

Singular Revelations.

EXPLANATION

AND

HISTORY

OF THE

MYSTERIOUS COMMUNION WITH SPIRITS,

COMPREHENDING

THE RISE AND PROGRESS

OF

THE MYSTERIOUS NOISES

IN WESTERN NEW-YORK,

GENERALLY RECEIVED AS SPIRITUAL COMMUNICATIONS.

SECOND EDITION,

REVISED AND ENLARGED, WITH ADDITIONAL PROOF.

BY ELIAS W. CAPRON AND HENRY D. BARRON.

AUBURN, N. Y.,

CAPRON AND BARRON:

NEW YORK: FOWLERS & WELLS, AGENTS,
131 NASSAU STREET.

1850.

Entered according to act of Congress, in the year one thousand eight hundred and fifty, by

ELIAS W. CAPRON & HENRY D. BARBON,

In the Clerk's Office of the District Court of the United States for the Northern District of New York.

PREFACE.

ONCE again, reader, we appear before you, having passed through the opposition of Priestcraft and Ignorance unawed and unharmed, with friends around us, whose influence and sympathy have seemed doubly dear to us, while such epithets as Infidels, Impostors and Money-graspers have been hurled at us by those who will listen to nothing that their fathers did not listen to, and whose zeal for their own peculiar creeds and the multiplying of their own numbers, often overleap their professions of goodness and forgiveness.

When, three months ago we entered upon the discharge of what we knew to be our duty, we were not ignorant of the result. Our duty in the matter was plain. From the time we had decided upon publishing what we knew to be facts, to the time our last page of manuscript was finished, the authors had received stronger and stronger evidence that they were but discharging their duty in publishing to the world, not what was entirely new, but something which had often been muzzled and concealed by those who dare not tell what they had seen, felt and heard, in consequence of their fears of the hisses and laughter of skeptics. A distinguished professor of a popular and imparadising science, has remarked to a citizen of the city of Auburn: "These demonstrations are not new to me. I have heard them and believed they were produced by the spirits of my departed friends for several years, but I dare not tell others of it. If I do so, I shall be branded as a lunatic, become unpopular and lose my present influence." This individual was invited to go and investigate the demonstrations in Auburn, but declined. A prejudiced and skeptical community stood ready to ask his opinion after the investigation, and if he expressed in its favor, to throw the same epithets upon him which others have received. Other men equally as learned and distinguished, have investigated and become convinced, but dare not express their convictions in public. We have in our minds editors of newspapers, who have said in the presence of a number of persons that they believed these sounds and communications were from spirits, but when they came before the public in their editorial capacities, dare not say more than call these demonstrations a humbug of the nineteenth century, because such was the popular opinion of a certain portion of the upper-tendom. The bowing to popular opinion and prejudice in this matter, was one of the strong reasons that prompted us to issue the first edition of three thousand copies of this work. In preparing it for the press, we were cheered on by communications and encouragement from the same kind and friendly source which are believed to be the spirits of the departed. We were aware that our work would meet with opposition, and knew from what source that opposition would come. A very worthy and Christian clergyman, and no doubt a great admirer of that law and that religion which burned in chains a Huss and a Jerome, who did not think the same thoughts that their brothers did, and which bound a Rogers to the stake, and prompted Christian Puritans to hang Quakers and whip Baptists, remarked in the presence of several members of the Church of which he is Pastor, that the believers in this spiritualism ought to be hung. We were also aware that many of that class who had heretofore opposed every new science, would respond to the mild remark of this advocate of the principles and practice of Him who returned good for evil, and exclaimed with His dying breath, "Father forgive them for they know not what they do," and raise their holy hands in horror at the truths it contained, notwithstanding such truths are sustained by the gifted and good whose followers they profess to be. We were not disappointed in our expectations. The class who think for themselves regardless of proscribing creeds and dictation from others, have, and will continue to investigate this matter.

In accordance with our promise in the first edition, we now present a second edition of six thousand copies, revised and enlarged, with proof of statements heretofore made by us. Should the public mind demand another edition, it will be forthcoming as soon as the present is exhausted. Believing as we ever have, since we first entered upon this work, that "TRUTH IS MIGHTY AND WILL PREVAIL," we shall continue from time to time to publish such facts concerning this matter as may come before us, regardless of the cry, "YOU DO IT TO MAKE MONEY."

AUBURN, March, 1850.

INTRODUCTION.

CHAPTER I.

"There are more things in heaven and earth, Horatio, Than are dreamt of in your Philosophy."

WHEN less than two months ago we issued the first edition of this work from the press, we had little expectation of being so soon called upon to commence the work of this, although we supposed the public mind to be sufficiently prepared to investigate the matter in whatever form proof was presented, to dispose of them in a few months. We have now brought together some further evidence on the points which were mentioned, in the way of names of persons who know the truth of the statements and are willing to testify thereto.

We wish to make the proof as positive as possible, as the class of facts related are of that nature which we do not and cannot expect men to believe without the most positive testimony. We did not feel at liberty to use names in our first edition, without the consent of the persons, and we had no time to consult them after we concluded to publish the work. In this edition, those who demanded more testimony, will, we think be fully gratified, unless they are of the class who are so distrustful of their fellow men that they will believe nothing stated by others, unless they have seen and known the same things themselves. This class we do not expect to convince, and are not convinced that they would be very valuable converts to anything; neither have we any ambition for proselyting. We abhor sectarianism and would warn all who have any belief in these communications, to beware of forming sectarian organizations and becoming mixed up with the numerous isms and ites of the religious or anti-religious world.

In presenting this work to the public, we are not unconscious of the unpopularity of the subject with the mass of the community. Nor are we unconscious of the fact, that we may call down the ridicule of some part of the press and thousands of readers, who have heard of these manifestations only as an idle tale of "a haunted house," or as some common "spook story," growing out of the excited imagination of persons possessed of more marvellousness than causality, and therefore easily led to believe in anything that seems wonderful and unaccountable, whether it comes well authenticated or not. But a consciousness of having fairly, impartially, critically, and we may say skeptically examined the subject for the last two years in many different places, and under a great variety of circumstances, and that we are not alone in our investigations, but supported by hundreds of calm considerate men, who have investigated as thoroughly and skeptically as ourselves, we have no hesitation in laying the facts before the world as a phenomenon, which if not new in all respects, is certainly in the strangeness, growth and extent of the manifestations, wholly unprecedented in the annals of the world.

We are actuated by no desire to feed the popular credulity, or to excite the wonder-loving faculties of the ignorant and superstitious. They have already been made the prey of artful and designing men too long, and we are more desirous of stripping nature of the supernaturalism which has been thrown around her by the crafty plunderers of the ignorant, than to have their superstitions wrought up to a still higher state of excitement. It is for this reason, that we deem it important that a full explanation of the facts embodied in this work should be made, and a reasonable and natural explanation given of these phenomena, which shall satisfy all, that those who have investigated the most thoroughly, have really the least fears and superstitious feeling in regard to the matter. While they have thus by investigation divested themselves of all feeling of superstition, they have become fully satisfied of the importance of the manifestations, as teaching the proximity of spirits, and their power to make themselves known to persons who still remain in the visible case-ment which has become so common to us that we do not wonder, even when minutely surveying the "wonderful" machinery by which it is kept in motion. In doing this, we at the outset disclaim all pretensions to advocating supernaturalism. We place too high an estimate on the perfect workings of the laws of nature as set in motion by the "Great Spirit," which pervades, encompasses and governs all things, to attribute the beautiful and fast spreading facts, proving a direct influx of spiritual influences into the world, to anything more or less than another link in the great chain of nature's laws which is but just developing itself to man. The why of its appearance just at tis time, or the reason why it has not become more extensively known before, we are as unable to tell as we should be to tell why all the great discoveries in science were not made known to man at once, instead of waiting the slow development of the intellect of man, and thus prepare him for the gradual reception of the mighty changes which have taken place from the early stages of human development to the present time. As the earth was not formed in a few short years in its present state of geological developments, so man has not all at once sprang to his present state of refinement and knowledge. Gradual growth in the refining process, seems to be the universal law of nature.

As this is a subject upon which the world seems at the present time to be bestowing an unusual amount of attention, it may not be unprofitable for the reader and ourselves to spend some little time in the examination, to see if all the strange facts related in the following pages may not be rational and possible, if not highly probable, even to the most skeptical.

The vast and entire separation made by the old philosophy (?) and theology between spirit and matter, has led thousands of philosophical minds to reject all idea of any existence of persons beyond the tangible form which men now occupy. They have failed entirely of obtaining from old traditions, proof which looked rational to them, of any such existence. We are prepared to sympathize with those who are thus skeptical about any existence beyond the present, for we long stood in precisely the same condition. The great difficulty in the way of such minds as before intimated, is the great break in the chain between tangible and (to us) intangible substance. The fact that men could not, in a normal state, see the more refined substance to which we give the name spirit, has led theologians to declare that there was an existence, not only intangible, but absolutely something beyond, and entirely separate from matter.

Men of philosophical minds, not having positive proof of spiritual existence, have discovered this glaring inconsistency, and rejected every theory offered in favor of any existence beyond the decay of the visible body. But the developments of the last few years in Clairvoyance and Psychological science, have convinced many of the skeptics in regard to future existence, that there is a positive identity of spirits of persons who have passed on beyond this state of existence.

In regard to the facts presented in the following pages, they will be accompanied with proof too positive and conclusive to need a word in this connection in vindication of their truth. The idea of a fraud so extensively entered into by persons whose integrity has never been impeached—without any apparent motive—with great annoyance to themselves—without compensation in a pecuniary sense, would be far more mysterious and unaccountable, than to admit it to be just what it purports. It will also be borne in mind, that in this case, those who first heard these sounds, were not only subject to all the annoyance of visitors of all kinds and classes, but they were made the subjects of ridicule, and slanders were rife against their honesty in this matter, and the grossest insinuations against their moral character. As it spread from one house to another and from one neighborhood to another, the abuse of the first became somewhat modified, and it was divided on all who would not shut their eyes and ears to the facts transpiring around them. Since the public investigations that have taken place upon the subject, many have become convinced of the fact that the persons in whose presence the manifestations are made, have no agency in producing them, at least to their own knowledge, and we trust that the effect of this work may be to clear all those who have been falsely accused of fraud and deception. It is with this view that many of our friends and the friends of those where it first appeared, have urged us to go forward with this work. If we should accomplish this, it would not be among the least of the objects for which we labor.

If there are any, who, after carefully weighing the testimony here set forth, still discredit it, let them come forward, investigate and prove to the world that it is a deception, and how it is done, and all candid men will acknowledge themselves greatly indebted thereby. If they fail in proving it to be a deception, let them give a better and more philosophical solution of the phenomena, and place the world under lasting obligations to them.

CHAPTER II.

HISTORY OF THE FIRST APPEARANCES OF THE "MYSTERIOUS SOUNDS" IN THE TOWN OF ARCADIA, WAYNE COUNTY, NEW-YORK.

"The times have been
That when the brains were out, the man would die,
And there an end;—but now, they rise again
With twenty mortal murders on their crowns,
And push us from our seats. This is more strange Than such a murder is!"

THE first well authenticated history that we have of the sounds so unaccountable to those who have heard them, was in a house occupied by Mr. MICHAEL WEEKMAN in a little village known by the name of Hydesville in the town of Arcadia, Wayne county. He resided in the house for about eighteen months, and left sometime in the year 1847. Mr. Weekman makes the statement in substance as follows: That one evening, about the time of retiring, he heard a rapping on the outside door, and what was rather unusual for him, instead of familiarly bidding them "come in," stepped to the door and opened it. He had no doubt of finding some one who wished to come in, but, to his surprise, found no one there. He went back and proceeded to undress, when, just before getting into bed, he heard another rap at the door, loud and distinct. He stepped to the door quickly and opened it, but, as before, found no one there. He stepped out and looked around, supposing that some one was imposing upon him. He could discover no one and went back into the house. After a short time he heard the rapping again, and he stepped (it being often repeated) and held on to the latch, so that he might ascertain if any one had taken that means to annoy him. The rapping was repeated, the door opened instantly, but no one was to be seen! He states that he could feel the jar of the door very plainly when the rapping was heard. As he opened the the door he sprung out and went around the house, but no one was in sight. His family were fearful to have him go out lest some one intended to harm him. It always remained a mystery to him, and finally as the rapping did not at that time continue, passed from his mind, except when something of the same nature occurred to revive it.

They were at one time disturbed by a manifestation of a different nature, which might be thought more incredible than the former, had not facts proved that such occurrences were common in the families where the first class of manifestations are heard. One night their little girl, then about eight years of age, was heard to scream from fright, so that the family all were alarmed by her cries and went to her assistance. This was about midnight. She told them that something like a hand had passed over her face and head; that she had felt it on the bed and all over her, but did not become so much alarmed until it touched her face. It seemed cold, and so badly had she been frightened, that it was a long time before she could tell the cause of her alarm. It was several days before she could be induced to go into the same room to sleep.

All this might have occurred, and been only "the idle fabric of a dream;" and we should be inclined to the belief that such was the case, had we not had the most conclusive evidence that such manifestations were quite common, not only in that house, but various others where any of these strange occurrences have happened.

We hear nothing more of Mr. Weekman being disturbed by the rapping or other manifestations, or there being anything of the kind with that exception, until after the house was occupied by the family of Mr. JOHN

D. Fox. It was reserved to that family to be the instruments of communicating to the world, or to this part of it, this most singular affair. They were the ones who first, as if by accident, found out that there was an intelligence manifested even in this rapping, which at first appeared nothing more than an annoying and unaccountable noise.

The family of Mr. Fox, were well known in the neighborhood where they resided. Mr. and Mrs. Fox were connected with the Methodist Episcopal church, of which they had for many years been exemplary members, and had sustained a character unimpeachable for truth and veracity. No one who knew them, had the least suspicion of their honesty or truthfulness. At the time these occurrences first took place in the family, there were living with the parents three daughters, the youngest about twelve years of age.

There are, probably, few families in which such an occurrence could have taken place, where it would have created a greater degree of surprise and fear than in this one. They were entirely unacquainted with the history of any similar occurrence in the world, and brought up in the common routine of religious belief, they were, as in fact all the world really was and still is, entirely unprepared for such a development of the power of spirits to make themselves known to us by sounds or other ways.

From the family we gather the following facts, which are in substance the same as those embodied in a pamphlet published just after the first manifestations at their house.

They moved in the house (formerly occupied by Mr. Weekman) in the early part of the month of December, 1847, and first heard the sounds in the latter part of March, 1848. The sounds first appeared to be a slight knocking in one of the bed-rooms on the floor. When the rapping was heard, they felt a tremulous motion or jar on the floor, and distinctly felt it while in bed. This feeling has been observed by most persons who have examined the subject and heard the sounds. The best idea we may be able to give of the feeling, is to say that it very nearly resembles the application of a galvanic battery to whatever you stand upon. The jar seems more of that nature than that of a stroke from any tangible substance. The first time they heard it, was in the evening just after they had retired. The whole family occupied at that time the same room, and all distinctly heard the rapping. They arose and searched with a light to find the cause of the noise, which continued all the time they were searching, and near the same spot. It continued that night until they all fell asleep, which was not until nearly or quite midnight. From this time the noise continued to be heard every night.

In the evening of the 31st of March, they concluded to call in the neighbors, the noise still continuing. At this time, none of the family had ever noticed it in the day time. On the evening above alluded to, (31st of March,) they retired uncommonly early, as they had been disturbed and broken of their rest for several nights in a vain attempt to discover from whence the sounds proceeded. They thought that this night they would not be disturbed by it, whatever it was.

Mr. Fox had not retired when the usual sounds commenced. The girls who occupied another bed in the same room, heard the sounds and endeavored to imitate them by snapping their fingers. The attempt was first made by the youngest girl, then about twelve years old. When she made the noise with her fingers, the sounds were repeated just as many times as she made them. The sound was not like that which she made, only the number of raps. When she stopped snapping her fingers, the sounds stopped for a short time. One of the other girls then said in sport, "Now do what I do; count one, two, three, four, five, six," &c., at the same time striking one hand in the other. The same number of blows or sounds, were repeated as in the other case. As this slight manifestation of intelligence was displayed, she began to be alarmed, and desisted from trying any more experiments. Mrs. Fox then said, "count ten," and there were ten distinct strokes or sounds. She then said, will you tell the age of Cathy, (one of the children,) and it was answered by the same number of raps that she was years of age. In like manner, the age of her different children was told correctly by this unseen visitor.

Mrs. Fox then asked if it was a human being that was making that noise, and if it was, to manifest it by making the same noise. There was no sound in answer to this question. She then asked if it was a spirit, and requested if it was, that it would manifest it by making two distinct sounds. As soon as she had made the request, she heard the two raps as she desired. She then proceeded to inquire if it was an injured spirit and to request an answer in the same way, and the rapping was repeated. In this way it answered her until she ascertained that it purported to be the spirit of a man, and that he was murdered in that house by a person who had occupied it some years before; that he was a pedler and murdered for his money. To the question of how old he was, there were thirty-one distinct raps. She also ascertained by the same means that he was a married man and had left a wife and five children; that his wife was dead, and had been dead two years.

After ascertaining so much, she asked the question: "Will the noise continue if I call in the neighbors?" The answer was by rapping in the affirmative. They then for the first time began to call in their neighbors to help, if possible, solve this great mystery.

They at first called in their nearest neighbors, who came, thinking they would have a hearty laugh at the family for being frightened; but when the first lady that came in found that the noise, whatever it might be, could tell the age of herself as well as others, and give correct answers to questions on matters of which the family of Mr. Fox was entirely ignorant, she concluded that there was something beside a subject of ridicule and laughter in those unseen but audible communications. These neighbors insisted upon calling in others, who came, and after investigation, were as much confounded as at first.

The family being somewhat alarmed and much fatigued, left the house for the night. The next day the excitement began to spread, and the house was filled with anxious seekers for the unknown and invisible visitor. Through that day and up to that time, there were no sounds heard in the day time.

On Sunday morning, April 2d, the noise commenced in the day time, and was heard all that day by all who could get into the house, as the crowd which came from all quarters, was much greater than the house would hold. We have heard it estimated, that at one time there were as many as five hundred people who had gathered to hear the sounds; so great was the excitement at the commencement of these strange occurrences.

On Saturday evening, there was a committee appointed to ask questions and report what the result was, and it was nothing of any importance differing from what is here related.

As a confirmation of what we have here stated as being related to us by the family, we give the following extracts from the testimony of WILLIAM DUESLER, of Arcadia, and an immediate neighbor of Mr. Fox, at the time of the transaction. This statement was published in a pamphlet by E. E. LEWIS, Esq., of Canandaigua, New York, which contains the testimony of many persons in the neighborhood. Mr. Duesler says:

"I live in this place. I moved from Cayuga County here, last October. I live within a few rods of the house in which these noises have been heard. The first I heard anything about them, was one week ago last Friday evening, (31st day of March.) Mrs. Redfield came over to my house to get my wife to go over to Mr. Fox's. Mrs. Redfield appeared to be very much agitated. My wife wanted I should go with them, and I accordingly went. When she told us what she wanted us to go over there for, I laughed at her, and ridiculed the idea that there was anything mysterious in it. I told her it was all nonsense, and that it could easily be accounted for. This was about nine o'clock in the evening. There were some twelve or fourteen persons there when I got there. Some were so frightened that they did not want to go into the room. I went into the room and sat down on the bed. Mr. Fox asked questions, and I heard the rapping which they had spoken of, distinctly. I felt the bedstead jar when the sound was produced.

Mrs. Fox then asked it if it would answer my questions if I asked any, and if so rap. It then rapped three times. I then asked if it was an injured spirit, and it rapped. I asked if it had come to hurt any one who was present and it did not rap. I then reversed this question and it rapped. I asked if I or my father had injured it, (as we had formerly lived in the house,) there was no noise. Upon asking the negative of these questions, the rapping was heard. I then asked if Mr. —, (naming a person who had formerly lived in the house,) had injured it, and if so, manifest it by rapping, and it made three knocks louder than common, and at the same time the bedstead jarred more than it had done before. I then inquired if it was murdered for money, and the knocking was heard. I then requested it to rap when I mentioned the sum of money for which it was murdered. I then asked if it was one hundred, two, three or four, and when I came to five hundred the rapping was heard. All in the room said they heard it distinctly. I then asked the question if it was five hundred dollars, and the rapping was heard.

After this, I went over and got Artemas W. Hyde to come over. He came over. I then asked over nearly the same questions as before, and got the same answers. Mr. Redfield went after David Jewell and wife, and Mrs. Hyde also came. After they came in, I asked the same questions over again, and got the same answers. * * * * I then asked it to rap my age—the number of years of my age. It rapped thirty times. This is my age, and I do not think any one about here knew my age except myself and family. I then told it to rap my wife's age, and it rapped thirty times, which is her exact age; several of us counted it at the time. I then asked it to rap A. W. Hyde's age, and it rapped thirty-two, which he says is his age; he was there at the time and counted it with the rest of us. Then Mrs. A. W. Hyde's age, and it rapped thirty-one, which she said was her age; she was also there at the time. I then continued to ask it to rap the age of different persons (naming them,) in the room, and it did so correctly as they all said.

I then asked the number of children in the different families in the neighborhood, and it told them correctly in the usual way, by rapping. Also the number of deaths that had taken place in the families, and it told correctly. I then asked it to rap its own age, and it rapped thirty-one times distinctly. I then asked it if it left a family and it rapped. I asked it to rap the number of children it left, and it rapped five times; then the number of girls, and it rapped three; then the number of boys, and it rapped twice. Before this I had asked if it was a man, and it answered by rapping, it was; if it was a pedler, and it rapped.

I then asked in regard to the time it was murdered, and in the usual way, by asking the different days of the week, and the different hours of the day; that it was murdered on a Tuesday night, about twelve o'clock. The rapping was heard only when this particular time was mentioned. When it was asked if it was murdered on a Wednesday or Thursday or

Friday night, &c., there was no rapping. I asked if it carried any trunk, and it rapped that it did. Then how many, and it rapped once. In the same way we ascertained that it had goods in the trunk, and that ——— took them when he murdered him; and that he had a pack of goods besides.

I asked if its wife was living, and it did not rap; if she was dead, and it rapped. I then asked it to rap the number of years the wife had been dead, and it rapped twice. In the same way I ascertained that its children were now living; that they lived in this State—and after asking if in such and such county, (naming over the different counties,) at last when I asked if they lived in Orleans county, the rapping was heard, and at no other time. This was tried over several times, and the result was always the same. I then tried to ascertain the first letters of its name by calling over the different letters of the alphabet. I commenced with A, and asked if that was the initial of its first name; there was no rapping. When I came to C, the rapping was heard, and at no other letter in the alphabet. I then asked in the same way in regard to the initials of its sir name; and when I asked if it was R, the rapping commenced. We then tried all the other letters, but could get no answer by the usual rapping. I then asked if we could find out the whole name by reading over all the letters of the alphabet, and there was no rapping. I then reversed the question, and the rapping was heard. * * *

There were a good many more questions asked on that night by myself and others, which I do not now remember. They were all answered readily in the same way. I stayed in the house until about twelve o'clock, and then came home. Mr. Redfield and Mr. Fox stayed in the house that night.

Saturday night I went over again, about seven o'clock. The house was full of people when I got there. They said it had been rapping some time. I went into the room. It was rapping in answer to questions when I went in. I went to asking questions, and asked over some of the same ones that I did the night before, and it answered me the same as it did then. I also asked different questions, and it answered them. Some of those in the room wanted me to go out and let some one else ask the questions. I did so, and came home. There were as many as three hundred people in and around the house at this time, I should think. Hiram Soverhill, Esq., and Volney Brown, asked it questions while I was there, and it rapped in answer to them.

I went over again on Sunday, between one and two o'clock P. M. I went into the cellar with several others, and had them all leave the house over our heads; and then I asked, if there had been a man buried in the cellar, to manifest it by rapping, or any other noise or sign. The moment I asked the question, there was a sound like the falling of a stick about a foot long and half an inch through, on the floor in the bedroom over our heads. It did not seem to bound at all; there was but one sound. I then told Stephen Smith to go right up and examine the room, and see if he could discover the cause of the noise. He came back and said he could discover nothing—that there was no one in the room or in that part of the house. I then asked two more questions, and it rapped in the usual way. We all went up stairs and made a thorough search, but could find nothing.

I then got a knife and fork and tried to see if I could make the same noise by dropping them, but I could not. This was all I heard on Sunday. There is only one floor, or partition or thickness between the bedroom and the cellar; no place where anything could be secreted to make the noise. When this noise was heard in the bedroom, I could feel a slight tremulous motion or jar.

• • • • On Monday night I heard this noise again, and asked the same questions I did before, and got the same answers. This is the last time I have heard any rapping. I can in no way account for this singular noise which I and others have heard. It is a mystery to me which I am wholly unable to solve. I am willing to testify under oath that I did not make the noises or rapping which I and others heard; that I do not know of any person who did or could have made them; that I have spent considerable time since then, in order to satisfy myself as to the cause of it, but cannot account for it on any other ground than that it is supernatural. I lived in the same house about seven years ago, and at that time never heard any noises of the kind in and about the premises, I have understood from Johnson and others, who have lived there before ——— moved there, that there were no such sounds heard there while they occupied the house. I never believed in haunted houses, or heard or saw any thing but what I could account for before; but this I cannot account for.

(Signed,) WM. DUESLER."

April 12, 1848.

To the same effect is the testimony of the following persons, whose certificates are published in the work alluded to, viz: John D. Fox, Walter Scotten, Elizabeth Jewel, Lorren Tenney, James Bridger, Chauncey P. Losey, Benjamin F. Clark, Elizabeth Fox, Vernelia Culver, William D. Storer, Marvin P. Losey, David S. Fox and Mary Redfield.

These are only a few selected from the immediate neighbors of Mr. Fox. The certificate of persons who have examined this matter up to this time, would swell to hundreds if not thousands.

CHAPTER III.

HISTORY OF SIMILAR TRANSACTIONS IN THE WESLEY FAMILY, (FATHER OF REV. JOHN WESLEY,) AT EPWORTH, ENGLAND, IN 1716.

IN order to show that the foregoing narrative is not wholly without a parallel in the world's history, and that if the present manifestations are a deception, those who are carrying it on have no claim to the credit of originality, we devote the present chapter to extracts from the proofs of similar transactions in the "Wesley family" so long ago as 1716. The accounts come too well authenticated to be doubted, and have never, to our knowledge, been disputed by persons of any pretensions to a knowledge of the history of that family, or having the least confidence in the word of those whose character has never been impeached. Nine of that family testify to the same things as well as others. We find this narrative in a book called "Memoirs of the Wesley Family," by ADAM CLARK, LL. D., F. A. S., second edition, 1846.

Narrative drawn up by Mr. John Wesley, and published by him in the Arminian Magazine.

When I was very young, I heard several letters read, wrote to my elder brother by my father, giving an account of strange disturbances, which were in his house at Epworth, Lincolnshire.

When I went down thither, in the year 1720, I carefully inquired into the particulars. I spoke to each of the persons who were then in the house, and took down what each could testify, of his or her own knowledge, the sum of which was this:—

On December 2nd, 1716, while Robert Brown, my father's servant, was sitting with one of the maids, a little before ten at night, in the dining-room which opened into the garden, they both heard one knocking at the door. Quickly it knocked again, and groaned. "It is Mr. Turpine," said Robert; "he has the stone, and used to groan so." He opened the door again twice or thrice, the knocking being twice or thrice repeated; but still seeing nothing, and being a little startled, they rose and went up to bed. When Robert came to the top of the garret stairs, he saw a hand-mill, which was at a little distance, whirled about very swiftly. The next day, he and the maid related these things to the other maid, who laughed heartily, and said, "What a couple of fools you are! I defy anything to fright me." After churning in the evening, she put the butter in the tray, and had no sooner carried it into the dairy, than she heard a knocking on the shelf where several puncheons of milk stood, first above the shelf, then below. She took the candle, and searched both above and below; but being able to find nothing, threw down butter, tray and all, and ran away for life. The next evening, between five and six o'clock, my sister Molly, then about twenty years of age, sitting in the dining-room reading, heard as if it were the door that led into the hall open, and a person walking in, that seemed to have on a silk night-gown, rustling and trailing along. It seemed to walk round her, then to the door, then round again; but she could see nothing. She thought, "It signifies nothing to run away; for, whatever it is, it can run faster than me." So she rose, put her book under her arm, and walked slowly away. After supper, she was sitting with my sister Sukey, (about a year older than her,) in one of the chambers, and telling her what had happened. She made quite light of it, telling her, "I wonder you are so easily frightened; I would fain see what would fright me." Presently a knocking began under the table. She took the candle and looked, but could find nothing. Then the iron casement began to clatter, and the lid of a warming-pan. Next the latch of the door moved up and down without ceasing. She started up, leaped into the bed without undressing, pulled the bed-clothes over her head, and never ventured to look up till next morning. A night or two after, my sister Hetty, a year younger than my sister Molly, was waiting as usual, between nine and ten, to take away my father's candle, when she heard one coming down the garret stairs, walking slowly by her, then going down the best stairs, then up the back stairs, and up the garret stairs; at every step it seemed the house shook from top to bottom. Just then my father knocked. She went in, took his candle, and got to bed as soon as possible. In the morning she told this to my eldest sister, who told her, "You know I believe none of these things; pray let me take away the candle to-night, and I will find out the trick." She accordingly took my sister Hetty's place, and had no sooner taken away the candle than she heard a noise below. She hastened down stairs to the hall, where the noise was; but it was then in the kitchen. She ran into the kitchen, where it was drumming on the inside of the screen. When she went round, it was drumming on the outside; and so always on the side opposite to her. Then she heard a knocking at the back kitchen door. She ran to it, unlocked it softly, and when the knocking was repeated, suddenly opened it; but nothing was to be seen. As soon as she had shut it, the knocking began again. She opened it again, but could see nothing. When she went to shut the door, it was violently thrust against her; she let it fly open, but nothing appeared. She went again to shut it, and it was again thrust against her; but she set her knee and her shoulder to the door, forced it to, and turned the key. Then the knocking began again; but she let it go on, and went up to bed. However, from that time she was thoroughly convinced that there was no imposture in the affair.

The next morning, my sister telling my mother what had happened, she said, "If I hear anything myself, I shall know how to judge." Soon after, she begged her to come into the nursery. She did, and heard

The corner of the room, as it were, the violent rocking of a cradle; but no cradle had been there for some years. She was convinced it was preternatural, and earnestly prayed it might not disturb her in her own chamber at the hours of retirement; and it never did. She now thought it was proper to tell my father. But he was extremely angry, and said, "Sukey, I am ashamed of you; these boys and girls frighten one another; but you are a woman of sense, and should know better. Let me hear of it no more."

At six in the evening he had family prayers as usual. When he began the prayer for the king, a knocking began all around the room; and a thundering knock attended the amen. The same was heard from this time every morning and evening, while the prayer for the king was repeated.

Being informed that Mr. Hoole, the vicar of Haxey, (an eminently pious and sensible man,) could give me some further information, I walked over to him. He said, "Robert Brown came over to me, and told me your father desired my company. When I came, he gave me an account of all that had happened; particularly the knocking during family prayer. But that evening (to my great satisfaction) we had no knocking at all. But between nine and ten a servant came in, and said, 'Old Jeffrey is coming, (that was the name of one that died in the house,) for I hear the signal.' This, they inform me, was heard every night about a quarter before ten. It was toward the top of the house, on the outside, at the north-east corner, resembling the loud creaking of a saw; or rather that of a windmill, when the body of it is turned about, in order to shift the sails to the wind. We then heard a knocking over our heads; and Mr. Wesley, catching up a candle, said, 'Come, Sir, now you shall hear for yourself.' We went up stairs; he with much hope, and I, to say the truth, with much fear. When we came into the nursery, it was knocking in the next room; when we were there, it was knocking in the nursery. And there it continued to knock, though we came in, particularly at the head of the bed, (which was of wood,) in which Miss Hetty and two of her younger sisters lay. Mr. Wesley, observing that they were much affected, though asleep, sweating and trembling exceedingly, was very angry; and, pulling out a pistol, was going to fire at the place from whence the sound came. But I caught him by the arm, and said, 'Sir, you are convinced this is something preternatural. If so, you cannot hurt it; but you give it power to hurt you.' He then went close to the place, and said sternly, 'Thou deaf and dumb devil, why dost thou fright these children, that cannot answer for themselves? Come to me in my study that am a man.' Instantly it knocked his knock, (the particular knock which he always used at the gate,) as if it would shiver the board in pieces, and we heard nothing more that night." Till this time, my father had never heard the least disturbances in his study. But the next evening, as he attempted to go into his study, (of which none had any key but himself,) when he opened the door, it was thrust back with such violence as had like to have thrown him down. However, he thrust the door open, and went in. Presently there was knocking, first on one side, then on the other; and, after a time, in the next room, wherein my sister Nancy was. He went into that room, and (the noise continuing) adjured it to speak; but in vain. He then said, "These spirits love darkness; put out the candle, and perhaps it will speak." She did so, and he repeated his adjuration; but still there was only knocking, and no articulate sound. Upon this he said, "Nancy, two Christians are an overmatch for the devil. Go all of you down stairs; it may be, when I am alone, he will have courage to speak." When she was gone, a thought came in, and he said, "If thou art the spirit of my son Samuel, I pray knock three knocks, and no more." Immediately all was silence; and there was no more knocking at all that night. I asked my sister Nancy (then about fifteen years old) whether she was not afraid when my father used that adjuration? She answered, she was sadly afraid it would speak when she put out the candle; but she was not at all afraid in the daytime, when it walked after her, as she swept the chambers, as it constantly did, and seemed to sweep after her; only she thought he might have done it for her, and saved her the trouble. By this time, all my sisters were so accustomed to these noises, that they gave them little disturbance. A gentle tapping at their bed-head usually began between nine and ten at night. They then commonly said to each other, "Jeffrey is coming; it is time to go to sleep." And if they heard a noise in the day, and said to my youngest sister, "Hark, Kizzy, Jeffrey is knocking above," she would run up stairs, and pursue it from room to room, saying she desired no better diversion.

A few nights after, my father and mother were just gone to bed, and the candle was not taken away, when they heard three blows, and a second, and a third three, as it were with a large oaken staff, struck upon a chest which stood by the bed-side. My father immediately arose, put on his night gown, and hearing great noises below, took the candle and went down; my mother walked by his side. As they went down the broad stairs, they heard as if a vessel full of silver was poured upon my mother's breast, and ran jingling down to her feet. Quickly after there was a sound, as if a large iron ball was thrown among many bottles under the stairs; but nothing was hurt. Soon after, our large mastiff dog came and ran to shelter himself between them. While the disturbances continued, he used to bark and leap, and snap on one side and the other, and that frequently before any person in the room heard any noise at all. But after two or three days he used to tremble, and creep away before the noise began. And by this the family knew it was at hand; nor did the observation ever fail. A little before my father and mother came into the hall, it seemed as if a very large coal was violently thrown upon the floor, and dashed all in pieces; but nothing was seen. My father then cried out, "Sukey, do you not hear? All the pewter is thrown about the kitchen." But when they looked, all the pewter stood in its place. There then was a loud knocking at the back door. My father opened it, but saw nothing. It was then at the fore door. He opened that, but it was still lost labor. After opening first the one, then the other, several times, he turned and went up to bed. But the noises were so violent all over the house, that they could not sleep till four in the morning.

Several gentlemen and clergymen now earnestly advised my father to quit the house. But he constantly answered, "No; let the devil flee from me; I will never flee from the devil." But he wrote to my eldest brother at London to come down. He was preparing so to do, when another letter came, informing him the disturbances were over, after they had continued, the latter part of the time day and night, from the second of December to the end of January."

The following are copied from the same work, which copies some twelve or fifteen letters that passed between different members of the family on the subject of these disturbances.

Letter III.—From Mr. S. Wesley to his Mother.

"DEAR MOTHER:—Those who are so wise as not to believe any supernatural occurrences, though ever so well attested, could find a hundred questions to ask about those strange noises you wrote me an account of; but for my part, I know not what question to put,^a which, if answered, would confirm me more in the belief of what you tell me.—Two or three I have heard from others. Was there never a new maid or man in the house that might play tricks? Was there nobody above in the garrets when the walking was there? Did all the family hear it together when they were in one room, or at one time? Did it seem to all to be in the same place, at the same time? Could not cats, or rats, or dogs be the sprites? Was the whole family asleep when my father and you went down stairs? Such doubts as these being replied to, though they could not, as God himself assures us, convince them who believe not Moses and the prophets, yet would strengthen such as do believe. As to my particular opinion concerning the events foreboded by these noises, I cannot, I must confess, form any. I think since it was not permitted to speak, all guesses must be in vain. The end of spirits' actions is yet more hidden than that of men, and even this latter puzzles the most subtle politicians. That we may be struck so as to prepare for any ill, may, it is possible, be one design of Providence. It is surely our duty and wisdom to do so.

Dear mother, I beg your blessing on your dutiful and affectionate son.

S. WESLEY.

Jan. 19, 1716–17, Saturday, Dean's Yard, Westminster."

Letter IV.—From Mrs. Wesley to her son Samuel.

"January 25 or 27, 1716–17.

DEAR SAM:—Though I am not one of those that will believe nothing supernatural, but am rather inclined to think there would be frequent intercourse between good spirits and us, did not our deep lapse into sensuality prevent it; yet I was a great while ere I could credit anything of what the children and servants reported concerning the noises they heard in several parts of our house. Nay, after I had heard them myself, I was willing to persuade myself and them that it was only rats or weasels that disturbed us; and having been formerly troubled with rats, which were frighted away by sounding a horn, I caused a horn to be procured, and made them blow it all over the house. But from that night they began to blow, the noises were more loud and distinct, both day and night, than before; and that night we rose and went down I was entirely convinced that it was entirely beyond the power of any human creature to make such strange and various noises.

As to your questions, I will answer them particularly: but withal, I desire my answers may satisfy none but yourself; for I would not have the matter imparted to any. We had both man and maid new this last Martinmas, yet I do not believe either of them occasioned the disturbance, both for the reason above mentioned, and because they were more frightened than any body else. Besides, we have often heard the noise when they were in the room by us; and the maid particularly was in such a panic that she was almost incapable of all business, nor durst ever go from one room to another, or stay by herself a minute, after it began to be dark.

The man Robert Brown, whom you well know, was most visited by it, lying in the garret, and has been often frighted down barefoot, and almost naked, not daring to stay alone to put on his clothes; nor do I think if he had power, he would be guilty of such villainy. When the walking was heard in the garret, Robert was in bed in the next room, in a sleep so sound that he never heard your father and me walk up and down, though he walked not softly I am sure. All the family has heard it together, in the same room, at the same time, particularly at family prayers. It always seemed to all present in the same place at the same time; though often before any could say, it is here, it would remove to another place.

All the family, as well as Robin, were asleep when your father and I went down stairs, nor did they wake in the nursery when we held the candle close by them; only we observed that Hetty trembled exceedingly in her sleep, as she always did before the noise awaked her. It commonly was nearer her than the rest, which she took notice of, and was much frightened, because she thought it had a particular spite at her. I could multiply particular instances, but I forbear. I believe your father will write to you about it shortly. Whatever may be the design of Providence in permitting these things, I cannot say. Secret things belong to God. But I entirely agree with you, that it is our duty to prepare seriously for all events.

S. WESLEY."

The following is an extract from an account of one of the sisters (Nancy) to her brother Jack. It is testimony which goes to show that other things herein related were not entirely unknown to the "Wesley Family."

"When five or six were set in the nursery together, a cradle would seem to be rocked in the room over head, though no cradle had ever been there. One night she was sitting on the press bed, playing at cards with some of my sisters, when my sisters Molly, Hetty, Patty and Kezzy, were in the room, and Robert Brown. The bed on which my sister Nancy sat was lifted up with her on it. She leaped down, and said, 'Surely, old Jeffry would not run away with her.' However, they persuaded her to sit down again, which she had scarce done, when it was again lifted up several times successively to a considerable height; upon which she left her seat, and would not be prevailed upon to sit there any more.

Whenever they began to mention Mr. S., it presently began to knock, and continued to do so until they changed the discourse. All the time my sister Sukey was writing her last letter to him, it made a very great noise all round the room; and the night after she set out for London, it knocked till morning with scarce any intermission.

"Mr. Hoole read prayers once, but it knocked as usual at the prayers for the king and prince. The knockings at those prayers were only toward the beginning of the disturbances, for a week or thereabouts."

Although the disturbances generally ceased after a few weeks at the house of the Wesleys, we have good evidence that it was manifested frequently in the presence of one of the daughters for thirty-four years and how much longer the history does not inform us. The following is a further extract on this subject :

"But there is a fact of which all Mr. Wesley's biographers are ignorant, namely, that Jeffrey, as the spirit was called, continued to molest some branches of the family for many years. We have seen that Miss Emily Wesley was the first who gave it the name Jeffrey, from an old man of that name who had died there ; and that she was more disturbed by it than any of the family. I have an original letter of hers to her brother John, dated February 16, 1750, thirty-four years after the time, as is generally supposed, that Jeffrey had discontinued his operations, in which he is named. Emily was now Mrs. Harper, having married a person of that name, an apothecary, who first lived in Epworth, and afterwards in London, or near it; and the letter is addressed to the Rev. Mr. John Wesley, Foundry.

DEAR BROTHER, — I want most sadly to see you, and talk some hours with you, as in times past. Some things are too hard for me; these I want you to solve. One doctrine of yours, and of many more, namely: no happiness can be found in any or all things in this world; that, as I have sixteen years of my own experience which lie flatly against it, I want to talk with you about. Another thing is, that wonderful thing, called by us Jeffrey. You won't laugh at me for being superstitious, if I tell you how certainly that something calls on me against any extraordinary new affliction; but so little is known of the invisible world, that I, at least, am not able to judge whether it be a friendly or an evil spirit. * * * * *

EMILY HARPER."

The following remarks of Dr. Clark are so appropriate to this time and this subject, that we give them in this place :

"The story of the disturbances at the parsonage house in Epworth is not unique; I myself, and several others of my particular acquaintance, were eye and ear witnesses of transactions of a similar kind, which could never be traced to any source of trick or imposture, and appeared to be the forerunners of two very tragical events in the disturbed family; after which no noise or disturbance ever took place. In the history of my own life I have related the matter in sufficient detail.

Dr. Priestley, who first published the preceding papers, says of the whole story, that 'it is perhaps the best authenticated and best told story of the kind that is any where extant; on which account, and to exercise the ingenuity of some speculative persons, he thought it not undeserving of being published.' Preface, p. xi. After this concession, he then enters into a train of arguing, to show that there could be nothing supernatural in it; for Dr. P., as a materialist, could give no credit to any account of angels, spirits, &c., the existence of which he did not credit; and because he could see no good end to be answered by it, therefore he thinks he may safely conclude no miracle was wrought. Such argumentation can justify no man in disbelieving a story of this kind, told so circumstantially, and witnessed by such a number of persons, whose veracity was beyond doubt, and whose capability to judge between fact and fiction, trick and genuine operation, was beyond that of most persons, who, in any country or age, have come forward to give testimony on a subject of this nature. He at last gets rid of the whole matter thus: "What appears most probable, at this distance of time, in the present case, is that it was a trick of the servants, assisted by some of their neighbors; and that nothing was meant by it besides puzzling the family and amusing themselves; and that such a secret should be kept, so that the matter was never discovered, is not at all to be wondered at." We can scarcely suppose that this mode of reasoning satisfied the mind of Dr. Priestley, else he must have been satisfied much more easily on a subject which struck at the vitals of his own system, than he would have been on any doctrine relative to philosophy and chemistry. He had Mrs. Wesley's letter before him, which stated that the servants could not be employed in the work, for reasons which she there adduces; and especially, because those very servants were often in the room with themselves, when the disturbances were most rife. But all suppositions of this kind are completely nullified by the preceding letter of Mrs. Harper, formerly Emily Wesley, which states that even to thirty-four years afterward, Jeffrey continued to molest her. Did her father's servants and the Epworth neighbors pursue her for thirty-four years through her various settlements, from 1716 to 1750, and were even at that time playing their pranks against her in London? How ridiculous and absurd! and this is the very best solution of these facts that Dr. Priestley could arrive at in deference to his system of materialism! The letter of Mrs. Harper I consider of vast importance, as it removes the last subterfuge of determinate incredulity and false philosophy on this subject.

A philosopher should not be satisfied with the reasons advanced by Dr. Priestley. He who will maintain his creed in opposition to his senses, and the most undisguised testimony of the most respectable witnesses, had better at once, for his own credit's sake, throw the whole story in the region of doubt, where all such relations, no matter how authenticated,

"Upwhirl'd aloft,
Fly o'er the back side of the world far off,
Into a limbus large and broad!"

And instead of its being called the paradise of fools, it may be styled the limbus of philosophic materialists, into which they hurl whatever they cannot comprehend, choose not to believe, or please to call superstitious and absurd. And they treat such matters so, because they quadrate not with principles unfounded on the divine testimony, feebly supported by true philosophy, and contradictory to the plain, unbiassed, good common sense of nineteen-twentieths of mankind.

But my business is to relate facts, of which the reader must make what use he chooses."

Precisely similar occurrences took place in Winesburg, Germany, and other places, from the year 1825 to 1828, the authentic accounts of which are given in a work by JUSTINUS KERNER, called "The Seeress of Provorst."

The "Seeress" was a Clairvoyant and both saw and heard the spirits of various persons.

From Mrs. Crowe's translation we make the following extract. On page 63 the account says,

"These spirits were audible to many and various people, but only accidentally; never when they were watched for. The sounds they made chiefly resembled slight knockings, as on the wall, table, bedstead, and sometimes in the air; rustling as of paper, rolling of balls, and pattering of feet." On page 72, in speaking of a particular spirit he says: "His appearance was always preceded by knockings on the walls, noises in the air, and other sounds, which were heard by many different people, as can be testified to by more than twenty credible witnesses;" and on page 86, "We went to bed about ten, and remained awake until eleven when I fell asleep. About twelve Mrs. H., (the Seeress,) asked for some broth, and I was awakened by her sister getting out of bed to give it to her. She was scarcely in bed again when we heard a strange crackling and shuffling on the floor; then there was a knocking on the walls and Mrs. H.'s bed as with hammers. I watched Mrs. H. all the time. She lay quite quiet, with her hands on the coverlet; presently she began to speak but without setting up. Her conversation seemed to be addressed to something near her bed, which I could not see. By and by, she said, 'the spectre is gone, but will return anon;' and then we again heard the sounds and she spoke as before. Then I heard her say 'open it yourself;' and I saw, with an awe which I had not before felt, the cover of the book move as it lay on her bed, and it was opened by an unseen hand. I could not perceive the slightest motion on the part of Mrs. H. nor her bed."

Many similar accounts are related in this work, and some very singular transactions are testified to by Councillor Hahn, as having taken place in the Castle of Slawensick, in Silesia, of which he was an eye and ear witness.

We find in the "Ontario Repository" published at Canandaigua, November 26, 1834, the following which it quotes from the Newark Daily Advertiser under the head of "Tale of the Marvel."

"Rumor with one of her ten thousand tongues brought us a mysterious story yesterday, of a 'mysterious lady,' which so far challenged credit, that we were induced to send a competent witness in the afternoon to procure more particular information. Our agent after the fullest opportunity of observation, has returned this morning, and communicates the following facts, which we give without embellishment, as he relates them. On Monday night of last week the family of Mr. JOSEPH BAXTER, living in the township of Woodbridge, about three miles from Rahway in this county, were alarmed after they had retired, by a loud thumping against the house. Mr. B.'s first impression was that some person was trying to break in, but farther observation soon undeceived him. The thumping however continued at short intervals, until the family became so alarmed that Mr. B. called in some of his neighbors, who remained up with the family until daylight, when the thumping ceased. The next evening after nightfall, the noise re-commenced, when it was ascertained to be mysteriously connected with the movements of a servant girl in the family—a white girl, about fourteen years of age. While passing a window on the stairs for example, a sudden jar accompanied with an explosive sound, broke a pane of glass, the girl at the same time being seized with a violent spasm. This of course very much alarmed her; and the physician, Dr. Drake, was sent for, came, and bled her (of course.) The bleeding however produced no apparent effect. The noise still continued as before, at intervals, wherever the girl went, each sound producing more or less of a spasm, and the physician, with all the family remained up during the night. At daylight the thumping ceased again. In the evening the same thing was repeated, commencing a little earlier than before, and so every evening since, continuing each night until morning and commencing each night a little earlier than before, until yesterday, when the thumping began about 12 o'clock at noon. The circumstances were soon generally spread through the neighborhood, and have produced so much excitement that the house has been filled and surrounded from sunrise to sunset for nearly a week. Every imaginable means have been resorted to, in order to unravel the phenomenon. At one time the girl would be removed from one apartment to another, but without effect. Wherever she was placed, at certain intervals, the thumping noise would be heard in the room. She was taken to a neighboring house. The same result followed. When carried out of doors, however, no noise is heard. Dr. Drake who has been constant in his attendance during the whole period, occasionally aided by other scientific observers, was with us last evening for two hours, when we were politely allowed a variety of experiments with the girl, in addition to those heretofore tried, to satisfy ourselves that there is no imposition in the case, and if possible to discover the secret agent of the mystery. The girl was in an upper room with a part of the family when we reached the house. The noise then resembled that which would be produced by a person violently thumping the upper floor with the head of an axe five or six times in succession jarring the house, ceasing a few minutes and then resuming as before. We were soon introduced into the department and permitted to observe for ourselves. The girl appeared to be in perfect health, cheerful and free from the spasms felt at first and entirely relieved from every thing like the fear or apprehension which she manifested for some days. The invisible noise however, continued to occur as before, though somewhat diminished in frequency, while we were in the room. In order to ascertain more satisfactorily that she did not produce it voluntarily, among other experiments we placed her on a chair on a blanket in the center of the room, bandaged the chair with a cloth, fastening her feet on the front round and confining her hands together on her lap. No change however, was produced. The thumping continued as before, except that it was not quite so loud. The noise resembling that which would be produced by stamping on the floor with a heavy heel, yet she did not move a limb or muscle that we could discover. She remained in this position long enough to satisfy all in the room that the girl exercised, voluntarily, no sort of agency in producing the noise. It was observed that the noise became greater the farther she was removed from any other person. We placed her in the doorway of a closet in the room, the door being ajar to allow her to stand in the passage. In less than one minute the door flew open as if violently struck with a mallet, accompanied by precisely such a noise as such a thump would produce. This was repeated several times with the same effect. In short, in whatever position she was placed, whether in or out of the room, similar results, varied a little perhaps by circumstances, were produced. There is certainly no deception in the case. And now for conjecture. For ourselves we offer none, but among other conjectures which have been suggested by Dr. D. and others, is that the phenomenon is electrical. * * * * The noise was heard at least one hundred yards from the house."

How long these sounds continued we are not informed, but we are informed that the family became so much annoyed that they were obliged to give notice that they would receive no more company unless professional men introduced by their physician.

In regard to the spasms it seems that after the first few times she had none, and was "apparently in good health." The sounds heard in the cases within our knowledge, produce no such effect. Persons sometimes feel a sensation of electricity passing over their limbs when they stand in the vicinity of those who get the sounds most freely, although the particular persons who seem to be the medium feel no sensation at all. In one or two instances we have seen a perceptible shock as if caused by a galvanic battery especially when the persons were under the influence of Magnetism. We leave these things to be accounted for by those better acquainted with the philosophy of these phenomena. We wish all the facts and details to be before the world, that judgment may be rendered according to the evidence in the case.

These accounts come down to us sustained by the most positive testimony, and are beyond dispute, to say nothing of the well authenticated cases which come to us by those whom we know, but who have been ashamed to let the world know what they have themselves experienced, and so keep their secret until others more daring shall lay before the world similar facts, when they step forward and add their mite to the testimony.

CHAPTER IV.

CONCERNING THESE SOUNDS AND THE PROBABLE PHILOSOPHY THEREOF.

"We know in day time there are stars about us,
Just as at night, and name them what and where
By sight of science; so by faith we know,
Although we MAY not see them till our night,
That spirits are about us."

In this place we may be allowed to stop and make some comment upon the strange occurrences which are recorded in the foregoing pages. There must certainly exist some natural cause, by which these sounds are made, and from what has already been stated, it will be seen that, at least, some degree of intelligence has been manifested in the answers indicated on its first discovery in this part of the country.

By natural causes, we do not mean that the cause is known to man at the present time, or that it is produced by machinery or collusion of any kind. We know this is not the case. But, as nothing can exist without a cause, and as the laws of nature are the most perfect of anything we can have any conception of; and as nothing of which man or any other production of these laws can conceive or recognise, can be superior or above these laws; unless it be the source from whence they originated, we speak of the laws which govern this communication between inferior and superior intelligences as perfectly NATURAL. We ask to be pointed to nothing superior to this in the investigation of this subject.

Neither would we make the separation that some do, between spirit and matter. We are convinced that no such separation exists. It is at the same time to assert that it is something and nothing. If it is not matter, it is nothing. It is the height of absurdity to assert that there is an absolute existence, and yet it is not matter—it is nothing, yet to be talked of, to, and about. That there exist matter too refined, subtile, and sublimated, for our vision in a normal state to observe, we have no doubt; and we have as little doubt of there being intelligent beings who, beyond our vision, still have an influence upon us, and are entirely capable of communicating with us through sounds, impressions and various other means. It is no more proof that they are not thus about us because not seen, than electricity, or the numerous animalculæ which we are constantly eating, drinking and breathing, although unseen, do not exist for the same reason. It may not be unprofitable to go into the examination of the connection between spirits and other matter, in this connection, in order that the reader's mind may be prepared for the development of facts which may look still more strange than those already related.

In regard to the rapping sounds and their existence, there is no longer room for doubt. The hundreds of individuals who have heard them, and who have been in full possession of their senses, and not easily to be deceived, are abundant testimony on this point. One of the most philosophical observers of the various phenomena of the human mind, and a well known Psychological writer, WILLIAM FISHBOUGH, Editor of the Univercalum, remarked in an editorial, under date of February 3d, 1849,

"As to the actual fact of these manifestations, we think there cannot be a shadow of a doubt, if the numerous concurrent and direct testimonies which we have had from respectable persons on this subject, are deserving of any weight. That the rappings are produced by an invisible and (to us) intangible agency, we are also prepared to believe. That these manifestations may be produced by spirits of the other world—not indeed by rapping, but by producing concussion upon the more refined ingredients of the atmosphere, causing a vibration of the tympanum and thus addressing the sense of hearing—we can also readily conceive. We might even cite numerous and apparently well authenticated examples of spiritual manifestations of this kind, to say nothing of the floating stories that never have been expressed in type, but which almost every one has heard from childhood. We might cite, especially, the irreproachable authority of JUSTINUS KERNER in his Seeress of Prevost."

The connection between spirit and other matter, or between the visible and invisible world of human beings, is at present little understood. We are of the opinion that the connection is far more intimate than is generally believed. Of this fact we are receiving almost daily the most positive and convincing proof. Many might be so averse to receiving new truths, which set aside all their preconceived opinions, as to disregard the positive evidence of their senses. But we are by no means willing to admit that we are so easily imposed upon as many think; or pretend to think, they are themselves. Neither are we willing to suppose all but ourselves to be fools or knaves, when they relate to us, on good authority, facts of which we have no knowledge, or which are beyond our sphere of investigation.

If we acquaint ourselves with the process of the formation of the earth—if we observe how it gradually grew, through countless ages, to its present form and state of perfection—if we once reflect that, instead of its always having been what it now is in size shape and substance, it was once a liquid mass which gradually, by the action of natural causes, became solid in its essential parts and foundations; that at one time vegetable life could not be found "on the face of the earth;" if we remember that at first the mineral productions were of the grossest kind which have been constantly changing and refining; that in the course of ages vegetable productions of the rankest kind appeared, and finally, as the earth refined, the more refined were the productions, and finally animal life appeared; that these animals like the vegetable productions were of the most imperfect nature; and at last after ages had rolled away, the earth was prepared for the production of man, the superior of all these as an intelligent thinking being ; that he at first was a mere infant to what after ages proved him to be ; that he is still progressing onward and upward in knowledge and refinement, and exhibits a perfection of organization which is beyond the power of annihilation, we may begin to form some idea of the vast chain of progression which not only applies to things visible, but which applies with equal force throughout the universe and to all stages of existence.

Would it be reasonable, we ask, to stop short at the decay of man's visible organization and deny the existence of any remaining intelligence that pertained to him, merely because we cannot see that existence ? No man will assert this to be a valid reason. In fact, from various proofs, or from the authority of others, the idea of a future existence has become almost universal, and whether these ideas have been philosophically formed or not it would be useless in this place for us to inquire. We simply wish to prepare the mind for the proof of the close connection between the two different states and the influence they may have upon each other.

It is said, and we think never disputed by men of science, that all space is filled with solid, fluid and imponderable substances, and that all objects or any two, in space, let them be far off or near to each other, are necessarily connected by the various forms or substances existing in the space which separates them. It is a matter which has long been settled by men of philosophy and education, that all particles of matter, wherever situated, act upon and influence each other ; that each has an influence upon the other, and that none exist or act without an absolute dependence upon the whole ; in a word there is no such thing as absolute individual independence in the Universe.

"Let every part, depending on the chain
That links it to the whole, point to the hand
That grasps its term! Let every seed that falls,
In silent eloquence, unfold its store
Of argument."

The highest form of organization of which we have any conception, and which probably is the highest, is that which manifests intelligence. The forms of intelligence, or their manifestations, are various—defined by some as instinct and reason. It is useless in this place to undertake the task of tracing them through their different forms and gradations, up to the highest developments of reason. There is in this, as in tracing the various forms of vegetable and animal life, a connection so intimate and perfect, that it is impossible to tell where the lower ends and the higher begins, so closely interwoven are the links of the great chain of which all is a part.

May we not then safely calculate that man continues to progress beyond his present state of existence, and that the change which takes place at what is called death, is not so vast and so sudden as the world has generally supposed. Again we cannot but quote the words of MR. FISHBOUGH in the Universe, April 21st, 1849.

"From the commencement to the completion of the process of death, the spirit must certainly pass through every successive infinitesimal degree of liberation from the body. Each succeeding degree would in that case, be scarcely, if at all, distinguishable from the immediately preceding one; and the spirit preserving its absolute identity throughout the whole process. These minute degrees of liberation, would serve as inseparable lines to connect the future life with the present; and immediately after his emergence from the body, the individual will feel that he is not essentially, or in any respect, very widely different from what he was inferiorly, immediately before he left the body. Does not this reasoning prove a very intimate relation between those in the spiritual who are nearest the natural world; and those in the natural who are nearest the spiritual world? And inasmuch as the liberated spirits must have the most lively remembrance of their former conditions, and sympathy with friends who are still in the body, and inasmuch, moreover, as there are often many such friends who are in the intuitional, and just verging on the spiritual state of mind, is there not every possible reason to suppose that spirits out of the body may communicate with such spirits in the body, by the infusion of their thoughts according to those laws of spiritual sympathy, which have been indubitably exemplified in ten thousand cases, by the phenomena of human magnetism?

Again: It is very evident that the inhabitants of those portions of the spiritual world which are immediately related to this planet, were once the inhabitants of this planet, and that they have passed through all successive degrees from the conditions which they occupied here, to the conditions which they now occupy."

On the almost imperceptible change when the spirit first leaves the body, EMANUEL SWEDENBORG says: (A. C.—H. & H.)

"As to what in general respects the life of souls, or spirits lately deceased, it was made manifest to me by much experience, that a man, when he comes into another life, does not know that he is in another life, imagining that he is still in the world, yea, in his own body; inasmuch, that when he is informed that he is a spirit, he is filled with wonder and astonishment, as well because he is altogether as a man, as to his senses, desires and thoughts, as from this, that he did not believe, when he lived in the world, that he was a spirit, or (as is the case with some,) that a spirit could be such. But when the astonishment ceases, then they wonder that the church should be in total ignorance concerning the state of man after death; that they should deny the existence of the spirit and dispute about substance, and parts with parts, which were never designed to have any place in the mind, because they obstruct the way to intelligence."

To the same effect speaks A. J. DAVIS, while in the Clairvoyant state. He says, (see principles of Nature, p. 658.)

"And what may appear strange, is, that often when a spirit leaves the human form and is introduced into this sphere, it for a moment cannot realize the change, for it is imperceptible. Spirits retain the same bodily form in the spiritual sphere, and at first they feel as if they were only transformed to a country they knew not. It is, however, not long after the transition before the interior senses are opened; and then behold and appreciate the change and the beauties with which they are surrounded. And some spirits appear to wonder that they did not see it before, and that they did not believe it while in the body; for now it appears so tangible and so perfectly agreeable with the universal teachings of natural law."

Again on page 675, Mr. Davis says:

"It is a truth that spirits commune with one another while one is in the body and the other in the higher spheres—and this too, when the person in the body is unconscious of the influx, and hence, cannot be convinced of the fact; AND THIS TRUTH WILL EAR LONG MAKE ITSELF IN THE FORM OF A LIVING DEMONSTRATION. And the world will hail with delight the ushering in of that era when the interiors of men will be opened, and the spiritual communion will be established such as is now being enjoyed by the inhabitants of Mars, Jupiter and Saturn, because of their superior refinement."

Thus we have the testimony of these men, well known as having laid before the world some of the most sublime and philosophical reasonings and facts in regard to the existence of a world of spirits, unseen but felt by their influence, (and occasionally in a more tangible way,) and heard by those who still remain in the body.

Besides this, we have the testimony of clairvoyants almost without number, in almost every neighborhood, who are in private circles developing the great facts here set forth, while their names are unknown to the world; but the incontestible evidence they afford of their power to point out persons never known to them in their normal state, who have passed into the world of spirits, and their plain and artless descriptions of that state, is having an influence in their respective circles which cannot but put any one acquainted with the facts strongly in mind of Swedenborg's prophecy, that the year 1852 would be one that would decide the fate of his church or his doctrines. The probabilities now seem to be that his general spiritual theory will, not far from that time, be very generally received.

We have used up this chapter here in the center of our book, for the purpose of showing that very plausible, and to us very philosophical reasons can be given for our spiritual theory, without stating all the facts that have come to our knowledge. But we are in possession of FACTS which we KNOW to have transpired. We get them from no second hand; we assert nothing but what we KNOW or can prove true; and from these statements, like a noble reformer of Boston, we feel that "we will not retract a single inch and we will be heard."

CHAPTER V.

CONTINUED HISTORY OF THE EVENTS IN WESTERN NEW YORK.

WE have heretofore spoken only of the progress of the sounds at Hydesville, in Arcadia. We left them after they had just learned enough of the matter to converse, by getting raps for an affirmative, and no sound for a negative, and a name or two spelled out by the use of the alphabet.

Like all new discoveries, this has become more perfect as it has been investigated and studied into. The mode of communication has gradually improved, until those who are most familiar with it, can without difficulty get long, and correct communications spelled out by the alphabet.

For some time the rapping was confined to that house, although, as stated in a former chapter, the family of Mr. Fox all left the house at times. While the neighbors were testing the floor and the walls of the house, and the family entirely away from it, the sounds were heard as distinctly as ever. We wish this to be distinctly remembered, as it has often been asserted by persons ignorant of the facts, or willfully malicious, that the sounds were never heard, unless in the presence of two of the daughters of Mr. Fox. The facts already stated and proved, show that they commenced before that family occupied the house or lived in the neighborhood.

Subsequently, however, as was the case in the Wesley family, it seemed to evince a partiality for, or to manifest itself more freely in presence of the two youngest girls. Why this was so, they could not tell, nor will we at present conjecture. Up to the time of the first manifestations, none of the family had ever been magnetized.

It soon began to be heard, not only in that house, but in some of the neighbors houses also.

Part of the family went to Rochester to reside, and the same sounds were heard by the portion of the family in that city, while the part that remained in Hydesville continued to hear them there. By this time it had been discovered that the different sound, or sounds in different places, purported to be the spirits of different persons. Indeed the proofs pretty soon began to be plain, that they were so, or at least whatever it was, it had the power of telling the names of persons entirely unknown to the family, and often reminding them of something that took place in their own family, of which Mr. Fox's family could know nothing, unless they had the power to see through their thoughts and all space besides, which would be much more strange than to allow it to be what it purports to be.

Not long after it began to be heard by this family in Rochester, it began to be heard in other houses in the same city, and among others, in the house of a Methodist clergyman, Rev. A. H. Jarvis, where the same sounds have continued from that time to this, as they have in other places and houses.

We have received the following statement from the hand of Mr. Jarvis, which we are allowed to publish.

There are many facts which have come under my observation equally convincing of the intelligence and utility of the communications from these unseen agents, who I now believe are continually about us, and more perfectly acquainted with all our ways—and even our thoughts, than we are with each other. But the fact in reference to my friend PICKARD is what you desire. He was at my house on Friday afternoon, April 6th, 1849. None of the Fox family was present. While at the tea table we had free communications on different subjects. Pickard was requested to ask questions. He desired to know who it was that would answer questions. The answer was "I am your mother MARY PICKARD." Her name or the fact of her death was not known to any of us. The next Monday evening he (Pickard) was at Mr. G—'s and tarried there over night. He there received a communications purporting to be from his mother, saying, 'Your child is dead.' He came immediately to my place, and said he should take the stage for home (Lockport, 60 miles distant.) He left in the stage at 8 or 9 A. M. At 12 M. I returned to my house, my wife meeting me with a telegraph envelope. I broke the seal and read mentally first, as follows:

"Rochester, April 10th, 1849.

By telegraph from Lockport to Rev. A. H. Jarvis, No. 4, West St. Tell Mr. Pickard—if you can find him—his child died this morning. Answer

R. MALLORY."

I then read it to my wife, and said "this is one of the best and most convincing evidences of the intelligence of those invisible agents," and then I added "God's telegraph has outdone Morse's altogether."

Yours truly,

To E. W. Carron, Auburn.

A. H. JARVIS.

All who have investigated the matter to any great extent, have testimony equally convincing. Several persons who have carefully investigated this affair for the last two years, have kept a private journal in which they have entered many of the most singular occurrences that have come within their personal observation. Extracts from some of these will be given in another chapter.

Soon after the first excitement in the city of Rochester, we hear of its manifesting itself in the adjoining towns, as well as in other places in the city. Among other places, the sounds were heard at the house of a Deacon Hale, of the town of Greece in Monroe county. He is a man well known and of unimpeachable character, so far as we have been able to ascertain, and his candor and honesty as a man or his strict adherence to the principle of the church of which he was a deacon, have not been called in question.

Another fact in relation to his experience which we deem important, is, that he had not seen or had any acquaintance with the family of Mr. Fox, or any part of them, when they commenced at his house or since that time, and yet he gets the communications as freely as they or any one else. We are not aware that any of his family have ever been placed under the influence of human magnetism. The manifestations at his house have been varied and singular.

Mr. Lyman Granger, a well known citizen of Rochester, a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, has long been familiar with these manifestations in his own house and in various places where he has been. There is one singular fact about the manifestations to

Mr. Granger, which may be related in this place. For a long time the answers could be obtained by any two of the family standing near each other; and there was no difference we are informed, in the freedom of the answers, or particular preference manifested to have any particular members of the family present. At length one of the daughters of Mr. Granger, was placed under the influence of magnetism and became clairvoyant. From that time none of the family could get communications unless the daughter who was magnetized was present. This is a singular fact and one which in the present state of knowledge on this subject, seems almost or wholly inexplicable. Why the communication should leave all the family except the magnetized daughter, after they once had free conversation without her, remains to be explained.

The daughter does not require to be magnetized in order to hear them but only to be present. There are a number of other families in Rochester who have the same manifestation, some very freely and some only occasionally.

From Rochester and that vicinity, it began to be heard of in this city, (Auburn) and like other places, it was for a short time confined to one family.

The first of its being heard in this city was when the youngest daughter of Mr. Fox visited our boarding house. After she returned it was heard for some time in the presence of several who had heard the sounds in her presence, and in a few months spread to several families where it has gradually grown more free. Hardly a week passes without our receiving authentic information of some new place where these occurrences have commenced. We are informed of at least six families in Auburn who hear more or less of the same sounds.

In almost every place where it has commenced, there has been at first but a few sounds and generally much more faint than after it becomes more common.

It is a very common occurrence in the family and social circles to be talking of some matter connected with this strange development, or some kindred subjects, and for all in the room to hear a distinct rap—perhaps two or three—as if confirming what was said. This is generally the way it commences at new places.

It may be proper here to remark, that persons of any considerable degree of investigating powers, stand in no fear of being deceived, as the sounds have never yet been imitated, nor do we believe they can be. Persons who have heard but little of them and who have very vivid imaginations and large organs of wonder, may, at times, mistake some other sounds for the genuine ones, or those produced by the spirits; but a person who is not over imaginative never.

We state this as it may, probably will be in many cases said, that it is some visible cause that produces the sound, and that persons are deceived. We are aware that these charges have been made by persons at a distance, who have no knowledge whatever of the facts in the case.

The same sounds are heard in several places within our knowledge in towns in this vicinity. In the town of Sennett, about six miles from this city there is a lad some twelve years of age, by the name of JOHN BEAVER, son of Harmon Beaver, who hears these sounds whenever he pleases—whether in doors or out—alone or in company. They first came to him in the night, while sleeping alone, and greatly alarmed him. With him the sounds are louder, when requested, than with any person we have yet seen. At times, when solicited, they will be as loud as the striking of a heavy hammer on the table, floor or fence, or wherever he may stand, or near him. The same intelligence is displayed in his case that is observed in the other places. This boy has never been under the influence of human magnetism, and has no appearance of being at all susceptible.

None of the Misses Fox have ever been able to get these sounds when entirely alone, although they are generally produced when they are in company with any other person, yet this boy has them when no other person is near, and holds long conversations with his unseen companion. In his presence, too, the phenomena of moving articles of furniture, touching as with a hand, &c., appears as in other cases.

A few weeks since a young lady about sixteen years of age—Miss Harriet Bebee—was in the city and was placed in a magnetic state in company with Mrs. Tamlin, the well known clairvoyant of this city. She was also a clairvoyant herself. The sounds were heard while they were in that state, and they explained what spirits made them, and how they made them. Every time the sounds were heard while they were in the magnetic sleep, there was a very sensible jar observed in the case of Miss Bebee, like an electric shock, and in answer to a question, she stated that at each sound she felt as if there was electricity passing over her. This was not observable when she was brought into the normal state. She resides some twenty miles from this city, and has heard the sounds at pleasure ever since her interview with Mrs. Tamlin.

Several of the persons in whose presence these sounds are heard, always receive a slight shock, so that there is a slight jar which has sometimes been so plain as to lead persons ignorant of the facts and the phenomenon, to accuse them of making it themselves. In the case of the boy in Sennett and the Misses Fox, there is no sensation felt, and no movement perceptible. The same sounds, we are assured by persons from that place and by the Democrat published there, are heard in SKANEATELES. We have not positive proof of the facts and make no statement in regard to it farther than the authorities here given.

These are some of the facts that have come to our knowledge and are the common property of the community from their being open and public cases. We know of numerous cases of individuals, who declare that they have often heard the same sounds, but do not wish to incur the ridicule and contempt with which they know they must be visited, if they candidly inform their friends of the facts in the case and what they know by their own experience. Or they belong to the church, and the people will not only laugh at them, but that the church who is forever prating about the influence of spirits, or the spirit, will cast them out of its folds if they do not close their ears and refuse to hear, and their eyes and refuse to see any positive and tangible evidence of what they have so long been talking about with less proof. They do not feel willing to face the frowns of their individual friends or the anathemas of an organized body who assume it to be sinful to investigate anything new, especially if it be of a nature to disturb some long cherished principle which they have deemed true because they have been told so by their fathers and grandfathers.

We have no such fears. We have the glorious consciousness of feeling above reputation in the matter, especially if that reputation must be sustained at the expense of truth and honest convictions, and received from the vulgar crowd—rich or poor—who look only at the apparel and pocket of a man—or his professions of a particular faith—in order to be entitled to a reputation from them.

We know of what we speak. We know they are facts—strange, new, and to many wonderful—and to all, as yet in a state that defies the philosophy and theology of the world to explain away, or tell the laws by which they are governed. Knowing this we state the facts to the world, unmindful of the sneers of those who know nothing of the matter, and caring little for the criticisms of those who pretend to much wisdom in psychological knowledge, or those who with no pretensions, use vulgar and malicious falsehood as the only weapons which they have at hand. We expect all to use such weapons as they have at command, and those that are in the ditch of ignorance will throw the filth thereof, and others will use weapons of different gradations ascending to their positions.

We have another consciousness, which, without boasting, we must think contributes greatly to the freedom of thought of any who occupy it. We are conscious of being bound by no sectarian ties; we have no padlocks on our lips—no ties to bind our intellect to a particular circle of thought.

Another proof of the absence of collusion in the matter, is the fact that it is not confined to any particular dwellings, so that there is no more a "haunted house" than a haunted out doors, or a haunted side-walk, for wherever the persons who seem to be in a right condition of body to get the communication are, there you will hear the sounds, whether it be in doors or out. This precludes the idea of machinery for that could not be so suddenly exchanged from one house to another; or from a house into the open air. But we will consider the objection in another place, and after we have stated a few more facts which have transpired, and which are known to many individuals besides ourselves. There is, undoubtedly a greater desire for facts than reasons on the subject, and yet we cannot refrain from these frequent digressions in order to show, as we go along, how utterly futile the attempts to argue it down have proved to be, and how useless the slanders of persons who try to find the truth have been. We will, in the next chapter, show that in a public investigation of the matter, the seal of truth has been set on the statements of those who have privately investigated so far as the sounds and their intelligence were concerned.

CHAPTER VI.

THE PUBLIC INVESTIGATION AT CORINTHIAN HALL IN THE CITY OF ROCHESTER.

BEFORE speaking of the strange phenomenon, thought by some to be much stranger than the "rapping" or the intelligence manifested through the medium; we give an account of the public investigations which were gone into in the city of Rochester in the month of November, 1849.

The first intimation that was received in regard to those investigations came from these sounds, through the use of the alphabet. Several persons were in company, trying, as usual, to gain some information in regard to the law which governs this strange communication. While they were thus investigating, the following was spelled out by the use of the alphabet, it being part of the message or directions for those present to follow. "You all have a duty to perform. We want you to make this matter more public." As this announcement was altogether unexpected, the persons began to discuss the difficulties, and remarked that the opposition and ridicule, that would be heaped upon any one who should attempt to lecture on this subject, would be almost overwhelming. The answer to this was, "That will be so much the better—your triumph will be the greater."

After receiving the most positive assurances from this invisible communicator, that the sounds should be heard in all parts of the Hall in response to the person who should lecture—that it was best, in order that slanders might be silenced, and the truth established, to go forward in the matter—the persons who were designated concluded to make the attempt. It was also intimated, from the same source, that this would prepare the way for a more general development of spiritual communication, which would take place at no distant day.

Probably the best idea of the proceedings at Rochester can be conveyed to the reader by the following brief statement drawn up and published directly after the investigations took place, in the New York Weekly Tribune of Dec. 8th, 1849.

"Some two weeks since, we were in company with some persons who were getting communications from this invisible communicator when a message was spelled out to us to the import that the matter should be made more public—that the time had arrived for the people to investigate the whole affair—that it was a thing which will ultimately become known to all men, and that we should immediately take measures to have it investigated. The directions were then minutely given by these spirits, as they purport to be, and which we are willing to believe are, until we have as much proof to the contrary as it required to bring us to that conclusion. These directions will appear in the following history, as they were fully and strictly followed. The great object was to start investigation and clear those who had been hearing of it for the last two years from the imputation of fraud and deception.

Accordingly on the evening of November 14, a lecture was delivered in Cornithian Hall in the City of Rochester, and a full history of the rise and progress of these manifestations given. During the relation of these facts the sounds were distinctly heard by the persons in the Hall.

After the lecture, a Committee was chosen by the audience, composed of the following persons—A. J. COMBS, DANIEL MARSH, NATHANIEL CLARK, ESQ., A. JUDSON AND EDWIN JONES.

On the following evening the Committee reported in substance, as follows: That without the knowledge of the persons in whose presence the manifestations are made, the Committee selected the Hall of the Sons of Temperance for investigation—that the sound on the floor near where the two ladies stood was heard as distinctly as at other places, and that part of the committee heard the rapping on the wall behind them—that a number of questions were asked which were answered, not altogether right nor altogether wrong—that in the afternoon they went to the house of a private citizen, and while there the sounds were heard on the outside (apparently) of the front door, after they had entered, and on the door of a closet. By placing the hand upon the door, there was a sensible jar felt when the rapping was heard. One of the Committee placed one of his hands upon the feet of the ladies and the other on the floor, and though the feet were not moved, there was a distinct jar on the floor. On the pavement and on the ground the same sound was heard:—a kind of double rap, as a stroke and a rebound, were distinguishable. When the ladies were separated at a distance no sound was heard; but when a third person was interposed between them the sounds were heard. The ladies seemed to give every opportunity to the Committee to investigate the cause fully, and would submit to a thorough investigation by a committee of ladies if desired. They all agreed that the sounds were heard, but they entirely failed to discover any means by which it could be done.

After this report and some discussion on the subject, the audience selected another Committee composed of the following persons—Doctor H. H. LANGWORTHY, Hon. FREDERICK WHITTLESEY, D. C. McCALLUM, WILLIAM FISHER, of Rochester, and Hon. A. P. HASCALL, of Le Roy. At the next lecture this Committee reported that they went into the investigation at the office of Chancellor Whittlesey, and they heard the sound on the floor, on the wall, and door,—that the ladies were placed in different positions and, like the other Committee, they were wholly unable to tell from what the sound proceeded or how it was made, that Dr. Langworthy made observations with a sesthescope to ascertain whether there was any movement with the lungs, and found not the least difference when the sounds were made; and there was no kind of probability or possibility of their being made by ventriloquism as some had supposed—and they could not have been made by machinery.

This Committee was composed of Dr. E. P. LANGWORTHY, Dr. J. GATES, Wm. FITZBUGH, Esq., W. L. BURTIS, and L. KENYON. This committee met at the rooms of Dr. Gates at the Rochester House, and appointed a committee of Ladies who took the young women into a room, disrobed them and examined their persons and clothing to be sure there was no fixtures about them that could produce the sounds. When satisfied on this point the Committee of Ladies tried some other experiments, and gave the young ladies the following certificate:

When they were standing on pillows with a handkerchief tied around the bottom of their dresses, tight to the ankles we all heard the rapping on the wall and floor distinctly.

(Signed.)

MRS. STONE,

MRS. J. GATES,

MISS M. P. LAWRENCE.

In the evening the Committee, through their Chairman, Dr. Langworthy, made a very full report of their examinations during the day. They reported they excluded all friends of the two ladies from the committee room and had the examination only in presence of the Committee of Gentlemen, and Ladies chosen by them. Notwithstanding all this precaution, these sounds were heard when the ladies stood on large feather pillows, without shoes, and in other various positions, both on the floor and on the wall,—that a number of questions were asked which, when answered, were generally correct. Each member of the Committee reported separately agreeing with and corroborating the first statements.

Thus, by three days of the strictest scrutiny, by means of intelligence, candor and science, were the persons in whose pervence these sounds are heard, acquitted of all fraud.

On Friday evening, after the lecture, three of the Committee, viz: Hon. A. P. HASCALL, D. C. McCALLUM, and WILLIAM FISHER, repaired to the house of a citizen and pursued their investigations still farther. There were nearly a score of persons present. The members of the Committee wrote many questions on paper, which no person present knew the purport of, and they were answered correctly. At times they would ask mentally and would receive the answers with equal correctness and they were fully satisfied that there was something present manifesting intelligence beyond the persons visible.

One of the Committees tried the experiment of standing the ladies on glass and failed to get any sounds; but the same was subsequently tried in presence of a large number of persons, and the sounds were as loud and distinct as before, on the floor as usual.

Such are the facts so far as public proceedings are concerned, (which is but a small part of these strange occurrences) with the Committee's report greatly condensed.

Thus the matter stands at present, and whether it is a remarkable phenomenon which will pass away with the present generation, or with the persons who seem now to be the medium of this extraordinary communication; or whether it be the commencement of a new era of spiritual influx into the world; it is something worthy of the attention of men of candor and philosophy.

E. W. CAPRON, Auburn.

GEORGE WILLETS, Rochester."

Rochester, Nov. 22, 1849.

As one of us was present and acquainted with all the circumstances we will make some further statements in regard to the events that transpired during the week of the investigation.

Each of the committee, after the report of their chairman; were called upon to make a report individually and what is unusual where any doubtful matter is under consideration, every individual agreed to all that is published in the above extract.

Some individuals of the committee made more minute reports of questions and answers and other circumstances that came under their observation during these examinations.

One member of the first committee stated that he asked the question. "Who is it that wishes to communicate with me?" The answer was, "your wife will talk." He evaded the answer, and gave the persons present to understand that he never had a wife. To use his own expression when he gave his public report, he "broke beat it down." He would not admit there was any truth in it until he reported in the evening—then he stated it correctly—he had lost his wife sometime before.

The committee were composed of men who, on any other subject, would be trusted to investigate where life or property were at stake. We doubt if any citizen of Monroe county would refuse to submit to the justness of his cause even were he tried for life or limb, to such men as those who composed the committees during the three days they were engaged in trying every mode to ferret out the cause of these sounds, and yet many persons persist in denouncing those who even go to hear for themselves as fools or knaves!

We insist upon it, that those who were present at Corinthian Hall, and had a voice in the appointment of those committees, selected from the best and most reliable men of the city of Rochester, should of all men be the last to cry humbug or collusion. They must be aware that in doing this they impeach their committees, and indirectly accuse them of being ignoramuses and incapable of impartial investigation, or of being accessory to one of the most successful, wide-spread and long continued impositions ever palmed off on this or any other community.

When we take into consideration the facts that this matter has now been spreading for two years—that every means have been tried in private circles, and committees appointed by public meetings—that all have failed to discover any thing like collusion—we may safely assert that in regard to the sounds merely—the following facts are established beyond dispute, viz: That the sounds are heard in various places and at various times—that those sounds are not made by, or under the control of any person or persons, although manifested in the presence of particular persons; and that they evince a remarkable degree of intelligence. These facts, among those who have carefully investigated are no longer disputed.

CHAPTER VII.

FURTHER PROOF OF THE INTELLIGENCE MANIFESTED BY THESE SOUNDS.

-AFTER stating as much as we have already done, we may suppose the reader prepared to receive some of the specimens of the intelligence so manifested. Of course there are hundreds of proofs lost, from the fact that there is no record kept by the great mass of persons who have visited the scenes of these developments. Others are of a nature that preclude their publication, and among those are some of the most positively convincing proofs. They are of a nature which more particularly concern the families to which they have been delivered. Some of them, however, may be given.

One of the most remarkable cases of a display of foresight on the part of these sounds, (which we have good evidence of coming from departed spirits, and shall continue so to believe until better proof than has yet been presented to the contrary comes to hand,) of which we have positive proof, is the case of our friend George Willets, now a resident of the city of Rochester. He has furnished us with the following statement, which we give entire.

DEAR FRIEND, E. W. CAPRON:—It is with some reluctance that I furnish you with the following statement—not that I am afraid to tell the truth—but that the world as I conceive is not ready to receive such truths yet.—Ridicule probably will be heaped upon me, but when I consider that it is the ignorant only who use that weapon, perhaps I can afford to stand up and say, “let the storm come.” All who know me can say whether I have been truthful from my youth up, yea or nay, and the strongest language that I can use, is to say that the following statement is strictly and entirely true.

In the summer of 1848, I had concluded from the best judgment that I could bring to my aid, that it was best for my family to remove somewhere among the wilds of the West. Accordingly I took a tour of observation, and finding some land in Michigan that suited me better than any other, belonging to a gentleman living in Rochester, I stopped on my return, in order if possible to negotiate for it. I staid with my friend and relative ISAAC POST, and while there he told me of certain sounds being heard in the city—and that they displayed intelligence and purported to be made by 'Spirits' or persons invisible to us. I was really skeptical about any such things, but at his solicitation went to examine it. The persons with whom these sounds seemed to be, I never had heard of or seen before, and my friend was careful not to tell them who I was or where I had been. It seems that the question was asked whether there was any communication for me, and the direction from the sounds was, that three persons be magnetized two of whom were present, and one was sent for from a neighboring family. I did not know the name of any persons present; and I was also certain that no one knew me. After the three persons were put in the clairvoyant state, one of them said, 'We have got to go to Michigan.'—They all agreed that they had to go there and on my account. They did seem all to go there and began to describe places and things which I had seen, and at length came to a piece of land which they said was the place they came to look at. They then described the land so accurately which I had stopped in Rochester to buy, that I began to wonder 'who had told them.' They all with one accord then said, 'But he must not go there.' His father says that he had better not go. As they said this there came a loud sound close by my chair, and I sat some distance from any other person. They spoke much of my Father and what his mind was, and at each time that same sound was heard, and the jar distinctly felt close by myself. They then said his Mother thinks it is not best. As they spoke this a different sound not quite so loud was heard still close by me. Then that my Sister said it was not best. Another and different sound still was heard. Up to this time I had not spoken a word, but found the big drops of perspiration starting from my face. I gathered courage and thought I would dispel that illusion directly; I said, 'as you assume to know my father and what his mind is concerning me, perhaps you can tell his name.' They all seemed to look steadily for sometime, then commenced and spoke slowly and deliberately these letters—'WILLIAM WILLETS.' At each letter the loud sound that I first heard, was again heard and felt immediately under my feet. I never was so astonished in my life, and involuntary said, 'what does all this mean?' The sounds then said by the alphabet being called over that they had better be awakened, and the first loud sound said, 'I will talk with George, and tell him all about it.' The question was for Mr. Post, myself and a little girl thirteen years old, to go by ourselves. And here I wish it distinctly understood, that all which I shall relate as obtained from those sounds was in the presence only of my friends, Mr. and Mrs. Post, myself, and the little girl spoken of. As what follows all purported to be from my father, I will say that his name was WILLIAM WILLETS, a member of the Society of Friends, widely known at Westbury, Long Island, where he lived until near sixty years of age, and subsequently at Skaneateles, Onondaga county, where he died in 1841. The communication by sounds then went on to say, that it was my father that was present and talking with me, and three hours were consumed at the first interview. In saying to me what his counsel was, it always assumed to counsel and advise but never to dictate. He said that it was not best for us to go to Michigan, and gave various reasons, among which were that we should not enjoy ourselves in a new country, and that my health would not be competent for the task of clearing up new land, and that he foresaw if we did go, that we should come back again, and would be less in number than when we went. I then asked what was best to do. The answer then was,

'Come to Rochester.' I replied that I knew of no business that I could do in Rochester. The sounds said, 'I will tell thee when thee comes.' I asked if I might know now. The answer was, 'No!—I did not need any business until I came and then he would tell me.' The sounds then said, that after a time it would be best for me to buy some land. I asked where. The sounds then spelled out the name of a man who neither one present knew, and said that he owned fifty acres of land on such a street adjoining the city and such a distance from the centre of the city, that he would sell any part. I asked the price that would be asked. The sounds were heard and counted by three of us,—one hundred and fifty times in succession—to tell us the number of dollars per acre that would be asked. The sounds said that we had better go the next day and see if this was so, and said that we should not see the man until ten o'clock, though we might look for him as early as we pleased.

In the morning I looked in the Directory and there found the name spelled out to us, and went to his residence at seven o'clock and was informed that he was gone to a distant part of the city and would not be home until twelve o'clock. We then went to find him and had some difficulty to do so, but after talking with him five or six minutes, looked at the time and it was seven minutes past ten! This person said that he owned fifty acres on the street told us by the sounds, and that he would sell any part. When I asked him the price he showed me a map with the price of each lot marked and taking the number of acres, said by the sounds to be best to buy, and averaging the price, it was the price told us within 6-100 of a dollar per acre. I then went home to my family and pondered over these strange things. Many were the conflicts in my own mind, and I heard the cry from all quarters of 'humbug,' 'deception,' 'fraud,' but I could not believe that I wanted to deceive myself. Three months I thought of these things deeply, and I could not go to Michigan. I concluded if it was deception, it would do the world some good to find it out. The first of December, 1848, I moved from Waterloo to Rochester. A few days after getting here the little girl spoken of came round to our house and said that the 'Spirit' had directed her to come, for what purpose she did not know, we enquired what it was, and this was the communication; 'I told thee if thee would come to Rochester I would tell thee where thee could find employment; in four days from this time I will tell thee; in the mean-time the Anti-slavery folks are going to hold their Fair, would it not be well for thee to help them.' No one was present at this time except my wife the little girl and myself. The four days went by and again without solicitation, and without thinking the time was up, the little girl came again. The communication was, 'Apply to William Wiley, Superintendent of the Auburn and Rochester Railroad, to-morrow at two o'clock at his office, for a situation and thee will have one before this week is out.' (This was Thursday.) I was a stranger to Mr. Wiley, and I called on Mr. Post, and told him the direction, and asked him if the next day he would go with me. That evening he happening to be at the depot enquired if Mr. Wiley was at home and was told that he was in Boston, and by a letter just received would not be at home till Friday night. I was told by the sounds on Wednesday to apply on Thursday at two o'clock. Thursday at half past one instead of going to the Railroad office I went round where these sounds were heard, and said 'How is this I am told to apply to William Wiley, and he is in Boston.' The sounds said, 'go to his office, now he is there.' I called for Mr. Post and walked immediately there and found Mr. Wiley in his office. He said that he had returned sooner than he expected to when he wrote the letter. Mr. Post said that I was a relative of his and wished employment, and Mr. Wiley replied that they were all full with abundant applications, and could give no encouragement whatever. We walked back thinking deeply, and I went where the sounds were heard again. I enquired how is this, Mr. Wiley has no place for me? The answer was, 'They will have a place on the cars, and will know it before the week is out.'

On Saturday night at dark I met Mr. Post, and he asked if I had heard anything from Mr. Wiley. I replied 'not a word.' At eight o'clock on that same evening Mr. Post called at my house and said that Mr. Wiley had just been at his store and said that he had a place for me and wished me to call at his office on Monday morning. As Mr. Wiley did not tell what place I was to fill, I again asked the sounds what it was; and they said it was to go as Baggage Master between this place and Auburn. On Sunday morning I wrote to my friend James Truman of Waterloo, stating that I should pass through that place on Monday following—in the capacity above stated before I knew from Mr. Wiley what place he wanted me to fill, and he can probably testify to that fact. One month after I had been running on the cars, I learned that the person whose place I took had done things worthy of a dismissal, previous to my being directed to make application, and which did not come to Mr. Wiley's notice till the day on which I received the appointment. These things have only been known to a few friends; you and the world now have them. I have many communications penned down at the time they were received, purporting to be from my father, all of the most elevating character, citing me to goodness, purity, and honesty of heart, and ever pointing to the endless progression of man. In conclusion I may say that I have examined the matter attentively for one year and a half and have had abundant opportunities to do so and am prepared to say, although the sounds may cease to day, and never be heard again, 'They have displayed a remarkable degree of intelligence and were not made by any person visible to us.'

GEORGE WILLETS.

Thus was everything which had been told him fulfilled to the very letter. And these are only a few of the more prominent among the directions to the same individual, and by no means the whole. These are facts and can positively be proved, with names and dates of all the parties.

The following statement is taken from the private journal of E. W. Capron.

"On the 23d of November, 1848, I went to the city of Rochester on business. I had previously made up my mind to investigate this so called mystery, if I should have an opportunity. In doing so, I had no doubt but what I possessed shrewdness enough to detect the trick, as I strongly suspected it to be, or discover the noise if it should be unknown to the inmates of the house.

A friend of mine, JOHN KEDDIE, of Rochester, who I had long known as a skeptic in regard to any such wonders, invited me to go with him to hear it. I accepted the invitation with a feeling that was far from serious apprehension of communicating with anything beyond my power to discover.

Before I heard the sound, we seated ourselves around a table. As soon as we got quiet, I heard a slight but distinct rapping on the floor, apparently on the under side. Although I concluded that such a sound might be made by machinery, I could see no possible motive in the family taking so much pains to deceive people, as they received nothing but annoyance and trouble in return for their pains. I proceeded to ask some questions and they were answered very freely and correctly. I asked if it would rap my age? It was done correctly. I then took my memorandum book from my pocket and wrote my questions so that no person could know the nature of the questions. I would write; 'rap four times; rap one; rap seven;' and to each and every question I got a correct answer. I then laid aside my book and proceeded to ask similar test questions mentally, and as before, received correct answers.

I could not believe that persons present had the power to discern my thoughts and make these sounds in answer, for the sounds have a peculiarity not easily imitated. To suppose this to be the case, would make the matter a still greater mystery. I knew they could not give those answers for there were questions answered which they could not know anything about.

At another time, being present with ISAAC POST, of Rochester, I tried the experiment of counting in the following manner. I took several shells from a card basket on the table, (small lake shells,) closed my hand and placed it entirely out of sight, and requested as many raps as there were shells. It was done correctly. As I knew how many shells there were in my hand, I resolved to test it another way to see if there was a possibility of my mind having any influence in the matter. I took a handful of shells without knowing how many I took myself. Still the answers were correct. I then requested Mr. Post, who sat by the table, to put his hand in the basket, take out some shells without knowing the number and pass them into my hand, which I immediately closed and placed in a position where none could see it. The number was told as correctly as before. We continued this class of experiments for a long time without the least failure in getting correct answers."

There could be no mistaking these tests. They could not be influenced by our minds, for we did not ourselves know what the answers should be. This places a quietus on its being anything governed by the minds of those asking questions or those who hear it most freely. The proofs of getting answers and correct ones to mental questions, and to thoughts where questions are not asked, is as plain as even the rapping itself.

We have known several persons to be sitting around a table in conversation, and when they ceased, the signal for the alphabet would be called for, and a sentence would be spelled like this, —, (naming one of the company,) thinks so and so, mentioning exactly what their thoughts were. At one time several persons were present; one wrote on a piece of paper to another, something about two other members of the company, which, although unimportant, they did not wish the others to know; but as if to convince all of their power to tell their thoughts, the signal was given for the alphabet, and the same spelled out that they had written. This has so often been the case, or similar occurrences, that it is placed beyond dispute by those who have tried the experiment of getting answers to mental questions.

While the investigations were going on in Rochester, they would give information at night what kind of men they were who were on the committee. They would say, "such a man," telling his name, "is a candid man; such a one is very skeptical and hard to convince," &c. When the investigation came on, we would find that we had been told correctly about the character of the different individuals composing the committee.

At one time during the investigations, we were talking over the subject, telling how much ridicule would be heaped upon us for attempting to lay this subject before the world and have it fairly investigated, and we had this sentence spelled to us, by what purported to be the spirit of William Willets: "Now don't get discouraged though the path may look foggy, there is a bright cloud a little beyond. Soon the firmament will brighten and those people who now insult and scandalize this work of the Almighty, will walk off hanging their heads and saying, 'Well, we have investigated and proved nought against those insulted people; here we stand, just as ignorant as when we first heard it; you know that in all new sciences there is always something to contend with, and when things take a turn and you know you have conquered; thou wilt feel thou art treading on holy ground.'" We at first thought it strange that there should be so sudden a change from you to thou, and it was explained thus. "I made it 'holy' instead of 'haunted.'" We then knew it to be a quotation from a song called "The Haunted Ground."

Not long since Rev. A. H. Jarvis, related the following to a company which were convened at his house, one of which was Prof. Jones, a gentleman who was then delivering a course of scientific lectures at Rochester. He was of the 'New Church,' or Swedenborgian faith. 'At one time we were getting communications from what purported to be our son who had been dead some ten years. He requested us to sing a hymn with the title 'Advice to seek the Lord.' I took a Hymn Book and was proceeding to look for the hymn, when the alphabet was called for and he spelled 'not that.' Another was taken. Still it spelled—'not that.' We had four hymn books in the room that we knew of, and were told that it was not in any of them. I was about going up to my library when he spelled, 'It is in this room—get the little book with a red cover.' After much search the book was found behind some ornaments on the mantelpiece which was seldom used. A hymn was found very near with the title given, and we thought it must be the one when, we were again told 'not that.' On looking farther we found a hymn with exactly the title named, and sang it while the sounds beat time." This is a most remarkable proof of the retention of memory in spirits after they escape from the body, and it was while this very fact was under discussion, that Mr. Jarvis related these facts.

We might fill pages in recording facts similar to the above, but we trust that none will require more than is here given, to prove the intelligence of the source from which these sounds emanated.

CHAPTER V III.

ARE THEY GOOD OR EVIL SPIRITS?

THIS is the great question with those who are fully convinced that these sounds are produced by superior intelligences, and by the spirits of those who have lived in this visible world, and who have been educated to be always looking for evil if there is anything new or beyond their bounds of investigation.

The limits of this book would be too small to convince this class that they had wrought themselves up to a degree that makes them almost wish for proof of some source of evil which they could lay before the world to prove a long cherished theory, and are therefore incapable of receiving facts as proof. There are exceptions, (and thanks to growing intelligence, the class is fast increasing,) to this rule of persons thus educated. Many have become can lid seekers after truth in spite of their early education, and will continue to investigate in spite of all the sneers and threats of the sects and parties to which they belong.

We are not about to discuss the probabilities of there being an evil power at work "in these latter days" in order that they may, if possible, "deceive the very elect." We have no such apprehensions. We are not constantly looking for evil in order to establish some darling and long cherished dogma of our own. This may be the reason why we have not been able to find as much evidence of evil in a years candid investigation as some have found in a few minutes, and others who have not examined at all.

In looking back through the rise of various arts and sciences, and improvements in the moral world, we find almost every important discovery accredited to the—devil. Every revolution in religious opinion has the same origin. It would be a wonder, then, if this escaped the common fate of all other phenomena, inventions or discoveries which have gone before it.

In almost every instance where persons of a strong sectarian character have investigated the matter, they have soon become convinced that they are spirits, but—from the devil.* Why this conclusion? Why, first, because it is at variance with all their preconceived opinions. This is their strongest reason. Then again the spirits do not talk enough about our "eternal welfare;" they give too much advice for this world and too little for the next; they do not tell people to go to church one day in the week and spend the remainder in trying to amass wealth. True, they give some good advice about morals, but they make no threats about the consequences of vice only that it will place them in a lower sphere. These are a few of the reasons brought forward as proof of the evil origin of these spirits. Some make the assertion, that in being where these sounds and other manifestations are made, they "tremble when they think how near the clutches of the devil they have been" without any reason at all other than they do not know what else it can be. They look for evil and suppose they have found it.

Another reason urged by this class, is the fact that the manifestations do not confine themselves to church members, but seem to disregard all such sectarian rules, and treat all alike, making no distinction. This, to many, is the greatest wonder of all—and their strongest proof of evil; that many who have stood aloof from the organized religious bodies have been as much favored with the manifestations as those within them, and on this account they persecute those who are in the church and will not refuse to hear, or brand those who do as infidels.

*See Ezekiel xiv, 3, 4.

But as facts are worth more than past creeds and beliefs, or present surmises and speculations, we proceed to present some things that have been spelled out to persons, and some answers that have been given, and see whether they contain more evil than good. Many of the messages spelled out to individuals have been taken by them and we have no record of them. Others are of a nature which the persons who received them would not wish us to publish. Still we shall be able to present enough to enable persons to judge in regard to the evil or good there is contained in the communications. Among the numerous incidents of intelligence, foresight and right direction, is the following :

One day as we were at the dinner table, the direction to one of the family was, "You had better go to the depot at three o'clock." Although he was not conscious of being needed there, he obeyed the direction and found at the depot a friend with his trunk which he could not have brought alone.

At one of the first opportunities I (E. W. CAPRON,) had of investigating, I had the following proof which appeared to be anything but evil to me, although the direction was about "worldly matters."

Myself and wife and a female friend of ours had been investigating until a late hour, nearly twelve o'clock at night, and a violent storm had sprung up. It was necessary for us to go to another part of the city, and it was so late that the public conveyances had all left their usual stand and we were at a loss how to get a conveyance for the females. The direction was, "go to the corner of the street and there you will find a conveyance." I went as directed, but saw no carriage and began to think I had been misdirected, but just as I was turning to go back, a sleigh came up the street, and without my speaking the driver hailed me and inquired if I wanted a conveyance. I of course took it and carried the females home.

On one occasion, a gentleman of Rochester was indebted to a woman who was in great need of the money. The spirits directed her little sister to go at such a place in the street at a certain hour in the day, and she would meet the man who would pay her three dollars for her sister. The little girl did not know the man who owed the money but went as directed. At the appointed time she met a man who said to her, "Are you the girl that lives with Mrs. ——?" She replied in the affirmative. "Here are three dollars I wish you would take to her," said the man, handing her a bill, and passed on.

At one time we had been discussing the subject of how much or how little reliance could be placed upon the directions received through this source, and we were directed to sit by the table to receive a message. We did so, and received the following, which as usual was received by using the alphabet:

"Now all listen to what we say. We want you to do better. You have doubted our words; you will see the time when you will be ashamed, when you look back to the time when you said 'I don't know what to think—they are evil spirits—I doubt the truthfulness of it.' Now doubt no more, but all have sisterly and brotherly feelings; this is a message from God."

This conversation was carried on while the medium (the little girl) through which we received the communications, was out of the house visiting her friends, so that she had no knowledge of our conversation until this message was given us.

Mrs. Capron and Mrs. Tamlin were in Mr. Tamlin's house alone, when a rapping commenced and gave the signal for the alphabet. On repeating it over, the following sentence was spelled out: "Sarah (Mrs. Tamlin) is going to be sick." As she was then apparently as well as usual they were somewhat surprised, and Mrs. Tamlin said: "why! not very sick am I?" The answer was "yes, very sick, and Rebecca had better not stay alone with you this afternoon." This was some time in the forenoon. Mrs. C. went home at noon and returned about one o'clock and found Mrs. Tamlin vomiting severely. She soon fainted, and continued to have fainting fits of very long duration all the afternoon and through the night. Every time she was about to faint we were told by the sound, which would sometimes spell out "watch her." The same faithful guardian told us what medicine to administer—what to do—told when it would be safe for a part of the watchers to leave—(told them two hours before the time of leaving)—just how many fits she would have during the night—when she would begin to recover and when she would be well—and all was fulfilled to the letter. The persons present during part or all of the time that these directions were being given were Mrs. R. M. C. Capron, E. W. Capron, Mrs. Mary Miller, Miss S. A. Bennet of Auburn and Miss Mary H. Cooper, of Williamson, N. Y. Directions have been given in numerous cases to the sick by this unseen agency. In this instance it purported to be the spirit of Mrs. Tamlin's mother.

Not long since, Mr. Tamlin arose before light in the morning and went to the barn where his team was kept, leaving a candle burning on the stand near the bed. Mrs. Tamlin was awakened from sleep by a loud rapping on the stand. She looked at the stand and found that a spark from the wick of the candle had fallen down and caught to a paper which was on the stand and was just about to communicate to the curtains of the bed. The timely warning saved the house and very probably Mrs. Tamlin from being consumed by the flames.

At one time Mrs. Tamlin was at the house of Mr. G. B. Bennet. They were told to go in the dark and take the guitar. They did so and the string vibrated two or three times when they stopped, and the signal for the alphabet was given, and on calling over the letters the following was spelled out: "Sarah (Mrs. Tamlin) is going to faint." It was totally dark in the room and there was no means of any person's knowing the fact. A light was brought but Mrs. T. had fainted before it arrived. The following persons were in the room and can testify to the above statement. R. M. C. Capron, Miss Mary M. Bennet, Mrs. S. A. Tamlin, S. N. Smith, dentist, Chas. W. Bennet, G. S. Wilson and A. L. Dibble.

The following statement is made by Mrs. Sarah D. Fish of Rochester, who has occasionally had these demonstrations in her own family. Benjamin Fish and his family are too well known to need any corroboration of what statements any of them make.

"I watched with a sick friend about two years ago and when all was still and no one awake but myself, at least no one in the room except my sick friend, I sat by the stove and there was a sudden loud rapping on the wood work at my left hand. Coming in the stillness of the night, I was at first quite terrified, stepped immediately to the bed where the sick person lay. My friend had heard it and said what rapping was that? and asked for some drink. After I waited on her, I went to the watch and found it to be just 2 o'clock. I had become exhausted for the want of sleep, I leaned my head back in my chair and fell into a sweet sleep from which I was awakened by a sudden rapping at my right hand (apparently) on the carpet. I stepped immediately to the watch, and it was precisely half past two, just the time at which she was to take her medicine."

This is but a small portion of the record kept by those who keep a private journal of sayings, but they are enough at this point to show that if the cause is evil, the effect is good, and that if it is the devil, his character is somewhat different from what the imagination of men have made it out to be, and they should set about correcting their false reports.

But says one, "you get contradictory answers." This is true; or rather, there are answers obtained in regard to coming events which do not accord with the facts as the time transpires. There are several reasons which may operate to produce this discrepancy. One very prominent one is, that we do not know the law which governs this communication, and the whole is so new to us that we are very liable to mistakes ourselves. Another reason, in our opinion, is the interference of ignorant spirits, who do not know whether the matter they attempt to speak of be true or not. We have never believed in the absolute perfection of this mode of communication. It is a great error that many rush into, who are carried away by a little excitement or wonder, that because there is a medium of communication with spirits, that it is therefore an infallible source of information. The class of persons who assume, at the outset, the infallibility of spiritual communications are the very first to brand them all as evil and nothing but evil, because they have been somewhat disappointed.

We see no reason for supposing that, because a man has passed from this state of existence that he has become at once the most perfect of prophets, without regard to his condition here. This is only equalled by the absurd idea that because a man has been ignorant and degraded here, he shall be placed still lower in the scale of being when he passes from visible existence.

There are, undoubtedly, spirits who desire to be noticed and to answer questions, who are too ignorant to give any instruction and who would be as likely to tell wrong as right. We do not believe these to be willfully vicious; these errors arise from their ignorance, and we are answered that they will ultimately progress to a state of intelligence, purity and happiness equal to those who pass from here under more favorable circumstances. Swedenborg says there are some spirits so ignorant that they do not know but they are the ones called for, when another is meant. This may be so. We are inclined to think it is, for we have known attempts to be made to imitate the signal which we always get when we call for a friend. Nearly every person who has called frequently for some particular spirit gets a signal whereby that particular spirit is known. This signal is different for different spirits, and although it is frequently attempted we have never known these signals imitated. We do not think there is danger of being deceived by ignorant spirits when a person becomes acquainted with these communications. The sound made by an ignorant spirit is quite different from the others. While the sound made by intelligent spirits is clear and lively, the sound made by the ignorant ones is low and muffled like the striking of the hand on a carpet. We are confident that with due caution and care, intelligent and upright individuals will get correct answers. Much depends upon the mind and disposition of persons at the time of asking the questions, for as all the Universe goes by affinities it needs a pure mind, calm thinker and deliberate questioner to get communications from spirits of a high order.*

Where there are a large number of persons asking questions they are apt to get into confusion and mistake the answers. We were at one time getting something spelled out by a spirit who purported to be the spirit of William Willets, a member, when living, of the society of friends. In spelling a sentence one word was spelled wrong and we wondered why it should happen so. He explained it thus, "you were all thinking of another word." This was true, but still we could not see why that should make a difference. It was further explained by saying, "why, thee knows that when thee is talking with a friend and that friend is thinking and talking about another thing, thee is confused." So it will be seen that when spirits do communicate with us they do not pretend to be beyond the influence of those with whom they come in contact.

There is a great difference too, in individuals about getting answers. Some will get test questions answered freely and correctly while others can get none at all. Why this difference, we are unable to tell. Sometimes when there is a stranger introduced, all wish him convinced, and yet, as if to show the stranger, and all concerned, how entirely it is beyond our control, no sound can be elicited. This of itself, is enough to convince as many as have witnessed such an occurrence, that if it was made by some designing person it would be made when they themselves wish it.

*See Ezekiel xiv, 3, 1.

But says one who has hardly spent an hour in making the test, and who has got wrong answers: "They are proved to be lying spirits." Perhaps such an argument is good. If it is in this case it will also prove all men to be liars, because we meet untruthful persons occasionally, or often. The logic is as good in one case as the other. To all who have seen fit to accuse these manifestations of evil we would put this question. Did you ever know of an answer given, or a message, or a sentence spelled out that had a tendency to evil? We know of none who have been able to answer in the affirmative. We know of those who think the theological teaching wrong, but that cannot be proved; and there is abundance of proof of right direction and positive good in the matter. Some will answer that "evil spirits act thus in order the more effectually to deceive." Well, we insist that as long as they act in accordance with goodness and truth they are not to be condemned as evil on the surmise of some bigoted devil-believers.

We find nothing alarming in the theological teachings of these spirits. Others may. On these points there will be differences among men until they reach a more perfect state of knowledge than they at present possess. Their general theology is that of Davis, Swedenborg, and others who have claimed to receive their impressions from spirits. They generally use the term higher and lower spheres instead of Heaven and Hell. They say that all persons pass to a condition superior to that which they occupied here, on their leaving the body. Thousands of questions have been asked on these points, and have been answered by spirits who purported to be Emanuel Swedenborg, the "Seeress of Prevorst," George Fox, Galen, William E. Channing, Nathaniel P. Rogers, John Wesley, Samuel Wesley, Percy Bysshe Shelley, Prof. David P. Page, and many others.

It may be well to remark that many times when these spirits are communicating, the alphabet will be called for and some name,—perhaps one of the above, and perhaps some other spelled, as the one who wishes to communicate. Often it is a name which the company had not thought of. They generally deliver some useful and interesting message when such is the case. The following are questions which are frequently asked, and we give the answers as they have been spelled out. We might fill a volume with questions and answers.

Q. What is your mission to the world?

Ans. To do good. The time will come when we will communicate universally.

Q. Of what benefit will it be to mankind?

Ans. We can reveal truths to the world—and men will become more harmonious and better prepared for the higher spheres.

Q. Some persons imagine that the spirits are evil and that Satan is transformed into an Angel of light to deceive us. What shall we say to them?

Ans. Tell them some of their bigotry will have to be dispensed with before they can believe we are good spirits. Ask them why they refuse to investigate. They are not as wise as they suppose themselves to be.

Q. Can ignorant spirits rap?

Ans. Yes. (An ignorant spirit rapped and the difference was very plain between that and the other.)

Q. Are these sounds made by rapping?

Ans. No. They are made by the will of the spirits causing a concussion of the atmosphere and making the sounds appear in whatever place they please.

Q. Can they make the sounds to all persons?

Ans. No. The time will come when they can.

Q. Is there some peculiar state of the body that makes it easier to communicate with some persons than others?

Ans. Yes.

Such is a brief, faint account of theological views gleaned from this source. Its truth or fallacy will be decided upon according to the bias of individuals reading it. We have attempted to give what testimony we are in possession of, touching the matter of good and evil—truth and falsehood. We ask no one to look upon this as all infallible, for reasons before stated. Investigate with care, and if you learn more of the origin of these sounds than we have, let the world have the benefit of it.

NOTE.—In our first edition a definition of the word Hell was given to one of the authors of this work by a person who received it and related it from memory, and which since then we have learned was not serbatim et literatim. Up to the time of going to press with this edition we have been unable to get the definition as written down at the time it was spelled out and we are compelled to delay its publication until we issue a future work upon this subject.

CHAPTER IX.

DISPLAY OF PHYSICAL POWER—MOVING OF ARTICLES—PLAYING MUSICAL INSTRUMENTS, ETC., ETC.

WE now come to a part of the subject which is thought to be still harder to believe, and is scouted at still more than anything in the foregoing narrative. We, ourselves, when first hearing of the "mysterious sounds," were far from receiving it as truth, and thought the story very improbable. We thought the story of the power and will to move articles still more so. But we were destined to be convinced by positive proof. This must convince the mass of those who ever become convinced of so strange a matter, unless the true philosophy of such occurrences is discovered and laid before the world. We hope this may soon be the case. But we are to deal with facts,

———" 'Tis true, 'tis strange,
Yet stronger 'tis, 'tis true."

That there is a power as well as a will in whatever produces these sounds, is evident to those who have had fair opportunities to investigate the subject. We, with others, have many times been witness to the moving of tables, chairs and other articles, with no visible power to move them. We do not believe they were moved without something to do it. We simply say that the power was to us intangible and beyond our vision; we also know that no person or machinery had any agency in producing the phenomena. Those things, like the sounds, are not confined to any particular room or house; but appear in various places. We have experienced them when but two or three were present, and those of our own family, and when entirely unexpected and uncalled for. It would be the height of absurdity to suppose that we would sit down for the purpose of deceiving ourselves.

The following are extracts from E. W. CAPRON's private journal. All the phenomena there recorded took place in presence of a number of witnesses who are ready to testify to the facts when called upon. The occurrences took place in Auburn.

"WEDNESDAY EVENING, June 20th. Present six persons and none of the family of Mr. Fox in town. The rapping was heard very freely by all. The table moved on the floor with no person touching it—moved to the distance of a foot or more and back, in various directions. At our request, the table (which was a very light one,) was held down to the floor so that it required the whole strength of a man to move it from its position. We also held one side, and requested, if there was power to do it, that it would be drawn away from us; this was done, and our strength was not sufficient to hold it. On the light being taken out of the room, (the persons in the room placing themselves in a position where each would know if any others moved,) the table cloth was taken from the table and very compactly stowed away under it, near one corner. A hat which was on the table was turned over the table cloth in a manner that nearly hid it from view. The table was then raised from the floor on one side, and there stood, although we used considerable strength to push it down. While the table stood in that position, by placing our hands upon it we would feel a quick, tremulous motion, like the action of a galvanic battery. The witnesses present at this time were Miss Mary M. Bennett, H. D. Barron, Mrs. Mary Miller, Miss Amanda Hoskins, Mrs. Sarah A. Tamlin, and E. W. Capron."

This feeling of electricity seems to pervade nearly everything connected with these phenomena. When the rapping is heard, the peculiar jar is felt—differing from the jar produced by a blow, and in various other ways we are reminded of the use of this subtil agent. We often see in a dark room, bright electric flashes on the wall and other places.

We, and all who have taken pains to get at the truth of all these demonstrations, have frequently had a hand laid on their arms, shoulders or head, when no person would or could do it, having all their hands held by each other. These demonstrations, like the others, generally leave a feeling of electricity where they touch. The hand feels much like one who is in a magnetic sleep, being colder (generally) than the hand of persons in a normal state, and having a moisture like a cold perspiration upon it. There is not, usually, any feeling like that of a hard hand, or one made up with the usual amount of bones in it. It is generally soft and smooth, although at our request it will change both its temperature and texture. It will in one instant feel as cold as ice and as warm as a common hand of flesh.

So perfectly natural is the touch when an arm is taken hold of by this invisible hand, or it touches in any other way, that, although you hold every hand in the room, you can hardly believe it to be other than some of them. But the proof is positive and the witnesses are numerous. Then, too, just request a change from natural warmth to the coldness of ice, and you feel the change without the hand being removed. It is past the art of man thus to change the temperature of his body.

We have taken a common pocket bible and have laid it on the table with the strap put through the loop, and have awaited in silence the result. Soon we would hear the leaves begin to turn, and finally it would spell "get the light," and we would find the book laying open at some particular chapter, which generally had something to say about spirits. Other books have been opened and appropriate poetry pointed out. The phenomena of pulling the clothing, handling, moving tables, &c., often takes place when none present are thinking of it, so that their wills do not influence the matter.

We continue our extract from the Journal:

"SUNDAY EVENING, October 7th. This evening we were directed to go into the hall and take the guitar. We went, and while there the guitar was played by unseen hands, and played so exquisitely too, that it seemed more like far distant music to one just aroused from midnight slumbers, than the music of an instrument a few feet from us. Several tunes were thus played, while not a person in the room knew how to play a tune on that or any other instrument. Witnesses present this evening at the house of Mr. Bennet, Mrs. Burton Straight, of Troy, Bradford county, Penn., Mrs. G. B. Bennet, R. M. C. Capron, E. W. Capron, and H. D. Barron, of Auburn."

"TUESDAY EVENING, October 16th. Several persons present at the house of D. C. MILLER. We were directed to take the guitar into a dark room and it would be played. We accordingly did so, and many tunes were played, and in such positions that we knew no one could do it if there had been any one present who knew how, but there was not. There were none there who could play a tune in the light, much less in the dark, the owner not being there. Besides this, they (the spirits) moved books and other articles to different parts of the room. A paper box was taken from the table, the contents were emptied into the cover and placed in the hands of H. D. BARRON. After this a small book was taken from the same table and placed in the hands of the same individual. One of the company accidentally touched the hand of another, when he asked "Did any body touch my hand?" The alphabet was called for and the question answered, "Yes, E—— touched your hand." So it will be seen that although it may be dark, there is something present that can tell if any one attempts a trick. One of the company was told to take off her ring. She did so, laid it in her hand, and it was taken away. We all sat still until directed to get the light. When upon looking a little we found the ring with a girl's hair band put through and pinned to the apron of the person who sat next to her, in such a manner that they were pinned together." This was done while we had hold of hands and no possibility of its being done by the individuals present. The witnesses present were Justin Sturtevant and wife, H. N. Thompson, Mrs. Mary Miller, E. W. Capron, Mrs. S. A. Tamlin, Miss Amanda Hoskins, Henry D. Barron, Mrs. R. M. C. Capron, and Miss Catharine Fox.

"SATURDAY EVENING, October 20th. This evening we had asked for some different demonstrations, and our request was complied with. We heard the sounds on the wall, bureau, table, floor, and other places, as loud as the striking with a hammer. The table was moved about the room, and turned over and turned back. Two men in the company undertook to hold a chair down, while, at their request, a spirit moved it, and notwithstanding they exerted all their strength, the chair could not be held still by them. As we sat by the table, the cloth was removed to a different part of the room. The combs of several ladies were taken from their heads and put into the heads of others, and afterwards the combs returned to their owners, and placed in the hair as before. There was a person present this evening who had been suspicious that the guitar was played a few nights before by some of the persons present. The first thing when we came together was, for the alphabet to be called for by the spirits who spelled, 'A. thinks R. and C. played the guitar!' Thus were her thoughts revealed before the company. At another meeting, another person was told the same thing, although she had never expressed to any one her thoughts." Witnesses the same as the evening previous, except Mr. and Mrs. Sturtevant."

During one of these evenings, a wish was expressed that we might see the hand that touched us. On looking towards the window, (the moon shining through the curtain,) we saw a hand waived to and fro before, and near the top of it. We could discover no other part of a form. This we have witnessed many times ourselves, and several have discovered distinctly the features of persons whom they knew and who had been dead for years.

On one occasion when several persons were present, the guitar was taken from the hands of those who held it, (they taking hold of hands,) and put in tune and commenced playing while it passed around the room above their heads. It was also taken from one person and passed to others in the room. In this way for nearly two hours it continued to play and keep time with the singing; and the guitar taken by this unseen power to different parts of the room while playing. The witnesses present at this time, were James H. Bostwick, Esq., Police Justice, Miss Sarah Bostwick, Mrs. F. Smith, H. D. Barron, and R. M. C. Capron.

One evening while several ladies were present, some of them requested that the spirits would take their hair down. Accordingly it was done. One of them had her hair taken down and done up in a twist, and one of them had her's braided in four strands.

On the 12th of January, H. D. Barron called at the house of the Fox family in Rochester, in company with JAMES J. OWEN of that city. They were seated around the table IN THE DAY TIME and it moved about the distance of one foot. They then moved away from it and it moved back and forth when no one touched it, and in full view several times. No one was present except the persons named and Mrs. Fox and her three daughters. Mr. Owen then put down a number of figures where none of the company could see them, and when he came to the ones which were the number of years of his age there was rapping. Mr. Owen remarked that there was no one present who knew his age, and that the answer was correct. In the same way it told the number of months over the years. These were done at the request of one of the persons present.

The next day, (Sunday,) H. D. Barron called at the house of the Fox family. After several questions had been answered, a spirit purporting to be that of a relative, called for the alphabet and spelled the following sentence: "Henry, when you get home, R. will hand you a letter from ——." On the following Tuesday morning, he arrived in Auburn, and was handed a letter by R——, mailed at New-York, and received at Auburn on the Sunday that the communication was given in Rochester. The persons present at the time this communication was received were Mrs. Fox, her youngest daughter, Isaac Post of Rochester, and the one to whom the communication was addressed.

On one occasion we were getting the guitar played by these unseen musicians and were directed to sing several different tunes among which were "Get off the Track" and "The Old Granite State." The guitar was played as the song went on in company with the voices. While it was playing Dr. H. Robinson passed his hand over the whole length of the strings several times within half an inch of them, to see if it was possible that any one present was playing it and trying to deceive. There was no difference when he passed his hand over. The following persons were present on this occasion. Dr. H. Robinson, M. A. Hilman, Mr. Henry Sheffield, Westerly, R. L. C. V. Woodward, Mary M. Bennet, E. W. Capron, E. A. Warden, P. M., Mrs. E. A. Warden, Lucie Gardner, R. M. C. Capron and G. S. Willson.

Not long since Judge HASCALL of LeRoy, related to E. W. Capron a fact that came under his notice while examining into these phenomena in company with Mr. SUMMERFIELD, a lawyer of the same place, which strongly illustrates the power of whatever makes these sounds, to produce any sound by their will. He (Judge H.) stated that they were at the house of the Fox family and went into a dark room. They called for the sounds to be made like a band of martial music. As they requested, the sounds were produced in a most beautiful and thrilling manner. The playing of the instruments and the heavy beating of the base drum was perfectly imitated, together with the sound of the roar of distant cannon. Both Mr. Summerfield and Judge Hascall agreed in saying that the whole thing was so truthfully and exactly imitated that the effect produced on the hearers was of the most thrilling character.

In the month of November last, ELLIAS J. DOTY of Macedon, Wayne county, was at the house of Mr. PIERPONT of Rochester, where two sisters who hear these sounds were present. They had seen the table move and had other demonstrations while the young ladies were in the room. After they had left the room, Mr. Doty was standing a few feet from the table and the other person still farther from it, when he remarked that it would be a still greater proof to him if it would move without the presence of the young ladies. As he said this the table moved some distance, and only the three persons in the room, and those not near the table. We state this on the authority of Mr. Doty, and none who know him need better evidence.

We cannot pretend to give all the cases of these singular demonstrations which have been witnessed by ourselves and others; it would fill a large volume. But we have here recorded enough to convince any who have the least confidence in the honesty and intelligence of their fellow-beings, that there is something here worth the trouble of any man to investigate. If it looks strange and unaccountable to most people—if it even looks impossible—we can sympathize with them, for we have thought all such accounts, from whatever source, ancient or modern, under whatever name, whether sacred or profane, to be flights of imagination, or a tale to frighten the credulous and excite the marvellous. But if the story of opening prison doors for certain persons without the aid of human hands looked impossible, it can look so no longer for we know of the unlocking of doors and drawers without visible means. If the account of the handwriting on the walls of Belshazzar's palace was looked upon as the idle "fabric of a dream," we can now deem it even probable, as we know the walls of our own room bear positive testimony of the fact, that it is not impossible at the present day. We see many things now which may be accounted for on philosophical principles, which once looked to us like a "miracle," and was therefore thought to have no foundation in nature, as we have been taught to believe these things that are recorded as miracles, as contrary to natural laws. We now believe that what have been called miracles, either never existed at all, or were perfectly in accordance with nature's laws which will at some day, and that not far distant, be known to man. We know the objection to this theory. We are aware of the aversion that most people have to explaining ancient mysteries. At the same time they condemn things that to them look strange at the present time. We have never been believers in things marvellous or wonderful, and consequently have been branded as "Infidels"—a word by the way, which is too commonly used to alarm any body who really understands its meaning. We expect always to remain "infidel" to theories which are not sustained by facts or reason. Many things look reasonable to us, of which we cannot at present know the tangible facts; and many facts are presented which we may be unable to follow to their causes with our present limited knowledge. But we shall continue the search and endeavor to do our share toward finding the causes for all new and novel phenomena that may present themselves without fear of ridicule from the vulgar, or contempt from the wise and learned.

APPENDIX.

READER, we have given you a plain statement of well ascertained FACTS. We have stated facts, not only within our own knowledge, but known equally well to others. We have given you their names and residence, and it is an easy matter for their testimony to be obtained by any one if they require still more proof. The facts are abundant to satisfy any that there is something here worthy of being investigated. It has been examined by thousands and yet no collusion is proved. We are anxious the world may know the truth, and the whole truth, in regard to the matter.

If it is only an occasional phenomenon which is destined to pass away with the existence of a few persons now living, or with the present generation, it is still worthy to be investigated. If it is really something that is destined to spread and increase, as facts seem to indicate—if indeed it is an influx from the world of spirits into our own, the sooner we become acquainted with the laws that govern and regulate the communication, the better.

As to the strangeness of the occurrences we have related, especially the moving of articles, playing musical instruments, &c., we submit that it is no more strange for a table to move, a guitar or piano to play without visible means, than it would be to one unacquainted with the laws of nature and the action of the atmosphere or the wind, to see a man's hat rise from his head and whirl through the air or street. Such a person would hardly believe the tale, if it was told to him. He would want "positive proof" on the subject. Still more incredulous would such a person be, if we should tell him that an ocean of calm water was lashed into waves that ran mountain high, or that a vast dwelling, inhabited by men, women and children, was wafted around the world by the same invisible power, or that the same thing caused wires, when placed in a certain position, to produce sounds, harmony, music. If we should tell him all this, he would suppose us to be trying to impose upon him, or that we were crazy, fanatics, fools, or monstrously humbugged, or that he was himself ignorant of the facts. We can all see that he would be the "humbugged" one in such a case. We know of many who are in the same condition in regard to this. Like many other new and apparently strange things this has over and over been "exploded" "exposed" "found out" and "stopped" by news-paper paragraphs and letter writers. Yet it still continues and so far from being stopped, it is absolutely spreading. Many more persons hear these manifestations than are willing to acknowledge it publicly, so great is the ridicule heaped upon those who do feel called upon to investigate and let the world know what is passing in their midst.

We have encountered as much opposition as if we had been making efforts to build up a new sect instead of stating facts for the world to judge of, and we must be permitted to say that pre-eminent among the attempts to slander by malicious falsehoods stands the religious papers, and at the head of these the "Northern Christian Advocate" of this city which declares that no persons of respectability have investigated these matters, although the editor well knows that the church of which he is a member does not scruple to call regularly for support upon many of these same individuals. We respect the honest inquiring skeptic. It is a question upon which a man has a right to be skeptical. But men have no right or reason to accuse their fellow inquirers who have been more fortunate than themselves.

Many think and say "well if I could go there, I could find out what it is." We have been in that position ourselves. We thought ourselves perfectly able to find it out for the very reason that we thought it some cause which was close at hand and easily found out. A year of trial has convinced us that we were not acquainted with nature enough to find the cause so suddenly as we supposed.

The question has often been asked: "Why do these spirits require a dark room whenever they play musical instruments, take hold of persons," &c. This they answer by saying that they assume a tangible form in order to do these things, and we are not yet prepared for such a visitation.

It is again asked: "How they can make a form that we can feel and even see a hand of." Their answer to this is that they use the ingredients of the atmosphere to make up this form.

This is in accordance with the opinions of the "Seeress of Provorst" when she says, (see Mrs. Crowe translation page 29.) She "is of the opinion that opening a window at the moment of a souls departure is not a mere superstition, but that it actually facilitates its escape, and that there is some substance in the air, which spirits make use of to render themselves audible and visible to mortals." We have also noticed another feature in connection with this part of these phenomena. It is the fact that when these demonstrations are to be made the spirits always direct us to go into the part of the house where there is no fire, or where there is the least heat in the room. We have noticed this fact without, in this place, pretending to give the philosophy.

Another evidence that they make up a form from the ingredients of the atmosphere is the fact that nothing of a substance so compact as that apparently is, could gain access to the room when doors and windows were closed. But the matter composing what we name spirit is so subtile that it, like electricity, can penetrate anywhere.

We are never required to go in the dark unless some demonstration is to be made requiring a tangible form. We are not required to go in the dark to see a table or any article move. That is done by candle light and day light or at any time. None who are acquainted with the matter pretend that darkness is necessary.

Again we are asked how a spirit can rap so as to make an audible sound. The spirits say they do not rap, but produce the sounds by will. We have examined a number of clairvoyants on this subject and all agree in this. We put a boy, who had no knowledge of the matter at all, neither was he noted for a remarkable degree of intelligence, into a magnetic sleep, and turned his attention to the subject. He was clairvoyant and said he could see who made the sounds. We asked him how the persons looked. His answer was, "they look light—just like gauze; I can see right through them." Well, how do they make the sounds; do they rap? "No! they don't rap or strike at all." When after looking earnestly for a time he said: "They want it made, and it is made wherever they want it." This was his simple way of telling what other clairvoyants have told in language somewhat different, but amounting to the same thing. This is the best explanation we have ever been able to obtain. We believe, from all we have been able to discover, that this is the case. Some have supposed that this was some electric phenomenon, and that if the persons who have these communications and seem to be the medium of obtaining them, were insulated the sounds would not be heard. This experiment has been tried, and the sounds were heard as freely as ever. In the case of the manifestations with the son of Mr. HARMON BEA-VER of Sennett as before stated, the boy has never been under the influence of magnetism. It is, however conceded that thus far the sounds have generally been freer in presence of known clairvoyants. The question has often been asked of spirits why this was so, and we have received the following answer: "They (clairvoyants) have the full power of sympathy with the spirits through the medium of the nervous fluid or electricity which is the only medium of communication between spirits in and out of the body."

It is objected that spirits—especially good ones, would not be engaged in the "small business" of rapping or moving articles at the request of persons. It must be remembered that the world reasons sensually, and there is no way for the mass to become so absolutely convinced as through the medium of their senses. Then it is not unreasonable to suppose that good spirits would condescend to give us all the evidence we may require in this way whenever they have a medium through which they can act in accordance with some law known to them, but not yet discovered by us.

It is almost universally the case that when any person begins the investigation of these subjects they want the most sensuous kind of testimony. They do not wish to sit down and ask questions with that confidence that they would enter into conversation with a person, even if that person was a stranger. They begin with suspicion and require all possible demonstration to prove that they are not deceived. Their questions are then asked with all the ingenuity of an attorney conducting a cross-examination, and with a firm conviction many times that they will be answered wrong. If they are answered perfectly correct, then they ask, "can they do this, or do that"? I want to see such and such a thing done and then I shall be convinced. "Let this be done and they ask still another form of proof, and in this way," they tax their energies to find something new to suggest, and it is simple most certainly, but if there is truth in the matter it is certainly not to be wondered at, that whatever it is, should take the only means of convincing the senses of those who require such proof. We are not aware of anything of this nature being done unless by the solicitation of the persons investigating.

Let those who are so alarmed about the "pranks" as they are pleased to call them, undertake the investigation themselves and see if they fail of making the same requisitions or something of the kind. If they do, they will very likely ask information about some gold speculation or some darling scheme that is of much more consequence to them than whether man exists at all beyond this visible life or not. Over and over again have we been disgusted with the questions asked about speculating schemes and money making. Is it to be wondered at, that answers are given in many cases "according to the multitude of their idols"?

Let those who are earnest and candid enquirers take a very small company—sit down together—being all candid and truthful themselves, and then see whether they will not get answers that can be depended upon. If they do not, it will be entirely contrary to the general experience of those who have made such trials. Our history here, is one of FACTS. We have but incidentally turned aside to speculate or explain. We have spoken of the phenomena as produced by spirits because we think this the most reasonable conclusion we can arrive at at the present stage of the matter. If the sounds and other manifestations should cease now, the proof would be the same, unless positive proof of some other means was shown to be the cause. Whatever may be the result, we know that our facts are well attested and our statements of the effects are true and the only chance for mistake is in the cause. We shall continue to make honest efforts to find out if there is any other cause than that to which we have attributed the manifestations and shall be as happy to gain farther knowledge on the subject and lay it before the world as any others whether it confirm or refute our present theory.

Since compiling the body of this work we have received several letters and some papers containing additional testimony on the subject which we give the reader in this appendix.

The following letter is from Judge Hascall, of Le Roy, who was one of the committee of investigation at Corinthian Hall, and who has taken abundant opportunity for investigation since that time, and whose honesty, and powers for calm investigation will not be called in question by those who have any knowledge of the man. He is extensively known as a man eminent in his profession, and an upright and candid citizen.

Le Roy, 13th, February, 1850.

MR. E. W. CAPRON,

DEAR SIR:—Yours of the 12th instant is just received in which you requested me to send you a statement of what I have witnessed of the phenomenon known as the "Mysterious Rappings." I should be pleased to give you a particular account of my investigations in endeavoring to discover the cause of the mysterious sounds, but other engagements prevent, and you must be content with a very imperfect sketch of them. As the Committees appointed at public meetings at Corinthian Hall, to investigate and if possible detect and expose what was generally believed to be some ingenious device, had failed to ascertain the cause, and the persons who must be present when the rappings were made, challenged further investigation, I concluded to enquire into this singular problem and solve it if possible. Accordingly I visited the house where these young ladies reside, in company with several persons, and our efforts were attended with no better success than were those of the committees whose investigations at other places had preceded ours. The experiment was repeated at the residences of several highly respectable families in the city of Rochester, to which the young ladies were invited, and the same rappings were heard apparently at different places in the room at the same time, and our efforts to detect the cause at these places were fruitless. Among the persons who were present with me on this occasion, were members of the legal and medical profession, men of science and skill, and we entirely failed to discover any art or machinery, philosophical apparatus, or means whatever by which the sounds and other manifestations were produced.

I will not go into the particulars of the whole I witnessed during the investigations before referred to, but will state generally that I have witnessed much of the phenomena which you have mentioned in the pamphlet recently published by you at Auburn.

Yours Respectfully,

A. P. HASCALL.

The following statement we are allowed to publish from JOHN S. CLACKNER, of RAVENNA, O.

"At your request I will write a few instances of the mysterious agencies, alias, spirits in Western New York, with which I was familiar previous to my removal to this place, and to which I am willing to testify if necessary. Dates or times of occurrences, I shall omit for brevity sake. I also wish it understood that in the following communications, when I say, the spirit answered, that it was done by rapping and the use of the alphabet. This course I adopt in order to avoid a useless repetition of the words rapping and alphabet.

My first interview with Mrs. Fish, was at her residence on Prospect street in Rochester. We were total strangers to each other, she supposing me from the country. After I got into the house, I remarked, it would be a gratification to me if the 'spirit' would reveal my name to her as I had been informed it had in other cases. She said, 'spirit, do you know this gentleman?' As quick as thought, she was answered by loud raps, when she again said, 'will you tell his name by the alphabet?' She was answered in the affirmative. She then commenced calling the alphabet, and was stopped by the spirit rapping at every letter in my name. Then she pronounced it audible and was confirmed by the raps. Subsequently one evening it would not allow me to stay in the room, alledging as a reason that I had not fulfilled my engagement to bring with me, my wife and son. Mrs. F. urged it to permit me to stay; but it continued to spell out it must go. After some further expostulation she said 'you may stay.' It immediately called out for the alphabet and spelled: 'Leah has done wrong—he must go.' At others times it was free to converse with me, but this evening it would say nothing to me. At another time the spirit commenced rapping voluntarily for the alphabet and spelled out: 'M. has done wrong.' M. answered, 'Why, Spirit what have I done now that is wrong?' to which it answered by the alphabet, 'you said I rapped this morning, at Andrew's; I only gave you a sound.' * * * *

At another time the young ladies came to my house for advice upon domestic affairs. I proposed calling a meeting of friends on the subject. They consented on condition that the Spirits agreed thereto. They made several unsuccessful attempts in various places in that room for an answer from the Spirits, until at length at the front part of the house it answered and told them the reason of its silence in other places—it was that 'there were eave-droppers and enemies listening and could hear. It encouraged our project and success crowned our efforts' * * * *

At one time it requested one man present to set a sum in addition and let no man see his figures but himself. He then pointed to any figure he chose and asked the Spirit to give as many distinct single raps as it amounted to, which was promptly and correctly done, also the whole sum added up and proved, in the same way as learners in school do, with this difference only, that it would instantly and deliberately rap the amount contained in each row of figures perpendicular, allowing no time for first enumerating. I could relate many circumstances relative to this mysterious agency. Let one more suffice, where it had a direct moral influence upon a young man that I introduced to the family where these sounds are heard. His name was not mentioned at the time until the Spirit desired to communicate with him. He asked who wished to communicate with him? The answer was, 'George Fox, the first Quaker.' What do you want to say to me said the youngster, and was answered by the Spirit, 'I want you to stay after the others go away.' The evening passed in getting answers, beating time with music, &c., until the Spirit spelled 'done.'—When the company began to disperse, each bidding the Spirit 'good night,' the young man was proceeding to go, when the Spirit rapped for the alphabet and spelled out his name and 'stay,' upon which I remarked that I supposed I must leave him. It then told me to stay. The young man asked who wanted to communicate with him, and it answered 'your sister.' She had been dead some eighteen years. He was much affected and asked if she would answer him mental questions, and was answered in the affirmative. He asked many; we could hear the raps in answer; but did not know the nature of his questions. From that time, a manifest change was perceptible in his conduct, whether the same continues I am unable to tell.

Respectfully yours,

JOHN S. CLACKNER.

Ravenna, Portage Co., O., Feb. 13, 1850."

We have also several articles and letters which as they contain positive testimony and very correct views on the subject, we insert here, although they have previously been published in the papers to which we credit them.

The following we take from the New-York Excelsior of February 2d, 1850. The writer is WM. H. McDONALD Esq., one of the editors and proprietors of the Excelsior, whom it will be seen has visited Rochester.

"We last week, in noticing a work lately printed in Auburn treating of the knockings heard in Rochester and elsewhere, alleged to be produced by supernatural agency, indulged in a few remarks concerning these mysterious sounds. Although we have since received some perfectly reliable and authentic light on the subject, upon a re-perusal of the article, we cannot consent to modify any of the opinions there expressed. We think still many things are wanting fully to establish their claim to be considered spiritual communications. But many circumstances connected with them are unaccountable and wonderful, view the occurrences in what light we may.

Since our last issue we have seen in the Tribune, copied from the 'Adrian Watch Tower,' an extract from a letter written by one Langworthy, which, as it in several instances states what is false, and casts foul aspersions upon the character of the young ladies in whose presence the rappings are heard, facts in our possession impel us to notice, as at least a partial vindication of their characters. Mr. L. says, for instance, that, 'on all occasions, without one single exception, this knocking was always under their feet, and any statement you may have seen, incompatible with this, is a base fabrication.' Notwithstanding this grave assertion, the individual himself in the next sentence, is guilty of falsehood, for he says, 'when there was knocking on the doors and tables, which communicate a vibration to the hand, these girls were in every case touching these articles with the backs of their dresses!' A flat contradiction as every one can see. Again he says—"We tried other experiments of a different nature, all of which fastened on our minds conclusively the conviction that this mysterious rapping was so intimately connected with the persons of these girls, that were they thoroughly examined, sans culottes, the ghost would stand out in base relief. But we were men (?) and as the girls were cornered and very much frightened we let it go at this, and dismissed them from custody.' Again he says, 'by placing the girls on a table and putting our hands on their feet the knocking stopped. By tying their dresses around their ankles with cords it also ceased.'

Now this is all false, if the testimony of hundreds of respectable citizens is of any value. The girls were stripped by a committee of ladies; at other times they were placed upon pillows, their dresses tied around their feet, they were electrically insulated by being placed upon glass, and still the knockings were heard.

However, to proceed to what we know upon the subject, which shall, at any rate, be as reliable as the statements of Mr. Langworthy, and will show the public the other side of the picture.

One of the proprietors of this paper while on a business tour through the western part of the state, passed through Rochester, and during a stay in that place of four days, improved the opportunity by inquiries into the truth of reports which had reached him in New York. In this article he will give an unvarnished account of what he there saw and heard, leaving inferences to be drawn by his readers, without any attempt to account for that which, to him, was truly unaccountable.

There are said to be many in whose presence the rappings are heard, but those who have attracted the largest share of public attention are the three daughters of a Mr. and Mrs. Fox, people of respectability though not wealthy. The mother and daughters have for a few months resided in the city of Rochester, in Troupe-st., in a perfectly respectable neighborhood, the infamous insinuation of Langworthy, to the contrary notwithstanding. The elder sister, Mrs. Fish, is a widow lady, and she has long contributed largely to the support of her younger sisters by teaching music. The second is about sixteen years of age, named Margaretta, and the youngest, Miss Catharine, aged fourteen. At the desire of either of these sisters the rappings are heard.*

*The sounds are generally heard at the desire of those who visit the house, but only accompany the two youngest sisters.—AUTHORS.

The sounds vary from a light clear metallic sound to a dull muffled one, like a rap with the knuckles upon a partition covered with a cloth. When one rap is heard an affirmative is meant,—silence, instead of giving consent, implies a negative. When a question is asked which does not admit of an answer by a simple yes or no, the alphabet is called for by a peculiar rap. In spelling out a sentence by letters, one of the ladies commences repeating the alphabet, and when the desired letter is mentioned a rap is heard. In this way, though of course slowly, long sentences are communicated.

Early in the present week, being in Rochester, we solicited and obtained an interview with Mrs. Fish and her sisters, during which the knockings were heard by ourself. Previous to the manifestations we were introduced to two gentlemen belonging to a committee who had been authorized by the ladies to relieve them from the constant annoyance resulting from throngs who besiege the house from motives of curiosity. We were desired to seat ourselves at the table, and after a short conversation upon indifferent subjects, one of the gentlemen present inquired of Mrs. F. if the spirits would converse with the writer. No reply. The question was then asked if the spirits would converse with the other gentlemen in the room. An affirmative rap was heard. Mrs. Fish then asked if the spirits would show in what manner they usually manifested their presence and intelligence. Immediately a series of raps were heard, differing in sound, light and heavy, now on the table before us, and again on the floor, and in various and distant parts of the room. A number of questions respecting the gentlemen of the committee were then asked, and were said to have been answered correctly. Previous to leaving, the cause or causes of the rappings were requested to answer queries with regard to ourself, and complied by responding without error to a few questions, stating that they would communicate more freely with us on a future interview. We then took our leave and returned to the hotel.

The morning and evening of the following day, we called upon them again. In the morning, in a very light room, many questions were asked concerning ourself and were answered correctly, without a moment's hesitation. It is impossible that the correct answers to these questions could have been known to any persons present, by ordinary methods of obtaining the information. Among these were the ages of ourself and wife, the number of our children living and dead, their ages, health, letters we expected, our success in business, etc—all these queries related to the past, with one exception, and were solved with perfect correctness. A table standing in the room was moved without any visible agency, (it will be recollected that it was in the day time, and the apartment was well lighted,) and notwithstanding all our efforts to keep it stationary. Others present said they received correct answers to interrogations relating to them.

In the evening similar questions were asked and answered. At the request of the sisters the table was again moved backward, and forward. At the request of a person present the sisters stood up at a distance from it, and it was moved against them with sufficient force to push the three against the wall. Two lighted candles were upon the table during its movement. It was also lifted from the floor, and although not heavy, it was, upon a request being made to that effect, held to the floor with so much power that it required great exertion for us to raise one end of it.

At interviews held with them on the two following days many questions were answered respecting many other gentlemen in our presence, and in all cases said to have been answered correctly. On one occasion the sounds proper to a carpenter's shop were heard apparently proceeding from the wall and table. Sawing, planing, pounding with a mallet were imitated to the life. We should not have mentioned this, knowing that ventriloquism has often achieved such feats, had it not been that upon placing the hand upon the table the jarring could be perceptibly felt. At another time we took the table, and allowing one leg to rest upon the floor, raised the opposite corner, and holding it with both our hands, with our utmost strength, though placing the leg between our knees, could not prevent it from vibrating.

All the incidents in the above meager sketch we both saw and heard, and we refrain from relating many others, both from want of space and because they might be accounted for on known principles. We also refrain from narrating many circumstances, more astonishing, which were related to us to all appearance in perfect good faith, by credible and respectable people, because we were not eye and ear witnesses to the transactions. In some future number we may call attention to them again. We have been in these statements careful to indulge in no exaggerations—to make no representations from hearsay.

As before remarked, we make no effort to solve these curious developments, leaving our readers to form their own opinions. This we however will say, that our utmost ingenuity was exercised to penetrate the mystery, but without success. Perhaps others may be more successful. We have seen and heard things to us wonderful and unaccountable, and give to the public a plain account of the matter. More or less at present is not within our province.

It may not be amiss to state here that since returning to the city we have met numerous individuals who profess to know the causes of the phenomena, but they are prevented from communicating them because they are under promises of inviolable secrecy. Some of these persons are connected with the press of this city, and if, as they say, they have penetrated the mystery, their culpability is great, in withholding from community information so eagerly sought by thousands. But it is much easier to see through the mystery of these wisecracks, than the doings at Rochester. They are not the individuals to withhold any knowledge they possess.

On the contrary, they are rather apt, not only to tell all they do know, but also some things they do not.

Since writing the above we see that the Sunday Times gives its readers an abstract of Langworthy's slanderous letter (his name should be Un-worthy) with the shallow conclusion that the document finishes the whole matter. Our readers can judge whether the estimate is correct.

* * * * *

We shall take occasion to allude to this matter in a future number."

The Rochester Daily Magnet of February 26, 1850 has the following new development. In alluding to it the editor says, "the matter is one well worthy of investigation. The gentlemen whose names are attached to the marvellous statement, are not wont to engage in tricks or impositions, and the developments made are worthy of that credence which should be given to all new doctrines when well authenticated. Read them calmly and dispassionately."

"To Messrs. Jervis, Willets, Jones, and others:

GENTLEMEN:—As we are required by authority that we think we have no right to disregard, to make public the extraordinary communications recently witnessed at my dwelling, it becomes necessary to give you, and through you to the public, the facts which gave rise to the first interview, on Friday the 16th inst. The novelty of the subject, and the state of the public mind are such, that I feel prompted to do this, not only correctly, but as minutely as possible. Circumstances had placed me in a way to witness those remarkable communications called the 'Mysterious Rappings,' from the time of their origin in this city in the summer of 1848. After the severest tests, under a variety of circumstances, and at various places, for about one year, incontestable evidence addressed to my senses baffled my skepticism, and fully convinced me that they were the production of no human agencies. And as they profess to emanate from invisible intelligencies, called spirits, I had not allowed myself the liberty to attribute them to any other source, at least until some other origin could be detected. In hope of eliciting some further light on the mysterious subject, I proposed to a member of my family, who is susceptible to magnetic influence, to be put into a clairvoyant state, and see what might be presented in relation to it. She complied, and for this purpose was magnetized on the evening of the 12th inst., and in presence of no other persons. The questions and answers were as follows: Q. Do you see any thing? Ans. I see a stranger that I never before saw. He is not prepossessing in appearance, but is very elevated in his position, in a reflecting attitude, and is busily employed. Q. What is he doing? He is preparing work for you. Q. What is the nature of the work? A. He is establishing a line of communication. Q. Ask him, 'Is it practicable to get communications between two distant points by means of these rappings?' A. 'To-be-sure,' he says. Q. Can you ascertain who this stranger is? A. Benjamin (and after a pause) Franklin. Q. Will you ask him to give you some signal by which we may know it is really Benjamin Franklin? After a silence of one or two minutes, a violent shock of her person induced me hastily to say, 'what is the matter—are you waking up?' A. No, you wanted a signal, and I told him if it was Dr. Franklin he might electrize me, and he did it. Q. Has it injured you? A. No. I feel better—my head is clearer—I can see plainer. Q. Will you ask him where communications between distant points at the same time can be tested, A. He says at your own house. Q. Is there anything required of us in the matter? A. He says, get two of those young ladies about whom there is so much excitement in your city, place them in extreme parts of two rooms, and you (meaning herself,) be put in the same state in which you now are, and I will communicate with you. Q. Who else may be in attendance? A. Mr. Jervis, and a few others who have been acquainted with this subject. Q. Will he direct as to time? A. He says, consult the convenience of those concerned, and I shall be advertised of it. Q. Are there any further directions to be given at this time? A. That is the end of the chapter.

In compliance with the above, the interview on Friday the fifteenth was called, you and others notified, and the attendance of the two young ladies, Margaretta and Catharine Fox, secured from whom for prudential reasons the above facts and preliminaries were withheld.

Respectfully yours,

N. DRAPER.

Pursuant to the notice, as above stated, we, the undersigned, met at the house of Mr. Draper on Friday the 15th inst., about 4 o'clock, P. M. We inquired for directions, and were answered by alphabet, 'Let Mrs. Draper be magnetized.' Through her the two young ladies were directed to retire to another room. The directions then were, for Mr. Jervis, Mrs. Fox and Catharine Fox to be placed in a room at the opposite end of the house, and for Mr. Jervis, to take notes. Margaretta Fox should be with the company in the parlor, and Mr. Draper take notes. This was done. The sounds were then heard in both rooms, by either company, exactly similar to the sounds heard in the Telegraph office.

Question to the clairvoyant. What does that rapping mean, unlike any other sounds before heard by rapping? Ans. He is trying the batteries. The signal for the alphabet was heard, and on calling the letters, was spelled, 'She must be waked in ten minutes.' A watch was placed on the table, after noting the time, and covered up, and the question asked, if we could have a signal by sounds at the exact time, and was answered affirmatively. At the precise time the signal was heard. The question was then asked, 'Who shall wake her?' and she was instantly awoke with an apparent electric shock.

At this point there was much interruption by persons coming into both rooms. The question was asked for further directions, and the answer was by alphabet, 'Things are not as I directed, therefore you cannot proceed at this time.' There should be but four in each room. Mr. Jervis and company came into the parlor, and his notes read as follows: 'Things are not as I directed them, therefore you cannot proceed at this time.' Ques. Can we have another opportunity? Ans. If I set the time and name the company, there shall be no fail. Q. Shall the appointment be now made? Answered affirmatively. The following persons were then named by the alphabet: Mr. Jervis, Mr. Jones, Mr. Draper, Mr. Willets, Mrs. Jervis, Mrs. Draper, Mrs. Brown, Mrs. Fox, Margaretta Fox, and Catharine Fox. Q. May we know the time? A. Wednesday next at 4 o'clock, P. M. Q. The place? A. Here.

On the day appointed, Feb. 20th, the above named persons convened; some of the company were late, and as soon as order was observed, this question was asked, What are the directions of Benjamin Franklin? A. Hurry; first magnetize Mrs. Draper. This was done, she immediately saying: He says we are behind the time, but he will forgive us this time; we must do better in future. The company were divided as follows: Mr. Jervis, Mr. Jones, Mrs. Fox, Mrs. Brown and Catharine Fox in a retired room, with two doors closed between them. Mrs. Draper, Mrs. Jervis, Mr. Draper, Mr. Willets, and Margaretta Fox, remained in the parlor. Sounds, unusually loud were heard in each room by either company as before, resembling the telegraph sounds. They were so unusual that Miss Fox became alarmed, and said, 'What does all this mean?' Mrs. Draper, while her countenance was irradiated with animation, replied, 'He is trying the batteries.' Soon there was the signal for the alphabet, and the following communication was spelled to the company in the parlor: 'Now I am ready, my friends. There will be great changes in the nineteenth century. Things that now look dark and mysterious to you, will be laid plain before your sight. Mysteries are going to be revealed. The world will be enlightened. I sign my name Benjamin Franklin. Do not go into the other room.'

After waiting a few minutes, Mr. Jervis came into the parlor, saying that he was directed by the sounds to come and compare notes. They read as follows: Q. Are we all right? A. Affirmatively, signal for alphabet, and the following was spelled. 'There will be great changes in the Nineteenth century. Things that now look dark and mysterious to you, will be laid plain before your sight. Mysteries are going to be revealed. The world will be enlightened, I sign my name Benjamin Franklin. Go in the parlor and compare notes,' Mr. Jervis returned to his company, and by alphabet was spelled, 'now all go into the parlor.' The notes were then compared in presence of the whole company. Q. Is there anything more from Doctor Franklin? A. I think I have given tests enough for this day. Q. Will it not be better to keep this matter private? A. No, they should be published. Q. In what paper. A. In the Democrat or Magnet. Q. Who shall prepare it for publication? A. George Willets. Time and place was then designated for the same company to meet again with two other persons added to the number.

We sign our names as no parties but as witnesses.—If our testimony is incredible, impeach and reject it. If admissible hand it over to the Judge and Jurors—the public—and charge them that we claim no interest aside from their own, in their verdict.

Rev. Asahel Jervis,
Edward Jones,
Rachel Draper,
Mary Brown,

Nathaniel Draper,
George Willets,
Mary Jervis,
Margaret Fox.

Rochester, February, 23, 1850."

In addition to the names referred to in the body of our book, we insert the following, all of whom have witnessed more or less of these phenomena. We have not consulted them to know their opinions, but leave them to give them when called for.

AUBURN.

Caleb Hopping, Philip W. Miller, James Congden, B. Sheldon, Calvin Whitwood, D. D. T. Benedict, G. W. Hyatt, E. H. Baxter, Thurlow W. Brown, Editor Cayuga Chief, Wm. Woodward Esq., Charles Coventry, Lansingh Briggs, M. D., Rev. John M. Austin, B. F. Hall Esq., T. Y. How, jr. Esq., Rev. W. Ayrault, Jay L. Doty, E. M. Newcomb, J. Wesley Smith, Charles D. Tallman, John C. Ivison, Hon. J. P. Hulbert, Henry A. Hawes, H. H. Bostwick, David Barr, John Dodge.

ROCHESTER.

John E. Robinson, A. Reynolds, H. L. Winants, Editor of Daily Magnet, John W. Hurn, Isaac Butts, E. A. Marsh, Frederick Douglass, Editor of North Star, F. Rew, Schuyler Moses, Thomas Emerson, Rev. H. W. Lee, E. B. Elwood, Dr. H. Halsted, Justice Moore, Chief of Police, A. S. Clackner, Henry Bush, R. G. Murry, Benjamin Fish, G. W. Clark, T. B. Andrews.

VARIOUS PLACES.

Edward Wheeler and family, Miles S. Griswold, Fleming. Vincent Kenyon, J. Bishop Partelo, Alfred Hawk, E. D. Stoddard, Rev. Orrin Abbott, C. M. Abbott, Kelloggsville. Mr. and Mrs. Orrin Hatch, Skaneateles. E. B. Decker and family, Mr. and Mrs. L. N. Fowler, Professor Silas Jones, New York City. Mrs. Dr. Backus, Brooklyn. Richard Mott, Mrs. F. Otis, C. Van Anden, Buffalo. David W. Wyatt, Troy. H. R. Park, Scott. Rev. Theophilus Fisk, James Sellers Jr., Rev. C. Chauncey Burr, Philadelphia, Penn. Oliver Johnson, Editor Anti Slavery Bugle, Salem, Ohio. John S. Mott, Battle Creek, Michigan. Professor H. E. R. Lewis, Tecumseh, Michigan. James B. Cooper, Adamsville, Michigan. Edward F. Underhill, St. Louis, Mo. James Jobonnot, Editor of Literary Union, R. S. Corning, Esq., Dr. H. Joslin, Eli Link, Syracuse. Milton Arnold, Scipio. Dr. I. Grant, Cortland. Deacon O. Hale and family, Greece. C. W. Clapp, Mrs. C. G. Hamblin, James Sawyer, Port Byron. Thomas McClintock and family, George Prior, S. W. Lundy, Dr. Reuben Eves, Waterloo. Dr. S. Carpenter, Macedon. Wm. C. Cooper, Williamson. Albert S. Gould, Ithaca. George W. Eggleston, San Francisco, California. J. C. Baker, of the Baker Family. Rev. Benjamin Phillips, Salina.