THE JOURNAL OF BORDERLAND RESEARCH

BSRF No. 1 Published by Borderland Sciences Research Foundation, PO Box 549, Vista, California 92083-0190. Edited by the Director, Riley Hansard Crabb, MsD.

The Journal is published six issues a year with the assistance of the Associates, at the Director's home, 1103 Bobolink Drive, Vista.

It is printed, 36 pages an issue. The Foundation is incorporated under California law, May 21, 1951, #254263, and has been in continuous existence since then. Correspondence is addressed to the PO Box. The Journal is included in the Foundation membership of $15.00 a year, domestic. Foreign membership/subscriptions are now $15.00. Single copies and back issues of the Journal are $2.50.

A donation of $15 domestic or $15 foreign will also bring the Journal to those who dont care to join BSRF. The Director's wife, Mrs. Judith Crabb, is office manager and Secretary-Treasurer.

PURPOSES OF BSRF: This is a non-profit organization of people who take an active interest in unusual happenings along the borderland between the visible and invisible worlds.

In the words of the late Meade Layne, founder and director of BSRF from 1946 to 1959: "BSRA publications are scientific in approach but employ few technical expressions. They deal with significant phenomena which orthodox science cannot or will not investigate. For example: The Fortean falls of objects from the sky. Teleportation, Radiesthesia, PK Effects, Underground Races, Mysterious Disappearances, Occult and Psychic Phenomena, Photography of the Invisible, Nature of the Ethers and the problem of the Aeroforms (Flying Saucers). In 1946 BSRA obtained an interpretation of the phenomena which has come to be known as the Etheric or 4-D interpretation; it has not been radically altered since that time. This continues to be the only explanation of the UFOs which makes good science, sound metaphysics and common sense."

The chief present concern of the Foundation is to make this kind of unusual information available as a public service at reasonable cost. Headquarters acts as a receiving, coordinating and distributing center. An important part of the Director's work is to give recognition, understanding and encouragement to people who are having unusual experiences of the borderland type and/or are conducting research in any of the above fields. For consultation on borderland problems or for Spiritual healing through prayer, write or phone 619-724-2043 for help or for an appointment. Donations and bequests toward Foundation research programs and expenses are welcome.

The 37-page list of BSRF publications is available from Headquarters for $2.50 in money, check or stamps. This includes brochures on borderland subjects, tape recordings of Crabb's lectures and of members of the Inner Circle, talking through trance-medium Mark Probert. THE PROCESS OF INDIVIDUATION

Or

FROM NEGENTROPY TO ENTROPY

By Itzhak Bentov

In "Stalking The Wild Pendulum"

"Let us design and make a Nature spirit or even a minor god of the elements in Nature. First of all we have to pick a continuum. Let us take a smooth valley. Suppose that there is a big rock formation projecting prominently from this valley. We now have an individuum. It is definitely separate from the valley, although we see it only in contrast to the valley.

"We know that matter is consciousness -- or, if you prefer, contains consciousness. This consciousness, if there is enough of it, a critical mass, will develop a dim awareness of self. Over millions of years this dim awareness may be strengthened into a sharper identity, possibly through interaction with other creatures. If an animal finds a hiding place in the rock formation, it will feel grateful to the rock for its shelter and the rock will feel it.

"And its ego will be boosted if a bird comes and makes a nest and lays eggs in it. The bird's evolving life and consciousness which is higher than that of the rock, will give its consciousness a push upward. Sooner or later the consciousness of the rock will evolve into a 'spirit of the rock'. By now he has learned that if he extends protection to these creatures, they respond with grateful feelings. Slowly, therefore, he begins to understand that his business is to protect them. Soon he becomes quite adept at this and will attract more creatures. In short, he is in business.

"Being in close contact with live beings will speed his evolution, so to speak, and widen his range of responses. He will have a relatively low-frequency response, corresponding to that of the mineral level of consciousness, but in this case he will be at the very top of the band delineating the mineral consciousness. He will border on the plant consciousness, and his energy curve will reach into that of the astral region. So when a human being finally comes to this rock, one who is sensitive to

Nature, he will feel that there is something special about the rock. It produces some particular feeling in him either of protection or repulsion.

THE BEGINNING OF A PRIESTHOOD

"Let this remain between us -- a spirit such as this is still quite unevolved and stupid, and he may want to show off his prowess by producing some silly trick. When this happens, the man, if he has noticed it, will become duly impressed. Soon other people will come around the rock. They will also witness the tricks, and pretty soon there is a cult going. This boosts the ego of the spirit in the rock immensely because the thoughts of the people who concentrate on him add to his power.

"Let us look for a moment at the effect of thoughts on things or people. A thought is energy that causes the neurons in the brain to fire in a certain pattern. That naturally produces tiny currents along the definite paths in the brain cortex that can be picked up with sensitive instruments through electrodes on the surface of the skull. In other words, a thought that starts out as a tiny stir eventually develops into a full-fledged thought producing at least a 70-millivolt potential somewhere in the cortex. It fires the first neuron, which in turn causes others to fire in a certain sequence. However, in this universe no energy is lost. If we can pick up the current produced by the thought outside the head, it means that the energy of the thought was broadcast in the form of electro-magnetic waves, and at the velocity of light into the environment and, finally, into the cosmos.

"Now this is serious business, especially since thought energy can be focused. As long as we are just sitting and producing idle thoughts, the thought energy is diffuse; and it eventually spreads out, weakens and disappears. However, when we consciously concentrate and send coherent thoughts, that thought energy of thought-form will impinge on the person for whom the thought was meant. We shall discuss this in more detail later.

"Now back to our 'spirit of the rock'. We have said that when people concentrate on him, it adds immensely to his capability to do things because he is stimulated by the level of energy produced by the human nervous system. He is hobnobbing with royalty. From here on, everything is snowballing: He will be able to pull off more impressive tricks, which will impress primitive people, and eventually they will bring him sacrifices to draw him to their side. Or, if they feel that he may be angered by their activity within his jurisdiction, they will sacrifice to him in order to appease him. It is known that miners in copper mines in Peru sacrifice llamas to the spirit of the mine every year with great pomp and ceremony. According to the miners, this spirit, who is the individuated consciousness of a vein of copper, will be appeased by this sacrifice and not harm or cause accidents to the people working in the mine, who, in effect, are digging up and diminishing his body.

"Eventually, the 'spirit of the rock' which started out as a vague, dim awareness in a mass of matter, develops into a powerful spirit or a tribal god. Now that we have successfully followed the spirit's evolution, we may have a slightly better insight into the meaning of Mescalito the spirit of the peyote plant described by Carlos Castaneda in 'The Teachings of Don Juan'. We are dealing here with a more evolved entity, representing the sum total of consciousness of all the peyote plants in a certain area -- in other words their group consciousness.

"These are plants having a relatively high level of consciousness, certainly higher than that of a rock. Mescalito, therefore, is more intelligent and has a greater variety of responses than the spirit of the rock. He is in constant contact with humans, who view him as an 'ally'. They cater to him, and he responds by performing for them in his own way. At first he was nothing more than a space charge, a cloud of low consciousness. As he gained energy he may have developed a more definite form, a shadowy one at first. Later, when human consciousness interacted with him, he may have resonated to human thoughts and formed himself a body that matched their expectations and that could be visible to such sensitive people as clairvoyants.

"In a way, all these minor gods or Nature spirits rely on the energy they get from others to keep themselves powerful. Just like the politicians, their power and influence depends on the size and the strength of their constituency. Eventually, as their constituency diminishes, they fade from the scene, as did the gods of the ancient peoples, for example, the Baal, the Moloch, the Greek and Roman Gods, etc. They remain just at some nominal value, sufficient to hold a social security card for old-age pensions...

"An air mass is/has consciousness. There is the big general pattern of winds on a global scale such as the trade winds. That mass of air would be represented by a very large, substantial entity, of the level of consciousness corresponding to the mineral level. He, in turn, will delegate responsibility for the local weather to smaller entities contained within him who know the local needs. These entities will do their best to keep everybody happy under the given conditions. A tornado is a typical high-energy individuation of a mass of air. A hurricane is another... a down-to-earth example of particle-wave duality or individuation. This holds true throughout all levels of Nature..."

ANOTHER VIEWPOINT ON THE HEMET (CA) MAZE

by John Rafter

When visiting the well-known Hemet Maze, California site, I was impressed on how well the design was executed. It was then that I decided to study it from an artist's viewpoint. Perhaps from this angle one can draw conclusions that may otherwise get overlooked.

First, the maze is constructed by using one continuous line throughout the design, with the exception of an unincorporated double-headed "T" in the left portion of the maze (Fig. A). I find this puzzling because the rest of the petroglyph is so well laid out that if one wanted the lines to continue throughout, this can be done without altering the whole design. Therefore, it seems that the double-headed T was deliberately kept separated.

The design is unique in that it not only has a one continuous line, but it also has a single "entrance" leading from the outside at the top to the central square (Fig. B). It also has a third maze, a passageway between the lines (or "walls"), although there are no entrances (Fig. C). If one were to pick a spot between the lines, one could travel in this corridor throughout the entire design. In this case, the unincorporated double-headed T becomes a "space" between passageways. In retrospect, it is three types of mazes in one.

The lines are almost evenly spaced, creating an overall even "color", without one portion being denser than the other. To an artist's eye, the design is well balanced. I endeavored to find out why by copying it. To my surprise, if one were to place the maze on an imaginary "grid," the number of parallel lines moving outward from the four side of the central square would total ten lines each, making a total of forty lines (Fig. D). This means someone had to plan this out very carefully, possibly working out the design in sand or on hide, and for a reason.

The maze was done in the design of a swastika, a very common and ancient symbol. It is said by some to represent the orderly movement of the cosmos, moving from east to west in a counter-clockwise motion (Villaseñor, 1966:15). Three of the corners are empty and in the lower left-hand corner, there is a small swastika. In studying the style and pecking techniques, it appears that the smaller one was done at a different time or at least by a different person. Whether or not this was a late addition is not certain. However, Wilson Turner located old photographs from the early 1900's, of the petroglyph and the small swastika can be seen (personal communication).

While mazes are not all that uncommon, very few explanations were given for their use. The Hopis used a maze during their Wwuchim ceremony, that was copied from petroglyphs south of Orabi and Shipaulovi (Fig. E). It is said to represent Mother Earth and the "passages within the maze form the universal plan of the Creator which man must follow on his Road of Life; and the four points (within the maze) represent the Cardinal or directional points..." (Waters, 1976:29-30). The Papagos and the Pimas used maze designs, sometime in the form of swastikas, on their baskets. They also have virtually the same maze as the Hopis on their baskets, with almost the same meaning. It is called the "House of Tewa". with the maze being earth and the anthropomorph at the entrance to the maze is their "Elder Brother" who knows the path of life to the "Center of the Universe" or wisdom (Fig. F).

The Hemet Maze was suggested by some to be the work of the Mayas of Central America, while others maintain it was the work of the Chinese explorer, Hwuf Shan, about 500 years ago (Smith & Turner, 1975: III). Within this same Lusaño territory, though, are found some examples of mazes, both in petroglyphs and pictographs (Smith & Turner, 1975: 81), and some can be found in Nuegueno territory near Green Valley, Poway (Grant, 1981: 113, 114 and Pepper, 1963:26). My feeling then is that the Lusaño were... the likely group to have made the Hemet Maze since it is believed that the same people occupied the area for as long as 1,500 years (Kroeber, 1925: 578,579).

In the center of the design within the inner square is a small dot. This may be analogous to the Luiseno's small pit in the center of their sandpaintings representing the "navel" of the world, the center of the universe (Kroeber, 1925:662,663). By projection, since this is in Luiseno territory, one may propose that the outer square enclosing the design can be compared to the outer enclosing circle of their sandpaintings, representing the surrounding universe or the Milky Way (Kroeber, 1925: 662,663). Also found in their sandpaintings are four lines radiating from the central pit called the "hands (arms) of the world", and, much like the arms of the swastika, they represent the four cardinal directions (Dubois, 1908:177,178).

In conclusion, the Hemet Maze may possibly function as a form of a mandala, a graphic mystic symbol of the universe that is used chiefly as an aid to meditation. It has a center, a possible "navel" of the world; a swastika in the form of a maze which may represent the orderly movements of our lives and our immediate environment (the world); and finally, the all encompassing square, the possible surrounding universe, the heavens, or the Milky Way.

THE GOD OF A ROCK AND HIS PRIESTHOOD

By Geoffrey Hodson, From His Book
"The Science Of Seership"
And The Chapter "Clairvoyance In Time"

"It is evident that there was a time at this settlement in the Cotswolds when the rulers and priests were beneficent and wise, and their religion of sun and Nature worship was powerful and uplifting.

"At the period with which we are concerned now, however, small communities of priests in these outlying districts resorted to objectionable practices in order to overawe and subjugate the more primitive peoples previously described.

"There is here today a large, flat slab of rock which once formed part of a rough open temple, in which blood sacrifices were made; that rock still carries with it the unholy influence of those rites.

"The sacrifices seem to have been chiefly of females, young women between twenty and thirty years of age being usually selected. One is seen who has been stunned by a blow from a club, dragged by the hair to the foot of the altar, where she lies senseless, while the priests, seven in number, utter invocations to their Deity.

"The chief priest stands before the altar, the six other priests stand there on either side behind it, all seven facing the people who have gathered in a rough circle on the slope of the hill. There are probably 300 of them of both sexes. They are obviously in great fear of the priest, who holds those nearest to him under a kind of magnetic or hypnotic control. Their eyes are glazed and fixed, and his power over the crowd increases as he addresses them. He sweeps his arms slowly from side to side, and is quite consciously using his own animal magnetism upon them.

"The other six priests keep their concentrated gaze firmly fixed upon the people, until gradually the whole audience is spellbound, completely held within the grip of priestly power. This control is obviously necessary, for there are murmurings in the hearts of the people, and particularly from the members of the family, living some half-mile away, from which the victim has been taken. These are combining with others who have suffered to form a conspiracy to overthrow the power of the priests.

"The priests, however, hold within their power a certain number of the men of their tribe, who are their servants, bodyguards and emissaries, and who kept in a state of semi-hypnotic glamour in which they are quite unable to resist any command of their masters. It is these emissaries who steal in among the people and seize the victims.

Even should they be discovered in the act, however, the people are in such awe of the priests that they dare not resist. A powerful narcotic is now administered -- at least in the case of the victim of the ceremony which is being watched -- for she is breathing heavily and, mercifully, does not regain consciousness.

POWER FROM A CHARGED ROCK

"Behind their priesthood there is a horrible deity of the infernal regions, in whose power they have placed themselves, and of whom they are as much afraid as the people are of them. It is from this source that they draw much of their magic power, and it is to feed and propitiate it that the sacrifices are made. I forbear to describe in detail the ceremony which followed, as it is too horrible; suffice it to say that the jugular vein is opened on the left side, and that the god, clothed in etheric matter, becomes visible in a ghastly travesty of a human form, placing himself so that the whole altar comes within his etheric double, and thus absorbs the offering that is made to him.

"The people are terror-stricken, yet fascinated. The priest does not break the hypnotic rapport after the ceremony, but allows them to find their way home with fixed, unseeing eyes, bearing with them the atmosphere of horror they have just witnessed, and carrying terror into their settlements and homes. Gradually the influence of this particular sacrifice wears off; but the priests hold the people under their power, and use it to call them to attend ceremony after ceremony, until at last their individual reason and will are completely merged in that of the priests who, by these means, gradually extend their influence and sap the virility of the people immediately around them. There are, however, in the remoter districts, large numbers who are not under their dominion, and who live a normal healthy life of hunting and primitive agriculture."

So, this "horrible deity from the infernal regions" wants to become a human being, believe it or not; otherwise, why should it assume "a ghastly travesty of a human form" with vitality stolen from the victim of the all-powerful priesthood?

We sensed no aura of evil blood sacrifices around the Hemet Maze when we visited it, though there might have been in the past. There is a constant stream of visitors there, wondering at this visible remnant of an invisible Force whose Portals are left unguarded by the long-gone Mayan priesthood which created it, Negentropy still available to anyone with the intellectual courage and the know-how to make use of it to speed up evolution on the upward Path, even though the elemental earth god is on the Involutionary Path. His? Hers? Its progress through dense matter is also speeded up by contact with humans.
LECITHIN THE GLAND NOURISHER
By Kay Mullendore
From "Oil Of The Magic Lamp"

Lecithin made from soy beans may be called the Promaster vitamin, since it feeds and energizes the endocrine glands, which in turn control vitamin metabolism. Lecithin-starved glands cannot utilize vitamins and transform them into hormones for body balance as lecithin nourished glands can do.

Before the 20th century scientists knew little about nutrition. In fact, knowledge of nutrition is still in its infancy. However, for 20 years we have been carrying on experimental work in nutrition at Skydoor Health Resort, Wrightwood in the San Bernardino mountains, California. Realizing the value of lecithin, we have worked out a lecithin-sun cream and have used it most successfully in connection with violet-ray action on nude bodies -- externally, of course. We have obtained extraordinary results from our techniques.

From head to toe we rub the patient with lecithin, emphasizing especially the areas around the chest -- above the heart, the groins -- for sexual potency, and the spinal column -- for nerve regeneration. Our patients report a sense of exhilaration while absorbing the violet rays. Ten days of this treatment will return them to vigor and elasticity, with muscle and joint stiffness gone.

One may use lecithin cream to advantage before retiring, because the skin so readily absorbs it. Applied to the face it feeds the subcutaneous blood vessels, thus improving the complexion. It can be used, of course, for successful regeneration of the sexual powers, as Professor Klebe discovered after the age of 75. For four weeks he rubbed it over the scrotum, testes, groins and heart, discovering that all of a condition which had been affecting him for years had disappeared. He experienced a complete renewal of sexual potency, as well as greater alertness of brain and some memory restoration. The noted chemists, Fairchild and Foster have written:

"Scientific research has scarcely scratched the surface of the wonders of lecithin. By supplying this substance which nearly everyone lacks, gland, nerve and brain vitality are markedly increased, and the spinal cord and its radiating nerves leading to all parts of the body, become better nourished and more vital. While the oral induction of lecithin as a food adjunct has been practiced for some time, the latest therapeutic application is through skin absorption. Thus lecithin may be massaged along the spinal cord for absorption to nerve centers underneath. It may be applied to the skin converying the genital glands for natural invigoration and rejuvenation. It may also be applied to the skin over the heart for heart ailments, and through a new lecithin pine bath it may be absorbed by the skin of the entire body for the increased formation of red blood cells and the strengthening of the nervous system."

FIRE UP THE BRAIN

Dr. Spitzka also praises lecithin in his book "Insanity -- Its Causes and Treatment", stating that "Lecithin is a food principle which feeds the nerves and keeps the fire of brain activity burning brightly. Since lecithin is also a principle constituent of the semen, it can be readily understood why the excessive loss of this fluid would lead to deficiency and malnutrition. The balance of lecithin and cholesterol in the human cell is 33 and 33 1/3 and unbalance of this proportion creates glandular unbalance and decreased vitality."

Phosphorous is another vital food element for proper brain nutrition. Scientists Moleschotts and Liebgtn have popularized phosphorous by their epigram, "There can be no thinking without phosphorous." The white brain matter is composed largely of phosphorized fats which increase as the brain gets older. The reader must not conclude from these statements that the amount of phosphorous passing through the body determines the intensity of thought. But the chemical compounds of phosphorous, which forms the myelin sheath of the nerves and brain, is composed largely of phosphorized fats and phospholipine -- compounds of unsaturated oxygen, poor fatty acids and phosphoric acid. All seeds and sea vegetation, as well as soy beans, contain the growth factor or lecithin. Within the first six weeks of life myelin deposits on the nerve fibers is of great importance to the future personality. In multiple sclerosis of the brain the myelin sheaths are destroyed. Either a dietary or a physiological deficiency of lecithin can cause this.

All organic building matter contains phosphorous and sulphur at the same time. The sulphur acts as a regulator of all growth, as well as in tissue building because of its oxidizing powers. Many conditions of disease today result from the combinations of bread and meat sandwiches, or all foods abound in the nucleo-proteins, such as milk, cheese, eggs, nuts and cereals. These foods should be consumed in very small quantities, and always with plenty of vegetables and fruits to balance them. Because they are not, we find gout and rheumatism predominant among the meat-eating Northern people, and pelagra in the southern European countries. Italy, with its macaroni, cheese, rice and fish is very poor in phosphorized fats. The oxidation process is slowed up with heavy foods since the phosphorous process in metabolism depends upon oxygen.

Considering the nutrition of the average man or woman we find that diseases which are hardly noticed at first become more firmly established over a long period of time as the metabolism slows down. Habit patterns of families from generations back as to their likes and dislikes upset the normal balance in the metabolism and it takes many years of discipline through strict self-denial to bring back a balance in the system. To go all out for any one food, herb, fruit, thus missing the seasonal productions of Nature in its infinite variety, causes a certain stagnation in any system. Local produce, natural to the area, should always be in the diet; and if one can maintain a garden and draw fresh produce from that, better yet.

Lewis Laboratories, 49 Richmondville Ave., Westport CT 06880 claims to produce the purest lecithin available, probably around $10 a pound at health food stores. Research on this highly important food supplement has continued since Mullendore's 1960 article. The Lewis news sheet says: "In 1975 scientists at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology discovered that lecithin choline has a prompt effect on the brain's ability to make an important chemical for nerve signal transmission called acetylcholine. The surprising element in this discovery was that choline is taken up by the brain directly from the circulating blood.

"It has long been believed that something called the 'blood brain barrier' protects the brain from such direct influences. Only a few substances, notably alcohol and narcotics were, heretofore, known to be able to penetrate the barrier. This means that each time you take lecithin there can be an immediate effect on the production of chemical signals in the brain.

THE ENEMY OF ATHEROSCLEROSIS?

"By helping to dissolve fats and cholesterol, lecithin functions as the body's emulsifier. Fats and oils are essential parts of the diet, yet they must function within the watery environment of the body. Although oil and water do not mix, a lecithin molecule can hold them together. One end of the molecule -- containing fatty acids -- is attracted to the oil, and the other -- containing phosphorous and nitrogen -- is attracted to the water. Thus lecithin acts as a bridge between water and oil. It has the ability to keep fat-like cholesterol particles in clear solution while they journey through the arteries so they are unable to settle out and form dangerous deposits on the walls of the blood vessels. A build-up of these deposits can narrow or shut off a blood vessel, the consequences of which could be atherosclerosis and heart attack. Lecithin helps remove fatty liver deposits as well, so a person can enjoy a healthier liver and more youthful metabolic processes."

The propaganda mill of the AMA got a feature article on the virtues of lecithin published in the Los Angeles "Times" last fall, but the emphasis was on the absolute need for pure lecithin, not really available yet because science had not completed its testing; so the reader was urged to wait four or five years before using lecithin, "until the testing was complete"! Nutrition Headquarters, Inc., in Carbondale, Illinois 62901, sells a pound of lecithin granules for about $5 by mail, which can easily be worked into a salve or paste. Write for their latest catalog and prices.

THE DISASTROUS DESCARTES

By Liam Brophy, PhD
From the Sept 1983 Anti-Vivisector

It is sometimes held that philosophers are rather like bats flitting about ineffectually in the twilight of thought. Sir Francis Bacon, himself a philosopher, compared them to the stars which give such little light because they are so high. But out of the thoughts of Voltaire and Rousseau flared the conflagration of the French Revolution, and all the horrors of Naziism were given impetus by the fevered brain of Nietzsche. The monstrous toll of massacres and murders still being augmented by Communists the world over, had their origin in the academic mind of Karl Marx. In like manner, the fearful accumulated cruelties of modern vivisection stemmed from the facile theories of the seventeenth century French philosopher, Rene Descartes (1596-1650).

"I cannot forgive Descartes," -- Je ne puis pardonner a Descartes, said his contemporary, Pascal. We repeat that condemnation, not merely because he made God a mere hypothesis, an irrelevant Prime Mover in a mechanical universe; but because he conceived a method of thinking which sanctioned unutterable cruelties to animals throughout the past three centuries, and offered scientific justification to vivisection.

To Descartes was principally due what Maritain called "the origin of the deep inhumanity of modern science". To him also we owe the materialistic, mechanistic attitudes of the Western World, its bias in favor of quantity rather than quality, of material prosperity rather than richness of mind and spirit, of progress in terms of material advantage, and the aggressive male standards of our society. There was a concentrated significance in Rousseau's remark that Descartes "cut the throat of poetry", for he cut off all the finer feelings which distinguish humans, and assassinated piety with the poetry.

Mechanics were much in vogue in Descartes' time, and clockmakers in particular were held in high esteem. Clocks were a consuming passion to the hapless King Louis XVI, who was eventually decapitated. At that time Descartes was pondering the relations between man and matter, the body and the spirit which makes it tick, the human brain and the thoughts it produces -- relations which are not even yet fully explained.
DESCARTES, THE GREAT CLOCK-WATCHER

Many important scientific discoveries and inventions, as well as artistic creations, have resulted from flashes of genius and intuition in gifted and receptive minds. In his remarkable book, "The Act of Creation", Arthur Koestler made a deep analysis of the phenomenon, and cited numerous examples from Archimedes to Newton, demonstrating how intuitive genius works. Millions had seen apples fall before Newton was struck by its significance. Descartes, while brooding over the mind-and-matter relationship, listened passively to a clock ticking in the vacant and pensive Wordsworthian mood, which is the bliss of mentally active solitude.

It is, in fact, as a result of Descartes' theories that we moderns make our popular metaphors in mechanical terms; so we may say the philosopher had accumulated a sufficient amount of explosive gas when the spark of intuition exploded it, and set his mental pistons going. Descartes must be considered the greatest clock-watcher of all time.

Endless debates about the relations between mind and matter had been going on. It was emphasized that mind and body were distinct, and that neither could influence the other. How then explain their obvious and continual interaction? Descartes came up with the idea that they ran on parallel lines, like two clocks side by side, perfectly synchronized, even ticking simultaneously. They had nothing to do with each other; but the Creator, the Master Mechanic, Who had originally kicked the world into space like a football and abandoned it, saw to it that, by an influence of miracles, the apparent effect of the spirit on the body was kept up.

This was a deus ex machina on a grand scale. Descartes claimed to initiate the scientific approach. There were to be no more myths or fantasies in the thought processes. It must have struck some of his contemporaries as quaint that he should fall back on the notion of an indefinitely repeated series of sustained miracles which arranged that every event in one of our clocks was accompanied by an appropriate event in the other! But then when Kant asked how humans were to conduct themselves if the real world is so out of gear with the world of ideas, he answered lamely, we should act als ob, "as if" things are what they seem.

Descartes' theories seem naive to us now, but they seemed good at the time and offered a neat solution to a lot of muddled metaphysical theorizing. He offered the world "clear and distinct ideas" and a strictly scientific approach. His modern disciples avoid embarrassment by declaring that mind is rarefied matter when they expound on psycho-physical parallelism. What deeply concerns us is that Cartesian spirit in the cruel mentality of vivisectors who, consciously or not, regard animals as automata. Descartes set forth his theory in his famous Discours de la Methode (published in English by the Everyman Library). It is listed among the books said to have influenced history deeply.

It was inevitable that Descartes should apply his ingenious theory to animals. It must have given great comfort to the cruel to be assured by this "mastermind" that animals experience neither pain nor pleasure. If they squeal when cut with a knife, or struggle violently to escape the application of a hot iron, these reactions are to be regarded as no more than the clicks and clangs of machines in operation. His disciple, that unpleasant cleric, Malebranche, used to kick his dog to show it had no feeling.

ABSOLUTION A LA FATHER DESCARTES

Descartes also made things easy for those who wished to cast off their nagging conscience and will-power. If men were mere machines, adjusted to run on certain lines, why impute crime to them?

It is a curious fact of human history that when stupid or evil-minded men wish to commit an outrage, they do so under the guise of doing good, sub specie boni, as the philosophers say, such as the imposition of imperial peace on "the lesser beings without the law", or the preservation of a Master Race, of the advancement of science. If vivisectors were tempted to have qualms about torturing animals, the Cartesian theories absolved them.

Reference has been made in these pages to a spirit of evil which seems to haunt the whole vivisection industry. During Descartes' own lifetime, his theories were eagerly embraced by that sombre heresy, Jansenism. In its two convents, both named Port Royal, outside Paris, vivisection was practiced on a ruthless scale, for its inmates prided themselves in advancing knowledge. The heresy, which also denied freedom of will, was condemned and obliterated. Its rise and fall was described by Aldous Huxley, a writer and scientist of eminence, in his disturbing book "The Devils of Loudon". It shows in what subtle ways the spirit of evil can enter into those who cast out pity from their proud hearts.

Koestler referred to the Cartesian man as "the ghost in the machine". The notion of an angel driving the human mechanism was used before, but there are angels of light and darkness. When we recall that chloroform was not used on humans or animals until the 1840s, we can imagine the enormous amount of suffering caused to animals, without anesthetics of any kind, in the centuries before Descartes' time to the present. Some might be pardoned for concluding that such a prolonged hell for animals was partly the creation of diabolic powers.

Rene Descartes was educated at Jesuit schools in France. He never married; so by all indications here is a lay Jesuit, dedicated to the service of the false Christ, Looeamong. He gets 10½ pages of biography in my 1911 Enc. Brit. and depended on priests to carry on his worldly affairs in France, abbe Picot and Father Marsenne, while he carried on his heartless scientific research in the comparative quiet of protestant Holland. The turmoil and corruption of Catholic Paris were too disturbing for his philosophical cogitations! But he had Mass said daily in his chateau. Books were few, outside of the Bible. A friend noted this and Descartes pointed to the remains of cut up animals, "These are my books."

"Should aircraft of yours be sent against them (the Flying Saucers of the Fallen Hierarchs from Dubhe? The Lunar Mafia?) they will be destroyed by the agency of a heat ray," said Ashtar to Trevor in regards to his query about the intentions of the "dark ones".

With this reference to a heat ray it seemed to me that Buck Rogers was coming home to roost. To preclude the possibility that such things could be used is the worst kind of dogma... T

Trevor: "Is this heat ray the one which has been reported in some attacks on earth aircraft?"

Ashtar: "Yes, it is a heat ray which has been used to interfere with ignition systems and to start extensive fires in various parts of the world."

Trevor: "Many investigators are anxious to know why the dark forces cause these crashes of planes and collisions causing loss of life. It is not readily apparent to us, nor why or exactly how it is done."

Ashtar: (After a pause) "First let me say that the dark ones are highly desirous of causing destruction of airplanes and do so frequently. They would, if it were possible, bring down many more of them if this action would not result in their being detected by some of your people. The reason for this airplane crashing is really very simple for one who has grasped the concept of astral and etheric realms beyond the physical. Frequently, the astrals desire some particular person for a special purpose, perhaps a technician, an engineer, or one of special skill or talent. They wish to abduct him, in other words."

(John Keel gives a chapter to selective abductions in his Fawcett paperback, "Our Haunted Planet", 1971: "In Antarctica an American scientist vanished without a trace on May 7, 1965. He was Carl Robert Disch, twenty-six, and he was assigned to the Byrd Station, operating equipment to investigate VLF (Very Low Frequency) radio noises for the National Bureau of Standards. He set out to walk from his hut to the main station a short distance away, following a handline that was strung as a guide for the path between the two points. When he failed to appear after 45 minutes, the other scientists went out searching for him in tracked vehicles.

"'If Disch had fallen and was lying in the snow,' Ron Sefton, the March-April 1985 RR, Page 14 leader of the Byrd station explained to William J. Perkinson of the Baltimore 'Sun', 'the huskies would have seen him long before the searchers did. Similarly, if he had fallen and was covered by drifting snow, the dogs would have sighted the mound and rushed out to investigate it. That's the way huskies are.'

("The search went on for three days and covered a 35 mile area around the hut. Disch's own dog, a husky called Gus, disappeared shortly afterwards. Some of the searchers claimed they saw mysterious lights and heard engine noises in the distance. Antarctica, of course, is uninhabited except for a handful of international scientists who work very closely with one another.")

"After an airplane crash," continued Ashtar, "when the person concerned is released from his physical body after his 'death' his astral form is seized and taken to the nether regions. (This suggests the Lunar Mafia rather than the Insectoids. rhc) The crashes are brought about by several agencies. First, instrumentation failure, resulting in collision of one kind or another. Secondly, production of fire, usually in the vicinity of the fuel tanks. Thirdly, complete suspension of the entire electrical system in the airplane. Fourthly, the use of the force field of their own craft to induce structural failure."

THE WALESVILLE, NEW YORK TRAGEDY

The well-known Walesville case is very definitely an instance of this heat ray. A Starfire jet fighter, chasing a UFO near Utica, New York was subjected to a ferocious heat which almost drove the pilot and observer insane and forced them to bail out of their fighter. The jet crashed into the village of Walesville with some loss of life. These airmen are fine young men, well-trained and equipped with the best that the United States can provide. To make such men bail out of a plane over a populated area, the heat had to be fantastic. There was no question in this case of the UFO not being visible, for they were chasing it! It is also an instance of someone living to tell about what happened. Could there have been other instances similar in which there were no survivors? The UFO hovered above the scene of the crash, as large as life, glowing brilliantly.

Word recently reached me of yet another abduction of pilots from a jet trainer out of Bolling Field, Washington, D.C. The trainer took off with two occupants, and three hours fuel. Given up for lost, the jet trainer suddenly appeared over the airfield six hours later, landed and skidded to a halt at the end of the runway. There were no occupants!

Trevor: "We have been puzzled by the abductions of whole airplanes and crews periodically. There are some things we would like to know. First, do you ever for any reason take human beings off this earth, or abduct them so to speak? Secondly, why are these airplanes taken?"

Ashtar: "First, our laws forbid us to interfere in any way with the life of any entity. We cannot bring about a physical death wittingly under any circumstances. Everything must proceed in its Universal plan, which we are bound to carry out. However, the dark ones do not live by these laws and prey upon mankind freely, seeking vehicles for themselves by any method they know. They do not hesitate to bring about the 'death' as you term it, of any entity if it serves their purpose. We have nothing to gain or learn by taking your machines.

THE REASONS FOR ABDUCTIONS? CENSORED!

"They have several reasons for the abductions of airplanes and crews. First, they may desire the actual physical material of which the machine is constructed, for purposes of their own which don't concern you at the moment. Secondly, they may desire the entities in the airplane for purposes of their own, regarding which I shall presently tell you nothing. Thirdly, they may desire both of these two things in combination.

"The advancement in flight of earthmen is moving steadily towards the 3500 mph which is the limit of their present attainment. They are interested in seeing what you are doing and how you are doing it. The increasing mastery of the science of flight, soon to make extra large forward steps is concerning them greatly. All this is a little beyond your present understanding, but eventually you will piece it all together and know the whole Truth." (Received in September, 1956)

"I wish to alert you to the forthcoming renewed attacks on your planes which will be carried on by the dark ones. Keep careful watch on these reports."

I resolved that I would watch the news with great care. I was disturbed by what happened. The reader must decide for himself whether or not there is any value or virtue to what I have recorded:

Sept 17: Lockheed high altitude U-2 research craft reportedly exploded and crashed near Kaiserlautern, Germany. The J-57 powered jet was in Europe conducting tests on clear air turbulence, convective clouds and jet streams at altitudes of 50,000-55,000 feet. The pilot was missing and feared dead.

Sept 18: Madera, Calif. B-52 Eight-jet bomber bursts into flames in mid-air. Five men killed, pilot escapes, together with another man variously described as a maintenance expert, etc. Earlier in the year (1956) another plane of the same type exploded in flight near Tracy, Calif with malfunction of the complex electrical system blamed for the crash.

Sept 24: Mt. Yale, Col. Air Force C-47 crashes into the north face of this mountain at 10:30 a.m. Twelve occupants killed instantly.

Sept 25: Tallahassee, Fla. Two jets collide over the city with all occupants killed in both planes.

SEXUALITY & CREATIVE IMAGINATION
By Michael H. Bradford
From His Bradford Institute "Newsletter"

One of the major focuses of our society today is in the expression of the sexual drive. A large majority of our communications such as TV, magazines, billboards and music set the social standards for our younger generation on an extreme sexual level.

Most people do not realize that the seat of the sexual expression and the set of the creative expression reside extremely close to each other within the human body. As you can see from the physical location of these energy sources, it would be easy to confuse a strong creative urge with a strong sexual urge. The root chakra or creative chakra has its physical location at the tailbone of the coccyx. The naval or nurturing chakra has its physical location in the lower abdominal or naval region. The sexual or reproductive drive originates between the root and naval chakras in the area of the reproductive organs.

Because the areas of the sexual drive and the creative drive or so close together there are many misconceptions about the two drives. Many people feel that the sexual drive is the most powerful drive of man. But, take this into consideration: Before an actual sexual encounter, a person might fantasize about it for days, weeks, months even. The act itself might be as brief as 10 to 15 minutes. Afterwards that person may continue to fantasize about the act for weeks or months. Based on this it is obvious that the imagination is a much more powerful drive than the sexual drive. But, because of this proximity of the two forces within the human body, the urge to create is often confused with the sexual urge.

When a clear distinction between the sexual and creative urges can be recognized, you can harness that creative imagination and put it to work as the powerful force that it is. Sexuality can then be put in its proper place.

The sexual act is a normal and healthy experience when performed in its proper perspective. There is a fulfillment that can be derived from the sexual experience as a result of the balancing of the polarities that exist between men and women. A man has a positive body polarity and a woman has a negative body polarity. At the time of sexual intercourse an electrical-chemical-magnetic charge takes place between a man and a woman. The charge that is produced as a result of the combining of the polarities of a man and a woman is what causes the sensation of pleasure or physical satisfaction.

WE NEED EACH OTHER

This charge is vital because it can charge the body energy level like a battery can be charged depending on previous input and present output. Just like a battery, this charging can be over or underdone. Charged improperly, it can have the opposite effect of draining the body of vital energy. Frequent orgasms disperse the body energy rather than store it for its fulfillment. What is right for each person must be determined individually, since the energy needs fluctuate according to the person. The previous input results in the present output. If the energies are interwoven in a confusing manner at the output, you can presume that the input was not balanced, creative and harmonious.

There are many spiritual orders where people feel that they should renounce the sexual drive and focus on the creative force. Indeed there are certain individuals who can comfortably channel the sexual energies up from the root chakra, through the body, and out the crown chakra. This is a complete physical/spiritual experience. That is the goal of many religious denominations that advocate celibacy. Some of these religious orders feel that if they deny their sexual drive, that the creative energy will be brought up through the lower chakras to the upper chakras and then expressed in a spiritual crown chakra experience. In denying themselves on the sexual level however, they manifest malfunctions within their own bodies. Misunderstanding leads to incomplete process. This incomplete expression often leads to dis-ease.

When you experience the stirring of the creative energies by spirit, it can excite the sensuality of the sexual organs. The natural process is that the mind moves through fantasy, imagination, and then through reality. Once you learn the difference between the sex drive and the creative drive and are open and understanding about the connection between the two, you will experience more satisfying physical and spiritual relationships. The ultimate is a complete relationship with the Universe.

Let us learn to create with the Universe. Bring forth something new out of your total being. Focus the creative imagination on producing an idea, a story, art, music, sculpture, an invention, something that you know to be from your true center of creation. Then we can experience both creative and sexual energy for growth and enjoyment. (The Bradford Institute, PO Box 1766, Cape Coral, Florida 33910)

CLIPS, QUOTES & COMMENTS —

TELEPATHY, BEYOND COINCIDENCE AND PARANOIA

"I have a problem you may be able to help me with. Everywhere I go, everyone can read my mind. Is it possible I have natural thought transmitting ability or is this the result of some sophisticated eavesdropping device implanted on my person. I also hear voices from passing cars and trucks on highways driving by, and sometimes in my car while traveling, with no sign of anyone anywhere around. Can I also receive thoughts or is this an electronic device? I have been asking around and I have found out that several Micro sensors -- heat, etc. -- implanted in series can be implanted in teeth and under the skin. My problem is, I cannot find anyone who can identify and locate these devices. It is a big secret. It has gone beyond coincidence and paranoia with me. Some of these people have actually threatened my life and destroyed my property. I am not a criminal. I do not break the law. I am very religious, and I do not bother anyone. I am being victimized. I need help."

S.P., Phoenix, Arizona

Well, if agents -- government or otherwise -- have implanted Micro-sensors in you, you'll have to come up with some convincing reason why you should be singled out for such treatment; otherwise we'll have to assume that this psychic sensitivity is spontaneous, either from birth or an accident. Assuming also that your religion is Roman Catholic -- judging from your name and location -- you have probably gone to your priest for help and received none. Outside of its priesthoods the Church's attitude is that such sensitivity is the work of the devil; so, you have no alternative but to turn to occult science for understanding of your condition.

The amusing thing is that thousands of students of occult science the world over are working to develop the very kind of sensitivity you describe. To them it would be a blessing. To you it is a curse! The reason is you don't have the strength of character to handle these superhuman powers which should come only after years of careful school work, dedication, purification and training -- and an established channel of service to mankind where your exceptional sensitivity can be put to constructive use.

I'll be glad to share with you such knowledge and experience as I have. There are certain rituals which can be performed that should help -- if religiously observed every night and morning -- to shut out the intrusions and intruders -- if you really want to shut them out! Another way would be to go back to the teacher who guided your development of this condition and ask him, or her, or It, to help you shut it off. We have an Associate who used to live in this area when Yogananda was alive and available at his Self-Realization Fellowship.

over on the coast. She decided she wanted Astral consciousness and asked Yogananda if he could open her to the Negentropy energies of our emotions. He agreed. An appointment was made. She came and he took her through the appropriate opening ritual. She went home, with objective consciousness of the thoughts and feelings of the people around her streaming through her constantly -- like S.P., the writer of the letter from Phoenix. Aghast at what she had let herself in for, she asked Yogananda to close up her psychic centers. He did, and probably wasn't surprised at her request. The following letter is from the young man who used his Radionic machine to open his psychic centers. His description of his experience was in the Journal.

WE ARE BEING MANIPULATED BY SATAN

"I am sure no matter what I say you will try to counter-dick me but none the less you must realize that sooner or later you will have a decision to make (i.e. to either serve God who is Jesus Christ our Lord or in your case be manipulated by Satan who has taken on the angel of light). In your particular case you have chosen the Middle Path.
Why do you keep trying God's patience? God warns us not to choose this Path or he will regurgitate upon us and cast us into chains of darkness. The Left Hand Path is just as bad.

"As for the Yada di Shi'ite, I believe this is an evil spirit who has taken on the angel of light. In Deuteronomy 18:10-12 it says, 'There shall be found among you anyone that maketh his son or his dauter to pass through the fire, or that useth divination, or an observer of the times, or an enchanter or a witch, or a charmer or a con-sulter with familiar spirits, or a wizard, or a necromancer. For all that do these things are an abomination unto the Lord; and because of these abominations the Lord thy God doth drive them out from before thee.'

"I suggest that you get out of BSRF as fast as possible while there is time and repent of your sins to Jesus Christ who is Lord.
There is still time, Mr. Riley. Don't hold back on what your heart is trying to tell you. I do hereby resign from Borderland Research. For this is what Jesus Christ wants me to do. Keep the Journals and do with it what you want. For all these things must come to pass."

S.G., Clearwater, Nebraska

Yup, I've chosen the Middle Path, Steve, and I intend to stay on the Path of Hermetic science or Wisdom, swerving to the Left for Power occasionally, and to the Right for Love occasionally. If the Mystic Path is your choice, by all means stay with it -- while befuddled Mystics like S.P. of Phoenix, Arizona come to me for understanding and advice.

THE VIOLENCE OF RIGHT-WING MYSTIC FANATICS

"I am deeply troubled by a rising tide of vandalism, death threats and other acts of terrorism now sweeping the nation -- all directed at family planning clinics, their workers and volunteers. I find these acts by right-wing fanatics against fellow Americans repugnant.

"The persecution of patients and clinic staff is much like the persecution of civil rights workers in the 1960s. Today, as then, misguided fanatics use illegal tactics and are attempting to prevent citizens from exercising their Constitutional rights. And now, as then, such persecution must be stopped.

"Fifty years ago my mother also spoke for reproductive rights. She helped Margaret Sanger found an organization dedicated to providing birth control information for women in need. Over the years that small group has grown to become the leading organization providing family planning services to millions of Americans.

"Today it is known worldwide as Planned Parenthood. Through its 190 local affiliates and 711 community-based clinics, Planned Parenthood is providing counseling and medical services to millions of Americans. I am proud to be a member of Planned Parenthood and proud to support the work which my mother was so instrumental in starting. I feel that I must do everything I personally can do against the recent wave of terrorism that threatens the lives of patients, workers, and volunteers, and is directed not only at Planned Parenthood clinics, but against all family planning clinics across the country.

"Unless this violence is stopped, more and more women in need of family-planning services will be afraid to use Planned Parenthood's professional services. That is why I am writing to you today. To alert you to what is happening. And because terrorism in any form is not to be tolerated, we need your help at Planned Parenthood.

CLINIC VIOLENCE MUST BE STOPPED

"This wave of unprecedented terrorism is simply a new means by which the fanatical Right Wing hopes to stop this important work. Since they have failed to pass laws that would outlaw abortion and end federal funding for family planning, they now have taken up the coward's weapon -- terror used to intimidate and harass.

"Doctors and nurses who work at clinics are receiving death threats. Their homes are picketed around the clock. Some of them have been forced to move out of their own neighborhoods. Members of family-planning clinics' boards are receiving death threats. Some have been kidnapped. Their children are intimidated. Swastikas, KKK symbols and other graffiti are painted onto clinic walls. Glue is poured into door locks to prevent entry. Clinic rooms are flooded with water. Patient's license plate numbers are written down, researched, and their phone numbers tracked. Then these women, or their parents, are called in the middle of the night, harassed and even threatened.

"Like those who opposed the civil rights workers of the 1960s, right-wing forces today are violating federal, state and local laws. They are threatening human life and property. Their actions must be stopped and stopped quickly. We must oppose them. If we are passive they will surely win. To stop this wave of right-wing violence and terrorism, Planned Parenthood must bring great public pressure to bear.

for these incidents have occurred from California to Minnesota, from Maryland to Missouri. Property damage to Planned Parenthood facilities alone from these incidents totals hundreds of thousands of dollars. Unfortunately, the national media doesn't regard these as part of a nationwide pattern of terrorism. Yet when you realize the over-all scope of this, when you recognize that kidnapping threats made to clinic staff members are not isolated incidents but part of a massive nationwide campaign to destroy family planning service, you understand just how serious this campaign of terrorism is.

"For more than sixty-five years, Planned Parenthood has never lost sight of Margaret Sanger's and my mother's original goal: to give all people the right and the ability to determine for themselves whether and when to bear children. These brave women knew this simple truth: that no woman, black or white, rich or poor, can ever truly be free without the right to personal control over her own reproductive life. Today you have a unique opportunity to defend that right to reproductive freedom -- in this hour of great need. Neither you nor I should expect 'someone else' to do our part. Your help is desperately needed now. Please help Planned Parenthood today."

Sincerely,

Katharine Hepburn

THE EMOTIONAL SCARS OF AN UNWANTED PREGNANCY

"Dear Abby: Thank you for telling 'Mother of Two' not to let her 16-year old daughter and 15-year old son share the same bedroom. I also had parents who thought there was no problem putting me and my brother in the same bedroom. They were wrong. I became pregnant by my 16-year old brother when I was 13. I was too frightened and ashamed to tell my mother; so she didn't know it until she saw me getting bigger and bigger. I did a lot of dumb things to try to get rid of it but a baby girl was born to me. She was blind and brain-damaged and died before she was 3 months old. I still love my parents but have very little respect for their judgment. That terrible experience left me with emotional scars that took many years of therapy to heal. Abby, please tell your readers that although incest is not openly discussed, it's not all that uncommon. Keep on telling parents that they have a responsibility to protect their children from this terrible experience. Thank you for letting me say this."

Victim In Tacoma.

The Right-to-Life fanatics have absolutely no sympathy for this girl, and if her frantic efforts to abort this unwanted pregnancy produce a severely handicapped baby, so be it. That is the will of God, the Christian God, Jehovah, so they say; and among those "sayers" is the President who, back in the 1960s and 70s, was an equally enthusiastic supporter of the Church's Right-to-Death movement, when the thousands of young Americans gave up their lives in the futile effort to save the Church's mines, factories, plantations, monasteries, convents and orphanages from falling into the hands of the infidel Buddhists and Communists in Vietnam.

The real reason for the anti-abortion movement, the occult reason, is that the false Christ, Loomamong, wants hordes of unthinking young people to fight His endless Holy wars; and He doesn't care how they get born, in or out of wedlock. When a Right-to-Life fanatic bombs a Family Planning clinic and says "God told me to do it", this is the source of the bomber's inspiration, a renegade Moon God from Maldek, and behind Him is Jehovah, the Father whom Jesus excoriated in John VIII: 37, 38, 40, 41.

ABSOLUTELY WITHOUT SYMPATHY

"Among at least one clinic operator," writes Bill Curry in the Los Angeles "Times", "the violence has produced a determination to try to stay in business. Dr. William Parmenter of Pensacola, Florida, whose gynecology clinic was leveled by a Christmas Day bomb, had said last month that he would stop doing abortions because no one would rent to him. But he is reconsidering."

"I don't want the picketers to think they are running me out of business" (quoted in the Miami "Herald") 'That only makes me angry and makes me want to stay in business and get back in and do twice as many.' Parmenter said he was opposed to abortion until he treated the wounds and infections of young women who used nails, catheters and knitting needles to rid themselves of unwanted pregnancies. In 1978 he performed his first abortion.

"It's hard to explain what I feel for my patients,' he said. 'Why can't they (the bombers) understand the trauma these kids are going through? My patients don't have to answer to any man. They only have to answer to God.'"

In self-defense Parmenter should follow the lead of this California physician "who operates medical clinics in Encino and Lawndale and sued three anti-abortion groups Friday (Jan. 18, 1985) seeking $3 million in damages and a court order barring those groups from picketing his clinics. In his Los Angeles Superior Court civil suit, Dr. Morton W. Barke said the groups have been demonstrating at his clinics since last June, blocking the entrances, trespassing, using bullhorns to shout at patients and employees, and carrying placards saying abortion is murder.

"Named as defendants were Pro-Life Inc., Crusade For Life, the Right to Life League of Southern California and two individuals. . . " (LA "Times", Jan. 19, 1985)

SET IN CONCRETE

"Sister Judith Vaughan, who runs a shelter for homeless women in East Los Angeles, is one of 24 nuns on a collision course with the Vatican for signing a public statement asserting -- contrary to official Roman Catholic Teaching -- that abortion can sometimes be a moral issue."

Not to the Pagan power elite who run the Church, Sister, their course is set in concrete; and it is not dedicated to the principles of the true Christ. If she and her fellow Sisters persist in demanding a dialogue with the Hierarchy, they will find that their only recourse is to get out of the Church. The Curia in Rome is a religious dictatorship run from the top, absolutely unyielding. This is what Margaret Sanger and Katharine Hepburn's mother found out fifty years ago.

"We didn't commit a crime. All we did was say, 'Hey, there's a diversity of opinion among people (of our faith) and we need to talk about freedom of conscience.' I don't see myself as defiant." The Vatican sees it differently," writes the LA "Times" religious editor in the Jan 14, 1985 issue. "In a Nov. 30 letter to the leaders of the sisters and three religious brothers who signed the statement, the Vatican Congregation for Religious and Secular Institutes said the signers are 'seriously lacking in religious submission of will and mind' to the teaching and authority of the church.

"The Vatican letter, a copy of which was made public last week, called the nuns' action 'the pernicious upholding or spreading' of condemned doctrines 'a flagrant scandal'. Unless the nuns issue a public retraction, the letter said, the statement would be 'sufficient cause for dismissal'.

"Vaughan called the Vatican's threatened penalty 'absurd, highly disrespectful', and she added, 'The sexual ethics of the church are developed by male, celibate clerics. We women need to be part of that decision-making process, too. This ultimatum is a way of putting us in place, keeping us submissive, treating us as children.'

"Her views were echoed during a wide-ranging interview with Rhonda Meister, 35, a coordinator to the House of Ruth shelter and a part-time worker at St. Joseph's Center, a counseling and advocacy organization in Venice (California) and Anita Caspary, a staff member of the Peace and Justice Center, an education and rights agency in East Los Angeles. She is also a former president of the Immaculate Heart of Mary Sisters in Los Angeles. Caspary, 60, battled the late Cardinal James Francis McIntyre of Los Angeles during the 1960s over her order's innovative reform programs in dress, ritual and life style. The modernization led to a split in the order, with the larger branch forming a ecular community. Drawing parallels between struggles then and those of the 24 nuns now."

BSRF Associates will remember Cardinal McIntyre as one of the VIPS invited by the Air Force to view landed Martian Flying Saucers at Edwards AFB in the spring of 1954. He was the member of the Church's Hierarchy who strongly advised President Eisenhower not to break security and reveal the existence of the UFOs to the American public.

"Rhonda Meister, a Catholic who holds a master of divinity degree from McCormick Theological Seminary, a Presbyterian school in Chicago, said her views of abortion were shaped by her work with poor women and by a 'theology of liberation' that calls for power for the oppressed.

"In the shelters for poor women, we see many who are pregnant, raped, deserted, abused. They dont have skills to provide for themselves or the children they may already have,' said Meister. 'We force incredible deprivation and suffering on these women. If the men who make these decisions struggled with some of the women's hardships, there might be more latitude in (the church's) moral teaching.'

WOMAN POWER, A THREAT TO HIERARCHY POWER

"Sister Vaughan is working 'in solidarity with women most impacted by an unjust system'. She said she felt 'very supported' by both the provincial superior and by the superior general of her order after she signed the controversial ad, saying she participated for three reasons:
the need to 'fight for empowerment of women who are denied it by hierarchal and patriarchal structures that dominate', her experiences and great respect for' women who have 'struggled with abortion' and the 'attack on Geraldine Ferraro' by Archbishop John J. O'Connor of New York. . .

"The statement to sign came in the mail in August and I was mad at O'Connor. I thought his attack was confusing people and influencing them on how to vote because of a single issue. So I said, 'Sure, I'll sign it!'

"Vaughan, Meister and Caspary said they think the hardening confrontation between the 'Vatican 24' as the sisters are coming to be called, and the papal authorities may well escalate into a watershed for American

AND THE BISHOP GETS PICKETED

AP, Jan 21, 1985: "In Boston about 40 pro-choice protesters marched outside the home of Catholic Archbishop Bernard F. Law, who last week offered the support of the Boston Archdiocese -- including medical and Law was not available for comment Sunday because he was on his way to Cuba with a delegation of U.S. Bishops. . . " To try to bring the Cubans back under control of the Church, no doubt. Anyhow, it was a good excuse for not facing the protesters.

LIVE BY THE SWORD

New Delhi (AP) Jan 17, 1985: "Three motor-cycle riding gunmen shot and wounded one of the five high priests of India's minority Sikh religion Wednesday in troubled Punjab state, the United News of India reported. The agency identified the gunmen as Sikh militants, adding that they escaped.

"The assassination attempt was aimed at Kirpal Singh. . . the High Priest of Akai Takht, seat of the highest authority in Sikhism, is widely regarded as a hard-liner in the dispute between New Delhi and militant Sikhs wanting greater autonomy for their region. He bitterly denounced the Indian army assault last June on the Golden Temple in Amritsar, the Sikh's holiest shrine, to flush out armed Sikh separatists, saying India's 13 million Sikhs will never 'forget that sacrifice'. . . " And the assassination of Prime Minister Indira Gandhi in revenge by Sikh fanatics guaranteed that the nation indeed never would forget it!

AN AIR FORCE BASE ON THE MOON?

Last fall we had a call from an Associate of long-standing in the Mid-west, with a rather startling piece of information from his son of highschool age. In his science class at school one day the kids criticized the government for putting too much money into the Pentagon's military budget and too little into scientific research. The teacher's surprising response was that scientific research projects were hidden in the military budget because of their classified nature, including the Air Force's manned base on the Moon! When the students questioned his knowledge of such a project his reply was, "I should know, I was assigned to it."

That is a surprise. What is even more surprising is that an ex-AF enlisted man or officer should publicly acknowledge such a highly classified project, several levels above Top Secret. It could only mean that for him to break security in such a fashion the Air Force's Mind Control program had failed, either to wipe from his mind all memory of participation in the project, with ultra-sound, or by post-hypnotic suggestion. Perhaps a friendly hypnotizing officer decided to leave his subject's memory bank open -- as happened to Stan Deyo when he was a cadet at the Air Force academy in the 1970s -- because the officer didn't personally agree with the motives behind the Mind Control program.

THAT SECRET SPACE SHUTTLE TRIP

Of the "Discovery" for the military at the end of January may be only the tip of the iceberg of what the Pentagon is already doing in space -- including possible a manned military base on the Moon? News commentators at the time pointed out that Pentagon expenditures for space programs are now double that of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration (NASA) the civilian program. And the President intends to keep it that way by insisting on a 6% growth factor in the Pentagon budget in spite of all protests by Congressional leaders in his own party!

If there is an American military base on the Moon it seems highly unlikely that it has been established and maintained with rocket power -- and still kept secret! Two other possibilities suggest themselves. First there is the use of American-made Flying Saucers, probably operational since the early 1960s. We have had one first-hand account of a Flying Saucer seen in an Edwards AFB hangar in 1967 and being serviced by Air Force personnel. Second there is Instantaneous Space Transfer (IST) extrapolated from the Philadelphia Experiment of 1943.

Associate Bill Moore did a fine job of digging up and collating the facts of that 1943 experiment in invisibility for a Navy destroyer escort, but the sequel is even more interesting in "Thin Air". This is the thinly veiled science-fiction detective story by George Simpson and Neal Burger published in 1978 as a Dell paperback, $1.95. It has been assumed that the invisibility project was dropped because of the uncontrollable, unpredictable, disastrous side effects on the crew of the ship after the initial experiment -- which resulted in complete dematerialization and rematerialization; but the story line of "Thin Air" is that a California space-age firm picked up where the Navy left off with emphasis, not on camouflage of Navy ships, but of instantaneous transport of men and machines to a pre-determined point -- with Navy funding but without Navy knowledge of the objective. CDR Hammond of Navy Intelligence stumbles into it.

VANISHING WITHIN SECONDS

"Any more surprises with in my apartment?" Hammond asked.

McCarthy (an MTL exec) didn't reply. Hammond flipped him around and made him raise his hands and clasp them behind his head; then he searched the trench coat. McCarthy had no other weapons.

Hammond faced him. For some unknown reason the doctor was smiling. "I'm glad you're so happy," said Hammond. "Now you can explain to me just how you got out of that cell in Boston."

March-April 1985 RR, Page 27
McCarthy gave him a contemptuous look. The wrinkling movement must have affected something in his huge nose. He sneezed twice, pulling one hand down to cover it, then very obligingly putting his hand back behind his head. A light went on several houses down and somebody appeared at the window. They were attracting attention. Hammond motioned McCarthy toward the apartment entrance. He wiggled a hand at Jan (his girl friend) and she stumbled to join them, keeping well back.

"Hold it," said Hammond as soon as McCarthy crossed the threshold. "What'd you do with the lights?"

"Switch," said McCarthy. He sat down on the steps and rubbed the back of what Hammond hoped was a very sore neck. Hammond's eyes were away only a few seconds as he fumbled for the light switch. The moment it went on Jan shrieked. Hammond whipped around. McCarthy's hand had descended to the base of his neck, where he held it tightly in place, pressing against the flesh -- while his entire body faded from sight.

Hammond stood rooted in place while the figure vanished from the steps. Within agonizing seconds, Hammond was alone again with Jan whose screams echoed up the stairwell... .

INSTANTANEOUS SPATIAL TRANSFERENCE

... A device, worn at the base of the neck or implanted there, allowed McCarthy to remove himself at will by dematerializing from anywhere he wished and rematerializing. . . Where? IST. Teleportation. They had stumbled on it in the Philadelphia experiment of 1953. Stumbled on it! Two years later, Project Thin Air had been shut down and the principals involved had moved into private industry. And more than twenty years later, those principals (in Micro-Technology Laboratories) were murdering people to keep their secret. They had failed with invisibility, so they had turned instead to teleportation. It was far more useful and apparently less dangerous.

McCarthy didn't seem to suffer from chronic aftereffects, and he used the process regularly. He was able to beam himself in and out of the cities where he conducted his "treatment" of the surviving project participants. Very commendable: they were willing to keep these men alive and under control as long as they didn't get nosy, like Fletcher, or start to talk, like Rinehart. Or investigate, like Hammond. . . . If McCarthy could make himself vanish from one place, he had to reappear at another. Somewhere there was a receiving station, a preset instrument that acted like a homing beacon to bring him to a safe location. The landing place was probably a small, enclosed room -- like a vault... .

(Later, Hammond, with a surviving crew member, Yablonski, decided to visit the old DE, the Sturman, to look for evidence of the old dematerializing equipment. While there, Francis Bloch, head of MTL, had the ship and everything on it teletransported to an enclosed dry-dock in San Pedro, California -- from Philadelphia!) "You've seen our demonstration," said Bloch, "have you any idea of the potential?"
"I think so," said Hammond, watching Yablonski retreat into a corner. ..

Bloch stood up, thrust one hand into a pocket, and began pacing. "What do you think would happen if overnight we could do away with the normal means of transporting freight and replace it with something far more efficient and infinitely less expensive? I mean do away with trains, ships, planes, trucks. Not only would we cut down on the unit cost of a product, but we would do away with the need for transportation fuel, for oil! We would break the stranglehold these foreigners now have on our commerce! .. .

"Perhaps you dont realize what we've accomplished. We moved the Sturman clear across the country in seconds. And this is not the only receiving station of this size. In the last two years we have been quietly planting them around the world. We buy a shipping yard or warehouse in a city like Tokyo or Bangkok or London, three technicians go over to install the equipment and we're operational in several months. We have already located ourselves at eleven sites around the world, and that includes half a dozen stations in this country. If need be, Commander, I can move you and the Sturman to new Zealand or Alaska in an instant! I can move anything: enormous quantities of food, clothing, prefabricated shelter for starving nations. In a matter of hours, I can relieve people who are suffering the effects of natural disaster -"

DONT RULE OUT THE PENTAGON!

Hammond interrupted. "And move armies? Tanks, weapons, bombs?"

Bloch stopped again and smiled, "Coming from a military man, I should have expected that. You may not believe me but I have no interest in using it that way. However, if it falls into the hands of the U.S. Government, that is exactly what it will be used for."

Hammond came back, "You siphoned off government money to develop it. I think they'll insist on ownership. Once they find out you've been kiting funds for twenty years, there won't be a thing you can do to stop it."

Bloch smiled slightly. "Consider yourself apart from the Navy for a moment, out of the service, simply a voting American. What makes you think the government will make better use of than I will?"

The question caught Hammond off guard.

"Twenty years ago," Bloch said, "the Navy gave up developing this because its future as a weapon was dubious. That was as far as they could see. I took it over because I saw the real potential. I was involved with Traben before 1953, before the so-called accidental experiment that sent the Sturman from Philadelphia to Norfolk. And let me tell you something, Commander Hammond, it was no accident. The whole business with frequency modulation was carefully engineered to accomplish precisely what it did. It was my idea then -- and it is mine now. .. "

"ALTERNATIVE 3" COLONIES ON THE MOON AND MARS

This clever title by a clever British writer, Leslie Watkins, suggests that a joint British-American-Russian project has already established secret bases and colonies on the Moon and Mars, as an alternative to total destruction of the Earth by an all-out nuclear war. Whether these bases have been and are being supplied by BAR flying saucers or by Instantaneous Space Transfer is a moot point.

We've had several inquiries from Associates about the reality of the material in "Alternative 3", an Avon paperback published by Hearst in 1979. It's good science-fiction presented as fact -- which may have a modicum of truth in it -- but you'll have to decide for yourself. Consider these quotes from Section Fourteen:

"They call it Archimedes Base. And that's where the trouble, the really big trouble, flared so violently. Archimedes is a walled crater-plain on the western border of Mare Imbrium, the Moon's Sea of Shadows. It has a diameter of 50 miles and, unlike the nearby Arillus crater, it has a relatively smooth ground surface. That is why, according to information from Trojan, it was developed as the principal transit camp on the Moon -- the place from where people were normally lifted for the final leg of their journey to Mars.

"Man cannot survive in the natural atmosphere of the Moon. NASA said so years ago and NASA, in that instance was telling the truth. So most of Archimedes Base was hermetically sealed under a transparent bubble inside which air and temperature was controlled in the levels usual on Earth. The construction had taken two years and had been a fantastic triumph of space engineering. There were two huge airlocks in the southern section of the bubble. Shuttle craft arriving from Earth and from Mars entered through these locks before taxiing to the centrally-sited Arrival Terminal.

"A series of roads ran from the terminal to the stores and service areas and to the three separate 'living quarter villages' -- one for pilots and resident personnel, one for 'designated movers', and one for 'batch consignment components'. And over it all was a spread of camouflage, reminiscent of that used during World War II, to ensure that Archimedes Base could never be seen by unauthorised observers on Earth.

"Trojan's cryptic message about possible sabotage was soon followed by this report: 'Stringent security ensures the complete segregation of Designated Movers from Batch-Consignment Components until after disembarkation in the new territory. They are transported in separate craft and, while awaiting transportation, they are quartered in different areas of Archimedes Base. This is as a result of an order from the Policy Committee. It is felt that among the Designated Movers there may be those who initially harbour reservations about the morality of the mental and physical processing considered necessary for Components.'

"'Components!' Let us not be confused by the jargon euphemisms. Trojan uses them. Trojan, like most others in Alternative 3, has been brain-washed into accepting such words as normal. He is revolted by what has been done, by what is being done, but he has unwittingly absorbed the obscene distortion of language. So, just for a moment, forget 'components'. Trojan means people. He is writing about slaves, about men and women who have been mutilated mentally and physically, who have been programmed to obey orders. And who have been condemned to a life of sub-human degradation.

MARTYRS TO THE ULTIMATE SURVIVAL OF THE RACE

"His report continued: 'These Designated Movers can have their doubts put into proper perspective after they have been acclimatised to life in the new territory (the Moon and Mars) by representatives of the Committee in Residence. They can, according to official reasoning, be persuaded to recognise the necessity for such processing and to realise that the ultimate survival of the human race must take precedence over the fate of a limited number of low-grade individuals.'

"Consider the appalling significance of that paragraph! It means, if 'official reasoning' is right, that Ann Clark and Brian Pendlebury and others like them can be taught to regard fellow humans as expendable beasts of burden. It means, surely, that natural compassion must be systematically eradicated, that the minds of 'designated movers' are also moulded to match the needs of Alternative 3. Orwell's vision of 1984, it seems, has already come to fruition -- millions of miles from Earth.

"Trojan's report then went on to detail the curious circumstances which resulted in Earthly efforts to undermine Alternative 3. And which eventually culminated in carnage at Archimedes Base. . . ."

Alien, unsuspected strains of bacteria on Mars blighted the crops in the new territory. A young American bacteriologist had to be called upon to stop the blight. There wasn't time to properly program him to accept conditions there among the slave Components. He was the man "chiefly responsible for founding the guerilla group known as Anti-Alternative. . . he (the Instigator) wondered what right did he have to be one of the Chosen, one of the Superior Select? Rackled with doubt and disgust he knew he had to shatter the component-system -- and then they told him they were returning him to Earth.

"There was a stop-over at Archimedes Base on his return journey and he was temporarily housed with a new group of designated movers awaiting transportation to the new territory. They knew nothing, these people, about the components -- quartered as usual in a different village -- who were being condemned to spend the rest of their lives as slaves. He told them exactly what was happening and what to expect -- the mutilations and the kidnappings being carried out on Earth for their benefit and comfort. They were not ready for such horrendous information. They were normal people not yet exposed to the skilled and persuasive arguments of the Committee in Residence. It all sounded so lunatically outrageous. Yet this man was strangely convincing. A small party of them decided to surreptitiously visit the village he described. And that is what sparked the holocaust at Archimedes Base. . . . which broke the shell and destroyed almost everyone there by decompression."

SO WHAT'S NEW?

This isn't the first time in the history of the planet that elite groups have attempted to escape this Earth in the event of a nuclear holocaust, leaving the rest of us to suffer the consequences of their megalomania.-- which effectively wipes out all record of such advanced civilizations ever having been here! Consider what contactee Dan Fry was told in 1954 by a descendant of the escapees of at least three Polar Flips ago, Alan:

"Our ancestors were a group of survivors of the last complete collapse of civilization on this planet. This was more than thirty thousand years ago as you measure time today, but even then they had developed a material science which was, in some respects at least, considerably advanced over your present position. They followed the natural laws, instead of pitting one against another as your present science does, so that their devices were much simpler; and yet they could accomplish things which you have not yet been able to do. They, too, failed to realize the absolute necessity of an equal development of the spiritual and social values.

"A political cleft developed between the two principal nations of that era -- a great empire and a mighty science upon the continent which your legends call Mu or Lemuria. At the same time there was also a great empire upon the continent of Atlantis. Friction between the two increased yearly, until at last it exploded into a war of annihilation. Weapons of absolute energy were used by each nation against the other, weapons whose destructive power was a thousand times greater than that of the Hydrogen bomb which threatens your race today. There was no question of victory or defeat. They simply destroyed each other.

"There were few survivors and the radiation level of the entire surface of the planet had been raised beyond human tolerance. This did not mean that all survivors were doomed to immediate death from the radiation but it did mean that progressive deterioration of the mental and biological functions, together with the large number of mutations which would be produced in succeeding generations would, eventually bring their existence down to the level of the beast.

BRIDGING THE ABYSS OF DEEP SPACE

"On a high plateau, in what is now the country of Tibet, six of our aerial craft had been landed by their crews. A council was held to determine what, if anything, could be done.

"It was suggested that an attempt be made to reach another planet. The aerial craft then in use were capable of travelling in space and had been frequently used to reach elevations of a few hundred miles above the surface of the earth. However, no attempt had yet been made to leap the gulf between planets and the crew members were far from certain that such an attempt would prove successful.

"The planet which you know as Mars was then in conjunction with the Earth and, at that time, the surface conditions of temperature, atmosphere, water, etc., were much better suited for human survival than the conditions which your astronomers report to exist at the present time.

"A vote was taken and the members of the crews of four of the craft elected to take the huge gamble in the hope of preserving thereby at least a portion of the culture of the race. The remaining crew members believed that because of the elevation of the plateau on which they were gathered and the comparatively low level of the radiation which existed there, that they could continue to live in this area without suffering complete physical or mental degeneration in themselves or their descendants. They elected to remain.

JOINT SERVICE AND SEXUAL EQUALITY

"Both sexes were about equally represented in this council. Of the four craft which essayed the great leap, three arrived safely at their destination. There is no record in our history as to the fate of the fourth. For many generations the grim struggle for survival demanded the entire time and energy of the people. These were the dark ages of the new race and we have comparatively little knowledge of the period. However, the original crew members immediately after their arrival on the new planet compiled a written history of the races of the Earth, pointing out the reasons for their downfall. Throughout the intervening centuries this history has been carefully preserved. It is known as the 'Great Lesson' and is the first thing which is taught to all of our youth when they begin to prepare themselves for active life.

"As the battle for survival was gradually won, the development of the material science resumed its normal pattern but with the lessons of the past constantly before our people, it was maintained always in its proper relationship to the social and spiritual values. We have found that all three of the sciences have the same basic natural laws and we have come far in their understanding.

"We are now essentially independent of planets. Some of our craft are very large, judged by your standards. They are many times the size of your largest ships. We are able to produce all of the necessities and comforts of our physical lives within these craft and since we have solved the problem of energy, we have no personal need to land upon any of the planets, except occasionally to obtain raw material for new construction.

"The satisfaction of our own physical needs now requires but little time and effort, consequently we are able to devote much of our thought and energy to the assistance of those races which have not yet passed the critical point in their development. . . ."

From the combined edition of Alan's "Message To Men Of Earth" and "The White Sands Incident" by Daniel W. Fry, another Flying Saucer classic of the 1950s, published by Understanding, Inc. SPACE WARPS WILL BE USED

"An immense development of technical knowledge, about the warping of space and time, and the Ethers, is slowly opening up before you. I have in mind the Delawarr photography of past and future or of Etheric moulds and patterns. All that I have barely hinted at will be expressed in scientific terms and employed in ways you have not dreamed of. Space warps and frequencies will be known and used. You will learn how to teleport your own bodies -- how to 'dial' yourself to London' safely and instantly..." Thus said the Yada di Shi'ite through Mark Probert in San Diego, California on June 6, 1957. That was 14 years after the Philadelphia Experiment. From his privileged position on the Astral plane the Yada could observe, perhaps even encourage, the private Research and Development which followed the primitive attempts at space-time warps in the Philadelphia Navy-yard in 1943. Now, 40 years later, the President is budgeting billions for military research, especially in Space -- let's hyphenate that and call it Space-warp!

"REAGAN SEEKS TO SPUR PENTAGON RESEARCH"

LA "Times", Feb. 1, 1985: "Washington - President Reagan will ask Congress to approve 'a very large increase' -- about 19% after inflation -- in next year's Pentagon research budget and a similar increase in military construction... The increase in research spending stems largely from plans to push ahead with President Reagan's 'Star Wars' missile defense system. Research on that program was given $1.4 billion in the current budget..." And hidden in that Star Wars program is money for Instantaneous Spatial Transference -- wanna bet?

MAYBE IT IS CALLED "AURORA"

LA "Times", Feb. 9, 1985: "An unclassified Pentagon document has disclosed the existence of a multibillion-dollar aircraft program called Aurora, but Defense Department officials Friday rebuffed questions about it because they said it is officially classified... The document, titled 'procurement programs', indicates that the Defense Department plans to spend $80 million on the Aurora in fiscal 1986, which begins this October, and $2.3 billion in fiscal 1987... Northrop Corp., and Lockheed are undertaking major secret programs, indications of which are spilling out every week..."

"One aerospace industry source tells of an unusual Lockheed activity in Palmdale at Air Force Plant 42. Each morning an aircraft departs with a load of Lockheed workers for a secret facility. Even the windows are taped over to keep the workers from knowing where they are going. The name Aurora -- the Roman name for the Greek goddess of the dawn -- could also indicate that the aircraft is not a typical tactical fighter, because those names are taken from hunting animals, such as the F-16 Falcon, the F-14 Tomcat and the F-15 Eagle."

The Times reporter, Ralph Vartabedian, conjectures that it is the publicized stealth bomber program, but that in itself may be a coverup!

Volume XXXXI, No. 2 of the Round Robin Journal of Borderland Research as we move into our 26th year of stewardship of this borderland organization, begun 40 years ago in San Diego by Meade Layne, and the search for Truth is as fascinating and stimulating as ever. Each revelation widens the horizon of our understanding as we remind ourselves of Jack Kennedy's statement in 1961 when he authorized our space program: "Together let us explore the stars -- nor ever in this lifetime be trapped on this planet." -- and repeat again his favorite quotation from Alfred Lord Tennyson's "Ulysses". It has become ours, too:

"Come, my friends, 'Tis not too late to seek a newer world.
Push off, and sitting well in order smite
The sounding furrows; for my purpose holds
To sail beyond the sunset, and the baths
Of all the western stars, until I die,
It may be that the gulfs will wash us down;
It may be we shall touch the Happy Isles,
And see the great Achilles, whom we knew.
Though much is taken, much abides; and though
We are not now that strength which in old days Moved earth and heaven, that which we are, we are;
Made weak by time and fate, but strong in will
To strive, to seek, to find, and not to yield."

"ENGLAND, ANYONE?"

BSRF Associate Elaine Peick will be taking a group to England, Ireland, Wales and Scotland on a 19 day trip June 22 - July 10, 1985. Meditations will be held at Stonehenge, Glastonbury and other esoteric places. Mediaeval banquets, overnight in a castle and a haunted Inn, theater at Stratford-Upon-Avon, visits to Abbeys and Cathedrals, make this a special and custom trip. The price of $2595 from Los Angeles and $2395 from New York includes everything but lunch and tips. Write Elaine at 23852 Wardlow, Laguna Niguel, California 92677, phone (714) 495-0533 for further information and a brochure.

BSRF No. 2-Q: "IMPLSION INSTEAD OF EXPLOSION" The secret of Lift and Propulsion of Flying Saucers, the imploding vortex of physical and electro-magnetic energies, discovered and proven by Austrian Viktor Schauberger, with pictures of his dome-shaped Flying Saucer models of 1940, seven years before the term became an international byword, and of other imploding vortex applications. Comments by Leopold Brandstatter, by Albert Zock, and Electro-dynamic propulsion diagrammed and explained by Stan Deyo, a new powerplant, postpaid. . $3.50

BSRF No. 2-N: WHO FLYS THE SAUCERS? Are they super beings? Are they robots? Are they humanoid? Or all three? Even sceptical Saucer researchers are now taking a closer look at the life-forms manning the elusive UFOs. They are re-reading the contactee stories for clues as to the identity and purposes of the Visitors and the Invaders. The answers are the same, since before 1947 both Good Guys and Bad Buys are coming here from outer space. From BSRF's extensive files, a 25-year accumulation of data. Crabb marshals the evidence for the reality of at least three kinds of Visitors, including first-hand accounts of contacts with Tin-Can and Jelly-Bag robots, the Three Men in Black, the Viknors from Venus-Etheria, and from the Ashtar Command with its Guide Lines for Space Contact. 48 pages, illustrated. . . . $3.50
