When Bombs Fell on Rome

When bombs fell on Rome the peoples of the world realized with a fresh poignancy the scope and the sweep of the judgment that has overtaken mankind. Instutionalized Christendom fell under the fires of the wrath of the Law, having departed too far and for too long from its perfect and righteous course. This in its representative sense is the unescapable meaning of the bombs that fell on Rome.

For Rome is a symbol of the organized forces of the Christian Church. It is the cradle of our formulated faith and the seat and center of earth's most powerful ecclestiastical hierarchy. For this reason it had so far escaped the raids which had been visited earlier upon the other capitals of the warring nations of both Europe and Asia. For this reason, too, it was the hope of all peoples, and Christians in particular, that it would be spared from air attack to the last. And yet this civic sanctuary so largely identified with religious faith and spiritual enterprise shares with less venerable places the penalties which war brings upon an altogether unrighteous world.

Rome is a holy city, sanctified by the blood of numberless martyrs to the Christian faith. It was the scene of the early ministry of Peter and Paul, the place where the early Church Fathers foregathered and where "Vicars of Christ" have ruled over a world-wide religious domain in unbroken succession from the days of the Master's disciples until now. Here are scores of sacred monuments testifying to the labors of the faithful from the earliest centuries to this date. In this area, hallowed by age and sacrifice, by service and dedication, bombs have fallen.

That the bombs which rained destruction on Rome were aimed at military establishments only, and the further fact that they destroyed little else does not lessen the force of the event as pointing to the judgment that descends on Christendom, the very heart of which centers both historically and symbolically in Rome. Just as the bombing of this city took place because establishments serving military purposes were seeking safety under the very shadow of holy places, so the Church suffers a shattering shock in this present forty-year period of judgment because it has permitted the secularism of the world to encroach upon its way of holiness. It has compromised itself with mammon, descended into materiality, literalized the lofty spirit of its teachings and by so much become identified with that in the world which must be swept away before the ground can be cleared for fresh beginnings.

Rome is a holy city, but it is a city that has lost its holiness. Christianity is God's greatest revelation of Himself to man, but the Church that expounds that revelation has lost the light. Hence bombs fall on Rome, and the Church suffers a breakdown. With one devastating blow it disappeared from Russia. Spain came nearly removing it. In the Axis nations it has been rendered virtually inoperative. Not enough life is left in the form to save it. Hence it crumbles before the karmic winds that are this day blowing their leveling blasts over the face of the earth.

That so much which we have created should now be in process of disintegration is tragic, but far more tragic would be the indefinite retention of our unenlightened systems and imperfect institutions. Under a beneficent law of progress, such are periodically removed so that other forms capable of expressing a larger measure of truth and justice, of mercy and freedom may come forth.

Rome is identified with the religion of the Western world as in no other city. Here stands St. Peter's, Christianity's most imposing monument. Here the Christian faith, like a seed planted in darkness, first propagated its faith in the secrecy of the catacombs until in due course it emerged above ground with a moral strength great enough to conquer the empire that had earlier driven it into hiding. A new set of qualities became operative in human life, qualities of the heart, qualities of tenderness, mercy, sympathy, compassion, love, justice and brotherliness, qualities that tamed the barbarism of the time, the barbarism that cultivated gluttony and sensuality, that winced at no cruelties, that sought pleasures in the gladitorial combats and provided entertainment by feeding slaves and Chrisians to hungry lions. The spiritual idealism enunciated by the Christ and carried out to the world by Rome set its impress on the life of the West, and in theory that idealism was not challenged or repudiated by any of the peoples who had adopted it until our own day. It was out of that challenge and repudiation that the cleavage developed which culminated in the present world struggle.

But the Rome that contributed so greatly to the finest and the noblest elements in our civilization succumbed to the temptations of worldly power. The Papal government which ruled from the Eternal City was both political and ecclesiastical. By the former it became involved in the shrewd and cunning play for material advantage and in its religious authority it descended to dogmatism, bigotry, intolerance and the crimes which these beget against the free spirit of man. Thus Rome lost the spiritual power it once possessed. The extent of that loss did not dawn upon the more thoughtful students of the times until the city fell under the Fascist dictatorship in 1922, and nothing that has happened since has done so much to bring the fact of Rome's lessened estate home to the mass mind as did the dramatic incident of the recent bombing when, with fire from the skies, our air men struck to dislodge from the Christian Capital the usurping anti-Christian Black Shirt legions that for the score years past have imposed upon the city its ruthless will to place and power. The event prompted the common reflection that the philosophy of material aggression had supplanted that of spiritual idealism. Not the teaching of the meek and lowly Nazarene, but the spirit of conquering, puissant Caesar was held up as the ideal most worthy of Fascist emulation. But the attempted spiritual black-out was short lived. After twenty years the usurpers are sent scurrying for shelter by the armed forces whose purpose it is to reinstate in the Roman city the primacy of the Christian spirit and idealism which in times past it has so greatly served.

The United Nations struck at Rome not to destroy the city, but to liberate it from the evil clutch of an anti-Christian power. That evil was precipitated in the Italian Capital by the Fascist party. That party cannot be rightly charged with creating that evil; it merely came upon the scene and exploited to its end that which was already there. That already existing influence was the karmic product of an age of un-Christian living. Century after century, the Church, so powerfully centered in Rome, preached the Sermon on the Mount but practiced the way of a material aggression. The Fascists were contemptuous of this duality. They wanted neither hypocracy nor contradiction. But neither did they want for their guide the precepts of the Christ. These they repudiated. Truth, justice and mercy as these terms have understood throughout the Christian era were abandoned for a materialistic philosophy that thrust these aside in favor of the supremacy of brute force. They spurned the divided allegiance of the followers of the Christ and went all-out, not for their teachings, but for their line of action as generally practiced under the stress of world affairs. Lets not be the pikers, said they. If we are to be go-getters, lets go good. No squeamishness. Lets take what we need, what we want—without struggle if possible; with it if necessary.

There is Ethopia, for example. Romanize it. Restore the ancient grandeur of the Caesars. Ethiopia cannot resist our arms. As for protests from other quarters, ignore them. We have precedents aplenty. Let us add another chapter to the story of the strong. March on! Might is right! Meekness is weakness. Perpetual peace is not for us. Through struggle the fittest survive, the strongest rule. This is the way to progress!

Such is the philosophy which is on trial in the world today. Having been exposed in all its stark ugliness, some of the peoples who have embraced it in the past—and that includes all peoples—have made a deliberate choice in this decisive hour not to allow it to become the prevailing way in the world of tomorrow. Out of this basically divided attitude of life developed the world conflict, which, while still raging, has now clearly reached the stage which virtually assures the victory to the Forces of Light.

The Church early fell a victim to the self-seeking way of the world. It became covetous of material power, of autocratic domination, of spiritual regimentation. It became a cruel tyrant, using fear as a weapon to hold multitudes in subjection and torturing non-conformists to death by the hundreds of thousands. It has been estimated that some twelve million were put to death for heresy in Europe over a period of about 250 years. The Inquisition ranks as history's major blood-bath. Its horrors have perhaps had no parallel.

The Church entered into partnership with the State with view to spiritualize the latter, but in actuality compromising itself with its worldly ambition and thus forfeiting the inner spiritual light with which it commenced its career. Consequently, wherever the Church became the dominant power, there did not develop the largest measure of freedom, joy and enlightenment, but the very opposite. Bondage, poverty, ignorance and superstition were too often its most conspicuous fruits. Witness Czarite Russia, for example, where eighty per cent of the population were illiterate, or present day Spain and Portugal where the rate remains about as high. Russia, young, energetic and courageous, in its day of violent revolution, therefore overthrew the institution in toto. Spain, less vigorous, its racial powers being largely spent, attempted to do the same only to be plunged into a terrible civil war with the victory going to the reactionary powers of both State and Church. But such a victory cannot be permanent. Reactionary ecclesiasticism is on the way out. The forces of progress have decreed the disintegration of the institution as it now functions. It has made itself too much a part of the world that must needs be destroyed. And so judgment overtakes us. Bombs fall on Rome.

It is the Church as a whole that has fallen short. It permitted itself to swing into the worldly rhythms. It became a partner of the State, fighting its wars, defending its policies, upholding its systems. In the doing of this its higher functions were neglected. There was a waning of spiritual light and power. It actually rejected the very stone that must needs be the corner of the Christian temple, Initiation, and as Rudolph Steiner, the late eminent occultist pointed out, when the Church ceases to recruit its priesthood through Initiation, the inner light goes out.

That light went out early in the historic Church. After the third century of our era it commenced to disappear. So long as the Church was persecuted by worldly power it was truly an institution in the world but not of it. It maintained its spiritual integrity its initiatory teachings, its inner light. But when the powers of the world found they could not destroy this rising religion in their midst, they decided to adopt it, give it official standing and bend it to the State's purposes. Historically we have associated Constantine's acceptance of Christianity as the official religion of the Roman Empire as the time of the passing of true Christianity and the appearance of its stepped-down counterpart, the Christianity of dogma, creed, separativeness and involvement in the many wars that have shamed and humiliated its career from that day to this. Institutionalism triumphed over the spirit and the doctrines became materialized until the result was not just merely a less illuminated Church but actually a subversion of what the first century Christians taught and practiced.

Now at the end of a term fixed by God's rhythmic measures of time, the ground must be cleared of the structures that have become bars to progress and obstacles to light. It goes without saying that in all times the Church has embraced within its fold some of the rarest and most brilliant of the sons of men. But it also goes without saying that throughout the centuries the Church has failed to give hospitality to advanced spirits that have come to earth to emancipate the race from limitations that confine and cripple its aspiring spirit. It did not have a place for such liberators as John Huss, Joan of Arc, Gallileo, Savanarola and so many others of their kind. It was not by benefit of the clergy that Emerson, Whitman and Lincoln contributed so much to freedom and enlightenment.

In the levelling of reactionary, crystallizing beliefs and institutions, the way is being prepared for not only another Reformation, but this time for a recreation of attitudes, beliefs and relationships. Moving from a mentally directed civilization to one that will be more largely heart-inspired, religion will gradually drop its severing creeds and fashion its higher intimations in terms of symbols. Tolstoi in his well known prophecy speaks of the new ethics that will emerge on the other side of the world conflict and that the light of symbolism will outshine the present torch of commercialism. The universal language of the myths, so brilliantly used by the ancient Greeks, will again come into common currency. Imagination will aid the intellect, the former being by nature free and yielding whereas the latter tends toward rigidity and crystalization. A theology embodied in myths and symbols will further religious unity whereas doctrinal differences make for endless dissention and conflict.

The bombs that fell on Rome were the karmic blastings of false idols, of a corrupted order in all its branches, economic, political and ecclesiastical. They signified the end of the Fascist regime, the passing of a secularized Church, the closing of a materially dominated civilization. They carried death and destruction, but only to forms—forms whose day of departure was due in order that others, more servicable to life's growing needs might come forth. Behold, saith the Law, I make all things new!

Palestine—A Restoration of the Holy Land

This brochure in the Pivotal Point Series has just been revised and brought up to date. It has also been considerably enlarged. Following are some of the topical headings:

Great Britain

All interested in the Anglo-Israel thesis will find our brochure on Great Britain of special interest. It carries the subtitle The Biblical Key to Britain's Greatness and is one in the series on Pivotal Points in a Changing World. The highlights of a large subject are treated compactly and comprehensively. Priced at thirty-five cents.

One Out

The world battle has now reached the stage where one of the front line leaders has been eliminated from the struggle. Of the seven most powerful personalities in whom center the global conflict, Mussolini is the first to be put out of action. It is the greatest political overthrow of the war and a prelude to more portentious events to follow.

As one of our principal antagonists, The Fascist chieftain has been consistently presented in his most forbidding features. Cartoonists, columnists and commentators alike have vied with each other in the applauded art of dehumanizing a dangerous rival and arousing the bitterest antipathies against a battling adversary. Ridicule and contempt, which in turn generate bitterness and hatred in the mass mind, have been accepted weapons in the fight.

Whatever justification may be offered for the use of these in the stress of battle, can anything be said in their defense once the foe is beaten? With the foe disarmed, it is for the victor, too, to lay down arms. Whatever action justice may then call for, except it be seasoned with mercy, a renewal of the struggle is inescapable. In the course of justice only "none of us should see salvation".

Press not a falling man too far; 'tis virtue;
His faults lie open to the laws; let them,
Not you, correct him.

These lines of Shakespeare, spoken by Chamberlain to Surrey as the latter flung one bitter charge after another at the fallen Woolsley, are appropriate to the case of the deposed Italian leader. Righteous judgment cannot be expected where prosecution and judge and jury are one. But "the laws" to which the fallen aggressor's "faults lie open", may be trusted to execute in their own way and in their own time the perfect judgment. If there be vengance, it is Mine, saith the Lord.

Like every other powerful figure in the forefront of the world conflict, Mussolini has been an instrument in the hands of destiny carrying out the vast changes necessary to the planetary adjustments now under way. The will of God to project more of His Plan into the life of mankind has gone forth in accentuated measure. Personal ambition, be it racial or individual, appropriates this fresh influx of energy to promote its own ends. By the aid of it Mussolini rose to heights of power. With that power he earned credits even as he incurred liabilities, and it is on the whole of his record that the righteous law will judge him.

A glance over some part of that record may be useful in tempering the harshness of the judgment of injured peoples. Consider the conditions and circumstances that brought Fascism and its dictatorship into being. Italy had come through the first world war a victor but without the fruits of victory.. She received neither what was promised or hoped for. The peace settlement left her bitter and disillusioned. She felt she had been deceived and that her allies had made a mockery of the ideals and principles for which they had professedly fought. Not that her own actions had been honorable when breaking with the Triple Alliance in order to secure the greater prize held out to her by the Allies. As she broke her promise to Germany and Austria, so the Allied promises to her were broken at Versailles. It was tit for tat.

The situation made for spiritual lethargy. There was a moral slump. Forces of inner and outer disintegration set in. The forces that had been rallying the people for a time to new and better issues were fairly swept away. Anarchy threatened.

It was in this state that a strong man arose, assumed firm control, reunited the nation by reminding them of their great and glorious past, and appealed to them to rebuild their weakened national structure in a manner worthy of their ancient forebears. That man was Mussolini.

The people needed leadership and knew it. They saw in the Fascist movement a promise of national rehabilitation. They rallied to its banners, they supported its program and acclaimed its leader the absolute dictator of their land.

Powerful forces went into action. Mussolini became for the time the regenerator of his people. He cleaned up the infamous Black Hand. He inaugurated extensive public works, restored ancient monuments, beautified Rome, drained the Pontine marshes, built roads and performed numerous other important services for his country. People were put to work, they were inspired with purpose, life was given new meanings. All of this is to be remembered. However greatly we deplore the Fascists' rape of Ethopia, their part in destroying Republican Spain, their alliance with the Nazis, their attack on prostrate France and all the woe that has followed in the train of these events, credit for constructive achievements in the earlier years of their rule should neither be withheld nor minimized.

The original Fascist program was internal rebuilding. This was constructive. It was when the program went beyond this, when success inflated the Fascist ego and the regime turned to imperial exploits that forces of destruction took hold. Facism then embraced was as an instrument of natonal policy and lauded it as a means to achieve a more deserved place in the sun. Neither law nor conscience was recognized as of valid restraint upon the mounting imperial ambition. Says the Fascist leader: "I would make a league with the devil if by so doing I could help restore the Roman Empire." In this mood the regime entered into cynical pacts and embarked upon brutal aggressions.

But responsibility for these aggressions must be widely shared. Forcible withholding by those who had over much invited forcible seizure by those who did not have enough. Two wrongs do not make a right, but the point is that the one wrong does not stand alone. It is companioned by a second, and that second is on the other side.

The empire building of the Fascists derived its primary stimulus from the greatness that was Rome's in the days of the Caesar. Mussolini called to life the spirit of a glorious past. It took possession of him and by the power of a dynamic personality he aroused his followers to a like enthusiasm for a restoration of bygone glories. The tradition of greatness and power was evoked again in the life of a people who accepted regimentation in the belief that it was the way to the realization of a great dream.

The direction was wrong; the choice a mistake; the results disastrous. But what people or party or leader has not made a wrong choice, taken a wrong turn, and perhaps also encountered disaster and defeat? In the presence of a fallen leader it is not condemnation and revenge but forgiveness and compassion that the hour calls for.

Hear what an Illumined Mind has to say to the point. The words are by the Tibetan Brother as given in The Beacon, November, 1939.

Blame not the personalities involved or the men who produce these events before which we stand today bewildered and appalled. They are only the product of the past and the victims of the present. At the same time, they are the agents of destiny, the creators of the new order and the initiators of the new civilization; they are the destroyers of what must be destroyed before humanity can go forward along the lighted way. They are the embodiment of the personality of humanity. Blame yourselves, therefore, for what is today transpiring and seek not to evade responsibility by placing it upon the shoulders of spectacular men or any statesman, dictator or upon any group. Look not to one person or to one group of persons and accuse them of causing the present world condition. Look not also to any one person or group to bring liberation or to find a solution of the world problem. This is for humanity iitself to do. Humanity must take action and will do so, when the right time comes. To recognize joint responsibility, joint mistakes, ancient errors of judgment, wrong attitudes and habits of thought, world wide selfish purpose and intent, a universal spirit of aggression which, down the ages, has influenced first one nation and then another, the tendency last century to crystalize and become static, the reactionary forces on every hand,—these are universal qualities and no nation and no race is free of guilt or has entirely clean hands. Also, no one national group is purely wrong and evil or purely good and unselfish. There are mixed motives everywhere. Nationalism, aggression, selfishness and cruelty in all countries face a desire for world understanding, peaceful relations, and unselfish and beneficent spirit also in all countries. The Forces of Light find their adherents and their workers in every country though some are subjected to greater handicaps in expression than in others. So also do the Forces of Materialism. And in between these two great groups stand the masses—waiting for the emergence of fresh opportunity and new revelation.

With the understanding of the truly enlightened there can be no hateful criticism, no heartless condemnation, no vaunting self-righteousness. But there is the spirit that forgives, that reconciles, that uplifts and redeems. Those who oppose, they, too, are our brothers.

WHY NOT BEGIN

Whether the time be slow or fast,
Enemies, hand in hand,
Must come together at the last
And understand.
No matter how the die is cast,
Or who may seem to win—
We know that we must love at last—
Why not begin.

Italy—The Fascist Interlude is the leading article in the Interpreter for January this year. A limited number of copies are still available. 10 cents.

Our Next Freedom—America's Economic Liberation

A pamphlet containing a reprint of two articles which appeared in the May and June, 1943 Interpreters. The first of these articles, Our Next Freedom, stresses the fact that the only economic freedom fully acceptable to the American people is not merely freedom from want but also freedom from the humiliation of charity, private and public, and freedom from the regimentation which the latter carries with it. The indications that a radical change in our national economy will occur in the Forties is presented in the light of astrology, the pyramid, the symbology of our Great Seal and biblical measurements of time.

The second article presents the biblical basis for our future economy and discusses the principles that were successfully used for a thousand years in ancient Israel. It deals specifically with land laws, taxes, money, interest and the laws of cycles.

A subject of the greatest importance at this crucial hour is our nation's history. America's major problem of this century is the economic, and its focus falls into the Forties.

The 24-page pamphlet is 20 cents; three for a dollar.

ONTARIO, CANADA

Your message for the month of June, "Biblical Basis for America's Future Economy," is most timely and very acceptable, and we in Canada appreciate it keenly as you may gather from the election just over in Ontario. Enclosed please find $1.50 for a year's subscription and I am passing this book round to some of my friends to read and to induce them to subscribe If you have back numbers I would be glad to order them.

The Twelve Labors of Man

By CORINNE DUNKLEE HELINE

A series of twelve studies outlining humanity's progressive steps in accomplishing the Great Work. These readings are correlated to the Grecian myth of the Labors of Hercules and the biblical story of the life of Samson, together with the epochal happenings of our time as interpreted in the starry script.

SEPTEMBER – VIRGO

In the Labor of Virgo, Hercules was instructed to procure the famous girdle of Venus which was possessed by the famed Queen of the Amagirdle of Venus which was possessed by the famed Queen of the Amazons, Hippolyte, and was always worn by her. The Amazons were a tribe strength and courage. The word Amazon means "strong", "powerful".

A girdle is something which surrounds one and symbolizes the enveloping and protecting aura. The biblical sage describes it thus:

> The eternal God is thy dwelling place
> And underneath are the everlasting arms. Deut. 33:27.

This is the aura of love (girdle of Venus) with which both individuals and nations need to fortify themselves at all times, and more particularly in difficult days like the present. The need for such protection is perhaps more urgent and the call for it more persistent than it has ever been in any previous time in the world's history. This particular Labor of Hercules should, therefore, engage the attention of all mankind now as never before.

Much attention is being given in both the Press and on the radio to the subject of fellowship and the role its cultivations will play in the life of the post-war world. The true meaning of fellowship is but an increased capacity for loving, a wider realization of the oneness of the whole. In this realization is to be found the only permanent solution of the world problem.

The Girdle Ceremonial by reason of its inner symbolic meaning, has constituted one of the most elaborate rituals of the Orient in connection with the honors accorded to prospective mothers. This ancient mystic ceremonial is still observed in the Japanese Royal household when the Empress, accompanied by her ladies-in-waiting dressed in full court regalia, appears before the sacred shrine to notify the Imperial Ancestors of the coming event. Here, as a finale of the elaborate ritual, she is wrapped around with the sacred maternity girdle, a magnificent silk belt twelve feet in length. This office is performed by the Grand Master of the Rituals in the Imperial Household.

This Virgo Labor of Hercules is the first which has not been concerned with the refinement of the animalistic nature. This Labor deals with a higher phase of development, and has to do with the purely feminine side of man, namely, the qualities of soul.

This is always the most difficult step in the work of regeneration, or redemption, and so it was at this place that Hercules failed to meet the high requirements of his testing. He secured the girdle (the queen was willing that he should have it), but he caused her death in the battle which followed, and thereby was lost to him the magic power of the girdle.

Soul power and universality of consciousness develop simultaneously. One is not possible without the other. When woman (the soul) is killed, or subjugated, spiritual knowing becomes a mere head possession finding expression chiefly in words. The girdle of love then loses its magic. Only by true living and right doing can that magic power be developed and retained.

It is humanity's neglect of this feminine principle of the soul that has resulted in the lamentable state of inequality that now exists between man and woman. Before the Virgo Labor of Hercules has been finally and completely accomplished, woman will assume her rightful place beside man, politically, economically, and in all other fields of endeavor. The figure which typifies the New Aquarian Age is androgynous, half male and half female. The New Age cannot be born until this equality is effected. As the earth contacts more clearly the rhythms of the coming Aquarina, evidences of the rightful relationship between man and woman are becoming ever more marked.

A recent manual issued by the United States Civil Service Commission so aroused the ire of the board of the American Association of University Women, in classing women as "physically handicapped" when it comes to job placement, that it made spirited protest to the commission.

Results have already been achieved. Harry B. Mitchell, president of the commission, has written the board telling it that a new edition of the manual is now being printed and that all references to women as being the physically handicapped class have been deleted.

Originally the manual stated that women must be considered as handicapped because a large number are limited in physical ability to perform certain jobs and that they also have a high percentage of absenteeism due to illness.

In view of the work being done by women and the almost feverish effort of employers to secure more women, the board found that classifying them with the handicapped was both shocking and archaic.

Mr. Mitchell writes the board that since the commission made its original survey, on which the manual was based, "the employment picture has changed, both on the attitude of the employer and the condition of the labor market."

Nor is the A.A.U.W. satisfied with the fact that qualified women are not being called upon to assist with today's governmental problems. It recommends the appointment of women specialists to the military forces and to the School of Government for Occupied Territories.

The earliest symbol of Virgo was that of a woman with wings, or the spirit of womanhood deified; also a harbinger of the New Age woman. In her left hand she bears a sheaf of wheat, which is marked by one of the greatest stars of the first magnitude, the great blue-white Spica, one of the high spiritual power centers of the heavens. Early man erected many temples to receive the emanations from this mighty star. There is record of such a one in Thebes as far back as 32,000 B.C. In Egypt this lovely star was called the Lute-Bearer, by the Hindus, the Lamp, and in China it was known as the Pearl. For Chinese poet-astronomers, the Milky Way was the Yellow Road over which the goddess Virgo had scattered ripened corn.

Wheat is an androgynous grain capable of reproducing itself, and was brought to the primitive earth as a love gift by the Gods from Venus. Scientists have recently isolated Vitamin E, the vitamin of fertility, in wheat. The statement that wheat is the staff of life is true in a much greater and deeper sense than is generally understood at present.

Virgo is the great Divine Mother of the heavens. The highest feminine Initiates belonging to the several world religions have all received direct tutelage from the high Beings of this constellation, who, in esoteric Christian parlance are designated as the Lords of Wisdom. It is for this reason that the early Church considered Virgo as the special sign of the blessed Virgin, and it is also why many of the divine mysteries connected with her life are also related to this sign.

In the religion of Babylon, in accordance with the Akkadian calendar, the sixth month was represented by the "Descent of Ishtar", which has reference to the great cosmic Planetary Conception which occurs annually as the Sun is in Virgo.

In Aztec star-lore, Virgo was called the great Earth Mother, and also the Magic Mother. The keywords of Virgo are Healing, Service and Humility. The biblical keyword: "Let him that is greatest among you become the servant of all".

Virgo is generally considered to be a mental sign. When the mind has become Christed, and thereby illumined, it is able to rise to the high meaning of the Mercury exaltation. Knowledge (human knowing) is then transformed into Wisdom (spiritual understanding).

The astrological key in the life of Christ Jesus that is correlated with Virgo is that of the Teaching in the Temple. The High Priests (mental reasoning; Mercury ruling Virgo) were amazed and puzzled by this new and higher teaching brought by the young Master, namely, the true wisdom received and disseminated through the Christed mind (astrologically represented by the exaltation of Mercury in Virgo).

Biblical Parallel

And it came to pass afterward, that Samson loved a woman in the valley of Sorek, whose name was Delilah.

Entice him and see wherein his great strength lieth, and by what means we may prevail against him, that we may bind him to afflict him, and we will give thee every one of us eleven hundred pieces of silver.

Judges 16: 4-5

The name Delilah means 'delicate' or 'feminine', and symbolizes the constellation of Virgo. The Sun (Samson) reaches its greatest height in the heavens and emanates its most powerful radiations of spiritual strength just before passing into Virgo, which symbolizes the laying of Samson's head in the lap of Deliliah.

The Phillistines (astrologically, the lowering or descent of the Sun's power) seek to overcome Samson by shearing his hair, (the shortening of the Sun's rays) and by putting out his eyes (the shorter days and longer nights of the months immediately following the Autumn Equinox).

There is a tremedous power unleashed throughout the universe as the Sun passes from Leo into Virgo. This force used destructively causes blindness of spiritual vision. When used constructively it leads to the glory of the Assumption and the new Immaculate Conception as outlined in the path of the Christian Mysteries in relation to the sign of Virgo and the blessed Madonna.

"The Great Sphinx unites the two zodical signs of Leo and Virgo. The Lord, who is represented by the sign of the Sun (son), is leaving Leo, the place of his kingly power, and entering Virgo for a period of self-imposed humiliation, then passing through the twelve stages of redemptive work, returns finally to the glory of the king in Leo, and in his passage through that typical constellation proclaims the conqueror of the serpent, the bringer of all blessings, the Lion of Judah, the Omega."

(D. B. Benjamin)

Ireland—A Virgo Ruled Country

The emerald Isle is a land poetic at heart, rich in imagery and strong in faith. This Celtic spirit of beauty struggles for expression in an uncomprehending environment. It is opposed, rejected and slain by the very forces that are dedicated to its cultivation and preservation. It is slain by a Church which has lost its vision and by a social order that has grown insensible to the finer things in life.

The Ireland of the poet and the idealist has little in common with the actualities of present day Ireland. That ideal image of the poet is not a mere potentiality belonging to the future. It is a reality that has had noble expression in the past. Historic Ireland has known better and more beautiful days. Ireland carried the torch of learning into the continent of Europe when that continent was yet in barbaric darkness.

Ireland was an early seat of the Ancient Wisdom. By virtue of this ancient heritage the Irish still retain considerable powers of clairvoyance which has filled the pages of their literature with trolls and fairies together with sprites of air and water.

Rudolph Steiner states that Ireland is a focal point for occult forces as are but few other areas in all the world. There is an inner-plane, or deep spiritual reason, for Ireland's present neutrality which will be better understood in the years to come. Brighter and happier days are in store for this lovely Isle of mystery and enchantment, this land, which is coeval with Greece, and where the Renaissance had begun many hundred of years before it was known in Italy.

A fair, a free and united land was the prophecy of one of Ireland's best beloved and most deeply spiritual heroes, St. Columcille, of the Sixth Century, who was called "Columcille of the Prophecies". May this prophecy know an early fulfillment in the post-war agenda for a new world to be based on justice and on peace.

As the Sun enters Virgo this year, there is a probability of increased tempo in war activities in both the Atlantic and Pacific battle areas. Labor problems on the home front are likely to reach a new high, and international economic problems are also likely to mount to staggering proportions. The new world pattern is slowly but surely emerging from the loom of the Gods. May our world leaders be wise enough to receive its inspirations and to work harmoniously together to bring about its complete fulfillment.

Healing and Regeneration Through Color

The Color brochure is now available in form and style uniform with the last printed edition of the Music booklet. It is also the work of the Rowny Press, Santa Barbara. It is done with a quality craftsmanship that harmonizes with the inspirational contents of its pages. The interest evoked by these two publications on Color and Music has been quite remarkable, extending in many directions beyond the boundaries of the purely metaphysical.

The topics treated include the following: The Mystery of Color, The Holy Ghost Manifest in Tone and Color, The Twelve Signs and the Seven Planets in Chromotherapy, Color Symbology of the Signs and Planets in Relation to Jewels, Stellar Hieroglyphics in the Plant World, Flowers and the Mystery of Color, Music and Color, Color and the Human Voice, Color Therapeutics, The Aurara-tone, Healing through the Aurara-tone Ministry, Color and the Regenerative process. The Human Aura, Color Values in Character Building, and Supernatural Powers in Color.

A great deal of original esoteric research has gone into the above. Fascinating as reading; invaluable for study and practical application. Paper covers, 50c. Deluxe $1.00.

Immortality Now

A Truth to be Realized
An Organized Effort to Serve
A Coordinated Effort toward Clearer Understanding

An impersonal service rendered anonymously and gratuitously by individuals in scattered parts who are gathered around and co-ordinated by a central station located in Utica, N. Y. and which is reached by addressing P. O. Box 87 of that city.

Folders used in promulgating the truth of man's immortality and the significance of the three outstanding events marking the soul's passage through an earth life, bear the following titles:

LIFE SPRINGS ETERNAL
LOVE SPRINGS ETERNAL
LIFE SPRINGS ETERNAL

The first deals with birth, the second, marriage, the third, death

Two rituals have also been prepared for those who may wish to use them, one for Memorial Day, the other, a service for the departed. Also a sticker, IMMORTALITY NOW, with the added words, "In Him Is Life".

Immortality Now also circulates books dealing with the subjects around which its work revolves. It lends copies to individuals, and as funds permit, it presents others to public libraries free of charge. It does not sell the books it so distributes or which in its published matter it offers as suggested reading. The commercial aspect is completely out. The returns to servers in this group are not those of the money mart, but of the kind that moths and rust cannot destroy.

As repeatedly explained, IMMORTALITY NOW performs all services without a personal intrusion of any kind whatsoever. The matter is mailed anonoymously. No local address appears anywhere. Nor is the matter accompanied by sectarian propaganda or commercial solicitation of any kind. All co-ordinators are required to keep the work strictly impersonal. The birth, death, and marriage notices in the papers supply the maling information.

If you are looking for some way in which to utilize odd moments of your time for the benefit of others, IMMORTALITY NOW is an organized channel of service that can provide you with the very opportunity you are looking for. The need for it is unlimited. It s a blessed service and more blessed is he who gives than he who receives.

Full particulars concerning this completely non-commercial enterprise will be sent on request. Address P. O. Box 87, Utica, N. Y.

A MESSAGE FROM THE COORDINATOR

The immortality of the spirit is a present fact, not a future condition only. It does not arrive with the death of the body, but, belonging as it does, to the uncreated spirit, it knows neither beginning nor end. That which is incorruptible must also be ungenerable. Such is the spirit of man. It is immortal—it is immortal now.

This realization of man as an eternal spirit whose existence is not dependent upon the body is growing steadily deeper and clearer in the consciousness of the mass mind. The present tribulation through which the race is passing is contributing greatly to this end. In pain the soul of man is quickened to a keener sense of the Unchangeable Reality.

The service rendered by Immortality Now aims to further this universal awakening. Through its cooperators it touches in an intimate, yet completely impersonal way, thousands of individuals in moments of special psychological receptivity with a message that points to the things that endure. At the time of a birth that message points to life's perpetual renewal of forms, at marriage to a love that instinctively demands eternity for its fulfilment, and at death to the unquenchable faith in the heart of the race that a discarded form does not mean the extinction of the conscious being that dwelt within it. Manifestation on the physical plane ceases, at least for a period, when the material body is laid aside, but the spirit continues to exist in a subtler vehicle and on another level of being.

Such are the truths sown like seeds into the minds of people by the servers in Immortality Now. In their silent, inconspicious and publicly unrecognized ways, they are bearing witness to existing facts in nature that are perhaps less clearly discerned or realized by many whom in their service they contact. These cooperators are to many of the people they serve what the instruments in an airplane are to the pilot of the plane. The aviator does not rely on his physical senses to give him his altitude, speed, exact location at any given moment, supply of fuel and lubricant and so on. The instruments before him tell him all these things. He relies on their testimony. They register correctly what he does not perceive directly, but which are essential to the safe and true steering of the plane. Thus things unseen to the aviator are brought into correct relations with things seen.

Cooperators in Immortality Now convey to many in a somewhat similar manner evidence of existing, though unseen realities. Such a service is especially important at this time when in the course of war so many are being taken out of this life. In an hour of bereavement a cooperator enters the home by means of an anonymous message and brings a word of light and help. He may then become the occasion for calling the latent knowledge into conscious awareness. That which was dormant may be kindled into life. Thus Immortality Now dawns upon another soul, and yet another. Multiply the numbers times enough, and mankind will one day walk in the light even as He is in the light.

VALUES THE WORK

Writes a Cooperator in Virginia: "I hold the effects of the Immortality Now program as far-reaching as my personal teaching ever could be, and it is my earnest wish that each folder mailed will bring the comfort or inspiration needed in each case."

THE CHURCH COOPERATES

A Presbyterian minister in Rye, New York writes: "I am indeed grateful to you for the leaflet "Life Springs Eternal", and would appreciate it if you would forward a number of additional copies to us. I am enclosing 25c in stamps to cover the postage charges.

ONE WITH GOD. By Alfred Vischer. Mimeographed Blue bookcraft cover Bound by plastic spiral process. 9x11—125 pp. $5.00. Published by author, 11319 Hessler Road, Cleveland 6, Ohio.

One With God is a metaphysical treatise in which the Scriptures are used in practical application to daily problems. The brochure contains five general chapters of approximately 25 pages each under the following titles: Creation, Reflection Manifestation, Religion and Reality.

The subject matter is interestingly correlated primarly with the first chapter of Genesis and the first chapter of St. John's Gospel under the following notations:

1. God (Creative Spirit; 2. Man's Likeness of Spirit (Christ); 3. Lord God or Jehovah (Human Mind); 4. Adam and Eve (The Formed Image); 5. Serpent (Mental Suggestion).

The acting principals of John's Gospel include:

1. God (The Eternal Source of all Being); 2 Word (Medium which forms God's infinite idea into the apperance of finite man); 3. Word made Flesh (Embodiment of the original Son made perceptible to the senses); 4. The Man John (Physical manifestation bearing witness of the indwelling Christ Light).

These corelations are used interestingly in outlining the process by which man passes from the shadow world into Reality, from darkness into light, from finite knowing into Cosmic Realization. No earnest student could fail to benefit by the spiritual insight and understanding conveyed in the pages of this book. It is a servant of Light.

WHY AM I LIKE THAT? By Gustav Ekstrom. The Astrological Book Shop 3013 Holmes Ave., So. Minneapolis Minn. 34pp Mimeographed. Price $1.00

The keyword chart compiled by this author is a framework of sound astrological knowledge valuable to students at any stage of their studies. For each sign there is the cosmic keyword, the zodiacal type, the best and worst qualities, the special interest and the mental type. In small white circles round the outer edge of this well designed chart are the keywords for the decanates of the signs.

The descriptions of character traits in the booklet are given largely in terms of keywords. The analysis of the types gives a brief but highly satisfactory outline of the qualities of each decanate. Of the first decanate of Aquarius we read, "The reforming tendency is large, while action is bold and confident." Originality is the keyword, Uranus being the ruler. In the last decanate of this sign, where Venus presides, the author says, "The energies and practically any expression are linked strongly to others. Friendship has large influence in determining the success or failure."

New students need this book; all will find it interesting.

THE TEMPLE OF GOD. By John Jocelyn. The Aquarian College, 1552 President Street, Brooklyn, N. Y. Mimeographed. 50 cents.

In this collection of Mr. Jocelyn's writings, "The Spirit of Speech and the Secret of Sound" is of particular importance in these critical days. Students will like "The Metamorphosis of the Ancient Wisdom to the New Wisdom of the Christ". The author says, "The old myths and legends show one thing very clearly: that there was a time in the remote past when there existed a divine ancient Wisdom, but now this Wisdom has disappeared, and a NEW Wisdom is needed urgently." All the articles are purposeful, intensely sincere.

THE HILL OF TARA By F. E. Rogers. Box 31, North Park, San Diego, Calif. 32 pp. 35 cents.

It was Rudolf Steiner who said that Ireland is a land unlike any other place on earth. The strange story of Tara and its ancient kings, and the fabulous wonder palace where they reigned, is unlike any other story.

It was at Tara that the provincial kings held conclaves, first instituted by Ollam Foohla, known to have been the prophet Jeremiah, who, with the Princess Tea Tephi, daughter of Zedekiah, arrived in Ulster in 538 B. C. More about this remarkable part of Irish history, stories of the later kings and the events of their times, and the fall of Tara, are told in this booklet.

Mr. Rogers has done much careful research in preparation for the writing of this story, which, he says, is a mixture of legend, fable and romance. He tells it in a delightful way.

ASTRO CHART. By Jeanne Classen, 12x10; 25c Supplied by IRIS, 2517 Page Drive, Altedena, California.

An eight column tabulation giving month, sign, symbol, ruling planet, basic nature, keynote, lessons to learn and tool to work with. Keywords thus visualized are invaluable aids not only to the beginner, but even to more advanced students and practitioners. A useful piece of work, neatly and effectively done.

In My Day Eleanor Roosevelt spoke recently about the kind of a world she hoped would one day be ours—a world of justice, and, therefore, also of peace, a world in which people of different lands and races would live as brothers and welcome each others presence, a world wherein would be no want and no bondage and so on. "This" she said "is the only vision that can make the world's suffering bearable, and sometimes it seems to fade into the gray of night and leave us cold and desperate. Then only the words of great leaders can restore the vision and give us the heart to work for it again. So my plea is that those who have the gift of words use them in these days to give the people hope by which to live and dream, for without the vision we shall perish."

In last month's review of the magazine, Invictus—The Health and Life Builders Courier, the publication address was omitted. It is 53 West Jackson Blvd Chicago, 4, Ill. An inquiry so addressed will bring interesting response.

In Magic Gardens of Light

C. H. D.

A new book by Corinne Dunklee is scheduled to be off the press by about November first. It is entitled In Magic Gardens of Light It is a flower book, but unlike any you have seen before. It is, in fact, about angels and flowers, and tells about the ministry which the angels perform for humanity through the agency of flowers, impressing upon each and every species some special quality, some specific message. A number of the more familiar and beautiful flowers, wild and cultivated, are selected for extended interpretation.

Here is a volume of extraordinary fascination. It is exquisite in theme and treatment and its published form will be appropriate to the subject. The book will also contain a plate done by Ruth Harwood, which, if taken by itself, and framed, might well be counted worth the full price of the book. The volume will make an ideal Christmas gift.

In Magic Gardens of Light is being published by the Rowny Press, Santa Barbara. Watch for further particulars in our next issue.

The Christmas gift lists are in the making. May we suggest that you glance over our list of publications? Here are double values—values in dollars and cents and values in the coin of the spirit.

Every pioneering journal that stands outside of the commercial field needs special support. If it champions an ideal, a program or a movement in which you believe, give it your best consideration. Stand by it in such way as you can.

The Healing of Miracles of Christ Jesus Esoterically Interpreted

A New Publication by Corine Dunklee Heline

Every biblical healing contains a key to spiritual illumination, or Initiation, it is this truth which the author developes in this study. The treatise discusses the many aspects of occult law that were brought into operation by the Master in His healing ministry, and how the outer ailments were always treated in relation to their inner causation.

The several healings are taken up separately. There are four for blindness, the two healings of lepers, the demonical cases, the man healed of palsy, another of dropsy, and yet another of the withered hand, and many more The resurrection of Lazarus and the raising of the widow's son of Nain receive several pages in which the reader will find some deeply esoteric material touching initiatory rites pertaining to the Christian Mysteries.

This is another substantial contribution to the New Age Bible Interpretation whose purpose it is to make more widely known the esoteric features of man's supreme textbook on the method of spiritual attainment through what is called Initiation.

The brochure is mimeographed; printed covers; 31pp., 7x10, 50c postpaid.

An Esoteric Survey of The Bible

A Series of Twelve Lecture Lessons

The general survey presented in these lecture lessons by Corinne Dunklee places a number of keys in the hands of the student with which to unlock the hidden mysteries of the Bible. Without the esoteric keys much of the Bible must necessarily remain a closed book. "Without a parable spake He not." It is with the Bible as with the Zohar in which we read: "The recitals are the vestments of the Thorah; woe to him who takes this vestment for the Thorah itself."

The stories of the Old Testament and the miracles of the New need no longer be explained away; it is but necessary to learn how to read them aright in order to understand their deeper and multiple meanings in relation to the life of the spirit.

This course also makes it clear that the Bible iis above all a textbook on Initiaton. When this is generally recognized by the Church and occultism at large, both will experience a revitalization that will invest them with a power and an influence now little suspected by the average churchgoer or occult student.

Nothing So Clear and Comprehensive

A minister in Shelton, Conn., had this to say about the above work after covering the first lesson: "was most interested in the first lesson and wish to enroll in order that I may complete this particular layout of Bible study. I can not tell you what a revelation it has all been to me, and, although I have taken several particular interpretations of the Bible and followed through with them, yet nothing has been as clear and comprehensive as this material."

Occult Anatomy and the Bible

A series of lecture-lessons

By CORINNE DUNKLEE HELINE

Few people realize that one of the seven keys to the Bible is the physiological. Few realize how literally and profoundly true it is that man is made in the image of God. Yet God is not to be thought of as anthropomorphic. It is man who is to be recognized as divine.

Man contains within himself all the principles of Deity. They are as yet manifest only in small part. It doth not yet appear what man shall be. But there is much that we can learn about that which is still unmanifest, and such knowledge can go far toward helping us to consciously and systematically unfold the hidden latencies.

Man is a god in the making. He is a miniature universe. In ancient days, a manikin was placed on the altar as a symbol of man's divinity, and in which aspect he was an object of the deepest veneration. Consonant with this truth, a modern occult teacher recommends three books as of prime importance to every occult student, namely: the Bible, a dictionary, and a textbook on anatomy. How many are wise enough to make an anatomy the third book of their library? Perhaps it has not yet found any place whatsoever.

Paracelsus also recommends the study of three Books above all others: Nature, Man, and the Bible, the latter interpreting the other two. And these three books it is that form the subject matter in the Course on Anatomy and the Bible. It presents important material on a much-neglected subject.

Lesson topices include: Archetypes or Celestial Patterns, Prenatal Experiences of the Human Spirit; the Seed Atom and the Silver Cord; the Immaculate Conception; the Temple of the Human God; the Blood—An Arcane Mystery; the Nervous System; Food and its Spiritual Significance; Healing; the Seven Ductless Glands; and the New Birth through Regeneration.

Twelve lessons. Mimeographed. 30c each postpaid; four for $1.10; all twelve for $3.00.

Shakespeare

Shakespeare is our lay bible, and like the Bible it contains a complete, consistent esoteric structure which remains as untouched by academic interpretations as are the truths of Initiation in the Bible by its orthodox exponents. It is the book within the book that forms the greater spiritual treasure of both.

Two of Skakespeare's plays have so far appeared in a projected series that will include all the poet's major dramas, namely, The Merchant of Venice and Romeo and Juliet. The esoteric theme of the Merchant in the Head Versus the Heart Judgment and of Romeo, The Law of Polariity. Art covers, thirty-five cents each.

READERS' COMMENTS

CLEVELAND, OHIO

Enclosed find check for $1.50 which I trust will put me in your good graces for another year. I read each issue with absorbing interest.

EUGENE, OREGON

Your Russian article is excellent. Had been wondering about so much you speak of in its contents. Certainly the Interperter will have a larger place in the Sun before many Moons, since it has Truth enfolded in its pages.

CANADA

The New Age Interpreter reaches us regularly. The article "Our Next Freedom" is wonderful. I hope you have more May issues for the enclosed addresses as they are all public speakers.

LIBERTY, NORTH CAROLINA

"The New Age Interpreter" is not only newsy—it is prophetic, inspiring and cooperative. From the July issue, we made contact with "Let's Live". This too, has cooperative spirit. Truly, I not only enjoy the "New Age Interpreter", but all the many new friends and their part in the scheme of things.

CALIFORNIA

The article in June number entitled, "The Biblical Basis for America's Future Economy", is the best thing of its kind I have ever read. I am sure it will come to pass just as you give it and that the change is, so to speak, right on us. But as we talk with all classes of people it seems as if it was centuries away. Many struggle so desperately against the change that must come.

MARYLAND

Most timely is your article, "The Biblical Basis for America's Future Economy". It is splendid, convincing, clear as crystal and I trust it will reach some members of our Government. I would that ALL would read, absorb and digest it. May it remove the spiritual blindness of the majority of our people. You deserve great praise and credit for handling your subject in such a masterly style. You never overdo, and this article is as always, perfectly clear and beautiful.

BRATTLEBORO, VERMONT

How shall I ever put into words my intense appreciation of your publication: "New Age Interpreter"? I enjoyed tremendously your article entitled: "The Passing of Three Great Scientists—Crile-Carver-Tesla". This one article alone reveals the great New World now being born. The articles by Corinne Dunklee Heline are of supreme importance and show a masterly handling of events in history related to the needs of humanity today. I wish to congratulate her again. all the many, new friends and their part in the scheme of things.

A CO-OPERATIVE SUBSCRIBER

We have a generously co-operative subscriber in Wilmington, Delaware, who inserted an advertisement in a local daily which was captioned: "Metaphysics. Send for free sample copy. Highly educational and important." He then listed the New Age Interpreter together with six other publications of like nature.

In a letter that came with a clipped advt., our friend expressed the hope that if this matter were brought to the attention of our readers there would undoubtedly be some who would have sufficient interest in promulgating the New Age ideals to do the same in their respective communties. "These messages should be spread", he writes; "The masses are hungry for the truth and it is I believe, the psychological time now to present it."

We are grateful for sustaining efforts such as these. It is by co-operation of the kind that the New Age forces gather the necessary strength with which to cope with the vast program that draws nearer daily and with ever more pressing urgency.

Entrances and Exits

I see tremendous entrances and exits.
I see new combinations. I see the solidarity of races.
