The PHILOSOPHY of Astrology

by Manly Palmer Hall

Astrology, medicine, mathematics, music and architecture were the great sciences of the ancient world. It is not possible to discover the origin of these primary branches of learning. Nor is it possible to discover the races or nations which first cultivated these refinements of knowledge. Various countries have laid claims to the distinction of having cradled the great sciences, but it appears from the perspective of our present time that all the world enjoyed in almost equal measure the cultural influences of these five orders of learning.

Today, astrology is often referred to as the Chaldean Art because it was especially venerated and widely practiced by those ancient people who inhabited the valley of the Euphrates. But if the Chaldeans were great exponents of the astrological arts, so likewise were the Egyptians, Hindus, Chinese, Persians, and the great civilizations of the ancient Americas.

It has been observed that no nation or race has reached the flowering of culture without the civilizing influence of astrology. The study of the stars and the effects of their motions upon the lives of mundane creatures has intrigued the minds of men since the beginning of recorded history. It appears that men developed an astrological tradition long before the invention of writing; at least the earliest written records of the race indicate that the astrological tradition was already well established.

Astronomers have called astrology the mad mother of astronomy. While this definition as a whole is quite false, one part of it is true. Modern astronomy is an outgrowth of astrological speculation. The ancients studied the stars primarily for the purpose of interpreting the course of human events. In those older times the modern scientific viewpoint was unknown. The student was concerned for the most part with the effect of universal agencies upon the problem of his own survival. Knowledge for the sake of knowledge was of little interest to him. He was a utilitarian. To his mind the stars were part of a universal order. The star and the star-gazer were bound together in a great cosmic pattern.

The five great sciences originally were part of one esoteric tradition. The priests of the old religion were learned in mathematics, were physicians and architects, cultivated music and practiced astrology. The old theory of education was very different from the modern viewpoint. Today we thrust education upon the individual. We assure him that knowledge is his birthright, and he must become schooled whether he will or not. As a result we behold the pitiable spectacle of the unscholarly struggling with ideas which are beyond their comprehension.

According to the ancient theory of education, the right to knowledge had to be earned. Learning was reserved for those who desired learning to the degree that they were prepared to prove their fitness to receive it. The sciences were under the protection of the priests who initiated those of obvious ability and fitness into the profundities of deeper learning. It was only after the decline of the great institutions of the pagan world that knowledge became available to the profane.

It might seem that the universalization of educational opportunity would have resulted in a general improvement, but this was not always the case. The unprepared and the unfit could not rise to the challenge of thinking. A man cannot use wisely a knowledge which is beyond his comprehension. What he cannot use he abuses. What he cannot understand he misunderstands. The result is a general collapse of the esoteric tradition. From which the world has not yet recovered. We are plagued to this day with the misunderstandings which resulted from the collapse of the pagan mystery schools.

THE PHILOSOPHY OF ASTROLOGY

Let us consider the effect of the profaning of the mysteries with particular reference to the astrological tradition. This we know: the astrology that we practice today is but a fragment of the great astrological tradition which was developed and perfected by the initiate priests of the ancient world.

Astrology is divisible into two distinct sciences. The esoteric science of astrology deals with the mysteries of cosmos itself, the spiritual, intellectual, moral and physical chemistry of the world. This kind of astrology is the key to the great analogies which exist at the root of life and manifest in the ancient doctrine of the Macrocosm and the Microcosm. Herein is concealed the mystery of the Great Man which is the world. And the mystery of the little world is man. Esoteric astrology is a religion inasmuch as it reveals the anatomy and physiology of God. It is a philosophy inasmuch as it sets forth the rationale of existence and the intellectual and moral relationships between things. Esoteric astrology is a science inasmuch as it reveals with mathematical exactitude the universal pattern of living and the means by which the human being builds himself into the fabric of the universal pattern.

Exoteric astrology is the prognostic aspect of the science. Within it are the seven branches of horoscopy, the delineative and predictional arts. What the average astrologer does not understand is the relationship between the philosophy of the stars and the system of divination which is based upon astrological lore. Astrology works because it bears witness to the truths of celestial dynamics.

Let us attempt to understand the relationship between astrology as philosophy and astrology as predictive art. For example: man himself consists of two parts. The greater part of man is his spiritual unity—his divine nature. The spirit of man is the great overshadowing reality, and the personality of man is merely one manifestation of his spiritual nature. What the body of man is to the spirit of man, prognostic astrology is to philosophical astrology.

In order to practice the physical science of astrology adequately the astrologer must understand the great philosophical foundations of this profound subject.

Astrology is much more than an art or even a science: it is a way of life, it is a complete formula for living. It is a universal truth manifesting physically through a particular technique; but never for a moment should the astrologer indulge the fantasy that prognostics is all of his subject. Predictions are only the beginning. It is the philosophy which is the greater part.

The beginning of the study of esoteric astrology is to examine the mystery of the Macrocosm. Here one point must be very carefully clarified. The Macrocosm is not the cosmos of modern science. Rather it is what the ancients called the World. This term has a very special philosophical meaning. The world is not the solar system. It is the wholeness of nature both visible and invisible, corporal and incorporeal, physical and spiritual.

Modern scientists complain that astrology is basically untrue because it is founded upon the geocentric theory of astronomy which passed out of scientific favor after the death of Tycho Brahe, the last of the great geocentric astronomers. The basic principle of geocentric astronomy is that the earth is in the center of the solar system. The Moon, the planets and the Sun are represented in the old drawings as moving in orbits about the earth. Modern astronomers assume that the ancients were unaware of the heliocentric system which places the Sun in the midst of the solar system with the planets, including the earth, revolving about it. Only the Moon remains in an orbit about the earth.

There is sufficient evidence available to indicate that at least some ancient peoples were quite aware of the heliocentric theory. Pythagoras, living in the sixth century B.C., declared that the planets moved about the flaming star of the Sun. It should be remembered that Pythagoras spoke not with his own voice alone, but with the authority of the great esoteric schools into which he had been initiated. Pythagoras had gained his knowledge from the Brahmins of India, the priests of Egypt, and the hierophants of the Greek Mysteries. If, therefore, he taught that the planets moved about the Sun he spoke for these schools and bore witness of a doctrine which they held in secret.

It may be difficult for the materialists to reconcile the heliocentric and geocentric systems of Astronomy. It is immediately clarified, however, if we understand that the heliocentric system applies to the physical solar system and the geocentric system applies to the world. The Ptolemaic concept of geocentric astronomy represents the qualitative world, and deals with conditions of matter rather than the mechanical arrangements of planets. When the ancients referred to the world they meant the complete nature of a creation, not merely its physical structure. The earth that is in the middle of the geocentric diagram of the world is not the planet earth, but the element earth or matter. The seven planetary orbits that surround the earth in the geocentric system are zones or planes of magnetic energy and are referred to as the bodies of "Blessed Gods". Together these form what the medieval mystics called the Anima Mundi, or the soul of the world. Beyond the orbits of the planets, according to Ptolemy, lie the great circles of the fixed stars often represented by three rings of flames. These great constellational groupings were the source of the pure spiritual energy of nature, and were the abodes of the three manifestations of the Supreme Deity.

Thus we have a formula: the spirit of all things from the stars, the soul of all things from the planets, and the body of all things from the elements or matter. These three great divisions—spirit, soul and body—consciousness, intelligence and force—will, wisdom and action—are related to stars, planets and elements. The geocentric figure which represents these three parts in their proper relationship is called The World.

Space is filled with stars. Each star is a sun. And all these suns together are the manifestors of the pure spirituality which sustains the world. Each of the suns has its planets which are the reflectors and distributors of its energies. There are innumerable planets in space and through these planets energy is specialized and a second kind of energy termed reflective is produced. This reflective energy consists of two qualities—the positive solar quality and the negative elementary quality. Reflected light is conditioned by the surface from which it is reflected; so planetary energy is called formal, because form is a compound of spirit and matter.

The physical structure of the world consists of the physical body of the various planets, luminaries, asteroids, meteors, etc. There is no such thing as dead matter. Material bodies are composed of a kind of material energy; and this energy likewise has a certain emanational power, but this power is less than that of stars or planets reflecting solar life. The physical energy of the elements themselves is called force, and force exercises a profound influence upon such structures as are in close proximity to the source of that force.

Thus, man living on the planet earth receives three kinds of energy into his own nature: spiritual energy, from the countless stars of heaven; physical energy reflected from the other planets of his own solar system; and elementary energy or force from the physical earth beneath his feet.

The Egyptians taught that all superior natures influenced inferior natures. They believed that energy was constantly flowing downward from the spiritual fountain of life through all the qualities of living to be absorbed finally by the abyss of matter. As rain falling from the sky is absorbed by the earth, so all the spiritual forces of nature act upon matter which absorbs these energies and later releases them in the form of living things.

The energies of the stars and the planets were called seminal because whenever they fell into matter they became seed-like and rose again from matter in the form of evolving creatures. The flowers in the fields, the birds in the trees and man himself with all his complex structure, are forms of energy rising up from and through matter toward their own source—the stars in space.

Plato taught that creatures coming into birth fell like drops of living dew from the Milky Way. After falling through the arches of the planetary orbits this energy descended into the dark womb of the earth. From this darkness it rose again triumphantly through the developing life of the planet. And at last in the process of evolution it ascends again the ladder of the seven planets and returns to the stars. It descends as life and ascends as living things.

It is this magnificent conception of the universal process which is the foundation of philosophical astrology. From the father fountains, the stars, is flowing forever the streams of living water and it is this Water of Life that makes fertile the fields of space. Growth is the increase of the manifestation of the spiritual part of the compound of form. Spirit is active, matter is relatively inert; forms contain within themselves both activity and inertia. Materiality is the victory of inertia over life. Spirituality is the victory of life over inertia. The struggle of activity and inertia is present everywhere in nature. Theologians symbolize it as the struggle between good and evil. God and the Devil are spirit and matter.

Recognizing three basic qualities of activity in the world, it is next necessary to understand the classification of these energies according to the esoteric tradition. We may turn to the Orphics for assistance in this problem. They divided the world into three parts which they called supreme, superior and inferior. The supreme world was the abode of the first gods, or as one of their writings says: "The first gods from the First". These were the old gods who remained aloof from the world. Seated upon their ancient thrones, the great gods of the first order are the servants and administrators of the One Life which flows from all of the stars. The superior world is the abode of the secondary gods, the creators, the powers—these are the wandering gods, the planets, lesser orders of divinities, servants of the great gods, and the source of the intellectual and moral spheres. The inferior world, the third world of the Orphics, is the abode of mortals, creatures who are rooted in matter and who receive into themselves the energies of life. In the old mythology the supreme world is the abode of those who give life, the superior world the abode of those who distribute life, and the inferior world the abode of those who receive life.

Astronomers object to what they call an arbitrary allotment of various divinities to the various heavenly bodies. They assume that the ancients arbitrarily assigned the god Jupiter to one planet and the goddess Venus to another. One astronomer made the extremely superficial statement that the ancients first assigned various gods to the planets and then attributed the attributes of these gods to the planets, assuming that each planet affected the world according to the nature of the god which they had assigned to it. This is an entirely erroneous viewpoint. The planets were not named after the gods, the gods were named after the planets. Having established the great pattern of the Macrocosm, the old civilizations settled themselves to the task of discovering the quality of the energy radiated by the various heavenly bodies. Their researches were thorough and careful and the process required thousands of years of painstaking investigation. The records of this great process of building up esoteric knowledge was lost to the modern world with the destruction of the Atlantean civilization.

Each of the fixed stars differs somewhat from the others in the quality and quantity of its energies and its distance from or proximity to some other body in space. Modern astronomy believes this difference to be basically chemical. The ancients believed the difference to be basically alchemical.

The accompanying figure is from an early wood-block print of the world according to Ptolemy. It is especially interesting because it shows the three zodiacs which inclose the orbits of the planets. The first of these zodiacs is called the Primum Mobile or the First Motion. It corresponds to the first power of the God-head. It is the source of all the energies which manifest through the processes of creation. The second zodiac corresponds with the intellectual sphere and the third to the material world. Thus the three zodiacs emanate the forces which sustain the three parts of the world nature. The Spiritual Zodiac corresponds to the stars, the Intellectual to the planets, and the Material Zodiac, called the firmament, corresponds to the elements.

The firmament is the dividing line between the world of spirit and the world of soul. In Genesis it is described how the waters which were above the firmament were divided from the waters which were beneath the firmament. By reference to the accompanying diagram it will be seen that the Crystal Sea (the Intellectual Zodiac) is above the firmament. This is the Sea of Life, in the midst of which stands the throne of the Almighty. This figure is the key to the revelation of St. John. Patmus is the elementary world described in the Apocalypse as an island. John being in the Island of Patmus beheld a vision. In this illumination he was lifted up to the orbits of the seven planets to the door in the firmament. Having passed through the sphere of the world soul he discovered himself on the shore of the Crystalline Sea. Of course, the seven planets are the Seven Churches in Asia. They are also the seven rungs of Jacob's Ladder, upon which the angels descend and ascend. Jacob's Pillow—the stone upon which he rested his head during the vision—is of course the material world at the foot of the planetary ladder. The seven steps are the seven gates of Omar Khayyam and the seven arches of the prophet Enoch. It is through these same gates that the Babylonian goddess Istar descended into the underworld (elemental matter) in search for the lost Tammuz. These also are the gates through which Mohammed ascended in the celebrated vision which is called the Night Journey.

In his dream Mohammed was carried to Jerusalem and stood upon the rock Moriah which was the foundation of Solomon's Temple. This rock was the ancient threshing floor of the Jebusites—again a reference to the material worlds in the midst of the symbolical figure. As Mohammed stood upon the rock Moriah, a ladder with golden rungs fell from heaven, and the prophet ascended through the gates at each of which stood one of the Patriarchs. The planets represent the Patriarchs, and the symbolism of the Old Testament and much of the religious mysticism of the New Testament is concealed in this curious symbol of the world orbits.

UNCLE SAM'S Horoscope

by Wynn

Man is an organization of many parts on many levels of consciousness, much more intricate, complicated and sensitive than he realizes in the big majority of human instances.

In fact, man is the replica of the universe itself, made "in the image" of all the laws of nature.

The ancients told us that man is the little universe, the Microcosm, and that the great universe all about us is a grand man, the Macrocosm.

Every organization of men and women is a little universe, a composite that has a horoscope. This is true of economic, emotional, civic and national composites: they are organizations having distinct egoic patterns that are environmental to their levels of and conditions of soul quality.

Thus it becomes possible, when we know a nation's moment of organization, to read the horoscope of that moment and learn valuable facts concerning the nation under consideration—just as though it were a man, for it is a collective man whose citizens are its parts.

While musing along these lines recently, it occurred to me to check up on what various astrological authorities have said of the various sign, house, decan and degree positions of the planets and cusps of the U.S.A. horoscope, to see if the descriptions of character and the typical experiences of individuals would describe or explain the peculiar type known as an American.

The results I have obtained are worthy of close attention by all who have an interest in astrology or an interest in our nation. Every quoted word of the remainder of this article is from printed books or magazines, all of which were talking of individual human horoscopes—let us see if they make up the composite character of Uncle Sam. I think they do.

*Horoscope of a Man
Born at Philadelphia
July 4, 1776
at 5.00 pm*

Your Sun, the source of your highest spiritual energies and qualities, "gives great receptivity and tenacity, the latter often being noticeable in a retentive memory. The keynotes of your character are generosity, hospitality and the cultivation of home"—and in no other nation has real estate ever become so large an item in the lives of all its citizens; no other nation has ever been as hospitable to the men, women and children of other nations; no other nation has ever been as generous to those of other lands. "This is an executive sign, conferring capacity for directing self and others in mercantile and other group pursuits". "Strong inheritance of character; influence of a parent". Obviously, the parent is England.

"Your Sun in the second decan of Cancer shows you to have a strong sense of drama . . . high talent creatively along numerous lines . . . follow inventive, literary, artistic or musical tendencies . . ." Uncle Sam most certainly has been all these: the world's leader in inventiveness; literature may be a rather high description of our output, but we have more publications and bigger circulations than any other nation, per capita; in the motion picture we have combined the artistic with the inventive, leading the world; musically we make more noise, at least, and we have some outstanding composers and artists.

Every text speaks of the nurturing, protective qualities of Cancer—no nation has ever gathered in the immigrants from foreign shores and given them opportunity as has the U.S.A.

Concerning the actual degree position of our national Sun, it is said: "in the whirlpool of man's conflicts art thou placed, ever called upon to be the weigher of human and material values, as pleader or as judge. Thine own life is linked with that of others, so guard well thine alliances. Gain is thine through friendship, and also loss, for thou canst not deny a loved one's call."

Those are most significant words, words that lead one to believe the reports of peculiar guidance that attended the signing of the Declaration. Certainly it is known that deep students of philosophy, astrology and the occult selected and directed the times when significant moves were made. They knew the great destiny of America and saw to it that it started when it did, that harmony with natural laws and purposes might be established and maintained.

The degree on our national ascendant, as determined by the researches of Manly P. Hall, carries this point forward:

"A student art thou, who, after working long hours daily for many years in search of a key to life's mystery, and thinking he has failed, is surprised to receive an award of merit from fellow students. Thy standards for self and race are high, perhaps higher than thou canst attain in the flesh; yet nevertheless thy work and thy forward looking produce much of benefit. Thy researches never cease . . ."

In another volume we read the testimonies of Uncle Sam's house rulerships briefly:

"1st. Ruled by Jupiter. Inclination to put best foot forward—even sometimes trying to make it seem a bit better than it is. Should strive to live ideals." "The usual attempt of the Sagittarian (is) to express these (spiritual) inner vibrations through love affairs, children, or other creative urge. It is often seen in dramatic talent, writing, composing, making things, planning, trying to make or do something new with whatever materials or opportunities may be present. This is their distinctive pull toward emulating the Creator. On the lower strata this takes on a tendency to gamble" (as seen at times, perhaps, on the stock exchange) "an attempt to get results without going through the necessary stages of true creation. Always a mistake." "You start out with a nice shiny set of ideals in most departments of life; and you will drag them back, wounded and under fire, from the battlefield of 'practical' business, politics, education and society many times. You will try again and again. But if you don't understand why you keep trying . . . (you have a tendency to) become cynical. Never let this happen to you, for it is a living death. Stay with the knowledge that the size of the problem is the size of your capacity to meet it and solve it. . . . The foregoing will explain the typically Sagittarian trait of standing a lot of punishment from friends, co-workers or other associates and then, when you have earned the reputation of being a nice flat doormat, chop off all diplomatic relations without warning. And when they stop smiling in your direction you will be just as healthy and happy if you move further away from them . . . Don't try to fool the Sagittarian. Remember those ideals. They have an uncanny way of X-raying into why you say it and why you do it—and if they find you light in the kind of weight they expected from you, you have had your last chance, even if it was your first."

That appears to be to be a rather sharp etching of the American temperament. We all partake of those ideals, the easy-going habits up to a certain point, and the willingness to lay aside everything we've been doing and get things settled when our ideals are threatened.

"2nd. Ruled by Saturn. Appreciation of the value of money. Ability to work in connection with banking and brokerage . . . Better earner than saver.

"3rd. Ruled by Uranus. Keen mind; capacity for scientific analysis. Looks forward.

UNCLE SAM'S HOROSCOPE

"4th. Ruled by Neptune. Savings and estate at disposal of inner emotions. Strong relationship with a parent, pleasant or otherwise" (England).

"5th. Ruled by Mars. Dramatic sense and private emotions sometimes very powerful chemicals that explode when they are mixed.

"6th. Ruled by Venus. Health affected by reactions to emotions. True inner harmony the surest and quickest cure if ailing . . .

"7th. Ruled by Mercury . . . necessary to work at being successfully married (relations with other nations) all the time.

"8th. Ruled by the Moon . . . avoid impulsive legal actions.

"9th. Ruled by the Sun. Love of the better things of life on all levels: physical, emotional and spiritual. Deep sense of religion (not necessarily of a definite dogma).

"10th. Ruled by Mercury. Can do many things in an occupational way. Partnerships definitely help or hinder career.

"11th. Ruled by Venus. Hospitable. . . . Extravagant with those cared for.

"12th. Ruled by Mars. Strong feelings; usually held back till the dam bursts."

The first decan of Sagittarius, which is the one that holds our national ascendant, is thus described:

"Usually high and worthy ideals are shown by this decan, but people having it as index to their character are sometimes inclined to spread their pound of butter very thin." How about our present willingness to send men, materials and munitions to every front on the globe? America is the only nation doing it, not only because we are the only nation that can do it—it is also because of our high idealism (which we would probably blush about furiously if called on to admit it). "Tendency to form alliances when under fire. . . . Executive ability is here, but also the necessity for seeing the other fellow's point of view. Occupationally connected with literary pursuits, automobiles, stocks and bonds. . . . Strong influence of a parent. . . . Better executive than servant, because unable to get along easily with vested authority." This last point is worth considerable serious thought; it explains much of our peculiar type of working man. In most other nations the laborer takes his lot in life as a matter of course, but here the laborer fully expects to be boss or dictate the conditions under which he will labor. Russia is perhaps the closest to this characteristic, and Russia's political horoscope has the same sign and decan on the ascendant.

The Moon is our national Sun dispositor, adding significance to its condition and position in our collective horoscope. In Aquarius, the Moon shows "ability in public service . . . should cultivate desire to serve the large mass of people." This nation, since its inception, led the world in improvements for the benefit of the masses—Aquarius is the sign of building toward the future; the Moon is the significator of the masses.

Concerning the decan of the Moon, the third of Aquarius, we read: "Cultivate your ability to give the public what it wants and needs, for you can achieve an enviable success through dealing with large numbers. . . . There is a powerful 9th house vibration in this area, endowing you with deep interest and appreciation of the religious, spiritual and philosophical. . . . Pay keen attention to the inspirations this area brings to you and then make them usable, objective, understandable, serviceable. . . . This is particularly valuable if you use these abilities of yours in advertising, travel, publicity, publishing, importing and exporting, for you can be better than average in these lines." The record shows that this is emphatically the case.

One of the most significant things about the U.S. horoscope is the ever-recurring testimony of the occult influences which brought this nation into being and which will ever hover over our destiny as long as we remain united. This is to be seen in our Moon degree—remember, it is our (Uncle Sam's) Sun dispositor:

"A princess art thou living amongst many comforts in a grand castle, knowing not that it is a prison from which thou may'st not leave. Thy dungeon is well furnished with thine abilities to see ahead for thy fellows and in executive power. Thy dungeon is thy responsibilities before the many, thy promises, thine endorsements, whether written or spoken, or understood only by thineself within thy nature. Sadness and grief are not unknown to thee; they are doorways leading out of thy dungeon, but into other rooms which are also enclosed—ne'ertheless increasing thy territory and influence. . . ."

As all students of astrology are aware, the 7th angle of the horoscope is the key to relations with others, whether comfortable or otherwise; with an individual it is the house of marriage, contracts, legal matters—with a nation it is the house of alliances, peace or war, diplomacy. The degree on our national 7th cusp, Gemini 7°, is interpreted:

"Thou'rt a favorite of fortune, with wealth of all kinds coming to thine hand from near and from afar; thine acorns grow into sturdy oaks that are seen from great distance. Many should be thy beneficiaries; yet perchance thou wilt be tempted to take from them to whom thou should'st give. Thy mission is to distribute the things and the thoughts of thineself and of others, for the mosaic of minds and places is in thy being. The laws of God and man are known to thee, oft presenting the need for choice; woe unto thee if thou chooseth man's defective law against the perfection of God's mandate, for thy sins are not as those of little men who cannot err far. Thou canst defeat thine adversary in the marts of trade, yet if thou dost thy knife will be found in thine own back. Thy purpose is to give, not to get."

And in our 7th house the celebrated position of our Uranus, which has been closely related to our Revolution, Civil War and the present titanic struggle for the triumph of democratic ideals, is in Gemini 9°, symbolized:

"Assets three elevate thee to high command: thy capacity for perceiving intimate detail; thy strong desire to serve thy fellow man; and thy knowledge of those laws which are both above and below. Thou may'st start in lowly hut or in jewelled palace, but ever thy stride is yet further upward. Riches are thine, for thy nature requireth them for its purposes—not that thou may'st become their slave. Thou knowest the need of the servant and the master, for thou art both; thy mission is to achieve justice and thy strength increases as thy tasks multiply. Thy youth is spent in pursuit of truth among the things thy senses know, but thy maturity shows thee they were but the symbols of thy real objectives. The world knoweth thy visage and footprint; thou knowest thineself only by looking within."

When one meditates on the full import of these degree symbols in connection with the 7th cusp and Uranus in the 7th house of a nation, the tremendous responsibility and future of America become clear. It would be a great destiny for the U.S.A. if no more were in our nativity, but those who launched this political entity evidently considered long and carefully, as well as with great wisdom, every factor of the time, of the place and of the future. Witness the position of Neptune at the midheaven—the planet of ultimate idealism at the most elevated and authoritative position a planet can hold! It is in Virgo, the sign of the dignity of labor, the sign of the harvest of mind as well as of the fields. Reading the decan of Neptune's position:

"Service means more to you than to most people, for in addition to this position in the sign of service it accents a sixth house decan, again proclaiming you as one who understands the deep necessity for connecting service and reward as cause and effect. . . . But that is not all, for there is a ninth house influence here, too, showing a powerful inner yearning for an estate of true wisdom which will be solid and substantial beyond the petty and temporary things of this Earth life."

But read the interpretation of Neptune's degree!

"Of the masses thou art the voice, often heard in high places, called upon to advise princes and potentates. Yet ever art thou simple and direct, for power turneth not thy head or heart. Thy criticism is not always kind, but it is just. Thou art considered the foe of some thou would'st help to see the right path" (Germany and Japan, please note!), "for thou see'st in the good of the many the good of the few. . . . Where the people rule thou art called as administrator, and responsibility is thy garment; thou wearest it with grace and in fair faith of those who trust thee. . . . Thy days are not free from temptation, for thou'rt oft approached by those who would have thee sell thy good name; but ever canst thou penetrate false motive. Thy fortune is the love of the weak."

The consistency and interpenetrating and mutually supporting strands of influence from all parts of the heavens at the time of Uncle Sam's birth are evidence that this horoscope was studiously sought by the

Famous MONEY Horoscopes

by Blanca Holmes

Money, Money and MONEY!! Some people are fortunate enough to inherit it, others have the ability to make it, and then there are those who make it only to lose it in the end.

Speaking of money from inheritance, consider the horoscope of Barbara Hutton, now Mrs. Cary Grant. Here is her data, given by Mrs. Grant herself to this writer personally: November 14, 1912, in New York City at 2:25 pm. When you look at the chart, you find Mercury, Venus and Jupiter in the 9th house in Sagittarius. The writer tried to convince Mrs. Grant that she was born earlier, causing these three planets to fall in the 10th house—at least Venus and Jupiter. But in Mrs. Grant's Baby Book, it is recorded as 2:25 pm.

In the 8th house (inheritance) there is the Sun in the fixed sign Scorpio, believe it or not, applying to an opposition of Saturn in the 2nd house (money). The Sun is trine Neptune in the 5th, sextile the Moon, the Moon being 28° in Capricorn, just where Mr. Grant's Sun degree is.

Mars, ruler of the 8th, is dignified, in its own sign and own house. (If you belong to the streamlined group who accept Pluto as the ruler of Scorpio, ignore this statement.) Mars is in conjunction with the Sun, trine Neptune, and unafflicted.

In the 2nd house, Saturn, in Gemini, and ruling a parent, is interesting, for Gemini having rulership over small things, sales, etc., the bulk of the Woolworth fortune was made in the five and ten cent stores. However Mrs. Grant now has no connection whatsoever with the present Woolworth concerns, she has no interest financial or otherwise.

Venus is ruler of the 2nd; and it was from her maternal grandfather that her money came to her. Saturn in the 2nd enhances the coloring of the grandfather and also has a bearing on the fact that Mrs. Grant's father increased her original inheritance tremendously by shrewd investments, Government bonds, stocks, property, railroads, anything that was sure, or took some time to turn over (Saturn).

All her money was put in sound, secure ventures and kept (most of it) in the United States. It has been an observation of this writer and, no doubt, of many others too, that people with a great deal of money are always worried about what they have, how to keep it. In this day and age they are worrying more than ever, and wealthy people invariably are interested in how to make more money, talk a great deal about money, and are never hasty in parting with it—all characteristics of Saturn.

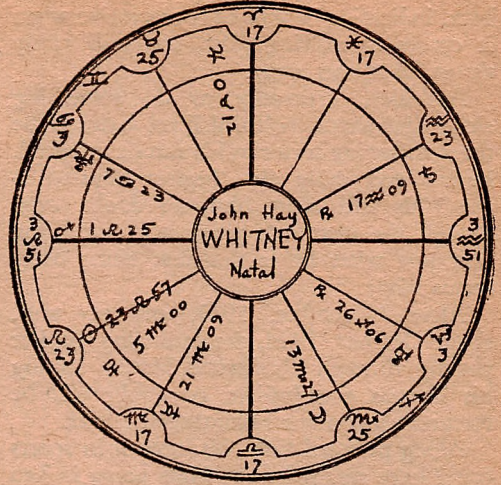

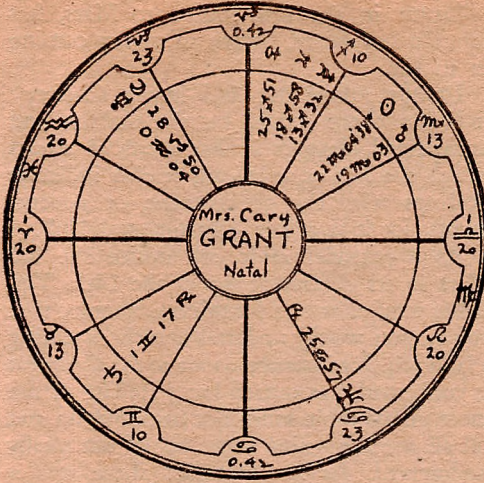

In Mrs. Grant's case, however, she does not revert to type. She is not particularly interested in money; and she certainly has no interest in making more. She has a very philosophical point of view, and a reasonable one too: that due to the changing world conditions she will lose some of her heavy holdings and experience losses, but she realizes she won't be the only one.

However, as you study her chart and notice the fixed signs on the 2nd and 8th houses, you will see she always will have money, financial security, 'way above the average. Nevertheless, that Sun opposite Saturn will take its toll.

Anyone who has had any business dealings with Mrs. Grant knows that she has her bills paid promptly. She believes in money on the line every time, for so often, people of means tell their secretaries a little late about services rendered, or bills to be paid.

As an aside to students, Mrs. Grant has been maligned a bit by the press, with the result that she has been misunderstood by the public. In point of fact, she is a very shy, retiring person, having at heart the desire to be alone—she does not seek publicity. She has exquisite manners, a respect for those older, a most generous nature, continually giving to charities and friends.

She has also been criticized for not marrying American men. Her first husband was a Russian, the second a Dane, her present, though English by birth, is an American citizen. As astrologers, we can readily see this criticism is unfair, with Venus, planet of love and attraction, ruler of her marriage 7th in Sagittarius (sign of foreign affairs) and in the 9th house as well (Sagittarius' own house) foreign people and climes will and have always attracted her. It is a perfectly natural inclination—thus astrology can be relied upon to point the way to fairness.

That was just an aside as the discussion is about her inheritance, money; but here you have a chart that is good to study: it shows inheritance, also the increase of her original fortune; and while conditions of the future may bring her financial changes, an advanced student will readily see she will always be amply supplied with this world's goods.

Another example of inherited wealth is that of Mr. John (Jock) Whitney: Born August 17, 1904, at 3 am in Ellsworth, Maine.

Here we find, as in Mrs. Grant's case, fixed signs on the cusps of the 2nd and 8th (houses of money and inheritance). The ruler of the 8th (legacies) is in the 5th (speculation, banking); and the Whitney money was made along 5th house lines.

There were also stables and horses tied up in the inheritance; ruler of the 8th in the 5th in Sagittarius (horses).

In the second house, we find the Sun, close to Regulus, in trine to the ruler of the 8th (Uranus), which is found in the 5th; in turn, Uranus is trine the planet Jupiter in the 10th; and Jupiter by wide orb is trine the Sun in the 2nd; not a bad setup, not bad indeed—would we all had it!

Jupiter in the 10th house (position, place in the world) attests to Mr. Whitney's social stratum; he belongs to one of the so-called prominent social families, identified with sports and society.

This gentleman with Leo, the sign of the drama, on his 2nd house cusp (money) has now and again invested money in theatrical enterprises. Uranus, square Mercury, in the house of theatricals (5th), has brought him some losses, but he cleaned up pretty well as co-producer and owner of "Gone With the Wind", which was produced in a typical manner, on a grand scale. So he has not only inherited but has made money himself, assisted by that grand trine from the 2nd to the 5th and the 10th.

The ruler of his 8th in the 5th house would naturally make him fond of "taking a chance," of gambling.

He has three planets in Earth signs (Mrs. Grant has only one) and Virgo has some relationship to the second, as well as Leo, Mr. Whitney would be rather money conscious, with the rest of his planetary pattern also taken into consideration. While he will always be generous to a worthy cause, his Venus in Virgo in the 2nd will hold him back, indicating he will be conservative when it comes to making gifts, and will rarely throw his money away.

Ambition, especially to do something along diplomatic, political lines, seems to be the dominating factor in his future. After all, he has everything else. Jupiter elevated in the 10th will assist him, no doubt, even though the next two years may not bring him just what he is desiring; some delay seems likely.

After November, 1943, and up until about October, 1944, the transiting Jupiter passing through his Second House, trining his Uranus and Jupiter, no doubt will be fortunate again for his financial affairs.

Along personal lines, his interest in sports could have resulted from Mars being in Leo conjunct his ascendant, enhancing his ability as a spectacular polo-player.

Mr. Whitney may have an open mind on the subject but is not terribly impressed (as yet) with the value of astrology.

Countess Dorothy Di Frasso is known internationally in cosmopolitan society, a charming and gifted hostess. However, society, as the term is generally accepted today, has more or less lost interest for her.

She inherited large sums of money at an early age. Here is her birth data; she looks fully fifteen years younger. Born February 13, 1888, at 3:30 am in Watertown, New York.

Here we have an example of wealth through birth, inheritance; but it also indicates the heavy losses the lady has had.

Sun rules the house of inheritance (27° of Cancer on the 8th cusp, but Leo has stronger rulership) and is in the 2nd in a fixed sign, trine to Mars in the 10th—square Neptune in the 5th; the latter aspect has caused losses in speculation.

The Countess' recent loss was due to general world conditions. She owns valuable property in Italy, a villa which cost a fortune, with her famous collection of china and silver. Mussolini had been negotiating (mostly stalling) with her and had agreed to pay her in the neighborhood of a million dollars for her holdings. Along came our entry into the war and Countess Dorothy was left up in the air. Mussolini, as you recall, has the Sun in the early degrees of Leo, the Countess has Saturn one degree in Leo. Perhaps she may win out in the end.

Saturn in the 8th, square to Mars, has brought her delays, before, in money coming in to her.

Uranus ruling her 2nd house (money) indicates there would be the sudden and unexpected changes in her financial affairs which she has experienced; it also indicates dealings with the government, or governments, for it is at her governmental 10th.

As a personal aside, we notice she has Mars in its detriment up in the 10th. Yes, it has worked out: a harmless adventure that any person would undertake, such as taking a boat trip for instance, as far as the Countess is concerned, has caused her publicity of the most unfavorable kind; not once but on and off all her life—nine times out of ten totally undeserved. As an example: there was a woman in Hollywood who had proved most successful in helping those who found their eyesight failing, through exercises mostly. Someone who was jealous of this woman's success had her arrested. The day she was taken into custody her books showed she had treated that very date many well known personages, Mary Pickford, Irene Rich and others. But who was in the office when the police arrived? Dorothy Di Frasso with her Mars in the 10th, contacted that.

The Countess is another person of means who is very generous, often trying to pay double; she also pays right on the line promptly.

She belongs to the group interested in money and in making more of it, and she probably will do so.

Advanced students can see at a glance that she is a very erudite person and frank if she doesn't like you, you won't be long in finding it out: a positive and vital personality.

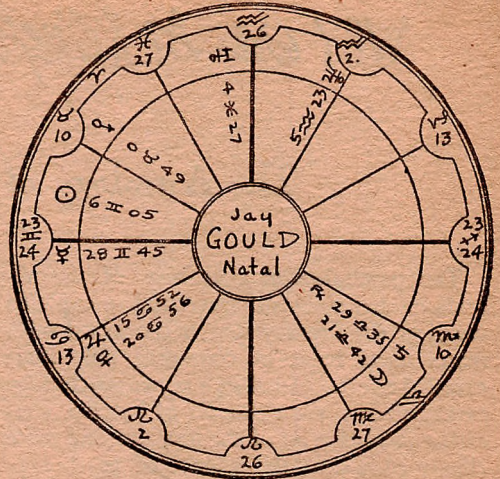

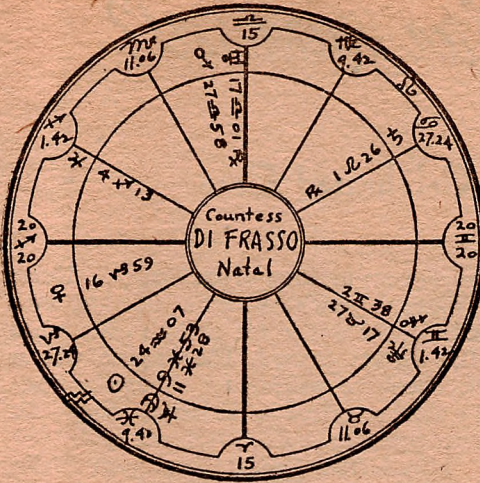

She is a very good friend of Mrs. Cary Grant's, so compare their charts and see how they understand one another.

Notice the malefics in the 5th in all three charts: Mrs. Grant's, Mr. Whitney's and that of the Countess.

Now here is the birth data of Jay Gould, a man who made every penny himself, all on his own, inheriting—nothing.

He was born May 27, 1836, at 5:35 am in Roxbury, New York.

Take a look at the 5th house (speculation). Railroads and speculation were his main interests at all times.

Uranus (railroads) is up in the 10th (occupation); and the sign ruling transportation (Gemini) is rising with its own ruler, Mercury, in the ascendant in Gemini. What a convincing talker and salesman Mr. Gould must have been! He evidently had quite a line.

Saturn, ruler of his 8th, other people's money, is in the 5th opposing Mars in the 11th (friends), so evidently some of his friends did not fare so well in a few deals with him.

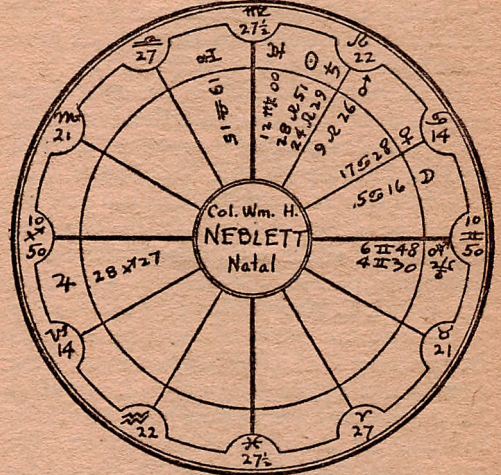

His chart indicates that the methods Mr. Gould employed in making his money would not be quite acceptable in the world we live in today, this remark being a masterly understatement.

Gould's Mars was somewhat like Hitler's Sun and has strong rulership over the 11th (friends) and 6th (work, workers): there was some ruthlessness in Mr. Gould's pursuit for what he set out to attain.

Jupiter and Venus, both in the 2nd, guaranteed his capacity for making money in large sums. Jupiter is exalted.

The Moon, ruler of the 2nd, brought him money from the masses, the public, women. His Moon is conjunct Saturn (applying not separating), so some large concerns must have failed, and in so doing benefited Mr. Gould.

Neptune in the 9th, square to Mars and Saturn: there must have been some confidential affairs concerning railroads, foreign matters, etc. Also there were always two reasons why Mr. Gould took journeys: the one given out and the real one.

He was a man who saw the opportunities of his time and took advantage of them; he set out to get money and he got it; he allowed very little to stand in the way of his climb to success.

The next chart, August 21, 1889, 2 pm is Colonel William H. Neblett's (former law partner of Wm. Gibbs McAdoo). The Colonel is well known in political circles and is one of the leading lawyers of the country or was, as he now is in the army, and has just returned from Australia where he had a commission in the Air Corps.

WHY was Dr. Klinefelter Murdered?

The Astrology of a Celebrated Case

The psychological chemistry of the vibrations that constantly surround us explains much of the mystery that is connected with man's usual habit of observing only their external effects. Astrology's key to psychology makes visible the channels of motive, condition and behavior of the human mind more clearly than does the science of psychology in its present state, for much of modern psychology is little more than a set of labels for bottles whose contents have not yet been thoroughly examined or analyzed.

Dr. Marion L. Klinefelter, the noted bone surgeon of St. Louis, was murdered at 11:02 CWT in the morning of November 28, 1942, by Miss Florence Ferrara. The inquest jury described her as mentally deranged and returned the verdict of homicide; she was held without bail under a temporary warrant of first-degree murder, according to a clipping sent in by I. C. Mace of that city, who writes:

"An amateur group of astrology students set up charts for Dr. Klinefelter, noted bone surgeon and a great humanitarian, as well as for the unfortunate woman who shot him, and also for the time of the murder. We came to no conclusion as to the reason for her mental condition and decided to ask for your comment on the case in the magazine.

"The doctor was born February 15, 1873, at Taylorville, Ill. Miss Ferrara was born November 12, 1913, at St. Louis. The bullet entered the left ear. There was no evidence of friendship between the parties involved."

Before going into the astrology of this case, it is well to hear some of the testimony reported by the newspaper.

"The 29-year-old slayer, who is mentally deranged, and who had told police that the man she killed was not Dr. Klinefelter, but an impostor posing as a surgeon in order to cripple people, did not testify at the inquest. She sat tense and sullen in her chair, occasionally biting her lip and frowning . . . The woman took the jury's verdict calmly and without any show of emotion . . . Nurse Wright, an eyewitness of the shooting, testified that she was in the doctor's office when Miss Ferrara entered. The surgeon was at the telephone waiting for a number when the woman walked up to him as though she were going to shake hands, she said.

"Miss Ferrara greeted the surgeon, 'Hello, Mr. Wilder,' and fired three shots from a pistol she pulled from under her coat, it was brought out. Two of the shots missed, but one struck Dr. Klinefelter in the left ear, causing death some 30 minutes later.

"Officer Clark testified that Miss Ferrara had told police her brother had taken her to Dr. Klinefelter's office six years ago for treatment of an infected thumb. She said she had not liked the surgeon, and became convinced several days after the treatment that men were following her in an automobile, not to pick her up, but to do her bodily harm.

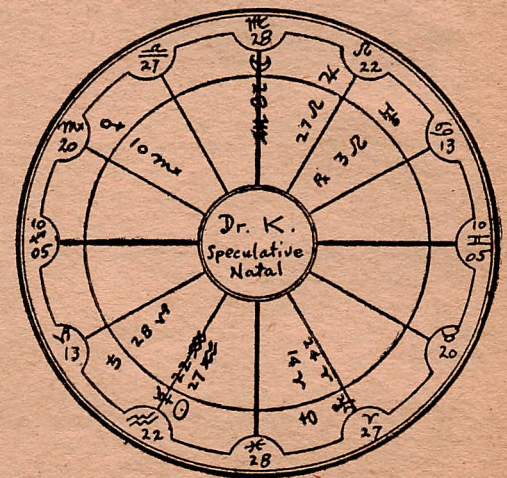

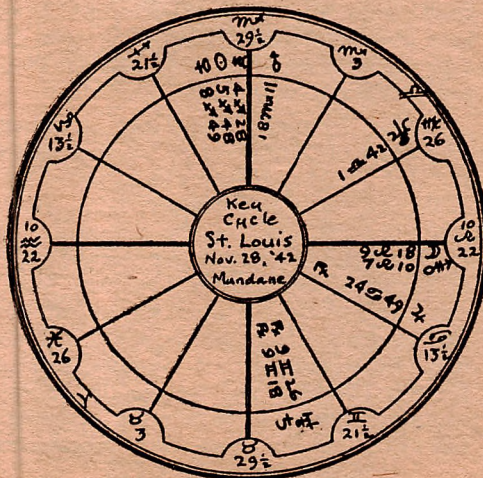

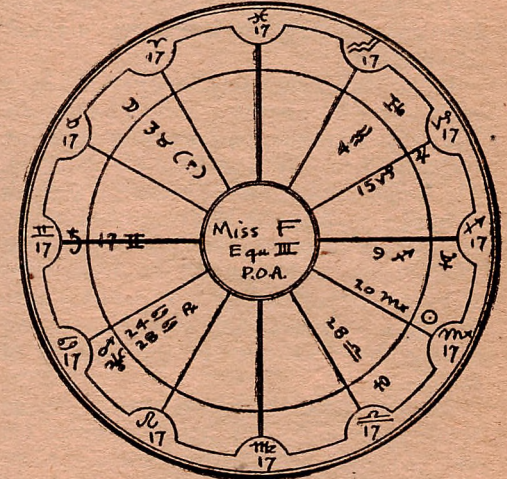

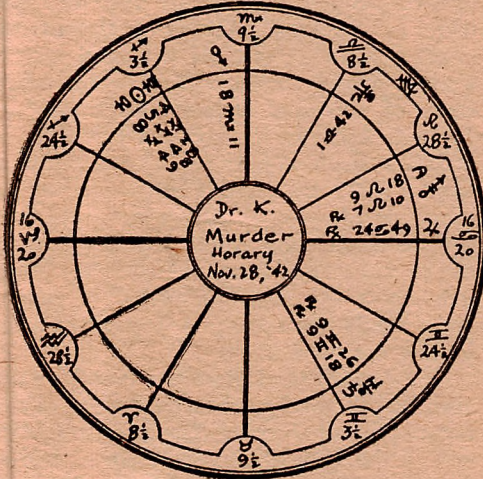

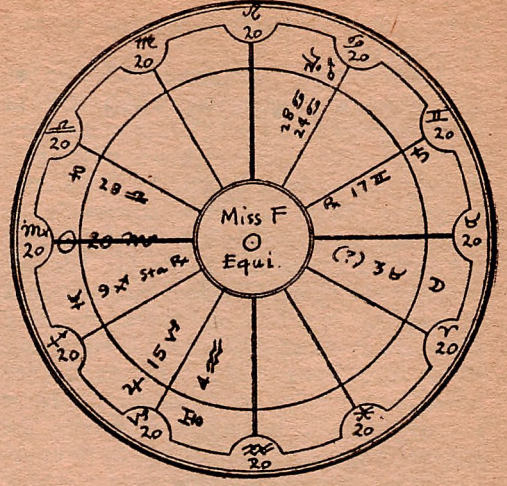

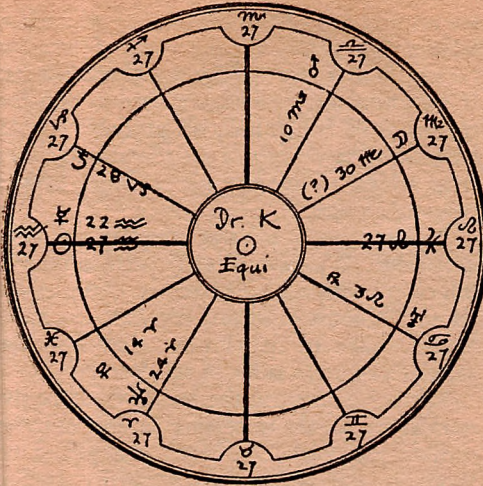

"Wanting to find out what kind of man the surgeon was, she told police, she went to the Public Library and, from a perusal of newspapers and medical records, found out that a Dr. Wilder had been associated with a Dr. Brokaw, but the latter had severed the association after a few years. In 1903, a Dr. Klinefelter died, she continued, and 'this Wilder assumed Klinefelter's identity'.

"The slayer had told a Post-Dispatch reporter that Meldrum Wilder, the man she shot, was the man who had killed Dr. Klinefelter in 1904" (1903?).

There are several astrological factors missing, but we can do fairly well with this case by using what we have.

In the first place, Miss Ferrara has the Sun in Scorpio, a sign that is famous for its strong likes and dislikes and its willingness (when expressed in its lower vibrations) to go to great lengths to get even with those who have fallen into their disfavor, with or without cause. Dr. K., according to the paper, was not liked by Miss F. when she had her infected thumb (Saturn in Gemini) treated six years ago.

This is astrologically accounted for by her Mars-Neptune conjunction, which falls in exact opposition to Dr. K.'s Saturn in Capricorn (obviously a quite important position in making him a bone specialist). This configuration comes up very powerfully in Miss F.'s mental equilibrium (POA III), for the doctor's Saturn falls in the 8th (death) house of the figure. Of added significance is the fact that it is her natal Saturn, the same planet she evidently disliked in his vibrations, which is the ruler of her lower mind (3rd house in her solar equilibrium). In order to carry through her intent to destroy the surgeon, a powerful fixation had to be established, whether she was sane or not; and it is just such a uniting of similar vibrations from chart to chart that overthrows a vacillating mind.

In her Equilibrium III (lower mind) Mars rules her 6th (health) and disposes the Sun in the 6th—the Sun rules the mental 3rd. Neptune here rules the 10th (reputation). The conjunction of Mars-Neptune is difficult to handle, even by the best controlled minds, for it is the union of action (Mars) and the subtler emotions (Neptune). With the rulerships and dispositorship, in connection with her objective mind, there was much of fear of possible peculiarity or misdirection of feelings.

But this same chart reveals more. Saturn is the ruler of the 8th (death, whether her own or her contact with the death of another, or both), and the dispositor of her natal Jupiter, traditionally the patron of physicians (and quite probably the ruling planet of Dr. Klinefelter himself).

Her Venus is square her Neptune—in this figure Venus rules the secretive 12th and self-undoing and places of confinement, such as hospitals and jails. Her Venus is also in exact square to Dr. K.'s Saturn, the planetary position around which focuses much of the astrological testimony of this case. In her solar Equilibrium, Venus is the ruler of her secretive 12th and is located in it! The doctor's Saturn falls in her solar 3rd, the house of the lower mind.

It has long been known by astrologers who have worked on mental ailment cases that the 12th and 3rd are usually related in the horoscope of those who are unbalanced. Here we see an instance of the completion of such a relationship through the Saturn of another person, in her case the Saturn of the doctor. If we knew the time of her visit to him for treatment of her thumb, we probably would have added testimony of the vibration at that time which so excited her unusual beliefs concerning him.

Jupiter's part in this tragedy is very noticeable. We have already seen it on the 8th cusp (within 2° orb) of her Equilibrium III, in 8th house quincunx aspect to her natal Saturn, ruler of her lower mind and the general planetary ruler of all doctors.

When we examine the horary chart of the murder we see the transiting Jupiter in exact conjunction with her Mars, the planet of shooting, and the violent influence in her upsetting conjunction already discussed. But there is additional Jupiter testimony of startling nature. Her natal Jupiter is within a single degree of the ascendant of the horary chart of shooting, opposed by transiting Jupiter! And her victim's natal Jupiter is within a single degree of the 8th (death) cusp of this same chart! This places them in mundane 8th house quincunx, in perfect agreement with the event. At no other time of the day at that location could they be in this aspect. At no other period in twelve years would the transiting Jupiter be conjoining her natal Mars.

The doctor's natal Mars was exactly at the 10th (public notice, effect on career) of the horary chart of shooting. The transiting Mars was in the 10th of this same chart. And—transiting Mars, planet of violent action, was conjunction Miss F.'s natal Sun, which we have already noted as being in Scorpio, the sign which in its lower manifestations often produces the revenge motive.

Further warning concerning the mental tendencies of Miss F. is to be seen in the fact that her Mars-Neptune conjunction falls in the 9th, house of the higher mind. When this was disturbed by the opposition of Dr. K.'s Saturn, the already precarious balance of her emotional attitude (Neptune-Mars) was in all probability upset quite definitely. Add to this the fact that her Moon is in the other house related to nerve-mind control, the 6th (health), and we see the delicate adjustments necessary to keep her on the sane side of the line. We do not know her moment

"What do I DO with It?"

by Astra

Astrological sanctums are as varied as the circumstances of astrologers. The dining room table cleared for the evening; a fitted-up nook in the attic; a few books and papers on the shelf above the kitchen stove; a private drawer in an office desk; or, a suite of offices at a yearly lease of some substantial four figures—anything can be, and is, a sanctum. But no matter what its nature, in every astrological sanctum in the land should be hung these words, in such a position that the astrologer, raising his eyes, cannot fail to dwell upon them:

As veil upon veil we lift, we find Veil upon veil behind.

Those are the words of Edwin Arnold. And those words, if dwelt upon by every astrologer in America or elsewhere, would help to eliminate many of the problems undeniably arising from the many and varied uses to which astrology is being put—uses as varied as the natures choosing them.

It is inevitable that lesser development should misuse such principles of nature as they have access to. Look at the destructive uses to which the mass of humankind repeatedly puts its inventions—in war.

As astrologers, we know that some of us are creating trouble for ourselves, and even trouble for others, by failing to achieve astrological perspective.

It is only by realizing that there is something greater than astrology that we come to understand its right uses.

Astrology is one veil before the face of something greater.

When we say, Astrology is a plan for the living of life, or, Astrology guides us through life, what are we implying? We are implying that astrology is a guide or a plan and not an end in itself.

There is something greater than astrology. And it is by more and more study of astrology that we inevitably find this greater thing, this principle from which astrology depends.

Keeping this in mind, how should we use astrology in our daily lives?

Not as an idol before which we bow, but as the working partner of our free will.

When we hear about, or see, an astrologer who bows before a temporary square or opposition of Saturn by ceasing his free will efforts to do, learn, grow, accomplish, and who practically goes into hiding until the aspect has passed, we see one who is worshipping a false idol of his own making, which he has made in his own image and set up to terrify himself. When we see an astrologer who uses this square or opposition to help him learn how to make the best use of his free will, we see one who has lifted his eyes and realized the lifting of one veil.

Most laymen come to their study of the subject with an erroneous sense of awe, mystery, even fear; and if their teachers allow this to grow the student becomes an astrological idol worshipper. The teacher may have had no perspective to communicate, but even so the student can develop his own as soon as he begins to realize that he is in the presence of an aid and not a false god.

There is a middle ground between ignorant awe and contemptuous familiarity. The middle ground is wise perspective.

Each day the astrologer or student should use the understanding of himself, of life, and of others gained through his understanding of astrology to help him make decisions he otherwise could not arrive at. But never should he face a day with a feeling that his free will is being frustrated today, that he must wait, or else try to outwit this enemy obstructing him.

There are two ways of using astrology rightly, once perspective has been established. One is full knowledge of current stimulation well in advance of its timing. The other is post knowledge. With his eyes lifted to those words hanging in his sanctum, the astrologer should use both alternately.

One day, or one week, he should be fully informed of every astrological influence he will be experiencing, and the exact times at which he will feel each. He should think through what it will be necessary to regulate in himself, and by accurately recalling his past realize what he is still apt to feel or do under this or that stimulation. He might then keep a record of what he does subsequently feel, or do, which will be of value to him in planning the next day, or week, when he looks ahead astrologically.

Another day, or week, alternating with this process, the astrologer should not look at the coming influences. (In a general sense, of course, he always knows the larger, longer lasting, influences acting as background for the smaller and more temporary ones.) He should call upon his growing self understanding, and self mastery, to meet each stimulation as it arises. He should do his best with his utmost integrity and free will. And only after this day or week is over should he look up the exact nature of what he has felt, and by relating it to his reactions learn in what he is still weak or lacking.

This alternating process is invaluable to him in achieving perspective, in understanding more of astrology, and in becoming a bigger person.

Similarly, he should thoroughly study the horoscopes of some persons he is about to meet for the first time; and he should alternate this with deliberate ignorance of their horoscopes so that he can develop his knowledge of astrology by watching it work through the eyes of intuition, later verifying to see in which directions his knowledge or understanding is still weak or lacking. This latter process is indispensable to elimination of astrological short sightedness arising from egotism, and invaluable in rounding astrological understanding.

For every hour that he gives to applying astrology personally to himself or others, he should give a time equivalent to concentration upon the symbolism of astrology in a universal sense, thus striking a balance which adds to his inner growth and prevents him from falling into narrowness of outlook. He will never come to the end of what he has to learn through this symbolism; he will merely lift one veil with a cry of delight, and find himself confronting the next. As he gets these moments of inner light, he becomes more and more respectful of his subject; one day he becomes reverent. But never does he worship the veils he is lifting; his reverence goes beyond, to the greater thing he begins to glimpse as his astrology leads him forward.

With such an attitude no astrologer could bring about problems in his own life or in those of others through misunderstanding the nature and purpose of astrology. Misconception is based upon narrowness, upon insufficient knowledge.

Among astrologers who worship astrological idols, how many realize that they are going back in their attitudes to a prehistoric time when in religion they did the same thing? First, realization of something superior to themselves. Second, awe or fear. Third, the instinct to palliate what they could not equal or best. Fourth, endowing this superior thing with their own attributes—ruthlessness, retaliation, vindictiveness, malignancy, etc.—and last, the creation of a self made idol, created in their own image.

The astrologer who fears a square or opposing Mercury to the extent that he stops trying to study, read, do research, sell, or anything else ruled by Mercury while that planet is in such aspect, has endowed Mercury with his own attributes and created his own menace.

An astrologer who dreads Uranus in square or opposition to the point where he will not make a new move of any kind even when common sense or survival demands it, is bowing down to an idol.

But worse, these astrologers pass on their mistakes to others who are drawn to them as laymen or clients. And the result is always trouble; either that created for the client, or that created for the astrologer through the client. And that which accrues to the subject of astrology in the eyes of the world at large.

We should know our influences. We should know our charts. We should know as many other persons' charts as possible. We should study constantly, every day, to understand more of the working out of planetary influence on this our life. Every now and then we should raise our eyes to the level

Chile Breaks with Axis

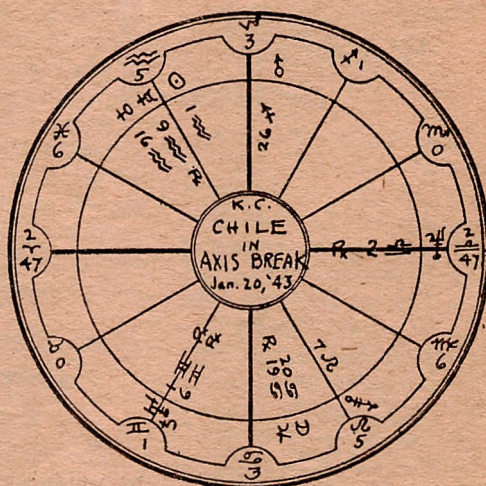

On January 20, 1943, Chile's government officially broke diplomatic relations with Germany, Italy and Japan. (The inevitability of this move was pointed out in these pages in Wynn's World Prediction for 1943, and also as far back as last September.) In previous articles we have stressed the fact that Key Cycles for Chile have shown the people as strongly anti-Axis and that they would eventually be heard in the high places of that nation.

The people are shown by the ascendant of a national chart, as well as by the Moon, both of which are extremely significant in the Key Cycle of this event. Note that the ascendant had been Pisces for about four months, indicating the conflict behind the scenes which was going on there during the last quarter of 1942. Within one week of the change of the KC ascendant to the militant Aries, and with the ruler of the ascendant, Mars, at the governmental midheaven, Chile took this action!

Neptune, the planetary ruler of ideals (when positive), was exactly on the 7th cusp, the location of international actions, relationships and war. It ruled the secretive and confidential 12th, indicating that there was more to this move than met the eye of the average newspaper reader. But it is nothing about which to be concerned, for Neptune was in the grand trine with Sun and Uranus, involving the cusps of the 11th and 3rd house (friends, relatives, neighbors)—a typical good neighbor act.

That the influence of Uncle Sam was being felt, as well as that of the common man, is shown by the conjunction of Moon with Jupiter, the ruling planet of the U. S. A. And Mars, at the governmental midheaven, is in the sign of Jupiter, Sagittarius. Sagittarius is the sign on the 9th, which house is ruled by Jupiter, again pointing to the nation which is most influential down there.

While this is not a declaration of war—yet—it is the means by which German and Japanese aliens can be controlled in their nearest former approach to the most necessary Panama Canal, a very good thing for all concerned. The move was made at a very good horary time, for the Moon was increasing in light, index of successful achievement of the purposes involved.

This will prove to be equivalent to a military blow by the United Nations against Japan, for it gives the Allies complete control of the entire western coast of both North and South America, and the islands under Chile's dominion which all reports say were hungrily eyed by Nippon as approaches to the canal. The break occurred with the Sun (ruling the government of the Land of the Rising Sun in the Pyramid Locality System) opposed to Pluto, which is now transiting Tokyo's governmental midheaven cusp. The trine of Neptune to the Sun is also indication of Chile's leaning toward the U. S., for Neptune is at the midheaven of our national horoscope radically and is now there by transit, and the trine is distinctly a friendly aspect.

The only South American nation out of the U. N. fold at time of writing is Argentina, which now ought to come in on our side within two months.

MARCH, 1943

AXIS FAILS IN PEACE MOVE

Merchant Marine Will Deliver the Goods

The Atlantic Ocean continues definitely to be one of the main battle-grounds of the war, especially during the months of March and April. The danger zone moves slowly from our side toward Europe during this period. But the menace of undersea opposition is no longer able to take the upper hand — men, munitions and materials will go through in increasingly large quantities until this struggle is settled, if we live up to the possibilities shown by our horoscope.

F.D.R. Has Last Tough Month for Awhile

It has been said that the most thankless job in the world is that of leading a democracy; and if President Roosevelt has time this month to think of himself he will probably recall that remark. Pressures are applied to him and his office from every conceivable angle, with Saturn going over his natal midheaven again in March, with Mars conjunction his natal Sun and Venus in his KC war 7th. But he will manage an important speech or announcement and other valuable contributions.

Venus will be in Aries during most of March this year, significant of peace moves because Aries is the 7th (war) house-sign of Venus. April, 1941, and May, 1942, saw Venus in this same sign, and peace feelers were sent out by the Axis—promptly to be refused. This time there is added impulse to such offerings, because of different Key Cycle and other planetary positions, but the offers will be no more sincere than before, although toned down because of the known improved psychology of the United Nations. The purpose of them will be to confuse certain susceptible elements among the Allies, to impress the few remaining neutral nations and the suffering people under Axis domination.

Propaganda in Central States Erupts Again

The misguided, weak, wavering and anti-American minority (a very small one) has been quiescent for some time. Not dead, not sleeping—but lying low and lying behind real Americans' backs. They may have been organizing some kind of dirty work; if so, it is bound to break out in March or April—and the general location where it will be most virulent will be from the Mississippi to about the meridian of Pittsburgh, particularly where there is congested industrial activity or settlements of first generation and foreign born citizens. There is also indication that it will not be effective, for governmental agencies will be on the job to nip it almost before it buds. A number of surprising names will be publicized in connection with this exposure of un-American propaganda. This may be linked with concurrent phony peace talk.

There is possibility of counter proposals from the United Nations which will reveal the phony nature of the Axis' professed motives. All this, quite naturally, will be done behind the scenes. There is nothing to fear. Our leaders understand.

England in No Mood to Worry About Raids

The people of England probably will have a bit of wreckage to clean up, but they will take it in stride this month, for the temper of the people and their officials is emphatically on the offensive all through March. They will be calling loudly for more action, despite the retaliatory raids that will without doubt be heavier than usual. There will be increased criticism of the government, but only because the critics think all possible is not being done to carry the attack into the heart of enemy territory—in this they will probably be wrong, for it looks as though England will do a grand job.

ALLIES PUT ON GREAT OFFENSE

Hitler Has Own Private War in Inner Nature

The various inner parts of Hitler's character chemistry have now come to a boil. His natal ruler, conjunction Mars in his war 7th, now occupies his KC 7th—a configuration that has not previously occurred since early in 1939 (the year he precipitated this present world war). This is related to the Axis peace feeler and is one of the reasons why it will be phony: Hitler can never have peace within himself, or be the one to start true peace moves; and it is when these two planets of his are angular in his Key Cycle that he has his most painful inner strains. These two planets rule his natal 1st, 6th, 7th and 12th and explain his dark secrecy, his intrigues, his duplicity, and his dragging of Germany into a great war. He will become even more ruthless.

Japan becoming very weary; but War Lords aren't annoyed

The Japanese people are existing — not living. The deprivations to which they have been put by their war-mad overlords is testimony to their endurance and fortitude, both of which qualities should have been put to better use than the recent opportunism of territory grabbing. In each Nipponese breast is a yearning for the Study of the March charts around the world shows distinctly more offensive spirit in the capitals and on the battle-fronts of the Allied side than on that of the Axis. Almost everywhere the Axis is indicated as being on the defensive. A great surge of United Nations' attacking power is to be expected on many fronts almost immediately. Germany and

Argentina Soon Forced to Take Sides

Pressures now being put on Argentina, both from within and without, are so powerful, according to astrological testimonies for that nation, that it seems impossible for our last remaining neutral neighbor on the southern continent to avoid a declaration of some sort. That this could be other than in favor of the Allies is remote, for a declaration in favor of the Axis would threaten a revolution of the people of Argentina, whose sympathies are highly with the United Nations. The first half of March is particularly significant, although the influence urging action remains longer.

Japan are both in defensive mood and under necessity, according to their vibrations for March, to handle increased violence in their most vital spots. That a new and important front is to be opened at the will of the Allies is almost a certainty—the opportunity is apparent to all students of astrology and to our military leaders. China is seen as faring better than of recent months. Locations cannot be mentioned, lest aid or comfort be given the enemy; but we shall see much action soon.

South America Must Share in Feeding World

The world food situation, while not desperate in all places, is desperate in some places and very bad in most—if we look ahead a year astrologically. The problem is one of manpower, machinery and transportation to a large extent; but that is not all, for it is also a problem of getting crops to grow in what would normally have been a year (1943) on the lean side. Surpluses of South America will probably be called for by next autumn, and a program of added planting and fertilization in the southern continent, as well as in North America, will be required to avoid very serious complications.

It's an Astrologer's Life!

Pages from a Diary

1st: As to why Mercury rules both Gemini and Virgo, which is a question I am sure every other astrologer besides myself has to answer frequently, there is an answer that is quite easily understood by the layman, who sometimes doesn't catch as quickly the Ptolemaic explanation—in order to catch the latter the layman must first be told the various distances from the Sun of the planets, and so on, which takes time. But this is simple: he (the layman) realizes that in order to express, on the physical plane, the mind must have the mediums of both physical types of nerves, afferent and efferent. As these nerves are under Gemini and Virgo, it follows that Mercury, ruling the mind, rules these signs.

4th: And by the way, reading over the entry on the 1st reminds me of another point on Virgo. Why is it that the harvest, in the Virgo symbol, is pictured as the offering or possession of a virgin? Instinctively we think of harvest in terms of the physically capable harvester, don't we? The answer comes back to Mercury again. It is that the harvest of Virgo is a mental (Mercury) harvest. It is that the harvest of the mind is its purity, which is the virgin symbol. When we have mastered the lesson Virgo has to teach, we will have purified our minds and reaped a divine harvest. (This of course is also the symbology of the Virgin Mary and the harvest of divinity—Christ—in her arms.)

5th: We astrologers sometimes make an error in thinking of Mercury as entirely plastic, impressionable, receptive. Some of us have been heard to go to the extent of saying that Mercury as itself is nothing, that we can only interpret it when it is in a sign—in other words, implying that we can only interpret the sign, not the planet. It is quite true that Mercury is quickly receptive, reacts quickly, and so on. But the distinction is very clearly given by Isabelle Pagan in her book, From Pioneer to Poet: Mercury's plasticity is not like sealing wax, molded into any form by external influences, but is rather like the mercury in our thermometers, which it rules—it is moved by every slightest change of temperature, rises up and goes down with sensitive rapidity, but remains always itself. Every school child has tested this by squeezing mercury in the hand; all that happens is that the mercury runs out between the fingers and remains—itself. Squeeze sealing wax in the same way and it will passively assume the shape of your closed hand; this is more typical of Venus or the Moon.

Speaking of the Moon, in mythology the Moon is Diana, the chaste. When we try to reconcile this fact with the Moon's rulership of the sign of motherhood, Cancer, we are up against chastity vs. motherhood, apparently irreconcilable. But only apparently. For it is motherhood that is the truest chastity. The real unchastity does not express in terms of motherhood.

8th: All astrologers know that it is impossible (as yet, in our stage of evolution) to know from the chart alone whether the owner is primitive or well advanced, or in between. There is an astrological point related to this in an external way which sometimes helps. It is to notice the Moon in terms of heredity. The rules are that the Moon in Saturn's house or in good aspect to Saturn denotes length of ancestry. Moon in house of Mars or in aspect to that planet, short ancestry, uncertain, and few lasting family ties. Moon with Jupiter, honorable or aristocratic family; or religious, rich, etc., family. Moon-Venus, pleasant family ties but not necessarily long ancestry. And so on. I cannot say that I have a volume of proof sufficient to be clinching on the Saturn point. But I can say that to date I have found no exceptions to it. My friends, my family, and my clients who have Moon at the midheaven (Saturn's house) or Moon in trine or con-conjunct with Saturn have quite long and known heredity, without exception. Now the question that arises in my mind is this: if I had access to the charts of a number of aboriginal bushmen, would I find that the owners of such Moon-Saturn charts stood out among their fellows as being the descendants of remembered tribesmen? One or two remembered generations under such circumstances would be comparable to a civilized family tree of forty known generations, since primitive recording is just that.

One of the cases I have is interesting. This native has Moon in Saturn's house conjunct Saturn, but on the other side also conjunct Neptune. His heredity on his father's side is known and recorded for fifteen generations back; but nothing is known of his mother's family whatever (Neptune). Other cases are as interesting. I have cases of illegitimate birth with Moon in house of Mars.

11th: Walking along the streets these days, or eating in restaurants, makes one conscious of the fact that the tendency of men in uniform is to stick with a buddy, or more than one. Seldom is one lone service man glimpsed. I watched two soldiers standing talking to two cops parked at the curb today; and the astrological correspondence percolated into my brain. In the mundane horoscope the 6th house, or Virgo, rules the nation's services—both the soldiers and the cops come under it. And Virgo is a double sign. The cops on patrol duty are under a rule which enforces duty in pairs, but the soldiers on leave are not—they just do it voluntarily, and it looks as though that came from the influence of Virgo's double nature.

I might add that across the zodiac, in the 12th house or Pisces, we notice the same thing. Nuns walking the street or riding in public conveyances are seen always in pairs, to the best of my knowledge (nuns coming under the influence of the 12th house, of course). And other forms of the 12th house retirement (voluntary or otherwise) conform. Notice the long lines of young girls from boarding schools taking their walk—in double lines. And so on.

14th: The more philosophically minded of my clients—and acquaintances—are always interested in the reason why the first house, or house of Mars, rules the body. That it does is not enough for this type of mind; it questions and wants the fact to fan out. I remember how satisfied I felt myself when I first understood why. Mars, of course, rules the will. What is the body? It is a collection of independent atoms or units—how independent is shown in many ways, one of which is to think what happens when the body dies, or is hurt. When it dies, within a short time what was the body moves off in various directions, each moving particle independent. When it is hurt, the independence of the physical matter shows in ability to heal the hurt—a thing we ourselves could not do. (Who by thought or will could go about the process of healing up his own cut? No one. All we can do is assist the process by washing, binding, etc.) So the reason Mars and its house rule the physical body is because the human will is under Mars. The human will (or freedom of choice, free will, etc.) is the reason for our continuing experience in matter—physical bodies. By exercise of it we incur karma. By karma we incur the necessity for another body. This body comes about by process of will. And it holds together as a body only so long as the will power is functioning—the moment this "dies", the body is no longer that.

16th: Empirical astrological observation ages ago established the fact that Venus under influence of Uranus produces a nature that tends to be elusive in love or affection. Venus in Aquarius, Venus in aspect to Uranus, both do so. (Evangeline Adams once compared the love nature of such natives to shooting stars: brilliant and sudden, and once done not rekindled. A corollary point only). Possessivism is foreign to them, and so is the desire to be possessed. I think this is related to the fact that Uranus rules symbols. It is the first of the planets that rule super-physical things. (Neptune is the next, and the planet to be discovered following Neptune will come after, and so on.) Venus, under the Uranian influence, takes the symbol for the thing and discards the thing. Thus often these natives are accused of "not wanting what they want when they get it." But in their own concept they have got it!

20th: I am told, perhaps facetiously (?), that "the biggest industry of southern California is undertaking." This led my astrology-seeped mind to wondering why it is that in most warm—southern—climates there should be such a preponderance of old or elderly people. It is not just that at the age of retirement people growing old appreciate warmth; for it is also demonstrably true that a preponderance of young people who have perforce spent their youth in such locations because of having been born there will seek the north as soon as they are full grown. I have come tentatively to the conclusion that the answer to the riddle can be found in the planet ruling old age, Saturn. Saturn's sign, Capricorn, is the southernmost sign of the zodiac—attraction of old age (Saturn) to the south (Capricorn.)

21st: Re Saturn again: when Saturn aspects or influences the midheaven by transit (or progression) your reputation catches up with you. Why? Because reputation is dependent upon time, from which it is manufactured. And Saturn rules time. It rules reputation too of course: reputation is a matter of Saturn's house, the 10th. But it is only when this planet brings 10th house matters to crystallization that you feel such matters acutely—like the experience of having to confront your reputation.

23rd: Astrologers have their amusing side. As what profession hasn't? A group of them reminds me of the ancient Hindu story of the councillors and the elephant: the councillors who were all blind, as was their monarch, and who were ordered by him to ascertain the nature of an elephant and report back to him. Having only touch with which to carry out their orders, each councillor approached the elephant and felt as much of his body as was within reach. One thus described an elephant as a "tall upright bone heavily covered with flesh", another as a "thing that continued to wave around", another as a "broad, flat surface", and so on: one having felt only a leg, another only a trunk, another only a side, etc. When you sit back in your corner and listen to the sometimes hot discussions of a group of astrologers gathered together, the poignancy of the parallel strikes home to you. For each astrologer is so hotly and sincerely convinced that he or she has found the interpretation of a transit, a progression, an aspect, a house, or what have they. The cherished interpretation is almost always true. But so is the other fellow's! If you are feeling mellow, the poignancy rests in your mind as pity that all of us can't see all of the truth; that each of us seems to have to get hold of one part of the astrological elephant and called it the whole. We who are blind too?

I used to feel some of the Mars emotions—yes, anger, resentment, even condemnation,—when I came across astrologers who took this divine science and made use of it to tell others they would get their wish! Or, that this night would bring them luck! Ad nauseum. Somehow I am growing out of this attitude. I hope. There is poignancy here too, and pity. Perhaps such immature souls are better off with even an infinitesimal contact with the divine science than with none at all; perhaps their unconscious misuse of it is their initial step to conscious right use. Who am I to judge? The Hindus knew why they symbolized the human race as blind.

27th: Reading some of the stories to come out of this war via the newspapers teaches the astrologer more of the nature of the planet Mars. Maybe we had not consciously noticed until now that the "courage which faces death" (a phrase long familiar) contains two keywords pertaining to Mars. Courage being an attribute of the Aries Mars, and death being under the Scorpio Mars: Mars ruling both the house of Life (1st) and the house of Death (8th). Those born strongly under the influence of this planet, and those under its vibrations through participation in a Martian experience (war), come to know that the two are not distinct, but one. "In the midst of life we are in death": i.e., we are born through the agency that also exits us. And when we face the latter, death, there is born in us an attitude toward life that never afterward leaves us—we loosely call it "fatalism" on the part of our soldiers. It is really understanding: understanding that only Mars can give of the values of life and death, its own special provinces. Because Scorpio or the 8th house is occult, the majority of our soldiers are not able to put into words just what their experience consisted of: they only know. The occult experience cannot be communicated in language.

30th: At those times when we astrologers sense that we are losing our perspective temporarily we ought to realize that the antidote is a matter of the same house which rules perspective—the 9th. Said antidote being recourse to nature, preferably on

by Rita Doane Williams

URANUS

Horoscope detecting, like any other pursuit, has its gratifications and victories as well as its difficulties. In our previous efforts to detect the major influences in an unknown horoscope from study of the person, rather than by study of the known chart to arrive at the person's major characteristics, we found that the detecting of some planets strongest in the nativity was easier than was the detecting of others. This, because of the level upon which each planet functions. We have now come to the detecting of the planet Uranus strong in a nativity, and we expect to find our task a pleasant and gratifying one.

We expect little or no weighing, eliminating, and rejecting to take place within our minds as we concentrate upon our human subject, present or absent; rather, we expect to be apprized in no uncertain terms of the presence of Uranus strong in the chart. Why? Because our introduction to this native will be by way of trying to reconcile something about the character or actions to life as we have always known it. We will begin and probably end our contact with this native with the words, "But—" spoken in any of innumerable degrees of astonishment, perplexity, puzzle, wonder, disapproval, approval, curiosity, interest, or what have we?

Perhaps our attention is first caught by the image of the absent brother or sister who seems automatically to come up as the topic of conversation whenever two or three are gathered together. We listen, perfunctorily and politely enough at first, then for the period in the speaker's voice. Then, "But—," we hear ourselves say to gain time in which to reconcile what we have just heard to what we expected. And we know, while a little smile of self deprecation at our temporary astrological naivete lifts our lips, that we have been gossiping about a Uranus strong person again!

Well, now we know. We know that Uranus the Awakener is not only working within this person but upon us through him or her. We know this by the way in which we come alive and begin to question, think, consider, maybe adopt, something unnoticed before we made this human contact.

But—maybe we don't adopt. Eventually we meet this person we have catalogued beforehand. And when we find in our turn that we have an urge to talk over the result with others afterward (if we weren't doing it, it would be gossip), it will be the factors that stick in our psychological throats and refuse to be swallowed—adopted—that we discuss.

We were stimulated by the meeting. We had expected to be. We had looked forward to meeting a positive element, whether it went with our grain or against it. We weren't disappointed. Whether our subject appeared gentle, quiet, retiring, modest, or whether he or she appeared exhilarating, assertive, excitable, impulsive, or even temperamental, we still sensed the underlying firmness and fixity of an inclination toward an inner pole of character new to us. We sensed that no possible suasion on our part, no matter in what relation we stood to this person, would materially alter the pace or convictions; in fact, we had an amused picture in our minds of ourselves standing squarely in the path of the furrow about to be ploughed, and of this person amiably compromising by turning out of the intended furrow—until we had been passed and not an inch farther. We suspected that the most we could do by argument, coaxing, pleading, debating, challenging, reasoning, would be just this temporary adjusting to the necessity we represented; that we would make—well, practically no impression whatever. Not in a personal sense, but using the word "we" impersonally.

And yet the next impression we had was of an unusually open mind! "But—" we almost found ourselves thinking. We saw that our subject really wanted to pick up from us any and every point we might have that was worth learning or knowing. He or she was quite frankly curious, frankly outspoken, interested—but only when the point or subject was worth knowing. Ah, we thought, that's the typical difference between the curiosity of a Mercury strong subject and one with Uranus dominating—the former will pick up anything.

We found that most of the conversational leads we furnished provoked either a beg-to-differ, or an opinion or experience that provoked us to beg. Albeit with a mental reserve that maybe we didn't have the right, for we were arguing in favor of something accustomed and against something new to us. New, hmmm. This wasn't the first time we had found ourselves using that word, was it? No. It wasn't the last, either. The last time was when we parted from this person.

Of course we kept right on meeting him or her, for we were studying and verifying our astrological guess. And as we became better friends we began to detect a reconciler for our first puzzle over the firmness and the openness of this mind. We had seen that it was open, sensed that it was fixed; now we began to notice that the original openness of mind developed into firmly fixed opinions once a subject had been explored and assimilated. We listened, and by registering all our conversations with this person we found that these opinions were quite, oh quite, independent. As we had sensed, they were arrived at uninfluenced by anyone or anything. That is why we found ourselves being asked to "listen to a new idea" every so often. Oh yes, that word again.

And even though we disagreed mountainously with what we heard, we never did find any heat in the disagreement. We found, instead, that we were quite unable to dislike this person, possibly because we were instinctively attracted by the refreshing stimulation, and possibly because this person had other elements of attraction. What? Well, now you asked us, we certainly were conscious of a strong magnetism, comparable to electricity: not the magnetism we had registered with our former Mars strong subject, which had a warming and possibly personal effect. No, this was almost as impersonal as electricity itself; and instead of making us conscious of either body, centered in our brain and gave us an impression of sparks. Also, it was distinctly refreshing to meet such complete and utter lack of pose. Too, we may have liked the genial, engaging, cheerful manner and the outlook which never gave up optimism.

About that attitude. At our first meeting with this person we had to admit that we were distinctly pleased, and yes, maybe flattered, by the friendly interest taken in us. We didn't always meet someone who came all the way to us without making any bargain or asking anything in return, and who did it right away and voluntarily. We couldn't help being responsive; wasn't it flattering? We were softened up and ready to like this person, really like him or her. What a friendly sort he or she was! Yes, indeed, and with good judgment too—hadn't he or she elected to single us out for friendship?

Ah.

This misjudgment on our part lasted a little while. It lasted until next we saw our subject meet a new acquaintance. Then we watched with mingled feelings while exactly the same kind and amount of friendship, interest, and—ah—good judgment was displayed. There may have been a kind of consolation in observing that this newer acquaintance was also responding as had we. But being a big soul ourself (as we hoped) our perspective and humor soon restored us. We corrected our misjudgment to one more accurate: we saw that our Uranus strong subject was an unconscious well spring of friendliness. As time went on, we gathered more and more proof of this. In the most unexpected places, in the persons of the most unexpected types, we found that our subject had made another friend.

Whether this person we were observing happened at the time to be married or single, we now had a clue for study. If we found by listening or questioning that he or she had been married before—maybe more than once before—or if he or she were beyond first youth and still unmarried, we had had personal demonstration of the underlying reason, hadn't we? We could approximate by imagination how the previous partners had come to the parting of the matrimonial ways by journey down the road of expected emotional singleness that turned out to be impersonal diversity; or how our subject him- or herself had instinctively avoided the road of expected singleness as cramping to that unalterable urge toward liberty of experience, universality of interest, gratification of mental curiosity.

Something else was born in upon us. Slowly we began to note the expected analytical and critical examiner under the mantle of the friend. In fact, if this person was of our opposite sex, and if we had experienced some emotional interlude, we still found the impartial examiner under the mantle of the admirer. We found that this person could fall back without trouble into the role of friend again, which, we registered, was the more natural. This confirmed a strong Uranus, which we knew does not connote emotion, primarily.

The next stage of our contact with this person was to find ourselves the object of a friendly attempt to emancipate us also from singleness of purpose, experience, or attachment! "But—" We almost had to gain time again. Had we expected that our subject would be as interested in emancipating others as in gaining this for him- or herself? Well, if we hadn't we weren't very good astrologers. Hadn't we always known that a strong Uranus wanted to try the next thing, the thing not yet become part of tradition, authority, or custom? And that if the native ruled dominantly by Uranus found out about something by trying or seeking, he or she would not rest until it had been passed on enthusiastically to others—even though previous personal search or experiment was thus contradicted or previous opinions recanted? We expected sudden changes of attitude, disconcerting departures from precedent; a comparatively dispassionate, impartial, mental roamer. We did not expect concentration or consistency, of the conventional kind.

We knew, too, what we would have expected if our subject had turned out to be a more elementary example of Uranus dominant. We would have expected the mind to prove unfocussed, scattered, illogical, and yet stubbornly opinionated. We would have seen a person frittering away time, with no apparent concentration; embracing the most ludicrously impractical causes, and erratic even in these loyalties; a dedicated novelty seeker. There would have been restlessness, irresponsibility, licentiousness, peculiar behaviour and decisions; and in emergencies we would expect to see this subject exhibit moral and physical cowardice, a peace-at-any-price attitude. He or she would have been egotistic instead of independent; fanatic, eccentric, instead of intellectually experimental. This subject's "different" atmosphere would have been unpopular instead of intriguing.

They might have looked hauntingly alike, with the intangible but striking difference evolution brings. If our good subject had Uranus strong in a position or relation affecting appearance, we would have looked first for comparative height—a little or much over average height. At the same time we would have looked for a profile, knowing that a strong Uranus manifests almost invariably in a definitely cut profile; we would not have insisted that it be perfect in symmetry if we were to accept it as the hallmark of Uranus, but we would have insisted that it be definite, and that it be prepossessing. The features need not be perfect either to assure us of the dominance of Uranus, but they would also have to have something pleasing about them, even in their irregularity. If there had been any suggestion of similarity, of form or expression, to that of any known animal, we would instantly have accounted our Uranus guess wrong; knowing that Uranus strong never impresses its natives physically with an animal resemblance. But we would have looked for another typical Uranus-strong hallmark—that of the forehead held slightly forward, the student's trick of drooping the head a little. This would have reassured us. We expected also to find light eyes; perhaps blue, or grey, or light green, but of whatever color, giving an impression of lightness. The head and forehead would be broad. The eyes, usually keen, even sharp, or brilliant, would be a little wider apart than most, with an enquiring expression. There would probably be defects in the teeth, which would show when laughing, for this mouth would show most of the teeth when it parted in humor. If our Uranus strong native were of the gentle, modest and quiet type, then the laugh would come seldom; the smile more often and usually unexpectedly—a somehow winning smile when it did appear. The chin would be well developed. The skin would be clear. In fact, the subject (unless of the less evolved type) would almost invariably have a claim to good looks. If we wanted to be still more sure of our assumption, we would covertly study the hips; for we knew that many times Uranus hallmarks its natives with a curious sort of double sex indication. If we noticed that our male subject had hips practically as broad as his shoulders (feminine hips); or that our feminine subject had noticeably straight, slender, and uncurved hips (male hips) we would be pretty sure of Uranus.

One other typicality we were on the watch for. If our subject were a woman, we might be offered the information we wanted by her voluntary comments on the state and care of her complexion; but if a man, we might have to draw him out directly. We would probably tell a story of another man we knew who had to choose his trouser material with care, for certain types of tweed made him so uncomfortable by the scratchy sensation on his skin that he couldn't wear it in spite of its genuineness and costliness. Was our subject so constituted, we asked? If we got an affirmative answer, we knew Uranus strong was manifesting in its typical sensitiveness of skin.

About health, now. We used our eyes to observe the state of our subject's nerves—one of the two primaries we were looking for. If we observed a sort of nervous fidgetiness, or if we noted that our subject was in a state of continuous action, purposeless or with purpose, we believed we were right about Uranus, for these symptoms were the typical reaction of a Uranus dominated chart—the native fell into them to cover or offset problems, depression, or dissatisfied restlessness, we knew. We perhaps asked about it, and maybe were told of some previous nervous ailment. Or about one of many types of spasmodic ailment—strictures, cramps, paroxysms, spasms, and possibly some heart condition. The other primary we wanted to know about was trouble arising from the circulation of the blood: any of numerous blood conditions, blood poisoning, and also related malnutrition, anemia, etc. Then, had our subject experienced ankle troubles—swollen, sprained, broken, etc.? One other thing—any experience with rupture?

While we had this ankle business in our mind, we took care to study the feminine ankles of our subject, or to watch for the appearance of the male version as the legs were crossed or shifted. As with the profile and features, we wanted to be reassured that these ankles, male or female, were good: well shaped, flexible, tapering even in the male.

For the rest of our verification process, we had to use patience. With repeated and continuous contacts with this person we would find the defended traits beginning to show through; those which were of course not put on exhibition at first meeting. It didn't take too long for the first of these to manifest. We were ourselves the victim. But we knew, even as a flush of discomfort rose to our cheeks, that the point blank and even scientific pinning of our wriggling weaknesses to a firm backing of fact was quite, quite friendly. It was simply the instinct of Uranus strong to discover and isolate truth. We knew there would be no use asking the old question asked over the ages of scientists, "What is the use of it?" for our Uranus strong subject of course had the typical Uranian disregard for application of truth or principle once it was discovered. And besides, we expected and later found that he or she was well able to make allowances for imperfections—and for differences of race, creed, heredity, environment, or anything else.

What we had to learn to make allowances for in this contact was our subject's courage of his (or her) own convictions. For, since these had already shown up as individual and usually not parallel those accepted, there were occasions when we ourselves were placed in an unconventional light we hadn't sought and, perhaps, didn't wholly relish. We learned in time various ways to circumvent this, and to get back into Mrs. Grundy's better graces. We never did learn how to parry the moments of—well, what we called tactlessness. We didn't wholly learn not to place full trust in all friendly promises. And somehow we always did fall into the trap of giving advice asked for, even though we could have remembered before we started, and certainly had proven to us as we went along, that our subject with Uranus strong was simply interested in the point of view, the difference in opinion, or the workings of

Solving Your Interpretation Problems

If puzzled in reading your own or a friend's chart, select the configuration most difficult to you and submit it to Mrs. Kelley. Please do not ask her to interpret an entire horoscope—be reasonable. Send your interpretation problems to her in care of this magazine, Box 9758, Los Feliz Sta., Los Angeles, Cal.

by Agnes T. Kelley

"I would appreciate your interpreting this for me: Jupiter retrograde in four degrees Virgo intercepted in my 10th house, opposition retrograde Mercury in four degrees Pisces intercepted in my 4th. Was born March 11, 1897, Lat. 39 N, Long. 84 W, 8:30 pm. I have read that Mercury in first decan of Pisces signifies a useless and wasted life, especially in the field of creative or intellectual activity."

MRS. O. W. T.

I wonder if by an error in typing you could have given me the wrong time of your birth? For in verifying your chart I find that this intercept could not be in your horoscope as given. At 8:30 pm, LMT, on your date and at your place of birth, Cancer 25° would have been on the midheaven, not Leo (as required for a Virgo intercept). You give 84 W as your Long.; the interval from this to Greenwich is 5:36, putting your birthplace just about midway between the Eastern and the Central time meridians, with the possibility that either EST or CST was used in recording your birth. But at neither 8:30 EST nor 8:30 CST was Virgo intercepted in the 10th house on that date. Virgo would have been in this intercepted position for only a few moments around 10:47 pm, LMT; or 10:20 pm, CST; or 11:20 pm, EST—all three of which ways of saying it are exactly the same thing. However, none of them resembles your "8:30 pm."

There is another error too. Mercury was not retrograde on the date of your birth. It was direct.

So without knowing whether or not you have an intercept sign in your nativity, I can speak only generally about this. I know that there is little in the majority of text books about intercepts. Students of today agree in the main that intercepts indicate some form of inhibition, in the sense that the matters under the planets thus intercepted do not get out into free expression until one of two things happens.

(1) If the student uses progressions, he or she believes that the intercepted planets come into free expression when by progression the intercepted sign reaches the next cusp.

(2) Whether the student uses progressions or does not, it is believed that when (or whenever) the native meets another native in any prolonged or intimate way in whose chart this sign is upon a cusp, the first native is thus enabled to gain expression through the chart of the second native. Example: native has Virgo intercept in 10th house. He meets someone in whose nativity Virgo rules the 2nd cusp. First native is thus enabled to gain financial expression for the planet or planets intercepted in Virgo, as long as he has any close relation with second native.

There is a further way in which intercepted planets may be released into potency. By means of the owner meeting another who has favorable planets in this sign. Example: native with Aquarius intercepted in 9th house and the Sun therein, meets another who has Jupiter in Aquarius in 3rd. First native feels a mental (3rd house) release for his restricted 9th house potentials.

SOLVING YOUR INTERPRETATION PROBLEMS

As to Mercury in first decan of Pisces, why not prove or disprove what you read? First, gather the horoscopes of famous persons who had their Mercury in this decan—there are many of them, and their charts are not hard to obtain (go through Notable Nativities as one source). This in itself will do much to disabuse you of such a concept. But also think your way through the idea—does it sound reasonable and logical to you? "If it isn't common sense it isn't astrology," you know. Do you believe that the Power or Powers ruling this universe have no Plan for their creations, or a malignant one? That any human being is put into earth existence simply to waste that existence? Could you reconcile the concept of divinity with that of malignancy? Or that of whim?

Evangeline Adams has said, "Too much emphasis has been laid by astrologers on the fact that Mercury is in his fall and detriment in Pisces . . . there is a disposition to a curious kind of mental idleness which however is not really a defect. It merely means that the mind plunges itself into a bath of reflection, only to emerge purified and strengthened. However, this type of mental operation is not at all understandable by the devotees of reason pure and simple. Those people who boast that their brains are always clear and active and who measure their achievements by the amount of visible work which they put into them cannot understand such individuals as we are now discussing. One might go farther and say that they do not understand the laws under which the creative instinct works, or even the ordinary laws of generation and growth, either in the vegetable or animal kingdom. . . ." (From Astrology, Your Place Among the Stars.)

"Have been studying astrology only about two years. Was born Oct. 8, 1907, Montreal, approximately 8 am. Scorpio ascendant, three planets in Libra in 12th—Sun, Venus, Moon, in that order. Please help me understand what to expect of Neptune's transit through Libra and over my planets."

MRS. M. S. W.

Because in order to judge a transit we must know the condition of the transiting planet in the nativity, I have set up the rest of your horoscope. This shows me a nature of very positive potentials, which takes nothing passively or negatively, and which will go through straining and struggle under the coming Neptunian influence. You have a preponderance of urging, or positive, aspects (those which are still called "bad" popularly). If the opposite had been the case, and you had had a number of trines, the outlook for growth just ahead of you would have been modified.

Under the square and the opposition, and some conjunctions, we cannot "let well enough alone," for the inherent nature of these aspects forces us to do, and continue to do, something about them. That is why the old and wiser astrologers called them "positive" aspects. They are the active factors in our charts. This explains why so many famous folk have so many squares, oppositions, etc., in their charts. The urge was what finally made them great.

You were born with your natal Sun just a few minutes short of exact square to Neptune. This natal Neptune is opposition natal Uranus, but trine natal Saturn. Your Venus and Moon, in Libra too, have passed the conjunction with your Sun; they are both square your Mars, however. Your other urge is Mercury on your Ascendant squaring your mid-heaven Jupiter, and sextile Saturn.

You will not feel the coming Neptune transit as a conjunction merely; you could not, for Neptune to you will always be a square influence fundamentally, and secondarily a trine influence to the steady and concentrative side of you—your Saturn. Neptune to you will also always be a 5th house influence, for it rules that house at your birth; and a 9th, for it is therein.

Notice that the 5th and 9th are creative houses, one emotionally the other intellectually. And that the 12th, through which Neptune is passing, is the other creative house, spiritually. This leads you to expect a very strong and deep urge to create something, whatever it may be. If you face this transit with already well developed creative powers, the stimulation will take one form; if not, it may take the form of initial unfocused restlessness, emotional extremes you do not realize yourself, a withdrawing inwardly in order to fight out the thing you are feeling where you are feeling it. No one outside your own skin can help you much. Neptune's vibrations are very fine, subtle.

The one imperative thing to do, if you want to emerge from the transit an artistically creative human being, is to keep from feeling self-centered or self-indulgent motives. These would demand "comfort," easing, in some form on their own level, which would incite you to false pretenses, stirring up scenes, starring yourself deliberately, making mysteries out of simple things, and even taking to stimulants as a form of "comfort." In the meantime you would be missing the real point of the transit. If you can keep your motives high, the inner voice will be heard in pure form, and you will be able to bring out some of it in artistic ways. This will be to you a struggle, for at birth, remember, Neptune to you meant struggle. This is the intended time when this indicated birth struggle is to take place. This is one of the significances for which you incarnated. We may add, that if you do not make the grade in these coming fourteen years (approximately) you will return to try again, the same struggle.

Use your Saturn. Keep yourself entirely practical, in the wise (Saturn's keyword) sense, not the materialistic sense. Do not be led into blind psychic alleys. Refuse to let go emotionally when stimulated; relax, remember the great purpose. You will notice that whenever you do let go to a low motive, your creative powers simply fade away for some time and do not return. This will irk you, and in time perhaps you will value them more than any possible self-indulgence, keeping your motives pure for the sake of this reward.

It will be when Neptune goes over your Venus-Moon square Mars that the self-indulgence will be strongest; for Mars rules physical passions, personal will, the self (1st house). And Neptune ruled 5th at birth—location of love life. This hint should guide you.

Do not allow your outside environment to cause you to lower any growing ideals.

Do two positive things, voluntarily. Harness your mind, heart, and soul to a creative purpose, of your own choosing; stick to it. And plan to give a part of your time and energy to furthering some social cause, also of your own choosing; stick to this too, for Neptune in Libra in 12th means others' (7th house, or Libra) rights, and especially those of the underprivileged, confined, or restricted (12th house). Through this, too, you were meant to work off some karmic necessity (12th) and grow proportionately.

"The more I read in Wynn's Magazine, the more I am puzzled about bad aspects. Other magazines, and writers, say keep away from the things signified by the planets in such aspects. Writers in Wynn's do not. Please explain."

H. O.T.

The difference is in the philosophy of astrology. Without understanding of the reason for the existence of such aspects, we would of course instinctively say keep away from the affairs in question, for they indicate struggle, or effort. But the philosophy of astrology sees the necessity for the square, or opposition, and thus the necessity for the owner working through it, not running away. The uninitiated astrologer would invariably say of Uranus on 7th cusp opposition a planet in Ascendant, Do not marry. The philosopher would say, Marry.

Why?

Because the philosophy back of that position shows us that the native needs more awareness of others, and less self-consciousness (1st-7th). Marriage is one of the best ways to force the attention onto others and off the self. Wherefore not to marry would be not to take an opportunity. The only "bad" to be expected of the marriage would be merely the unwillingness or inability of the native to continue to grow. If he, or she, did learn cooperativeness the marriage would, obviously, be very happy. Wouldn't it?

It is the same with the principle back of any "bad" aspect. Each is an invitation to the native to take this present opportunity to acquire something lacking at the moment. Of course it involves work; what doesn't that is of any value?

"What Do I Do With It?"

of the words, "As veil upon veil we lift, we find, Veil upon veil behind." And our eyes, dwelling there, should remind us that we are never finished; even while we experience an inward gratitude that we have been able to lift the few veils we have lifted. The more we lift, the better the uses to which we will put astrology.

How to Read a Horoscope

Part IV

The Realm of Causes

In the preceding lesson we had an example of ways and means, estimating rather completely the testimonies of one house, using rulerships and occupants only. Not one word was said about the character qualities of the individual whose horoscope was being interpreted. It was all external, all application of whatever the native was.

Another person could have had all, or nearly all, the same testimonies and at the same time have been constituted of entirely different qualities—simply by having other planets and other houses that would have shown the same rulerships and occupants in relation to the houses discussed.

Now we are going over into the realm of causes; we are going to find out some of what the individual is, whereas in the preceding lessons we have been looking at what the individual does. Actually, we must remember, there is really no such thing as reading from a horoscope what the soul of an individual is, for everything the human mind can contemplate is below an understanding of the soul—everything the human mind can contemplate is therefore environmental to the soul. But by comparison with the externals of life (what a person does) the interpretations of character that we can glean from planetary positions in the zodiacal signs are so much more close to what the person is that we can be as correct as the mind of man is capable of being correct in referring to a man's character as what he is.

The true perception of what a man is is possible by the enlightened soul—not by the mind. The horoscope is a diagram for the contemplation of the mind. What the mind digests becomes the diagram, as it were, of what the soul perceives. In this course, however, we are dealing with mentality, not the mystic capacities of the soul, which, while even more real than the mind, are not within the province of this course of study. We are endeavoring to instruct the mind of the student in the interpretation of a horoscope, both as to external and internal facts that are to be acquired through observation, logic and training of anyone's ordinary faculties. It is our intent to furnish some of the guidance that will lead the student through the puzzles that confront the beginner and sometimes the advanced student of astrology.

Let us examine almost similar portions of the two horoscopes for an illustration of the causes behind differences in application of the same position of the ruler of the same house.

Mr. A and Mr. B are both bankers. Let us say that the reason they are both bankers is chiefly because both of them have the ruler of the occupational 10th (see the table of key words in Lesson II, in the January issue) in the 2nd house (money, finances). This would be as far as we could go if all we were using were the material of our first three lessons, a study of application only. That is, assuming that there were no other external positions or rulerships in their two horoscopes which would also contribute to the banking profession. In the case of Mr. A, Capricorn is the sign on the occupational 10th; this sign is ruled by Saturn, and we find Saturn in the 2nd house of his horoscope, the 2nd being the house of money. In the case of Mr. B, Aquarius is the sign on his occupational 10th; Aquarius is ruled by Uranus, and we find Saturn in the 2nd house of his horoscope, the 2nd being the house of money.

Now let us suppose we know something more about these two men—perhaps both of them have had their names in the papers recently. We may have read that Mr. A is now retiring from the presidency of his state's largest bank after a long and valuable career during which he has been a pillar of society and extremely useful to his community. Not a breath of scandal has ever been associated with his name. But Mr. B's name has just appeared in the daily prints because he violated the trust put in him and absconded with a great deal of the depositors' money.

Externally the interpretation of these two men's horoscopes would not show this difference between them. We couldn't learn this difference by means of anything in the application portion of astrology. For the application portion of astrology is related to the houses of the Earth (all houses are of the Earth, mundane). We would have to go beyond the Earth for the causes of the tendencies that led to honesty in Mr. A and dishonesty in Mr. B.

We would have to have recourse to the testimonies of the sign positions and aspects of the significant planets in their two horoscopes, for these are both related to the realm of causes and are not of this Earth.

Planetary sign positions in the zodiac and the aspects between planets are all relationships in the heavens, as viewed from this Earth—but not of this Earth.

We would have to know the differences between Saturn as ruler of the 10th and Uranus as ruler of the 10th if we would know the fundamental differences of the reasons why these two men entered the banking profession—although the natures of the planets themselves would neither of them suggest honesty or dishonesty. We must not leap to the conclusion that because Mr. A was honest in his banking and had Saturn ruling his 10th all men having Saturn as ruler of their 10th in the 2nd become honest bankers.

This may be a subtle point to some students, so it would be well to dwell a moment on it.

While it is true that astrology is demonstrable as a cause and effect science, it is not true that any astrological position or configuration is to be taken as the cause of just any old effect that we find in the life of the native. One is not entitled to arrive at the conclusion that because an artist (effect) has the Moon in Aries all people who have the Moon in Aries are therefore artists, or even that all artists have the Moon in Aries. It must first be demonstrated that the effect of being artist is related to something in the grand system of the universe with the peculiar qualities of artistry. For the system is solid, and any interpretive method that justifies the name must demonstrate laws and principles from which isolated instances and examples flow or depend.

We are not therefore to say that Mr. A was honest and Mr. B dishonest because of the natures of the planets ruling their 10th houses. To say this would presuppose that the influence of one planet could never be dishonest and that of another planet could never be honest—something that is not part of the system, as any student who has set up so few as a hundred horoscopes has already discovered for himself. In his hundred horoscopes he has found both honest and dishonest people with the same planets ruling the same houses, so he must look further for the causes of this difference.

As bankers, there is a great deal of difference between those whose 10th houses are ruled by Saturn and those whose 10th houses are ruled by Uranus—and the same can be said of those whose 10th houses are ruled by any other of the planets or luminaries. And there are bankers with each of the planets and luminaries ruling their 10th houses. (This same point applies equally to any external expression: there are artists under each of the signs on all the houses; the same is true of mechanics, housewives, explorers, astrologers and every other known line of human occupation. In each occupation, however, there will be distinguishable differences between those having different planets as signifiers of occupational application.)

Please understand that we are here oversimplifying two hypothetical cases of our example bankers in order to illustrate a principle of interpretation. In real life there will be more factors to adjust or interpret from the complete horoscope of the individual; but right now we are picking out the minimum of factors that can be related to a problem in comparative character.

We have pointed out that the nature of the planets which made Mr. A and Mr. B bankers did not make one honest and the other dishonest. Could it be that the signs occupied these 10th house rulers be the cause we seek?

No. The signs are neither honest nor dishonest. Both honest and dishonest men and women can be found with any planet you might wish to name in any of the zodiacal signs. A survey of a few people having the same planet in the same sign will instantly show that varying degrees of integrity are possible because they exist in the natures of those few people.

Perhaps what we seek is to be found in the condition of the significant planets. Condition is a term that refers to the natures of aspects held by a planet, affected as well by the natures and conditions of the planets in those aspects to it.

An aspect is held by planets in any multiple of 30 degrees from each other. See my aspect course which began in the issue of July, 1942.

In each of the horoscopes of Mr. A and

Mr. B we see that Mercury is in aspect to the ruler of the occupational 10th.

Mr. A's Mercury is in trine aspect to his Saturn, ruler of his 10th.

Mr. B's Mercury is in square aspect to his Uranus, ruler of his 10th.

We see that Mr. A's Mercury is in Virgo, and that Mr. B's Mercury is also in Virgo. Thus it is clear that Mercury in Virgo (a planet in a sign) is not to be sought as the cause of honesty or the lack of it, for these two men are different in the quality of honesty, yet both have Mercury in the same sign.

Are we to conclude by this process of elimination that people with Mercury in 5th house trine to Saturn are honest because Mr. A has this aspect and was honest? No. But we are getting warmer. The 5th house trine is creative, up-building, outpouring, and Mr. A has it in his 6th, the house of service. Mercury being a mental planet, in trine to the steadying, self-disciplining Saturn (for such are its qualities) gives Mr. A much balance and reliance with which to meet temptation.

On the other hand, the 4th house square of Mercury to Uranus attracts upsets in matters of estate (4th house), for Uranus is sudden, upsetting, unexpected, unprovided for in the lives of all but the most foresighted of humans. Related by aspect to a planet in the 2nd (finances) Mercury or any other planet in the 5th house of the horoscope tends toward desires for gain by speculation. These factors are likely to attract to Mr. B numerous temptations that Mr. A would never have; and Mr. B's estate (4th house aspect with Uranus) would not be as likely to be as substantial as that of Mr. A, because of this character difference.

There is nothing honest or dishonest in an aspect, for the law of polarity (of which honesty and dishonesty are related soul qualities) is present in everything known to man in this sphere of expression. No man has the right to appear before a judge and state that anything in his horoscope justified or compelled the doing of any wrong.

But different men, under different character auspices (horoscopes), have different problems to solve, different types of karma to work out, and our modern misconceptions of what life is do not prepare us very well for understanding and meeting them. The

They Who Will Not See

Dear Wynn: In August, 1939, I met Aquarius, who had been unhappily married July 7, 1939. It developed into an affair Jan., 1942. I knew it was folly, but I felt this was a man I could really love, could sacrifice almost anything for. I hoped I could have his love, a home, and children. Something went wrong, or he was never sincere from the beginning, and I did not see it because I wanted it to be different. Even if our relationship would not last long I'd still seek it for the sake of having a chance to live life to its fullest—I know it is possible for me with him. I believe there are all the loves Manly P. Hall speaks of in one of his articles.

I do not know his wife nor does she know me. For some reason he cannot get a divorce but must wait for his wife to do so. I know she is not happy, and does not know why. In July of 1942 she left him for the third time. No action was taken to obtain a divorce, and I tried to force the issue, with the result that we quarreled in September and said goodbye. Now they are back together and my heart is breaking.

I cannot see where this is leading, but if possible I'd like to be his wife; I have nothing to lose and everything to gain.

There is a possibility that an affair of this kind is only a passing fancy on his part. Is his nature so? A close friend of his of a much less changeable nature has advised me to forget it because there have been many women in his life—but he does not know how far this case has gone. This friend's judgment, however, is not the best deductible reasoning, and therefore I discredit it somewhat. I believe, perhaps foolishly, that Aquarius could love one woman truly, if she were big enough in character and understanding to fulfill his unconscious ideal. He is definitely attractive to women and his past life I'd say had been one of pleasant experiments, and selfish in accepting what has been offered so freely. No doubt he has been deeply hurt once and consequently his adjustment has culminated in pursuit of various attachments, some sincere and some trivial.

I cannot interfere with the life of this man and his wife although I have the power to do so. I believe that is for them to settle between them. I can't understand why they do not separate.

I've known other men, in Sagittarius, Taurus, and Pisces, but have never really been in love with any of them, so never taken the final step into marriage. In this case it is love. I'd forgive him anything he might do. His little faults distress me but do not offend. I've never been big enough for this with anyone outside of my own family. In my heart is a hope I may have him back. I have partially solved my problem by reading and studying various subjects. But love is something that just comes and you can not will it away, I guess. So many of the problems you have solved in your magazine have seemed so well handled in a philosophical and psychological way. Please do the same for me. I was born Oct. 26, 1912, 9:30-10:00 am. He was born Jan. 27, 1911, just before or just after midnight.

(Reply:) You have come up to the point several times of almost marrying, you say. But because the real life, vitality, soul, was not in it you did not marry? When you do marry, you will do so with a motive large enough to justify marriage; you will put this sufficiently big drive, this focus of yourself, into the marriage, naturally? Even if there were to be certain problems or lacks in the marriage, the motive itself would at least be sufficient to carry you for some time of trying, wouldn't it? You couldn't conceive of yourself or anyone else actually starting another affair within a month of marriage, could you? What a light soul, and heart, and mind, that must be! Irresponsible, shallow, egotistic to the point of giving nothing of the self.

Then what do you think of this man?

Now look at another angle. When you marry and are in the stages of trying with all your being to make it grand, and whole, and big, and complete, if you find your mate, the one who also arrived at the point of marriage, turning the tide of himself that he offered to contribute to his marriage with you to someone else, what will you think of that someone? What a dishonorable, light, low motivated person this someone must be, to be willing to do such a thing to another soul sincerely trying to complete her marriage!

Do you recall, "Who steals for me will steal from me?"

Since you both, from an outsider's point of view, were equally guilty of poor motives, if you were to marry each other the exact same thing would happen again. Having held someone else and someone else's rights lightly, neither is going to change overnight into a character neither is, at present. The motive resident in each nature as part of it, at present, is still there, you know. And so it will still function. Nothing has been done to eliminate or correct it. No attempt has been made to see and follow after a higher ideal (motive) than But-I-Want-It, the most primitive of all motives.

You are doing your thinking wishfully, sister. Listen to yourself: "... this friend's judgment, however, is not the best ... so I discredit it." Now to the rest of us, reading your words, this is a glaring non-sequitor. Nothing you have to say in the least proves the friend's judgment bad; in fact, exactly the contrary—all the facts you yourself give prove it good. Aquarius has had many affairs, even through his marriage. This is only too well proven. And this leads to another piece of the same wish-fulfillment thinking.

Listen: "... to fulfill his (Aquarius') unconscious ideal." Hard put to it to find some good motive for this man, and to excuse his own life record, you have tried to convince yourself that he just needs to be made conscious of a great, big, pure, grand, and good ideal of his that he just hasn't noticed. This would enable you to believe that if you pointed it out to him he would become what you wishfully want him to be. Nothing even faintly points to any ideal at all in him; everything points to none. Unless we were willing to call I-Want-It an ideal. Next, listen: "... no doubt he has been deeply hurt once ..." and as a result has lived irresponsibly and lightly. Your honesty forced you to use those words, no doubt. You had nothing of the kind in fact to go on. But if this wishful thinking could be turned into fact, then all you would have to do would be to heal this hurt and he would then become decent, faithful, and so on.

But the most choice piece of wishful thinking you offer is: "For some reason he cannot get a divorce but must wait for his wife to do so. ... I cannot understand why they do not separate."

Really, sister? Really and truly? You cannot understand why they do not separate? And you can't understand why he told you he could not get a divorce but would have to wait for her to do so?

What is the only reason man and wife do not separate? Because they do not want to.

Let's take a look at the horoscopes. Your fragmentary data being not enough for me to set up the correct charts, I will touch on known points only. (Notice that you gave me no places of birth; and that you do not say which midnight you mean—that between January 26-27, or that between January 27-28.)

To begin with, we have two souls with Suns closely square to each other. This is a much harder problem than two opposing Suns would present; for the opposition aspect has in it polarity, and polarity can manifest either as antagonism or complement, as witness both allies and enemies being matters of the 7th house (that opposed to the self, 1st house). Next, we have a woman on whose Moon (her life as a woman, her physical functions, her feminine sense receptions) falls the Saturn (denials, frustrations, karmic debts, loss) from the man's chart. This Saturn of the man's also opposes the woman's Sun and her Mars; and his own Sun squares her Mars. His Venus squares her Mercury. But his Mars lends physical, passionate response through the senses to her Moon, for it is in trine to it, even while his Saturn conjuncts it.

In this woman's chart of birth we see her Scorpio Sun in close conjunction with the planet of will, passion, desire: Mars. This Mars-Sun conjunction is opposition her Moon, giving her the problem of regulating her sex reactions and motives (sex polarity, Sun and Moon, with Mars and Scorpio stirring it up) especially since this opposition is probably across her 11th and 5th houses (place of birth not known). And the 5th is the location of affection and love. Next we see that this woman's Venus is in Sagittarius, approaching culmination (exactitude) of an opposition to her Saturn. We keep this in mind while we notice that the man's Mars (which in his chart is the equivalent of Venus in a woman's) is also in Sagittarius—at the opposite end of the sign, however, in no aspect. Natives of either sex whose signifiers of the love nature and affections are found in the sign Sagittarius are traditionally "hard to capture or keep"; that is, they tend to flare up and die out quickly, if brilliantly. They require much wooing and attention; not that this is to their discredit in any way, it is simply their nature. They are capable of extracting the essence of an experience like lightning—or their own arrow—and the literal, the obvious, the wholly physical, weighs them down. But we remember that the woman's Venus in Sagittarius is in almost exact culmination of an opposition to her Saturn; this, of course, tends to stabilize her nature and make her desire to hang on (Saturn ruling time). But in this desire she encounters karmic denials (Saturn), which bring her the experience of loss of an affectional nature.

The man was born into manifesting through the sign Aquarius. He had tried this type of manifestation before, but apparently, from the record of his life this time, not many times. For he is still manifesting through the lower levels of the sign. Aquarius is one of the Air signs, signifying mind. Mind, lacking evolution, tends to scatter its resources, seek diversity, be unable to hold itself to a given point. With evolution comes concentration and the acquisition of principles—such as honor and so on. In any undeveloped Air sign native we will find this tendency toward diversity. Or fickleness, unfaithfulness, disloyalty. Such natives have not as yet got beyond the more primitive egotism to thinking in an added dimension—that including the other fellow. Standards of honor, faithfulness, loyalty, only come with enough living to evolve depth of thought and feeling; thought and feeling which are capable of adopting and living up to a code which includes the rights and needs of fellow human beings.

As to whether this man will marry you at any time, I haven't the faintest idea. That is, of course, a matter of free will. In the meantime, now, is one of your chances to do some powerfully concentrated thinking. If you succeed in doing it, who knows but that your present desire will change? If not, you may attract still another experience along the same fundamental lines but with different details, followed by another of your chances to do some concentrated thinking. Your chart is working, sister. There is only one way to prevent recurrence of similar experience, and that is to absorb the lesson, what is meant by the experience. The reason karma does not just work literally—i.e., an experience for an experience and then quits—is that karma is not a punishment, but a teaching. If the teaching has not been effective, if the one taught has not learned, then the teaching must be done over again, and over and over if need be.

I wish you well. I believe you could straighten yourself out if you wanted to. You have a good deal of will power shown in your chart. But as to whether you will want to?

No Rest for the Unweary

Dear Wynn: Is there no rest for me this side of suicide? I've lost my sense of proportion. I was born Jan. 18, 1908, at 2 am., New Orleans, La. My husband Aug. 3, 1904. After 13 years of marriage we have become incompatible. What must I do? He has always liked people and to mingle to a great extent. I never have, and besides a few very intimate warm friends have practically no associates. This never seemed important however until the last 2 years. Now he says everyone in the building hates me, and him on account of me. He even accused our 3-year-old daughter of saying she disliked me. I don't believe this however as the child is very fond of me. My point is, you see how a little unimportant thing has developed into man sized proportions. I am crushed by his disloyalty or lack of integrity. I always knew him to be deceitful with outsiders but somehow always felt that I held a different spot in his life. This concern is chiefly mental, and sometimes I find myself hardly able to go on, so overwhelmed am I with worry.

I work—earn slightly more than he does. This has caused some concern on his part. I have always envisioned a peaceful, happy future with the two of us, and our home and children. Until 2 years ago I had every reason to hope, but overnight things changed. Can you tell me why?

MRS. C. R.

(Reply:) Well, if you are to get any rest it must be this side of suicide, for there's certainly no rest for you on the other side. Or for anyone.

Now let's see. "You "never have liked people," you have "practically no associates," and you want me to see how a "little unimportant thing like that" has developed "into man sized proportions." Not hard to see. "A little unimportant thing like that" inevitably would.

If you were all by yourself in the world and had no one else's rights to bother with, this unimportant thing would still have grown man sized; for you would still have had to live in a world filled with those things you don't like—people. Of which you are one.

Hmm. Wonder why these bothersome people all through your building don't like you much?

To any astrologer, your situation is merely the alphabet of astrology. You yourself wouldn't have to study far to understand it; the primary key words of the zodiacal signs of yourself and husband would tell you all you wanted to know—but probably more. A Capricorn woman with Scorpio rising marries a Leo man, rising sign unknown. The instinctive hermit of the zodiac mates, or tries to, with the instinctive benefactor, the lover of humanity. Of course there had to be some factor that would make this happen, and in your cases it was primarily that his conjunction of Sun and Venus fell on your Jupiter; plus the fact that his Moon fell on your Mars. Your own Mars trined his Sun-Venus.

Your problem is simple, not complex. Your husband, being Leo, had a good deal of generosity and warmth in his nature, and "until two years ago" he managed, probably pretty well. It looks as though he managed really well, for it was more than two years ago that he began to feel the combined influence of Saturn squaring his Sun-Venus, and Uranus doing the same—from what house we do not know, not having his birth moment. At this same approximate year, these same heavy bodies by transit were passing through your 7th house, that of marriage. We see that in your natal chart Saturn is in your 5th house, that of love, and Uranus rules your 4th, that of home. So, you began to feel the accumulated effects of your own cash karma in these departments: your husband stopped trying. It is interesting to observe that naturally you have your ruling planet, Mars, and your Sun dispositor, Saturn, the two most important natal points, in your 5th house. We also see that you have a very strong emphasis in the parent signs of the zodiac, Capricorn-Cancer, for your Moon and Neptune are in the latter sign opposing your Sun and Mercury. This (because of the presence of Sun and Moon) gives you the job of understanding and using rightly your instinct to assume superiority (parenthood) with the other sex (Sun-Moon polarity). Let us notice some words of your own: in reporting a deeply emotional occurrence, the breaking up of a marriage, you deliberately say, "This concern is chiefly mental." The realization that this might be true, should reveal something to you. Think about it. Think about it in connection with your next offered statement, "I work, earn more than he does—this has caused him some concern." The instinctive parent, keeping the child in his place. No concern of any kind enters your own mind; it seems only right to you that you should be in authority (Capricorn, 10th sign) over your husband, not his mate and partner. Your Sun and Mercury are in your 3rd house, the mental house; in opposition to your Moon and Neptune in the 9th, the other mental house.

Your way of growth, the next evolutionary step which is now being planetarily enforced upon you, is simple but primary. From your present self-absorption you will have to voluntarily turn some of your thoughts upon other people. Not liking other people, being content with yourself only, this will be a big wrench. You may fail entirely. If so, you might try observing your infant daughter. At present she is concerned entirely with herself as the nucleus of a world. Her interests are in her own fingers, toes, stomach, wants and dislikes. She is conscious of anyone besides herself existing only when she can't get something she wants or needs without outside help; as long as she is comfortable and gratified she gives no thought whatever to another human being. This is perfectly natural to her stage of development. In regarding your daughter, try to realize that we are all cosmic children, having many physical childhoods to live through, but only one cosmic childhood. That is why a physically well matured adult can still be showing every sign of being infantile. Cosmically, this adult is. We grow up only once in cosmos, and even as physical adults we are in some stage of cosmic childhood. There is a blindingly revealing parallel between yourself and your baby daughter, if you can see it.

What are the needs, and wants, and aspirations, and struggles, of your husband? How is he groping, and toward what? What have been his deep set-backs and his deep victories? What talents and gifts has he that would only need encouragement and training to flourish and mature? As readers of your letter, we realize that the only thought you offered about your husband was to call him "disloyal and lacking integrity." Or in other words, all you think about him is that he is something calling for contempt. Yet you are trying to force him back to you. Why? Not a passing breath of feeling of any kind is in your own letter. Do you want the sensation of a mental victory, authority again?

The ruler of your natal 5th house (love, affection, feeling), which was the planet Neptune, has come up to a position in the sign squaring your natal Sun. It will not be square your Sun by degree for some years yet, but you will feel its influence every minute of the intervening years, gradually increasing in intensity as it approaches the exact degree. You have already begun to feel it in terms of your present experience. You will go right on feeling it. Neptune is a very subtle influence, and so not easy for anyone not developed to the point of subtlety to understand. Some of the keywords of Neptune are: renunciation, sacrifice, emotional growing pains. Through enforced emotional stimulation, you will gradually have to become more aware of what is wrong in your emotional development at this time.

This will produce emotional confusion, many pretenses, playing roles for the sake of their emotional gratification, making uncalled for and illogical sacrifices, going to many of the emotional extremes. We might see this as a pendulum, at first swinging high, wide, and handsome, with large sweeps first to one extreme and then to the other. Gradually, over the years, this pendulum can be taught to swing less wide, not to reach either extreme. And then to swing less, and less. With decision and dedication (the latter another keyword of Neptune) it can be taught. But many, many thousands, millions, of cases are on record where the pendulum was still reaching both extremes at the other end of the transit experience. Nature does not force us; just gives us the opportunity. If the opportunity is not taken, the experience is repeated—this is the only form of "forcing" inherent in nature—a gentle but repeated one.

There is no rest for you short of effort.

Balance

Naturally enough, as the astrologer looks at it, times of war stress are times when we are all called upon to maintain balance, mental poise, choosing the middle way between extremes.

This is because the same house in the horoscope, whether it be the horoscope of Jack Smith, Mary Brown or of the entire world, is the house of both competition and cooperation. At first this seems strange to the beginner—rather as though something were wrong with the system. But when we think through it we realize that the good old seventh is the house of our relations with others, whether those relations be good, bad, right, wrong, comfortable or hard to take.

The seventh house, related as it is to the seventh sign, Libra, is the house in which we are trying in our peculiar ways to arrive at that balance—the symbolic scales of Libra—which will enable a man to live in the same world with other men. It does seem that we go to a lot of trouble achieving an end that looks so simple. Until we analyze our attitude carefully, however, we think it is simple because it appears to each of us that everything would be just about perfect if the other fellow saw and did things our way. It is not simple, for he feels we should do it and think it his way. Out of this state arise our religious, economic, international and even our gastric difficulties. For you can't hate and be healthy. Hate is related to the 7th, for the object of hatred is in some way connected with the 7th—it has to do with the other fellow, or the other side, the other pole of the duality of which we are a part. The 1st house is ourselves; the other, the object with which we deal is the 7th, whether he or she be enemy, partner, mate or associate.

There is great need for balance right now and during the coming far from smooth looking years through which we all must travel.

We need the balance that can see what is really going on in the biggest possible perspective, the balance that keeps details and petty irritations in their little places, the balance that doesn't confuse and transpose major and minor problems, the balance that sees the true mutual interests of those who quarrel, the balance that rises from the personal to the good of the order.

Astrologers and those who are friendly toward the subject must show the way toward this balance—not by words, but by living lives of application to all that is good, constructive and humanitarian. We must live lives of example—we all know and have sung the praises of the ideal in precepts; and we all have fallen below par in our weaker moments. These weaker moments should be fewer than ever in times like these, eliminated entirely if in any way possible.

Let us remember the seven great departments in which polarity, opposition, is ever tempting us. The temptation always appears in the guise of some sort of selfishness: personal selfishness, family selfishness, class selfishness, sectional selfishness, national selfishness, race selfishness or world selfishness.

There Really Is a War

Dear Sir: What is happening to Wynn's magazine? My friends who subscribe for other magazines have received their copies, but my Wynn's has not arrived.

In the December copy there is a mix-up of dates that should read Saturday and Sunday, the 26th and 27th. You are wrecking your good reputation.

G. N. S.

(Comment:) You forget to mention the inferior quality of the paper.

THIRD HOUSE STUFF

And how's the reputation of your grocer and butcher? They certainly aren't pleasing the public with their shortages. They should have plenty of butter and eggs and bacon and meat at all times, shouldn't they?

And your gasoline dealer—what a low grade moron he is: won't furnish all the gas you want for a joy ride. What is this country coming to? Everyone seems to be unwilling to give the former service to which we have become accustomed.

Look, pal—

When we came across the continent recently we took the fastest, most modern train there is—and what kind of service did we get? You ought to know, but I'll tell you. At one point we were held up for seven hours, waiting for some four carloads of soldiers who were coming up from another place and had to make the connection. And when those boys arrived they were hungry. So every civilian passenger on that train skipped a couple of meals the next day; Uncle Sam figured they needed nourishment just a little more than did the rest of us. Of course (darn the human race!), some people didn't like it and said so. One man was sobbing about paying for the best service and by Gadfry he intended to get it. Another man was denouncing President Roosevelt for not running a special train for the soldiers and leaving business men alone. Still another ruined his entire trip because he was going to be late for an appointment unless the train made up all the lost time. Pretty sad samples of men, but they showed the rest of the group to good advantage, for everyone else took it in the proper spirit—glad to see the army was being properly taken care of, for they are the boys who are protecting us old fuddyduddies who can't go around the block without becoming a hospital case.

Some of the boys who used to work in the print shop are now wearing that uniform and they aren't reading proof any more for the duration. Those who are taking their places may not do it quite so well, but they are trying mighty hard and doing better than might have been expected.

I was talking to the editor of another magazine a couple of days ago—all that had happened to his entire edition was that it was lost in transit somewhere. Absolutely no trace of it anywhere for several days; and then it showed up far, far out of bounds. Yet another magazine man was expounding his troubles within the radius of my slightly imperfect hearing: everything was just dandy with his magazine, except that every cut (pictures to you) for his February issue was misssent to the wrong state.

All I'm worrying about is that the government will tell me to quit using the mails and wires so much in my effort to get Wynn's magazine to the customers at the usual time. Maybe it's because I've been working so hard at it that has brought you the magazine at all.

Anyway, if I lose my good reputation, it's in a good cause. And perhaps you will tell me which magazine it was that your friends received on time—you failed to mention any of them by name. The magazines, I mean.

Fixed Stars Are Important

An astrological friend is doing quite a good deal of research on the fixed stars, but I greatly fear she is not going to obtain very satisfactory results. It seems to me she is going about it in the wrong way, although she is demonstrating plenty of enthusiasm—could be too much enthusiasm without enough direction of energy.

This brings up a matter that is more far reaching than the labors of merely one worker in the vineyard, for numerous individuals are going about their research in a similar manner and obtaining results not quite satisfactory. I do not imply that results are not satisfactory to those who obtain them—but they are not satisfactory from the viewpoint of philosophic method.

To illustrate:

Suppose we want to know why little girls of seven years like guinea pigs.

But all little girls of seven years do not like guinea pigs. So we must first find as many as we can of seven year old girls who do like guinea pigs. When we have found several hundred of them and verified all their birthdays, places and moments of birth and set up their horoscopes, we come to the job of scientific analysis.

Several astrologers are working along lines of bulk analysis, seeking to locate in their cases the similarities, and then ascribing to the positions and aspects found to be most abundant the known similarities in the lives of the individuals so grouped. In the case of seven year old girls who like guinea pigs, they say that "because the majority of them have planet X in sign Y, a liking for guinea pigs is produced." At first glance this may seem satisfactory to the careless thinker. But what about the minority in the group? The entire group was selected because of a liking for guinea pigs, so those who do not have planet X in sign Y offer something of a puzzle.

And, if we were in some way to convince ourselves that planet X in sign Y produced a liking for guinea pigs in seven year old girls, despite the liking in some who do not have this configuration, we would still be under necessity to demonstrate that all who have this configuration do like guinea pigs. And a suspicion lurks that possibly we might find among the millions born with this configuration some who definitely do not like guinea pigs.

We rapidly come to the conclusion that the problem isn't quite so simple as it appeared at first.

Perhaps there are several, or ten, or a hundred, or fifty million reasons why seven year old girls like guinea pigs, each of them requiring a different celestial configuration in the horoscope.

Certainly this is obvious in the matter of music. Just a liking for music isn't something to analyze for—for everyone likes something he can call music. Some can appreciate this particular composer while others would rather turn off the radio when his works are being aired. Yet all of them will defend to the grave their liking for the best in music. There must be different types of music, each of which appeals to a different type of human.

But this line of thought is carrying us into a state of confusion, the reason being that it is attempting to find the general in the specific.

We may not have noticed that many of the little girls we found who liked guinea pigs also liked pink hair ribbons. Perhaps a careful count would reveal that the very ones who had planet X in sign Y were those who liked pink hair ribbons and that planet X in sign Y has nothing to do with guinea pigs. Such are the problems of those who would seek great laws by means of the Aristotelan approach—something that the human race has been using for hundreds of years, with the only partially satisfactory and often downright unsatisfactory results we see all about us.

When we reason from principles down to applications we are more likely to get somewhere.

It is a principle that the source of character, and therefore of characteristic, is in the heavens. The application is down here on the Earth.

That alone should lead us to an investigation of many items in the light of what is being applied where. In the matter of zodiacal influences this works out beautifully, for we see the celestially pure influences being applied through the wheel of this world—the houses of the horoscope—according to where the various angles of the planetary rays are entering this lower sphere of activity.

The same will work out with the influences of the fixed stars, but the beginner who has not studied how to get semi-arcs of bodies not near the ecliptic (Sun's path) should be wary. The zodiacal position of a fixed star may make it appear to be in conjunction with a certain natal planet, or to fall in a certain house of the horoscope. But some of the stars are so distant from the ecliptic that they can be entirely out of aspect with their zodiacal positions when brought down through the mundane houses. This has often explained to me why one person with an apparent fixed star conjunction to some important planet will not have the same results as another with the same apparent conjunction. The hour of birth so affects the angles to the planet and to the star that one may be in and the other entirely out of aspect.

We had something on this in our series on eyesight which appeared in 1941, where we figured the conjunction according to exact relative house positions of stars and planets. The results were startling and accurate.

The Declaration Chart

Dear Mr. Hall: Your recent article, "How to Predict World Events," interests me greatly.

During the past several weeks I have been reading The Journal of the Continental Con- gress for 1776. The more I read it, and puzzle over it, the more inclined I am to believe Sagittarius was rising in the Declaration chart, as it must have completed at some time between just before 5 pm and not much after 6 pm. Many old letters of the colonial period show that with Virginians the term "evening" meant the hours just before the evening meal. With New Englanders of the same period the term meant the hours immediately after the dinner hour. Jefferson, a Virginian, in his letters seems to me to refer to "evening" as the time the Declaration was adopted.

THIRD HOUSE STUFF

For the first time, while reading your article, I saw a new significance in the old Sibly horoscope of the Declaration which has Sagittarius $13^{\circ}12'$ on the midheaven. I believe that is the chart appearing in INTERNATIONAL ENCYCLOPEDIA, which shows a time of about 10 pm, with London house angles. This would be approximately 5 pm at Philadelphia, where the midheaven at the same moment was approximately Virgo 26° and the ascendant about Sagittarius $8^{\circ}43'$.

Certainly in 1788, when Sibly's chart was published, there should have been real knowledge among English astrologers as to the true hour of the adoption of the Declaration, which to an Englishman of that period would seem to have been the biggest single item of the separation of a great colony from the mother country. I have hesitated to abandon the chart for this reason.

But your article suggests to me two possibilities.

1. To an Englishman of 1776 anything done anywhere in the Empire must be taken as having been done in London, center of the Empire, at the moment it was done. That would mean a London ascendant and London houses, even though the astrologer was in Aberdeen and the event in Philadelphia. As far as the event affected London that chart would certainly be significant. It must have yielded some results or it would not have survived to this day.

2. English astrologers, since Elizabeth's time, have looked upon London as the center of the world, certainly as the center of everything materially affecting world government, under the belief that every international event has been willed or could have been prevented at London. This would mean that every event, in any way touching world government must be referred back to London, with London houses.

I don't think I ever heard of Middleton's theory before. It is simply the extension of London, the center of the universe, idea that became important with world economy. The same idea should have worked out for a chart of Rome during that Empire. I wonder if it did. It is simply the referring back to the center of the movement everything that can influence it.

The thought is new to me, but it explains a lot of things that have been most confusing to me. It is the old proposition of recognizing who is King and letting the Prince alone until he becomes King, if he ever does. That may be why to a Jew Jerusalem is the locale of every horoscope. Possibly the Catholic Church responds in a world way to a Rome chart.

(Comment by Wynn:) Mr. Hall hands this letter to me for partial printing in Third House Stuff, stating that at present he is too busy on other more urgent matters, but that at a later date he may discuss the points brought up.

In the meantime, permit me to remind the reader that Mr. R. has discovered independently some of the things Mr. Hall mentioned about his own researches in the Library of Congress and elsewhere concerning the reasons for giving the Declaration chart an ascendant of Sagittarius (about 5°). Those interested in these points are referred to the January, 1941, issue of this magazine.

More Weeds in the Garden

Dear Wynn: The enclosed article concerning Mr. ——— is one of many that have been sent to us from all parts of the country. Both members of A.F.S.A. and non-members have complained of his unethical activities, private promotions and publicity methods.

We have been assembling factual information on this man for some time and I intend to lay this matter before our Board at an early future date, recommending that we publish authentic information based on documentary evidence in our files. He has an unsavory record of financial dealings and habitually preys on gullible widows, playing upon their vanities by publicizing them.

So-and-so, of the West Coast, is another who is hurting astrology, as documentary evidence proves. Still another—but why go on?

GEORGE J. MCCORMACK, President
American Federation of Scientific Astrologers

(Comment:) At the time of this writing (early January, 1943) the astrologers of Los Angeles are quite properly agitated by the prospect of a new law being passed in the city which might fail to differentiate between such individuals as are referred to in Mr. McCormack's letter and the many able and responsible astrologers in this locality. Every effort is being made by local astrologers to have a fair law that will protect the public against fake "astrologers" and recognize those who are worthy to use the title.

This magazine favors recognition by qualified boards, with or without licensing, of all who serve the public in any capacity, such boards to be chosen from those able to judge the particular lines in which such service is rendered. Such recognition of those worthy would eliminate those obviously unfit or unworthy and establish those who can and do render valuable service.

The most disturbing factor in the proposed legislation in Los Angeles seems to be the peculiar wording of the requirement for a bond, for it would appear that such a bond would be almost impossible to obtain from any responsible bonding company. The next most disturbing factor seems to be the fact that if the bond were possible to obtain, the unprincipled and the ignorant would be as able to obtain a license as would Mr. McCormack himself, if he were out here. Mr. McCormack is a gentleman of many attainments, a responsible business man, a property owner, an outstanding authority on the causes of weather (as his series of articles in this magazine last year will attest), president and past president of at least three large astrological associations having national scope, a deep student of human nature, and the father of a son in our armed service. He is in every way fit to give astrological advice. I have personally known him for upwards of twenty-one years and have worked with him on several astrological projects. Yet, under the proposed local law in Los Angeles as it may be passed, even such a man could be classified with itinerant, irresponsible, ignorant fortune tellers whose chief purpose is to get the money and change their names for tomorrow's customers.

This could well be a matter for more than local concern, for Los Angeles is famous for its astrologers and any law passed here could not help but be influential in other communities. It is therefore an excellent index that the A. F. S. A., as well as other astrological organizations, are interested in weeding out the undesirables who cloak themselves with the ancient and honorable title "astrologer".

It is urged that all societies, groups and organizations of astrologers and astrological students be alert to what may be going on in the councils of their local and state governments. Each organization should put a committee on the job of quietly learning whether or not any legislation affecting the status of astrologers is contemplated. Any independent astrologer or student who has knowledge of proposed legislation should report it immediately to his nearest organization, even though not a member; it is for the good of the order.

For the same reason, any case of bad ethics by a person using the name "astrologer" should also be reported to the nearest astrological organization.

But there is yet more important work to be done, and it is the function, as we see it, of already constituted astrological organizations to unite in the common purpose of getting it done. We refer to the necessity for proper laws recognizing astrology. This is not a criticism, and it is not news—for every astrological organization is already aware of this necessity and is willing to do its share. Astrology, with its many nationally circulated magazines, has attracted the attention, favorable and otherwise, of more people than have ever before been aware of it, and legal clarification of the status of astrologer has got to come. When it does come, it will be either fair or unfair to the scholars in its ranks who are in more ways than one a large portion of the hope of our nation's secure future. No one is as well qualified to advise our legislators as are those who have devoted their lives and efforts to the deep study of this important philosophical science, so the instigating action concerning proper laws for recognition and practice of astrology should come from astrological organizations.

Duration of War Predictions

The turn of the year saw predictions from almost every conceivable source on the probable duration of the war. War experts, military and naval men, economists and politicians gave their best estimates, which resulted in anything but agreement as to how long it will last. To quote in part an editorial of the Los Angeles Times:

"From among them can be chosen predictions of almost any duration, from the one more year vouchsafed our enemies by the aggressive and enthusiastic Admiral Halsey to the 100 years which a spokesman for imperial headquarters at Tokyo said the other day it will take the United States to lick Japan.

"The President expressed, or at least strongly implied, in his annual message a belief that it will be over within two years.

"Admiral Harold R. Stark, former Chief of Naval Operations and now commander of our sea forces in Europe, says that the war will be 'long and tough.' He ventures no prediction in terms of years but obviously does not expect peace before 1945 at the earliest, probably considerably later. Admiral Nimitz, commander in the Pacific and the man in charge of the sea war on Japan, substantially agrees.

"The consensus of informed civilian opinion in Honolulu is that it will take from 5 to 10 years to whip Japan.

"James A. Farley, one of the best of our domestic political prophets but a newcomer in the war-forecasting business, said a month or so ago that it will be over early next year,' meaning 1943.

"Early in December press dispatches quoted certain optimistic London stock-brokers as offering even money on peace by next June.

"Field Marshal Jan Smuts thinks it will take till some time next year.

"Albert Bushnell Hart, Harvard's noted historian and a prognosticator of parts, says

Hitler will be defeated in two years and that Japan will give up soon after.

"French headquarters in North Africa are quoted as favoring 1943 as the year of victory.

"A majority of the Galluped British public says it will end in 18 months or less.

"Oliver Lyttelton, British Minister of Production, says it is possible for the Allies to win by next June.

"And four well-known British Indian astrologers, sadhus and gurus are quoted by His Eminence, the Maharaj-Rana of Dholpur as predicting an Allied victory this April. Hitler's stargazers are officially silent but may be assumed to dissent.

"Lest the indicated majority in favor of a quick decision for our side inspire too much optimism, it may also be recalled that Congressman Andrew May, who is chairman of the House Military Affairs Committee and consequently supposed to have more complete information than most people, last July predicted that the war would end in 1942—this on the strength of some mysterious data he declined to divulge. We know that he, at any rate, was wrong.

"High-ranking military and naval men and most recognized civilian war experts inclined to dismiss as self-kidding and wishful thinking the idea that the war will be over soon. Most of them deprecate as harmful to the war effort what they describe as underestimations of the difficulties of the task ahead. They believe that we shall go better and faster if we make up our minds now that it will take us years of effort and sacrifice to accomplish it."

There are many factors that can contribute to the end of the war, not the least of which is the states of mind of the belligerents on both sides. If we assume that the only thing that could end it would be physical exhaustion, our estimated date should be one thing; if, however, we recognize the fact that a hopeless view of the future by the Axis can also end it, as the previous war with that nation was ended (before German territory had been entered by the Allies), our estimate can be considerably shorter for the Axis phase of this global conflict.

We are also under the necessity of taking into consideration the fact that Japan is an entirely different type of opponent, both as to psychology and in connection with its control of vast war materials.

We of this magazine are of the opinion that the definite date for Allied victory quoted as from the Indian astrologers is either a misquote or a mistake of the astrologers in taking a fatalistic view of the matter. We do not believe that somewhere in the heavens, to be read from astrological charts, is a date on which hostilities will end regardless of what we and our enemies do or do not do in the meantime.

Astrology is the science of celestial influences upon the very delicate and very sensitive parts of man's constitution. Where and when a man or a nation manifests are under astrological law because of what the man or the nation is. What an organization is (men and nations being organizations) determines its place and time—not the other way. This fact includes many potentials that are not visible, perhaps not entirely developed. If entirely developed, according to great philosophers of the past, these potentials raise man above the influence of the planetary rays. To whatever extent they are developed man is proportionately raised above astrological domination. This is known as man's power of choice.

Power of choice is a faculty we exercise under the limitations of those natural laws which apply to us because of what we are. Nothing we can do in any way changes or disturbs natural law, for everything we do invokes the action or reaction of natural law. Every choice we make as man or as nation brings into play some portion of the ever present cause and effect principle. The motions of the planets prove that the laws by which they are moved have phases, seasons, changing directions. It is these laws that we feel, that we react to, and that react to us. What we are, what we do, and when we do it are all factors in what we call an event. Obviously, if all these factors could be evaluated accurately, then prediction of events could be accurately made. But it is given only to those having the true gift of prophecy (probably no such individual is alive anywhere today) who can so predict.

(Here's a sure-fire prophecy, however: someone will have guessed right and will claim infallibility.)

We believe that the best that can be done in the way of accurate prediction by today's astrologers is the forecasting of opportunities, the description of psychological and physical conditions under which individuals and nations will be called upon to make their choices. Insofar as we can estimate what the man or nation is, so can we make accurate estimates of what they will do under certain known conditions to come in their astrological weather. But any nation can upset fatalistic predictions made on this basis by choosing contrary to man's logically arrived at expectations.

We know that certain celestial conditions will be such that Germany will see that it cannot win this war—that this realization will come between now and August first this year. We also know that this depends upon the United Nations taking advantage of their every opportunity (which we believe will be done). We have already stated these facts in our 1943 prediction, and summed them up by saying that we can win by August first. But we do not say that nothing else could happen to upset it. We don't think Germany will elect to commit national suicide; we don't think the United Nations will relax. Our predictions, however, are strictly limited to the nature of the vibrations we see in our studies as applying to what we believe men and nations to be at the times and places where and when such vibrations will be in effect.

We are of the opinion that Japan will resign before completely exhausted in a physical way, because of the vibrations under which that nation will be operating. We also hold this opinion because we believe the United Nations will not quit under any of the vibrations we are able to foresee.

Our studies of history in the light of astrology show us that intangible celestial causes have always worked more effectively than have materialistic factors in previous struggles. We have no reason to think this struggle will prove different when its date of termination is known. When it is all over, more will be seen of the non-tangible causes for its ending. Lack of faith in that for which one fights is as strong a deterrent as lack of ammunition—and that is what astrology sees approaching for the Axis. This state of mind will end the war if the United Nations do not relax the pressures which have been so well begun. It is therefore an excellent thing for us to be prepared for a long war while straining every means for ending it as soon as possible.

The Application Pattern

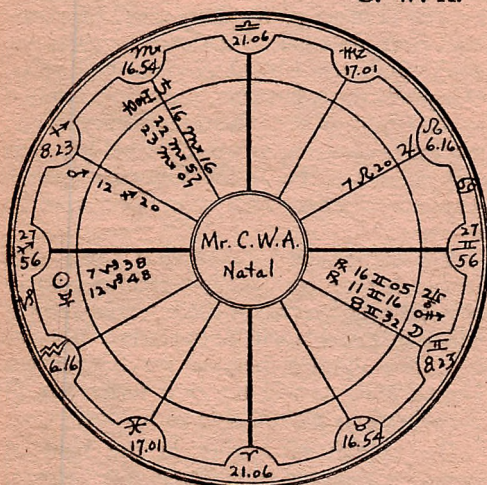

Dear Wynn: Your December article, "The Application Pattern", speaks of the amazing total of 1,336 in the horoscope of Queen Victoria.

In checking this method with my chart I arrive a total of 1,885, and if this interests you, you may wish to check my figures and comment on it.

I was born at Loomis, Nebr., December 29, 1895, lat 40N30, long 99W30, at 7:25 am CST. 6:47 am LMT; 1:25 pm GMT. Dalton's Tables of Houses used, and ST calculated as 13 18 00.

Using the orb you quote, and with the slide set at 36 for unity, I arrive at my result. The ten planets you use fall well within the orbs you mention.

G. W. A.

(Comment:) Your calculations, as you well know, are absolutely correct. Assuming this to be your correct moment of birth, you have a most remarkable application pattern and can use with maximum effectiveness the qualities you possess. One of the immediate evidences of this fact is your application of the method given.

As you no doubt have surmised, I have several horoscopes with higher totals for the house expectancies than are found in the nativity of Queen Victoria. And, as you no doubt have further surmised, many of them are of somewhat less famous people than the late Queen because of factors involving both zodiacal signs and the particular houses that are accented. The 6th and 12th are usually the houses that bring the high totals—and they are not the ones that produce outstanding characters in public life. The late Queen, as is well known, used her 12th house strength behind the scenes, while at the same time having four planets in relatively small angular houses (1st, 7th and 10th), which gave her the great power she possessed for public application.

The public fame of an individual, however, is not the index of the only valuable qualities needed in nature's economy. Much of the world's great work has been and is being done by those with powerful 6th and 12th houses—witness these houses in the horoscopes of great welfare workers, scientists and poets. You stand high in a good company. May you justify your potentials!

Would be very much interested in learning more of what you are doing, especially along astrological lines. It looks as though you might have an article up your mental sleeve. If so, let's see it—I'm sure our readers would like to hear from you.

Catholics and Astrology

Dear Friend: Your very fine article, "Catholic vs. Astrology", in the December issue, was most interesting to me. I had not seen the booklet referred to, but the article corroborated several things I have learned in my years of association with the leaders of the church.

I was the managing housekeeper for some of the hierarchy of the Roman Catholic Church over a period of eleven years. During those years I was a close student of astrology all the while, with the knowledge and permission of the kindly priests for whom I worked. Incidentally, I cast the horoscopes of many priests and they were generally pleased with my work. It may interest students to know that I find the 12th house is often tenanted by the ruler of the 10th, and also that Neptune plays a strong part in most horoscopes of priests.

The three zodiacs correspond with the Cabalistic foundations. The Supreme Being of the Cabala is called Ain, which means the boundless. From Ain emanates Ain Soph, Boundless Life, and from Ain Soph Aer, Boundless Light. These three are one essence entirely spiritual and from this concept was developed the doctrine of the Christian Trinity, of one Person in three Persons—One Life in three conditions of existing. In this symbolism the Primum Mobile is God the Father. The Christallium is God the Son, and the firmament is God the Holy Spirit. These are the Ouranus, Kronos, Zeus of the Greeks, and the Brahama, Vishnu, Shiva of the Hindus.

Within the body of the celestial Zeus are differentiated the seven parts of the world's Soul—a secondary order of Deities, the creators of the mundane or sublunary sphere. The seven planetary orbits are described in our symbol as the seven heavens. The spirits of the seven heavens are the Elohim of the ancient Jews, the seven Cabalas of Samothrace, and the Ammonian artificers of Egypt.

Pythagoras describes eight extensions of the soul of which seven are superphysical and relate to the planets; the eighth is entirely physical and is the power of generation and belongs to the Earth which is the eighth sphere of the ancients.

Beneath the orbits of the planets will be observed the sphere of the elements. The first is fire. Within the ring of fire is the abode of air, and within this circle is a little world made up of earth and water. This innermost part was called the garden of Eden, the abode of the first man. This explains the ancient belief that Eden was in the middle of the world. Eden simply signifies the elements of earth and water, or solidity and humidity.

The alchemists had much to say about this mysterious design which is the true and proper symbol of the Lapis Philosophorum, the Stone of the Philosophers. This is the Ruby Diamond, the living stone. This is likewise the true symbolism of Solomon's Temple. The orbits of the seven planets plus the orbits of the three heavens constitute the mystical number ten. This ten is the Tetractys of Pythagoras. From this arrangement it is possible to grasp the significance of the numbers in the ascending order of soul power. From this arrangement we can see why Pythagoras and most ancient peoples venerated the number four. It is the number of the Sun. Seven is the number of cosmic law which belongs to Saturn; Five, the number of the senses, to Mars; Six, the number of equilibrium, to Jupiter; Three, the number of harmony, to Venus; Two, the number of division, to Mercury, and One, the number of Life is assigned to the peculiar guardian of Life in the mundane world, the Moon.

The seven orbits of the planets are the seven strings of the Orphic Lyre and the seven pipes of Jupiter-Pan, the classical symbol of the Anima Mundi or World Soul. If the four spheres of the elements are added to this group the number fourteen develops. This number had a special veneration because it equalled the days of the increasing light of the Moon. If, as in this symbol, earth and water are united in one sphere the total number is thirteen instead of fourteen. Thirteen is the unfortunate number because according to religious symbolism thirteen sat together at the last supper and one betrayed his Lord. The thirteenth, the traitor, is the physical world which betrays, that is, aborts the energies of the Hierarchies.

In the Esoteric system the earth (matter) is not included among the orders of energy. It was viewed as a recipient of energy; therefore, if this thirteenth part is no longer regarded as a principle, twelve remains. The twelve are the twelve Hierarchies of the ancient scriptures, and the Hierarchies in turn are the signs of the celestial zodiac, the twelve active forces which operate upon the passive sphere of matter.

With this foundation of understanding we can continue in the next article a consideration of the esoteric significance of the parts of this magnificent scheme of cosmic manifestation.

The Year Ahead for PISCES

If You Were Born February 19 - March 20

As we get older and take to the practice of comparing one day, one month, one year of our lives with another, we begin to realize in perspective that the troubles or joys of each were not necessarily greater or less, just different. One joy, one trouble, merges into the next in such a way as to ease a certain pressure of experience while introducing our consciousness to a different one, that next in necessity.

And all the while we grow.

Did you ever notice that your pleasures and your problems tend to vary from the inner to the outer, or from external events to internal occurrences, and back again? You have, of course; and if you are an astrological student you know that the reason for this is that the transiting planets pass from their positions in positive signs or houses to tenantry of negative signs, or houses, and so on. When a major body is in a negative house or sign, you feel it in a more introspective way than when it passes through one of positive nature.

No one needs to tell you that for a good many years you have been feeling Neptune's vibrations in opposition aspect to your Sun, or in your 7th house in your Equilibrium chart. You have become very, very conscious of all this means. In fact, you are the one who can now do the telling to the rest of us. You know what emotional stretching and stirring you went through in your personal relations with other folks, particularly perhaps in marriage, or in business partnership, or just in trying to adjust yourself to your equals every day. You may know too that Neptune has retrograded back into your 7th, or Virgo, until August of this year, and that you are having some recurrence of these familiar experiences. But from August 3, 1943, on Neptune stays for a number of years in your 8th house. Or in other words, Neptune passes from a positive house, your 7th, into a negative house, your 8th, and your experiences under it change from external ones with other folks to experiences predominantly affecting you inwardly in a more introspective way.

Now you will begin to experience increasing susceptibility through your physical senses at the same time that you experience extra-sensory stimulation. Distinct intuitions, or hunches, will come to you involuntarily. You will note that you dream more, or more clearly. Your coming sex experiences will all tend to lead you to take a comparatively more spiritualized attitude toward sex; and some of these experiences will be out of the ordinary. You will notice, if you are consciously aware, that you incline toward terminating some of your present emotional habit patterns as time goes on, for the reason that your inner emotional concepts are refining. And you will be consciously aware, more and more, for you will live your emotional life more keenly but more privately. If, while Neptune stays here, your life includes experiences with physical death, it will strike you more keenly not just in an emotional way, but in a way that stirs you to analyze and digest its implications and overtones into your soul; something of great value comes to you through such experiences. It could be that you would be led into occult and philosophical subjects and attitudes toward life in this way, for the questions roused in your mind could be answered satisfactorily only in this way.

There will be some external experiences, too, of course: you will feel Neptune in your money affairs that involve other folks—business or marriage partnerships and their funds, or money from insurance, wills, legacies, trust funds, etc. You will feel it in the results of your human partnerships in character terms also, for Neptune in your 8th is in the natural 7th sign, Libra. You will feel it in your connection with the health of any brothers, sisters, or neighbors currently in your picture; in your contact with the mentalities of those who serve or look up to you; in your connection with the occupations of your friends; in the home experiences of any grown children of yours. And these external experiences will have something of the unusual about all of them.

For the whole of your year ahead Uranus and Saturn continue their passage through your 4th house, although they separate from their previous conjunction. You will continue to feel unsettled or dissatisfied with home conditions or persons; and will continue to meet sudden new conditions and the coming to a head of lingering conditions in your domestic world; all pointing, of course, toward ultimately improved future conditions when worked through. Old persons may enter your home; strangers may enter your home. While Uranus tenants here, your home itself will either be moved, or the present home changed, renovated, altered. Your real estate deals will move suddenly, or be extremely hard to move and gain through. You can develop new hobbies, avocations, practiced in your home. Old friends will have more influence in your domestic life. Gradually some ambition of yours will center around home or be dependent upon it. These vibrations will have an effect upon your relations with any parents surviving; to bring responsibilities your way, or changes. You will find that your relations with men in general, and with superiors too, will show the same typicalities, the same potential problems and responsibilities, the same quick or unexpected turns, the changes for the better. In the year ahead you will be well advised to do the sensible thing every time with no exceptions in the matter of your health; deny yourself the usual lapses from common sense, forego the unusually heavy exertion, make a point of avoiding exposure, and all types of risk through haste or carelessness. Relax your nerves particularly; one characteristic of this time will be a tendency to tighten up with worry, fears or doubts, dreads, suspicions, and because of a lack of organization of your efforts. The latter tendency toward scatteration will tear down your reserves of nerve tone.

Yet at the same time you will be experiencing another influence which will have a decidedly beneficial effect upon your physical well being. Both are in effect at once; both will be felt. Sometimes you will feel the difficult influences of Saturn-Uranus upon vitality; and then will feel the alternating influence of Jupiter moving into your 6th house, that of health—which Jupiter will do on July 1, 1943. It will be more possible for you to add to your physical reserves because of this position of Jupiter; although with Saturn square your Sun this would otherwise be hard to do. Jupiter in 6th alone will tend to fatten you, but the effect of the Saturn ray will offset this, and you may have periods of getting thinner alternating with periods of putting on weight—or possibly you will have to eat more and rest more in order to maintain what weight you now have.

This Jupiterian influence promises you some kind of forward movement in your career, occupation, jobs; comparatively more opportunity. The conditions under which you work, the surroundings you work in, the sort of fellow workers who surround you, and also the personalities of those you employ or direct as subordinates, will contribute more to you in the form of expansion, harmony, happiness, and some type of gain. Although by nature you are not what the world calls ambitious, you may feel comparatively more ambition in your work while Jupiter passes through this house. It will not be amiss for you to spruce up your personal appearance, put your best foot forward, and make yourself known to and noticed by your superiors—superiors being of many kinds, and meaning anyone who temporarily leads you, can confer benefits upon you, exercises authority over you, sets an example or pace to or for you, etc.

From now to April 17th, you continue to feel the vibrations of the planet Mars in your 12th house, giving you a constant sense of straining against your present limitations, both external and inward. You see more clearly what your visions should be, and also what is holding you back—in terms of external limitations such as finances and education, and also in terms of what you are not yet able to rise to as immediate objective. This straining toward bigger things will help you, as long as you don't let it become mere resentment of a static kind. Use it as motive to achieve.

From April 18th to May 27th Mars stirs you in ways others react directly to, for your personality takes on positiveness and more force, and you feel impelled to do things yourself, take initiative, start things, be active, lead others. You may even be called upon to do these things by apparently involuntary factors in your life. While the energy and vim thus added to your approach is excellent in general, any drive if not moderated can have the effect of pushing others away from you or antagonizing them, so be sure you don't transgress: it isn't your real nature. Three things you should avoid: wasting money actively but thoughtlessly, taking physical risk leading to accident, and involving yourself in frictions, undue costs, or bodily harm while travelling or away from home. Especially April 14-20, when Mars squares Uranus—keep away from machinery if possible, either en route or around your home. And guard secrets. This time is not favorable for starting new things of a financial, personal or domestic nature. April 25-May 2 Mars is square to Saturn, which looks like problems with friends, home folks, and elders, of a nature requiring that you compromise your personal will in favor of the wisdom of the situation—or the problems can harden, and linger. May 5-15 Mars forms a trine to Jupiter, which looks romantic for you, or more affectionate and demonstrative in love life, with you perhaps taking the initiative. It should stimulate your inventive or creative possibilities, and give you the incentive to do something with them in profitable ways, or more fruitful ones. Watch for some career opportunity; put yourself forward in places where it will do the most good. But May 14-26, while Mars is opposition Neptune, your contacts of a personal nature are subject to misunderstandings and unmeant offenses, to emotional reactions not clear or quite logical; and in personal finances and mutual moneys there will enter this same confusing element. Guard against trickery.

From May 28th to July 7th will be an active financial period with Mars moving through your 2nd house, bringing more outgo and more chance of income also. May 29-June 2 is a good time for looking into new ways to profit that may present themselves; or new ways to handle fixed assets, for Mars is sextile Uranus. Some quiet or confidential activity can benefit. June 15-20 with Mars sextile Saturn financial hopes of long standing can end in your favor if you are actively on the job and seeking conclusions. Listen to the advice, tips of friends, elders, and family members whose practical support can help you. But June 30-July 10, while Mars is square to Jupiter, don't invest in inflated ideas or propositions involving your work or ambitions, or connected with distance. Financial travel will prove costly; so investigate first without moving. And all through this stretch guard your health: take no risks: avoid indulgences.

From July 8th to August 24th your mental power will quicken and snap up with Mars in your 3rd house. But so may your tongue and your will, so remember to moderate what you say and the way you say it; and to compromise your personal ends. You will notice that you are more active and take a more positive role in your neighborhood and community life at this time, and the same with your close relatives. There may be more communicating to do, and more short trips to take. Aug. 14-25 Mars trines Neptune, and this time is the most positive and personally definite of the whole period for you. Go after your ideals in person; think out and adjust your plans and goals; seek the strength and the resources of others in behalf of your worthy efforts; and give some time and money to further developing and educating yourself. Favorable for pushing mutual money interests.

From August 25th to March 28, 1944, Mars stays on in your 4th house, turning retrograde and direct, but not leaving this one house. This looks like a heated and perhaps tense period for you, bringing some domestic situation to a head, perhaps stirring up friction between yourself and family members. It also looks as though there would be necessity for you to be unusually busy and active in your home, doing more work than usual. It will be wise to be sure your home, and your other assets of a fixed nature, are properly insured or otherwise cared for. It is possible that this stretch will bring your brothers or sisters-in-law more into your family life; and that persons from other locations will appear in your home. Domestic costs may rise.

During this entire time use your fore-

March, 1943, Opportunities

For those born Mar. 21-Apr. 19

Dear Aries:

This is a friendly, hopeful month for you, with a sense of more personal adequacy and appeal for others. The first three weeks give you a chance to show others the attractive, magnetic side of your personality; the last week brings you some form of personal power and authority, and comparative eloquence.

You will find yourself the center of activities in your own neighborhood or community, and with your friends and neighbors. There is something new to be forwarded, some start to make, some ideal to accomplish. The first thirteen days stress this, and are good for taking the initiative and stirring others up to what should be accomplished. Then from the 9th to 17th (overlapping) there come chances to make such activities permanent and solid, to appeal to those of influence, of long residence, or of weight of years, in your locality. Your own hopes for yourself, and for your record in life, is involved. Your reputation gains.

1-2 be alert for a career-finance opportunity coming through an older person, especially a woman, met; or through a younger person of old fashioned slant. 1-6 some quiet, confidential, or secret benefit or pleasure appears in connection with your home or love life; during these days your superiors will be for you behind the scenes. Pay attention to your own hunches, and to word from a distance. 6-9 you are inclined to spend too freely; others met incite you to extravagance; some home demand drains finances. But 16-20 some idea or plan of your own or of those in close environment promises gain and benefit, perhaps confidentially.

The folks you meet this month on a basis or equality will support and help you in the first 9 days, forwarding your hopes, offering alliance, helping you aspire to your ideals. But from 13th on there appears to be some, confusion, negative feeling, misunderstandings in the picture: you do not get quite the same cooperation.

For those born Apr. 20-May 20

Dear Taurus:

There seems to be a good deal going on quietly this month, some of which you know all about, and some of which you don't. Generally speaking, your personality and personal concerns come out more into the light in the last week of the month, and you find yourself better liked and more able to make good impressions.

All month your human relations are the key to placidity and well being or just the reverse. 1-9 presents you with an opportunity to do some active reconciling of quiet opponents, in which your beliefs and philosophies or religions will help; and to obtain active cooperation from friends, fellow workers, inferiors and your mate in regard to forwarding your long range hopes and plans. 1-6 within this period brings your way some benefit through a friendly superior, or through some one in close environment or met locally: try to conclude the matter in these days. 8-11 friends and loved ones should not tempt you into new moves in occupation or finance; consider but temper. 12-15 these same persons seem involved in some career-money disappointment or burden; get perspective and wait. From 13th to 28th emotional secrecy or some hidden situation can roll up into human problems involving friends, superiors and inferiors, and those with whom you work; still, within this period is another 16-20 which can bring a money or local opportunity attributable to your own good judgment or a hunch or idea.

7-13 looks like the most favorable time of your month to start, or forward, new propositions, especially those of career or money. While 9-17 is the time to push ahead old interests in these departments, and to actively ally yourself with older persons influential in your finances or ambitions.

After the 9th it will seem harder not to differ with or alienate others, who may seem to you to be too forceful or bossy or unreasonable; and to whom you may seem the same. Quiet enmities can spring up.

March, 1943, Opportunities

For those born May 21-June 20

Dear Gemini:

For the first 17 days you will be conscious of an active urge to replan and reorganize your personal activities of both past origin and current. You will feel something stirring in your mind that prompts you to see things in a larger way, and stirs desire to bring this vision concretely nearer. There could be some question of travel in the early part of your month in behalf of your hopes and work. But like the whole of your March, this stretch too is characterized by conflicting vibrations.

1-2 look to loved ones, friends reappearing from the past, old fashioned women, for benefit. 1-6 is opportune financially and in occupation, some benefit through a superior. 6-9 neither friends nor those loved will have good influence upon nor good advice regarding money; they could cause expense. Others met in these days stimulate you to too much financial confidence. Yet 2-13 (note overlap) promises some change to advance through a new personal proposition or slant, involving your own original talents, or your loved ones or friends. 8-11 (again note overlap) shows errors of judgment in picking the right new moves of a personal nature, causing new things to end badly. 12-15 looks like a personal obstacle or set back connected with plans for occupation or ambition, perhaps stemming from your past. Yet 9-17 will bring an opportunity to broaden old interests, and perhaps some benefit through the offered strengths and resources of others.

From the 13th on emotions in love life become confused. And it is possible that your reputation could be dimmed through some situation arising from this. Watch your personal reactions to superiors 13-23 and don't let feelings get in the way of your prospects. 23-28 emotional factors in home life or love life seem to upset occupation.

During the days between 16-20 be alert for career benefit and financial too through some one you meet who has influence. Push your plans in these days.

For those born June 21-July 22

Dear Cancer:

There seems to be opportunity this month for you to get ahead in your career, or occupation, or in your reputation in the eyes of the world. Part of this opportunity comes through secret sources, or in connection with your private accomplishments or reserves; part of it comes through women, your home folks, loved ones, and persons younger than yourself.

Your March vibrations are distinctly mixed and conflicting; at one and the same time you feel a good and a difficult stimulation. 1-2, some one met means confidential support in occupation—perhaps a woman, an elder, or an old fashioned type. Be alert for tips through this one. 1-6, financial opportunity through featuring your personality in work, with superiors, and with those en route, afar, or connected with distributing or education. 6-9, you are likely to place too much value on tentative opportunity showing up through a friend, in connection with home, or in occupational surroundings—don't be overconfident. 2-13 something new happens inside you: perhaps you realize your own secret processes more, perhaps you free yourself of a complex. Good days to make new decisions regarding mutual finances and occupation; OK too for putting reforms in love life into effect. 9-17 straighten out those factors in your past which now show up again, perhaps through some one you meet, perhaps through your mate or in your love life; you can reconcile a quiet enemy of long standing if you make enough effort. 16-20 an idea or hunch of yours, or a message received from other spots, benefits you. These are good days for adding to your education and knowledge. But 13-28 you will need to reconsider impulses connected with your home and occupation, or with travel, for there will be something not seen clearly, because of the state of your feelings at the time. Careful, and tactful, with superiors.

From the 22nd your friendships net you more happiness.

March, 1943, Opportunities

For those born July 23-Aug. 22

Dear Leo:

From the 9th of your March and on you will begin to notice that it seems folks you meet get you stirred up more than usual, yet you don't begin the contact in that frame of mind, but with enthusiasm and a cooperative feeling. Check yourself to find out whether you have unconsciously given an impression of wanting to teach and guide too much. If you can adjust this stimulation, from then on you will find others catching this enthusiasm and entering with you into mutual efforts that benefit both, and that will end well.

It is a fact that practically every day through March you will be feeling pulled two ways, because of varying vibrations felt simultaneously, making it a choppy month. From 1st to 13th is good in general for meeting new people, making new friends, especially in working surroundings, and for instituting new departures in work and in partnerships; you will be able to see farther ahead at this time. Yet 8-11 shows mistaken judgment in all new things, conflicting with the first influence. 9-17 in general is good for bringing old situations and interests to conclusions, in your favor, especially connected with work and friends; yet 12-15 some obstacle or disappointment through these very things appears. 1-6 favors harmony and happiness in private emotional life and enhances your magnetic qualities for others. But 6-9 could lead to mistaken emotional commitments, misplaced generosity, some secret excess. 16-20 is again favorable for happiness through emotions; friends are more attractive. This stretch is also good for making and carrying out plans to better your mutual and personal finances and your confidential interests, in all of which friends will be able to help. From 13th to 28th a secret emotional concern looks troubling and your mind works on it; but since what you feel is the strongest, don't trust first judgments implicitly, but think it over.

From the 22nd your popularity in occupational surroundings rises.

For those born Aug. 23-Sept. 22

Dear Virgo:

March will be a physically active month for you. More work, and more thinking and making decisions in work, will be required of you. It is possible that this will eventuate in some definite terminations or new lines for you; or reorganization of those existing.

March brings also the necessity to compromise with others, and to see more of their side, some of which may have been unknown to, or kept from, you.

The first 17 days make occupational discrimination necessary to your getting ahead, for opposing influences stir you. 1-13 you feel actively impelled to make changes; you see new ways things could be done better; new lines suggest themselves, new faces seem more promising, you have new ideas. The time is right to go ahead with these, except during the days between 8-11, when an influence is in force which disturbs your accuracy and sense of proportion; the decisions you make may not be comprehensive or mature. From 9th to 17th conclude and clear away maturing old interests and plans in work and occupation, be definite in dealings with elders, bring maturing creative gifts into work. But 12-15 shows some impediment in these very matters, which must be worked through with patience.

1-6 and 16-20 are times to push for conclusions in connection with law, your fixed assets, home matters, and friendships. Other folks you meet now will be disposed to help you. Use these days to work with your mate in the matter of your mutual hopes.

From 6th to 9th be especially practical with your money and assets if wide, long range propositions appear, especially through friends, younger persons, or women. 13-28 is particularly impractical; you may encounter carelessness or even fraud and dishonesty from others; or their advice may be merely mistaken. This is a time to be on the alert in legal matters, to know all the facts. From 22nd on you can appeal more to others, can be more in demand.

March, 1943, Opportunities

For those born Sept. 23-Oct. 23

Dear Libra:

There will come certain attractions to other people this month; you will notice that you are more sympathetic and receptive, more impressionable. And that others seem to find you more appealing too. Situations will demand that you be more with others, and that your efforts depend upon their co-operation, and theirs upon yours.

Yet your March shows a good many cross currents, of a minor nature however. Taking them in order, there's 1-2, good days to terminate past factors in relations with others, and to seek conclusions in old interests, especially of mutual nature. 1-6 is quite favorable for having dealings with superiors who influence your work, occupation, career, ambitions: try to establish a friendly footing, bring your education and ideas to their attention. A career opportunity could show up through here. But 6-9 be discreet in career and with your reputation; some impetuosity or overconfidence threatens—perhaps others met sway you unwisely. 1-13, which of course includes former influences, is favorable generally for starting new interests, making new plans, which have large scope or involve distance, and your original talents. This stretch encourages you to turn over new leaves in your love life and relations with others who are your equals—some new attitude could bring more happiness. But note that 8-11 is unfavorable for these same new starts, making these days conflicting. Then 9-17 is generally good for taking the initiative in domestic and love life situations which stem from the past and need action; also for seeking ends favorable to you in old interests of wide nature. Yet 12-15 is unfavorable for this; so pick your way. 16-20 either an idea of your own, or something you find which had not been known, aids your work-career progress. The entire period 13-28 hints some emotional maladjustment with another, a problem over secrets, or misunderstanding.

The last week of the month a friendly alliance with a superior is promising.

For those born Oct. 24-Nov. 22

Dear Scorpio:

Your feelings get all stirred up this month, and if you know yourself well that will mean something definite to you. It will mean that relaxing and discounting will be your month's attitude, deliberately adopted. From the 9th on you would otherwise appear too forceful, would cut off your own benefits by rousing antagonisms.

And besides, all through your March you will note that your influences come in pairs, of different nature at the same time, making it interesting to react to the right one. The first 17 days held such conflict. On the whole, they are promising for doing the necessary in the matter of your past as against your future: either you will want to break off and start anew, or circumstances may seem to force your hand. (Remember to relax and discount.) 1-13 a new factor appears in work and in home matters: the change can be favorable, except when the conflicting vibrations of 8-11 are in effect. Avoid these days for deciding when the matter is new. Then 9-17 brings to a head things in your past which are either only in your own mind, or are consciously a secret. These days are generally good for taking an active attitude and tackling such things; yet 12-15 is not good, making another conflict. Be more than usually considerate of and tactful with older folks through this.

1-6 favors your interests related to career, relations with superiors, distance interests, and your love life: a pleasure or chance to benefit hovers around you. This stretch is good for necessary travel. But 6-9 looks distinctly costly or extravagant where distance or travel are concerned, and in connection with work: other folks may give you losing advice, secret tips which only cost money. 16-20, however, your friends and persons involved with you in mutual money interests are sources of financial opportunity.

The entire stretch from 13th through to 28th brings you the keen and sensitive but confused feelings mentioned for this month.

March, 1943, Opportunities

For those born Nov. 23-Dec. 21

Dear Sagittarius:

This month ought to contain some pleasure for you. Even your work can seem more pleasurable than usual, and afford you more outlet for the original things you really like to do.

In minor and perhaps repeated ways, you become more active and busy from the 9th. There will be calls upon you of a local nature, and in connection with persons in your closer environment. Your mind develops original ideas. Some of your private avocations or interests, your artistic and creative gifts, get stirred up and used. Favorable for study, seeking more education.

The first 17 days see you coming up against situations with other persons which cause you to make decisions that alter these relations. Here, as all month, there are conflicting vibrations. 1-13 shows new contacts, new attractions to others, new mental understandings of others, and new stars made through them; yet if possible avoid the days between 8-11 for these, for vibrations then are unfavorable. And while 9-17 is generally favorable for clinching with lingering situations, or persons who reappear with problems, or elders involved with your finances, yet 12-15 is not: some factor will require your patience and responsibility.

In a personal way, the first six days may turn out to be the best of your month. They contain opportunity in connection with distance, or means of getting there or hearing; with your home and fixed assets; and with mutual moneys. It will pay better if you deliberately show a little skeptical practicality before embracing what comes. Another good personal stretch will be 16-20, affording some chance connected with occupation, assets, and other folks who ally with you. But 6-9 looks like an opportunity it is hoped you won't accept to create embarrassing situations or regrets for yourself in love life, with friends, and in connection with your work; the tendency is extremes.

All the way from 13th to 28th the home situation must be calmed down.

For those born Dec. 22-Jan. 19

Dear Capricorn:

Financial outlay looks likely this month; from the 9th on especially. Outlay of your fixed assets in behalf of some hope, possibly. But it won't be all outlay; the indications are for more active income too.

This is a month when all your experiences force you to get straight in your mind what you believe in; and then live up to it. One experience after another brings your latent attitudes, your secret reactions, your inner complex, to the forefront of your conscious mind where you make decisions.

1-2 some personal pleasure in home, at work, with elders or folks from your past appears. 1-6 some one you meet, or a partner, is the cause of your experiencing an inner sensation of growth, expansion, and harmony; perhaps of your ridding yourself of a secret, or a secret limitation. Strong time for making allies, and for pushing forward your local interests and your mutual financial interests. 6-9 looks extravagant, or impractical, in home and occupation, so keep your fixed assets intact, even if others try to sway you, or if pleasure tempts. 16-20 is good for sharing and discussing your religion, philosophy, belief, and knowledge with others you contact at this time, especially those who look up to you. These days can be good for travel, but note overlapping influences before deciding.

1-13 brings a chance to change something in your financial and work picture for the better. It will bring the same opportunity in regard to your home life; and in your friendships. Don't meet these influences with preconceived biases or prejudices, but with a receptive, adaptable mind, ready to move forward. Except 8-11, which has a conflicting influence, showing poor judgment in new matters. 9-17 is generally equally good for finishing up old financial matters, old work interests, old relations with inferiors; yet there is a conflicting influence here too, 12-15, so think twice then.

13-28 threatens occupation, ambitions, reputation, because of some emotional state.

March, 1943, Opportunities

For those born Jan. 20-Feb. 18

Dear Aquarius:

You seem liable to a good deal of exertion, challenge, initiative, and even clashes this month, from the 9th on. Your sense of independence and leadership is strong; you want to do the deciding personally. And unless this is in excess, it will be something standing you in good stead in your March.

The first 17 days provide the most opportunity of personal nature. From 1st to 13 there comes a chance to make a personal change directly connected with your love life; and it may be that new attractions appear too. In occupation these days are opportune for making use of your original, inventive, mental side, for taking initiative to press your personal claims, and for looking over new possibilities. But there is a conflicting influence 8-11 which makes these days dubious unless you are selective. Then 9-17 brings you stimulus to look over your personal and emotional past and actively clear away attitudes, situations, burdens, about ready to go. Some person from your past can appear again. These days are good for making practical your creative side. But not 12-15 as much, for another conflicting influence exists then.

Some inability to keep your decisions organized will be with you 13-28; this stretch looks like confusion in distant interests, community affairs, travel, communication, and finances. But not all of it will be external; there is some emotional pressure inside you too. Persons you contact now do not seem practical or logical; they misunderstand or mislead you. This is a time to be quite careful of law.

1-6 is favorable in your financial and work pictures. Good for having dealings with superiors, and for obtaining support and good advice from others. 16-20 is another such stretch: promote financial plans both of personal nature and regarding mutual finances. But 6-9 your visions are too impractical and will prove too costly, especially of your fixed assets.

From 22nd more pleasure in home.

For those born Feb. 19-Mar. 20

Dear Pisces:

Happy birthday to you.

It looks as though your birthday month would end by freeing you of some inner restriction; as though some thinking you do, some perspective that comes, some reading, or comparing of beliefs, would result in considerable inward gain and sense of freedom.

But outwardly in relations with others, you may find the latter half of March tense, or quite confusing. Those you are in contact with, including your mate or partners, may seem to oppose you in some illogical or merely emotional way. From the 13th to the 28th this will be in effect. You will feel more positive, direct, capable and executive than usual, yet surprise yourself at times by yielding to sheer emotion of a kind you don't countenance. Obviously, this will not be a good time to try to be practical with legal matters, so postpone.

It will be in the days between 1st and 13th that the main chance will come to free yourself by making a change and moving forward. Except for 8-11, which has a negative and conflicting influence, go ahead and see what you can gain by direct action and decision of a new kind. Make domestic changes, and financial changes, that prove sound. Consider opportunities connected with distance. Be alone when you can, for some inward flash of insight will reveal a lot about yourself to you, and this will lead to betterment. Then 9-17 try to bring your private activities, your old hopes and wishes, any domestic situations lingering, to a conclusion that favors you. It can be done, with the exception of 12-15, which looks disappointing.

1-6 can mean personal happiness in love life, more pleasure, increase of creative talent, and an opportunity to better occupation and relations with superiors. 16-20 the same, if you will speak up in your own interests and cultivate persons met at this time. But 6-9 shows financial drain through pleasure, gambling or through the influence of loved ones.

Business: Watch legal angle and keep strictly in mind the needs of superiors and patrons. Influential people may seem unreasonable—try to postpone or temporize. Late afternoon and evening show improvement in buying and selling.

Love and Romance: Someone may feel thwarted or non-magnetic in morning, with accusations or grudges. Better mid-afternoon to mid-evening for romance, or affectional sympathy. The steady reassurance wins.

Health: Don't be alarmed at morning glandular activities; don't overestimate strength in pm. All day: go easy with skin ailments. Defer operations to knees or to any of the joints of the main bones.

Hospitality: Choose familiar, conservative entertaining rather than the ambitious type on this date. Don't try too much. Invite superiors, older guests and dependable, accustomed people; look up former contacts, renew them. Food: sensible, homey, or old fashioned.

Advising All Signs for Today

For Aries: During morning hours others may tempt you to undue extravagance of personal nature. You may incline to take the line of least resistance. Bring career and domestic plans to maturity and take advice from elders, superiors, or influential persons in am. From mid-afternoon bring out into the open your creative efforts of the past—they can win approval. Affectional matters in the foreground all this eve. Be happy.

For Taurus: Subordinate your personality to your work. Events of the day may not be of your making nor quite to your liking, but you will be comforted by things which are truly your own; and later in the day close friends and associates will offer support. Some extravagance may arise in regard to your mutual moneys—you are feeling the need for spending or travelling. Eve: Spend it quietly with inferiors, elders.

For Gemini: You are emotional, disconcerted this am. You will do well to steady your relations with friends. Matters of personal and mutual money are confusing during the morning hours. Later consult with superiors concerning finances. There is necessity for practical balance. Evening: be with old friends. Get advice on money. You feel too susceptible, too impressionable. So use self control.

For Cancer: Those whom you may meet this morning do not harmonize too well with folks at home, and in occupational surroundings. Something is maturing beneath the surface which can be made to count to your advantage. During the morning you find yourself discontented with women, younger persons. But from mid-afternoon you appeal to other sex. Eve: be with others of serious, well informed type.

For Leo: The day offers opportunity to bring to a focus old and long range plans; this can be accomplished through practical friends. You may be interfered with because of health conditions during morning hours. A message from a distance serves to brighten the work picture. Opportunity for you personally from mid-afternoon. Affectional matters which you might prefer to keep to yourself may show. Eve: don't lose poise.

For Virgo: The resources and strength of others can advance your ambitions. Let affectional affairs ride—am is not the time to force culminations. There may be temptations to take financial plunges but these do not promise to turn out well. Late afternoon and evening may be profitably spent with partner or those loved in social, pleasurable activities, among friends, or quietly. Mutual efforts turn out well if kept practical.

For Libra: The effects of personal past can be pleasantly brought to you by persons met on this date. Your own subtle charm is enhanced by contact with others, but beware of flattery in the am. All day and eve don't promise or spend unduly. Careful of investments. Home folks, friends, offer personal service after morning hours. From mid-afternoon entertain coworkers in the home. Be generous with inferiors.

For Scorpio: You receive good advice today—from those who serve, or are in close environment. Immediate working associates tempt you to shirk in the morning. Stay on the job—what you want well done, do yourself. Pay bills promptly lest you fritter away the money on little things. Today is extravagant. Thought devoted to creative efforts pays good dividends from mid-afternoon. Spend the evening with loved ones.

For Sagittarius: Finish whatever creative work or plans for loved ones you may have begun. You will find more satisfaction in habits, the past, today. Guard against undue expenditures—especially where finances of partner or mate are concerned. Some unpleasantness may arise over such matters in the early part of the day. Come to understanding with home folks from mid-afternoon. Eve: be hospitable to travellers.

For Capricorn: A good day to clean up postponed work at home or in occupation. Make permanent improvements. Partners, those met, will not be practical, but your steadier personality will help. It will be easier to finish things than to begin them. Spend a pleasant evening with neighbors, or in study and reading. Don't be too generous to appeals from others. Charity not as good as encouragement.

For Aquarius: Old plans laid privately better be kept there for the am: but thereafter push for conclusions. Morning shows self indulgence behind the scenes. But from mid-afternoon confidential factors serve your financial interests and offer opportunity. Others met benefit. Evening favorable for quiet contemplation of inner values. Friends, inferiors, are impractical. You be the deflator in common sense way.

For Pisces: Friends and loved ones are poor advisors today. Money spent on home and family can bring satisfaction. In the morning your wants may outstrip your assets—discretion will help judgment. From mid-afternoon contacts with friendly financial superiors look favorable. Eve: don't exaggerate attractions. Old home, neighborhood, habits bring pleasure. Romantic commitments should be conservative.

Favorable for bringing to public notice your ideas and ideals. Show more of what you really are.

For Aquarius: This is not the day for bringing out those enterprising ideas you have been nursing in private. Work quietly but actively toward occupational goals. Eve is good for seeking popularity among your followers. After 11 pm careful in romance.

For Virgo: Others' influence in money affairs, your own or that of partners, can bring complications. Your financial judgment is not quite up to par. Ambition, love life, is made more solid by widened perspectives: encourage ambitions of loved ones. Though you may be inclined toward secrecy with others, you will be better off to have all cards on the table between you. Break the evening up by 11 pm if possible.

For Libra: Not wise today to trust too much to your own judgment nor to that of others encountered. You are inclined to deceive yourself because of lack of clear vision, or secret reactions. Don't be too touchy, imaginative, with others: take a little time to study out situations. Use of past experience will save you a lot. Those who are older, or from past, favor you tonight. Careful in immediate environment if you are up late.

For Scorpio: Things unknown, hidden factors, unacknowledged motives, play a prominent part. Secrets require unraveling. Some misunderstanding with friends or some one loved looms if either refuses frankness. Let others give their own practical good counsel—they have steadiness you lack. Evening looks like out of proportion—tangles with inferiors or friends—also in romance. Make an effort to see clearly. Retire early.

For Sagittarius: You may misjudge what you want today. These are unclear yearnings; emotional guests do not turn out well—no matter how envisioned. Service to others—especially to those older than yourself—brings lasting friendship from them. Strive to make alliances, partnerships, more binding. Best to retire early if possible on this date. Later eve: nothing imagined, hoped for, will be entirely satisfactory, nor turn out well.

For Capricorn: Postpone efforts to gain wider scope for aspirations, or in local environment. Work done quietly will be your better bet. Recognition of undue restlessness will help with perspective. Do all you can for those you love—older people especially. If you are up late tonight be careful not to get into argument and misunderstanding. Watch reputation. Family members touchy. Seek pleasures with loved ones, inferiors.

For Aquarius: Guard against being too fastidious or touchy with neighbors, those loved, close relatives—don't allow misconceptions. Conserve finances—not the day to spend for whim or pleasure. Something can be done to solidify your place in home and among loved ones. Plans for the evening are apt to be expensive and not likely to turn out as you thought. Late: don't travel to see friends—home, public amusements, best.

For Pisces: You may be restless and hardly know what is the matter. Do not be swayed by others met in financial matters. These are deceptive. Home folk, close relatives, neighbors, and those in immediate environment are practical and can help with responsibilities. Friendships prove more satisfactory. Make use of earlier evening; be with old friends, older family members. Public activities in later eve hours not favored.

In afternoon and evening, give plenty of thought to sales, advertising, pleasing patrons, understanding higher-ups, writings, contracts.

Love and Romance: In the morning either or both may be tempted to overplay their hands, risking surfeit. Not wise, either, to promise more than is meant. The rest of the day, from noon through this evening, settles down and brings out the steadier qualities of each. See in each other the enduring things. Good for uncovering, confession.

deepest of scholars whose labors yielded the inspiration that only intense dedication and application to a purpose can produce. That the purpose was the creation of a nation to carry the burden of the world's future leadership is amply attested in even these brief quotations, as well as in voluminous writings and occult symbols connected with our national seal, our flag, and the events and personalities which produced the Declaration of Independence.

Money

The Colonel has made several large fortunes, but right now has lost practically everything, though there seems to be a chance for him to begin all over again and make more money.

Whether he originally inherited anything from his mother's side of the family this writer does not know (Venus is in the 8th and the Moon rules this house), but judging from what the Colonel has said, the impression left was that he inherited nothing.

His money was made politically and through law, big corporations, famous clients. Look at the 9th house (politics): Mercury, Sun, Saturn and Part of Fortune. The Sun is conjunct Regulus, the fixed star, which lifts one up, but also throws one down too. Sun is trine to Jupiter in Sagittarius.

Like Jay Gould and Dorothy Di Frasso, he has Uranus in the 10th. Saturn rules the 2nd and is also up in the 9th, trine to Jupiter. Saturn ruling the second and in a fiery sign, no fixed sign on the 2nd, made it somewhat difficult for him to hang on to what he had. A case pending in which he most probably will be successful will no doubt bring him a chance at Fortune's wheel again. For Saturn is in a fixed sign, Leo, and Jupiter by transit will go over Saturn, Sun, and, a year later, his midheaven.

Neptune in the 6th (work): he has been the victim of some deceit practiced on him. Uranus in the 10th has made his career variable; it is square Venus.

The fixed Star Regulus is identified with Field Marshals and other high positions in the army, so no doubt the Colonel will get a promotion soon and keep on going places.

All of these charts will bring students some pleasant hours to do research on their own, offering many aspects and interesting transits which we have not the time or space to take up here.

thought to keep out of situations that might result in physical accident or threat to you.

There are three periods included here which may seem to force changes in this department of your life, while Mars conjuncts Uranus. And while these new factors may appear suddenly you don't have to react to them or decide them that way—take your time and make the wise decision, instead. The periods are: Aug. 23-Sept. 10, Dec. 1-30, and Jan. 11-17, 1944. Almost anything but what you have and are will look better to you at these times, making you impatient and restless, not only with yourself but with those surrounding you. Moving on is not bad, but the way you choose to do it may be. Be sure it isn't just your inner resentment of limitations, or some boiling secret you hold, that urges you; be sure the new thing is good in itself.

Two periods with Mars conjunct Saturn will be felt: Sept. 30-Oct. 28, and Feb. 12-Mar. 7, 1944. Impatience with routine, with older folks, with old and familiar friends, the family members, is stirred; and if you stay thoughtfully poised, this could result in your getting rid of factors that merely burden—perhaps character factors in these folks. But don't be forceful or unjust. Remember you will be feeling touchy all through this stretch. In the days between Feb. 29 and Mar. 5 (Mars sextile Jupiter) there will be more tolerance and generosity in your attitude; reconcile antagonistic situations then.

foot (Sagittarius). The mind accustomed to astrological speculations cannot proceed far without having born in upon it the large correspondences between nature working through physical things and nature working through the zodiacal signs. Each sign criticizes the others either for not having similarity of bent, or for having dissimilarity of bent. But nature will teach us that the attributes and missions of every sign are part of a complete whole, making each equally necessary. Nature, which is perfectly systematic, justifies Capricorn—but does not thereby condemn Aquarius, for nature is also insistent upon change. Nature's balanced grace and loveliness stands back of Libra, but does not thereby imply criticism of Virgo's responsibility for keeping track of the working details, for this too is a proven prerogative of nature's. The boundless generosity (Leo) and largesse (Sagittarius) of nature does not mean that there is no counterpart in nature's processes for collecting (Taurus). Nature is fruitful and cherishes (Cancer) but in it is also the violence which destroys in order to clear away (Aries). In nature are the processes of degeneration, death, rebirth and regeneration, begetting (Scorpio); constant and never ending motion (Gemini); and a solitariness which is not aloneness (Pisces). None cancels another; none challenges the rest.

There is an elephant bigger than astrology.

our mind, and hadn't considered the possibility of taking the asked advice. We encountered, of course, a certain amount of self pleasing, for all the friendliness. And we always wondered if this wouldn't be the last time, each time our subject didn't know his—or her—own mind and yet seemed to respond to some instinct which conveniently, or miraculously, nudged towards the right choice.

Eventually we had a look at the home, and perhaps the office, of this person. If our subject was a woman, we found the expected evidence of her ingenuity in her kitchen or housekeeping aids and system. If a man, we were treated to a heterogeneous assortment of most ingenious "gimmicks," self invented of course. Some of these ways of overcoming physical problems, increasing comfort, or obtaining novelty were admirable, some curious, and some just humorous. Over the latter we knew we could count upon our subject to have as much fun as we did, so we had no hesitancy in laughing outright. Yes, he had Uranus strong—he laughed too.

astrologer is therefore entitled to sound warnings when certain characteristics appear, as in the case of Mr. B of this illustration; the astrologer is also entitled to analyze the character by means of astrology's laws and in the light of present social standards (or lack of them) and modern unenlightened views of life to ascribe mistakes, errors and sins that have been put in evidence as related to the character shown by the horoscope of the individual.

Next month we will take up more of the characteristics of the celestial factors to be found in every horoscope.

Murder

of birth, but on her birthday very early in the morning at her birthplace, the Moon was leaving the square to Neptune and the opposition to Venus—a passed aspect which was stimulated to action through her natal Uranus. Her Moon is approaching the square to Uranus, and his Saturn fell in conjunction with her Uranus—in her mental third!

It is further interesting to note that the Key Cycle of St. Louis on that date showed the ruler of the 8th at the 10th—indicating a prominent death. The influence of Mars and Neptune, which have been so strongly in evidence throughout this entire study, persists in the location Key Cycle, for Neptune is in the house of death (8th) and Mars, in the 8th sign, is ruler of the midheaven and in the same sign near it.

The foregoing considerations have led us to attempt a speculative horoscope of Dr. K., as reproduced herewith. The reasons for considering this his possible horoscope are: Moon ruling 8th, one of the interpretations of which is death at the hands of a woman; Moon at the midheaven, ruling the 8th, shows a famous death; Jupiter ruling the chart shows a tendency toward following a professional career; Moon at midheaven in exact trine to Saturn in its own sign, Capricorn, indicates public work connected with the bony structure of the body (among other things), for Moon rules public and Saturn and Capricorn both have much to do with the bones. This chart is well reflected in the Key Cycle of the place at the time of his death, for the Moon, his ruler of death, was transiting the KC 8th, house of death. The transiting Moon, ruling his death, was on the 7th KC cusp (opponents) in exact square to his natal Mars, planet of violence. Neptune, ruler of the end of his life (4th), was transiting the 8th KC. His natal ascendant (if this speculative moment is correct) was being transited by three planets, including the ruler of KC 8th, in KC midheaven. Saturn and Uranus were in exact conjunction at the 4th, end of life—Saturn from his chart and Uranus from hers being in conjunction in her solar Equilibrium.

The transits at time of death in this speculative nativity of his are also significant. His natal ruler, Jupiter, was transiting natal 8th, in conjunction with that Mars-Neptune conjunction of the murderer; and Neptune, ruler of his natal 4th, end of life, was at the midheaven, indicating public notice of his passing.

Nothing has been said here of the possible added motives, of which our correspondent says there were none brought to light at the inquest. There are several indications, however, that there might have been more relationship between murderer and victim than was evident at that time, as the discerning student will ferret out by diligent application of the laws of the Equilibrium.

The speculative nativity here submitted is not offered as scientific demonstration; it is presented as an attempt to reconstruct unknown facts from those that are known. But there is more than ample scientific demonstration here, disregarding all speculative work entirely, that shows the working of astrological law through the minds and bodies of human beings. Dozens of undeniable astronomical and news facts have been linked together here; dozens more could be brought out. When will science look more deeply into life through the microscope of astrology? The method is plain and rigid. All that is needed is the scientist who will investigate sincerely.

HOW TO UNDERSTAND YOUR BIBLE

By Manly Palmer Hall

A PHILOSOPHER'S INTERPRETATION OF OBSCURE AND PUZZLING PASSAGES

The Christian Bible is the greatest book in English literature. But like most other great books, it must be approached with understanding, gentleness, impersonality, and a sincere desire to find truth. All the great faiths of the world are parts or fragments of the Ancient Wisdom. It has been difficult for human beings to accept this truth, and for lack of inter-religious understanding there has been very little religious understanding.

Historically the Bible is of little value. If we consider the Gospel account in the light of comparative religion, we shall find that there is very little contained therein not to be found in other great religious systems. It is also important to remember that nearly every personality described or discussed in the Bible is primarily a symbol and not an historical individual. It is a great mistake to believe that there is great spiritual virtue in the perpetuation of history or the worship of ancestors.

To Peter, Christ was God, justified by the doctrine and demonstrated by the miracles. Peter questioned nothing; and from his undoubting acceptance descended the Church of Christ, built upon his name, believing without questioning. Paul realized that it was not Jesus who walked the dusty roads of Syria but the "Christ in you" that is the "hope of glory." He realized that Christ is a principle and not a man, that Jesus had come to "bear witness" for that principle. Paul sought to honor the teacher by honoring the teaching.

Pick YOUR Astrologer

WHEN YOU NEED legal, educational advice and help, go to the top! Eventually you would be forced to anyway—and in the meantime you waste time, temper and money. No service is cheap if it is inferior; it's always costly in the end. It doesn't satisfy you. It doesn't give you the service you want; it leaves out things that are important to you; its reasoning and knowledge are poor. All this is doubly true of inferior horoscope services, of which, frankly, there are some offered at prices you can pay without thinking twice of the expense.

PEOPLE as individuals are one thing. People in contact with each other are something else. Think of someone you know—what a poor showing he makes with one certain friend, yet how brilliant and attractive he is when with another. Yet he's the same person in both cases, isn't he? The explanation is available: something happens to us when our horoscopes feel the horoscopes of others. And this mutual chemistry takes place every time we are in contact with people, although we may feel very different when we're alone.

You can look up everyone you ever knew and everyone you ever will know. You can use your Comparison Service right up to the last day of your life. You SHOULD use it every day you live.

Anyone born between 1870 and 1940 can be looked up in this Service. It is based, not on your Sun sign only, but on the individual positions of your nine planets. And on the individual positions of the planets in the chart of the person you are looking up, too. Use it for one person or a thousand; for anyone whose birth day and year you know.

There are certain people you can't very well avoid, to whom you are in duty bound—in-laws, for instance, relatives, children. But you can manage these everyday contacts better, if you know where the basic cause of friction lies. Look these persons up in your Service; then start out anew with better understanding.

Your Comparison Service is written in plain, definite terms. It leaves you nothing to do but refer to the correct pages. You do not need to know any astrology to make use of it.

Every young person about to face life should have this Service; why not ensure the progress and happiness of those near to you by giving it to them? You yourself should have had it long ago.
