heat. To the readers of THE INDEX, therefore, the book must have a special interest, every attempt to give a spiritualized and yet clear-sighted expression to the questions always occurring to the student of events, whether in the written pages of history, or in that subtler history, between the lines which each man makes for himself, being one more step toward that consummation for which we all think and work.

Properly, Dr. Hedge's book divides itself into two parts; the opening chapters, five in number, "History," "Religion," "Historic Christianity," "Historic Atonement," and the "Natural History of Theism," forming the first, and being a well-considered review, somewhat deeply tintured with the German thought, at whose spring Dr. Hedge has drunk to good purpose, of the evolution of better thought and life, from the chaos of ignorance, misrule, anarchy, and suffering, through which the world has come. If space allowed, there are many passages of rare insight and beauty which would bear transferring bodily; and his sketch of the influence of the Virgin upon the sad and shadowed lives of the Middle Ages might be read appreciatively by the devoutest Catholic of to-day. Practically, these pages are another gospel of evolution, written from the optimist's point of view; for that Dr. Hedge is an optimist after the most genuine pattern, is proved in the chapter on "Pantheism," which deals with the characteristics of Spinoza's thought, and presents him as almost the ideal philosopher.

Having settled the question not only as to present status, but the method by which it has been reached, naturally the spirit which has moved on the face of these waters finds explanation in the chapter on "Proofs of the Being of God," which is commended to all doubters, not as a piece of special pleading, but rather a statement, so calm and convincing, that it is difficult to see how the atheist, if an atheist really exist, can do anything but avow himself deist at once. Two or three other equally suggestive chapters follow, and the book ends fitly with a noble one, on that which has been the life and source of all inquiry since the world began, the eager, asking, never-satisfied "soul of man." Despite all assertions as to the deeply-rooted scepticism of the nineteenth century, the craving for truth has never been so earnest or ardent, and there are many questions which find at least an approximate answer in these earnest, scholarly pages, which even in this day of many books, the making and reading of which was a weariness even in Solomon's generation, deserve attention from all thoughtful people.

CAMPBELL WHEATON.

MATERIALISM OR SPIRITUALISM?

EDITOR INDEX:—

Dear Sir,—For months I have read THE INDEX and, waited for a spare hour to say a word on some matters in its columns. Articles on "Intuition" were of interest to me, both yours and those of C. D. B. Mills and others. I agree most with Mills; yet it seems to me the argument is incomplete unless one reaches out into the wide realm of psychological science and takes note of the facts of mesmerism, clairvoyance, and spiritualism,—a region into which THE INDEX writers seldom enter. Study these facts, and put with them the last discoveries of Proctor and others in the scientific world, and we find man is a microcosm; that all lower grades of matter and types of life are wrought into the symmetry and beauty of the "human form divine," all mental and spiritual powers, and laws enter into "the spirit in a man that giveth him understanding."

Of course, then, akin to the great macrocosm—the universe of matter and mind,—its laws and forces epitomized in him, his soul in its outreaching sweep of thought touches Nature and discovers and apprehends its truths, kindred to its own essence.

Facts in abundance prove this discovering power in us. How did the law of gravitation burst on Newton's mind? First by thought ripening from a flash of intuition as he sat under the apple-tree. As Buckle well says: "See how small a part the senses had in the discovery! It was the triumph of an idea!" How did Haüy in the Jardin du Roi, in Paris, a century ago, discover the law of crystallization? He tells us that he took for his "starting-point ideas of the symmetry of form." Of course their intuitions were verified by experiment; but the discovering power of the soul reached out into new realms, saw new San Salvadors, and touched fair continents first; and scientific experiment authenticated its discoveries, as Columbus and his sailors brought back West Indian fruits and gold to astonished Spain.

A century ago Darwin's grandfather, Dr. Erasmus Darwin, in his famed poem, The Botanic Garden, charmed cultured London society by what they held a dream of poetic fancy; but we see the fine stanzas of that poem as his prophetic statement of the "Darwinian theory" which his illustrious descendant is verifying by patient and careful study and experiment. How did Andrew Jackson Davis, then an ignorant boy nineteen years old, state in clear terms Tyndall's theory of the potency of matter? The untalented son of a "poor but honest cordwainer" discovered intuitively what the splendid experiments of the great Englishmen verify in later days; only that the young man's statement is most complete, since he not only tells of the potency of matter, but carries us back to the spiritual genesis of that potency in the indwelling soul of things.

Due honor to the soul, to its intuitions and discoveries, and to inductive science with its experiments verifying those discoveries. Both must be recognized for a perfect philosophy; but ignore the soul and its innate powers, and only a fragmentary philosophy with imperfect processes and results remains.

In ethics you grant the authority of the truths of the soul, the great primal ideas of justice, fraternity, etc. Without them "free religion" would be absurd indeed; for we must have intuitive morals,—a standard within higher, holier, and greater than all precedent or authority without.

But the spirit within is finer and more subtly penetrative than the senses. Can man then instinctively reach truth in ethics, and not in the laws and properties of matter?

Leaving this, a word on another, yet kindred topic. A material or a spiritual philosophy, which? Theism or atheism? Immortality or the soul extinct with the death of the body from whence it sprang as a material philosophy teaches?

THE INDEX writers lean largely toward the material side, and I see but faint light in its pages. For instance, I have just read an article from Mrs. Sarah Bridges Stebbins (a familiar name, but the person unknown), closing as follows:—

"It is from self-conceit, self-absorption, self-seeking, that the prevailing idea of immortality arises. If by strong effort of will we can momentarily put these aside, and realize that endless finite existence is not altogether desirable, shall we then grudge to think it less magnificent to change our substance, spirit as well as matter, and to mingle with the universe, be received and dissolved in the one spirit of that universe from whence we sprang? And instead of the unsatisfactory progression of individual and personal immortality, be thus incorporated into the whole, and so at once become infinite and capable of eternity?"

To this I answer in Whittier's words:—

"Not mine the hope of India's son—
Of slumbering in oblivion's rest,
Life's myriads blending into one,
In blank annihilation blest;
Dust-atoms of the infinite,
Sparks scattered from the central light,
And winning back through mortal pain
Their old unconsciousness again."

"No! I have friends in spirit-land:
Not shadows in a shadowy band;
Not others, but themselves are they.
And still I think of them the same
As when the Master's summons came;
Their change the holy morn-light breaking
Upon the dream-worn sleeper waking—
A change from twilight into day."

I go back four thousand years to an old Vedic verse wherein some Hindu Rishi or saint breathed his intuition:—

"If thou, O Death! a being art, draw near,
And let me clasp thee: for I hold thee dear,
I shall extort eternal life from thee:
Thou canst but snatch this worn-out shell from me."

Between these I seem to see Socrates drinking the hemlock and cheerfully telling his weeping friends of his near apotheosis; to hear the words of "golden-lipped" Plato, "reasoning well" of immortality; to listen as a grand chorus of rich voices, Pagan and Christian, seers and saints and sages, floats down through the centuries, singing:—

"Man! thou shalt never die!"

and the statement that "the prevailing idea of immortality arises from self-conceit, self-absorption, and self-seeking," drifts away into the mist, leaving no shade to mar the glorious sunlight.

Or look at this question philosophically, as stated by Hudson Tuttle, in his comments on the materialistic class of scientists:—

"What a sham they make of creation! What a turmoil for no result! Infinite ages of progress and evolution, during which elemental matter, by force of inherent laws, sought to individualize itself and incarnate its force in living beings; ages of struggle upwards from low to high, from sensitive to sentient, from sentient to intellectual, from zoöphyte to man! And now, having accomplished this, and given man exquisite susceptibility of thought, of love, of affection, making him the last factor in the series, he is doomed to perish! What is gained by this travail of the ages? It would have been as well had the series stopped with the huge saurians of the primeval slimes, or the mastodon and mammoth of prehistoric times, as with man. As each factor in the series prophesies future forms, so does man read in the same light prophecy-forms beyond. They cannot be in the line of greater physical perfection, for in the days of Greece and Rome man was as perfect physically, as is seen by their sculptures, as to-day. Ages ago this exceeding beauty was attained. It cannot be in the evolution of a being superior to man, for as in each lower animal imperfect organs or structures, or partially employed functions, are improvable and perfected by succeeding forms, in man the archetype is complete, and no partially developed organ indicates the possibility of future change.

Progress having arrived at its limits with the body, changes its direction, and appears in the advancement of mind. Death (we are told) closes the career of individuality, and we live only in thoughts,—our selfhood is absorbed in the ocean of being. Mankind perfects as a whole, and the sighed-for millennium is coming by-and-by.

Of what avail is it to us if future generations are wise and noble, if we pass into nonentity? Of what avail to them to be wise and noble, if life is only the fleeting hour? Not yet will I believe Nature to be such a sham,—such a cruel failure. The spirit rebels against the supposition of its mortality. The body is its habitation. Shall the coat be claimed to be the entire man? Shall the garments ignore the wearer?

This is the animal side of man. Physically composed of the same elements, and having passed through these innumerable changes, he is an epitome of the universe. As man was foreshadowed in remotest ages as the crowning type in the series of organic life, so man foreshadows superior excellence. Springing out of his physical perfectibility, arises a new world of spiritual wants and aspirations, unanswered and unanswerable in mortal life."

If it be said this, too, is speculation, then study spiritual science; examine the facts of clairvoyance, and learn of spiritual senses, finer than the material senses and independent of them or of the bodily organs, look into the facts of spiritual manifestation and learn that Edmund Spenser was right when he said centuries ago, with a poet's wealth of intuition:

"For of the soul, the body form doth take,
For soul is form, and doth the body make."

In England, Dr. W. B. Carpenter, F.R.S., the eminent physiologist, has been writing articles to show that mesmerism, clairvoyance, and spiritualism came from "delusion" and "mental prepossession," and has called out the able replies of Wallace, Crookes, and others there, and or Dr. J. R. Buckman in this country. The discussion has brought out a great deal of valuable thought and solid fact on the whole question of a material or a spiritual philosophy, and on important psychological matters; and even the conservative Boston Journal of Chemistry severely condemns Carpenter for reckless dogmatism and bad manners. These articles have been published partly in the Science Monthly, and fully in the Banner of Light at your door; yet I see no mention of so valuable and important publications in THE INDEX. Without the study of these subjects there cannot be the breadth of thought and investigation indispensable to more light. As dogmatic theology decays the world goes either toward a material philosophy, pure induction, atheism, and death as the end of life, or toward a spiritual philosophy, recognizing intuition, deduction and induction, theism and immortality, or a life beyond, as a truth of the soul verified by the experience of the senses. Where are you? Which way does THE INDEX aim? I have no time to write much or often, no large claim on your space; but I see plainly enough that the materialistic element is largely represented in your columns, the spiritual element but little. It may be said this is because these do not write for you; but I see hardly a recognition or mention of what is said or done by those who hold to a spiritual philosophy; for instance, of the masterly articles of Rev. James Martineau, of London, criticising Tyndall's "Potency of Matter," or of the great argument of Epes Sargent, of your own city, "Does Matter Do it All?" And this too, while a generous share of INDEX support comes from this school of thinkers, spiritualists, and others.

In closing, let me say that the important work of your Liberal League I have laid before large audiences the past season, and hope again to do so.

Frankly and truly yours, G. B. STEBBINS.

DETROIT, Mich., Jan. 28, 1878.

"Which way does THE INDEX aim?" Why, THE INDEX as represented by Mr. Stebbins aims at Spiritualism; as represented by others, it aims at Materialism; as represented by us, it aims at neither, but at the great principles of freedom, truth, justice, fraternity, the Rights of Man. With our correspondent's kind permission, we consider these infinitely more important than either of the competing isms, or all other isms combined. His quarrel must be with his fellow-Spiritualists, not with us; for we lean no more to the ism he dislikes than to the ism he is in love with, and publish impartially the best articles we receive. Is it our fault that Spiritualists do not write more for THE INDEX? Everybody knows—Mr. Stebbins himself knows—"where" we "are": we believe in scientific theism and scientific morality, and we hope for continued existence after death, without believing that he or anybody else knows anything about it. To our mind, the controversies on this question of a future life are profitless; we think there are grounds of hope, but none of knowledge; and we turn to the great, vital interests of this world as best worth discussion. But we publish such miscellaneous selections as seem to us most likely to be interesting to thoughtful people, and must now, it seems, give formal warning that they give no sort of guidance as to our own opinions. For these, our readers must look to what we write personally; and they well know we never hesitate to take a definite public position on any question when we have reached one. But we do not know nearly so much as some of our contributors, for which sin we are truly penitent.—ED.]

INTEGRALISM.

EDITOR INDEX:—

Let us hope that "A. W. K.," having learnt that Fourier was not a Communist, will study him without "a preconceived theory on the subject," until he discovers that the great master social architect was, what we all ought to be, an INTEGRALIST. He would then be in condition to see that individualism put for the whole of social science, is a one-sided and hence untruthful statement.

Fourier recognized fully the ineradicability of INDIVIDUALISM as well as of COMMUNISM. He did not seek to antagonize, but to reconcile them. He did not believe progress or harmony could be brought about by undervaluing or suppressing any element of human character.

To have insisted on egoism or altruism as the principle which should govern mankind, would have seemed as absurd to him as insisting that we should cut off and cast away one of our legs that we might develop the other, and progress the faster.

Fourier did not ignore or disregard the importance of right conditions. On the contrary, he knew perfectly well the immense influence of surroundings on character. In truth, his whole life-work was devoted to discovering the surroundings or social environment best fitted to give the highest development to individualism—according to his great formula, "attractions are proportioned to destinies,"—while at the same time he provided for the altruistic sentiment fully, according to another favorite formula of unity of interests.

Freedom in and through order was what he worked for and believed in. He did not recognize "the unwelcome fact that the ineradicable imperfections of ordinary human nature" show that the present state of social evolution is the culmination of human society because there is no such fact outside of the imagination of certain one-sided and short-sighted pessimists.

One would think a blind man might see that it is a shorter step in evolution from our present civilization to the phase of simple association, than those already made from the primal stage of savagism. To suppose that progress ends with our present attainments is as absurd as if one never having seen a man, but confronted with a boy at his most disagreeable period, should pronounce him a finality and a failure.

There are abundant evidences that the period of guaranteeism is beginning to appear, and that we shall have to pass through it unless, as Fourier hoped, we can make such discoveries of the laws of social science that we can pass by it, and enter upon some form of simple association, which very likely will contain a larger element of communism than would be required in a more advanced state, or in what Fourier calls high harmony.

Meanwhile there is work enough for us to do in the study of social science without worrying ourselves about Fourier's speculations as to the boreal crown, or the disinfection of the ocean. It may be said en passant, that many stranger things have happened, and we can afford to wait. Fourier may be mistaken in his cosmogony and in other side issues; but it is certain that a thorough study of his wonderful analysis of human society and of the human passions, and of his prophetic visions of the future harmony of man with himself and with his planet is of the greatest possible value; and that to write of social questions without really knowing what Fourier teaches, is worse than Hamlet with the Prince of Denmark left out. There are spots on the sun, but it is the centre of our system nevertheless. What is needed is to marry individualism and communism, if any fruitful results of good to mankind are sought. Either alone is sterile. To bring about this marriage is the object of all true socialists. Some socialists not yet integralists think the two will be one, and that one the man; others think the two will be one, and that one the woman. I think the result of the union will be, not absorption of one by the other, but the perfect freedom of both, inspired by love and secured by order, summed up as universal unity in variety.

F. S. C.

A PROTEST AGAINST THE "TRIBUNE."

EDITOR INDEX:—

It is surprising to see THE INDEX, a paper whose mission seems to be to make truth, justice, and light triumph over deceit, ignorance, and superstition, reproduce into its columns an article of such a character as that copied from the New York Tribune in its number for Jan. 3, headed: "Plain Truths for Western Readers." That article is full of venom and undeserved abuse. The Western States are as sensitive to honor and good faith as the Eastern States. They only want equal justice and equal rights. They do not conceive that the American system of government was instituted merely for the benefit of Eastern capitalists, or that, because the people of the Western States were "intensely and vigorously loyal" during the rebellion, they should now be intensely and vigorously foolish and submissive to the demands of capital, after it is over. They think that their blood has preserved the Union for the benefit of the whole and every part of it, not for the purpose of making the Western and Southern States a fat pasture for Eastern capitalists to feed upon.

The Tribune is right in saying that "the people of this region are personally not devoid of honesty or common-sense." It is precisely these qualities that have opened their eyes to the injustice of the financial measures that have demonetized silver, nearly doubled the capital of national bankers by sharing with them the inalienable right of government to issue a circulating medium, exempted money invested in the public debt from taxation, and other unjust and partial measures that have shown them that the once noble and patriotic Republican party had become the mere tool of Wall Street, and caused thousands to leave its ranks. The accusations and reproaches of the Tribune will not hoodwink Western or Southern people; they will demand that the government return to the aims set forth in the preamble to the Constitution of the United States which it seems to have overlooked and ignored in order to make this a partial government that favors capital at the expense of all other property,—at the expense of labor and of all our industries. The Tribune need not make itself unhappy over the ability of West or South to move crops. Only let justice be done and they will take their chances, well knowing that profit and not brotherly love has heretofore been and will continue to be the sole inducement.

G. D.

FOND DU LAC, WIS., Jan. 15, 1878.

NEW YORK STATE LIBERAL LEAGUE COUNTY COMMITTEES.

EDITOR INDEX:—

The thirty-one counties of Western New York included in the Freeholders' Association have each a Liberal League County Committee, consisting of three members; but in the thirty Eastern Counties of the State there are no such committees. Therefore, allow me to request each of the following named persons to associate with himself two other persons to constitute a County Liberal League Committee for his county. And I further request each person hereinafter named to send me the name and address of the persons so appointed:—

Albany County, Thomas Dugan, Albany.
Clinton County, J. Churchill, Champlain.
Columbia County, Charles Groves, Canaan Four Corners.
Dutchess County, John P. Atwater, M.D., Poughkeepsie.
Essex County, Freeman L. Lyon, M.D., Bloomingdale.
Franklin County, J. G. Reynolds, Bombay.
Fulton County, McIntyre Fraser, Johnstown.
Kings County, Dr. A. H. Brockway, 13 Green Street, Brooklyn.
New York County, Wm. H. Boughton, 57 Liberty Street, New York city.
Orange County, R. A. Conkling, Port Jervis.
Osteo County, E. Wilcox, Morris.
Queens County, Samuel Keesee, Great Neck.
Rensselaer County, Joseph Knight, Troy.
Rockland County, Gen. Robert Avery, Nyack.
Saratoga County, J. J. Dunlap, M.D., Saratoga.
Ulster County, Aug. Huhne, M.D., Rondout.
Washington County, A. J. Culver, Whitehall.
Westchester County, Nathan H. Ellis, Yonkers.
I shall be thankful to any one who will furnish me the name of an earnest, active liberal from each or either of the following counties: Green, Hamilton, Montgomery, Putnam, Richmond, Schoenectady, Schoharie, Suffolk, Sullivan, Warren, and Yates.
The special business of these Committees will be to encourage the organization of Local Auxiliary Liberal Leagues in their respective counties, and in other ways advance the liberal cause.

H. L. GREEN,

N.Y. State Rep. on the Ex. Com. of the N. L. L.

THE "BIBLE MANUAL" FORCED INTO MASSACHUSETTS SCHOOLS.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE INDEX:—

In Boston, at sundry times, much has been said and written of the injustice of the Bible-reading exercises in the public schools, to the parents who do not accept the book as their guide or authority. It is reserved for the country towns of Massachusetts to carry the matter to the extent of positive insult and persecution.

In the town of Wakefield, where until the last year the school committee has been largely made up of the clergy, in addition to the usual praying and Bible-reading, all the public school scholars who have advanced to a certain class are required to purchase a Bible Manual, a large book of about three hundred pages, made up of extracts from the Bible carefully arranged by a member of the Evangelical church, from which book the children are required to recite, and which is made as much a text-book as their grammar or arithmetic.

Is there a remedy for this state of things for the man whose means are such that his children must grow up in ignorance, unless he can avail himself of the public schools?

PARENT.

[There is no remedy but in State secularization, which the National Liberal League aims to accomplish. The injustice and tyranny of Orthodoxy will continue to grow, until liberals learn the lesson of self-protection through organization.—ED.]

A LIBERAL WORKER.

EDITOR INDEX:—

We have, comparatively, so few really earnest, working liberals, that when I come across one I feel like introducing him or her to the liberal public. A few months since I made the acquaintance of Mr. Thomas Dugan, of Albany, N.Y., and I find him one of the most earnest, energetic liberals I ever met. Largely through his influence some months since, a live "Liberal Association" was formed in the old, conservative, Orthodox city of Albany; and now he has succeeded in getting that association to become auxiliary to the National Liberal League. Mr. Dugan, I learn, is a liberal who believes in liberalism. And I can best inform your readers what he is doing in Albany by quoting from a letter I have just received from him:—

"Enclosed find post-office order for the sum of $10 for a charter for a Liberal League. There has been a committee appointed to revise our constitution to conform to the rules of the National Liberal League.

"I tried to have the society engage Brother Underwood, but they did not think it advisable, and therefore I took it upon myself to do so. He lectures here next Sunday evening, February 10. His subject is 'Evolution and Darwinism.' I have thoroughly advertised him in all the papers, also in five thousand handbills and one hundred and fifty large posters.

"J. Albert Wilson, Esq., gave a splendid lecture on 'Paine' before our society on Paine's birthday, and he donated the proceeds to our Liberal Association.

"I saw Rev. Mr. Schlesinger, of this city, as you wished, and he joined us readily. Mr. Charles M. Cuyler I also saw, and he will assist us all in his power. The others you mention I have not seen yet, but will soon. We have now about sixty members."

Now, Mr. Abbot, is not that pretty good for Albany? And allow me to say that the Mr. Wilson mentioned above is a young lawyer of Albany, one of our Liberal League State Committees, and, I understand, a good speaker. I know him to be an able, earnest liberal, and I hope he may be invited to lecture by our liberal societies. H. L. GREEN.

"REPUBLICAN TAXATION."

Suppose taxes to be assessed not upon "mouths," as Mr. Wright suggests, but upon property: property would re-assess them, as it assesses all its bills, upon labor, as rent, interest, or profits, and so the same class of persons would really pay the taxes as now.

Again: suppose property or capital, and not current income derived from rent, interest, or profits, really did have to pay the taxes; would that be equitable? Would not that be putting a premium on laziness and improvidence, by exempting the lazy and improvident from taxation?

Of course it is worth while to work for taxation of church property, and as a matter of equity, too, for it is a movement in the right direction; but it is only that. The sting of church exemption is in the intention to exempt. Labor's bill is a little less now than it will be when church property is taxed, for such taxation will furnish an excuse for a new exaction for the benefit of capital. The amount of that tax, and a little more, "in order to make sure of covering it" (such being the custom in such cases with "practical" people in making out a bill), will be "put in the bill" which labor will, at last, have to pay.

Income, if incomes were honestly earned, and it were practicable for assessors to ascertain them, would furnish the most equitable basis for taxation, since the amount of the income would be a gauge of ability to bear taxation. The burden would be put upon the strong, where it ought to be put.

JOHN FRANCIS SMITH.

OAK LAWN, R.I.

FRIENDS IN UTAH.

SALT LAKE CITY, Utah Ter., January, 1878.

EDITOR INDEX:—

Dear Sir,—Although I am shut up in the valley of the Rocky Mountains, I do not forget that it is my duty to do what I can to promote the circulation of the Index tracts and the permanent influence of THE INDEX newspaper. I should like to have a number of the tract,—"The Impeachment of Christianity." THE INDEX is my intellectual, mental, and spiritual food. To work for so erudite and ably-conducted a journal as you, sir, send forth to all parts of the country, is an honor and a privilege. I do not think that there is any other newspaper or even magazine published either in Europe or America, by which the rights of men, women, and children are so accurately and clearly defined, so ably expounded, and logically established and defended, as they are by THE INDEX and its tracts and other publications sold through your medium. There is a very respectable and reliable man in our city, from whom you have heard. His name is P. Tavley. I have seen him to-day, and he informed me that he is very willing to keep your INDEX and tracts in his store-window, and to do all he can to procure subscribers. I enclose his full address.

Very truly yours,

WM. FERGUSON.

THE BANK OF ENGLAND.

EDITOR INDEX:—

Your correspondent "F. S. C." is in error in his statement that "the bills of the Bank of England represent an equal amount of coin and bullion in the vaults."

Prior to 1844, no reserve, in coin or otherwise, was required by law to be kept; but the officers of the bank were guided in the matter solely by their own judgment of the necessities of their business. By the Act of 1844 the bank was allowed to issue circulating notes to the amount of fourteen millions pounds sterling (which has since been increased to fifteen millions pounds), secured by government debt held by the bank; and notes may be issued to any amount beyond the limit above named, provided the excess be secured by the deposit in the issue department of the bank, of an equal amount of coin and bullion.

J. M. A.

IT IS RELATED of Colonel Ingersoll that being sharply asked if he could mention one law of Nature that in his puny wisdom he could change for the better, he affably replied, "Yes; I would make health catching, instead of disease."

Address THE INDEX,
No. 231 Washington Street, Boston

POPULAR BOOKS,

SENT BY MAIL

AT

PUBLISHERS' PRICES!

ORDERS PROMPTLY FILLED.

NO EXTRA CHARGE FOR POSTAGE.

ANY BOOK in the subjoined List, or any other OBTAINABLE BOOK that may be desired, will be forwarded as promptly as possible on receipt of orders accompanied with the CASH.

Orders are respectfully solicited from

all friends of THE INDEX.

	Price.
ALCOTT (A. BRONSON). Tablets.....	1.50
Concord Days.....	1.50
Records of a School. A new edition.....	1.50
ALCOTT (LOUISA M.). Little Women. Two vols.....	3.00
Hospital Sketches and Camp and Fireside Stories.....	1.50
An Old-Fashioned Girl.....	1.50
Little Men.....	1.50
My Boys, &c.....	1.50
Shawl-Straps.....	1.50
Work; A Story of Experience.....	1.75
ARABIAN NIGHTS' ENTERTAINMENTS. 1.50
ARNOLD'S (MATTHEW) Essays in Criticism.....	2.00
New Poems.....	1.50
Literature and Dogma.....	1.50
AUERBACH (BERTHOLD). On the Heights. Villa Eden; The Country-House on the Rhine.....	1.50
Edelweiss.....	1.50
German Tales.....	1.50
BACON'S Essays.....	1.50
BAGEHOT on the English Constitution.....	2.25
Physics and Politics.....	1.50
BAIN (ALEXANDER). Mental Science: A Compendium of Psychology and History of Philosophy.....	1.75
Moral Science: A Compendium of Ethics. 1 vol.....	1.75
The Senses and the Intellect. Third edition. 1 vol.....	5.00
BARTLETT'S Dictionary of Americanisms.....	2.50
BARTLETT'S Familiar Quotations.....	5.00
BARTOL (REV. C. A.). Radical Problems.....	2.50
The Rising Faith.....	2.00
BASTIAN (H. CHARLTON). The Beginnings of Life. 2 vols.....	5.00
BRACKETT (ANNA C.). The Education of American Girls.....	5.00
BROOKS (CHARLES T.). Translations. The Layman's Breviary.....	2.25
The World-Priest.....	2.25
The Tall Student.....	.75
BUECHNER'S Force and Matter.....	3.25
BUCKLE (HENRY THOMAS). History of Civilization in England and France, Spain and Scotland. New edition of the entire work, with a complete index. 2 vols.....	6.00
CARLYLE'S Works. Cheap edition. Comprising the following: Miscellaneous Essays, 7 vols.; French Revolution, 3 vols.; Frederick the Great, 10 vols.; Cromwell's Letters, &c., 5 vols.; Sartor Resartus, 1 vol.; John Sterling, 1 vol.; Life of Schiller, 1 vol.; Past and Present, 1 vol.; Heroes and Hero Worship, 1 vol.; Latter Day Pamphlets, 1 vol. Any volume sold separately, $1 vol. London, 1871-3. Per vol.....	.90
CARPENTER (DR. W. B.). The Principles of Mental Physiology, with their Applications to the Training and Discipline of the Mind, and the Study of its Morbid Conditions.....	5.00
CERVANTES' Don Quixote.....	1.50
CHANNING (WM. ELLERY, D.D.). The Perfect Life. In Twelve Discourses. Edited from his manuscripts by his nephew, Wm. Henry Channing.....	1.50
CHANNING (WM. ELLERY). Thoreau: The Poet-Naturalist. With Memorial Verse.....	2.00
CHENNY (MRS. E. D.). Pastimes. A Series of Thirty Games for the Fireside.....	1.50
Social Games. A new Series of Games for Parties, uniform with Pastimes.....	1.50
Daily Whitties, the Mountain Girl. Illustrated.....	1.50
CLARKE (JAMES FREEMAN). Ten Great Religions.....	3.00
Common-Sense in Religion.....	3.00
CLARKE (DR. E. H.). Sex in Education.....	1.25
CLODD (EDWARD). The Childhood of the World.....	.75
COBBE (FRANCIS POWER). Studies New and Old, of Ethical and Social Subjects. Darwinism in Morals, and other Essays.....	5.50
The Religious Demands of the Age.....	.50
COEWAY (MONROE D.). The Barthward Pilgrimage.....	1.75
CORRELATION and Conservation of Forces: A Series of Expositions by Grove, Helmholtz, Mayer, Faraday, Spencer, Draper, Masson, Lyell, &c. Edited by Edward L. Youmans, M.D. 1 vol.....	2.00
CULTURE DEMANDED BY MODERN LIFE: Its True Aims and Requirements. A Series of Addresses, by Tyndall, Huxley, Whewell, Faraday, Spencer, Draper, Masson, Lyell, &c. Edited by Edward L. Youmans.....	2.00
DALL (MRS. CAROLINE H.). The College, the Market, and the Court; or, Woman's Relation to Education, Employment, and Oldenham.....	2.00

Historical Pictures Retouched; a Volume of Miscellaneous. In two parts. Part I, "Studies, Pictures, and Fancies".....	1.
DARWIN'S Origin of Species.....	2.00
The Descent of Man. 2 vols.....	4.00
Journal of Researches.....	2.00
Emotional Expression of Man and the Lower Animals.....	3.50
The Variation of Animals and Plants under Domestication. 2 vols., illustrated.....	6.00
DESCARTES (RENE). Discourses on the Method of Rightly conducting the Reason and Seeking Truth in the Sciences.....	2.25
DICKENS' Child's History of England.....	1.50
DUBHING (JULIA). Philosophers and Poets. A Study.....	2.00
ELIOT'S (GEORGE) Novels. Household Edition. 5 vols., each.....	1.00
Comprising—Adam Bede, Romola, The Mill on the Floss, Felix Holt, Silas Marner and Scenes of Clerical Life. The Same. Library Edition. 3 vols.....	1.50
Middlemarch. 2 vols.....	1.25
Wit and Wisdom of.....	1.25
The Spanish Gypsy.....	1.50
EMERSON'S (R. W.) Essays. First Series.....	1.50
Essays. Second Series.....	1.50
Miscellaneous.....	1.50
Representative Men.....	1.50
English Traits.....	1.50
Conduct of Life.....	1.50
Poems. With Portrait.....	1.50
May-day and Other Pieces.....	1.50
Essays. Blue and Gold.....	1.25
Poems. Blue and Gold.....	1.25
Prose Works. 2 vols.....	5.00
Society and Solitude.....	1.50
EVANS (E. P., Ph. D.). First Historical Transformations of Christianity. From the French of Athanasius Coquerel the Younger.....	1.50
The Life and Works of Gotthold Ephraim Lessing. Translated from the German of Adolf Stahr. 2 vols.....	5.00
FABER'S Critical History of Free Thought, in reference to the Christian Religion.....	2.00
FEUERBACH (LUDWIG). The Essence of Christianity. "George Eliot's" translation.....	5.00
FISKE'S (JOHN) Myths and Myth-Makers. Cosmic Philosophy.....	5.00
FROTHINGHAM (O. B.) Religion of Humanity.....	1.50
Child's Book of Religion.....	1.00
Life of Theodore Parker.....	2.00
FULLER'S (MARGARET) Complete Works, including Memoirs by Emerson, Channing, and others. A new edition. 6 vols.....	9.00
GALTON (FRANCIS). Hereditary Genius. An Inquiry into its Laws and Consequences.....	2.00
GOETHE'S Faust. Translated into English Verse by Bayard Taylor. 3 vols. Per vol.....	5.00
Elective Affinities.....	1.25
Wilhelm Meister. Translated by Thomas Carlyle. Portrait of Goethe. 2 vols.....	3.50
Herman and Dorothea. Translated by Ellen Frothingham.....	1.00
GREGG (W. R.). Enigmas of Life.....	5.00
Literary and Social Judgments.....	2.00
Creed of Christendom.....	7.00
GROTE'S LIFE. Compiled from Family Documents, Private Memoranda, and Original Letters to and from Various Friends. By Mrs. Grote. Second Edition. With Portrait.....	5.00
HAMERTON (PHILIP G.) A Painter's Camp. Book I. In England. Book II. In Scotland. Book III. In France.....	1.50
Thoughts about Art.....	2.50
The Unknown River.....	5.00
The Intellectual Life.....	2.00
Chapters on Animals.....	4.00
HAMILTON (GAIL). Child World. Part Second.....	1.00
Child World. Part First.....	1.50
HAMILTON'S Lectures.....	1.50
1. Metaphysical Lectures.....	1.50
2. Logical Lectures.....	2.50
HAWTHORNE'S (NATHANIEL) Works. New Illustrated Library Edition. Nine vols. Per vol.....	3.00
Twice-Told Tales.....	1.50
Mosses from an Old Manse.....	1.50
The Scarlet Letter, and The Blithedale Romance.....	1.50
The House of the Seven Gables, and The Snow Image.....	1.50
The Marble Faun.....	1.50
The English Note-Books.....	1.50
The American Note-Books.....	1.50
The French and Italian Note-Books.....	1.50
Our Old Home, and Septimus Felton.....	1.50
HIGGINSON'S (T. W.) Out-Door Papers.....	1.50
Malbone. An Oldport Romance.....	1.50
Army Life in a Black Regiment.....	1.50
Atlantic Essays.....	2.00
Oldport Days.....	2.50
HOWELL'S (WILLIAM D.) Their Wedding Journey.....	2.00
Suburban Sketches.....	2.00
Venetian Life.....	2.00
Italian Journeys.....	2.00
A Chance Acquaintance.....	1.50
HUGO'S (V.) New Novel, "Ninety-Three".....	1.75
HUMBOLDT (ALEXANDER VON). Life of. Translated from the German. 2 vols., with three portraits.....	16.50
HUME'S (DAVID) Essays and Life.....	1.50
HUNT'S (MRS. HELEN). Verses.....	1.25
Bits of Travel.....	1.50
HUXLEY'S Man's Place in Nature.....	1.25
On the Origin of Species.....	1.00
More Criticisms on Darwin and Administrative Nihilism.....	.50
A Manual of the Anatomy of Vertebrate Animals.....	3.50
Lay Sermons, Addresses, and Reviews.....	1.75
INGELWORTH'S (JEAN) Poems.....	2.25
The Mountains of the Unseen.....	1.25
Songs of Seven.....	2.50
INGELWORTH'S (JEAN) Prose. Of the Skeltons.....	1.75
Stories told to a Child. First and Second Series.....	1.25
A Sister's Bye-Bye.....	1.25
Moses the Fairy: A Story.....	1.25
INGERSOLL'S (ROBT. G.) The Gods and Other Lectures.....	2.00
INTERNATIONAL SCIENTIFIC SERIES. No. I. Forms of Water, in Clouds, Rain, Rivers, Ice, and Glaciers. By John Tyndall.....	1.50
No. II. Physics and Politics; or, Thoughts on the Application of the Principles of "Natural Selection," and "Inheritance" to Political Society. By Walter Bagehot.....	1.50

ILL. Foods. By Dr. Edward Smith.....	1.75
IV. Mind and Body. The Theories of their Relations. By Alex. Bain.....	1.50
V. The Study of Sociology. By Herbert Spencer, Esq.....	1.80
VI. The New Chemistry. By Josiah P. Cooke, Jr.....	2.80
VII. The Conservation of Energy. By Balfour Stewart, with an Appendix, treating of the Vital and Mental Applications of the Doctrine.....	1.50
VIII. Animal Locomotion; or, Walking, Swimming, and Flying, with a Dissertation on Akronautics. By J. Bell Pettigrew.....	1.75
IX. Responsibility in Mental Disease. By Henry Maudsley, M.D.....	1.50
JERROLD (DOUGLAS). Fireside Saints, Mr. Claude's Breakfast Talk, and other Papers.....	1.50
JOHNSON'S (SAMUEL) Oriental Religions, and their Relation to Universal Religion.....	5.00
JOSEPHUS. The whole Works of Flavius Josephus, the Jewish Historian.....	2.50
JOWETT. The Dialogues of Plato. Translated into English, with Analysis and Introductions by B. Jowett, M.A., Master of Balliol College, Oxford, and Regius Professor of Greek. Four vols.....	12.00
KERR (ORPHEUS C.). Versatilities, Poems, Patriotic, Sentimental and Humorous.....	2.00
LECKY (W. E. H.) History of the Rise and Influence of the Spirit of Rationalism in Europe. 2 vols.....	4.00
History of European Morals from Augustus to Charlemagne. 1 vol.....	5.00
LEGGE'S Confucius' Life and Teachings.....	4.00
Confucius and Chinese Classics.....	2.00
LESSING'S (G. E.) Nathan the Wise. Translated by Ellen Frothingham.....	1.50
LEWIS' Physiology of Common Life. 2 vols.....	2.00
Biographical History of Philosophy, from its Origin in Greece down to the Present Day. 2 vols.....	4.00
Problems of Life and Mind. The Foundations of a Creed.....	2.00
LEWES (G. H.) The Story of Goethe's Life.....	1.50
LEWIN (REV. RAPHAEL, D.O.). What is Judaism? or, a Few Words to the Jews.....	1.00
LONGFELLOW'S (H. W.) Poems. Portrait. 2 vols.....	4.00
Prose Works. Portrait.....	4.00
LOWELL'S (J. R.) Poems. 2 vols.....	4.00
The Biglow Papers. First Series.....	1.50
The Biglow Papers. Second Series.....	1.50
Among my Books.....	2.00
My Study Windows.....	2.00
LOWELL (MRS. A. C.) Poems for Children.....	.75
LUBBOCK (SIR JOHN). Origin of Civilization, and the Primitive Condition of Man. Pre-historic Times.....	2.50
LYELL'S Principles of Geology. 2 vols.....	8.00
MACDONALD (GEORGE) The Vicar's Daughter.....	1.50
MANN (HORACE). The Life of Horace Mann. By his Wife.....	2.50
Lectures and Annual Reports on Education. Annual Reports on Education, from 1836 to 1848.....	2.00
Thoughts Selected from the Writings of Horace Mann.....	1.25
MARTINEAU (JAMES). Essays, Philosophical and Theological. 2 vols. Per vol.....	2.50
MAURICE (REV. F. D.). The Ground and Object of Hope for Mankind.....	.75
MERRIVALE'S (CHARLES) Conversion of the Roman Empire.....	1.50
Conversion of the Northern Nations.....	1.50
MILL (JOHN STUART). Dissertations and Discussions. 4 vols., each.....	1.25
The Examination of the Philosophy of Sir William Hamilton. 3 vols., each.....	2.25
The Positive Philosophy of Auguste Comte. Political Economy. New and revised edition.....	2.50
The Subjection of Women—Essay on Liberty—both in one vol.....	2.50
Representative Government.....	1.50
Autobiography.....	2.25
Memorial Volume. His Life and Works.....	1.5
Three Essays on Religion.....	2.50
MILLER (JOAQUIN). Songs of the Sierras.....	1.50
Songs of the San Lands.....	1.50
MIVART (ST. GEO.) On the Genesis of Species.....	1.75
MORLEY (PROF. JOHN). Voltaire.....	2.00
Rousseau, 1 vol.....	6.00
MOULTON (LOUISE CHANDLER). Bed-Time Stories.....	1.50
MURKIE (MAX, M.A.). Lectures on the Science of Languages. First Series.....	2.50
The Same. Second Series.....	2.50
Chips from a German Workshop. Vol. I. Essays on the Science of Religion. Vol. II. Essays on Mythology, Traditions, and Customs. Vol. III. Essays on Literature, Biography and Antiquities.....	2.50
Three vols. Price per volume.....	2.50
Lectures on the Science of Religion.....	2.00
NASSY (PETROLEUM V.) Swingin' Round the Circle.....	1.50
Ekkoes from Kentucky.....	1.50
NEWMAN (FRANCIS W.) A History of the Hebrew Monarchy.....	4.50
Catholic Union: Essays towards a Church of the Future, as the Organization of Philanthropy.....	1.75
Theism, Doctrinal and Practical.....	4.25
PARKER (THEODORE). A Discourse of Matters Pertaining to Religion.....	1.50
Sketches, Addresses, and Occasional Sermons.....	4.50
Additional Speeches, Addresses, and Occasional Sermons. 2 vols.....	5.00
Critical and Miscellaneous Writings.....	1.50
Historic Americans—Franklin, Washington, Adams, and Jefferson. With an Introduction by Rev. O. B. Frothingham.....	1.50
The two Christmas Celebrations—A.D. I. and MDCCLV. A Christmas Story.....	.50
PARSONS (THEOPHILUS). The Infinite and the Finite.....	1.00
PHELPS'S (ELIZABETH STUART). The Gates Ajar.....	1.50
The Truhy Book.....	1.50
Men, Women, and Ghosts.....	1.50
Hedged In.....	1.50
The Silent Partner.....	1.50
What to Wear?.....	1.00
PROCTOR'S (ADELAIDE A.) Poems. Portrait. Cabinet Edition.....	2.00

PROCTOR (RICHARD A.) Other Works than Ours the Plurality of Worlds studied under the Light of Recent Scientific Researches. With Colored Plates.....	2.50
Light Science for Leisure Hours. A Series of Familiar Essays on Scientific Subjects, Natural Phenomena.....	1.75
Essays on Astronomy: A Series of Papers on Planets and Meteors, the Sun, &c. With 10 Plates and 24 Woodcuts.....	4.50
The Moon, her Motions, Aspects, Sonnetry, and Physical Conditions, with Three Lunar Photographs and many Plates, Charts, &c.....	5.50
The Expanse of Heaven.....	2.50
RENNAN'S Life of Jesus.....	1.75
ROBBETTI (CHRISTINA G.) A Shadow of Dante.....	2.50
SCHELLER (H.) Spectrum Analysis, in its Application to Terrestrial Substances, and the Physical Constitution of the Heavenly Bodies.....	5.00
SCIENCE PRIMERS: 1. Introductory. By Prof. Huxley, F.R.S.....	.50
2. Chemistry. By Prof. Rosecoe.....	.50
3. Physics. By Balfour Stewart. With illustrations.....	.50
4. Physical Geography. By Archibald Geikie, LL.D., F.R.S., &c.....	.50
SCOTT'S Waverley Novels. 2 vols.....	11.25
SCOTT'S (THOMAS) The English Life of Jesus. Second Edition.....	2.50
SMILES'S (SAMUEL) Self-Help.....	1.50
SPENCER (HERBERT). Education, Intellectual, Moral, and Physical.....	1.25
First Principles.....	1.25
Essays: Moral, Political, and Aesthetic.....	1.25
Illustrations of Universal Progress. A Selection of his best Papers.....	2.50
Social Statics; or, The Conditions Essential to Human Happiness Specified, and the First of them Developed.....	2.50
The Principles of Biology. 2 vols.....	5.00
The Principles of Psychology. 2 vols.....	5.00
Recent Discussions in Science, Philosophy, and Morals. New and enlarged edition.....	2.50
Sociology.....	1.50
Descriptive Sociology. Parts I, II, and III, each.....	4.00
Life, Correspondence and Ethics.....	9.00
Universal Progress.....	2.50
STOWE (HARRIET BEECHER). Pink and White Tarnish.....	1.50
Uncle Tom's Cabin.....	.50
STRAUSS (D. F.) The Old Faith and the New.....	2.50
New Life of Jesus. Authorized translation. 2 vols.....	12.50
TAINES (H. A.) History of English Literature. 2 vols.....	7.50
The Class-Room Taines. History of English Literature. Abridged and Edited by John Fiske.....	2.50
TENNYSON'S (ALFRED) Poems.....	1.75
THACKERAY'S (W. M.) Novels. Household Edition. Complete in 6 volumes. Per vol.....	1.25
Vanity Fair.....	1.25
The Newcomes.....	1.25
Adventures of Philip Pendennis.....	1.25
The Virginians.....	1.25
Edmond, and Lovell the Widower.....	1.25
Miscellaneous Writings. Household Edition. Uniform with the Novels. Complete in 5 vols. With new Portrait. Per vol.....	1.25
This edition includes all the matter in the latest English editions, with many additions, thus making it, with the novels, the cheapest and most complete Thackeray in the market. 1. Barry Lyndon, Hogarty Diamond, &c. 2. Paris, and Irish Sketch-Books, &c. 3. Snobs, Sketches, Denis Dural, &c. 4. Four Georges, Humors, &c. 5. Catherine, Christmas Books, and Unprinted Pieces.....	1.25
THAYER'S (MRS. OLLIE) Among the Isles of Shoals.....	1.50
THOREAU'S (H. D.) Walden; or, Life in the Woods.....	2.50
Excursions in Mind and Forest. Portrait.....	2.50
The Maine Woods.....	2.50
Cap Cod.....	2.50
Letters.....	2.50
A Yankee in Canada.....	2.50
A Week on the Concord and Merrimack Rivers.....	2.50
TYLER (EDWARD B.) The Early History of Mankind.....	1.50
Primitive Culture. 2 vols.....	5.00
TYNDALL (JOHN). Faraday as a Discoverer.....	1.00
Fragments of Science for Unscientific People.....	2.50
Light and Electricity.....	1.25
Hours of Exercise in the Alps.....	2.00
Heat as a Mode of Motion.....	2.00
On Sound.....	2.00
Radiant Heat.....	2.00
Forms of Water.....	1.50
Lectures on Light.....	1.50
Proceedings at the Farewell Banquet to Prof. Tyndall.....	.50
Lessons in Electricity.....	1.00
Address before British Assoc'n at Belfast.....	.50
TYTLER (SARAH). Old Masters and their Pictures.....	1.50
Modern Painters and their Paintings.....	1.50
VOYSEY (REV. CHARLES). The Sling and the Stone. Vols. I. and V., each.....	2.75
Vols III. IV. and VI., each.....	2.75
WARNER'S (CHARLES D.) My Summer in a Garden.....	1.50
Sauterlings.....	1.50
Back-Log Studies.....	2.50
WEISS (JOHN). American Religion.....	1.50
Life of Theodore Parker. 2 vols.....	6.00
WHIFFLES (E. P.) Literature and Life.....	1.50
Essays and Reviews.....	2.50
Character and Characteristic Men.....	1.50
The Literature of the Age of Elizabeth.....	1.50
Success and its Conditions.....	1.50
Washington and the Revolution.....	.50
WHITNEY'S (MRS. A. D. T.) A Summer in Leslie Goldthwaite's Life.....	1.50
We Girls: A Home Story.....	1.50
Red Folks.....	1.50
The Other Girl.....	1.50
Pandora: A volume of Poems.....	1.50
WHITTIER'S (JOHN G.) Poems. 2 vols.....	4.00
Child Life.....	3.50

ADDRESS:

THE INDEX

321 Washington St., Boston.

Digitized by Google

$66 a week in your own town. Terms and $5 outfit free. Address H. HALLITT & Co., Portland, Maine.

$5 to $20 per day at home. Samples worth $5 free. Address STINSON & Co., Portland, Maine.

GOLD Any worker can make $17 a day at home. Costly outfit free. Address TRUM & Co., Augusta, Maine.

FOR SALE.—STEAMBOAT with or without power. Length 25 ft., beam 7 ft. Apply to WILLIAM PHILLIPS, Grain Elevator, East Boston.

TO BOOK-BUYERS

Please examine the revised list of POPULAR BOOKS on the opposite side of this page. Any OBTAINABLE BOOK NOT IN THIS LIST will be furnished to order. Address THE INDEX, 231 Washington St., Boston.

E. A. SAWTELLE,
PIANO-FORTE TUNER.

Fifteen years' experience. Satisfaction warranted. Organs skillfully tuned and regulated. Orders left at THE INDEX office, or at Oliver Ditson & Co.'s, 451 Washington St., Boston.

THE INDEX
IN ENGLAND.

THE INDEX will be forwarded free by post to any part of the United Kingdom on receipt of an annual subscription of Fifteen Shillings. For Half Year, Eight Shillings. Remittances should be made by International P.O. Order payable to Francis Ellingwood Abbot.

Address THE INDEX,
231 Washington Street, Boston, U.S.A.

MARCH MAGAZINES
TO LOAN.

All the leading Literary and Scientific Magazines to loan to anybody. The reading of a dozen for the cost of one.

New Books and Standard Books, almost any you choose to ask for, and as many copies of any book as may be demanded.

Loaned to all parts of the United States. Immense catalogues of old and new books offered at great bargains for cash, or in exchange for other books.

AMERICAN BOOK EXCHANGE,
35 Beekman Street, New York.

Booksellers and Newsdealers act as our agents.

PENNSYLVANIA RAILROAD.
GREAT THROUGH LINE
AND UNITED STATES MAIL ROUTE.

The attention of the travelling public is respectfully invited to some of the merits of this great highway, in the confident assertion and belief that no other line can offer equal inducements as a route of through travel. In

CONSTRUCTION AND EQUIPMENT

THE PENNSYLVANIA RAILROAD stands confessedly at the head of American railways. The track is double the entire length of the line, of steel rails laid on heavy oak ties, which are embedded in a foundation of rock ballast eighteen inches in depth. All bridges are of iron or stone, and built upon the most approved plans. Its passenger cars, while eminently safe and substantial, are at the same time models of comfort and elegance.

THE SAFETY APPLIANCES in use on this line well illustrate the far-seeing and liberal policy of its management, in accordance with which the utility only of an improvement and not its cost has been the question of consideration. Among many may be noticed

The Block System of Safety Signals, Janney Coupler, Buffer, and Platform, The Wharton Patent Switch, and the Westinghouse Air-Brake, forming in conjunction with a perfect double track and road-bed a combination of safeguards against accidents which have rendered them practically impossible.

Pullman Palace Cars are run on all Express Trains from New York, Philadelphia, Baltimore, and Washington, to Chicago, Cincinnati, Louisville, Indianapolis, and St. Louis.

WITHOUT CHANGE, and to all the principal points in the far West and South with but one change of cars. Connections are made in Union Depots, and are assured to all important points.

The Scenery of the Pennsylvania Route is admitted to be unsurpassed in the world for grandeur, beauty, and variety. Superior refreshment facilities are provided. Employes are courteous and attentive, and it is an inevitable result that a trip by the Pennsylvania Railroad must form

A Pleasing and Memorable Experience. Tickets for sale at the lowest rates at the Ticket Offices of the Company in all important cities and towns.

FRANK THOMSON, L. P. FARMER,
General Manager, General Passenger Agent,
C. S. HALDEMAN, New England Agent,
203 and 205 Washington St., Boston, Mass.

GIRLS'—5 nice perforated mottoes for fancy work 10 cts. J. W. RUSSELL, Newton, Mass.

SENT FREE on application—BRIGGS & BRO.'S Flower and Vegetable Catalogue. Our large crops enable us to SELL SEEDS LOW. ROCHESTER, N.Y., or CHICAGO, ILLS.

WEST NEWTON

English and Classical School.

The twenty-fifth school year of this Family and Day School for both sexes will begin WEDNESDAY, Sept. 19, 1877. For Circular and information apply to

NATH'L T. ALLEN,
West Newton, Mass.

THE INDEX AS AN
ADVERTISING MEDIUM.

Testimony of one who has tried it.

FL. RENOR, Iowa, Jan. 5, 1878.

... THE INDEX is the best advertising medium which I have tried...

E. C. WALKER.

PHOTOGRAPHS OF
COL. INGERSOLL!

Down to hard times prices. Cards, 15 cents each; 2 for 25 cents; 5 for 50 cents. Cabinet size, 25 cent each; 2 for 40 cents. Send stamp for club list of Freethought and Scientific papers.

E. C. WALKER,
Lock-Box B, Florence, Iowa.

BOUND VOLUMES OF THE INDEX for

1 8 7 7,

Complete for the Past Year, are now ready for delivery at this Office. Sent by express at the purchaser's expense. Price $3.00, in advance. Address THE INDEX, 231 Washington Street, Boston.

THE THEOLOGICAL WORKS

—OF—

THOMAS PAINE.

Complete in one volume, and containing the "Age of Reason," the "Discourse to the Society of Theophilanthropists," the "Examination of Passages of the New Testament," the "Thoughts on a Future State," the "Reply to the Bishop of Llandaff," etc., etc. Price, $2.00. Sent by mail on receipt of price by

THE INDEX,
231 Washington Street, Boston.

THE BEST PORTRAIT OF
THOMAS PAINE.

Engraved by the famous W. Sharpe from Romney's celebrated portrait—

Heliotype Copy

by James R. Osgood & Co., of Boston. This is a beautiful work of art, and by all odds the very best likeness of Thomas Paine to be found. It is 10x8 inches in size, and will be mailed post-paid on receipt of $1.00. Address THE INDEX, 231 Washington Street, Boston.

NEW SUBSCRIBERS WANTED.
—
PREMIUMS

for NEW SUBSCRIBERS—$3.20 to be remitted in advance with each name sent in.

For One New Subscriber.

Either a complete set of Index Tracts; a bound copy of the Report of the "Centennial Congress of Liberals" at Philadelphia, July 4, 1876; any three Reports of the "Annual Meetings of the Free Religious Association" since 1871; Huxley's Origin of Species; John W. Chadwick's Book of Poems; or any obtainable book not costing over $1.

For Two New Subscribers.

Either a set of photographs of "leading Index writers"; a copy of Ingersoll's Lectures; a copy of Freedom and Fellowship in Religion—a collection of Essays and Addresses by O. B. Frothingham, W. J. Potter, John Weiss, T. W. Higginson, F. E. Abbot, and others; Darwin's Origin of Species; Draper's Conflict between Religion and Science; Huxley's Lay Sermons; a bound copy of THE INDEX for 1871 or 1872; Benan's Life of Jesus; or any obtainable book not costing over $3.

For Three New Subscribers.

Either Longfellow's or Bryant's complete Poetical Works (illustrated); Darwin's Descent of Man; Tyndall's Fragments of Science; Lewes' Physical Basis of Mind; Frothingham's Transcendentalism in New England; Shakespeare's Complete Works; Frothingham's Life of Theodore Parker; or any obtainable book not costing over $5.

For Five New Subscribers.

Either Pierce's Memoirs and Letters of Charles Sumner; Emerson's Prose Works; Buckle's History of Civilization; Spencer's Psychology; Humboldt's Cosmos; Fiske's Cosmic Philosophy; Johnson's Oriental Religions, Vol. I., on "India"; Vol. II., on "China"; or any other obtainable book not costing over $5.

For Ten New Subscribers.

Either Webster's or Worcester's Dictionary (unabridged); Longfellow's Complete Works (300 illustrations, full gilt); either Dickens' or Waverley Novels, complete in six volumes, and illustrated; Strauss' New Life of Jesus; or any other book or books not costing over $12.

Address THE INDEX, 231 Washington Street, Boston.

MISS DEVEREUX' BOARD-
ING AND DAY SCHOOL FOR YOUNG
LADIES AND CHILDREN, at Irvington-on-Hudson, will re-open on Monday, Sept. 17, 1877. Miss Devereux refers, among others, to the following gentlemen: Rev. Orville Dewey, Sheffield, Mass.; Mr. A. C. Richards, Irvington, N.Y.; Mr. H. B. Bishop, Irvington, N.Y.; Mr. John E. Williams, Pres. Met. Nat. Bank, N.Y.; Mr. Wm. H. Orton, Pres. W. U. Telegraph Co., N.Y.; Mr. Moses H. Grinnell, N.Y.

POSITIVISM!
AN EPITOME OF THE

Positive Philosophy and Religion,

Published by the Society of Humanity in the city of New York, contains the clearest statement of the subject ever made; also, Harriet Martineau's masterly defence of her religious convictions; and the Positive Classification of the Sciences, by T. B. Wakeman, etc., etc.

Send for it (enclosing 25 cents in postage stamps) to

HUGH BYRON BROWN,
President of the Society,
No. 141 8th St., N.Y. City.

LECTURES AND SERMONS.

BY
JOHN W. CHADWICK.

THIRD SERIES.

1. The Simplicity of True Religion.
2. The Rising Faith.
3. Fate and Freedom.
4. The Child Jesus.
5. The Angel Song.

The following numbers of the first and second series can also be supplied: Best Use of Sunday, Higher Reverence, Self-Respect, God on Our Side, Economy and Waste, Piety of Modern Science, Immortal Life, Moral Aspects of Belief in Immortality, Idealizing the Meal, The Coming Man, A National Church.

Sent to any address, postage paid, at 5 cents per copy, by

JAMES MILLER,
779 Broadway, New York.

A NOTABLE TREATISE.
WOMAN SUFFRAGE.

THE COUNTERFEIT AND THE TRUE:

Reasons for Opposing Both.

BY

REAR-ADMIRAL MAXSE,

Of the British Royal Navy.

This is a little book of 74 pages, with neat paper covers, published in London, and presenting the reasons why a cultivated English gentleman is opposed to Woman Suffrage. It ought to be read and pondered by all who are interested in that question, on either side. Price, 25 cents. For sale at the office of THE INDEX, 231 Washington St., Boston.

GOOD PHOTOGRAPHS

OF

O. B. FROTHINGHAM,

T. W. HIGGINSON,

W. J. POTTER,

W. H. SPENCER,

F. W. NEWMAN,

CHAS. VOYSEY,

A. W. STEVENS,

R. H. RANNEY,

F. E. ABBOT,

Are now for sale at the office of THE INDEX, and will be mailed postpaid to any address on receipt of price. Single Photographs, 25 cents each; complete Set of Nine Photographs, $1.50.

Address, THE INDEX,
No. 231 Washington St., Boston, Mass.

FREE RELIGIOUS ASSOCIATION.

Send to Office at 231 Washington St., Boston, Mass., for

TRACTS.

I. TAXATION OF CHURCH PROPERTY, by James Parton. 5 cts.; ten, 20 cts.; one hundred, $1.50.

II. THE BIBLE AND SCIENCE, by John Weiss.

III. THE SYMPATHY OF RELIGIONS, by T. W. Higginson. Enlarged edition.

IV. TRANSCENDENTALISM, by Theodore Parker. Never before published.

V. THE PUBLIC SCHOOL QUESTION, as understood by a Catholic American citizen (Bishop McQuaid) and by a Liberal American citizen (F. E. Abbot). (Two Horticultural Hall Lectures, Feb. 18 and 20, 1876.)

VI. HOW SHALL WE KEEP SUNDAY? An Answer in Four Parts: 1. Sunday in the Bible. 2. Sunday in Church History. 3. Sunday in the Massachusetts Laws. 4. The Workingman's Sunday. By Charles E. Whipple, Minot J. Savage, Charles E. Pratt, and Wm. C. Gannett.

Nos. II, III, IV, V, VI, 10 cts. each; ten for 50 cts.; one hundred, $5.

REASON AND REVELATION, by W. J. Potter. 5 cts. (Ten for 50 cts.; one hundred, $1.50.)

PROCEEDINGS OF THE F. R. A. ANNUAL MEETINGS for 1872, '73, '74, '75, '76, and '77, Five cents each.

FREEDOM AND FELLOWSHIP IN RELIGION, a volume of essays and addresses representing the F. R. A. platform. $1.50.

SEND ONE DOLLAR

For a handsome Certificate of Membership as an

ANNUAL MEMBER

of the NATIONAL LIBERAL LEAGUE. For TWENTY-FIVE DOLLARS, a still larger Certificate of Membership as a

LIFE MEMBER,

Will be sent to any person; and individuals cannot render more efficient assistance to the National Liberal League than by making themselves Annual or Life Members of it.

The following extracts from the Constitution of the National Liberal League explain the privileges of membership:—

ARTICLE IV.—Any person who shall pay one dollar into the treasury shall be entitled to a certificate, signed by the President and Secretary, as an annual member of the National Liberal League. Any person who shall pay twenty-five dollars or more into the treasury shall be entitled to a similar certificate as a life-member. All the persons present as members at the Centennial Congress of Liberals, at which this Constitution was adopted, are hereby declared permanent or charter-members of the National Liberal League.

ARTICLE V.—All charter-members and life-members of the National Liberal League, and all duly accredited delegates from local auxiliary Liberal Leagues organized in accordance with the provisions of this Constitution, shall be entitled to seats and votes in the Annual Congress. Annual members of the National Liberal League shall be entitled to seats, but not to votes, in the Annual Congress.

Address NATIONAL LIBERAL LEAGUE,
231 Washington Street, Boston.

ORGANIZE!

CHARTERS

For Local Auxiliary Liberal Leagues, conferring the privilege of representation by five delegates in the Annual Congress of the National Liberal League, will be promptly sent on application, according to the following provisions of Constitution of the same:—

LOCAL AUXILIARY LIBERAL LEAGUES.

ARTICLE XIII.—The Board of Directors shall have authority, as often as they receive a written application signed by ten or more persons and accompanied by ten dollars, to issue a charter for the formation of a local auxiliary Liberal League.

ARTICLE XV.—Local auxiliary Liberal Leagues organized under charters issued by the Board of Directors shall be absolutely independent in the administration of their own local affairs. The effect of their charters shall be simply to unite them in cordial fellowship and efficient cooperation of the freest kind with the National Liberal League and with other local Leagues. All votes of the Annual Congress, and all communications of the Board of Directors, shall possess no more authority or influence over them than lies in the intrinsic wisdom of the words themselves.

ARTICLE XVI.—Every local auxiliary Liberal League organized in accordance with the provisions of this Constitution shall be entitled to send its President and Secretary and three other members as delegates to the Annual Congress.

These Charters are beautifully printed on the best of paper. Adorned with the handsome Seal of the National Liberal League, they will, if tastefully framed, make a fine ornament for any hall.

Address NATIONAL LIBERAL LEAGUE
231 Washington Street, Boston.

CIRCULATE IT
EVERYWHERE!

The new Liberal League Tract of 24 pages, entitled,

"PATRIOTIC ADDRESS,"

contains:

1. PATRIOTIC ADDRESS of the National Liberal League to the people of the United States.
2. CHIEF RESOLUTIONS of the League.
3. PROTEST of the League against shutting the International Exhibition on Sundays.
4. CONSTITUTION and List of Officers.
5. EXTRAITS from Approving Letters by Distinguished Citizens.
This is the Liberal's best CAMPAIGN DOCUMENT in the great impending contest over amending the Constitution of the United States with reference to the school question. It should be in the hands of EVERY VOTER, and has been published expressly for gratuitous distribution by earnest friends of State Secularisation.

Local Liberal Leagues

Cannot do better than to order this Tract by the quantity, as an excellent auxiliary in their local agitation.

INDIVIDUAL LIBERALS

Cannot do better than to use them privately, as opportunity offers.

Promptly mailed, at the bare cost of paper, press-work, and postage, on the following terms:—

TEN COPIES, 15
TWENTY-FIVE COPIES, 40
FIFTY " 75
ONE HUNDRED " 1.50
TWO HUNDRED " 3.00
THREE HUNDRED " 5.00
FIVE HUNDRED " 8.00
ONE THOUSAND " 12.00

N. B.—Packages of over 100 copies will be sent by express at the expense of the purchaser, without any charge for postage.

Address NATIONAL LIBERAL LEAGUE
231 Washington Street, Boston.

The Index.

Three Dollars a Year.

LIBERTY AND LIGHT.

Single Copies Seven Cents.

VOLUME 9.

BOSTON, MASS., THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 28, 1878.

WHOLE NO. 427.

NATIONAL LIBERAL LEAGUE.

PLATFORM

For the Presidential Election of 1880,

ADOPTED AT ROCHESTER, N.Y., OCT. 26, 1877.

1. TOTAL SEPARATION OF CHURCH AND STATE, to be guaranteed by amendment of the United States Constitution: including the equitable taxation of church property, secularization of the public schools, abrogation of Sabbatarian laws, abolition of chaplaincies, prohibition of public appropriations for religious purposes, and all other measures necessary to the same general end.

2. NATIONAL PROTECTION FOR NATIONAL CITIZENS, in their equal civil, political, and religious rights: to be guaranteed by amendment of the United States Constitution, and afforded through the United States courts.

3. UNIVERSAL EDUCATION THE BASIS OF UNIVERSAL SUFFRAGE IN THIS SECULAR REPUBLIC: to be guaranteed by amendment of the United States Constitution, requiring every State to maintain a thoroughly secularized public school system, and to permit no child within its limits to grow up without a good elementary education.

N. B.—The nomination of candidates upon the above platform was postponed to a future Congress of the National Liberal League.

THE DEMANDS OF LIBERALISM.

1. We demand that churches and other ecclesiastical property shall no longer be exempt from just taxation.

2. We demand that the employment of chaplains in Congress, in State Legislatures, in the navy and militia, and in prisons, asylums, and all other institutions supported by public money, shall be discontinued.

3. We demand that all public appropriations for educational and charitable institutions of a sectarian character shall cease.

4. We demand that all religious services now sustained by the government shall be abolished; and especially that the use of the Bible in the public schools, whether ostensibly as a text-book or avowedly as a book of religious worship, shall be prohibited.

5. We demand that the appointment, by the President of the United States or by the Governors of the various States, of all religious festivals and fairs shall wholly cease.

6. We demand that the judicial oath in the courts and in all other departments of the government shall be abolished, and that simple affirmation under the pains and penalties of perjury shall be established in its stead.

7. We demand that all laws directly or indirectly enforcing the observance of Sunday as the Sabbath shall be repealed.

8. We demand that all laws looking to the enforcement of "Christian" morality shall be abrogated, and that all laws shall be conformed to the requirements of natural morality, equal rights, and impartial liberty.

9. We demand that not only in the Constitutions of the United States and of the several States, but also in the practical administration of the same, no privilege or advantage shall be conceded to Christianity or any other special religion; that our entire political system shall be founded and administered on a purely secular basis; and that whatever changes shall prove necessary to this end shall be consistently, unflinchingly, and promptly made.

The above is the platform of THE INDEX, so far as the editor is individually concerned. But no other person, and no organization, can be justly or truthfully held responsible for it without his or its explicit approval.

FRANCIS E. ABBOT.

RESOLUTION

ADOPTED BY THE NATIONAL LIBERAL LEAGUE, AT PHILADELPHIA, JULY 3, 1876.

Resolved, That we accept the offer of the Boston INDEX to be our official organ of communication with the public, for the publication of announcements, acknowledgments, and other official papers of the Board of Directors; but that we assume no responsibility for anything else published in its columns and claim no control or influence in its general editorial management.

GLIMPSES.

ANOTHER LIBERAL LEAGUE has been formed at Bay City, Michigan, auxiliary to the National League. President, S. M. Green; Secretary, N. H. Webster; Treasurer, J. A. Webster. This makes the thirtieth auxiliary League organized. There will be many more soon. The movement is growing.

MR. HARVEY BRYANT, of Deposit, N.Y., who is eighty-three years of age, writes to Mr. Green: "Now is the proper time to organize the free and independent thinkers (we have a few here) into Leagues; and if you will send me instructions and the necessary papers, I will see what can be done here for the liberal cause." What a lesson of unselfish activity is set by this aged veteran, who seeks to plant seeds whose harvest he can scarcely hope to see! For his noble example there is at least one who is grateful.

WITH THE brief legend—"how churches use their exemption,"—an unknown friend encloses this extract from the Boston Globe of February 20: "A short course of lectures and concerts has been arranged for every Wednesday evening, in the People's Church, at the corner of Columbus Avenue and Berkeley Street, beginning with a telephone lecture and exhibition this evening by Prof. William Robinson; to be followed with lectures by Chaplain McCabe, of Chicago, Mark Trafton, Col. Homer B. Sprague, of Brooklyn; readings by Mrs. Emma Manning Huntley and Mrs. H. S. McKechnie, and a concert by Mrs. F. P. Whitney, Mrs. Charles E. Whitney, Mr. J. H. Robinson, Mr. S. N. Dickerman, Mr. Charles L. Capen, and Mr. Arthur B. Whiting." Of course these entertainments are given to raise funds; yet the churches claim to be "unproductive property"!

TO HEAR Ralph Waldo Emerson in public is an opportunity seldom permitted now, and eagerly seized by all who can appreciate it. At the Old South Church, last Monday, he gave a lecture on "The Fortune of the Republic"; and it was worthy of his palmiest days. There is no living American so venerated and loved as Emerson by the forward-looking spirits of his time. The grand simplicity of his character lends weight and dignity to his lightest word; and it was impossible to listen to him without deep emotion, as he once more bore testimony to the supreme value of the moral element in men and nations. His sublime hopefulness and faith in human nature, despite all dark symptoms of actual evil, touched the noblest chords in every listening soul; and the sunlight which streamed on his figure alone through the window illumined him less than the inner light which shone out in every lineament. He has loved the republic; and, while the republic stands, it shall with deathless affection love him.

THE SPRINGFIELD Republican of January 28 had this very characteristic paragraph: "A correspondent desires to protest at some length against the project of putting 'God in the Constitution.' We perfectly sympathize with his opposition, but it hardly seems a vital issue at present. THE INDEX of Boston is doing about all the furious fighting on the 'anti' side, on the part of the non-Christians in behalf of the liberty of conscience." That fairly illustrates the degree of the average public intelligence on this subject, even among the liberally inclined. "Not a vital issue"! Why, at that very moment, before the Judiciary Committee of the United States Senate, an amendment had been for two weeks pending which would put the Bible into the Constitution, and with it all that the Bible teaches about God and Christ! It is too true that THE INDEX is pretty nearly alone in protesting against this infamous measure; but in this lethargy of the public conscience respecting the secularity of the Constitution lies the one great danger to their religious liberties.

HON. GEORGE F. HOAR, United States Senator from Massachusetts, is quoted in the January Word as having written thus to Mr. Heywood: "The line of distinction between honest argument intended to convince people that their opinions, laws, or social and domestic arrangements are wrong, however mistaken or even injurious in their results such arguments may be, and writings designed to inflame evil purposes and minister to gross and depraved tastes, is a line which I think our Massachusetts jurors would be pretty sure to see and to keep. I have never heard anything of you which would lead me to believe you would knowingly write anything of the latter class, however strongly I might disapprove some of your opinions." For pointing out this same "line of distinction," and urging the necessity of legally recognizing it, we have been venomously misrepresented and abused by the very men we were prompt to defend in these columns. We have no retort to make; we summon their own consciences, if they have any, to make our defence against themselves.

LEO XIII. takes the place of Pius IX. But it matters little who wears the tiara; Rome has but one interest—her own supremacy, and but one policy—devotion to her own interest. Says the New York Tribune: "The so-called Ultramontane party embraces practically the entire college, and the liberal element is little more than a light and airy fragment of the brain. None of the possible candidates who have been named as liberals have any claim to that title. Ultramontanism, as a distinct school of doctrine or policy in the Roman Catholic Church, long ago ceased to exist; and Roman Catholic liberalism, which never amounted to much at any time, is equally a thing of the past. The most remarkable work of the late Pope was the extinguishment of factions or parties within the Church; and the Roman-Catholic body is probably more closely united to-day, both in faith and policy, than it has been at any previous period, since the first ages of its organization. The Syllabus and the Vatican Council made a great storm in the world; but whoever studies the condition of the Church must perceive that they have had an important influence upon its domestic affairs. And they were only the crowning labors of a policy of consolidation which Pius IX. pursued with extraordinary zeal and success throughout his long pontificate."

THE BOSTON Advertiser of February 21 favorably noticed Mrs. Neymann's lecture of the preceding evening at the Parker Memorial Building: "Mrs. Clara Neymann, a German lady, well known in New York and the West as a liberal lecturer, appeared at the Parker Fraternity Hall on Appleton Street last evening before a goodly company of the friends of liberal religion, and gave a lecture, or more properly read an essay, on the topic, 'What is Religion?' The lady is apparently young, and is of prepossessing appearance, while her delivery is clear and sweet, with little or no trace of the German accent in pronunciation. Her paper was a thoughtful discussion of the differences between the adherents of revealed religion, or the dogmatic element, as the lady expressed it, and the liberals. The well-known ground which the latter occupy was clearly defined, the foundation principle of their disagreement with the believers in a revealed religion being not in aiming at different ends, but in different means of attaining those ends. While the latter, according to the lecturer, started with the unknown, by a misuse of the imagination, and from this evolved the explanation of the known and the practical duties of life, the rationalists began with the known, and by the experiences of thousands of years reached safe conclusions in regard to life and duty. Religion, then, according to the liberal stand-point, was an intelligent knowledge of the duties of life and their illustration in daily practice, based on this conviction of their claims from the constitution of things."

NATIONAL LIBERAL LEAGUE.

OFFICERS.

President.	RANCIS E. ABBOT.Boston, Mass.
Vice-Presidents.
HON. E. P. HURLBUT.Albany, N.Y.
HON. SAMUEL E. SEWALL.Boston, Mass.
HON. NATHANIEL HOLMES.St. Louis, Mo.
HON. BENNY BOOTH.Chicago, Ill.
HON. GEORGE W. JULIAN.Irrington, Ind.
HON. ELIZUR WRIGHT.Boston, Mass.
MR. O. B. FROTHINGHAM.New York, N.Y.
MR. WM. J. POTTER.New Bedford, Mass.
MR. R. P. HOLLOWELL.Boston, Mass.
MR. JAMES PABTON.Newburyport, Mass.
MR. F. SCHUENEMANN-POTT.San Francisco, Cal.
HON. ABRAHAM PAYNE.Boston, Mass.
REV. M. J. MAVEGE.Chicago, Ill.
RABBI B. FELSETHAL.Chicago, Ill.
REV. W. H. SPENCER.Spaulding, Wis.
MR. SAMUEL L. HILL.Florence, Mass.
MR. E. W. MEDDAUGH.Detroit, Mich.
MR. KARL HEINZEN.Editor of "Der Pioneer," Boston.
MR. HORACE SEAVEE.Editor of the "Investigator," Boston.
RABBI ISAAC M. WISE.Editor of "American Israelite," Cincinnati.
MR. D. M. BENNETT.Editor of the "Truth Seeker," New York.
MR. MORITZ ELLINGER.Editor of "Jewish Times," New York.
MR. R. F. UNDERWOOD.Thornville, Mass.
REV. ROBERT COLLYER.Chicago, Ill.
DR. ROBERT G. INGERSOLL.Chicago, Ill.
DR. T. L. BROWN.Binghamton, N.Y.
GOS. E. S. MCCORMICK.Pittsburgh, Pa.
ELDER F. W. EVANS.Mount Lebanon, N.Y.
MRS. ELIZABETH THOMPSON.New York City.
MRS. AMY POST.Rochester, N.Y.
MRS. ELIZABETH STANTON.Tombury, N.Y.
MRS. SALLIE HOLLEY.Lottsburgh, Va.

Secretary.	W. H. HAMLEN.231 Washington Street, Boston, Mass.
Assistant Secretary.	MISS JANE F. TITCOMB.141 Chandler St., Boston.
Treasurer.	J. A. J. WILCOX.Pemberton Square, Boston.

Board of Directors.	F. E. ABBOT. W. H. HAMLEN.
	J. A. J. WILCOX. H. L. GREEN.
	D. G. CRANDON.

Executive Committee.
Alabama.J. H. HALLEY, Selma.
Arkansas.JOHN ARRENS, Monticello.
California.J. L. HATON, San Francisco.
Colorado.DAVID T. BEALS, Grenada.
Connecticut.GEORGE W. BALDWIN, Bridgeport.
Delaware.JOSEPH D. GUELST, Greenville.
Florida.T. D. GIDDINGS, Enterprise.
Georgia.DR. A. A. BELL, Madison.
Illinois.L. C. UNDERWOOD, Indianapolis.
Indiana.J. C. MICHENER, Adel.
Iowa.JOHN FARNSWORTH, Fort Scott.
Kansas.S. B. ULAKK, Wilsonville.
Kentucky.EMERSON BENTLEY, New Orleans.
Louisiana.DR. W. H. BROWN, Bangor.
Massachusetts.W. H. BAYWARD, Boston.
Michigan.KARL SCHNEIDER, Detroit.
Minnesota.J. B. BARRETT, Minneapolis.
Missouri.J. E. PETERSON, St. Louis.
Nebraska.W. BILLINGSLEY, Lincoln.
Nevada.V. G. BARRETT, White Rock.
New Hampshire.WILLIAM LITTLE, Manchester.
New York.H. L. GREEN (chairman), Salamanca.
North Carolina.J. W. THORNE, Warren.
Ohio.E. D. STARK, Cleveland.
Oregon.SAMUEL COLE, Astoria.
Pennsylvania.G. W. BALDWIN, Lincolnville.
Rhode Island.GEORGE LEWIS, Providence.
South Carolina.P. W. FULLER, Columbia.
Tennessee.DR. E. H. PRIOR, Chattanooga.
Texas.DR. A. DUNBAR, Greenville.
Vermont.R. L. HAUGHTON, North Bennington.
Virginia.L. SPAULDING, Norfolk.
West Virginia.A. M. DENT, Weston.
Wisconsin.MOSEAT G. SPENCER, Milwaukee.
Dakota.D. P. WILCOX, Janison.
District of Columbia.W. H. DOOLITTLE, Washington.
Idaho.W. FERGUSON, Provo City.
Wyoming.NORMAN S. FORTER.

Finance Committee.
D. G. CRANDON, Chairman.Chelsea, Mass.
MRS. SARAH E. OTIS.151 Warren Avenue, Boston.
HARLAN P. HYDE.231 Washington St., Boston.

LOCAL AUXILIARY LIBERAL LEAGUES

To which Charters have been issued by the National Liberal League.

LINCOLN, NEBRASKA. —President, D. A. Cline; Secretary, Dr. A. S. von Mansfeld.
Issued to L. W. Billingsley, D. A. Cline, A. S. von Mansfeld, Julius Philsterer, Joseph Wittman, W. E. Copeland, Benj. F. Fisher, Sidney Lyons, L. Meyer, G. E. Church, and others.
JACKSONVILLE, ILLINOIS. —[Officers not reported.]
Issued to A. W. Cadman, Mrs. D. M. Cadman, S. W. Sample, David Prince, E. A. Nance, C. H. Dunbrack, W. Hackman, Jennie W. Meek, Emma Meek, Hattie E. Hammond, and others.
PHILADELPHIA, PENNSYLVANIA. —President, Carrie B. Kilgore; Secretary, Joseph Bohrer.
Issued to the President and Secretary on behalf of the Philadelphia Liberal League.
MISHKOOT, WISCONSIN. —President, Lauriston Damon; Secretary, Anton Braasch.
Issued to Anton Braasch, Fred. Claussen, J. Runge, Jr., Louis Zander, S. Damon, Ferd. Heyroth, Louis Heyroth, Fred. Zander, Fred. Halberg, Ernst Clusen, and Fred. Braasch.
CHelsea, MASSACHUSETTS. —President, D. Goddard Crandon; Secretary, J. H. W. Toohy.
Issued to the President and Secretary on behalf of the Chelsea Liberal League.
STOCKTON, CALIFORNIA. —[Officers not reported.]
Issued to Chas. Hays, G. C. Hyatt, F. C. Lawrence, A. T. Hudson, Chas. Williams, W. F. Freeman, J. Grundike, J. Harrison, T. C. Mallon, A. F. Lochead, and others.
DENVER, COLORADO. —President, Orson Brooks; Secretary, J. H. Cotton.
Issued to the President and Secretary on behalf of the Liberal League of Denver.
FAIRBANKS, ALASKA. —President, John S. Verity; Secretary, Robert Cooper.
Issued to Horace Seaver, J. P. Mendum, Elizur Wright, B. F. Underwood, David Kirkwood, James Harris, G. H. Foster, H. P. Hyde, Robert Cooper, S. R. Urbino, John S. Verity.
PALMYRA, NEW YORK. —President, J. M. Jones; Secretary, C. C. Everson.
Issued to J. M. Jones, C. C. Everson, Henry M. North, A. R. Sherman, Joseph Fritts, L. B. Keeler, J. J. White, B. H. Sherman, Henry Gardner, Samuel Cosad, and others.
BOSTON, MASSACHUSETTS. —President, F. E. ABBOT; Secretary, Miss J. P. Titcomb.
Issued to the President and Secretary on behalf of the First Liberal League of Boston, Mass.

NEW PHILADELPHIA, OHIO.—President, George Riker; Secretary, C. M. Rittenhouse.

Issued to C. M. Rittenhouse, George Riker, J. C. Price, Daniel Korns, P. W. Himes, John Arn, Philip Gintz, A. H. Brown, Jacob Miller, L. A. Cornet.

TITUSVILLE, PENNSYLVANIA.—President, William Barnard; Secretary, C. M. Hayes.

Issued to the President and Secretary on behalf of the Titusville Liberal League.

HUDSON, MICHIGAN.—President, Dr. Levi E. Peirson; Secretary, Dr. F. O. Baker.

Issued to Levi E. Peirson, A. D. Armstrong, James S. Bedel, Miles C. Beach, W. R. Norris, R. H. Armstrong, E. W. S. Johnson, E. M. Brown, G. L. Harceron, Philip Sewall.

CATTARAUGUS COUNTY, NEW YORK.—President, H. L. Green; Corresponding Secretary, John Hammond.

Issued to the President and Secretary on behalf of the Cattaraugus County Liberal League.

NEW HAVEN, CONNECTICUT.—[Officers not yet reported.]

Issued to E. M. Sherman, W. W. Stow, F. A. Hermande, T. F. Hamilton, D. M. Hamilton, W. F. Hoppson, E. R. Whiting, E. K. Seaman, A. C. Harrison, R. F. P. Shepard, and others.

ST. JOSEPH, MISSOURI.—President, P. V. Wise; Secretary, H. Brunning.

Issued to the President and Secretary on behalf of the St. Joseph Liberal League.

NEW YORK, NEW YORK.—President, Hugh B. Brown; Secretary, A. L. Rawson.

Issued to T. B. Wakeman, Henry Evans, A. L. Rawson, Hugh B. Brown, E. Langerfeld, D. S. Plumb, O. E. Browning, Mrs. Eliza Erving, Miss E. W. McAdams, Mrs. O. E. Langerfeld, on behalf of the Society of Humanity.

ROCHESTER, NEW YORK.—President, Mrs. Amy Post; Secretary, Willet E. Post.

Issued to Benj. Greeng, Mrs. Amy Post, Willet E. Post, Emily G. Beebe, Dr. Sherman, Mrs. Barker, Clement Austin, Wm. H. Gibbs, Dr. C. D. Dake, and others.

TOMPKINS COUNTY, NEW YORK.—President, Dr. John Winslow; Secretary, Myron E. Bishop.

Issued to C. W. Ames, Wm. A. Anthony, Geo. Arnold, M. E. Bishop, H. Bool, W. Dennis, Isaac Flagg, B. W. Franklin, C. Gardner, W. Hutchins, and others.

NEW YORK, NEW YORK.—President, A. L. Rawson; Secretary, Porter C. Bliss.

Issued to the President and Secretary on behalf of the Manhattan Liberal Club.

CLEVELAND, OHIO.—President, E. D. Stark; Secretary, Mrs. M. B. Ambler.

Issued to E. D. Stark, Mrs. Louisa Southworth, B. White, W. A. Madison, S. E. Adams, Daniel B. Tilden, W. Galen Smith, Walter F. Johnson, Thomas Jones, and Mrs. M. B. Ambler.

MILWAUKEE, WISCONSIN.—President, Robert C. Spencer; Secretary, William A. Boyd.

Issued to the President and Secretary on behalf of the First Liberal League of Milwaukee.

JEFFERSON LIBERAL LEAGUE, ROCHESTER, NEW YORK.—President, Moses Hays; Secretaries, Fred. Hebard and J. B. Pike.

Issued to L. Garson, N. O. Tiffany, Adolph Roth, J. W. Roberts, R. F. Smith, Julius Rothhult, A. C. Allen, C. B. Strong, De L. Crittenden, and F. Bush.

MINNEAPOLIS, MINNESOTA.—President, S. C. Gale; Secretary, Frank J. Mead.

Issued to the President, Vice-President, Secretary, and Treasurer, on behalf of the First Liberal League of Minneapolis.

FLORENCE, IOWA.—President, Byron McQuin; Secretary, E. C. Walker.

Issued to the President and Secretary on behalf of the Liberal League of Florence, Iowa.

WEST MERIDEN, CONNECTICUT.—President, N. F. Griswold; Secretary, Miss Emily J. Leonard.

Issued to W. W. Lee, Edwin Dayton, E. L. Roys, C. C. Munn, N. W. Pomeroy, N. F. Griswold, Mrs. F. L. Smith, Marion L. Pomeroy, Joseph Frankowski, Mrs. J. Frankowski, and Emily J. Leonard.

MONTGOMERY COUNTY, OHIO.—President, A. McGill; Secretary, J. B. Barry.

Issued to the President and Secretary on behalf of the National Military Home Liberal League.

MAINTOWOOD, WISCONSIN.—President, John A. Smith; Secretary, George B. Byron.

Issued to J. A. Smith, L. Mendik, G. B. Byron, F. Heinemann, F. Ransch, F. Kostomolatsky, F. Stirn, F. Kollnack, J. Mendik, L. Oberland, and others.

ALBANY, NEW YORK.—President, Thomas J. Hennessey; Secretary, Thomas Dugan.

Issued to the President and Secretary on behalf of the Albany Liberal Association.

BAY CITY, MICHIGAN.—President, S. M. Green; Secretary, N. H. Webster.

Issued to S. M. Green, N. H. Webster, J. A. Webster, G. H. Brooks, C. Baker, J. Allen, M. H. Garrells, W. Ellsworth, M. E. Root, and others.

[N. B.—Many new local Liberal Leagues have been formed which have neglected to take out charters, and therefore are not entitled to representation.]

RELIGIOUS FREEDOM AMENDMENT:

PROPOSED AS A SUBSTITUTE FOR THE

FIRST AMENDMENT TO THE U. S. CONSTITUTION.

ARTICLE I.

SECTION 1.—Neither Congress nor any State shall make any law respecting an establishment of religion, or favoring any particular form of religion, or prohibiting the free exercise thereof; or permitting in any degree a union of Church and State, or granting any special privilege, immunity, or advantage to any sect or religious body, or to any number of sects or religious bodies; or taxing the people of any State, either directly or indirectly, for the support of any sect or religious body, or of any number of sects or religious bodies; or abridging the freedom of speech or of the press, or the right of the people peaceably to assemble and to petition the Government for a redress of grievances.

SECTION 2.—No religious test shall ever be required as a condition of suffrage, or as a qualification to any office or public trust, in any State. No person shall ever be deprived of any of his or her rights, privileges or capacities, or disqualified for the performance of any public or private duty, or rendered incompetent to give evidence in any court of law or equity, in consequence of any opinions he or she may hold on the subject of religion. No person shall ever be required by law to contribute directly or indirectly to the support of any religious society or body of which he or she is not a voluntary member.

SECTION 3.—Neither the United States, nor any State, Territory, municipality, or any civil division of any State or Territory, shall levy any tax, or make any gift, grant, or appropriation, for the support, or in aid, of any church, religious sect, or denomination, or any school, seminary, or institution of learning, in which the faith or doctrines of any religious order or sect shall be taught or inculcated, or in which religious rites shall be observed; or for the support, or in aid, of any religious charity or purpose of any sect, order, or denomination whatsoever.

SECTION 4.—Congress shall have power to enforce the various provisions of this Article by appropriate legislation.

[For THE INDEX.]

The Plan of Salvation.

READ BEFORE THE SECOND RADICAL CLUB OF BOSTON, DEC. 31, 1877.

BY ELIZUR WRIGHT.

My subject is the Plan of Salvation, the core and framework of the popular religion in this part of the world; and I propose to inquire whether it fits the facts; whether it has any true relation to actual things, or is simply a work of human imagination.

This plan assumes that the whole universe was created and is governed by a personal immaterial WILL, named God; who, to please himself, created all worlds out of nothing, and of all animals man only in his own image or likeness, to inhabit one of them. It assumes that man was created innocent but sinned; that is, rebelled against his Creator, and was morally lost, resulting in his thorough wickedness, pain, and death, generation after generation, and his eternal suffering of the wrath of his Creator after death in a fiery dungeon called hell. That God from all eternity had an only begotten Son, really himself, or an essential part of himself, and when he saw that his creature man was fallen and lost, and he was angry enough with him to punish him in hell forever, he sent that Son into the world in human shape to save him; that is, to save all men who would believe he did it and would accept such salvation from the punishment of hell, by being punished with death himself. This sacrifice of his Son essentially himself to himself by himself, is God's plan of saving his own creature from his own anger. This great and incomprehensible sacrifice being made, God pardons sin in this world and will restore the sinner to his favor in a world after death.

This is a succinct statement of the "Plan of Salvation," so far as I am able to understand the presentation of it in the Orthodox Christian creeds, from the Apostles' Creed to the Thirty-nine Articles and Catechism of the Westminster Assembly of Divines. I propose to inquire how it fits the facts; what authority there is for it; how far it agrees with what we know of the universe; and especially whether historical records give it any support.

I am well aware that over this framework grow, like flowering and fruitful vines, the sweet affections, the noble virtues, the blissful and soaring hopes of our individual and social life; and that millions of the sweetest, kindest people in the world believe that if this framework or trellis be demolished, the blossoms will blast, the fruit will rot, and the vines perish. Even those of them who can no longer deny that the trellis is wholly unsubstantial, that it is supported by the vines rather than supports them, are frightened to have it touched or talked about. This is the law of human nature. Humanity, like a vine, clings to the old till the new rises to take its place. The topmost Christian minds are in this terror, not so much from remains of faith in the old trellis, as from want of faith in the possibility of a new one good for the mass. But, however painful the operation may be, the welfare of human society requires that a new faith should take the place of the old; and in the nature of things the first thing to be done is to demonstrate the true character and effect of the old in order to justify the substitution. The very fact that the lives of Christians are better than their faith, demonstrates the possibility of a better faith.

As soon as we begin to know or think at all, we see that some truths are necessary; that is, no conceivable will could have made them otherwise. They are and always have been and always will be beyond the power of any conceivable will or God to make, unmake, or change. As soon as we begin to know we recognize distance in time and space, and become absolutely certain of a certain difference between a cube and a sphere; and that no being or person could be powerful enough to make a straight line any other than the shortest distance between two points. And as we proceed perceiving and thinking, we become absolutely certain that the three angles of a triangle are always equal to two right angles; and that God, whatever we may conceive him to be, could not have made them otherwise; that he could not have made forward without backward, upward without downward, hills without valleys, pleasure without pain, joy without sorrow, life without death. We become, in fact, absolutely certain—if we can become certain of anything,—that if infinite uncreated will exists, it exists and acts subject to certain infinite, uncreated, everywhere present necessities. This being posited, the conception of uncreated matter is as easy and rational as that of uncreated will or mind. Both conceptions are beyond the grasp of finite minds. In other words, instead of being conceptions, they are assumptions of the inconceivable. The assumption of an irresistible personal will, which created everything out of nothing, because we are ourselves conscious of personal will, and some degree of freedom of choice, is not knowledge of God. It is purely an exercise of the imagination; a part of human nature of exceeding dignity and use; but which has the misfortune when too freely exercised to hide and put itself in the place of truths of far higher dignity and importance. The sublimest objects of human reverence, the forces which can contribute most effectually to govern human conduct and lead humanity towards its perfection, are the perceptible facts of the universe; and those uncreated unchangeable laws which necessitate their order and harmony, whether we look towards the infinitely great or the infinitely little, and not any imagination, however sublime, which transcends these facts. The love and worship of real Nature, universal living Nature, body and soul, is more ennobling than that of any imaginary god; witness Spinoza and a host of others whose nobility no mortal dares deny. But I forbear on this strain. It is evident enough that the plan of salvation, as I have stated it, does not fit the facts of the universe as science reveals them, and which all intelligent men and women in our day have to believe, in spite of their imaginations.

Facts are stubborn things when once ascertained. The plan of salvation now under our study, professes to be a historical religion founded on facts; and especially on certain exceptional, preternatural, or supernatural facts. The world of human history is full of pretended or alleged facts, and woe to the mind that takes all alleged facts on trust, almost equally with that which takes no alleged fact on trust. If we believe no man, we condemn ourselves to great ignorance; if we believe every man, we condemn ourselves to confusion and error. Do you say we must believe God? And God has spoken to us in a book? But it is not pretended that God speaks to us in any book except through the man who writes the book. So, before we can believe the man, we must apply the same test of truthfulness to him as a man as in any other case. Yes; and all the more strictly, if he says God speaks through him; for it is the least credible of all things that the infinite, immortal spirit and first cause in the universe, who through the universe itself speaks to all beings everywhere by all facts, motions, life, should make an exception of speaking to all men through some one man, in the words of only one of a thousand human languages. Under a rational definition of God he speaks, in a certain sense, through every man who writes or speaks, but always according to the genius of the man himself. In this sense, whether they pretended it or not, and certainly the best of them did not, he may well enough be admitted to have spoken through most of the writers of the Old and New Testaments, which contain poems, allegories, and apothegms the world cannot afford to spare, mixed with much that it can.

That God did not speak through the writers of the Old Testament, whatever they may have pretended, any more than he did through Shakespeare, or Milton, or Walt Whitman, is certain enough from the fact that these writers contradict each other; and thus if we take them as speaking by authority of God make God contradict himself. For example, some teach the immortality of the soul; others flatly deny it. God in one place commands a prophet to do what in another place he had forbidden a priest to do; and an act which for either was a violation of the morals of the New Testament. Rev. Thomas Scott, the author of a very popular commentary on the Scriptures, gets over this difficulty by saying: "It is impossible that God should actually command an immoral action; though he might command what, without such a command, would be wrong for a man to do." [See Scott's Family Bible, on Hosea 1, 2 and 3]. Such facts as these, in view of reason, are surely fatal to the special, infallible inspiration either of the author of Leviticus or of the author of the Book of Hosea. And on Scott's assumption that both were specially inspired they are fatal to the morality of God. While the Bible abounds in such facts it requires but one, no matter whether you explain it away by such Jesuitism as that above cited; or as a mere mistranslation, to upset its claim to be a unique and authoritative revelation of the Divine Will. For nothing that could waver, or by human carelessness or fraud be made to waver, in regard to right and wrong, could be worthy of such a source. One such instance is sufficient to remand the Bible to the category of human books, to be submitted before acceptance to the same scrutiny as all other writings, ancient or modern, to be taken only as a part of the light of Nature, for only what it is worth in view of all the rest.

Now, fairly interpreting it, let us see if the Bible itself, received as history, establishes the facts on which the plan of salvation is based.

It is hardly possible for credulity in this age of the world to see history in the Old Testament further back than David and Samuel. Moses is supposed to have left Egypt about the same time that Cadmus invented letters in Greece, and that was long before books were written in Greek. It is very difficult to believe that in thirty-five years of leadership of a turbulent horde in a desert, Moses could have inscribed in the present Hebrew alphabet, if it was then in existence, a work like the Pentateuch. But over and above this difficulty, we meet with another which is utterly insuperable, in the way of believing that Moses wrote the Pentateuch himself. The Pentateuch records as facts not only things which are incredible in themselves, but are doubly incredible if we suppose Moses to have been the author of the record. Moses, as a man of genius, may be supposed to have recorded, as whether sincerely or insincerely, miracles of a certain degree of dignity, as his bringing water in the desert by smiting a rock; but he could not possibly have recorded a miracle so silly as that detailed in the same seventeenth chapter of Exodus about the fight with Amalek. The story is simply an insult to himself as well as to God, and betrays a far later origin. We might just as well believe that Romulus and Remus wrote the story of their being suckled by a wolf, as an autobiographical preface to the history of Rome.

In spite of all this, I perfectly agree with Matthew Arnold, that though the Pentateuch as a thaumaturgy is worthless, it has great value in some other respects. My point against it is, that it is not history. Some of the ablest Orthodox theologians now concede that the picture of Adam and Eve in the garden is not a literal historical fact, as all of us old people were taught in our infancy, but an allegory representing the introduction of sin into this world; the general or universal fact which is the occasion of the plan of salvation.

When we come to what may be regarded as more or less veritable history in the Bible, we shall find three grand characters standing out,—DAVID, JESUS, PAUL.

What I maintain is, that by a fair discussion of the lives of these three personages in the light of the Hebrew and Greek Scriptures themselves, and with no other light, it will appear that the plan of salvation was wholly the invention of Paul, and that the Bible history does not implicate either David or Jesus in any conscious knowledge of it, except by ex post facto injection. The proof of this injection, or writing history backward, lies in marked traits given them by the narratives, utterly inconsistent with their having any conscious knowledge of such a plan or participation in it; traits that falsify the assumed facts of total native depravity, as well as the efficacy of any such plan of restoration.

This view might be overwhelmingly sustained by citations from the psalms of David, and the brief and graphic sketch of his life, and from the simple narratives of the sayings and doings of Jesus, but it would require a volume. In this sketch, I can but glance at a point or two.

David was a man of by far the highest genius developed in the Old Testament history, or in the times it reveals to us, if perhaps we except the anonymous author of the Book of Job, who to create the character of that patient hero, must have been the Shakespeare of his day. His youth was distinguished by high musical talent, ardent friendship, consummate bravery, and almost unparalleled magnanimity. The last prophet of the Theocracy, after it was converted ostensibly into a monarchy, told the trembling monarch Saul, when he had done something to displease him; "The Lord hath sought him a man after his own heart; and the Lord hath commanded him to be captain over his people, because thou hast not kept that which the Lord hath commanded thee." This was said of the young David, before the victory over Goliath, and of course before the matter of Uriah. He was then, in the opinion of the prophet, a man dear to God, as he was certainly dear to many more besides the prophet. There is no hint in the Old Testament, unless from his own lips, that he was totally depraved, or that without the plan of salvation, with which Paul, in his sermon at Antioch, so emphatically connected him, he would have been punished in hell forever. On the contrary, even Paul admits that he was a particular favorite of God. And surely that God who is simply a self-projection from the human mind never was dearer to man. Witness the thirty-fourth Psalm, composed after his adroit and narrow escape from that rather cowardly priest, Ahimelech, and the spy, Doeg, and the subsequent still narrower escape from Achish, king of Gath. In this wonderful psalm in which he pours out the gratitude of his heart to the ideal object of his worship, in strains that have waked echoes through all succeeding ages, culminating in the words, "The Lord redeemeth the soul of his servants; and none of them that trust in Him shall be desolate," he surely does not admit his total depravity or thank his God for redeeming him from sin and hell, but from the treachery of Doeg, the malice of Achish, and the jealousy of Saul. With all that he says so grandly about the blessedness of "the man that trusteth in God" and keeps his lips from "speaking guile," he really trusted to the instincts of his nature, in both those trying emergencies, by telling a plump lie or two to Ahimelech in the first case, and next speaking and acting guile to Achish in a most humiliating manner. Not to lie to enemies sometimes, in that age of the world, if not in this, was to throw away your life. I am not apologizing for deception in any case, but there are differences. I do not believe that David meant to deceive any body, in attributing his redemption from his truculent and crafty enemies entirely to God; but I cannot say as much for some of those who have cited such passages as the last verse of the thirty-fourth psalm, as a proof of the doctrine of atonement by the blood of Jesus!

In the sense that he was dear to his God's people, who were terribly warlike, and so intensely religious, that they were always inclined to worship more gods than one, and especially whatever god had the most imposing and sensual rites, David was a man after that God's own heart. Though he loved more than one woman, he never loved but one God. That God he exalted by a lyric power never exceeded, and perhaps never to be exceeded, though always as a God of immitigable vengeance and jealousy. He not only purified, but aggrandized the worship of that God to a degree never before equalled, perhaps, by that of any god. And we might possibly believe that he understood "the salvation of God" as Paul afterwards did, and prophetically foreshadowed in his Psalms the redemption of the soul from sin and eternal hell, if he did not substitute for impartial justice certain very one-sided human passions in the character of his God. Witness the sixty-eighth Psalm, where he says, "He that is our God is the God of salvation; and unto God the Lord belong the issues from death. But God shall wound the head of his enemies, and the hairy scalp of such a one as goeth on still in his trespasses. The Lord said, I will bring again from Bashan; I will bring my people again from the depths of the sea: that thy foot may be dipped in the blood of thine enemies, and the tongue of thy dogs in the same." This is on a vastly broader scale, but it does not differ much from the spirit of a landed proprietor who sets his dogs on a trespasser crossing his fields. Christian priests have improved upon this by making God pursue, not with temporary but eternal vengeance, not merely trespassers, but absolutely all who do not believe what Peter and Paul preached about Jesus, whether they ever heard of either of them or not.

By virtue of his magnanimity, and genius in many directions, David became a king whom Israel, come weal or woe, could never forget. His Psalms bred a line of poet-prophets, and made a nation really unconquerable to the present day. The more they have been overwhelmed and oppressed, the more the Psalms of David have revived them. Well would it have been for that noble king if he could always have governed his passions by those laws of truth and justice which he often expresses so sublimely in his Psalms; if he could only have seen God, not as a personal governor attached to particular favorites, but as the principle of truth, justice, order, harmony, beauty, manifesting itself to our affections only in things as we see them, things of grandeur, motion, life, beauty, and the reverse, and calling for all the love of which we are capable only towards those living beings in whose lives these laws show the clearest and shine the brightest.

After the parable of Nathan had convicted him of gratifying the master passion of human nature—the noblest passion when regulated by right and justice,—by an act of unspeakable meanness and cruelty, he composed a penitential psalm, in which, if anywhere, we ought to find his conscious knowledge of the plan of salvation, if he ever had any, or his prophecy of it, if he ever made one. Its expression of penitence and self-abasement is incomparably pathetic. If he had only expressed as much sorrow for his sin against the poor man he so meanly murdered, and whom he could never bring to life, as he did for his sin against that God who he believed had power and some disposition to punish the wicked, there could be no reason to doubt that his repentance was wholly sincere. As it was, he not only bewailed his sin, but his nature; attributing, as male religionists are wont to do, his sin partly to his mother, and furnishing to designing priests of future ages a text from which to preach the fall of man and total depravity. Whatever the text by itself may do, the whole Psalm teaches nothing of the sort; rather that God may blot out sin without sacrifice, or any other consideration than a broken and contrite heart.

Of the triad, Saul, Jonathan, and David, Jonathan appears to the best advantage in history; for whatever faults he may have had are left out of sight. But the heroic magnanimity of David in sparing the life of Saul, when he had him in his power, is one of the noblest things on record, and is almost equal to that of Jonathan in sacrificing his claim to the kingdom to his love for his friend. The faults of David were those of his age; his virtues were far above his age. His genius no age has yet exceeded. The heart that does not delight in the best of his Psalms cannot be a human heart.

Out of the memory of such a hero, poet, and king as David, through ages of misrule grew a longing for another like him to sit on his throne; grew prophecies that a king even more glorious should come; and at last, when a foreign yoke had become almost as heavy as that of a corrupt home priesthood, there arose, or rather there is said to have arisen, out of what remained of sincerity and piety in the national religion, and out of the bosom of the common people, Jesus of Nazareth, whose character, so far as we can discern it through the glamour that has been thrown over his biography, was almost faultless and morally heroic. His career, so far as we have anything like history for it, was exceedingly brief; and but for the strength, sublimity, and fervid humanity of his teaching, he would certainly pass for an enthusiast of weak judgment. Obviously tinctured with some of the notions of the Essenes, the Puritans of that day, one of whose missionaries was probably John the Baptist, he was far less ascetic. Whenever he came in contact with the educated and ruling class, his breadth of view and force of statement struck them with awe; and his hearty denunciation of their shams and frauds will be refreshing to the remotest ages.

Our question is, What does history really make of Jesus? He himself wrote nothing; probably had not the art of writing. Contemporary "profane" history took no notice of him whatever.* It is not pretended that anything which has come down to us was written about him till he had been dead for years, and then not by his own followers, or in his own language or that of his special disciples. They spoke Hebrew. The whole of the New Testament, even the Epistle to the Hebrews, was written in Greek. A whole generation had passed away before the life of Jesus was reduced to writing. Then came a multitude of gospels and epistles read in churches, varying greatly as to facts, character, and teaching. Many of the epistles, and all but four of the gospels, have been laid aside as spurious. The residue were not canonized into the present New Testament till four or five centuries had passed away.

These now canonized Scriptures differ from each other in such a way as to demonstrate as clearly that an ex post facto coloring was thrown back over the life of Jesus; as it has been demonstrated that the credible history of the Jews was prefaced, long after it was written, by the myths of the garden, the flood, and the plagues of Egypt. The proof of this ex post facto coloring, to call it by the mildest possible name, must be patent to every reader of the four gospels who comes to the task without a settled preconception; and it is too strong to be resisted by any critical reader who does, as hundreds of the best scholars bear witness. I shall cite only two or three out of a multitude of facts to prove this; they alone being conclusive.

First, there is almost nothing in the first three gospels which is capable of being reconciled with the theory that Jesus was anything more than a man. In the fourth gospel he is very distinctly stated to be more than a man, if not God himself. But let this pass. Secondly, the first three gospels place his physical attack on the mercenary people in the

*The passages in Josephus, Tacitus, Suetonius, and Pliny referring to Christ, or Christians, do not mention his resurrection, and are now mostly, if not wholly, conceded by the best scholars to be forged interpolations, or pious frauds.

Temple, just before his arrest, where it stands, naturally, as the provocation of it, and pretext for his crucifixion; just as John Brown's attack on Harper's Ferry stands as the cause of his arrest by Governor Wise. The fourth gospel places the same act a year or two earlier, where it could have nothing to do with his crucifixion. Obviously, the last writer thought such a fact did not agree well with the idea that Jesus was the Lamb of God sacrificed by his own consent to take away the sin of the world. It agreed well enough with the idea that Jesus was the Messiah, come to establish a temporal kingdom and sit on the throne of David. His disciples, and probably he himself, expected God would stand by him in his righteous attack on the money-changers and hucksters of holy things, and give him the victory. After the bitter disappointment and merciless crucifixion, the disciples still expected, and many of them for a long time, that he would appear from the clouds, and take the throne on this earth. The writer of the fourth gospel, with many others, had given up this expectation; and, having adopted Paul's theory of the atoning sacrifice, thought it necessary to re-color the whole history of Jesus, and re-arrange the facts.

Thirdly, the miracle of the re-urrection of Lazarus, so circumstantially and pathetically detailed in the fourth gospel, is not mentioned at all in the first three. If it really took place, it was by far the most important miracle of the New Testament, with the exception of the resurrection of Jesus himself. As the writers of the earlier gospels were particularly fond of miracles, it is a miracle they did not mention it. As there is no mention of the ascension or subsequent death of Lazarus, if he had been raised from the dead, he would have been a most valuable living witness of the fact. How the earlier biographers of Jesus Christ could have omitted to notice him at all; how John and Paul should say nothing of his subsequent life, as a proof of the omnipotence of their divine Redeemer, is quite unaccountable on the hypothesis of the reality of the fact. For one, I feel obliged to regard the whole story of the resurrection of Lazarus as a pure invention, and a perfectly fraudulent one to be relegated to the category of priest-made miracles, such as fill the sixty or seventy thousand pages of the new edition of the Acta Sanctorum now in course of publication at Rome. The priesthood of that Church prudently keep these narratives in Latin, only lugging out now and then one before audiences whose faith is strong enough to swallow them. It is with considerable reason that they do not like to trust the people with such miracles as the resurrection of Lazarus, in the vernacular. But I am digressing.

Whether we are to believe the story of Lazarus or not, its introduction in the fourth gospel only goes to show the tendency to re-color the history, and to warn us against accepting for certain the theory that Jesus was consciously a part of the plan of salvation as taught by Paul.

That such a man as Jesus did live, an eloquent teacher of the sublimest morals the world had then attained to, in spite of the utter silence of cotemporary historians, may almost as reasonably be believed as that the wind has blown somewhere when we see the waves rolling. Why he was what he was is as easily accounted for without going beyond the laws of human nature in his case as in the case of Shakespeare or Milton. Indeed, if we accept the ordinary biography of the man Shakespeare, the works attributed to him are more miraculous than the teachings of Jesus. We must remember that Jesus was born under the very zenith of a grand national hallucination of a coming Messiah, a priest king, who in the language of Daniel was to be "one like the Son of Man"; that is, like the prophet Ezekiel, probably then recently dead, who ninety times in his book calls himself the Son of Man. And Daniel records how in his "night visions" he had seen that this Son of Man "came with the clouds of heaven, and came to the 'ancient of days,' and they brought him near before him. And there was given him dominion and glory and a kingdom that all people, nations, and languages should serve him; his dominion is an everlasting dominion which shall not pass away, and his kingdom that which shall not be destroyed." After the Jews returned from their Eastern captivity these prophets became exceedingly dear to them, and their wildest dreams were accepted as inspired prophecies. But in their long captivity the wisest of the Jews had not failed to absorb many precepts of a higher morality than that which could be gathered from their own sacred writings. These the child Jesus, while in the lap of a fond and intelligent mother, could not but drink in, and afterwards muse over, while as a young man he piled the tools of a carpenter. In those days, every fond mother thought her son might become the Messiah, as almost every mother in our country thinks her son may become President. Why not? Jesus, however modest, might have thought his mother right; and especially after his genius had propelled him out of the carpenter's shop, and he had received that decided compliment from John the Baptist. His was the glorious ambition to make the whole world better anyhow; and the first thing he did was to preach in the warm, hyperbolic style of the Orient, his immortal Sermon on the Mount, including that foundation-stone of human morals, the Golden Rule, which came down to the captive Jews in Babylon through Confucius and the Persian sages, and more than paid them for their captivity.

Then he went on to embody his wisdom in parables, like his great prototype Nathan, and utter them to crowds of delighted people. One of the grandest of these parables, and they are almost all grand, he seems to have uttered after he had become fully persuaded in his own mind that he was himself the Messiah. It seems to have been suggested to him by the passage I have already quoted from Daniel.

It is a picture of a final judgment of mankind, under the Messiah as Judge. But there is not the slightest intimation that the scene of this judgment was to be beyond the present life. Those who so interpret it inject a meaning into the words which does not belong to them. The words do show that Jesus, like most of the Jews of his day, believed in a personal devil and conscious existence beyond this life. But the judgment he described, so far as his words go, was to be under the Messiah, who every Jew believed was to be a king of righteousness ruling forever in this world, and of course not in another. As Jesus was an honest preacher, and knew the popular belief, if he believed the scene of this judgment was to be in a future world after death, he would have said so.

But what is far more important and perfectly conclusive against the plan of salvation we are considering, is the fact that the test of the Messiah's salvation was to be not faith in anything, but simply a good, benevolent life; not the love of God, but simply the love of man. His plan of salvation, then, was simply the natural plan which had always been in the world, and is taught by all Nature, including human nature.

But did Jesus, in assuming to be the Messiah about to judge the world, assume to be "very God"? This depends on the meaning of the term "Son of Man," which in the old Scriptures is applied to men whom nobody claims to be supernatural, and which is used synonymously with the phrase Son of God. For in Genesis we read that the sons of God took wives of the daughters of men; and these sons of God could not have been even angels, for Jesus himself says angels do not marry. They were probably antediluvian priests, who acted much more rationally than some who call themselves Christian priests.

Jesus without assuming to be God, certainly had unwavering faith in God as an infinite power who would stand by him and place him on the throne of David by his miraculous interposition. He tested this faith in his triumphant entry into Jerusalem, arranged as nearly as possible to suit the ancient prophecies, and his physical attempt to purge the sanctuary. But here he met a tremendous disappointment which was not in the prophecies. God did not intervene. Jesus was a changed man; a sorrowing fugitive from the injustice of a besotted priesthood, acting through a heartless and cruel foreign satrap. He was betrayed by a mercenary scoundrel among his own disciples. He suffered the unspeakable tortures of crucifixion, crying most naturally in the complaining words of David in the twenty-second Psalm: "My God, my God, why hast thou forsaken me?" These were his exact last words according to both Matthew and Mark; but Luke puts entirely different last words into his mouth; words very unnatural, or rather miraculous under the circumstances. And John makes his last words entirely different from those of Luke, and perfectly consistent with the Pauline idea that he was "very God."

Such a life terminated by such a death was a fit foundation for a new religion, and would have been all the more so if it had not been followed by any pretence of a resurrection or that the victim was a God. The best possible proof of this is the undeniable fact that the best quality of Christians the world has yet seen, those who can best meet the test laid down in the twenty-fifth chapter of Matthew, do not believe the victim was "very God," and hardly believe in a bodily resurrection. With them, as in the case of a modern victim who united in his character the traits of David, Jesus, and Paul, it is the spirit of Jesus that marches on.

I must, for want of time, pass over the alleged miracle of the bodily resurrection and ascension into heaven, the evidence of which lacks the very witnesses who must have been best qualified to testify, and rests upon that of others who may as sincerely have deceived themselves as ever Robert Dale Owen did. That the spirit of Jesus after his death may have manifested itself to his surviving disciples and even to one of his persecutors, as our excellent friends the Swedenborgians and Spiritualists, so called, believe other spirits can, I would be the last man in the world to deny, though I have never been able to see in the Bible or elsewhere any reason to affirm it. It looks to me, after studying the New Testament for years with the strongest possible bias to save the faith in which I was brought up, and not to sunder the ties that bound me to the dearest of kindred and friends, that the creed of the deification, resurrection, and ascension of Jesus was an invention of just the same kind as had occurred many times before in other countries, and might easily occur again under similar circumstances. If there had been a daily paper printed in Jerusalem, or for that matter in Alexandria, Athens, or Rome, Anno Domini 1, and onward, there would have been no such creed.

A young Pharisee by the name of Saul, of Tarsus, a city where he acquired the Greek language probably before he studied theology at Jerusalem under Gamaliel, and privileged with Roman citizenship, though he does not seem to have understood Latin, started out not long after the death of Jesus, to suppress the new and strange religion that was germinating among his followers. His conversion, the most natural thing in the world, for a man of such ardent zeal and strong imagination, is accepted as miraculous, and as the strongest of the proofs of the resurrection of Jesus. He had been brought up as a believer in the immortality of the soul and in the highest reverence for the Jewish ritual of atonement, or propitiating the Deity by the blood of animals. The idea flashed upon his inventive mind that Jesus was a sacrifice, the culmination of the whole sacrificial system. In short, if this plan of salvation was not a borrowed heathen myth, he invented it as laid down in the Christian creeds from that of the Apostles to that of the Thirty-nine Articles, a part of the Episcopal Prayer-book very little read for the last thirty years; a creed so expanded and particular as to refute itself.

Saul, the man of threatenings and slaughter, converted into Paul, the great apostle of the new religion, soon took command of it, and before any of the gospels had been committed to writing. Utterly intolerant except to those who agreed with him, to whom he was as sweet as the honey-comb, he must have originated the insane policy, so utterly foreign to the teaching of Jesus, of compelling faith on the pain of eternal damnation, and to his ex post facto influence we must attribute the fearful words put into the mouth of the risen Jesus, which resulted in the murder of innocents for more than a thousand years. The living Jesus, when he sent forth his disciples, told them to be wise as serpents and harmless as doves; the dead Jesus, whom Paul made through Mark, who he says was profitable to him for the ministry, sent them forth into all the world, and told them that whosoever believed them and was baptized should be saved, and whoever believed not should be damned. Is it at all to be wondered that zealots with such a communion, going among nations whose thought was comparatively free, and undertaking to compel belief by a doom so irrational and revolting, should have awakened cruel persecution against themselves and their converts? The human heart is naturally the ally of reason and resents encroachment upon it.

It may just here be asked, why the enlightened literary world of Greece and Rome quietly permitted such a system to be palmed upon mankind? Why no one stood up to contradict and refute such a sort of Christianity at the first onset? No doubt many did. Of some we know the names, as Celsus and Porphyry, from the writings of the Christian fathers who undertook to refute them. But all their works were carefully destroyed by the first imperial converts. Before the art of printing it was easy to destroy all works considered heretical; and such has been the policy of the Christian Church in all ages, and such it always will be. Since the invention of printing, to be sure, this policy has narrowed to hearing only one side. This destruction of the cross-questioning of the early infidels has been an irreparable loss to the world, even on the hypothesis of the truth of Christianity. But the adoption by the early Christian bishops of the old Pagan doctrine of deceiving the common people for the benefit of their morals, made matters still worse.

When the Church gained power, its long and bloody experiment of Paul's compulsory process of producing faith, resulted only in producing hypocrites. Not that Paul himself did not produce faith otherwise. He produced it by eloquently confounding facts with the more pleasant fictions of his imagination, and making these fictions the more powerful by mixing in the wisdom of Jesus. Many passages of his writings are admirable, and his points are brought home to the reader with a force never exceeded. As for instance, when he says, Thou that preachest a man should not steal, dost thou steal? and, when in spite of his compulsory process of producing faith, in naming faith, hope, love, he gives love the place of honor as greatest of the three.

By a singular mistranslation of the Greek word for love in the chapter to which I refer, and several other expressions, Paul is made a most exemplary preacher of charity or religious toleration. But a man may preach the most intense love of his own church brethren, and of God as he views him, and be a bitter religious polemic. Such was Paul.

Having invented or picked up out of old religions this plan of salvation, and doubtless sincerely invested his whole soul in it as God's truth, he felt obliged even to lie for it, if necessary, much more to be intolerant towards men, and especially women, for their eternal good, just as thousands and thousands of sincere priests have since. Jesus, full of a sense of justice, was tolerant towards all women and most men; and did not scruple to show his contempt for the Jewish law which punished women unjustly, and placed the claims of a holy day above the rights of a hungry man. Paul with his scheme of salvation, wholly masculine, said, "I suffer not a woman to teach." Here he was mistaken, for women have taught, and often better than he. Not to speak of the miserable results of his compulsory faith, and unjust and false teaching about the rights and capacity of women, reaching all the way down to the time when the scourge of Rabelais whipped a little decency into the clergy without whipping the greed of power out of them, and down to our own time, in which it dominates as a spirit of unspeakable meanness, both religious and political, it is enough to say that Paul's plan of human salvation no more fits the facts of human nature than it does those of the universe outside of it; nor is it supported by anything in the Scriptures or out of them which deserves the name of history. Christianity, if any such religion really exists or ever did exist, has done all the good it has ever done, in spite of Paul's plan of salvation, and its only hope for the future is to slough it off, and return to just what is credible of Jesus; that is, what we can know of him apart from the miraculous and incredible. That abolishes everything like a church, or at least postpones it till after the Day of Judgment, and multiplies Christ by millions.*

The very basic idea of Paul's style of Christianity

* Ecclesiasticism as well as asceticism seems to have originated with the Essenes, before the birth of Jesus. The thirteenth chapter of Matthew looks as if he did not mean to save men by a church, but simply to preach good morals, and let saints and sinners live together without any such sharp distinction as ecclesiasticism implies, till his kingdom of heaven on earth came. He seems to have trusted that his preaching of truth would leaven the whole lump. The Essenes had thought to save themselves by coming out from the world. To this idea the followers of Jesus, after his death, under the lead of Paul, reverted. In point of common sense, it was going back a great way.

is that the animal and especially the sexual part of human nature is essentially wicked. That the perfection of religious life is to rise wholly above it, not to carry it upward. It worships the end of human life and blasphemes the means. It goes to work not to cultivate and govern, but to exterminate. So among the early saints and champions of Pauline Christianity, ardent as Paul, and probably abler, we find Origen who began his religious career by making himself such a fraction of a man as is described in the gospel according to Matthew xix., 12. It does not seem reasonable to believe that Jesus could have alluded to such insane fanaticism or pious barbarity without condemning it; and hence I refer that execrable text to the same ex post facto historians who have deprived Jesus of a natural father and so ridiculously set the Devil to tempting their "very God" in the wilderness.

But if this whole Pauline plan of human salvation turns out to be a work of the human imagination, with no foundation either in the nature of man or the nature of things, without historical support and with nothing whatever under it but the wish to live after death, what then is left worth living for? Can a rational being ask this question? The love of this life is the only foundation for wishing or imagining a future one. This life, if not the only one any mortal has ever seen, is the only one he remembers. The sublimest imagination that ever dwelt in a human brain cannot picture another half as good. It can only patch together a few pieces of this. Milton, Dante, Paul, and the author of the Apocalypse have tried their hands, and a man or woman would tire of the best of their heavens in a week to the point of committing suicide. Life on a straight line, world without end, would soon reconcile any human consciousness to the idea of annihilation. No, a world of war as well as of peace, a world where one can put himself, though ever so humbly, in the line of battle for the true and the right, is better than eternal safety and singing. No; ever-rolling, ever-changing Nature, with her infinite heights and infinite depths, her inexorable laws, her grand joys and sorrows, her blind, irresistible onwardness, ever turning up and ever turning down, her sublime carelessness of races and utter carelessness of individuals, her incessant creation of life out of death, her two kingdoms of animal and vegetable life ever the causes of life and the causes of death to each other, the infinite modifications of the means of growth and motion, tubes, levers, lungs, feet, wings, fins, wheels, infinite varieties of brains, nerves, touch, taste, smell, ears, eyes; ears on which she pours the music of her waters, her birds and her sublime thunders; eyes on which she pictures her own ever-changing, ever-charming, infinite face,—O, she is enough in herself as she is! Why can we not be content when she reveals to us more than we can hold? Will we allow infinite Nature to keep no secrets? What if we cannot see the hereafter of our little infinitesimal selves, any more than we can see what is between us and that hereafter? We are not on that account precluded from hoping and imagining. Are we afraid to go to sleep? Shall we spoil the now, our boat on the bosom of eternity, and like the dog in the fable, be forever dropping the substance to catch the shadow? Till men and women can be emancipated from slavery to Paul's imagination, or any man's imagination, they can enjoy neither any imaginary future of their own nor the real life they are living. He is free whom the truth makes free; and whom it makes free in spite of pain and death, it makes happy.

The only solid foundation for human morals and human happiness is truth. To give out as certain truth what we do not know to be true, is not truth. It is "pious fraud"; and pious fraud is the parent of business fraud, and always has been. This is the vice of Pauline Christianity; and whether it burns unbelievers or only pities them, it is a mischievous thing, and fruitful of falsehood in every department of human life. All truth and honor and virtue only live in spite of it. Would they die, think you, if the Established Church of England and the unestablished Church of the United States, should retract that abominable libel on human nature contained in the ninth of their Thirty-nine "ARTICLES OF RELIGION"? Would they die, think you, if hell were dropped out of the Christian creed, as it is now dropped out of every decent pulpit, and even out of decent theological reviews? Here is the Princeton Review of this very January. In combating Darwin and scientific theories of evolution, it says: "If the development theory of the origin of man shall in a little while take its place—as doubtless it will—with other exploded scientific speculations, then they who accept it with its proper logical consequences will, in the life to come, have their portion with those who, in this life, 'know not God and obey not the gospel of his Son.'" Now if Mr. Duffield, the Christian whose name is attached to this review, really believed what he was saying, why did he strip his text so carefully of the sublime emphasis it has in the "holy Scripture" from which he quotes? There it stands as part of a sentence, perhaps too long to be quoted; but the immediate context is as follows:—

"Seeing it is a righteous thing with God to recompense tribulation to them that trouble you; and to you who are troubled, rest with us, when the Lord Jesus shall be revealed from heaven with his mighty angels, in flaming fire taking vengeance on those that know not God, and that obey not the gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ: who shall be punished with everlasting destruction from the presence of the Lord and from the glory of his power; when he shall come to be glorified in his saints, and to be admired in all them that believe (because our testimony among you was believed) in that day."

We see from this that the man Paul was in the habit of breathing out threatening and slaughter against those who did not believe with him, as well after conversion as before. But the man Duffield,

John T., is prudent enough to shrink from it, and not take "vengeance" and "everlasting destruction" into his quotation. This is emasculating the Scriptures with a vengeance, and is a fair sample of the candor of the modern Orthodox pulpit. Do these good men, who are so little truthful, ever stop to think what blasphemy of God it is to attribute "vengeance" to him, or what blasphemy of human nature it is to speak of it as incapable of truth, honor, purity of its own free will? and for their own sweet sakes? Or what a crop of falsehood, making hell upon earth, grows necessarily and inevitably out of a theology which professes to be able to send a man straight to heaven from a well-deserved gallows?

O for the day when Truth shall reign;
When seers shall see, not dream nor feign;
When man shall worship good in man,
And woman be, what woman can,
The soul of providence divine,—
Her home on earth the holiest shrine.

THE DECLINE IN THE BELIEF IN HELL.

It is manifest enough to every intelligent inquirer that belief in hell is rapidly waning, and, where still held by thinking people, so modified as to be hardly recognizable as the same thing that haunted the imaginations of our childhood. A theory of the decline and threatened fall of that ancient empire may not be out of place.

In proportion as conscience becomes influential in society will the imaginations of men, believing in a future state, project into that state the rewards and punishments that, in their estimation, are due to the virtues and vices of mankind. The relative importance an age attaches to a particular virtue or vice is determined by the character and needs of that age. A military and brave people will hold energy and bravery in the highest esteem. An ecclesiastic age puts the religious virtues in the first place; while an industrial and scientific age will place in the first rank those qualities of character essential to scientific and industrial progress.

The maintenance of national or tribal integrity against the incursions of still more barbarous tribes was the chief need of our brave Norse ancestors. Accordingly, they kept the best places in the next world for the souls of those who fell in battle, while those who died in bed went straight to hell,—the parent of our word hell. With them it was a place of intense cold; but as it fell under the control and was adjusted to the needs of a more tropical people it was changed to a place of intense heat, supplemented by corruptive processes, though for a while it alternated between the extremes of heat and cold,—a view that may still be found in Middle Age literature.

With the decay of the Greek and Roman nationalities and civilization, the Church became the leading power, and those qualities of character that conducted to her sway and perpetuation came to be the cardinal virtues. The Church no more than the State could exist without possessing the minds of men with some efficient punitive scheme that embraced the next world as well as this. She introduced also a new morality. In her hierarchy of virtues patriotism and valor had a very subordinate place; while heresy, as being the chief foe to her power, was the highest crime. The ancient virile virtues were refined into asceticism, submissiveness, and piety; the old fidelity became faith, and faith degenerated into a cowardly credulity. Hell, that had been an institution of secular morality devoted to the interests of the State, became and has ever since in Christendom been consecrated to an ecclesiastical morality in the interest of the Church. When it came to be believed that the Church was the chief end of society and the only hope of social order and regeneration (and it was always easy for the clergy to so regard it), hell became the doom of those who denied her dogmas, opposed her power, or threatened her integrity. Its fires were for "unbelief"; and when its pictured fierceness did not suffice to restrain and subdue the rising doubt they were recruited by the fagot.

But now follows an industrial, scientific, and commercial age, and a new morality emerges,—or, at least, a new order in the relative importance of the different virtues. Intellectual honesty, commercial fidelity, intelligence, integrity, and enterprise, came to the front rank of human excellences, and are really so in the thought of the best men to-day, however their confession of faith may seem to contradict it; and the opposite of those excellences are clearly seen to be the chief foes and obstacles to social order and progress. But hell has not kept pace with modern thought; and, being still devoted to mere ecclesiastical shortcomings, it cannot be otherwise than that it should fall into contempt, and the word find no honest secular use but as a "swear word."

When the pulpit sends the great thinkers and benefactors of our time there, the tide of emigration sets that way, and heaven is at a discount. There is a Catholic legend of an old monk who, though eminent for goodness, fell under the papal anathema and was accordingly refused entrance into Paradise. But it soon got noised about the celestial city that the old man was putting out the fires and organizing a very comfortable heaven there, so that in self-defence and to prevent the breaking up of the whole purgatorial economy, St. Peter had to open the gate for him.

The same evolution of thought, the use of a more dispassionate and unsuperstitious analysis and criticism, by which astrology became astronomy, and alchemy became chemistry, is even now purging away the crudeness and cowardice hitherto characterizing religion, and will yet make it glorious with a radiance it hath not yet entered into the heart of man to conceive. In that coming day men will drink copious drafts of the living water, and not parch and perish while worshipping the sticks and dead leaves that float in the fountains where the world's heroes have slacked their thirst.

Unless hell can be brought into harmony with modern thought and conscience, it must follow the rack and thumb-screw. But revised and adjusted to a true secular morality, made to be the expression by a healthy and enlightened conscience of the ill-condition that necessarily and eternally inheres in, and is consequent on, bad behavior, it may still have a valuable use and become a permanent institution among men. With the fires properly tempered and graded to fit the real character and actual merit or demerit of every particular case, there can be no objection to its location anywhere one may desire it. If I might be allowed to suggest a location, I would name the Treasury Department at Washington as a suitable place. And I would have no "way of escape provided," either here or there, now or hereafter.

A happy day will it be for the Church if a more acute scholarship shall discover, as now seems probable, that substantially such is the real meaning of the sacred text.—E. D. S., in the Cleveland "Voice."

Poetry.

[FOR THE INDEX.]

"OH! THIS IS PITIFUL."

BY G. H. AVERY.

"[On the night of Jan. 25, 1878, Mrs. Townsend, a member of a Christian church, starved to death at Lowville, near Fayetteville, in the town of Manlius, Onondaga Co., State of New York, within sound of five church bells.]"

In the year of our Lord one thousand
Eight hundred and seventy-eight,
A Christian mother was starving
In a civilized Christian State.

In a valley where crops were plenty,
And more than enough for all,
Starving, deserted, neglected,
She passed from this earthly thrall.

'Tis a cheerless tale, my brothers,
And strikes on the shivering soul
Like the blast of an Arctic vapor
That's iced at the farthest pole.

Come, come, my Christian masters,
This, this is but sorry work,—
As sunless and full of horror
As any deed of the Turk.

Muffle your church-bells, sir parson;
Speak, speak with abated breath;
Within sound of your voice a mother
Is starving by inches to death.

Away with your holy vestments!
Kneel not at your Master's feet;
Your boasted religion's a failure,
A ghastly lie, and a cheat.

It leaves the poor to perish;
'Twas made for the rich alone;
It gives them bread in plenty,
It gives to the poor a stone.

Go tell on the banks of the Ganges,
In the marshes of dark Lahore,
How the civilized Western Christian
Is treating its sick and poor.

Print, print it my Christian masters,
And picture the lonely heath,
With the gentle, loving mother
Starving by inches to death.

They are used to it on the Ganges,
'Tis quite a common affair;
Let us pray for the heartless heathen,
They have got no Bible there.

How long, how long shall it happen,
That daughters of toil and care
Shall sob out their souls in anguish,
And die in their dark despair?

Has charity fled to cattle?
Is Christian aught but a name?
Must our daughters starve and perish,
Or rot in houses of shame?

In the year of our Lord one thousand
Eight hundred and seventy-eight,
A Christian mother was starving
In a civilized Christian State.

SYRACUSE, N. Y.

CASH RECEIPTS.

N. B.—Postage stamps are not included here, though credited on subscriptions, etc.

FOR THE WEEK ENDING FEBRUARY 23.

A. Risk, $2; C. Cone, $3.20; H. Apthorp, $3.20; Mrs. L. S. Huller, $4; Joel Sharp, $3; T. C. Leland, $4; A. C. Erskon, $3.50; B. M. Smith, $12.50; Wm. A. Jenkins, $3; J. E. Wood, 10 cents; Mrs. E. L. Bigelow, $1; American News Co., $8.10; W. E. Bush, 25 cents; F. E. Abbot, $2; John Howes, $3.20; Frederick Beck, $3.20; S. R. Kochler, $3.20; Parker Pillsbury, $3.20; Hon. Joshua Hill, $3.20; Geo. A. Bourne, $3.20; Miller S. Greene, $3.20; E. D. Stark, $1; Subscription News Co., $2; James Eddy, $3.20; Mrs. A. M. Mosher, $9.60; S. W. Sample, $9.60; C. D. B. Mills, $10; H. H. Howard, 25 cents; M. J. Perry, $1.70; John Lenert, 50 cents; Theoph. Brown, $3; Luther Woods, $3; M. Michaels, $5.25; J. M. McMillan, 40 cents; Mrs. Augusta B. Kempton, $3.20; J. W. H. Toohay, $3.40; Mrs. J. H. Bennett, $3.20; E. H. Aldrich, $3.20; C. W. Flint, $3.20; K. Schmeiman, $3.20; Richard Mott, $3.20; E. B. Aldrich, $3.20; Wm. H. Barnes, $3.20.

All receipts of cash will be acknowledged as above, and no other receipt sent unless specially requested. Persons who do not see their remittances acknowledged within three weeks after sending, will please notify us.

The Index.

BOSTON, FEBRUARY 28, 1878.

THE INDEX is published every Thursday by the INDEX ASSOCIATION, at No. 231 WASHINGTON STREET, BOSTON. Toledo Office, No. 35 Monroe Street: J. T. FARM, Agent and Clerk. All letters should be addressed to the Boston Office.

THE INDEX accepts every result of science and sound learning, without seeking to harmonize it with the Bible. It recognizes no authority but that of reason and right. It believes in Truth, Freedom, Progress, Equal Rights, and Brotherly Love.

The transition from Christianity to Free Religion, through which the civilized world is now passing, but which it very little understands, is even more momentous in itself and in its consequences than the great transition of the Roman Empire from Paganism to Christianity. THE INDEX aims to make the character of this vast change intelligible in at least its leading features, and offers an opportunity for discussions on this subject which find no fitting place in other papers.

N. B.—No contributor to THE INDEX, editorial or otherwise, is responsible for anything published in its columns except for his or her own individual statements. Editorial contributions will in every case be distinguished by the name or initials of the writer.

TO VOLUNTARY CONTRIBUTORS.—Only Short Articles desired. Unused Manuscripts not returned.

FRANCIS ELLINGWOOD ABBOT, Editor.
COTYAVUS BROOKS FROTHINGHAM, WILLIAM J. POTTER,
WILLIAM H. SPENCER, MRS. E. D. CHESTNUT, GEORGE JACOB
HOLYOAKE (England), DAVID H. CLARK, MRS. ELIZABETH
GADY STANTON, J. L. STODDARD, ELIUR WRIGHT, C. D. B.
WILLS, W. D. LE SUEUR, BENJ. F. UNDERWOOD, ALBERT
WARREN KELSEY, Editorial Contributors.

SPECIAL NOTICE.

Attention is specially called to a change in the advertisement of the Publications of the Free Religious Association. By a recent vote of the Executive Committee the Annual Reports of the Association, from the year 1872 to the year 1877 inclusive, are now offered at five cents each (and at the same rate for any larger number) to any body who will take the trouble to send for them, enclosing five cents in postage stamps. They will also be sold at the office for the same sum to any one calling for them there.

The Committee have put the pamphlets at this low rate, which hardly more than covers the cost of sending them by mail, with the hope that they may thereby be more extensively circulated. By referring to the advertisement describing their contents, it will be seen that they contain much matter of special interest on the most vital religious problems of the age. It is not too much to say that some of the most valuable contributions of the last five years to religious discussion may be found in these pamphlets. Let any one who wants to know what the Free Religious Association means, send for these Reports. And will not the members and friends of the Association take this opportunity to extend the knowledge of its principles?

WM. J. POTTER,
Secretary F.R.A.

IT IS STATED by the New Bedford Standard that Mr. B. R. Tucker has been obliged to discontinue the publication of the Radical Review. We hope this is not true, though we fear it may be. Liberals have much to learn in the way of liberality, if they wish their literature to be worthy of their ideas.

IN ADDITION to the very thoughtful pamphlet entitled Epitome of the Positive Philosophy and Religion (see our last page), the Positivists of New York city have just begun to publish a weekly Journal called the Positive Thinker. This little paragraph in its first number gives a very favorable idea of its spirit: "When we are seeking truth, we are freethinkers; when we have found truth, we are positive thinkers; there is no free thinking within the multiplication table. Theology may get on the track, but it will be so much the worse for theology." The editors are G. L. Henderson and H. B. Brown; the place of publication is 141 Eighth Street, New York; the price is $1.50 a year.

THE MUNICIPAL SOCIETY of New York city, Dorman B. Eaton presiding, discussed church taxation on the evening of February 18. Jackson S. Schultz said that property was supposed to pay taxes in return for some protection which it obtains—that churches did not pay any taxes, yet claimed more protection and had been the cause of more trouble to the courts than any other class of property. He proposed simply to tax all new churches. Sinclair Toucey was in favor of exempting hospitals only. Others took ground in favor of non-taxation. The matter was referred for further report and discussion. The facts we have exposed about Trinity Church are beginning to tell. Let in the daylight!

KIND WORDS FROM MR. FROTHINGHAM.

NEW YORK, Feb. 23, 1878.

DEAR ABBOT:—

Heartiest thanks for your note, and for the candid and fair statement in THE INDEX. You are quite at liberty, if you desire, to print the passage you have had copied from the lecture.

My purpose was to report rather than to argue. Your attitude commands my profound respect and cordial admiration; and, were I as well satisfied as you are in regard to the call for action, I trust I should have the manliness to stand openly by your side, and give the full strength of my arm to your cause. As it is, I observe the signs of the times, and scan the horizon with all the vigilance I possess, acknowledging always that you may be perfectly right, and often more than half-persuaded that you are. At all events, I am thankful, and I take every opportunity to say I am thankful, that you so faithfully sound an alarm.

By the way, let me add that I am wholly with you on the obscene literature question, believing with you that even an Anthony Comstock may have his uses, and may render to society a much-needed service. What a pity that he will confound issues, and plant his blows in the wrong place! What a pity that all liberals should not see the difference between spiritual liberty and fleshly license!

Faithfully yours,

O. B. FROTHINGHAM.

P.S.—You may print this note if you wish to.

THE BIBLE AMENDMENT.

There are many simple-minded liberals, too devoid of guile themselves to see through the ecclesiastical cunning which is plotting to commit the national government to a solemn and authoritative recognition of Christianity as the religion of the whole nation, who think us needlessly suspicious of what can best be described as the "Bible Amendment." This has been already introduced into Congress, and now waits the pleasure of the Senate Judiciary to come up for decisive action. Although published in THE INDEX of January 31, we republish it here, that it may become familiar to our readers (the italics are ours):—

Section 1. No State shall make any law respecting an establishment of religion or prohibiting the free exercise thereof; and no religious test shall ever be required as a qualification to any office or public trust under any State. No public property and no public revenue of, nor any loan of credit by or under the authority of the United States or any State, Territory, district, or municipal corporation shall be appropriated to, or made use of, for the support of any school, educational or other institution under the control of any religious or anti-religious sect, organization, or denomination, or wherein the particular creed or tenets of any religious or anti-religious sect, organization, or denomination shall be taught; and no such particular creed or tenet shall be read or taught in any school or institution supported in whole or in part by such revenue or loan of credit; and no such appropriation or loan of credit shall be made to any religious or anti-religious sect, organization, or denomination, or to promote its interests or tenets.

This article shall not be construed to prohibit the reading of the Bible in any school or institution, and it shall not have the effect to impair the rights of property already vested.

Section 2. Congress shall have power, by appropriate legislation, to provide for the prevention and punishment of violations of this article.

"What is the mischief in that very inoffensive amendment?" ask these cheerful liberals, with charming and childlike simplicity. "Is it not a good thing to forbid sectarian appropriations? That is all this amendment proposes. The words you italicize so superfluously are non-mandatory; they establish nothing; they do not command the Bible to be read; they leave everything as it is. The first part of the amendment is excellent, and the last part will do no harm; it is foolish to oppose it."

O lamb-like innocence!

Read carefully what is said about this measure by the Philadelphia Christian Statesman, the very able and astute organ of the "National Reform Association,"—that is, the "God-in-the-Constitution" or Christian amendment party. We quote from its issue of February 7 (the italics are again ours):—

The Value of the Proposed School Amendment.

We presume that none of our readers are insensible to the importance, from a Christian point of view, of the joint resolution which the Hon. George F. Edmunds has introduced into the Senate of the United States. That all our readers may understand its exact provisions in connection with these remarks, we print once more the full text of the pending amendment:—

[This is given above.]

Taken simply by itself, and in its narrowest interpretation, the last clause of section first simply provides that this amendment shall not be employed as a weapon against the Bible in the public schools. It does not require the Bible to be read. It does not prohibit the States from legislating against it. It simply guards against the possible employment of the proposed amendment, in case it should be adopted, to decide the question of the Bible in the public schools.

But, taken in its whole connection, the amendment has a much deeper significance than that. The previous clauses have laid down with great explicitness the principle which Protestant Christians heartily unite in sustaining, that no sect or denomination shall receive any part of the school funds, and that the views of no particular sect shall be taught in schools supported in whole or in part by the public money. "Now," says the secularist, "all religion is sectarian. The Bible is a sectarian book. This government knows no religion. This nation professes none. And under the operation of this amendment we shall exclude all religious worship and instruction from the schools." "No," replies the nation; "if this amendment shall be adopted, the Bible is not sectarian. Its use in the schools is not in conflict with the principles declared in this amendment. We are a Christian people. This government recognizes Christianity as the true religion, and the sacred books of Christianity as of divine origin and authority; and it is not the design of this amendment to furnish a weapon to exclude them from the schools." Thus, comprehensively interpreted, the clause in question is a virtual repudiation of the secular theory of government. It will be, if adopted, an authoritative interpretation of the meaning and design of the whole instrument. It will recognize the use of the Bible in the schools of the nation as an existing fact, and will place on that fact the sanction of the Constitution.

Clear-sighted secularists perceive this to be the effect and purport of this clause. THE INDEX vehemently opposes the amendment, and says: [here is quoted nearly the whole of our article of January 31, entitled, "Shall the Constitution be Revolutionized?"]

Furthermore, at the annual meeting of the National Reform Association just held at Pittsburgh, February 7, this resolution was adopted by the "God-in-the-Constitution" party there assembled, and ought to be heeded well:—

"Resolved, That the Amendment to the United States Constitution, presented by Senator Edmunds of Vermont, affords an opportunity to press the claims of this Association, and will secure such amendments to the Constitution as WILL SETTLE FOREVER ITS CHRISTIAN CHARACTER."

Now the above is all true, as an interpretation of the real and doubtless intended effect of this Bible Amendment. For the second time, mark you,—for the second time an open attempt has been made in the Congress of the United States to Christianize the Constitution and destroy its secularity—the one great guarantee and bulwark of our religious liberties. This second attempt yet trembles between success and failure; and the "liberal" Springfield Republican, echoed by a swarm of liberals as blind as itself, complacently declares that the God-in-the-Constitution question is not a "vital issue"! They pronounce it absurd to see any danger in such attempts,—not seeing that they, with their superhuman obtuseness, are themselves a great and imminent danger. There are times when passivity is perdition; and to-day, when Orthodoxy with its Moodys and Kimballs and Cooks is manifesting everywhere a new and multiplied activity of a most aggressive type,—while the secularity of the Constitution is the object of uninterrupted sapping and mining, and is even openly assailed without protest in the halls of Congress,—it does seem as if radicalism had been struck with paralysis. Are we liberals so fatally drugged that the warnings of history and experience themselves are powerless against the stupor of our optimism? Do we imagine that this Bible Amendment would have no practical effect in changing the character of our institutions? Are we Bourbons, forgetting nothing and learning nothing? Take a chapter from recent history, showing how the whole demon of Orthodoxy can be conjured out of a single phrase, like the genie out of the fisherman's casket in the Arabian Nights:—

Stephen Girard left a magnificent bequest to found a strictly secular college for orphans in Philadelphia. He provided that no clergyman of any religious denomination should pass the walls of his institution; but he also provided that the instructors of the college should "take pains to instill into the minds of the scholars the purest principles of morality." Why had he not as good a right to found a secular college as Christians have to found Christian colleges? But the famous Girard Will case followed his bequest, and Evangelical Christianity stole his money by as infamous a breach of trust as was ever committed. Said the Sunday School Times of October 13, 1877:—

"Girard's will was contested by his heirs, on the ground that a college which excluded Christianity from its bounds could not properly be deemed a public charity. Then followed the famous Girard Will litigation, culminating in the arguments of Daniel Webster and Horace Binney before the United States Supreme Court, and the decision of that court upon the point at issue. In all that litigation it was never so much as suggested that a college within which boys were to be shut up without the possibility of moral and religious instruction would be aught but an unmitigated nuisance. The practical question was, whether Christianity was excluded from this college by the terms of the will. The Supreme Court of Pennsylvania had declared that 'Christianity is part of the common law of this State,' and that, 'waiving all questions of hereafter, it [Christianity] is the purest system of morality, the foremost auxiliary and only stable support of all human laws.' Under this decision it was claimed that, to teach 'the purest principles of morality,' the Bible must be taught and Christianity must have its recognition in the proposed college. After a full hearing of the case, the Supreme Court at Washington decided that, with the provisions of the will as they were, there was nothing in the plan of the college 'so derogatory and hostile to the Christian religion as to make a device for the foundation of such a college void according to the constitution and laws of Pennsylvania.' Accordingly the college was founded. From the beginning it has been under the best Christian influences, and there has been no lack of sound Christian instruction from its lay teachers and visitors. Its chapel is as important a gathering place to its students as a college chapel commonly is."

Thus has this splendid trust been most shamefully and fraudulently perverted to the service of that which the testator desired most sedulously to exclude. But it has all been done legally, under the decision of the courts; and the whole Evangelical Christian religion has been judiciously got out of that one simple word "morality"! Is there a liberal so silly as to imagine that it would not be equally, and more easily, got out of this Bible Amendment? We trust not; for the sake of the reputation of liberalism for decent brain-power, we trust not. But while the judicial construction of that "morality" clause in Girard's will was only to pervert a noble trust, the judicial construction of the word "Bible" in this Bible Amendment would be to revolutionize and ruin the institutions of a mighty republic. Where are the protests of liberal preachers, editors, writers, lecturers, meetings, conventions, individuals, against the bare proposition of such a nefarious crime against humanity? Why are they not poured forth at the very suggestion of it? We are glad that, at Paine Hall in this city, on the one hundred and forty-first anniversary of Paine's birthday, the convention called in honor of that sturdy old champion of human liberty did not omit to bear its testimony in these resolutions:—

Resolved, That this convention solemnly protests against the passage of the joint resolution, now pending in the United States Senate, which recommends for adoption by the several States a Sixteenth Amendment to the Constitution; that we cordially approve so much of the first section as forbids all sectarian appropriations, whether by national, State, or municipal authority; but that we protest against the concluding sentence of the first section, which declares that—"This article shall not be construed to prohibit the reading of the Bible in any school or institution, and it shall not have the effect to impair the rights of property already vested."

Resolved, That the effect of this proviso would be substantially to declare that the Bible is not a sectarian book,—that, as the "Inspired Word of God," it has a divine "right" to be read in the public schools, and is a part of the fundamental law of the land,—and that churches and church property have a "right" to be exempted from taxation, and thereby to tax every citizen for the propagation of the Christian religion.

Resolved, That these declarations, if made overtly or covertly by the Constitution, would make Christianity the ESTABLISHED RELIGION of the United States, the Orthodox Protestant churches the ESTABLISHED CHURCH, and the Bible a binding and supreme AUTHORITY in the courts; that the Church and the State would be thereby united, and the secular character of our republican government destroyed; and that we protest against this revolutionary subversion of our liberties in the name of public justice and the eternal rights of man.

These resolutions, or others as pointed and explicit, ought to be adopted by liberals everywhere, published forthwith in local papers throughout the country, sent to members of Congress, and followed up by every conceivable means of influencing public opinion. The principles they enunciate need to be understood by millions who now know nothing of them. When we think what good could be done at every such crisis as this by a Liberal League in every town, we confess, good friends, that we wonder why the Pentecost of Liberalism is so long delayed.

THE PETITION PRESENTED IN CONGRESS.

On February 18, the petition of the National Liberal League for a Religious Freedom Amendment to the United States Constitution was presented in the Senate by the Hon. Thomas F. Bayard, of Delaware, as indicated in the Boston Advertiser's report of the proceedings on the following day:—

Mr. Bayard presented a petition of the National Liberal League, signed by 10,860 persons in every State, favoring the adoption of an amendment to the Constitution separating Church and State. Referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

The appended letter of Senator Bayard was subsequently received:—

UNITED STATES SENATE CHAMBER,
WASHINGTON, Feb. 18, 1878.

W. H. HAMLEN, Esq., Secretary of the National Liberal League:

Dear Sir,—The petition so numerous signed was left in my committee-room, and in the pressure of debate and business was not presented until to-day.

I have just presented it to the Senate, and had it referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

Whenever that Committee shall report to the Senate, I will send you a copy.

Until they do report, no action will be taken.

Yours respectfully,

T. F. BAYARD.

The Pasadena City, (N. J.) Herald said in its issue of February 9: "The National Liberal League petition for a religious freedom amendment to the Constitution, which was signed by many citizens of Pasadena, has been sent to the Judiciary Committee of the United States Senate, and will be of great help in counteracting the strength of Senator Edmunds' proposed amendment, which favors the retention of the Bible in public schools and the exemption of churches from taxation." Undoubtedly this petition would have been more influential, if it had had more names; yet it will serve at least to bring before the Committee and the Senate the otherwise non-apparent fact that there are two opinions among the people on this momentous subject, and prevent the case from going against liberty and justice by sheer default. Remembering that in August, 1876, every Republican in the Senate voted for Senator Edmunds' Bible Amendment, while every Democrat voted against it, and that the vote then stood 28 to 16 in its favor (thereby falling by only two votes of securing the requisite two-thirds majority), the friends of secular government have so far great reason to congratulate themselves that the relative strength of the Republican party in Congress has been diminished since 1876, and not increased. If the Republicans could command a two-thirds majority, the Bible Amendment would have been forced through Congress, and fairly launched on its evil course. The strength of the Republicans has been broken none too soon; for, after having immortalized their party by abolishing negro slavery, they have proved themselves eager to revolutionize the Constitution into the perpetual charter of a Protestant Evangelical Theocracy, and thereby to create a new and worse slavery than that which they had overthrown. If this Bible Amendment should cease to be considered a strict party measure, however, no man can estimate its chances of success; and who can be confident that this change may not take place? There will be no safety for the secular principle so long as the people do not comprehend it. A tremendous responsibility rests on the liberals of America to educate the people betimes on this subject of transcendent importance, and the National Liberal League is the only practical mode of doing it.

MRS. LYDIA MARIA CHILD, who is seventy-six years old, not long ago wrote to a friend: "Life has been rather dreary to me since I lost my kind, good companion; for I have no children. The friends of old times have nearly all gone hence; and with the present generation I meet only as marbles touch each other; here and there a point comes in contact, but the spheres roll apart. Nevertheless, I have much to be thankful for; and I am thankful. I have a sane mind in a healthy body; and neither of these precious gifts is universal at the present day. I have a few friends who are very kind. And in my view of things I grow more and more unshackled."

Communications.

CLERICAL TREATMENT OF THEOLOGICAL DOUBTS.

BY CHARLES K. WHIPPLE.

There are cases, no doubt, in which thoughts like the following arise in the mind of a Roman Catholic: Since it seems conformable to justice and reason as well as to Scripture that God will render to every man according to his works,—and since that settlement is not completely made in this world,—the doctrine of purgatory, a retribution after death proportional to unrequited sin, seems just, reasonable, and probable; but, on the other hand, the doctrine of hell, a state in which repentance and reformation shall be of no avail, and in which (it is assumed) the Heavenly Father will cease to feel and act as a father, and the Savior as a savior—this seems not just, nor reasonable, nor probable.

The Roman Catholic to whom such thoughts should occur, would naturally desire to seek a solution of the difficulty by conferring with some wiser person in regard to it. He thinks first of the priest, who is assumed to be both wiser and better than himself, and who, perhaps, also seems candid and friendly. But it will be absolutely useless to ask a solution of such doubts from the priest, who is pledged by his profession and position to frown upon them as sinful. The priest must necessarily enjoin upon his inquirer to stifle and crush such doubts; to shut out the idea of them from his mind, and to receive submissively whatever the infallible Church teaches, without for a moment submitting it to the arbitration of the inquirer's sense of reason or justice.

In like manner, many an Orthodox Protestant must find it difficult to see why the body should be a necessary condition to God's forgiving sins which originate from an act of the mind, and difficult to see, therefore, why probation need end with this life; and he must therefore question the soundness of the theory that God's mercy stops at the moment when the breath leaves the body. It is not only natural, but highly desirable, that he should confer with some wiser friend to seek a solution of these difficulties. But, as in the former case, resort to a clergyman of the Orthodox faith will be a blunder, a proceeding absolutely useless, because such clergymen are pledged by their creed and their office to discountenance all such questionings, and to insist that the infallible Bible must be the arbiter, instead of justice and reason.

Ingenuous youth, however, frequently make mistakes of this sort; and one of them, now in process of education for the Christian ministry, has actually written to the Congregationalist for direction in the very case above stated; to the Congregationalist, a self-elected advocatus diaboli, an enthusiastic maintainer of the actuality and the justice of hell.

Of course the Congregationalist insists upon the infallible Bible as absolute arbiter in such matters, just as the Roman priest would upon his infallible Church. But the manner of doing this, the sugaring of the pill with an aspect of candor and liberality, is well worth noticing.

Beginning with an assurance of sincere and hearty sympathy with the difficulties of the inquirer, the editor of the Congregationalist tells him that he has mistaken the proper first point of inquiry. He should have considered, not what ought to be, but what is. "What is," that is to say infallible truth, should be looked for in the Bible; and the inquirer is told that unless he receives that book as sent from God to tell men what God thinks it wise to tell them, he is mistaken in imagining he has a call to the Christian ministry. And his duty is, the editor tells him, not only to accept the declarations of the Bible, but to steep himself in its spirit; which means, being interpreted, that if any Bible-writer affirms the reality of hell, the inquirer must not only believe it, but should persuade himself that it is a just, a wise, a beneficent arrangement; something pleasing to God and useful to man.

Next, however, comes a seeming concession, giving to the article, in the eye of the hasty reader, an aspect of candor and liberality. The editor says:—

"We do not, of course, deny that common-sense must come in as a constant factor, and that if the Bible were to seem to reveal anything from which our innate sense of right recoils, justice to all the interests involved must demand a most careful endeavor to adjust both to harmony in the conclusion."

Does this seem like granting to reason its right to a potential voice in religion, as in all other matters of human concern? If the youthful inquirer jumps to that conclusion, and writes to the editor that, having made the careful endeavor to discern justice and goodness in the Orthodox doctrine of hell, he feels compelled to reject it as horrible, atrocious, and unjustifiable, incompatible with the idea of God, and pernicious in its influence upon men, he will speedily find how little substance there was in the seeming concession; the editor will tell him, must tell him, that when accord between common-sense and a Bible declaration proves to be impossible, it is not the latter, but the former, which must give way.

The editor's second suggestion to the inquirer is this:—

"Believing, not only that Jesus Christ came into this world to save sinners, but that He also taught as one having authority, let him, with microscopic care and with unceasing prayer, go over the entire teaching of our Lord while he was upon the earth, sifting out, classifying, and arranging all faintest allusions and remotest suggestions as well as every explicit averment in regard to the subject under notice; and then and thus make up his mind what our Lord believed and taught upon it."

It is worth while here to review the set of propositions which this editor requires his pupil to assume; to take for granted as certainly true, not only irrespective of evidence, but in many cases against evidence. The pupil must believe—

1. That the whole Bible is God's word, and thus infallibly correct in all its statements, whether of fact or doctrine.

2. That unless the pupil holds this view of the contents and character of the Bible, he has no business to enter upon the work of teaching religion at all.

3. That Jesus of Nazareth was really the Messiah described and intended by the Hebrew prophets.

4. That Jesus is, by divine appointment, not only Christ, but Lord, and that his declarations are authoritative over the reason and conscience of all mankind, present and future.

5. That in the narratives purporting to be written by Matthew, Mark, Luke, and John, we have an absolutely correct account of what Jesus said. And

6. That the Orthodox interpretation of the Greek words translated "hell" and "damnation" in our version must be received as correct, notwithstanding the testimony of competent and trustworthy scholars that such translation grossly misrepresents the meaning of the original.

Instead of swallowing these propositions as if they were axioms, a course which would be absurd as well as misleading, the inquirer should (in my judgment)—

1. Hold fast his idea of reverence for God, declining to think ill of Him on the testimony of any person or any book, ancient or modern:—

2. Open his eyes to the light thrown by modern criticism upon the hypothesis of scriptural infallibility in such books as Dr. Samuel Davidson's Introduction to the Study of the New Testament, London edition of 1868; and William Rathbone Greg's Creed of Christendom, the third London edition, 1874; and The Religion of Israel, a translation from the Dutch of J. Knappert, pastor at Leyden, recently published by Roberts Brothers in this city. These books furnish adequate grounds for intelligent judgment in regard to the date and authorship of the several letters and narratives of the New Testament, and the degree of confidence which may fairly be placed in the statements therein made; and such evidence, of course, makes still more manifest the utter groundlessness of clerical assumption in regard to an "infallible inspiration" of the works in question. No wonder, then, that people pledged to maintain such assumption should counsel belief and prayer in place of rational investigation.

DON'T FORGET THE CHILDREN!

DEAR INDEX:—

I was to-day (Sunday) an interested spectator of an Orthodox Sunday-school.

I listened awhile to the singing and other exercises of the older classes, and then, by invitation, went to an adjoining room, where the "infant class" or classes were engaged in recitations. The exercises were at once simple, lively, and interesting, judging partly from the bright faces and ready answers of the little ones. The manner seemed to me admirable. There was singing, accompanied with music on a small organ, and the lisping voices made melody of an intensely Orthodox hymn, which sounded, to radical ears, as read by the lady-superintendent, like a mixture of sensationalism and superstition. But it was simple and picturesque, and so caught the children's fancy, as such things always will. Then the superintendent recited the "Lord's Prayer," the children reciting in concert. She afterward repeated, and caused them to repeat several times, three verses of the "Sermon on the Mount."

More singing followed; then short and simple recitations conducted by the teachers of the different classes.

Another hymn, read by the superintendent, the children repeating in concert, then it was sung by all; after which they all, with bowed heads, repeated "The Lord watch between thee and me when we are absent one from another."

The effect of the whole seemed to me to be admirable as to manner, whatever the matter might be. And as I looked around the pleasant room, whose walls were hung with bright-colored mottoes in tasteful frames, a thrill of pain and longing took possession of me.

I thought of the thousands of radical parents who are either thoughtlessly or helplessly forgetting their children! They themselves are alive to the questions of the hour; but they either do not think, or it is too much trouble, or they do not know how to teach the children the wonderful truths they have learned.

There is little use in agitating reforms if we so carelessly neglect work so obvious; which seems only waiting to be done!

I agree with Sara A. Underwood's suggestion that in default of radical schools we send our children to those of Orthodox churches, lest they grow up bigots or estranged from all their young companions of the day-schools. But, at best, it is only a choice of evils! Children are social beings. They like amusement; and they like it in the company of their mates.

If the children of Orthodox people have books to read, and picnics, festivals, "Christmas trees," sleigh-rides, and what not, the children of radicals will naturally desire to participate. Shall we allow them to do so at the risk of their feeling themselves to be really outsiders,—or shall we deny, and so foster the spirit of bigotry, and possibly resentment towards ourselves?

Cannot radicals see what opportunity is thus given to Orthodox teachers—an opportunity which they are not slow to take—to impress the tender minds with their doctrines and bind their hearts to the Orthodox faith "as with hooks of steel"?

Even if the children should eventually outgrow such doctrines, do we crave for them the same slow groping and struggle; the same breaking of old ties which some of us have so painfully experienced?

While we would not seek to unduly restrain or influence our children in their tendencies (for there is a limit to parental restraint and authority; a fact which some good people seem to forget), let us, at least, show as much zeal for what we believe to be their best welfare as do many of our Orthodox neighbors.

Let us teach them the truth, as it appears to us, in no dogmatic spirit, but with "charity for all, and malice toward none"; leaving them free to choose for themselves, as their own consciences, thus enlightened, may dictate.

And to this end it is to be wished that books be prepared to help parents in such work both at home and in schools.

Since Sunday is observed by the majority as a day of rest and religious teaching, I can see no objection and many reasons why radicals should use it for the same purpose.

There is one serious obstacle, however, which will for a time operate to prevent the formation of such schools in some instances. Radicals do not, as a general thing, dwell in communities, but are scattered. And the timidity and apathy which prevails also hinders their becoming known to each other even if inhabiting the same town. Some one remarks "that the general tendency of freethought at present is toward isolation." This is unfortunate, for isolation is not a good thing. It does not cause the average man or woman to become more generous or sympathetic.

For this reason organization of some sort is to be strongly desired,—a kind of "Broad Church," whose members shall only be loyal to truth, to take the place of the warm companionship which binds together the members of the various sects. It is to be hoped, also, that radicals will not forget to unloose their purse-strings, as well as their hearts, to help on the good cause. Efficient organization, untiring zeal, and unbounded liberality have helped to make the Orthodox churches what they are. Conspicuous among them for these qualities are the Catholics and Methodists. Let radicals ponder these things and "do likewise."

And when we have established such organizations, don't let us forget the children!

Let us gather them into Sunday-schools, poor and rich alike (let us have no "ragged schools"); where, with picture, recitation, festival, song, and story, we shall make glad their young hearts, and fill their young minds with golden truths: to blossom and bear fruit in the coming years when we, perchance, have set sail on the unknown, mysterious voyage.

A RADICAL MOTHER.

ONEIDA, N. Y., Feb. 10, 1878.

CHRISTIANITY AT WEST POINT.

For many of the readers of THE INDEX in the far West, the name "West Point" may call up little more than a shadowy recollection of the existence of a military post on the Hudson, where our government has established a "National Military Academy." But to one who has often visited this beautiful spot—so fair in summer green and so bright in autumn gold—it is something more than a name; it is a matter of national pride. We all remember how Washington loved it, and how Arnold sought to betray it, this—

"Gibraltar rock,
To freedom's column Nature's pedestal!"

The academy established here has been pronounced by eminent soldiers of the Old World "one of the very best military schools." Its corps of professors and tutors, its fine buildings, spacious academic halls, riding-school, barracks, observatory, laboratory, etc., and, above all, its grand campus or "plain," make it worthy of the great Republic. Here she clothes, feeds, houses, educates three hundred of the best of her youth. Nothing is neglected; even to the dancing-master the country pays for all. The Republic expects them to become true gentlemen and true soldiers, graceful in body, noble in character, manly in spirit, sans peur et sans reproche, worthy to draw swords in her defence. And therefore it is that, when the other day I read the facts I am about to set down here, I felt the flush of indignation burn on my cheek. I thought of the great Washington, and how his calm soul would have given up its serenity, could he have stood upon the "Plain" and seen young Minnie return his musket to the rack, lay off the gray uniform, and look about him in vain for a white hand to grasp in friendly good-bye.

Young Minnie entered the academy under most favorable auspices. The grammar schools of our city (of one of which young Minnie was a graduate) sent their brightest boys to try for the cadetship; but he was facile princeps among them all. More than this, he is well-built, good-looking, with a frank, manly way about him. Hosts of friends rejoiced at his victory, and hastened to provide him with means to procure his outfit. But in one respect he failed; in one thing he was wanting. "What!" you ask; "had he committed any crime? Was he vulgar or ill-bred?" Oh, no. Even his enemies admit that he was honest, refined, and gentlemanly. He would have passed the gates of heaven (if there be one) unquestioned; but the portals of West Point were closed against him! Over those portals he read the sinister words:—

"Black men, leave all hope
When ye enter here!"

This was young Minnie's crime; his skin was black! For what God gave him man condemned him. Soul, mind, and character were white; warm and generous blood flowed through his veins; but it all profited him nothing. What is imponderable in Nature, in the minds of this "noble three hundred," turned the scales against poor Minnie!

He says: "The treatment I received was enough to sicken the heart and drown the ambition of any one whose feelings were at all sensitive. I was unable to bear the unprovoked insults that were daily offered me. I was subjected constantly to a galling ostracism. With the exception of three or four, the others never spoke of me, save to curse and revile me. To speak to me was an offence," etc.

And so he allowed an examination to go by default and returned to his home. Yet this "noble three hundred" are fed, clothed, housed, educated, paid for and prayed for out of the public treasury. The eight or ten millions of colored citizens do their part in bearing the expense of this national (?) academy. Ay, more; a chaplain, a man of God (so-called), likewise paid for out of the public funds, daily inculcates the principles of humility, benevolence, and forgiveness in the minds of this "noble three hundred"; reads to them the parable of the good Samaritan; repeats the Beatitudes to them; tells them that, to deserve the privilege of "stacking arms" some day on the "heavenly campus," they must "love their neighbors as themselves"; that Jesus went to heaven with a thief, etc. And they, the "noble three hundred," have now given us an earnest of this religious teaching! They are willing to be good Christians, attend chapel, say prayers, etc.; but they must not be asked to "associate with a nigger."

Really, now, we must be reasonable. There was no West Point with a cadet corps in Jerusalem when the New Testament was written! Proh pudor! How long must the people's money be lavished to support such a mockery as the West Point chaplaincy?

INGERSOLL LOCKWOOD.

NEW YORK, JAN. 29, 1878.

MATERIALISM AGAIN.

Some time ago I wrote a short article against what I conceive to be the moral defects of materialism, which has provoked some dissenting criticism from several of the contributors to THE INDEX. I did not assail materialists as some of my critics seem to infer, but confined my brief remarks to the abstract system of belief which limits human life to this world. That the idea of an immortal life in which the individuality acquired in this is perpetual and developed, is ennobling and encouraging in all of the vicissitudes of man's present existence, seems to me self-evident. I can conceive that one might disbelieve in a future life of any kind for lack of evidence; but I cannot comprehend how a person enjoying a well-developed consciousness of a noble selfhood in this world should not desire its continuation. Is there not something indescribably revolting to our strongest instincts of being in the thought of annihilation? Does it not chill the deep life-currents of the heart and cloud the bright dreams of hope to think that all this sublime reality of which each human being is an embodiment is doomed to eternal extinction? Does not the belief that man will retain his individual consciousness after death, and continue to drink deeper into the fountain of life, clothe every human being with a dignity and glory that could not invest a transient organism of bone and muscle that must in a few years dissolve into eternal oblivion, and be as though it had never been? Is not friendship more sacred and inviolable when we feel that it is an eternal principle? Is not love more pure and beautiful when confiding hearts feel that they are united by deathless ties? Does not every affection and aspiration of our being expand and strengthen at the thought of a life of activity and development beyond the grave?

My objection to materialism is, that it is defective in moral inspiration; that it paralyzes the loftiest and grandest hopes of human nature, and hence retards the growth of those spiritual aspirations and energies that seek a perfect selfhood.

It is objected that the hope of a future life is a selfish desire that the dreams of the believer who follows faith into other worlds cause him to neglect this life and its duties. Is it selfish to desire to live a long life of useful activity in this world rather than die before mind and body have attained maturity? What is the difference between the nature of that desire which would have life continue sixty years rather than twenty and that which would have it continue forever? The hope of immortality is but the hope of a continued life after death. And I can see no more selfishness in the desire to live in some other State than there is in the desire to live here. Will some of my unselfish friends who champion the philosophy of materialism explain why it is noble and magnanimous to esteem this life, and yet selfish and puerile to hope that there are other stages of progressive action through which we will pass after death?

But why does the belief that human life will continue through the infinite future a conscious reality, that every thought and deed in this world forms a part of an eternal character, tend to weaken individual responsibility? The argument is inherently preposterous. Present duty derives its highest sanctity from the thought that we obey an eternal voice when we follow the dictates of conscience. Is virtue less lovely and attractive because it is eternal? Shall I feel less inclined to devote my life to the welfare of my fellows because I am working for immortal beings whose weal or woe for countless ages depends to some extent on the lives they live here? If I see my brother pursuing a course of life that I think will mar his happiness in the veiled future beyond death, shall I be less concerned for his reformation than if I believed that in a few years it would be the same to him as though he had lived a pure and upright life?

That there are conceptions of a future life which are mean and contemptible to a noble mind I freely admit. But these unworthy views of the future destiny of man are not to be urged as an objection to the hope of immortality any more than ignoble ideas of this life are to be charged against the higher conceptions which some entertain and exemplify.

I admire the nobility of that sentiment that does not ask a future reward for doing right here and now. I do not believe in that kind of virtue that is not its own present reward. But the belief that goodness is eternal in a conscious life, that each individual human being is an heir to an immortal existence, seems to me to crown humanity with a glory, and virtue with an excellence that the cold, hopeless philosophy of materialism cannot impart.

I have already exceeded the limits contemplated in the beginning of this article, and must omit much that I would like to say on this subject. Now will materialists who may read this believe that I have spoken against their view of life and not against themselves, and that I can "abide" them personally with the same respect I have for all honest thinkers?

H. CLAY NEVILLE.

OZARK, Mo., Jan. 23, 1878

"MISTAKEN PREMISES."

EDITOR INDEX:—

If "F. S. C." will look at H. D. Macleod's Economical Philosophy, Vol. II., p. 477 et seq., perhaps he will think differently about "mistaken premises."

In 1821, the Bank of England was not required to limit its issues to the amount of coin and bullion in the bank. That was not demanded until the passage of the Bank Act of 1844; and even that act so utterly failed to accomplish this limitation, that on April 10, 1846, the bank-notes held by the public were more than twice the amount of the gold in the bank, the latter being less than £10,000,000. As bullion can be drawn out from the Bank of England, not alone by bank-notes, but also by the cheques of those having deposits at the bank, every ounce of gold can be abstracted without diminishing the number of bank-notes in the hands of the public.

Our Resumption Act makes no provision for the re-issue of greenbacks. The Secretary of the United States Treasury, in his recent report, says: "Existing laws do not clearly define whether United States notes, when redeemed after Jan. 1, 1879, may be re-issued"; and he furthermore adds that this question "should be settled by distinct provisions of law." Secretary Sherman favors their re-issue (at a maximum of $300,000,000), and the maintenance of their legal tender quality. Should Congress follow his recommendation in this regard, as well as by restoring the silver dollar, the difficulties of resumption would doubtless be lessened.

If we had the gold with which to redeem notes, it seems highly probable that it would not be largely called for, unless there should be great demand for it in Europe. But if the public know that we have not such gold, the liability to calls on the treasury will be greater, and may seriously embarrass the government by putting the latter in the power of the gold brokers, thus causing forced resumption to cost us in the end more than it is worth.

Are not the five-franc pieces of France "honest"? They are legal tender, and two hundred and fifty million of them are kept in circulation at par in France, side by side with gold, though they are coined at the ratio of 15 $\frac{1}{2}$ of silver to 1 of gold by weight, giving a higher value to silver than we propose in the restoration of the old dollar. In Germany, two hundred million legal tender silver thalers circulate today, side by side with gold, at par.

Why should it, then, seem incredible that our dollar, if restored, would be equally at par?

My previous estimate of our total of paper money must be corrected to $868,000,000, of which about $317,000,000 are outstanding National bank-notes.

E. J. L.

WEST MERIDEN, Ct., Feb. 8.

THE CAUSE IN IOWA.

The coming State Convention is the topic of principal interest to the Iowa liberals. We have sent copies of the Call to many of our local papers, and to friends of the cause in different parts of the State; and I think that a fair proportion of these papers will publish the Call. The friends to whom I have written all seem to be willing to work for the success of the meeting. Says Mr. J. W. Frank, of Lyons: "Your letter with Call received. I am very glad to do anything for a cause that I believe to be for the good of all." Mr. M. C. Thomas, of Redfield, writes: "We are talking of starting a Liberal League in this place." Mr. J. E. Frick, of Toledo, writes that the Toledo Times will publish the Call. From other points in the State come cheering reports.

The Burlington, Cedar Rapids, and Northern Railroads will sell return tickets at one-half the usual rates, to all who produce certificates that they have attended the Convention and paid full fare to West Liberty. The Central Railroad of Iowa will make the same reduction to all who paid, when going to the Convention, full fare to Grinnell. This reduction will apply only to those who purchase their return tickets over the Iowa Central, at Grinnell, and over the Burlington, Cedar Rapids, and Northern at West Liberty. This reduction will be of benefit to those who reside either in the northern or southern part of the State, at points reached by these roads. At West Liberty and Grinnell you change cars for Des Moines, going over the Cedar Rapids, Iowa, and Pennsylvania Railroads.

In my next I hope to be able to announce the arrangements which shall have been made for the accommodation of visitors.

I understand that Mr. Strong, the resident member of our committee, is perfecting all necessary arrangements. As to the work to be done at Des Moines, we must organize a State League or Association; and we need to pay particular attention to the formation of the Executive Committee. An earnest, active liberal in each county of the State is wanted,—one who will immediately organize the county sub-committee and go to work. To this end I desire to hear from every liberal in Iowa. The question is to you! "Will you serve upon the Executive Committee?" If you cannot, please send me the name of some one in your county who can. If you desire an answer, please enclose stamp, as the Committee has no fund upon which to draw for expenses. Organize Local Leagues in every town in the State where possible. Make your Leagues auxiliary to the National League. Leagues have been organized at Toledo, Tama County, and at Adel, Dallas County. Let us multiply such associations by the hundred. Some object that organization now is premature; that it will but stimulate the foes of civil and mental freedom to greater activity, and rivet our chains the tighter. We must not flatter ourselves with the fond hope that the agents of reaction are not at work. They work while we sleep. This is evidenced in a hundred different ways. Just look at the pending constitutional amendment; at the closing of the Exposition upon Sunday; and at the present crusade against liberal editors and publishers. The enemies of liberty and equal rights now work in the dark; we will organize and force them to come out into the light that the people may see what their nefarious designs really are. The very argument that organization is premature because it will anger our tyrants and induce them to bind us the more securely, is the most conclusive that could be produced in favor of organization of work. If we cannot organize to secure the removal of certain abuses, without bringing down upon us still more heavily these and added wrongs, then, in the name of justice, let us be up and doing, that we may remove such a foul blot from the escutcheon of our common country and leave our children free. In the evolution of rights we must not forget that we are factors of the great problem. Come to Des Moines all who can, and help us to bear aloft the standard of Truth upon which is inscribed,—

"The greatest of rights is equal rights."

Every freeman to the front,

Pause ye never, nor parley;

Yourselves bear the battle's brunt;

And sure your reward shall be.

If each one of us, individually, does his or her duty all will be well.

E. C. WALKER,

Of the Iowa State Com. N. L. L.

PRACTICAL SUGGESTIONS ABOUT ORGANIZING.

WORCESTER, Jan. 29, 1878.

MR. J. A. J. WILCOX, Treasurer National Liberal League:—Enclosed find two dollars,—mine and Elizabeth S. Nash's annual subscription to the National Liberal League. Money has been said to be the root of all evil; whether that is so or not, it has come to be the tap root of success in the accomplishment of any great purpose. How to get the funds necessary is a most important consideration. Politicians before important elections are pretty careful to count noses. Can't Liberals take a lesson from them? There are objections urged to the organization of Liberal Leagues such as these: "Numbers small—can't get them together—want a hall—must have lectures—no money—so what is the use?"

Now it is very easy to suppose there might be in every town at least one individual who might take upon himself to find one other person in every school-district who would go through the district, and take the name of every one friendly to the purposes of the League. Let the individuals come together as a self-constituted executive board, and resolve to see every person, man or woman, in their several sections, lay the whole subject before them, and say further to those friendly ones that it is very desirable that a small contribution, one in noway burdensome, should be taken quarterly, say five, ten, twenty-five, fifty, or even one cent. In this way every one would become known, all would grow more and more interested. Here would be initiated an informal organization, one that wouldn't frighten to begin with. Probably a large part of those classed as liberals have no connection with the churches,—no way burdened with church extravaganzas. They are, so to speak, left out in the cold; no connection or sympathy with any organization for any sort of purpose. Now if these people could be induced to give their names and pay regularly the smallest sum, they would soon warm up, have new life, have an ideal purpose in life. Now who can say there is not here a good opening for missionary work? Yes, but the will—the will—the will!

Respectfully yours, CHARLES NASH.

A NEW HEALTH JOURNAL.

To save and bless the bodies of men as well as their souls, to promote physical purity and perfection, and to promulgate the glorious gospel of the laws of health; to distribute knowledge and dissipate the dreadful shadows of disease; to redeem men from ignorance, vice, and degradation, and point out the pathway to peace and happiness; to redress wrong and preach the righteousness of right living; to alleviate suffering and add to the joys of human existence; to correct the antiquated abuses of the ages, and to usher in a more intelligent future,—such is the mission of The Physiologist and Family Physician,—a monthly paper published by the New York Physiological Society. Subscription price $1.50 per year. Under the editorial management of Sara B. Chase, A.M., M.D., Physiological Rooms, No. 56

West 33d Street, New York, to whom subscriptions and communications should be addressed.

The following table of contents of No. 1 will give an idea of the scope of the work proposed:—

GENERAL ARTICLES.

The Cause and Prevention of Disease.—Walter R. Bartlett, M.D.

A Short Sermon upon Health.

Equality of Women.—Elizabeth Oakes Smith.

Husbands and Wives.—Sara B. Chase, M.D.

Ozone, the great Disinfecting and Sanitary Power in Nature.—E. G. Cook, M.D.

Poisonous Gases in Sleeping Apartments.

Breaks and Follies of Fashion.—S. H. Preston.

Better Beliefs Needed.—S. B. C.

When Conception becomes a Crime.

The Cause of Diseased Mental Conditions.—Nelson Stear.

EDITORIAL DEPARTMENT.

Greeting: The New York Physiological Society.

FAMILY PHYSICIAN.

Hints on Nursing the Sick.

An easy mode of Oozing a sick-room.

Constipation.—Pathology and Treatment.

during Pregnancy.

" of Infants.

Infanticide by Opium.—Case in practice.

EMERGENCIES.

Opium—Laudanum Poisoning.—Antidotes.

DOMESTIC.

New York Fashions, Recipes for Cooking.

THE INQUIRER.

Questions answered.

Subscriptions should be sent at once, as it is desired to issue the initial No. by the 1st of March, 1878.

By order of the New York Physiological Society.

S. H. PASTOR, Rec. Sec.

A WEST VIRGINIA LIBERALIST.

WESTON, W. Va., Jan. 30, 1878.

Dr. A. M. Dent, the member of the Executive Committee for West Virginia, is spoken of by the Wheeling Intelligencer, the leading newspaper of the Commonwealth as "one of the most profound thinkers and accomplished scholars in the State."

It is due to Dr. Dent, through whose influence the liberal movement in West Virginia is assuming character and shape, that he should be commended for his generous efforts in behalf of religious freedom; and I pay no idle compliment to the liberals of West Virginia when I assert that their leader is one whose ability and standing has given to the freethought a consideration it has not attained in any other State south of Mason and Dixon's line. Our community (or, at least, the intelligent part of it) has devoured the few papers which have reached here from THE INDEX office; and the platform of the Rochester Convention can now secure hundreds of votes in this county. In Wheeling (the largest city in the State) are congregated hosts of liberalists; but they are of that class spoken of by Chancellor Haven in reply to Col. Ingersoll: "They have not enough courage to battle for an idea,—no matter how noble it is." At Martinsburgh, Charleston, Parkersburgh, and other large towns ("large" for us), we have lots of liberals; and they seem to have been waiting for a leader, such as Dr. Dent has proven himself to be, to lead them into organization in behalf of intelligent and cultured freethought. We shall hold a meeting here on the 22d of February; and you may expect to hear of others in various portions of the State. West Virginia, "the young child of the storm," freed from human slavery, and built up and refined by public free schools, will take her part in the coming battle for liberty of mind, as she did during the struggle of the war for human rights.

JAB. W. WOFFENDIN.

THE Scientific American contained the first announcement of what may be the most wonderful invention of the day. Nothing could be more incredible than the likelihood of once more hearing the voice of the dead; yet the invention of the new instrument is said to render this possible hereafter. It is true that the voices are stilled; but whoever has spoken or whoever may speak into the mouth-piece of the phonograph, and whose words are recorded by it, has the assurance that his speech may be reproduced audibly in his own tones long after he himself has turned to dust. A strip of indented paper travels through a little machine; the sounds of the latter are magnified, and posterity centuries hence hear us as plainly as if we were present. Speech has become, as it were, immortal. The Scientific American says: "The possibilities of the future are not much more wonderful than those of the present. The orator in Boston speaks; the indented strip of paper is the tangible result; but this travels under a second machine which may connect with the telephone. Not only is the speaker heard now in San Francisco, for example, but by passing the strip again under the reproducer, he may be heard to-morrow, or next year, or next century. His speech in the first instance is recorded and transmitted simultaneously, and indefinite repetition is possible. The new invention is purely mechanical,—no electricity is involved. It is a simple affair of vibrating plates, thrown into vibration by the human voice. It is crude yet, but the principle has been found, and modifications and improvements are only a matter of time. So also are its possibilities other than those already noted. Will letter-writing be a proceeding of the past? Why not, if by simply talking into a mouth-piece our speech is recorded on paper, and our correspondent can by the same paper hear us speak? Are we to have a new kind of books? There is no reason why the orations of our modern Ciceros should not be recorded and detachably bound so that we can run the indented slips through the machine, and in the quiet of our own apartments listen again, and as often as we will, to the eloquent words. Nor are we restricted to spoken words. Music may be crystallized as well. Imagine an opera or an oratorio, sung by the greatest living vocalists, thus recorded, and capable of being repeated as we desire."

Advertisements.

THE PATRONAGE

of the liberal advertising public is respectfully solicited for THE INDEX. The attempt will be honestly made to keep the advertising pages of THE INDEX in entire harmony with its general character and principles, and thus to furnish to the public an advertising medium which shall be not only profitable to its patrons, but also worthy of their most generous support. To this end, all improper or "blind" advertisements, all quack advertisements, and all advertisements believed to be fraudulent or unjust to any one, will be excluded from these columns.

THE INDEX must not be held responsible for any statement made by advertisers, who will in all cases accept the responsibility for their own statements.

ADVERTISING RATES.

For 1 to 12 insertions, 10c per line.
 "13 " 25 " 8 " "
 "26 " 51 " 6 " "
 "52 " " 5 " "

On half-column advertisements, a discount of 10 per cent. will be made; on full-column advertisements, a discount of 25 per cent.

On all advertisements for which cash is paid in advance, a further discount of 25 per cent. on the total, as above calculated, will be made. FRANCIS E. ABBOT, Editor.

TO ADVERTISERS.

The following states the experience of a successful Bookseller who has advertised in THE INDEX:—

TOLEDO, Ohio, Sept. 20, 1872.
 TO THE INDEX ASSO., Toledo, O.:
Gentlemen,—Having had occasion to advertise in your paper during the past two years quite largely, I take pleasure in stating that I have always obtained very satisfactory returns—better in fact than from book advertisements in any other paper I have advertised in. Not only have I obtained immediate results, but orders have frequently been received months after the insertion of the advertisement, showing that your paper is kept on file and referred to by your readers.
 Yours truly,
 HENRY S. STEBBINS.

Special arrangements will be made at reduced terms for long-time or extended advertisements. Address

THE INDEX,
 No. 231 WASHINGTON STREET,
 Boston.

CULTURED FREE THOUGHT.

The Index Association,

Office, No. 231 WASHINGTON ST., BOSTON, publish

THE INDEX,

A Weekly Paper devoted to Free and Rational Religion.

It is the object of THE INDEX to give public utterance to the boldest, most cultivated, and best matured thought of the age on all religious questions, and to apply it directly to the social and political amelioration of society.

It is edited by FRANCIS E. ABBOT, with the following list of Editorial Contributors:—

O. B. FROTHINGHAM, New York City.
 WILLIAM J. POTTER, New Bedford, Mass.
 WILLIAM H. SPENCER, Haverhill, Mass.
 MRS. E. D. CHENEY, Jamaica Plain, Mass.
 GEORGE JACOB HOLYOAKE, London, Eng.
 DAVID H. CLARK, Florence, Mass.
 MRS. ELIZABETH CADY STANTON, Tenny, N.J.
 J. L. STODDARD, Boston.
 ELIZUR WRIGHT, Boston.
 C. D. B. MILLS, Syracuse, N.Y.
 W. D. LE SUEUR, Ottawa, Can.
 BENJ. F. UNDERWOOD, Thorndike, Mass.
 ALBERT WARREN KELSEY, St. Louis, Mo.

Every liberal should subscribe for THE INDEX as the best popular exponent of Religious Liberalism. Every Christian minister, and every thinking church-member, should subscribe for it, as the clearest, most candid, and most scholarly exposition of the differences between Free Thought and Evangelical Christianity, and as the best means of becoming well informed of the arguments and the movements which the Church will have to meet in the future.

Almost every number contains a discourse or leading article, which alone is worth the price of one year's subscription.

Prof. MAX MUELLER, of Oxford, England, in a letter to the Editor published in THE INDEX for January 4, 1873, says: "That the want of a journal entirely devoted to Religion in the widest sense of the word should be felt in America—that such a journal should have been started and so powerfully supported by the best minds of your country—is a good sign of the times. There is no such journal in England, France, or Germany; though the number of so-called religious or theological periodicals is, as you know, very large." And later "I read the numbers of your INDEX with increasing interest."

Send $3.20 for one year, including postage, or 6 cents for three months on trial.

Address THE INDEX,
 No. 231 Washington Street, Boston.

PUBLICATIONS

OTHER

FREE

RELIGIOUS

ASSOCIATION.

Freedom and Fellowship in Religion. A volume of ten essays upon speculative and practical problems of religion, by D. A. Wasson, Samuel Longfellow, Samuel Johnson, John Weiss, W. J. Potter, F. E. Abbot, O. B. Frothingham, J. W. Chadwick, T. W. Higginson, and Mrs. E. D. Cheney, and extracts from Addresses by Ralph Waldo Emerson, Lucretia Mott, Robert Dale Owen, Dr. Bartol, Wendell Phillips, Rabbi Wise, Horace Seaver, A. B. Alcott, Lucy Stone, Charles H. Malcom, Julia Ward Howe, and others,—all given on the platform of the Free Religious Association. Price (reduced) $1.50.

"One purpose of this volume is to give an answer to the question, What is the meaning of the Free Religious Association?"

Proceedings of Fifth Annual Meeting, 1873. Contains essays by J. W. Chadwick on "Liberty and the Church in America," by C. D. B. Mills on "Religion as the Expression of a Permanent Sentiment of the Human Mind," and by O. B. Frothingham on "The Religion of Humanity," with addresses by Bowland Connor, Celia Burleigh, Lucretia Mott, A. B. Alcott, C. A. Bartol, Horace Seaver, Alexander Loos, and others.

Proceedings of Sixth Annual Meeting, 1873. Contains essays by Samuel Johnson on "Freedom in Religion," and by John Weiss on "Religion in Freedom," with addresses by Wm. C. Gannett, Robert Dale Owen, T. W. Higginson, Samuel Longfellow, J. B. Thomson, F. E. Abbot, and Lucretia Mott.

Proceedings of Seventh Annual Meeting, 1874. Contains verbatim reports of President Frothingham's address on "The Validity of the Free Religious Platform," of Dr. Bartol's essay on "The Religious Signs of the Times," of Rabbi Sonnenschein's speech on "Reformed Judaism," and of the statements by Messrs. Calthrop, Abbot, and Higginson of their respective attitudes towards Christianity,—as "Christian," "Anti-Christian," and "Extra-Christian,"—together with the Secretary's Annual Report, and letters from Keshub Chunder Sen, Frederick Douglass, and D. A. Wasson.

Proceedings of Eighth Annual Meeting, 1875. Contains Essays by Wm. C. Gannett, on "The Present Constructive Tendencies in Religion," and by Francis E. Abbot, on "Construction and Destruction in Religion," and addresses by T. W. Higginson, Lucretia Mott, Chas. G. Ames, O. B. Frothingham, B. F. Underwood, S. P. Putnam, and E. S. Morse.

Proceedings of Ninth Annual Meeting, 1876. Contains a full abstract of the interesting discussion at the Business Meeting on the Practical Methods and Work of the Association; the annual report of the Executive Committee; address of the President, O. B. Frothingham; essay by James Parton, on "The Relation of Religion to the State" (or, as he styles it, "Cathedrals and Beer"), with addresses on the subject by Miss Susan E. Wixon and Rev. M. J. Savage; essay by Samuel Longfellow, on "The Relation of Free Religion to Churches," with the addresses that followed it by Prof. Felix Adler, Rev. Henry Blanchard, Rev. Brooke Herford, and John Weiss,—together with letters from Judge Doe, Rev. Joseph Cook, and others, invited to speak.

Proceedings of Tenth Annual Meeting, 1877. Contains Essays by Rev. Wm. E. Alger, on "Steps towards Religious Emancipation in Christendom," and by C. D. B. Mills, Esq., on "Internal Dangers to Free Thought and Free Religion"; Addresses by O. B. Frothingham, Wm. Henry Channing, Rabbi Lasker, Dr. J. L. Dudley, and T. W. Higginson; and tenth annual reports of the Executive Committee, Treasurer, etc.

Any one of the above pamphlets of "PROCEEDINGS" sent to any address for Five cents received in postage stamps; and more at the same rate. Sold also for Five cents at the office.

For series of important Tracts see last page of THE INDEX.

These publications are for sale at the office of the Free Religious Association, 231 Washington Street, Boston. The Annual Reports for 1868 and 1871 cannot be supplied, and the supply of others previous to that of 1873 is quite limited and at special rates. Orders by mail may be addressed "Free Religious Association, 231 Washington Street, Boston, Mass."

WM. J. POTTER, Sec. F. R. A.

INDEX TRACTS.

No. 1.—Truths for the Times, by F. E. Abbot, contains the "Fifty Affirmations" and "Modern Principles." Mr. CHARLES DARWIN, author of "The Origin of Species," says, in a letter to the editor not originally intended for publication, but subsequently authorized to be used: "I have now read 'TRUTHS FOR THE TIMES,' and I admire them from my inmost heart; and I agree to almost every word." New Edition. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00.

No. 2.—Fear of the Living God, by O. B. Frothingham, exposes the debasing character of the popular notions of God, and presents conceptions of him that are worthy of the nineteenth century. New Edition. Price 5 cents; 12 copies 50 cents.

No. 3.—Lecture on the Bible, by the Rev. Charles Voysey, of England, is an overwhelming demonstration of the imperfections and errors of the Bible, both in the Old and the New Testaments. New Edition. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00.

No. 4.—Christian Propagandism, by F. E. Abbot, is an exposure of the weakness, costliness, and inefficiency of the System of Foreign Missions. Full of Figures, Facts, and Interesting Extracts. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00.

No. 5.—"God in the Constitution," by Rev. Arthur B. Bradford, opposes the proposed Theological Amendment to the United States Constitution. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00.

No. 6.—"The Sabbath," by Parker Pillsbury, denounces Sabbatarian superstition. New Edition. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00.

No. 7.—"Compulsory Education," by F. E. Abbot, maintains the right of every child to be educated, and the duty of the State to ensure it an education. Price 5 cents; 12 copies 50 cents.

No. 8.—The Present Heaven, by O. B. Frothingham, treats of a subject that interests everybody. New Edition. Price 5 cents; 12 copies 50 cents.

No. 9.—The Christian Amendment, by F. E. Abbot, shows the dangerous character of the attempt to interpolate the Evangelical Christian Creed in the U. S. Constitution. Price 5 cents; 12 copies 50 cents.

No. 10.—The Impeachment of Christianity, by F. E. Abbot. Fourth Ten Thousand. Sent for free distribution to any one who will distribute it, in packages of from five to one hundred copies.

No. 11.—The God of Science, by F. E. Abbot, attempts to show the real influence of modern science upon the Idea of God. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00.

No. 12.—Is Romanism Real Christianity? Two essays by Francis W. Newman and F. E. Abbot. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00.

No. 13.—On the Vision of Heaven, by Prof. F. W. Newman, of England, analyzes the Christian conception of Heaven. Price 5 cents; 12 copies 50 cents.

No. 14.—A Study of Religion: The Name and the Thing, by F. E. Abbot, attempts to show that the popular derivation of the word Religion is incorrect; that the popular conceptions of Religion itself are inadequate; and that a new conception of it, based on the Law of Evolution, consistent with absolute Freedom of Thought, and independent even of belief in God, is the necessary condition of the perpetuity of Religion among men. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00.

No. 15.—The Battle of Syracuse. Two Essays by Rev. James Freeman Clarke, D.D., and F. E. Abbot discussing the Authority of Christianity. Price 10 cents; 12 copies for $1.00. Address

THE INDEX, 231 WASHINGTON STREET,
 Boston, Mass.

1 8 7 8.

THE INDEX, A Weekly Journal

DEVOTED TO FREE RELIGION.

PUBLISHED BY THE INDEX ASSOCIATION,

AT
 No. 231 Washington Street, Boston.

EDITOR:
 FRANCIS ELLINGWOOD ABBOT.

EDITORIAL CONTRIBUTORS:

O. B. FROTHINGHAM, New York City.
 W. J. POTTER, New Bedford, Mass.
 W. H. SPENCER, Haverhill, Mass.
 MRS. E. D. CHENEY, Jamaica Plain, Mass.
 GEORGE JACOB HOLYOAKE, England.
 DAVID H. CLARK, Florence, Mass.
 MRS. ELIZABETH CADY STANTON, Tenny, N.J.
 J. L. STODDARD, Boston.
 ELIZUR WRIGHT, Boston.
 C. D. B. MILLS, Syracuse, N.Y.
 W. D. LE SUEUR, Ottawa, Can.
 BENJ. F. UNDERWOOD, Thorndike, Mass.
 ALBERT WARREN KELSEY, St. Louis, Mo.

THE INDEX aims—

To increase general intelligence with respect to religion:

To foster a nobler spirit and quicken a higher purpose, both in society and in the individual:

To substitute knowledge for ignorance, right for wrong, truth for superstition, freedom for slavery, character for creed, catholicity for bigotry, love for hate, humanitarianism for sectarianism, devotion to universal ends for absorption in selfish schemes.

In brief, to hasten the day when Free Religion shall take the place of dogmatism and ecclesiasticism throughout the world, and when the welfare of humanity here and now shall be the aim of all private and public activities.

In addition to its general objects, the practical object to which THE INDEX is specially devoted is the ORGANIZATION OF THE LIBERALS OF THE COUNTRY, for the purpose of securing the more complete and consistent secularization of the political and educational institutions of the United States. The Church must give place to the Republic in the affections of the people. The last vestiges of ecclesiastical control must be wiped out of the Constitutions and Statutes of the several States in order to bring them into harmony with the National Constitution. To accomplish this object, the Liberals must make a united demand, and present an unbroken front, and the chief practical aim of THE INDEX will be henceforth to organize a great NATIONAL PARTY OF FREEDOM. Let every one who believes in this movement give it direct aid by helping to increase the circulation of THE INDEX.

SPECIAL FEATURES.

The publication of a valuable leading paper or essay of a thoughtful character, in each issue, will continue to be one of the most marked features of THE INDEX.

Regular editorial contributions will continue to be furnished by the well-known eminent writers who have already done so much to give to THE INDEX its present high position. Other interesting correspondence, communications, extracts from valuable books and periodicals, and miscellaneous articles, will also be published; and such improvements will be made from time to time as circumstances shall render possible.

AGENTS.

Local Agents for THE INDEX are wanted in every city and town throughout the country. The most liberal terms are offered.

TERMS.

The price of THE INDEX is Three Dollars a year, payable in advance; and 20 cents postage for the year; and at the same rate for shorter periods. All remittances of money must be at the sender's risk, unless forwarded by cheque, registered letter, or post-office money order. The name, with address in full, must be accompanied with the money in each case.

Address THE INDEX,
 No. 231 Washington Street, Boston.

$66 a week in your own town. Terms and $4 outfit free. Address H. HALLITT & Co., Portland, Maine.

$5 to $20 per day at home. Samples worth $5 free. Address STRINSON & Co., Portland, Maine.

GOLD Any worker can make $12 a day at home. Co. v. 0. 61 free. Address TRUE & Co. Augusta, Maine.

FOR SALE.—STEAMBOAT with or without Power. Length 26 ft., beam 7 ft. Apply to WILLIAM PHILLIPS, Grain Elevator, East Boston.

TO BOOK-BUYERS

Please examine the revised list of POPULAR BOOKS on the opposite side of this page. Any OBTAINABLE BOOK NOT IN THIS LIST will be furnished to order. Address THE INDEX, 231 Washington St., Boston.

E. A. SAWTELLE,
PIANO-FORTE TUNER.

Fifteen years' experience. Satisfaction warranted. Organs skillfully tuned and regulated. Orders left at THE INDEX office, or at Oliver Ditson & Co.'s, 451 Washington St., Boston.

THE INDEX
IN ENGLAND.

THE INDEX will be forwarded free by post to any part of the United Kingdom on receipt of an annual subscription of Fifteen Shillings. For Half Year, Eight Shillings. Remittances should be made by International P.O. Order payable to Francis Ellingwood Abbot. Address THE INDEX, 231 Washington Street, Boston, U.S.A.

MARCH MAGAZINES

TO LOAN.

All the leading Literary and Scientific Magazines to loan to anybody. The reading of a dozen for the cost of one.

New Books and Standard Books, almost any you choose to ask for, and as many copies of any book as may be demanded.

Loaned to all parts of the United States. Immense catalogues of old and new books offered at great bargains for cash, or in exchange for other books.

AMERICAN BOOK EXCHANGE,
55 Beekman Street, New York.

Booksellers and Newsdealers act as our agents.

PENNSYLVANIA RAILROAD.
GREAT THROUGH LINE
AND UNITED STATES MAIL ROUTE.

The attention of the travelling public is respectfully invited to some of the merits of this great highway, in the confident assertion and belief that no other line can offer equal inducements as a route of through travel. In

CONSTRUCTION AND EQUIPMENT

PENNSYLVANIA RAILROAD stands confessedly at the head of American railways. The track is double the entire length of the line, of steel rails laid on heavy oak ties, which are embedded in a foundation of rock ballast eighteen inches in depth. All bridges are of iron or stone, and built upon the most approved plans. Its passenger cars, while eminently safe and substantial, are at the same time models of comfort and elegance.

THE SAFETY APPLIANCES in use on this line well illustrate the far-seeing and liberal policy of its management, in accordance with which the utility only of an improvement and not its cost has been the question of consideration. Among many may be noticed

The Block System of Safety Signals, Janney Coupler, Buffer, and Platform, The Wharton Patent Switch, and the Westinghouse Air-Brake, forming in conjunction with a perfect double track and road-bed a combination of safeguards against accidents which have rendered them practically impossible.

Pullman Palace Cars are run on all Express Trains from New York, Philadelphia, Baltimore, and Washington, to Chicago, Cincinnati, Louisville, Indianapolis, and St. Louis.

WITHOUT CHANGE, and to all the principal points in the far West and South with but one change of cars. Connections are made in Union Depots, and are assured to all important points.

The Scenery of the Pennsylvania Route is admitted to be unsurpassed in the world for grandeur, beauty, and variety. Superior refreshment facilities are provided. Employees are courteous and attentive, and it is an inevitable result that a trip by the Pennsylvania Railroad must form

A Pleasing and Memorable Experience.

Tickets for sale at the lowest rates at the Ticket Offices of the Company in all important cities and towns.

FRANK THOMSON, L. P. FARMER,
General Manager. General Passenger Agent.
C. B. HALDEMAN, New England Agent,
203 and 205 Washington St., Boston, Mass.

GIRLS'—5 nice perforated notions for fancy work 10 cts. J. W. RUSSELL, Newton, Mass.

SENT FREE on application—BRIGGS & BRU'S Flower and Vegetable Catalogue. Our large crops enable us to SELL SEEDS LOW.

ROCHESTER, N.Y., or CHICAGO, ILLS.

WEST NEWTON

English and Classical School.

The twenty-fifth school year of this Family and Day School for both sexes will begin WEDNESDAY, Sept. 19, 1877. For Circular and information apply to NATH'L T. ALLEN, West Newton, Mass.

THE INDEX AS AN
ADVERTISING MEDIUM.

Testimony of one who has tried it.

FLORENCE, Iowa, Jan. 5, 1878.

... THE INDEX is the best advertising medium which I have tried.

E. C. WALKER.

PHOTOGRAPHS OF
COL. INGERSOLL!

Down to hard times prices. Cards, 15 cents each; 2 for 25 cents; 5 for 50 cents. Cabinet size, 25 cents each; 2 for 40 cents. Send stamp for club list of Freethought and Scientific papers.

E. C. WALKER,

Lock-Box B, Florence, Iowa.

BOUND VOLUMES OF THE

INDEX for

1 8 7 7,

Complete for the Past Year, are now ready for delivery at this Office. Sent by express at the purchaser's expense. Price $3.00, in advance. Address THE INDEX, 231 Washington Street, Boston.

MADAME FOY'S
CORSET SKIRT SUPPORTER

Increases in Popularity every year, And for HEALTH, COMFORT, and STYLE is acknowledged the BEST ARTICLE of the kind ever made. For sale by all leading jobbers and retailers. Beware of imitations and infringements.

MANUFACTURED SOLELY BY

FOY & HARRISON,

New Haven, Conn.

THE BEST PORTRAIT OF
THOMAS PAINE.

Engraved by the famous W. Sharpe from Romney's celebrated portrait—

Heliotype Copy

by James R. Osgood & Co., of Boston. This is a beautiful work of art, and by all odds the very best likeness of Thomas Paine to be found. It is 10x8 inches in size, and will be mailed post-paid on receipt of $1.00. Address THE INDEX, 231 Washington Street, Boston.

NEW SUBSCRIBERS WANTED.

PREMIUMS

for NEW SUBSCRIBERS—$3.20 to be remitted in advance with each name sent in.

For One New Subscriber.

Either a complete set of Index Tracts; a bound copy of the Report of the "Centennial Congress of Liberals" at Philadelphia, July 4, 1876; any three Reports of the "Annual Meetings of the Free Religious Association" since 1871; Huxley's Origin of Species; John W. Chadwick's Book of Poems; or any obtainable book not costing over $1.

For Two New Subscribers.

Either a set of photographs of "leading Index writers"; a copy of Ingersoll's Lectures; a copy of Freedom and Fellowship in Religion—a collection of Essays and Addresses by O. B. Frothingham, W. J. Potter, John Weiss, T. W. Higginson, F. E. Abbot, and others; Darwin's Origin of Species; Draper's Conflict between Religion and Science; Huxley's Lay Sermons; a bound copy of THE INDEX for 1871 or 1872; Renan's Life of Jesus; or any obtainable book not costing over $2.

For Three New Subscribers.

Either Longfellow's or Bryant's complete Poetical Works (illustrated); Darwin's Descent of Man; Tyndall's Fragments of Science; Lewes' Physical Basis of Mind; Frothingham's Transcendentalism in New England; Shakespeare's Complete Works; Frothingham's Life of Theodore Parker; or any obtainable book not costing over $3.

For Five New Subscribers.

Either Pierce's Memoirs and Letters of Charles Sumner; Emerson's Prose Works; Buckle's History of Civilization; Spencer's Psychology; Humboldt's Cosmos; Fluke's Cosmic Philosophy; Johnson's Oriental Religions. Vol. I., on "India"; Vol. II., on "China"; or any other obtainable book not costing over $5.

For Ten New Subscribers.

Either Webster's or Worcester's Dictionary (unabridged); Longfellow's Complete Works (300 illustrations, full gilt); either Dickens' or Waverley Novels, complete in six volumes, and illustrated; Strauss' New Life of Jesus; or any other book or books not costing over $12.

Address THE INDEX, 231 Washington Street, Boston.

MISS DEVEREUX' BOARD-
ING AND DAY SCHOOL FOR YOUNG
LADIES AND CHILDREN, at Irvington-on-Hudson, will re-open on Monday, Sept. 17, 1877. Miss Devereux refers, among others, to the following gentlemen: Rev. Orville Dewey, Sheffield, Mass.; Mr. A. C. Richards, Irvington, N.Y.; Mr. H. E. Bishop, Irvington, N.Y.; Mr. John E. Williams, Pres. Met. Nat. Bank, N.Y.; Mr. Wm. H. Orton, Pres. W. U. Telegraph Co., N.Y.; Mr. Moses H. Grinnell, N.Y.

POSITIVISM!
AN EPITOME OF THE

Positive Philosophy and Religion,

Published by the Society of Humanity in the city of New York, contains the clearest statement of the subject ever made; also, Harriet Martineau's masterly defence of her religious convictions; and the Positive Classification of the Sciences, by T. B. Wakeman, etc., etc.

Send for it (enclosing 25 cents in postage stamps) to

HUGH BYRON BROWN,

President of the Society,

No. 141 8th St., N.Y. City.

LECTURES AND SERMONS.

BY

JOHN W. CHADWICK.

THIRD SERIES.

1. The Simplicity of True Religion.

2. The Rising Faith.

3. Fate and Freedom.

4. The Child Jesus.

5. The Angel Song.

The following numbers of the first and second series can also be supplied: Best Use of Sunday, Higher Reverence, Self-Respect, God on Our Side, Economy and Waste, Piety of Modern Science, Immortal Life, Moral Aspects of Belief in Immortality, Idealizing the Real, The Coming Man, A Rational Church.

Sent to any address, postage paid, at 5 cents per copy, by

JAMES MILLER,

779 Broadway, New York.

A NOTABLE TREATISE.

WOMAN SUFFRAGE.

THE COUNTERFEIT AND THE TRUE:

Reasons for Opposing Both.

BY

REAR-ADMIRAL MAXSE,

Of the British Royal Navy.

This is a little book of 74 pages, with neat paper covers, published in London, and presenting the reasons why a cultivated English gentleman is opposed to Woman Suffrage. It ought to be read and pondered by all who are interested in that question, on either side. Price, 25 cents. For sale at the office of THE INDEX, 231 Washington St., Boston.

GOOD PHOTOGRAPHS

OF

O. B. FROTHINGHAM,

T. W. HIGGINSON,

W. J. POTTER,

W. H. SPENCER,

F. W. NEWMAN,

CHAS. VOYSEY,

A. W. STEVENS,

R. H. RANNEY,

F. E. ABBOT,

Are now for sale at the office of THE INDEX, and will be mailed postpaid to any address on receipt of price. Single Photographs, 25 cents each; complete Set of Nine Photographs, $1.50.

Address,

THE INDEX,

No. 231 Washington St., Boston, Mass.

FREE RELIGIOUS ASSOCIATION.

Send to Office at 231 Washington St., Boston, Mass., for

TRACTS.

I. TAXATION OF CHURCH PROPERTY, by James Parton. 5 cts.; ten, 50 cts.; one hundred, $1.50.

II. THE BIBLE AND SCIENCE, by John Weiss.

III. THE SYMPATHY OF RELIGIONS, by T. W. Higginson. Enlarged edition.

IV. TRANSCENDENTALISM, by Theodore Parker. Never before published.

V. THE PUBLIC SCHOOL QUESTION, as understood by a Catholic American citizen (Bishop McQuaid) and by a Liberal American citizen (F. E. Abbot). (Two Horticultural Hall Lectures, Feb. 18 and 20, 1876.)

VI. HOW SHALL WE KEEP SUNDAY? An Answer in Four Parts: 1. Sunday in the Bible. 2. Sunday in Church History. 3. Sunday in the Massachusetts Laws. 4. The Workingman's Sunday. By Charles K. Whipple, Minot J. Savage, Charles E. Pratt, and Wm. C. Gannett.

Nos. II., III., IV., V., VI., 10 cts. each; ten for 80 cts.; one hundred, $3.

REASON AND REVELATION, by W. J. Potter. 5 cts. (Ten for 50 cts.; one hundred, $1.50.)

PROCEEDINGS OF THE F. R. A. ANNUAL MEETINGS for 1872, '73, '74, '75, '76, and '77. Five cents each.

FREEDOM AND FELLOWSHIP IN RELIGION, a volume of essays and addresses representing the F. R. A. platform. $1.50.

SEND ONE DOLLAR

For a handsome Certificate of Membership as an

ANNUAL MEMBER

of the NATIONAL LIBERAL LEAGUE.

For TWENTY-FIVE DOLLARS, a still larger Certificate of Membership as a

LIFE MEMBER,

Will be sent to any person; and individuals cannot render more efficient assistance to the National Liberal League than by making themselves Annual or Life Members of it.

The following extracts from the Constitution of the National Liberal League explain the privileges of membership:—

ARTICLE IV.—Any person who shall pay one dollar into the treasury shall be entitled to a certificate, signed by the President and Secretary, as an Annual member of the National Liberal League. Any person who shall pay twenty-five dollars or more into the treasury shall be entitled to a similar certificate as a life-member. All the persons present as members at the Centennial Congress of Liberals, at which this Constitution was adopted, are hereby declared permanent or charter-members of the National Liberal League.

ARTICLE V.—All charter-members and life-members of the National Liberal League, and all duly accredited delegates from local auxiliary Liberal Leagues organized in accordance with the provisions of this Constitution, shall be entitled to seats and votes in the Annual Congress. Annual members of the National Liberal League shall be entitled to seats, but not to votes, in the Annual Congress.

Address NATIONAL LIBERAL LEAGUE, 231 Washington Street, Boston.

ORGANIZE!

CHARTERS

For Local Auxiliary Liberal Leagues, conferring the privilege of representation by five delegates in the Annual Congress of the National Liberal League, will be promptly sent on application, according to the following provisions of Constitution of the same:—

LOCAL AUXILIARY LIBERAL LEAGUES.

ARTICLE XIII.—The Board of Directors shall have authority, as often as they receive a written application signed by ten or more persons and accompanied by ten dollars, to issue a charter for the formation of a local auxiliary Liberal League.

ARTICLE XV.—Local auxiliary Liberal Leagues organized under charters issued by the Board of Directors shall be absolutely independent in the administration of their own local affairs. The effect of their charters shall be simply to unite them in cordial fellowship and efficient cooperation of the freest kind with the National Liberal League and with other local Leagues. All votes of the Annual Congress, and all communications of the Board of Directors, shall possess no more authority or influence over them than lies in the intrinsic wisdom of the words themselves.

ARTICLE XVI.—Every local auxiliary Liberal League organized in accordance with the provisions of this Constitution shall be entitled to send its President and Secretary and three other members as delegates to the Annual Congress.

These Charters are beautifully printed on the best of paper. Adorned with the handsome Seal of the National Liberal League, they will, if tastefully framed, make a fine ornament for any hall.

Address NATIONAL LIBERAL LEAGUE, 231 Washington Street, Boston.

CIRCULATE IT

EVERYWHERE!

The new Liberal League Tract of 24 pages, entitled,

"PATRIOTIC ADDRESS,"

contains:

1. PATRIOTIC ADDRESS of the National Liberal League to the people of the United States.

2. CHIEF RESOLUTIONS of the League.

3. PROTEST of the League against shutting the International Exhibition on Sundays.

4. CONSTITUTION and List of Officers.

5. EXTRACTS from Approving Letters by Distinguished Citizens.

This is the Liberal's best CAMPAIGN DOCUMENT in the great impending contest over amending the Constitution of the United States with reference to the school question. It should be in the hands of EVERY VOTER, and has been published expressly for gratuitous distribution by earnest friends of State Secularization.

Local Liberal Leagues

Cannot do better than to order this Tract by the quantity, as an excellent auxiliary in their local agitation.

INDIVIDUAL LIBERALS

Cannot do better than to use them privately, as opportunity offers.

Promptly mailed, at the bare cost of paper, press-work, and postage, on the following terms:—

TEN COPIES	15
TWENTY-FIVE COPIES	40
FIFTY	75
ONE HUNDRED	1.50
TWO HUNDRED	2.50
THREE HUNDRED	3.50
FIVE HUNDRED	6.00
ONE THOUSAND	12.00

N. B.—Packages of over 100 copies will be sent by express at the expense of the purchaser, without any charge for postage.

Address NATIONAL LIBERAL LEAGUE, 231 Washington Street, Boston.

The Index.

Three Dollars a Year.

LIBERTY AND LIGHT.

Single Copies Seven Cents.

VOLUME 9.

BOSTON, MASS., THURSDAY, MARCH 7, 1878.

WHOLE NO. 428.

NATIONAL LIBERAL LEAGUE.

PLATFORM

For the Presidential Election of 1880,

ADOPTED AT ROCHESTER, N.Y., OCT. 26, 1877.

1. TOTAL SEPARATION OF CHURCH AND STATE, to be guaranteed by amendment of the United States Constitution: including the equitable taxation of church property, secularization of the public schools, abrogation of Sabbatharian laws, abolition of chaplaincies, prohibition of public appropriations for religious purposes, and all other measures necessary to the same general end.

2. NATIONAL PROTECTION FOR NATIONAL CITIZENS, in their equal civil, political, and religious rights: to be guaranteed by amendment of the United States Constitution, and afforded through the United States courts.

3. UNIVERSAL EDUCATION THE BASIS OF UNIVERSAL SUFFRAGE IN THIS SECULAR REPUBLIC: to be guaranteed by amendment of the United States Constitution, requiring every State to maintain a thoroughly secularized public school system, and to permit no child within its limits to grow up without a good elementary education.

N. B.—The nomination of candidates upon the above platform was postponed to a future Congress of the National Liberal League.

THE DEMANDS OF LIBERALISM.

1. We demand that churches and other ecclesiastical property shall no longer be exempt from just taxation.

2. We demand that the employment of chaplains in Congress, in State Legislatures, in the navy and militia, and in prisons, asylums, and all other institutions supported by public money, shall be discontinued.

3. We demand that all public appropriations for educational and charitable institutions of a sectarian character shall cease.

4. We demand that all religious services now sustained by the government shall be abolished; and especially that the use of the Bible in the public schools, whether ostensibly as a text-book or avowedly as a book of religious worship, shall be prohibited.

5. We demand that the appointment, by the President of the United States or by the Governors of the various States, of all religious festivals and fasts shall wholly cease.

6. We demand that the judicial oath in the courts and in all other departments of the government shall be abolished, and that simple affirmation under the pains and penalties of perjury shall be established in its stead.

7. We demand that all laws directly or indirectly enforcing the observance of Sunday as the Sabbath shall be repealed.

8. We demand that all laws looking to the enforcement of "Christian" morality shall be abrogated, and that all laws shall be conformed to the requirements of natural morality, equal rights, and impartial liberty.

9. We demand that not only in the Constitutions of the United States and of the several States, but also in the practical administration of the same, no privilege or advantage shall be conceded to Christianity or any other special religion; that our entire political system shall be founded and administered on a purely secular basis; and that whatever changes shall prove necessary to this end shall be consistently, unflinchingly, and promptly made.

The above is the platform of THE INDEX, so far as the editor is individually concerned. But no other person, and no organization, can be justly or truthfully held responsible for it without his or its explicit approval.

FRANCIS E. ABBOT.

RESOLUTION

ADOPTED BY THE NATIONAL LIBERAL LEAGUE, AT PHILADELPHIA, JULY 3, 1876.

Resolved, That we accept the offer of the Boston INDEX to be our official organ of communication with the public, for the publication of announcements, acknowledgments, and other official papers of the Board of Directors; but that we assume no responsibility for anything else published in its columns and claim no control or influence in its general editorial management.

GLIMPSSES.

A NEW Liberal League, auxiliary to the National League, has been organized at Campbell Hill, Illinois. President, Dr. Horace Newell; Secretary, A. R. Swartzkopf.

MR. B. E. UNDERWOOD will be at Des Moines, Iowa, March 7 and 8, at the State Liberal League Convention; at Newton, Iowa, March 12 to 13; and at Moberly, Missouri, March 15 to 18.

IF RADICALS were as impudent as some Christians, "Bob" Ingersoll would be offset by "Joe" Cook. But we are glad to notice that they are no match for the pious in point of bad manners.

THE MICHIGAN STATE Committee of the National Liberal League has been constituted as follows: Karl Schemann (chairman), Detroit; Mrs. O. Gillett, Parma; E. E. Campney, Burr Oak; A. Skinner, Ceresco; C. Parker, Bay City.

AT A MEETING of the German liberals of Milwaukee at Freie Gemeinde Hall, the following was adopted among the resolutions on the late anniversary of Paine's birthday: "We also express our warmest sympathies for the Liberal Leagues which are being founded in all parts of the United States, and endorse the Religious Freedom Amendment proposed by said Leagues as a substitute for the present first amendment to the National Constitution."

WHAT A PLEASURE there is in waving the Protestant red-rag before the Catholic bull! "True to tradition, France refuses to allow any building to be erected on the grounds of the approaching International Exposition for displaying, selling, or giving away Bibles. Not to be checkmated by an infidel and Roman Catholic government, the London Bible Society has purchased a plot of ground near the Champ de Mars, in Paris, for the use of the Secretary during the Exhibition."

THE METHODISTS report their denomination to be in a very flourishing condition. The statistical returns for the year have been received from eighty-five of the ninety-one annual conferences. Estimating for the six unreported, the returns, as made up, show 11 bishops; 91 conferences; 11,256 traveling preachers; 12,588 local preachers; 1,473,006 lay members in full communion; 200,281 probationers; 16,099 churches; 5,334 parsonages; 19,775 Sunday-schools; 218,494 officers and teachers, and 1,490,283 scholars. The increase of travelling preachers is 184; of full members, 48,012; of churches, 283; and of parsonages, 122. The churches are valued at $70,133,673, and the parsonages at $9,065,147. Here are nearly eighty millions of dollars of church property which ought to be taxed.

CANADA has a "Civil Rights Alliance" whose objects are defined to be—"The constitutional resistance of the efforts of any organization to violate the principles of civil liberty; the guidance and protection of persons whose rights of citizenship may be infringed by ecclesiastical or any other agency; the liberation of national funds from the control of any religious establishment; and the abrogation of all public patronage, exemptions, privileges, and powers which contravene the spirit of religious equality." Whether this means defence of the secular principle or merely opposition to Catholicism, we do not know with certainty. The Alliance is located at 182 St. James Street, Montreal, and has a Council composed partly of Protestant Evangelical clergymen. We should be grateful for official documents more fully explaining the objects and constitution of this society.

THERE is great good sense in the New Haven Board of Education, whose majority report on the Bible in the schools thus comments on the statement that "you cannot educate the head without educating the heart": "The presence of the Sheffield Scientific School in our midst is a standing refutation of such an argument. Not one word or breath of official religious influence is uttered there from end to end of the scholastic year. The success of the intellectual training of that institution, however, has made it famous over the whole country; while the moral character of its students does not suffer by comparison with that of any body of students at a professedly religious foundation. Our common schools are now in precisely the same attitude; and there is no reason to believe that this attitude will interfere with success in the one case more than in the other."

SINCE OUR LAST acknowledgment, signatures to the Religious Freedom Amendment petition of the National Liberal League have been received as follows: from Mr. Moses Hays, Rochester, N.Y., 108; from Mr. A. C. Festerling, Mosel, Wis., 70; from Mr. J. B. Barry, National Home for Disabled Volunteer Soldiers, Montgomery Co., O., 31; from Mrs. E. L. Saxon, New Orleans, La., 67; from Mr. E. C. Von Arnim, Brookline, Mass., 13; from Mr. C. F. Woods, Palmyra, Neb., 53; from Mr. Charles Collins, Northumberland, Pa., 32; from Mr. Harry Hoover, Clearfield, Pa., 28; from Mr. N. D. Watkins, Xenia, Ind., 13; from Mr. E. T. Blackmer, National City, Cal., 32; from Mr. Seth N. Allen, Maple Rapids, Mich., 32. Added to the 10,660 signatures presented by Senator Bayard on February 18, these make a total of 11,129 names. It is best to continue the work of collecting signatures as fast as possible; a good use for them will be found.

THE DESIGN of the new silver dollar, already accepted by Secretary Sherman, is described as follows: "The obverse of the coin bears a full cut head of Liberty, crowned with a Phrygian cap decorated with wheat and cotton, the staples of the country; the legend, 'E Pluribus Unum,' thirteen stars, and the date of coinage. On the reverse, surrounded by a wreath of olive, is an eagle, with outspread wings, bearing in his talons a branch of olive and a bundle of arrows. The inscriptions on this side are, 'United States of America' and 'One Dollar'; also the motto, 'In God we Trust.'" It is positively melancholy to see how insensible the American people are to the multiplying encroachments of the ecclesiastical spirit on the secularity of the government. They are establishing a great and formidable mass of precedents, each slight in itself, but in their totality of tremendous strength, for the overthrow of the secular principle. Fraud and hypocrisy go hand in hand; we cheat our creditors, and "trust in God"! Thus we are sowing seeds of evil augury whose harvest shall be a bitter one.

HERE is a beautiful instance of the "Christian morality" which claims the right to be legally recognized in this country. Rev. J. M. Buckley, a sensational Methodist preacher, has employed detectives and informers in working up liquor cases at Stamford, Connecticut, and, being sharply called to account for using disgraceful means to secure convictions, defended himself in open court in a very extraordinary manner, as reported in the New York Tribune: "'I am here,' said he, 'because there are men in Stamford mean enough to break the laws, and not sharp enough to avoid being caught. I admit all the facts in regard to the employment of deception and the detectives. The law of the matter is, that it is not a crime to buy liquor. I wish it was. I wish the gentleman would carry this case up to the highest court, and get such a decision. Then rum-selling in Stamford would soon stop.' Mr. Buckley reviewed the history of the temperance movement in Stamford, and told of the action of the executive committee, which had chosen him to act as its agent. He defended his use of detectives and deception, and said he could cite no less than twenty-five cases from the Old Testament, and five from the New, in which God sanctioned the use of spies and deception, not only to detect, but also to punish evil-doers. He repeated, at length, the narrative in the first book of Kings, where 'the Lord said, who will deceive Ahab?' and applied it to the Stamford case by a paraphrase."

NATIONAL LIBERAL LEAGUE. OFFICERS.

President.
FRANCIS E. ABBOT,.....Boston, Mass.

Vice-Presidents.
HON. E. P. HURLBUT,.....Albany, N. Y.
HON. SAMUEL E. SEWALL,.....Boston, Mass.
HON. NATHANIEL HOLMES,.....St. Louis, Mo.
HON. HENRY BOOTH,.....Chicago, Ill.
HON. GEORGE W. JULIAN,.....Frederick, Ind.
HON. ELIZUR WRIGHT,.....New York, N. Y.
MR. O. H. FEOTHINGHAM,.....New Bedford, Mass.
MR. W. M. J. POTTER,.....Boston, Mass.
MR. R. F. HOLLOWELL,.....Newburyport, Mass.
MR. JAMES PARTON,.....San Francisco, Cal.
MR. F. SCHUENEMANN-POTT,.....Providence, R. I.
HON. ABRAHAM PAYNE,.....Boston, Mass.
REV. M. J. SAVAGE,.....Chicago, Ill.
RABBI H. FELSANTHAL,.....Sparta, Wis.
REV. W. H. SPENCER,.....Flournoy, Mich.
MR. SAMUEL L. HILL,.....Editor of "Der Pioneer," Boston.
MR. E. W. MEDDAUGH,.....Editor of "The Investigator," Boston.
MR. KARL HEINZEN,.....Editor of "American Israelite," Cincinnati.
MR. ISAAC M. WISE,.....Editor of "The Truth Seeker," New York.
MR. D. M. BENNETT,.....Editor of "Jewish Times," New York.
MR. MORITZ ELLINGER,.....Thornville, Mass.
MR. B. F. UNDERWOOD,.....Chicago, Ill.
MR. ROBERT COLLIER,.....Pittsburgh, Pa.
MR. ROBERT INGERBOLL,.....Franklin, Pa.
MR. T. L. BROWN,.....Mount Lebanon, N. Y.
HON. R. S. MCCORMICK,.....New York City.
MR. F. W. EVANS,.....Buckley, N. Y.
MR. ELIZABETH THOMPSON,.....Tombury, N. Y.
MR. AMY POST,.....Litchfield, Va.
MR. ELIZABETH GADY STANTON,.....

Secretary.
W. H. HAMLEN,.....231 Washington Street, Boston, Mass.

Assistant Secretary.
MISS JANE P. TITCOMB,.....142 Chandler St., Boston.

Treasurer.
A. J. WILCOX,.....8 Pemberton Square, Boston.

Board of Directors.
F. E. ABBOT,.....W. H. HAMLEN.
J. A. J. WILCOX,.....H. L. GREEN.
D. G. CRANDON.

Executive Committee.
Alabama.....J. H. HALLEY, Selma.
Arkansas.....JOHN ARRENS, Monticello.
California.....J. L. HATCH, San Francisco.
Colorado.....DAVID T. BEALS, Grenada.
Connecticut.....GEORGE W. BALDWIN, Bridgeport.
Delaware.....JOSEPH D. GURLEY, Greenville.
Florida.....T. D. GIDDINGS, Enterprise.
Georgia.....DR. A. A. BELL, Madison.
Illinois.....DR. A. G. HUMPHREY, Galesburg.
Indiana.....L. O. UNDERWOOD, Indianapolis.
Iowa.....J. C. MICHENER, Adel.
Kansas.....JOHN FARNSWORTH, Fort Scott.
Kentucky.....S. B. CLARK, Louisville.
Louisiana.....EMERSON BENTLEY, New Orleans.
Maine.....DR. W. H. BROWN, Bangor.
Maryland.....J. B. ROSELL, New Market.
Massachusetts.....KARL SCHUMMANN, Detroit.
Michigan.....J. E. BASSETT, Minneapolis.
Minnesota.....J. E. PETERSON, St. Louis.
Missouri.....L. W. BILLINGSLEY, Lincoln.
Montana.....V. G. BARRETT, White Rock.
New Hampshire.....WILLIAM LITTLE, Manchester.
New York.....H. L. GREEN (chairman), Salamanca.
North Carolina.....J. W. THORNS, Warren.
Ohio.....E. D. STARK, Cleveland.
Oregon.....SAMUEL COLE, Humboldt Basin.
Pennsylvania.....G. W. BALDWIN, Lincolnton.
Rhode Island.....GEORGE LEWIS, Providence.
South Carolina.....P. W. FULLER, Columbia.
Tennessee.....DR. E. H. PRICE, Chattanooga.
Texas.....DR. A. DUNBAR, Greenville.
Vermont.....R. L. HAUGHTON, North Benning.
Virginia.....L. SPAULDING, Norfolk.
Washington.....DR. A. M. DENT, Wallon.
West Virginia.....ROBERT O. SPENCER, Milwaukee.
Wisconsin.....D. P. WILCOX, Yankton.
District of Columbia.....W. H. DOOLITTLE, Washington.
Idaho.....W. FERGUSON, Provo City.
Wyoming.....NORMAN S. PORTER.

Finance Committee.
D. G. CRANDON, Chairman,.....Chelsea, Mass.
MR. SARAH B. OTIS,.....137 Warren Avenue, Boston.
HARLAN P. HYDE,.....231 Washington St., Boston.

LOCAL AUXILIARY LIBERAL LEAGUES

To which Charters have been issued by the National Liberal League.

LINCOLN, NEBRASKA.—President, D. A. Cline; Secretary, Dr. A. S. von Mansfelde.

Issued to L. W. Billingsley, D. A. Cline, A. S. von Mansfelde, Julius Phisterer, Joseph Wittman, W. E. Copeland, Benj. F. Fisher, Sidney Lyons, L. Meyer, G. E. Church, and others.

JACKSONVILLE, ILLINOIS.—[Officers not reported.]

Issued to A. W. Cadman, Mrs. D. W. Cadman, S. W. Sample, David Prince, B. A. Nance, C. H. Dunbrack, W. Hackman, Jennie W. Meek, Emma Meek, Hatie E. Hammond, and others.

PHILADELPHIA, PENNSYLVANIA.—President, Carrie B. Kilgore; Secretary, Joseph Bohrer.

Issued to the President and Secretary on behalf of the Philadelphia Liberal League.

MINNEAPOLIS, MINNESOTA.—President, Lauriston Damon; Secretary, Anton Braasch.

Issued to Anton Braasch, Fred. Claussen, J. Runge, Jr., Louis Zander, S. Damon, Ferd. Heyroth, Louis Heyroth, Fred. Zander, Fred. Halberg, Ernst Clusen, and Fred. Braasch.

CHICAGO, ILLINOIS.—President, D. Goddard Crandon; Secretary, J. H. W. Toohy.

Issued to the President and Secretary on behalf of the Chicago Liberal League.

BROOKTON, CALIFORNIA.—[Officers not reported.]

Issued to Chas. Haas, G. C. Hyatt, F. C. Lawrence, A. T. Hudson, Chas. Williams, W. F. Freeman, J. Grundike, J. Harrison, T. C. Mallon, A. F. Lohead, and others.

DENVER, COLORADO.—President, Orson Brooks; Secretary, J. H. Cotton.

Issued to the President and Secretary on behalf of the Liberal League of Denver.

PAINE HALL, BOSTON.—President, John S. Verity; Secretary, Robert Cooper.

Issued to Horace Seaver, J. P. Mendum, Eliza Wright, B. F. Underwood, David Kirkwood, James Harris, G. H. Foster, H. F. Hyde, Robert Cooper, S. R. Urbino, John S. Verity.

PALMIRA, NEW YORK.—President, J. M. Jones; Secretary, C. C. Everson.

Issued to J. M. Jones, C. C. Everson, Henry M. North, A. B. Sherman, Joseph Fritts, L. B. Keeler, J. J. White, R. H. Sherman, Henry Gardner, Samuel Cosad, and others.

BOSTON, MASSACHUSETTS.—President, F. E. Abbot; Secretary, Miss J. P. Titcomb.

Issued to the President and Secretary on behalf of the First Liberal League of Boston, Mass.

NEW PHILADELPHIA, OHIO.—President, George Riker; Secretary, C. M. Rittenhouse.

Issued to C. M. Rittenhouse, George Riker, J. C. Price, Daniel Korns, P. W. Himes, John Arn, Philip Gintz, A. H. Brown, Jacob Miller, L. A. Cornet.

TITUSVILLE, PENNSYLVANIA.—President, William Barnard; Secretary, C. M. Hayes.

Issued to the President and Secretary on behalf of the Titusville Liberal League.

HUDSON, MICHIGAN.—President, Dr. Levi B. Peirson; Secretary, Dr. F. O. Baker.

Issued to Levi B. Peirson, A. D. Armstrong, James S. Bedel, Miles C. Beach, W. R. Norris, R. H. Armstrong, K. W. S. Johnson, E. M. Brown, G. L. Harceron, Philip Sewall.

CATTARAUGUS COUNTY, NEW YORK.—President, H. L. Green; Corresponding Secretary, John Hammond.

Issued to the President and Secretary on behalf of the Cattaraugus County Liberal League.

NEW HAVEN, CONNECTICUT.—[Officers not yet reported.]

Issued to R. M. Sherman, W. W. Stow, F. A. Hermerance, T. F. Hamilton, D. M. Hamilton, W. F. Hopson, E. R. Whiting, E. E. Seaman, A. C. Harrison, R. F. Sberard, and others.

ST. JOSEPH, MISSOURI.—President, P. V. Wise; Secretary, H. Brunzing.

Issued to the President and Secretary on behalf of the St. Joseph Liberal League.

NEW YORK, NEW YORK.—President, Hugh B. Brown; Secretary, A. L. Rawson.

Issued to T. B. Wakeman, Henry Evans, A. L. Rawson, Hugh B. Brown, E. Langerfeld, D. S. Plumb, O. E. Browning, Mrs. Eliza Erving, Miss E. W. McAdams, Mrs. O. E. Langerfeld, on behalf of the Society of Humanity.

ROCHESTER, NEW YORK.—President, Mrs. Amy Post; Secretary, Willet E. Post.

Issued to Benj. Gregg, Mrs. Amy Post, Willet E. Post, Emily G. Beebe, Dr. Sherman, Mrs. Barker, Clement Austin, Wm. H. Gibbs, Dr. C. D. Dake, and others.

TOMPKINS COUNTY, NEW YORK.—President, Dr. John Winslow; Secretary, Myron E. Bishop.

Issued to C. W. Ames, Wm. A. Anthony, Geo. Arnold, M. E. Bishop, H. Boon, W. Dennis, Isaac Flagg, B. W. Franklin, C. Gardner, W. Hutchins, and others.

NEW YORK, NEW YORK.—President, A. L. Rawson; Secretary, Porter C. Bliss.

Issued to the President and Secretary on behalf of the Manhattan Liberal Club.

CLEVELAND, OHIO.—President, E. D. Stark; Secretary, Mrs. M. B. Ambler.

Issued to E. D. Stark, Mrs. Louisa Southworth, B. White, W. A. Madison, S. E. Adams, Daniel R. Tilden, W. Galen Smith, Walter F. Johnson, Thomas Jones, and Mrs. M. B. Ambler.

MILWAUKEE, WISCONSIN.—President, Robert C. Spencer; Secretary, William A. Boyd.

Issued to the President and Secretary on behalf of the First Liberal League of Milwaukee.

JEFFERSON LIBERAL LEAGUE, ROCHESTER, NEW YORK.—President, Moses Hays; Secretaries, Fred. Hebard and J. B. Pike.

Issued to L. Garson, N. O. Tiffany, Adolph Roth, J. W. Roberts, R. F. Smith, Julius Rothburt, A. C. Allen, C. B. Strong, De L. Crittenden, and F. Bush.

MINNEAPOLIS, MINNESOTA.—President, S. C. Gale; Secretary, Frank J. Mead.

Issued to the President, Vice-President, Secretary, and Treasurer, on behalf of the First Liberal League of Minneapolis.

FLORENCE, IOWA.—President, Byron McQuin; Secretary, E. C. Walker.

Issued to the President and Secretary on behalf of the Liberal League of Florence, Iowa.

WEST MERIDEN, CONNECTICUT.—President, N. F. Griswold; Secretary, Miss Emily J. Leonard.

Issued to W. W. Lee, Edwin Dayton, E. L. Roys, C. C. Munn, N. W. Pomeroy, N. F. Griswold, Mrs. F. Loomis, Marion L. Pomeroy, Joseph Frankowski, Mrs. J. Frankowski, and Emily J. Leonard.

MONTGOMERY COUNTY, OHIO.—President, A. McGill; Secretary, J. B. Barry.

Issued to the President and Secretary on behalf of the National Military Home Liberal League.

MANITOWOC, WISCONSIN.—President, John A. Smith; Secretary, George B. Byron.

Issued to J. A. Smith, L. Mendlik, G. E. Byron, F. Heineman, F. Ransch, F. Kostomolatsky, F. Stirn, F. Kollinsky, J. Mendlik, L. Oberland, and others.

ALBANY, NEW YORK.—President, Thomas J. Hennessey; Secretary, Thomas Dugan.

Issued to the President and Secretary on behalf of the Albany Liberal Association.

BAY CITY, MICHIGAN.—President, S. M. Green; Secretary, N. H. Webster.

Issued to S. M. Green, N. H. Webster, J. A. Webster, G. H. Brooks, J. Brooks, C. Baker, J. Allen, M. H. Garrels, W. Ellsworth, M. E. Root, and others.

CAMPBELL HILL, ILLINOIS.—President, Horace Newell, M.D.; Secretary, A. R. Swartzcope.

Issued to the President and Secretary on behalf of the Campbell Hill Liberal League.

[N. B.—Many new local Liberal Leagues have been formed which have neglected to take out charters, and therefore are not entitled to representation.]

RELIGIOUS FREEDOM AMENDMENT:

PROPOSED AS A SUBSTITUTE FOR THE FIRST AMENDMENT TO THE U. S. CONSTITUTION.

ARTICLE I.

SECTION 1.—Neither Congress nor any State shall make any law respecting an establishment of religion, or favoring any particular form of religion, or prohibiting the free exercise thereof; or permitting in any degree a union of Church and State, or granting any special privilege, immunity, or advantage to any sect or religious body, or to any number of sects or religious bodies; or taxing the people of any State, either directly or indirectly, for the support of any sect or religious body, or of any number of sects or religious bodies; or abridging the freedom of speech or of the press, or the right of the people peaceably to assemble and to petition the Government for a redress of grievances.

SECTION 2.—No religious test shall ever be required as a condition of suffrage, or as a qualification for any office or public trust, in any State. No person shall ever be deprived of any of his or her rights, privileges or capacities, or disqualified for the performance of any public or private duty, or rendered incompetent to give evidence in any court of law or equity, in consequence of any opinions he or she may hold on the subject of religion. No person shall ever be required by law to contribute directly or indirectly to the support of any religious society or body of which he or she is not a voluntary member.

SECTION 3.—Neither the United States, nor any State, Territory, municipality, or any civil division of any State or Territory, shall levy any tax, or make any gift, grant, or appropriation, for the support, or in aid, of any church, religious sect, or denomination, or any school, seminary, or institution of learning, in which the faith or doctrines of any religious order or sect shall be taught or inculcated, or in which religious rites shall be observed; or for the support, or in aid, of any religious charity or purpose of any sect, order, or denomination whatsoever.

SECTION 4.—Congress shall have power to enforce the various provisions of this Article by appropriate legislation.

[FOR THE INDEX.]

The Soul of Culture.

SAMUEL JOHNSON AT HORTICULTURAL HALL, BOSTON, JANUARY 13, 1878.

ABSTRACT BY SIDNEY H. MORSE.

Mr. Johnson began by saying that the habit of associating culture with conceit was a survival of barbarism to be met with even in New England. A crude practicalism and a democratic jealousy are found to unite in disparagement of the good word. A bad feature of the utilitarian theory this coarse suspicion illustrates is, that it discounts disinterested motives out of study. If we would not drop these motives altogether, the fascination in things practical and tangible must find its limits. The passion for physical science takes up a vulgar cry against classical studies, ignorant of their special fitness as literary material, for educating in aesthetic feeling, clear expression, and ethical loyalty. Our school system should court these helps to a disinterested ideal of motive and expression.

But the utilitarian idea of culture, Mr. Johnson did not regard as so demoralizing as the theological, which treats religion as a work of grace through revelation as opposed to Nature. Human nature is here defined by its rudest and most primitive stage, denying all basis for culture in the mind or heart. The "new creature in Christ Jesus" substituted for the natural man is a monstrum; not product of discipline and growth, but a miraculous creation out of nothing. What term was ever so mystified as this homely and holy word Nature? A recent writer wove into his speculation at least three incongruous definitions of it: at one moment denouncing Nature as absolute evil, the next indorsing it as vehicle of spirit, and then in a breath denying that it had existence, and constructing culture out of the vacuum. The mental confusion produced by contradictions gathered about this term in the Christian consciousness, recalls what an anxious pastor said to his people in warning them against a heretical preacher: "My friends, he is an atheist, and I am sure he is a deist; and, if I am not greatly mistaken, he is a pantheist besides." In other words, this truly dreadful man must have believed that there is a God outside the world; that only the world itself is God; and that there is no God either out of the world or in it.

But self-contradictions in matters of belief are disappearing. The facts of experience, the laws of being must be reconciled in a philosophy of life. Nature and culture must not be separated, whatever becomes of Christian dogmas.

What man is physically, intellectually, morally, and spiritually competent to, is in his nature. His possibilities of growth must all be included. And culture is the process by which these possibilities are made actual. Religious culture is simply the way of bringing out the possibilities of man's religious nature. If he has no possibilities but for evil, then culture is a delusion, and man is eternally a savage. Culture is that which saves man when theologues have doomed him to this self-contempt. Culture knows no such thing as a fallen nature, but only an immature, yet capable, nature. Culture recognizes perversions, vices, sins; but simply as incidents to progress, as good in the crude ore, never as grounds for denying the spiritual faculties of man. Culture is not destructive of any powers; it is educational of all. It substitutes their free evolution for supernatural exclusion, prescription, suppression. It means sciences and arts, mastery of the inward and outward world, through their natural harmonies. These materials are the magnificent body of culture. What is its soul? Not a sphere apart from these; but their soul: in and of them forever; not imminent over them, but immanent within them.

In short, the purpose and end of culture is none other than the formation and support of a spiritual climate; by perpetual transmutation of knowledge, taste, aspiration, into a pure and steadfast accord between the personal soul and its experiences; of such quality that life is transparent atmosphere for breathing and seeing; and duty and destiny, work and circumstance, all come forcible and clear. Culture is the training which keeps in view this ideal purpose of life as a whole. Its harvest songs make the ages glad; and we know them by this: they are always jubilant with thanksgivings to spiritual necessity and law. What a text for culture the great Stoic's absolute trust in Nature, "counting all as fruit, which its seasons bring," and that phrase of Ruskin's, "the duty of delight!"

Through the warp of the ages run these threads of of vital gladness; a healthful instinct for inner motions that shape all ways to good,—a serene enthusiasm in doing and suffering, to which they attain who know their choice noble and their task befitting. So soon as one's confidence is no longer in the perfection of his own insight or virtue, but in the worth of his purpose, he finds sure deliverance from all burdens. This is the soul of all culture; the "sweetness and light" that all tasks and disciplines should serve to feed.

It is to-day just the solemn lesson of civilization itself that there is nothing in practical capacity, nothing in educated taste, nothing in personal command, nothing in large observation and knowledge of men, nothing in political or financial experience, that can be relied on to make one other than a savage. Through all these ostensible cultures, do you not recognize the war-whoop, the scalping-knife, the scent of the jackal for human prey? Is this the foremost of nations that is stamping out weaker races under Tartar hoofs, and reaching away down behind Sitting Bull and Chief Joseph to find its civilized standard for the popular politician,—"never to forget a friend nor forgive an enemy"? Yet surely the phrase aptly enough describes the instinctive expectation of the American partisan from his political representative. In America, so stimulative is competition, there is such a recognized machinery in every pursuit, that 'tis death to be a novice, or to lack the gift or the tools. Yet in all this manufacturing, where is the secret of light caught, or the mystery of sweetness solved? Put the aim of culture as you will, say it is to be happy, or helpful, or civilized, or religious, there is forever one quality, the lack of which makes it mere quackery to pretend success. It is just a poet's ideal, —the ability "no longer forward or behind to look in hope or fear."

Will the free school save us if we do not find textbooks to teach that resource, thrift, and mastery are not in getting things by mass, but in just and happy relations with ourselves? The best capital, for rich or poor, we say is health and industry; but here is the very capital of all capital. The old books on alchemy tell us it was required of those who sought the philosopher's stone that they should do so without covetous desire to be rich. And if there is an alchemy that turns all things to success, 'tis certainly not in any form of accumulating; for the plain reason that after all accumulations, the instinct of getting remains unsatisfied. We prate of our "interests" as if we knew certainly that if we could get the better of our neighbors in securing what all are pursuing, we would indisputably be gainers. Who knows but we should be losers of the best we have now? Only care and cunning can minister to unlimited desire; and these slaves turn all the master's spoils to rubbish by mastering him.

That is not culture which flatters us with the hope or wish to comprehend all things in life or death. Thank God for limits; that there shall never be wanting to man an all-embracing, unfathomed order and law, far above all his dreams of appropriation, not to be profaned by the vices of his civilized life.

Let us put away our measurement of values by mass, by count, by heaps of things learned or owned. There are painters who toil to get out every line Nature has put into a thistle or a fern; and the feeling of art is lost in mere tricks and devices of accumulation. The boys in our schools know so many things that they correct and silence their fathers. But one thing was never taught the little pedants, worth more than all the cramming, were it but as schooling in manners, the test of civilization; namely, to know why Socrates was a wise man. The answer should be read on the school-doors, and laid up in the young heads, with ample room to grow and bear fruit. Only Socrates knew how little he knew.

So with accumulations of skill. Who is shrewd enough to stave off the money crash, or to map the winds of trade? The more the cunning of the money-kings, the more they need to keep head where it has brought them, with perilous dead-reckoning, as they make off with the spoils of cities and States.

Then, as to knowledge of men, they who make largest pretensions to skill in explaining character, and reducing human nature to a science, are the quacks of the day. We repel these anthropological welters and gaugers as we do the meddlesome professor of Christianity, who proposes to take our salvation into his hands.

The shallowest of arts are those which are run by inspection of persons. The wise man is he who, without pretending to fathom others or meet their bounds, knows how to keep an attitude of expectation and sympathy.

In fine, the product of culture is invisible; it is a noble aim, and the first principle in real education is this. As mere quantity, all accumulations, of whatsoever sort, are of small account, and become culture only in proportion as they serve a personal quality beyond themselves. A man is worth just so much as the aim he is busied about is worth. We become civilized, not by the mere law of the ballot, not by "standing up to be counted" in politics or religion, but by subordinating mass-power to special function and ideal aim.

The best skill that books or men can help us towards, is the power of genial sympathy to front the facts of life; not representing them to ourselves as they might be, nor as they are desired to be; but taking them calmly, willingly in hand, as they are. To accept conditions and pay their price for one's gains, asking no royal road, nor trick of speed, this I call the grace of the cultivated, the art of the master in life. The speaker illustrated this affirmative and helpful spirit of real culture, as well as its opposite, by examples from the lives and writings of men of genius.

If this is the culture that gives us our real men and women, the deficiency of it in what pass for special cultures is apparent. In the theological, for instance, how little of light or sweetness can enter! Here at the threshold what an Inferno of hate and gloom! What melancholy spleen in the premise of "sin" which these creeds of redemption, probation, and spiritual progress all start from! Are these our roofs of civilization, these débris, swept down from ages in which man's right and opportunity to make the world his homestead were unknown, and cutting away the very conditions of freedom and delight; beliefs whose God is an autocrat, and whose Savior never smiles! 'Tis time this school was dismissed. Let the laugh of happy children be heard in the pur-lanes of eternal life. Let them out of these catacombs of ecclesiastical dogma. Would we sit in tertiary caves amidst prehistoric bones, when day is breaking on the hills? If we could shut light within the covers of a book, or hide sweetness in one human Lord, would not humanity be stunted of these gifts? Thoughtfully consider the monarch-God whom the Hebrew handed down to Christianity, and you will not think it strange to hear his fullest prophet and most loving Son saying, "A word spoken against the Holy Ghost shall not be forgiven either in this age or in that which is to come." Hence a hard inhospitality in its lofty invitations to outside faiths to forsake their immemorial beliefs and come into the only fold; hence so little light in its eyes for heathen ages, or sweetness in its speech to unbelievers at home; so much persuasion of this sort, "Take my dogma, or thou diest by my hand." Only science and free inquiry can exorcise this evil spirit in Christianity; the secular powers which it rejects as long as it can. For how many ages, in the name of the Crucified, did it hold the whole Hebrew race nailed to the martyr's cross! In Catholic France it but recently refused to receive their contributions in relief of persecuted Christians in the East, because the Jew was a "deicide" or murderer of the Almighty. In Protestant America, its Missionary Board has some natural tenderness for the Chinese immigrants; but its California churches vote him off the continent, and would abolish the very treaty by which but just now China acceded to its demands for national fraternization. In the East, it is repeating, after seven centuries, the old crusade against the infidel, inspired by its arrogant pretence that Europe belongs to Christianity, and the Turk is an interloper and "sick man." The Russian minister in Turkey declared that his master would never allow Protestantism to set foot in that country. The Greek Church of Russia recognizes no Christianity outside itself. Its Armenian branch in Turkey excommunicates all converts to Protestantism, and outlaws them as social lepers. Russian Christianity thrusts forth the cross to cover Panslavic thirst for conquest. By all good authority, Turkish oppressions are in no small degree the fictions of English plotters and Levantine false witnesses, bent on the ruin of the empire. So far as they now exist, they are against the actual laws, and fall on Moslem and Christian alike. Turkish atrocities are natural results of panic stirred up by paid bandits of the foreigner, and quite equalled under similar circumstances on the other side. If ever a war was without excuse, I believe that this is, and civilized Europe should have stopped the horrible carnage, and remanded this worse than Tartar raider back on his bloody tracks. Yet one is often asked if the interests of culture should not put Europe on the side of Russia, —culture in this colossal force of conquest, still inspired by the savage will of Peter and the craft of Catharine II.? Shall America be claqueur to the raid of such a barbarism on a weakened state striving to redeem its past, and which has actually made more progress in religious liberty in one-half century than any other nation in Europe, which has appointed no less than eighty persons of the Christian faith to prominent offices, and permitted the schools and churches of all sects to sprinkle over its domains from end to end? The penny-a-liners of the British press which our dailies retail, do not tell us what the historians of the Empire had recorded; nor what Dr. Hamlin reports out of his thirty-five years' observation of the reforms of later Sultans in civil service and in educational and religious policy; nor how incessantly these efforts to reconcile a dozen conflicting sects and races have been thwarted by Russian intrigue. It is something that the Turk has shown us how fatalism may be a living faith, and become respectable by its valor against odds. It is not mere politic prudence which has dictated the policy of England. Behind this lies a theological culture, which cherishes petty contempt for the infidel, and which has permitted her Gladstones and Freemans with their arrogant perversions of history to hold her hands from defending an ally from the apparent purpose of a colossal empire to divide the soil and destroy the race. And this evangelicism which wants to drive the Turk out of Europe would be equally pleased to exclude the unbelieving Jew and radical from the polls of America. So runs that deeper consistency of dogmatic temperament which we do not always observe.

The lecturer proceeded to criticize the theological fetchism of the more liberal sects of Christendom, especially in their prostration before the name of Christ; and to describe that religious culture by which science and humanity are transforming theology from a savage and a slave into a power of civilization.

The absence of culture in the ethics of citizenship in this country was next treated. After speaking of the educational methods by which political corruption and legislative dishonesty should be met, the speaker said that this was indeed a case for the infusion of sweetness and light, but not for the mock image of these; not for a superficial complaisance, glossing unwelcome facts, and making light of past penalties that should have ploughed deep into the nation's soul. What shall we say of the Southern proposal to have the free black left in the hands of his former Caucasian masters, to be "nursed into as useful and happy a condition as his nature will allow"? What of the President's announcement to the colored citizens at Atlanta, that "their interests will be safest if left in the hands of the intelligent Southern whites"? What of the fact that the local governments are already passed over to men who would never by any possibility make that appeal to the executive for aid in protection of negroes, even at national elections, to which alone he is bound by the constitution to respond? What is short of this so-called policy of conciliation which the whole reactionary element, with few exceptions, applauds, while using these concessions to strengthen itself for coming victory, —this special conciliation of classes from whose possession the negro had to be wrested that the State itself might live? Has not this argument of "more magnanimity" been pressed beyond the moral limit? The reconstructed rebel is invited to make light of his rebellion and to return to special favors from the government he sought to destroy. This is no mere question of withdrawing the troops to whose protection of the polls the President owes his own election; no mere question of official discouragement, or worse, to men whose claims rest on the same basis as his own; no mere question of the success or failure of the "Grant policy" so persistently denounced and thwarted by influential men in both parties that every bull-dozer might well hope the Caucasian-nurse theory would even at the North soon get the upper hand: no mere question of political truck and dicker in the management of the last election. It is not a question of dealing with a fallen foe. The foe is not fallen; he is at last master of South, and master of Congress, and the Executive concedes the superintendence he desires. I fall to see the repentance that is claimed for the prodigal, or the humane wisdom of his father. Do not accept assertions of success in a policy which can only be tested by a national election or by some revival of courage in the now disheartened freedmen. I must still emphasize, as at the outset, the suicidal influence of this failure to hold a steady hand; this shift of policy; this tone of apology; this attempt to cover our tracks by borrowing measures from the reactionist, and even by taking up his cries of "carpet-bagger" and "bloody shirt," with all the greatly overstrained charges they stand for; this strange confidence in promises the makers have not the ability, if they had the will, to perform. I am not concerned to spend breath upon disproving the charge that an old abolitionist cannot escape his prejudices, nor entertain the "new idea," because I am contending against ideas and prejudices far older than the men who now repeat them, —the instincts and traditions of slavery; the inveterate will that the black shall not have social and political equality with the white; the old, old method so often tried, and always punished, of finishing up duties to the weak by blind concession to the strong; of restraining offences by gratifying the purpose of the offender. If this was the intelligent purpose of the loyal masses, then we have lost the power to profit by experience or to respect the idea of a republic. For one, I cannot believe it.

My purpose is to illustrate not inhumanity in the people, but the abuse of political culture. Let us not rest this question upon personalities; on blind charges of private motive or repute on the one side or the other. That the discussion runs to this strain is but proof of the lack I speak of. Our public vices are its exponent. The excuse for this policy that it was the only course left open by the increase of reactionary feeling against the government, splits on the fact that it was urged intensely, as long ago as the Greeley movement, as a matter at once of magnanimity and pure right. If, then, it did not originate in necessity, it is itself responsible for bringing about its present necessity, if this exists. If the State is gravitating back towards the hands from which it has barely escaped with life, the fact is not to be ascribed to necessity, but to the delusion, industriously spread, of a new and changed feeling at the South. And the extent of this delusion is explicable enough. So demoralizing are hard times, fluctuating currency, disturbed business interests, incessant recurrence of issues never fairly met, that men are ready to believe any horoscope that promises rest to that irritating question on which we have done least that is wise and just. "Only give us a settlement," they say, "and we will not be difficult about the proofs."

But why adhere to protest after the thing is settled, when to meddle is to mar? It at least serves to point a warning against the political vices of worshipping a de facto wrong as if it were de jure, and of expecting a better thing from encouraging a worse. I do not believe in this settling of things past redemption. What, then, would I propose? Straighten up the spine. Stop creeping at the feet of an imagined necessity which must work ruin. Pick up as fast as possible the dropped threads of duty to the weak and to the upholders of the weak. The light and sweetness we need in our political culture is the light of moral forethought and the sweetness of trust in principles. Let the destiny that has dealt with us according to our deeds make us wise and strong. Even as the Roman sybil brought her rejected Books of Warning to the complacent Senate again and again, lessening their number and raising their price every successive time. So is it with our opportunities, whose law should be the beginning of our culture.

We move in cycles, because we are ourselves the same. The old troubles front us; the old diseases reappear; alas! the old foolish prescriptions come round again to meet them. But new trials are new tracks of a spiritual law. The voice that must be heard will say, "This is the way, walk ye in it," whether we "turn to the right hand or the left." There can be no light nor sweetness in the American state till we learn to deal justly, and walk humbly, and follow, in dealing with weaker races—Negro, Indian, or Mongolian,—the principles we proclaim for ourselves.

"TEN DOLLARS fine for driving over this bridge faster than a walk." "What does that mean?" asked a little Indianapolis boy, who was riding with his father. Father explains: "If we whip up and go fast, the policeman will stop us and take us to the Mayor and he will not let us go till we pay $10." Silence in the carriage. Meditating boy speaks: "Papa! if it warn't for the policemen and for God, what lots of fun we could have, couldn't we?"

THE LOUISVILLE Courier-Journal having made the ungracious squib that the man who was caught in the act was a member of the legislature, an exchange takes away the sting of the remark by suggesting that the man might only have been caught in the act of trying to pass an act to amend an act entitled an act to amend an act amendatory to an act.

OUR DUTY. [FOR THE INDEX.]

BY HUGO ANDRIESEN.

There is a certain class of liberal-minded men who, having read quite a number of excellent, progressive works, having even made general history a study, a class of men, partially emancipated, who have exchanged their former narrow views for more liberal and broader, and who really cannot be confounded any longer with narrow-minded bigots and priest-ridden, unprogressive men,—it is this class of men who yet will oppose all movements, all efforts having in view the total secularization of the State, the abrogation of sectarian sabbatarian laws, and similar measures which the true radical advocates as necessary for the salvation of this country. These good people may now and then grant that church-taxation, for instance, would be right enough, and they would perhaps not even oppose the expulsion of the Bible from our public schools, provided that, by adopting such a measure, they could be convinced that harmony will be restored; that the greatest good for the greatest number will be the result.

But you approach them with such sweeping propositions as contained in the "Demands of Liberalism," in the "Platform of the National Liberal League," etc., and you will find them opposed to any such agitation or discussion. What good will it do, these me? they say. Do we not enjoy religious liberty? These good people will get angry when attacked by arguments; and will stigmatize all such attempts as revolutionary, unconstitutional, dangerous, fanatical. They love, it is true, our republican institutions; and a good many of them sincerely believe that we have arrived at very nearly a perfect form of representative government.

Now, let us see whether these good people are right or wrong; let us examine for a moment whether these "rocks ahead," so often, so emphatically, so earnestly pointed out by men like Mr. Abbot, Col. Ingersoll, and others, are only imaginary dangers; whether they are only the phantoms of the excited brain of the reformer, mere Quixotean windmills, or not! If this class of people would study the history of Europe, if they would carefully read the lessons taught by such standard works as Buckle's History of Civilization, or Taine's English Literature, or Lecky's History of Rationalism, and similar works of this type, they would perhaps come to the conclusion that Jefferson's dictum, "Eternal vigilance is the price of Liberty," has some meaning; that it is especially applicable to the affairs of this country.

We will not attempt to point out the lesson which German and French comparative history teaches; nor will we, although the temptation is a strong one, go into details in regard to the great Kultur Kampf which is being fought in Germany at present under the bold championship of a Bismarck and a Falk. Let us go to England, which is nearer home, and we shall see how rationalism, common-sense, religious toleration, political equality, had to struggle for ages in order to bestow on the English people at least that type of advanced civilization which that country exhibits to-day.

What a mighty struggle it has been! And how fierce the battle is being fought to this very day! The opposition of long-faced, sour, and morose theological ascetics was always bitter; reactionary periods left their impress; puritanical ascendancy and sectarian fanaticism could not but impede the march of progressive ideas, the establishment of a more enlightened form of government. We are only too prone to forget the immensity of that struggle!

Think of the rigor and rigidity of the times of the Puritans! "The Puritan condemns the stage, the assemblies, the world's pomps and gatherings, the court's gallantry and elegance, the poetical and symbolic festivities of the country, the May-days, the merry feasts, bell-ringsings,—all the outlets by which sensual or instinctive nature had essayed to relieve itself. He gives them up—abandons recreations and ornaments; crops his hair; wears a simple, sombre-hued coat; speaks through his nose; walks stiffly, with his eyes in the air, absorbed, indifferent to visible things." Here is Taine's pen-picture of the Puritan. The natural man was abolished; conscience became diseased. The parliamentary soldiers came in great number to listen to sermons; spoke of religion, prayed, and sang hymns together, when on duty. In 1844, Parliament forbade the sale of commodities on Sunday; and ordained "that no person shall travel, or carry a burden, or do any worldly labor, upon penalty of ten shillings for the traveller and five shillings for every burden. That no person shall on the Lord's day use, or be present at, any wrestling, shooting, fowling, ringing of bells for pleasure, markets, wakes, church-ales, dancing, games or sports whatsoever, upon penalty of five shillings to every one above fourteen years of age. And if children are found offending in the premises, their parents or guardians to forfeit twelve pence for every offence. If the several fines above mentioned cannot be levied, the offending party shall be set in the stocks for the space of three hours." When the Independents were in power, the severity was still more harsh. Officers of the army condemned blasphemers to have their tongues bored with a red-hot iron! After the Restoration, two thousand ministers opposed to the new Liturgy resigned their cures; many were thrown into prisons, and perished miserably; others starved to death with their families. What a conception of life—the natural expression of the heart's emotions proscribed as impious and profane; reason mistrusted!

"Man, confessedly perverse and condemned, believed himself pent in a prison-house of perdition and vice, into which no effort and no chance could dart a ray of light, except a hand from above should come by free grace to rend the sealed stone of the tomb.

Men lived the life of the condemned amid torments and anguish, oppressed by a gloomy despair, haunted by spectres."

"The typical Puritan," Taine continues, "walked slowly along the streets, his eyes raised toward heaven, with elongated features, yellow and haggard, with cropped hair, clad in brown or black, undorned, clothed only to cover his nakedness. If a man had round cheeks, he passed for lukewarm. The whole body, the exterior, the very tone of his voice,—all must wear the sign of penitence and divine grace. Man spoke slowly, with a solemn, somewhat nasal tone of voice, as if to destroy the vivacity of conversation and the melody of the natural voice. His speech stuffed with scriptural quotations; his style borrowed from the prophets; his name and the names of his children drawn from the Bible, bore witness that his thoughts were confined to the terrible world of the seers and ministers of divine vengeance. From within the contagion spread outwards. The fears of conscience were converted into laws of the State. Personal asceticism grew into public tyranny." Such is the picture drawn by the great French writer of the times of the Puritans! The only pleasure which these fanatics permitted was the "singing of psalms through the nose, the edification of long sermons, the excitement of acrimonious controversies, the eager and sombre joy of a victory gained over the enemy of mankind, and of the tyranny exercised against the demon's supposed abettors." In Scotland this tyrannical intolerance, this persecuting spirit reached, as is well-known, the utmost limits of ferocity and cruelty, for which see Lecky's History of Rationalism in regard to the trials of witches and heretics.

"It seemed as though a black cloud had weighed down the life of man, drowning all light, wiping out all beauty, extinguishing all joy, pierced here and there by the glitter of the sword and by the flickering of torches, beneath which one might perceive the indistinct forms of gloomy despots, of bilious sectarians, of silent victims."

Even in the eighteenth century the most popular divines of Scotland (according to C. L. Lewis in his memoirs) affirmed that Satan "frequently appears clothed in a corporeal substance"; and the Rev. Lyon insisted that "husbands shall not kiss their wives, and no mother shall kiss her child on the Sabbath-day!"

Now, the good people referred to in the beginning of this paper will coolly tell you: "Oh, but all this has nothing to do with our case! You quote from the Middle Ages; you surely know that mankind has made progress since; and that even in England this narrow spirit of persecuting bigotry has disappeared! Hear what Monsieur Taine will tell you!"

"Hear, close by us, is poor Max Müller, who, in order to acclimatize the study of Sanscrit, was compelled to discover in the Vedas the worship of a moral God; that is to say, the religion of Paley and Addison. Some time ago, in London, I read a proclamation of the Queen, forbidding people to play cards even in their own houses, on Sundays. It seems that, if I were robbed, I could not bring my thief to justice without taking a preliminary religious oath; for the judge has been known to send a complainant away who refused to take the oath, deny him justice, and insult him into the bargain! Every year when we read the Queen's speech in your papers, we find there the compulsory mention of Divine Providence, which comes in mechanically like the apostrophe to the immortal gods on the fourth page of a rhetorical declamation; and you remember that once, the pious phrase having been omitted, a second communication was made to Parliament for the express purpose of supplying it!"

The old ecclesiastical edifice totters, the walls and ramparts of superstition crack and open, and the whole structure of theological bigotry will finally tumble down. Conservatives contribute to this inevitable result as well as revolutionists. Narrow-minded orthodoxy gives way to rationalism, and reason will triumph! We have no doubts whatever in regard to the final result; but it cannot be accomplished by folding our hands, by indifference, by adopting the lazy "laissez faire, laissez aller" doctrine! Too many of our freethinkers are either too indifferent or too timid. Let Macaulay's noble words cheer and encourage them:—

"The second great eruption is not yet over. The marks of its ravages are still all around us. The ashes are still hot beneath our feet. In some directions, the deluge of fire still continues to spread. Yet experience surely entitles us to believe that this explosion, like that which preceded it (the Reformation), will fertilize the soil which it has devastated. Already, in those parts which have suffered most severely, rich cultivation and secure dwellings have begun to appear amidst the waste. The more we read of the history of past ages, the more we observe the signs of our own times, the more do we feel our hearts filled and swelled up by a good hope for the future destinies of the human race."

Action, organized, concerted action, firm determination, a heroic devotion to the sacred cause of human progress, of liberty, of light, of true civilization, this is what the times demand of us! Nothing is more harmful, more dangerous, than this state of lethargy into which so many so-called freethinkers and liberals are sinking! "Freethinkers" they may be, but free-actors, free-speakers, never! See of what sacrifices, of what zeal and energy the Orthodox sectarians are capable! Observe how these people who are trying to re-inaugurate the times of the Puritans, the dark gloom of the Middle Ages, in this country,—see how devoted they are to their cause! They contribute money, they circulate petitions, they publish newspapers, they preach sermons, they distribute tracts, they hold meetings and conventions, they persist; they never become lukewarm, timid, and indifferent! Shall we liberals be compelled to admit the fact that we lack conviction, enthusiasm, heroism—in our cause? Shall we, who ought to know the terrible consequences of the proposed union of Church and State,—shall we, who daily observe the mischievous conflict already begun and soon to break out into a most tremendous religious war, unless prevented by such wise measures as advocated by the National Liberal League,—shall we remain passive, neutral, and not make a manly effort to save this country while we can? Friends, it is better to be moving on than to be standing still! Let us do our duty, and future generations will thank us!

MR. UNDERWOOD ON THE LIBERAL LEAGUE.

On Sunday evening, Mr. B. F. Underwood, of Boston, delivered a lecture on the purposes of the National Liberal League. Mr. Underwood referred to the grand work last year of reviewing the achievements of this nation. Thousands come here to view the proofs of our expansion and growth. Commencing with thirteen colonies of comparatively small extent, we have increased until our country now reaches from the Atlantic to the Pacific. Then we had three million people. Now we have forty million. We have a varied climate, and, on the whole, a country not surpassed by any on the globe. We have made greater improvements than any other nation in the agricultural and mechanical world. We have also done something in science and art, and in education and the common school system. We have passed every nation on the earth. We have, too, the first and most liberal government ever known, in modern or ancient times. We look back upon the ancient Republics of Greece and Rome, and wonder that they came so near the idea of what a government should be; yet those Republics were so full of turmoil and confusion. We are only one hundred years old, and it is too soon for us to boast of our success, especially as we have already passed through a terrible civil war. But, on the whole, we have cause for congratulation that for one hundred years we have sustained a government based upon the sovereignty of the people.

Many also boast that we have absolute religious liberty and complete separation of Church and State. And yet we have not these things. When we had four million slaves in our country, we used to boast of our freedom and hall our flag as the starry emblem of the free. There was a band whom we called fanatics, who contended that we were not free. There are also to-day men who claim that there is no complete separation of Church and State. The history of the world proves that there has been most liberty where there has been the widest separation of Church and State; and of the desirableness of this separation there is no need of saying much.

He referred to the cruel persecutions of Rome against the Christians, and then, under Constantine and Theodosius and others, of the cruel persecutions which were commenced against the Pagans; and he gave a vivid description of those scenes.

Then came a terrible age of darkness, when not a ray of learning was allowed to shine upon the paths of men,—when the learning of the past ages was laid away in the monasteries.

Then he looked into modern times. Examine the condition of France during the union of Church and State, and we shall find a most melancholy state of affairs. During the reign of Louis XV. a man who earned $16 gave $15 to the Church. Licentiousness was rampant, and it was about time the revolution came. The rogues of the Church and rogues of the State had combined to rob the people. So in England the people have been robbed of their rights by this union. No reform ever originated in the Church, but always among dissenters and heretics. The people of Ireland were robbed of their rights, and an unjust tax was levied upon them, because it was argued that, if they were not compelled to pay to help support the Established Church, they would become too strong for the government. He recited the melancholy conditions of Mexico and Spain; also, in proof of the fact, that the union of Church and State had always hampered the cause of reform. What we want to do in this country is to avoid such a union, so that no religion shall be supported by the government.

There is one class of religious people who are so wedded to their peculiar belief, that in a trial of strength between their belief and justice, they would rather see their belief triumph and justice be vanquished. These people, however, would be insulted if you told them that they were not in favor of religious liberty. They look at their faith and dogmas as first, and all other questions of secondary interest.

There are some people who are wedded to the religion of the past, but who are not led by conscientious principles. They are used to it, and think it a kind of sacrilege to tear it up by the roots.

Then there is that class of politicians known as demagogues, who go with the tide, who oppose the right when it is unpopular, and advocate the wrong when it is popular. So when a wrong is inaugurated they are ready to put themselves at the head of it and push it forward, if it is popular. These men manage to get themselves into high places; and this is the principal reason that there is so much fraud in governmental places.

Then how important it is that we should ever oppose anything looking towards a union of Church and State. These men who push themselves upon the people are ready to trample the liberty of the people under their feet, in order to accomplish their ends.

There is a class of people who are ready and willing to put our government under the yoke of religious tyranny,—ready to make us Presbyterians instead of freemen. There are others who, in their impotence, endeavor to drive men into orthodoxy. To the man bold enough to be honest, and honest enough to be bold, they say they will ostracize him if he does not change his doctrines. Had they the power, they would suppress all religious freedom.

But is our country free from religious despotism? Our fathers attempted to make it entirely free. But, notwithstanding this, there has been a tacit acknowledgment of the union of Church and State. The President and Governor made an acknowledgment of this union when they issued their Thanksgiving proclamation. Jefferson refused to issue such a proclamation, saying that he considered it wrong for the Chief Executive to interfere with the religious beliefs of the people; and for this he has been roundly abused and stigmatized. The different States acknowledge the Christian religion in their constitutions and in any other way. Think of these executives making a tacit acknowledgment of the religion, just to please a majority of the people! The people, however, say, "O, that's nothing; he only names the day that we may all meet at one time to give thanks." It only shows how the people are wedded to the old institutions of religion in the past. So our congressional halls are turned into prayer-meetings, and the chaplain is expected to pray for all sorts of things. The speaker didn't object to people praying when they wanted to; but he objected to the taxation of freethinkers for chaplains to make these prayers, for the principle of the thing. Then if a man is honest enough to acknowledge himself a freethinker, he is excluded from the witness-stand; while he who is dishonest enough to disguise his real belief, is allowed to testify. What right have they in court to ask a man what his religious views are? It is an insult. Although it is claimed that there is no union of Church and State, yet here is a direct acknowledgment of such a union existing.

He objected to endowing colleges for the education of Christian ministers, taxing freethinkers for that purpose. He didn't deny the right of any man to become a minister if he chose to; although it might be said that was about the worst use a man could put himself to. That was a mere matter of opinion. But the Christian people in their union of Church and State are getting into trouble. The Catholics are already demanding a division of the school fund; and they are right. They don't believe King James' version of the Bible, and are misused when their children are forced to hear it read in school. Suppose the infidels had a majority; would there be any justice in forcing the children to listen to Palmer's Age of Reason? The school-books, too, are filled with religious readings. We only ask that these things be taken from the public schools. There is the Sunday-school and home influence, where you may instruct your children without infringing on the rights of anybody.

He drew a picture of the magnificent cathedrals and churches, and their exemption from taxation; while the men who are so poor as only to own the hovel they live in, are compelled to pay on that hovel a tax to support the magnificent churches. If they have a right to do this, they have a right to go further, and bind me hand and foot on the subject of religion. Churches are supported in this way just because the Christian has the majority. The speaker didn't see how an honest Christian could look a freethinker in the face after making him pay taxes for this purpose. He might as well compel the freethinkers to pay money to support the minister. Suppose that the freethinkers had the power and compelled the Christians to help support the temples of the freethinkers; wouldn't they rebel against the injustice?

He then referred to the Sunday laws. He favored a day of rest and recreation; and people had a right also to meet in churches and sing psalms and hear prayers; and he would oppose anybody that interfered with them. So, on the other hand, if others resolved to play billiards, or catch trout, or listen to music, etc., the Church has no right to interfere with them. Neither party has any right to disturb the comfort or enjoyment of others.

He referred to the existence of the National Reform party, organized to perpetuate the above wrongs, putting God in the Constitution, and other evangelical movements of this kind.

He took up the Catholic question. In 1789, they had one sixty-fifth of the people of this country, and they had been increasing until they now had one-sixth; and Father Hecker says in 1900 they will have a majority. Suppose in 1850, Catholic influences prevail and permeate every department of State; if the Protestants should object, the Catholic could reply: "You commenced it. You forced your Bible into our schools, and imposed your dogmas upon us, and we'll continue it." And they would go on and make this country as Spain and Italy are, under the control of Catholicism; and then farewell to liberty. The way to avoid this, is to liberalize the government, and let all men think and act as they please on the question of religion.

He answered the statement, so often made, that there could be no morality without it is conjoined to religion.

The first Liberal League was organized five years ago by Mr. Abbot and other co-workers, for the purposes foreshadowed. It is now proposed that Leagues be established all over the United States, to labor for the objects beforenamed. Not to build up any sect, nor tear down any Church, nor to take away the rights of any Christian, but to make the government free to all, so that the infidel and the spiritualist can worship as they please, and that they shall not be taxed for the support of those things which they do not approve of in conscience. We have a right not only to ask all liberals to help us, but also to ask all Christians who love truth and justice and fairness to help us. So when the time of election comes, we have a right to ask if men are in favor of separating Church and State; of taking the Bible from the school; the chaplain from governmental places; and opposed to taxation.

He referred to the answers of Hayes and Tilden on these questions, which were equivocal. But honest old Peter Cooper answered frankly that he was in favor of a complete separation of the Church and State, and therefore was deserving of honor, no matter what may be said of his rag-baby theory.

The speaker asked the support of all men and women in the land, on the ground of justice, and hoped the Liberal League in Lincoln would endeavor to stir up a sentiment here in favor of this question, and be represented.—Lincoln (Nebraska) State Journal.

"LESSING, THE EMANCIPATOR."

Cast in the same heroic and gladiatorial mould, there are two men whose names always stir the soul of Germany as with the blast of a trumpet,—Luther and Lessing. Theirs was the mighty role of national emancipators. Dowered alike with enormous vitality of intellect and passion, they literally galvanized the dead corpse of their respective epochs and started it to its feet in the resurrection of a new life. First and foremost, there manifests itself in them the kindred unconquerable resolve that they will breathe the fresh, oxygenated air of heaven into their own capacious lungs, and not the mere library dust, damp, and mildew of tradition. Next, that, divinely intoxicated with this, a burning benevolence and mighty wrath urge them to wrench away at the gratings and batter at the walls of the prison-cells in which their fellow-creatures dwindle and pine on dead, foul air and a diet of spiritual bran and water. Luther's fight was for the range and freedom of the individual conscience and its justification in its own God-inspired faith and joyful communion with the grand life of the Bible. Lessing, born two centuries later, and with the outfit of a far more comprehensive education and range of human interests, found his foe ready at hand in a different shape. Dreary pedantry, soulless literalism, servile imitation, and provincial vulgarity had sunk the genius of the nation to the lowest ebb. In the view of the leaders in religion, philosophy, and literature, Jesus had appeared in the world to lay down the foundations of narrow Lutheran dogmatism, Homer had sung his songs, and Sophocles created his tragedies to found a vocation for dry pedants and empty word-mongers. There was no soul response to anything profound, beautiful, tragic, or mirth-inspiring in thought, art, or piety. "Luther! Great misunderstood man! thou hast freed us from the yoke of tradition; who will deliver us from the more intolerable yoke of the letter?" was the cry of Lessing.

"Life! Life more abundantly!" Here lay the insatiable yearning of this great man's mind. Like some stout athlete stretching his enormous muscles to fill himself full with the sense of the electric batteries of power with which they are charged, so we ever behold him seeking after a rejoicing consciousness of a trip-hammer force in the domain of the intellect, of a loyalty in the breast to truth, that contemptuously spurns every worldly bribe, and of a free, spontaneous revel in the beauty and sublimity of the works of the master-minds of the world that means the communion of like with like. "This is what all things exist for," was his thought. "Not through the possession, but through the investigation of truth does man develop those energies in which alone consists his ever-growing perfection. Possession makes the mind stagnant, indolent, proud. If God held inclosed in His right hand all truth, and in His left simply the ever-moving impulse toward truth, although with the condition that I should eternally err, and said to me, 'Choose!' I should humbly bow before his left hand, and say, 'Father, give! Pure truth is for Thee alone!'"

Revolted at the mental and spiritual stagnation all around him, Lessing stripped himself for the career of an agitator in the realms of literature, art, philosophy, and religion. The weapons of his warfare were solid learning, masterly common-sense, blazing, blasting wit, and an almost unerring perception of truth, beauty, and right. Behind and underlying all this was the old Berserker wrath and revel in annihilating combat. As Heine said, he delighted in breaking a skull or a numskull and then lifting it up to show the world how hollow it was. In Lessing, the age beheld the advent of a new type of character upon the scene,—the Critic. Not that there were not critics before his day, but he gave to the name and function a new signification, at once awful and glorious. In his hand criticism meant an Ithuriel's spear, at whose touch every deceiving rebel angel was compelled perforce to shrink into a squatting toad. Loud was the outcry and furious the rage as he dashed the pitiful idols of the day to pieces; but in his own mind there was no hesitation as to the imperative right and duty of this annihilating warfare against men and opinions that were corrupting the taste and spirit of the nation. "The gain stretches through all ages, the loss limits itself to the moment; the gain is to the advantage of all good men who love enlightenment and conviction; the loss affects only a few who do not deserve to be considered either because of their understanding or because of their morals." Therefore, he let loose, without questioning, the thunder, lightning, hail, and storm-blast of his elemental powers of logic, wit, and denunciation. "O, ye fools!" he cried, "who would gladly banish the hurricane from Nature, because here it buries one ship in the sands and there dashes another against a rocky coast. O, ye hypocrites! for we know you. It is not about these unfortunate ships you care, otherwise you would have insured them; your thoughts are confined to your own little gardens, your own little conveniences and pleasures. The wicked hurricane! Here it has unroofed a summer-house of yours, there rudely shaken loaded trees, there upset your precious orangery in seven earthen pots. What do you care how much good the hurricane otherwise effects in Nature?"

It is a subject for real congratulation that a Boston publisher has put the admirably-executed life of Lessing, by James Sime, before the public. The list of names of the really great thinkers in the world's history, whose works are fitted at once to delight and instruct the averagely-equipped reader, may be counted on the fingers. Too often the style of men of profound intellect is dry, technical, and repulsive. But Lessing appeals to pit, boxes, and gallery at once, and that, too, while maintaining a grand manner all the while. He never wrote a dull or obscure sentence. His words, like Luther's, were half-battles. His appeal was to clear-headed, right-hearted men. Like Socrates, he delighted in burying cloudy philosophers and arrogant sophists under an avalanche of solid, every-day rocks and gravel and pine stumps. The deeper his thought, the clearer, homelier, wittier his expression. With perfect truth did he say, half-apologetically, of his style, "It often plays the more wantonly, the more earnestly I have sought to become master of the theme by cold reflection." No wonder his work told so on the mental life of his nation. After so stimulating an experience of the brace and exhilaration of fresh air, biting wit, masterly statement, and converse with fundamental principles, men could not and would not go back to the old dust, confusion, and stupidity. Head and heart alike cried out for something charged with life. The way was thrown open and the audience prepared for the Goethes, Schillers, and Kants who succeeded. Therefore, welcome to Lessing, in this fitting shape, before American readers. His presence and spirit are needed here. There is meat and drink in him for every American youth who aspires to do something to purify the literary, political, religious atmosphere of the land. The great emancipator needs to incarnate himself afresh in the personalities of all who would be liberators of the people from the bigotries, vulgarities, sophistries, and servile imitations that take all spice, originality, and solid principle out of society. For, though, in a certain sense, only a pioneer to break the path for greater creative geniuses than himself in the realms of poetry and philosophy, Lessing has yet never had to step down from the lofty pedestal on which he stands. He remains one of the monumental men whom no tolerably-educated man or woman can afford to be ignorant of. "To advance!" said a great German of to-day; "it means to go back to Lessing."—Sunday Herald.

Poetry.

UNKIND WORDS.

If I had known in the morning
How wearily all the day
The words unkind
Would trouble your mind
That I said when you went away,
I had been more careful, darling,
Nor given you needless pain;
But we vex our own
With look and tone,
We might never take back again.

For though in the quiet evening
You give me a kiss of peace,
Yet it well might be
That never for me
The pain of the heart should cease!
How many go forth in the morning
Who never come home at night!
And hearts have been broken
For harsh words spoken,
That sorrow can ne'er set right.

We have careful thought for the stranger,
And smiles for the sometime guest;
But oft for our own
The bitter tone,
Though we love our own the best.
Ah, lips with the curve impatient!
Ah, brow with the shade of scorn!
'Twere a cruel fate
Were the night too late
To undo the work of morn.

—Australian Star.

CASH RECEIPTS.

N.B.—Postage stamps are not included here, though credited on subscriptions, etc.

FOR THE WEEK ENDING MARCH 2.

Dr. James Hogeboom, $3.20; Thos. L. Nelson, $3.20; E. G. Curtis, 50 cents; S. C. Gale, $3.25; Mahlon Kirk, $9.54; E. G. Davis, $1.50; D. Ferguson, $3.20; C. A. Greenleaf, $10; Rev. A. M. Knapp, $3.75; Dr. N. T. Clevenger, $3; Henry Schoepky, 85 cents; H. W. Wilde, 20 cents; Eben Turk, $3.20; O. H. Dana, $1.60; Eliza Wright, $4.20; Rev. C. G. Ames, $3.20; W. F. Freeman, $3.20; F. J. Humphrey, $5; George Kempton, $1.60; W. C. Flak, $3.20; L. Luke, $3.20; Maynard A. Cheney, $3.20; Subscription News Co., $2.20; O. R. Woodward, $4; Geo. W. McKenzie, $3; M. J. Hawksworth, $1.25; A. G. Fisher, $3.71; Joseph McKach-nie, $3.20; Wm. H. Morris, 94 cents; C. M. Lungren, $3.20; Mrs. K. Harrington, $3.20; L. T. Ives, $3.20; Joseph War-base, $3.20; N. Littlefield, $3.20.

All receipts of cash will be acknowledged as above, and no other receipt sent unless specially requested. Persons who do not see their remittances acknowledged within three weeks after sending, will please notify us.

N.B.—Please examine the ADDRESS and DATE on your INDEX mail-tag, and report at once any error in either.

The Index.

BOSTON, MARCH 7, 1878.

THE INDEX is published every Thursday by the INDEX ASSOCIATION, at No. 231 WASHINGTON STREET, BOSTON. TOLEDO OFFICE, No. 35 MONROE STREET: J. T. FREY, Agent and Clerk. All letters should be addressed to the Boston Office.

THE INDEX accepts every result of science and sound learning, without seeking to harmonize it with the Bible. It recognizes no authority but that of reason and right. It believes in Truth, Freedom, Progress, Equal Rights, and Brotherly Love.

The transition from Christianity to Free Religion, through which the civilized world is now passing, but which it very little understands, is even more momentous in itself and in its consequences than the great transition of the Roman Empire from Paganism to Christianity. THE INDEX aims to make the character of this vast change intelligible in at least its leading features, and offers an opportunity for discussions on this subject which find no fitting place in other papers.

N. B.—No contributor to THE INDEX, editorial or otherwise, is responsible for anything published in its columns except for his or her own individual statements. Editorial contributions will in every case be distinguished by the name or initials of the writer.

TO VOLUNTARY CONTRIBUTORS.—Only Short Articles desired. Unused Manuscripts not returned.

FRANCIS ELLINGWOOD ABBOT, Editor.
OCTAVIUS BROOKS FROTHINGHAM, WILLIAM J. POTTER, WILLIAM H. SPENCER, MRS. E. D. CHENEY, GEORGE JACOB HOLYOAKE (England), DAVID H. CLARK, MRS. ELIZABETH CARY STANTON, J. L. STODDARD, ELIZUR WRIGHT, C. D. B. MILLS, W. D. LE SUEUR, BRADY F. UNDERWOOD, ALBERT WARREN KELSEY, Editorial Contributors.

SPECIAL NOTICE.

Attention is specially called to a change in the advertisement of the Publications of the Free Religious Association. By a recent vote of the Executive Committee the Annual Reports of the Association, from the year 1872 to the year 1877 inclusive, are now offered at five cents each (and at the same rate for any larger number) to any body who will take the trouble to send for them, enclosing five cents in postage stamps. They will also be sold at the office for the same sum to any one calling for them there.

The Committee have put the pamphlets at this low rate, which hardly more than covers the cost of sending them by mail, with the hope that they may thereby be more extensively circulated. By referring to the advertisement describing their contents, it will be seen that they contain much matter of special interest on the most vital religious problems of the age. It is not too much to say that some of the most valuable contributions of the last five years to religious discussion may be found in these pamphlets. Let any one who wants to know what the Free Religious Association means send for these Reports. And will not the members and friends of the Association take this opportunity to extend the knowledge of its principles?

WM. J. POTTER,
Secretary F.R.A.

SUPPOSE THAT an innocent man, on being arrested and ironed, should look complacently on his handcuffs, and remark to the policeman with a fraternal nod: "Oh, I don't in the least object to wearing them. They don't weigh a pound. If they weighed a ton, I should be deprived of my liberty. I make no protest against trifles like these!" What would be the estimate put on the intelligence or spirit of such a man as that? Exactly the same estimate which should be put on the intelligence and spirit of liberals who see nothing to object to in the non-taxation of churches, Bible-reading in public schools, and the other fetters which the Church puts on the State.

THE AGITATION of the State Secularization question by the Milwaukee Liberal League, followed by the action of the Common Council in passing the Shaughnessy resolutions (see THE INDEX of February 7), has culminated thus far in the introduction into the Wisconsin State Legislature of the following bill:—

Section 1. The public reading of the Bible, the public offering of prayers, the public reading of religious or sectarian works, the public singing of psalms or hymns, and the public performance of any religious or sectarian service or ceremony, is hereby prohibited in all universities, normal and other schools belonging to or supported by the State of Wisconsin; and any teacher or officer or other person who shall engage in any such forbidden employment shall be punished by a fine of $50.

Section 2. No teacher, pupil, or other attendant at any of the State institutions mentioned in this act, shall be required or compelled as part of the course of instruction, or otherwise, to engage in the reading of the Bible or other religious or sectarian work. Any teacher or officer of such institution, who shall so require or compel, shall be punished by a fine of $75.

Section 3. This act shall take effect and be in full force from and after its passage and publication.

"RUN BY CAPITAL."

It is impossible not to receive such kindly expostulations as these with the utmost respect, and with cordial reciprocation of the fraternal sympathy of the writer, who lives in Minnesota: "I wish I had more means to serve your efforts, for I am one of your warmest sympathizers. There is only one thing that I cannot agree with you on now—the silver question. It hurts me to see you say anything on that point, for I know you are honest and speak from honest motives; but I hear from all sides that Mr. Abbot is also allowing himself to be run by capital. I am so much devoted to you, having followed you from the first issue of THE INDEX, that I can't help taking any derogatory remarks about you as a personal matter. There is no question but that the dishonesty on the silver question was in the act of demonetizing, and not in remonetizing it; and I do hope that Mr. Abbot will not be found on the wrong side of this question, which has become the all-absorbing one of the day. Too long has all the legislation of the government been in the interest of capital, and consequently a fraud on the people. I know the atmosphere of Boston is a bad place for any views different from those you have given; but the pure and free air of the country and contact with its occupants would, I am sure, remove all magnetic influence in favor of demonetization. Now, as THE INDEX has become the spokesman of the great reform movement of the age, no espouser of the same cause can fail to be very jealous of the position it takes on all questions; and I feel a heart-pang whenever it speaks a backward word. Hence I hope you will excuse my frankness, and perhaps the emptiness of my remarks."

We assure this most charitable critic that his strictures are received in the same kindly spirit in which they are made. He, at least, will believe that we tell no lies when we say that our views, whether correct or incorrect, are the product of our own thinking on the facts as we understand them, and that (it is difficult to say it without laughing!) we positively are not "run by capital"! That people may differ honestly on this silver question is simply a fact of personal observation; we will not retort on the gentlemen who think we are "run by capital" by insinuating that they are "run by silver-speculators." It is our honest belief, however, that the poor and the laboring classes of the people will suffer the most from the mischievous effects of forcing a depreciated silver dollar into circulation. This item from the Boston Advertiser of February 5 will show what we mean: "It is said that a large manufacturing company of this city paid all the hands in its factory upon Saturday in trade silver dollars. The dollars were purchased by the company for ninety-five cents each; and, as the amount of the pay-roll is about $1500, $75 was made by the operation."

Moreover, it is pitiable to see good and upright persons beguiled by sophistry into the notion that the world's faith in the honesty of the United States can be shaken with impunity to ourselves. That is what is meant by impairing the public credit; and that is what must follow the restoration of the old silver dollar as an unlimited legal tender.

These are our own opinions; we borrow them from nobody; they may not be worth much; but they are ours. It is quite a blunder to suspect the secret manipulations of "capital" as their real origin; but if any one takes comfort in such a supposition, it would be cruel to deprive him of it.

Putting the editor out of the case, however, we wish that THE INDEX itself were indeed "run by capital"! We could make it a powerful engine for good if it were. But capital does not harness itself to such a cause as ours. We wonder that anybody should be so stupid as not to know that!

Later.—The silver bill has become a law. No matter how many honest people may imagine it honest, our unalterable conviction is that this measure is partial repudiation of the nation's plighted faith. President Hayes' manly and disregarded veto expresses the grounds of this conviction far better and more succinctly than we could express them, and we cannot do better than to append it here:—

To the House of Representatives:—

After a very careful consideration of the House bill 1093, entitled "An act to authorize the coinage of the standard silver dollar, and to restore its legal-tender character," I feel compelled to return it to the House of Representatives, in which it originated, with my objection to its passage. Holding the opinion, which I expressed in my annual message, "that neither the interests of the government, nor of the people of the United States, would be promoted by disparaging silver as one of the two precious metals which furnish the coinage of the world, and that legislation, which looks to maintaining the volume of intrinsic money to as full a measure of both metals as their relative commercial values will permit, would be neither unjust nor inexpedient," it has been my earnest desire to concur with Congress in the adoption of such measures to increase the silver coinage of the country as would not impair the obligation of contracts, either public or private, nor injuriously affect the public credit. It is only upon the conviction that this bill does not meet these essential requirements that I feel it my duty to withhold from it my approval. My present official duty as to this bill permits only an attention to the specific objections to its passage, which seem to me so important as to justify me in asking from the wisdom and duty of Congress that further consideration of the bill, for which the Constitution has in such cases provided. The bill provides for the coinage of silver dollars of the weight of 412½ grains each, of standard silver, to be a legal tender at their nominal value for all debts and dues, public and private, except where otherwise expressly stipulated in the contracts. It is well-known that the market value of that number of grains of standard silver during the past year, has been from ninety to ninety-two cents, as compared with the standard gold dollar. Thus, the silver dollar authorized by this bill is worth from eight to ten per cent. less than it purports to be worth, and is made a legal tender for debts contracted when the law did not recognize such coins as lawful money. The right to pay duties in silver, or in certificates of silver deposits, will, when they are issued in a sufficient amount to circulate, put an end to the receipt of revenues in gold, and thus compel the payment of silver for both the principal and interest of the public debt; $1,143,493,400 of the bonded debt, now outstanding, was issued prior to February, 1873, when the silver dollar was unknown in circulation in this country, and as only a convenient form of silver bullion for exportation; $583,440,350 of the funded debt has been issued since February, 1873, when gold alone was the coin for which the bonds were sold, and gold alone was the coin in which both parties to the contract understood that the bonds could be paid. These bonds entered into the markets of the world. They were paid for in gold, when silver had greatly depreciated, and when no one would have bought them if it had been understood that they would be paid in silver. The sum of $225,000,000 of these bonds has been sold during my administration for gold coin; and the United States received the benefit of these sales by a reduction of the rate of interest to four per cent. During the progress of these sales, a doubt was suggested as to the coin in which the payment of these bonds would be made. The public announcement was thereupon authorized that it "was not to be anticipated that any further legislation of Congress, or any action of any department of the government, would sanction or tolerate the redemption of the principal of these bonds, or the payments of the interest thereon, in coin of less value than the coin authorized by law at the time of the issue of the bonds, being the coin exacted by the government in exchange for the same." In view of these facts, it will be justly regarded as a grave breach of the public faith to undertake to pay these bonds, principal and interest, in silver coin worth in the market less than the coin received for them. It is said that the silver dollar, made a legal tender by this bill, will, under its operation, be equivalent in value to the gold dollar. Many supporters of the bill believe this would not justify an attempt to pay debts, either public or private, in coin of an inferior value to the money of the world. The capital defect of the bill is, that it contains no provision protecting from its operation preëxisting debts, in case the coinage which it creates shall continue to be of less value than that which was the sole legal tender when they were contracted. If it is now proposed for the purpose of taking advantage of the depreciation of silver in the payment of debts in coin, and make legal tender a silver dollar of less commercial value than any dollar, whether of gold or of paper, which is now the lawful money in this country, such a measure, it will hardly be questioned, will, in the judgment of mankind, be an act of bad faith. As to all debts heretofore contracted, the silver dollar should be made a legal tender only at its market value. The standard of value should not be changed without the consent of both parties to the contract. National promises should be kept with unflinching fidelity. There is no power to compel a nation to pay its just debts. Its credit depends on its honor. The nation owes what it has led, or allowed, its creditors to expect. I cannot approve a bill, which, in my judgment, authorizes the violation of sacred obligations. The obligation of the public faith transcends all questions of profit or public advantage. Its unquestionable maintenance is the dictate, as well of the highest expediency as of the most necessary duty, and should ever be carefully guarded by the Executive, by Congress, and by the people. It is my firm conviction that, if the country is to be benefited by a silver coinage, it can be done only by the issue of silver dollars of full value, which will defraud no man. A currency worth less than it purports to be worth will, in the end, defraud not only the creditors, but all who are engaged in legitimate business, and none more surely than those who are dependent on their daily labor for their daily bread.

R. B. HAYES.

EXECUTIVE MANSION, Feb. 23, 1878.

A JUST CHRISTIAN.

It is with peculiar gratification that we notice all indications of sympathy with the Liberal League on the part of Christians. The movement is a positive one, on behalf of justice, freedom, and equal rights; and it welcomes all, regardless of their private views, who are practically in favor of these principles. It is true that, individually, we believe Christianity to be incompatible with either justice, freedom, or equal rights in religion; and this belief has made us openly anti-Christian. But if the Christian Church itself, as represented by the majority of its own adherents, should ever freely carry out the principles of the Liberal League, and relinquish the political superiority which it now claims over unbelievers in its creed, we should find our anti-Christianity irresistibly disarmed, confounded, and turned into genuine respect; and we should be heartily glad of this, for we take no pleasure in opposition for its own sake. In very truth, the churches could in no possible way do so much to retain the public moral influence that is slipping away from them, as they would by showing themselves morally magnanimous enough to do right without compulsion,—to relinquish their wrongful privileges voluntarily, and not to wait till these are (as they will be) wrested from their usurping hands.

We cannot but think, therefore, that such articles as the subjoined, written by a "Christian Layman" and copied from the Milwaukee Sentinel of January 23, should do more to preserve the moral influence of Christianity than all the arguments or exhortations of all the ministers in the land. The Liberal League declares itself to be neither Christian nor "infidel," theistic nor atheistic; it is strictly a citizen-party, for the vindication of now disregarded equal rights; and yet so thoroughly persuaded are the churches of their own divine right to govern that he who proposes to recognize the equal citizen-rights of Christians and "infidels" is straightway set down as an atheist! To all who hold this absurd notion we commend the article just referred to, as follows:—

The Aims of the Liberal League.

It is truly amazing to contemplate the ignorance manifested by Rev. J. B. Stewart in his remarks upon the question of the Bible in public schools, and his comments upon the objects and purposes which is the aim of the Liberal League to accomplish, touching the relation of religion and the State. His mind seems to be possessed of the delusion (which in primitive times would have been called a devil) that the patrons of the Liberal League are bent on crushing out religion and establishing the reign of atheism in the land. I would say for the information of the reverend gentleman (and being a member of the League I know whereof I speak), that his hasty inference is unfounded in fact; and, further, that for a gentleman of his standing and position in the community to make such reckless and ill-advised assertions concerning the aims of the Liberal League is to say the least unpardonable. The fact that many of the most intelligent and devout Christians of the land are in entire sympathy with the objects of the League, and are lending it their active services, should be sufficient to disabuse the mind of Mr. Stewart of such a foolish delusion. The Liberal League aims at the entire separation of Church and State, not only in theory but in fact. It aims to realize for the Church the truth embodied in the saying of Jesus, "My kingdom is not of this world," and would therefore relegate the teaching of religion and the Bible to the Church and the home, to the end that the religious rights of all may secure equal favor and protection from the State. If Mr. Stewart will read the work of Samuel T. Spear, D.D. (a gentleman of his own sect), on the relations of religion and the State, he will probably be convinced of his foolish and superficial charge of atheism against the Liberal League.

A CHRISTIAN LAYMAN.

INDIVIDUALISM AND COMMUNISM.

Since self-satisfied socialists need to be treated with the utmost tenderness, lest in bearing unwilling witness to their own stultification they part with the least slender modicum of conventional courtesy, we will confine ourselves throughout the present article to the collation of testimony from an authority selected by one of their own number; and, since the honored name of Herbert Spencer has been introduced into this discussion by one of the more ardent admirers of communism, as an author whose prolonged researches amid the widely-diffused phenomena serving to make up the data for the scientific study of Sociology have caused him to be generally recognized as standing first among living authorities upon this and kindred subjects, we will proceed to a series of random quotations from his writings.

It has become essential, however, to restate and define the real question at issue, since a disposition to evade the points originally proposed is already to be observed. The rival systems whose respective merits are being compared are "Individualism" and "Communism." As defined by the writer, individualism is here to be understood as the right of individuals "to the exclusive possession of more than the air they breathe, the food they eat, the clothes they wear, and the ground they stand upon." Per contra, communism is the denial of that right; and any combination of persons, whether as railway rioters in St. Louis, or as "Communards" in Paris, having for its general object the division of the property of the wealthier classes among the proletarians—whether by actual brutal spoliation, or by the more insidious and not less dangerous application of socialistic principles to the distribution of the results of labor—is to be understood as one of the myriad forms of modern communism, however unwilling certain partial theorists may be to admit the fact.

The present controversy may be said to have grown out of an editorial contributed to THE INDEX of August 9, 1877, by the Hon. Eliza Wright, entitled "Individualism vs. Communism," in which the dispassionate author, writing with reference to the then recent and entirely unwise and inexcusable "strike," used the following language:—

"Communism, as illustrated in the recent destructive strikes, is simply despotism multiplied, because it does not respect the right of the individual laborer to decide for himself the question for what wages he will work. It started with an organization like a church, in which the individual was made to surrender his rights of conscience and intellect to the mass; and this has resulted, as it always must, in allowing the mass to be controlled by individuals with the least conscience, if not the dullest intellects," etc., etc.

Now let us see what Herbert Spencer has to say upon this point. The writer quotes from The Study of Sociology [International Scientific Series, Appleton & Co., New York, 1874], page 252:—

"When, among skilled laborers, we find a certain rate per hour demanded, because less 'did not suffice for their natural wants,' though the unskilled laborers working under them were receiving little more than half the rate per hour, and were kept out of the skilled class by stringent rules, we do not discover a moral sense so much above that shown by employers as to promise success for industrial combinations superior to our present ones. While workmen think themselves justified in combining to sell their labor only on certain terms, but think masters not justified in combining to buy it only on certain terms, they show a conception of equity not high enough to make practicable a form of coöperation requiring that each shall recognize the claims of others as fully as his own.

"One pervading misconception of justice betrayed by them would alone suffice to cause failure—the misconception; namely, that justice requires an equal sharing of benefits among producers, instead of requiring, as it does, equal freedom to make the best of their faculties. The general policy of trades-unionism, tending everywhere to restrain the superior from profiting by his superiority lest the inferior should be disadvantaged, is a policy which, acted out in any industrial combinations, must make them incapable of competing with combinations based on the principle that benefit gained shall be proportioned to faculty put forth. Thus, as acting on the employed in general, the class-bias obscures the truth, otherwise not easy to see, that the existing type of industrial organization, like the existing type of political organization, is about as good as existing human nature allows. The evils there are in it are nothing but the evils brought round on men by their own imperfections. The relation of master and workman has to be tolerated; because, for the time being, no other will answer as well."

"The processes of production, distribution, and exchange, as they now go on, are processes determined by certain fundamental traits in human nature; and political economy is nothing more than a statement of the laws of these processes as inevitably resulting from such traits. These generalizations which they think of as cold and hard and acceptable only by the unsympathetic, are nothing but statements of certain modes of action arising out of human nature, which are no less beneficent than necessary." (Page 151.)

"The evolution of a governmental structure having some strength and permanence is the condition under which alone any considerable growth of a society can take place. A differentiation of the originally homogeneous mass of units into a coördinating part and a coördinated part, is the indispensable initial step." (Page 60.)

"Out of the original coördinating agent having undivided functions, there eventually develop several coördinating agencies which divide these functions among them. Each of these agencies, too, follows the same law. Originally simple, it step by step subdivides into many parts, and becomes an organization, administrative, judicial, ecclesiastical, or military, having graduated classes within itself, and a more or less distinct form of government within itself." (Page 62.)

"It is manifest that even in a civilized society, if the sentiment of subordination becomes enfeebled, without self-control gaining in strength proportionately, there arises a danger of social dissolution,—a truth of which France supplies an illustration. And it will be long before social discipline has so far modified human character, that reverence for law, as rooted in the moral order of things, will serve in place of reverence for the power which enforces law." (Page 174.)

"And so it may be held that at the present time, though the form of industrial government entails serious evils, those evils, much less than the evils of past times, are as small as the average human nature allows; are not due to any special injustice of the employing class, and can be remedied only as fast as men in general advance. Our existing industrial system is a product of existing human nature, and can be improved only as fast as human nature improves." (Pages 253-254.)

"Analyze the programme of the communalists, observe what is hoped for by the adherents of the social and democratic republic, or study the ideas of legislative action which our own trades-unionists entertain, and you find the implied belief to be, that a government, organized after an approved pattern, will be able to remedy all the evils complained of, and to secure each proposed benefit. The notion of the divine right of a person has given place to the notion of the divine right of a representative assembly. While it is held to be a self-evident falsity that the single will of a despot can justly override the wills of a people, it is held to be a self-evident truth that the wills of one-half of a people plus some small fraction may with perfect justice override the wills of the other half, minus this small fraction,—may override them in respect of any matter whatever. Unlimited authority of a majority has been substituted for unlimited authority of an individual. So unquestioning is the belief in this unlimited authority of a majority that even the tacit suggestion of a doubt produces astonishment." (Pages 172, 173.)

"If there is no natural causation throughout the actions of incorporated humanity, government and legislation are absurd. If there is natural causation, then the combination of forces by which every combination of effects is produced produces that combination of effects in conformity with the laws of the forces." (Pages 46, 47.)

"That men rise into the state of social aggregation only on condition that they lapse into relations of inequality in respect of power, and are made to coöperate as a whole only by the agency of a structure securing obedience, is none the less a fact in science because it is a trite fact." (Page 60.)

"Were not their judgments warped by the class-bias, working-men might be more pious to the truth that better forms of industrial organization would grow up and extinguish the forms which they regard as oppressive, were such better forms practicable. And they might see that the impracticability of better forms results from the imperfections of existing human nature, moral and intellectual. That such better industrial organizations do not replace them implies that the natures of working-men themselves are not good enough; or, at least, that there are not many of them good enough. Happily, to some extent, organizations of a superior type are becoming possible; here and there they have achieved encouraging successes. But, speaking generally, the masses are neither sufficiently provident, nor sufficiently conscientious, nor sufficiently intelligent." (Page 250.)

Here endeth the first lesson!

A. W. K.

AN ACKNOWLEDGMENT.

MR. EDITOR:—

I thought I was pretty well informed in regard to the purposes and principles of the Liberal League. I must now confess that its scope, according to the "articles" quoted from the "Form of Constitution for Local Auxiliary Leagues," in your issue of Feb. 7, is more comprehensive than I had hitherto supposed. I therefore stand corrected. Nevertheless I think I but represented the popular impression, even among those in sympathy and coöperation with the Liberal League movement, in regarding its objects mainly political; and hence, that those objects specified in the "Form" referred to, appended to my last communication upon this subject,—objects upon which comparatively little emphasis has been laid, to say the least,—were not included in its original intention. But, be this as it may, if the Liberal League is sufficiently broad to embrace, in addition to its efforts for the secularization of the State, a Church of Rationalism (I use this latter expression not in any arbitrary way, as a name necessarily to be adopted, but as most fully suggestive of my conception of the pressing need of the hour with reference to organization among radicals), then it will do much to give to it a solid, abiding, and influential character, and a practical bearing upon the ordinary circumstances and duties of life.

Let the Liberal League, then, wherever it is formed, in addition to the objects for which it is regarded to more distinctively stand, assume also the functions and nature of a Church of Rationalism. Although representing somewhat different spheres, they can harmoniously coöperate, and be a mutual help and support to each other.

D. H. C.

[The Liberal League movement, in its national objects, is mainly political; but, in its local objects, it is both political, social, and moral. We do not like the word "church" at all, as descriptive of it in either aspect; but that is merely a matter of taste. The Constitution of the National Liberal League, no less than the recommended form of Constitution for Local Leagues, contemplates the development of society in general in accordance with "natural morality," as originally intimated in the Demands of Liberalism; as is shown by the sixth section of Article III, which reads: "In all other proper and practicable ways, to promote the final emancipation of the State from the control of the Church, and to foster the development of that natural intelligence and morality which constitutes the necessary and all-sufficient basis of secular government."

We thank Mr. Clark for his candid and highly honorable "Acknowledgment," which, we hope, will serve to call attention to the breadth and depth of the Liberal League movement in all its aspects.—[Ed.]

Communications.

NO GOVERNMENT PROTECTION FOR CHILDREN.

MY DEAR MR. ABBOT:—

It is very seldom that I have differed in opinion with you on any question discussed in the columns of THE INDEX. Your judgment has been to me what the magnetic needle is to the mariner on the ocean—the means by which his ship is guided through the waves to her destined port. But, when a vessel sails into some latitudes, the needle dips from its horizontal line by some occult law of Nature, and so varies that the sailor in his reckonings has to watch for the polar star which never varies. This polar star in the world of mind is the divine human reason.

In THE INDEX of the 31st January, when discussing the obscenity subject, you speak of the government owing protection to children. In what you say on this point, you seem to go over to the ground of the God-in-the-Constitution party; and I expect to hear in the Christian Statesman a crow of exultation that Mr. Abbot shows some sign of coming to his senses on the proper functions of civil government as an ordinance of God. You "insist on the right of the children to be protected" in their rights.

The European doctrine, as exemplified in European history, is, that the priesthood, as commissioned ambassadors of Jesus Christ, are charged with looking after the well-being of the people, and especially the education of the children; since parent-, being generally so ignorant, are unfit to perform this duty; and that the civil magistrate is merely the divinely-appointed agent to carry out the decrees of the Church in this department. The masses are regarded as infantile and imbecile; and government, as Mr. Buckle has so well pointed out, is paternal and protective. That is, the State undertakes to prescribe the people's diet and clothing by enacting sumptuary laws; and regulates their religious duties by dictating to them systems of faith and modes of worship. In France, when hard times come, the mechanics and laborers look to the government to find them in work. Thus the people, under the baneful protective ideas, are kept in a continual state of childhood and dependence, leaning upon the government instead of themselves.

The American doctrine is as opposite to this as light is to darkness. All our government proposes to do for a citizen in the way of protection is, to stand him on his own legs that he may fight the battle of life, and see to it that no others encroach on his rights as a human being, and hinder him from the pursuit of his own happiness. This brings out his manhood, makes him self-reliant, and successful in life. Paternally, our government knows nothing about children at all. The provisions made by law in all the States for educating children is simply a measure of self-protection like the organization and support by the National Congress of an army and navy. A Republic, or representative government, in which all the people, except idiots, criminals, and women, vote, and make their own laws, could not exist two generations unless the voters are educated. Popular ignorance, in a despotic government like Russia, where voting is unknown, is no harm, but a good thing; but it would be ruin and death to a government like ours. Hence you advocate compulsory education, not because it is the duty of a State benevolently to look after and protect the children, like a nurse or Sunday-school teacher, but out of pure selfishness, because it is necessary to the existence of the Republic.

When you insist that the State shall protect the moral rights of children, that is just what the Catholic Church says; and, therefore, she would make the schools of the Republic primarily religious institutions, and place them under the guidance of priests and nuns. But the American idea is, that whereas ignorance produces crime, poverty, and misery, and thus makes unending trouble and expense in courts of law, jails, penitentiaries, and institutions of charity, it is good policy to diffuse knowledge among the people, and thus dry up these sources of evil. The parents are, however, the natural, legal, and responsible guardians of their children; and it is their province to educate them in morals. If it be true that the character of the man is formed when the child is six years old, it is easy to see that it is home education which must do it.

The great vice of Sunday-schools is, that under the guise of piety and the future "welfare of our beloved Zion," irresponsible, and often ignorant, but zealous young people as teachers usurp the prerogatives of the parents, and inculcate superstitious ideas upon the receptive minds of children. There is no country on earth where parents ought to do so much in the way of moral instruction to their children, and where they do so little. A mother who has eight or ten children, as thousands have, after toiling and molling all the week in their service, is too glad, when Sunday comes, to pack them off to Sunday-school that she may enjoy a few hours of rest and repose. If their tender and credulous minds are poisoned with false views about God, the devil, and total depravity, which cling to them in after years like the shirt of Nessus, they themselves or their circumstances are to blame.

In regard to the mischief which obscene literature does among the young, if the parents do not perform their duty to their children in the premises they must be victimized; for it is a maxim, not only in political economy but morals, that wherever there is a demand there will be a supply. And if parents are so careless as to allow their children to form obscene tastes, and to fall into obscene practices, all the laws that Congress may enact will not remedy the evil. The government cannot, without stepping aside from its proper functions, meddle with such matters. It cannot lift the latch of a man's dwelling, and send its agents in to see whether the mother of a family washes her children's faces every morning, feeds them with proper food, and makes them say their catechism and prayers regularly. It trusts the parental instinct for the proper care and training of children so young.

We see what a fool our government has made of itself by enacting the obscenity laws now in force, whereby innocent men are loaded with fines and dragged to prison as felons, and in the execution of which a man has been appointed to act as Inquisitor-General, who don't know the difference between physiology and obscenity, and whose religion allows him to lie like a pirate for the good of the Church.

My dear Mr. Abbot, to put children beyond the reach of the scoundrels who deal in obscene literature, and to preserve their morals, several things must be done. Parents must understand the whole subject of love, sexuality, and the laws of heredity, so that children may be properly begotten and born. Ninety-nine out of every hundred persons, taking them as they run, are the offspring of blind, selfish lust, instead of holy, considerate love. Not one in an hundred was ever sent for. They came without any desire or intention on the part of their parents; and when we see how physical and moral family traits are inherited, how impressions on the æsthetic taste, the intellectual powers, the physical looks, and the moral bent of children are made during their anti-natal existence, and by causes aside from, but co-operating with, the laws of strain, or heredity, we cannot wonder at the character of the present generation of human beings. We have all been taught to regard sexuality as ignoble, base,—the weakness and disgrace of human nature allying us with the brutes, and a matter to be constantly ashamed of and suppressed. The sexual instinct, made irrepressible by the Creator, is spoken of as the vile, lower passion of our nature, even setting above it pride, ambition, and that meanest of all, avarice, or the hell-fire greed.

But better views must be taken of the whole subject, if we would save ourselves and our children. What is sex? It is that which alone distinguishes man from woman. It is that which gives man his courage, his strength, his high and chivalrous sense of honor, his manliness, his generosity, his energy of character blended with gentleness. It is that which gives woman her softness, her modesty, her consideration, her faculty for heroic and adorable attachment as wife and mother. It is the creative power of sex which allies the genus man to the Creator God, and is the noblest attribute of his nature, for it includes and modifies all the rest. It was this conception which led the Hindus to place in their temples, as emblems of the Creative Power and perpetuator of life, the chaste representation of the human organs of reproduction, which our ignorant and prejudiced missionaries misunderstood, and sent the fact home as proof of the utter licentiousness of the heathen, and their crying need of the gospel. Instead of branding sex and sexual love in all its beautiful manifestations, as ignominious and base, it should be lifted from the low level where a meretricious Church has placed it, and be regarded as the holiest, most mysterious, and sublime capability of human nature. Then the purest woman in the world would converse as freely on this subject as she now does upon sex in botany.

Did ever a holier man walk the earth than Theodore Parker was? Yet his adoration of sex was so great that he invested the being he worshipped so devoutly with maternal as well as paternal attributes, and called him "our Father and Mother God." And the Shakers, who, on the resurrection plane are celibates, would rejoice, I suspect, to see the dwellers upon the lower plane of this world conducting their loves on the elevated principles I have just laid down, because it would be the way to bring into the world healthy and good children, and abolish in great measure the necessity for legal divorce. They, too, exalt sex; for in their theology Ann Lee is an Avatar the same as Jesus of Nazareth, or Sakyamuni.

But look at the way in which children are treated. Believing their parents naturally and implicitly, when they become old enough to observe, and to ask questions on the subject of sex, they are told a tissue of lies, accompanied with certain looks and tones of voice, which, instead of satisfying, only stimulates the spirit of inquiry on the subject; and they are left to find out the facts from the polemic and obscene lips of low people, and to feel a secret disrespect for their parents on account of their having lied to them so abominably. The whole subject of sex, as one of scientific discussion, is put under the ban of prohibition; and the baneful consequences are seen in the present condition of society. Vices that destroy the intellect, the body, and the affections are practised by youth because they were never informed and warned by their parents on the subject. These are they whose hereditary taint and false imagination create the demand for obscene books and pictures; but who, if they had been properly born, and enlightened by their natural guardians, would have loathed and abhorred such things.

It is plain to me, then, that if we wish to destroy obscene literature by the only effectual way of destroying the demand for it, children must be taught by their parents at home all about sex, as a topic in physiology. If you trust the matter to Congress, and allow the Postmaster-General to employ an agent to prevent obscene books from passing through the mails, he might appoint a man like Mr. Train, who would forbid the circulation of the Bible as an obscene book. Mr. Train was actually imprisoned for months in New York because he published an expurgated edition of the Bible. That is to say, he gave superstition, and prudery a dose of their own medicine, by compiling the obscene passages in the Bible, and publishing them to the world. Suppose that the discretionary Inspector of Mails, instead of Mr. Train, were a devout Catholic, he would see nothing wrong in allowing the mails to be flooded with all those works on the confessional; which, although written by celibate priests, reveal crimes and vices against chastity which are so novel and so bad that no laymen on earth would ever have dreamed of them in a sleep of a thousand years. Or, if the Postmaster-General were a tool of the Church, either knowingly or ignorantly, he might appoint, as he has, an Inquisitor-General, who lives, moves, and has his being in the service of what is called Evangelical religion; and who would forbid the circulation through the mails of such treatises on physiology as the British government are making text-books in the public schools of England, because they contain the wholesomest kind of knowledge for the common people.

The difficulty and the danger of legislating on any moral or religious subject is, that we have yet no universally-recognized infallible standard of morals, and no bench of judges whose decisions would command general respect. One of our judges has declared that a certain medico-physiological work, the name of which I forget, is a good thing, and ought to be in every family as a book of instruction; while another judge—Clark for instance—might see in it, what Comstock saw in my tract on marsupials, a violation of the law against obscenity, and dangerous to the public morals.

I do not wonder that men who have children at the critical age of puberty feel deeply on this subject. If a villain were found poisoning the mind of a child by obscene pictures and books, he should, in justice, be put to death on the spot; for his act is worse than murder. When you kill a child, there is an end; but, when you destroy his health of mind and body, to live is worse than to die. The sexual instinct, while I claim that it is as holy as any other, requires, when it begins to develop itself, careful training, else it leads to ruin. Who ought to instruct and guide both sons and daughters at this crisis of their lives and destiny but their parents, and especially their mothers? Who could talk so freely and confidentially to a son as the mother who bore and nursed him, and who loves him better than her own life? Who could point out the way of safety to a daughter so well as her mother, who has travelled it herself? Human life is, in this respect, an Indian gauntlet after all; and every son and daughter has to run it, and take the chance of being tomahawked. It is possible to run it without receiving a blow, either to the character or reputation. If so, it will be because of home training for the ordeal. And Science, in her heavenly beneficence, offers her valuable services to parents in those treatises on physiology bearing on the subject, which are now so cheap and accessible to all.

These are some of the reasons which lead me to believe that in a war upon obscene literature we must depend on home training for success infinitely more than on the legislation of Congress.

A. B. BRADFORD.

ENON VALLEY, Penn., Feb. 10, 1878.

THE RACE PROBLEM.

The proletariat may be blind, as hunger and despair is apt to make men, yet they are not so blind as our Orthodox moralists, who think to stop a torrent with their tiresome platitudes. This country should not, as she now does, press blindly on—trusting in Providence, which is the wisdom of fools. She should consider what is likely to come to those four irreconcilable races which, with their knuckles on each other's throats, are now contending for dear life on this continent, which they will soon devour like a flight of locusts. There is a war to the teeth going on between mean livers and high livers; cheap labor and dear labor. And now Ireland pours in her thousands of cheap livers from the Atlantic, and China from the Pacific; and these last are as cups of water from the ocean, the source of supply being inexhaustible. They talk of the virgin prairies. It is naught. Why the whole expanse from Missouri to Minnesota and from Illinois to Colorado could be packed thick with men in a few decades, so far as numbers go; but then the prairies cannot be colonized all at once, unless by government aid. Only some men can get there, and only some can live when they are there; and it is as good to die in the streets as in the wilderness. And, in addition to all this, men are not like sheep, to be driven to the most convenient pasture.

When I visited the West in 1873, immigrants from Europe and the Atlantic sea-board were pouring into the valleys of the Platte and the best rivers of Kansas and Nebraska in a continuous stream. Many of these unfortunates spent nearly all their money on the journey, and then came the plague of grasshoppers. And so there they were, stranded upon the desert, and no Moses to call down manna from the clouds; some buffalo bones, bleaching upon the hill-sides, to mock their hungry stomachs; wheat and corn thirty or forty per cent. above the St. Louis quotations, and teams travelling a hundred miles to fetch it. And yet, in the generous fancies of social optimists, the naked prairie is a well-lined larder all ready for Falstaff and his comrades to carouse in.

"Go West, young man!" was Horace Greeley's counsel. But how if the young man have neither dollars, skill, nor muscle? For him there is only the work-house and the grave. He may drown his miseries in the East river. The untended sod is like many other specifics,—a harmless medicine for those who are not sick. Now, consider the situation of a man who is born into the world to find all the wealth monopolized and no demand for labor. Must he hang himself? Free trade in labor, lands, and goods cannot be accepted for the last word in the doctrine of economy. It is of no use to tell the laborer that he may help himself, but must not hinder others. You take my life when you do take the means whereby I live. This is what the superabounding pauperism of Asia and Europe is now doing,—taking the bread out of the mouths of better men.

The worst fault of the mean immigrants is having been born. Small blame to them for that, perhaps. But is it too much to ask the native American to forego his sustenance for the sake of these? The inordinate influx of cheap labor must in some way be checked. That is the first necessity; and then Malthusianism, or some device for restraining human increase.

A nation's aim should be to produce, not the most merchandise, nor yet the most bread, nor even the most people, but the greatest totality of human excellence. But we are always told that all men must, as a thing of course, be given the same chance. I ask, Upon what principle? We do not allow the lower animals an even chance with ourselves. The rule is, to prefer the better to the worse, leaving mercy in abeyance. But men are men! Most likely. What then? That men are men is nothing; but the idea is, that men are equal. But men are not equal. The zealots of equality often use arguments which virtually amount to this, that men are entitled to be equal before the law because they are equal in fact; but, when pressed with the palpable prevailing inequality of talent, virtue, and capacity, they shift their ground, and confine themselves to asserting equality before the law. But it is evident that men cannot be born equal or unequal before the law, because the law is of their own making. The doctrine of equality, as proclaimed in this country and in France, was originally this, simply and shortly, no more, no less, that men are born free and equal. Never was a false doctrine taught. As little are men born equal as they are born free; and it were difficult to picture a situation more remote from freedom than a newborn babe's, who cannot stir a finger at his will, but lives under a government many times more absolute than the Russian Czar's. 'Tis not so much injustice that breeds inequality as inequality which begets injustice. The former is the very work of Nature. A cretin can by no means become a philosopher with any opportunities, nor will a born fool grow wise. Can the Ethiopian change his skin, or the leopard his spots? The differences between men are constitutional and ineradicable; and they are immense, and imperatively demand a diversity of treatment. So that, after all, equality means—no one knows what; unless it means that each has the same right to his due, which is a foolish truism.

It is a delusion to suppose the doctrine of equality is a political safeguard. Not at all. In any case the security of the weak depends exclusively on the strength and coherence of the party of justice; and, in pleading the cause of the oppressed, we gain nothing by maintaining (what is not always true) that they are the equals of their oppressors.

At any rate, whatever be the consequences, positive inequalities exist; and they must and will be recognized; and it is true that the different races are unequal. I am not forgetting records. The horrors of the middle passage; the drunken rage which in England applauded the barbarities in Hindostan and in Jamaica; the careers of Warren Hastings in the Old World, and of Pizarro in the New; the histories of the evangelizing (God save the mark!) of British India and Mexico and Peru; the kind protection afforded by white Christians to the Tasmanians, and Maoris of New Zealand, and the Negroes of the gold coast,—all point with ghastly plainness to the same hideous moral. Certainly the benighted heathen owe us something. Wherever we have gone among them, we have murdered their young men, debauched their young women, robbed and swindled the old people, and taught the children how to worship God, and get drunk; yet, for all this, it still is true that the Caucasian is a superior man, though less completely so than he imagines. The deity, we know, is red, black, white, and yellow; but where the pale skin plants his foot, the gods of the nations bow. Such is the truth, make of it what we may.

How or when this problem will finally be solved, or whether it ever will be, no one can foresee; but of one thing we may be extremely sure indeed: it is not settled now. We need a theory to cover the facts, and not a doctrine very beautiful, if it were only true. Democracy has been tried for the first time in America. It has not failed, but it has not yet succeeded. Mr. Gayarré says, in the North American Review, that power, like love, cannot be shared. Mr. Gayarré must abate somewhat of his patrician pride; but he mistakes the dilemma. That which cannot be shared is bread. One dinner will not dine two men. One acre cannot grow two crops. In fine, the race problem is one issue of the population problem. What is to come of it? The sky is dark. What does the gloom portend? We take down our Gibbon or our Shakespeare from the shelf to read of war and tragedy. We had better take down our Malthus or our Darwin. The war of wars and the tragedy of tragedies is the struggle for existence.

There is annually being born into a world, already occupied, a surplusage of people whom no one wants to see. At Nature's banquet, there are no plates laid for them. Malthus says, they must take themselves away; but that is not apparent. Malthus does not correctly describe the situation. He sees, indeed, and shows, with admirable clearness, that excess of population breeds of necessity famine, disease, and vice; but he fails to see, or else he blinks the truth, that it also needs must lead (as it repeatedly has done in the past) to violence and bloodshed.

It must have this effect, for only think of it,—think of being introduced upon this earth, so full of joys which most men love sufficiently well to fight for, and calmly told that your whole duty is to take yourself away. You will not do it,—not if you can help it. No! If there be anything sure, it is that negative. A man being told to take himself away can know no other code of morals than that of Ishmael. Incendiaryism for him is changed into a virtue. Remember the poor pariah is not singular in this; that his conscience consents to go into committee with his belly, or with something else as little dignified and less imperious. L'Année terrible is within the recollection of very young men, when the bourgeoisie of Versailles called for blood and more blood; and Thiers promised, in villainous good faith, "You shall have blood,—plenty of blood." The Scotch bard sings:—

I doubt na, whiles, but thou may thrive;
What, then? poor beastie! thou maun live.

Whether for man or mouse, or any creature, great or small, or wise or foolish, this is Nature's protest irrefragable,—this prime necessity of self-defence.

Given an exuberant population and famines, bread riots and appeals to the military succeed infallibly. The Chinese resort to infanticide to avert these horrors; and almost everywhere, except in modern Christendom, some attempt—perhaps clumsy, perhaps immoral, perhaps atrocious,—but still some attempt has been made to deal with this momentous question, but we simply shirk it. Man runs up his prodigal account. Fate is his remorseless creditor; and Nature, the magistrate, distrains upon humanity to pay with compound interest the accumulating debt. A weak and superstitious sentimentalism fears to face the issue, and a sinister material interest also deliberately prefers to see the proletariat numerous, and hence poor, and consequently ignorant and dependent. The former is the product of Christian culture. The hero of the gospels, while he often vents an indiscriminating abuse upon rich men (which is neither politic nor just), yet indirectly plays into the hands of social tyranny.

CHARLES ELLERSHAW.

NEW YORK CITY.

COMMUNISM OR INDIVIDUALISM?

TO THE EDITOR OF THE INDEX:—

I was surprised to read in THE INDEX of Feb. 7, a communication from Mr. Leland, in which he expressed himself in what I cannot but call an arrogant and unscientific tone towards those who do not agree with him as to evolution in human society, and especially your editorial contributor, "A. W. K." Now I am no believer in evolution in human society,—that is, in the extreme form in which it is held by Mr. Leland. It seems to me that Mr. Cairnes' article, which you published two or three years ago, was convincing. Mr. Leland, as a student of philosophy, sees reasons to think this theory necessarily true. I, as a student of history, see no reason to think it true in fact; and it all lies in a nutshell,—in human history we have the powerful element of what we call free-will. The greatest facts of human history are indissolubly associated with great men.

But if I did hold this theory, I should arrive at precisely the opposite conclusion to Mr. Leland,—that is, that the movement of society is not towards communism, but towards individualism. If the concrete study of early customs, institutions, and laws, as pursued by Maine, Morgan, Coulanges, and others, has taught us anything; if it is that society in its early phases is highly organized, and that the movement of civilization is one of disintegration; so that at the present day we have arrived at almost absolute individualism. Land in early stages of society, as soon as it becomes an object of property at all, is universally owned in common. And so far from the early house being the wigwam, Mr. Morgan holds that the communal abode was characteristic of early society. (See his article in the North American on "Montezuma's Dinner.")

W. F. ALLEN.

AGGRESSIVE TRUTHFULNESS.

DEAR INDEX:—

The Boston Sunday Herald of 17th February has an article upon Col. Ingersoll and his popularity as a lecturer, which concludes with the following significant statement:—

"He has received three thousand invitations to lecture this winter from every State in the Union, except five or six Southern States. He is forty-four years of age. The largest fee ever paid for one lecture was received by him on his farewell lecture at San Francisco. He spoke on 'shares,' and his moiety amounted to nearly $2,300."

There is not the least doubt that Col. Ingersoll is a remarkably entertaining and eloquent orator; but I do not attribute his wonderful success altogether to those peculiar charms. The subjects he discusses, and the ability and boldness with which he handles them, are, after all, the chief attraction. That the large audiences which everywhere assemble to listen to his discourses care quite as much for the matter they contain as for the manner of their delivery is attested by the applause with which their more salient points are uniformly greeted.

The fact is, the sentiments he utters are far more prevalent among the masses of our intelligent countrymen than is generally supposed; but the anti-

Christian theology element, though very large, being unorganized, and, in general, unaggressive, is treated with contempt by organized evangelism.

This will not always be so. A score or two of able and fearless lecturers—of the Ingersoll type—kept constantly in the field, would so popularize the freethought tendencies of the age as speedily to convince even the dullest comprehension that the days of dogmatic theology are numbered.

As an auxiliary to the free religious press, the lecture-room affords a fine field for the spread of radical ideas, where their honest, able, and fearless advocacy will surely meet with a candid response. Neither abstruse philosophy nor misty metaphysics nor thread-bare platitudes are the need of the hour: but bold, vigorous, clean-cut, factive utterance,—such as the average every-day intellect can comprehend, is in demand,—will receive attention and command respect. If the Christian theology is founded on superstition—as I, for one, believe it is,—then let it be treated as it should be,—aggressively.

Though I might dissent from many of Col. Ingersoll's assumptions, yet the evident honesty of his convictions and the imperiousness with which he utters them, compel my admiration, and receive my homage.

"A faint heart never won a fair lady" is evidently the Colonel's motto; and the axiom is as applicable to the theological iconoclast as it ever was to warrior or statesman or lover. Then mount the platform, brave champions of freethought, and if you cannot rival, in wit and eloquence, your illustrious exemplar, you may, at least, in zeal, honesty, and manly utterance.

DANIEL CONEY.

WOBURN, Mass., Feb. 18, 1878.

A NEW PUBLICATION.

THE RELIGION OF ISRAEL: A Manual, translated from the Dutch of J. Knappert, Pastor at Leliden, by Richard A. Armstrong.—Boston: Roberts Brothers. 1878.

This little book is a presentation, in brief space and popular form, of the critical conclusions reached in Prof. Kuenen's elaborate work, entitled A History of the Religion of Israel, an English version of which has been published by Messrs. Williams & Norgate, in the Theological Translation Fund Library.

The translator of Knappert's book tells us that, in his judgment, its general position is absolutely unassailable, and that the immense majority of its statements are such as are every year becoming more indisputable. He thinks it needful, therefore, that facts of this sort should be made accessible to that vast number of the generation, now passing into manhood and womanhood, who have been taught a blind and unreasoning faith in the supernatural inspiration of the Scriptures. The present age of radical inquiry has its dangers; and one of these is, that young people, if suddenly and bluntly made aware that Abraham, Moses, David, and the rest did not say, do, or write what has been ascribed to them, will fling away all care for the venerable religion of Israel, and all hope that it can nourish their own religious life. The author of this book has done his work in a reverent not less than a critical spirit; showing that, whatever the errors of Old Testament legislators and prophets, they truly prepared the way for the better faith which Jesus taught.

First showing why it is impossible for any one to form a just conception of Israel's religion without knowing its history, our author proceeds to point out the sources from which we get our knowledge of it, and then treats of the successive periods of Hebrew history, thus attaining a correct idea of the state of the Jews in the age immediately preceding the Christian era. He then tells us what is known of the collection into one volume of the books now known as "The Old Testament," skillfully separating ascertained fact from tradition; and, in an Appendix to the book, the prominent statements and thoughts in it are suggestively summed up in the form of a catechism, a portion of one prepared by the pastors, and used in the congregations or Sunday-schools of the Reformed Church of Holland. If one may judge by the present work, the intelligence of those pastors and those churches far exceeds that of any sect in our own country; and we may very advantageously seek for more of their writings.

C. K. W.

MRS. CLARA NEYMANN AT PROVIDENCE.

Mrs. Neymann spoke a second time before the Providence Free Religious Association, Feb. 24, before one of the largest audiences of the season. Her subject was, "What is Religion?" It was well and carefully treated; her essay fully sustaining the favorable judgment her first appearance in Providence secured. She traced the (to her) untenable grounds of those theories of life and duty which rest on supposed "revelation," and advocated those principles of action which may be gained by careful study of actual life and just appreciation of the nature of things.

We gladly welcome to the public platform of religious reform a woman of such single-eyed devotion to truth, and of such an earnest and reverent spirit as Mrs. Neymann. On Tuesday, Feb. 26, Mrs. Neymann, at the request of the Rhode Island Woman Suffrage Association, addressed the Committee of the Legislature, to whom had been presented a number of petitions for the extension of the franchise to the women of the State. On this occasion, Mrs. Neymann spoke also with great acceptance. G.

[Mrs. Neymann is announced to speak next Sunday in this city at Paine Memorial Hall. Her subjects are "German Scepticism" in the morning, and "Woman's Work in Germany, England, and Switzerland" in the evening.—Ed.]

Advertisements.

THE PATRONAGE

of the liberal advertising public is respectfully solicited for THE INDEX. The attempt will be honestly made to keep the advertising pages of THE INDEX in entire harmony with its general character and principles, and thus to furnish to the public an advertising medium which shall be not only profitable to its patrons, but also worthy of their most generous support. To this end, all improper or "blind" advertisements, all quack advertisements, and all advertisements believed to be fraudulent or unjust to any one, will be excluded from these columns.

THE INDEX must not be held responsible for any statement made by advertisers, who will in all cases accept the responsibility for their own statements.

ADVERTISING RATES.

For 1 to 12 insertions, 10c per line.
 " 13 " 25 " 8 " "
 " 26 " 51 " 6 " "
 " 52 " " 5 " "

On half-column advertisements, a discount of 10 per cent. will be made; on full-column advertisements, a discount of 25 per cent.

On all advertisements for which cash is paid in advance, a further discount of 25 per cent. on the total, as above calculated, will be made. FRANCIS E. ABBOT, Editor.

TO ADVERTISERS.

The following states the experience of a successful Bookseller who has advertised in THE INDEX:—

TOLEDO, Ohio, Sept. 20, 1872.
 To THE INDEX ASSO., Toledo, O.:
Gentlemen—Having had occasion to advertise in your paper during the past two years quite largely, I take pleasure in stating that I have always obtained very satisfactory returns—better in fact than from book advertisements in any other paper I have advertised in. Not only have I obtained immediate results, but orders have frequently been received months after the insertion of the advertisement, showing that your paper is kept on file and referred to by your readers.
 Yours truly,
 HENRY S. STEBBINS.

Special arrangements will be made at reduced terms for long-time or extended advertisements. Address

THE INDEX,
 No. 231 WASHINGTON STREET,
 Boston.

CULTURED FREE THOUGHT.

The Index Association,

Office, No. 231 WASHINGTON ST., BOSTON, publish

THE INDEX,

A Weekly Paper devoted to Free and Rational Religion.

It is the object of THE INDEX to give public utterance to the boldest, most cultivated, and best matured thought of the age on all religious questions, and to apply it directly to the social and political amelioration of society.

It is edited by FRANCIS E. ABBOT, with the following list of Editorial Contributors:—

O. B. FROTHINGHAM, New York City.
 WILLIAM J. POTTER, New Bedford, Mass.
 WILLIAM H. SPENCER, Haverhill, Mass.
 MRS. E. D. CHENEY, Jamaica Plain, Mass.
 GEORGE JACOB HOLYOAKE, London, Eng.
 DAVID H. CLARK, Florence, Mass.
 MRS. ELIZABETH CADY STANTON, Tenny, N.J.
 J. L. STODDARD, Boston.
 ELIZUR WRIGHT, Boston.
 C. D. B. MILLS, Syracuse, N.Y.
 W. D. LE SUEUR, Ottawa, Can.
 BENJ. F. UNDERWOOD, Thorndike, Mass.
 ALBERT WARREN KELSEY, St. Louis, Mo.

Every liberal should subscribe for THE INDEX as the best popular exponent of Religious Liberalism. Every Christian minister, and every thinking church-member, should subscribe for it, as the clearest, most candid, and most scholarly exposition of the differences between Free Thought and Evangelical Christianity, and as the best means of becoming well informed of the arguments and the movements which the Church will have to meet in the future.

Almost every number contains a discourse or leading article, which alone is worth the price of one year's subscription.

Prof. MAX MUELLER, of Oxford, England, in a letter to the Editor published in THE INDEX for January 4, 1873, says: "That the want of a journal entirely devoted to Religion in the widest sense of the word should be felt in America—that such a journal should have been started and so powerfully supported by the best minds of our country—is a good sign of the times. There is no such journal in England, France, or Germany; though the number of so-called religious or theological periodicals is, as you know, very large." And later still "I read the numbers of your INDEX with increasing interest."

Send $3.20 for one year, including postage, or $0 cents for three months on trial.

Address THE INDEX,
 No. 231 Washington Street, Boston.

PUBLICATIONS

OF THE

FREE

RELIGIOUS

ASSOCIATION.

Freedom and Fellowship in Religion. A volume of ten essays upon speculative and practical problems of religion, by D. A. Wasson, Samuel Longfellow, Samuel Johnson, John Weiss, W. J. Potter, F. E. Abbot, O. B. Frothingham, J. W. Chadwick, T. W. Higginson, and Mrs. E. D. Cheney, and extracts from Addresses by Ralph Waldo Emerson, Lucretia Mott, Robert Dale Owen, Dr. Bartol, Wendell Phillips, Rabbi Wise, Horace Seaver, A. B. Alcott, Lucy Stone, Charles H. Malcom, Julia Ward Howe, and others,—all given on the platform of the Free Religious Association. Price (reduced) $1.50.

"One purpose of this volume is to give an answer to the question, What is the meaning of the Free Religious Association?"

Proceedings of Fifth Annual Meeting, 1872. Contains essays by J. W. Chadwick on "Liberty and the Church in America," by C. D. B. Mills on "Religion as the Expression of a Permanent Sentiment of the Human Mind," and by O. B. Frothingham on "The Religion of Humanity," with addresses by Rowland Connor, Celia Burleigh, Lucretia Mott, A. B. Alcott, C. A. Bartol, Horace Seaver, Alexander Loos, and others.

Proceedings of Sixth Annual Meeting, 1873. Contains essays by Samuel Johnson on "Freedom in Religion," and by John Weiss on "Religion in Freedom," with addresses by Wm. C. Gannett, Robert Dale Owen, T. W. Higginson, Samuel Longfellow, J. B. Thomson, F. E. Abbot, and Lucretia Mott.

Proceedings of Seventh Annual Meeting, 1874. Contains verbatim reports of President Frothingham's address on "The Validity of the Free Religious Platform," of Dr. Bartol's essay on "The Religious Signs of the Times," of Rabbi Sonnenschein's speech on "Reformed Judaism," and of the statements by Messrs. Galtrop, Abbot, and Higginson of their respective attitudes towards Christianity,—as "Christian," "Anti-Christian," and "Extra-Christian,"—together with the Secretary's Annual Report, and letters from Keshub Chunder Sen, Frederick Douglass, and D. A. Wasson.

Proceedings of Eighth Annual Meeting, 1875. Contains Essays by Wm. C. Gannett, on "The Present Constructive Tendencies in Religion," and by Francis E. Abbot, on "Construction and Destruction in Religion," and addresses by T. W. Higginson, Lucretia Mott, Chas. G. Ames, O. B. Frothingham, B. F. Underwood, S. P. Putnam, and E. S. Morse.

Proceedings of Ninth Annual Meeting, 1876. Contains a full abstract of the interesting discussion at the Business Meeting on the Practical Methods and Work of the Association; the annual report of the Executive Committee; address of the President, O. B. Frothingham; essay by James Parton, on "The Relation of Religion to the State" (or, as he styles it, "Cathedrals and Beer"), with addresses on the subject by Miss Susan H. Wilson and Rev. M. J. Savage; essay by Samuel Longfellow, on "The Relation of Free Religion to Churches," with the addresses that followed it by Prof. Felix Adler, Rev. Henry Blanchard, Rev. Brooke Herford, and John Weiss,—together with letters from Judge Doe, Rev. Joseph Cook, and others, invited to speak.

Proceedings of Tenth Annual Meeting, 1877. Contains Essays by Rev. Wm. B. Alger, on "Steps towards Religious Emancipation in Christendom," and by C. D. B. Mills, Esq., on "Internal Dangers to Free Thought and Free Religion." Addresses by O. B. Frothingham, Wm. Henry Channing, Rabbi Lasker, Dr. J. L. Dudley, and T. W. Higginson; and tenth annual reports of the Executive Committee, Treasurer, etc.

Any one of the above pamphlets of "PROCEEDINGS" sent to any address for Five cents received in postage stamps; and more at the same rate. Sold also for Five cents at the office.

For series of important Tracts see last page of THE INDEX.

These publications are for sale at the office of the Free Religious Association, 231 Washington Street, Boston. The Annual Reports for 1868 and 1871 cannot be supplied, and the supply of others previous to that of 1873 is quite limited and at special rates. Orders by mail may be addressed "Free Religious Association, 231 Washington Street, Boston, Mass."

WM. J. POTTER, Sec. F. R. A.

INDEX TRACTS.

No. 1.—Truths for the Times, by F. E. Abbot, contains the "Fifty Affirmations" and "Modern Principles." Mr. CHARLES DARWIN, author of "The Origin of Species," says, in a letter to the editor not originally intended for publication, but subsequently authorized to be used: "I have now read 'TRUTHS FOR THE TIMES,' and I admire them from my inmost heart; and I agree to almost every word." New Edition. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00.

No. 2.—Fear of the Living God, by O. B. Frothingham, exposes the debasing character of the popular notions of God, and presents conceptions of him that are worthy of the nineteenth century. New Edition. Price 5 cents; 12 copies 50 cents.

No. 3.—Lecture on the Bible, by the Rev. Charles Voysey, of England, is an overwhelming demonstration of the imperfections and errors of the Bible, both in the Old and the New Testaments. New Edition. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00.

No. 4.—Christian Propagandism, by F. E. Abbot, is an exposure of the weakness, costliness, and inefficiency of the System of Foreign Missions. Full of Figures, Facts, and Interesting Extracts. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00.

No. 5.—"God in the Constitution," by Rev. Arthur B. Bradford, opposes the proposed Theological Amendment to the United States Constitution. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00.

No. 6.—"The Sabbath," by Parker Pillsbury, denounces Sabbatarian superstition. New Edition. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00.

No. 7.—"Compulsory Education," by F. E. Abbot, maintains the right of every child to be educated, and the duty of the State to ensure it an education. Price 5 cents; 12 copies 50 cents.

No. 8.—The Present Heaven, by O. B. Frothingham, treats of a subject that interests everybody. New Edition. Price 5 cents; 12 copies 50 cents.

No. 9.—The Christian Amendment, by F. E. Abbot, shows the dangerous character of the attempt to interpolate the Evangelical Christian Creed in the U. S. Constitution. Price 5 cents; 12 copies 50 cents.

No. 10.—The Impeachment of Christianity, by F. E. Abbot. Fourth Ten Thousand. Sent for free distribution to any one who will distribute it, in packages of from five to one hundred copies.

No. 11.—The God of Science, by F. E. Abbot, attempts to show the real influence of modern science upon the idea of God. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00.

No. 12.—Is Romanism Real Christianity? Two essays by Francis W. Newman and F. E. Abbot. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00.

No. 13.—On the Vision of Heaven, by Prof. F. W. Newman, of England, analyzes the Christian conception of Heaven. Price 5 cents; 12 copies 50 cents.

No. 14.—A Study of Religion: The Name and the Thing, by F. E. Abbot, attempts to show that the popular derivation of the word Religion is incorrect; that the popular conceptions of Religion itself are inadequate; and that a new conception of it, based on the Law of Evolution, consistent with absolute Freedom of Thought, and independent even of belief in God, is the necessary condition of the perpetuity of Religion among men. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00.

No. 15.—The Battle of Syracuse. Two Essays by Rev. James Freeman Clarke, D.D., and F. E. Abbot discussing the Authority of Christianity. Price 10 cents; 12 copies for $1.00. Address

THE INDEX, 231 WASHINGTON STREET,
 Boston, Mass.

1 8 7 8.

THE INDEX,
A Weekly Journal

DEVOTED TO

FREE RELIGION.

PUBLISHED BY THE

INDEX ASSOCIATION,

AT

No. 231 Washington Street, Boston.

EDITOR:

FRANCIS ELLINGWOOD ABBOT.

EDITORIAL CONTRIBUTORS:

O. B. FROTHINGHAM, New York City.
 W. J. POTTER, New Bedford, Mass.
 W. H. SPENCER, Haverhill, Mass.
 MRS. E. D. CHENEY, Jamaica Plain, Mass.
 GEORGE JACOB HOLYOAKE, England.
 DAVID H. CLARK, Florence, Mass.
 MRS. ELIZABETH CADY STANTON, Tenny, N.J.
 J. L. STODDARD, Boston.
 ELIZUR WRIGHT, Boston.
 C. D. B. MILLS, Syracuse, N.Y.
 W. D. LE SUEUR, Ottawa, Can.
 BENJ. F. UNDERWOOD, Thorndike, Mass.
 ALBERT WARREN KELSEY, St. Louis, Mo.

THE INDEX aims—

To increase general intelligence with respect to religion:

To foster a nobler spirit and quicken a higher purpose, both in society and in the individual:

To substitute knowledge for ignorance, right for wrong, truth for superstition, freedom for slavery, character for creed, catholicity for bigotry, love for hate, humanitarianism for sectarianism, devotion to universal ends for absorption in selfish schemes.

In brief, to hasten the day when Free Religion shall take the place of dogmatism and ecclesiasticism throughout the world, and when the welfare of humanity here and now shall be the aim of all private and public activities.

In addition to its general objects, the practical object to which THE INDEX is specially devoted is the ORGANIZATION OF THE LIBERALS OF THE COUNTRY, for the purpose of securing the more complete and consistent secularization of the political and educational institutions of the United States. The Church must give place to the Republic in the affections of the people. The last vestiges of ecclesiastical control must be wiped out of the Constitutions and Statutes of the several States in order to bring them into harmony with the National Constitution. To accomplish this object, the Liberals must make a united demand, and present an unbroken front, and the chief practical aim of THE INDEX will be henceforth to organize a great NATIONAL PARTY OF FREEDOM. Let every one who believes in this movement give it direct aid by helping to increase the circulation of THE INDEX.

SPECIAL FEATURES.

The publication of a valuable leading paper or essay of a thoughtful character, in each issue, will continue to be one of the most marked features of THE INDEX.

Regular editorial contributions will continue to be furnished by the well-known eminent writers who have already done so much to give to THE INDEX its present high position. Other interesting correspondence, communications, extracts from valuable books and periodicals, and miscellaneous articles, will also be published; and such improvements will be made from time to time as circumstances shall render possible.

AGENTS.

Local Agents for THE INDEX are wanted in every city and town throughout the country. The most liberal terms are offered.

TERMS.

The price of THE INDEX is Three Dollars a year, payable in advance; and 30 cents postage for the year; and at the same rate for shorter periods. All remittances of money must be at the sender's risk, unless forwarded by cheque, registered letter, or post-office money order. The name, with address in full, must be accompanied with the money in each case.

Address THE INDEX,
 No. 231 Washington Street, Boston.

POPULAR BOOKS,

SENT BY MAIL

AT

PUBLISHERS' PRICES!

ORDERS PROMPTLY FILLED.

NO EXTRA CHARGE FOR POSTAGE.

ANY BOOK in the subjoined List, or any other OBTAINABLE BOOK that may be desired, will be forwarded as promptly as possible on receipt of orders accompanied with the CASH.

Orders are respectfully solicited from

all friends of THE INDEX.

	Price.
ALCOOTT (A. BRONSON). Tablets.....	1.50
Concord Days.....	1.50
Records of a School. A new edition.....	1.50
ALCOOTT (LOUISA M.). Little Women. Two vols.....	3.00
Hospital Sketches and Camp and Fireside Stories.....	1.50
An Old-Fashioned Girl.....	1.50
Little Men.....	1.50
My Boys, &c.....	1.00
Shawl-Straps.....	1.00
Work; a Story of Experience.....	1.75
ARABIAN NIGHTS' ENTERTAINMENTS.....	1.50
ARNOLD'S (MATTHEW) Essays in Criticism.....	2.00
New Poems.....	2.00
Literature and Dogma.....	1.50
AUERBAUGH (BERTHOLD). On the Heights. Villa Eden; The Country-House on the Rhine.....	1.50
Edelweiss.....	2.00
German Tales.....	1.00
BACON'S Essays.....	1.25
BAGEHOT on the English Constitution.....	2.25
Physics and Politics.....	1.50
BAIN (ALEXANDER). Mental Science: A Compendium of Psychology and History of Philosophy.....	1.75
Moral Science: A Compendium of Ethics. 1 vol.....	1.75
The Senses and the Intellect. Third edition. 1 vol.....	5.00
BARTLETT'S Dictionary of Americanisms.....	2.50
BARTLETT'S Familiar Quotations.....	3.00
BARTOL (REV. O. A.). Radical Problems.....	2.00
The Rising Faith.....	2.00
BASTIAN (H. CHARLTON). The Beginnings of Life. 3 vols.....	5.00
BRACKETT (ANNA C.). The Education of American Girls.....	5.00
BROOKS (CHARLES T.). Translations. The Layman's Breviary.....	2.25
The World-Priest.....	2.25
The Tall Student.....	.75
BUCHNER'S Force and Matter.....	3.25
BUCKLE (HENRY THOMAS). History of Civilization in England and France, Spain and Scotland. New edition of the entire work, with a complete index. 2 vols.....	5.00
CARLYLE'S Works. Cheap edition. Comprising the following: Miscellaneous Essays, 7 vols.; French Revolution, 3 vols.; Frederick the Great, 10 vols.; Cromwell's Letters, &c., 3 vols.; Sartor Resartus, 1 vol.; John Sterling, 1 vol.; Life of Schiller, vol. I, Past and Present, 1 vol.; Heroes and Hero Worship, 1 vol.; Latter Day Pamphlets, 1 vol. Any volume sold separately. 31 vols. London, 1871-2. Per vol.....	.90
CARPENTER (DR. W. B.). The Principles of Mental Physiology, with their Applications to the Training and Discipline of the Mind, and the Study of its Morbid Conditions.....	3.00
CERVANTES' Don Quixote.....	1.50
CHANNING (WM. ELLERY, D.D.). The Perfect Life. In Twelve Discourses. Edited from his manuscripts by his nephew, Wm. Henry Channing.....	1.50
CHANNING (WM. ELLERY). Thoreau: The Poet-Naturalist. With Memorial Verse.....	2.00
CHENEY (MRS. E. D.). Patience, a Series of Thirty Games for the Fireside.....	1.00
Social Games. A new Series of Games for Parties, uniform with Patience.....	1.00
Sally Williams, the Mountain Girl. Illustrated.....	1.50
CLARKE (JAMES FREEMAN). Ten Great Religions.....	3.00
Common-Sense in Religion.....	2.00
CLARKE (DR. R. H.). Sex in Education.....	1.25
CLODD (EDWARD). The Childhood of the World.....	.75
COBBE (FRANCES POWER). Studies New and Old of Ethical and Social Subjects. Darwinism in Morals, and other Essays.....	3.00
The Religious Demands of the Age.....	.50
CONWAY (MONCURE D.). The Earthward Pilgrimage.....	1.75
COBBINATION and Conservation of Forces: A Series of Expositions by Grove, Helmholtz, Mayer, Faraday, Liebig and Carpenter: with an Introduction by Edward L. Youmans, M.D. 1 vol.....	2.00
CULTURE DEMANDED BY MODERN LIFE: Its True Aims and Requirements. A Series of Addresses. By Tyndall, Huxley, Whewell, Faraday, Spencer, Draper, Masson, Lyell, etc. Edited by Edward L. Youmans.....	2.00
DALL (MRS. CAROLINE H.). The College, the Market, and the Court; or, Woman's Relation to Education, Employment, and Citizenship.....	2.50

Historical Pictures Retouched; a Volume of Miscellanies. In two parts. Part I., "Studies, Pictures, and Fancies".....	1.
DARWIN'S Origin of Species.....	1.50
The Descent of Man. 2 vols.....	4.00
Journal of Researches.....	2.00
Emotional Expression of Man and the Lower Animals.....	3.50
The Variation of Animals and Plants under Domestication. 2 vols., illustrated.....	5.00
DESCARTES (RENE.) Discourse on the Method of Rightly conducting the Reason and Seeking Truth in the Sciences.....	2.25
DICKENS' Child's History of England.....	1.50
DUHRING (JULIA). Philosophers and Fools. A Study.....	2.00
ELIOT'S (GEORGE) Novels. Household Edition. 3 vols., each.....	1.00
Comprising—Adam Bede.....
Romola.....
The Mill on the Floss.....
Felix Holt.....
Silas Marner and Scenes of Clerical Life. The same. Library Edition. 1 vol.....	1.50
Middlemarch. 3 vols.....	2.50
Wit and Wisdom of.....	1.25
The Spanish Gypsy.....	1.50
EMERSON'S (R. W.) Essays. First Series.....	1.50
Essays. Second Series.....	1.50
Miscellanies.....	1.50
Representative Men.....	1.50
English Traits.....	1.50
Conduct of Life.....	1.50
Poems. With Portrait.....	1.50
May-day and Other Pieces.....	1.50
Essays. Blue and Gold.....	1.25
Poems. Blue and Gold.....	1.25
Prose Works. 1 vol.....	5.00
Society and Solitude.....	1.50
EVANS (E. P., Ph. D.). First Historical Transformations of Christianity. From the French of Athanasius Coquerel the Younger.....	1.50
The Life and Works of Gotthold Ephraim Lessing. Translated from the German of Adolf Stahr. 2 vols.....	5.00
FARRAR'S Critical History of Free Thought, in reference to the Christian Religion.....	2.00
FEUERBACH (LUDWIG). The Essence of Christianity. "George Eliot's" translation.....	2.00
FISKE'S (JOHN) Myths and Myth-Makers.....	2.00
Oceanic Philosophy.....	5.00
FROTHINGHAM (O. B.) Religion of Humanity.....	1.50
Child's Book of Religion.....	1.00
Life of Theodore Parker.....	3.00
FULLER'S (MARGARET) Complete Works, including Memoirs by Emerson, Channing, and others. A new edition. 8 vols.....	9.00
GALTON (FRANCIS). Hereditary Genius. An Inquiry into its Laws and Consequences.....	2.00
GOETHE'S Faust. Translated into English Verse by Bayard Taylor. 2 vols. Per vol.....	5.00
Elective Affinities.....	1.25
Wilhelm Meister. Translated by Thomas Carlyle. Portrait of Goethe. 2 vols.....	3.50
Herman and Dorothea. Translated by Ellen Frothingham.....	1.00
GREG'S (W. R.) Enigmas of Life.....	2.00
Literary and Social Judgments.....	2.00
Creed of Christendom.....	7.00
GROTE'S LIFE. Compiled from Family Documents, Private Memoranda, and Original Letters to and from Various Friends. By Mrs. Grote. Second Edition. With Portrait.....	5.00
HAMERTON (PHILIP G.) A Painter's Camp. Book I. In England. Book II. In Scotland. Book III. In France.....	1.50
Thoughts about Art.....	2.50
The Unknown River.....	5.00
The Intellectual Life.....	2.00
Chapters on Animals.....	4.00
HAMILTON (GAIL). Child World. Part Second. Child World. Part First.....	1.00
HAMILTON'S Lectures.....	3.50
1. Metaphysical Lectures.....	3.50
2. Logical Lectures.....	3.50
HAWTHORNE'S (NATHANIEL) Works. New Illustrated Library Edition. Nine vols. Per vol.....	2.00
Twice-Told Tales.....
Mosses from an Old Manse.....
The Scarlet Letter, and The Blithedale Romance.....
The House of the Seven Gables, and The Snow Image.....
The Marble Faun.....
The English Note-Books.....
The American Note-Books.....
The French and Italian Note-Books.....
Our Old Home, and Septimus Feiton.....
HIGGINSON'S (T. W.) Out-Door Papers.....	1.50
Malbone. An Oldport Romance.....	1.50
Army Life in a Black Regiment.....	1.50
Atlantic Essays.....	2.00
Oldport Days.....	2.50
HOWELL'S (WILLIAM D.) Their Wedding Journey.....	2.00
Suburban Sketches.....	2.00
Venetian Life.....	2.00
Italian Journeys.....	2.00
A Chance Acquaintance.....	1.50
HUGO'S (V.) New Novel, "Ninety-Three".....	1.75
HUMBOLDT (ALEXANDER VON). Life of. Translated from the German. 2 vols., with three portraits.....	10.50
HUME'S (DAVID) Essays and Life.....	1.50
HUNT'S (MRS. HELEN). Verses.....	1.25
Bits of Travel.....	1.50
HUXLEY'S Man's Place in Nature.....	1.25
On the Origin of Species.....	1.50
More Criticisms on Darwin and Administrative Nihilism.....	1.50
A Manual of the Anatomy of Vertebrated Animals.....	2.50
Lay Sermons, Addresses, and Reviews.....	1.75
INGELOW'S (JEAN) Poems.....	2.25
The Monitions of the Unseen.....	1.50
Songs of Seven.....	2.50
INGELOW'S (JEAN) Prose. Off the Skel-Uge.....	1.75
Stories told to a Child. First and Second Series.....	1.25
A Sister's Bye-Hours.....	1.25
Mopse the Fairy: A Story.....	1.25
INGERSOLL'S (ROBT. G.) The Gods and Other Lectures.....	2.00
INTERNATIONAL SCIENTIFIC SERIES. No. 1. Forms of Water, in Clouds, Rain, Rivers, Ice, and Glaciers. By John Tyndall.....	1.50
No. 2. Physics and Politics; or, Thoughts on the Application of the Principles of "Natural Selection," and "Inheritance" to Political Society. By Walter Hagehot.....	1.50

III. Foods. By Dr. Edward Smith.....	1.75
IV. Mind and Body. The Theories of their Relations. By Alex. Bain.....	1.50
V. The Study of Sociology. By Herbert Spencer, Esq.....	1.50
VI. The New Chemistry. By Josiah P. Cooke, Jr.....	1.00
VII. The Conservation of Energy. By Balfour Stewart, with an Appendix treating of the Vital and Mental Applications of the Doctrine.....	1.50
VIII. Animal Locomotion; or, Walking, Swimming, and Flying, with a Dissertation on Aerodynamics. By J. Bell Pettigrew.....	1.75
IX. Responsibility in Mental Disease. By Henry Mandale, M.D.....	1.50
JERROLD (DOUGLAS). Fireside Saints, Mr. Claude's Breakfast Talk, and other Papers.....	1.50
JOHNSON'S (SAMUEL) Oriental Religions, and their Relation to Universal Religion. India.....	5.00
JOSEPHUS. The whole Works of Flavius Josephus, the Jewish Historian.....	2.50
JOWETT. The Dialogues of Plato. Translated into English, with Analyses and Introductions by B. Jowett, M.A. Master of Balliol College, Oxford, and Regius Professor of Greek. Four vols.....	13.00
KERE (ORPHEUS C.). Versatilities, Poems, Patriotic, Sentimental and Humorous.....	2.00
LEORY (W. E. H.). History of the Rise and Influence of the Spirit of Rationalism in Europe. 2 vols.....	4.00
History of European Morals from Augustus to Charlemagne. 1 vol.....	5.00
LEGGE'S Confucius' Life and Teachings.....	4.00
Confucius and Chinese Classics.....	2.00
LESSING'S (G. E.) Nathan the Wise. Translated by Ellen Frothingham.....	1.50
LEWES' Physiology of Common Life. 2 vols. Biographical History of Philosophy, from its Origin in Greece down to the Present Day. 3 vols.....	5.00
Problems of Life and Mind. The Foundations of a Creed.....	3.00
LEWES (G. H.). The Story of Goethe's Life.....	1.50
LEWIN (REV. RAPHAEL, D.D.). What is Judaism? or, a Few Words to the Jews.....	1.00
LONGFELLOW'S (H. W.) Poems. Portrait. 2 vols.....	4.00
Prose Works. Portrait.....	4.00
LOWELL'S (J. R.) Poems. 2 vols.....	4.00
The Biglow Papers. First Series.....	1.50
The Biglow Papers. Second Series.....	1.50
Among my Books.....	2.00
My Study Windows.....	3.00
LOWELL (MRS. A. C.) Poems for Children.....	.75
LUBBOCK (SIR JOHN). Origin of Civilization, and the Primitive Condition of Man. Pre-historic Times.....	2.00
LYELL'S Principles of Geology. 2 vols.....	8.00
MACDONALD (GEORGE) The Vicar's Daughter.....	1.50
MANN (HORACE). The Life of Horace Mann. By his Wife.....	3.50
Lectures and Annual Reports on Education. Annual Reports on Education, from 1839 to 1843.....	3.00
Thoughts Selected from the Writings of Horace Mann.....	1.25
MARTINEAU (JAMES). Essays, Philosophical and Theological. 2 vols. Per vol.....	2.50
MAURICE (REV. F. D.). The Ground and Object of Hope for Mankind.....	.75
MERIVALE'S (CHARLES) Conversion of the Roman Empire.....	1.50
Conversion of the Northern Nations.....	1.50
MILL (JOHN STUART). Dissertations and Discussions. 4 vols., each.....	2.25
The Examination of the Philosophy of Sir William Hamilton. 3 vols., each.....	2.25
The Positive Philosophy of Auguste Comte. Political Economy. New and revised edition.....	2.50
The Subjection of Women—Essay on Liberty—both in one vol.....	2.50
Representative Government.....	1.50
Autobiography.....	2.25
Memorial Volume. His Life and Works.....	1.00
Three Essays on Religion.....	2.50
MILLER (JOAQUIN). Songs of the Sierras.....	1.50
Songs of the Sun Lands.....	1.50
MIVART (ST. GEO.) On the Genesis of Species.....	1.75
MORLEY (PROF. JOHN). Voltaire.....	2.00
Rousseau, 2 vols.....	5.00
MOULTON (LOUISE CHANDLER). Bed-Time Stories.....	1.50
MUELLER (MAX, M.A.). Lectures on the Science of Language. First Series.....	2.50
The Same. Second Series.....	3.50
Chips from a German Workshop. Vol. I. Essays on the Science of Religion. Vol. II. Essays on Mythology, Traditions, and Customs. Vol. III. Essays on Literature, Biography, and Antiquities. Three vols. Price per volume.....	2.50
Lectures on the Science of Religion.....	2.00
NASSY (PETROLEUM V.). Swings' Round the Circle.....	1.50
Ekkoes from Kentucky.....	1.50
NEWMAN (FRANCIS W.) A History of the Hebrew Monarchy.....	4.50
Catholic Union: Essays towards a Church of the Future, as the Organization of Philanthropy.....	1.75
Theism, Doctrinal and Practical.....	4.25
PARKER (THEODORE). A Discourse of Matters Pertaining to Religion.....	1.50
Speeches, Addresses, and Occasional Sermons. 3 vols.....	4.50
Additional Speeches, Addresses, and Occasional Sermons. 2 vols.....	3.50
Critical and Miscellaneous Writings.....	1.50
Historic Americana.—Franklin, Washington, Adams, and Jefferson. With an introduction by Rev. O. B. Frothingham.....	1.50
The two Christmas Celebrations.—A.D. I. and MDCCLV. A Christmas Story.....	.50
PARSONS (THEOPHILUS). The Infinite and the Finite.....	1.00
PHELPS'S (ELIZABETH STUART). The Gates Ajar.....	1.50
The Truitt Book.....	1.50
Men, Women, and Ghosts.....	1.50
Hedged in.....	1.50
The Silent Partner.....	1.50
What to Wear?.....	1.00
PROCTER'S (ADELAIDE A.) Poems. Portrait. Cabinet Edition.....	2.00

PROCTOR (RICHARD A.) Other Worlds than Ours: the Plurality of Worlds studied under the Light of Recent Scientific Researches. With Colored Plates.....	2.50
Light Science for Leisure Hours. A Series of Familiar Essays on Scientific Subjects, Natural Phenomena.....	1.75
Essays on Astronomy: A Series of Papers on Planets and Meteors, the Sun, etc. With 16 Plates and 24 Woodcuts.....	4.50
The Moon, her Motions, Aspects, Secondary, and Physical Conditions, with Three Lunar Photographs and many Plates, Charts, etc.....	5.00
The Expansion of Heaven.....	2.50
RENAN'S Life of Jesus.....	1.75
ROSSETTI (CHRISTINA G.) A Shadow of Dante.....	2.50
SCHLEIER (H.) Spectrum Analysis, in its Application to Terrestrial Substances, and the Physical Constitution of the Heavenly Bodies.....	5.00
SCIENCE PRIMERS: 1. Introductory. By Prof. Huxley, F.R.S.....	.50
2. Chemistry. By Prof. Roscoe.....	.50
3. Physics. By Balfour Stewart. With Illustrations.....	.50
4. Physical Geography. By Archibald Geikie, LL.D., F.R.S., Sc.D. cloth.....	.50
SCOTT'S Waverley Novels. 25 vols.....	21.25
SCOTT'S (THOMAS) The English Life of Jesus. Second Edition.....	2.50
SMILES'S (SAMUEL) Self-Help.....	1.50
SPENCER (HERBERT). Education, Intellectual, Moral, and Physical.....	1.50
First Principles.....	1.50
Essays: Moral, Political, and Aesthetic. Illustrations of Universal Principles. A Selection of his best Papers.....	2.50
Social Statics; or, The Conditions Essential to Human Happiness Specified, and the First of them Developed.....	1.50
The Principles of Biology. 2 vols.....	5.00
The Principles of Psychology. 2 vols.....	5.00
Philosophy of Style.....	.50
Recent Discussions in Science, Philosophy, and Morals. New and enlarged edition.....	1.50
Sociology.....	1.50
Descriptive Sociology. Parts I, II, and III, each.....	1.50
Life, Correspondence and Ethics.....	5.00
Universal Progress.....	2.5
STOWE (HARRIET BEECHER) Pink and White Tyranny.....	1.50
Uncle Tom's Cabin.....	.50
STRAUSS (D. F.) The Old Faith and the New.....	2.50
New Life of Jesus. Authorised translation. 3 vols.....	12.50
TAINES'S (H. A.) History of English Literature. 2 vols.....	7.50
The Chace-Room Taine. History of English Literature. Abridged and Edited by John Fluke.....	2.50
TENNISON'S (ALFRED) Poems.....	1.75
THACKERAY'S (W. M.) Novels. Household Edition. Complete in 6 volumes. Per vol.....	1.50
Vanity Fair.....
The Newcomes.....
Adventures of Philip Pendennis.....
The Virginians.....
London, and Love the Widower.....
Miscellaneous Writings. Household Edition. Uniform with the Novels. Complete in 5 vols. With new Portrait. Per vol.....
This edition includes all the matter in the latest English editions, with many additions, thus making it, with the novels, the cheapest and most complete Thackeray in the market. 1. Barry Lyndon, Hogarty Diamond, &c. 2. Paris, and Irish Sketch-Books, &c. 3. Snobs, Sketches, Denis Duval, &c. 4. Four Georges, Humors, &c. 5. Catherine, Christmas Books, and Unprinted Pieces.....
THAXTER'S (MRS. OELIA) Among the Isles of Shoals.....	1.50
THOREAU'S (H. D.) Walden; or, Life in the Woods.....	1.50
Excursions in Field and Forest. Portrait. The Maine Woods.....	2.50
Cape Cod.....	2.50
Letters.....	2.50
A Yankee in Canada.....	2.50
A Week on the Concord and Merrimack Rivers.....	5.00
TYLER (EDWARD B.) The Early History of Mankind.....	2.50
Primitive Culture. 2 vols.....	5.50
TYNDALL (JOHN). Faraday as a Discoverer.....	1.00
Fragments of Science for Unscientific People.....	2.50
Light and Electricity.....	1.50
Hours of Exercise in the Alps.....	2.50
Heat as a Mode of Motion.....	2.50
On Sound.....	2.50
Radiant Heat.....	5.00
Forms of Water.....	1.50
Lectures on Light.....	1.50
Proceedings at the Farewell Banquet to Prof. Tyndall.....	.50
Lessons in Electricity.....	1.50
Address before British Assoc'n at Belfast.....	.50
TYTLER (SARAH) Old Masters and their Pictures.....	1.50
Modern Painters and their Paintings.....	1.50
VOYSEY (REV. CHARLES). The Shing and the Stone. Vols. I and V, each.....	3.00
Vols III, IV, and VI, each.....	3.75
WARNER'S (CHARLES D.) My Summer in a Garden.....	1.00
Haunterings.....	1.50
Back-Log Studies.....	2.50
WEISS (JOHN). American Religion.....	1.50
Life of Theodore Parker. 2 vols.....	5.00
WHIFFLES (E. P.) Literature and Life.....	1.50
Essays and Reviews.....	3.50
Character and Characteristic Men.....	1.50
The Literature of the Age of Elizabeth.....	1.50
Success and its Conditions.....	1.50
Washington and the Revolution.....	.50
WHITNEY'S (MRS. A. D. T.) A Summer in Leslie Goldthwaite's Life.....	1.50
We Girls: A Home Story.....	1.50
Real Folks.....	1.50
The Other Girls.....	1.50
Fancies. A volume of Poems.....	1.50
WHITTIERS (JOHN G.) Poems. 2 vols.....	4.00
Child Life.....	1.50

ADDRESS:

THE INDEX,

231 Washington St., Boston.

$66 a week in your own town. Terms and $4 outfit free. Address H. HALLETT & Co., Portland, Maine.

$5 to $20 per day at home. Samples worth $5 free. Address STINSON & Co., Portland, Maine.

GOLD Any worker can make $12 a day at home. Costly outfit free. Address TRAU & Co. Augusta, Maine.

FOR SALE.—STEAMBOAT with or without Power. Length 26 ft. beam 7 ft. Apply to WILLIAM PHILLIPS, Grain Elevator, East Boston.

TO BOOK-BUYERS

Please examine the revised list of POPULAR BOOKS on the opposite side of this page. Any OBTAINABLE BOOK NOT IN THIS LIST will be furnished to order. Address THE INDEX, 231 Washington St., Boston.

E. A. SAW TELL E,
PIANO-FORTE TUNER.

Fifteen years' experience. Satisfaction warranted. Organs skillfully tuned and regulated. Orders left at THE INDEX office, or at Oliver Ditson & Co.'s, 451 Washington St., Boston.

THE INDEX
IN ENGLAND.

THE INDEX will be forwarded free by post to any part of the United Kingdom on receipt of an annual subscription of Fifteen Shillings. For Half Year, Eight Shillings. Remittances should be made by International P.O. Order payable to Francis Ellingwood Abbot.

Address THE INDEX, 231 Washington Street, Boston, U.S.A.

THE BEST PORTRAIT OF
THOMAS PAINE.

Engraved by the famous W. Sharpe from Romney's celebrated portrait—

Heliotype Copy

by James R. Osgood & Co., of Boston. This is a beautiful work of art, and by all odds the very best likeness of Thomas Paine to be found. It is 10x8 inches in size, and will be mailed post-paid on receipt of $1.00. Address THE INDEX, 231 Washington Street, Boston.

MARCH MAGAZINES
TO LOAN.

All the leading Literary and Scientific Magazines to loan to anybody. The reading of a dozen for the cost of one.

New Books and Standard Books, almost any you choose to ask for, and as many copies of any book as may be demanded.

Loaned to all parts of the United States. Immense catalogues of old and new books offered at great bargains for cash, or in exchange for other books.

AMERICAN BOOK EXCHANGE,
55 Beekman Street, New York.

Booksellers and Newsdealers act as our agents.

TO THE AMERICAN PATRONS OF
CHOICE LITERATURE.

We have made arrangements with Messrs. HAPMAN & HALL, London, England, for the right to publish an American Edition of

The Fortnightly Review,
Edited by JOHN MORLEY,

and are now publishing this celebrated Monthly Magazine, from a special duplicate set of stereotype plates, which are forwarded from England so promptly as to enable us to reduce each month, not only an exact facsimile of this able Review, but to publish it almost at the same time the original is from England. It is in every respect equal to the London issue, at about half the original price. This effort will place in the hands of American readers the freshest utterances of leading thinkers on the issues with a promptitude unequalled. The comments of a large number of the best European thinkers on Science, Philosophy, Literature, Politics, and Miscellaneous Matters of general interest cannot fail to be appreciated and encouraged by thoughtful American readers. The following are a few of the contributors:—

Matthew Arnold, Alfred R. Wallace,
Herbert Spencer, Frederick Harrison,
Goldwin Smith, Prof. Tyndall,
Right Hon. Lyon Playfair, Prof. Huxley,
Right Hon. W. E. Gladstone, Prof. Darwin,
Lionel A. Tallemache, Author of Supernatural Religion,
M. E. Grant Duff, M.P., Sir John Lubbock,
Hon. Robert Lowe, Anthony Trollope,
Leslie Stephen, T. Adolphus Trollope,
John Morley (the Editor), Sir H. B. Maine,
G. H. Lewes, Sir David Wedderburn,

AND NUMEROUS OTHERS.

Subscription Price, $5.00 per Year.

Published every month by the ROSE-BELFORD PUBLISHING CO., 80 York Street, Toronto, Ont.

GIRLS'—5 nice perforated mottoes for fancy work 16 cts. J. W. RUSSELL, Newton, Mass.

SENT FREE on application—BRIGGS & BROS.' Flower and Vegetable Catalogue. Our large crops available to BELL SEEDS LOW. ROCHESTER, N.Y., or CHICAGO, ILLS.

A CHEAP OFFER.

A COMPLETE SET of INDEX TRACTS, from No. 1 to 15 inclusive, will be mailed to any address on the prepayment of 80 CENTS.

Address THE INDEX, No. 231 Washington St., Boston, Mass.

WEST NEWTON

English and Classical School.

The twenty-fifth school year of this Family and Day School for both sexes will begin WEDNESDAY, Sept. 19, 1877. For Circular and information apply to NATH'L T. ALLEN, West Newton, Mass.

THE INDEX AS AN
ADVERTISING MEDIUM.

Testimony of one who has tried it.

FLORENCE, Iowa, Jan. 5, 1878.
... THE INDEX is the best advertising medium which I have tried. ...
E. C. WALKER.

PHOTOGRAPHS OF
COL. INGERSOLL!

Down to hard times prices. Cards, 15 cents each; 2 for 25 cents; 5 for 50 cents. Cabinet size, 25 cents each; 2 for 40 cents. Send stamp for club list of Free Thought and Scientific papers.
E. C. WALKER,
Lock-Box B, Florence, Iowa.

BOUND VOLUMES OF THE INDEX for

1 8 7 7,
Complete for the Past Year, are now ready for delivery at this Office. Sent by express at the purchaser's expense. Price $3.00, in advance. Address THE INDEX, 231 Washington Street, Boston.

THE THEOLOGICAL WORKS

—OF—

THOMAS PAINE.

Complete in one volume, and containing the "Age of Reason," the "Discourse to the Society of Theophilanthropists," the "Examination of Passages of the New Testament," the "Thoughts on a Future State," the "Reply to the Bishop of Llandaff," etc., etc. Price, $2.00. Sent by mail on receipt of price by THE INDEX, 231 Washington Street, Boston.

PENNSYLVANIA RAILROAD.

GREAT THROUGH LINE
AND UNITED STATES MAIL ROUTE.

The attention of the travelling public is respectfully invited to some of the merits of this great highway, in the confident assertion and belief that no other line can offer equal inducements as a route of through travel. In stands confessedly at the head of American railways. The track is double the entire length of the line, of steel rails laid on heavy oak ties, which are embedded in a foundation of rock ballast eighteen inches in depth. All bridges are of iron or stone, and built upon the most approved plans. Its passenger cars, while eminently safe and substantial, are at the same time models of comfort and elegance.

CONSTRUCTION AND EQUIPMENT

THE

PENNSYLVANIA RAILROAD

THE SAFETY APPLIANCES

in use on this line will illustrate the far-seeing and liberal policy of its management, in accordance with which the utility only of an improvement and not its cost has been the question of consideration. Among many may be noticed

The Block System of Safety Signals,
Jannet Coupler, Buffer, and Platform,
The Wharton Patent Switch, and the Westinghouse Air-Brake, forming in conjunction with a perfect double track and road-bed a combination of safeguards against accidents which have rendered them practically impossible

Pullman Palace Cars

are run on all Express Trains from New York, Philadelphia, Baltimore, and Washington, to Chicago, Cincinnati, Louisville, Indianapolis, and St. Louis.

WITHOUT CHANGE,

and to all the principal points in the far West and South with but one change of cars. Connections are made in Union Depots, and are assured to all important points.

The Scenery of the Pennsylvania Route is admitted to be unsurpassed in the world for grandeur, beauty, and variety. Superior refreshment facilities are provided. Employees are courteous and attentive, and it is an inevitable result that a trip by the Pennsylvania Railroad must form

A Pleasing and Memorable Experience.

Tickets for sale at the lowest rates at the Ticket Offices of the Company in all important cities and towns.

FRANK THOMSON, L. P. FARMER,
General Manager, General Passenger Agent.
C. S. HALDEMAN, New England Agent,
203 and 205 Washington St., Boston, Mass.

MISS DEVEREUX' BOARDING AND DAY SCHOOL FOR YOUNG LADIES AND CHILDREN, at Irvington-on-Hudson, will re-open on Monday, Sept. 17, 1877. Miss Devereux refers, among others, to the following gentlemen: Rev. Orville Dewey, Sheffield, Mass.; Mr. A. C. Richards, Irvington, N.Y.; Mr. H. R. Bishop, Irvington, N.Y.; Mr. John E. Williams, Pres. Met. Nat. Bank, N.Y.; Mr. Wm. H. Orton, Pres. W. U. Telegraph Co., N.Y.; Mr. Moses H. Grinnell, N.Y.

POSITIVISM!
AN EPITOME OF THE

Positive Philosophy and Religion,

Published by the Society of Humanity in the city of New York, contains the clearest statement of the subject ever made; also, Harriet Martineau's masterly defence of her religious convictions; and the Positive Classification of the Sciences, by T. B. Wakeman, etc., etc.

Send for it (enclosing 25 cents in postage stamps) to

HUGH BYRON BROWN,
President of the Society,
No. 141 8th St., N.Y. City.

LECTURES AND SERMONS.

BY

JOHN W. CHADWICK.

THIRD SERIES.

1. The Simplicity of True Religion.
2. The Rising Faith.
3. Fate and Freedom.
4. The Child Jesus.
5. The Angel Room.
6. Future Punishment.
7. The Sacred Scriptures.
The following numbers of the first and second series can also be supplied: Best Use of Sunday, Higher Reverence, Self-Respect, God on Our Side, Moon-my and Waste, Vices of Modern Science, Immortal Life, Moral Aspects of Belief in Immortality, Idealizing the Real, The Coming Man, A Rational Church.
Sent to any address, postage paid, at 6 cents per copy, by

JAMES MILLER,
719 Broadway, New York.

A NOTABLE TREATISE.

WOMAN SUFFRAGE.

THE COUNTERFEIT AND THE TRUE:

Reasons for Opposing Both.

BY

REAR-ADMIRAL MAXSE,

Of the British Royal Navy.

This is a little book of 74 pages, with neat paper covers, published in London, and presenting the reasons why a cultivated English gentleman is opposed to Woman Suffrage. It ought to be read and pondered by all who are interested in that question, on either side. Price, 25 cents. For sale at the office of THE INDEX, 231 Washington St., Boston.

GOOD PHOTOGRAPHS

OF

O. B. FROTHINGHAM,

T. W. HIGGINSON,

W. J. POTTER,

W. H. SPENCER,

F. W. NEWMAN,

CHAS. VOYSEY,

A. W. STEVENS,

R. H. RANNEY,

F. E. ABBOT,

Are now for sale at the office of THE INDEX, and will be mailed postpaid to any address on receipt of price. Single Photographs, 25 cents each; complete Set of Nine Photographs, $1.50.

Address, THE INDEX,
No. 231 Washington St., Boston, Mass.

FREE RELIGIOUS ASSOCIATION.

Send to Office at 231 Washington St., Boston, Mass., for

TRACTS.

I. TAXATION OF CHURCH PROPERTY, by James Parton. 5 cts.; ten, 50 cts.; one hundred, $1.50.

II. THE BIBLE AND SCIENCE, by John Weiss.

III. THE SYMPATHY OF RELIGIONS, by T. W. Higginson. Enlarged edition.

IV. TRANSCENDENTALISM, by Theodore Parker. Never before published.

V. THE PUBLIC SCHOOL QUESTION, as understood by a Catholic American citizen (Bishop McQuaid) and by a Liberal American citizen (F. E. Abbot). (Two Horticultural Hall Lectures, Feb. 12 and 20, 1876.)

VI. HOW SHALL WE KEEP SUNDAY? An Answer in Four Parts: 1. Sunday in the Bible. 2. Sunday in Church History. 3. Sunday in the Massachusetts Laws. 4. The Workingman's Sunday. By Charles E. Whipple, Minot J. Savage, Charles E. Pratt, and Wm. C. Gannett.

Nos. II., III., IV., V., VI., 10 cts. each; ten for 60 cts.; one hundred, $5.

REASON AND REVELATION, by W. J. Potter. 5 cts. (Ten for 50 cts.; one hundred, $1.50.)

PROCEEDINGS OF THE F. R. A. ANNUAL MEETINGS for 1872, '73, '74, '75, '76, and '77, Five cents each.

FREEDOM AND FELLOWSHIP IN RELIGION, a volume of essays and addresses representing the F. R. A. platform. $1.50.

SEND ONE DOLLAR

For a handsome Certificate of Membership as an

ANNUAL MEMBER

of the NATIONAL LIBERAL LEAGUE.

For TWENTY-FIVE DOLLARS, a still larger Certificate of Membership as a

LIFE MEMBER,

Will be sent to any person; and individuals cannot render more efficient assistance to the National Liberal League than by making themselves Annual or Life Members of it.

The following extracts from the Constitution of the National Liberal League explain the privileges of membership:—

ARTICLE IV.—Any person who shall pay one dollar into the treasury shall be entitled to a certificate, signed by the President and Secretary, as an annual member of the National Liberal League. Any person who shall pay twenty-five dollars or more into the treasury shall be entitled to a similar certificate as a life-member. All the persons present as members at the Centennial Congress of Liberals, at which this Constitution was adopted, are hereby declared permanent or charter-members of the National Liberal League.

ARTICLE V.—... All charter-members and life-members of the National Liberal League, and all duly accredited delegates from local auxiliary Liberal Leagues organized in accordance with the provisions of this Constitution, shall be entitled to seats and votes in the Annual Congress. Annual members of the National Liberal League shall be entitled to seats, but not to votes, in the Annual Congress.

Address NATIONAL LIBERAL LEAGUE,
231 Washington Street, Boston.

ORGANIZE!
CHARTERS

For Local Auxiliary Liberal Leagues, conferring the privilege of representation by five delegates in the Annual Congress of the National Liberal League, will be promptly sent on application, according to the following provisions of Constitution of the same:—

LOCAL AUXILIARY LIBERAL LEAGUES.

ARTICLE XIII.—The Board of Directors shall have authority, as often as they receive a written application signed by ten or more persons and accompanied by ten dollars, to issue a charter for the formation of a local auxiliary Liberal League.

ARTICLE XV.—Local auxiliary Liberal Leagues organized under charters issued by the Board of Directors shall be absolutely independent in the administration of their own local affairs. The effect of their charters shall be simply to unite them in cordial fellowship and efficient cooperation of the freest kind with the National Liberal League and with other local Leagues. All votes of the Annual Congress, and all communications of the Board of Directors, shall possess no more authority or influence over them than lies in the intrinsic wisdom of the words themselves.

ARTICLE XVI.—Every local auxiliary Liberal League organized in accordance with the provisions of this Constitution shall be entitled to send its President and Secretary and three other members as delegates to the Annual Congress.

These Charters are beautifully printed on the best of paper. Adorned with the handsome Seal of the National Liberal League, they will, if tastefully framed, make a fine ornament for any hall.

Address NATIONAL LIBERAL LEAGUE
231 Washington Street, Boston.

CIRCULATE IT

EVERYWHERE!

The new Liberal League Tract of 24 pages, entitled,

"PATRIOTIC ADDRESS,"

contains:

1. PATRIOTIC ADDRESS of the National Liberal League to the people of the United States.
2. CHIEF RESOLUTIONS of the League.
3. PROTEST of the League against shutting the International Exhibition on Sundays.
4. CONSTITUTION and List of Officers.
5. EXTRACTS from Approving Letters by Distinguished Citizens.
This is the Liberal's best CAMPAIGN DOCUMENT in the great impending contest over amending the Constitution of the United States with reference to the school question. It should be in the hands of EVERY VOTER, and has been published expressly for gratuitous distribution by earnest friends of State Secularization.

Local Liberal Leagues

Cannot do better than to order this Tract by the quantity, as an excellent auxiliary in their local agitation.

INDIVIDUAL LIBERALS

Cannot do better than to use them privately, as opportunity offers.

Promptly mailed, at the bare cost of paper, press-work, and postage, on the following terms:—

TEN COPIES, 15
TWENTY-FIVE COPIES, 40
FIFTY " 75
ONE HUNDRED " 1.50
TWO HUNDRED " 2.50
THREE HUNDRED " 3.50
FIVE HUNDRED " 6.00
ONE THOUSAND " 12.00

N.B.—Packages of over 100 copies will be sent by express at the expense of the purchaser, without any charge for postage.

Address NATIONAL LIBERAL LEAGUE
231 Washington Street, Boston.

The Index.

Three Dollars a Year.

LIBERTY AND LIGHT.

Single Copies Seven Cents.

VOLUME 9.

BOSTON, MASS., THURSDAY, MARCH 14, 1878.

WHOLE NO. 429.

NATIONAL LIBERAL LEAGUE.

PLATFORM

For the Presidential Election of 1880,

ADOPTED AT ROCHESTER, N.Y., OCT. 26, 1877.

1. TOTAL SEPARATION OF CHURCH AND STATE, to be guaranteed by amendment of the United States Constitution: including the equitable taxation of church property, secularization of the public schools, abrogation of Sabbatarian laws, abolition of chaplaincies, prohibition of public appropriations for religious purposes, and all other measures necessary to the same general end.

2. NATIONAL PROTECTION FOR NATIONAL CITIZENS, in their equal civil, political, and religious rights: to be guaranteed by amendment of the United States Constitution, and afforded through the United States courts.

3. UNIVERSAL EDUCATION THE BASIS OF UNIVERSAL SUFFRAGE IN THIS SECULAR REPUBLIC: to be guaranteed by amendment of the United States Constitution, requiring every State to maintain a thoroughly secularized public school system, and to permit no child within its limits to grow up without a good elementary education.

N. B.—The nomination of candidates upon the above platform was postponed to a future Congress of the National Liberal League.

THE DEMANDS OF LIBERALISM.

1. We demand that churches and other ecclesiastical property shall no longer be exempt from just taxation.

2. We demand that the employment of chaplains in Congress, in State Legislatures, in the navy and militia, and in prisons, asylums, and all other institutions supported by public money, shall be discontinued.

3. We demand that all public appropriations for educational and charitable institutions of a sectarian character shall cease.

4. We demand that all religious services now sustained by the government shall be abolished; and especially that the use of the Bible in the public schools, whether ostensibly as a text-book or avowedly as a book of religious worship, shall be prohibited.

5. We demand that the appointment, by the President of the United States or by the Governors of the various States, of all religious festivals and fairs shall wholly cease.

6. We demand that the judicial oath in the courts and in all other departments of the government shall be abolished, and that simple affirmation under the pains and penalties of perjury shall be established in its stead.

7. We demand that all laws directly or indirectly enforcing the observance of Sunday as the Sabbath shall be repealed.

8. We demand that all laws looking to the enforcement of "Christian" morality shall be abrogated, and that all laws shall be conformed to the requirements of natural morality, equal rights, and impartial liberty.

9. We demand that not only in the Constitutions of the United States and of the several States, but also in the practical administration of the same, no privilege or advantage shall be conceded to Christianity or any other special religion; that our entire political system shall be founded and administered on a purely secular basis; and that whatever changes shall prove necessary to this end shall be consistently, unflinchingly, and promptly made.

The above is the platform of THE INDEX, so far as the editor is individually concerned. But no other person, and no organization, can be justly or truthfully held responsible for it without his or its explicit approval.

FRANCIS E. ABBOT.

RESOLUTION

ADOPTED BY THE NATIONAL LIBERAL LEAGUE, AT PHILADELPHIA, JULY 8, 1876.

Resolved, That we accept the offer of the Boston INDEX to be our official organ of communication with the public, for the publication of announcements, acknowledgments, and other official papers of the Board of Directors; but that we assume no responsibility for anything else published in its columns and claim no control or influence in its general editorial management.

GLIMPSES.

ANOTHER NEW auxiliary Liberal League has been organized at Wausau, Wisconsin. President, Mr. R. P. Munson; Secretary, Mr. V. A. Alderson; Treasurer, Mr. H. J. Lohmar; Councillors, Messrs. A. C. Clark, D. L. Plumer, W. J. Scriver, P. Berg. The roll of members includes eighty names.

COLONEL INGERSOLL has just given two of his sparkling lectures in Boston. But this short lecture of his outsparks the others: "Colonel Ingersoll was asked how he liked New England. He said there were four New England products that he liked, and four he didn't. He liked Longfellow, Whitier, Emerson, and the elms. He despised her rocks, religion, Joseph Cook, and catarrh."

THE RUPTURE among the Free Masons on account of their dogmatic theism has become irreconcilable. The Grand Lodge of Free Masons of England, Lord Carnarvon presiding, unanimously passed a resolution refusing to recognize as a Free Mason any person initiated in a lodge where the belief in God is denied or ignored. This refers to the action of the Grand Orient of France, which recently eliminated an article expressing belief in God from its ritual.

THE FIRST Liberal League of Boston held its fifth annual meeting in this city on March 5. The following officers were elected for the ensuing year: President, Rev. M. J. Savage; Vice-Presidents, Hon. Elizur Wright, Hon. Samuel E. Sewall, Rev. J. L. Dudley, D.D., Mr. Horace Seaver, Dr. M. E. Zakrzewska, Dr. Mary J. Safford Blake, Mrs. Theodore Parker, Miss Matilda Goddard, Mrs. J. W. Smith; Secretary, Miss J. P. Titcomb; Treasurer, Mr. Wm. H. Hamlen; Councillors, Messrs. J. L. Stoddard, Harry Wheeler, and F. E. Abbot, and Mrs. A. M. Mosher.

It is a very significant straw, this eagerness to get into every official formula a recognition that the State is "Christian." Says the Boston Daily Advertiser: "The Hon. Robert C. Winthrop, president of the Latin School Association, recommends the following as an inscription to be placed over the entrance of the new Latin schoolhouse on Warren Avenue: 'Sic ingredere, ut te ipso quotidiè doctior; sic egredere, ut in dies patrie Christianæque reipublicæ utilior evadas. Ita demum Gymnasium a te feliciter ornatum existimabitur.' The above is hereby translated, as follows, by Mr. Winthrop: 'So enter here that you daily may add something to your own learning; so go forth that you may be more and more useful to your Christian Commonwealth and country. Thus, at last, you shall be esteemed as having been happily an ornament to this school.'"

SAYS THE New York Tribune: "Under the title of offences against morality and decency, the Maine Legislature reenacted some years ago this statute: 'Whoever blasphemes the holy name of God by denying, cursing, or continually reproaching God, his creation, government, final judgment of the world, Jesus Christ, the Holy Ghost, or the Holy Scriptures as contained in the canonical books of the Old or New Testament, or by exposing them to contempt and ridicule, shall be punished by imprisonment, not more than two years, or by fine not exceeding $200.' The Democratic papers are now quoting the statute for the information of Colonel Ingersoll, who is to deliver lectures in Portland and elsewhere." These "dead letter laws" are like the claws of a sleeping tiger. They are quite harmless while the tiger sleeps; but tigers wake at last, and then—look out for the claws!

THE ITHACA Liberal League recently listened to an essay on the school question by Mr. H. B. Morris, who opposed total secularization as "extreme." Professor Johannot, in a criticism of this essay in the Ithaca of February 22, had this admirable sentence: "The essayist asks 'if it would not be better for the League not to announce a programme which is certain to summon the quiet, resolute, and efficient enmity of the vast numbers who would not deny that some moderate action may be needed to deal out perfect justice and fairness.' Answering for the Secularists and not for the League, I reply that this perfect justice is all that they demand; and if making this demand leads to a combined action against them, it will be because bigotry is a more potent force in society than the spirit of the Sermon on the Mount. If, seeking truth and asking justice, we do array majorities against us, we will wait in patience, knowing that the stars in their courses fight our battles for us."

WOULD THAT CONGRESS had the sense to do what the Cincinnati Commercial suggests in this paragraph! "We cannot say the art of the new silver dollar 'makes us feel to rejoice.' The eagle, we understand, was drawn by an Englishman. We should think so, too, from appearances. It doesn't seem to resemble the bird of our country. In fact, we are afraid the thing is a British grouse. There is also an absurd prominence given the 'In God We Trust,' which is a new thing in our coinage. The words should be 'One hundred cents.' We have opposed additional silver legislation, but we would be glad to see Congress quietly order the mint to reproduce the Washington silver dollar without any 'improvement,' with the words on the edge, 'One hundred cents—one dollar or unit.' The old coins were far superior in design and finish to the new ones. We should think Congress might order the precise reproduction of the old dollar, except as to the amount of alloy used, and the date, without much fuss or delay. It is so obviously the right thing to do that it shouldn't be hard to do." But notice how the Commercial gives every reason but the right one for dropping that "In God We Trust." How shy everybody is of demanding boldly the faithful application of the secular principle! Absurdity, taste, artistic finish—everything but honest defence of that great principle! Is there no keenness of intellectual vision, or is there no moral courage? If the separation of Church and State in this country has no protection but mere taste, with its countless and whimsical diversities, will sensible liberals still hold that "there is no danger"?

THE PHILADELPHIA Christian Statesman of February 28 contained the following paragraph: "One of the most useful organizations in the country at the present day is the American Railway Literary Union. It has secured the active coöperation of the managers of twenty-five thousand miles of American railways in a combined effort to exclude all immoral literature from their trains. It is known to careful observers that a large proportion of the immoral publications which are prohibited by statute from transmission through the mails has heretofore been disposed of on railway trains. The Union requests all persons who observe any immoral publications offered for sale in any railroad stations or cars, to communicate specific information to the Rev. Yates Hickey, 328 Walnut Street, Philadelphia. In most cases, the Union knows at once what officer to inform to have such abuses summarily corrected. This is an acquaintance and an influence which has been gained by long years of persistent and well-directed effort, and the Christian public should be prompt to avail themselves of it." The true character of this organization, which aims to suppress both obscene and free-thought literature under the head "immoral," was fully exposed in THE INDEX of December 3, 1874, with direct and overwhelming evidence of it. Whoever publishes a single indecent word or prurient sentence in any liberal publication plays directly into the hands of these crafty plotters against a free press, and renders himself an accomplice in their conspiracy against it. Liberalism can make no headway against Christian superstition except by proving itself practically its moral superior.

NATIONAL LIBERAL LEAGUE.

OFFICERS.

President.	FRANCIS E. ABBOT, Boston, Mass.
Vice-President.	W. H. HURLBUT, New York, N.Y.
Secretary.	W. H. HURLBUT, New York, N.Y.
Assistant Secretary.	W. H. HURLBUT, New York, N.Y.
Treasurer.	W. H. HURLBUT, New York, N.Y.
Board of Directors.	W. H. HURLBUT, New York, N.Y.
Executive Committee.	W. H. HURLBUT, New York, N.Y.
Finance Committee.	W. H. HURLBUT, New York, N.Y.

LOCAL AUXILIARY LIBERAL LEAGUES

To which Charters have been issued by the National Liberal League.

ALABAMA.	J. H. HALLEY, Selma.
ARIZONA.	JOHN ABRENS, Monticello.
CALIFORNIA.	J. L. HATON, San Francisco.
CONNECTICUT.	DAVID T. BATES, Groton.
DELAWARE.	GEORGE W. BALDWIN, Bridgeport.
FLORIDA.	JOSEPH D. GOBLT, Greenville.
GEORGIA.	T. D. GIDDINGS, Enterprise.
ILLINOIS.	DR. A. A. BELL, Madison.
INDIANA.	DR. A. G. HUMPHREY, Galesburg.
IOWA.	L. C. UNDERWOOD, Indianapolis.
KANSAS.	J. C. MICHELER, Adel.
KENTUCKY.	JOHN F. BARNWELL, Fort Scott.
LOUISIANA.	S. B. CLARK, Wilcoxville.
MAINE.	EMERSON BENTLEY, New Orleans.
MARYLAND.	DR. W. H. BROWN, Bangor.
MASSACHUSETTS.	W. H. BAYWARD, Boston.
MICHIGAN.	KARL SCHMIDT, Detroit.
MINNESOTA.	J. B. BASSETT, Minneapolis.
MISSOURI.	E. F. FETTER, St. Louis.
MONTANA.	W. BILLINGSLEY, Lincoln.
NEBRASKA.	V. G. BARRETT, White Rock.
NEW HAMPSHIRE.	WILLIAM LITTLE, Manchester.
NEW YORK.	H. L. GREEN (chairman), Salamanca.
NORTH CAROLINA.	H. L. GREEN, Warren.
OHIO.	E. D. STARK, Cleveland.
OREGON.	SAMUEL COLT, Humboldt Basin.
PENNSYLVANIA.	G. W. BALDWIN, Lancaster.
RHODE ISLAND.	GEORGE LEWIS, Providence.
SOUTH CAROLINA.	F. W. FULLER, Columbia.
TENNESSEE.	DR. E. H. PRICE, Chattanooga.
TEXAS.	DR. A. DUNBAR, Greenville.
VERMONT.	B. L. HAUGHTON, North Bennington.
VIRGINIA.	L. SPAULDING, Norfolk.
WEST VIRGINIA.	DR. A. M. DENT, Weston.
WISCONSIN.	ROBERT C. SPENCER, Milwaukee.
WYOMING.	D. F. WILCOX, Laramie.

TITUSVILLE, FLORIDA.	President, William Barnard; Secretary, M. Hayes.
NEW YORK, N.Y.	President, Dr. Levi R. Peirson; Secretary, Dr. O. Baker.
NEW YORK, N.Y.	President, A. D. Armstrong; Secretary, James S. Miller; Treasurer, W. B. Norris; R. H. Armstrong; J. S. Jones; E. M. Brown; G. L. Harceron; Philip Swann.
CATARAUGUS COUNTY, NEW YORK.	President, H. L. Green; Corresponding Secretary, John Hammond.
NEW HAVEN, CONNECTICUT.	President, W. W. Stewart; Secretary, T. F. Hamilton; Treasurer, W. F. Morrison; E. R. Whiting; E. E. Seaman; A. C. Harrison; R. F. P. Sheppard; and others.
ST. JOSEPH, MISSOURI.	President, P. V. Wise; Secretary, H. Bruning.
NEW YORK, N.Y.	President, Hugh B. Brown; Secretary, A. L. Rawson.
NEW YORK, N.Y.	President, Henry Evans; Secretary, Hugh B. Brown; Treasurer, D. S. Plumb; O. E. Browning; Mrs. Eliza Irving; Miss E. W. McAdams; Mrs. O. E. Langerfeld, on behalf of the Society of Humanity.
ROCHESTER, NEW YORK.	President, Mrs. Amy Post; Secretary, Willet E. Post.
TOMPKINS COUNTY, NEW YORK.	President, Dr. John Winslow; Secretary, Myron K. Bishop.
NEW YORK, N.Y.	President, A. L. Rawson; Secretary, Porter C. Bliss.
CLEVELAND, OHIO.	President, E. D. Stark; Secretary, Mrs. M. B. Ambler.
MILWAUKEE, WISCONSIN.	President, Robert C. Spencer; Secretary, William A. Boyd.
JEFFERSON LIBERAL LEAGUE, ROCHESTER, NEW YORK.	President, Moses Hays; Secretaries, Fred. Hebard and J. B. Pike.
MINNEAPOLIS, MINNESOTA.	President, S. C. Gale; Secretary, Frank J. Mead.
FLORENCE, IOWA.	President, Byron McQuinn; Secretary, E. C. Walker.
WEST MERIDEN, CONNECTICUT.	President, N. F. Griswold; Secretary, Miss Emily J. Leonard.
ALBANY, NEW YORK.	President, Thomas J. Hennessey; Secretary, Thomas Dugan.
BAY CITY, MICHIGAN.	President, S. M. Green; Secretary, N. H. Webster.
CAMPBELL HILL, ILLINOIS.	President, Horace Newell, M.D.; Secretary, A. B. Swartscoope.
WAUSAU, WISCONSIN.	President, E. P. Munson; Secretary, V. A. Alderson.

RELIGIOUS FREEDOM AMENDMENT:

PROPOSED AS A SUBSTITUTE FOR THE FIRST AMENDMENT TO THE U. S. CONSTITUTION.

SECTION 1.	Neither Congress nor any State shall make any law respecting an establishment of religion, or favoring any particular form of religion, or prohibiting the free exercise thereof; or permitting in any degree a union of Church and State, or granting any special privilege, immunity, or advantage to any sect or religious body, or to any number of sects or religious bodies; or taxing the people of any State, either directly or indirectly, for the support of any sect or religious body, or of any number of sects or religious bodies; or abridging the freedom of speech or of the press, or the right of the people peaceably to assemble and to petition the Government for a redress of grievances.
SECTION 2.	No religious test shall ever be required as a condition of suffrage, or as a qualification for any office or public trust, in any State. No person shall ever be deprived of any of his or her rights, privileges or capacities, or disqualified for the performance of any public or private duty, or rendered incompetent to give evidence in any court of law or equity, in consequence of any opinions he or she may hold on the subject of religion. No person shall ever be required by law to contribute directly or indirectly to the support of any religious society or body of which he or she is not a voluntary member.
SECTION 3.	Neither the United States, nor any State, Territory, municipality, or any civil division of any State or Territory, shall levy any tax, or make any gift, grant, or appropriation, for the support, or in aid, of any church, religious sect, or denomination, or any school, seminary, or institution of learning, in which the faith or doctrines of any religious order or sect shall be taught or inculcated, or in which religious rites shall be observed; or for the support, or in aid, of any religious charity or purpose of any sect, order, or denomination whatsoever.
SECTION 4.	Congress shall have power to enforce the various provisions of this Article by appropriate legislation.

The Assaults of Christianity.

CONCLUDING PORTION OF THE OPENING LECTURE IN THE TENTH COURSE OF "SUNDAY AFTERNOON LECTURES" IN HORTICULTURAL HALL, BOSTON, JANUARY 6, 1878.

BY R. B. BROTHINGHAM.

The science of comparative religion has invalidated the claim of Christianity to be a solitary, exclusive, and preëminent revelation. The new methods of criticism have reduced the Bible to the level of human literature, and effectually destroyed its authority over the human reason. The studies in race and language have removed the prejudices in favor of sacred tongues and chosen peoples. The rational researches into history have exploded the fiction of a providential Church. The discoveries in natural science have banished the superstitions that were born of the dark, have resolved mysteries and marvels into ignorance, and started a wide-spread unbelief in dogmas that had been held for centuries. Theology with its insoluble problems yields to philosophy, which deals with the principles of reason. Catholic Christendom is fast becoming the peculiarity of the lower classes, who are credulous, and of the upper classes, who are sentimental. Protestant Christendom is pulverized into sects. With us there is no State Church. The press is free. Discussion is free. There is no barrier to the profession of opinions. No disability or opprobrium attaches to unorthodox beliefs. The attempts made here and there to persecute or intimidate are the feeblest possible imitation of the stake and gibbet of the olden time, and would cease at any rate in the civilized portions of the continent, were the friends of liberty to present a bold front, or manfully rally to crush the foe. Theological hate has not disappeared, but it is disappearing from extensive surfaces of society, and, where thought is alive, is greatly mitigated. There is at present scarcely more than enough of it to relieve the world of religious opinion from stagnation.

In this condition of things, active hostility to Christianity is suspended. Many (earnest friends, too,) of soul freedom think that the time for it has gone by,—that the armor can be put off, and the weapons laid down. They look on the works of Voltaire and Paine as visitors to the Tower of London look at the strange implements of olden warfare, the long lances, the clumsy match-locks, the queer culverines, the heavy hauberks and corselets,—very potent once, but quite useless now. The days of bloody battle are, in their judgment, ended; and full reliance may be placed on science, literature, and the arts of peace to remove or decorate the ruins.

All, however, cannot take this easy view.

There are some—open eyed, discerning, watchful, eager of soul—who are profoundly impressed with the belief that the old system is taking advantage of the quiet confidence that prevails in the beleaguers' camp, to rebuild the walls, restock the arsenals, collect and organize the forces, and prepare, not only for a vigorous resistance to attack, but for a renewed offensive campaign. They are jealous of the spread of the Young Men's Christian Associations, which are centres of activity in the chief towns and villages of the country. They look with eyes of suspicion on the movements of the Evangelical Alliance, and the plans for Christian union which, under pretext of simplifying Christianity and promoting spiritual fellowship, are closing up the lines of orthodoxy, and creating a solid phalanx for the more successful prosecution of hostilities against rationalism. They watch the movements of the ruffians in the West, and the sneaks in the East, who in the name of Christianity bully and wheedle men out of their liberty. They see the old claim to special authority and privilege coming up again, in the demand that churches shall not be taxed, that the State shall aid sectarian charities, that a recognition of Christ shall be made in the Constitution of the United States.

In THE INDEX of January 6, 1872, appeared an open "Impeachment of Christianity," which proved to be the summons to a new crusade against the ancient foe. The editor, Francis Ellingwood Abbot, flung down the gauntlet with a force that rung. The allegations were five in number; and they were made in the name of human nature, and before the bar of mankind. The challenger says:—

- "1. I impeach Christianity in the name of human intelligence."
- "2. I impeach Christianity in the name of human virtue."
- "3. I impeach Christianity in the name of the human heart."
- "4. I impeach Christianity in the name of human freedom."
- "5. I impeach Christianity in the name of humanitarian religion."

The challenger meant active and energetic war. His thought was keen, his language was clear. He knew the force of his words; and, from the hour he spoke them, he devoted himself to their vindication. The spirit of the attack is essentially the same as before. It is the spirit of intelligence and freedom, roused to earnest zeal against credulity and limitation. The spirit is the same; the object of assault is the same; but the method is new. Mr. Abbot is neither a Paine nor a Voltaire, neither a Porphyry nor a Celsus. He undertakes no detailed criticism of Bible or creed. He leaves to history the easy task of disproving the claims of the Church, and to science the trifling achievement of demolishing the dogma. He is quite willing that people shall believe what they may or can, provided they will not impose their beliefs on others. With such liberty as is enjoyed in America, both Voltaire and Paine would probably have been content. The new conscience is more sensitive than the old. The real princess feels the pea through the twenty mattresses and feather beds, and cannot sleep.

Abbot touches the soul of the system; Paine and Voltaire smote its body. They attacked the Church and creed of their day, the institutions as practised, the dogmas as received; he goes behind all this, to the genius of the faith, and shows how from the beginning it has been exclusive, dictatorial, overbearing, inhuman.

Voltaire vindicated Jesus from the charges brought against his followers. Abbot traces Christianity directly to the Christ; he finds nothing in the fruit that was not implied and involved in the seed. Christianity in his view is no corruption, but a logical development. The Church merely organizes and applies the principles announced in the New Testament.

Celsus touched the soul of the faith, but he touched it intellectually, as a philosopher; Abbot touches it humanly, as a man. Celsus took up arms in defence of an aristocracy of culture; Abbot takes up arms in defence of human rights. Voltaire allowed many an abuse to stand unchallenged; Abbot is sensitive to the least infringement of rational liberty. Paine stirred up the passions of the common-sense crowd; Abbot appeals to the best reason of thoughtful men. Paine at times seemed capable of being a demagogue; Abbot is always content to be a democrat.

A remarkable difference of temper accompanies this difference of method. Celsus was haughty and derisive; Voltaire was bitter, angry, and sarcastic; Paine was coarse and vituperative; Abbot is calm and earnest,—with more breadth of vision, consequently with more steadiness of determination. He is not captious; he never wrangles; he wastes no words on incidental points. Questions of biblical criticism, of dogmatic controversy, of theological definition, do not interest him. The dividing lines between the sects of Protestantism are in his view of trifling significance. The controversies as between Unitarian and Trinitarian, Calvinists and Universalists, touch on surface matters. The distinction between Unitarians of the old school and of the new is a distinction without a considerable difference. Even the gulf between Protestantism and Romanism may be regarded as rather apparent than real. Christianity, according to Mr. Abbot, culminated in Romanism, and has been declining from the period of the Reformation, and earlier. Each departure from the Orthodox creed is a new step in degeneracy. Liberal Christianity—a contradiction in terms—announces itself by its very name as a Christianity that is losing the Christ,—is becoming diluted and attenuated. In Liberal Unitarianism, the faith disappears; the name of Christianity alone remains.

But, as long as ever the name remains, the genius of limitation, dogmatism, arrogance, intellectual oppression, and moral tyranny exists, and are perceptibly felt. The new assailant, therefore, classes all Christians together, and, admitting their honesty, dropping candidly the old accusation of hypocrisy and indifference, taking the religion literally and the professors of it at their word, he charges upon all alike a disposition to overbear human nature. Christianity is despotism; wherever found, by whatever term defined, it is the enemy of the human mind, the foe of republican institutions, the chief barrier to rational civilization. Its worship of the Bible, its allegiance to the Christ, its claim to providential direction and succor, its pretensions to superhuman authority and miraculous destiny, rank it with the agencies that fetter thought and impede the progress of mankind. Foremost and primarily it is the foe of freedom; and, as freedom is the condition of growth, its overthrow is essential to the emancipation of man.

In the name of democratic liberty, therefore, this latter-day champion calls the friends of man to a new and final assault,—not on the Christian theology, not on the rites and mysteries as such, not on the Church of any particular time or place, not on any local or temporary enormities; but on the dogmatic system, the parent of all enormities, which in obedience to its own first principle imposes restrictions on human nature as far as it can or dares—restrictions such as in France awakened the wrath of Voltaire, such as in England embarrass the movements of men of science, such as in America hamper public education, pervert law, twist usage, confirm prejudice, and maintain intolerance.

Should Christianity succeed in making head in America, the genius of American institutions must, in Mr. Abbot's view, be fatally compromised; and to prevent its thus succeeding is the object of an opposition as determined as was ever organized, more radical than Voltaire contemplated, and more earnest than Celsus proposed.

In the judgment of this lecturer, Mr. Abbot's conception of the Christian system is substantially just. His criticism is warranted by history. His definitions are correct in the light of fair interpretation. Whether or no his apprehensions of the future are wise will be a matter of opinion. That it can be a matter of opinion among earnest men would seem to indicate some vagueness in the points. But, be our opinion one or another on this point, it cannot be doubted that they who entertain the fear are excusable for any degree of indignation, and are worthy of praise for any degree of enthusiasm, zeal, and consecration. If it be true that Christianity is in essence hostile to the natural intelligence and will of man (and that it is thus hostile more than suspected by its assailants of other ages), it surely ought to be assailed as an enemy of the human race by all that believe man to be the arbiter of his earthly destiny. There can be no option here. The interests of reason are paramount. The primacy of mind must not be questioned. They who regard the cause of Christianity as identical with that of reason cannot do otherwise than defend Christianity to the last man and the last gasp. Not to do so would be dishonor. They who hold that the cause of reason is not put in jeopardy or embarrassed by Christianity; that Christianity, though essentially unreasonable, is at this stage of knowledge and experience too weak, too much divided, too far attenuated to be feared by the mature intellect, are right in pursuing the quiet ways of culture, leaving the outworn system to fall away of itself. But they who believe that Christianity is opposed to reason, and is still strong enough to check its progress and thwart its aim, must agitate, speak, write, prophesy, edit papers, organize Leagues, leave no means untried to destroy its influence. It is not for them to celebrate its past achievements, to detail its services, to magnify its glories, to exalt its beauties. This properly falls to the duty of its champions. The assailant picks at the assailable points, marks the defective places in the line of wall, directs his aim at the arsenals that are its strength and the towers that are its pride, and does not hesitate to demolish its beauties if he can humble its renown. All we ask of him is fidelity to the laws of war. He must not be a sneak; he must not employ spies or dissemble with "quaker guns." The issue is too grave for sarcasm or dissembling. Candor, honor, sincerity, an indomitable love of truth, an invincible enthusiasm for humanity, are the qualities to be enlisted for this warfare. That these qualities are enlisted now; that ridicule, scorn, vituperation, vulgar abuse, ignorant pretentiousness have been outgrown with the methods of by-gone days is the sure sign that the assault has reached the highest dignity and has the best omen of success. When the dogmatic spirit shall be cast out; when the exclusive claims to authority and supremacy shall be disallowed and disavowed; when aspiration, spirituality, equity, kindness, human love, shall alone remain as the animating principles of the Christian faith; when the champions of the Church shall strike hands with the friends of reason,—then, but not till then, will the assailants drop their weapons.

[FOR THE INDEX.]

THE ETHICS AND THE ECONOMY OF REMONETIZATION.

BY GEN. A. J. WARNER.

But for the immense importance of the silver issue, I should not propose further criticism upon the views of "F. S. C." and others as expressed in THE INDEX. I trust, however, the interests at stake, the moral principles involved, and the apparent inclinations of the editor will justify some further discussion of the question.

The value of money depends, not upon what it is made of, nor alone on the cost of making or producing it, but upon quantity as compared with use. This is the most important principle in monetary science. When, however, the precious metals are declared to be money, or money metals, and there left, the quantity, and consequently the value, is naturally limited and regulated. To the extent, then, cost of producing the precious metals affects quantity, to that extent it affects value and no farther.

Any other cause that affects quantity likewise affects value. Hence, if we accept the estimate of Ernest Seyd, that there is in the world weight enough of the two metals to make say, $8,000,000,000 with the ratio of sixteen to one, then the value of this $8,000,000,000 is determined by the proportion between this quantity of money and the total quantity of commodities and transactions. Now suppose one-half of this sum of $8,000,000,000, the silver part, to be demonetized—removed from the coinage of the world—leaving but $4,000,000,000 as the total volume. The quantity of commodities remaining unchanged, the proportion between the volume of money and the quantity of commodities and trade of the world would be changed one-half. That is, the four thousand million would have the full value the eight thousand had; and, of course, the value of each single unit would be changed in the same proportion. In fact, for reasons I cannot give here, the ratio of increase in the value of money would be much greater, for a time at least, than the decrease of volume.

We see, then, that to lessen the quantity of money increases its value without reference to cost of producing the precious metals. In like manner to add to the volume of money by the issue of inconvertible paper, to the extent such paper takes the place of and supplements coin, to that extent it increases the volume of actual money, and lessens the value of the whole, and of each unit of the whole; and this, too, without reference to any principle of labor-cost. Consequently, as price is the value of commodities expressed in money, price may be changed by increasing or decreasing the volume of money without reference to labor-cost; just as the number of yards in a piece of cloth will vary with any variation in the length of the stick called a yard measure. Make the yard-stick forty inches, and the number of yards will be less. Make it thirty inches, and the number of yards will be more; so, with a world-currency of $8,000,000,000, prices will be one thing; with a world-currency of $4,000,000,000 [commodities remaining the same], prices will be a very different thing.

Of course, the rate at which commodities will exchange among themselves, one thing with another, does not vary. But we are dealing with price. Two bushels of wheat would have the value of four bushels of corn whether wheat was $1 a bushel, and corn 50 cents, or corn $1 and wheat $2; but price, nevertheless, and therefore debt-paying, would, in the one case, be double what it would in the other.

These principles I believe to be correct, and in accordance with established conclusions of economic science; and hence "F. S. C." is not yet altogether right when he says: "I meant that the average price depends on the average cost." It is true that "the exchangeable value of merchandise (commodity with commodity) is regulated by its labor-cost"; but price has reference always to a given relation between the measure, money, and the things to be measured.

With a fixed ratio between quantity of money and the commodities and transactions it is used to represent, then "F. S. C.'s" proposition, that price depends on the average cost of production, would be true; but with every change in the relation of money to commodities, prices change. In other words, every arbitrary alteration in volume of money affects prices, regardless of cost of production. Aye, and here is the root of untold evil!

But first let me quote from John Locke to show that the principles above stated are as old as the science of political economy. Locke says: "For the value of money in general is the quantity of all the money in the world in proportion to all the trade. But the value of money in any one country is the present quantity of the current money in that country, in proportion to the present trade." And again, "Money, whilst the same quantity of it is passing up and down the kingdom in trade, is really the standing measure of the falling and rising value of other things in reference to one another; and the alteration of price is truly in them only. But if you increase, or lessen, the quantity of money current in traffic in any place, then the alteration of value is in the money." Accordingly, the value of a dollar in a volume of eight thousand millions of like units is one thing, and quite another as a unit in a volume of only four thousand millions. The value of a dollar of 23.22 grains of gold, likewise, is one thing as a part of a volume of four thousand millions of gold, with a like volume of silver also, as money, and quite another without the silver. The effect on the value of the whole and on each unit would be the same, whether the volume of eight thousand millions was composed entirely of gold, and half of it destroyed, or whether half of it was silver and that part demonetized.

Any legislation, or other cause, that lessens quantity of money, commodities remaining the same, increases its value. Nor does it make any difference whether coin of both metals circulate together in all countries or not. The fact that silver, being undervalued by the change in the ratio in 1834, did not circulate in this country, had no appreciable effect on the value of money as a whole, or on the value of the gold unit. If silver did not circulate here, it did in France, Germany, and other countries where it was rated higher,—relatively to gold, and relieved thereby the gold which circulated here.

But now, when it is proposed to remove silver altogether, not only from the United States, but at least from all European countries, and distribute the gold that formerly circulated exclusively in two or three countries, over all,—that is, reduce the total volume from both gold and silver to gold alone, then a direct and sweeping change is made in the value of the monetary standard, which changes prices of commodities; which changes the relation of money to property, and of property to debt, and thereby not only "impairs the obligation of contracts," but violates the faith pledged in all transactions made according to one standard to be performed by another. You exact, as Mr. Attwood said in Parliament, that for every sum pledged a greater sum shall be paid.

You change the gold standard when you demonetize silver. You change the value of gold metal when you declare that silver shall no longer be a money metal. The dollar of 23.22 grains of gold is no longer the unit it was before silver demonetization began. It is a different measure, an enlarged standard; and yet for all debts the same number of dollars are required. Now I ask on what moral principle it can be justified? They who so readily charge a dishonest purpose to those who oppose and denounce such a policy as wrong are bound to show where equity lies. I charge, that to alter the value of money, and compel the fulfilment of contracts according to a larger measure than was agreed, is a crime.

And I assert as a truth of economic science, that to remove silver from the coinage of the world and limit metallic money to gold alone, as much alters the value of gold, as much changes the money standard, as if, having had but the one metal, gold, half of that were destroyed.

If it be answered that silver will continue to be money in Asia, nevertheless, the principle above stated holds good; and if we confine its operation to Europe and the United States, what will be the result? According to Mr. Seyd, before quoted, there were in 1876 in use in Europe, including the small sum held in the United States, about $3,750,000,000 of coin and bullion. Of this, about two-fifths, or $1,500,000,000, was silver, and three-fifths, or $2,250,000,000, gold. Now suppose the policy inaugurated in Germany is carried out, and the silver part demonetized. It is not probable that Asia, while she may absorb the silver, will give up her gold. The consequence is, the volume of metallic money for Europe and the United States would be changed from $3,750,000,000 to $2,250,000,000. Two-fifths added to the value of each unit as effectively as if two-fifths more metal were put into each coin, and the number of units thereby reduced.

I have assumed in this reasoning that the annual production of gold would no more than supply the new demands of increased population and business. If it did, or if it fell short of such supply, then, of course, the surplus or lack would be modifying conditions. I do not overlook, either, other causes, such as the issue of inconvertible paper, or of credit currency; but to this kind of currency I refer again. The point I wish to impress here is, that silver demonetization increases the value of gold; that the exchangeable value of 23.22 grains of gold depends largely upon whether silver is coördinately money with gold, or not. No political economist of reputation would undertake to dispute this fact. Silver demonetization must enhance the value of the gold unit as directly as if more metal were added to the unit; more of labor, more of property, more of everything, must, thereafter, be given for a dollar than before.

Take another view. Before silver demonetization was begun in Europe, national debts aggregated more than $20,000,000,000. The public indebtedness of the United States, national, State, and municipal, aggregated about $5,000,000,000; corporate and private debts existed in amount proportionally large. These debts were created on a basis, not of gold and silver only, but gold and silver supplemented by inconvertible paper money, amounting in different countries to more than $2,500,000,000, coin value. That is, these debts were created according to a scale, not of $5,000,000,000, but of more than $10,000,000,000; and now it is proposed that they should be paid with this scale changed to four or five thousand millions! That the labor, the commodities, that shall go to pay these debts, shall be given according to a measure made double the value of that by which they were created. Do you say the promise was to pay dollars, gold dollars of 23.22 grains? Suppose that granted,—which, however, is not true,—I ask, was it to pay such dollars enhanced in value by the demonetization of all other dollars? Was it to pay units of 23.22 grains of gold with the further stipulation that the number of money units should be reduced from ten thousand millions to four thousand millions, by the destruction of paper dollars and the demonetization of silver? Or was it with the promise that the dollars of metallic money should be reduced from eight thousand millions to four thousand, or from $3,750,000,000 for Europe and the United States to $2,500,000,000? No, most emphatically, no! And to ask it is to ask confiscation. To propose to alter the value of money by thus reducing its volume is to propose indirectly and fraudulently to impair the obligation of contracts, and wrongfully take from one and give to another.

Then, when to the wrong contemplated by such legislation upon debtors and tax-payers is added the ruinous effect upon the productive industries of the country and the world—the effect on labor, on life, on human welfare, of a reduction in the quantity, and consequent increase in the value of money, to go on through a series of years,—the enormity of the contemplated act ought to characterize it as a crime against the world.

And, apparently influenced by such catch-words as "honest money," "a dollar worth ninety cents," conscientious men, moral teachers, men who would scorn to harm any one, have o'erleapt the beam, and vaulted in the other scale, and are now lending their influence to as great a wrong as ever threatened the human race. A thousand years of the false theology against which THE INDEX so earnestly contends could not cause so much wrong, loss, and suffering as the policy of silver demonetization and gold redemption of paper, if carried out according to the Beecher and New England ideas of ethics, as applied to political economy, must cause in a single generation.

These are not mere sentiments. They are not my views simply. Warnings against silver demonetization, with prediction of the consequences, have been uttered by the ablest living economists and statesmen,—Disraeli, Cernuschi, Seyd, Laveleye, Wolowski, Fauchet, and others. But facts are better than theory, or the opinions even of the ablest thinkers; experience is better than hypothesis. Let us appeal to history and experience. We have an almost parallel case, as far as it goes, at hand. Between the passage of Pitt's Bank restriction act in 1797 and 1816, the coin expelled from England by issues of inconvertible paper money was, according to the statement of the Bank-directors to the Secret Committee of 1819, not less than £30,000,000 sterling, or about $150,000,000. During the same period, according to Storch, a sum equal to $75,000,000 was added to the metallic circulation of Europe by the substitution of paper money in Russia, and about $100,000,000 by emissions of government paper money in Austria. Other States also issued smaller amounts of paper to the displacement of coin.

It is clearly shown by Storch and Leckie that the coin displaced by these issues of paper did not go out of Europe, but was added to the metallic circulation of France and other States that retained a purely metallic currency.

Leckie shows that these issues of paper and the redistribution of metallic money operated to raise the circulation of Europe from sixty to seventy per cent. coin valuation. The effect on prices was precisely the same as the sudden creation and addition of so much coin would have had. Prices, rated in metallic money rose, as the volume of money increased. In the countries that had issued paper money in excess, prices rose above the metallic level. The evidence of these facts is abundant, and contained in almost every writer who has treated of the financial condition of Europe during this period. But perhaps no writer has as well put causes and effects together as Mr. Leckie. It was an era of great industrial prosperity, every industry being stimulated to the highest activity by rising prices. The war ended, and then began the withdrawal of the paper issues and the redistribution of the metallic money, reducing the volume in the various countries to somewhere near the level existing before the war; that is, a new alteration in the value of money by depreciation, of from forty-five to fifty per cent! Prices fell, debtors were ruined, industries were prostrated, and the people underwent suffering and misery to the extreme of starvation.

Leckie says, "The most important circumstances which have affected the value of money in Europe during the last thirty years may, nevertheless, be stated from authentic documents, in a form approaching so nearly to a demonstration as to satisfy any reasonable mind that the great distress which has been experienced of late years, both in Europe and America, is chiefly to be ascribed to the changes which have taken place in the value of money." But, mark: Europe did not attempt to aggravate the difficulty and distress, by, at the same time, abolishing half the precious metals. They were not fools enough to undertake that. That beautiful experiment was left for another generation—a generation that may be very conscientious, but whose conscience, in this respect, manifestly stands divorced from understanding.

Now take the period from 1861 to 1878. From 1861 to 1878 there was issued in the United States and by different States in Europe inconvertible paper equivalent to about $2,500,000,000 of coin. This paper expelled metallic money from the countries issuing it, which went to swell the metallic circulation in other countries, and otherwise to add to the currency of the world. The circulating medium of the world was, therefore, in effect increased beyond the production of the precious metals by at least thirty per cent. The chief influence, however, of this increase has been felt in Europe and the United States, where it can hardly have been less than forty or fifty per cent; that is, the metallic level of prices was changed to that extent independently of the paper inflation above this in the United States. It was according to this supplemented and expanded metallic scale that prices were rated in Europe during this period; our war material and supplies were paid for by it. Coin debts were created according to this measure, and prices and business generally adjusted to it.

Then began the process of withdrawing the inconvertible paper, and the redistribution of metallic money with all the consequences that follow the appreciation of money. It would seem to be enough for us, with an extended volume of inconvertible paper, to aim at restoring the old metallic level. But, no; wiser (in our own conceit) than other generations, and having become overwhelmed with debt, we have proposed not to restore the old metallic level, but to join in a scheme to abolish, at the same time, half the precious metals, and thereby establish a new and dearer metallic standard! Would the Sandwich Islanders have undertaken such folly? No; I think we may safely conclude that we are the only people on earth that would do it.

But "F. S. C." reminds us that paper, in commercial countries, takes the place of coin. But has the quantity of coin nothing to do with the quantity of paper that can be maintained on a level with coin? Suppose gold to be the only money—the only world currency; and suppose first that we had no other currency: what proportion of the world currency, gold, would fall to us in the maintenance of the level of prices throughout the world? Probably not more than three or four hundred millions. Then with, say, $400,000,000 of the world currency as our share, how much paper could be maintained at par with gold? By no possibility could a volume of paper larger than our share of the world currency be maintained at par with it. Nor is there but one way to maintain a paper currency on a level with gold, or world currency, and that is by sufficiently limiting its volume. This may be done by making it convertible into gold—if that is the only world currency—or by arbitrarily limiting the quantity. An inconvertible paper currency can be maintained at par with the currency of the world by limiting the volume; and a much larger volume of inconvertible paper will circulate at par than of convertible or purely credit currency. But the maximum volume of either that will circulate at par with world currency is measured by the volume of world currency that would naturally fall to us in the maintenance of prices. Hence to attempt specie resumption, and expect to keep in circulation, convertible into gold only, more paper than we would naturally have of gold, is a delusion. If we would not have as our share six hundred millions of gold, then to expect six hundred millions of paper to be kept at par in coin, no matter whether we start with fifty or five hundred millions of gold in the treasury, is to expect the age of wonders to return.

But, if the world currency includes both the precious metals, then the quantity that would fall to us would be twice as large; and twice as large a volume of paper could be maintained at par with coin. Generally, then, not only is the volume of convertible paper that can be kept in circulation limited by the precious metals, but the volume of safe credit itself is likewise limited more or less directly by the same conditions.

The delusion that the owner of bullion, under a state of free coinage, would make a profit, I think was sufficiently exploded in my former communication. The coining of money, where it is free, is nothing more than a public certification of weight and fineness; and an ounce of silver coin is worth no more coined than uncoined, since it would cost nothing to have it coined. To talk otherwise is to assert that an ounce of silver is more than an ounce. No one will give more gold, more of commodities, more labor, or more of anything for a given weight of coins than for the same weight of silver in a bar, provided it costs nothing to have the silver in the bar coined; and to claim that there will be any difference in the market between a bar of standard silver and the same weight coined (with free coinage) is to set up an absurdity. There is no profit to be derived by the producer of silver, or the owner of silver bullion in remonetization with free coinage, not shared in by all. The working-class lose nothing. On the contrary, their gain indirectly by stopping the constant increase in the value of money itself is incalculable.

Again, the talk about 412½ grains of silver being ninety cent dollar is nonsense. It may be fitted to the comprehension of a "country parson," but there is no sense in the talk about such a dollar. A cent is the hundredth part of a dollar; and a hundredth of 412½ grains of silver is as much as a cent as the hundredth part of 25.810 grains of gold. There are as many quarters to an apple as to an orange. To restore silver is to continue an old unit of value. It is true it may not be the same thing as the gold unit. Government does not undertake to give to 412½ grains of silver the same purchasing power as 25.8 grains of gold. No one government can do that. Nothing short of the concurrence of a preponderance of nations in a common ratio can secure it. Our contracts have been for weight of metal, with both metals as money.

If the demonetization of silver has increased the value of gold, that does not give those who manipulated the fraud a right to demand gold where the contract is coin. Never was a truer thing spoken than when Ewing said, "There is a faith due to the people as well as to the creditor." Let both be kept. I cannot discuss this point, however, without reminding those who talk about ninety cents on the dollar that 412½ grains of silver will buy more of anything in Boston or anywhere else in this country than it would four years ago. The reason for this I have given. And, in any light we may view the coin dollar, the creditor gets greater value than he gave.

While I have my pen in hand, let me say for Miss Leonard that she is right, and "F. S. C." wrong. Bank of England notes during the period referred to—from 1797 to 1816—were issued without reference to coin or bullion in the bank. In fact, nearly all the coin, so says the Bullion Report, left the country as its place was supplied by inconvertible paper. Nor are Bank of England notes now limited to, or do they "represent an equal amount of coin and bullion in the vaults." Since Peel's Act of 1844, Bank of England notes issued in excess of fourteen and a half millions of pounds—or now about fifteen millions—represent coin or bullion. The facts given by Miss Leonard are substantially true; and the history of the struggle England went through is full of warning to us. There is this difference, however, that I have pointed out, that, at the same time England was struggling to restore the metallic level of prices, Europe did not undertake, at the same time, to do away with half the precious metals; although England did aggravate the distress at home by adopting a single standard. But the effect was slight, because everywhere else silver remained money equally with gold. No; to alter directly or indirectly the value of money is to touch a spring that sets in motion an endless chain of causes that most unjustly affects the distribution of property, the rights and interests of labor, and works immeasurable and irreparable wrongs to the whole body politic, and especially to the lower and weaker classes, who, from their station in life, cannot be expected to know the operation of such forces.

It would be indeed the beginning of a new era if the conscience of the world would demand a new commandment,—one to be placed above all the rest, not only in the Decalogue, but in the constitution and laws of every government; and that to be, THOU SHALT NOT ALTER THE VALUE OF MONEY.

MARIETTA, Ohio, Feb. 13, 1878.

RALPH WALDO EMERSON.

"THE FORTUNE OF THE REPUBLIC."

Mr. Ralph Waldo Emerson lectured yesterday afternoon in the Old South Church to a large audience. He was introduced by Dr. Samuel A. Green, and was received with hearty applause.

It is a rule, said the lecturer in beginning, that holds good in economy, as well as in hydraulics, that you must have your source higher than your tap. Mills, colleges, churches, have found out that secret. Our modern wealth stands on a few staples, and the interest which nations took in our war was exasperated by their interest in our cotton. What is cotton? One plant out of two hundred thousand known to botanists, the majority of which are called weeds. What is a weed? A plant whose virtues have not yet been discovered. Every one of those plants, probably, will yet become useful in some way. There is not a property in Nature that a mind will not be born to seek and to find. When gunpowder was discovered, modern war built itself upon that one product, as if the earth, water, gases, caloric, have not a million energies, the discovery of any one of which would change the art of war again, and put an end to all by the exterminating force man can apply. If this be true, in the useful and fine arts, that the power must be drawn from the superior force, or there will be no good work, does it hold less in our social and civil life?

In our politics, each aspirant who rises above the crowd, if he have sagacity, soon learns that it is by no means by obeying the vulgar weathercock of his party that real power is gained, but that he must often face and resist the party, and put them in fear; that the only title to their permanent respect and to a larger following is to see for himself what is the real public interest, and to stand for that. That is a principle; and all the cheering and hissing of the crowd must by-and-by accommodate itself to that. America is now the illustration of the theories of political economists; it is the topic to which all foreign journalists return as soon as they have told their local stories. In 1816, Napoleon prophesied that in twenty-five years America would dictate the politics of the world; and, though that prophecy was a little premature, it is fast becoming fulfilled. We find this country just passing through a great crisis in its history. We are in these days settling for ourselves and our descendants questions which, as they shall be determined in one way or another, will make the peace and prosperity or the calamity of the next ages.

The subjects of education, society, labor, the direction of talent, of character, the nature and habits of the American, may well occupy us, and still more the question of religion. The humblest is daily challenged to give his opinion on practical questions; and, where so much civil and social freedom exists, nonsense even has a favorable effect. Placing the logic in the people has the effect of bringing it nearer to common-sense. The court of a monarch can sooner run into nonsense than a Republic, where everybody is looking on and criticising.

One hundred years ago the American people attempted to carry out the bill of political rights to an almost ideal perfection. They have made great strides in that direction since. They are now proceeding, instructed by their successes and their many failures, to carry out, not the bill of rights, but the bill of human duties. It is asserted that we shall be thrown at the mercy, not of mobs, but of an inferior class of politicians, who, by means of newspapers and caucuses, win the posts of power, and give their direction to affairs. We do not choose our own candidates—no, nor any other man's first choice,—but only the available candidate whom perhaps no man loves. Instead of character, there is a studious selection of character; and the people are flattered, not reprimanded. The country is governed in bar-rooms. Parties keep the old names, and exhibit a surprising capacity of creeping out of one snake-skin into another; and the grasshopper on top of Faneuil Hall gives a proper comment on the character of the men below.

The American always entertains the idea that legislation does not need careful consideration, because it can be repealed so easily, and so exposes him to but little danger of being entangled in the meshes of bad law. The people are right-minded enough; but they feel that they must pay their debts, and have the means of living well without pinching; and so it is useless to rely on them to go to the meeting or to give a vote, if thereby any check to this must-have-the-money side arises. The record of the election every now and then alarms people by the almost unanimous choice of the rogue and the burglar. How was it done? What lawless mob broke into the ward-room and threw those ballots? It was done by the very men you know,—the mildest, best-natured, most sensible people. They have been scared or drawn into some association whose act it was. Our politics are covered with shame. The spirit of our political economy is low and degraded. Man exists for his own sake, and not to add one to the State. The spirit of our political action, for the most part, considers nothing less than the sacredness of men. Party sacrifices men to the measure.

The faults of our system suggest their own remedy. After every mistake out of which disaster grows, people correct it with energy. The gracious lesson taught by all science to this country is, that the history of nations from first to last is advance. Nature works in immense time, and spends individuals and races prodigally to prepare new individuals and new races. Our communities, of which the town is the unit, are all educational. Town-meeting is, after the high-school, a higher school. Our legislature, to which every good farmer goes at once on trial, is a superior academy. Ours is the country of poor men. Here is practical democracy, here is the human race poured out over the continent to do itself justice. Here the mass of the people have their coats off, and have arrived at a sloven comfort. Every man is disposed to give his children a better education than he received himself. The schools are so numerous that every farmer and laborer is enabled to secure a precious primary education; and it is a rare thing to see a native American who cannot read and write. The facility of forming clubs for the discussion of questions secures the notoriety of those questions.

The people are loyal, law-loving, law-abiding; they prefer order, and have no taste for misrule or bad order. The people are so closely connected with the government that the law-makers keep up with the moral advance of the people; and in that is our safety. In this country there is a restless activity, a desire for gain, a feeling that each man can have as much of the continent as he can conquer. Our people are easily elated, easily depressed. They act on the moment, and from external impulse. They all lean on some other person. They follow the fact; they are led by success and not skill. Therefore, as soon as success stops, and the admirable man falls, they quit him, and remember that they long ago suspected his judgment; and they transfer their faith from him to the next prosperous person who has not blundered. Young men, if they fail the first time, throw up the game. The activity of our people up to the present time is a certain fatalism. We have accomplished much, but our civilization is incomplete.

It is not a question whether we shall be a multitude of people, for that has been settled; but whether we shall be the new nation, the guide and law-giver of all nations. If the temperate wise man were to look over our society, the first thing that would alarm him would be the European influence in the direction of luxuries. America is provincial,—it is an immense Halifax. Life has grown so costly that it threatens to kill us. Man is coming to value himself only for what he can buy. Man no longer conducts his own life; it is manufactured for him. Your tailor makes your clothes, the baker makes your bread, and the Bishop of London furnishes you with a creed. Therefore, whenever London and Paris have spoiled their own bread can be spared to return to those cities. They sit and do nothing, and complain of the flatness of American life. They are not Americans; though they condescend to eat its bread and game, and sip its California wine. This spirit is not American. A man for success must not be pure idealist, but he must have ideals, or he might as well be the horse he rides. Let the good citizen perform the duties put on him here and now. Constitution and law in America must be placed upon ethical principles. We should have hospitality and a fair field, with equal laws for all. Let all nations compete; and success to the strongest, the wisest, and the best.

At the close of the lecture proper, Mr. Emerson read a short poem, entitled "Joseph, the Nez Percé," which he said had been sent to him by a person who was entirely unknown to him.—Boston Journal, Feb. 26.

HOW THE CATHOLIC CHURCH EXALTS REASON.

In a lecture on the 16th inst., before an audience of all denominations, in St. Louis, Mo., which, the accounts state, was one of the largest ever gathered in that city, the eloquent Bishop Ryan said: "Catholics do not believe that they are bound to submit their intellect to the decision of a human institution. They have first convinced themselves that the Church to which they pay allegiance, and by which they are taught the truths of revelation, is a divine institution, that it is an unerring messenger from God to them; therefore if they submit to a decision of the Church, they submit to a decision of a tribunal which their own reason has already accepted as an unerring tribunal. If they were obliged to receive the decision without having already been convinced that this decision came from a tribunal that could not err, then they would be slaves; but they have a reason for submitting their reason. There is no possibility of slavery in this case. There is, on the contrary, a consolation for the real dignity of human reason. If there was a church authority that was not unerring, and that church authority obliged some to submit to its decision, then my reason would be degraded. Having come to a certain conviction on a certain point, I will never yield that reason that God gave me, except to the decision of a tribunal which that reason has already accepted as unerring. (Applause.) The man holds the balance in his hand. The scale against the doctrine descends, the other ascends. Now comes a new reason, which he did not know before when he weighed the arguments. A decision has come to him from a tribunal which his reason has accepted as unerring. It is a new argument which he places into the scale that was lightest before. This new argument weighs down that scale; and, bowing his head, he says—his intelligence also bowing—'Prodo, I receive it: I believe it.' My own reason accepts it; I am no slave in this decision. Dearest to me and to every man, dearer than was Isaac to Abraham, is his reason. It is what makes a man all that he is. And as Abraham would have erred grievously if he had offered his son upon the mountain unless he were absolutely certain of God's stern behests, he never could have offered to sacrifice that son upon a probability that God would require it. He never could have offered to sacrifice that son upon a message received from Almighty God, unless, indeed, that messenger was rendered unerring by Almighty God; but having received the order, and having been certain of that order, then he prepares to offer his son. So with my reason; I will offer it only on the mountain of God. I will offer it only at God's behest; and even then I have only to offer it, not to sacrifice it. Reason, like Isaac, is offered; but reason, like Isaac, is not sacrificed, because there comes in a reason for giving up my reason, as it were, at the time. There comes in this decision of this unerring tribunal; and therefore the dignity of human reason is only preserved where the Church is an unerring Church. The dignity of human reason is preserved only where a man is certain he hears the command of Almighty God, and hears it through a messenger that cannot deliver a false report." (Applause.)—New York Tablet, Jan. 5.

A LETTER from Berlin in the St. Petersburg Zeitung says that the Socialist Congress which met at Gotha this year having decided to establish periodicals with the object of spreading Socialist doctrines in Germany, two such periodicals have now appeared,—the Future, a review, published at Berlin; and the New Society, a monthly magazine, edited by Dr. Wiede, at Zurich. The first number of the Future discusses a proposal made by the Danish social reformer Lunde, for securing annuities to workmen after they attain the age of thirty. The amount of the annuity is to increase as its recipient grows older, and it is to be paid by the State out of the proceeds of a tax levied upon the employers in the proportion of 12½ per cent. on the wages of each workman employed by them who is more than eighteen years of age. The writer in the Future warmly approves of the idea of such an annuity; but he objects to the State having anything to do with the matter, and thinks it should be an indispensable consequence of the system that it should not reduce the rate of wages,—though how this is to be prevented he does not say. In another article on "Socialism and Science," a sketch is promised of an ideal socialist state in all its various phases. The programme of the New Society is stated as follows: "Instead of the system of imposing pecuniary and military sacrifices on the masses in favor of a certain number of privileged persons, which has now reached its culminating point and is drawing towards its downfall, a new society must arise"; and in an article on "The Tendencies of Society opposed to Socialism," it is urged that modern society, and not socialism, is founded on immoral principles, and that the former, being chiefly composed of people without honor or principle, should be destroyed. The correspondent adds that socialism has become very popular of late in the German universities, and that at Berlin the socialist propaganda has been successful during the last few months that several hundred of the students of the Berlin university, under the leadership of the ex-professor, Dr. Dühring, now openly profess socialist principles.

THAT PERSON of a name so remarkable that it would seem to have come from a book of nonsense verses—the Akhoond of Swat—is dead. Swat is on the northwest frontier of India, and in this region lived the Akhoond, a venerable old man, esteemed so much of a saint that journeys were made by thousands as acts of devotion to see him. His fame was great over all India; and he has been understood as being able to sway the Mussulman population, and to have instigated all the British troubles with the hill tribes on the frontier.

Poetry.

[FOR THE INDEX.]

TWO HEATHEN.

BY C. APLIN.

Socrates.

A sultry day in Athens. On the ear,
The pleasant plashing of the fountain fell
Like merry music. Heated and athirst
Came Socrates; and, filling up his cup,
He sipped a drop, and sipped, and sipped again
So like a miser dealing out his hoard,
That one who chanced to see said curiously,
"Now tell me, Socrates, I pray thee, why
Thou drainest not at once the brimming cup,
But lo'at to tease thy thirsty throat, and bask Desire of half its honest pleasure thus?"
"That I may know," said Socrates, "that still Strong appetite is subject unto stronger will."
This was a man who wore his manhood's crown,
Nor doffed it even at the gate of death.

Epaminondas.

Epaminondas had given deep offence
Unto the Theban people; whereupon,
To mingle insult with revenge, they chose
The meanest, filthiest office in their gift,
And gave it him. It is the fatal error
Of vice and folly, that they will misprize
The god-like power that clothes integrity.
They did but put the diamond to the wheel,
To prove its worth. 'Twas not the hero fell:
The office rose; and the sweet dignity
With which he filled the place so clung to it,
Thenceforth it was a post of highest honor.
So evil vainly wastes its strength to show
How weak is wrong against a royal soul.

[FOR THE INDEX.]

TO BISMARCK AND GLADSTONE.

Though still the valley-lands lie dim and darkling,
And sunken glens are hid in deepest night,
Upon your radiant brow and restless helms is sparkling,
Pulsant champions of Truth, the morning's light.

For surely now the Dragon lies a-dying
In cavern foul,—the Dragon and his ancient brood,
Wherein your brothers' bones of other years thick-lying
Have long been strown in countless ghastly multitude.

'E'en in his days of power they dared to enter
With sun-bright shafts his den where daylight ever falls.
Gladly of fiery death they took the venture,
While planting lethal wounds beneath his scales.

The victory which perches in your banners,
With agonies ineffable they helped to win.
Fire was their meed, not peans and hosannas,
The priestly faggot-fire, which shrivels fast the skin.

The dust of glorious Bruno stirs and flares,
Enkindled by the bolts you hurl into his hold;
Truth's thousand martyrs from indignant ashes
Upstart to cheer the blows you deal the Anarch old.*

Their spirits unappeased will fiercely hover
In airy squadrons o'er his Baal-temple vast,
Until from cross to base 'tis toppled over,
And o'er the earth in tumbled, confused heaps 'tis cast.

Apollo from the stricken Python turning
Was harbinger of you, O latest sons of light!
Whose helms and spears with beaming auroral burning
Proclaim the final hour of superstitious night.

B. W. BALL.

1874.

CASH RECEIPTS.

N.B.—Postage stamps are not included here, though credited on subscriptions, etc.

FOR THE WEEK ENDING MARCH 9.

R. P. Thompson, $4; J. Aulbach, 10 cents; E. W. Keeler, $3.20; G. W. Robinson, $3.20; W. Hanford, $3.20; F. H. Buchanan, $3.20; J. Frank Sisson, $3.20; Geo. W. Wood, $3.20; A. Vacher, $3.71; P. S. Crowell, $10; S. K. Hazeltine, $1.44; James Hynes, $1; Charles Voysey, $4.55; John Young, $6.80; David Bronson, $66.20; Dr. John Winslow, $1; S. L. Hill, $1; Mrs. M. S. Ehle, $1; Mrs. O. G. Francis, $3.20; Joseph DeGott, $3; Kate Grant Biles, $3; F. T. Stuart, $3.20; David B. Bates, $3.20; Elmira Y. Howard, $2.50; Carl Edelhelm, $3.20; H. F. Marshall, $2.20; W. H. Spencer, $3.20; Alvin Hoyt, $3; John Hatchings, $3.65; Jos. M. Lyon, $3.20; Mrs. O. Dumas, $1; W. P. Wilson, $2; James Dillaway, $5; Cash, 25 cents; S. B. Smith, $8; S. S. Green, $8.20; E. F. Hitchcock, 80 cents; T. B. Skinner, 25 cents; F. S. Andrews, 80 cents; Mrs. C. R. Sherman, $1.

*"Anarch old"—MILTON.

The Index.

BOSTON, MARCH 14, 1878.

THE INDEX is published every Thursday by the INDEX ASSOCIATION, at No. 231 WASHINGTON STREET, BOSTON. TOLSON OFFICE, No. 35 MONROE STREET: J. T. FAWCETT, Agent and Clerk. All letters should be addressed to the Boston Office.

THE INDEX accepts every result of science and sound learning, without seeking to harmonize it with the Bible. It recognizes no authority but that of reason and right. It believes in Truth, Freedom, Progress, Equal Rights, and Brotherly Love.

The transition from Christianity to Free Religion, through which the civilized world is now passing, but which it very little understands, is even more momentous in itself and in its consequences than the great transition of the Roman Empire from Paganism to Christianity. THE INDEX aims to make the character of this vast change intelligible in at least its leading features, and offers an opportunity for discussions on this subject which find no fitting place in other papers.

N. B.—No contributor to THE INDEX, editorial or otherwise, is responsible for anything published in its columns except for his or her own individual statements. Editorial contributions will in every case be distinguished by the name or initials of the writer.

TO VOLUNTARY CONTRIBUTORS.—Only Short Articles desired. Unused Manuscripts not returned.

FRANCIS ELLINGWOOD ABBOT, Editor.
OCTAVIUS BROOKS FROTHINGHAM, WILLIAM J. POTTER, WILLIAM H. SPENCER, MRS. E. O. ORNEY, GEORGE JACOB HOLYOAKE (England), DAVID H. CLARK, MRS. ELIZABETH CADY STANTON, J. L. STODDARD, ELIZABETH WRIGHT, C. D. R. MILLS, W. D. LE SURVE, HENRY F. UNDERWOOD, ALBERT WARREN KELSEY, Editorial Contributors.

SPECIAL NOTICE.

Attention is specially called to a change in the advertisement of the Publications of the Free Religious Association. By a recent vote of the Executive Committee the Annual Reports of the Association, from the year 1872 to the year 1877 inclusive, are now offered at five cents each (and at the same rate for any larger number) to any body who will take the trouble to send for them, enclosing five cents in postage stamps. They will also be sold at the office for the same sum to any one calling for them there.

The Committee have put the pamphlets at this low rate, which hardly more than covers the cost of sending them by mail, with the hope that they may thereby be more extensively circulated. By referring to the advertisement describing their contents, it will be seen that they contain much matter of special interest on the most vital religious problems of the age. It is not too much to say that some of the most valuable contributions of the last five years to religious discussion may be found in these pamphlets. Let any one who wants to know what the Free Religious Association means send for these Reports. And will not the members and friends of the Association take this opportunity to extend the knowledge of its principles?

WM. J. POTTER,
Secretary F.R.A.

THERE is always a Mephistophelian leer in the face of the New York Sun, as it politely takes off its hat to Christianity, and stabs it in the back. This is a sufficiently repulsive specimen: "The American Bible Society is sadly short of money, and calls aloud for $140,000. Its annual expenditures are about $260,000. Its receipts are made up of collections, and of donations from individuals, also of legacies. Not so many people are dying and leaving money to the society as there were some time ago, although it is remembered in the will of many wealthy people who are not dead yet. Of course the managers are not praying for the demise of any of these good people; but it is safe to say that the news of the departure of a few of the richest would be received with a decorous resignation to the will of Divine Providence."

THE WINSTED (Connecticut) Press of February 28 puts some homely truth in phraseology more forcible than elegant or refined: "At last! We like it, and thought it would come. It is now proposed to exempt church-members from the poll-tax, on account of 'their moral influence on society.' The ground on which the dead wood and stone—huge piles of wealth of which the Church edifices are built—are now exempted from taxation. How much better are the living church-members than the dead, inert wood-piles, stone heaps, or brick yards in which they worship! Aye, that's it; exempt the dear, good members themselves. It is they and not their church edifices, which exert the moral influence in society. If you will exempt the church property, by all means exempt the church-members. Here's consistency and the 'harmony of things,' at all events. Either exempt both, or tax both; and don't be inconsistent, — fools any longer."

"HATRED OF JESUS CHRIST."

In that closing portion of Mr. Frothingham's lecture on "The Assaults of Christianity" which we publish this week by the lecturer's unsolicited permission, there are only a few phrases which we should like to change; the delineation of the position held by the modern "assailant of Christianity" is so fairly made that we accept it as our own. We are unconscious, it is true, of any wish either to "demolish the beauties" or "humble the renown" of Christianity, since our anti-Christianity has its roots in no sentiment, good or bad, but rather in the deepest convictions of reason and conscience. Those "beauties" we have repeatedly acknowledged; the "renown" it would be childish to dispute and cautious to belittle; we cordially accept both as facts of history which there is no motive to oppose. Our opposition to Christianity is based on the results of our analysis of its essential principles and spirit; what the grounds of this opposition are is clearly set forth in the Index Tract to which Mr. Frothingham alludes—the "Impeachment of Christianity." The rupture with the Christian religion is no peculiarity of ours—it is the conscious or unconscious peculiarity of the intellect of the nineteenth century. It is no special importance in our own personality that has led Mr. Frothingham to single us out to represent the modern phase of the eternal protest of human nature against despotism in religion; it was rather the fact that circumstances, concentrating our attention on the rooted hostility of Christianity to all true freedom of the human soul, naturally conducted us to a more succinct, plain, and systematic statement of the issue than happens to be at hand elsewhere. What he portrays so justly and forcibly is the conscious self-emancipation of MODERN THOUGHT from the venerable but despotic authority of the Christian religion; and it is only as one of countless illustrations of this that our name, for reasons of convenience, became useful for his purpose.

At the same time, while we accept as our own, with regret but without complaint, the position and work of an "assailant of Christianity," we are compelled to add that this anti-Christian position and work are merely incidental. It would be a wretchedly contracted soul that could content itself with being a mere "assailant" of anything. The clear-sighted expounder of the evolution philosophy is necessarily an "assailant" of the special-creation hypothesis; but, in his own mind, is his position a negative or combative one? Far from it; the theory he rejects is miserably cramped and pinched, compared with that which he accepts. So is it with Christianity; the enlightened freethinker opposes it because it stupidly sets itself to oppose human progress, like the bull before the locomotive. But the locomotive is something more than a mere "assailant" of the bull; it assails him sufficiently to throw him out of the way, and then proceeds to accomplish its journey. It is a sad necessity of progress that it must necessarily "assail" whatever undertakes to stop it; and that is the trouble with the Christian religion. Christianity does not know enough to get out of the way; hence it comes into calamitous contact with the cow-catcher. But that collision is a mere incident in the relentless movement of humanity to its destined goal. Free Religion has objects so vast, so positive, so constructive, so sublime, that it cannot stop to be a mere "assailant"; it must repel the assaults of its enemies, of which Christianity is indeed the most persistent, but then must press forward to achieve for mankind that splendid future which it burns to build. Its ideal is its own—grand, radiant, glorious. Besides this ideal, Christianity shrinks into absolute pettiness. It is indeed strong, burly, and brutal in the world of fact, intent on crushing out the successor to itself which it cannot comprehend, and can only hate; yet in the world of ideas it is so starved, so poverty-stricken, so ineffably and infinitely beneath the level of that ideal which it persecutes, that it would be a humiliation absolutely insufferable for Free Religion to think of itself one moment as a mere "assailant of Christianity." Whoever cannot see through all our anti-Christianity the great glow of that ideal which extinguishes the ideal of Christianity as the dawn extinguishes a smoky candle, has verily read THE INDEX like one that has no eyes.

Yet THE INDEX has such readers. Quoting several of the paragraphs of Mr. Frothingham's present lecture which we published a fortnight ago, with some of our own comments, the Philadelphia Christian Statesman of February 23, with almost incredible obtuseness, says:—

"We put these extracts on record as evidence which proves, by the avowal and profession of the President of the Liberal League, that the immediate motive and inspiration of that movement is not love of mankind or love of country, but hatred of Jesus Christ!"!!!

We assure our readers that the writer of these words did not in the least intend to lie. He meant to tell the truth, undoubtedly; he did not mean to be guilty of a malicious and wicked falsehood. No; he simply did not know any better. He cannot understand how one can reject and strenuously oppose a system without personally hating its founder. His confused and narrowed intellect cannot comprehend how any man can distinguish between persons and ideas,—how he can measure the goodness of the former by the degree of their fidelity to the ideals they actually cherished, while he measures the goodness of the latter by the degree of their conformity to the ascertained truth of things. If the Christian Statesman caricaturist had possessed even a tithe of Mr. Frothingham's fine critical insight, he would have perceived at once that Jesus Christ is to us so vague and shadowy a form, so distorted by legendary myths and so obscured by dogmatic symbolisms, that he has long since ceased to be an object either of hatred or of love,—that he only possesses importance as the founder of a vast doctrinal and institutional system which has grown out of the seed he planted,—that our only concern is with this developed system as a fact of the present, and not at all with its ancient founder, on whom we seldom spend a thought,—and that we oppose this system as a whole, notwithstanding the incidental good it does, because it powerfully tends to keep men in that very state of ignorance and spiritual childishness in which alone its influence can do much good. All this is quite above the comprehension of this usually not muddy-minded writer; he would not stoop to the baseness of calumnious falsification, but has been warped to amazing misrepresentation by religious prejudices and preconceptions which seem to have almost extinguished his intellectual perceptions. We hold him up as a really pathetic example of the manner in which Christianity can stunt the faculties of a naturally intelligent and clear-headed man till he cannot, with the best motives, help printing nonsense unworthy even of a Flathead Indian. Either that, or else an alternative we do not choose even to suggest.

CAPTURE OF NEW MEXICO BY THE JESUITS.

After the united kingdom of Italy, under Victor Emanuel, had taken possession of Rome as the national capital, a number of Jesuits emigrated to New Mexico, where they founded a large colony. They established a newspaper, and immediately set themselves to work to acquire political control of the Territory. They succeeded in getting a large majority of the Legislature, and passed a bill incorporating the Society of Jesus, authorizing it to hold and dispose of property without limit, exempting this property from taxation, granting permission to open untaxed schools free from government control, etc. Against the protests of the minority, and without allowing any debate, this bill was passed under a suspension of the rules. Hon. William Breden, Attorney-General of the Territory, gave his official opinion that this act was in violation of the laws of the United States. Governor Axtell vetoed it in a message from which we quote the following passage:—

"If you pass this bill over General Breden's opinion, and over my veto, you will do so with your eyes open, in violation of your oaths of office, and the laws of the United States. There are many other objections to the bill, a few only of which I will bring to your notice. It is difficult to decide whether the man who seeks to establish the Society or the Society which he seeks to establish is worse. Both are so bad you cannot decide between them. This Neapolitan adventurer, Gasparri, teaches the public that his dogmas and assertions are superior to the statutes of the United States and the laws of the Territory. No doctrine or teaching can be more dangerous to good government than this, especially in New Mexico, where the mass of the people are ignorant. He also, by his writings and harangues, endeavors to excite animosities, and to stimulate the people to war on those legitimately exercising civil authority over them, and to acts of violence. He comes here while the Legislative Assembly is in session, and lobbies in the most brazen and shameless manner to defeat needed and wholesome laws, and to force through bills antagonistic to the laws of the United States. Two years ago he intruded himself in the Lower House, and remained within the bar and by the Speaker's side till he forced the passage of this bill; but at that session it was defeated by an honest legislative council. He now presents himself again; and, being fully informed that what he asks is contrary to the laws of the United States, urges you to violate your oaths and pass the bill. The Society which he seeks to establish in New Mexico is worthy of just such a leader. It has been denounced time and again by the head of the Catholic Church, and justly expelled from the most enlightened countries of Europe. But, apart from the dangerous character of its chief, the bill is specially objectionable because it does not require that the incorporators shall be citizens of the United States, nor residents of New Mexico. The number who may be hereafter associated with them is unlimited, and they might all be aliens and reside abroad. Again, the bill here permits these people to own free of taxation an unlimited amount of property. They are permitted to own all kinds of real and personal estate in all parts of the Territory, and are not subject to pay anything toward the support of the government. The provisions of the bill are contrary to public policy and in direct violation of the laws of the United States, and cannot receive my approval."

Notwithstanding, the bill was passed over the Governor's veto as promptly as in the first instance, and is now a law. Immediately on the heels of this measure, a bill was introduced granting to the "Christian Brothers" (another Catholic organization) twenty-four thousand dollars annually out of the Territorial Treasury, in order to endow a college at Santa Fé; and this bill will undoubtedly be forced through the legislature, as before, over the Governor's veto.

Inasmuch as all Territorial legislation is subject to revision by Congress, it is inevitable that this whole subject will be brought up sooner or later for Congressional action. The necessity of some amendment of the Constitution on this most "vital issue" will become manifest. Senator Edmund's Bible Amendment, now that it has once been proposed, will not be voluntarily withdrawn or changed. All Congressmen who want the votes of the great Evangelical party will be sure to vote for it; all who want the votes of the Roman Catholics will vote against it. These two classes of Congressmen include nearly all, if not all, the members of both houses of Congress; we do not know one—no, not one—who will dare to speak boldly and unequivocally in behalf of the strictly secular principle. The great battle on this question, which is coming nearer and nearer every day, will be practically between Orthodox Protestantism and Roman Catholicism, crouching half-concealed behind the Republican and Democratic parties; where will the grand idea of Secular Government, which created the Constitution, find defenders? Either there will be no action, in which case the Jesuits of New Mexico will enjoy their victory to the full and muster confidently for fresh victories of the same sort; or else the Bible Amendment will be rushed through successfully, in which case Orthodox Protestantism will have succeeded in destroying totally the secularity of the Constitution. O that this sublime cause of Secular Government had but one brave voice in the halls of Congress! O that the National Liberal League were already strong enough to send at least one Senator or one Representative to stand, like Charles Sumner, with unflinching fidelity to this greater than Sumner's cause!

The IDEAL OF AMERICA is kicked like a foot-ball between the feet of its enemies, and it matters little which of their factions shall win the game. The Constitution, made by giants, has fallen into the hands of pygmies; the Republic, founded by patriots for the good of all, has been captured by sectarians, greedy only of victory over each other. And the Liberals, to whom has descended the mighty task of preserving and perfecting the work of the fathers, stand stupefied and paralyzed, while the resplendent Ideal they are set to defend is butchered before their eyes. Tell them they owe a debt of moral earnestness and self-sacrifice to themselves, to their country, to mankind, and they smile vacantly, put their hands in their pockets, and languidly murmur: "Pshaw—alarmism! There is no danger!"

True. There is no danger but the plotted murder of a Nation's Ideal. Who cares for that?

THE REVOLUTIONISTS AT WORK IN WASHINGTON.

In its issue of February 28, the Philadelphia Christian Statesman, the organ of the "National Reform Association" which aims to Christianize the Constitution, made the following very significant announcement:—

The National [Reform] Association at its last session, on motion of Mr. John Alexander, adopted the following resolution:—

"WHEREAS, The relation of Christianity to the government is now open to discussion under the proposal in the Senate to amend the Constitution of the United States; therefore,

"Resolved, That a committee be appointed to proceed to Washington with the purpose of presenting to the Judiciary Committee of the Senate such form of an amendment to the Constitution of the United States as this Association advocates."

Mr. Brunot, the President, Mr. Alexander, Dr. Edwards, of Illinois, and the Rev. D. M'Allister were appointed members of the Committee under this resolution, and the Executive Committee was empowered to fill vacancies and to add other names, at their discretion. It is hoped the Committee will be able to discharge this duty at an early day.

It is a terrible blunder to fancy, with the Springfield Republican, that this "God in the Constitution" movement is not a "vital issue." The simple and unpalatable truth is that the Constitution is only negatively secular; it carefully refrains from recognizing any "established religion," and forbids Congress to establish any; but it does not contain such provisions as would prevent the violation of its own secular spirit in the practical administration of the government. Hence the door has been left open to the plots of the restless and eternally encroaching spirit of clericalism, and this advantage has been seized and used by it to the utmost. The Church Power is growing and strengthening itself in the government precisely as the Slave Power did previous to 1860; and, like that, it is certain to revolt against the nation whenever it finds itself resolutely inhibited from further aggressions. The American people, as a whole, have never settled the religious question; they have never, as a whole, comprehended the true relations of Church and State, and have never fully grasped the ideal which created their own secular Constitution. This was framed by men wiser than their generation,—wiser, we fear, than our own; and the present inherits from the past a "great, unfinished issue." The vast forces involved are silently, imperceptibly, but rapidly arraying themselves for the conflict; the tremendous controversy between Naturalism and Supernaturalism in human government and society, never yet decided by the great Republic in any final form, has got to be settled with full national consciousness of all its bearings.

On the one hand, the National Reform Association, cunningly pretending that a union of the State with Christianity is not a union of the State with the Church, designedly obscures the issue, and plots persistently to smuggle the Protestant Christian creed into the Constitution under pretence of "moral reform"; it is the old devil of priestly ambition and lust of power disguised as an angel of light. On the other hand, the National Liberal League presents the ideal of the framers of the Constitution, made more clear, more self-conscious, and more fully developed, and expressing the determination of a great people to govern itself by the laws of natural reason and justice rather than by any supernaturalism, however painted or masked. The two ideas thus opposed are competing openly for possession of the future; they present an issue more profound, more wide-reaching, more heavily freighted with consequences of good or evil to the whole civilized world, than was ever yet submitted in any land to the arbitrament of popular suffrage; and there is no possibility of this nation's escaping the necessity of deciding it yes or no. The hour of decision may be far or near, but coming it is, and every deep reader of this age discerns the unmistakable signs of its approach. It is big with destiny, and will direct, at least for long centuries, the whole pathway of civilization in this Western World.

Fortunately, the wiser and nobler ideal has the advantage of occupying the ground already: it is fortunately the Ideal of secular or natural government which the Constitution clearly, if somewhat crudely, embodies. The Christian Ideal cannot oust it thence without a radical and ruinous revolution. This advantage of possession, however, great as it is, will prove to have been a measureless misfortune, if it continues to blind the liberals of the country to the imminence and gravity of the approaching issue. Votes will settle this issue at last. If those who comprehend the irreconcilable antagonism of the two ideals now threatening each other, like two thunder-clouds swollen with lightnings and winds and rains, neglect the duty of educating the voters betimes, they are preparing a defeat for human civilization which will be a more monstrous Bull Run, to be redeemed only by incalculable suffering, exertion, and cost. Liberals! You see what the enemies of freedom are doing: what are you doing about it now?

TEMPERANCE REFORM BY MORAL INFLUENCES.

Rev. David H. Clark, minister of the Free Congregational Society of Florence, Massachusetts, transmits for publication the following resolutions, recently adopted by his society:—

We, the congregation, assembled at the regular Sunday afternoon meeting in Cosmian Hall, composed of members and friends of the Free Congregational Society of Florence, take occasion from the newly-arrived interest in the temperance cause, in our region and so extensively elsewhere, to record anew our emphatic testimony in behalf of that noble cause, of all right and wise measures to promote it. Recognising the incalculable evil, and countless pernicious consequences of intemperance, we heartily rejoice in the wide-spread re-awakening of zeal and activity against its continuance and extension; in the cheering measure of success which is attending the efforts for its suppression; and in the promise thereby seeming to be given of still greater and happier results in the future than the past has achieved. While unreservedly conceding to every worker in the good cause a perfect right to hold and express such views as to him seem true touching the nature of the forces which impel the present movement, and win its successes, we, in the simple exercise of this right for ourselves, which we concede to others, affirm our belief that it is due to the might of truth and right, and their normal relation to the human mind and conscience and heart, and not to any supernatural force, save that which normally acts through these, in all enterprises of moral reform. We hold that it would be alike unwise itself and unjust to a large class of effective workers in the temperance cause, to complicate it with any form of theology, or make it any way or degree subservient to the ecclesiastical interests of any religious sect or group of sects, or take out of the sphere of purely moral and humanitarian effort, such as all friends of morality and humanity can consistently join in; and that any tendency in this direction, in the methods of any of our fellow-workers, is to be earnestly deprecated by all intelligent lovers of the common cause. We extend our warm and tender sympathy and hearty encouragement to those who, having been in bondage to the appetite of strong drink, are now, under the influence of this great awakening, striving to break their bonds and recover their manhood; and we exhort them to hold fast their worthy purpose, and wish them a triumphant issue of their struggle against evil habits and appetite.

Communications.

THE HOPE OF IMMORTALITY.

To all arguments for immortality materialists reply by demanding evidence of the existence of a soul. This is quite fair; but it is also reasonable to claim that, on a subtle question like this, cognate evidence shall be admitted. To say I will not believe in a spiritual existence unless it can be subjected to physical observation is equivalent to saying, "I will not believe that a thing is black unless I can see it is white; for an intangible existence to prove tangible would be positive evidence of its intangible nonentity. We don't expect to see with our ears or to hear with our eyes; and why should we expect any sense to present the supersensual to us? It is only by spiritual faculties that we could hope to investigate spiritual things. Have we, then, an intangible existence corresponding with our tangible one which will enable us to pursue these inquiries? I perceive that truth is the agreement of thought with fact. I hear the counsels of the wise spoken in distant ages. Because you cannot discover organs by which I do this, am I to admit that I have no faculties which are the equivalents of hearing or seeing? Truth is invisible to my eyes: the voices of the dead never smite upon my tympanum; yet I am conscious of both, and cannot believe that I am nothing but muscles that contract and sensations which are excited by them. When you have examined every organ of my body, and mastered the details of their mechanism, the motive power still eludes you; the Me still asserts its supremacy. At the earliest point to which we can carry our inquiries, we find there is something which necessitates that combination of forces which we call a body. Some of these forces carry on the functions of physical life, and these act without intermission. Others relate to mental phenomena, and their action is frequently suspended. They are not, therefore, indispensable to physical existence; consequently cannot be identical with it.

When the last muscular contraction has been achieved, and the molecular change has been expressed, we may fairly conclude that physical action is over. What then occurs? I think we may state it thus: By sensation, I eat the impressions that the senses have provided for me; by reason, I digest them; by intuition, I absorb the vitality of them; by consciousness, I develop mental faculties; and by will I use them. Is not this the counterpart of that process which builds up our natural body? It is reasonable to infer that the being thus evolved is subject to universal law, and could not exist without the food that is proper for it. But you might as well assert that an unborn babe must always be fed through its mother as assume that the Me could not receive its sustenance in some independent manner. According to physics, the Me lives upon nothing but the movements of matter corresponding with external phenomena. But manifestly it is the ideas conveyed by these movements which nourish and develop it. A medley of sounds or colors oppresses my senses without being sense to me. Impart order to them, and the form which they assume will convey an idea that the Me can assimilate. Pray, what is there material in an idea? The Me, moreover, seems to have no chemical affinities, and the absorption of matter is apparently incompatible with its organization. Now it is through chemical affinities that all physical changes must occur; consequently, a being absolutely without these affinities could not be dissolved by them. How, then, can the Me be subject to physical death? There is also a universal law that nothing is self-destructive. Nothing, therefore, can be essentially identical with that which destroys it. Now there are only two kinds of being possible. That which can die and that which cannot die. None will deny that the material body is mortal. Unquestionably, too, the Me can will a course of action that must result in death of the body; that is, the Me can dissolve the concurrence of forces which constitutes animal life.

If, then, there are only two sorts of life, and nothing is self-destructive, that which has the power to kill must of necessity be immortal. To me it seems the only logical conclusion, that if a man can commit physical suicide, he must possess spiritual immortality. If it be objected that in some cases the decay of a physical organ destroys mental power, I should answer thus: With recovered health, the Me has been found still to possess all its knowledge, and the idiosyncrasies that previously characterized it. Therefore, such an occurrence should rather be considered as an interruption of communication than the destruction of the communicator. Besides, as through Nature we find that only the fittest forms survive, why should not Me be subject to the same law and a struggle for immortality be carried on, analogous to the struggle for mortality? To some, annihilation would be a boon; and we cannot hope that they will live forever. It is certain, however, that if the Me is not a secretion of the body, but the force which originated it, there is no necessity for its extinction with the physical life. That which was before the body may be after it.

R. H. H.

LONDON, February, 1878.

ABOLITION OF THE PRESIDENCY.

EDITOR INDEX:—

You are aware of the existence of the Union of Radicals; you have read the platform they agreed upon at Philadelphia during the Centennial; you consequently know the objects they work for; and, if it was only to give you information respecting this Union of Radicals, the pen had better been left at rest. You also know that there is no other association of men and women in the country that take so lively an interest in, and is in so great a degree in sympathy with, the movement of the Liberal League as the Union of Radicals. The following passage, taken from its platform, illustrates this:—

"Religious belief or unbelief is a matter of the mental and moral needs of each individual, corresponding to his or her individual culture or intellect. It must be left to mental development, as mediated by free instruction and discussion through word and pen. According to its whole nature, it is exempt from all authoritative influence or control. The State, therefore, must interfere with its domain and development neither by prohibition nor command, and has to abstain from all laws, institutions, and regulations which are subservient to belief or unbelief, or lay any restraint upon its citizens regarding them. All such laws, institutions, and regulations are infringements upon the personal rights and the liberty of conscience of the citizens differing in their belief and manner of thought, and are as tyrannical as they are contrary to reason, while at the same time directly antagonistic to the spirit of the Constitution; they are, therefore, as soon as possible to be prohibited by a special amendment to the Constitution." To this passage is enumerated a long list of such infringements.

Now from this, one would infer that there is no difference between the Liberal League and the Union of Radicals. But there is. While the Liberal League restricts its platform to the one question of total separation of Church and State, and concentrates all its energy upon this one point, the Union of Radicals has issued a general declaration of principles relating to political, social, and religious questions which at present agitate the minds of men, and are of prime importance. These principles are specified in the platform.

One of the leading principles is the abolition of the presidency. This question has been fully discussed among radicals. Karl Heinzen, the ablest German writer in this country, has, in his Pionier, and in pamphlets, upheld it with sound, logical arguments since almost twenty-five years. While in the beginning, the abolition of the presidency has been systematically ignored, it has of late, especially since the last Presidential campaign, been receiving attention from such influential papers as the Cincinnati Commercial and others. And now comes Prof. Goldwin Smith, lecturer on English and Constitutional History at Cornell University, in favor of the abolition of the presidency. Prof. Smith is at present absent in England. He wrote an article on "The Ninety Years Agony of France," for the Contemporary Review, which is republished in the supplement of the Popular Science Monthly for January, from which the following is taken:—

"So long as there is a single head to the State, there will always be some danger of a revival of monarchical pretensions, and of a dispute as to the seat of the sovereign power,—at least in any country where monarchy has long existed and monarchical ideas have taken root. America is Republican soil, on which hardly any but Democratic ideas can grow. The sovereignty of the nation is firmly established, not only in documents, but in the minds of the people. The President is elected for a short term, his powers are clearly bounded by written law, he has hardly any military force at his command; yet Jackson showed a tendency to encroachment; and the jobbers who plundered the community under Grant betrayed their desire not only of increasing, but of perpetuating, his power. A single head of the State is a fancied necessity. The Swiss Constitution, which, instead of a single man, has a council with a president whose function is only to preside, presents great advantages in this respect, and is the safest model for adoption. It, moreover, gets rid of that which is the scourge even of America,—but far more of any country where the questions that divide parties are so fundamental, and party hostility is so deadly as in France—a Presidential election, which periodically stirs up from their depths all the most violent passions, excites the most turbulent ambitions, and brings all questions to a dangerous head. The framers of the American Constitution were in some degree misled, like the framers of the French Constitution, by their British model, which they reproduced in a republican form: they imagined that it was necessary to have something in place of the king; and the elective presidency with all its evils is the result."

Now that Goldwin Smith has taken the lead, will not one of the many able writers of THE INDEX take up the subject of the abolition of the presidency?

Yours truly,

GEORGE SCHUMM.

ITHACA, N. Y., February 22.

IS IT WORTH PRESERVING?

In the minds of all people, even of liberals and freethinkers, who deplore the results of what they unhesitatingly call a false religious system, there is a latent reverence for Christianity, a feeling of tenderness, which makes them endeavor to shield it whenever a strong word or direct blow is aimed against it. "For the sake of the good it has done," they say.

If a person remarks, "I am opposed to Christianity," the rejoinder and correction follows: "You mean you are opposed to what is commonly called Christianity." To which I affirm that Christianity with all the fashionable amendments, with all the worldly alterations to adapt, in some degree, what is utterly unfitted to any human need, is infinitely preferable to Christianity pure and according to its original significance. That to profess spiritual allegiance, and diverge in conduct, is hypocrisy, I do not deny; but better the improved conduct with hypocrisy, base as that is, than downright idolatry and superstition. Civilization to-day is the improved conduct with hypocrisy; now cannot we go a step further, and avow candidly that we do not believe in what we practically discredit?

The true Christian, the consistent, devout follower of Christ, is the fanatical devotee, the ascetic, the celibate, who abjures the world, the flesh, and the devil; who pursues no avocation, but spends his time mortifying his natural desires, and abusing his physique; who avoids his fellow-men, for that is devil socially; who avoids knowledge, for that is devil intellectually; who keeps out of marriage, for that is carnal; who forms no ties, for any tie would draw him away from his superstitious absorption,—his sole duty and responsibility being to offer praise without ceasing to the utterly unpraiseworthy god of his imagination. Such a creature obeys the commandments, lives up to the gospel text, and imitates Christ pretty accurately. If he can contrive to die a martyr's death, all the better; but somehow that is a climax in which, for all the glory, he prefers to make an unbeliever the substitute.

The Scriptures cannot by any elastic process whatsoever be made to serve as a text-book, or moral code for modern society, or in fact for society at all. Civilization in its very inception is anti-Christian. Society is composed of individual members, and personal individuality is anti-Christian. Civilized society allows freedom to its members, and personal freedom is anti-Christian; the Christian regulation being, "Children, obey your parents," "Wives, obey your husbands," "Servants, obey your masters," all, without exception, obey the Church; for any infraction or disobedience God punishes mankind, by the novel and humane expedients so carefully copied in our prison and reform-school discipline: men punish women, parents their children, monarchs their subjects; making cruelty right, exile right, the inquisition right, every species of human atrocity right; making authority absolute, freedom inadmissible. That is Christianity, based upon the Bible, and Christ as the central personality.

Hence any assumption of human rights is essentially anti-Christian,—anything that inspires self-respect, that resists tyranny, that seeks improvement, that longs for happiness, that abates grievances, that sheds brightness, that changes conditions for the better in any sense, is monstrously anti-Christian, and philanthropists and reformers are the most sacrilegious of men. Republicanism is anti-Christian, science is anti-Christian, modern invention is anti-Christian, the protest against corporal punishment in schools is anti-Christian, the plea for the laboring man is anti-Christian, the breaking down of false caste distinctions is anti-Christian, ideal views of marriage are anti-Christian, self-reliance and personal dignity are anti-Christian; and the advance in all these directions has been made in the very teeth of the Church.

The two greatest injuries that Christianity, epitomized in the Bible, has caused humanity may be summed up in the grossly sensual ideas of marriage peculiar to the book, and the conviction it has systematically established all through the centuries that life is necessarily a burden and a trial, intended to be full of suffering and misery and disappointment and complicated tortures; that discipline and chastisement are devised and inflicted by some power above; that trouble, incessant, unavoidable, is in order, and escape from trouble impossible. Thus arose the so-called Christian virtues,—patience, fortitude, resignation, abject submission to the will of God, as manifested through adverse conditions and wicked people. Even now there is such a stubborn notion prevailing that misfortune and evil and wide-spread suffering are somehow good and beneficial, that happiness and justice for all would not be safe and would contravene some plan of the Creator's, that people cannot be coaxed or persuaded to put their shoulders to the wheel, in a united and determined effort to make things better. It lies within our human power, if we employ our human will, and kindle our human hearts into warmth and glow, to make this world a thoroughly happy, comfortable place to live in, instead of the den of confusion it is. We can flood it with light, if we resolutely tear down the imaginary cross whose shadow has darkened it for ages; we can make it bloom and blossom like a garden, if we roll away the stone that has crushed out all life in the race ever since the figment was written and taken for reality.

MARIE A. BROWN.

BOSTON.

THE SCIENCE OF UNIVERSOLOGY.

BY STEPHEN PEARL ANDREWS.

No. XXIII.

The really profound and quasi-universological classification of the sciences, by Stuart-Glennie, has only recently come to my knowledge—since my assignment of relative rank to the other prominent and recent classifiers. It deserves special attention; for along with Vanderweyde,—for the delay of the completion of whose system I have expressed my regrets,—he boldly assumes the fundamental ground of the distribution of the sciences to be the world-wide difference between matter and mind; or, in modern scientific parlance, between the objective and the subjective worlds. He adds to these a middle region: the subject-object world which he makes to be man, himself, or the hominal kingdom. The objective, the subjective, and the subject-object are, my readers will remember, identical with the first and fundamental discrimination instituted, in this series of papers, between the without, the within, and the between. At that time, I hesitated as to the proper science-domain to place as the between, and suggested language. Stuart-Glennie says man (who integrates body and mind); and I am greatly indebted to him for this very simple and now very obvious suggestion, especially as it aids me to a still broader generalization of this middle ground, which will include man, language, and some other things. But for the simple and preliminary presentation of the subject, I gladly adopt his view; and shall regard, therefore, from his and my governing point of view, (governing with me, in a sense, at least) the first grand division of the total field of science as that which distributes it into MATTER, MIND, and MAN; or technically into object, subject, and subject-object.

It is remarkable that Comte who expressly makes the discriminations into subjective and objective and into static and dynamic to be the most fundamental, makes no use of either or any of them as domains of particular sciences; reserving the terms objective and subjective to apply merely to the order of inspection of the serial relation of the several sciences, as was shown in the table (No. XXII.) in connection with the Wakemanian vertebration. This other mode of classification (Vanderweyde's and Glennie's) lifts the whole subject out of that preponderating influence of matter, which makes both mind and man to be mere minor outgrowths from it,—a view specially allied with the nowadays prevalence of the study of the natural sciences which are coming to claim exclusively the name of science,—a point of view specially degrading to the dignity of mind. But our vindication of the equal rank of the studies of matter and mind must not be a sentimental one. We must see distinctly upon what analogy the one view and the other view respectively rests. Let us recur for this purpose to the Wakemanian vertebration, and take our departure from it.

I observed, in the preceding article, in treating of this subject, that, taking this vertebration as such, it is specially appropos that psychology or mind-stores falls into the place, at the head of the column, occupied by the skull; as mind, brain, and skull are analogically coincident. Observe now that the skull is outside of and beyond (as it is also above) the vertebral column proper; and, in the next place, that it has been discovered and proven to be, itself, another special vertebral column, the vertebrae of which are so smelted or ankylosed by Nature's ARTISTIC MODIFICATION, that it required special discovery to reveal their distinct existence. This discovery was made, contemporaneously, by the two distinguished German sciento-philosophers, Goethe and Oken; and that discovery was the first and decisive step in that long series of splendid scientific observations which has resulted in securely founding the science of comparative anatomy, also called at the time of the first broaching of the subject in France (by Geoffroy St. Hilaire and others) transcendental anatomy. According to this view, the jaws repeat the limbs,—are the limbs, in other words, of the head; and the teeth repeat the nails. The head, so considered, is another trunk set on the top of the trunk (commonly so-called) of the body. And so, analogically, the one science, psychology, standing as the head of Wakeman's "back bone of the sciences" should or may be expanded, itself, into a new and distinct vertebral column (another scientific series) virtually repeating, and analogically equivalent to the first; and superimposed upon it. So regarded, Wakeman's series would be prolated at the upper end into a development like that at the lower end (and below the hominal region); and, appropriately, his hominal sciences (sciences of man) would then fall into the middle region between his sciences of matter and his science (now by this process become sciences) of the mind. In this manner we bring Glennie's classification into complete harmony with Wakeman's, and all the other classifications we have been engaged in considering.

In a word, then, Glennie's classification stands in analogical correlation with comparative anatomy (as between head and trunk, and so further out of other living beings) and with comparative anatomy at large, which is thus again shown to be scientific transcendentalism; while Wakeman's classification holds relation to ordinary anatomy. From the transcendental point of view, head and trunk are equivalents; while from the ordinary point of view the head is only a minor part of the whole body (one-eighth in art anatomy). In other words, from the transcendental point of view, the skull is a distinct vertebral column, the segments of which are to be correlated with the segments of the ordinary vertebral column, item by item; while, from the ordinary point of view, the skull is no more than a single vertebra, somewhat swollen or enlarged. Each method of inspection and estimation has, it is obvious, its own grounds of justification. That of Wakeman is more immediate, natural or practical, and that of Glennie more elevated, far-reaching, and transcendently scientific. The realm which man and speech occupy between head and trunk assimilates to the face and the breath, which last infills the lungs, trachea, mouth and nose; or, in a word, the air-passages. The trachea or wind-pipe, the great central air-passage, is then, itself, another, third rate, vertebral column, its various cartilaginous rings answering to vertebrae. The breath is the spirit of the body; and man is the spiritual entity of the cosmos. The face as mouth, nose, etc., the organs of speech, combines with the breath in the production of speech; and collectively they find their best nomination in the hermetic term, the logos.

Let us recur now to the analogy of the city of New York, with its outlay of avenues, streets, and houses. It will be seen on reflection, that none of these as heretofore considered furnish the proper similitude for this new aspect of classification,—that of Glennie. We should for that purpose institute a comparison between the within and the without, say the city itself and the subjacent country, as subjective and objective. Better, if we confine ourselves to the analogues of the within and without, not of the whole embodiment in question, but of the vertebral column solely, that we should say, between the interior and the exterior of the houses; or, still better, if we permit ourselves to make the transition to the skull and to the brain as the true within of this bony encasement, for then we may make a corresponding transition to the inner and upper dwelling-rooms of the houses, and to their inhabitants.

The inhabitants of the city, especially as having ascended to the domes and observatories, and being upon the outlook, may thus be taken, first, to represent the brain, and then by another easy transition, to represent the mind of the city—as being at once its within and its subjective domain. The outcrops of the houses, indeed the houses themselves, and all that is and occurs in the streets, and beyond, is then the without, and, as such, the objective domain. The individual sent out from within the house to communicate with the exterior world, or returning in, the messenger (or angel) is then in loco hominis; or is, in other words, subject-object, a go-between, a mediator. Again, by the laws and license of metaphor, the ventilators, windows, and doors themselves, as means of uniting the without and the within, may be put in the place of man, as intervening between the hidden realm of conscious mind within and the outer world without. This view gives a rhetorical sanction to the bold figure of Jesus when he says: "I am the door," etc.

In a general sense, it results from what has been said, that the brain, skull, and, in a word, the head, is representative of mind, and so is the subjective man, or the subjective part of the human person; especially so the brain, as a viscous connected with and representing the viscera, "inwards," or within of the body; and that the trunk walls and so the trunk generally is the objective man, the analogue of matter or mass; while between these is the voice, or "logos," the word, which is peculiarly representative of man himself, as functioning, transitionally, between mind and matter,—between the within and the without; between the subjective and objective domains. The head in man is somewhat, in the animal wholly protruded (in ultimate structure) before the trunk; hence it is that the phrase à priori (from before) was adopted for its conventional meaning,—that, namely, of a procedure from mind, subjective conception, metaphysical or abstract principle, backward and downward to the body of facts,—as if from head and brow to trunk and nates; and à posteriori (from behind) for the inverse procedure, from the body of facts, the objective mass of observations forward and upward, to principles subjectively perceived,—as if from trunk and nates, to head and brow. Surely an analogy with these features of the human body which has given rise to such a fundamental sciento-philosophical discrimination as this between à priori and à posteriori cannot be too trivial to be deserving of the attention of either science or philosophy. Comte's and Wakeman's use of the terms subjective and objective accord rather with this time-honored discrimination—as expressive of mere orders or directions in which the serial concatenation of the sciences is aspected,—and must be carefully distinguished from Glennie's use of the same terms, and that of the philosophers, in which they are descriptive of departments of being—the within and the without. In the serial sense of Comte and Wakeman, subjective order means analogically from-head-to-trunk-wise, and objective order means inversely from-trunk-to-head-wise.

It must not be inferred, however, that Comte and Wakeman mean no more by the terms objective order and subjective order than the scientific world at large has meant by à posteriori and à priori, as two opposite drifts of procedure in the order of scientific investigation. They mean far more than this,—something which is quite new in the field of sciento-philosophy, and which is worthy of the profoundest consideration. They include, in the objective order, the total body of influences and forces which sweep in upon the mind from its material or objective environment, furnishing one of the two factors of our destiny; and in the subjective order they include the total body of influences and forces which flow out from the mind, reacting, as human will and purpose, upon the environment, and furnishing the other one of these two factors of the destiny of man as a race, and individually. This is certainly one of the noblest generalizations of the philosophy of science that the philosophy of science has achieved hitherto; and its importance should not be lost sight of by confounding it either with the objective and subjective merely as such, or with à posteriori and à priori. There is analogy as between the three sets of discrimination, but not identity; and each of them has a sufficiently important part to play to require that they be carefully held distinct from the others. The ego, or intelligent consciousness is then posited by Wakeman, as the pivot or hinging centre between the inward-trending and the outward-trending drifts of the universal forces.

Recurring to the musical analogy, the head of the vertebral series, as a single object, is the Do of the octave above; which however may be taken representatively, and so be expanded into the entire octave above. Wakeman takes it as the single note, and adds it as super-pivot, or super-abutment, merely, to the lower series; while Glennie expands it into an equal octave with the octave below,—instituting, then, a comparological relationship between the two octaves, throughout.

That the relationship between the head and trunk of the human body, and still farther between the head, trunk, and tail of the animal body, furnished a curious and important part of the earliest scientific curriculum of the human race, will abundantly appear, in some exhibits to be made farther on, of the origin of the serpent and dragon myths of antiquity.

INTELLECTUAL VAGABONDS.

The tramp business, like everything else, has its varieties, and the ragged and filthy nomad who finds his lodging wherever night overtakes him, and thanklessly accepts your charity as his divine right, is not its only representative. There is brain as well as brawn in the fraternity, and it is a difference of kind only, not of degree. The man or woman who asks or accepts help in the shape of money which could have been honestly earned is as truly a mendicant as the beggar who seeks to excite your pity by needless crutches or a simulated blindness. An honest independence, by honest labor, is the birthright of every human being, of which nothing but the most unfortunate circumstances can rob him; but, to be in the possession of health, strength, and a pair of hands, and be willing to accept alms, either directly as such, or in the shape of borrowed money which he has no intention of repaying, is a vagrancy that should place a man on the list of paupers and hand him over to the fostering care of State charity. That the market-value of his brain-stock is below par, is a misfortune that time and patient toil may conquer; but it is no reason he should fold his hands in despairing dependence on the more "fortunate" souls who, along with brains, possess the courage and self-respect to be not only self-sustaining, but most convenient supports for these intellectual loafers. Industry and independence and the honest purpose to live within an income honestly earned, are stocks whose value never fluctuates, and which the world is sure to appreciate and reward.

There is a certain parasitic class in society whom the real or fancied possession of intellect seems, in their own estimation, to have placed above what they consider the degradation of labor, and given them a claim upon the purses of others. Their first article of faith seems to be that the world owes them a living in return for the condescension of living in it, and they act up to the duty which springs from that conviction, whenever a vaunted impecuniosity can sponge a dollar or a dinner from some sympathetic soul. They are a connecting link between us and the littérati of a past age,—Grub Street Americanized by the substitution of impudence for servility and (like all last handfuls of decaying races) a survival of its vices without its virtues. The old fraternity whose motto was, "Base is the slave that pays," still lingers in all its old lack of principle and honor, but without the wit and genius that made it tolerable if not irresistible. Its modern representative takes higher ground. Since the good of humanity and not its amusement, is the order of the day, he is generally to be found elbowing his way among the humanitarians, wherever an ear or a pocket is open to him. The paths of progress are his favorite haunt, and his zeal in any reform is to be measured by its popularity rather than by its merits and necessity. He is ready to mount any hobby that a benevolent public will feed and caparison. As a collector of funds for humane societies he shows a marked ability; but his own pocket is too apt to prove a cul-de-sac from which no way leads into the treasury. The possession of brains releases him from the responsibility of more sordid souls; and a wife and children are but so many additional claims upon public bounty, for whose sake the care and labor that real manhood welcomes would be an impossible degradation. If the woman he has vowed to cherish and protect, the children he has dared the responsibility of bringing into the world, must go cold and hungry when credit and charity fails, is it not the fault of an unappreciative world? Not his, surely. Has he not a mind above slavery to the butcher and baker? In his vocabulary, intellect is synonymous with idleness. The only difference between him and his brother on the highway is that between mind and matter. The sum total of each may be expressed in one word—lousiness.

And herein lies the difference between him and the real intellect,—here the metal shows its ring, false or true. The sterling, the real thought and originality is to be found only among the world's workers. It is but its baser imitation among these drones. The one is but an electro-plating of memory upon the standard foundation—brass,—as specious and insincere compared with the real as is the pretentiously ornamented plate which so fitly represents it, beside the solid ware which it apes. When society shall have arrived at that state of perfection in which its mental and moral diseases shall be as fully understood and as carefully treated as its physical ones, we may hope that all phases of vagrancy shall be made the subject of legislation,—that its brain as well as its muscle shall be restrained from too great a tax on more valuable time and more honest purses, and among its charitable institutions shall be one where both shall find a compulsory exercise and earn an honest, if not an agreeable, independence. In short, an asylum and work-house for intellectual vagabonds.

JULIA E. WRIGHT.

THE EDITOR'S OATH.

"Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States that in order to be allowed to send their journals through the mails at less than letter-postage rates, editors shall be required to have sworn and subscribed before a qualified officer the following form of oath, keeping copy of the same, and depositing a duplicate with the post-master from whose office the journal is sent:—

"I, the undersigned, editor of the journal entitled '_____' declare and swear the following: I am a free man and my own master; not the hired mouthpiece of a financial interest or of a religious or political party. I consider it to be the mission of the press to put all opinions fairly before the public, and the office of an editor to be one not of partisanship but of labor, skill, and tact in presenting in the best order, time, and measure, on subjects within the purported scope of his journal, the literary contributions which he receives, including his own. For my skilled labor, as above defined, I believe myself to be entitled to pecuniary remuneration, whether in the form of the profits of the journal as a business venture, or of a fixed salary. Under this reservation, or rather elucidation, I consider all mercenary literature as corrupt and corrupting. I will, therefore, never insert any contributions having paid for them or knowing their author to have been paid for writing them; nor shall I myself receive pay for inserting any contribution or advertisement; but I will gratuitously insert or advertise what I deem conducive to the interests of my readers, of the community, and of mankind at large under the principle of fair discussion. On condition of my conforming to the above rules and principles according to my best light and highest sense of chivalric honor, I shall avail myself of the privileged postage rates which the press enjoys under the law in the supposition of its being moralizing and free, which rates would otherwise constitute an unwarrantable disbursement of public money, as they are insufficient to defray expenses. Should I ever be conscious of having, in the compilation of any number, departed from the above rules and principles, I shall not send that number through the mails except at full letter-postage rates. So help me God. N—N—."

N. B. I send this suggestion to THE INDEX because the conduct of that journal, under its gentlemanly editor, is already as near an approximation to what I suggest as the business conditions of the press under the present laws will permit. But there are other editors who might, without disparagement to themselves, reprint my suggestion. Even before the law requires such an oath, an editor might voluntarily take it before a public notary, and there run his chance of financial martyrdom for keeping it. Mean must be his subscribers if they did not support him in such a cause. Should an association of journals make the subscription of the above oath the condition of its membership, this alone would so raise the public estimate of the dignity of the press that journals published on another footing would perhaps come to be the ones to suffer under financial difficulties. Advertisements having ceased to be a part of the support of the press, subscribers would have to pay a higher price,—a most wholesome habit for them to acquire. What they would additionally pay in this way, they would more than save by being no more charged, over and above the price of the wares they purchase, for the enormous cost of advertising them. The difficulty of getting unpaid articles of standard ability is a purely imaginary one. We live in a time of so much learning and culture that more men are willing to write, and actually do write, gratuitous contributions of the first order, than all the periodicals put together can possibly find room for. A large part of those valuable contributions are crowded out by inferior paid articles, written by men who, by lounging round editorial rooms, or in some other indirect way independent of their merit, have managed to impose themselves as habitual paid contributors. Among the effusions of school-masters and local poets printed by favor in county papers, many are equal to the best productions of the great English poets, but pass without further notice simply because no publisher drums them.

JULIUS FERRETTE.

VIOLETTA'S DAUGHTER: "And why did Aaron make a golden calf?" Sharp child of three and a half: "Please, miss, because he hadn't got enough gold to make a cow."—Judy.

QUEEN MARGARET of Italy is said to have a pleasant way of always saying and doing the right thing she is not beautiful, but she has that great gift, charm.

Advertisements.

THE PATRONAGE

of the liberal advertising public is respectfully solicited for THE INDEX. The attempt will be honestly made to keep the advertising pages of THE INDEX in entire harmony with its general character and principles, and thus to furnish to the public an advertising medium which shall be not only profitable to its patrons, but also worthy of their most generous support. To this end, all improper or "blind" advertisements, all quack advertisements, and all advertisements believed to be fraudulent or unjust to any one, will be excluded from these columns.

THE INDEX must not be held responsible for any statement made by advertisers, who will in all cases accept the responsibility for their own statements.

ADVERTISING RATES.

For 1 to 12 insertions, 10c per line.
 " 13 " 25 " 8 " "
 " 26 " 51 " 6 " "
 " 52 " " 5 " "

On half-column advertisements, a discount of 10 per cent. will be made; on full-column advertisements, a discount of 25 per cent.

On all advertisements for which cash is paid in advance, a further discount of 25 per cent. on the total, as above calculated, will be made. FRANCIS E. ABBOT, Editor.

TO ADVERTISERS.

The following states the experience of a successful Bookseller who has advertised in THE INDEX:

TOLEDO, Ohio, Sept. 20, 1872.
 TO THE INDEX ASSO., Toledo, O.

Gentlemen,—Having had occasion to advertise in your paper during the past two years quite largely, I take pleasure in stating that I have always obtained very satisfactory returns—better in fact than from book advertisements in any other paper I have advertised in. Not only have I obtained immediate results, but orders have frequently been received months after the insertion of the advertisement, showing that your paper is kept on file and referred to by your readers.

Yours truly,

HENRY S. STEBBINS.

Special arrangements will be made at reduced terms for long-time or extended advertisements. Address

THE INDEX,
 No. 231 WASHINGTON STREET,
 Boston.

CULTURED FREE THOUGHT.

The Index Association,

OFFICE, No. 231 WASHINGTON ST., BOSTON, publish

THE INDEX.

A Weekly Paper devoted to Free and Rational Religion.

It is the object of THE INDEX to give public utterance to the boldest, most cultivated, and best matured thought of the age on all religious questions, and to apply it directly to the social and political amelioration of society.

It is edited by FRANCIS E. ABBOT, with the following list of Editorial Contributors:—

O. B. FROTHINGHAM, New York City.
 WILLIAM J. POTTER, New Bedford, Mass.
 WILLIAM H. SPENCER, Haverhill, Mass.
 MRS. E. D. CHENEY, Jamaica Plain, Mass.
 GEORGE JACOB HOLYOAKE, London, Eng.
 DAVID H. CLARK, Florence, Mass.
 MRS. ELIZABETH CADY STANTON, Tenny, N.J.
 J. L. STODDARD, Boston.
 ELIZUR WRIGHT, Boston.
 C. D. B. MILLS, Syracuse, N.Y.
 W. D. L. SUEUR, Ottawa, Can.
 BENJ. F. UNDERWOOD, Thorndike, Mass.
 ALBERT WARREN KELSEY, St. Louis, Mo.

Every liberal should subscribe for THE INDEX as the best popular exponent of Religious Liberalism. Every Christian minister, and every thinking church-member, should subscribe for it, as the clearest, most candid, and most scholarly exposition of the differences between Free Thought and Evangelical Christianity, and as the best means of becoming well informed of the arguments and the movements which the Church will have to meet in the future.

Almost every number contains a discourse or leading article, which alone is worth the price of one year's subscription.

Prof. MAX MUELLER, of Oxford, England, in a letter to the Editor published in THE INDEX for January 4, 1873, says: "That the want of a journal entirely devoted to Religion in the widest sense of the word should be felt in America—that such a journal should have been started and so powerfully supported by the best minds of your country,—is a good sign of the times. There is no such journal in England, France, or Germany; though the number of so-called religious or theological periodicals is, as you know, very large." And later still "I read the numbers of your INDEX with increasing interest."

Send $3.20 for one year, including postage, or 80 cents for three months on trial.

Address THE INDEX,
 No. 231 Washington Street, Boston.

PUBLICATIONS INDEX TRACTS.

OF THE FREE RELIGIOUS ASSOCIATION.

Freedom and Fellowship in Religion. A volume of ten essays upon speculative and practical problems of religion, by D. A. Wasson, Samuel Longfellow, Samuel Johnson, John Weiss, W. J. Potter, F. E. Abbot, O. B. Frothingham, J. W. Chadwick, T. W. Higginson, and Mrs. E. D. Cheney, and extracts from Addresses by Ralph Waldo Emerson, Lucretia Mott, Robert Dale Owen, Dr. Bartol, Wendell Phillips, Rabbi Wise, Horace Seaver, A. B. Alcott, Lucy Stone, Charles H. Malcom, Julia Ward Howe, and others,—all given on the platform of the Free Religious Association. Price (reduced) $1.50.

"One purpose of this volume is to give an answer to the question, What is the meaning of the Free Religious Association?"

Proceedings of Fifth Annual Meeting, 1873. Contains essays by J. W. Chadwick on "Liberty and the Church in America," by C. D. B. Mills on "Religion as the Expression of a Permanent Sentiment of the Human Mind," and by O. B. Frothingham on "The Religion of Humanity," with addresses by Rowland Connor, Oelia Burleigh, Lucretia Mott, A. B. Alcott, C. A. Bartol, Horace Seaver, Alexander Loom, and others.

Proceedings of Sixth Annual Meeting, 1873. Contains essays by Samuel Johnson on "Freedom in Religion," and by John Weiss on "Religion in Freedom," with addresses by Wm. C. Gannett, Robert Dale Owen, T. W. Higginson, Samuel Longfellow, J. S. Thomas, F. E. Abbot, and Lucretia Mott.

Proceedings of Seventh Annual Meeting, 1874. Contains verbatim reports of President Frothingham's address on "The Validity of the Free Religious Platform," of Dr. Bartol's essay on "The Religious Signs of the Times," of Rabbi Sonnenschein's speech on "Reformed Judaism," and of the statements by Messrs. Oathrop, Abbot, and Higginson of their respective attitudes towards Christianity,—as "Christian," "Anti-Christian," and "Extra-Christian,"—together with the Secretary's Annual Report, and letters from Keahub Chunder Sen, Frederick Douglass, and D. A. Wasson.

Proceedings of Eighth Annual Meeting, 1875. Contains Essays by Wm. C. Gannett, on "The Present Constructive Tendencies in Religion," and by Francis E. Abbot, on "Construction and Destruction in Religion," and addresses by T. W. Higginson, Lucretia Mott, Chas. G. Ames, O. B. Frothingham, B. F. Underwood, S. P. Putnam, and E. S. Morse.

Proceedings of Ninth Annual Meeting, 1876. Contains a full abstract of the interesting discussion at the Business Meeting on the Practical Methods and Work of the Executive Committee; address of the President, O. B. Frothingham; essay by James Parton, on "The Relation of Religion to the State" (or, as he styles it, "Cathedrals and Beer"), with addresses on the subject by Miss Susan H. Wixon and Rev. M. J. Savage; essay by Samuel Longfellow, on "The Relation of Free Religion to Churches," with the addresses that followed it by Prof. Felix Adler, Rev. Henry Blanchard, Rev. Brooke Herford, and John Weiss,—together with letters from Judge Doe, Rev. Joseph Cook, and others, invited to speak.

Proceedings of Tenth Annual Meeting, 1877. Contains Essays by Rev. Wm. B. Alger, on "Steps towards Religious Emancipation in Christendom," and by C. D. B. Mills, Esq., on "Internal Dangers to Free Thought and Free Religion": Addresses by O. B. Frothingham, Wm. Henry Channing, Rabbi Lasker, Dr. J. L. Dudley, and T. W. Higginson; and tenth annual reports of the Executive Committee, Treasurer, etc.

Any one of the above pamphlets of "PROCEEDINGS" sent to any address for Five cents received in postage stamps; and more at the same rate. Sold also for Five cents at the office.

For series of important Tracts see last page of THE INDEX.

These publications are for sale at the office of the Free Religious Association, 231 Washington Street, Boston. The Annual Reports for 1868 and 1871 cannot be supplied, and the supply of others previous to that of 1873 is quite limited and at special rates. Orders by mail may be addressed "Free Religious Association, 231 Washington Street, Boston, Mass."

WM. J. POTTER, Sec. F. R. A.

No. 1.—Truths for the Times, by F. E. Abbot, contains the "Fifty Affirmations" and "Modern Principles." MR. CHARLES DARWIN, author of "The Origin of Species," says, in a letter to the editor not originally intended for publication, but subsequently authorized to be used: "I have now read 'TRUTHS FOR THE TIMES,' and I admire them from my inmost heart; and I agree to almost every word." New Edition. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00.

No. 2.—Fear of the Living God, by O. B. Frothingham, exposes the debasing character of the popular notions of God, and presents conceptions of him that are worthy of the nineteenth century. New Edition. Price 5 cents; 12 copies $6 cents.

No. 3.—Lecture on the Bible, by the Rev. Charles Voysey, of England, is an overwhelming demonstration of the imperfections and errors of the Bible, both in the Old and the New Testaments. New Edition. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00.

No. 4.—Christian Propagandism, by F. E. Abbot, is an exposure of the weakness, costliness, and inefficiency of the System of Foreign Missions. Full of Figures, Facts, and Interesting Extracts. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00.

No. 5.—"God in the Constitution," by Rev. Arthur B. Bradford, opposes the proposed Theological Amendment to the United States Constitution. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00.

No. 6.—"The Sabbath," by Parker Pillsbury, denounces Sabbatarian superstition. New Edition. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00.

No. 7.—"Compulsory Education," by F. E. Abbot, maintains the right of every child to be educated, and the duty of the State to ensure it an education. Price 5 cents; 12 copies 50 cents.

No. 8.—The Present Heaven, by O. B. Frothingham, treats of a subject that interests everybody. New Edition. Price 5 cents; 12 copies 50 cents.

No. 9.—The Christian Amendment, by F. E. Abbot, shows the dangerous character of the attempt to interpolate the Evangelical Christian Creed in the U. S. Constitution. Price 5 cents; 12 copies 50 cents.

No. 10.—The Impeachment of Christianity, by F. E. Abbot. Fifth Ten Thousand. Sent for free distribution to any one who will distribute it, in packages of from five to one hundred copies.

No. 11.—The God of Science, by F. E. Abbot, attempts to show the real influence of modern science upon the idea of God. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00.

No. 12.—Is Romanism Real Christianity? Two essays by Francis W. Newman and F. E. Abbot. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00.

No. 13.—On the Vision of Heaven, by Prof. F. W. Newman, of England, analyzes the Christian conception of Heaven. Price 5 cents; 12 copies 50 cents.

No. 14.—A Study of Religion: The Name and the Thing, by F. E. Abbot, attempts to show that the popular derivation of the word Religion is incorrect; that the popular conceptions of Religion itself are inadequate; and that a new conception of it, based on the Law of Evolution, consistent with absolute Freedom of Thought, and independent even of belief in God, is the necessary condition of the perpetuity of Religion among men. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00.

No. 15.—The Battle of Syracuse. Two Essays by Rev. James Freeman Clarke, D.D., and F. E. Abbot discussing the Authority of Christianity. Price 10 cents; 12 copies for $1.00. Address

THE INDEX, 231 WASHINGTON STREET,
 Boston, Mass.

1 8 7 8.

THE INDEX, A Weekly Journal

DEVOTED TO
FREE RELIGION.
 PUBLISHED BY THE INDEX ASSOCIATION,

AT
 No. 231 Washington Street, Boston.

EDITOR:
 FRANCIS ELLINGWOOD ABBOT.

EDITORIAL CONTRIBUTORS:
 O. B. FROTHINGHAM, New York City.
 W. J. POTTER, New Bedford, Mass.
 W. H. SPENCER, Haverhill, Mass.
 MRS. E. D. CHENEY, Jamaica Plain, Mass.
 GEORGE JACOB HOLYOAKE, England.
 DAVID H. CLARK, Florence, Mass.
 MRS. ELIZABETH CADY STANTON, Tenny, N.J.
 J. L. STODDARD, Boston.
 ELIZUR WRIGHT, Boston.
 C. D. B. MILLS, Syracuse, N.Y.
 W. D. L. SUEUR, Ottawa, Can.
 BENJ. F. UNDERWOOD, Thorndike, Mass.
 ALBERT WARREN KELSEY, St. Louis, Mo.

THE INDEX aims—

To increase general intelligence with respect to religion:

To foster a nobler spirit and quicken a higher purpose, both in society and in the individual:

To substitute knowledge for ignorance, right for wrong, truth for superstition, freedom for slavery, character for creed, catholicity for bigotry, love for hate, humanitarianism for sectarianism, devotion to universal ends for absorption in selfish schemes.

In brief, to hasten the day when Free Religion shall take the place of dogmatism and ecclesiasticism throughout the world, and when the welfare of humanity here and now shall be the aim of all private and public activities.

In addition to its general objects, the practical object to which THE INDEX is specially devoted is the ORGANIZATION OF THE LIBERALS OF THE COUNTRY, for the purpose of securing the more complete and consistent secularization of the political and educational institutions of the United States. The Church must give place to the Republic in the affections of the people. The last vestiges of ecclesiastical control must be wiped out of the Constitutions and Statutes of the several States in order to bring them into harmony with the National Constitution. To accomplish this object, the Liberals must make a united demand, and present an unbroken front, and the chief practical aim of THE INDEX will be henceforth to organize a great NATIONAL PARTY OF FREEDOM. Let every one who believes in this movement give it direct aid by helping to increase the circulation of THE INDEX.

SPECIAL FEATURES.

The publication of a valuable leading paper or essay of a thoughtful character, in each issue, will continue to be one of the most marked features of THE INDEX.

Regular editorial contributions will continue to be furnished by the well-known eminent writers who have already done so much to give to THE INDEX its present high position. Other interesting correspondence, communications, extracts from valuable books and periodicals, and miscellaneous articles, will also be published; and such improvements will be made from time to time as circumstances shall render possible.

AGENTS.

Local Agents for THE INDEX are wanted in every city and town throughout the country. The most liberal terms are offered.

TERMS.

The price of THE INDEX is Three Dollars a year, payable in advance; and 26 cents postage for the year; and at the same rate for shorter periods. All remittances of money must be at the sender's risk, unless forwarded by cheque, registered letter, or post-office money order. The name, with address in full, must be accompanied with the money in each case.

Address THE INDEX,
 No. 231 Washington Street, Boston.

POPULAR BOOKS,

SENT BY MAIL

AT

PUBLISHERS' PRICES!

ORDERS PROMPTLY FILLED.

NO EXTRA CHARGE FOR POSTAGE.

ANY BOOK in the subjoined List, or any other OBTAINABLE BOOK that may be desired, will be forwarded as promptly as possible on receipt of orders accompanied with the CASH.

Orders are respectfully solicited from

all friends of THE INDEX.

ALLOTT (A. BRONSON). Tablets.	1.50
Concord Days.	1.50
Records of a School. A new edition.	1.50
ALLOTT (LOUISA M.). Little Women. Two vols.	2.00
Hospital Sketches and Camp and Fireside Stories.	1.50
An Old-Fashioned Girl.	1.50
Little Men.	1.50
My Boys, &c.	1.50
Shawl-Stage.	1.50
Work; a Story of Experience.	1.75
ARABIAN NIGHTS' ENTERTAINMENTS.	1.50
ARNOLD'S (MATTHEW) Essays in Criticism.	2.00
New Poems.	2.00
Literature and Dogma.	1.50
AUERBAUGH (BERTHOLD). On the Heights.	1.50
Villa Eden; The Country-House on the Rhine.	2.00
Midwinters.	1.00
German Tales.	1.00
BACON'S Essays.	1.35
BAGEHOT on the English Constitution.	2.25
Physics and Politics.	1.50
BAIN (ALEXANDER). Mental Science: A Compendium of Psychology and History of Philosophy.	1.75
Moral Science: A Compendium of Ethics.	1.75
I vol.	1.50
The Science and the Intellect. Third edition.	1.75
I vol.	1.50
BARTLETT'S Dictionary of Americanisms.	2.50
BARTLETT'S Familiar Quotations.	3.00
BARTOL (REV. C. A.). Radical Problems.	2.00
The Rising Faith.	2.00
BASTIAN (H. CHARLTON). The Beginnings of Life. 2 vols.	5.00
BRACKETT (ANNA O.). The Education of American Girls.	1.50
BROOKS (CHARLES T.). Translations. The Layman's Breviary.	2.25
The World-Priest.	2.25
The Tall Student.75
BUBENKES'S Force and Matter.	3.25
BUCKLE (HENRY THOMAS). History of Civilization in England and France, Spain and Scotland. New edition of the entire work, with a complete index. 2 vols.	6.00
CARLYLE'S Works. Cheap edition. Comprising the following: Miscellaneous Essays, 7 vols.; French Revolution, 3 vols.; Frederick the Great, 10 vols.; Cromwell's Letters, &c., 5 vols.; Sartor Resartus, 1 vol.; John Sterling, 1 vol.; Life of Schiller, 1 vol.; Past and Present, 1 vol.; Heroes and Hero Worship, 1 vol.; Latter Day Pamphlets, 1 vol. Any volume sold separately. 31 vols. London, 1871-3. Per vol.90
CARPENTER (DR. W. B.). The Principles of Mental Physiology, with their Applications to the Training and Discipline of the Mind, and the Study of its Morbid Conditions.	3.00
CERVANTES' Don Quixote.	1.50
CHANNING (WM. ELLERY, D.D.). The Perfect Life. In Twelve Discourses. Edited from his manuscripts by his nephew, Wm. Henry Channing.	1.50
CHANNING (WM. ELLERY). Thoreau: The Poet-Naturalist. With Memorial Verse.	2.00
CHENEY (MRS. E. D.). Patience. A Series of Thirty Games for the Fireside.	1.00
Social Games. A new Series of Games for Parties, uniform with Patience.	1.00
Sally Williams, the Mountain Girl. Illustrated.	1.50
CLARKE (JAMES FREEMAN). Ten Great Religions.	3.00
Common-Sense in Religion.	2.00
CLARKE (DR. E. H.). Sex in Education.	1.25
CLODD (EDWARD). The Childhood of the World.75
COBBE (FRANCES POWER). Studies New and Old, of Ethical and Social Subjects. Descriptive in Morals, and other Essays.	5.00
The Religious Demands of the Age.30
COONWAY (MONOURE D.). The Earthward Pilgrimage.	1.75
CORRELATION and Conservation of Forces: A Series of Expositions by Grove, Helmholtz, Mayer, Faraday, Liebig and Carpenter: with an introduction by Edward L. Youmans, M.D. 1 vol.	2.00
CULTURE DEMANDED BY MODERN LIFE: Its True Aims and Requirements: A Series of Addresses. By Tyndall, Huxley, Whewell, Faraday, Spencer, Draper, Masson, Lyell, &c. Edited by Edward L. Youmans.	2.00
DALL (MRS. CAROLINE H.). The College, the Market, and the Court; or, Woman's Relation to Education, Employment, and Citizenship.	2.00

Historical Pictures Retouched; a Volume of Miscellaneous. In two parts. Part I. "Studies, Pictures, and Fancies."	1.00
DARWIN'S Origin of Species.	2.00
The Descent of Man. 2 vols.	4.00
Journal of Researches.	3.00
Emotional Expression of Man and the Lower Animals.	3.50
The Variation of Animals and Plants under Domestication. 2 vols., illustrated.	6.00
DESCARTES (RENE). Discourse on the Method of Rightly conducting the Reason and Seeking Truth in the Sciences.	3.25
DICKENS' Child's History of England.	1.50
DUBHING (JULIA). Philosophers and Poets. A Study.	2.00
ELIOT'S (GEORGE) Novels. Household Edition. 5 vols., each.	1.00
Adam Bede.	1.00
Scenes from a Marriage.	1.00
The Mill on the Floss.	1.00
Felix Holt.	1.00
Silas Marner and Scenes of Clerical Life.	1.00
The Same. Library Edition. 2 vols.	3.50
Middlemarch. 2 vols.	3.50
Wit and Wisdom of.	1.25
The Spanish Gypsy.	1.50
EMERSON'S (E. W.) Essays. First Series.	1.50
Essays. Second Series.	1.50
Miscellaneous.	1.50
Representative Men.	1.50
English Traits.	1.50
Conduct of Life.	1.50
Poems. With Portrait.	1.50
May-day and Other Pieces.	1.50
Essays. Blue and Gold.	1.50
Poems. Blue and Gold.	1.25
Prose Works. 2 vols.	5.00
Society and Solitude.	1.50
EVANS (E. P., Ph. D.). First Historical Transformations of Christianity. From the French of Athanasius Coquerel the Younger.	1.50
The Life and Works of Gotthold Ephraim Lessing. Translated from the German of Adolf Stahr. 2 vols.	5.00
FARRAR'S Critical History of Free Thought, in reference to the Christian Religion.	2.00
FEUERBAUGH (LUDWIG). The Essence of Christianity. "George Eliot's" translation.	2.00
FISKE'S (JOHN) Myths and Myth-Makers. Cosmic Philosophy.	2.00
FROTHINGHAM (O. B.). Religion of Humanity.	1.50
Child's Book of Religion.	1.00
Life of Theodore Parker.	3.00
FULLER'S (MARGARET) Complete Works, including Memoirs by Emerson, Channing, and others. A new edition. 6 vols.	9.00
GALTON (FRANCIS). Hereditary Genius. An Inquiry into its Laws and Consequences.	2.00
GOETHE'S Faust. Translated into English Verse by Bayard Taylor. 2 vols. Per vol.	5.00
Elective Affinities.	1.25
Wilhelm Meister. Translated by Thomas Carlyle. Portrait of Goethe. 2 vols.	2.50
Bernard and Dorothea. Translated by Helen Frothingham.	1.00
GREG'S (W. B.) Kingdom of Life.	2.00
Literary and Social Judgments.	2.00
Creed of Christendom.	7.00
GREY'S LIFE. Compiled from Family Documents, Private Memoranda, and Original Letters to and from Various Friends. By Mrs. Grote. Second Edition. With Portrait.	5.00
HAMERTON (PHILIP G.) A Painter's Camp. Book I. In England. Book II. In Scotland. Book III. In France.	1.50
Thoughts about Art.	2.00
The Unknown River.	6.00
The Intellectual Life.	2.00
Chapters on Animals.	4.00
HAMILTON (GAIL). Our World. Part Second.	1.00
Child World. Part First.	1.50
HAMILTON'S Lectures.	2.50
1. Metaphysical Lectures.	2.50
2. Logical Lectures.	2.50
HAWTHORNE'S (NATHANIEL) Works. New Illustrated Library Edition. Nine vols.	2.00
For vol.	2.00
Twice-Told Tales.	2.00
Mosses from an Old Manse.	2.00
The Scarlet Letter, and The Blithedale Romance.	2.00
The House of the Seven Gables, and The Snow Image.	2.00
The Marble Faun.	2.00
The English Note-Books.	2.00
The American Note-Books.	2.00
The French and Italian Note-Books.	2.00
Our Old Home, and Septimius Felton.	2.00
HIGGINSON'S (T. W.) Out-Door Papers.	1.50
Malbone. An Oldport Romance.	1.50
Army Life in a Black Regiment.	1.50
Auntie Esthers.	2.00
Oldport Days.	2.50
HOWELL'S (WILLIAM D.) Their Wedding Journey.	2.00
Suburban Sketches.	2.00
Venetian Life.	2.00
Italian Journeys.	2.00
A Chance Acquaintance.	1.50
HUGO'S (V.) New Novel, "Ninety-Three".	1.75
HUMBOLDT (ALEXANDER VON). Life of. Translated from the German. 2 vols., with three portraits.	10.00
HUME'S (DAVID) Essays and Life.	1.50
HUNT'S (MRS. HELEN). Verses.	1.25
Bits of Travel.	1.50
HUXLEY'S Man's Place in Nature.	1.25
On the Origin of Species.	1.00
More Criticisms on Darwin and Administrative Nihilism.50
A Manual of the Anatomy of Vertebrate Animals.	2.50
Lay Sermons, Addresses, and Reviews.	1.75
INGELOW'S (JEAN) Poems.	2.25
The Monitions of the Unseen.	1.50
Songs of Seven.	2.50
INGELOW'S (JEAN) Prose. Of the Skeltons.	1.75
Studies for Stories.	1.25
Stories told to a Child. First and Second Series.	1.35
A Sister's Bye-Hours.	1.25
Moses the Fairy: A Story.	1.25
INGERSOLL'S (ROBT. G.) The Gods and Other Lectures.	2.00
INTERNATIONAL SCIENTIFIC SERIES. No. I. Forms of Water, in Clouds, Rain, Rivers, Ice, and Glaciers. By John Tyndall.	1.50
No. II. Physics and Politics; or, Thoughts on the Application of the Principles of "Natural Selection," and "Inheritance" to Political Society. By Walter Bagehot.	1.50

III. Foods. By Dr. Edward Smith.	1.75
IV. Mind and Body. The Theories of their Relations. By Alex. Bain.	1.50
V. The Study of Sociology. By Herbert Spencer, Esq.	1.50
VI. The New Chemistry. By Josiah P. Cooke, Jr.	2.00
VII. The Conservation of Energy. By Balfour Stewart, with an Appendix treating of the Vital and Mental Applications of the Doctrine.	1.50
VIII. Animal Locomotion; or, Walking, Swimming, and Flying, with a Dissertation on Aeronautics. By J. Bell Pettigrew.	1.75
IX. Responsibility in Mental Disease. By Henry Maudsley, M.D.	1.50
JERROLD (DOUGLAS). Fireside Saints, Mr. Claude's Breakfast Talk, and other Papers.	1.50
JOHNSON'S (SAMUEL) Oriental Religions, and their Relation to Universal Religion. India.	5.00
JOSEPHUS. The whole Works of Flavius Josephus, the Jewish Historian.	2.50
JOWETT. The Dialogues of Plato. Translated into English, with Analysis and Introductions by B. Jowett, M.A. Master of Balliol College, Oxford, and Regius Professor of Greek. Four vols.	12.50
KERR (ORPHEUS C.). Versabilities, Poems, Patriotic, Sentimental and Humorous.	2.00
LEWIS (W. E. H.). History of the Rise and Influence of the Spirit of Rationalism in Europe. 2 vols.	4.00
History of European Morals from Augustus to Charlemagne. 2 vols.	6.00
LEGGE'S Confucius' Life and Teachings.	4.00
Confucius and Chinese Classics.	2.00
LESSING'S (G. E.) Nathan the Wise. Translated by Ellen Frothingham.	1.50
LEWIS'S Physiology of Common Life. 2 vols.	2.00
Biographical History of Philosophy, from its Origin in Greece down to the Present Day. 2 vols.	4.00
Problems of Life and Mind. The Foundations of a Creed.	3.00
LEWIS (G. E.) The Story of Goethe's Life.	1.50
LEWIN (REV. RAPHAEL, D.D.). What is Judaism? or, a Few Words to the Jews.	1.00
LONGFELLOW'S (H. W.) Poems. Portrait. 2 vols.	4.00
Prose Works. Portrait.	4.00
LOWELL'S (J. E.) Poems. 2 vols.	4.00
The Biglow Papers. First Series.	1.50
The Biglow Papers. Second Series.	1.50
Among my Books.	2.00
My Study Windows.	2.00
LOWELL (MRS. A. C.) Poems for Children.75
LUBBOCK (SIR JOHN). Origin of Civilization, and the Primitive Condition of Man. Pre-historic Times.	2.00
LYELL'S Principles of Geology. 2 vols.	5.00
MACDONALD (GEORGE) The Vicar's Daughter.	1.50
MANN (HORACE). The Life of Horace Mann. By his Wife.	3.00
Lectures and Annual Reports on Education. Annual Reports on Education, from 1839 to 1868.	3.00
Thoughts Selected from the Writings of Horace Mann.	1.35
MARTINEAU (JAMES). Essays, Philosophical and Theological. 2 vols. Per vol.	2.50
MAURICE (REV. F. D.) The Ground and Object of Hope for Mankind.75
MERIVALE'S (CHARLES) Conversion of the Roman Empire.	1.50
Conversion of the Northern Nations.	1.50
MILL (JOHN STUART). Dissertations and Discussions. 4 vols., each.	2.25
The Examination of the Philosophy of Sir William Hamilton. 2 vols., each.	2.25
The Positive Philosophy of Auguste Comte. Political Economy. New and revised edition.	2.50
The Subjection of Women—Essay on Liberty—how in one vol.	2.50
Representative Government.	1.50
Autobiography.	2.25
Memorial Volume. His Life and Works.	1.50
Three Essays on Religion.	2.50
MILLER (JOAQUIN). Songs of the Sierras.	1.50
Songs of the Sun Lands.	1.50
MIVART (ST. GEO.) On the Genesis of Species.	1.75
MORLEY (PROF. JOHN). Voltaire.	2.00
Rousseau. 2 vols.	5.00
MOULTON (LOUISE CHANDLER). Bed-Time Stories.	1.50
MUELLER (MAX, M.A.) Lectures on the Science of Language. First Series.	2.50
The Same. Second Series.	3.50
Chips from a German Workshop. Vol. I. Essays on the Science of Religion. Vol. II. Essays on Mythology, Traditions, and Customs. Vol. III. Essays on Literature, Biography, and Antiquities.	2.50
Three vols. Price per volume.	2.50
Lectures on the Science of Religion.	2.00
NASSY (PETROLEUM V.) Swingin' Round the Circle.	1.50
Ekkoes from Kentucky.	1.50
NEWMAN (FRANCIS W.) A History of the Hebrew Monarchy.	4.00
Orthodox Union: Essay towards a Church of the Future, as the Organization of Philanthropy.	1.75
Theism, Doctrinal and Practical.	4.25
PARKER (THEODORE) A Discourse of Matters Pertaining to Religion.	1.50
Speeches, Addresses, and Occasional Sermons. 3 vols.	4.50
Additional Speeches, Addresses, and Occasional Sermons. 2 vols.	3.00
Critical and Miscellaneous Writings.	1.50
Historic Americans—Franklin, Washington, Adams, and Jefferson. With an introduction by Rev. O. B. Frothingham.	1.50
The two Christmas Celebrations—A.D. I. and MDCCLV. A Christmas Story.50
PARSONS (THEOPHILUS). The Infinite and the Finite.	1.00
PHELPS'S (ELIZABETH STUART). The Gates Ajar.	1.50
The Tretty Book.	1.50
Men, Women, and Ghosts.	1.50
Hedged in.	1.50
The Silent Partner.	1.50
What to Wear?	1.00
PROCTER'S (ADELAIDE A.) Poems. Portrait. Cabinet Edition.	2.00

PROCTOR (RICHARD A.) Other Worlds than Ours; the Plurality of Worlds, and the Light of Recent Scientific Researches. With Colored Plates.	1.50
Light Science for Leisure Hours. A Series of Familiar Essays on Scientific Subjects, Natural Phenomena.	1.75
Essays on Astronomy: A Series of Papers on Planets and Meteors, the Sun, &c. With 10 Plates and 24 Woodcuts.	4.00
The Moon, her Motions, Aspects, and Physical Conditions, with Thirty Lunar Photographs and many Plates, Charts, &c.	5.00
The Expanse of Heaven.	2.00
BENAN'S Life of Jesus.	1.75
ROSSETTI (CHRISTINA G.) Dante.	1.50
SCHERLEN (H.) Spectrum Analysis, in its Application to Terrestrial Substances, and the Physical Constitution of the Heavenly Bodies.	5.00
SCIENCE PRIMERS:
1. Introductory. By Prof. Huxley, F.R.S.50
2. Chemistry. By Prof. Roscoe.50
3. Physics. By Balfour Stewart. With Illustrations.50
4. Physical Geography. By Archibald Geikie, LL.D., F.R.S., flexible cloth.50
SCOTT'S Waverley Novels. 25 vols.	11.25
SCOTT'S (THOMAS) The English Life of Jesus. Second Edition.	2.00
SMILES'S (SAMUEL) Self-Help.	1.50
SPENCER (HERBERT). Education, Intellectual, Moral, and Physical.	1.25
First Principles.	2.00
Essays: Moral, Political, and Aesthetic.	2.50
Illustrations of Universal Progress. A Selection of his best Papers.	2.50
Social Statics; or, The Conditions Essential to Human Happiness Specified, and the First of them Developed.	1.50
The Principles of Biology. 2 vols.	5.00
The Principles of Psychology. 2 vols.	5.00
Philosophy of Style.50
Recent Discussions in Science, Philosophy, and Morals. New and enlarged edition.	2.00
Sociology.	1.50
Descriptive Sociology. Parts I, II, and III, each.	4.00
Life, Correspondence and Ethics.	4.00
Universal Progress.	2.50
STOWE (HARRIET BEECHER). Pink and White Tarn.	1.50
Uncle Tom's Cabin.40
STRAUSS (D. F.) The Old Faith and the New.	1.00
New Life of Jesus. Authorized translation. 2 vols.	12.00
TAINES'S (H. A.) History of English Literature. 2 vols.	7.50
The Class-Room Taine. History of English Literature. Abridged and Edited by John Fluke.	1.50
TENNISON'S (ALFRED) Poems.	1.75
THACKERAY'S (W. M.) Novels. Household Edition. Complete in 9 volumes. Per vol.	1.25
Vanity Fair.	1.25
The Newcomes.	1.25
Adventures of Philip Pendennis.	1.25
The Virginians.	1.25
Edmond, and Lovell the Widower.	1.25
Miscellaneous Writings. Household Edition. Uniform with the Novels. Complete in 5 vols. With new Portrait. Per vol.	1.25
This edition includes all the matter in the latest English editions, with many additions, thus making it, with the novels, the cheapest and most complete Thackeray in the market.
1. Barry Lyndon, Hogarty Diamond, &c.	1.25
2. Paris, and Irish Sketch-Books, &c.	1.25
3. Smoke, Sketches, Denis Duval, &c.	1.25
4. Four Georges, Humors, &c.	1.25
5. Catherine, Christmas Books, and Unprinted Pieces.	1.25
THAXTER'S (MRS. CELIA) Among the Isles of Shoals.	1.50
THOREAU'S (H. D.) Walden; or, Life in the Woods.	2.00
Excursions in Field and Forest. Portrait.	2.00
The Maine Woods.	2.00
Cape Cod.	2.00
Letters.	2.00
A Yankee in Canada.	2.00
A Week on the Concord and Merrimack Rivers.	2.00
TYLER (EDWARD B.) The Early History of Mankind.	2.50
Primitive Culture. 2 vols.	5.00
TYNDALL (JOHN). Faraday as a Discoverer.	1.00
Fragment of Science for Uneducated People.	2.50
Light and Electricity.	1.25
Hours of Exercise in the Alps.	2.00
Heat as a Mode of Motion.	2.00
On Sound.	2.00
Radiant Heat.	2.00
Forms of Water.	1.50
Lectures on Light.	1.50
Proceedings at the Faraday Banquet to Prof. Tyndall.50
Lessons in Electricity.	1.50
Address before British Assoc'n at Belfast.50
TYTLER (SARAH). Old Masters and their Pictures.	1.50
Modern Painters and their Paintings.	1.50
VOYSEY (REV. CHARLES). The Ring and the Stone. Vols. I. and V., each.	5.00
Vols. III, IV, and VI, each.	1.75
WARNER'S (CHARLES D.) My Summer in a Garden.	1.00
Sauterlings.	1.50
Back-Log Studies.	2.00
WEISS (JOHN). American Religion.	1.50
Life of Theodore Parker. 2 vols.	6.00
WHIPPLE'S (E. P.) Literature and Life.	1.50
Essays and Reviews.	3.50
Character and Characteristic Men.	1.50
The Literature of the Age of Elizabeth.	1.50
Success and its Conditions.	1.50
Washington and the Revolution.30
WHITNEY'S (MRS. A. D. T.) A Summer in Leslie Goldthwaite's Life.	1.50
We Girls: A Home Story.	1.50
The Literature of the Age of Elizabeth.	1.50
The Other Girls.	1.50
Fancies. A volume of Poems.	1.50
WHITTIER'S (JOHN G.) Poems. 2 vols.	4.00
Child Life.	2.00
ADDRESS:
THE INDEX,
331 Washington St., Boston.

GIRLS—5 nice perforated notions for fancy work 10 cts. J. W. EUSSELL, Newton, Mass.

$66 a week in your own town. Terms and $4 outfit free. Address H. HALLITT & Co., Portland, Maine.

$5 to $20 per day at home. Samples worth $5 free. Address STRINSON & Co., Portland, Maine.

GOLD Any worker can make $11 a day at home. Costly outfit free. Address TRUB & Co., Augusta, Maine.

$125 a month and expenses to Agents. Send stamp for terms. S. C. FOSTER & Co., Cincinnati, O.

E. A. SAWTELLE,
PIANO-FORTE TUNER.

Fifteen years' experience. Satisfaction warranted. Organs skillfully tuned and regulated. Orders left at THE INDEX office, or at Oliver Ditson & Co.'s, 451 Washington St., Boston.

THE INDEX
IN ENGLAND.

THE INDEX will be forwarded free by post to any part of the United Kingdom on receipt of an annual subscription of Fifteen Shillings. For Half Year, Eight Shillings. Remittances should be made by International P.O. Order payable to Francis Ellingwood Abbot.

Address THE INDEX,
231 Washington Street, Boston, U.S.A.

PAYNE'S AGE OF REASON

is an enterprising, 8-page, Liberal, Family Paper, devoted to the affairs of this world, and published in the interest of the people now on earth.

Editorially, it labors to free mankind from the bondage of priestcraft, and all forms of superstition. It does not believe in churches or creeds. It has no reverence for bibles or man-made gods, and opposes all attempts to impoverish this world by laying up treasures in another.

It has a variety of Departments, is chaste and pure in its tone, and in all respects aims to be a First-rate Liberal Paper.

PAYNE'S AGE OF REASON is published weekly, at One Dollar a year, or it will be mailed one, two, or three months on trial for ten cents per month. We pay the postage, and stop the paper at the expiration of the subscription. Address SEYMOUR WILSON PAYNE, 141 Eighth St., New York.

NEW BOOKS

TO LOAN.

Sent to all parts of the United States. Booksellers and Newsdealers act as our agents. Better accommodations for general readers, even in small towns, than afforded by the large libraries of the great cities.

We supply promptly almost any book called for, and in any number which the demand requires.

All the leading Literary and Scientific Magazines loaned—the reading of a dozen for the cost of one.

Bookbuyers are offered the greatest inducements to be found anywhere in the United States. We issue a Semi-Weekly Catalogue. Our complete Catalogue will be sent post-paid for 20 cents, or free to any one buying to the amount of $1.00 or more.

AMERICAN BOOK EXCHANGE,
85 BEEKMAN STREET,
NEW YORK.

TO THE AMERICAN PAT-RONS OF
CHOICE LITERATURE.

We have made arrangements with Messrs. CHAPMAN & HALL, London, England, for the right to publish an American Edition of

The Fortnightly Review,
Edited by JOHN MORLEY,

and are now publishing this celebrated Monthly Magazine, from a special duplicate set of stereotype plates, which are forwarded from England so promptly as to enable us to produce each month, not only an exact facsimile of this able Review, but to publish it almost at the same time the original is from England. It is in every respect equal to the London issue, at about half the original price. This effort will place in the hands of American readers the freshest utterances of leading thinkers on the issues with a promptitude unequalled. The comments of a large number of the best European thinkers on Science, Philosophy, Literature, Politics, and Miscellaneous Matters of general interest cannot fail to be appreciated and encouraged by thoughtful American readers. The following are a few of the contributors:—

Matthew Arnold, Alfred R. Wallace,
Herbert Spencer, Frederick Harrison,
Goldwin Smith, Prof. Tyndall,
Right Hon. Lyon Playfair, Prof. Huxley,
Right Hon. W. E. Gladstone, Prof. Darwin,
Lionel A. Tallemaiche, Author of Supernatural Religion,
M. E. Grant Duff, M.P., Sir John Lubbock,
Hon. Robert Lowe, Anthony Trollope,
Leslie Stephen, T. Adolphus Trollope,
John Morley (the Editor), Sir H. S. Maine,
G. H. Lewes, Sir David Wedderburn,

AND NUMEROUS OTHERS.

Subscription Price, $5.00 per Year.

Published every month by the ROSE-BELFORD PUBLISHING CO., 60 York Street, Toronto, Ont.

TO BOOK-BUYERS.

Please examine the revised list of POPULAR BOOKS on the opposite side of this page. Any OBTAINABLE BOOK NOT IN THIS LIST will be furnished to order. Address THE INDEX, 231 Washington St., Boston.

A CHEAP OFFER.

A COMPLETE SET OF INDEX TRACTS, from No. 1 to 15 inclusive, will be mailed to any address on the prepayment of 25 CENTS. Address THE INDEX, No. 231 Washington St., Boston, Mass.

WEST NEWTON

English and Classical School.

The twenty-fifth school year of this Family and Day School for both sexes will begin WEDNESDAY, Sept. 19, 1877. For Circular and information apply to

NATH'L T. ALLEN,
West Newton, Mass.

THE INDEX AS AN
ADVERTISING MEDIUM.

Testimony of one who has tried it.

F. W. REESE, Iowa, Jan. 5, 1878.
... THE INDEX is the best advertising medium which I have tried. ...
E. C. WALKER.

PHOTOGRAPHS OF
COL. INGERSOLL!

Down to hard times prices. Cards, 15 cents each; 2 for 25 cents; 5 for 50 cents. Cabinet size, 25 cents each; 3 for 40 cents. Send stamp for club list of Free Thought and Scientific papers.

E. C. WALKER,
Lock-Box B, Florence, Iowa.

BOUND VOLUMES OF THE INDEX for

1 8 7 7,

Complete for the Past Year, are now ready for delivery at this Office. Sent by express at the purchaser's expense. Price $3.50, in advance. Address THE INDEX, 231 Washington Street, Boston.

THE BEST PORTRAIT OF THOMAS PAINE.

Engraved by the famous W. Sharpe from Romney's celebrated portrait—
Heliotype Copy

by James R. Osgood & Co., of Boston. This is a beautiful work of art, and by all odds the very best likeness of Thomas Paine to be found. It is 10 1/2 inches in size, and will be mailed post-paid on receipt of $1.00. Address THE INDEX, 231 Washington Street, Boston.

PENNSYLVANIA RAILROAD.
GREAT THROUGH LINE
AND UNITED STATES MAIL ROUTE.

The attention of the travelling public is respectfully invited to some of the merits of this great highway, in the confident assertion and belief that no other line can offer equal inducements as a route of through travel. In

CONSTRUCTION AND EQUIPMENT

THE PENNSYLVANIA RAILROAD stands confessedly at the head of American railways. The track is double the entire length of the line, of steel rails laid on heavy oak ties, which are embedded in a foundation of rock ballast eighteen inches in depth. All bridges are of iron or stone, and built upon the most approved plans. Its passenger cars, while eminently safe and substantial, are at the same time models of comfort and elegance.

THE SAFETY APPLIANCES in use on this line well illustrate the far-seeing and liberal policy of its management, in accordance with which the utility only of an improvement and not its cost has been the question of consideration. Among many may be noticed

The Block System of Safety Signals, Janney Coupler, Buffer, and Platform.

The Wharton Patent Switch, and the Westinghouse Air-Brake, forming in conjunction with a perfect double track and road-bed a combination of safeguards against accidents which have rendered them practically impossible.

Pullman Palace Cars

are run on all Express Trains from New York, Philadelphia, Baltimore, and Washington, to Chicago, Cincinnati, Louisville, Indianapolis, and St. Louis.

WITHOUT CHANGE,

and to all the principal points in the far West and South with but one change of cars. Connections are made in Union Depots, and are assured to all important points. The Scenery of the Pennsylvania Route is admitted to be unsurpassed in the world for grandeur, beauty, and variety. Superior refreshment facilities are provided. Employees are courteous and attentive, and it is an inevitable result that a trip by the Pennsylvania Railroad must form

A Pleasing and Memorable Experience.

Tickets for sale at the lowest rates at the Ticket Offices of the Company in all important cities and towns.

FRANK THOMSON, L. P. FARMER,
General Manager, General Passenger Agent.
C. B. HALDEMAN, New England Agent,
203 and 205 Washington St., Boston, Mass.

MISS DEVEREUX' BOARD-
ING AND DAY SCHOOL FOR YOUNG
LADIES AND CHILDREN, at Irvington-on-Hudson, will re-open on Monday, Sept. 17, 1877. Miss Devereux refers, among others, to the following gentlemen: Rev. Orville Dewey, Sheffield, Mass.; Mr. A. C. Richards, Irvington, N.Y.; Mr. H. B. Bishop, Irvington, N.Y.; Mr. Wm. H. Orton, Free. W. U. Telegraph Co., N.Y.

POSITIVISM!
AN EPITOME OF THE

Positive Philosophy and Religion,

Published by the Society of Humanity in the city of New York, contains the clearest statement of the subject ever made; also, Harriet Martineau's masterly defence of her religious convictions; and the Positive Classification of the Sciences, by T. B. Wakeman, etc., etc.

Send for it (enclosing 25 cents in postage stamps) to

HUGH BYRON BROWN,
President of the Society,
No. 141 8th St., N.Y. City.

LECTURES AND SERMONS.

BY

JOHN W. CHADWICK.

THIRD SERIES.

1. The Simplicity of True Religion.
2. The Rising Faith.
3. Fate and Freedom.
4. The Child Jesus.
5. The Angel Song.
6. Future Punishment.
7. The Sacred Scriptures.

The following numbers of the first and second series can also be supplied: Best Use of Sunday, Higher Reverence, Self-Respect, God on Our Side, Economy and Waste, Piety of Modern Science, Immortal Life, Moral Aspects of Belief in Immortality, Idealizing the Meal, The Coming Man, & Redemptive Church.

Sent to any address, postage paid, at 5 cents per copy, by

JAMES MILLER,
778 Broadway, New York.

A NOTABLE TREATISE WOMAN SUFFRAGE.

THE COUNTERFEIT AND THE TRUE:

Reasons for Opposing Both.

BY

REAR-ADMIRAL MAXSE,

Of the British Royal Navy.

This is a little book of 74 pages, with neat paper covers, published in London, and presenting the reasons why a cultivated English gentleman is opposed to Woman Suffrage. It ought to be read and pondered by all who are interested in that question, on either side. Price, 25 cents. For sale at the office of THE INDEX, 231 Washington St., Boston.

GOOD PHOTOGRAPHS

OF

O. B. FROTHINGHAM,

T. W. HIGGINSON,

W. J. POTTER,

W. H. SPENCER,

F. W. NEWMAN,

CHAS. VOYSEY,

A. W. STEVENS,

R. H. RANNEY,

F. E. ABBOT,

Are now for sale at the office of THE INDEX, and will be mailed postpaid to any address on receipt of price. Single Photographs, 25 cents each; complete Set of Nine Photographs, $1.50.

Address, THE INDEX,
No. 231 Washington St., Boston, Mass.

FREE RELIGIOUS ASSOCIATION.

Send to Office at 231 Washington St., Boston, Mass., for

TRACTS.

- I. TAXATION OF CHURCH PROPERTY, by James Parton. 5 cts.; ten, 20 cts.; one hundred, $1.50.
- II. THE BIBLE AND SCIENCE, by John Weiss.
- III. THE SYMPATHY OF RELIGIONS, by T. W. Higginson. Enlarged edition.
- IV. TRANSCENDENTALISM, by Theodore Parker. Never before published.
- V. THE PUBLIC SCHOOL QUESTION, as understood by a Catholic American citizen (Bishop McQuaid) and by a Liberal American citizen (F. E. Abbot). (Two Horticultural Hall Lectures, Feb. 12 and 20, 1876.)

VI. HOW SHALL WE KEEP SUNDAY? An Answer in Four Parts: 1. Sunday in the Bible. 2. Sunday in Church History. 3. Sunday in the Massachusetts Laws. 4. The Workingman's Sunday. By Charles K. Whipple, Minot J. Savage, Charles E. Pratt, and Wm. C. Gannett.

Nos. II, III, IV, V, VI, 10 cts. each; ten for 80 cts.; one hundred, $8.

REASON AND REVELATION, by W. J. Potter. 5 cts. (Ten for 50 cts.; one hundred, $1.50.)

PROCEEDINGS OF THE F. R. A. ANNUAL MEETINGS for 1872, '73, '74, '75, '76, and '77, Five cents each.

FREEDOM AND FELLOWSHIP IN RELIGION, a volume of essays and addresses representing the F. R. A. platform. $1.50.

SEND ONE DOLLAR

For a handsome Certificate of Membership as an

ANNUAL MEMBER

of the NATIONAL LIBERAL LEAGUE.

For TWENTY-FIVE DOLLARS, a still larger Certificate of Membership as a

LIFE MEMBER,

Will be sent to any person; and individuals cannot render more efficient assistance to the National Liberal League than by making themselves Annual or Life Members of it.

The following extracts from the Constitution of the National Liberal League explain the privileges of membership:—

ARTICLE IV.—Any person who shall pay one dollar into the treasury shall be entitled to a certificate, signed by the President and Secretary, as an annual member of the National Liberal League. Any person who shall pay twenty-five dollars or more into the treasury shall be entitled to a similar certificate as a life-member. All the persons present as members at the Centennial Congress of Liberals, at which this Constitution was adopted, are hereby declared permanent or charter-members of the National Liberal League.

ARTICLE V.—All charter-members and life-members of the National Liberal League, and all duly accredited delegates from local auxiliary Liberal Leagues organized in accordance with the provisions of this Constitution, shall be entitled to seats and votes in the Annual Congress. Annual members of the National Liberal League shall be entitled to seats, but not to votes, in the Annual Congress.

Address NATIONAL LIBERAL LEAGUE,
231 Washington Street, Boston.

ORGANIZE!

CHARTERS

For Local Auxiliary Liberal Leagues, conferring the privilege of representation by five delegates in the Annual Congress of the National Liberal League, will be promptly sent on application, according to the following provisions of Constitution of the same:—

LOCAL AUXILIARY LIBERAL LEAGUES.

ARTICLE XIII.—The Board of Directors shall have authority, as often as they receive a written application signed by ten or more persons and accompanied by ten dollars, to issue a charter for the formation of a local auxiliary Liberal League.

ARTICLE XV.—Local auxiliary Liberal Leagues organized under charters issued by the Board of Directors shall be absolutely independent in the administration of their own local affairs. The effect of their charters shall be simply to unite them in cordial fellowship and efficient co-operation of the freest kind with the National Liberal League and with other local Leagues. All votes of the Annual Congress, and all communications of the Board of Directors, shall possess no more authority or influence over them than lies in the intrinsic wisdom of the words themselves.

ARTICLE XVI.—Every local auxiliary Liberal League organized in accordance with the provisions of this Constitution shall be entitled to send its President and Secretary and three other members as delegates to the Annual Congress.

These Charters are beautifully printed on the best of paper. Adorned with the handsome Seal of the National Liberal League, they will, if tastefully framed, make a fine ornament for any hall.

Address NATIONAL LIBERAL LEAGUE
231 Washington Street, Boston.

CIRCULATE IT EVERYWHERE!

The new Liberal League Tract of 34 pages, entitled,

"PATRIOTIC ADDRESS,"

contains:

1. PATRIOTIC ADDRESS of the National Liberal League to the people of the United States.
2. CHIEF RESOLUTIONS of the League.
3. PROTEST of the League against shutting the International Exhibition on Sundays.
4. CONSTITUTION and List of Officers.
5. EXTRACTS from Approving Letters by Distinguished Citizens.

This is the Liberal's best CAMPAIGN DOCUMENT in the great impending contest over amending the Constitution of the United States with reference to the school question. It should be in the hands of EVERY VOTER, and has been published expressly for gratuitous distribution by earnest friends of State Secularization.

Local Liberal Leagues

Cannot do better than to order this Tract by the quantity, as an excellent auxiliary in their local agitation.

INDIVIDUAL LIBERALS

Cannot do better than to use them privately, as opportunity offers.

Promptly mailed, at the bare cost of paper, press-work, and postage, on the following terms:—

TEN COPIES,.....	.35
TWENTY-FIVE COPIES,.....	.60
FIFTY ".....	.75
ONE HUNDRED ".....	1.25
TWO HUNDRED ".....	2.40
THREE HUNDRED ".....	3.60
FIVE HUNDRED ".....	6.00
ONE THOUSAND ".....	12.00

N. B.—Packages of over 100 copies will be sent by express at the expense of the purchaser, without any charge for postage.

Address NATIONAL LIBERAL LEAGUE
231 Washington Street, Boston.

The Index.

Three Dollars a Year.

LIBERTY AND LIGHT.

Single Copies Seven Cents.

VOLUME 9.

BOSTON, MASS., THURSDAY, MARCH 21, 1878.

WHOLE NO. 430.

NATIONAL LIBERAL LEAGUE.

PLATFORM

For the Presidential Election of 1880,

ADOPTED AT ROCHESTER, N.Y., OCT. 26, 1877.

1. TOTAL SEPARATION OF CHURCH AND STATE, to be guaranteed by amendment of the United States Constitution: including the equitable taxation of church property, secularization of the public schools, abrogation of Sabbatarian laws, abolition of chaplaincies, prohibition of public appropriations for religious purposes, and all other measures necessary to the same general end.

2. NATIONAL PROTECTION FOR NATIONAL CITIZENS, in their equal civil, political, and religious rights: to be guaranteed by amendment of the United States Constitution, and afforded through the United States courts.

3. UNIVERSAL EDUCATION THE BASIS OF UNIVERSAL SUFFRAGE IN THIS SECULAR REPUBLIC: to be guaranteed by amendment of the United States Constitution, requiring every State to maintain a thoroughly secularized public school system, and to permit no child within its limits to grow up without a good elementary education.

N. B.—The nomination of candidates upon the above platform was postponed to a future Congress of the National Liberal League.

THE DEMANDS OF LIBERALISM.

1. We demand that churches and other ecclesiastical property shall no longer be exempt from just taxation.

2. We demand that the employment of chaplains in Congress, in State Legislatures, in the navy and militia, and in prisons, asylums, and all other institutions supported by public money, shall be discontinued.

3. We demand that all public appropriations for educational and charitable institutions of a sectarian character shall cease.

4. We demand that all religious services now sustained by the government shall be abolished; and especially that the use of the Bible in the public schools, whether ostensibly as a text-book or avowedly as a book of religious worship, shall be prohibited.

5. We demand that the appointment, by the President of the United States or by the Governors of the various States, of all religious festivals and fasts shall wholly cease.

6. We demand that the judicial oath in the courts and in all other departments of the government shall be abolished, and that simple affirmation under the pains and penalties of perjury shall be established in its stead.

7. We demand that all laws directly or indirectly enforcing the observance of Sunday as the Sabbath shall be repealed.

8. We demand that all laws looking to the enforcement of "Christian" morality shall be abrogated, and that all laws shall be conformed to the requirements of natural morality, equal rights, and impartial liberty.

9. We demand that not only in the Constitutions of the United States and of the several States, but also in the practical administration of the same, no privilege or advantage shall be conceded to Christianity or any other special religion; that our entire political system shall be founded and administered on a purely secular basis; and that whatever changes shall prove necessary to this end shall be consistently, unflinchingly, and promptly made.

The above is the platform of THE INDEX, so far as the editor is individually concerned. But no other person, and no organization, can be justly or truthfully held responsible for it without his or its explicit approval.

FRANCIS E. ABBOT.

RESOLUTION

ADOPTED BY THE NATIONAL LIBERAL LEAGUE, AT PHILADELPHIA, JULY 3, 1876.

Resolved, That we accept the offer of the Boston INDEX to be our official organ of communication with the public, for the publication of announcements, acknowledgments, and other official papers of the Board of Directors; but that we assume no responsibility for anything else published in its columns and claim no control or influence in its general editorial management.

GLIMPSES.

THE MASSACHUSETTS State Executive Committee of the National Liberal League has been duly constituted as follows: W. H. Sayward (chairman), Dorchester; D. G. Crandon, Chelsea; A. B. Brown, Worcester; E. A. Sawtells, Boston; G. H. Foster, Boston.

THE VIRGINIA State Executive Committee of the National Liberal League has been duly constituted as follows: L. Spaulding (chairman), Norfolk; Mrs. Elmira D. Slenker, Snowville; Rev. J. M. Barnes, Lafayette; T. F. Taylor, Richmond; James B. Denton, Hanover Junction.

MR. J. H. W. TOOHEY is to lecture on March 31 at East Dennis, Massachusetts, on the Liberal League, and hopes to aid in organizing several local auxiliary Leagues on Cape Cod. We trust that all INDEX friends will give him a kind reception and heartily second his endeavors.

THE TENANTS of Trinity Church, in New York city, held a public meeting on March 12, to complain of the extortions of that overgrown corporation. The Hon. George M. Chapman said that it "holds $60,000,000 of property under a grant somewhat like a feudal legacy of the Middle Ages." A committee of five was appointed to ask a reduction of rent in the name of 1,000 families.

WE ARE GLAD to be informed that the Tompkins County Liberal League was to discuss the Edmunds Bible Amendment at Ithaca, N.Y., on the evening of last Monday. It is high time to wake up on this question, and prove that liberals are capable of understanding it at least as well as the clericals. The latter know what they will gain by this sinister measure; shall not the former know what they will lose by it?

HAVE YOU a Liberal League in your city or town, or in your neighborhood? If so, give it kind words and coöperation and such financial aid as you can. Do not take it for granted that you are not needed, but rather that you are, and act accordingly. For instance, we understand that the Albany League is struggling with discouragements; will not our Albany friends do what they can to show at least their sympathy for it? And so everywhere else. Let us learn the lesson of cordial friendliness to each other, and acquire that deepened interest in a noble cause which always comes from mutual sympathies and common services.

THE ST. LOUIS Westliche Post of March 9, as we are pleased to see, has a long and excellent article on the Bible Amendment of Senator Edmunds, challenging to it the attention of German liberals. The Boston Turner-Zeitung of February 15 had a long and sympathetic account of the National Liberal League; the Milwaukee Freidenker, and other liberal German papers, have given to it considerable attention. These are most cheering indications of the sure growth of the movement. If the German liberals should become thoroughly cognizant of the Liberal League, as they are beginning to do, they could not help taking a profound interest in its objects. They have their own special ideas to advocate also, and of course will push these vigorously; but that ought to be no reason for standing aloof from their American fellow-liberals in those objects which all have in common. We have all a lesson of self-restraint to learn; union would be impossible, if each should insist on making all indorse his own special and peculiar views.

AN ATTEMPT to repeal the oppressive Sabbath law of Connecticut was lately made in the Legislature of that State. Senator Bray moved the indefinite postponement of the repeal bill, and carried his point by the following arguments, as reported in the Daily Record: "I oppose this bill from its centre to its circumference, from its Alpha to its Omega. It is treading upon holy ground. The law sought to be repealed is a portion of the decalogue, the law of the Almighty which is immutable, and will stand firm amid all the edicts of kings and princes and the fluctuations of statutory legislation. Let us beware of laws God has honored. In my town, a few years since, the fields were regularly thronged with Sabbath-breakers and pilferers; the authorities arose in their might, established a special police, and arrested some eighty of them, who were brought to trial, and every one of them was convicted, paid their fine, and it broke up the proceedings for the year. Then the same trouble broke out again, and we prosecuted some thirty-five of them, who were fined and paid up, and the thing was broken up." And this is the country in which Colonel Ingerroll says that the battle for freedom has been fought and won!

THE IOWA movement on behalf of the Liberal League has resulted in the formation of a State League, organized at Des Moines, March 7 and 8. An account of the Convention, will be found on another page, communicated by Mr. E. C. Walker, to whom is due no small share of the credit for this gratifying success. We thank the convention for a vote adopting THE INDEX as the organ of the State League. At present no other liberal paper devotes itself to this movement as earnestly as THE INDEX, or seems to appreciate so fully its vast importance to the liberal cause; and so long as it continues to be true that the great interests and ideas at stake are chiefly discussed in these columns, the friends of the Liberal League ought to help vigorously to increase the circulation of THE INDEX. But we are not in the least selfish in this suggestion; and just as soon as other journals shall take up this cause with greater energy and efficiency, we shall rejoice to be outdone and hope that they will be better supported than THE INDEX. It will be a happy day for us when we shall see no further necessity for our own exertions. We cannot abandon the work while it needs us, and while it is possible for us to continue it; but it will be a relief to be superseded by abler or more devoted workers, and to lay down a burden which proves daily heavier for shoulders already tired. Let there be no rivalry save in rendering the most valuable service to the common cause.

WE CANNOT forbear to express our cordial and sincere admiration of these words of the Toronto Freethought Journal for February, respecting "Clerical Scandals": "We have received numerous communications giving detailed accounts of the misdoings of ministers of the 'gospel' and other prominent members of Christian churches who have strayed from the paths of virtue. We have consigned all such communications to the 'waste-basket,' and, so far as the Journal is concerned, to oblivion. Such descriptions are necessarily coarse and vulgar, and we shall continue to rigidly exclude them from our pages. Apart from their coarseness, however, we object to giving such scandal prominence. Christians claim that their religion makes them better, more virtuous and honest than they could possibly be without it. By carefully noting and giving prominence to every Christian's 'fall from grace' we acknowledge that their assertions are true; that their Christianity ought to make them better than other men; that they ought to stand on a higher moral plane than their neighbors; that had they lived in accordance with the teachings of the Bible they could not have erred; and that consequently it was the loss of their religion which occasioned their fall. A man cannot fall unless he is upon an elevation, unless he occupies a more or less lofty position to fall from. We are not disposed, even by implication, to make such an acknowledgment." In such sentiments as these every lofty-minded liberal must take unfeigned delight. They put to shame the vile disposition which gloats triumphantly over "clerical scandals."

NATIONAL LIBERAL LEAGUE. OFFICERS.

President.
FRANCIS E. ABBOT, Boston, Mass.

Vice-Presidents.
HON. E. P. HURLBUT, Albany, N. Y.
HON. SAMUEL E. SEWALL, Boston, Mass.
HON. NATHANIEL HOLMES, St. Louis, Mo.
HON. HENRY BOOTH, Chicago, Ill.
HON. GEORGE W. JULIAN, Irvington, Ind.
HON. ELIZUR WRIGHT, Boston, Mass.
MR. O. B. FROTHINGHAM, New York, N. Y.
MR. WM. J. POTTER, New Bedford, Mass.
MR. E. F. HALLWELL, Boston, Mass.
MR. JAMES PARTON, Newburyport, Mass.
MR. F. BOHNEHANN-POTT, Providence, R. I.
HON. ABRAHAM PAYNE, Boston, Mass.
MR. M. J. SAVAGE, Chicago, Ill.
MR. B. F. UNDERWOOD, Springfield, Ill.
MR. W. H. SPENCER, Florence, Mass.
MR. SAMUEL L. HILL, Detroit, Mich.
MR. E. W. MEDDAUGH, Editor of "Der Pioneer," Boston.
MR. KARL HEINZEN, Editor of the "Freemason," Boston.
MR. HORACE SEEVER, Editor of the "American Israelite," Cincinnati.
MR. ISAAC M. WISE, Editor of the "Truth Seeker," New York.
MR. D. M. BENNETT, Editor of the "Jewish Times," New York.
MR. MORITZ ELLINGER, Thorndike, Mass.
MR. B. F. UNDERWOOD, Peoria, Ill.
MR. ROBERT G. COLLIER, Binghamton, N. Y.
MR. T. L. BROWN, Binghamton, N. Y.
MR. R. S. MCCORMICK, Mount Lebanon, N. Y.
MR. ELIZABETH THOMPSON, New York City.
MR. AMY POST, Rochester, N. Y.
MR. ELIZABETH CODY STANTON, Tenny, N. J.
MISS SALLIE HOLLEY, Littleburg, Va.

Secretary.
W. H. HAMLEN, 221 Washington Street, Boston, Mass.

Assistant Secretary.
MISS JANE P. TITCOMB, 142 Chandler St., Boston.

Treasurer.
J. A. J. WILCOX, 3 Pemberton Square, Boston.

Board of Directors.
F. E. ABBOT, W. H. HAMLEN.
J. A. J. WILCOX, H. L. GREEN.
D. G. CRANDON.

Executive Committee.

Alabama	J. H. HALLEY, Selma.
Arkansas	JOHN ABBOTT, Monticello.
California	J. L. HATCH, San Francisco.
Colorado	DAVID T. BEALE, Granada.
Connecticut	GEORGE W. BALDWIN, Bridgeport.
Delaware	JOSEPH D. GORLT, Greentree.
Florida	T. E. GIDDINGS, Enterprise.
Georgia	DR. A. A. BELL, Milledgeville.
Illinois	DR. G. H. HUBBERT, Galveston.
Indiana	L. O. UNDERWOOD, Indianapolis.
Iowa	J. C. MICHEMER, Adel.
Kansas	JOHN FARRSWORTH, Fort Scott.
Kentucky	S. B. CLARK, Wilmore.
Louisiana	EMERSON HESTLEY, New Orleans.
Maine	DR. W. H. BROWN, Bangor.
Massachusetts	J. S. BRIDGEMAN, New Market.
Michigan	W. H. BAYLARD, Boston.
Minnesota	KARL BOHNEHANN, Detroit.
Missouri	J. B. BASSETT, Minneapolis.
Montana	R. PETERSON, St. Louis.
Nebraska	W. E. COPELAND, Lincoln.
Nevada	V. G. BARRETT, White Rock.
New Hampshire	WILLIAM LITTLE, Manchester.
New York	H. L. GREEN (chairman), Salamanca.
North Carolina	J. W. THOMAS, Warren.
Ohio	E. D. STARR, Cleveland.
Oregon	SAMUEL COLT, Humboldt Basin.
Pennsylvania	G. W. BALDWIN, Limerick.
Rhode Island	GEORGE LEWIS, Providence.
South Carolina	P. W. FULLER, Columbia.
Tennessee	DR. E. R. PRICE, Chattanooga.
Texas	DR. A. DUNBAR, Greenville.
Vermont	E. L. HAUGHTON, North Bennington.
Virginia	L. SPAULDING, Norfolk.
West Virginia	DR. A. M. DENT, Weston.
Wisconsin	ROBERT C. SPENCER, Milwaukee.
Wyoming	D. P. WILCOX, Teton.
District of Columbia	W. H. DOOLITTLE, Washington.
Utah	W. FERGUSON, Provo City.
Wyoming	NORMAN S. PORTER.

Finance Committee.
D. G. CRANDON, Chairman, Chelsea, Mass.
MR. SARAH B. OTIS, 137 Warren Avenue, Boston.
HARLAN P. HYDE, 231 Washington St., Boston.

LOCAL AUXILIARY LIBERAL LEAGUES

To which Charters have been issued by the National Liberal League.

LINCOLN, NEBRASKA.—President, D. A. Cline; Secretary, Dr. A. S. von Mansfeldt.
Issued to L. W. Billingsley, D. A. Cline, A. S. von Mansfeldt, Julius Philsterer, Joseph Wittman, W. E. Copeland, Benj. F. Fisher, Sidney Lyons, L. Meyer, G. E. Church, and others.

JACKSONVILLE, ILLINOIS.—[Officers not reported.]
Issued to A. W. Cadman, Mrs. D. M. Cadman, B. W. Sample, David Prinos, R. A. Nance, C. H. Dunbrack, W. Hackman, Jennie W. Meek, Emma Meek, Hattie E. Hammond, and others.

PHILADELPHIA, PENNSYLVANIA.—President, Carrie B. Kilgore; Secretary, Joseph Bohrer.
Issued to the President and Secretary on behalf of the Philadelphia Liberal League.

MILWAUKEE, WISCONSIN.—President, Lauriston Damon; Secretary, Anton Braasch.
Issued to Anton Braasch, Fred. Clausen, J. Runge, Jr., Louis Zander, S. Damon, Ferd. Heyroth, Louis Heyroth, Fred. Zander, Fred. Halberg, Ernst Olusen, and Fred. Braasch.

CHESAPEA, MASSACHUSETTS.—President, D. Goddard Crandon; Secretary, J. H. W. Toohy.
Issued to the President and Secretary on behalf of the Chelsea Liberal League.

STOCKTON, CALIFORNIA.—[Officers not reported.]
Issued to Chas. Haas, G. C. Hyatt, F. O. Lawrence, A. T. Hudson, Chas. Williams, W. F. Freeman, J. Grundike, J. Harrison, T. C. Mallon, A. F. Lochead, and others.

DENVER, COLORADO.—President, Orson Brooks; Secretary, J. H. Cotton.
Issued to the President and Secretary on behalf of the Liberal League of Denver.

FAIR HALL, BOSTON.—President, John S. Verity; Secretary, Robert Cooper.
Issued to Horace Seaver, J. P. Mendam, Eliskur Wright, B. F. Underwood, David Kirkwood, James Harris, G. H. Foster, H. P. Hyde, Robert Cooper, S. R. Urbino, John S. Verity.

PALESTINE, NEW YORK.—President, J. M. Jones; Secretary, C. C. Everson.
Issued to J. M. Jones, C. C. Everson, Henry M. North, A. E. Sherman, Joseph Fritts, L. B. Keeler, J. J. White, R. H. Sherman, Henry Gardner, Samuel Coead, and others.

BOSTON, MASSACHUSETTS.—President, Rev. M. J. Savage; Secretary, Miss J. P. Titcomb.
Issued to the President and Secretary on behalf of the First Liberal League of Boston, Mass.

NEW PHILADELPHIA, OHIO.—President, George Riker; Secretary, C. M. Rittenhouse.
Issued to C. M. Rittenhouse, George Riker, J. C. Price, Daniel Kornis, P. W. Himes, John Art, Philip Glitz, A. H. Brown, Jacob Miller, L. A. Cornet.

TITUSVILLE, PENNSYLVANIA.—President, William Barnard; Secretary, C. M. Hayes.
Issued to the President and Secretary on behalf of the Titusville Liberal League.

HUDSON, MICHIGAN.—President, Dr. Levi R. Peirson; Secretary, Dr. F. O. Baker.
Issued to Levi R. Peirson, A. D. Armstrong, James S. Bedel, Miles C. Bench, W. R. Norris, R. H. Armstrong, E. W. S. Johnson, E. M. Brown, G. L. Harcerson, Philip Sewall.

CATTARAUGUS COUNTY, NEW YORK.—President, H. L. Green; Corresponding Secretary, John Hammond.
Issued to the President and Secretary on behalf of the Cattaraugus County Liberal League.

NEW HAVEN, CONNECTICUT.—[Officers not yet reported.]
Issued to E. M. Sherman, W. W. Stow, F. A. Hermande, T. F. Hamilton, D. M. Hamilton, W. F. Hopson, E. R. Whiting, E. E. Seaman, A. C. Harrison, R. F. P. Sheppard, and others.

ST. JOSEPH, MISSOURI.—President, P. V. Wise; Secretary, H. Brunsing.
Issued to the President and Secretary on behalf of the St. Joseph Liberal League.

NEW YORK, NEW YORK.—President, Hugh B. Brown; Secretary, A. L. Rawson.
Issued to T. B. Wakeman, Henry Evans, A. L. Rawson, Hugh B. Brown, E. Langford, D. S. Plumb, O. E. Browning, Mrs. Eliz. Lving, Miss E. W. McAdams, Mrs. O. E. Laugerfeld, on behalf of the Society of Humanity.

ROCHESTER, NEW YORK.—President, Mrs. Amy Post; Secretary, Willet E. Post.
Issued to Benj. Gregg, Mrs. Amy Post, Willet E. Post, Emily G. Beebe, Dr. Sherman, Mrs. Barker, Clement Austin, Wm. H. Gibbs, Dr. C. D. Dake, and others.

TOMPKINS COUNTY, NEW YORK.—President, Dr. John Winslow; Secretary, Myron E. Bishop.
Issued to C. W. Ames, Wm. A. Anthony, Geo. Arnold, M. E. Bishop, H. Book, W. Dennis, Isaac Flagg, B. W. Franklin, C. Gardner, W. Hutchins, and others.

NEW YORK, NEW YORK.—President, A. L. Rawson; Secretary, Porter C. Bliss.
Issued to the President and Secretary on behalf of the Manhattan Liberal Club.

CLEVELAND, OHIO.—President, E. D. Stark; Secretary, Mrs. M. B. Ambler.
Issued to E. D. Stark, Mrs. Louisa Southworth, B. White, W. A. Madison, S. E. Adams, Daniel R. Tilden, W. Galsen Smith, Walter F. Johnson, Thomas Jones, and Mrs. M. B. Ambler.

MILWAUKEE, WISCONSIN.—President, Robert C. Spencer; Secretary, William A. Boyd.
Issued to the President and Secretary on behalf of the First Liberal League of Milwaukee.

JEFFERSON LIBERAL LEAGUE, ROCHESTER, NEW YORK.—President, Moses Hays; Secretaries, Fred. Hebard and J. B. Pike.
Issued to L. Garrison, N. O. Tiffany, Adolph Roth, J. W. Roberts, E. F. Smith, Julius Rothbult, A. C. Allen, C. B. Strong, De L. Crittenden, and F. Bush.

MINNEAPOLIS, MINNESOTA.—President, S. C. Gale; Secretary, Frank J. Mead.
Issued to the President, Vice-President, Secretary, and Treasurer, on behalf of the First Liberal League of Minneapolis.

FLORENCE, IOWA.—President, Byron McQuin; Secretary, E. C. Walker.
Issued to the President and Secretary on behalf of the Liberal League of Florence, Iowa.

WEST MERIDEN, CONNECTICUT.—President, W. W. Lee; Secretary, Miss Emily J. Leonard.
Issued to W. W. Lee, Edwin Dayton, R. L. Roy, C. C. Munn, N. W. Pomeroy, N. F. Griswold, Mrs. F. Loomis, Marion L. Pomeroy, Joseph Frankowski, Mrs. J. Frankowski, and Emily J. Leonard.

MONTGOMERY COUNTY, OHIO.—President, A. McGill; Secretary, J. B. Barry.
Issued to the President and Secretary on behalf of the National Military Home Liberal League.

MANITOWOC, WISCONSIN.—President, John A. Smith; Secretary, George B. Byron.
Issued to J. A. Smith, L. Mendlik, G. B. Byron, F. Heineman, F. Ransch, F. Kostomolatsky, F. Stirn, F. Kolinsky, J. Mendlik, L. Oherland, and others.

ALBANY, NEW YORK.—President, Thomas J. Hennessey; Secretary, Thomas Dugan.
Issued to the President and Secretary on behalf of the Albany Liberal Association.

BAY CITY, MICHIGAN.—President, S. M. Green; Secretary, N. H. Webster.
Issued to S. M. Green, N. H. Webster, J. A. Webster, G. H. Brooks, J. Brooks, C. Baker, J. Allen, M. H. Garrells, W. Ellsworth, M. E. Root, and others.

CAMPBELL HILL, ILLINOIS.—President, Horace Newell, M.D.; Secretary, A. R. Swartscope.
Issued to the President and Secretary on behalf of the Campbell Hill Liberal League.

WAUSAU, WISCONSIN.—President, R. P. Munson; Secretary, V. A. Alderson.
Issued to the President and Secretary on behalf of the Wausau Liberal League.

[N. B.—Many new local Liberal Leagues have been formed which have neglected to take out charters, and therefore are not entitled to representation.]

RELIGIOUS FREEDOM AMENDMENT:

PROPOSED AS A SUBSTITUTE FOR THE

FIRST AMENDMENT TO THE U. S. CONSTITUTION.

ARTICLE I.

SECTION 1.—Neither Congress nor any State shall make any law respecting an establishment of religion, or favoring any particular form of religion, or prohibiting the free exercise thereof; or permitting in any degree a union of Church and State, or granting any special privilege, immunity, or advantage to any sect or religious body, or to any number of sects or religious bodies; or taxing the people of any State, either directly or indirectly, for the support of any sect or religious body, or of any number of sects or religious bodies; or abridging the freedom of speech or of the press, or the right of the people peaceably to assemble and to petition the Government for a redress of grievances.

SECTION 2.—No religious test shall ever be required as a condition of suffrage, or as a qualification to any office or public trust, in any State. No person shall ever be deprived of any of his or her rights, privileges or capacities, or disqualified for the performance of any public or private duty, or rendered incompetent to give evidence in any court of law or equity, in consequence of any opinions he or she may hold on the subject of religion. No person shall ever be required by law to contribute directly or indirectly to the support of any religious society or body of which he or she is not a voluntary member.

SECTION 3.—Neither the United States, nor any State, Territory, municipality, or any civil division of any State or Territory, shall levy any tax, or make any gift, grant, or appropriation, for the support, or in aid, of any church, religious sect, or denomination, or any school, seminary, or institution of learning, in which the faith or doctrines of any religious order or sect shall be taught or inculcated, or in which religious rites shall be observed; or for the support, or in aid, of any religious charity or purpose of any sect, order, or denomination whatsoever.

SECTION 4.—Congress shall have power to enforce the various provisions of this Article by appropriate legislation.

The Ethics of Jesus.

BY JOHN L. STODDARD.

Jesus is the central figure in the Christian system. To him, as a part of the Deity, is prayer addressed from every Trinitarian church in Christendom; to him as a perfect model of excellence do his followers enthusiastically point; to him alone do they profess to render obedience as their one Master (see Matt. xxiii, 8). The primary duty of the believer is to imitate him as the "Great Exemplar"; and his words are supposed to furnish a perfect code of morals, beside which the ethics of other teachers are comparatively valueless.

I write, to-day, for the great mass of people who, owing to this exclusive laudation of Jesus by the Christians, scarcely know that there ever have been in the world any great teachers of morals except Jesus.

I write for the thousands who cannot, or at least do not, lift their eyes above and beyond the narrow horizon of their own theological environment; who fancy that the race has been chiefly guided ever since Adam by the precepts of a Hebrew book; and who believe that the words of the Sermon on the Mount are treasures absolutely unparalleled in the history of mankind. It is before these, who are not likely to investigate the subject for themselves, that I desire to present some of the corresponding precepts of the ante-Christian sages, and thus to estimate the relative position of Jesus as a moral teacher. I cannot expect, however, that this comparison of Jesus with other ethical masters will prove acceptable to the believer in the Deity of the Hebrew martyr. It is distasteful to the average Christian to find that the world is not solely indebted to Jesus for its light upon great moral questions. The more nearly a sage like Buddha approaches in character and doctrine to Jesus of Nazareth, the more jealously do Christians exclaim of their Master, "Never man spake like this man." They will tolerate no rival; for they feel that to place Jesus in the category of human seers is practically to dethrone him.

Our business, however, is, if possible, to set aside all prejudice; to look dispassionately at the comparative teachings of Jesus and other masters; and to estimate relatively by contrast, and absolutely by an examination of those precepts peculiarly his own, the rank of the sage of Nazareth as an expounder of ethics. I say as an expounder of ethics; for it is in this capacity only that I desire to study Jesus at this time. Of his religious instruction,—of what he taught concerning man's relations to God,—I have nothing in this article to say. The common claim that Jesus, as a moral teacher, is the light of the world is the only one which I now propose to consider.

In reference to the sources of our information upon the teachings of these various sages, only a word is here needful.

To enter upon the vexed discussion of the historical accuracy of the four Gospels—the Dhammapada, or Path of Virtue of Buddha, the writings of Confucius and Mencius as given us by Dr. Legge, the words of Socrates as recorded by Plato, and the precepts of the Jewish Talmud—is manifestly impossible in an essay of this length.

It is best, then, in the present discussion, to agree to waive all historical doubts, and to accept as genuine the teachings of Jesus, Confucius, Buddha, and the rest, as we find them crystallized in the various forms in which they have come down to us.

The great maxim of conduct, which throughout Christendom is almost distinctively associated with Jesus, and for the utterance of which he has received the encomiums of nearly nineteen centuries, is called the "Golden Rule." If we look, however, at the words of Confucius (B.C. 551) and Hillel, the renowned Jewish Rabbi (died A.D. 10), we see that not only was this idea not promulgated for the first time by Jesus, but that even the phraseology of its various teachers is strikingly similar:—

GOLDEN RULE.

JESUS.

All things whatsoever ye would that men should do to you, do ye even so to them; for this is the law and the prophets.—Matt. vii, 12.
Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself.—Matt. xxi, 39.

CONFUCIUS (negatively).

Tze Kung asked, saying: "Is there one word which may serve as a rule of practice for all one's life?" Confucius said: "Is not Reciprocity such a word?" What ye do not wish done to yourselves, do not do to others.—Anal., Book 15, 23.
What a man dislikes in his superiors, let him not display in the treatment of his inferiors; what he dislikes in inferiors, let him not display in the service of his superiors; what he hates to receive on the right, let him not bestow on the left. This is the principle with which, as with a measuring square, to regulate one's conduct.—Great Learning, Sect. 10.

(Positively.)

In the way of the superior man there are four things, to not one of which have I as yet attained: To serve my father as I would require my son to serve me; to serve my prince as I would require my minister to serve me; to serve my elder brother as I would require my younger brother to serve me; to set the example in behaving to a friend as I would require him to behave to me!—Doctrine of the Mean, XIII.

HILLEL.

The whole law is contained in this one rule: Whatever you would not wish your neighbor to do to you, do it not to him!

JEWISH LAW.

Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself.—Lev. xix., 18.

TALMUD.

Let the honor of thy neighbor be to thee like thine own.

It is worthy of notice that Jesus himself does not claim that this rule is original with him, but gives it as a résumé of, or at least a deduction from, his nation's "law and prophets"; which, moreover (see above) was the identical remark of his own countryman, the Rabbi Hillel, who died when Jesus was ten years old, and of whose wisdom, meekness, and piety the records of the Talmud are full.

Another celebrated passage from the Sermon on the Mount, the great compendium of the moral teachings of Jesus, is that commencing at the seventh chapter:—

JESUS.

Judge not, that ye be not judged.

For with what judgment ye judge, ye shall be judged; and with what measure ye mete, it shall be measured to you again.

And why beholdest thou the mote that is in thy brother's eye, but considerest not the beam that is in thine own eye?

Thou hypocrite, first cast out the beam out of thine own eye, and then shalt thou see clearly to cast the mote out of thy brother's eye.—Matt. vii., 1-5.

MENCIUS (B.C. 311).

The disease of men is this: that they neglect their own fields, and go to weed the fields of others. What they require from others is great, while what they lay upon themselves is light.—Works of Mencius, Book 1.

Never has a man who has bent himself been able to make others straight.—Works, Book 2.

BUDDHA.

Not the failures of others, not their sins of commission or omission, but his own misdeeds and negligences should the sage take notice of.—Dhammapada, ch. iv., sect 50. See also ch. xviii., 252 and 263.

Let no one forget his own duty for the sake of another's.—Dhammapada, ch. cxi.

CONFUCIUS.

To assail one's own wickedness and not assail that of others, is not this the way to correct cherished evil?—Anai., Book 12, 21.

HILLEL.

Do not judge thy neighbor, till thou hast stood in his place.

We thus observe that this idea also is not at all original with Jesus, but was expressed centuries before him by other great moral teachers.

Moreover, their statement of the precept is preferable to that of Jesus, for this reason: Jesus urges as a motive for not judging others that such persons will themselves be judged; that they are to have the same measure which they mete out,—in other words, that they will receive "tit for tat." But no such motive is expressed by the others. On the contrary, Confucius enforces his precept by presenting it as a means of correcting cherished evil! It cannot be questioned for a moment which of the two is the nobler spring of action.

The necessity of inward purification has been repeatedly urged as a precept peculiar to Christianity. Let us look at this point:—

JESUS.

Now do ye Pharisees make clean the outside of the cup and the platter; but your inward part is full of ravening and wickedness.—Luke xi., 39.

Woe unto you, scribes and Pharisees, hypocrites! for ye are like unto whited sepulchres, which indeed appear beautiful outwardly, but are within full of dead men's bones and of all uncleanness.

Even so ye also outwardly appear righteous unto men, but within ye are full of hypocrisy and iniquity.—Matt. xxiii., 27, 28.

Ye shall know them by their fruits. Do men gather grapes of thorns or figs of thistles?

Even so every good tree bringeth forth good fruit; but a corrupt tree bringeth forth evil fruit.—Matt. vii., 16, 17.

BUDDHA.

What is the use of platted hair, O fool? What is the use of a raiment of goat skins? Within thee there is ravening, but the outside maketh thee clean!—Dhammapada, Book, 36, 394.

CONFUCIUS.

I hate a semblance which is not the reality. I hate the darning, lest it be confounded with the corn. I hate glib-tonguedness, lest it be confounded with righteousness.—Works, Book 7, 31.

From the emperor down to the mass of the people, all must consider that self-cultivation is the root of every thing. It cannot be when the root is neglected that what should spring from it will be well-ordered!—Great Learning, sect. 6 and 7.

MENCIUS.

What distinguishes the superior man is what he preserves in his heart!—Works, Book 4, 36.

He whose goodness is a part of himself is the real man!—Works, Book 7, 2.

See also at length the Hebrew prophets.—Isaiah l., 11-16. Hosea vi., 6. Amos v., 21 and following. Micah vi., 6-8.

It should be added in this connection that Dr. Legge, of the London Missionary Society, speaks thus of the doctrine of Mencius:—

"The great object of Mencius in his writings is to rectify men's hearts. According to him, if the heart be rectified, we recognize at once the goodness of the nature. All good actions have their root in the rectifying of the heart and in making the thoughts sincere."—Life of Mencius.

If we consider the paramount importance which Jesus attached to the possession of Righteousness, we shall see it duplicated in the teachings of Socrates and the great Chinese moralists:—

JESUS.

Seek ye first the kingdom of God and his righteousness; and all these things shall be added unto you.—Matt. vi., 33.

For what is a man profited if he gain the whole world and lose his own soul? Or what shall a man give in exchange for his soul?—Matt. xvi., 26.

CONFUCIUS.

The superior man in every thing considers rightness to be essential. He brings it forth with humility; he completes it with sincerity.—Anai., 16, 17.

The man of virtue will even sacrifice his life to preserve his virtue complete.—Anai., 16, 8.

The superior man holds rightness to be of the highest importance.—Anai., 17.

MENCIUS.

If I cannot keep the two together, I will let life go, and choose Righteousness!—Works, 6, 16.

Here, too, I think an unprejudiced critic will allow that the moral tone of the Grecian and Eastern teachers is in advance of that of Jesus. The Hebrew master adds to his precept, to "seek righteousness," the tempting motive, "and all these things shall be added unto you!" The reward in this case is very practical; since the context shows that "all these things" refer to the provision for food, drink, and raiment. Moreover, in the other precept quoted from Jesus, we find the words profit, gain, and exchange; which raise us to no higher motives of action than those of rewards and punishments. As contrasted with this, the teachings of Confucius and Mencius, to cling to virtue rather than life for virtue's sake alone, are certainly to be ranked higher than those of Jesus.

The statement is constantly made by Christians, that, whereas other moral teachers directed their followers to love their friends, Jesus was the only one who taught love to enemies as a duty. Let us examine this also:—

JESUS.

Ye have heard that it hath been said, Thou shalt love thy neighbor; and hate thine enemy. But I say unto you, Love your enemies, bless them that curse you, do good to them that hate you, and pray for them which despitefully use you and persecute you.—Matt. v., 43, 44.

Then came Peter, and said, Lord, how oft shall my brother sin against me and I forgive him? till seven times?

Jesus saith unto him, I say not unto thee, until seven times, but until seventy times seven.—Matt. xiii., 21.

BUDDHA.

Let a man overcome anger by love! Let him overcome evil by good!—Dhammapada, 17, 323.

Hatred ceases by love!—Dhammapada, 1, 5.

Let us live happily, then, not hating those who hate us! Let us dwell free from hatred among men who hate!—Dhammapada, 16, 197.

CONFUCIUS.

Benevolence is to love all men.—Anai., 12, 22.

RABBI ANOTH NASTRAK.

He is a hero who maketh his enemy his friend.

SABERDREIN.

Suffer thyself to be cursed, but do not thus curse others.

SYNOPSIS, SOHAR.

A man ought every night to forgive the fault of him that offendeth him.

INSTITUTES OF MENU (B.C. 1200).

Returning good for evil is enumerated among the ten primary duties.—Chap. 8, 92.

By forgiveness of injuries the wise are purified.—Ibid., 107.

ZEND AVESTA.

"Oh, blessed Ormuzd (God), pardon my offences against thee, even as I pardon those done against myself!"—Vendidad Sade.

HINDU PRECEPT.

He who is kind to those that are kind to him does nothing great. To be good to the offender is what the wise call good.—Panchatantra, 4, 9.

SOCRATES.

We ought not to retaliate, or render evil for evil to any one, whatever evil we may have suffered from him!—Plato, Crito.

I bear no resentment towards my accusers or my condemnors!—Plato, Apology.

Thus the overcoming of anger by love was, as we see, taught by Gautama Buddha six centuries before Christ, and the doctrine of forgiveness is found on the lips of many sages. It is frequently urged by Christians that the words, "Ye have heard that it hath been said," as contrasted with the "But I say unto you" of Jesus, denote that their master inculcated something entirely new to the world, and opposed to all that ever had been taught before. This assertion, as we have seen, is plainly erroneous.

In these antithetical statements, Jesus certainly makes an advance upon a few of the more meagre and revengeful articles of the old Jewish law and the traditional explanation of them by some of the scribes and expounders of that law. But the ideas are not peculiar to Jesus; and the most striking one of them all, "love to enemies," had been promulgated centuries before his time.

Let us look at other precepts of Jesus:—

HUMILITY.

JESUS.

Verily I say unto you, except ye be converted and become as little children, ye shall not enter into the kingdom of heaven. Whosoever therefore shall humble himself as this little child, the same is greatest in the kingdom of heaven.—Matt. xviii., 3, 4.

Whoever shall exalt himself shall be abased; and he that shall humble himself shall be exalted.—Matt. xxiii., 12.

MENCIUS.

The great man is he who does not lose his child's heart.—Works, Book 4, 12.

RABBI JERUDA BEN LEVI.

If a man be of a humble spirit, the Scriptures consider him as having offered all sacrifices.—Sederin (Mishna), 43.

TALMUD.

He who raises himself up will be humiliated; he who humbles himself will be lifted up.—See London Quarterly Review, Vol. 122.

SINCERITY BEFORE GOD.

JESUS.

God is Spirit; and they that worship him must worship in spirit and in truth.—John iv., 24.

INSTITUTES OF MENU.

O friend to virtue, that supreme spirit, which thou believest one with thyself, resides in thy bosom perpetually and is an all-knowing inspector of thy virtue or thy crime. The wicked have said in their hearts, "None sees us." Yes; the gods see them, and the spirit within their own breasts.—Viii., 91 and 85.

SUBJECTION OF THE FLESH.

JESUS.

If thy foot offend thee, cut it off; it is better for thee to enter halt into life than, having two feet, to be cast into hell, into the fire that never shall be quenched.—Mark ix., 45.

RABBINICAL TEACHING.

It is better for me that I should be burned in this world with a little fire, than that I should be burned in the world to come with a devouring flame.—Targum, Genes., xxxviii., 26.

DEGREES OF GUILT.

JESUS.

That servant which knew his lord's will and prepared not himself, neither did according to his will, shall be beaten with many stripes. But he that knew not and did commit things worthy of stripes, shall be beaten with few stripes.—Luke xii., 47.

RABBI SIMON.

He who hath learned the words of the law and doeth them not is more guilty than he who has learned nothing.—Debarin Rabba, sect. 7.

CARE FOR THE FUTURE.

JESUS.

Take no thought for your life, what ye shall eat or what ye shall drink. . . . Take therefore no thought for the morrow, for the morrow shall take thought for the things of itself.—Matt. vi., 25 and 34.

RABBINICAL PRECEPT.

He who created the day created the food thereof. Whosoever eateth whereof to eat to-day, and saith "But shall I eat to-morrow?" he is of little faith.—Schabbath (tract of the Mishna), 131.

INFLUENCE OF THE GOOD.

JESUS.

Ye are the light of the world. A city that is set on a hill cannot be hid.—Matt. v., 14.

Let your light so shine before men that they may see your good works, and glorify your Father which is in heaven.—Matt. v., 16.

BUDDHA.

Good people shine from afar like the snowy mountains.—Dhammapada, 23, 304.

Ho whose evil deeds are covered by good deeds brightens up this world, like the moon when freed from clouds.—Dhammapada, 13, 173.

MENCIUS.

Great men rectify themselves, and others become rectified.—Works, 7, 19.

HINDU PRECEPT.

The sweet scent of flowers is lost on the breeze, but the fragrance of virtue endures forever.—Ramayana.

EVIL SPEAKING.

JESUS.

But I say unto you, that every idle word that men shall speak, they shall give account thereof in the day of judgment.—Matt. xii., 36.

BUDDHA.

Beware of the anger of the tongue, and control thy tongue. Leave the sins of the tongue, and practise virtue with thy tongue.—Dhammapada, 17, 322.

MENCIUS.

What future misery have they, and ought they, to endure, who talk of what is not good in others?—Works, 4, 9, Part II.

UNOSTENTATIOUS CHARITY.

JESUS.

Take heed that ye do not your alms before men, to be seen of them. . . . That thine alms may be in secret; and thy Father, which seeth in secret, himself shall reward thee openly.—Matt. vi., 1 and 4.

RABBINICAL TEACHING.

Whosoever lendeth to any one in public, with him God dealeth according to justice; but he who does it secretly, with him rests the blessing.—Seder, 4.

He who gives charity in secret is greater than Moses himself.—Quoted from Talmud in London Quarterly Review, Vol. 122.

INSTITUTES OF MENU.

By proclaiming a gift, its fruit perishes.—IV., 237.

HINDU PRECEPT.

The gift bestowed with right purpose on one who cannot repay it is called a real gift!—Hitopadesa, 1, 14.

MERCY.

JESUS.

Blessed are the merciful, for they shall obtain mercy.—Matt. v., 7.

But if ye forgive not men their trespasses, neither will your Father forgive your trespasses.—Matt. vi., 15.

RABBINICAL TEACHING.

Whosoever hath mercy on men, on him will God have mercy; but he that sheweth no mercy to men, neither will him God show mercy.—Schabbath, 833.

BUDDHA.

My law is a law of mercy for all!—Burnouf, p. 138.

UNIVERSAL LOVE.

JESUS.

For the son of man is come to save that which was lost.—Matt. xvi., 11.

BUDDHA.

Whoever loves will feel the longing to save, not himself, but all others. Let him say to himself: When others are learning the truth, I will rejoice at it, as if it were myself. When others are without it, I will mourn the loss as my own. We shall do much if we deliver many; but more, if we cause these to deliver others, and so on without end. So shall the healing word embrace the world, and all who are sunk in the ocean of misery be saved.—Works, 2, 363.

My law is a law of mercy for all! Proclaim it freely to all men, rich and poor alike! It is large as the space of heaven that excludes none!—Koepfen, p. 130.

CONFUCIUS.

A man should overflow in love to all.—Anai., 1, 8.

The good man loves all men. All within the four seas are his brothers.—Quoted in Johnson's China.

INSTITUTES OF MENU.

Let not injustice be done in deed or in thought, nor a word

Whoever shall do the will of God, the same is my brother and my sister and mother.—Mark iii., 35.
Parable of the Good Samaritan.—Luke x., 30.

IMITATION OF GOD IN KINDNESS TO THE JUST AND UNJUST.

JESUS.
Love your enemies, etc., (see above under topic "Love to enemies"), that ye may be the children of your Father which is in heaven; for he maketh his sun to rise on the evil and on the good, and sendeth rain on the just and on the unjust. . . . Be ye therefore perfect, even as your Father which is in heaven is perfect.—Matt. v.

be uttered that shall cause a fellow-creature pain!—II., 101.
HINDU PRECEPT.
To the noble, the whole world is a family!—Rigopada, i. 64. Let the wise man give up his goods for the sake of his neighbor; for the sake of the good, let him even give his life!—Ibid., i. 38.
The good have mercy upon all!—Ibid., i. 10.

SHNECA.

If it diverts not the Almighty from being gracious, even though we daily abuse his bounties.
What then ought we to do, but that very thing which is done by God himself, namely, give to the ignorant, and persevere to the wicked?

RAHNI AFHU.

The day on which rain is sent is greater than the resurrection of the dead, for this pertains to the just alone, but rain to the just and unjust.—Jairith, 71. Mishna.

LENDING.

JESUS.
Give to every man that asketh of thee; and of him that taketh away thy goods, ask them not again.—Luke vi., 30.

BUDDHA.
Give, if thou art asked, from the little thou hast; thus wilt thou go near the gods.—Dhammapada, iv. 224.

The teaching of Jesus here, as we shall later attempt to show more fully, is an impracticable one, and one in direct opposition to the necessities of society. Jesus here makes no reservation. His followers are bidden to give to every man that asketh, and no attempt is to be made to recover stolen property.

The following extracts do not pertain strictly to ethics, but deserve to be noticed on account of their remarkable parallelism.

HATRED OF THE WICKED TO THE GOOD.

JESUS.
If the world hate you, ye know that it hated me before it hated you. If ye were of the world, the world would love its own, but because ye are not of the world, therefore the world hateth you.—John xv., 18.
The time cometh, that whosoever killeth you will think that he doeth God service.—John xvi., 2.

SOCRATES.
This is what will be my destruction, if I am destroyed by the envy and detraction of the world which has been the death of many good men, and will probably be the death of many more. There is no danger of my being the last of them!—Plato, Apology.

THE ISOLATION OF GENIUS.

JESUS.
Have I been so long time with you, and yet have you not known me, Philip?—John xiv., 9.
Are ye also yet without understanding?—Matt. xv., 16.
Yet I am not alone, for the Father is with me.—John xvi., 32.

CONFUCIUS.
The master said: "Alas! there is no one that knows me!"
Tse Kung said: "What do you mean by thus saying that no one knows you?"
The master replied: "I do not murmur against heaven, nor do I grumble against men. There is heaven, — that knows me."—Anai, 14, 37.

MENCIUS.

If a prince acknowledge you, and follow your counsels, be perfectly satisfied. If no one does so, be the same!—Works, 7, 9.

SIMILAR PARABLES.

JESUS.
The familiar parable of the wise and foolish virgins (Matt. xxv., 1-13), concluding with the words: "Watch therefore; for ye know neither the day nor the hour wherein the Son of Man cometh."
See also the figure of the "King and the wedding garments."—Matt. xxii., 11.

JEWISH TALMUD.
There was a king who bade all his servants to a great repast, but did not indicate the hour. Some went home, and prepared themselves, and stood ready at the door of the palace. Others said, There is ample time; the king will let us know beforehand. Of a sudden the king summoned them, and those that came in their best garments were received, but the foolish ones, who came in slovenliness, were turned away in disgrace. Repent to-day, lest to-morrow ye be summoned!—See article "Talmud," London Quarterly Review, Vol. 122.

CHILDREN OF GOD.

JESUS.
Blessed are the peacemakers, for they shall be called the children of God.—Matt. v., 9.

TALMUD.
And we, if we are called the servants of God, are also called his children.

SIMILAR VIEW OF THE NEXT WORLD.

JESUS.
They which shall be accounted worthy to obtain that world, and the resurrection from the dead, neither marry nor are given in marriage; neither can they die any more; for they are equal unto the angels.—Luke xx., 35.

TALMUD.
In the next world there will be no love and no labor, no envy, no hatred, no contest. The righteous will sit with crowns on their heads, glorying in the splendor of God's majesty.

PAUCITY OF THE TRULY WISE.

JESUS.
Because straight is the gate and narrow is the way which leadeth unto life, and few there be that find it.—Matt. vii., 14.
For many are called, but few chosen.—Matt. xx., 16.

CONFUCIUS.
Those who know virtue are few.—Anai, 15, 3.
It is all over! I have not seen one who loves virtue as he loves beauty!—Anai, 15, 12.

MENCIUS.

The way of truth is like a great road. The evil is that men will not seek it.—Works, 6, 2.

BUDDHA.

This world is dark. Few only can see here. Few only go to heaven, like birds escaped from a net.—Dhammapada, 13, 174.

THEIR POVERTY.

JESUS.
Foxes have holes, and birds of the air have nests; but the Son of Man hath not where to lay his head.—Luke ix., 58.

CONFUCIUS.
With coarse rice to eat, with water to drink, and my bended arm for a pillow, I still have joy in the midst of these things. Riches and honors acquired by unrighteousness are to me but as a floating cloud.—Anai, 7, 15.

SOCRATES.

I am in the uttermost poverty through my service of the God.—Plato, Apology.

KINGDOM OF HEAVEN WITHIN.

JESUS.

The kingdom of God cometh not with observation. For behold the kingdom of God is within you.—Luke xvi., 20.

CONFUCIUS.

Is virtue a thing remote? I wish to be virtuous, and lo! virtue is at hand.—Anai, 7, 29.

MENCIUS.

Kaou has never understood righteousness, because he makes it something external.—Works, 2, 16.
The path of duty lies in what is near; yet men seek for it in what is remote!—Works, 4, 10.

Much is made by Christians of the fact that Jesus regarded not the persons of men, and that he freely associated with publicans and sinners. It is even frequently asserted that no teacher, save Jesus, ever preached a gospel to the poor. Jesus certainly deserves all praise for his comprehensive charity; but this admirable quality was no more a characteristic of Jesus than of Socrates and Gautama Buddha. Five centuries before Christ, Buddha exclaimed: "Birth and eminence do not make the right to be honored; not by birth, but by conduct, is one a low person." "Ananda, one of the earliest disciples, sitting once beside a well, asked a drink of water from a chandala woman, who was drawing water from the well. She answered, 'How dost thou ask water of me, an outcast, who may not touch thee without offence?' Ananda answered: 'My sister, I ask not of thy caste. I ask thee water to drink.' And Buddha took her among his disciples."—(Burnouf, p. 205.) "Look closely," says Buddha, "and you shall see no difference between the body of a prince and the body of a slave. What is essential may dwell in the most miserable frame."—(Ibid., p. 209.)

Johnson, in the introduction to his "Oriental Religions," says: "The Chinese Buddhist priest prays at morning that the music of the bell which awakens him to his matins may sound through the whole world; and that every living soul may gain release, and find eternal peace in God. The Buddhist savior vows to manifest himself to every creature in the universe, and never to arrive at Buddhahood till all are delivered from sin into the divine rest." What else, or wherein better, is the claim of the Christian or the Jew?

"Others were not like him," says Xenophon of Socrates, "friends of the common people!"—(Memo. L., 2, 60).
Let us pause here to survey the ground over which we have advanced. The foregoing words of Jesus have, as we have seen, all met their counterparts in the precepts of other masters, in most cases long anterior to him. Some of them are even synonymous with instruction given in the Rabbinical schools of his own age and nation! "Like all the Rabbis of the time," says Renan, "Jesus expressed his doctrine in concise aphorisms. Some of these maxims come from the books of the Old Testament. Others were the thoughts of more modern sages, especially of Antigonus of Soco, Jesus, the son of Sirach, and Hillel, which were known to him, not through learned studies, but as proverbs often repeated. The synagogues were rich in maxims very happily expressed, which formed a sort of current proverb literature."—(Vie de Jesus, ch. v.) Does Jesus teach the rule of reciprocity? So do Confucius and Hillel. Does Jesus inculcate self-condemnation rather than condemnation of others? So do Mencius, Buddha, and Confucius. Does Jesus labor for the poor and outcast? Not more nobly than does Buddha. Does Jesus rebuke hypocrisy? Not one whit more emphatically than do the Eastern sages or the prophets of his own people. Does Jesus urge love to enemies, forgiveness, humility, benevolence, and unostentatious charity? None the less are these duties inculcated by other moral teachers. Indeed, some of the commands of the Hebrew master are found to be inferior to those of the Chinese or Indian sages, because of the lower motives of action urged for their performance.

Looking, then, at the comparative purity of ethical teaching expressed in these two columns, do we find as yet any reason to exalt the words of Jesus over those of Confucius, Mencius, Socrates, or Buddha? I think that no one, free from prejudice, and judging simply from the teachings thus far considered, will assign any such superiority to the doctrine of the sage of Nazareth.

It remains to examine some points in the ethical teachings of Jesus which are more peculiarly his own. One very remarkable precept in the code of morals laid down by Jesus is that which commands non-resistance. Let us compare the ideas of Confucius with those of Jesus on this point.

NON-RESISTANCE.

JESUS.

But I say unto you that ye resist not evil; for more probably, that ye resist not the evil doer; but whosoever shall smite thee on thy right cheek, turn to him the other also. And if a man will sue thee at the law, and take away thy coat, let him have thy cloak also. And whosoever shall compel thee to go a mile go with him twain.—Matt. v., 39.
Of him that taketh away thy goods, ask them not again.—Luke vi., 39.

CONFUCIUS.

Some one said: "What do you say concerning the principle that injury should be recompensed with kindness?" Confucius said: "With what then wilt thou recompense kindness? Recompense injury with justice, and recompense kindness with kindness!"—Anai, 14, 30.

The doctrine of non-resistance here advocated by Jesus is something not simply impossible for society to practise, but is a maxim which would be in the highest degree harmful to society, if put into operation. An injury done to the rights or possessions of an individual is a menace to the community at large; and hence it is due to society that such an injury be properly resented and justly punished. Imagine for a moment a country in which this law of non-resistance prevailed. It would be the favorite retreat for the depraved and vicious of every grade, from the swaggering "Ring" manipulator to the ferocious highwayman and rioter. Society could not exist under any such passive system. On the contrary, the words of Confucius exhibit the only means of good government,—the prompt recompensing of injury by justice. This is by no means the doctrine of retaliation,—an eye for an eye, and a tooth for a tooth; it is the doctrine of the just preservation of equal rights, which is the foundation of law and order in good society. At present we are living under a system of law and equity framed in accordance with the principles of Confucius, not that of Jesus. When and where our system fails is precisely when and where we fail to recompense an injury done to the individual or to society by prompt and efficient justice, or precisely when and where the instructions of Jesus on this point are obeyed.—Radical Reviewer for February.

[TO BE CONCLUDED NEXT WEEK.]

FREE RELIGION IN FRANCE.

La Religion Laïque is a monthly periodical in its second year, published at Clermont-on-the-Oise, France, under the direction of M. Charles Favety, as the Organe de Régénération Sociale. Referring to the Free Religious movement in the United States, the editor says: "It is similar to that which La Religion Laïque represents in France." The following are translations of editorial articles from this journal.—A. H.

Questionnaire Explicatif.

1.—What do you mean by laical religion?
Simply, religion without priests and without a sacerdotal body. Religion being that which unites us to God, and, through him, to all which is, we cannot suffer any intermediate agent between our conscious reason and the conscious reason of the universe.

2.—Is it a new religion which you bring to man?
We make no such pretension. Apart from our inability to do so, how could we think of creating a new religion, when we are convinced that it is humanity itself which constructs, by a secular labor, its social and religious syntheses; when we profess that religion is one, notwithstanding the diverse forms which it has assumed, and when we see it enlarge and develop with the human mind?

3.—You are evidently neither Jew, Catholic, nor Protestant: what are you, then, in relation to Christianity?

We aim to explain and fulfil it, for we are its direct heirs, at the same time that we are the progressive continuators of the Universal Religion. We are, in relation to the Christian idea, what the Evangelical doctrine was in relation to the Jewish idea. Coming a long time after Moses and Jesus, we should carry on their work. But, since the time of Jesus and Moses, the world has marched on, and we are authorized to answer, with the hero of the gospel: "We come not to destroy the law, but to fulfil."

4.—Is it necessary, in order to become your co-religionist, to have this or that belief, and to subscribe to a profession of faith in defined dogmas?

No. Beliefs are free and individual. It is not in the likeness of beliefs and in the identity of faith that we place the unity of the spirit and the efficacy of the religious bond. We place them in the eternal principles of reason, in the rules of morals, and in the adoption of a common ideal of perfection, given as the aim of life of each and all.

5.—On what conditions is one permitted to enter your Church?

On the sole condition of wishing to perfect, to improve, to develop oneself, in the triple point of view, physical, intellectual, and moral, and of aiding others to do the same.

6.—What is meant by improving oneself?
It is to correct one's faults and vices, to enlarge one's faculties and powers by labor, study, and the practice of goodness, and thus to press on towards perfection.

7.—What do you mean by perfection?
Harmony in the plenitude of existence.

8.—Do you hope to realize perfection thus understood?

Every step that we make towards the best brings us nearer the perfect state; and the relative best, conquered by our efforts, will be to us a sufficient recompense, even though we should never be able to reach absolute perfection.—La Religion Laïque (standing matter in each issue).

What we mean by "Religion."

When we say religion, in an age which confounds religion with superstition, intolerance, fanaticism, and clericalism, we must be ill-understood. But we can do nothing, if we do not endeavor to rehabilitate the word and the thing: the word, by defining it (as we have done) by the sentiment of universal solidarity,—the thing, by showing to men an ideal religion, wholly based upon reason and science, and founded upon the eternal principles of justice, liberty, order, labor, and progress, of human fraternity, and, in short, of ardent charity, not only for our fellow-creatures less advanced than ourselves, but also for the beings deprived of reason which live by our side upon the earth,—for these inferior brethren to whom we ought to spare useless sufferings, and whose ascent towards superior attainments we should promote.

In the meantime, and while laboring to prepare the future of this new religious phase, we must repent constantly that religion is a human work, and consequently imperfect; but also immortal and progressive like the human soul, and that we must not identify religion with this or that religious system. No; religion is neither Christianity, Catholic nor Protestant, Latin nor Greek, nor Moslem, Mohammedanism, Buddhism, nor Brahmanism. These are accidental and provisional forms of the religious idea which will pass away, after having served their time, as so many other religious forms have passed away before them. Religious forms, like political ones, and like all social institutions, are human products. These all manifest the mental condition and the degree of development of the races, the peoples, and the generations in which they were implanted, and by which they were maintained. If, therefore, you find in the religion of your country and of your epoch all those bad fruits of ignorance, of folly, and of barbarism which you call superstition, fanaticism, sacerdotal exploits, and so forth, it is because your fathers, your grandfathers, and those of your ancestors who conceived or accepted these dogmas, these beliefs, these religious and ecclesiastical practices, and who transmitted them to you, were, in this respect, ignorant, foolish, and savage, and that you are very much so yourselves in being satisfied with them.

But, as changes in social and political institutions do not prevent society from existing and the political body from continuing, so the present religions, churches, worship, and faiths will pass away, as have passed the ancient religions. But religion will never pass away; and not only will it never pass away, but it will go on developing with the human mind, and religious bonds will always be seen gaining at once in strength and in extent, in proportion as men increase the circle of their affections and their knowledge. For, as Auguste Comte has well said, thus giving the lie to the anti-religious positivists who claim his name: "The general law of human advancement consists, under one aspect or another, in man's becoming more and more religious."

And why should man, in proportion as he progresses, become more and more religious? Because he cannot progress without being in harmony with the laws of Nature, of reason, and of conscience, and because progress is the object even of religion,—but of religion well understood, of that religion which makes of us all reasonable and conscious beings, intelligent co-operators in universal creation, and which tends to unite us to God by making us comprehend and wish for and love that solidarity which binds us at first to our fellow-creatures and to our earthly domain, and afterwards to all which is.

Understand well, therefore, that you cannot improve, perfect, or exalt yourself, that is to say, correct in yourself a fault, a vice, a baseness, or an ignorance, and acquire a quality, a power, a beauty, or a knowledge which you fall short of,—you cannot see the sphere of your love, your activity, your intelligence enlarged,—without finding yourself thereby even more religious: that is, more in communication with the universality of beings and of things, and more nearly approached to the divine condition, which is no other than that plenitude of existence of which we can form an idea, by imagining a being arrived at that point when, having no longer anything to acquire for himself, since he possesses all perfections, he has that supreme and ineffable happiness; of laboring only for others; of being everything to all, and, living in all that is; of living at the same time for all that is, was, or shall be.

Such is the sublime function which we attribute to the conscious Mx of the universe; such is the divine ideal which we bear within us, and which we offer to our contemporaries as the objective of the new faith. —La Religion Laïque for January, 1878.

Reason is God.

"Man moves, and God fixes his goal."
"Man acts, and God controls him." I do not like this saying of Fénelon, systematized by Bossuet and applied by him to history, in his Treatise upon Universal History, and to the government of States, in his Polity Drawn from the Holy Scriptures. It is the fatalistic and oriental side of Christianity, and it is not its best side. Happily, there is another which has often neutralized this, and will end by destroying it, it is the affirmation of free will, or the faculty which the conscious being possesses of free self-determination for good or for evil.

No, it is not true that man is a jumping-jack in the hands of an all-powerful God who pulls the string. It is not true that he acts without knowing whether he is going. He knows what he wills, and he goes where he wills to go, whenever, being within the truth, he remains in harmony, and if, doing all he can, giving all he ought, he respects the rights of others as well as the laws of Nature, and does not overstep the limits of his own power.

No, it must not be said that man moves vainly, and that the power which causes him to move is exterior to him. Man bears within himself his own principle of motion. It is a free will, sovereign and conscious.

What! Is it not God who rules the world, and do I deny his providence?

That which rules the world is REASON. And if you say with me that Reason is God, or that God is Reason itself, the supreme, complete, perfect, universal reason, then we are in accord. We are even so with Fénelon, when, in a moment of greater lucidity, he exclaims: "O Reason, art thou not the God whom I seek?" On that day he had found him (we always find God when we seek for him in good faith): did he always remain faithful to him?

But see what we gain by defining the words. Having defined God by Reason, or rather having identified the idea of God with Reason elevated to the highest power, and taken in its full and entire perfection, we shall come very soon to understand each other, you and I, and perhaps to find ourselves in agreement,—even if, like Fénelon, you are a Christian and a Catholic,—even if, like the most of your contemporaries educated at the college or the seminary, you have become a positivist and atheist.

In the first case, I will recall to you that, according to the Gospel of St. John, Reason is "that light with which every man comes into the world"; and that man, being a conscious reason, does not act in vain while he makes use of his reason, but knows whether he goes, so long as he has not falsified, obscured, or lost it. And this, because his reason is a spark of the divine reason, and if relative while exercised in time, it can always rectify itself by imbibing, through science and reflection, from the absolute of pure reason; in short, because the human soul, "made in the image of God," is always able, when it possesses itself in liberty, to commune by the Word, the Logos, with the divine fire of which it is a spark, and which it shall one day rejoin when it shall have realized the perfect life.

And this is the true Christian doctrine, whether the Pope wills it or not.

In the second case, in which you may be, reader, that of a positivist or atheist, I will content myself with saying to you that, while recognizing with science that there is order in the universe, that everything within it is subjected to laws, and that these laws reveal to your own reason the logic of things, you have recognized that it is Reason which governs the world. Now the characteristic of reason is to know itself, to reflect on itself, to be master of itself. But, say you, this reason of things is inherent in things, and we ascertain it only by the study of relations. It is not outside of beings and of things; it is not exterior to the world: be it so! It is not so any more than yours is exterior to your being. The supreme Reason is not outside of supreme and universal existence. The conscious Mx of the universe is no more separated from the universe than your conscious me is separated from your organism; which does not hinder it from distinguishing itself from the universe as you distinguish yourself from all your organs, and from remaining itself in its identity in the midst of the incessant flux of the forms which manifest it.

But, no matter. I willingly make the sacrifice of all these reasonings, if you do not accept them, and content myself with this: Will you, yes or no, respect the laws of Nature and obey the prescriptions of Reason? Yes,—is it not? Very well; you have confessed my God. To obey God or to obey Reason,—is it absolutely the same thing.

But what shall be said to those who, in the name of God, combat Reason, forbid its exercise by the human horde, put the light under a bushel, and thus seek to destroy in the human soul the spark of divine fire? What can be said to them, when there is no intellectual relationship with them possible? Indeed, what spiritual communion can be established between men without the Word, which is the divine reason incarnated in humanity? But one thing can be said to them, the same which Jesus said to them a very long time ago: it is that they are guilty of the sin against the Holy Spirit, and that this is THE ONLY CRIME WHICH CAN NEVER BE FORGIVEN.

IS MODERN CIVILIZATION THE PRODUCT OF CHRISTIANITY?

A LECTURE IN THE FREE RELIGIOUS ASSOCIATION COURSE, BY WILLIAM J. POTTER, IN HORTICULTURAL HALL.

William J. Potter delivered a lecture before the Free Religious Association yesterday afternoon, on the subject, "Is Modern Civilization the Product of Christianity?" He, of course, took the negative side of the question. He began by comparing the distinguishing characteristics of Christianity as contained in the teachings of Christ and the New Testament, and of modern civilization. First and foremost in our civilization was the characteristic of the assertion of human reason in opposition to the claims of a simply traditional authority, whether the claim be put forward in the name of political or ecclesiastical power. Other characteristics were a spirit of philanthropy, individual independence, the promotion of the natural sciences, a zeal for wealth and what wealth can provide, commercial and industrial pursuits, the individual well-being, and the rights in national existence. If these were the products of Christianity, we might expect to find their elements in the Christian religion; but, with the exception of the spirit of philanthropy, not one of them did we find there. Christ's teachings were indeed opposed to some of the most characteristic and ruling tendencies of modern society. They discouraged rather than perpetuated the spirit of material enterprise and commercial profit; rebuked the desire for wealth. Modern civilization, for instance, said: "Girdle the earth with commerce, and join the nations in trade." Christianity replied: "Go ye and teach the gospel to all nations." Modern civilization said that we must look out for ourselves and improve our condition. The Christianity of the New Testament said: "Hold all things in common, and that the love of money is the root of all evil." Mr. Potter gave numerous illustrations similar to the above, showing the difference between the spirit of modern times and of early Christianity, summarizing by saying that the virtues especially inculcated by Christianity were self-denial, self-sacrifice, gentleness, contentment, resignation, long-suffering, and submissiveness. These were not the virtues that modern civilization especially encouraged. The dominant virtues of the Church had lost ground in proportion as the characteristic qualities of modern society had strongly asserted themselves; and these were self-respect, self-reliance, independence, manliness, pride of character, love of truth, and mental culture. Any person who would attempt to live in accordance with the teachings of the New Testament would appear woefully out of place in modern society. The Shakers were mentioned by the speaker as an illustration of this.

But on the ground that it was not fair to compare modern society with early Christianity solely, the speaker sketched the history of Christianity briefly. Under its sway the Roman Empire fell. The Byzantine Empire was founded on virgin soil by the Church, and its disgraceful history was held up as what had been accomplished by Christianity where it had sole control. The darkness of the Middle Ages under the rule of the Roman Church was spoken of; and it was asserted that the modern civilization, which dated back to about the time of the Reformation, was not the result of the Reformation, but that the Reformation was one of the results of it, brought about by a revival of Pagan classics and the spread of Mohammedan liberal influences through Europe from Spain. The Church was barred to all light from without and from within; stood directly in the path of progress, and was to be held responsible, largely, for the chaos of the dark ages. Religion had taken color and type and temper from the nations and races through which it had passed. Modern civilization, since the hour of its birth, had been making a new Christianity. Protestantism was the product of modern civilization; and Christianity was becoming more and more modified, till now the ancient authority of the Church of Christ was reduced in some quarters to the thinnest shades. The time was approaching when Christianity would abdicate its own authority, and yield even its own name to the name of humanity. The Church had thus far been guided by Paul's exhortation, "Stand fast in the liberty wherewith Christ has made you free"; but a greater than Paul or than Jesus, the spirit of modern civilization, now exhorted, "Stand fast in the liberty wherewith the truth shall make you free." —Boston Advertiser, March 4.

Poetry.

[FOR THE INDEX.]

MORNING HYMN.

BY KATHLEEN WRIGHT.

The sunrise from the mountain height
Purges the dark night hours;
The morning breeze with fingers light
Awakes the sleeping flowers.
The woodlands ring, the small birds sing,
The glittering waters run,
The little moths on gauzy wing
Dance in the morning sun.

Hark! hark! hear the lark!
Behold, the day is dawning;
Sleep no more, the night is o'er;
Arise and hail the morning.

Doest thou not feel? Doest thou not see?
Doest thou not hear the voice
That calls each living creature forth
To worship and rejoice?
Alas! to me there cannot come
One gleam of morning light;
My soul sits in the cavern's gloom,
And weeps in hopeless night.

Hark! hark! hear the lark!
Behold, the day is dawning;
Sleep no more, the night is o'er;
Arise and hail the morning.

In hopeless dark no soul can keep,
No prison-wall can bind it;
It cannot lie too dark and deep
For God's great light to find it.
The voice that fills the morning breeze,
And bids the tree-tops grow,
Is calling to the little seed
Hid in the ground below.

Hark! hark! hear the lark!
Behold, the day is dawning;
Awake, arise, strive!
Come forth and hail the morning.

CASH RECEIPTS.

N.B.—Postage stamps are not included here, though credited on subscriptions, etc.

FOR THE WEEK ENDING MARCH 16.

R. G. Macgill, $10; A. J. S. Wells, $3.20; Edwin Brown, $3.20; Maggie Devoe, $1.50; Louise J. King, $3.50; Schneider & Rueppels, $2.20; C. W. Pierce, $3.20; Dr. E. Moyer, $2; Hon. E. P. Harbut, $25; Miss M. S. Devereaux, $3.20; R. Conrad, $3.20; H. Andriessen, $1; Thos. J. Taft, $3.20; A. D. Kimball, $1; Samuel Johnson, 50 cents; Henry Boal, $2.20; E. Whitcher, $1; Delano Patrick, $2.20; N. W. Covell, $2.20; C. H. Webb, $3.20; E. H. Warren, $4.95; Dr. M. J. S. Blake, $2.20; Mrs. C. B. Richmond, $4.40; Cash, $5; R. Burnham, $3.20; Rowland Connor, $10.27; George Schmidt, $5; J. D. Stetson, $1; E. B. McKenzie, $2; J. H. W. Toohy, 75 cents; Peter Newcomer, $3.20; John A. Todd, $2; Geo. F. Schild, $4; Mrs. E. A. Driver, $3.25; John Aulbach, 10 cents; E. Bowron, 45 cents; E. W. Weir, $11; H. B. Thomas, 15 cents; Jas. B. Shane, $1.85; G. E. Baxter, $3.10; L. J. Cherrington, 15 cents; H. T. Rogers, $1; Dr. L. P. Babb, $25; Seth M. Allen, $2; E. B. Wolcott, $10; W. F. Abbot, 10 cents; Deanna Murphy, $3; Hon. Mrs. Henry Wodehouse, $7.35; J. C. Grierson, $3.20; J. J. Nichols, $3.20; Dr. W. W. Grant, $3.20; Rev. F. O. Neilson, $3.20; Isaac Ketoham, $3.20.

All receipts of cash will be acknowledged as above, and no other receipt sent unless specially requested. Persons who do not see their remittances acknowledged within three weeks after sending, will please notify us.

N.B.—Please remit by post-office money-order, by registered letter, or by draft on Boston or New York. Checks on interior banks are liable to discount, and the term of subscription will be proportionally shortened in the credit.

N.B.—Orders for Tracts or single numbers of THE INDEX which are not on hand will, if of small amount, be otherwise filled to the same amount without further notice.

The Index.

BOSTON, MARCH 21, 1878.

THE INDEX is published every Thursday by the INDEX ASSOCIATION, at No. 231 WASHINGTON STREET, BOSTON. TOLEDO Office, No. 35 Monroe Street: J. T. FREY, Agent and Clerk. All letters should be addressed to the Boston Office.

THE INDEX accepts every result of science and sound learning, without seeking to harmonize it with the Bible. It recognizes no authority but that of reason and right. It believes in Truth, Freedom, Progress, Equal Rights, and Brotherly Love.

N. B.—No contributor to THE INDEX, editorial or otherwise, is responsible for anything published in its columns except for his or her own individual statements. Editorial contributions will in every case be distinguished by the name or initials of the writer.

FRANCIS ELLINGWOOD ABBOT, Editor.
OCTAVIUS BROOKS FROTHINGHAM, WILLIAM J. POTTER,
WILLIAM H. SPENCER, MRS. E. D. CHERKE, GEORGE JACOB
HOLYOAKE (England), DAVID H. CLARK, MRS. ELIZABETH
GARY STANTON, J. L. STODDARD, ELIZUR WRIGHT, C. D. B.
MILLS, W. D. LE SUEUR, BENJ. F. UNDERWOOD, ALBERT
WARREN KELSEY, Editorial Contributors.

HOW TO ORGANIZE A LIBERAL LEAGUE.

ONE WAY TO DO IT.

Reader, do you desire to organize a Liberal League in your town? If so, this is a good way to do it: Draw up a paper in the following form, and present it to all the liberals in your vicinity:—

"We, the undersigned, are in favor of organizing a Local Liberal League in the town of —, and agree to meet for that purpose at the house of — on Saturday evening next. We each agree to pay the sum set opposite our respective names towards the ten dollars required to procure a charter from the National Liberal League."

Names.	Residence.	Amount.

When you have procured ten names and ten dollars, you are ready for organization. Of course, the more names the better. I shall be pleased to furnish form of Constitution when required. Reader, will you attend to this work immediately, before it passes from your mind?

H. L. GREEN,

Chair. Ex. Com. N. L. L.

SALAMANCA, N.Y., March 15, 1878.

MR. H. L. GREEN informs us that "there is a bill before the New York State Legislature repealing the law exempting 'ministers of the gospel' and church property from taxation"; and he suggests that every New York liberal write to his representative at Albany in support of this bill. We cordially second the suggestion.

AT THE New Hampshire election of this month, the following circular was distributed in the city of Manchester:—

TO THE CITIZENS OF WARD THREE:

Fellow-citizen,—Are you a Christian? If so, can you consistently go to the polls and deposit your ballot for an infidel?

James B. Straw openly declares his hostility to the reading of the Bible in our public schools, and avows his intentions to banish its use by all legal measures.

James B. Straw is in favor of the repeal of the prohibitory and all laws which shall prevent the free sale of intoxicating liquors. These are sentiments which he openly avows.

If you are a member of the Church of Christ, or a law-abiding citizen, how can you vote for James B. Straw?

Mr. William Little, of that city, informs us that Mr. Straw was nevertheless elected alderman,—a fact which speaks well for the voters. Usually, the churches prefer to work out of sight; they will both gain and lose, if they show their hands too freely.

REV. J. L. DUDLEY, D.D., formerly of Milwaukee, now pastor of the Twenty-eighth Congregational Society of this city, and successor of that great radical, Theodore Parker, was recently (his consent having been previously obtained) elected one of the Vice-Presidents of the First Liberal League of Boston. He has since declined this position through the following letter, which ought to be published here in justice to him, since his name was included in the published list of officers last week:—

BOSTON, March 13, 1878.

MRS. J. P. TITCOMB, Sec'y., etc.:—

I find I must decline the official position to which your League so courteously invite me.

Upon examination of the principles and purposes of the Liberal League, I find myself in accord with some of them; with others at variance. Acceptance of official position, therefore, would be unjust, alike to the League and to myself. My consent to the use of my name, as you asked it, was hasty, based on general impression instead of specific knowledge. Please present my decision respectfully to the First Liberal League of Boston, with assurances that it is based, not on any want of interest in the great public questions in hand, but upon consistency, conviction, and freedom.

Very truly yours,

J. L. DUDLEY.

FEERING.

This little note has arrested my thought, and more than that:—

March 3, 1878.

Dear Sir,—In THE INDEX of the 21st ult., you say: "To our mind the controversies on this question of a future life are profitless; we think there are grounds of hope, but none of knowledge."

Were your time and strength less heavily taxed, I would beg you to indicate—if it can be done in one or two brief sentences—in what direction these "grounds" lie. Could I make them available for even one foothold, I would prize them more highly than all other "real estate."

With all possible brevity and with cordial respect and esteem, Yours, WM. DUDGEON.

F. E. ABBOT.

To these exquisitely simple words, whose pathos will be hidden from all but the soul which has moved in the deep places of human experience, I cannot make answer in any conventional form; I must throw aside the useful but exasperating plural, and speak man to man. Would that I had somewhat to say that might prove a torch in the darkness, even to myself! But every best sentiment within forbids me to keep silence altogether.

It need not be said here that all the "revelations" so eagerly tendered to us on this theme reveal nothing to him who has weighed them in the balance. They slake the thirst no better than a goblet filled with dust; I turn from them all with an inexpressible weariness at such a mockery of water.

Nor do I for one instant dream that the "grounds of hope" I had in mind will be "available for even one foothold," to another solitary soul. It would be presumption to speak with any such end in view. You must settle this question—if it can be settled—for yourself. No other mind can make you wiser. If I were to be guilty of the ineffable wrong of pretending to illumine you, I should be false to you and to myself alike. All I can do is to make my confession; and this, because I have no words of instruction for others, and can only expose secret musings that must be valueless for every one besides myself, I have shrunk from doing. There are some dull spirits that will insist on taking my "grounds of hope" for arguments—that will insist on refuting them. If I had "grounds of knowledge" to offer, argument would be in order and refutation possible; and I do verily believe that some day man will be wise enough to make up a scientific conviction on this question that haunts us all. Well—it is perhaps necessary to be misunderstood, and what matters it after all? Beneath the wistfulness and pathos of the gentle interrogation that has been put to me, I seem to hear the suppressed cry of the human soul itself, solitary before the star-lit infinite of the night; it has thrilled me; it has forbidden me to be silent.

Yet what have I to say? I scarcely know how to begin. Why do I not yield to the triumphant demonstrations of the would-be wise, who tell me complacently that the dream of another life is absurd? I have asked myself "this 'why' many and many a time, for—beginning with the physical alone—they have the best of the argument. Ay, but there is the rub! I know less of my physical than of my moral life; I see that no physicist has been shrewd enough to climb to that; I see that by all his own premises he has no right to admit it; I see that his logic, beginning with molecules, must end with molecules; I see that physics have no right to admit the bare existence of conscience. Physicists may twist and equivocate all they please; they shatter their own philosophy into pieces finer than powdered glass the very moment that they step outside the circle of matter and motion, or admit into it any conception not analyzable into these. Yet show me the physicist who has resolved conscience, love, thought, into matter or the motions of matter! Why should I be called upon to concede that these facts of consciousness are at bottom mere physical facts? Prove it, I say! The demand to make such a concession is a barefaced appeal to faith, and I have done with faith forever. Am I going to be wax in the hands of any priest-theorist? Logic, reason,—that is my king alone, and I will obey him if he takes me to perdition or annihilation; but he permits no pewter substitute for his golden crown. Of the two extremes, materialism and idealism, the latter has an infinite logical advantage over the other. I anchor upon facts; and the first fact I know is—my own soul in presence of that which is not soul. The imperious intellect forbids me to accept either shallow extreme; it demands a philosophy that is not a suicide.

Yet all this throws no light on the future of my own soul, with these wonders of thought, conscience, will, action, love. I am freed from the impertinent intrusion of sciolism parading in the peacock-plumes of science—that is all. Yes, that is all; but it is much. That which is concerned with the question of a future life is the intellectual, moral, affectional part of me; it is much to see that physics has nothing, absolutely nothing, to say about it, either here or anywhere. It is a higher science that must deal with its destiny, and that higher science is not yet born. We moderns think that science is maturing; ridiculous! It is still in its swaddling-clothes. The eagle eye shoots its vision far into the future, and perceives the orderly growth of sciences as yet scarcely so much as thought of. Who is so rash as to map out their discoveries in advance? To-day we deal with hope, not knowledge. But has hope anything but superstition to stand on?

I speak for myself—yes. The soul asks no leave to be; it is here, the supreme fact of all I know. Death creates no presumption of its extinction except on premises that would deny its existence here. I can only believe in my consciousness now in utter defiance of all physicalism; it is no harder to believe in my consciousness hereafter. Molecules, if I stick to them, conduct me to other molecules or their combinations, but never to my consciousness; I cannot believe in my consciousness at all without abandoning them, and leaping the vast chasm between the physical and the spiritual. Yet here I am, believing more certainly in my consciousness than in the molecules; it is idiocy to doubt it. Logic declares to me: "Of two things, one—either adhere to physics and deny your consciousness now, or adhere to your consciousness and admit that physics can raise no faintest presumption against its continuance forever." The man has not yet been born who, understanding that, can break its force. I obey logic; I plead no fanciful intuition; I insist on reason, and will not be put off with faith, Orthodox or materialistic.

But all this is only to sweep away the ignorant pretentiousness of negations that have no logical foundation. Why do I hope for a future life?

Let me be frank with myself; I am not very anxious for it, and contemplate my own lot in this vast universe with invincible sangfroid. It is no consideration of my own destiny that kindles a powerful hope. It is when I stand beside the grave of those I love, or in my thought shrink from the stroke that no prayers or tears can avert, that the longing for the deathlessness of beloved spirits overmasters me. It is when I behold the Himalayah heights of humanity—the Socrates, the Spinoza, the Emersons, the rare peaks of spiritual greatness that seem evermore bathed in the pure sunlight of the ideal,—it is then that the hope blazes forth, and refuses to be quenched. And the great ground of this hope is the IMMEASURABLE VALUE OF THE HUMAN SOUL. Just in proportion as I realize that, and comprehend that a splendid soul is the very chef-d'œuvre of Nature, the artistic masterpiece of creativeness, the glorious efflorescence of a lapsed eternity, do I also become permeated and saturated with the hope that Nature who creates shall be wise enough to preserve. On the one hand the beauty and the sublimity of humanity,—on the other hand its imperfection and incompleteness, even in its grandest growths,—these strike upon the slumbering hope like the spark upon the tinder, and kindle it to a flame. Fluctuate though it must with the varying moods of mind and the shifting scenes of life, this hope grows strong and vigorous under all influences that exalt my appreciation of the intrinsic worth and dignity of the human soul. This is the chief ground of hope, as hinting the deeper purposes of Nature, and suggesting to thought a possible reason of man's existence and a possible destiny that awaits him. It is not the only ground; the great question whether Nature is only mechanical or whether the mechanism is the utterance of universal Mind connects itself with the question of human destiny. To me the cosmos is a vast system of hieroglyphics, with a meaning behind the symbolism of form and color and law, to which I find no lexicon but mind. This makes me hope noble things at last. But I am content not to know, since knowledge is to-day beyond my reach,—content to see in human life now and here enough to lend it moral dignity surpassing all else before my eyes. That is a deathless root of glorious hope.

A demonstration? No. An argument? No. A ground of fixed conviction? No. Yet, for all that, a ground of hope to one, at least, of the myriad tossed and tired minds that have put out to sea on the vast ocean of modern thought—worthless to others, I doubt not, yet not withheld when one wistful voyager calls to another across the waves—"Brother, whither are we bound?"

F. E. A.

THE LIBERAL LEAGUE AND THE WOMEN.

A League which goes for "universal education the basis of UNIVERSAL SUFFRAGE in this secular Republic" cannot logically be confined to one sex. Practically, by having women as well as men for its officers, it is not. This is a vital point. The League stands for the earthly interests of the human race, one and all, molecule and mass; and, in going for justice to each and all, it is not going for the domination of the physically stronger sex over the weaker.

There have been two great movements within the memory of some of us,—one against secret, oath-bound societies; and the other against chattel slavery, in which considerable mistakes were made which the Liberal League, it is to be hoped, will avoid.

After the abduction and murder of William Morgan, in 1836, by the Freemasons, for revealing their secrets, a popular storm arose against the inhuman oaths by which men had bound themselves to commit that murder, and against the unjust influence in politics which this oath-bound order maintained. But the good men who organized themselves to put down this order committed two mistakes. First, they acted as if women had no interest in the matter. Second, as if the order was to be utterly abolished, not harmonized with human rights; as if a social institution, which had great faults, could have no good in it, and no right to exist. Of course it failed, though it taught a useful lesson. It will, no doubt, be a good while before another "free and accepted" mason, for outgrowing the brass hoops of his order, is butchered by his brethren; and probably still longer before the mysterious fraternity, without sisters, carries so high a hand in politics as it did previous to 1836.

Ecclesiasticism and freemasonry are both of them institutions which ignore the rights of women, or assume their mental inferiority. The first is a male hierarchy, which, in one sense, does not exclude women,—for it carefully gathers them together, as a shepherd does his sheep, that it may derive sustenance from the peculiar sensitiveness of the female heart. It never allows them to teach. We read of no female Pope. It is only when a Protestant church begins to throw Paul overboard that a woman is allowed to get into a pulpit.

The exclusively male church of freemasonry leaves the wife solitary at home, while the husband indulges in a coarse socialism, with as many male brutes as that rough and demoralising pleasure can draw together. The wives are humbugged by the pitiful dole which the fraternity ekes out to masonic widows.

If this is not exactly so, where is the use of the secrecy? As soon as freemasons take their wives into their lodges, they will have a right to ask the world to believe them sincere men, and not much sooner.

Now the Liberal League will not commit the mistake of anti-masonry in seeking to abolish either of these churches, and especially not that which is beginning to admit that women have, or may have, some rights which men—that is, a male government,—are bound to respect.

It is not fighting to destroy the churches, but to establish the Golden Rule of justice, both inside and outside of them. And it ought to have learned two things from the movement against chattel slavery, which began in 1833 seriously to organize itself as a purely moral or religious crusade: first, that the female sex, having the deepest personal interest in it, cannot be left out; second, that moral steam without being applied to the political piston, is about as good as wasted.

At the Anti-Slavery Convention in Philadelphia, at which a national anti-slavery society was formed, in 1833, the calmest, deepest, broadest speech was made by a woman, Mrs. Lucretia Mott. Women circulated petitions, raised money, faced mobs, shamed men into action by their courage and hope. In the spring of 1840, women of the city of New York—I do not say the women, but more than one hundred of the most intelligent and respectable women, who risked much by doing it—signed an anti-slavery petition to Congress, asking simply and humbly for the abolition of slavery in the District of Columbia, and wherever else Congress had power to abolish it. The petition was transmitted to Vice-President Richard M. Johnson, President of the Senate, and a slaveholder, with a very respectful letter, by Mr. Lewis Tappan, one of the Executive Committee of the American Anti-Slavery Society. Vice-President Johnson was a pretty coarse-grained man, and not likely to shine in any literary effort; but he had the wit to employ a very polished writer, Mr. Barnabas Bates, the same that wrote his excellent Sunday-Mail

Report, to answer Mr. Tappan, to whom Johnson had the supreme impudence to return the ladies' petition without presenting it. Mr. Bates, who had risen high enough in Democracy to recognize the right of a secular Republic to have the mail carried on one day as well as another, had not risen high enough to recognize the right of a woman to be regarded as an independent human being, having a right to an equal voice with men, in making laws for the government of both sexes; so he wrote for Vice-President Johnson a very remarkable letter to Lewis Tappan, which is probably the strongest semblance of an argument against the political rights of women that was ever penned, or ever will be. It culminates in this precious sentence: "The rights of women are secure through the coarser sex,—their fathers, their husbands, and their brothers." "Coarser" is good. The patent right of exclusively masculine political power properly rests on coarseness.

Yet Mr. Lewis Tappan, who for six or seven years had been heroically fighting against slavery, and had had his house sacked by a pro-slavery mob, was so bound up in his Pauline Christianity, that when, about a month after the receipt of this letter, so insulting to his anti-slavery sisters, women claimed the right to vote in the meeting of the American Anti-Slavery Society, he reported decidedly that it was unconstitutional, and not to be tolerated: not at all less sad and foolish was the decision of many leading anti-slavery men at the same time, that anti-slavery political action, as a party for liberty, was insane and ridiculous.

The Liberal League ought to be, and must be, too liberal to commit either of these mistakes. Its object, which is one in which all just and true men and women do or will join, can be effected only by political action; and since women, even more than men, both in their Church and State relations, are to be benefited by it, their moral forces, so long and so meanly repressed, both in Church and State, should be welcomed to its platform,—to as great work and as good pay as it yields to men.

[The Liberal League cannot and does not recognize any difference in the fundamental rights of citizens, whether men or women. It ignores all difference of sex in its platform, which demands equal rights for all. We only wish that women in general would give to this new movement the same devotion which they gave to the anti-slavery movement; they will, when they understand it as well as some of their number do already. Can they not set to men the example so much needed? The doors stand wide open for their welcome advent.—ED.]

PERSECUTION IN PENNSYLVANIA.

The so-called "Seventh Day Baptists" believe Saturday, and not Sunday, to be the "Sabbath"; in which opinion they have the Bible wholly on their side, but are persecuted by other Protestants, who put their own arbitrary notions in place of the Scriptures they profess to revere as Divinely dictated. Says a Pennsylvania paper:—

"Their trouble in this State appears to arise from the fact that, wherever they exist, they are in the minority, and are therefore persecuted by the sects who insist upon observing the first day of the week as the Sabbath, and desire to compel everybody else to adopt their view of the Sabbath question."

Senator Jones recently presented in the State Legislature at Harrisburg the following memorial, adopted last September by the national conference of these "Seventh Day Baptists":—

To the Honorable the General Assembly of the State of Pennsylvania: Your memorialists, representatives of the "Seventh Day Baptist" churches in the United States of America, in general conference assembled at New Salem, West Virginia, this 20th day of September, A. D. 1877, respectfully represent that they have had a denominational existence in this country of more than two hundred years, and at the present time they have membership extending into fifteen States of the Union; that our members are loyal and law-abiding citizens, able and willing to bear their equitable share in the maintenance and support of our civil institutions; that they do conscientiously believe the seventh day of the week, commonly called Saturday, to be the Sabbath day, set apart by God, at the close of his creative works, and blessed and sanctified for man, and on Sinai he commanded to be kept holy, making it an inseparable part of the Decalogue, and sacredly binding on all men in all times; that all the other six days of the week are days in which men may rightfully engage in the secular affairs of life.

Your memorialists further represent, that there is an act of legislation on the statute books of Pennsylvania, which was passed in the year 1794, making it a penal offence to do secular work on the first day of the week, commonly called Sunday, and that under the provisions of that act, members of our denomination have, from time to time, been subject to pains and penalties; and that such penalties are now being endured by one Daniel C. Waldo, of Mosierstown, County of Crawford, State of Pennsylvania.

Such a law, we respectfully submit to your honorable body, is oppressive and unjust, opposed to the genius of our free institutions, whose very basis was laid in religious liberty and freedom to worship God in accordance with the dictates of conscience.

It is opposed to the plain provision of the Constitution of the United States, article first, of amendments, and to the bill of rights of the Constitution of Pennsylvania.

For such reasons, we humbly petition your honorable body to repeal the said act of 1794, or so modify it as to exempt all persons observing the seventh day of the week as the Sabbath from its provisions; and for this your memorialists will ever pray. Signed by the President of the Conference,

D. E. MAXSON, D.D.

L. A. PLATTS, Sec'y.

It is not difficult to see that these "Seventh Day Baptists" are oppressed by the Sabbath legislation of their fellow-Christians. Is it any more difficult to see that all non-Christians are oppressed by the same legislation?

Communications.

THE PURIFICATION OF LIBERALISM.

OZARK, Mo., Feb. 10, 1878.

DEAR MR. ARBOT:—

Would it not be well for you to use more effort toward elevating the character of liberalism, and less in attempting to organize it? Did I not think that liberalism is in danger of becoming a reproach to the cause of freethought, I should not presume to offer these suggestions; but my earnestness to see liberals take the front rank among the best men and women of the age must excuse my freedom in speaking so plainly.

You cannot, I know, feel any fraternal sympathy for many liberals who are claiming to be representatives of our cause. There is a certain odious fanaticism now becoming prevalent among liberals that is in my opinion the worst foe to the interests of true liberalism. This spirit of bigotry with its peculiar method of agitation is doing more to render freethought repulsive to the people who have some predisposition toward liberality in religion than any other cause. Refinement and liberality have no affinity for this coarse, irreverent style of discussion; and modest, self-respecting people are going to regard with fear and distrust a movement that develops such a large per cent. of the most repulsive form of intolerance. I verily believe that this class of liberal is doing more to intensify the opposition of the Church to freethought than any other influence. If I wanted to secure the passage of the Christian Amendment, I could think of no better method of forwarding the movement than by circulating some liberal books and papers, and by sending certain heroic liberal speakers through the country to address the masses on the issues of liberalism. This style of assault that shows no respect for the most sacred sentiments that the human heart has ever learned to cherish will never win with the masses. The more liberalism is advocated by these sledge-hammer reformers, the less popular will it become.

But there is more than the manner of discussion employed by some liberals that is endangering liberalism. Every revolutionary theory that seeks to subvert all or any part of our social or political system comes before the world in the name of liberalism. Free love, communism, and every other insane and filthy ism does the garb of liberty, and claims fellowship with the freethinkers' cause. It is well known to every intelligent liberal that these social and political fanatics who are restive under any system of authority, and who clamor loudly for the reconstruction of the world on their pet theories, are freethinkers in religion largely. And many liberals are disposed to excuse the radical errors into which these wild reformers have run, because they are brave assailants of the Church and the Bible. I do not wish to establish an inquisition to persecute heresy among liberals; but I do want to see the distinctions between truth and error, between decency and indecency, pointed out by the leaders of liberalism as by other teachers. Must we tamely submit to the injustice of having every abomination taught in the name of liberalism because some one will be offended if we make a protest? Is liberalism so elastic in its meaning that it can be made to cover every erratic heresy that all other respectable systems of belief disown? Cannot liberalism be defined in its moral bearings, because definitions would exclude some doctrines that are now taught in its name? Suppose any other party should refuse to define its principles, and attempt to fellowship every fanatic and fanaticism that appropriated its name, what would liberals think of it?

I believe in drawing distinctions, when distinctions exist; and I think they are well developed now between certain classes of liberals. I claim to be a liberal myself, but frankly avow that I have no more sympathy with a large per cent. of liberals and their doctrines than I have with the Pope of Rome and the dogmas of Catholicism.

It is time, I think, for liberals to take an unequivocal stand, and declare to the world just what they are and what they are aiming to accomplish. We cannot sail long under such a vague standard as new floats from our mast. We must make our colors more definite, if we would exert any moral influence in the world. Liberalism cannot be made to signify every thing that now passes under its name. I am for a more definitely defined liberalism, if it should have not half so many supporters. Let us have a little plain talk about what constitutes liberalism. The question must finally be met and answered. Some people will of course be offended by this drawing of lines; but truth and candor demand that it be done. I am always ready to define my position, and am willing to bear the consequences of my definitions.

Use this letter as you please. I do not seek any concealment of my convictions, though their expression should cost me the good opinion of some reader of THE INDEX.

Yours truly, H. CLAY NEVILLE.

THE IOWA CONVENTION.

FRIEND ABBOT:—

I send you paper with report of the second day's proceedings of the Iowa convention. Therein you will find the Constitution of the Iowa Liberal League, the resolutions adopted by the convention, and the officers of new League for the ensuing year. Please insert the same. The first day's proceedings were opened by the election of Joel P. Davis, of Des Moines, President; E. C. Walker, of Florence, Secretary; and Rev. H. A. Reid, of Des Moines, Assistant Secretary.

While the attendance was not as large as could have been desired, yet in earnestness the delegates made up what they lacked in numbers. During the first session committees were appointed, resolutions introduced and referred, much interesting discussion had, and some routine work disposed of, and the committees were directed to report at 9 o'clock Friday morning. A specially interesting feature of this first meeting was the reading of Gerald Massey's beautiful and stirring poem, "The People's Advent," by Mrs. Mattie Hulet Parry. It was excellently rendered.

In the evening, B. F. Underwood delivered a lecture upon the principles of the Liberal League, and the relations of Church and State. It was a good lecture, well and fitly spoken.

While we lack a good platform of principles, we have a very good working organization; and it now only remains for us to go to work. Liberals! only by organization can we effect political reformations. Personal thought is the initiatory force in all reforms; but when it comes to action, a good, compact organization is imperatively necessary. The underlying principles of no reform can be embodied in the fundamental law—in the political institutions of any nation, without the concerted, united action of great numbers of men and women. Sinking all religious differences and all personal quarrels, let us unite upon the broad, the generous, the all-comprehending platform of absolutely equal civil and religious rights; the only banner above us that upon whose folds is inscribed the motto, "JUSTICE FOR ALL, PRIVILEGE FOR NONE."

It will be seen that Article VI. of our Constitution provides that the executive committee shall appoint an agent in each county in the State; and that this agent shall associate with him or herself two other residents of the county, to attend to the organization of local Leagues, and for the performance of such other work as may be necessary in the dissemination of our principles.

As corresponding secretary of the State League, I desire to hear from every liberal in the State. Let us all work together for justice. May every sluggish and laggard disappear from our ranks by being transformed into a worker. If we have the right of these questions, let us act as though we believed it.

E. C. WALKER.

[The report above alluded to was received too late for insertion in this issue, but will appear in our next. We congratulate our Iowa friends on their success, and wish that it may prove the beginning of great things in the cause of State Secularization.—ED.]

THE CHELSEA LIBERAL LEAGUE.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE INDEX:—

The one hundred and forty-sixth birthday of that "well-known" individual who "could not tell a lie" was so incident, not to say not, that the attendance of the Leaguers in honor of George Washington was not large. The evening of February 22 was a pleasure none the less to those who did attend, if the cheerful, smiling faces of the ladies and gentlemen that met in the comfortable and handsomely-furnished parlors of Dr. B. H. Crandon, 219 Chestnut Street, may be taken as evidence. True, many of them were well-known and familiar faces, that had put in an appearance "many a time and oft" in honor of progress and the right; so that their appearance on this stormy night seemed more like the gathering of a many-membered family for the renewal of friendships than a conventional gathering for the exercise of critical taste, and the possible display of logical differences.

The attraction of the evening, however, centred in the person and promised effort of the Hon. Elizur Wright, who was to read an essay on the relations of the Liberal League movement to Church and State. It had already done duty elsewhere, but proved enjoyable to all, and new to the majority present. The essay was a full, fair, and methodical statement of some of the difficulties attending national legislation, when the State has to conform to, and work for, the interests of the Church; the whole being illustrated with parts of the parliamentary debate that followed the persecution of Rev. Robert Taylor in England. It should have been heard by a full bench of Bishops; and is so eminently worthy of a larger audience, that it is hoped by all who enjoyed the reading of Mr. Wright that he will consent to its publication in THE INDEX, or some other of the publications interested in the Liberal League.

The President, as usual, reminded the company that criticism was in order; but the issue of the League with Church and State legislation was so fully made out, and so ably supported, that no one responded to the invitation. Mr. Wilcox inquired where Mr. Wright obtained the report of the parliamentary debate, so freely used in the essay, and was referred to the State papers of that period. All further comment was in sympathy with Mr. Taylor, in the full belief that no such persecution could take place where equality before the law extended to the opinions as well as the persons of individuals. But no such legislation was possible in England in 1827, or 1833, the years when Mr. Taylor was put on trial, and sent to prison for his opinions.

The efforts of the essayist so successfully centred the attention of the company on the phenomena of English history, that it was only on being reminded by the Secretary that resolutions on the life-labors of George Washington would be in order, that it became apparent that no preparation of that kind had been made. A general conference, however, brought out the fact, that efforts had been made during the Presidency of Washington to amend the Constitution of the United States; and that then, as now, theologians were the interested party. The following correspondence between the "Presbytery of the Eastward" and the "Father of his country" has occasionally appeared in the papers since its publication in the Massachusetts Centinel of Dec. 5, 1789; but rarely, if ever, has it been made to illustrate the profundity of the secular wisdom that prompted Washington, Jefferson, Paine, and the many other heroic defenders of freedom to contend for the total separation of Church and State:—

"The Presbytery of the Eastward, convened at Newburyport, in their address to the President of the United States in his late tour, says: 'Among the objections to the federal Constitution, we never considered the want of a religious test,—that grand engine of persecution in every tyrant's hand. But we should not have been alone in rejoicing to have seen some explicit acknowledgment of the only true God, and Jesus Christ, whom he has sent, inserted somewhere in the Magna Charta of our country. We are happy to find, however, that this defect has been amply remedied in the face of all the world by the piety and devotion in which your first public act of office was performed by the religious observance of the Sabbath, and of the public worship of God, of which you have set so eminent an example, and by the warm strains of Christian and devout affections which run through your late proclamation for a general thanksgiving.'

"TO THE MINISTERS AND RULING ELDERS DELEGATED TO REPRESENT THE CHURCHES IN MASSACHUSETTS AND NEW HAMPSHIRE, WHICH COMPOSE THE FIRST PRESBYTERY OF THE EASTWARD:—
"Gentlemen,—The affectionate welcome which you are pleased to give me to the Eastern parts of the Union would leave me without excuse, did I fail to acknowledge the sensibility which it awakens, and to express the most sincere return that a grateful sense of your goodness can suggest.

"To be approved by the praiseworthy is a wish as natural to becoming ambition as its consequence is flattering to our self-love.

"I am, indeed, much indebted to the favorable sentiments which you entertain towards me; and it will be my duty to study to deserve them.

"The tribute of thanksgiving which you offer the gracious Father of Lights for his inspiration of our public councils with wisdom and firmness to complete the national Constitution is worthy of men who, devoted to the pious purposes of religion, desire their accomplishment by such means as advance the temporal happiness of their fellow-men.

"And here, I am persuaded, you will permit me to observe that the path of true piety is so plain as to require but little political direction.

"To this consideration we ought to ascribe the absence of any regulations respecting religion from the Magna Charta of our country. To the guidance of the ministers of the Gospel this important object is, perhaps, more properly committed. It will be your care to instruct the ignorant and to reclaim the devious. And in the progress of morality and science, to which our government will give every furtherance, we may confidently expect the advancement of true religion and the completion of our happiness.

"I pray the munificent Rewarder of virtue that your agency in this work may receive its compensation here and hereafter.

G. WASHINGTON."

It was agreed to, on motion of Mr. Wilcox, that the League next honor the birthday of Thomas Jefferson,—the man who "swore upon the altar of God eternal hostility against every form of tyranny over the mind of man." Adjourned.

J. H. W. TOOHEY, Sec'y.

109½ BROADWAY, CHELSEA.

COL. INGERSOLL ON MARRIAGE.

EDITOR INDEX:—

The recent lecture of Col. Ingersoll on "Skulls" filled Music Hall with a large and exceptionally intelligent audience; and the eloquent appeal of the distinguished orator for "Liberty for Man, Woman, and Child" was received with enthusiasm and well-merited applause. Yet, while gladly adding my mite of approval and admiration to that which greets him on every side, I cannot but deplore his manifest injustice to those who have dared to go a step farther than he does, in demanding not only political and religious liberty, but social freedom likewise, and his manifest inconsistency and bigotry in this regard.

In one sentence he declares that "liberty of thought includes the right to think right and the right to think wrong. Why? Because that is the means by which we arrive at truth; for, if we knew the truth before, we need not think." In another, he asserts "that he has not the slightest respect for those people who oppose the institution of marriage"; and this sentiment is greeted with great applause by people who, a moment before, applauded with equal enthusiasm the following words from the same speaker: "I would rather a man would tell me what he honestly thinks, and thereby preserve his manhood." Col. Ingersoll invites honesty of expression, and free discussion of all subjects pertaining to human interests, and yet has not the "slightest respect" for the few earnest men and women who have dared to carry their investigations into regions he has failed to explore, and are willing to endure social ostracism, and to incur, if need be, the loss of Col. Ingersoll's respect, for truth's sake, realizing that comparative isolation is one of the penalties of growth.

We find that, the morning after this declaration, Mrs. Grundy, ever watchful of the movements of famous persons, beheld the eminent lecturer seated at breakfast at the Brunswick with an invited guest whom he has honored with his friendship, or—as I prefer to say—who has honored Col. Ingersoll for years by his regard, in the person of an old reformer; who for a long time has, in public and private, denounced in no measured terms the institution of marriage. "Consistency, thou art a jewel!"

But, to return to the lecture, we find the speaker contrasting "Queen Victoria, clothed in the garments given to her by blind fortune and chance, with George Eliot, robed in garments of glory woven in the loom of her own genius," evidently forgetting that the latter lived for years with Mr. Lewes in open defiance of that sacred institution of marriage which he regards as the "holiest institution among men." The fact is, the lecturer in childhood was the victim of "a religious training" that brought his free spirit into open rebellion against all forms of priestly tyranny and Orthodox oppressions; and, in dealing with this subject, Col. Ingersoll speaks from knowledge and experience. When he theorizes about marriage, he is doubtless influenced by the memory of his own home; which, rumor says, is made happy by a charming wife and interesting daughters, to whom he has ever been a most devoted and indulgent husband and father. I am glad to acknowledge that there are many firebrands whose Lares and Penates are love and peace; but that they are so is not because of law, but in spite of it; and, if all legislation on the subject was abandoned, such homes would remain undisturbed.

Pro-slavery advocates constantly met the abolitionists with the argument that in the South were to be found good masters and contented slaves; but Abby Kelley, Lucy Stone, and William Lloyd Garrison remained unconvinced, and refused to leave the sacred institution of slavery undisturbed, even though sustained by the law, the pulpit, and the press.

The marriage law—which Col. Ingersoll is so anxious to preserve inviolate—denies the mother a legal right to the child she goes down into the valley of death itself to obtain. There are bruised and beaten wives, and little children conceived in loathing, and born heirs to the antagonism of their parents, who yearly recruit the army of juvenile criminals, already a blot upon our civilization, and whose wretchedness and ignorance beggar description.

But I will conclude by quoting for the benefit of Col. Ingersoll, and all who agree with him, the opinion of Rev. M. D. Conway on this subject, as expressed in his Earthward Pilgrimage. The author says:—

"Society will ere long be glad enough to assimilate contracts between men and women to contracts between partners in business. Then Love will dispense alike with the bandage on its eyes and the constable's aid; and as for the thousand phantoms in the distance,—the deserted wives, the abandoned children, etc., etc., though the worst of them are less terrible than the realities of the present, we will not be frightened by them into any distrust of the laws of the universe." Again: "So long as society cares only for the marriage license and the priest's blessing; so long as it receives with a smile the woman legally bought, and commends Mary Wollstonecraft to the Thames River because her true love does not fulfil its forms; so long as it holds that chastity demands the sacrifice of every woman who has in any instance disregarded its laws, and makes the street or the brothel the only possible refuge for thousands purer than many of those who shut the door in their faces; so long as it prefers secret sin, intrigue, the hate in the chamber behind the smile in the drawing-room, the daily lesson of hypocrisy learned by children, and whitened sepulchres called homes, to honest divorce; so long as it will encourage the young man and maid who have made an incongruous marriage to starve their hearts and waste their lives rather than confess the mistake, and seek out the hearts needed for their perfection,—so long will those whose eyes are cleared from superstition see the throne of Marriage, like that of Dahomey, resting upon human skulls."

Yours for political, religious, and social freedom,
LAURA KENDRICK.

[Col. Ingersoll would undoubtedly reply that, by the sentence criticised above, he meant only to say that he had no respect for the arguments of people who oppose the marriage institution, and that it was a mere blunder of the reporter to omit these italicised words. We do not believe he intended to be understood as he was reported. With this correction, we should certainly see nothing to wonder at in his remark. That the laws concerning marriage and divorce can be and ought to be improved is more than likely; but their acknowledged imperfection is no reason for abolishing the marriage institution itself. It is no mark of wisdom to "throw out the baby with the bath."—ED.]

"THE TEMPTATIONS OF MODERN SOCIETY."

The following notice appears in the Boston Advertiser of March 16—

Lectures on the Temptations of Modern Society.

"A course of lectures to men only is to be delivered at the Church of the Advent, Bowdoin Street, on the six Friday evenings commencing March 8, by the Rev. Edward Osborne, of the brotherhood of St. John the Evangelist, Cowley, Oxford, England. The recent discussion in England upon the confessional in the English Church, although attended with much vulgar misconception, even in high places, has led most thinking men to feel the need of very direct and plain dealing with the sins of the day. Under the surface of a conventional Christian civilization, there is reason to fear exists the old moral pollution, not less deep but even more dangerous because concealed even from the professional eye, and the touch which cures while it probes. Perhaps our 'middle-class' is most pure. The young, especially of the richer sort, in Boston and Cambridge, lead lives which their friends little guess. 'O, mothers! how much do you think you know?' says the tender-hearted English cynic. The temptations of modern society, and especially the powers of resistance which the image of God within us furnishes against them, is the subject of these discourses by a member of that celebrated preaching brotherhood which has gone out almost within a decade of years from Oxford, and has already made itself powerfully felt from India to America. E."

This proposal cannot but be greeted with some hope, as an effort in the right direction towards remedying the great underlying evil in society to which it refers. Much has been said on this subject, and attempts at reform have been made; but no adequate results have been attained. All that has been effected, all that ever can be effected, by the methods hitherto adopted, is but a slight surface amelioration. The root of the evil has not been touched. Prevention, by a wise analysis of the radical causes of the evil, and hence of the only remedy, has not been attempted. Attention has been directed to one class only of the offenders, and they, in general, the victims of innocence, ignorance, or poverty—often of the purest affection—and of the heartless seductions of their destroyers.

Strange that those interested in this subject—thoughtful men and women—should seldom in their writings and speeches have touched the key-note of reform, should seldom have applied their efforts to the discovery and eradication of the chief root of the evil. It is always the "fallen women" of whom mention is made, and whose course of life it is attempted to suppress, with no allusion to the guilty agents of their fall, and no indication that there is ought to be done for their reform. It seems to be taken for granted, an accepted fact, that man is not master of himself,—cannot be, and that he must be, in large measure, acquitted for his self-indulgence. Pure women, even, receive the offender into their society as if he were guiltless.

Mr. O. B. Frothingham, in a lecture delivered in Boston a few years since, was reported in a paper of the day as making the following utterance: "The speaker considered that the social evil, so-called, could not be suppressed. This volcano gives vent to fires which otherwise would rend the earth; and perhaps these hideous craters of vice may play no unimportant part in the mysterious economic of society. These women of shame may be looked upon with abhorrence, but never with scorn. They may be the wan and haggard priestesses at a shrine which they have not built; after their own way, they may be the saviors of the rest of us, bearing the sins which but for them we might commit."

Humiliating confession! If true, if taken in its full logical sequence, there is nothing to be done; there should be nothing done towards suppressing houses of ill-fame, or reclaiming their inmates. If so much of the mere animal is dominant in man, if he is the helpless victim of an instinct over which he has no control, while it becomes him to bow his head in the deepest humility, let woman, "the priestess at his shrine," no longer be named "the woman of shame," but let her be exalted and honored, not merely as the "angel" she is often so flatteringly called, but indeed as the sacrificing "savior," rescuing him from perdition; and let her be crowned with a halo of glory, rather than branded with contempt, and "looked on with abhorrence."

The injustice of tracing this evil to woman alone, or principally, and striving only to reclaim her, is equalled only by its stupidity. It is disheartening to effort, as utterly unavailing, on the ground that supply is always equal to demand; and disgusting, as showing an entire absence of clear-sightedness. Indignation is justly aroused at the one-sidedness that has always been given to the subject.

Shall it never be that the sentiment coming down from savage ages, when brute force was in the ascendant, when reason and conscience were yet undeveloped—the idea that there is in man, while subject to so high a civilization in most respects, one element in his nature that cannot be subdued, cannot be civilized,—shall it never be, that this traditionary, this almost universally accepted belief, shall be discovered to be without foundation, and shall take its place with the effete creeds which the highest religion and civilization have outgrown?

Discipline, "aided by the powers of resistance which the image of God within us furnishes," may surely be brought to bear in this direction, as well as in any other. Public sentiment, too, must change its point of view, and turn its condemning voice from the victim to the betrayer. It must direct its aims towards civilizing and restraining this ungoverned impulse in him,—the true root of the enormous and manifold resultant evils. Unless this can be done, there is no encouragement for effort, and the attempts at reform may be given up in blank despair.

The proposed lectures are "to men only"; and it is to be hoped that their power and duty will be set before them in a light so luminous that the impulse received may be the beginning of a reform which will prove to be truly radical. T.

BLASPHEMY LAWS.

HARTFORD, CONN., March 1, 1878.

EDITOR INDEX:

Dear Sir,—E. S. Westcott, a liberal of this place, has presented to the Judiciary Committee of the State Legislature a bill to repeal the "Blasphemy" Statute. The following of his reasons for the repeal were printed in the Hartford Times yesterday.

Yours respectfully, CHAS. E. GAGER.

"According to the decisions of the courts in the several States, any man may be punished, according to such a law, who declares his disbelief in the Bible and the God of the Jews, in the Testament or its Christ, or in the Christian religion. Shall the statute of a free State order the belief of its citizens? Shall it be used to forge a fetter for free discussion which the spirit of modern thought will break and throw aside in contempt and derision? This law is a dead-letter on the statute-book; and, with the note at the bottom of its page, serves only as an ignominious reference to the early bigotry and barbarism of the State. From 1648 to 1764 if a man dared to think and talk on these subjects without the help of the priest, he was to suffer death. From 1784 to 1821 if he dared to assert this birthright of a freeman, some constable reeking with the fumes of New England rum was to maul him on the naked body, not to exceed forty stripes—the character of the stripes, I suppose, to depend largely on the quantity of rum; and even now, in this light of the last quarter of the nineteenth century, if a man dares to use his reason in his search after truth, he may be fined not over one hundred dollars, and be imprisoned not more than one year, as the statute reads. Is not such a dead-letter on the statute-book sufficient of itself to urge its own repeal? Is it not full time for the complete divorce of Church and State? The people stand on the side of freethought; the marriage in this is only a form. Two hundred and seventy-eight years ago, and the priest burned Bruno at the stake for asking those questions with which now every child overturns the theologies. Then the priest wielded the whole power of the State; and the rattle of the printing press had only sounded one hundred and fifty years. Since that time the art of printing has carried the thinker, the scientist, the poet, and even the higher novells, to almost every home of civilization. The Christian has become better and higher than his Book. The sun has become, to all, the centre of the system; the world is no longer flat; the eternal fires of hell burn low; the slave system of the Bible and the Testament has been buried; the Christian's temperance is higher than wine at weddings. He no longer kills men upon the mountains and in the public streets for their modes of thought; he no longer burns people at the stake; he no longer invents torture; he revels alone in the dead-letter of the statute. The freethinker believes in freethought. We are perfectly willing the modern Christian shall utilize the moral infidelity that has made him better, and make it a part of his book if he can. We only ask that the statute-book of Connecticut shall read as if we have the right to call black, black, and white, white."

CHRISTIANIZING JAPAN.

CAMBRIDGE, Feb. 4.

MR. ABBOT:

Sir,—Here are a few extracts from a letter written by a Japanese student, and published in the February number of the Missionary Herald. Mr. Davis, the missionary who forwarded it, says, "The letter shows a keen insight into the condition of Japan; and parts of it are worthy to be written in gold." Such being the case, I thought you might be interested. This student studied the Bible some years, and then entered the "Imperial University of Japan," where he devoted two years "chiefly to scientific studies." "But," he says, "feeling I had a higher vocation in Christ Jesus than that of a mere chemist or a geologist, I left the university, and joined my schoolmates in Biblical studies." Speaking of Confucianism, he says: "But you must not suppose the samurai (the ruling race) were willing to import foreign excellence of every kind, for they were mostly Confucians, and regarded their religion as the best in the world. Confucianism, that mixture of politics and philosophy, presented before them a complete system of moral doctrines, gave them a plausible theory of human depravity, and pointed out to them a way to an ideal perfection through dint of self-exertions. It was all naturalistic. To the Confucian there was no God to worship but man; no revelation to guide them but the conscience; and no future but the present only. They rejected all religions as relics of a past barbarism; mocked at the ideas of a personal God, of a future state of rewards and punishments, and of a Savior. The supernatural in the Bible was to them a stone of stumbling; and the divinity of Christ an insufferable rock of offence. Above all, the gentle and humble and loving spirit of a Christian was irreconcilably at variance with their cold, proud, and selfish ideal of a perfect man." No wonder, therefore, that a little farther on he is led to remark, that, "You may well imagine what a hard work it was for Captain James to bring them to Christ; for it is ten times more difficult to Christianize a Confucian than it is to convert a Buddhist or a Sintoist." Further on he pictures the terrible state of affairs as follows:—

"True, there are now scattered over all the parts of Japan schools and academies, and even colleges, where both general and professional education is given. But do they promise anything to the real interests of Japan? What is, for instance, the character of that 'Imperial University,' as they love to call it, the chief of them all? Let me speak to you freely. I have been in that institution for two years, and speak only what I have seen with my own eyes, or heard with my own ears. Here are gathered, under the government's patronage, some eight hundred students, the sons of the rich,—the high and the powerful of Japan. It has about twenty-five foreign professors, and gives education in medicine, chemistry, law, engineering, literature, and natural history. But the students learn other things. They learn to smoke tobacco, to drink intoxicating liquors, and to do even worse things; and so they learn to despise all moral and religious precepts. It is these students' unhappy lot to be educated in all the arts of an intellectual man, without morality and without religion. In a library of thirty-five thousand volumes, I could not find a single copy of the Scriptures; and Draper's Conflict Between Science and Religion is used as a regular text-book. Indeed, Japanese Confucianism is so nearly allied with the modern scepticism, that those portions of the samurai who are now ruling Japan, and who are intelligent enough to read a page of Mill or Spencer, are fast becoming sceptics, and are ready to go any length in that direction. Yes, Mills and Spencers, Darwins and Comtes, are going to make more trouble in Japan than the nebulous mythology of Sintoism, or the shadowy superstition of Buddhism. How are we to oppose them? How are we to protect the rising generation from their poisonous shafts?"

These last remarks about the University are what led me to jot down the extracts, thinking that as they had proved of interest, and provoked the smiles of several to whom I had shown them, they might do sometime to "fill in" with.

Yours,

A. S. COFFIN.

"THE BLOOD OF THE MARTYRS IS THE SEED OF THE CHURCH."

The liberals of the State of Texas have good reason to adopt the above saying as to their liberal "church." Since Dr. Russell, of Bell County, was so brutally treated on account of his "infidel" views, a few months since, there has been a general awakening of the liberals of that State, as I have learned from letters from various persons; and that awakening has taken practical shape in Bosque County, near where Dr. Russell resides, as will be seen by the following communication that has just reached me:—

MERIDIAN, Bosque Co., Texas, }
March 8, 1878. }

H. L. GREEN, Esq., Ch. Ec. Com. N. L. L.

Dear Sir,—We have just perfected an organization of liberals under the name of "The United Friends of Progress." The "objects of the Society" are "to stimulate investigation among the people in relation to their civil, religious, and political rights, and encourage the investigation of questions relating to religion, science, and reform." The motto of the Society is "truth, justice, and happiness: hear all sides; then decide."

The Society instructed me to write you in regard to procuring a charter. We would like to see a copy of the charter that is issued by the National Liberal League, and learn the terms under which we can become a chartered institution. We are situated sixty miles from Dr. Russell, the well-known martyr of freethought, of Texas. The members of our Society feel great relief after the perfecting of our organization. We feel as though we can hear the broken chains of superstition clanking around us."

Respectfully,

ANDREW J. SMITH,
Sec'y U. F. of P.

I will also add, that in a number of other places in Texas Liberal League organizations are contemplated. Our New England liberals must go to work, or their Southern and Western friends will leave them in the rear of progress. H. L. G.

LET MEN understand that Jesus Christ has no part in this world with ignorance. There are among philosophers those who delight to call themselves Agnostics; or, as we used to style them in political parlance, Know-nothings; but in the school and the Church of Jesus Christ ignorance is at a fearful discount. His disciples are stimulated by every precept of the gospel to the attainment of every sort of knowledge. "If there be any truth, if there be any virtue," the Apostle bids us "think on these things." So soon as anything is proven to be truth, it becomes part of the message of Jesus Christ to us. It is not our business to enter into limited, local, and partial controversies of men; but when either scientist or philosopher has eliminated positive truth, we receive it, and are bound and pledged to receive it by the very charter of our relationship in the commonwealth of faith. Christendom is the name for civilization. It would be impossible to picture the actual condition of this world should the forces that have been set at work by Christianity be withdrawn from society. What would be the laws, what the tastes, what the usages of the world, in even its most cultivated portions, if the influence of this gospel of the Galilean should be annihilated? The name Truth, which the Lord Jesus assumed, itself suggests the thought that a stimulus is given to the mind by the acceptance of his service. And we have grounds for believing that he is not content with that disciple who does not make the most of his faculties.—Rev. S. H. Tyng.

THERE IS A NEW PAPER in Cincinnati called the Sunday Breakfast Table. In Boston it would have been called the Sabbath Fish Ball.—Worcester Press.

Advertisements.

THE PATRONAGE

of the liberal advertising public is respectfully solicited for THE INDEX. The attempt will be honestly made to keep the advertising pages of THE INDEX in entire harmony with its general character and principles, and thus to furnish to the public an advertising medium which shall be not only profitable to its patrons, but also worthy of their most generous support. To this end, all improper or "blind" advertisements, all quack advertisements, and all advertisements believed to be fraudulent or unjust to any one, will be excluded from these columns.

THE INDEX must not be held responsible for any statement made by advertisers, who will in all cases accept the responsibility for their own statements.

ADVERTISING RATES.

For 1 to 12 insertions, 10c per line.
 " 13 " 25 " 8 " "
 " 26 " 51 " 6 " "
 " 52 " " 5 " "

On half-column advertisements, a discount of 10 per cent. will be made; on full-column advertisements, a discount of 25 per cent.

On all advertisements for which cash is paid in advance, a further discount of 25 per cent. on the total, as above calculated, will be made. FRANCIS E. ABBOT, Editor.

TO ADVERTISERS.

The following states the experience of a successful Bookseller who has advertised in THE INDEX:

TOLEDO, Ohio, Sept. 20, 1872.
 TO THE INDEX ASSO., Toledo, O.:

Gentlemen,—Having had occasion to advertise in your paper during the past two years quite largely, I take pleasure in stating that I have always obtained very satisfactory returns—better in fact than from book advertisements in any other paper I have advertised in. Not only have I obtained immediate results, but orders have frequently been received months after the insertion of the advertisement, showing that your paper is kept on file and referred to by your readers.

Yours truly,
 HENRY S. STEBBINS.

Special arrangements will be made at reduced terms for long-time or extended advertisements. Address

THE INDEX,
 No. 231 WASHINGTON STREET,
 Boston.

CULTURED FREE THOUGHT.

The Index Association,

Office, No. 231 WASHINGTON ST., BOSTON, publish

THE INDEX,

A Weekly Paper devoted to Free and Rational Religion.

It is the object of THE INDEX to give public utterance to the boldest, most cultivated, and best matured thought of the age on all religious questions, and to apply it directly to the social and political amelioration of society.

It is edited by FRANCIS E. ABBOT, with the following list of Editorial Contributors:—

O. B. FROTHINGHAM, New York City.
 WILLIAM J. POTTER, New Bedford, Mass.
 WILLIAM H. SPENCER, Haverhill, Mass.
 MRS. E. D. CHENEY, Jamaica Plain, Mass.
 GEORGE JACOB HOLYOAKE, London, Eng.
 DAVID H. CLARK, Florence, Mass.
 MRS. ELIZABETH CADY STANTON, Tenafly, N.J.
 J. L. STODDARD, Boston.
 ELIZUR WRIGHT, Boston.
 C. D. B. MILLS, Syracuse, N.Y.
 W. D. LE SUEUR, Ottawa, Can.
 BENJ. F. UNDERWOOD, Thorndike, Mass.
 ALBERT WARREN KELSEY, St. Louis, Mo.

Every liberal should subscribe for THE INDEX as the best popular exponent of Religious Liberalism. Every Christian minister, and every thinking church-member, should subscribe for it, as the clearest, most candid, and most scholarly exposition of the differences between Free Thought and Evangelical Christianity, and as the best means of becoming well informed of the arguments and the movements which the Church will have to meet in the future.

Almost every number contains a discourse or leading article, which alone is worth the price of one year's subscription.

Prof. MAX MUELLER, of Oxford, England, in a letter to the Editor published in THE INDEX Jan. 4, 1873, says: "That the want of a journal entirely devoted to Religion in the widest sense of the word should be felt in America—that such a journal should have been started and so powerfully supported by the best minds of your country—is a good sign of the times. There is no such journal in England, France, or Germany; though the number of so-called religious or theological periodicals is, as you know, very large." And later still "I read the numbers of your INDEX with increasing interest."

Send $1.25 for one year, including postage, or 50 cents for three months on trial.

Address THE INDEX,
 No. 231 Washington Street, Boston.

PUBLICATIONS

OF THE

FREE

RELIGIOUS

ASSOCIATION.

Freedom and Fellowship in Religion. A volume of ten essays upon speculative and practical problems of religion, by D. A. Wason, Samuel Longfellow, Samuel Johnson, John Weiss, W. J. Potter, F. E. Abbot, O. B. Frothingham, J. W. Chadwick, T. W. Higginson, and Mrs. E. D. Cheney, and extracts from Addresses by Ralph Waldo Emerson, Lucretia Mott, Robert Dale Owen, Dr. Bartol, Wendell Phillips, Rabbi Wise, Horace Seaver, A. B. Alcott, Lucy Stone, Charles H. Malcom, Julia Ward Howe, and others,—all given on the platform of the Free Religious Association. Price (reduced) $1.50.

"One purpose of this volume is to give an answer to the question, What is the meaning of the Free Religious Association?"

Proceedings of Fifth Annual Meeting, 1873. Contains essays by J. W. Chadwick on "Liberty and the Church in America," by C. D. B. Mills on "Religion as the Expression of a Permanent Sentiment of the Human Mind," and by O. B. Frothingham on "The Religion of Humanity," with addresses by Rowland Connor, Celia Burleigh, Lucretia Mott, A. B. Alcott, C. A. Bartol, Horace Seaver, Alexander Louis, and others.

Proceedings of Sixth Annual Meeting, 1873. Contains essays by Samuel Johnson on "Freedom in Religion," and by John Weiss on "Religion in Freedom," with addresses by Wm. C. Gannett, Robert Dale Owen, T. W. Higginson, Samuel Longfellow, J. S. Thomson, F. E. Abbot, and Lucretia Mott.

Proceedings of Seventh Annual Meeting, 1874. Contains verbatim reports of President Frothingham's address on "The Validity of the Free Religious Platform," of Dr. Bartol's essay on "The Religious Signs of the Times," of Rabbi Sonnenschein's speech on "Reformed Judaism," and of the statements by Messrs. Calthrop, Abbot, and Higginson of their respective attitudes towards Christianity,—as "Christian," "Anti-Christian," and "Extra-Christian,"—together with the Secretary's Annual Report, and letters from Keen-eb Chunder Sen, Frederick Douglass, and D. A. Wason.

Proceedings of Eighth Annual Meeting, 1875. Contains Essays by Wm. C. Gannett, on "The Present Constructive Tendencies in Religion," and by Francis E. Abbot, on "Construction and Destruction in Religion," and addresses by T. W. Higginson, Lucretia Mott, Chas. G. Ames, O. B. Frothingham, B. F. Underwood, S. P. Putnam, and E. S. Morse.

Proceedings of Ninth Annual Meeting, 1876. Contains a full abstract of the interesting discussion at the Business Meeting on the Practical Methods and Work of the Association; the annual report of the Executive Committee; address of the President, O. B. Frothingham; essay by James Parton, on "The Relation of Religion to the State" (or, as he styles it, "Cathedrals and Beer"), with addresses on the subject by Miss Susan H. Wilson and Rev. M. J. Savage; essay by Samuel Longfellow, on "The Relation of Free Religion to Churches," with the addresses that followed it by Prof. Felix Adler, Rev. Henry Blanchard, Rev. Brooke Herford, and John Weiss,—together with letters from Judge Doe, Rev. Joseph Cook, and others, invited to speak.

Proceedings of Tenth Annual Meeting, 1877. Contains Essays by Rev. Wm. E. Alger, on "Steps towards Religious Emancipation in Christendom," and by C. D. B. Mills, Esq., on "Internal Dangers to Free Thought and Free Religion": Addresses by O. B. Frothingham, Wm. Henry Channing, Rabbi Laaker, Dr. J. L. Dudley, and T. W. Higginson; and tenth annual reports of the Executive Committee, Treasurer, etc.

Any one of the above pamphlets of "PROCEEDINGS" sent to any address for five cents received in postage stamps; and more at the same rate. Sold also for five cents at the office.

For series of important Tracts see last page of THE INDEX.

These publications are for sale at the office of the Free Religious Association, 231 Washington Street, Boston. The Annual Reports for 1868 and 1871 cannot be supplied, and the supply of others previous to that of 1873 is quite limited and at special rates. Orders by mail may be addressed "Free Religious Association, 231 Washington Street, Boston, Mass."

WM. J. POTTER, Sec. F. R. A.

INDEX TRACTS.

No. 1.—Truths for the Times, by F. E. Abbot, contains the "Fifty Affirmations" and "Modern Principles." MR. CHARLES DARWIN, author of "The Origin of Species," says, in a letter to the editor not originally intended for publication, but subsequently authorized to be used: "I have now read 'TRUTHS FOR THE TIMES,' and I admire them from my inmost heart; and I agree to almost every word." New Edition. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00.

No. 2.—Fear of the Living God, by O. B. Frothingham, exposes the debasing character of the popular notions of God, and presents conceptions of him that are worthy of the nineteenth century. New Edition. Price 5 cents; 12 copies 50 cents.

No. 3.—Lecture on the Bible, by the Rev. Charles Voysey, of England, is an overwhelming demonstration of the imperfections and errors of the Bible, both in the Old and the New Testaments. New Edition. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00.

No. 4.—Christian Propagandism, by F. E. Abbot, is an exposure of the weakness, costliness, and inefficiency of the System of Foreign Missions. Full of Figures, Facts, and Interesting Extracts. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00.

No. 5.—"God in the Constitution," by Rev. Arthur B. Bradford, opposes the proposed Theological Amendment to the United States Constitution. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00.

No. 6.—"The Sabbath," by Parker Pillsbury, denounces Sabbatarian superstition. New Edition. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00.

No. 7.—"Compulsory Education," by F. E. Abbot, maintains the right of every child to be educated, and the duty of the State to ensure it an education. Price 5 cents; 12 copies 50 cents.

No. 8.—The Present Heaven, by O. B. Frothingham, treats of a subject that interests everybody. New Edition. Price 5 cents; 12 copies 50 cents.

No. 9.—The Christian Amendment, by F. E. Abbot, shows the dangerous character of the attempt to interpolate the Evangelical Christian Creed in the U. S. Constitution. Price 5 cents; 12 copies 50 cents.

No. 10.—The Impeachment of Christianity, by F. E. Abbot. Fifth Ten Thousand. Sent for free distribution to any one who will distribute it, in packages of from five to one hundred copies.

No. 11.—The God of Science, by F. E. Abbot, attempts to show the real influence of modern science upon the idea of God. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00.

No. 12.—Is Romanism Real Christianity? Two essays by Francis W. Newman and F. E. Abbot. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00.

No. 13.—On the Vision of Heaven, by Prof. F. W. Newman, of England, analyzes the Christian conception of Heaven. Price 5 cents; 12 copies 50 cents.

No. 14.—A Study of Religion: The Name and the Thing, by F. E. Abbot, attempts to show that the popular derivation of the word Religion is incorrect; that the popular conceptions of Religion itself are inadequate; and that a new conception of it, based on the Law of Evolution, consistent with absolute Freedom of Thought, and independent even of belief in God, is the necessary condition of the perpetuity of Religion among men. Price 10 cents; 12 copies $1.00.

No. 15.—The Battle of Syracuse. Two Essays by Rev. James Freeman Clarke, D.D., and F. E. Abbot discussing the Authority of Christianity. Price 10 cents; 12 copies for $1.00. Address

THE INDEX, 231 WASHINGTON STREET,
 Boston, Mass.

1 8 7 8.

THE INDEX,
A Weekly Journal

DEVOTED TO

FREE RELIGION.

PUBLISHED BY THE

INDEX ASSOCIATION,

AT

No. 231 Washington Street, Boston.

EDITOR:

FRANCIS ELLINGWOOD ABBOT.

EDITORIAL CONTRIBUTORS:

O. B. FROTHINGHAM, New York City.
 W. J. POTTER, New Bedford, Mass.
 W. H. SPENCER, Haverhill, Mass.
 MRS. E. D. CHENEY, Jamaica Plain, Mass.
 GEORGE JACOB HOLYOAKE, England.
 DAVID H. CLARK, Florence, Mass.
 MRS. ELIZABETH CADY STANTON, Tenafly, N.J.
 J. L. STODDARD, Boston.
 ELIZUR WRIGHT, Boston.
 C. D. B. MILLS, Syracuse, N.Y.
 W. D. LE SUEUR, Ottawa, Can.
 BENJ. F. UNDERWOOD, Thorndike, Mass.
 ALBERT WARREN KELSEY, St. Louis, Mo.

THE INDEX aims—

To increase general intelligence with respect to religion;

To foster a nobler spirit and quicken a higher purpose, both in society and in the individual;

To substitute knowledge for ignorance, right for wrong, truth for superstition, freedom for slavery, character for creed, catholicity for bigotry, love for hate, humanitarianism for sectarianism, devotion to universal ends for absorption in selfish schemes.

In brief, to hasten the day when Free Religion shall take the place of dogmatism and ecclesiasticism throughout the world, and when the welfare of humanity here and now shall be the aim of all private and public activities.

In addition to its general objects, the practical object to which THE INDEX is specially devoted is the ORGANIZATION OF THE LIBERALS OF THE COUNTRY, for the purpose of securing the more complete and consistent secularization of the political and educational institutions of the United States. The Church must give place to the Republic in the affections of the people. The last vestiges of ecclesiastical control must be wiped out of the Constitutions and Statutes of the several States in order to bring them into harmony with the National Constitution. To accomplish this object, the Liberals must make a united demand, and present an unbroken front, and the chief practical aim of THE INDEX will be henceforth to organize a great NATIONAL PARTY OF FREEDOM. Let every one who believes in this movement give it direct aid by helping to increase the circulation of THE INDEX.

SPECIAL FEATURES.

The publication of a valuable leading paper or essay of a thoughtful character, in each issue, will continue to be one of the most marked features of THE INDEX.

Regular editorial contributions will continue to be furnished by the well-known eminent writers who have already done so much to give to THE INDEX its present high position. Other interesting correspondence, communications, extracts from valuable books and periodicals, and miscellaneous articles, will also be published; and such improvements will be made from time to time as circumstances shall render possible.

AGENTS.

Local Agents for THE INDEX are wanted in every city and town throughout the country. The most liberal terms are offered.

TERMS.

The price of THE INDEX is Three Dollars a year, payable in advance; and 20 cents postage for the year; and at the same rate for shorter periods. All remittances of money must be at the sender's risk, unless forwarded by cheque, registered letter, or post-office money order. The name, with address in full, must be accompanied with the money in each case.

Address THE INDEX,
 No. 231 Washington Street, Boston.

POPULAR BOOKS,

SENT BY MAIL

AT

PUBLISHERS' PRICES!

ORDERS PROMPTLY FILLED.

NO EXTRA CHARGE FOR POSTAGE.

ANY BOOK in the subjoined List, or any other OBTAINABLE BOOK that may be desired, will be forwarded as promptly as possible on receipt of orders accompanied with the CASH.

Orders are respectfully solicited from all friends of THE INDEX.

ALCOOTT (A. BRONSON). Tablets.	1.50
Concord Days.	1.50
Records of a School. A new edition.	1.50
ALCOOTT (LOUISA M.). Little Women. Two vols.	3.00
Hospital Sketches and Camp and Fireside Stories.	1.50
An Old-Fashioned Girl.	1.50
Little Men.	1.50
My Boys, &c.	1.00
Shawl-Straps.	1.00
Work: A Story of Experience.	1.75
ARABIAN NIGHTS' ENTERTAINMENTS.	1.50
ARNOLD'S (MATTHEW) Essays in Criticism.	2.00
New Poems.	2.00
Literature and Dogma.	1.50
AUERBACH (BERTHOLD). On the Heights. The Eden; The Country-House on the Rhine.	2.00
Belshazzar.	1.00
German Tales.	1.00
BACON'S Essays.	1.25
BAGHOT on the English Constitution.	2.25
Physic and Politics.	1.50
BAIN (ALEXANDER). Mental Science: A Compendium of Psychology and History of Moral Science: A Compendium of Ethics. 1 vol.	1.75
The Senses and the Intellect. Third edition. 1 vol.	5.00
BARTLETT'S Dictionary of Americanisms.	2.50
BARTLETT'S Familiar Quotations.	3.00
BARTOL (REV. C. A.). Radical Problems. The Rising Path.	2.00
BASTIAN (H. CHARLTON). The Beginnings of Life. 2 vols.	5.00
BRACKETT (ANNA C.). The Education of American Girls.	1.00
BROOKS (CHARLES F.). Translations. The Layman's Breviary.	2.25
The World-Prize.	2.25
The Tall Student.	.75
BUECHNER'S Force and Matter.	1.25
BUCKLE (HENRY THOMAS). History of Civilization in England and France. Spain and Scotland. New edition of the entire work, with a complete index. 3 vols.	6.00
CARLYLE'S Works. Cheap edition. Comprising the following: Miscellaneous Essays, 7 vols.; French Revolution, 3 vols.; Frederick the Great, 10 vols.; Cromwell's Letters, &c., 5 vols.; Sartor Resartus, 1 vol.; John Sterling, 1 vol.; Life of Schiller, 1 vol.; Past and Present, 1 vol.; Heroes and Hero Worship, 1 vol.; Latter Day Pamphlets, 1 vol. Any volume sold separately. 31 vols. London, 1871-4. Per vol.	.90
CARPENTER (DR. W. B.). The Principles of Mental Physiology, with their Applications to the Training and Discipline of the Mind, and the Study of its Morbid Conditions.	2.00
CERVANTES' Don Quixote.	1.50
CHANNING (WM. ELLERY, D.D.). The Perfect Life. In Twelve Discourses. Edited from his manuscripts by his nephew, Wm. Henry Channing.	1.50
CHANNING (WM. ELLERY). Thoreau: The Poet-Naturalist. With Memorial Verse.	2.00
CHENEY (MRS. E. D.). Patience. A Series of Thirty Games for the Fireside.	1.00
Social Games. A New Series of Games for Parties, uniform with Patience.	1.00
Sally Williams, the Mountain Girl. Illustrated.	1.50
CLARKE (JAMES FREEMAN). Ten Great Religions.	2.00
Common-Sense in Religion.	2.00
CLARKE (DR. E. E.). Sex in Education.	1.25
CLODD (EDWARD). The Childhood of the World.	.75
COBBE (FRANCES POWELL). Studies New and Old, of Ethical and Social Subjects. Buddhism in India, and other Essays.	5.00
The Religious Demands of the Age.	.30
CONWAY (MONCURE D.). The Earthward Pilgrimage.	1.75
COBERGATION and Conservation of Forces: A Series of Expositions by Grove, Helmholtz, Mayer, Faraday, Liebig and Carpenter: with an Introduction by Edward L. Youmans, M.D. 1 vol.	2.00
CULTURE DEMANDED BY MODERN LIFE: Its True Aims and Requirements: A Series of Addresses, by Tyndall, Huxley, Whewell, Faraday, Spencer, Draper, Masson, Lyell, etc. Edited by Edward L. Youmans.	2.00
DALL (MRS. CAROLINE H.). The College, the Market, and the Court; or, Woman's Relation to Education, Employment, and Citizenship.	2.00

Historical Pictures Retouched; a Volume of Miscellaneous. In two parts. Part I. "Studies, Pictures, and Fancies"	1.00
DARWIN'S Origin of Species.	2.00
The Descent of Man. 2 vols.	4.00
Journal of Researches.	2.00
Emotional Expression of Man and the Lower Animals.	3.50
The Variation of Animals and Plants under Domestication. 2 vols., illustrated.	6.00
DESCARTES (RENE). Discourse on the Method of Rightly conducting the Reason and Seeking Truth in the Sciences.	3.25
DICKENS' Child's History of England.	1.50
DUHRING (JULIA). Philosophers and Fools. A Study.	2.00
ELIOT'S (GEORGE) Novels. Household Edition. 5 vols., each.	1.00
Compatriot—Adam Bede.	1.50
Romola.	1.50
The Mill on the Floss.	1.50
Silas Marner and Scenes of Clerical Life. The Same. Library Edition. 2 vols.	1.50
Middlemarch. 2 vols.	1.50
Wit and Wisdom of	1.25
The Spanish Gypsy.	1.50
EMERSON'S (E. W.) Essays. First Series.	1.50
Essays. Second Series.	1.50
Miscellaneous.	1.50
Representative Men.	1.50
English Traits.	1.50
Conduct of Life.	1.50
Poems. With Portrait.	1.50
May-day and Other Pieces.	1.50
Essays. Blue and Gold.	1.25
Poems. Blue and Gold.	1.25
Prose Works. 1 vol.	5.00
Society and Solitude.	1.50
EVANS (E. P., Ph. D.). First Historical Transformations of Christianity. From the French of Athanasius Coquerel the Younger.	1.50
The Life and Works of Gotthold Ephraim Lessing. Translated from the German of Adolf Stahr. 1 vol.	5.00
FARRAR'S Critical History of Free Thought, in reference to the Christian Religion.	2.00
FEUERBACH (LUDWIG). The Essence of Christianity. "George Eliot's" translation.	2.00
FISKE'S (JOHN) Myths and Myth-Makers. Cosmic Philosophy.	2.00
FROTHINGHAM (O. B.). Religion of Humanity. Child's Book of Religion.	1.00
Life of Theodore Parker.	4.00
FULLER'S (MARGARET) Complete Works, including Memoirs by Emerson, Channing, and others. A new edition. 6 vols.	9.00
GALTON (FRANCIS). Hereditary Genius. An Inquiry into its Laws and Consequences.	2.00
GOETHE'S Faust. Translated into English Verse by Bayard Taylor. 2 vols. Per vol.	5.00
Elective Affinities.	1.25
Wilhelm Meister. Translated by Thomas Carlyle. Portrait of Goethe. 2 vols.	3.50
Herman and Dorothea. Translated by Ellen Frothingham.	1.00
GREG'S (W. B.) Enigmas of Life.	2.00
Literary and Social Judgments.	2.00
Ore of Christendom.	7.00
GROTE'S LIFE. Compiled from Family Documents, Private Memoranda, and Original Letters to and from Various Friends. By Mrs. Grote. Second Edition. With Portrait.	5.00
HAMERTON (PHILIP G.) A Painter's Camp. Book I. In England. Book II. In Scotland. Book III. In France.	1.50
Thoughts about Art.	2.00
The Unknown River.	6.00
The Intellectual Life.	2.00
Chapters on Animals.	4.00
HAMILTON (GAIL). Child World. Part Second. Child World. Part First.	1.50
HAMILTON'S Lectures.	1.50
1. Metaphysical Lectures.	3.50
2. Logical Lectures.	3.50
HAWTHORNE'S (NATHANIEL) Works. New Illustrated Library Edition. Nine vols. Per vol.	2.00
Twice-Told Tales.	2.00
Mosses from an Old Manse.	2.00
The Scarlet Letter, and The Blithedale Romance.	2.00
The House of the Seven Gables, and The Snow Image.	2.00
The Marble Faun.	2.00
The English Note-Books.	2.00
The American Note-Books.	2.00
The French and Italian Note-Books.	2.00
Our Old Home, and Septimus Felton.	2.00
HIGGINSON'S (T. W.) Out-Door Papers. Malbone. An Old-Fashioned Romance. Army Life in a Black Regiment. Atlantic Essays.	2.00
Oldport Days.	2.00
HOWELLS'S (WILLIAM D.) Their Wedding Journey.	2.00
Suburban Sketches.	2.00
Venetian Life.	2.00
Italian Journeys.	2.00
A Chance Acquaintance.	1.50
HUGO'S (V.) New Novel, "Ninety-Three".	1.75
HUMBOLDT (ALEXANDER VON). Life of. Translated from the German. 1 vol., with three portraits.	10.00
HUME'S (DAVID) Essays and Life.	1.50
HUNT'S (MRS. HELEN). Verses.	1.25
Bits of Travel.	1.50
HUXLEY'S Man's Place in Nature.	1.25
On the Origin of Species.	1.25
More Criticisms on Darwin and Administrative Whiffen.50
A Manual of the Anatomy of Vertebrate Animals.	2.50
Lay Sermons, Addresses, and Reviews.	1.75
INGELOW'S (JEAN) Poems.	2.25
The Mountains of the Unseen.	1.50
Songs of Seven.	2.50
INGELOW'S (JEAN) Prose. Of the Skeltons.	1.75
Stories told to a Child. First and Second Series.	1.25
A Sister's Eye-Hours.	1.25
Moses the Fairy. A Story.	1.25
INGERSOLL'S (ROBT. G.) The Gods and Other Lectures.	2.00
INTERNATIONAL SCIENTIFIC SERIES. No. I. Forms of Water, in Clouds, Rain, Rivers, Ice, and Glaciers. By John Tyndall.	1.50
No. II. Physics and Politics; or, Thoughts on the Application of the Principles of "Natural Selection," and "Inheritance" to Political Society. By Walter Bagehot.	1.50

III. Foods. By Dr. Edward Smith.	1.75
IV. Mind and Body. The Theories of their Relations. By Alex. Bain.	1.50
V. The Study of Sociology. By Herbert Spencer, Esq.	1.50
VI. The New Chemistry. By Josiah P. Cooke, Jr.	2.00
VII. The Conservation of Energy. By Balfour Stewart, with an Appendix, treating of the Vital and Mental Applications of the Doctrine.	1.50
VIII. Animal Locomotion; or, Walking, Swimming, and Flying, with a Dissertation on Aerodynamics. By J. Bell Pettigrew.	1.75
IX. Responsibility in Mental Disease. By Henry Maudsley, M.D.	1.50
JERROLD (DOUGLAS). Fireside Saints, Mr. Claude's Breakfast Talk, and other Papers.	1.50
JOHNSON'S (SAMUEL) Oriental Religions, and their Relation to Universal Religion. India.	5.00
JOSEPHUS. The whole Works of Flavius Josephus, the Jewish Historian.	2.50
JOWETT. The Dialogues of Plato. Translated into English, with Analysis and Introductions by B. Jowett, M.A., Master of Balliol College, Oxford, and Regius Professor of Greek. Four vols.	12.00
KERR (ORPHEUS O.). Verses, Poems, Patriotic, Sentimental and Humorous.	2.00
LEWIS (W. M. H.). History of the Rise and Influence of the Spirit of Rationalism in Europe. 2 vols.	4.00
History of European Morals from Augustus to Charlemagne. 1 vol.	6.00
LEGO'S Confucius' Life and Teachings. Confucius and Chinese Classics.	2.00
LESSING'S (G. E.) Nathan the Wise. Translated by Ellen Frothingham.	1.50
LEWIS'S Physiology of Common Life. 1 vol. Biographical History of Philosophy, from its Origin in Greece down to the Present Day. 1 vol.	3.00
Problems of Life and Mind. The Foundations of a Creed.	3.00
LEWIS (G. H.). The Story of Goethe's Life.	1.50
LEWIN (REV. RAPHAEL, D.O.). What is Judaism? or, a Few Words to the Jews.	1.00
LONGFELLOW'S (H. W.) Poems. Portrait. Prose Works. Portrait.	4.00
LOWELL'S (J. R.) Poems. 2 vols.	4.00
The Biglow Papers. First Series.	1.50
The Biglow Papers. Second Series.	1.50
Among my Books.	2.00
My Study Windows.	2.00
LOWELL (MRS. A. C.) Poems for Children.75
LUBBOCK (SIR JOHN). Origin of Civilization, and the Primitive Condition of Man. Pre-historic Times.	2.00
LYELL'S Principles of Geology. 2 vols.	5.00
MACDONALD (GEORGE) The Vicar's Daughter.	1.50
MANN (HORACE). The Life of Horace Mann. By his Wife.	3.00
Lectures and Annual Reports on Education. Annual Reports on Education, from 1859 to 1868.	4.00
Thoughts Selected from the Writings of Horace Mann.	1.25
MARTINEAU (JAMES). Essays, Philosophical and Theological. 2 vols. Per vol.	3.50
MAURICE (REV. F. D.). The Ground and Object of Hope for Mankind.75
MIRIVALE'S (CHARLES) Conversion of the Roman Empire.	1.50
Conversion of the Northern Nations.	1.50
MILL (JOHN STUART). Dissertations and Discussions. 4 vols., each.	1.25
The Examination of the Philosophy of Sir William Hamilton. 1 vol., each.	3.25
The Positive Philosophy of Auguste Comte. Political Economy. New and revised edition.	1.50
The Subjection of Women—Essay on Liberty—both in one vol.	2.50
Representative Government.	1.50
Autobiography.	2.25
Memorial Volume. His Life and Works.	1.50
Three Essays on Religion.	2.50
MILLER (JOAQUIN). Songs of the Sierras. Songs of the Sun Lands.	1.50
MIVART (ST. GEO.) On the Genesis of Species.	1.75
MOBLEY (PROF. JOHN). Voltaire.	2.00
Boussieu, 2 vols.	5.00
MOULTON (LOUISE CHANDLER). Bed-time Stories.	1.50
MUELLER (MAX, M.A.). Lectures on the Science of Language. First Series.	2.50
The Same. Second Series.	3.50
Chips from a German Workshop. Vol. I. Essays on the Science of Religion. Vol. II. Essays on Mythology, Fables, Customs, and Folklore. Vol. III. Essays on Literature, Biography and Antiquities. Three vols. Price per volume.	2.50
Lectures on the Science of Religion.	2.00
NABBY (PETROLEUM V.) Swingin' Round the Circle.	1.25
Kisses from Kentucky.	1.50
NEWMAN (FRANCIS W.). A History of the Hebrew Monarchy.	4.50
Catholic Union: Essays towards a Church of the Future, as the Organization of Philanthropy.	1.75
Theism, Doctrinal and Practical.	4.25
PARKER (THEODORE). A Dispensary of Matters Pertaining to Religion.	1.50
Speeches, Addresses, and Occasional Sermons. 1 vol.	4.50
Additional Speeches, Addresses, and Occasional Sermons. 2 vols.	5.00
Critical and Miscellaneous Writings. Historic Americans—Franklin, Washington, Adams, and Jefferson. With an Introduction by Rev. O. B. Frothingham.	1.50
The two Christmas Celebrations—A.D. I. and MDCCLV. A Christmas Story.50
PARSONS (THEOPHILUS). The Infinite and the Finite.	1.00
PHILLIPS'S (ELIZABETH STUART) The Gates Ajar.	1.50
The Trolly Book.	1.50
Men, Women, and Ghosts.	1.50
Hedged In.	1.50
The Silent Partner.	1.50
What to Wear?	1.50
PROCTER'S (ADELAIDE A.) Poems. Portrait. Cabinet Edition.	2.00

PROCTOR (RICHARD A.) Other Works than Ours: the Plurality of Worlds studied under the Light of Recent Scientific Researches. With Colored Plates.	1.50
Light Science for Leisure Hours. A Series of Familiar Essays on Scientific Subjects, Natural Phenomena.	1.75
Essays on Astronomy: A Series of Papers on Planets and Meteors, the Sun, etc. With 10 Plates and 24 Woodcuts.	4.50
The Moon, her Motions, Aspects, Society, and Physical Conditions, with Three Lunar Photographs and many Plates, Charts, etc.	5.00
The Expanses of Heaven.	1.00
RENAN'S Life of Jesus.	1.75
ROSSETTI (CHRISTINA G.) A Shadow of Dante.	1.50
SCHILLER (H.) Spectrum Analysis, in its Application to Terrestrial Substances, and the Physical Constitution of the Heavenly Bodies.	5.00
SCIENCE PRIMERS: 1. Introductory. By Prof. Huxley, F.R.S.50
2. Chemistry. By Prof. Boscawell.50
3. Physics. By Balfour Stewart. With Illustrations.50
4. Physical Geography. By Archibald Geikie, LL.D., F.R.S., flexible cloth.50
SCOTT'S Waverley Novels. 35 vols.	21.25
SCOTT'S (THOMAS) The English Life of Jesus. Second Edition.	2.00
SMILES'S (SAMUEL) Self-Help.	1.50
SPENCER (HERBERT). Education, Intellectual, Moral, and Physical.	1.25
First Principles.	2.50
Essays: Moral, Political, and Aesthetic.	2.50
Illustrations of Universal Progress. A Selection of his best Papers.	2.00
Social Statics; or, The Conditions Essential to Human Happiness Specified, and the First of them Developed.	2.25
The Principles of Biology. 2 vols.	4.00
The Principles of Psychology. 1 vol.	4.00
Philosophy of Style.50
Recent Discussions in Science, Philosophy, and Morals. New and enlarged edition.	2.50
Sociology.	1.50
Descriptive Sociology. Parts I, II, and III, each.	4.00
Life, Correspondence and Ethics.	5.00
Universal Progress.	2.50
STOWE (HARRIET BECHER) Pink and White Tyranny.	1.50
Uncle Tom's Cabin.50
STRAUSS (D. F.) The Old Faith and the New.	2.00
New Life of Jesus. Authorized translation. 2 vols.	12.00
TAINES'S (H. A.) History of English Literature. 2 vols.	7.50
The Classic-Room Taine. History of English Literature. Abridged and Edited by John Fiske.	2.00
TENNISON'S (ALFRED) Poems.	1.75
THACKERAY'S (W. M.) Novels. Household Edition. Complete in 6 volumes. Per vol.	1.25
Vanity Fair.	1.25
The Newcomes.	1.25
Adventures of Philip.	1.25
Pendennis.	1.25
The Virginians.	1.25
Remond, and Love the Widower.	1.25
Miscellaneous Writings. Household Edition. Uniform with the Novels. Complete in 5 vols. With new Portrait. Per vol.	2.50
This edition includes all the matter in the latest English editions, with many additions, thus making it, with the novels, the cheapest and most complete Thackeray in the market.
1. Barry Lyndon, Hogarty Diamond, &c.	1.25
2. Paris, and Irish Sketch-Books, &c.	1.25
3. Snobs, Sketches, Denis Duval, &c.	1.25
4. Four Georges, Humorous, &c.	1.25
5. Christmas, Christmas Books, and Unreprinted Pieces.	1.25
THAKTER'S (MRS. CELIA) Among the Isles of Shoals.	1.50
THOREAU'S (H. D.) Walden; or, Life in the Woods.	2.00
Excursions in Field and Forest. Portrait.	2.00
The Maine Woods.	2.00
Cape Cod.	2.00
Letters.	2.00
A Yankee in Canada.	2.00
A Week on the Concord and Merrimack Rivers.	2.00
TYLER (EDWARD B.) The Early History of Mankind.	2.50
Primitive Culture. 2 vols.	5.00
TYNDALL (JOHN). Faraday as a Discoverer.	1.00
Fragmenta of Science for Unscientific People.	2.50
Light and Electricity.	1.25
Hours of Exercise in the Alps.	2.00
Heat as a Mode of Motion.	2.00
On Sound.	2.00
Radiant Heat.	2.00
Forms of Water.	2.00
Lectures on Light.	2.00
Proceedings of the Farewell Banquet to Prof. Tyndall.50
Lessons in Electricity.	1.50
Address before British Assoc'n at Belfast.50
TITLER (SARAH). Old Masters and their Pictures.	1.50
Modern Painters and their Paintings.	1.50
VOYSEY (REV. CHARLES). The Sting and the Stone. Vols. I and V, each.	2.00
Vols III, IV, and VI, each.	2.75
WARNER'S (CHARLES D.) My Summer in a Garden.	1.00
Summerings.	1.00
Book-Log Studies.	2.00
WEISS (JOHN). American Religion.	1.00
Life of Theodore Parker. 2 vols.	6.00
WHIFFLES (E. P.) Literature and Life.	1.50
Essays and Reviews.	2.00
Character and Characteristic Men.	1.50
The Literature of the Age of Elizabeth.	1.50
Success and its Conditions.	1.50
Washington and the Revolution.50
WHITNEY'S (MRS. A. D. T.) A Summer in Leslie Goldthwaite's Life.	1.50
We Girls: A Home Story.	1.50
Real Folks.	1.50
The Other Girls.	1.50
Fancies. A volume of Poems.	1.50
WHITTIER'S (JOHN G.) Poems. 2 vols.	4.00
Child Life.	1.50

ADDRESS:

THE INDEX.

221 Washington St., Boston.

Digitized by Google

GIRLS'—5 nice perforated mottoes for fancy work 10 cts. J. W. RUSSELL, Newton, Mass.

$66 a week in your own town. Terms and $5 outfit free. Address H. HALLITT & Co., Portland, Maine.

$5 to $20 per day at home. Samples worth $5 free. Address STRINSON & Co., Portland, Maine.

GOLD Any worker can make $12 a day at home. Costly outfit free. Address TRUE & Co., Augusta, Maine.

$125 a month and expenses to Agents. Send stamp for terms. S. C. FOSBERG & Co., Cincinnati, O.

E. A. SAWTELLE,
PIANO-FORTE TUNER.

Fifteen years' experience. Satisfaction warranted. Organs skillfully tuned and regulated. Orders left at THE INDEX office, or at Oliver Ditson & Co.'s, 451 Washington St., Boston.

THE INDEX
IN ENGLAND.

THE INDEX will be forwarded free by post to any part of the United Kingdom on receipt of an annual subscription of Fifteen Shillings. For Half Year, Eight Shillings. Remittances should be made by International P.O. Order payable to Francis Ellingwood Abbott.

Address THE INDEX,
231 Washington Street, Boston, U.S.A.

PAYNE'S AGE OF REASON

is an enterprising, 8-page, Liberal, Family Paper, devoted to the affairs of this world, and published in the interest of the people now on earth.

Editorially, it labors to free mankind from the bondage of priestcraft, and all forms of superstition. It does not believe in churches or creeds. It has no reverence for bibles or man-made gods, and opposes all attempts to impoverish this world by laying up treasures in another.

It has a variety of Departments, is chaste and pure in its tone, and in all respects aims to be a First-rate Liberal Paper.

PAYNE'S AGE OF REASON is published weekly, at One Dollar a year, or it will be mailed one, two, or three months on trial for ten cents per month. We pay the postage, and stop the paper at the expiration of the subscription. Address EXTRA WILSON PAYNE, 141 Eighth St., New York.

NEW BOOKS

TO LOAN.

Send to all parts of the United States. Booksellers and Newsdealers act as our agents. Better accommodations for general readers, even in small towns, than afforded by the large libraries of the great cities.

We supply promptly almost any book called for, and in any number which the demand requires.

All the leading Literary and Scientific Magazines loaned—the reading of a dozen for the cost of one.

Bookbuyers are offered the greatest inducements to be found anywhere in the United States. We issue a Semi-Weekly Catalogue. Our complete Catalogue will be sent post-paid for 20 cents, or free to any one buying to the amount of $1.00 or more.

AMERICAN BOOK EXCHANGE,
55 BEEKMAN STREET,
NEW YORK.

TO THE AMERICAN PATRONS OF
CHOICE LITERATURE.

We have made arrangements with Messrs. CHAPMAN & HALL, London, England, for the right to publish an American Edition of

The Fortnightly Review,
Edited by JOHN MORLEY,

and are now publishing this celebrated Monthly Magazine, from a special duplicate set of stereotype plates, which are forwarded from England so promptly as to enable us to produce each month, not only an exact facsimile of this able Review, but to publish it almost at the same time the original is from England. It is in every respect equal to the London issue, at about half the original price. This effort will place in the hands of American readers the freshest utterances of leading thinkers on the issues with a promptitude unequalled. The comments of a large number of the best European thinkers on Science, Philosophy, Literature, Politics, and Miscellaneous Matters of general interest cannot fail to be appreciated and encouraged by thoughtful American readers. The following are a few of the contributors:—

Matthew Arnold, Alfred R. Wallace,
Herbert Spencer, Frederick Harrison,
Goldwin Smith, Prof. Tyndall,
Right Hon. Lyon Playfair, Prof. Huxley,
Right Hon. W. E. Gladstone, Prof. Darwin,
Lionel A. Tollenache, Author of Supernatural Religion,
M. E. Grant Duff, M.P., Sir John Lubbock,
Hon. Robert Lowe, Anthony Trollope,
Leslie Stephen, T. Adolphus Trollope,
John Morley (the Editor), Sir H. S. Maine,
G. H. Lewes, Sir David Wedderburn.

AND NUMEROUS OTHERS.

Subscription Price, $5.00 per Year.

Published every month by the ROSE-BELFORD PUBLISHING CO., 60 York Street, Toronto, Ont.

TO BOOK-BUYERS.

Please examine the revised list of POPULAR BOOKS on the opposite side of this page. Any OBTAINABLE BOOK NOT IN THIS LIST will be furnished to order. Address THE INDEX, 231 Washington St., Boston.

A CHEAP OFFER.

A COMPLETE SET of INDEX TRACTS, from No. 1 to 15 inclusive, will be mailed to any address on the prepayment of 80 CENTS. Address THE INDEX, No. 231 Washington St., Boston, Mass.

WEST NEWTON

English and Classical School.

The twenty-fifth school year of this Family and Day School for both sexes will begin WEDNESDAY, Sept. 19, 1877. For Circular and information apply to

NATH'L T. ALLEN,
West Newton, Mass.

THE INDEX AS AN
ADVERTISING MEDIUM.

Testimony of one who has tried it.

FLORENCE, Iowa, Jan. 5, 1878.
... THE INDEX is the best advertising medium which I have tried. ...
E. C. WALKER.

PHOTOGRAPHS OF
COL. INGERSOLL!

Down to hard times prices. Cards, 15 cents each; 2 for 25 cents; 5 for 50 cents. Cabinet size, 25 cents each; 2 for 40 cents. Send stamp for club list of Free Thought and Scientific papers.
E. C. WALKER,
Lock-Box B, Florence, Iowa.

BOUND VOLUMES OF THE
INDEX for
1 8 7 7,

Complete for the Past Year, are now ready for delivery at this Office. Sent by express at the purchaser's expense. Price $3.00, in advance. Address THE INDEX, 231 Washington Street, Boston.

THE BEST PORTRAIT OF
THOMAS PAINE.

Engraved by the famous W. Sharpe from Romney's celebrated portrait—
Heliotype Copy

by James B. Osgood & Co., of Boston. This is a beautiful work of art, and by all odds the very best likeness of Thomas Paine to be found. It is 10x8 inches in size, and will be mailed post-paid on receipt of $1.00. Address THE INDEX, 231 Washington Street, Boston.

PENNSYLVANIA RAILROAD.
GREAT THROUGH LINE

AND UNITED STATES MAIL ROUTE.

The attention of the travelling public is respectfully invited to some of the merits of this great highway, in the confident assertion and belief that no other line can offer equal inducements as a route of through travel. In

CONSTRUCTION AND EQUIPMENT

THE PENNSYLVANIA RAILROAD stands confessedly at the head of American railways. The track is double the entire length of the line, of steel rails laid on heavy oak ties, which are embedded in a foundation of rock ballast eighteen inches in depth. All bridges are of iron or stone, and built upon the most approved plans. Its passenger cars, while eminently safe and substantial, are at the same time models of comfort and elegance.

THE SAFETY APPLIANCES in use on this line well illustrate the far-seeing and liberal policy of its management, in accordance with which the utility only of an improvement and not its cost has been the question of consideration. Among many may be noticed

The Block System of Safety Signals, Janney Coupler, Buffer, and Platform, and the Westinghouse Air-Brake, forming in conjunction with a perfect double track and road-bed a combination of safeguards against accidents which have rendered them practically impossible.

Pullman Palace Cars are run on all Express Trains from New York, Philadelphia, Baltimore, and Washington, to Chicago, Cincinnati, Louisville, Indianapolis, and St. Louis.

WITHOUT CHANGE,

and to all the principal points in the far West and South with but one change of cars. Connections are made in Union Depots, and are assured to all important points. The Scenery of the Pennsylvania Route is admitted to be unsurpassed in the world for grandeur, beauty, and variety. Superior refreshment facilities are provided. Employees are courteous and attentive, and it is an inevitable result that a trip by the Pennsylvania Railroad must form

A Pleasing and Memorable Experience.

Tickets for sale at the lowest rates at the Ticket Offices of the Company in all important cities and towns.

FRANK THOMSON, L. P. FARMER,
General Manager. General Passenger Agent.
C. S. HALDEMAN, New England Agent,
203 and 205 Washington St., Boston, Mass.

MISS DEVEREUX' BOARDING AND DAY SCHOOL FOR YOUNG LADIES AND CHILDREN, at Irvington-on-Hudson, will re-open on Monday, Sept. 17, 1877. Miss Devereux refers, among others, to the following gentlemen: Rev. Orville Dewey, Sheffield, Mass.; Mr. A. C. Richards, Irvington, N.Y.; Mr. H. R. Bishop, Irvington, N.Y.; Mr. Wm. H. Orton, Pres. W. U. Telegraph Co., N.Y.

POSITIVISM!
AN EPITOME OF THE Positive Philosophy and Religion,

Published by the Society of Humanity in the city of New York, contains the clearest statement of the subject ever made; also, Harriet Martineau's masterly defence of her religious convictions; and the Positive Classification of the Sciences, by T. B. Wakeman, etc., etc.

Send for it (enclosing 25 cents in postage stamps) to

HUGH BYRON BROWN,
President of the Society,
No. 141 8th St., N.Y. City.

LECTURES AND SERMONS.

BY
JOHN W. CHADWICK.
THIRD SERIES.

1. The Simplicity of True Religion.
2. The Rising Faith.
3. Fate and Freedom.
4. The Child Jesus.
5. The Angel Song.
6. Future Punishment.
7. The Sacred Scriptures.
The following numbers of the first and second series can also be supplied: Best Use of Sunday, Higher Reverence, Self-Respect, God on Our Side, Economy and Waste, Piety of Modern Science, Immortal Life, Moral Aspects of Belief in Immortality, Idealizing the Real, The Coming Man, A Rational Church.
Sent to any address, postage paid, at 5 cents per copy, by

JAMES MILLER,
775 Broadway, New York.

A NOTABLE TREATISE.
WOMAN SUFFRAGE.

THE COUNTERFEIT AND THE TRUE:
Reasons for Opposing Both.

BY
REAR-ADMIRAL MAXSE,
Of the British Royal Navy.

This is a little book of 16 pages, with neat paper covers, published in London, and presenting the reasons why a cultivated English gentleman is opposed to Woman Suffrage. It ought to be read and pondered by all who are interested in that question, on either side. Price, 25 cents. For sale at the office of THE INDEX, 231 Washington St., Boston.

GOOD PHOTOGRAPHS

OF
O. B. FEOTHINGHAM,
T. W. HIGGINSON,
W. J. POTTER,

W. H. SPENCER,
F. W. NEWMAN,
CHAS. VOYNEY,
A. W. STEVENS,
R. H. RANNEY,
F. E. ABBOT,

Are now for sale at the office of THE INDEX, and will be mailed postpaid to any address on receipt of price. Single Photographs, 25 cents each; complete Set of Nine Photographs, $1.50.

Address, THE INDEX,
No. 231 Washington St., Boston, Mass.

FREE RELIGIOUS ASSOCIATION.

Send to Office at 231 Washington St., Boston, Mass., for

TRACTS.
I. TAXATION OF CHURCH PROPERTY, by James Parton. 5 cts.; ten, 50 cts.; one hundred, $1.50.
II. THE BIBLE AND SCIENCE, by John Weiss.
III. THE SYMPATHY OF RELIGIONS, by T. W. Higginson. Enlarged edition.
IV. TRANSCENDENTALISM, by Theodore Parker. Never before published.

V. THE PUBLIC SCHOOL QUESTION, as understood by a Catholic American citizen (Bishop McQuaid) and by a Liberal American citizen (F. E. Abbot). (Two Horticultural Hall Lectures, Feb. 13 and 20, 1876.)

VI. HOW SHALL WE KEEP SUNDAY? An Answer in Four Parts: 1. Sunday in the Bible. 2. Sunday in Church History. 3. Sunday in the Massachusetts Laws. 4. The Workingman's Sunday. By Charles K. Whipple, Minot J. Savage, Charles E. Pratt, and Wm. O. Gannett.

Nos. II., III., IV., V., VI., 10 cts. each; ten for 50 cts.; one hundred, $5.

REASON AND REVELATION, by W. J. Potter. 5 cts. (Ten for 50 cts.; one hundred, $1.50.)

PROCEEDINGS OF THE F. R. A. ANNUAL MEETINGS for 1873, '74, '75, '76, and '77, Five cents each.

FREEDOM AND FELLOWSHIP IN RELIGION, a volume of essays and addresses representing the F. R. A. platform. $1.50.

SEND ONE DOLLAR

For a handsome Certificate of Membership as an

ANNUAL MEMBER
of the NATIONAL LIBERAL LEAGUE.

For TWENTY-FIVE DOLLARS, a still larger Certificate of Membership as a

LIFE MEMBER,

Will be sent to any person; and individuals cannot render more efficient assistance to the National Liberal League than by making themselves Annual or Life Members of it.

The following extracts from the Constitution of the National Liberal League explain the privileges of membership:—

ARTICLE IV.—Any person who shall pay one dollar into the treasury shall be entitled to a certificate, signed by the President and Secretary, as an annual member of the National Liberal League. Any person who shall pay twenty-five dollars or more into the treasury shall be entitled to a similar certificate as a life-member. All the persons present as members at the Centennial Congress of Liberals, at which this Constitution was adopted, are hereby declared permanent or charter-members of the National Liberal League.

ARTICLE V.—... All charter-members and life-members of the National Liberal League, and all duly accredited delegates from local auxiliary Liberal Leagues organized in accordance with the provisions of this Constitution, shall be entitled to seats and votes in the Annual Congress. Annual members of the National Liberal League shall be entitled to seats, but not to votes, in the Annual Congress.

Address NATIONAL LIBERAL LEAGUE,
231 Washington Street, Boston.

ORGANIZE!
CHARTERS

For Local Auxiliary Liberal Leagues, conferring the privilege of representation by five delegates in the Annual Congress of the National Liberal League, will be promptly sent on application, according to the following provisions of Constitution of the same:—

LOCAL AUXILIARY LIBERAL LEAGUES.

ARTICLE XIII.—The Board of Directors shall have authority, as often as they receive a written application signed by ten or more persons and accompanied by ten dollars, to issue a charter for the formation of a local auxiliary Liberal League.

ARTICLE XV.—Local auxiliary Liberal Leagues organized under charters issued by the Board of Directors shall be absolutely independent in the administration of their own local affairs. The effect of their charters shall be simply to unite them in cordial fellowship and efficient cooperation of the freest kind with the National Liberal League and with other local Leagues. All votes of the Annual Congress, and all communications of the Board of Directors, shall possess no more authority or influence over them than lies in the intrinsic wisdom of the words themselves.

ARTICLE XVI.—Every local auxiliary Liberal League organized in accordance with the provisions of this Constitution shall be entitled to send its President and Secretary and three other members as delegates to the Annual Congress.

These Charters are beautifully printed on the best of paper. Adorned with the handsome Seal of the National Liberal League, they will, if tastefully framed, make a fine ornament for any hall.

Address NATIONAL LIBERAL LEAGUE,
231 Washington Street, Boston.

CIRCULATE IT
EVERYWHERE!

The new Liberal League Tract of 24 pages, entitled,

"PATRIOTIC ADDRESS,"

contains:

1. PATRIOTIC ADDRESS of the National Liberal League to the people of the United States.
2. CHIEF RESOLUTIONS of the League.
3. PROTEST of the League against shutting the International Exhibition on Sundays.
4. CONSTITUTION and List of Officers.
5. EXTRACTS from Approving Letters by Distinguished Citizens.
This is the Liberal's best CAMPAIGN DOCUMENT in the great impending contest over amending the Constitution of the United States with reference to the school question. It should be in the hands of EVERY VOTER, and has been published expressly for gratuitous distribution by earnest friends of State Secularization.

Local Liberal Leagues

Cannot do better than to order this Tract by the quantity, as an excellent auxiliary in their local agitation.

INDIVIDUAL LIBERALS

Cannot do better than to use them privately, as opportunity offers.

Promptly mailed, at the bare cost of paper, press-work, and postage, on the following terms:—

TEN COPIES, 15
TWENTY-FIVE COPIES, 40
FIFTY " 75
ONE HUNDRED " 1.50
TWO HUNDRED " 2.50
THREE HUNDRED " 3.50
FIVE HUNDRED " 5.00
ONE THOUSAND " 12.00

N. B.—Packages of over 100 copies will be sent by express at the expense of the purchaser, without any charge for postage.

Address NATIONAL LIBERAL LEAGUE
231 Washington Street, Boston.

The Index.

Three Dollars a Year.

LIBERTY AND LIGHT.

Single Copies Seven Cents.

VOLUME 9.

BOSTON, MASS., THURSDAY, MARCH 28, 1878.

WHOLE No. 431.

NATIONAL LIBERAL LEAGUE.

PLATFORM

For the Presidential Election of 1880,

ADOPTED AT ROCHESTER, N.Y., OCT. 26, 1877.

1. TOTAL SEPARATION OF CHURCH AND STATE, to be guaranteed by amendment of the United States Constitution: including the equitable taxation of church property, secularization of the public schools, abrogation of Sabbatarian laws, abolition of chaplaincies, prohibition of public appropriations for religious purposes, and all other measures necessary to the same general end.

2. NATIONAL PROTECTION FOR NATIONAL CITIZENS, in their equal civil, political, and religious rights: to be guaranteed by amendment of the United States Constitution, and afforded through the United States courts.

3. UNIVERSAL EDUCATION THE BASIS OF UNIVERSAL SUFFRAGE IN THIS SECULAR REPUBLIC: to be guaranteed by amendment of the United States Constitution, requiring every State to maintain a thoroughly secularized public school system, and to permit no child within its limits to grow up without a good elementary education.

N. B.—The nomination of candidates upon the above platform was postponed to a future Congress of the National Liberal League.

THE DEMANDS OF LIBERALISM.

1. We demand that churches and other ecclesiastical property shall no longer be exempt from just taxation.

2. We demand that the employment of chaplains in Congress, in State Legislatures, in the navy and militia, and in prisons, asylums, and all other institutions supported by public money, shall be discontinued.

3. We demand that all public appropriations for educational and charitable institutions of a sectarian character shall cease.

4. We demand that all religious services now sustained by the government shall be abolished; and especially that the use of the Bible in the public schools, whether ostensibly as a text-book or avowedly as a book of religious worship, shall be prohibited.

5. We demand that the appointment, by the President of the United States or by the Governors of the various States, of all religious festivals and fairs shall wholly cease.

6. We demand that the judicial oath in the courts and in all other departments of the government shall be abolished, and that simple affirmation under the pains and penalties of perjury shall be established in its stead.

7. We demand that all laws directly or indirectly enforcing the observance of Sunday as the Sabbath shall be repealed.

8. We demand that all laws looking to the enforcement of "Christian" morality shall be abrogated, and that all laws shall be conformed to the requirements of natural morality, equal rights, and impartial liberty.

9. We demand that not only in the Constitutions of the United States and of the several States, but also in the practical administration of the same, no privilege or advantage shall be conceded to Christianity or any other special religion; that our entire political system shall be founded and administered on a purely secular basis; and that whatever changes shall prove necessary to this end shall be consistently, unflinchingly, and promptly made.

The above is the platform of THE INDEX, so far as the editor is individually concerned. But no other person, and no organization, can be justly or truthfully held responsible for it without his or its explicit approval.

FRANCIS E. ABBOT.

RESOLUTION

ADOPTED BY THE NATIONAL LIBERAL LEAGUE, AT PHILADELPHIA, JULY 3, 1876.

Resolved, That we accept the offer of the Boston INDEX to be our official organ of communication with the public, for the publication of announcements, acknowledgments, and other official papers of the Board of Directors; but that we assume no responsibility for anything else published in its columns and claim no control or influence in its general editorial management.

GLIMPSES.

A NEW Liberal League has been organized at Harrisonville, Cass County, Missouri, auxiliary to the National League. The officers are as follows: President, Dr. Thomas Beattie; Secretary, Hugh R. Steels; Treasurer, George M. Houston.

A WRITER in the New Haven Union recently said: "Labor can secure just wages, not by striking, but by having it in its power to turn from overcrowded occupations to those which are more remunerative." And it is better education alone which can give this power.

MR. GREEN reports that the Executive State Committee of the National Liberal League for Ohio has been duly constituted as follows: E. D. Stark (chairman), Cleveland; A. E. Macomber, Toledo; J. E. Boynton, Elyria; S. O. Kellogg, Berlin Heights; C. W. Wendte, Cincinnati.

THE EXECUTIVE State Committee of the National Liberal League for West Virginia has been duly constituted as follows: Dr. A. M. Dent (chairman), Weston; George A. Lees, Morgantown; S. E. Kuykendall, Parkersburg; Dr. J. B. Crumrine, Pennsylvania; Emory G. Bennett, Fayetteville.

MR. GREEN requests us to give the following notice, which we do with pleasure: "The free thinkers of New York State will hold their first Annual Convention at Watkins, Schuyler County, on the 22nd, 23rd, 24th, and 25th days of August next, and invite the free thinkers of the other States and of Canada to meet with them."

BISMARCK has added to the Beatitudes of Jesus a new one of his own. "Beati possidentes!" exclaimed the Chancellor; "blessed are the possessors!" This is a variation of the legal maxim—"possession is nine points of the law." It is an ironical confession of that gospel of greed which governs the conscience of all nations. When will the world learn that selfishness is the law of brutes—justice the law of men?

THE NEW prime minister of Turkey, Achmet Vefik Pasha, cracked a dry joke on the deaths of King Victor Emmanuel and Pope Pius Ninth. "Yes," said he, "it was a mean little intrigue of the King to slip off ahead of the Pope to the other world and secure the best place, that he might continue to worry the old man there!"

JOKEs ARE cracked on the new silver dollar. One says that the great prominence of the cheek and chin of the Goddess of Liberty is truly emblematic. Another says that the motto "In God We Trust" refers to the missing value of the coin. The New York Evening Post says: "If the emblem is to be perfect, the Goddess should be represented as wearing a paper collar; that kind of a collar being typical of the advanced civilization of the day, as well as illustrative of the profound regard that the great majority of the silver party have for paper itself." But no joke is cracked on the new encroachment of the clerical policy in the inscription of a motto that violates the whole theory of American government. That nobody perceives, or, perceiving, cares for!

WE FIND this anecdote in a Christian journal: "What has Christianity ever done for man?" demanded Bob Ingersoll, as he was riding some years ago in a railroad train. 'It has prevented Mr. Ingersoll from being Governor of Illinois,' replied a quiet lady who lived in the neighborhood of the infidel. The lady was partly right and partly wrong. Christianity did that thing, since it everywhere elects and defeats whomsoever it pleases; it did it, however, not "for man," but for the Church. Col. Ingersoll has had abundant reason in his own experience to understand that the battle for liberty has not yet been won in this country, as he thoughtlessly says it has; but he evidently does not understand it. Otherwise he would have less to say about "hell," and more to say about the Liberal League. Does he ever speak of that?

"OUR WHOLE DESIRE is to promote God's truth." This is in the salutatory statement of a new liberal publication, which we will not name because we want to rebuke the probably unconscious cant of that sentence, written though it was by a very good man. "God's truth!" When will the world grow radical enough to know that "Truth" belongs neither to God nor to the Devil, but to herself? That he who seeks her will never find her with the revenue-stamp of any proprietor on her brow? If there is a God, he belongs to truth, not truth to him. Whenever we see such cant as that placarded on a freethought house, like a politic—"Take Notice! No Atheist Lodged Here!"—an indignant recoil within us comes very near making us an atheist out and out. Yet, trying to follow truth in our own poor way without caring whether she leads us to heaven or to hell, we have not been led to atheism, though we have been led to love and admiration of more than one atheist. If God were ever to speak a veritable word of revelation, what could it be but to quote the old proverb: "Deliver me from my friends, and I will take care of my enemies"?

LAST SUNDAY we had the great pleasure of meeting the Society of Ethical Culture, in New York city, of which Professor Felix Adler is the regular lecturer. The Society meets every Sunday at Standard Hall, corner of Broadway and Forty-second Street, which seats about six hundred, and is usually so well filled that numbers are unable to obtain seats; and it maintains a regular school for the moral instruction of children once a week, meeting (we believe) on Tuesday afternoons. Although now beginning its second year, the Society is strong in numbers, in means, and above all in earnestness, hopefulness, and enthusiasm. Its interest is mainly in practical work, especially for the young and for the laboring classes; but its interest in the highest speculative themes is shown by the fact that it has clustered around Professor Adler, one of the ablest, purest, and best educated reformers of the country, and a young man whose singularly winning personality fascinates and holds the Society together. To us there is the profoundest meaning in the experiment here tried; for the originators of this movement are Jews who have come out from Judaism upon the broad ground of humanitarian religion, precisely as the more advanced school of "Free Religion" has come out from Christianity. In fact, these two movements are identical in spirit and in aims; and it is inexpressibly delightful to perceive how from these two ancient religions the same grand religion of humanity is evolving itself in conscious independence of all the contracted, special, personal claims of the past. Never have we drunk deeper at the fountain of "fellowship in the spirit" than in this society of large-minded, warm-hearted Jews, in whose "Preamble" and "By-Laws" the word Jew or its equivalents do not so much as appear. There is no petty conceit of superiority and no narrow spirit of separatism in Standard Hall; nothing made itself felt but the mighty oneness of humanity in its loftiest ideal aspirations and struggles. The day will be marked with a white stone in our calendar, for it seemed to show the fulfilment of a ten-years' dream. For most unusual and extreme kindness we must tender our grateful thanks; but we cannot begin to express the higher gratification of beholding a true avatar of the Spirit of Humanity. Next week we shall publish in full the "Preamble" and "By-laws" above alluded to. But these, after all, are only words; and we wish that all who have learned to love the ideals that have struggled to utter themselves in THE INDEX the past eight years might have shared with us the joy of seeing for themselves that, dreams though they are, they are also something better than dreams.

him were to be by him denied. Those who had believed on him were to be saved; those who had disbelieved were to be damned. If any house or city should not receive his disciples with a cordial welcome, they would fare worse in the day of judgment than the overwhelmed cities of Sodom and Gomorrah. Whereas whoever should receive a prophet in the name of a prophet, should receive a prophet's reward. Those who heard his words and acted upon them were compared to a house founded upon a rock; those who disregarded his precepts were likened, on the contrary, to a house destined to fall in ruin on the shifting sands. He that was not for him was against him. There is a power in this kind of teaching, a power which still has a great influence upon the masses to whom the gospel is preached; but it is not, nevertheless, the noblest method of presenting virtue. According to the incentives which Jesus almost invariably employs, a man is either bribed or frightened into obedience.

Now, if we look at the mode of teaching used by Confucius, we shall see a marked difference. The Chinese sage—to whose honor a temple is erected in every Chinese city down to those of the third order—aimed exclusively at fitting men for pure and honorable conduct in this life. His teaching was ethical, not religious. He urged men to attain to perfect virtue as the true aim of living. Heaven and hell do not enter at all into the list of incentives to virtue in his code. His precept is to practise virtue for virtue's sake. He did not talk much about "spiritual beings" or a future life, probably for the very good reason that he did not know much about them. His definition of wisdom was "to give one's self earnestly to the duties due to men, and while respecting spiritual beings, to keep aloof from them." With all this, it would not be fair to charge him with being an atheist, for we find these words upon his lips: "He who offends against Heaven has none to whom he can pray"; "I do not murmur against Heaven"; and "There is Heaven; that knows me!"

It will be remembered that I am not comparing in this article the religious teachings of Jesus with those of others, but simply his ethical precepts. In this comparison we have found Jesus almost constantly appealing to rewards and punishments to induce men to follow his instructions in morality. We have found Confucius, on the other hand, teaching morality for its own pure sake alone, without any mention of reward or punishment. Which teacher, then, stands in this respect upon the nobler basis of morals?

In Mencius, the great follower of Confucius, there is visible the same purity of ethical instruction. The nearest approach to any threat of punishment joined to his teachings is found in the words already cited under "evil speaking,"—"What future misery have they, and ought they, to endure, who talk of what is not good in others?" But that this "future misery" merely refers to the misery consequent upon such conduct in this life is highly probable from the fact that there is, in all the words of Mencius, no other passage capable of being construed into a reference to the result of men's actions in a future existence.

With Buddha the incentive of rewards and punishments is quite common. We find in the Dhammapada numerous passages like the following: "The evil doer suffers in this world, and he suffers in the next. The virtuous man is happy in this world, and he is happy in the next." According to Buddha, the good will attain unto "Nirvana, which is the highest happiness" (Dhammapada, 23), and "the bad will go to hell" (Dhammapada, 128). "Righteous people go to heaven; the fool goes to hell." "The uncharitable do not go to the world of the gods" (Dhammapada, 177). "He who says what is not good to hell."

These extracts have the real evangelical ring to them. They are as plain and forcible as most of the declarations of Jesus, though we miss in the Dhammapada some of the more terrible allusions to future torment in which Jesus indulges; such as, "Where their worm dieth not, and their fire is not quenched"; "Where there is weeping and gnashing of teeth"; and "Depart, ye cursed, into everlasting fire!" Moreover, it is to be remarked that the "hell" of Buddha was not a place of endless torment, but possessed "heavens of refuge" for repentant souls. Can we say as much of the "hell" of Jesus?

It must, however, be borne in mind that Buddha, although appealing to rewards and punishments, does so much less often than does Jesus. Therefore, in this instance also, we find that, as a rule, the moral precepts of Jesus are not based upon as high and noble motives as are those of Buddha; and nowhere in the whole range of Jesus' words do we find anything like the following noble sentiments: "Let thy motive lie in the deed, and not in the reward! Perform the duty, whether it terminate in good or ill. This is devotion" (Bhagavad Gita, chapter 2). "The path of virtue is to be pursued with no view to emolument" (Mencius, 7, 33). It will doubtless be replied to this that no motives, except those which appeal directly to the desires and fears of men, will have much influence in winning them to virtue, or reclaiming them from vice. The space of this article does not permit of a discussion of this subject. It is doubtless true that, with the masses of humanity, the incentives of rewards and punishments are the strongest. It is also probably true that the teaching of virtue for its own sake only to the thoroughly abandoned would be merely casting pearls before swine. And yet I claim that in a Divine Master, or even in the most perfect of human teachers, we should expect one-half, at least, of his ethical precepts to be uttered without the adjunct of a bribe or a threat. We should, I think, reasonably anticipate that, if he were the only infallible source of ethical instruction, he would, at least half the time, inculcate moral purity from its own inherent loveliness and for its own sake alone. In both these expectations we are disappointed.

On the subject of riches, the teaching of Jesus was quite peculiar. Buddha had said: "One is the road that leads to wealth; another is the road that leads to Nirvana." But Jesus, not content with similarly saying, "Ye cannot serve God and riches" (mammon), demands the utter renunciation of wealth in the case of the young man who inquired of him the way of life. "If thou wilt be perfect," he says, "go and sell what thou hast and give to the poor." It is to be parenthetically remarked that here too Jesus instantly adds, as an additional inducement, "and thou shalt have treasure in heaven!" Lest this should be called a special case, requiring peculiar treatment, let us examine other words of a similar nature. "Sell that ye have," exclaims Jesus in a general precept (Luke xii, 33), "and give alms." "Woe unto you that are rich! for ye have received your consolation. Woe unto you that are full! for ye shall hunger" (Luke vi, 24). "Verily I say unto you, that a rich man shall hardly enter into the kingdom of heaven. It is easier for a camel to go through the eye of a needle than for a rich man to enter into the kingdom of God" (Matt. xix, 23).

The parable of Dives and Lazarus reveals the same bitter feeling towards the rich. Dives is not represented as having committed any sin, save the one of being rich and having neglected to invite Lazarus to come in from the steps and eat at his sumptuous table. As Lazarus, however, is represented as being "full of sores," we can hardly wonder at the taste of Dives in this particular. Lazarus, on the other hand, is not said to have possessed any other merit than that of being a beggar and the recipient of canine blandishments. Yet when they die, Jesus represents Lazarus as carried by angels to Abraham's bosom, while Dives is plunged into torments similar to those of Tantalus. Moreover, Father Abraham, when appealed to by Dives, remarks this only: "Son, remember that thou in thy life-time receivedst thy good things, and likewise Lazarus evil things; but now he is comforted, and thou art tormented." This is compensation with a vengeance! That the hatred of riches in se and the praise of poverty in se were strikingly shown forth in the teachings of Jesus cannot be better proven than by the immediate conduct of his disciples whom he had thus instructed. No sooner was he dead than "all that believed had all things common, and sold their possessions and goods, and parted them to all men, as every man had need" (Acts ii, 44). "Neither was there any among them that lacked; for as many as were possessors of lands and houses sold them, and brought the prices of the things that were sold, and laid them down at the apostles' feet" (Acts iv, 34). James, too, imitates his master in bidding rich men weep and howl in view of the miseries which shall come upon them. Thus we see that Jesus rebuked the possession of wealth in itself, as not only dangerous, but wrong. He makes no distinction between a proper and improper use and amount of riches, but utters one broad and sweeping denunciation of them. Those Christian millionaires, therefore, who regard Jesus as the infallible Teacher whose words are divinely authoritative, should, in consistency, sell their fine houses and clothes, take an humble cottage, dismiss their servants, and give the balance of their incomes to the judicious nourishment and instruction of the poor and degraded. Impracticable? Absurd? Perhaps; but then let us agree that Jesus was impracticable and absurd; for he commanded just that and nothing less. He would, in all probability, do so again to-day, were he to come among us, and would unquestionably receive from some of his wealthy worshippers merely an astonished shrug and stare.

This hatred of riches on the part of Jesus resembles very much the idea of the Essenes, one of the prominent Jewish sects in his day. And it is probable that he derived it from them. Of these Josephus says (Wars of the Jews, Book II., chapter 8), "These are despisers of riches. No one is found among them who hath more than another; for it is a law among them, that those who come to them must let what they have be common to the whole order; so that among them there is no appearance of poverty or excess of riches. . . . Many of them live in every city. . . . Every one gives what he has to him that wanteth it. . . . Although there be no requital made, they are fully allowed to take what they want of whomever they please."

A peculiar feature in Jesus' code of morals is his prohibition of all oaths. "Swear not at all," he says (it is needless to say, not meaning here "Take not the name of God blasphemously," but do not strengthen your assertions by any appeal to the Deity). This precept is not only daily disobeyed by the majority of believers in the infallibility of Jesus, but those who persist in following his instructions in this particular have been frequently exposed to great inconvenience for so doing. This idea also was a dominant one among the Essenes. "Swearing is avoided by them, and they esteem it worse than perjury; for they say that he who cannot be believed without swearing by God is already condemned" (Josephus, Book II., chapter 8, Wars of the Jews).

The law which Jesus lays down upon the subject of divorce is explicit. "It hath been said," remarks Jesus, "whosoever shall put away his wife, let him give her a writing of divorcement. But I say unto you, that whosoever shall put away his wife, saving for the cause of fornication, causeth her to commit adultery; and whosoever shall marry her that is divorced committeth adultery." Is this precept, on the whole, an advantageous one for society to follow? Experience in countries where it has been attempted, and where divorce for any other cause than fornication has been refused, has proved that this rule is far too narrow to meet the exigencies of a complicated society. This precept also is therefore quietly set aside and violated by the followers of Jesus, who at the same time inconsistently claim to regard him as a Divine and absolutely infallible teacher.

We have already seen that Jesus, in common with all other great moral teachers, rebuked hypocrisy and cant most scathingly. There is, however, a step beyond this, which Jesus unhesitatingly takes, and for which he deserves all praise. Jesus ranked practical morality far in advance of ritualism. It is true, he is not the only teacher who does this. The institutes of Menu (4, 204) contain these words: "A wise man should constantly perform all the moral duties, though he perform not constantly the ceremonies of religion! He who purifies himself in the river of a subdued spirit, the waters of which are truth, its waves compassion, and its shores holy temper, will be liberated from this world; but liberation cannot be obtained by any outward observance!" But Jesus seems to have emphasized this with peculiar force. He gives continual evidence that he placed no high value upon the ceremonial observances of his nation. Every allusion which he does make to "giving tithes of mint, anise, and cummin," "making broad phylacteries," praying "in the temple," etc., by no means tends to make us regard such actions as important. He seems, indeed, to have observed his nation's feasts, but never issues any precepts in regard to them. Observance of religious ceremonials he does not include among the deeds which will be rewarded when he comes in his new kingdom. He strenuously objects to long public prayers, intimating that they are only made for display. Those who are to be admitted into heaven are the ones who have fed the hungry, clothed the naked, visited the sick and imprisoned; but those who cry "Lord, Lord, have we not in thy name done many wonderful works?" will be shut out. As regards the Sabbath, he "broke" it repeatedly, and defended himself for it on three separate occasions, because he had done so in acts of kindness. "It is lawful to do well on the Sabbath day," he exclaims. "The Sabbath was made for man, and not man for the Sabbath." For these bold protests against bigoted formalism, even when it is not attended with hypocrisy, let us give to the teacher of Nazareth the praise which is due to him. But let us lament that his precepts and example in this regard have been so poorly obeyed by his disciples. The High Church mummeries; the endless ceremonials and Saints' days of Catholicism; the "vain repetitions" of most of the church services; and our unjust Sunday laws,—all attest how grievously Christians have misunderstood their master.

What now are the conclusions to be drawn from this review of the ethical teachings of Jesus of Nazareth?

1. He uttered many noble precepts, for which the world is better; but every one of them had been substantially uttered by others before his time.
2. Some of his best teachings had been already said in his own nation, and even by his own contemporaries.
3. Many of his most remarkable moral precepts are inferior to the analogous teachings of other masters, because supported by the selfish incentives of rewards and punishments.
4. Some of his doctrines, such as the non-resistance of evil and the community of goods, are utterly unsuited to society, and inferior to the corresponding precepts of other teachers.
5. Taking his instruction as a whole, Jesus cannot be said to have taught virtue for virtue's sake, since he almost invariably appealed to men's desires and fears as motives to right action.
6. Jesus deserves especial (though not sole) honor for having placed little or no value upon what may be called sincere formalism, in comparison with the far higher duties of practical morality; although in his denunciations of hypocrisy, he was fully equalled, by other ethical teachers.

Finally, as a light, but not the light, of the world, Jesus is entitled to the respect and reverence due to all great and good men, "the fragrance of whose virtue endures for ever," and who by their precepts have rendered the race wiser, better, and purer. As an expounder of ethics, he will always be recognized as one of its great masters, yet only as one among brethren. For not alone from the slopes of Palestine rises a lofty mountain-peak to reflect the glorious dawn of moral truth to the darkened world beneath; but rather, as we journey backward up the stream of Time, do we discover one height of progress answering to another, until we stand admiringly before a glittering chain of snowy summits, from whose sunlit glory we catch refulgent beams, and in whose lustrous splendor we find our inspiration and our hope.—Radical Review for February.

AFTER-DINNER PHILOSOPHY.

The senator heretofore referred to was an intelligent man, who had made his way in life with a directness of purpose which paid no attention to all those stumbling-blocks which constitute obstacles in man's path, known as conscience, sworn faith, justice, and duty. He had advanced straight to his object without once swerving in the line of his advancement and his interest. He had been formerly a procureur, mollified by success, and was not a bad man at all, doing all the little kindnesses he could to his sons, sons-in-law, and relatives generally, and even to his friends,—having prudently taken the pleasant side of life, and availed himself of all the benefits which were thrown in his way. Everything else appeared to him very stupid. He was sprightly, and just enough of a scholar to think himself a disciple of Epicurus, while possibly he was only a product of Pigault-Lebrun. He laughed readily and with gusto at infinite and eternal things, and at the "crotchets of the good bishop." He laughed at them sometimes, with a patronizing air, before the bishop himself, who listened.

At some semi-official ceremony, the senator and the bishop remained to dinner with the prefect. At dessert, the senator, a little elevated, though always dignified, exclaimed: "Parbleu! Monsieur Bishop;

let us talk. It is difficult for a senator and a bishop to look each other in the eye without winking. We are two anglers. I have a confession to make to you; I have my philosophy." "And you are right," answered the bishop. "As one makes his philosophy, so he rests. You are on a purple bed, Monsieur Senator." The senator, encouraged by this, proceeded: "Let us be good fellows." "Good devils, even," said the bishop. "I assure you," resumed the senator, "that the Marquis d'Argens, Pyrrho, Hobbes, and M. Nalgeon are not rascals. I have all my philosophers in my library, gilt-edged." "Like your self," interrupted the bishop. The senator went on:

"I hate Diderot. He is an idealist, a demagogue, and a revolutionist; at heart believing in God, and more bigoted than Voltaire. Voltaire mocked at Needham, and he was wrong: for Needham's eels prove that God is useless. A drop of vinegar in a spoonful of flour supplied the flat lux. Suppose the drop greater, and the spoonful larger, and you have the world. Man is the eel. Then what is the use of the Eternal Father? Monsieur Bishop, the Jehovah hypothesis tires me. It is good for nothing except to produce people with scraggy bodies and empty heads. Down with this great All, who torments me! Hail, Zero! who leaves me quiet. Between us, to open my heart, and confess to my pastor, as I ought, I will confess that I have common-sense. My head is not turned with your Jesus, who preaches in every cornfield renunciation and self-sacrifice. It is the advice of a miser to beggars. Renunciation,—for what? Self-sacrifice,—to what? I do not see that one wolf immolates himself for the benefit of another wolf. Let us dwell, then, with Nature. We are at the summit, and let us have a higher philosophy. What is the use of being in a higher position if we can't see further than another man's nose? Let us live gayly; for life is all we have. That man has another life, elsewhere, above, below, anywhere,—I don't believe a single word of it. Ah! I am recommended to self-sacrifice and renunciation; that I should take care what I do; that I must break my head over questions of good and evil, justice and injustice; over the fas and the nefas. Why? Because I shall have to render an account of my acts. When? After death. What a fine dream! After I am dead it will take fine fingers to pinch me. I should like to see a shade grasp a handful of ashes. Let us who are initiated, and have raised the skirt of Isis, speak the truth; there is neither good nor evil; there is only vegetation. Let us seek for the real; let us dig into everything. Let us go to the bottom. We should scent out the truth, dig in the earth for it, and seize upon it. Then it gives you exquisite joy; then you grow strong and laugh. I am firmly convinced, Monsieur Bishop, that the immortality of man is a will-o'-the-wisp. Oh! charming promise. Trust it, if you will! Adam's letter of recommendation! We have souls, and are to become angels, with blue wings to our shoulders. Tell me, now, isn't it Tertullian who says that the blessed will go from one star to another? Well, we shall be the grasshoppers of the skies; and then we shall see God. Tut, tut, tut! All these heavens are silly. God is a monstrous myth. I shouldn't say that in the Montieur, of course, but I whisper it among my friends. Inter pocula. To sacrifice earth to paradise is to leave the substance for the shadow. I am not so stupid as to be the dupe of the Infinite. I am nothing; I call myself Count Nothing, senator. Did I exist before my birth? No. Shall I after my death? No. What am I? A little dust, aggregated by an organism. What have I to do on this earth? I have the choice to suffer or to enjoy. Where will suffering lead me? To nothing. But I shall have suffered. Where will enjoyment lead me? To nothing. But I shall have enjoyed. My choice is made. I must eat or be eaten, and I choose to eat. It is better to be the tooth than the grass. Such is my philosophy. After which, as I tell you, there is the grave-digger,—the pantheon for us; but all fall into the great gulf—the end; final; total liquidation. This is the vanishing point. Death's dead, believe me. I laugh at the idea that there is any one there that has anything to say to me. It is an invention of nurses; bugaboo for children; Jehovah for men. No; our tomorrow is night. Beyond the tomb are only equal nothings. You have been Sardanapalus, or you have been Vincent de Paul: that amounts to the same nothing. That is the truth of it. Let us live, then, above all things; use your personality while you have it. In fact, I tell you, Monsieur Bishop, I have my philosophy, and I have my philosophers. I do not allow myself to be entangled with nonsense. But it is necessary there should be something for those who are below us,—the barefoots, knife-grinders, and other wretches. Legends and chimeras are given them to swallow,—about the soul, immortality, paradise, and the stars. They munch that; they spread it on their dry bread. He who has nothing besides, has the good God,—that is the least good he can have. I make no objection to it, but I keep M. Nalgeon for myself. The good God is good for the people."

The bishop clapped his hands. "That is the idea," he exclaimed. "This materialism is an excellent thing, and truly marvellous,—reject it who will. Ah! when one has it, he is a dupe no more. He does not stupidly allow himself to be exiled like Cato, or stoned like Stephen, or burnt alive like Joan of Arc. Those who have succeeded in procuring this admirable materialism have the happiness of feeling that they are irresponsible, and of thinking that they can devour everything in quietness,—places, sinecures, honors, power rightly or wrongly acquired, lucrative recantations, useful treasons, savory capitulations of conscience, and that they will enter their graves with their digestion completed. How agreeable it is! I do not say that for you, Monsieur Senator. Nevertheless, I cannot but felicitate you. You great lords have, you say, a philosophy of your own, for your special benefit,—exquisite, refined, accessible to the rich alone; good with all sauces, admirably seasoning the pleasures of life. This philosophy is found at great depths, and brought up by special search. But you are good princes, and are quite willing that the belief in the good God should be the philosophy of the people, much as goose with onions is the turkey with truffles of the poor."—Les Misérables, by Victor Hugo.

THE FUTURE OF ENGLAND AND EUROPE FROM A GERMAN POINT OF VIEW.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE PALL MALL GAZETTE:

Sir,—If Mr. Forster, in his speech at Bradford, said it was a German task to keep the Russians out of Constantinople, this question arises: Did he speak of the German Empire or the German nation? For the two things are not identical. If Mr. Forster meant the Empire, he ought to have spoken not of a German but a Bismarckian task. Had he wished to be precise in his expressions, he would have considered twice before he advanced an opinion as to any Bismarckian interests at Constantinople. But if he spoke of the German nation, then I must inform him that the German national interests are inoperative. That which finds no place in our system of personal government is powerless to exercise any influence upon our Imperial policy. But this reasoning does not stop at our doors; it applies likewise to the terms Austrian and European as used by Mr. Forster. In Austria there is the same difference between the rulers and the interests of the nation. In Austria, indeed, through the race-divergences of the Hungarians, the Slavonians, and the Germans, this opposition of interests between rulers and people becomes much more obvious than with us Germans. Can any man of sense imagine a more flagrant contradiction than there is between the Hungarian declaration, that the defeats of the Turks are so many battles lost to the national interests of the Magyars; and Andrássy's puerile assertion, that the Austrian interests in the Eastern Question are confined within the limits of Bosnia and Herzegovina? So, you see, Austrian and Andrássyan are also terms of very different meaning. And Europe—what is Europe? Is it anything but a conglomeration of incoherent parts called Germany, Austria, France, etc., connected by a tie much less strong than even that which might render Germany one? What may be expected of such a fortuitous concurrence of antagonistic forces and tendencies? You may rely on it, sir, neither a sword nor a hand will be raised in defence of European interests. For those who are able to see what those interests are—i. e., the nations of Europe—are not in a condition to defend them; while the rulers of nations are either without ability to understand or will to acknowledge the true interests of Europe.

England does and will stand alone in the present portentous crisis, of which the Eastern Question is but a part,—that crisis of decomposition of mediæval empires and institutions which was commenced by the Austro-French war in 1859, was continued in the Danish war 1864, the Austro-German and Franco-German wars in 1866 and 1870, and which will most certainly not close with the present Russo-Turkish war. It will go on, and never cease, until it has thoroughly disposed of all those feasting relics of bygone times which still infest modern society. The French Revolution commenced the present struggle, and purified French society of all the social and civil trammels left upon the body politic by the feudal state, except that of the papacy, which is the only power capable of disputing the supreme sway of the civic republic in France to this day. In the other States of Continental Europe, the contending forces are not so visible. We Germans are favored with a great many bequests from mediæval society, the two most mischievous of which are the hereditary aristocracy and Catholicism in its contest with Protestantism, the "Kulturkampf." Another such relic is our royalty by "the grace of God," instead of by "the will of the people," as in your country. Now, all these hollow institutions the present crisis of international European politics is destined to level; and here we may see how the crisis of the day touches British interests to the quick. Our rulers perceive that France and England are at the root of that horrid evil commonly called democracy, and they wish to be able to get at either of them. Of course they know well enough how to deal with France; some trick like the Spanish candidature is easily found when required. Besides, the French polity, whether a republic or a monarchy, is always conservative,—always ready to keep down radically democratic movements, and to cripple free discussion. But England, free and inaccessible England, with her liberal institutions, her truly democratic equality of all persons and ranks, her free press, free right of meeting and of discussion, her absence of arbitrary power,—is not your own free country the nursery of those democratic principles which are destined to finish the work of purifying the world of personal rule and oppressive dominion,—a work commenced in our times by the French Revolution, but which was much sooner and just as effectually done when you cut off the Stuarts?

Seek here for the reasons why your country is the great object of hatred to all European monarchies. And, believe me, if the understanding between the Imperial families of Germany and Russia has one aim more clearly in view than another, it is that of reducing England to a second-rate power. The authors of this war have, no doubt, in the first place, the object of conquering Turkish provinces; but that is only a means to a greater end—the abasement of England. The war against Turkey is, in fact, the beginning of a war against the democratic institutions of England. Why, then, should England hesitate to muster her fleets and armies? The struggle is unavoidable; and peace at any price—though your great Gladstone may preach it—means nothing but foregoing preparation while your enemies diligently gather strength. War for "nothing but British interests" is but another form of the peace-at-any-price cry; for what do your peace party call your "interests"? Nothing short of an attack upon your own dominions; that seems certain. First you said the passage of the Dardanelles touched your interests at the quick; now, that question being agitated a little more boldly by Russia, it seems you get convinced that it is but little of your interest, and soon it will be none at all. Where, then, do your interests begin? At the Tower of London? Perhaps your peace party would hesitate to say as much as that without deliberation. I know you could not have propped up Turkey. That country is doomed; and Austria, I think, is doomed likewise. Therefore you could not do much for Turkey; nor would you be able long to defer the day of Austria. But that is no reason why you should not stand to your own rights. You will have to fight Russia. The sooner you are able, therefore, to select your own fields of battle, the better for you. You will have to fight Russia single-handed: neither Austria nor Germany will stand by your side; for the Germany of the Hohenzollern is bound to trail behind the Russian car. As to Austria, she cannot move if she would. The great man of Varzin told her, if you move south-east, so do I. That way Berlin and Petersburg exchange compliments. National interests go for what they are worth to the rulers. National German interests, no doubt, demand that Russia should be kept out of Constantinople; but much more urgently they would have required the mouths of the Danube to be kept free from Russian interference; for that splendid river is for a considerable distance a German water, and the industrial and commercial interests of the people extend down to and beyond its mouth. Further, the river pursues its course through Hungarian territory; and that nation's interests are as much involved in the freedom of the river to its mouths as our own are. Yet the Russians, though driven away from the river in the Crimean war, were allowed to repossess themselves of the mouths of the Danube, and to reduce Roumania to a Russian dependency. Serbia, too, will be independent: that is to say, dependent on Russia. Austria has allowed herself to be almost entirely cut off from Turkey; thus yielding up her influence in that quarter to the Czar, and to be nearly girt all round her northern, eastern, and southern frontiers by the iron grasp of Russia and her dependent Slavonic petty princes. Why did she suffer it? For several reasons. First, because her motley population of nationalities, mutually repelling each other, prevents her acting with vigor in any direction; and, secondly, because Berlin would not allow her to be her own master and select her own course of action. And why does Germany that way undertake to back Russia,—i. e., the only power really capable of damaging her growth? It is not a fable, however fabulous it may appear, that our good old Emperor William does so much love his Russian relatives as to sacrifice his own interests to them willingly, not quite understanding them. He thinks he is Russia's debtor. Having been able by the connivance of Russia to reduce Denmark, to beat Austria, and to conquer France, he considers the services of his northern kinsmen worth more than the common substantial interests or the mean material claims of the German nation. It has never occurred to him that the interests of the German nation need not be on every point coincident with those of the Hohenzollern dynasty, or, in fact, of any dynasty whatever. The interests of the dwellers on the banks of the Danube, for instance, are by no means those of the ruler living by the Spree; and that is why these Southern Germans are to this day unable to understand how the recovery of some unwilling Alsations, talking German but sympathizing with France, should be a gain of sufficient magnitude to make up for the millions of true-hearted Germans we lost through being severed from Austria. But they have to submit. No class of German society has any share of power. Personal will reigns supreme, and the people have to obey. And along with Germany the empire of Austria has to submit to orders issued from the backwoods of Varzin.

Mr. Forster is wrong, therefore, if he concludes, from the fact that Austria and Germany have a greater interest than you at stake in Constantinople, that you may sit still until the Austrians or we make a move. Depend upon it, if the Hungarian and the German nations were in a position to guide their own destinies, not only would they not have suffered Constantinople to be threatened, but the present Eastern war would never have been permitted; nay, Poland would not now be under Russian rule, nor would there have been a Franco-German war of 1870. All these things are the necessary consequence of personal government. Our empire has risen to its present height by overcoming our neighbors; we must, therefore, always live in fear of vengeance. As Moltke said, we must be prepared, for fifty years to come, to defend our conquests at the point of the sword. Our empire, therefore, is compelled to seek its own safety by backing and being backed by Russia; and that is why we Germans are compelled to trail at the back of the Russian car, although we know that there is not a greater enemy to our freedom—nay, our national existence—than our "Erbfreund" Russia. Nor is there the least chance of asserting our will and conviction until we have succeeded in putting an end to personal rule, and have established a government either with a crowned head like that of England or with an elected president as in the French Republic.

The English recognize no other rule of their policy than their interests. The French, on the other hand, "make war for an idea"; though, getting handsome ly paid for their services, as for example in Savoy and Nice, their maxim may be considered on a par with the English principle. But we Germans, as well as the Austrians, cannot do either; neither our real interests nor our ideal convictions guide our policy, but only the will, the idiosyncrasies of our ruler pro tem. And so it is that real national interests of Germany and Austria count for nothing in the Eastern war. England has solely to reckon with her own forces, and against the forces of the despotism of Europe. Let this be your warning. You cannot escape the struggle. Sooner or later it is sure to come upon you. Therefore make up your mind, stand your ground; and, since you cannot shun him, take the bull by the horns. It is the only way to get out of the contest at as small an expense as possible. I remain, Mr. Editor, truly yours,

ONE OF THE GERMAN PEOPLE.

Pall Mall Gazette, Jan. 19, 1878.

THE IOWA STATE LIBERAL LEAGUE.

PROCEEDINGS OF THE STATE CONVENTION—PLATFORM ADOPTED, AND OFFICERS ELECTED.

Convention met at 9 A.M., President Davis in the chair.

Minutes of yesterday's proceedings read.

Some general discussion ensued on the specific duties of the committees on permanent organization and constitution and resolutions, as compared with similar committees in political and other popular conventions.

The committee on organization reported the following for permanent officers of the convention:—

President, Joel P. Davis, Des Moines.

Secretary, Rev. H. A. Reid, Des Moines.

Assistant Secretary, Thompson J. Morgan, Prairie City.

Treasurer, David Wright, Polk County.

Report was adopted. Also, E. C. Walker, of Florence, was added as Assistant Secretary, and J. H. Strong, of Des Moines, as Vice-President.

The committee on constitution and resolutions made their report, which was received, and committee discharged. The constitution was fully and elaborately discussed in all its parts and bearings, some alterations and amendments made, and the whole finally adopted as follows:—

We, the undersigned, hereby associate ourselves together as a permanent organization, and adopt the following

CONSTITUTION.

ART. I. The name of this association shall be "The Liberal League of the State of Iowa"; and we hereby declare ourselves to be a State Auxiliary Liberal League, in full sympathy, fellowship, and affiliation with the National Liberal League.

ART. II. The objects of this association shall be: first, to coöperate with the National Liberal League in furtherance of the public objects, both general and specific, enumerated in its constitution; and, secondly, to organize local Auxiliary Liberal Leagues.

ART. III. Any person may become a member of this League by signing this constitution and paying twenty-five cents annually into the treasury.

ART. IV. Local Leagues may be organized in conformity with the constitution of the National and State Liberal League. Such local Leagues will be received by the State Liberal League upon written application, signed by ten or more persons. They are independent in the administration of their own local affairs, but have to pay annually ten cents for each member to the treasury of the State League.

ART. V. The annual meeting for the transaction of business and for election of officers of the League, and of the delegates to the annual Congress of the National Liberal League, to which this State League may be entitled, shall be held at such time and place as the Executive Committee may designate; and the Secretary shall give one month's notice of the same to the local Leagues and other members. Each local League is entitled to one delegate for every ten members, or fraction thereof, at any meeting of the State League.

ART. VI. The officers of this League shall be a President, Vice-President, Recording Secretary, Corresponding Secretary, and Treasurer, who shall, together with two other members elected by the League, constitute the Executive Committee. The Executive Committee shall have full control of the affairs of the League, subject only to instructions by the League itself. Three shall constitute a quorum to transact business. The Executive Committee shall appoint an agent in each county, whose duty it shall be to associate with himself two other residents of the county to assist him in organizing local Leagues, and in other work necessary to be done.

ART. VII. The duties of the President, Vice-President, Secretary, and Treasurer shall be those usually pertaining to those offices. It shall be a special duty of the Secretary to furnish the Secretary of the National Liberal League with a complete list of all the members, with their post-office address in full, and a list of the officers; and also to furnish him promptly with information of all important actions by this League. The Secretaries of the local Leagues have to furnish the list of their members and officers upon the request of the State Secretary forthwith.

ART. VIII. Amendments to the constitution may be made at any annual meeting of the State League by a three-fourths vote of all the qualified delegates and members present. But no amendment shall be made unless the proposed amendment shall have been announced as part of the required notice of the meeting which is to act upon it.

Afternoon Session.

1.30 P.M.

Convention resumed consideration of the resolutions reported by its committee, to constitute the working platform of the Iowa Liberal League. A general and free discussion was engaged in by the members, amendments made, and the following were finally adopted:—

Resolved, by the Liberal League of the State of Iowa, in Convention assembled:

1. That the exemption of church property from taxation is unconstitutional under the provisions of the Constitution of Iowa, which reads as follows: "The General Assembly shall not grant to any citizen, or class of citizens, rights, privileges, or immunities which shall not upon the same terms be equally shared by all citizens."

2. That the exemption of church property from taxation is unconstitutional under the provisions of the Federal and State Constitutions, which provide that no person shall be compelled to support any religion or church.

3. That the Sabbatarian laws are unconstitutional and void, and are impossible of execution, being opposed to natural law; that no one should be compelled to labor or not labor on any day.

4. That a Republic should never create by law a privileged class, for the reason that privileged classes always become tyrannical; and it is the duty of a Republic to make all its citizens equal before the law.

5. That we would most scrupulously respect the right of church-goers to enjoy their worship at any time unmolested; and that we demand that they equally respect the right of those who do not wish to join them to enjoy themselves with equal freedom at all times.

6. That the Bible being regarded as a book of sacred character and religious authority by only a part of the people, it is, to all intents and purposes, a sectarian book; therefore we protest against its use in the public schools.

Resolved, That we deny the right of any civil officers, as such, to take any notice of any religious days, festivals, or observances.

Resolved, That the employment of chaplains, as such, and the payment for their religious services by the civil authorities, and at the cost of the public, is but an adroit evasion of the Federal and State Constitutions, which forbid the compelling of citizens to support religious services against their will.

Forty-two persons signed the constitution, representing twelve different counties.

Dr. J. C. Michener, of Adel, Iowa, offered the convention $50, if necessary, to meet its expenses and start its work in the State.

The following officers were elected for the ensuing year:—

President, Dr. J. C. Michener, Adel.

Vice-President, J. H. Strong, Des Moines.

Secretary, Rev. Hiram A. Reid, Des Moines.

Corresponding Secretary, E. C. Walker, Florence.

Treasurer, Joel P. Davis, Des Moines.

Members of Executive Committee, G. G. Carstens, Muscatine, and Mrs. Ella J. Skinner, Des Moines.

On motion, and after full discussion, THE INDEX, of Boston, which is the official organ of the National Liberal League, was adopted as the organ of this League.

On motion, the Secretary was instructed to publish the proceedings of this convention in pamphlet form, if there were funds sufficient so that they might be furnished free to the members, to the county agents appointed by the Executive Committee, and others interested in our work.

Convention then adjourned sine die.

JOEL P. DAVIS, President.
HIRAM A. REID, Secretary.

—Iowa State Register, Des Moines, March 9.

FREETHOUGHT AND "IMMORALITY."

I wish to call the special attention of every one of our Christian friends into whose hands this journal may fall, to the utterance I am about to quote from Prof. Tyndall's late address. It touches the question of the morality of freethinkers. In his address at Birmingham, England, a month or two ago, on "Science and Man," before the Birmingham and Midland Institute, Prof. Tyndall said (I quote from the address as published in the Fortnightly Review, Toronto):—

"If I wished to find men who are scrupulous in their adherence to engagements, whose words are their bond, and to whom moral shiftiness of any kind is subjectively unknown; if I wanted a loving father, a faithful husband, an honorable neighbor, and a just citizen, I should seek him and find him among the band of 'atheists' to which I refer. I have known some of the most pronounced among them not only in life but in death—seen them approaching with open eyes the inexorable goal, with no dread of a 'hangman's whip,' with no hope of a heavenly crown, and still as mindful of their duties, and as faithful in the discharge of them, as if their eternal future depended upon their last deeds."

These are brave words in defence of the weak, oppressed by the strong. Three or four years ago when Mr. Underwood and ourselves were, in a most intolerant as well as illegal manner, excluded by Christians from the Napanee Town Hall, for the use of which, for lectures, we had paid our money, the ostensible pretext was that our doctrines were "bad" and "immoral," and ourselves no better. We protested earnestly at the time against this false charge, and offered to compare either notes or doctrines with our Christian persecutors, but they would do neither. I now ask the Napanee Town Councillors—the Christian gentlemen (?)—who so grossly trampled upon our rights at that time to "read, mark, learn, and inwardly digest" the above manly utterance of one of the best and greatest men of the present age. The great apostle of science will get the warmest thanks of every true liberal the world over.

ALLEN PRINGLE.

SELBY, Ont., January, 1878.

—Freethought Journal (Toronto).

LET ME RELATE a curious fact. It is not very new, but I have not seen it in the papers: Some time ago a lady, Mrs. D'Orbeney, acquired in Egypt a papyrus, which ultimately found its way to the British Museum. On it was written: "May the god Toth guard all the words contained in this scroll from destruction!" How Toth (god of literature) answered this prayer is as follows: The papyrus is a novel in two parts. One part is the story of Joseph and Potiphar's wife, under other names. The other part is the story of Cinderella, except that the Prince traces out the girl with a lock of shining hair, which matches hers alone, instead of with the shining slipper which fits her foot. One volume, possibly taken away by Moses along with Joseph's bones, found its way into the Bible; the other, which perhaps was thought too secular, floating around the world developed into the most popular of our fairy tales. One may be heard euphemistically told from the pulpit, the other in the theatre; but both have passed through the fire and flood of more than a thousand generations, transmitted mainly from tongue to tongue by two different races. Who would have anticipated that pious Joseph, drawn up from the pit to be made ruler of Egypt, and Cinderella, emerging from ashes to become a queen, parted B.C. 1400, when Moses was a boy, would finally meet their original parent here in London, and fall into each other's arms as long-lost sister and brother!—M. D. Conway.

THE WAR IN THE EAST is looked upon as a matter of great theological interest by a large body of religionists in connection with a fulfilment of the prophecies. The destruction of the Turkish Empire in Europe and the restoration of the Jews are generally considered by prophetic scholars as the last events upon which the second coming of Christ is conditioned. Should Turkey be driven back into Asia, which is supposed to have been meant by "the drying up of the Euphrates," and the Jews—that "living miracle of the ages"—return and reestablish their kingdom in Judea, then all the conditions of the prophecies of the millennium will be fulfilled. It sounds queer to hear such a doctrine maintained in this age, especially when one looks upon the world's development as the aim and end of man's existence; but it is a doctrine held by a very large class, including an important part of the English Church. Among the encouraging signs of the times which they note is the fact that in Russia, where two-thirds of all the Jews live, their exemption from military service has recently been done away, and they are now going back to Palestine in numbers so considerable that there is a lack of houses to shelter them. The more intelligent advocates of this doctrine do not pretend to fix any date for the end of the world, which has brought the Millerites into ridicule, but equally expect the literal fulfilment of the prophecies.—Boston Herald.

Poetry.

[FOR THE INDEX.]

"PEERING."

Deep calleth unto deep!
Tossed on a stormy sea,
I heard a strong voice calling out,
"What drift is bearing me?
Is it to heaven? Out to main?
To rest, to toll? To loss, to gain?"

Across the doubtful tide
Rang out the answer grand,—
"I see a blue sky over-head,
Although I see no land!
So breast the surges, bear the doubt,
And search the blue sky's meaning out."

Serene and still and strong,
Though good or ill betide,
Bends the great mystery of hope,—
Love's prophet, reason's guide.
What must it mean? It wraps us round,
And saves us, though the tempests sound.

Safe on this higher sea
We trust life's dearest freight.
Immortal tides of deathless thought
Sweep onward while we wait;
And love's strong voices, o'er and o'er,
Shout promise of another shore.

E. C. P.

CASH RECEIPTS.

N.B.—Postage stamps are not included here, though credited on subscriptions, etc.

FOR THE WEEK ENDING MARCH 25.

T. B. Skinner, $3.10; Sarah F. Earle, $10; T. M. Dent, $1.50; J. Hepburn, $1; N. B. Townsend, $1.50; Wm. Tindall, $3; A. M. Lee, $13.20; J. W. D. Palmer, $6.40; Thomas Davis, $13; B. C. Ingraham, 75 cents; C. B. Holloway, $3; J. C. Fargo, $2; Judge S. R. McCormick, $6.40; Alex. Grant, $3.20; J. B. Peightal, 25 cents; Charles Wilkins, $2; George M. Wood, $1.50; C. B. Woodward, 50 cents; J. B. Shane, 50 cents; Mrs. R. P. Maynard, $3.20; Sam'l R. Campbell, $20; Gen'l. A. J. Warner, $2; Samuel Roberts, $3.20; Dr. T. H. Matthews, $5; W. C. Little, $5; W. C. McDonald, 80 cents; Hon. George Hoadley, $20; H. H. Sharp, 10 cents; Isaac Kinley, $13.20; Joseph Treat, 70 cents; J. V. Mapes, $2; W. A. Clarke, 10 cents; G. P. Delaplaine, $3; Elisha Burdick, $3; T. Archibald, $3.20; A. N. Alcott, $3.20; W. S. Brown, 25 cents; Mrs. B. T. Yerrington, $3.20; L. B. Farrar, $1; Charles Truesdale, $3.20; Lewis G. Jones, $2.50.

All receipts of cash will be acknowledged as above, and no other receipt sent unless specially requested. Persons who do not see their remittances acknowledged within three weeks after sending, will please notify us.

N.B.—Orders for Tracts or single numbers of THE INDEX which are not on hand will, if of small amount, be otherwise filled to the same amount without further notice.

The Index.

BOSTON, MARCH 28, 1878.

THE INDEX is published every Thursday by the INDEX ASSOCIATION, at No. 231 WASHINGTON STREET, BOSTON. Telmo Office, No. 35 Monroe Street: J. T. FAY, Agent and Clerk. All letters should be addressed to the Boston Office.

THE INDEX accepts every result of science and sound learning, without seeking to harmonize it with the Bible. It recognizes no authority but that of reason and right. It believes in Truth, Freedom, Progress, Equal Rights, and Brotherly Love.

N. B.—No contributor to THE INDEX, editorial or otherwise, is responsible for anything published in its columns except for his or her own individual statements. Editorial contributions will in every case be distinguished by the name or initials of the writer.

FRANCIS ELLINGWOOD ABBOT, Editor.
OCTAVIUS BROOKS FROTHINGHAM, WILLIAM J. FOSTER,
WILLIAM H. SPENCER, MRS. E. D. CHERRY, GEORGE JACOB HOLYOAKE (England), DAVID H. CLARK, MRS. ELIZABETH GARY STANTON, J. L. STODDARD, ELIZABETH WRIGHT, C. D. B. MILLS, W. D. LE SCUR, BENJ. F. UNDERWOOD, ALBERT WARREN KELSEY, Editorial Contributors.

HOW TO ORGANIZE A LIBERAL LEAGUE.

ONE WAY TO DO IT.

Reader, do you desire to organize a Liberal League in your town? If so, this is a good way to do it: Draw up a paper in the following form, and present it to all the liberals in your vicinity:—

"We, the undersigned, are in favor of organizing a Local Liberal League in the town of _____, and agree to meet for that purpose at the house of _____ on Saturday evening next. We each agree to pay the sum set opposite our respective names towards the ten dollars required to procure a charter from the National Liberal League."

Names.	Residence.	Amount.
--------	------------	---------

When you have procured ten names and ten dollars, you are ready for organization. Of course, the more names the better. I shall be pleased to furnish form of Constitution when required. Reader, will you attend to this work immediately, before it passes from your mind? H. L. GREEN,

Chair. Ex. Com. N. L. L.

SALAMANCA, N. Y., March 15, 1878.

THE LONDON Secular Review quotes from an article by Professor Hitchcock on the "Functions of Belief," in the North American Review, a sentence which is more true than many liberals are willing to believe: "The feelings with which many excellent people now regard such men as Arnold, Huxley, Tyndall, and Darwin in England, and Draper, Fisk, and Abbot in America, need only stimulus and opportunity to burst forth into flames like those of Smithfield and Madrid." And it adds: "This recalls Mr. Ruskin's observation that a large number of the English clergy would have liked some years ago to burn Bishop Colenso to death, and make Ludgate Hill safer for the omnibuses with the cinders of him."

THE CATHOLICS are getting very restive on the chaplaincy question, and we hope the result will be a total abolition of the whole system. There are better ways of meeting the moral and religious wants of the prisoners than for the State to tax everybody to support sectarian proselytizers: "The annual report of the Catholic Union of New York, prepared by E. B. O'Callaghan, LL.D., Corresponding Secretary, has just been published. It states that the Catholics in the army number over ten thousand men, and complaint is made that of the thirty-four chaplains appointed only one is a Catholic. In the navy there are twenty-four chaplains, but not one, it is asserted, is a Catholic, although the mass of seamen is claimed to be of that denomination. The report complains that according to the labors of the priests, the Catholics believe they are entitled to one-half of the sixty-nine Indian agencies; they are allowed less than one-tenth. A discussion of the present school system finds some space in the report. Nearly one hundred thousand Catholic scholars attend sectarian or private schools in the State. In the three State prisons about one-half of the convicts are Catholics. A priest has the privilege of celebrating mass once in each month in Sing Sing and Clinton Prisons. Protestant services are held on the other Sundays. The report urges that each prison have resident chaplains for the Catholic and Protestant prisoners. Mass is said once a month in the Elmira State Reformatory. The Catholic inmates of the House of Refuge, it is complained, are entirely deprived of Catholic instruction; priests are not allowed free ingress, and the Sisters are not allowed to visit the girls. A Methodist minister is paid a salary as chaplain, and gives instruction to all the children."

NATIONAL REFORM ASSOCIATION.

We have been asked for information about this Association, which has for its object the Christianization of the Constitution and Government of the United States. We republish this week, therefore, the Report of the Executive Committee, presented at its last annual meeting, February 7, and the Resolutions adopted on the same occasion. Next week we will give the Constitution, list of officers, and some account of the history of the movement, as represented by its own friends. We call particular attention to the important references made in both these documents to the Edmunds Bible Amendment,—to the proofs they give of the active intervention of this Association at Washington on behalf of that obnoxious measure,—and to the avowed purpose of popularly agitating on behalf of it during the coming year. The discussion must come; shall it come only on one side of the mighty issues at stake? If not, the National Liberal League must be widely and powerfully sustained. There are multiplying signs that the movement is striking root in many directions, but it will not grow unless those who believe in freedom, justice, and the equality of all citizen-rights shall learn the lesson of unselfish, vigorous, and harmonious coöperation. Let us not be ashamed to learn wisdom from those who are active and resolute on the wrong side of these great questions. The documents below are extracted from the Christian Statesman:—

Report of the Executive Committee.

Since the last National Convention the work of National Reform has been prosecuted steadily and with encouraging success. During no previous year has more been accomplished, in proportion to the means and labor expended, than during that which has just closed.

Immediately after the National Convention in Philadelphia, the committee appointed by that body to urge the claims of the Sabbath before the United States Centennial Commission, obtained a hearing before that body. On the same day the large committee appointed by the National Liberal League appeared to protest against the closing of the gates of the Exhibition on the Sabbath. The arguments on both sides were heard patiently and at length; and the decision of the Commission on the following day was rendered with an emphasis which gratified the friends of the Sabbath in this and all other lands.

A month later the constitutional amendment prohibiting appropriations of public money for the support of sectarian schools, received in the United States Senate the modification which this Association had sent a delegation to Washington to secure while it was pending in the House of Representatives. The Judiciary Committee of the Senate reported a substitute for the resolution of the House which provided that "this amendment shall not be construed to prohibit the use of the Bible in any school or institution supported by the public money." As soon as this was brought before the Senate, a letter was prepared in printed form, urging the adoption of the substitute, and sent, with the names of all the officers of this Association, to every member of both Houses of Congress. The substitute received in the Senate twenty-eight votes to sixteen in the opposition, or a little less than the requisite two-thirds; and the whole measure, therefore, for the time being, fell to the ground. The Senate resolution, in its original form, was introduced again on the tenth of last month by Senator Edmunds, of Vermont, and should receive the steadfast and active support of this Association.

Two conventions of deep interest have been held since the last meeting of the National Association,—one in Chicago in April last, and one in Rochester in December. In both of these places the Bible had been expelled from the school by the local authorities. The General Secretary expended several weeks in public labors in connection with both these meetings. A large number of local meetings were held, and the reports of the conventions, including the excellent addresses made at each of them, were reported and disseminated widely in the local papers.

Two new tracts have been published within the past six months: one a discourse, entitled "The Lord is our King," delivered before a Congregational Association by the Rev. Huntington Lyman, of New York; the other a report and resolutions adopted by the Massachusetts Convention of Universalists at their meeting in Worcester in September last. This action by this body, receiving as it did the decisive vote of sixty-seven to twenty, was one of the most gratifying indications of the progress of the cause which was afforded during the year.

A National Reform Manual has been published,—a neat and convenient volume of seventy-five pages, containing the Constitution and officers of this Association, Hints to Workers, Important Extracts, and the Constitution of the United States. This is proving itself an invaluable hand-book to those who are called to work in any way for the cause.

An extra or supplement of four pages to the Christian Statesman has also been prepared; embodying, in brief articles, a complete and popular argument for the National Reform movement, and four thousand copies have been already distributed. The other tracts published by the Association have been more in demand this fall than ever before. Although not published by your Association, it is gratifying to be able to state that the Christian Statesman has since the last Convention been enlarged by the addition tion of one-half its previous size, and has reached a point at which it may be considered self-sustaining. By funds supplied for this purpose, more than four thousand copies of the Statesman were sent for one month each to pastors and prominent laymen last year, and more than five thousand will have been distributed by the end of this month, each one including the supplement above referred to.

The report of the treasurer for the past year is as follows:—

EXHIBIT FROM THE TREASURER'S BOOK, PERIOD JUNE 28, 1878, TO FEBRUARY 7, 1879.

1878.	1879.
Rec'd June 28 to Aug. 1. $327.73	Am't paid in July.....$402.50
" August.....298.60	" " August.....14.04
" September.....110.15
" October.....80.40	1877.
" November.....65.26	Am't paid in January....20.00
" December.....5.90	" " February.....208.00
	" " March.....244.00
1877.	" " April.....84.45
" January.....9.82	" " July.....168.20
" February.....13.00	" " August.....298.50
" March.....182.75	" " September.....90.00
" April.....27.50	" " October.....240.00
" May.....11.00	" " November.....154.10
" June.....4.90	" " December.....42.38
" July.....228.13
" August.....162.00	1878.
" September.....191.70	Am't paid in January....57.39
" October.....57.00	Bal. due Treasurer, June
" November.....59.55	28, 1878.....296.24
" December.....90.00
1878.
" January.....241.10
	$2,827.41
Balance.....$99.50
	$2,117.50
1878.
Balance due Treasurer.....$29.29

The items of expenditure have been reported in detail at the regular meetings of the executive committee, and the accounts have been carefully audited by a committee appointed for that purpose.

Your committee recommend, as the most important matter for consideration at this meeting, the more thorough and efficient organization of the National Association and its auxiliaries. There are, we may safely say, hundreds of thousands of our citizens who have been informed and convinced by the conventions, local meetings, and publications of the society in the fifteen years of its existence. Whole districts of the country, and whole churches have been pervaded with its ideas, and are ready to act in support of its measures. The organization of this vast body of American citizens in such a way as to yield effective support to one another, and to their common and glorious cause, is the imperative duty of the hour. Your committee have already taken one important step to this end, by providing for the appointment of District Secretaries, who shall have charge of the work in their several localities, and whose special duty it shall be to organize and sustain active local organizations. For this step we crave your careful consideration and your approbation at this meeting.

We recommend also the adoption of measures looking to the active and general support of the constitutional amendment now before Congress, as it relates to non-sectarian education and the use of the Bible in schools; and especially that the executive committee for the coming year be instructed to prepare and circulate petitions, and to hold meetings in its support, and to secure effective newspaper discussion in its behalf.

All which is respectfully submitted.

T. P. STEVENSON, Chairman.

Resolutions.

The following resolutions, reported by the Rev. A. M. Milligan, D.D., Chairman of the Committee, were adopted after full discussion:—

Resolved, That our nation's authority, and every feature of moral character which our nation possesses, imperatively demands a settled and explicit expression of the divine warrant on which alone such authority and moral influence can rest.

Resolved, That the separation of politics from religion is doing much to introduce and foster political dishonesty, and in this way encouragement is given to all kinds of dishonesty and immorality.

