Can Astrology Foretell Volcanoes?

(See Photograph on Reverse of This Page)

THE photograph reproduced on Page One portrays America's most beautiful volcano, Mount Popocatepetl, or as it is locally termed, "Old Popo." The name is of Aztec origin, from the combined words popoca "to smoke" and tepetl "mountain." The tent visible in the foreground is typical of the Mayan expedition camps. Our photographer is Hugo Brehme.

"Popo" has the second highest summit in Mexico, its magnificent pyramidal, snow-covered cone rising to a height of 17,888 feet. At the foot of its eastern slope is a tremendous lava flow of great antiquity.

Describing his ascent, P. T. Koran states that the forested region begins in the foothills a little above 8,000 feet and continues up to an elevation of over 13,000 feet. At about 14,500 feet, horses are left behind while one continues the climb through loose lava and ashes.

On the snow-covered summit the heat of the sun is intense although the air is very cold. The reflection of light from the snow is blinding. The rim of the crater which is very irregular in height, is reached at about 17,500 feet. The crater is elliptical in shape, about $2\frac{1}{2}$ miles in circumference and has a depth ranging from 600 to 1657 feet. The sky from this point appears as deep blue verging into black. The whole scene is weird and unreal. Huge patches of sulphur, some still smoldering, are visible everywhere, intermingled with great black rocks and snow and ice.

In the year 1519, Cortez sent a party of ten men to ascend Popocatepetl. In 1522 Francisco Montana made the ascent and had himself lowered nearly 500 feet into the crater. No further ascent is recorded until 1827. It was scaled again, however, in 1834, 1848 and subsequent years. Members of the Mexican geological survey spent two days on the summit in 1895.

In old Spanish chronicles of the conquest is described an ancient device of the native wise-men, that foretold the coming of an earthquake. It was destroyed by a Spanish Priest as an "heathen abomination."

Numerologists will be intrigued to note the symbol of Time, the number 8, is repeated four times in the measurement of "Popo's" height, 17,888 feet. That is, if one totals, in the numerological manner the first two figures 1 and 7. The total of all the numbers is 32, which, in numerology equals the number Five. Five, in turn is the "number of the pyramid" as it corresponds to the pyramid's five points. It was so known in Egypt and in America. For this and many other reasons, Mayanists believe the pyramid to have originated in America.

It is possible that the ancient astrological method of earthquake and volcanic prediction has been re-discovered.

Dawn of The New Order

When our beloved President Roosevelt took the oath of his office as Aquarius dawned, this year, 1937 A. D., he no longer spoke of the "New Deal," but instead referred to the "New Order."

The New Order is now beginning to make itself felt. It is entirely in harmony with the new Aquarian Age. Aquarius the Humanitarian sign—the sign of change—the sign of the human heart.

The Human Heart. It is a tangled forest wherein no man knows his way. It is an undiscovered country; men and women are forever perishing as they explore its wilds.

The human heart is a roaring, beating, forge where night and day the smiths are busy fashioning swords and silver trinkets, saws and engine-wheels, the tools of labor and the baubles of fashion.

The human heart is a cool, quiet, garden, wherein grow weeds of memory and the flowers of hope, and where at last, snow softly falls and covers all with its white blanket.

The human heart is a meadow full of fireflies, a western summer sky of flashing lightnings, a shore set round with shining lighthouses, and far away voices calling something that we cannot understand.

The human heart is a deep, still, pool; in it are flashing little fishes of gold and silver, darting playfully, and slow, heaving-hissing-slimy monsters. It is filled with ancient treasure hoards and infinite good deeds performed—and those undone. Look deep into this pool and you see reflected your own character.

The human heart is a lonely lane in the evening, and two lovers are walking down it hand in hand.

The human heart is a great city, teeming with throngs of people, full of activity and throbbing business—yet, we wander its crowded streets—alone.

It is the throne of God, yet it can be the council-chamber of Satan.

Listen! You will hear the music of mother's lullabies and also madmen's shrieks; the crooning of lovers and cries of agony; hymns of Christ and the roar of lynch mobs; all imprisoned in the human heart.

The human, pulsing, living, throbbing, heart of a Nation, has been placed in your hands, Mr. President. You, whose sign is the Humanitarian sign; we give it to you.

Aquarius, the Changer. Roosevelt, the Aquarian.

We await the New Order, our human hearts filled with faith in you.

The Romance

OF ASTROLOGY

by Robert A. Hughes

The very word Astrology brings to the mind of the thinker the process of the development and maturity of the human mind through many ages. The science of the stars was and still is inextricably interwoven with the origins of religion and the principles of science and philosophy.

We are today witnessing its rebirth and re-establishment. The science which entered the scientific age an outcast from its kind is now coming into its own. Today millions of people believe in and study Astrology. Astrological periodicals command large circulations and organized bodies devote themselves to the investigation of astral law.

As a science Astrology has several important branches: Natal, Mundane, Atmospheric, Horary and Medical Astrology. Natal Astrology is the application of the science to the study of psychology, health and natural ability; Mundane Astrology is its application to the affairs of nations, and Horary Astrology the art of scientific divination.

Astrology has been erroneously classified with fortune telling. Investigation of the science will prove that it is based upon deductive scientific rules. Its rationale is to be found in the magnetic relationship of man to the universal ether or the astral light. All calculations are made in the terms of mathematics, so that outside of judgment the personal element is negligible in astrology.

There is nothing actually mysterious about the science save that it tends to convince one that the realities of existence, the omnipotence and omnipresence of the Logos or God, Space and Time, are in some unexplainable way connected with Geometry. The data from which the astrologer works is easily available from an ephemeris of the planetary positions and a good text book.

Modern science is now verifying what astrologers have taught for untold centuries, namely: that the planetary bodies are centres of magnetic or vibratory energy. The investigation of Cosmic Rays, both in the stratosphere and on the earth, is fast proving the assertion of astrologers that there exist "rays more subtle than those of light, more far-reaching than the force of gravity, which impel men to think and act, which create disasters, produce various forms of sickness, inspire ambitions, and disperse men to definite lines of conduct." To support this statement of the great astrologer Sepharial there can be adduced as much authority and experience as any theory ever held by science.

Calculations are made by means of the solar system, the Zodiac, and the place and time of birth. From this data the horoscope of birth is constructed. The Horoscope is a portrait of the Heavens viewed from the place of birth. It shows the sidereal relationship of the Zodiacal signs to the earth, the positions of the planets in the signs and their relationship to each other. So intricate is the mathematical application of Astrology that children born at the same time but in different latitudes and longitudes would have different horoscopes.

To-day millions of people believe in and study Astrology. Many consider it simply a cold mathematical science. In this instructive article the Romance of the songs of the stars, that have fascinated famous thinkers of all earth's ages, is pointed out. Read it and enjoy the Romance of Astrology too.

From remote times there has existed an elaborate system of rules or significations for the interpretation of these various planetary and Zodiacal positions. These rules have not changed greatly from the time of the Chaldeans to the present day, save in their interpretation of changing social conditions.

The symbolism utilized in Astrology is also very ancient. Both the Zodiacal and planetary forms of symbology conceal profound wisdom. These symbols are but remnants of the pictorial language of primeval science. The use of animal symbols for the Zodiac is not exactly literal but rather symbolic of the various states of consciousness and psychology produced by the signs. In the planetary symbols, however, we can trace the vast religious, scientific and philosophical knowledge of the past.

Any thoughtful person has perhaps wondered why human beings manifest such different psychological traits or characteristics. Why one person is by nature warm and ardent and another reserved or cold? Why some are social and jovial and others unsociable? Why some people are eccentric or unconventional and others conservative or orthodox? Why some are timid and afraid and others bold and vigorous? Why some individuals excel in literature, music or art, oratory, invention and business, etc., while most have only a passing ability or none at all? Why the flame of genius is so rare? Why a few individuals attain to a great destiny and most live in the shadows of obscurity? Why some people have brilliant witty intellects capable of applying their minds to knowledge and others with even greater opportunity are non-existent mentally?

Astrology is the only science capable of answering these questions satisfactorily. It is said that character is destiny and that character alone modifies or conditions environment and so brings upon the individual the just outcome of his previous actions and thoughts. When it is realized that our characters are the crystallization of all thought processes and our deeds it will be understood that we hold in our own hands the keys to the understanding and mastery of life. The horoscope of birth is simply an outline of the character, psychology, mentality, natural ability and fate tendencies we have brought over from previous lives.

The Universe exercises no tyranny over the human soul but gives to each and all the just outcome of their efforts. The real difference between individuals is in degree not in kind. It can be said of Astrology that it is the only true or scientific system of psychology capable of diagnosing the intricate workings and the complex structure of the human soul and mind. Through its study we can learn to know ourselves and so to find the right channels of expression that will bring the utmost good.

From the Zodiacal signs we receive our basic character; from the Sun we obtain the individual nature, the morals and will; from the Moon the personality and the passive or undirected mentality, the habits, instincts and customs; from Mercury the mental energies, reason and wisdom; from Venus the affections and sex impulse, beauty, grace, reverence and emotion; from Mars the animal propensities, energy, anger and passion; from Jupiter the reverential or religious and philosophical qualities and the sense of justice; from Saturn patience and endurance; from Uranus intuition and occult thought and from Neptune prevision and spiritual insight or imagination.

It must be remembered that the planets represent potencies or activities, the powers behind the creation and maintenance of the phenomenal world. It depends largely upon the construction of the horoscope of birth as to what the character will be. Planetary force may be inhibited, modified or strengthened in many ways, so that judgment requires care, intelligence and experience. To illustrate the basic power of the planets over character one should consider their conjunctions or aspects with the Ascendant.

Many words still remain in our language which explain the psychological influence of the planets. We speak of a jovial person little realizing that this term is astrological in nature. A person is jovial, buoyant, optimistic, just, generous, moral, etc., when Jupiter is predominant in the horoscope. On the other hand we say such an individual is saturnian if he manifest the qualities of the planet Saturn: secretivity, discontent, subtly, lack of sympathy, coldness, and in the more primitive types miserliness or misanthropy. Venus on the other hand endows her types with such qualities of character that tend to the artistic, cultured, approbative, convivial and affectionate. From Mars we obtain courage, vigour, self-reliance, enterprise and leadership. From Mercury the excitable, restless, subtle, inquisitive, sharp and intellectual psychological makeup. Thus the various planets according to their natures stamp upon the individual the qualities of character and mind.

The uses or applications of Astrology are legion. Its greatest and perhaps most humanitarian application, however, lies in the interpretation of human character or psychology and ability. It can lead us to know ourselves and to put this knowledge to its best use in charting our way through life and in aiding our evolution. It shows the divine justice and equity behind the function of evolutionary reincarnation.

"The fault, dear Brutus, is not in our stars,
But in ourselves, that we are underlings."

Astrology was the first science known to mankind of which there remains any record. It has exercised a profound influence over the human mind in all ages. No period of history has remained unaffected by it, and it has left an indelible impression upon every phase of human culture. The uniformity of the days of the week among the ancient peoples, the similarity among astronomical monuments and the use of the Zodiac, lead us to the conviction that early man held in common, one culture and one language.

The origins of the science are lost in prehistory, in the most remote ages of earth. Its origin can be said to be mythological rather than historic. There was a time when, according to the great myths, men of super-human intelligence guided and instructed the races of men. From these early leaders, whom the Secret Doctrine immortalizes as the Divine Kings, sprang the culture of mankind: husbandry, science, art and civilization. The fact that Astrology has been handed down from very remote times as a complete system is some evidence that it is pre-historical and pre-traditional in origin.

H. P. Blavatsky speaks of the first astrologers in her Secret Doctrine: "To the mind of the Eastern student of Occultism, two figures are indissolubly connected with mystic astronomy, chronology, and their cycles. Two grand and mysterious figures, towering like two giants in the Archaic Past, emerge before him, whenever he has to refer Yugas and Kalpas, when, at what period of prehistory they lived, none save a few men in the world know, or ever can know with the certainty which is required by exact chronology. It may have been 100,000 years ago, it may have been 100,000,000 for all that the outside world will ever know. The mystic West and Free-masonry speak loudly of Enoch and Hermes. The mystic East speaks of NARADA, the old Vedic Rishi, and of ASURAMAYA, the Atlantean." (S. D. II, p. 47).

Thus historically there exists no record of the discoverers of the science. We do know, however, today that the Chaldeans did not originate Astrology; for the Zodiac was known in India for untold ages. Hindu chronology places them among the earliest users of the science. We find mention of the science in China in the year 2154 B. C. in regard to the great eclipse of that year. We find through the authority of Cicero, the great Roman orator and the last Consul of the Republic, that the Chaldeans claimed astrological records of over 47,000 years of investigation and experience in the science. They were among the first races known to us whose secular and religious organization was based directly upon the reality of planetary influence.

It was the Magi or Astrologers of Chaldaea, who as the Wise Men of the New Testament saw the "star" of Bethlehem, who knew through astrological means that a world teacher was to be born. It was the

AS OF OLD SO TODAY, EVERY human heart wants health and happiness and security in love and work and friendship. To get such is the mainspring of just about all that is good in Humankind. Why do our radios alternate between love-songs and the products of work? Better American busy-ness recognizes that all useful industry and jobs answer somewhere along the line the needs of people, in love with someone or something or both. As my Rotary Club friends put it: "Work is doing what you should do for happier home life." Happier home lives and fuller cupboards are better busy-ness. Together, they bring life more abundant here and hereafter.

Why does America ever have depressions at all? It takes a long time for many people to see the connection between happier home life and jobs for all. Even then, in deciding how to get what we want, a lot of us get all off the track into grandiose isms. Why? It takes a long time for many of us to realize the simplest truths of social astronomy. There are seasons of emotion even as there are seasons of weather on our good Earth . . . all meant to be maximated by living the laws natural—humane—creative of the Master Creator. The eternal verities of life are so simple that ponderized minds overlook them.

People would think straighter if everybody had a little more social security . . . enough to be free from the money worry that drives people crazy. As unsocial contradictions are today, people are going insane, faster than asylums can be built. Indeed, the whole world will have to make up its mind concerning social security about October 4, 1942, when Neptune enters Libra, the sign of cosmic justice. Yes, be not surprised if by August 19-20, 1953, the American people have voted a mandate to technological science to co-ordinate and manage production and distribution in basic industries and agriculture. We live in years of intensive change for the better.

Meanwhile, if you, Friend, want more health and happiness and security in love and work and friendship, you do not have to wait for anything. The World Plan traffic signal system of the atomic Heavens is still overhead. As of old so today you will find it helpful. Everyone observes the atomic Heavens for indications of physical weather. We have but to observe the atomic Heavens for daily indications of personal emotional weather. Did you ever say the Lord's Prayer? My belief is that in it He recognized that freedom from debt and financial strain goes hand in hand with the happiness of love to bring "Thy Kingdom Come . . . on Earth as it is in Heaven."

SICK THINKERS

Of course, sick thinkers are always upon our good Earth. And upon the highways of life, there are many kinds of hit-and-run and back-seat drivers and road-hogs. Some are so sickly dangerous, they want to try and live by laws of nature-in-the raw. Did you see the motion picture called WHITE LEGION? Therein, science and religion worked in unity as death-fighters freeing people from the plague of wellow fever. Now, after years of experimental work to find what causes irrational destruction among insects, beasts and human beings, Dr. W. M. Scholl,

You—

And YOUR

Loved Ones

by Christina Dahl

Why did the former King of England let go of his far-flung Empire? Because Mrs. Simpson understood him. She has discovered the SECRET of every great woman.

an American biologist says: "Many sick thinkers are innocent carriers of the Hell Plague called war. This last of the plagues is curable. Louis Pasteur was on the right track. For more deadly than pathogenic bacteria are pathogenic vibrons. Those in the healing arts will do well to inquire at once into the facts of social astronomy."

Unfortunately, like most objective scientists, his technical paper is submerged in meticulous observation and deduction, except that in suggesting a program for physicians, endocrinologists, psychiatrists and other health advisors to be subsidized by governments so that their services are free to those in need, he points out: "The toll of the Hell Plague? Each American man and woman consciously or unconsciously now pays annually $200 for the irrational destruction by sick thinkers called criminals, to say nothing of the toll of human life. In addition, the human race through interest on bonds or through taxes still pays $25,000 for each of the 17,000,000 killed or otherwise irrationally destroyed during the first world war

"In the face of these facts, it appears imperative that consideration be given to the founding of a unity of science and religion to prevent and cure this last of the plagues in the same spirit we have wrought against cholera, tuberculosis, typhoid, small pox, the bubonic and other plagues, each of which at one time or another was believed in the minds of the superstitious, i.e., those of irrational reverence or irrational fear—to be the will of gods or devils, prior to the progressions of knowledge into the unfolding will of Our Maker." Truly, our emerging Aquarian Age of Humanhood is in a new dispensation of knowledge.

Thus, while the sick thinkers amongst us, hit-and-run or back-seat drive or roadhog the highways of life; and while amongst us are many Smart Alecks and Slick Susies who befoul love with intellectual sewage and sex antagonism; the World Plan traffic signal system is overhead as free and sane and clean—as in the time of the first human pair on our good Earth. Of course, we realize that MODERN ASTROLOGY is essentially a science requiring a review of all cosmic rhythms of heredity and environment in regard to individuals. But certain common principles have emerged. What of these may be stated with finality regarding the theme of this series, YOU AND YOUR LOVED ONES . . . material that one will find helpful at once?

CREATIVE LOVE EXPRESSION

My own work has approached the correlations of knowledge of the Heavens in relation to life, with the viewpoint toward: The prevention and cure, of love and home life problems. Prior experience as an assistant serving the professions of medicine, surgery and mental hygiene—with its grim round of contact with obstetrics and gynecology, hopes of motherhood fading into the despair of Caesarian deliveries and ovarian removals, together with brilliant minds questing the spirit of "Lead, Kindly Light . . . Amid encircling gloom"—convinced me that cosmic rhythms are parts of heredity (what you were born with) and environment (what is around you).

To me, there is nothing more fatalistic in such truth than there is in Springs, Summers, Autumns and Winters. The seasons make life simpler. We know what to expect and allow for. The atomic universe does not care whether we prepare for the death blasts of fever or chill. Each of us is supposed to have sense enough to live laws natural-humane-creative to maximize such seasons. True, nobody knows "all" about them. But life is always judgment in action to get what is really wanted, with a working blend of truth known and truth felt. Excepting sick thinkers, every one does such instinctively. The healthier we are, the more subconscious is the process. We know what we most want, and the action takes care of itself. It's similar to steering one's motor car to where one wants to go. And similarly, the function of the World Plan traffic signal system. If we don't heed it? Traffic jams and chaos.

If you have had . . . have now . . . or feel you might sometime have a love problem, simply ask yourself: Why did the former King of England let go of the most far-flung Empire this world has ever known? Viscount Castlerose put it neatly: "Mrs. Simpson understands him. She has discovered the secret of every great woman in the world. The way to manage a man is not to bully him, but to build him up." DID THAT PROMPT YOU TO SNEER AT ALL WOMEN OR ALL MEN? Fess up, now!

Honest confession is good for the soul. If you really did feel prompted to sneer, you have permitted yourself to do some sick thinking, the deadliest sort known—SEX ANTAGONISM. Your vanity would delude you with superiority. The truth is: The natural-human-creative law of sustaining and rewarding what is right about men, applies the same to women. THE CREATIVE URGE TO LOVE IS OF THE MASTER CREATOR . . . understanding is imperative, not merely the letters of words.

Order Out of Chaos

How does the creative urge to love build order out of chaos? To the degree that its efforts to rise above the chaotic soil of life . . . are appreciated, encouraged and rewarded by the sunshine of YOUR appreciation . . . YOUR encouragement . . . YOUR rewarding. Watch for such EFFORTS as they crop out in your LOVED ones. Remember, happiness like peace begins at home. Are you discouraged? If so, you will find healing in this thought: "The Master Creator strives to work through every man and woman. I am a growing part of Him. Each day is opportunity for me, if I choose, to help Him build material and spiritual order out of chaos all around me in real life." Rally all your ideas around that. Get into action.

If you understand this rightly, you will feel like singing at your work. You may hate biological sins, but you will never hate the sinner. You will see the whole biological brotherhood or Humankind striving as best each can to build order out of chaos. You will recognize that the only reason why we have so many different beliefs as to what we should do is that more of us have to inquire into the truths of natural-human-creative laws demonstrable by the experimental and experiential method. Automatically, as you lose yourself in love and work—the highly dangerous qualities of indecision, self-pity, anxiety, violent temper and overdue caution will vanish around you. Most important, you will simply forget about all the rules and find yourself living more fully than before.

If you have no serious real life problems, leave well enough alone. Sometimes, life offers ideas that are simply none of our busy-ness. This is said because some are eternally in quest of some new thing, when they have no need of it. There is more health in work and play every day—IF WE DO IT, than in all the books ever written. Life is meant to be lived and loved and enjoyed, with eventually no more work than is necessary for such. To work is also to pray. The blessings of machinery are meant eventually for all men and women. For the present, we must remember that some of busy-ness is still in the survival-of-the-slickest stage, but unfair competition is on its last legs and the emerging generation will bury it. In any case, never take any alleged rules of up-and-at-'em, dog-eat-dog contradictions in your home life. All "Sic 'em" philosophies are doomed.

Creative love expression is the general rule for happiness in home life. If you have the right idea on this, you express appreciation for what is right about a loved one, more often than criticizing, nagging, belittling or explaining what is wrong.

The foregoing is presented for those with love problems of psychological origin.

Christina Dahl, one of Astrologer's most prolific writers, has specialized in heart-problems. Her articles have appeared in many leading publications. She is an associate editor of both Married Happiness Magazine and Today's Astrology, as well as a contributor to the Neo Materialist Review and American Astrology Magazine. Among her many other activities she is an associate researchist of the Neological Division, Therapeutic Research Foundation. We expect to have a series of helpful articles from her pen dealing with delineations of character, designed to assist in greater domestic understanding and promoting more marital happiness, thus speeding the milenium. Watch out for "You and Your Loved Ones."

March Moods

A General Daily Guide for MARCH 1937

THE FOLLOWING General Daily Guide is written according to the aspects of the Sun, Moon and Planets each day for the month of March. This work gives the indications of the aspects in operation for the day without regard to any of the twelve signs of the Zodiac. The time used in the following is based on Central Standard Time. If you live in the Eastern States, add one hour to the time given. If you live in the Mountain States, subtract one hour. If you live in the Pacific States, subtract two hours.

MONDAY 1. Moon in Scorpio 9:23 A. M. Clear up important routine matters, writings, correspondence, interviews, etc., before 3 P. M. Venus and Moon aspect Uranus during afternoon and evening. Use good judgement in all affairs and above all avoid impulsiveness in romantic affairs, also in social matters. However, in spite of disruptive aspects, the day favors unusual ideas in artistic, musical and literary matters.

Summation of Previous Installments

EVERY experience is harmonious or discordant in exactly the proportion that it affects you mentally.

Knowledge is not only necessary but vital, if the events and experience of life are to be viewed in their proper light. It will enable you to enlarge your capacity of discernment and by it you may adjust yourself to any and all conditions.

No matter what kind of a structure you are attempting to erect there are certain laws that cannot be transgressed without penalty. The implements and tools which Nature has placed in your hands may be used constructively or destructively. Man should not deplore the lack of opportunity or a lack of material possessions. The Universal Mother knows exactly what tools are best for each to have. And if we do our part in using the things she has endowed us with, study her plans minutely, then we cannot fail to achieve a glorious success. Therefore, laying aside all preconceived ideas and theories, let us approach the Master Workman and find out exactly just what designs have been placed on the Trestle Board for us.

Let us lay a solid foundation, anchoring it securely in the precepts of truth; let us study the plan for our edifice carefully; and accept the tools and implements given us with which to start our work, knowing the

With this article the gifted Dr. Lange ends his first series to appear in Modern Astrology.

Dr. Lange is the originator of a system of diagnosis of human ailments that is rapidly being adopted by doctors of all schools.

"Genetic Technic," Dr Lange has labeled it and many who have approached his classes with skepticism have gone away singing his praise.

"A Modern Hermes;" "A Genius" are phrases often heard from his pupils. We hope to have more from this gifted man in the near future, to present to the readers of Modern Astrology.

tools we will use in laying the foundation are not the same ones used in the super-structure. For as soon as we are ready—as soon as we have completed the task with the tools, given us for that task, they will be exchanged for those to be used in the furtherance of the structure.

Do not think because you have reached a certain age in life that the "game" is not worth playing, or you started in too late. Clear away all the debris and rubbish, and know that every experience, so far in your life, can be utilized as building stones in an enduring edifice. The knowledge gained from those experiences can be combined in producing a royal road over which you may travel the balance of your journey through this Cycle of Necessity. And Knowledge does not come without contrast—without comparison.

You could never know sweet unless you had also known of its opposite—sour. You could not appreciate good without knowing—comparing it with the consequent evil. And in order for this knowledge to be applicable, contact was imperative, for contact with a thing brings consciousness in man. Man is the highest placed of all relative beings. He possesses an intellect which he is capable of expanding, even unto the realms of the Absolute. By the use of his intellect and expanding consciousness, man dominates all other forms of life.

WE CONTINUE THIS MONTH with the indications of the Moon in relationship to the sun in the twelve Zodiacal Signs.

We now take up the aspects of the Moon in Sagittarius with Sun in Taurus

The Moon forms a one hundred and fifty degree aspect when in this sign. Some astrologers do not consider this a fortunate position for the Moon. However, my researches have brought out otherwise. These people, particularly during youth are extremely sensitive, high-strung and emotional. They require considerable love, affection and understanding from parents and relatives. They are stubborn, determined and inclined to be independent, inspirational and intuitive. They have philosophical minds, have keen sense of humor and are usually well liked, once people get acquainted with them. They have excellent executive ability. They are loyal, very conscientious and trustworthy. They are generous, sympathetic and quite thoughtful of others. Emotionally they are deep, warm and affectionate. Although moody at times, they are generally hopeful and usually have a good word for everyone. They have considerable literary and artistic ability. They are fond of travel, sea voyages and adventure. Their prospects of success in life are good, primarily during the last half of life, when time and experience tends to curb their sensitiveness and tendency to go to extremes.

Moon in Capricorn With Sun in Taurus

The Moon forms a trine aspect to the Sun when in this sign. This is a favorable combination. It indicates a keen practical mind with good reasoning ability and judgment. Intuition and foresight are indicated. These people are among the most conservative, thoughtful and economical of all Taurus people. However, they are not selfish. They are best adapted to public life or in service of the people in professional life. They are ambitious, industrious and practical. They make good physicians, attorneys, nurses, merchants, bankers, real estate people, ranchers, mechanics, etc. They have the ability to work hard and reach great heights. They have ability to organize, promote and create important organizations, projects and industries. They are the types which create the condition for others to find employment. Yet, unfortunately their early life or their family and marital life is not always happy or harmonious. In a way, these people belong to the world, which they serve so well.

Moon in Aquarius With Sun in Taurus

The Moon forms a square aspect to the Sun when in this sign. However, this is a somewhat practical combination, being somewhat similar to the indications of the Moon in Capricorn. In a way these people are more sensitive, original, eccentric and inspirational than the Capricorn types. They are somewhat self-centered, yet unselfish and altruistic. They are not as conservative as they should be in personal money matters as they are generous spenders. Indications point to service of others as in public life, politics, civil service, postal department, military life, the various professions, merchandising and catering to the public. These people make loyal friends. They will help others and in turn may be helped by or through the aid of others. They will be well liked wherever they go. They are interesting conversationalists, well-mannered and diplomatic. They too, have the ability to organize, promote, sell, supervise and run a business. This position also inclines to travel, adventure, artistic and literary ability, etc. These people may acquire a sizeable fortune in money and property throughout life. Their prospects of success are good. Emotionally they are warm and affectionate. They are difficult to understand during childhood and youth and parents should guard against unwise treatment which inclines these children to develop timidity and inferiority complexes, which are difficult to overcome later in life. Fortunately, most of these natives find themselves during the late twenties are earlier.

Moon in Pisces With the Sun in Taurus

The Moon forms a sextile aspect to the Sun from this sign. It is a far more fortunate position for the Moon for Taurus people than for Aries people. It is favorable to the mind. Gives good powers of imagination, visualizations, reasoning, memory and foresight. The social instincts are accentuated and these people are usually hospitable. They have many friends and acquaintances. This position of the Moon gives intense love of home, family, children and relatives, unless the Moon is afflicted by unfavorable aspects from any of the planets at time of birth. The prospects of success in life for these people are fairly good. They are sensitive, easily upset at times, but generally peaceful and get along well in work or business. Indications point to an analytical and mechanical mind. This position of the Moon does not always indicate industriousness as certain types of these people are inclined to be dreamy, poetical and mediumistic.

Sun In Gemini With Moon In Aires

This combination of the Sun and Moon gives an active intellectual mind and nature and those born under it are given to intellectual pursuits and activities. They are studious, ambitious, aspiring and have strong wills. It is symbolical of a combination of Mars and Mercury. The nature and temperament is positive, active and dynamic. It signifies excellent powers of speech, which will vary according to the individual's moods and ideas. These types will need to learn the value of patience and curb every tendency to become erratic and too self willed. They are fond of adventure, travels and any form of activity that has a touch of daring. They usually have considerable wit, yet are very frank in their opinions. They have the type of mind that makes a good attorney, adventure story writer, military man, aviator, soldier of fortune, etc. Their love of change and travel indicates a none to smooth family or marital life, yet much good is accomplished by their works and efforts.

Sun In Gemini With Moon In Taurus

This combination of the Sun and Moon indicates the type of Gemini individual that is quite determined, firm and persistent. Altho very sensitive from an emotional point of view they do not become restless and tired of things as easily as does the average Gemini individual with the Moon in some of the other signs. They make loyal friends, trustworthy employees, and faithful husbands and wives. They have good business ability, and are very capable of dealing with the general public. Altho some astrologers do not consider this a very good combination, it is a good one if people born thereunder, refrain from financial worries. Their general prospects of life are quite favorable and shows gain thru others.

Sun In Gemini With Moon in Gemini

The indications of this combination indicate one of the most mentally active and yet changeable, restless and willful of all types of Gemini. They are usually good natured and not ill-tempered, altho very moody at times. Throughout life they appear to react to each aspect of the Moon. They are artistic, refined and usually possess many latent and active talents. They have high ideals and much inclined to day dreaming. Knowledge comes readily to them. On most matters they show very good judgment, except in their emotional or love life, in which the mentality is usually overshadowed by their sensitive emotional nature. They are very versatile and can adapt themselves to varying conditions much quicker than the average individual.

They have a keen sense of business and altho they are changeable in many respects they enjoy success financially, usually being quite determined in this direction, once they arrive at maturity. When young they will need considerable attention and understanding from their parents or guardian. They make good friends and enjoyable companions as they seem to enjoy everything that others around and about them enjoy.

Sun In Gemini With Moon In Cancer

The indications of this combination show the type of Gemini who is conservative, economical, cautious and anxious. Often too anxious to the extent of worrying, unnecessarily about family, relatives, business and financial matters. This habit can only tend to make life unpleasant for such an individual. Unnecessary or useless self-restraint and worry should have no place in this world. Altho these types are industrious, hard-working, they seem to seek the sympathy of others and they are inclined to sympathize with themselves. They have excellent memories. They are quite easily upset and angered and not inclined to be forgiving. Many of these have an artistic temperament and a very active imagination. They are not as changeable or restless as some other types of Gemini people, but they are fond of considerable travel. Success in life comes in dealing directly or indirectly with the general public. They make excellent hosts and hostesses and are fond of artistic home surroundings.

Sun In Gemini With Moon In Leo

The indications of this combination bring us to the type of Gemini who is very difficult to understand and to get along with. Leo is the natural sign of the emotions and affections. Gemini is the natural sign of the conscious mind or intellect. Within such individual there appears to be a constant struggle between the instinctive mind which represents the emotional nature and the conscious mind which represents the intellect. These types are amongst the most moody and vacillating of all Gemini people. They are very sensitive and easily moved or influenced from one mood to another. At one moment all may be bright. They are self-confident, to all appearances determined and sure of themselves. Some little thing may go wrong and then they swing over to the other extreme of melancholia and lack of confidence. These people have considerable artistic, dramatic and poetical ability. They usually make a success of life, when they find, what they call the "right inspiration." From childhood these people should receive careful training in order to develop self-confidence and self-assurance. They are talented, they have active minds, they are very adaptable. Their talents and abilities should receive proper encouragement from parents and relatives. They should not be laughed at or chastised because of unusual artistic temperament. The same God that made the blacksmith and the architect also made the artist to beautify life and the works of men. Who of us have not enjoyed beautiful music, the great works of art created by others now gone, whose life was made unfortunate because of the gross misunderstanding of others?

Sun In Gemini With Moon In Virgo

This is a good combination from an intellectual point of view, for here we find an active, inquiring, studious, critical and analytical mind. Such types make excellent research people in chemistry, medicine, nursing and many other scientific fields. They have to be critical to be able to hold to facts. Mentally they are very sensitive, moody and subject to depression, yet they are humanitarian and practical in their views upon life. They are very industrious and often give little thought to themselves or their emotional make-up, marital or family life. Some of these people are not inclined toward marriage, if they feel that it will interfere with the actual progress and success of their chosen work. They are the most practical of all Gemini people and are usually fairly successful in the course of life.

Sun In Gemini With Moon In Libra

The indications of this combination are very good. Gemini and Libra are air signs and have much in common. This position of the Moon increases the idealistic, spiritual and intuitional qualities of mind. Libra being the sign of Venus which rules art, we find these natives to be artistic in the highest and most practical sense of the term. These people are fond of the beautiful and harmonious in life. They are mild tempered, make cheerful companions and helpful friends.

MUNDANE

Predictions

for MARCH

by Juanita Coleman

Some Astrologers may consider Juanita Coleman's predictions daring, but we have observed a long line of her Mundane Predictions and can vouch for the way they have worked out. We believe her to be a highly intuitive individual.

The March Luration Cycle opens with the first degree of Leo rising. All that this royal sign stands for, theaters, speculation and social functions, will be ushered forth amid a period of fun-loving mirth and gaiety. The masses will feel a dominating impulse that tends to go to extremes. Highly emphasized by the ruler of the ascending sign, which partakes in the Luration on the cusp of the ninth, marking high ideals and hopes for this period: and with its opposition to Neptune, the world at large dwells in a virtually Utopian atmosphere.

Venus and Uranus are joined near the Midheaven cusp. The young are held by the rapture of romance: a swift pace and high tempo prevails and idealistic thoughts run with carefree action.

The theatre attains to new heights with emphasis on spectacular production. The strong Neptune-Pisces influence in the chart augurs success for musical productions, particularly those dealing with the twofold theme: love and mystery.

The Luration conjunction with Saturn, both join in a Grand Trine with twelfth house Pluto and fifth house Mars. Powers abroad, movies, radio, theatres and speculation all share in its fortune. But I have found trines to sometimes lack in strength where other testimonies do not uphold them, and to suddenly reverse their action. For the Luration separates from the impractical Neptune, and applies to Saturn adding momentous note. The bursting of bright-hued bubbles. For the tension which has lurked behind this mad-cap period appears and lowers the tempo to one of utmost thought and seriousness.

The Luration on the cusp of the ninth directs the nation's consciousness to foreign powers, renewed interest in other nations, alliances and agreements. Great influx of visitors from abroad to U. S.

The nation's finances causes the Chief Executive grave concern. Debts, new and heavy expenditures and foreign issues press. The Luration and Saturn fall in Mundane conjunction with President Roosevelt's Saturn on his natal ninth cusp, giving him an active time. Neptune is associated with world-wide movements, such as the League of Nations, and it, in the second house connects finances with it; and ruling the eighth,—heavy debts. Saturn conjuncting the Sun adds power to the President, endowing him with the necessary tact and diplomacy to cope with matters before him and hold his own against opposing forces, though he incurs some unpopularity, as shown by Neptune opposing the Sun. This will pass over, as Neptune is in its detriment and below the horizon.

Wall Street enters the picture too. Finding Neptune in affinity with the stock market, we may see a rally followed by a temporary downhill movement of many stocks and investments; especially those of commodities and foreign trade. Previous to this, buying is heavy, speculators running riot. Then comes fluctuation. Some failures through fraud are indicated to which scandal attaches, involving prominent men and indicating their downfall.

A standstill strikes the moving picture industry. The sinister influence of the eighth augurs the death of one of its leaders. Heavy financial losses result because of delay of productions. Jupiter, ruler of fifth, in sixth, opposing Pluto, may bring a strike among the picture companies and their employees.

Mercury in the eighth house, death of a writer for motion pictures and also of some human interest writer for a large publication or syndicate.

Sadness and tragedy lurks again behind dark corners when a well-known theatrical person passes away through a mysterious death. All through this period there are strong Neptunian influences in this chart.

Certain blockades take place on the high seas with Saturn strong on the ninth cusp. Storms and collisions with loss of life especially off the western coast. Some difficulties with wireless, cables and telegraph. Trade is bad because of delays and obstructions.

The Luration brings shipping, foreign trade and religious controversies to the fore. Some criticism over publications. Stricter law enforcements which react upon women, Venus dominates in the tenth, public house. Mars on the cusp of the fifth enters the legal sign of Sagittarius, following the luration, and inconjunct to Uranus bringing matters of court procedure to the front. Uranus brings prominent personages before the bar, connected with family scandals; Mars and Venus rule the fourth and Uranus the seventh, divorces and scandal. Taurus intercepted foretells of heavy financial expenditures.

Modern Astrology Magazine brings to you every month a condensed Character Analysis for the current Zodiacal Sign. Those who keep a complete file of Modern Astrology thereby also gain a complete set of character readings for every birthsign. This month we bring you a brief character analysis of those who come under the dominion of the watery, mutable, emotional sign:

Pisces

TEMPERAMENT

was the pictorial representation given by the ancients to this sign. These people are restless, physically. They are naturally filled with a wanderlust. The temperament of these people can often be likened to the ocean which even though calm, is never really quiet. It is perpetually in motion. The Pisces native is sensitive and intuitive, seeming at times to be actually psychic.

Venus is exalted in this sign, and the Moon seems to have a strong influence upon its natives, and while these people are often sensitive and the victim of an inferiority complex, they are very expressive after they have overcome their sensitiveness. Edgar Allen Poe was a native of this sign. The native is very loyal in his friendships. They are warm hearted and sympathetic and it has often been noted that they have little regard for conventions. The Piscean likes to do exactly as he pleases and has difficulty in seeing wherein he has done wrong. In love, this native is an exceptionally pleasing type and is usually well loved by everyone. Pisces people are often modest and timid and they are easily affected by their surroundings. They need the aid of a kind, firm and loving hand to lend them assurance and self-confidence. The three greatest needs of the Pisces character are COURAGE, CONFIDENCE AND PERSEVERANCE. With these virtues developed, as they can be, and backed by the true sterling worth of those of this sign, THERE ARE NO ACCOMPLISHMENTS BEYOND THEIR POWER, NO HEIGHTS TO WHICH THEY CANNOT CLIMB.

PHYSICAL CHARACTERISTICS

Pisces governs the hands and arms, the feet, the lungs, the nervous system. Generally, the constitution is not strong, and it does not build up the resistance to infection which is manifest in other signs, but when ill, they respond to treatment, particularly when those in attendance are sympathetic. When susceptible at all, he is particularly susceptible to infection, and should guard against tendencies to indulge in excesses. Good judgment in diet is a strong factor in keeping these people at their best from a health standpoint. Fresh air, mild exercise, and freedom from worry, will do more to keep them healthy than almost anything else.

ROMANTIC TENDENCIES

The love nature of the Piscean is usually idealistic, emotional, sentimental and sympathetic. They are tender and affectionate in their love life. Their feelings are deep and intense, and under proper circumstances they are very demonstrative. At other times they show timidity and reserve. They are devoted and considerate of the object of their affection, but they are also inclined toward jealousy and selfishness. They desire attention and affection, and if this is not forthcoming, they are deeply hurt. If you have a loved one who is a native of the sign, Pisces, avoid injuring his or her feelings, for they are very sensitive in their emotional life, and if they are hurt too much, they become discouraged and cynical, in their love affairs. THESE PEOPLE CAN NO MORE EXIST WITHOUT LOVE THAN A FLOWER WITHOUT SUNSHINE AND WATER.

HANDICAPS and OBSTACLES

The greatest weakness that these natives have to overcome is their own negative attitude, and the tendency toward moodiness and melancholy thoughts. In order to attain success, they must avoid an excessive seriousness and learn to maintain a more optimistic view of conditions. They must be careful not to be too idealistic in their views on love and romance for their ideas often lead to disillusionments and mental depression follows. In other words, the Piscean must learn to be the master and not the slave to his sensitiveness and fear. THEY MUST LEARN THAT WORRY AND FEAR ARE THE WORST ENEMIES OF MANKIND. THEY TEAR DOWN AND DESTROY, AND VERY OFTEN WHEN WE FEAR A THING, WE ATTRACT TO OURSELVES THE VERY THING WHICH WE FEAR MOST. If you are a native of the birthsign Pisces, keep the grand old prayer "THE LORD IS MY SHEPHERD" before you always and fear not.

VOCATION

The following are some of the lines of endeavor in which these people find success. Nursing, teaching, manufacturing, artistic pursuits, and mechanical endeavors. Intellectual pursuits also belong to their type of temperament. They are exact and careful of the most minute detail of their work. Law and the healing arts are also indicated and in choosing a field of expression, these people often find their greatest success, particularly after they have learned to overcome their sensitiveness. They are loyal, conscientious, industrious, honest and sincere as well and trustworthy in their business association and can usually be trusted in partnerships. They are capable of putting originality in their work, and also of improving their work or business if they are given the proper amount of encouragement. A brief summary of the general characteristics of the Pisces born indicates excellent prospects for success in life if they will develop the more positive qualities of their personality. They will do well to learn the art of planning ahead, and developing their natural foresight, and psychicism. As stated earlier in this analysis COURAGE, CONFIDENCE AND PERSEVERANCE ARE THE THREE GREATEST KEYS FOR THE FULL DEVELOPMENT OF THE PISCES CHARACTER.

(Footnote)—This is a condensed character analysis, and only touches on some of the highlights of the Pisces nature. A Rose Dawn Giant Astrological Reading for 1937 covers these indications fully and in detail, also giving future trends for the sign month by month and day by day for the whole year of 1937.

Ah, passing few are they who speak,
Wild, stormy month! In praise of thee;
Yet though thy winds are loud and bleak,
Thou art a welcome month to me.

For thou, to northern lands, again
The glad and glorious sun dost bring,
And thou hast joined the gentle train
And wear'st the gentle name of Spring.

ROSE DAWN'S IDEA, CALLED GREATEST SERVICE EVER OFFERED BY AN ASTROLOGER. MEMBERSHIPS ARE FREE—READ HOW YOU CAN OBTAIN ONE. JOIN THE COMFORT CLUB.

SINCE the initial announcement appeared in this magazine last month, applications for membership have simply poured in to Comfort Club Headquarters at Del Rio. Already, in this brief time more than two thousand have taken out the full Registered Membership. And a check has not yet been completed on the number of guest memberships distributed. The greatest amount of enthusiasm has greeted the Comfort Club idea. Letter after letter contains such expressions as "Rose Dawn's Comfort Club idea represents the greatest service ever offered by an astrologer to her clients." And, "The Comfort Club is exactly the sort of thing I have always wanted."

Surely, never before was such a large Club created in such a short time. But this is only an indication of what the Comfort Club will become. Already in many communities groups of Comfort Club Members are gathering and forming plans for regular meetings. Such groups receive beautiful Official Comfort Club Charters, which are issued by headquarters, free of charge.

The very first mailing, sent out to all Registered Members contains in addition to the various readings, and other literature, a leaflet explaining how to organize these local Chapters, how to conduct meetings, titles for local officers, and all the details of organization.

For the benefit of those who did not read the announcement in last month's issue it would be well to explain briefly what the Comfort Club plan is, how it happened to be organized, and most important of all, how you can become a Registered Member. All Memberships are free, but there are two classifications of Memberships. But let us start at the beginning, this is how the Comfort Club idea came into being.

Rose Dawn for many years, has brought comfort to countless thousands. All over the nation, in countless cities, towns and hamlets, her name is a household word. Her many acts of kindness have made for her a legion of friends who are staunch and true. To many her name is synonymous with Comfort.

MANY times, one becomes discouraged with life's battles and disappointments, until they seem to become too utterly distressing to bear. Nearly all her life, people have come to Rose Dawn with their secret sorrows and their griefs and have received wise, motherly advice and comfort.

In her last radio season Rose Dawn gave away inspirational books and other printed matter with a retail value of over $20,000.00. To lighten the burden of those who were finding the going tough, she prepared Inspirational Readings, and sent them her famous Letters of Uplift and Advice. Truly, the world must be a better place to live in because of Rose Dawn. At least you will find many who will say so.

"There are so many people," she continued, "Who need my help not only the one time they write to me, but many times during the year. I have always wished that it would be financially possible for me to follow up these cases, where I know they are going to need my help again during the year ahead.

"So often in looking over some person's chart, I will see something there that is not likely to occur for some time in the future—something perhaps, too serious, too involved to tell them now—but yet something they should have help with, when that time arrives.

"Often, it may be a trait of character or disposition that needs adjusting. A permanent adjustment of that sort cannot be accomplished by just one letter. It takes a series of letters, a series of adjustments, until a new habit is formed strong enough to overcome the wrong trait.

"Knowing this to be the case and knowing too, that many of those who need continued assistance the most, were the very ones who were least able to pay large fees, I set to work to evolve some plan whereby I could help them."

That is how the Comfort Club idea started.

I issued a few hundred invitations with my current outgoing mail to see what my friends and clients thought of the idea. The response was immediate. Almost by the next mail acceptances began pouring in. Letters of praise for the idea and letters packed with enthusiasm. I knew then, that I had really found a way to extend my gifts to a larger field, in a way that would do more good than was ever possible before.

"First of all, it costs you nothing for dues or membership fees, to belong to my Comfort Club. You pay a small Registration Endowment of $1.00 for the entire year of 1937. You pay this to cover the cost of enrolling, and registering your name. It also goes to cover postage, addressing, etc., for the many mailings I send you during the entire year. There is something deep inside of us all, that makes us seek people of our own kind. We seek fellowship, we instinctively know, that "in union there is strength." It is the social instinct that makes villages, towns, cities, civilization itself. The unsocial person, usually becomes an outcast, he shuns his fellowman, he seldom finds Comfort. But the kindly, the alert, the up-and-coming type, seek more and more to ally themselves in some fraternity. What finer group of people could you ally yourself with, than the seekers and givers of Comfort, which compose our Membership rolls.

GIVING AND RECEIVING

HAVE you ever thought about this? A farmer plants a bushel of potatoes, we'll say. For that bushel, he gets back at least thirty or forty bushels. If he gives it his attention, and cares for his growing crop, he'll get back more than that. That is Nature's way of paying you for giving.

That is the principle that Rose Dawn believes in. By giving Comfort and advice and guidance, she has made many friends. By giving service and still more service, she has created an army of loyal friends. By caring about her clients' problems, by bringing comfort to them, perhaps long after they have forgotten about her, she retains their friendship and loyalty. The result is that she is becoming the best known Astrologer in America to day. Service, a genuine interest in her clients, and the giving of Comfort is her secret of success.

HERE IS WHAT YOU DO

Mail it with $1.00 currency to Rose Dawn's Comfort Club Headquarters, at Del Rio, Texas. You needn't bother to get a money order from the post office, just pin a dollar bill to the blank and mail.

Romance of Astrology

Chaldeans who identified the Stars as the vice regents of the Supreme Cause. In their temples Astrology was a sacred science and its adepts became a distinct class. It was the Chaldean astrologer Berossus who introduced the science to Greece and hence to the Western World.

In Egypt we find the same claims for the foundation and investigation of Astrology over long periods of time. The Egyptian priests told Solon, the grand-father of Plato, that they had calculated time for over two sidereal years or about 51,766 years. At Dendera we find the great Zodiac that is reputed to record the passage of 3 sidereal years or about 77,644 solar years.

The Egyptian Sphinx is also evidence that prehistoric peoples were expert in and cognizant of the inner teachings of Astrology. It represents the fixed quaternary of the Zodiac or the signs Leo, Scorpio, Aquarius and Taurus, but principally Leo and Aquarius. It was built about 12 or 13 thousand years ago to commemorate the Saturnian Golden Age as well as to remind humanity that the Golden Age would dawn again. The next Golden Age will commence when the Sun and Earth form the Sphinx symbol, that is to say when the equinoxes take place in Aquarius—Leo, in about 700 years.

A history of Astrology would require several volumes to do it justice. From Chaldea it was carried to Europe and for many centuries the great Greek thinkers embellished the science. The mystical principles of the Chaldeans were recast in scientific form. The names of Hipparchus, Hippocrates, Thales, Aristotle and Plato stand high on its roll of honour. Among the Romans we find Galen, Virgil, Horace, Cicero and Pliny who held belief in or studied Astrology.

Some of the Roman Emperors were students of the science and much of the oppression and terror wrought by certain rulers was due to the fear that astrologers would predict their successors. The rise of Christianity and the consequent destruction of the great library of Alexandria changed the course of astrological history as it did other forms of culture. The firing of the library severed the modern world from the ancient sources of knowledge and the origins of Astrology.

One of the most interesting incidents of the Roman period coincides with the appearance of the great comet of 43 or 44 B. C. at the time of the assassination of Julius Caesar. Caesar was warned by a prominent astrologer to beware of the ides of March, for on that day his life would be in danger. He promised to heed the warning but on the fateful day allowed Brutus to entice him out to the Senate. Meeting the astrologer on the way he chided him on the falseness of the prediction to quote Shakespeare, "The Ides of March have come" and the answer, "Aye Caesar, but not gone." The comet which followed this foul murder was believed by the people to indicate the admission of the soul of Julius Caesar into the ranks of the immortal gods. "When beggars die, there are no comets seen, the Heavens themselves blaze forth the death of princes."

Claudius Ptolemy, the great Greek mathematician, geographer and astrologer, whose ideas on astronomy dominated European thought for 16 centuries, wrote his famous Tetrabiblos in the second century. This book became the bible of astrologers and is even today an important work. Ptolemy brought order and system into the teachings of the Chaldeans.

With the collapse of the colossal imperial system of the Romans the science died out in Europe. Yet in Asia its teachings were kept alive by the learned Arabians. Later with the Saracen conquests of Africa and Europe the science was again introduced. At the time of the Renaissance it was a respected and honored science.

Throughout European history Astrology had great influence over the shaping of events. Great householders maintained their private astrologers, and civil or military rulers and some of the Popes used the science. In fact the whole history of Europe is the story of Astrology and the record of the great intellects who aided its advance.

Such names as Henry Cornelius Agrippa, Astrologer to Francis I of France; Jerome Cardan, famous physician of Milan, astrologer to Edward VI of England; Nostradamus, the greatest master of astrological prophecy, astrologer to two kings of France, and Dr. John Dee, physician and astrologer to Queen Elizabeth.

The great mathematicians and astronomers of Europe were also competent astrologers. Tycho Brahe, who predicted the rise of Gustavus Adolphus, and his conquest of Germany, by the great comet of 1577, held that: "To doubt the influence of the stars is to doubt the wisdom and providence of God." And his pupil, John Keplar, the founder of modern astronomy, who said: "The unfailing experience of the excitement of sublunary natures by the conjunctions and aspects of the planets has instructed and compelled my unwilling belief." Sir Isaac Newton, the famous discoverer of gravitation, and the famous mathematician Napier, were learned astrol-ogers also.

The names of many eminent men have therefore been associated with the European history of astrology. From Dante, the sombre poet of Italy, Lord Byron, Sir Francis Bacon, Shakespeare and many other famous writers, philosophers and scientists, the science has descended.

Many famous prophecies have been made by its adepts. William Lilly who prophesied the great fire and plague of London, the Nostradamus who in his work the Centuries, published in the 16th century, carries prophecy to modern times. A century before their fulfillment Nostradamus prophesied the beheading of Charles I, the rise of Cromwell and the great fire and plague of London. One of his famous prophecies has to do with the rise of England to world power:

"Great Empire to the English arms shall be
In fullest force three hundred years or more.
Her armies vast shall pass by land and sea."

This prediction was made when England was only a third-class power in Europe and Philip II of Spain was the unchallenged master of the world!

The seventeenth century was an almanac age for Astrology. Many of the important almanacs appeared during that time. Old Moore's Almanac, still published by the firm of Foulsham's in London, was originated by Dr. Francis Moore. Toward the close of the 18th century public interest in Astrology waned somewhat and it was not until about 1820 it began to revive. Raphael's Almanac appeared in 1820 and has had a great influence upon the revival of Astrology in the 19th century. This publication is now in its 117th year.

Perhaps the credit for the revival of modern Astrology should go to H. P. Blavatsky, the foundress of the Theosophical Society, who inspired Alan Leo to devote his efforts to the purification and rebirth of astrological science. His magazine, Modern Astrology, was the first publication of importance. Today, due to the efforts of self-sacrificing individuals the science is no longer inarticulate, but has a wide and varied press catering to millions of interested people throughout the world, a wealth of literature and many experienced and devoted students.

It is an amazing revelation of the virility and truth of Astrology that in this age of scientific materialism it has held its own, unsubsidized or aided in any way as have been her sister sciences, and now is fast growing in influence and power. Now science is recreating a natural astrology.

The future of Astrology is secure. Its teachings can do much to advance the cause of human brotherhood. It can engender that broader outlook and that deeper understanding of life so needed today. It has much to offer in the service of man: forecast of the changing weather conditions, the charting of times of scarcity, pestilence, plenty, earthquakes, inundations, the diagnosis of disease, the psychological analysis of character as well as countless other uses.

The greatest testimony to astrological truth is that history does not record a halt in its progress. It has come down to us out of the very night of time, the gift of the ancient peoples, through ages of splendor and ages of privation it has held close association with all the triumphs, the failures, the miseries and the glories of mankind. No science that has so influenced religion, philosophy, science, and poetry, and left its indelible mark upon the mind of man can be said to be false. Its history is a veritable romance of awakened intelligence and the triumphs of mind over matter. With its understanding we can say with Virgil:

"Ere Saturn's rebel son usurped the skies,
Ere senates mad decrees man ever saw,
Or heard at bawling bars corrupted law;
Ere patriot fools, for popular praise, aspired
To public speeches, which worse fools admired;
Ere through ambition, or through thirst for gold
Men slew their brothers, or their country sold; (Men's highest aspiration and best prayer was)
'Give me the way of wandering stars to know.'"

AMONG US WOMEN

By ROSE DAWN

HERE it is March again. The third month of this new year. And, "Time Marches On." March, the most uncertain of the months, one day wild and stormy, the next placid and spring-like. How like some people I know, is this month. Full of wind and bluster in outward manner; but in their heart of hearts, gentle as a lamb.

Dr. Wm. F. Petersen of the Department of Pathology and Bacteriology of the University of Illinois College of Medicine has been getting himself a lot of newspaper and magazine space lately as a result of statements he had the temerity to make to the venerable and august National Academy of Science. It is strange that this should cause such a furore, inasmuch as astrologers have been telling the world as loudly as they could, via tons of printed matter, and hundreds of thousands of watts of radio power, for lo these long years.

The good Dr. Petersen has, however, performed a service for astrology by attracting these recognized scientific minds to a rich field for their investigation. Truly, something may come of it. If nothing more, now that this eminent Professor has affirmed it, many people who formerly scoffed at astrology, will now solemnly nod their heads in approval whenever it is mentioned.

Dr. Petersen has examined the embryological history of some 25,000 persons—and according to his statement, "has arrived at the startling (?) conclusion that the time of year when conception takes place, so influences the embryo as to determine whether the future adult is likely to be a genius, a lunatic, or a criminal."

We are most interested in Dr. Petersen's further findings along this line and hope to have an article prepared by him exclusively for Modern Astrology Magazine.

A very sweet letter came to me this month from E. Tom Norris of Alabama. He says, "If there is anyway I can help you with your work, let me know, as I would be glad to do so." Thank you, Mr. Norris. That helpful spirit which so many of my clients and friends have manifested has done more to place astrology on a high pedestal than has all of organized "science" during the last hundred years. Now, if we may hope that "science" will join us in that spirit we will get some place.

Comes now a Wichita newspaper clipping sent me by a writer many of you know, A. Garfield Wildren, eminent Biblical Numerologist and Psychologist. The Kansas Courts, it seems, are about to officially seek the advice of Rose Dawn in scheduling cases before them. I have "so many times correctly predicted the outcome of Kansas Court Cases, that now, some of the litigants are refusing to go to trial if Rose Dawn says the aspects are against them," according to the newspaper story. Sorry. There is some misunderstanding. I am not an attorney-at-law and have no wish to take the place of one. In the future, I suppose I shall have to be careful to advise all of my clients who are involved in litigation to go through with their trials. Otherwise I may be cited by the Bar Association.

Bottled Predictions! Allen Watson of Newark, Ohio, had quite a thrill when, during the recent flood, he pulled a fruit jar out of the waters, containing Rose Dawn's January 3rd predictions that a great flood was coming. It seems that for a long time Estella Harmon, who lives at Granville, Ohio, has been listening to my Sunday night prediction hour on the radio, and then calling up a number of acquaintances and asking them to watch them come true. When she heard my predictions on the flood she wrote them on a piece of paper, sealed them in a jar and cast them into the waters. Mr. Harmon fished the jar out at Newark, Ohio. I have Mr. Harmon's letter to Estella.

HOW MUCH LONGER BEFORE I CAN GET BACK ON THE JOB, DOCTOR?

You Cannot Prevent, But You Can Provide Against Accidents and Sickness

Last year's Accidental Deaths had mounted to 100,000—and 9,340,000 met with non-fatal injuries. Auto Accidents alone caused 37,000 deaths, 105,000 permanent disabilities and over one million temporary disabilities.

There is no way of telling when or on whom accident will fall. Accidents happen in the flash of an Eye—they come without warning.

Then there are uncounted thousands walking about today, hale and hearty. Tomorrow, without warning, they will be on their backs, disabled by serious sickness.

More than three million people in the United States are seriously ill all the time.

PROTECT YOURSELF NOW:

MENTION MODERN ASTROLOGY MAGAZINE WHEN ANSWERING ADVERTISEMENTS

TO the average man and woman, kept constantly at the task of making a living, the thought of explorations quicken the pulse and set the imagination winging through unaccustomed channels of thought. The very word "explorer" opens wide vistas, beckoning to far away and little-known lands.

The word implies exploration of the unknown, the picturesque, the exotic; something wholly new and fresh and attractive.

Too often it is interpreted as physical exploration of mountain peaks, jungles or ancient ruins; too often the average man and woman sighs after the first surge of enthusiasm and inwardly concludes "explorations are not for me; I must stay at home, smothered by the work-a-day world."

Nothing could be more erroneous, since explorations may be made into the realm of thought, delving into the principles of life itself, opening vistas fresher and more inviting than physical explorations could possibly offer.

The Greeks often applied their mental energies to the maxim, "Know thyself," and for them this delving for knowledge was a form of exploration that, if kept at consistently, amply repaid them for the effort they made in that direction. Today the maxim could be taken to heart by the everyday workers of the world and studied with as much gain.

Today you may set yourself a mental goal to attain, just as the explorer, preparing to invade a mountain fastness or a deep jungle, lays his plans and plots his objective. He not only knows how he will go but what he will do and what he expects to find when he arrives at his destination. After you have set the goal you must consider how you will attain it, the best way to go about attaining it and what you expect to gain when you have met success in your endeavor.

In your striving to attain a high mental and spiritual goal you need not work alone. The Mayans, that fast-growing order that is being lauded throughout many nations, are well-known for their spiritual explorations and for their constant endeavors to offer mental progression. They make deep and intensive explorations into the principles of life and the maxims by which life may be planned and made worthwhile.

This order is not a religious order but a great companionship upon the pathway of Life itself, spreading knowledge and delving into the great and abiding principles wrought and lauded by the ancients of many lands and in many climates.

Having set a goal to attain in your life, whether physical, spiritual or mental, you will find you still have many battles to wage before you arrive at your ultimate goal.

You will need constant encouragement, or, in working constantly toward the goal, you will lose sight of the present, the here and now, the things round about you that you might otherwise enjoy or use to your own good and the development of your spiritual and mental life. You will enter periods of discouragement and periods of listlessness when the pursuit of your goal seems futile and impossible.

But know then and constantly hold before you the thought that all things move in cycles, even the energies from cosmic space. These periods of discouragement need not be detrimental, since even in Nature there are periods of progression and retrogression. Know also, however, that there is no standing still and plan on making profitable the periods when you lack the energies to press forward. During these lulls you may take stock of the progress you have made and lay plans for your future. Such activities in your times of dormancy will make them rest periods that are highly beneficial and not lost by any manner of means.

Doubts will beset you constantly in your journey through life, and at such times when the doubts seem to be triumphing over your conviction that your explorations are good and profitable undertakings, you will need strong encouragement and strong companions to keep before you the high ideals with which you undertook your journey into the mental and the spiritual jungle in which you find yourself.

At such times there can be no greater aid for the traveler in the spiritual realm than the great brotherhood known as The Mayans. The Mayans appreciate and realize to the fullest extent the manner in which you will be tried and harassed, and their companionship may be a constant encouragement and a constant method of keeping your worthwhile and highly desirable goal in sight.

This great order, founded on the principles of life that have been tried in the crucible of Time and found to be pure gold, is ready to help you in your explorations. It will offer you the solace offered so many others, and help you to utilize the periods in your life when you lose interest and energy into a restful and productive period that will reinforce the gains you have made and make them secure against the ravages of doubt and distrust.

The Order will teach you how to make the most of all things, how to convert even things that seem utter losses to your own purpose and for your own welfare and progress.

The teachings are extended freely and every effort is made to disseminate the knowledge that will help the forward movement of humanity.

An application is provided herewith that you may participate in this companionship that is proving such a boon to countless other wayfarers to whom such assistance is essential and life-giving.

The Mayans include people from all walks of life, ready to offer companionship that will mean a fuller, deeper and sweeter living for all who aspire to the better things in this world.

Why not be included in their ranks? You will be doubly welcome. Obey that impulse of your higher nature, instead of stifling it. Write today for The Book of the Mayans.
