INTRODUCTION.

1. In opening this volume, the teacher or the student of Phonography will find before him the great body of the words of the English Language, arranged in a succession of Exercises, according to the method in which each class is to be written in Phonography.

It may, at first view, occasion some surprise, that this whole work is in ordinary type, and that there is not, therefore, a single page of it which presents words phonographically written, to the eye of the learner. The reasons for this are, in part, mechanical, and in part pertain to our philosophy of the soundest and best method of teaching. The mechanical reasons it is unnecessary to explain, farther than to observe, that to publish the whole of the words in Phonographic characters would render the work far too bulky and expensive, and that to intersperse portions of Phonographic matter is extremely inconvenient. Apart from these considerations, we have little doubt that an edition of this work, in Phonographic characters, would be more acceptable with many to whom, nevertheless, it would be less useful than in its present form. We are thus led to our second class of reasons for preferring the ordinary type.

2. The object of this work, and of those which belong to this series, is, not to teach to read, but to write Phonography. It is not possible that any one should have learned to write in any hand, with absolute facility, without having incidentally learned, at the same time, how to read what is written. It is not only possible, on the other hand, but a very frequent occurrence, that pupils learn to read a printed book, long-hand manuscript, Phonography, or a foreign language, without acquiring the ability to write them with any corresponding degree of facility. They learn how to understand and appreciate what has been done by others, with no corresponding power to execute for themselves. This is, in our view, the grand defect in almost every department of education.

3. We have said that the work might be more acceptable to many, if in the Phonographic character, while it would be, in our opinion, less valuable to them. The eye would then become accustomed to the characters and forms of words, and the pupil would flatter himself that he was learning Phonography, almost without exertion; while he would still find himself quite unable to call up and apply his knowledge—in other words, unable to use a system of writing for the purpose of writing. It is said, in such cases, that the hand is not accustomed to the formation of the characters, but this is, in fact, only half the truth; a still more important part of the deficiency being, that the mind is not accustomed to the exertion of calling up, and knowing actively what forms are wanted, but only to a passive recognition of such forms as are presented to it, through the eye; instead of being able to instruct and guide the hand, it must wait, itself, on suggestion. The mind of a person who has been taught a foreign language on this vicious plan, is in the same condition. He may understand every word that is uttered, and yet be unable to utter a single sentence correctly, not because his organs of speech are unaccustomed to utter the sounds and words to be used, though that may be true likewise, but because he cannot, for the life of him, think of the words he wants to express his ideas, nor of the order in which he should place them. His whole training has been in understanding something which is placed before and pressed upon the attention, and not at all in going out of himself, and calling up or seeking to know what is absent.

4. With reference to Phonography, this pouring in system of instruction, which gives critical without practical knowledge, is especially unfortunate. It is of considerable value to be able to read a foreign book, or to understand a foreign language, when spoken, inasmuch as either may be the medium of knowledge which cannot be otherwise obtained, even though we are unable to write or speak the language ourselves. But it is of comparatively little utility to be able to read Phonography without the ability to write it. There is no literature printed in it, which is not equally accessible without it. Phonography is, therefore, to be regarded exclusively as a system of writing, and as a system of short-hand writing, and any system of teaching it which fails to enable the learner to write it, and to write it rapidly, is an essentially faulty and delusive one. That all the previous methods of teaching have, in the main, failed, just in this most important particular, is certain, as is more fully shown in the Introduction to "The Phonographic Word-Book No. I.," and we think it equally certain, that wherever works printed in the Phonographic character are chiefly relied upon as instruction-books, this failure will still be experienced.

5. So thoroughly are we convinced of the soundness and of the great importance of the position here assumed, that if we were able to dictate despotically the terms upon which Phonography should be taught and learned, we would unhesitatingly exclude the use of all reading matter whatsoever, which was not the actual manuscript of the pupils themselves, or of others, so soon as a tolerable familiarity had been acquired with the principles and general appearance of this method of writing, by the aid of elementary works.

In bringing out editions of these works, or abridgments from them, in Phonographic characters, as we may probably feel required to do, we must be considered, therefore, as merely making a concession to what we consider an extremely faulty, though unfortunately a popular system of teaching.

6. A similar concession to the necessities of the case was made by us during several years, and is still made, and must continue to be made, by other teachers, who know that it is neither doing justice to Phonography nor the public; we allude to adopting the six or twelve-lesson system of instruction. Phonography, like every other art, to be thoroughly known, must be thoroughly studied and practiced. This requires a thorough and consecutive drill of several months, such as, by the usages of life, is hardly practicable out of the school-room, and for persons who have graduated from the schools. But like every thing else new, however useful in itself, Phonography had to go through a novitiate. It had first to prove its utility to those who had charge of education, and to the public, before it could be permitted to take its position as a recognized school-study. In many parts of the country, it has not yet attained that position, and must still be taught upon any plan which is best adapted to introducing and recommending it to the public notice, while what we are now saying relates to the proper method of teaching, where the teacher has control of his pupils, in a regular institution, for a sufficient period of time to carry them through the practice of the art, and is not confined simply to expounding the elements of it. What we mean to affirm is, that even in this latter case, with all the circumstances favorable for thorough instruction, the success of teachers will be far short of what it should be, if the system of instruction now generally applied to grammar, the study of foreign languages, etc., is not completely reversed—if the pupils are not made to write, write, write, continually, instead of merely looking on, and deciphering what has been written or printed for them. Without this, it is utterly hopeless to think of turning out whole classes of accomplished rapid writers.

For a more detailed statement of the fallacies of the existing mode of education, and for a full exposition of what is thought to be the only true system of inducting the student into a practical as well as theoretical, and, therefore, the only useful and available knowledge of any art or science, the reader is referred to a series of papers which originally appeared at intervals in the "New York Commercial Advertiser," and are now being transferred to successive numbers of the "Anglo-Saxon," commencing with No. 66.*

We shall confine ourselves, in this introduction, to a somewhat detailed statement of the method pursued by us in teaching Phonography in the New York Free Academy.* But even this detail will, it is thought, give teachers and readers generally a tolerably correct appreciation of the mode of applying the drawing-out system of instruction to any branch of knowledge.

* These Essays will be completed and published in a pamphlet form by us, as early as May next (1850).

7. In the New York Free Academy, Phonography is a compulsory study for the whole institution. The students are divided into several classes, in some of which there are more than seventy scholars. Each class receives three lessons a week, of one hour each. When we received our appointment, and entered upon our duties in that institution, we had occasion to test the proficiency of the students in what may be regarded as practical grammar, including penmanship, orthography on paper, which is quite a different thing from reciting the columns of a spelling-book or dictionary orally, punctuation, paragraphing, the right use of capitals, etc. We found, as the result, certain defects which we had observed in nearly every educational institution we had ever examined. The institution itself was quite new. The boys were fresh from the Ward and Public Schools of this city. We can speak, therefore, more freely of such faults as we noticed in the kind of education they had received, as our remarks will not seem to have a special reference to the defective method of any particular institution. They apply to the general cast of instruction in the common schools of this, and, as we have reason to believe, of the neighboring cities, and of the country at large. The reference to these boys is only for the sake of a definite illustration, and one, too, where the circumstances were favorable to a fair exhibition of the best results of Common School instruction. These pupils were from the highest classes of the Ward and Public Schools, and had undergone, one month before our appointment, what was regarded as an unusually severe examination to obtain admission to the Academy.

We found them possessed of much varied and useful information. Their powers of appreciation were tolerably developed. They understood many things which had been explained to them by books or teachers, and were capable of understanding many more. In a word, considering their respective ages, their minds were brisk, and well stored with facts and principles relating to the several studies they had pursued; but, on the other hand, they were deficient in the power to do things. They could not express what they knew, either orally or on paper, with any thing like facility or off handedness. Their ability was critical, not practical. They could analyze and parse the most difficult constructions of the language, but they could not write correctly the most simple sentences about the most simple subjects, with which they were perfectly familiar, without mistakes of some sort in nearly every line. As respects mechanical execution, there were very few of them who could write at all easily, that is, without making a painfully apparent effort at every upward or downward movement of the pen. They neither sat at their desks, placed their paper before them, nor held their pens as students practically trained would have done. They were entirely destitute of that graceful and easy carelessness which can only result from use and familiarity with an art. In one word, they had been taught too much, and not made to learn enough. Their teachers had proved themselves laborious, but had failed to establish laborious habits on the part of the pupils—the fault of a system of instruction which is almost universal, and to which the study of mathematics furnishes the principal, but by no means a complete exception.

8. It was necessary to take these deficiencies into consideration, in planning a course of instruction in Phonography. We had not to do with scholars who had been in the habit of writing a composition every day for the last two or three years preceding their admission into the Free Academy, or of whom written solutions of their arithmetical problems had been daily required, or who had become familiar with the history of the United States by being compelled at each recitation to condense on paper the principal events of a certain period, and who had in like manner acquired their knowledge of grammar, spelling, geography, etc., that is, by being required constantly to put together their own thoughts, speculations, and positive knowledge of every subject they studied, instead of, as is usual, dissecting and commenting upon the knowledge of others. Tolerably well classified with reference to what they knew, they were not classified at all with reference to what they could do.

Accordingly, for the first month, the students took rank in their class according to the mechanical beauty and general neatness of their writing, the cleanliness of the paper on which they wrote, and even its size; the neatness with which their exercises were headed and dated, and their names subscribed in the ordinary hand. It must not be supposed, however, that during this time they were not practiced in reading Phonography. The Phonographic writing they were required to do was from the "Phonographic Reader." Instead of reading the lessons from the book, they were required to copy them on paper at home, and to read them from the manuscript at each recitation. At the close of each recitation, the exercises were collected and subsequently examined, when on the merit-roll of the class, each student was marked on a scale of ten, according to the geometrical accuracy of the forms of his words, the general neatness of his writing, and the care apparently bestowed upon it. In eighteen lessons, the "Reader" was written through. The students were by this time enabled to copy Phonography, with comparative ease. Some of them were also able to read in any part of the "Phonographic Reader," but of course very slowly. It would take them perhaps a minute to decipher some of the contracted forms toward the end of the book. But that was to be expected, as it had been thought desirable, under the circumstances, to confine their attention, for the first six weeks, solely to acquiring a familiarity with the forms of the Phonographic characters, and a mastery over the pen.

9. Occasionally, to relieve the monotony of reading from their manuscript, a phrase or two was written on the blackboard; but no marks were awarded to the students for reading these phrases, nor even for reading their manuscript. As before stated, marks were awarded them for excellence in mechanical execution only. It may be necessary to state that from the first to the last lesson, during the six weeks that were consumed in going through the "Reader," for the first time, two or three minutes were always occupied in enunciating the elementary sounds, and the improper diphthong sounds.

The students were now told that they were to review the "Reader"—that is, that they were to read it through in six lessons; and that they would be marked with reference solely to the correctness and fluency with which they read their manuscript. This was done. At each lesson, the students were called on, each in his turn, to read; and according to the combined correctness and fluency with which they acquitted themselves, they were marked. There was here brought into play the practical mechanical facility exclusively cultivated during the preceding six weeks; for no student could long retain a high position in his class, that position being awarded him for correctly and fluently reading his manuscript, if the manuscript itself were not legibly, and therefore neatly and correctly written.

10. To dispel the monotony attending this exercise, about ten minutes were consumed, at each recitation, as follows: We enunciated the simple consonant-sounds, and the compound ones, such as sp, pl, sprns, dshnd, etc., not in their regular order, but promiscuously, at the rate of about from twenty to forty in a minute. These the students were required to take down from dictation, any one of them being liable to be called upon to read them off. This was found to be an excellent mode of accustoming them to write from dictation. Some of them were soon able to write and read off from forty to fifty consonant-signs, or combinations, in a minute. No standing in the class was as yet awarded, however, for proficiency in rapid writing; correct and fluent reading being alone made the test. But it will be observed that in going through the "Reader," both for the first and second time, the incidental exercises introduced were such as the students would next take rank in their class for excelling in.

By this time, those of the students who had paid proper attention, could be said to have attained two great ends: they had acquired a mechanical mastery over the pen and a familiarity with the use of writing materials, and they were able to read correctly and with tolerable fluency their Phonographic manuscript, never having been allowed to read from the "Pho-nographic Reader," during recitation hours. It must be seen, of course, that they could not have failed to pick up also much else that would be of service to them in the further prosecution of their Phonographic studies. They had been questioned on the "Class Book," and had been obliged constantly to refer to it. A few, indeed, were already tolerably accomplished phonographers, and had commenced to practice by themselves at home, with some degree of success, in rapid writing; which, by the by, we by no means recommend, at such an early stage of progress. But considering the largeness of the classes, and the present pernicious system of classification in institutions of learning, which obtains here as elsewhere,* it

* What we particularly mean by a "pernicious system of classification," is one that does not, in classifying scholars, recognize the fact that a boy may excel in one branch of study, and not in another, and which does not classify them, in each department, with reference to their attainments in that department only. It is to be hoped that the New York Free Academy will set an example to other institutions in this respect, as it has in so many others.

The New York Free Academy stands at the head of the public instruction of this city. The building is calculated to accommodate one thousand students, and the design is, to give the scholars from the Common Schools who pass a thorough examination in the ordinary branches, an education of as high a grade as is obtained in any institution of learning in the country. Instruction, books, etc., are furnished free of charges to the pupils. Only scholars from the Common Schools are allowed to enjoy the privileges of this institution. The New York Free Academy has only been in existence about six months. From the high qualifications and energy of the Principal and faculty, it is confidently expected by the friends of education in New York, that the examinations for admission will soon be of such a character as to impress the teachers of the Common Schools with the necessity of adopting a more efficient system of instruc-was necessary to take into consideration, not the progress of the best, but that of the majority of the scholars, leaning if any thing toward that of the most backward, in planning the course of instruction and the time to be spent on each branch, a knowledge of which contributes to make the pupil an accomplished Phonographic writer.

11. We were here compelled, for the want of proper instruction-books (neither the "Word-Book No. I," nor the "Word-Book No. II," being published), to pursue for some time a course which the subsequent publication of those works renders it now unnecessary for us to detail. We shall therefore continue our remarks on the supposition that these books were completed when we finished the "Reader" for the second time; or, in other words, we shall add to the first part of our instruction during the last term, what will be the last part of our instruction during the next term.

We now place in the hands of the students the Monosyllabic Book, or "Word-Book No. II." We tell them that they are able to read Phonography, whatever forms may be given to words, but that it is now necessary for them to know the best form for every word, and to be able to write that form, at the moment they hear the spoken word; and that the work before them will show them how to write every monosyllable in the English language. We then make them read aloud, each in his turn, the rules preceding the first few exercises, questioning them on them as they proceed. We tion, to fit their scholars for it. At present, all that can be done is to take the students as they are. It would be inexpedient and perhaps unfair to make the standard of admission too high, at first.

Digitized by Google

then give them a certain number of exercises, according to circumstances, to write in Phonography for the next recitation, at which they receive marks as before, according to the correctness and fluency with which they read. So on through the work. To vary the monotony of this drill, we occasionally read to them, at first, at the rate of about twenty-five words a minute; and as we get toward the end of the book, increasing to sixty or seventy words in a minute, from some monosyllabic reading matter. This is always to be found in abundance, in primary school-readers. This they are required to take down from dictation, and are afterward called on to read it, but without any marks being awarded for it.

The "Word-Book No. II" is then commenced and gone through with in the same manner, the regular exercises being now varied, by requiring students to write from dictation, but not, as heretofore, from monosyllabic matter. It is strongly recommended that the matter here selected to be written, from dictation, be the Introductions and explanatory portions of such Phonographic works as the pupils may have studied, commencing with the "Class-Book" and "Reader." We may here remark that, from the very first lesson, one of the most useful incidental means of dispelling the monotony of the main exercise of the class, is to pass five minutes in requiring them to read the Introduction to the work they are studying, the instructor commenting upon it when necessary.

The "Phraseographer No. II" is then taken up, and pursued in like manner. The same with the "Phonographer's Imperfect Skeleton Book," and the "Phraseographer No. II," which completes what may be termed the regular course. Independent practice should now be commenced, as follows: The instructor will lecture or read to the students, for fifteen, twenty, or thirty minutes, according to the length and frequency of the recitations, and other circumstances, at the rate of from seventy to one hundred and fifty words per minute. The students will be required to take this down, and make out as full a report of it as possible, in plain and legible Phonography, for the next recitation; at which they will be marked for the correctness of their report, and the fluency with which they read it.

We conclude, by reminding our readers that the foregoing remarks are not the result of some theory concocted in the closet, but of the practical experience of hard-working practical teachers. We desired, when Phonography was first introduced into America, to bring about a uniformity in the mode of teaching it to popular classes. This we had the good fortune to effect, by personally training many excellent teachers, and by detailing somewhat of our method in the Introduction to the "Phonographic Reader," and in the columns of the "Anglo-Saxon." Now that Phonography is going into the schools, in every part of the Union, we wish to bring about a unformity in the mode of teaching it in them also.

12. We now proceed to give some more particular account of this work.

The words, it will be perceived, are arranged in classes, according to the consonant-elements contained in them, and the precise manner of combining those elements in each word. It is an advantage of Phonography, in several respects, that it admits of different modes of writing the consonant-outline of almost every word. By this means, awkward forms may be avoided, and in many instances the proper vowel is indicated, in whole classes of words, by the consonant-outlines themselves, without being written, as in the case of the final l and r, which, when struck up, indicate that a vowel follows, and when struck down, that they are followed by no vowel. On the other hand, however, this very facility for writing a word in different ways, renders absolutely necessary a guide like the present work, which shall exhibit all the words, classified with reference to the best method of writing them.

13. Within each class of words, those are placed first, which have a vowel indicated by one of the first-place vowel-signs in their accented syllable; then those, the accented vowel in which is represented by a second-place vowel-sign; then those in which the accented vowel is represented by a third-place vowel-sign;—thus, for example, the first paragraph of Exercise XX., Chap. I., is as follows:

1. Piece, apiece; pease, appease, heaps, weeps, hips, whips, pause, hops, poise, pies, wipes:—2. Pays, oppose, pace, apes, opes, hopes:—3. Pass, haps, puss, hoops.

In monosyllables the only vowel there is in the word, is, of course, regarded as the accented vowel. The object of this arrangement of the words is an important one, and will be fully explained by the rules for writing above, on, and below or across the line, for which see page 23 of this Introduction. The vowel order is, therefore, quite different in this work from that with which the pupil has heretofore been familiarized, and which was employed in the "Phonographic Word-Book No. I." The object then was to teach, and render the pupil perfectly familiar with, the positions of the several vowel-signs themselves. The object here is to use those positions for another purpose.

Digitized by Google

14. The paragraphing and division of the words in the Exercises into minor clauses, by means of colons and dashes, has reference either to this distinction in the place of the vowel-signs, or to some other minor ground of distinction which is obvious upon inspection.

15. There is still another use to which the variety of forms in Phonographic outlines has been sometimes applied, namely, the distinction of single words, having the same consonant elements, from each other, without vocalization, by writing them in a different manner. We have not thought it advisable to go to that extent, in a series of primary instruction books. Where nothing like classification is attainable, we have preferred to rely upon vocalization. To take a different course, is to place the teaching of Phonography upon a footing too similar to that of our old orthography. The only instruction to be given to pupils is, that they should vocalize their words whenever they are liable to a wrong reading, without so doing. Whatever devices the professional reporter may hereafter resort to, for his own private convenience, Phonography, as a universal medium of thought for the people, should not be rendered a mere assemblage of particular facts, each to be remembered by a distinct effort of the memory. Whatever art is intended for the school-room, may also be required to make some concessions, in minor points, to the art of teaching itself, which is the most dignified of all the arts.

16. Of two possible forms for a word, one is almost necessarily inferior to the other; hence phonographers, after a sufficient amount of practice to have tried all forms, would arrive, with no other guide, at very nearly the same habits of writing. The design of this work is, chiefly, therefore, to point out to them, at once, conclusions to which they would otherwise arrive, in time, unassisted. Even, therefore, in the latter part of this book, where the words are thrown into columns, and their forms indicated by a notation adopted for that purpose, on the express ground that they cannot be classified to advantage (see page 101), the case is still not the same as that adverted to in the last paragraph. In this case, the best form for writing each word is selected, to which several repeated trials would usually bring the pupil, without the aid of the book. Hence the form is in no proper sense arbitrary, and when once pointed out, it is remembered, not merely, nor chiefly, because the authority of the book has determined it, but because the reason accepts it as the right form. The system of notation itself will be found fully explained at page 102.

17. The l, r, and sh are italicized as in the "Word-Book No. I.," throughout the first part of the book, when their signs are to be struck up. For the combinations rl, lr, etc., represented by hook-signs struck up, both letters are italicized. For the termination "ing," when it is to be represented by the final dot, the whole of the termination is italicized.

18. As we do not attempt to employ Phonography for the expression of the delicacies of pronunciation, we have allowed the facility of the Phonographic form to guide us in many instances where the usage is fluctuating, without intending thereby to decide which pronunciation is preferable. Thus, for example, we give to the word nature a form which indicates the ch-sound, and to fortune one which does not, but which indicates on the contrary that the t-sound remains unchanged; and this is done here for no higher reason than simply because these forms are the most easily made. This remark applies to a large class of words, such as pronunciation, nausea, infatuate, education, actual, etc., etc.

19. It is frequently almost immaterial whether the vr-sign is made with or without the hook, though in most cases, if not all where it occurs, the particular form to be used will be found indicated by the notation. Always, when it is shortened for the addition of t or d, the hook has to be made to distinguish it from the half-length sign for rd.

20. The circle, it will be remembered, is used indifferently for either s or z, or in the proper position, for ns or nz, and the hoop indifferently for st or zd, or nst, nzd.

21. There are a few cases in which the s-circle has to be turned upon the back of a curve-sign, contrary to the general usage, as in the words facility (the l being struck up), insolence (l struck up), misplace, nisi-prius, etc. These cases have not been indicated by a particular notation, as this mode of writing results inevitably from the nature of the case, and is, therefore, sufficiently obvious.

22. When a circle occurs between two opposite curves, as in the word mason, it is always made within the first curve, so that it has the appearance of being at the back of the second curve.

23. The word Louisa and Louis are instances in which the l-sign at the beginning of a word is struck down for a particular reason.

24. In a few instances, the same word will be found inserted twice, in different classes. In some cases this has occurred by mistake, either form being a good one, though the last is to be taken as the best. This will be corrected in subsequent editions. In other cases, words occur twice with no change in the method of writing them, for the reason that they have been selected out and brought together for the illustration of some principle.

25. The General Rules for writing Phonography, contained in the "Phonographic Word-Book No. I.," and there applied to monosyllables only, are to be equally applied to writing longer words. A material modification is now to be made, however, in the directions contained in Rules VIII and IX, for the positions of the consonant-outlines of words with reference to the line of writing.

26. By the Rules referred to in the "Word-Book No. I.," the difference in the position of the consonant-outline (as above or on the line) extends only to two positions, and affects only such outlines as are either entirely composed of horizontal signs, with or without circles, etc., as key, seek, kick, came, etc.; the first three of which go above, and the last on the line—such as consist of a half-length sign—or such as have one or more (long) horizontal signs and a half-length, with or without circles, etc., as fight, spot, midst, screened, fate, caved, craft; the first four of which are written above, and the last three on the line—the half-length in the last two words touching the line. Reporters find it advantageous, however, to carry this contrivance to a greater extent.

27. The Rules of position to be pursued in the writing of this work, and by all advanced phonographers, may be stated as follows:

I. All skeletons or consonant-outlines, which do not occupy in perpendicular height more than the length of one full and one half-length consonant-sign, have assigned to them three positions, namely, above, on, and below or across the line, according as the words have in their ACCENTED SYLLABLE a vowel which would be represented by a first, second, or third-place vowel-sign. The following rules apply only to such words.

Digitized by Google

II. Those words in which the ACCENTED vowel is a SECOND-PLACE vowel, are written ON the line; that is to say, the lower end of the first perpendicular or inclined consonant-sign, whether full or half-length, rests on the line, as in the words blame, frame, etc. If the skeleton consists entirely of horizontals, then the body of the k or g-sign, the points of the m-sign, or the swell of the n or ng-sign, which begins the outline, comes down to the line, as in the words ache, make, name, uncle, etc.

III. Those words in which the ACCENTED vowel is a FIRST-PLACE vowel, are written ABOVE the line, as follows: Suppose an imaginary line to run along the tops of the perpendicular consonant-signs, that is, at the height of a t or a d above the basis line of the writing, and the first perpendicular or inclined consonant-sign of the skeleton, whether full or half-length, is made to intersect such imaginary line, so that the lower end of the second consonant-sign in the words paved (a full-length and a half-length), epitaph, etc., touches the (basis) line. If the skeleton consists only of a perpendicular or inclined half-length consonant-sign, then it begins at, and extends its entire length below, the imaginary line, as in the words feed, fit, etc. If the skeleton consists entirely of horizontals, then the body of the k or g-sign, the swell of the m-sign, or the points of the n or ng-sign, which begins the outline, come up to the imaginary line above, as in the words key, meek, ink, etc.

IV. Those words in which the ACCENTED vowel is a THIRD-PLACE vowel, are written ACROSS or BELOW the line, as follows:

The first perpendicular or inclined consonant-sign, is made so as to intersect the line, as in the words removed, proved, etc. If in this case, however, the skeleton consists entirely of horizontals, the body of the k or g-sign (beginning the skeleton) is made a very short distance below the line, but quite clear of the line, while the swell of the m-sign, or the points of the n or ng-sign (beginning the skeleton) come up to the line, as in the words crook, Mag, knack, anchor.

28. The above rules apply to words of all lengths, from one syllable up to the largest number, provided they only occupy the perpendicular space above specified. The vowel attended to, in words of more than one syllable, is always that which has the primary accent in the word; thus, "peace-maker" takes the first position, because the accent is on the first syllable, and the vowel of that syllable is a first-place one, while "melodrama" takes the third position, because the accent is on the third syllable, and the vowel in that syllable is a third-place vowel.

A comparison of the following words, of different lengths, written in the three positions, will, it is thought, be quite sufficient to render the application of the Rules easy and familiar.

1 by	link	obviate	beard	péace-maker
2 obéy		behâved	bored
3 bow	lank	behóoved	bard	melodráma.

29. Of the words composed of vowel-sounds only, contained in Exercise XXXV., Chapter 1, page 40, the first twelve occupy the first position, the next nine the second position, and the last seven the third position.

30. Pupils should be thoroughly trained, from the time of commencing this book, at least to observe all these positions with entire uniformity. The teacher should commence by a thorough examination of the pupil's familiarity with the General Rules for writing Phonography.

31. The experienced phonographer will find, in this work, a variety of improvements in the construction of the Phonographic forms of words, too numerous to be stated in detail. Among these, may be mentioned the almost universal use of the nl and nr hook-signs, when the first two consonant-sounds in a word, as enlist, unrigged, etc., dropping the t in an extensive class of words, like post-master, post-town, etc., writing out such words as "conscience," "commission," etc., instead of using the dot for com, con, etc., a more extended use of the rl in such words as religion, paralytic, etc., the doubling of the consonant-signs to distinguish negatives, privatives, etc., as in the words irreflective, irrefragable, etc. See Chapter VI., Exercise IV., etc., etc.

IMPORTANT NOTE.

Read attentively the whole of the preceding Introduction, and study especially the Rules of Position on pages 23, 24, before proceeding to practice the Exercises.

* It will be perceived, that in this and the other Exercises, plural nouns and the third persons singular of verbs, regularly formed, have been omitted. The student will of course understand, that the sound of s or z in all such cases is represented by the circle. The past tenses and past participles of verbs, and the comparatives and superlatives of adjectives, are also in many instances omitted, but not when the method of writing them involves some peculiarity not possessed by any other class of words. They are then treated of in a special Exercise.

IMPORTANT NOTE,

Containing a System of Typical Representation for indicating the correct skeleton or outline forms for writing all words phonographically.

(To be carefully studied by the student before proceeding farther.)

The remainder of the words in this chapter, and a large proportion of those contained in the remainder of the entire work, are cut up into so many small classes, that it is unadvisable to give a distinct heading to each. There would be numerous divisions containing no more than one, two, or half a dozen words, and it would be extremely tedious to exhibit them in equally numerous Exercises. For this reason, it has been thought advisable to resort to a system of notation by which the precise form for writing the skeleton or outline of each word will be as clearly pointed out to the learner, as it could be by the most specific directions, such as have hitherto been given in the headings to the Exercises. The system will be found so fully explained in detail, that no one can fail to understand it. It will then be restated in a few concise rules, which will be more convenient for reference. The system itself is one originally devised by the authors of this work, several years since. It is, however, quite similar in design, and in some of its details, to several systems projected by various phonographers on both sides of the Atlantic.

It is believed that the method here exhibited is the simplest and most easily comprehensible, the whole being reducible to no more than four short rules. The following statement of it should be carefully studied and understood.

In the first place, the consonant-signs which are to be written in Phonography to make the consonant-outline of any word, are indicated by printing immediately after it the letters of the ordinary alphabet which represent the consonant-sounds heard in the word. Whether the primary alphabetic consonant-signs are to be used, or the auxiliary signs, such as the loops, circles, etc., and whether a consonant-sign is struck up or down, is then shown by the use made of commas and italic letters. In order to obtain a clear understanding of the rules, the pupil should first acquire the following Definitions.

1. All full-length or half-length consonant-signs, including the alphabetic consonant-signs, the up-stroke-r, the mp-sign, the lr-sign, (struck down,) and the contracted vr-sign, (without a hook,) are called STEM-SIGNS.

2. All auxiliary consonant-signs, namely, circles, hooks, and loops, being joined or attached to stem-signs, are hence called ATTACHMENTS.

3. A stem-sign, together with all its attachments, that is, circles, hooks, and loops, at the beginning or end of it, or both, is called a GROUP-SIGN.

4. The consonant-letters and notation by which the method of writing the consonant-outline of a word is indicated, are called the TYPE-KEY of the word.

Rules.

I. Every STEM-SIGN (without attachments) and every GROUP-SIGN is indicated by the type or types representing them being separated by commas from that portion of the TYPE-KEY which precedes or follows; thus, b,n,m,l, accompanying the word "binomial," indicates that it is to be written with four long consonant-signs or single stem-signs; pt,f, accompanying the word "epitaph," indicates that it is to be written by a half-length consonant pt, and the full-length f; and fz,kl, accompanying the word "physical," indicates that the word is to be written by an f and the circle z making one GROUP-SIGN, and the kl-hook, which is another GROUP-SIGN.

II. The l, sh, and r-signs, when struck up with or without initial or terminational hooks, or with both, whether made full-length or half-length, and all the circles and loops, and the contracted vr-sign, (i. e., without the hook), are distinguished by the types which represent them being italic; thus, b,r,t,r, accompanying the word "Barataria," indicates that it is written with four long consonant-signs, each of the r-signs being the up-stroke; str, with the word "star," indicates that it is written with the st-loop attached to the alphabetic r-sign, the whole forming a GROUP-SIGN; p*etrz* with the word "pesters," indicates that it is written with the p-sign, the str-loop, and an s-circle, (formed on the opposite side of the p-sign,)—the whole forming one GROUP-SIGN.

III. All affixes and prefixes, such as con, com, accom, ing, etc., are indicated by including that part of the TYPE-KEY which represents them in brackets; thus, [km]b,t, with the word "combat," indicates that the dot is used for com; rt,rd[ng], with the word "retarding," indicates that this word is written by two half-lengths, followed by the dot for ing, etc.

IV. In such words as "stupor," "stutter," "sticher," written with the st-loop on the left of the consonant-signs "p," "t" and "ch," and in the word "stagger," in which the loop is written below the "g," the fact that the loop is so written, is indicated by its being represented by small capitals, thus:—STP—STT—STCH—STG.

It must be observed that th, TH, ch, sh, zh, and ng, are combinations representing single sounds, and are treated as if they were single letters; thus, "patchwork," p,ch,r,k, shows that this word is to be written by four long consonant-signs, the ch standing for a single stem-sign.

The s-circle coming between long consonant-signs is regarded as an attachment of the preceding one; thus, the TYPE-KEY of "bask" is bs,k; of "physical," fz,kl, etc.

The words contained in the following Exercise, (XC.), furnish ample illustrations of the various applications of the above rules. In the first and second paragraphs, there are no commas in the TYPE-KEYS of the words, as they are each written by a single GROUP-SIGN, namely, an l or r-hook sign, with an ns or nz-circle attached to it.

The words in the third paragraph are written with a long consonant-sign, the r-up-stroke with an l-hook upon it, and another long consonant-sign. The r being italicised, shows that the up-stroke is to be used, and the l not being separated from it by a comma, and being also italicised, shows that it is to be represented by an attachment, and not by a long consonant-sign.

The words in the fourth paragraph are written with a full-length consonant-sign, followed by the rl-up-stroke, and made half-length, as indicated by the punctuation.

The words of the fifth paragraph are written with a half-

Digitized by Google

length consonant-sign, a circle, and a long consonant-sign ; those in the sixth with a long consonant-sign, followed by a half-length and the s-circle ; those in the seventh by the st-loop, a long consonant-sign, and the n-hook ; those in the eighth paragraph by the ST-loop at the beginning and on the left-hand side of an inclined or perpendicular long consonant-sign, or below a horizontal one, in which case the loop represents the sounds of st before the sound for which the consonant-sign to which it is attached stands, and the sound of r after it. (See Rule IV.)

The words in the ninth paragraph have the st-loop on the heavy lr-sign ; those in the tenth, the st-loop on the vr-sign, without the hook ; those in the eleventh, the st-loop on the mp-sign.

The words in the twelfth paragraph are written with an n-hook-sign half-length and a final s-circle ; those in the thirteenth, with a half-length and a final st-loop ; those in the fourteenth, with a long consonant-sign, an mp-sign, and a final s-circle ; those in the fifteenth, by an mp-sign, and a long consonant-sign with a final s-circle ; those in the sixteenth, with an mp-sign and a long consonant-sign with a final n-hook ; those in the seventeenth, with a long consonant-sign and an mp-sign with a final n-hook ; those in the eighteenth, with an mp-sign with an s-circle, and a long consonant-sign ; those in the nineteenth, with an mp-sign with a final st-loop ; those in the twentieth, with an mp-sign and two long consonant-signs ; those in the twenty-first, with two long consonant-signs and an mp-sign ; those in the twenty-second, with a long consonant-sign, an mp-sign, and another long consonant-sign, and those in the twenty-third, with a hook-sign of the l or r-series, and an mp-sign.

A comparison of the following words will also aid to render the notation familiar :

CHAPTER VI.

CONTAINING WORDS, WRITTEN ACCORDING TO SPECIAL RULES, AND OTHERS CONTRASTED WITH SUCH AS ARE SO WRITTEN.—A VERY IMPORTANT CHAPTER, BY NO MEANS TO BE NEGLECTED.

EXERCISE I.

Containing words in which a hook-sign is used, although between the consonant-sound represented by the hook and the stem to which it is attached, the natural vowel, or the vowel-sound "u" in "cur," is distinctly heard.

NOTE.—There is a special scheme of vocalization for the words in this exercise and the succeeding one, and for all words in which a vowel-sound is heard between the two consonant-sounds represented by the hook and the stem to which it is attached. It is rarely used, however, the words being quite legible without it. Accomplished phonographers seldom use even the ordinary means of vocalization. They write and read by the consonant-signs only.

CHAPTER VI.

CONTAINING WORDS, WRITTEN ACCORDING TO SPECIAL RULES, AND OTHERS CONTRASTED WITH SUCH AS ARE SO WRITTEN.—A VERY IMPORTANT CHAPTER, BY NO MEANS TO BE NEGLECTED.

EXERCISE I.

Containing words in which a hook-sign is used, although between the consonant-sound represented by the hook and the stem to which it is attached, the natural vowel, or the vowel-sound "u" in "cur," is distinctly heard.

NOTE.—There is a special scheme of vocalization for the words in this exercise and the succeeding one, and for all words in which a vowel-sound is heard between the two consonant-sounds represented by the hook and the stem to which it is attached. It is rarely used, however, the words being quite legible without it. Accomplished phonographers seldom use even the ordinary means of vocalization. They write and read by the consonant-signs only.

CHAPTER VI.

CONTAINING WORDS, WRITTEN ACCORDING TO SPECIAL RULES, AND OTHERS CONTRASTED WITH SUCH AS ARE SO WRITTEN.—A VERY IMPORTANT CHAPTER, BY NO MEANS TO BE NEGLECTED.

EXERCISE I.

Containing words in which a hook-sign is used, although between the consonant-sound represented by the hook and the stem to which it is attached, the natural vowel, or the vowel-sound "u" in "cur," is distinctly heard.

NOTE.—There is a special scheme of vocalization for the words in this exercise and the succeeding one, and for all words in which a vowel-sound is heard between the two consonant-sounds represented by the hook and the stem to which it is attached. It is rarely used, however, the words being quite legible without it. Accomplished phonographers seldom use even the ordinary means of vocalization. They write and read by the consonant-signs only.

EXERCISE IV.

Containing words between which and their opposites or other modifications in meaning, the difference in pronunciation, in ordinary speech, consists only in the enunciation of an initial vowel-sound in the one case, and of none in the other.

NOTE.—It will be seen by the type-keys of the following words, that in Phonography the first consonant-sign in all the negatives, and other words having prefixes, is doubled, whether two consonant-sounds are heard in the word or not.

CHAPTER VI.

CONTAINING WORDS, WRITTEN ACCORDING TO SPECIAL RULES, AND OTHERS CONTRASTED WITH SUCH AS ARE SO WRITTEN.—A VERY IMPORTANT CHAPTER, BY NO MEANS TO BE NEGLECTED.

EXERCISE I.

Containing words in which a hook-sign is used, although between the consonant-sound represented by the hook and the stem to which it is attached, the natural vowel, or the vowel-sound "u" in "cur," is distinctly heard.

NOTE.—There is a special scheme of vocalization for the words in this exercise and the succeeding one, and for all words in which a vowel-sound is heard between the two consonant-sounds represented by the hook and the stem to which it is attached. It is rarely used, however, the words being quite legible without it. Accomplished phonographers seldom use even the ordinary means of vocalization. They write and read by the consonant-signs only.

Exercise IV.

Containing words between which and their opposites or other modifications in meaning, the difference in pronunciation, in ordinary speech, consists only in the enunciation of an initial vowel-sound in the one case, and of none in the other.

Note.—It will be seen by the type-keys of the following words, that in Phonography the first consonant-sign in all the negatives, and other words having prefixes, is doubled, whether two consonant-sounds are heard in the word or not.

CHAPTER VI.

CONTAINING WORDS, WRITTEN ACCORDING TO SPECIAL RULES, AND OTHERS CONTRASTED WITH SUCH AS ARE SO WRITTEN.—A VERY IMPORTANT CHAPTER, BY NO MEANS TO BE NEGLECTED.

EXERCISE I.

Containing words in which a hook-sign is used, although between the consonant-sound represented by the hook and the stem to which it is attached, the natural vowel, or the vowel-sound "u" in "cur," is distinctly heard.

NOTE.—There is a special scheme of vocalization for the words in this exercise and the succeeding one, and for all words in which a vowel-sound is heard between the two consonant-sounds represented by the hook and the stem to which it is attached. It is rarely used, however, the words being quite legible without it. Accomplished phonographers seldom use even the ordinary means of vocalization. They write and read by the consonant-signs only.

Exercise IV.

Containing words between which and their opposites or other modifications in meaning, the difference in pronunciation, in ordinary speech, consists only in the enunciation of an initial vowel-sound in the one case, and of none in the other.

Note.—It will be seen by the type-keys of the following words, that in Phonography the first consonant-sign in all the negatives, and other words having prefixes, is doubled, whether two consonant-sounds are heard in the word or not.

The first consonant-sound made in all the following words is "j." Although many of the words contain the letter "d" before the "j," it is thought that that sound is altogether lost, or rather blended with the first sound of the following "j," which is not, strictly speaking, a simple sound. The words are not in their proper place. They were placed here by accident, and too late to remedy the error in this edition.

REMARK.—When, for any reason, one or more of the consonant-signs of a word is omitted, the remaining portion or fragment of the word which is written, is termed an IMPERFECT SKELETON.

EXERCISE XIV.

Containing words from which, for the sake of brevity, a consonant-sign is omitted. This consonant-sign omitted is, in all cases, the representative of an imperfectly enunciated sound, and the omission of the sign, in forming the skeleton of the word, is found not to impair the legibility of Phonographic writing—the imperfect skeleton rarely being also the perfect skeleton of any other word.

EXERCISE XVI.

The following words are abbreviated by leaving off the "N"-HOOK.

Attainment	t,mnt
atonement	t,mnt
assignment	s,mnt
tenement	t,mnt
appointment	pt,mnt
bondman	bd,mn
spendthrift	*s*pd,thr,ft
sojournment	*s*jr,mnt

It has been found necessary to write "any" above the line, to distinguish it from "no," in quick unvocalized writing.

The words "doubt" and "about" are writen with the half-length "d" and "b," struck through the line, with the sign for "ow" joined to them. The pen is not raised from the paper to write the diphthong-sign "ow." "New," "knew," and "now," are written on nearly the same principle; the last or right side of the little triangle is joined to the "n" in writing "now," and the left side of the crescent representing the improper diphthong-sound heard in "new" or "knew," is joined to the "n" in writing these last words. Both are of course written below the line. In the word "idea" the diphthong-sign is joined to the "d." It is of course written above the line.

It has been already explained in Exercise XIV of this chapter, and in the paragraph preceding it, what is meant by an "imperfect skeleton." In that exercise, examples are given of words from which only one sound—and that in most cases one which is slighted in ordinary speaking—is not represented. It has been found necessary to extend the principle to the following thirty-seven of the hundred words of frequent occurrence.

The student will be surprised to learn that the following one hundred words constitute more than one half of all the English that is spoken or written; that is, in a sermon, a newspaper, a speech, or in a debate, in which say six thousand words are spoken, no more than three thousand, or one half will be found, that are not in this list. The first twenty-five words alone constitute one quarter of the language, and the first 66 one third.

Exercise XVII.

Being a list of one hundred words numerically arranged according to the frequency of their occurrence.

LIST OF PUBLICATIONS.

DO NOT FORGET TO STATE DISTINCTLY, WHETHER YOU WISH YOUR BOOKS SENT BY MAIL OR EXPRESS.

ANDREWS & BOYLE

Are the Authors and Publishers of PHONOGRAPHIC AND PHONOTYPIC WORKS of various kinds. They keep constantly for sale the works mentioned below, which can be sent by mail or express, in any quantities, to all parts of the Union and Canada, at a trifling expense.

FIRST LESSON IN PHONOGRAPHY,

By S. P. Andrews & A. F. Boyle.

This is a small Chart, containing the simple Alphabet, with explanations, and a page of easy monosyllables, written in the Phonographic characters, intended to be sold or gratuitously distributed by teachers and lecturers at an introductory lesson or lecture.

Two cents each. Per hundred, $1 00.

COMPENDIUM OF PHONOGRAPHY,

ON A SINGLE SHEET, CONTAINING A CONDENSED VIEW OF THE ART.

By S. P. Andrews & A. F. Boyle.

The friends of Phonography are accustomed to teach the art to their friends, residing at a distance from them, through the mail, by writing them a letter in the Phonographic characters, and enclosing a "COMPENDIUM" in the same envelope. By the aid of the explanations in the "Compendium," the person who receives the letter has no difficulty either in deciphering it, or in answering it in Phonographic characters. Many persons in Great Britain and America have learned Phonography through the mail, from their friends. A "Compendium" may be sent in the same envelope with a letter, without increasing the postage. 6¼ cents each; per hundred, $3 00.

Digitized by Google

COMPLETE PHONOGRAPHIC CLASS-BOOK,

Containing an Inductive Exposition of Phonography, intended for the use of schools and learners generally, and written expressly for giving such instruction in the art as can be obtained without the assistance of the living teacher, while the pupil is learning the elements.

BY S. P. ANDREWS & A. F. BOYLE.

Boards, or stiff paper covers, for mailing, 37½ cents; Linen, 50 cents.

PHONOGRAPHIC READER,

A complete course of Inductive Reading Lessons in Phonography, intended for schools and learners generally.

BY S. P. ANDREWS & A. F. BOYLE.

Boards, or stiff paper covers, for mailing, 25 cents; Linen, 37½ cents.

☞ From the Complete Phonographic Class-Book, and the Phonographic Reader, many thousands of persons in different parts of the Union have learned Phonography without the aid of a teacher.

THE PHONOGRAPHIC REPORTER'S FIRST-BOOK,

Containing a complete list of the Word-Signs used in the most contracted Style of Phonographic Reporting, illustrated by Exercises; for the use of those only who have mastered the Corresponding Style of Phonography, as taught in the "Complete Phonographic Class-Book," and the "Phonographic Reader."

Digitized by Google

By S. P. Andrews & A. F. Boyle.

Boards, or stiff paper covers, for mailing, $1 00.

CHRIST'S SERMON ON THE MOUNT,

IN PHONOGRAPHY.

Prepared by S P. Andrews & A. F. Boyle.

In pamphlet form, with paper covers. Per copy, 12½ cents.

☞ The "Sermon on the Mount" is written in a style of Phonography suited to those who have mastered the "Complete Phonographic Class-Book," and the "Phonographic Reader." It is universally conceded to be the most beautiful specimen of Phonography that has yet been executed on either side of the Atlantic.

PRIMARY PHONOTYPIC READER,

FOR THE USE OF SCHOOLS, FAMILIES, AND UNEDUCATED ADULTS.

By S. P. Andrews & A. F. Boyle.

Boards, or stiff paper covers, for mailing, 18¾ cents.

PHONOGRAPHIC CHART, No. I.

FOR THE USE OF TEACHERS AND LECTURERS.

By S. P. Andrews & A. F. Boyle.

This is a large chart, about four feet square, containing the simple alphabet. It is intended to be hung up in sight of a large class, while being drilled on the elements of Phonography. Price 50 cents.

Digitized by Google

PHONOGRAPHIC CHART, No. II.

FOR TEACHERS AND LECTURERS.

By S. P. Andrews & A. F. Boyle.

This is also a large chart, containing a number of simple words, on which a class should be drilled at its first and second lessons. Price 50 cents.

PHONOTYPIC CHART.

By S. P. Andrews & A. F. Boyle.

This is a large chart, containing the small letters of the Phonotypic Alphabet, for the use of Teachers and Lecturers.

Price 50 cents.

SOUND-CHART OF THE ENGLISH LANGUAGE,

By S. P. Andrews & A. F. Boyle.

Price 50 cents.

This chart is not a Phonotypic one. It represents the sounds of the English Language by heterotypic letters and combinations of letters.—The difference between other charts of the elements of the language and the Sound-Chart is, that in the former there is no classification of the sounds, while in the Sound-Chart they are classed, as in Phonography. The consequence is, that any one who learns the elements of the language from it, is three-fourths inducted into a knowledge of Phonography and Phonotypy. Another great difference, and an important one to teachers, is its price—only Fifty cents,—while no other chart of the elementary sounds can be purchased for less than TWO DOLLARS.

THE PHONOGRAPHIC WORD-BOOK No. I.

Containing all the Monosyllables of the English Language, inductively arranged and classified, according to the modes in which they should be written in Phonography, together with rules and explanations.

Digitized by Google

Intended immediately to succeed the Complete Phonographic Class-book and the Phonographic Reader

By S. P. Andrews & A. F. Boyle.

Boards, or Stiff Paper covers, for mailing, 25 cents.

☞ This work should be at once in the hands of every person who has mastered the principles of Phonography. It furnishes the best possible kind of Exercises in writing, and leads at once to a correct and rapid style.

A SERIES OF PAMPHLETS

ON THE

WRITING AND SPELLING REFORMATION,

For the use of all who wish to know more of the Philosophy, History, and Prospects of this movement; consisting of the following works:

Report on the Writing and Spelling Reformation, by the Philanthropic Society of the Divinity School of Harvard University, Cambridge, Mass. Price 6¼ cents.

A Lecture on Phonotypy and Phonography; or Speech-Printing and Speech-Writing. A Lecture before the American Institute of Instruction. By Stephen P. Andrews. Price 6¼ cents.

Report of the American Academy of Arts and Sciences, on Phonotypy. Price 6¼ cents.

Congressional Document, No. 126; 28th Congress, House of Representatives. A new Project for Reforming the English Alphabet and Orthography. The Memorial of the Rev. Ezekiel Rich, setting forth the Plan of a Reformed Alphabet and Orthography, and praying the assistance of Congress to extend a knowledge of it over the nation. Price 6¼ cents.

A Lecture on Phonotypy and Phonography, before the State Convention of the County Superintendents of Schools for the State of New York, at Albany, 1846. By A. F. Boyle. Price 6¼ cents.

Various Papers on Phonotypy and Phonography. By Stephen P. Andrews. Price 6¼ cents.

A New Reformation; or how the Masses can be Educated. A Treatise on Phonotypy and Phonography. By Hepworth Dixon. Price 6¼ cents.

SPECIAL DIRECTIONS.

Persons living in any part of the United States or Canada, can receive any of the above works through the Post Office, with the same regularity and rapidity that they obtain answers to letters, by forwarding the price of the works they desire, post paid, to our address in New York, and at a trifling expense, as will be seen by the following extract from the Post Office laws:—"Books weighing one ounce will be charged two and a half cents; each additional ounce, one cent more, for any distance in the United States." It is cheaper to have small orders sent through the mail, but large orders will cost less by express. If, however, no express runs to a place where books are wanted, our per-centage on large purchases of books is so liberal, that it not only balances the expense of postage, but also leaves a handsome profit to him who retails them.

All orders, letters, communications, &c., must be POST PAID. Being engaged in an undertaking, the merits of which are not generally appreciated by business men, and the success of which is consequently considered by them to be, at least, doubtful, we are obliged to pay cash for every outlay, and are therefore compelled to exact the same terms from others. We keep no running accounts with our correspondents, and we wish it to be distinctly understood, that if books not advertised by us are sent for, or if the amount sent exceeds the order, we shall not credit such small surplus sums upon our books, to those who remit them, but shall send them such Phonographic or Phonotypic works as we have, sufficient to cover the balance. We think there will be no necessity for such a course, however, if persons will take the trouble to read our advertisments well before sending in their orders.

No discount will be made, under any circumstances, on a less amount than FIVE DOLLARS.

Persons desirous of entering the field as Lecturers and Teachers of Phonography and Phonotypy, will find it to their advantage to correspond with the publishers, as they will receive information and assistance which will be of great importance to them.

ANDREWS & BOYLE,

22 Spruce-street, New-York.

SPECIAL DIRECTIONS.

Persons living in any part of the United States or Canada, can receive any of the above works through the Post Office, with the same regularity and rapidity that they obtain answers to letters, by forwarding the price of the works they desire, post paid, to our address in New York, and at a trifling expense, as will be seen by the following extract from the Post Office laws:—"Books weighing one ounce will be charged two and a half cents; each additional ounce, one cent more, for any distance in the United States." It is cheaper to have small orders sent through the mail, but large orders will cost less by express. If, however, no express runs to a place where books are wanted, our per-centage on large purchases of books is so liberal, that it not only balances the expense of postage, but also leaves a handsome profit to him who retails them.

All orders, letters, communications, &c., must be POST PAID. Being engaged in an undertaking, the merits of which are not generally appreciated by business men, and the success of which is consequently considered by them to be, at least, doubtful, we are obliged to pay cash for every outlay, and are therefore compelled to exact the same terms from others. We keep no running accounts with our correspondents, and we wish it to be distinctly understood, that if books not advertised by us are sent for, or if the amount sent exceeds the order, we shall not credit such small surplus sums upon our books, to those who remit them, but shall send them such Phonographic or Phonotypic works as we have, sufficient to cover the balance. We think there will be no necessity for such a course, however, if persons will take the trouble to read our advertisments well before sending in their orders.

No discount will be made, under any circumstances, on a less amount than FIVE DOLLARS.

Persons desirous of entering the field as Lecturers and Teachers of Phonography and Phonotypy, will find it to their advantage to correspond with the publishers, as they will receive information and assistance which will be of great importance to them.

ANDREWS & BOYLE

Are Authors and Publishers of Phonographic and Phonotypic works of various kinds. They keep constantly for sale the works mentioned below, which can be sent by mail or express, in any quantities, to all parts of the Union, at a trifling expense.

FIRST LESSONS IN PHONOGRAPHY, a small chart, containing the simple alphabet, with explanations, and a page of easy monosyllables, written in the Phonographic characters, intended to be sold or gratuitously distributed by teachers and lecturers at an introductory lesson or lecture—two cents each; per hundred, $1 00.

COMPENDIUM OF PHONOGRAPHY, on a single sheet, containing a condensed view of the art. The principal use that Phonographers make of this sheet, is to use the blank page, in writing Phonography to their friends, who, by referring to the explanations on the other page, have no difficulty either in deciphering the letter sent them, or in answering it in the Phonographic character. Per sheet, 6¼ cents; per hundred, $3 00.

COMPLETE PHONOGRAPHIC CLASS-BOOK, containing an Inductive Exposition of Phonography, intended for the use of schools and learners generally. Boards, or stiff paper covers, for mailing, 37½ cents; linen, 50 cents.

PHONOGRAPHIC READER, a complete course of Inductive Reading Lessons in Phonography, intended for schools and learners generally. Boards, or stiff paper covers, for mailing, 25 cts.; linen, 37½ cents.

☞ From the Complete Phonographic Class-Book and the Phonographic Reader, many thousands of persons in different parts of the Union have learned Phonography without the aid of a teacher.

PHONOGRAPHIC CHART, No. I., for teachers and lecturers. This is a large chart, four feet square, containing the simple alphabet. It is intended to be hung up within sight of a large class, while being drilled on the elements of Phonography. 50 cts.

PHONOGRAPHIC CHART, No. II., for teachers and lecturers. This is also a large chart, containing a number of simple words, on which a class should be drilled, at its first and second lessons. 50 cents.

PRIMARY PHONOTYPIC READER, for the use of schools, families, and uneducated adults. Boards, or stiff paper covers, for mailing, 18¾ cents.

PHONOTYPIC CHART. This is a large chart, containing the small letters of the Phonotypic alphabet, for the use of teachers and lecturers. 50 cents.

PHONOGRAPHIC WORD-BOOK No. I., containing all the Monosyllables of the English Language, so arranged as to show precisely how each word should be written Phonographically. Price, 25 cents.

A SERIES OF SIX PAMPHLETS, containing Reports of Learned Societies, Lectures, and Treatises on the Writing and Spelling Reformation. Price, 6¼ cents each.
