THE ARENA, The Great Liberal Review

* * of America,

AND THE PSYCHICAL REVIEW.

Arena Announcement for 1893. Psychical Science Discussed by Master Brains.

The series of psychical papers by leading scientific investigators which has created so much interest, will be continued during the ensuing year. The Arena was the first great review of the world to attempt anything like a comprehensive presentation of little understood facts relating to psychical phenomena of our time. These papers, prepared by many of the most eminent thinkers of the day, have attracted general notice, as would naturally be the case when such persons as ALFRED RUSSEL WALLACE, CAMILLE FLAMMARION, Rev. M. J. SAVAGE, and W. H. H. MYERS present facts, and seriously discuss evidence pertaining to a realm of thought which, until a few years since, was regarded beyond the pale of critical scientific research. Through The Arena many of our most careful thinkers have been led to investigate psychical problems, and from every section we have received many communications relating to these interesting papers, which indicate a far-reaching interest. Our papers for 1893, like those of the past, will be from the pens of persons recognized as careful, conservative, and competent scientific investigators.

Among other important features will be papers upon the following themes:—

The World's Progress During a Quarter of a Century, Social Conditions of To-Day, The Outlook, or Present-Day Tendencies, Women Wage-Earners of America and Europe, The Religious Problems of the Day, Educational Papers, Self-Culture Papers, Bacon-Shakespeare Case, Critical Biographical Sketches, Short Stories, Prose Etchings and Pen Pictures, The Books of the Day.

Each number contains the portrait of some leader of thought.

PSYCHICS: FACTS AND THEORIES.

Of this work B. O. FLOWER, editor of The Arena, says:—

"This work is one of the most dignified and thoughtful discussions of Psychical problems ever written. It embodies the results of more than a score of years of patient research on the part of Mr. Savage, and contains a great number of intensely interesting and well-authenticated "ghost stories." Indeed, it cannot fail to prove as entertaining as fiction to the general reader, while for those who are interested in psychical research it will be welcomed as one of the ablest, most critical, and important presentations of this subject which has appeared since the scientific world has taken cognizance of Psychical phenomena. This volume embraces the subject matter found in Mr. Savage's masterly series of papers which appeared in THE ARENA during 1892, also, his discussion of Psychical Research published some time ago in the Forum, together with an important introductory paper."

The cloth copies contain a fine portrait of Mr. Savage.

THE PSYCHICAL REVIEW.

A Quarterly Journal of Psychical Science, and Organ of the American Psychical Society.

"Science is bound by the everlasting law of honor to face fearlessly every problem which can fairly be presented to it."—Sir William Thompson, Address before the British Association.

PRESS NOTICES.

"In THE PSYCHICAL REVIEW, the quarterly organ of the American Psychical Society, the increasing number of persons who are interested to learn more of the facts and the meaning of the occult phenomena miscalled 'modern' can find much to interest and instruct them in that still nebulous but gradually clarifying realm of wondrous facts and unknown laws. This quarterly magazine is valuable as being the organ of the Psychical Society—an organization devoted to the purpose of eliciting, if possible, by thorough and scientific methods of investigation, the truth about those alleged spirit manifestations, regardless of any or all beliefs concerning them. . . . The papers read at the society's meetings, or contributed directly to its organ, THE PSYCHICAL REVIEW, coming, as they do, from able minds of different opinions on the main subject, are apt to be highly interesting, and oftentimes valuable. The editor, the Rev. T. E. Allen of Grafton, Mass., is conducting the magazine with marked fairness and ability. In its pages are discussed the most important questions with which the world can be concerned; and the discussion is carried on in the light of modern science and impartially obtained facts. Looking over these papers, one is impressed with the bewildering variety, as well as in some instances the startling character, of these so-called occult phenomena. The results obtained by the Psychical Society, whether forming or opposing the spiritualistic conclusion, may at least be regarded as the honest and intelligently procured product of a thorough sifting of the phenomena in the impartial pursuit of facts."—Times, Hartford.

"The most prejudiced person, even if totally unacquainted with the reputation of the officers and members of this organization, cannot fail, in looking over its pages, to be impressed by the air of candor and fearlessness displayed in treating subjects which, to a great number of people, savor of superstition, and to a still greater number, of irreligion; while the reader interested in psychology for its own sake must acknowledge that the experiments have been conducted in the most careful and painstaking manner, and that, while ignorant prejudice has been cast aside, complaisant credulity has no less been forced to depart. . . . No person interested in occult matters, from whatever standpoint, can afford to do without this review."—Public Opinion, Washington.

"THE PSYCHICAL REVIEW for November is the second number of this important journal. . . . It is fully up to the first issue in subject matter, and will be read with profound interest by those interested in the systematic but scientific investigation of psychical problems. . . . It is the only important magazine published in America devoted to the dignified discussion of psychical phenomena, . . . and should be taken by all thoughtful people interested in the marvellous but little understood psychical phenomena occurring at the present time."—Transcript, Boston.

"One of the best, most interesting, and most promising of records that has yet appeared under the auspices of American 'Psychical' societies. . . . The philosophical articles are brief, pointed, and highly instructive. The reports on psychography and phenomena of every description are for the most part original, admirably written, and show research and caution in deciding upon their authenticity, worthy alike of all praise and imitation. . . . The entire work . . . is as authoritative as learning, unimpeachable testimony and character can make it."—Mrs. Emma Hardinge Britten, in the "Unseen Universe," Manchester, Eng.

"THE PSYCHICAL REVIEW for November contains valuable original papers in regard to psychical subjects. . . . This number is one of great value."—Religio-Philosophical Journal, Chicago.

"One of the most calm, dispassionate, and interesting documents ever produced on psychic subjects."—New Thought, Chicago.

The Psychical Review is published February, May, August, and November.
