EXPERIENCES WITH THE SPIRIT ENEMIES OF SPIRITUALISM.

BY J. M. ROBERTS.

In closing the last number of this narration, stated that the battle between Mr. and Mrs. James A. Bliss and the conspirators, who sought their ruin, was more between the friends and enemies of Spiritualism in spirit life than between the mortal contestants. This I propose to show in the pres-After the so-called exposure of Mr. and Mrs. B., by the Philadelphia Times, the conspirators who had been engaged in that detestable intrigue, found themselves disappointed in the result of their villainy. They confidently expected that the mediums, poor and without influence, seeing the hopelessness of any attempt at defense, would flee, and by their flight confirm the false allegations which had been published against them. In this expectation they were doomed to disappointment. Mr. and Mrs. Bliss, instead of running away, confronted their accusers, and continued to give their seances. On the evening of the day tollowing the Times' attack upon them, they gave a seance under the following circumstances, with the most complete and triumphant success.

The cabinet which Mr. and Mrs. B. had been using for the previous year, and which was the same cabinet that the Times and its assistant conspirators had labored so long and fruitlessly to impeach, had been torn away; the cut floor in the rabinet had been repaired and firmly fastened down; and there was no possible communication from the cellar. There was no Wm. O. Harrison or Helen Suyder there, nor anyone else, who could in any way assist the mediums to simulate spirit materialized forms. There were present more than twenty ladies and gentlemen of more than usual intelligence and discernment. The cabinet used was temporarily constructed in the presence of the company, on the precise spot where the permanent cabinet had stood. Everything about the medium, cabinet, cellar and room was carefully examined by persons who were strangers to the mediums, to determine what truth there might be in the Times' denial that Mr. and Mrs. Bliss were genu ne mediums, and in its allegation that the manifestations that had been witnessed at their seances were deceptive and fraudulent. Under these circumstances the seance I am describing was held. Mrs. Bliss went into the cabinet, and during the hour and a half which followed no less than eight fully materialized forms came out into full view, each of which was distinctly individual as to height, weight, form, features movements, ing to her physical vigor and her short illness apparel, and general appearance. None of them which had not impaired that vigor, she had entered ked at all like the medium, and every one present expressed themselves satisfied that those forms that it was her purpose to qualify herself, as soon all evidence that he had had that Spiritualism was frequently done at the seances. This they could not refuse me, and I went up close to her. Altough she kept her face veiled, a thing that Katie sufficient to demonstrate beyond all question that the so-called "exposure" of the Times was a most mislead the public in relation to ich the conductors of that paper falsely pre tended they had truthfully ascertained. This wis a stunning response on the part of the mediums and their spirit defenders, to the accusing conspira-tors. But this seance being held in their own house, the public might have still felt that there was some truth in the Times' statement, which should weigh against them. Even this poor chance of escape from the detection and exposure of their villainy was taken from these mendaclous Journalists; for Mr. and Mrs. Bliss had announced their intention to give a public seance, the following night, at Circle Hall, 403 Vine street,

This second seance I also attended. At the hour announced for the seance to begin, there were in attendance from thirty to forty persons, many of them bitterly prejudiced against the mediums. It were genuine and honest mediums, and that the was natural, under the circumstances, that the mediums should feel distrustful that their-spirit helpers would be able to overcome the opposing influences which they had every reason to know was being exerted against them. Mr. Bliss, in opening the seance, stated that Mrs. Bliss would sit at that seance under strictly test conditions; and as it was given solely to vindicate themselves against the false accusations of their enemies, they would charge those in attendance nothing. A committee of three ladies, all strangers to Mrs. Bliss, were appointed to search the person and clothing of the medium, and to see that she entered the cabinet with nothing that could be used to simulate spirit forms. The committee retired with the medium, made a thorough examination of her, and reported unanimously that there was nothing about her that could serve any purpose of deception. At this point a young man named Wm. S. Roberts rose and said he was himself an honest medium, and as he had been giving seauces in the cabinet about to be used, he desired that Mrs. Bliss should be subjected to a more positive test than the mere examination by the committee of ladies. He then proposed that Mrs. Bliss should be hand-cuffed with a pair of adjustable, self-locking iron manacles. This proposition, coming as it did from a professed medium, was very exaspera ting to both Mr. and Mrs. Bliss, and the latter, for a time, refused to be treated in that manner. This was what Roberts and his associates expected, and they were all the more importunate about having that test applied. I say Roberts and his associates, for, as subsequents proved, this William S. Roberts, who is a member of the Catholic Church, had been bribed by the Jesuit conspirators to play the part he was there enacting. Under their taunts, Mr. Bliss insisted that Mrs. Bliss should submit to the proposed humiliation, and finally she yielded to his request. She entered the cabinet, accompanied by Roberts, who, after a few minutes, came out and publicly stated that he had securely fastened the hands of the medium, and that it would be impossible for her or anyone else to personate spirits, und r the circumstances, from that cabinet.

Instinctively knowing that some scoundrelly scheme was on foot to misrepresent the mediums, in case they could not succeed in preventing the manifestations, I arose and replied: "I do not know that the medium is secured as stated, and after what I have seen of the conduct of this man, I would not believe a word he would say. I demand the privilege of seeing for myself that matters are as he has stated." A light was brought to me, and I entered the cabinet to make the examination. I found Mrs. Bliss most securely manacled, the irons being so tightly pressed around her wrists that they were half buried in the yielding flesh. In addition to this, Roberts and his associates had secured, through the wooden front of the cabinet, a large, strong, wire-eye which they had placed there some time before the seance for that purpose. Ro'erts hid come prepared with marine, with which he secured the hands of the medium to the wire-eye. This compelled the medium, seated as she was, to have her wrists lashed at a level with her head, from which position it was a physical impossibility for her to release herself, or relieve herself from a torture that must have been unendurable, had she remained conscious for even an eighth of the time that the seance lasted. reported these facts to the audience, no one in the least questioning the truth of what I said. I then and there, denounced the conduct of Roberts, as brutal in the extreme and such as no honest medium would have been gui ty of. The reader must ember that this was no trick cabinet under the control of the mediums, but a cabinet in an open public hall, where any one who desired could examine it as much as they pleased at any time.

test conditions as the devilish ingenuity of the Jethe manifestations, that seance was held. It lasted for more than two hours, during which time seven distinctly individual human forms appeared, each one coming out many times, most or all of whom allowed myself and others to approach them within two or three feet, where we could scrutinize their features, forms and general appearance, without difficulty. None of these forms bore any resemblance to the medium or to each other. The first one to appear came out almost as soon as the circle was seated. It was that of a female, considerably taller than the medium. She came out in full view and, while standing before us, held up her arms, widely extended, to show us that she was not the shackled medium. The attention of those in attendance was called to that fact, and all either verbally or by their silence, admitted that they saw the form and understood the object of the movements of the apparition. Had Mrs. Bliss been furnished with a key to the manacles, as it afterwards was falsely pretended by Roberts, it would have been impossible for her to have released herself, and clothed herself, as that beautiful form was clothed, in the few moments which had transpired. Having shown us her unshackled arms, she caught a scarf from her person, and raising it aloft in her and, she walked up and down the platform waving it over her head as if in triumph at the victory which the spirit guides and protectors of the mediums, had gained over their enemies, both in the spirit life and on earth. This was one of the most nessed, extended as has been my experience in such matters. Myself and others were permitted rented a hall, and, pretending to be acting in the o go close up to this form, and I could see distinctly he features of a woman that impressed me that I hold a series of public meetings, admission ten had seen her before, but which I failed then to identify. The same form appeared at the next seance, given by Mr. and Mrs. Bliss, at the same ment of the State Association of Spiritualists of seance, given by Mr. and Mrs. Bliss, at the same place, and called me to her, when I at once remembered it as that of Miss Lucille Western, who had passed to spirit life a few months before, after an acute and brief illness. Stating to the audience that I recognized the form, but that I would not undertake to identify her, unless she would give ne her name, she walked out of the cabinet, came losely to me and distinctly spoke the name Lucille. This same form I have seen hundreds of manifestations. Pretending to know all about that times since, as have hundreds of other persons, subject, he said he positively knew that there was with whom she has conversed, and if it is possible to identify a materialized form, this form, and beyo d

other forms, of which several were fully recognized. Among these was a male form, dressed in a full suit of black clothes, who called his friends to him and shook hands with them. Among the audience was a lady who is avowedly skeptical as to the possibility of spirit materialization, who had | the facts I have above related, as occurring at the a few years before resided with Dr. Sleeper, in this two seances held subsequently to The Times' pubcity. She went up to him, shook hands with him, and said that if it was not the spirit of her friend it was marvellously like him. But I need not say that they were strongly in favor of the mediums. more to show how completely the spirit manifestations, which were witnessed at that seance, vindicated the claims of Mr. and Mrs. Bliss that they accusations against them were maliciously false, and intended to deceive the public. I will only add that none of the forms that appeared were shackled or in the least impeded in their move

At the close of the seance Roberts, who had the tey of the shackles, was requested to release the medium. He hurried to the cabinet and was about to unlock the shackles where the audience could not see it done. To this I objected, and insisted that they should be unlocked before all who were Bliss to allow them to examine the premises. This, in attendance. The marline which secured the arms of Mrs. Bliss to the front of the cabinet was after a few minutes' inspection of the premises, cut, as it could not readily be unfastened and the medium came out of the cabinet with the shackles sent a note to Mr. Bliss, requesting Mrs. Bliss and still firmly secured upon her wrists. Roberts was himself to give a private seance to his so-called then requested to unlock them, which he proceeded o do. It was only with great difficulty and considerably delay that he found it possible to remove hem. A more complete triumph for the mediums and their spirit guides could not have been desired or possible. The whole false and fraudulent proceedings of the conductors of The Times was demon strated at the two seances described, and not a vestige of it remained to be answered by the mediums to vindicate themselves in the eyes of all unprejudiced and truth-loving people.

These facts were furnished at the time, by myelf, both to the Banner of Light and to the Reigio-Philosophical Journal, but neither of those ournals had the independence or fairness to publish them. Whether the conductor of the usually they were going to give a series of sham seances, fair and impartial Banner of Light doubted the correctness of my testimony, or sought shelter in silence frem the tempest of projudice which the they would not be mad enough to attempt that." ing accusations of The Times had raised against His reply was, "Well, you'll see, Mr. Roberts. If justice and truth would permit would be glad to say nothing of this at this time, but it is due the public that all the facts should be laid before them. Why the editor of the Journal treated the mediums in that most reprehensible manner, has been made fully apparent by his whole course from that time forward. But here I propose to show the intimate relations which existed between the Jesuit conspirators who any arrangement with me without the consent of were seeking to destroy the mediums and the his co-committeemen. I then asked him when he Jesuit spirits who were cooperating with them in their bigoted sectarian persecution of, as they supposed, their helpless victims. Philip Diesinger, the I would be at his house at that hour accompanied avowed Jesuit agent and spy, had been striving for weeks, indirectly, to mislead Mr. Bliss as to his (Diesinger's) domestic relations. He had frequently expressed great concern about the safety of the favorite, of his twin children; of his wife's de ceased mother and other matters that were wholly false, intending thereby to make a point on Mr. Bliss, who is frequently entranced during the seances, and who, while so entranced, is subject to any controlling spirit that can at such times influence him. Near the close of the seance in question, Mr. Bliss was entranced by a spirit purporting to be the deceased mother of Mrs. Diesinger, who, in a whining way, went on to deplore the de-ceitful and wicked conduct of Diesinger, her soniu-law, who was not present; and who assured the in his own house. I said: "As you, Mr. Higgins, audience that a terrible retributive blow would

I told Mr. Bliss that our mission was at an end thizers and coadjutors would conceive and put in practice by pre-arrangement between them. I concluded then, that some Jesuit spirit emissary used that method to aid his mundane confreres and that this was a partial fulfilment of the threat of Loyola that he would make the mediums odious in the public sight, by controlling them to do things that would injure them.

As I have stated, the seances mentioned, and those which followed, annihilated the effects of the long prepared and cherished plot of the conductors of The Times and their fellow conspirators. At this juncture, Anthony Higgins, who had been no doubt all along acquainted with what was being interest of Spiritualism, announced his purpose to cents, to "winnow the chaff from the wheat" of Pennsylvania, as a Missionary Agent, Higgins assumed to act in that representative capacity. I made it my business to attend the first of a series of similar meetings, called by him, accompanied ov Mr. Bliss. This was on Sunday morning, Aug. 26, five days after the so-called "exposure" of The Times. It was at that meeting that Higgins spent the whole time in laboring to discredit all spiritual subject, he said he positively knew that there was not ten per cent. of such manifestations that were genuine, and that of that small amount there was hardly more than one per cent. positive y certain. He had cunning enough to know that unless he admitted that there was some little phenomenal proof of the truth of Spiritualism, that he could not carry out the Jesuitical work in which he was engaged. He admitted his connection with and training in the Catholic Church, but pretended to have been convinced of the falseness of that soulblinding faith, by the small modicum of phenomeave failed to see, in the matter and method of that enemy of Truth.

At the close of his discourse, he referred, as I expected he would do, to the alleged "exposure" of Mr and Mrs. Bliss as mediums, and said it was a matter that ought to be thoroughly inquired into by the Spiritualists of Philadelphia but suggested no definite step to that end. At the close of his discourse I arose and asked permission to make a statement on behalf of Mr. and Mrs. Bliss. This, after a little hesitation, he granted. I then stated Mr. Higgins then announced another meeting fo the evening of that day, at the same place, when he would resume his theme of the morning.

It was impossible for me to attend that meeting but I was credibly informed that Higgins had gotten those present to appoint a committee of three to visit Mr. and Mrs. Bliss at their house, inquire into the facts relating to the alleged exposure, and report at another meeting to be held on the succeeding Wednesday evening. Mr. Higgins and two others were appointed as that committee. Accompanied by one of his co-committeemen, Higgins, in the absence of Mr. Bliss, called the next morning at Mr. Bliss' house, and requested Mrs. without any hesitation, Mrs. Bliss assented to, and committee, to be held at one of their houses. This note Mr. Bliss submitted to me for my advice. Already convinced as I was, that Higgins was acting in the interest of the conspirators, if not in full co-operation with them, I saw here an unexpected opportunity of determining that point, beyond all question. At a sitting with Mr. Bliss, a few days before, he was controlled by "Billy the Bootblack." who told me he had been tracking the movements of Diesinger and Harrison, and that he had been where he saw them getting up a parcel of costumes to personate the spirit forms which had appeared at the seances; and he said to me, "What do you think I heard them say?" I said, "I don't know." "Well," said he, "they said strengthened my convictions that Higgins' movements had something to do with the conspiracy, Accordingly, I got Mr. Bliss to write a note to Higgins, saying that I was authorized to make any arrangement with Higgins, on his behalf, that I might think proper. With this note I called upon Higgius, at his residence. This was not what he anticipated, he supposing that the mediums would peremptorily refuse his most improper and unreasonable request. It was, therefore, necessary for him to gain time in order to confer with his fellowconspirators as to what steps they should take to get rid of me. Higgins said he could not make could get them together, to which he replied, "Tomorrow morning, at 8 o'clock." Telling him that by Mr. Bliss, I went away. At the appointed hour Mr. Bliss and myself were on hand, but the other committeemen were not there. In order to get Higgins to show what he was driving at, I had requested Mr. Bliss to ask him who he claimed to represent by his action. This question Higgins at first tried to evade, but, when pressed for a direct answer, he refused it: and began a most insulting tirade against Mr. Bliss, which the latter augrily and threateningly resented. Higgins so far forgot his characteristic cunning, for the moment, as to declare that he had the most positive proof in his possession that the Times' "exposure" was true. I here interfered in order to prevent Mr. Bliss from assaulting Hiagins have declared that you have your mind made up audience that a terrible retributive blow would come upon Diesinger, in the death of his favorite twin child. She requested that her message should be sent to Diesinger in order that he might know, in the death of that child, the spirit world had avenged the wrongs that he had done to the mediums. Harrison and Snyder were kept out of sight of me, although in the house. After considerable delay, I was invited to the sitting-room in the second story, where curtains were hung across what appeared to be the opening to a bay-window. Behind this curtain I could hear Harrison and Snyder rehearsing for their parts. The light was lowered, and Diesinger Wolff and Higgins joined in singing. In a little while, Helen Snyder stepped out and went through quite a creditable imitation of the Mrs. McCarthy of the Bliss seances. Af er retiring and dressing to personate the tall form of Lizzie De Larue, through the whole performance of which I could recognize what was going on by the sounds, she came out but utterly failed, in the least, to imitate the movements or appearance of that spirit form. I allowed that performance to pass without manifesting the contempt I felt for the deceitful people into whose company I had fallen. My object was to get a look at the face of the woman who had been induced and influenced to practice the vile deception which was there being attempted to be practiced upon me. This opportunity came when she next appeared in the character of Katie Rublee. I then asked to be permitted to approach her, as I had discourse, the educated and thoroughly trained Rublee never did, I could see her features disemissary of the Jesuit propaganda—the deadly tinctly, and especially her peculiar formation of Convinced beyond all question that Higgins. Spirit Manifestations at Columbu. Ind.

Readers of the above will think such words coney inconsistent ideas, and yet humanity cannot, or will not admit facts cognizant to their senses. To explain: A Mr. Charles Barnes appears in his city with his newly married bride whose was formerly here. They call on friends, Mr. B. offering to be placed under any test conditions required, to convince, if possible; that Spiritualism ught to be investigated, before being denounced as the "works of the Devil." Mr. B was tied hands and feet and unable to move an inch. The cord was then double knotted and fastened under the chair. A muslin sack, previously prepared, was then drawn up, the open end tied closely around his neck, and then around the sack other cords vere laced and interlaced, tied with double knots, and made as secure as the ingenuity of man could devise. A tin horn placed behind the curtain a yard or more from Mr. B. began to shows signs of life and intelligence in moving about and by actual speech hrough it saying, "We are glad to meet you, and will give such proof as is within our power to conrince there is no death, and Spiritualism is true. To relate all said and done at the several sittings would require much time and space hence I briefly say the talk through the horn was, at times, clear and plain, or feeble and low, and occasionally inaudible. To ascribe it to ventriloquism would be a silly assertion to those present, or to legerdemain for a banjo weighing 10½ pounds to move fully one yard from behind the curtain into plain sight of the sitters, the movement of fingers plainly seen as music was heard, or moved about 8 feet to the top of the curtain, with a loud voice through the horn, saying, "We will now raise the curtain so you can see our medium tied, which was immediately done, and such repeated five times at one sitting. Between repetitions at other sittings, sounds and loud talk was heard, addressing a sceptic who had the horn thrust close to his plain sight of all, shouting out, "All humbug is At another time and place a priest got highly offended at the "control" because the spirit de ing herself as such, decidedly maintained "his teachings were false," the priest saying, "you are

MAN'S TRUE DESTINY:

A VISION OF THE FUTURE.

For Mind and Matter. I had a dream the other day, Though wide awake, I gave full play To magic powers of seeming, And visions went and visions came, Of honor, virtue, sin and shame, To fill the score of dieaming.

In pristine innocence I saw Man ere he knew the lion's claw Concealed in human nature, When Adam walked in Eden's shade. And Eve, his mate, was newly made. His queen, companion, waiter.

The earth was fair, the earth was voing. The stars of heaven together sung With gladness, peace and pleasure; God saw man's want was thus supplied And Five was happy when a bride, What need of mammon's treasure!

Alas! what wrought the awful change Not war, nor envy, nor revenge, These speak more modern charms, As when for Heien Trojan's fight, And Cleopatra claims the right To keep her love in arms!

With human effort, human needs, And human reason, man-made creeds, Came selfishness and stubborn will; Self-love has set the world aghast-Cain, if the first, was not the last A brother's blood to spill.

From then till now, men curse the deed. And yet how few pay proper heed To methods true of living; How few the golden rule can live. Receiving only what they give, Their neighbor's faults forgiving!

From Adam to the present day. But few have learned the better way : A few have made beginning, And would have practiced noble deeds, But soon got tangled up with creeds, And legal ways of sinning!

Man's duty to "The Great I am," Has been explained all souls to damn, Instead of honest labor, And ways of living as he should, And serving God by doing good, And toiling for his neighbors!

His selfishness has been addressed To pamper self, if all the rest. Should perish by starvation; No matter if his selfish dreams Which undermine the nation!

Self-hood too oft is made supreme, And legislation caused to teem With schemes for aggrandizement. To justice, jurors close their eyes, The public weal all sacrifice While straight for plunder bont.

Which best by noble action works; "Truth crushed will rise again;" Let error feast on idle dreams, Truth will explode all evil schemes And righteousness maintain.

But in the mass true leaven lurks

Let narrow minds revive old saws, And strangle truth by stringent laws, And dogmas of the past: And legis ator, doctor, priest, Uniting bow to Mammon's beast, Bound by creed-fetters fast!

The vision changes, and we see. Adown the line of destiny, A better state of things; Men cease to worship empty creeds,

Walk not by faith, but by true deeds And light which knowledge brings. Yet many turn from dawning light, And head-long rush back into night. From profered blessings flee; And stumble in the dubious way, And scrambling fight like beasts of prey, Thus courting misery:

A few espy the distant light, And pausing in their downward flight, Gaze fearfully at its ray; Some hearts may feel the warming glow. Some mind desire the truth to know, Such hail the new-born day!

Brave Galaleos come and gone, The truths they taught will live; The Saviors who have lived and died For human rights, were crucified Thát we may light receive. The world is full of woe to-day, Because men shun the better way,

A few reformers Truth has known.

And righteous teachings spurn; The name of Progress millions hate All knowledge bearing modern date, They still refuse to learn. While selfishness is uppermost, Truth seems a shadow, like a ghost, Behind the scenes to lurk;

But bides her time-for errors strength Will spread itself, and truth at length Will do its perfect work. The age of night is well nigh spent. The slumbering world is not content To longer lie in gloom: But like a lion from his lair.

Though battles dire may come Now error's cohorts, growing fierce, Come thundering down the line of years, To crush us 'neath their feet! Awake! arise! ye sons of light, Oh! rally for the coming fig.it, To falter is defeat!

Arises now to do and dare

E'en now the din of war we hear-The battle-cry-the forman's cheer-The skirmishing begins: From left to right, along the line. There's strategy and deep design, Yet truth each contest wins

See victory on her standard perch. Nor sword of despot, state nor church, Against it can prevail; Giants before the David's fall, The sword of Justice conquers all. Her captains never fail.

The contest rages and the fight Grows desperate now from left to right, Still victory is ours; The coming day will soon be here, Then, at one rush, with sword and spear, Error with all her powers, Will flee back to sterpel night,

Disarmed, disabled so, the fight
She hever more can wage.

She hever more can wage.

She hever more can wage. Our mobiest pomers engage Then Justice in the earth will reign, And righteousness and peace maintain Her golden scepter sway; Adown the line of years I see For man a glorious destiny,

A prosperous happy day. On that blest day all wrong will cease Men cultivate the arts of peace, All as one family, Will dwell in harmony and love,

A friend each to the other prove, To help hed on his way. The golden rule will then prevail, And criminal court, and sheriff, jall Sustained by crime to-day,

As the ripe fruit of barbarous times And age on age of glaring crimes. Will thus all pass away. And judges, lawyers, doctors too, Creeds, priests, and prelates, all must go, Their work is well nigh done;

When men have learned the laws of life

And made an end of folly's strife, A new era begun. All heaven will loud hosannas sing, And wide the portals open fling, To our celestial home:

And Jacob's ladder from the skies. The world will greet with glad surprise, And angels go and come

And seraphs cleave the shining way, Departed friends "come back to stay," And hold a jubilec; The reign of error being o'er, We'll all rejoice for evermore, In man's true destiny.

A Reminiscence.

I read with some interest in MIND AND MAT-TER, of the 12th, the item from M. A. (Oxon) 'Vision of Death," where the body pronounced to be dead, still the magnetic cord was yet unbroken, and remained so for many hours, and during that time says the writer, "I believe it to have been possible under favorable conditions to bring back the spirit had any one willed it, and had his will been powerful enough," and the fact suggested the gospel case of Lazarus. I do not propose to repro-duce the item only to refresh the reader so that I can use it as a setting for an item somewhat simi-

A man well known as a resident in this city (Boston), somewhat prominent both as a reformer and a Swedenborgian, lost his wife, a very Christian woman of the same semi-pleasant faith. This pious woman was sick quite awhile, and at the last was suddenly drawing to her close. Her son, who lived within a few miles, was sent for, as she was very attentive during her sickness, but at this moment could not be found. Still he was looked for ed for, and the dying mother hung on to life for that last adieu. It was evident her will kept her soul and body together, for her time was at, and but for that wish she would ere then, have d. She was due in Heaven full two hours becian, who called soon after, was not surprised to find the golden bowl broken and I saw that she was dead, and said so, and the mourners went about the house. Thus she lay laid out, as we say, some hours, when, in great haste and grief, in came her son. He had gotten the message that his mother was dying and wanted him; but, alas! some hours too late. He went into the silent room where lay the clay tenement, when, on his approach, the dead woman awoke to consciousness and said: "I could not go until I saw and spoke my message to you;" when, in fine language, she addressed him at some length most affectionately and eloquently, and then, for the second time, expired.

This was looked upon as somewhat of a miracle a privilege granted her as a very pious woman, and not so much of an impossibility to the new church believers, as it would have been to other Christian sects. They considered that the woman had died. Dr. Gregg, a distinguished physician, also, on examination, pronounced her dead, and I have no doubt she was dead. I have an idea that she was a remarkably well ordered woman. It is possible, like the case M. A. Oxon relates, and perhaps like Lazarus that "came forth," the magnetic chord still connected the spirit with the body, but I think it was the strong will power, and she was enabled, which is a very rare thing, to control for a short time her own body, and use its organs without inhabiting it. I ought to add, in closing, that this occured only a few years ago, and that I know the facts are as I have written, and that, for a brief state, the woman arose from JOHN WETHERBEE.

CORRESPONDENCE.

TRENTON, N. J., June 17, 1879. Editor of Mind and Matter.

ESTEEMED SIR:—I send you a trifling item of news from this locality, assuring you that it was new indeed to this priest-ridden little city. You can condense it or reject it altogether, or give the facts related in your own way, just as you please.

The orthodox people of Trenton have recently received a shock equally as startling to them as the play of the natural elements at times in their efforts to restore an equilibrium of its forces. The cause was the delivery of a funeral discourse by Mrs. Katy B. Robinson, of your city; the occasion, the interment of the remains of Mrs. Enoch Thomas of

Week before last the wife of Enoch Thomas. who, by the way, is a staunch and unflinching Spiritualist, passed to spirit life. Mr. Thomas had the audacity, notwithstanding we have plenty of God's ambassadors duly commissioned for the purpose, to send for Mrs. Robinson to say a few words, for their edification, over the earthly body of his beloved companion. He succeeded, through the efforts of Christopher Wentz, an old friend, who has recently had his eyes annointed by the blessed influences of the spirit world, in procuring for the occasion the room used by the first Universalist church, a religious body quite recently organized in this place, the trustees kindly consenting to the arrangement; and may God and his holy angels so guide and bless them that this little beginning may develop for fu-ture use, a union of the liberal elements here, that they may breath unitedly upon the dry bones of theologic bigotry and superstition, that they may result in an earnest cry for more light and lib-

What is the Difference? Which is the Better Spiritualist?

We have before noticed the wordy controversy that has been going on for some time between The Alliance a religious paper and the Religio Philosophical Journal a pseudo Spiritual journal, both of Chicago. Seeing little prospect that these noisy disputants will end their pother if let alone, we propose to learn from them if possible, what all their racket is about. The Religio Philosophical Journal quotes the The Alliance as follows:

"No careful observer is prepared to deny that there is something in Spiritualism? Amid a good deal humbug and much chaff there is truth, a fact, there. It has been demonstrated that there is a mysterious force in the world, operated by the mind of man in some mysterious way, but what the force is, and how it is set in motion, is a matter that the future must discover by scientific methods."

We cannot for the life of us see why Col. Bundy should feel so annoyed at that sweeping admission of this orthedox enemy of the Spiritual movement. The Alliance after that surrender to the truth, as made manifest through the natural phenomena of Spiritualism which occur through Spiritual mediums, might well be considered as good a Spiritualist journal as the R. P. J. Indeed there is a refreshing frankness about this orthodox recognition of the phenominal facts of Spiritualism that the Journal would do well to emulate. But Col. Bundy is not satisfied to see his antagonist prostrate before him, but continues to buffet it, as if he felt especial gratification in punishing his defunct enemy. Leave them to realize the remorse that is in store for them, and they will have enough to bear without your help to make them miserable. Don't sllow the "green-eyed monster" to deprive you of what little mercy you possess. The Alliance in fighting Spiritual phenomena and seeking to dis credit them, has the consistency not to profess to favor those facts; and this, Col. Bundy, you ought not to forget. You will have that field, rest assured, all to yourself. Waste no more powder upon The Alliance, Colonel; its managers gave their last kick at Spiritualism before they made the above fatal admission.

The Neshaminy Camp Meeting-A Grand Success.

The camp-meeting under the management of the First Association of Spiritualists of Philadelphia was formally opened on Sunday, July 20th, at the beautiful and delightful Neshaminy Falls Grove, at Willett's Station, Pa., at which over three thousand people were in attendance.

The day was all that anyone could desire, being clear, cool and invigorating. The large crowd made the most of the enjoyment which the ample provisions that had been made by the able management of the committee of arrangements afforded. The grounds and surroundings are naturally of the most attractive description, and these have been turned to the best advantage by judicious and tasteful, artistic and utilitarian accompaniments.

It is useless to attempt, in the space and time at our command, to describe the many attractions of this rural resort—for columns would not suffice to do them justice. The anti-spiritualistic press of Philadelphia and New York, of Monday last, through their reporters, gave especial attention to these features of the camp meeting, as they did not care to lay before their readers correct information regarding the sentiments and teachings of Spiritualism as presented by its exponents from the ros-

The meeting assembled before the grand stand at 101 o'clock A. M., and was called to order by the President, H. B. Champion, Esq., who directed the

The exercises began with instrumental music, which was followed by singing by the choir and congregation. Then followed a most appropriate and eloquent inspirational invocation by Mrs. E. L. Watson, of Titusville, Pa., which melted the large assembly into one sympathizing mass, and prepared them for the able discourse which succeeded it.

The attention of those in attendance was directed to the efficient and successful labors of Col. S. P. Kase in making the preparations for that most auspicious gathering. Singing followed, and then the speaker of the morning session, Prof. J. R. Buchanan, of New York, addressed the meeting. The discourse of this learned and influential Spiritualist occupied an hour and a half, and was listened to throughout with the most attentive interest by the vast concourse. His subject was, "The Religion of Spiritualism." At the close of his address, the next thing in order was for the hungry crowd to satisfy their whetted appetites, for which the most ample provision had been made at the most reason-

At the affernoon session, the meeting was addressed through Mrs. E. L. Watson, on the subject of "The Relations of Earth to the Spirit World." Mrs. Watson spoke while entranced. The thoughts uttered were grand and beautiful, and most fluently, poetically and eloquently expressed. If Mrs. Watson was the author of that address, the deserves to rank with the foremost speakers and teachers of the most fluently to find out what to rank with the foremost speakers and teachers of the most fluently and eloquently expressed. On Tuesday, Prof. J. R. Buchanan spoke in continuation of his subject, "The Religion of Spiritualsm," and in the afternoon Mrs. E. L. Under the above head-line our Chicago contemporary, the R. P. Journal, says: "It is often difficult for the clairvoyant or psychometrist to distinguish between true and false in Such are the views of the editor of the R. P.

Journal, in regard to clairvoyance as a help to the attainment of Spiritual truth. He, an acknowedged clairvoyant, testifies that no impression of a clairvoyant character is entitled to any reliance, in as much as the clairvoyant has no faculty within him, or herself, to distinguish between what is "True" and what is "Fanciful Clair voyance." Dr. George M. Beard, on the other hand, a "Dunderheaded" pedantic enemy of Spiritualism, says there is no such thing as clairvoyance at all, as formulated science shows. Mental hallucination and fraud suffice this neurologic quack, to account for all clairvoyant phenomena. Why the Journal omitted, for this once, to introduce its universal solvent of all perplexing questions, "fraud," as an element in its Beardistic treatment of clairvoyance, may be readily inferred from the fact that to give weight to his pedantic utterances, he found it convenient to claim clairvoyant powers himself, and he would never be guilty of any fraud, "you know."

to discredit and render worthless, one of the most important phases of spiritual phenomena?

Reader, we will tell you. Col. Bundy is weakly ambitious to lay Spiritualism at the feet of popular opinion, in order that he may win its approving smiles and applause. Recently, certain spiritual phenomens which occurred through that remarksbly gifted medium, Dr. J. V. Mansfield, of New York, was seized upon by the anti-Spiritualistic press of the country as affording them a chance to ridicule and it jure the cause of Spiritualism. But few of these hostile journals dared to pretend that Dr. Mansfield had sought to deceive any person, as a medium. They very well knew that of the many thousands of persons who knew Dr. M. personally, none could be found who would be willing to believe him capable of wilful deception; they, therefore, attributed the phenomena in question to mental delusion. Col. Bundy waited until he found which way the journalistic wind was blowing and then he wheels into line with these enemies of truth and tries to outdo them in efforts to discredit one of the most useful and influential mediums in this country or the world. The course of Col. Bundy, in this instance is strictly in accord with the time-serving policy that has governed him from the

We assure Col. B. that at no time have we ever eceived a clairvoyant impression, and, therefore, we claim to be an exception to his general rule, at east. And, yet from the most ample opportunity which we have had of testing the clairvoyant and clairaudient perceptions of Dr. Mansfield we unhesitatingly declare that we know him to be a most perfect and reliable instrument for spirit control. It is this fact that the "Spirit enemies of Spiritualism" have striven so cunningly and adroitly to discredit and destroy; and to the same "Spirit enemies of Spiritualism" Col. Bundy owes the blunder into which he has been led, in this, his last effort to discredit a medium. Those who have read the R, P. Journal, for the past year, will remember the communications purporting to come from the spirit of S. S. Jones, Col. Bundy's predecessor, approving his course and urging him on in his mischievous and inconsistent editorial career. These communications came through the same medium, Dr. Mansfield, whom Col. Bundy now seeks to discredit as a trustworthy medium. We speak advisedly in saying this, for the effect of Col. Bundy's reasoning, in this case, if accepted, must have that result. What other effect could such a statement in that connection, as the following have? He says:

"A genuine medium may often supplement flishes of pure clairvoyance with baseless fancies of his own, and do this quite innocently. He either does not or cannot distinguish between the two orders of impressious. The how and the whence are as inexplicable to the medium as to the wit-

Then pray what becomes of that spirit endorse nent by Spirit S. S. Jones of Col. Bundy's management of the Journal? What of all other psychometric and psychological manifestations of spirit control of mediums? If Col. Bundy keeps on at this rate he will soon take rank with Anthony Higgins, the Jesuit, and Wm. F. Jamieson, the Atheist, as friends of Spiritualism. Be advised, Colonel,-turn a short corner and strive to win the confidence and sympathy of the friends of Spiritualism rather than the plaudits and contempt of its enemies.

Visit.

By telegram from New York, on the afternoon of the 14th inst., we were informed that the editor of the Banner of Light, that veteran representative of Spiritual truth, Luther Colby, with his friend and co-adjutor George A. Bacon, would arrive at the Colornade Hotel, this city, at 6 o'clock P. M. We were delighted a few hours thereafter by a call from that noble, whole-souled friend of humanity, Dr J. M. Peebles, who came to say that Messrs. Colby and Bacon had arrived on their way to pay him and Mrs. Peebles a visit, at their home, at Hammonton, N J, the following day, and honored us with an invitation to accompany them on their mission. This kind evidence of friendly appreciation we were rejoiced to accept, and accordingly made our arrangements to enjoy the society of these able and earnest friends of the cause to which we have devoted our best efforts. As an additional attraction to visit the home of "The Pilgrim," we were promised the opportunity of making the acquaintance of that fearless and incisive Spiritual critic, Mr. A. E. Newton, of Ancora, N. J. Much as was the sacrifice of time that was important to our journalistic duties, we were glad to lay it on the altar of social converse.

As soon as we could do so, we called upon Messrs. Colby, Bacon and Peebles, and found them discussing the merits of an inviting repast after their dusty and wearisome journey from "Down East." A couple of hours of social, pleasant and profitable interchange of thought was passed, when our friends left us to visit Mr. and Mrs. S. P. Kase, at their hospitable home, No. 1601 North Fifteenth street, the arrangement having been made that at 8 o'clock the next morning we should meet at the starting point of the Narrow Guage Railroad to Atlantic City, bound for the Mecca of New Jersey Spiritualism.

As is our custom, we were on hand at the appointed hour and found our host and decrone at his post. The time of departure had almost arrived, but Messrs. Colby and Bacon were not to be seen. For a few moments Dr. Peebles and ourself experienced that anxiety which is only known by those who realize that some cherished anticipation is almost to slip from them. But we were more than paid for our few minutes' anxiety, when, just as the starting bell tapped, our sight was cheered by the greeting smiles of our friends as they hurried up the gang-plank of the boat.

A five-mile invigorating boat ride, which defied the fury of old Sol, who was striving to scorch us to the tune of 105 in the shade, we took the cars and away we were hurled on the wings of the wind on our way to Peebledom. Brother Colby, as mile after mile was left behind us, began to query whether Hammonton was a suburb of the City of Brotherly Love, as he had been led to suppose by Brother P ebles' remark that he lived a short ride from Philadelphia.

As was natural, Brother Colby missed the granite mountains, hills and boulders of the Land of the Pilgrims, and began to imagine, if he went much further, he would hardly again find his way back to the "Hub of the Universe." He seemed utterly incapable of appreciating the especial attractions of New Jersey, a State that is fast depopulating the sterile lands and inhospitable regions of New England's more wintry latitudes.

After an hour's ride the cry of "Hammonton," from the conductor, relieved the apprehensions of and Mrs. Peebles, God bless their generous and friendly souls! Hardly had our thoughtful hostess time to make the acquaintance of her visitors. before she hastened away to assuage the effects of travel over a New Jersey railroad on a hot and dusty day. An ample supply of lemonade, to which the "nectar of the Gods,' was as poison, for a time made us so far forget our tribulations, that even Brother Colby thought he was nearer Elysium than he imagined he could ever get.

Having thus prepared us for a Parnasian ascent. Brother Peebles proposed that we should accompany him to his "Den" on the second floor. Here we were introduced to his friend and literary assistant, Mr. Whipple, whom we surprised at his desk, in the midst of his labors. We looked around that "Den" for the "seven-horned" or some other beast who might feel disp sed to make a meal of us, but no such monster was anywhere in sight. The reader will not blame us for this vagary of fancy, for we knew that Dr. Peebles had visited the sacred fanes and caves and temples of the Eastern Mystics; and did not know but that he had lured Brother Colby and ourself down among the Jersey pines, to have us devoured by some of those nymphs, guomes, undines, salamanders or other monsters that prey upon and make sport of the sufferings of poor humanity, at the command of Madam Blavatsky and her disciple Col. Henry S. Olcott, or the Theosophical society, which those hierophants left as a legacy to the fools of America when they took their departure for the scenes of the origin of their mystical nonsense. We hope the reader will pardon us for our tax upon their breath in reading that long, but pregnant sentence.

But in truth we found there nothing of the kind; but, instead, the walls lined with shelves which were loaded with 1500 volumes, books containing the most priceless treasures of human thought. In addition to these attractions every spare nook and corner was occupied with some interesting and instructive memento of the scenes which Dr. Peebles had visited in his extended and almost unparalleled travels.

Europe, Asia, Africa, Australia, India and Central America were there represented by mementoes, that almost evoked the presence of the past generations who have peopled those distant lands. The short time and opportunity to hear the history of each object of interest from the lips of Dr. Peebles only sufficed to whet our appetite for fuller information concerning the common bond that united humanity in the past, however widely separated they were on the globe; and if possible to evoke the secret which must yet be discovered, before the era of a common brotherhood will again reign upon the earth. We very much fear that Dr. Peebles has got himself into something of a scrape, for he little imagines the "cat houling," as the sailors call it, that is in store for him, should we be fortunate enough to find him at home when next we can get that far away from our editorial

After three or four hours spent in the enjoyment of these mental surroundings and in constant conversation, to our especial edification, Mrs. Peebles announced the readiness of dinner, and even Brother Colby, who, according to high Western Spiritual authority, fe ds on Spiritual "Moonshine" had to admit that the good things of this world, and especially of New Jersey, were hardly inferior to his Spiritualistic fare. We assure Col. Bundy that Brother Colby is only a mortal after all, and will remain so, we hope many years to bless and cheer his fellow mortals on their earthly pilgrimage to the Banner of Light, the Religio Philosophical Journal and MIND AND MATTER, and the common enemy of Spiritualism, the opposition secular press, will soon call out for quarters. We know this cooperation and accord is possible, and, therefore, we shall work to that end. With such a union of forces, the spiritual movement will be irresistible, and all chance of dividing and weakening the spiritual hosts will be at an end.

But to return from this digression to the groaning poard of our host and hostess. Reader, if you know what Yankee thrift and skill and Jersey abundance can do, when combined, then you can have some idea of the sumptuous and inviting fare set before us. If you don't, then it is useless for me to try and tell you how we fared. Such a dinner as that, on a scorching hot day, was enough to make a person feel like sleeping for week, under ordinary circumstances; but such was the magnetic activity of the surroundings that no one of us succumbed to the calls of old Morpheus, except Dr. Peebles himself, and he only for a few moments, while the rest of us made the most of our time. The one drawback to our pleasure, on the occasion, was that we were disappointed in not being able to make the personal acquaintance of Mr. Newton, as we hoped to do-he not arriving until after the hour that called us back to our editorial and "the devil's" duty, as A J Davis, Wm. Emmette Coleman and Mrs. Wilcoxson will have it, we are engaged in. By the way, these proficients in "diabolical Spiritualism," or "sixth dimension antics," are nearer the truth than they imagine, for we are doing the joint duties of editor and "devil" on MIND AND MATTER. By the by, we have thought something of begging from friend Davis one of his Diakka to relieve us of the latter duties, as we cannot lie worth a cent, and to keep hurling chuncks of solid truth at our readers all the time may weary them. A little of Diakka wisdom might serve for a change, even if it should come in the way of untruthful and "rollicking

After dinner Dr. Peebles invited us to the grove primitive trees at the rear of his home where Brother Colby sat himself down to the er joyment of a segar that almost made us (anti-tobacco as we are in our sentiments) envy him his delight. By the way, Brother Colby is always an entertaining and busy talker, but that lemonade, or that dinner, or that segar, or the fanning breeze that swept that shady spot, aroused his conversational resources, and for more than two hours we had enough to do to store away, in our mind, the useful information he imparted to us, without desiring to use the time by showing how little we knew on matters that have grown so familiar to this veteran spiritual journalist. Brother Bacon enconced himself in a friendly and inviting hammock and enjoyed that dulcet farniente which only a consciousness of innate goodness can impart to those who are for the time freed from the corroding cares of a busy life.

When all too late for our edification and enjoyment, we were joined by Mrs. Peebles, her kind and cheerful face adding to the light of the beautiful and cloudless sun which was then descending to his evening couch. A short half hour more with these congenial friends, and the finger of Old Time admonished us to leave them, in order that MIND AND MATTER might reach its patrons on time. Consigning Brothers Colby and Bacon to the tender mercies of the mosquitos, wood and berry ticks, and Brother Colby, and a short time thereafter we other small but "pesky" New Jersey "varmiuts," reached the truly cosy and hospitable home of Dr. we bid the friends adieu, and at six o'clock P. M., were back in the city to er joy its bracing evening atmosphere at 100 degrees Fahrenheit.

On their return to Philadelphia, Bros. Colby and Bacon did us the kindness of calling to see us, which they feared they could not do, when we left them, as the former chaffed like a war horse to be in the editorial harness again, and could not be content out of sight of the smoke of "Notsob." Their visit made us feel as if they came, as avant couriers of the angel hosts, who are laboring for the redemption of humanity; for ever since an inspiring and peaceful influence has seemed to surround us. Oh! that the world was filled with such messengers of fraternal and peaceful offerings from the abodes of the blessed. Dear readers, will you not one and all say, Amen!

Experiences and Views of Rev. F. J. Briggs.

EDITOR OF MIND AND MATTER:-From the few numbers of your paper that I have had the pleasure of reading, I perceive that you have taken a resolute stand that mediums, especially those for phases of materialization, since they are the most obnoxious to all forms of opposition, open, lurking, low-bred, bigoted and envious; should be treated with candor, fairness and respect, as though they, too, had some rights, that opponents and those who claim to be investigators are bound to respect. In this you have my sympathy. The principle of investigation, avowed and published by Col. Olcott, to hold all mediums impostors till they proved themselves honest, is wrong in itself and pernicious in its consequences. Mistreating honest mediums and imposing oppressive test conditions upon them, loes not help one iota towards detecting impostors If there are verities in spirit manifestations, whe ther physical or psychological, those results must be wrought out through law and order, like chemical results, and true liken says in photography. The chemist must have his conditions and the photographer his. And they would give disastrous manifestations if they allowed every novice to impose his conditions to satisfy himself or his curiosity. And they would find themselves very much in the condition mediums are, if public sentiment lamorously demanded this of them, and construed every refusal of theirs to comply, into evidence of their being frauds. In my readings and investigations—such as they may have been-I have endeavored, as far as I could, to acquaint myself with those laws and their practical bearings, to obtain the best manifestations. Also, that we might understand our duties towards the medium, and the medium's obligation to investigators. Among rational, moral beings there must be obligations to act up to on both sides. It is not to be all exactions on our part and all compliance on the part of the mediums. And I am willing to contribute what little I can toward as sisting earnest inquirers and investigators, and for the defence of mediums against unwise and injurious exactions. In my letter to Mr. Lamb, of Chicago, in answer to his inquiries respecting the phenomena at Terre Haute, published in your issue of June 28. I had, of necessity, to omit many things with regard to the philosophy of materializations wh ch facts demonstrate, that ought to be more generally and better understood. And I would like to pursue this subject forther, in a few articles to MIND AND MATTER, should my health permit.

As a starting point, let me restate what I showed in that letter, viz: That the materialized form in Which the spirit has incased uself for the time, is merely an efficy, an ecvelope, all artificial, and the attempt ma be a success and it may be imperfect in many ways, according to circumstances. And these imperfections are no evidence of fraud on the part of the medium or spirits. All the life there is it pertains to the substance as separated from the medium's living organism, like flesh cut away in vivisections. But, a d I do beg the reader to mark this contrast, because it is most important and should never, no never, be forgotten, that flesh is wholly sep-

A Sociable and Most Profitable ton, Chicago and Philadelphia join hands, through plainly as the rapport between the needle and the magnetic pole. This is called "attraction," and you may call that attraction, too, if you please, or nagnetic or vital or psychological, or a "predominant idea," (to please Dr. Carpenter). There is not much in a name when we cannot define the reality. In such cases it is only a stick scientists use to punch at something they do not understand, either to poke it into a shape to suit themselves, or poke it out of their way.

And the very first thing investigators ought to observe, and our "scientifie" pig-heads study, is the predominance and force of this rapport or nexus, and realize that it has got to be treated according to the workings of its law, to produce its normal results, good and correct manifestations, just as assuredly as the magnetic attraction must be treated according to the workings of its laws, to oring out its normal correct results. Interrupt this magnetic rapport, or counteract, it through is norant curiosity or "test conditions" and the needle becomes shaken, wandering and frantic, and you can get nothing correct or satisfactory, and nobody else, as long as that interference with the current s persisted in. It is the same with this mediumstic rapport, only worse. In the former case you can spoil a compass; in this, destroy a medium, soul and body. I return to the miterialization. It has neither heart-heat nor pulse, only when the spirit within chooses to produce an imitation o gratify curiosity, or show its power; and then i can have only one, or both. It is beyond their power to organize an independent, self-acting cirmiating system. If they could do so, the effigy would possess a physical life centred in itself which would require the whole nervous structure also. It would be a physical body, and might be separated from its nexus with the medium, as the infant at birth, and sensations could be realized in it wholly separated from the medium. Reincarna tion would be possible into every stage of life.

apon that take effect in the medium's organism. To further illustrate our subject and to make clear the points I want to bring out, I recur to the nesmerizer and his subject.

When the mesmerizer puts his subject in perfect sympathy with himself, he cuts off, through his outrol, the connection between the subject's physical and spiritual systems, and forms a direct rap port between his spiritual brain and the subject's brain. Injure the physical of the subject and he does not realize it, because the connection is suspended between his physical body and his true sensorium, the spiritual brain. But injure the operator and he feels it immediately, because the rapport is between his spiritual brain and the sub-Whatever sensations are conducted to the operator's sensorium are conducted to his subject' also. And whatever ideas he may choose to send out, through the force of his will, go direct to the suspending of the subject, and by his will he controls his subject entranced, as the control does the medium. For the time being, this point alone being considered the subject might as well be without a physical brain, could it be removed and restored without lesions.

But here comes in an important contrast. The subject's body is not made up of substances taken from the body of the operator, and held in rapport with it, to hold unmodified their inherent chemica status, that they may be returned as they were before, and his physical organism suffer no injury, a is the case with the medium. Consequently, he neither feels nor receives any it juries from whatever injuries may be inflicted on his subject. the medium does; because all that has been taken from his or her organism for the materialization must be restored, and exactly restored, or the consequences to the nedium must be serious.

I have seen Belle Pervis, a control, several times cut out and give away pieces of her dress among the company, and restore the dress by passing he hand over those places she had cut away. I have piece she gave me. But latterly they decline to do this, because, as spirit George says, "it uses up so much of the power (forces) taken from the me dium." Of course, as anyone might see, ail the forces taken from the medium not restored, the system must afterwards restore by extra labor, or do without. And, in either case, it would be wast ing his or her vitality.

Some persons are so constitutionally mediumistic, that their contact will impart strength to the materialized form. Others (I think the majority far) are the reverse. Said Mrs. Teed (a good materializing medium here, and a bright, good spirit now), during one of her materializations at terre Haute, to Miss Thayer, a clairvoyant and clairaudient, whom she often visits: "Do not le go of my hand; let me hold it; for you give me strength, as d I can stay longer." But myself, like housands of others, am an absorbent. Of all my friends, over there, that I love, and that love me. my father is the only one that can endure contact with my flesh beyond a brief hand-shaking. Consequently, when I am very close to them, it weak-ens them proportionately. As much as I have regretted this, I cannot help it. Father has sufficient volume of will power to counteract this absorbing tendency; while the rest weaken and soon with fraw from the touch of my hand. Now, as much as any one absorbs from them is irretrievably taken from the mediums.

The preceeding has opened out the following mportant truth or law to be observed by investigation

They should never rudely seize, nor roughly handle any materialized form. There are proper and judicious ways to detect impositions, but this is not one of them. To recur again to the mesme rizer who prepares a patient for a surgical operation, as that has several times been done.

The control, Minnie, is the mesmerizer. who mesmerizes the patient, Mrs. Stewart, into a profound trance, and watches that she is held in tha state till the close of the seance. The materializng spirit workers are the surgeons, who perform heir surgical operations upon her by extracting from her body the substances used mostly in the manifestations. If what is thus taken is not re placed exactly and correctly before her restoration o consciousues, it leaves her in the same condiion of the patient restored from the mesmeri rance after the surgical operation has been finish ed; and the shock to the system, in either case will be in proportion to the injury inflicted. It may be severe enough to prevent recovery; and, in some cases, has done it.

When will those people (including scientists pious dogmatists, materialists, and those inco siderate and rash persons who feel savage, unreason ng, or cross at all discoveries in psychological ealms) become wise and considerate enough reat mediums as they ought to be treated?

In the seance room the me itums should be re garded more as patients than as robust persons. The social atmosphere should be made harmonious cheerful, affectionate, hopeful and aspiring. During he seance all should be orderly, genial, pleasant vith aspirations out of our very souls for the spiritial and elevating. Then the highest and most satisfactory manifestations can be attained.

I am not a Carpenter "expert," nor a Beard trained mind " nor a Tyndal "scientist," nor a Faraday "indicator;" nor have I got Dr. Fairfield's "larvated epilepsy" on the brain—thank heaven! But I have had a long experience without being chained to any theory, like a masculine sheep to his sweep, to "swing around the circle," and push my "trained" head at everything that crosses ny path. But I can say, without fear of refuta ion, that the correct and consistent way to investigate these phenomena, is to first supply the right and needed conditions on our part, and leave the medium perfectly free. Then observe the number. the variety, the nature, the character, the forms and phases of the manifestations, without trying to conform them to former opinions, or feeling any naste for conclusions. Judge from the whole and ill features of the manifestations according to relaive importance and clearness, as one would do, to listinguish a genuine from a counterfeit note; eaving out, for the time, all fanciful desires as to now they might have been done. Do this, and the 'crucial tests" will come in due time.

All have their methods, I went first to Terre Haute, nearly five years ago. Profiting by my experiences through hundreds of crude seances in rmer years, encountering in many of them things dissatisfactory, unsatisfactory, comical, and silly enough to furnish timber sufficient for all the conflicting theories gotton up by those "trained minds and experts," to fight back one patent fact, spirit manifestations. I, at first, only noticed silently what was in the open cabinet, and weighed the sayings and doings of the committee and meperceive their inward motives. But I watched the manifestations in themselves and evening in some of the seances, this varying from a negro's plantation dre s. brogans, boots, and all, to gentlemen and ladies dresses of different colors styles and qualities, up to the finest and most delicate fabrics, and each manifestation through the services, had a dress in e-sential respects, peculiar to his or herself. During that visit, I saw thirty different spirits materialized, many of them several times. On the fourth day I told the doctor, in compliance with his frequent invitations, that I was ready to examine the cabinet and premises He went up and assisted me to turn up the plat form, look up the ventilating register, gave me the keys, and left me to myself. The result was the same as all examinations have demonstrated. That cabinet is certainly fraud-proof.

As to test conditions, if a person is not a medium, put him under them, and he can give no manifestations. If the medium is but partially developed, and the conditions imposed inflict discomfort and annoy, they will be very likely to prevent any manifestations. tests in this case, as disorderly and rough proceedings in a seance, perhaps not quite so sure, but no less it jurious. Where it is known that a person is a medium "strict test coudi ions" are not only worthless but injurious. The spirits show Mrs. Stewart while they manifest 'hemselves; under control she rings a bell white they are out, thumps the tambourine, or pats with her foot. Sometimes the materialization leads her to the front of the cabinet, and they stand there side by side. Once while I was conversing with my mother as she was sitting in a chair by my side in front of the rostrum, a 'luminous' hand was seen by all, up at the top and in the corner of the open cabinet furthest from the medium, six or eight feet out of her reach, ringing a bell, and Mrs. S'ewart in sight in her chair in a profound trance. These are only a sample of ever recurring tests. What canperson can demand any further "test conditions?" If some will not be satisfied with such, let them go till they become tractable enough to be satisfied with less. Their cavils deserve no notice. Would it add anything to the certainty that the manifestations were spiritual, if the committee would allow these test screechers to tie Mrs. Stewart hand and-foot, put onion poultices over eyes; stuff one of their stockings in her mouth; sew her up in a sack; and, then, if any manifestations came, require that a lighted lamp should be put into the cabinet, and augur holes bored for them to peep into and to punch through with sticks at the sack to make sure she was there? After all this, if no manifestations came, such Saturs could report that "the seance was not satisfactory under their reasonable test conditions, and they could not ecommend the medium."

Mr. Morgan, on the start, puts Laura under three good test conditions, and, during the scance, the spirits add a fourth. First—Her hands are filled with flour, so she cannot use them without detection. Second-She places her aims behind her. and her sleeves are sewed together with strong linen toread, so she can only get them loose by tearing her sleeves. Third—A strong, fitting brass belt or band is put around her waist, and any stranger can lock the clasp and keep the key. Then she sits down in her chair in the cabinet, which has been open to examination, and the stranger puts a strong leather thong through a staple of the band at her back, and thrusts the ends through two holes and ties them on the outside as secure as he pleases. Fourth—Before the doors are closed a cord is hung on a nail at the opposite end of the cabinet from Laura. Sometime in the seance that cord is wound around her several times over the brass belt, and tied with knots behind that make quite a puzzle to untie.

During the seances, the spirits, as they come out and go into the cabinet, show her in her fastenings. All things considered, it is doubtless prudent and convincing for Mr. Morgan to put his daughter ander those onerous test conditions. But I dislike them; They are as abhorrent to me as gratifying to others. I believe that her being tied down in that unnatural position for her arms, and one confined posture of her body, for two long hours, increases her physical exhaustion, weakens the manifestations and retards her promising development, and that they are utterly useless, except for those who want child's play to convince them. The English savants who have been investigating (as tar as I now recollect) never resort to them. Let the spirits give me the tests when they can and bev deem proper, without my dictation. When I have private seances at Laura's, I always invite her to go into the cabinet free. At the first request her father rather hesitated, but finally said, if the company would be satisfied, he would not object, provided Laura was willing. I read him. He wanted no cavilling over the manifestations, after the seance, because she was not under "strict test conditions." And I do not wonder at his apprehensions, in view of the way mediums are treated. Now for the result. In one of the after seances I was invited up to the cabinet to converse with a materialized spirit. This brought me so that I stood in front of Laura, who was sitting in her chair, with my side and back partly towards her. While I was conversing the spirit, I felt a hand, first placed on my shoulder and drawing at my collar as if to draw my attention. I looked around; Laura, under control stood there looking at me and smiling. She took my hand. I said, in my surprise, "Why, Laura, is this you?" "It is m," she said, with a laugh; and we enjoyed other pleasant remarks over the surprise. There stood the material zation observing, nterested and smiling, at what was passing, and facing both Laura and myself, Laura facing me, having hold of my hand, pleasantly laughing and conversing. The interview was exceedingly de-lightful. The manifestation was a perfect test, occular, tangible and auricular Others witnessed it-every one in the room. There is not one weak point or flaw in this test anywhere for cavillers to b aze away at with their blunderbusses.

And the considerate reader will note this: That was a test that I could not have received, nor been worthy of, had I insisted that "all materializing mediums should be put under strict test condi-

Many of the Jews would not believe in the spirit manifestatious through Jesus' mediumship. So they put him under "strict test conditions" cross, and said: "Now, if he gives us manifesta-tions, we will believe." But the manifestations not coming, they kept him under their "strict test conditions" till they killed him. Then they bethought themselves of a sudden, that those Spiritualist disciples might play off a manifestation against them, and so they put his sepulchre under "strict test conditions." They went it vehemently for test conditions. Still they would not be convinced; and so they engaged those concerned withthem to testify that "the disciples" did it all. So that ring of conspirators among the Cambridge Professors testified against their young student Dr. Willis. So other cliques of conspirators have done against the Fox sisters, Dr. Slade, Mr. Mumler, Mr. Williams, of England, the Holmeses, Mrs. Teed, Mr. Bastian, the Davenport Brothers, Mrs. Havely, the Eddys, and others; Dr. Carpenter, at random, against everyone within his reach; and Dr. G. H. Lewes, to his everlasting shame, against Mrs. Dr. Hayden. The saying of those old conspirators "were commonly reported" among the Jews, as the sayings of these conspirators are, as yet, commonly reported among the people, but are on the wane.

JOSEFE WOOD,

ship of Alfred James, July 17, M. S., 32, and taken down by the editor of MIND AND MATTER.

GOOD MORNING. SIR:—I believed in this way of communicating both when I was a mortal and since as a spirit. I have seen the demonstrations of the spirit working on man, and, therefore, I was better prepared to enter the spiritual life. I have been very much troubled to try and rectify many mistakes made while in the mortal flesh. I would say to those who weakly yield their best judgment to earn popularity, that they will suffer the torments claimed for the damned. How many men there are, who, f om positions in church affairs every day of their lives, give their honest convictions away and preach that which they know, in their own consciences, is a lie. But men are born and brought up in their young days to certain faiths, creeds and beliefs, and we en they grow older and a nore mature judgment begins to act, they stiffe their best feelings in rder that they may live in harmony with their associates. But he knows the truth, and proclaims it not, will, in the spirit-life, be scourged fearfully by remorse. So be wise in time—ra se your voice—"cry aloud and spare not," and you will be rewarded in the spirit even if you are tortured in the flesh. That finishes what I have to say.

EDWARD R. AMES, Bishop of the Episcopal Church of Baltimore, Mo

GOOD MORNING, SIR:-I regarded Spiritualism as a delusion when I was here; but then I was by no means a bigoted man. In fact, I always recognized one thing, that all persons must have a be lief of some kind in regard to the future life; and this crops out in a very peculiar way and is some times very laughable. I had every chance to ob serve this, and I believe that persons are more easily deluded upon religious subjects than in regard t anything else that I know of. I was a reporter for the press, engaged in many places all over the country, and have now a penchant for gossiping around in the spirit-life; and, as I can go everywhere, in fact have a free foot, I calculate that I shall be enabled very soon to send my old friends some startling information by means of a spiritual telegraph. Sign me, CHESTER F. HULL, San Francisco, Cal.

GOOD MORNING, SIR:-I fell very quick. Sure your hor or will let anybody come. Sure I wish to send to my friend Annie. They are all Catholics, sure, and won't believe a word of it. Wait till they come here and we'll play the divil wid 'em Do ye mind, I went to spirit world in a strange way. Some of us girls worked in a shop. bought milk that was poisoned, and I and another girl died for it in Cleveland, Ohio. Good bye. MARY McDEVITT.

GOOD MORNING, SIR:—I wish to send a few words to a friend of mine, also to a relative, and i will reach them through your paper. In the mortal life I was a medium. The manifestations occurred long before me or my friends knew anything about spiritual matters. My mother will be pleased to read this, I think. I am happy and have from troubles of all kinds, but still like to visit my port of the proposed enterprise. old friends here in earth form I went young spliit-life. You will sign me, Sorhia F. Anoonie, South English, lowa. To Mary, Lincolnville, Ind.

Good Morning:-I come here this morning because this gentleman comes. (Mr. Colby, of the Banner of Light, who had just called.) That is, I was drawn here through following him. I came from the part of the country he comes from, to say a few words. I have read your paper many times when here (addressing Mr. Colby), and our friends are very much interested in the Spiritual philosophy and manifestations. I died young, and had hardly time to fulfil my mission I have made this a study in the spirit-life, where you can get much more knowledge of Spiritual things. 1 am too weak to say any more.

SARAH K. TITUS, Keily's island, Obio.

GOOD MORNING TO THEE, FRIEND :- Thee mus know that I. as a spirit, still desire to give thee all the useful, practical information that it is possible to do in using another's organism Never reject the spirit; throw thyself open to it; invoke it; and, at all times, it will be a light to thy feet whe, thee treads in dark places. In spirit, I have been rejoined to all those that were investigating the Spiritual phenomena when I was here in the mortal Thee may think it strange that of our little circle that were investigating the spirits' return to earth, all have been gathered to the spirit-life; and there, I will tell thee our little circle continues, prominent among whom is my old friend Judge Edmonds And thee must know that this circle has been enabled to do much good in the after or spirit-life. We all work with a will, and we are all humanitarians, with hearts that beat for the good of all spirits and all mortals. Thee may sign

ISAAC T. HOPPER, New York City.

[It is a fact that Friend Hopper was a member of the circle of which Judge John Edmonds was the most distinguished. At the time of his transition to spirit-life, the circle was in session. A few minutes after that event the spirit of Friend Hopper appeared at the circle and communicated with his friends. He died at a very advanced age. He was, in the truest sense of the word, a humanituian, I is long and useful life having been larg ly spent in acts of benevolence.]

WE cheerfully acknowledge, on the part of Dr. . B. Taylor and ourself, the compliment which Colonel Bundy paid us, in withholding from the readers of the Journal the official announcement of our names as among the speakers who are to address the Neshaminy Falls Grove Camp Meeting, now being so successfully held at Willet Station. Penna. Col. Bundy may have been foolish enough to suppose that he was insulting us by that petty manifestation of spite; but we assure him that his intended insult fell upon his own readers whose good sense he questions, and upon the members and managers of the First Association of Spiritualists of Philadelphia, who honored us by naming us as among their selected speakers. If it were not that we know Col. Bundy to be a medium for very malicious spirits, it might be in his power to make us feel unkind towards him; as it is we can only pity him and labor to deliver him from the evil influences that we know are to blame for all his irra-

WE have received the specimen number of The Rational Appeal, the proposed Spiritual and Liberal weekly paper, to be published at Lansing, Mich., by S. B. McCracken, Esq. This initial number cannot be considered a fair sample of the intended publication, for a large part of it is devoted to information concerning the State Camp Meeting, which opens to-day, at Lansing. Indeed, its editor says this little sheet is placed before the public as a specimen in size and style of a paper which, it is believed, would be adapted to the present demands and requirements of the spiritualistic and liberal sentiment of Michigan. Should the anticipations of its projector be realized, and the publication be permanently entered upon, we will heartily welcome The Rational Appeal as a most desirable reinforcement in the Spiritual Movement. The enterprise, energy and tact displayed by Mr. McCracken will, we feel confident, carry it through, if once he decides to proceed with it. The West especially needs a liberal, spiritual, independent journal, and we earnestly hope the Spiritualists of reached the position in spirit-life, where I am free | Michigan and the Northwest will rally to the sup-

> "DANGER SIGNALS," as well as "storm signals," are in order in the domain of Spiritualism, if we may judge from the activity of "spirit enemies of Spiritualism." These adroit and sleepless deceivers were never more busy than they are now, that their movements and purposes are being laid bare. Even Col. Bundy begins to realize that others are in danger of their arts, even though he is himself "Diakka" proof and invulnerable thereto. In his last he says:

"We are sorry to find such language as the following in an address by Dr. J. R. Buchanan, de-livered May 25, 1879, at Republican Hall, New York: 'I speak of Jesus Christ as a present living friend, in sympathy with whom, and in accordance with whose wishes, I am proceeding in the establishment of this church for the renovation and restoration of his religion."

We have never seen the address above referred to, and, therefore, do not know how correctly Dr. Buchanan is therein reported; but if that learned and able Spiritualist used that language (which admits of but one interpretation), he was, at the time he uttered it, a victim of the deceiving arts of the spirit enemies of himself, as well as the cause he has so long and ably advocated. We trust Dr. Buchanan will publish the facts which he thinks justified him in using that language. If they are good and valid, the world ought to be made acquainted with them, and if there are no such facts. the sooner they know that the better. MIND AND MATTER is at your service, Doctor. Will you favor us and our readers with a reply?

From an Earnest Worker.

MR. EDITOR:—There is an old legend to this effect, that, "Once upon a time," a child was born "away down East." He was born of a virgin, without father, or natural paternity; but was begotten t the gods, or ascende t herces, or some one of them. When he was born, as the story goes, a bright light moved before some "wise men," who were investigators of all phenomena. They, lacking in astronomical lore, supposed this light to be a new "star" that the Creator had added to the galaxy of the skies. But if it were anything at all, it was most likely, what we call a "spirit light." Another statement in this ancient legend is, that at the birth of this wonderful cuild the angels from God, out of heaven came down to earth, and sang a beautiful song of jubilee, filling the air with their sweet voices of thanksgiving.
It is supposed that it was from this yery ancient legend that the beautiful story in Luke's Gospel chap. II, was taken. Be this as it may, my purpurposes in this brief article are served. It is doubtless a matter of rejoicing with the angels, or spirits, as well as mortals, when a "proper child" is born into this our sphere. This was doubtless true when Socrates, Homer, Hestod, Zoroaster, Confucius, Jesus, Luther, Wesley. Swedenborg, and others of like character were born. Why? Because they were needed. The time had fully come when they, by their greater powers-which were evolved out of their surroundings-could give the world a "boast." So one has been an improvement on the other, according to this law of evolution.

So also in the arts great improvements have been made. We have gone beyond the hieroglyphics, or papyrus, or the leaves of trees, or inside bark, or parchment, or stone, in the record of important facts. We can now print, with ink and type, thousand of pages every day. So the angels progress rejoice at every turning of the wheel. It is a punderous—a miguty wheel! And somebody gets hurt at every revolution; and from our standpoint, we say it is so unfortunate, often, that many, many of the most efficient workers are crushed death. Poor, dear, old Bruno was one; Michael Surveius was another. Now for the application of these facts. The angels of heaven and earth rejoiced, and do rejoice, that another child has been born; for it is a fact, and "the mother and child are doing well." The accouchment was perfect, and a sweeter, happier, brighter tace I have not seen in a long time. Auc the child has been baptised, not by a gowned priest or mitered bishop, but by the good angels of pro-gress; and they call his name (for it is a man child) MIND AND MATTER. But be is a little giant only a few months old; and he not only grands alone, but walks abroad, and talks like a

CHARLES YIESLEY, late of Cedar Rapids, Iowa, philosopher. Of course, the angels and all truly good and progressive souls, who know anything about the spiritual philosophy, rejoice that this new-born paper—your MIND AND MATTER, Mr. Roberts—has come to the world at this particular

> Why at this particular time? Because the angel world, as never before, is on trial; the mediums, through whom the spirit world speaks, are set upon by ignorant beasts, who know about as much about the mysterious laws of magnetism and mediumship as a "pig does about a holiday." And some of our weak-kueed friends sit down, because they are weak; or stand by and fold their arms, or skulk away into the shade, or, like old l'eter, deny and curse and swear, while others stand up and boldly oppose mediums and mediumship. How strange this is, and yet they call themselves Spiritualists, but deny the very thing that brought them out of superstition. What would they have known of a real existence beyond the grave, if it had not been for mediumship? Even some of the papers that have been born of and have grown fat on Spiritualism, now doubt, assail, and oppose; while (strange to say) some spiritual societies employ known and avowed anti-Spiritualists to lecture on their plat forms. They call themselves "Scientists," and think that when they die all wisdom will die with them, but really have only the merest smattering of what other men have said. These are the opportunity neuts of mediums.

BROTHER ROBERTS:—Having waited in vain for some one of the papers to notice the transition of Brother Frank Pulsifer, one of Bricksburg's most worthy citizens and a true friend to Spiritualism, I am impressed to say that his transition was only another proof of the immortality of the soul. He was well known as a Spiritualist. He was a man of refined nature, upright in his dealings, kind and affectionate to his family, and beloved by a large circle of friends. He left us for a higher life. was invited to conduct the funeral services, and was controlled to speak from the text-"Behold! I send the comforter." Dr. Marston led the singing, and all joined in singing his favorite hymns-"Watching at the beautiful gate" and "Angels are hovering 'round."

Looking up in his wife's face, several times during his last night in earth-life, he exclaimed, "Do you see father? There he is! he has come for me! Oh! do see him! Why, there he is! he has come to take me over." The expression of his face changed, and seemed to light up with angelic radiant light, and reaching out his hands to his father who stood in spirit form beside him, he cried out "Ob, let me go! I long to be there!" A glorious transition into the higher life. What could be more convincing? Do dying men lie? No! Here is proof. The influence during the funeral services, which were conducted in the orthodox church, was wonderful, being entirely under spirit control. All realized that the comforter was there, and the keen pang of separation was entirely removed by the spirit presence of Brother Pulsifer himself. Glory to God—there is no death!

Respectfully and fraternally your sister, S. K. WILSON.

Congestion Cured.

The following unsolicited letter has just been received by me, and I publish it for the benefit of others suffering as this lady did:

ROCHESTER, July 13, 1879. Dr. Stone-Sir:-1 teel impelled to express my gratuude and my full appreciation of the benefits received through the treatments at the "Cure," during my recent attack of congestion of the lungs. In the early autumn of 1877, I had a most severe and malignant attack of malarial fever and congestion combined, since which time my lungs have never regained their n rmal condition until now. and for months past had steadily grown weaker, though naturally very strong. A few years since, my physical system had run to a very low ebb. This spring, I had the proverbial slight cold, with no vitality left to combat, fastened its fangs upon me and brought me face to face with that dreaded d sease, congested lungs. However, the sequel proved a blessing in disguise, for it took me into the Condensed Air Baths, which treatment has en-tirely restored the healthful condition of my lungs and dissipated the weakness under which I labored for eighteen months, consequent on that first at-Since my restoration through condensed air, I certainly feel confident in recommending the Cure to those afflicted with that acute disease. Moreover, I am confident from its effect upon my sluggish liver that it is the panacea for that insidious evil-torpid liver. Hoping, sir, you may in the happy future establish many "Condensed Air Cures" for the weal of suffering humanity.

VERB. SAT. SAP.

Though many months have passed since the advertisement of the well-known medium, Mrs. A. H. Robinson, who has so faithfully and acceptably served the public in her special calling for a period of twenty-three years, has been published in any Spiritual paper, she takes great pleasure through the columns of MIND AND MATTER, to say to her many friends and well-wishers, and those who may need or desire her services, that she has removed from 394 to 1533 8 Dearborn street, Chicago, 111, and ever ready as heretofore, to do all in her power to bring relief to the sick, bind up the wounds of the afflicted, and answer all letters of anxious inquiry in the promptest manner. She has secured the services of one of the best magnetic healers in the country—a lady—who will be in attendance, to treat patients magnetically when ever desired.

MRS. A. H. ROBINSON.

Healing Psychometric & Business Medium C. W. NEWNAM, MRS. ROBINSON, while under spirit control, on MRS. ROBINSON, while under spirit control, on receiving a lock of hair of a sick patient, will diagnose the disease most perfectly, and prescribe the proper remedy. Yet, as the most speedy cure is the essential object in view rather than to gratify idle curiosity, the better practice is to send along with a lock of hair, a brief statement of the sex. age, leading symptoms, and the length of time the patient has been sick; when she will, without delay, return a most potent prescription and remedy for eradicating the potent prescription and remedy for eradicating the disease, and permanently curing all curable cases. Of herself she claims no knowledge of the healing art, but when her spirit guides are brought en rapport with a sick person, through her mediumship, they never fail to give immediate and permanent relief, in curable cases, through the positive and negative forces latent in the system and in nature. This prescription is sent by mail, and be it an internal or external application, it should be given or applied precisely as directed in the accompanying letter of instructions, however simple it may seem to be; remember it is not the quantity of the compound, but the chemical effect that is produced, that science takes cognizance of.

One prescription is usually sufficient, but in case the patient is not permanently cured by one prescription, the application for a second, or more if required should be made in about ten days after the last, each time stating any changes that may be apparent in the symptoms of the disease.

MR - ROBIN ON also, through her mediumship, diagnoses the disease of any one who calls upon her MKN. KUBIN ON also, through her mediumship, diagnoses, the disease of any one who calls upon her at her residence. The facility with which the spirits controlling her accomplish the same, is done as well when the application is by letter, as when the patient is present. Her gifts are very remarkable, not only in the healing art, but as a psychometric and business medium.

TERMS:—Diagnosis and first prescription, $3.00 each subsequent one, $2.00. Psychometric Delineation of character. $3.00. Answering business letters The money should accompany the application o insure a reply.

Hereafter all charity applications, to insure a reply, must contain one dollar, to defray the expenses of reporter, amanuensis, and postage.

N. B.—Mrs Robinson, will hereafter give no private sittings to any one. If privacy is required, it must be by letter, accompanied with the usual fee; and terms above stated, must be strictly complied with, or no notice will be taken of letters sent.

MRS. A. H. ROBINSON'S

Wonderful Success in Healing the Sick. The cures performed in all parts of the country through the mediumship of Mrs A. H. Robmson, are no less remarkable than those recorded in the Bible. A lock of the sick person's hair, sent in a letter, and held in her hand enables her to accurately diagnose the disease and prescribe the remedy. One of her spirit guides go in person to every patient and often make their presence known.

During the years 1874 and 1875, Mrs. Robinson treated 6442 patients by letter, and over 2000, who called upon her in person A majority of these cases had been given up as incurable by the regular attending physicians—most of whom speedily recovered under Mrs. Robinson's treatment, without a change from the first prescription.

MRS. ROBINSON'S TOBACCO ANTIDOTE. The above named sure remedy for the appetite for tobacco in all its forms. is for sale at her office. Sent to any part of the country by mail, on receipt of $2.00 It is warranted to cure the most inveterate user of the weed, when the directions of each box are followed. Newspapers and quacks will tell you that this antidote is made from gentian root. It is false. Gentian root is no remedy for the appetite for tobacco, but it is injurious to health to use it. Mrs. Robinson's Tobacco Antidote tones up the system and restores it to its normal condition, as it was before imbibing the hankering desire for a poisonous weed. It is a remedy presented by a band of chemists long in spirit-life, and is warranted to be perfectly harmless. Send for circuis warranted to be perfectly harmless. Send for circular and testimonials, 1533 South Dearnborn St., Chica

ATTENTION, OPIUM EATERS!

Mrs. A. H. Robinson, the celebrated Spirit Medium, has been furnished with a sure and harmless specific for curing the appetite for opium and all other narcotics, by the Board of Chemists, in Spirit Life, who heretofore gave her the necessary antidote for curing the appetite for tobacco, and a hair restorative for bald heads. One box of the remedy is usually sufficient to effiect a cure. Price $5 a box. Address Mrs. A. H. Robinson, 1533 Dearborn Street; Chicago, Ill. Send lock of hair, and state how long used and the quantity taken, and Mrs. Robinson will diagnose the case, and furnish the Opium Remedy, which is now coming so extensively into use, and has already cured thousands of poor sufferers, one of which reports as follows: onts as follows:

Mrs. A. H. Robinson. 1533 Dearborn Street, Chicago, Ill.—Words cannot express my thanks to you and the good angels for providing a remedy to free me from that tyrant—oplum. I took the last dose a month ago. I have a little in the house but have no desire to touch it. I took about two-thirds of the box of remedy. For a few weeks I have been troubled with a female complaint that I had when I commenced taking mopphine, but now begin to feel stronger and better. I think your medicine is just what it is recomended to be. I shall try to get others to use it who are in slavery as I was. Hoping you may be rewarded for the good you are doing. I remain yours,

AGNES VAN AERNAM,

Mrs. A. H. Robinson, 1533 Dearborn Street, Chicago, Dear Madam:—Words will fail me to express my gratitude for the great and good result, you have effected, in curing my sister of that cursed babit of using morphine. Ancient and Modern Tim's Compared

By Joseph Beals, Greenfield, Mass. In this neatly executed brochure of 40 pages, Dr. Joseph Beals, the well-known and popular Preside t of the Lake Pleasant Camp Meeting Association, has brought together a mass of evidence ancient and molern—welded in firm fashion, and bearing the proof of its reliability on its face—which, circulated proof of its reliability on its lace—which, circulated as it should be among churchmen and investigators who are just beginning to inquire concerning the spiritual phenomena and philosophy, cannot fail of producing the most clearly defined results. WHAT SHALL I DO TO BE SAVED?

BY T. P. NORTON.

To this great momentous question Jesus answered, once for all; Leaving nought to blind suggestion Where a penalty might fall; Yet no sound of condemnation Chilled his loving words of truth: Uttered without hesitation To the rich, misguided youth, Nor a hope of absolution As a scapegoat for his pride, Naught but laws of restitution Could complete his future guide.

"Go and sell," without reserving. All which earthly riches bought; All which to the undeserving Is with fatal mischief fraught; Every source of sin's beguiling. Held by an unwise control, And of passion's low bewiling Which degrade the human soul; All thy stolen earth possessions Earned by toller's sweat and gore: With all due and just concessions Must thou "Give back to the poor."

FACTS FOR CONSIDERATION.

RIVERSIDE, May 25. FRIEND ROBERTS :- I wish to say a few words in connection with some events referred to by your correspondent, Gen. Edwards, from Washingto C., in May 17th of MIND AND MATTER. I most fully believe that when Victoria C. Woodhull attacked the mediums, she attacked a power greater than that of H. W. Beecher, and said so at the time; and I also believe as fully that Mrs. Stewart of Terre Haute is a genuine materializing medium. I rejoice in her success, and in the grand reward that has come to friends Pence and Hook for their faithful and persevering efforts; but facts are facts, and justice is justice. How much Mrs. S. may have been under the control of opposing or Jesuitical spirits, or how much her spirit control may have been taken captive by these same opposing powers in spirit life, she being thus neglected for a time, by proxy, as it were, to the enemy, this I cannot say; but that she was caught tricking at that time, I have proof that it would be impossible to make me doubt or question. I am well aware that the real Mrs. Stewart may have had no more to do with this, and even when caught, in explaining to the committee how she did it, and showing what they had not yet discovered. I am well aware that Mrs. S. may have had no more to do with this, so far as her real self was concerned, than has the subject who is controlled by the psychologist in doing what he performs through the will of the earthly and visible controls. Still it was done, and in order to vindicate her or any other medium, it is not well to ignore facts and denounce unjustly. I knew a medium, who I believe was as true as the sunlight, whose control was made the victim of conditions, and played such a trick upon nor if living. Her control called himself Sampson, of Bible The conditions required were a common fall-leaf table, and a cloth thrown over it dropping to the floor. Others might prepare this rude cabi net, choosing their own table-cloth, chair for the medium to sit on, etc.; and this might be done at home or abroad, in a private house or the public hall. The medium would then take a seat at one end of the table with her feet just under the cover, and sit quietly with the rest of her person in plain sight. The only change of positions I ever noticed was from a resting of her hands upon the table, to her as nearly crushed her. This was Mary Jordan

of Muncie, Indiana. I know not where she is now, resting one elbow upon the table and her head upon her hand. I have not the time nor space to describe the various manifestations, but I once sat down at the opposite end of the table, put my foot just under the cover, it being not less than two or three feet from the medium, and my gaiter was unlaced and pulled off by what, judging by the feeling, was a pair of large hands not exactly used to such work. Miss Jordan went to Richmond, Indiana, and in seance there her gaiter was found off, and a hole in her stocking some two inches long, evidently cu with a knife, and the conclusion heralded to the world was that she did these things with her toes. She must have had wonderful strength in her toes and wonderfully flexible joints to enable her to make a large table move up and down to the time of music, and not a visible movement of her person. But what were the facts of the case? Two young physicians and their skeptical friends determined to learn how the thing was done. Some two or three seances had been held, and the mystery was still unsolved, and so confident was the medium in the power that controlled, that at this particular seance there were only skeptics in the room. She had on a pair of new elastic gaiters, and falling into a half-unconscious condition, she was aroused and shown her gaiter off and stocking cut. Spiritualists in the house, but not in the room, were called, and word was heralded abroad that Mary Jordan had been exposed, and, though vindicating herself in another seance, the retraction of her accusers did not reach as far as their accusa-

Now what did the control say in reference to the facts?" "I pulled off your gaiter; I took a penknife from the window and cut your stocking." "Oh, Sampson, how could you serve me such a

The doctors claimed that she did it with her toes and were seeking to prove it, but what would com-mon sense have said? Simply that it would be impossible for a person to pull off and put on a new elastic gaiter without the help of the hands, and, therefore, the medium would have known better, had she designed trickery, than to attempt what she must know she could not accomplish without detection.

The magnetic power of the opposition evidently took control of the medium's control; so in the case of Mrs. Stewart, at Chicago. There was a terrible battle fought at that convention between opposing forces in the invisible realm. The contend ing hosts must have known of its coming and prepared for it, while the higher powers looked on and permitted what would be educational and disciplinary to both parties. Shall we say that Mrs. Stewart's immediate control, feeling the coming pressure, did not prompt her medium to prepare for it? Or shall we say that the opposing forces in the guise of friends did not suggest to said control the necessity of such preparation, thus hoping to accomplish the defeat of the medium?

For one, I dare not say that one or both of the above was not true. But if it were proven that Mrs. S. did in and of herself, without any foreign influence, intentionally cheat at that time, and at divers other times, it has been most fully proven that she is a medium for genuine manifestations, and what are the opposers of Spiritualism going to do about it.

I will simply add, in the words of C. Fanny Allyn, the results of cabinet and dark seances "depend altogether upon who attends." As soon as time permits I will send von some account of Jesuitical and other influences in Southern California.

Yours, for truth and progress,
Lois Waisbrooker. P. S.—Dr. Cooper, of Bellfontaine, O., spoken of n connection with "Billy's" picture, is cognizant of the above facts and knows how true, as a woman and as a medium, Mary Jordan was.

A. J. DAVIS AND SP.RITUALISM.

[The following highly appreciated article from the pen of Professor Tooliey, was by some accident misplaced, and could not be found until the present moment. Although written six mouths since, and when especially called for by the high antics of A. J. Davis and his followers, in their efforts to subordinate Modern Spiritualism to what they term Harmonial Philosophy, it is none the less appropriate at this time. Mr. Davis and those who seek to rule, or failing in that, to impede the Spiritual movement, need just such a call to halt as Professor Toohey has given them.] Editor of Mind and Matter:

DEAR SIR:-After an absence of nearly five months from home, I returned a few days since, and found some copies of your newly issued and handsomely gotten up paper awaiting me. Wife had done me the kindness to forward the earliest numbers, which were read with more than usual interest, and then put into the hands of Spiritualists and Materialists for examination. What the result will be I must leave for time and better circumstances to determine, as there is too much financial poverty among the Liberalists in Central New York, to hope much from any of them, so long as "the poorer classes" continue so numerous, and "the wherewithall" to help you in publishing your paper is so very hard to get, and so very difficult to part with. I will indulge the hope in passing that your enterprise and independence will not be overlooked or forgotten, but recognized and supported, since you propose to make MIND AND MATTER work together for good in the up-building of a spiritual unity. So hoping, I will leave your future in the keeping of those who, I trust, are better able to do with and for you than I can at present writing.

This general acknowledgment is due for your kindness in sending your paper thus far, and had I the means I would contribute something more substantial and less commonplace than thanks. I can say so much in good faith, however I may differ with you in the method you use, or the Spiritualistic policy you support, for I like independence, courage and earnestness, all of which you manifest in a more than usual degree. Later, I am expectng to see the use you are to make of these and the other attending virtues of your mind, as there has bardly ever been a time when the Spiritual press was more in need of a "new departure." Here, as heretofore, the more mature and thous hiful Spirit ualists are looking for the Science of Spiritualism, they having tired of sensationalism and common-place; and that you may understand just what I mean by the Science of Spiritualism, I will add a few reflections on the relation A. J. Davis sustains to our common cause. I do this the more freely since your late paper in the same direction is suggestive of "better things." It was my good or bad "fortune" to make the acquaintance of Mr. Davis soon after the publication of his so-called "Revelations." Indeed, think you may find, in Philadelphia, Liberalists who may remember my lecturing on that book be-fore the volume had been given to the public, I having seen and read the proof-sheets of the same while visiting the home of the Rev. T. L. Harris in New York. From that time to this I have been thoughtfully looking after the "missing links" of the "Harmonial (?) Philosophy," and now and again have to inb my eyes at the "bran new plans and speculations" of Mr. Davis and his friends, on the uses and "abuses" of Spiritualism. Mr. Davis early complained of the multiplication of Spiritual ists, and the difficulty attending the development of "harmonial philosophers;" and writing to S. B. Brittain, in 1854, says: "There are getting to be multitudes of Spiritualists; when shall we look for beautiful crop of harmonial philosophers." (Spiritual Telegraph Papers, vol. v., p. 191).

Later, J. B. Loomis inquired, "Why, then, are Spiritualists so willful in their ignorance concerning the heaven-wide difference between the states of mediumship and that known as the superior condition." (American Spiritualist, April 9, 1870.) And still later, and to the same general effect, is the series of articles by C. O. Poole, in the Banner of Light, during last summer; but in all this rehasle of commonplace, the "missing links" do not appear, and "the harmonial (?) philosophy" does not harmonize with Spiritualism or science. On the contrary, it is made to appear that Mr. Davis has either "renounced" or "denounced" Spiritualism again and again, because Spiritualists do not harmonize and become "harmonial philosophers." or else he is a Spiritualist with a qualification, i. e., clairvoyant and "not a medium." From this "much ado about nothing." I have long since dissented, and think it full time that Spiritualists do themselves the larger justice of inquiring after the assumptions and pretentions of a revelator that reveals nothing not previously known, and fails to report correctly the known and the knowable of history, science and life. And this they will do, if they will read up the literature of Spiritual progress in the United States from 1843 o 1853, for within those ten years the beginnings of the harmonial philosophy may be found independent of the ministrations of A. J. Davis. And naving learned so much, they may also find why conditioned impressionalists like Mr. Davis may be sensitive to the influence of minds in the body, and be wholly insensible to minds out of the body-a discovery that will account for many things not known to Mr. Davis or his friends, and prepare the way for the true philosophy of the "conditioned."

Co-operatively yours, J. H. W. TOOHEY. No. 20 Everett avenue, Chelsea, Mass.

Rev. L. B. Hughes, of the Philadelphia Cambria Street M. E. Church, says: "The burning up of the earth will be a great process, not of destruction, but of purification. The scriptures nowhere de-clare that the earth will be annihilated, nor can we see any necessity for its annihilation. Why should we desire to see annihilated anything that God hath made? Everything was once good; why nay not it be so again? It was sin that made the earth bad. Expel sin, and the earth will be as fair as it was in the beginning. Jesus came not to destroy the works of God, but the works of the Devil; to renovate, not to annihilate. According to the testament, there will be a new earth. We may infer that the present earth, though destined to burn up, will not be destroyed, but renewed and refined-purged of its natural and moral imerfections. When, in the general conflagration, all things material are dissolved, separated, all decomposed, why may not the original matter of which the Creator formed this earth, after it has undergone this change by fire, enter again into the same composition of a new system? It is both trick?" asked the medium.

"These doctors had been hunting for your toes, that the earth shall be refused and restored than be for two days, and I thought I would belp them."

Words of Experience Worth Heeding.

What are the lessons which the spirit-world has riven and is still giving to the children of earth? That is a question easy enough to ask, and no oubt easy to answer, by many; and yet, perhaps, no two persons would give answers very much akin to each other, as each inividual wisely sees things little differently from his fellows.

For my own part, I feel most incompetent to the ask of answering the above interrogation, however truly I may perceive the subject with the mind. But, perhaps I may be pardoned for advancing a ew ideas bearing upon the subject. First, then, it eems to me, that the present time is pregnant with import. The teachings of the past we have received as children, and like children we have often been deceived by the simplicity of our faith in everything we heard or saw. But to-day may we not receive the lessons coming from the spirit-world as children of a larger growth?

In the past we could see spiritual things, too, but to a very limited extent, and the spirit-world appeared very simple to the observer, compared with t to-day. Of course that is all, according to the aw of progress, right and proper. In the twentythree years of the writer's observations and investigations of spiritual phenomena and teachings, how many has he seen who become heart-sick, discouraged or disgusted on account of the many frauds racticed upon them; or on account of the sufferngs and difficulties into which they had been led by placing too much faith in what they had received through the media as coming from trusted

But instead of learning a lesson; gaining a point thereby, and still pursuing the course that leads to knowledge by persistent investigations through every difficulty, they become disgusted with the whole thing, and in order that their apostasy might appear consistent, they turned to damning and deriding Spiritualism and all things connected therehonest mediums, as well as the frauds, receivng a large share of the most cruel abuse. For one, admit that in no sense have I been exempt, above my brethren, from the consequences of at first placing too great confidence upon what was told ne. But, from the time of receiving my first communication, twenty three years ago, to the present time. I can truly affirm that a doubt as to the fact. of spirit existence, after the change called death, and of the ability of spirits to communicate with the people of earth, has never for one moment crossed my mind. To such a fact, of course, I owe much, and while possessed of it, would never think of ceasing the oursuit of knowledge that I was satisfied lay in that direction. A long time since I learned to count no difficulty too great, when useful knowedge was at stake. And perhaps, if we would admit it, we would find that we could learn something from every experience in life. An honest, manly and fearless investigation of the subject of Spiritualism, and a candid observation of the facts presents, is, I believe, fraught with that which will prove of the greatest concern to man. That we have been deceived and led, as may have seemed to us, astray, is well; for we no doubt needed all we got in that direction to set us right and bring us to our senses. But for just such treatment we would become ninnies and lose, to a great extent, our self-hood, or individuality—become less instead of greater, weak instead of stronger, depend upon others instead of depending upon ourselves. Of course such a state of things as that can never be tolerated by a wise and progressive law, hence the remedy. If we have been deceived a thousand times, it only, all the more, goes to prove the great need we stood in of the corrective. We must learn to use the reason which the great source of wisdom has endowed us with for we know full well that that faculty, wisely developed and devoid of prejudice, can never lead us wrong. Then let us learn by experience, turning everything to account, remembering that if our tribulations are great, that eternity is long; that it is better to learn here, though the lessons be ever so hard, than to enter into spirit life with regrets that we had not done our tuty more thoroughly and more bravely while we had the opportunity. My idea of the question that heads this artic'e is, that the great aim and purpose of the rigid teachings of the present time is, to develop men, as through fire, for the work to be done in the immediate future. No weakling or pusil-lanimous individual will answer the purpose; only those who have been tried by the severest tests will be accepted for the work, and who should have for their motto, "Our aim the pursuit of Truth and the enlightenment of all mankind." In the light of the developments being made by the spirit-world, at the present time, and from what has been given from time to time in the past, how important it becomes that every true lover of liberty should be found on the side of truth and righteousness, and in opposition to those who are striving with all the powers they can command, to turn back the vheels of progress, which the great Father of Wisdom has sent out upon its mission of love to His down-trouden and suffering children. But there is no fear for the final triumph of right, for the Sun would as certainly rise in the West and pursue its course to the East, as that darkness should triumph over light, or wrong over right. As progress is the order of everything, the ultimate must be good. But who or where is the man so blind to his own good, that will, for the sake of temporary advantage, take side against his fellow-man? Where is a man's self-respect—where his nobleness of soul, that he can think to raise himself by putting his foot upon the neck of his brother? Does he not know from the fact that all law being progressive, that justice must be the ultimate of all things; that truth must triumph over error; that all must reap that which they sow? If there is any one thing that will tend to raise the people to a higher moral plane, it seems to me that the doctrine of self responsibility is that thing. In other words, that all must father their own acts, never forgetting that every act leaves its impress upon the soul, and with that soul and its impress, and that only, will each and every one enter the spirit world to find themselves rich or poor, bright and beautiful, or gloomy and miserable; in short, to find themselves exactly what their own acts have made them. As each paints the panorama of life, so they must view it. Then, to have it a joy forever, make it as beautiful as possible by good and noble deeds to your fellow creatures. "To thine ownself be true, and it shall follow as the night the day, thou canst not then be false to TAYLOR BUZZELL. anyone.'

William Emmett Coleman's Explanation. J. M. ROBERTS, Esq.

Dear Sir:—In compliance with your request to state the reason why I referred to Dr. Babbitt, in my reply to a "Prominent Spiritualist," I submit the following:

Some weeks before my correspondent wrote me, Dr. Babbitt, in two articles in the Religio Philosophical Journal, had intimated that my writings ndicated a lack of charity toward those criticised by me; and, in my reply to my correspondent, whose strictures were of a somewhat similar character to those previously published by Dr. Babbitt, I alluded to those also of Dr. Babbitt, replying thus, incidentally and briefly, to Dr. Babbitt as well as to my correspondent.

Had Dr. Babbitt been my correspondent, I certainly would not have said, in a letter to him, "as Dr. Babbitt seems to hold," using the third person, but I would have said, "as you seem to hold." My reference to Dr. Babbitt by name in the letter plainly evidenced that he (Dr. B.) could not be my correspondent. My speaking of him as a third party undoubtedly precluded the idea of his being he person to whom I was writing—the terms of my letter shut him out entirely; how then could suppose that any one would think I meant to indicate him as the person addressed? If I am writing to Dr. Babbitt, assuredly I will not, in the pody of my letter, say, "as Dr. Babbitt remarks." but I will say, "as you remark;" but if I am writing to John Smith, I will then, of course, say, "as Dr. Babbitt remarks."

Respectfully, WM. EMMETTE COLEMAN.

[Had Mr. Coleman, in referring to Dr. Babbitt, aid anything that could have led his readers to understand that he was replying to what Dr. B. had written some weeks before for the Journal, he would not have been misunderstood as to the author of the letter, which he made the occasion of his uncourteous criticism. Indeed, Mr. Coleman, by his explanation shows that his criticisms were especially intended for Dr. Babbitt, because the latter had, some weeks before, "in two articles in the Religio-Philosophical Journal intimated that my" (Mr. Coleman's) writings indicated a lack of charity towards those criticised by me" (Mr. Coleman). We cannot, therefore; see how this explanation mends the matter. Ep.]

Editor Mind and Matter:

I feel it a duty which I owe to the readers of your paper, to tell them of the wonderful powers of woman who has hitherto been unwilling to let her name be known as a medium. I have at last gained her consent, to give, in brief, an account of the effect which the recent storm had upon her. The papers have given to the public already graphic descriptions of the ruins and disasters which it caused by sea and land. But I can testify to facts which astonished me more than the storm could have done. I refer to Mrs. Kamoo, M. D., who is a Moorish physician, from Tunis, and who resides at 181 Shawmut Avenue. I have spent the whole week at her house, and have the right to tell what she predicted, and which no one in Boston can de ny the fulfilment of. On the morning of Tuesday, July 15th, Mrs. Kamoo said to me: "There is something hanging over this city—some darkness—something that will ry men, and cause wives and mothers to weep. And she sat for hours, unable to eat or sleep—hearng cries for belp.

Wednesday morning, the 16th, at S o'clock, when the sky was clear, and no sign of an impending storm, Mrs. Kamoo said: "Before 6 o'clock there will be one of the most severe storms ever witnessed pass over the city, and those who have one to the different places of resort to-day will not all of them return alive." Being on the fourth floor of the block in which she lives, there was visible from the windows looking northwest, at least 30 miles, from one extreme to the other, and in the exact direction from which the storm came. At 3 o'clock I could see no signs of a shower, and jokingly asked: "Where is the storm you promised?" Her answer was: "From 4 to 5 o'clock you will not ask that."

Sure enough, before the time had elapsed, har windows were broken and carpet drenched, hail stones as large as hickory nuts covering the floor. She said: "Don't be afraid of your Heavenly Father; it is His hand and majestic voice. He doeth all things well." A few minutes later, while standing looking at the ruins about the room, she cried aloud, and put her hands to her face, to shut out the sight of the dead and dying, and exclaimed: "Oh, the boats are turning bottom side up, and men, women and children are lost!" And then there was another scream, and an explanation that a building had fallen, and men were buried alive, and so on; faces continually coming up before her, calling for assistance.

This woman was not entranced, but was, to me, apparently in the normal condition that I was myself in. She claims her powers to be a gif. from God, and one peculiar to her people. Says she has had the same experiences for 40 years—long before Spiritualism was known in this country. Having been educated in Germany as a physician, she is qualified to prescribe for all diseases, after reading them from personal interviews—laying no claim to spirit power, but gives all the praise to God, who gave her this power.

I could fill these columns with her wonderful gifts, and the clear sight she has for reading disease. She is intuitive, and upon all subjects will decide important questions almost instantly. Her Bible is her guide, and in giving either her treatments, or remedies, she invariably asks God to bless the means used for the restoration of health. M. K. PARKE.

44 Lewis St., Lynn, Mass. P. S.—The subject of the above remarks has lack face, as all the Moors have; but any of us might envy her her amber soul when the records are footed up in the land where there will be no listinction of color.

GLEN BEULAH, Wis., Jan. 1, M. S. 31. Editor Mind and Matter.

DEAR BROTHER:—Being at L. Patcher's last night, (Ripon, Wis.,) one of our staunch Spiritualists, I chanced to see your paper lying among the rest. Carelessly taking it up, glancing over its heading, my first thought was, "another spiritual fungus—MIND AND MATTER—big name; too expressive of its objects to capture the public eye; will soon play out, to the sorrow of the poor fellows who have staked their all on the uncertain sea of newspaperdom." Reading along, I began to feel the compunctions of a happy repentance, and when I had finished one editorial I wanted to apologize to you, for I perceived that MIND AND MATTER, no) sham, but a solid, logical, reasoning weekly, having a genuine spiritual ring that sounds to me like the mellow tones of a bell on the watch towers of the angel world.

Most heartily do I want to thank you, sir, for the bold stand you take in defence of our media, who have lately been pushed almost to the wall by critics, who, though meaning well, have been so merciless as to well nigh neutralize the laws of mediumship. I am happy to notice, too, that while you defend them you by no means excuse any deception whatever. Another thing worthy of note is, you include in the hard-earned name of Spiritalism not only phenomena, but all the co-relative virtues and reforms; all that enchants, refines and rejoices mankind; all that is good and noble in human character. What do we, when we ignore phenomenal Spiritualism? What have we left to assure us that the angel world has opened a way of communication with this one? Can we afford such a loss? As well might we deny the future use of the a b c, which, by some linguistic art, chime in all our literature as to ignore the evidences of spirit presence. But for these "we are not saved—are yet in our sins." If, however, we remain where the evidences place us, repeating what we have already seen and heard, we are like the traveler, who, arriving at the guide board, sits down, concluding the journey is finished. order is. first, phenomena; second, science; third, the application of what we have learned for the ends of improvement. You have begun well, and I hope you will be able to "withstand all the fiery darts of the wicked." You have assumed a great responsibility, that of harmonizing the spiritual with the material, of making one new, beautiful embodiment of life from "mind and matter." With clean thoughts and a worship of the good, with a listening, to what the spirits say unto mortals, so benighted without such ministry; you have the assurance in the law of cause and effect, that you will "reap i you faint not"—reap a harvest of enlightenment. and enjoy a harvest home of souls better fitted fo higher uses when we "are worthy." Frate really yours,

J. O. BARRETT.

MR. Edi on:—A writer in a daily paper says, with a very bad grace, I think, that Spiritualism something which is "handy to have in the house," as an excuse for evil doing. He is evidently to-tally ignorant of the fundamental principles of the spiritual philosophy which must certainly not be held responsible for the mistakes and cupidity of fanatics any more than true Christianity should for the bloody scenes which has ever followed in the wake of the religion which has borne its name for two thousand years, and for the bigotry and selfishness which is practised under its cloak today. It certainly might be said with truth of such a religion, "that it is handy to have it in the house" of the evil doer. And I would here inform the writer that Spiritualists believe that there is no forgiveness for sin—that everyone must suffer for wrongful actions—and that there is no scape goat at the eleventh hour, or at any other period upon which they can saddle the sins of a lifetime, or, indeed it would be "something handy" for some peo ole "to have in the house."

It appears that for some it is "handy" to bave a little bigotry to stir up the embers of that spirit of persecution which still smoulders beneath the cloak of all the old selfish theologies.

Spiritualists admit that they are impovators upon established opinion in reference to the unseen world; their interpretations being of a very differ ent order. Hence this determined opposition and often false representation of their opponents. Notwithstanding that ignorant sceptics may look upon Moderu Spiritualism as a puerile supersti-tion, any thinking mind will readily discover that, embracing as it does the magnetic phases of our nature, the phenomena of natural previsions and the hallowed traditions of the primitive history of man, it presents a solution and an evidence of the physiological and theological developments of all religions in all ages, showing that the ridicule and doubt cast upon them by a transitional age, resulted from the superficiality of the philosophy of that age. The religion of instinct, intuition, and inspiration is a magic circle which had never been reached by the irradiation of danswledge, and the molliens and anomalies of human manufe which chefred, seared, or smused our sines are not relating to be understood and appreciated

Bossy Ananias.

LOUISE SEYMOUR HOUGHTON.

THE CHILDRENS' COLUMN

A group of colored children was congregated about the hotel piazza, in a Southern town. The youngsters were hopping, and jumping and giving each other sly pokes and digs, uttering subdued little screams and giggles, but ever with a sharp eye on the dining-room door, closed to exclude the

The doors flew open, at length, and a stream of gentlemen and ladies issued forth upon the piazza. A dozen little swarthy hands were stretched forth at once, clasping tight!y a bunch of drooping violets, a cluster of roses, or half dozen little brown bulbs.

"Wants flowers, missis? Please buy my roses! Wants lily roots to carry Nors? Dey keeps so ill you sots 'em in de groun'." A sweet looking lady drew near, with a fresh, fair complexion and bright, brown eyes, but with snow white hair beneath the fold of soft white lace which encircled her head. "Who has a little alligator?" she asked. "Mos' too sune for 'gators," remarked one.

"Bossy Auanias got a 'gator," said another. "Who? "Bossy Ananias, missis. He done got a 'gator.

You Bossy! show your 'gator to de lady.''

At this the sable crowd parted and a light colored boy, with a young alligator on his arm, was pushed front.

"So you have an alligator," said Mrs. Ormerod. Bossy's eyes twinkled. "Seed him on de mammy's back," he answers. "Chucked a chunck of light 'ud ahind her. Ole mammy flop off in de creek. Baby tumble in de mud. Catch him jess as easy!" And he fondles the little reptile and lays it against his cheek. "What do you ask for the alligator?" asked Mrs.

Ormerod. "Don't ask nuffin for 'um." "But I should like to buy him," she continues I want to take him North, to my little grandson. Bossy shows his teeth, but is unmoved.

"Bossy won't never sell his things," remarked an older child, a pale, heavy eyed quadroon girl. "He done got lots o' critters to the house; coons and squirrels and 'gators and sich. Won't sell a nary "Why not, Bossy?" asked a gentleman. "Don' vou like money?" Bossy reflects. "Dey like me," he answers. Dey don't know wite folk." The little alligator on his shoulder stretches out ts head and utters its plaintive croak. Bossy puts up his hand and pats it.

"It knows what we is saying," he remarks. "Hit don't want to go Norff." And he turns away with is pet, and runs off among the other children. "That's a character," observes a gentleman. "And what a name," says another. "Where could he bave got it?" Bossy meanwhile had left the children at the which led to the school, and passing out through the park, turned down a sandy road towards the river shore, where his home was Bossy had no eyes for the wonderfully picturesque appearance of the tumble-down shanty where he ved. He knew that the rain dripped upon his bed, on stormy nights, and that the wind whistled through the crevices in the wall and made his toes ache. But he was not thinking of that as he opened the smoke-house door and went in, his pet still upon his shoulder. A great scrambling was heard within, and then a happy laugh, which seemed to bubble over out of Bossy's little heart upon his red lips.

"You Bunny! 'Have yo'selff! Git down dar, ole Poss! Quit it, now: quit it, I say!" and Bos tumbled out of the snoke-house door, with a black fox-squirrel clinging to his ragged sleeve, a raccoon following at his heels, and a baby rabbit in either hand; the gator remaining all the time upon his boulder.

"Dat ar squill's de fightinest beast I ebber see," observed Bossy, shaking off the black animal, which, however, did not relinquish its hold of the ragged shirt-sleeve, but carried a great piece with it. "Wants me to sell you off Norff, hey?" he asked, in a severe tone, shaking his finger at his delinquent pet. "Wite folks wants you, bad. Give heap o' money for you. Dey don't know you like I does. What you tink if I sells you off Norff, hey?"

Then, as the impish beast made the deprecatory gesture, common to its kind, placing its fore-paws upon its breast and moaning, he hastened to add Dar, shet up now, honey; nobody ain't gwine sell you Norff if you 'haves yo'seff," and betook himself to fondling his rabbits, from time to time bestowing a loving word upon the 'coon, or the alligator. All day long the boy lay under the trees among his pets, they never attempting to leave him, though there was nothing to hinder their running away. It was thus Mrs. Ormerod saw him, as she cam home, in the cool of the afternoon, from a walk on the bluff above the river. She stopped and looked at him with a smile which, somehow, softened into tears as she gazed. Then turned to where a woman sat nursing a child under the magnolia tree.

"Is that your little boy?" she asked. "Taint nobody's boy," answered the woman. "His mother died when he was a baby; his father lone gone away, up river somewhar, and leff her. He calls me mammy; but I ain't no kin to him.' "How did he come by so odd a name?" asked Mrs. Omerod.

"Why, his father and mother couldn't 'gree !bout his name; so dey just called him Bossy. A'ter de ole man done run away, she name de baby for her father, ole man Ananias Watson; but ebery one was use to call him Bossy Ananias." "Is he a good boy?" asked the lady.

"Dey ain't no better nowhar. He don't give bit of trouble; he jess plays with his critters all day long. It's cur'us how he gets them all. 'Pears like he jess has to call them and dey runs to him. "How old is he?"

"Five years old last Chrismus. He right smart good to work, too, for such a little fellow. Mrs. Ormerod walked away thoughtfully. Bossy now wide awake, ran after, his alligator in his hand. She supposed he had decided to sell it to her, and half stopped to speak to him, but he ran past her, and threw open the heavy gate which led into the hotel park. "Do you come to sell me your alligator?" she

"No, missis; I jess kim to open de gate. Yo see, I couldn't sell my 'gator Norff, no how, mis-Mrs. Ormerod sat down on a rustic seat and held out her hand. "Bossy," she said, "come and talk to me. Should vou like to go North with me, and live in a nice, large house, among other little children, and go to Bossy's eyes brightened for a moment, then fell apon the reptile in his hand.

"Could I take my 'gator?" he asked. "Perhaps so,," answered his friend, with some esitation. "Yes, I think you might." "An' de 'coon, an' de squ'll, an' de bunnies?" "I hardly think you could take all those, Bossy," replied Mrs. Ormerod, but you could have some uew tovs." Bossy looked reflectively upon the ground But dey wouldn't have no Bossy," he urged "Nobody wouldn't talk to 'em ef I leff 'em." "Couldn't you give them to your little play

"None of 'em loves my squ'll, 'cause he bites. And dey pulls de bunnies' earwand hurts 'em; and de 'coon don't like 'em, no way: I couldn't go no-way, missis," said Bossy, decidedly. "You would have some new clothes," persisted the lady. Bossy was unmoved. "And plenty to eat." she added. "Couldn't go and deave them, missis, not no

A. few days later, Mrs. Ormerod was walking in the woods, and, being deceived by the similarity of two roads that crossed each other, she lost her way. Seeing a hut, she was proceeding towards it, when suddenly silarge florostdog rain out at her, barking savagely a Mrsi Ormerod erroamed and attempted to run; that in a moment, when the dog was very close to her a child's rolls affed; "You Belli, down sir! Go home, sir!" and Bossy sprang up from behind a tree, and running towards them, laid his hand upon the furious creature's neck. The dog dropped his ears and slunk off. "Drefful sassy dog, dat Brain," remarked Bossy quickly. "Pears like he boun' to kill somebody some day." "Are'nt you afraid of him?" asked Mrs. Ormond who stood pale and trembling. "Dey does'nt tetch me, missis," replied Bossy. as he quickly sat beside her, poking the sand about with his bare toes. When she rose to go, and asked "could you show me the way to the hotel Bossy?" he answered readily;

"Yes, missis, jess wait till I git my critters," and ran to a stump near. "Come on, Solomon," he said, rousing his coon, which appeared to be sleeping on the stump, "Come along, Bunny," picking up a rabbit. "Ah, 'gator,' 'gator! finding the alligator, which ran to its place on the boys shoulder. Git down, sir! to the fox squirrel, which sprang upon his back; "you jess let 'yo' own legs tote you," and he ran back to

"Which of your pets do you call Solomon?" she asked. "Dat's de 'coon, missis. He so drefful knowin', an' Solomon was the knowinest man, dey tell me. So I jess call the 'coon dat." Mrs. Ormerod could hardly restrain her smile at the odd little figure which trotted on before.

"I believe he saved my life," she said, as she related the adventure to a circle of friends. "That is a strange boy," remarked a doctor. "He seems to possess uncommon qualities. It is sad he "The women where he lives appears to be

"Then Bossy must consent," said Mrs. Ormerod but the words were not spoken aloud. Bossy was in the field, the next evening, dropping corn, from a bag tied before him, into holes, his "mammy" was making with a hoe. Mrs. Ormerod came and looked over the fence.

"I have got something for Bossy," said the lady, taking a seat under the magnolia. She opened a parcel she had brought with her. "See here, Bossy, if you will go North with me, you shall have these clothes to wear.' She held up a suit of blue flannel resplendent with gilt buttous. Bossy's eyes sparkled, then wandered in the direction of the smoke-house. "And these stockings," added Mrs. Ormerod, showing a pair of stripped ones. Bossy appeared to hesitate. "And these boots," concluded his tempter, unwrapping a tiny pair of copper-toed, red-topped boots. It was more than human nature could en-

"Oh, Solomon!" cried Bossy, running to the smoke-house, "jess see dem boots! Oh, Solomon, I doesn't want to leave you." Words failed him; he came slowly back, carrying the 'coon in his arms, while his remaining pets followed him. "Dem boots!" he said, in a choking voice. "Solomon, Bunny, ole Foxy! oh, I can't, I can't," he cried, in an agony of indecision, throwing himself upon the ground. "Don't ax we, missis; I

"It is too much," said Mrs. Ormerod, fairly laughing and crying at once. "You shall not be tempted any farther. The clothes are yours; but you shall not go away North; you will be better and happier

Bossy's adopted "mammy" lived much longer than the doctor anticipated, thanks to Mrs. Ormerod's careful provision for her wants. When she gied she left the baby as Bossy's charge, as well as the "critters." So the two children live on by themselves in the picturesque old cabin, loved and aided by all the neighbors, and always cared for by their absent friend.

Bossy's life is as bright and sunny as the summer land he lives in. But there comes to him every year one time of supreme happiness. It is the time when the short winter days begin to lengthen towards spring. Then if from the steamerdeck you should see standing upon the wharf, a tall, eager-eyed boy, holding by the hand a curly-headed "picaninny," and with a squirrel on his shoulder, or, perhaps, a 'coon under his arm, you may be sure it is Bossy Ananias, greet Mrs. Ormerod .- St. Nicholas for

An Antediluvian - The First Trance and Materialization.

When Adam appeared in Eden it didn't seem much like l'aradise to him. Though Jehovah manipulated the material of which he was made, and after making him blowed him up-"breathing into his nostrils the breath of life." Now, Adam was human, and finding himself there without first being consulted, having no choice in the matter, "the dust of the ground," and being a man, he didn't fancy being blowed up.

He was in a forlorn condition. No aunts nor sisters to call on him, and no mother-in-law to sympathize with him. There he stood naked and alone. But Jehovah put him in a trance by causing "a deep sleep to fall upon A lam." And he slept; and be took one of his ribs. It took spirit ænesthetics to help through the surgical operation -extracting a rib-a side issue. Now, Adam was a victim of circumstances, and had to submit. No doubt he had some feeling about it. There's no man but likes to choose for himself the woman he expects to live with. No sooner was this one-sided affair of rib-taking finished than first class materializations took place, and the rib developed into a female, and Adam found himself facing a woman. In a brief time Jehovah called them to order because "the eyes of them both were opened," and finding they had no wardrobe arranged, in order to make their toilet, "they sewed fig-leaves together." Question-Who found thread and needles? Ye wise theologians who laugh at modern spirit manifestations, please answer. Now, after doing their best, they received an unexpected call. voice of Jehovah, walking in the garden in the cool of the day;" and He called unto Adam and said unto him, "Where art thou?" And after giving them an Edenistic lecture, on perceiving their scanty apparel—fig-leaf aprons—He turned tailor, and made "coats of skins and clothed them." Then giving them advice about farming—to "till the ground." So he drove out the man." But it don't tell how the woman got out! It never seemed to me that they felt very bad about it, as they raised Cain as soon as they could claim a little responsibility of their own. For it took a triune company to carry out act 1st, in the forbidden fruit scene. Jehovah, man, and the devil, and poor Eve had to bear the burden of the blame, without any compensation but the few figleaves referred to.

I have always wondered how "Mark Twain," in his "Innocents Abroad," could take so much interest in his cowardly ancestor, "Adam," as to hunt up his "tomb" and then weep such tears of grief o'er his remains. Well, "Mark" was a man, and man will do strange things sometimes. And the man (Adam) said, "The woman whom thou gavest to be with me, she gave of the tree and I did eat."
Great coward! as if he wasn't big enough to help himself. And as to "Paradise Lost," though "Milton" gave his views of it, and we all know he couldn't see clearly, being unfortunately blind, nobody has made such a fuss over it as the prating priests and their progeny, though his satanic maesty was star actor then, and has been their best friend ever since. He has formed the chief cornerstone for every structure theology has ever reared. Ought they not to give the devil his due? In all candor, if Adam and Eve did not com-

Deny it, Old Theology, if you can? Say what you please about Eve, she wasn't the weaker vessel that time. 'Twas Adam showed the "white feather," by claiming Eve tempted him. There is no knowing but that if he had had moral courage enough to have owned up, he might have been in Eden eating fruit and holding free statuary exhibitions till this time—
