The Pacific Mail Steamship Company's steamer Golden Age, J. T. Watkins, Esq., commander, left San Francisco at 2:40 P. M. on the 5th altimo, with 631 passengers and $2,344,448 in treasure on freight.

the news of the two weeks preceding :

Yesterday (August 21) was another memorable one among the many notable days that have been crowded into the short history of the Vi gilance Committee. Probably no body or organization can point to its history of three months' duration and designate such a continual recurrence of remarkable events as are chronicled by the Committee of Vigilance of the City of San Francisco. There is that, too, in the affairs of this Association, which every member and friend of the Committee can point to with feelings of satisfaction and congratulationthe universal success that has attended its every step-and that always without any bloodshed or a violent blow, and the final accomplishment of the original intentions of the Committtee, and its peaceful adjournment amid the smiles of the ladies of San Francisco, and the approval of good people everywhere.

S. Boggs, U. S. N., commander, left Aspin- ter's edge. She had on board, at the time the fire was discovered, a large number of men, women and children, who were thrown into the utmost consternation, and two boats being hastily lowered and instantly filled with the terrified passengers, were immediately swamped, and all those who had sought safety in them were drowned. Others cast themselves into the intensely cold water, and were soon chilled and sank to rise no more, while others again, having more presence of mind, by We select the following items from the Alta California's summary of casting overboard tables and wrenched-off state-room doors, were buoyed up with them until they were rescued. It is estimated that sixty-six persons in all were lost, while the rest were saved by the timely interposition of the steamboat Traveler and several smaller craft, which approached the burning hulk within a half or three-quarters of an hour from the time she was discovered to be on fire. The following are known to be certainly lost: Almon Atwood and wife, of Charlotte, Vt.

AGENTS WANTED.

THE proprietors of this paper are desirous of securing responsible, active agents and canvassers in every city and town where there are minds free enough to give heed to the current phenomena of Spiritual-

For the first time in the history of the city (San Francisco) there is not a prisoner in the jail of this county awaiting trial.

As the Camptonville stage was on its way to Marysville last week. with a large amount of treasure belonging to one of the Express Companies, and a full load of passengers, it was stopped by a gang of highwaymen, who, drawing their pistols, ordered the passengers not to make any resistance at the peril of their lives. One of the express messengers, however, at once commenced firing on the rascals, which led to a general engagement, during which some twenty shots were discharged. Two of the passengers were wounded-one, a woman, dangerously. Some of the assailants also were wounded, but how many, or how severely, could not be ascertained, as they fled, making their escape on horseback. They were pursued, but as yet have not been overtaken.

HIGHWAY robberies, of the most daring character, are matters of daily occurrence in the interior of the State. We scarcely open an exchange from that quarter, but it contains one or more accounts of some crime is owing in part, no doubt, to the great number of rascals driven out of this city by the Vigilance Committee, and in part to the stringency of the times; leaving no other resource to the gambling and thieving gentry than to engage in honest work, or go upon the road. The former alternative being out of the question, they adopt the latter, by force of necessity.

IMMENSE EMBEZZLEMENT.-An immense embezzlement has been perpetrated upon the funds of the Northern Railroad of France, amounting to no less than a million dollars, by two or three of its employés. It was suspected that the parties had fled to this country, and two brothers, named Grelet, were arrested in this city on Friday of last week, on suspicion of complicity in the affair. Louis Grelet admitted his guilt, but his brother denied all knowledge of the fraud. An accomplice of the name of Parot was also arrested ; but a party who is supposed to be the most guilty (Carpentier) is still at large. It is said that the Rothschilds are the principal losers by this transaction.

MISS CATHERINE HAYES has arrived in Paris, to enjoy a season of repose, after her long journeyings in the Antipodes, the two Americas, and the East Indies.

The Hon. J. B. Macy, of Fon du Lac, Wis.

Harvey Ainsworth, of Royalton, Vt., lost his wife, three children, father, and sister-in-law.

The hulk of the Niagara is sunk a mile and a half from the shore, in seven fathoms of water. She was valued at $75,000.

DEATH OF GEORGE STEERS .- Mr. George Steers, the celebrated Naval Architect of this city, and builder of the yacht America which took the prize at the London Crystal Palace exhibition, died on the 25th ultimo, from the effects of injuries received in being thrown from his carriage. He is universally lamented, and his funeral, which took place from his late residence, 91 Cannon-street, on Sunday last, was attended by a large concourse of people. He was thirty-seven years of age.

MR. THACKERAY is at present on the Continent, fast recovering his that section, and each one resolving himself or herself into a committee health, which was not good since his return from America last spring. It is stated that the first monthly number of a new work may be expected from Mr. Thackeray on the first of December.

PERSONAL AND SPECIAL NOTICES. To Our Friends at the West.

THE Editor of this paper proposes to leave New York as early as the first of October, on a lecturing tour through several of the Western States, including Ohio, Michigan, Wisconsin, Indiana and Illinois. The lectures will chiefly relate to the facts, laws and tendencies of fresh outrage of this kind, often accompanied with the shedding of Spiritual Intercourse; the spiritual element in all Religions and in the blood, and sometimes with loss of life. The increase of this particular noblest works of genius, ancient and modern ; special attention being given to the present living inspiration, and the great Spiritual Reformation of our own time.

S. B. B. will also receive invitations to lecture on literary, philosophical and popular subjects, before Lyceums and scientific institutions. The friends of progress in the numerous cities and villages along the Hudson River, New York Central, Lake Shore or Great Western, and Michigan Central and Southern Railroads, who may desire his services in this capacity, are requested to communicate their wishes, by letter or otherwise, at their earliest convenience. This will be necessary, as we desire to prepare and publish a complete programme of our proposed labors before leaving home.

It will be perceived that this course will render it extremely inconvenient, if not altogether impossible, for the lecturer to accept invitations that may be tendered to him along the route ; hence the obvious necessity of making previous arrangements. Address S. B. Brittan, at this office.

S. B. Brittan in Carbondale.

THE Editor of this paper will lecture in Carbondale, Pa., on Friday and Saturday evenings of this week, and on Sunday next, in the afternoon and evening.

ism. Men or women are equally suited to this work if they are but willing to engage earnestly in it. We wish them to solicit subscriptions for the SPIRITUAL TELEGRAPH and TIFFANY'S MONTHLY; also money for all books contained in our catalogue, the price and postage being there specified. Those who will serve in this capacity, and obtain new subscribers to the TELEGRAPH and orders for books amounting to $15 or more, are at liberty to retain, if they choose, one-fourth (25 per cent.) of the published prices as a compensation for their exertions. We do not propose to send out our publications for sale on our own account, but to furnish them to agents at the above rates for cash. The friends of the cause to which our publications are devoted can render it valuable service by coming together in their particular localities and agreeing on some one to serve as a general agent for to assist in disseminating these glad tidings of great joy to all mankind. We will place the names of agents in our list if desired. Remittances sent in pursuance of the above proposals, will be sufficient notice of the acceptance of the suggestion. Money may be sent to us in letters properly registered at our own risk.

MRS. METTLER'S MEDICINES

HAVE now been long enough before the public to win a good name for them-their best voucher is actual trial. All of her Remedies are compounded according to her directions, given while in a state of Clairvoyance, and are purely vegetable, and perfectly safe under all circumstances.

MRS. METTLER'S RESTORATIVE SYRUP,

Though not a Universal Panacea, is one of the most efficacious Remedies for all those Diseases which originate in an Impure State of the Blood, Derangement of the Secretions, and Bilious Obstructions. Those who are troubled with unequal Circulation, Sick and Nervous Headache, Inactivity of the Liver, Constipation of the Bowels, and Irritation of the Mucous Membrane, together with their various sympathetic effects, will find this Syrup invaluable.

MRS. METTLER'S DYSENTERY CORDIAL,

A STOMACH AND BOWEL CORRECTOR. This important remedy has always proved successful when properly used, and the directions strictly carried out, and no family should be without it. It is a remarkable medicine, and has never failed to cure in upward of 800 cases here in Hartford.

MRS. METTLER'S CELEBRATED ELIXIR,

For Cholera and severe Cholic Pains, Cramps of the Stomach and Bowels, Rheumatic and Neuralgic Pains, Bilious tendency of the Stomach, Fever and Ague, and severe pains induced by internal injuries. This will be found to be equally good for the pur-

MRS. METTLER'S NEUTRALIZING MIXTURE.

This is the best of all remedies for Bilious Obstructions, Acidity of the Stomach, Dyspepsia, Constipation of the Bowels, Headache, Febrile symptoms occasioned by Colds or Worms. In ordinary derangement of the bowels it should be used with my Dysentery Cordial, a teaspoonful of each mixed together, once an hour. If the case be urgent, the quantity may be increased, and the dose administered with greater frequency. This remedy is indispensible in families, from the great prevalence of Dyspeptic and Bilious attacks, in all classes of the community; it will prove to the best remedy in use, and no family should be without it.

MRS. METTLER'S PULMONARIA.

An excellent remedy for Colds, irritation of the Throat and Lungs, Hemorrhage, Asthma, Consumption, Whooping Cough, and all diseases of the Respiratory Organs.

MRS. METTLER'S HEALING OINTMENT,

For Burns, Scalds, Fresh Cuts and Wounds of almost every description, Boils, Salt Rheum, Blisters, Swelled and Sore Breasts or Nipples, Glandular Swelling, Piles, Chapped Hands or Chaffing.

WRITTEN UNDER THE INSPIRING INFLUENCE OF A SPIRIT.

THERE is a question of practical importance to all who have taken the name of Spiritualists, and confessed a belief in the phenomena through which the superior spheres are opening to us. What good is it to do? of what utility is all this, if it be true? The question comes to every soul of us with a pertinence and power that makes its importance felt, and demands an answer in our silent souls, if not in our uttered words. It is pressed upon us by the unbelievers with an impertinence which in itself might deserve no attention from our self-respect, if to ourselves the same demand had not come with a nobler significance. I am surely speaking the sentiment of every Spiritualist worthy of the name when I assert that all which we experience by way of demonstrations in these wonderful phenomena, instructive, startling, and deeply interesting as they may be, is not tion to the demonstrative sciences, is certainly something to ness of the physical apparatus that may convey it. make wise men pause before they accuse us of seeing and heardelight at the wonderful efforts of an inspired musician.

from everlasting, and shall be taught to everlasting years. Ours is a new expression of the living truth, a broader application of deep thought, once the sole property of gigantic natures-the prophets and martyrs of the world, now the common heritage of the common mind and lowly heart of humanity. Who are these that tell us, it avails nothing to the world to be taught old truths? See them at the sound of the Sabbath bell thronging to the thousand temples that point with a thousand significant fingers to the heavens they have eagerly sought and painfully struggled to win : these stand beneath those swelling domes and lofty spires, avowed disciples of a faith thundered two thousand years ago from the fiery lips of a Peter, and poured in resonant periods of scholastic oratory from the eager heart of Paul. A broad and well-appointed army of teachers and preachers is devoted to the propagation of this antique faith, which ages ago was thunder throes, and the wild spasms of nature's agony, among the rocks of the fiery, smoking Sinai.

If old truths are of no avail in this ever new world, disband at point. once that dark-robed army, and turn back the millions upon millions of treasures which now pour in to adorn your palace-temples and sustain your princely teachers, that it may fill again the hard palms that have earned it. Ah, if this is to waste time and toil-this repetition of eternal truth-how grievously have objections. We are not capable of enjoying perpetual novelty, and least of all in sacred things. Sanctity is the growth of time. A holy thing becomes even more holy as it grows old, and even long-lived error seems sanctified by age, to eyes not keenly awake to the purity of Truth. We love our oldest friends -friends of the longest standing-with a more reverent love than any new claimant can command. Time must mellow the too sharp outlines and vividness of color in our very homes, before they are objects of especial reverence. Thoughts reverable with age have a stronger hold on the heart and imagination than any new revelation, though both may be alike true. The new truth is but a new form for old truth, or a riper expression of what was germinal in the past; a thousand-fold repetition is as needful in the soul as in nature, and no Gospel is in vain that is true. We are, then, to be as content with the old first lesson as with the last, while both are true and human hearts have need of both. The necessity is certainly too broad and deep to be doubted; there is a slippery tendency in souls as in minds, that Hence the whole language of sacred symbols, worship and drinks symbol wine at every meal, nay at every respiration. benediction. But less than this perfectness demands some bond of fixed form, and the ministration of earnest souls, to keep the thoughts. A great new utterance of the golden laws of the universe calls name and nation with a compensating glory. Ah ! was there everything else which tends clearly to that result is a minister of

been a check on baseness and unworthiness ? It is not terror but shame-not the fear of torment to come, but of present disgrace-the consciousness of being known to be unworthy-that influences most men. For while one is the solitary witness of his own default, he nurses a hope that it may yet be mended and no harm done to his fair fame; but the presence of another witness mars that hope, and adds the scorn of all just men to his own self-accusing conscience. If he had been aware of that new accuser, would he have neglected the voice of his own monitor, and the sometimes consciousness of the overwatching God ? Never ! though he might have been a poor, debased and sin-Few men are so low as to front coolly with enacted crime or vice a sympathetic soul, more pure, but loving them and so above them as to be beyond their power.

Precisely these conditions are fulfilled in the relation of the sphered souls to us who linger in the flesh. They love us ; they are more than we in holiness and purity; more than they were, and more than we who were their peers and fellows here; and being beyond the influence which may have made them partners in wrong with these below; they are as God's eyes on their old companions, and can not fail to shed their influence for good upon their souls. To every soul of us the influence will be justly proportioned to our own natures-holy and sweet beyond comparison, to such as have a high and delicate sense of the true sanctity of spiritual fellowship-cheering and hopeful to the hearts that have been saddened by distrust of the great future and its blessed realities; and even to the lowest soul that catches some rude outline of the grosser fact of Spiritualism, it shall not be without its hallowing power-slowly but surely lifting him unto the plane of clearer vision and of purer life.

It was a beautiful monument, and the inscription was as expressive as it was brief.

The wonderful variety that presents itself in the beauties of nature causes the eye to never weary in the constantly shifting scenes of the straight or winding, undulating road, the picturesque mill with its wooden bridge, the mountain road, the pretty sited cottages, and all that indescribable variety that a cultivated country affords. The mountain road, however, gives stained soul, half-hopeless of returning to the walks of purity. one of the finest impressions-such a road as led me to this pretty village among the hills in a two hours' walk this morning.

After a great amount of rain for the season, the morning opened fine, and the cloudless sun shed a glorious luster over the earth, brightened by the effects of the late showers. On leaving South Williamstown the road turns up the valley toward Pittsfield, and passes through the little village of New Ashford on the mountain, which I soon began to ascend, and missing my way, I had quite a ramble among the hills. This is a country of running streams. They sparkled in the sun like courses of quicksilver running down the mountain sides from an inexhaustible mine. The little valleys showed themselves now and then coyly through the trees like rural maidens loitering on the banks of modest streams, and holding green parasols here and there over them. I lost my way, as I remarked, and had commenced burst upon the earth with all its brilliancy, which will cause the dead the ascent of another small range after descending to a valley, when I descried two little children coming after me. I had my misgivings, so I awaited their approach. They were evidently chatting merrily when I first saw them, but they ceased at the sight of a stranger standing in the way with a black bag on his back and a cased umbrella in his hand; and taking each other by the hand, they looked curiously and timidly at me as they came near. But when I cheerfully inquired the way, they felt free at once, and I was glad to learn that the road would finally lead me out right, and besides give me the pleasure of their company. ## SPIRITUAL COMMUNICATION.

WE have received from P. B. Bristol, of Dansville, Livingston of by our correspondent as a very worthy lady, a resident of that village. The communication is lengthy, and if inserted entire would crowd out matter which has paramount claims upon our columns, and we therefore give such portions of it as we deem most calculated to interest our readers :

* * * The mighty revolutions of ages that have shook the earth to its center, and produced devastation and carnage, speak volumes to those who now occupy the stage in the great drama of earth's affairs, warning then to beware of the spirit that would again instigate like results. A tempest of ungoverned passion is swayed over your land, causing many a heart to bleed, and withering the hopes of many a lone one. * * * But a Power will soon be swayed over the minds of men, producing a calm unruffled breeze ; the tempest of angry passions will melt away before the balmy influence that will pervade your atmosphere. The heaven-born principle of Love to all will permeate the minds of men, and there remain a radiating center from which will spring those elements of ever-enduring beauty and loveliness which characterize the inhabitants of higher spheres. Nought but a mighty power will be able to produce such glorious results. His messengers are constantly being sent to earth, invested with power to operate upon and influence the minds of men so powerfully that they are constrained to acknowledge the hand of the Lord in these mysterious developments, which all reflecting minds acknowledge to be beyond man's feeble capacities of accomplishment.

* * * Our mission at present is to awaken, rather than to instruct, the inhabitants of the earth. When they are convinced that Spirits do communicate with them, then they will be willing and anxious to receive instructions, believing that we can impart the useful. Our spheres, so radiant with love to earth, will, when a proper time shall arrive, pour a flood of light into the benighted minds that yet tabernacle in clay tenements, that will renovate the living, active principal that has been submerged for ages beneath the darkened mazes of formality and skepticism, so potent with every soul-deadening influence, the legitimate fruit of much of the teachings from the many pulpits in your land. Judge us not as reproaching any one! Sincerity has characterized much of those teachings; but this only proves that those who are proclaiming these tidings are in a measure deceived, and will be ready to bless God when they shall see eye to eye, as watchers on the walls of Zion.

The cardinal points in theology are not antagonistic, They harmonize with reason and the unchangeable laws of God. Clear as the light of the sun will the glorious gospel of Christ, which declares glad tidings of great joy, be revealed to Spirits of earth. It is to rise slowly and expand gradually for a time, like a reviving taper, and then it will to awake, who have so long slumbered in the grave of despotism and ignorance; and then the trump of peace shall sound, and the brilliant rays of the Sun of Righteousness illumine your earth. The dead in Christ will arise triumphant and glorious, rejoicing that they have experienced a resurrection from error, bigotry and superstition. * * * May a love of right influence you to act wisely, ever looking to a higher power for direction. Calumniate no one because he does not belong to your party. Remember that these petty party distinctions are naught but a most humiliating evidence of the brutal antagonism that would lead man to exult in the downfall of his brother, if thereby his favorite's party may rule. Horrid, indeed, is the picture presented to the spiritual vision-corruption the most deadening and demoralizing ! What man of sensibility and true Christian principle is not ashamed of his party ? I need not name the intrigues resorted to ; they are truly revolting. Men of America, who by your manly deeds consider yourselves worthy of so noble a name, arise at once and survey your continent, teeming with the bountiful provisions of nature, the many there are who lord it over God's heritage, never dreaming that they will have to give an account of their stewardship! Why this strife for distinction? Who can calculate the misery that results from will not give a negative answer? And yet man grasps at every shadow, hoping to find something that will raise him to the summit of his desires. Repeated failure should lead him to reflection. Your political affairs are dark as midnight. Well may you desire that the Spirits of departed statesmen may be instrumental in staying the impending danger that threatens to overwhelm you as a nation ! I will ask you one question : Are you willing to be co-workers with us who have entered the Spirit-world. We were once considered wholesome advisers; do you think our wisdom has diminished by a change of state or condition? By no means : we have the enlightenment of superior wisdom; what you consider a great loss to earth, is indeed a great gain, which you will have to acknowledge. If you are willing of Paradise-I say again most emphatically-if you will receive our council, impending danger may be averted. But if you are determined to set at nought Spirit communications, and treat them as an imposi-DANSVILLE, N. Y., August 26, 1856.

AUDIENCE OF MRS. MABIN AND THE SPIRITS.

WITHIN a few days we have enjoyed two interviews with the inspiring agents of Mrs. M. J. Mabin, a Psychometric, Clairvoyant, and Spiritual Medium, whose residence is at 37 Lafayette Place in this city. In her examinations of the human system, and the subtile exercise of her soul-measuring powers, Mrs. M. requires only the name, age, and perhaps one or two additional particulars respecting the subject to be investigated. Through these and the aid of her spiritual attendants, she is enabled to establish the proper relations between herself and the most distant objects. The person who is thus offered for examination becomes visible, and apparently present with the medium, however great the intervening distance. Mrs. Mabin assures us that this is not merely true with respect to the general outlines of form and feature, but that the internal portions of the system, and the existing conditions of the several organs, are all perceived with equal distinctness. Nor is this all. When it becomes necessary to make a more minute or microscopic inspection of any vital organ, membrane, nerve, muscle, bone, or even the ultimate molecules, the part to be examined is, in obedience to her unexpressed desire, magnified indefinitely, so that the most minute particles, imponderable elements, and intricate functions of the system are as clearly revealed as the forms and movements of the largest bodies.

Respecting the peculiar modus operandi whereby these forms and processes are represented, there may be various opinions, and we can not presume to dogmatize where so little is absolutely known. The more important features of the general idea on this subject may be briefly stated. It is supposed that the nerve-aura-the invisible anima or vital principle-not only pervades the organization, but that it surrounds the body with a subtile, magnetic atmosphere; that these refined emanations. agreeably to a spiritual-natural law, assume the precise appearance of the person, and that this ethereal image is rendered visible, either by an aggregation, around the Spirit-form, of grosser elements attracted from the earth and atmosphere, which render it perceptible by the natural sense; or, by the opening of the internal sense of vision in the medium; or, finally, it may be by a psychological quickening-under a direct spiritual influence-of the ordinary powers of perception. These aura-forms are supposed to constitute the visible images or apparitions of living persons, which are often seen by somnambules and spiritually-impressible people, even at great distances from the localities such persons are known to have occupied at the time of their mysterious appearance. These forms appear and stand before Mrs. Mabin while she is employed in the examination; and in them, as in a mirror, all parts and states of the physical system are revealed, while the mental faculties and moral attributes of the subject are more or less perceptible.

cations may be free from alloy, and the medium will perceive row; other and grosser elements go to the several vital organs that his or her own thoughts were wrong, at the same time our according to their respective degrees, and in like manner to all own may not be infallibly right. But this is not all. If you the remaining portions of the system. When the body is thus are powerful enough to magnetize a Spirit, you can cause them formed, the Divine light is attracted; it descends in separate to entertain your fancies and to support your theories, either scintillations, the degree of light or intelligence in each of them through yourself or another, provided the Medium, when some being proportioned to the different parts of the body wherein other person, be not the stronger of the two. Thus persons are sometimes misled by being told essence of the same; so that each ultimate particle, as well as they have "a great mission on earth," and that much depends on the entire man, has an outer material form, an inner life-princitheir assistance. So far as Spirits are instrumental in producing ple of the most subtile natural elements, and an inmost spirit those impressions, they may be actuated by the purest motives, the object being to incite men to earnest and persevering action. tion. No one is great. Some-the number in their demeanor and Godlike in temper and purpose, they a condition suited to us, that they may be surrounded by an atmosphere wherein we can breathe.

The Spirit paused, and we remarked that a particular reference to individual examples might be both interesting and instructive. We desired to know whether, for example, large reverence in the Medium would not naturally give a religious character and devout forms of expression to his inspiration ; whether, agreeably to the same law, the possession and the love of power in the Medium might not cause the same inspiring energy to take the form of law, or to find expression in arbitrary commandments and dogmatic assumptions : [Here the medium's hand was suddenly controlled, and the name of ---- was written,] also whether an unusual degree of self-esteem might not determine the direction of the inspiring influence, and cause the person to receive communications calculated to flatter his vanity and to give him a fictitious importance in his own estimation. [The Medium's hand moved again, spasmodically, and underscored the name previously written, after which the communicating intelligence added the following :] We feel that we must not illustrate by a reference to personal characteristics, because it would be likely to develop a censorious spirit. The Spirit fashions the form; and all external forms, both in the natural and spiritual worlds, are clothed with divine graces, according to the intrinsic purity and beauty of the Spirits that inhabit them, and whose light is even visible through the thick vail of common earth.

> We have not reported the Spirit's language entire, but we have faithfully preserved his ideas, at least so far as we comprehended the import of his teachings. Mrs. Mabin and her spiritual attendants may be consulted daily at the lady's residence in Lafayette Place, by those who require either medical advice or spiritual instruction.

HOW FAR SPIRITS CAN AID US.

A FEW days since we received from an old and valued friend who resides in one of the Southren States, the letter following this introduction ; and as inquiries similar to those of our present correspondent are constantly made, we have thought proper to give place to this letter, and to accompany its publication with some remarks of our own.

In the course of a recent interview with the Spirits, conducted in the presence and through the mediumship of Mrs. Mabin, the writer submitted among other questions the following:

Does the inspiring influence of Spirits and the Spiritual World naturally tend to ultimate itself through the dominant faculties of the medium? If so, please explain the process and give illustrations of your views by referring to individual examples and personal characteristics?

We give the substance of the answer:

otherwise revealed. It is true that all communications are more or less warped and colored by the fixed opinions of the specific degree of refinement. Thus the most sublimated go to medium, except where we have succeeded in producing a condition of separation; that is, when we can so act on and control the mind as to combine all its thoughts and feelings. We if you would do good you will see that you are; for if you are always can then present before the inner vision the vague conceptions giving, you make the recipient selfish, besides you well know that peoand crotchets of the intellect in contrast with the truth of the ple do not value that which costs them nothing.

Having inquired respecting the process whereby the human spirit is individualized and clothed, the invisible intelligence responded in substance as follows:

I see a great number of dark particles or molecules resembling altogether a cloud of dust. Each one of them has a latent, unconscious desire for change, or a tendency to assume new relations according to specific affinities. To these a similar number of electrical particles are attracted, which may be readily distinguished from the others by their luminous appearance. The light particles enter into the dark ones, communicating to the latter the power of motion. As soon as they are thus vivified they begin to be agitated and revolve, and when by friction row, where they would find good accommodations, and friends favorable Let no one assume any responsibility for what is written or they are rendered sufficiently electrical to form a human body, they move in concert until each finds a situation suited to its

BRO. BRITTAN :

Pardon me for trespassing on your valuable time-but knowing your kindness of heart, I have ventured to ask you for some information or advice. I have a friend here, formerly in affluent circumstances, but a Lieutenant in the Revolutionary Army, provided she can establish some important dates, or recover some lost documents. There is no earthly source whence she can obtain the desired information; and being somewhat of a believer in Spiritualism, and knowing that I was for assistance. Now, Bro. Brittan, will you be so kind as to tell me if you think there is any reliance to be placed on information of this nature obtained through a medium ? If so, would you advise her to write the necessary questions, seal them, and inclose them in another letter to the medium whom you may be pleased to recommend ? For any information in regard to this, I shall be very much indebted to you.

I receive the TELEGRAPH regularly, and devour its contents with eagerness and pleasure ; after I have finished it, two other families enjoy its perusal. Spiritualism is but little understood in this community, although there are a few mediums, and some warm believers. But public attention has never been called to the subject. I am in hopes some stray lecturer will make his appearance by-and-by. May be a trip to the South would benefit your health this coming winter.

Should any of your Spiritualist friends be coming this way, I would recommend them to stop at the Broad-street House, kept by Mrs. Barto their cause. Believe me as ever, yours, most sincerely, L. A. L.

Our esteemed friend desires to know whether she can obtain, through a medium, reliable answers to questions respecting lost documents, etc., with a view to the discovery of certain material objects and the production of such legal evidence as will establish a Revolutionary claim. To all this we may give an affirmative answer. But that we may not be instrumental in misleading our correspondent or others, it must be accompanied with

Being less nearly related to the phenomenal and circumstantial life of this world, and having little to do with our chronology and terminology, they may ordinarily disregard the dates, and other circumstances attending the succession of events on earth, and also become measurably oblivious respecting the names of men and things. This will not appear strange or unaccountable, if we reflect that the names by which persons and objects are familiarly known on earth are often either wholly meaningless or grossly misapplied-not being representative of the nature of such persons and objects as they are used to distinguish. Thus, cover the literary scalpel with a velvet wrapper, merely because while Spirits may experience no difficulty whatever in remem- the lecturer is a woman. a subject of the nature of the one to which our correspondent refers ? We answer, briefly, respecting the mode without giving any advice, but leaving the friend of our correspondent to act on her individual responsibility. If the Spirit of the grandfather, or of some one who has a real interest in the welfare of the person claiming the inheritance, could be found in the presence of some good medium, the desired information might be obtained. But in order to secure an interview with such a Spirit, it would, perhaps, be indispensable for the person interested to be with the medium, inasmuch as her presence and the action of her mind might attract the Spirit of some relative or other friend from the Inner Life who might not otherwise appear. When the necessary conditions are observed, and the laws of spiritual intercourse are strictly complied with, remarkable disclosures are frequently made, and information of great practical importance may be communicated from the Spirit World. Nevertheless, if all is done that is possible with our limited knowledge and ability, the experiment may fail. With these suggestions, we must leave the friend of L. A. L. and all who are similarly situated to act according to their best judgment, while we earnestly desire that all may secure their rights. The other portions of our correspondent's letter may be of interest to some of our public lecturers. The writer would certainly much prefer a more genial latitude during the winter months, and may possibly make a short excursion toward the equator in the course of the season.

Public Lecturing.

ACCORDING to present indications, there will be more public lecturing on the subject of Spiritualism during the present autumn and approaching winter, than there has been during any one season since the current spiritual demonstrations first made. their appearance. This is a most encouraging fact, especially when we consider the absorbing interest of the present political contest.

Emma Frances Jay.

In a brief note recently received from Miss Jay, we are informed that she has yielded to the solicitations of her friends to remain for a season in the West, and that she will deliver lectures in the principal cities and towns along the great western lines of travel, as far as Dubuque, Iowa. Her brother is hereafter to travel with her, and to act lectures. While she will receive, and doubtless accept, invitations to visit many places along the line of her travels, she does not propose to limit the sphere of her labors by waiting for such invitations, but through the agency of her brother will, on her own account, make arrangements to speak in every important town---if accessible by rail-Miss Jay's reputation as an eloquent Trance-speaking Medium has preceded her through all the West, and wherever else the New England Spiritualist and the TELEGRAPH are read ; and it can not be necessary, in this connection, to commend either the matter or the style of her eloquent disquisitions on the Spiritual Philosophy, and her delicate yet forcible appeals to the understanding and the heart. It may suffice to say, that perhaps no female lecturer in this country has ever called larger audiences together, or given more general satisfaction by her public ministrations.

provision for their support, that the mind and spirit have any claim to a share. This is evident from the manner in which they are accustomed to speak on the subject, as well as from the comparative value they attach to the provisions for the body and the mind. They annually expend large sums on the body, by which means they foster unnatural and depraved apand luxurious modes of life. Whoever pretends to be a man should not be content with the provisions necessary for an aniby ministering to the wants of his higher nature.

Miss Beebe will lecture in Philadelphia the first and second Sundays in October.

Burglars Alarmed by Spirit Interposition.

THE last issue of the New England Spiritualist relates the following, the editor having been informed of the facts by the gentleman in whose family they occurred, and whose daughter is a rapping medium. If all burglars and thieves could be convinced that the eyes of invisible beings are upon them, who may at any moment expose their misdeeds, it would inspire them, if not with shame, yet with a wholesome terror that would prove more efficient as a restraining power than the most vigilant police as now constituted. The gentleman informed Mr. Newton that slamming of a door in the lower part of the house. Thinking some member of the family might be down stairs, he did not rise from his bed. Shortly after, however, he heard the sound of something falling heavily upon the floor. Imagining it might be a child falling from its crib, in an adjoining.room, he went to the room, but found all safe and quiet there. He then went to the head of the staircase and called out ; MANY men never seem to think, in making the necessary but, though he received no answer, he supposed some member of the family was down stairs, and retired to sleep. In the morning, an open window, a piano-stool upset, and other indications, showed that the house had been visited by burglars, though they had evidently decamped without accomplishing the object of their visit. As the family were sitting at the breakfast table, raps were heard, indicative of a desire to communicate on the part of some invisible intelligence. On using the alphabet, this was spelled out : "You would have lost somepetites, and corrupt society by promoting enervating habits thing last night, had it not been for me." "How is that ?" was asked. "I made the door slam; and when that did not arouse you sufficiently, I caused the robbers to stumble over the piano-stool, which had the desired effect." This purported to come from a Spirit who often manimal, but he should at once assert his fellowship with humanity fested himself in the family. The fact that the door which was heard to shut is never known to be moved by the wind, and the improbability

Another Lecturer in the Field.

HENRY H. TATOR, Esq., a gentleman of education, who has for some years devoted his time and mental energies almost exclusively to literary pursuits, has commenced lecturing in illustration and defense of the facts and principles of the living Gospel. Mr. Tator has our right hand of fellowship. It gives us pleasure to welcome him to the broad field of his future labors, and we cordially commend him to the fraternal esteem of the great Spiritual Brotherhood. Our friend may be addressed at this office.

R. P. Ambler, Portland.

A BRIEF note from Bro. Ambler announces the fact that he is in Portland, Me., where he expects to remain for some time to come, and will accept invitations to lecture, during the week, in any places not too remote from his present locality. There are many other places in Maine where the labors of such a speaker as our eloquent friend would be of great service in awakening a wider and deeper interest in the truth of the modern spiritual developments, and we trust that his services will be in demand throughout that portion of New England.

Return of Mr. and Mrs. Davis.

ANDREW JACKSON DAVIS and his wife, Mrs. Mary F. Davis, after an absence of some three months, have just returned to this city, and will remain in our midst for some time to come, except as the demand for their valuable labors in the lecturing field may occasionally call them away. Blessings rest on them and on the truth which they are wont to speak with apostolic fearlessness, yet alway in love.

Original Communications.

REFLECTIONS ON DR. HARE'S REPLY TO F. J. B. NUMBER THREE.

182

I RESUME with a recapitulation, that the reader may have distinctly in his mind what is the principal issue between us.

The following, from the first paragraph of my first article (May 31), will show what I complained of and objected to:

In communications to the TELEGRAPH, as also in other writings in favor of Spiritualism, some of the writers show too great readiness to believe some things, though they may be tenacious enough for good. clear evidence on other matters before they will believe. I have in my mind more particularly some statements setting forth as real historical truths certain things that have been reported respecting the wisdom, doctrines, divine power, and prescience of sages and reformers of old among ancient nations; and also assertions intended to arouse skepticism and strengthen unbelief as to the correctness of some portions of the Bible, where there is not sufficient evidence to sustain them.

In my second article (June 28) I commenced :

presenting things as historical facts which were not sustained by sufficient evidence.

following are the examples I pointed out : He quoted the tract are in for it, and in to it, to "sink or swim." called "Josephus' Discourse to the Greeks concerning Hades," as were some of the doctrines of the New Testament, when it is manifestly a silly forgery of a much later date. He quoted Taylor's Diegesis, an unreliable work, because Taylor has not used nor represented his authorities sufficiently fairly. It is impossible for any man to produce a candid work, writing with the temper and purpose that Taylor did. He also quoted Confucius as the author and conservator of certain precepts, in such a manner that, without his after explanation, the reader could but understand him to mean that Confucius was the undoubted author of those precepts, and wiser than Christ.

To this last I inquired, " Low is it that some writers, like Dr.

quote the finding of the books of Moses by Hilkiah the priest, three hundred and fifty years after the reign of David." 2 Chr. 34; 2 Kings 22. After repeating the text he roundly asserts, "that the evidence that any Bible existed before that time rests upon the authority of an obscure priest and a fanatical monarch," and leaves it for me to show that his assertion is not correct. That is not a "reply to F. J. B.," but dragging in a foreign matter, and calling upon me to reply to that. It is presenting an. other issue, unless I egregiously misunderstand the matter before us. If that law is a forgery of Hilkiah's, it still became the law of the Jews, and Dr. H. might unjustly find fault with some parts of that law with respect to its design and effect, as I have already shown. Let it be decided that the whole Pentateuch is a forgery got up and compiled by Hilkiah, and it can have no bearing upon those forgeries and fables that I was exposing, nor can it show that Dr. H. has not done injustice to the import and design of texts of Scripture. I can not feel obligated to notice every foreign topic that may be thrown in my way, or to attempt In a former article I ventured a few remarks on the impropriety of to prove whatever I may be challenged to prove that does not belong to the subject. However, I will not decline the task imposed this time, for Dr. H. deems it legitimate and right, as it Dr. Hare fell into this error to some extent in his book. The might lead some to think that it can not be done. So now we

From 2 Chron. 34: 14-33, Dr. H. alleges that the Pentathe genuine work of Josephus, in order to make it show what teuch was forged by Hilkiah, in the days of Josiah, king of Judah. Well, he does not found his allegation upon the face of the narrative, for that does not say that he wrote the book, but that he found it in the temple while the repairs were going on, and knowing it to be the book of the law given by Moses, he carried it to Shaphan the scribe, as such; and Shaphan carried it to the king. The face of the narrative then, is against Dr. admits so much of it to be true, that the priest appeared with a book that he called the law of the Lord given by Moses. It was quite natural that the priest should appear with such a book,

Hare, are ever so confidently quoting Confucius?" And after came by it; but, on the contrary, it was much more natural that This law described a tabernacle built by its direction. If they showing that Confucius' writings were forgeries, I exclaimed, he should deny the truth and lie about the thing. He takes it for granted that priests can lie, and so do I. He takes it for could not build one, nor get them to build one and believe they "Yet those who reject the Scriptures do not hesitate to tell us very positively and learnedly what Confucius wrote !" From the granted that Hilkiah did lie about this matter-I do not. Every man's word is to be deemed true till he is proved a liar. the order of Levites. Could they have been persuaded that they preceding the reader will see" In this case the lie must be proved in one of two ways: 1. By MY GROUNDS OF OBJECTION AND THE REAL ISSUE. My objection against Dr. H. and others, was not simply the showing the story self-contradictory, or 2. Showing that it is rejection of the Scriptures. They must stand upon their own contrary to known facts. If he has told a straight story, and merit, and fall, if they do, for the want of it. But I objected to that story is sustained by other evidence, we shall have to begiving readers fictions for facts, forgeries for genuine writings; lieve him, if he was a priest, and not attach so much weight to holding up the great wisdom of some ancient philosopher conhim for evil because he was a priest (though "sin is heavy,") as cerning whom we have scarce anything authentic and reliable, to make it warp a straight story, overthrow good evidence, and whole nation must have strangely forgotten about their former particularly in using those unfair means to depreciate the Scrip- destroy established facts. tures in the estimation of people. IS THE STORY SELF-CONTRADICTORY? We must begin this investigation by calling the attention of them before they had ever heard of them ! I want the reader to keep this real issue in his mind. If they can prove the Scriptures forgeries, that will not justify the prethe reader particularly to the intended representation of the wrisenting us with forgeries as genuine writings; if they can prove the Scriptures unreliable authority, that will not justify the prewhich was found? "A book of the law of the Lord given by senting us with authority equally unreliable; if they can prove Moses." "The book of the law in the house of the Lord.' Christ never taught what is attributed to him, that will not What did Hilkiah mean should be understood by this? Look ing this law to them and urging upon them the necessity of justify telling us Confacius taught this and that, when no one knows what he did teach; if they can prove the Gospel history history (supposing he did not). After Moses had written the knew all along that it was their law, given to them by their leromances, that will not justify the presenting us with Iamblicus' book of the law, "he delivered it unto the priests, the sons of gislator. But the condition the Jews were in, in the time of Hilromance as a real history of Pythagoras. Could the ancient Levi which bore the ark of the covenant of the Lord, and unto kiah, was not an apostacy, if those books were a forgery of his; world be proved more wise, that would not make the wisdom of all the elders of Israel." Furthermore, Moses possible it must have been for the books of Moses, if they had and authority of those writings, he has not been equally free from prejudice against them." THE FINDING OF THE BOOKS OF MOSES BY HILKIAH THE PRIEST. Because I objected to the authenticity of Confucius' writings, with a copy of the law taken from this very book beside the ark. straw who would say they were a forgery of a later age. The Dr. H. says of F. J. B., "Let him show how the believers in the Deut. 17:18. "And it shall be when he sitteth upon the throne Spartans attributed their code of laws to Lycurgus; and who be-Scripture can refute the evidence against its authenticity afforded of his kingdom, that he shall write him a copy of this law in a lieves they could have been persuaded to have done this, if they by some of its own pages. In order to enforce this claim, I here | book out of that which is before the priests-the Levites."

It was this particular copy, which had been misplaced for some cause or other, that Hilkiah found while the repairs of the temple were going on, and sent it to the king. It is not pretended this was the only copy there was, but the one laid up. The story, then, is straight and consistent enough to be relied upon as a correct statement of historical facts.

THE IMPOSSIBILITY OF A FORGERY BEING IMPOSED AND NOT DETECTED AND REPUDIATED.

While the story is consistent enough with itself to be relied upon as a statement of historical facts, the whole is a miserably foolish got up matter to succeed with as a forgery. It could not have escaped detection, and would have been repudiated at once.

Forgeries of certain characters, of a much later age than what these writings purport to be, may be thrown out as newly discovered productions of a much earlier age, and gain readers, admirers, believers, and even followers, gradually for a time. But they can never succeed. Their genuineness is always denied, their want of authenticity always provable, and their success limited and partial. McPherson's Poems of Ossian, the writings attributed to Confucius, Joe Smith's Book of Mormon, are examples of this kind, and show about how far success can go. But never can the laws and constitution of a whole country be newly imposed upon a people as an old matter of hundreds of years standing among them; for when first brought out it must have been known by all that they had not been heard of before. Let us apply this to Hilkiah's case. He brings out a Bible, and Dr. H. denies that "any Bible existed before that time." Of course, then, it had never been heard of before that time, any more than Joe Smith's Bible before he found it. What does Hilkiah's Bible claim to be? The civil and religious constitution, containing the laws, rites, ordinances and faith-not of a Hare, and he founds his allegation by denying its truth. He foreign or extinct people, but of that nation. If they had never heard of those laws and institutions, they must have known it. For instance: This Bible claimed to have been made public and circulated among the people. If they had never known but not so natural that he should tell the truth as to how he this, and there were no copies in existence, they well knew it. had no such tabernacle among them, they knew it; and Hilkiah had had it with them for hundreds of years. This law originated had had the order of Levites among them when they had never heard of the institution?

They could not have received these books as new statutes, political and religious. They could only have received them as their former laws, government and religion, for that was what they claimed to be; and if they were a forgery of Hilkiah, that laws and government, to have received these books as their former laws. That would be making them believe they owned They might have apostatized in a greater or less degree, or in ter. What book does the account represent this to have been greater or lesser numbers, or for a longer or shorter time, by receiving other institutions that they deemed better, or for other motives; and they might have done this repeatedly; and readat his story (supposing he forged the whole matter), or at the their adhering to it, might bring them back again, provided they of people to whom the "written documents" are given for their been, as what they had apostatized from, could only have excited gave a book of his law, after he had finished writing it, to the been invented by Hilkiah, or in any age after Moses, to have Levites, with this command: "Take this book of the law, and been imposed upon the Jews as their institutions, which they Was there ever a book of laws privately framed as the existbook of the law-"the book of the law in the house of the believed that the system of laws that they had was composed by Lord." had not been the legislator? And it is equally an undeniable Josiah and Hilkiah, who brought it out of the temple, as Dr. historical fact, that the Jews in every age believed that their ancestors received their laws from Moses. A successful forgery would have been just as impracticable in the case of the Jews as in those of the Athenians and Spartans. Lycurgus did not commit his laws to writing, but delivered them in verse, and had them thoroughly committed to memory. This gave a more favorable opportunity in after times, to introduce alterations and additions. But Moses wrote out his laws, so that, in after ages, when some wished to modify and add to them, they were under the necessity of superimposing upon their traditions, which they feigned were first derived orally from Moses.

Rosseau said, upon the supposition that the Evangelical history of Christ was a fiction, "that the inventor would be a more astonishing character than the hero." But if Hilkiah, or anybody else, forged the Pentateuch and imposed it upon the Jews, he was the most astonishing character that ever lived in reality or fancy; he accomplished a human impossibility-beat all humanity-

> "Outwent all faith, and stretched beyond Credulity's extremest end."

THE LANGUAGE IN WHICH THE PENTATEUCH WAS WRITTEN IS PROOF OF ITS ANTIQUITY.

The argument by which this proposition is proved is beyond what I have had the means and opportunity to verify. It is the result of the investigation of good Hebrew scholars, and has been thus summed up by Dr. Hoare :

It is an undeniable fact that the Hebrew ceased to be the living language of the Jews soon after the Babylonish captivity, and that the Jewish productions after that period were in general either Chaldee or Greek. The Jews of Palestine, some ages before the appearance of our Saviour, were unable to comprehend the Hebrew original without the assistance of a Chaldee paraphrase ; and it was necessary to undertake a Greek translation, because that language alone was known to the Jews of Alexandria. It necessarily follows, therefore, that every book which is written in pure Hebrew, was composed either before or about the time of the Babylonish captivity. This being admitted, we may advance a step further, and contend, that the period which elapsed between the composition of the most ancient and the most modern books of the Old Testament was very considerable; or, in other words, that the most ancient books of the Old Testament were written a length of ages prior to the Babylonish captivity. No language continues during many centuries in the same state of cultivation, and the Hebrew, like other tongues, passed through the several stages of infancy, youth, manhood, and old age. If, therefore, (as we have already remarked), on comparison, the several parts of the Hebrew Bible are found to dif- there upon the stones a copy of the law of Moses, which he wrote in and shrill." He acknowledges that none of us could place it so difer, not only in regard to style, but also in regard to character and cultivation of language; if one discovers the golden, another the silver, a third a brazen, a fourth the iron age, we have strong internal marks of their having been composed at different and distant periods. No classical scholar, independently of the Grecian history, would believe that the poems ascribed to Homer were written in the 'age of Demosthenes, the orations of Demosthenes in the time of Origen, or the commentaries of Origen in the days of Lascaris or Chrysoloras. For the very same reason it is certain that the five books which are ascribed in the age of Isaiah, nor the prophecies of Isaiah in the time of Malachi. But it appears from what has been said above in regard to the extinction of the Hebrew language, that the book of Malachi could not have been written much later than the Babylonish captivity. Before that period, therefore, were written the prophecies of Isaiah, still earlier the Psalms of David, and much earlier than these the books which are ascribed to Moses. There is no presumption therefore, whatsoever, a priori, that Moses was not the author or compiler of the Pentateuch.

Hare maintains, B. C. 624. It existed in the days of Hosea king of Israel, some thirty years before Josiah king of Judah. For when, in the reign of Hosea, the king of Assyria carried the ten tribes of Israel into captivity, he transplanted other people into their country.

"Then the king of Assyria commanded, saying, Carry thither one of the priests whom ye brought from thence; and let them go and dwell there, and let them teach them (the Samaritans) the manner of the God of the land. Then one of the priests whom they had carried away from Samaria came and dwelt in Bethel, and taught them how they should fear the Lord."-2 KINGS, 17:27-28.

as genuine, and handed down to their posterity. It is familiarly known as the Samaritan Pentateuch, and is substantially the same as the Hebrew. It was extant in the time of Jehoshaphat king of Judah, B. c. 912, some two hundred and eighty-eight before Josiah and Hilkiah; for Jehoshaphat employed public instructors for its promulgation :

"Also in the third year of his reign he sent to his princes, to teach in the cities of Judah. And with them he sent Levites, and with them Elishama and Jehoram, priests. And they taught in Judah, and had the book of the law of the Lord with them, and went about through all the cities of Judah and taught the people."-2 CHRON. 17:8-9.

We have now found evidence of its existence, not only among one nation, but three nations: the two tribes or Judah; the ten tribes or Israel, who were carried into captivity under Hosea, and the Samaritans, who were colonies transplanted into the country of the ten tribes. Consequently it must have existed with the tribes of Israel before their division into two kingdoms, or it would not have been with both and adopted by the Samaritans. This carries us up to Solomon's reign. It was extant and well known in the reign of David the father of Solomon, as those frequent references to, and quotations from it, in those Psalms that are David's too abundantly show to need any particular specifications. Finally, it was in existence when the book of Joshua was written, and was known to have been a familiar institution that had been standing for no short length of time before that. Frequent mention is made of "the book of the law" in that book; and in 8: 30-34, we read:

"Then Joshua built an altar unto the Lord God of Israel, in mount Ebal, as Moses the servant of the Lord commanded the children of Israel, as it is written in the book of the law of Moses. And he wrote

MANIFESTATIONS IN NEW JERSEY. BURLINGTON COUNTY, N. J.

EDITORS OF THE SPIRITUAL TELEGRAPH :

During the four evenings immediately preceding the date of this letter,* the following wonderful manifestations occurred in my house at this place, which, if you see proper, you may insert in your interesting journal; and if any of your readers can explain them on any natural or scientific principles, I will guarantee to pay his expenses from the most remote part of the world to New York, where it shall be satisfactorily explained, and the funds handed over.

On the first of the four evenings alluded to, my wife, daughter, and a gentleman on a visit, with myself, sat down to tea as usual, when suddenly the table began to jar and move in a strange way, and in a few seconds raised up at one end and came down violently, spilling tea By the Samaritans the book of the law of Moses was received from our cups, etc. The conclusion by some of us was that the Spirits were manifesting their presence in a more than usual manner for the benefit of our visiting friend, who by the way, was an unbeliever in spiritual manifestations. After tea we were told to put out the lights and take hold of hands. We did so, and our friend held the hand of the medium, when the following phenomena took place, which to all of us were most extraordinary. I give only a portion, without regard to any particular evening.

The table, which is six feet six inches by three feet six inches, with the leaves up, is of solid mohogany, with a drawer in the end, and is unusually heavy for its size. It was moved up several inches and held some time, and at my request the Spirits raised one end and I the other, holding it several seconds without any one touching it except myself at one end. This subsequently had been done in the light. I asked if the Spirits would show us the lights often spoken of by Spiritualists; the reply was "Perhaps." We waited a few minutes, and to our great surprise a number of brilliant little balls appeared about the size of a pea, one of which appeared to be fixed on the forehead of my daughter, remaining there several minutes. All of us put our hands successively on the spot, but could feel nothing. Still the light remained. They also showed to each of us distinctly and repe tedly what appeared to be a human hand illuminated, opening and closing the fingers, and which all of us agreed to be a hand, especially our unbelieving friend, who was repeatedly slapped in a gentle maanner on the side of his face with this hand, and all of us seeing distinctly its motions to and irom his face as it repeated the blows. An invisible hand also repeatedly took him by the hair, and in one or two instances brought his head down to the table, whilst they were holding each other's hands. The lights and slapping the face have been repeated several times, our visitor holding the medium's hands.

Next I inquired if they could play on an accordeon (the only instrument in the house.) The reply was "Perhaps ;" so we placed it on the table, and in a few minutes it was moved about, and soon several notes were sounded (we still holding hands.) A small whistle was then laid on the table with a request that it should be blown, when in a few seconds it was placed in the mouth of our friend, who blew it "loud rectly in his mouth in the dark, even if our hands had been at liberty. I asked the favor to place it in my mouth, which was done as exactly as if it had been noon-day, without even a perceptible variation of a hair's breadth from being exactly in the center of my mouth. Our friend sitting on my left tried to place it in my mouth in the dark, but he fetched up on my collar-bone. I tried on him and came nearer his ear than his mouth. The whistle was then blown without being touched by any of us, and thrown on the floor, whence it was placed on the table without the assistance of any one present. Having shown us a hand illuminated, they next showed us, quite as distinctly an opaque human hand, which passed between us and the window, and was seen also by all, and which was passed gently over the face of our friend, and which he describes as rather peculiar, having an unnatural feeling. At another time the drawer of the table was shoved out and in several times, and several pieces of paper thrown out of it, on the table, one of which was thrust into the hand of our friend who embraced this opportunity to detect any deception, if such existed when, as he describes it, he found "a hand suspended on nothing." All of us felt the touch of the hand, and some of us several times. On one of the evenings alluded to, we took our seats around a smaller table, all of us with our hands on top of the table, when the table was repeatedly raised from ten to fourteen inches, and in one or two instances was kept suspended several seconds, with our hands still on the top. After these manifestations, many of which were repeated, and others not recorded, I asked our friend what he thought of it. His reply was, "John, I believe ; help my unbelief."

This argument shows that those books must have been composed much earlier than the days of David, whereas Dr. H. asserts that they did not exist till "three hundred and fifty years after the reign of David."

HISTORICAL EVIDENCE.

The evidence is as good to prove that the Mosaic books existed before the days of Hilkiah, as after, only making the protrace back some of this evidence.

It can readily be proved that the Pentateuch existed at the time the New Testament was written, for Christ and the apostles refer to it and quote it. It is equally clear that it existed in the time of Ezra, which was the time of the return of the Jews from Babylon, about B. c. 536. Ezra 3:6. "Then stood up Joshua the son of Jozadak, and his brethren the priests, and Zerubbabel the son of Sheatiel, and his brethren, and builded the altar of the God of Israel, to offer burnt offerings thereon, as it is written in the law of Moses." 6:18. "And they set the priests in their divisions, and the Levites in their courses, for the service of God, which is at Jerusalem, as it is written in the book of Moses." Daniel also mentions it, 9:11-13. It existed in the time of later it is most certain to lead to many serious crimes.

the presence of the children of Israel. And afterward he read all the words of the law-the blessings and cursings, according to all that is written in the book of the law. There was not a word of all that Mo ses commanded, which Joshua read not before all the congregation of Israel."

-And, in taking leave of the people, he exhorted them "to do all that is written in the book of the law of Moses."-23:6.

Such is the chain of evidence, mass of facts, and combination to Moses were not written in the time of David, the Psalms of David of circumstances that go to prove demonstrably clear, not only the existence, but also the notoriety of the book of Moses long and long before the days of Hilkiah. I guess we shall have to acknowledge that a priest told the truth for once, or show ourselves most unreasonably stubborn. To me it seems (am I a party interested ?) that there is not the shadow of a possibility to rest that bold assertion upon, "that the evidence that any Bible existed before that time rests upon the authority of an obscure priest and a fanatical monarch." For my strictures on Dr. Hare quoting Confucius' precepts, he said, "a mountain is made of a molehill." But it seems to me, in my present state of mind, that quoting 2 Chron. 34, 2 Kings 22, as a foundation for the allegation that Hilkiah forged the books of Moses, is an attempt to build a molehill where there is no material to make one out of, and then to attempt to make a mountain out of that. And per allowance for the greater length of time. Let us begin and the result shows it is exceedingly difficult to "make something out of nothing."

> I was intending to write this time upon the providence of God ; but my space is already occupied, and I must omit it. If I do it at all, it will have to be in another Number, and I can not write any more for some two weeks, or perhaps longer.

VULGAR ROMANCING AT SARATOGA.

WE find the following account of the first "bit of romance," at Saratoga, this season, in the Saratoga Post, of Monday :

"Among the first arrivals this season was a gentlemanly looking chap-adorned with all the dignity and magnificence that the barber and tailor are capable of investing the man with. He put up at one of the first class houses, and commanded all the respect and attention that this apparent character could entitle him to. His foreign airs called attention to him from the visitors, and when approached, his modest but cold dignity repulsed them politely-leaving them to conclude that he was some well-bred noble, who would not be disturbed in his reveries by common-place approaches. The ladies were the first to find out his nobility. Every politeness was shown him, and his bosom was fragrant with boquets by fair hands formed. Yet the lion was coy and cold as ever, until one evening while wandering by the Circular Railway, he met the wealthy Mrs .---- from Georgia. - By accident the lady lost her bracelet in the path, and it would be ignoble for him to refuse her to find it. They sought in vain for the bracelet, until it was too dark to longer look, and fatigued, they sat together on the seats in the grove. The lady forgetting her loss, with sweet inventions of her own, suggested her suspicions of his noble birth-which were modestly increased by his reply that he ' made no such pretensions-at least in that country where every man may become a noble.' The answer, so far at least as she was concerned, was perfectly satisfactory. At this time he condescended to think favorably upon her beauty, and could not believe her of common descent; her modesty, intelligence, wit and dignity belonged to a high order. All of which we are bound to confess was true. He accompanied her to the hotel, and from thence she came to be envied by every marketable daughter, and slandered by every speculating mother. For a week they were always seen together-and who for the last few days has walked beneath the splendid pines on Circular-street and not met them? They were in love-deep, undying love. The good old father saw the attachment, and was not surprised when the pretty miss informed him her hand was asked in marriage-and she craved his consent. The consent was given-but not, however, until the old gentleman thought full five minutes upon the propriety of inquiring himself into the pecuniary condition of the suitor. 'But what use,' said the daughter, 'of inquiring ; is he not a lord ? and how insulting it would be to even suggest that money was a consideration for giving away your daughter.' The old man thought as the daughter, and both slept that night surrounded with visions of splendid castles-gay parties, liveried servants, and exclusive greatness. But what was their surprise next morning, when smiling through tears of joy on the first meeting after the 'consent,' to be disturbed by one of the proprietors of a stage line running out of Albany, accosting the 'lord for a day,' with 'I say, Bill, you lousy skunk, why did you leave the road when we were short of hands, and what's worse, carry off two days' receipts ?' The lordly airs dropped-the lady's head fell on her snowy bosom, as with a faint shriek she fell into the arms of her father; and tall walking on the west side of Broadway toward the depot might have been seen on Saturday morning last, about the time the southern train was leaving." AN AFFECTING INCIDENT -An affecting occurrence took place some time ago in a seaboard town in England. Six little children got into a boat on the beach, and a mischievous boy shoved it off. The boat drifted away to sea before the children were missing. Terrible was the agony of the mothers when they knew it. A number of men went off in all directions ; every boat was on the look-out until far in the night. Daylight returned, and still there were no tidings of the helpless children; the day wore away, and still nothing was heard from themthey were either lost in the wide expanse of the ocean, or buried within its unfathomable depths. A Plymouth fisherman, fishing early next morning, discovered something floating in the distance. He bore down to it, and discovered it to be a boat, and in the bottom six children, all huddled together like a nest of birds, fast asleep-God having given them that blessed solace after a day of terror and despair. He took them aboard, and feasted them with bread and cheese, and gladdened their despairing little hearts with the promise of taking them home. Between three and four in the afternoon, the fisherman was seen in the offing, the boat astern. All eyes were turned eagerly toward him. The best spy-glass in the town was rubbed again and again, and at last they could fairly see that it was the identical boat. The news flew through the town--the mothers came frantic to the beach, for there were no children discerned in the boat; none to be seen in the sloop. Intense was the agony of suspense, and all alike shared it with the parents. At last the boat came in, and the word went round-" They are all safe ;" and many stout-hearted men burst into tears, women shrieked for joy, and became almost frantic with their insupportable happiness. It was, indeed, a memorable day : and a prayer, eloquent for its rough sincerity, was offered up to Almighty God, who, in His infinite mercy, had spared these innocent children from the perils and terrors of the sea during that fearful night. Five of these children were under five years of age, and the sixth but nine years old.

BATTLE OF THE ANTS.

I was witness, says Thoreau, to events of a less peaceful character. One day I went out to my wood-pile, or rather my pile of stumps, and I observed two large ants, the one red, the other much larger, nearly half an inch long, and black, fiercely contending with each other. Having once got hold they never let go, but struggled, and wrestled and rolled on the chips incessantly. Looking further, I was surprised to find that the chips were covered with such combatants-that it was not a duel, but a battle, a war between two races of ants, the red always pitted against the black, and frequently two red ones against one black. The legions of these myrmidons covered all the hills and vales of my woodyard, and the ground was already strewing with the dead and dying, both red and black. It is the only battle I have ever witnessed, the only battle-field I ever trod while the battle was raging; internecine war-the red republicans on the one hand, and the black imperialists on the other. On every side they were engaged in deadly combat, yet without any noise that I could hear, and human soldiers never fought so resolutely. I watched a couple that were fast locked in each other's embraces, in a little sunny valley amid the chips, now at noon-day prepared to fight till the sun went down, or life went out.

The smaller red champion had fastened himself like a vice to his ad versary's front, and through all the tumblings on that field, never for an instant ceased to gnaw at one of his feelers near the root, having already caused the other to go by the board ; while the stronger black one dashed him from side to side, and, as I saw on looking nearer, had already divested him of several of his members. They fought with more pertinacity than bull-dogs. Neither manifested a disposition to retreat. It was evident that their battle-cry was to conquer or die. In the mean while there came along a single red ant on the hill-side of the valley, evidenly full of excitement, who either had dispatched his foe or had not taken part in the battle; probably the latter, for he had lost none of his limbs, whose mother had charged him to return with this shield or upon it. Or perhaps he was some Achilles, who had nourished his wrath apart, and had now come to avenge or rescue his Patroclus. He saw this unequal combat from afar-for the blacks were nearly twice the size of the red-he drew near with rapid pace, till he stood on his guard, within half an inch of the combatants ; then, watching his opportunity, he sprang upon the black warrior, and commenced his operations near the foot of his right fore leg, leaving the foe to select among his own members ; and so there were three united for life, as if a new kind of attraction had been invented which put all other locks and cements to shame. I should not have wondered by this time to find that they had their respective musical bands, stationed on some eminent chip, and playing their national airs the while, to excite the slow and cheer the dying combatants. I was myself excited somewhat, even as if they had been men.

I took up the chip on which the three I have particularly described were struggling, carried it into my house, and placed it under a tumbler on my window sill, in order to await the issue. Holding a micro scope to the first mentioned red ant, I saw that though he was assiduously gnawing at the near fore leg of his enemy, having severed the remaining feeler, his own breast was all torn away, exposing what vitals he had there to the jaws of the black warrior, whose breast plate was apparently too thick for him to pierce ; and the dark carbuncles of the sufferer's eyes shone with ferocity, such as war only could excite. They struggled half an hour longer under the tumbler, and when I looked again the black soldier had severed the heads of his foes from their bodies, and the still living heads were hanging on either side of him, like ghastly trophies at his saddle-bow, still apparently as firmly fastened as ever, and he was endeavoring with feeble struggles, being without feelers, and with only the remnant of a leg, and I know not how many other wounds, to divest himself of them ; which at length, after half an hour more, he accomplished. I raised the glass, and he went off over the window-sill in that crippled state. Whether he finally survived that combat, and spent the remainder of his days in some hotel des invalides, I do not know; but I thought that his industry would not be worth much thereafter. I never learned which party was victorious, nor the cause of the war ; but I felt for the rest of that day as if I had had my feelings excited and harrowed by witnessing the struggle-the ferocity and carnage--of a human battle before my door.

A NOBLE DOG .- The following is from the Trinity (California) Times It records one of the most remarkable instances we ever heard, of canine sagacity. William Dredge lives about five miles from town, at the base of the mountain which towers North of us. A short time after midnight on the morning of Wednesday last, he was aroused from his slumbers by the howl of a dog. No menace on his part could rid him of the presence of the strange intruder. The dog continued to walk around the cabin, still repeating his dismal moaning and howling, occasionally making efforts to effect an entrance through the closed doorway. Surprised and somewhat alarmed at this singular demonstration, Mr. Dredge at last hastily dressed himself and unbolted the door, when a large mastiff rushed in. The dog at once caught hold of his trowsers, and employed every gentle means to induce the man to accompany him outside. Dredge's first impression was that the animal was mad; and yet so peculiar and earnest were the dumb entreaties, that he finally yielded and proceeded without the cabin. A joyful yell was the result, and the delighted brute, now capering and wagging his tail before him, and now returning and gently seizing him by the hand and trowsers, induced Dredge to follow him. Their course was up the precipitous side of the mountain, and soon they were forcing their way through a snow-drift that had settled in one of its numerous fissures. Here comes the wonder. Upon the snow lay the body of a woman, who had evidently perished from cold and exhaustion. Her limbs were already stiffened in death ; but what was the surprise of Mr. Dredge to see that faithful dog ferret out from a bundle of clothing that lay by the side of the woman, a young child, about two years old, still warm and living. A little inspection, aided by the starlight and the brightness of the snow, enabled him to discover that the person of the woman was nearly naked. With a mother's affection she had stripped her own person in order to furnish warmth to her exposed infant. The trusty dog had completed her work of self-sacrifice. Mr. Dredge immediately conveyed the child to his cabin, and arousing some of his neighbors, proceeded again to the mountain to secure from the attack of wild beasts the person of the unfortunate woman. Her body was buried the next day. The child and dog have been adopted by this good Samaritan ; but as yet he has been unable to obtain any light as to the name of the woman, or how she happened to stray on the dismal mountain side at such an unfortunae hour. The child is doing well, and is truly a handsome boy.

RE-APPEARING OF THE GREAT COMET.-According to a Limerick paper the great comet of 1856, which was expected to make its appearance between the years 1856 and 1859, has been already seen in the south of Ireland. The Limerick Observer, referring to a statement of a correspondent, says: "He was standing near the salmon-weir, on the platform before the mills of Corbadly, about half-past ten o'clock, when his attention was attracted by what appeared to be a fire rising on the top of Keeper mountain, due east of his position. He remarked the object to a gentleman who was with him, but as the fire rose and cleared the top of the mountain, his friend suggested that it must be a lantern suspended to a kite. It had then the appearance of a globe of fire as large as a good-sized orange, with a broad tail of light extending about eighteen inches from the body. The two gentlemen watched for an hour, and the watchman on the weir observed it also. On Thursday night they saw it again. It rose a few moments later, presenting the same appearances and was high in the heavens at half-past eleven o'clock, when they went home. At that hour one of the gentlemen pointed it out to his sister. Last night, from the same place, the same persons again saw it rise twenty minutes before eleven o'clock, and then it occurred to one of them (our informant) that it might be a comet. He ceased to watch it about midnight, but the watchman observed it up to half-past one o'clock this morning. It did not seem so large as on the previous nights, but still far exceeded the most brilliant form in which the planet Jupiter has ever been beheld."

MANY Religions have their sacred books. The Koran of Mohammed the Shaster of the Hindoos, the Zend Avesta of the Medes and Persians, and the Bible of the Jews and Christians, may be considered the very much mistaken authority of each. Nature alone is our best book obedience to her laws our best practice. All true written laws are founded in nature. They are God's will founded in nature.

SINGULAR PHENOMENON.—Building Struck by Lightning on a Clear Day.—On Monday, the 11th ultimo, the barns (three in number, and adjoining each other) of Comfort Kent, Esq., of Suffield, were struck by lightning and set on fire, and with their contents entirely consumed. The barns were full of hay and grain, and contained about two hundred bushels of old grain, with various farming implements. The barns were struck at about 4 o'clock, P. M., and at the time the sun was to be seen in the horizon. Mr. Kent, with his son and son-in law, had just left the barn for the house, and were but a few rods off when they heard the crash, and on looking around the flames were bursting through the roof. They hastened back, and were barely able to get the cattle out of the yard, but could save none of the contents of the barn.—Hartford Times.

A WISE ANSWER.--- "You must not play with that little girl, my dear," said a judicious parent.

"I can't help that, my dear," responded the foolish anti-American; "her father is a shoemaker."

"But I don't play with her father; I play with her; she isn't a shoemaker."

A MESMERIZER NONPLUSSED.—During the early part of last week an itinerant professor of physiology visited our town, but failed to draw any considerable number of people to the hall. In the hope, probably, of inducing a larger turn out, he concluded, one day, to give specimens of his skill to his fellow-boarders at the Exchange Hotel, and to this end he called up a little darkey as a subject. After various passes and manipulations over young Gumbo, his eyes dilated and his muscles became rigid.

"Now," said the professor, "your arm is paralyzed."

And so it really was, for several persons tried in vain to bend it. "Wonderful !" said the boarders.

The professor then laid a three cent piece on Gumbo's hand and said :

"Now, sir, you can not close your hand. If you can, you may keep the money."

The darkey seemed to make an effort, but the hand remained open. The professor next placed a quarter of a dollar upon the darkey's hand, and invited him to close on it, and keep both.

The crowd was mystified.

The professor in a glow of enthusiasm at the triumph of his science fumbled about and scared up half a dime, which he added to the pile, still inviting the darkey to close.

Young Gumbo concluded that the professor's small change was about exhausted, and on the last invitation to close, deliberately shut his hand, thrust it into his pantaloons pocket, and with a "ki-iy-iy l" such as only a young nigger can give, disappeared through the side door. The professor acknowledged himself to have been slightly taken in and done for.

WRITTEN UNDER THE INSPIRING INFLUENCE OF A SPIRIT. taken the name of Spiritualists, and confessed a belief in the phenomena through which the superior spheres are opening to us. What good is it to do? of what utility is all this, if it be true ? The question comes to every soul of us with a pertinence tious critic that the spirit of skeptical contempt and the narrow thing, to know that our dear ones are the same dear, loving, conand power that makes its importance felt, and demands an answer in our silent souls, if not in our uttered words. It is pressed upon us by the unbelievers with an impertinence which in itself might deserve no attention from our self-respect, if to ourselves the same demand had not come with a nobler signifi- day-the living splendor of morning and evening; they would new thing to know that the flesh and bones which we cast off at cance. I am surely speaking the sentiment of every Spiritualist give us the cold ribs of death for the warm breathing beauty of death, have no lot, no share in the consultude of that realm to worthy of the name when I assert that all which we experience by way of demonstrations in these wonderful phenomena, instructive, startling, and deeply interesting as they may be, is not the whole of Spiritualism, nay, is almost nothing of Spiritualism, and vocal harmony, because a contemptuous analysis can reduce only cumber it in its state of development. But in itself it is in comparison with the great truths, and blessed consolations derived from those demonstrations. It is the popular jest of small wits and petty critics, that wise men, good men, and a host of all classes, with not a few neither wise nor good, should be degraded together in the common admiration of a restive table, scorn the great periods of Milton for the sake of the poor goose a rattling stand, or the nervously jerking arm of a simple girl, writing a miserable chirography, and no great depth of thought or sentiment. That a few strange knocks from invisible knuckles should knock the sense from the coolest brains among us, and Beauty, of everlasting love-the key to everlasting life-we will the persistent emphasis of a dancing table should beat conviction not be so idle as to stay wondering at the simple mechanism of land it has not been quite ignored, but a cold, black shadow, into the hearts of gray old skeptics, keen with life-long application to the demonstrative sciences, is certainly something to make wise men pause before they accuse us of seeing and hearing only this-of finding nothing behind all this worthy of a Christian's, a philosopher's, a man's regards. The mind that stops at the visible phenomena, has scarcely the dry skeleton of the faith which is in us. The living beauty and glory of the flesh and blood, glowing in lily white and rosy red, through the hand of the living medium, should still be the instruments of our clear translucent skin, surpass not more the fleshless and bald communication with the world of Spirits. Let us thank the new anatomy which supports it, than the beautiful truths and varied significance of the spiritual phenomena surpass the sustaining phenomena themselves. As Spiritualists we find a soul to every_ thing-a glorious heaven of consequent truth sustained on the dicated by these throbbing pulses-the Heaven of eternal procentral columns of physical fact-a rounding out of the dry frame of phenomena to the warm, living, breathing incarnation of eternal beauty and truth. You are all worshipers of melody; proves to be pine wood covered or smeared with black paintyou who are no Spiritualists are yet thrilled with an unspeakable the wise man will take its message with thankfulness, and go on delight at the wonderful efforts of an inspired musician.

There has been, to be sure, a prevalent vague guess at the thing, for many years, and in every age and struck down into the roots of the heart, a clinging doubt, under the open sunshine of faith, like the gloom of the waving yew tree over the spot where the dust of the departed reposed. A trembling hope was all that the boldest dare avow, and the vague dread of the future, which crowned Death as the king of terrors, darkened across the clearest sunshine of young hope, and doubled the lengthening shadows of age to a chillier blacker intensity, relieved only by that tremulous hope which shone flickering like dying daylight through the wind-swept years.

Only the full-faithed Spiritualist of former times, as of these, had clear assurance of the great hereafter. The supernaturalist, as he was then termed-the superstitionist, as he has since been deemed-gifted with more vibrant nerves than his fellows, felt the presence of the surrounding other-world, and trusted his

The new truth is but a new form for old truth, or a riper expression of what was germinal in the past; a thousand-fold repetition is as needful in the soul as in nature, and no Gospel is in vain that is trusted him, mourned not that the splendor of Apis was eclipsed, true. We are, then, to be as content with the old first lesson as with the last, while both are true and human hearts have need of both. The necessity is certainly too broad and deep to be doubted ; there is a slippery tendency in souls as in minds, that thin, she waned away, and vanished from the heavens, no more lets us slide away insensibly from truths not constanty renewed. Hence the whole language of sacred symbols, worship and prayer, the holy ordinances, and stated days and seasons for divine thought. The truly divine man cats eucharistic bread and drinks symbol wine at every meal, nay at every respiration.

A holy soul has seven holy days in the week, and when he laves, in the ablutions of the morning, it is baptism and a seal of purity; and when he toils it is prayer, and when he speaks it is a form, God's anger was not roused as the rough hands of fisherbenediction. # AUDIENCE OF MRS. MABIN AND THE SPIRITS.

WITHIN a few days we have enjoyed two interviews with the inspiring agents of Mrs. M. J. Mabin, a Psychometric, Clairvoyant, and Spiritual Medium, whose residence is at 37 Lafayette Place in this city. In her examinations of the human system, and the subtile exercise of her soul-measuring powers, Mrs. M. requires only the name, age, and perhaps one or two additional particulars respecting the subject to be investigated. Through these and the aid of her spiritual attendants, she is enabled to establish the proper relations between herself and the most distant objects. The person who is thus offered for examination becomes visible, and apparently present with the medium, however great the intervening distance. Mrs. Mabin assures us that this is not merely true with respect to the general outlines of form and feature, but that the internal portions of the system, and the existing conditions of the several organs, are all perceived with equal distinctness. Nor is this all. When it becomes necessary to make a more minute or microscopic inspection of any vital organ, membrane, nerve, muscle, bone, or even the ultimate molecules, the part to be examined is, in obedience to her unexpressed desire, magnified indefinitely, so that the most minute particles, imponderable elements, and intricate functions of the system are as clearly revealed as the forms and movements of the largest bodies.

Respecting the peculiar modus operandi whereby these forms and processes are represented, there may be various opinions, and we can not presume to dogmatize where so little is absolutely known. The more important features of the general idea on this subject may be briefly stated. It is supposed that the nerve-aura-the invisible anima or vital principle-not only pervades the organization, but that it surrounds the body with a subtile, magnetic atmosphere; that these refined emanations, agreeably to a spiritual-natural law, assume the precise appearance of the person, and that this ethereal image is rendered visible, either by an aggregation, around the Spirit-form, of grosser elements attracted from the earth and atmosphere, which render it perceptible by the natural sense; or, by the opening of the internal sense of vision in the medium; or, finally, it may be by a psychological quickening-under a direct spiritual influence-of the ordinary powers of perception. These aura-forms are supposed to constitute the visible images or apparitions of living persons, which are often seen by somnambules and spiritually-impressible people, even at great distances from the localities such persons are known to have occupied at the time of their mysterious appearance. These forms appear and stand before Mrs. Mabin while she is employed in the examination; and in them, as in a mirror, all parts and states of the physical system are revealed, while the mental faculties and moral attributes of the subject are more or less perceptible.

In the course of a recent interview with the Spirits, conducted in the presence and through the mediumship of Mrs. Mabin, the writer submitted among other questions the following:

Does the inspiring influence of Spirits and the Spiritual World naturally tend to ultimate itself through the dominant faculties of the meviews by referring to individual examples and personal characteristics?

We give the substance of the answer:

Let no one assume any responsibility for what is written or otherwise revealed. It is true that all communications are more or less warped and colored by the fixed opinions of the specific degree of refinement. Thus the most sublimated go to medium, except where we have succeeded in producing a condition of separation; that is, when we can so act on and control the mind as to combine all its thoughts and feelings. We if you would do good you will see that you are; for if you are always can then present before the inner vision the vague conceptions giving, you make the recipient selfish, besides you well know that peoand crotchets of the intellect in contrast with the truth of the ple do not value that which costs them nothing.

to entertain your fancies and to support your theories, either

But this is not the highest and best way to engage the attention. First convince the mind of the truth, and then labor to give it expression before the world for its own sake, rather than because you are to be personally benefited by its utterance.* [Here the Spirit dictated the subjoined note.] Act, however, from no selfish motive. No one is great. Some-the number is large-are so constituted as to be spiritually influenced, and so long as spiritual Spirits direct them, and they remain modest in their demeanor and Godlike in temper and purpose, they are both receiving and imparting good. But when one becomes inflated with pride-is arrogant. envious and irritable, unenlightened Spirits step in and so condition the mind that more progressed beings are constrained to withdraw. Those who desire our teachings should, therefore, keep their minds in a condition suited to us, that they may be surrounded by an atmosphere wherein we can breathe.

The Spirit paused, and we remarked that a particular reference to individual examples might be both interesting and instructive. We desired to know whether, for example, large reverence in the Medium would not naturally give a religious character and devout forms of expression to his inspiration ; whether, agreeably to the same law, the possession and the love of power in the Medium might not cause the same inspiring energy to take the form of law, or to find expression in arbitrary commandments and dogmatic assumptions : [Here the medium's hand was suddenly controlled, and the name of -- was writ ten,] also whether an unusual degree of self-esteem might not determine the direction of the inspiring influence, and cause the person to receive communications calculated to flatter his vanity and to give him a fictitious importance in his own estimation. [The Medium's hand moved again, spasmodically, and underscored the name previously written, after which the communicating intelligence added the following :]

We feel that we must not illustrate by a reference to personal characteristics, because it would be likely to develop a censorious spirit. When a person is about to throw off his earthly form, it is very desirable to remove from his mind as many of his own thoughts as possible, and to place others in their stead. Whenever we are able, we take away the thoughts that have preoccupied the mind, remove from them the errors incidental to the earthly forms of expression, clothe them anew and keep them in readiness for him when he arrives here.

Having inquired respecting the process whereby the human spirit is individualized and clothed, the invisible intelligence responded in substance as follows:

I see a great number of dark particles or molecules resembling altogether a cloud of dust. Each one of them has a latent, unconscious desire for change, or a tendency to assume new relations according to specific affinities. To these a similar number of electrical particles are attracted, which may be readily distinguished from the others by their luminous appearance. dium? If so, please explain the process and give illustrations of your The light particles enter into the dark ones, communicating to the latter the power of motion. As soon as they are thus vivified they begin to be agitated and revolve, and when by friction they are rendered sufficiently electrical to form a human body, they move in concert until each finds a situation suited to its

But this is not all. If you the remaining portions of the system. When the body is thus are powerful enough to magnetize a Spirit, you can cause them formed, the Divine light is attracted; it descends in separate scintillations, the degree of light or intelligence in each of them through yourself or another, provided the Medium, when some being proportioned to the different parts of the body wherein other person, be not the stronger of the two. Moreover, a man they are to be severally located. Each of these infinitessimal may have unwise or foolish friends in this world who really rays, with the precision of a conscious Divine messenger, en. think that he is the greatest man that ever lived, and they may dowed with voluntary powers, strikes unerringly to the center impress their convictions on the Medium, whether it be himself of one of the electrified molecules and becomes the inmost or another. Thus persons are sometimes misled by being told essence of the same; so that each ultimate particle, as well as they have "a great mission on earth," and that much depends on the entire man, has an outer material form, an inner life-princitheir assistance. So far as Spirits are instrumental in producing ple of the most subtile natural elements, and an inmost spirit those impressions, they may be actuated by the purest motives, proceeding from the Divine. In all the inferior departments the object being to incite men to earnest and persevering action. of animated existence, the inmost or intelligent, spiritual principle is wanting; and in this consists the endless difference between man and the brute creation.

At death the central principle-the soul of each molecule -leaves the body separately, but when disengaged all are immediately attracted to their appropriate places in the spiritual and indestructible organization, around which the electrical particles form an external body, while their former material covering-the dust atoms, go back, yet in a more refined state, to the common mass of kindred elements, but to undergo the same process in other forms. When the constituents of a human body have thus repeatedly entered into the composition of similar forms, the being so constituted will be more beautiful and spiritual than one composed of elements which have been subjected to no such refining process. The Spirit fashions the form; and all external forms, both in the natural and spiritual worlds, are clothed with divine graces, according to the intrinsic purity and beauty of the Spirits that inhabit them, and whose light is even visible through the thick vail of common earth.

We have not reported the Spirit's language entire, but we have faithfully preserved his ideas, at least so far as we comprehended the import of his teachings. Mrs. Mabin and her spiritual attendants may be consulted daily at the lady's residence in Lafayette Place, by those who require either medical advice or spiritual instruction.

HOW FAR SPIRITS CAN AID US.

A FEW days since we received from an old and valued friend who resides in one of the Southren States, the letter following this introduction; and as inquiries similar to those of our present correspondent are constantly made, we have thought proper to give place to this letter, and to accompany its publication with some remarks of our own.

Pardon me for trespassing on your valuable time-but knowing your kindness of heart, I have ventured to ask you for some information or advice. I have a friend here, formerly in affluent circumstances, but who has, through misfortune, lost the greater part of her property. But there is now a prospect of obtaining a grant made to her grandfather, a Lieutenant in the Revolutionary Army, provided she can establish some important dates, or recover some lost documents. There is no earthly source whence she can obtain the desired information; and being somewhat of a believer in Spiritualism, and knowing that I was from New York, where there are many mediums, she has applied to me for assistance. Now, Bro. Brittan, will you be so kind as to tell me if you think there is any reliance to be placed on information of this nature obtained through a medium ? If so, would you advise her to write the necessary questions, seal them, and inclose them in another letter to the medium whom you may be pleased to recommend ? For any information in regard to this, I shall be very much indebted to you.

I receive the TELEGRAPH regularly, and devour its contents with eagerness and pleasure ; after I have finished it, two other families enjoy its perusal. Spiritualism is but little understood in this community, although there are a few mediums, and some warm believers. But public attention has never been called to the subject. I am in hopes ome stray lecturer will make his appearance by-and-by. May be a trip to the South would benefit your health this coming winter.

Should any of your Spiritualist friends be coming this way, I would recommend them to stop at the Broad-street House, kept by Mrs. Barrow, where they would find good accommodations, and friends favorable to their cause. Believe me as ever, yours, most sincerely, L. A. L.

Our esteemed friend desires to know whether she can obtain, through a medium, reliable answers to questions respecting lost documents, etc., with a view to the discovery of certain material objects and the production of such legal evidence as will establish a Revolutionary claim. To all this we may give an affirmative answer. But that we may not be instrumental in misleading our correspondent or others, it must be accompanied with

Original Communications.

I RESUME with a recapitulation, that the reader may have distinctly in his mind what is the principal issue between us.

The following, from the first paragraph of my first article (May 31), will show what I complained of and objected to:

In communications to the TELEGRAPH, as also in other writings in favor of Spiritualism, some of the writers show too great readiness to believe some things, though they may be tenacious enough for good, clear evidence on other matters before they will believe. I have in my mind more particularly some statements setting forth as real historical truths certain things that have been reported respecting the wisdom, doctrines, divine power, and prescience of sages and reformers of old among ancient nations; and also assertions intended to arouse skepticism and strengthen unbelief as to the correctness of some portions of the Bible, where there is not sufficient evidence to sustain them.

In my second article (June 28) I commenced :

In a former article I ventured a few remarks on the impropriety of presenting things as historical facts which were not sustained by sufficient evidence

Dr. Hare fell into this error to some extent in his book. The following are the examples I pointed out : He quoted the tract are in for it, and in to it, to "sink or swim." called "Josephus' Discourse to the Greeks concerning Hades," as the genuine work of Josephus, in order to make it show what were some of the doctrines of the New Testament, when it is manifestly a silly forgery of a much later date. He quoted Taylor's Diegesis, an unreliable work, because Taylor has not used nor represented his authorities sufficiently fairly. It is impossible for any man to produce a candid work, writing with the temper and purpose that Taylor did. He also quoted Confucius as the author and conservator of certain precepts, in such a manner that, without his after explanation, the reader could but understand him to mean that Confucius was the undoubted author of those precepts, and wiser than Christ.

To this last I inquired, " How is it that some writers, like Dr. Hare, are ever so confidently quoting Confucius?" And after showing that Confucius' writings were forgeries, I exclaimed, "Yet those who reject the Scriptures do not hesitate to tell us very positively and learnedly what Confucius wrote !" From the preceding the reader will see"

MY GROUNDS OF OBJECTION AND THE BEAL ISSUE.

My objection against Dr. H. and others, was not simply the rejection of the Scriptures. They must stand upon their own merit, and fall, if they do, for the want of it. But I objected to giving readers fictions for facts, forgeries for genuine writings: holding up the great wisdom of some ancient philosopher concerning whom we have scarce anything authentic and reliable, particularly in using those unfair means to depreciate the Scriptures in the estimation of people.

I want the reader to keep this real issue in his mind. If they can prove the Scriptures forgeries, that will not justify the presenting us with forgeries as genuine writings; if they can prove the Scriptures unreliable authority, that will not justify the presenting us with authority equally unreliable; if they can prove Christ never taught what is attributed to him, that will not justify telling us Confacius taught this and that, when no one knows what he did teach; if they can prove the Gospel history romances, that will not justify the presenting us with Iamblicus romance as a real history of Pythagoras. Could the ancient world be proved more wise, that would not make the wisdom of Christ any less, nor his instructions any the less necessary.

The authenticity and genuineness of the Scripture writings do not come into this controversy at all, any farther than the following may seem to involve them. I said of Dr. Hare, "Though free from the least particle of superstition as to the sacredness and authority of those writings, he has not been equally free from prejudice against them." To sustain this I did attempt to show that he had misunderstood and misconstrued some of those texts of Scripture upon which he had lavished his animadversions. How far I have succeeded in this the reader can judge. I can not see that any of this ground touches the subject of the I correct in this, or am I mistaken?

THE FINDING OF THE BOOKS OF MOSES BY HILKIAH THE PRIEST.

Because I objected to the authenticity of Confucius' writings, Dr. H. says of F. J. B., "Let him show how the believers in the Scripture can refute the evidence against its authenticity afforded of his kingdom, that he shall write him a copy of this law in a by some of its own pages. In order to enforce this claim, I here book out of that which is before the priests-the Levites."

quote the finding of the books of Moses by Hilkiah the priest, three hundred and fifty years after the reign of David." 2 Chr. REFLECTIONS ON DR. HARE'S REPLY TO F. J. B. 34; 2 Kings 22. After repeating the text he roundly asserts, "that the evidence that any Bible existed before that time rests upon the authority of an obscure priest and a fanstical monarch," and leaves it for me to show that his assertion is not correct. That is not a "reply to F. J. B.," but dragging in a foreign matter, and calling upon me to reply to that. It is presenting an. other issue, unless I egregiously misunderstand the matter before us. If that law is a forgery of Hilkiah's, it still became the law of the Jews, and Dr. H. might unjustly find fault with some parts of that law with respect to its design and effect, as I have already shown. Let it be decided that the whole Pentateuch is a forgery got up and compiled by Hilkiah, and it can have no bearing upon those forgeries and fables that I was exposing, nor can it show that Dr. II. has not done injustice to the import and to prove whatever I may be challenged to prove that does not belong to the subject. However, I will not decline the task imposed this time, for Dr. H. deems it legitimate and right, as it

From 2 Chron. 34: 14-33, Dr. H. alleges that the Pentateuch was forged by Hilkiah, in the days of Josiah, king of Judah. Well, he does not found his allegation upon the face of the narrative, for that does not say that he wrote the book, but that he found it in the temple while the repairs were going on, and knowing it to be the book of the law given by Moses, he carried it to Shaphan the scribe, as such; and Shaphan carried it to the king. The face of the narrative then, is against Dr. Hare, and he founds his allegation by denying its truth. He admits so much of it to be true, that the priest appeared with a book that he called the law of the Lord given by Moses. It was quite natural that the priest should appear with such a book, but not so natural that he should tell the truth as to how he came by it; but, on the contrary, it was much more natural that he should deny the truth and lie about the thing. He takes it had no such tabernacle among them, they knew it; and Hilkiah for granted that priests can lie, and so do I. He takes it for could not build one, nor get them to build one and believe they granted that Hilkiah did lie about this matter-I do not. Every man's word is to be deemed true till he is proved a liar. In this case the lie must be proved in one of two ways: 1. By showing the story self-contradictory, or 2. Showing that it is contrary to known facts. If he has told a straight story, and that story is sustained by other evidence, we shall have to believe him, if he was a priest, and not attach so much weight to him for evil because he was a priest (though "sin is heavy,") as to make it warp a straight story, overthrow good evidence, and destroy established facts.

IS THE STORY SELF-CONTRADICTORY?

We must begin this investigation by calling the attention of them before they had ever heard of them ! the reader particularly to the intended representation of the writer. What book does the account represent this to have been which was found? "A book of the law of the Lord given by Moses." "The book of the law in the house of the Lord." What did Hilkiah mean should be understood by this? Look at his story (supposing he forged the whole matter), or at the history (supposing he did not). After Moses had written the book of the law, "he delivered it unto the priests, the sons of Levi which bore the ark of the covenant of the Lord, and unto all the elders of Israel." Deut. 31:9. Here are three classes of people to whom the "written documents" are given for their own and for public use-the priests, the servants of the tabernacle, and the civil rulers. These writings were given to so many classes and so many people that, for their general use, copies of them must have been multiplied. Furthermore, Moses gave a book of his law, after he had finished writing it, to the Levites, with this command : "Take this book of the law, and been imposed upon the Jews as their institutions, which they put it in the side of the ark of the covenant of the Lord your God, that it may be there for a witness against thee." Deut. 31:26. This book was not deposited in the ark with the tables of stone, but in or by the side of the ark as it sat in its place in authenticity of the Scriptures, or any part of them, at all. Am the tabernacle. And it was to be kept there as the authentic book of the law-"the book of the law in the house of the Lord." It was required that the king should provide himself with a copy of the law taken from this very book beside the ark. Deut. 17:18. "And it shall be when he sitteth upon the throne

It was this particular copy, which had been misplaced for some cause or other, that Hilkiah found while the repairs of the temple were going on, and sent it to the king. It is not pretended this was the only copy there was, but the one laid up. The story, then, is straight and consistent enough to be relied upon as a correct statement of historical facts.

THE IMPOSSIBILITY OF A FORGERY BEING IMPOSED AND NOT DETECTED AND REPUDIATED.

While the story is consistent enough with itself to be relied upon as a statement of historical facts, the whole is a miserably foolish got up matter to succeed with as a forgery. It could not have escaped detection, and would have been repudiated at once. Forgeries of certain characters, of a much later age than what these writings purport to be, may be thrown out as newly discovered productions of a much earlier age, and gain readers, admirers, believers, and even followers, gradually for a time. But design of texts of Scripture. I can not feel obligated to notice they can never succeed. Their genuineness is always denied, every foreign topic that may be thrown in my way, or to attempt their want of authenticity always provable, and their success limited and partial. McPherson's Poems of Ossian, the writings attributed to Confucius, Joe Smith's Book of Mormon, are examples of this kind, and show about how far success can go. might lead some to think that it can not be done. So now we But never can the laws and constitution of a whole country be newly imposed upon a people as an old matter of hundreds of years standing among them; for when first brought out it must have been known by all that they had not been heard of before.

Let us apply this to Hilkiah's case. He brings out a Bible, and Dr. H. denies that "any Bible existed before that time." Of course, then, it had never been heard of before that time, any more than Joe Smith's Bible before he found it. What does Hilkiah's Bible claim to be? The civil and religious constitution, containing the laws, rites, ordinances and faith-not of a foreign or extinct people, but of that nation. If they had never heard of those laws and institutions, they must have known it. For instance: This Bible claimed to have been made public and circulated among the people. If they had never known this, and there were no copies in existence, they well knew it. This law described a tabernacle built by its direction. If they had had it with them for hundreds of years. This law originated the order of Levites. Could they have been persuaded that they had had the order of Levites among them when they had never heard of the institution?

They could not have received these books as new statutes, political and religious. They could only have received them as their former laws, government and religion, for that was what they claimed to be; and if they were a forgery of Hilkiah, that whole nation must have strangely forgotten about their former laws and government, to have received these books as their former laws. That would be making them believe they owned

They might have apostatized in a greater or less degree, or in greater or lesser numbers, or for a longer or shorter time, by receiving other institutions that they deemed better, or for other motives; and they might have done this repeatedly; and reading this law to them and urging upon them the necessity of their adhering to it, might bring them back again, provided they knew all along that it was their law, given to them by their legislator. But the condition the Jews were in, in the time of Hilkiah, was not an apostacy, if those books were a forgery of his; and his bringing them forward, all unheard-of, as they must have been, as what they had apostatized from, could only have excited their contempt. Could any man invent a book of laws of any of the old nations of Europe, and impose it upon the people as a book of statutes that they had apostatized from ? Equally impossible it must have been for the books of Moses, if they had been invented by Hilkiah, or in any age after Moses, to have were neglecting properly to observe.

Was there ever a book of laws privately framed as the existing laws of any nation since the world began, and then palmed upon that people? And shall that be said of the Jews which is confessed impossible with any nation or people? The Athenians believed that the system of laws that they had was composed by Solon, and that person's opinion would not be deemed worth one straw who would say they were a forgery of a later age. The Spartans attributed their code of laws to Lycurgus; and who believes they could have been persuaded to have done this, if they had been the sheer imposition of some later priest, and Lycurgus had not been the legislator? And it is equally an undeniable Josiah and Hilkiah, who brought it out of the temple, as Dr. historical fuct, that the Jews in every age believed that their an- Hare maintains, s. c. 624. It existed in the days of Hosea cestors received their laws from Moses. A successful forgery would have been just as impracticable in the case of the Jews as in those of the Athenians and Spartans. Lycurgus did not commit his laws to writing, but delivered them in verse, and had into their country. them thoroughly committed to memory. This gave a more fivorable opportunity in after times, to introduce alterations and additions. But Moses wrote out his laws, so that, in aiter ages, when some wished to modify and add to them, they were under the necessity of superimposing upon their traditions, which they feigned were first derived orally from Moses,

Rosseau said, upon the supposition that the Evangelical history of Christ was a fiction, "that the inventor would be a more astonishing character than the hero." But if Hilkiah, or anybody else, forged the Pentateuch and imposed it upon the Jews, he was the most astonishing character that ever lived in reality or fancy; he accomplished a human impossibility-beat all hu manity-

"Outwent all faith, and stretched beyond Credulity's extremest end.'

THE LANGUAGE IN WHICH THE PENTATEUCH WAS WRITTEN IS PROOF OF ITS ANTIQUITY.

The argument by which this proposition is proved is beyond what I have had the means and opportunity to verify. It is the result of the investigation of good Hebrew scholars, and has been thus summed up by Dr. Hoare :

It is an undeniable fact that the Hebrew ceased to be the living language of the Jews soon after the Babylonish captivity, and that the Jewish productions after that period were in general either Chaldee or Greek. The Jews of Palestine, some ages before the appearance of our Saviour, were unable to comprehend the Hebrew original without the assistance of a Chaldee paraphrase ; and it was necessary to undertake a Greek translation, because that language alone was known to the Jews of Alexandria. It necessarily follows, therefore, that every book which is written in pure Hebrew, was composed either before or about the time of the Babylonish captivity. This being admitted, we may advance a step further, and contend, that the period which elapsed be tween the composition of the most ancient and the most modern books of the Old Testament was very considerable ; or, in other words, that the most ancient books of the Old Testament were written a length of ages prior to the Babylonish captivity. No language continues during many centuries in the same state of cultivation, and the Hebrew, like other tongues, passed through the several stages of infancy, youth, manhood, and old age. If, therefore, (as we have already remarked), on comparison, the several parts of the Hebrew Bible are found to differ, not only in regard to style, but also in regard to character and cultivation of language; if one discovers the golden, another the silver, a third a brazen, a fourth the iron age, we have strong internal marks of their having been composed at different and distant periods. No classical scholar, independently of the Grecian history, would believe that the poems ascribed to Homer were written in the age of Demosthenes, the orations of Demosthenes in the time of Origen, or the commentaries of Origen in the days of Lascaris or Chrysoloras. For ery same reason it is certain that the five books which are ascribed to Moses were not written in the time of David, the Psalms of David in the age of Isaiah, nor the prophecies of Isaiah in the time of Malachi. But it appears from what has been said above in regard to the extinction of the Hebrew language, that the book of Malachi could not have been written much later than the Babylonish captivity. Before that period, therefore, were written the prophecies of Isaiah, still earlier the Psalms of David, and much earlier than these the books which are ascribed to Moses. There is no presumption therefore, whatsoever. a priori, that Moses was not the author or compiler of the Pentateuch.

This argument shows that those books must have been composed much earlier than the days of David, whereas Dr. H. asserts that they did not exist till "three hundred and fifty years after the reign of David."

HISTORICAL EVIDENCE.

The evidence is as good to prove that the Mosaic books existed before the days of Hilkiah, as after, only making the proper allowance for the greater length of time. Let us begin and trace back some of this evidence.

It can readily be proved that the Pentateuch existed at the time the New Testament was written, for Christ and the apostles refer to it and quote it. It is equally clear that it existed in the time of Ezra, which was the time of the return of the Jews from Babylon, about B. c. 536. Ezra 3:6. "Then stood up Joshua the son of Jozadak, and his brethren the priests, and Zerubbabel the son of Sheatiel, and his brethren, and builded the altar of the God of Israel, to offer burnt offerings thereon, as it is written in the law of Moses." 6:18. "And they set the priests in their divisions, and the Levites in their courses, for the service of God, which is at Jerusalem, as it is written in the book of Moses." Daniel also mentions it, 9:11-13. It existed in the time of later it is most certain to lead to many serious crimes.

king of Israel, some thirty years before Josiah king of Judah. For when, in the reign of Hosea, the king of Assyria carried the ten tribes of Israel into eaptivity, he transplanted other people as genuine, and handed down to their posterity. It is familiarly known as the Samaritan Pentateuch, and is substantially the same as the Hebrew. It was extant in the time of Jehoshaphat king of Judah, B. c. 912, some two hundred and eighty-eight before Josiah and Hilkiah; for Jehoshaphat employed public instructors for its promulgation :

"Also in the third year of his reign he sent to his princes, to teach Elishama and Jehoram, priests. And they taught in Judah, and had the book of the law of the Lord with them, and went about through all the cities of Judah and taught the people."-2 CHRON. 17:8-9.

We have now found evidence of its existence, not only among one nation, but three nations : the two tribes or Judah ; the ten tribes or Israel, who were carried into captivity under Hosea, and the Samaritans, who were colonies transplanted into the country tribes of Israel before their division into two kingdoms, or it would not have been with both and adopted by the Samaritans. This carries us up to Solomon's reign. It was extant and well the fingers, and which all of us agreed to be a hand, especially our unknown in the reign of David the father of Solomon, as those frequent references to, and quotations from it, in those Psalms that are David's too abundantly show to need any particular specificawritten, and was known to have been a familiar institution that had been standing for no short length of time before that. Frequent mention is made of "the book of the law" in that book : and in 8: 30-34, we read:

"Then Joshua built an altar unto the Lord God of Israel, in mount Ebal, as Moses the servant of the Lord commanded the children of Israel, as it is written in the book of the law of Moses. And he wrote there upon the stones a copy of the law of Moses, which he wrote in the presence of the children of Israel. And afterward he read all the words of the law-the blessings and cursings, according to all that is written in the book of the law. There was not a word of all that Mo ses commanded, which Joshua read not before all the congregation of hair's breadth from being exactly in the center of my mouth. Our Israel.'

And, in taking leave of the people, he exhorted them "to do all that is written in the book of the law of Moses."-23:6.

Such is the chain of evidence, mass of facts, and combination of circumstances that go to prove demonstrably clear, not only the existence, but also the notoriety of the book of Moses long and long before the days of Hilkiah. I guess we shall have to acknowledge that a priest told the truth for once, or show ourselves most unreasonably stubborn. To me it seems (am I a party interested ?) that there is not the shadow of a possibility to rest that bold assertion upon, "that the evidence that any Bible existed before that time rests upon the authority of an obscure priest and a fanatical monarch." For my strictures on Dr. Hare quoting Confucius' precepts, he said, "a mountain is made of a molehill." But it seems to me, in my present state of mind, that quoting 2 Chron. 34, 2 Kings 22, as a foundation for the allegation that Hilkiah forged the books of Moses, is an attempt to build a molehill where there is no material to make one out the result shows it is exceedingly difficult to " make something out of nothing."

I was intending to write this time upon the providence of God ; but my space is already occupied, and I must omit it. If I do it at all, it will have to be in another Number, and I can not write any more for some two weeks, or perhaps longer. F. J. B.

MANIFESTATIONS IN NEW JERSEY. BUBLINGTON COUNTY, N. J.

EDITORS OF THE SPIRITUAL TELEGRAPH : During the four evenings immediately preceding the date of this letter,* the following wonderful manifestations occurred in my house at this place, which, if you see proper, you may insert in your interesting journal; and if any of your see proper, you may insert in your ing journal; and if any of your readers can explain them on any na-tural or scientific principles, I will guarantee to pay his expenses from the most remote part of the world to New York, where it shall be satisfactorily explained, and the funds handed over.

On the first of the four evenings alluded to, my wife, daughter, and a gentleman on a visit, with myself, sat down to tea as usual, when suddenly the table began to jar and move in a strange way, and in a few seconds raised up at one end and came down violently, spilling tea By the Samaritans the book of the law of Moses was received from our cups, etc. The conclusion by some of us was that the Spirits were manifesting their presence in a more than usual manner for the benefit of our visiting friend, who by the way, was an aubeliever in spiritual manifestations. After tea we were told to put out the lights and take hold of hands. We did so, and our friend held the hand of the medium, when the following phenomena took place, which to all of us were most extraordinary. I give only a portion, without regard to any particular evening.

The table, which is six feet six inches by three feet six inches, with in the cities of Judah. And with them he sent Levites, and with them the leaves up, is of solid mohogany, with a drawer in the end, and is unusually heavy for its size. It was moved up several inches and held some time, and at my request the Spirits raised one end and I the other, holding it several seconds without any one touching it except myself at one end. This subsequently had been done in the light. I asked if the Spirits would show us the lights often spoken of by Spiritualists; the reply was " Perhaps." We waited a few minutes, and to our great surprise a number of brilliant little balls appeared about the size of a pea, one of which appeared to be fixed on the forehead of my of the ten tribes. Consequently it must have existed with the daughter, remaining there several minutes. All of us put our hands successively on the spot, but could feel nothing. Still the light remained. They also showed to each of us distinctly and repe tedly what appeared to be a human hand illuminated, opening and closing believing friend, who was repeatedly slapped in a gentle maanner on the side of his face with this hand, and all of us seeing distinctly its motions to and irom his face as it repeated the blows. An invisible hand also repeatedly took him by the hair, and in one or two instances tions. Finally, it was in existence when the book of Joshua was brought his head down to the table, whilst they were holding each other's hands. The lights and slapping the face have been repeated several times, our visitor holding the medium's hands.

Next I inquired if they could play on an accordeon (the only instrument in the house.) The reply was " Perhaps ;" so we placed it on the table, and in a few minutes it was moved about, and soon several notes were sounded (we still holding bands.) A small whistle was then laid on the table with a request that it should be blown, when in a few seconds it was placed in the month of our friend, who blew it "loud and shrill." He acknowledges that none of us could place it so directly in his mouth in the dark, even if our hands had been at liberty. I asked the favor to place it in my mouth, which was done as exactly as if it had been noon-day, without even a perceptible variation of a friend sitting on my left tried to place it in my mouth in the dark, but he fetched up on my collar-bone. I tried on him and came nearer his ear than his month. The whistle was then blown without being touched by any of us, and thrown on the floor, whence it was placed on the table without the assistance of any one present.

Having shown us a hand illuminated, they next showed us, quite as distinctly an opaque human hand, which passed between us and the window, and was seen also by all, and which was passed gently over the face of our friend, and which he describes as rather peculiar, having an unnatural feeling. At another time the drawer of the table was shoved out and in several times, and several pieces of paper thrown out of it, on the table, one of which was thrust into the hand of our friend who embraced this opportunity to detect any deception, if such existed when, as he describes it, he found "a hand suspended on nothing." All of us felt the touch of the hand, and some of us several times.

On one of the evenings alluded to, we took our seats around a smaller table, all of us with our hands on top of the table, when the table was repeatedly raised from ten to fourteen inches, and in one or two instances was kept suspended several seconds, with our hands still on the top.

After these manifestations, many of which were repeated, and others of, and then to attempt to make a mountain out of that. And not recorded, I asked our friend what he thought of it. His reply was, "John, I believe ; help my unbelief."

Both our names are herewith given you as a guarantee of the truth of the above. Yours, etc., J. C.

I BELIEVE there are some persons who can love, not more than once but often ; but they are not people, Lady Mallery, who love very well. I believe too, that many a young person, many a very young woman. capable of the utmost depth and strength of affection, can love, if it deserve that name, very tenderly and very sweetly, before they ever love very truly and deeply. But I do believe, that when once a person has loved with strong, ardent, passionate affection--with that attachment which sets all obstacles and barriers at defiance, they can never love again. I believe the harvest is reaped, and the produce of the season is over. JAMES.

VULGAR ROMANCING AT SARATOGA.

We find the following account of the first " bit of romance," at Baraloga, this season, in the Baratoga Post, of Monday ;

"Among the first arrivals this season was a gentlemanly looking chap adoraed with all the dignity and magnificence that the barber and tailor are capable of investing the man with. He put up at one of the Br.t class houses, and commanded all the respect and attention that this apparent character could entitle him to. Illa foreign airs called attention to him from the visitors, and when approached, his modest but cold dignity repulsed them politely-leaving them to conclude that he was some well-bred noble, who would not be disturbed in his reveries by common-place approaches. The ladies were the first to find out his nobility. Every politeness was shown him, and his bosom was fingrant with boquets by fair hands formed. Yet the lion was coy and cold as ever, until one evening while wandering by the Circular - from Georgia. By accident the Railway, he met the wealthy Mrs .-lady lost her bracelet in the path, and it would be ignoble for him to refuse her to find it. They sought in vain for the bracelet, until it was too dark to longer look, and fatigued, they sat together on the sents in the grove. The lady forgetting her loss, with sweet inventions of her own, suggested her suspicions of his noble birth-which were modestly increased by his reply that he ' made no such pretensions-at least in that country where every man may become a noble.' The answer, so far at least as she was concerned, was perfectly satisfactory. At this time he condescended to think favorably upon her beauty, and could not believe her of common descent ; her modesty, intelligence, wit and dignity belonged to a high order. All of which we are bound to confess was true. He accompanied her to the hotel, and from thence she came to be envied by every marketable daughter, and slandered by every speculating mother. For a week they were always seen together-and who for the last few days has walked beneath the splendid pines on Circular-street and not met them? They were in love-deep, undying love. The good old father saw the attachment, and was not surprised when the pretty miss informed him her hand was asked in marriage-and she craved his consent. The consent was given-but not, however, until the old gentleman thought full five minutes upon the propriety of inquiring himself into the pecuniary condition of the suitor. 'But what use,' said the daughter, 'of inquiring ; is he not a lord ? and how insulting it would be to even suggest that money was a consideration for giving away your daughter.' The old man thought as the daughter, and both slept that night surrounded with visions of splendid castles-gay parties, liveried servants, and exclusive greatness. But what was their surprise next morning, when smiling through tears of joy on the first meeting after the 'consent,' to be disturbed by one of the proprietors of a stage line running out of Albany, acco-ting the 'lord for a day,' with 'I say, Bill, you lonsy skunk, why did you leave the road when we were short of hands, and what's worse, carry off two days' receipts?' The lordly airs dropped-the lady's head fell on her snowy bosom, as with a faint shrick she fell into the arms of her father; and tall walking on the west side of Broadway toward the depot might have been seen on Saturday morning last, about the time the southern train was leaving."

AN AFFECTING INCIDENT -An affecting occurrence took place some time ago in a seaboard town in England. Six little children got into a boat on the beach, and a mischievous boy shoved it off. The boat drifted away to sea before the children were missing. Terrible was the agony of the mothers when they knew it. A number of men went off in all directions ; every boat was on the look-out until far in the night. Daylight returned, and still there were no tidings of the helpless children; the day wore away, and still nothing was heard from themthey were either lost in the wide expanse of the ocean, or buried within its unfathomable depths. A Plymouth fisherman, fishing early next morning, discovered something floating in the distance. He bore down to it, and discovered it to be a boat, and in the bottom six children, all huddled together like a nest of birds, fast asleep-God having given them that blessed solace after a day of terror and despair. He took them aboard, and feasted them with bread and cheese, and gladdened their despairing little hearts with the promise of taking them home. Between three and four in the afternoon, the fisherman was seen in the offing, the boat astern. All eyes were turned eagerly toward him. The best spy-glass in the town was rubbed again and again, and at last they could fairly see that it was the identical boat. The news flew through the town-the mothers came frantic to the beach, for there were no children discerned in the boat; none to be seen in the sloop. Intense was the agony of suspense, and all alike shared it with the parents. At last the boat came in, and the word went round-"They are all safe ;" and many stout-hearted men burst into tears, women shricked for joy, and became almost frantic with their insupportable happiness. It was, indeed, a memorable day : and a prayer, eloquent for its rough sincerity, was offered up to Almighty God, who, in His infinite mercy, had spared these innocent children from the perils and terrors of the sea during that fearful night. Five of these children were under five years of age, and the sixth but nine years old.

BATTLE OF THE ANTS. I was witness, says Thoreau, to events of a tess peaceful character, One day I went out to my wood plie, or rather my pile of stamps, and I observed two large ants, the one red, the other much larger, nearly half an Inch long, and black, flereely contending with each other. Having once got hold they nev or let go, but struggled, and wrestled and rolled on the chips incessantly. Looking further, I was surprised to find that the chips were covered with such combatants - that it was not a ducl, but a baitle, a war between two races of ants, the red always pitted against the black, and frequently two red ones against one black. The tegions of these myrmidous covered all the hills and vales of my wood yard, and the ground was already strewing with the dead and dying, both red and black. It is the only battle I have ever witnessed, the only battle field I ever trod while the battle was raging ; internecine war-the red republicans on the one hand, and the black imperialists on the other. On every side they were engaged in deadly combat, yet without any noise that I could hear, and human soldiers never fought to resolutely. I watched a couple that were fast locked in each other's embraces, in a little sunny valley amid the chips, now at noon day prepared to fight till the sun went down, or life went out.

The smaller red champion had fastened himself like a vice to his ad versary's front, and through all the tumblings on that field, never for an instant ceased to guaw at one of his feelers near the root, having already caused the other to go by the board ; while the stronger black one dashed him from side to side, and, as I saw on looking nearer, had already divested him of several of his members. They fought with more pertinucity than bull-dogs. Neither manifested a disposition to retreat. It was evident that their battle-cry was to conquer or die. In the mean while there came along a single red ant on the hill side of the valley, evidenly full of excitement, who either had dispatched his foe or had not taken part in the battle ; probably the latter, for he had lost none of his limbs, whose mother had charged him to return with this shield or upon it. Or perhaps he was some Achilles, who had nourished his wrath apart, and had now come to avenge or rescue his Patroclus. He saw this unequal combat from afar-for the blacks were nearly twice the size of the red-he drew near with rapid pace, till he stood on his guard, within half an inch of the combatants ; then. watching his opportunity, he sprang upon the black warrior, and commenced his operations near the foot of his right fore leg, leaving the foe to select among his own members ; and so there were three united for life, as if a new kind of attraction had been invented which put all other locks and cements to shame. I should not have wondered by this time to find that they had their respective musical bands, stationed on some eminent chip, and playing their national airs the while, to excite the slow and cheer the dying combatants. I was myself excited some what, even as if they had been men.

I took up the chip on which the three I have particularly described were struggling, carried it into my house, and placed it under a tum bler on my window sill, in order to await the issue. Holding a microscope to the first mentioned red ant, I saw that though he was assiduously gnawing at the near forc leg of his enemy, having severed the remaining feeler, his own breast was all torn away, exposing what vitals he had there to the jaws of the black warrior, whose breast plate was apparently too thick for him to pierce ; and the dark carbuncles of the sufferer's eyes shone with ferocity, such as war only could excite. They struggled half an hour longer under the tumbler, and when I looked again the black soldier had severed the heads of his focs from their bodies, and the still living heads were hanging on either side of him, like ghastly trophies at his saddle-bow, still apparently as firmly fastened as ever, and he was endeavoring with feeble struggles, being without feelers, and with only the remnant of a leg, and I know not how many other wounds, to divest himself of them ; which at length, after half an hour more, he accomplished. I raised the glass, and he went off over the window-sill in that crippled state. Whether he finally survived that combat, and spent the remainder of his days in some hotel des invalides, I do not know ; but I thought that his industry would not be worth much thereafter. I never learned which party was victorious, nor the cause of the war ; but I felt for the rest of that day as if I had had my feelings excited and harrowed by witnessing the struggle-the ferocity and carnage-of a human battle before my

SINGULAR PHENOMENON.—Building Struck by Lightn'n1 on a Clear Day.—On Monday, the 11th ultimo, the barns (three in number, and adjoining each other) of Comfort Kent, Esq., of Suffield, were struck by lightning and set on fire, and with their contents entirely consumed. The barns were full of hay and grain, and contained about two hundred bushels of old grain, with various farming implements. The barns were struck at about 4 o'clock, r. M., and at the time the sun was to be seen in the horizon. Mr. Kent, with his son and son-in law, had just left the barn for the house, and were but a few rods off when they heard the crash, and on looking around the flames were bursting through the roof. They hastened back, and were barsly able to get the cattle ont of the yard, but could save none of the contents of the barn.—Hartford Times.

A WISE ANSWER. -" You must not play with that little girl, my dear," said a judicious parent.

"I can't help that, my dear," responded the foolish anti-American ; "her father is a shoemaker."

"But I don't play with her father; I play with her; she isn't a shoemaker."

A Nonie Dag. The following is from the Trinity (California) Times It records one of the most remarkable instances we ever heard, of caping sugarity. William Dredge lives about five miles from town, at the base of the mountain which towers North of us. A short time after midnight on the morning of Wednesday last, he was aroused from his slambers by the howl of a dog. No mensee on his part could rid him of the presence of the strange intruder. The dog continued to walk around the cabin, stiff repeating his dismat meaning and howling, occasionatiy making efforts to effect an entrance through the closed doorway. Far prised and somewhat alarmed at this singular demonstration, Mr Dradge at last hastily dressed bimself and unbolied the door, when a large mastiff rushed in. The dog at once eaught hold of his trowsers, and employed every gentle means to induce the man to secompany him outside. Dredge's first impression was that the animal was mad and yet so peculiar and carnest were the dumb entreaties, that he finally yielded and proceeded without the estin. A joyful yell was the result, and the delighted brute, now capering and wagging his tail before him, and now returning and gently seizing him by the hand and trowsers, induced Dredge to follow him. Their course was op the precipitous side of the mountain, and soon they were foreing their way through a snow-drift that had settled in one of its numerous fis sures. Here comes the wonder. Upon the snow lay the body of a woman, who had evidently perished from cold and exhaustion. Her limit, were already stiffened in death ; but what was the surprise of Mr. Dredge to see that faithful dog ferret out from a bundle of clothing that lay by the side of the woman, a young child, about two years old, still warm and living. A little inspection, aided by the starlight and the brightness of the snow, enabled him to discover that the person of the woman was nearly naked. With a mother's affection she had stripped her own person in order to furnish warmth to her exposed infant The trusty dog had completed her work of self-sacrifice. Mr. Dredge immediately conveyed the child to his cabia, and arousing some of his neighbors, proceeded again to the mountain to scenre from the atlack of wild beasts the person of the unfortunate woman. Her body was buried the next day. The child and dog have been adopted by this good Hamaritan ; but as yet he has been mable to obtain any light as to the name of the woman, or how she happened to stray on the dismal mountain side at such an unfortunae hour. The child is doing well, and is truly a handsome boy.

RE-APPEARING OF THE GREAT COMET.- According to a Limerick paper the great comet of 1856, which was expected to make its appearance between the years 1856 and 1859, has been already seen in the south of Ireland. The Limerick Observer, referring to a statement of a correspondent, says : "He was standing near the salmon-weir, on the platform before the mills of Corbadiy, about half past ten o'clock, when his attention was attracted by what appeared to be a fire rising on the top of Keeper mountain, due east of his position. He remarked the object to a gentleman who was with him, but as the fire rose and cleared the top of the mountain, his friend suggested that it must be a lantern suspended to a kite. It had then the appearance of a globe of fire as large as a good-sized orange, with a broad tail of light extending about eighteen inches from the body. The two gentlemen watched for an hour, and the watchman on the weir observed it also. On Thursday night they saw it again. It rose a few moments later, presenting the same appearances and was high in the heavens at half-past eleven o'clock, when they went home. At that hour one of the gentlemen pointed it out to his sister. Last night, from the same place, the same persons again saw it rise twenty minutes before eleven o'clock, and then it occurred to one of them (our informant) that it might be a comet. He ceased to watch it about midnight, but the watchman observed it up to half-past one o'clock this morning. It did not seem so large as on the previous nights, but still far exceeded the most brilliant form in which the planet Jupiter has ever been beheld."

A MESMERIZER NOVPLUSSED.—During the early part of last week an litherant professor of physiology visited our town, but failed to draw any considerable number of people to the hall. In the hope, probably, of inducing a larger turn out, he concluded, one day, to give specimens of his skill to his fellow-boarders at the Exchange Hotel, and to this end he called up a little darkey as a subject. After various passes and manipulations over young Gumbo, his eyes dilated and his muscles became rigid.

"Now," said the professor, " your arm is paralyzed."

And so it really was, for several persons tried in vain to bend it.

"Wonderful !" said the boarders.

The professor then laid a three cent piece on Gumbo's hand and said :

"Now, sir, you can not close your hand. If you can, you may keep the money."

The darkey seemed to make an effort, but the hand remained open. The professor next placed a quarter of a dollar upon the darkey's hand, and invited him to close on it, and keep both.

The crowd was mystified.

The professor in a glow of enthusiasm at the trimmph of his science fumbled about and scared up half a dime, which he added to the pile, still inviting the darkey to close.

Young Gumbo concluded that the professor's small change was about exhausted, and on the last invitation to close, deliberately shut his hand, thrust it into his pantaloons pocket, and with a  $^{\alpha}$  ki by by  $t^{\alpha}$  such as only a young nigger can give, disappeared through the side door.

The professor acknowledged himself to have been slightly taken in and done for,
