HOW TO USE THE INDEX

The subject matter in this index is indexed and cross-indexed in the two principal indexes, the General Index and the Author Index, under month, year of issue, and page number. In this index, articles formerly listed separately in the Departmental Indexes have been incorporated in the General Index under title and subject. Thus all the articles telling about Atlantis are listed under the subject Atlantis as well as under their individual titles. If a title has an outstanding word which indicates the nature of the material found in the article, the title is entered under that word instead of under its exact title.

GENERAL INDEX

Example: Suppose we want to find an article entitled "When the Moon was Shattered," but do not remember the title nor the author. In that case we turn to the General Index and in section A under Atlantis we find:

When the Moon was Shattered      Ernest J. Sawyer      Sept. 51-326

This entry indicates that in the September 1951 issue on page 326, the above article by Ernest J. Sawyer may be found. If we look under the word moon we will also find the article listed in inverted form:

Moon was Shattered, When the      Ernest J. Sawyer      Sept. 51-326

AUTHOR INDEX

If the author is known but the exact title of the article is unknown, it may be conveniently looked up in the Author Index under the particular name of the author who wrote the article.

INDEX OF ILLUSTRATIONS

This is a convenient index for finding illustrations in the Digest. The captions are indexed by month, year, and page.
